Private Buses Ruled Out

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

Citing concerns over additional costs, employee morale and quality of service, the Greenville Public Transportation Commission unanimously voted Thursday to recommend that City Council refuse an offer to turn the city's bus service into a privately run operation.

"If it ain't broke, don't fix it," commission member the Rev. Graham Nahouse said of GREAT, following the 5-0 decision at the public works facility.

According to City Attorney Mac McCarley, the proposal by ATE Management and Service Co. to contract city transit services came as a result of the city responding to the pressures of both state and federal funding sources to privatize transit services whenever possible.

Approximately two months ago, the city requested bids and proposals from private transit contracting firms. The Cincinnati-based company was the only firm to submit a proposal.

On Feb. 4, a representative from ATE, Laura Wilson, presented details of that proposal to members of the transportation commission.

The commission delayed a decision on whether to recommend privatization at the end of that meeting in order for the City Finance Director

Ron Kimble to obtain more detailed financial information.

At Thursday night's meeting Kimble presented to the commission detailed financial projections and comparisons of both ATE's proposal and the city's estimated costs.

"In working with ATE the last two weeks, we have again tried to reach 'apples to apples' dollar comparisons between their proposal and the current city of Greenville cost to operate the GREAT system. This is our last attempt and our best attempt in order to arrive at this 'apples to apples' comparison," he told commission members.

"Currently, as we see it, their total costs for operating the system under a private contract arrangement would be $362,115. The city's approved 1987-88 grant totals $354,620," he said.

"The proposed cost to operate the system from July 1, 1988, to June 30, 1989, is $357,217," he added.

"ATE's proposal, under the way that we've shown it here, in total dollars is approximately $4,900 higher than what our proposed 1988-89 grant budget is at this preliminary point in time. It's about $7,500 more than the $354,620 total cost of the 1987-88 transit budget with the state of North Carolina," Kimble said.

Unmanned Soviet Rocket Explodes, Destroys Three Piggyback Satellites

MOSCOW (AP) — The official Tass news agency reported that a Proton rocket failed after its launch and destroyed three satellites. U.S. defense officials said a chunk of debris, apparently from the explosion, landed near Australia and another was on its way.

Tass gave few details of the accident, but the untimely release of the satellites suggests the unmanned rocket exploded.

It was a rare report of mishap in the Soviets' commercial space program, which has been touted by Kremlin officials as a reliable means of deploying weather and navigation equipment for foreign organizations in the wake of similar failures in the U.S. space program.

Tass said in its dispatch Thursday that the satellites — named Cosmos 1917, 1918 and 1919 — were designed to test elements and equipment of a space navigation system.

In Colorado Springs, Colo., a U.S. defense official said debris believed to be from the blast landed off Australia, with another chunk expected to hit Earth on Saturday.

Bob Hollie, a North American Aerospace Defense Command spokesman, said it's "hard to say right now" if the debris poses any danger.

"We don't know exactly how big the piece is," he said, but added that it is bigger than the piece that hit near Australia.

Hollie said the debris "may or may not be related to the Proton launch by the Soviet Union. ... The problem we have is they never made it into orbit. The rocket blew up before it attained orbit."

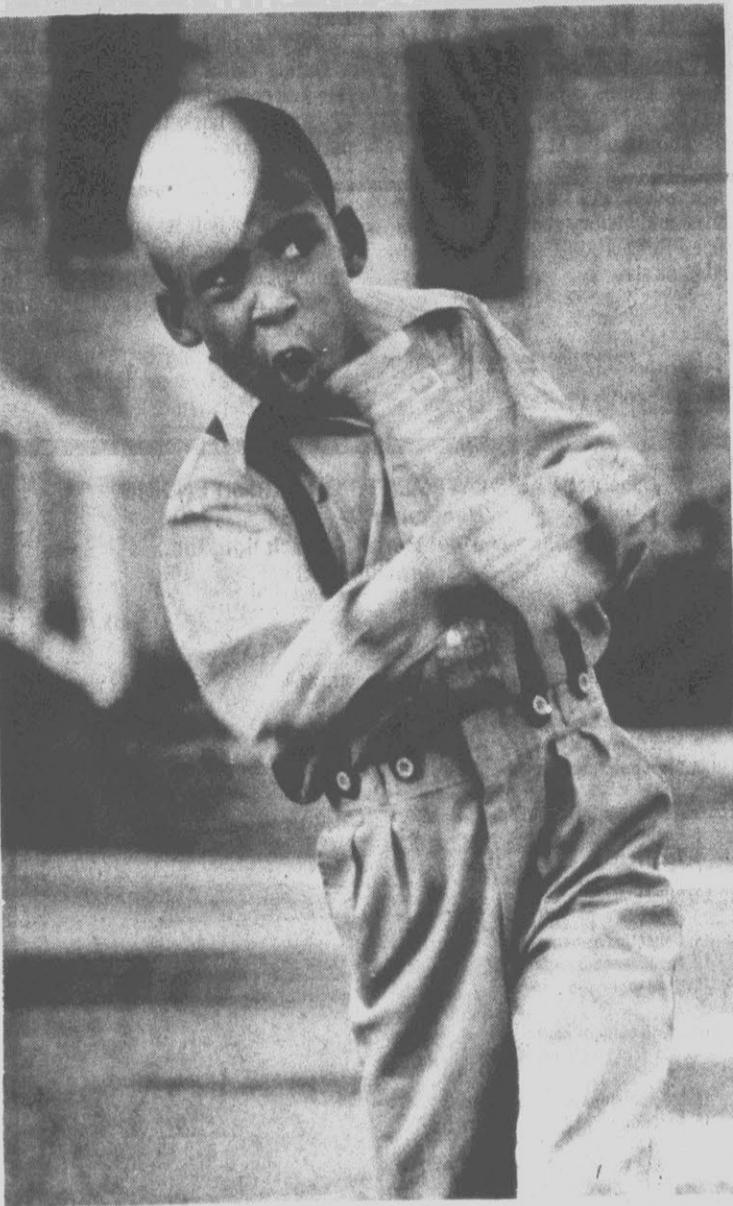

Tass said the Proton rocket carrying the satellites was launched Wednesday, "but because of a malfunction in this unit the sputniks could not be placed on the required orbit."

Tass said the rocket placed the separation unit holding the satellites on an interim orbit, but the system then malfunctioned and the satellites fell from orbit.

"On February 18 the sputniks entered dense layers of the atmosphere and ceased their existence," it said.

Soviet rockets each year carry dozens of satellites into orbit for national use and for foreign contractors, primarily from Kremlin-allied nations.

Tass announced last August that a 10-ton satellite had failed to reach orbit.

Israeli Police Launch Massive Anti-Riot Drive

JERUSALEM (AP) — Authorities today launched one of the largest police operations in Israeli history, in which 1,500 volunteer officers will patrol Jerusalem's Arab neighborhoods around the clock to head off Arab riots.

National Police Commissioner David Krauss said the operation aims to curb an anticipated new wave of unrest linked to the visit of U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz, who is scheduled to leave for the Middle East next Wednesday.

Israel radio said that in the first stage of the operation, 600 officers were stationed today at the sacred Temple Mount, the site every Friday of Moslem prayers and, since the riots began, anti-Israeli demonstrations.

On Thursday, Israel imposed tough rules on its occupied territories intended to cripple the Palestinians economically unless they stop strikes, withholding of taxes and other acts of civil disobedience.

Palestinians have been heeding calls for an economic boycott of Israel to accompany violence in the streets since Dec. 8. U.N. officials say Israeli gunfire has killed at least 55 Arabs in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, which Israel captured in the 1967 Middle East war.

No casualties were reported Thursday. But Israel radio said soldiers arrested 21 Arabs suspected of inciting and participating in riots in Burka, a West Bank village.

The radio described the police operation in Jerusalem as "one of the largest in the history of Israeli police." It said all of the estimated 1,500 police officers had volunteered and the round-the-clock patrols would begin Sunday.

City spokesman Rafi Devara said the municipality had asked that police avoid using collective punishment measures, such as curfews. He said many Arab residents had asked for police intervention "because they don't want some 100-200 young rioters to rule over a whole neighborhood."

About 340,000 Jews and 135,000 Arabs live in Jerusalem, once regarded as a symbol of Arab-Jewish coexistence.

"Coexistence between Arab and Jews has collapsed," Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kolek told reporters earlier this month as he toured a refugee camp within city limits that had been put under curfew.

For the first time in 20 years, curfews have been imposed on the Shufat refugee camp and Al Tur Arab neighborhood and the 31 Arab public schools that teach 15,000 students have been closed.

Since the unrest began, at least 417 Arabs have been arrested in Jerusalem. There have been no fatalities in the city. But in two separate clashes in Shufat this week, police were reported to use live ammunition for the first time since December, wounding two Arabs.

For the last two months, about 600 policemen have been sent each Friday to the sacred Temple Mount to restrain Palestinian protests that frequently follow noon Moslem prayers.

Budget Plan Gets Mild Reception

By ALAN FRAM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's $1.1 trillion budget for fiscal 1989 is his first spending plan in years that is not being called "dead on arrival" by his Democratic opponents in Congress.

And even though there were mutterings on Capitol Hill of Trojan horses and smoke and mirrors, it seemed clear Thursday that despite likely fights over federal priorities, this year's budget battle should be relatively mild.

The spending plan contains a deficit of $129.5 billion, less than the $136 billion target required by the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget law. The government would spend $1.094 trillion, while taking in $965 billion in receipts.

The reason this spending blueprint has been better received by lawmakers than have others in recent years is that it strives to conform with the budget accord Reagan reached with the Democratic-controlled Congress last November.

Under that so-called summit agreement, drawn in the aftermath of the October stock market crash, legislators and the administration set this budget's overall spending ceilings for military, domestic and foreign aid spending. In addition, Reagan already has signed $14 billion in new 1989 taxes called for in the pact.

With 1988 an election year, lawmakers are unlikely to insist on revisiting those painful subjects.

"It's like tying two cats by the tail and throwing them over the clothesline," Sen. Ernest Hollings,

Airport Board Approves $2.6 Million 1989 Budget

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt-Greenville Airport Authority approved a $2.6 million budget for the next fiscal year at its monthly meeting Thursday. Fiscal 1989 begins July 1.

Authority members also received a report from the city's planning department dealing with future land acquisition.

The Federal Aviation Administration has designated the Pitt-Greenville Airport as a primary air carrier, airport Director Jim Turcotte said in his written budget message to the authority. This guarantees the airport at least $300,000 annually from the FAA in entitlement funds in addition to discretionary funds for which airports compete, Turcotte said.

The authority is projecting operating expenses for fiscal 1989 at $620,000 and budgeting a little more than $2 million for capital improvements. The group is requesting $1.5 million from the FAA to cover most of the projects and Turcotte said he is looking for continued growth.

Candidates Take On Tobacco

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — While it once was considered political suicide to speak ill of tobacco in the South, some observers say cautious criticism about health risks or government subsidies is no longer igniting the wrath of those who depend on the golden leaf.

In recent weeks, two candidates hoping for a strong showing in the South — Republican Pat Robertson and Democrat Albert Gore Jr. — have raised eyebrows with statements that might have doomed them in earlier elections.

In an article in Conservative Digest, Robertson proposed a 10-year phaseout of the domestic tobacco industry, with federal assistance to cushion the blow for farmers and cigarette manufacturers.

The plan was widely condemned in tobacco circles.

"Ludicrous and asinine," said Joe King, a grower and president of the 300-member South Carolina Tobacco Association. But many observers say that while Robertson's plan did not help him in the South, it apparently did not devastate him either.

"Robertson's getting some criticism but he's also getting some praise for having the courage to take on an issue like this," said Earl Black, political science professor at the University of South Carolina.

In Robertson's home state of Virginia, the impact has been hard to gauge, said Steve Haner, executive director of the state's Republican Legislative Caucus.

"You go down to southside Virginia where they grow the stuff and it's fatal to talk like that," Haner said. But he said Robertson had "a committed cadre of followers" who would not turn against him because of his stand on tobacco.

Robertson himself was unconcerned. "I'm not about to lose any votes on this," he said in Columbia, S.C. "I'm on the side of the angels on this one."

Gore's statements were less provocative. During a mid-January debate in Iowa, he said he opposed

Minority Task Force

"Scratch it," "keep it" and "combine" were popular phrases during the Pitt County schools' Minority Task Force meeting Thursday evening as ideas and suggestions compiled earlier by the group were reviewed.

The task force of about 26 members, meeting at Greenville Middle School, separated into two groups to consider suggestions and combine them into categories.

Group one dealt with early identification and intervention of high risk students and program improvement based on measurement of student achievement. Group two dealt with selecting and developing strong teachers with behaviors of high expectation, leadership of the principal, creating a positive school climate and initiating collaborative efforts.

Having deleted and combined suggestions in those categories, the task force will prioritize the suggestions during its next meeting.

Airport Board Approves Budget

of this year. There are really no new projects we have not already begun," said Turcotte. The authority had planned to use state and local funds for expanding the terminal, but it delayed the project to take advantage of the federal money. Entitlement funds will cover 75 percent of the cost of public use space. The $700,000 expansion project should accommodate the airport's needs through 1996.

The authority is budgeting $600,000 for land acquisition during fiscal 1989. The airport needs 50 additional acres of land around the runway clear zone in order to meet FAA requirements dealing with the instrument landing system. Acquisition of the property is critical, Turcotte said in his report.

Greenville's Planning and Development Department presented the first draft of a land use plan for the airport area. "The primary purpose is to identify problems of concern. The second step of the project will be implementation," said Lynne James, planner for the city of Greenville.

"This is based on the assumption the airport will expand if it is to continue to meet service needs in the area," said Mrs. James. The land use plan addresses concerns such as noise, zoning, runway expansion and land acquisition.

Runway 19, running north and south, will become the primary runway. Two other runways had been considered, but the Tar River, a major intersection and other structures prohibit expansion.

"The best way to go is runway 19 going north," said Mrs. James. "That's the runway that has the most room for expansion without there being too much conflict. Some of the land there is already owned by the airport, and a lot of it is not developed." The main obstacle is N.C. 33 as planes would be flying near the road, she said.

The runway clear zone would extend north as far as Greenfield Boulevard, Mrs. James said. The land use plan also examines the effects noise would have on residential neighborhoods in areas around Greenfield Terrace and Oak Grove Estates.

"It can be modified. It's just a draft," said Mrs. James in her presentation to the authority. "You all have the most direct concerns in the future operations of the airport." Eventually the plan needs to be endorsed in some fashion or the other, she said.

The authority will study the plan and deliver a report at its March 5 meeting. City and county planning commissions are also expected to offer recommendations or an endorsement in March.

Other projects the authority is planning include: expanding the ramps and aprons in order to meet federal safety regulations requiring the separation of commercial aircraft and general aviation aircraft; installing a new approach lighting system, and constructing above ground fuel storage to meet new Environmental Protection Agency standards.

Belk's Celebrates 100th Birthday

Belk's of East Carolina Mall will join nearly 350 other Belk's and Leggett's department stores in 16 Southeastern states in celebrating the company's 100th anniversary beginning this weekend.

The Greenville store will begin the centennial celebration at 9:50 a.m. Saturday with a performance by the East Carolina University Pep Band, according to Greenville Banks Jr., Belk's store manager.

Other scheduled morning activities include the serving of refreshments, the release of balloons and remarks from store representatives.

Banks said several locally elected officials have also been invited to attend the festivities.

A fashion show highlighting the latest spring fashion trends is scheduled at 2 p.m. and, throughout the day, accordionist Otto Dykstra will provide entertainment.

"The purpose of these activities is to say thanks to this community for its contributions to our success. We want to say, 'You're the Reason' for our first 100 years of business," he added.

"You're The Reason" is the slogan Belk's has adopted for its anniversary theme, which is used along with a gold "100" logo.

Banks also said in addition to Saturday's events, other communitywide activities are planned for the anniversary year.

The first Belk's store was opened by founder William Henry Belk on May 29, 1888, in Monroe. The store in Greenville opened its doors in 1938, 50 years after the founding of the first store.

Today Belk-Leggett is the nation's largest family and management owned department store organization in the United States, employing approximately 33,000 people.

Local Man Faces 2 Robbery Charges

Five people, including one man who was charged with two counts of armed robbery, were arrested on theft charges by Greenville police Thursday.

Detective J.E. Harris said Reginald Maurice Langley of C-19 Glendale Court was arrested about 9:30 a.m. on two armed robbery counts and two counts of kidnapping in connection with robberies at the Snooty Fox and Maternity Moments at 698 Arlington Blvd. on Feb. 5.

Officer B.M. Highald said Elaine Monique Harris, 18, of 103H Lakeview Terrace was charged with larceny in connection with the theft of $90 in cash from Bojangle's restaurant on Memorial Drive in an incident reported at 12:27 p.m.

According to Detective S.B. Pass, Clifton Douglas Knight, 37, of Tarboro was arrested on a breaking, entering and larceny charge in connection with a break-in at Rose's at Stanton Square Shopping Center on Tuesday. Pass said a lawn mower and yard light taken in the break-in were recovered.

Gregory Ward Floyd, 23, of 510 E. 10th St. was arrested on a shoplifting charge, Officer J.W. Corbett said, in connection with an incident at the Farm Fresh store on Greenville Boulevard that was reported at 3:58 p.m.

Officer H.D. Hines said Roderick Glenn Joyner, 21, of 2123 S. Village Drive was charged with larceny in connection with the theft of $123 in cash and $80 worth of clothing from the Pirates Bay Car Wash about 9:13 p.m.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Maintain Medical Zoning Integrity

If the integrity of Greenville's medical district is to remain intact, flower shops should not be allowed in the most stringent medical-related zone.

The City Council should have no trouble denying a request to permit flower shops to operate in the crucial MD-2 zone. It is puzzling why the board has refused to act on the issue since Oct. 8. It is also perplexing why the council finds it difficult to stake out a position against an action that could damage one of the city's most valuable assets.

Flower shops are a commercial endeavor not consistent with the intent of MD-2 zoning. That classification was designed to create a district for directly medical-related uses such as hospitals, rehabilitation centers, medical offices and clinics. Diluting these restrictions to allow flower shops would be an inappropriate alteration to the medical district plan.

In addition, making one exception would set a precedent for more allowances, weakening the effectiveness of the zoning designation and the entire project.

Besides, flower shops are allowed in other medical zones, such as MD-4 and MD-6. This type of business is not denied access to the medical district.

Greenville's Board of Adjustment correctly denied a request to locate a flower shop as a special use in the MD-2 district. In addition, the Planning and Zoning Commission recommended the City Council deny permission to allow flower shops in the zone. It is difficult to understand why the council has not heeded the advice and example set by these two advisory boards.

Perhaps the council should be reminded of the time and community support that went into the creation of the medical district zones. The restrictions were not capriciously put into place by an anonymous entity. They were carefully and fairly devised by a diverse group of citizens representing local interests. They were then approved by duly-elected public officials.

The decisions made were sound ones designed to create a high quality district to foster appropriate, prosperous medical-related growth. The decisions were also based on the need to prevent a broad community and regional resource — Pitt County Memorial Hospital and the East Carolina Medical School complex — from falling victim to development that could choke its potential.

The council should consider these facts and the long-range value of the medical district before it votes to dilute the integrity of the zoning classifications. The medical district represents a substantial community investment and will produce, if protected, an equally large return. It should be allowed to expand within the zoning guidelines set in the original plan.

Council members should deny the request to permit flower shops in the MD-2 zone. Any other course of action would be in conflict with their commitment to public duty.

Looking Ahead

The New Hampshire presidential primaries ended with no particular surprises.

Vice President George Bush was front runner among the Republicans with 38 percent of the votes. Sen. Robert Dole came in second with 29 percent of the voters. That, however, could be depicted as a respectable showing for Dole, who topped the Iowa voting.

On the Democratic side it was no surprise that Michael Dukakis was the winner. The governor of Massachusetts was in friendly territory in the neighboring state. Richard Gephardt, a Missouri congressman, came in second for the Democratic nomination.

Immediately after New Hampshire the candidates and the nation turned their attention to Super Tuesday, the primary which includes southern and other states on March 8.

That is the event which will make or break many of the candidates on both tickets. It involves a huge chunk of the nation's electorate and it may set the pattern for an eventual national primary day.

All of the candidates were claiming that they will do well on Super Tuesday. Democrats with southern ties were saying that things would be different for them on familiar territory.

On the Republican side, both Bush and Dole, with one win each, were expecting to continue their momentum when the campaign moves south. Pat Robertson, though, with a southern base, is counting on his best showing on Super Tuesday.

There has rarely been a political event as significant as Super Tuesday. Iowa caucuses and New Hampshire primaries have long been early bellweathers of how presidential candidates are faring. Super Tuesday, however, has real clout. It will mean the end of the road for some of the candidates still in the race, and it could even determine the nominee for one of the parties.

Public Forum

To the editor:

The Congress of the United States is trying to convert America to another Nazi Germany by passing a law to give illegal aliens "election day voting rights" (Universal Voter Registration Act, S.1888 and H.R. 3666). This is another example of the federal bureaucracy infringing on the rights of states. If this bill is passed, the Constitutionality of it should be challenged. The passage of this bill would assure these politicians that voted for it the loyalty of these people in this presidential election and all subsequent elections. This would also assure these traitorous Congressmen lifetime tenure in office. It would grant to these illegal aliens a privilege that we poor citizens don't have. A voting law in just about every state requires that a citizen must be on the registry to vote months before you can vote in any election. This is a good law that cuts down on election fraud. These illegal aliens are the new privileged breed.

Write President Reagan to veto this bill, if it is passed by this traitorous Congress, but for now write your congressmen and senators and demand that they vote against this bill. Don't let these election day "ringers" destroy our freedom and our country. This is the power grab of the century.

C.U. Morgan

To the editor:

When Congress overrode President Reagan's veto last fall to pass the "Comprehensive Anti-Apartheid Act," they enacted a law that threatened to prohibit legal imports of strategic minerals from South Africa one year after passage. The threats were real. And they have forced the United States to become dependent for such minerals on the Soviet Union.

To compound the problem, leftist House member Ronald V. Dellums has introduced a measure that would repeal the "Anti-Apartheid Act" and substitute a bill that would ban all imports of any mineral from South Africa. Alan Cranston has introduced a similar measure in the Senate.

Shirley Hobbs Scheibla of Barron's Magazine illustrated the new American dependency on Soviet minerals by citing these statistics: "U.S. imports of chrome ore from the Soviets surged to a whopping 6,440 tons per month on average for the six months ending March 31, 1987, compared with a mere 479 tons during the legislatively-designated base period, 1981 through 1985."

It is becoming increasingly clear that only the Soviets have profited from sanctions. Meanwhile, South Africa's black population — whom sanctions were intended to help — has suffered escalating economic hardship due to pull-outs by U.S. companies.

Dr. Feelgood Triumphs At The Polls

'The Dr. Feelgoods of both parties had a field day in New Hampshire Tuesday; the Mr. Hair Shirts have proved once again that they are as welcome as globe salesmen at a meeting of the Flat-Earth Society.'

proved once again that they are as welcome as globe salesmen at a meeting of the Flat-Earth Society.

The Republicans can be expected to conduct a happy-talk campaign. Their approach, collectively, has been a combination of pastoral counseling and psychotherapeutic ego massage. They come off sounding like the French pop psychologist of the 1920s, Dr. Etienne Coue, whose mantra was: "Everyday in every way I'm getting better and better" — and why not? Despite ominous underlying problems, the economy buzzes along, so the GOP hopefuls style themselves after that master of inspirational uplift, President Reagan, while crossing their fingers that if they win the economic ax won't fall on their watch. They can be forgiven the almost ritualistic invocation of his name and the Kremlinque rhetoric about how all good Republicans must follow Reagan's precepts.

It is less easy to forgive the Democrats who give us a kind of goulash Reaganomics. The Democratic Feelgoods, unlike their GOP counterparts, are bold and impassioned in their diagnoses of our ailments (deficits, problems with our trading partners, lack of educational opportunity or the plight of the homeless), but their remedies are so much snake oil. The most outrageous nostrums typically come from those with the best chance of securing the nomination. From Michael S. Dukakis, the winner in New Hampshire, we get the Grace Commission report in easy-to-swallow coated Democratic caplets: The deficit will be closed by attacking the pestilential trio of waste, fraud and abuse. That, and the addition of a legion of certified public accountants assigned to the Internal Revenue Service, will mop up tax cheats in the manner of Kaopectate attacking intestinal bacteria.

Dr. Richard A. Gephardt's pick-me-up is tariff therapy that is based on the dubious homeopathic principle that you cure protectionism with more protectionism. Gephardt's magic-bullet cure for the federal deficit is the oil-import fee, which will undoubtedly help him in Texas but for much of the East Coast is the economic equivalent of leeching and cupping.

Paul Simon, who lagged in third place in New Hampshire, urges on his patients the quack elixir of the balanced-budget amendment while at the same time making extravagant vows to upgrade education and medical care. Simon's approach evokes memories of Hollywood producer Sam Goldwyn's admonition to his employees: Spare no expense to make everything as economical as possible.

Why do political candidates persist in this morally dubious practice that insults the intelligence of voters by reassuring them that complicated and intractable problems can either be ignored or simply dosed with palliatives? After all, would a critically ill patient choose a physician for his bedside manner or for his therapeutic skill? History demonstrates that unctuous and even wrongheaded reassurance wins out consistently over unwavering bluntness.

Franklin D. Roosevelt exceeded Republican President Hoover in 1932 in balanced-budget rhetoric, promising not only a 25 percent reduction in federal spending but retaliatory tariffs as well. F.D.R., to his credit, was probably sincere about his support for these policies that would have proved disastrous had he actually carried them out.

With the current crop of Democratic hopefuls, there is more than a hint of opportunism and even disingenuousness. But since the Democrats remain long shots in the general election, they will probably never be called on to test their specious therapies. If the economy takes sick between now and November, the voters will turn to them anyway because in a two-party system you always know where to go for a second opinion.

Strength For Today

An elderly man and woman had recently built a new home, and because they had become over the years devoted to certain dilapidated pieces of furniture, they had largely built their home around these few pieces. Those who enter this home find it hard to understand the attachment these people have for pieces that are neither antique nor modern, but just run-down. Recently they were greatly grieved when they tried to get some of this furniture into one of the rooms and found it would not go through the door.

This situation is symbolic of a type of mind we often encounter. People who have all the advantages of good education still cherish old, outmoded prejudices and animosities which have no education, their business around things which should long since have been consigned to the junk heap.

Report Cites Alleged Injustices To Indians In Lumberton Area

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
Associated Press Writer
PEMBROKE, N.C. (AP) — The figures have been presented to them before, and when an ad hoc committee released new figures illustrating injustices to Indians and blacks, some residents in Robeson County were looking for new answers.

"We're basically a peaceful people, but after a while, it will build up and then you have no other resort but violence," said Kayron Maynor, one of about 800 people who attended a meeting at West Robeson High School to discuss the findings of a report on Indians in the criminal justice system.

That emotion came out almost three weeks ago when two men took hostages in the news room of The Robesonian in Lumberton. The report was about to be released when the incident occurred, and the meeting had already been scheduled.

"We've been sold out time and time again, and I hope this isn't another facade. I hope it isn't," Ms. Maynor said.

Henry McKoy, chairman of the committee which developed the report for the Commission of Indian Affairs, said action was already under way.

"The Commission of Indian Affairs and the governor's office and others have looked at these recommendations and are in the process of putting together implementation steps to carry them out," said McKoy, deputy secretary in the N.C. Department of Administration. "So the report is being addressed."

But McKoy added that some recommendations in the report fall on the community's shoulders.

"The community has to monitor the courtrooms, the community will have to take the initiative to get Indians involved in the legislative and the electoral process," McKoy said. "The community will have to take some responsibility in educating Indians about how to successfully go through a court system."

The report showed that blacks and Indians were arrested more often, detained longer and served longer sentences than whites.

Titled "A Report On The Treatment of Indians By the Criminal Justice System," the report recommended the establishment of public defender offices in North Carolina's 6th, 16th and 30th Judicial Districts — which include most of the state's Indians, called for a review of pre-trial release policies and a recruitment drive to bring more Indians into the criminal justice system.

"What this report points out is that we have not had fairness," said Lonnie Revels, commission chairman. "But we're going to demand that fairness. You have to get involved."

Figures indicated that Indians and blacks between the ages of 15 and 44 were arrested more often than whites. Twenty-one percent of the arrests studied between January and December 1985 were black, 18 percent were Indian and 10 percent were white.

In Robeson County, the study said, 3 percent of Indians arrested went to prison, 2 percent of the blacks were imprisoned and 1 percent of the whites.

Judges seemed to hand out sentences that were fair, the study said, but Indians served more of their sentences than whites and blacks served longer sentences than the other two groups.

The committee also called for:

- Revised procedures that would prevent suspects from spending unnecessary time in court.

- Supplementing the training of law enforcement officers.
- Monitoring courtroom proceedings.
- Increase awareness in the Indian community of electoral process.
- Ensuring a defendant's right to counsel.
- Establishing dispute settlement centers, and;
- Appointing a task force on the criminal justice system.

Gov. Jim Martin said Indians and blacks seeking a change in Robeson County should make the changes themselves through the election process. Martin made his comments in a letter presented to the commission at the meeting.

"From my observation the change that is most needed is a change from within the people who live in the county," Martin said in the letter.

"If in their hearts they want to live in peace and harmony with each other and be served by a government that feels the same way, they can, by their joint efforts at the ballot box cause this to happen," Martin said.

The work of those people who live outside the county will not have a lasting effect, Martin said, but he added that his interest is not "a one-day interest."

"It is a sincere desire on the part of my administration to address — and hopefully solve — many of the challenges facing Robeson County."

Dorm Fire Injures Chowan Students

MURFREESBORO, N.C. (AP) — About a half-dozen Chowan College students were injured early today when fire broke out at a two-story dormitory on the junior college campus.

Tommy Gee, a dispatcher with the Murfreesboro Police Department, said firemen were called to the dormitory about 12:30 a.m. after someone reported smoke in the lobby. The fire was reported out about two hours later.

"I can't say exactly how many were injured, but it would be somewhere in the area of six," Gee said. "We don't have a hospital here, so they were taken to Roanoke-Chowan Hospital in Ahoskie, about 19 miles from here."

A Chowan student, who asked not to be identified, said Mixon Hall, where the fire occurred, housed up to 150 male students. She said the fire forced the evacuation of two other nearby men's dormitories, but did not threaten classroom buildings or women's dormitories on the campus.

She said the flames broke through the roof of the dorm, attracting a crowd of students.

"It just looks like a total loss to me," she said. "There is a lot of smoke and water damage on both floors and the lobby is totally demolished."

Gee said he did not have a dollar amount, but there was "right much damage" to the building. The cause of the fire was still under investigation.

Telephone calls to the college's switchboard and security office were not answered. The Hertford County school about 2,500 students is about 100 miles northeast of Raleigh and 20 miles south of the Virginia border.

Officials at the Ahoskie hospital refused to answer any questions, but Gary Heath, a dispatcher with the Duke Medical Center Lifeline service in Durham, said doctors in Ahoskie had requested that a helicopter be sent to transport at least one student.

"We can't get up there due to the weather," Heath said. "The weather has socked that area in and we can't get the helicopter to them."

"The doctors here are talking to them by telephone, and from what I understand, they have inhalation burns," Heath said.

Oyster Removal Program Suspended

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — A state program to move oysters from permanently closed beds in polluted waters to areas temporarily closed by the red tide has been suspended in Carteret County because the oysters have run out.

"Participation in the program has grown rapidly in the last month and that has resulted in a depletion of oysters for relay," the state Division of Marine Fisheries said Wednesday.

Division spokesman Mike Marshall said between 350 and 400 commercial fishermen were relaying oysters in Carteret County. A total of 639 fishermen are relaying oysters in southeastern North Carolina, he said.

Under the state plan, fishermen are paid $1 per bushel of oysters moved from polluted waters to red tide waters. Once the algae disappears, officials expect clean water will filter through the transplanted shellfish and cause richer harvests.

The program remains in effect in the White Oak River and other waters outside Carteret County and is not in danger of being suspended in those places, officials said.

State Division of Marine Fisheries officials are expected to announce by Monday whether the program will be renewed or canceled.

"We are supposed to receive more information Friday about waters possibly opening up (to shellfishing)," Marshall said. "In the meantime, this week we will be working to structure the program so that we can manage no matter what."

State officials are awaiting the results of tests from shellfish meat samples. Those samples will show if the red tide algae's toxin is present in shellfish taken from waters now free of red tide.

Jail Rules

RALEIGH (AP) — A powerful committee of state legislators has sided with county officials and sheriffs in an escalating feud over state-proposed jail regulations.

Members of the Joint Legislative Committee on Governmental Operations voted unanimously Thursday to ask the state Department of Human Resources to postpone adopting the new regulations until it is clear how much they will cost counties.

The proposed standards increase the required size for single-person cells from 35 square feet to 60 feet, larger than any single-person cells existing in North Carolina county jails. The standards also make changes in jail operations, inmate health and nutrition.

Icebreaker

WILMINGTON (AP) — The Wilmington City Council has launched a campaign to attract a U.S. Coast Guard vessel to replace the icebreaker Northwind at the Coast Guard dock along the Cape Fear River.

Council members have asked the city manager's office to arrange a meeting next month with U.S. Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., to discuss lobbying efforts.

The Northwind will be decommissioned this fall as part of Coast Guard budget cuts, and city officials hope the Coast Guard will assign another vessel to the Port City soon.

Lt. Pat Timmerman, a ship's officer, estimated that the families of crewmen in Wilmington provide about $750,000 in salaries to the local economy, in addition to various goods and services purchased while the ship is in port here.

Masked Attacker

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A Cumberland County grand jury has indicted a Fort Bragg soldier on 44 felony charges stemming from a series of alleged sex crimes over the past year in which authorities say the attacker used a mask to hide his identity.

Staff Sgt. James Henry Woodard, 31, was being held in the Cumberland County Jail under a bond of more than $2.4 million, authorities said.

Woodard faces 13 counts of first-degree burglary, 20 counts of first-degree sex offense, eight counts of first-degree rape, two counts of second-degree sex offense and a single charge of second-degree rape.

The crimes, which allegedly occurred between October 1986 and August 1987, involve 13 Cumberland County women, according to court documents.

Coach Disappears

RALEIGH (AP) — Authorities are investigating the disappearance of a basketball coach at Southern Junior High School in Roxboro after his car was found earlier this week.

A car belonging to Sam A. Jones, 39, was located about 2:50 a.m. Tuesday in Chatham County, said Lt. Charles Thomas of the sheriff's department. Jones, who lives in Durham, was last seen at Southern Junior High School on Feb. 5, and was reported missing by his family, Thomas said.

Jones' car was locked, the keys were not inside and there was no sign of foul play, Thomas added. The car had been parked on the shoulder of SR 1008 near a boat ramp since at least Feb. 10, he said.

Barber School

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Fayetteville Technical Community College will take initial steps next week toward establishing the state's first public barbering school, officials said.

Representatives of the school and the state Board of Barber Examiners will host a hearing for area barbers at the FTCC auditorium Monday to discuss the need for a school, said Larry Norris, FTCC's vice president for academic affairs.

If a school is established at FTCC, it will be the first public school of its kind in the state, said Jane Simpkins, executive secretary of the barber examiners board.

Dole Tries To 'Set Record Straight'

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Republican presidential contender Robert Dole says he wanted to speak to North Carolina voters before Vice President George Bush's television ads begin airing here.

"I wanted to get here before the TV ads," the Kansas senator said Thursday at a rally before about 250 supporters. "So before you see some TV ad saying Bob Dole will raise your taxes, say you've heard it from the candidate himself. My record is very, very good. We don't need any more tax increases."

Dole said the ads — which portray his stand on taxes, oil import fees and arms control — had victimized him in New Hampshire, where he finished behind Bush.

"We have to set the record straight, and we hope to do that," before the March 8 Super Tuesday primary, Dole said at a news conference at Charlotte-Douglas International Airport that was held before the rally.

"I know this is a rough-and-tumble business, but you don't go out and distort someone's record," he said.

Dole, whose wife, Elizabeth, accompanied him, shunned questions about whether the campaign had turned mean.

"You're talking to the wrong side. As far as I know we didn't do anything in Iowa or New Hampshire. We were the victims," Dole said. "All you need to do is look at the record. It's all one-sided. The deceptive ads were their fault (Bush's campaign)."

Dole, the Senate minority leader, acknowledged Wednesday that he has been too soft on Bush and had erred in the final days of the New Hampshire campaign by not responding to Bush's ads.

"I don't know how to measure the impact of those ads, but they certainly had an impact," he said. "A lot of voters apparently made up their minds on election day."

After winning in Iowa, Dole finished behind Bush in the New Hampshire primary. But he said he was optimistic that he would do well in the upcoming South Carolina Republican primary and in the March 8 Super Tuesday primary elsewhere.

He said the S.C. caucuses are "critical, in the sense that it is the threshold of the South. I will spend a lot of time and money there, as much as in any other state."

He said his Southern message for the campaign would be "pretty much the same thing I've been pushing all along. I believe Southerners are concerned about deficit reduction, trade and agriculture, which is very important to the South. The message is not going to change. It will be the same conservative message."

And he said he believed "the South will be good Dole country. This is Elizabeth's home state. We have an opportunity here and we're ready to go to work."

Mrs. Dole, a native of nearby Salisbury, also stressed the 27 years of experience her husband has in public service.

"The question is, 'Who do we want sitting across from Mr. Gorbachev?'" she said. "We want a person who's been in the arena not on the sidelines."

The Kansas senator could not resist making a reference about his wife's popularity in the Tar Heel state.

"A lot of people want the Dole-Dole ticket," he said. "But I don't want to be vice president."

Suicide Victim Left Note About Fraud

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Steven Davis scribbled a note in his last minutes of life admitting he'd defrauded more than 500 people who bought insurance from his agency.

"I am the president of Davis-Petty Insurance Center and of all the corporations," Davis wrote almost illegibly on a legal pad. "I am clearly responsible and no one else should be charged for my crimes."

Then, on a dirt road a mile from his father's house in Randolph County, he put the barrel of a .38-caliber revolver to his head and pulled the trigger, officers said Thursday.

The Randolph County Sheriff's Department released excerpts of the suicide note.

State officials, however, said Davis' suicide confession won't halt legal proceedings against the High Point company and its other officers: Davis' wife, Lynn Petty Davis, and his father, Gilbert R. Davis. Court papers allege that both conspired with Steven Davis. Efforts to reach them Thursday were unsuccessful.

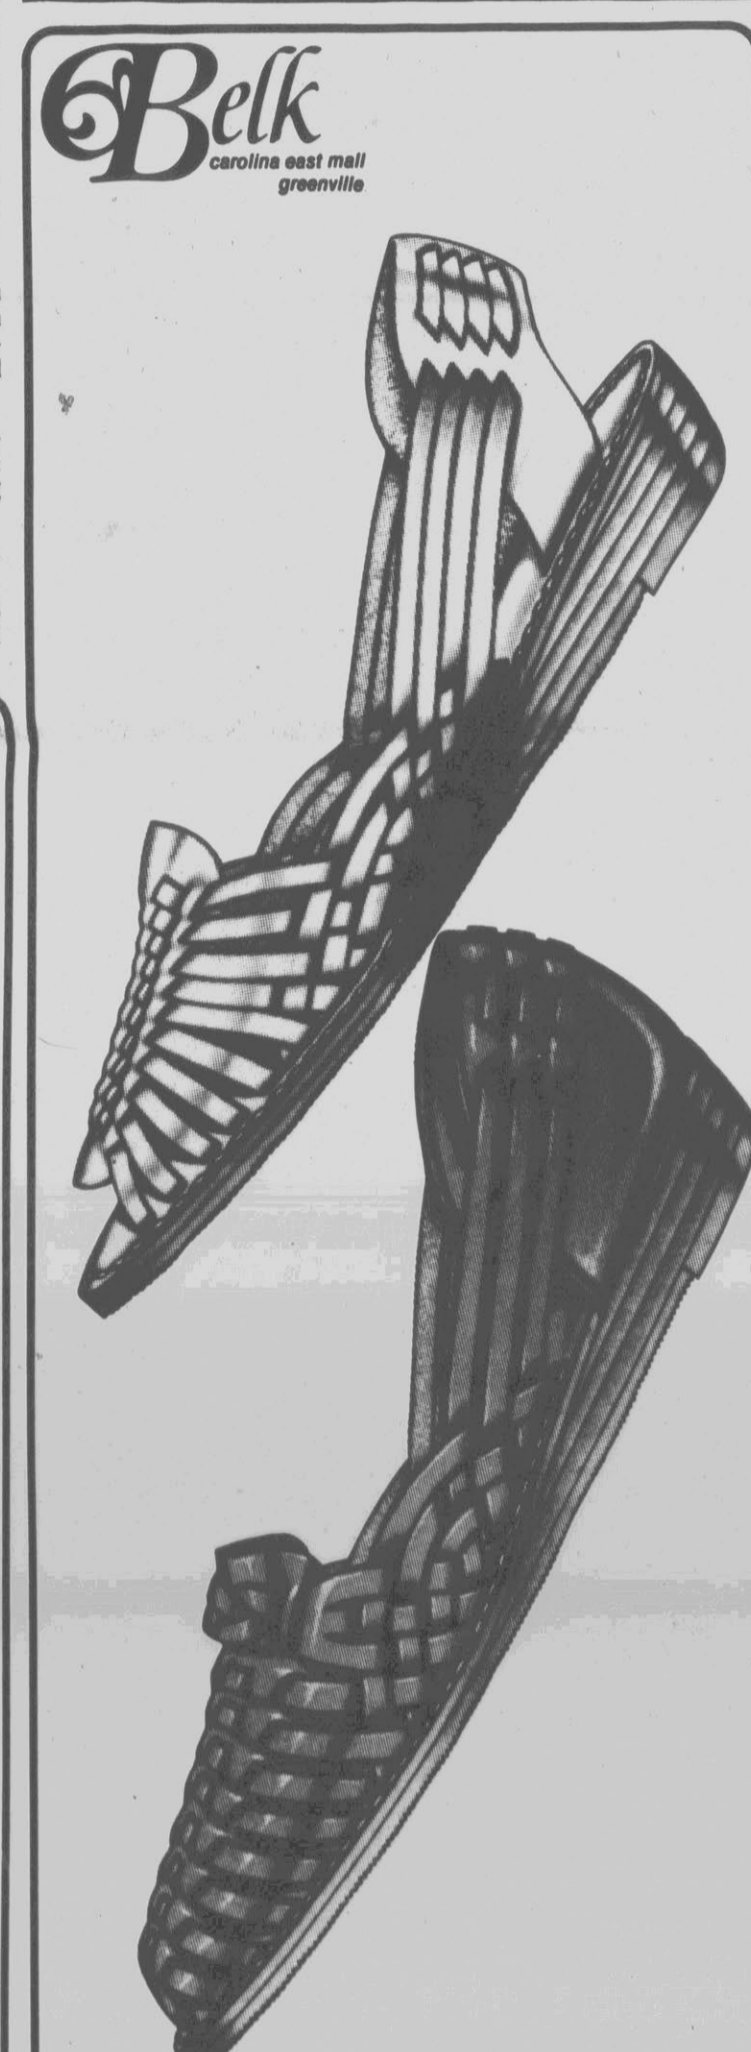

Attorney General Lacy Thornburg charged in a lawsuit Monday that many customers of the High Point agency paid for insurance policies they never received, had premiums inflated by Davis' agents and had extras billed to their accounts without consent.

A hearing is scheduled for Wednesday in Wake Superior Court on the state's request for a preliminary injunction to keep the agency closed and its assets frozen pending a trial.

The Insurance Department began a separate criminal investigation about a month ago and plans to submit its findings to the Guilford district attorney's office.

J.L. Cox, a state insurance investigator, told the Greensboro News & Record Davis seemed to be taking the investigation in stride.

"His suicide came as a shock to me and the department and everyone involved," Cox said. "If there was some way I could have stopped it, I would have."

Babbitt, Du Pont Break Off Campaigns To End Traditions

By DAVID LAUTER
and BOB SECTER

L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — Democrat Bruce Babbitt and Republican Pierre S. "Pete" du Pont IV, two former governors who campaigned as outsiders willing to challenge their parties' orthodoxies, dropped out of the presidential race Thursday.

In analyzing his defeat, Babbitt provided an epitaph that could apply to either campaign. "It's asking an awful lot (of voters) to say: 'Consider both a new messenger and a challenging and difficult message,'" he said at the Washington news conference where he announced his withdrawal from the race.

"There's a little bit of lag time, acceptance time, in American politics."

Both men, newcomers to the national stage, took on powerful traditions and constituencies: Babbitt, for example, called for a means test that would limit Social Security benefits for the wealthy, while Du Pont proposed an end to federal farm subsidies and a plan to phase in a private system of retirement benefits that could replace Social Security.

In ending their campaigns, both insisted that while they had lost, their crusades had changed the race — and both hinted that they might try again in the future. "The fascinating thing about American democracy is we tend, historically, to postpone coming to grips with change," said Babbitt, 49, the former governor of Arizona. "What I've been trying to do in the last five or six months is drive the other candidates toward the water hole."

Du Pont, 53, a former Delaware governor and congressman, noted the controversial positions he had taken and said: "We have moved those challenges forward to the center of the debate; they are urgent, they are real, they will not disappear."

Babbitt is the first of the Democratic candidates to withdraw from the race, though two candidates, Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr. of Delaware and former Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado, quit during 1987. Hart re-entered the race later in the year.

Du Pont is the second GOP candidate to withdraw from the race, following former Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., who pulled out Friday.

As two candidates whose ideas were outside the norm, Babbitt and Du Pont often were thrown together during the early days of the campaign. In Iowa last May, for example, they staged a two-man debate.

Babbitt began his race last spring, spending much of his time crisscrossing Iowa. Du Pont has been stumping for the nomination even longer, announcing his candidacy in September 1986.

In withdrawing, each man praised the often-criticized primary process, saying the drawn-out campaigns are necessary if darkhorses like themselves are to have any chance to put their ideas before voters.

Each pledged to support whomever his party nominated and offered kind words for the candidates still in the race, and both commented on the increasingly bitter tinge of the campaign on the Republican side.

"Instead of trading charges and counter-charges, let's talk about the future of the country," Du Pont said.

Babbitt was blunter. "Civil war has broken out in the asylum," he said of the Republicans. "I think that bodes well for the Democratic Party."

Appearing with his wife, Hattie, their sons Christopher, 12, and T.J., 10, and Arizona congressman Morris K. Udall — a former Democratic presidential hopeful whom Babbitt described as a "mentor" — Babbitt displayed the wit and humor that had made him a favorite of the press, if not the voters.

One friend, he said, had told him: "You fought a good fight, you were in it right up to the beginning." When asked whether he saw himself as a potential vice presidential candidate, Babbitt replied: "My advice to the nominee would be, in all candor, 'You probably ought to select a vice presidential nominee from a state with more than seven electoral votes.'"

"In my next life, in my reincarnation, I've decided I'm going to be born and grow up in Texas," he said.

Babbitt also joked that reporters had written so many flattering stories about him that it indicated "a deliberate conspiracy to destroy my candidacy by making me into kind of a house pet." Later, more seriously, he conceded that favorable publicity, complimenting him for his willingness to take unpopular stands, might have prompted him to overemphasize the unpopular parts of his message — particularly his call for a tax increase.

"If I were doing it over again," Babbitt said, he might "spend a little more time talking about other things," such as his advocacy of environmental causes and his call for more attention to education, day care and other "children's issues."

Du Pont, speaking at a press conference in Wilmington, Del., where he was accompanied by his wife, Elise, and children Elise and Ben, rejected the idea of seeking the second spot on a Republican ticket.

"Our campaign has been a campaign of change," he said. "The one office in the whole United States of America in which by definition you can change nothing at all is the vice presidency."

"In America we do not promise that everyone wins, only that everyone has the opportunity to try," Du Pont added. "You have given me the opportunity."

Teen-Ager Sought In Ax Deaths Of Four Relatives

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Authorities searched today for a 16-year-old boy who dyed his hair black and partially shaved his head before his parents, a brother and sister were found hacked to death with an ax, officials said.

The bodies of Bernard Brom, 41, his wife, Paulette, about 40, and children Diane, 14, and Rick, 9, were found in their nightclothes Thursday evening at their home in suburban Cascade Township, said Olmsted County Sheriff Charles Von Wald.

A nationwide bulletin was issued for the 16-year-old son for questioning, the sheriff said.

"At this time, our investigation is focusing on this boy because we believe he may have some answers," Von Wald said.

The four were believed to have been slain early Thursday morning, the sheriff said. A bloody ax 2 to 3 feet long was found in the basement of the home in a quiet, well-to-do area just outside this southeastern Minnesota city of 60,000, he said.

Law enforcement officials talked with friends of the 16-year-old who had spoken with him Thursday, the sheriff said.

"He indicated he was having some trouble with his parents," Von Wald said. "One student said he was having trouble with his dad because of a tape he had bought and he didn't want him listening to it."

The boy was at Lourdes High School on Thursday morning. Friends at the Roman Catholic school said he had dyed his hair black, shaved the sides of his head and spiked the hair on the back of his head, the sheriff said.

The boy also bought a wig and makeup, Von Wald said.

The family van had been missing but was found late Thursday near Methodist Hospital in Rochester, Von Wald said. A car and another car's license plates were reported stolen from the vicinity of the school, he said.

The family's priest, the Rev. Syl Brown of the Pax Christi Roman Catholic Church, said Bernard Brom worked in a supervisory position for IBM in Rochester and Paulette Brom was a homemaker.

"There are no explanations to strange things, mysteries like this," Brown said. "It's an exemplary family. They were very active in every phase of the parish. There's no indication there was any difficulty in the family."

The priest said the 16-year-old attended church with his family every week.

Von Wald said friends and neighbors described the boy as "a nice young man" who was a very good student.

"He babysat for one of the neighbors, and recently had shoveled the sidewalk for another neighbor," the sheriff said.

Bernard and Rick Brom's bodies were found in their upstairs bedrooms, and Paulette and Diane Brom's bodies in an upstairs hallway, the sheriff said.

"We believe the father and son were probably surprised and didn't have a chance to defend themselves," Von Wald said.

Bomb Kills 16 In Crowded Bank

WINDHOEK, South-West Africa (AP) — A bomb exploded today in a crowded bank in a northern town, killing at least 16 civilians in the deadliest such attack since a guerrilla war for independence began 22 years ago, police said.

The 1 p.m. blast at the First National Bank in Oshakati killed 15 blacks and one white woman and injured 40 people, police said.

No one immediately claimed responsibility for the explosion, which caused extensive damage to the building. The same bank was bombed last year, but no one was injured.

The South-West African Broadcasting Corp. reported that about 55 pounds of plastic explosive was used in today's blast. Oshakati is in north-central Namibia, about 25 miles south of the Angolan border.

Guerrillas of the South-West African People's Organization, based in neighboring Angola, frequently operate in the area.

SWAPO has been fighting since 1966 to gain control of South-West Africa, also known as Namibia. The territory is administered by South Africa in violation of a United Nations resolution.

SWAPO has claimed responsibility for numerous previous bombings in the territory, including a blast last month of a store at a military base in Windhoek. No one was injured in the blast, which was intended in part to protest the visit to Namibia of conservative West German politician Franz Josef Strauss.

The worst bombing in the region occurred in 1986 in the port town of Walvis Bay, a South African enclave near the center of Namibia's Atlantic Coast. Five people were killed and 23 injured in that explosion, which occurred at a crowded butcher shop. No group claimed responsibility for that blast.

Only about 70,000 of Namibia's 1.3 million people are white, and the South African government has installed a multiracial transitional administration to run the territory's affairs. There is an ongoing debate about whether a new constitution for Namibia should give special protection to whites.

South Africa has used northern Namibia as a staging post for current military intervention on behalf of the UNITA rebel movement in Angola. South African officials say they will not grant independence to Namibia until after withdrawal of the 40,000 Cuban troops fighting in support of Angola's Marxist government.

SWAPO has attacked both military and civilian targets during its sabotage and bombing campaign. An estimated 20,000 people have died during the bush war, about half of them guerrillas, about 700 of them security forces, and the rest civilians.

Contras OK New Peace Proposition

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Seeking to break an impasse in peace talks, Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo urged Contra rebels to accept a 30-day truce in exchange for four major concessions from Nicaragua's Sandinista government.

The Contras said they accepted "in principle" the proposal forwarded Thursday night. The leftist Sandinistas called it "interesting and constructive," but said it needed clarification.

Obando y Bravo, leader of Nicaragua's Roman Catholics, is mediating the talks, which were to resume today.

The concessions requested of the Sandinistas are:

—A "full, general" amnesty for the several thousand political prisoners in Nicaraguan jails, including all members of the National Guard of former dictator Gen. Anastasio Somoza, whom the Sandinistas overthrew in 1979.

—Full freedom of the press, which now is granted only to a few communications outlets, including the opposition newspaper La Prensa and Radio Catolica, the voice of the Catholic Church.

—A promise to "reconsider" a mandatory military draft law, which has sparked violent disturbances in several Nicaraguan cities by young men and the mothers of draft-age youths. The most recent disturbance was in Masaya only a week ago.

—Renewal of a dialogue with the Sandinistas' internal political opposition, which is calling along with the Contras for 17 changes in Nicaragua's Constitution. The talks broke off last year.

Victor Hugo Tinoco, Nicaragua's deputy foreign minister, said the cease-fire proposed by the cardinal was "vague and ill-defined" and would have to be clarified before the government could respond to the plan.

"The four requirements for the Nicaraguan government are very clear and very well defined," Tinoco said. "The requirement for the Contras is not quite clear."

Tinoco said the cardinal did not define "when the cease-fire is going to happen, how long it is going to be, where it is going to be" or how it would be verified. "We have to clarify what the Contras are going to give in exchange," he said.

Obando y Bravo said he offered the plan after the two sides were unable to agree on the philosophy underlying a cease-fire.

Fees Increase

GREENSBORO (AP) — Students will have to pay more to attend North Carolina A&T State University next year after the school's trustees approved a student fee increase to help pay the $3 million cost of upgrading dormitories.

Students will pay an additional $16 for food, $100 in housing fees and $10 in activity fees, Vice Chancellor Charles McIntyre said Wednesday.

Under the new schedule, the fee for board will go from $914 to $1,030; the housing fee will increase from $954 to $1,054; and the student activity fee will go from $66 to $76.

John Paul Calls For End To Western, Eastern Blocs

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II today called for eliminating the East and West blocs, blaming them for a host of economic and social injustices that he said reigned over developing countries to "cogs on a gigantic wheel."

In his seventh encyclical, John Paul said East-West rivalry based on "unacceptably exaggerated concern for security" was a main reason for the widening gap between rich and poor countries.

The 102-page document is an authoritative statement of the church's social doctrine. Titled in Latin "Sollicitudo Rei Socialis," meaning the social concern of the church, it represents an effort by John Paul to give force to themes he has espoused during the 9½ years of his papacy.

The pope said the church took a critical view of both liberal capitalism and Marxist collectivism and that both systems needed urgent reform. He also called for democratic political change in nations with corrupt, dictatorial or authoritarian governments.

He called for reform of the international trade, monetary and financial systems and free access for all to advanced technology.

The pope reviewed problems of social development in the two decades since the encyclical "Populorum Progressio" (Development of Peoples) was published by Pope Paul VI in 1967.

John Paul broke new ground in his forceful attack on the division of the world into ideological and military blocs, which he called "a direct obstacle to the real transformation of the conditions of underdevelopment in the developing and less advanced countries."

 federal subsidies of tobacco and supported federal anti-smoking programs targeted at young people.
 He said he opposed subsidies "in spite of the fact that there are a hundred thousand tobacco farmers in my home state," failing to mention that the federal tobacco program is financed through fees paid by the growers, not direct subsidies.
 "It's obviously courageous or stupid — however you want to look at it — for someone in a tobacco-growing area like we are in to take that position," said Jim Van Hecke, North Carolina Democratic chairman.
 But nearly two weeks after Gore's remarks drew heavy publicity in North Carolina, Van Hecke acknowledged he had "not heard a groundswell ... saying 'this is unconscionable, we've got to get rid of Al Gore.' We've probably got some people who agreed with what he said."
 Farmers and others who make their living from tobacco "have become accustomed to certain elements in this country abusing tobacco to the point that it doesn't seem to disturb them much any more," said Sam McLawhorn, a grower from Grifton.

 But Rep. Charles Rose, a North Carolina Democrat who is chairman of the House subcommittee on tobacco and peanuts, warns that the industry still wields enormous clout. It employs 710,000 people and pays $14.1 billion per year in wages and benefits.
 "It's a very silent but powerful force in Southern politics," Rose said.
 It has become a ritual for presidential candidates venturing into North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and Georgia to face questions about their stand on the federal tobacco program and the government's war on smoking.
 Most of this year's presidential hopefuls have tried to please the tobacco industry and increasingly assertive non-smokers by separating the health and economic issues.

"You can be against smoking cigarettes without being against family farmers who grow tobacco," the Rev. Jesse Jackson said recently.
 Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis told an audience in Wilson that he had "no problem" with the existing tobacco program but urged farmers to grow other crops as well.
 Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri is an enthusiastic supporter of the tobacco program. "It encourages an orderly market for tobacco. We're going to have tobacco and tobacco products in America and it's just a matter of where it's grown."
 On the Republican side, Rep. Jack Kemp says he would continue support programs for tobacco and other commodities where necessary but favors the free-market system whenever possible.
 Rose says his "litmus test" for presidential candidates is whether they distinguish between the interests of tobacco farmers and cigarette manufacturers.

Abolishing the federal leaf program, which guarantees growers a minimum price for their crop and regulates the amount they can produce, might wipe out most domestic farmers, Rose said. But it would do nothing to reduce smoking in the United States because companies would purchase foreign tobacco.
 "Why should my farmers suffer if the companies are still making a profit of money selling cigarettes? I'll agree to phasing out the tobacco program when smoking stops in America. And I don't see that happening in my lifetime," Rose said.
 But critics on both sides say it's contradictory for the government to discourage smoking while helping the tobacco industry — whether or not there are direct subsidies.
 "It's really illogical to say that 'I'm going to support and help produce a commodity' and at the same time say that 'I don't think it ought to be sold or used,'" said Horace Kornegay, former chairman of the Washington-based Tobacco Institute.

Congress Cautious Over Budget

 D.S.C., a member of the Senate Budget Committee, told reporters. "There'll be a lot of small intrumurals, but nothing really's going to happen."
 House Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-Ill., added, "Although I have always felt that more could be cut from the budget through a (spending) freeze, I think our first responsibility is to affirm the summit agreement."
 Others, however, predicted that although the budget's overall shape appears settled, skirmishes will be fought over how that money is divided up.
 "It's a little like looking at a Trojan horse," said Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., the budget panel's chairman. "It's an attractive horse, but you've got to look on the inside."
 Reagan's budget contains proposals that pleased many lawmakers:

 —Spending to combat AIDS is increased by more than one-third to $1.3 billion.
 —Education gets a $1.5 billion boost to $20.3 billion.
 —The National Aeronautics and Space Administration's budget grows nearly 20 percent to $11 billion.
 —$2.5 billion is provided for a five-year fight against acid rain.
 But there are spending slashes in other programs that Congress has rejected before and is likely to ignore again.
 The president would:
 —End $600 million in federal subsidies for Amtrak, the passenger railroad.
 —Reduce mass transit aid from $3.3 billion to $1.4 billion.
 —Eliminate the $200 million Urban Development Action Grants program.
 —Sell government assets such as loan portfolios, the Alaska power administration and the Naval Petroleum Reserve.

The Congressional Budget Office, which studies the budget for Congress, expects a weaker economic performance this year and has projected a $176 billion deficit.
 Chiles said he expected Congress to be able to adhere to the budget summit agreement unless "the economy totally goes South."
 Others, however, were critical of OMB's projections, but conceded that lawmakers had little taste this year for tackling the massive deficit slashing that would be needed if CBO's forecast is accurate.
 "This is the year of the big wink, the high art of blue smoke and mirrors," said Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee.
 If the lower deficit projection proves accurate, it could be the third consecutive drop in federal red ink. Since reaching a record $221 billion in 1986, the deficit fell to $150 billion last year and is expected to fall to $146 billion this year.
 One possible bone of contention is the promise Reagan has made to try to cancel spending for fiscal 1988 — which began Oct. 1 — on several spending projects that lawmakers obtained for their home districts. The president is expected to raise the issue next week.

U.S. Denies Oriega Report

WASHINGTON (AP) — A State Department official denied today reports that the U.S. government has approached Panama about the possibility of dropping charges against Panamanian strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega if he and his military associates withdraw from politics.
 According to reports in Newsday and the New York Times, Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams discussed the possibility of a deal during a meeting this week in Miami with Panamanian President Eric Arturo Delvalle.
 But a State Department official, who asked not to be identified, said there was no discussion of such a deal. He said the reports were to be denied officially by the State Department later in the day.
 Delvalle is Panama's titular leader, but political authority rests largely with Noriega, the general who heads Panama's Defense Forces.
 Noriega was indicted Feb. 5 by federal grand juries in Miami and Tampa, Fla., on racketeering and other narcotics-related charges. His extradition appears highly unlikely because a 1904 treaty between the two countries does not oblige either state to extradite its own nationals.

Bus Fire

KANNAPOLIS, N.C. (AP) — A Kannapolis city school bus burst into flames while parked at A.L. Brown High School and then rolled — with horn blowing — into a volunteer fire fighter's pickup truck Thursday morning, officials said.
 "It's definitely a suspicious fire," Cabarrus County Fire Marshal Jim Tourville said. "It appears to have been set."

The 1977 International bus valued at $5,000 and owned by the Cabarrus County Board of Education was gutted.
 Investigators speculated heat and flames may have shorted out the bus's wiring and brake systems, causing the engine to start itself and the parking brake to release. As it rolled, the bus's horn began blowing, also apparently a result of a short circuit.
 The bus stopped when it hit a truck that was blocking its path, damaging the truck slightly. It had rolled about 50 feet.

Police On Patrol

 The new economic restrictions announced Thursday on Arabs in the territories are aimed at hindering the influx of money from the Palestine Liberation Organization.
 Increasing numbers of the 1.5 million Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza have adopted passive resistance measures to the Israeli occupation.
 Leaflets and radio broadcasts urge them not to pay taxes to the Jewish state, work for Israelis or buy Israeli-made goods.
 Only about half the 105,000 Palestinians who worked in Israel before Dec. 8 now do so. Only a small percentage have paid taxes so far this year, according to the Arab-run Palestine Press Service and the army's information center.
 Militants put pressure on Palestinians to keep up the boycott. A teen-ager stabbed a fellow Arab in the face Thursday, apparently because he drove Palestinians to work in Israel, Israel radio said.
 The new rules require Palestinians to prove they have paid taxes before they can travel abroad or import or export goods. Palestinians also are required to register sums of $1,000 or more they bring into the country. The previous limit was $5,000.

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the Book of II Kings intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times

The Shunammite's Son

THE SHUNAMMITE WOMAN, AFTER AN ARDUOUS TRIP, NOW APPROACHES ELISHA'S ABODE IN THE FERVENT HOPE THAT SOMETHING STILL CAN BE DONE FOR HER DEAD SON....

EVEN AT A GREAT DISTANCE, ELISHA HAS RECOGNIZED HER AND SENDS GEHAZI TO FIND OUT IF ALL IS WELL WITH THE WOMAN'S FAMILY....

NOW ELISHA'S SERVANT, ON HEARING THE WOMAN, ASKS THOSE THINGS WHICH ELISHA WISHES TO KNOW....

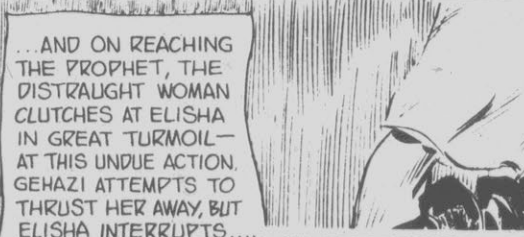

THY HUSBAND, THY SON—IS ALL WELL WITH THEM?

BUT THE WOMAN WILL DIVULGE WHAT IS IN HER HEART ONLY TO ELISHA!

LET HER ALONE! FOR HER SOUL IS VEXED AND THE LORD HATH NOT TOLD ME WHAT IS WRONG—LET HER SPEAK!

...AND ON REACHING THE PROPHET, THE DISTRAUGHT WOMAN CLUTCHES AT ELISHA IN GREAT TURMOIL—AT THIS UNDUE ACTION, GEHAZI ATTEMPTS TO THRUST HER AWAY, BUT ELISHA INTERRUPTS....

Junior Miss Scholarship Program Names Contestants

The 1988 Pitt County Junior Miss Scholarship Program will be held March 5 starting at 7:30 p.m. in Wright Auditorium in Greenville. Eighteen contestants from six high schools in the county will be in competition.

The program is sponsored by the Farmville Junior Woman's Club and is supported by clubs, businesses and individuals throughout the county. Mrs. William H. Farrior and Mrs. Chuck Saeger of Farmville are directors.

Contestants include Wendy Renee Davenport, a junior at North Pitt High School. She will play a trumpet patriotic medley for her creative and performing arts presentation. At North Pitt, she is active in Students Against Drunk Driving, Spirit, Key, Bible, Future Business Leaders of America and AP clubs. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Ronnie Carraway of Greenville, and Mr. and Mrs. Dan Davenport of Raleigh.

Daughter of Connie W. Nicholson of Ayden, Jessalyn N'Cole Raquel Woods is a student at Ayden-Grifton High School. Her activities include membership in the band, Library Club, RECAST and National Honor Society. She will recite a monologue from the play "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay" during the pageant. In the future, she would like to attend North Carolina A&T.

Melani Rae Wells is the daughter of Mrs. Dan Wilder of Farmville and James Russell Wells. She is a junior at Farmville Central, where her activities include membership in National Honor Society, Keywanettes and Show Choir. She enjoys playing the piano, reading and swimming. She will play "Ballade Pour Adeline" on the piano.

Kia Dawn Hardy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Hardy of Greenville, attends J.H. Rose High School. She participates in cheerleading, drama, Show Choir and soccer. She will sing "You've Gotta Have Heart." Outside of school she is secretary of Pitt County and N.C. Teen Democrats.

Playing an original medley of popular spy movie themes on the piano will be the talent presentation of Elizabeth Walker Freeman. She is a junior at Rose High and her parents are Thomas and Lynda Freeman of Greenville. At Rose, she is an honor roll student and has received recognition for achievement in English, French, civics and math.

Rhonda Kaye Owens, daughter of Al and Judy Owens of Farmville, is a student at Farmville Central. Her school activities include Math Club, FBLA, Science Club, SADD, chorus and NHS. A tap routine of "Go Into Your Dance" will be her performing arts presentation.

A junior at Greenville Christian Academy, Amanda Patrick Phelps is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Phelps of Greenville. She is vice president of her class and is captain of the varsity cheerleading squad. Her talent presentation will be a vocal rendition of "Shepherd of my Heart."

Kathryn Lynn Ellen, a junior at Rose High, is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John C. Ellen Jr. of Greenville. She participates in Keywanettes, Art and Builders clubs. She is a member of the tennis team and has received History Day and science fair awards. She will play "Czardas" on the classical violin for the competition.

Dorothy Lee Nisbet will play a piano medley of circus clown music for her performing arts presentation. She is the daughter of Lawton and Dottie Nisbet of Greenville and is a junior at Rose High. She enjoys traveling, snow skiing, rugging, reading and drawing. At school, she is a member of NHS, Art Club, FCA and Anchor Club.

For her performing arts presentation, Heather Elaine Gray will play a "Carolina Medley" on the piano while some of her original paintings are spotlighted. She is the daughter of Roy W. and Lois R. Gray of Grimesland and is a junior at Greenville Christian Academy. An honor roll student, she is a member of chorus, yearbook staff and a cheerleading captain.

A monologue "Happy Birthday" will be presented by Sandra Scott Garris at the upcoming program. She plans to become an elementary school teacher and work at the first or second grade level. She is the daughter of Roy and Sandra Garris of Ayden and is a student at Ayden-Grifton High School.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Henry Briley of Greenville, Kelly Denise Briley attends North Pitt High School. A member of NHS, she has participated in marching and concert bands, cheerleading and Youth Advisory Council. She will play a piano medley "From Beethoven to Peanuts."

Alexis Gibson Hickman is a junior at Rose High and is the daughter of Will and Lynda Hickman of Greenville. At Rose, she is a cheerleader and has been awarded the 1987 coaches award as a member of the girls soccer team. A character ragtime dance to "Kitten on the Keys" will be her performing arts presentation.

Jamie Lee Durham is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Durham of Farmville. She is a junior at Farmville Central, where she is a member of NHS, Show Choir, Keywanettes, Spanish, Science and Math clubs. She will dance en pointe to the theme from "The Apartment."

Elizabeth Courtney Jones, daughter of Glennis E. Jones of Greenville and the late Gene R. Jones, is a junior at D.H. Conley High School.

She is a member of NHS, FBLA, SCA, Latin Club and Mu Alpha Theta. A tenor saxophone solo to "Yakety Sax" will be presented by Miss Jones.

A piano solo "Arabesque Sentimental" will be the presentation of Amanda Diane Haddock. Her parents are T.J. and Diane Haddock of Greenville. She is a junior at D.H. Conley, where she is a NHS member as well as being active in Latin Club, FBLA and My Alpha Theta. She also enjoys snow skiing, swimming, boating and playing the piano.

Program judging is based on scholastic achievement, physical fitness, creative and performing arts, poise and appearance and judges' interview.

Tickets are available at the door and in advance at At Barre Ltd. and Gandalf's, both in Greenville, and Farmville One-Hour Photo in Farmville.

Announcement Is Embarrassing

DEAR ABBY: I am the single mother of a 10-month-old daughter. I am on a very limited budget, but "Sandra," a dear friend of mine, has a daughter a year older than mine, and she gives me the clothes her daughter has outgrown. They're as good as new.

I am grateful for her generosity, but every time Sandra sees my daughter in something she has given me, she never fails to comment to everyone who happens to be present that my daughter is wearing her daughter's hand-me-downs. I find this embarrassing. Lately, if I think I might run into Sandra, I either leave my daughter at home or make sure she's wearing one of the few outfits I was able to buy for her myself.

I don't want to lose Sandra's friendship and the clothes she gives me help a lot, but I just can't take the embarrassment anymore. Should I tell her, or what? — SENSITIVE

DEAR SENSITIVE: Even well-to-do friends and relatives welcome children's hand-me-downs without feeling like "charity cases." However, since you find Sandra's public announcements embarrassing, you could either tell her privately how you feel, or you could beat her to the punch and proudly tell your friends how lucky you are to come into such lovely things due to Sandra's generosity.

DEAR ABBY: I had to write to you after reading your response to "A Private Person in Atlanta." It appears her company was offering their employees health insurance and one of their questions was: "At what age did you have your first sexual encounter?" She stated it was nobody's business, left it blank, and you agreed with her.

Dear Abby

Well, Abby, that is a pertinent question for any company that takes on the health risks of women. The earlier a woman engages in sexual activity, the higher her risk for early development of cervical cancer.

It is a scientific fact that women who have their first sexual intercourse at a young age are at greater risk for cervical cancer.

I doubt that you will print this letter, but I think you should, not so much for "A Private Person in Atlanta," but for all the adolescent women who are considering becoming sexually active. They should have as many of the facts as possible before making their decision. — NICK GIANNONE, M.D., FREEPORT, TEXAS

DEAR DOCTOR: Thanks to readers like you, I am always learning. I hope your important message reaches women of every age who will share this knowledge.

Valentine Social Set For Saturday

Plans for a Valentine social were discussed at the Xi Gamma Xi chapter of Beta Sigma Phi meeting held last week.

The social will be held Saturday night at the Colonial Inn in Farmville with members of Eta Delta.

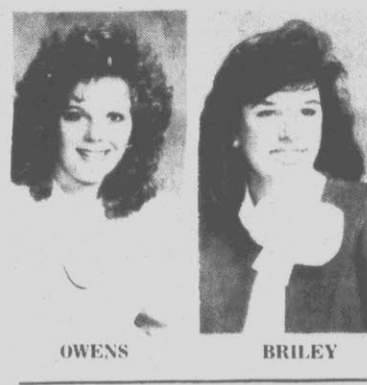

The Book of Beta Sigma Phi was reviewed by Mary Ellen Joyce.

The program was presented by meeting hostesses Tana Hill and Rosalie Trotman. Mrs. Hill gave a demonstration on making Tana Bears.

The next meeting will be held Feb. 23 at the home of Libby Kinley.

Hindu Craftsmen Indianize Temple

By DOUG FISHER
Associated Press Writer
BEAVERCREEK, Ohio (AP) — With each delicate casting, each intricate carving, the three men working on scaffolding outside a building in this Dayton suburb are creating peace of mind.

They are Hindu craftsmen, called silpis, who are completing a 2-year-old dream of transforming the squat concrete temple into a bit of India transplanted next to a cornfield.

The process is called "Indianization," an important milestone for the Indian community here which dedicated the temple in 1985 but did not have money to complete the work.

"When you have the Indianization, you really get the feeling of a temple, because a temple is so different — reverence — you just feel like God is there," said Janaki Venkayya, a devotee and spokeswoman for the Hindu Community Organization Inc.

"We call it bahakti, you feel more of the gods' presence. That's why we come here, to have peace of mind."

The 3,000-year tradition of Hinduism teaches that building a temple is worthy of heavenly reward.

A.L. Sathaiah is one of three craftsmen from Madras state in India working on the three gopurams, or intricate domes, topping marble-lined alcoves which house statues of the deities believed to live in the temple.

A fourth gopuram is between the doors of the front entrance.

"We are trained generation to generation. There are no schools," Sathaiah said. "It's very difficult work."

Sathaiah, his son-in-law, S. Ravichandran, and a friend, A. Chidambaram, start with a frame of bricks and concrete blocks. Sathaiah said he likes this country's blocks because they let him build the framework faster than the smaller bricks used in India.

Working from memory, the craftsmen make intricate sculptures by hand from concrete for the ornamentation. They press those into sand to make molds from which concrete or mortar duplicates can be made.

Mortar also is applied to round the gopuram and delicate designs are carved directly into the outer layer.

"The people here are not familiar with this art of architecture. They can maybe make the molds, but they don't know enough from memory," Venkayya said. "We advertised, but they said it is too intricate, too difficult."

Sathaiah, 44, has practiced his trade in India since he was 22. He has worked on one other temple in this country, in Flint, Mich. He hopes word of mouth will bring more work as other temples are built around the country.

Indianization will cost about $100,000, Venkayya said. The workers are paid $12.87 per hour and housed at the nearby priest's house, she said.

The center gopuram, 32 feet high, will have three tiers of ornamentation. The others, 27 feet high, will have two tiers.

If the temple can raise another $100,000, it will build a free-standing gopuram in front, a traditional temple feature.

"In the olden days they wanted the temple much higher above the houses because only people live in houses and this is God's house," Venkayya said.

The gopurams are shrouded in plastic now, protected from the weather that Sathaiah said can begin to make the mortar crack in three years. In India, similar work might last 20 years before needing repair, he said.

During the winter lull, the craftsmen will repair gopurams at a Pittsburgh temple.

They will return to Beaver Creek to sculpt 16 figurines of the gods for inside walls and a mural-like sculpture in the basement depicting Krishna in his chariot.

Krishna is an incarnation of Lord Vishnu, the centerpiece of the temple. Lord Vishnu, in turn, is a representation of one form of Brahman, the god who is so perfect according to Hindu teachings that there is no way to represent him.

The local Hindu community has about 350 families, but the temple attracts worshipers from as far away as Lexington, Ky.; Indianapolis and Columbus, Venkayya said.

Tomorrow Helen Nelson Thigpen will have lived 100 years, most of them as the matriarch of a large Pitt County family.

Her grandchildren will honor her Saturday afternoon at a dinner at a Greenville restaurant. Family, fellow church members and other friends have been invited.

A Pitt County native, Mrs. Thigpen has outlived three husbands and four of her nine children. The daughter of former slave, Jennie Nelson, and her husband, Miles, she was born near

HELEN NELSON THIGPEN

Black Jack. Her only sibling still living is her sister, Lisha Harvey of Greenville.

She was first married at age 21 to James "Gene" House and had seven children by him. Of these, those surviving are Mrs. Smith, Pearl Owens of New Haven, Conn., and Ella Stanley of Greenville.

Four years after House's death from pneumonia, she married Augusta Roach. Her children by this marriage, Bernice Cox and Katherine Langley, both live in New Haven, Conn.

Her last marriage many years after her second husband died, also of pneumonia, was to Amos Thigpen. He lived until she was into her nineties.

Mrs. Thigpen has resided for the past four years with her daughter, Della Smith, in Simpson. "She has always been a wonderful mother," Mrs. Smith said. "I remember thinking she was terrible when I was young, because she was so strict. She made us go to Sunday School and church every Sunday and even prayer meeting in the middle of the week. She wouldn't let us go to some of the parties that our friends went to."

"If I made up a bed and didn't do a good job, she'd send me back to do it over and wouldn't forget it until she saw to it that I did it right. I thought I had it tough then, but now I thank her."

In addition to rearing her own children, Mrs. Thigpen reared five of her grandchildren. Now she lives in the home with great-grandchildren and a great-great-grandchild. The younger members of the family have always called her "Ma Helen."

"She was a sporty woman most of her life," Mrs. Smith said. "She moved quick and had a word for everybody. And she did whatever was necessary to take care of her family."

Mrs. Thigpen's granddaughter, Magdalene Stephenson of Greenville, said, "We count our hours spent with her as most valuable, particularly when she recounts stories of the hard times, struggles, physical pains and abuse inflicted upon her mother during slavery."

She said her mother told her she was bought for two cents. Her mother said she remembered, while she was a slave, hiding beneath a big wash pot in order to have some private time away from work to pray.

Ms. Stephenson went on, "How relaxed we are around her for she has always had a wonderful sense of humor, a free and gentle demeanor. She always exudes warmth, light-heartedness, and a spiritual sense which personifies the true meaning of Christianity."

Mrs. Thigpen has been a member of Sweet Hope Free Will Baptist Church at Simpson since she was a young woman. Many of her family members still attend there.

She's had two short hospitalizations in her life. Tests both times showed no serious health problems, Mrs. Smith said. Being "short of breath" is her only complaint now. She still dresses each day, moves around the house with a walker, and attends meals on her own.

Asked if she knows why she's lived so long, she said, "I don't know. The Lord just let me."

Board Rules Out Private Buses

 tion of costs, McCarley told commission members that other factors may be considered in reaching a decision.

"Ron and I are of the opinion that you have an adequate basis to reject this proposal purely on financial grounds alone," McCarley said. "However, upon reviewing the minutes from your previous meetings, it's clear to us that you have additional concerns — employee morale, service to the community, possible decreases in ridership, and the implications that would have on fare revenues and the community image of the service. Each of those factors are issues that may be considered in reaching your final recommendation to (the City) Council," he said.

Among the commission's concerns was the impact of the 13C regulations on private contracting.

The 13C regulation is an agreement between cities and the North Carolina Department of Transportation which states employees who are employed and supported by federal subsidies will not be adversely affected by changes made to a city's transit program by contracting out to private enterprise.

McCarley said the city would have three options in meeting the "no adverse impact" rule.

Under the first option, ATE would hire all the present drivers, which the company indicated it would not do. Second, present drivers would leave voluntarily for other employment, and third, the city would absorb present drivers into other city positions.

"If we do that, they may not get a job that is as desirable to them as being a bus driver," McCarley said.

"I think it's legitimate for you to consider the morale implications that may be created by transferring someone from a job they have chosen, into some other job, purely because of 13C warranty requirements," McCarley told the commission.

"I know that the system now operates on a great deal of pride from the employees that now work in that division. That pride shows up in the effort they put into selling passes to be the promoter of the month, to be a top producer. It shows up in the letters citizens send in to the department commending the drivers for that extra, personnel touch to the service, and those things clearly in your (the commission's) opinion, have something to do with the excellent ridership history that we have in the system," he said.

McCarley also said that a decrease in ridership would cause a decrease in fare box revenues, which would increase the local share of the costs of the system.

Commission member the Rev. Ralph Love said he felt the commis-

12 Freight Cars Leave Their Rails

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — Amtrak said delays were likely on its passenger trains running from New York to Richmond, Va., and other points south until crews could clear tracks of derailed cars from a 78-car freight train.

Twelve cars from the train jumped the tracks Thursday evening, forcing the evacuation of two office buildings and five homes but causing no injuries, authorities said. Amtrak uses the same track.

Lt. Michael Reilly of the Fairfax County Fire Department said the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac train, traveling from Richmond to Alexandria, derailed around 7:10 p.m. Some of the cars careened into seven empty freight cars parked on adjacent tracks.

Ten of the cars contained industrial equipment, while two tank cars were carrying soybean oil, Reilly said.

Two office buildings located about a mile from the crash scene and five nearby homes were evacuated as a safety precaution, Reilly said.

The 19 people forced from homes and offices were allowed to return around 9 p.m., after officials confirmed the derailed cars contained no hazardous materials.

Passengers planning to travel on Amtrak between Richmond and New York were to be bused between Richmond and Washington, D.C., where they could continue north on Amtrak, said Marci Larson, operations manager for Amtrak. In addition, Larson said, trains traveling from New York to Florida and Georgia would be rerouted to Southern Railway tracks between Washington and Richmond.

Professionalism can be priceless, but it costs no more.

In funeral prearrangement or pre-need grave or crypt site selection nothing is more important than consultation with professionals. It helps ease the burden when the time comes. And it helps you be sure there are no surprises.

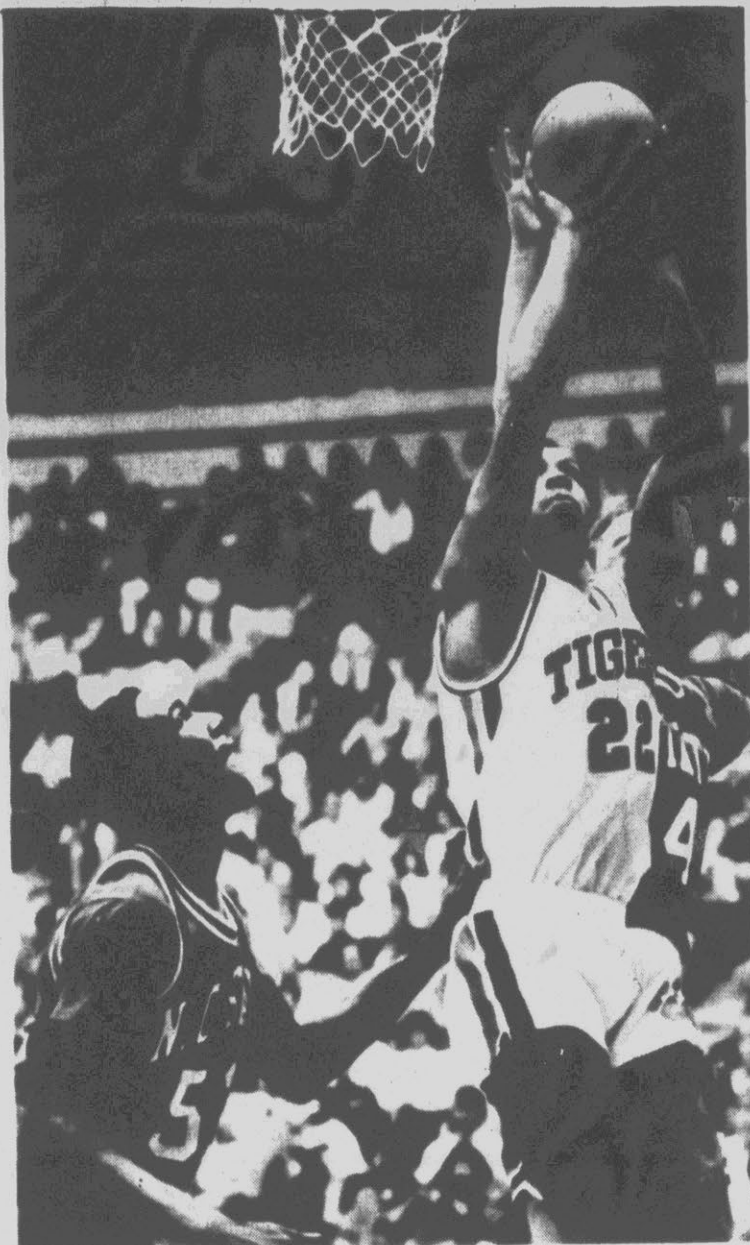

There are many questions to be answered. Like marker selection. Site selection. Vaults and differences between them. And then there are the "what if's"... Like "what if" you're thousands of miles from home?

As professionals with 50 years as funeral directors and 26 years as cemetarians, we can help you with these questions in private consultation.

Howard Paces Pack By Tigers

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Sophomore Brian Howard said he didn't do anything special. But his performance was special — for him and 14th-ranked North Carolina State.

Howard scored a career-high 26 points and Chucky Brown added 25 as North Carolina State beat Clemson 88-63 in Atlantic Coast Conference action Thursday night.

"I just tried to play a good game," Howard said. "The shots just started going in."

Howard's performance — which included three-of-three 3-pointers and a career-high nine rebounds — earned him praise from N.C. State coach Jim Valvano.

"Our game plan in the first half was to shoot the 3-point shot," Valvano said. "I should have told Brian Howard that years ago."

Clemson coach Cliff Ellis said his team played poorly defensively in allowing the Wolfpack to shoot 64.9 percent from the field.

"I am disappointed in our defense," he said. "There was no desire, no grit. There were too many uncontested shots."

N.C. State, now 18-5 and 6-3 in the ACC, shot 64.3 percent in the first 20 minutes to take a 43-34 lead at the half. The Wolfpack outscored the Tigers 8-3 in the first four minutes of the second half to push the lead to 51-37.

Clemson never got closer in losing its sixth straight and falling to 11-11 and 1-8 in the ACC.

The Wolfpack won its eighth game in nine outings despite playing without center Charles Shackleford, who is the team's top rebounder and second leading scorer. The 6-foot-10 junior injured his ankle Monday against Maryland-Baltimore County. "We were worried going into the game without the big man," Valvano said.

Valvano need not have worried. With Shackleford watching from the bench, his teammates grabbed a nine-point lead at the half by hitting six of eight 3-pointers — three by Howard, who was 0-1 from 3-point range going into the game.

Howard hit 10 of 16 field goals as he topped his previous best point total of 16 set against Morgan State last month.

Clemson led by five early, but a trio of 3-pointers — two by freshman Rodney Monroe — keyed a 10-0 run that gave N.C. State a 37-30 lead with 4:23 left.

Brown, who matched his career scoring high set against Louisville earlier this season, added a pair of

U.S., Canada Not Faring Well

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Ill winds are blowing hard across the Winter Olympics, revealing flaws in planning, playing havoc with skiing and taking special aim at the tuckless Americans.

Only the whirling grace of U.S. figure skater Brian Boitano and his friendly rival, Brian Orser of Canada, punctured the gloom that pervaded the Games on Thursday and hung so heavily on the Americans and Canadians.

Boitano's dazzling, flawless performance in the short program moved him closer to America's first gold, and earned him a big smile from a little fan, 16-year-old Soviet pairs gold medalist Ekaterina Gordeeva.

"I think this is one of my all-time best, and I'm very proud of it," said Boitano, the 1986 world champion from Sunnyvale, Calif., who can clinch victory Saturday by outskating Orser in the freestyle program.

Orser, the 1987 world champion, won the short program by a slim margin but trails overall with the compulsory figures included. His superb skating, though, went a long way toward soothing Canadian spirits after their hockey team was upset 3-1 by Finland.

Speed skater Dan Jansen's second emotional bid for a medal to dedicate to his late sister, an Olympian drama that captured America's heart, ended the same way his first race did on Sunday, just hours after her death from leukemia.

A freak hit-and-run accident on the slopes at the start of the dismal day knocked out the best hope among U.S. women downhill racers. Pam Fletcher, 25, of Acton, Mass., suffered a broken right leg while warming up when she collided with a man who sped past her as she crumpled in the snow.

"I just sat there and cried," she said.

Ironically, Fletcher could have stayed safely in bed all morning because the event was postponed for the second day as the result of 60 mph gusts at Mount Allan.

The man who hit her turned out to be a 6-foot-2, 220-pound volunteer course worker, but all the 5-foot-2, 130-pound Fletcher saw at the time was a big hulk on skis coming at her like a speeding truck. They tried to avoid each other, but there wasn't enough time to say, "Excuse me."

Fletcher, who said she felt like she'd hit a tree, acknowledged the accident may have been her fault. The man suffered a knee injury and a possible broken bone in his hand.

"It's so frustrating," she said. "You work so hard for something like this. You focus your life on ski racing. The Olympics are a dream come true. Then boom, it's gone. It's taken away from you and there's no chance to get it back."

"I was ready for this race," she said. "I had a good starting position (No. 1) and a great opportunity. I really thought I was going to have a great race. ... I just hope my teammates can do the best we can for the U.S. of A."

No Olympics for Pam

Jansen's 2nd Fall Ruined Shot At Winning A Medal

Stunned

World sprint champion Dan Jansen of the United States is stunned after falling in the final lap of the men's 1,000-meter speed skating competition in Calgary Thursday. It was the second fall for Jansen in the Olympics. (AP Laserphoto)

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — The distance was dissolving, evaporating meter by meter under the urging of Dan Jansen's skates.

Jansen was on his way to 1,000 meters Thursday night and traveling there in the fastest possible fashion, the ice swallowed up in huge gulps by his smooth, easy strides as he sped around the Olympic Oval.

He was skating on automatic pilot, taking a textbook trip around the rink, negotiating the treacherous turns, gathering speed, hustling down the straightaway into the next turn, through the backstretch and into another turn.

First came 100 meters. Jansen barely made it that far in his first race Sunday, when he fell in the first turn. Not this time. This time, by 100 meters Jansen's jets were firing.

This was his last chance for a medal, his last chance to mark the memory of his sister, Jane, who died Sunday morning, hours before his 500-meter disaster. Now, four nights later, Dan was skating for Jane again and this time everything was working for him. It was the perfect trip.

On to 200 meters. His split time was 16.80 seconds, fastest in the race at that point. He was leaning into the turns with precision, his body bent at the waist, his hooded, skintight silver and orange suit making him look like a skating Spiderman. His left arm was behind his back, his right swinging in perfect rhythm with his purposeful, powerful strides.

The 1,000 is not Jansen's best distance but he had no choice in the matter. The 500 was history. This would have to be his Olympic moment and so he was making it work for him.

Speed skating is simple. It's you against the clock. There is no judge frowning at your form, no referee to blame for a bad call. It's just you, the ice and the clock.

And for Dan Jansen, there was Jane.

After the race, he would fly home for her wake and funeral. All week, there had been messages of support from across Canada and the United States from people he did not know, people who wanted him to know how sad they felt about his sister's death.

Another turn. Another straightaway.

It takes 2½ trips around the Olympic Oval to travel 1,000 meters, 2½ trips over the ice, not unlike the thousands he had made preparing for these Games. After they were over, there would be another trip for Jansen, the long, sad trip home to West Allis, Wis.

Three hundred meters. Four hundred meters. Five hundred meters. Everything on target. "I felt really good the whole time," Jansen would say later. "Just real smooth."

At 600 meters, Jansen's split was clocked at 44.02 seconds, still the fastest time in the race at that checkpoint. The medal dream and a happy ending for this sad story seemed well within reach.

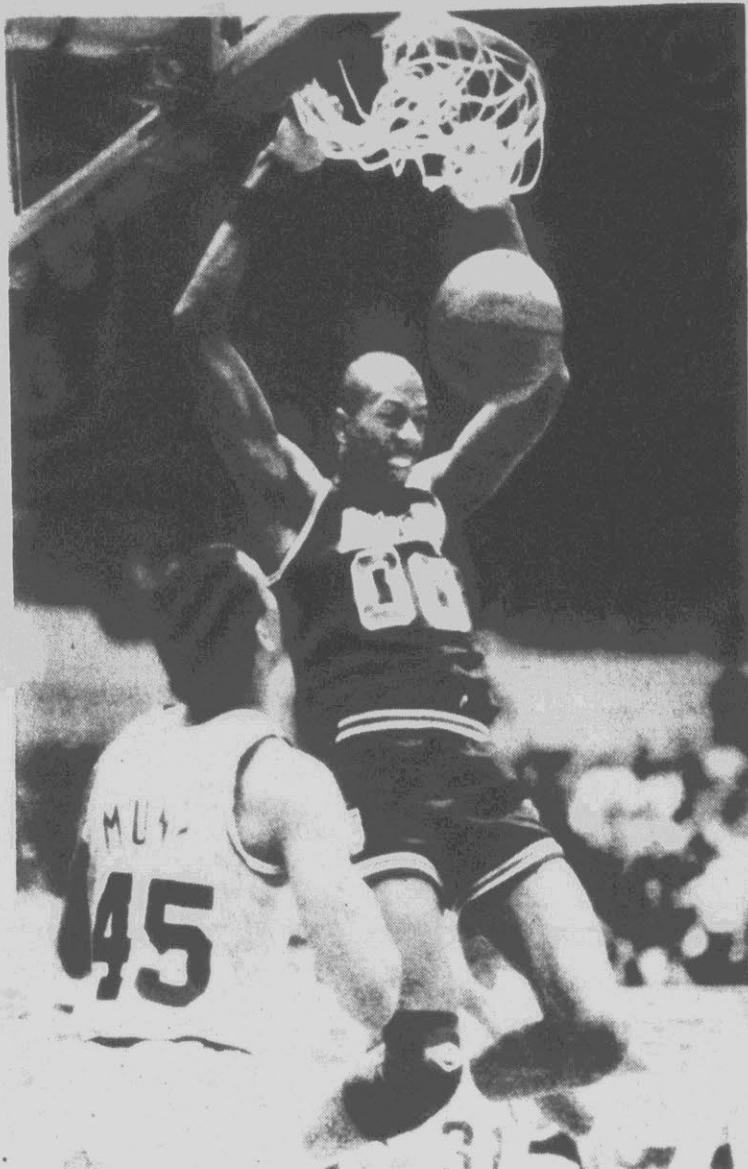

And then, incredibly, disaster. Skating alone on the backstretch, Jansen's feet suddenly went out from under him. He had lost an edge, skater's jargon for putting too much weight on the outside of a skate and throwing himself off balance.

Down he went, sprawled on all fours, skidding over the ice like a bumper car spinning out of control. When his ride ended, Jansen sat there on the ice, his legs spread wide, his mouth open in pained astonishment, for what seemed an eternity.

"I could not believe it," he said.

Slowly, he left the ice, his head leaning on the shoulder of teammate Nick Thometz. It was over now and as he reached the starting line, he embraced his fiancée, Canadian speed skater Natalie Grenier.

Then a week of emotion caught up at last with Dan Jansen and he began to cry. He wasn't the only one.

BYU Upset in Top 20 Action

By The Associated Press
Seven-ranked Brigham Young, which began the month undefeated, has two losses all of a sudden.
San Diego State, which had lost big to BYU when they met earlier in Utah, upset the Cougars 82-80 Thursday night on a seven-foot bank shot by Bryan Williams with three seconds left in overtime.
"Nothing's easy in this business, but give them (the Aztecs) credit," said BYU Coach Ladell Anderson, whose team fell to 20-2 overall and 9-1 in the Western Athletic Conference.
"We beat them by 27 on our court (in Provo on Jan. 9). I studied that tape and we actually didn't play all that well then. We're better now ... and they're better," he said.

In other Top 20 games, No. 3 Arizona defeated Southern Cal 103-68, No. 11 Nevada-Las Vegas beat Utah State 94-74, No. 14 North Carolina State beat Clemson 88-63, No. 17 Bradley beat Creighton 83-67 and No. 19 Wyoming beat Air Force 79-63.

San Diego State scored the first seven points of overtime to take a 77-70 lead with 2:20 to go, but Brigham Young recovered to tie the score 80-80 on a rebound tip-in by Andy Tolson with 28 seconds to go.

San Diego State took a timeout with 16 seconds remaining, and Williams controlled the ball, driving the lane before putting up the winning shot.
"I really wanted this game badly," Williams said. "BYU's at the top, they're winning the league. They were undefeated in conference."

San Diego State, 10-13 and 3-8, upset a top-ranked team for the second time this season. The Aztecs beat New Mexico, then ranked No. 18, 64-59 on Jan. 14.
No. 3 Arizona 103, Southern Cal 68
Sean Elliott scored 19 points and No. 3 Arizona clinched a tie for the Pacific-10 crown with its easy victory.

Arizona, which handed the Trojans their worst defeat ever (92-48) last month in Tucson, led by as many as 37 points down the stretch as it improved to 24-2 overall and 13-1 in the Pac-10.

Five Wildcats scored in double figures, including Tom Tolbert with 16 points, Steve Kerr 14, Anthony Cook 13 and Harvey Mason 10.
Ronnie Coleman had a career-high 23 points for the Trojans, who fell to 3-10 and 5-17.

No. 11 UNLV 94, Utah St. 74
Gerald Paddio scored 23 points and Stacey Augmon added 17 as Nevada-Las Vegas regained the Pacific Coast Athletic Association lead.

The Runnin' Rebels, 22-3 overall and 11-2 in the PCAA, used a tenacious defense to hold the Aggies scoreless for seven minutes midway through the first half and scored 19 straight points en route to a 45-22 halftime lead.

Jarvis Basnight, Paddio, Augmon, Keith James, Richard Robinson and Clint Rossum contributed to UNLV's scoring spree.

UNLV took a 26-point edge two minutes into the second half but saw the lead melt to 70-58 with 6:25 remaining.

Utah State, 16-7 overall and 11-3 in the conference, was led by Reid Newey, who scored 19 points, including two 3-pointers during the Aggies' second-half comeback, and Kevin Nixon, who added 15.

No. 17 Bradley 83, Creighton 67
Hersey Hawkins, the nation's leading scorer, scored 35 points and grabbed eight rebounds to lead Bradley to its Missouri Valley Conference victory.

"He killed us," Creighton Coach Tony Barone said. "He got a ton of baskets on loose balls. What that shows is his work ethic is outstanding."

Bradley, 18-4 overall and 8-2 in the conference, scored seven straight points early in the second half to take a 40-31 lead.

Creighton had dubbed the game "Hershey Chocolate Night" and handed out chocolate bars to symbolize the Jays' quest for "sweet revenge" for Bradley's 98-68 victory last Saturday.

Creighton, 13-13 overall and 5-7 in the conference, hurt itself with 17 turnovers, many of which turned into easy fast-break baskets for Bradley.

No. 19 Wyoming 79, Air Force 63
Wyoming, 19-5 overall and 8-5 in the Western Athletic Conference, allowed Air Force, 11-11 overall and 4-7 in the league, just 23 points in the second half and held the Falcons scoreless over the final 4:30.

"We had to keep them outside in the second half with our defense ... We attempted to control the game in the second half, and eventually wear them down," Coach Benny Dees said.
Wyoming's Fennis Dembo scored 24 points, including three of four free throws down the stretch.
"I consider this game to be one of our best road victories of the season," Dees said.

Calgary's Winds Causing Problems

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Matti Nykanen had heard stories about the gusty winds in Calgary, so he trained in similar conditions at home in Finland to prepare himself for Winter Olympic ski jumping.

But he didn't expect the wind to be this bad. And he didn't expect to have problems sleeping because of noisy neighbors in the athletes' village at the University of Calgary.

"It's a very stressful situation," Nykanen said Thursday after the team jumping was postponed at Canada Olympic Park for the second consecutive day. "We just have to wait and wait. I don't want to criticize the organizers because there are no wind screens, but it blows very hard out here."

Nykanen, who won the individual 70-meter jump Sunday, worked out more than usual before these Games on the Lahti hill in Finland, another windswept place and the site of four Nordic World Championships and an annual World Cup meet.

"Lahti is quite similar to Canada Park," said Mark Konopacke of Kingsford, Mich. "They always have some pretty strong winds there."

Nykanen said the wind is the worst thing about the Olympic hill.

"But I still like the hill and I'm confident that Finland can win the team title again," he said.

Nykanen seldom gets nervous for a competition.

But all the waiting means "you can make a mistake in your preparations, then you get nervous and that can spoil the whole thing," he said.

His noisy neighbors aren't making things any easier. On Tuesday, the day before the team event was originally scheduled, Nykanen said he couldn't sleep until Finnish team leaders intervened.

Nykanen is favored to retain his individual 90-meter title Saturday. That would make him the first jumper in history to win both individual events in a single Olympics. A team gold would make him ski jumping's first triple Olympic champion.

The Finns won the team title in last year's Nordic World Championships. But the continuing postponements could give the Canadians an advantage because the host nations' jumpers have practiced so much on the Olympic hill.

"It should be an advantage to us, but you've got the best in the world here, and they know how to prepare themselves," said Canada's Horst Bulau.

"They shouldn't be bothered by it, but some of them are ... and that's the advantage for us," he said. "The more delays and the more frustrated and ticked off they get, the better it is for us."

The Canadians jumped five straight days on the 90-meter hill three weeks ago and had no problems with the wind.

"We've got about 30-35 jumps each on the big hill," said Bulau. "So we have a pretty good idea on how it is."

"Somehow you have to stay positive and try not to get frustrated by all the delays and difficulties that are going on with the wind," he said. "You have to come out every day, reset your focus and try to stay fresh and positive."

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Revenge, not individual records or national rankings, is all the motivation Troy Lewis of Purdue needs in preparing for arch-rival Indiana.

Indiana is one of the two teams to defeat the second-ranked Boilermakers this season.

The rematch takes place Sunday at Purdue's Mackey Arena with the Boilermakers needing to avenge a 82-79 loss to retain sole possession of first place in the Big Ten Conference. Michigan trails the Boilermakers by a half game after defeating Minnesota 72-68 Wednesday night.

"Indiana is all that is on my mind right now," said Lewis, a 6-foot-4 sharpshooting guard whose 17.8 average is a major reason for the Boilermakers' 21-2 mark. "We don't think about what's ahead. I don't even think about who our next game is against until we finish one game."

But the co-winner of the Indiana Mr. Basketball title in 1984 as the state's top high school senior admits games with the Hoosiers are special.

"The Indiana rivalry means a lot to me, growing up in Indiana you hear about it all your life. And back home (in Anderson) I always hear about it when Indiana beats us. The community definitely supports Indiana," said Lewis, who says he was not heavily recruited by the Hoosiers.

"There were plenty of schools that wanted me and I have no regrets," Lewis said. "I did want to stay in the state, so my parents would have a chance to see me play and also based my decision on where I'd have playing time and be able to develop both as a person and citizen."

Purdue has won 20 or more games each season Lewis has been a Boilermaker, posting an 88-26 record. Lewis has shot 50 percent in college (718 of 1435), including a 122 of 271 mark from 3-point range. Having made 71 of 149 this season, he has made at least one 3-pointer in 39 consecutive games and takes a conference record of 24 games into Sunday's game.

"I didn't even realize I had the streak until someone mentioned it recently. I just don't think about something like that. If I did, it would get me out of the flow of the game," he said. "I don't concern myself with taking a 3-pointer. I don't look to see if I'm in front or behind the line."

"If I did it would mess up my concentration. When you think about streaks you get in trouble, pressing to keep them."

Lewis has scored in double figures 25 consecutive games and 56 of the past 57. He is also among the school's career leaders in assists with 334.

"Troy's defensive smartness, passing and all the other things he does make us a complete ballclub," said Purdue Coach Gene Keady.

Purdue has never lost to Indiana twice in the same season since he arrived on campus, recording a 4-3 mark over that span. But, Lewis is also waiting to capture an outright conference title — having shared the title with eventual NCAA champion Indiana last year.

"The game is important to us because we want to win the Big Ten and we're in a battle," he said. "This conference is so tough. We went in and beat Michigan on their homecourt and Indiana, Michigan or someone else can do the same thing to us."

The Boilermakers also have road trips to Northwestern, Wisconsin and Ohio State on their schedule.

Local Junior High Basketball Roundup

AYDEN — Ayden swept a pair of junior high basketball games from Woodington Thursday.

In the boys' game, Ayden took a 44-40. Tony Edwards had 13 for Ayden while M. Graham had 27 for Woodington.

In the girls' game, Denise Allen scored 15 and Regina Jones added 14 as Ayden took a 45-23 win.

The girls are 10-2 and play for the divisional title Monday at Snow Hill.

Savannah took a 50-45 win over Wellcome Middle School in the Pitt/Greene/Lenoir junior high conference championship Thursday.

Savannah was led by Chuck Jones with 29 points while Jerry Stackhouse had 14. Wellcome was led by Derrick Brown's 13 points.

Savannah finishes the year unbeaten at 11-0.

Vikings Set For 3-A East Regionals

D.H. Conley will participate in the 3-A East Regionals to take place at East Wake high school Friday and Saturday.

The event hosts 16 teams with the top four wrestlers per weight advancing to the state 3-A finals next week at Carmichael Auditorium.

Conley finished the regular season as the Coastal conference champion.

- 103 pounds — Steve Allen (Conley, 6th seed, 22-8) vs. Steve Mills (Harnett Central, 11th seed).
- 112 — Josh Trout (Conley, fifth seed, 17-4) vs. Kyle Harris (Apex, 12th seeded)
- 119 — Jacinto Moore (Conley, third seed, 23-5): Bye first round.
- 125 — B.J. Southerland (Conley, ninth seed, 14-13) vs. John Terrell (Walter Williams, eighth seed)
- 130 — Jason Adams (Conley, ninth seed, 12-15) vs. Keith McDougald (Harnett Central, eighth seed)
- 135 — Derrick Gardner (Conley, second seed, 25-4) bye first round.
- 140 — Kevin Daniels (Conley, third seed, 23-5) bye first round.
- 152 — Jason Hamby (Conley, fifth seed) 24-6 record vs. John Crowe (Burlington Williams, 12th seed.)
- 160 — Jon Middleton (Conley, sixth seed, 6-4) vs. John Morrow (West Carteret, 11th seed)
- 171 — Larry Wilson (Conley, seventh seed, 15-12) vs. Kevin Turlington, Harnett Central, 10th seed)
- 189 — Robbie Little (Conley, fifth seed, 16-6) vs. Michael Carpentar (East Wake, 12th seed)
- HWT — Kevin Moye (Conley, fourth seed, 19-8) vs. Chris Sneed (South Johnston, 13th seed).

Richmond Puts Racing Schedule On Hold

CHARLOTTE (AP) — NASCAR officials say they still want to see driver Tim Richmond's hospital records, and Richmond's attorney says his client will not participate in any races until the dispute is settled.

"There are still questions (about Richmond's health) we need answered," NASCAR president Bill France Jr. said Wednesday. "And whatever event he comes to next, he'll need to answer those questions."

NASCAR had asked Richmond to supply the Daytona International Speedway track physician with medical records concerning his hospitalization last year with pneumonia. Richmond and NASCAR disagreed over what kind of records should be furnished.

Wednesday, Barry Slotnick, Richmond's attorney, told The Charlotte Observer it would be about three more weeks until his investigation into the disputes would be complete.

"We've made some decisions," Slotnick said. "Until we can clear away some of these problems, he won't race in a NASCAR race. And unfortunately, we won't be in Richmond."

Tim Richmond and NASCAR have been at odds since Feb. 6 at Daytona Beach, Fla., when Richmond failed a NASCAR-administered drug test. It was later learned the substances Richmond was tested positive for were over-the-counter cold and allergy medicines.

NASCAR's new substance abuse policy, instituted Jan. 25, calls for a drug test to be given competitors, crew members or NASCAR officials if there is a "reasonable suspicion" of drug use.

All of those people must sign a release allowing NASCAR to test them at its discretion. A NASCAR spokesman said Richmond, who signed the release, has been the only driver asked to take the test.

Seahawks Edge Past Campbell, 46-43

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Antonio Howard scored 14 points and Larry Houzer had 12 to pace North Carolina-Wilmington to a 46-43 victory over Campbell Thursday night.

The Seahawks took a six point lead at 10-4 but led only 22-21 at halftime as both teams shot 45 percent. The lead changed hands four times in the second half, but N.C.-Wilmington took the advantage for good at 4:14 when Howard drove past several defenders for a layup to make it 39-37 and the Seahawks hit five of six free throws in the final three minutes to seal the victory.

N.C.-Wilmington snapped a three-game losing streak and improved to 12-12. Sanders Jackson scored 16 points and Henry Wilson added 14 for Campbell, 10-13.

Campbell's 43 points was the lowest total scored against the Seahawks since the 1984-85 season, when N.C.-Wilmington beat Atlantic Christian 54-40. But neither team shot well, with the Seahawks finishing at 40 percent and Campbell at 43 percent.

N.C.-Wilmington outshot Campbell 87 percent to 57 percent from the free-throw line for a 13-8 scoring advantage.

Justice Out Of Intensive Care

GREENSBORO (AP) — Charlie Justice, the University of North Carolina's all-time football great, has been moved out of the cardiac intensive care unit of Moses Cone Hospital here but still is not permitted visitors, his wife said Thursday.

Justice, a triple-threat tailback for the Tar Heels in the late 1940s, had heart bypass surgery at Duke Hospital in Durham in mid-January and developed an infection while recuperating in Greensboro late last month. He underwent additional surgery to treat the infection three weeks ago and had been in the Cone intensive care unit until moved late Wednesday.

"His doctors say he is healing well," Sarah Justice said, "but his recovery remains a slow process." She said he is expected to remain hospitalized two to three more weeks.

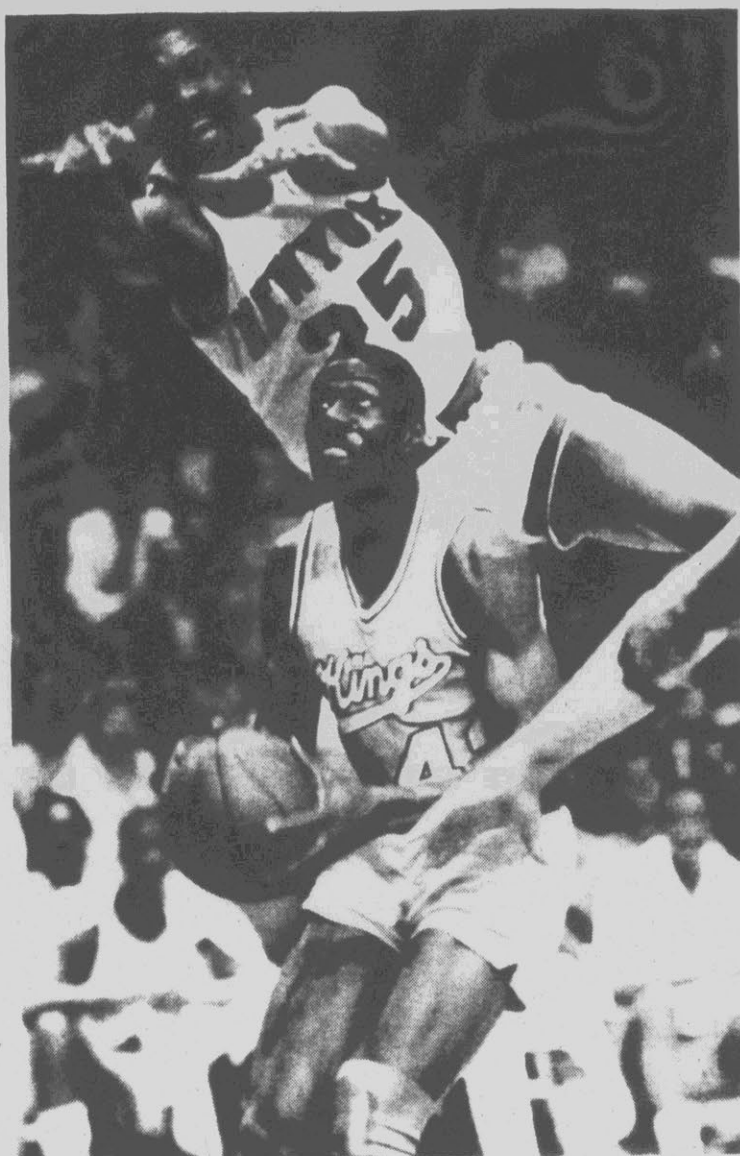

Former Rose Player Rejoins Wake Team

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Alan Dickens, a former Wake Forest player now enrolled in the university's Bowman Gray School of Medicine, has been added to the Demon Deacon basketball roster, school officials said Thursday.

Dickens will be in uniform Saturday when Wake Forest takes on East Tennessee State, according to Demon Deacon coach Bob Staak.

"Alan offered his assistance a couple of weeks ago when we lost Tony Black and Daric Keys," Staak said. "We had to work with the NCAA in having his eligibility restored, but that has been taken care of and we are happy to have him with us again."

Lakers Roll Past Rockets

The Los Angeles Lakers have a good idea about how to handle the Rockets in Houston — leave them standing at the launching pad.

For the second straight time, the Lakers shocked Houston with a 41-point first quarter Thursday night, and the Rockets never recovered, losing 111-96.

"A lot of teams expect us to run but nobody's stopped us yet," said Byron Scott, who scored 11 of his 27 points as Los Angeles grabbed 41-21 lead. "We have so many weapons on this team, it's hard to do."

It was the Lakers' third straight victory this season over the Rockets and their seventh in a row over two years. In their last meeting in Houston on Jan. 18, Los Angeles led 41-22 after one quarter and won 121-110.

"We just came out ready," Scott said. "We've got so much respect for them. We knew we had to come out hard and get ahead early."

"We simply got off to a great start," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "The game wasn't decided in the first quarter, but we did put a lot of distance between them and us."

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Detroit 108, Seattle 95; New York 108, Seattle 104; Indiana 88, Cleveland 83, and Phoenix 122, San Antonio 114.

Houston got as close as 68-61 with 9:25 to go in the third quarter, but that was as close as the Rockets could get.

"I looked up and we were already down by 15 points," said Houston center Akeem Olajuwon, who had 20 points and 20 rebounds. "That puts a lot of pressure on you."

Magic Johnson scored 10 of his 26 points in the first quarter as the highest-scoring guard duo in the NBA combined for 21 points in the period.

"Every team tries to take something away from us but they can't because we have so many weapons," Scott said. "Tonight was just one of my nights."

Riley's plan was to keep running with the Rockets.

"I don't think we want to get into a half-court game with the Rockets because of their rebounding," Riley said. "We want to string out the floor."

Pistons 108, SuperSonics 95
At Pontiac, Mich., Detroit won its sixth straight to move a half-game ahead of idle Atlanta in the Central Division on the strength of Vinnie Johnson's 27 points.

He scored 16 of them in the second period as the Pistons were extending a four-point lead into a 54-43 halftime advantage. Johnson made seven of 10 shots from the floor in the second quarter and scored Detroit's first eight points of the period.

Tom Chambers led Seattle, which has lost nine of its last 10 games, with 24 points and Dale Ellis added 20.

Knicks 108, Kings 104
New York won its ninth straight home game, its best showing since 1976, as Gerald Wilkins scored 18 of his season-high 39 points in the fourth quarter, including the game-winning basket with 1:12 left.

The Knicks also got a big defensive play with three seconds remaining when Patrick Ewing blocked a shot by Ed Pinckney with New York leading 106-104. It was Ewing's seventh blocked shot of the game.

Pacers 88, Cavaliers 83
Indiana's Steve Stipanovich drove around Brad Daugherty for the go-ahead basket with 1:11 left and the Pacers held the Cavaliers scoreless the rest of the way to win their sixth straight game.

The game was tied 19 times and also had 19 lead changes. The Pacers, who tied their club-record for consecutive home victories at eight, opened an 83-76 lead with 3:17 remaining before Cleveland tied the game.

Chuck Person came off the bench to score 22 points for Indiana. Vern Fleming and John Long, who had 11 points in the third quarter when the Pacers overcame a seven-point deficit, finished with 15 apiece.

Spurs 122, Suns 114
San Antonio broke a five-game losing streak and handed Phoenix its 15th loss in 17 outings as Alvin Robertson scored 31 points and Johnny Dawkins 27.

The Spurs, behind 104-101 with 5:48 remaining, took a 114-104 lead with a 13-0 run. Robertson scored six points and Dawkins five during the spurt.

Couples Leads, Watson Charging

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — Fred Couples had the lead in the first round of the $650,000 Andy Williams Open golf tournament. At least that's what the scoreboard indicated.

But a pretty good argument could be made that Tom Watson is no worse than in a tie for the lead going into today's second round.

Watson shot a 7-under-par 65 on the South course at the Torrey Pines Golf Club. And that layout, overlooking cliffs and crags above the Pacific, generally is considered at least two shots harder than the North course, where Couples shot a 63.

"On the North course, if you don't shoot 68, you feel like you're losing ground," said Couples, who closed with three straight birdies.

"On the South course, anything under par is good and a score in the 60s is great," he said.

Watson, however, was having none of it.

"The South is probably a shot or two harder," Watson said. "But Fred Couples is the leader. He had a 63. And he won the $50,000 (zero coupon) bond" that goes to the daily leader.

The players will switch courses today before the field of 156 is cut for the final two rounds at the longer, tougher South course.

Phil Blackmar, at 6-foot-7 the tallest player on the PGA Tour, scored six birdies in a row over one stretch and dropped a 60-foot eagle putt on his final hole for a 64, one off the pace.

Gary Koch, who scored a hole in one on the 12th hole at the North course, led a group at 66 that included Hal Sutton, Jack Renner, Willie Wood, Mark Calcavecchia, John Cook and Canadian Dave Barr.

Of those 10 leaders, only Watson and Sutton played the tougher South course.

Seve Ballesteros of Spain also played the South and produced a 73 in the opening round of his two-tournament American swing. U.S. Open champion Scott Simpson had a 67 and Fuzzy Zoeller a 69, both at the North.

Watson, who knocked himself out of title contention with a 4-putt triple bogey in the final round at Hawaii last week, had to overcome a shaky start here.

He missed three greens over the first six holes, saved par on two of them and chipped in for birdie on the other.

He also holed a 30-foot putt on the second and got up and down from a bunker for birdie-4 on the sixth.

Arbitration Closes, Practice Opens

By The Associated Press

Dwight Gooden lost his case, Frank Tanana won his pitch and Frank Viola began throwing as spring training opened while salary arbitration hearings neared an end.

By The Associated Press

Burke of Montreal and Mark Thurmond of Detroit are scheduled for hearings Friday, the last three arbitration cases this year.

By The Associated Press

"I'm not going to make any sweeping statements until I've heard the arguments that were made," Fehr said.

By The Associated Press

Harazin called Gooden's case "unique and novel" because of the drug involvement.

State Coach Uses School To Attract Wrestling Talent

By The Associated Press

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State wrestling coach Bob Guzzo says he has to sell the school when he tries to lure top grapplers from the sport's stronghold in the Northeast.

By The Associated Press

"We have a really good school down here," he said. "It has a good academic reputation, the atmosphere is really nice, it's a pretty campus."

Failings Dim American Medal Hopes

By Ken Denlinger
 (c) 1988, The Washington Post
CALGARY, Alberta — When skier Pam Fletcher suffered a broken leg during practice for the women's downhill and when speed skater Dan Jansen suffered his second fall in competition Thursday, it put into vivid perspective the falling hopes for U.S. athletes in these Olympic Games.

Neither Americans nor the American team dreamed of dominance here. Still, no one imagined there would be more threats of legal action (three) by U.S. athletes than medals as the sixth day of competition was winding down.

As anticipated, the medal count starts with the Soviet Union, which had three golds and nine medals after most of Thursday's events; the United States — with one precious medal (bronze) — is tied for eighth place, behind, among other countries, Finland.

There are about 19 million skiers in the United States; that's more than three times the entire population of Finland.

With approximately $90 million available — much of it from the profits of the 1984 Los Angeles Games — for direct support of athletes in 34 sports the last four years, many people this week are asking why the United States hasn't made more strides in its overall Olympic-sports program?

"Coming in," said Robert H. Helmick, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, "we recognized that many of the older competitors were cycling out of their sports and we would have a number of young people.

"Look at the hockey team. The Russians (during a 7-5 victory Wednesday night) had a lot of players from the 1980 team (which an overachieving U.S. team upset). I had people coming up to me saying those kids made them proud to be Americans."

Still, some athletes are wondering what it takes to get domestic backing.

"We can't get support because we don't do well internationally," said cross-country skier Leslie Thompson. "So hardly anyone stays with the team more than two or three years."

Helmick said that $7,653,370 has been made available to seven winter sports governing bodies the last four years, including $3,022,056 in 1988.

U.S. amateur sports officials and athletes complain about lack of attention by Americans for all but a few weeks before and during each Olympics. They complain about progress not being applauded when it actually occurs — and cite Thursday as an example.

Bonny Warner, of Mt. Baldy, Calif., finished sixth in luge, the best performance by an American woman in Olympic history. It will be properly celebrated.

In a non-Olympic year, 1986, a four-man U.S. bobsled team driven by Matt Roy stunned the high-tech East Germans in a World Cup event — and earned no more than a brief mention on the back pages of most American sports sections.

A major reason for the success of foreign countries in the Winter Olympics, many feel, is that so many sports are foreign to Americans. Lots of our best athletes dream of glory in baseball and U.S. football. These are sports few people in the rest of the world follow.

"There's a difference in athletic philosophies," said the general manager of the U.S. hockey team, Art Berglund. "If we had some of those great big (football) guys, maybe we'd have a stronger team."

Even by winning its next two games, the U.S. hockey team might not make the medal round.

"I'm actually glad the Soviets dominate biathlon," said Lyle Nelson, the four-time Olympic biathlete and flag-bearer for the U.S. team in the opening ceremonies. "They should. It's one of their national sports."

In some of the sports comes concern about style (hockey), substance (speedskating and bobsled) and misfortune (women's alpine skiing, speed skating).

Fletcher's fall Thursday, for instance, was the latest in a series of injuries that all but forced the U.S. to enter its C-team in the women's alpine competition.

And Jansen's two falls this week came after the death of his sister from leukemia Sunday.

Ice hockey's Berglund insists "you can't buy athletes; you can't buy talent." U.S. history in the winter Olympics bears that out.

Many of the best U.S. performances in recent Winter Games have been from speed skaters; the boundaries of U.S. speed skating are pretty much the same as those of West Allis, Wis.

Nelson was reared in an Idaho mill town. After school, he and other children would be bused to nearby ski slopes and instructed on the various disciplines.

"That area," he said, "produced 10 Olympians."

Facilities still are a major problem, most U.S. officials said.

"Throughout all our cities all over the country," Helmick said, "we have basketball courts, playing fields and gymnasiums. We have only one bobsled run, one luge run, two speed skating tracks. Our plan for the future is to increase those."

U.S. speed skaters have been troubled by controversy (those threats of legal action), Nick Thometz's not being able to regain full strength after a mysterious blood ailment in December and Jansen's misfortune.

The dissension centered around the selection process, with four team members challenging the selections by new coach Mike Crowe at 1,000 and 1,500 meters.

That and bickering by bobsledders over the addition of pro football player Willie Gault have not put these sports in a flattering light.

The issues for hockey include the player pool and the playing strategy chosen by coach Dave Peterson.

"Our system of having our best players in the National Hockey League and not making them available to the U.S. team hurts us," Helmick said. He realizes it would be an enormous sacrifice for NHL teams to release American players for much of their regular season.

Peterson's strategy of all-out attack has been questioned by, among others, the coach of the Canadian team, Dave King, who said: "In 1984, we tried for six months to train our team to play a head-to-head game with the Soviets and Czechs. We realized we couldn't do it. The talent gap was too great. For us, (the best method) was: collect your defense and play a tight-checking game, try to go into the last shift 0-0 and then try to win in that last shift."

U.S. officials are hopeful some medals will come soon — and that figure skaters Brian Boitano and Debi Thomas will earn golds.

"We're making progress in lots of sports," said Dr. Charles Dillman, USOC director of sports science. "We just haven't advanced yet to the medal level."

U.S. Hockey In Must-Win Spot

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Losing one game had little effect on Canada's chances of reaching the Olympic hockey medal round. Winning two may not be enough for the United States.

Chants of "Go, Canada, Go" filled the Saddledome, but Finland filled the net with pucks Thursday night for a 3-1 victory.

Chants of "USA, USA" should fill the building tonight. But if the Americans don't beat underdog Norway, they can start filling their suitcases a few days early.

Despite the loss, Canada needs just one more victory to earn a spot in the six-team medal round. That should come Saturday against hapless France, which has been outscored 29-5 in its three losses.

Sweden, 2-0-1, jumped ahead of Canada in the tight A pool race with a 4-2 victory over Switzerland. Canada is tied with Finland at 2-1, followed by surprisingly strong Poland, 1-1-1, Switzerland, 1-2, and France, 0-3.

France lost 6-2 Thursday to Poland and is the only team in the group without a shot at advancing.

Three teams from each pool will make the medal round.

"I don't think I'm surprised by" the tight race, Canada Coach Dave King said, "not when you go to the Izvestia tournament (in December in Moscow) and see the competition there. The Poles and Swiss have played very well."

The B pool race isn't as close. The Soviet Union and West Germany were 3-0 going into their game today. Czechoslovakia, 2-1, was favored to beat Austria, 0-3, while the United States, 1-2, and Norway, 0-3, play tonight.

The Americans could be out of medal-round contention even before they take the ice against Norway, if West Germany upsets the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia beats Austria.

Even if the Americans are alive and beat Norway, they would have to beat West Germany by at least two goals Sunday to advance with the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia to the medal round.

"Everything is a must win," U.S. forward Tony Granato said.

To get one of them, Coach Dave Peterson was expected to turn to seldom-used goalie John Blue against Norway. With Mike Richter and Chris Terreri in the nets, the United States has been peppered with 20 goals in three games.

Finland, meanwhile, has gotten excellent goaltending from Jarmo Myllys. He made 38 saves, many under intense pressure, against Canada and has allowed just two goals in two games.

"The goaltender played a very good game," King said. "The Finnish team played a very strong first period. They scored on their chances and got a three-goal lead, and that's a long way to come back."

Two early goals by Erkki Laine helped the Finns bounce back from an opening upset to Switzerland.

"I have heard that after the opening match (when) we played very badly that nobody believed we could come back like this," Coach Pentti Matikainen said.

But they did, and Canada couldn't handle it.

"There wasn't much jump to our offense and there was a lot of hesitation," King said. "Our defensesmen would get the puck and our forwards wouldn't break up ice."

Poland, the tournament's success story even before it won a game, finally did that Thursday. The eighth-seeded Poles had lost to fourth-seeded Canada 1-0 and tied top-seeded Sweden 1-1.

Their first victim, though, was thankful for little things.

"It's difficult to score" against Poland, French Coach Kjell Larsson said. "I'm glad we are the only team that has scored two times and they have played Canada and Sweden. So I'm very satisfied."

Poland's four allowed goals ties Finland for the fewest in the Olympics.

Although the Poles are in the scramble for a berth in the medal round, assistant coach Jerzy Mruk set his sights lower.

"We really would like to get eighth place," he said. "Each game will be harder. We are very realistic."

Jerzy Christ had the first and last goals for Poland, which built a 4-0 lead before France scored at 10:03 of the third period.

Sweden remained the only unbeaten team in the A pool, but Coach Tommy Sandlin wasn't thrilled with his team's performance.

"I think we played better against Poland," he said. The favored Swedes managed just a tie Tuesday against the Poles, whose exceptional defense has kept them in games with better teams.

With Swiss goalie Richard Bucher struggling, Sweden struck for three goals on eight shots to take a 3-0 first-period lead.

Dwayne Hickman Tries For Acting Comeback In 'Dobie Gillis' TV Film

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dwayne Hickman spent five years putting together a reunion movie for the hit comedy series of a generation ago, "The Many Loves of Dobie Gillis." The series, which made its debut on CBS in 1959, followed the exploits of "typical teen-ager" Dobie Gillis and his beatnik pal Maynard G. Krebs. (The "G" was for Walter.) When the series died in 1963, the acting career of Hickman, who played Dobie, went into decline. Bob Denver, who was Maynard, went on to "Gilligan's Island," but he has been seen on TV only rarely in recent years. Two minor actors on the show went on to become stars: Warren Beatty and Tuesday Weld.

Hickman, now on leave as a CBS programming executive, plays a grown-up Dobie Gillis in the CBS movie "Bring Me the Head of Dobie Gillis." Zelda (Sheila James), the girl he totally ignored in his pursuit of Thalia, is now his wife and the mother of their teen-age son, Georgie. CBS will air the movie Sunday.

"I had a lot of trouble selling the idea of a 'Dobie Gillis' reunion," said Hickman, who is also the producer. "It took me three years to sell it. And another two years to get it made."

"I think there's a big market for this movie, but I couldn't get anybody to believe it. Despite the success of all the other reunion movies."

Hickman could not take the movie to ABC or NBC since he was a CBS employee, and it was not until Kim LeMasters became president of CBS Entertainment that he was able to sell the movie.

He realizes he is sticking his neck out, but he also believes it will be a success. If it is, he hopes it will revive

TAKING A CHANCE — Hoping for the enduring appeal of "Dobie Gillis," actor Dwayne Hickman is hoping for a career revival on the upcoming CBS movie "Bring Me the Head of Dobie Gillis." He starred in the TV series of the same name from 1959 to 1963. He has since become a programming executive for CBS. (AP Laserphoto) his acting career, possibly with a new "Dobie Gillis" series, or at least give him a new career as a producer. Hickman has been tireless in promoting the movie and has had T-shirts, coffee mugs and other promotional items made.

"Kim LeMasters told me if this doesn't work I should get out of show business," he said.

Maynard, and Sheila James, now a professor of law at Loyola University in Los Angeles, is back as Zelda. Others returning in their original roles are Steve Franken as Chatsworth Osborne Jr. and William Schallert as Mr. Pomfritt. Connie Stevens is Thalia, the role that had been played by Tuesday Weld.

The story for the film was written by Max Shulman, who created the characters in the 1950s.

Dobie has taken over his father's store, but things in Central City are on a financial downturn. Maynard returns, seemingly rich but still as allergic to work as ever. Thalia, now the richest widow in the world, also returns. It turns out it is she who caused the financial problems, and she threatens to turn Central City into a ghost town unless Dobie leaves Zelda for her.

The movie also tells the story of Dobie's teen-age son, played by Scott Grimes, who finds himself in the same romantic predicaments his father faced in the series.

"The movie has a story that's much stronger than the usual half-hour comedy," said Hickman. "It also has a moral, that a person's character is what matters and not his appearance and that you should never sell out to greed...."

"I'm trying to make a comeback," Hickman said. "After 'Dobie Gillis,' which has sort of become a cult favorite, my career in the theater and movies was hit or miss. I was only in one good movie, 'Cat Ballou.' I went to CBS as a program executive in 1977, and I've worked on some of their best series."

Just prior to joining CBS he did a half-hour pilot called "Whatever Happened to Dobie Gillis?" The concept was basically the same as in the movie. Hickman also appeared in the 1983 NBC movie "High School U.S.A."

Hickman said he believes the enduring appeal of "Dobie Gillis" is based on his image as a common man.

"It's Americana," he said. "It's simple values. There's a little edge to the writing, but it's not sophisticated. I think it appeals to people because it's simple and honest and stresses old-fashioned virtues. He was an average teen-ager, now he's an average man trying to make a go of it."

If "Bring Me the Head of Dobie Gillis" is a ratings success, it would not be surprising. The reunion shows of past series have usually done well.

"Return to Mayberry," which brought back the cast of "The Andy Griffith Show," was a huge success on NBC in May 1986. The "Perry Mason" movies have been so popular that NBC telecasts four or five a year.

'Wiseguy' Puts End To Latest Bad Guy In Monday's Episode

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Kevin Spacey, who has been wowing TV audiences with his portrayal of brilliant, bedeviled bad guy Mel Profitt on CBS' "Wiseguy," had a tough act to follow.

Ray Sharkey had created one of the season's best villains in Sonny Steelgrave, a tough New Jersey-based crime boss who turned out to be so lovable that undercover hero Vinnie Terranova (Ken Wahl) wept when he died.

But Steelgrave was gone, and Vinnie had to have a new investigation. Enter Mel and Susan Profitt (Joan Severance), a bizarre brother-sister act with an international crime syndicate and a vaguely incestuous relationship.

Mel, a manic-depressive with a genius IQ, gets his self-destruction wish in Monday's episode. The finite role is what appealed to Spacey.

"I was really attracted to be able to go and do a role for a number of weeks, find out what it was like to do a TV series but not be tied to one, create a character that hopefully will be memorable and get out," Spacey said recently, back home in Manhattan.

"You know, the crew, they're the biggest critics, they not only were in love with the character (Sonny Steelgrave), they knew Ray, and they hung out with Ray, and they were, like, Ray's pal, and here was this New York actor coming in."

By his last day on the set, Spacey said, "one of the crew members came up and said, 'You know, when you came on, we thought no one would ever make us forget, uh ... What's his name?' I thought that was a really great compliment."

If Spacey won over the "Wiseguy" crew, he also won over audiences. Back in New York, he said, people were stopping him on the street and quoting lines from the show to him.

"Wiseguy" premiered last fall on Thursday, opposite NBC's high-rated lineup, so it didn't get much attention. But with the introduction of the Profitts mid-season, CBS moved it to Monday night, where it is doing better.

Spacey, a dedicated New York stage actor, had little screen time before the series. He starred on Broadway in "Hurly Burly" and later with Jack Lemmon in "Long Day's Journey Into Night," a performance that can be seen later this season on PBS. He worked with Lemmon again in NBC's recent miniseries "The Murder of Mary Phagan." Spacey played a newspaper reporter.

He has a movie due out in April, "Rocket Gibraltar," in which he plays Burt Lancaster's son, a stand-up comic. Spacey, in fact, did stand-up as an impressionist in Los Angeles. His specialty is Johnny Carson, but he also does a mean Katharine Hepburn.

Spacey went to Vancouver to shoot "Wiseguy." A number of film projects have moved to Canada because of lower production costs.

"I travel with a large black Labrador named Slate," Spacey said. "My dog's traveled all over the world, and he's this incredible, like, East Side dog. I found him as a stray in '81. And I hate hotel life, it's too busy. So I went on the hunt and found this great apartment, very quiet and secluded down near the largest park in Vancouver, Stanley Park. I thought, great, no actors. Nobody knows about it."

"I get in the elevator the first day I'm living there, and Katharine Hepburn is standing in it."

Hepburn was shooting an NBC movie. Spacey notes casually that he and Hepburn knew each other already.

When he was 15, Spacey said, he saw Hepburn in a Los Angeles production of "A Matter of Gravity." He waited for her in the parking lot with a bouquet of flowers. The gesture won him a few precious minutes with the actress.

After a performance of "Long Day's Journey," Hepburn came backstage to congratulate the actors. Spacey said he was too choked up to mention their meeting of years before.

But the next day he sent her another bouquet, with a letter. He got a note back, he said, which, in typical Hepburn style, noted it was the first time she had received flowers for simply attending the theater, not performing. Since then, the two have stayed in touch.

Bogart Doubted Marriage Would Work

NEW YORK (AP) — Lauren Bacall says Humphrey Bogart did not give their marriage much chance after they wed when she was 20 years old. But the union produced a son and daughter and did not end until Bogart's death 12 years after the marriage. That's longevity by Hollywood standards. And Miss

Bacall credits it to Bogart's determination not to allow work to separate them. "I never went on location to shoot a film," she said in an interview in the current issue of Us magazine. "The agreement before we got married was that I would not take off and leave him behind. When he went on location I went with him," the sultry-voiced actress said. Bogart, who was a quarter-century older than Miss Bacall when they were married in 1945, once said he had "figured I would leave him in five years, because I didn't know anything about life and the world at that point," said Miss Bacall.

Play Date

NEW YORK (AP) — Rock diva Madonna has a date on Broadway in her new play, "Speed-The-Plow," even though the curtain has yet to go up on the production at a small Lincoln Center theater. "Speed-The-Plow" begins preview performances March 29 at Lincoln Center's 299-seat Mitzi Newhouse Theater and will run through April 24. An official opening date has not been announced. It will reopen April 26 at the 1,058-seat Royale Theater on Broadway.

CBS' Doug Edwards Retires April 1

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Douglas Edwards, Walter Cronkite's predecessor and the nation's first nightly television news anchor, is retiring April 1 after 46 years with CBS.

Edwards, who covered World War II on radio with the legendary Edward R. Murrow, says he's "a little sad, but exhilarated" about retirement.

"I've had a daily TV news report without a break since April 15, 1948, which is a record, almost 40 years now," Edwards said Thursday. He laughed and added: "That and a dollar will get you a ride on the subway."

"He's been solid and accurate and straightforward and reliable through the years," said Mike Wallace, who worked with Edwards on radio nearly 50 years ago, before the two met again at CBS. "He has not been flashy, and he has not been sensational, he's been solid."

In 1948, then-CBS President Frank Stanton tapped Edwards to anchor "Doug Edwards and the News." After 14 years in the job, he was succeeded by Cronkite on the "CBS Evening News."

Edwards, 70, still does the network newsbreaks and a weekly show, "For Our Times," as well as regular radio broadcasts.

"Doug Edwards has been a friend and a mentor since before I joined CBS News," said Dan Rather, only the third TV news anchor in the network's history. "He's a giant in our craft, and all of us in television and radio news are indebted to him."

"His name has been synonymous with CBS News since the dawn of television," said CBS News President Howard Stringer. "Doug will be sorely missed, his accomplishments long treasured."

Edwards already had 10 years of broadcast experience when he joined CBS Radio in 1942 at age 25. He joined Murrow's staff in London in the final months of World War II. Afterwards, he became Paris bureau chief. A interview on the local New York CBS station about his foreign coverage impressed CBS executives.

"They seemed to like the way I conducted myself in front of the camera, and they asked me afterwards if I'd like to do some television news," Edwards said. He started by doing the Thursday and Saturday news shows.

He was tapped for the news show after his participation with Murrow and Quincy Howe in CBS' acclaimed radio coverage of the 1948 presidential conventions.

"We did very well, the three of us on those conventions," Edwards recalled. "Afterward, CBS asked me to go into television, and I did it with some fear and trepidation and trembling, not because I was nervous about being on television, I had done quite a bit of it, but radio was the power, and I was pretty young at the time."

In the beginning, the CBS network consisted of a half-dozen Eastern cities. "Almost every other night, I'd welcome a new TV station that got hooked up," Edwards said. "Until one night, in 1951 or 1952, I said, 'Good evening, everybody, coast to coast.'"

NBC had "Camel News Caravan" with John Cameron Swayze in 1949. ABC launched a nightly news show in 1951 anchored by John Daly, a former CBS correspondent.

Edwards began his broadcasting career at the tender age of 15 on a radio station in Troy, Ala.

After high school, he landed a job with radio station WXYZ in Detroit, home of such popular radio serials as "The Lone Ranger" and "The Green Hornet." He worked with another up-and-coming newsman, Mike Wallace.

"We were both Cunningham News Aces back in 1940-41," Wallace recalled in a telephone interview from Atlanta, where he was working on a segment for CBS' "60 Minutes." "Then he left to go to WSB in Atlanta, where I am at this moment."

"Cunningham was a drug chain, and they used to sponsor newscasts, and they used to have the sound of a P-38 (fighter plane) or whatever zooming and, 'The Cunningham News Aces are on the air!' — Doug and me."

Edwards said he and his wife, May, plan to move to Sarasota, Fla., where he will continue lecturing on broadcast journalism and begin work on an autobiography.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY Feb. 20

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Stay around creative, energetic individuals who can give you some new ideas. Take it easy tonight, and get plenty of rest.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): This is the right time to sit down with your mate and work out a more practical budget. This will make you both happier.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): If you want to gain your aims quickly, sociability is very important right now. Be most careful in motion, especially while driving.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Be sure to handle credit and community matters with care and intelligence. Show your appreciation to people who have helped you.
LEO (July 22 to August 21): Plan a trip which will bring you much more success in the future, but count the cost carefully before you make any firm decisions.
VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): If you are having trouble advancing, try a new approach. Be more gentle and understanding to your mate, and you will both be happier.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): You'll have a chance to benefit from a new opportunity, so be alert today. A partner may want to make revisions to an agreement.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): A co-worker will have an idea which could be helpful in organizing a new project, so accept it. Take it easy tonight and rest up.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): This is a good day to start work and get great results on a pet project. Go out for some fun with your friends this evening.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Show more affection for your family and create a more harmonious atmosphere at home. This is a good evening to entertain friends.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): A dynamic associate has some ideas which can increase your business interests considerably, so seek these out and use them.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20): You can get involved in a new financial enterprise which has some fine possibilities. Consult with an expert on this matter.

Opening lead: Ten of ♦

There should be a law against players who bid badly profiting from the error of their ways. We do not know what South was trying to accomplish in the auction. Nevertheless, he serendipitously landed in the right strain, albeit a level too low.

South's jump to two no trump deserves an award as the year's worst bid. With no tenaces and a weak doubleton, he had every reason to suppose that no trump would play better from his partner's side of the table. North's three diamonds inquired about South's major-suit holding, and his redouble confirmed the ace of diamonds. Why South suppressed his heart holding and near solid club suit during the rest of the auction will forever remain shrouded in mystery.

As a result of East's double of three diamonds, West had no trouble getting his side off to its best start. Since there was no need to duck if suits were breaking, and no point to ducking if they were not, declarer rose with dummy's ace. He cashed the ace-king of hearts and crossed back to the table with the jack of clubs to see if the hearts would split out.

When that suit failed to break, declarer came to hand with the king of spades and tried to run his clubs. West's stopper in the suit was a considerable disappointment, but all was not lost. East was forced to come down to three spades and a diamond, and dummy was reduced to the same holding. Declarer carefully led the ten of spades to the ace and, reading the distribution perfectly, exited with the jack of diamonds. East was forced to win and concede the contract by leading from his J-7 of spades into the board's Q-9 tenace.
