Pitt Joins In Calling For U.S. 264 Interchanges

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Commissioners, meeting Monday with state highway officials and members of the county's legislative delegation, expressed concern over the safety of at-grade intersections on the new U.S. 264 between Greenville and Wilson, suggesting that — at some point — interchanges should be installed to replace the crossings.

Concern over the at-grade intersections was raised by the Wilson County Board of Commissioners last month in a letter to the Department of Transportation.

The letter cited three deaths and several wrecks that have occurred at intersections in Wilson County — N.C. 58, N.C. 91 and N.C. 222 — and asked that until interchanges could be built to replace the at-grade crossings, flashing lights or other warning devices be installed.

"We want to thank you," Charles Gaskins, chairman of the board, told DOT officials for the highway improvements that have come to Pitt County.

But Gaskins said the board was concerned about such things as when the northwest loop at Greenville will be completed to relieve congestion in the area of Pitt County Memorial Hospital and when interchanges could be built along U.S. 264 between Greenville and Wilson.

Rather than write a letter, Gaskins told the DOT officials, "We'd rather talk to you."

Tommy Harrelson, deputy secretary of the Transportation Department, suggested that the lack of interchanges on U.S. 264 east of Wilson was "kind of a trade-off. We had to have some sort of a trade-off," Harrelson said, in order to build both U.S. 264 and U.S. 64.

Randy Doub of Greenville, a member of the board of transportation, said interchanges along the road would cost $1.5 million to $2.5 million each.

"They were not included in the initial design of the road and to go back in and redesign ... would have delayed the opening by 12- to 18-months."

"The interchanges ... they would be nice to have," Doub said, but he suggested "we have to determine what is more cost efficient" in light of the DOT's other priorities.

And Doub said the right-of-way for the interchanges was purchased along with the right-of-way for the four-lane road, so that they could be added later.

"The decision was made 8 to 10 years ago," according to Doub, who suggested that it is more important to get the Farmville and Greenville bypasses completed than to add interchanges at the present time.

"Let's get the roads built, then go back and do the interchanges," Doub said.

"Since I've been on the Board (of Transportation), no one has made interchanges a priority," according to Doub. But he suggested that those interested in having the interchanges included in the state's Transportation Improvement Plan should attend the TIP public hearings in April to voice such support. "We'd be glad to consider it."

A report by Division II Engineer Rick Shirley, referred to by Doub, said four accidents — and the three deaths — occurred at the U.S. 264-N.C. 58 intersection between Sept. 8 and Oct. 23. None has occurred at the intersection since the DOT made changes at the intersection, including the installation of "rumble strips."

Two accidents have occurred at the U.S. 264-N.C. 91 intersection (on Nov. 9 and Dec. 20), while two have been reported at the U.S. 264-N.C. 222 intersection (on Nov. 7 and Dec. 19). Shirley's report said no accidents have been reported at the intersection of U.S. 264 and Secondary Road 1310 in Greene County or at the SR

Students Cram Meeting To Push Exam Proposal

By CHERIE EVANS

High school and junior high school students crowded into the third floor conference room of the county office building Monday night, spilling out into the halls to support their presenters or to address the Pitt County Board of Education on an exam policy.

During the board's regular monthly meeting, about nine students outlined the disadvantages of the current exam policy, which requires all students, except seniors, to take all exams.

Seniors may be exempt from their exams if they have earned grades of A or B. Students earning A's could have four excused absences and still be exempt, while B students could have only three excused absences.

Students said the current policy creates problems for the students

Blacks Optimistic Over Election Plan

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Black leaders in Greenville seemed optimistic after the Pitt County Board of Commissioners approved a compromise Monday to settle a federal court suit seeking to overturn the county's present method of electing members of the board.

The suit was filed in mid-December by the Pitt County Concerned Citizens for Justice and several individuals, charging that the county's present method of electing six commissioners at-large diluted black voting strength and prevented blacks from being elected to the board.

Commissioners gave their approval to a compromise "6-3" plan under which six members of the board would be elected from residency districts by persons living in the districts. Three other members would be elected from combined districts — formed by joining Districts 1 and 2 to form combined district A, joining Districts 3 and 6 to form combined district B, and joining districts 4 and 5 to form District C — by vote of the people living in the combined districts.

Alonzo Mills, a spokesman for the CCJ, said, "We commend the commissioners and their lawyers for be-

Early Spring

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa. (AP) — Punxsutawney Phil, a groundhog with a knack for weather forecasting, today predicted an early spring for only the ninth time in 101 years.

When the furry legend was plucked from his luxury burrow at dawn, he couldn't see his shadow in the rain. That's a sure sign of an early thaw, according to the Punxsutawney Groundhog Club.

Phil's closest friends in this western Pennsylvania town of 8,000 say his forecasts haven't been wrong in the 101 years he's been making his predictions.

Indians Free Hostages Martin Agrees To Investigate

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — Two American Indians charged with taking over a Lumberton newspaper office were to be arraigned today in federal court in Raleigh, an FBI spokesman said.

Paul Daly, special agent in charge of the FBI in North Carolina, said Eddie Hatcher and Timothy Jacobs, charged with Monday's takeover, probably would be taken this afternoon to federal court in Raleigh from the Orange County Jail in Hillsborough, where they were in federal custody earlier today.

At an arraignment, formal charges are read to the accused.

Charles Dunn, deputy director of the State Bureau of Investigation, said Hatcher and Jacobs were taken into custody by the FBI and carried to Orange County Jail as part of an agreement with authorities and Gov. Jim Martin under which the two would not surrender to state or local authorities.

Dunn said the decision to take them to Orange County Jail was made by the FBI.

Only some jails are approved to house federal prisoners, Dunn said, and Orange County Jail is one of them.

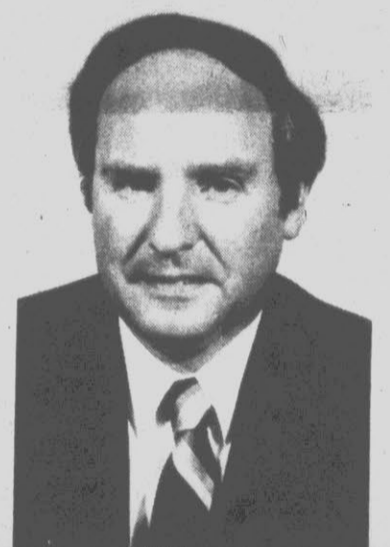

Daly said he decided to have the two taken to the Orange County Jail, because it is "a federal contract facility" which seemed "the best under the circumstances."

Hatcher, 30, and Jacobs, 19, members of the Tuscarora faction of the Lumbee Indians, surrendered to FBI agents at 8 p.m. Monday, 10 hours after charging into the offices of The Robesonian, a daily newspaper in Lumberton. Hatcher and Jacobs threw out two shotguns and a .38-caliber revolver and released the last seven hostages held in the building.

"Their prime concern was that somebody would shoot them," Daly said. "They wanted to be taken into custody in another jurisdiction."

"I think it satisfied what they wanted to achieve," Daly said. "There was a good exchange, nobody

Housing Authority OKs Bid On Repairs

Greenville Housing Authority commissioners on Monday unanimously approved acceptance of a low bid by Boyd and Associates to repair the fire damage at a housing authority unit on 407 Roundtree St.

A bid of $44,700 was accepted to repair the five bedroom unit which was damaged by fire on Dec. 9.

According to Kenneth E. Noland, executive director of the authority, the authority's insurance company has agreed to pay approximately $28,500, with the authority left to pay the additional $17,000 out of operating funds.

In other business, Noland reported that the architectural firm of Bradford and Associates from Atlanta has conducted its site study of the Moyewood modernization project and is now working on a plan of specifications for the project.

Noland also presented to commissioners the authority's quarterly report for the period ending Dec. 31.

According to the report, per unit month expenditures were $201.64 compared with the budgeted amount of $214.51. Per unit month is determined by the total expenditures divided by the number of units divided by 12.

"The quarterly reports were well within the budget constraints," Noland said.

"The financial condition of the authority is excellent," he added. Sally Streeter, director of resident affairs, reported the average rent at authority developments in January totaled $129.89.

Rent at Meadowbrook was $126.70; Kearney Park, $134.32; Moyewood I, $133.34; Moyewood II, $137.90; Newtown, $117.38; Hopkins Park, $125.78, and West Meadowbrook, $128.90.

Pact Signed

lost their cool and in that case, time is on your side."

Martin's chief of staff, Phil Kirk, signed an agreement with Hatcher and Jacobs just before they surrendered. The agreement calls for Kirk; Martin's general counsel, Jim Trotter; and Joe Dean, state Secretary of Crime Control and Public Safety, to review "allegations and evidence which they have of any crime...."

The agreement says the investigation will include the sheriff's office, the district attorney's office and the local and district offices of the State Bureau of Investigation.

The agreement also calls for a thorough investigation of the Jan. 13 death of Billy McKellar in the Robeson County Jail and the transfer of John Hunt from the Robeson jail to another county jail.

"None of these are the kinds of demands that could not be met," Martin said at a news conference in Raleigh an hour after the standoff ended. "None of these are of an unreasonable quality."

Martin said he did not believe the negotiations with the hostage-takers had set a bad precedent.

"If it was a precedent, it was a good precedent," Martin said. "It's over. The hostages have been released unharmed and are safe, and the suspects are in custody."

"If every hostage situation could end up as successfully as this one, and if every hostage situation would involve requests of this sort, the world would have had a lot fewer tragedies over the last few years," he said.

"None of this releases anybody," Martin said. "None of this prejudices anybody's guilt or innocence, nor did he ask for such a concession."

Daly said Hatcher and Jacobs were charged with federal hostage-taking and violation of the federal Firearms Act for possession of sawed-off shotguns. They were transported to a jail outside Robeson County, but Daly and other officials refused to comment on where they were taken.

Robeson County Sheriff Hubert Stone said he was not worried about the allegations of corruption made by Hatcher and Jacobs.

"That was just two people out there on their own," Stone said. "Anybody can get up and make accusations."

Stone has been the subject of Indian criticism since Nov. 1, 1986, when unarmed Lumbee Indian Jimmy Earl Cummings was shot to death by Deputy Sheriff Kevin Stone, the sheriff's son. Kevin Stone was later cleared of wrongdoing when a coroner's inquest jury ruled that the shooting was "an accident and-or self-defense."

Stone said Hatcher "has got a couple of names" and was known to law officers.

"I can't go into that," he said, "but this is not his first encounter with the law."

Stone said Hunt, who is charged with armed robbery and assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, did not want to leave Robeson County.

"Hunt is in my jail now and he says he wants to stay in my jail," Stone said. "He knows what went on today, but he's staying right here and says he doesn't want to go anywhere else."

He said Hunt had been held in jail for about 10 months, including jails outside Robeson County.

"These kidnapers were just throwing out names," Stone said. "They were just making demands to get attention."

McKellar died Jan. 13 after what authorities described as an "asthmatic cardiac attack" while in the jail. McKellar, 27, who had been jailed on an auto theft charge, was given his required asthma medicine, but reported feeling ill 45 minutes later.

He was taken by ambulance from the jail to Southeastern General Hospital in Lumberton, where he was pronounced dead.

George Fain, general manager of the newspaper, said 17 people were taken hostage when the incident began about 10 a.m. Fain, along with a number of other newspaper employees, escaped as the Indians moved to lock and chain doors.

Production manager Joe Druzak said he told his workers to run out a back door when he spotted a man with a gun at the front.

"I had just gotten the girls out, when this great big guy with a shotgun came walking back," Druzak said. "I started running, hit the door and kept on going."

Eric Prevatte, a hostage who was released several hours after the standoff began, said the Indians herded the hostages into the newsroom and said they wanted to talk to Martin.

"When they first came in, we were all scared silly," he said. "It was like a pressure-cooker. But when they assured us we were in no danger, we all calmed down."

Several Banks Cut Prime Rate

NEW YORK (AP) — Several major banks today lowered their prime lending rates a quarter percentage point to 8.5 percent, reflecting a recent overall decline in interest rates.

The cuts, effectively immediately, were announced by Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., Chemical Bank, Chicago-based Continental Illinois

National Bank & Trust Co., Chase Manhattan Bank, Citibank, Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. and Bankers Trust Co.

The reductions were the major banks' first changes in the key lending rate this year and the second cut since early November, when the prime was lowered to 8.75 percent from 9 percent. The reduction placed the prime at its lowest since July 1986, when the rate was reduced to 8 percent from 8.5 percent.

The prime rate is a benchmark used by banks to set interest rates on a variety of corporate and consumer loans, including mortgages.

Analysts said today's action had been expected, given the trend toward lower interest rates since the Oct. 19 stock market crash and speculation that the Federal Reserve might be easing credit to help prevent a recession.

The rate cuts had little effect on the stock market, which was lower in early trading, but the bond market rallied following the news, with the bellwether 30-year Treasury bond up nearly $5 for each $1,000 in face value from late Monday.

"There were rumors last week... The market was primed for it," said Carol A. Stone, a senior economist at Nomura Securities Inc.

Gunmen Hold Class Hostage

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Two gunmen wearing ski masks invaded a classroom today and held a teacher and a class of grade school children hostage at a private Christian school, a school official said.

The two men entered the school around 8:40 a.m., took the teacher and class hostage and demanded to see Tuscaloosa Mayor Al DuPont, according to Wyatt Rhone, assistant headmaster at West End Christian School.

Tuscaloosa Police Chief Jerry

Fuller and Assistant Chief Ken Swindel were seen outside a door attempting to talk the two gunmen into surrendering. The lawmen could be seen opening and closing the door as they talked, according to witnesses at the scene.

The Tuscaloosa News reported that the mayor, wearing a bullet-proof vest, was also at the school.

It was not immediately known which teacher was taken hostage or how many students were in the classroom. School officials said about 125 pupils attend grades one through five in the elementary division building where the hostages were being held.

Rhone said he was notified of the situation by Headmaster Dan Carden and was told to secure the other classrooms and "make sure everyone else stayed put."

Other students are in buildings separate from the one entered by the gunmen.

A Tuscaloosa police department dispatcher who declined to be identified said, "We're not allowed to give out any information."

Ordinances Revised

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners Monday approved changes in the county's flood damage prevention, inspections, subdivision and mobile home park ordinances.

The revisions update and combine the electrical inspections and building inspections ordinances into one inspections ordinance and provide for a penalty — $50 or double the permit fee, whichever is greater — for those beginning construction without first obtaining a permit.

Changes to the mobile home park and subdivision ordinance set standards for road construction.

Copmissioners approved — pending action by the school's board of trustees — the awarding of contracts totaling $2.56 million construction of a new building at Pitt Community College and agreed to appropriate $230,726 in county funds to complete funding of the construction.

Some $2.33 million in state funds have already been allocated to the construction project.

The board also adopted a resolution designating the week of Feb. 7-13 as Local Government Week in Pitt County.

Implement 911 System Promptly

Pitt County and Carolina Telephone need to move as quickly as possible to make a 911 emergency communication system available to county residents.

The 911 system is long overdue in Pitt County. In a rapidly-growing urban area, the concept is a necessity — not a luxury. In the past decade Greenville's emergency personnel have become well-trained, and the volunteer personnel across the county has become increasingly high-skilled. The resources available for emergency response — especially quicker response — have been strengthened.

Yet this technology does little good if citizens cannot call for assistance promptly when a crisis arises. Usually, there is little time to determine the proper fire or rescue department, and no time to look up a number. Shaking fingers often dial wrong numbers, a mistake that can be critical when seconds can mean the difference between life and death.

Employing and promoting 911 would eliminate the time lost by fumbling for phone numbers and information. The central communication center would receive all emergency calls and dispatch the appropriate departments and equipment.

The county should also endorse a tracking feature for its 911 system and urge the phone company to provide the computer capability to house it. Tracking is an option which would allow emergency dispatchers to determine the location of a 911 call. This type of system is important to the success of 911. Children who use the service may, or may not, know their address or present location. Even adults dealing with emergencies often forget to give an address or are so agitated they are unable to tell where they are. Under those circumstances, 911 is useless without a tracking system.

Pitt County is at a disadvantage in its emergency capabilities without a 911 system. It lags behind other urban areas in installing one. The county commissioners' approval of 911 is an important step, but the county must work persistently with the phone company to ensure the necessary technology is made available. The initial 911 system should serve as many residents as possible and expanding the project should receive priority from both the phone company and the county.

A concept like 911 has the potential to tangibly improve available services. There should be no undue delay in making the technology available.

More Clout Down East

Pitt County last week had two presidential nomination candidates to visit.

There will likely be more as the March 8 Super Tuesday presidential primary approaches. It indicates there is a political emphasis on eastern North Carolina building — a factor which hasn't always been there. That trend is indicative of the development of a vigorous two-party system and the potential coming-of-age of the area politically.

When Democratic nominee hopeful John F. Kennedy visited Pitt County in 1960, no one could remember when a presidential candidate had been here before. There was, after all, no need. Democratic candidates knew the east was solidly Democratic and Republicans knew they would be wasting their time to visit.

Kennedy was Catholic and there was concern about whether his religious affiliation would cost him support in the east. It turned out to be an empty concern. Kennedy won the Democratic nomination and also took eastern North Carolina votes. Perhaps, though, his visit had something to do with selling him to area voters.

There have been several eastern N.C. presidential candidate visitors since, however, and more can be expected. The Super Tuesday presidential primary has put more emphasis on campaigning in the South, but then eastern voters are also more restless than they were 30 years ago. The results of the last two elections indicate eastern North Carolina might be up for grabs. Candidates — the most persistent type of opportunists — simply feel the need to secure support.

Eastern North Carolina can only benefit from this focus on both the national and state level. It means attention from the candidates and their supporters. One candidate will be elected to office, of course. That person will at least be aware that eastern North Carolina exists, a fact that can help the area obtain funding for important projects and programs. In politics, the name of the game is clout, and increasing the area's visibility with candidates is a means of acquiring influence. That is the first step in getting things done.

To the editor:

It's February again and that means the month of February is nationally declared as Afro-American (Black) History Month. The theme is "The Constitutional Status of Afro-Americans Into The 21st Century."

The purpose of this month's celebration is primarily to call attention to the contributions Blacks have made and are yet making to our American society.

Right here in Greenville and Pitt County, we have so much to be proud of — namely, the complete integration or consolidation of the two school systems, the election of our first Black mayor, Ed Carter, along with five others joining forces in leadership on the city council and the school board, as well as a breakfast meeting between Greenville leaders and ECU officials as a tangible first step toward a better relationship for problem solving.

The police force has been instrumental in decreasing greatly drug use on Fifth Street. Our children are scoring higher on standardized tests. The church, through their boards of Christian education are sponsoring workshops and seminars discussing three of our social ills — drugs, alcohol and sex.

Hopefully, parents and students are aware that love, discipline, hard work and perseverance are attributes that cause success which lead to achievement in one's chosen pursuits.

We believe that, if we daily teach and dialogue about Blacks and their important role in our American society, that very soon there'll not be a special need for a particular month to highlight Blacks' achievements and/or contributions, for each of us in our own way is making history. This is a global world and none of us lives in isolation from all cultures, peoples or races.

Let me quote from Richard Pryor, comedian — "If you do better your condition, don't forget to look over your shoulder, reach out your hands and pull someone else along with you."

They say Nero fiddled while Rome burned. Where was Bush during the Iran fiasco? This question drew cries of "foul" from Bush and followers when put to him by Rather. We should put in perspective the Bush/Rather interview as a confrontational meeting of a probing interviewer and a candidate for the Presidential nomination.

Abrasive? Yes, but fair questions(s) to a Presidential candidate. The old question, "Was you there, Charley" is fair — and I may add, unanswered. Was he a cheerleader or out to lunch?

Harry Truman said, (regarding politics) "If you can't stand the heat, stay out of the kitchen."

Let's add some light to the heat directed to the interview. Rather's questions remain unanswered.

To the editor:

Where is it written in our Constitution that we should go outside our borders to involve ourselves in a war that, by all characteristics and appearances, is actually a civil war? How can we indulge ourselves, how can we morally and financially afford to aid and thereby perpetuate a continuous civil war in Nicaragua? History teaches us that, in order to thoroughly dislike the enemy, you must instill a conviction that the enemy is godless and without ethics. Send food. Send medical. Send books. Don't send arms. Don't send money for arms. We should get to know Nicaraguans, not get to kill them.

Sandinistas: How Big A Threat?

'Besides a near-worthless currency and frequent shortages of food, gas and electricity, the Sandinistas are so obsessed by the fear of an American invasion that they have committed virtually all of their troops and firepower to defensive military tactics.'

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — A dramatic turn in the debate leading up to this week's vote in Congress on future aid to the Contras was the startling revelation that the Sandinista government plans to import large new amounts of Soviet weaponry and to double its armed forces to 600,000 men in the next few years.

Critics of the Marxist regime seized upon the projected military buildup as unimpeachable proof of Managua's expansionist aims. National-security adviser Colin L. Powell declared that the Nicaragua's intention of placing one-fifth of its population under arms posed a "direct threat" to its Central American neighbors.

Yet a different picture emerges in interviews here with Nicaraguans across the political spectrum and Western military analysts. They question whether the Sandinistas have the desire — or the ability — to invade neighboring states. Instead, they say, the regime's plans for a military buildup probably have more to do with domestic politics inside Nicaragua than with military adventures outside the country.

The primary reason for the military buildup, according to Western diplomats and Nicaraguan opposition members, is to ensure future Sandinista political control — especially if the government extends the kind of democratic freedoms that would be required under the Central American peace plan. The Nicaraguan army, by drafting and indoctrinating youths into the Sandinista revolution, has become one of the party's most powerful tools in sustaining its power and support throughout the country.

The Sandinista's plans to expand their military came to light after the defection of Roger Miranda Bengochea, a former Nicaraguan major and chief aide to Defense Minister Humberto Ortega. Yet Miranda's own numbers suggest that the buildup is largely in reserve forces that wouldn't pose a serious offensive threat to neighboring countries.

The Nicaraguan regular army — the troops that would presumably be involved in any operations outside Nicaragua — would expand by only 15,000 men, to 80,000 from its current level of 65,000. Most of the total increase in military personnel would be in part-time reserve forces, which would grow from their current level of about 150,000 to 420,000. The Sandinistas claim they need this vastly expanded reserve force in the 1990s to cope with the threat of U.S. invasion. But observers here say a more likely reason for the reserve buildup may be to use the threat of an American attack to broaden and deepen support for the Sandinistas across the country.

For now, the Sandinista army has its hands full dealing with the increasingly effective raids launched by the U.S.-backed Nicaraguan counterrevolutionaries. Despite Reagan administration claims that the Sandinista government is eager to carry out offensive military missions against its neighbors, the Nicaraguan armed forces today are scattered into counterinsurgency units across the country — trying to cope with 10,000 Contras operating inside Nicaraguan territory.

Lt. Col. Manuel Salvatierra, one of the top Sandinista field commanders in the northern war zone, admitted that the Contras have improved their military performance in recent weeks but attributed their better showing recently to more sophisticated weaponry and better logistics provided by the United States. Since October, the Contras have scored a series of military victories in the countryside, managing to occupy several towns and hold them for several hours. But the Sandinistas reversed some of that momentum by shooting down a Contra supply plane last week.

The Sandinistas seem, for the moment, too overwhelmed by their own troubles to cause mischief abroad. Besides a near-worthless currency and frequent shortages of food, gas and electricity, the Sandinistas are so obsessed by the fear of an American invasion that they have committed virtually all of their troops and firepower to defensive military tactics. "Right now their primary aim is to survive and stay in power," says a Western military attache.

The real issue is what the Sandinistas are planning for the future. Under the planned buildup, many of the new weapons that the Sandinistas hope to secure from the Soviet Union will be largely defensive in nature. They are seeking anti-tank guns, anti-aircraft artillery, and minesweepers. But the Soviets have proved unreliable suppliers. Air-defense rockets and rifle ammunition that were promised have not been delivered, and the Sandinistas are still waiting for the MiG-21 fighter planes they want to use to intercept Contra resupply planes.

Miranda's evidence suggested that the Sandinistas would begin to accelerate their military buildup after 1990, when the Nicaraguan Defense Ministry projects the Contra war would finally be eradicated. The Sandinista argument is that they will need to maintain a sizable military — even after the Contras are gone — to defend their country against an invasion by the United States.

The Reagan administration, in turn, has focused on Miranda's claim that the Sandinistas, if confronted by an American onslaught, would seek to "regionalize the conflict." According to Miranda, the Sandinistas had plans to extend the war to Honduras in the north, unleash bombing raids on Costa Rica in the south, and intensify support for leftist rebels still engaged in a civil war in El Salvador.

But the Sandinistas currently lack the firepower to carry out such attacks, and they are a long way from getting it. Nicaragua's air force does not have the fighter-bomber capability to launch longer-range raids, and its most useful Soviet-provided aircraft is the Mi-24 Hind helicopter gunship. The Hind is useful in attacking guerrilla ground forces, but it wouldn't help much in launching attacks on Honduras, which last year received F-5 fighter jets from the United States. Nor would the Sandinistas current contingent of some 150 T-54 tanks be able to invade across a hostile terrain of forests and mountains along the Honduran border.

Today, the Nicaraguan army keeps most of its tanks in Managua, far from the border. The occasionally go rumbling through the pock-marked streets of the capitals on maneuvers, in anticipation of the day when the Sandinistas fear the United States will attack the capital.

Strength For Today

The gyroscope compasses used aboard ships are so designed that if a ship for any reason is forced off its course, alarm bells are rung.

And so it is and always has been with a person's conscience. If the bell does not ring, it means either that the person does not have a conscience or else has grown so deaf that no warning bell on earth could alert him to his danger. A healthy conscience is always equipped with warning bells. The cowardly compromise, the mental reservation, the betrayal of a friend, the violation of a trust — these and many more offenses to moral sensibilities set the bell to clanging in our ears.

For most people, the first yielding to iniquity brings shame. But if the bell keeps ringing and the person does nothing about it, the time comes when the ringing is in vain.

Palestine Presents A Mortal Danger To Israel's Existence

JERUSALEM — Even those who defend Israel's harsh tactics in putting down riots find it difficult to understand why the Palestinians are denied the right of self-determination.

What they do not realize is that every Israeli, from far right to far left, believes that the Palestinian Arabs should have a state of their own. Israel has fought too hard and long — and has lost too many of its sons and daughters on its way to self-determination — not to understand the national aspirations of another people.

The only argument in Israel is over the borders of the Palestinian state: whether it should exist, as it does now, in the three-fourths of Palestine known as Jordan, or if it should include Judea-Samaria (the West Bank) and Gaza, those two dots on the map whose combined area, 2,500 square miles, is about the size of an average county in the western United States.

That Jordan is a Palestinian state is beyond dispute. Not only because it is within the borders of what used to be the British mandate of Palestine, but because the Arabs of the East Bank of the River Jordan and those on its West Bank are the same people. King Hussein has said so innumerable times, and so has Yasser Arafat. And, indeed, 70 percent of Jordan's population and virtually all its prime ministers, politicians, businessmen and intellectuals come from the west side of the river, now under Israel's control. When Hussein's grandfather, King Abdallah, declared the independence of his country, then known as Transjordan, he wanted to call it Palestine. The British Colonial Office dissuaded him.

But there are 1.3 million Arab inhabitants in Judea-Samaria and Gaza and only 200,000 Jews (counting Jerusalem's new suburbs in the Judean mountains). Why shouldn't Israel relinquish these territories, captured in 1967 when Egypt, Syria and Jordan threatened to "drive the Jews into the sea," and let these Palestinians exercise the right of self-determination?

Analysis

The answer is simple: because withdrawal from the territories will mortally endanger Israel's existence. Because, as in the case of the Sudeten Germans in Czechoslovakia who were granted self-determination in 1938 under similar circumstances, it will make a major war inevitable. The advocates in the U.S. administration of the Reagan plan, as well as Israel's foreign minister, Shimon Peres, believe that since the inhabitants of these territories are related to their brethren in Jordan, they should live under Jordanian rule, or in confederation with Jordan. What they ignore is that Palestinian Arabs are about as united as the people of Lebanon, and the only thing they agree on is that Israel itself is occupied Arab territory.

No matter what agreement is drawn up and by whom, if Israel withdraws, a fight for primacy between the Palestine Liberation Organization, the Islamic fundamentalists and the Marxists in the territories is unavoidable — as is the area's becoming, like Lebanon, a terrorist base for activity against Israel.

Unlike Lebanon, Judea-Samaria and Gaza border on Israel's main population centers. Jerusalem would be flanked on three sides, Tel Aviv on two. The Palestinians, now armed not with stones and Molotov cocktails but missiles and automatic weapons, would be nine miles from the sea and within Katyusha rocket range of 80 percent of Israel's population. To suppose that any multinational force or security arrangements could prevent them from making Israel unlivable is as realistic as to expect that the United Nations peacekeeping force can maintain order in southern Lebanon.

In the battle for dominance, the better equipped and organized PLO would probably win, although one should not underestimate the fanaticism and organizational ability of the followers of Ahmed Yassin, the "Gaza Khomeini," who started the present riots. But a PLO victory would not bring calm. The battle would continue among the Arafat, Habash, Hawatmeh, Gibril, Abu Musa and Abu Nidal factions of the PLO, each proving its fitness to lead by outdoing the atrocities of the other.

The covenant of the Palestinian revolution, lest we forget, calls for the "liberation" not of Judea-Samaria and Gaza but of the whole area of the British mandate of Palestine, i.e. Israel and Jordan. Any readiness by one faction to settle for less would be condemned by the others as betrayal.

Inevitably the faction with the strongest backer, namely Syria, would prevail, and the Syrians would then be invited to "stabilize" the area, which they consider as much part of "Greater Syria" as Lebanon. Israel, fighting for its survival from impossible borders, would probably repel the Syrian attack, but the toll of all these confrontations, even if fought with conventional arms, would be in the hundreds of thousands.

And unless Israel regained control of precisely the same territories it holds now, its existence would be even more precarious and vulnerable than it was before the 1967 war. It certainly would not be able to deter, as it did in 1970 and 1980, a Syrian invasion of Jordan, which would put Soviet "advisers" in Al Aqabah, on the border of Saudi Arabia, within spitting distance of the Persian Gulf.

What "now"-oriented TV newscasters do not seem to understand, but those who have learned the lessons of Cuba, Angola, Nicaragua, Lebanon and Iran should know, is that at this point in the Arab-Israel conflict the choice is not between an intolerable situation and a happy compromise.

A Pessimist's Peace Plan In Middle East

"The only moments for creative diplomacy in the Middle East come after wars," a Reagan administration official remarked several years ago, at a time when there was both peace and diplomatic paralysis. Perhaps this official feels more encouraged today.

Israel and the Palestinians have been fighting a kind of war during the last two months in the West Bank and Gaza. It doesn't look like a war, because only one side is carrying guns, but anyone who doubts that the rock-throwing Palestinians would kill Israeli soldiers if they could underestimate their resolve. What's intriguing is that this latest Arab-Israeli conflict — like those of 1967, 1973 and 1982 — has created space in which diplomats can operate. It has altered, at least momentarily, some of the political assumptions that underlie the status quo.

"We are back to basics," says Richard Viets, a former American ambassador to Jordan and former deputy chief of mission in Israel. Specifically, Viets argues, the recent Palestinian uprising has forced all sides to consider once again the concept of exchanging land for peace — as outlined in United Nations Resolution 242 more than 20 years ago and elaborated since then in the 1978 Camp David accords and the 1982 Reagan peace plan.

Pessimism is always the wisest policy when dealing with the Middle East, so we shouldn't assume that the recent diplomatic rumblings will produce anything more tangible than a new round of seminars and study groups at the Brookings Institution and the Council on Foreign Relations. Still, it's fun to speculate about what might happen if any of the parties decided to get serious about resolving this miserable conflict.

The sensible way to begin a process of negotiation now, as after any war, would be to adopt the approach Henry Kissinger used in 1973. Recognizing that the underlying issues in the Arab-Israeli conflict were too difficult to tackle at the outset, Kissinger began with a limited "disengagement" agreement — a modest, interim measure designed to separate the combatants and get them talking, rather than fighting.

Would a similar approach work now? Probably not, since it treats Israel and the Palestinians as equal combatants, which they quite clearly are not. Still, there are some interesting straws in the wind. According to several American officials, Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir sent a private letter to President Reagan last week in which he said, among other things, that he wasn't opposed to negotiations about exchanging land for peace.

The simple fact is that the Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza don't want to be ruled by a Hashemite king in Amman; they want to determine their own future. "Jordan is not going to be the spokesman of the Palestinians," said Siniora last week. King Hussein, likewise, is clearly sick of the thankless task of playing middleman, as he made clear in his angry interview last week with The Post's Jonathan Randal. "It's time for all of us to reassess," said the king. Just so. It's late in the day for the Reagan administration to get involved with less than a year in office. But if they do, they should focus this time on the Palestinians themselves — not on the Jordanian fig leaf.

That leaves the United States — and the Israelis and Palestinians — with the same intractable problems they faced in 1978, during the negotiation of the Camp David accords. It would be nice if this time, they got it right. But don't bet on it. In the Middle East, alas, it pays to be pessimistic.

Study Says UNC-CH 'Coasting On Its Glory'

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — An audit of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill says the flagship state university is "coasting on its former glory," but UNC System President C.D. Spangler says the report is seriously flawed.

"Ironically, the pride (in the institution) is often mirrored by a strong conviction that the institution is not as good as it is thought to be and that there is something exaggerated about its excellent national reputation," said the report, prepared by a team of nationally recognized academicians and consultants.

"Many believe that if important changes are not made soon, it will be too late to catch up," said the report, which was released Monday.

Commissioned by the search committee looking for a replacement for retiring Chancellor Christopher C. Fordham III, the audit gives the institution generally high marks for excellence.

But the university has its problems, the 107-page audit says. Concerns cited in the audit include faculty and support staff salaries and fringe benefits, overly strict state regulations, financing and the quality of some academic programs.

The audit says it is the general perception of many of those interviewed that a general malaise threatens faculty quality.

"This results from a lack of institutional direction," the audit says. "The sense of malaise is by no means universal, (but) a malaise limited to even one segment is cause for serious consideration.

"There seems to be a feeling that the institution 'needs to get on the move again.' As one interviewee noted, 'This place is ready to take off, but first we have to get down the runway. The blocks are still under the wheels.'"

Spangler agreed generally with the need for better pay and benefits, but said the authors of the report exhibited a "profound lack of understanding of the history and working of the university."

That led them, he said, to offer "prescriptions that are neither original nor appropriate."

Spangler was especially critical of the audit's call for a significant increase in tuition, saying it was the "wrong approach for this state."

Tuition should be increased for in-state and out-of-state students, the audit says.

"In our opinion, tuition increases should be an immediate priority for the university," it says, adding that the increased revenue would be used to provide financial assistance for needy students.

Spangler also was critical of the report's criticism of Fordham.

"The criticism of Chancellor Fordham is as harsh as it is unjust," he said.

"It takes a strong institution to be willing to rigorously examine itself, and we have been told that ours is an excellent university but, as with all human organizations, there is room for improvement," said Robert C. Eubanks Jr.,

chairman of the UNC-CH Board of Trustees and of the search committee. "We are poised and ready to do what we can to move to the very front rank of American universities, whether they be public or private."

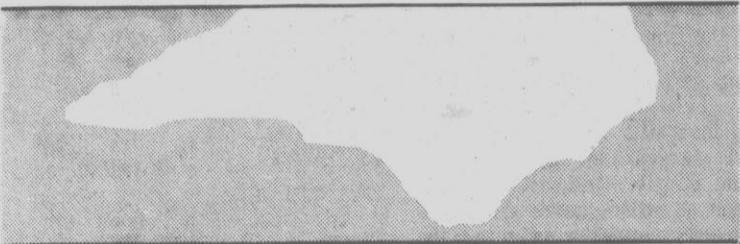

James Fisher, president emeritus of the Council for Advancement and Support of Education in Washington, led the team that prepared the audit.

He said the purpose of the review was to aid the search committee with an objective assessment of the university's condition, to help establish a profile of the ideal characteristics of the next characteristics of the next chancellor and to establish a tentative agenda for the initial stages of the next administration.

"With a new university president in office, a soon-to-be elected chancellor for Chapel Hill, and the beginnings of the bicentennial observance of the founding of the University at Chapel Hill, major opportunities exist for Chapel Hill to build on existing strengths and to confront seriously and systematically its problems," Fisher said.

The reports call for clarifications of the roles of both the Chapel Hill chancellor and the president of the UNC system as well as the relationship of the Board of Trustees at the Chapel Hill campus and the Board of Governors of the system. It calls for both boards to define the roles of the chancellor and the president in the leadership of the campus, and recommends that the president be called the president of the Consolidated Universities of North Carolina, as has been done in the past, to eliminate confusion.

PTL Suit

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Banished PTL founder Jim Bakker says he's sad that the television ministry is suing him and his wife but he is looking forward to a courtroom confrontation "to clear our name."

"We would use that forum to document what we did or did not do," Bakker said.

PTL Trustee David Clark alleges that the Bakkers and former aide David Taggart owe the television ministry $52.8 million for mismanagement and unjustified compensation, according to a lawsuit filed Monday in U.S. Bankruptcy Court.

The Bakkers and Taggart have filed claims in bankruptcy court saying they own PTL no money, and instead that PTL owes the Bakkers $1.3 million and Taggart $187,500.

Bus Wreck

HIGH POINT (AP) — Four children and an adult and were treated at Regional Hospital and released after a school bus collided with a car Monday, police said.

Kim Hall, the investigating officer, said 31 students were aboard the bus when the wreck occurred at 7:37 a.m. at an intersection. Bus driver Elmer Watson Jr., 45, was attempting to make a left turn when the crash occurred, Ms. Hall said.

Capt. Earl Whitaker said that the traffic light at the intersection turned red while the bus was making its turn and that the driver of the car ran the red light and struck the bus in the right side.

Jim C. Parks of Kernersville, the driver of the car, was charged with a red light violation, Whitaker said.

Ingram Lets Final Day For Filing Pass

By The Associated Press

Candidates lined up at the State Board of Elections on the final day of filing for statewide offices, but one potential candidate drew a fair amount of attention when he failed to show up.

Despite rumors that former Insurance Commissioner John Ingram would seek to regain the office he held for 12 years, Ingram failed to make his customary eleventh-hour appearance at the elections board Monday.

"I'm pleased to hear that. You just made my day," Jim Long, who succeeded Ingram as commissioner, said when reporters told him the news.

Ingram could not be reached at his law office in Cary and no one answered the telephone at his home. Unless he launches a write-in campaign or wages a three-party candidacy, this year's will be the first statewide election since 1968 without Ingram as a candidate.

Long's only opponent will be from H.L. "Pete" Red Rednour of Gastonia, a Republican.

Sam Wilson, chairman of the North Carolina Parole Commission and a close ally of Republican Gov. Jim Martin, filed to challenge Attorney General Lacy Thornburg before the filing deadline at noon.

Republicans, who have not won a Council of State office this century except the governorship, fielded candidates for every council post.

Utilities Offer Help On Wastes

RALEIGH (AP) — Two North Carolina power companies that would be the biggest users of a low-level radioactive waste facility have offered to pay up to $15 million to develop the facility.

The proposal by Carolina Power & Light Co. and Duke Power Co. unveiled Monday would use prepayment of user fees to help search for a facility operator, identify suitable areas and select two or three potential sites for detailed analysis.

The outline of the plan indicated the users would not pay for big-ticket items such as the land on which the facility will be placed or its construction or decommissioning.

"They are proposing to finance everything from now until we get a shovel in the ground," said Merrill Eisenbud, chairman of the North Carolina Low-Level Radioactive Waste Management Authority.

The proposal, which is still in the planning stages, drew praise from some members of the North Carolina Low-Level Radioactive Waste Management Authority. But the panel took no action.

"I'm very impressed with this," said Marcus Crofts, a member from Winston-Salem. He said it was "very commendable" for companies that would be the biggest users of the facility to offer to help finance its development.

"I view this as not a conflict of interest but as a complement of interest," Crofts said.

The outline did not say how much the users should be willing to contribute. But Eisenbud said the costs they were offering to defray would amount to between $10 million and $15 million.

For example, as potential sites are evaluated, the users would fund the cost of evaluating the geology, underground water flow and potential environmental impact of putting the facility there.

User payments also could finance the authority's staff operations, which eventually will cost about $500,000 per year, Eisenbud said.

The purpose of the contributions would be helping the authority keep on schedule as it pushes to have the facility opened by 1993 — the date chosen by the Southeast Low-level Radioactive Waste Compact Commission.

Long Orders Cut In Vehicle Rates

RALEIGH (AP) — Jim Long has become the first insurance commissioner in North Carolina to order insurance companies to cut their rates.

"Never happened before," Long said Monday after ordering the companies to cut the auto insurance rates by 3.9 percent. "Never had the authority before."

He said the General Assembly had passed a law in 1986 giving him the power to lower rates that he found excessive.

Long Monday rejected a 3.5 percent rate increase sought by the insurance industry as "totally unjustified."

The reduction, effective April 1, will save policy holders $81 million, Long said. It affects only those who carry collision and full comprehensive insurance — about 70 percent of the state's insured drivers.

The 30 percent who have only liability coverage required by law will see their rates increase 8.6 percent.

Long's ruling came after an eight-day hearing on the industry's request for a rate hike. The North Carolina Rate Bureau, which requested the increase on behalf of the companies, has 30 days to challenge the decision before the state Court of Appeals.

Long, a first-term Democrat seeking re-election this year, said he based his decision largely on a belief that the companies were seeking excessive underwriting profits.

"I don't want to drive any of them out of the state," Long said. "I want the companies in the state... and I want the insurance companies to make a reasonable profit in North Carolina. I don't want them to make an excessive profit."

More than 140 companies are seeking permission to do business in the state, Long said, which "tells me the rates are not too low for them."

Art Ivey, chairman of the Rate Bureau's governing committee, said he was "extremely disappointed" by Long's ruling. "We were pretty confident that the filing we made was supported by solid documentation."

"We feel there should be a profit margin in the price of anything," Ivey said. "We cannot depend on investments to always carry the load for us."

Patrol Changing To 9mm Pistols

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Highway Patrol is replacing its standard, 6-shot .357 Magnum revolvers with 9mm Beretta semi-automatic pistols that hold 16 shots, patrol officials say.

"It is a high-quality weapon that we feel very comfortable with," said Col. Jack Cardwell, commander of the Highway Patrol. "They are also very controllable. A .357 is hard to control."

'Mr. Miss America' He Sees Pageant Progress

By JOYCE A. VENEZIA
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — If former Miss America contestants could turn the tables on the man who ran the show and ask the probing questions, they'd discover that Albert Marks has never posed nude, never had a nose job and never tried marijuana.

But the pageant's former executive director does smoke — he said. He does drink — Smirnoff on the rocks. And once in a while he gets angry. In 35 years, he has seen the pageant through rocky times: the scorn of the women's liberation movement, a messy situation with aging emcee Bert Parks and even the scandal of a nude Miss America, Vanessa Williams.

Now, in his retirement year, Marks is happy with where the pageant stands. "There was a transformation in the late 1960s, a transformation of women themselves," he said. "And the pageant changed from a Barbie doll approach to a NOW approach."

Marks said that 1987 was the first year he did not receive any negative viewer mail after the pageant, and he took that to be a good time to end his reign as executive director.

The 75-year-old stockbroker initially said he would remain as chairman for a transition year but later decided to avoid splitting authority and turned all duties over to pageant counsel Leonard Horn immediately. He remains an adviser.

What would drive anyone, especially a man, to volunteer countless hours to a beauty pageant while holding a full-time job?

"Being with beautiful women is the least of it," Marks said. "Some people have to have a challenge to keep their adrenalin going. I asked for it and I got it."

Marks' first pageant job was as the local chamber of commerce president assigned to escort actress Marilyn Monroe in the pageant parade. He rose through the ranks to become executive director, a year-round job involving dealings with sponsors, TV executives, myriad state and local pageants, the media, even the crews building the sets for next September's event.

"Through it all, he has had a good sense of humor and usually a very good disposition," Horn said. "And he was able to make decisions quickly, whether rightly or wrongly. ... But he didn't agonize over decisions, and that was an attractive quality."

Looking back, the man known as "Mr. Miss America" paused to chuckle about the humorous moments, including the time a contestant's trained doves left "calling cards" to the audience.

But there were somber times over the years.

At the height of the Vanessa Williams scandal in 1984, after Penthouse magazine published nude photographs of her, "it wasn't very funny when a fellow threw a tire iron through the front door of the pageant office in protest of Vanessa being 'crucified,'" Marks said.

Subsequent threats to Marks and his family, alleging that the pageant was racist, "caused me to have guards around my home 24 hours a day," he said. "That wasn't funny, either."

Marks emerged unscathed, always eloquent even in trouble. Among reporters, Marks is known for pointing to the creases in his forehead and jokingly associating each line with a pageant scandal.

"This one is Vanessa. This one is Bert Parks," he said, referring to the former pageant host who was fired in 1980, prompting Johnny Carson's facetious "Bring Back Bert" campaign.

The Parks episode still hurts Marks.

"We were good friends," Marks said of Parks, "and either he did not understand what happened or did not wish to understand."

Parks learned he was fired from an Associated Press reporter who telephoned him for his reaction. Although Marks insisted he had sent a letter, Parks said he never received it. The emcee was more disappointed when some reports said he was fired because of his age, even though the pageant said it wanted a new image.

The Vanessa Williams scandal also hurts Marks.

"Vanessa was a very nice, very bright young woman and as far as I know, she still is," he said. "She suffered beyond rhyme or reason for a mistake she made long before we ever heard of her."

"And I always felt very badly about it. She was our first black Miss America, and I'd hoped for that for years to prove a point not only to the pageant but to blacks in general."

Changes lie ahead, he said. Horn faces the challenge of maintaining a network television audience, Marks said, noting that increasing VCR use has cut the number of television viewers.

The pageant telecast, an annual event since 1954, is not attracting the contestants' peers, 18-to-28-year-old women, Marks said.

He acknowledged "that for many young people, you're not 'with it' to admire something like the Miss America Pageant."

"I suspect it has to do with the impression that the pageant is outdated, that it is trivia," he said, countering that the pageant dispenses more than $5.5 million worth of scholarships to local, state and national winners.

"I've tried for years to get across that the scholarship is the real reason for the pageant. It does for 10,000 young women a year precisely what the athletic programs at universities do for the jocks."

Crying Babies Are Upsetting

DEAR ABBY: "Roger's Mom" wrote of her experience in a restaurant with Roger, her 6-month-old colicky boy who became fussy and cried a lot. The waitress politely informed "Mom" that some customers were leaving because her baby was disturbing them, whereupon Mom and her husband canceled their dinner order and left with the crying baby. She asked if you thought the waitress could have approached the situation in a different way.

You rightfully replied, "How else could the situation be approached? I think the waitress acted appropriately."

Hooray for you, Abby. Last week, my husband and I hired a baby sitter so we could dine out on our 10th anniversary. Our children are 1, 5 and 8. Seated at the table next to us was a couple with a baby who appeared to be about 10 months old. The baby first whimpered, then cried, and finally screamed during most of the meal. The mother tried unsuccessfully to quiet the child — meanwhile the screaming continued. The place was filled, or we would have asked for another table. Needless to say, it ruined our evening.

How I wish the waitress would have approached those people and suggested that they take the crying child out until it settled down. Everyone around us was upset. One couple left without finishing their meal.

I think it is the height of insensitivity for parents to allow a child to carry on that way in a public dining room. — DISGUSTED IN DENVER

DEAR DISGUSTED: I am pleased to know that someone agreed with me. Read on for someone who did not:

DEAR ABBY: I am not quibbling about your reply to "Roger's Mom," whose party left a restaurant when the waitress told them that people were leaving because Roger's crying was disturbing them. However, it did make me think about the increasing intolerance our society seems to have for its youngest members.

I'll never forget when my son was 4 months old, and having no one to leave him with, I took him with me to a lecture given by poet and writer Maya Angelou. He began to fuss in the middle of her lecture — then the people around me started giving me dirty looks. I was getting up to walk out with him when Ms. Angelou noticed. She interrupted her talk to say, "Let the child speak. That noise that is disturbing some of you is music to me — I'm sorry that more children aren't here today. Children are our future. Don't teach them they're not wanted. Don't teach them to be silent. Let the child speak!"

I sat down and people turned their attention back to Maya Angelou, who then told us that due to a traumatic experience she had had in her own childhood, she was unable to speak for several years.

Having spent much time in West Africa and South America, I have come to think that our society is the only one in which the "right" to undisturbed pleasure overrides the concern for its children — the future of our society. That's why I can't argue with your reply that the waitress's action was appropriate. It was, given the situation. But it's a sad and shameful situation. — CYNTHIA WARD, STANFORD, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a person who would send a gift (wedding, Christmas or whatever) with the sales slip inside, or even the price tag on it? She writes a little note saying, "If this isn't to your liking, you can exchange it."

I couldn't believe my eyes! — AP-PALLED IN ST. LOUIS

DEAR APPALLED: Why are you "appalled"? I think it's a very considerate gesture.

Daily Weather Is Favorite Topic

A 78-year-old woman named Marshall from Oak Ridge, Tenn., wrote to ask, "Is the state of Utah still there? I never hear it mentioned in the weather reports. I listen and I worry. Last fall in Oak Ridge, the crickets were strange. They made themselves at home watching TV and hopping about. They didn't chirp, creek, chip, or whatever that noise is when they rub this and that together. Instead they let you approach them and then jumped straight to the ceiling ker boom."

"There were also moths that were disruptive, stomping around in my hair when I tried to read in bed. They were a warning of a horrendous winter. Don't they measure the length of caterpillars' hair or fuzz? Seems like I've heard of turning over rocks but I don't remember why."

Marshall is a prime example of the nation's infatuation with the weather. It's the one thing that links the 50 states together in a chain of concern for one another. It's all we ever talk about. I heard a woman say the other night she knew it was going to be a severe winter because she had to shave her legs twice as often. Another woman observed she could always tell how cold it was outside by the number of times a dog has to be let out, multiplied by three and divided by the number of kids in the bathroom. The hostess said she had been tracking a bad storm system set to move into Maine over the weekend.

"Are you going to Maine?" I asked. "I don't even know anyone in Maine," she said.

It's incredible when you think about our preoccupation with the elements. We get into a cab. The first thing we talk about is the weather. We call family long distance. At a buck twenty-five per minute we ask, "What's the weather like?" We write a letter. The first page is the weather report. Every day I open my newspaper and read what the weather is in my hometown. I haven't lived there in 16 years.

At Wits End

Every night most of us are riveted by the news of cold fronts, high and low pressure areas, and air masses from Canada causing snow at the 4,000-foot elevation even though most of us don't speak weatherese. I thought a Chinook wind was a guy who told duck jokes at the bar.

And yet, we all cling together during the good weather and the bad. When Florida storms cause a power outage, we all rush to our phones to see if people are all right. If a cow so much as scratches in L.A., we all brace for a quake. Through heat waves, brown-outs, mud slides, tornadoes, twisters, hurricanes and blizzards, we all care.

Incidentally, Marshall, I called Salt Lake City, Utah. It's still there. It has a high of 38 and a low of 22 under sunny skies. Ski conditions are excellent. This is attributed to the number of deer who nibbled on lawns this year.

NO PLACE LIKE HOME — Rex the coon hound, his whereabouts a mystery for more than two and a half years, returned to his home last week in Brattleboro, Vt., to find a baby sitter in the house and another dog in his doghouse. Arthur Thomas and his wife Emily had no idea where Rex disappeared to on an April afternoon in 1985. But Rex knew he was home last week. "He walked into the house, walked into the living room and put his head on a pillow like he had never left," said Mrs. Thomas. (AP Laserphoto)

The leading index, composed of 11 forward-pointing business statistics, has taken on added significance since the Black Monday collapse of the stock market in October.

But analysts were split on whether the three-month decline is a definitive signal of a recession or just an indication of an impending slowdown in growth.

Since the leading index was created after World War II, every recession has been preceded by at least three consecutive monthly declines in the index.

But on four occasions, the index has fallen for three consecutive months and no outright recession occurred. Economic growth, however, did slow substantially.

In fact, the last time the index fell for three months was from June through August in 1984.

Among Karachun's concerns are development, preserving natural resources and working to change the bureaucratic nature of government.

"The constant growth of asphalt and concrete on the Earth is not always a good measure of progress. Quality over quantity will be important as the population increases," he said in an interview.

Karachun points to the pollution problems of the Tar River and Pamlico Sound as examples of unnecessary environmental damage.

"We need to grow without destroying our natural watersheds. This will become more of an issue as time goes on," he said.

He also said positions in government should be more directly accountable.

"No position or job description should be without full accountability by the public. I believe that increased accountability will bring about greater efficiency and open up positions for the truly talented individuals who put the needs of others first," he said.

Karachun is a member of Lodge 284 of the local Masonic Order, a life member of the National Rifle Association, and a member of the Vietnam Veterans of America.

"We do feel that this is a step in the right direction ... for all people. It is time for us to be concerned with the welfare of the entire population."

Farney Moore Jr., a spokesman for the Pitt County chapter of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, said, "This is truly a historic decision for the citizens of Pitt County."

"The citizens of Pitt County deserve the best," Moore said. "We have never doubted the fairness of others when you stick in there and search for the good points of others, regardless of race or position."

Bennie Rountree, a member of the Pitt SCLC chapter and state SCLC president, said, "We are happy indeed that the Pitt commissioners have seen fit to come to terms with a situation and make the necessary adjustments that will represent all citizens in Pitt County."

Students Seek Exam Changes

and teachers in that students do not have enough time to study for all of their exams, especially if they are honor students. Academically advantaged and gifted students are taught at a faster pace, learn more and cover more material — which creates an atmosphere much like that of college, Martin Walker of J.H. Rose High School said.

But, he said, "unlike college students, honors students don't have adequate time to prepare for exams," with three to six exams being taken in a few days. Walker suggested that reading days be scheduled on Tuesday and Thursday of exam week with exams being scheduled on Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

Michael Moore of Rose High School said exam exemptions provide incentive for the average student to go to school. Echoing the need for reading days, he said it would provide "more time to prepare and do better" on the exams.

Anna Harrington of D.H. Conley High School also suggested the five-day exam schedule and said a number of exams should be required for students to take before graduating from high school. That would give students exam-taking experience for college courses, she said.

The five-day exam schedule, which would include the two reading days and a teacher workday on the following Monday, also would give teachers more time to grade exams adequately, Ms. Harrington said.

Billie Lennon, a teacher at J.H. Rose High School, commended the foresight and courage of the students to address the board. "Look at these young people," she said. "They have taken words of their teachers and school system seriously" and have presented some valid concerns.

Susan Zadeits, who also spoke to the board, commended the students for sticking together on the issue, and told the board, "I ask your consideration in continuing with an exam exemption policy."

The board agreed to study the effects of the previous exam exemption policies of the last two years and the effects of the current policy established in September. In response to a question from board member Mark Owens, Leck Keeter, associate superintendent for personnel and administrative services, said the school calendar would have to be extended or days would have to be taken within the calendar to include two reading days in the exam schedule.

In other matters, Charles Lee of the Riverhill subdivision addressed the board with considerations as it reviews attendance lines for the schools this year. "Since 1981, kindergarten through third-grade (students) have been bused to Third Street School," he said. "The concern is over the necessity of long-distance busing."

Lee said only five children are bused to Third Street and do not affect the racial make-up of the school. And, the school day is extended two hours for the students who do not board the bus at 7 a.m. and do not arrive back home until after 3 p.m. He suggested Eastern Elementary as a more "sensible choice" for those students.

The board adopted resolutions in support of National School Guidance and Counseling Week through Friday and Vocational Education Week Sunday through Feb. 13.

The board also approved personnel recommendations and bids for construction projects at A.G. Cox, Ayden Elementary, Grifton and W.H. Robinson schools. The quarterly budget amendment was approved in addition to appointments to the Community Schools Advisory Council and replacements to the Area Advisory Council.

The board received slide presentations on the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Hospital School Program and on the Community Schools. It also was noted that the school system will receive a grant for $29,996 for "Project Life," targeted to assist persons with developmental disabilities in making the transition from school to work life. And, Bethel Elementary School is the only state school named as a national demonstration site for the Every Child A Winner Program.

During its meeting in March, the board will consider the 1988-89 school calendar, board attendance at national and state conventions, board representation to advisory councils and board member visitation in schools.

Hot Camels Thrash Pirates, 77-50

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
FAYETTEVILLE — Earlier this year, when Campbell University visited East Carolina, the Camels were held to only 35 percent shooting. Monday night, on their "home" court at the Cumberland County Arena, they found the other 65 percent.

The hot shooting Camels scorched the Pirates, 77-50, in the rematch, easily avenging their earlier 61-54 loss to ECU. Campbell shot 64.1 percent for the game while holding the Pirates to just 41.7 percent.

It left ECU coach Mike Steele very upset and he packed the team among the bus and headed back to Greenville for a midnight practice session.

"They played a great game," he said of the Camels. "Their guard (Brad) Childress is as good as any guard we've played this year.

"They were fired up and they played better than we did at the guards, and inside. They beat us in every phase of the game," Steele added.

Childress canned nine of 10 shots from the floor, mostly jump shots. He also was helped along by fellow backcourt mate Gary Elmore — a 31 percent shooter — who hit on four of eight 3-point baskets, including three of four in the first half.

Up front Sanders Jackson — held scoreless in the first meeting of the two schools — scored eight this time but pulled in a game high 10 rebounds to lead Campbell to a 28-20 margin in that department. And Henry Wilson pushed through a game high 21 points to lead the Camels in scoring.

Asked if he thought the Pirates may have been mentally down following Saturday night's heart-breaking 71-69 loss to UNC-Wilmington, Steele said it doubted it. "You can't be that far down," he said. "They just got beaten bad by UNC-Asheville Saturday (91-73) and they came back with a vengeance. Our guys just weren't ready to play."

Steele was also questioned about how the first game may have affected this one. "I think it had a lot to do with it. But we weren't better than they were last time — we just got every break in the book. We can't play people like Richmond and Wilmington close. Close is not like beating anybody. If we thought this game would be easy, it's obvious we were wrong.

The Pirates fell behind early by 10 points then rallied early in the second half to tie it up at 40-40.

But there the Pirates self-destructed and scored only 11 more points the rest of the way. The final 17:22 showing and the Pirates cut the lead back to 10-6 before Elmore hit another 3-pointer and Childress followed with a jumper for a 19-8 margin.

It hung around that area until Elmore connected with 2:23 to go in the half on his fourth 3-pointer for a 38-26 lead.

But the Pirates then went on a tear, scoring 10 straight points, three each by Reed Lose and Kenny Murphy, to cut the lead to 38-36 at intermission.

Campbell got the first basket of the second half, but Stanley Love hit from underneath to cut it back to two.

(See CAMPBELL, B-2)

minutes of the game, Campbell outscored East Carolina 35-10.

In fact, ECU scored only three field goals in the final 15 minutes of the game, one in each of five-minute segments.

Jackson proved that he could score by getting the opening bucket against the Pirates and then Childress hit a jumper. Elmore came down and fired through two straight 3-pointers to give the Camels a 10-0 lead.

East Carolina had suffered a turnover and three missed shots in their first three possessions while Campbell scored on each of its first four.

Gus Hill finally got the Pirates on the board with a 3-point play with well with better defense and more hustle."

Kenny Turner added 12 points for Virginia, 12-9, and Darrick Simms had 10.

Devils Rip Clemson, 101-63

By The Associated Press
Fourth-ranked Duke dug deep into its bench and came up with an Atlantic Coast Conference victory, playing a pressure game that pleased one of the most demanding defensive taskmasters.

"We played hard and we played excellent defense," said Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski after Monday's 101-63 victory over Clemson. "For a young team like Clemson's ... well, they just had some problems."

Those problems included 21 turnovers and a five-minute period that produced only eight points.

In another game involving an ACC team, Virginia strayed from its original game plan but came back in time to post a 77-52 victory over non-conference opponent Jacksonville.

Sophomore guard Phil Henderson led the Blue Devil charge with 18 points. He was 7 of 7 from the field, 4 of 4 from the free throw line and he grabbed five rebounds and handed out four assists.

The game became lopsided early enough to allow Krzyzewski to go to his bench often. All 12 Blue Devils saw playing time.

"There were a couple of reasons why we went to the bench a little earlier and a little deeper than we have in the past," Krzyzewski said. "Number one, we wanted to exert a little pressure on the ball. That, combined with the fact that it was so hot (in Cameron Indoor Stadium). I know after coaching here for eight years that if you start playing the passing lanes hard, you can't play for very long."

"I never felt we had a letdown in the game, no matter what lineup we had in there," Krzyzewski said. "I was pleased with our focus."

Duke, now 14-2 and 4-1 in the ACC, took a 54-26 halftime lead on the strength of a 26-8 scoring spurt, keyed by Henderson and Danny Ferry. It helped the Blue Devils build a 48-26 lead with 2:05 left.

Defensive pressure produced four turnovers in the early minutes of the second half and helped Duke build a 71-41 lead with 12:34 left. The largest lead was 90-49 with 6:02 left.

Kevin Strickland added scored 16 points for Duke. Freshman Donnell Bruce led Clemson, 11-7 and 1-5, with 15 points.

In Charlottesville, Virginia trailed 23-18 with about 10 minutes left in the first half, but limited Jacksonville to 14 points over the next 20 minutes.

Mel Kennedy scored 19 points and triggered a second-half run that put the game away. He scored 11 points during a 23-4 run in the first eight minutes of the second half that moved the Cavaliers from a 35-31 halftime lead to a 58-35 advantage with 12:02 left.

"... I was not pleased with our toughness early in the game," said Virginia coach Terry Holland. "I thought we were trying to play a finesse game and we were going to float around the perimeter and follow up our jumpers while they were driving it in the lane.

"The game plan was a complete opposite of that. We knew that they were a very good and athletic team and they would give us problems putting the ball on the floor. I felt like early in the game they were penetrating our defense and moving us around.

"Toward the end of the half, I thought that our team started to play

Richard Bell has been named defensive coordinator at East Carolina, Pirate head coach Art Baker said Monday.

Bell, 51, joins the ECU coaching staff after serving for five years as defensive coordinator and assistant head coach at Duke.

His association with Baker dates back to 1970-72, when the two were coaches on the Texas Tech staff.

"I'm very excited about the opportunity to join coach Baker and his staff at East Carolina," Bell said. "I've followed the growth of ECU football for many years, and I think it truly has great potential as a major southern independent."

Bell has coached on the staffs of Virginia Military Institute, Georgia Tech, West Virginia, Texas Tech, South Carolina and Duke.

A 1959 graduate of Arkansas, Bell has one of the most respected names in the business. He has served as a collegiate-level defensive coordinator for 17 seasons.

Bell began his coaching career in 1962 as the offensive and defen-

Honors Don't Guarantee Job

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Being named the Super Bowl's Most Valuable Player has earned Doug Williams a new car and a shot at a substantial raise. It won't, however, guarantee him a job with the Washington Redskins next season.

Williams, who threw for 340 yards and four touchdowns in Washington's 42-10 rout of the Denver Broncos, will begin next season in the same fashion that he ended this one: competing with Jay Schroeder for the quarterback job.

"I think the position is extremely competitive," Washington Coach Joe Gibbs said Monday. "We have an older player in Doug who's been around and we have a young one who's proven he can win.

"We have depth and we'll be competitive there," Gibbs said. "Those players will make each other better."

A few hours before the Redskins headed back to Washington, Williams limped to a podium to accept the keys to the car that accompanied the MVP award. His knee, sprained moments before he ignited Washington's record-breaking 35-point second-quarter on Sunday, had stiffened overnight. Walking on Monday proved more difficult than piercing the Denver defense on Sunday.

The Super Bowl capped a rocky season for Williams, who was jerked in and out of the starting lineup all year. At one point, the situation left him choking back tears.

But he finished on top of the football world, only two years after the Redskins were the only team to show an interest in signing him after the USFL folded. In fact, even as late as October, when Washington dangled Williams as trade bait at his request, no team offered the Redskins reasonable compensation.

"Thank God for that," Williams said. "With one year left on a three-year contract worth $475,000 a season, Williams can look forward to renegotiating. And he doesn't expect to have to break down the doors of the Redskins front office to get what he deserves.

"I don't think I'll even have to go to them," he said. "(General Manager)

Bobby Beathard told me earlier in the year, when I talked about a trade and upgrading my salary, that all I had to do was play.

McNeil Wins 55, Qualifies For NCAA

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — East Carolina's Lee Vernon McNeil captured a first place in the University of Florida Invitational this past weekend and qualified for the NCAA Indoor Track and Field championship meet.

McNeil won the 55-meter dash in a time of 6.29 seconds. His preliminary time of 6.28, however, was the qualifying standard for the NCAA meet.

Tim Daughtry also took a first for the Pirates, winning the 500-meter run in 1:04.41. His time qualified him for the IC4A meet, to be held later this year.

UNC-Charlotte Tops UNC-Wilmington

CHARLOTTE (AP) - Byron Dinkins scored 22 points and dished out 10 assists, leading North Carolina-Charlotte to an 85-75 non-conference college basketball victory over North Carolina-Wilmington Monday night.

UNC, which improved to 13-6, pulled away from the Seahawks in the middle of the second half, after Larry Houzer's jumper brought North Carolina-Wilmington within 46-44 with 15:43 left in the game.

A Dan Plondke jumper capped a 12-3 49er run, as the 49ers led 56-49 at the 12:14 mark.

The Seahawks, 10-8, pulled no closer than four points from there, as a three-point jumper by Jeff West provided the largest UNCC lead, 80-68, with 2:41 left in the game.

In the first seven minutes of the game, the teams exchanged the lead eight times.

Houzer, whose 23 points led all scorers, netted 12 of the first 17 Seahawk points. His follow gave UNCW its largest lead, 17-12, with 10:07 left in the first half.

UNC tied the game on a Dinkins three-pointer with 8:03 left in the half, and the 49ers led 40-36 at intermission.

Plondke scored 16 points for UNCC, while Mike Washington added 15 and West 11.

Roy Walker chipped in 18 for UNCW, while Antonio Howard added 13 points and Greg Bender scored 10.

NBA Players Might Be At '92 Olympics

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — An international basketball official expects the world governing body to approve rules changes that would allow professionals to play in the Olympics and World Championships.

Bora Stankovic, secretary-general of the International Amateur Basketball Federation, said Monday chances were excellent that the full FIBA congress would accept a recommendation made Sunday by its governing board. Approval, to be sought at a meeting the congress next April in Munich, would open the World Championships to profes-

NFC Gaining Upper Hand

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Washington Redskins Coach Joe Gibbs begs off the question and other NFC officials tread gingerly over it for fear of riling up the other conference.

But Washington's 42-10 rout of Denver in Sunday's Super Bowl underlines what has become obvious — the NFC, where the good teams prefer physical play to finesse, has become superior, at least at the top, to the AFC.

That fact will probably be underlined again next year when the Chicago Bears, San Francisco 49ers, New York Giants, Minnesota Vikings, New Orleans Saints or perhaps even the Philadelphia Eagles, hand the Broncos their third lopsided

Super Bowl loss. The Redskins, of course, won't be back because no team this decade has repeated.

Gibbs declined Monday to address the domination theory.

"Each of those games are totally separate," he said. "I don't see it as AFC-NFC. Each of those teams got hot for a day. What takes over and contributes to a lopsided game is difficult to understand."

General Manager George Young of the Giants noted that the AFC won eight of the 10 Super Bowls played in the 1970s.

"It goes in cycles," he said. "This is one of those cycles."

But there's a difference between the two decades.

Six of the eight AFC victories in the 1970s were posted by Pittsburgh and Miami — four by the Steelers and two by the Dolphins, who went to three straight Super Bowls.

The NFC has had four different one-sided winners — the 49ers by 22 points, the Bears by 36, the Giants by 19 and the Redskins by 32. None of the four scored less than 38 points and the composite was 165-56, with 14 of the losers' points coming on throw-away touchdowns near the end.

All of that has to do with defense. All those NFC teams played it and the AFC teams didn't.

Denver, for example, tends to give up points in bunches — 35 in the second quarter Sunday, 30 in the second half of last year's Super Bowl loss to the Giants, and 28 in the second half of its AFC title game win over Cleveland, a figure that would have been 35 had not the Browns' Earnest Byner fumbled at the 2-yard line as he was about to score the tying touchdown.

"I think it's that we're just more physical," offensive tackle Mark May of the Redskins said. "We're used to getting beat on and beat up every Sunday and we can wear smaller teams down."

It also has to do with front-office talent.

Redskins General Manager Bobby Beathard was director of player personnel for the Dolphins of the 1970s and Young was there, too. Jim Finks, who helped build the current Bears, is now doing the same at New Orleans, and San Francisco Coach Bill Walsh has earned his reputation for more than coaching.

Beathard is a whiz at unearthing unknown talent. An example is Timmy Smith, who rushed for 204 yards in the Super Bowl as a rookie after barely playing his junior and senior years at Texas Tech. He was a fifth-round draft choice who played like a first-rounder. Beathard usually trades away his top pick unless exactly the player he wants is available.

Moreover, the NFC has most of the league's improving teams, like the Vikings, Saints and Eagles, all building punishing front sevens on defense.

The most physical AFC teams, the Seattle Seahawks and the Los Angeles Raiders, are saddled by quarterback problems.

Of the emerging AFC teams, Buffalo seems closest to emulating the NFC model — a solid quarterback in Jim Kelly and three potential All-Pro up front on defense — end Bruce Smith and linebackers Shane Conlan and Cornelius Bennett.

Indianapolis also has a physical front seven, led by linebacker Duane Bickett, but the Colts have quarterback questions and may have mortgaged the future in the trade for running back Eric Dickerson.

That front seven and the running game seems to be the key. The Bears and Giants each won Super Bowls despite mediocre secondaries and receivers. Smith's running on Sunday opened up the passing lanes for Doug Williams, who was considered to be hardly in John Elway's class as a quarterback.

The AFC has the star quarterbacks, but Elway has lost two Super Bowls and Miami's Dan Marino another, simply because their teams had defensive problems.

And that may be the final part of the equation to explain all the lopsided Super Bowls.

NBA Players Might Be At '92 Olympics

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — An international basketball official expects the world governing body to approve rules changes that would allow professionals to play in the Olympics and World Championships.

Bora Stankovic, secretary-general of the International Amateur Basketball Federation, said Monday chances were excellent that the full FIBA congress would accept a recommendation made Sunday by its governing board. Approval, to be sought at a meeting the congress next April in Munich, would open the World Championships to professionals in 1990 and the Olympics in 1992.

"The move to allow professionals to compete at the Olympics and world championships is primarily directed at opening these events to NBA stars," Stankovic said.

But he said the U.S. board member, Bill Wald, opposed the move because the U.S. federation wasn't sure how the NBA would react to possible scheduling conflicts with Olympics and World Championships.

With NBA officials traveling to Chicago for next Sunday's All-Star Game, the league office had no comment.

Williams met with late Sunday night. It was an emotional meeting, particularly for Robinson.

"I'm at the age that I didn't know if I would see a Grambling quarterback play in the Super Bowl," Robinson said. "This is the performance he gave us for four years. It's just a different scenario."

Williams threw for 8,411 yards in leading four Grambling teams to a combined 35-5 record. Robinson was just as pleased with Williams' effort against the Broncos, and said it could lead to more opportunities for blacks.

"I think the NFL has finally removed the stigma of a black man playing quarterback," Robinson said. "Now I hope they remove the stigma of a black man being a head coach."

GCA Gets Sweep Of Falls Road

ROCKY MOUNT — Greenville Christian's boys' and girls' basketball teams both used big first quarters to roll to a sweep over Falls Road Christian Academy Monday night.

In the girl's game, GCA built up a 30-11 first quarter lead and never looked back as the Lady Knights cruised to a 66-38 win.

Jennifer Boleman led the way for GCA with 13 points while Joanie Cherry added 12 and Amber Tripp 10.

Candy Jo Evans had 11 points to lead Falls Road.

GCA's girls move to 15-1 with the win and return to action, along with the boys, Friday at Wake Christian in Raleigh.

In the boy's game, GCA built up a big first-quarter lead but then had to hold off a late challenge by Falls Road to take a 71-62 victory.

GCA led 27-6 at the beginning of the second quarter but Falls Road rallied in the second quarter by outscoring GCA 21-12 to make it 39-28.

Falls Road slowly edged back and in the final minutes drew within three at 66-63 but that was as close as the score would get. GCA steadily pulled away from there to take the win.

Robin House's 27 points led the way for GCA, which remains undefeated at 16-0. Clint Parker added 16 and Kevin Joyner had 14 for the Knights.

Fenner Agrees to A Plea Bargain

UPPER MARLBORO, Md. (AP) — Former North Carolina football star Derrick Fenner has pleaded guilty to one count of cocaine possession in a plea agreement with the Prince George's County state's attorney, a spokeswoman said Monday.

Under the arrangement, the state's attorney agreed to "nol pros" a weapons charge, which means it will not be prosecuted.

The agreement between the prosecutors and Fenner's attorney was accepted last Wednesday by Prince George's Circuit Judge Jacob Levin, said Alexis Revis, spokeswoman for state's attorney Alex Williams.

Sentencing was set for March 23.

Fenner was accused of illegally transporting a handgun and possessing cocaine after he was pulled over by police while driving a friend's truck last May.

Fenner could not produce a registration certificate for the truck and the police searched the vehicle. They found a .38-caliber revolver and ammunition under the front seat and a plastic bag containing 25 vials with cocaine residue in Fenner's jacket.

The cocaine charge carries a maximum penalty of four years in prison and a $25,000 fine.

Fenner's attorney, Fred Joseph, said he believed the court will consider the six weeks Fenner has already spent in jail on a charge that was later dropped.

"Derrick has already paid an extremely high price," said Joseph.

A murder charge against Fenner was dropped last November by prosecutors who said new evidence had revealed that Fenner was not near the scene of the crime.

He was arrested in June after the fatal shooting of a 19-year-old in what police described as a drug turf war.

Fenner has been trying to return to the University of North Carolina. As a sophomore there he set an Atlantic Coast Conference record for rushing 329 yards against the University of Virginia and was the leading rusher in the conference in 1986.

Local Junior High Basketball Action

KINSTON — Ayden Middle School swept a pair of junior high school basketball games from Woodington Monday.

In the boys' game, Ayden gained a 40-38 victory. Ayden was led by Thomas Edwards with 15 while Woodington was paced by Graham with 16.

Ayden's boys are now 3-4 on the year.

Ayden's girls took a 36-31 win in their game. Denise Allen led Ayden with 13 points. Ayden is now 7-0.

Ayden returns to action on Thursday, hosting Grifton.

FARMVILLE — Farmville Middle School won a pair of junior high school basketball games from G.R. Whitfield Monday.

In the boys' game, Farmville took a 52-41 victory. Farmville was led by Ronald Monk with 18 and Reggie Tyson with 12. Whitfield was paced by Alkivan Thompson with 14 while Gary Yarell added 12.

Farmville's girls won their game, 45-8. Charlene Reid led Farmville with 17 points while Karen Blake had five to top Whitfield.

Wellcome and Chicod Middle schools split a pair of basketball games Monday with the Chicod girls and the Wellcome boys taking a 48-33 win.

Stephanie Mills led Chicod with 15 points while Robin Clark was the high scorer for Wellcome with seven points.

In the boy's game, Sidney Boyd led Wellcome with 15 points while Quentin Moore and Chris Shepard added seven points apiece. Bobby Grogan and Patrick Leary had 10 points apiece for Chicod.

Carlyle, Monroe Earn ACC Weekly Honors

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Wake Forest forward David Carlyle, whose 21 points keyed the Demon Deacons' 83-80 upset of third-ranked North Carolina, has been named player of the week in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Carlyle, a Winston-Salem native, scored 18 of his game-high 21 points in the second half as Wake Forest rallied from a 14-point deficit to defeat the Tar Heels for the first time in 13 meetings.

The 6-foot-7 sophomore connected on seven of his 13 attempts from the floor, including three of six from the three-point range, and four of five free throws.

Two days later, Carlyle scored 22 points as the Demon Deacons lost 69-64 at Virginia.

In another announcement, North Carolina State forward Rodney Monroe, who came off the bench to spark the Wolfpack to a 71-66 victory over DePaul, has been named rookie of the week in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Monroe, a 6-foot-3, 173-pound freshman, scored 17 points against the Blue Demons, including a key three-pointer that gave the Wolfpack a 64-62 lead with 2:26 to play.

Campbell...

Jimmy Hinton forced a 5-second turnover on Childress then hit a jumper to tie it at 40-40 with 18:09 left.

After that, the Pirates disappeared.

Wilson made two free throws to put Campbell back up and Childress added a rebound for a 46-40 lead. Love made a 3-point play with 15:41 left, but the Pirates didn't score again for the next two and a half minutes.

Meanwhile Campbell dumped in seven more points, five of them by Wilson, to take a 53-43 advantage.

Love hit with 12:28 left and Childress hit two in a row to make it 57-45.

Hill made the next ECU basket with 9:27 to play, but Campbell reeled off 12 straight, eight by Wilson and four by Childress, to run the lead to 69-47.

Ronnie Gibbs made the first of a two-shot charity attempt, and after another Campbell basket, got the final ECU bucket with 2:27 to play.

Campbell then scored the final six points to finish off the rout.

It marked the third-worst loss the Pirates have ever suffered at the hands of the Camels, and one must go back to the 1939-40 season to find the second worst, 77-41. It was only the 13th win in 37 games between the two schools, and the first since the 1984-85 season, that win coming in Greenville. The last win in Fayetteville was in the 1983-84 season.

In addition to Wilson's 21, Childress had 18 and Elmore 14 for the Camels, now 10-8. ECU, which falls to 6-13,

Wichita Victory Could Ease Braves Out

By The Associated Press

It was one of those nights for Wichita State, a night that could make Bradley's appearance in The Associated Press Top Twenty a brief stay.

"We could not have played any better offensively than we did tonight," Wichita State Coach Eddie Fogler said.

Dwayne Praylow was the perfect example.

Known as a defensive specialist, a player who comes off the bench to guard the opponent's leading scorer, Praylow was given only his second start of the season Monday night. The 6-foot-5 junior scored a career-high 24 points and grabbed nine rebounds to lead the Shockers to a 116-92 upset victory over 18th-ranked Bradley and into sole possession of first place in the Missouri Valley Conference.

"Tonight we just made everything," Fogler said. "You have to when you play Bradley or they will take the ball and break."

Only two other Top Twenty schools played Monday night, No. 4 Duke crushing Clemson 101-63 and Villanova upsetting No. 14 Georgetown 64-58.

Wichita State's victory gave the Shockers a 12-7 record overall and 5-2 league mark. Bradley fell to second place in the MVC at 4-2 and 13-3.

Praylow snapped a 67-67 tie with a 12-foot jumper with 12:17 left. Sasha Radunovich scored on a fast break and John Cooper hit a 13-footer. Suddenly, Wichita State was ahead 73-67.

Henderson and Danny Ferry, who scored all of his 13 points in the opening 20 minutes, were the leaders as Duke pulled away after leading just 22-18 with 8:43 left in the first half. Henderson scored four points during a 10-0 run that made it 32-18 lead with 7:07 left in the half. Ferry scored eight points in two minutes as Duke made it 48-26 lead with 2:05 remaining in the half.

Freshman Donnell Bruce scored 15 points and Tim Kincaid added 13 for Clemson, 11-7 overall and 1-5 in the ACC.

Villanova 64, No. 14 Georgetown 58

In Philadelphia, Villanova's 7-foot-2 Tom Greis scored 21 points as the Wildcats built a 16-point lead early in the second half, then held on to upset Georgetown in a Big East Conference game. Mark Plansky scored 14 points and Gary Massey and Ken Wilson had 10 each for Villanova, which boosted its record to 15-6 overall and 7-3 in the Big East.

Mark Tillmon had 24 points and Charlie Smith 15 for Georgetown, 14-5 and 4-4.

Villanova scored the first nine points of the second half to complete a 17-0 run that started with 2:32 remaining before the half. The run gave the Wildcats a 43-27 lead with 17 minutes left to play. But Georgetown, with Smith igniting a 16-5 rally, cut Villanova's lead to 48-43 with 7:27 left.

The closest Georgetown could get was 54-50 with 3:07 remaining.

Other Games

LaBradford Smith scored 17 of his 23 points in the second half and sparked a 21-4 spurt that gave Louisville a 107-99 Metro Conference victory over Virginia Tech.

Louisville, 11-8 overall and 2-3 in the conference, passed the century mark in scoring for the first time this season. Virginia Tech fell to 14-6 and 3-2. Vernell "Bimbo" Coles scored 34 points and Wally Lancaster had 29 to lead the Hokies.

Michigan State's Ken Redfield scored 20 points to lead the Spartans to a 76-64 Big Ten victory over Ohio State.

Illini AD Reportedly Wants To Bring Mackovic Aboard

CHICAGO (AP) - Illinois Athletic Director Neale Stoner wants former Kansas City Chiefs Coach John Mackovic to lead the Fighting Illini football team, a published report says.

Stoner's first choice for White's job was Jack Bicknell, now football coach at Boston College, the newspaper said. But Bicknell took himself out of the running.

Tippett, 49, has said he would have the best chance of salvaging the current recruiting season. High school players begin signing with universities on Feb. 10.

Illinois players formed a six-man committee, headed by quarterback Jeff George, to plead Tippett's case to Stoner, the newspaper said. George met with Stoner on Saturday and with Weir on Sunday, according to the newspaper.

But Stoner feels strongly that Mackovic would be the best person for the job, a source said.

"Neale was caught off-guard by the whole Tippett thing," the source said. "But he's wanted Mackovic since Bicknell turned him down."

We know a lot of players who go shuffling through the streets barefoot because of the fact that they did not draw trumps. However, there are just as many who go around unshod as a result of drawing trumps too soon. While minor suits tend to be neglected, several pairs in a duplicate pair event managed to avoid the poor three no trump contract in favor of the good five club game. North's sensible decision to jump to four clubs was the prime impetus to that contract. All that remained was for South to justify his partner's bidding. After the lead of the king of hearts, the more simple-minded souls won, drew three rounds of trumps and then tried to set up diamonds with a single ruff—a line that was distinctly against the odds. They ended up losing a trick in each plain suit for down one. The better technicians realized that they might need two ruffs to set up diamonds. So they drew only two rounds of trumps, then tried to ruff a diamond low. Unfortunately, East overtrumped, so this line also resulted in down one. Only one declarer made his contract, and the defenders could do nothing to thwart him. He won the ace of hearts, cashed the king-ace of diamonds and led a third round of the suit. Instead of ruffing in dummy, however, he discarded a heart. Now there was no way that the defenders could stop him from ruffing a heart low and a diamond high. That loser-on-loser play allowed him to concede only one spade trick and one diamond.

Meese Says He's 'Misinformation' Victim In Probe Of Iraqi Pipeline

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese III acknowledges that a longtime friend wrote him about a proposed $1 billion Iraqi pipeline, but says he doesn't recall a section of the memo describing a payoff plan to protect it from Israeli bombing.

EDWIN MEESE III

Meese said Monday that he received, but does not recall reading, the section of the memo from his longtime friend E. Robert Wallach in mid-1985 which refers to a payoff plan involving the Israeli Labor Party of Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, formerly prime minister.

Meese's involvement in the pipeline project is the subject of a criminal investigation by independent counsel James McKay.

Meese read a five-page statement to reporters on Monday complaining that he has been the victim of "a cascade of misinformation."

He insisted that his involvement in the pipeline project "was extremely limited. I did not initiate or promote" it.

The 1977 Foreign Corrupt Practices Act generally forbids companies and individuals from making payments to foreign government officials to secure help in obtaining or retaining business. Under that law, the attorney general is responsible for prosecuting American citizens or companies that try to bribe foreign officials.

Wallach, a lawyer who was representing one of the project's partners, came to him looking for advice in May 1985, Meese said.

Meese disclosed that in the fall of that year, he had two contacts about the pipeline with an Israeli official, whom sources familiar with the criminal probe of Meese have identified as Peres. The project's backers wanted Israeli assurances that that nation wouldn't bomb the pipeline, which was to be built by San Francisco-based Bechtel Corp.

Peres, speaking on Israel army radio Monday, said he never was offered a bribe in return for a promise that Israel would not bomb the proposed pipeline.

"No one said an offer was made or carried out," Peres said. "There's no basis to the reports that anything was done."

Meese said that during his contacts with the Israeli official, "I can say that at no time was there any discussion, hint, or implication of a payment to any official or political party."

However, two liberal senators and frequent Meese critics — Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., and Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio — called for Meese's resignation. Meese's repeated appearances before grand juries and the several investigations targeting the attorney general are "a source of embarrassment to all Americans," Metzenbaum said.

Meese refused to answer questions after reading his statement and walked out of the room as a reporter asked him whether he would remain as attorney general.

President Reagan, returning from a speech to a group of religious broadcasters, said "I'm not going to talk about" Meese's situation.

Wallach, now under indictment on racketeering charges in the Wedtech scandal, has been a close friend of Meese for three decades.

On the pipeline deal, Wallach was representing Bruce Rappaport, a wealthy Swiss businessman aligned with Peres. Rappaport was a principal in the proposed 540-mile-long pipeline, which was never built.

Meese said in his statement that since the existence of the Wallach memo was revealed last Friday in the Los Angeles Times, he has been the victim of "a cascade of misinformation, false headlines, half-truths, innuendo, and misunderstanding of the law."

"I had no personal or financial stake" in the project, Meese said.

"The language in Mr. Wallach's memorandum that has given rise to this speculation consists of 10 words in one of two long documents he provided to me.

"I do not recall having read the specific words that have now mushroomed into importance, but I certainly did not receive from the memorandum any impression of illegality whatsoever," the attorney general said.

He said the memorandum is classified and he would not outline it in detail, but "I do not believe" that it "fairly implies that a violation of law was committed or contemplated."

He said Wallach was referred to then-National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane "and consideration of the project thereafter on behalf of the United States was handled, as it should have been, by the National Security Council staff."

Postmaster Appointed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anthony M. Frank, head of the sixth largest U.S. savings and loan, will become the nation's 69th postmaster general on March 1, the Postal Service announced today.

The chairman of the service's Board of Governors, John Griesemer, called Frank "a man of proven record" and said he "has shown an innate ability to anticipate and manage for change — and to do so successfully."

Frank, 56, said he was taking early retirement from his post as chairman of the board and chief executive officer of First Nationwide Bank and hoped to put in three to five years as postmaster general in an effort to do some public service for his "adopted" nation.

"The courtesy this country gave to my family and myself when we arrived from Nazi Germany in 1937 is not forgotten and I would like to return some of that," Frank said after the Postal Service announcement.

Frank, who was born in Berlin in 1931, became a naturalized U.S. citizen in 1943.

Senator Backs Off On Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Daniel K. Inouye has requested that his $8 million budget item to build schools in France for resettled North African Jews be rescinded, saying it was an "error in judgment" but not a favor to political contributors.

Inouye's action Monday came after 41 House members co-sponsored legislation to block the $8 million, which was included in the $600 billion appropriations bill passed by Congress last Dec. 22.

The appropriation was also challenged in a federal lawsuit filed Monday in New York by the American Civil Liberties Union. The American Jewish Committee was looking into the legality of building religious schools abroad.

In the United States, such a program would violate the constitutional separation of church and state.

"I have made an error in judgment," Inouye, D-Hawaii, said Monday in a speech on the Senate floor. "I intend to correct that error."

Inouye said he would move to have the appropriation rescinded in the Senate. He said he asked Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., to introduce a similar measure in the House.

Staffers in the office of House Majority Whip Tony Coelho, D-Calif., said Obey's bill was on today's calendar. All money bills originate in the House.

"It is not easy for me to withdraw from this fight," Inouye said in his speech. "But I recognize that to continue, to place my colleagues and the Senate at risk in order to win personal vindication, would be an act of prideful arrogance."

"We are pleased," said Alan Metz, a spokesman for Rep. Harris Fawell, R-Ill., the author of the original House bill seeking the rescission.

Inouye, chairman of the Senate appropriations subcommittee on foreign operations, nonetheless defended the program, first reported Dec. 28 by The Associated Press.

China Signs Trade Agreement Limiting Textile Exports To U.S.

BEIJING (AP) — China and the United States today signed a four-year agreement that limits to 3 percent the annual growth rate for China's textile exports to the United States.

The accord was signed in the Great Hall of the People by U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter and Zheng Tuobin, China's minister of Foreign Economic Relations and Trade.

China, a relative newcomer to the textile export industry, has become America's largest supplier of textiles and apparel in terms of volume.

Shipments in major import categories — such as cotton, silk and ramie — have been growing at an annual rate of 19 percent, far outdistancing growth by more established suppliers such as South Korea and Hong Kong.

Chinese exports to the United States are estimated to be worth at least $2 billion annually.

With the agreement, the United States has in the past 20 months renegotiated textile accords with its five major suppliers, the U.S. Embassy said. The other four — Japan, Taiwan, Hong Kong and South Korea — all agreed to limit growth of their exports to the United States to about 1 percent.

The five countries supply 50 percent of American textile and apparel imports. Taiwan is the largest textile importer in terms of dollars.

Yeutter, making his first official visit to China, also conferred with Zheng about overall trade between the two countries, which reached an estimated $10 billion last year, according to U.S. figures.

He said he hoped China would eliminate its trade restrictions

Bush, Dole Coffers Growing While Other Presidential Hopefuls Borrow

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Several presidential candidates resorted to big-money borrowing at the end of 1987, but the rival GOP camps of George Bush and Bob Dole needed no loans as they raked in more than than $6.3 million each.

Former television evangelist Pat Robertson remained second only to Vice President Bush in cumulative receipts for the year as he raised $4.7 million for the quarter including a $1.5 million loan, according to his financial statement filed Monday with the Federal Election Commission.

That brought his 1987 fund-raising total to $16.4 million. Robertson spent virtually all of it, ending the year with $105,850 in cash on hand and $2 million in debts.

Bush's cumulative total, meanwhile, was $19 million raised and $5.7 million in cash on hand. The total for Sen. Dole of Kansas jumped to $14.3 million, and he ended 1987 with $2.2 million in the bank. Both had about $1 million in outstanding debts to pay off at the end of the year.

Democrat Gary Hart, filing his first financial statement since his December return to the race, reported raising a slim $69,852 for the quarter. Added to what he raised before dropping out of the race last May, that brought his 1987 total to $2.3 million. The former Colorado senator ended the year with $123,524 in cash on hand and $92,522 in outstanding bills.

Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, although collecting less than he has in previous quarters — $2.6 million — still remained at the top of the Democratic money column with a cumulative total of $10.8 million, and $2.1 million in cash on hand.

Figures for Democrat Jesse Jackson were not immediately available.

Besides Robertson, other candidates who borrowed in the last quarter of 1987 against this year's federal matching funds that have covered their debts are:

—Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., $2.2 million total borrowed, including $45,000 guaranteed by the candidate himself. But $1.4 million was paid back in the same period, partly reflecting a paperwork shuffle that resulted from a change of campaign banks, said campaign counsel Leslie Kerman.

—Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., $1.4 million borrowed, used for New Hampshire and Iowa media and other expenses. He ended the year with roughly half that sum in cash on hand, and $1.9 million in bills due.

—Former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, Democrat, $137,000 borrowed, which when added to his previous borrowing, brought his 1987 loans to $629,000. He had $87,114 in the bank, and $792,000 in debts which this year have mostly been paid off, said spokesman Vada Manager.

—Former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont, Republican, $828,000 borrowed, used for overall operations in anticipation of this year's matching funds which covered the $744,384 in outstanding debts that he had at the end of the year, said spokesman Fred Stern.

—Former Secretary of State Al Haig, Republican, $340,000 borrowed, amounting to nearly half the $692,760 in total receipts he reported for the last quarter. He ended the year with $135,939 on hand.

—Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., $1.85 million borrowed, continuing the heavy borrowing strategy in which he spent money for fund-raising mail and media against this year's matching funds. He ended the year with only $127,982 on hand and $3.5 million in debt, and now is back in the black due to his $3.9 million in new matching funds, said press secretary John Buckley.

Evidence Suppressed

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — A judge has ruled that two ounces of marijuana found in the purse of singer-actress Michelle Phillips can't be used as evidence against her.

Potter County Court at Law Judge Morris Overstreet on Monday granted a defense motion to suppress the evidence, saying the officer did not have probable cause to search the purse.

The ruling means Ms. Phillips, a member of the 1960's rock group The Mamas and the Papas and a star of CBS' night-time soap opera "Knots Landing," will not have to go to trial next week for possession of marijuana, which carried a maximum a $1,000 fine and six-month prison term.

The judge said Assistant County Attorney David Kemp indicated he would appeal the decision.

"I would assume if the courts upheld my decision then the charges might be dismissed. If the court overruled my decision then the state probably would prosecute," Overstreet said.

Ms. Phillips, 43, and her boyfriend, Geoffrey Tozer, were taken into Dec. 2, during a traffic stop near Amarillo by state troopers. Tozer was never charged.

Trooper Wayne Williams testified he received permission to search the vehicle after spotting a marijuana seed on the floor.

Williams said he found about two ounces of marijuana in Ms. Phillips' purse, which she held as she got out of the car.

DETERMINED — Chuck Norris is seen during filming of his latest adventure movie, "Braddock: Missing in Action III." Norris says he was never an athlete but made up for his physical shortcomings by becoming a world champion in karate. (AP Laserphoto)

New Chuck Norris Movie Continues Braddock Saga

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Macho film star Chuck Norris calls his recently published autobiography "The Secret of Inner Strength."

"People sometimes tell me how lucky I have been in my life," he writes. "When I hear that, I smile. I was never a natural athlete, but I paid my dues in sweat and concentration and took the time necessary to learn karate and become a world champion. I simply made up for what I lacked physically with work and determination."

The theory worked in karate, and it has paid off in films, too. Capitalizing on Hollywood's muscle man vogue, Norris has built a thriving career with action-filled, good guys against the bad guys movies. The latest is "Braddock: Missing in Action III," released by Cannon Films this month.

The new film continues the saga of Col. James Braddock, the fearless hero of the 1984 "Missing in Action" and 1985's "Missing in Action 2: The Beginning." Both were good moneymakers for Cannon, hence the third in the cycle.

"When Cannon asked me about doing a trilogy of 'MIA,' I replied, 'What else can I do?' I really wasn't interested in doing a third one. Then my brother Aaron said, 'Have you been reading about the Amerasian children?' He started telling me that in Vietnam there are 15,000 Amerasian children who are trapped there, considered outcasts, living a strictly non-existent life," Norris said.

"So I started reading up on the subject and got emotionally involved. James Bruner and I began writing this story about an officer in the Vietnam War whose wife was presumed killed when their home was blown up during the fall of Saigon. The officer is wounded and shipped out. Twelve years later, he learns that his wife is still alive and he has a 12-year-old son. The rest of the film concerns his efforts to get them out of the country."

Norris was talking about one film while making another. The new one is "Hero and the Terror," which casts him as a Santa Monica police detective in search of a psychopathic killer. On a blustery winter night, he was racing over the roof of the Wiltern Theater in mid-Los Angeles, pursuing the deadly "Terror" (Jack O'Halloran).

During a dinner break in filming, Norris relaxed in the art deco lobby of the theater, newly restored to its old-time glamour and now boasting rock concerts. He talked about his book, his movies and his life.

"The Secret of Inner Strength" (Little, Brown, $16.95), written with Joe Hyams, details the familiar Norris saga: Born in Oklahoma, raised in Torrance, Calif., married to his high school sweetheart, discovering karate in Korea while serving with the Air Force, becoming karate champion and instructor.

Sleuth Keeps TV Viewers Looking On PBS' 'Mystery'

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Inspector Morse drives a 1957 Jaguar, drinks ale, ignores evidence and, in the shadow of Oxford University, solves crimes on intuition while listening to Mozart.

Another eccentric English sleuth. You can find Morse, played by John Thaw, on PBS' "Mystery!" this Thursday when a series of three two-part shows begin.

Thaw isn't well known in this country, but he played tough cop Jack Regan in the British TV series "The Sweeney," sort of an English "Starsky & Hutch."

He was Sir Francis Drake a few seasons ago on Masterpiece Theatre's "Drake's Venture." Last year, Thaw went to Zimbabwe to play Kruger in "Cry Freedom," then co-starred with Glenda Jackson in "Business As Usual."

Thaw was in this country to promote the new show for Mobil's "Mystery!" He came in with a contingent of English actors, producers and directors to talk about "Mystery!" and "Masterpiece Theatre."

"Inspector Morse works in Oxford, where the crimes are much gentler than they are in London," said Thaw. "He's a detective who specializes in murder. If he were at Scotland Yard, he'd be in the murder squad, but in Oxford, it's just Morse."

"We film in Oxford, which is just beautiful. We film some scenes at the university. The old buildings are wonderful. I've never gone to a university, but when we film there, I wish I had."

Inspector Morse is taken from the mystery novels written by Colin Dexter. Morse has no first name, although Thaw jokes it's "Inspector."

Morse was named after Sir Jeremy Morse, chairman of Lloyd's Bank. Although Morse works in Oxford, he's a member of the Thames Valley Police.

Dexter, who wrote the books while an examiner at Oxford University, is a noted creator of crossword puzzles.

"You'll see because of his crossword background that he constructs very complicated stories,"

Harvard Awards

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Comedians Lucille Ball and Steve Martin will be honored as the 1988 Man and Woman of the Year by the Hasty Pudding Theatricals, the Harvard University theater group announced.

Miss Ball, 76, will be given a parade through Harvard Square and presented with the traditional "pudding pot" at the Hasty Pudding Theater on Feb. 16.

Martin, 42, will receive his award at the premiere performance of the Hasty Pudding Theatricals' 140th annual musical extravaganza, "Saint Misbehavin'" on Feb. 23.

JOHN THAW

said Thaw. "It takes a lot of attention. He drops in clues, like in a crossword puzzle. If you can spot them you can beat Morse at his own game."

Unlike Sherlock Holmes, Inspector Morse works solely on intuition. "I think one of the reasons he's so popular is that he often leaps to the wrong conclusion," said Thaw. "People can identify with him because he's not omnipotent."

Morse has a sidekick, Sgt. Lewis, a diligent, typical English copper, and Morse usually leaves it up to Lewis to do the investigating.

"Morse will go home, put on a Mozart record and wait for a call from Lewis," he said. "He drinks only real ale, which is made from hops and water. It's the way beer was 200

Priest Says Bruce Is 'Catholic Minstrel'

NEW YORK (AP) — Bruce Springsteen is a "Catholic minstrel" whose most recent album may have been "a more important Catholic event in this country than the visit of Pope John Paul II," says the Rev. Andrew Greeley.

The pope "spoke of moral debates using the language of doctrinal positions that appeal to (or repel) the mind," while Springsteen "sings of religious realities — sin, temptation, forgiveness, life, death, hope — in images ... from his Catholic childhood," the priest writes in the Feb. 6 issue of America magazine.

Springsteen's images, Greeley argues, "appeal to the whole person, not just the head, and that will be ab-years ago. It's becoming very popular in England again."

Kevin Whately plays Sgt. Lewis and Peter Woodthorpe is Max, the pathologist.

In the first episode Thursday, "The Dead of Jericho," a woman Morse has taken a fancy to (Gemma Jones) is found hanged. It looks like suicide, but Morse thinks it's murder. The mystery concludes the following Thursday.

On Feb. 18 and 25, Morse investigates the murder of a deaf man in "The Silent World of Nicholas Quinn." Quinn is a member of the group that administers British student exams abroad, and Morse suspects someone has been selling exam secrets.

In the final episode, March 3 and 10, "Service of All the Dead," Morse investigates several murders, including that of a church warden. Sir Michael Hordern (the pastor in "Paradise Postponed") plays a retired headmaster.

Thaw was doing a play in Canada when producer Kenny McBain contacted him about the role. He read the Dexter books McBain sent him, but was still a little skeptical.

"I called the head of Central Television's drama department, who had produced 'The Sweeney,' and asked him if he thought it would work," said Thaw. "He said he did."

His selection was clinched by a part he had played in a BBC film set in Northern Ireland, Thaw said.

"Kenny's father had seen it and thought I was one of the best actors in the business," he said. "So Kenny said, 'If you're good enough for my Dad, you're good enough for me.'" sorbed by far more Americans than those who listened to the pope."

John Paul II should take no offense, because "troubadours always have more importance than theologians or bishops," insists Greeley, a sociologist, best-selling novelist and frequent contributor to America, which is published by the Jesuit order.
