Jackson Labels Eastern N.C. As Giant That's Coming Alive

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

Approximately 1,200 people listened to the Rev. Jesse Jackson speak of a "New South" and of economic opportunity as Jackson concluded a three-stop campaign tour of North Carolina in Greenville Wednesday night.

"Eastern North Carolina has always been a sleeping giant. I am so glad to see eastern North Carolina begin to come alive," Jackson told the capacity crowd that filled Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church on Stantonburg Road. "It's been a long time coming for eastern North Carolina to rise above plantation mentality and come alive, and it makes me feel good all over."

Campaigning as one of the seven candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination, Jackson told the receptive congregation of his intentions to help lift the moral tone of the nation and to forge ahead on the road to right priorities.

"There is much work to be done and although our roles are different, our responsibilities are the same," he said.

"This generation must lift the quality of life in our nation, must raise the standard of living across the South. This generation must stop jobs from going out. We must secure family farms, we must clean up our environment, we must stabilize our families, we must choose hope over dope, we must choose the human race over the nuclear race. This is the New South," he shouted.

"Let us have right priorities in the New South. Let us invest in Headstart and daycare on the front side rather than jailcare and welfare on the backside," the native South Carolinian said.

Jackson's emphasis on the South relates directly to the March 8 "Super Tuesday" primaries. On that day people from 14 Southern and border states will vote in presidential primaries.

A graduate of N.C. A&T State University in Greensboro, Jackson described a "New South agenda which includes raising the minimum wage, allowing pregnancy leave for women without the fear of losing their jobs, and a focus on economic justice for all.

"The New South must be more than image deep, more than symbols," he remarked. "There must be substance in the New South."

Jackson invoked audience participation throughout his hour-long speech, bringing the congregation to its feet several times while speaking of "common ground".

"The New South must find common ground. No matter how much lions and lambs fight, when the forest is on fire they come out together. I see people coming together tonight because the forest is on fire," he said.

Jackson spoke of several issues tying into his "common ground" theme:

•Education: "You can't get a scholarship if you can't make a loan."

•Environment: "What's it matter if you have a job if your savings are being spent on chemotherapy because the atmosphere has been poisoned."

•Agriculture: "They close down 650,000 family farms in this country while they're pulling food from abroad, subsidized by the U.S. government. It doesn't make sense. If we can bail out Europe and Japan, we can bail out the family farmer. We

No Cause Found In Crash Of EastCare's Helicopter

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Investigators trying to determine the cause of the EastCare helicopter crash just over a year ago were unable to find a specific cause, according to a 475-page report released this week by the National Transportation Safety Board.

Charles Foust, an NTSB investigator, said in a telephone interview from his Atlanta office today that investigators were unable to find a specific cause of the crash because of the destruction of the helicopter when it hit the ground and burned near Pollocksville on Jan. 8, 1987.

Four people died in the crash of the medical helicopter — pilot Perry Reynolds, flight nurses Mike McGinnis and Pam Demaree, and a 3-month-old patient, Xenia Lewis.

The child was being transported from the Naval Hospital at Camp Lejeune to Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

"They reported an inflight fire," Foust said. "Unfortunately, we never did pinpoint a specific origin," he said, because "the aircraft burned for 30 minutes" after the crash. "There was a tremendous amount of fuel sources for the fire after impact ... the fuel cells (which the report estimated contained 55 gallons of Jet A fuel), onboard oil, hydraulic fluid (and) high pressure oxygen," which supported the burning.

One possible cause of the fire, suggested by the accident report, was a leaking oxygen tank. The helicopter contained four tanks to supply oxygen to patients being transported.

Air Force Axes ROTC At East Carolina

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

The Air Force ROTC program at East Carolina University and at three other state universities will be eliminated to provide budget cuts for fiscal 1989 in the armed services, the Air Force said Wednesday.

The four state programs, which include those at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, UNC-Charlotte and Fayetteville State University, are among 30 nationwide being eliminated as the armed services search for $32.9 billion in spending cuts in fiscal 1989, which begins Oct. 1. The four programs at the state universities have 437 students among them and will be closed over the next 18 months, the Air Force said.

The Army said Wednesday it also will study possible cuts to its ROTC program but no final decisions had been made. The Navy said it did not anticipate any such cuts.

About 125 students at ECU will be affected over a four-year period by the closed program, Dr. Eugene Ryan, dean of the ECU College of Arts and Sciences, said this morning in a telephone interview.

There are 45 freshmen in the program, and the numbers gradually decline with upperclassmen, he said. "Over the past few years, there have been 22 to 23 students commissioned each year. That's the level of productivity we've been enjoying.

"The numbers have picked up recently because of recruitment efforts" by the four commissioned and two noncommissioned officers in the ECU detachment, Ryan said. "Thirty-five sophomores qualify for field training."

The ECU Air Force ROTC program is observing its 40th anniversary this year. Ryan said that, according to the directive from the Air Force, the ECU program will be terminated at least by fall 1989.

Bill Shires of the ECU News Bureau said Chancellor Richard Eakin, Ryan and other ECU officials will meet today to discuss the matter. Seven other ROTC detachments, none of them at North Carolina schools, will be consolidated to help deal with budget cuts aimed at reducing the federal deficit.

The moves will reduce the number of young officers being groomed for active service and leave the Air Force with 114 ROTC units, the Air Force said Wednesday.

The Air Force said the changes will be phased in over 18 months to allow the 1,197 juniors and seniors in the 37 units to complete their studies. The units involved in the move have a current four-year enrollment of 4,448.

Underclass cadets in the first two years of Air Force ROTC will be allowed to transfer to another unit or leave the program, the Air Force said.

Air Force officials have said they must reduce personnel levels by about 20,000, to a total of 577,750, to bring their 1989 budget into line. The Air Force spent $128 million in fiscal 1987 on its ROTC program. Approximately $14 million of that was for the 37 units being closed or consolidated.

Polygamists' Leader Wounded

Officer Dies As Police End Long Utah Standoff

By BOB BLACK
Associated Press Writer

MARION, Utah (AP) — A 13-day standoff between a polygamist clan and police ended today in gunfire, and one police officer was killed and the leader of the clan was seriously wounded, officials said.

None of the children inside the compound were wounded, officials said.

Addam Swapp, 27, the leader of the clan, was in critical condition with two gunshot wounds to the arm and chest, said Wayne Terry, administrator of the Warsatch County Hospital in Heber City, about 20 miles south of here.

One police officer was reported dead of a gunshot wound upon arrival at the University of Utah Medical Center in Salt Lake City, spokesman Ken Johnson said.

Swapp is the son-in-law of Vickie Singer, widow of slain polygamist John Singer, and is married to two of her daughters.

The standoff came to an end after two Army armored personnel carriers drove into the group's compound and eight to 10 shots were heard.

"All the children are out of the house and they're all safe," said Deputy Director of Public Safety Doug Bodrero at the police command post. He declined to provide further details.

After two groups of about five people each left the main log house of the compound, a van belonging to the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms pulled into the driveway of the compound.

Three people entered the house, while two others waited outside. Earlier, police said they believed there were explosives inside the log house.

SOUNDÖFF

I went to hear Jesse Jackson last night and was turned away because there was not enough space in Cornerstone Baptist Church. I was one of hundreds who were turned away. There were very many terribly disappointed people. I have wanted for years to hear this man and thought last night was to be my chance. This was a major political event and those planning his visit here should have been aware of what a crowd he would draw and should have arranged for him to speak in a major auditorium. A.C.

Rand Pledges Aid To ECU Med School

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Cumberland County Democrat Tony Rand, a member of the North Carolina Senate since 1981 and a candidate for his party's nomination for lieutenant governor, said Wednesday the East Carolina University medical school "serves more human needs, alleviates more suffering, brings more joy and adds more to the quality of life than any other single facility or governmental activity in the eastern part of North Carolina."

Rand, on a two-day campaign tour of Pitt County "in an effort to know this community better and to have an opportunity to see first hand its strengths and to understand more about its needs," toured medical school facilities and Pitt County Memorial Hospital Wednesday morning.

He met with ECU Chancellor Richard Eakin, representatives of the university's school of education and other governmental leaders during the afternoon.

Following his tour of the medical school and hospital, Rand said, "I am thrilled to see and understand the services being provided to the people of eastern North Carolina by these two facilities working hand in hand."

"It is evident to me that we have successfully established a first-rate medical school staffed by highly competent and dedicated people working with the most modern medical technology and providing a level of services to which all people should have access, not only in eastern North Carolina, but all across our state and nation."

Though he was not a member of the General Assembly when the medical school was established, Rand said, "I fully support the principles upon which it was founded and have worked hard during my service in the Senate to ensure that it was adequately funded and given the opportunity to thrive and grow."

"I am particularly impressed with the success of the family practice emphasis that is being fostered, the emphasis on the treatment of cancer and the dedication to ensuring the delivery of medical care in the rural areas of eastern North Carolina," and that the school "is remaining true to its original vision of attracting North Carolina citizens to the practice of medicine in rural and small communities" across the state.

Rand said, "I have been aware for sometime of special needs that this medical school has that must be met if we are to maintain our level of quality care and training. I am hopeful that in the short session of 1988, as well as the two terms that I am committed to serve as lieutenant governor, that we will be able to focus new and additional resources on this medical center."

"I think my administration would demonstrate a special commitment to ensuring that this medical school and its related facilities are funded at an increasing pace adequate to meet the tremendous needs of eastern North Carolina."

A Wake County native, Rand graduated from Garner High School and received his undergraduate and law degrees from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He is a partner in the law firm of Rose, Rand, Ray, Winfrey & Gregory in Fayetteville.

Helms Stresses Need For Unifying Leader

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Parks Helms, Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, spent Wednesday in Pitt County talking about education, the economy and the environment.

The Charlotte lawyer said he believes that the three are interrelated and that all three must be boldly dealt with if North Carolinians are to have a prosperous future.

Helms said he believes that the lieutenant governor, who presides in the state Senate, can and must be a unifying factor, not only in the General Assembly, but among all of the state's citizens. He wants to bring together men and women, blacks and whites, rural people and urban people, Piedmonters, easterners and mountain people, he said.

Helms served in the General Assembly himself from 1974 to 1984 and is proud that he was ranked as one of the 10 "Most Effective N.C. House of Representatives Members" by the North Carolina Center for Public Policy Research for three consecutive sessions. He has been active in Democratic Party politics for many years, having just recently served as chairman of the Mecklenburg County Democratic party.

On education, he said he believes more money will have to be spent and the best people will have to be attracted into, and encouraged to stay in, teaching. He said people must be well trained both on the secondary school and community college and university level for the jobs that must be done in the state in order for the economy to grow. He said, as industries like tobacco growing and processing wane, that the state must bolster them as much as possible while seeking alternatives. He said he wants to see that all areas of the state are being equitably served in its schools.

The red tide situation, he said, and other environmental dilemmas show how much the economy is dependent upon the environment. He said he sympathizes and wants to help the coastal residents of the state find answers to the Red Tide problem so the tourist trade won't be adversely affected this summer, as the fishing has been this winter.

Balances have to be found, he said, between protecting the environment and protecting jobs. He referred to a situation in western North Carolina where 3,000 jobs are threatened if a paper company can't bring its operation out of alleged violation of state and federal environmental regulations.

Helms has spent the last six months, since before he announced Sept. 30 that he was a candidate, touring the state and talking with people about the issues, he said. He filed Jan. 19.

Reagan Silent On Real Issues

In politics, it's what's not said that counts. And in presidential State of the Union addresses, it's the undiscussed issues that need attention. That holds especially true for President Ronald Reagan's final State of the Union address.

The chief executive left the nation with a distinctly Reaganesque oratory Monday, filled with phrases over-illuminating the progress of the last eight years. His vision of the past was exceeded only by the promise of the glowing future his administration has prepared for America.

Reagan talked about emotional issues he sees as crucial to the future. He talked about aid to the Nicaraguan Contras and about a vague concept he called an 'economic and social revolution of hope,' in America.

But Reagan was mum about budget deficits, out-of-control defense spending, de-emphasizing education and environment and a domestic agenda that has left serious gaps in the nation's human services.

Reagan said nothing about a federal budget his administration has refused to balance. The national debt has exceeded imaginable levels, and has done so during the Reagan administration. The implications of this trend are far-reaching in a global economy. The effects can be seen in the instability of the stock market and in the lack of world confidence in the American dollar.

Reagan's policies have addressed short-term solutions to economic problems, and the deficit is a whopping example of this fact. Neither did the president mention just how this federal budget monster got out of control. He didn't talk about defense spending, and how expenditures on weapons and military accouterments have burgeoned to unreasonable levels — at the expense of sound fiscal policy and domestic programs.

The topic of education didn't come up in Reagan's address either. School funding has been de-prioritized by his administration. Reagan's penchant for defense spending has taken valuable dollars out of the classroom and away from low-income students who need government loans to attend college. This is regression, not progress, and its impact was not acknowledged by the president.

Financial interests have taken precedence over the preservation of natural resources during Reagan's tenure. Little progress toward the goal of protecting the environment has been made.

The president remained quiet on the topic of human services, too. He said nothing about depleting domestic programs to build up defense spending or drying up revenue sources for programs that assist the elderly and disadvantaged.

Instead of addressing these crucial issues, Reagan's final State of the Union message ignored them. But his words were packed with meaning on the misguided path his administration has meandered down. These statements just weren't articulated, but they were there, quiet and ominous, behind the irrelevant phrases about global democratic revolution and the feel-good slogans.

Needed Expansion

Sheppard Memorial Library officials are looking at ways to expand and renovate the George Washington Carver Library on West 14th Street.

The improvements are due and well worth any reasonable costs. Carver Branch Library has provided media services to the west Greenville area since it was opened in 1962. Before that, it served in an old house. The library became a branch of the city library system in 1967 and officials say its use has steadily increased. They see continued growth in use due to the rapidly developing business, residential and medical areas in the western portion of the city.

Director of libraries Willie Nelms said the Carver branch has doubled its circulation in the last six years. Plans call for enclosing a courtyard area which would add 63 percent to the building's space. The structure would also be modernized to conform with more modern library construction methods. New space would probably be used for children's programming. And, although the branch is heavily used by school children, officials say increasing numbers of adults are making use of the facility.

At this stage a preliminary plan is being prepared for the expansion and renovation. Cost could be from $75,000 to $150,000 and officials hope for grants from a state fund established by the General Assembly.

Mayor Ed Carter supports the project. The branch has significant activities and programs, he said and "also serves as a social and cultural center for the youth of that community."

Enough said. Carver Library has a rich history of service to west Greenville. With the western development its role can grow and it makes sense to provide adequate facilities in the area.

REAGAN NEUTRALIZES JOINTLY

PRESIDENT ORTEGA, DO THESE LAST-MINUTE CONCESSIONS MEAN A GREATER VOICE FOR THE POLITICAL OPPOSITION?

— Ronald Radosh —

Ortega's Aim Is To Disarm Contras

With peace in Central America and the future of the Arias plan at stake, the forthcoming vote in Congress on aid to the Contras promises to be the most critical.

Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega, skilled in manipulation of both the American media and Congress, has waited until the last minute to make what appears to be significant concessions. He has finally agreed to direct negotiations with the Contras, the lifting of the state of emergency and a general amnesty.

The message that has been presented by the Sandinistas within Nicaragua, however, has made their own true intentions all too clear.

In a speech given to Sandinista party militants last Friday, Commandante Bayardo Arce, head of the party apparatus, condemned the internal civic opposition to the Sandinistas as "marionettes of imperialism."

Informing the party cadre that if the democratic opponents "go straight ... we will receive them with a pardon," Arce made it clear that the Sandinistas had no plans to ever honor Ortega's recent promise to move into an opposition role if the ruling party ever lost an election. The Sandinistas "will never turn over power because we won't usurp the right of the people," Arce said.

On the previous day Arce called out the party's goon squads — the so-called "turbas," or "divine mobs" — to throw rocks and create havoc at a scheduled opposition meeting.

In addition, the Ministry of the Interior arrested and briefly held a group of major opponents of the Sandinistas on the charge that they were forming an internal Contra front.

Some observers have posited a division between President Ortega and hard-liners like Arce and Interior Minister Tomas Borge. If a division exists, it is slim.

Recently Ortega himself accused the internal opposition of trying to forge a Contra front. He branded them all as conservatives, and said that Nicaragua's "new society" had no need for "rightists." Moreover, in support of the mob activity, Ortega has called it a legitimate defense by the revolution against its enemies.

"If the opposition parties can demonstrate and insult us," he said to me last November, "we can respond to them with our own counter-demonstrations." Of course, the turbas are not spontaneous outbursts of revolutionary fervor, but are carefully controlled shock forces of the state security apparatus that are based in government vehicles to places like the offices of the democratic opposition, where they attack opponents with clubs and spread terror and fear.

Costa Rican President Oscar Arias Sanchez' fear, expressed last fall to a delegation from New York City, was that "we may soon see the communist government of Nicaragua using force against workers, students, peasants and intellectuals." Recent events have proved the accuracy of his prediction.

Contrary to Ortega's assertion that the Sandinista Front's opponents are all from the right, the democratic coalition opposing the Sandinistas covers the political spectrum from business interests to trade union leaders and even to Nicaragua's old-line communists. The head of one communist-controlled trade union put it this way: "The Sandinistas have achieved the impossible. They have united the opposition against them and turned the popular classes into supporters of the right."

It was a candid acknowledgment that the very popular forces that supported the revolution of 1979 have turned against the ruling Sandinistas, whom they regard as a group that has given them a roaring 1,800 percent inflation, a mismanaged economy and political repression.

If the Sandinistas have moved a slight bit, it is only because of the pressure exerted by the growing military and political success of the Contras. The passage of some form of Contra aid — primarily humanitarian, with lethal aid held in escrow for a brief period — is actually a precondition for the type of negotiated solution favored by Arias.

Once a cease-fire and a negotiated settlement are in effect, lethal aid to the Contras should come to a halt. But if Sandinista compliance fails, military aid should then be resumed. Otherwise the Sandinistas will have gained their only desired end, the cessation of Contra funding, without having implemented meaningful steps toward democratization.

Liberal Democrats who call for an end to any aid to the Contras, and who favor in its place negotiations toward a security treaty with Nicaragua, act as if the demands of the Nicaraguan people for liberty should not be our concern. They would make the same mistake with Ortega that their predecessors made with Anastasio Somoza.

The issue is clear. Ortega's last-minute "concessions" indicate that the Sandinistas have but one goal: to force the cessation of the Contra war, after which they will consolidate their power, crush the internal opposition and cement their military and political ties with the Soviet Union.

Is it wrong to fear that having funded the Contras just as they have evolved into a popular insurgency, Congress will abandon them out of a misguided belief that peace is being served in Central America?

Ronald Radosh was a member of the New York City delegation to Central America led by Mayor Edward I. Koch, which visited the region last November for Peace and Democracy Watch; he writes frequently about Central America for various publications.

For Bush, Iran-Contra Won't Disappear

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President George Bush scored points with Republicans in his televised interview with CBS anchorman Dan Rather, but his performance left unanswered questions about his role in the Iran-Contra affair.

For months, Bush, a GOP candidate, has sought to put the Iran-Contra episode behind him. "Mistakes were made. And now, let's go on about the nation's business," he said last November when the congressional Iran-Contra committees released a 690-page report about the affair.

The report concluded Bush was a minor player in the sale of U.S.-made weapons to Iran and diversion of the profits to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

"The vice president attended several meetings on the Iran initiative but none of the participants could recall his views," it said.

Congressional investigators also said Bush did not know about the diversion.

But Bush likely will continue to face questions about the Iran-Contra case in the 1988 election year. Interest in the matter will heighten when Lawrence Walsh, the independent counsel, concludes his investigation into the criminal aspects of the case. A federal grand jury is hearing evidence.

Here, then, are some of the questions Bush can expect to hear on the hustings:

•What advice did Bush give President Reagan about the program to sell U.S.-made weapons to Iran in an effort to free American hostages held by pro-Iranian groups in Lebanon?

The program began in August 1985 when the United States agreed to let Israel ship U.S.-made missiles to Iran. In January 1986, Washington began selling arms directly to the Islamic regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Bush has repeatedly said he will never divulge his private conversations with Reagan as a matter of principle. But he has said he talked to Reagan about his reservations over Israel's deep involvement in the program.

•When did Bush realize that selling weapons to Iran was primarily an arms-for-hostages program instead of an overture to moderate elements in Tehran?

"I have said over and over again that the original proposal was not presented as an arms-for-hostages swap," Bush said. He said he did not have "detailed information" until December 1986, a month after the Iran-Contra program was exposed.

But Bush met in July 1986 with Amiram Nir, an Israeli counterterrorism expert who served as Israel's liaison to members of the National Security Council staff involved in shipping weapons to Iran.

Nir discussed "whether we would continue to press for the release of the hostages prior to delivering the items in an amount agreed to previously," according to notes of the meeting written by Craig Fuller, Bush's chief of staff.

Bush told Rather that if he erred, he did so "to get those hostages out of there."

He specifically cited William Buckley, the former CIA station chief in Beirut. Kidnapped in March 1984, Buckley was reportedly tortured and then killed by his captors.

•Was Bush present at a Jan. 7, 1986, meeting at the White House when Secretary of State George Shultz and former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger voiced strong objections to the Iran arms sale?

Bush said he doesn't remember Shultz' forceful objections. "Maybe I wasn't there at that point," he said.

Shultz said he remembers Bush being at the meeting, but Reagan said of Bush, "He was not present."

•Why did a memo prepared for a May 1, 1986, meeting between Bush and former CIA operative Felix Rodriguez describe the subject matter as "resupply of the Contras"?

"I knew nothing of the shipments by the so-called private network of arms to the Contras," Bush said, maintaining that the Contras were not discussed at the meeting.

Starting in September 1985, Rodriguez worked with Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, the NSC aide who ran the private network that helped the Contras between 1984 and 1986 when Congress banned U.S. government assistance to the rebels.

Strength For Today

One of the most devastating evils with which the nature of man has to contend is jealousy. Happy indeed is the person who is free of it. Burdened is the heart, mind, and spirit of the person who as he goes through life finds himself constantly unhappy and envious over what other people have, or what they can do, or the esteem in which they are held. In that book usually passed over by Bible readers, Solomon's Song, occur these words: "Jealousy is as cruel as the grave. The coals thereof are coals of fire, which hath a most vehement flame." (8:6.)

Jealousy is a flame that sears. It is a passion that devastates. "What does he have that I don't have?" "The way she lords it over other people because she and her husband have big bank balances."

Jealousy! Jealousy! Jealousy! — that vehement flame.

Pigs Going

WILMINGTON (AP) — Dr. Raymond and Debbie Sattler say their two 400-pound pigs are just pampered pets, but their neighbors in an upscale Wilmington neighborhood say a hog is still a hog, even if it wears Giorgio perfume.

The Sattlers moved from Lumberton to Wilmington three weeks ago, along with Ellie May and Amy Lou, their pet pigs. Last weekend, neighbors say, the Sattlers put leashes on the porkers and walked them around the neighborhood.

By Wednesday, the couple had placed a "For Sale" sign in their front yard, saying they did not want to fight the neighborhood over their pets.

"As far as the people are concerned, we have no objections. It's the hogs we want out. He's a surgeon. We're objecting to the hogs," neighbor W.K. Dorsey said Wednesday.

While in Lumberton, the couple hosted a highly publicized black-tie party in 1986 for Norma Jean, a 600-pound hog who was dressed in a pink tutu, rhinestone earrings and tiara. Norma Jean later died and the Sattlers acquired Ellie May and Amy Lou.

Alien Marriage

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A Charlotte couple has filed suit against the Immigration and Naturalization Service, saying that they married for love and not to get around federal immigration laws.

Because Kathy Constantino, an American, married Prakash Manwani, an alien from India, last May after deportation proceedings began against him, a new immigration law presumes their marriage is a fraud.

"They are a loving and devoted couple," said Elizabeth Richardson, one of the Manwanis' attorneys. "Their marriage is founded solely on their love for each other and is in no way intended to circumvent the U.S. immigration laws."

The new law, the Immigration Marriage Fraud Amendments of 1986, was signed by President Reagan on Nov. 10, 1986. Under that law, Manwani, 25, who owns a clothing store in Concord, must leave the country for two years before his wife, 22, who works for a housecleaning service, can file a marriage petition for him.

Life Term

RALEIGH (AP) — A Wake County Superior Court judge has sentenced a Raleigh man to his second life term since December after a jury found him guilty of rape.

Judge George M. Fountain of Tarboro sentenced Rodney Kemp Jeter, 22, to life plus 40 years after a jury convicted him of first-degree rape and first-degree burglary in the May 21 attack on a Raleigh woman.

Jeter was convicted on the same charges Dec. 4 in connection with the rape of another Raleigh woman in 1986. At the December trial, Judge J. Milton Read Jr. of Durham sentenced Jeter to life plus 50 years.

The sentence is to run consecutively with the earlier sentence, Fountain said.

Officers Sued

GREENSBORO (AP) — A Forsyth County man is suing Davidson County, the county's sheriff and a deputy for more than $20,000 because he says the deputy hit him with a flashlight during a search of his home.

Bodies Of Elderly Couple Found

FRANKLIN, N.C. (AP) — An elderly couple missing from their home since last week apparently died of exposure after their car became stuck on a remote, abandoned logging road, Macon County officials say.

The bodies of James C. Scobie, 84, and his wife, Florence, 82, were found Wednesday about 7 miles from their home.

"There does not appear to be any foul play," Macon County Sheriff Homer Holbrooks said. He said autopsies would be performed to determine the exact cause of death.

James Houston, a member of the Macon Search and Rescue Squad, said he once rode motorcycles along the old logging road and decided to check it. The road is only used by an occasional hunter, Houston said.

The road is so rough that only rescue squad vehicles using four-wheel drive could reach the scene.

Scobie was lying across the front seat of his car with his feet wedged between the open door and the car's body on the driver's side of the vehicle, Houston said. Mrs. Scobie was outside the car lying face up under the open passenger's door of the two-door automobile.

The Scobies were lightly dressed and he had one arm under his T-shirt as if he were trying to take it off.

A flashlight was next to Mrs. Scobie's body as were the thick glasses she had to wear because of cataracts.

The automobile was nearly sideways on the logging road, which is strewn with huge rocks. Both rear wheels were bogged down due to spinning and the car had a light coating of snow on it. There was a light snowfall in the area Monday.

Rescuers speculated that the couple became disoriented and made their way onto the road. After becoming stuck, they stayed with the vehicle and may have frozen to death.

Family members and friends said the couple was suffering from failing memory and in recent months appeared at times to become disoriented.

There is a home 300 yards above the logging road, but the occupants did not see or hear anything out of the ordinary, Holbrooks said.

The Scobie's closest neighbor, Gertrude Hughes, said she had no idea why the Scobies would have been on the road unless they had gotten lost.

A search was begun for the couple Monday after neighbors reported they had not been seen since Jan. 20.

Residents of the area where the Scobies were found said the temperature dropped into the teens during the past week and the temperature dipped nearly to zero during the past several days. There were also high winds in the area that would have put the chill factor well below zero.

James Ray Conrad filed the suit last week in U.S. District Court. The suit says that Thomas C. Evans Jr., 229, of Lexington hit Conrad on the head with a large flashlight Jan. 18, 1987, after Conrad tried to pull the officer out of a mobile home behind Conrad's home.

The suit also says that the county and Sheriff Paul R. McCrary directly or indirectly approved Evans' conduct and that McCrary knew that Evans had acted similarly before.

Bribery Plea

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — A former community services coordinator for Lenoir County will serve 60 days in prison for accepting a bribe, as part of a plea bargain struck in Lenoir County Superior Court.

James W. Fonville Jr., formerly with the N.C. Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, pleaded guilty to accepting a $150 bribe from Lynwood M. Chesnut in November 1986. Fonville agreed to let Chesnut not serve 50 hours of community service work.

Judge Richard Boner sentenced Fonville to two years in prison, with the sentence suspended for five years on five years supervised probation. As a condition of his probation, however, Fonville must serve 60 days active time in prison.

Fonville had been charged with a total of 11 counts of accepting a bribe, extortion, or obtaining property by false pretenses, in connection with five separate incidents. Ten of the counts were dismissed.

Guilty Plea

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A Fort Bragg soldier pleaded guilty Wednesday in Cumberland County Superior Court to second-degree murder in the shotgun death a year ago of a Pine Forest High School student.

Michael Charles Jackson, 25, was sentenced by Judge Lynn Johnson to 30 years in prison for the Feb. 19, 1987 death of John Wayne McNeill Jr., 18.

McNeill was killed after a shot was fired at a car in which he and four other youths were riding on a Fayetteville city street.

CAUTIOUS RIDE — A University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill student decided that riding a bike in the rain was possible. Holding the umbrella with one hand and steering with the other, he made a cautious trek across campus to his destination, safely and not too wet. (AP Laserphoto)

Black Mayors Cancel Meeting In Charlotte

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The National Conference of Black Mayors, which planned to hold its annual convention in Charlotte in April, has decided it will meet in Philadelphia instead.

The change in plans came after Charlotte voters ousted Harvey Gantt, the city's first black mayor, in balloting Nov. 3. On the same day, Philadelphia reelected Wilson Goode, that city's first black mayor.

"Our decision was based on that and nothing else," conference President John Smith said Wednesday.

Conference members voted at their 1987 convention to hold annual meetings only in cities headed by black mayors.

"Once they discovered one of their members was not going to be hosting the meeting, the bidding started again," said Smith, mayor of Prichard, Ala.

As many as 165 mayors and other officials will meet June 15-19 in Philadelphia, which beat out Atlanta, Chicago, Detroit and Los Angeles.

Smith said the group will honor Gantt in some way at the meeting.

Crawford Withdraws

RALEIGH (AP) — State Rep. Jim Crawford, D-Granville, has withdrawn from the Democratic race for lieutenant governor, saying there are so many campaigns this year "the dollars tend to dry up."

"We are truly in the age of big-money politics," Crawford said Wednesday. "I think it's a sad day, not just from my standpoint, but from the standpoint that capable candidates cannot run, and I'm fairly well off."

"When I get kicked out of a race like this because of dollars it's very serious," he said. "I think we should pay some attention to that."

Crawford said it would have taken an additional $500,000 to run a campaign and stay in the race until the Super Tuesday primary March 8. He said his debt already is "approaching $100,000."

Crawford, 49, a six-year veteran of the General Assembly, said he decided Tuesday night to withdraw from the race, but said he had "struggled with it for about two weeks."

Democrats Draft Counter Proposal For U.S. Aid To Nicaraguan Rebels

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has begun a personal lobbying campaign for $36 million in new aid to the rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist government, but House Democrats are drafting their own rival proposal that leaves out any money for weapons.

The opposing plans were being pushed hard with a showdown House vote on the Reagan proposal just a week away. The outcome is crucial to the existence of the rebels, known as Contras, who would get $3.6 million in lethal aid under the Reagan proposal.

"It's now or never," said Rep. Mickey Edwards, R-Okla., a leader of pro-Contra forces in the House. "We cannot afford a defeat on this aid package."

Reagan held a series of meetings with undecided lawmakers on Wednesday, and more meetings were scheduled for today. The House will vote on the president's aid proposal on Feb. 3 and if it passes, the Senate will vote the next day.

"I didn't come to Washington to preside over the communization of Central America," Reagan said in a speech announcing the proposal.

With the Contras and the Sandinistas beginning direct cease-fire talks today in Costa Rica, Reagan said only continued support for the rebels will keep the negotiations going.

The Reagan package would give a total of $36.2 million to the rebels to last them from March 1, when current aid runs out, until the end of June.

Of the total, roughly $20 million would go for transportation of supplies to Contra troops in the field inside Nicaragua, and another $12 million or so would buy supplies such as food, clothing, medicine and communications gear.

The most controversial part is $3.6 million for ammunition and Redeye anti-aircraft missiles. That money would be held in escrow until March 31, when it would be up to Reagan to decide whether to release it to the rebels.

The decision would be based on whether a cease-fire is in place between the Contras and the Sandinista government, and whether the president believes the two sides have bargained in good faith. Reagan also promised to consult personally with the presidents of the region's four democracies — Costa Rica, El Salvador, Honduras and Guatemala — before letting the lethal aid flow.

A proposal announced Wednesday by the Contras calls for putting the military portion of the request in escrow for 30 days, with an early March deadline for an end to the six years of fighting.

The House vote is the first and most difficult test for the plan. The votes are about evenly split, with some three dozen members remaining undecided. Many of those "swing" members interviewed appeared undecided between fears that new lethal aid would disrupt a fragile Central American peace process and fears that abandoning the Contras would free the Sandinistas to renege on promises of reform.

A group of centrist Democrats, apparently with some support from House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, began drafting an alternative aid plan designed to keep the Contras alive without escalating the fighting, as they charged Reagan's plan would do.

The rival plan would allocate about $10 million to buy food, clothing and medicine for the rebel forces for three months while cease-fire talks go on between the two sides, said Rep. Thomas Carper, D-Del., one of its supporters, who said he had decided to oppose Reagan's proposal.

Under the Democrats' plan, the aid would continue to be delivered by the Central Intelligence Agency, as is currently done, but shipments would be inspected to make sure no weapons are included in the airdrops, Carper said.

"A number of us feel we have a moral obligation not to hang the Contras out to dry," said Carper.

In addition, the Democrats' plan would call for U.S. representatives to convene talks with all five Central American countries to discuss "a wide range of security issues," including the elimination of Soviet, Cuban or other foreign military advisers and bases in the region and reductions in the size of armed forces.

Wright, who had met with Reagan at the White House earlier Wednesday, said he told the president his request "would be rejected if there were any significant military money in it." He added that he considered $3.6 million to be "significant."

House Majority Whip Tony Coelho, D-Calif., said a humanitarian aid package could be a first step toward converting the Contras from a military force to a political opposition.

Hospital Profits On Medicare Fall

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hospitals that treat Medicare patients saw their profits from that care decline sharply during 1986-87, a drop from $4.9 billion in the previous year to $3.6 billion, a Health and Human Services Department official says.

Overall, the profit margin for Medicare patient treatment fell from 14.4 percent in 1985-86 to 9.6 percent in 1986-87, Richard P. Kusserow, the HHS inspector general, said Wednesday.

That worked out to an average decline of 31 percent for each of the 5,288 hospitals participating in the system, from $992,831 to $687,203, he said.

Kusserow noted that before 1984, hospitals gained no profits whatever from the treatment of Medicare patients.

"Up until 1984, Medicare only paid the cost of treating our patients, no profit at all, only costs," he said. "In 1984, (Congress) basically said they would set the rates and if you can operate more efficiently and are able to treat our patients less expensively than the rates, you can keep the difference."

Hospitals averaged a profit margin of 14 percent in 1984-85, and the margin increased slightly in the next year, prompting Congress to make some changes in the payment system, he said.

"It seems that in the third year of the payments, the adjustments are beginning to appear," he said. "You still have the situation that anything that is above zero is theoretically more than they were getting under the former system."

Kusserow said he didn't expect the profit margin to return to zero.

Another finding by Kusserow was that in addition to smaller profit margins, fewer hospitals are making any profit at all from treating Medicare patients.

"In the first two years ... there was an average of 80 percent of the hospitals registering profits, 20 percent registering no profits or losses," he said. "Now we have two-thirds registering profits, and one-third are not making profits or losing money."

The most important factor in the profitability of treating Medicare patients in any particular hospital is the percentage of beds occupied by program beneficiaries, he said.

"The higher the percentage ... the more profit there is," Kusserow said. "Translated, what that means is that there's a tendency for large urban hospitals ... to make more money. So the winners tend to be large urban hospitals and teaching hospitals that still have an add-on (payment from the government) for education costs. The hospitals that are less likely to be doing well ... are those that have very few of our beneficiaries, and they tend to be small rural hospitals."

NEW YORK (AP) — Two companies have achieved scientific triumphs by creating appetizing substitutes for fat, but they still must win the battle for the hearts, minds and stomachs of the American public.

NutraSweet Co. on Wednesday unveiled the fat substitute Simplese and emphasized that it was all-natural. But company executives still faced questioning from reporters who wanted to know why it had not received approval of the Food and Drug Administration.

Simplese does not require FDA approval because it is ordinary protein. It has not been chemically altered, only changed in size and shape to give it the feeling of fat.

But several experts said the questioning reflected a widespread skepticism in the general public — even cynicism — about the application of technology to food.

Procter & Gamble Co. has encountered the same difficulties in promoting olestra, its own fat substitute, which was announced last May. Olestra must clear the hurdle of FDA approval because it is a synthetic substance, made of ordinary sugar and fatty oils.

"People are afraid of what they don't understand and they're afraid of things that are made out in headline news as possibly being damaging," said David Williams, a principal in the New England Consulting Group of Westport, Conn.

Despite that fear, though, Americans do end up buying processed foods because of the special features they offer, such as a longer shelf life, fewer calories or better taste, Williams said.

The task of Cincinnati-based Procter & Gamble and Monsanto Co.'s Skokie, Ill.-based NutraSweet is to convince consumers that the product is safe enough to try, he said. After that, he said, the products' special attributes should make them successful. That is what has happened with NutraSweet, the most popular low-calorie artificial sweetener.

Procter & Gamble probably faces a bigger public-relations task because it cannot make the claim that olestra is all-natural, even though the ingredients that make it up are natural.

The Center for the Science in the Public Interest has asked the FDA to reject olestra, contending that P&G used "blatant manipulation of the data" in its petition and should have conducted safety studies on mice as well as rats.

Any possible controversy over olestra might rub off on Simplese, even though the products are entirely different.

Simplese must contend with "the normal paranoia associated with any new food product," said Theodore Semegran of Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc.

Fat Substitutes Fighting Battle Over Confidence

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has begun a personal lobbying campaign for $36 million in new aid to the rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist government, but House Democrats are drafting their own rival proposal that leaves out any money for weapons.

The opposing plans were being pushed hard with a showdown House vote on the Reagan proposal just a week away. The outcome is crucial to the existence of the rebels, known as Contras, who would get $3.6 million in lethal aid under the Reagan proposal.

"It's now or never," said Rep. Mickey Edwards, R-Okla., a leader of pro-Contra forces in the House. "We cannot afford a defeat on this aid package."

Reagan held a series of meetings with undecided lawmakers on Wednesday, and more meetings were scheduled for today. The House will vote on the president's aid proposal on Feb. 3 and if it passes, the Senate will vote the next day.

"I didn't come to Washington to preside over the communization of Central America," Reagan said in a speech announcing the proposal.

With the Contras and the Sandinistas beginning direct cease-fire talks today in Costa Rica, Reagan said only continued support for the rebels will keep the negotiations going.

Passengers Fume As Agents Search Famed Liner For Drugs

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — While hundreds of fuming passengers waited for hours Wednesday, U.S. Customs officials searched the luxury liner Queen Elizabeth 2 from stem to stern in an aggressive new policy aimed at Colombia, where the ship had docked 10 days ago.

Five specially trained dogs ran through the 68,000-ton ship, sniffing the mountains of luggage the 1,265 disembarking passengers were bringing into the United States. More than 70 Customs inspectors painstakingly examined every suitcase, handbag and camera case.

The haul?

Slightly more than one gram of marijuana, two switchblades, 15 "agricultural objects" including apples and oranges, several pornographic magazines, a few undecorated bottles of liquor and a silver creamer and shower cap that had been filched from the ship, according to Customs officials.

Despite the meager results, officials defended the massive search as necessary to make the point that the drug situation in Colombia is out of control and that people, planes and vessels coming from Colombia can expect a rigorous search upon entry in this country.

Most-Wanted Fugitive Captured

MIAMI (AP) — A convicted torture-killer and "Dixie Mafia" drug kingpin who was one of the nation's most wanted fugitives was captured without incident in the suburb where he was raised, authorities said.

Richard Cravero, a pistol tucked in his belt, jumped from a car when it was stopped Wednesday afternoon in suburban Miami Shores. He was surrounded by U.S. marshals and Metro-Dade police in four cars and did not draw his weapon, authorities said.

Cravero was scheduled to appear today before a U.S. magistrate.

Cravero, 44, led the so-called Dixie Mafia gang that was believed responsible for 35 murders and disappearances tied to drug trafficking in south Florida in the late 1960s and early 1970s.

He escaped from Union Correctional Institution in Raiford on Sept. 8, where he was serving three consecutive life terms for multiple murders, said Stanley E. Morris, director of the Marshals Service.

Cravero was put on the Marshals Service's "15 Most Wanted" list on Dec. 17 and had been sought by a task force since then, said spokesman Steve Boyle.

"He's a real bad one," Boyle said.

His criminal convictions date to 1970 when he was found guilty on charges including first-degree murder, aggravated assault and intimidation, as well as drug and weapons offenses, Morris said.

"One of his convictions was for the 1974 Valentine's Day murder in Dade County, Fla., in which the victim was shot 23 times," Morris said in a news release from Washington, D.C.

Cravero also is suspected in other murders that involved the use of barbed-wire around the necks of victims and torture with locking pliers, Morris said.

Cravero also faces federal sentences totaling 50 years for convictions on charges of possession of explosives, possession and distribution of dangerous drugs and conspiracy to procure perjured testimony.

Amish Win Fight To Halt Highway

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Pennsylvania's largest Amish community has won a fight to keep one more modern intrusion from their rural haven.

Gov. Robert P. Casey's administration announced Wednesday that a new highway will not be built through the Amish farmlands east of Lancaster, which is 66 miles west of Philadelphia.

"He has determined that we will not build a new highway in any corridor that will bisect the Amish farming community or cause a major disruption to the Amish life style," said Transportation Secretary Howard Yerusalam.

"We're glad to hear that," said John Goeke, secretary of Lancaster Alliance for New Directions, or LAND, a group formed to fight the highway. "We're happy they're not going to destroy one of our main resources."

For the past several months, the state has been considering alternatives to upgrading U.S. 30 and Pennsylvania 23, both of which cross the largely Amish countryside.

Amish farmers, breaking with their custom of keeping a distance from worldly affairs, attended hearings in Lancaster County to show their opposition. At a hearing in September, about 1,000 Amish turned out in silent protest, the largest crowd of the normally retiring "plain people" in county memory.

Lancaster County is home to about 16,000 Old Order Amish, one of several large Amish communities in Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana. Amish shun modern conveniences such as motor vehicles and electricity, instead favoring horses, buggies and plain black and white clothing based on 17th and 18th century European styles.

JACKSON AND THE MAYOR — The Rev. Jesse Jackson, candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, is introduced to well-wishers by Greenville Mayor Ed Carter Wednesday night. Jackson visited the

must stop abandoning people once we use them up."

•Health Care: "In a hospital somebody's dying tonight in the admitting office, because they can't prove they're sick enough."

•Economic rights: "Civil rights without economic rights is like having to swim in a pool without water. It's all dressed up and no place to go."

Jackson praised the working family's struggle against what he described as an unsympathetic bureaucratic administration.

"When a mother has five children and two pork chops, she will not go to a computer and conclude she has three excess children. She will cut two pork chops into five pieces and make gravy."

Besides an opportunity to share his political ideas, Jackson used the occasion to urge voters to register and to collect contributions to his campaign.

He instructed those who weren't registered to stand and, once identified, directed them to a registration booth set up at the back of the church.

In the hallways, Jackson campaign buttons, portraits and T-shirts were sold.

For those at the church who were unable to be accommodated in the sanctuary, the speech was broadcast into other rooms of the church.

Also speaking at the rally were Dr. Andrew Best; the Rev. Arlee Griffin; Willie Riddick; Bruce Lightner, president of the Jesse Jackson for president campaign in North Carolina, and Greenville Mayor Ed Carter.

Directing the music was Johnny Wooten, whose songs — including "The Ballad of Jesse Jackson" — have been adopted as official Jackson campaign music.

The first box of Crayola crayons was sold in 1903. It cost a nickel and contained eight colors.

Praise

Two elected officials had praise today for the Rev. Jesse Jackson's visit to Greenville and a speech at the Cornerstone Baptist Church Wednesday.

"I thought he was great," said Mayor Ed Carter. "I am impressed with his knowledge of worldwide events, his intelligence, and his ability to articulate concerns and matters of the humanitarian aspects of life."

Carter, who said he had met Jackson in 1984, said Wednesday's appearance by Jackson was a significant event in the community.

"He is the leading Democratic contender for the presidency and I feel honored to have represented Greenville in receiving him to our community. I think the general interest and enthusiasm displayed by the citizens of Greenville towards Rev. Jackson makes me extremely proud."

"Jesse Jackson is one of the finest orators in the country," said Council member Bill Hadden. "He has a very attractive charisma and a seriousness of intent that I believe is contagious."

Hadden also said he feels Jackson is in the mainstream of Democratic thought and philosophy.

"It was an exciting evening at Cornerstone," he added.

Widows Emulate 'Girls'

DEMOCRATIC GALA — Democratic Women of Pitt County sponsored a premier gala Wednesday night on "Democrats, Leadership For Our Times." The Rev. Jesse Jackson, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for president, was a special guest. Several candidates for state offices and local politicians were present. Betsy Leech, president of the group, right, is pictured with Kathy Taft, secretary, and Sen. Tony Rand, a candidate for lieutenant governor. (Reflector photo by Thomas Forrest)

By JUDY BRADFORD
South Bend Tribune
SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — For Peggy Callander, the most difficult time of the day was early morning. "After my husband died, I dreaded getting up because I knew I would be all alone."

Callander doesn't have to worry about that any more. She is a member of WNEO (We Need Each Other), an Indiana Partnership.

They also call themselves "The Golden Girls" of South Bend.

Callander and three other widows live together in a custom-made condominium where they share happy moments, friends and relatives, as well as living space, food and expenses.

"It's great to be greeted when you walk through the door at night," says Callander, a first-grade teacher. "If you are sick or feeling down, there is someone there to help and care."

They have made arrangements to insure that no one partner is left holding the bag — should one, two or three of them die, remarry or leave for any other reason.

They have carefully arranged their finances so that all expenses are shared equally, and so that there is money left over for emergencies.

They have even come to an agreement on household duties, including cooking. And cleaning up doesn't take long when everyone pitches in.

"We think this is the answer for a lot of people," says Eleanor Devault, president of the partnership. "It certainly has been for us."

Jean Friedline is vice president, Callander is secretary and Gay Hezinski is treasurer.

The idea started one cold winter night in January 1987 when Friedline casually said, "Wouldn't it be nice if we were like 'The Golden Girls'?" In "The Golden Girls," an NBC-TV comedy series, several older, single women live together.

Their arrangement emulates the television series in one more way:

Callander's mother, Irene Gieb, 85, lives with them. They also have a teen-ager in the house — Friedline's daughter, 17-year-old Roberta Friedline.

The four partners first became acquainted through the Widowed to Widowed group in South Bend. After the idea sprang into Friedline's head, the four decided to seek out a Realtor who would help them design a condominium to suit their needs.

"We wanted the condominium concept, because we didn't want to be mowing lawns and shoveling snow in the winter," says Davault.

The idea grew into reality in steamroller fashion.

Tooth-Grinding Is Serious

DEAR ABBY: This is for "No Sleeping Beauty," married three months but getting no sleep because her husband, "Frank," grinds his teeth in his sleep. You suggested that Frank wear a teeth guard at night — but you weren't firm enough. "Bruxism" (teeth grinding) places a tremendous amount of stress on one's jaw and can damage the disc in the joint. This results in a condition known as "temporomandibular joint" (TMJ) syndrome.

I should know — I was a tooth grinder, and it nearly ruined my life. It's an incredibly painful condition. I couldn't chew. I had severe headaches and muscle spasms in my face, neck and back. I lost my job and nearly lost my husband. For two years the doctors didn't know what was wrong with me. I was suicidal because of the pain and was even sent to a mental health facility!

Eventually the condition was correctly diagnosed. I had three surgeries and spent four years undergoing various treatments.

So, if Frank thinks all he has to worry about is his teeth, he is sorely mistaken. He should make an appointment immediately with a dentist or oral surgeon trained in the treatment of TMJ. And as for not being able to sleep with an appliance in his mouth, consider the alternatives:

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

three operations. $250,000 in medical bills and six years in hell! — BEEN THERE IN ARIZONA

DEAR BEEN THERE: Your valuable testimonial should be enough to alert "No Sleeping Beauty" to the seriousness of her husband's teeth grinding. But here are some first-hand kudos for a "night guard" from a lady who is a user and a pusher:

DEAR ABBY: "No Sleeping Beauty" should get her husband to a dentist now if she has to hog-tie him to do it! People who grind their teeth in their sleep are in for serious dental and jaw problems.

I know. I wear a night guard every night to keep me from clenching my teeth and giving me more dental/jaw problems than I already have. A night guard is easy to wear. Since it is custom-made by a dentist, one can hardly feel it when it is in. I can even talk coherently with it in my mouth.

Taking the impression to make one takes less than two minutes. It's completely painless, and a plastic guard cost me a little less than $50.

"Frank" is going to ruin his jaw if he doesn't get a night guard. He could develop arthritis of the jaw, earaches, facial pain, nerve damage and a host of other problems, not to mention losing his natural teeth. And don't kid yourself — false teeth are no substitute for the real thing. My friends with false teeth have told me so. — VIVIAN ONKEN-POLSON, OMAHA

DEAR ABBY: A problem occurred at my work place, and we would all like your input. This office planned a formal sit-down Christmas party.

The day before the party, my boss asked me who I was bringing. I replied, "Nancy (made up name), my best friend."

Since I am also a female, he said it would be inappropriate — wasn't there some man I could bring? Since my boyfriend was going to be out of town, and Nancy was my best friend, I didn't see why I couldn't bring her.

Everyone except my boss thought he was wrong. He said the policy for future parties will depend on your decision. — OMAHA

DEAR OMAHA: I cast my vote with "everyone else" — and please tell your boss I'm honored that he's permitted me to set the policy for his future office parties.

Robbie Tugwell Gives Program

Robbie Tugwell, energy services supervisor of Greenville Utilities Commission, spoke to the Pirate Charter chapter of the American Business Women's Association. His topic was the new Energy Efficient Rebate Program.

In explaining that all Greenville Utilities Commission residential customers are eligible to apply in the new rebate program, Tugwell said that funds are limited and can be discontinued at any time. Also there are limits per customer or builder.

"If you're planning to purchase a new heating/cooling system, you can cash in on our cash back rebate program. If you buy certain high-efficient heating/cooling equipment between Dec. 9, 1987, and June 15, 1988, we'll pay you a cash rebate. The amount depends on the type and efficiency of the equipment you select. It's one way of saying 'thanks' for working with us to keep everyone's utility bills down," said Tugwell.

PCAIW Has Awards Night

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Lifestyle Editor

Insurance highlights during the past three years were given by N.C. Insurance Commissioner James E. Long at the Awards-Bosses' Night of Pitt County Association of Insurance Women.

"There are a number of things that we're proud of — developments that have come about to the benefit of agents, insurers and the consumer. I, for one, don't believe that the interests of consumers are dealt with exclusively to the detriment of the industry, or vice versa," said Long.

"Although it is an instrument of the people and I am their elected commissioner, the Department of Insurance is there for all people — consumers as well as the insurance industry and that certainly includes the agents. I see my job as helping to facilitate, where necessary and where possible, the relationship between industry and consumer, and even between one segment of the industry and another," he said.

"What is to be strived for is a fine balance, a balance in which insurers and agents can earn a fair return and the consumer enjoys protection from risk that is affordable and available," Long said.

"Early in my administration, I recognized the need for an early warning system to determine the financial health of insurers — beyond that information provided by the NAIC. We needed a system that would flag first those companies that required the most attention. All we needed was the computer software. The first phase of this effort, the ability to rank insurance companies in order of urgency, should be in place in the near future," he said.

He further outlined advantages and uses of the computer system. "Probably the best news for all of you is that it has shortened the time it takes to process your agent's license application from an average 47 days to 24 hours," he said.

The Department of Insurance has opened its regional offices in

Imagination Came With Kids

I was born with the imagination of a food blender. Honest. As a child I never made up stories with my dolls or turned in little essays about life. Even when I had kids and they asked me to tell them a story, I relied on the originality of someone else.

All of that changed dramatically the day my children started going out without me to supervise them.

Overnight, I became a woman who created scenarios faster than Stephen King ... and twice as bizarre. If one of the kids had taken the car out into the night, I'd lie in bed and imagine that his engine died on a dark, lonely road and that a van came out of nowhere with an evil man behind the wheel who had asthma and rattled when he talked. He would offer him a ride and, after he accepted, would drive him to a wharf (an Arizona wharf!) and sell him into white slavery.

On a given night, the sound of a siren was enough to get me out of my warm bed to shuffle through photo albums for a current picture to give to the police when they called.

When they were invited to spend the night at a friend's house, my imagination kept me awake all night long. I anticipated a call from the mother of the friend, who would say, "Are you the mother of our house guest? The one who belched during grace, talked with food in his mouth, and when I passed him the mashed potatoes said, 'What do you say?' he looked blank and replied, 'Do you want any more or can I eat from the dish?'"

And when I said, "Yes, it sounds like my son," she replied curtly, "We are sending him home in a cab. Don't ever speak to me again. All this will be put down in an ad and published on the front page of every major paper in the country."

I don't know how many of you have ever had a child who announced, "I am going to travel through Europe this summer by myself," but I'm here to tell you no mother should ever have to endure those nightly mind games.

At Wits End

Our son left one June with instructions from us to call at least once a week so that "when you disappear from the face of the earth we will know where to tell Interpol to start searching for you." During the next three weeks when we didn't hear a word, I imagined that he had rented a bicycle, been seduced by a barmaid, been kidnaped by drug dealers who planted drugs in his backpack, and when he was caught was deported to a Turkish prison. That was only the first night. I made up a new one every night following that.

In the middle of the fourth week, the kid called to say, "I would have called sooner, but I couldn't figure out how to use the phones."

He'll have more imagination ... when he has children.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices moved higher in early trading today. At 10 a.m., the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks stood at 1,926.56, up 15.42. Advancers outpaced decliners by about to 3 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 687 stocks higher, 267 lower and 455 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 26.48 million shares. Once again, stocks appeared to be jumping in step with the bond market — at least for now — as bonds continued surging ahead after chalking up hefty gains Wednesday. Although a stock market advance fizzled in afternoon bouts of program selling Wednesday, the fundamental reason behind both early rallies remained: a belief that interest rates may be headed lower.

Report

But "there were all kinds of things explored," Foust said. "That was simply one of them.

"One of the pumps in the hat rack area showed the effects of high pressure gas on some of the metal while the metal was in a liquid state. The problem we had," Foust said, "was trying to decide whether the aircraft was still in flight" when the "pudding" occurred, "or on the ground. We could never prove beyond a reasonable doubt one way or the other."

According to the accident report the helicopter's engine had been shut down before the crash.

"The throttle was in the shutoff position," Foust said. An analysis of tape recordings of radio traffic between the helicopter and the hospital, and between air traffic controllers at Cherry Point Marine Corps Air Station, suggests that the engine was not running in the final seconds before the crash, according to the accident report.

"I suspect he (Reynolds) had no precise idea where the fire was except behind him," Foust said. "By shutting down the engine ... that's one source of heat and fire you want to get rid of immediately."

But according to Foust, "there was no mechanical problem" with EastCare's engine.

"We hate to go after an accident and can't come up with a final item that you can pinpoint. It's totally frustrating," according to Foust.

According to the accident report, the crew and patient aboard the helicopter died from injuries received when the aircraft hit the ground.

The NTSB report said a small fire extinguisher onboard the helicopter had been used.

Tribe Takes 70-63 Victory Burzell, W&M Drill Pirates

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
Greg Burzell drilled in five of six 3-point baskets and William & Mary destroyed East Carolina on the backboards to claim a 70-63 Colonial Athletic Association basketball victory Wednesday night in Minges Coliseum.

The Indians shot well throughout the game and held the Pirates to a miserable 37.5 percent in the second half while rolling up a decisive 36-21 advantage in rebounding. Led by Mark Batzel, who pulled 11, the Indians held a 12-6 lead on offensive rebounds and generally held the Pirates to one attempt each time down the court.

Burzell, who scored a team high 22 points, made two of his 3-point baskets after a 2-pointer to give the Indians the edge at the end of a hard-fought game that wasn't over until Tim Trout hit on both ends of a one-and-one with 19 seconds left to make it 68-63.

Curtis Pride then got a steal with nine seconds left to make the final margin on a layup.

"I've got to give William & Mary credit," Pirate coach Mike Steele said. "Batzel and Trout are seniors and they gave them good leadership. Burzell hit some big shots and the 3-half. The first of Lose's free throws came when Trout grabbed the rim of his own basket trying to tap back a shot and was whistled with a technical.

But the Pirates couldn't hold the lead, despite the opportunity. William & Mary came back to regain it at 39-38 and after an exchange of baskets, upped the lead to 43-40. ECU came back to tie it up, 43-43, before Burzell hit a layup and Trout made a short baseline jumper for a 47-43 lead.

Baskets by Jimmy Hinton and a 3-pointer by Hill put ECU back up, 48-47, and the lead bounced back and forth from there to the end.

East Carolina held the lead at 59-58 on a Stanley Love tip-in with 4:29 left, but Burzell hit an 18-footer to return the lead to the Indians, 60-59. Hill returned the lead to the Pirates, 61-60, but Burzell canned the first of two 3-pointers for a 63-61 lead. Lose scored off a breakaway to tie it at 63-all with 2:34 left.

Burzell came back with another 3-pointer for a 66-63 and the Pirates failed to score again.

"We were playing a triangle and two defense," Steele said, "and one of the people we were guarding was Burzell. Your guess is as good as mine as to how he got as open as he did (for the shots)."

Trout added 19 points to Burzell's total for the Indians.

East Carolina was led by Hill with 25 points. He played only 23 minutes as he again got into foul trouble although Steele was somewhat questioning of their validity. "With our lack of size, the only thing we can do is square up and get our hands up," Steele said. "For three years now, we've been hearing how the officials are 'emphasizing the principle of verticality.' Well, I'm not sure they do."

Lose added 18 points for the Pirates. "We had a great crowd tonight, and I'm disappointed that we've had two games now that we could have won and we didn't. But if we continue to get this kind of support, I think we will beat some people.

"But we've got to get over the idea of playing hard, doing better than expected and coming close. We have to win a game. We can't be satisfied with doing better than we're supposed to and being happy to come close. We have to get the idea in our heads that we can beat people."

The Pirates, who fall to 6-11 with the loss (2-4 in CAA play), get their next chance on Saturday when they travel to Wilmington to face the UNCW Seahawks.

Elsewhere in other Wednesday action in the CAA, the University of Richmond defeated UNC-Wilmington, 73-66, to gain sole possession of first place. George Mason moved into second place with an 86-85 overtime victory over American.

And Navy won its first CAA game of the season with a 73-63 victory over James Madison.

Cardiac Pack Running Again

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.

The 1988 version of North Carolina State's "Cardiac Pack" is up and running.

For the second time this season, the Wolfpack has captured an Atlantic Coast Conference game by the skin of its teeth, this one an 81-79 victory over Maryland on Vinny Del Negro's jumper with two seconds left.

It was Brian Howard's tap at the buzzer in Atlanta that gave the Wolfpack a 76-74 triumph over Georgia Tech 10 days ago.

"It was an easy shot," Del Negro said. "Chris found me. I was open and it went in."

After rallying from a 79-69 deficit with four minutes left to tie the game at 81, Maryland missed a chance to take the lead when Rudy Archer missed a 3-point shot with 10 seconds remaining. Chris Corchiani then took 66-64 victory over Virginia Wednesday night.

Coles put the Hokies on top, 64-62, on a jumper with 34 seconds to play. A goal-tending call on Roy Brow gave Virginia the tying basket, but Virginia's John Crotty fouled Coles to set up the winning free throws.

Wally Lancaster led Virginia Tech with 20 points and Coles had 16. Virginia got 23 points from Mel Kennedy and 17 from John Johnson.

Tonight, Wake Forest takes on North Carolina at Greensboro as the Tar Heels try to take a half-game lead on the Blue Devils heading into the weekend.

The Demon Deacons are 1-4 in the ACC, that victory in an upset of then-20th-ranked N.C. State last Wednesday. Coach Bob Staak is approaching the Tar Heels in the same way he looked at Duke before last Saturday, only he doesn't want his team to become preoccupied with J.R. Reid, the league's leading scorer at 20 points per game.

"I don't think you can over-compensate for J.R. Reid and forget all the other people," Staak said. "Like Duke, they throw nine people at you."

The Tar Heels should have Jeff Lebo and Ranzino Smith in the backcourt to face the Demon Deacons, but likely will not have Kevin Madden. During practice Wednesday, Madden sprained his ankle and was doubtful for the game in Greensboro.

State Cancels Baseball, Too

N.C. State University, reportedly concerned about further fan squabbles, has canceled this year's two baseball meetings between NCState and East Carolina.

The cancellation grew out of the post-game celebration at Carter-Finley Stadium this fall after East Carolina defeated the Wolfpack, 32-14. A number of fans crashed through a fence at the end of the field by the grassy hill and then tore down the goal posts at both ends of the field.

A few days later, N.C. State canceled the 1989 football meeting between the two schools. Since then, new athletic director Dave Hart has said that unless N.C. State is willing to go to a home-and-home series between the two schools in football, the Pirates would look elsewhere for games.

State has, at least at this time, refused to consider a home-and-home basis for the game. All previous games were played in Raleigh.

According to a State publication, the baseball games are the latest casualties of the continuing rift between the two schools. The "Wolfpack Newsletter" stated that baseball coach Ray Tanner, "concerned over further fan squabbles, called ECU coach Gary Overton and canceled the game for this season."

It added that talks are continuing for future games between the two schools in the sport.

There had been earlier report of the cancellation of the series, but Overton said at that time that he had been trying to work out some agreement to play the games, but that apparently fell through.

"We're extremely disappointed that they canceled the games this year," Overton said last night. "This was done back in September, and we were concerned that it would be permanent, but they have indicated that they would like to continue the series. I expressed to them my disappointment and added that there would be no hard feelings about it. I'm looking forward to future games with them."

Overton said he was given several reasons for the cancellation, including the "riot" at the football game and the fear of further actions by fans of both teams at the baseball games. "They also told me that it was simply the decision of the athletic council which asked for a one-year moratorium," Overton said.

"We've never had an incident between our players or our fans, and I do not expect one," Overton added.

Hart said that he did not know that State had finalized the decision until questioned last night. "I will say that this came up before we made the decision to ask for home-and-home games with State in football, so I would assume that that had nothing to do with (the decision)."

East Carolina is scheduled to open the 1988 baseball season on Feb. 27 with a doubleheader against Virginia at Harrington Field.

Sees No Help Likely

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Arizona State Coach Steve Patterson has seen only one thing slow down Sean Elliott, the star forward for top-ranked Arizona. It's unlikely Patterson will have it at his disposal tonight.

"I think the flu in the first half against USC was probably the most effective," Patterson said, referring to the flu-ridden Elliott's scoreless 20 minutes against Southern California last

High Scorer

Robin House of Greenville Christian puts up a shot during action against Wilmington Christian on Tuesday night. House is scoring over 30 points a game for the Knights and is hopeful of a collegiate career. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis)

House Leads GCA Efforts

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

Greenville Christian has jumped out to a 14-0 record this season in large part due to the efforts high-scoring guard Robin House, though he'd be the last to admit it.

House, a 6-1 senior guard, is the leading prep scorer in the Tri-County area with an average of 30.1 points per game. This despite seeing every imaginable type of defense geared to stop him.

House is, arguably, one of the better players in the county but receives little attention outside the small Christian school where he attends classes. Basketball wise, he probably would receive more attention at a public school, but House said the choice to attend GCA was an easy one.

"Being a Christian, I wanted to get a Christian influence," he said. "I think that with this God-given talent, I should give something back."

And he has done just that. He has been the driving force behind the Knights' success. He plays guard for GCA and can score in a variety of ways, whether it be nailing a jumper from the outside or putting in an alley-oop from teammate Kevin Joyner. House is what ESPN basketball analyst Dick Vitale would call a "PTP," a prime-time player.

"A lot of people say he's just a leaper but he's a lot more," said GCA coach Dale Thatcher. "That's just one aspect. He shoots well from the line. He leads the team in assists. A lot of people say he's had to take a step down but people find out that (even though) our kids may not play above the rim like some of the larger schools, we're fundamentally sound.

"But I've watched a lot of the teams in the county play and our guys are a lot more court smart than those teams."

"We've gone to different camps and he hasn't really faced many who are as quick or as strong. There are guys who can jump higher. There are guys who can shoot better. But there is nobody that is as complete a player that we've played against."

House can turn a game around, as he showed Tuesday night against Wilmington Christian. He totaled 14 points by halftime but his Knights still trailed 39-35 so he took matters into his own hands in the third quarter, hitting seven baskets in a row without a miss to help GCA take a 58-49 lead into the final period. The Knights won the game going away, 81-66. House ended up with 44 points on 16-20 shooting from the field, including a 3-pointer, and 11-12 from the free throw line.

Despite the numbers, House said the Knights are not a one-man team.

"We have a design that set up plays for me and plays to set up our big men," he said. "We figure by the half, if our big man is dominating, they are going to help on him and he can dish it back out to me. I don't mind of somebody else gets 30 or 40 points."

But despite that, House more often than not ends up as high man for the Knights. And while that could be a problem for some teams, House said his teammates are the reason GCA has done well this year.

"My teammates tell me when to score," he said. "They tell me to shoot the ball. Even when I miss it, they still support me. Even when I'm off they tell me to just put it up and they'll get position."

"It's real helpful. I think that's the main reason we're undefeated so far. If our center or forward or anybody scores (I'm happy)."

And what has House meant to the GCA basketball program? Plenty according to Thatcher.

"He started varsity as a freshman," Thatcher said. "I knew he was going to be a player at that point and I wanted him to get the experience."

"I want future players to look at Robin as an example off the court. He's been a good leader. I want players who have talent to not feel like they are taking a step down to play at Greenville Christian."

While the level of talent in the East Carolina Christian Athletic Conference is nowhere near that of some of the public schools, House has shaken off some of that stigma by performing well at all-star camps during the summers, specifically the prestigious 5-Star and Prep Star camps that draw the top level players from all over the country.

House played at these camps along with some of the other top players in the county such as D.H. Conley's Phil Medlin, Ayden-Grifton's Eric Blount and Ronnell Peterson and Rose's Errol Wooten and Keyford Langley.

"(Initially, I was) scared," House said. (But) I used it to work harder. I figured I had nothing to lose coming from a small school. I just worked hard. I didn't know what to expect.

"I had to learn to move without the ball a lot more. I had two big people on my team and it was a lot different from here to there."

House said he hopes to play college ball, whether it be Division I or small college, but that his fate now rests in the hands of the recruiters.

"I think most of the colleges have already seen me play that are going to," he said. "I definitely want to play."

Conley Defeats Mariners, 70-62

BEAUFORT — D.H. Conley's Vikings took the lead midway through the first period and led the rest of the way en route to a 70-62 Coastal Conference basketball win over East Carteret Wednesday night.

The Valkyries also posted a win, squeezing out a 45-44 victory over the Lady Mariners.

Conley's boys trailed only once in the game, at 9-8, then outthit the Mariners by 14-6 the remainder of the first quarter to earn a 22-15 margin. The Vikings duplicated their total in the second period while East Carteret was able to improve by two. But that left Conley with a 44-32 halftime advantage.

East Carteret rallied in the third period, 15-12, cutting the lead to 56-44. The Mariners scored the next seven points to trim the lead to 56-51 before Conley caught fire again and scored the next six in a row to zoom back out to an 11-point lead that held most of the remaining time.

Phil Medlin again led the Vikes with 23 points while Paul Merritt added 13 and Terry Williams hit 10. Russell Reed led East Carteret with 18 while Billy Ellison had 14.

In the girls' game, East Carteret took a 10-5 lead in the first period and expanded that with a 12-8 margin in the second quarter. That gave the Lady Mariners a 22-13 lead to take into intermission.

But the Valkyries came to life in the second half. They outthit East Carteret, 12-11, in the third period to trail 33-25, then came up with a 20-11 margin in the final quarter. Lyndora Tyson scored the winning basket for the Valkyries.

Charlene Davenport led Conley with 15 points while Tyson added 13.

Erika Ellison led the Lady Mariners with 15 while Paula Johnson had 12 and Teena Robinson had 11.

Conley's boys are now 9-5 overall and 4-1 in Coastal play. The girls climb to 6-8 overall and 1-4 in the conference. Conley returns to action on Tuesday, hosting West Carteret.

CASUAL SEATING
CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (AP) — It's not quite a country fair backdrop but it's close: it's the setting for the Coe College home football games used this year.

There were temporary bleachers on a grassy hillside and many Coe rooters brought lawn chairs to sit on. The pressbox formerly was used as a warming house for ice skaters.

'Greek' Released From Hospital

DURHAM (AP) — Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder, the former CBS sportscaster, has been released in good condition from Duke Medical Center, a hospital spokesman said.

Snyder, 70, had checked into the hospital Friday, saying he did not feel well. Last summer, Snyder underwent several days of tests at Duke and doctors discovered a blockage in one of the arteries to his heart.

Details of Snyder's treatment were not released after his departure Monday.

Snyder was fired by CBS after saying in a television interview that blacks were superior athletes because of breeding and that the only place in sports left to whites was coaching.

UNC's Madden Listed As Doubtful

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — North Carolina sophomore forward Kevin Madden is listed as doubtful for Thursday's Atlantic Coast Conference game against Wake Forest after he sprained an ankle in practice, school officials announced.

Madden, injured Wednesday, has played in all 16 of North Carolina's games, and is averaging 9.6 points and 2.8 rebounds per game.

Against North Carolina State on Sunday, Madden replaced the injured Ranzino Smith and scored 16 points in the Tar Heels' 77-73 victory.

Thompson Glad He Went To School

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Now he's glad he did it. But last fall, when he did it, returning to the PGA Tour Qualifying School was not Leonard Thompson's idea of a prize.

"For a good time, it ranks right up there with having a heart transplant. But I'm glad I went. It meant a lot to me," said Thompson, who tees off today in the first round of the $650,000 Phoenix Open.

Thompson, 41, is beginning his 18th season of PGA Tour activity, and he's able to do that after finishing 17th at the Qualifying School.

Thompson, winner of two titles and more than $1 million in his career, had a poor 1987 season. He finished 147th on the money list and lost his place on the all-exempt list.

He faced the prospect of either returning to the school and competing against the young players attempting to gain a spot on golf's major circuit, or, in effect, dropping off the tour.

"I figured I could get in maybe 20, 22 tournaments," Thompson said. "But then I looked at the other side of it: what if I didn't? I didn't realize how much I wanted to be out here until it looked like I wouldn't be."

"I figured it was time to put up or shut up. But I didn't know if I was going to go through with it right up until I put the tee in the ground for the first round (of the qualifying competition)," he said.

"It was no fun, no fun at all. I'm standing there and the kids are snickering at me."

"I'm thinking, 'OK, if you're out here 17 years, you'll be doing good.' I'm glad that I wasn't too proud to go back. I just figured I'm going to have to beat these kids sooner or later."

"Like I said, it was time to put up or shut up," Thompson said.

He put up a score good enough to regain a place on the Tour, celebrating his return to competition last week with a last-round 64 that lifted him into a top-10 finish in the Bob Hope Classic. His $31,167 check was his largest in years and was more than half the amount he won all last season.

"It proved to me I can still play out here, still keep up with the kids," said Thompson, one of the 144 players who today began the chase for a $117,000 first prize over the TPC Course at Scottsdale.

'Skins Enjoy Underdog Role

SAN DIEGO (AP) — While the bookmakers are playing favorites with the Denver Broncos, the Washington Redskins are enjoying the role of Super Bowl underdog. After all, it's been good to them.

NFC champions for the third time in seven years, the Redskins lost as favorites against the Raiders in 1984, Washington's last appearance in the Super Bowl. The previous year, the Redskins were underdogs to Miami and won.

"Let them be the favorites," linebacker Neal Olkewicz said. "This team thrives on being the underdog. It's part of the Joe Gibbs philosophy to have us thinking we always are the underdog. It makes us want to get out there and prove ourselves even more."

Denver is a 3½-point favorite for Sunday's game, the Broncos' second straight Super Bowl. Denver was a 9-point underdog when beaten 39-20 by the New York Giants last January.

"We're not uncomfortable in that role," Steve Watson said. "We don't pay any attention to point spreads and lines because they don't mean anything to the game. I think we're favored because we had to prove something by getting back here. I don't think we got a lot of respect last year. It was the New York Giants this and New York Giants that."

"This year, we did prove ourselves by getting back a second time. That's why we're favored, not because we're a better team than Washington."

"The Broncos are having no trouble accepting the role as a favorite away from home, a rare occurrence. In Denver, where they have lost only one non-strike game in the last 17, the Broncos nearly always are favored."

"We played so much better the last six, seven games, we really just came together," Dave Studdard said. "The chemistry is better than last year, the confidence is higher."

"We may have been overshadowed by the Giants, but it didn't bother us. The less publicity, the less pressure."

"Being favored doesn't bother us. The drive to come back to the Super Bowl and win it this time is what I think they looked at. That's how they decided the line."

The Redskins figured they'd be considered an underdog, even though they are the only team to qualify for three Super Bowls in this decade.

"It doesn't matter how we rate or how they rate," Darryl Grant said. "It's how we feel about ourselves. We get told we're too old and too slow, but we wind up back in the Super Bowl."

As underdogs.

"I like it," Clint Didier said. "I think Denver deserves to be the favorite. They played in the toughest division and came out on top. They went through the playoffs scoring a lot of points, beating a really good Cleveland team."

Since both teams are relatively healthy and have performed well under playoff stress in close championship games, the spread derives from one factor — John Elway.

"He's a game-maker and a gamebreaker," said Grant, one of the Redskins' massive linemen who consistently must pressure the Denver quarterback. "He's an awesome quarterback."

So awesome that the oddsmakers place enough value on Elway that he means the difference on the betting sheets.

Jaguars Hold On To Top Pamlico

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central held off Pamlico in the final period to claim a 41-38 Eastern Plains Conference basketball victory over the Pamlico Hurricanes Wednesday night.

Farmville's girls rolled up a 65-20 victory in their meeting with Pamlico.

Farmville found itself trailing the 'Canes after the first period of the boys' game, 12-11. The action slowed in the second quarter, but Farmville managed a 6-2 advantage and the Jaguars took a 17-14 lead into the dressing rooms.

Farmville continued to build on the lead in the third quarter, 14-10, running its lead out to 31-24. In the final quarter, Pamlico rallied, 14-10, but fell short of catching up.

Jarvis Lang led Farmville with 14 points while J. Gibbs had 16 points to lead Pamlico.

The girls' game was not a contest for long. Farmville bulled out to a 16-3 lead in the first period and expanded that to 29-7 at halftime. In the third quarter, Farmville made it 51-9. The Lady Jags outhit Pamlico, 14-11, in the final quarter.

Brenda Reid led Farmville with 27 points while Kim Harrison added 11. No one scored in double figures for Pamlico.

Farmville's boys advance to 11-2 overall and 5-0 in the conference while the girls are now 6-8, 3-2.

Jamesville shot out to a 16-7 lead in the opening quarter of the boys' game. The Bullets continued to pull away from the Lakers in the second period, 17-11, building up a comfortable 33-18 lead to take into the dressing rooms.

The Bullets put the game on ice in the third quarter with a 21-9 margin. That expanded the score to 54-27. The Lakers were allowed a 23-18 comeback in the final period.

Eric Spruill led Jamesville with 22 points while James Demery added 13 and Craig Dickerson had 12. Oliver Spencer had 19 and Robert Spencer had 13 for the Lakers.

Jamesville held a 9-7 lead after one quarter of the girls' game, but Mattamuskeet came back with an 8-4 edge in the second for a 15-13 halftime lead.

The Bullets outhit the Lady Lakers, 12-4, in the third to regain the lead 25-19. But in the final period, Mattamuskeet came back to outhit the Bullets, 15-9. Jennifer Getchell actually tied it up for Jamesville at 34-34 on a wing shot with 1:30 left in regulation, but neither team could score again after that.

In the first overtime, Jamesville again tied it on a pair of free throws by Getchell with about a minute left to go, 36-36. Neither team scored in the second overtime, and Mattamuskeet shut out the Lady Lakers, 7-0, in the third overtime to take the win.

Val Clark had 14 points to lead Jamesville and was the only player in double figures in the game.

Members Of Study Panel Say Shuttle Still Unsafe

By PAUL RECER
AP Science Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Some members of the presidential commission that investigated the Challenger accident say the space shuttle is still "no damn good" and crews should be limited to only essential personnel.

Interviewed Wednesday, the day before the second anniversary of the Challenger accident, some commission members said they still doubt that all of the problems with the shuttle system can ever be corrected. They said it should be replaced as soon as possible with a safer space-craft.

"It's a sloppy, loose, budget-driven design," said David C. Acheson, a Washington lawyer who served on the commission. "It is no damn good."

Acheson said the best thing to do with the shuttle is to "get an advanced system going and retire it as soon as possible."

Robert W. Rummel, an aerospace engineer who was on the panel, said the shuttle had so many fundamental flaws that "I think it miraculous that we didn't have an accident before we did."

Challenger exploded 73 seconds after its Jan. 28, 1986 launch from the Kennedy Space Center in Florida. The seven-member crew was killed and the shuttle program was grounded.

President Reagan appointed a 13-member commission to investigate the tragedy. After a 120-day probe, it determined that Challenger was destroyed by a flawed solid rocket booster.

Before the accident, said Rummel, NASA had created the impression that space flight was "as safe as a Sunday afternoon drive" by allowing civilians to fly.

"Space travel should be recognized for what it is — a very hazardous undertaking," he said.

"The shuttle is a very dangerous system," agreed Joseph F. Sutter, an engineer and a vice president of Boeing Co. "There is no way that civilians should be allowed to fly on it. The crew should be only essential personnel and those should be single folks with no families."

Several of the commission members said the United States should never use the shuttle for satellites than could be launched on expendable rockets.

"Why risk lives just to launch a satellite?" Sutter asked.

Robert B. Hotz, former editor of Aviation Week and Space Technology, said that when his work on the commission was completed, he thought the National Aeronautics and Space Administration would be able to return to flight quickly.

"I thought they'd be flying last summer," he said. "I didn't think it would take this long."

Christopher C. Kraft, former director of the Johnson Space Center in Houston, lamented the delay and defended the shuttle during a symposium Wednesday night in Washington. He called the craft "a fantastic flying machine that will serve this country well. We just need to go fly it."

Kraft also said that "flying in commercial airplanes, driving on the freeway, or walking across the street have their risks, but we have all accepted the gains commensurate with these risks. Why should space flight be treated in any other way?"

NASA announced Wednesday that the resumption of shuttle flights is now set for Aug. 4. Some on the Challenger commission, however, said they expect more delays because NASA is still doing rocket tests.

"The nation is paying for what NASA should have done in the first place," said Rummel.

But another commission member, MIT professor Eugene E. Covert, said NASA engineers "are to be applauded" for the painstaking tests now being conducted.

Covert said that once the flaws are worked out, the shuttle will be a "remarkable product."

Sutter said he believes that private industry could have tested and cleared the shuttle for flight much faster than NASA because the space agency must clear red tape spun out by Congress and other government agencies. Government penny-pinching was a major reason for the space shuttle's difficulties, he said.

"Congress and the rest of the people in government are just as much at fault (as NASA)," said Sutter.

NASA Pays Tribute To Challenger Astronauts On Second Anniversary

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA workers tempered their enthusiasm for a new shuttle launch date with a silent tribute to the seven Challenger astronauts who died two years ago today.

Flags at the Kennedy Space Center were to be lowered to half-staff at 11:38 a.m., the moment Challenger roared off launch pad 39B on Jan. 28, 1986. For 73 seconds, the duration of the fatal flight, all activity was to stop in memory of the worst disaster in the history of space exploration.

At the same time, in Concord, N.H., students at Concord High School were to stand for a moment of silence in honor of Christa McAuliffe, the social studies teacher who died in the explosion that grounded the shuttle program.

"Everybody has their own, very silent way to remember and to rebuild themselves and that's the way it's been going," school Superintendent Mark Beauvais said Wednesday.

He said the low-key observance reflects how the community has tried to heal from the shuttle tragedy, respecting the privacy of McAuliffe's husband, Steven, 39; and children, Scott, 11; and Caroline, 7, who live in Concord.

"What we are dealing with now is the respect for the living, the three people who were closest to Christa," said Beauvais, who was in the bleachers at Cape Canaveral when Challenger blew up.

After the silent memorial, some Kennedy Space Center workers would return to preparing Discovery for launching on Aug. 4, the new date announced Wednesday by Rear Adm. Richard Truly, NASA's associate administrator for space flight. Others are working on Atlantis and Columbia for later flights.

Setting the date lifted the spirits of workers here who had been without a firm target since Dec. 29, when the space agency announced it was scrubbing a June 2 launch because of the failure of a nozzle part during a test firing of a solid fuel booster rocket like the one that caused the Challenger explosion.

Officials at the time estimated a six-to-10-week delay.

"Our morale here is high and everything is pulling together," said shuttle operations director Charles Gay. "That morale should hold up because these people live to process and launch space vehicles and the end is in sight."

Space Official Cites A 'Fear Of Action'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation that sent men to the moon nearly 20 years ago finds itself in "a dangerous and potentially disastrous launch crisis" because recent presidents have failed to provide leadership, says the former director of the Apollo program.

"Presidents Eisenhower, Kennedy, and Johnson were personally committed to the space program and they articulated that commitment to the Congress," says retired Gen. Samuel C. Phillips in remarks prepared for delivery tonight. "Unfortunately, we haven't seen a high level of presidential support since the end of the first Nixon administration."

Speaking on the second anniversary of the ill-fated Challenger mission, Phillips said "a fear of action, a gridlock to progress," plagues the space program. Not only has Congress cut NASA's budget, he said, it also has undermined the agency's ability to develop a realistic program through "micromanagement."

Phillips, a one-time director of the National Security Agency, is delivering the annual Wernher von Braun Memorial Lecture at the National Air and Space Museum.

Coalition Challenges FCC Decency Standards As Vague, Overly Broad

By DEBORAH MESCE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of broadcasters and public interest groups is challenging the Federal Communications Commission's decency standards as being unconstitutionally vague and overly broad.

In a petition, to be filed today in the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, the coalition of 17 groups says the FCC should be forced to redraft its standards.

"We're saying the standard is incomprehensible and that as a result the broadcast of fully protected material, which would include news and public affairs programming, is being chilled," attorney Timothy Dyk, who is representing the groups, said Wednesday.

The FCC said last April it will no longer limit indecency to the "seven dirty words" of a monologue from comedian George Carlin but would apply the broader definition embodied in a 1978 Supreme Court decision on the Carlin case.

That decision defines indecency as "language or material that depicts or describes, in terms patently offensive as measured by contemporary community standards for the broadcast medium, sexual or excretory activities or organs."

The FCC also said indecent material can be aired when children are not likely to be in the audience. The commission said it would consider that period to be between midnight and 6 a.m.

Dyk said the coalition does not challenge the FCC's authority to set decency standards, but "the commission must have a standard that can be understood by people so it doesn't sweep as broadly as this one does."

The group also says the FCC should return to allowing indecent broadcasts after 10 p.m.

"We think that allowing the broadcast of material the commission finds indecent but not obscene after midnight deprives adults of access to that material," Dyk said.

Peggy Charren, president of the Cambridge, Mass.-based Action for Children's Television, said the overly broad definition and the after-midnight restriction could relegate certain prize-winning programs to airtime seldom viewed by most people.

Though indecent material may be aired under the FCC's guidelines, obscene programming cannot be broadcast at any time. Obscene programming is defined as material that appeals to the prurient interest, depicts sexual or excretory conduct in a patently offensive way and lacks serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value.

Among those signing the petition are the National Association of Broadcasters, the major television networks, public radio and TV broadcasters, Action for Children's Television, and People for the American Way, Dyk said.

Chrysler Stirs Resentment By Closing Ex-AMC Plant

By MICHAEL C. BUELOW
Associated Press Writer
KENOSHA, Wis. (AP) — Chrysler Corp. turned from hero to villain in the eyes of officials and autoworkers shocked by the news that the Kenosha auto assembly and stamping plants will close, making 5,500 people jobless.

"This is a sneak attack, another Pearl Harbor," said Billy Kittles, 51, who began working at the former American Motors Corp. plant in 1958. "It's a surprise. Everybody thought when Chrysler took over it was going to be go, go go."

At the tavern operated by Fred Kaurzich Jr., a sign that had read "Lee Iacocca for president," was changed to read "Lee Iacocca lied to us."

"I tell you what, if I didn't take down 'Lee Iacocca for president' they'd probably blow this place up," Kaurzich said. Iacocca is Chrysler Corp.'s chairman.

Dennis Meo, 35, a 14-year plant veteran and second vice president of United Auto Workers Local 72, noted that just two weeks ago, workers were told the assembly plant had broken a 15-year Chrysler record for quality car production.

"We were the best. Now two weeks later all the commitments to us and the state are broken," Meo said.

Chrysler, praised as the city's economic savior when it bought the aging plants last August, announced Wednesday it would close them by Sept. 30 to reduce capacity. The No. 3 automaker plans to continue operating a Kenosha engine plant that employs 1,000.

Gov. Tommy G. Thompson threatened legal action against the company for breaking a commitment to manufacture in Kenosha for five years.

"I am shocked, I am disgusted," Thompson said. "Some further legal research has got to be done, but we are looking at that possibility (of a lawsuit) very strongly."

In Washington, Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., called an emergency meeting of the state's congressional delegation for this afternoon to discuss a response.

Thompson said a suit could seek reimbursement for state and local costs involved in helping Chrysler expand operations at Kenosha, recovery of a $3 million grant that went to AMC to retrain workers for Chrysler production and unspecified damages.

After Chrysler bought AMC last year, the state agreed to provide an additional $5 million in job-training money to retrain workers to produce Omni and Horizon cars, Thompson said.

Chrysler, he said, balked at signing a written contract that was sent two or three weeks ago with a provision for five years of auto manufacturing in Kenosha. But there were letters exchanged earlier in which Chrysler "made a commitment to the state of Wisconsin for five years," Thompson said.

"It's a very sad day for Kenosha.

It's an even sadder day for Chrysler, a major corporation that had given their oral and their written word," Thompson said. "They did not even keep it for six months."

But Chrysler spokesman Douglas Nicoll said the company made no such commitment. He contended Chrysler had said it probably would build the Omni-Horizon for five years — but not necessarily at Kenosha.

Mayor Eugene J. Dorff said the city would go to court if necessary to recover about $750,000 in public funds spent last year to meet Chrysler demands.

Execution

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A federal appeals court has stayed today's scheduled execution of a man condemned for killing a Houston restaurant owner during a 1982 robbery.

Raymond Landry, 38, was spared from his second scheduled execution by injection by a three-judge panel of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, which overruled two state courts.

Landry contended he did not have effective counsel during his trial. The appeals panel said it needed more time to obtain a trial record and review the case.

Western Sailors Have Little To Do In Gulf Ports

By JOHN RICE
Associated Press Writer
MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — There's little fun ashore for the sailors of the Western navies in the Persian Gulf. With conservative Arab states frowning on alcohol and fraternization, shore leave means more rest than recreation. "It's not like anyplace else. There's nothing to do," said Mike Bruce, of West Pelzer, S.C., a crewman aboard the American cruiser Richmond K. Turner. Most gulf states ban alcohol, but where liquor is permitted, nightclubs and bars tend to be restricted to expensive international hotels. That's generally well received by older officers, but many of the younger ones and the enlisted men say they like something a bit livelier. "After you've been at sea for a month or two, you're ready for some pretty heavy partying," said Jeff Lee of Lockport, N.Y., a shipmate of Bruce's. The two were unwinding with friends in one of the few Manama bars that caters to sailors guarding the gulf's oil routes from Iranian attacks in the so-called tanker war with Iraq. Iran and Iraq have been at war since 1980. Loud rock music boomed from speakers, Hulk Hogan grappled with foes on the television and sailors huddled over a beeping Pac-Man game. Pillars behind the bar were decked with shoulder patches from 27 U.S. warships whose sailors have visited the bar since it opened three years ago. On many evenings, there's not a sailor in sight, either in bars, streets or the colorful open-air marketplace, even though Bahrain is the port used most often by the 17 U.S. warships based in the gulf. More than a dozen other ships sail just outside the gulf, but don't visit its ports. The U.S. Navy gives sailors only a few days' leave a month, and those interviewed said they had been warned to keep a low profile and stay out of trouble. Civilian clothes are worn because officially, at least, Arab states do not want to provoke Iran by throwing open their doors to the Americans and their allies. Noting the lack of temptations and the relatively friendly locals, one

American seaman, who identified himself only as Bill, said: "You'd have to be a real pain to get into trouble here." Others said they had been warned to avoid taking photographs of women and mosques and recalled that one sailor was questioned for two hours by police after trying to photograph a veiled Arab woman. A few restaurants have catered to Americans since the late 1940s, when the now-expanded Middle East Force began sailing the gulf. Until recently, it was common for Americans to be mistaken for Britons, who have a long history in the region. That's changing as Bahrainis become accustomed to Brooklyn and Oklahoma accents. One of the most popular attractions for sailors is a Sunday night "steak ranch" buffet at a local hotel. It features American beef, Texas-style chili, tacos and other Western grub while an Australian couple sings Willie Nelson songs in front of a big American flag. British seamen tend to concentrate in Dubai, the busiest port in the United Arab Emirates. The Royal Navy also puts sailors ashore in Muscat, capital of Oman, and in Bahrain. To compensate for the lack of excitement ashore, the Royal Navy runs a "dine-a-sailor" program in which local British residents host seamen in the emirates.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Members of Congress showed once again in 1987 that it's much easier for them to preach frugality for the rest of the country than to practice it themselves. While the great majority of members spent the year denouncing budget deficits and counseling their constituents to expect less from the federal government, the Congress as a whole was going in the other direction — actually increasing spending on itself at a rate that outstripped inflation. Congress in December 1987 passed a legislative branch appropriations bill, covering fiscal 1988, that was nearly 6 percent higher than the one it approved 12 months earlier for the preceding fiscal year. By comparison, inflation as measured by the Consumer Price Index rose by 4.5 percent between December 1986 and December 1987, and for the year averaged 3.7 percent. The new Capitol Hill housekeeping budget, totalling $1.75 billion, increased spending for personal and committee staff operations and support agencies such as the Library of Congress and General Accounting Office. And it provided fatter outlays for perquisites, retirement benefits, travel and other items that add comfort and security to the job of sitting in Congress. House members and senators also accepted two personal pay raises totalling $14,400 during the year, raising their salary to $89,500. Their collective payroll of more than $48 million is drawn automatically from the Treasury and not counted as part of legislative branch appropriations. The 1.75 billion legislative branch pricetag for fiscal 1988 appears certain to be increased in upcoming months as Congress approves supplemental appropriations to replenish dried up accounts. Last fiscal year's legislative branch appropriations bill, initially funded at $1.65 billion, was swollen to more than 1.8 billion by House and Senate add-ons during the year, according to

Office and Management and Budget figures. Constituents can decide for themselves whether Congress deserves its enlarged budget as a reward for a job well done in 1987, or whether, instead, it merits criticism for having gone on a personal spending spree while doing little to solve national problems. Folks back home can also note, in the accompanying Comfort Index Chart, how their House and Senate representatives stood during 1987 on issues relating to members' emoluments and internal Capitol Hill operations. The chart covers the year's most important record votes on such issues. Here are capsule descriptions of the issues that make up Roll Call Report Sydicate's 1987 Comfort Index.

Independent Counsel — By a vote of 169 for and 243 against, the House on Oct. 21 rejected an amendment to put members of Congress within the potential jurisdiction of independent counsels. These counsels are appointed by U.S. appeals judges to prosecute errant Administration officials, on the theory that an attorney general is unlikely to vigorously prosecute his political allies. Supporters of this amendment said an independent counsel is needed to watch over lawmakers because an attorney general may not want to prosecute influential members of Congress. Opponents noted that many lawmakers have been prosecuted by the Justice Department throughout history. A vote was in favor of putting lawmakers within the reach of independent counsels.

HOUSE
 1. To Freeze Committee Spending — By a vote of 127 for and 268 against, the House on March 19 rejected a proposed freeze in committee spending. It then voted to spend $47.9 million in 1988 on the "investigations and studies" budget that covers about half the cost of its 27 committees. The $47.9 million figure was up 9 percent over 1986. A yes vote was for freezing this category of committee spending.
 2. To Cut Staff Salaries — On June 29, the House rejected an amendment to cut nearly $6 million, primarily in staff salary outlays, from the House's $530 million share of the fiscal 1988 legislative branch appropriations bill. The vote was 155 for, 224 against. A yes vote supported the $6 million cut.
 3. To Probe Corruption — By a vote of 77 for and 297 against, the House on June 29 rejected an amendment to set up a bi-partisan commission on private citizens to probe an alleged "ongoing pattern" of corruption within the House. Pennsylvania Republican Robert Walker, a sponsor, said "I think we should be concerned about the fact that many of the American people regard this House as an ethical morass." A yes vote endorsed the special probe.
 4. To Cut Elevator Operators — By a vote of 141 for and 235 against, the House on June 29 rejected an amendment to cut spending by nearly $81,000 in order to eliminate by attrition six of the jobs of House patronage employees who operate elevators that are automatic. A yes vote was to eliminate six elevator operator positions.
 5. To Subject Lawmakers To The

SENATE
 6. To Table Committee Funding Cut — The Senate refused to cut its committee budgets for calendar 1987. This occurred Jan. 28 when it voted, 58 for and 36 against, to table (kill) an amendment cutting a $45 million committee outlay by 5 percent. A yes vote was in opposition to the cut.
 7. To Disapprove Pay Raise — By a vote of 27 for and 66 against, the Senate on Jan. 29 rejected a proposal to disapprove a pay hike for members of Congress while allowing one for federal judges and high executive branch officials. Later the same day, the Senate voted to reject the additional pay for lawmakers. But the $12,100 raise took effect anyway a week later as a result of House Action. A yes vote was in favor of a $12,100 raise for lawmakers.
 8. To Reject Pay Hike — The Senate on Jan. 29 passed, 88 for and 6 against, a resolution rejecting a proposed salary increase for members of Congress from $77,400 to $89,500. Despite this vote, the $12,100 raise took effect when the House refused to join the Senate in killing it within the 30-day period allowed for blocking action. A yes vote was to block the pay raise.
 9. To Table Amendment on Independent Counsel — By a vote of 49 for and 46 against, the Senate tabled (killed) an amendment to include members of Congress within the scope of independent counsels. (See item 5 above for an explanation of the issue.) A yes vote was to exempt members of Congress from the scope of independent counsels.

Star Of Romantic Fantasy

'Beast' Becomes Unlikely Sex Symbol On Television

By DIANE HAITHMAN
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

HOLLYWOOD — The women of America have fallen in love with a Beast.

When CBS asked Ron Koslow to create a television series based on Jean Cocteau's 1946 film "Beauty and the Beast," both the network and the writer-producer expected the show, like other fantasy programs, to appeal most strongly to a female audience. The network was banking on that attraction when it scheduled "Beauty and the Beast" to air Friday nights as lead-in to its two soap operas, "Dallas" and "Falcon Crest," which also attract large female viewership.

But no one expected that Vincent, the Beast of this romantic fantasy-drama, would become TV's most unlikely sex symbol.

Recently, fan mail for Vincent has been flooding the production office at a rate of several hundred letters per week. The show, which opened the season ranked 44th in the networks' prime-time ratings, has recently inched up to 36th. It has won its time slot every week against regular series programming, though it has occasionally lost to specials aired opposite it.

"Beauty and the Beast," first unveiled at the annual meeting of representatives of CBS-affiliated stations here last summer, was met with suspicion by the mostly male group, some of whom called it "that weird show." Network executives soothed them by explaining that the series could have the same appeal as the bizarre 1978 hit "The Incredible Hulk."

Instead of comic-book aficionados, however, "Beauty and the Beast," a Ron Koslow Films and Witt-Thomas production in association with Republic Pictures, has attracted women — women who have willingly forsaken the monosyllabic Don Johnsons, the slick Harry Hamlins, the sensitive tough-guy Tom Selleck types and the roguish Bruce Willis because they are dazzled by the beauty of the Beast.

Who is this guy, anyway? The actor behind the Beast is Ron Perlman, 37, a family man best known for his portrayals of a prehistoric tribesman in the feature film "Quest for Fire" and the tragic hunchback in "The Name of the Rose," adapted from the brooding Umberto Eco novel.

Koslow, who wrote the show's pilot episode, created the character. Rick Baker designed the elaborate Beast makeup, which takes five hours to apply.

Koslow, Perlman and Baker all love Vincent enough themselves to offer their own unscientific theories on why women have fallen for the 6-foot-2, 205-pound, excessively hairy gentleman with the cascading blond locks, the feline face, the superhuman strength, the heart of platinum and the dulcet voice that seems created solely for reading Browning's "Sonnets From the Portuguese."

And though it may not have been the first notion to occur to the network's research department, experts on the psychology of relationships call the outpouring of feminine passion as natural as rain.

First, a few details of Vincent's history: The Beast is a freak of nature, born grotesquely deformed and left to die but miraculously rescued by a man he calls Father (Ray Dotrice). Father, a scholarly recluse who had created his own world in the maze of steam tunnels beneath New York City, gave Vincent a classical education, a noble spirit and shelter from the pain and ridicule he would have experienced in the world above.

Vincent is in love with Catherine Chandler, a wealthy socialite lawyer played by Linda Hamilton. In the pilot episode, Catherine was attacked in the street, her face brutally slashed. Like Vincent, she was left to die until rescued and nursed back to health by the Beast; she did not see her savior until the bandages came off.

Shocked at first, Catherine came to appreciate Vincent for his heart rather than his appearance. The two continue a secret, chaste and tragically impossible romance. Moreover, Vincent can sense Catherine's emotions and instinctively knows when she is in danger.

Psychologist Lonnie Barbach, a member of the clinical faculty of the University of California, San Francisco and author of the recently published book "Erotic Interludes: Tales Told for Women" and seven other books on relationships and sexuality, says the Vincent-Catherine relationship perfectly fits most women's romantic ideal.

Ms. Barbach said that the beauty-beast relationship is a classic one in which two lovers are separated by an insurmountable barrier — in this case, being from different species.

Some writers have suggested that the chaste romance might be particularly apt in the era of AIDS; Ms. Barbach disputes that theory, saying that such appeal is historic and timeless.

"That's why the romance novels are so popular," she said. "There's often a great deal of disparity between the two people — a poor woman and a very wealthy man (for example). It's purer than pure. The women who are looking to these novels are looking to be rescued, to be taken care of — to be nurtured, to be treated as if they were some precious jewel."

Ms. Barbach added that the fact that the romance cannot be consummated only adds to its appeal. "He adores her and he cherishes her. Who cares about the sex?" she reasoned.

Koslow calls his "Beauty and the Beast" "a classical love story in contemporary terms," and said he believes the Beast's ability to sense Catherine's feelings provides a consummation that is in some ways deeper than sex.

He modestly attributes much of the Beast's appeal to Perlman's acting ability. "Aside from his voice, which is pretty magical, he is really able to plumb the depths, to get to the core of an emotion and just strip-mine it," he said.

And Perlman, with equal modesty, attributes the phenomenon to Koslow's conception of the Beast.

TV Series Requires Trek Across Europe

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The British producers of the miniseries currently running on PBS' Masterpiece Theater, "Fortunes of War," could probably do an adventurous sequel about making the film.

The seven-part series, based on the Olivia Manning novels "Balkan Trilogy" and "Levant Trilogy," was filmed on location in Europe and Egypt.

The miniseries follows a young, newly married English couple who stay one jump ahead of the German army at the outbreak of World War II. The husband, a school teacher in Romania, has somehow gotten on the Gestapo hit list.

Their flight takes them through Romania, Greece and Egypt.

Kenneth Branagh stars as Guy Pringle and Emma Thompson stars as his wife, Emma. He's just taken a job as a university lecturer in Bucharest and becomes so involved that his wife soon feels neglected. Ronald Pickup plays Prince Yakimov, a penniless Russian aristocrat and parasite. Rupert Graves is Simon, a young British officer Emma is attracted to when Guy continues to neglect her.

Producer Betty Willingale and director James Cellan Jones had a few adventures of their own as they filmed in Yugoslavia, Greece and Egypt. Most of their problems came from the Egyptian censors, they said.

"When they got to Egypt the young couple took refuge in a brothel, which had been converted into a refugee camp," said Willingale. "The Egyptian censor said there were no brothels in Egypt. All the Egyptians with us fell over laughing. The things they didn't have in Egypt were legion. When one of the characters falls ill with dysentery they said they had no dysentery either."

"We had a battle scene in Egypt that involved trucks, tanks and lots and lots of weapons," said Jones. "We left all the guns at the police station overnight. The next morning the man at the police station wouldn't let us have the guns. He said he needed 24 hours' notice, and we had to have a release signed by the general. We had our own battle right in the police station. It took us until noon to get our weapons."

In Yugoslavia, which stood in for Romania in the miniseries, the British filmmakers picked up a number of actors and a singer after crossing paths with the people working on the ABC miniseries "War and Remembrance."

"We said to them, 'How would you like to come and be in our film on your way home?" said Jones.

In Greece, Jones directed a panoramic scene of an evacuation in the face of the advancing German army. "We had 400 extras," he said. "The scene called for the special-effects man to blow up lots of explosives and shoot off lots of guns. But all the special effects were in Egypt, and the Egyptian bureaucracy wouldn't let us move them out. We finally found some explosives in Greece."

 There are many situations where you can take a finesse either way. If, when the time arrives to take it and it is still a pure guess, you probably went wrong somewhere in the play. North had an awkward hand. It was certainly strong enough to act, but it was square and had only three cards, albeit choice ones, in the unbid major. He elected to act, and before he knew it he found himself being dummy while partner played six spades.

these, declarer could claim his contract. West had shown up with three spades, seven hearts and two diamonds, so he could hold at most one club. Declarer led a club to the ace and ran the jack of clubs to score his slam.

Note that if North did not have the ten of clubs, the only chance for the contract would have been to find

West with a singleton honor in the suit. Far from being a hindrance, the two-way finesse actually made the slam a laydown.

Why Do Our Steaks Taste So Much Better?

In this time of cut costs, do it quick, just make a profit, give the customer just enough to make him happy, a few people still go to the trouble to do things the right way. The best way.

Only USDA Choice beef. Cut fresh daily. Cooked to order. And served to you by the best people in the business.

That's the way we do things at Golden Corral.
Maybe that's why everything tastes better at Golden Corral.

Our Steaks Taste Better Because They Are Better.
