Dole, Bush Battle To The Wire In N.H.; Dukakis Still Leading

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Republicans Bob Dole and George Bush were locked in what looked to be a dead-even race and Democratic leader Michael Dukakis ignored sniping from his rivals as the presidential candidates began a last day of work today before New Hampshire's critical primary.

A frenetic final search for votes marked the eve of the nation's first primary, one that could well be the last stop of the 1988 campaign for some of the hopefuls.

Fresh polls showed Dole and Bush in a virtual tie, the vice president's once substantial lead vanished into New Hampshire's frigid air and the trend moving in the Kansas senator's direction. On the Democratic side, Dukakis remained far and away the leader, with Richard Gephardt and Paul Simon still dueling for second.

Simon began television commercials attacking Dukakis, the governor of next-door Massachusetts, as a bureaucrat. Gephardt's new ads lashed at Dukakis too, calling him "one of the biggest tax-raisers in Massachusetts history."

Dukakis ignored the criticism, devoting much of Sunday to stating his views on foreign policy issues including Central America and nuclear arms control. He emphasized his opposition to funding for the Nicaraguan Contras, but said he would use military force, if necessary, to thwart a military attack on a Central American ally.

Bush cast himself as President Reagan's strong loyalist in a debate with his five rivals Sunday night, while Pat Robertson offered the startling assertion that the Soviet Union secretly has placed nuclear missiles in Cuba — "nukes pointing at the United States," he said.

A White House official promptly disputed Robertson's claim, and a Robertson aide said after the debate that the candidate had meant missile-delivery systems, not necessarily warheads.

Army Questions Soldiers In West Bank Burial Involving Four Arabs

By KARIN LAUB
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — The army today said it was investigating allegations that about 20 Israeli soldiers used a bulldozer to bury alive four Arabs after anti-Israeli protests earlier this month in the occupied West Bank.

The army said in a statement that two soldiers were detained and questioned Sunday and that other soldiers would be taken into custody soon.

Israeli newspapers quoted villagers where the incident allegedly occurred as saying the four Arabs were unconscious when relatives rescued them after several minutes. Three were treated at a West Bank hospital and released the same day, while the fourth was hospitalized for eight days, the reports said.

Relatives charged in a complaint filed with the army that the 20 soldiers grabbed the four Arabs after a violent demonstration in the West Bank village of Kfar Salem on Feb. 5, beat them, forced them to lie on the ground and then poured sand over them with a bulldozer.

The army communique today said Maj. Gen. Amram Mitzna, West Bank commander, ordered military police to investigate the actions of soldiers in the village.

"This investigation is receiving the highest priority. So far two soldiers have been detained and other detentions are expected in the near future," said the communique. Under Israel's system, charges are not filed until probes are completed, but suspects may be placed in custody pending the outcome.

Mitzna was quoted by the army radio as saying a sergeant-major from the military government established by Israel in the West Bank and two or three other soldiers were involved and would be brought to trial.

Robertson's Claim Regarding Missiles Is Disputed By Bush

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pat Robertson repeated his claim today that the Soviets have nuclear missiles in Cuba and Vice President George Bush said it was an outrageous charge "designed to scare the American people."

"I'm confident this is not true," Bush said in an interview on a Manchester radio station today.

Robertson first made the startling allegation Sunday in a Republican presidential candidates' debate in Goffstown, N.H. A top Robertson aide later qualified the claim, saying the former television evangelist meant missile delivery systems, not warheads themselves.

But this morning at a candidate's forum sponsored by the Dover, N.H., Chamber of Commerce, Robertson said, "the least we can do in this is get those nuclear weapons out of Cuba," though he conceded he had "no first-hand evidence of this."

Bush said he could not confirm or deny the claim, but said, "I think you'll see it knocked down hard in the next few days."

"This is a very serious allegation," he said. "You keep hearing these outrageous charges from people, which are designed to scare the American people."

In California, a White House official traveling with President

Reagan said: "There's no indication of any nuclear missiles or weapons in Cuba." The official spoke only on condition of anonymity.

The Soviet Union did place missiles in Cuba in 1962, but agreed to remove them after a tense showdown between Nikita Khrushchev and Presi-

Nazi Documents Reported Missing

By NICK STAUDINGER
Associated Press Writer

BERLIN (AP) — Prosecutors said today that tens of thousands of Nazi-era records were stolen from the U.S.-run Berlin Document Center, but denied reports they were used to blackmail former Nazis.

Volker Kaehne, spokesman for the West Berlin Justice Department, said investigators suspect the deputy director of the Nazi archives was involved in the thefts. He refused to identify him beyond saying the man was a West German.

"There is the suspicion that an undetermined number of original documents believed to number in the tens of thousands have been removed from the document center," Kaehne said in a statement.

"Our investigation so far indicates that the documents were stolen for profit. There is no evidence to indicate suggestions that they were used for blackmail."

On Sunday, the Berlin Morgenpost newspaper said 80,000 files were missing and that former Nazis paid millions to keep their pasts secret and the documents from being made public.

It said many documents contained "secret information about leading figures in the Third Reich." It did not elaborate, nor cite sources for its report.

Kaehne said prosecutors believe the missing documents may have been sold to dealers and collectors around the world for considerable sums.

"There is evidence that some of these documents were sold for sums of up to 5,000 marks ($2,900 apiece)," he said in his statement.

Kaehne said several West German dealers are targets of the investigation.

He said authorities recovered about 1,500 documents, including a letter from Hitler's doctor and correspondence from high-ranking Nazi leaders.

He did not say where the docu-

Lawyers For Noriega Will Seek Indictment Dismissal

MIAMI (AP) — Gen. Manuel Noriega's American lawyers, maintaining U.S. drug trafficking charges against the Panamanian military leader are politically motivated, said they would seek a dismissal of the indictment this week.

Lawyer Raymond Takiff said Sunday that the defense team would meet Tuesday with prosecutors but refused to say why.

He also said he would seek access to the minutes of the Miami grand jury that indicted Noriega, Panama's military leader and de facto ruler.

"General Noriega told us that he has always been a friend of the United States and is still a friend of the United States," Takiff said Sunday after arriving at Miami International Airport.

He had been consulting with Noriega about the federal indictments handed up earlier this month in Tampa and Miami. Takiff shrugged off a key witness' testimony against Noriega.

Jose Blandon, the former Panamanian consul general in New York, "wants to be the next president of Panama," Takiff said.

Blandon, who was fired in January, testified before the Miami federal grand jury and before a U.S. congressional subcommittee about Noriega's alleged involvement in cocaine trafficking.

He also said the CIA had provided Noriega with confidential information on Sens. Edward Kennedy and Jesse Helms, which the CIA denied.

The defense team has "material which portrays the long and intricate involvement of Jose Blandon ... with the Communist Party in both Panama and Puerto Rico," Takiff claimed.

Noriega's lawyers also claimed their client has information that could influence the U.S. presidential election.

"We were given access by General Noriega to files which contain political dynamite — files which could affect the upcoming presidential election in the United States and the positions of other nations," said Takiff, who refused to elaborate.

"Right now, we're just going to sit tight with them (the files). If we have to use them, we'll use them," vowed defense lawyer Frank Rubino.

Theft Charges

Two men were arrested on theft charges by Greenville police Saturday.

Officer L.C. Overby said Charles Randall Harris, 19, of Route 1, Greenville, was charged with larceny in connection with the theft of two cassette tapes from the K-Mart store at Greenville Square Shopping Center about 5:57 p.m.

Officer D.C. Johnson said Jeffrey Warren Baker, 27, of Greenville, was charged with shoplifting in connection with the theft of liquor from the Pitt County ABC Store on Arlington Boulevard in an incident reported at 8:43 p.m.

Duke Award

The Duke Endowment has awarded more than $1 million dollars in operating grants to 118 hospitals and 21 child-care institutions in North Carolina, including $31,105 to Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

In addition, Martin General Hospital in Williamston will receive $2,698 and Robersonville Community Hospital will receive $149. The Endowment's trustees approved the grants at their February meeting.

The money helps hospitals cover costs of caring for the poor, and provides $711,154 to child-care institutions.

James Buchanan Duke established the Endowment in 1924, giving $1 per day to non-profit hospitals in North and South Carolina for each day of free care given to charity patients.

Hospitals reporting to the Endowment indicated the percentages of free days of care given in 1987 rose slightly, up 19.7 percent.

Weekend Thefts Probed By Police

Investigators said 11 thefts, including a 1982 model car taken from the 400 block of Willow Street, were reported to Greenville police over the weekend.

Officer J.A. Felton said the vehicle, later recovered, was reported taken about 2 a.m. Sunday, while Officer J.W. Corbett said a gold chain valued at $200 was taken from 59 Edgewood Trailer Park in an incident reported at 4:29 p.m. Saturday.

Officer M.S. Jordan said a bottle of wine was taken from the Fresh Way Food Store on Airport Road in an incident reported at 10:37 p.m. Saturday and said a purse was grabbed from the arm of a woman near the intersection of Fifth and Ford streets in an incident reported at 11:41 p.m.

Officer J.A. Felton said a purse containing $15 in cash was taken from a vehicle parked in a lot at the intersection of Fourth and Cotanche streets in an incident reported at 1:41 a.m. Sunday, while Officer L.R. Kepler said a purse was taken from the A&P Food Store at Greenville Square Shopping Center in an incident reported at 12:33 p.m. and a shotgun and binoculars taken from 301 Club Pines Drive in an incident reported at 1 p.m.

Officer W.T. McCarter said a personal computer valued at $2,000, a telephone answering machine and a television set, were taken from E.B. Aycock Junior High School in a break-in reported at 3:08 p.m. and a license plate was taken from a vehicle parked at Pitt County Memorial Hospital in an incident reported at 8:05 p.m., while Officer L.C. Overby said a wallet containing $200 in cash was taken from a man's pocket between 8 p.m. and 11 p.m. Saturday according to a report filed about 5:50 p.m.

According to Officer M.A. Jordan, a pair of jeans, a sweater and suitcase were taken from 610A Hudson St. in a break-in on Friday and reported to police at 6:19 p.m. Sunday.

Farm Scene

BY LEROY JAMES
Pitt Extension Chairman

Don't look now, but it's beginning to appear the long-awaited recovery in agriculture may be peaking around the corner. That is not to say the farm sector's troubles are over. Too much debt remains and prices continue to be too low to warrant such an assessment. But, for the first time in four or five years, there is enough good news to put a new strain of "cautious optimism" back into the farm community.

Cotton prices have held up reasonably well even though it now looks like producers harvested nearly 15 million bales of unusually high quality cotton in 1987.

The soybean carry over, which reached a record 635 million bushels in 1986, has been slashed almost to pipeline levels because of heavy meal demand in the United States and unexpected purchases by the Soviet Union.

Wheat futures have shot up in recent trading because of rumors of potential new sales of 2-to-3 million metric tons to the Soviets and India. Corn has also rallied on indications growers are more willing to hold their crop in the new year than futures traders had anticipated.

The positive developments of recent weeks are creating a certain amount of nervousness among farmers. While the improved outlook for cotton and rice has been apparent since last fall, it has only recently begun to show up for grains and soybeans.

The wheat situation, for instance, has turned around 180 degrees in recent weeks, partly because of crop adversities among the United States' major competitors.

This is the first significant purchase of your soybeans by the Soviets since the situation in Afghanistan developed and the grain embargo began in 1980.

Soybean analysts are predicting that November futures could climb to $6.50 per bushel or higher over the next few weeks, as the market attempts to buy more acreage with higher prices.

A recent flurry of soybean oil sales under the export bonus program has given a boost to the nearby contracts, according to market observers.

Preliminary Plats Top P&Z Agenda

Five preliminary plats, including the city's first Planned Unit Development, will be considered by the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at its regular monthly meeting at City Hall.

Considered will be Greenville's first PUD preliminary plat, Westpointe, located off Stantonsburg Road approximately two miles from Pitt Memorial Hospital.

A PUD is a special use zoning district, planned and developed as an integral unit, and constructed according to pre-approved comprehensive and detailed plans.

The plat involves 36 residential and medical office lots and tracts and 7,065 lineal feet of streets.

The other four preliminary plats to be considered by the commission include:

•The preliminary plat of Tucker Commercial and Industrial Park, located east of Highway 11, north of state road 1708, and involving five commercial/office and institutional lots, and 1700 lineal feet of street on a 35.50 acre tract.

•The preliminary plat of Clara Bland Mobile Home Park Number 2, located south of the Pitt County Fairgrounds off state road 1523, and involving 14 mobile home lots on a 6.4 acre tract.

•The preliminary plat of Bedford Place Cluster Homes, Section III, located on Kineton Circle, east of the Evans Street extension, and involving 90 single-family lots and 4,600 lineal feet of streets on a 33.6 acre tract.

The preliminary plat of Shenandoah, section 2, located east of Tobacco Road, west of Rollinwood Cluster Homes, and involving 112 multi-family units, 16 duplex lots and 240 lineal feet of street on a 10.3 acre tract.

The commission will also consider the extension of the extraterritorial planning and zoning jurisdiction of the city. The tract involved is the Geneva M. Jackson property located on the southwest corner of state road 1709 and state road 1708.

In addition, the commission will consider rezoning the drive-in theater site located north of Pitt Community College, west of Highway 11, and owned by Gladys P. Tice. The request is to rezone the 9.9 acre tract from RA-20 (residential-agricultural) to CH (highway-commercial).

In other matters Tuesday night, the commission will consider a request by the East Group, Inc. to amend the zoning ordinance to increase the maximum height limit in the MD-6 medical zoning district from 35 to 80 feet; consider the extension of the extraterritorial planning and zoning jurisdiction south of state road 1708 and east of state road 1725 to Highway 43; discuss a proposed revision to the subdivision ordinance, and discuss progress of the Airport Land Use Study Committee.

Views On Dental Health

Family & General Dentistry

HIGH SPOTS

High spots on fillings, crowns, fixed bridges, or partial dentures may produce hypersensitivity in teeth because of excessive pressure. The concentration of pressure concentrated on these high spots can be enormous, since the muscles used in biting and grinding can produce a force of several hundred pounds!

The teeth may become sore and tender when the jaws are tightly closed or when a person eats, especially if the teeth are subject to temperature changes, even of only a few degrees.

Fortunately, this type of pain usually subsides immediately after the excessive pressure is released.

Though the dentist makes every effort to restore all parts of the teeth so that they closely match the patient's natural teeth in form and function, occasionally there is a high spot. A patient who has recently had restorative work should not be surprised to need adjustments. What is important is that he or she relate any experience of pain or hypersensitivity to the dentist.

NOTE:
We welcome new patients, both children and adults.

Meeting Canceled

The Pitt County Board of Education workshop session scheduled today has been rescheduled for Feb. 22 at 7:30 p.m. in the Pitt County office building, according to Barry Gaskins, public information officer for the schools.

The staff member scheduled to speak to the board is ill, Gaskins reported, so the presentation was postponed. The workshop covers long-range planning for the schools.

However, an Office of Civil Rights representative will still give a presentation to the board Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Pitt County office building, Gaskins said.

St. Matthew

St. Matthew Free Will Baptist Church will hold services today at 7:30 p.m. with Marie Grimes as the speaker. The Last Generation Choir will perform the music.

Patricia Phillips will preach Wednesday, while a board meeting will be held Friday. Elder Charles Warren will preach Saturday. Each event begins at 7:30 p.m.

Eldress Hattie Cobb will preach Sunday at 11 a.m., and Elder David Grimes will preach during the 7:30 p.m. service.

NAACP Branch Holds Banquet

The Pitt County branch of the NAACP celebrated the Emancipation Proclamation this weekend with a banquet and a mass meeting.

The motto for the weekend was "New Horizon," while the theme was "The Struggle: Yesterday, Today & Tomorrow."

D.D. Garrett, president of the local branch, outlined past struggles against slavery and inhuman treatment, segregation and discrimination.

"Today's struggles are more subtle. Those who would keep us in a slave condition sit behind a desk with a 3-piece suit, fine shoes and the very best of shirts," he said.

"Our struggle today is trying to get a black principal in the Pitt County high schools. Our struggle today is trying to get a black person elected to the Pitt County Board of Commissioners. Our struggle today is trying to get justice in the court," Garrett said.

Tomorrow's struggle "is to own the bus, not just to drive the bus," he said. Blacks also should strive to sit on boards of directors, to be superintendents of schools and to be judged by one's character and not one's color, Garrett said.

During the banquet Saturday at the Roxy Theater, Clarence Moore and Dr. Andrew Best were recognized for their continuous support and contribution to the NAACP. The Rev. Claude Odum of Luella Baptist Church of Lewiston and First Baptist Church of Kelford was the speaker for the event.

During the mass meeting Sunday at York Memorial AME Zion Church, the Rev. L.O. Saunders, co-chairman of Religious Affairs of the N.C. Branch NAACP, discussed the heritage of blacks and their contributions to society.

Train Collision

Police said two passengers in a car were injured when the vehicle collided with a CSX Transportation train at the crossing on Brownlee Drive about 11:50 a.m. Saturday.

Investigators, who set damage to the car at $9,000 and damage to the train at $50, identified the driver of the car as Barbara Gunn Moyer of 1713 Rosewood Drive. Ms. Moyer and two other passengers escaped injury, officers said.

The collision tied up traffic on Greenville Boulevard and on Brownlee Drive until investigation of the collision could be completed, police said.

Moye Recognized

Murphy Farms has recognized Pitt County farmer Harry Moye for excellence in swine production.

Moye received the awards during the annual Murphy Farms Producer Appreciation Dinner held recently in Clifton. The event recognized excellence in swine production among Murphy's contract farms across the state.

The Moye farm was named as a Top Farm and awarded a Farm Pride plaque. Moye was also recognized in the 20 Plus Club for averaging at least 20 pigs per sow annually.

Jobs Filled

Job Service Centers operated by the Employment Security Commission of North Carolina placed 103 individuals in Greenville jobs during January.

Statewide totals released last week show that employers listed 16,241 job openings with the agency during January, and the ESC staff filled 10,025 of those openings.

Across the state, the greatest number of placements was made in Charlotte with 353, Winston-Salem with 278, Durham with 258 and Concord with 7. New Bern placed 101 individuals, Wilson, 85 and Rocky Mount, 90.

Greenville employers listed 265 jobs with ESC offices in January, New Bern listed 216, Wilson 168 and Rocky Mount 294.

Charlotte employers led the way with job listings in January, posting 1,346 with ESC offices. Greensboro was second, with 705 listings, and Winston-Salem next with 634.

ESC offices in Greenville placed 10 individuals in jobs paying more than $15,000 per year, New Bern placed 13, Wilson 14 and Rocky Mount 11. Charlotte placed 90 individuals in positions paying more than $15,000 per year.

Since the fiscal year began July 1, 1987, Greenville employers have listed 4,299 job openings, and ESC offices have placed 1,987 individuals, with 182 positions paying more than $15,000 per year.

Competition

Music students from J.H. Rose High School and E.B. Aycock Junior High School recently participated in an audition on scales, solo and selected materials. They competed against other instrumentalists in grades nine through 12 from the eastern region of North Carolina.

Local winners were Taylor Evans and Lyda Coaulter, both of Rose, and Ken Wu of Aycock, 1st violin; Craig Kirkland of Rose and Guy McPherson of Aycock, viola; Scott Thomas of Rose and Brian Marks of Aycock, cello; Rusty Smith of Rose, trumpet; Ed Norris of Rose, French horn, and Anne Thornton of Rose, flute-piccolo.

Lynn Roberson teaches the orchestra students while Mike Fussell is the band director at both schools.

Public Hearing

The North Carolina Pesticide Board will have a public hearing at Pitt Community College Feb. 25 at 7:30 p.m. in room 209 of the Humber Building.

The hearing is in response to a rulemaking petition filed by the Chatham County Board of Commissioners and will consider an amendment to an aerial application of a pesticide policy.

How They Voted

By a vote of 211 for and 219 against, the House rejected legislation (HJ Res 444) to provide an additional $36.2 million in non-lethal and military aid to the American-backed Contra army that since 1981 has been fighting Nicaragua's Marxist government.

The vote may have killed President Reagan's policy to establish the Contra guerillas as a formidable military force in Nicaragua.

The president said keeping the Contras battle-ready would force Nicaragua to adhere to the democratization requirements of the Central American peace plan.

But critics of his policy agreed with Costa Rican President Oscar Arias, the chief architect of the peace process, that rearming the Contras would undercut ongoing efforts to moderate Nicaragua's Marxist state and pacify Central America.

Members voting yes favored additional military and non-lethal aid to the Contras. They were: Howard Coble, R-6, Alex McMillan, R-9, and Cass Ballenger, R-10. Members voting no were: Walter Jones, D-1, Tim Valentine, D-2, Martin Lancaster, D-3, David Price, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, and James Clarke, D-11.

By a vote of 365 for and 21 against, the House passed a bill (HR 3875) expanding the job rights of a category of civil service employees consisting mainly of attorneys, scientists and chaplains.

The bill, which was sent to the Senate, benefits certain "excepted" civil servants who are being fired or subjected to some other punitive action. Estimated to number at least 300,000, these workers are professionals who were allowed to bypass the civil service exam when they were hired.

The bill gives them the same rights of notification and appeals to the Merit Systems Protection Board that apply to civil servants who took the competitive exam.

Supporter Frank Horton, R-N.Y., said it "isn't fair" for this category of workers to be denied the job rights in question.

Opponent Robert Walker, R-Pa., said the better solution is to stop exempting so many federal employees from the civil service exam.

All North Carolina members voted yes in favor of the bill.

By a vote of 97 for and none against, the Senate confirmed the nomination of Ninth Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals Judge Anthony Kennedy as the 104th justice of the Supreme Court. Kennedy is to be sworn in Feb. 18.

All senators voted for confirmation except Joseph Biden, D-Del., who was ill, and presidential candidates Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., and Paul Simon, D-Ill.

By a vote of 51 for and 48 against, the Senate approved President Reagan's request for $36.2 million in military and non-lethal aid to the Contra rebels fighting in to destabilize Nicaragua's Marxist government.

This was only a symbolic victory for the president, because the aid request was permanently rejected a day earlier when the House voted to kill it.

Terry Sanford, D, voted no and Jesse Helms, R, voted yes in favor of the president's Contra aid request.

Abuse Prosecution

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — More and more perpetrators of child sexual abuse appear to be facing prosecution in North Carolina as people recognize the best way to protect children in the future may be to risk upsetting family members now.

Davidson County District Attorney H.W. "Butch" Zimmerman said in the past many cases have been dropped to protect families.

"You're trying to balance your job as a solicitor upholding the law and wanting to protect the child from the trauma of the courtroom," he told the Winston-Salem Journal in a report published Sunday.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Diversity Better

Even if cotton becomes king again in eastern North Carolina, it won't be the perfect solution to every farmer's financial woes.

And it can't be the savior crop for producers who are looking for relief from changing tobacco times. North Carolina likely will never have another staple crop like tobacco was in its hey day — bringing prosperity to nearly everyone who grew, marketed or processed it.

Instead, the state, especially the east, will find their agricultural economies revolving around a diversity of crops and totally dependent on none. It is within this framework that the resurgence of cotton as a cash crop becomes so significant.

Eastern North Carolina has suitable soil and hospitable growing conditions for cotton production. It has eradicated the element which wiped out the crop two decades ago - the boll weevil.

But eastern North Carolina has none of the production tools necessary to grow cotton - and these tools are expensive. A harvester, for example, is needed to get the crop out of the field, and that essential carries a price tag of around $75,000. Cotton gins, which can cost $500,000 each, are essential to process the product once it is picked.

With these types of costs in mind, re-entering the cotton market needs to be a carefully made financial decision for farmers. Most local producers need viable ways to get them out of debt, not further into it. Cotton can feasibly become one of the many alternatives to tobacco in this number one tobacco-producing state. But it should not be, and cannot be expected to completely replace tobacco's prominence.

If North Carolina has learned anything useful from its dependence on tobacco, that lesson should be one of flexibility. If the state's agricultural economy is to remain vigorous in changing times, the state must develop a variety of crops, complete with markets.

Groundhog Faith

Let's hope the groundhog is an honorable creature. The furry, hibernating harbinger of spring predicted an early end to winter weather a few weeks ago. Hopes for warm temperatures surged.

But the north wind doth blow, and it still blows cold. Saturday was the kind of day that prompts head-shaking despair of ever again seeing 32 degrees Fahrenheit. The accuracy and integrity of the groundhog's reputation is at stake.

Maybe his radar is frozen. Maybe he missed his shadow because his clock was slow. Maybe he's still on daylight savings time. Maybe the whole episode was a midwinter night's hallucination, prompted by eating too much popcorn before bed.

It sure looks like he was wrong. But the creature has staked himself out in favor of spring. Maybe his prediction should be given a little credibility ... a little faith ... a second chance. After all, this is a scientific endeavor. It's not like some of those predictions for the economy so-called experts are coming up with.

So before shouting pshaw! to the groundhog, let's give warmth another opportunity to spring. The opinion of a creature who has the good sense to sleep all winter must be respected. Take the high-tech approach to encouraging spring: cross your fingers and hope the groundhog knows.

Public Forum

To the editor:
 The progress of black Americans has occurred through persistence and determination. For those who have accomplished and those who have not accomplished, the current study in February of the achievements of black Americans during Black History Month should be inspiration for everyone — black, white, other minorities — to excel, regardless of circumstances or plight.

The late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. once stated that "the black man and the white man are inextricably bound together — either we will choose to live together in brotherhood or we will all die together." Presidential candidate Jesse Jackson has been quoted as saying that the American society is not a blanket of one fabric, but rather we are a quilt with many different colors, shapes and sizes. It is vital, therefore, we conclude forthrightly that we are bound together as citizens of the human race.

Past accomplishments indicate, for example, that for every Jackie Robinson there was a Branch Rickey, that for every Admiral Perry there was a Matthew Henson, that for every Harriett Tubman there were a Horace Greeley and a John Brown, that for every George Wallace there is a Martin Luther King Jr. and a Robert Kennedy, and that for every Doug Williams there is a Joe Gibbs.

When we as Americans can look beyond the surface of skin color, we should realize that we are a common people in spirit. The same "G's" of God, Glory and Gold" which brought the pilgrims to this land are the opportunities and principles for which we all aspire today. Let us begin to achieve this excellence during February of 1988 and hereafter so that peace, justice, righteousness, truth and love will be the cornerstones of our life on this earth. Let there be peace, and let it start with me.

WITH THE RESULTS FROM THE IOWA CAUCUS TABULATED, THE REAL WORK FOR POLITICIANS AND MEDIA ALIKE BEGINS...FINDING SOMEONE THAT ACTUALLY GIVES A DAMN...

— Garrett Epps —

Robertson Strength No Surprise

'Pat Robertson sometimes seems like a kind of political Rip Van Winkle, who fell asleep 30 years ago and has recently awakened.'

Marion "Pat" Robertson's "surprising" second-place finish in the Iowa caucuses again demonstrates that our press does a bad job of writing about religion and politics.

Robertson has shocked Republican party regulars repeatedly since last fall, in caucuses, precinct meetings, and primaries in Michigan, South Carolina, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii and North Carolina. But the national media have given Robertson significantly less attention than they gave to the three "serious" candidates, Vice President George Bush, Sen. Robert Dole, and Rep. Jack Kemp.

The general attitude of the political "insiders" was summed up by Richard Reeves, who wrote last month that Robertson's campaign was "a joke" and that "the press is inaccurate in treating Robertson as a serious candidate." On caucus night, network anchors badgered Robertson to explain why he talks to God. And reporters sought to portray his victory as a sinister miracle they couldn't have foreseen. Dan Rather christened the Robertson forces "the armies of the night." The Boston Globe wrote that "the 'invisible army' not only exists in Iowa, but it knows how to follow its leader's marching orders."

There's no excuse for this. Robertson's record, and his flair for political organizing, have been on the public record for at least ten years. And the people who fuel his crusade, far from being secretive, have been waiting in parish halls for years, hoping someone would come and talk to them.

Some of the hostility and ridicule directed at Robertson reveals a certain amount of ignorance. Robertson believes that God speaks to him, that God answers prayers, that God can heal the sick, and that God works miracles in the affairs of nations. As a charismatic, he expresses these beliefs in flamboyant and sometimes disturbingly literal fashion, but the beliefs themselves are part of mainstream Christianity. In my own Episcopal parish, which serves a sophisticated academic congregation, they are taken for granted.

That's not to say that there's nothing to question about Robertson. He has an unpleasant habit of denying past statements. He can be arrogant and high-handed. His alleged use of his media empire to fund his campaign raises serious ethical questions. Most important, he is a far-right conservative whose views of domestic and foreign policy make Jesse Helms look statesmanlike. These are political flaws. So perhaps we might all be a lot better off if the press stopped thinking of Pat Robertson as a preacher and looked at him as a pol.

I know Robertson's roots. When I was growing up in Richmond, his father, A. Willis Robertson, was my senator. In 1978, I saw Pat Robertson mount a sophisticated, powerful drive to seize control of the Virginia Democratic Party. And in 1980, The Washington Post sent me to Virginia Beach to interview evangelical and pentecostal voters — the forerunners of Robertson's so-called "invisible army" — about their attitudes toward religion and politics. These three elements — his political roots, his political record and the population he appeals to — are all important parts of understanding the Robertson phenomenon.

Many reporters are puzzled by Robertson's seemingly bizarre stands on Constitutional issues like the separation of church and state and the status of the Supreme Court. Did he get these ideas from God? No. By and large, he got them from his father. Most of Robertson's ideas — his visceral anti-communism, his fear of government debt, his horror of "secularism," his distrust of the federal government — are taken directly from his father's speeches. Look at Pat Robertson as the last old-South conservative.

Willis Robertson, who served in the Senate from 1947 to 1967, was a powerful and well-regarded member of the 'Southern Caucus' that dominated the senate. And Pat was his heir apparent.

As a Southern conservative in the 1950s, Willis Robertson was strongly pro-military, staunchly anti-communist, and radically opposed to government welfare programs. And he was a determined foe of civil-rights legislation and of Supreme Court integration decisions. It is the rhetoric of that fight that lingers in Pat Robertson's speech.

For example, Pat Robertson has repeatedly argued that "decision of the Supreme Court is not the law of the land." That idea — and indeed, the exact words — come from his father, who, like his Southern colleagues, was attempting to justify Southern acts of "intimidation" aimed at "nullifying" the "erroneous" school integration cases. In 1958, the court reasserted its supremacy in the Little Rock, Ark. school case, and President Eisenhower backed it up with federal troops; but conservatives like Willis Robertson kept up a guerrilla attack on Court authority well into the 1960s.

Pat Robertson sometimes seems like a kind of political Rip Van Winkle, who fell asleep 30 years ago and has recently awakened. In a sense, of course, that did happen. In 1956, Robertson accepted Christ as his savior and began to build his broadcast empire; not until 1978 did he turn his attention to public affairs again.

Gephardt's Message Taps Deep Roots

MANCHESTER, N.H. — Richard Gephardt's campaign has tapped into a vein of discontent underlying the five-year economic recovery. Whether the Missouri congressman's stands have been adopted for convenience or principle, his surge among voters provides new insight into the shape of the 1988 American electorate.

Gephardt's success in Iowa, and the strong possibility that his semi-protectionist, anti-corporate America message will reverberate through much of the South, point to weaknesses within the contemporary economy that may be mined for political purposes.

In addition, poll analysis of the composition of Gephardt's support indicates that, after nearly eight years of the Reagan presidency, the definition of political conservatism needs to be rewritten. Gephardt's populist message has reached a set of voters who see themselves as conservatives: working and lower-middle-class white Democrats who in recent years abandoned their party to cast ballots for Republican presidential candidates.

Even if he falters, the Gephardt candidacy sends a strong signal: White, working and lower-middle-class resentment is no longer focused on government interference and tax burdens. Such resentment sparked angry tax revolts in states across the nation and gave momentum to the sharp shift to the right at the start of this decade. Now, instead, massive dislocations from the shift from manufacturing to service employment and downward pressure on wages appear to have made many among traditional Democratic constituencies highly receptive to an economically populist message.

Gephardt's early success suggests that there may be a strong political reaction to the Reagan policies that, together with shifts in the domestic and world economies, have sharply improved the income of those at the top of the scale, while holding even or depressing the income of those on the middle and lower rungs of the economic ladder. In other words, there may, in fact, be political clout in the dry studies emanating from Congress and the Department of Commerce.

A recent study by the Congressional Budget Office, for example, showed that from 1977 through 1988, after-tax family income will decline for everyone except those in the top 20 percent of the income distribution. For those in the very top one percent, annual family income will have grown by more than $117,000 over the period. The family right in the middle, however, will see a net loss of just over $1,000 a year.

These changing income patterns coincide with a radically altered job market, altered in a way that often hurts New Deal, working-class Democrats the hardest. For the 30 year period from 1949 to 1979, manufacturing jobs grew at a rate of three million every decade, reaching a high of 26.5 million in 1979. From 1979 through 1986, however, the number of manufacturing jobs actually declined by 1.6 million, dropping to 24.9 million.

This disruption in the basic job structure of the nation gives muscle to Gephardt as his ads pound the airways declaring:

"There are those who say that to move ahead we must leave millions of Americans behind, that we must abandon those who build our cars, forge our steel and farm our land. History and our hearts tell us they are our strength and our cause... Your votes will be the most powerful voice in this land. When it's over, let it be said that you changed America, and gave it back its soul."

What remains untested in this new political climate is whether the constituency Gephardt is seeking to cultivate is adequate first to win the Democratic nomination and then, if successful, to form a secure base on which to build a general election coalition. Equally unknown is whether Gephardt himself is up to the task of achieving either goal, although his campaign style and confidence have blossomed over the past two months as his message has become increasingly aggressive and defiant.

There is an interesting account in 1 Kings 19 of how the prophet Elijah, after his successful encounter with the priests of Baal on Mount Carmel, complained bitterly to the Lord that he was the only one left who had any fidelity or righteousness. So God put him to the test. He sent a strong wind that tore open the mountains and broke in piece the rocks which were lying about. "But the Lord was not in the "Gephardt is doing something (Massachusetts Governor Michael) Dukakis and the other candidate are not doing: he is concentrating on a message and not just image," said Geoff Garin, a Democratic pollster who is not affiliated with any of the competing presidential campaigns.

The core of Gephardt's constituency is made up of men and women who are, on average, older than the rest of the population, somewhat less affluent, more blue collar and, perhaps most unexpectedly, people who view themselves as conservatives. In the liberal-leaning universe of Iowa Democratic caucus-goers, Gephardt put together a plurality victory on the basis of supporters who identify themselves as tilting to the political right.

wind; and after the wind an earthquake, but the Lord was not in the earthquake. And after the earthquake a fire, but the Lord was not in the fire. And after the fire, a still, small voice."

Ousting Noriega May Not Be Enough To Bring Democracy

There are some important parallels between the situations in Panama of 1988 and the Philippines of 1986: Both countries share a long relationship with the United States; important U.S. national security interests — key air and naval bases in the Philippines, the canal in Panama — are at stake, and there is a fundamental clash between an authoritarian regime — long supported by Washington — and a popular demand for democracy.

The distinctions may be more important, however. The military in the Philippines for the most part believed in constitutional rule; in Panama the military's refusal to permit civilian control is the core of the problem. In Panama there is no Corazon Aquino uniting the opposition, no Cardinal Jaime Sin heading an active and influential church. Instead, Panama's "civilian crusade" often appears weak and divided in the face of a military all too willing to use force to prevail.

In the end, it may be best to see Panama for what it is. The civilian government is little more than a facade. The military wields the real power, much like Spain under Franco. Most important, the degree of corruption is profound. Much of the top echelon of Panama's military, headed since 1983 by Gen. Manuel A. Noriega, is widely believed to be guilty of lining its pockets from a variety of illegal activities and using violence to silence its domestic enemies.

Nevertheless, for more than 20 years now, the United States has largely looked the other way while Noriega and his predecessors subverted democracy. American policy-makers were tolerant so long as the canal stayed open and the U.S. military — Panama is the headquarters of the U.S. Southern Command — was allowed to remain. Panama also became an important source of intelligence on developments in Central America. More recent disclosures indicate that Gen. Noriega was on the CIA payroll, and that the National Security Council's Oliver North sought to enlist him in a scheme intended to embarrass the neighboring Sandinista regime by fabricating evidence of arms shipments from Nicaragua to the rebels in El Salvador.

Starting this past June, however, Washington decided that it had had enough. Coming against a backdrop of growing political repression in Panama, the triggering event was the government-orchestrated stoning of the U.S. Embassy in Panama City. Congress voted to cut off all economic and military aid, calling for civilian control. Even previous supporters of Noriega joined in, outraged over evidence of his complicity in large-scale cocaine shipments to the United States, shipment of high technology to Cuba and the Eastern bloc countries, and gunrunning. So that the Panamanians would understand that all agencies of the Reagan administration wanted reform, Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard Armitage was dispatched to deliver the message that Noriega should step aside.

U.S. criticism came to a head with grand jury indictments of Noriega and some of his top associates for their role in facilitating the export of drugs to the United States and racketeering. Yet there are probably limits to what the United States can accomplish. Given canal revenues, a free trade zone and Swiss-style banking laws, Panama's elite is partially immune to Western pressures. Many top military figures are further insulated, given their access to funds derived from drug trade, prostitution and gun-running. The indictments might simply lead Noriega and his top associates to circle the wagons against this threat to their privilege.

In fact, the United States has already played most of its cards with the aid cut, political criticism and the indictments.

What, then, should Washington do? U.S. officials should continue to call for civilian rule and free and fair elections (scheduled for May 1989). We should also continue to honor our commitments under the Panama Canal treaties — slated to return to Panama's control in 11 years — thereby undermining the charge by Noriega that the current wave of criticism is motivated by a desire to revise the treaties and keep control of the waterway. Enlisting the militaries of Latin governments to pressure Panama's soldiers to reform might help. So, too, would expanded economic sanctions designed to weaken Panama's largely service economy.

As a general rule of thumb, Washington would be wise not to assume too high a profile. Positive change can come only from within Panama itself. Noriega can only profit from the perception that he is standing up to "Yankee imperialism." But convincing Panama's soldiers to return to their barracks promises to be difficult. Getting rid of Noriega might not be enough; "Noriegism," with its tradition of corruption and political interference, runs deep. The age when Uncle Sam could snap his fingers and Latin leaders would jump is long since over.

A Reagan Win In The Gulf?

The Reagan administration, which has committed more than its share of blunders in the Middle East, may finally be doing something right in the Persian Gulf.

The American naval armada in the gulf seems to be succeeding in its limited mission of protecting convoys of reflagged Kuwaiti tankers. The Saudis and other gulf Arabs would like us to do more and extend protection to all non-belligerent shipping; others at home and abroad would like us to do less — which means the Reagan administration probably has struck the balance about right.

What's needed now is to combine our military success in the gulf with a new diplomatic push to end the Iran-Iraq war. That trick — translating military muscle into diplomatic gains — hasn't been the Reagan administration's strong suit. But administration officials say they are pushing this month for a vote on a United Nations resolution aimed at forcing Iran into peace talks.

The U.S. armada can't stay in the gulf forever, and at some point, the administration should probably adopt the late Sen. George Aiken's strategy for ending the Vietnam War: Declare victory and get out. We haven't reached that point yet. But the administration is sensibly beginning to reduce the number of ships in and around the gulf. The number of U.S. warships there on Friday was 24, down from last October's peak of 34, according to a Defense Department spokesman. Though the Pentagon won't yet confirm it, administration officials say the battleship Iowa and the helicopter carrier Okinawa will be leaving the area soon.

The quiet — and in many ways boring — success of the gulf task force contrasts with the dire predictions that greeted its initial deployment. When the administration decided nearly a year ago to send a small armada to the Persian Gulf to escort Kuwaiti tankers, many politicians and pundits saw a disaster in the making.

The tanker reflagging plan was a "half-baked, poorly developed" scheme and an attempt to "show our macho," said Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd. "I don't think anyone knows quite what the policy is," worried Senate Republican Leader Robert J. Dole.

Even the Central Intelligence Agency had the jitters. Amid the congressional hand-wringing over reflagging, the agency prepared an intelligence estimate warning that Iran was likely to retaliate against the American naval force with a new wave of terrorism. Sources say the CIA was so skittish about maintaining its analytical independence that when Frank Carlucci, then national security adviser, asked to see a draft of the estimate, he was told that he would have to wait until it was finished.

The Iranian terror campaign feared by the CIA hasn't yet materialized. The agency's analysts have offered several hypotheses for Iran's behavior, sources say. Among the theories: The Iranian terror network may be less extensive than the CIA thought; improved American and European intelligence and security measures may have cramped their operations; the threat of American retaliation may have deterred them from attacking; or they may still be looking for the right target.

The best explanation for Iran's restraint may simply be that they know how to count ships. Attacking American targets when we have massive firepower in the gulf just isn't worth the risk. As one administration official observes: "The events of the past year have shown that the Iranians have no interest in a large-scale, open confrontation with the United States."

The best measure of the administration's success in the gulf is to look back to the situation that existed a year ago. It was a mess: Iranian troops were pounding the Iraqi city of Basra, and Iraqi morale looked shaky; the Reagan administration was reeling from the Iran-Contra affair and its credibility in the Arab world was near zero; the Soviet Union was offering military protection to the gulf Arabs, as an alternative to the seemingly unreliable Americans.

The Reagan administration responded to this chaotic situation by agreeing last March to a request from the tiny sheikhdom of Kuwait to reflag Kuwaiti tankers and provide American naval protection for them. It seemed at the time (and still does) like a strange way to respond to the larger problem of the Iran-Iraq war. But as one administration official explains: "We felt we needed to do something tangible to show support for our friends in the gulf, and we grabbed the first opportunity that came along."

The tanker-escort policy got off to a bad start. In May, the USS Stark was hit by an Iraqi missile, killing 37 American sailors. When the first convoy of reflagged tankers finally moved through the Strait of Hormuz in July, one of them, the Bridgeton, promptly struck an Iranian mine. Minesweepers eventually arrived but the impression persisted for months that the gulf operation was snakebit.

Since that maiden voyage last July, 32 U.S.-escorted convoys have made their way safely through the gulf. Meanwhile, the Pentagon has developed innovative tactics to deal with most aspects of the Iranian threat. To maintain radar coverage of Iran's flotilla of small speedboats, the United States has converted at least two oil-drilling barges into offshore bases for Army helicopters; to allow prompt retaliation against future Iranian attacks, the Navy has programmed its Tomahawk cruise missiles to hit a range of Iranian targets.

The First Move Is Israel's

WASHINGTON — Having just come back from Israel, where I had wide-ranging conversations, I feel that it is important to restate certain basic principles and to highlight their implications. I may also add that I came back impressed by the soul-searching that is taking place among the Israeli people and by the degree to which recent violence has caused not only concern but a genuine moral crisis among the decent and democratic Israelis. It is in this context that certain underlying principles need to be reaffirmed:

— The U.S. commitment to Israel is primarily of a moral nature. It stems from the American people's deep conviction that the state of Israel corrects a fundamental historical injustice to which much of the world, including America itself, was indifferent. It is this bond that unites America and Israel and creates an absolute and unique commitment to Israel's future and security. Anything that tarnishes this central moral dimension ultimately damages Israeli security.

— The United States has a wide-ranging regional interest in a good relationship with the Arab peoples, including the Palestinians. The geostrategic importance of the region speaks for itself. It is important to recognize that the American interest in a good regional relationship is central to America's capacity to protect the region from Soviet intrusion, with its radicalizing and destabilizing impact, including on Israel itself. It is to balance that consideration that Israeli and Jewish-American spokesmen often stress that Israel is "a strategic asset" to America. To postulate that, however, is to engage in a bidding that is ultimately relative in nature. How does one measure the relative strategic significance of this or that country? For example, South African spokesmen also have tried to argue that South Africa is "a strategic asset" for America because of its minerals. In contrast, moral commitment involves an absolute standard, not subject to economic or military calculus. It should not be diluted, by words or actions.

— There is no alternative to peaceful cohabitation between the Israeli and the Palestinian peoples. Any other solution — domination, expulsion or continued violence — will do damage to Israeli and ultimately American interests. Any alternative solution is likely to pose agonizing choices for America between the moral dimension and the regional interest mentioned above, not to speak of the moral implications of policies that could be in fundamental conflict with deep-rooted American convictions. Cohabitation between the Israeli and the Palestinian peoples is thus a historical imperative, and it is on that plane that the needed solutions must be sought.

— Autonomy, as envisaged by Camp David, is not the final outcome but a process toward a deliberately undefined future. At this stage, neither side can accept the other's view of what the eventual outcome of a peace arrangement might be. But autonomy can create new conditions, new outlooks and a new mutual confidence. That, in turn, can alter the ways the two sides come to envision their long-range relationship.

— Diplomatic motion is not a substitute for political action. Attempts to contrive a complicated international procedure as the solution to the current crisis is tantamount to evasion of the current dilemmas. Moreover, diplomatic motion is also not a substitute for effective American mediation. The latter took place at Camp David and elsewhere because the American president and the American secretary of state were prepared to commit their personal time and energy to a sustained effort, and their efforts were successful because, on the Arab side, there was a leader willing to gamble on peace and, on the Israeli side, a leader with a strategy focused on peace. These conditions do not currently exist. Hence a complicated international procedure is not likely to provide an effective substitute for needed political action to deal with problems that threaten to get out of hand.

— Under these circumstances, a major unilateral initiative by Israel regarding the current status of the Palestinians is timely. Only Israel can act decisively because it is in effective control of the West Bank and Gaza. The United States will not, while the Arabs are unable to do so because they are the weaker party and even more divided than the Israelis. What is needed is an initiative analogous to the bold move undertaken by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat in 1978. At that time, to most Arabs Prime Minister Menachem Begin was anathema and a direct approach toward the Israelis smacked of treason. Yet Sadat was willing to undertake such an initiative, with the result that today there is peace between Israel and Egypt.

An Israeli initiative, including some symbolic and perhaps even dramatic personal gesture, designed to change the current political and social status of the Palestinians, pending an eventual but more distant peace treaty, is needed. It should be made conditional on a rational and reciprocal Palestinian response, including the termination of civil disobedience and riots, as well as good faith acceptance of some transitional arrangement. Such an initiative would help to defuse the rising tensions.

IN THE STATE

Highway Fatalities

RALEIGH (AP) — Nine people died on North Carolina roads over the weekend, including a Cherryville man who was killed while standing at his mailbox, the state highway patrol said Sunday.

John Ralph Ivester, 79, of Cherryville, died at about 4 p.m. Saturday when he was struck by a vehicle while he was at his mailbox beside a rural road 10 miles west of Lincolnton in Lincoln County, troopers said.

Elizabeth Broughton Cox, 47, of Raleigh, was killed about 1 p.m. Sunday when the car in which she was a passenger collided with another vehicle at the intersection of two rural Wake County roads about three miles south of Knightdale.

Minnie S. Hines, 70, of Selma, died about 8 p.m. Sunday when the car in which she was a passenger collided with another vehicle on a rural road near Smithfield.

David Perry Beasley, 21, of Louisburg died at 6:56 Friday evening when a car crossing U.S. Highway 1 near Wake Forest failed to yield and struck another car, causing it to collide with Beasley's, troopers said.

Beasley was not wearing his seat belt, troopers said. The patrol said the car that struck Beasley's went on to cross the median strip and strike a fourth car, causing it to overturn several times. Two other people were injured.

Later Friday, Robert Joseph Hoyle, 45, of Dallas was killed in Gaston County when a car crossed the center line on N.C. 275 and collided head-on with the car Hoyle was driving, the patrol said. Two other people were injured in the accident, she said.

A man and a woman died at 6:55 p.m. Friday in Surry County when a car traveling on U.S. Highway 52 near Mount Airy struck another turning onto the highway, the patrol said.

Killed were Vivian Theodore Currier, 74, and Frances Bondurant Puckett, 67, both of Mount Airy. The two were passengers in the second car and were not wearing safety belts, troopers said.

At 11:05 p.m. Saturday, Jeffrey Clay Manley, 26, of Mayodan died in a car that overturned on N.C. 704 in Stokes County, troopers said. Manley was a front-seat passenger in the car, which authorities said was traveling too fast and missed a curve, striking a ditch and overturning. Two other people were injured, the patrol said.

Early Sunday morning, a car ran off a rural road in Nash County and struck several trees, killing the driver, troopers said. Rudolph Valentino Baines, 22, of Nashville apparently lost control of his vehicle, the patrol said.

The deaths bring to 123 the number of people reported killed on state highways this year. Last year at this time, there were 160 highway deaths reported in North Carolina.

New Police Chief

DURHAM (AP) — Trevor Hampton, a deputy police chief in Columbia, S.C., will be named today as Durham's new police chief, The Durham Sun reported today.

Hampton, 41, will be Durham's first black police chief, taking the position vacated by Talmadge Lassiter, who retired Feb. 1 after five years as public-safety director and three years as police chief.

The announcement by Durham City Manager Orville Powell was scheduled for noon today at City Hall.

Last month, Hampton was picked over Lassiter and another finalist to be chief of police in Alexandria, Va.

A week after accepting, however, Hampton withdrew from the post, which he was to have assumed March 1, in order to interview in Durham.

Other finalists were Durham Police Maj. Worth Hill, who along with Hampton and James Carvino, a former chief of the U.S. Capitol Police in Washington, Durham.

Burn Victims Die

WILMINGTON (AP) — Two men who were installing insulation died after they were burned in a flash fire at a manufacturing plant.

Edgar Allen Lanier Jr., 44, died shortly after he arrived at the North Carolina Burn Center in Chapel Hill, a spokeswoman there said. Thomas Kempton Coombs, 36, who suffered burns over 95 percent of his body, died about 3 p.m. Sunday.

Lanier and Coombs were installing insulation at Siemens, a circuit breaker manufacturing plant, when the fire occurred about 4:30 p.m. Saturday. A third man, Guy Huffstickler, was working with them but was far enough away to avoid getting burned. He suffered cuts on his hands when he helped firefighters knock glass from a door.

Health Officials Want Donated Blood Tested

RALEIGH (AP) — A rare leukemia virus related to AIDS and possibly carried by a Wake County man who died last year has led some authorities to ask that the nation's blood supplies be screened.

The man, an Army veteran of Vietnam, Korea and Germany, went to doctors in Durham last year after he had become feverish, turned yellow with jaundice, felt tired and lost weight. Three months later, he died of leukemia.

Five people, including his sister and two sex partners, also were infected with the virus, authorities told The News and Observer of Raleigh. So far, none of them have developed the rare leukemia and it is believed only about one in 1,500 people infected with the virus would contract the disease.

Although the virus has been found mostly in the Southeast and only in certain populations, some health officials don't want to wait to start screening the nation's blood supplies.

"I'm calling for the testing of donated blood ... to prevent the spread of the virus from the relatively confined segments of our population to the general population," said Dr. S. Gerald Sandler, associate vice president of medical operations at the American Red Cross in Washington.

Dr. J. Newton MacCormack, director of the epidemiology section of the North Carolina Division of Health, said there may be more danger than studies to date have indicated.

"There's some controversy about how extensive infection already is in this country," he said. "Whether this will blow up into an epidemic the size of the AIDS epidemic remains to be seen."

The decision to screen blood for HTLV-I now awaits the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, which has not yet licensed any tests to screen for the virus. Blood banks have screened for the AIDS virus since 1985.

Meanwhile, other researchers say it may be premature or even inappropriate to compare the leukemia virus to the AIDS virus in its potential threat to the United States. They say the leukemia virus is much less dangerous. The chances that the acquired immune deficiency syndrome virus will lead to AIDS are about 20 to 30 percent within five years.

"Fortunately, a very low percentage of people infected ever get sick," said Jonathan E. Kaplan, a medical epidemiologist with the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

"There's a feeling there might be higher incidence in blacks in the Southeast," Kaplan said. The Centers for Disease Control reported the case of the Wake County man in a Dec. 18 weekly bulletin to try to alert doctors across the country.

"A lot of people don't know how to look for it," Kaplan said. "That's why we wrote this. We know the virus is around in the United States and we're concerned it might be increasing, particularly in I.V. (intravenous) drug abusers."

The Wake County man, whom health officials declined to identify, was black and had been known to use intravenous drugs, the newspaper said.

The virus is called HTLV-I. Like the AIDS virus, HTLV-I can be spread through blood transfusions, through blood-tainted needle syringes, through sexual intercourse and from mother to child at birth.

But instead of causing AIDS, the virus can cause an aggressive form of leukemia that is usually fatal within one year.

Marine Killed

CAMP LEJEUNE (AP) — A hand grenade exploded prematurely during a U.S. Marine training exercise in France, killing one soldier stationed at Camp Lejeune and injuring two others also stationed there, an official said.

Killed Saturday was Lance Corp. Gustavo A. Rodriguez, 19, of Buffalo Grove, Ill., said Capt. Mark Hughes, a spokesman for Camp Lejeune. Injured were First Lt. Kevin M. Kirwin, 25, of Wilmington, Del., and SSgt. Mark W. Ellars, 28, of Painesville, Ohio, the spokesman said.

The three Marines were training at Camp de la Courvine, he said.

The three men belonged to the 22nd Marine Expeditionary Unit, formerly called the Amphibious Unit, Hughes said.

The accident was under investigation, he said.

Beach Property Owners Like New Federal Law

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A new federal law designed to help owners of beachfront property flee from the encroaching surf is being lauded as good news by those who haven't already seen their real estate slip beneath the waves.

"This will give the homeowners an option," Don Bryan, mayor of Nags Head, said of the law passed Feb. 5. "In some cases, they'll have to purchase another lot and move the house to another lot. There may be a few they can just move back on the existing lot."

Under the new law, property owners can collect federal flood insurance to move structures in danger of falling into the ocean. Under previous law, owners were able to collect only after homes actually collapsed — a fate that visited Bill and Barbara Stamper of Bluefield, W.Va.

The Stampers own a home on Topsail Beach that was condemned after a fierce northeaster hit the coast in January 1987 and swept away their laundry room, tool room and septic tank. They paid $50,000 for a new lot in the middle of the island, spent nearly $20,000 to build up the lot and another $50,000 in July to move their 3-bedroom cottage there.

"I'm just sorry we moved our house when we did," Barbara Stamper told The Charlotte Observer. "For the people who haven't moved, the law'll be great."

U.S. Rep. Walter Jones, D-N.C., proposed the new law, which also applies to flooding in such areas as the Mississippi Delta.

If a structure is imminently threatened — the term has yet to be defined — homeowners and businesses can collect up to 40 percent of the insured value to move the structure inland. Maximum coverage for homes insured under the federal flood insurance program is $185,000; for businesses it's $200,000 to $300,000, depending on the type of business.

Or, the owners may raze the structures and collect 110 percent of the insured value — the extra 10 percent to cover the cost of demolition and clean-up.

"For the first time, the law says we're going to try to minimize some losses before they happen," said David Owens, director of the N.C. Division of Coastal Management, who helped draft the law. "Congress has now said erosion is a fact of life. It's part of the natural dynamics out there, and you have to plan for that and deal with it by moving these structures and not just wait for a big storm to come along and take a couple of thousand of houses."

Owens expects the law to save money. In the past, the government paid 100 percent of the insured value, plus up to $60,000 for furnishings, when beach cottages toppled into the ocean. Under the new law, homeowners can still collect if homes are destroyed, but if they had a chance to move their homes out of danger — and didn't — the government will pay no more than 40 percent of the insured value.

In North Carolina alone, Owens estimates erosion over the next five to 10 years will threaten almost 800 homes and businesses, and nearly 5,000 over 60 years. A major storm could destroy 4,200 oceanfront buildings, causing $314.5 million in damage.

FBI Monitors Literature, Rallies Of Group Against U.S. Policies

By PHYLLIS MESSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI's investigation of a group opposed to Reagan administration policies in Central America focused in part on fliers distributed at rallies and public speeches, even though the activities are protected by the First Amendment.

Newly released FBI documents show that agents reported back to bureau headquarters on political literature and meetings by the Committee in Solidarity with the People of El Salvador.

The 2,000 pages of bureau documents provide only a fragmentary look at the FBI probe since many of the pages are substantially blacked out or withheld entirely.

But even FBI headquarters was disturbed at one point by the direction the investigation was taking, warning offices to stay away from reporting legitimate political statements and lobbying.

The FBI investigation of CISPES never resulted in any charges against the group or its members.

One bureau document shows the FBI cited political literature to cast suspicion on CISPES in connection with the still-unsolved November 1983 bombing of the U.S. Capitol. The document notes that it is "interesting" that a flier claiming responsibility for the Capitol bombing "was passed out along with the CISPES literature" at a Nov. 12, 1983, rally.

Another document indicates the FBI tried to find a connection between CISPES and a May 1983 bombing at the Army National War College in Washington. The document says that "an unidentified individual contacted a local radio station in Washington, D.C., a few days after the bombing and advised that 'we are in solidarity with the people of El Salvador and Guatemala.' At the time of the bombing, representatives of the Committee in Solidarity with the People of El Salvador (CISPES) were meeting in Washington, D.C."

CISPES contends that the investigation amounted to political harassment. In a telephone interview, Beth Perry, CISPES spokeswoman, called suggestions that the group might have had a connection to the bombings "absolutely ridiculous."

She said some literature on the Capitol bombing was passed out at a CISPES-sponsored demonstration, five days after the bombing, but that the group had nothing to do with distributing that material.

Other FBI documents show the bureau monitored a radio show on which a CISPES member appeared and tracked down people named in newspaper articles.

The files also show that the FBI switched from conducting an investigation of alleged criminal investigations of domestic security laws to an international terrorism investigation in 1983. At the time of the switchover, then-FBI Director William Webster was assuring the public and Congress that the FBI would require more than political rhetoric before it began investigating domestic political groups.

Webster, now head of the CIA, has refused to comment on the investigation, referring all questions back to the FBI.

The international terrorism probe gave the FBI far more sweeping authority to investigate U.S. citizens. But a proviso in the attorney general's guidelines for such probes still states that "no United States person may be considered a foreign power or an agent of a foreign power solely upon the basis of activities protected by the First Amendment."

FBI headquarters in Washington apparently was concerned that the field offices did not understand that they could be infringing on First Amendment rights.

In a memorandum to all field offices, dated July 26, 1984, the FBI director writes, "It is imperative that these investigations are closely supervised and monitored to ensure our investigations do not infringe upon the rights of these individuals or groups protected by the Constitution."

"Some offices have reported information recently regarding political statements and political lobbying by CISPES or CISPES affiliates," the director continues.

Ski Resort Blaze Kills 3 Workers

By KELLY P. KISSEL
Associated Press Writer

CANAAN VALLEY, W. Va. (AP) — Officials at the Canaan Valley Ski Resort say an explosion and fire that killed three maintenance workers may have been touched off by a compressor used for snow-making.

The blaze, fed by at least five 55-gallon drums of fuel housed in the maintenance area, gutted the building Sunday, authorities said.

Resort spokesman Andy Snyder said it appeared the compressor, part of a snow-making machine, exploded and set off the fire. It took firefighters about an hour to reach the victims. No other injuries were reported.

"I was on the slope opposite it when it blew," said Bob Gribbin of Springfield, Va. "I heard an explosion, and fire came shooting out the back side of the building. Flames shot out to the back wall (of the maintenance area). I guess it was about 40 feet."

The maintenance shop, located at the base of the mountain, is used to repair resort vehicles and snow-making machines and also houses the compressors, said Canaan Valley State Park spokesman Steve Drumbheller.

Snyder said the compressors had been used to make snow as late as Sunday morning, but were shut off sometime before noon when temperatures rose above freezing.

Firefighters from seven fire departments were called to help put out the fire in the stone and wood building, he said. The resort's beginners' area was closed for about three hours.

Authorities identified the dead as Ronald L. Hanlon, 33, Dale W. Liller, 25, and Randy Lee Crowl, 24, all of Davis.

Jennings, Thatcher On Best Dressed List

NEW YORK (AP) — Rock star Bryan Ferry, "L.A. Law" actor Corbin Bernsen and ABC-TV anchor Peter Jennings are among the world's snappiest male dressers, according to the International Best Dressed Poll.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Great Britain, "60 Minutes" reporter Diane Sawyer, comedian Joan Rivers and actress Anjelica Huston were among the 12 best-dressed women, according to the poll released Sunday.

About a thousand fashion professionals, journalists and "others with the daily opportunity to see fashion at its best" participate in the annual survey held since 1940, said coordinator Eleanor Lambert.

Others on the women's list were: Susan Gutfreund, wife of financier John Gutfreund; philanthropist Sybil Harrington of Amarillo, Texas; and

New York; Irith Landeau of Paris and Tel Aviv; novelist Anna Murdoch, wife of publisher Rupert Murdoch; Victoria Niarchos, daughter-in-law of shipping magnate Stavros Niarchos; socialite Marina Palma of New York and Italy; Judy Taubman, wife of Sotheby's chairman Alfred Taubman; and socialite Alexandra Theodoracopoulos of New York.

The men's list included David Somerset, the Duke of Beaufort, England; Mark Birley, a London restaurateur; Richard Burt, U.S. ambassador to West Germany; Julio Mario de Santo Domingo, former Colombian ambassador to Australia; publishing executive Christopher Forbes of New York; Prince Heinrich Furstenberg of West Germany; Count Sebastian de Ganay of France; banker James Niven Jr., New York; and painter Julian Schnabel.

Newlywed Arrested In Death Of Wife During Honeymoon

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A newlywed who said his wife was blown overboard while jogging on the deck of a ship during a honeymoon cruise was booked for investigation of murder when the ocean liner docked, an FBI spokesman said.

Scott Robin Roston, 36, of Santa Monica was arrested Saturday after an intense U.S. Coast Guard search found the body of his wife, FBI spokesman Fred Reagan said Sunday.

Roston was taken into custody when the cruise ship Star Dancer docked in Los Angeles Harbor and was being held without bail at the Terminal Island federal prison. Reagan said he couldn't release details of what led to Roston's arrest.

The cause of death of Karen Roston, 26, was to be determined by autopsy, said San Diego County coroner's office spokesman Robert Grubb.

The couple were married Feb. 6 just before embarking on a honeymoon cruise along the Mexican coast with 731 other passengers, the ship's staff captain said.

Roston told authorities that high winds blew his wife off the deck near the ship's jogging track, but "the winds were not that strong," Capt. Thomas Wildung said.

Chief Purser Ken Ehlers said the track closed at 9 p.m. and he never heard the couple running, though the track is over his room.

"This woman was happy," Ehlers said. "She must have woke up Friday morning thinking how happy she was to be on her honeymoon, on a cruise. She had no idea she would die ... and now she's gone."

Passenger Dick Heinrich, an assistant chief deputy at the Cook County Sheriff's Department in Chicago, said of the Rostons, "They seemed to be enjoying each other. They had a cake delivered to their table and everyone sang 'Happy Honeymoon to You.'"

"No one knows what really happened," Wildung said. "No one heard anything. The husband reported the accident. There were minor marks on his neck, but it's very difficult to tell how they got there. He said he got them when he tried to rescue his wife."

The woman was reported overboard about 2 a.m. Saturday when the ship was about 44 miles southwest of San Diego, Coast Guard Petty Officer Don Roberts said.

The Coast Guard said it immediately began a search, using a cutter, a helicopter and a jet.

The Star Dancer, a Bahamas-registered ship owned by Admiral Cruises of Miami, Fla., had also searched for the body, but the master of the vessel and the Bahamian government requested that the FBI investigate the death, said Coast Guard Lt. Andy Czapowskyj.

"They had some suspicion that there may have been some foul play involved," he said.

The FBI has jurisdiction when crimes are committed against Americans on the high seas in international waters.

Talks On Nuke Tests Resume

GENEVA (AP) — The second round of U.S.-Soviet negotiations on nuclear testing began today with Moscow calling for agreement by June on anti-cheating provisions.

That would permit ratification of two superpower treaties limiting the yield of test blasts.

The talks are due to last six to eight weeks.

Chief Soviet delegate Igor Palenykh said upon arrival Saturday that the session is expected to set the dates and details of joint nuclear test explosions, one in each country, to be held by June.

In the joint experiments, each side will demonstrate its detection technology. Palenykh said the tests will help the two sides agree "preferably in the first half of 1988" on verification measures for the 1974 Threshold Test Ban Treaty and the 1976 Peaceful Nuclear Explosions Treaty.

Both limit test explosions to 150 kilotons.

A kiloton equals the explosive force of 1,000 tons of TNT.

The U.S. Senate never ratified the pacts because of concerns they were unenforceable.

Palenykh called for finding a combination of anti-cheating measures including both Washington's on-site detection method and the remote monitoring system Moscow wants.

Washington has not set a deadline for agreement.

During the session, preparations for the experiments will continue at the main Soviet test range at Semipalatinsk and the U.S. site in the Nevada desert, Palenykh said.

The round opened with a meeting at the U.S. mission. The U.S. delegation is headed by Robert Barker.

Ambassador Dies

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Nora Astorga, the nation's U.N. ambassador and a heroine of the Sandinista revolution, died of cancer in Managua, the government announced. She was 39.

During the revolution, Ms. Astorga gained fame for luring a top general into her bedroom, where he was killed by rebels. In 1984, the Reagan administration rejected her as Nicaragua's ambassador to the United States.

Ms. Astorga, who died Sunday, was a lawyer and a member of the Sandinista Assembly, one of the leftist movement's highest consultative bodies.

She had returned home from New York early last month because of her illness and was living on a small farm near the capital until Sunday, the government said in a communique.

CAR BOMBING — Police inspect the wreckage of a car in which three officers of the Palestine Liberation Organization were killed when it blew up Sunday in the port city of Limassol, Cyprus. Authorities said a bomb exploded when the car was started. (AP Laserphoto)

Blast Damages PLO Boat; Three Die In Car Bombing

By MONA ZIADE
Associated Press Writer

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — An explosion today damaged a ferryboat at Limassol port as it was being readied to carry Palestinian deportees on a PLO-sponsored protest voyage to Israel, a Palestine Liberation Organization official said.

The official, who spoke in Nicosia on condition of anonymity, told The Associated Press: "We are waiting for a decision by the (PLO) command. We have to see if there is an alternative ship for the voyage."

PLO officials in Athens, Greece, also said the vessel they had planned to use on the voyage to Israel had been damaged by a bomb in Cyprus.

The PLO had tried to launch the voyage from Greece, but it was repeatedly delayed. Before today's explosion, the PLO had ordered the 130 Palestinian deportees and hundreds of observers and reporters that had planned to make the voyage to gather at Athens Airport to fly to Cyprus.

After the blast, PLO officials stopped some reporters from boarding the plane to Cyprus, where the voyage was due to start tonight.

Israeli officials, who have vowed to prevent the ship from entering Israel's waters, had no immediate comment today on the explosion in Cyprus.

Port officials in Limassol, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the explosion ripped a hole in the hull of the 40-year-old Sol Phryne ferryboat, which was sold last Saturday. They said they did not know who bought it.

Security sources in Cyprus, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said three ranking PLO officers who were killed in a car bombing in Limassol on Sunday had been negotiating for the boat. They did not elaborate.

The slain officials were identified as Mohammed Sultan; Mohammed Buheis, also known as Abu Hassan Kassem; and Marwan Kayyali.

PLO officials blamed Israel for the killing and also linked the attack to the PLO's efforts to find a vessel for the voyage to Israel.

"Israel started this open war after losing the secret war concerning the ship," the PLO's chief spokesman, Bassam Abu Sharif, said in Athens.

A senior official at Limassol port said Sol Phryne's captain "reported an explosion just after 8 a.m." local time. He and other officials at the port on Cyprus' southern coast spoke on condition of anonymity.

The captain, who was not identified, reported a hole in the hull and said that the vessel took on water and that it was "listing slightly."

There were no immediate reports of injuries.

Neither port authorities nor the captain could determine the cause of the explosion and divers were called in to check the waters and examine the damage.

Paraguay Leader Receives New Term; Fraud Alleged

By WILLIAM H. HEATH
Associated Press Writer

ASUNCION, Paraguay (AP) — Gen. Alfredo Stroessner's landslide victory in the presidential election was achieved through widespread fraud, according to opposition leaders and foreign observers.

The 75-year-old president and his governing Colorado Party on Sunday won an eighth straight term, receiving 89 percent of the vote, Interior Minister Sabino Montanaro announced. Montanaro is also party president.

Stroessner, elected to a five-year term, has governed the nation of 3.8 million people since taking power in an army coup in 1954.

One opposition leader was detained during the voting.

Opposition groups and foreign representatives invited to observe the voting said they witnessed irregularities that included: the absence of opposition ballots at polling stations, a lack of closed booths to ensure secret balloting, voting by underage voters and ballot box stuffing.

Stroessner is the Western Hemisphere's longest governing head of state. Among current world leaders, only North Korea's Kim Il Sung, who came to power in 1948, has led a country longer.

The unofficial vote tally, announced by Montanaro, gave the Colorado Party and Stroessner 982,316 votes. A total of 1,446,665 voters were registered.

The Radical Liberal Party, whose presidential candidate was Sen. Luis Maria Vega, 65, was a distant second with 78,141 votes, or 7 percent. The Liberal Party, led by Rep. Carlos Ferreira Ybarra, 54, was third with 52,403 votes, or 3 percent. Final returns were expected to be released today.

The government said voter turnout was high, but did not provide a figure. The opposition said turnout was lower than 50 percent in many urban areas.

The victory, which Montanaro called proof "the Colorado Party with Stroessner holds an absolute majority in the countryside and the cities," also gave the party two-thirds of the 72 House of Deputies and 36 Senate seats.

The remaining one-third will be split among the two other parties according to the proportion of votes the two losers received.

The opposition candidates who participated Sunday represented two of the country's three officially recognized opposition groups.

The third party, the Febrerista Revolutionary Party, has not participated in elections or government since 1973.

Three unrecognized parties, the Authentic Radical Liberal Party, the Christian Democrats and the Colorado Popular Movement, had urged voters to boycott the elections.

Domingo Laino, president of the Authentic Radical Liberal Party, was detained most of Sunday at a government office in Col. Oviedo, 80 miles east of Asuncion, and released when the polls had closed.

He then held a news conference to denounce the elections.

"The fraud of Feb. 14 will not be like others," Laino said. "It will be Stroessner's burial ground."

Jo Marie Greisgaber, a U.S. consultant to the Washington-based National Democratic Institute for International Affairs, a Democratic Party entity, said she witnessed underage voters casting ballots in Col. Oviedo.

"We also were told that area cotton farmers had been told cotton prices would not be increased if they did not vote or that they would not be able to sell their crops," she said.

A U.S. observer with the same institute, Martin Andersen, said a car in which he and opposition politicians were riding was stopped in Ypacarai, 15 miles east of Asuncion, by a group of men in plainclothes and police uniforms.

"We were mistreated without provocation and treated in a beastly fashion," said Andersen.

Chancellor Hints Waldheim Should Ponder Resignation

By ROLAND PRINZ
Associated Press Writer

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Chancellor Franz Vranitzky said the controversy over President Kurt Waldheim's wartime conduct is taking up too much of his time as a government leader and he may resign unless the furor subsides soon.

Vranitzky did not ask Waldheim to resign, but the Socialist chancellor said Waldheim's resignation would be "an important signal."

Vranitzky's comments came in a televised interview Sunday and constituted his strongest attack so far on Waldheim in a deepening political crisis dividing this nation of 7.5 million people.

He warned that if the Waldheim affair continues to take up so much of his time "then I would not be able to perform my other tasks and then the question arises if I can ... carry on this (government post)." Asked if he will resign if the controversy does not subside, he told reporters: "That's correct."

Reacting to the comments, Waldheim was quoted in today's editions of the tabloid Kurier as saying he continues to be interested in a "constructive relationship" with the chancellor.

The chancellor runs the government in Austria, while the presidency is a largely ceremonial post. The Socialists are the senior partner in the coalition government with the conservative Austrian People's Party, which backed Waldheim when he won his six-year term as president in 1986.

On Sunday afternoon, 5,000 people demanding Waldheim step down rallied peacefully outside the landmark St. Stephen's Cathedral. About half of them marched to the president's office in the Hofburg Palace.

Prominent intellectuals, artists and actors took part in the protest.

Waldheim served during World War II as a lieutenant in a German army unit that was implicated in Nazi atrocities against Jews and other civilians in the Balkans. Last week, an international panel of six military historians convened by Vranitzky's government issued a condemning 202-page report that says Waldheim knew of the atrocities and did nothing to stop them.

It said it found no evidence that the former U.N. secretary-general had committed war crimes, but it seriously questioned his moral integrity.

Waldheim said the report cleared him of misconduct because knowledge of atrocities did not constitute criminal wrongdoing.

Security Matters On Kohl Agenda

By GIRARD C. STEICHEN
Associated Press Writer

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl travels to Washington on Wednesday for talks with U.S. officials that are expected to focus on differences between the two countries on several key security issues.

During the three-day visit, Kohl is slated to meet with President Reagan, Secretary of State George P. Shultz and leading members of Congress.

Kohl is expected to urge swift Senate ratification of the superpower agreement eliminating land-based intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

Differences between the two nations center on modernizing NATO's short-range nuclear weapons and eliminating chemical weapons.

U.S. officials and other NATO countries have emphasized the need for modernizing short-range nuclear missiles that will remain in Europe after intermediate-range nuclear missiles are scrapped.

But West German officials have said that upgrading of short-range weapons systems should be linked to negotiations on reducing the Warsaw Pact's superiority in conventional weapons in Central Europe.

Short-range, or battlefield, nuclear weapons are primarily aimed at targets on West German and East German territory.

Kohl recently warned U.S. military planners against strategies that would limit a nuclear war to German soil.

"A strategy aimed at limiting the deterrent of nuclear weapons to Europe, or worse, to German soil is not acceptable to us," he told a meeting of military experts Feb. 6.

Kohl has urged that a higher priority be given to reducing the number of short-range missiles, which have a range of less than 300 miles.

The superpowers, however, have indicated that future arms control talks will first concentrate on reducing strategic, or long-range, nuclear weapons arsenals. West German government sources said Sunday that the main sticking point in Kohl's talks with U.S. officials could be the issue of chemical weapons.

Kohl and Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, who will accompany the chancellor, are expected to press Reagan anew to work toward a superpower agreement for the worldwide destruction of chemical weapons.

U.S. officials have said in recent months that such an agreement may be difficult to reach because of problems of verification. West German leaders reject that argument, saying the intermediate-range missile accord proves such problems can be worked out.

Kohl may also seek assurances that Washington will make good on a pledge not to deploy a new generation of binary chemical weapons in West Germany, government sources said.

Under an agreement reached between Kohl and Reagan during the economic summit in Tokyo in 1986, aging chemical weapons now stationed in West Germany would not be replaced.

Instead, the old weapons would be removed from West Germany and the new systems held in readiness in the United States.

There are indications, however, that the agreement may not be as firm as West German officials had hoped.

The news magazine Der Spiegel, in its latest edition, quoted U.S. Geneva arms negotiator Max Friedersdorf as saying the agreement might not extend beyond Reagan's term in office.

U.S. Gen. John Galvin, NATO's chief commander in Europe, told a West German newspaper on Saturday that he favored stationing the new weapons in Europe "where the troops are."

Paper Prints Valentines To Hostages

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Beirut's leftist daily newspaper As-Safir today published Valentine's Day greetings addressed to American hostage Terry Anderson and other foreign captives.

In a front-page report, the newspaper said:

"The senders wish their messages would reach the hostages and that the captors will see them and free the captives whose parents and friends are waiting impatiently for their release."

As-Safir said its staff joins the senders' appeal for the release of the 22 foreign captives believed held by pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem extremists. In addition, two Scandinavians were recently kidnapped in south Lebanon, but they are believed held by Palestinian gunmen who do not belong to any PLO faction.

Most of the 150 messages the newspaper received Sunday were addressed to Anderson, the longest-held foreigner. Anderson, 40, of Lorain, Ohio, is chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press. He was kidnapped March 16, 1985.

One message came from Anderson's sister, Peggy Say of Batavia, N.Y. It said, "Terry, we love you so much and we'll never give up the fight for your freedom."

In a video-taped message released by his captors on Christmas eve, Anderson said he had seen some Christmas cards sent to him printed in As-Safir and the independent newspaper An-Nahar.

Other Valentine cards were addressed to other hostages, including Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite. Waite, 48, personal emissary of the Archbishop of Canterbury, the most Rev. Robert Runcie, vanished after leaving a west Beirut hotel Jan. 20, 1987, for a meeting with the captors of Anderson and another American hostage, Thomas Sutherland of Fort Collins, Colo.

Sutherland, 55, acting dean of agriculture at the American University of Beirut, was abducted June 9, 1985.

There are eight Americans among the foreigners missing in Lebanon.

Couple Exchanges Vows On Sunday

Natalie Lynn Dilda of Farmville and Christopher Garland Haddock of Vanceboro were united in marriage Sunday at 3 p.m. in the First Baptist Church of Farmville.

Dr. Ronald Davis officiated during the double-ring ceremony. Music was provided by organist Lynn Chapplear and Claire Niver, who sang "Song of Ruth" and "Lord's Prayer."

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Daniel Dilda of Farmville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Garland Haddock of Vanceboro.

Given in marriage by her father, she wore a floor-length dress of bridal satin with silk venise lace and shifflie embroidery. The fitted bodice featured a v neckline and deep v-shaped back, both accented with scalloped shifflie lace and encrusted with seed pearls and sequins. The dress had leg-o-mutton sleeves and a torso waist. The skirt extended into a cathedral train which was adorned with lace motifs in a cameo design. Scalloped shifflie embroidery bordered the hemline of the skirt and train. The bride chose a waltz-length tiered veil of illusion with hand-rolled edges flowing from a tiara of venise lace. Motifs outlined with seed pearls and scattered crystal cascades of pearl sprays and lilies-of-the-valley accented the side of the headpiece. She carried a cascade bouquet of red sweetheart roses and white carnations accented with pearl sprays, baby's breath, ivy, and trailing red and white lace bridal ribbons.

Beth Massey of Greenville served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Cindy Cooke of Edenton, Lisa Deans of Greenville, Patricia Haddock, sister-in-law of the bridegroom from Vanceboro, and Kim Martin and Michelle White, both of Greenville.

The maid of honor and bridesmaids wore tea-length dresses of red satin designed with a sabrina neckline and short rushed sleeves. The fitted bodices peaked above the waistlines in the front. A Dior bow accented the deep V backs. The maid of honor carried three white long stemmed roses with ribbon streamers. The bridesmaids carried red and white long stemmed roses with ribbon streamers.

The grandmothers were remembered with corsages of mums.

Myrtle Cannon of Farmville acted as director of the wedding and Lisa Dwyer of Farmville attended the guest register.

Garland Haddock served as his son's best man. Ushers were Chad Clark of Black Jack, Daniel Dilda of Farmville, brother of the bride, John Dilda of Fountain, cousin of the bride, Steve Haddock of Vanceboro, brother of the bridegroom, and Scott Pollard of Greenville.

A reception was given by the bride's parents in the church fellowship hall after the ceremony. Mrs. Durwood Shreve of Rocky Mount, the bride's aunt, served the cake. Mrs. Mark Owens Jr. of Fountain and Mrs. Sigbee Dilda of Hookerton, aunts of the bride, poured punch. Mrs. Donald Johnson, Mrs.

MRS. HADDOCK

Terry Blalock and Mrs. Dalton Tyn-dall also assisted with the reception.

The bridegroom is a graduate of D.H. Conley High School and is employed at Haddock's Log Company. The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University.

After a wedding trip to the Poconos of Pennsylvania, the couple will reside in Vanceboro.

Garris-Hawkins Vows Spoken On Sunday

The Kings Cross Roads Free Will Baptist Church in Fountain was the setting for a double-ring wedding of Wendy Lynn Hawkins and Mitchell Don Garris on Sunday at 3 p.m. Their pastor, Terry Hardison, officiated.

Christie Hardison and Lori Strickland rendered the vocal program consisting of "The Wedding Prayer," "Whither Thou Goest" and "Let It Be Me." They were accompanied by Chris Pace, pianist.

The bride, escorted by her father, was given in marriage by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley A. Hawkins of Greenville.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby T. Garris Sr. of Greenville.

The bride wore a formal-length gown with a full skirt of flowing satin with Chantilly lace and English net that extended into a chapel-length train. The bodice featured a drop shoulder, flounced neckline and stand-up collar. Pearl buttons enclosed the back of the gown. The sleeves, including cuffs, were of English net.

The bride selected a walking-length veil of English net. The veil was accented with wedding pearls and flowers. She carried a bouquet of white silk roses and red silk flowers framed with lace and white ribbon tied with love knots.

Glenda Hawkins, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor and Liz Hawkins, sister of the bride, Ronda McKeel and Tina Bunting served as bridesmaids. Katrina Hawkins, sister of the bride, was the junior bridesmaid. They wore floor-length dresses of white lace with red hearts. The sleeves were of lace with red trim on the shoulder, with red ribbon bows and sashes at the waists. Their bouquets consisted of red and white silk roses with a frame of lace and red and white ribbons.

Rose Marie Peaden was the flower girl. She wore a floor-length white satin dress with a red waistline sash. She carried a basket of white English net tied with a bow of red and white ribbon, centering with red rose petals.

Bobby T. Garris, Sr., father of the bridegroom, served as best man. The groomsmen were B.T. Garris, brother of the groom, Ken Little and Joe Bunting all of Greenville. J.F. Pierce, cousin of the bridegroom, served as junior usher and Donnie Garris, also a cousin of the bridegroom, served as ring bearer.

The bride graduated from Farmville Central High School and is employed by Piggly Wiggly in Farmville. The bridegroom attended Calvary Christian Academy and is employed by Joe Cullipher Chrysler in Greenville. After a wedding trip, the couple will reside in Greenville.

Immediately following the ceremony, there was a reception in the church fellowship hall, directed by Sue Tugwell of Falkland.

On Saturday night the bridegroom entertained the wedding party with a barbecue chicken supper in the church fellowship hall. The supper was served before rehearsal.

The bride was honored Jan. 16 with a miscellaneous shower. Pauline Garris, Ercelle Garris, and Shirley Thompson were the hostesses.

On Jan. 29 a miscellaneous shower was given for the bride at the home of Faye McKeel, given by the ladies of the Fellowship Baptist Church. On Jan. 30 a miscellaneous shower was given for the bride at the home of Phyllis Hawkins by the family of the bride.

Double-Ring Ceremony Performed

Janet Marie Wright and William Durwood Cannon Jr., both of Greenville, were married Sunday at 3 p.m. in a ceremony performed at the home of the bridegroom's parents.

Annie B. Wright of Rocky Mount and the late George Albert Wright are parents of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. William D. Cannon of Greenville are parents of the bridegroom.

The Rev. Ralph A. Brown conducted the double-ring ceremony. Pianist Deborah Jackson and soloist Hazel Evans presented a program of music. Vocal selections included "Wedding Prayer" and "Wedding Song."

Virginia Helen Wright of Rocky Mount was honor attendant for her sister. Crystal Michelle Cannon of Greenville, daughter of the bridegroom, was a junior bridesmaid.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Tim Lamm of Greenville ushered.

The bride was given in marriage by her mother. She wore a candle-light tea-length formal dress of silk floss lace over satin. The sleeveless bodice was fashioned with a sweetheart neckline and the flaring skirt stemmed from the dropped waistline was adorned at the scalloped hemline with handkerchief points. The removable overblouse had a bateau neckline and long fitted sleeves. It had a scalloped edged and was enhanced with a jewel pin. She wore a halo of silk flowers accented by seed pearls attached to a two-tiered illusion veil.

Deanie Chappelle of Greenville directed the wedding, assisted by Maggie Karper of Greenville. Amy Cannon of Hillsboro, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, presided at the register.

A reception followed the ceremony. Sandy McGlohorn of Greenville poured punch and Linda Proctor and Pam Keel of Greenville served cake. Assisting were Hazel Evans of Greenville and Jecca Lanier of Kinston.

A rehearsal dinner was held at the home of the bridegroom's parents. Assisting were Amy and Chris Cannon, Jamee and Sandy McGlohorn, and Alice and Ron Yarrish.

After a wedding trip, the couple will live in Greenville.

The bride attended Nash Community College and is a staff nurse at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The bridegroom attended Pitt Community College and is employed by McKim and Creed Engineers of Greenville.

Mother Has Name Problem

DEAR ABBY: I am eight months pregnant with my first child. I'm 22 years old and confused about what name to give it. Here's my problem: I found out I was pregnant the day after my boyfriend (the baby's father) was killed in a motorcycle accident. "Boyd" was an only child.

My own father says if I have a boy he wants me to give my child our last name to carry on the family name. I have a brother who is married (no children) and in case he doesn't have a son, my father wants to make sure our family name is perpetuated.

I am stumped. I want to please my boyfriend (rest his soul), but I want also to please my father. He has promised to give my child everything it (boy or girl) needs for that child's future.

Help me decide, please. — WHICH NAME

DEAR NAME: You don't mention Boyd's family. Do they know about the baby? If not, it's only fair to tell them. That child will be their son's, too — and now that he's gone, his child may mean even more to them. You and your family should confer with Boyd's family, then do whatever you think is best for your baby. Good luck, and may God bless you both.

DEAR ABBY: As a cadet at the U.S. Air Force Academy, I am expected to live honorably by "duty, honor and country."

Now I have a question about ethics. I have a choice between $129 and honor. My dilemma is due to the fact that the Air Force Academy compensated me twice for the same private medical bill in the amount of $129.

It's such a small amount compared to the national debt. Why not keep it? — CADET, COLORADO SPRINGS

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR CADET: You can't be serious. If you are saying, "The national debt is so horrendous, another $129 won't make much difference," it's true, but that's not the issue. To compromise your "honor" for any amount of money should be contrary to your principles and, therefore, out of the question.

DEAR ABBY: In August 1969, I enrolled my daughter, Sandy, in the University of Maryland at College Park. (It happens to be my alma mater.) Although Sandy had been accepted to several other fine colleges, Maryland was her first choice.

When we arrived, I was dumbfounded to learn that my daughter had been assigned living quarters with three other girls in half of a trailer — the other half was going to be occupied by four young men!

Well, I charged up to the office of the dean in charge of housing and asked why my daughter was not assigned to one of the dorms. He told me they were all filled — then a lecture on the "advantages" of trailer life on campus followed. He stated that his own daughter was going to live in one, whereupon I said, "Mister, you can aid in the corruption of your daughter if you want to, but I'll be damned if you're going to corrupt mine!" Then I demanded that he refund my money for room and board. He did.

That afternoon we found a lovely apartment in the home of a very nice woman who offered Sandy the run of her home. (She was the only student in the house.)

Abby, when more people stand up and tell these liberal idiots that they are not going to tolerate this kind of thing in our institutions of higher learning, the moral climate will change.

If you use my letter, please use my full name. I do not write anonymous letters. — COL. BENJAMIN S. SILVER (RET.), GATESVILLE, TEXAS

Survey Indicates Europeans Back Nuke Missiles Pact

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Many West Europeans feel the United States did little to protect their interests at the summit last December, but most believe America would keep its pledge to defend them, according to a survey sponsored by the U.S. government.

The survey, conducted for the U.S. Information Agency, also found that most West Europeans support the treaty signed at the Washington summit to remove American and Soviet medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe.

However, the agency did not repeat a question from a similar poll reported last June, which yielded results embarrassing to the Reagan administration. That poll showed that a huge majority of West Europeans gave credit for the treaty to Kremlin leader Mikhail Gorbachev rather than to President Reagan.

The Senate has been conducting hearings leading up to a vote on whether to ratify the Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces treaty.

The new poll found overwhelming European support for the treaty, ranging from 97 percent in West Germany to 78 percent in France, with most registering "strong support" — 65 percent in Britain, 79 percent in Italy, 76 percent in the Netherlands and 77 percent in West Germany.

Most of those polled believe that, if the treaty is ratified and the missiles removed, the United States will remain "committed to the defense of Western Europe" and "will do whatever is necessary" to defend their countries. Fifty-nine percent felt that way in Britain, 61 percent in France, 67 percent in Italy, 57 percent in the Netherlands and 56 percent in West Germany. Belgians were divided, 46 percent agreeing and 44 percent disagreeing.

But many also said they believe the Reagan administration did little to protect West European interests at the summit.

Asked how well they thought their country's interests were protected at the summit, 17 percent of the Belgians said they thought they were protected "a great deal" or "a fair amount," the response given by 16 percent in France, 28 percent in Germany, 40 percent in Italy, 34 percent in the Netherlands and 31 percent in Britain.

Those answering "not very much" or "not at all" were 68 percent in Belgium, 61 percent in France, 65 percent in Germany, 40 percent in Italy, 55 percent in the Netherlands and 56 percent in Britain.

Traditional Reading Instruction A Target

GREENSBORO (AP) — The common practice of segregating good readers from poor ones in the classroom is being challenged by educators who say the resulting stigma may put less gifted children on a track from which they never escape.

"There is a very strong stirring toward whole-class instruction with small groups to follow up that instruction to meet individual needs," said Barbara Stoodt, an education professor at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Teachers at Wiley and Murphey Traditional schools in Greensboro are among those breaking the traditional reading method dating to the early 1940s.

The first time Linda Anderson, a first-grade teacher at Wiley School, taught children to read, she taught the best readers in one group, the average in another and the worst in a third.

"It was the only way I knew, and they encouraged it," she recalled about the experience 12 years ago.

Now they are taught together, with tutoring for children who lag. Betty Jean Foust, the state Department of Public Instruction's chief consultant for reading, said the best arrangement is a division of children into two groups with each having a mix of advanced, average and poor readers. Several studies also have found learning accelerated in mixed classes.

Nevertheless, grouping retains strong support from educators and school psychologists. They say students learn better with children of similar ability. Forcing poor students to compete with advanced students sets them up for failure.

"I support grouping, and I think we should use it," said Bill Anderson, associate superintendent for High Point schools. "But we have to be sure we're flexible and don't keep students stuck in a group. I think grouping is here to stay because it helps individualize instruction."

Juanita Johnson, reading supervisor in the Guilford system, told The Greensboro News & Record her teachers use groups. A few in higher grades team up in a grade, with one taking low-level readers, and the other taking average or advanced students.

Usually, teachers divide classes into three ability groups. Some specialized schools, such as Peeler Open in Greensboro, mix students from different grades if their abilities are similar.

Students in the lowest group typically start reading in the earliest books of a reading series and learning less complex skills. They progress through the series at the slowest pace.

While the teacher works with one reading group, the rest of the class reads silently or does skill sheets. Teachers at Wiley and Murphey abandoned such practices about four years ago when the traditional teaching program was transferred from Price School.

Although Wiley and Murphey have more low-income children than most Greensboro schools, their reading and language arts test scores were above the systemwide averages last year. Wiley's second-grade scores in language arts ranked fourth in the school system.

Wiley Principal Alma Stokes attributes the success to the teaching method.

Ms. Anderson, the first-grade teacher, says the method saves her time and keeps the entire class on task longer because students aren't left to skill sheets while the teacher works with a group.

"When I grouped, I gradually found myself putting the groups together," she said. "I usually had two big groups and one tiny group."

"Gradually I began asking, 'Why am I teaching this same story three different times?' Now I find I can save time by giving children who need it individual attention."

Ms. Anderson said her students could sense the different ability levels no matter how she tried to disguise them with cute group names such as the bluebirds, monkeys or rainbows. More importantly, once they are assigned to a slower group, that label usually shadows them through the sixth grade.

"Once a bluebird, always a blue bird; once a buzzard, always a buzzard," said Ms. Foust.

J. Lloyd Eldredge, a former principal and school superintendent and now professor of education at Brigham Young University, said Wiley's practice sounds good.

In 1983, Eldredge taught seven second-grade teachers from two different schools to teach their classes without grouping. They used a buddy system, whereby a poor reader, tracing a passage with his finger, would follow a good reader, who could read expressively and obey punctuation signals. The teachers then divided the class into mixed-ability discussion groups.

Eldredge said the experimental group progressed faster than children in ability groups. He did the same study in 1985-86 with first-graders and found that students progressed a half to a full year more than students in grouped classes.

Candidates Battling To The Wire In N.H.

Dole displayed the confidence of a candidate who has seen all the breaks go his way for the past week since trouncing the vice president in the Iowa caucuses.

"Some of us would like to see it end Tuesday here with someone winning," Dole said. He gently boasted later, "I have come a long way in the last 30 days."

Mindful that a second loss after his Iowa debacle would be devastating, Bush acknowledged his own shortcomings as a campaigner and made clear he didn't intend to give up, no matter the outcome Tuesday.

tion of suspected Arab agitators in the West Bank village of Abu Dis today, Mitzna told army radio: "Even in my worst dreams, I would never imagine such a thing even though I constantly warn commanders to expect the most awful things that could happen when soldiers find themselves all of a sudden commanding and deciding the lives of citizens."

A reporter for the Yediot Ahronot newspaper said he saw on Sunday a foot-high mound of earth where the incident allegedly took place. Reporters for the Jerusalem weekly

Kol Ha'ir said Friday they dug out a shoe from the dirt.

Army officials on Sunday said they were investigating a similar incident in the Gaza Strip refugee camp Shati. They would not elaborate.

Anti-Israeli protests in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip have entered their 10th week. According to U.N. figures, 54 Arabs have been killed by Israelis since the demonstrations began Dec. 8.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir today left on a visit to Italy after telling reporters he did not agree with U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz's statement that Arab-Israeli negotiations must involve a land-for-peace trade.

Claim Is Disputed

dent John F. Kennedy that brought the world to the brink of nuclear war.

Robertson said this morning he based his claim on testimony by Adm. William J. Crowe Jr., chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

At the League of Women Voters debate he said he obtained his information from a source in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee he declined to identify.

Robertson said, "Some information came to me that the Soviets, in violation of the so-called Khrushchev-Kennedy accords, have put some SS-4s and -5s in Cuba, which are intermediate-range nuclear weapons. And somehow, in all this brilliant negotiation that these gentlemen are so proud of, they've left that out of the treaty."

"It seems like, to me, nukes pointing at the United States are more vital to our security than nukes pointing to Europe," Robertson added.

The surprised moderator, Edwin Newman, said, "You say you have learned that Soviet SS-3s and SS-4s have been placed in Cuba?"

"Twenty-five of them, fours and fives, that's correct ... You can check it," said Robertson. "This may be a major flaw in that treaty we certainly should look into, if there are nukes in Cuba." After the debate, Marc Nuttle, Robertson's political director, said the candidate was referring to missile delivery systems, not warheads themselves. Nuttle said he didn't know how many of these systems are in Cuba and he said the information did not come directly from the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, "but that's where some of the information was compiled."

Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina, the top Republican on that committee and leading opponent of the Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces treaty, recently introduced an amendment demanding that the Soviets allow the United States to inspect Cuban missile sites.

At a committee hearing Feb. 4, Helms grilled Crowe about the possibility that the Soviets are sneaking missiles into Cuba.

Crowe said that although Cuba is under constant and intensive surveillance by U.S. satellites and other intelligence-gathering devices, he could not say with 100 percent certainty that new Soviet missile deployment would be detected.

But Crowe said U.S. surveillance is effective enough that, "We have high confidence that we know whether or not there are Soviet missiles in Cuba." He said he could not discuss the matter further in public.

Helms said, "My amendment on Cuban inspection rights would eliminate this gaping loophole."

Jim Lucier, the Republican minority staff director on the committee, said in a telephone interview that Cuba reneged on a promise the Soviets made in 1962 to allow the United States to inspect the missile sets.

"The Kennedy-Khrushchev agreement was the first INF treaty," said Lucier. "There's been repeated violations. We need to go there and look and see what's there."

Nazi

ments were found, but Morgenpost said some documents were seized during a police raid on a Hamburg dealer.

Kaehne said an earlier investigation begun in 1983 was dropped for lack of progress in 1986, but the probe was resumed last summer after authorities received an anonymous tip.

Thomas Homan, spokesman for the U.S. Mission in Berlin, could not be reached for comment on Monday, an American public holiday.

On Sunday, he confirmed a criminal investigation into missing documents was under way and said U.S. officials were cooperating with West Berlin prosecutors.

Heinz Galinski, the leader of West Berlin's Jewish community, called on American officials to provide a full accounting of the matter.

The Berlin Document Center has been run by the U.S. State Department since after World War II and contains nearly 30 million documents captured at the end of the war. It contains about 60 percent of the personnel records of Nazi storm troops and an almost complete list of Nazi Party members.

He insisted he has no "lack of passion" and declared, "My work isn't done yet."

For Robertson, the former television preacher, the missiles remark was one of a series of attention-getting statements over the past several days that provoked Jack Kemp to say in the debate, "He has said some off-the-wall things."

Robertson said in separate television interviews Sunday that he "wouldn't have hesitated to kill" Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi, and that he wants to gradually abolish the Social Security system "over 40 years, moving it into a private system."

Robertson failed to show up at a candidate's forum held at a Jewish temple in Manchester where he had been scheduled to speak just after the debate. His state campaign director, David D. Randlett, told leaders of the Temple Adath Yeshurun that he didn't know why Robertson never showed up. After hurried telephone calls Randlett said he couldn't find anyone with Robertson who could tell him.

Some 150 people had waited for an hour at the same temple where, four years ago in an emotion-packed session, Jesse Jackson tried to explain his embarrassing reference to New York as "Hymietown."

Democratic horse Bruce Babbitt, arriving as scheduled, ridiculed Robertson.

"They told me he was too busy turning the next storm out to sea," Babbitt said, provoking laughter. After talking for an hour, Babbitt said, "I'm willing to stay here till the sunrise — whether it comes at the usual time or Pat Robertson makes it a little earlier."

Robertson, the surprise second-place finisher in Iowa, was in a struggle with Kemp for third place in most New Hampshire polls. His campaign manager Mark Nuttle said after the debate that Robertson had meant to say missile delivery systems — not warheads — were in Cuba. He wouldn't give the source of his information other than that some of it had been "compiled" by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Outside the debate at St. Anselm College, about 25 "Youth for Robertson" students jeered at about 70 members of "Cure AIDS Now," a group that includes AIDS victims. The Robertson backers chanted, "It's your own fault."

Republicans Kemp and Pete du Pont, and Democrats Babbitt and Gary Hart all faced the prospect of having little choice but to drop out if they fall short Tuesday — although du Pont and Hart vowed to go on in any event. Third place seemed to be the line that determined the future for Kemp and du Pont.

In the GOP debate, Kemp and du Pont both attacked Dole as harboring a secret desire to raise taxes. Du Pont thrust a piece of paper in Dole's face and asked him to sign a no-tax-increase pledge while accusing him of pushing through higher taxes in the Senate.

Allison Wonderland As Dad, Son Finish One-Two In Daytona 500 Running

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Bobby Allison is a proud father who always wants the best for his son Davey, unless it means giving him the Daytona 500.

But with a $202,940 payoff and a chance within reach to win the world's most prestigious stock car race, it was time to teach his offspring one more valuable lesson:

The heir is still the heir apparent. "I knew on the last lap there was no way he was going to let me have the high line," the younger Allison said Sunday after finishing second to "the old man" in the $1.5-million race.

"Would you really have passed me if I had let you?" the 50-year-old father asked.

"Without a doubt," his 26-year-old son replied.

The father smiled proudly. When Davey chased Bobby on the 200th and final lap at Daytona International Speedway, the elder Allison moved to the top of the high-banked third turn and took away his son's preferred route.

Davey, who earlier had drafted smartly to help Bobby fight off Darrell Waltrip, dove low and pulled alongside his father briefly. At that point they became strangers.

"We're competitors," Bobby said after winning the race for the third time in his 25-year career. "We'll go out there and rub fenders."

Less than a mile later Bobby's Buick crossed the finish line first, leading him to Victory Lane for the 84th time in a Winston Cup event. Davey, NASCAR rookie of the year in 1987, was 2 1/2 car-lengths behind in his Ford.

"I didn't think of him as my dad until the checkered flag fell," Davey said.

For both it was fulfillment of a dream. Bobby is coming off three bad years during which he got just two winner's checks amid talk that age was taking its toll.

"I guess I'm a late bloomer," he said with a laugh.

Davey, who won twice last year, an unprecedented feat for a NASCAR rookie, had been looking forward to a last-lap shootout with his father.

"I used to dream about a one-two finish with my dad," he said. "I just hoped it was going to be the other way around."

While the Allison's realized their dreams, Waltrip again failed to win the one big prize that has eluded him for 16 years.

"I'm heartbroken," he said as he fought back tears. "We had the best car. Right there at the end it just wouldn't go."

Waltrip, who led six times for 69 laps, fell out of contention with 15 laps remaining. Ignition problems were believed to have been the reason.

Prior to that, his Chevrolet was the most impressive car in the race. A round of pit stops with about 60 laps remaining had taken him from a contending position to 10th place.

In a span of just two laps, during which he drafted with Buddy Baker, Waltrip blew by the field and moved all the way to the front as many in a crowd of 135,000 screamed in astonishment.

"It was the best car I've had in my whole life, bar none," he said.

Waltrip, who along with Allison had won one of two qualifying races on Thursday, steadily lost ground and finished 11th.

"I hated to sit there and see all those cars I'd outrun all day go by me, but I couldn't do anything about it," he said.

Waltrip's problem paled in comparison to that of seven-time race winner Richard Petty.

He lost control of his Pontiac coming out the fourth turn on the 106th lap, was hit from behind by Phil Barkdoll, flipped over several times, damaged a section of fencing and was hit hard by Brett Bodine after the car returned to the track.

Debris from the car was strewn about the track in an accident that eventually involved six cars. Petty escaped the horrible scene with a bruised right ankle and a mild concussion. But his sense of humor remained intact.

"Daytona," he told a crewman who asked him if he knew where he was. "But where am I on the track?"

Petty was only one of the former winners of the race who had a bad day.

Three-time champion Cale Yarborough crashed hard into the wall on turn four and was eliminated on the 48th lap. Defending champion Bill Elliott finished 12th and was never a factor. A.J. Foyt was involved in the Petty crash.

Phil Parsons, Neil Bonnett and Terry Labonte ran strong throughout, finishing third through fifth, respectively. Polesitter Ken Schrader was sixth, followed by Rusty Wallace, Sterling Marlin, former champion Baker, two-time defending Winston Cup champion Dale Earnhardt and Waltrip.

The race was the first run under NASCAR's new carburetor restriction rule that limited Schrader's qualifying speed to 193.823 mph — nearly 17 mph slower than that of Elliott last year.

It also equalized the field, with one of the most competitive 500 races in years.

It was the slowest Daytona 500 since 1960, with Allison averaging just 137.531 mph. Much of that was due to Petty's accident, which slowed the field for 21 laps and 45 minutes while the fence was repaired. No spectators were injured in the mishap.

Petty Escapes Injury In Spectacular Daytona Crash

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Richard Petty added another memorable chapter to his career at Daytona International Speedway, but it's one he would probably rather forget.

Petty, who has won the Daytona 500 a record seven times, lost control of his Pontiac midway through Sunday's 30th annual race, and it was hit by four other cars. Petty's car flipped over, spun around on its nose, hit the wall and barrel-rolled seven times before landing upright.

No one was seriously hurt in the spectacular wreck. Petty, 50, was treated at a Daytona Beach hospital for a bruised ankle and slight concussion and released.

"If there was a long enough caution flag, maybe we could get back and finish the race," Petty told a nurse before he was released to return to his home in Level Cross, N.C.

"Richard's OK," said his wife, Linda. "I guess the good Lord looks out for you."

The wreck occurred coming out of turn four of the oval after Petty's car suddenly turned toward the infield. Cars driven by Phil Barkdoll, A.J. Foyt, Brett Bodine and Eddie Bierschwale smashed the left side of Petty's car.

"The back end jumped out from under him, it looked like," Foyt said. "The car jumped sideways, and he came down across the traffic. When it did I hit him real hard on the left front."

Barkdoll's Ford hit Petty's car in the left rear.

"Then I looked in the mirror and he was upside down," Barkdoll said. "I was more worried about him than I was myself."

Petty's two front tires flew off simultaneously, and other debris scattered on the track.

"By the time I came off the fourth turn, it was a junkyard out there," Bodine said. "It was unfortunate I hit him again, because he'd already taken a bunch of licks."

Petty's crew chief, Dale Inman, said the driver remained conscious but had the wind knocked out of him.

"I reached him before the ambulance did," Inman said. "I asked him how he was and held my breath."

"He said, 'I'll talk to you when I get my breath.' He knew he was in Daytona, but he wanted to know where he wound up on the track."

Bierschwale was able to continue, as was Alan Kulwicki. His Ford hit the wall when he tried to avoid the wreckage.

Petty started 34th, finished 34th and was never in contention. The mishap was his third of the week at the speedway, and Inman said the car could have been more stable.

"We'd run some pretty good laps," Inman said. "He hadn't complained about it too much. He said it was loose with (Barkdoll's) Ford behind him, but other than that it wasn't too bad."

Inman was asked if the accident might push Petty toward retirement.

"It's up to him. He says he enjoys it. We'll have to see what happens."

Lady Bucs End Home Season

East Carolina's Lady Pirates close out their home season tonight, seeking to win their third Colonial Athletic Association game of the year.

The Lady Pirates will be entertaining American University in a game that gets underway at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

American comes into the game with a 9-11 record, 5-3 in the CAA after having defeated UNC-Wilmington on Saturday, 68-65. East Carolina is 8-15 overall.

The Pirates will honor senior Alma Bethea, who will be playing her final game on her home court.

The Pirates will be trying to snap a four-game losing streak with a win. Another loss would match the school record for the most defeats in a single season. East Carolina has three more road games to go, all in the league, against Richmond, William & Mary and UNC-Wilmington. The 1983-84 team lost 16 games and, at 13-16, was the last ECU team to have a losing season.

The Lady Pirate coach Pat Pierson, will be looking for her 175th career victory in the contest.

American is led by 6-1 senior forward Beth Shearer, averaging 20.4 points and 7.3 rebounds a game. Center Kia Cooper, 6-2, is hitting 11.1 points a game and pulling a team-high 7.6 rebounds per game.

Other starters are 6-0 junior forward Shauna Walden (7.3 ppg); 5-8 senior guard Janine Lorimer (8.8 ppg); and 5-6 sophomore guard Danielle Blackburn (5.3 ppg).

Carolina Rallies, Nips Virginia By 64-58 Score

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — A comeback victory over Virginia gave No. 5 North Carolina a share of the Atlantic Coast Conference lead once again, but left several Tar Heels talking about failure to play up to their potential.

"I think that's what's exciting about this year's team," junior guard Jeff Lebo said. "We're nowhere near where we can be. We've got a lot we can improve on."

After Virginia built a 17-point advantage in the first half Sunday, North Carolina rallied after intermission, took the lead for good on Lebo's 16-foot jumper from the wing with 1:34 remaining, and went on to a 64-58 victory.

The outcome left North Carolina at 18-3 overall and 7-2 in the ACC, tied with Duke for the conference lead. Virginia dropped to 12-12 and 4-4.

"We got the ball on the block, but we didn't score a high percentage of the time," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith.

North Carolina shot 40 percent for the game, but only 36 percent in the first half. Virginia, meantime, hit its first four 3-point attempts and raced to a 26-9 lead.

The Cavaliers finished the first half hitting 54.2 percent of their shots, including a 6-of-12 performance from 3-point range, and led 33-25.

"We were very upbeat at halftime," Virginia Coach Terry Holland said. "We were doing what we wanted to do offensively and defensively."

Smith said he was "worried at the half that our players would be satisfied. At a TV timeout, when we were down 26-9, I told them we wanted to cut it to 10 by the half. With five minutes left we were only down by seven."

With 15 minutes left in the game, Virginia frontline starters Mel Kennedy and Bill Batts each had picked up their fourth fouls, and North Carolina worked its way back.

Lebo's 3-point goal at the 9:15 mark tied the score at 46, and it was knotted three more times before Lebo's 16-footer put the Tar Heels ahead to stay at 58-56.

Scott Williams boosted the margin to 60-56 on a dunk with 25 seconds left. After Virginia's John Johnson drove for an uncontested layup, the Cavaliers fouled Lebo with 11 seconds remaining. He made both foul shots to put the Tar Heels up 62-58.

Ranzino Smith closed the scoring by hitting both ends of a one-and-one with five seconds remaining after the Cavaliers had missed a field-goal try.

North Carolina outscored Virginia 12-2 in the final 4:05, and Holland said fatigue was a factor.

"They gave it all they had, and we couldn't have asked for anything more from them," he said. "We got a little tired down the stretch, and of course four fouls on Mel Kennedy and Bill Batts didn't help."

North Carolina also got 16 points from J.R. Reid and 10 from Smith.

Kobe Gets CAA Honor

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — East Carolina's Rick Kobe has been selected as the Colonial Athletic Association's men's Coach of the Year in swimming.

The selection was made Saturday night at the conclusion of the league's championship meet held at the U.S. Naval Academy.

Kobe, a six year veteran at East Carolina, had only a 6-6 dual meet record this year, but went up against some of the toughest competition in ECU history. His overall record for men is 43-25, and he has a combined men's and women's record of 97-46.

Kobe's men captured second place in the CAA meet this year while the women were third. The men actually outswam the opposition but lost the title when they were heavily outscored in diving.

Soviet Student Wins First Gold

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — It was a day of elegance on the ice, poetry on the slopes and deep, painful sadness for an American who tried too hard.

Frigid, 98 mph winds knocked out the prestigious downhill on the first full day of competition at the Winter Olympics on Sunday, but fans were treated to several shimmering performances before disaster struck in the evening. They saw the clean, sweet style of the top-seeded Swedish hockey team and the soaring grace of "Flying Finn" Matti Nykanen in the ski jump. They saw a young Soviet student, Vida Ventsene, win the first gold medal of the Games in the women's 10-kilometer cross-country ski race and ruin the comeback of Finland's 1984 triple gold medalist, Marja-Liisa Kirvesniemi.

Then they gathered at the new speed skating arena, hoping to see a world record fall, and got what they wanted, a 36.45-second sprint by East German Jens-Uwe Mey.

What they also saw, however, was a tragedy played out on an Olympic stage, death mingled with defeat for a young man who had been favored to win.

Dan Jansen wore a stunned, vacant look on his face, his watery eyes unfocused, after rising from a heart-tugging fall on the first turn of the 500-meter race.

The world sprint champion had hoped to give the United States its first medal of the Winter Olympics on Sunday. He wanted desperately to honor a sister who had died of leukemia eight hours before and for whom he, and the other U.S. speed skaters, had dedicated their efforts.

There was no shame in losing, no loss of honor, but it hurt more because of the way it happened.

Jansen, paired with Japan's Yasushi Kuroiwa in the second race of the event, showed his overanxiousness first with a false start. They lined up again and broke cleanly. Jansen, clad head to toe in the skintight red and blue U.S. uniform that resembles a Spiderman outfit, spurred to the lead with giant, powerful strides.

Coming around the first turn, however, Jansen's left skate suddenly gave way and he sprawled on the ice, crashing hard into mats alongside the track and taking out Kuroiwa with his outstretched legs.

Jansen rose quickly, as if he thought the race could still go on. When he realized it was over, he threw his arms in the air, pulled back his hood, then bent over and buried his face in his hands. He stood there for the longest moment and finally straightened up, putting his hands on his head in a gesture of futility and disbelief.

"As soon as he fell, my heart sank," said Erik Henriksen, the U.S. team captain. "I'm not used to seeing so many bad things happen in a short period of time — at a time that's supposed to be as wonderful as the Olympics."

Jansen said he wasn't sure what happened.

"I wasn't gripping the ice really well," he said. "It felt like it slipped out from under me and the next thing I knew I was in the mats. ... I felt the best I ever felt the last two weeks. Maybe it just wasn't meant to be."

Jansen, 22, had health problems of his own last year, missing much of the season after suffering mononucleosis, but he came back strong, winning the world sprint title last weekend at home in West Allis, Wis.

His sister, Jane Beres, 27, a mother of three who found out 13 months ago she had leukemia, was too sick to accompany him to Calgary. Jansen spoke to her early Sunday, four hours before she died, and hoped she could watch him win a gold medal on television.

She couldn't hold the telephone so their parents held it for her.

"She could understand me, but she couldn't talk back," he said. He asked his brother Mike to give her a kiss for him.

Jane died at 9:57 a.m. Eight hours later, Jansen went out to compete, he said, "because that's what Jane would have wanted."

He will have another race in the 1,000, another chance for gold, then will return home for a funeral next Saturday that was purposely delayed until after his events are over.

"It's very important," he said of his next race. "My family doesn't want me to go home now. And I know Jane wouldn't want that."

A siren sounds at the Saddledome each time a hockey team scores a goal, followed by a little music and a cowboy figure on the scoreboard who leads the crowd in a loud "Yah-hoo."

There was plenty of yahooping as Sweden routed France, seeded last among the 12 teams in the competition, 13-2 in an opening round game.

Sweden passed with precision, controlled the puck most of the game and fired 44 shots on goal with machine-gun rapidity at bewildered French goalie Pat Foliot. In one stretch, Sweden scored eight goals in a row.

Although it was hardly an even matchup, and the French went into the game certain they would lose, it provided fans with a chance to see a different brand of hockey than they're used to seeing in the National Hockey League.

By contrast, fourth-seeded Canada beat Poland 1-0 in a more-hitting, much less artistic manner. Switzerland upset Finland 2-1 in the other game Sunday night.

The No. 7 U.S. team, which beat No. 11 Austria 10-6 on Saturday, goes tonight against No. 3 Czechoslovakia, which was upset by West Germany on Saturday, 2-1. If the Americans beat the Czechoslovaks and win one of their next three games they would assure themselves of a berth in the medal round.

In another elegant exhibition on ice, albeit more delicate, two-time world champions Ekaterina Gordeeva and Sergei Grinkov of the Soviet Union easily won the pairs figure skating short program, worth almost 30 percent of the total score.

Second place also went to the Soviets, 1984 Olympic champions Elena Valova and Oleg Vasiliev. The United States took third with Jill Watson and Peter Oppegard, and fourth with Gillian Wachsmann and Todd Waggoner.

In the 70-meter ski jump, Nykanen soared the same 294 feet on each of two attempts to win his third Olympic medal and the first men's gold in this year's games. Once suspended after a run-in with a coach and known as a barroom brawler, Nykanen harnessed his aggressiveness in flights of beauty.

After he landed amid shouts from the crowd, he skied to a stop, pumped his left fist in the air, took off his skis and held them triumphantly over his head.

"I wasn't really surprised because I have had a series of very good results this year and I was confident," said Nykanen, a silver medalist at 70 meters and winn0 medals in the 1984 Winter Games.

Third Place For U.S.

First Day's Competition Dismal One For America

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — The best they did in women's 10-kilometer cross-country skiing was 36th.

The best they did at the 70-meter ski jump was 18th.

The best they did at the men's 500-meter speed skating was eighth.

Sunday was not a good day for American Olympians. The disappointments ranged from bitter in speed skating, traditionally a strong U.S. sport, to unsurprising in the ski jumping and cross-country skiing, events in which Americans never have won a medal.

Even in competition where little hope was held that Americans could win more than half a dozen discs of gold, silver or bronze, performances in the first day of individual events indicated they may live down to expectations.

One of the best U.S. hopes for a medal this year was in the 500-meter speed skating, with Dan Jansen of West Allis, Wis., and Nick Thometz of Minnetonka, Minn., who finished fourth and fifth in Sarajevo in 1984.

But Jansen, already stricken by his sister's death from leukemia earlier Sunday, fell on the first turn and was disqualified.

Thometz finished eighth, 71-hundredths of a second behind gold medalist Jens-Uwe Mey of East Germany. Mey's time of 36.45 seconds broke Thometz's world record of 36.55.

Erik Henriksen of Champaign, Ill., was 15th, more than a second off the pace, and Martin Pierce of St. Francis, Wis., was 22nd, 1.31 seconds behind Mey.

American men have won 12 medals, including five golds, since the 500-meter race began in the 1924 Winter Games.

The United States has never had even a whiff of a medal in the 70-meter ski jump, an Olympic event since 1964. Sunday was no different.

The best American was Mark Konopacke of Kingsford, Mich., 18th with 188.2 points, after two jumps. His first jump had him in 14th place. The competition was won by Matti Nykanen of Finland with 229.1 points.

Michael Holland of Norwich, Vt., finished 33rd, Dennis McGrane of Littleton, Ohio, was 43rd, and Rick Mewborn of Steamboat Springs, Colo., ended 54th out of 58 jumpers.

Another event in which little was expected of the U.S. team was the women's 10-kilometer cross-country race. The Americans have not won a medal, or finished as high as eighth, since the event began in 1952 Winter Games.

The top finisher Sunday was Leslie Krichko of Portland, Ore., 36th among 51 finishers. Her time of 33:25.1 was more than three minutes slower than gold medalist Vida Ventsene of the Soviet Union.

Other American finishes were 40th by Dorcas Denhartog of Lebanon, N.H., 41st by Nancy Fiddler of Crowley Lake, Calif., and 45th by Leslie Thompson of Stowe, Vt.

The race was the first this season at the international level for the Americans, and Lee Todd, a U.S. coach, predicted better results in Wednesday's 5-kilometer race.

"You could tell the nerves were out there," Todd said after consoling his disappointed racers. "They're not thrilled. They won't be nervous next time. They're going to ski better."

There were some bright spots in pairs figure skating and the one-man luge.

Americans Jill Watson and Peter Oppegard, ranked third in the world, finished third in the short program, a segment of the competition worth 28.5 percent of the total score.

"It's nice to get the short program over with when you know you have to hit every one of those elements," Oppegard said.

The long program, when medals are presented, will be held Tuesday night.

The United States also got a surprise fourth-place from Gillian Wachsmann and Todd Waggoner. Their snappy routine, skated to Ukrainian folk music, earned a standing ovation from the crowd at the Stampede Corral.

Wachsmann and Waggoner, who interrupted Watson-Oppegard's run of national titles by winning the U.S. crown in 1986, credited the Canadian fans with helping their performance.

"We really tried to get it up emotionally and have everyone participate," Waggoner said.

"The crowd was terrific and it really gave us a lift," Wachsmann added.

Also encouraging was the 11th place standing of Frank Masley, 27, of Newark, Del., after the first two luge runs. The final two runs are scheduled for Monday.

Masley trailed leader Jens Mueller of East Germany by nearly eight-tenths of a second, a lifetime in the split-second-finish world of luge.

But Masley said he would be satisfied to crack the top 10 in another Olympic event the Americans have never come close to winning. It's been part of the Winter Games since 1964.

"I'm relaxed, which is important for my last two runs tomorrow," Masley said. "I had very good starts and did my best on top, but I lost a little on the bottom. I'm missing two-tenths of a second for each run at the end. I need to clean that up to place in the top 10, which is my goal."

Temple Holds #1; Marymount On List

Temple held onto the No. 1 position in the Associated Press college basketball poll today, while Loyola Marymount, the nation's highest-scoring team, made its first-ever appearance in the rankings at No. 20.

The Owls, 20-1, received 28 first-place votes and 1,141 points from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters and the next three teams — Purdue, Arizona and Oklahoma — remained the same from last week, a rarity in this season of parity in college basketball.

Temple won both its games last week, beating then-No. 20 Villanova in an intra-Philadelphia matchup and George Washington in an Atlantic 10 Conference game Sunday.

The loss to Temple, coupled with a loss to then-No. 5 Pittsburgh, knocked Villanova from the poll. Kansas State, which lost twice, and Indiana, which split two games, also fell from the poll.

In addition to Loyola, 20-3 and averaging 108.4 points per game, Missouri, which was ranked for five weeks from the start of the season, came in at 15th and Georgetown returned to the poll at No. 18 after a one-week absence.

Purdue, 20-2, received 12 first-place votes and 1,118 points, 32 more than Arizona, 23-2, which got 10 first-place votes.

Oklahoma, the nation's No. 2 scoring team, also received 10 first-place votes and finished with 1,059 points.

North Carolina, 18-3, improved one spot to fifth with 879 points, 19 more than Atlantic Coast Conference foe Duke, which was tied for eighth last week.

Brigham Young, the team Duke was tied with, was seventh with 825 points, followed by Pittsburgh, which fell three places after splitting games with ranked teams last week. The Panthers, 17-3, lost to then-No. 11 Syracuse and beat Villanova and received 777 points.

Kentucky moved up one place from last week with 746, while Michigan rounded out the Top Ten with 674 points.

Nevada-Las Vegas, which had been ranked seventh, fell to 11th after losing to Missouri on Saturday.

The remainder of the Second Ten was Syracuse, Iowa, North Carolina State, Missouri, Vanderbilt, Bradley, Georgetown, Wyoming and Loyola.

Last week's Second Ten was Syracuse, Michigan, Iowa, Kansas State, Bradley, North Carolina State, Vanderbilt, Wyoming, Indiana and Villanova.

Missouri, which was eighth in the preseason poll, also beat Big Eight rivals Kansas State and Nebraska in addition to the victory over Nevada-Las Vegas.

Georgetown, which fell from the poll for the only time this season last week, quickly returned with Big East victories over Seton Hall and Syracuse.

Loyola, coached by former NBA coach Paul Westhead, improved its scoring average with victories over Santa Clara, 108-89, and San Francisco, 118-109. The Lions reached the 20-victory mark for the first time since the 1960-61 season.

Kansas State also lost to Oklahoma last week as the Wildcats fell from the top of the Big Eight.

Indiana, which had returned to the poll last week after a three-week absence, beat Northwestern to avenge an earlier loss to the Wildcats but the Hoosiers were soundly beaten by Michigan, 92-72.

Sheehan Wins Again

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — There's nothing like a trip to the Sarasota Classic to perk up Patty Sheehan's golf game.

Sheehan shot a 5-under-par 67 Sunday to turn a two-shot deficit at the start of the round into a three-shot victory — her 18th on the LPGA Tour but first in more than a year.

It was also her third consecutive victory at the Sarasota Classic. She won in 1985 and 1986 but skipped the event last year to attend a function honoring her father in Europe. She was fined for not defending her title by LPGA Commissioner John Laupheimer.

"I was fined for conduct unbecoming a professional golfer," Sheehan said. "I won't tell you the amount of the fine. But this (the first-place check) will pay for it."

She said the 13th hole proved to be the turning point.

Washington Wins Coastal Wrestling

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley's Vikings, winners of the regular season championship, finished in third place in the Coastal Conference wrestling tournament Saturday night, placing in each of the 13 weight classes. Havelock won the event with 158 points while West Carteret took second with 134½. Conley was third with 123½ followed by Washington with 122 and West Craven with 23.

Conley had only one champion, Jacinto Moore, who won at 119 pounds. The Vikings added four seconds, Josh Trought (112), Derrick Gardner (135), Kevin Daniels (140), and Jason Hamby (152).

Six Vikes took thirds. They included Steve Allen (103), Jason Adams (130), Jon Middleton (160), Larry Wilson (171), Robbie Little (189) and Kevin Moye (Heavyweight). Two others won fourths, B.J. Southerland (125) and Hollis Gunn (145).

Washington's Pam Pack had three first place winners along with three seconds, a third and three fourths.

Walt Gerrard (145), James Boyd (152) and Larry Harris (189) all took home championships for the Pam Pack.

Havelock entered the tournament ranked seventh in the state among 3-A schools. The tournament also had three all-state performers from last year returning and all three won championships, Washington's Harris, the defending state champ; West Carteret's Travis Day, the runner-up at 122 last year; and Dennis Fleming of Havelock, the defending state champ at 135.

The teams return to action in the 3-A Eastern Regionals at East Wake on Friday and Saturday.

Summary of championship and consolation matches:

Rose Second In Big East Wrestling

RED OAK — Rose High School had three individual champions, but Rocky Mount won the overall team championship at the Big East Conference wrestling tournament at Northern Nash Saturday.

Rocky Mount finished the meet with 169 points while Rose was second with 132. Northern Nash took third with 126 followed by Northeastern with 96, Hunt with 94, Beddingfield with 49½ and Fike with 47.

Mike House at 145, Ralph Love at 152 and Jeff House at 189 all captured championships in the meet. Rose also had two second place finishes a third and three fourths, placing in nine of the 13 weight classes.

The Rampants lost a chance at another title — and possibly the championship — when 140-pounder Tony Evans failed to make weight. Evans was the top seed for the weight class.

The Rampants return to action on Friday at the Eastern Regionals at Durham Jordan.

Summary of Rose placers:

119 — Thomas Leahy (R) lost to Marshall (NE), 9-5, to finish fourth.
125 — Mo Dar (R) defeated Haney (B), 4-2, to finish third.
130 — David Best (R) lost to Neal (NN), 7-2, to finish fourth.
135 — Malcolm Smith (R) lost to McCallop (RM), 10-2, to finish fourth.

145 — Mike House (R) d. Smith (F), 10-1, to win championship.
152 — Ralph Love (R) tp. Brake (NN), 17-2, to win championship.
160 — Milton Leathers (R) lost to Perry (RM), 6-2, to finish second.
171 — Gerald Okoth (R) lost to Ward (NE), 5-2, to finish second.
189 — Jeff House (R) d. Reid (RM), 8-1, to win championship.

Rose Captures Swimming Meets

Rose High School's swimming teams swept a pair of meets Saturday at Minges Natatorium.

The Rampants boys took first in their meet, with 156 points. Northeastern finished second with 77, followed by Kinston with 72, Eastern Wayne with 61 and Goldsboro with 24.

The Ramettes ended up with 124 points to win their meet while Northeastern was second with 79, Goldsboro third with 64, followed by Eastern Wayne with 37 and Kinston with 36. Beddingfield also had one entrant in one event.

Julie Song and Kathryn Barnhill were double winners for the Ramettes. Song took the 50 and 100 freestyle events while Barnhill won the 100 butterfly and the 500 freestyle. Both also swam a leg on the winning 200 medley relay team.

The meet closed out the regular season for Rose. The girls end up with a 16-4 record while the boys are 17-3. Both teams return to action on Friday and Saturday at the Eastern Regionals at Minges.

Jones Wins Jr. High Wrestling

HOLLYWOOD — Washington's P.S. Jones Junior High School captured first place in the Down East Junior High School Conference wrestling tournament at D.H. Conley Saturday.

Washington finished with 190 points while hosting A.G. Cox was second with 152½. Dixon took third with 127½, followed by New Bern McDonald at 110, Williamston at 88, Tabernacle at 72, Northwoods Park at 47 and West Craven at 22.

Cox had only one champion in the meet, K.D. Anderson, who won at 122 pounds. Williamston also had one, Travis Rasco at 115 pounds.

Washington landed six titles, including Jason Woolard at 91, Ray Dixon at 101, George Bailey at 108, James Blackledge at 135, Mark Rios at 141 and Glenn Richards at 158.

Black Jack Defeats Gum Swamp

Black Jack defeated Gum Swamp, 33-32, in the TAA Church League Saturday.

Nikki Adams led Black Jack with 14 points while Melody Hardy added nine. Amy Heath led Gum Swamp with 26.

Monzon Charged In Wife's Death

MAR DEL PLATA, Argentina (AP) — Former world champion boxer Carlos Monzon was charged Sunday with killing his estranged wife during an early morning fight in which she fell to her death from the balcony of an apartment, police said.

Monzon, world middleweight champion from 1970 until retiring in 1977, suffered two broken ribs and a broken clavicle during the fight and was hospitalized in this beach resort 250 miles south of Buenos Aires, Interzonal Hospital authorities said.

Police said Alicia Muniz, the third wife of Monzon, was pronounced dead at the scene of the fight, which awakened neighbors. The incident occurred at an apartment where Muniz, a part-time actress, was staying with television actor Adrian Martel, police said.

Wadkins Takes Hawaiian

HONOLULU, Hawaii (AP) — Lanny Wadkins was where he wanted to be, in the thick of it.

"Sure we play golf for a living. Making money is important.

"But we all want to win golf tournaments. That's what it's all about, getting in the heat," Wadkins said.

Wadkins, given some breathing room by Tom Watson's 4-putt collapse, turned back Richard Zokol's back-nine challenge and scored a one-stroke victory Sunday in the Hawaiian Open.

"That's what we stand out there and beat balls for, what we practice for, what we work for," Wadkins said. "It's fun. That's the fun of the whole thing. You get into the middle of it and it's gut-check time. You've got to see if you can do it one more time."

He did.

"That's my 17th (victory in an 18-season career) and I'm proud of it," said Wadkins, a former PGA champion who collected $108,000 from the total purse of $600,000 for his 271 winning total, 17 shots under par.

Wadkins, 38, won it with a second consecutive 6-under-par 66 in wind and occasional showers on the Waialae Country Club course.

Zokol, the Canadian who led through three rounds, finished one shot back at 271 when his chip for an eagle — that would have tied it — stopped one foot short of the cup on the 18th.

"It was right on line, just a little short," said Zokol, who had a 70 and won $64,800 for the best finish of his 7-year career on the American Tour.

"I'm not at all disappointed," he said. "I'm very satisfied with the way I played. That's the best I've ever played in my life in that situation."

"It isn't like I choked my heart out.

I played pretty well. Lanny just played better. He deserved to win it," Zokol said.

The way was made easier when Watson, a single stroke back going to the par-4 10th, took himself out of it. He clipped a palm tree and took three to reach the green. Then Watson, in his peak years known as the most deadly putter in the game, 4-putted from 30-35 feet.

"He wanted to make the first one. You could tell. He didn't want to drop another shot," Wadkins said.

"It looked like it was going in. But when it missed, you could tell it hurt him. I wasn't surprised when he missed the next one. But I was surprised when he missed the one after that."

Rookie John Huston came on with a 66 and was third at 274. He was followed by Gene Sauers, 69-275, and South African Fulton Allem, 70-276.

Watson, with a final-round 72, finished at 277, six strokes back and tied with Loren Roberts and Bob Eastwood. Roberts had a 73 and Eastwood shot a 66.

Navy Captures Swimming Titles

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Hosting Navy captured both the men's and women's championships in the Colonial Athletic Association's swimming and diving meet which concluded Saturday night.

East Carolina's men actually won more swimming events than any other team in the meet, but was outscored by over 100 point in the diving event, and that spelled the difference.

Navy finished the men's meet with 625 points while East Carolina was a close second with 610. James Madison took third with 598½, followed Richmond at 295, American at 284, UNC-Wilmington at 274½ and William & Mary at 266½.

East Carolina added one first in Saturday's men's competition, as John Farrell won the 200-yard backstroke in 1:54.50. His time set new CAA, ECU and ECU freshman records.

In the women's meet, Navy finished first with 745 points, while JMU was second with 708. East Carolina took third with 597, followed by William & Mary with 570, UNCW with 294½, Richmond with 262 and American with 172½.

East Carolina's men won 11 events overall, setting 10 new varsity records, eight colonial marks and five freshman records.

"I thought it was an outstanding meet for East Carolina," Coach Rick Kobe said. "Everyone here swam their best times and that's what we have worked for all year. I thought the men actually outswam everyone and the women, with only 11 swimmers, were just short on numbers."

Raymond Kennedy took first place in the 100 freestyle in a time of 57.93 during Friday's action. That event was omitted from earlier reports on the meet.

The women had two winners on Saturday as Meredith Bridgers won the 200-yard breaststroke in 2:23.27, another CAA, ECU and freshman record, and Sherry Campbell won the 3-meter diving.

Bridgers and Patti Walsh, who set five ECU and 3 CAA records, were multiple winners for the women.

East Carolina returns to action on Feb. 25 at the National Independent's meet, to be held at the University of South Carolina. The Pirates have qualified 14 men and seven women for the meet.

Following are Saturday's ECU placing in the CAA championships:

Dawson Gets Little Less

CHICAGO (AP) — Andre Dawson must swallow his pride again this year, but he'll get more than twice as much money for doing it.

The Cubs outfielder, who signed a blank contract last season in order to switch teams, lost his bid Sunday for the first $2 million arbitration salary and was awarded $1,850,000 by arbitrator Stephen Goldberg.

"I think Dawson is a terrific athlete and he had a spectacular season," Goldberg said, "but weighing all the considerations, which I must under the guidelines, I just could not see my way clear to give him the amount demanded in this case."

Dawson earned $700,000 last year for the Cubs, including $200,000 in bonuses. The $1,150,000 raise is the largest ever in arbitration, surpassing the $975,000 jump last year for Jack Morris, who also won a salary of $1,850,000. That is the second-highest salary in arbitration, behind the $1,975,000 won last year by Don Mattingly of the New York Yankees.

"They won the first round, but I'll be back at them again next year," Dawson said Sunday. Unless he is made a free agent in the collusion grievance, Dawson and the Cubs will most likely be in arbitration again next winter.

"I don't think we could have presented a case any better than we did," Dawson said. "I respect the arbitrator's ruling."

Dawson, 33, batted .287 last season with a league-leading 49 homers and a league-leading 137 runs batted in, winning Most Valuable Player on a last-place team.

He will be the second-highest paid Cub behind Rick Sutcliffe ($2,070,000), and will be tied with Keith Hernandez of the New York Mets as the 13th-highest paid player in baseball. Dawson admitted that $1,850,000 is "a lot of money," but he said he's disappointed.

"It is just the fact that you lost — that's the part that you have to deal with," he said.

Goldberg, a Northwestern University law professor, announced his decision two days after taking four hours of testimony from Dawson, his agent, Dick Moss, and Don Grenesko, vice president of the Cubs.

Frank Casey, an attorney for Morgan, Lewis and Bockius, a Washington law firm that represents the owner's Player Relations Committee, raised his record to 9-1 in arbitration cases.

It was the first major defeat for Moss, the former general counsel of the Major League Baseball Players Association, who won the first arbitration case in 1974 and won the first $1 million case in 1983 for Fernando Valenzuela.

"I'm duly embarrassed," Moss said. "Also shocked and disappointed. I'm trying to dance a line between being shocked and being a good loser."

Grenesko, who rejected Dawson's demands for a three- or four-year contract, said he was relieved at the decision.

When the Los Angeles Lakers beat the Boston Celtics, it always seemed to be someone else besides Byron Scott who did the job.

Until Sunday, that is.

Scott averaged just 10.8 points when Los Angeles defeated Boston in the NBA finals last spring, and he scored a total of only 27 points in the last four games of the series.

But this time, Scott played the key role, hitting 15 of 19 shots and scoring a career-high 38 points as the Lakers defeated the Celtics 115-106.

"If he wanted to dispel the rumors that he couldn't play against Boston, it's over," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "He had 38 and was in Danny Ainge's face all day."

"I think finally everybody can quit writing all that stuff about Byron not playing well against Boston," said

Magic Johnson

Magic Johnson, who had 22 points and 14 assists. "A lot of people have taken a lot of shots at him, and maybe deservedly so. I think all that can stop now."

Scott, accustomed to playing a secondary role, wasn't about to let one game in the spotlight turn his head.

"It was just another game in an 82-game regular season," Scott said. "Everybody knows when we play Boston, it's more intense, a playoff-level game, but it's still just one more game ... I can't relax and think I've arrived just because of one good game against Boston."

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was New Jersey 109, Philadelphia 105; Houston 115, Portland 103; Denver 107, Utah 93; and Dallas 110, Los Angeles Clippers 100.

The Lakers won despite being outscored 36-12 in the third quarter, turning a 64-44 halftime lead into an

80-76 deficit

going into the fourth period.

Riley said he'd never seen a turnaround like that against the Lakers.

"If we have a 20-point lead, we might give up 12 or 14, but to have a 24-point swing is incredible," he said. "It's a testimony to the Celtics and how they don't give up. We were terminal in the third quarter, had no motion at all, and we got caught."

Kevin McHale had 14 of his 24 points in the period for Boston and the Celtics scored the last 10 points of the quarter for an 80-76 lead.

Ainge hit a 3-pointer with 1:16 left that cut the Lakers' lead to 76-75. The 3-pointer gave Ainge 93 3-point baskets in 50 games, breaking the NBA single-season record of 92 by Utah's Darrell Griffith.

The game turned around again after the break between the third and fourth periods.

Kevin McHale had 14 of his 24 points in the period for Boston and the Celtics scored the last 10 points of the quarter for an 80-76 lead.

Ainge hit a 3-pointer with 1:16 left that cut the Lakers' lead to 76-75. The 3-pointer gave Ainge 93 3-point baskets in 50 games, breaking the NBA single-season record of 92 by Utah's Darrell Griffith.

The game turned around again after the break between the third and fourth periods.

When the Los Angeles Lakers beat the Boston Celtics, it always seemed to be someone else besides Byron Scott who did the job.

Until Sunday, that is.

Scott averaged just 10.8 points when Los Angeles defeated Boston in the NBA finals last spring, and he scored a total of only 27 points in the last four games of the series.

But this time, Scott played the key role, hitting 15 of 19 shots and scoring a career-high 38 points as the Lakers defeated the Celtics 115-106.

"If he wanted to dispel the rumors that he couldn't play against Boston, it's over," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "He had 38 and was in Danny Ainge's face all day."

"I think finally everybody can quit writing all that stuff about Byron not playing well against Boston," said

Magic Johnson

Magic Johnson, who had 22 points and 14 assists. "A lot of people have taken a lot of shots at him, and maybe deservedly so. I think all that can stop now."

Scott, accustomed to playing a secondary role, wasn't about to let one game in the spotlight turn his head.

"It was just another game in an 82-game regular season," Scott said. "Everybody knows when we play Boston, it's more intense, a playoff-level game, but it's still just one more game ... I can't relax and think I've arrived just because of one good game against Boston."

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was New Jersey 109, Philadelphia 105; Houston 115, Portland 103; Denver 107, Utah 93; and Dallas 110, Los Angeles Clippers 100.

The Lakers won despite being outscored 36-12 in the third quarter, turning a 64-44 halftime lead into an

80-76 deficit

going into the fourth period.

Riley said he'd never seen a turnaround like that against the Lakers.

"If we have a 20-point lead, we might give up 12 or 14, but to have a 24-point swing is incredible," he said. "It's a testimony to the Celtics and how they don't give up. We were terminal in the third quarter, had no motion at all, and we got caught."

'Sherlock And Me' Portrays Detective As An Impostor

By MATT WOLF
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Sherlock Holmes was an impostor.

Or, at least that's the thinking behind "Sherlock and Me," a new movie in which the famous fictional sleuth is really an unemployed actor.

The $8.5 million film from Orion Pictures, due for release in the United States next fall, casts Michael Caine as Reginald Kincaid, a boozing out-of-work actor whose greatest role comes when Dr. Watson hires him to assume Holmes' guise, deerstalker cap and all.

"It's a chance to play a hero who I'm not really right for, and to play two characters, and to do it in an entirely different way as a comedy," said Caine during a break in filming on the London set.

In the movie, Watson has been writing about the exploits of a fictional Holmes in "Strand Magazine" and is forced by public demand to create a real-life detective.

The Academy Award-winning Ben Kingsley co-stars as Watson, who this time around is the brainy one of the pair, not the stolid often bumbling sidekick of the Sir Arthur Conan Doyle stories — those turn-of-the-century mysteries that made the Baker Street duo an international cult.

"In this instance, it's definitely Watson who is the instigator of all the ideas and investigations," the 44-year-old Kingsley said in an interview over a lunch of roast turkey and cauliflower.

"In the books, it's Holmes who is the brains," he said. "Here, there's an antagonism born of a cycle of mistakes on Holmes' part and my gathering frustration that I might have hired the wrong man for the job."

Director Thom Eberhardt ("Night of the Comet") said the characters' mutual antagonism lay behind the appeal of the project. "It's really a Victorian odd couple," he said. "As much as they dislike each other and don't have much respect for the other person's lifestyle, they need one another to be whole."

On this particular day of filming, a derelict warehouse in North London's Camden Town had been converted into the lair of evil Professor Moriarty, one of the few people to know Holmes' real identity.

Caine said that both he and his character were looking forward to the showdown. "One thing Reginald can do as an actor is swordfight, which he had to do in a play," he said. "The feeling you get is that gradually Holmes is taking Reginald over but Watson, of course, always puts him down."

Both stars said they relished the opportunity to play comedy.

"I've been deliberately trying to do comedy, which was why I did the little part in 'Sweet Liberty,'" the 54-year-old Caine said, referring to the Alan Alda movie. Last March, the Englishman won the Oscar for best supporting actor for his role in Woody Allen's "Hannah and Her Sisters."

"If you think of an Englishman who's going to play a drunk playing Sherlock Holmes, there aren't too many people with a name that's recognizable in the United States. I'm having fun," Caine said.

So is Kingsley. "I welcome comedy. I really do, because it's a different technique altogether. It's good for me." He won the Oscar in 1982 for playing the title role of the Indian leader in Richard Attenborough's "Gandhi."

Neither actor seemed daunted by taking on roles that have been enacted on-screen time and again, most memorably by Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce in a series of films in the 1940s.

"For me it's great because I don't think I'd be obvious for a serious Sherlock Holmes, but the disparity between me and what you think is Holmes actually works for the picture," Caine said.

He said he admired Rathbone as "the greatest Holmes, the quintessential Holmes."

Kingsley said he was used to playing people whom the audience approaches with expectations.

"Most of the roles I take on seem fairly well-established," said the actor, whose portrayals include Gandhi, Soviet composer Dmitri Shostakovich in the film "Testimony" and English tragedian Edmund Kean in the London and Broadway play of the same name.

Still, some recent films based on Holmes have not been box-office hits, including Barry Levinson's "Young Sherlock Holmes," the 1978 Christopher Plummer-James Mason "Murder by Decree" and Herbert Ross' star-studded 1974 "The Seven Per-Cent Solution."

'Camelot' Composer Dies

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Composer Frederick Loewe, who 50 years ago teamed with lyricist Alan Jay Lerner to enchant audiences with classics like "Gigi," "Camelot," "My Fair Lady" and "Brigadoon," has died at age 86.

The surviving member of one of the most successful collaborations in American musical history died on Valentine's Day of heart failure, said his guardian and friend, John Morris.

Lerner and Loewe produced such favorite songs as "Almost Like Being in Love," "I Could Have Danced All Night," "On the Street Where You Live," "I've Grown Accustomed to Her Face" and "If Ever I Would Leave You."

Loewe, known as Fritz to his friends, died Sunday at 1:51 p.m. at Desert Hospital, said a nursing supervisor who asked that her name not be used. The composer was hospitalized last Wednesday with chest pains.

When Lerner died in 1986, Loewe said, "It won't be long before we'll be writing together again. I just hope they have a decent piano up there."

"Fritz was a great friend and a great man," Morris said.

A public funeral was likely, he said, adding that Loewe's close friend, comedian Red Skelton, has written "a most beautiful eulogy."

Lerner and Loewe's 18-year partnership began with a one-night flop in Detroit in 1942. They parted bitterly after "Camelot," their last Broadway hit, in 1960. After a 1973 reunion for the Broadway production of "Gigi," they remained friends.

At a gala in their honor in 1979, Lerner said of his partner: "A collaboration as intense as ours inescapably had to be complex. But I loved him more than I understood and misunderstood him, and I know he loved me more than he understood or misunderstood me."

Loewe was born June 10, 1901, to a distinguished musical family in Vienna, Austria.

The boy began piano lessons at age 5 and composition at age 7. At 13 he became the youngest pianist to appear as soloist with the Berlin Symphony. Loewe was 15 when he published "Katrina," a song that sold 2 million copies of sheet music in Europe.

Loewe came to the United States in 1924 with hopes for a career as a piano soloist. After his debut recital at Town Hall in New York was ignored, he played piano in clubs and movie houses and even worked as a busboy.

Later he wandered the country prospecting for gold, herding cattle, delivering mail on horseback and teaching riding at a New Hampshire resort. As a bantamweight boxer in Brooklyn, he won eight of his nine professional bouts.

In 1931, Loewe married Ernestine Zerline, whom he later divorced after 26 years together with no children.

After some more songwriting attempts, he accepted an offer from a stock company in Detroit to adapt a farce, "The Patsy," and invited Lerner to do the lyrics.

That first collaboration, retitled "Life of the Party," ran one performance, and the stock company then collapsed.

Lerner's fascination with the Scottish writer Sir James Barrie led to the team's first hit show, "Brigadoon," and their first hit song, "Almost Like Being in Love," in 1947. "Brigadoon" ran 581 performances, was made into a film in 1954, was revived in 1980 and was part of the New York City Opera's repertory in 1986.

Loewe and Lerner went their separate ways for a time, but reunited in 1951 to produce "Paint Your Wagon."

Next came "My Fair Lady," a musical adaptation of George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion." With a cast including Rex Harrison and Julie Andrews, the show began a record-setting, 2,717-performance run on March 15, 1956 and won Loewe his first of two Tony Awards.

"I Could Have Danced All Night" and "On the Street Where You Live" were two immediate hits. Lerner and Loewe reportedly needed just 10 minutes to write another memorable song, "The Rain in Spain."

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠K963 ♥KJ7 ♦95 ♣KJ63
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♦ Dbl ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—After a takeout double of partner's opening bid, there is only one way to show strength—you must redouble. Any other action denies holding as many as 11 points.
Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠9632 ♥KJ7 ♦95 ♣KJ63
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♦ Dbl ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—Had there been no interference, you would have responded one spade. Now, however, East likely has four spades for his takeout double, so the chances of a 4-4 fit in the suit are greatly reduced. Instead of bidding such a shabby suit, we prefer one no trump, showing a balanced hand of 8-10 points.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠KQ73 ♥872 ♦AJ103 ♣85
 Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
 A.—You are too strong for a raise to two hearts. Therefore, you should simply bid one spade. Your problem will come with your next bid. (If you use a forcing no trump response, use that and jump in hearts at your next turn, to show an invitational hand with three trumps.)
Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠KQ73 ♥872 ♦AJ103 ♣85
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♥ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
 2 ♣ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—The trouble with a bid of two diamonds is that it suggests an unbalanced hand or, if you play fourth-suit forcing, a game-forcing hand where you don't know how to proceed. And don't even think of a two-heart preference—that action would be pusillanimous. We suggest an invitational bid of two no trump, leaving the decision to partner.
Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠KQ73 ♥872 ♦AJ103 ♣85
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♥ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
 2 ♣ Pass 2 NT Pass
 3 NT Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—This is a close decision. On this auction partner must have five hearts, so we feel that your three hearts and ruffing value in clubs merits a correction to four hearts. However, we won't blame you if you decided to pass—three no trump could easily be the right contract.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠KQ1073 ♥94 ♦AKJ ♣K73
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♣ Pass 2 ♣ Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—Since partner can have up to 10 points for his raise, we can think of many hands he might have that would offer good play for game. However, that does not mean that we would charge into four spades. We prefer a game try of three clubs, telling partner we need help in that suit for optimum results.

Feud Over Battleship Continues

By GEORGE GARTIES
 Associated Press Writer
 LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — San Francisco's new mayor has sparked the battleship USS Missouri, rekindling a rivalry among three ports eager to be home to the "Mighty Mo" and its sailors — and their money.
 Despite interest from Long Beach, San Diego and Honolulu, the Navy says it wants to stick with an earlier decision to base the ship in San Francisco, where former Mayor Dianne Feinstein won a Navy competition to host it by offering $5.5 million in port improvements.
 However, Feinstein's successor, Art Agnos, made it part of his election campaign to oppose the port funds on environmental and other grounds, despite the estimated $100 million a year in revenues the ship could bring.
 "Evidently the people of San Francisco don't want it — and we've always wanted it," Long Beach Mayor Ernie Kell said last week, when he joined local business leaders in launching a new campaign to host the ship.

For some, affection for the World War II-era behemoth, upon whose decks the Japanese surrendered in World War II, isn't all based on cold-blooded economics.

"It's a grand and glorious ship," said Morrie Dawkins, a Bremerton, Wash., councilman who is trying to drum up support to reclaim the ship for his city, where it was mothballed for 25 years and attracted 300,000 annual visitors.
