Funeral For Slain Arab Teen Sparks Protest; 4 Youths Hurt

By DAN IZENBERG
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli soldiers beat to death a 15-year-old Palestinian in the occupied Gaza Strip overnight, U.N. and Arab reports said, and his burial today turned into a violent protest in which troops shot and wounded four Arabs.

The army confirmed an Arab teen-ager died but said it was investigating the circumstances. Army radio said the military spoke with army units in Gaza and found no evidence the Arab had been beaten by soldiers.

The Palestine Press Service said a second Palestinian died after he was shot in the head today in the Arab village of Kafr Qaddum near the West Bank city of Nablus. The Arab-run agency said the circumstances of the shooting were not clear. The army said it was investigating.

On Sunday, three Palestinians were killed in one of the bloodiest days in two months of violence that have occurred in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. Fighting broke out in the West Bank after rumors spread that Jewish settlers were planning attacks on Palestinians there.

The three Arabs killed Sunday and the two who died Sunday from injuries suffered earlier increased to 48 the number of Palestinians who have been killed by Israelis since violence broke out in the occupied lands Dec. 8, according to U.N. count. The two deaths reported today were not counted in that total.

In Gaza today, the body of 15-year-old Iyad Mohammed Aql was found near his home in the Bureij refugee camp, said a senior United Nations official in Gaza City, an Arab reporter there and the Arab news agency. The teen-ager had suffered head injuries, they said.

Aql's cousin, 18-year-old Abdulla Ali Aql, also was beaten and suffered two broken arms, said the U.N. official, who spoke on condition of anonymity. He said U.N. field workers received their reports from family members.

Reagan Calls For Businesses To Play Role In Fighting Drugs

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — President Reagan asserted today that businesses should join the federal government's battle against drugs and seek out workers who abuse illegal substances.

Reagan, in an address prepared for delivery to an anti-drug seminar at Duke University, used the Pentagon's drug-testing program as an example for the civilian work force.

"I've heard critics say employers have no business looking for drug abuse in the work place. But when you pin the critics down, too often they seem to be among the handful who still believe that drug abuse is a victimless crime," Reagan said.

"The drug user is a victim. His employer is a victim. His fellow employees are victims. The family that depends on his wages are victims. And America, which is only as strong and as competitive as all of us together, America is the victim," Reagan claimed.

"It would be hard to find any crime with more victims than drug abuse," Reagan said.

But he made no mention of the legal controversies that have erupted since he signed an executive order in 1986 ordering the testing of federal workers in "sensitive" positions.

The president made no mention of the concerns aroused by critics of his drug-testing program, such as invasion of privacy.

Reagan praised those companies that have taken steps to seek out the drug abuser, saying that such persons were grateful for the help they received once they were discovered.

"When it's all over, and drug users look back on the wreckage of their careers and their lives ... they wish someone had discovered their habit earlier and given them help," Reagan said.

"You are showing how compassion and campaigns for a drug-free work place go hand-in-hand," Reagan said.

A study last year by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce showed that in 1983, only 3 percent of Fortune 500

Opposition Party Chief Resigns In South Korea

By M.H. AHN
Associated Press Writer

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — In a surprise announcement, Kim Young-sam said today he was resigning as president of the main opposition party to help reunite the opposition and atone for his defeat in the presidential election.

Kim, head of the Reunification Democratic Party, told reporters he hoped his resignation would restore peoples' faith in the opposition.

He said the opposition must reunite if it wants to avoid a shattering defeat in upcoming legislative elections.

"For a speedy reunification of the opposition bloc, I declare my resignation as the president of the RPD," he told a news conference.

"I hope my decision today will serve to inspire new hope and courage in the people who are in despair," he added.

The 60-year-old Kim Young-sam has been a major figure in Korean politics since the 1960s. He helped lead opposition against the authoritarian rule of the late President Park Chung-hee and President Chun Doo-hwan.

There had been no earlier indication that Kim would resign and the decision came as a surprise to his party. Shocked senior party officials pleaded with Kim to reverse his decision at the press conference and later at his home.

Kim told the news conference he had to step down as head of the opposition party because internal divisions threatened to destroy the opposition.

"I urge all politicians to achieve reunification of the opposition bloc at an early date by ending partisan interests and selfishness," he said.

He said the opposition had to reunite if it was to have any hope of regaining public confidence and ushering in full democracy.

The Reunification Democratic Party said senior Vice President Kim Myung-yoon was appointed acting president. But there was no indication of who might succeed Kim Young-sam since the party has no other prominent leaders.

Kim Young-sam apologized to party leaders for not telling them in advance about his decision. He said he would remain in the party as a member.

Kim and rival opposition leader Kim Dae-jung were defeated by governing party candidate Roh Tae-woo in the Dec. 16 presidential election after the two Kims split the opposition vote. Roh won with 36.6 percent of the vote, while Kim Young-sam had 28 percent and Kim Dae-jung 27 percent.

Both Kims were strongly criticized by supporters for splitting the opposition and ensuring a government victory.

Quake Rattles Mexico City

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A strong earthquake shook Mexico City today, causing downtown buildings to sway and creak. There were no immediate reports of injuries or damage.

The 7:52 a.m. tremor lasted for at least 30 seconds, with an intensity of 6.0 on the Richter scale, the National University of Mexico's Tacubaya Seismological Institute reported.

The institute said the quake's epicenter was located about 100 miles off the coast of southern Guerrero state, in the Pacific Ocean.

Red Cross and police said they had no immediate reports of casualties or property damage.

Many Mexico City residents, who were riding buses or the subway, or driving to work in the morning rush hour, said they did not feel the quake.

It was felt strongly in The Associated Press' offices on the eighth floor of a skyscraper in downtown Mexico City. People in the building said they also felt vertigo, an indication of a strong earth tremor.

Commuter Crash Kills 21

MUELHEIM, West Germany (AP) — A commuter airliner burst into flames and crashed during a storm today, killing all 21 people aboard, police said.

Witnesses said a lightning bolt struck the twin-engine turboprop airliner and that a wing fell off just before the aircraft crashed in a rural area near Muelheim, about seven miles north of Dusseldorf airport.

"There was a fireball in the air," a police official said, describing eyewitness reports of the crash. Police said airplane wreckage was scattered across a wide area.

It was West Germany's worst plane crash in 17 years, according to the federal Aviation Administration in Braunschweig. In September 1971, 21 people died when an airliner went down near Hamburg.

Federal flight authorities in Frankfurt said the plane was on a flight from Hanover to Dusseldorf airport.

Snow and rain squalls with gusty winds were moving through the region at the time of the crash, officials said.

A spokesman for federal flight control authorities in Frankfurt, Hans-Ulrich Ohl, said the plane crashed at 7:57 a.m. local time.

He said the plane, a twin-engine

Indictments Rankle Noriega

By ALINA GUERRERO
Associated Press Writer

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega asked the attorney general to identify and prosecute the people responsible for "slandering" U.S. indictments charging him with drug trafficking. The government also recalled its ambassadors to the United States, the Organization of American States and the United Nations to discuss U.S. relations, state-run Radio Nacional reported on Sunday.

Noriega, head of the Defense Forces and Panama's de facto leader, told Attorney General Carlos

Villalaz in a letter that the U.S. indictments were "for false crimes that are attributed to me in a foolhardy manner."

"Consequently, I kindly request that you please open an investigation in order to determine the origin and those responsible for such slanderous imputations so that they may be prosecuted, in accordance with Panamanian law," the three-paragraph letter continued.

"Attached are copies of these false accusations formulated in the United States by officials of the Department of Justice." The letter was published

Sunday in the pro-government La Republica newspaper.

A federal indictment unsealed in Miami two days earlier alleges Noriega took at least $4.6 million in payoffs to protect cocaine shipments, launder money, supply drug laboratories and shelter drug traffickers.

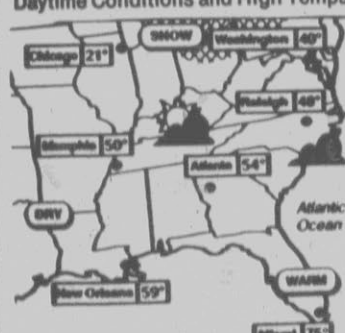

A second indictment says he conspired to import and distribute more than 1 million pounds of marijuana.

There is no possibility that Noriega, the dominant force in Panamanian politics since 1983, can

Cities Added

Piedmont Commuter, which provides commuter airline service to Greenville and 20 other cities, announced today it will begin service to Macon, Ga., and Jacksonville, N.C., March 1.

Farm Scene

By SAM UZZELL
Pitt Extension Agent

As planting time approaches, more and more fields are once again brought back into cultivation. Many of these fields will be "worked" wet. Others will be disked several times prior to planting. Some of these cultivations are unnecessary and some will also cause problems later in the growing season.

One of the problems that may occur with unnecessary disking of farm land is the formation of a "hard pan," "tillage pan" or "pan layer." This is a dense, compacted layer of soil at a depth of 6 to 8 inches which restricts root growth and therefore affects plant growth.

Very few annual plants have a root system that can effectively penetrate through this pan. On some soils, large yield increases are possible where the plow layer is broken so as to allow roots to grow into the subsoil below this compacted zone. Obviously, a larger root system can obtain more moisture and nutrients in a larger area.

Traffic pans form due to the combined effects of soil properties, machinery traffic, the action of tillage tools, and the weight of the surface soil itself. This problem becomes more severe when certain soil properties are present. It is related to three factors: the influence of sand in the soil, the roughness of the sand particles, and the effects of changing moisture levels during the year.

With the advent of larger tractors and more weight on the tires, soils that have a tendency to form hardpans often do. Heavy equipment is thought to be the most important contributing factor to soil compaction. An important consideration which research points out is that disking is responsible for compacting soils. It has been stated that when a hardpan has been broken by chisel plowing or subsoiling, that disking will recompact 85 percent of the hardpan.

So, an important consideration is to not disturb a subsoiled field with additional disking. It is better to plant the crop rather than move an additional tillage tool across the field.

In a year where profits will likely be low for the farmer, there is a potential savings of production costs by eliminating unnecessary tillage trips. Also, if a hardpan is created by these unnecessary trips then a yield loss can further decrease a potential profit.

Growers who wish to obtain additional information on hardpans should contact the Agricultural Extension Office in their county and ask for a copy of a publication AG-252, Subsurface Compaction and Subsoiling in North Carolina.

DIABETES AND GUM DISEASE

Some general, or systemic diseases, especially DIABETES MELLITUS and fat-storage diseases, make the supporting tissues and bone around the teeth susceptible to chronic inflammation, infection, abscesses, and other periodontal disorders.

When diabetes is successfully controlled with insulin and/or other drugs and the patient is diligent in following the advice of his physician and his dentist, dental complications may be controlled so as to preserve teeth for many, many years. However, in most cases of uncontrolled diabetes -- and even in some cases that are controlled -- loss of teeth from periodontal disease seems to be inevitable, no matter how hard the patient and his dentist try.

The best hope for people in this situation is in research that is being done in the area. New types of treatments are constantly being developed and tested.

In any event, please call our office today for an appointment to get your teeth cleaned. You owe it to your health.

Party Leader Resigns Post

Opposition charges that the government used massive fraud to win were rejected by most Koreans, who instead blamed the two Kims. Kim Dae-jung and his supporters broke away from the Reunification Democratic Party to form the Party for Peace and Democracy and Kim Dae-jung ran for president after he and Kim Young-sam failed to agree on a single candidacy.

Both leaders have been fighting to retain their positions since the election defeat. Kim Young-sam's resignation was a surprise because his party reaffirmed his leadership last month and he vowed to continue in politics.

Kim Dae-jung was seen as being in more trouble because he was more widely blamed for splitting the opposition. The Party for Peace and Democracy said last week it was adopting a collective leadership to try and reduce criticism, although it was clear Kim Dae-jung would retain overall control.

The Party for Peace and Democracy promptly cast doubt on Kim Young-sam's decision today, saying it welcomed moves to unite the opposition but suspected he had ulterior motives. "We welcome Kim Young-sam's decision but we are trying to find out what is his real intention," it said in a statement.

Political observers were reluctant to accept that Kim Young-sam was bowing out of Korean politics. Some suggested he was stepping down because he feared a major loss in the legislative elections and would attempt a comeback later.

Kim Young-sam said the opposition had to make every effort to do well in the National Assembly elections that must be held by April. He warned that the opposition could not hope to win public confidence without reuniting and faced complete collapse if it did not.

Board Revokes Broker License

RALEIGH — The N.C. Real Estate Commission has revoked the broker license issued to Delbert D. Garrison of Greenville, effective March 1.

The license was revoked under a consent order signed by Philip T. Fisher, executive director of the real estate commission on Feb. 1, which resulted from a settlement stipulation signed by Garrison and state officials on Jan. 29.

According to the settlement stipulation, Garrison agreed to purchase a house at 411 Latham St. for $20,000 in the spring of 1987. Then on June 12, he prepared a written offer to purchase the property for clients at a price of $35,000 and signed the owner's name to the document to "indicate ... acceptance."

After that loan was not approved, Garrison, on July 27, prepared a written offer to purchase the property, showing himself and his wife as purchasers, for $35,000, and applied for a loan.

According to the settlement stipulation, Garrison, on Aug. 6, prepared a written offer to purchase the property for $18,000, showing himself and his wife as buyers; told the owner that he would give her a check for $35,000, and instructed her to deposit the check and to write him a check for $17,000.

"At no time," according to the settlement, did Garrison "disclose (to the owner) that her property had appraised for $35,000."

Murder Charge

AYDEN — An Ayden man is being held without bond in the Pitt County Jail after being charged with murder in connection with the shooting death of another Ayden man Sunday, law enforcement officials said.

Jerry Bizzell, 37, of Ayden, was arrested Sunday and charged with the murder of Jasper Brown, 38, also of Ayden, according to police. Brown was pronounced dead due to gunshot wounds in the chest at 3:10 p.m. Sunday at Pitt Memorial Hospital, according to Stan Harris, regional medical examiner.

According to Ayden Police Chief Tim Phillips, a police officer from Ayden witnessed the incident while out on routine patrol. He declined to identify the officer.

"There had been no call, no request for help," Phillips said. The policeman "saw a man walk to a car in which Brown was seated and saw the man shoot him."

Helms Resembles Broken Record

North Carolina has a broken phonograph record representing it in the U.S. Senate. No! No! No! No! No! is all Sen. Jesse Helms seems to say. No communists, he says, no compromises, and now, no meaningful agreement to halt arms stockpiling.

Helms' determination to block the INF Treaty's passage through the U.S. Senate is the most potentially damaging use of his obstructionist tactics since Helms' arrival in Washington, D.C. The senator is out of control, and members of his own Republican party in the Senate should take steps to bring him back to reality.

His arguments against the treaty are based on his personal view of U.S.-Soviet relations, not on a careful examination of data relevant to the important document's ratification. His insistent bleating against the agreement can only be seen as an illustration of how "Senator No" lets his own prejudices cloud his ability to correctly represent his constituents.

Once again, Helms' is acting not in the best interest of the nation and the state he represents. Instead, he is waging his own war against communism by condemning the first significant arms agreement between the superpowers in a decade. His strident voice is the one loud dissent, for Helms has won neither the support of his fellow senators nor his constituents.

In addition, Helms' is bucking an agreement backed by his own Republican president, Ronald Reagan. It is clear he is again, on this matter, far out in right field - a position that in the past has not benefited the senator or the nation he represents.

Furthermore, it is disturbing that his fellow Republicans in the Senate have not taken issue with Helms' vehement condemnation of the INF agreement. Republican leaders have let Democrats fight Helms. Why have these leaders allowed an out-of-touch obstructionist to lodge unsound arguments against an agreement a president of their party negotiated - a treaty which may well be the most significant legacy of the Reagan administration?

Helms' is correct in his assessment that the INF treaty is not perfect when addressing the area of verification. No agreement provides a 100 percent guarantee of effectiveness. But this treaty is a breakthrough for arms control in the 1980s. It has succeeded in placing world peace on the global agenda in a decade where aggression has dominated.

"Senator No" should not be the downfall of such an important document. The Senate must recognize the potential of an agreement and set the stage for future arms reduction treaties by approving this one.

And in North Carolina, Helms should be recognized for what he is: an out-of touch leader who gums up the works fighting his personal windmills. Like the fictitious Don Quixote, Helms fails to correctly perceive which objects should be battled.

There's one difference, however, between the senator and Quixote. Quixote dreamed of peace.

Agricultural Money Maker

The peanut is a lowly legume, but it provides income for many farmers, including a number in eastern North Carolina.

Thus the announcement that peanut demand went up by 2.3 percent during the marketing year is a welcome turn of events. Despite a drop in peanut butter consumption, according to government reports, peanuts remained strong. Salted nuts and peanut candy helped increase consumption from 10.2 pounds per person in 1986 to 11.1 pounds in 1987.

For unknown reasons, peanut butter demand dropped 1.7 percent in 1987. This decline is disturbing because some 45 percent of the United State's peanut production goes to peanut butter. Salted nuts take up about 25 percent of the peanut production and candy takes about 20 percent.

The peanut butter consumption drop may have been due to price increases brought on by a reduced crop. Not to worry however; demand is already up 1.2 percent during the first quarter of the marketing year.

The peanut is rarely revered and most people seldom stop to consider that peanut growing is an important revenue source for many farmers. The item many cooks and snackers take for granted is actually a profitable proposition for many producers.

What is for most people a bite of goodness in a candy bar or confection is a source of income for growers. When the peanut butter consumption figures drop, there is concern down on the farm.

To the editor:

I am writing in response to the recent letter of C.R. Williams regarding the visit of the Rev. Jesse Jackson to Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church.

First, the letter states that Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church had the honor of hearing Jesse Jackson. I wonder if the writer meant the building or the congregation of people who comprise the membership. I assume she meant the latter; however, that is inaccurate because the audience was composed of people primarily from various places throughout eastern North Carolina.

Second, the writer states that she did not have a chance to hear him speak because she could not get in the building, which would not accommodate the crowd. And she suggests the rally should have been held at Hendrix, Mingos, McGinnis or Wright auditoriums. Sadly to say, she was late like a thousand or so other people, and even if it had been held at some of the other places that she named, if she had come late, she might not have gotten in those places either. And, by the way, none of those places will seat four or five thousand people. Remember, "the early bird really does get the worm" for most things in life.

Third, she complains about not hearing of Rev. Jackson's rally in Greenville from the media far enough in advance. I did not know he was coming until five days beforehand. Appearances by Presidential candidate are not publicized very far in advance for scheduling and security reasons.

Finally, Mayor Carter had absolutely nothing to do with Rev. Jackson's rally in Greenville. The rally was exclusively initiated and planned by the Jackson for President Campaign Committee. The mayor was an invited guest, just like every other person who attended.

To the editor:

In the ongoing debate over America's proper role in the dismantling of apartheid, a major barrier to progress is the persistence of myths surrounding some of South America's better-known radical leaders. An excellent case in point: the "Big Lie" often told about Nelson Mandela.

Mandela, jailed for a terrorist act, has been hailed in this country as a wronged advocate for peaceful reform, on the order of Ghandi or Martin Luther King. The fact is, The South African government has made Mandela's renouncing violence the sole condition of his release. To this day, Mandela has refused to forswear the use of terrorism in achieving his political objectives, and so remains behind bars.

The complex situation in South Africa demands for those who assess it an adherence to the highest standards. Evolution to a post-apartheid order is only impeded by inaccuracies and stereotyping — whether applied to the black or white populations of that nation.

The Economic Slump Has Begun

'The most recent economic statistics show that the Big Squeeze is upon us. The United States, having lived well beyond its means for half a decade, is finally moving toward a healthier export-led growth.'

The economic squeeze that America needs has already begun. We are entering an era in which our living standards will decline — or at least stagnate. This slowdown will help solve our trade and debt problems, but it won't feel good.

The squeeze will take one of two forms. Let's call them the Painful Version and the Very Painful Version. We have some control over which one occurs. We aren't going to be able to avoid them both.

The most recent economic statistics show that the Big Squeeze is upon us. The United States, having lived well beyond its means for half a decade, is finally moving toward a healthier export-led growth. Instead of relying upon the sales of goods and services to the American consumer to buoy our economic growth, we are beginning to turn our sights to overseas markets. The consumer-spending spree that fueled the post-1982 economic expansion is petering out. No longer are Americans indulging themselves at ever-rising rates on everything from hamburgers to Hondas.

Last October's stock-market crash seems to have given consumers a cold-water bath. A government report released the week before last showed that consumer spending fell at a 3.2 percent annual rate in the final three months of 1987. The steep drop stirred fears of a 1988 recession. But even if those fears prove unwarranted, the trend toward weakness in consumer buying is unmistakable. For all of 1987, consumption rose a slim 1.8 percent, after accounting for inflation.

At the same time, the figures showed, rising sales of U.S. products abroad helped keep the economy expanding. The Reagan administration naturally sought to focus attention on this export boom — which, in itself, is certainly good news. Officials hailed it as fresh evidence that the cheap dollar is helping, slowly but surely, to shrink the huge U.S. trade deficit. The flood of imports is abating too, they pointed out.

What they didn't mention was the flip side of those developments — the fact that the need to sell more goods abroad, and buy less from overseas, means fewer goods for Americans to enjoy at home. We will be shipping more refrigerators to the Middle East and importing fewer shirts from Taiwan. That's good for the economy, but after years of buying with abandon, it may be uncomfortable for us consumers.

In 1988 and for several years beyond, growth in consumer spending isn't likely to match even the sluggish 1.8 percent boost recorded last year; many forecasters predict a pace of less than 1 percent. This will be a jolt after the rapid boosts that American families have come to expect. From 1983 to 1986, real consumer spending soared at an average annual rate of over 4½ percent.

To see what such a change can mean, let's look at how it would affect the average American household in dollar terms, using a typical forecast of the economy compiled by Data Resources of Lexington, Mass.

The forecast shows that average household spending, which was about $30,000 in 1987, will increase about $945 by 1990, excluding the effects of inflation. By contrast, from 1983 to 1986, such spending rose by nearly $4,000. Some families will hardly notice the slowdown; they are the ones who out-earn most others to begin with and already have so many gadgets that they have trouble finding the counter space to store them.

But clearly, a lot of households will face some difficult adjustments in their aspirations for material progress. And since the spending increase projected by Data Resources is an average, with some households doing better and others worse, a lot more households than before will experience actual declines in their living standards.

American purchasing power is being cramped by rising import prices, a trend that is about to accelerate. A dollar now converts to many fewer marks, yen or francs than it did a couple of years ago. This fall in the dollar has erased foreign suppliers' profit margins and these firms are certain to raise their prices faster this year than the 9.6 percent increase they recorded in 1987.

Another trend that will cause an increasing drain on the amount of money available for spending here is the growth in U.S. payments on burgeoning debts owed to foreigners. The United States is just starting to foot the bill for the debt it incurred during the 1980s while borrowing money from abroad to finance its trade deficits. Late last year, the Commerce Department reported that for the first time in 29 years, the United States paid a larger sum to foreign investors than it gained from U.S. investments overseas. The net amount transferred abroad will inevitably rise in the future.

Finally, individual incomes will probably be compressed by new actions to cut the federal budget deficit after the next president takes office. To be sure, politicians may continue to balk at major tax increases or cuts in benefits, so perhaps this form of belt-tightening will be less than what's really needed.

Which brings us to the Very Painful Version of the squeeze.

Here's the most likely scenario under which the Very Painful Version would arise: The financial markets perceive that the United States isn't making much progress toward living within its means. In particular, the markets see evidence of the sort that surfaced in mid-October — a U.S. trade deficit that is hanging unexpectedly high.

Foreign investors lose confidence in the ability of the United States to stop its borrowing binge. They start to pull their money out of the country, withdrawing deposits, selling Treasury bonds, dumping stocks. The people who agree to buy these American assets demand higher yields to compensate them for their risk — which means U.S. interest rates go up. Businessmen and consumers find it harder to borrow. The economy falls into a wrenching recession.

There is considerable risk that the Very Painful Version will occur. The lower dollar is helping to narrow the trade gap, but it isn't helping as much as many had hoped.

Strength For Today

Socrates many centuries ago made the very wise observation that an unexamined life is not worth living.

Probably because it involves considerable effort and patience, most people are indisposed to spend much time in meditation. The habit of daydreaming is widespread, but daydreaming and meditation are not the same thing. In meditation we get out of ourselves, as it were, and think not about the things we should like to have happen, or the person we would like to be, but about the things which are actually happening and the kind of person we really are.

If any man or woman will give five minutes a day to a searching look into his or her soul, and during that time make certain definite resolves about things which need to be done, the result will be an astounding improvement in accomplishments and peace of mind.

U.S. House Contra Vote Called Gorbachev's Hand

Analysis

Forty years ago, at the strident beginning of the Cold War, it used to be said that every congressional action on foreign affairs had two tallies — the actual number on Capitol Hill and then the way the vote was counted in Moscow. And so it was, in a sense, again this week as the House rejected the latest administration proposal for further military aid to the Nicaraguan Contras.

By its defeat of Contra aid, Congress not only rebuffed Ronald Reagan; it also called the diplomatic hand of Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, who has more than once offered to pressure and even pacify his Sandinista clients if only the United States would stop arming the Contras. How the Soviets now respond to the House vote will be crucial to far more than peace in Central America, if only because Gorbachev's good faith there is likely to be seen as a first litmus test of his reliability on the whole range of strategic and regional issues crowding the agenda of the planned Moscow summit meeting later this year. The stakes are high, and the task will not be easy.

Gorbachev is discovering, as some scarred American politicians before him have, that client states can be the special curse and burden of a great power. There may have been a time when the Soviets saw the Nicaraguan revolution as something to be exploited and controlled for their own purposes — what U.S. conservatives call a beachhead in the Americas. But the opportunity has been overtaken by events. Now the Soviets are learning that it is easier to scavenge the social revolutions of the Third World, to arm and entice some cat's-paw against the United States, than to unload and somehow still influence the same regime when it has become a diplomatic liability.

There is no mistaking the arithmetic of Soviet influence on Nicaragua. Moscow's combined economic and military aid to Managua runs nearly $1.5 billion a year — the principal support for a beleaguered Sandinista government facing 40 percent unemployment, 1,000 percent inflation and the prospect of continued economic warfare with the United States, if not some new onslaught from the Contras should the peace process break down. Only the Soviets can make possible the 600,000-man reserve army and those coveted MIGs to calm the real and imagined fears of President Daniel Ortega and his regime. Without substantial Soviet help, and as long as the United States quarantine continues, the Sandinistas can neither win the war nor secure the peace.

Yet, for all that, the Nicaraguans have proved to be typically troublesome proxies, proudly and fiercely nationalistic and very much aware of how fickle the Russians can be as patrons of revolution. So while Commandante Ortega has made impressive diplomatic concessions to the Arias peace plan (and to the U.S. congress-sional vote), the Managua regime has also quietly tightened the screws of internal control and repression with a resurgence of political prosecutions and government-instigated vigilantes. It will take much of Gorbachev's charm and statesmanship, and some firm financial pressures, to wring from Ortega & Co. both the diplomatic and the domestic compromises on which peace and the Contra aid cutoff depend.

Then, too, the Soviets will have their own "linkage" problems in responding to the House vote — the perils of pulling back in Central America while seeming to retreat in other areas as well. Gorbachev must now restrain the Sandinistas while withdrawing gracefully from Afghanistan, edging delicately toward some detente with the Chinese, preserving his option in the detonating turmoil in Israel's occupied territories, all the while keeping the revolutionary and strategic face in Angola, South Africa and other volatile and tempting outposts. All of these are bargaining chips with his own formidable rivals in the Kremlin as well as with the unpredictable Americans, and all of them will have some effect on how far the Soviets will feel they can go in Nicaragua.

Not least, there is the subtle interdependence between Soviet foreign and domestic policy, an obscure yet real connection between the bloody little war in Central America and the fate of Gorbachev's historic experiment of perestroika. Diplomatic triumphs and reduced tensions abroad clearly fortify Gorbachev personally. A major settlement with the United States would mean a long-term respite and rejuvenation of the Soviet economy. Yet the final verdict on perestroika will be decided at home, in the bureaucratic and industrial labyrinth where Soviet reformers are trying to shake a corrupt, sclerotic system back to life with painfully limited resources. In the new austerity and managerial upheaval that is in store for the Soviet Union in 1988, it will not be easy for Moscow to find the political energy or the money and goods that it will cost to buy its way out of those misty jungles along the Nicaraguan-Honduran border.

If he can now summon the statesmanship — and the luck — Gorbachev will find the rewards opened by the House vote as real as the risks. It is not only that a genuine peace in Central America will pave the path for the Moscow summit and make all but politically inevitable a further U.S.-Soviet agreement on strategic arms control. A constructive Soviet role in Nicaragua also could open the way to Moscow's participation in larger regional security negotiations in Latin America and elsewhere. For Gorbachev as for Reagan, this could be the beginning of some real diplomacy, beyond their rhetoric, to curb and eventually to eliminate the senseless and costly U.S.-Soviet rivalries in the Third World — confrontations that neither side wants nor wins in the end.

Thaw Could Hasten Fusion Project

U.S.-Soviet relations indeed are changing. But an important question is whether the changes will be fundamental and structural: Will they lessen significantly the threat of confrontation and war, and evolve into a healthy competition in economics and politics, and in cooperation where it is mutually beneficial?

To change the relationship, we must work on arms control and reductions, both nuclear and conventional, and we are. Changes must also be made in areas other than defense, areas crucial to both sides.

We want the "glasnost" of the present Soviet landscape to expand and become permanent — with true freedom of expression, of movement and of emigration. The Soviets want us to address our own social rights problems — rights to shelter, food and jobs. These are issues at the most basic level for both sides. Yet if our relationship is to be structurally altered and made safer, there must be a new willingness to work together and perhaps even a new means of doing so. Thus, we should look to other visible and important activities to help alter the landscape.

Science and technology are crucial to both sides. We see these fields as areas of competition with the Soviet Union in which we have great advantages. Yet we recognize Soviet strengths and capabilities, for example, in defense and space. Can we take a fundamentally different approach and cooperate with the Soviets on large science and technology projects in such a way that both sides are fully integrated into the enterprise?

U.S.-Soviet cooperation on a manned mission to Mars is receiving much press attention. It does stir the imagination, yet some call it premature while others view it as an ideal joint challenge.

Another proposal receiving less press attention is proceeding step-by-step, with specific encouragement from the joint communiqués issued both at the 1985 Geneva summit and last December's meeting in Washington. This proposal is equally challenging and would require an unprecedented degree of integration and cooperation over a period as long as 15 to 20 years. It calls for East-West cooperation to design, construct and operate an international fusion energy reactor.

Fusion energy is the primordial energy source powering our sun and the other stars. Its successful achievement on Earth would provide the human race with an inexhaustible source of energy for millennia to come. Everyone recognizes the long-term need to develop new energy sources — ones that are safe and environmentally acceptable and do not cause conflicts over fuel resources so apparent now with oil supplies.

The creation of a stable star on Earth is a truly exciting challenge, one that captures the imagination. The test machine, referred to as ITER — for International Thermonuclear Experimental Reactor — has as its objective the demonstration of the scientific and technical feasibility of fusion power. It is at the frontier of the science of plasma physics. To be successful, it will require the formation of a fully integrated scientific, engineering and management team and sustained government financial resources. It also will require a stable, perhaps altered political environment.

Such a joint project would benefit from a new structure in U.S.-Soviet relations and would help sustain that more mature structure.

Progress in fusion research and on the ITER initiative is quiet yet strong. At the Washington summit, reference to the fusion initiative was included in the joint statement.

Also, last October in Vienna the United States, the Soviet Union, Japan and the European Atomic Energy Community (Euratom) tentatively agreed to form a fully integrated partnership to design the ITER machine. A design center will be established in Europe just outside Munich. Each side will cover its own costs. Washington has budgeted $8 million a year for the joint design activity and another $8 million to support required research and development. The other partners will spend comparable amounts.

At the end of the three-year design period, a separate decision must be made about construction. All parties will have the option to proceed together during construction and operation, to proceed separately or in bilateral or trilateral arrangements, or not to proceed at all. If carried out, the construction effort could cost $4 billion to $7 billion, spread over a five- to seven-year period.

By then we will have a better sense of the wider landscape. We will know if there have been successes on arms reductions. We will know the depth and permanence of glasnost and "perestroika." And we will be in a position to determine if the structural changes in the relationship are basic enough to ensure that such a long-term science and energy project can be completed. The design will be ready. If the political landscape is ripe, the risk to go forward will be worth taking. A joint fusion energy project will then be one symbol of an altered landscape, a landscape where the relationship between the East and West is characterized by more cooperation and competition in economics, science, the arts and political philosophy, and by a sharply reduced risk of war.

Reopening Of Shellfish Beds Eyed

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's oyster and clam fishermen could be back at work within the next three weeks as the disastrous red tide continues to subside, state officials say.

"We're optimistic this is the end of it, at least for this year," Robert Benton, supervisor of the Shellfish Sanitation Program, said after only two of 25 samples taken last week showed toxic levels of the red tide.

Those two samples showed only slightly more than the toxic level of 5,000 organisms per liter — significantly lower than the hundreds of thousands of organisms per liter that showed up when the red tide hit in October.

"For the first time, there's a light at the end of the tunnel," said David L. Taylor, district manager for the state Division of Marine Fisheries in Morehead City.

There is lag time between when the red tide disappears and when the shellfish purge themselves of the toxins and are safe to eat. It's difficult to tell when that will happen, Benton told The News and Observer of Raleigh Saturday. Toxins have stayed in Texas oysters for up to four months.

But Taylor said, "We're probably talking two to three weeks."

Since it appeared off the North Carolina coast Oct. 31, the red tide — a form of algae — has closed 200 miles of coastal waters to shellfishing, has threatened to kill the summer tourist trade and has cost coastal residents an estimated $16 million in lost business.

After months of shifting winds that left the red tide's future in doubt, strong, consistent breezes from the north have broken up the algae blooms, scientists say.

Before pronouncing the red tide dead, scientists said they wanted the results of more detailed samplings, expected this week. But after three months of depressing forecasts, their tone was upbeat.

"I'm encouraged by the way things look at this point in terms of the break-up of the bloom," said Pat Tester, a biological oceanographer with the National Marine Fisheries Laboratory in Beaufort. "The news looks good."

Meanwhile, scallop harvesting might remain closed this year because from 50 to 60 percent of the harvest has been killed by the tide, said Taylor.

This winter's red tide was the state's first, though it is common in Florida and Texas. Officials said Saturday that they didn't expect more red tide outbreaks in the near future.

"I don't expect any reoccurrence from this bloom," Benton said. "It could come again sometime, but I have no idea. I don't think anyone does."

Bush Workers Hold A Strategy Session

SALISBURY, N.C. (AP) — National and state campaign officials for Vice President George Bush met here Sunday for an afternoon of strategy sessions, one month away from North Carolina's March 7 presidential primary.

More than 100 Bush campaign officials — including campaign chairmen from 70 N.C. counties — filled a meeting room at the Salisbury Holiday Inn.

"I think it's great when you can get this many people into a room to talk politics on such a beautiful, sunny Sunday, particularly in what has been described as a Dole state," Janet Mullins, Bush's national field director, told The Charlotte Observer.

Mullins referred to Republican Sen. Bob Dole, Bush's chief rival in most polls. Dole's wife, former U.S. Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole, is a Salisbury native.

But Mullins and other Bush officials Sunday pointed to weekend poll in The Observer Saturday showing Bush favored over Dole 50 percent to 28 percent by North Carolina Republican voters.

That was better than Bush's lead in a mid-January poll of N.C. Republicans by an Atlanta newspaper. It showed Bush leading Dole 32 percent to 22 percent.

Sunday's session in Salisbury was dubbed a "Sprint to Victory." But Rob Schuler, Bush's North Carolina director, said the work sessions show "we're avoiding complacency."

He and Mullins noted that only the Bush organization — of all Republican and Democratic presidential candidates — has designated county campaign chairmen in all 100 N.C. counties and in the state's 11 congressional districts.

Schuler and others call North Carolina, with 54 Republican delegates, a key state for Bush. Only in Texas, with 111, and Florida, with 87, are more delegates at stake toward the approximately 1,200 delegates needed to win nomination at the August GOP convention in New Orleans.

Rep. Robert Dornan, a conservative California Republican, lauded Bush in a pep talk to Bush workers Sunday. Dornan said he's proud to have been the first member of the House of Representatives — in fall 1985 — to endorse Bush.

Bush officials noted his edge in polls in 14 Southern and border states that are among 16 states holding presidential primaries on March 8, the so-called Super Tuesday.

"This will be the first time in this century in a contested presidential primary that a candidate can lock it up as early as March," said Dornan.

Former Chancellors Say They Ran UNC

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Having the University of North Carolina system president working and living here can leave the impression that he's really in charge of the local campus, say former chancellors at UNC at Chapel Hill.

But those former chancellors say they felt they were running the school when they held the job.

"It's not a matter of tension or difference in responsibility. The chancellor at Chapel Hill does not have the appearance of leadership afforded the chancellors at other campuses," said William B. Aycock, who became the UNC-Chapel Hill chancellor in 1958.

"If I wanted to be a professional administrator, I wouldn't want that job," Aycock told the Greensboro News & Record. "It's important that the new chancellor understands the nature of the job. All the chancellors but one understood, and he didn't stay long."

That "appearance" was one reason a committee searching for a new chancellor commissioned an outside audit of the state's flagship university.

Released last week, the audit pointed out a number of problems, not the least of which deal with the relationships between the Chapel Hill campus and the UNC system, the university's Board of Trustees and the UNC Board of Governors and the university chancellor and the UNC president.

The audit, prepared by a team of national consultants and academics and based on interviews with nearly 140 people across the state, said that the proximity of homes and offices of the president and chancellor has not allowed for effective leadership on the Chapel Hill campus.

"In over 30 years," the audit states, "apparently only one Chapel Hill chancellor has been able to really lead under such inhibiting circumstances."

The audit did not identify the chancellor.

"Repeatedly," the audit says, "people expressed concern about the relationship between the chancellor and the president, and this appears to be at the heart of the much publicized anxiety over higher education in North Carolina today rather than over the system itself."

The audit said UNC presidents have traditionally behaved as though they were the chief executive officers of Chapel Hill and the chancellors have been their operatives.

Former chancellors interviewed disputed that, however.

"He does not run the place," Aycock said of the president. "But a lot of people think he does. The press thinks he does, the people in the state think he does, but in fact he does not run it any more than he does any other campus."

J. Carlyle Sitterson, who followed Sharp as chancellor, agrees.

"I thought I ran the place," Sitterson said. "And I still think I did."

Retiring Chancellor Christopher C. Fordham III, who has been in office since 1980, says he has worked well with former UNC President William C. Friday and his successor, C.D. Spangler Jr.

Beyond that, Fordham would say only that the relationship problems have been overblown.

Former Chancellor Ferebee Taylor declined comment. Efforts to contact Paul Sharp, who became chancellor in 1964 and who recently retired as president of the University of Oklahoma, were unsuccessful.

A year and a half after becoming chancellor at UNC-CH, Sharp resigned to become president of Drake University.

"The challenge of larger and freer opportunity for administrative leadership has led us to accept these new responsibilities," Sharp said at the time he resigned.

First Impeachment

GREENSBORO (AP) — If Gov. Evan Mecham of Arizona hears rattling in the attic, it may be the ghost of Gov. William W. Holden of North Carolina.

Mecham was impeached by the Arizona House Saturday and now faces trial by the Senate. He also faces a recall election May 17 and a criminal trial March 9 on charges of concealing a $350,000 campaign loan.

Holden was impeached in 1870, becoming the first American governor ever booted from office.

Holden got in trouble because he tried to protect freed slaves by ordering the militia after the Ku Klux Klan, whose membership after the Civil War included powerful Democrats. Back then, the Democratic party had no sympathy for blacks.

But time has vindicated Holden.

Highway Fatalities

RALEIGH (AP) — Five people, including a motorist whose car overturned several times, were killed on North Carolina highways over the weekend, the state highway patrol says.

Mordecai Pratt Batten, 41, of Washington was killed Saturday when his car missed a curve on U.S. 17, ran off the roadway and overturned several times, killing Batten, the patrol said. The accident occurred about 2 miles north of Batten's home.

David Lee Fryar, 20, of Richlands was killed at 12:35 a.m. Saturday when the car he was driving ran off a rural road and struck a tree in Onslow County, troopers said.

Bertha Britton, 41, and Willie McCleary, 31, both of Jersey City, N.J., died at 5:30 a.m. Sunday when the car in which they were passengers ran off the road and hit a vehicle that was parked in a service lane of Interstate 95 nine miles south of Roanoke Rapids in Halifax County. The driver of the vehicle in which the two victims were riding had fallen asleep at the wheel, the patrol said.

Ricky Junior Pressley, 31, of Monroe, died at 5:35 p.m. Sunday when his car crossed the center line of a rural road two miles north of Monroe and hit another vehicle head-on.

The accidents bring to 96 the number of people killed on state highways in 1988, compared 123 traffic deaths at this time last year.

McCarthy Support

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina labor leaders have endorsed college professor Henry M. McCarthy for state school superintendent, saying he has more of a "vision" for public schools than his rival, state Rep. Bobby Etheridge, D-Harnett.

Winning the endorsement of the 165,000-member N.C. AFL-CIO could give a boost to McCarthy, an associate professor of education at Appalachian State University, in his Democratic primary battle with Etheridge and Norman Jarrard of Greensboro.

The endorsement was made Saturday by the organization's political arm, the Committee on Political Education.

The labor group, which typically aligns itself with the Democratic Party, voted to back state Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland in the lieutenant governor's race and incumbent Democrat John Brooks in the race for Labor Commissioner.

The superintendent's endorsement sparked a 30-minute debate by the 200 delegates who went behind closed doors to settle the matter. Some delegates argued that Etheridge should receive the group's backing because he was the likely primary winner.

Etheridge said he would have liked the group's endorsement but did not think it would hurt his campaign.

McCarthy could not be reached for comment.

No Body, No Deal

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The man convicted of second-degree murder in the slaying of a Davidson real estate agent says he turned down a deal that would have given him a seven-year sentence in exchange for the woman's body because he could not produce it.

He said he would be relieved if the woman's body were found. "It would be the best thing for me," Head said in a recent interview with The Charlotte Observer. "Her body might provide evidence that would free me."

Ms. Gabriel disappeared July 18, 1983, after leaving a Davidson real estate office to appraise a Lake Norman house. Her body was never found.

Law enforcement agents had hoped that once Head's conviction was upheld two years ago, he would tell them where her body was. But Head declined to discuss the case until last week.

Prosecutors believe Head lured Ms. Gabriel to his Lake Norman home to do an appraisal, bound her hands and feet, strangled her and disposed of her body.

Head, a backhoe operator from Mooresville, was indicted for first-degree murder but prosecuted for second-degree murder because there was no body to help show aggravating circumstances. Convicted, he was sentenced to 50 years in prison.

"My side of the story? Hell, I didn't do it," Head, who will be 32 on Saturday, said. "But there's really not that much to say when you're put in the position of proving yourself not guilty, rather than the state proving you're guilty."

Head works as a prison cook at the Lincoln County prison unit, not because he enjoys cooking, he said, but because it gives him some control over his prison schedule. Because he usually works seven days a week, Head gets extra time credited against his sentence. His maximum release is in 2005, but the time credited could shorten that considerably.

Fire Chases Patients

HENDERSON, N.C. (AP) — A pre-dawn fire at the Pine Crest Manor nursing home forced the evacuation of 125 patients, and five of them were admitted to area hospitals for observation, authorities said today.

"There were no injuries, just minor stuff, thank the good Lord because it was down to about 18 degrees and some of them were out there about an hour," said Ranger Wilkerson, Henderson's fire chief.

"They took it real good," Wilkerson said. "We just rolled about 90 percent of them on their own beds. We just grabbed the beds and took off on down the hall. They took it good."

They braved the cold weather as good as we did."

Wilkerson said 58 people were taken to the National Guard Armory and six were transported to Maria Parham Hospital. The other patients were returned to another wing of the nursing home about an hour after being evacuated.

"We had them all out of the building and at the hospital or armory in 35 to 40 minutes," Wilkerson said. "We got all the police cars, deputy sheriff's cars, all the ambulances and they just started hauling. It's about three miles from the scene to the armory. They did a fantastic job."

Wilkerson said most of the patients were elderly and feeble, and those at the armory will have to be moved fairly quickly.

Panel Member: Waldheim Knew About Crimes

By KEVIN COSTELLO
Associated Press Writer

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — A member of the panel probing Kurt Waldheim's past was quoted today as saying the Austrian president knew about Nazi war crimes while serving in the German army and could have done more to prevent atrocities.

But Manfred Messerschmidt reportedly told the Bonn newspaper Die Welt that the commission found no proof that Waldheim committed any crimes.

"There were other officers those days who found ways to prevent the worst from happening," the newspaper quoted Messerschmidt as saying.

"There is no personally guilty behavior on his part, but he knew about what was taking place," the West German historian said. "The accusation of participation in war crimes must therefore be taken as refuted."

Swiss historian Hans Rudolf Kurz, who heads the six-member, government-appointed commission, emphasized the report was "critical" and "severe."

The international panel was to present their report to the government and Waldheim late today. There were signs the report was straining Austria's uneasy coalition government of conservatives and Socialists.

According to Die Welt, Messerschmidt said Waldheim as a young officer routinely got reports that clearly indicated what was happening in the regions in which he served in the Balkans. Die Welt said it would print the interview in Tuesday's editions; it was telexed in advance to other news media.

The Nazis killed or deported thousands of partisans, Jews and other civilians in Yugoslavia and Greece from 1942 to 1945.

Yugoslavia placed Waldheim on a list of suspected war criminals and asked for his extradition from Austria in 1947, but it never pursued the extradition request and never publicly explained why.

Waldheim, 69, has consistently denied allegations that surfaced in 1986 that he was involved in Nazi atrocities while serving as an officer in the Balkans during World War II.

Waldheim has said he will not consider the commission's conclusions binding and the panel, which began its work in September, is not expected to deliver a final judgment on whether the president should stay in office. The presidency is largely a ceremonial post. Waldheim met for two hours this morning with Chancellor Franz Vranitzky and Deputy Chancellor Alois Mock to discuss the report, according to Waldheim's spokesman Gerold Christian.

Mock, a staunch Waldheim defender, told reporters "there was no proof" the president was involved in war crimes while serving as a lieutenant in the German army.

After Waldheim's war-time role was disclosed in March 1986, during his campaign for the presidency, there were allegations that he was involved in the deportation of Jews from Greece and atrocities against partisans in Yugoslavia.

The allegations have effectively led to his exclusion from the United States, and prompted bitter criticism from Jewish groups and others at home and abroad.

On Feb. 8, West Germany's Der Spiegel news magazine printed a document that purported to be a Waldheim order for the deportation of more than 4,000 civilians to two camps outside Belgrade in 1942.

The original of the document has not been found, and the Yugoslav historian who says he discovered it failed to produce the paper during a program Sunday on Belgrade television.

At a news conference today, Mock was asked what would happen if it were shown that Waldheim had wrongly covered up his Nazi past or was aware of Nazi atrocities.

"The Austrian people have the right to judge the personal qualifications of the federal president and not any commission," Mock said.

Asked about the international dispute surrounding the former U.N. secretary-general, Mock replied: "The disinformation and slanderous allegations against the federal president certainly have hurt us."

Mock also stressed that he wanted to be certain that the panel had stayed within its mandate. Austrian radio quoted government sources as saying Mock's People's Party would assert the panel had gone beyond its legal limits.

In an interview with Austrian radio at today, panel chairman Kurz stressed that the report will criticize Waldheim.

"It will be critical and it will be severe," Kurz said, repeating comments he had made Sunday to The Associated Press.

U.S. Justice Department officials have criticized the commission's work and expressed doubt the report will contain all the evidence available on Waldheim's activities as a soldier in Hitler's army.

The commission was appointed by the Austrian government to investigate Waldheim's past after the Justice Department placed him on a list of undesirable aliens last April. The action effectively bars Waldheim from visiting the United States.

Of the six commission members, one is an American: James L. Collins, of Virginia.

THUMBS UP FOR ROBERTSON — Pat Robertson, sporting a lei, gives the thumbs up sign to supporters during a campaign stop on his "whirly-bird tour" over the weekend in Coralville, Iowa, in preparation for today's caucuses. Bush, Dole Change Their Tactics As Iowans Prepare For Caucuses

By MERRILL HARTSON
Associated Press Writer

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — As Iowans get set for tonight's precinct caucuses, Vice President George Bush and Kansas Sen. Bob Dole are indicating they want to tone down their campaign feud.

Neither was willing to apologize to the other for shots taken in recent days. Bush did say, though, that he would "totally apologize" to Dole's wife, Elizabeth, if any of the material put out by the vice president's Iowa campaign chairman, George Wittgraf, was seen as being critical of her.

In Wittgraf's statement, questions were raised about the management of Mrs. Dole's finances.

Dole, told of Bush's comment, said he was pleased.

"That's what I wanted him to do, so I'm satisfied."

Bush spent Sunday on a grueling, eight-hour tour of the countryside, and he asked Iowa Republicans to "surprise the nation" by giving him a victory in tonight's precinct caucuses.

He also predicted he would win the GOP presidential nomination no matter what happens here.

But in a rallying cry to supporters across the state, Bush said he wanted to win "with Iowa on my side."

Bush and his top aides seemed stoic about the vice president's against-the-odds fight in Iowa — a challenge dramatized by a poll Sunday showing him trailing Dole 37 percent to 23 percent.

Standing in the machine house at Ed Punt's farm, part way between Marshalltown and Williamsburg, Bush acknowledged the new Iowa poll by the state's largest newspaper.

"I can read the Des Moines Register," he told supporters. "I know I'm behind in this state. I'm confident that we can surprise the nation."

Earlier, in a brief exchange with reporters outside an Episcopal church, Bush said he had seen "a lot of different analyses" on why he was having trouble mustering support in Iowa, "and some of that relates to my steadfast support" of President Reagan.

"He's not as popular in this state," Bush said.

Pete Teeley, the vice president's chief spokesman, said "there's some socio-economic problems here. There's a sort of protest vote by the farmers" against administration agricultural policy.

On separate TV interview shows Sunday, Bush and Dole talked about their feud.

"I don't think he's mean-spirited," said the vice president when asked if he agreed with that characterization of Dole by Wittgraf. But he replied, "No way, no," when asked if he would apologize to the senator.

"If there was any offense to Elizabeth, I'll be glad to get dragged into that because there never should be a criticism of somebody's wife, of that nature," the vice president said on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley."

After his ABC interview, Bush was asked by reporters whether he was apologizing to the Doles for the campaign press release.

"Only to Mrs. Dole," he replied.

Dole, who appeared on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press," said candidates' records were fair game.

"Let's talk about Bob Dole's record," he said. "I can talk about George Bush's record or lack of a record."

Dole also said that if he were president he would remove an attorney general who was undergoing the kind of investigation now centered on Edwin Meese III. But the senator refused to call for Meese's resignation.

Two other Republican contenders sparred as well Sunday. New York Rep. Jack Kemp accused the campaign of former television evangelist Pat Robertson of passing out fliers questioning Kemp's conservative stand on some social issues. Both are both courting conservatives.

Labor Chief Slain

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Gunmen today assassinated the head of the Philippine National Labor Relations Commission, who recently ordered striking employees back to work at several businesses.

Police said two men and a woman shot Esteban Calalang, 37, as he prepared to start his car at about 5 p.m. in front of the Phoenix Building in the city's center.

Calalang was hit twice in the neck and twice in the chest with .45-caliber bullets, police said. The assailants fled.

Police said they had no additional details and did not know why Calalang had been killed.

Calalang was known for his firmness in enforcing the law. He issued several injunctions lately ordering striking employees back to work.

The labor commission can be called upon to mediate labor disputes and has the power to issue back-to-work orders if it determines a strike is illegal.

Calalang's latest order involved striking workers at the Coca-Cola plant in San Fernando, about 35 miles northwest of Manila in Pampanga province.

Authorities said today that San Fernando Deputy Police Chief Angelino Simbulan, 54, who was with Calalang when he served the injunction, was gunned down Feb. 6 by suspected communist rebels.

Labor Secretary Franklin Dillon, in a statement today condemned Calalang's "senseless killing" and vowed that it "will not deter us ... from performing our functions for enforcing the law."

Drug Agents Killed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An undercover drug buy that ended in a shootout that killed two federal drug agents and two heroin dealers was a robbery set-up by the Thai dealers, authorities said.

"This is the underworld at its worst," agent Roger Guevara of the Drug Enforcement Agency said Sunday.

The gunfight broke out when agents tried to buy two pounds of heroin. But the alleged drug traffickers apparently wanted only to steal the $90,000 being used for the set-up, Guevara said.

Also Sunday, DEA agent Jose Martinez, 25, was released from Huntington Memorial Hospital in Pasadena, where he was treated for a leg wound suffered in the gun battle Friday.

The suspects may be part of the so-called Golden Triangle connection, a heroin trafficking network that exports the drug from Thailand, Burma and Laos to the United States, DEA spokesman Robert Feldkamp said.

Michael Sun, 17, of Los Angeles, was identified as one of two suspected drug traffickers killed in the shootout in suburban San Marino, 10 miles east of downtown Los Angeles.

Wen Huei Kow, a Thai national from Monterey Park, was identified by DEA officials as the other suspected drug dealer killed in the gun battle.

Kow is believed to have shot agent Paul Seema, 51, in the head at point-blank range. Guevara said. Seema died Saturday at Huntington Memorial. Agent George M. Montoya, 34, died Friday.

Agents were attempting to determine the identities of four other people taken into custody after the shootout and the charges that would be filed against them, Guevara said. They were being held without bail.

Faulkner-Peaden Vows Said

Brenda Carol Peaden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marion Tite Peaden of Route 2, Farmville, and Jamie Earl Faulkner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Earl Faulkner of Route 1, Greenville, were united in marriage Sunday at 3 p.m.

The Rev. Mike Tart conducted the double-ring ceremony in Piney Grove Free Will Baptist Church. John Sturz played the piano. Trina

MRS. FAULKNER

Elks sang "The Rose" and Judy Bownes sang "There is Love" and "We've Only Just Begun."

The bride was given in marriage by her parents. Sheila Peaden of Bell Arthur was honor attendant. Bridesmaids were Dawn Newton, Regina Anderson, and Paula Holland, all of Greenville. Stacy Hacker of Grifton and Denise Pittman of Greenville, cousins of the bridegroom, were junior bridesmaids. Cortnie Branch of Grifton, cousin of the bridegroom, was miniature bride, and the flower girl was Pam Strickland of Bell Arthur.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Scott Faulkner of Greenville, brother of the bridegroom, Chris Peaden of Winterville and Douglas Peaden of Bell Arthur, both brothers of the bride, Stacy Dail of Ballards Crossroads, and William Grant of Grifton, cousin of the bridegroom. Michael Hales of Winterville, nephew of the bride, was miniature bridegroom, and Johnny Allen Pittman Jr. of Winterville was ring bearer.

The bride wore a formal gown of white crystal organza over peau de soie designed with a Queen Anne neckline trimmed in alencon lace. The Renaissance sleeves featured a gathered pouf at the shoulder and a fitted undersleeve applied in alencon lace, beaded with pearls. The lace formed calla points over the wrist. The fitted bodice was overlaid with matching lace which extended to a basque waistline. The skirt and attached chapel-length train were finished with tiers of fluted crystal organza. She wore a fingertip veil of tiered illusion with a hand-rolled edge attached to a V-headband accented with pearl filaments and sprays entwined with white silk flowers. She carried a silk cascade bouquet of burgundy roses, carnations, white and pink tiger lilies accented with pearl sprays, white and pink lace streamers.

The honor attendant wore a burgundy tea-length satin dress. Bridesmaids and junior bridesmaids were dressed identically and wore white flowers and pearls in their hair. The miniature bride wore a gown of white accented with lace. It had puffed sleeves and tiers of ruffles on the train. She carried a bouquet like that of the bride. The matron of honor carried a cascade bouquet of pink and burgundy roses, carnations and white tiger lilies. Other attendants carried colonial bouquets of pink and burgundy roses, carnations and white tiger lilies.

The bride's mother wore a tea-length pink chiffon gown with a cape and the bridegroom's mother wore a tea-length pink lace gown. Both wore wrist corsages of pink roses. Long-stemmed red roses were given to the mother and grandmothers were given white carnation corsages.

The wedding was directed by Sandee Tart. Phyllis Branch and Connie Jones passed out wedding bulletins. Mr. and Mrs. Ronnie Nichols presided at the bridal register.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall. Sharon Peaden, sister-in-law of the bride, said good-byes.

After a wedding trip, the couple will live near Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of Farmville Central High School and Pitt Community College. She is employed by The Daily Reflector. The bridegroom graduated from D.H.Conley High School, attended PCC and is employed by Earl's Convenient Mart and Unitec Plastics Inc.

A rehearsal dinner was held at Golden Corral given by the parents of the bridegroom. Several showers were given for the couple prior to the wedding.

Abby's Solution To Dilemma Raises Readers' Eyebrows

DEAR ABBY: I am outraged at your answer to "Bearded in Boston," the 27-year-old man who paid for his own education and is doing well on his own. He had been living away from his family (out of state) for the last five years, and when he returned with a beard, his father told him that if he wanted to come home again, he'd have to shave off his beard.

"Bearded" said he liked the beard and all his friends thought it looked great; then he asked you: "If I shave it off, what will I tell my friends?" Your reply: "Tell your friends your father refused to let you come home unless you shaved your beard."

Abby, why didn't you tell him to keep his beard, come home and stay somewhere else? — OUTRAGED IN BALTIMORE

DEAR OUTRAGED: From the mail I received, I didn't make myself clear. I did not advise "Bearded" to shave off his beard. I told him that if he shaved his beard, he should tell his friends that his father wouldn't let him come home unless he got rid of the beard.

Had "Bearded" asked, "Should I shave it off?" I would have replied: "As a 27-year-old self-supporting adult, you should tell your father that you didn't need his permission to wear a beard — and if you're not welcome to stay with the family, you will arrange to stay somewhere else."

As a communicator, I flunked on this one. Pass the hemlock.

DEAR ABBY: I was appalled by "Burned Up in Newcastle," who raged against your commonsensical plea to let divorced parents stand together at their child's wedding,

Dear Abby

even though the parents have since remarried.

I should not have been appalled, for it is all too common for second wives to selfishly begrudge their husbands contact with their ex-wives and children, and to bitterly resent any show of generosity (gifts or money) to them.

When I married a divorced man whom I deeply loved, I encouraged him to visit his ex-wife and children and to be generous with them. And when his son married, I chose not to attend the wedding. I thought it was his child's special moment, and he would want his parents there together — which was all right with me. I knew who I was. I was his father's wife, and I also knew that the bonds established in every family do not simply go away because a divorce took place. I understood the feelings of children toward their divorced father, for I had previously had a husband who essentially abandoned our children because of the jealousy and selfishness of his second wife.

So many of us are walking around as emotional cripples because of horrendous experiences. Death we can't do much about — or unhappy childhoods — and for children, their parents' divorces. But we can do something about our private pettiness and jealousies. Let us pray for strength to control ourselves and not inflict unnecessary pain on others — especially children. Divorce is so common these days that anything we can do to soothe the wounds will invariably make us happier, and our society healthier. — BEEN THERE IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR BEEN THERE: You appear to be an extraordinarily kind and understanding woman. But your ex-husband who "essentially abandoned" his children because of the jealousy and selfishness of his second wife was no better than the second wife. No man (or woman) can be forced into any behavior that is incompatible with his (or her) character.

DEAR ABBY: Please advise "Chicago Attorney," who thinks all obituaries should state cause of death as a "warning" to others, that one cannot correctly assume that every person who dies of lung cancer was a heavy smoker.

Fourteen months ago, I was diagnosed as having "adenocarcinoma" (cancer) of my left lung. (It had already spread to the lymph nodes.) Although my prognosis was exceedingly grim this time last year, by the grace and mercy of God, my treatment was successful and today I am just fine. And by the way, Abby, I have never smoked a cigarette in my entire life! — LUCKY IN PULLMAN, WASH.

Flatwear Selection Is Personal

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Virtually every bride and groom include flatware when entering gift preferences in a bridal registry. That means that choosing between stainless, silverplate and sterling silver utensils is an early home furnishings decision.

A comforting thought for those making those first choices is that there is no such thing as the right material for flatware. All three choices: stainless, silverplate and sterling silver (in ascending order of costliness, as a rule) offer attractive and long-lived alternatives, says Donna Ferrari, tabletop editor of Bride's magazine.

Choosing which to register for and buy is a matter solely of personal preference. With sterling silver, you get the value inherent in a precious commodity and the look of luxury. Silverplate is an alternative when you don't want to pay sterling prices, but you want the sterling look. Stainless steel flatware has its own beauty, and is easy to care for and dishwasher-safe. All three last for years.

As with the choice of glasses, the right flatware pattern is one which goes well with the china you have selected and with your style of life. If you intend to entertain on a casual basis and don't want to spend time caring for tableware, choose stainless.

If dinner parties with fresh flowers, gleaming crystal and formal table settings are in your plans, opt for sterling or silverplate. Its luster will only increase over the years with good care.

Ms. Ferrari points out that sterling silver offers both a tactile pleasure in use and the comfort of tradition. It won't wear out or break and, if you use it regularly, you rarely will have to polish it.

The cost of sterling varies. In the luxury range (names such as Buccellati, Tiffany and Georg Jensen) expect to pay from $600 to $800 a place setting. In nationally-known name brands in the American size (which is somewhat smaller than the continental size), prices can vary from about $125 to $300 a place setting. They depend on the pattern's detailing, amount of hand work and quantity of silver in each utensil.

Sterling can be put in the dishwasher, but the heat of the dry cycle and the abrasion produced as one utensil rubs against another can lead to scratches in the soft metal. Intense heat can also loosen the anchoring of the blade into the knife handle.

When using a dishwasher, load the basket carefully so the silver isn't crowded and remove the flatware before the dry cycle, drying by hand.

In shopping for silverplate it is critical to buy quality, says Ms. Ferrari. High-quality place settings may range in price from $90 to $150.

Silverplate is measured in microns and you can ask how many microns of silver have been applied to one product, compared to others you are considering. Ask also if the manufacturer considers the set dishwasher-safe and the length of time it is expected to last. (Typically, a period of from 25-50 years will be mentioned.)

Silverplate has the same drawbacks as sterling in the dishwasher. Abrasion can wear away the silver coating, particularly at stress points. A mark of quality is that the utensils can be safely washed in the dishwasher.

When it wears out, a piece of silverplate can be replated. However, professional replating is expensive. Another idea is to treat your flatware to an occasional application of liquid silver. It is applied like polish, but adds a very thin coating of real silver and thus prolongs the item's good looks and life.

There is an unusually wide range of prices for stainless flatware. There are patterns that sell for over $100, thus putting them in the same category as silverplate. But there are also patterns that sell for about $16. A large number of patterns fall within the range of $40 a place setting.

Stainless flatware has its own shine, which Ms. Ferrari describes as a blue gray luster. Better pieces usually have more chromium for stain resistance and nickel for luster and strength. Utensils with a numerical rating of 18-8 have 18 percent chromium and 8 percent nickel and are considered to be durable over time.

THE BEST VACUUM

Conduct this simple test - go to an entry area and separate the carpet's tufts. Moisten your finger (your tongue will do) and press it to the backing between the tufts. Now, examine your finger tip. If no gritty soil adheres, stop reading this and go on to Dear Abby. If there is, continue to read and hope your carpet isn't worn out before you finish!

Amusing?...Perhaps. What isn't amusing is replacing carpet years prematurely due to worn out entry areas. It's especially frustrating when you consider that the key to carpet life is found in your broom closet - if that's where you keep your vacuum cleaner!

Let's examine a few steps you can take to remove soil using proper vacuuming equipment.

The First Step
Now, what type vacuum is best? There are two basic types - canister and upright. The canister vacuum is used on upholstery, drapery and hard surface floors, only. Without brush agitation, the airflow alone generated by a canister vacuum only removes surface soil from carpet. Already have a canister vacuum? Relax! Most of these units come with a "power head" attachment which may be purchased and used with your existing equipment.

The upright vacuum, on the other hand, is designed to lift or vibrate soil (hair, lint, strings, dust and sand) into the air stream within the vacuum nozzle, where it is picked up and deposited into a recovery bag. A top-fill configuration insures unimpeded airflow, even when the bag is nearly full.

Interesting how the essential key to extended carpet life is readily available to all homeowners - the home vacuum. With a little care in selection and routine use, you can greatly extend the life of your carpet investment.

Stock And Market Reports

HOGS: Market 50 to 75 cents lower at N.C. buying stations. NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices slumped broadly today as interest rates rose, retracing some of their recent declines.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which fell 13.09 on Friday, was off another 17.08 points at 1,893.40 by noon on Wall Street.

Losers outnumbered gainers by 5 to 2 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 393 up, 1,016 down and 406 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 102.23 million shares at noontime compared with 80.85 million shares at the same point on Friday.

Prices of long-term Treasury bonds dropped about $7.50 for each $1,000 in face value this morning, raising their yields to about 8.36 percent.

Analysts said that reflected some uncertainty over prospects for any impending move by the Federal Reserve to loosen its credit policy.

Another source of caution was the Commerce Department's report, due out on Friday, on the nation's trade deficit for December.

Hoston Industries led the list of most actively-traded stocks on the NYSE and was down 1/4 at 33 3/8 after several large blocks changed hands.

Funeral Keys Protest

The relatives told field workers that Israeli soldiers took the teen-agers from the house and beat them.

Aql was buried today and the ceremony turned into a demonstration that spread to the neighboring Nuseirat refugee camp, the reporter said.

Four Arabs were wounded by gunfire, including a 10-year-old boy shot in the right thigh and a 17-year-old shot in the chest, according to officials at Ahli Arab Hospital in Gaza City. A fifth Palestinian was shot in both legs in a separate protest in Gaza City, officials at Shifa Hospital said.

Israeli soldiers raided a neighborhood in Gaza's Jabaliya refugee camp at midnight and beat Palestinian youths, the U.N. official said. Twenty were taken in U.N. ambulances to Gaza hospitals, he said.

One of them was 10-year-old Basel Ahmed Abu Raqbe, according to his mother Amne Gaddalah Abu Raqbe, 32. She said her son suffered a broken left hand and was beaten in the head when soldiers chased him into their home.

In Jerusalem, police spokesman Rafi Levy said two Israeli school children were slightly injured today when Arab protesters hurled stones at them while they were touring the Old City walls. In a separate incident, police fired tear gas to disperse stone-throwing Arabs outside the walled Old City, Levy said.

Police Ministry spokesman Nachum Mendel said there had been 119 Palestinian disturbances in Jerusalem last week, up from 59 the week before. He said the police force had requested an additional 600 policemen to deal with the unrest.

On Sunday Israeli soldiers shot and killed three Palestinians, the army said, and Arab news reports said 25 Arabs were wounded in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, which Israel seized in the 1967 Middle East War.

The army said seven were wounded. Two other Palestinians died Sunday of wounds suffered earlier. The army denied responsibility for the death of one of the two, 15-year-old Rami Aklok of Deir al Balah, in the Gaza Strip.

Fifteen Palestinian refugee camps, towns and villages — some 254,000 people — were under curfew today as the army tried to restore order.

The army commander of the West bank, Maj. Gen. Amram Mitzna, met Sunday with Jewish settlers and asked them not to carry out reprisals against Arabs.

Settlers have said they will attack Palestinians unless there is an end to the attacks against Jews in the West Bank.

Sunday's disturbances began after Jewish settlers vandalized Arab-owned cars in Hebron, 20 miles south of Jerusalem.

Reports that settlers also planned to attack the nearby village of Beit Ummar led to Sunday's most violent clash, when Israeli troops opened fire to disperse Arab protesters, killing three people. Arab news reports said 25 Palestinians were injured by bullets, tear gas and beatings.

In Gaza, hospital officials said soldiers beat up 32 Palestinians Sunday.

Dozens of victims of clashes at Beit Ummar and nearby Beit Fajar were taken to Alia Hospital in Hebron and Mukassad Hospital in Jerusalem.

AP reporter John Rice saw two injured Palestinians brought into Mukassad, one with a face bandaged and another with bandaged hands. Hospital aides rushed to help, carrying stretchers stained with the blood of earlier victims.

At Alia Hospital in Hebron, 10 Palestinians were brought in suffering from injuries, five with broken bones, doctors said. AP reporter Karin Laub saw some injured lying on stretchers on the floor because all 103 beds were filled.

"These hospitals are completely inadequate for the treatment of this kind of trauma. People are stitching wounds without gloves and without anesthesia," said H. Jack Geiger, a professor of medicine at the City University of New York who is in Israel with the Boston-based Physicians For Human Rights.

Drug War Aid Sought

companies were administering drug testing of some kind. By 1986, that had skyrocketed to one-third of those companies.

Reagan also praised the Pentagon's effort at ending drug abuse.

"We got a head start with the military. And since the drug program started there, illegal drug use has gone down by two-thirds," Reagan said.

Reagan attended a seminar hosted by the university and Gov. Jim Martin before an audience of students, local business people, executives, educators, physicians and government officials.

On Saturday, the president said in his regular weekly radio address that drug use in the workplace "costs our society nearly $100 billion in lost productivity each year and poses a grave threat to our public health and safety."

Reagan said he doesn't want to put users in jail, but wants them to receive help so they can stop using drugs.

"Drug testing not only permits us to identify the users, but it has been shown to be a deterrent as well. In fact, a no-drug policy in the military, which includes screening and testing, has resulted in a two-thirds decline in the number of drug users in uniform," Reagan said.

The president argued that programs similar to the Pentagon's "could well save money and lives in the private sector."

The Pentagon began requiring drug tests for uniformed personnel in the early 1980s and extended the effort to certain "critical" civilian workers in 1985.

Reagan did not mention the controversy that has erupted in the federal workplace since he signed an executive order in 1986 that required federal civilian employees holding "sensitive positions" to undergo drug testing. Drug testing opponents including employee unions and the American Civil Liberties Union have cited concerns over invasion of privacy and the accuracy of the tests.

Snyder, King Help Duke Defeat Irish

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Just how fourth-ranked Duke got its 70-61 victory over Notre Dame depends on who you talk to.

Quin Snyder was the catalyst for a 12-2 run midway through the second half that put the Blue Devils in command. At the defensive end, Billy King shut down Fighting Irish guard David Rivers, holding him scoreless in the second half after allowing him only nine points in the first half.

"In the first half, I thought I was letting him dictate to me," King said. "I decided I was going to force the issue (in the second half), make him beat me and not me losing it."

It was that defensive performance that was on Rivers' mind after Notre Dame fell to 12-7. He felt the officials could have called more fouls.

"At times it was obvious. I was being held at certain points, but that's part of the game," said Rivers, who averages 23 points per game but hit three of 17 field goals. "But, just not being able to get one call, that's kind of hard for me to understand. As much as I penetrate and force the action ... that's just the way the game went."

As for King's defense overall, Rivers said, "He did a very good job. He's a very good defensive player."

Joe Fredrick, who averages five points a game, scored 23 to lead the Fighting Irish. He felt he had an advantage over Snyder to lead in his performance, but he also said King didn't stop Rivers.

"Dave just was off," Fredrick said. "He's too good of a player to be stopped. I've seen everybody's best defensive player cover him, and you can't stop him. He just had a cold day."

Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps said his team didn't respond when Duke threatened his team's 35-32 halftime lead, and he, too, was critical of the officiating.

"I thought the turnaround of the game was when he made the steal, scored and gets fouled — a possible four-point play — and he gets called for a walk," Phelps said. "I don't understand it. In the last three games, we've had an unbelievable number of walks called on us."

Meanwhile, in the Duke locker room, King celebrated his performance and shied away from the debate.

"Unfortunately for them, that's the way they feel," said King, who scored 11 points, more than twice his average.

"Any time you're playing against a guy who's going to be a first-team All-American candidate, and who's going to be a first-round draft pick while I'm working nine to five, it's something I can cherish," King said. (Defense) is my forte and it's something that I cherish."

Notre Dame outbounded Duke 31-21, but the Blue Devils forced 18 Irish turnovers. Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski credited the entire team, and saved some praise for King.

"When you think of all the individual accomplishments, visitor and home, that have happened in Cameron, most people remember offensive accomplishments," Krzyzewski said. "I think when people still talk about Cameron, they're going to remember Billy's play today."

Danny Ferry led Duke with 16 points. Kevin Strickland scored 14 and Robert Brickey had 13 for the Blue Devils, 16-3. Gary Voce hit all four of his field goals and had 11 points for the Fighting Irish.

Jones Takes Pebble Beach

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The putter was the winner for Steve Jones. It also was the eraser.

"A hot putter can erase a lot of bad swings," Jones said after he'd twice blown the lead and still held on to score a sudden-death playoff victory Sunday in the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am.

Bob Tway was the victim of Jones' winning 18-foot birdie putt on the second playoff hole, the par-3 17th at Pebble Beach.

"It was great putt," Tway said. "I don't feel like I lost it. I just feel like Steve won it."

But it was a near thing, this first individual career victory for the rangy, 29-year-old Jones.

He had a 3-shot lead when play started. By the fifth hole, he was behind. He regained the lead, one-putting six consecutive holes, then backed off into a tie for the lead.

"It's very difficult to go out and play with the lead," Tway said. "Sometimes it's much easier to come from behind."

Tway did just that.

Seeking his first victory since beating Greg Norman in the 1986 PGA, Tway came from six strokes back with a 68 and was standing by the 18th green when Jones came to the final hole of regulation play with an 8-foot birdie putt to win it.

He missed that one, finishing the last round with a 2-over-par 74, and the playoff was on, beginning on the 16th. After that was halved in pars, Jones dropped the winner on the 17th, a putt worth $126,000 from the total purse of $700,000.

It also helped ease the memory of a pushed tee shot that cost him the title on the final hole of the 1987 Heritage Classic.

"This will mean a lot for me," Jones said. "This gives me the confidence that comes with winning; it gives me the winners' edge when I get in this situation again."

Norman, trying to overcome a 9-shot last-round deficit, came within one with a 66 that left him one shot out of the playoff at 281.

Former Masters champions Bernhard Langer of West Germany and Craig Stadler, along with Tom Sieckmann and Jim Carter were another stroke back at 282.

Langer moved into the lead on the fifth hole, but bogeyed five of seven beginning on the ninth. He finished with a 73. So did Stadler, who once mocked a bite at his bumpy putter. Sieckmann had a closing 70, Carter 71.

Correction

In a story Sunday about college football recruiting, North Pitt coach Larry Bolger was misquoted regarding a statement about East Carolina football recruiting.

ECU is in fact currently recruiting under NCAA guidelines set forth in Proposition 48 where student-athletes must earn a set Scholastic Aptitude Test score and grade point average in core curriculum.

In addition, recruiting prospects must also meet ECU's own student entrance requirements.

Michigan's Rumeal Robinson (21) loses the ball as he runs into Purdue's Tony Jones during the first half of Sunday's Big 10 matchup. The Boilermakers beat the Wolverines, 91-87, to move into first place in the Big 10 with an 8-1 record. (AP Laserphoto)

Houston's Big 1st-Half Too Much For Virginia

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's Horace Chaney scored 19 points and Tom Grant hit 12 of his 15 points in a breakaway first half, leading the Cougars to an 81-58 victory over Virginia Sunday.

Grant came into the game with Houston leading 28-20 with 6:09 left in the half and fueled the Cougars' 15-2 spurt, completing the charge with a 3-point basket at the halftime buzzer.

The Cougars, 10-9 for the season, led 45-24 at the half and never were tested by the Cavaliers in the second half.

Mel Kennedy led the Cavaliers with 21 points. He was the only Virginia player in double figures. Virginia dropped to a 12-11 record.

Houston, which shot 60 per cent from the field in a 73-69 loss to Louisville Saturday, kept their shooting tough Sunday, hitting 58 per cent from the field in the first half.

The Cougars slowed the Cavaliers with a full court press in the first half.

Virginia made a modest charge midway in the second half, outscoring the Cougars 8-0 before the Cougars quelled the rally.

The Cougars also were hot from the free throw line, finishing with 16 of 18 for the game, including 12 straight in the second half.

North Carolina-Charlotte 89 South Alabama 84

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Byron Dinkins scored 25 points and Jeff West added a career-high 23 — including a basket with 51 seconds left that put North Carolina-Charlotte ahead for good — to lead the 49ers to an 89-84 Sun Belt Conference victory over South Alabama Sunday.

The 49ers made four free throws in the final minute to seal the victory and connected on their last 13 attempts from the line overall.

UNC improved its record to 15-6 and 7-1 in the Sun Belt. South Alabama dropped to 10-10, 4-4 in the conference.

The Jaguars led 49-44 at halftime, but the 49ers outscored them 17-8 in the first eight minutes of the second half to take a 61-57 lead.

The teams exchanged the lead several times before the score was tied for the last time, 83-83, with 1:39 to play.

West then hit a 13-foot jumper with 51 seconds to go to put UNC ahead and Frank Persley and Michael Pullely each sank two free throws in the final 26 seconds.

Jeff Hodge, who led all scorers with 31 points, made a free throw for South Alabama's only point during that stretch.

Dinkins led his team with six rebounds, while West, a junior, topped his previous career of 21 points set against Bradley earlier this season. Persley added 15 and Dan Plondke had 10.

For South Alabama, Junie Lewis had 23 points and John Jimmerson 14. Jimmerson also had a game-high 12 rebounds to help the Jaguars hold a 31-22 advantage on the boards.

Jordan Thrills Home Fans With 40-Point Outburst

CHICAGO (AP) — This one was for the hometown kid and the old man.

Michael Jordan, buoyed by his home fans, scored 40 points and was selected Most Valuable Player as the East defeated the West 138-133 Sunday in the NBA All-Star game.

With 52 seconds left, the fans began chanting, "Jabbar, Jabbar," and 40-year-old Kareem Abdul-Jabbar came back into the game and hit a sky hook to become the all-time leading All-Star scorer with 247 points in 17 appearances.

Jordan, 24, was making only his third All-Star appearance. Although he had scored only 18 total points in his two previous games, there was no doubt that this was Michael Jordan weekend at Chicago Stadium.

"Our guys wanted to get him the ball as much as possible," said Philadelphia's Charles Barkley, one of Jordan's teammates on the East squad.

After winning his second consecutive slam-dunk title a day earlier, Jordan connected on 17 of 23 shots from the field and was the unanimous choice for MVP. His 40 points were just two short of Wilt Chamberlain's All-Star Game record of 42, set in 1962.

By giving him the ball, he said, "the players were paying me a home-court tribute."

"It made me proud to play in front of the home fans, and in front of my family, fiance and friends," Jordan said.

"I think there were a lot of expectations as far as me getting MVP. My expectations were just to have a good game."

Magic Johnson, who finished with 17 points and 19 assists for the West, said Jordan handled the weekend All-Star pressure well.

"You've got it (pressure) already in the slam-dunk (contest) ... and then you have to go out and actually do it (in a game). It's a lot of pressure, but the great ones come through. And that's what he did. And I think he did not only for himself but for the city of Chicago," Johnson said.

Atlanta's Dominique Wilkins, who lost to Jordan on the final jam in Saturday's slam-dunk competition, added 29 points for the East, which now leads the All-Star series 25-13. But Wilkins had no hard feelings about playing second fiddle two days in a row.

"Michael and I have been close friends," Wilkins said. "He's a great player and it's a great city for him. Naturally, the attention is going to be on him. I was just having fun."

Jordan scored 18 points and Wilkins 13 as the East built a 60-54 lead at halftime. The West pulled to within 78-75 with 5:52 left in the third quarter on a layup by Xavier McDaniel, but Wilkins scored twice and Larry Bird once to put the East ahead 84-75.

Jordan sat out eight minutes over the last two periods with foul trouble,

Defense Has Advanatage At Pro Bowl

HONOLULU (AP) — Joe Montana had an explanation for the fact that the defenses dominated the Pro Bowl, as they often do.

"When you have so little time together, trying to do things on offense is much more unnatural than on defense," he said.

Montana, the San Francisco 49ers' quarterback and the NFC starter Sunday, provided an example of how difficult it is to get offensive timing down in just five days of practice.

He was victimized for two interceptions and a safety as the AFC beat the NFC 15-6 in a mistake-marred Pro Bowl game.

There were a total of 10 turnovers, five by each team. The game's only touchdown came on a 1-yard rollout by Buffalo quarterback Jim Kelly in the second quarter.

"I think the defense in this situation will tend to look better because the offense isn't as complicated as usual, but I'm not sure," said Kelly, making his first NFL All-Star appearance.

"Hopefully this will be yearly event for me, so I can find out."

"The game was not a real shootout for the offenses," said Marty Schottenheimer of the Cleveland Browns, coach of the winning AFC squad for the second straight year.

"The defenses played well, put a lot of pressure on the passers. The hardest thing to control in the short practice time we have is the pass protection."

"It's difficult to put together an offense in just a few days," said Jerry Burns of the Minnesota Vikings, the NFC coach. "Our pass protection was poor and the timing of our passing and running game was poor."

"Neither team was able to provide any offensive firepower."

NFC offensive guard Dennis Harrah of the Los Angeles Rams, who has announced his retirement, said the turnovers may have been due to the fact that the game was rougher than the five previous Pro Bowl games he had played in.

"It was the hardest-hitting Pro Bowl I've been in," said Harrah, who got in a fight early in the game with AFC nose tackle Bill Maas of Kansas City. "I think that made a difference in the turnovers."

Dean Biasucci of the Indianapolis

Colts kicked a pair of field goals for the AFC, and Morten Andersen of the New Orleans Saints provided all the NFC scoring with two field goals.

The other AFC points came when Montana stepped out of his own end zone under a heavy pass rush in the fourth quarter.

The AFC gave away four fumbles and one interception. The NFC was victimized for four interceptions and one lost fumble.

End Bruce Smith of Buffalo, selected the game's Most Valuable Player, had five tackles, two quarterback sacks and a pass deflection for the AFC.

"When you have people like Howie Long, Bill Maas and Jacob Green on the inside, they make it easier to get up the field and to the quarterback,"

Smith said. "The game was more physical than I thought it would be."

Maas had six tackles and two assists for the AFC.

End Reggie White of the Eagles, last year's Pro Bowl MVP, led the NFC with nine tackles and one sack.

Earnhardt Holds Off Shuffle For Win

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Dale Earnhardt was able to hold off "the Alabama Shuffle" Sunday, winning the Busch Clash and $75,000 at Daytona International Speedway.

The two-time defending Winston Cup champion, starting where he left off last season, led the last 14 laps of the 20-lap, 50-mile sprint, worth a total of $230,000.

But, looming in his rear-view mirror over the last few laps were the hard-charging Allisons, 1987 Rookie of the Year Davey and his father, long-time NASCAR star Bobby, of Hueytown, Ala.

"I figured they'd put the Alabama shuffle on me," Earnhardt said with a grin. "I was just lookin' in the mirror and trying to figure out what was happening."

Earnhardt used the whole 2.5-mile, high-banked oval to keep the two Allisons behind him, finally beating Davey to the finish line by about one car length, with Bobby close behind in third.

"I got excited," Bobby said. "It was a heck of a race. That car (Earnhardt's) was probably 40 or 50 feet wide those last few laps, and the track is only 30 feet wide."

"Davey and I were in hot pursuit, but Earnhardt ran a great race."

The younger Allison said, "That back straightaway ran out of room fast.

"I just want to congratulate Dale and let him know we're coming after him."

Earnhardt, who also won this race for the previous year's pole winners in 1980 and 1986, became the first three-time winner of the 10-year-old event.

Earnhardt, driving a Chevrolet Monte Carlo, averaged 191.489 mph in the first racing test of NASCAR's new carburetor restrictor plate, which limits horsepower and is intended to slow the stock cars in the interest of safety.

It was the third slowest Clash ever and the slowest since Darrell Waltrip won at 189.076 mph in 1981. But it also was one of the most competitive races in the series, with plenty of passing and dicing.

Davey Allison, last year's Winston Cup Rookie of the Year, finished second in a Ford Thunderbird, about one car length behind Earnhardt. He was followed closely by Bobby Allison in a Buick Regal.

Bodine, who led the first six laps, then fell back to eighth when he got out of line in the draft, wound up fourth in a Chevy.

Bill Elliott, last year's champion who set a record by averaging 197.802 mph, was fifth in a Ford, followed by the Pontiac Grand Prix of Rusty Wallace, the Chevrolet of Daytona 500 pole-winner Ken Schrader, the Buick of Morgan Shepherd and the Chevrolet of Terry Labonte.

The last two finishers were Alan Kulwicki in a Ford and wild card entry Benny Parsons, also in a Ford. Earnhardt, who earned more than $2 million last year, collected $50,000 for first place, as well as $25,000 in lap-leader money.

Second-place was worth $21,000 to the younger Allison, while the elder Allison received $16,000 for third.

Bodine, who earned fourth-place money of $13,000, also got a $10,000 bonus for leading lap five.

None of the drivers earned less than $10,000.

Tim Richmond, who won a pole last season and was scheduled to start 12th Sunday, missed the race after being suspended indefinitely Saturday when NASCAR announced he had tested positive on a drug test.

Richmond, who had been searching for a ride for both the Clash and next Sunday's Daytona 500, Sunday denied using drugs and took a second drug test Saturday night in an effort to prove he was clean.

The race, which had no caution flags, took only 15 minutes, 40 seconds to run.

Calgary Goes High Tech

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — From microbes to manure spreaders, high technology and innovation are insuring the Calgary Winter Games against warm weather.

Organizers are unfazed, even though temperatures are expected to rise again in the final few days before the Games begin Saturday.

Computerized snow-making machines have spewed out tons of snow, its flakes made larger and fluffier through the use of a yeast-like bacteria.

Alpine ski trails are covered with the stuff, as are cross-country and biathlon courses, where officials used tractors and manure spreaders to transport the snow into the back country.

"We tried everything to get the snow out on the course," said venue chairman John Rule of the Canmore Nordic Centre. "We make snow in two locations and distribute it from three. We can truck snow to our third distribution depot, but getting it from there to the course was the problem."

"We tried some of those big-tired vehicles, all sorts of things. Some of the vehicles couldn't get up the hills, others damaged the course. Finally, we settled on old-fashioned farm tractors and manure spreaders. The job's about the same," Rule said.

Venue officers at McMahon Stadium, site of the opening ceremonies, trucked in tons of white sand to spread on the stadium floor, just in case snow cover was insufficient for the aesthetic eye of television.

Speed skating will be indoors at the University of Calgary for the first time in an Olympics, so weather won't affect that venue. Officials at Canada Olympic Park have a refrigeration system that will maintain ice on the bobsled and luge run up to 70 degrees.

"Last March, we held a World Cup luge meet at plus-20 Celsius (about 70 degrees Fahrenheit)," said Francis

Saville, venue chairman at Canada Olympic Park, which also will be the site of the Olympic bobsledding and ski jumping competitions. "Plus-18, or in the mid-60s, is about as high as we'd care to see it go, but our refrigeration system is supposed to keep the ice solid up to 70."

While warm Chinook winds occasionally blow in off the Canadian Rockies, warming temperatures by as much as 20-30 degrees in less than an hour, the weather has been fairly favorable since January. Temperatures Sunday were in the mid-teens, although the Canadian weather service predicted temperatures near 40 by Thursday, just two days before the opening ceremonies.

"We're in real good shape — Chinook or no Chinook," Rule said.

The only real problems expected from the Chinooks would be at ski jumping. Towering like twin grain silos above Olympic Park, both the 90- and 70-meter jumps are susceptible to wind-related problems. The 90-meter jump is particularly vulnerable.

"Our nemesis at the big ski jump is the Chinook," Saville said. "It can really throw off a skier's timing. ... On the 90-meter jump, the maximum wind is about 10 kilometers per hour (6 mph), and then we have to shut down. All the 90-meter jumps in the world have this problem."

The 90-meter jump faces north, and the Chinook usually comes in from the west, creating crosswinds for jumpers. Saville said the competition could be held on the 70-meter jump in winds up to about 18 mph.

Enough snow has been stockpiled to keep the jumps in operation through all but the most severe thaws.

Rule said he didn't anticipate any weather warm enough to permanently damage the Nordic courses, although wild fluctuations in temperature could create problems choosing wax for cross-country skis.

In fact, organizers don't want much more snow.

"We wouldn't mind a little more, like 3 or 4 inches, as long as we don't get a big dump," Rule said.

but the East still managed to stretch its advantage to 15 points, sparked by Wilkins and Danny Ainge, whose three 3-point baskets tied a record set by Isiah Thomas in 1985. Jordan came back to score 16 points in the final 5:50 to put the game away.

Karl Malone led the West with 22 points, Akeem Olajuwon had 21 and Lafayette Lever 17. Johnson's 19 assists were three short of the record 22 he set in 1984.

Bird remained king of the long-distance shootout, capturing his third consecutive title Saturday by out-dueling Seattle's Dale Ellis 17-15. He scored only six points in Sunday's game, but said his East teammates played well.

"If we had played in Boston I might have played a little harder and tried to go for it a little more," Bird said.

In Saturday's Legends Classic, former Boston center Dave Cowens hit a layup in sudden-death overtime to give the East Legends a 47-45 victory.

Jabbar, who finished with 10 points, said he wasn't thinking about joining the old-timers.

"I can't watch the Legends game," he said. "Half the people in the Legends game are younger than I am."

"It's not depressing. It's just very ironic. It tells me I've done quite a remarkable job just being out here on the court. They (legends) don't look good, they don't look healthy."

After having a basket taken away earlier because of offensive goaltending, Jabbar was pleased to finally break the record with 44 seconds left, on a 10-foot skyhook off a pass from Johnson.

Michigan 87

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Purdue's Troy Lewis scored 14 of his 20 points in the second half Sunday as the sixth-ranked Boilermakers beat No. 11 Michigan 91-87 to take over sole possession of first place in the Big Ten.

The victory, which snapped a 12-game Michigan winning streak in Crisler Arena, left Purdue 8-1 in the Big Ten and 19-2 overall. The Wolverines dropped to 7-2 and 18-4.

A 3-point basket by Michigan's Gary Grant tied the game at 82 with 3:38 left. Melvin McCants, Lewis and Everette Stephens scored baskets for Purdue while Michigan's Glen Rice hit a tip-in and a 3-pointer as the Boilermakers took an 88-87 lead with 28 seconds remaining.

On Michigan's next trip down the court, Loy Vaughnt missed a hook shot. Purdue's Tony Jones sank three free throws to close out the scoring.

Todd Mitchell scored 23 points for Purdue, while Stephens had 16 and McCants 15.

Grant led Michigan with 32 points, joining Mike McGee and Cazzie Russell as the only Wolverines to score 2,000 points. Glen Rice added 23 for Michigan.

The Boilermakers, taking advantage of several Michigan turnovers, took an early 15-8 lead. But the Wolverines, with Grant scoring nine points and Rice eight, went on a 31-14 run to gain a 39-29 advantage with 4:04 left in the first half.

Purdue scored 10 straight points to tie the score, but Michigan's Rumeal Robinson hit a jumper at the buzzer to give the Wolverines a 43-41 halftime lead.

He finished third Saturday in the 60 meters.

Braves Acker Wins $85,000 Pay Raise

ATLANTA (AP) — Relief pitcher Jim Acker, who had 14 saves and a 4.16 earned run average last season, won a pay raise of $85,000 although he lost his salary arbitration to the Atlanta Braves.

Arbitrator Dan Collins, a law professor at New York University, ruled Sunday that Acker must take the Braves' offer of a one-year contract worth $435,000 for 1988. Acker wanted $495,000.

He lost in arbitration last year and earned $350,000.

Acker was 0-5 with seven saves and a 4.80 ERA through the Braves' first 108 games. He won his first victory since Aug. 21, 1986, on Aug. 20, 1987, against Chicago. He ended the year 4-9.

Jess Pratt led Pitt, 8-16, with 19 points. Mike Hathaway added 18 and Jess Pratt had 17.

Aggies To Possibly Play Pitt In Classic

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — With a record of 45-23-1 and a winning percentage of .659, Jackie Sherrill is Texas A&M's winningest coach in the last 60 years.

Sherrill also coached at Pitt from 1977-81, where he compiled the best percentage in that school's history — 50-9-1—.842.

Pitt will have a chance to make a dent in Sherrill's Texas A&M record if the two teams open the 1988 college football season, as expected, in the sixth annual Kickoff Classic.

The Associated Press learned Sunday that Texas A&M, winner of three straight Southwest Conference championships, has accepted an invitation to become the first SWC team to appear in the Kickoff Classic, which will be played in late August at Giants Stadium. A conference call today was to determine the Aggies' opponent and speculation centered on Pitt.

Sherrill took over at Pitt after the Patheons won the 1976 national championship under Johnny Majors. They went 11-1 in each of Sherrill's last three years and were ranked No. 2 in 1980 and No. 4 in 1981.

Sherrill was assistant head coach at Pitt under Majors from 1973-75 and head coach at Washington State in 1976, going 3-8. His overall head coaching record is 98-40-2.

In February, 1982, he signed a six-year contract worth an estimated $287,000 a year as Texas A&M's head coach and athletic director.

After a 2-2 start last year, Texas A&M won its last eight games, including a 35-10 rout of Notre Dame in the Cotton Bowl. The Aggies were No. 10 in the final AP poll and finished seventh nationally in total defense, yielding 244.7 yards a game.

Foreign Castle Does The Trick For Frank Tate

STAFFORD, England (AP) — An Englishman's home is his castle, the saying goes.

But Houston's Frank Tate, who prepared for his fight at a 2,000-year-old English castle complete with a moat and nine sided tower, knocked out Britain's Tony Sibson in the 10th round Sunday to defend his International Boxing Federation crown.

Tate, the 23-year-old Olympic junior middleweight champion, used a right near the end of the 10th to knock the 29-year-old Sibson into retirement.

"That's it. There's nothing left now for me in boxing," said Sibson, who lost his two previous attempts to win world titles.

Tate, 23, stretched his unbeaten streak to 22 fights as a pro and proved his upset victory over Canada's Michael Olajide to win the IBF title last October was not a fluke.

He outboxed, outclassed and outpunched Sibson, who was a noted hitter but just could not find the target.

Sibson, who slipped to 55-7-1, disappointed his vast army of 8,000 fans crammed into Bingley Hall in this central English town by failing to get to his opponent.

"It was like chasing a devil," Sibson said. "I couldn't catch up with him. I couldn't fight the fight I wanted."

New Sports Labor Tactic In Use

By HAL BOCK
 AP Sports Writer

There is an interesting new tactic surfacing in the continuing adversarial relationship between the haves and have-nots in sports, the people with the money and the people who want a piece of the action.

It is called ignoring the party of the second part, making believe he isn't there. This is straight out of the Ostrich School of Labor Relations, where you stick your head in the sand and hope the other guy just goes away.

Negotiators from America's labor past believed in give and take bargaining. Today, that is viewed as unproductive. It is better to wish the other guy away instead of dealing with him. Sometimes, the other guy really does go away, and that may not always be desirable.

Example: The NBA player representatives, frustrated in their contract battle with management, voted over the weekend to decertify their union as their bargaining agent.

This effectively gives the owners nobody to negotiate with and, the players believe, could render null and void such comfortable contract clauses as the salary cap and college draft. The league contract, including those restrictive clauses, was bargained with the union.

Union? What union?

Example: When the NFL Players Association went on strike, the league blithely went about the business of staging games, importing anonymous replacements, dressing them up in uniforms and presenting them as NFL teams. It was like a masquerade party.

"If these are the NFL players, then who are those guys marching around the stadiums on the picket lines?" the public asked. "Strangers," management maintained. "Our teams are on the field."

Strike? What strike?

Example: Baseball struggled for almost a decade with the economic rigors of free agency, bidding madly for players. Meanwhile, Peter Ueberroth turned a handsome profit in the 1984 Olympics by using unpaid volunteers as the chief source of labor.

Armed with a quick course in Ueberrothonomics, the bosses of baseball decided that if the big shot players would not volunteer, it would at least be much cheaper not to shop in the free agent marketplace.

Free agents? What free agents?

Example: Asked a couple of weeks ago about the prospects for a Michael Spinks fight, Bill Cayton, co-manager of heavyweight champion Mike Tyson, shrugged off the idea, suggesting Spinks was unnecessary for his man.

"Mike Tyson will make $50 million this year without Michael Spinks," he said.

Spinks? What Spinks?

Now, a couple of weeks later, Tyson stands to make $67 million this year — with Michael Spinks. Cayton somehow will endure that turn of events.

Alice in Wonderland would have done quite well passing through this looking glass world of sports. It does get curiouser and curiouser.

The NBA figures union decertification was nothing more than a ploy by the players. That's probably so, but it still was a pretty clever one.

The NFL wounded the union and probably shortened the strike with the replacement games but it didn't exactly cover itself in glory with that gimmick.

Baseball's collusion was heavy-handed and transparent. It was compounded when Detroit outfielder Kirk Gibson, set free again by arbitrator Tom Roberts, was signed by the Los Angeles Dodgers.

How come the Dodgers didn't rush in two years ago when Gibson was a free agent the first time? Guess they didn't need him then. And weren't they just a teeny bit tempted when Tim Lincecum was available last winter? Nah.

As he watches all this, the wise old ostrich nods knowingly. It is, after all, an emphatic endorsement of his head-in-the-sand approach.

Is there an advantage to going through life in that peculiar condition? Well, it certainly reduces the number of choices he has to make and that makes things a lot less complicated for him, if not for those following his lead.

Lopez Overcomes High Winds To Claim Mazda Classic Title

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — Nancy Lopez was breezing to the championship of the LPGA's $200,000 Mazda Classic until a 25-mph wind almost blew it away.

Lopez, who took a four-stroke lead into Sunday's final round, survived the weather and bogeys on three of her first seven holes for a two-stroke victory and the $30,000 first prize.

"I had a little trouble the first few holes," Lopez said. "I was fighting the wind. I was swinging kind of quick, and then I really started to slow down and I felt my tempo coming back."

Lopez also received a pep talk from her husband, Baltimore Orioles third baseman Ray Knight.

"I did kick her in the butt a little bit on the fourth hole," Knight said. "I just wanted her to be aggressive, wind or no wind. She plays best when she's aggressive."

Lopez had a 1-over-par 37 on the back nine to outlast the rest of the field and finish with a 3-over 75 and a 72-hole score of 5-under 283 at the 6,368-yard Stonebridge Golf and Country Club course.

Marta Figueras-Dotti of Spain made birdie putts of 70 and 12 feet on the last two holes for a 73 to finish second at 285 in the season-opening event on the LPGA Tour.

Jan Stephenson, who was Lopez's biggest threat in the final round, found a bunker on No. 18 and took a double bogey to finish with a 74 and end tied for third at 288 with Heather Farr, Amy Benz, Patty Sheehan, Juli Inkster and Martha Foyer, whose previous best finish was a tie for 24th.

Inkster had the day's best round, a 68. Fourteen golfers shot 80 or above.

Lopez' championship was her 37th on the tour but her first in a season-opener.

"It's fun to be able to win the first tournament," she said. "Everybody's rusty when you get here and a little jittery about how they're going to play, and if you play well, a lot of positive feelings come out of that."

Knight compared winning the opening tourney to "hitting two or three home runs in the first game of a season, or maybe even getting six or seven straight hits, because it's so important to get off to a good start."

Knight, who is occupied with baseball during most of the golf season, saw Lopez from start to finish for the 11th time. She's won five of those tournaments.

Lopez took the lead for good in the second round, and she began the final day four shots up on Figueras-Dotti. Shots into bunkers led to bogeys for Lopez on the first, fourth and seventh holes, and she fell to 5-under.

Stephenson, Foyer and Sheehan all got to 3-under, but Lopez rolled in a 25-foot downhill birdie putt on No. 9 while Foyer bogeyed the hole, and Sheehan bogeyed No. 10.

Lopez said she turned her day around with the birdie putt.

"I needed something to get off that negative train I was on," she said.

Stephenson got back to within two strokes when she birdied No. 10 to go 4-under, but she bogeyed the next hole and also bogeyed the 15th.

First-round leader Patti Rizzo had a 74 and finished at 289. Rookie Trish Johnson of Wales, a contender until she took a triple bogey Saturday on No. 14, soared to an 87 and came in at 302.

Jabbar Not Ready To Join Old Timers

CHICAGO (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, a legend in his own time, isn't looking forward to becoming a different kind when that time is up.

In Saturday's Legends Classic, former Boston star Dave Cowens hit a layup in sudden-death overtime to give the East Legends a 47-45 victory.

Abdul-Jabbar, who finished with 10 points in Sunday's NBA All-Star game, said he wasn't thinking about joining the old-timers.

"I can't watch the Legends game," he said. "Half the people in the Legends game are younger than I am."

"It's not depressing. It's just very ironic. It tells me I've done quite a remarkable job just being out here on the court. They (legends) don't look good, they don't look healthy."

Abdul-Jabbar took advantage of a second chance Sunday to break the All-Star scoring record.

"I was hoping to get another shot at it," the 7-foot-2 Lakers center said after a basket for the West was taken away from him at the end of the third quarter in the East's 138-133 victory.

"I wasn't going to get all crazy about it if I didn't get back in the game," said Abdul-Jabbar, who did break the record in the closing minute after re-entering the game with 52 seconds left.

Abdul-Jabbar, picked as a reserve this year, has 247 points in 17 All-Star appearances. Oscar Robertson, the former Cincinnati Royals and Milwaukee Bucks star, had held the mark of 246 All-Star points in 12 appearances.

In the third quarter, the 40-year-old Abdul-Jabbar got off a long desperation shot.

The ball bounced off the rim at the buzzer, but referee Jake O'Donnell called goaltending on the East and gave Abdul-Jabbar the basket.

But referee Darell Garretson ruled Xavier McDaniel, Abdul-Jabbar's Western Conference teammate, had touched the ball over the rim and took the basket away.

"I thought it was one of the guys that tapped it away, but I guess Jake was blocked on the play," Abdul-Jabbar said. "I thought it had a chance to go in if it wasn't touched."

Abdul-Jabbar then sat until relieving Karl Malone with 52 seconds left.

West Coach Pat Riley said the crowd chanting "Jabbar, Jabbar" was a factor in him sending his star center back into the game.

Jordan Rules All-Star Extravaganza

By Scott Ostler
(c) 1988, Los Angeles Times

CHICAGO - First, some highlights of National Basketball Association All-Star Weekend, a real somber occasion:

-The weather. Friday, wind-chill factors in Chi-town were down to 37-below. But, by Sunday, the mercury had shot up almost to zero, with only light snow flurries.

-Giddy Chicagoans grabbed their Frisbees and thawed out their dogs. Those not busy bagging lake-shore rays headed to Chicago Stadium, where Michael Jordan was conducting a seminar titled, "In Your Faces, Western Conference Earthlings."

-In Saturday's slam-dunk contest, Jordan's creativity was exceeded only by that of the judges, who did the finest marking since the last time East Bloc judges scored the routine of a U.S. figure skater.

-Los Angeles Laker James Worthy, who couldn't decide whether to sit or play in the All-Star game, did both. He took a shot while sitting on the seat of his pants. Larry Bird bent over and blocked it. In your lap, sucker.

-The NBA really went big-time. Everything was corporate-sponsored - Gatorade Slam Dunk, American Airlines Three-Point Contest....

-Mark Aguirre got married Saturday. After Sunday's game, bride and groom left on their Gatorade-Sealy Posturepedic Honeymoon.

-On the gossip front, the alleged feud between Michael Jordan and the Isiah Thomas-Magic Johnson Axis erupted into peace. Joan Collins will not - repeat, not - be called in to mediate. Next summer, Magic, Isiah and Jordan will be seen marlin fishing together off the coast of Maljorca.

A silly NBA All-Star weekend? It's all relative. Soon, all America will go ga-ga over two weeks of luge and biathlon. By comparison, this weekend was Gorbachev-Reagan.

And for the shining moments, the NBA and the world can thank a guy known to his friends as simply Air.

Michael "Air" Jordan, star of the hometown Chicago Bulls, dominated Sunday's NBA All-Star game, scoring 40 points, two off Wilt's record. Granted, some of Jordan's baskets were cheapies, coming while he was guarded by only two or three opponents.

Many of his shots, though, bordered on the incredible. In other words, routine Jordan.

"Everybody else be like in the sky," said West All-Star Xavier McDaniel, "Michael be in outer space."

Actually, though, it was a conservative game for Air.

"I love to see Michael Jordan play, see something crazy that makes you stand up and shake," said newlywed Aguirre. "On one play today he almost got there, but everything else was just basic 'jump-up-and-open-your-mouth.' He didn't have any tremblers today."

Maybe Aguirre was all trembled out from wedding-partying all night, because the Chicago fans didn't seem to have any trouble falling out of their seats when Jordan rammed home a two-hand Air-bound (Pat. Pending), or knifed through five West thugs, Walter Payton-style, for a sweet layup.

I mean, let's talk to an expert witness. How about it, Dr. J?

"Basketball is an art form of sorts," said Julius Erving, who talks more like a real doctor every day. "If a player is allowed to take a brush to canvas, something wonderful will be created. Today, something wonderful was created."

Never mind that most of the other so-called artists were finger painting on hardwood Sunday. Yes, this ultimate playground game was a little ragged. Instead of sweet paychecks, the winners should have been awarded a quart bottle of warm beer in a brown bag, to be shared equally among them.

Which makes Jordan's performance all the more special. He rose above the rabble, wearing his new line of designer sneakers. This is an incredible young man, on his way up in more ways than one.

Jordan is a humble fellow who makes about $7 million a year, mostly on shoe endorsements. He's the only guy in America who can sell ad space on the bottom of his shoes, with the possible exception of Tex Cobb.

Yet, Michael still gets his hair cut by the neighborhood barber, vacuums his own rugs and irons his own shirts.

"Any woman in your life?" comedian Jay Leno asked Jordan during Saturday night's NBA party. "Of course not. With all that housework, you don't have time."

Actually, Jordan is engaged. And engaged.

"It made me proud to play in front of the home fans," Michael said. "And in front of my family, fiancee and friends. They have expectations like other fans, and wish me luck. That's what friends and family are for first of all."

Michael's mom, at his side along with Michael's father during the MVP press conference said, "The moves he has do not surprise us."

Easy for you to say, Air Mom. You don't have to guard your guy.

Jordan is so nice, so clean-cut and humble, you wonder if, along with the slam-dunk and MVP trophies, he will also be awarded a basket-making merit badge.

He's so nice you wonder how he became embroiled in a simmering feud with the likes of Isiah Thomas and even Magic Johnson. Magic feels that he was dragged into the feud as an innocent bystander.

That feud stuff dates back three years, and is grounded in solid fact. Isiah did snub Jordan at an All-Star game. And Jordan did think Magic had mistreated fellow North Carolina alumnus Worthy. But this weekend the feud died quietly. Isiah got many of his 15 assists feeding Air.

And Jordan and Magic are now solid as a rock. They got together Saturday night for a heart-to-heart chat.

"We've talked, we've got it all straight," Magic said. "I'm tired of all this stuff (media accounts of the rift), it's unbelievable. We talked, we're going to do each other's camps this summer. Me and him know (we're friends), that's all that matters."

Ah, a feud killed with the old hoop superstar cliché: "Let's do camps."

So Sunday night the artists departed to their respective home canvases, feuds diffused, mutual respect renewed.

And the Chicago they left behind, thanks to Michael Jordan, is a warmer place.

Sweden Advances, India Loses In Opening Davis Cup Matches

By The Associated Press

Defending champion Sweden has advanced to the quarterfinals of the 1988 Davis Cup tournament. But last year's other finalist, India, has been eliminated.

Sweden defeated New Zealand 5-0 in their opening-round World Group series over the weekend, while Yugoslavia beat India 3-2.

Other countries advancing to the quarterfinals were France, Italy, Czechoslovakia, West Germany and Denmark. The Mexico-Australia series, which is tied at 2-2, will be decided Monday when Australian Pat Cash completes his match against Mexican Francisco Maciel.

In the quarterfinals, it will be Denmark vs. West Germany, Yugoslavia vs. Italy, Sweden vs. Czechoslovakia and France vs. the Mexico-Australia winner.

Mexico evened its series against Australia when Leonardo Lavalle beat Wally Masur 6-2, 6-1, 4-6, 9-11, 6-2. The decisive fifth match between Cash and Maciel was tied at one set apiece Sunday when the match was suspended because of darkness.

Anders Jarryd and Stefan Edberg won singles matches Sunday as Sweden swept its series against visiting New Zealand. Jarryd beat Kelly Evernden 8-6, 4-6, 11-9, while Edberg downed Bruce Derlin 6-1, 6-2.

The Swedes, who have won three of the last four Davis Cups, won without Mats Wilander, who decided to take a six-week break after winning the Australian Open last month. Wilander will play in the quarterfinals.

In New Delhi, Slobodan Zivojinovic beat Vijay Amritraj 6-3, 6-4, 6-4 in the deciding match of the Yugoslavia-India series. India had tied the series earlier in the day when Ramesh Krishnan beat Bruno Oresar 4-6, 6-4, 4-6, 6-1, 6-3.

The biggest surprise in the opening round was Denmark's 3-2 victory over Spain.

Maxwell's Boss Is King Of The Colliding Cliche

By SCOTT WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — When Nelson Kruger talks, people listen. They have to. Otherwise they'll miss the colliding cliches and split images that emanate from the harried newspaper editor on "The Slap Maxwell Story" like pearls from the mouths of babes. Take the time he was griping about an AWOL employee: "When Judy comes back she's not gonna just waltz in here like Bob's-your-uncle. She'd better look to her lemons, I don't care how she flips the mid-gets!" "Nelson always makes perfect sense to me," says Brian Smiar, the actor who plays him on the critically acclaimed ABC series, starring Dabney Coleman as a grizzled sportswriter on the short end of a midlife crisis. Nelson is Slap's best friend, boss and sometime antagonist. Despite Slap's constant allegations, Nelson has neither a glass eye nor a wooden leg.

situation, Nelson would talk normally." That would grieve fans of Nelson's verbal trapeze work, as conceived by head writer Bob Brush, developer of the show along with creator-producer Jay Tarses. But just what is Nelson saying? "We call them 'Nelsonisms,'" said Smiar. "They have different forms. Some are combined cliches. In some cases they're combined images. Sometimes they're half-images." There are bits of wisdom like "Love don't make the buttercups shine." Or complaints: "This place is going to hell in a shrimp boat." Or, this advice to Slap: "You don't want to leave slime-trails all your life." Nelson might say that he's nobody's fool but his own. In his words, "Hey, I wasn't born in a vat." The Brian Smiar Story is not exactly pure Hollywood. In fact, he never set foot in the place until he went to work on "Slap," and he, his wife and two teen-age kids still live in Massachusetts.

Coleman is a joy to work with, an actor's actor." He also praised the show's writers, Brush, Russ Woda, John Schullian and Norma Veda, who watch all rehearsals and are always available for consultations on a scene or a character. "I think the real strength of the show is the writing, but what makes this show is Jay Tarses. His personality makes the show. He's, like, in the room all the time, even when he's not there," Smiar said. Smiar and his family make their home in Amesbury, Mass., where he goes for the one week a month he's not shooting in Hollywood. "At the moment, the tail's wagging the dog. I like the job; I want the job to continue," he said. "It's going to give me the financial basis to do the writing and directing that I want, and give me the kind of name recognition where people will say, 'Here's a reasonable actor who won't trip over the furniture.'" Smiar says there's a bit of Nelson in all people who express themselves in images — including Brian Smiar. "I think it's the writer in me," he said. "I have a tendency sometimes to talk like that. My wife and I were talking, and I said, 'Well, you're just going to have to keep your ear to the rock.'"

Movie's Message Important To Ullmann, Not Her Image

By STEPHANIE GRIFFITH
Associated Press Writer
BERLIN (AP) — The temperature was slightly below freezing in the damp graveyard filled with thistles and brambles, and actress Liv Ullmann ate bowls of chicken broth and paced about to keep warm. She was in the cemetery, one of the few Jewish landmarks not destroyed by the Nazis, to film "La Amiga," a movie about Argentina's military regime and Nazi Germany. Ullmann would rather make a movie with a message than one laced with Hollywood-style commercialism and glamour. "The film industry outside of the United States is less concerned with box office and image," said the 49-year-old Norwegian actress, clad in a simple brown coat with a woolen scarf swathed about her head. "In Europe, producers and directors don't have to think so much about box office as they do in the United States. Not to be glamorous is looked upon as a bad thing if you're an American actress. That's a tragedy because it limits your acting possibilities." "La Amiga," written and directed by the German filmmaker Claudia Meerapfel, is the first West German-Argentine co-production. Ullmann is cast as Maria, a Argentine woman who leaves her dictator-run homeland for Berlin. In the movie, Maria's oldest son — like thousands of Argentines under the 1976-83 military regime — disappears, presumably killed in the military's so-called "dirty war" against leftists. "This woman is different than anything I've done before," said the blue-eyed Ullmann, who still retains her classic beauty. "The role of Maria is one in which you draw from your understanding, the things you believe in and from the pain you yourself have felt." The focus of "La Amiga" is the 40-year friendship between Maria and her friend Raquel, played by the Argentine actress Cipe Lincovsky. But the movie is also about exile: Raquel's Jewish parents fled Nazi Germany in the 1940s; after receiving death threats in Argentina, Raquel flees to her parents' homeland. In the scene shot at the 200-year-old Jewish Cemetery in East Berlin, Raquel and Maria visit the grave of Raquel's German-Jewish great-grandparents. Raquel somberly puts a handful of pebbles on the gravestone of her great-grandparents, a gesture of greeting to the dead. Maria watches quietly. "It's a very emotional scene," Ullmann said. "They're at the grave of Raquel's ancestors and suddenly Maria says, 'I know that my son is alive.' She encounters death, and she refuses to acknowledge it in her own life." Parts of the movie were filmed in Berlin while earlier scenes were shot in Buenos Aires. "La Amiga" is Ullmann's 18th movie. She returned to the screen after a six-year hiatus, making two films released in 1987, Luis Mondoki's "Gaby" and Mauro Bolognini's "Addio Moscu." Ullmann, who achieved fame doing such movies as "Cries and Whispers" and "Scenes From a Marriage" with the celebrated filmmaker Ingmar Bergman, said the role of Maria was a challenge. "For me it's interesting to portray a character like this who changes through what life presents," she said. Ullmann said she has not been in many American films because there are too few of them with social or political messages. "At my age, which is really an old age in film, I feel very fortunate that I have the choice to do a film about the world we live in, and the reason why we are living," she said. "When I have the chance, I would rather do a film that has a human rights message." Ullmann is a spokeswoman for UNICEF. Maria belongs to the Mothers of the Plaza del Mayo, who demonstrate every week in Buenos Aires' main square for the return of their missing relatives. One of the most moving aspects about the movie project, Ullmann said, was that some of the actresses playing the mothers at the Plaza del Mayo were women whose sons actually had disappeared. "We were sitting together during a break in the filming and one of the mothers started to cry. 'Today I feel I am prostituting something,' she said. She said she wished she didn't have to do it, but that she knew it had to be this way, that this is the one way to be sure that people remember," Ullmann said. "La Amiga" is scheduled for release this fall. Ullmann's next project will be performing Mother Courage on the London stage. "I'm back and forth between film and theater all the time," she said. "Theater is my beginning and will probably be my end."

"Nelson Kruger is a man running a newspaper who should be selling real estate," the 50-year-old Smiar said in a telephone interview from Los Angeles. "He's in over his head, he has to deal with his best friend. I think if he were in a less-pressure

CBS Planning New Sitcoms

By John Carmody
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service
WASHINGTON — CBS Entertainment has announced that in mid-March it will introduce a two-hour block of situation comedies on Tuesday nights between 8 and 10.

CBS already has a similar block on Monday nights, which will undergo a slight revision with the mid-March changes, which include the introduction of four new sitcoms. The establishment of a second night of comedy in the 8 to 10 timeslots marks a major strategic retreat at CBS, once the home of a great (and sometimes not-so-great) comedy tradition that usually ensured the annual primetime ratings leadership among the three major networks.

But sitcom development lagged at CBS, starting in the late 1970s, when ABC suddenly moved up through the pack with bright new sitcoms (e.g., "Laverne & Shirley," "Happy Days," "Three's Company") for a brief stay at the top. In the early '80s, CBS recouped, even though "MASH," "Archie Bunker" and "The Jeffersons" were fading.

But by the mid-1980s, doormat NBC had seized the sitcom strategy to race to the top of the ratings heap. With its strong Thursday and Saturday laugh lineups, NBC has become unbeatable in recent years.

New CBS Entertainment president Kim LeMasters recently pledged to get his network back in the comedy business on at least two nights as part of an overall strategy to restore broad audience appeal to the CBS lineup, which had skewed to an older viewership with a mix of solid, if sometimes stolid, one-hour dramatic series. Joining the revised Monday and Tuesday lineups in March will be four new sitcoms: "Eisenhower & Lutz," "Trial and Error," "The Dictator" and "Coming of Age." To make way for the four new half hours, the network will move CBS News' new "48 Hours" from Tuesday at 8 to Thursday at 8 and "Jake and the Fatman" from Tuesday at 9 to Wednesday at 9.

In addition, "Frank's Place" will move from its spanking new 9:30 p.m. Monday slot (which starts Monday night) to 9:30 on Tuesday in the new comedy lineup; "Tour of Duty" will move from Thursday at 8 to Saturday at 9 to make room for "48 Hours"; and "Magnum, P.I." will move from 9 back to 8 Wednesdays.

NBC Wrestles With Prime-Time Reality

By Robert Hilburn
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service
INDIANAPOLIS — George Bush and Dan Rather are no longer the only ones embroiled in a controversy about television ambushes. An even bigger American hero, Hulk Hogan (6 feet, 8 inches; 302 pounds) walked into what looked like a setup here Friday night in the first wrestling match on prime-time network television since Eisenhower was in the White House (1955). Defending his heavyweight title in a bout staged by NBC as a surprise sweeps week entry, Hogan appeared to have the best of his massive foe, Andre the Giant (7 feet, 4 inches, 500 pounds).

The Hulkster, as Hogan is known to the millions of fans who have made wrestling a cable-TV sensation in the '80s, had Andre on the mat in the center of the stage (pardon, ring) long enough for the necessary three-second victory count. Only no one was there to count. Referee Dave Hebner was across the ring, trying, it appeared, to keep an ally of the giant from interfering with the match. When a frustrated Hogan walked over to talk to the referee, Andre, miraculously recovering from his beating, attacked the champion from behind, knocking him to the floor and leaping on top of him. To the relief of the estimated 18,000 fans at the sold-out Market Square Arena, Hogan clearly lifted his left shoulder after just two seconds. Hebner, however, continued to count to three, making Andre the new champion.

Then, just as the Giant's huge arm was being raised (it is said his fingers are so wide that he can't use a dial telephone), another referee — a look-alike for Hebner — stepped into the ring. "What? Could it be the first referee was a paid stooge who'd been hired by Andre and his dreaded manager, Ted DiBiase (known as the Million Dollar Man)? Yes, the Hulkster and most of the fans concluded, that's exactly what happened. But the heartbroken Hogan had to watch helplessly as Andre handed the championship belt to DiBiase, who had tried unsuccessfully for months to buy the title from the Hulkster. "History in the making," said John Fitz-Gerald, a wrestling columnist from the Calgary (Canada) Sun. Vince McMahon, head of the World Wrestling Federation, promised an immediate investigation. He expects a decision by Saturday on whether they'll overrule the referee's verdict, when the federation plans to announce the details of its next extravaganza: a cable pay-per-view event in Atlantic City next month titled Wrestlingmania IV. Could it be that Hogan will get a chance for revenge against Andre — or even better, the mercenary DiBiase?

Dick Ebersol, former producer of "Saturday Night Live" and co-executive producer of Friday's program, said NBC Entertainment President Brandon Tartikoff asked him to put together a prime-time version of the "Main Event" wrestling feature that has consistently out-rated "Saturday Night Live" in the ratings as an occasional substitute for that late-night comedy series.

Unlike producers who hope their specials evolve into weekly series, Ebersol said that neither he nor McMahon has plans to make "Main Event" a weekly show. "Wrestling is an arena business," Ebersol said backstage after the match. "That's where the money is drawn and too much (prime time) television would weaken the live business."

At present, business is booming in the arenas, according to Mike Weber, director of media relations for the wrestling federation, which stages about 1,000 wrestling nights a year in the United States. About 85 wrestlers are under contract to the federation, he said, and most of them step into the ring as much as 250 to 300 times a year.

Wagner Has Role

NEW YORK (AP) — Lindsay Wagner will play Uli Derickson, the TWA flight attendant whose cool-headedness was credited with saving lives when Flight 847 was hijacked from Athens to Beirut. "The Taking of Flight 847: The Uli Derickson Story" begins production next month in Los Angeles, says NBC, which will show the movie in the spring. Derickson is serving as consultant on the film, says CBS.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AKQ652 ♥6 ♦AJ10 ♣AKJ
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 2 ♣ Pass 2 NT 3 ♦
What action do you take?
 A.—East's overall has given you two bites at the cherry. Since you have already told partner that you have a powerful hand with a long spade suit, now you should seize the opportunity to tell him about your diamond values. Double. Since you are behind the overcaller, this is primarily a penalty double.
Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AKQ652 ♥AJ10 ♦6 ♣AKJ
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 2 ♣ Pass 2 NT 3 ♦

What action do you take?
 A.—Don't tell the same story twice! You have already told partner about your strength and suit, and you can't quite guarantee game in your own hand, especially if partner is short in spades. Pass, and let partner decide whether to bid on or double.
Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AKQJ62 ♥A109 ♦K8 ♣AK
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 2 ♣ Pass 2 NT 3 ♦
A.—Since partner knows about your strength and suit, you should tell him about the balanced nature of your hand and your diamond stopper. Bid three no trump. Regardless of the lead, you rate to make nine tricks. And if no trump doesn't suit partner, he is free to correct.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠72 ♥AKJ73 ♦K95 ♣J42
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♥ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
What do you bid now?
 A.—Don't bid two hearts. Even if you play four-card majors, that action would promise a six-card heart suit in this sequence. Show your balanced hand by rebidding one no trump—after all, you almost have a club stopper.
Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠J42 ♥AKJ73 ♦K95 ♣72
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♥ Pass 1 ♣ Pass

What do you bid now?
 A.—In the previous example, you rebid one no trump because you had no better action. Here, you have three-card support for partner's suit headed by a minor honor, and a ruffing value. Raise to two spades. You don't have to have four-card support for this action.
Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠9 ♥AKJ1042 ♦AKJ6 ♣72
 Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?
 A.—You make a jump shift on one of two types of hand: Where you have support for partner's suit; or where your own suit is self-sufficient. That certainly describes your heart holding, and since your hand is strong enough, jump to two hearts. The fact that you hold a good second suit should not deter you from making the value bid.

Cuban Detainees Get Volunteers' Help In Riot-Postponed Hearings

By SONYA ROSS
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — A paramedic sent to the Atlanta federal penitentiary when Cuban prisoners rioted two months ago has become one of 600 volunteers nationwide trying to make sure that the detainees get a fair deal.

Mike Charles and his fellows are representing Cubans who have no family or money to hire an attorney for their Immigration and Naturalization Service hearings.

Charles first became involved with the detainees when Cuban inmates at the federal prison here staged an 11-day riot in November to protest a plan to ship some of them back to Cuba.

Their situation aroused his sympathy, and he became involved in Project Due Process. At a training session recently at Emory University, he was joined by a teacher, nurse and cab driver, as well as lawyers and law students.

"I want to do this and I'm really interested," said Charles, 32. "This is the ultimate resolution — the government keeping their side of the agreement and the Cubans keeping their side."

"I'm trying to get the perspective that the person benefiting here is the detainee. I get the benefit of addressing the need in me that due process is being served."

The hearings, interrupted by the riots, resumed last week at several prisons around the country.

More are scheduled Monday in Leavenworth, Kan., and Fort Gordon, near Augusta, Ga.

Project Due Process, based in Atlanta, conducted three training sessions last week for people interested in helping detainees. The project is a joint undertaking of the Coalition to Support Cuban Detainees and the National Center of Institutions and Alternatives.

The 50 volunteers were told their job during an immigration hearing is to help the detainee with any language barriers and convince INS officials that the Cuban would be a desirable member of U.S. society.

The Cubans were among the 125,000 who fled their country in the 1980 Mariel boatlift. U.S. authorities detained a small number of them who were criminals or mentally ill, or violated terms of their immigration status by committing crimes here.

In November, Cuba agreed to accept the return of the undesirable refugees. The announcement led to riots in Atlanta and at a federal prison near Oakdale, La. Cuban inmates surrendered after U.S. authorities agreed to postpone deportations until individual cases could be reviewed.

About 3,800 Cubans remain in U.S. prisons although they have served sentences for their crimes. Many of them do not have families, American sponsors or a working command of English.

Two INS officials conduct the oral review hearings after reviewing files of detainees rejected for release. To recommend release, the panel must conclude the detainee is non-violent and unlikely to commit a crime after he is released.

Since last June the INS has approved for release about 1,200 of the Mariel Cubans in federal custody, but only 282 of those actually have been released, U.S. Deputy Attorney General Arnold I. Burns said.

"The problem was people were being approved for release but weren't going anywhere. You've got guys with release papers waiting for half-way house space," said Carla Dudeck, a lawyer who has worked for years on behalf of Cuban detainees. "You don't see very many people actually going home."

Steven Donziger, who coordinates Project Due Process with Ms. Dudeck, agreed.

"Things are still very, very difficult," Donziger said. "What the Cubans are getting is a hearing that doesn't allow them to call a witness, that isn't even recorded, that doesn't allow evidence."

"We're talking about people who don't even know anything about our legal system," Donziger said. "We'll be lucky to have representatives on half the cases nationally."

On Thursday, the U.S. House subcommittee on courts, civil liberties and the administration of justice held hearings in Washington on the detainee riots. Several advocates of Cuban detainees, among them U.S. District Judge Marvin Shoob of Atlanta, said the review hearings were unfair because the Cubans cannot call witnesses or cross-examine government witnesses.

Since the riots, the only change in the review process is the addition of a written appeal the detainee can make to the Justice Department if the INS rejects him for release.

HELP FOR DETAINEES — Mike Charles, an ambulance attendant in Atlanta, has volunteered to help Cuban detainees as a legal representative during their Immigration and Naturalization Service hearings. Charles was one of the paramedics assigned to the Atlanta federal prison when Cubans staged an 11-day siege to protest an agreement in which Cuba would accept "undesirable" refugees who arrived in the United States in 1980. Canadian Study Find Disturbing Trend In Kids' Injuries On ATVs

By ROBERT BYRD
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — Child victims of all-terrain vehicle accidents tend to be between 11 and 15, although some are much younger, according to a new Canadian study on ATVs and orthopedic injuries.

The study, conducted by researchers in the Canadian province of Manitoba, found 375 hospitalizations of patients under 17 from accidents on ATVs, off-road and miniature motorcycles and snowmobiles between April 1979 and August 1986. Twenty-one children died.

Most patients were from 11 to 15 years old, said Dr. J. Alexander Pyper, an orthopedic surgeon with the University of Manitoba's Health Sciences Centre in Winnipeg.

But, he added, "We were very disturbed to note that 12 children of five years or less were involved in these accidents, four as drivers."

The most common cause of accidents was loss of control, Pyper said Sunday, discussing his study at the annual meeting of the American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons.

A total of 233 children suffered fractures and soft tissue injuries. Most of the children with such injuries — 189 — were driving the vehicle in question at the time of the accident.

"A high level of skill is necessary to operate these vehicles," said Pyper, who, with Dr. G. Brian Black of Children's Hospital in Winnipeg, has compiled what they believe to be the first in-depth look at orthopedic injuries from ATV accidents.

"Children often are not strong enough or educated enough to handle these machines," Pyper said. "These are motorized vehicles which are large and operate at high speeds, and they can do as much damage as an automobile." Injuries from such vehicles are increasing at "an alarming rate," Pyper said. ATV-related admissions at the eight hospitals increased from 13 in 1980 to 62 in '85.

The eight hospitals in their study reported 233 children with fractures and soft tissue injuries; 60 fractures involved the growth area within the child's bones. Injuries to the growth plate can cause a slowing or abnormal growth, including shortened limbs and angular deformities.

Of the 233 children suffering orthopedic injuries, 93 were hurt on minibikes or dirt bikes, 72 were hurt on snowmobiles, 59 were hurt on three-wheeled ATVs and nine were hurt on four-wheeled ATVs.

The American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons last fall, in a position statement, called ATVs "a significant public health risk." Federal officials say more than 900 people have been killed in ATV accidents in the United States in the past five years, and nearly 7,000 ATV-related injuries are reported each month.

ATV manufacturers, in an agreement scheduled for final court action later this month, have agreed to cease the sale of three-wheel ATVs in the United States and provide free safety training for four-wheeler buyers. Critics complained that the industry should have been forced to recall the ATVs already in the hands of customers.

Along with his research, Pyper has collected advertisements for off-road vehicles, including some depicting tiny children astride three-wheelers and others showing kids flying through the air on dirt bikes.

"This kind of thing is ubiquitous," he said. "And no one (in these ads) is ever touching the ground."

U.S. Dragging Feet On Reducing Toxic Wastes, Study Authors Say

By GUY DARST
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — While American industry and government have been simply moving toxic waste problems from one place to another, Europe has been effectively reducing the threat at its source, say the authors of a new study.

Europeans are far ahead in reducing and treating toxic chemicals because they have been "reconceiving the hazardous waste challenge as one of chemical engineering rather than one of dirt moving," say Bruce W. Piasecki and Gary A. Davis.

The wastes in question are not ordinary garbage, but the poisonous chemicals and metals produced by industry.

Though European waste handling approaches differ, they all feature greater government involvement in regulating industrial processes, Davis and Piasecki say in a new book: "America's Future in Toxic Waste Management: Lessons from Europe."

The authors were in Washington last week holding briefings for congressional staffs on their conclusions, which were distilled from four years of study.

They say that because of a scarcity of land and high dependence on groundwater for drinking, European countries were skeptical of landfills far earlier than U.S. authorities.

It was not until 1984 that Congress moved to restrict landfill waste disposal in the United States. Those restrictions still are being put into place by the Environmental Protection Agency.

Piasecki and Davis contrast this slow-moving approach to steps taken by Europeans.

The West German state of Hesse, for example, recently forced a chemical plant discharging hydrochloric acid into the Main River to institute an acid recovery process.

The authors devoted particular attention to contrasting approaches used in West Germany. In Hesse and sister state Bavaria, government-owned or joint government-industry companies have a legal monopoly on the handling of hazardous waste.

In comparison, companies in North Rhine-Westphalia are under no obligation to use the waste management company established by the regional environmental protection organization.

As a result, a North Rhine-Westphalia hazardous waste incinerator has been a "near failure" that needs heavy subsidies to keep going, the authors say.

Sweden and Finland are following Denmark with government companies to handle hazardous waste, the book says. A French government agency, meanwhile, makes grants to private waste companies.

Public entities have taken large ownership positions in waste handling facilities in Austria and the Netherlands.

For the United States, the book advocates creation of "waste public utilities" on the model of electric and gas utilities, with monopoly territories and rates that guarantee a reasonable return on investment. Tightening landfill regulations will "create a market for alternatives," the authors note.

Arizona is building a state-sponsored, privately operated plant, but without the guaranteed monopoly that a public utility has, they say.

Other recommendations include greater use of mobile treatment facilities, including mobile incinerators, without the need for a new permit at each site. "This is the wave of the future," Davis said.

The EPA spends only about $1 million a year on programs to reduce the generation of industrial waste, while France and the Netherlands have made "source reduction" a key part of economic policy, the authors report.

Despite considerable advantages, however, the European systems are far from fool-proof, the authors say. West German officials report, for example, the existence of "a lucrative waste traffic to East Germany and other countries."

Davis is a research associate at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville and Piasecki is a professor at Clark University, Potsdam, N.Y. Their work was helped by grants from the German Marshall Fund, the Joyce Foundation of Chicago, the Energy Department, the congressional Office of Technology Assessment and the International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis in Vienna.

'Death Squad' Killings Are Blamed On Soldiers

By ANNIE CABRERA
Associated Press Writer

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP)—A church leader blamed the army for the execution-style killings of three peasants and said he fears death squads are again becoming commonplace in El Salvador.

The peasants' bodies were found Feb. 1 at a spot known as "Devil's Gate" in the mountains seven miles south of San Salvador. A week earlier, 10 other bodies were found at the same site.

All three victims had their thumbs tied behind their backs, were blindfolded, showed signs of torture and had been shot, police said.

"We are returning to the period when 40 bodies would appear every day along the highways with the same characteristics as today and I believe it is important that we raise the alarm and make an effort to prevent this from developing further," Monsignor Gregorio Rosa Chavez, the Roman Catholic auxiliary bishop of San Salvador, said Sunday.

"We are returning to the climate in which Monsignor Romero lived," Rosa Chavez said in a homily at the Metropolitan Cathedral.

He was referring to Archbishop Oscar Romero, a critic of human rights abuses by both the military and leftist guerrillas, who was shot to death on March 24, 1980, while saying Mass at a chapel.

Human rights groups, including the Catholic church's Legal Aid Society, estimate that more than 65,000 people have been killed since the war began in October 1979. They say most of the victims were civilians slain in the early years of the conflict by rightist death squads that killed people suspected of cooperating with the guerrillas.

The slayings decreased after Jose Napoleon Duarte, a centrist Christian Democrat, was elected president in 1984 and vowed to act against the death squads.

An investigation by the Legal Aid Society found that the three slain peasants were arrested Jan. 31, by soldiers at San Jose Guayabal, 15 miles north of the capital, Rosa Chavez said.

"According to our information, those who carried out the arrests were men dressed in civilian clothes and troops in uniform, members of the 1st Infantry Brigade's deep penetration patrols," he added.

The three victims were identified as Jose Luis Cornejo, 27, Manuel Santamaria, 25, and Javier Santamaria, 12.

A witness, who asked not to be identified for fear of reprisals, said in an interview the peasants were in a small group of people returning home from a local fair.

"They stopped us and asked for our identification cards, but they did not identify themselves as government authorities, and it appeared they were comparing our names with those on a list they had," the witness said.

"They loaded us onto a jeep, but when the children started screaming, they decided to let them get off, and only took away the three. They told us to go away and keep silent, because nothing was going to happen to them," the witness added.

Maria Julia Hernandez, director of the Legal Aid Society, said in an interview that the people of San Jose Guayabal "are constantly harassed by this brigade, which accuses them of cooperating with the guerrillas."

The witness said the armed forces had a list of 35 people to be captured, including entire families from the hamlet where the three peasants lived, and blamed a former guerrilla for providing the names.

Speaking with reporters after the homily, Rosa Chavez said the Legal Aid office has information that "a guerrilla deserter was accompanying the soldiers to point out people who live in this zone of conflict."

Carlucci Pushes W. Germans To Upgrade Nuclear Arsenal

WASHINGTON (AP)—Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci, just back from a high-level NATO conference in Europe, today said Europeans understand the need to modernize nuclear arsenals even as a new U.S.-Soviet treaty calls for the elimination of intermediate-range weapons.

"Some of the modernization of nuclear artillery is already going ahead," Carlucci said. "...the modernization program in no way circumvents the treaty."

Speaking on NBC-TV's "Today" show, Carlucci said the Europeans "understand that we all have to do more."

"They, like we, have budget problems, but NATO is not an area where we can shortchange our military establishment even if it means taking down programs elsewhere."

Carlucci and top U.S. lawmakers at the NATO conference in Munich had chided West German officials who oppose or have reservations about upgrading short-range nuclear arsenals.

Carlucci reminded the gathering Sunday that the alliance agreed in 1983 to modernize its short-range nuclear forces. He also stressed his opposition to any moves to eliminate all nuclear weapons from Europe.

"Our task is to carry out the agreed program to modernize these systems and to increase their survivability," Carlucci said near the end of the two-day annual meeting of Western military experts and politicians.

The alliance "cannot neglect the nuclear systems deployed in Europe" now that the United States and Soviet Union are scrapping their land-based intermediate-range nuclear missiles worldwide, he added.

If that were done, "we would have to look seriously at whether we keep" U.S. troops in Europe since the short-range nuclear weapons would not be there to back them up, Carlucci said.

Chancellor Helmut Kohl and other West German politicians have expressed fear that, because of the intermediate-range missile accord signed in December, their country is exposed to a greater threat from Warsaw Pact short-range missiles based in East Germany and Czechoslovakia.

Without intermediate-range missiles, many West Germans reason, Soviet territory would not be threatened in the event of a nuclear battle in Europe. Short-range missiles have a maximum reach of 300 miles.

Kohl's center-right coalition waged a bitter uphill battle to deploy the intermediate-range missiles, and opposition leader Hans-Jochen Vogel says he is against modernizing short-range nuclear weapons.

The chancellor has urged NATO to hasten negotiations with the Warsaw Pact on reducing short-range arsenals. He says any modernization of NATO short-range nuclear forces should be linked with a negotiated reduction of the Soviet bloc's superiority in conventional forces.

Carlucci said he does not favor giving a higher priority to negotiations on short-range nuclear weapons systems. If such negotiations were "done out of sequence," NATO troops in Europe could be left unprotected, he said.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization has made negotiations on reducing conventional forces and long-range nuclear weapons its top disarmament priorities.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., also urged Sunday that NATO go ahead with its modernization plans for short-range forces.

"I would certainly support whatever funding is necessary in the American budget cycle this spring to move ahead" with it, he said.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., told the gathering that modernizing "battlefield and theater nuclear forces is a necessity," but "we must not give the impression that a nuclear fix is the answer to all of NATO's deterrent woes."

Nunn, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said NATO's conventional forces need "revolutionary improvements" to reduce the possibility that nuclear weapons would be used in times of war.

He said the allies should improve ammunition stockpiles and increase the number of shelters for additional U.S. aircraft that would be sent to Europe in the event of war.

Carlucci told the conference that a new Pentagon-developed "competitive strategy" would "guide our arms acquisition so as to rely on our strengths and take advantage of Soviet weaknesses."

Barre Running In France

LYON, France (AP)—Former Premier Raymond Barre, who in recent days has slipped from his position as the leading conservative candidate, today officially announced he will run in the April 24 presidential election.

Barre's announcement before a group of journalists left the Socialists as the only major political party without a declared candidate. They are waiting for President Francois Mitterrand to reveal his intentions about a second seven-year term.

Conservative Premier Jacques Chirac declared his candidacy three weeks ago and has since overtaken Barre in some public opinion polls.

Opinion surveys had long shown Barre, 63, as the man to beat on the right side of the French political spectrum.

"It is time to make a new beginning," said Barre, a deputy in Parliament from Lyon. "Unemployment continues to strike. Our economy does not create any more jobs. It is a fact: During the presidency that is ending, France has regressed compared with its competitors."

If no candidate wins a majority in the April 24 balloting, the top two vote getters face off in a second two weeks later.

The Socialists, because they will field only one candidate, are assured of winning the most votes in the first round. The major question is which of the conservative candidates will come in second for the runoff.

All current polls indicate Mitterrand would defeat Chirac or Barre in the runoff, but show that Barre would have the best chance against the president.

The latest surveys show Mitterrand winning the first round with scores ranging from 38 percent to 41.5 percent. Chirac comes second with 21.5 percent to 22 percent, and Barre with 19 percent to 19.5 percent.

Barre, who never adhered to a political party, became premier without having held elective office and achieved wide popularity by remaining above the fray. He began running for president almost from the moment President Valery Giscard d'Estaing was defeated in 1981 and the Socialists swept into power behind Mitterrand.

Eviction Blocked

WESTBURY, N.Y. (AP)—Lawyers for the wife of a Ghanaian diplomat who was recalled to his homeland and imprisoned have temporarily blocked her government's attempts to evict her from a house it owns.

Efua Cabiri says she wants the case to come to trial here so Ghana will be forced to produce her husband, Bowol Cabiri, whom she claims was wrongfully arrested and barred from leaving his homeland by the Ghanaian government.

"If I do not fight them in this country, particularly in this country, I will not fight them anywhere," Mrs. Cabiri said. "I have my best chance in the (United States). All I want is my husband. Nothing more, nothing less."

The Ghanaian government issued Mrs. Cabiri an eviction notice in October.

Last month, Nassau County District Judge Sandra J. Feuerstein ruled that since Cabiri was no longer Ghana's commercial counselor in the United States, his family had no right to the Westbury home they have lived in since 1983.

However, attorneys for Mrs. Cabiri filed a notice of appeal Friday in Nassau County District Court, delaying eviction proceedings until additional arguments can be heard Feb. 16.

Cabiri, 39, was summoned to Accra, his nation's capital, in July 1986 for a week-long meeting. The day he arrived, he was arrested and jailed without being charged and stripped of his title, Mrs. Cabiri told The New York Times.

He was released from prison in June 1987 but his passport was confiscated and he was barred from leaving the country, said Mrs. Cabiri, 36. She said she was told only that he had been retired from the foreign service.

A lawyer for Mrs. Cabiri, Russell Statman, believes she should be allowed to stay in the house until her husband returns to New York.

Officials at the Ghanaian embassy in Washington have refused to comment on Cabiri's arrest or detention.

Since he was freed, Cabiri has written his wife that his arrest resulted from an investigation into a plot to overthrow Ghana's military government.

Until now, Mrs. Cabiri said fear had kept her silent.

BEAUFORT COUNTY HOSPITAL
30th Anniversary

Looking Back - And Ahead

In 1958 Beaufort County Hospital opened as a state-of-the-art medical facility, offering the finest in equipment, staff, and services. But in all the areas of human endeavor, nowhere have people seen changes of the magnitude like those that have rocked the area of healthcare. These changes — a broadening of general medical knowledge, advances in medical technology, increasing complexity in the business world of healthcare — created new realities and challenges to which BCH had to respond in order to maintain its role as a progressive provider of medical services. Fortunately, all along the way, the Board of Trustees, the medical staff, key community leaders, and Beaufort County citizens at large worked to keep the hospital at the leading edge of healthcare. Over the years, they strengthened BCH's viability and longevity by fostering expansion, renovation, physician recruitment, progressive management, and equipment acquisition. Even now, as this thirtieth year begins, we find ourselves in the midst of an extensive renovation project that will enable us to deliver services in a more efficient and effective manner.

Certainly the most dramatic and important change in our industry has occurred in the area of medicine itself. To compare our knowledge today with that of 1958 would be like comparing the space shuttle with a Wright brothers' plane. In 1958, for example, Polio was acrippler and tuberculosis still a major killer. Today, of course, both diseases have been for the most part eliminated with the development of vaccinations.

With increasing medical knowledge, came increasing specialization in practice. The body of knowledge with which doctors were expected to practice had grown so vast that they began to specialize, concentrating their study upon a single disease, organ, therapy, or patient group. This development created new pressures for BCH in the area of physician recruitment, but by maintaining a modern facility, Beaufort County has been able to attract an unusually broad spectrum of specialties.

As the study and science of medicine progressed, so did the sophistication of medical technology. Though BCH in 1958 was a state-of-the-art facility for its day, no one had yet heard of ultrasound units, CAT scanners, surgical lasers, and medical computer systems — all equipment in place now at the hospital. And improved technology brought breakthroughs on every level of medical practice. Any of the five BCH nurses that remain from the original 1958 staff can tell stories from days when they reused needles so often that the points had to be regularly resharpened; when they sterilized instruments by boiling them for a few minutes in open pans; sterilized transfusion tubing with boiling water; and recycled surgeons' gloves for reuse. No longer, of course. The present is the Age of Sterile Disposables — disposable needles and syringes, disposable surgical linens, disposable tubing and catheters and disposable gloves.

Since '58 profound changes have also swept through the financial world of healthcare. The implementation of the Medicare/Medicaid programs in the 1960's made healthcare more accessible to elderly and low-income patients, but the law plunged doctors and hospitals into a new era of restrictive reimbursement procedures and requirements. In 1983 the implementation of DRGs (Diagnostic Related Groups) altered the government payment process even further by paying a fixed fee for a particular diagnosis, in spite of individual differences in treatment and recovery. In the meantime, the rising cost of medical care had driven most people to acquire health insurance, and private insurance carriers developed their own increasingly complex reimbursement policies.

Hospitals all over the country were caught by a powerful economic crunch. As medical costs rose over the years, so did hospitals' cost of doing business. Labor costs soared. High-technology equipment grew more expensive. Hospitals were required to shoulder an increasing burden of indigent care. Other expenditures such as liability insurance premiums rose.

In response to an increasingly complex and sophisticated world of medicine and business, the BCH Board of Trustees in 1978 contracted with the not-for-profit group Carolina Health and Hospital Services (now called SunHealth) to provide a number of important management services. These include assistance in administrative and financial management, consultation in the areas of nursing, public relations and physician recruitment, and access to standardized systems and group purchasing. Today, all the economic indicators that drive the hospital show that BCH is on solid footing and will strive to meet any challenges the future may bring.

What a long way we've come since 1958. The little hospital that first opened in 1958 is an entirely different facility now, for BCH has grown up with the times. So much has changed that it is difficult to see what part of the old remains in the new. Yet when we considered our 30th birthday celebration and searched for the thread of continuity running through all those years, we found this theme: "Committed to Caring." For after it all — after the new faces, the new wings, the new instruments and computers — this one thing remains unchanged. The commitment to the community, the commitment to caring.

Happy Birthday, BCH. Here's to the next 30 years! May they be as meaningful and prosperous as the first 30.

Hospital Renovations: What's Behind Us, What's Ahead

In May 1986, Beaufort County citizens passed the bond referendum that approved the funding for Beaufort County Hospital's renovation. During the months that followed the hospital's Board of Trustees, the medical staff, the nursing staff and other key personnel participated with the project architects, McCulloch-England-Associates, in an intensive planning program. This interactive program resulted in plans that will touch nearly every department in the hospital, with primary changes in Outpatient Surgery, the Emergency Department, Physical Therapy, OB-Gyn, Pharmacy, Operating Room, and Materials Management.

In early October '87 construction on Phase I of the project began. This stage includes the construction of a Central Stores building and the upfitting of the fourth floor shelled-in area. Both the Materials Management and Housekeeping departments will move into the new 3500 square foot Central Stores building when it is completed.

Several departments will be relocated in the new fourth floor area, including Pharmacy, Physical Therapy, Patient and Family Services, and Cardiopulmonary Services. This will be an especially important change for Physical Therapy, for the move will enable the department to both consolidate and increase the space it currently has scattered throughout the hospital. The new area will also include an expanded Physical Therapy Gym and Whirlpool room.

4th floor construction includes a new gym area for the physical therapy department.

The new fourth floor area will incorporate a centralized reception center to insure easy patient access to departments and information. Each of the separate departments will then provide individual waiting areas.

After completion of Phase I in late spring, Phase II of the renovation will begin. Phase II will include the expansion of the Emergency Room and development of an entire Outpatient Surgery Department. This stage will involve more extensive work than Phase I, for some demolition must precede the upfitting. Walls will be removed and piping rerouted.

The Emergency Department on the first floor will be expanded into the areas now occupied by Materials Management and Pharmacy. This will more than double the ER space. There will be a new patient entrance, a new waiting area, a larger canopied loading dock for ambulances, a new reception center and nurses station. The plans also call for an increase in the number of examination rooms and treatment bays.

The new Outpatient Surgery Department will occupy the entire wing of Second Main. Alterations will include the construction of a central reception area, a family waiting room, a nurses station, and ten bays for preoperative preparation and postoperative recovery.

There are other plans in the works for BCH's renovation, including changes for the Operating Room and OB-Gyn. It is unlikely, however, that these plans will be implemented by the end of the next Fiscal year in October 1988. We'll keep you posted on renovation developments and progress in future issues of HEAL-THLINES.

The Origins Of Hospital, The P

In 1948 the Hill-Burton Act suddenly turned the seemingly crazy fantasy of a new hospital in rural Beaufort County into a reasonable, realistic goal. This Act provided funding for a new hospital as follows: the federal government would furnish 50 percent, the state 20.8 percent, and Beaufort County 29.2 percent of costs.

Though a loud clamor for a new hospital began in 1948, it was not until 1954 that the County Commissioners agreed to let the people of Beaufort County vote to determine whether they wanted to finance a hospital with a bond. Almost immediately, civic clubs, doctors, nurses, the Washington Chamber of Commerce, and many other groups announced their support for the proposed hospital. A Steering Committee to promote the project was formed with Ashley Futrell as chairman. In the month before the referendum the Committee gave 31 talks on the importance of the new hospital.

Then, on June 4, 1955, Beaufort County citizens voted on the bond issue for the hospital. They approved the hospital by a count of 2,494 to 732. At last, the people of Beaufort County and Washington had won a hospital for themselves and for their children, and they won, too, something more — a better life. For along with modern healthcare, they won an assurance that more doctors would come to the area, that more businesses would be attracted to the area, and that a host of other related phenomena would bring improvements.

Beaufort County Hospital, then, exists only because the people of Beaufort County and Washington wanted it, and because they were willing to fight for it. In a very real sense it was and remains the People's Hospital. As Ashley Futrell, long-time champion of the hospital, wrote many years later, "I believe so very deeply this hospital belongs to the people of Beaufort County. This hospital has a tremendous place in the community. It is invaluable to us. We need to realize that all the time."

Some of Our Accomplishments in 1987 . . .

Beaufort County Hospital's 1986-87 Fiscal Year has been a busy and productive one. In order to acquaint the community with our ever-expanding and always-improving services and facilities at BCH, we provide below a short list of some of our many accomplishments.

Keep in mind, however, that many achievements of the past year do not take the form of an obvious, readily identified change such as a new machine or expanded service. Many people and departments have served the hospital and community in an exemplary manner merely by continuing their efforts to provide the best in healthcare, and these efforts are no less important successes. It is unfortunate that we cannot here include all the achievements of our conscientious personnel. We recognize their continuing commitment to caring and excellence.
