Babbitt Is Out

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, his campaign flattened by poor showings in Iowa and New Hampshire, declared today "I am free" and announced he was withdrawing from the Democratic presidential race but not from "the cause that brought me into this political arena."

After finishing fifth in Iowa and sixth in New Hampshire, Babbitt's campaign for the Democratic nomination clearly had no place to go.

At a news conference, the former governor, whose wit had drawn sympathetic coverage from the media said, "I don't know why we fared no better, I'll leave that for others to ponder."

Babbitt becomes the first Democrat to withdraw from the race in 1988.

Babbitt drew chuckles from his audience when he said people had told him, "You fought a good fight, you were in it right up to the beginning."

Wildlife Plan Faces Opposition

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

WILLIAMSTON — Farmers, hunters and landowners voiced strong opposition at a public hearing Wednesday night in Williamston on a 30,000 acre national wildlife refuge proposed for the Roanoke River basin in Martin, Halifax and Bertie counties.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has prepared an environmental assessment of the project and is recommending a plan in which it would acquire 30,000 acres along the middle portion of the Roanoke River.

The Wildlife Service has developed five alternatives, all with the primary objective of protecting migrating and wintering waterfowl, including black ducks, mallards and wood ducks.

Most of the more than 400 people filling the Williamston High School Cafeteria opposed the refuge, saying there were few black ducks even in the area. "We want you to know why we're skeptical," said Connell Purvis, member of Friends of the Roanoke River Bottomland. "Our people who are serious duck hunters have only seen a few black ducks."

Board Seeks Bids On Computer

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Commissioners moved a step closer to acquiring a new mainframe computer and implementing a 911 emergency telephone system for the county at a workshop meeting Wednesday.

The board, after relatively little discussion, authorized the bidding process to begin for acquiring a second computer mainframe after Gene Windham, the county's data processing manager, said the bidding process would take about 90 days.

Windham also told commissioners that it will take from four to six months after bids are awarded for the mainframe to be delivered and another 90 days to have the system operational.

A new mainframe and software is expected to cost between $1.2 million and $1.5 million.

At a Monday meeting, Windham likened the county's present mainframe — bought in 1980 and upgraded three times since — to a "pickup truck that's full. We don't have adequate resources to get the job done."

On Wednesday he told the board, "We can't meet the needs of the present users ... we're overloaded. We need an additional mainframe just to maintain the level of service to the departments."

Windham said an additional mainframe would allow the data processing department to maintain quality service to the various county departments as well as to add additional programs, such as providing "Enhanced 911" service and allowing other uses for the county's digitized tax maps.

In addition to authorizing bids for a new mainframe, commissioners approved the purchase of a micro-computer and software for use by the tax assessor's office in maintaining the digitized maps.

Larry Kirkpatrick, president of Landmark Engineering, which is completing the tax mapping program, recommended purchase of the computer system. He estimated it would cost $58,000 to maintain the property boundary maps.

Windham and Kirkpatrick said the micro-computer could be used as a work station with the new mainframe when it is installed.

And commissioners were told that with the proper software, the 900 tax maps could be used as a data base for planning and other functions.

Although no final action was taken, the board gave tentative approval to implementing a 911 emergency telephone system for the county as quickly as possible.

Apparently only hesitation on the part of Sheriff Ralph Tyson to endorse fully the 911 proposal prevented commissioners from taking final action on the plan Wednesday.

Tyson said he had some questions about the implementation, and commissioners suggested that Tyson, County Manager Kramer Jackson and Bobby Joyner, the county's emergency management coordinator, meet to work out any problems.

As part of the proposal to implement the 911 program, Joyner recommended that the communications center, now supervised by Tyson, be made a separate county department with a new communications supervisor reporting directly to the county manager.

Joyner told commissioners Wednesday that 84 percent of the county's 50,000 telephone customers could begin receiving 911 service as early as Oct. 1, after Carolina Telephone & Telegraph Co. completes modifications to equipment in Greenville and Ayden exchanges in September.

And Joyner said another 12.2 percent of the telephone customers — customers served by the Farmville and Grifton exchanges — could begin receiving 911 service as soon as CT&T completes modifications to

Howard Draws Senator's Praise

Senators said Wednesday that Greenville attorney Malcolm J. Howard should have no trouble winning confirmation as a U.S. District Court judge for eastern North Carolina.

"You'll make a good judge," Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., told Howard, who underwent about 20 minutes of questioning by the Senate Judiciary Committee in Washington, D.C., the Associated Press reported today.

A committee aide said the panel might vote as early as March 1 to recommend Senate approval of Howard.

Howard, 48, was one of three District Court judicial nominees who underwent relatively routine ques-

Sheriff's Hiring Practices Studied

A report on hiring practices of the Pitt County Sheriff's Department was sent Wednesday afternoon to the U.S. Justice Department by investigators for the House Judiciary Committee.

Ronald Stroman, assistant counsel to the House committee, said a packet of interviews, newspaper clipping and other material related to the sheriff's department and its hiring practices was to be in the hands of William Bradford Reynolds, assistant U.S. attorney for civil rights, Wednesday afternoon.

He said he was not at liberty to say whose complaints have prompted the investigation. He did say, however, "We are in receipt of information which leads us to believe there may have been possible discrimination in hiring policies within the department." His office's part in the investigation is "only preliminary," he said.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said this morning, "I don't know anything about it," when asked about the investigation. "We haven't received anything about it," he said.

But Tyson said, "We know the last five we hired were minorities ... one woman and four blacks."

Out of about 80 employees, Tyson said, "about 20 percent are black, somewhere in that neck of the woods ... 35 percent are minorities, including white females."

Mrs. Gore Finds Introductions Really Are Necessary At Times

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Mary Elizabeth "Tipper" Gore found out introductions were needed when she came to Greenville today to campaign for her husband's presidential nomination bid.

Although she's been a vocal congressman's wife, she found out how little known she and her husband are in this area when a student in a reading class at East Carolina University for prospective teachers asked her to repeat her name and why she was there. Mrs. Gore was graceful in her reply.

After explaining that she is the wife of Sen. Al Gore, the Tennessee Democrat seeking his party's presidential nomination, she went on to say that the Gore campaign is just gearing up. Although begun long ago, the campaign has so far been low-key, she said. She said her husband and his advisers have felt that the big money should be saved for the Super Tuesday primary to be held in 20 states March 8.

"Iowa only offered 56 delegates,"

she said, but "1,400 will hinge on Super Tuesday."

She said the students would be seeing many television ads in the next three weeks that will give them a better idea of who she and her husband are and how he stands on major issues.

Mrs. Gore said she chose to talk to a class of college students planning to be teachers because she and her husband believe that improvement of education is America's most important issue. She said her husband has been a strong proponent of education during the 12 years he has represented Tennessee in the U.S. House and Senate and that he also has worked hard for arms control — which she said would free up federal money for education and other improvements to society.

Mrs. Gore talked about the commitment that she feels this nation needs to make to education, "so there won't be any illiterate people by the year 2000."

She said her husband has been a strong proponent of federal strengthening of education for many years. He supports the Headstart program for early education for disadvantaged children, Mrs. Gore said, adding that she feels that it's wrong that only one out of every five children eligible for Headstart is enrolled.

She said Al Gore is studying educa-

Keynote speaker will be Judge Clifton E. Johnson of the North Carolina Appeals Court.

Contest Winners

In observance of American History Month, the Major Benjamin May Chapter, DAR, presented awards recently to the winners of the history essay contest.

Mrs. R.T. Williams, project chairman, presented certificates to the three top winners from grades five through eight. Winners were Daniel Griffis, Melanie Sicard and Kim Garner, fifth grade; Stephanie Davis, Dustin Cates and Jalane Allen, sixth; Alison Foster, Temmeda Barnes and Jennifer Corbett, seventh, and Jennifer Davenport, Holly Durham and Michele Lang, eighth grade.

Daniel Griffis, Stephanie Davis and Alison Foster read their papers on "The United States Constitution: the Road to Ratification." Stephanie and Alison were district winners and their papers have been entered in state competition.

Prior to the awards ceremonies the Praise Singers, a children's choir from the First Baptist Church, entertained with a patriotic medley accompanied by director Carol Reeves on the guitar, and a spiritual medley with Craig Everett at the piano.

Services Planned

Services will be held today and Friday at 7:30 p.m. at the First Timothy Free Will Baptist Church, 1104 Douglas Ave.

Elder Charles Joyner will lead tonight's service, while Friday's service will be led by Eldress Ida Gorham.

First Club Outing

Spring will come early for members of the newly organized Eastern North Carolina Canoe Club as they take to the waters Saturday for their first outing of 1988.

The outing will begin at 9 a.m. at the wildlife access landing in Pollockville at the foot of the U.S. 17 bridge over the Trent River. The canoe flotilla will proceed downstream to the marina at River-bend.

The float is the first in a series as the club prepares to host the Craven County Canoe Rendezvous during the May 20-23 weekend. The preliminary float trips are intended to familiarize club members with the waters of Craven County.

The Craven County Canoe Rendezvous will provide opportunities for visiting canoeists to tour the area's streams and watercourses. Demonstrations of paddling techniques, exhibits of the latest in canoe and kayak designs and manufacture, and excursions will highlight the Rendezvous Weekend.

For more information contact Jim Lowry at the Craven County Tourism Development Authority at 919-637-9400.

Olympic Dining

Guests dining this week at Pitt County Memorial Hospital's cafeteria are getting a real taste of the Olympic Winter Games.

ARA Services, the hospital's food service provider, is also the provider for the games under way in Canada.

Gary Dumais, PCMH food service director, said the cafeteria is serving many of the same foods served to the Olympic athletes. In addition to offering some of the same menu items, the cafeteria is also using actual Olympic Village menus.

Dumais said the promotion marks the 20th anniversary of ARA's first Olympic food service involvement at the Olympic Summer Games of 1968 in Mexico City.

Three Arrested

Greenville police arrested three people on theft-related charges Wednesday, but are looking again for one of them who escaped from custody on the way to the Pitt County jail.

Officer K.D. Lingerfelt said Anthony Lee Coward, 20, of 1606B

Hopkins Drive was taken into custody about 5:40 a.m. on a charge of possession of stolen property. But the officer said Coward escaped en route to jail.

Lingerfelt said Coward was charged with possessing a car taken Feb. 2 from Phelps Chevrolet on Memorial Drive.

Detective J.E. Nichols said Antonio DeVonne Davis, 17, of 1808B Norcott Circle was arrested on an armed robbery charge in connection with a Feb. 10 robbery at the Fast Fare on Hooker Road.

Two other men were arrested last week in connection with the same incident.

Officer T.E. Nevelle said Julie Linquest Honeycutt, 23, of Route 8, Pikeville, was arrested about 6:30 p.m. on a lareny charge in connection with an incident at the Piggly Wiggly store on Dickinson Avenue.

Services Scheduled

The Church of Fire, Baptism and Truth, 129 E. Second St., Ayden, will have services Friday night with Hazel Gardner as the speaker.

Joy night services will be Saturday with the Rev. Bill Hannelson of Greenville as the speaker.

Nutrition Study

Exceptional students ages 7 to 13 learned about nutrition firsthand as they prepared and served lunch for their teacher, Debby Avery, and invited guests at Wintergreen Elementary School.

The project, Mid-winter Banquet, was funded by the Pitt County Educational Foundation in a minigrant. Students learned the basis food groups, planned a menu and shopped for the food. They sent invitations and made placemats and centerpieces.

Wednesday Thefts

Greenville police said two thefts were reported to the department Wednesday.

Officer W.E. Davis said a purse, containing an East Carolina University police identification card and badge, was taken from a car parked at Hollowell's Drug Store on Dickinson Avenue in an incident reported at 3:30 p.m.

Davis said a watch valued at $75 was taken from 1302A Battle St. in an incident reported at 4:02 p.m.

Wildlife Plan Faces Strong Opposition At Hearing

There were also objections about the manner in which the Wildlife Service prepared the environmental assessment. "I'm opposed to this proposal," said state Sen. Bill Barker. "I'm concerned this project got to the stage it's at without any of the North Carolina legislators being consulted."

"I think it would be appropriate to form a joint state and federal committee to look for a better way to preserve wildlife and find a better way to spend taxpayers' money," said Barker.

Congress has not yet appropriated any money for the $15 million proposal, said Harold Benson, assistant director for the Southeastern region of the Wildlife Service. Operating costs for the refuge would run approximately $250,000 a year, he said.

State and local groups are already doing a good job of protecting resources along the river, said Purvis. "We can't conceive of spending $15 million for a job that's already being well done."

"The $15 million would be better served if it was applied to existing refuges in Hyde County," said Chris Smith, member of the Kaders Eddy Gun Club.

The North Carolina Wildlife federation usually endorses refuges, said Chuck Manooch, but not this one. "We have not received adequate information to make an endorsement at this time," he said. The wildlife regional office also "falls woefully short of addressing hydrological issues," he said. There is concern that the refuge would disrupt the flow of the river and damage land and wildlife.

Farmer J.P. Harrington has already suffered from flooding along the bottomland, losing 100 acres of corn and 60 acres of peanuts. "The flow can not be regulated any more without serious consequences to people that make a living on the river," he said.

Georgia Pacific Corp. owns a large portion of the land included in the proposal, and its stand is expected to influence any decision on the future of the region. "The hearing allows us and other land owners to find out what it's all about and gives us a chance to reach a decision," said Donald Ball, northern group manager for Georgia Pacific.

The company manages the land for timber and its first interest is replacing that resource. "Economics will probably determine our position in the end," said Ball.

Economics will not be a factor to many of the landowners along the river basin. Several said they would not want to sell their land to the government at any price, and they asked if the Wildlife Service has the power of condemnation. "The United States always has the power of condemnation," said Benson. "But the U.S Fish and Wildlife Service has a policy of only dealing with willing sellers."

Wildlife officials continued to stress they would only deal with willing sellers, but landowners were not all convinced. "The basis for the refuge would be willing sellers," Travis McDaniel, district supervisor for refuges in North Carolina and South Carolina, said during an exchange with a landowner whose farm is included in the proposed refuge. "If you're not interested in selling, then we're not interested in buying."

Wildlife officials have not contacted any landowners about selling, he said.

There were supporters on hand, but they were smaller in numbers and less vocal. "We're very interested in seeing the bottomland hardwoods remain intact," said Katherine Skinner, member of the North Carolina Nature Conservancy.

There is another public hearing scheduled for tonight in Raleigh and the record will remain open for public comment for an additional 30 days. Then a final version of the environmental assessment will be written.

Mount Calvary FWB

"Our Musical Heritage" will be presented at Mount Calvary Free Will Church Sunday at 4 p.m. Honorees include Greenville Mayor Ed Carter and Jacqueline Jackson, deputy of the Order of the Eastern Star.

The Rev. Elmer Jackson, pastor of Mount Calvary Church, will conduct a business meeting with members of the Ruth Hill Gospel Chorus and the senior choir Friday at 6:30 p.m. at the church.

The Rev. Theodore Gay will speak during 11 a.m. services Sunday. Music will be provided by Choir No. 5.

Howard

tion Wednesday during a sparsely attended Judiciary Committee meeting. The only senators on hand when Howard appeared were Thurmond, Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, and Arlen Specter, R-Pa.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., tapped Howard for the judicial post, a new judgeship that has never been filled. And Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., told the committee Wednesday that he endorses Howard's confirmation.

"I was pleased with my hearing and I was able to respond to all the questions of the committee," Howard said this morning from his Greenville law office. "I don't believe they have any further questions for me. I don't anticipate having to go back for a second hearing."

Howard said, "The staff people told me they anticipated my committee vote possibly the first of March and anticipate confirmation (by the Senate) the middle of March."

According to Howard, "Senator Metzenbaum had several questions pertaining to my work as deputy special council (an assistant to the lawyer who represented former President Nixon) during Watergate (and) Senator Thurmond had several questions pertaining to judicial activism and the U.S. Congress' authority to limit the power of the courts." But Howard said "they both appeared to be satisfied with my responses."

And Howard said, "I was pleased that the Rose High School's Close-up group — a group studying government and civics under Billy Lennon, our Pitt County Teacher of the Year — were in Washington and attended my hearing."

"There were 15 or more Rose High School students (and) they saw government in action, for sure."

You're The Reason

For Retailing's Biggest Birthday Celebration It Begins Saturday, Feb. 20, 1988 At 9:50 AM

You are cordially invited to attend our 100th Anniversary Kickoff Celebration on February 20, 1988, beginning at 9:50 A.M. prior to store opening. The program is planned for outside at the Williamsburg entrance; however, in the event of extreme cold or inclement weather, we will move indoors to the Mall Entrance at the same hour.

Our store is joining nearly 350 other Belk and Leggett stores in celebrating 100 years of providing outstanding fashion, value, quality and service to customers in all the communities we serve in 16 states. The goal of our kickoff celebration and the other special events we've planned this year is to say thanks to you and the thousands of other customers and associates who have made our growth and success possible.

Belk has grown from a single bargain store opened by William Henry Belk on May 29, 1888, into the nation's largest family-and management-owned department store organization. We're proud of our rich heritage and our association with this community, and we hope you can join us in our celebration.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Continual Growth

By summer a major new component of Pitt County Memorial Hospital will be available. The new construction is now under way at the front of the hospital complex.

The area will provide space for admission, laboratory and medical records. It will mean that persons entering the hospital for in-patient or out-patient care will use a separate entrance from that used by visitors. Currently the main entrance serves for both admissions and visitors.

The construction adds about 75,000 square feet to the hospital and the old lab and medical records spaces will be renovated to provide enlarged facilities for both.

That construction is only one of several projects under way at the ever-expanding PCMH complex. A $1.6 million birthing center is under construction, scheduled for completion in September or October. An $800,000 expansion of the rehabilitation center is beginning and improvements are on-going to the neonatal center.

In the future there will be a 16-bed $1.4 million addition to the psychiatric unit. Ahead is the removal of mobile units in front of the hospital and better employee parking.

That is considerable construction for an already-large medical complex. When it is complete it will better serve the needs of both Pitt County citizens and the large number of medical referrals who come here from all over eastern North Carolina.

The hospital has become more than just a building in just a few years. Rather, it is a complex of medical services which will mean better medical care for all eastern North Carolina.

Reductions Rued

A reduction in service by the Greenville Post Office may help cut back the Postal Service's spending, but it certainly doesn't serve the postal patron well.

Greenville Postmaster Charles Caulk said retail window service will be reduced and Sunday operation eliminated as a cost cutting measure.

Instead of the usual window service on Saturday and Sunday, customers will no longer be able to buy stamps and mail packages. Neither will mail be collected or dispatched from Greenville on Sunday.

Cutting of postal services defies traditional business management principles which specify that the longer window service is maintained, the more business the Postal Service will be geared to handle.

It is small consolation that the service reductions are going on nationwide or that there are vending machines available to customers. The window service is obviously necessary to serve many customers' needs.

Efforts have been made to operate the Postal Service on a business-like basis. But businesses find it pays to increase services to customers and in that way to attract more business, more revenue and hopefully a profit.

If service provided by the Postal Service continues to dwindle it may eventually put itself out of business.

The Haig Factor

Retired general Alexander M. Haig, Jr. ended his bid for the Republican presidential nomination, likely precluding any future effort to seek the presidency.

Haig, who had a brilliant career in the military, and then went on to government service which culminated with his appointment as secretary of state, simply read the handwriting on the wall as the presidential campaign moved on; he wasn't attracting much popular support.

At 63, though, Haig certainly isn't out of public life. In withdrawing from the race he also gave his support to Bob Dole who, he said, is "head and shoulders above George Bush as a potential president."

Haig withdrew before the New Hampshire primaries. With his endorsement, Dole came in second in New Hampshire behind Vice President George Bush.

Haig was high in his praise of Dole, saying he is the best man to go eyeball to eyeball with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. Dole appeared with Haig at the press conference. Both men said Haig had asked for nothing in offering his support to Dole.

The Haig endorsement effect on the Bush-Dole provides new problems for Vice President and presidential candidate Bush. Haig had not attracted large numbers of voters to his cause in the race, but he is influential with many Republicans. In primaries where the voting is close his support of Dole can make a difference. The interesting question now is whether Haig will actively join the Dole campaign and make appearances in Dole's behalf. The Haig factor now hangs over the Republican presidential race.

Perils And Pitfalls Of Predicting

WASHINGTON — A small but well-financed band of hunters last week tracked the fortunes of that briefly abundant and consistently game animal in the wilds of New Hampshire: the presidential contender.

If this is a year divisible by four then it must be tracking season, that time when pollsters interview random samples of "likely" voters in the Granite State to capture voter shifts and predict the winners.

The single goal of a tracking survey is to measure change in the electorate. With the surveys, campaign strategists can test the immediate reaction to changes in a candidate's message, and alter the strategy on the basis of what works and what doesn't.

News organizations use tracking polls to feed the hungry maws of political reporters whose addiction to the horse-race question (which candidate would you vote for?) is complete and unshakable.

Political reporters love tracking polls too much. Quite often the surveys provide the closest thing to news in a reporter's otherwise stale recitation of even more stale stump speeches. And too often journalists trumpet small and statistically meaningless differences as evidence to bolster the rumor of the day, a sin The Washington Post has committed.

The seductive virtues of tracking polls — a daily fix on who's up and who's down — guarantee that the results will make big news.

One other advantage: They're often right — or at least accurate enough for the media. The Post-ABC tracking poll in New Hampshire four years ago clearly caught the late surge by Gary Hart, and that journalistic coup is responsible, in part, for the flood of newspaper tracking surveys this election.

The "how" of tracking polls is relatively simple, at least in theory. A random sample of the target population — likely voters — is interviewed on a regular and compressed schedule, nightly in the case of The Post-ABC News tracking polls.

Thus comes the first problem: capturing a random cross section of potential voters during a single night's worth of interviewing. Repeated attempts at a randomly selected telephone number are a luxury that time will not allow, so most tracking polls are based on single attempts. No answer, and the number is immediately replaced with another.

The danger should be obvious. Pollsters run a fairly large risk of getting a sample that doesn't accurately reflect the voting population.

In fact, the sample might best be described as a random sample of people who were at home when the interviewer dialed their number. And if the preferences of people who are less likely to be home differ from those more likely to be at home, then the results may be misleading or simply wrong.

The Post and ABC attempt to include a percentage of call-back interviews into each night's phone schedule to minimize the problem. But that won't eliminate it. And as a general rule, tracking polls are inherently less reliable than more rigorous surveys in which repeated attempts are made to reach each phone number.

The skew problem is real but not as fatal as first imagined, however. Tracking's highest and best use remains measuring change over time. If the sample is skewed because of sampling methods in a single night's work, then presumably that error will appear in about the same degree in the next night's sample, and the next, and the next if the same methods are used.

Another problem is that the nightly samples tend to be small and the results therefore unreliable. One solution is to combine two or three days' worth of results.

For example, the interviews conducted during the first and second days might be combined together to produce results, then the results of the second and third days' interviews combined and reported, then the third and the fourth days' work, and so on. The result is a "moving average." The combined samples are larger and more reliable, but the pollster sacrifices the ability to measure change immediately. Different organizations have conducted tracking polls using different methods and, no surprise here, reported different results.

Consider these numbers reported for tracking interviews conducted on Feb. 9 in New Hampshire: The Post-ABC poll reported Dukakis leading Gephardt by 37 percent to 21 percent. American Research reported Dukakis with 39 percent but Simon and Gephardt in second with 8 percent each and the rest of the field close behind. KRC-Communications reported Dukakis ahead of Gephardt 44 percent to 17 percent. Another advantage to tracking elections: You soon know who was right.

Richard Morin is director of polling for The Washington Post.

Time Short For Noreiga's Reign

'Although the indictments seem to have had the immediate effect of prompting the vindictive and suspicious general to dig in, they ultimately should encourage his removal.'

Rising from the coral reef just off Panama's rugged north coast is Isla Grande, a distant and fledgling resort, an unhurried place where even the surf seems languid.

Guarding Isla Grande's easternmost extremity is an old light-house that rises some three stories above a precipice.

The tower offers not only a fine view of the palm-festooned island and its hilly environs, it presents a crude and scathing reminder of the agonies of Panama, the Latin American country identified most closely with the United States. Etched across the face and the interior of the light-house are slogans that evoke hostility and alienation. One of them proclaims:

Fuera la Pina. Viva la Democracia — Out with the Pineapple, Long Live Democracy.

The reference is to Panama's corrupt strongman, Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, whose severely pockmarked features have inspired the withering nickname "la pina," the pineapple.

The graffiti at Isla Grande are striking in two ways. As an emblem of discontent, they suggest that opposition to Noriega reaches far beyond the populous urban centers, Panama City and Colon.

The graffiti also seemed remarkable because it had not been obliterated. In Panama City, where anti-Noriega demonstrations have been organized periodically since June, such angry declarations are swiftly painted over.

No matter how he may try to conceal the depth of domestic hostility, Noriega almost certainly is on the way out. Popular opposition — which has deepened since U.S. federal grand juries in Florida indicted Noriega early this month on charges that he made millions of dollars in drug-trafficking and money-laundering schemes — seems too profound to be mollified by anything less than his removal.

Although the indictments seem to have had the immediate effect of prompting the vindictive and suspicious general to dig in, they ultimately should encourage his removal. The indictments have intensified the revulsion that Noriega has inspired among Panamanians. And they represent a ratification of charges and suspicions that have surrounded Noriega for months, since former associates implicated him in drug trafficking, political assassination and electoral fraud.

Long before the indictments were returned in Florida, a sense that Noriega's downfall is inevitable took hold among many middle-class Panamanians. Their conviction was bolstered by disclosure of a plan crafted by Jose I. Blandon, once one of Noriega's closest advisers who nowadays is his principal accuser.

Blandon's plan, which Noriega privately countenanced but denounced when fellow officers learned of the details, called for the general to surrender power but remain in Panama, immune from trial. Noriega, the former head of intelligence for Panama's Defense Forces who is said to have cooperated for years with the CIA, also reportedly sought assurances that he would not face charges in the United States.

Although Blandon's plan has been overtaken by events, the fact that it took shape at all left the message that Noriega can be induced to give up power. Further encouraging the belief that Noriega's rule cannot last is the recognition that the country's service-based economy will be hobbled so long as he keeps power.

As much as 10 percent of all banking deposits reportedly have been withdrawn since June from a country that has profited from its banking secrecy laws.

The United States cut off economic and military aid to Panama last year. Tourism is off markedly.

Thousands of government workers may have to be furloughed to relieve a looming budget squeeze. Some middle-class Panamanians say the government can collect sufficient monthly operating revenues only by rigging the national lottery. So if Noriega keeps power, Panama risks becoming a police state and an economic basket case, prospects that many Panamanians find frightening and intolerable.

Panama has no history of jarring social strife, and yet political instability has bedeviled the country in the 1980s. There have been five presidents, nominal civilian leaders, and three commanders of the Panamanian Defense Forces since the popular strongman, Gen. Omar Torrijos Herrera, was killed in a plane crash in 1981. Noriega came to power as defense forces commander in 1983.

Political instability has given rise neither to insurgency movements nor to extremism in politics. The anti-Noriega movement is led not by opposition political parties but by professional, labor and student groups.

A further complication is the country's ties to the United States. Panamanians often assert that the country should resolve its domestic troubles by itself — and then add that they expect the United States to exert its considerable influence.

U.S. influence is of long standing. The United States engineered the creation of the isthmus-state in 1903, ensuring Panama's secession from Colombia in order to facilitate construction of the Panama Canal.

W. Joseph Campbell, The Hartford Courant's national reporter, spent 10 days in Panama late last month.

Strength For Today

There are some people who never seem to get over the tragic experience of death when it touches a loved one or friend.

But why should this be so? Every human being that has ever lived has experienced death, and all now living on the face of the earth will eventually experience it. Do you think that a good God would make the whole race go through an experience that is essentially dreadful and tragic? No. "Death," Milton said, "is the golden key that opens the palace of eternity." If we could only be conscious of the reality of that bright, heavenly world which is nearer to us, probably, than any of us suspect, we would not regret as cruel and tragic the things which God sends eventually upon all his children.

If death is a tragedy, then all of life leading up to it is tragic.

Super Tuesday Gains Political Prominence

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Presidential candidates for both parties have emerged from the Iowa caucuses and the New Hampshire primary without clear front-runners, giving the South the prominence it wanted for the Super Tuesday primaries, observers say.

Observers said North Carolina, the third-largest of the 20 states holding primaries March 8, remains up for grabs in both parties and likely will get more visits from presidential hopefuls in the next three weeks than in any previous comparable period.

Jerry Blackwelder, state director of Republican Sen. Robert Dole's campaign, emphasized that Dole lost to Vice President George Bush by nine percentage points in New Hampshire after trailing by more than 20 points before winning the Iowa caucuses.

"If New Hampshire showed anything it was that you can move a lot of votes in a short period of time," Blackwelder said. "It's a very volatile race right now."

"To me, the campaign starts today," said Wallace Hyde, a veteran political fund-raiser and key supporter of Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr. "I think what happens on Super Tuesday will still be the overriding issue that will determine who will be nominated."

On the Democratic side, Gore is a strong contender despite his single-digit showings in Iowa and New Hampshire because he made only token efforts in both states while working to cultivate favorite-son status in his native South. Gore has picked up endorsements from political leaders across the region including North Carolina Sen. Terry Sanford and former Gov. Jim Hunt.

But Merle Black, political science professor at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, said Gore's approach may backfire in light of Richard Gephardt's unexpected strength. The Missouri representative, winner in Iowa and second-place finisher in New Hampshire, could erode some of Gore's support among moderate-to-conservative whites, Black said.

"We're going to see a strong test of the Gore strategy," Black said. "In terms of polling, he hasn't made a big breakthrough outside Tennessee. ... He's essentially starting his campaign in mid-process and that has never worked before."

Hyde said Gore is better off financially than Gephardt, who invested heavily in the early races while Gore stockpiled money for the South and already has begun television advertisements in North Carolina. He also contended that Gephardt's "economic populism" would be seen as anti-business in the South.

Gephardt will have to answer to charges that he flip-flops on issues, Hyde added. "He fell in the same trap we've tried to avoid — you go to Iowa and position yourself in a way makes you not electable."

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, a Democrat who is neutral in the presidential sweepstakes, said Gephardt did not have to concede a regional advantage to Gore. "There's a lot of rednecks out there in Missouri," he joked.

"He relates to people, he understands the process having been in Congress," Jordan said. "I think Gephardt is probably in the best position to get some of Gore's support."

State Democratic chairman Jim Van Hecke said Gephardt lagged behind Gore, Jesse Jackson and Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis in Southern organization and support.

Dukakis' victory in New Hampshire cheered his North Carolina supporters. They said his solid organizational strength in key Southern states, including North Carolina, enable him to hold his own in the region.

"I was thrilled with the margin of victory," said former state Sen. Rachel Gray of Guilford County, a state vice-chairman for Dukakis. "This certainly does give impetus to his campaign here ..."

Black, however, said some had exaggerated the significance of Dukakis' 16-point victory. He claimed 36 percent of the vote to Gephardt's 20 percent.

"Dukakis really didn't show a lot of strength," Black said. "He couldn't even get 40 percent in his back yard."

If Dukakis, Gore and Gephardt divide the white Democratic vote, Jackson's solid base among blacks could propel him to victory in some Southern states — especially if he picks up votes from some white liberals as in Iowa and New Hampshire, Black said. If Paul Simon remains in the race, the white vote will be further diluted.

Bush's New Hampshire victory restores his front-runner status in much of the South, where pre-Iowa polls showed him well ahead, Black said. A big question, he said, is whether Pat Robertson can persuade many conservative Democrats to cross over and vote for him in GOP primaries.

A Charlotte Observer poll taken the week before the Iowa caucuses showed Bush ahead in North Carolina. But Dole got a head start on organizing here, helped by his wife, Elizabeth, a Salisbury native.

Additionally, New York Rep. Jack Kemp is supported by Tom Ellis and Carter Wrenn, leaders of the National Congressional Club, which masterminded Ronald Reagan's upset victory over Gerald Ford in the state GOP's 1976 primary.

"Obviously we hit a bump in the road in Iowa but we're back on track now," said state Sen. Larry Cobb, R-Mecklenburg, state chairman of Bush's campaign. He acknowledged Mrs. Dole gave her husband an advantage in North Carolina but said Bush expected to win the state.

Cobb said he did not fear that lingering questions about the vice president's role in the Iran-contra affair would hurt him in the South.

"I have not seen that to be an issue among run-of-the-mill voters," Cobb said. "It appears to be significant only among the media."

Tuscarora Says He Won't Join In Probe He Sought

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — One of two American Indians denied bond while awaiting trial on federal hostage-taking charges says he will not cooperate with a state task force he demanded be formed until the government starts taking him seriously.

A federal magistrate Thursday denied bond for Eddie Hatcher, 30, and Timothy Jacobs, 19, saying the takeover of The Robesonian newspaper in Lumberton Feb. 1 amounted to terrorism.

Hatcher, in a telephone call to radio station WPTF in Raleigh after the hearing, said he would stop cooperating with a state task force investigating his charges of corruption in local law enforcement agencies "until the government proves it is legitimately concerned with major drug trafficking and corruption in Robeson County ..."

Hatcher had demanded that Gov. Jim Martin establish the task force as a condition for ending the 10-hour hostage siege.

A task force of Martin's key advisers has met with Hatcher and Jacobs on at least one occasion. The task force decided early on to keep the talks secret for security reasons.

Hatcher told the radio station he and Jacobs had been denied due process in the bond hearing.

"Not only do these actions show a blatant disregard for human rights ... they are a direct attempt to purposely and covertly deter the discovery of evidence in which to support the powerful and widespread corruption and injustice within Robeson County," Hatcher said.

Magistrate Wallace Dixon, who conducted the hearing in a courtroom packed with supporters of Hatcher and Jacobs, said he was concerned for the safety of the people held hostage.

"The vast majority of the people in the country abhor terrorism of any kind, and I believe that's what that was," Dixon said.

Dixon said he was not convinced Hatcher and Jacobs would pose no threat to the community and would appear for their trial on hostage-taking and federal firearms charges.

Mothers of both men testified during the hearing, which began at 10 a.m. and ended at 3:30 p.m., saying their sons should be released.

Supporters rose in unison as Hatcher and Jacobs entered the courtroom, but they were ordered to retake their seats by a court official. Those entering the courtroom were required to pass through a metal detector.

Early testimony Wednesday came from FBI agent Tom McNally, who recounted the events at The Robesonian.

There was a murmur of noise from the crowd when McNally, on cross-examination by a defense attorney, said he was not sure if Jacobs had an attorney when he was questioned by authorities shortly after his surrender.

Before the hearing began, about 50 supporters of the two men arrived in Fayetteville in costume and held a drum ritual before going inside the Federal Building.

Mancil Jacobs of Pembroke, the father of one of the defendants, said before the hearing he was glad for the support his son and Hatcher were given.

"They want to see justice done for Robeson County. It's corrupt. These boys didn't do anything wrong," he said.

Connee Brayboy, editor of the Carolina Indian Voice and chairman of the Robeson County Justice Committee, said the committee has collected 9,173 signatures on petitions calling for Hatcher's and Jacobs' release.

Martin Wants Joint Agency For Environment, Resources

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin has proposed combining the state's environmental, public health and natural resource programs in a single agency, drawing praise from environmentalists and charges of "election year religion" from Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan.

Martin insisted his plan was not politically motivated and said campaign advisers had urged him to delay it until after the November election, warning it would make "enemies" among state and local employees.

"Why should you stop innovation just because it's an election year? I think we ought to push forward," Martin said. "He (Jordan) can say that I've come on late if he wants to. ... Fine. Let him keep talking about that, because people see I am working hard to get things done for the people of this state."

Jordan, Martin's likely Democratic opponent this fall, accused the governor of embracing an idea he once opposed to curry favor with environmentalists.

"Governor Martin has found religion on the environment, just in time for the campaign," Jordan said at a news conference. "And while I congratulate him for coming around on this issue, I caution the voters that an election-year friend of the environment is indeed a fair-weather friend."

As governor and a member of Congress, "Jim Martin has been a friend to the environment like the red tide has been a friend to North Carolina fishermen," Jordan said.

Martin acknowledged to reporters that he and his top aides had opposed major structural changes in environmental and health administration last year, when the concept began picking up steam in the Legislature.

But he said he had changed his mind after months of study and discussions that convinced him there was enough support for the reorganization to overcome bureaucratic turf squabbles. He said all Cabinet secretaries who would be affected by the plan had endorsed it.

He said he will submit his plan to the General Assembly at its June session. Jordan said that was further evidence that Martin was playing politics, saying there was not enough time in the "short session" to devote proper study to the proposal.

North Carolina's environmental and health programs are spread among numerous departments, an arrangement environmentalists have criticized for years. More recently, business and industry groups have complained the system hampers efforts to obtain operating permits.

Jordan called for consolidation last December in a speech to a legislative panel studying the issue. The same day, NRCD Secretary Tommy Rhodes, who had opposed consolidation, changed his position and endorsed it.

Bill Holman, lobbyist for the Sierra Club and the North Carolina Conservation Council and an advocate of consolidation, praised the plan but said he could not endorse it before consulting with leaders of the two groups.

"It embodies the concept we've promoted for many years — consolidating the environmental regulatory and natural resource agencies," Holman said, adding that he hoped partisan squabbling would not derail the initiative.

IN THE STATE

NCAE Runs Career Ladder Survey

RALEIGH (AP) — School leaders say the North Carolina Association of Educators is using a survey to gather political ammunition for torpedoing the state's experimental career ladder program, but NCAE officials say the survey is not sabotage.

The survey is the subject of a letter from the group's parent organization, the National Education Association. The letter advises NCAE leaders to review a draft survey of 81 questions with an eye toward getting information to attack the career ladder evaluation system, the News and Observer of Raleigh reported.

"A good rule for reviewing these questions is 'Will I get any information that will allow NCAE to get some evidence to modify or kill the evaluation system?'" says the letter, which advises the NCAE on how to design its survey.

State educators also criticized a suggestion on one of the questions, which they said further betrayed the political motivation for the survey.

The question asks whether local steering committees have been responsive to the needs of teachers. Below it is a suggestion that says, "If the local steering committee hasn't been open and operational, then you've got a key P.R. bit of information for challenging the plan."

State Superintendent Craig Phillips said the letter disappointed but did not surprise him.

"There has been a clear effort from the very beginning on the part of the NCAE leadership and the national leadership of NEA to discredit the whole notion of the career ladder," Phillips said.

But Karen Garr, president-elect of NCAE, said state educators were misinterpreting the letter and taking it out of context. The state's largest teachers' organization still supports testing the career ladder project in 16 school systems and does not intend to use its survey to kill the program, Ms. Garr said.

"There was not any effort to say, 'Let's make up questions to sabotage the career development program,'" said Ms. Garr.

The letter was trying to steer NCAE leaders from using questions that would elicit emotional responses rather than objective information that could help them improve the evaluation process, Ms. Garr said.

The evaluation process, which involves classroom observations, has drawn heavy criticism from teachers who charge it is rigid, narrow and unreliable.

Old Stuff

HIGH POINT (AP) — Regular customers are great for business, but convenience store clerk Ken Caldabaugh says he's getting a little tired of the one who has robbed him three nights in the last week.

"He's getting a little more daring each night," Caldabaugh said Wednesday. "The session every night becomes longer."

Caldabaugh said the same rifle-toting man has robbed the store during third shift three times in five days — Saturday, Sunday, and at 12:35 a.m. Wednesday.

Store officials haven't revealed the amount of money taken in the first robbery, but the second robbery netted the man a six-pack of beer and $17. Wednesday, he got away with two six-packs of beer, two four-packs of wine cooler, and $25.

mer that he had spent most of his time in his Charlotte law office — where he also tended to his Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission duties — while drawing a $58,716 state salary. After news stories about the arrangement, he quickly agreed to do the work for free.

Knox, in a four-paragraph letter mailed to the governor's office last week, resigned effective Monday. Working without pay "wasn't a factor then and it isn't a factor now."

Chairman

DURHAM (AP) — A Superior Court judge has ordered North Carolina Central University officials to retain Dr. John D. Kelley as chairman of the nursing department at least until next Monday.

Judge Thomas H. Lee signed a temporary restraining order to keep Kelley on the job until a hearing is held at 10 a.m. Monday.

The N.C. Board of Nursing and the UNC Board of Governors have threatened to close NCCU's nursing program because of low passage rates on the state nursing exam and inadequate administration. An affidavit filed by Dr. Kelley charges that NCCU's efforts to remove her denied her due process according to state and federal law and the administrative policies of the UNC system.

She is a tenured, associate professor who has been department chairman since Sept. 1, 1977.

Amputation

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — A 15-year-old New Bern boy was in stable condition in the intensive care unit of Craven County Hospital Wednesday after being struck by a train.

Doctors had to amputate Ivan Drew's right leg and a portion of his left foot after the youth was struck by a Norfolk-Southern Railway train late Monday night. Officers investigating the accident said it was unclear why the boy was across the tracks.

Highway Patrol Trooper G.R. Leggett said the train's engineer, K.B. Suggs, told officials he realized too late that something was on the track. No charges have been filed in the accident.

Tobacco Meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pressure from White House officials has forced the Department of Health and Human Services to abandon plans to discuss U.S. tobacco-export policies at a public meeting today, according to invited speakers.

Tobacco and U.S. trade policy was announced several weeks ago as the topic of the meeting of the Interagency Committee on Smoking and Health, which is led by C. Everett Koop, the surgeon general, and coordinates tobacco policies among various federal agencies.

Suicide

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — A High Point insurance executive, named along with his company in a lawsuit alleging he defrauded customers, shot himself to death in his car, authorities said Wednesday.

Randolph County Sheriff Robert Mason said Steven E. Davis of Davis-Petty Insurance Co. was found dead in his car around 6 p.m. Wednesday. Mason said the car was running and a hose from the exhaust led into the passenger compartment.

The official cause of death was a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head with a .38-caliber gun, Mason said.

In the lawsuit filed Monday, the state attorney general's office charged that many Davis-Petty customers were charged for insurance policies they never received, were charged inflated premiums and faced extra charges to their bills without their consent.

PTL Auction

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The $950,000 parsonage where Jim and Tammy Bakker lived while at PTL will be among eight residences sold to raise money for the beleaguered ministry.

PTL also will hold a telethon to raise money, PTL's bankruptcy trustee said Wednesday.

A March telethon, which ends on Good Friday, will feature evangelical Christian leaders endorsing PTL. "We are seeking endorsements from the top ministers and Christian lay leaders in the country," said trustee David Clark.

Martin To Call Ex-Governors For Trial Over Firing Policies

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin says he will testify in his own defense and call four former North Carolina governors as witnesses in a federal case that accuses his administration of firing state employees for political reasons.

Court papers filed Wednesday also indicate Martin will call Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, his likely Democratic opponent in the governor's race this fall, as a witness.

"I'm advised that's the best legal strategy for us," Martin said in an interview published Wednesday.

In the court papers, the Republican governor's attorney indicated that his list of "expert witnesses" would include Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., a former governor; former Democratic Govs. Bob Scott and Jim Hunt; former GOP Gov. Jim Holshouser; Jordan; and former Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, the Democrat Martin beat in 1984 to become governor.

They plan to testify "that governors and cabinet secretaries must have authority to decide which positions are policy-making and to choose the people to fill those positions," said Senior Deputy Attorney General Jean Benoy. "That's the only way for the governor to govern."

Martin, meanwhile, denied he was choosing a jury trial to prevent U.S. District Judge Earl Britt, a Democrat, from deciding who wins the case.

"That doesn't have anything to do with it," said Martin, who is being represented by Democratic Attorney General Lacy Thornburg's office.

But late last year, Britt ruled against Martin's side in two key motions. The judge rejected a motion by Benoy, Martin's attorney, to remove the governor as a defendant. He approved a motion by Melinda Lawrence, a Raleigh lawyer representing the three original plaintiffs, that added as many as 450 former state employees as potential beneficiaries of the lawsuit.

That second ruling also increased the number of defendants to 13 — Martin and 12 current and former members of his cabinet. Benoy said there would be one jury chosen and that he likely will be the lead attorney for the defense, although the cabinet members have hired several other lawyers to represent them.

The lawsuit was filed in 1985 by Bobby Stott, Joseph Register and Lonnie Michael Clayton, all Democrats, who were fired from their state jobs shortly after Martin took office. They alleged that Martin and his advisers conspired to fire them and other Democrats in violation of their constitutional rights of free speech and association.

Martin has said only those "who couldn't work with us" were dismissed. And Benoy compiled a chart showing that most of the 152 top jobs in the GOP governor's administration are held by Democrats.

Still, the case could have ramifications well beyond North Carolina in determining how much leeway governors have in providing state jobs for their supporters by firing members of the rival party.

The trial, set to begin April 18 in Raleigh, will generate publicity at a time when Martin is gearing up a campaign for a second term. Some of the material that will likely emerge from the trial could embarrass Martin, who has cast himself as a reform governor instead of one interested in politics as usual.

Earlier this month, for example, Lawrence filed with the court copies of 1984 memos urging the firing of some Democrats. Written by Arlene Pulley, a former assistant to Democratic Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green and now a $50,300-per-year Martin aide, the memos refer to one employee as a "bagman" and to another as a "pimp."

But Martin insisted Wednesday the trial will show that his administration "has been the cleanest one in history."

He also suggested his testimony would reach beyond the courtroom in this election year.

"I'd rather the case go away," he said. "But, if it's going to be there, then I think we've got a responsibility to not only defend our actions in court but also to be sure the people understand what we were trying to do — reform the system."

Amnesty Program Falls Short

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Thousands of illegal aliens in North Carolina who qualify for the government's amnesty program will "pass up an opportunity of a lifetime" if they knowingly miss the application deadline, says the director of a special legalization office.

But at the same time, says Ana Pardo of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, the agency might have to come up with new ways in the coming months to reach some of those illegals through churches, employers and other groups.

"We can always do more," Ms. Pardo said in an interview at the INS Legalization Office in Charlotte. "In both North and South Carolina there are pockets of farming groups that are often hard to reach."

"I suspect they're still out there," she said. "It's not fear anymore (that's keeping them away). It's financial reasons, getting together the necessary documents, and a belief that I've never had to bother before so why go through this now?"

As many as 25,000 illegal aliens, predominantly Mexicans or Central Americans, harvest North Carolina's tobacco and vegetable crops each year. The immigration reform law gave these migrant workers a chance to become legal residents of the United States and imposed harsh penalties on farmers who hire illegal aliens.

The Charlotte legalization office was set up to handle applications from North Carolina and South Carolina. Since the program went into effect in early May, the office has received applications from 6,583 people.

Of that number, 4,704 were farm workers who must prove he or she worked with certain perishable commodities in the U.S. for a minimum of 90 days from May 1985 to May 1986. Farmers who knowingly hire illegal aliens after the Nov. 30 deadline can be fined up to $10,000 for each offense and jailed for as long as six months.

Some 1,879 people applied for amnesty at the Charlotte office under the main program, which requires an applicant to show that he or she has been in the U.S. since Jan. 1, 1982. The deadline for the main program is May 4.

When it opened last spring, immigration officials estimated the number of eligible illegals in North and South Carolina at between 10,000 and 50,000. Ms. Pardo said she suspects that number was high.

"We know now we've processed less than 7,000 applications," she said. "I can't believe there are 45,000 people out there who would refuse to participate."

Occupancy Taxes Under State Study

RALEIGH (AP) — A legislative study commission has begun investigating how hotel-motel occupancy taxes are being spent across the state.

"The Special Legislative Commission on Fairness in Taxation has noted that a Raleigh city manager became concerned recently about expenditures by the Raleigh Convention and Visitors Bureau," Martha H. Harris, commission counsel, wrote in a letter to officials in 26 localities that have hotel-tax authority.

"The commission is investigating whether local occupancy tax proceeds in other areas are being used for similar expenditures and how closely government authorities are monitoring the use of occupancy tax proceeds," Ms. Harris wrote.

A questionnaire, which is part of the letter, asks local government officials whether they have had any problems regarding the use of the tax funds and asks them: "Have there been expenditures for luxury cars, expensive furniture, sculptures and other items similar to those complained of in Raleigh?"

GOING HOME — Kendall Smith is all smiles at a press conference held at the University of South Carolina Medical School in Charleston on Wednesday. The 9-year-old Dillon, S.C., boy has been at the hospital for five weeks since he became trapped in an icy pond. He went home Wednesday afternoon. State Panel Calls For New Study Of Rules For Jails

By DAVID DROSCHAK
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Social Services Commission has voted to appoint a task force to review proposed jail regulations that sheriffs and county officials statewide call confusing and prohibitively expensive.

"These standards are so confusing that I don't think, if they (counties) wanted to comply with these rules, that they could," said Lynn Andrews, assistant Durham County attorney.

The task force, to be appointed by commission Chairman Barry McCarty and David Flaherty, state secretary of human resources, will include county officials, sheriffs, police officers and representatives of the Correction, Human Resources and Insurance departments.

"This issue is too far reaching to address today," McCarty said.

McCarty said the task force would report back to the commission at its next meeting, May 18, to further discuss the issue. McCarty refused to say when, or if, the revised regulations would be approved.

"We'll take as long as we need to make sure we get it right," McCarty said.

If approved under present form, the rules proposed by the Department of Human Resources would have increased the minimum amount of cell space that each jail inmate must have from 35 square feet to 60 square feet and require more jailers to supervise inmates at many jails.

About 75 people attended the two-hour public hearing, including about 20 law enforcement officers from county sheriff's departments across the state. Ten speakers voiced opposition to the proposed new jail rules, while none spoke in favor.

Lewis Rosser, president of the N.C. Sheriff's Association and a sheriff in Harnett County, said the proposed rules read more like "prison standards" than "jail standards."

"The North Carolina sheriffs are not opposed to professional (jail) standards," Rosser said.

Rosser said the new regulations would have given DHR "almost complete control over the day-to-day operations of the jail. The sheriffs traditionally have had flexibility in running the jails. There is absolutely no justification in changing this historic past."

A study should be done to see how much the new regulations would cost each county, Rosser said. He also called for more input from sheriffs in the decision-making process, calling the proposed rules "poorly organized" and "confusing."

There have been virtually no changes in the state's county jails over the past 20 years, but officials said the population and average stay of inmates has risen greatly in recent years. The overflow of inmates from the state's prison system hasn't helped matters either, officials said.

"We're attempting to bring the jails into the modern world," a spokesman with the state Division of Facility Services said.

However, Mike Smith, a spokesman with Institute of Government in Chapel Hill, said the DHR's involvement in county jails would be a "historical departure."

"Under existing standards DHR's role has been much more limited and has really focused on the basic health and safety idea and not going into the day-to-day operations," Smith said. "I think that the limited role the DHR has played up to now is reflected in the enforcement ... if the standards aren't met, close the jails."

"The fact that there is nothing short of that available (to DHR) suggests to me that the Legislature intended for them to deal with fairly substantial violations..."

Smith and others said many county jails just won't be able to meet the cost of new construction over the next two years. He also said it's not clear whether both old and new jails would be required to undergo major overhauls.

Capt. Dan Ford, Cumberland County's chief jailer, said the classification of jails into minimum-, medium- and maximum-security as proposed by the DHR rules would defeat the purpose of what a jail really is — a holding cell.

"The primary purpose is to hold people," Ford said. "To try to classify a jail is to limit its scope and purpose."

Mild Quake Shakes Three N.C. Counties

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) — An earthquake with a magnitude of 3.8 on the Richter scale was felt Wednesday afternoon in three North Carolina counties, according to the National Earthquake Information Center in Golden.

Russ Needham, a spokesman at the U.S. Geological Survey facility, said there were no reports of damages or casualties in the quake in the counties of Graham, Clay and Cherokee.

The area affected was in the Robbinsville area, about 70 miles southwest of Asheville, Needham said.

"There have been small earthquakes there before, in the area," he said.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.

An earthquake of 3.5 on the Richter scale can cause slight damage in the local area, 4 moderate damage, 5 considerable damage, 6 severe damage. A 7 reading is a "major" earthquake, capable of widespread heavy damage; 8 is a "great" quake, capable of tremendous damage.

The San Francisco earthquake of 1906, which occurred before the Richter scale was devised, has been estimated at 8.3 on the Richter scale.

Collider Hearing Set

DURHAM (AP) — Durham County Commissioners have set a public meeting for next week on the proposed superconducting super collider, which has brought complaints from property owners who would have to move to make way for the atom-smasher.

Although time will be set aside at the Tuesday meeting for citizens to ask questions about the project, commission chairman Bill Pell said "the purpose of the meeting is to hear from the state."

Meanwhile, Person County commissioners also are seeking a special public meeting with state officials to get answers to questions about the $4.4 billion project.

The U.S. Department of Energy is considering putting the super collider on a site in northern Durham, southeastern Person and southwestern Granville counties.

Gov. Jim Martin has pushed the North Carolina site as a means of providing more jobs to the area — about 3,000 are projected — as well as a boost to the state's reputation as a scientific research and educational center.

Santa Ana Winds Hit S. California With 90 MPH Blasts

By ERIC MALNIC
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Hot, dry Santa Ana winds gusting up to 90 mph ripped paths of destruction through Southern California Wednesday, blasting out windows, felling trees, toppling trucks and planes and battering homes.

Authorities blamed the winds for the death of a man who stepped on a downed power line in Azusa and were investigating whether the gusty conditions contributed to the deaths of three others, who were crushed in a chain-reaction freeway accident involving a tractor-trailer rig.

Relative humidity dipped to an arid 4 percent Wednesday after reaching only as high as 16 percent.

Almost half a million customers lost electrical power for up to 12 hours, and at least one television station was knocked off the air.

The gusts were so strong in the Azusa-Glendora area below the San Gabriel Mountains that the California Highway Patrol closed eight miles of Interstate 210, the Foothill Freeway, at 4:30 a.m., after at least three big trucks were blown over.

Fifteen light planes were overturned by the winds at Burbank-Glendale-Pasadena Airport, and five more were damaged at Orange County's John Wayne Airport. A CH-53 Sea Stallion helicopter was blown over at the Marine Corps Air Station at El Toro and two light aircraft were torn from their moorings at Van Nuys Airport.

Several small boats tore loose from their moorings in Newport Harbor, and one took on water and sank.

Amtrak said downed trees in the San Diego area blocked the rails and disrupted signals on the Los Angeles-San Diego line, delaying traffic on the route for up to an hour and a half.

Several small brush and grass fires, some of them started by fallen powerlines, were fanned by the winds in eastern Los Angeles County and northern San Diego County, but all were quickly extinguished by fire fighters.

When a small fire was started by a downed powerline on the front lawn of a home in the Azusa area at about 2:15 a.m., a neighbor, Julio Mendoza, 39, ran over to help extinguish the blaze.

"I could see the wire, jumping about in the wind, and then I saw Mr. Mendoza, lying there in the ground, on top of it," said a resident of the home, who asked that his name not be used.

"I guess he was trying to put out the fire with a hose" when he came in contact with the power line, the man said. "He was just trying to help."

Mendoza was pronounced dead at the scene.

In the freeway accident, three Sylmar men were killed after they got out of two vehicles to retrieve empty sandbags that had fallen from a pickup truck. Officials identified the victims, who were part of an early morning convoy of workers traveling to a construction site, as Juan Martinez, 47, Rudy Calsada, 46, and Anacleto Hidalgo Hernandez, 26.

Authorities said Martinez, who was driving the pickup, pulled to the shoulder of the transition road linking Interstate 210 and Interstate 5 along with Hernandez, who was driving a Buick.

The three men were standing between the vehicles when a tractor-trailer rig driven by David A. Condon, 20, of Rancho Cucamonga, came around the bend and veered onto the shoulder. Officials said the rig hit the back of the Buick, which was pushed into the rear of the pickup, crushing the victims. "We are looking into the possibility of it being wind-related," CHP Officer Ralph Elvira said. "That is based on the (tractor-trailer) driver's statement that a gust of wind forced him to veer on to the shoulder."

The high winds were also responsible for ripping apart the roofs of houses, including the isolated hilltop residence of Luanne Munns in an unincorporated area between Azusa and Glendora.

In Arcadia, the winds blew down a 60-foot-wide plaster wall at the west end of the Santa Anita Racetrack grandstand several hours before racing fans arrived. The strong gusts also tore off roofing from the grandstand and some barns. Damage was estimated at about $100,000, track officials said, but there were no reports of injury, and the day's racing proceeded as usual.

Strong gusts lifted an unoccupied, 50-foot construction trailer out of a shopping center parking lot in Orange County and tossed it down a 20-foot embankment and onto a roadway below. Officials said the trailer was damaged beyond repair.

One of the electrical blackouts cut power to the public broadcast television transmitter, KCET, atop Mount Wilson, knocking it off the air for about 90 minutes.

The strongest winds reported were the 90 mph-plus gusts at the Orange County Sheriff's Harbor Patrol station in Newport Beach about 4 a.m.

Mecham Has 77 Recall Opponents

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A Socialist and a saxophonist are among the dozens of Arizonans — 77 at last count — lining up for the chance to run against Gov. Evan Mecham in a May 17 recall election.

Only two, Democrat Carolyn Warner and former U.S. House minority leader John Rhodes, a Republican, are given any real chance by political observers of unseating the impeached GOP governor.

Meanwhile, the state Senate on Wednesday granted Mecham a one-week delay of his impeachment trial originally set to begin Monday, but defeated two motions for further delay offered by the embattled governor's attorney, Murray Miller.

The Senate rejected Miller's request that the trial be put off until criminal charges accusing Mecham of concealing a $350,000 campaign loan are tried. The lawyer had contended that an impeachment trial would prejudice the criminal trial jury.

Minority Students End Building Siege

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — The University of Massachusetts' chancellor says he has "great admiration" for minority students who ended their six-day takeover of an academic building after they were promised remedies for campus racism.

Chancellor Joseph Duffey said the negotiations were conducted cordially with representatives of the more than 150 students, who filed out of the New Africa House with their fists raised in a victory salute Wednesday afternoon.

"I ordered Chinese food and I hunched over one word processor and they were at another," Duffey said. "They were a very lively, interesting, wonderful group of young people. We had a good time. We also had serious differences."

Sean Eubanks, 25, a UMass senior and a member of the protest group, was one of the few students who remained in the Afro-American studies and cultural center, where the only evidence of the protest was a sign outside reading, "Thanks for Your Support."

"Basically, I think this is the beginning, this is the easy part," said Eubanks. "I feel like we've won the first major battle."

The five-page agreement between Duffey and nine of the protesters was reached late Tuesday night following nearly four hours of negotiations. It included a promise to change the school's student conduct code to allow suspension of students who commit acts of racial violence or harassment.

Duffey also promised extensive renovation of the New Africa House and funds for educational and cultural activities for minority students. And he agreed to increased funding to recruit of minority students and teachers, but rejected a demand for student involvement in hiring faculty. No amounts of funding were negotiated.

Duffey also consented to the formation of a student committee to monitor progress of the pact.

Jail Death

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Mecklenburg County police are investigating the apparent suicide of a 39-year-old Charlotte man found hanging by his sweater slung in the county jail Wednesday morning.

Clarence Gordon Jr. was pronounced dead at Charlotte Memorial Hospital shortly before 5 a.m., about 4½ hours after he was taken to the jail.

Gordon had been arrested by Charlotte police Tuesday night after his wife, Elise, said he had threatened to kill himself.

Inmates Ransack N.Y. City Jail

NEW YORK (AP) — Inmates angry over the conduct of searches at the Rikers Island city jail ransacked a dormitory, but surrendered peacefully this morning after guards using tear gas and batons forced one group out.

Four inmates and four guards were injured, but not seriously, said Richard J. Koehler, city commissioner of correction.

The riot in the Anna M. Kross Center, which houses 2,700 inmates, started at midnight and was over by 3:30 a.m., he said. Most of the 550 inmates involved were state prisoners in jail for parole violations, Koehler said.

The inmates heavily damaged 12 dormitories, which house about 50 inmates each, and 350 state inmates will have to be transferred out of the city. They are being held in the gymnasium and other common areas until they can be moved.

The inmates shattered chairs, tore apart doors and ripped beds from the walls, using the pieces of broken furniture to smash all the lights, he said.

"We lost about 600 beds," Koehler said at a news conference in a trailer outside the prison gates. He could not estimate the cost of the damage and said it would take several days to repair it.

The riot apparently was sparked by a weapons search Wednesday morning, during which seven state inmates had to be taken out of the dormitories "because they objected to the search and interfered," Koehler said.

Those inmates were returned Wednesday night to the dormitories, where tensions were already high due to a stabbing earlier in the day.

At midnight Wednesday, inmates in the four dormitories on the top floor began piling their beds and lockers against the door, keeping guards out. Inmates in the four dormitories on each of the other two floors followed suit.

No hostages were taken, but when Supervising Warden James T. Garvey Jr. arrived to discuss the prisoners' grievances they refused to talk and began breaking out of the dormitories into the facility's hallways. At that point, Garvey decided to use force, Koehler said.

Tear gas was fired into one dormitory. Then 200 officers armed with batons and wearing plastic helmets and padded jackets moved into the room and began physically removing the inmates. The inmates fought back with chair legs, broken glass and other weapons made from the shattered furniture, Koehler said.

After the fight, the inmates in the other 11 dormitories agreed to talk to the warden and the barricades came down around 3:30 a.m., he said.

Inmates complained that guards are using unnecessary force in weapons searches, Koehler said.

The city's prison system is currently at 101 percent of capacity with more than 15,000 prisoners, about 11,000 of them at Rikers, Koehler said.

Kennedy Gives Supreme Court Tie Breaker

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anthony McLeod Kennedy joins the Supreme Court today as history's 104th justice, bringing a crucial tie-breaking vote to a court hampered by a vacancy the past eight months.

Kennedy, a 51-year-old federal appellate judge from Sacramento, Calif., was to be sworn in amid the pomp and circumstance of a Supreme Court ceremony.

He also was scheduled to take a separate oath of office at a later White House ceremony.

President Reagan's third choice for the job, Kennedy was confirmed by a 97-0 vote of the Senate 15 days ago — a tranquil conclusion to the political storm sparked by Justice Lewis F. Powell's retirement last June 26.

The Senate rejected the president's first choice, Robert H. Bork. A second nominee, Douglas H. Ginsburg, withdrew after admitting he had smoked marijuana while a law professor.

Kennedy, although a conservative for his 12 years on the federal bench, is considered more of a moderate than either Bork or Ginsburg.

Little is known about Kennedy's specific views on abortion regulation, affirmative action, church-state relations or the other politically sensitive issues on which the high court is closely divided.

He is the third Reagan appointee to join the court, following Justice Sandra Day O'Connor and Antonin Scalia.

Reagan also elevated William H.

Rehnquist to the chief justice's post when Warren E. Burger retired in 1986.

A busy schedule awaits Kennedy. The court, returning from a four-week recess, convenes in an all-day conference behind closed doors Friday and returns to the bench Monday to begin three days of oral argument sessions.

One of the private clubs may exclude women and racial minorities as members.

Politburo Ousts Yeltsin

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — Boris N. Yeltsin, the outspoken former protege of Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, was ousted from the ruling Politburo today, Tass reported.

Two rising stars in the Communist Party hierarchy were named non-voting Politburo members, the official Soviet news agency said.

The policy-making Central Committee made the changes after Gorbachev told the party leadership that his efforts to modernize the economy and Soviet society did not constitute a retreat from socialism.

"We are not retreating one step from socialism, Marxism-Leninism, everything which has been won and created by the people," Tass quoted Gorbachev as saying.

"We are striving in the present conditions to revive the Leninist look of the new system, to rid it of the accumulations and deformations, of everything that shackled society and prevented it from realizing the potential of socialism in full measure," said the general secretary of the Central Committee of the Soviet Communist Party.

Tass said the Central Committee meeting "freed Comrade B.N. Yeltsin from his duties as a candidate member of the Politburo."

Yeltsin, 57, was brought into the ruling body by Gorbachev in February 1986 and named Moscow party boss. But he fell from favor last fall when he complained to the Central Committee at its last meeting that an entrenched bureaucracy had stalled Gorbachev's efforts to modernize Soviet society.

Yeltsin earlier had been removed from his party post in the Soviet capital but was given a ministerial job in the government's construction bureaucracy, leaving his political future in doubt.

The move to drive him from power was seen as an indication the party remains unwilling to tolerate criticism in key areas, despite Gorbachev's program of "glasnost," or openness, which has encouraged freer expression of ideas.

He said his program is, instead, designed to root out dogmatism and bureaucracy.

Tass said Georgy Razumovsky, 52, a Gorbachev protege who has been handling party personnel matters for almost two years, would take a seat as a non-voting member of the Politburo. He has been a secretary of the Central Committee, a key post in the Communist Party apparatus.

Also named to candidate, or non-voting, membership was Yuri Maslyukov, 50, who this month was named chairman of the State Planning Committee, the body that historically has controlled the nation's planned economy.

The party chief acknowledged that his program of "perestroika," or restructuring, has caused some confusion. Perestroika seeks to decentralize control of industry and make plant managers responsible for their own products in an effort to streamline production, improve quality and make consumer goods available to the Soviet public.

The Tass account said some people have questioned whether "the new, unaccustomed forms of economic management and social life" actually constitute a revision of fundamental Marxist-Leninist teaching.

"The awareness has been established now that perestroika is an objectively necessary stage of the development of Soviet society, whose essence is a transition to its new qualitative state," Gorbachev said.

On Wednesday, Yegor K. Ligachev outlined plans for an overhaul of the country's school system, saying the rigid and centralized Soviet bureaucracy must ease its control over schools to allow more flexibility at the local level.

Ligachev is considered to rank second behind Gorbachev.

Western reporters are not allowed to attend the meeting of the more than 300 members of the policy-making body. The committee is composed of top national officials, regional and local party bosses, and Communists from the armed forces, government ministries, industry and agriculture.

Caller Claims American Officer Was CIA Agent

TYRE, Lebanon (AP) — A caller claiming to represent a previously unknown group, the Islamic Revolutionary Brigades, today claimed responsibility for kidnapping a U.S. Marine officer and accused him of being a CIA agent.

The Arabic-speaking man, in a telephone call to a Western news agency, also said Marine Lt. Col. William R. Higgins had been taken out of Beirut "after he was brought out from the south."

U.N. officials and Shiite Moslem militiamen staged a massive search throughout south Lebanon for Higgins and virtually sealed off the area around Tyre, 50 miles south of Beirut.

Higgins, chief of an observer force attached to the U.N. peacekeeping force in Lebanon, was kidnapped Wednesday near Tyre.

Abdel Majid Saleh, a political leader of Justice Minister Nabih Berri's Shiite Amal militia, said he met with Higgins in Tyre on Wednesday before the kidnapping. The two men talked about efforts to free foreign hostages, among other topics, Saleh told reporters.

The caller said: "William Higgins has joined the hostages. He will only come out after he is tried on grounds that he is one of the directors of the CIA in south Lebanon."

"Higgins is now out of Beirut after he was brought out from the south," the caller concluded.

The caller said a written statement and a photograph of the captive will be issued soon. Then he hung up.

There was no way immediately to authenticate the claim.

U.N. helicopters took off at dawn to join the search for Higgins. Troops of the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon, joined Amal militiamen in the search.

"We hope the kidnapers will have no chance of slipping out with their captive. That's why all exits have been blocked," an Amal spokesman said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Heavy rain hampered the search, however, and the helicopters were later grounded by the downpour.

UNIFIL spokesman Timur Goksel said the search launched Wednesday continued through the night with U.N. troops operating in their operational zone and Amal active in non-U.N. sectors.

He said Amal, the dominant force in the region, "has vowed to carry on the search until Higgins is found."

Demjanjuk's Defense Rests Case In War Crimes Trial

JERUSALEM (AP) — John Demjanjuk's wife and children shouted "You're liars" to prosecutors today after the defense rested in the former Ohio autoworker's Nazi war crimes trial.

Demjanjuk's daughter, Irene Nishnic, son John Jr. and wife, Vera, walked onto the stage of the converted movie theater where the year-old trial was held and shouted at the prosecutors.

Security guards quickly ushered them out of the courtroom. The sobs of the women could be heard, followed by an angry expletive by John Jr.

Demjanjuk, 67, appeared surprised, but did not otherwise react. The Ukrainian-born Demjanjuk is accused of being "Ivan the Terrible," a brutal guard who operated gas chambers that killed 850,000 Jews at the Treblinka death camp in Nazi-occupied Poland in 1942 and 1943.

He was stripped of his U.S. citizenship in 1981 and was extradited to Israel to stand trial for war crimes. Demjanjuk insists he is innocent and a victim of mistaken identity.

The three-judge panel is expected to issue its verdict in April.

The emotional outburst came after defense attorney John Gill ended his final arguments and prosecutor Michael Shaked rose to respond to accusations that the prosecution withheld from the defense documents that would exonerate Demjanjuk.

Shaked said the prosecution had provided all material to the defense "on a silver platter," and even translated it.

John Jr., 22, rose angrily from his front row seat, walked onto the stage, turned and said: "You're a liar." He was followed by Mrs. Nishnic, 28, who shook her fist and tearfully cried: "You're lying."

Mrs. Demjanjuk then rose, and in a heavily accented voice shaking with emotion, shouted: "You're a liar! You liar. Shame on you. Shame on you. You have no heart — nothing!" She was pulled from the stage by two security guards.

After the family's outburst, presiding Judge Dov Levine told Shaked and the three-member defense team: "You both ought to do away with this bitterness because ... we believe there was fair treatment."

Demjanjuk's family said, however, they did not believe Demjanjuk had received a fair trial.

"It's all been lies from beginning to end," Mrs. Nishnic told The Associated Press tearfully after the trial, her hands shaking.

"We just didn't expect the trial to end like that, to close with statements that aren't true. The defense should have been the ones to have the last say," she said.

John Jr. said the family believed statements from 21 camp survivors who did not identify Demjanjuk as "Ivan," had been withheld by the U.S. Justice Department and the prosecution had not intervened to help.

"It's been a set-up from beginning to end," he said.

Resting the defense case, Gill called on judges to recognize the prosecution had not "presented the proof necessary to convict this innocent man."

"Your honors, John Demjanjuk's life is in your hands," Gill said. "I leave you with an Irish blessing: May God hold you in the palm of his hand while you deliberate the fate of my client, John Demjanjuk."

Levine said the judges would give the date of a verdict 10 days before it was to be announced. A separate sentencing hearing will be held about one month after the verdict if he is convicted.

Demjanjuk faces a maximum penalty of death.

Guerrillas Open Major Offensive

USULUTAN, El Salvador (AP) — A boom startled the sentries, shattered the tropical pre-dawn calm and cut off all the lights at the Salvadoran Cotton Cooperative Ltd. outside this provincial capital.

The attack was part of the biggest guerrilla offensive this year. The coordinated strike included a raid on the 6th Infantry Brigade base in Usulután, 5 miles east of the cooperative, and the blowing up of two bridges and more than a dozen utility poles.

In San Salvador, about 60 miles to the northwest, foreign ministers of five Central American nations met to assess progress in implementing a regional peace accord signed last August.

Army officers said the attacks early Wednesday by 600 insurgents of the Farabundo Martí National Liberation Front left at least 18 people dead. Fourteen people were wounded.

An entire family — the five young Hernandez children and their parents — perished when a guerrilla mortar fell short of the 6th Brigade compound and hit their one-room brick and adobe home in a poor neighborhood.

Five soldiers of the brigade died, as did at least five guerrillas, said the brigade commander, Col. Inocencio Montano. He said about 300 rebels took part in the strike on the base.

Montano said four of the 55 U.S. military advisers stationed in El Salvador were at the base when the assault began at 12:10 a.m., but none was in danger.

Pvt. Rodolfo Marinero Montoya slouched on the steps of the cooperative's makeshift barracks, exhausted after many hours of combat.

After the mortar barrage, he said, the guerrillas "attacked from all sides." He said a mortar round scored a direct hit on one of the open-sided, zinc-roofed warehouses behind the barracks, igniting stacked bales of cottonseed.

Marinero said he did not know if the other warehouses caught fire from the heat of the first blaze or if the dozens of rebels that penetrated the cooperative burned them.

Top Israeli Leaders Clashing Over Peace

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli leaders clashed over proposals seeking peace with the Palestinians, who have rioted for 10 weeks against Israel's occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip. Israeli troops killed one Arab and wounded five others.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said today he was eager to discuss the latest U.S. peace proposals with Secretary of State George P. Shultz, but he said he would not make concessions that would appear to reward Arab protesters.

Foreign Minister Shimon Peres of the left-leaning Labor Party lashed out at his government partner and said he knew of no plan offered by Shamir's right-wing Likud Bloc "which paves the way for negotiations to resolve the conflict between us and the Arabs."

The differences between the two leaders appeared to grow more pointed as Shultz's visit, scheduled for next week, drew closer.

Shamir, speaking to the board of governors of the Jewish Agency, reiterated his opposition to an international conference. He also said he opposed moving too quickly to grant autonomy to the Palestinians after they were permitted to elect local leaders.

The U.S. plan that Shultz will present to Israeli leaders reportedly calls for Israel to permit Palestinians to hold local elections and then begin negotiations with those leaders this year about the permanent status of the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

At Age 85

She Wants To Slow Down

By HOLLY GATLING
The (Columbia) State

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — At 85, Bessie Drake is closing her late husband's 66-year-old automobile repair shop and slowing down a bit.

"I decided it's time to take it a little easier, and be with my children and grandchildren," Mrs. Drake said as she was helping customers who were getting their cars worked on for the last time at Drake's Garage.

The garage, established in 1921 in the backyard of her husband's home, will be torn down, Mrs. Drake said, to enhance the value of the weathered, unpainted two-story Victorian house.

She hasn't had time, she said, to keep up the house. "I just get sick every time I look at it."

She is giving all the shop equipment and tools to her chief mechanic John Gray, who will continue to work on cars at his home.

"I'm not much on selling," she said. "The only luck I've had is selling my car," a 1963 Chevrolet she hasn't driven in seven years.

"It was a good, strong car and I took good care of it. One driver. One mechanic."

Mrs. Drake voluntarily quit when her foot slipped off the brake as she was backing out of her driveway.

"My foot went over on the gas when it should have been somewhere else, and I said, 'This is it.'"

The only memento she is saving from the garage is a crumbling, grease-stained, barely legible sign that says "WE CAN FIX ANYTHING But A Broken Heart." Some of her husband's friends gave it to him when he opened the business.

The demise of Drake's Garage, however, is not the end of just another business.

It is the end of a landmark made famous by the flamboyant and popular Franke Drake, Darlington's fire chief for 28 years.

From 1921 to 1963, when Drake died of a stroke, menfolk regularly gathered to the garage on Dargan Street to socialize, eat fish stew, talk about the next dove shoot, pamper their beloved automobiles and drink Drake's infamous "grape soda."

Retired City Judge Ed Dennis described Drake as "a great character. He loved fun and he loved friends. He did a lot of cookin' in his garage" and always had a ready supply of "grape soda."

"That was in the days of corn liquor, you know, and Franke would tell us, 'Take a drink of this grape soda. The grape soda will kill ya, but the stuff in it will save ya,'" said Dennis, 77.

"It would sure make you float out of the garage."

Mrs. Drake said her husband had a passion for automobiles and drove them at top speed.

"He could get from here to Charleston in no time," she said. "I really thought he was gonna get me killed in a car accident."

"Every woman in Darlington probably hated him because the men were always at the shop," recalled Alice D. Burnett, the younger of the Drakes' two daughters.

The shop was off limits to the women until Mrs. Drake, newly widowed, took over the business 24 years ago.

"After Franke died," she said, "I knew I had to do something. I couldn't just sit in the house."

"When you have a business, you have to tend to it yourself. That's why I have stayed out there."

Mrs. Drake gets up at 5:30 a.m. every day and is always at work in the garage, 20 steps from her back door, by 8:30.

She keeps the books, sends out bills, orders parts, answers the telephone and writes up worksheets.

She doesn't, however, work on cars. "I didn't try to learn," she said. "If I did, they probably have me doing that."

Although the "cookin' and grape soda" days died with Franke Drake, Dennis and another longtime customer, Frank Copeland, 76, said they continued to do business with the garage because of Gray, the mechanic.

"Franke trained him," Dennis said. "He was an expert, and he could fix anything. He was the mechanical expert in Darlington for many, many years."

Another customer, the Rev. Robert Ham, said he does business with Mrs. Drake and her staff because they "are very good people."

Ham, surprised to learn of the shop's closing when he stopped by for a part, said, "Everybody loves them."

Closing the business will take some adjustment, but Mrs. Drake said she believes she will stay so busy visiting her daughter, Tillie Gay, and her family in Dallas, she won't have time to look back.

"There is a turning point for everything," she said. "There is an end to everything, even your life."

Sleepy Friend Has Problem

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I wonder if you can help me. I've been seeing a man for almost two years. The problem is he keeps falling asleep on me. No matter what position he's in, sitting or lying, he will doze off. I've talked to him about it and asked if maybe I was boring company, but he says it's not me — it's just him. He says he loves me and he's very comfortable around me, so I shouldn't feel hurt.

He does a lot of driving on his job — sometimes from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m., which can be tiring, but you can't imagine how I feel when I'm talking to him and he doesn't answer me because he's out like a light. (This even happens when we're making love, which hurts my feelings.)

Have you any suggestions on how to handle this? — SLEEPY'S GIRLFRIEND

DEAR GIRLFRIEND: Tell your friend to see a physician — and the sooner the better. Frequent drowsiness, then dozing off are the classic symptoms of narcolepsy — an uncontrollable tendency to fall asleep. If he should fall asleep while driving, he could hurt (or kill) himself and others. His doctor can prescribe medication to control this condition.

DEAR ABBY: I am an 18-year-old girl with a major and difficult problem. My grandfather and I have been really close ever since I can remember. He was always my favorite grandparent. Well, I think he took our closeness too much to heart, because he has made some sexual moves on me recently. Luckily I am old enough to know that's just not right. I backed off and acted like nothing happened. Even though it wasn't a total act of molestation, a grandfather just doesn't touch his 18-year-old granddaughter the way he touched me.

There is a big concern I have now about my two younger cousins. They aren't old enough to know what's going on if he tries something like that with them.

I told my parents about it, and they are confused about what to do. Grandpa is a well-respected man in our family and the community, too. If this was brought out into the open, it would be terrible. What should be done? — CONFUSED IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR CONFUSED: Your parents and you should talk to Grandpa immediately. It's important for you to be present so that the truth cannot be easily denied. This should not be an angry confrontation. Grandpa could be sick and in need of treatment. He should first be psychiatrically examined. Treatment and counseling may be in order.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter was born Dec. 25, 1986. I need to know if last December (1987) can be considered her first or second Christmas?

My mother says it is her second Christmas. I say it's her first birthday, so it has to be her first Christmas, too. What do you say? — HEATHER'S MOMMY

P.S. She arrived before noon, if that makes any difference.

DEAR MOMMY: If your daughter was born on Christmas Day 1986, she celebrated her first birthday and her second Christmas on Christmas Day 1987.

Problems? Write to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. All correspondence is confidential.

'Ethel' Music Is Fun Female

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — They call themselves "Ethel and the Shameless Hussies," and their back-up band is named "Nice Young Men From Decent Homes."

This wacky trio sings tunes with outrageous titles such as "I Thought He Was Mr. Right Until He Left" and "Fred Ain't Dead (He's Just a Little Flat)."

They wear gaudy costumes, decking themselves in a blizzard of scarves, hats, leotards, earrings, lingerie, exotic cowboy boots, sunglasses and animal print blouses.

"The boots are hard to find," says Blanche Hickey, one-third of the campy threesome. Ethel Beaverton and Bunny O'Hare round out the group, wrapping up work on its first album.

The brazen Hickey, whose real name is Valerie Hunt, plays an egomaniacal sexpot in the comedy routines the three perform on stage when not singing. The bold O'Hare, really Becki Fogle, is the dippy one with a high-pitched voice. She always chews bubble gum, preferably flavored with zucchini.

The daring Ethel, also known as Kacey Jones, describes herself as "a well-balanced brunette." She tends to be the straight one among the three, but confesses, "I get my share of barbs."

Formed two years ago, the group sings music Ethel calls "country-pop-swing" and does comedy spots rated from G to R.

"Our music is fun female songs that are aggressive and tongue-in-cheek," Ethel says. "We're the white answer to the Pointer Sisters on the country music side."

In fact, one song they perform is the Pointers' "Fairytale."

They also sing early rock 'n' roll hits such as "My Boyfriend's Back," "Chain Chain Chain" and "Don't Say Nothin' Bad About My Baby." And they do the Andrews Sisters' "In the Mood" and the McGuire Sisters' "Sincerely."

A less serious song is "One Night Stan," which Ethel says is about "a jerk (Stan) who gets it in the end."

The trio's name is taken from Ray Stevens' old hit, "The Streak," in which a woman named Ethel saw a naked runner and her outraged husband declared, "Ethel, you shameless hussy!"

The three, all in their late 20s, hope to do some concerts with Stevens this year. "He's been encouraging and he gets a kick out of us," Ethel says.

They already have performed with Ronnie Milsap and Sawyer Brown and have appeared frequently on The Nashville Network on cable TV.

At their personal appearances, the audience sometimes gets playful with them.

"They try to 'out-hussy' us," says the undaunted Blanche, formerly of Salt Lake City. "They get real shameless sometimes."

The trio, though, threaten to retaliate by placing this bumper sticker on offenders' cars: "Truckers Are Gutless Punks."

The nightclubs also join the fun, creating drinks such as "the shameless shooter" and "the fuzzy hussie."

"We try to appeal to both men and women," says Ethel, formerly of Los Angeles. "The women seem to really get a kick out of the act. They come from their computer data job and have a great time."

Among their props are several inflatable play guitars, often color-coordinated in red, pink, white and black to match their colorful costumes.

"Our stuff is not really risqué," says Ethel. "It's mostly double entendres. No four-letter words."

"We do a lot of spontaneous stuff," says Blanche, a former backup singer for singer Terri Gibbs of "Somebody's Knockin'" fame.

The trio started doing comedy to set up their songs and because they didn't have enough tunes to fill the time, according to Ethel.

They get their outlandish outfits from Frederick's of Hollywood, thrift shops and boutiques, Bunny says.

Blanche, ever the fashion plate, adds, "Jeans wouldn't cut it."

Bunny, formerly of Saddlebrook, N.J., and Albuquerque, N.M., was going to take one of the band members home to meet her mother until she found out his background.

"He's from the Show Me state," she said in mock disgust.

History Of N.C. Women Is Project

From Virginia Dare to Elizabeth Dole — for the next year, 400 years of North Carolina women will occupy the full-time attention of Dr. Margaret Supplee Smith at the N.C. Museum of History.

Dr. Smith, on a year's leave from her post as chairman of the department of art at Wake Forest University, is coordinating the N.C. Women's History project. She is organizing research on the private lives and public roles — the contributions of North Carolina women, both natives and those who have moved here.

The result will be the premiere exhibit in the new building of the Museum of History, scheduled for opening in 1992.

Dr. Smith explains that the exhibit will cover all aspects of the North Carolina woman's life — the North Carolina woman's family structure as mother, daughter and wife — as well as women in crises such as war and the great Depression. "We'll be talking about farm women, mill women and social leaders," Dr. Smith said.

"Women of all races, classes and geographic areas belong in this exhibit."

"We will examine North Carolina law as it has affected women over time. For example," she explained, "in the 17th century, women in the frontier society had more rights and privileges." As areas became more populated and civilized in the 18th century women's rights diminished.

Dr. Smith will assemble the exhibit with a team of four curators in research, design, education and exhibits.

Dr. Smith's background includes years as a professor of art and art history. After receiving degrees from the University of Missouri in Columbia, she received an M.A. in art history at Case-Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio, and a doctorate in art history from Brown University in Providence, Rhode Island. She was the gallery director of Florida State University and worked at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

She belongs to the Society of Architectural Historians; Women's Caucus for Art; National Trust for Historic Preservation; and Southeastern College Art Conference.

During the past several months, she has spoken to the Art Forum of the Smithsonian Institution, the National Trust for Historic Preservation and various women's organizations. She has just finished her first book in collaboration with her photographer husband and they're eagerly anticipating the February arrival of

Media Speakers Needed By All

Dealing with the media has become such an important part of our lives that many of the major companies are grooming spokespersons who are trained to speak for them.

Our fire department has a designated spokesperson who looks the camera in the eye and assesses the damage, the estimated cost of the blaze and how it got started. He replaces the faces of the past who yelled, "Get those cameras out of here or I'm going to kick expletives."

Lawyers act as spokespersons for their clients, agents front for stars, and press secretaries speak for the President and the First Lady.

It occurred to me that there are a lot of professions that would do well to use professional go-betweens. Two of them are football and baseball teams. I watched a football player being interviewed the other night who, when asked about the strategy of the game, said, "We came here to play ball." (I think I already knew that.) The interviewer persisted, "Could you elaborate on that?" The ballplayer answered, "I think it says it all."

Baseball players are not much better at communicating. No matter if they're questioned on their views on contract negotiations, what they feel about the team moving to the West Coast or the disruptive fans, they roll a wad of tobacco around their mouth, spit and mumble, "I'm feelin' good."

Presidential hopefuls should never

At Wits End

be allowed to speak for themselves. They're self-destructive. A spokesperson for them would never end up saying things like, "If you think I'm a womanizer, then follow me around."

Television is never kind to the official who feels because he knows a lot about the subject he can communicate with the public. A case in point was the National Aeronautics and Space Administration authority who announced, "The normal process during the countdown is that the countdown proceeds, assuming we are in a go posture, and at various points during the countdown, we tag up the operational loops and face-to-face in the firing room to ascertain the facts that project elements that are monitoring the data and that are understanding the situation as we proceed are still in the go direction."

Someday down the road, I hope to see media professionals fronting for most of the car dealers who appear on television to sell their own cars. The ones who appear with dogs and children and are dressed as clowns, Superman and Mr. T to tell you they're "dealing like we've never dealt before."

Until that day ... Yogi Berra will sound like a Harvard scholar.

Architect Says Pitt Jail Unsafe

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
 In a continuing effort to improve conditions at the Pitt County jail until a new facility can be planned and built, members of the Board of Commissioners heard suggestions from a Charlotte architect at a workshop session Wednesday.

William Fripp, saying "I'm not here to create problems, but to help you solve some if I can," was critical of the jail facilities. But he said jailers "are doing a tremendous job considering what they have to work with. I think they are doing a whale of a job."

The present 84-bed jail was opened in 1965. Sheriff Ralph Tyson said it is operating at capacity, with some prisoners having to be housed in jails in Farmville and Ayden.

Fripp, who said he has designed and built more than 10,000 cells, including the prison at Maury, suggested that Pitt's lockup is "one of the most unsecure facilities I've ever been in," and described it as "a dungeon in a basement."

Workers are "doing a terrific job" of providing "good quality and quantity of food," Fripp said, but suggested that the facility lacks "any exercise area (and) it's becoming law that you're going to have to provide this (including) outside daylight exercise."

Fripp, citing other weaknesses that can only be cured by building a new jail, suggested several areas that can be improved with relative little expense.

He said some area could be made available for a law library for prisoners, and suggested methods for improving sick call procedures.

"You need to improve electrical lighting over the entire jail," Fripp said, and "improve ventilation throughout the jail." As part of improved ventilation, Fripp suggested a method of reversing ventilation fans to provide "smoke evacuation" in the event of fire. He termed fire safety in the jail "really hair-raising."

"I truly believe you are sitting on a disaster if you have a fire in that jail," he said, recommending that improvements be made to the existing fire hoses in the facility and the addition of chemical-type fire extinguishers.

He also suggested storage space at the jail should be improved as well as the closed circuit television system used to monitor prisoners within the lockup. And Fripp suggested that inmates should be issued "jump-suits and throw-away slippers" rather than be allowed to remain in their own clothing.

"That's about all the temporary measures I could come up with," Fripp said. "You really ought to plan a complex for the future... not build it all at once, but do a master plan."

"It's a matter of putting all the pieces in place," according to Fripp, who said "you have quite adequate space to do a good job" on property already owned by the county in downtown Greenville.

"The biggest thing you have going for you is the staff."

County Manager Kramer Jackson told commissioners that the jail study committee is scheduled to make recommendations to the board in March and suggested that the board should "make a commitment to do a master plan."

Reagan Submits His Last Budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today sent Congress a $1.09 trillion conciliatory, election-year budget combining his most restrained military request ever with proposals for more spending on education, science and the fight against AIDS.

"In presenting this budget, I am keeping my end of the bargain. I call upon Congress to uphold its end," Reagan said in the eighth, and for practical purposes, final budget of his presidency.

Unlike earlier Reagan budgets, the new document embodies an agreement on spending priorities already reached with Congress.

Reagan's 1989 budget calls for reducing the federal deficit from $150.2 billion last year and the $146.7 billion estimated for 1988 to $129.5 billion in the fiscal year that begins next Oct. 1.

That's even below the target of $136 billion called for in the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law. When Reagan took office in 1981 with a promise to balance the budget within three years the annual deficit stood at $78 billion.

At a White House photo session with congressional leaders, Reagan extolled the budget for not increasing taxes while increasing spending to battle illicit drugs and AIDS.

With a pile of blue budget documents stacked before him on the table, Reagan said he hoped the White House and Congress "can work together through this budget process this year, sticking to our agreement and completing the appropriation process before the end of this fiscal year."

In today's budget message, Reagan conceded the new document "does not fully reflect my priorities, nor, presumably, those of any particular member of Congress."

But, citing "give and take on all sides," Reagan told Congress: "The goal of deficit reduction through spending reduction must be paramount."

The two-year budget pact struck with Congress last November, in the wake of the stock market collapse, sets limits for both military increases and social program cuts and restricts new taxes to the $14 billion already passed for 1989 by Congress.

Because of this prior agreement, Reagan's fiscal 1989 budget was expected to generate few fireworks on arrival at Capitol Hill. And budget leaders played down prospects for a major election-year budget fracas.

The new Reagan budget contends that the "economy has shown few signs of serious damage" from last October's stock market plunge, and that the recent boom in exports holds out the promise of continued economic expansion.

In fact, the new Reagan budget assumes a declining rate of inflation, falling interest rates and economic growth of 2.4 percent this year and 3.5 percent next year. This projection is more optimistic than forecasts by congressional budget analysts and private forecasters but closer to their predictions than in previous years.

However, if growth is even one percentage point less than Reagan's forecast, the deficit would rise an additional $6.3 billion in 1989 and $18 billion in 1990, the budget report conceded.

equipment in the Farmville and Grifton exchanges in September 1989.

But Joyner said the earliest customers on the Bethel and Fountain exchanges (2.6 percent of the customers are served by the Bethel exchange and .12 percent by Fountain) could receive 911 service at no cost to the county would be September 1990 and September 1992 respectively.

Those dates, Joyner said, are the dates CT&T has scheduled for completion of modifications to equipment in those two service areas.

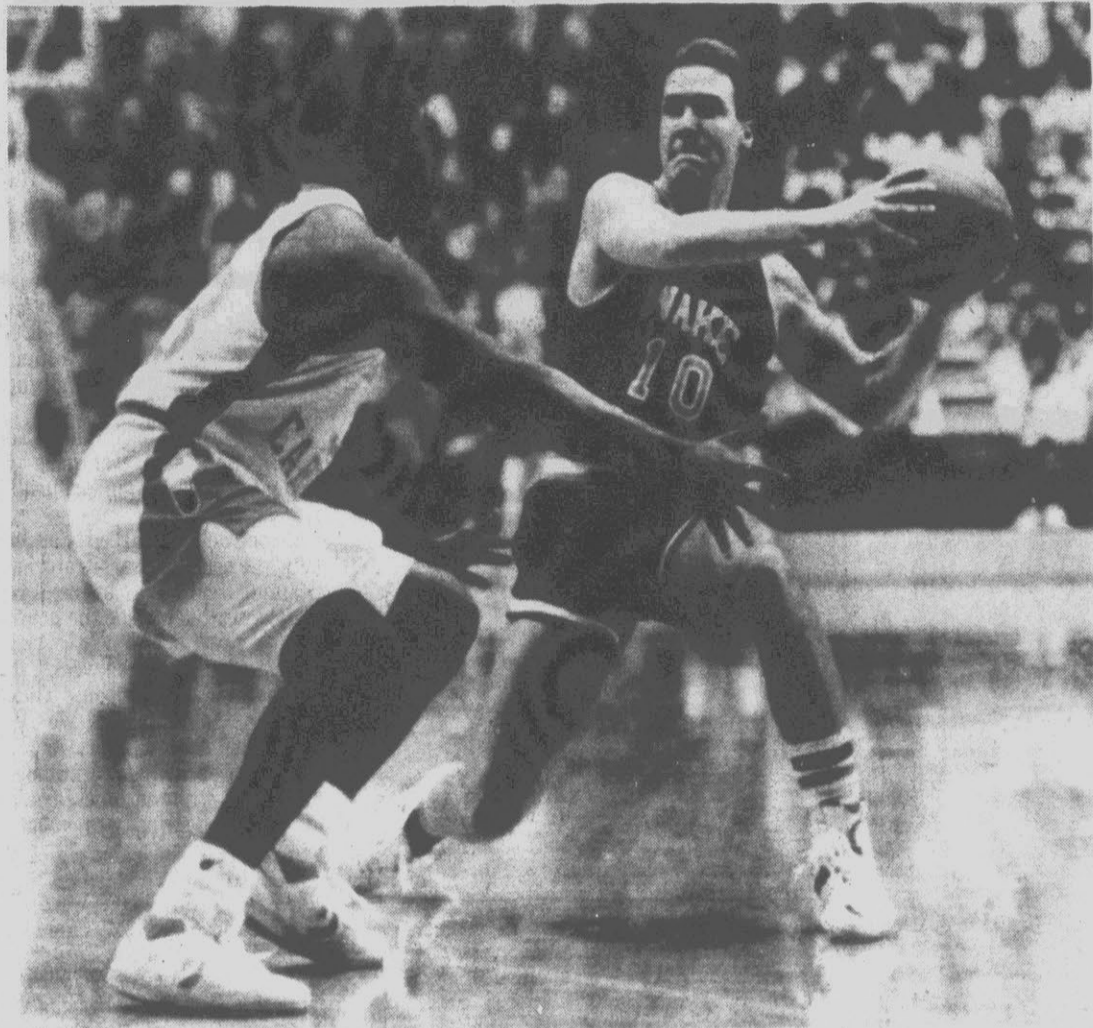

If the schedule is moved up, Joyner said, the county would have to pay $4,400 for changes in the Bethel exchange and $20,900 for modifications to equipment in the Fountain Exchange. And Joyner said it would take 12 to 18 months to acquire the equipment and complete the modifications.

But the board indicated its willingness to spend the $25,300 to bring all the county under the 911 program as soon as possible.

Joyner said CT&T is not able to provide Enhanced 911 service — which would give communications center dispatchers the telephone number and address from which a 911 call is made. But Joyner said the telephone company is willing to work with the county to enable the enhanced service to be provided through the county's computer system.

Joyner said one advantage to using the county's computer equipment to provide the enhanced service is that more information about the location of the call — such as the nearest fire department, rescue squad or law enforcement agency to the address — could be included. And he said in the case of commercial buildings, such information as what type of hazardous materials are located at the business could be programmed.

Wake Forest's Cal Boyd (10) finds his path blocked by North Carolina's Ranzino Smith during their game Wednesday night in Chapel Hill. The fifth-ranked Tar Heels defeated the Demon Deacons, 80-62. (AP Laserphoto)

Tar Heels Remember Past, Defeat Deacons, 80-62

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — It was a new day and a new game, but it was hard to forget what happened Jan. 28 when Wake Forest handed North Carolina its third loss.

In the same breath, Steve Bucknall said the fifth-ranked Tar Heels put that game behind them — and tried to make sure it didn't happen again. "Nobody was thinking about the other game," Bucknall said. "We wanted to be sure their 3-point shooters didn't get going. They proved they were a capable team last time."

Last time, North Carolina lost 83-80. On Wednesday, the Tar Heels defeated Wake Forest 80-62.

Bucknall and sophomore Kevin Madden scored 15 points each to lead North Carolina, taking up the scoring load after the Tar Heels' inside players found themselves tangled in the Demon Deacons double-team defense.

Madden hit six of six from the field, including all three attempts from 3-point range. Bucknall, meanwhile, was able to sneak inside on offensive rebounds.

"This game is going to help my confidence," Madden said.

"I can't hit 3-pointers in practice to save my life," he said. "But with J.R. (Reid) struggling, we all had to do something."

"We did some nice things offensively," said North Carolina coach Dean Smith. "We didn't throw the ball away much and we got it inside. J.R. and Scott (Williams) struggled when we got it there, but I was pleased with our offense. Defensively, we forced some turnovers."

Wake Forest coach Bob Staak said the turnovers were the key to the game.

"We played very hard for 40 minutes and I think if we had protected the ball better, we could have been right there at the end. They did an excellent job in forcing tempo and creating some turnovers with their traps, but I was disappointed in our reaction to their pressure on quite a few occasions."

North Carolina, which trailed by as many as six points in the first half at 29-23, outscored the Demon Deacons 15-3 in the final five minutes to take a 38-32 halftime lead.

The Tar Heels grabbed a 14-point lead at 54-40 with 14:18 left on a free throw by Pete Chilcutt. Madden scored five points in the stretch and Bucknall had four.

But Wake Forest pulled to within five points at 56-51 about two minutes later by shooting long-range jumpers. David Carlyle hit two 3-pointers and Antonio Johnson added another.

North Carolina took control, scoring on a series of offensive rebounds. The Tar Heels outscored Wake

NCHSAA Offers Playoff Plan

RALEIGH (AP) — A high school football playoff system with five classifications would create a more equitable balance and allow smaller 4-A schools a chance at a state title, a North Carolina high school official says.

"I've been thinking about it for two years," said Charlie Adams, executive director of the North Carolina High School Athletic Association. "I don't think people care how many A's you are playing for as long as you're playing for a state championship."

The state's 94 4-A schools range in size from Reidsville's 930 students to Charlotte Independence's 2,118, and Adams said he feels the gap will increase when the association plans a new realignment for next year.

"The gap is even going to get wider (in 4-A)," Adams said in a telephone interview from his Chapel Hill office last week. "Now is a good time to experiment with it (before realignment)."

The population gaps in the state's other three classifications are less than 300 in each.

"It seems like constantly that the superintendents of the small (4-A) schools are saying that you (the association) really have decreased our chances of getting into the playoffs," Adams said.

Under Adams' proposed 5-A playoff system, the regular season would be played under four classifications. Once the playoffs start, the 32 4-A teams with the best records would be placed in the 5-A playoffs, while the next 32 would be placed in the 4-A playoffs. The 1-A, 2-A and 3-A playoffs would remain at a 32-team draw.

"People say, 'Boy are you going to get bad records (in the playoffs),' " Adams said. "But we've done research ... and that's just not so."

Adams also said statistics over the past 15 years show that the 4-A playoffs are dominated by teams that would fall into the proposed 5-A class. Greenville Rose and Jacksonville are the only two champions in the past 15 years that would fall into the 4-A category under the formula.

Ferry's Streak Gains Duke Win

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Duke's basketball machine wasn't running on all cylinders, but it worked just fine for Danny Ferry.

The sixth-ranked Blue Devils hit less than 40 percent of their field goals Thursday night for one of their poorer shooting efforts this season. But Ferry got hot long enough in the second half to lead Duke to a 73-54 victory over Virginia.

"I really wasn't getting set for my shot as I needed to be in the first half," said Ferry, whose three-for-10 shooting was part of Duke's 29 percent effort in the half. Still, the Blue Devils led 30-22. "I think I did a better job of that in the second half. The main thing was the fact was that I got set up with some easy ones. I really did."

Duke's field goal shooting didn't improve much in the second half, rising to 48.4 percent, but it was Ferry's start that was the key. His first three baskets helped the Blue Devils take a 36-28 lead at 17:07, but a leaning jumper by John Johnson and a follow shot by Kenny Turner brought the Cavaliers within 36-32 with 16:29 left.

Ferry scored at 15:46 and assisted on a basket by Kevin Strickland 30 seconds later. John Crotty hit the back end of a two-shot foul with 14:33 left, but Duke went on an 8-0 run that essentially put the Cavaliers away.

"Things turned around a whole lot for me in the second half," Ferry said. "I got set up a lot. I got some good picks inside, I was set up with some great passes in terms of getting

U.S.A. Rallies, But Still Falls

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer
CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Twenty minutes of hockey were left, and the prospects weren't pretty for Team USA.

The methodical and meticulous Soviet skaters had built a 6-2 lead with a rat-a-tat offense that seemed almost computer-generated. The puck moved like a magnet from one Soviet stick to another.

Click, clack, click — goal!
Three scores in a stretch of 4 minutes, 22 seconds of the second period had broken the game open. Their first Olympic hockey meeting with the Soviets since the miracle of Lake Placid in 1980 was turning distinctly ugly for this American team.

But 20 minutes of hockey were left and in their dressing room, assistant coach Ben Smith said the U.S. skaters devised a strategy.

"We wanted to see if we could hold them where they were and maybe get a goal," he said. "And then maybe we could get another."

And so on, and so on, and so on.
The formula was simple. Four goals down. Twenty minutes to play. The Americans needed a goal every five minutes. And, oh, while they were doing that, they would need shutout goaltending from Chris Terreri at their end of the ice.

Nothing to it.
The period began with a goal by Lane MacDonald at 3:15 to make the score 6-3. When Scott Fusco connected at 5:47, the capacity crowd in the Saddledome started to get the feeling it was sitting in on something special.

Suddenly, chants of "USA, USA" echoed around the building. Suddenly, a sea of American flags surfaced. Suddenly, the Soviets seemed to be looking at each other.

Now, with momentum working for them, the Americans turned up the pressure another notch and at 9:08 Todd Okerlund scored to make the score 6-5. With more than 10 minutes left, Team USA was just one goal short of performing its own little miracle.

In the American nets, Terreri said, the words "Lake Placid" never crossed his mind.

"You don't think of things like that," he said. "I was just trying to keep my head in the game. We were pressing so much, I didn't get many chances."

Now the young Americans buzzed around Soviet goalie Sergei Mylnikov, like bees around a honeycomb. He was down, up, thrusting his glove out this way, his stick that way. There were four, perhaps five chances for the tying goal. And then, with 7:05 to play, the signal came from the Soviet bench.

"Timeout!"
Later, assistant coach Igor Dmitriyev would explain the Soviet strategy.

"Each team uses timeouts in the most critical moment," he said. "It is the job of the coach to choose the

ECU's Giardina Headed To Penn State

Frank Giardina, director of electronic media at East Carolina, has been named coordinator of radio and television at Penn State University, ECU athletic director Dave Hart announced Thursday.

Giardina will also direct the marketing and promotions division at Penn State.

"You always hate to lose good people, and Frank Giardina has done a great job for us," Hart said. "However, this is an excellent professional opportunity, and we wish Frank the very best."

The 33-year old Charleston, W.Va. native came to ECU in the summer of 1986 after an eight-year stint at Marshall University. He was the voice of the Thundering Herd and the director of promotions at Marshall.

During his tenure, he was twice named sportscaster of the year in West Virginia.

"It is not easy to leave East Carolina University," Giardina said. "My family and I have made many life long friends here."

Pitt Falls To Mount Olive, 82-70

MOUNT OLIVE — Mike Hathaway played what Pitt Community Coach Charles Coburn called his best game of the year, but it wasn't enough for the Panthers as Mount Olive took a 82-70 college basketball win Wednesday night.

Hathaway scored 28 points, hitting on five 3-point shots, but Pitt still fell. Mount Olive built up a 34-20 halftime lead and trailed y 19 points with 11:07 remaining at 56-37, but rallied to within 67-56 with 5:01 to go. But that was as close as the Panthers would get.

"I thought Mike Hathaway had his best ballgame of the season," Coburn said. "He had 28 points and 11 rebounds. Mike played a tremendous defensive game also. He was the only one that played strong defense. (Jesse) Pratt also had a good offensive game."

Pitt falls to 8-19 overall and returns to action Sunday in its final game of the season in Chapel Hill against the North Carolina JV team.

Schultz Proposing NFL Hardship Draft

ATLANTA (AP) — The executive director of the National Collegiate Athletic Association says college football players should be allowed to turn pro early, as do basketball players.

"It's time to take a whole new look at the situation," Dick Schultz said Wednesday in an interview with The Atlanta Constitution. "College (football) coaches and athletic directors are going to have to make the adjustment, just as coaches in sports other than football have adjusted."

The National Football League's current position is that it generally will not draft college football players until they have completed their NCAA eligibility. The most common exceptions under the current rules are players whose classes have graduated and who wish to enter the NFL despite having a fifth season of eligibility remaining, and players who lose their eligibility for various reasons and apply for a special draft.

Schultz said he has made proposals to NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle that would allow college underclassmen to enter the NFL as "hardship" cases. These players would be allowed to enter the NFL's regular draft in April, Schultz said.

"The agreement between the NFL and college football coaches (of not drafting players early) is something that in theory is in the best interest of all parties involved," Schultz said. "The football player is further developed and prepared for the NFL. That player also gets an opportunity to achieve what should be his educational goals. The college program gets continuity."

"But I think Commissioner Rozelle and I agree that something more in step with the times is appropriate. The key now is to get the two sides (management and NFL players) back to negotiating a new collective bargaining agreement."

Any changes in the NFL draft would have to be included in the collective bargaining agreement.

College coaches and athletic directors gave mixed reactions to Schultz's proposal Wednesday.

The strongest opposition came from Florida State University Coach Bobby Bowden. "I'm against that, period, totally, period," he said.

Vince Dooley, the University of Georgia's head football coach and athletic director, said "on the surface" he would be in favor of it, while Georgia Tech football Coach Bobby Ross and Athletic Director Homer Rice expressed reservations.

To discourage college players from dealing with agents, Schultz said he also has proposed to Rozelle that players who lose their college eligibility be allowed to enter the NFL through one supplemental draft immediately after the college football season. Currently, the NFL conducts supplemental drafts whenever it wants.

Schultz said he has asked Rozelle to push these proposals when labor negotiations resume between the NFL teams and the Players Association. He said his proposals would eliminate possible legal problems for the NCAA and the NFL.

"I think everybody knows in their heart that there is no legal argument against (a player's right) to leave school whenever he or she wants," Schultz said.

Tway Not Calling 1987 A Bad Year

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — Bob Tway went from the PGA champion and Player of the Year in 1986 to a non-winner and 47th on the money-winning list last season. The general perception is that he had an off-year.

Tway, however, takes a different view of things.

"I suppose it's natural enough to view things in increments of a year, a 12-month period."

"But I don't look at it like that."

"The way I look at it, I've won four tournaments in the last two years and that's not bad at all," Tway said before a practice round for the $650,000 Andy Williams Open golf tournament.

"Last year wasn't a bad year," Tway said. "It just wasn't as good as the year before."

And this season gives every indication of following more closely along the lines of his four-victory year in 1986.

"I'm very pleased with the way I'm playing," said Tway, who scored his first career victory in this event two seasons ago.

"I'm excited about the way I'm playing. I'm not playing as well as I'd like to be, but I'm giving myself a chance."

"I've played three tournaments and had a chance to win two of them," said Tway, who was third in the Bob Hope Classic and second in the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am.

"That's what you try to do, get yourself in position to win. That's all you can ask for: to have a chance to win."

"I haven't changed. I'm still the same person I was two years ago. I just want to be Bob Tway and go out and play the best I can and see what happens," he said before making his fourth start of the year today.

The field of 156 is scheduled for one round each on the north and south courses at the Torrey Pines Golf Club before the it is cut for the final two rounds at the more difficult South course.

George Burns is the defending champion in the chase for a $117,000 first prize.

Other major figures include Seve Ballesteros of Spain, opening his American campaign this week, Tom Watson, Fuzzy Zoeller, Ray Floyd, Curtis Strange, Tom Kite, U.S. Open title-holder Scott Simpson and Masters champion Larry Mize.

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by NBC.

Bell Settles Before Deadline

NEW YORK (AP) — George Bell settled with the Toronto Blue Jays just before the start of his arbitration hearing while next door Dwight Gooden listened to the New York Mets say his cocaine use cost them the pennant.

Bell and Gooden crossed paths Wednesday at the American Arbitration Association. Bell left with a two-year contract for a guaranteed $4.1 million. Gooden won't know until at least today if he will get the $1.65 million he wants or the $1.4 million the Mets have offered, a cut of $100,000.

Meanwhile, players won two of the three arbitration decisions announced Wednesday. Gary Redus of the Chicago White Sox and Mark Gubicza of the Kansas City Royals won. Chris Brown of the San Diego Padres lost. The owners lead 9-4 in decisions so far.

Reliever Roger McDowell of the Mets settled in addition to Bell. McDowell agreed to a one-year contract for $615,000 after he reassessed his position following losses by Toronto's Tom Henke and John Franco of the Cincinnati Reds.

Also Wednesday, Tony Gwynn's contract with the Padres was renegotiated. He will get $1.09 million this season instead of the $840,000 under his old contract, and $1.19 million in 1989 instead of $940,000.

Bell will get $1.9 million this season and $1.9 million in 1990. Toronto has an option for 1990 at $2 million, but must pay him a $200,000 if it is not exercised. Bell will receive $100,000 in other compensation during the life of the contract, including the use of an automobile paid for by the club. The option year would bring the value of the package to $5.9 million.

He also can earn $230,000 a year in incentive bonuses. If Bell is traded, his salary would increase to $2 million in 1989 and $2.1 million in 1990.

Bell batted .308 last season with 47 home runs and a league-leading 134 runs batted in.

"I can go home now, have a couple of Presidents and sit in the backyard," Bell said, referring to his favorite cigar.

Randy Hendricks, one of the brothers who represent Bell, negotiated with Blue Jays General Manager Pat Gillick in a New York hotel until past 2 a.m. Wednesday. When talks broke off, the sides were 1.8 percent apart, Hendricks said.

Bell had threatened to become a free agent at the end of this season unless he got a multiyear contract. But a breakfast meeting between Hendricks and Toronto officials moved the sides close enough for a settlement.

"I don't want to be like Tom Henke," Bell said, referring his teammate, who lost in arbitration last week.

The contract was agreed to as John Sanrfs, the scheduled arbitrator, and Tal Smith, who was to argue Toronto's case, waited outside the hearing room.

"I knew for six, seven weeks, that this was going to happen," Gillick said. "For some reason, we can't seem to get it done."

Bell, who earned $1.305 million in 1987, settled with the Blue Jays last year as his hearing was about to begin.

"I wanted him to be in the $2-million range and that's where he'll be," Hendricks said. "My client sure is a happy man right now."

Gooden was confronted with his past cocaine use in his hearing with the Mets.

"They brought it up, but it went OK," he said as left the building. "It was not bad, it really went OK."

Gooden is asking for $1.65 million, a $150,000 raise. The Mets submitted $1.4 million. The sides went into the hearing $40,000 apart on a settlement. The club's last offer was for $1.45 million — similar to the $50,000 cut taken by Ron Darling. Gooden's last proposal was for a cut to $1.49 million.

"I don't think it's every easy to tell people things they don't particularly want to hear," said Mets vice president Al Harazin, who argued the team's case. "But it's part of the process of how we negotiate salaries in this day and age."

Gooden missed 11 starts because of cocaine rehabilitation but returned June 5 and was 15-7 with a 3.21 earned-run average.

"They understood we were going to bring it up," Harazin said of Gooden's cocaine rehabilitation. "They brought it up first, in a much lesser way than we did."

Thrill And Victory Apply To Olympic Broadcasters

By RICK WARNER
AP Sports Writer

The thrill of victory and the agony of defeat — it applies to broadcasters as well as athletes at the Calgary Olympics.

Some of the early winners and losers on ABC:

Winner: The sensitive handling of the Dan Jansen tragedy. It would have been easy to sensationalize the story of the American speed skater whose sister, Jane, died hours before he fell in the 500-meter event. But ABC managed to tell the story with dignity.

Loser: Sam Posey called American Bonny Warner "the Paul Newman of luge." Huh?

Winner: Jim McKay didn't try to build false suspense after the Soviet team of Gordeeva and Grinkov dazzled the crowd in pairs skating. "We have seen the best," he said. "Now we'll find out who will finish second and who will finish third."

Loser: Sex therapist Dr. Ruth Westheimer commenting on the love life of skiers.

Winner: Those tiny microphones that let us hear the natural sound of athletes in action. The most spectacular example was the crackling noise made by skiers racing down icy Mount Allan.

Loser: The "Pin Street Blues" piece on Sunday's late-night wrap-up show. There's a brisk pin-trading business in Calgary, so ABC thought it would be cute to show a fictional story about a guy who gets rushed to a hospital after getting pricked by one of the precious souvenirs. For pinheads only.

Winner: The opening ceremonies. McKay and Peter Jennings aren't exactly the Smothers Brothers, but they worked well together as co-hosts.

Loser: After being criticized for cutting away from the U.S.-Czechoslovakia hockey game Monday night, ABC made the same mistake Wednesday when the U.S. played the Soviet Union. As a result, viewers missed the start of a thrilling U.S. comeback in the third period. Instead of live hockey, viewers saw taped skiing and figure skating highlights.

Winner: Spuds MacKenzie. The original party animal plays a hockey goalie and a ski jumper in Olympic-oriented beer commercials. His technique in both sports is flawless.

Loser: Keith Jackson's homespun style may cut it in college football, but not at the Olympics. Looking at a shot of the Calgary skyline, he said, "That glow is not the aurora borealis, but the pride of Calgary." Stick to field goals and fumbles, Keith.

Winner: "Up Close and Personal" features. The taped background during the Winter Olympics, which feature sports and athletes American viewers know very little about.

Loser: Previewing the pairs skating competition, Dick Button reminded viewers that skaters sometimes fall because "ice is very slippery." Now that's expert commentary.

Winner: "Point of View" cameras. Roughly the size of cigarette packs, these mini-cams provide an athletes-eye view of the competition. One of them was attached to a skier during a downhill practice run, letting viewers feel how fast and dangerous the sport is.

easy shots, and anybody's going to play well when they do that."

Ferry scored a basket and hit two free throws after Virginia Coach Terry Holland was called for a technical foul. A Billy King tap-in and Phil Henderson's breakaway layup capped the run and pushed Duke to a 48-33 lead with 12:50 left.

Virginia Coach Terry Holland could see that the Duke offense was focusing on Ferry, but he couldn't find the way to stop it.

"They took more time to get him the ball," Holland said. "Normally, Duke is the type of team that likes to get it up the court, but they said they were going to go to their strength X number of times, before we forced them to do otherwise."

Virginia failed to force the issue, and Ferry had a personal eight-point run that ended his scoring and led Duke to a 64-47 lead with 5:13 left.

Also plaguing Virginia was poor free throw shooting. The Cavaliers were six of 19, hitting four of 11 in the second half.

"I'm not sure we would've won, but it could've been a heck of a basketball game," Holland said. "I've got to think that our free throws are a problem of continuing to try too hard."

Kevin Strickland had 11 points and John Smith scored 10 for Duke. The victory raised Duke's record to 19-3, 8-2 in the ACC. It was also the 11th straight time the Blue Devils have beaten the Cavaliers dating back to the first round of the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament in 1983.

Bill Batts led Virginia with 14 points and John Johnson added 12 for the Cavaliers, 12-13 and 4-5.

Williams added 11 points and 11 rebounds for North Carolina, now 19-3 and 8-2 in the Atlantic Coast Conference. Reid was three of eight from the field and four of eight from the free throw line and finished with 10 points. Ranzino Smith also had 10.

Scott's Bombs Sink Terps

ATLANTA (AP) — Dennis Scott hit four of five three-point goals in the first half as Georgia Tech jumped ahead of Maryland and coasted to a 104-82 Atlantic Coast Conference victory Wednesday.

Scott had 16 of his 20 points in the first half, which ended with Tech ahead 47-28. The Yellow Jackets also dominated the half defensively, holding the Terrapins to 36 percent shooting and out-rebounding them 23-10.

"The key to the game was the first half," said Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Cremins. "We got the lead and then we kind of matched baskets and maintained the lead. If we didn't match baskets it would have been a five-point game. In the first half, Dennis Scott came out shooting like lightning."

Georgia Tech jumped to a 6-0 lead and never trailed. Maryland closed to 8-5 for its closest lead of the evening.

"They have a fine basketball team and they played extremely well," said Maryland coach Bob Wade. "We just couldn't stop them. We would get it down to 17 and they would get it back up."

Tom Hammonds scored 14 of his 21 points for Tech in the second half while Scott sat on the bench in foul trouble.

Also scoring in double figures for the Yellow Jackets were Duane Ferrell with 19, Brian Oliver with 15, Craig Neal with 13 and Anthony Sherrod with 10. Neal recorded 13 assists in the fifth consecutive game in which he had more than 12 assists. Tech improved to 18-6 overall and 5-4 in the conference.

Brian Williams scored 25 points to lead Maryland, 13-9 overall and 4-6 in the ACC.

The 104 points was the highest total that Georgia Tech has scored in a conference game since joining the ACC in 1979.

Rasmussen Breaks Bird, Celtics

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

Blair Rasmussen broke Larry Bird's nose and the Boston Celtics' backs.

The 7-foot center-forward scored 34 points, nine more than his previous career high, as Denver defeated the Celtics 138-125 Wednesday night. Rasmussen hit 14 of 19 shots from the field as the Nuggets completed a two-game season series sweep of Boston for the first time in their 11-year history.

The Nuggets outscored Boston 37-24 in the second period to take the lead for good. In the same quarter, Rasmussen scored 10 points during an 18-4 spurt and collided with Bird, breaking the Celtics star's nose.

Bird, averaging 39.2 points since the All-Star break, played sparingly the rest of the way and scored 13 points.

Denver shot 74 percent (32-for-43) from the field in the middle two quarters and equalled an NBA season-high with 48 points in the third period, which ended with the Nuggets ahead 111-90.

Kevin McHale had 33 points and 11 rebounds and Danny Ainge scored 23 points for the Celtics.

Mavericks 123, Bullets 108

Dallas handed Washington its seventh loss in eight games as Mark Aguirre scored 15 of his game-high 35 points in a runaway first quarter.

The Mavericks, who made their first eight shots and shot 69 percent from the field in the period, opened a 39-19 lead and settled for a 39-23 margin at the end of the quarter.

The Bullets, who got 22 points from John Williams, got within 10 points with 7:13 left in the third period, but the Mavericks finished the quarter with a 19-6 run, with Sam Perkins scoring 11 of his 17 points, for a 94-71 advantage. The Mavericks, who got 17 points and 19 rebounds from Roy Tarpley, increased the margin to 25 points in the fourth quarter.

Jazz 108, Suns 103

Utah beat Phoenix as Karl Malone had 29 points and 16 rebounds and Darrell Griffith passed the 10,000-point mark for his career.

Griffith, in his seventh year, scored 22 points to go six points over the 10,000-point mark. Thurl Bailey added 20 for the Jazz, who outscored the Suns 33-8 from the free-throw line.

With Utah leading 106-103, the Suns had possession with two seconds left, but Alvan Adams' in-bounds pass was deflected by Utah center Mark Eaton to John Stockton, who sank two free throws with one second to go.

Jay Humphries led the Suns with 23 points, while Larry Nance had 21 points and 13 rebounds.

Bucks 115, SuperSonics 93

Milwaukee started the fourth quarter with a 21-5 spurt and coasted to victory over Seattle.

John Lucas scored eight points and Jerry Reynolds seven during the decisive spurt, which turned an 85-75 Bucks lead after three periods into a 106-80 advantage with 2½ minutes left.

Terry Cummings scored 20 points and Reynolds 19 for Milwaukee. The SuperSonics, who lost for the eighth time in the last nine games, were led by Dale Ellis with 26 points.

Cavaliers 115, 76ers 107

Cleveland handed Philadelphia its 11th loss in 14 games as Mark Price scored 28 points and Tyrone Corbin made a key defensive play late in the game.

Price was 11-for-14 from the field, including 3-for-3 from 3-point range as the Cavaliers won their eighth road game, two more than all of last season.

The Cavaliers led by one point when Corbin stripped Charles Barkley of the ball with just over a minute to play, and Ron Harper's breakaway basket gave Cleveland a three-point lead.

Brad Daugherty had 19 points and 12 rebounds for the Cavaliers, while Barkley had 26 points and Maurice Cheeks 24 points and 13 assists for the 76ers.

Trail Blazers 110, Clippers 96

Portland beat Los Angeles for the 10th consecutive time as Clyde Drexler matched his career high of 41 points despite sitting out nearly 11 minutes of the second half with foul trouble.

Drexler, who missed his first game of the season Monday night at Utah with an injured right thumb, left the game with his fifth foul with 6:49 left in the third quarter. When he returned with 7:36 left in the game, he scored seven straight points during a 12-4 run that put the Blazers ahead 101-89 with 2:55 left. The Clippers never got closer than 10 points the rest of the way.

Benoit Benjamin scored 22 points and Michael Cage added 21 for the Clippers, who have dropped four straight and 14 of their last 16.

Jansen Is Ready To Try Once Again

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Dan Jansen skates one more time tonight for his sister, himself and a beleaguered American team in the Winter Olympics.

The young speed skater won't be favored in this 1,000-meter race, but a nation that suffered with him when he sprawled on the ice in the 500, just hours after his sister's death, will be pulling for him.

"Dan seems to be in good shape mentally, really sound," says Coach Mike Crowe. "I think he's confident. He's a lot more up, a lot more focused, a lot more keyed on what he's doing. I think he will be 100 percent."

The United States has only a single bronze going into the sixth day of the Games, and poor prospects for many more medals. The Soviets lead the medal list with three golds, four silvers and two bronzes.

The U.S. hockey team needed an upset Wednesday night against the powerful, more experienced Soviets in order to have a good shot at reaching the medal round, but a wild rally ended too soon and the Soviets won 7-5.

It was a day of disappointment more than magic all around.

Pirmin Zurbriggen, the stylish Swiss downhill gold medalist, unartistically and quite unexpectedly tripped 150 yards from the finish line in the slalom portion of the combined event and blew a certain gold.

"I knew that to win the gold I only needed to ski safely to the finish line. I was relaxed," he said. "I was totally surprised when I found the gate between my skis and I fell. I still can't understand how it all happened."

Neither could Austrian Hubert Strolz, but he didn't mind. He slipped into first place to take the gold while countryman Bernhard Gstrein moved up for the silver and Swiss Paul Accola got the bronze.

The U.S. barely missed a medal in 5,000-meter speed skating when Eric Flaim of Pembroke, Mass., finished fourth behind gold medalist Tomas Gustafson of Sweden, silver medalist Leo Visser of the Netherlands and bronze medalist Gerard Kemkers, also of the Netherlands.

Swirling, 50 mph winds scuttled Matti Nykanen's quest for a second gold medal in ski jumping. The "Flying Finn," who won the 70-meter jump, was set to try again today in the 90-meter team event.

The final two runs of the women's luge also were postponed until today with the possibility of an East German sweep if the winds kick up too hard again and force cancellation of the runs. American hopeful Bonny Warner of Mount Baldy, Calif., was eighth after two heats.

For a few minutes in a gutsy third-period comeback by the U.S. hockey team, the game seemed "Miracle on Ice II," a sequel to the 1980 gold medal hit.

This time the Soviets led 6-2 when the Americans rallied. Lane MacDonald, Scott Fusco and Todd Okerlund slapping in three goals in rapid succession while the Saddle dome rocked with "U-S-A" chants, foot stomping and wild yahoos.

Sticks were cracking and jagged pieces flew across the ice. Players slammed each other into the boards. Skates shrieked. Nobody quit.

"These guys don't know the meaning of the word that begins with 'Q,'" said assistant U.S. coach Ben Smith.

The game had all the makings of another emotional triumph by the pumped-up Americans, but the Soviets abruptly ruined the plot with another goal that assured them a perfect 3-0 record.

The Americans were left with a busted miracle and little chance for a medal. They need to beat Norway in their next game, then top undefeated West Germany even to reach the medal round.

Defense, or rather a lack of it, did in the Americans against the Soviets as it had against Czechoslovakia. The U.S. team has allowed 20 goals in three games.

Still, the U.S. squad isn't giving up, and Team USA General Manager Art Bergland says it's OK for U.S. fans to dream of gold.

"That's great. There's nothing wrong with that. Our kids dream of that," he said. "You can have cynics and critics and you can still dream."

moment for a half-minute break. This was a suitable time for us."

On the American bench, the Soviet strategy was viewed as a small victory.

"I thought we had them going pretty good," Smith said. "I think we can cause a team problems. We had them confused, and that was demonstrated by the timeout."

During the 30-second break, the Soviets regrouped while the Americans fidgeted, anxious to get back to business. Hockey rules did not permit timeouts in 1980, so the Soviets had no way to halt the American comeback at Lake Placid. But the timeout worked wonders on this one.

When play resumed, the moment was lost. The Soviets had regained their composure and five minutes later, with 2:01 left to play, Viacheslav Fetisov scored his second goal of the game to end this little fairy tale.

Final score: USSR 7, USA 5.

It was a loss, but one with a small sense of satisfaction in the comeback and the moment when the Americans had the Soviets reeling, staggering so badly they were forced to halt the action.

The miracle victory of 1980 had given way to the moral victory of 1988.

CALGARY, Alberta (AP)—Willie Gault's 8-year-old Olympic dream is on hold again.

The Chicago Bears' wide receiver learned Wednesday he won't be pushing one of the two U.S. sleds in this weekend's two-man bobsled race.

"From what I hear, they're going to let USA 1 and USA 2 ride," Gault said after a practice session aboard USA 3. "But it's not over yet. I think I still have a legitimate chance for the four-man."

Gault first set his sights on the Olympics as a track star in 1980. His effort was thwarted by the U.S. boycott. He wanted to try again in 1984, but his NFL training prevented that.

Now he's ready again, but is facing resistance from resentful teammates, sore because he was a last-minute addition to the team after missing the long training season leading up to Calgary.

Coach Jeff Jost said Wednesday that sleds driven by Brent Rushlaw and Matt Roy would be in the two-man event. Gault pushes the No. 3 sled driven by Randy Will.

"I've been told I'm out," said the 23-year-old Will of Endwell, N.Y. "They told me this morning. As far as I'm concerned, the coaching staff made the wrong decision. It's terribly frustrating."

USA 1, driven by Rushlaw, had the best time among the three American teams in Wednesday's two training runs, ranking 12th among the 48 sleds that ran.

Will's USA 3 sled, though, was second-best among the Americans and 17th overall. Roy's USA 2 was 23rd overall.

Gault's push times, measured over the first 50 meters of the course, were the best among the U.S. sleds.

"I totaled Matt today," Will said. "I ripped him up by six-tenths of a second."

But Roy said the coaches had made it clear to him that the training runs this week are only practices, not race-offs. The starting sleds, he said, were chosen in a series of races between October and January, so he never considered the possibility of Will beating him out this week.

"It would have been a real shock to me, and it would have been at least as bad a scene as the Willie Gault thing," Roy said.

Will was so angered by Jost's decision that he said he would consider driving for the Virgin Islands in future international competition.

"This is such a strange, selfish, selfish sport," Will said. "I don't think it's the American way. You're supposed to get an opportunity here."

Gault was more philosophical about being left out.

"I don't feel let down," Gault said. "I pushed faster than any of them. But life is not fair all the time. I'll be rooting for our two-man teams, and if I'm not in the four-man, I'll be rooting for them, too."

No decision has been made yet on which two U.S. sleds will compete in the four-man races Feb. 27 and 28, although Gault still is listed on the third team.

Gault said the bickering hasn't spoiled his Olympic experience.

"My dream is there. It's alive," he said. "You always climb for higher dreams. There's always another mountain to climb."

"I'd never consider it a waste of time," Gault said. "If I do nothing else, it's been a great experience to reminisce with athletes I knew from track and meet new ones. It's been unique to be able to meet athletes from all countries."

Zurbriggen Slalom Miscue Lets Stroz Gain Gold

MOUNT ALLAN, Alberta (AP) — Austria's Hubert Stroz said he would have been happy to take the silver medal behind his great friend, Switzerland's Pirmin Zurbriggen, in the Winter Olympics men's combined event.

Instead he won the gold.

Zurbriggen, having won the downhill leg of the combined and sharing sixth place in the first slalom run, needed only to finish the second run in a modest time Wednesday to collect his second gold medal in three days.

But, with the finishing line just in sight, his ski tip caught a gate and he cartwheeled out of the race to hand the Olympic title to the man he was following down the course.

After results of the two slalom runs were added to those from Tuesday's downhill, Stroz, who finished fifth in the downhill, emerged as the first men's combined Olympic champion for 40 years. The event had not been held since 1948.

Another Austrian, Bernhard Gstrein, took the silver and Switzerland's Paul Accola collected the bronze.

Simultaneously on Mount Allan, the women downhillers were practicing on the eve of their first medal race today. Continuing gusty winds made a mockery of the pre-Olympic World Cup standings as defending champion Michela Figini placed only 13th and her countrywoman, Maria Walliser, came home 22nd.

Both were upstaged by Gelnur Postnikova, a Soviet racer who had placed no higher than 13th in five timed practice runs this week but who took advantage of tailwinds to post the fastest time of 1:18.31.

Figini, who aims to become the first Olympic Alpine champion to successfully defend a title, clocked 1:19.68 and said she was hampered by the wind.

"The course changes every day, every hour," she said.

"I hope it's not windy tomorrow," Stroz, despite his triumph, said he was sad for his Swiss friend, who had won the regular downhill title Monday and was aiming for an unprecedented clean sweep of five golds.

At the finish line, after Zurbriggen had picked himself up and limped home, Stroz put a consoling arm around his friend.

"I saw Pirmin fall. When he got down, I spoke to him and he said he hooked a ski tip on the gate. It was so quick that he didn't realize it," Stroz said.

There was an almost funeral atmosphere as Zurbriggen was greeted by sporadic, sympathetic applause, a contrast to the tumultuous reception he received after Monday's downhill.

His girlfriend, Monika Julien, buried her head in her hands.

"It's a shame Pirmin didn't finish the second run because I'm sure he would have won the gold," Stroz said.

"We are very good friends, and I would have hoped for him that he would have won the gold medal and I would have been satisfied with the silver medal behind him.

"He's a super human being. He's won so many things up to now and yet he's really nice to everybody. He could have been big-headed. I like him very much because of that," the Austrian said.

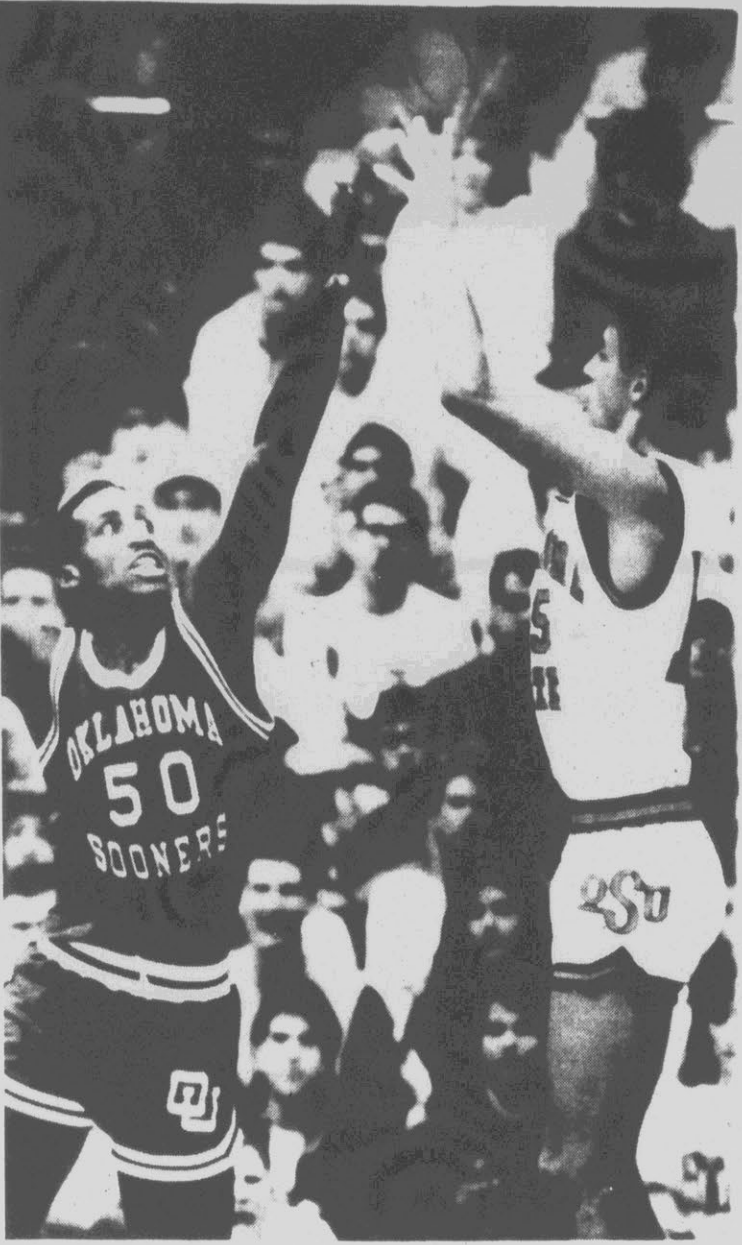

Zurbriggen's spectacular fall came about two-thirds of the way down the 57-gate course.

His two nearest rivals from the downhill leg, Franck Piccard of France and Canada's Felix Belczyk, both tumbled out of competition on the first slalom run to make Zurbriggen's job even easier.

The 25-year-old Swiss said he had no idea how he came to flick the gate with his ski.

"It was a stupid mistake," he said. "I felt

By The Associated Press
Knoxville continues to be an unfriendly place for Kentucky.

The ninth-ranked Wildcats, who lost 75-68 at Knoxville last year, fell to the Tennessee again Wednesday night. The 72-70 defeat was the Wildcats' 13th loss in Knoxville in the last 15 years.

Kentucky, 18-4 overall and 10-4 in the Southeastern Conference, had the ball for a final shot with the score tied at 70. But Clarence Swearingen batted it away and Greg Bell made a five-footer with one second remaining.

"I am proud of the way this Tennessee team rose to the occasion against a fine Kentucky team tonight," Volunteers Coach Don DeVoe said. "It was our best win of the season."

Even though the Wildcats out-rebounded the Volunteers 36-32, Kentucky did not dominate.

"I thought we did not get the ball inside as much," Wildcats Coach Eddie Sutton said. "We depended too much on perimeter shooting and that's not really what we want to do."

Kentucky made 29 of 62 shots, or 47 percent. Tennessee shot about the same, 29 of 61.

"It was not a good shooting night for Kentucky," DeVoe said. "But they had their chances and we had ours, and it came out our way this time."

In other Top Twenty games, No. 4 Oklahoma beat Oklahoma State 79-75, No. 5 North Carolina beat Wake Forest 80-62, No. 6 Duke beat Virginia 73-54, No. 10 Michigan beat Minnesota 82-78, No. 12 Syracuse beat St. John's 82-68, Iowa St. upset No. 15 Missouri 102-89, Alabama upset No. 16 Vanderbilt 88-77 and No. 20 Loyola of California beat Pepperdine 107-95.

Mark Griffin's 3-pointer tied the game at 67 with 3:18 remaining. Two free throws by Dyrion Nix put Tennessee ahead 69-67.

Ed Davender made a free throw after an intentional foul by Doug Roth. Rob Lock's basket gave the Wildcats a 70-69 lead but, with 47 seconds left, Nix tied it on the first shot of a one-and-one.

Tennessee led by as many as 13 points in the first half and was ahead 44-36 at halftime. Lock's basket eight minutes into the second half gave Kentucky its first lead at 51-50.

No. 4 Oklahoma 79, Oklahoma State 75

Stacey King scored 22 points and Dave Sieger made two important free throws with 12 seconds left as Oklahoma won its ninth straight.

Harvey Grant scored 18 points for the Sooners, 23-2 and 9-1 in the Big Eight Conference, and Sieger added 16.

Freshman Richard Dumas scored 21 points for Oklahoma State, 12-11 and 3-6.

No. 10 Michigan 82, Minnesota 78

Terry Mills scored five of Michigan's final six points, including two free throws with four seconds left.

The Gophers, 9-13 and 3-9 in the Big 10, rallied from a 13-point deficit with 12:36 left to pull within two points with 19 seconds remaining.

Ray Gaffney missed a 10-footer with four seconds left. Mills grabbed the rebound, was fouled and made both free throws.

Glen Rice led Michigan, 21-4 and 10-2, with 25 points. Willie Burton scored 26 points for Minnesota.

No. 12 Syracuse 82, St. John's 68

Stephen Thompson scored 15 of his 21 points in the second half as Syracuse pulled away with a 16-6 run.

Derrick Coleman scored 19 points and grabbed 14 rebounds for the Orangemen, 19-6 and 8-4 in the Big East Conference. Syracuse has swept the Redmen the last two regular seasons.

Matt Brust scored 15 points for St. John's, 15-7 and 6-6.

Iowa St. 102, No. 15 Missouri 89

Lafester Rhodes scored 34 points to snap out of a shooting slump and Jeff Grayer added 27 as Iowa State broke a seven-game losing streak.

Elmer Robinson scored 18 points for the Cyclones, including 16 during a 5:18 span in the second half when Iowa State rallied from an eight-point deficit to take the lead for good.

Iowa State, 17-9 and 3-7 in the Big Eight, had not won since beating Nebraska 114-76 on Jan. 20.

Lee Coward scored 24 points for Missouri, 16-6 and 5-4, which had won seven of its previous eight games and was coming off an 81-79 upset of Nevada-Las Vegas.

Alabama 88, No. 16 Vanderbilt 77 Reserve Alvin Lee scored a career-high 36 points as Alabama, 12-13 and 4-9, prevented the Commodores from moving into a tie for the Southeastern Conference lead.

Lee made 8-of-12 shots — including 6-of-9 3-pointers — and made six consecutive free throws in the final 1:28. Will Perdue scored 18 points for Vanderbilt, 16-6 and 9-5, which had won nine of its last 10.

No. 20 Loyola, California 107, Pepperdine 95

Bo Kimble scored 32 points as No. 20 Loyola of California extended the nation's longest winning streak to 18 games.

Hank Gathers added 20 points for the Lions, 21-3 and 11-0 in the West Coast Athletic Conference.

Tom Lewis scored 25 points and Levy Middlebrooks 24 for Pepperdine, 16-8 and 8-3, which led by seven points in the first half.

Other Games

Illinois Coach Lou Henson gained his 498th career victory as the Illini beat Ohio State 118-86, Illinois' sixth 100-point-plus game.

Conley Ready For Air Jordan

NEW YORK (AP) — Move over Michael Jordan, here comes Michael Conley.

Conley, winner of the $50,000 first prize in the Footlocker Slam Fest slam dunk competition at Bluffton, S.C., last Saturday, said he's ready to take on Jordan, winner of the recent NBA Slam Dunk competition at Chicago.

"I felt I could win," said Conley, the three-time national indoor champion in the triple jump, the world indoor record holder in that event and the 1984 Olympic silver medalist. "I just had better shots than anyone."

"I feel I can compete with NBA dunkers, so I should be able to beat non-NBA dunkers."

"I know Michael (Jordan of the Chicago Bulls) and Dominique (Wilkins of the Atlanta Hawks, last year's NBA Slam Dunk winner and this year's runner-up) are awesome. I'm only 6-foot-1, and they're about 6-6 or 6-7. They have an edge in height and reach, and they do it every day."

"But I feel I can be right in there with them. I can jump very well," said Conley, who played point guard for four years for Luther South High School in Chicago and one semester at Arkansas before concentrating on track and field. In high school, Conley's team won the Illinois state championship in his junior year and he made the All-State team his senior year.

As an elite triple jumper and long jumper — he won both events in the 1985 and 1986 national indoor championships — and an outstanding 200-meter runner, he has the speed and the leaping ability to reach great heights. He still plays basketball regularly in the gym at Arkansas.

In the Slam Fest, Conley was matched against Oklahoma tight end Keith Jackson; Bo Jackson, the former Heisman Trophy winner who last year played baseball for Kansas City and football for the Los Angeles Raiders; high jumper Dwight Stones; World Boxing Council middleweight champion Thomas Hearns, the only fighter to win titles in four divisions; New York Giants linebacker Carl Banks; California Angels outfielder Devon White; Olympic volleyball player Karch Kiraly, and Washington Redskins wide receiver Ricky Sanders.

In the opening round, each contestant was allowed two dunks, with the best of the two shots counting, and the field then was narrowed to five for the second round. Again, each entrant was given two dunks, with the best score counting, and the field reduced to two for the final round.

Rams Hold On To Top Panthers

BETHEL — Greene Central held off a North Pitt rally in the final minute to take a 42-41 Eastern Plains 2-A conference basketball win Tuesday.

The Rams led 42-38 with two minutes to go but missed three one-and-one opportunities over the rest of regulation to allow North Pitt to rally.

Roosevelt Hines, who led the Panthers with 16 points, hit a 3-pointer with 10 seconds left to narrow the gap to one but that was as close as it would get.

The game was close throughout, with North Pitt taking a 20-19 halftime lead and a 30-28 advantage after three quarters of play. But Greene Central rallied in the final period, outscoring North Pitt 14-11 to win the game.

The Rams, who were led by Anthony Jones with 15 points, move to 5-4 in the EPC and 9-10 overall.

North Pitt drops to 6-14 and 3-7. In the girls' game, North Pitt held off Greene Central, 42-41, as the Lady Rams got it close at the end but missed a chance to win when they couldn't get off a shot before the final buzzer.

North Pitt led 41-38 in the final minute but the Lady Rams scored to make it 41-40 and had a chance for the game-winner after North Pitt missed a chance to ice it at the free throw line in the final seconds.

Green Pilgreen led North Pitt with 17 points. Amy Heath led the North Pitt rebounding with 15, a season-high for the Pant-Hers. The Pant-Hers move to 12-6 overall and 8-2 in the EPC. North Pitt's next game is Tuesday at South Lenoir.

Greene Central falls to 8-11 and 4-5 and returns to action Friday hosting South Lenoir.

North Pitt's girls are a game-ahead in the EPC standings with three games to play. A win Tuesday against South Lenoir could clinch the conference and the number one seed for the conference tournament.

Petty Set To Return

LEVEL CROSS, N.C. (AP) — Richard Petty says he plans to race at Richmond Sunday with a replacement car and a replacement driver on standby following a spectacular crash at the Daytona 500.

Petty said he looked at the crash numerous times Monday morning on video tape with Dale Inman, his crew chief and is convinced that it was started when his car was bumped from the rear by a Ford driven by Phil Barkdoll.

"I felt the boy hit me and then I got sideways," Petty said. "I don't remember the car turning over, but I do remember after it hit the wall, because I remember looking out the windshield and seeing the ground. I knew I'd better hold onto the steering wheel because my arms were going to flip around in there and hurt me if I didn't."

Petty told the Asheboro Courier-Tribune he had already sat behind the wheel of his replacement race car.

"I've already done that. So that part of it works good. It'll probably still be good and sore. ... It feels 100 percent better today than it did Monday and if it continues to improve like that over the next 48 hours then I don't think I'll have any problem."

Petty's most serious injury from Sunday's accident was ligament damage to his right foot, which he said was mashed against the clutch after his car was struck broadside by Brett Bodine's car.

To speed the healing process, doctors placed Petty's foot in a soft cast Monday. He plans to have the cast removed Thursday afternoon prior to leaving for the Richmond 500, the second race of the Winston Cup season, on Sunday.

Petty's STP Pontiac went airborne on the 106th lap of the 30th annual event. It spun like a top on its nose along the grandstand fence entering the front straightaway, then rolled over on its top several more times before being rammed by another car after coming to rest in the middle of the track.

Petty said he remembered hitting the ground three times.

"Then, the car landed on the wheels and it got quiet. I didn't hear all the beating and banging. I think I relaxed a little bit and then (Brett) Bodine hit me and it really got rough. It was violent," Petty said. "I don't remember what the car did, but it was a tremendous jolt."

Oscar Contenders Provide Sharp Diversity In Subjects

By JEFF WILSON
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — "The Last Emperor" garnered nine Academy Award nominations, but this year's list of Oscar contenders is a diverse lot of epics, comedies and dramas, hardly a one-picture sweep.

The comedy-romance "Broadcast News" received seven nominations Wednesday, and the wartime drama "Empire of the Sun" showed up six times in the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences list.

The six nominations also received by the psycho-thriller "Fatal Attraction" and the offbeat love yarn "Moonstruck" reflect the Academy's orientation toward commercial hits rather than domination by artsy movies.

"Fatal Attraction" took in $129 million at the box office and "The Untouchables," with four nominations, brought in $76 million.

At the same time, the good showing by "The Last Emperor" indicates the academy looks beyond what succeeds commercially, said the film's director, Bernardo Bertolucci.

"I think this is the victory of a film that only wants to be cinema, that is not intimidated by television, that believes in the great screen, in cinema as the cathedral of collective imagination," Bertolucci said.

Best director nominee Adrian Lyne said he "finds it tough to believe" people really liked his movie, "Fatal Attraction."

"I got up early, fearing and trembling, watching the live thing on CNN," Lyne said. When the movie came up in category after category, "I was bouncing up and down with my wife and the dog."

"Broadcast News," set in a television news bureau, brought nominations for stars William Hurt, Holly Hunter and Albert Brooks.

"I'm on my way out to see the movie again to see what they are talking about," Brooks said.

James Brooks was nominated for producing the picture and for writing it, but, startlingly, not for directing it.

The nominations for "Empire of the Sun" also didn't include one in the directing category for Steven Spielberg, who has yet to win an Oscar for best director despite being the top moneymaking director of all time.

His film also was not among the best picture nominees: "Broadcast News," "Fatal Attraction," "Hope and Glory," "The Last Emperor" and "Moonstruck."

Two-time winners Jack Nicholson and Meryl Streep were nominated for their roles as Depression-era low-lifers in "Ironweed."

Best actor nominees also included Michael Douglas for "Wall Street"; Hurt, "Broadcast News"; Marcello Mastroianni, "Dark Eyes," and Robin Williams, "Good Morning, Vietnam."

"It made me not only proud of our film 'Wall Street,' but it reminded me of what a wonderful part Oliver Stone created," said Douglas.

Joining Miss Streep in the best actress list were Cher, "Moonstruck"; Glenn Close, "Fatal Attraction"; Miss Hunter, "Broadcast News"; Sally Kirkland, "Anna."

Sean Connery, who never was nominated in his many appearances as James Bond, placed among the nominees for supporting actor for his role as the steely Chicago cop in "The Untouchables." Others in the race: Albert Brooks, "Broadcast News"; Morgan Freeman, "Street Smart"; Vincent Gardenia, "Moonstruck"; Denzel Washington, "Cry Freedom."

All of the supporting actresses were first-time nominees: Norma Aleandro, "Gaby — A True Story"; Anne Archer, "Fatal Attraction"; Olympia Dukakis, "Moonstruck"; Anne Ramsey, "Throw Momma from the Train"; Ann Sothern, "The Whales of August."

"Like my cousin, I'm in the running and now I'm waiting for 'Super Monday' in April," said Dukakis, referring to the April 11 Academy Awards ceremonies. Hours earlier, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis won the New Hampshire Democratic presidential primary.

The five best director nominees are from Europe: Lyne and John Boorman, "Hope and Glory," from Great Britain; Bertolucci, "The Last Emperor," from Italy; Norman Jewison, "Moonstruck," from Canada and Lasse Hallstrom, "My Life as a Dog," from Sweden.

Actress Makes Change From Soap Star To Widow On TV's Prime Time

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Deidre Hall finds her role in the prime-time series "Our House" rather tame after 11 years of passion and intrigue in a daytime soap opera.

She stars in the NBC series as a young widow who, with her three children, has moved in with her late husband's father. Grandpa, played by Wilford Brimley, is something of a curmudgeon, reluctant to give up his privacy, yet affectionate and caring toward the children.

The show airs Sundays at 7 p.m. EST, the hour set aside for news and information shows, such as CBS' "60 Minutes," or family programming such as ABC's "Disney Sunday Movie."

"I got kissed in an episode in February," Hall said. "But it's not a romance that's going anywhere. It's a tropical flirtation. The family wins a trip to Hawaii, and while we're there I meet a pilot. For people used to Marlena's passionate love affairs, it may be mild."

On NBC's "Days of Our Lives," Ms. Hall played psychiatrist Dr. Marlena Evans Brady. She was voted Soap Opera Digest's Best Actress for five consecutive years and was voted most popular by Daytime T.V. magazine for 108 straight months.

A few years ago, when it appeared her character had fallen victim to the Salem Strangler, anxious callers jammed the NBC switchboards on both coasts. Hundreds picketed the network's studios in Burbank. As it turned out, the victim was her twin sister, played by Ms. Hall's real twin sister, Andrea Lovell.

Ms. Hall didn't leave the soap until "Our House" was renewed for a second season.

"I love daytime and I loved my character," she declared on a lunch break at the Lorimar Telepictures Studios. "But I did want to do nighttime television, too. Until we were sure 'Our House' was a hit, I didn't want to leave daytime. Then when we were picked up for a second year, NBC made the decision for me to leave the soap."

"My feelings were real mixed. I did both shows for a full season, which was an exhausting schedule. I knew I couldn't go on much longer.

"It was like leaving home," she said. "What made it easy was going to a place I love as much as 'Our House.'"

Marlena was written out of "Days of Our Lives" by having her disappear in a plane crash. That, of course, leaves the door open for a return.

Ms. Hall believes that most of her fans have followed her to prime time. "They are supportive, but miss the constancy of an hour every day," she said. "They also miss the passionate story lines Marlena had."

She was also noted for her "Lunchbreaks," luncheon get-togethers for her fans that have attracted up to 2,500 people. She has not yet decided whether to hold another one this year.

Last year Ms. Hall wrote a script for "Our House" about the anniversary of her late husband's 40th birthday. It was turned down by the producers.

But she wrote another script that the producers bought. She hopes it will be filmed as a Valentine's Day show for next year.

Her script, called "She'll Always Be a Girl to Me," was co-written with Cheri Ingram, who is also one of her partners in video resume company called Customs Last Stand. Mary Hart of "Entertainment Tonight" is the other partner.

In Ms. Hall's "Our House" script, David, her 13-year-old son played by Chad Allen, deals with his feelings of first love and his inability to dance.

"It's complicated by the fact that the school wants to screen an AIDS film for the students," she said. "That causes some controversy in the community and in our family."

Another complication is that a 9-year-old friend of his sister, Molly, played by Keri Houlihan, has a crush on him.

"So David has an attraction to a girl and has information on AIDS, which leads to enormous confusion," said Ms. Hall. "On the other hand, you see a 9-year-old girl deal with it, having no information about AIDS. It's a mixture of innocence and purity and young love."

When "Our House" stops filming for the season, Ms. Hall said, she will write a movie screenplay.

"It's so odd having time off after 11 years," she said. "On the soap we never had any time off."

She said she has received encouragement in her writing from producer Bill Blinn, who wrote the much-honored TV movie "Brian's Song," parts of "Roots" and produced "Fame."

Ms. Hall is married to Michael Dubelko, president of Cannell Studios.

TRANSITION — Actress Deidre Hall, co-star of NBC's "Our House," says her role in the prime-time series is rather tame after 11 years of passion and intrigue in a daytime soap opera. Stars Pay Honor To Dead Composer

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Comedian Red Skelton and singer Mary Martin were among the friends who gathered to remember composer Frederick Loewe as a man who could make life laugh and sing like the Broadway musicals he helped create.

"The tragedy of my life is that I never did get to do a musical with him," Miss Martin, stage star of "South Pacific," and "The Sound of Music," told about 75 friends and fans at an outdoor memorial service at Loewe's estate here Wednesday.

Skelton, a friend for 32 years, called Loewe's music "the pomp and splendor of life — a celestial sound that inspires happiness."

Loewe, who combined his music with the words of Alan Jay Lerner to create such Broadway classics as "Brigadoon," "My Fair Lady," "Paint Your Wagon" and "Camelot," died Sunday of heart failure. He was 86.

The two-time Tony Award winner and co-writer of memorable tunes like "I Could Have Danced All Night," "If Ever I Would Leave You," and "Thank Heaven for Little Girls" was buried after a private graveside service in nearby Cathedral City.

At the public gathering, Skelton recalled flashes of Loewe's humor: His responding to a compliment that the music in "Gigi" grew on people by calling the show "a musical fungus," and quipping that the best thing about rock music was that a listener couldn't tell if his record was scratched.

"Life was truly a feast for him," said friend Gloria Greer, "and he wanted to enjoy and savor every bit of it."

Dorothy Hart, sister-in-law of composer Lorenz Hart, said Loewe had a flair for the extravagant even before he made it big.

"If he had $90 to his name, then he'd buy $90 worth of caviar," Ms. Hart said.

Loewe grew up in Vienna, Austria.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Matthew Broderick, who had faced up to five years in prison for his role in a fatal car crash in Northern Ireland, defended a magistrate's decision to fine him for the lesser charge of careless driving.

John Gallagher, whose wife, Anna, 28, and mother-in-law, Margaret Doherty, 60, were killed in the crash Aug. 5, denounced the decision reached Monday in Enniskillen, which amounted to a $175 fine.

"I'm glad the court decided that there was no basis for charging me with reckless driving," Broderick said in a statement Wednesday. "There was never any evidence for that charge. They also determined that the details of the accident will never be fully known. However it happened, it was a tragedy."

Publicist Wendy Morris said Broderick, who was allowed to remain in New York while his lawyer entered his guilty plea, planned to try to speak with the victims' family, "but he doesn't think now is the right time."

The 25-year-old star of the movies "War Games" and "Ferris Bueller's Day Off" suffered a broken leg in the collision. His passenger, actress Jennifer Grey, was not hurt.

Actor Defends Fine

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cable companies will kick off National Cable Month in April with a 56-hour program marathon starting April 1. It will be cablecast on one basic channel in its entirety to virtually all U.S. cable systems via C-SPAN II's transponder.

In addition, the Home Shopping Network, with 19 broadcast outlets, will carry six early hours of the marathon.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The stars of NBC's "Golden Girls" will be named "Women of the Year" by the Hollywood Radio and Television Society at the 28th annual International Broadcasting Awards dinner on March 15.

You don't have to be a brilliant mathematician to be a good bridge player. However, some knowledge of the probabilities is a sine qua non if you intend playing the game seriously. This hand, from a recent team match played at New York's Cavendish Club, is purely an exercise in choosing the sounder line.

North-South were a pair of modern bridge scientists. Among the numerous gadgets they were employing were weak jump-shift responses, which accounts for South's initial action. The rest of the auction was normal enough, and the final contract was within the acceptable limits of the requirements at this vulnerability.

West led the top of his diamond sequence, and declarer's choices were straightforward. Should he play for a 2-2 trump break or a 3-3 club split. In the former case, he would lose only two trump tricks and a heart. In the latter, he would discard one heart on the third club and continue with a fourth club, discarding another heart. Unless one defender held specifically a singleton nine of trumps (highly unlikely on this auction), declarer would lose no more than three trump tricks.

41 percent; a 3-3 split happens only about 36 times in 100. That made the play of the hand simple. Declarer won the diamond in dummy and led a trump, won the return and led another trump. That landed the contract.

For information about Charles Goren's newsletter for bridge players, write Goren Bridge Letter, P.O. Box 4426, Orlando, Fla. 32802-4426.

For those who know the basic odds, the choice is simple. The probability of a 2-2 split is almost
