American Eagle May Be Flying Again Monday

By The Associated Press
American Airlines' parent company is offering $750,000 to get AVAir's American Eagle commuter airline back in business, according to a spokesman for American Airlines. AVAir, which filed for bankruptcy Jan. 15, could be flying again as early as Monday, said American Airlines spokesman Steve McGregor said at the airline's corporate headquarters in Fort Worth, Texas.

"Our goal is to ultimately take over that operation," McGregor said. "How that's accomplished, how quickly that's accomplished, I don't know."

McGregor said no decisions have been made about who would manage the company if American Airlines takes control.

AVAir officials have been unavailable since filing for reorganizational bankruptcy more than a week ago. AVAir said it had assets of $9.1 million and liabilities of $12 million.

If the U.S. Bankruptcy Court approves the financing agreement, the airline will be in the air next week, McGregor said.

Most service is expected to be concentrated on American Eagle's commuter operations based at Raleigh-Durham Airport.

AVAir, based in Raleigh, ran American Eagle under contract with American Airlines, operating 55 daily flights out of Raleigh-Durham to 20 cities, mostly in North Carolina and Virginia.

A hearing will be held Friday to get approval for the agreement worked out between AVAir and Nashville Eagle, a subsidiary of AMR, American Airlines' parent company.

If the agreement is approved, the money would be used for wages, fuel, airport leases and other costs associated with reviving operations. AVAir shut down abruptly Jan. 15, canceling flights and telling almost 600 employees it would call them when needed.

In return for the loan, Nashville Eagle would get liens on all AVAir's property, including its equipment, accounts, real estate and runway slots at Washington National Airport.

FBI Spied On Critics Of U.S. Policies

BOSTON (AP) — The FBI conducted a campaign of infiltration and surveillance against hundreds of U.S. political and religious groups opposed to Reagan administration policies in Central America, The Boston Globe reported today.

Documents about the investigation were obtained from the FBI under the Freedom of Information Act by the Center for Constitutional Rights, a New York-based group of lawyers, the newspaper said.

The center said it would release reports today on the 1,200 pages of FBI files at news conferences in Washington, Minneapolis, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Dallas, Chicago and Tallahassee, Fla.

The documents indicate that agents in 52 of the FBI's 59 field offices participated in a counterterrorism investigation of groups from 1981 to 1985, and none of the released documents indicates the probe has been closed, the Globe said.

The Committee in Solidarity with the People of El Salvador, or CISPE, was the original target, but the investigation reportedly broadened to include organizations opposed to U.S. policy toward Nicaragua and Guatemala.

One document lists 138 groups as being connected with CISPE, including Oxfam America Inc., the American Civil Liberties Union, the American Federation of Teachers, Amnesty International and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

The documents indicate the FBI sought information on leftist and liberal activists from private right-wing political informants, including the Virginia-based Young America's Foundation, the Globe said.

Ray McElhane, an FBI public information officer in Washington, told the Globe he could not comment on specifics of the investigation because the material is classified and two suits are pending.

But, he said, "These (counterterrorism) investigations are not predicated upon people simply disagreeing with or criticizing U.S. government policies."

Israeli Newspapers Report Troops Beating Protesters On West Bank

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli troops fired tear gas and rubber bullets in clashes with Arab demonstrators in Jerusalem and the West Bank today as Israeli newspapers reported on the government's policy of beating protesters.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin, who visited a blood-stained wall in the occupied West Bank where soldiers allegedly beat prisoners, vowed Tuesday to investigate any wrongful beatings of Arabs.

"There is no policy of punishing by beatings," Rabin said. But in an interview with Israel Army Radio after the visit he conceded "there were exceptions" and violations were being investigated.

Israeli newspapers contained several reports claiming Arabs were beaten indiscriminately or after being taken into custody.

Menachem Shazel, a correspondent for the Hadashot newspaper, quoted an unidentified 20-year-old soldier from the Gaza Strip as saying he was given orders to beat young Arabs in door-to-door sweeps through refugee camps. He said the policy was causing division among soldiers.

"We were given orders that in order that people in the camps be aware of the army presence during curfews, we must knock on doors, enter inside and take the men out," the soldier was quoted as saying. "The younger ones especially, we were to separate and beat."

He said troops stopped at every other house.

"We stood the males outside with their faces against a wall, and while questioning them, the soldiers beat them with clubs," he was quoted as saying. "Those who delayed opening doors were taken to a gathering place called the 'square of arrests.' On the way, they were beaten even worse."

The soldier said he did not see a single detainee resist arrest or fight back although "sometimes a woman would jump on her son or husband and try to block the soldiers," the newspaper reported.

"This whole business caused serious arguments among the soldiers. Almost in every group there were soldiers who opposed the beatings," he was quoted as saying. "They generally served as guards outside or stood to the side. Over time, the number who opposed the beatings grew, but no one refused an order."

An army spokeswoman said it was difficult to respond to the report because neither the soldier nor the army unit was named in the Hadashot report.

Colder Temperatures Boosting Your Bills

If you're a Greenville Utilities customer, your January bill was probably higher than usual but GUC officials say it was nature, not the utility, that caused the increase.

"There were no rate hikes," said George Reel, the GUC customer assistance supervisor. "The cold weather just caused a sharp increase in electric and natural gas usage. Many bills we sent out in January were double those sent out last month."

Reel has been receiving calls from college students wondering why their January bills were so high even though they were gone for a two-week Christmas vacation. "The reasons are because low temperatures forced them to use as much heat in the two weeks they were here as they did the entire previous month," he said.

Cold weather also affects water heating. "When temperatures go down, the cold water coming into the tank takes longer (and more electricity) to heat," said Reel. "This is especially true when the water tank is located in the garage or other unheated areas."

Pitt Teachers Receive Pep Talk

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Teachers at Wahl-Coates School got a pep talk Tuesday about the significance of their profession from the N.C. Teacher of the Year.

Cynthia Zeger, a mathematics teacher with the Salisbury schools and one of two state teacher finalists in the NASA program, told the teachers that "being a teacher is pretty special" in that "each of us makes each student a little bit wiser."

But, she said, teachers should have, "not simply the ability to disseminate knowledge," but the ability to incite children to learn. "I want kids to be excited about learning."

Teachers need to teach children to think. "God gave us two heads; one to sit on and one to think ... heads we win, tails we lose," Mrs. Zeger said. She added, "Thinking skills (should) go beyond remembering the facts."

Teachers also need to encourage children to be creative and explore, Mrs. Zeger said. In discussing the space program with students, she said she has felt guilty about exciting children prematurely because of the current state of the program. So, she ends her presentations by suggesting that one of the children may actively participate in the program in the future, she said. But, "most of us are going to be down right here on earth. Exploration is not just for astronauts."

Teachers in North Carolina work in a state that is committed to teaching and is trying to "find a way to professionalize our teaching profession," Mrs. Zeger said. "But, it (North Carolina) does not have all the answers" to teacher evaluation, growth and mobility of teachers up but not out of the profession.

Mrs. Zeger also shared some experiences from being the state's Teacher of the Year. "It's been really fun for me to represent you ... a treat and a complete change of lifestyle," she said. She compared the traveling she does to that of a salesperson, who anticipates the decor of the next motel.

She said she also has developed a broader perspective of education in the state to take back to the classroom. And "while I'm in the classroom teaching, I know there're people all over the state supporting what I do," she said.

In addition to the teachers, Mrs. Zeger's presentation was attended by state Reps. Ed Warren and Walter Jones Jr., Pitt County Board of Education chairman George Williams, school board member the Rev. Howard Parker and Superintendent Eddie West.

City Planners Review Update Of Zoning Ordinances

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

Representatives of Greenville's Planning and Development Department presented the third part of a proposed zoning ordinance update to members of the Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday at a special call meeting at City Hall.

The presentation, third of a five-part review process, dealt with the issues of definitions, non-conformities, and zoning districts and their uses.

City Planner Jack Simoneau said the five-part topical review is part of an effort to review and update the Greenville Zoning Ordinance in its entirety. The last comprehensive update of the ordinance occurred in 1969.

Speaking at the presentation was Luther Propst, a representative of Robinson & Cole, a Connecticut-based law firm with experience in land-use law and developmental regulations.

Robinson & Cole has been working in conjunction with the planning department in the development of the ordinance update.

"Since we started revising these regulations we've worked as hard as possible to maintain as much about the existing regulations as feasible, so the regulations can feel as much as they have in the past when they're revised," Propst told commission members and City Council representative Inez Fridley.

"Now we're at the point where we're leaving the first couple of sections, the more technical sections, and moving into the policy area," Propst added.

The first policy area addressed was districts and uses, which Simoneau called probably the most difficult issue to address.

Propst said there are two overriding problems regarding districts and uses, the incompatibility between intensive commercial uses and residential and low-intensity business uses, and traffic-related problems.

"It's one of the hardest things towns have to attempt to regulate in a growing suburban or small city setting," he said.

Propst said there are five tools to deal with zoning district problems — the development of a thoroughfare plan, subdivision regulations, a site-plan review, the use of transitional zones and bufferyards.

"The newly enacted bufferyard regulations are going to do quite a bit to alleviate the problems of incompatibilities because of backyard buffer problems," he said.

In addition, he said a site-plan review is an effective tool which allows cities to take a discretionary look at intensive commercial uses, and have some level of review.

"I think its useful to think about the Planned Unit Development ordinance that's been recently passed, where the ordinance is set up so that there are standards that give the developer clear guidance as to what can be done with the property but also some level of subjectivity," he said.

"Site plan review is the most effective way, I believe, to deal with the problem of curb cuts (driveways)," he added.

Propst said another useful tool for dealing with zoning district problems is the development of a thoroughfare plan which would contain specific recommendations as to how traffic should flow as related to signals, access roads, sidestreets and curb cuts.

"It would be a planning document that gives the commission, town and potential property owners and purchasers an idea of what's expected with respect to the access of specific parcels," he said.

He also said a thoroughfare plan is valuable because it spells out exactly what is expected from developers and makes planning commission decisions more legally defensible.

"I would recommend some level of site plan review. I don't think it's necessary to get into architectural details and to get into the minutia of the site plan but a site plan that deals with the basic problems that are going to be seen with the layout of the project will be a good idea, and I think beefing up the special use criteria, at least to encourage the use of a thoroughfare plan, would be appropriate," he advised commission members.

According to Simoneau, a comprehensive update of the zoning ordinance will benefit the city by ensuring that all sections of the ordinance work in unison and by guaranteeing that any zoning contradictions, created by passing amendments, are eliminated.

Simoneau said after all five parts of the ordinance have been examined, the entire package will be presented to the Planning and Zoning Commission for final analysis and approval. The complete package will then be presented to City Council for adoption.

Topic four of the zoning ordinance review, scheduled on Feb. 23, will cover developmental standards, including industrial standards, exemptions and modifications, multifamily unit development and landscape buffers.

Senate To Vote Within Two Weeks On Confirming Kennedy For Court

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd said today the Senate would vote on the confirmation of Anthony M. Kennedy to the Supreme Court within the next two weeks.

"The main thing is to get the nomination acted upon before the February break, and that should be easy to do," Byrd told reporters.

The Senate is scheduled to be in recess the week of Feb. 8.

Byrd, D-W.Va., said he may waive Senate rules and interrupt debate on a civil rights measure now on the floor to get a vote on the Kennedy nomination by early next week.

Kennedy, President Reagan's third choice to fill the vacancy on the Supreme Court, is breezing through the preliminaries and appears likely to join the nation's highest court before it ends its current recess and returns to the bench Feb. 22.

The Senate Judiciary Committee was to vote on Kennedy's nomination today, but the federal appellate judge from California already had the panel's overwhelming support.

Among the eight Democrats and six Republicans on the committee, only the conservative Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., said he might oppose the nomination.

Confirmation appears assured, a court spokeswoman Toni House said an investiture ceremony could be held during the court's recess if Kennedy is confirmed.

Confirmation appears assured, a tranquil conclusion to a ferocious political battle that began last summer when Justice Lewis F. Powell retired.

The Senate rejected the president's first choice for the job, Robert H. Bork. A second nominee, Douglas H. Ginsburg, withdrew after admitting he had smoked marijuana while a law professor.

Kennedy, 51, has been a federal

Study Says Aspirin Cuts Heart Attacks

BOSTON (AP) — For many, an aspirin every other day keeps the cardiologist away, according to a major study that showed the common painkiller cut the risk of heart attacks nearly in half.

The study of 22,071 male doctors who had never suffered heart attacks or other serious illnesses found that a buffered aspirin every other day cut their heart attack risk by 47 percent.

Heart experts said Tuesday the research provides strong evidence that aspirin will be a major weapon against the nation's No. 1 killer, but some worried about side effects and said it will spur widespread use of aspirin without supervision.

"I hope this won't be given to the whole world as a panacea to stay alive forever," said Dr. Claude Lenfant, director of the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, who called the study "very important."

A preliminary report on the study is scheduled to be published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

In the study, half of the subjects took aspirin for nearly five years, while the rest received placebos that looked and tasted like aspirin.

There were 104 heart attacks among the aspirin users and 189 in the comparison group. There were also 80 strokes in the aspirin group and 70 among the others, but this difference was not statistically meaningful.

Although the study, conducted at Boston's Brigham and Women's Hospital, focused only on healthy men, its findings are being applied to women and men who may be less physically fit than those studied.

Aspirin works by making the blood less likely to clot. Heart attacks usually occur when clots form in the coronary arteries, choking off the heart's blood supply.

In general, experts said that anyone with risk factors for heart disease should be considered candidates for routine use of aspirin.

Active Approach

It's time for Greenville to plan an active, multi-faceted approach to revitalizing its downtown business district.

The city's downtown area has long been the victim of changing shopping patterns and shifting demographics. Once a vigorous retail area, it now boasts mostly offices, service-related businesses and startlingly, a disproportionate number of empty buildings.

Past efforts at breathing new life into the central business district have had marginal success. The blame for this failure does not rest with the individual entities involved in these efforts, however. Rather, it rests with their failure to coordinate efforts and develop a partnership.

Evergreen, the city's non-profit revitalization organization, has proposed active redevelopment measures. Greenville's Heart of the City program deserves much credit for its efforts at revitalization. A number of landowners have successfully improved their property. But these efforts were weakly coordinated and little comprehensive planning was involved. Because of this fact, redevelopment of the crucial downtown corridor is stymied.

The need is great, however, for these entities to unite and develop an extensive plan for revitalizing downtown. The timing for an inclusive effort is correct because of several important opportunities that lie on the area's horizon.

The first of these opportunities is Pitt County and Greenville's proposal to establish a permanent governmental complex in downtown Greenville. A move of this magnitude would increase the number of workers and citizens downtown — consequently expanding the demand for support service organizations.

The second factor is the proposed construction of dual-span bridges across the Tar River. In 1991, the current Greene Street bridge will be replaced with a more modern span and a second structure will be added on Pitt Street. This would provide downtown with tremendously-improved access across the river. Both streets would logically become one way thoroughfares, necessitating a reorganization of traffic flow through downtown.

The third of these factors is the continued growth of East Carolina University. The university is slated to receive state funding for an activities center to house large conferences and special events. Because of its proximity to the heart of the ECU campus, downtown could be a logical site for the structure. The implications of that possibility are enormous.

A comprehensive plan for revitalizing the resources in the area affected by these opportunities is essential if downtown is to benefit from them. That planning must begin now, and it must involve all affected entities — the property owners, the city and revitalization groups. To be successful, it must encompass both theoretic and financial commitment.

Downtown Greenville's potential overshadows its decline. Its future depends on whether this fact can be recognized and capitalized on in a unified manner. The area's vacant buildings are tangible reminders of the need to anticipate the promise of the future and plan for it.

Empty Air Time

What happened in the interview of vice president and presidential candidate George Bush by CBS anchorman Dan Rather?

It soon ceased to be an interview and turned into a shouting match. The two men were soon talking over each other in a two-way conversation that went nowhere.

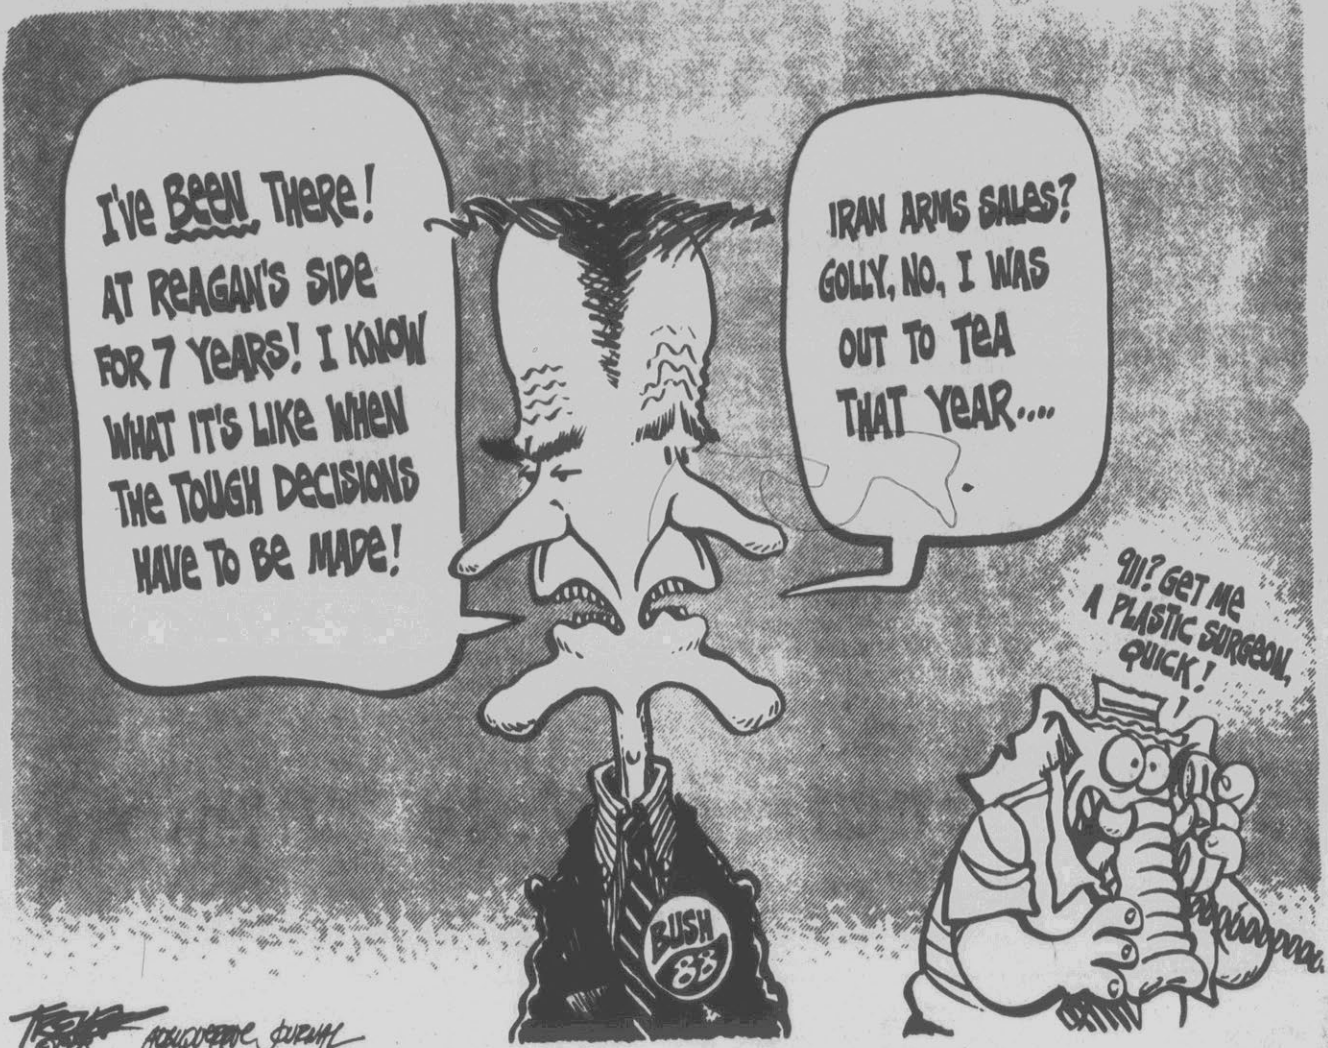

From a public relations standpoint, Rather came off second best. Bush, as a candidate, scored points and gained the sympathy of the public. That was likely his intention. By confronting Rather on his own news show he could come across as a candidate who was being treated unfairly. That was a calculated risk that could have backfired in the campaign, but Rather fell for it. Much to the chagrin of the other Republican candidates, Bush may have gained public support from the exchange.

Sadly, Rather was discussing an issue that should be raised — the vice president's role in the arms-to-Iran deal. It is an important issue that Bush has not yet adequately addressed. Yet in 10 minutes on the CBS Evening News he may have defused it.

Rather is an expert news reporter. But he has lost control in two on-the-air situations recently, incidents that Bush exploited.

As an interviewer, Rather simply got too uptight. He ceased asking reasoned questions and attempted to out shout the vice president. He lost control of the interview. One of the nation's most highly regarded television news anchors should not have allowed that to happen.

Dan Rather, and all news people, exist to ask questions and to extract information the public needs to make intelligent decisions on candidates. But when media people become a direct influence on the campaign, the system isn't functioning.

Public Forum

To the editor:

I thank Messrs. Castillo and Kilcoyne for taking time to write about my letter, which included a proposal to abolish the CIA in order to diminish one evil in the world. Is such evil a necessary price for holding Eastern evil in check?

I say the promotion of cocaine and opium is not necessary. Suborning assassins — of children, women, health workers and teachers; even of air passengers and once of 80 passers-by — is not necessary. Alliance with Mafia figures ought not be necessary. The sources I gave document these as immediate consequences of CIA covert activities; none of these sources I consider, "favor the Red Side"; anyway, what matters is: are they correct?

Such activities are worse than "not necessary." They and others like them have damaged the United States. They make us "endless enemies" as Kwitny exhaustively reports, and strengthen that bloody variety of Communist who can point to five or more governments overthrown with CIA help, then claim that "justice requires armed struggle" — that elections are vain.

To abolish an agency is a drastic step. The CIA has done some wise studies, been led by some devoted patriots. But this agency's tactics, sometimes with short-range success, have done so much long-range damage that reform may not suffice.

Woodward's "VEIL" starts the indictment. Then, having been so widely circulated, it may stimulate many to study the CIA role thoroughly, making CIA abolition politically conceivable. Or, alternative proposals may emerge. The government needs foreign intelligence analysis. Are not the various military and other executive department intelligence divisions enough? Political science is not my professional area; I hope political scientists from ECU, and others, will continue the public dialogue which Javier Castillo, Martin Kilcoyne and I have started.

To the editor:

The rhetoric is flying high as candidates try to woo voters to their respective political camps. 1988 is going to be a crucial year for North Carolina's future. It is imperative that as voters we examine all candidates with an open mind, weigh out the differences, and then vote for the candidate of our choice.

The governor's race is one that is only a couple of weeks old and is already beginning to get out of hand. Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan is doing his best to portray Gov. Jim Martin as a "sitting governor." Imagine Bob Jordan (or "Bland Bob," as he is sometimes called) viewing Jim Martin as a "sitting governor." This comes from the same Bob Jordan who "flip-flopped" on the 1987 school bond construction proposal and has done everything possible in allowing his personal ambitions to determine his position when making crucial decisions. The "flip-flopping" sounds like "Turnaround Terry" Sanford last year on a federal highway bill. Leaders who truly care about our future do not change views on major issues like these two have. To make the scenario more interesting, North Carolina has the second highest paid governor in the U.S. (second only to New York) and our Democratic-controlled legislature allows him to be the only governor in the U.S. without the veto power. Jordan claims he is progressive, but these two instances alone seem to make him regressive. Even more distressing is recent chatter among Democratic Party officials that should a Republican lieutenant governor win, his powers, too, will be stripped.

I urge each of you to watch these actions very closely. The outcome of this race will determine the course N.C. will plot into the 1990's. As voters, we determine our fate and it is time regressive Bob Jordan returns to his Mount Gilead home.

How To Catch A Treaty Cheater

'The real deterrent to cheating will not be the inspections, but the lack of motivation to cheat in the first place. With the INF Treaty there is essentially none.'

MANCHESTER, Mass. — The Senate will begin ratification hearings this week on the Intermediate Nuclear Forces Treaty signed in Washington last month by President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev. There is broad public support for the agreement and a general assumption that it faces little opposition in the Senate — which must approve by a two-thirds vote before it becomes law. A major reason for this support is the leading role assigned to on-site inspection of missile sites and production facilities to verify compliance by both sides. Indeed, to many Americans "verification" means "inspection." But the inspection angle is oversold, and could prove to be the treaty's major weakness.

Years of propaganda (a lot of it spread by Reagan) about the supposed unverifiability of past treaties, and the claim that the Soviets have violated many, persuaded much of the public that on-site inspection is essential to prevent cheating. Thus, for political reasons, on-site inspection had to be a mainstay of the INF Treaty if it was going to be seen as different and better than its predecessors.

The new treaty is laden with on-site inspection provisions. They allow for initial inspections of missile bases, "close-out" inspections to insure required dismantling of bases has taken place, "elimination inspections" to monitor destruction of missiles and their launchers, the permanent stationing of U.S. and Soviet teams at each other's production facilities and a quota of short-notice challenge inspections at former launching sites and other facilities by each side.

On the surface, these provisions look like a major step forward. But if the purpose of verification measures is to provide each side assurance that the other is abiding by the agreement, will inspections do that?

The challenge inspections are the main problem. The reasons for any challenges will be provided by "national technical means" of verification: reconnaissance satellites, electronic eavesdropping and other unilateral intelligence methods. If these "NTM" raise questions about Soviet compliance, the United States can demand an inspection. Will the Soviets then allow U.S. inspectors in, as the treaty requires? If they do, and inspectors find nothing wrong, will Washington be reassured, or will they conclude that the Soviets have hidden the evidence? Ironically, we are likely to have the greatest confidence in inspections when we believe the Soviets are complying anyway. Thus whenever inspections are used, they may reduce, rather than increase, U.S. confidence in Soviet compliance.

The real deterrent to cheating will not be the inspections, but the lack of motivation to cheat in the first place. With the INF Treaty there is essentially none. The Reagan administration gave the Soviets a tidy way to compensate for any loss of destructive capability a year ago, when it decided to ignore SALT 2 limits and, in effect, invited the Soviets to do the same. While that treaty was being observed, it set upper limits on the number of long-range missile launchers each side could possess. Without it, the Soviets can simply build more allowed long-range missiles to compensate for the loss of now-forbidden medium- and short-range missiles. The allowable SS-25 intercontinental ballistic missile, for example, can hit any target the now-banned SS-20 was aimed at. Why should the Soviets go to the trouble and expense of clandestinely building or squirreling away SS-20s when they can openly buy more SS-25s?

But even if Washington created that convenient loophole, why would the Soviets enter into the INF Treaty with the intention of cheating? Aside from the enormous expense of secretly carrying out forbidden activities and the political cost of being caught, the only conceivable purpose of cheating would be to gain some strategic advantage. This is hard to do when each side has more than 10,000 strategic nuclear weapons unaffected by the treaty.

As for alleged violations of past treaties, many charges made by the White House would be hard to prove because the Reagan administration's former Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger, emasculated the Standing Consultative Commission, created specifically to examine any questions of compliance with the two SALT agreements. He ordered Gen. Richard H. Ellis, SCC commissioner, to use the forum only as a platform to level accusations at the Soviets, not to resolve uncertainties.

The Soviet record of compliance with all arms-control treaties entered into over the past 29 years has in fact been quite good. There has been one major exception: the giant radar they have been building in Siberia since 1983. Because of its location and design, it would, once operational, almost certainly be a violation of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty of 1972. While the Soviets have stopped construction — and even allowed a delegation of U.S. congressmen, armed with cameras and tape recorders, swarm over the installation — the potential violation remains.

The INF Treaty is a new beginning. It offers important precedents for future U.S.-Soviet arms agreements: actual disarmament; asymmetrical reductions — where one side destroys many more weapons to create equal levels, and the total elimination of a particular class of weapons.

Strength For Today

Many years ago the famous pastor, J. Addison Henry, lived and ministered in Philadelphia.

On one occasion his attacks on community vice caused such terror to the criminals that they decided on a daring ruse to silence the preacher. Dr. Henry received a call to visit a sick woman in the neighborhood — and found himself in a den of vice. Those who had trapped him declared that unless he promised to preach no more "reform" sermons they would prove that he was a habitue of the house. They had the witnesses ready at hand.

Without waiting to protest or to plead, he plumped down on his knees by an open window and began to pray. That prayer was heard by the neighbors for a block around. It so frightened Dr. Henry's captors that they dragged him out of the house before the police could come. When the warrior of God fights with his own weapons, he is irresistible.

Moscow Is No Match For American Military Might

WASHINGTON — The American military hasn't done anything right since the Inchon landing. It was unable to win in Korea, lost Vietnam completely and had more than 200 Marines killed at Beirut through military incompetence — not to mention what happened to the USS Stark — and barely managed to knock off a few hundred Cuban construction workers in Grenada. It's equipped with weapons that cost millions but don't work terribly well, if at all.

The Russian military is the most formidable in the world, lavishly equipped with more tanks, guns, ships and aircraft than the rest of the world combined — all of which, being nice and simple, work quite well — designed with one task in mind: the utter destruction of Western culture.

In both cases, the distortion results from a fundamental lack of understanding based on a combination of intellectual laziness and ideological preconceptions that do not allow for the objective examination of evidence.

The American military — at least the service I know best, the Navy — is the most capable in the history of the world. That's not the same as "perfect," and in any case the effectiveness of any country's military is, in isolation, totally irrelevant.

An army or a navy is a tool of national policy. Like any tool, a military establishment must have a purpose other than mere existence. When used, it is supposed to have a clear mission, preferably a mission that bears some semblance to its design. This has not recently been true of the U.S. military.

People on the left look at Vietnam as the vindication of their political views: We failed, therefore we should never have gone; therefore we should never attempt anything even vaguely similar to Vietnam.

In supporting this political view, they find the reason for failure in the military itself. Nothing is too small to ridicule. The stories of the overpriced hammers and toilet seats are repeated until they become as permanent as the figures on Mount Rushmore.

The left has even sprouted its own "military reform" movement. It is noteworthy, first of all, for its single consistent thread: the weapons it opposes have real offensive capability, and those it suggests have none at all.

Three examples are diesel-electric submarines versus nuclear ones, small carriers versus large ones, small, short-range fighters versus large, long-range ones.

Every submarine officer I know has served aboard or commanded a diesel submarine; they all think that nuclear is the way to go. Had Great Britain retained full-sized carriers — or even just one — capable of power-projection instead of replacing them with smaller, less capable ships, the Falklands War would never have happened. The Israelis say the big, long-range F-15 Eagle is the best fighter in the world.

But what really galls me are the attacks on the men and women of our armed forces. The most recent example is USS Stark. The captain could have done better, but he did not choose to be in a war zone with an equivocal mission and rules of engagement that required him to be at war, and at peace, at the same time.

One might also note that Lt. (j.g.) John F. Kennedy, USNR, was decorated after losing his command under more favorable tactical circumstances, while Capt. Glenn Brindel lost his career even though he saved his ship.

Grenada, for all its faults as an operation, is an illustration of what our military can do. The mission was to rescue American students and neutralize the government forces of that small island.

Despite only a few hours of preparation and the consequent lack of good intelligence information, the mission was carried out rapidly, with minimal loss of life to friendly forces. What distinguished Grenada from Vietnam and Beirut, however, was a clear mission concept and the delegation of command authority to the men on the scene. The result was success.

As much as the political left (and its pet "reform" movement) claims to desire an effective military, it invariably shrinks from acknowledging that we might actually have one.

Whipping-boys are hard to come by, especially the kind required by oath to respect public officials. It must be quite a thrill to abuse those who cannot reply in kind because of their loyalty to the constitutional process.

I wish I could report that the political right takes a more realistic view of defense issues, but it just is not true.

The Soviet Navy and the Soviet military in general look formidable. Anyone can get information on the numbers of ships and tanks and aircraft. That's called "bean-counting." It is an entirely valid approach, as far as it goes, but there is more to evaluating an enemy than counting beans. What one cannot count in KH-11 photographs is the competence of the "drivers."

Hardison Backs Lottery In Filing For Democratic Race For Lt. Gov.

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Critics of a state lottery who contend the game will exploit the poor and lead them to spend money on the remote chance of getting rich are wrong, says Sen. Harold Hardison.

"That's not true," Hardison said Tuesday after filing for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor. "You only buy (lottery tickets) if you want to buy. They don't want to pay their money out, they don't have to. But if we put taxes out there, we're going to tax the poor and all alike."

One of Hardison's competitors for the Democratic nomination, state Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, has voiced support for a lottery and favors a statewide referendum.

The other two major Democratic candidates, state Rep. Jim Crawford of Oxford and former Rep. Parks Helms of Charlotte, oppose the lottery although Crawford says he would accept a referendum.

Martin and Jordan have spoken

against a lottery. Hardison said he was not daunted by prospects of opposition from either, and did not believe his support of the lottery would cut into his conservative base.

"People don't want any more taxes. They've got all they can stand," Hardison, 64, said in an interview after he spoke to hundreds of supporters at a Raleigh hotel.

A native of Deep Run in Lenoir County, Hardison is an 18-year legislative veteran and currently is chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee. A merchant and farmer who founded an oil distribution company, he enjoys strong business and industry support.

Hardison got a nearly five-month head start on his opponents, announcing his candidacy April 23. He was the first to begin serious organizing and fund-raising, and declared himself the front-runner.

But he conceded he probably would be unable to get more than 50 percent of the vote, the amount needed to secure the Democratic nomination without a runoff, in the May 3 primary.

"Mathematically it's almost impossible," Hardison said, predicting he would be one of two Democrats in a runoff.

In campaign spending reports filed earlier this month, Hardison said he had raised $530,061. His goal is between $1 million and $1.5 million.

Hardison took a calculated risk last weekend in endorsing a lottery to fund public education. The state Senate, of which he has been a member since 1973, has come close to approving a lottery several times in recent years.

But the lottery has failed largely because of opposition from church leaders, who view it as legalized gambling.

Hardison, viewed as the most conservative of the Democratic hopefuls, acknowledged his lottery plan would draw fire from some of the people who normally would be his philosophical allies.

But he said most would prefer a lottery to tax increases, which he said were the only other sources of new revenue the state needed to improve public education. Supporters say a lottery could produce $180 million to $200 million per year.

"The church people are good people, they're understanding people," he said.

Farmowner Insurance To Increase

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina farmers will pay 6 percent more for home insurance as of March 1, the result of a compromise worked out between state Insurance Commissioner Jim Long and North Carolina insurance companies, which sought an 11.9 percent increase.

It is the first rate hike since 1984, and will raise the average annual premium in the state by $22.25.

A Wake County farmer who has a $50,000 policy with a $100 deductible on his frame home now pays $253 a year for farmowner's insurance. Under the new rates, his annual premium will rise to $268, a $15 increase.

The statewide average annual farmowner's premium of $377.37 will increase $22.25 to $399.62.

Officials for the N.C. Department of Insurance and the N.C. Rate Bureau, which represents the industry on rate matters, said the compromise was fair. They said North Carolina farmers still enjoyed much lower insurance rates than those in neighboring states.

State Says Older Willie M. Patients Will Be Treated

RALEIGH (AP) — The state has agreed to extend treatment, at least temporarily, for violent mentally ill young people who have aged out of the Willie M. program.

"At this point we have no idea how many youths are affected," said Donison L. Willis, who is chief of community initiative for the state Mental Health-Mental Retardation and Substance Abuse Services. "But there aren't many. This is just for those who have aged out and continue to need a fairly highly structured level of residential care."

"But this is not a fix-all," Willis said Tuesday. "Basically what we have done is, we have gotten access to these dollars for the duration of this fiscal year (which ends June 30). Until then we will be making efforts to stabilize the funding, so this doesn't come up every five or six months."

The name Willie M. refers to a plaintiff in a 1979 suit in which the state was ordered to provide proper care for all children in the Willie M. class. Such children are emotionally, mentally or neurologically impaired, violent toward themselves and others and, at the time their cases are presented to the state, are not receiving adequate care.

Normally, clients are only eligible for treatment in a Willie M. group home until they reach 18, although some clients like Eric have been granted extensions.

Willis said there are only about 20 Willie M. patients statewide who currently require the level of supervision Eric and others get at Mountain Ridge. That home is classified as "high level" treatment, with a guardian-to-client ratio of at least two-to-four at all times.

Treatment at Mountain Ridge averages $48,456 per child per year, compared to $54,750 at the Western Carolina Center in Morganton. But the state foots the entire bill at Mountain Ridge, while the federal government picks up two-thirds of the tab at Western Carolina.

Red Tide May Linger On

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — The toxic red tide that has already cost fishermen $4.5 million could linger through the summer and there is nothing man can do to stop it, state and federal officials say.

"If we're honest and straightforward, if it last six more weeks, there's good potential that we'll have it until June, July or August even," William Hogarth, director of the state Division of Marine Fisheries, said Tuesday.

"It's not man-made and man can't do anything to make it go away," Hogarth said.

To date, the state estimates that people and businesses handling clams and oysters have lost $3.5 million and those selling scallops have lost $1 million. Almost 11,000 commercial fishermen cannot harvest because of the tide.

Missing

FRANKLIN, N.C. (AP) — Authorities say they have few clues to lead them to an elderly Franklin couple who disappeared from their retirement cottage over a week ago.

James and Florence Scobie, both in their 80s, apparently left home Jan. 20 without any luggage, medicine or heavy clothing. They have not been seen since.

"It is unreal to us," Shirley Scobie, the couple's daughter-in-law, said Tuesday. "We have searched, we have called everybody we can think of and everybody is accounted for. No one has seen them. We don't know what else to do."

Members of the Civil Air Patrol and deputies have conducted ground searches along Macon County roads. The CAP hoped to be able to launch an air search Tuesday but winds, gusting to 50 mph in the higher elevations, created so much turbulence it was dangerous to fly over the area, said Bill Gallman, CAP squadron commander.

Nursing Program

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Board of Nursing has placed North Carolina Central University's school of nursing on conditional approval after a three-member panel found nine deficiencies in the program during an October inspection.

It is the second blow for NCCU's nursing program in less than two weeks. Earlier this month, a panel of the University of North Carolina Board of Governors voted to give the program until the end of 1988 to improve its nursing exam scores or face a ban on admitting any new students.

Among NCCU's nursing graduates taking the test for the first time in 1987, 45.8 percent passed — a drop from the 1986 passing rate of 87.5 percent.

Both the state Board of Nursing, the state's licensing body, and the UNC Board of Governors require nursing schools to post at least a 60 percent passing rate on the exam in any one year, or a 70 percent passing rate over a three-year period.

Embezzlement

RALEIGH (AP) — A former secretary for the state chapter of the Disabled American Veterans has been charged with stealing $81,000 in small donations from DAV members, Raleigh police say.

Marian Lee Gibson, a former secretary and clerk at the Raleigh DAV office, was charged with one count of felony embezzlement, according to the arrest warrant.

Ms. Gibson, 26, who gave a Douglaston, N.Y., address when she surrendered to authorities Friday, was released on a $10,000 unsecured bond. She signed a written promise to appear in court.

Investigators said the largest single check taken was for $12. The $81,000 amounted to more than 25 percent of the $300,000 received from disabled veterans, their wives, widows and children during the two years she worked at the DAV office.

Ms. Gibson quit in September and left the state.

Murder Pleas

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Five of six men accused of killing Gary "Shorty" Cooper pleaded innocent in Buncombe County Superior Court to murder and other charges.

Assistant District Attorney Charlie Walker said the first defendant to be tried will be James Whiteside Jr., 21, charged with first-degree murder among other charges. Walker said he will seek the death penalty.

Walker said he will not pursue capital punishment against the other five defendants. Whiteside's trial date has not been set.

The six men are charged in the Oct. 30 slaying of Cooper, a 24-year-old construction worker found beaten to death in a litter-strewn lot in the Montford Community.

Cooper was a midget who was 4 feet, 4-inches tall and weighed 110 pounds, according to an autopsy report. Neighbors said he had attended a wedding party the night before his body was found.

Winning Flip

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — City Council Member Philip A. Baddour Sr. has become mayor pro tem by the flip of a coin — after he opposed selecting the position that way.

The City Council decided to toss a coin to choose between Baddour and council member William C. Goodman Jr. for the seat. Baddour and council member Mildred Gaylor opposed using the coin-toss method.

Council members Goodman, Fred Lutz, Bob Braswell and J.B. Rhodes and Mayor Hal K. Plonk favored the idea, which was proposed by Rhodes.

"I feel in my own mind that this is a cop-out," Baddour said. "I realize my chances are 50-50 but I do not feel that this is the way to do it."

Plonk tossed the coin — a quarter — and it came up tails. Goodman, given the opportunity by Baddour, had chosen heads.

King Parkway

DURHAM (AP) — The Durham County Commissioners have endorsed renaming the Southern Parkway for Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Naming of the "Martin Luther King Parkway" was broached last week at a celebration honoring King's birthday, Commission Chairman Bill Bell said.

Other local governments who have jurisdiction over the parkway's route — including the city of Durham — must approve the renaming before it can be submitted to the state Board of Transportation, which has final say, Bell said.

Beating Death

WILMINGTON (AP) — Jury selection has begun in the first-degree murder trial of a Bladenboro couple charged in the beating death of their 11-year-old foster daughter.

District Attorney Michael Easley tentatively approved a full jury of nine women and three men, plus two alternates in the New Hanover County Superior Court trial of Sylvester and Anne Phillips.

Sylvester Phillips, 56, and his wife Anne, 64, are charged in the June 1987 beating death of Tameka Lehmann. They also are charged with felony child abuse in alleged beatings and sexual abuse involving the girl and a 13-year-old adopted son, John Phillips.

Embezzlement

WAYNESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The former secretary-treasurer of the Haywood County Rescue Squad was charged Tuesday with embezzling $35,500 from the volunteer emergency agency.

Lindsay D. Minnick, secretary through last December, is accused of embezzling funds on six different occasions between Aug. 13, 1985, and Oct. 26, 1986, authorities say. Her husband, John David Minnick also was charged Tuesday with aiding and abetting in the six alleged thefts.

Chemical Leak

DURHAM (AP) — Two to four gallons of a chemical solvent leaked from a tractor-trailer along Interstate 85 near Efland Tuesday, but no injuries or environmental damage was reported, officials say.

Chlorobenzene, often used as a solvent, can irritate the eyes and nasal passages. Repeated exposure can damage the lungs, liver and kidneys.

The tractor-trailer was carrying 4,000 to 6,000 gallons of the substance from New Jersey to Texas.

Rather, Bush Split On How They View Combative TV Interview

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Dan Rather insisted he wasn't rude during his combative TV interview with Vice President George Bush, and remained unapologetic, telling the television viewers, "it goes with the territory."

However, in an unusual "personal word" during Tuesday night's "CBS Evening News," Rather acknowledged that viewers might have been made "uncomfortable," and said the abrupt ending to the interview wasn't "done as gracefully" as intended.

"However it may seem at any given time, the intention of even persistent questioning in a spirited interview is to do an honest, honorable job," Rather said.

"The fact that more attention is sometimes given to the heat than the light is regrettable, but it goes with the territory."

The nine-minute exchange between Rather and Bush, carried live at the top of the news Monday night, spurred angry phone calls to CBS affiliates across the country, headlines and political analysis of the fallout.

Bush, on a campaign trip to Wyoming on Tuesday, said the interview was "kind of like combat" but added that he has "no hard feelings about it."

"I don't want to have a big running fight with Dan Rather or anybody else," said Bush, who according to some reports was heartened by the interview and the support of viewers.

CBS News producer Richard Cohen said Bush was ready to confront Rather.

"George Bush sat there before the interview and when he heard Iran-ten mix it up," Jennings told viewers, "and sometimes lose their tempers and sometimes lose control. You never see it happening in the newspaper. On television, especially when it's live, the camera is always there."

Contra he muttered audibly, "If I hear Iran-Contra, he's going to hear Miami." This was all planned," Cohen said Tuesday on ABC-TV's "Nightline."

Last September, Rather angrily walked off the CBS set before a broadcast from Miami because tennis coverage cut into news time.

ABC and NBC led their Tuesday night newscasts with stories about the interview. CBS correspondent Bruce Morton did a reaction story from Iowa.

After Morton's story, Rather said, "Now, a personal word, if I may."

"Interviews such as the one last night are in some ways uncomfortable, for the questioner, for the subject and for some viewers," Rather said.

"We understand that and only hope for mutual understanding that it is an essential part of our democratic process for choosing our presidents."

While some of his colleagues criticized him, Rather picked up some support from ABC's Peter Jennings on "World News Tonight."

"Reporters and their subjects of Former President Gerald Ford said Tuesday his "general impression is that George Bush, once and for all, eliminated the 'wimp factor,'" a reference to the questions about Bush's leadership ability.

"To take on one of the major national television correspondents as he did took a lot of guts. In a political sense, he enhanced his reputation," Ford said before a speech in Elyria, Ohio.

During the interview, Bush and Rather often talked over each other, with Bush contending he was misled about the purpose of the interview and Rather aggressively asking about the Iran-Contra affair.

Bush at one point made Rather the subject of the exchange, suggesting Rather wouldn't like to be judged solely by one incident, the several minutes of dead air that occurred when Rather walked off the set in Miami.

Later in the interview, after Rather returned to Bush's role in the arms-for-hostages deal, he said to Bush, "but you've made us hypocrites in the face of the world. How could you sign onto such a policy?"

At the end of the interview, Rather asked Bush if he would hold a news conference before the Iowa caucuses to answer questions on the subject. Bush began recounting how many news conferences he has held, and Rather cut him off in mid-sentence, saying, "I gather that the answer is no. Thank you for being with us, Mr. Vice President," and went to a commercial.

Rather said in an interview published today in The Washington Post that he did not believe he was rude to Bush.

"No," said Rather. "I was persistent."

The brouhaha came after some months of calm at CBS News, which had come off a year that included budget cuts and layoffs, third-place ratings for the "CBS Evening News," and the black-out incident.

CBS has led the A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings in the news category all season.

Callers Support Bush

WNCT television, which broadcast Dan Rather's CBS News' interview with Vice President George Bush Monday night, received "a raft of calls" critical of the way the interview was handled, news director Roy Hardee said today.

Hardee said calls on this subject continued to come in Tuesday, also, but he had no idea how many were received either day. He said each caller was given the phone number and/or address of CBS if they requested them.

"To my knowledge," Hardee said, "all of the calls were sympathetic with Bush, disapproving of the way Rather conducted the interview."

Icy Cold Grips Deep South

By The Associated Press
Temperatures plunged into the 20s in the Deep South although Florida citrus growers "dodged the bullet," and snow fell today from Kentucky to New York State after a storm piled more than a foot of snow on the East.

Electricity was restored to most of the thousands of people who went without power after Tuesday's Atlantic storm and another that continued to scatter snow today across the Dakotas and eastern Nebraska into northeast Kansas.

Snow also continued across western and southern New York State, northern and western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, eastern Kentucky, northeast Indiana and parts of Michigan.

Hundreds of traffic accidents, resulting in at least 10 deaths, have been blamed on the storms since Sunday.

"It is nasty," said Cal Shue of East Side Towing in St. Clair Shores in suburban Detroit. "The problem is once you get a car stalled on the highway everybody gawks at them, and that's what causes all the problems."

An arctic blast predicted to last through Thursday plagued Florida with its coldest weather of the season, and some citrus farmers held all-night vigils to protect fields and groves with irrigation systems, heaters and other methods.

But the state Citrus Commission said that frost was sporadic and there should be no severe damage because temperatures were expected to rise into the 50s and 60s during the day.

"It appears as though we have dodged the bullet, and we feel pretty good about it," commission chairman Bill Becker said late Tuesday. Temperatures of 27 degrees and below for several hours can ice the fruit, 75 percent of which is still on the trees.

Cold gripped the eastern two-thirds of the nation, transforming the remains of Tuesday's snowstorm into an icy crust that coated unplowed roads and sidewalks.

Temperatures dipped into the 20s today across much of Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and northern Florida. Single-digit and below-zero temperatures cut through the upper Great Lakes and the upper Mississippi Valley.

Readings included 18 degrees in Nashville, 19 in Washington, D.C., 14 in Philadelphia, 2 in Chicago and 10 in Detroit.

"It's awful. It's cold with a capital C," said Celene Trickett, a secretary with the Garrett County Board of Education in Maryland, where temperatures dipped into the teens.

The storm dumped up to 19 inches of snow on Stillwater, N.Y., 18 inches on parts of Vermont, 16 inches on Pennsylvania's Pocono Mountains and in northwestern New Jersey, 12 to 20 inches on the Berkshires in Massachusetts and a foot on New Hampshire, Maine and Newbury, Conn.

Connally Auction Nets $2.7 Million

HOUSTON (AP) — The sale of hundreds of items belonging to former Gov. John Connally netted nearly $2.7 million, but the money raised in four days of auctions will only put a dent in the tens of millions he owes creditors.

Items sold during the final auction Tuesday were rather ordinary — cocktail napkins, ashtrays and wastebaskets — but still brought in $240,000.

A terra cotta cooking vessel that went for $80 and a camera that sold for $50 were among the cheapest items auctioned Tuesday. A used exercise trampoline brought in $250.

Connally, who sat next to his wife, Nellie, through most of the auctions at the Hart Gallery, said Tuesday that the sales have been "emotional and draining. I go home each evening exhausted."

"You can't just sit there, no matter how small (the item), without evoking some memory about where we got it," said Connally, 70. "A great many of those, nearly all of those things, we had given to us or we acquired for a particular reason."

POLICE VIGIL — Melissa and Anthony Genovese, center, children of a Dallas police officer, join in a candlelight vigil at city hall in Dallas Tuesday night. The

National GNP Increases Despite Wall Street Crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) — The economy expanded at a surprisingly brisk 4.2 percent annual rate from October through December despite a huge slump in consumer spending, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said that overall economic growth, as measured by the gross national product, was not affected by the record collapse in stock prices of Oct. 19. The 4.2 percent fourth quarter GNP growth rate was little changed from a rate of 4.3 percent in the July-September quarter.

The overall growth rate, however, masked some worrisome trends in the economy. The bulk of the $39.2 billion improvement in GNP growth in the fourth quarter came from a sharp $33.7 billion rise in inventories held by businesses.

This increase was occurring at the same time that consumer spending was plummeting by $24.1 billion. The drop in consumer spending translated into an annual percentage rate decrease of 3.8 percent, the biggest setback in this area in more than seven years.

Economists are worried that consumer spending, which accounts for two-thirds of the overall GNP, will weaken in the wake of the collapse in stock prices, dragging the country into a recession.

With consumer spending falling at the same time that inventories were soaring, businesses likely will have to cut back production in coming months to work off unwanted stockpiles. Many economists are forecasting that GNP growth in the first half of 1988 will be below 1 percent.

With growth that weak, these analysts say that the possibility of a recession cannot be ruled out.

While the Reagan administration is confidently predicting a record sixth year of peacetime economic expansion in 1988, Democrats trying to regain the White House are charging that this forecast overstates the economy's prospects.

The unexpectedly strong fourth quarter growth helped to push growth for all of 1987 to 3.8 percent, when measured from the fourth quarter of 1986.

This compared to growth of 2.2 percent in 1986 and was the best showing since 1984, when the economy expanded 5.1 percent. It also surpassed the administration's own forecast of 3.2 percent growth in 1987.

The administration projections are measured against the fourth quarter of the preceding year. GNP growth averaging all quarters in a year showed the economy expanded at a 2.9 percent rate in 1987, the same as 1986.

Inflation, as measured by an index tied to the GNP, rose 3.4 percent in 1987 compared to a price increase of 2.7 percent in 1986.

The sharp plunge in consumer spending resulted primarily from a drop in auto sales, which had surged in the third quarter as consumers responded to cut-rate financing incentives offered by automakers trying to make room for the new models.

It was the first actual drop in consumer spending since a 0.7 percent decline in the first quarter of 1987 and was the biggest decline since a 7.9 percent plunge in the second quarter of 1980.

Thousands Hold Vigil For Slain Officer

DALLAS (AP) — Residents mourned a policeman slain by a deranged transient who was reportedly egged on by bystanders, and rallied to the embattled police department's side at a candlelight vigil following a memorial service that drew thousands.

About 1,500 people, including Police Chief Billy Prince, attended Tuesday night's vigil in front of City Hall in memory of Officer John Chase, 25, who was shot to death Saturday.

During the day, thousands silently showed support for police by driving to work with their headlights on. A group of about 25 homeless people donned black armbands.

Chase, who was white, was shot in the face three times by a black, homeless man as a few young black men yelled, "Shoot him, shoot him," witnesses said. Carl Dudley Williams, 34, was shot and killed by two pursuing off-duty officers after he fired a shot at them, police said.

Williams had an arrest record dating to 1978, including an August arrest for assaulting an officer, and a history of mental illness. He had been diagnosed as a paranoid schizophrenic.

Speakers at the vigil called for changes in city government and demanding an end to what they said was harassment of the police department.

"We have a lot of police officers here," said vigil organizer Bill Caruth of Support Your Local Police and a member of the John Birch Society. "I think we're trying to show them they've got friends."

"I don't know of a better place to have this than right here in front of City Hall where they have been harassed," said neighborhood Crime Watch chairman Jo Ann Karr, her eyes brimming with tears.

One person drew cheers by holding up a sign that said Mayor Annette Strauss and two council members who have been critical of the police department "must go. We need law and order."

Caruth called on the mostly white crowd to attend a City Council meeting today to press for abolishment of a new police review board composed of civilians.

Chase's slaying heightened a growing tension between the mostly white department and Dallas' minority community, whose leaders have criticized the department for several police shootings of non-whites.

The memorial service for Chase at a Baptist church drew thousands of law enforcement officers, their badges masked in black.

Special Gift

She Has Perfect Pitch

By MICHAEL REJEBIAN
The Clarion-Ledger
OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — Barbara Brooks is not like most of us.

It isn't so much the fact she's mentally retarded that makes her different. Barbara has a gift.

Several times a week, for about 45 minutes, she slides up to the Wurlitzer student piano in the activities building of the North Mississippi Retardation Center and shares her gift with whoever wants to listen.

On this day, Barbara is asked to play "Baby Face," a tune she has heard before but never attempted. Like magnets, her fingers find the keys that bring the tune to life. Barbara smiles.

"She has perfect pitch," said music teacher Tony Jones. "As long as it's not too technically difficult, she can play anything she hears."

That is Barbara's gift. Jones strikes a simple tune on another piano, and Barbara repeats it. The only deviation comes from the chords she has added.

Jones plays "Nobody Knows the Trouble I've Seen." Barbara does the same. He requests "Take Me Out To The Ball Game." Barbara honors it.

From hymns to classical music, she plays. There is no sheet music; she does not watch her hands.

"A lot of times she'll hear something on the radio and she'll come in and play it," Jones said. "It's just unreal."

To say that Barbara Brooks is severely retarded in terms of intellect and moderately retarded in her adaptive ability seems a contradiction after watching her at the piano.

"A lot of people are just astounded by her," Jones said. "They just don't understand. For her, talking is more easily done through the keyboard. Asked the name of her favorite hymn, she swings around on her seat and plays "Rock of Ages."

There is no hint of nervousness as she performs for her guests. She likes playing for others, she said, more than for herself.

Her mother, Lucille Brooks of Jackson, first noticed her 41-year-old daughter's talent when Barbara was a child growing up in Corinth.

While still in a stroller, she would take one finger and pick out a tune on the piano, her mother recalled.

"When she really started playing was after we moved to Tupelo when she was 7 or 8. Her (older) sister would sit and play hymns and Barbara would stand up by the piano and listen," Brooks said. "When her sister finished, Barbara would play."

Jones, who is a full-time music teacher at North Mississippi Retardation Center, learned of Barbara's talent soon after she arrived at the center in 1976.

During preparation for a Christmas program, Jones asked if anyone could perform a carol on the piano. Barbara said she could and proceeded to play back a tune after Jones played it.

"What fascinated me was that when she made a mistake, she knew it and corrected it," Jones said.

Both Jones and Barbara's mother think Barbara has made tremendous progress on the piano in the past 12 years.

She regularly plays for civic organizations and nursing homes in the Oxford area, and performs annually at the Mississippi Arts Fair for the Handicapped on the Mississippi Gulf Coast, Jones said.

About the only thing Barbara enjoys more than the piano is contact with her family, said Mary Wilson, Barbara's social worker for the past eight years.

"She is one of the ones I communicate with very well. She's warm, she's friendly and she's very helpful," Wilson said.

Indeed, anyone who spends time with the pianist can't help but like her.

As her guests prepare to leave, she is asked to play one last tune of her choosing. The piano keys dance beneath her fingers as she plays the hymn, "Love Lifted Me." Barbara Brooks has a gift.

Dear Readers: With a crochet hook, some leftover yarns and a little imagination, you can create useful and unique place mats. The easiest shape is a simple rectangle, which is readily adaptable to almost any pattern stitch. To give you an idea and perhaps start your own creative juices flowing, here are some directions for one colorful set.

With a heavy crochet cotton or any sturdy, easy-care yarn of your choice and a suitably sized crochet hook, work a chain approximately 16 inches long, counting the chains as you go. If you slip a plastic-tipped bobby pin in every 10th chain as you go, you will find it much easier to keep track of your stitches. The following pattern stitch requires a starting chain with a multiple of five stitches, so plan to end the chain when your count reaches a number ending with a five or a zero.

The pattern is worked in three colors, labeled A, B and C. Color A will be your predominate color, and your starting chain and first four rows are worked with it.

Pat's Pointers

Pat Trexler

Row 1: With Color A, single crochet in the 2nd chain from the hook and in each remaining chain to the end. Chain 1 and turn.

Rows 2,3 and 4: Single crochet in each stitch across, chain 1 and turn. At the end of Row 4, draw Color B through the final two loops of the last single crochet before working the turning chain.

Row 5: Single crochet in each of the first 4 stitches. Step 1: Working into the row below, draw up a loop in the single crochet below the stitch just worked and do the same under each of the next 2 single crochets keeping all loops on the hook; yarnover and draw hook through 3 of the loops on the hook; yarnover and draw through remaining 2 loops. Step 2: Work a single crochet in the top of the next single crochet (immediately above the stitch through which you last pulled up a loop) and in each of the next 3 single crochets. Repeat Steps 1 and 2 over and over across to end of the row. Chain 1 and turn.

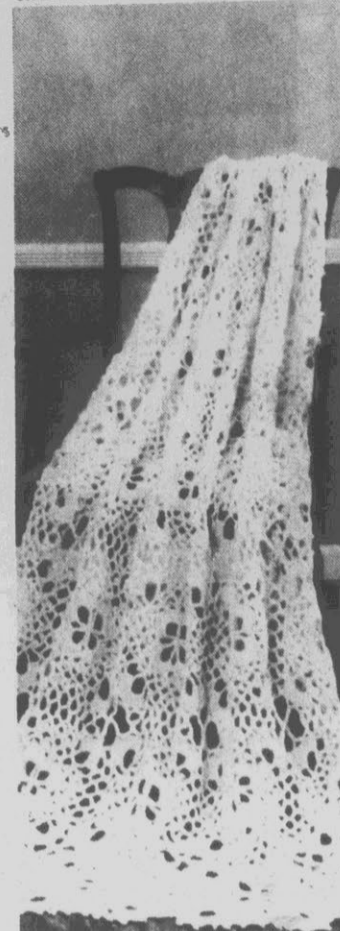

Row 6: Work same as Row 4 drawing Color A through in last stitch. Chain 1 and turn. Rows 7 and 8: Work same as for Row 3 and Row 4, changing to Color C at end of Row 8. Rows 9 and 10: Repeat Rows 5 and 6.

Repeat Rows 3 through 10 over and over for pattern until place mat measures approximately 12 inches in depth, ending with completion of Row 6. Then work 3 rows of single crochet in Color A.

I have not given a hook size or yarn requirements as this will vary according to the type of yarn you use. I would suggest that you work a small sample swatch to see if you like the pattern stitch and to be sure that your choice of hook gives you the right texture.

As long as you use one color for all Color A rows you can actually use as many different colors as you like on the alternating rows, thus creating a "rainbow" or "fiesta" effect if you have enough coordinating leftovers on hand.

Nuns Add Singing To Busy Life

By BETTY BRAND
The Wilkes-Barre Times Leader

SUGARLOAF, Pa. (AP) — They sing like professionals, operate a thriving bakery business and pray six hours each and every day for others. They also laugh a lot.

Although the primary work of their contemplative order is intercessory prayer, Mother Maria, prioress of the Byzantine Carmelite Nuns of Holy Annunciation Monastery, said that not long ago, the sisters pooled their musical talents to compose and arrange five original songs.

Because their monastery had incurring a large debt when a new wing was added in 1984, the nuns decided to supplement their bakery earnings by making a music album and offering it for sale to the public.

"Here in Sugarloaf, people know us as the sisters who bake," Mother Maria said. "But the album gave us an opportunity to share with listeners other moments of our life ... as well as raise some needed funds."

On one side of the album, also available on cassette tape, are recorded selections from the Divine Liturgy of St. John Chrysostom, which the sisters sing a cappella at their daily mass.

On the other side are the five original songs, which feature the voices of seven nuns, ranging in age from 25 to 78. The nuns also play piano, guitar, recorder, harmonica, bells and bendura — a Ukrainian instrument with strings similar to a piano, but which is played like a harp.

Sales grew through word of mouth and newspaper advertisements. The nuns were also featured on local television.

The publicity has helped the monastery become better known, and the nuns said they plan to enlarge their bakery business.

Home Turned Into Sanctuary By Bird Lover

By JOHN PLATERO
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI (AP) — For most of her life, Helen Kavy has helped adults and children with speech and learning problems. The remainder of her time is spent nursing and caring for injured birds.

For almost two decades, veterinarians, humane societies, police and animal control offices in South Florida have recommended Miss Kavy to those who find wounded wild birds, but don't know what to do with them.

Alone and without outside financial help, this bird lover has converted her modest home into an avian hospital and sanctuary.

When her feathered patients are healed, she transfers them to private sanctuaries where they are gradually returned to their environment or protected from further harm.

"My name has been passed around over the years," explained Miss Kavy as she hand-fed a young mourning dove in her kitchen on a day off from her Dade County school job.

"I don't restrict myself to regular hours," the therapist-educational specialist continued, checking a splint she put on a bird's broken right leg when brought to her several days earlier.

"I'm probably the only one available weekends, holidays and during the night when someone finds an injured bird."

Her next patient was a cattle heron with a broken wing. Using tweezers, she fed the young bird ground beef from her refrigerator. She gave it water, cuddled it and returned it to a clean cage.

"When birds are very young they can't feed themselves," Miss Kavy said. "The patient gets behind in parent training. We try, but we can't give them what they get from the normal bird parents. For that reason, I make sure young birds are mentally matured before I release them. Otherwise they will be killed out there."

Miss Kavy has a wide knowledge of birds gathered over the years working with others and from an extensive library in her living room.

Because different species have different diets, she maintains a constant supply of food. "Some eat meat, vegetables, fruit, fish, all kinds of seeds and formula food I have to prepare."

In a large plastic bin, she keeps a bug and worm culture needed to feed certain patients.

Although she has personal birds — fancy pigeons, parrots, cockateels and parakeets — she tries not to become too attached to any of the wild birds in her care.

"Baby birds aren't afraid of people. People make them afraid. If they get too attached to you, they won't survive when you release them."

Over the years, she's cured a wide variety of birds and some animals — hawks, vultures, chickens, ducks, peacocks, herons, squirrels, possums, raccoons and a fox that suffered a concussion.

Miss Kavy, who is single, has little time for a social life.

"I get up at 5:30 a.m., feed them, clean cages, give medication to those that need it and change bandages before going to work. As soon as I get home I have to do it again. The younger ones need more attention."

A phone call from Joshua Lockwood interrupted her as she hand-fed a black bird. The Hialeah truck driver had two injured birds and was told she could help.

A half hour later he arrived with a sick white dove and a brown dove with half a wing missing.

Miss Kavy examined the white bird to determine what medication is needed to restore it to good health.

She cleansed the wound of the other bird, amputated a piece of bone left from the missing wing segment, sutured the skin over the stub, applied an antibiotic salve and carefully bandaged it, soothing the bird as she worked.

Later, she checked on other patients housed on her porch, Florida room, carport and back yard. They responded loudly, vying for her attention and affection. None shied from her touch.

Miss Kavy has no intention of giving up her charitable practice.

"Even when I'm exhausted, I don't think of quitting," she said. "There's a need...."

Exhibit Includes N.C. Coverlets

CULLOWHEE — Familiar heirloom coverlets from several Western North Carolina counties may soon be on exhibit in major museums around the country.

The coverlets, placemats and other examples of overshot weaving are a major part of Western Carolina University's exhibit "Coverlets: New Threads in Old Patterns" that recently has been selected by the Smithsonian Institution as a traveling exhibition.

The Smithsonian featured the WCU coverlets exhibit in the fall issue of "Siteline," the quarterly newsletter of Smithsonian traveling exhibitions.

The exhibit also includes weaving tools, photographs and other items loaned by area residents of Buncombe, Madison, Haywood, Jackson, Macon, Cherokee, Clay and other western counties.

Information may be obtained from the Mountain Heritage Center, Cullowhee, 28723, or call 704-227-7129.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Why are all the ads for hearing aids directed to senior citizens? The manufacturers and distributors of hearing aids not only ignore a much larger market, they fail to reach many people out there who need help.

Why don't they show young athletes wearing a hearing aid so they can compete in sports? Or middle-aged men and women enjoying card games with their friends now that they can hear the bidding? Or younger people participating in school functions, taking their own notes and listening to religious services? They could also picture the same old argument that goes on in many homes when one member has turned the TV on too loud for the rest of the family.

Many employees are passed over for promotion because they pretend to understand instead of admitting that they have a hearing problem. (They don't realize that they may be thought stupid or rude.)

Why are so many people reluctant to admit to a hearing problem when eyeglasses are universally accepted by those who need help in seeing? — YOUNG AND HARD OF HEARING

DEAR YOUNG: Because a hearing loss is usually associated with older people, those who are sensitive about their age are reluctant to admit they need a hearing aid. A physical impairment of any kind is nothing to be ashamed of. Many people are still not aware that there are hearing aids so tiny and effective that they are virtually unseen, and you're right — the advertising companies are missing a major marketing opportunity.

DEAR ABBY: First you said that Frank Sinatra said, "Perry Como is the finest male vocalist in the business." Then someone wrote in to say that you goofed — Sinatra said, "Vic Damone has the best pipes in the business."

Well, Abby, you may have goofed, but so did your critic. Actually, Sinatra said, "Tony Bennett is the best singer in the business." — CHARLES NELSON REILLY

DEAR CHARLES: Grazia. Three cheers for the red, white and green.

DEAR ABBY: "Afraid to Fantasize in Chickasha, Okla." said, "Somewhere in the Bible it says that thinking lustful thoughts is as great a sin as actually committing the sin. So, if that's the case, why not go right ahead and commit the sin?"

Possibly this following piece of doggerel, which I read some years ago in an English magazine, and which for some reason has remained in my memory, may provide an answer, some comfort, or even inspiration:

"I've oft been told by some learned friars

"That wishing and the crime are one "And heaven punishes desires

"As much as if the deed were done.

"If wishing damns us, you and I

"Are damned to all our heart's content.

"So come, let us at least enjoy

"Some pleasure ere our punishment!"

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices moved higher today, taking their cue from a bond-market surge following the release fourth-quarter gross national product statistics.

At 10 a.m., the Dow Jones index of 30 industrial stocks stood at 1,925.07, up 4.48 points.

Gainers outnumbered decliners by 2 to 1 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 674 issues up, 337 down and 412 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 21.65 million shares.

Trading opened after a government report that the fourth-quarter GNP rose by 4.2 percent. While this was more than many economists expected, much of the gain resulted from a $41.6 billion hike in business inventories.

Bond prices soared, as traders interpreted the inventory bulge as a sign that the economy is slowing down, thereby leaving room for the Federal Reserve to relax interest rates.

The stock market, which has been strongly influenced by the bond market lately, once again followed that lead.

At 10 a.m., the NYSE index was up 0.55, at 140.81. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose 0.27 to 266.04.

On Tuesday, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 25.86 to 1,920.59.

Decliners outpaced gainers by about 8 to 5 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 919 issues lower, 573 higher and 449 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 138.38 million shares, against 275.25 million in the previous session.

Hearing

RALEIGH (AP) — The Governor's Highway Safety Commission was told that tougher laws, more law enforcement officers and improved and expanded alcohol treatment programs could decrease the number of drunken drivers.

The remarks came Tuesday during the first of eight meetings the commission has planned for public comment on laws against driving while impaired by alcohol. Gov. Jim Martin has asked that issues concerning impaired driving get the 17-member commission's top priority.

Commission members said the number of drinkers and drug abusers behind the wheel has begun to rise after the decrease that followed passage of the 1983 Safe Roads Act. The commission reported 77,020 DWI arrests in the state in 1986, an 11 percent increase over 1985. The number of people killed in wrecks linked to driving while impaired by alcohol in 1986 increased 10 percent and the number injured rose 8 percent.

License Snafu

RALEIGH (AP) — The paper trail leading to a North Carolina driver's license became more tangled Jan. 1, when a law took effect that requires high risk and new drivers — an estimated 300,000 a year — to prove that they have liability insurance.

The designated drivers must have a new form filled out and signed by their insurance agent before their licenses will be issued.

The forms are available by mail from the division and through all licensed insurers in North Carolina. Agents can fill the forms out and mail them to the division for their clients.

Budget Deficit Up 25 Pct. Over First Quarter Of '87

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government piled up a 25 percent higher budget deficit in the first three months of the current fiscal year than in the previous year's first quarter, the Treasury Department reports.

The department said Tuesday that from October through December, the imbalance between spending and revenues was $80.4 billion, compared with a deficit of $64.6 billion in the same period a year ago.

The sharp increase, which included a deficit of $23.9 billion in December, emphasized the problem facing the Reagan administration and Congress as officials struggle to reduce soaring budget deficits as a way of restoring confidence in jittery financial markets.

President Reagan boasted Monday night in his State of the Union address that the budget deficit had been cut by $73 billion in 1987, down to $148 billion from an all-time high of $221.1 billion in 1986.

However, many private economists are forecasting the deficit could rise to $160 billion or more in the current fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30. These predictions of a sharp jump in the red ink come despite congressional passage last month of a spending bill to shave $30.2 billion from this year's deficit.

The problem is that government coffers were enriched by a windfall of one-time tax collections stemming from the 1986 Tax Reform Act. That money will not be available this year.

The Treasury Department report Tuesday said revenues totaled $85.5 billion in December while spending totaled $109.4 billion. The December imbalance compared with a $12.2 billion deficit in the same month a year earlier.

The November deficit was $25.8 billion, while the October deficit was $30.7 billion.

For the first three months of the fiscal year, revenues totaled $204.9 billion, 7.8 percent above government tax collections a year earlier. Spending totaled $285.3 billion, 12 percent ahead of a year ago.

For December, the top spending categories were the usual: defense, Social Security, other programs in the Department of Health and Human Services and interest on the national debt.

Defense spending totaled $28.4 billion last month and $74.3 billion for the first three months of the fiscal year, up 12.2 percent from the same period a year ago.

Spending for Social Security totaled $35.3 billion last month and $69 billion from October through December, a giant increase of 40 percent from a year ago.

The rest of HHS spending totaled $12.3 billion in December and $37.7 billion so far this fiscal year, an increase of 0.6 percent over a year ago.

Interest on the $2.4 trillion national debt totaled $30.4 billion in December and $61.1 billion over the quarter, an increase of 10.1 percent over the same period in fiscal 1987.

Jackson Campaigns For A 'New South'

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson, campaigning for a "New South" of economic opportunity, today asked environmentalists, farmers, blacks and the working man to fashion a political patchwork quilt on the road to the presidency.

"If we pull these patches and pieces together, we form a quilt. We become the new majority, and we can win jobs and peace and justice," Jackson told more than 150 supporters at a breakfast meeting where he announced the opening of his North Carolina headquarters.

Jackson called his presidential campaign the most diverse of any candidate, saying, "We will win by making room for the people." He urged people not to turn their backs on tobacco growers.

"You may be against smoking, but don't be against tobacco farmers," he said. "We cannot just abandon them. There must be some process of transition and there must be some mercy in our management."

While Jackson credited his registration drives for helping Democrats including Sen. Terry Sanford take office in 1986 and regain control of the U.S. Senate, he refused to be drawn into debate over Sanford's endorsement of Al Gore for president.

"To be sure, there is no relationship between his victory and Al Gore, but there is a relationship between our campaign and his victory. That is a legitimate concern, that as we grow, we must have reciprocal voting patterns, reciprocal support patterns... as we pursue our future."

But he added, "You guys are searching for a Sanford-Jackson fight," he told questioners. "He's not running in this race and I am. I have no axe to grind with the senator."

Jackson showed his usual command of his audience, drawing applause when he said, "Even lions and lambs find common ground at the point of environment. If the forest is on fire, even lions and lambs will run together."

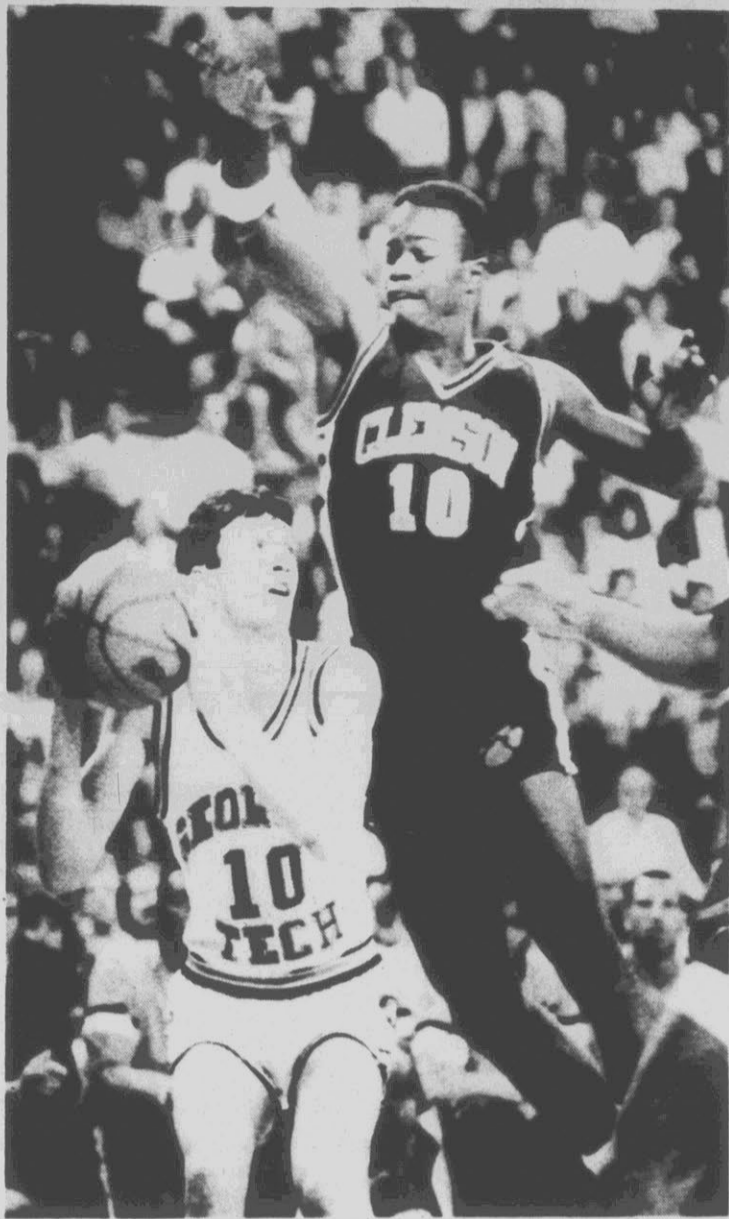

He drew laughter when he pitted common sense against bureaucracy. "If a mother has five children and two pork chops, she will not go to a computer and conclude she had three excess children."

In a news conference after the breakfast with supporters, Jackson issued a statement calling for raising the standard of living for all working people.

Jackson also called for cleaning up the environment, raising the minimum wage and enforcing worker safety rules.

Coaches Debate Shoe Deals

RALEIGH (AP) — The growth of lucrative shoe endorsement contracts and other outside business interests will eventually force universities to define the role of coaches in colleges, some Atlantic Coast Conference coaches say.

"I think it is something in the future that needs to be addressed between coaches, the university and outside activities of a coach," North Carolina State Jim Valvano said Tuesday.

"Issues are being raised — and valid ones — about where the money (from outside activities) is going," Valvano said during a teleconference of ACC coaches.

"The whole aspect in what a coach does will be discussed," Valvano said. "I do think that you will eventually have one or another. Do you want to be treated like a professor ... or like a coach?"

North Carolina Coach Dean Smith said shoe contracts worth more than $100,000 for some college basketball coaches should be replaced by tenure to supplement coaches' incomes.

"There certainly appears to be (a double standard)," Smith said. "I was one of the last ones to ever have a type of contract. Then, I went to the university and shared the money with them."

"No. 1, you are a professor," added Smith, who said he signed his shoe contract six years ago, "but you don't have tenure. I think it would be a good tradeoff to have tenure (instead of outside incomes)."

Georgia Tech coach Bobby

Cremins called a report in The Atlanta Constitution that he had agreed to a $160,000 contract with Nike last week "sensational news."

Cremins is in the last of a four-year contract with Converse that has paid him about $70,000 annually, the newspaper reported.

"I'm looking forward to finishing the year with Converse," Cremins said Tuesday. "At the end of the year I'll sit down and look at things. All that (report) was was sensational journalism."

Kevin Brown, corporate communications director of Nike, said the company gives colleges about 100 pairs of shoes each year but players are not required to wear the brand that their coach promotes.

Cliff Ellis, Clemson's head basketball coach, said a coach's shoe contract is no different than the contracts professional athletes sign.

"The importance of a shoe contract ... is that it's lucrative in regard to name association — no different than a professional athlete," Ellis said. "The thing that is important ... is having a good shoe for your players to utilize."

"I think it is different," Smith said. "There are coaches that do commercials like professional athletes ... Nobody went into coaching for money, especially not at my age. I started at $9,000."

Maryland second-year coach Bob Wade, who came to the college ranks from Baltimore Dunbar High School, said he was not shocked to see the large shoe contracts.

"I haven't been in the league that long. Whatever the other coaches receive is their business. All I know about is Bob Wade," he said.

Ellis, along with many coaches, stand loyal.

"My contract is with Converse ... and I've never worn another shoe," he said.

Lady Pirates Test Campbell

East Carolina's Lady Pirates take to the road Thursday night, traveling to Buies Creek to face highly regarded Campbell University.

The Lady Pirates take a two-game winning streak into the game. Both of the wins came on their own Minges Coliseum court against fellow Colonial Athletic Association members, Richmond and William & Mary. The pair raised the Lady Pirate record to 7-11 on the season.

Following that game the Lady Pirates return home to face UNC-Wilmington in another league game on Saturday night.

Tipoff for both contests is set for 7:30 p.m.

Campbell comes into the game with an 11-3 record.

The Camels are led by Regina McKiethan, a 5-11 senior center, hitting 23.5 points a game. She also is pulling 9.5 rebounds. Denise Ford, a 5-10 junior forward, has a 14.0

average with an 8.5 rebound average. The Lady Camels had an eight-game winning streak snapped Monday at Radford, 67-57.

The Lady Seahawks are now 11-4 overall and 2-3 in the CAA.

Sharon McDowell, a 5-8 senior forward, leads the way for UNCW with a 15.7 point and 10.2 rebound average. McDowell was the national leader in field goal percentage at the last reporting period.

The other four starters are also in double figures, each hitting 11 points per game. They include 5-10 senior forward Sissy Morse, 6-2 freshman center Krystle Taylor, 5-8 sophomore guard Charlene Page and 5-5 junior guard Johnnie Smith.

ECU and Wilmington have both beaten Richmond and William & Mary — both around this past weekend — and both have lost to American, James Madison and George Mason.

At Start Of Asian Tour

Moye Hopes To Build On Experience

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

With a year of professional golf under his belt, Greenville's Macon Moye said he knows he's got what it takes to compete successfully. Now it's just a matter of gaining more experience.

"The more you are out there, the more you realize that you are (just) as good (the other professionals)," Moye said. "They just have more experience and they know how to conduct themselves. What it comes down to is course management."

Moye, a Greenville native who played baseball at East Carolina, is set to embark on the Asian golf tour, beginning with the Hong Kong Open Feb. 11-14. It will be his first year on the tour after competing on the Australian professional circuit last year.

Moye, who didn't begin to play golf seriously until after his baseball career, enjoyed success at some open tournaments in New England in 1986 and attracted the attention of some businessmen in both the New England and Greenville areas, which led to a corporate sponsorship.

It was that sponsorship which enabled Moye to compete on the Australian tour last year and the Asian circuit this season.

For young professional golfers hoping to move up to the PGA, there are two options. The first is to compete in the Tournament Players Association, sort of a minor league for the Professional Golf Association. The other is to play abroad.

For Moye, the choice was easy. Because overseas travel arrangements are arranged by an official of the tour, the Asian tour is actually cheaper than the TPA circuit and is also more lucrative, he said.

"I would love to think that within four years I'll be playing in the Masters," Moye said. "But traveling around the world is not a bad way to make a living. I'm seeing the world with somebody else's money."

"Most people work five days a week to play (golf) two (days). I'm playing seven days a week. I'm just lucky to be doing it. It's a lot of fun for me and I'm hoping it works out."

Moye's travels will take him to golf courses all over Asia, from Hong Kong to Kuala Lumpur to Singapore to Bangkok. Of the 11 tournaments he is scheduled to play in, the smallest purse is $100,000 and the largest is $430,000.

This year Moye said he is hoping to capitalize on experience gained from the Australian tour.

"Overall, I played in seven of eight tournaments," he said. "I only missed one tournament because I didn't qualify and I made five of seven cuts. I went from there and I learned a lot. I played with world class players (like) Gerald Taylor, who finished sixth at the British Open; Sam Torrence, who is a World Cup player; Sam Torrence, who is a World Cup player and finished ninth on the European money list last year, and Gordon Brand Jr."

"Playing with these guys, you can see a difference between their game and your game and you can make an educated judgment as to whether or not you are wasting your time."

"The difference is that they've been playing tournament golf for 11-12 years now and this is only my second year. They never have the really bad hole. They recognize scoring opportunities."

"They are real good at calculating where they stand, what to do and what not to do. I grew up playing real aggressive. Almost every tournament I've played in there is always a double bogey or even a triple bogey. Then when you look at where you've finished in a tournament and think about where four or five shots would move you."

Moye took a roundabout route to get where he is now.

Rose High didn't have a golf team when Moye attended school so he focused his energies elsewhere. He played on a state championship baseball team in 1975 and also played basketball and football.

Following high school, he settled in at ECU where he played right field.

Once his eligibility expired in 1979, Moye still had a semester left to graduate with a physical education degree. It was during that final semester that he began to play golf seriously.

"I knew I wasn't going to play any professional baseball," Moye said. "(Former) coach (Hal) Baird, he had a lot of good connections. He could have gotten me onto a minor league team, but (it was) $600 a month and I had average speed so it was self-defeating."

"I started playing golf (more) because I still had a semester of school. Golf seemed like something to do. I started to work with the golf pro out at Brook Valley (Harold Thomas) and pretty soon I was down shooting 75 or below after three months of (playing and) hitting practice balls."

Moye tried to refine his game while also holding down a steady job but found that the two really didn't coexist.

"I tried to combine the two. I went into the golf business," he said. "I went into the PGA apprentice program and worked as a golf professional for three years (in Wilmington and Pinehurst)."

"At that point, if you want to be a player, it is absolutely the worst business to be in because you are working 60-70 hours a week. When you get through working, the last place you want to be is the golf course."

By 1984, Moye tried a new direction. He went back to school at ECU and earned a second degree, this time in history with a minor in political science.

During his second stint in school, Moye began spending his summers up in Martha's Vineyard in Massachusetts, working as a bartender.

"It was a nice summer spot," Moye said. "It was different and I made about $1,000 a week bartending. It was hard work but it was good money. There is one golf course up there and it's called Farmneck Golf Club. I got to be good friends with the golf pro and I started working on the side for him, working maybe two days a week so I could play maybe seven days a week."

"I had kind of laid off golf but I still wanted to play. I really developed. I practiced and played the New England tournaments."

It was not too long after this, and a second place finish at the Greater Bangor (Maine) Open that the corporate sponsorship came together and enabled Moye to hit the overseas tours.

Moye, who spends his off-seasons in the New England area, has tried to impart some of his knowledge on his brother Simon, a freshman golfer at ECU.

"I take him with me when I go to play different courses," Moye said. "I'm trying to pass on what I'm learning so the road for him will maybe be a lot easier than it is for me because he has a lot of ability."

But Simon and Macon aren't the only golfers in the family. Brothers Mike, Charles and Chris, as well as their father, Charlie Bill, all play. It makes for a pretty competitive atmosphere on the course, according to Macon.

"Loser has to do the dishes after Thanksgiving," he said.

"I take him with me when I go to play different courses," Moye said. "I'm trying to pass on what I'm learning so the road for him will maybe be a lot easier than it is for me because he has a lot of ability."

And one of those lessons is how to deal with the pressure of playing for money.

Moye said it's easy to get caught up in the pressure of thinking about each shot in terms of monetary value. It was a problem which cropped up for him during the Australian tour last year.

"It's not fair to put pressure on yourself for one shot," he said. "Because, face it, in a series of four tournaments, you are hitting 280-300 shots."

Tech Responds To League Pressure

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Cremins can breathe a little easier after his team's 85-76 victory over Clemson.

Cremins, who had said his team was "really sucking some wind" following Atlantic Coast Conference losses to North Carolina State and Virginia, said the ACC victory Tuesday night was a big confidence-builder.

"We obviously had our backs against the wall," Cremins said. "We needed something like this to boost us."

Forward Duane Ferrell scored 26 points and center Tom Hammonds added 19 points to lead Tech, 14-4 overall and 2-2 in the ACC, as the Yellow Jackets controlled the inside game. Ferrell had 12 rebounds and Hammonds grabbed 13.

"Duane and Tommy were great," Cremins said.

Clemson Coach Cliff Ellis decided in the second half to bench forward Eldon Campbell, the team's leading scorer, even though he was in no foul trouble.

"Campbell wasn't getting back on defense," Ellis said. "Ferrell and Hammonds got inside and got the rebounds. That was the big factor in the game."

Campbell wound up with 19 points for the Tigers, 11-6 overall and 1-4 in the ACC, but he sat out 10 minutes of the second half.

Clemson guard Grayson Marshall also set a new ACC career assist mark during the game. His eight assists gave him 789, breaking the record of 781 set by Tyrone Bogues of Wake Forest.

The game was close throughout, with neither team able to take a lead of more than nine points. Georgia Tech led 41-35 at the half, but Clemson went on an 11-5 run to open the second period and tied the game with 17:30 remaining.

The game remained tight until the 5:52 mark, when Tech went on a 9-0 run and then iced the game by hitting free throws down the stretch. Guard Craig Neal added 16 points and 11 assists for the Yellow Jackets, while Tim Kincaid had 15 points and Sean Tyson 10 for the Tigers.

Cox is now 9-1 and travels to West Craven on Tuesday.

PCC's Board Play Keys 84-73 Win

AHOSKIE — Pitt Community College crashed the boards Tuesday night against Roanoke-Chowan and came away with an 84-73 basketball victory.

The Paladins shot only 37.8 percent from the floor and a poor 55.6 percent at the line, but pulled away 54 rebounds to keep themselves in the game. "It was the best night we've had rebounding," Coach Charles Coburn said. Jesse Pratt led the way with 14 while Eric Dunn had 13 and Ricky Congleton added 11.

"Mike Hathaway had his best all-around game and had eight rebounds," Coburn said.

"I was real proud of the kids. We only took seven to the game. Woodrow Wallace was out with the flu, Phil Isley has a bad ankle and Paul Hollingsworth has a broken thumb."

The first 12 minutes of the game were nip-and-tuck with neither team able to gain an advantage. But from an 18-18 tie at 8:17, Pitt went on a 15-point run and took a 33-18 lead with 3:35 to go. Pitt increased that to 40-29 at intermission.

In the second half, Roanoke-Chowan rallied and pulled back to 63-61 with 7:39 left. But Pitt held them off and moved back out to as much as the final 11-point margin.

Congleton led the way with 25 points while Hathaway finished with 22. Pratt had 15 and Dunn had 14.

Tyrone Victor led Roanoke-Chowan with 22 while Sam Windley had 21 and Steve Hayes had 10.

Pitt is now 8-13 and travels to Petersburg, Va., to face Richard Bland.

Indians Sign 2-Year Lease In Kinston

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — Representatives of the Kinston Indians minor league baseball team have leased Grainger Stadium for two years and predicted that Raleigh would strike out in its attempt to lure a professional team.

The $1-per-year lease contains a buyout provision that would allow the team to relocate if it paid the city of Kinston's utility bills for the stadium, club vice president North Johnson said Tuesday.

However, Johnson told The News and Observer of Raleigh he did not think the Indians, who have been in Kinston one year, would use the option.

The agreement came a week after the Raleigh City Council rejected a proposal that could have cleared the way for the Indians to move to Raleigh. Instead, the council asked a Raleigh group to bring a team to the city by the 1989 season.

The Indians are a Class A farm club of the Cleveland Indians, playing in the Carolina League.

Stuart Revo, the Indians' owner, said he did not think Raleigh could obtain a Class A franchise because the purchase of a team would require the approval of other team owners in the Carolina League and because it would require a territory waiver from Miles Wolff, owner of the Durham Bulls, a third team in the league.

Barbour Says He's Heading To N.C. State

GARNER, N.C. (AP) — Anthony Barbour of Garner High School, the 1987 Associated Press North Carolina football player of the year, announced Tuesday he will enroll at North Carolina State University in the fall.

Barbour announced his decision at a press conference at the Toot-n-Tell restaurant.

"I had decided earlier what school I was going to attend," Barbour said. "I changed my mind several times during the season and I came back to my initial, first decision and that is N.C. State."

"They didn't worry me to death all the time. They let me make the decision — there was no pressure."

As a senior, Barbour rushed for 3,125 yards on 333 carries, a 9.4 average, scored 47 touchdowns and led Garner to a 15-0 record and the state 4-A championship. The Trojans defeated Charlotte Harding 40-21 in the title game as Barbour rushed for 265 yards and four touchdowns.

"We never talked about how many tailbacks a certain team had or this or that," said Garner High School head coach Hal Stewart. "We were concerned about No. 1, where he would get a good quality education, and No. 2, a place where he would feel most comfortable at. That place was N.C. State."

House Hits 44 In GCA Win

Robin House put on an offensive show to lead Greenville Christian to an 81-66 basketball victory over Wilmington Christian Tuesday night. House finished the game with 16 field goals, including one 3-pointer and hit on 11 of 12 free throws for a 44-point total.

Greenville's girls also came away with a victory, taking a 58-54 decision.

Wilmington held a 20-19 lead after one period of the game and outscored Greenville, 19-16, in the second frame. That left the visitors up, 39-35, at intermission.

But in the second half, Greenville took control. The Knights outscored Wilmington, 23-10, in the third quarter and powered ahead 58-49. They finished off their guests, 23-17, in the final quarter for the win.

"Wilmington's shooting dropped off in the second half and we got them into foul trouble, too," Coach Dale Thatcher said. "The free throws

Azinger Has His Priorities

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Three victories on the American tour and a near miss in the British Open brought Paul Azinger PGA Player of the Year honors in 1987.

But it has not brought him any big-money contracts, endorsements or commercials.

It doesn't bother Azinger at all. "I'm trying to keep my priorities straight," Azinger said before a practice round for the defense of his title this week in the $650,000 Phoenix Open.

"I haven't signed with a manager," he said. "I don't feel like I need managing right now. Gosh, I've had one good year. That doesn't make a career as far as I'm concerned."

"I'm not anywhere near where I want to be as a player. I see guys out here playing shots I don't have any idea how to play. I've got a lot to learn," Azinger said.

"It's not that I don't want to make the big bucks outside of golf. But I think it could be a distraction right now. Maybe not for other guys, but it'd be a distraction for me to have a manager come up and say, 'You've got these three big deals and you've got to pick one.'" were the difference. We hit on 32 of 40 and we've been hitting over 80 percent the last few games at the line."

Clint Parker added 17 points and Brad Dixon had 13 for Greenville Christian. Jay Herchenhahn had 14 while Paul Casola and Jim Corbet each had 10.

Greenville's girls jumped out to a 19-7 lead in the first period and were never caught. They matched Wilmington, 12-12, in the second frame and held a 31-19 halftime lead.

Bears Take Two From Aurora

AURORA — Bear Grass High School swept a pair of Tobacco Belt Conference basketball games from Aurora Tuesday night. The boys rolled up an 86-54 victory while the girls took a 40-37 win with a fourth-quarter rally.

Both Bear Grass and Aurora poured in 18 points in the first quarter of the boys' game. But the Bears began to pull away after that, outscoring the Trojans, 21-13, in the second period. That left the Bears up at the half, 39-31.

Bear Grass continued to pull away in the third period, 28-11, building its lead to 67-42. The Bears finished off Aurora, 19-12, in the final quarter.

Steve Cowan led Bear Grass with 18 points while Steve Brown added 15 and Almer Riddick and Johnny Peele each had 10. Sylvanus Little had 20 while Fred Moore had 12 and Chris Blount had 10 for Aurora.

Aurora led 7-4 after the first period of the girls' game and added an 11-4 margin to the second period. That gave the Lady Trojans an 18-8 halftime lead.

The two matched points in the third period, each scoring 11 to make it 29-19 as the final period opened. In that, Bear Grass rallied, 21-8, to pull out the win.

Janet Rogerson led the Bears with 18 points while Crystal Lupton had 10 for Aurora.

The Bear Grass boys are now 8-4 in league play and 9-7 overall. The girls advance to 7-5, 8-6. Bear Grass travels to Chocowinity on Thursday.

Creswell Holds Off Bullet Rally

JAMESVILLE — Creswell went ahead early and then held off a late Jamesville charge to take a 40-38 Tobacco Belt 1-A conference basketball victory Tuesday.

Creswell led 9-8 after the first quarter and expanded that to 22-16 by halftime.

The Bullets then played Creswell even over the third quarter, with both teams scoring eight points to make it 30-24.

Jamesville then rallied in the final period by outscoring Creswell 14-10 but the Bullets missed on a number of opportunities to tie it up in the final quarter.

Kenneth Cabarrus and Anthony Mercer led Creswell with 12 and 11 points respectively. James Demery had 13 points to lead Jamesville while Eric Spruill added 10.

The Bullets fall to 4-11 overall and 3-9 in the TBC and return to action Thursday at Mattamuskeet.

In the girl's game, the Creswell girls held off the Lady Bullets 31-30 in overtime.

Creswell forged out to a 13-8 halftime lead before Jamesville narrowed the gap to 21-18 by the end of the third quarter. The Lady Bullets then outscored Creswell 11-8 over the final period to tie it up 29-29.

At the end of regulation Karen Styons hit the second of two shot foul for a 29-29 tie with one second left.

In the extra period, Creswell knocked in a pair of free throws while Jamesville countered with a free throw by Styons to allow Creswell to slip by for the 31-30 win.

Jamesville falls to 1-14 overall and 1-12 in conference.

Donoher Hopes Flyers Learn

By The Associated Press
Don Donoher hopes his Dayton Flyers can build on an improved second-half performance against Louisville. If so, he may not be forced to repeat his lecture to the home fans about their conduct.

Disappointed Flyer fans, reacting to the team's worst home loss in 17 years, threw toilet paper on the court near the end of Tuesday night's 90-59 loss. Donoher, whose team was charged with a technical foul, went on the public address system to ask the fans to stop.

"At the start of the second half, we showed some signs of life on offense, the Dayton Coach said afterward. "I hope we get something positive out of the second-half start."

Dayton was outscored 38-16 in the first half, souring most of the crowd of 13,261 at the Arena. What they witnessed was the worst beating at home since an 83-53 loss to Miami, Ohio, in the 1970-71 season.

No ranked teams were scheduled Tuesday night. Tonight, it will be No. 9 Kentucky at Vanderbilt, No. 10 Oklahoma vs. No. 12 Iowa State, No. 14 Florida vs. Louisiana State, No. 15 Georgetown vs. Boston College, No. 17 Syracuse vs. Seton Hall and No. 19 Villanova vs. St. John's.

Not all the fans in Dayton were disappointed. Those who made the trip from Kentucky to Ohio also made themselves heard, although in less demonstrative fashion.

"We had lots of fans tonight," Louisville Coach Denny Crum said. "It was nice to hear them. We haven't been in Dayton since the 1970s and it was nice to renew the series."

Herbert Crook scored 20 points and Pervis Ellison added 18 as the Cardinals raised their record to 10-6.

Dayton, which fell to 9-9, was paced by Nigele Knight with 18 points.

The Flyers took a 9-2 lead but scored only seven more points in the first half as Louisville forced 18 turnovers.

"They are one fine passing team," Donoher said of Louisville. "Ellison is just something. They're a fine team and a joy to watch. They just switched us to death. We were totally inept."

Kenny Payne had 14 points for Louisville and LaBradford Smith and Mike Abram added 10 each. Louisville dominated the backboards, outrebounding Dayton 47-34.

Louisville has now won 16 consecutive games against Dayton, although the two teams hadn't met since the 1970-71 season.

Duane Ferrell scored 26 points and Tom Hammonds added 19 as Georgia Tech controlled beat Clemson 85-76 in Atlantic Coast Conference game.

"We obviously had our backs against the wall," Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Cremins said, mindful of consecutive losses the Yellow Jackets had sustained in their last two ACC games, against North Carolina State and Virginia. "We needed something like this to boost us."

Clemson guard Grayson Marshall set a new ACC career assist mark during the game. His eight assists gave him 789, breaking the record of 781 set by Tyrone Bogues of Wake Forest.

Craig Neal added 16 points and 11 assists for the Yellow Jackets, who improved to 14-3 overall and 2-2 in the ACC.

Clemson, 11-6 overall and 1-4 in the league, was led by Eldon Campbell's 19 points and 13 rebounds.

Steve Haney scored a career-high 27 points and Ricky Berry added 26 to lead San Jose State to an 82-67 victory over Memphis State. San Jose State shot 61 percent from the floor, to just 36.5 for Memphis State, which got 20 points from Dewayne Bailey.

The margin of defeat was the worst at home for Memphis State since the 1979-80 season when it lost to Louisville 69-48.

Phil Stennie scored 23 points and grabbed 12 rebounds and Chris Cheeks added 19 points.

Negative Situations Prompted Heyward

PITTSBURGH (AP) — All-American running back Craig "Ironhead" Heyward says being cast as "the bad guy" too many times at the University of Pittsburgh helped him decide to skip his senior season this fall and attempt to turn pro.

Heyward, who would have been among the favorites for the 1988 Heisman Trophy, is not eligible for the regular National Football League draft in April. But he said Tuesday he will petition the NFL to include him in a supplemental draft.

He said his decision came shortly after he was arrested Jan. 10 on an assault charge, his third run-in with authorities since enrolling at Pitt in 1984.

During the incident, which occurred at a late-night campus party, Heyward said he was trying to find out what had prompted the dispute when a university policewoman shoved a nightstick in his back and face.

"I was just standing there, observing, like everybody else," Heyward said, adding that the situation "made me look like the bad guy again and that's unfair."

Heyward was charged with simple assault, resisting arrest and disorderly conduct as campus police investigated an on-campus shooting.

"After the incident, I was just thinking of ways to tell the coach (Mike Gottfried)," Heyward said. "It wasn't whether I was going to do it (turn pro) or not. I just came to the conclusion I was going to do it. I was thinking how I should approach him. This just forced the issue."

Heyward, however, was still critical of the way Pitt coaches handled the situation.

"I think the coaches should have let me go out and explain what really took place instead of sitting back and letting me be abused by the media," he said.

Heyward, 21, was suspended after his freshman year for striking another student with a crutch in a university dormitory and sat out the 1985 season. In 1986, he was fined $300 in municipal court for harassing a 12-year-old newspaper delivery boy.

Heyward said his latest arrest not only cost Pitt his services, but a potential running back recruit even bigger than he is.

Gottfried confirmed that Mario Johnson, a 285-pound Parade All-American fullback from St. Louis, changed his mind about coming to Pitt after visiting the campus the weekend Heyward was arrested.

But Gottfried said Pitt's program "is bigger than Craig Heyward" and will go on without the nation's second-leading rusher.

Meanwhile, the Pitt coach said he will continue to battle sports agents, such as Bruce Allen, who associate with underclass athletes and continue "to hope for regulations to curb their (agents') unethical dealings."

Gottfried also said he has called the FBI about the Heyward case because a Chicago-based federal grand jury is investigating sports agents and could return indictments.

Although Heyward has denied signing with Allen or taking money from any agent, two former Pitt players, Teryl Austin and Charles Gladman, were declared ineligible last year for having dealings with agents. Austin was later reinstated while Gladman turned pro.

Allen, the son of former NFL Coach George Allen, said Tuesday the entire Heyward case "is absurd. I can't believe it."

"We don't sign (underclassmen) players and we don't sign players early," Allen, who runs GBA Sportsworld in Phoenix, Ariz., said.

"We'll respond to Gottfried appropriately. I'll have the guts to do it face to face," Allen said.

Redskins, Broncos Offer Differing Styles Of Play

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Power vs. finesse. The down-the-throat approach of the Washington Redskins vs. the confound-and-confuse style of the Denver Broncos.

Simplistic, perhaps, but accurate, even if irritating to the participants in Sunday's Super Bowl.

"We're trying to get away from the stigma of just being a finesse team," Broncos defensive end Ron Jones said. "I don't believe we're one-dimensional."

But Jones, who at 6-foot-6 and 260 pounds is the biggest of Denver's linemen, knows the Broncos won't win with power.

"I'd rather play against a big guy," he said. "My abilities match up better. I think many of us are like that."

The Redskins have the edge in size virtually everywhere. Their defense relies on the brute strength of tackles Dave Butz and Darryl Grant, who make room for quicker — and nearly as big — ends Dexter Manley and Charles Mann, the sack artists.

Washington's blocking unit, the Hogs, is massive, led by 300-pound tackle Joe Jacoby and Mark May. Power fullback George Rogers and backup Timmy Smith are solid inside runners who advance behind the surging Hogs.

Even the Redskins' linebacking unit, despite being smaller than Denver's, is power-oriented, with little speed and even less deception.

The Broncos are undersized on both lines. They prefer to fool opponents with stunts and shifts on defense, traps and draw plays and reverses out of shotgun formation on offense.

"You could possibly say this is power against quickness," Grant said. "But they are also strong."

"Size is a funny thing. I remember watching teams on film with huge guys who didn't play that way, and other teams with small guys who played like 300- to 400-pounders."

"Another thing is the type of scheme you run. For what Denver does, they don't need 300-pound linemen. Their personnel is tailored to their scheme and they run all those trap plays and the shotgun. They need people who are quick and make that first hit and another hit and another."

While the Redskins like to pile one play on top of another, leaning on time-consuming scoring drives, Denver prefers a quick-strike attack. When you have a John Elway throwing to the Three Amigos and a bunch of quick running backs, it makes sense.

And when you don't have the bulk to push around opponents, you get tricky.

"It's real important to keep them guessing," Sammy Winder, Denver's top rusher, said. "The defense they play doesn't matter; whether they're strong or quick doesn't matter. We don't look at styles. It never works out if you look at styles."

"What we do is go with our strong points and let them adjust. When they start adjusting, then we hit them with something else."

The Redskins have several players who don't fit the muscleman mold — receivers Gary Clark and Ricky Sanders, running back Kelvin Bryant, Pro Bowl cornerback Darrell Green. And the Broncos have some outsize players, particularly linebackers Simon Fletcher and Karl Mecklenburg and tight ends Clarence Kay and Orson Mobley.

"You have to have elements of size, speed and smarts," Steve Sewell said. "Both teams do."

The quick running back could be a key Sunday because none of Washington's linebackers have enough speed to cover him.

"But Washington likes to line up and overpower you, use their strength to beat our finesse," Winder said. "We don't have the size to overpower anyone on the line or anywhere else."

"We're the type of team that has to mix it up really well. We have to run inside and out, use different formations, cause confusion. John's the best at that."

Elway is the best at a lot of things. What the Redskins fear most from Denver's quarterback is his creativity while scrambling.

What Elway worries about most is whether he'll be able to stay away from Washington's pass rush. Can his smallish line hold off the big bad Skins?

"We have to make Elway feel the heat," Manley said. "Get to him a few times, make him think about us."

He already is thinking about Manley and his buddies.

"We've got to stymie them on the line of scrimmage," the quarterback said.

What happens if the Broncos' style works, if finesse overcomes force?

"If we do," Sewell said, "we'll be in Hog Heaven."

Halas' Grandson Urges A Refusal

CHICAGO (AP) — The grandson of the Chicago Bears' founder says he's urging the National Football League to reject the sale of nearly a fifth of the team to two real estate developers.

The sale of $17.5 million in Bears stock owned by the grandchildren of George Halas Sr. was approved Tuesday by a Cook County probate judge. Judge Henry Budzinski said the sale to Chicago real estate developers Judd Malkin and Neil Bluhm was in the best interest of the estate of the late George "Mugs" Halas Jr., the founder's son.

"I feel raped, because my grandfather didn't want our entire lives to be sold at fire-sale prices," Stephen Halas, 20, said after the ruling.

Halas and his sister, Christine, 22, had opposed the sale, saying the offer was well below the actual value of the stock, which equals about 20 percent of the Bears.

But Budzinski said the developers' offer "is the only bona fide offer submitted" to the estate, which is faced "with a liquidity crisis."

"The offer submitted by Neil Bluhm and Judd Malkin is fair and reasonable and in the best interests of the estate," Budzinski ruled.

The sale is subject to approval by the National Football League, and Halas said he has urged them to reject it.

Halas and his sister, who represented themselves, had alleged that the executor of their father's estate entered into a secret deal to sell the stock at an unreasonably low price.

But Budzinski said the accusation "is rejected and not supported by any evidence."

Theresa Halas, Stephen and Christine's mother and the former wife of Mugs Halas, said the ruling was expected, but she did not like it.

"You take on the world, you better expect to get your head shot," she said.

If the sale approved Tuesday is completed, Stephen and Christine would retain about 8 percent of the Bears' stock.

A. Gerson Miller, executor of Halas Jr.'s estate, praised the developers' offer and said Tuesday's ruling "vindicated my judgment."

But he said he regretted that the sale of the stock is "the first time since the inception of the Bears that the name 'Halas' is not involved. This I feel sad about."

Mugs Halas died in 1979 of a massive heart attack. Halas Sr. was executor of his son's estate until his own death four years later.

Stephen and Christine Halas had said they believed that the real estate developers their bid with an eye on eventually taking over the team.

However, more than 60 percent of the team's stock remains in the hands of Virginia McCaskey, Halas Sr.'s daughter, and her family.

Ellis' Fours Key Sonics' Victory

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

Dale Ellis' pair of fours made him an ace for the Seattle SuperSonics. Ellis, left of the Western Conference All-Star team despite averaging nearly 26 points per game, became the first NBA player with two 4-point plays in one game as the Sonics defeated Sacramento 116-100 Tuesday night.

Ellis, who had 42 points, hit a 3-point basket followed by a foul shot twice in the first half. There has never been more than one 4-point play in a game since the NBA introduced the 3-point basket in 1979, and Mark Aguirre has the career mark of three.

"That's amazing," Seattle Coach Bernie Bickerstaff said of Ellis' performance. "I didn't realize it at the time. It's just great to be a part of history. Ellis had a great night." Ellis said he didn't give any thought to a possible record.

"When you're out there, you're more concerned about winning than anything else," he said. "Records are nice, but winning is the thing."

Elsewhere, it was New York 122, New Jersey 101; Boston 102, Atlanta 97; Indiana 97, Chicago 93; Dallas 128, San Antonio 111; Houston 124, Los Angeles Clippers 104; Los Angeles Lakers 111, Utah 100; and Portland 112, Milwaukee 106.

Ellis was 5-for-6 on 3-point shots to tie an Arco Arena record of five 3-point baskets set by Sacramento's Mike McGee last Dec. 22.

"The guy hits two four-pointers — that's eight points right there so he's relaxed," Kings guard Reggie Theus said. "Then he goes 5-for-6 on 3-point baskets. He had a great game, and so did McDaniel."

Xavier McDaniel, named as an All-Star forward, had 34 points and 10 rebounds for the Sonics.

Despite the heroics of Ellis and McDaniel, the game was tied 82-82 after three quarters. But an 18-6 run in the first seven minutes of the final period sealed the outcome.

"We played good basketball for the first three quarters, and then in the fourth everything fell apart," Theus said. "Seattle did everything they had to do to make the fourth-quarter run."

Otis Thorpe led Sacramento with 31 points, while Theus added 16 and LaSalle Thompson 15 points and 10 rebounds.

The win snapped a six-game losing streak for Seattle in Sacramento since the franchise moved there from Kansas City.

Celtics 102, Hawks 97
Boston snapped Atlanta's 16-game homecourt winning streak and grab bed the overall lead in the Eastern Conference by scoring the last 10 points of the game.

The Celtics, 29-11, trailed 97-92 before Robert Parish, who scored 10 of his 20 points in the fourth quarter, hit a free throw to start the decisive spurt.

The Hawks, 17-2 at home and 29-12 overall, took the lead at 93-92 on the last of Dominique Wilkins' 38 points with 3:11 left.

Kevin McHale led the Celtics with 21 points. Danny Ainge's streak of consecutive games with at least one 3-point goal stopped at 23.

Lakers 111, Jazz 100
Los Angeles won its 10th straight at home as Magic Johnson shook off a groin pull and scored five of his 22 points in the final 2:10, stifling a Utah rally.

Johnson made a critical three-point play, a pair of free throws and then set up a three-point play by Mychal Thompson after the Jazz rallied from an 89-70 third-quarter deficit to get within five points.

Byron Scott added 21 points for Los Angeles, and John Stockton and Karl Malone led Utah with 18 points.

Trail Blazers 112, Bucks 106
Clyde Drexler and Jerome Kersey scored 25 points apiece and Portland handed Milwaukee a defeat that assured the Bucks of their first losing month since 1980.

Reserve Richard Anderson scored nine points in the final quarter for the Blazers, who built a nine-point lead with 2:24 to play, then held on for the victory. The loss assured the Bucks their first losing month since Sidney Moncrief was a rookie, a span of 52 months.

Moncrief scored 28, his season high by 10 points, to pace the Bucks, who were playing their second game in as many nights and fifth of seven in a row on the road.

Mavericks 128, Spurs 111
Dallas won its fifth straight as Mark Aguirre scored 24 points, including the 12,000th of his career, and Detlef Schrempf added a season-high 22 against San Antonio.

The Mavericks took a 10-point lead into the fourth quarter and used three three-point plays — two by Schrempf and one by center James Donaldson — to push their advantage to 19.

The Spurs were led by Alvin Robertson with 21 points, and Roy Tarpley had 20 for Dallas.

Pacers 97, Bulls 93
Indiana handed Chicago its ninth consecutive road defeat as Chuck Person scored six of his 19 points down the stretch.

Michael Jordan, who scored 34 points, had nine during a 13-3 run that gave the Bulls, who trailed 59-45 at halftime, an 87-85 lead with 4:50 remaining.

Person tied it with a 20-footer and the Pacers took the lead for good on Steve Stipanovich's 18-foot jumper. The teams traded points before Person and Vern Fleming gave Indiana a 95-90 lead with consecutive baskets.

A 3-pointer by Jordan, who scored 24 points in the second half, made it 95-93 before Person sank two free throws with seven seconds left.

Schiller Named As USOC Head

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — A veteran administrator of the U.S. Olympic Committee is its new executive director following the resignation of Harvey Schiller, USOC officials say.

USOC President Robert Helmick said on Tuesday the USOC accepted the resignation of Schiller, executive director for less than three weeks, in a telephone conference call.

Named to replace him was Baron Pittenger, 62, who had previously served as executive director before Schiller arrived in January. He succeeded George Miller.

Schiller quit to return to the Southeastern Conference as its commissioner, the post he left in October to accept the USOC job.

"The United States Olympic Committee is confident that Baron Pittenger will provide this organization with the sound leadership we need. He has our full confidence," Helmick said in a prepared statement.

"The most important thing we have to do right now is to make sure that our programs for our athletes remain solid and uninterrupted, and that they have the opportunities they need to achieve their goals, and with Baron's experience and leadership with the staff at Olympic House, that will be accomplished," Helmick said.

From Southeastern Conference of ices in Birmingham, Ala., Schiller said the timing of the decision was critical "because I felt that the USOC staff needed to continue with the important preparations for the Games in Calgary and Seoul without any interference by whatever organizational changes I felt had to be made."

"This is a time to move forward in a most important effort," he said. "I will continue to make significant contributions and fully support President Robert Helmick as a citizen advocate of the USOC."

"Dr. Schiller is thoroughly committed to the United States Olympic Committee and has made significant contributions to our successes," Helmick said. "He will continue to serve the USOC in significant capacities as we go into the future."

Pittenger joined the USOC as director of public relations in 1977 and later served as director of special projects and assistant executive director. He was in charge of the USOC's National Sports Festival, now known as the U.S. Olympic Festival, in its inaugural year 1978, and in 1979 and 1981.

He is a 1947 Penn State graduate. Pittenger left a post as associate director of athletics at Harvard in 1977 to join the USOC and help with its move from New York to Colorado Springs.

Critics Say Reagan Plan 'Slapping Peace in Face'

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's proposal for $36.2 million in new aid to rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist government is "slapping peace in the face," a congressional critic said today as Democrats took aim at the plan.

House Majority Whip Tony Coelho, D-Calif., predicted that the vote will be close when Congress passes judgment on the aid proposal but that the House won't accept the package because it includes military aid for the Contras in addition to humanitarian assistance.

The Reagan administration is "really just slapping peace in the face and telling the five Central American presidents that they don't trust them," Coelho said on NBC-TV's

"Today" show. "They're treating them like banana republics."

"This is a cynical package, constructed to win votes, not to make policy," said Rep. David Bonior, D-Mich., a member of the House leadership and head of an informal group of anti-Contra lawmakers. "It is not going to sell in this Congress."

But Sen. Richard Lugar, ranking minority member on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, expressed hope there would be bipartisan support for Reagan's proposal.

"If peace is to have a chance, there will have to be pressure upon the Sandinistas," the Indiana Republican said on the NBC program.

The president was making a formal announcement later in the day of the four-month package, consisting of $32.6 million in non-lethal supplies such as clothing, food, communications gear and transportation, and $3.6 million in ammunition and anti-aircraft missiles.

As described by lawmakers briefed Tuesday by Reagan at the White House, the proposal would hold the lethal portion of the aid in escrow until March 31. The president could then decide to release the money if he determines no cease-fire is in place.

Vernon Walters, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, said today that continued U.S. aid to the rebels is necessary to demonstrate that America is a reliable ally.

"I think the most important thing of all is the credibility of the United States and the reassurance to our allies that we will stand by those who we promised to help," Walters said on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America."

While the decision to release the lethal aid beginning in April would be the president's alone, he also would meet with and consider the opinions of the presidents of the democratic governments of Nicaragua's four neighbors: Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras, said House Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-Ill.

Some lawmakers said the proposal might be changed slightly to give Congress responsibility in a subsequent vote for releasing the money.

Michel said he believed that the package could be pushed through the House, partly because of the reduced amount and partly because of fears among Democrats that they would offer political blame if the Contras go out of existence and Managua reneges on recent concessions to civil liberties. The administration earlier had contemplated asking as much as $270 million.

Another carrot for lawmakers was the promise that Secretary of State George P. Shultz would travel to Central America for the first U.S.-Nicaraguan talks in more than three years if Congress approves the aid request. The talks would be part of a regional forum including all five countries that signed a peace accord last August.

With formal announcement of the request, the focus will shift to Capitol Hill, where the House is to vote on the package Feb. 3. If the House approves the package, the matter would go to the Senate the next day.

The matter of U.S. policy in Central America has been one of the most closely fought issues in Congress since the Contra war began early in the Reagan administration. About 200 members of the House consistently take the pro-Contra side, and a like number the other side, leaving the decision up to about three dozen "swing" members.

One of those lawmakers, Rep. Jim Slattery, D-Kan., said Tuesday he could not support the president's proposal without giving Congress the decision on whether to release the lethal aid held in escrow.

"If the president's finger is on the trigger, that is tantamount to approving the aid," Slattery said. "He is not very objective on this issue."

China On U.S. Hostile List

WASHINGTON (AP) — A concern with diplomacy led the Defense Department to conceal that it had listed China as a nation hostile to the United States, officials say.

According to Pentagon sources, China has been carried on the list of hostile nations for many years.

In 1986, however, Pentagon executives decided to delete China from the public list "because of certain sensitive initiatives," said one official, who insisted on anonymity.

"We just didn't want their name showing up publicly when we were trying to see if the Chinese were serious about better ties," the source said Tuesday.

At the time, the administration was deciding to approve certain arms sales to China and the Chinese authorized the first port visit by U.S. warships in 37 years.

Defense moves on China's designation were disclosed as a result of a lawsuit brought by two civilian Navy employees. They are challenging a regulation governing when naturalized citizens from certain countries are eligible for a military security clearance.

Under the regulation, a person born in a country deemed hostile to the United States must have lived in the United States at least 10 years or have been a U.S. citizen at least five years to apply for a security clearance.

Phong T. Huynh and Vien U. Huynh, born in Vietnam, brought the suit in U.S. District Court here. They asserted the regulation was unfair because China — a communist nation like Vietnam — was not on the list of hostile nations.

To counter that argument, the Pentagon had to disclose to the court recently that China had been dropped from the public list of hostile nations, but in reality had never been dropped at all.

"A country goes on the list if we believe that country has used emigres as spies," said one official. "China meets that criteria."

The next public version of the hostile-nation list will again include China, the Pentagon told the court. The sources said the list would be published in the next few months.

Rescuers Search Mexican Mine Shaft For Bodies

LAS ESPERANZAS, Mexico (AP) — Gas fumes and rising waters hindered the search for seven people missing and presumed dead in a mine shaft where an explosion and fire killed at least 30 miners.

Seventeen other workers were recovering from injuries sustained in the fiery explosion Monday. Some of the bodies were charred beyond recognition.

Survivors on Tuesday said the explosion was so strong a blast of searing air knocked them flat and sent them scrambling for their lives in the underground inferno. Most of the survivors fled the mine under their own power.

Felipe Perez Ortiz, a miner heading the rescue team, said there was little chance any more survivors could be found. He said the seven missing miners were presumed dead and that their bodies probably would be recovered today.

"It will take a while because of the difficulty of working there. There's a lot of debris. ... These places don't have any air and there's a lot of gas," he told reporters.

Hugo Garcia de Anda, a spokesman for the government's Sidermex Co., which owns the mine, said the seven missing miners are in another, deeper part of the mine from where the 30 bodies were found.

Garcia de Anda said that seeping water, accumulated from the firefighters' efforts, and lack of air were making the recovery effort difficult.

About 200 family members, reporters and officials watched from a distance as the last two bodies, in plastic bags, were hoisted through the shaft to the surface Tuesday night, bringing the confirmed death toll to 30.

The 17 injured miners remained hospitalized in the nearby towns of Palau and Nueva Rosita, seven of them with severe burns.

"Mine 4 1/2," six miles northwest of Las Esperanzas in northern Coahuila state, is operated by Compania Hullera Mexicana, a subsidiary of Sidermex, the giant steel-making complex. Las Esperanzas is 130 miles west of Laredo, Texas.

The mine remained will not be reopened until authorities determine what caused an electric transformer to explode inside one shaft, Garcia de Anda said. He said the blast sparked accumulated coal dust and gas into a fireball.

"This really was an accident. It didn't have anything to do with neglect or lack of prudence," he said.

However, he added that mine officials would set up an independent panel to "investigate the explosion so this doesn't happen again."

De Anda said the mine employs 450 workers, with those underground working in three eight-hour daily shifts starting at 7 a.m.

Gerardo Acosta Garcia, an investigator with the federal district attorney's office, said 138 men had gone in for the morning shift when the disaster struck 90 minutes later.

While the red-and-black flag of the miners' union flew at half-staff in front of union headquarters, the first of the victims, a 17-year-old boy, was buried Tuesday afternoon. Several more bodies were taken home to nearby towns and quietly buried. Most of the funerals were to be held today.

U.S. Condemns Order Freeing Massacre Suspects

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Three men suspected in the 1985 massacre of 13 people, including six Americans, must be freed under a general amnesty, a military court said in a ruling condemned by the United States.

Rene Edmundo Valdivieso, secretary of the Martial Court, released the ruling Tuesday from the three-member appellate tribunal.

The ruling said the massacre was a political act and was therefore covered by an amnesty program called for under the Central American peace plan.

Under Salvadoran law, the ruling can be appealed to Superior Court or the Supreme Court. Government attorneys did not say whether they would appeal.

The 13 people killed in the guerrilla attack on two outdoor cafes in San Salvador included four Marine guards from the U.S. Embassy, who were dressed in civilian clothes, and two American businessmen.

"We do not believe that persons who have committed crimes of terrorism, in this instance the massacre of innocent, unarmed persons eating in a restaurant, should go unpunished," the U.S. Embassy said in a statement on the ruling.

State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman in Washington called the decision "surprising and extremely disappointing."

Redman said the United States had consulted with the Salvadoran government "and had strong reason to believe these suspects would not be released."

The massacre occurred on June 19, 1985, when men wearing Salvadoran army uniforms arrived in a pickup truck at the two outdoor cafes in San Salvador's "Pink Zone," a strip of trendy restaurants and clubs.

They aimed automatic weapons at the crowd and began firing.

The attack was claimed by a little-known leftist group called the Mardoqueo Cruz Urban Guerrilla Commandos. It is an offshoot of one of five guerrilla armies in the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, which has been fighting the U.S.-supplied Salvadoran government for eight years.

The three suspects in the shooting were identified as Juan Miguel Garcia Melendez, Jose Abraham Dimas Aguilar and William Celio Rivas Bolanos.

Their case went to the Martial Court after the federal attorney general's office appealed a decision by a military judge who ordered them released.

Valdivieso said the three suspects could be released Friday.

It was the second legal order under the amnesty freeing suspects or people convicted in the killings of Americans. Two former soldiers were released last month. They had been sentenced to 30 years in prison for the murders of two U.S. land reform advisers and the head of the Salvadoran land reform agency.

The Central American peace plan was signed last August by the presidents of El Salvador, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Guatemala and Honduras.

The plan's aim was to end insurgencies that have wrecked the economies of the region and killed more than 100,000 people over the last three decades. Besides amnesties for political prisoners, the plan calls for cease-fires, greater democracy and a halt to outside aid to guerrillas.

During court hearings on the suspects in the 1985 massacre, government lawyers argued that the killings were not political but rather civil crimes, making the detainees ineligible for amnesty, Valdivieso said. In its decision, the Martial Court said the shootings were "an essentially political crime."

Famed CEOs Rush Their Lifestyles To Print

By DON OLDENBURG
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Apologies to Robin Leach's "Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous," but Americans in the 1980s yearn to know how to get rich and fame rather than glimpse them.

Perhaps that explains a rash of books and magazine articles tapping the upwardly mobile market by providing swatches of style from the work life of many of today's most successful and moneyed minds. Inc. magazine, considered by some to be the harbinger of corporate craze, recently blamed it all on Lee Iacocca's 1984 autobiography "Iacocca," which demonstrated unprecedented appeal to the purse-string Walter Mittys of the world.

Iacocca's is the now-familiar tale of a poor Pennsylvania lad who lifted himself out of dollar doldrums to make it big at Ford Motor Co., only to be canned by Henry Ford II himself. No quitter, Iacocca eventually ascended to become savior of Ford's competitor, Chrysler.

Yet it wasn't the plot of the book but rather the ending that may have triggered the subsequent I-Did-It-My-Way trend among sundry chairmen of the board. The last 50 pages or so are an unabashed departure from autobiography to rapt lecturing. Labeled "Straight Talk," it is Iacocca soap-boxing so heartily on subjects from the high cost of labor to making America great again that rumors had the Chrysler chairman steering straight down the fast track to the White House.

Soon to follow Iacocca to bestsellerdom, if not the presidency, were other CEOs scribbling their How-Done-Its. Victor Kiam, the big shaver at Remington Products Inc., penned his opus "Going for It!" to much fanfare in 1986. Corporate raider T. Boone Pickens' effort was titled, austere, "Boone." Apple Computer Inc.'s John Sculley wrote one of the better of the batch maintaining, as he does in this month's Computer Currents magazine, that his motivation wasn't "to write some monument to my accomplishments as other CEOs had done." And even Rocky Aoki, whose claim to celebrity is his Benihana of Tokyo restaurants, attempted to prove — like the others — that success breeds know-it-alls.

Collectively, the genre might be called "Work Styles of the Rich and Famous." In fact, it didn't take savvy publishers long to figure out that if it's clues to success that readers were highlighting in these books, future releases could skip the autobiographical melodramatics and get right to the good parts.

Enter the Chairman-per-Chapter tomes, those such as Thomas Horton's "What Works For Me" (Random House, $19.95), that provide chitchat on achievement from a handful of corporate top noggins. As the cover endorsement for Horton's book states: "Reading this book is like getting a private coaching session from the world's best CEOs."

But if some of these publications seem short on life and long on life's lessons, several recent releases have taken the concept even farther. For more than a decade, B. Eugene Griessman had interviewed famous people about what it is that makes people famous. By analyzing responses from celebrities such as David Rockefeller, Tennessee Williams and Ronald Reagan, the one-time Atlanta talk-show host and now sociology professor at Georgia Institute of Technology recognized certain patterns that emerged in the assent to public visibility.

"Virtually everybody would like to get ahead, but many people simply don't know how..." writes Griessman, who examines nine traits of the renowned in "The Achievement Factors" (Dodd, Mead & Co., $18.95).

"For the individual who is willing to pay the price to be a high achiever... the achievement factors can be studied as a program of action."

Two Los Angeles authors narrowed that focus even more. Lee Gardenswartz and Anita Rowe "conducted 100 face-to-face interviews with America's top female achievers." According to a promo for their book, "What It Takes: Good News from 100 of America's Top Professional and Business Women" (Dolphin-Doubleday, $16.95), they "then created a unique and accessible five-point program to help all women hone such success-oriented characteristics in themselves." In chapters with titles such as "Four-Wheel Driven" and "No Excuses, Just Results," the authors sprinkle their blue-chip blueprint with brief quotes from those they interviewed.

For instance, on working long hours modeling agency magnate Eileen Ford said: "I'm not God. He got the seventh day." On broadening one's vision of opportunities, Irene Cohen, president of Irene Cohen Personnel Services, said: "Life is a room with an open door." From

Judge Trades In His Robes For Trombone In The Band

The Springfield
State Journal-Register

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — The young-at-heart horn player sitting in with various Springfield-area bands once took a break from his musical career by trading his tuxedo for a judge's robes.

When he retired last year after eight years as an associate circuit judge in Sangamon County, John Crain simply picked up his trombone again and looked for an opening in the brass section.

When he's not filling in with dance or concert bands, Crain, 60, practices with college ensembles.

"I've played the horn all my life," Crain says. "And always will — as long as I have my health."

Crain's father owned a trombone, and the future judge began playing it seriously when he was about 9 years old.

In 1943, when Crain was a teenager, he played swing music with the Charles Rogers Orchestra every Saturday night at Springfield's old Knights of Columbus ballroom.

His big solo was often a Tommy Dorsey-style rendition of "I'm Getting Sentimental Over You."

"You would think it was Tommy Dorsey himself," said Springfield resident Ruth Kauffman, who attended the dance every weekend.

The orchestra is still around, and its current leader, Bill Wight, is glad to have his former musical colleague back on the bandstand.

"He is one of the finest musicians we've ever had around here," says

Wight, who played with Crain in the 1940s.

In 1944, Crain entered Springfield College, majoring in music.

"It was my ambition to be a musician," he says.

A year later, though, he joined the Navy. He was attending the Navy School of Music near Washington, D.C., when World War II ended.

"It would make a better story if I was on an aircraft carrier," Crain says. "But in point of fact, I spent the rest of the time in Waikiki."

"I had a tough war," he says.

Crain returned home in 1946, completed his college work, and decided against music as a career. He attributes the switch to several factors, including "desire for a home life" and "lack of confidence in my ability to play well enough."

"I could have played well enough, but I didn't know it until later," he adds.

The trombone was still a help, though. Crain worked his way through the University of Illinois College of Law by playing it, although he admits it wasn't much of a living.

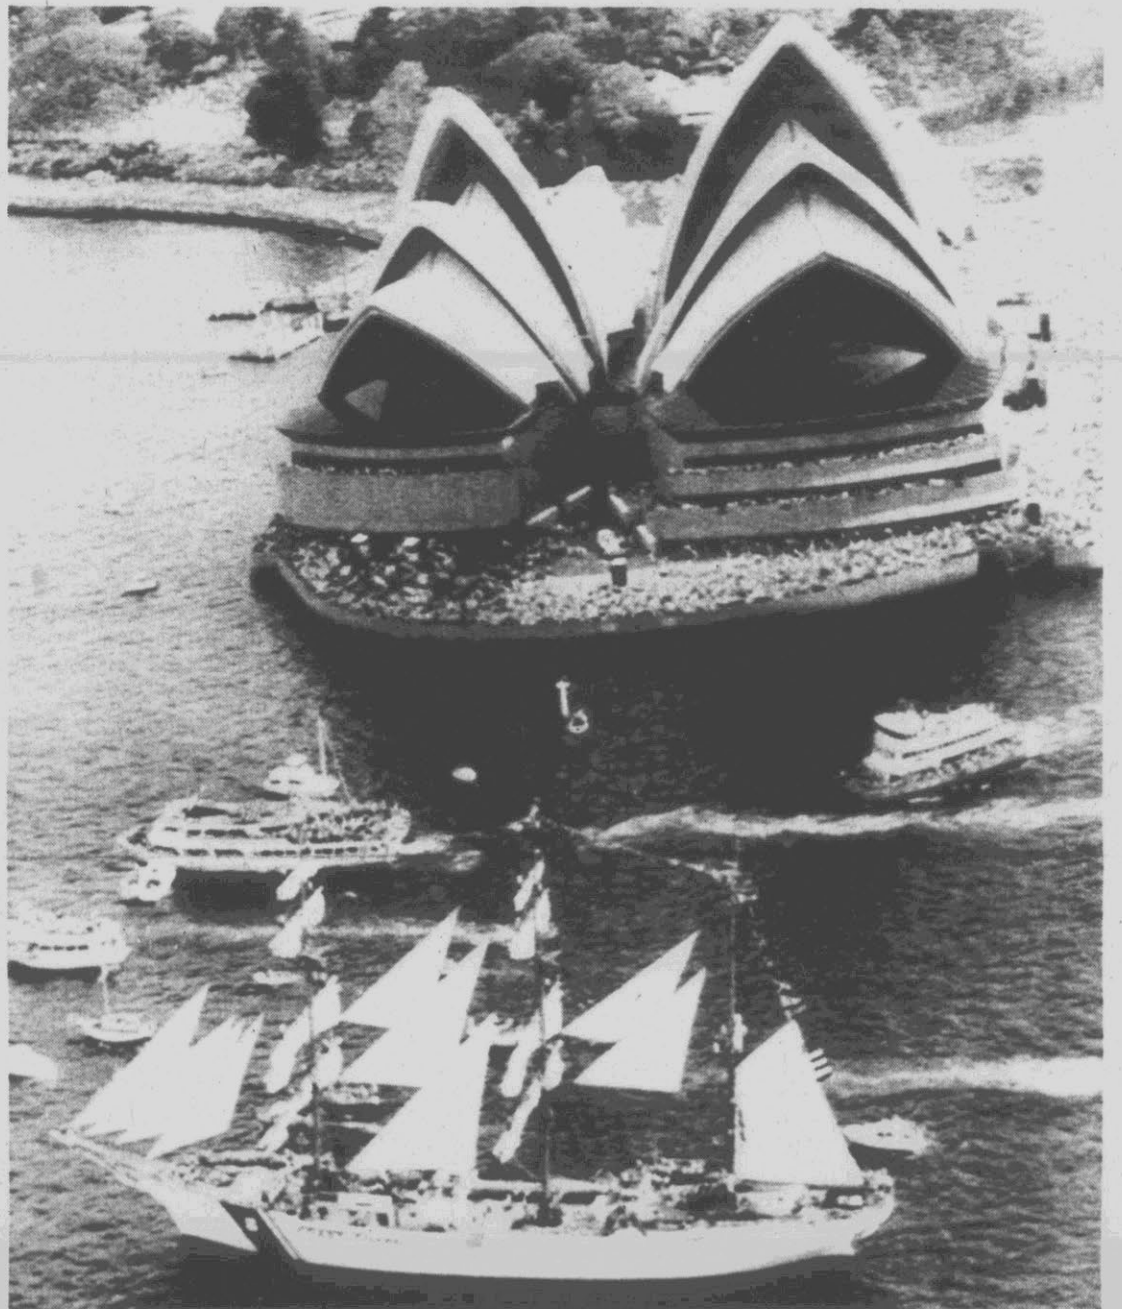

"I had to call my father to come get me when I finished," he recalls. "I didn't have train fare."

Crain entered private law practice in Springfield and later served for a time as an assistant city attorney. In 1979, he was appointed an associate judge.

Crain had never completely abandoned the trombone, but he says he was so busy in his last year or two on the bench that he had to stop performing.

Nonetheless, he says he has no regrets about going into law or becoming a judge.

"It was an honor and a privilege," he says. "I wouldn't have missed that either."

Rural Elderly Find A Champion In National Gerontology Center

By DONNA BRYSON
Associated Press Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Polk County Commissioner Howard Hayter says his 74 years have taken their toll, but that can't keep him from doing his part in his rural southern Missouri community.

"If my health holds up and I feel like I'm of service to the people, I'll stay," said Hayter, who made politics a second career after retiring from more than 50 years of managing farmers' cooperatives. He recently began his second four-year term of tinkering with budgets and overseeing road repair from the stone courthouse in Bolivar.

Philip Olson, director of the newly established National Center of Extension Gerontology at the University of Missouri-Kansas City, would find Hayter's example encouraging.

Olson refers to a movement in China aimed at "using the leftover energy of the old people... for the good of the society" when he explains that he is especially interested in finding ways to steer retired people into public office.

The gerontology center was organized this year with the understanding that elderly people in rural areas face unique problems.

The center's four main interests are: preventive health for the elderly and support for those who care for them; bringing together older and younger generations; support for public and private community groups working to respond to the needs of elderly people; and projects that bring the elderly into the public sector.

The center's staff has collected information on tutoring programs that link elderly people with special expertise to young people. In the health area, they have looked at elderly day care programs and others that take some of the pressure off those who care for older people.

After three years of gathering and evaluating information, Olson's center will be a computerized clearinghouse for programs directed at the growing number of elderly people in the rural United States.

Officials of a small town in Iowa interested in, for example, establishing a nutrition program for homebound elderly people would be able to access computers in Kansas City. Information comparing a variety of programs, including their costs and effectiveness, would be available at the touch of a keyboard.

"The idea is to give the person out in the field the choice of several programs... so that they can choose one that best fits their local needs," said Neil Bull, co-director of the center.

The graying of America, thanks in large part to increased life spans, has been well documented. This decade saw the number of people over 65 match the number of teens for the first time ever.

According to the U.S. Census Bureau, 12 percent of the population is at least 65. Rural areas, which have seen many of their young residents leave in search of economic opportunity in the cities, often have an even higher proportion of elderly people.

Brian Forbis, of the Missouri Department of Aging, says six Midwestern states are among the 10 with the highest percentage of elderly residents.

Super Bowl May Give Series Boost

AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC's new comedy series "The Wonder Years" is a warm, funny, evocative homage to that hazy, long-lost world that was suburban America in the late 1960s.

And ABC is giving the half-hour premiere a well-deserved boost by scheduling it after Super Bowl XXII on Sunday. It will join the schedule in an as-yet undetermined time period in March.

"The Wonder Years" is from the husband-and-wife creators and producers of ABC's hit "Growing Pains," Neal Marlens, 31, and Carol Black, 30. Both grew up in the suburbs, he in Huntington, N.Y., she in Silver Spring, Md.

"The late '60s in the suburbs for a 12- or 13-year-old kid was just sort of an interesting setting," said Marlens. "You weren't quite old enough to be involved in the counter-culture per se, and yet it touched you in certain ways."

"We just feel there's been a lot of attention dedicated to the effect that the '60s had on the generation that was really riding that wave, people in college and in their 20s at that time," said Black. "But ... we began to realize what a strange time it was to be a kid."

They also wanted to make a point that there were real people in those, as Pete Seeger sang, "little houses made of ticky-tacky and they all look just the same."

"There are worse things in life than being lumped into the category of middle-class suburban, but we figure it's our one small gripe, so why not?" said Marlens.

The main character in "The Wonder Years" is 12-year-old Kevin Arnold, played by a fine young actor, Fred Savage. Kevin is an all-American kid embarking on the adventure of junior high school in 1968. Much of the story is narrated by grown-up Kevin, lending a sense of reminiscence and reflection.

Kevin has a tormenting older brother, Wayne (Jason Hervey): "Apparently he just deeply regretted the fact that I had been born, and he wanted me to feel the same way"; a sister with a raised consciousness, Norma (Olivia Dabo); a typical mom (Alley Mills), and a taciturn dad (Dan Luria): "It was like he had this understanding with the family — he worked hard for us, he provided for us and he certainly didn't want to have to talk to us."

The neighborhood includes Kevin's nerdy best friend, Paul (Josh Saviano); a 12-year-old budding beauty, Winnie (Danica McKellar), and her older brother, Brian, who "defined cool."

Brian had a 1959 El Camino that was very cool, even though it never actually ran. "Brian got drafted and packed off to Vietnam, but his car stayed there up on blocks. Kind of a reminder of who really ran our street."

In the premiere episode, Kevin goes off nervously to his first day with the big kids. When his brother humiliates him in the cafeteria in front of everybody, Kevin has to defend his shaky image as a cool kid. Cut to principal's office.

His parents come to take him home, but before Kevin can get the licking he's sure he has coming, the family is confronted by tragedy: Brian has been killed in Vietnam.

Kevin goes for a walk: "The days were still long, and back then kids could go for walks at dusk without fear of ending up on milk cartons."

PBS Documentary Series Takes Look At Television

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michael Winship grew up as a first-generation child of television and has never gotten over his fascination with the tube.

"We lived over my father's drug store in Canandaigua, N.Y., and I was one of the first kids with the electronic baby sitter," he said. "I was into show business in a town that was far removed from it. I was the only person in town who got a copy of Variety."

Winship has now turned that fascination into an eight-part documentary series called "Television," which began Monday on PBS. He wrote and co-produced the series.

"Television" looks at 60 years, from the first fuzzy images to comedian Milton Berle to Neil Armstrong walking on the moon to Garry Shandling coping at his sitcom home on cable. It examines the comedies and dramas, the game shows and TV's impact on the political process. Edwin Newman is the host and narrator.

The series, which will conclude March 14, is a joint production of WNET in New York and KCET in Los Angeles in association with Granada Television of England. Granada earlier had produced a series also called "Television."

In college, Winship studied political science. "Then I worked on the McGovern (presidential) campaign in 1972," he said. "That cured me of politics."

He turned to writing as a freelancer for the Washington Star and eventually joined WNET as a publicist. He soon moved into production and in 1983 became head writer for "Smithsonian World."

His wife, Kathleen Campion, is anchor for "The Wall Street Report" on public television.

Winship was working as a freelance writer and producer when he was asked to join the "Television" project by executive producer Jack Sameth.

"I came in in 1985 because Jack knew I had an abiding interest in television," said Winship. "We'd worked on several shows together in the past. We immediately went to work on two fronts — deciding what we wanted to do with the series and raising money. And in classic public television fashion it took more time to raise the money."

During this time both Winship and Sameth worked on other projects. Winship did more work for "Smithsonian World" and "Square One TV," a parody of television used by the Children's Television Workshop to teach math.

"I did a thing called 'Star Trek Bland Stand,'" he said, "in which Spock and Kirk accidentally come to 'American Bandstand' and do 'Rate the Records.'"

A year ago, they set to work on the series. Winship also began writing the companion book published by Random House.

"It was an enormous task condensing 60 years of television into eight hours," he said. "The spine of the series is looking at television through different program forms. It's not so much behind the scenes as what we saw on the screen."

"It's really a retrospective. We show comedy, drama, game shows, the news, live events and sports, plus the race to invent television. I think we all have the notion that TV was invented in the United States and Great Britain. But parallel developments were going on in the Soviet Union, Japan and Germany. Germany had an operating system in the 1930s. Amazingly, Hitler never understood its power."

Winship, who has returned to freelancing, said there is a possibility of a sequel to "Television." The second series would get into commercials, daytime drama and explore TV news more thoroughly.

"I'd like to do something about how television news is really made," he said. "Show how television itself affects the news and how politicians use television."

Joan Collins, Holm Are $100,000 Apart

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Dynasty" star Joan Collins and her ex-husband, Peter Holm, are probably $100,000 apart in reaching an out-of-court settlement in their divorce case, says Miss Collins' attorney, Marvin Mitchelson.

The case is scheduled to go to trial Feb. 10 if a settlement isn't reached.

"I think we can work something out. I'm hopeful of it. We're probably about $100,000 apart," Mitchelson said Monday.

Holm's attorney, Frank Steinschreiber, also said Ms. Collins and Holm were close to reaching a settlement.

The major issues still unresolved, Mitchelson said, involve money and artwork.

Holm said before the negotiations that he is entitled to $200,000 under a pre-nuptial agreement that gave him 20 percent of Miss Collins' earnings and $80,000 in monthly support.

But Mitchelson said Holm was overpaid $400,000 under the pre-nuptial agreement and Miss Collins refuses to make any support payments to him. He said Miss Collins also claims her ex-husband took $100,000 worth of paintings and other artwork that he refuses to return to her.

Talk Show Host Makes Donation

MUNCIE, Ind. (AP) — Television talk show host David Letterman has donated $132,000 to Ball State University, his alma mater, to buy communication equipment and to establish a scholarship program, school officials said Tuesday.

About $60,000 will be used to establish a student-operated radio station whose signal will be piped into campus buildings, said Ball State spokeswoman Rae Goldsmith.

The remaining $72,000 will be used to fund a three-year internship program for six telecommunications students, said Ms. Goldsmith. Students will receive financial support and credit while working with the faculty to prepare instructional videos.

Letterman previously has provided money to Ball State for scholarships and equipment. A plaque placed at Ball State by the host of "Late Night with David Letterman" says the donations are "Dedicated to all C students before and after me."

Concert Canceled

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The rock group Def Leppard canceled its Feb. 15 concert here after receiving death threats stemming from an ethnic slur made by the band's lead singer five years ago, a publicist says.

Despite a good advance showing, the group suspended ticket sales for the show at the University of Texas-El Paso. About 4,000 of 8,500 tickets, each costing $15.50, had been sold before Friday's cancellation, said promoter Barbara Welch.

The anger stems from a comment lead singer Joe Elliott made at a Tucson, Ariz., concert on Sept. 7, 1983. Elliott told the crowd that the band had played the day before in El Paso, "that place with all the greasy Mexicans."

Directors

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For February's important ratings sweeps, "Dallas" will have stars in front of the camera and behind it. Every episode will be directed by one of the prime-time CBS soap's stars.

Here is the lineup: Linda Gray, who is Sue Ellen, directs on Feb. 5; Patrick Duffy, who is Bobby Ewing, directs on Feb. 12; Steve Kanaly, who is Ray Krebbs, directs Feb. 19, and Larry Hagman, who is J.R. Ewing, directs Feb. 26.

Emmy Awards

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The 40th annual Emmy Awards will be held early this year to avoid a conflict with the September telecast of the Olympic games from Seoul, Korea. Fox Broadcasting Co., which carries the Emmys, has set the date for Aug. 28.

The Great Fire of London started Sept. 2, 1666, and virtually destroyed the city in five days.

CEOs Rush To Print Their Stories

Ferris and Co., investor Sally Behn: "Successful people are willing to do things other people won't."

Which brings us to the downside of many of these gospels of Making-It-Big: Beyond the unavoidable ego-centrism, they too often tend toward trying but probably true platitudes — those bumper stickers of business that when articulated by a David Rockefeller or an Armand Hammer may appear to be carved in stone.

Still, occasionally, these books do provide useful lessons from the top guns of the American Dream. Among them:

Lesson No. 1: No Guts, No Glory

The Rich and Famous like to boast about relying on "gut reactions" to make crucial decisions. Because you can't learn guts in business school, this lends an element of mystique to their success. But few of them tell as good a story as John Sculley about what happens when the intestinal oracle is mistaken for ordinary indigestion.

In his 1987 autobiography titled "Odyssey" (Harper & Row, $21.95), the one-time president of PepsiCo, who masterminded the "Pepsi Generation" ad campaign before being lured to the upstart Apple Computer, recalls the time he delegated the final decision on airing a national ad that felt wrong to him.

Following the colossal success of Apple's blockbuster "1984" TV commercial that introduced the Macintosh computer as saving the world from Orwellian drones and Big Brother, Sculley was looking for his next major media event. The company's advertising agency designed what became known as the "Lemmings" ad. It portrayed blue-suited, white-shirted and blindfolded male executives marching monotonously in single file over a cliff. Its point was that most executives do what all the others do. Namely, they buy Apple's nemesis IBM.

Sculley thought it lacked the optimism and playfulness of the "1984" ad. He worried that viewers would find it offensive, that potential customers would feel ridiculed. "It didn't register as well in our gut..." he writes. Apple went with it anyway, scheduling its first appearance during the 1985 Super Bowl. Sculley and partner Steve Jobs sat in the Super Bowl crowd waiting nervously for an immediate reaction to the Lemmings spot about to be piped into the stadium's huge instant-replay screen as it aired nationwide.

"Everyone in the place stopped what they were doing," writes Sculley, "their eyes turning toward the screen. Some 90,000 people were dead silent... When it ended there were no cheers, only an instant of dreadful silence before attention returned to the field and the game... The commercial was a flop."

Lesson No. 2: Think Big

Authors Gardenswartz and Rowe call it "Megavision." Others tag it "Grand-scale planning." True to his style, Donald Trump gets right to the point: He calls it thinking big. And no matter what else is said of the brash Mr. Trump, he undeniably does that. His name hovers over Manhattan on the Tower he built. Figuring the "house" was the best gamble in Atlantic City, he bought a huge casino and hotel. With millions of dollars burning a hole in his bank account, he even spent $6 million of them on a team in the then-failing and now-defunct United States Football League — "as a long shot," he says.

"My style of deal-making is quite simple and straightforward," writes Trump in "Trump: The Art of the Deal" (Random House, $19.95). "I aim very high, and then I just keep pushing and pushing to get what I'm after... I like thinking big. I always have. To me, it's very simple: If you're going to be thinking anyway, you might as well think big. Most people think small, because most people are afraid of success, afraid of making decisions, afraid of winning. And that gives people like me a great advantage."

Lesson No. 3: Street Smarts

"Some people have street smarts and others don't," writes David Mahoney in "Confessions of a Street-Smart Manager" (Simon and Schuster, $17.95). The son of Irish immigrants, who climbed from penniless obscurity in the Depression-era Bronx to become the chairman of the board of Norton Simon Inc. (NSI) in 1970, knows of what he writes. Among the companies whose buy-out Mahoney engineered are Halston Enterprises, Max Factor, Avis and United Can. He reportedly walked away from a 1983 attempt to take NSI private with more than $35 million.

"A person with street smarts is someone able to take strong action based on good judgment drawn from hard experience," he writes. "In the old 'Amos 'n' Andy Show' on radio, Amos once asked the Kingfish why he had such good judgment.

"Well," said the Kingfish, 'good judgment comes from experience.'

"Then where does experience come from?" asked Amos.

"Experience comes from bad judgment," was the Kingfish's answer.

"Which gets us to the point that it is OK to make honest mistakes as long as you learn something from them," Mahoney concludes. "Sometimes with a little good judgment, you can turn a negative mistake into a positive result. But that usually takes a creative and questioning mind as well as experience."

PBS Begins 13-Week Series Combining TV With Poetry

By MICHAEL BEZDEK
Associated Press Writer
CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — American poetry and television are no longer mutually exclusive terms.

The two have been synthesized for the first time in a large-scale production that began a 13-week run Tuesday on PBS stations. This song of ourselves called "Voices & Visions" was seven years in the making and cost $7.5 million — lavish for a public television arts special.

Helen Vendler, poetry critic of the New Yorker and a Harvard University professor, who was the consultant for the series, says it took years just to come up with the guest list. The project also had a few initial problems.

The first unknown involved the often jealous guardians of the poets' estates, she said. However, T.S. Eliot's wife, who was expected to be especially tough, turned out to be obliging.

Then there were questions of funding. Who should be included if there was money for only five segments? For 10? Should every major region of the country be represented? Should the series focus on individuals? On movements?

"Finally, we decided on all dead poets. I started referring to it as the dead American poets series," Vendler said. "It's not perfect. But it's the best thing out there. Television and poetry — it's in its infancy. This is a first step."

It is a major one. The series, produced by the non-profit New York Center for Visual History, features 13 modern poets in hour-long segments. The poets, in order of appearance, are: Robert Frost, Ezra Pound, Langston Hughes, Walt Whitman, Hart Crane, William Carlos Williams, Emily Dickinson, Marianne Moore, T.S. Eliot, Wallace Stevens, Elizabeth Bishop, Robert Lowell and Sylvia Plath.

The series also boasts one of the largest gatherings ever of literati for one project. In addition to the voices of many of the featured poets, there are readings and critiques by such poets as Richard Wilbur, Allen Ginsberg, Adrienne Rich, Gwendolyn Brooks, Seamus Heaney, James Merrill and Octavio Paz. The commentary includes views of Stephen Spender, Malcolm Cowley, Hugh Kenner, Harold Bloom, Alfred Kazin, Joyce Carol Oates and Mary McCarthy.

Further testimony comes from such people as Olga Rudge, Pound's longtime companion, and from their out-of-wedlock daughter. Also heard from are Plath's mother, Williams' son and there is even an interview with the soldier who guarded the cage at Pisa, Italy, where Pound was held following his arrest for his fascist World War II broadcasts.

The project's archival value was increased by timely interviews with American author James Baldwin and British poet Basil Bunting, who since have died; rare footage of the featured poets; shots of the often far-off places in which they lived; bold graphics and enactments.

There are some technical flaws, such as the hasty presentation of the commentators, who are identified only once, and a corollary vagueness at times over whose voice is being heard. But the material and television itself sustain the segments.

For instance, a note on the deaths of three loved ones, music and film come together for a cogent introduction to Frost's "Acquainted With the Night"; a point on the readability of Williams' "The Red Wheelbarrow," is amplified with delightful man-in-the-street readings; and Bishop's "The Moose" is seen in a late-afternoon encounter with a Nova Scotia bus.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): You may find that partners act strangely toward you today, but take this in stride and keep busy at your favorite activities.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Even if you are bored at work today, don't act that way or you could get into trouble. Be kind to a troubled co-worker.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): You must use patience with a person who takes nothing seriously, or you could lose your temper and accomplish nothing all day.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Don't allow a co-worker to distract you from your duties and cause you to make errors. Put off recreations until your work is all finished.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): If you proceed cautiously, you can take a calculated risk today and get good results. Be willing to do what your mate enjoys tonight.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Some condition at home may be annoying you, but handle it objectively. If any unexpected guests stop by, be hospitable and polite.

When we were learning the game at our mothers' knees, we were told about the players roaming the streets shoeless because they forgot to draw trumps. No one told us they were falling over their friends who drew trumps too soon.

South's rebid of four spades doesn't thrill us. With a balanced hand and seven running tricks, we could make a persuasive argument in favor of three no trump. As the cards lie, neither contract should have caused problems, but at four spades declarer became careless.

He won the opening diamond lead in hand and immediately drew three rounds of trumps. Then he led a heart toward dummy. West played low and the queen won, but declarer found that he had left himself with a minor problem—he had no way to get back to his hand to lead another heart up to the table's honor. With nothing better to do, he led a club toward his king, hoping that he would find the aces split. That was not the case. West won and forced out the king of diamonds, and declarer still had to concede a heart and a trick in each side suit for down one.

Declarer had cut his own communications when he drew trumps. He could afford one round of trumps, but then he should have led a heart. When the queen holds, he can get back to hand with a trump and, after drawing the outstanding trump, lead another heart up to dummy's honor. With the ace on-side, declarer will be able to set up a heart for a club discard while the king of diamonds is still on the board to serve as an entry.

The Heron

By David Schwartz

His beak protrudes from his neck curled and set, Waiting for an opportunity, you can bet.

He stands frozen with great potential and skill, For who knows what he may catch with his bill?

Will it happen? Perhaps it may, Or will the opportunity come another day?

spied.

The feathers then ruffle on his cap, And he catches the prey with a snap.

He has caught his opportunity

David Schwartz, 14, a student at E.B. Aycock Junior High School wins this week's writing contest.

Reading History

By Hank Middleton

Reading history is quite exciting. What thrills have taken place, whether it be a battle between the Romans and barbarians or between two knights at a royal race. Sometimes you can feel yourself being a king with great power. Or you can find yourself in an old dungeon, so cold and sour. You read of the great Vikings, of their being rough and mean. Or you can imagine yourself as Christopher Columbus and explore lands you have never seen. You read of the strange spices and jewelry brought from the East. And what of those who've travelled the Amazon! They tell amazing stories of strange and wild beasts.

You can imagine yourself an American soldier in France trying to liberate the French. Or you can be a British soldier fighting the Germans in a desert trench. You can place yourself in the bloody American Civil War. Or you can be a rich English nobleman looking down on London's poor. Read of Napoleon's empire and how it became so strong. Learn of Nazi Germany and their war so very wrong. Sometimes you read of airplanes dueling in the air. And sometimes of woolly mammoths of the Ice Age with their thick, long hair.

Read of our Revolutionary War when we fought the British with long musket guns.

We fought hard. Watch Redcoats retreat. We know now that we've won. Imagine yourself as a captain of a frigate fighting in the ocean, or maybe you're a Middle Ages wizard developing a new potion. How about the Spaniards and how they won the Aztecs' treasures. Let's read about the presidents. Being one would be a pleasure.

What fun it must have been to be a Roman emperor wanting his empire to last. And how if his orders were not obeyed, how he'd lose his temper very fast. Imagine reading about the war in Viet Nam. In the jungle you would be scared of being surprised or of stepping on a bomb. Or you can see yourself a tank driver, rolling through bombed and burning cities, looking at innocent people killed, and reaching out with pity.

Can you see yourself as Magellan was when he travelled the world for three years? Or if you lived during the Hundred Years War, what sounds of fighting and killing you would hear. Not all of it is pleasant, but it's what I love to read. And come to think of it, in order to graduate, it's something that I need.

Tar Heel Trivia

Daniel Boone

Daniel Boone was not born in North Carolina, but spent most of his childhood in the western part of the state in the Yadkin River area.

Boone was 20 and his wife, Rebecca Bryan, was 15 when they first met in what today is Davidson County. Two years after meeting, they married in 1756.

Boone was most famous for his exploration and settlement in Kentucky, where Rebecca is said to have spent months and years alone with her children. Rebecca Boone and her four daughters were probably the first white women to live in the Kentucky territory.

Daniel and Rebecca Boone gained and lost great wealth in their life together. Boone was the last of the two to die at the age of 90 in 1827.

SWEET AND VERSATILE — Sugar is a versatile sweetener as it also contributes to the appearance, color, texture and other preparatory functions of foods. It may develop different qualities to prepare the same dish as in the ice cream, syrup and whip cream of a Banana Split.

Versatile Sugar Boasts Qualities All Of Its Own

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

What do ice cream, syrup and soft drinks have in common? The sweet taste of sugar.

But sugar is not only a primary sweetener, it contributes to the appearance, texture, color, body and shelf life of innumerable foods, thereby providing important functions in preparing foods and beverages.

Despite the introduction of various sugar substitutes, no one product has been able to imitate the taste and versatile qualities of sugar.

At 16 calories per teaspoon, it is a source of dietary carbohydrate, the body's primary energy source. In moderation, it contributes to a balanced diet by making many nutritious foods tasty.

The potential of sugar was discovered over time as its history dates back 8,000 years when inhabitants of the South Pacific islands grew sugar cane. People of ancient India made the first candy with sugar cane.

Cultivation and refining of the sugar cane reached Europe about A.D. 636. And, Christopher Columbus brought sugar cane cuttings to the islands in the Caribbean Sea in 1493. The first sugar mill on the North American mainland was built in New Orleans in 1791.

Try the accompanying recipes using sugar.

CAROL DOWNING'S SUGARED PEANUTS

- 3 cups shelled raw peanuts
- 1 cup granulated sugar
- 1/2 cup water

Place all three ingredients in a saucepan, bring to a boil, reduce heat, and simmer until all liquid is absorbed. Spread on a greased cookie sheet, and bake in a preheated 300 degree oven for about 25 minutes. Cool completely before storing in an airtight container.

Super Bowl Parties Revolve Around Great Food

Let the game begin! As Super Bowl XXVII approaches, at-home entertaining is on the minds of many who enjoy hosting family and friends to watch the biggest game in football.

What party-givers want most are easy-to-prepare recipes and practical party tips. This year, the Kraft Kitchens have designed three party themes to fit any budget. Each includes recipes, cost breakdown and festive entertaining ideas that will make every party special.

With San Diego the site of this year's Super Bowl, the first party theme, "Mexican MVP," concentrates on Mexican food and decorations. To create a south of the border flavor, Chili Pie and Mexican Layered Salad are two of the suggested half-time courses. Team them up with Cheese Vegetable Nachos for a party approach that adds a special touch to at-home entertaining.

The second theme, "Root for the Referee," is for the host whose budget is not a main consideration. A menu of Italian Marinated Flank Steak and Tossed Tortelli Salad are teamed with unique party ideas that ensures guests a great time. The action gets started for armchair quarterback with a tempting Creamy Broccoli Soup.

Both the "Mexican MVP" and "Root for the Referee" recipes can be dished up for between $65 and $75 for 20 people.

The final theme, "Tailgate Touchdown," is designed for the party giver who wants to entertain smartly without breaking the bank.

Built around a casual theme of in-home tailgating, this party is festive without a lot of fuss and costs just under $45 to serve a gathering of 20. Create an indoor picnic with Spicy Chicken Wings Buffalo-Style and Goal Post Sandwich Cookies.

No matter what the budget is for an at-home Super Bowl Party, using these recipes and entertaining ideas will guarantee a winning gathering!

GOAL POST SANDWICH COOKIES

- 1 cup margarine
- 13/4 cups packed brown sugar
- 2 eggs
- 1/2 teaspoon vanilla
- 2 1/2 cups flour
- 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 cup chopped pecans
- 8 cups chocolate chip ice cream, softened

Beat margarine and sugar until light and fluffy. Blend in eggs and vanilla. Add combined dry ingredients; mix well. Stir in pecans. Drop heaping measuring tablespoonfuls of dough onto greased cookie sheet. Bake at 350 degrees, 10 to 12 minutes or until golden brown. Cool. For each sandwich, cover one cookie with about 1/2 cup ice cream; top with second cookie. Press cookies together. Wrap securely in plastic wrap. Freeze. Makes about 16 ice cream sandwiches.

Variation: Substitute strawberry or vanilla ice cream for chocolate chip ice cream.

CHEESY VEGETABLE NACHOS

- 1 1-ounce can refried beans

- 1 12-ounce jar salsa
 - 1 8-ounce jar pasteurized process cheese spread
 - 1 7 1/2-ounce package tortilla chips
 - 1 1/2 cups lettuce
 - 1/2 cup chopped tomato
 - 1/2 cup chopped zucchini
 - 1/4 cup sour cream
- Combine beans and salsa in saucepan; stir over low heat until thoroughly heated. Heat process cheese spread according to label directions. On serving platter, layer chips, bean mixture, lettuce, tomatoes and zucchini; cover with process cheese spread. Top with sour cream. Serves eight. Triple recipe.

MEXICAN LAYERED SALAD

- 1 cup mayonnaise salad dressing
- 1 8-ounce bottle French dressing
- 1 quart shredded lettuce
- 1 cup pitted ripe olive slices
- 1 12-ounce can whole kernel corn with sweet peppers, drained

- 2 cups chopped tomato
- 1 cup celery slices
- 1 8-ounce can kidney beans, drained

Moms-To-Be Motivated To Eat Right

By Carole Sugarman

When Gina Zick got pregnant with her first child, she was born again. Out went cigarettes and fast food. In came breakfast. Her usual lunch of cashews and a Diet Pepsi was replaced by a sandwich and a glass of milk.

Zick, now a 27-year-old mother who lives in Lanham, Md., with her two children and husband, Bob, a Fairfax County, Va., firefighter, is typical of many mothers-to-be. Perhaps more than any other time in their lives, women who are pregnant want to eat right — and are highly motivated to do so.

In many ways, it is the kind of motivation that nutrition experts are struggling to instill in the rest of the population, which often doesn't eat healthfully until faced with a life-threatening situation.

Instead of setting up protective or preventative environments, "we have the attitude that we can break and fix things," said Mary Goodwin, senior nutritionist with the Montgomery County Health Department.

But practicing good eating habits during pregnancy is one of the few non-controversial topics in nutrition. It is also the one nutrition-intervention situation in which an individual gleans the greatest results in the

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

Dear Readers: I want to share some information with you about women and their health provided by the Food and Drug Administration and the Agricultural Extension Service.

Life expectancy for Americans is at all time high of 75.2 years for whites and 69.6 years for blacks. Yet women — particularly minority women — battle higher rates of illness and death than the general population.

Many of these deaths and illnesses could be prevented if women and their families were aware of the problems and ways to avoid them. Several problems are related to the food we eat.

What are the effects of obesity, poor dietary habits, sedentary lifestyles and other factors? How do they relate to diabetes, cancer, coronary heart disease and hypertension? How can people encourage self-esteem among low income and minority women?

These questions and many others will be addressed Jan. 29 at "Women and Chronic Disease: Reducing Risk Factors," the Southeastern Regional Women's Health Teleconference. It is open to interested people.

The conference is sponsored locally by the Department of Family Medicine and the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service.

The teleconference will originate from the University of Georgia Center for Continuing Education in Athens and will be linked by satellite to the Brody Gold Auditorium. Twelve nationally known experts will be making live presentations on women's health.

The conference is designed for people who work with low income and minority women, such as community leaders, educators, extension agents, EFNEP staff, physicians, pharmacists, nurses, dietitians, nutritionists and public health professionals.

Expert speakers represent the National Cancer Institute, American Heart Association, National Black Women's Health Project and a variety of medical institutions. They will cover five major topics: the role women can play in improving their health, nutrition in obesity, heart disease, diabetes, hypertension, cancer, communicating with health professionals and community involvement.

The teleconference will begin at 9:30 a.m. and will conclude at 3 p.m. I'll be there to moderate our local program and field your questions. For times of specific speeches, please call May Merner at 551-5459.

Magazine Prints Local Teacher's Recipe

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

An April snowfall in Alabama last year was the catalyst for the publication of a century-old Pitt County recipe in a national magazine.

Brenda Lewis Little of Greenville, a home economics teacher at D.H. Conley High School, said she submitted "Snow Ice Cream" along with about four others to Southern Living Magazine in 1982, but it was used in the magazine for the first time in the January issue this year.

"Last year in April, there was big snow in Alabama" and employees of the magazine searched their files for snow recipes, Ms. Little said. "The magazine receives about 4,000 different recipes each month and files them according to subjects or categories," she said. When it features a particular subject or category, it "pulls out and field tests five."

"Snow Ice Cream" was selected to help employees celebrate their April snow, Ms. Little said, and they decided "we're definitely going to use it next year" in a winter issue.

The recipe appears in January issues published for the states of Kentucky, Tennessee and Arkansas, she said. It may be printed in a North Carolina edition of the magazine another year.

In addition to the "Snow Ice Cream" recipe, Ms. Little said a candy apple recipe submitted by her daughter, Marlo, also was published by the magazine in 1984.

Combining fresh snow with an egg, sugar, evaporated milk and vanilla extract, the recipe belonged to Nannie Dunn of Pitt County, Ms. Little's former mother-in-law. "It had belonged to her mother," she said.

Suggestions from the magazine say the recipe can be prepared outdoors or indoors with the understanding that snow melts quickly inside. The sweetened milk mixture may be prepared in advance, ready for the snow as soon as it is brought into the house. Or it can be taken outside and stirred into snow measured in a large bowl.

The recipe calls for 1 gallon of snow, but it only yields 3 quarts. The snow compresses a little as the milk mixture is added. Stir gently to minimize volume loss.

Keep the "Snow Ice Cream" recipe handy and try it during Pitt County's next snowfall.

Sugar Is A Versatile Product With Qualities All Its Own

STRAWBERRY JAM BREAD DOUGLASS

- 3 cups all purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 3/4 teaspoon cream of tartar
- 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 1/2 cups granulated sugar
- 1 cup unsalted butter, softened
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1/4 teaspoon lemon juice
- 4 large eggs
- 1 cup strawberry jam
- 1/2 cup buttermilk
- 1 cup chopped nuts

Sift first four ingredients together and set aside. Combine next four ingredients in a large mixing bowl, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. In a separate bowl, mix jam and buttermilk, and add to creamed mixture alternately with dry ingredients, mixing just until blended. Do not overmix. Stir in nuts. Spoon batter into two greased 9x5x3 inch loaf pans, and bake in a preheated 350 degree oven for 55 minutes, or until cake tester comes out clean. Cool for 15 minutes in pans, remove loaves, and let them cool completely on wire racks.

STAR WEED'S PECAN PUFFS

- 1/2 cup unsalted butter, melted
- 1 cup all purpose flour
- 2 tablespoon granulated sugar
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1 cup pecan pieces, chopped in small bits
- Sifted confectioners sugar for coating

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Mix all ingredients together. Shape into balls. Bake on greased cookie sheets for 20 to 25 minutes. Roll in sifted confectioner sugar while still warm. Yields about 2 dozen.

MACADAMIA NUT BRITTLE

- 1 cup unsalted macadamia nuts, coarsely chopped
- 2 tablespoon unsalted butter
- 3/4 cup granulated sugar
- 3 tablespoons water

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Spread the macadamia nuts out on a baking sheet and toast in the oven for 10 minutes. Melt the butter in a small skillet over moderate heat. Add the toasted macadamia nuts and cook, stirring for 3 minutes. Remove the pan from the heat and set aside. Butter a large baking sheet. Combine the granulated sugar and water in a small saucepan. Bring to a boil, stirring to dissolve the sugar and washing down any sugar crystals clinging to the sides with a brush dipped in cold water. Boil until the syrup turns golden caramel. Stir in the macadamias and butter and quickly pour the mixture out onto the buttered baking sheet. Allow to cool and harden, then break into pieces. Keep in an air-tight container.

COCONUT CHOCOLATE WALNUT BART

- 1 cup plus 2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
- 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 cup (1 stick) unsalted butter, softened
- 1/3 cup granulated sugar
- 1/3 cup light brown sugar
- 1 egg
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1 1/4 cups sweetened flaked coconut
- 1 cup semi-sweet chocolate chips
- 2/3 cup coarsely chopped or broken walnuts

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Butter a 9 inch square baking pan. Sift the flour, baking soda and salt together into a mixing bowl. In another, larger bowl, cream the butter with the sugars until light and fluffy. Beat in the egg and vanilla. Add the flour mixture, stirring until blended. Add the coconut, chocolate chips and walnuts and blend thoroughly. Turn the batter out into the prepared pan and smooth evenly into the corners. Bake in the center of the preheated oven for 20 to 25 minutes, or until the top is golden brown and the center is still slightly moist when tested with a toothpick.

Remove from the oven and allow to cool in the pan, on a rack. When cool, cut into 24 bars. Store in an air-tight container.

CHOCOLATE HAZELNUT TRUFFLES

- 1 cup hazelnuts
- 1 cup plus 2 tablespoons heavy cream
- 1 long vanilla bean
- 1 pound bittersweet or semisweet chocolate, coarsely chopped
- 5 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa powder
- 4 tablespoons confectioners sugar

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Spread hazelnuts out on a baking sheet. Toast in the preheated oven for 10-15 minutes, or until the skins begin to flake. Fold the nuts in a kitchen towel and let them steam for one minute. Rub the nuts in the towel to remove the skins. Allow to cool, then grind the nuts to a fine powder. Set aside.

Pour the cream into a small saucepan. Split the vanilla bean in half lengthwise and scrape the soft black seeds into the cream. Slowly bring the cream to a boil over low heat. Remove the pan from the heat and let cream cool to 90 degrees.

Put the chocolate in the top of a double boiler and melt over simmering water. Stir until completely smooth. Blend the melted chocolate into the cream. Allow the mixture to cool to room temperature. Refrigerate, stirring occasionally, until slightly chilled. With electric mixer, beat the chocolate mixture until it begins to lighten. Gradually add 3/4 of the hazelnut powder (reserving the rest), beating the mixture for 2 minutes. Cover and chill for several hours or overnight. Sift the cocoa powder and the confectioners sugar together. Add the remaining hazelnut powder and blend well. Spread the mixture out in a plate. Using a teaspoon, scoop out 1 inch chunks of the chilled truffle mixture. Store truffles in an airtight container in the refrigerator. Remove from the refrigerator 30 minutes before serving to reach room temperature. 4 dozen truffles.

ALMOND PRALINE NUGGETS

- 1 cup light brown sugar
- 2 tablespoons ground almonds*
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch
- 1 tablespoon bourbon
- 1 large egg white, room temperature
- Pinch cream of tartar
- Pinch salt
- 2 cups whole almonds*

Preheat oven to 300 degrees. Push the brown sugar through a sieve or strainer into a mixing bowl. Add the ground almonds, cornstarch, and bourbon and blend well. In a small bowl, beat the egg white with the cream of tartar and salt until it holds stiff peaks. Stir 1/3 of the egg white into the sugar mixture, then fold the rest in gently. Fold in the whole almonds, making sure they are well coated with the mixture. Place the almonds 2 inches apart on buttered baking sheets. Bake in the preheated oven for 12 minutes, or until puffed and golden brown. Transfer to racks to cool completely. Store in airtight containers. About 100 nuggets

*Pecans can be substituted for almonds, if desired.

PARMESAN HERB BREAD

- 2 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 1/4 tsp. salt
- 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- Pinch cayenne
- 1 teaspoon dried oregano
- 1/2 teaspoon dried sage
- 1 teaspoon coarsely ground black pepper
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 3/4 cup minced fresh parsley
- 1 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese
- 1/4 cup vegetable shortening, softened
- 2 tablespoons granulated sugar
- 2 large eggs, lightly beaten
- 1 1/4 cups buttermilk
- 1/2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Combine the first 11 ingredients and mix thoroughly with a fork. In a large mixing bowl, beat the shortening with the sugar until fluffy. Add the eggs and whisk until well blended. Whisk in the buttermilk and Worcestershire sauce. Add the flour mixture and stir the batter just until combined. Divide the batter between two greased 7 1/4x3 1/2x2 1/2-inch loaf pans. Bake in the center of a preheated 350 degree oven for 40 to 45 minutes, or until a toothpick or skewer inserted in the middle of a loaf comes out clean. Cool the loaves in the pans on a rack for 10 minutes. Remove the loaves from the pans and cool on a rack for 2 hours. Wrap will in foil and keep in the refrigerator. Makes 2 loaves.

Simple Meals Cure Post-Holiday Blues

By Joan Drake

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

After preparing all those lavish meals during the holiday season, about the last thing most of us want to do now is spend hours in the kitchen. It is time for recipes that look like they take all day to prepare, but actually go together in minutes.

One sure-fire way to save time is to begin with convenience ingredients — products that are partially prepared, but still allow for individual creativity. Minidoughnuts and holes can be made from a tube of refrigerated biscuits. They take practically no time to prepare and are at their best when still warm from frying. We suggest dusting them with sugar and cinnamon, but an orange or maple glaze might also be used. They add fun to a simple breakfast of an orange and hot or cold cereal with milk.

MINIBISCUIT DOUGHNUTS

- 1 (10-ounce) package refrigerated biscuits
- Oil for deep frying
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon

Open and carefully separate biscuits. Using detachable center from doughnut cutter, cut hole in center of each biscuit. Heat oil to 375 degrees in deep-fat fryer or saucepan. Combine sugar and cinnamon in paper bag.

Fry biscuits and holes, turning once, until golden brown on both sides. Drain briefly on paper towels, then place in bag with cinnamon-sugar and shake until coated. Makes about 10 doughnuts and 10 doughnut holes.

Note: For optimum flavor, prepare just before serving.

HAM AND CHEESE BISCUIT-WICHES

- Sliced fully cooked ham
- Sliced Jack cheese
- 1 (10-ounce) package refrigerated biscuits
- 1 (7-ounce) can whole green chiles
- Using 2-inch biscuit cutter, cut 10 rounds from ham and cheese slices. Open and carefully separate biscuits. Divide each biscuit into halves horizontally. Place 1 round ham and 1 round cheese on half biscuits. Top with desired amount of green chile, not overlapping biscuit edges.
- Place biscuit-wiches in waffle iron heated to lowest setting. Bake until

FUNNEL CAKES WITH PAPAYA SAUCE

SNOW ICE CREAM

- 1 egg, beaten
- 3/4 cup sugar
- 1 cup evaporated milk
- 2 teaspoons vanilla extract
- 1 gallon clean, fresh snow

Combine egg and sugar; stir well with a wire whisk. Add milk and vanilla, stirring well. Place snow in a large bowl. Gradually add milk mixture to snow, gently stirring with a wooden spoon until blended. Makes about 3 quarts.

Motivation To Eat Right Is Seldom Lacking For Mothers-To-Be

 shortest amount of time, Goodwin said.
 "Women will do anything for a healthy baby," said Ann Litt, a dietitian who counsels pregnant women. In fact, some pregnant women are almost boring to counsel because they are so adaptive, Litt commented.

Anecdotal evidence from pregnant women and dietitians confirms this heightened nutrition awareness: caffeine addicts give up their daily fixes, milk-haters get calcium-conscious and compulsive dieters eat more food.

Statistics also show that pregnant women act on their motivation. According to the most recent U.S. Department of Agriculture figures, pregnant women had higher intakes of 12 nutrients than all women in the survey (from food, not including supplements). They also ate more calories per day (1,716 compared to 1,591) as well as eating more nutrients per 1,000 calories for nine out of the 12 nutrients.

Interestingly, however, the pregnant women were still not getting their full recommended daily allowances for the nutrients, which are higher during pregnancy. And the problem nutrients for both non-pregnant and pregnant women were the same: calcium, iron, vitamin B6 and magnesium.

These figures represent data from 1977-78; the 1985-86 consumption survey of women has not yet been analyzed for comparative intakes of pregnant and non-pregnant respondents.

It's not just women who become more aware of what they are eating when they are pregnant. Husbands, who may feel that food is one of the few aspects of their wives' pregnancies that they can control, are often equally or more involved. There are stories of men who have coaxed their wives into eating a well-balanced dinner — perhaps preparing it themselves — and those who refrain from drinking alcohol in front of their pregnant wives for fear they might be tempted.

Zick, who said her husband is "really into fitness," characterized his behavior during her pregnancies as that of a "helpful nag." He would remind her if she hadn't eaten enough for lunch and would watch to make sure she wasn't eating too many salty foods, since she developed hypertension during both pregnancies. "He didn't let me enjoy my biggest treats (feta cheese and black olives) as much as I would have liked," Zick admitted.

Bob Zick said that his wife's pregnancy made him more aware of improving his own eating habits. And the Zicks both feel strongly that their two sons are healthy and robust because of Gina's diet during pregnancy and lactation, and because of the nutritious foods they continue to keep in the house.

Not every woman changes her eating habits when she becomes pregnant, and not every woman who makes a turnaround does so easily, or continues those changes once she has the baby.

Some women, such as consultant Michelle Bradshaw, already eat nutritiously and have made few changes in their diet when they have become pregnant. Sylvia Winik, an attorney with the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, said she is eating exactly the way she was before she was pregnant — three balanced meals a day and fruit or carrot sticks for snacks. Another Washington woman said she has simply tacked on a few glasses of milk a day to increase her caloric intake by the recommended 300.

Barbara Gordon, an attorney who works in the White House, and who characterizes herself as a "coffee and doughnut person," made a complete turnaround in her eating habits during her first, and now second pregnancy. The coffee is currently decaffeinated, and the doughnuts have been ditched for a wholesome bowl of cereal with fruit, she said. But after her first child she let out a sigh of relief, Gordon said. "I just didn't have to think about what I was eating." She "didn't have to worry about a second individual" getting nutrients from her.

Nevertheless, Gordon said she worries laboriously over what she eats. Waking up at 2 o'clock in the morning worrying if she's had enough calcium for the day, Gordon will sometimes sneak into the kitchen for some yogurt.

Of course, being motivated to eat the right foods during pregnancy hinges on knowing which foods are nutritious to eat.

Sheryl Bruce, co-ordinator of Prince Georges County's (Md.) Women, Infants and Children (WIC) program, a government-supported program that supplies food and nutritional guidance to low-income women and their children, said that once the women receive the correct nutritional information, they are more likely to become motivated and act on it. (Sometimes, however, food costs or inaccessibility to food may action on their motivation impossible.) Bruce said that pregnant teenagers are often not as motivated as older pregnant women.

But not always. A 19-year-old single mother-to-be who lives in Kensington, Md., and who has applied for WIC, said that she went from eating hot dogs and fast-food burgers to cereal or yogurt for breakfast, four glasses of milk a day and a balanced dinner with vegetables and a protein component. Instead of "running around," she enjoys staying home and cooking meals, she said.

Motivation Is Not A Problem

The woman, who participated in an alcoholics' rehabilitation program before she became pregnant, said that her pregnancy helped her deal with her alcoholism. When she has been tempted to drink, the thought of her baby's health has kept her away. "I don't want anything to hurt this baby," she said. "It's more important to me than anything."

There is no doubt, said Sara Ducey, a research and policy analyst at the Food, Research and Action Center, a national advocacy organization, that WIC mothers have better diets and healthier babies than low-income women who are not on the program.

Here are a few dishes for which some pregnant women have had cravings:

GINA ZICK'S GREEK CHICKEN

4 chicken legs, skinned
4 medium red bliss potatoes, quartered
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
Juice of 1/2 lemon, plus lemon wedges for serving 1/2 teaspoon oregano flakes

Place chicken in a large baking dish. Surround with potatoes. Sprinkle chicken and potatoes with oil, lemon juice and oregano. Bake for 350 degrees for about 50 to 60 minutes, or until chicken is done. Garnish with lemon wedges and serve with a salad.

SYLVIA WINICK'S APPLE-CURRY STUFFED ZUCCHINI

(2 servings)
1 large zucchini
1/2 medium apple, peeled and finely chopped

1/4 cup grated part-skim mozzarella
1/4 cup bread or cracker crumbs
1 egg, beaten
1/4 teaspoon curry
2 tablespoons golden raisins

Cut zucchini down the middle lengthwise. Scoop out the pulp, leaving a 1/2-inch shell. Place pulp in a bowl and drain off excess water. Add remaining ingredients and place in zucchini shells. Place stuffed zucchini in an ovenproof baking dish. Add just enough water to cover the bottom of the dish. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 to 25 minutes, or until squash is tender.

MICHELLE BRADSHAW'S BRUNSWICK STEW

(From Chowning's Tavern in Williamsburg, Va.)
(12 servings)
1 stewing chicken or rabbit, cut up
2 to 3 quarts water
2 pounds tomatoes, quartered
2 10-ounce packages frozen corn
10-ounce package frozen lima beans
2 onions, sliced
4 large potatoes, peeled and cubed
Salt, pepper and worcestershire sauce to taste

Put chicken or rabbit in water in a large stewpot. Bring to a boil. Simmer, cover and stew for an hour, skimming fat as necessary. Remove poultry from broth and set aside.

Add vegetables, bring to a boil, simmer and cook for another 30 minutes or until vegetables are tender. Add salt and pepper to taste.

Meanwhile, remove skin and bones from chicken or rabbit and cut meat into bite-sized pieces. Return meat to pot and reheat until heated through.

Simple Meals Work

2 cups flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
Oil for deep frying
Powdered sugar
Papaya Sauce

Place eggs and milk in blender container and blend well. Add flour, baking powder and salt and blend until smooth. Heat oil to 360 degrees in deep-fat fryer, deep 6-inch skillet or 6-inch diameter saucepan.

Using finger to cover 1/2-inch diameter funnel spout, pour 1/4 cup batter into funnel. Position funnel over oil, remove finger and release batter into hot oil, moving funnel in circular motion to form spiral or lacy pattern.

Fry, carefully turning once, until golden brown on both sides. Drain on paper towels. Sprinkle with powdered sugar and serve with Papaya Sauce. Makes 12 (5 1/2-inch) funnel cakes.

Note: Diameter of equipment used for frying will determine funnel cake size.

Papaya Sauce

1 papaya, peeled and seeded Juice of 1 lime
1 teaspoon minced ginger root
3 tablespoons sugar Cut papaya in chunks and place in blender or food processor fitted with metal blade. Puree. Add lime juice, ginger and sugar, blending well. Makes about 1 1/2 cups.

APRICOT-CHEESE BRAID

1 (3-ounce) package cream cheese
1 tablespoon powdered sugar
2 tablespoons apricot preserves
1 tablespoon raisins
1 (8-ounce) package refrigerated crescent dinner rolls

Glaze
Bring cream cheese to room temperature. Combine with powdered sugar, preserves and raisins. Open dinner rolls and separate into 2 large rectangles. Place on baking sheet, overlapping long sides to form 13-by-7-inch rectangle. Firmly press edges and perforations to seal.

Spread cream cheese mixture lengthwise down center 1-3 of dough and to within 1-inch of ends. Make diagonal cuts 3/4-inch apart on each side from outer edge to filling. Alternating sides, fold dough strips over filling in braid fashion.

Bake at 375 degrees 15 to 20 minutes or until golden brown. Cool slightly, then drizzle with Glaze. Serve at room temperature. Makes 10 to 12 servings.
