Hustler Wins Appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today overturned a $200,000 award won by evangelist Jerry Falwell against Hustler magazine and its publisher Larry Flynt, extending the legal protections for parody and satire, even when they are pornographic.

The court unanimously ruled that even pornographic spoofs about a public figure enjoy the free-speech protections of the Constitution's First Amendment if those spoofs could not reasonably have been interpreted as stating actual facts about the person.

The justices stripped Falwell of the award he had won for "emotional distress" caused by an advertising parody in Hustler.

"Outrageousness in the area of political and social discourse has an inherent subjectiveness about it which would allow a jury to impose liability on the basis of the jurors' tastes or views, or perhaps on the basis of their dislike of a particular expression," Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist wrote for the court.

"An 'outrageous' standard thus runs afoul of our longstanding refusal to allow damages to be awarded because the speech in question may have an adverse emotional impact on the audience," he said.

Falwell's lawsuit arose out of a full-page "ad parody" that appeared in the November 1983 and March 1984 issues of Hustler, a sexually explicit magazine.

Featuring a photograph of Falwell, the ad purportedly quotes him discussing a sexual encounter with his mother and describing himself as a habitual drunkard.

At the bottom of the page in small print readers are told that the ad is a parody "not to be taken seriously."

Falwell charged Hustler and Flynt with libel, invasion of privacy and in-

PCC Foundation Names McConney As President

Pitt Community College will ask local residents to invest in the future of Pitt County through the Pitt Community College Foundation.

The initial board of directors of the foundation, approved by the college's Board of Trustees, held its first annual meeting Tuesday at the Greenville Country Club, where officers and the executive committee were named.

John McConney, vice president of engineering at Burroughs Wellcome Co. in Greenville, was named president, while John Roberts of Roberts Welding in Winterville was named vice president. Dr. Charles Russell, president of PCC, will serve as secretary-treasurer. The officers also will serve as the executive committee.

"I just get so excited when I think about where we've come," Russell said, reviewing highlights of his 16 years at the college and the growth he has seen. Russell was addressing the foundation board members and the trustees who joined the foundation board for lunch after the meeting.

The foundation will provide more opportunities for the college to continue "breaking the barrier that would keep people from moving upward in life," Russell said. "I'm so excited, I can hardly stand it."

During the foundation meeting, led by Russell and Young, who also serves as the executive director of the foundation, the board reviewed the history of the foundation, its charter and bylaws and duties of officers.

According to foundation bylaws, the board always will include PCC's president, Russell's current position; the chairman of the board of trustees, currently C.W. Everett; the director of institutional development, currently Jim Young, and one other member of the board of trustees in addition to the chairman, currently G. Henry Leslie.

Gore Reassures Tobacco Farmers

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

Democratic presidential hopeful Albert Gore Jr. rode a media wave into Greenville for an afternoon pig picking and rally Tuesday as the Tennessee senator continues to sacrifice delegates in Northern states to concentrate on the March 8 Super Tuesday primary.

Though Gore's 1:20 p.m. arrival at the River Road Ranch put him more than an hour behind schedule, he was greeted with handshakes, network news cameras and a bluegrass band performing "Rocky Top," Tennessee's state song.

Gore stressed his record of supporting tobacco farmers, promised to use a new approach in guiding the country in the post-Reagan years, urged North Carolina Democrats to generate support at the grass roots level and found time to eat some home-cooked barbecue.

"Throughout most of my life I was raised on a tobacco farm, but we raised burley tobacco over there," said Gore, referring to his family farm in Tennessee. He also said he was familiar with the price support programs regulating flue-cured tobacco grown in North Carolina.

"The basic market is the same," Gore said to the crowd of more than 300 supporters. "There is one issue that is central to the future of this program. Are we going to allocate the right to grow tobacco to small farmers? Or are we going to give it to the big companies?"

"I've been on the side of small farmers," he said. "Not just with television commercials and not just with image. I've been on the side of the small farmers in the battles I've fought."

When questioned about health warnings concerning tobacco, Gore said, "There is a legitimate role for the federal government to play in providing people with the health risks of smoking." But the more important issue is ensuring small farmers the right to grow tobacco, he said.

U.S. Rep. Charles Rose III, D-N.C., introduced Gore and endorsed him as a candidate working for farmers. "If you are a tobacco farmer, or a peanut farmer or a working man or woman in eastern North Carolina, the person you need to support is Senator Al Gore," he said.

"The person that always stood up and helped us time after time after time — and many times the only person that would help us — is this man, Senator Al Gore," said Rose, praising Gore for his help with problems caused by tobacco imports and assessments.

Gore said some candidates are catering to special interest groups during this election, but his commitment to tobacco is part of his record. "My position on tobacco is not anything new. It's not a position that was created for this presidential primary," he said. "My position goes back to every one of the 12 years I've served in Congress."

Speakers Urge Stronger DWI Law

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

A clear call for stronger laws and more stringent penalties for violators of safe driving on North Carolina's highways was voiced at a public hearing Tuesday night on the issue of driving while impaired.

Local enforcement officers, representatives of agencies dealing with abusers of alcohol and drugs, and concerned persons provided input to state officials conducting the meeting at the Willis Building.

The public meeting here was the fifth of eight such meetings being held statewide. Several members of the N.C. Governor's Highway Safety Commission attended the meeting, questioning contributors at the end of the input session.

Secretary of Corrections Aaron Johnson made brief opening remarks prior to time allocated for public input.

Johnson stressed the importance Gov. Jim Martin places on efforts to find solutions to the problem of growing numbers of persons arrested for driving while impaired and the consequent toll of deaths and injuries on North Carolina's highways.

Referring to the Safe Raod Act of 1983, Johnson said "there was a sharp drop in the numbers of DWIs after the passage of that law.

However, in the last two years, we have seen a dramatic increase in the number of arrests. The number totaled 77,000 in 1986, an 11 percent increase over 1985, with an estimated increase of violators at 5 percent or more for the 1987 calendar year.

"Governor Martin has proposed action to strengthen the Safe Driving Act, ones that will make penalties more severe. He is pressing for bipartisan efforts on this issue, working for laws that will be swift, sure, with severe punishment for offenders."

Johnson termed the toll of dead and injured in North Carolina and nationwide as "an American tragedy, a tough problem to deal with. It is a problem we cannot retreat from, one we cannot accept, one we cannot live with."

Paul Jones, director of the Governor's Highway Safety Program, coordinated the meeting. Joe Biesecker, chairman of the Governor's Highway Safety Commission, was originally designated as the hearing's coordinator, but is ill with flu.

Jones outlined the structure of the hearing, limiting each input contributor to five minutes, with time allotted for commissioners to further question contributors. He also noted STORYTELLER — Louise Anderson, a regionally acclaimed storyteller, visited students at Third Street School this morning in observance of Black History Month. She told various anecdotes with "lessons" in them and encouraged students to participate in the stories. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis).

Acclaimed Teller Of Tales Appears

By CHERIE EVANS

Kindergarten and first-grade students filed into the media center at Third Street School and starred at the visitor.

Dressed in a red dress and a white turban, the visitor sat in a rocking chair and spoke to the children in a boisterous voice as they came in — "Hi, there."

"What it is?" she said, waving arms that featured numerous multicolored bracelets and hands adorned with rings. She also wore large gold-toned earrings and several long necklaces.

The students obviously did not recognize the visitor as Louise Anderson, a regionally acclaimed storyteller who has published books and tapes of her stories, based on a lifetime of research. Some just stared when she spoke to them, while others shyly looked away.

But, before Ms. Anderson began her presentation to the students, Carolyn Ferebee, principal of the school, introduced her and told the students her visit was in recognition of Black History Month. "We're going to take time to reflect on black history and the things and contributions blacks have done for this country," she said.

From that moment on, it was obvious all the children had needed was an introduction.

Ms. Anderson lured them into her stories by encouraging them to participate. She recited hide-and-go-seek riddles, and many students joined in. She also led the children in a call and response story about a cow, and students joined Ms. Anderson in acting out some of the lines.

She also told them a story about a family where all the members had twisted mouths except one son, John, who had been to school. All members of the family, except John, tried to blow out a candle, but couldn't because of the way their mouths were twisted. Ms. Anderson said when John was asked to blow out the candle, he licked his fingers and smothered the light between them, and she demonstrated.

The message to students was, Ms. Anderson said, "When you go to school, you learn there's more than one way to put out a light."

A story about a possum who gets in trouble by trying to help a snake was to teach the students, "You never trouble trouble unless trouble troubles you," she said.

After telling a ghost story, Ms. Anderson told the children several ways to keep "ghosts, goblins and witches" out of their rooms at night. She also encouraged them to ask their parents what happened the day they were born and how they met and fell in love. "That is your history, too. That is your heritage," she said.

Ms. Anderson was to speak to another group of students at the school this morning and is scheduled to speak to the Parent-Teacher Association at the school today at 7:30 p.m.

Ms. Anderson was the author and director of "Lest We Forget," a portrayal of the life and times of Martin Luther King Jr., as well as a bicentennial pageant, "It Is Time To Tell The Children." She has appeared in several motion pictures, including "River Rats," "Raisin in The Sun" and "The Greatest Gift."

A native of Jacksonville, Ms. Anderson studied at North Carolina A&T College in Greensboro.

ECU Study Finds Coaching Can Help SAT Participants

By GEORGE A. THREEWITTS
ECU News Bureau

Some students score higher on the Scholastic Aptitude Test when they are coached before taking the test, an East Carolina University study has found.

Dr. Robert M. Brown, an ECU professor of education, and Robert P. Peele, a graduate student, conducted a research study last year of a group of high school students enrolled in a course to prepare for the SAT. In a report on the study, made available this week, Brown said the students gained from 20 to 120 points after they were coached for the test.

But the researchers advise that other studies of test-preparation courses may differ. And they urge parents to be cautious about courses costing hundreds of dollars and promising high gains on SAT scores.

In the ECU study a group of 19 students from a county in eastern North Carolina were tested before they began their SAT training. Their scores on the first test averaged 826 points. The students then began an eight-week course which met once a week for three hours. At the end of the course they took the regularly scheduled SAT and averaged 897 for an average gain of 71 points.

Brown said the SAT review course was prepared by Horizons for Learning Ltd. Students were instructed using materials provided by the company and by instructors hired for the course. Emphasis in the course was placed on practice in skills comparable to the verbal and mathematical skills that are found on the Scholastic Aptitude Test.

The cost of the course was $80 per person and was shared by the individual student and the county Board of Education.

Brown says the results of his research contradicts a study of freshmen college students at Harvard University. The Harvard study compared students who trained for the SAT to those who were not coached for the exam. The results showed there was no appreciable difference in the SAT scores of the two groups.

Brown said it is not unusual that the studies at Harvard and ECU showed different results. "Different results are common in investigations of this type," he said.

Brown said he believes "coaching at least helped the students to become 'test-wise' and score to their maximum ability."

"Coaching did help (improve SAT scores for) this group of students in eastern North Carolina," he said.

The ECU researchers noted that SAT "coaching" through review courses has become very popular among students, their parents and some educators. As a result, the sale of courses and learning aids for the SAT has become "Big Business." But the researchers caution parents to be wary of some of the claims made by companies offering test-study materials.

"One company claims that students who take their course can expect to score increases of over one hundred points and that 75 percent of their most recent graduates improved SAT scores by more than two hundred points," the researchers said.

"Company originated statistics used to encourage customers to purchase their products should be viewed with some caution ... particularly when the product is relatively expensive to the customer," they said.

Zoning Ordinance Update Presented

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

Representatives of Greenville's Planning and Development Department presented the fourth part of a proposed zoning ordinance update to members of the Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday at a special meeting at City Hall.

The presentation, fourth of a five-topic review, covered multifamily development regulations, exemptions and modifications, and development standards for zoning districts.

City Planner Jack Simoneau discussed with commission members and City Council liaison Inez Fridley the major points and staff comments regarding the ordinance update.

According to Simoneau, those comments were also sent to Robinson & Cole, a contracted consultant, to help in the formulation of the revised zoning ordinance.

Among the recommended changes Simoneau discussed with commission members Tuesday night regarding multifamily development regulations were ones to combine two of the existing development standards (one apartment on one lot and group housing) into one standard, delete land use intensity standards in their entirety, and to provide greater flexibility in building design by altering interior building-to-building setback requirements.

Recommended changes regarding exemptions and modifications included requiring free-standing structures (chimneys, tanks, radio-television towers, ect.) to setback an additional 12 inches for every 12 inches exceeding 35 feet in height, providing canopy setback provisions for all non-resident zoning districts, and deleting additional setback requirements for churches and making churches subject to the bufferyard standards in determining setbacks and physical barriers required (fencing and vegetation).

Recommended changes Simoneau said the staff has made regarding development standards include establishing a minimum lot width of 50 feet in the CDF (downtown fringe commercial) and CN (neighborhood commercial) to be consistent with existing requirements, and increasing the minimum lot width for duplexes from 60 feet to 75 feet to alleviate the overcrowding of off-street parking in front yards.

Simoneau said Tuesday night's meeting was part of an effort to thoroughly review and update the Greenville Zoning Ordinance in its entirety. The last comprehensive update of the ordinance occurred in 1969.

He said a comprehensive update of the zoning ordinance will benefit the city by ensuring that all sections of the ordinance work in unison and by guaranteeing that any zoning contradictions created by passing amendments are eliminated.

After all five topics of the ordinance have been discussed and examined, the Planning and Zoning Commission will vote on whether to recommend approval of the revised ordinance. The proposed ordinance will then be presented to City Council for consideration of adoption.

Repair Shop Seeks Special Use Permit

A request for a special use permit to operate a minor repair automobile shop will be one of the items considered by members of the Greenville Board of Adjustment at the board's regular monthly meeting Thursday at 7 p.m. in council chambers of City Hall.

The special use permit would allow the petitioners, Greenville Eastgate Inc. and Linwood E. Stroud, to operate the automobile repair shop on the south side of Mosely Drive directly behind Parker's Barbecue. The property is zoned CS (shopping center).

In other matters, the board will consider a request by Lee-Moore Oil Co. and Ray Marshburn Jr. to obtain a special use permit to allow the sale of gasoline at a convenience store on the southwest corner of 10th Street and Charles Street. The property is zoned CDF (commercial downtown fringe).

Other items the board will consider:

•A request by the Epsilon Mu Chapter of the Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity to obtain a special use permit to allow a fraternity on the southeast corner of West 5th Street and Albermarle Avenue. The property is zoned R-6 (high density residential).

•A request by Alton O. Spain to obtain a special use permit to allow a drive-through restaurant at 1414 S. Charles Blvd. The property is zoned CN (neighborhood commercial).

•A request by W. Ray and Eunice Lassiter to obtain a special use permit to place a mobile home on the north side of S.R. 1417 approximately .75 miles west of N.C. 11. The property is zoned RA-20 (residential-agricultural).

•A request by Charles L. McLawhorn Jr. to obtain a variance in order to use a detached garage as a dwelling unit at 310 E. 13th St. The property is zoned CDF (commercial downtown fringe).

Public hearings will be conducted on all the considered matters.

Sound Reasons For Refuge

There are sound environmental and conservation considerations for supporting the proposed Roanoke River National Wildlife Refuge.

By establishing the refuge, the United States government has an opportunity to preserve a vanishing ecosystem and diverse wildlife habitat in Martin County. By supporting this action, the state of North Carolina has a chance to further its involvement in the national wildlife refuge system and protect a disappearing portion of the state's natural heritage.

The proposed refuge is primarily forested in bottomland hardwood — mature, old-growth timber tracts that host a diversity of plant and animal life. This type of ecosystem is vanishing across the nation, falling victim to timbering and development, and in North Carolina, the Roanoke basin is one of the largest remaining.

As bottomland hardwood areas shrink, so do the populations of species dependent on it for existence. Sadly, as these areas have been timbered, species have declined as their habitats disappeared. This occurrence is the key element in the importance of the proposed wildlife refuge.

Those who oppose the opportunity to preserve this ecosystem are taking a short-sighted view of the ecological facts. For example, area hunters claim few black ducks exist in the refuge area. If that statement is true, logically, it is because the species' habitat of wetlands is shrinking. There is evidence the black duck population can be increased by proper wildlife management techniques on a duly-established preserve.

In addition, opponents' argument that the refuge is not financially feasible and will usurp revenues from Martin County is not sound. Federal law requires money from lands acquired by the Federal Wildlife Commission — three-quarters of one percent of the purchase price — benefit the county it is purchased in. In North Carolina, that figure translates to shared revenue payments equal to or greater than taxes.

It is true personnel have a difficult time managing existing refuges in the state with the staff and budget restrictions placed on them. But there is no reason the operating cost for this new refuge can't be adequately programmed in the budget in advance of the need.

Adding an inland wildlife refuge in North Carolina will provide more diversity for the state's system of refuges — a fact important to preserving a wide variety of wildlife and waterfowl.

Furthermore, the refuge can improve river water quality by filtering pollutants, removing sediment and recycling nutrients. This function could benefit the troubled Albemarle Sound, which is fed by the waters of the Roanoke and is currently the focus of state and national studies.

Finally, by declaring this area a refuge, the public is guaranteed access to the land — hiking, recreation, nature study and even hunting could be allowed. If the area remains in private hands, there is little hope for public access.

The state of North Carolina already owns six tracts of property within the proposed protection area. The refuge would protect the environmentally sensitive land around this core area, strengthening the public's investment in the conservation effort.

Clearly, good reasons exist for supporting the Roanoke River Wildlife Refuge. Federal, state and local officials should make the choice to protect what remains of a threatened part of the nation's natural heritage.

A Parable Of Boom And Bust

'Those who happen to be ordinary working people and, thus, by definition, not New York real-estate magnates, rock stars or professional football players, however, are left wondering, first, "What boom?" and, second, "What next?"'

All the recent talk about boom-bust economic cycles has put me in mind of the Old Testament story of Joseph and Pharaoh's dream.

Joseph interpreted the dream as a divine warning that seven years of plenty would be followed by seven years of famine.

That story had a happy ending: Joseph came up with a management plan; Pharaoh and his people followed it.

As the result of forethought, preparation and belt-tightening by everybody during the good times, when the bad times finally came, Egypt had food.

The experts now tell us that the years of plenty are coming to an end, that the boom is going bust.

Those who happen to be ordinary working people and, thus, by definition, not New York real-estate magnates, rock stars or professional football players, however, are left wondering, first, "What boom?" and, second, "What next?"

America in the 1980s has not exactly been the modern equivalent of ancient Egypt's full-granaried splendor.

The income of the median family dropped from $28,200 in 1973 to $26,433 in 1984 (using 1984 dollars). At the same time, the proportion of Americans classified as poor grew by nearly a third.

In the 1950s, a typical 30-year-old man needed 14 percent of his before-tax earnings to make the mortgage payment on a typical house. By 1984 that figure was 44 percent.

Those who already own houses cannot move. Because of the scarcity and expense of quality day care, single parents can't afford to work and yet can't afford not to work.

So much for the boom when people were working.

The bust, I fear, adds to an already grim picture the face and voice of the worker out of work. No longer just some sleek, suspended Wall Street stranger, he is now our neighbor, our friend, our parent, our child, our spouse.

The American promise used to be: Where there's work, there's hope. In the late 1980s, for many, there is suddenly no work. Hundreds of workers are losing their jobs for the most part through no fault of their own. This last fact, of itself, may be creating some disturbing consequences for employees and employers alike.

While the reality of lay-offs is unsettling, more unsettling have been the reactions — or, more accurately, the non-reactions — of some of those laid off. These are good employees who shrug or sigh or laugh off termination. Their passivity is worrisome because it seems to derive from an uncritical acceptance of job loss as a natural part of a work order where bad things happen to good people for no reason.

Such an attitude may help the individual since it protects against heartbreak when a job is lost. In the short run, too, such an attitude helps employers. Terminations become an accepted — even preferred — solution for bad times.

But do we really want a work environment in which the best employee is the trouble-free ex-employee?

Not everyone, however, is going softly into the good night of joblessness. Some laid-off workers are angry and resentful of a work place where the promise of longevity, competence and loyalty seems to have been a one-way promise.

Employees who have served an employer long and well but who have lost their jobs have a right to feel angry and betrayed.

They also have a right to respect; underlying their indignation is a work philosophy that cares about and believes in things like fundamental fairness, honest dealing, excellence and altruism.

If they make us uncomfortable, so be it. Perhaps the discomfort will move us to explore why it is that the boom of the late 1980s was no boom for many people and why the coming bust has not been mitigated by forethought, preparation and self-control during the good times.

Should the day come when everyone wordlessly, thoughtlessly, carelessly accepts losing a job instead of questioning the practices and policies that led to loss of that job, then we should tremble.

For that indeed will be the day when "the best lose all conviction," in the words of W.B. Yeats who, you will recall, was writing about the end of the world.

Is Shultz Trip An Elusive Journey?

'Shultz basically is seeking to turn the negotiating process upside down by starting informal talks first on the "substance" of the dispute rather than dwelling on the "procedures" of how to hold an international conference.'

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State George P. Shultz leaves for the Middle East Wednesday night on what many say is an elusive quest for a negotiating breakthrough that will ease tensions in Israel's strife-torn Palestinian territories and open the way to an overall settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict.

No one seems more aware of the difficult task before him than Shultz himself. At a Brussels press conference while enroute here from Moscow Tuesday, he acknowledged: "It's going to be tough. I don't think many people give me much chance and that's the drift of their questions everywhere — intense skepticism."

But Shultz, usually poker-faced, offered a rare insight into his own emotions about his high-risk Middle East mission:

"I believe that if there are chances, even if the chances are small, it's worthwhile trying. You can't be too afraid of failing. Suppose I go and don't succeed? What am I saving myself for? So we'll try, and people want to have the U.S. come, and maybe we'll get somewhere."

Impelling him are almost three months of turmoil in the West Bank and Gaza Strip in which more than 50 Arabs have died, intense pressure from pro-Israeli and pro-Palestinian groups here, and appeals by Arab heads of state and Israeli leaders for the United States to re-engage itself in the peace process.

Many analysts, including a number of U.S. officials who are reluctant to say so publicly, see little that Shultz can do beyond creating an illusion of movement in a process whose outcome hinges on the interplay between Israel and the Palestinians.

"Nobody agrees with the American proposals but everybody wants a process," said Martin Indyk, executive director of the Washington Institute for Near East Policy.

Many Middle East analysts say the violence has changed permanently the relative Palestinian docility that held sway in the West Bank and Gaza since Israel occupied them in 1967.

As a result, they argue, the Israeli public and government, almost evenly divided between those who want to keep the territories and those who would "trade land for peace," cannot indefinitely defer a decision without risking greatly increased confrontation with the frustrated young Palestinians who sparked the violence of recent weeks.

These observers foresee escalation of tensions that, in the short run at least, is likely to strengthen the hand of Israeli hardliners advocating tougher repressive measures.

But, proponents of this theory argue, such tactics are unlikely to work against the raised expectations of the 1.5 million Palestinians in the territories.

In the end, they predict that Israel, a state born out of the Jewish Holocaust of World War II, will be unable to avoid a choice between letting the territories go or trying to hold on to them — either through mass expulsions or repression too brutal for a state with Israel's history and democratic ideals to contemplate.

Those U.S. officials and others who hold this view believe it will take two to five years for the process to reach that stage. In the meantime, they contend, many of the ideas that have dominated the Mideast peace debate in the past have lost much of their relevance because events have overtaken them.

These include arguments about whether Israel should deal with the Palestine Liberation Organization or only Jordan, whether negotiations between Israel and an Arab partner should be direct or part of an international conference, and whether there should be a period of limited autonomy in the territories before their final status is decided.

Whether that is indeed the case should start to become clear almost as soon as Shultz embarks on his lonely mission, carrying to the region the outlines of a U.S. plan he has described as a "blend" of these older ideas and some new variations he hopes might just break the logjam.

Shultz basically is seeking to turn the negotiating process upside down by starting informal talks first on the "substance" of the dispute rather than dwelling on the "procedures" of how to hold an international conference.

This is partly because Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir has steadfastly resisted Arab demands for a U.N.-sponsored conference attended by the Soviet Union where international pressures on Israel to yield "land for peace" likely would be intense.

But Israeli and U.S. sources say there is another reason for Shultz's fixation on "substance" rather than "procedures."

They say that last month, during a State Department review of the failings and accomplishments of the 1978 Camp David accords, Shultz discovered that Egyptian and Israeli negotiators, before breaking off talks in late 1981, had made considerable progress toward agreement on the rudiments of limited autonomy for the territories.

But Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak and Jordan's King Hussein insist that Camp David can no longer serve as a framework for negotiations and that whatever "substance" Shultz has in mind — either regarding interim arrangements or the final-status talks — must be discussed under the umbrella of an international conference.

Strength For Today

A high school student made a rather perceptive observation. "If you listen in class and do your homework you think that school is swell, but if you don't do your work you think the teacher is rotten."

Adolescents and adults are the same in this regard. When high school students begin to fail because of neglecting their work, they blame the teachers. We adults blame our bosses or the members of our families or our friends. To embellish the matter and make a stronger case for ourselves, we sometimes declare that some people are just plain lucky, and we bemoan the fact that we are just not in that class.

But if we examine these "lucky" people, we might well find that they were hard workers who constantly cultivated the learning process and respected their teachers.

The Pollsters Tracked, But Not Long Enough

WASHINGTON — For some pollsters, the day after the New Hampshire primary was a good day to be traveling. It's harder, you see, to hit a moving target.

The night before, Granite State voters had given Vice President Bush a convincing nine-point victory over Sen. Robert J. Dole. That was after most tracking polls had predicted the race would be a tie, or close to it. The scorecard:

•A Washington Post-ABC News poll on Monday night, for example, showed both Bush and Dole with 32 percent of the vote, based on interviews with 405 likely Republican voters, with a five-percentage-point margin of error.

•Gallup had reported Dole with an eight-point lead based on interviewing the previous weekend. Its client newspapers reported the findings Tuesday morning.

•The Boston Globe reported results of tracking polls conducted Feb. 13-

14, which showed Bush with 31 percent and Dole with 30 percent. Margin of sampling error for the survey was plus or minus 6 percent.

•Tracking polls for WBZ-TV in Boston showed Bush with a two-point lead over Dole, with a margin of sampling error of 5 percent.

Thank God, or at least Warren Mitofsky, for CBS. Their final two-day tracking poll conducted Sunday and Monday showed Bush with a four-point lead, 34 percent to 30 percent. Margin of sampling error: plus or minus four percentage points.

Careful students of survey research might note that all the polls, including the CBS effort, produced results that were outside the margin of sampling error of the final results. (The teachers of those careful students also might add that margin of sampling error probably shouldn't even be reported for tracking surveys, since these polls use techniques that cannot be relied on to produce a random sample.)

So what went wrong? With the exception of the Gallup effort, the answer is: nothing much. Polling isn't physics. That's a hard argument to make in America's newsrooms these days, particularly at those newspapers that ran results similar to those reported in The Post.

Tracking surveys are risky business. The fruits of such efforts are less reliable than more rigorously executed surveys. When they're right, media pollsters look like prophets. When they miss the mark, pollsters should cheerfully respond to those inevitable calls from reporters who already have reduced journalism's five Ws into three: What Went Wrong?

So here, in abbreviated form, is my Cheerful Response:

Tracking polls are a good way to measure change, not true values. In New Hampshire, the Post-ABC tracking poll and others performed as expected. They picked up Bush's immediate post-Iowa swoon. Our results suggested that Bush passed Dole on the way down about midweek, and continued to fall through Saturday, when Dole appeared to enjoy a 34 percent to 28 percent advantage.

The daily numbers were even worse for Bush: Based on about 300 interviews conducted Friday and Saturday, Dole enjoyed a nine-percentage-point lead. Then on Sunday, Bush roared back, closing the gap to a single point, based on the 400 interviews conducted Sunday night. And on Monday, Bush and Dole were tied. The apparent conclusion: A late Bush surge, though it could not be concluded on the basis of Monday's interviews with 400 likely voters that Bush was continuing to move. So we played it safe, saying in Tuesday morning's paper that it was too close to call.

Like medical doctors, the first rule of political pollsters should be: Do no harm. In hindsight, though, we omitted one piece of information from the Tuesday-morning story that might have been helpful: Bush's base of support was clearly stronger than his rival's. Based on Monday's interviewing, four out of five Bush partisans characterized their support as "strong," while only about half of Dole's supporters were similarly committed.

So why did Gallup not only get the winner wrong, but also fail to detect the late Bush surge? The apparent answer is that it stopped interviewing too early.

Andy Kohut, president of Gallup, told The Washington Post's Lloyd Grove that his interviewers finished at 4 p.m. Sunday. That was before the last Republican debate and, more significant, apparently before Bush's big move could be detected, Kohut told The Post.

That's too bad. Gallup's work last year to redefine the electorate by attitudes remains one of the truly important contributions by any polling organization during this campaign season. It would be simply unfair for their consistently good and innovative work to be tarnished by the results of one tracking poll.

Now, some lessons that the media should learn from New Hampshire. First, realize that you track or report tracking results at your own risk. The methodology is something less than foolproof. Don't let the results dominate your campaign coverage. And report them conservatively, even if it appears that you are bad-mouthing your own poll — a lesson The Post has relearned.

Richard Morin is director of polling for The Washington Post.

All Caucuses Are Not Created Equal

Some elections are more equal than others, fortunately for George Bush. He was trounced twice in Republican presidential contests, but he'd left the scene of the land-slides.

Sen. Bob Dole, who won a narrow victory in Minnesota, said he had gained major headway as the GOP race moved toward the South.

"It pays to come to South Dakota," he said Tuesday night in Sioux Falls.

But the pay wasn't very high.

Dole apparently swept the delegates at stake in South Dakota — all 18 of them. Pat Robertson was second, just below the 20 percent it took to share in the delegation. Bush lagged narrowly behind him.

But compare that delegate payoff to Texas. Republicans there will choose 111 nominating delegates on March 8, and Bush ranks as the favorite. His role and Dole's are reversed in Texas — the vice president leads and the senator from Kansas has virtually written off the state.

In Democratic competition Tuesday, Rep. Richard Gephardt captured South Dakota, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis won in Minnesota, and nobody got any nominating delegates. The results were purely advisory; the real prizes come later.

Those results, especially the defeats Bush absorbed by running third in South Dakota and fourth in Minnesota, were muted for lack of the attention concentrated on the leadoff presidential contests in Iowa and New Hampshire.

Dole and Gephardt won in Iowa, Bush and Dukakis in New Hampshire, in contests played to national television audiences, with anchor-men on location. The states were comparable, the stakes were comparable, but Tuesday's contests were not magnified by being first.

So Bush, campaigning in London, Ky., absorbed the twin defeats without a word of comment. It's time for targeting, and the next one on his list comes this weekend in Maine, where he maintains a home and where he expects to win in GOP caucuses.

That's also a Robertson target, and the Bush camp says the former television evangelist could pose a significant challenge in caucuses, the kind of competition that best fits his organization.

Robertson said Bush should pay in the national public opinion polls for the defeats on Tuesday. "I don't see how he's going to continue to ride so high," Robertson said. "The vice president is definitely wounded."

But it is nothing Maine, and the just-for-show Vermont primary on March 1, can't heal.

Those contests, and the South Carolina primary on March 5, with Robertson formidable and claiming he can win, all preface Super Tuesday, March 8. That's a 20-state primary and caucus day, with 1,307

From New Englander To Texan

HOUSTON — A jubilant George Bush, the down and out New Englander of a week ago, rode along Main Street here Saturday in a horse-drawn buckboard waving a spanking new white cowboy hat as loudspeakers urged crowds to "welcome a native Houstonian to his hometown."

Yes, Vice President Bush has undergone a remarkable transformation in the past few days. The L.L. Bean candidate of snowy New Hampshire has put on cowboy boots and a green bandana and been reborn as a rough-and-tumble Texan.

The candidate, who only last week told New Hampshire voters, "I am one of you," can't seem to find enough western symbols to wrap around himself. In the last three days, he has visited the National Cowboy Hall of Fame in Oklahoma City; palled around with former Dallas Cowboy star quarterback Roger Staubach; attended a barbecue at a ranch outside of San Antonio; and rode behind the Texas A & M Marching Band as it played "The Aggies War Hymn" in the annual Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo Parade.

Bush, weary after the long Iowa and New Hampshire campaigns, has done very little to make news, or do anything to create controversy since Tuesday. But in some ways he has looked looser, more forceful and self-confident than any time since his days as a "hot" presidential candidate in 1980.

"I feel very good about politics and being alive in a day like this," he said after the parade through downtown Houston Saturday. "It's been a tough few weeks."

Then, he turned and yelled, "Go Aggies" at the Texans A & M band.

Bush has more than a little to shout about this week. Not only did he halt what appeared to be a slide into political oblivion with a convincing win in Tuesday's New Hampshire primary, he kicked off Super Tuesday campaigns in three states this week and gave an impressive performance in a debate Friday night with Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y.

He did so while Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kans., his chief rival for the GOP presidential nomination, floundered, bitter over his New Hampshire loss. Bush sidestepped mentioning Dole by name after Tuesday, but chided him indirectly for brooding — while boasting about his own comeback.

"You learn that the rodeo is full of hard encounters with the ground and you learn to pick yourself up and dust yourself off and get back on the horse again," Bush said at a National Cowboy Hall of Fame rally. "And there's a lesson in that for everybody in public life and it's a lesson that the people of Iowa reminded me of 10 days ago. So you don't get angry and bitter when you get defeated. You pick yourself back up and get back on the horse and go on to the next election."

Democratic delegates and 712 Republicans at stake.

That competition is concentrated in the South, but it includes a half-dozen contests in other regions, Massachusetts to Washington.

With candidates picking their spots and with delegates to be won through proportional representation among the Democrats, Super Tuesday isn't likely to be any more conclusive than what has gone before.

Republican rules make it more likely that one candidate can pile up a significant delegate lead on March 8.

Ironically, for all the efforts at calendar rigging and early-season decisions, the pivotal primaries may still be weeks away, in populous industrial states like Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio, and, finally, California.

Environmentalists Scoff At No. 1 Water Ranking

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina has placed ninth overall and first in the protection of surface waters in a national ranking of state environmental programs by a private citizens group.
But environmentalists questioned the accuracy of the some of the report's information and said the rankings were "nothing to brag about."
Gov. Jim Martin, in Washington, D.C., to attend the National Governors' Association convention, accepted the second annual State of the States award from the Fund for Renewable Energy and the Environment.

North Carolina's first-place award was one of seven in different categories that FREE presented.
"Our citizens are concerned about our environment, the quality of our waters ...," Martin said in a news release. "Their interests and concerns have been translated into action."
In Raleigh, a coalition of environmentalists had a lukewarm reaction to the award and to FREE's ranking of North Carolina as ninth in the United States in environmental protection.
"While North Carolina may appear to have a great program on paper, our rankings do not reflect the problems that we face due to inadequate monitoring and enforcement of those policies," Mary Beth Edelman, president of the N.C. Conservation Council, said at a news conference.

FREE based its overall ranking on six categories: surface water protection, pesticide contamination, land use planning, indoor air pollution, highway safety and energy pollution.
In 1987, FREE used different categories and North Carolina ranked seventh.
On a scale of 1 to 10, North Carolina received a 10 — the highest rating — for surface water protection. The FREE report praised the state's efforts to control agriculture and urban runoff, erosion and municipal discharges.
The report says only 1 percent of the major non-municipal dischargers and 11 percent of the major municipal dischargers in North Carolina failed significantly to comply with state clean-water regulations for the period examined — the last half of 1986.

Ms. Edelman said those figures were "nothing to brag about" and that there were "serious water problems in North Carolina."
The biggest shortcoming, said Lisa Findali of the Clean Water Fund, is a lack of funding for closer monitoring of those who discharge into North Carolina's surface waters and tougher regulatory enforcement.
The state's highest other marks were for land use planning and energy pollution control (8 out of 10 in both categories). North Carolina got grades of 5 for reducing pesticide contamination and highway safety and a 4 for eliminating indoor pollution. Regarding the latter category, the report noted that the state "lacks even the most basic no-smoking laws."

The FREE report said North Carolina received six points on an 11-point scale for provisions to restrict pesticide drift.
It also said the state had established a "program or network" to test for pesticides in groundwater, which Allen Spalt, director of the Agricultural Resource Center, said was not true. North Carolina has an interagency task force developing such a program but it's still on the drawing board, he said.
Eric Umstead, another ARC official, said pesticide regulation should be shifted from the state Department of Agriculture. "I can't imagine a state in this union administering their pesticide law any worse than we administer ours."
He complained that public health and environmental issues "have always kind of taken a back seat" in the department.
The report also noted that North Carolina:

- Has an acid rain program and plans a low-level radioactive waste disposal facility.
- Ms. Edelman said the environmentalists were pleased with the state's overall rankings but feared they might be interpreted as evidence that North Carolina's programs don't need dramatic improvement.
- Jim Sughrie, Martin's press secretary, said the governor "doesn't see environmental issue as stagnant. The environment requires constant monitoring and constant vigilance."
- He noted that Martin last week unveiled a plan to consolidate the state's environmental programs into a single agency in a bid for greater efficiency and effectiveness.
- The report said highway safety was not traditionally considered an environmental issue, but said highways were "one of our most dangerous daily environments."
- North Carolina requires seat belt use by front-seat passengers but has no notification requirements for transportation of hazardous materials while 56.8 percent of its bridges are deficient, the report said.

Student Charged In Death

BURGAW, N.C. (AP) — A 13-year-old girl has been charged with fatally stabbing another student in the neck during an argument at Pender County High School, authorities say.

Gloria Woods, 17, a senior from Burgaw, was walking from the main classroom building toward the school's band building Tuesday when she apparently confronted a 13-year-old freshman about some statements the younger girl had been making, Pender County Sheriff Mike Harvell said.
As Miss Woods turned to leave, Harvell said, she was shoved and when she turned around, she was stabbed in the neck.
"It was an argument that escalated into something more serious," Lt. Bill Chipps of the sheriff's department said.
The name of the 13-year-old was not released because she is a juvenile.

Miss Woods of Burgaw was pronounced dead at Pender Memorial Hospital about one hour after the 1 p.m. incident, according to Burgaw County Dispatcher Carson Smith.
Smith said Miss Smith was stabbed with a pocket knife with a blade about 4 inches long.
Chipps said late Tuesday he had interviewed a half-dozen students who were walking with Miss Smith, but he had been unable to determine the nature of the conflict. He said the stabbing occurred in an area about 20 yards wide between the two buildings.

- Has no state land-use plan although it does have a plan for coastal areas and wetlands.
- Has banned lead in drinking water.

Panel OKs Policy Barring Bias Against AIDS Victims

RALEIGH (AP) — The State Personnel Commission has approved a policy that bars discrimination against state workers with AIDS and requires agencies to make "a reasonable accommodation" for employees whose work might be affected by the disease.
The commission unanimously approved the policy after a public hearing where several speakers praised it and one criticized it as condoning homosexuality.
Joe S. Lennon, former director of the Warren County Health Department, told the commission that the policy condones "heinous offenses" such as homosexual acts and intravenous drug use, which he said account for most AIDS cases.
"So we're talking about the state by and large, employing and protecting people who are felons," Lennon said. "We ought to screen our employees to see that we are not employing this type of person."

But Roslyn Savitt, executive director of the Council for Social Legislation, said the proposal was "a rational policy based on medical knowledge and not political considerations."
"We all probably have some uneasiness about this, but we have a beginning," said commission chairman Polly Brewer of Charlotte.
The policy, which was recommended by the Office of State Personnel, takes effect immediately although it must receive final approval from Gov. Jim Martin.
"I don't expect that the governor will decide to block it," said Jim Sughrie, Martin's press secretary. "It's something that originated with the State Employees' Association, which strongly endorsed it, and it complies with the basic guidelines of the U.S. Department of Justice."

Supporters said the policy would ensure that employees with acquired immune deficiency syndrome could not be discriminated against unless the condition resulted in unacceptable job performance.
The policy bars discrimination in transfers, promotions or hiring of state workers or applicants suffering from AIDS.
It also states that state agencies cannot discriminate against employees with AIDS unless it could be medically documented by private doctors or health officials that the illness could be transmitted to other workers.
The proposal says: "There is no evidence that employing a person with AIDS would present a health hazard to other people in the usual workplace."

Investigators Still Don't Know Cause Of Commuter's Crash

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — After seven days of sifting through the wreckage of an American Eagle commuter plane, federal investigators say they still do not know what caused the plane to crash, killing all 12 people aboard.
"We haven't ruled it (the list of possible causes) down at all," Jim Kolstad, a member of the National Transportation Safety Board, said Tuesday. "Nothing's ruled out some of the 35-member team of investigators left Raleigh on Tuesday, he said. Most of the others were scheduled to leave today and all will have departed by Friday as the investigation shifts to other locations, Kolstad said.

The officials will spend most of their remaining time in North Carolina compiling their notes, according to Ted Lopatkiewicz, a NTSB spokesman. Also, he said, authorities are continuing to drain the Brier Creek Reservoir, which the plane hit Friday night before slamming into a wooded area about a mile from Raleigh-Durham Airport. Searchers are missing a large piece of fuselage believed to be in the water, he said.

After this week, the investigation will be run from the NTSB's headquarters in Washington, D.C., he said.

Lawmakers Stage Bipartisan Effort To Boost South's Status

By DAVID PACE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A new bipartisan task force of Southern lawmakers is seeking commitments from the presidential candidates of both parties to ensure that revitalization of the rural South will be a major priority of the next administration.

A group of seven congressmen and senators from the South announced the formation of the task force Tuesday and released a letter signed by 81 Southern lawmakers urging all the presidential candidates to develop specific plans to address the plight of rural Americans.

Sen. Wyche Fowler, D-Ga., said the economic problems facing the rural South today call for a federal commitment similar to that which created land grant colleges, rural electrification and interstate highways.

"We don't need any more documentation about the need," Fowler said. "What we do need is national leadership. We're going to try to provide it in Congress and we are urging the presidential candidates to begin the process so they can provide the national leadership necessary from the White House."

The letter to the presidential candidates said the rural South, the nation's poorest and least educated region, has been hit by a simultaneous decline in manufacturing and agriculture during the past decade.

"More and more small Southern communities are experiencing declining populations, rising unemployment and falling incomes," the letter said. "These trends spell trouble for a whole new generation of Southerners. We cannot stand idly by and witness the decline of a culture, people and way of life."

The letter said the booming metropolitan areas of the South "cannot go on absorbing the undereducated and unskilled workers who leave their homes in the country to join the intense competition for jobs in the city."

Rep. Sonny Callahan, R-Ala., said the letter to the presidential candidates demonstrates that Southern leaders of both parties are aware of the problems in their region.

"We expect the candidates to commit to make rural development a top priority in their future administration," he said.

Rep. Ed Jenkins, D-Ga., said the task force was not created to seek new federal handouts for the rural South. But he said it has been 20 years since the federal government has focused its attention on the problems of rural communities.

"We want a commitment to a national policy, a policy to look closely at what and where our problems really are, a policy to study our federal, state and local programs already working on some of the problems, a policy that recognizes we want to help ourselves," he said.

In addition to Fowler, Jenkins and Callahan, other co-chairmen of the task force are Sen. Thad Cochran, R-Miss., Rep. Trent Lott, R-Miss., Rep. Tim Valentine, D-N.C., and Rep. Mike Espy, D-Miss.

The group said in a position paper that it wants to strengthen the federal-state-local partnership in rural development, review the effectiveness of current federal programs affecting rural areas, explore new initiatives to improve rural prosperity, and help the next administration develop a national policy to deal with the problems of rural communities.

Holliday said independent appraisers who are not state employees would determine fair market value. When challenged, state officials declined to estimate how much money would be available to reimburse landowners.

"We will not be able to make a definitive commitment until we see what the alternatives will be," Martin said. "If we are able to move it so it does not affect as many neighbors in one area then we will see how they would be affected in another one."

Charles L. Holliday, director of North Carolina's State Property Office, tried to convince homeowners that any who had to move would get fair compensation packages, including replacement costs, moving allowances and even mortgage interest adjustments.

Martin acknowledged at the meeting that more landowners might be affected in the Rougemont area than the state originally anticipated were the Department of Energy to locate the huge scientific machine where the state suggests.

"After (the Department of Energy) has chosen its preferred SSC site, it will prepare a final site-specific SSC design taking into account the data in the site proposal and the additional, more detailed environmental data now being provided for the best qualified sites," Martin said.

North Carolina is one of seven states in the running to host the SSC. It has submitted a proposal to the U.S. Department of Energy offering to put the 53-mile, underground tunnel in Person, Durham and Granville counties.

Martin said he was aware of community concerns about the impact of the super collider.

"The state and the DOE will try to minimize the effects of the SSC on property owners," Martin said. "Nevertheless, it is inevitable that if the SSC comes to North Carolina, some property owners will be af-

Protestors Win Battle

CIA Recruiter Leaves UNC After Motel Confrontation

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A CIA recruiter left Chapel Hill without conducting any interviews after protesters tracked him to a local motel and someone threw a red liquid on his motel room door.

"I would say the behavior on this has been absolutely disgraceful," CIA lawyer Page Moffett told The Charlotte Observer. Though he has as much right to be on public property as the demonstrators, he said, "rather than make any kind of problems for the motel, I think it's more appropriate for me to check out."

Moffett had moved recruiting interviews UNC law students off campus to the University Motor Inn after student protesters promised earlier this week to demonstrate at the law school if the CIA recruited there.

But about five CIA Action Committee members, some carrying white crosses and signs that said "6 million dead, CIA off campus," tracked Moffett down at the inn Tuesday morning.

Minutes before they arrived, a red liquid had been thrown on his motel room door. The protesters said they weren't responsible.

A few minutes later, the first of 12 law students scheduled for interviews arrived at the motel.

As Moffett told the student he was leaving, one protester shouted: "We wanted you off the campus. Now we want you out of town. What are the qualifications for a CIA person? Murder? Torture? Any crime in general?"

Moffett hurriedly checked out of the motel. Some students followed him by car on I-40 toward Raleigh. He then returned to Washington, acting UNC School of Law Dean Ronald Link said.

UNC administrators criticized the protesters.

"As I understand it, what happened at the inn ... was a violation of criminal and civil law and may very well be a violation of the university instrument of student judicial government," Link said.

Donald Boulton, UNC vice chancellor and dean of the division of student affairs, called the incident "reprehensible," but said he didn't know what action — if any — he would take.

"I was not there. It was off campus," he said. "I think we all feel very, very upset."

"My report — second-hand — was that the interviewer was chased out of town. I would say what you have here is assault and almost battery."

But University Motor Inn owner Charles Nottingham said he wasn't angry. "They did not harm anybody. They did not destroy any property and they were here and gone in 20 minutes, so I didn't call the police," he said.

CIA Action Committee member Dale McKinley called Moffett's departure a temporary victory. The committee will continue to protest until university administration bars the CIA from using university facilities, he said.

Indians Hold Rally

PEMBROKE, N.C. (AP) — More than 500 supporters attended a rally Tuesday night for accused hostage-takers Eddie Hatcher and Timothy Jacobs, chanting "Free Eddie, Free Tim."

Hatcher and Jacobs, accused in federal indictments of firearms violations and of taking up to 19 hostages at the Robesonian newspaper in Lumberton Feb. 1, are in the Cumberland County jail.

"We don't want five years in prison; we don't want 10 years in prison; we don't want one day in prison. We want them free, we want them home," said Helen Oxendine.

Hatcher and Jacobs were twice denied bond last week by U.S. Magistrate Wallace Dixon, who said they had engaged in terrorist acts. Hatcher and Jacobs have said they took the hostages to protest what they called racial discrimination and official corruption in Robeson County.

"We in the community are saying they are not the criminals here. The real criminals are walking the streets ...," said Ashaki Binta of the Christic Institute, a Chapel Hill-based organization that is providing Hatcher and Jacobs with legal assistance.

Martin Says Collider Site Still Uncertain

DURHAM (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin says the state does not know the precise number of landowners who would be affected by the superconducting super collider because the exact location for the giant atom-smasher has not been selected.

"We explicitly discussed in our proposal an envelope of flexibility within which the SSC could be placed," Martin told an overflow audience at a special Durham County Board of Commissioners meeting Tuesday night.

"After (the Department of Energy) has chosen its preferred SSC site, it will prepare a final site-specific SSC design taking into account the data in the site proposal and the additional, more detailed environmental data now being provided for the best qualified sites," Martin said.

North Carolina is one of seven states in the running to host the SSC. It has submitted a proposal to the U.S. Department of Energy offering to put the 53-mile, underground tunnel in Person, Durham and Granville counties.

Martin said he was aware of community concerns about the impact of the super collider.

Convicted

WILMINGTON (AP) — A Bladen County woman convicted of first-degree murder in the beating and torture death of her foster daughter made an impassioned plea for her life to the jury that convicted her, denying that she and her husband are killers.

For nearly 30 minutes Tuesday, Anne Phillips spoke out, rising from the witness chair, shaking her finger at jury members and shouting that "I'm going home" to God. "I'm a Christian. I'm a God-sent woman."

The jury deliberated more than two hours Monday and 45 minutes Tuesday before deciding that Mrs. Phillips, 68, and her 56-year-old husband Sylvester had tortured and beaten 11-year-old Tameka Lehmann to death June 15. The couple also was convicted of felony child abuse in connection with injuries suffered by their 14-year-old adopted son, John Phillips.

Upsur Trial

DURHAM (AP) — A Durham teen-ager has been sentenced to two life prison terms for the 1985 rape and murder of a Durham nurse and to 10 years in prison for assaulting the woman's daughter.

Nathaniel Mark Upsur, 18, pleaded no contest to first-degree murder in Durham County Superior Court Tuesday as he was being sentenced on rape and assault convictions.

Upsur, who was 15 at the time of the crimes, was convicted last Friday of raping Elizabeth Wilson and assaulting her daughter with a knife.

He had also been charged with first-degree murder in the death of Mrs. Wilson, 31, but jurors deadlocked on that charge Friday.

In Upsur's first trial in 1986, a mistrial was declared after it was determined that a juror had improperly discussed the case outside the court.

Gas Leak

DURHAM (AP) — About 100 people were evacuated from a four-block area of downtown Durham Tuesday after a gas leak was discovered at a hotel and civic center project, but no one was injured, authorities say.

The incident occurred shortly after 5 p.m., when construction crews found the ruptured natural gas line. Durham Fire Battalion Chief J.B. Yeargin said the leak was repaired about an hour after it was discovered.

Cocaine Raid

HENDERSON, N.C. (AP) — Vance

County law enforcement officers have made the biggest cocaine seizure ever in the county's history after a shooting led officers to the home where the drugs were found, authorities said.

Authorities uncovered a kilogram of uncut cocaine, carrying a street value of $341,000, and they discovered $50,000 in cash at the home of Christine Manning Garcia, 36, of Henderson, Monday morning, Vance County Sheriff Tommy McGhee said Tuesday.

The drug find came about after the sheriff's department received a call from Granville Medical Center in reference to a shooting, according to McGhee. When authorities arrived at the hospital, they discovered Ms. Garcia had been shot.

The woman was interviewed at the hospital. During a search of her home, authorities found the cocaine and money, McGhee said.

Preston Williams, 31, of Henderson, was found at the scene and charged with one count of trafficking in cocaine, possession with intent to manufacture, and possession with intent to sell, said McGhee. He was placed in the Vance County Jail under a $100,000 bond.

UNC-G Gifts

GREENSBORO (AP) — Anne Umstead Maultsby of Chapel Hill has made gifts and pledges totaling $100,000 to the University of North Carolina at Greensboro to establish a memorial scholarship fund in nursing to honor her father, John W. Umstead Jr.

Umstead, a 14-term state legislator, crusaded for improved care of the state's mentally ill. He died in 1968 at the age of 79.

Mrs. Maultsby, a 1954 graduate of UNC-Greensboro, said she wanted the endowed scholarship fund to recognize her father's distinguished public career and his contributions to her life.

Embezzlement

WAYNESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Haywood County grand jury has added new charges of embezzlement to six counts already filed against the former secretary of the county rescue squad.

Lindsay Minnick was indicted on charges of embezzling $125,418 from the Haywood County Rescue Squad between April 1984 and October 1987. Her husband, John David Minnick, was indicted on charges of aiding and abetting in the alleged thefts.

Rescue squad officials have said the money was taken from a seldom-used fund designated for rare purchases of expensive equipment such as vehicles.

For Local Police

Companies Supply Bulletproof Vests

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer

Textile executive Paul Baker Jr. was driving to work one morning last year when he heard a news report about a North Carolina highway patrolman whose life was spared because he was wearing a bulletproof vest.

"He was shot three times by someone he had stopped in a car," he said. "I thought, here is an item produced by the textiles industry that saves lives."

So when the North Carolina Textiles Manufacturing Association began looking for a community project last fall, Baker proposed that member companies buy vests for their local police departments.

"A lot of smaller communities don't have enough money to provide bulletproof vests for their officers," said Baker, who is president of Hadley-Peoples Manufacturing Co. in Siler City. "The vests aren't that expensive — about $300 apiece."

Late last year, the association initiated a "Textiles Saving Lives" program to promote the lifesaving properties of some textile products. Part of the program called for the member companies to purchase the bulletproof vests.

So far, more than 60 vests have been purchased for law enforcement officers in about a dozen N.C. communities. Both NCTMA members and non-textile companies have joined the effort.

"We've already used the vests on a drug raid," said Siler City Police Chief Lewis Phillips, whose department received four of the custom-fitted vests. "It's a great program, truly outstanding. I can't find the words to say how much we appreciate these vests."

Jane Pritchard, a spokeswoman for the association, said once the program got going it snowballed. Business leaders heard about it and donated money. After nine vests were purchased for the Tarboro Police Department, the city council bought 12 more so the entire force was protected.

"A lot of others have come on board, which is fine," she said. "It would be ridiculous to turn away any help."

According to state records, police officers were assaulted with firearms 143 times in 1986. In addition, 27 law enforcement officers have been killed in the line of duty in North Carolina in the past 10 years.

"If just one officer is able to walk away from a vicious criminal attack because of this body armor, our efforts will have been fully rewarded," said Keith Norwood of National Spinning Co. in Washington, N.C. Norwood headed the project through the association's Textile Week Committee.

Consumers are familiar with textile uses in clothing, home furnishings, products for home use and automobiles but they are less familiar with medical, industrial and military applications, said Dennis Julian of NCTMA.

The protective clothing worn by firefighters, as well as the fire hoses, are textile products. So are the heat shields used in the space program, he said.

"Nowhere are textiles more important than in their medical applications and the bulletproof vests, because here they save lives and prolong life," he said.

The program will be expanded this year, with life-saving textile products being donated to volunteer fire departments and rescue squads across the state, said Baker.

"We'll probably give out more vests this year until the job is finished," he said. "It's not too much money. One police officer who's shot and lives is worth it."

Dole Grabs Double Victory In Midwest

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

Republican presidential hopeful Bob Dole was riding high today after twin victories over George Bush in Midwestern prelude to next month's Super Tuesday showdowns, but Bush was brushing off his losses. Democrats Richard Gephardt and Michael Dukakis swapped victories and said they were eager to carry their battle to the South.

In London, Ky., as he left for New England and the next round of contests, Bush was asked how he felt about Minnesota and South Dakota.

Bush, ignoring his losses in those two states, said simply: "I feel great about Kentucky."

Tuesday night, Dukakis said after splitting the two upper Midwestern contests with Gephardt, "This is a marathon. It's going to be a long one."

The Massachusetts governor won in Minnesota on Tuesday, and dealt Sen. Paul Simon a crushing defeat that crippled his candidacy. Gephardt was the winner in South Dakota with Dukakis a respectable second.

Dole won both states going away — with Bush far, far behind. In Minnesota, the vice president finished fourth behind Pat Robertson and Rep. Jack Kemp. In South Dakota, with Dole winning all 18 of the delegates at stake, Bush was narrowly edged for second place by Robertson.

Wasting no time before heading for the next battleground, Dole was flying to South Carolina today for four quick campaign appearances.

"I hope it can help me in the South," Dole said of his latest victories. "I've got a big hill to climb in the South."

Bush was buried in the Tuesday night returns, running third in South Dakota and fourth in Minnesota. After his embarrassing defeat two weeks ago in Iowa, Bush chose to head South rather than take on Dole again in the Midwest.

It was up one week and down the next in the GOP race. After Dole's strong Iowa showing, Bush bounced back to win the New Hampshire primary a week ago. This was Dole's week again, but now the scene shifts to the South, where Bush is regarded as the front-runner.

Gephardt and Dukakis were quick to hail their Midwest victories.

"This...was a great victory that we have had in South Dakota," said the Missouri congressman.

Dukakis, who finished second in South Dakota, said, "I think it's very good news for us because we've finished strong in every one of these states."

Also able to claim a measure of victory were Republican Pat Robertson, who was running second in both Midwest states; and Democrat Jesse Jackson, who was battling Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois for second place in Minnesota.

Robertson proclaimed the Midwest results made it "a three-way race coming into the South — Robertson, Bush and Dole. But the vice president is definitely wounded."

"We showed that we are attractive to voters in every region," Jackson said. "In Minnesota we spent $20,000 and made a strong showing. Our budget is low and we have to run a cost-efficient campaign and target our voters."

Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, third in Minnesota and a dismal fourth in South Dakota, was facing a decision on how much longer he could continue his pursuit of the GOP nomination.

One-time Democratic front-runner Gary Hart also had a thumbs down for his lonely campaign to "let the people decide." Hart got 5 percent of the vote in South Dakota and 1 percent in Minnesota. Unable to get 10 percent of the vote in two consecutive primaries, Hart stands to lose his eligibility for federal matching funds.

Also teetering on the edge was Simon, who vowed Tuesday night that "there is no way I'll get out of the race tomorrow, absolutely none."

Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee described his third-place finish in South Dakota as a "pleasant surprise," though he worked hard in the state and got just 8 percent of the vote.

Robertson said he was "absolutely delighted" with the results in South Dakota. But he conceded, "I had expected to do better in Minnesota."

It was Dole, grinning broadly and acknowledging the cheers of supporters in South Dakota and then Minnesota, who had the most to crow about. It was in sharp contrast to his black mood of a week ago after his loss in New Hampshire.

"It's a lot more fun winning," he told supporters in Sioux Falls, S.D.

In returns from all but one of South Dakota's 1,151 precincts, Dole had 51,529 or 55 percent of the vote compared to 18,275 or just under 20 percent for Robertson and 17,416 or 19 percent for Bush. Kemp trailed with 5 percent.

That meant Dole led for all of the state's 18 delegates to the Republican National Convention in New Orleans next summer. Robertson was just short of qualifying for delegates with one precinct's votes uncounted.

None of the other three contests was directly allocating delegates, although each of the winners was getting an edge in the process.

With all but one of the Democratic precincts reporting in South Dakota, Gephardt had 31,226 or 44 percent and Dukakis 22,367 or 31 percent. The also rans were Gore at 8 percent, Simon at 6 percent and Hart and Jackson at 5 percent each.

In Minnesota, Republican results from 80 percent of the precincts gave Dole 43 percent to 28 percent for Robertson. Kemp was third with 15 percent and Bush was running fourth with 11 percent.

The Democratic caucus procedure in Minnesota was complicated and returns were still trickling in well past midnight. With 74 percent of the precincts reporting, Dukakis had 34 percent of the vote. Jackson had 20 percent, with 19 percent uncommitted. Simon had 18 percent, while Gephardt had 7 percent. Hart and Gore had 1 percent each.

Shultz Off Again For Mideast Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz, just back from Moscow and Brussels, barely had time to catch his breath today before heading to the Middle East with the tough assignment of trying to push the Arabs and Israelis to the negotiating table.

Shultz said he had only a slim chance of accomplishing that goal, and that the two sides would have to moderate their "extreme positions."

"Looking forward to it?" Shultz joked at a news conference. "It's going to be tough."

He met with reporters after briefing the North Atlantic Council in Brussels on his two days of talks in Moscow. There he and the Soviets gave arms control negotiations a nudge by setting a one-month deadline for the completion of drafts on key elements of the new treaty to curb strategic nuclear weapons.

Shultz also arranged for the first in a series of unprecedented meetings between American and Soviet jurists, psychiatrists and others interested in human rights problems. The session will be held in Washington on March 18, four days before Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze holds talks again with Shultz.

But there was little apparent progress on the U.S. anti-missile program known as Star Wars. The Soviets have threatened to delay completion of the treaty to reduce strategic nuclear arsenals unless the space-defense program is constrained.

"I think we moved it a little bit in Moscow, maybe imperceptibly," he said.

After briefing the allies, Shultz flew home to report to President Reagan today, meet with visiting Portuguese Prime Minister Anibal Cavaco Silva and speak to the Business Council at the State Department.

Portugal is upset over a $90 million cut in U.S. aid. In the past Cavaco Silva has threatened to scrap a treaty that allows American use of the Lajes base in the Azores Islands.

Love Canal Firm To Pay For Cleanup

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — A federal judge's landmark ruling that Occidental Chemical Corp. was liable for the estimated $250 million cleanup of Love Canal strengthens anti-pollution laws nationwide, a federal official says.

After nine years' deliberations, Judge John Curtin ruled Tuesday that Occidental was responsible for the wastes that triggered the environmental disaster and stored in a way that would eventually result in leakage.

The judge ruled in a 1979 lawsuit filed by the federal Environmental Protection Agency. A year earlier, toxic chemicals at Love Canal prompted state officials to evacuate children and pregnant women, and eventually 728 families. Of those, 175 families are still waiting to learn whether it is safe to return.

Curtin's ruling upheld the federal Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act of 1980. The judge said that law was designed to compel the waste disposal industry "to correct its past mistakes and to provide a solution for the dangers posed by inactive abandoned waste sites."

"This will strengthen environmental laws throughout the country," Roger J. Marzulla, head of the U.S. Justice Department's Land and Natural Resources Division, said in Washington.

Frank Ashley, a spokesman for Occidental's parent company, Occidental Petroleum, based in Los Angeles, said the company did not agree with the decision and would appeal.

"The decision which has just been issued on partial summary judgment, without a trial and without any factual determination, that Occidental had acted negligently or with fault contradicts the resolution of these problems by amicable adjustments reached in other actions involving Occidental Chemical Corp.," Ashley said.

About 1,300 former residents of the Love Canal neighborhood accepted a $20 million damage settlement with Occidental in 1984.

The eventual amount Occidental pays will depend on actual costs proved in court and assessed by the judge. U.S. Attorney Roger Williams' staff said that $200 million has been spent so far and it is estimated that there will be $50 million more in costs.

Lois Gibbs, a former Love Canal resident who runs the Citizen's Clearing House for Hazardous Wastes in Alexandria, Va., said she hopes the company will be found liable for the full $250 million.

Lobbyist Is Chosen As Navy Secretary

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has named a soft-spoken Southerner with a reputation as a savvy, behind-the-scenes negotiator to be his new secretary of the Navy while the Pentagon copes with "difficult and painful" budget cuts.

The president on Tuesday tapped William L. Ball III to replace James H. Webb, the pugnacious and controversial naval secretary who abruptly resigned a day earlier.

Webb took a parting shot at Pentagon chief Frank C. Carlucci, accusing him of bending to congressionally mandated budget cuts by needlessly scuttling the administration's dream of a 600-ship Navy.

The White House, however, said Reagan intends to stand by his goal, even though he won't be in office to see it realized. It also offered words of encouragement for Carlucci and the new nominee.

"We look to Will Ball to continue working aggressively for a strong U.S. Navy," spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

Budget constraints have delayed a 600-vessel Navy, which will be reached in fiscal year 1992 rather than in fiscal 1989 as originally planned, Fitzwater said.

Ball is expected to have little difficulty winning Senate confirmation, since the nomination will be reviewed by the Senate Armed Services Committee, where he once was an aide.

The 39-year-old has been the president's chief congressional lobbyist since February 1986. Before that, he served as the State Department's chief liaison with Congress.

From 1981 to 1985 he was administrative assistant to then Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, serving also as chief clerk of the Senate Armed Services Committee in 1981. He also worked as administrative assistant to former Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., in 1978.

The South Carolina native is a graduate of the Georgia Institute of Technology and was a regular officer in the Navy from 1969 to 1975.

big business interests in opposing his legislation dealing with tobacco imports, Gore said. Lawmakers had to make a decision: "Are you going to be with the small farmer? Or are you going to stand on another side? I stand with the small farmer. I always have."

"There is a fear in this country that we're in a decline. But all we are seeing is the end of the Reagan-Bush era," said Gore, comparing his Democratic values to those of the Roosevelt, Truman and Kennedy administrations. "We're going to have to emphasize the values that are particularly important in states like North Carolina."

"I have a different approach," Gore said, one "about economic growth and the real need for better jobs and more of them."

One day children will read history books and wonder how the government allowed the homeless to exist, the nuclear arms race to continue and the environment to be destroyed, said Gore.

"Then I want them to turn the page of that book," said Gore, "and read that in 1988 we started a change in America ... and read how we took off the blinds and began a new age in America ... and read how North Carolina made the difference.

"We need to reach out to voters who have sometimes left our party in the past," said Gore. "We need them to guarantee victory in November."

"This is when voters at the grass roots level have a chance to have their say, our say. It's time to stand up for the working men and women and for the future," said Gore.

Gore said North Carolinians should take former President Andrew Jackson's battle cry into Super Tuesday. "Early to bed, early to rise, work like hell, and organize."

Some polls show Gore is slipping in the South, but he cited a poll in which he is running a close second to Jesse Jackson. "That's encouraging. We are on the move," he said, noting the strong rally turnout on short notice. "That kind of organization and enthusiasm at the grass roots level is going to ensure that the momentum continues."

Minnesota and South Dakota were holding primaries and caucuses Tuesday, but Gore stuck to the same strategy he used in bypassing Iowa and New Hampshire. He urged North Carolina voters to disregard the Iowa results and make their own decisions for the Super Tuesday primary, where more than 1,400 delegates are at stake.

Gore was at the rally only for about an hour, but he did sample the barbecue before leaving to campaign in Arkansas.

Charged

RALEIGH (AP) — A Tennessee man has been charged with the January 1981 murder of a Randolph County man during a robbery, a State Bureau of Investigations official says.

John Bynum, 34, was arrested Tuesday morning in the Asheboro area by SBI agents and Randolph County Sheriff's deputies, according to Dick Brown, a spokesman for the SBI.

Brown said Bynum was a native of Cleveland, Tenn., but had been living in Asheboro. He was released under $25,000 bond.

W.M. "Booger Scales Jr., J. Beverly Congleton, James N. Brewer, John F. Minges Jr., Robert S. Griffin and Bill Grant. Members of the board will serve from one to three-year term.

The board also agreed funds accumulated through the foundation will be used for PCC in at least five areas.

Student financial aid topped the list as about $900,000 was given to PCC students in aid last year, but there still was an unmet need of $1.2 million, Young said.

"The soundest investment we can make is through the scholarship program," Russell told the boards.

Instructional equipment to meet the demands of technological changes was the second area. Referring to a grant received by the college recently that will provide some funds for equipment, Young said, "We do a good job with what we have," but there continues to be a need for equipment.

Professional development for the faculty and staff, mini-grants to support innovative projects of faculty and staff and foundation expenses for postage and brochures also were listed.

The foundation, which is a non-profit organization operating separately from the college, currently has a budget of about $10,000 due to previous donations. Its first annual fund drive will include soliciting foundation board and board of trustee members for money through Feb. 30. A faculty and staff drive will be conducted March 14-25, and the community drive will begin in May.

Scales, who agreed to lead a special drive for the foundation, began at the meeting by donating a check for $1,000 and challenged other foundation and trustee members to match his contribution. If the members of the PCC Foundation and board of trustees do not have "your hearts in it, how can we ask people in the community," he said.

DWI Law Discussed

that the Greenville meeting had the largest number of young people in attendance of any he'd been to, and that the overall audience was the largest at any meeting except the one in Greensboro.

Donald Anderson, a member of the Ayden Rescue Squad and a registered nurse, after noting the terrible carnage and suffering he had personally dealt with in highway accidents, introduced a subject which he said is a vital part of highway safety. The concern he voiced is "the lack of legislation on cars that are not safe enough. The technology is there that can make cars safer. The main problem lies with the U.S. allowing great numbers of lightweight cars not designed to survive impacts. The law requires only that cars be safe on impact at a speed of 35 miles per hour."

Anderson called for a state law "that will make the first offense of DWI subject to 12 to 72 hours in jail, no bond, no nothing to escape going to jail. I would like to see such laws enacted on a national scale."

Patty Beck, spokesman for the Students Against Drunk Driving chapter at North Lenoir High School, spoke of "the concern of the large number of teen-age deaths resulting from driving while intoxicated. We have 225 of our 1,200 student body active in a program to separate drinking and driving," she said.

"We are trying to convince older friends and family members not to provide alcohol to drivers under the legal age of 21. We must all convince young people of the value of life, theirs and others."

Sgt. C.E. Pearce, representing Troop A of the N.C. Highway Patrol which has jurisdiction in 22 eastern North Carolina counties, provided arrest figures for the eastern area.

"In 1986, we arrested 6,443 DWI violators. In 1987 the number climbed to 6,752. Of the arrests in 1987, there were 1,673 driving with revoked licenses, most of them convicted of DWI at least one time previously."

Pearce strongly hit what he said amounts "to almost a rubber stamp process of issuing limited driving privileges which in effect, instead of strictly limiting driving privileges of those convicted of DWI, amounts instead to driving any time they feel ready, or want to drive."

Other factors enumerated by Pearce covered the "drastic cut in work hours for troopers, a limit of 40 hours weekly with only a very limited number of additional troopers authorized for the state."

Another of his concerns is the legal requirement for a second Breathalyzer test "which is seldom needed."

Input from this and other statewide public meetings will be considered by the governor's commission in formulating and presenting proposals to the upcoming session of the Legislature for additional DWI legislation."

78-Year-Old Woman Keeps Flying High

By TOM SHARP
Associated Press Writer
MORRISTOWN, Tenn. (AP) —

Evelyn Johnson has been on this planet for 78 years, except for the 46,000 hours she spent somewhere

That's more than five years aloft since she began flying Oct. 1, 1944. She's been a flight instructor since 1947, a job she says she'll keep doing "as long as I can pass the physical."

She is still the chief flight instructor for the Morristown Flying Service, which she owned for 33 years before she shed the administrative duties "and kept the part I really like." She flies daily, averaging 150 to 180 hours a month. Most domestic airline pilots can't fly more than 100.

"I love every minute of it," she said during an interview recently at the small municipal airport. "I've never found it one bit dull, not one bit."

She was running the family dry cleaning business alone while her husband was in the armed forces in the 1940s when the need for a diversion overcame her.

"It seemed like I was just working so hard. You know, you begin to get a little dumb and stupid, like you wonder if you have enough sense to learn anything. So I thought, 'I'm going to get me a hobby.'"

"Well, I don't care anything about crocheting or knitting or golf or tennis or ceramics. I didn't know what I wanted to do. Then one morning I picked up a paper and saw an ad that said, 'Learn to fly.'"

"I said, 'Believe I will.'"

She has had thousands of students, she said, but stopped counting a long time ago. She keeps a list of the flight tests she gives for the Federal Aviation Administration, however. "I've given 8,600 of those," she said.

Mrs. Johnson was named "Flight Instructor of the Year" by the FAA in 1979.

"I was real proud of that. It was great, the greatest year of my whole life," she said. "This place looked like a funeral home in here all year with the flowers, people coming by."

In addition to being chief flight instructor, she is a pilot examiner for the FAA and airport manager for Morristown, a city of about 21,000 people in East Tennessee.

"I stay pretty busy," she said. As vacations go, flying is probably not as safe as, say, newspaper reporting.

"Well, I've never crashed," Mrs. Johnson said. "I've had two engine failures and had to land out in the fields, but it didn't even put a scratch on the plane. I had a fire in the air once. I had another rather large airplane swallow a valve out in Texas, and just barely was able to get to an airport 22 miles away and it quit just as we touched down."

"Things like that happen," she said.

That matter-of-fact attitude must have been apparent April 28, 1958, the day Mrs. Johnson earned a Carnegie Hero award for helping save the life of a helicopter pilot.

The helicopter stopped in Morristown and took on a full load of fuel. It crashed shortly after takeoff, collapsing the machine so that the whirling rotors were striking the ground in a circle around it.

"I grabbed a fire extinguisher and ran out, laid on the ground and crawled in under the blades and shut the engine off, then emptied the fire extinguisher on it," Mrs. Johnson recalled. "I didn't stop to think about whether it was going to hit me or not. I knew that thing was going to burn and explode."

A passenger in the helicopter was killed. The pilot, John Ryan, was not.

"I started to pull on him, but just a week or two before I'd had a first aid course and remembered if he had a broken back you could kill him," Mrs. Johnson said. "So I got the fire out and waited for help. It took five people to get him out of there. And he had a broken back. I'd have killed him sure as the world if I'd had tugged on him."

She still hears from Ryan at least once a year, sometimes more.

"The day it had been 25 years, I had a letter from his wife telling me all the fine things he's doing, and she said, 'We haven't forgotten. If it hadn't been for you he wouldn't be doing any of those things.'"

"I appreciated that."

Or you may order Kit No. C-022188 by sending a check or money order for $12.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, instruction leaflet, gathering ring and enough crochet cotton yarn to complete all three items. Choose yarn that is blue with white or canary yellow with white.

Dear Pat: Traditionalists may frown upon an upstart attacking crochet at both ends, but here goes anyway. Instead of working into the front strands of chain stitches, I go for that third strand at the back — the "bump" formed by carrying the yarn forward to make each chain. Try it — I think it makes a better edge.

It is standard procedure to end a final round with a slip stitch into the first stitch of said final round. Would anyone care to try a different finale?

After completing the last stitch, cut the yarn, leaving four inches or so. Extend the loop on the hook until the end of the yarn is pulled through. Thread a tapestry needle with this end and sew under the chain at the top of the first stitch, then down through the center of the chain at the top of the last stitch. Adjust the new stitch to conform to others and fasten below the edge. This method is not only simple, but absolutely undetectable. M.D., Topeka, Kan.

Dear M.D.: Your letter made my day. Because I strongly feel that there are few unbreakable rules in needlecrafts, I like to hear from those who use unorthodox methods successfully.

Ken Marsh Is Chapter Speaker

Ken Marsh presented the program at the meeting of the N.C. Alpha Delta Kappa Fidelis Beta chapter.

Visiting artist in residence at Pitt Community College, Marsh exhibited Indian artwork. He showed work in stone accompanied by legend. Pencil sketches and work in colar were included.

Plans for the state convention, to be held in Greenville in April, were discussed during a business session conducted by President Cora Whisnant.

After reading your letter, I experimented with several pattern stitches and found that in some I preferred your method of working into the bumps and in others I still found it best to work under the two top strands. I suggest other readers try both and select the one they like best.

Your method of finishing off the last stitch when crocheting in rounds works like a charm. I was never before quite satisfied with the usual joining. Many thanks for sharing these tips.

Project Focus Is Health Risks Of Blacks

Stress, diet and the health risks of the black population of Pitt County are the focus of a research project by a team of researchers from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and East Carolina University.

The Pitt County Hypertension Project (PCHP) will investigate how stress and diet influence risk for high blood pressure in black men and women. The project, with its field office in Greenville, will target about one-third of the county's black population.

Researchers at UNC-CH's School of Public Health will work with the ECU medical community and Pitt County health and social services, according to Sherman A. James, principal investigator of the project, and professor of epidemiology at UNC. He attended a meeting of the PCHP Community Advisory Council, a group of community leaders volunteering to help promote participation in the community. Pitt County was selected because of its medical care resources and the social and economic diversity among blacks in the area.

"There is something about socio-economic status that is very strongly related to risks for hypertension. Pitt County is developing at a fairly fast pace. It is a place where we can probably find the socio-economic diversity among the black population that we need in order to understand what it is about poverty as opposed to having better economic conditions that speaks to the question of hypertension in the black community," he said.

James said that previous public health research has identified the Coastal Plains region of several Southeastern states (North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia) as having the highest death rates from stroke in the entire country.

"Compared to people with regular blood pressure levels, those with hypertension are about three times more likely to develop coronary heart disease, five times more likely to develop congestive heart failure, and eight times more likely to have a stroke," James said.

interviewers are being trained in techniques for conducting interviews and taking blood pressure measurements," she said.

"The insights and knowledge gained through this study should prove useful to other communities elsewhere in the U.S.," he said.

"What is unique about this project is that we will be looking at interactive influences, that is the combined influences of stress and diet on hypertension risk in blacks," James said.

The Pitt County project is funded by the National Institutes of Health. It will include three phases, data collection; analyzing survey data to determine what factors influence blood pressure levels, and proposing follow-up studies to develop hypertension prevention and control strategies. The current project, lasting three years, will cover the first two phases.

"The goal is to interview a random sample of approximately 2,000 black adults between 25 and 50 years old. Interviewing began in mid-January and will continue through May or early June.

Charla Davis of Greenville is field supervisor and survey coordinator. "About 25 county residents have been hired to collect data and additional

Males, Females Respond To Survey

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: In my fidelity survey that brought over 210,000 responses, I was both astonished and reassured to learn that the marriage vow — to forsake all others — is still honored by 85 percent of the females and 74 percent of the males who responded.

Fred Case, a Seattle Times reporter, called the other day, and in a charming British accent asked: "Does your survey bear out what Lord Byron wrote in 'Don Juan': 'There's more adultery where the climate's sultry?'"

I told Fred that we were not tabulating the findings regionally, so his guess was as good as mine. I did, however, observe that Canadian behavior appeared to be no different than American, though the climate is somewhat sultrier in our southern states.

Many respondents aired their frustrations in order to justify their philandering: "Occasional affairs with call girls keeps me sane," confided an investment broker on his business stationery. "It's the only way I can tolerate the emptiness of living with a woman who is unable to show any affection through physical intimacy."

Women, too, wrote to justify their infidelities. The most common complaint: "Sex with my husband is so mechanical and unromantic. No caresses, no compliments, no love talk. He never talks to me. It's so humiliating!"

Another unfulfilled wife wrote: "Yes, I cheated on my husband. After nine years of marriage, I got bored and curious and wanted to see what else was out there. I had a real estate agent, an accountant, a jeweler, a commercial airline pilot, a construction worker and a magazine editor. The construction worker was the best and the editor was the worst. Thank God this was long before AIDS."

A Denver wife wrote: "My husband doesn't know how to make love, but he sure knows how to make money. I'd try to teach him a few things, but I'm afraid he'll ask me where I learned it."

The number of faithful older lovers was heartening. Letter after letter described enduring, true-blue marriages from couples in their 60s, 70s and 80s:

From St. Paul, Minn.: "We're writing because we want to add to the number of couples who have never cheated. I'm 92 and my wife is 88. We've been married for 71 years, still have all our marbles and enjoy every aspect of married life, though we have slowed up some in recent years (arthritis)."

A 60-year-old farmer from Lexington, Ky., wrote: "Married 36 years, never cheated. No sex relations for eight years now. The wife says she's through with that kind of stuff. If opportunity ever knocks, I'm afraid I'll be too old and deaf to hear it."

Some men admit to cheating — but only occasionally. From Philadelphia: "I've been married for 24 years and cheated twice. Once when I went back to my hometown for my 10th high school reunion, then again when I went back for my 20th (same girl). Now I'm looking forward to my 25th reunion."

I have enough material from this survey to write a book. And if I do, I will certainly include the following. Some short takes:

— "Male, age 39, married 16 years. Income $55,000 a year. Cheated? Yes. But only out of town."

— "Abby, please send me a list of females who have cheated in the Tampa Bay area. (I'm lonely but not necessarily desperate.)"

— "Female, married 66 years. I have never cheated on my husband. I am 83 and my husband is 89 and says he can't remember."

— "There are so many mismatched couples. When a man wants sex six times a week and his wife is satisfied with twice a month, that doesn't mean there's anything wrong with either one of them; they just have a lousy marriage. I have made a lot of women happy and I never broke up anybody's home — and I never neglected my own wife, either. If there is a hall of fame for lovers, I should be in it. I have to go now; my wife wants me."

— And finally: "I am a woman now 40, married 21 years and have cheated more times than I can count, but I will never cheat again. Why? Because I fear God, damnation, pregnancy, herpes and AIDS. Besides, I found Jesus."

Erosion Plans

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Farming without an acceptable soil erosion plan after Dec. 30, 1989, will be costly, says an Agriculture Extension Service agent who is currently scheduling meetings to introduce Alamance County farmers to their new responsibilities.

Agricultural Extension Service agent Roger Cobb says farm soil erosion plans will be required from all farmers who get tobacco price support, have federal crop insurance and/or Farmers Home Administration loans, or participate in feed grains programs.

Drug Survey

RALEIGH (AP) — A survey of about 8,000 middle school students enrolled in Wake County shows that few sixth-graders use alcohol or marijuana, but that by eighth grade the use of both is common.

Survey results show that those who have used drugs tried them first between the ages of 11 and 15. The survey results, released this week, are from the first phase of a countywide program to study effects of comprehensive alcohol and drug prevention programs targeted at adolescents.

"There is no doubt that the caricature of (Falwell) published in Hustler is at best a distant cousin of the (traditional) political cartoons, and a rather poor relation at that," Rehnquist said. But he added that there is no way the law can punish one and let the other flourish.

The court's vote was 8-0. Justice Anthony M. Kennedy, who joined the court last Thursday, did not participate in the decision.

A federal jury in Roanoke, Va., in late 1984 ruled that the ad did not libel Falwell, and the presiding judge threw out the invasion-of-privacy allegation.

But the jury ruled for Falwell on his emotional-distress allegation, and awarded him $200,000. The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the award, but today's decision threw it out.

Falwell, a Baptist minister and founder of an organization known as the Moral Majority, said he had sued Flynt and his magazine to protect his late mother's reputation. "I can't imagine any red-blooded male in the world not being incensed," he told reporters when attending Supreme Court arguments in the case last December.

Flynt, who also attended the December argument session, had voiced concern about his fate before the high court but added, "My indictment is mainly for bad taste."

In today's decision, the court noted that "graphic depictions and satirical cartoons have played a prominent role in public and political debate."

It discounted Falwell's contention that the Hustler parody was so out-

Kidnapped Baby Returns To Mom

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — A woman apparently kidnapped a 5-week-old baby because she had an abortion recently, authorities said after they returned the infant to her ecstatic mother.

Maritza Rentz, a 38-year-old psychotherapist arrested Tuesday, was being held today on $8,000 bond for investigation of second-degree kidnapping in the abduction of 5-week-old Rachael Ann White, police said.

Rachael Ann was found at Mrs. Rentz' home a day after the girl's mother issued a nationwide plea for the baby's safe return.

Rachael Ann had been kidnapped from her home Friday by a woman answering a babysitting ad, police said.

"It appears it was a replacement baby," said police Lt. Joe Vernier.

Mrs. Rentz gave a statement to police saying she told her husband when he came home from work Friday that she had had a baby that day by Caesarian section, said police Capt. Vic Morris.

Investigators said they did not know how long Mrs. Rentz was pregnant when the abortion was performed on Oct. 27 for medical reasons. Details were sketchy, but apparently doctors decided she couldn't bring the baby to term, police said.

Police also have not determined whether Air Force Capt. Paul Rentz was aware his wife's pregnancy was terminated.

Rentz, a 36-year-old clinical psychologist and behavioral science instructor at the Air Force Academy, was being questioned, authorities said.

Rachael Ann's mother, Cora Abbott, was elated after being reunited with her baby.

Homicide Ruled In Woman's Death

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — A coroner has reclassified as homicide the death of an elderly woman whose head was surgically removed and frozen in hopes that she could some day be brought back to life with a new body.

"We're saying this was an 83-year-old lady that was ill and pushed over the edge by the use of a drug," Supervising Deputy Coroner Dan Cupido said Tuesday.

Dora Kent's death last December at the Alcor Life Extension Foundation laboratory in Riverside has been under investigation since January.

Deputy District Attorney Curt Hinman said he is "fairly confident charges will be filed," but he did not say who would be charged, when, or specify the charges.

The woman's original death certificate indicated she died from pneumonia in the absence of a doctor, which prompted the coroner's office to investigate whether she was alive when the procedure to remove her head was started.

Authorities seeking to force Alcor to produce the frozen head have been blocked by an injunction.

The coroner's office ruled after an autopsy was performed on the woman's headless body, basing its findings on the opinions of toxicologists and a pathologist contracted by Riverside County, Cupido said.

The woman's son, Saul Kent, and other advocates of cryonics believe in storing bodies or heads at freezing temperatures in hopes of someday bringing them back to life through advances in science.

ACC Coaches Ask For Rule Change

RALEIGH (AP) — An NCAA rule barring coaches from going onto the floor to break up fights needs to be changed because they can be critical in quieting a tense situation, Atlantic Coast Conference coaches say.

"The one guy you don't want to get thrown out is the home coach," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said Tuesday. "If there is any kind of riot, the one person that could calm the situation down is the home team's coach. To eliminate that is kind of foolish."

The coaches, during the ACC's weekly teleconference, said fights at several basketball games over the weekend reinforced their opposition to the new rule.

"It's a horrible rule and I think we need to do something about it," Clemson coach Cliff Ellis said. "The coach is really the one that can control it (fighting) and there he is on the bench while players are knocking the heck out of one another."

Major fights broke out last Saturday in a Big East Conference game involving Georgetown and Pittsburgh, and a Metro Conference game involving Louisville and South Carolina.

"This weekend was horrible for college basketball," Ellis said.

Fred Barakat, ACC supervisor of officials, said the NCAA instituted the rule after seeing an increase in bench personnel being involved in on-court fighting. Barakat said the officials indicated they could control the players on the court, but not ones coming off the bench.

But Barakat said, "It's unfair to ask them (the officials) to be policemen."

Under the new rule, Barakat said, coaches are assessed a technical foul for each player who comes off the bench and gets involved in an altercation. A coach is thrown out of the game after three technical fouls.

Barakat said there is a fine line between taking control of a contest early by calling fouls closely, or letting players engage in physical contact under the basket.

"We don't want to turn the game into a free throw shooting contest, but then again, we don't want to turn it into a bloodbath either," Barakat said.

The ACC has been relatively void of major confrontations in the past several years, coaches said.

Not so in the 1960s, according to North Carolina Coach Dean Smith, or in 1970, when Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Cremins was a member of the feared South Carolina Gamecocks.

"We (the conference) have been here 35 years," Barakat said. "Maybe time has helped us. We have learned and grown from the time."

Ice Queens Make Entrance

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Claws and skates sharpened after catty comments by coaches, the queens of the ice make their grand entrances today.

America's Debi Thomas, the high-vaulting, triple-triple jumping student of Baryshnikov, begins the compulsory segment of women's figure skating as perhaps the last hope of a U.S. gold medal in the Winter Games.

She won't have it easy, though. Silky Katarina Witt is the defending world and Olympic champion and favorite to become the first female skater to repeat as gold medalist since Sonja Henie of Norway won three straight from 1928 to 1936.

Two other Americans, Jill Trenary and Caryn Kadavy, are expected to struggle with Canada's Liz Manley for the bronze.

While the ladies steal the spotlight, "Flying Finn" Matti Nykanen will be going after a record third gold medal, this one in team ski jumping, and the undefeated Soviet hockey team begins defense of its title in the medal round against Canada.

Nykanen easily won the 90-meter jump Tuesday with 388-foot and 351-foot flights. Even then, he was somewhat upstaged by Eddie "The Eagle" Edwards, the bespectacled Briton with a quick-sinking style and world-winning smile.

"I'm a fighter," Edwards said after battling gravity, and losing comically, with 235-foot and 220-foot jumps.

There were plenty of smiles in the evening when "B&B," world champion ice dancers Natalia Bestemianova and Andrei Bukin of the Soviet Union, spun gold with a sultry duet. But the sport was thrown into a tizzy by a French team.

Isabelle and Paul Duchesnay, a brother-sister duo, looked like Tarzan and Jane in brown suede costumes as they skated to African rhythms and drums in "Jungle Dance."

Christopher Dean, who helped revolutionize ice dancing with Jayne

Torvill when they won the 1984 gold medal, choreographed "Jungle Dance" but it may have been ahead of its time for some judges.

Fans loudly cheered the Duchesnays, natives of Quebec who once competed for Canada, but the marks ranged from 5.0 to 5.8 and the couple finished eighth.

The judges' scoring in women's figure skating will be interesting to watch during the short program Thursday and the long program Saturday.

Thomas, 20, of San Jose, Calif., and Witt, 22, approach the sport almost from opposite directions, both in looks and performance. The only thing they'll have in common is the music from Bizet's "Carmen."

"Debi will not be doing the sex appeal," her coach, Alex McGowan, sniffed on the eve of the competition. "It will be more balletic and graceful."

Canadian coach Peter Dunfield was a little more direct in criticizing Witt's scanty sequined costumes.

"We're here to skate in a dress, not a G-string," Dunfield said. "All that's missing is the horse and the reins. It's a circus."

The judges didn't seem to mind when Witt wore the same star-spangled outfit while winning the European championships.

Witt simply dismisses the criticism of her costume, saying, "It should enhance the performance," and adding:

"When I wear the right costume, I feel much better. Why not stress what we have that is attractive?"

Thomas, a strong athlete who smoothed some rough edges with the help of ballet stars Mikhail Baryshnikov and George De La Pena, plans a tough triple-triple jump to open her program.

The two ballet coaches "improved her artistic performance at least 50 percent," McGowan said.

The artful touches plus the more rigorous program — Witt does five triples but no flashy triple toe loop combinations — should give Thomas an edge, McGowan said.

"She's skating the best she's skated in her life right now ... both technically and artistically," he said.

Thomas, on leave as a pre-med student at Stanford, said she's "pretty much as ready as I'll ever be" and not bothered by the pressure.

"Overcoming pressure situations over the years ... I've surprised myself," Thomas said. "I'm hoping that will help me here because I really am nervous."

"Instead of letting things take control of me, I have to take control of them."

East Germany saw the downfall of other champions Tuesday, when retiring speed skaters Andrea Ehrig and Karin Kania were beaten for the second consecutive night.

Bonnie Blair of Champaign, Ill., beat them in the 500 meters the night before, and this time Yvonne van Gennip left them behind in the 3,000 meters.

"Everybody thought nobody could beat them," said van Gennip.

Van Gennip not only won the gold medal, she set a world record of 4 minutes, 11.94 seconds that edged a 4:12.09 record time posted by Ehrig in the first pairing.

Ehrig won the silver and Gabi Zange took the bronze. Kania, who was breathing hard after stumbling with apparently painful cramps with 600 meters to go, finished fourth and collapsed on a bench after the race.

Big East Sets Tough Policy

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A tough, new Big East Conference policy aimed at curtailing a trend of increased brawling in college basketball games is going into effect.

The Big East's nine athletic directors adopted the five-point policy shortly after it was drafted by the conference's executive committee during a teleconference Tuesday. It became the law of the league today.

It calls for a one-game suspension for players who are ejected from games for unsportsmanlike conduct and for anyone, with the exception of head coaches, who leaves the bench during an altercation.

"It's unfortunate that it had to come to this, but it's a step in the right direction. I think the league should be commended," Providence Coach Gordon Chiesa said. "I think it's a good solution. There's accountability of action."

"Every coach in the league does a good job of coaching values, but when you're dealing with 19-year-old kids it becomes tough to control their intensity."

A fight between Georgetown and Pittsburgh last Saturday, the second between the two schools and the third involving the Hoyas this season, precipitated the unusual midseason policy revisions, which call for:

— An automatic suspension for the next conference game for players or bench personnel other than head coaches who take the court during a skirmish.

— A one-game suspension for players ejected from Big East games, subject to the affirmation of the commissioner.

— Reaffirmed commitment on the part of conference athletic directors to ensure that games at their home sites will be "in accordance with the highest standards of sportsmanship and sound principles of game management."

— Reaffirmed support of the conference's officials in their efforts to "control physical play, particularly as it relates to the calling of flagrant and intentional fouls."

— The implementation at the conclusion of the season of a "major program aimed to provide positive leadership — by conference administrators, coaches and athletes — to ensure all competition be conducted to the highest standards of ethics and sportsmanship."

But the Big East isn't the only conference in which on-court violence has increased. There were also fights Saturday in games between Louisville and South Carolina and Penn and Yale.

"The Big East Conference views its high visibility, which tends to magnify any problem areas, as an opportunity to be an innovative leader in addressing national trends," Commissioner Dave Gavitt said.

"One of these trends is the deterioration of conduct and good sportsmanship as it relates to coaches, players and fans of college basketball."

The policies were drafted by the Big East executive committee, which includes athletic directors Todd Turner of Connecticut, Frank Rienzo of Georgetown and Larry Keating of Seton Hall.

"The commissioner has told the coaches and the athletic director has told the coaches, 'Hey, we don't want

Vikings Romp By Jags, 66-40

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley's 3-A Vikings held Farmville Central's 2-A Jaguars to just two first quarter points Tuesday night and cruised to a 66-40 victory in their non-conference cross-county basketball game.

Farmville Central won the girls' game, 39-38, on a basket at the buzzer by the Lady Jaguars' Kim Harrison.

Conley's boys pushed through 18 first quarter points while holding the Jaguars in check. The Vikings continued to pull away in the second period, adding 24 points to its total while giving up 15. That left the Vikes with a comfortable 42-17 halftime lead.

Farmville tried to rally in the third period, 17-12, but was just far back. The Jaguars did cut the lead to 54-34, but Conley finished them off, 12-6, in the last period.

Sherwood Wilder led Conley's scoring with 13 points while Phil Medlin dumped in 12 and Paul Merritt had 10. Jarvis Lang had 10 to pace Farmville Central.

Farmville's girls eased out into a 10-6 lead in the first period of their game, only to see the Valkyries rally. Conley outscored Farmville, 13-6, in the second period gaining a 19-16 halftime lead.

Both teams scored eight points in the third to make it 27-24 but Conley couldn't hold on for the win. Farmville rallied once more with Harrison scoring at the horn for the win. Brenda Reid led Farmville with 11 points while Harrison and Vickie Best each had 10. Charlene Davenport led Conley with 12 points.

Conley's boys climb to 16-6 with the win while the girls drop to 7-15. The Vikings will travel to West Carteret on Friday, seeking to wrap up their second straight Coastal Conference title.

Farmville is now 18-3, while the girls are 11-11. Farmville, already having clinched the Eastern Plains Conference title, closes out the regular season on Friday, hosting Charles B. Aycock.

Rose Slips Past Hunt, 60-53

WILSON — Rose High School managed to survive a lack-luster performance and defeat Wilson Hunt, 60-53, Tuesday night to set up a battle for fourth place on Friday night.

The Rampants, 7-6 in the Big East, are currently tied with Northeastern of Elizabeth City for fourth in the league standings. The two teams meet on Friday at Rose High — and will also meet again in the first round of the league tournament next week. The winner Friday will be the host team for the first round game.

Rose's girls remained in a tie for first place with a 45-23 win in their game.

The Rampants, who had been beaten in a close game by league-leading Wilson Fike on Friday, were still looking back at that contest Tuesday night. "We were still a little down from it and just didn't get into the flow of the game until late," Coach Jim Brewington said. "James Teel and Pat Joyner both came off the bench to give us a lift along the way."

Rose led by only 11-9 after the first quarter of the game. Hunt came back with a 12-11 margin in the second quarter and the Rampants could claim only a 22-21 edge at intermission.

In the third quarter, Rose began to be able to pull away, outthumping Hunt, 14-10. That allowed Rose a 36-31 lead. In the final quarter, Rose outaced the Warriors to the wire, 24-22, to claim the victory.

Errol Wooten led Rose with 17 points. Howard led Hunt with 27 while Cox added 11.

Rose is now 14-7 overall.

Rose's girls found the going tough early as Hunt held the Rampettes to just two first quarter points. "We just couldn't hit," Coach Bill Kuykendall said. "We got good shots, but we just missed them. (Hunt) was very aggressive on defense and I think it bothered us."

The first period ended with Hunt up, 6-2, and while Rose cut it in the second quarter with a 10-7 margin, the Rampettes still trailed 13-12, at the half.

Trinity Downs Mount Calvary

Trinity Christian School closed out the regular season with a 93-60 romp over Mount Calvary Christian of Hookerton Tuesday night in basketball.

Mount Calvary's girls took a 35-30 win in their meeting with the Lady Tigers.

The Hookerton club gained a 20-17 lead in a tight first period, but the Tigers took command of the game in the second quarter. Trinity held Mount Calvary to just five points while pouring in 31 of their own to streak out to a 48-25 halftime lead.

Trinity built its lead to 70-42 in the third quarter and outscored Mount Calvary, 23-18, in the final period.

Kreston Welch led Trinity with 20 points while Kirk Welch had 19, Gerard Fulton had 18, and Michael Harrell and John Griffin each had 12. Mount Calvary was led by Alan Hall with 15 while Kevin Jones had 14 and Kevin Stox had 14.

Kirk Welch pulled 16 rebounds in the game while Harrell had 15 and Griffin, 12.

In the girls' game, Mount Calvary outthumped Trinity, 10-6, in the first quarter. Trinity came back with an 8-5 margin in the second frame and trailed by just one, 15-14, at the half.

In the third period, Mount Calvary inched its lead back out to four, 24-20, and outscored Trinity, 11-10, the rest of the way.

Marie Summerlin led Mount Calvary with 18 points while Christie Murray had 11. Becky Stocks had 12 and Rhonda Harris had 10 to lead Trinity.

Trinity ends the regular season with a 24-2 record while the girls are 9-8. The Lady Tigers will enter tournament play on Friday against an opponent yet to be named. The boys, however, have a first round bye and will not return to action until the weekend of March 4.

Chargers Rally By Falcons

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton bounced back in the second half of its basketball game with C.B. Aycock Tuesday night and captured a 75-57 victory.

Aycock's girls downed Ayden-Grifton, 50-33, in their meeting.

The Chargers, a little flat following Farmville Central's clinching of the Eastern Plains Conference title against them on Friday night, didn't have a lot of spark as they came onto the court against Aycock. The Chargers led only 14-13 after one period and saw Aycock outthump them, 12-10, in the second to sneak into the dressing room with a 25-24 lead.

But the Chargers came back in a hurry. They outthumped Aycock for a 25-15 margin in the third period and ran out to a 49-40 lead. They then finished off the Falcons, 26-17, in the last quarter to claim the win.

Ronnell Peterson led Ayden-Grifton with 25 points while Aaron Harper added 18. Corey Ruffin paced Aycock with 21 while Johnny Smith added 14.

In the girls' game, Aycock took a 10-6 lead in the first quarter and expanded upon it. The Lady Falcons outscored Ayden-Grifton, 13-3, in the second period and took a 23-9 lead into halftime.

Aycock boosted its lead to 37-20 in the third period and matched Ayden-Grifton, 13-13, in the final quarter.

Ayden-Grifton will close out its regular season on Friday, traveling to Greene Central. AG's boys are now 15-6 overall, 9-2 in the EPC. The girls are 4-18, 2-9.

Greene Central Defeats Pamlico In 2 Overtimes

BAYBORO — Greene Central battled through two overtimes before escaping with a 57-56 basketball victory over Pamlico County Tuesday night.

Greene Central's girls earned a 59-42 win in their game with the Lady Hurricanes.

Greene Central pushed out into a 13-6 lead in the first quarter of the game, but the Hurricanes took command in the second quarter, outscoring the Rams, 17-4. That put Pamlico into a 23-17 halftime lead.

In the third quarter, Greene Central rallied, 17-12, and trimmed the deficit back to one, 35-34.

The two battled through the final period and Pamlico tied it at 45-45 but the Rams got the ball for the final shot. The basket went in, but a charge was called on the play, negating the shot and forcing the overtime.

Greene Central scored the first five points of the overtime, but Donald Gibbs brought Pamlico back to a 51-50 lead. Tyrone Hardy then made the first of two free throws with six seconds left to knot it again, 51-51.

In the second overtime, Pamlico twice got the lead, but Anthony Jones made two free throws late in the period for a 57-56 lead. Pamlico went for the final shot, but missed, giving the Rams the win.

Shay Beamon led Greene Central with 16 points while Jones had 14 and Reggie Atkinson had 12. Jamie Gibbs led Pamlico with 22 while Donald Gibbs added 12.

In the girls' game, Greene Central took a 16-2 lead in the first period and never looked back. The Lady Rams held a 29-12 lead at the half and ran that to 42-27 in the third period. They outthumped the Lady Canes, 17-15, in the final period.

Chanel Hooker led Greene Central with 21 points while Angel Harrell had 10. Karen Credle led Pamlico with 20.

Greene Central's boys are now 11-10 overall, 7-4 in the league. The girls are 9-12, 5-6. The Rams close out the regular season on Friday, hosting Ayden-Grifton.

Edenton Runs Past Roanoke

EDENTON — Edenton placed five players in double figures as the Aces rolled up an 80-64 Northeastern Conference basketball victory over Roanoke Tuesday night.

Roanoke's girls took a 46-34 win to close out the regular season with a share of the NEAC championship. The Lady Redskins, 10-2 in conference play, are tied with Plymouth for the title. A drawing will be held later this week to determine seeding for next week's league tournament.

Roanoke's boys held a slim 12-11 lead after the first period of their game, but Edenton came back in the second frame with a 23-17 advantage. That put the Aces in the lead, 34-29, at intermission.

The Aces continued to pull away in the second half. They built their third quarter lead to 59-38, and then outscored the Redskins, 21-16, in the last period.

Melvin Nixon led Edenton with 15 points while Lamont Phelps had 13, Robert Rankins had 12 and Devone Felton and Erie Downing each had 11. Roanoke was led by Fred McFadden with 14 while Jasper Council added 13.

Roanoke's boys end up the regular season at 8-12 overall, 2-10 in the league.

Roanoke's girls pushed out to a 10-6 lead in the first quarter of their game. Edenton rallied, 10-8, in the second period and the Lady 'Skins held only an 18-16 halftime edge.

In the third period, however, Roanoke pulled away, building its lead to 33-25 by the end of the quarter. Roanoke outscored Edenton, 13-9, in the final quarter.

Vickie Teele led Roanoke with 21 points while Joyce Outlaw added 19.

Roanoke's girls end up with a 15-5 overall record.

Both Redskin teams return to action next week in the league tournament.

Hawks End Pacer Win Streak

By The Associated Press
 The French Connection carried the Atlanta Hawks and cut off the Indiana Pacers.

Jacques Dominique Wilkins scored 43 points and Antoine Labotte Carr had a career-high 22 Tuesday night as Atlanta ended the Pacers' seven-game winning streak, 131-111.

Wilkins, born in France, made 18 of 30 field-goal tries and reached the 40-point mark for the 10th time this season. Carr, a reserve in his fourth year, was 9-for-13 from the field and got eight rebounds.

"I try to be productive with my playing time," Carr said. "I'm one of the best in the low post. When I'm on a roll, nobody can stop me."

Indiana lost for the first time since before the All-Star break.

"We couldn't have won any of those seven games playing the way we did tonight," Pacers Coach Jack Ramsay said.

Elsewhere, it was Chicago 104, Seattle 97 in overtime; New York 89, Milwaukee 87; Portland 114, New Jersey 102; Los Angeles Lakers 111, Washington 100; and Detroit 121, Sacramento 105.

Wilkins scored 15 points and Carr 13 in the second quarter when the host Hawks took a 13-point lead. The closest Indiana got thereafter was when Reggie Miller hit a 3-pointer from halfcourt at the halftime buzzer and made it 67-57.

Wilkins, second in the NBA with a 30-point average, got 15 points in the third quarter as Atlanta pulled away.

Glenn Rivers added 17 points and Randy Wittman 14 for the Hawks. Atlanta reserve Kevin Willis had 10 points on 5-for-5 shooting.

"Besides the play from Wilkins, I thought our bench help was great," Hawks coach Mike Fratello said.

Chuck Person scored 18 points and John Long 16 for the Pacers.

Lakers 111, Bullets 100
 Los Angeles extended its winning streak to eight as James Worthy scored 23 points against Washington.

Magic Johnson, Byron Scott and Wes Matthews scored 17 apiece for the Lakers, who were playing without center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who was ill. Jeff Malone scored 26 points for the Bullets.

Washington led 23-18 after one quarter, getting eight points from Terry Catledge, while the Lakers missed 16 of their 22 shots in the period.

The Lakers led 47-45 at halftime, then took control of the game with an 11-2 run late in the third quarter, giving them a 74-61 lead. The Bullets got no closer than 10 in the fourth quarter.

Pistons 121, Kings 105
 Detroit handed Sacramento its fourth straight loss as Isiah Thomas had 26 points and 11 assists.

The Pistons shot 78.3 percent from the field while outscoring the Kings 37-22 in the third period, and Detroit took a 95-74 lead into the fourth quarter.

Dennis Rodman added 20 points and 13 rebounds for the Pistons, while Mike McGee led Sacramento with 29 points.

Bulls 104, SuperSonics 97
 Michael Jordan scored 39 points, including six in overtime for Chicago.

Seattle's Xavier McDaniel sent the game into overtime at 95-95 with a 35-foot, 3-point shot with one second left in regulation.

Jordan, who had 15 points in the fourth quarter, put the Bulls ahead 99-97 with a layup with 1:34 remaining in overtime and Charles Oakley had a foul shot and two rebounds to preserve the victory.

Brad Sellers had 24 points for Chicago. Dale Ellis scored 34 for the SuperSonics, while Tom Chambers had 21.

Jordan made a jump shot with 52 seconds left in the fourth quarter and added two free throws with six seconds remaining for a three-point lead, setting up McDaniel's tying shot.

Knicks 89, Bucks 87
 A three-point play by Gerald Wilkins with 44 seconds left gave New York its 10th consecutive home victory and snapped Milwaukee's four-game winning streak.

The Knicks' streak at Madison Square Garden is their longest since they won 20 straight from Nov. 14, 1972 through Feb. 3, 1973.

Wilkins' 12-foot bank shot and free throw gave the Knicks an 89-85 lead, matching the biggest margin by either team in the second half.

A basket by Ricky Pierce with 37 seconds left made it 89-87 before Wilkins missed two free throws with 19 seconds to go. On Milwaukee's last possession, Patrick Ewing blocked a shot by Sidney Moncrief and Pierce picked up the loose ball, but missed a layup attempt.

Kenny Walker led the Knicks with 21 points. Terry Cummings had 21 points and Pierce 18, 11 in the fourth quarter, for Milwaukee.

Trail Blazers 114, Nets 102
 Portland's Clyde Drexler scored 29 points and ignited a crucial 12-0 run in the second half.

The loss was the fourth straight for New Jersey, which learned before the game that second-leading scorer Orlando Woolridge has a drug problem and must undergo rehabilitation.

Drexler ended a 14-0 run that gave the Nets a 75-73 lead by grabbing a rebound and scoring to tie the game. Kiki Vandeweghe, who added 24 points, and Richard Anderson hit 3-point field goals, and Kevin Duckworth scored on a layup to end the third period. Drexler's jumper from the corner to open the fourth gave Portland an 85-75 lead.

Jerome Kersey added 23 points for Portland, while Buck Williams had 27 points and Roy Hinson 23 for the Nets.

Prior to the game, the Trail Blazers traded their all-time leading scorer, veteran guard Jim Paxson, to the Boston Celtics for reserve guard Jerry Sichting and unspecified future considerations.

ECU's Scott Wins Sanford Biathlon Event

SANFORD, Fla. — Barry Scott, an East Carolina undergraduate student, won his first biathlon as a professional Sunday Feb. 21 with a time of 1:21.24 at the Sanford Biathlon Championship which featured contestants from all over the East Coast.

The event, which was a southeastern championship, featured a three-mile run, a 20-mile bike ride and another three-mile run.

Scott, 24-year old native of Greensboro, is majoring in physical education. He had previously competed in a number of biathlons as an amateur before going professional just before this race in which he beat a field of 150 entrants.

Competitors ranged from New York to Florida. Second place went to Thomas Huggins who was 11th at the U.S National Triathlon Championships.

Scott starts Triathlon season in New Orleans in mid April for a Iron-Man qualifier contest.

Metro To Review Fight Tapes

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Metro Conference officials will review tape of Saturday's fight during the South Carolina-Louisville basketball game to determine if action should be taken against any players or the officials.

League Commissioner Ralph McFillen and Dale Kelly, supervisor of the league's officials, will meet today to watch the tape, said Charles Dayton, director of communications for the conference.

The conference office Monday requested a taped copy of the game and is not acting at the request of either school, Dayton said.

The league's options range from taking no action to suspending players involved in the brawl, which occurred with 1:06 left in regulation. Louisville went on to win 98-88 in double overtime.

"There are a lot of options — they run the gamut," Dayton said. "The conference office has the power of suspension, if it comes to that, but that's not to say that it will. I don't want to get ahead of the game."

Dayton said the officials — Bob Olah, Ben Dunn and Herman Ramsey — could be disciplined.

Dayton said there is no precedent to follow in the 12-year history of the league in ruling on the fight.

Four players were ejected, along with South Carolina coach George Felton, who was dismissed because his team drew three technicals. The Cardinals received two technicals.

Eddie The Eagle Is Last Again

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Eddie Edwards, Britain's myopic, madcap crowd favorite, completed a unique Winter Olympics double on Tuesday by finishing dead last in the 90-meter ski jumping competition.

He added it to his last-place finish in the 70-meter event on the first weekend of the Games. In both events, he was a big-time loser with a big-time smile.

The 24-year-old Edwards, his skis flapping like the wings of a duck, went 71 meters on his first jump, 47.5 meters behind eventual gold medalist Matti Nykanen of Finland. Edwards sailed all of 67 meters on his second attempt to finish with 57.5 points. Both jumps drew a roar from a crowd estimated at over 70,000.

Canada's Todd Gillman finished 54th, right ahead of Edwards, with 110.8 points on jumps of 96 and 86.5 meters.

Seve To Make Rare Appearance

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Seve Ballesteros, a world citizen of golf, will make the second of only eight appearances in the United States this year when he plays in this week's Los Angeles Open.

As a non-member of the PGA Tour, the Spaniard is only allowed to play in eight American tournaments. That's a rule he doesn't like.

Foreign players must participate in 15 PGA Tour events to keep their tour membership. Players who do not meet that requirement are limited to playing in the three major championships — Masters, U.S. Open and PGA — and five other tournaments of the sponsors' choice.

Ballesteros met the requirement once, in 1984. But he played in only nine tournaments the next year and was suspended from the tour for 1986.

"I tried it one year and that is why I know I cannot take it," Ballesteros said. "It is too many tournaments."

He says he would prefer to play 12 U.S. tournaments a year.

"I always believe that nine tournaments (outside of the majors) is better than five," he said. "It would help me, and it would help the sport."

Ballesteros' problem is due more to the global nature of golf. He finds himself with both a financial and personal interest in playing around the world. That means about 14 tournaments a year in Europe, two or more in Japan, a couple more in some other places, plus his U.S. events.

Ballesteros said playing in 15 U.S. tournaments would require 18 weeks in this country a year.

"I would be playing golf the whole year, and that's why it's impossible," he said. "The superstar players cannot play too much because they have a lot of pressure. They have other commitments. We understand that. But we have to be productive of our time, otherwise we get burned out very easily."

"I would like to see some of the American players go overseas and spend as much as I spend away from Spain. Then, I'd like to hear what they have to say."

But there appears to be little sentiment on the tour to change the rule to satisfy Ballesteros. The rule was established to protect tournament spots for regular tour members, especially in the more lucrative tournaments that likely would attract larger numbers of foreigners.

Rarick Hopes For Second Chance

HONOLULU (AP) — Last year's Hawaiian Ladies Open put Cindy Rarick on the map professionally, and she's looking at this year's golf tournament as a chance to re-establish herself in 1988.

Following the best season of her three-year career, Rarick's fortunes have fallen on hard times. She withdrew from the Mazda Classic in Boca Raton, Fla., due to illness and missed the cut in the Sarasota Classic.

"My problems this year have been maybe being a little sluggish or my concentration just isn't sharp," Rarick said. "There's no better place to get back on the right foot than Hawaii."

The former University of Hawaii golfer defends her Hawaiian Ladies Open title this week against 143 challengers. The $300,000, 54-hole tournament begins Thursday and winds up Saturday at the Turtle Bay Resort's 6,220-yard course on Oahu's north shore.

Rarick said she needs a strong showing this week to get her golf game back on track.

"Getting off to a good start early in the season makes a big, big difference," Rarick said in a telephone interview from her home in Tucson, Ariz.

Rarick's victory here in 1987 was the first of her career and catapulted her from obscurity into the LPGA's elite. Rarick went on to win the Corning Classic and jumped from 72nd to 11th on the official money list with $162,073.

"My performance in Hawaii and the confidence I gained there definitely helped me win the Corning tournament," Rarick said.

"The first win is very important just so you know you can hang in there down the stretch," Rarick said. "It boosts your confidence unbelievably."

The Hawaiian Ladies Open victory was worth $45,000, almost matching the $51,187 Rarick earned in her first two years on the tour. She was voted the LPGA's most improved player in 1987.

Kania, scheduled to race again in the 1,000 meters on Friday and the 1,500 meters on Saturday, has won six medals in three Olympics. One more medal would make her the winningest female speed skater in Olympic history.

Ehrig, in her fourth Olympics, was the defending 3,000-meter Olympic champion and after Tuesday night's race had five Olympic medals.

"Ehrig and Kania said in the newspapers that once they stopped, I could be the best skater. But it's not so fine to think that, so I tried to beat them before they stopped," van Genip said. "I'm glad I did it in the Olympics."

East Germany kept pace with the Soviet Union with the help of a second gold by Frank-Peter Roetsch, who won the 10-kilometer biathlon. Soviets Valeri Medvedtsev and Sergei Tchepikov won the silver and bronze. Roetsch previously won the 20-kilometer biathlon.

"After the relay, we'll drink much more beer," Roetsch said, looking ahead to a possible third gold. "Hopefully, we'll have a reason to celebrate."

Josh Thompson of Gunnison, Colo., the top U.S. hope in biathlon, finished a disappointing 27th, two spots lower than he did in the 20-kilometer.

"Maybe I don't deal well under pressure," Thompson said. "I need some time to think about it. I'm not happy at all."

The Soviets lead the medal standings with 22 overall, including eight golds and eight silvers. The East Germans are second with seven golds, six silvers and four bronze. Austria and Switzerland each have seven medals, Finland and the Netherlands have five each, and Sweden, the United States, Norway and Canada have four each.

Big East...

you to do that and we want you to control it," Pittsburgh Athletic Director Edward Bozick said.

"It's obvious that in some instances they haven't been able to control it. So if the carrot doesn't work, then you apply a bigger stick," Bozick said.

Fights have developed from aggressive play under the baskets. Georgetown has been known for its physical play for many years and coaches have tried to match the Hoyas.

"When we play Georgetown, we talk to our kids in terms of: 'You guys have got make sure that you're very, very aggressive and that you're going to match their physical play with your own,'" Boston College Coach Jim O'Brien said.

"That's the way they're going to play. If you don't, then they're clearly going to have a tremendous advantage."

After the fight in Saturday's game, Georgetown Coach John Thompson said, "We're not going to stop what we've been doing."

"I can't guarantee tomorrow that if we play somebody we won't have another fight," he said in an interview with a local television station. "But I'll guarantee that I'll do the best I can to control it."

However, Chiesa, St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca and Seton Hall Coach P.J. Carlesimo came to Georgetown's defense.

"John Thompson has been criticized unfairly," Chiesa said. "He is a professional. He teaches values just like all the other coaches in the conference teach values. His team plays aggressively and sometimes they've been penalized for that."

Added Carnesecca: "Don't pick on Georgetown. Other teams play tough. Georgetown plays a very aggressive type style, but we've never had a situation where we've been cold-cooked by them."

Carlesimo also said the Hoyas shouldn't be criticized for their hard-nosed defensive style.

"Because they play so hard, the intensity is always special to begin with against them," he said.

Chiesa said the new policies wouldn't end fighting in college basketball, but combined with education and increased awareness they should help control the problem before it gets further out of hand.

"Every day in team practice, tempers flare and people square off," he said. "I try to teach the kids what I call controlled frenzy; to maintain their composure."

NCAA Seeks To Cut Out Agents

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — In an effort to keep basketball players from signing with agents before they complete their eligibility, the NCAA will make them sign notarized affidavits if they want to play in next month's tournament.

"Hopefully, this will be a strong deterrent to the agent problem. This will give us the opportunity, if we so desire, to establish some legal pursuit if we find after the tournament that a player has been ineligible and will allow us to apply some penalties to people other than the institution," NCAA Executive Director Dick Schultz said Tuesday as he switched sports during the closing session of the association's annual College Football Preview.

"We know that that's not in some cases going to deter all the problems, but I think at this point in time everything would help."

Schultz said the affidavit also might eventually be required in other NCAA championship events.

He said the affidavits will enable the NCAA to take legal action against a player rather than only punishing his school.

"The NCAA Executive Committee feels that the impact of student-athletes' signing early with agents has been felt by the institution and not by the student-athlete," he said.

The NCAA currently requires athletes to sign a preseason affidavit that they are in compliance with NCAA regulations. Tuesday's announcement covers an athlete's signing with an agent between that time and the start of the basketball tournament.

Schultz urged athletes to take advantage of services offered by campus counseling groups before signing with an agent.

"We're very, very limited in what we can do (about agents)," he said. "We do have a registration program for agents, but it's very difficult for us to put any teeth in it."

"I have had our legal counsel review what our options are, and they're very few. I would hope that the institutions would take advantage of the campus counseling groups that have been approved a number of years ago and would develop on their own college campuses this strong group and really sell this to their athletes because these campus counseling groups can do virtually everything but negotiate a contract.

"They can find out on behalf of the player what (draft) round he's going in. They can find out on behalf of the player what his value is. And those are numbers that are easily determined."

"These campus counseling people can even interview agents for the players, if they so desire."

The NCAA last required affidavits for the basketball tournament in 1971.

Schultz also took exception to a story last week in the Atlanta Constitution which said he favored a hardship draft for college football players.

"The NCAA's position is that an athlete has the right to leave school at any time to sign a professional contract," Schultz said.

Salvadoran Rebels Kill Three On Bus

By ANNIE CABRERA
Associated Press Writer
SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist rebels fired machine guns at a bus traveling in defiance of their first transportation ban of 1988, killing three textile workers and wounding six, authorities reported.
The insurgents, who have fought the U.S.-backed government for eight years, ordered the ban to protest legislative and municipal elections scheduled March 20. They say free and fair elections are impossible because of the civil war.
Rebel broadcasts said the traffic ban began on Monday and would continue indefinitely.
Police officials said the guerrillas attacked a bus belonging to the United Textile Industries Corp. as it traveled Monday night on the Pan-American Highway east of San Salvador.

The victims were identified as workers for the company, which is partly owned by the government.
The guerrillas, grouped as the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, warned people to stay off the nation's roads and highways. They said in a broadcast on their clandestine Radio Venceremos that their troops had orders to attack vehicles violating the ban.
Bus dispatchers contacted by telephone said the threat halted an estimated 90 percent of traffic between cities and reduced public transport by 80 percent within cities.
The rebels called seven transport bans in 1987. In those, three people were killed, about 30 wounded and about 160 vehicles destroyed or damaged.
In another development, four American religious workers were detained by the military for 21 hours in the war-crippled northern part of the country before being released Tuesday to the U.S. Embassy, according to sources with the Mennonite Central Committee.

It was the second time in less than a week that U.S. lay workers had been picked up by the armed forces. Last Thursday, two Episcopalian women from California were detained briefly before being turned over to U.S. Embassy officials.

In early January, the armed forces' Joint Chiefs of Staff issued a statement to some church officials asking that the number of foreign religious workers be restricted in war areas.

According to Mennonite sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, the volunteers were detained Monday in San Jose Guayaba, 15 miles north of the capital of San Salvador. They were released into the custody of U.S. Vice Consul Mark Schall.

The volunteers were identified as Larry Leaman-Miller, 26, of Nevada, and his wife, Korla, 28, of Iowa, no hometowns available; and Gary and Nancy Guthrie of Landisville, Pa.

Manila Struggling To Break Influx Of Homeless Children

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The government estimates that 10,000 to 20,000 homeless children roam the streets of the Ermita red-light district in Manila, falling into lives of prostitution, petty crime and drug addiction.

Volunteers and social workers have mobilized in an effort to save them.

"We have street children, we have all types of exploited children. They are victims," said Nenuca Ross, a volunteer with the government's Department of Social Welfare.

Many of the children drifted into Manila from impoverished rural provinces.

But with few skills and no education, both parents and children survive by begging and by selling cigarettes and smuggled watches. Many of the children go on to prostitution, pickpocketing, shoplifting, extortion and drug trafficking.

But the government and private agencies are now intensifying efforts to find and rehabilitate such children and break the cycle of crime and poverty.

"We go to them," Mrs. Ross said. "We talk to them. We sit on the sidewalks with them, invite them to a hotdog sandwich or something."

Mrs. Ross said the children are easiest to persuade on rainy days when "business is bad" or when they are apprehended by police.

Once they have been found, children 6 to 13 years old are taken to the welfare department's "tent schools" where they receive counseling and the rudiments of reading and writing.

Those who have suffered serious beatings, drug addiction or sexual abuse are taken to a half-way house in Alabang, a Manila suburb where they receive psychiatric help. Teenagers go to state-run juvenile institutions.

Officials say child prostitution has been a problem for years and President Corazon Aquino has promised to crack down on child prostitution and give greater priority to child welfare programs.

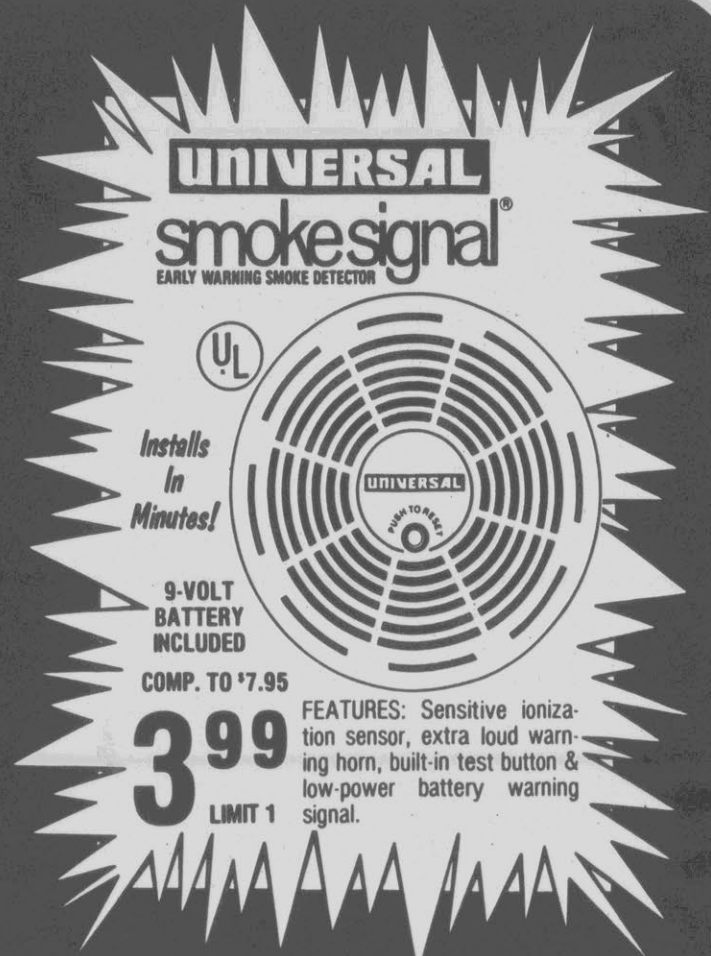

Rita Roque, Manila's welfare department director, said the city's two tent schools have successfully reintegrated some 100 children since the program began last year. The department plans to build a third school in Ermita, the red-light district of seedy bars, brothels and cheap hotels near Manila Bay.

Mrs. Ross said about 800 children have been graduated over the past two years from the Alabang center. But she added that about 800 others escaped and returned to the streets.

New Zealander Travels In Adventure

By ANGUS PHILLIPS

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — If you're intimidated by the idea of an adventurer, if it conjures up images of some great, hulking macho type bloated on his own achievements, you ought to meet Gerry Clark from Kerikeri, New Zealand. He'll restore your faith in the gentle virtues of the adventuring man.

Clark was in the United States recently to receive the Cruising Club of America's Blue Water Medal for outstanding achievement by an ocean sailor, and to give a talk at the Smithsonian Institution.

But his story is about more than boats and the sea.

The first seven years was devoted to hand-building his vessel, a 31-foot cutter-rigged sloop fashioned from the kauri pine of his native island.

Then for 3½ years Clark circumnavigated Antarctica, going from frigid island to frigid island around the Antarctic Circle to get a handle on dwindling populations of shearwaters, albatrosses, petrels, prions and other pelagic species.

It seems that man, in his quest to conquer, has brought a plague on parts of the earth's last frontier. Feral cats, offspring of pets abandoned at scientific and commercial exploration stations, and rats, imported unintentionally, are wreaking havoc with sea birds' nesting grounds, said Clark.

How much havoc? No one knew, and it was a hard job to begin gathering data to find out.

But not too hard for Clark, a diminutive, sparkling-eyed, soft-spoken fellow who decided to tackle it for the good of the world when he retired from a career in seafaring to run a small citrus orchard with his wife, Marge.

He built the little boat in a packing shed with the help of Marge and their four daughters, and he built it strong, mindful that it would face the most treacherous waters in the world in the latitudes seamen call the Roaring Forties and Furious Fifties.

It was the second sailboat he'd built, the first being a homemade plywood craft in which he circumnavigated New Zealand and sailed across the Tasman Sea to Australia.

On Feb. 21, 1983, Clark left Kerikeri with two temporary crew aboard, and that was the last New Zealand saw of him for 3 years 8½ months, until he rolled back in on Nov. 6, 1986, with a lifetime of wilderness adventures under his belt and tomes of sea-bird data in hand.

He'd seen seas of 60 and 70 feet and weathered alone frigid winds of hurricane force. Twice his mast and sails had been carried away in storms. He'd rolled the boat a dozen times or more in the towering seas and was knocked down scores of times. Ice on deck nearly had sunk him with its weight.

He'd given himself up for doomed after the last and most vicious storm off the Kerguelen Islands, where seas of over 100 feet have been reported and where gale winds blow every day, on average.

But if you ask him what it was like, all in all, Clark will tell you modestly it had its moments, good and bad, and his fervent hope is that he can do something like it again.

The greatest pleasure? "Oh, definitely it was discovering a colony of birds where no one knew they existed," he said, like the blue petrels he found by camping in the rocks atop Cape Horn, or the 200,000 sooty shearwaters and 30,000 black-browed albatrosses he found on islands off Chile.

The places Clark visited are on no tour guide's list: the Falklands and South Georgia in the South Atlantic, where he spent two winters; the Crozets and Kerguelens, south of Madagascar; the South Sandwich Islands and Bouvetaya, the remotest piece of land on earth; MacDonald and Heard Islands, and finally Fremantle, Australia, where he limped in under makeshift rig to be greeted, to his astonishment, by the New Zealand America's Cup team, out practicing for their date with Dennis Conner and destiny.

By the time he reached Fremantle, Clark and his boat were so ravaged he was surprised to be alive. But a few days with his countrymen quickly fixed that. Michael Fay, head of the New Zealand challenge, greeted him in port and checked over his boat, which at the time was being propelled by a 12-foot stick of wood

Children's Videos Use New Techniques

By JANET GRAMZA

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WESTPORT, Conn. — Mark Sotnick isn't sure whether his beliefs about children's stories come more from having been a child or having been a parent. But somewhere along the line, Sotnick reached the firm conclusion that the most important aspect of a children's story is the telling.

Perhaps tapping his own childhood memories, Sotnick has come to believe that the best-loved and best-remembered children's stories are the ones that were read to us from picture books slowly and expressively, by adults who let us linger over each illustrated page.

Certainly, from tapping his parenthood, Sotnick came to abhor technology's dubious gift, that frenetic, action-packed staple of children's television programming known as the Saturday-morning cartoon.

So when Sotnick, 42, founded his Westport, Conn.-based production company, Rabbit Ears Productions,

Nominated For 3 Grammys

Singer Suzanne Vega Falls Off Bike Over The News

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Suzanne Vega's reaction to being nominated for Grammy Awards was to fall off a motorbike.

After touring through the last eight months of 1987, she went to the Caribbean for a vacation. That's where she heard about her nominations for record of the year, song of the year and best female pop vocalist for "Luka." "I was riding a small motorcycle around this island," she said. "I was thinking about the Grammys and I started to overreact in traffic. I ended up slamming on the brakes and fell off and hurt my knee."

She wrote "Luka," a song about an abused child, in 1984 before she had a record contract. "I saved it for the second album ('Solitude Standing'). It is kind of a strange song. I wasn't sure how people were going to respond to it."

"When they said they wanted to release it as a single, I didn't think it was going to do anything on American radio. That tends not to be controversial at all. I said, 'Sure. You can do anything you want with this song. I don't think it is going to be a hit.'"

In an interview, Vega recalled the day she wrote "Luka."

"I remember sitting in my room on a Sunday afternoon listening to Lou Reed's 'Berlin' over and over again. It's one of my favorite records. When I feel like I have to fix certain parts of my life or I'm struggling with something, it has all the stuff in it I need to listen to."

"I find listening to it gets me excited and gets me feeling things very strongly," she said.

"There was a kid living in my building who was not abused as far as I know. I thought he was interesting because he was kind of a wise guy, very tough and smart. I was thinking how a real abused kid would be like that. He wouldn't be a sad-eyed waif."

"The idea came to write it from this boy's point of view, in this dry, matter-of-fact way, no violence or sad parts."

She wrote the whole song that afternoon.

"When I wrote it, I was singing in folk clubs, things like 'Wild Mountain Thyme,' where they sang along. For a while 'Luka' became my trademark. ... I dressed in black; it was like a distinguishing feature of the person who writes weird songs."

She started wearing black while studying dance to look thinner and still feels comfortable in it.

"I went to the High School of Performing Arts," said Vega, who grew up in New York. "I studied Martha Graham technique there. I think it has affected my song writing. It's based on breathing, is full of angles and tension. That's the way I like my writing to be."

She started writing poems at about 7. "They all had titles like 'By Myself.' Now I'm 28 and have an album titled 'Solitude Standing.' I'm still writing the same poems."

"When I was younger, being alone was like a treat," she said. "I shared a room with my sister. Any time you got to yourself was precious. I guess I still feel the same way."

"Luka," which she also recorded in Spanish, went to No. 1 in Uruguay, Vega proudly reports. Her stepfather, novelist Ed Vega, is from Puerto Rico and translated "Luka" for her. She has two younger brothers and a sister.

"I spent about a month in Puerto Rico when I was about 4. Spanish sunk in and I never quite lost it all."

At home, her parents sang a lot of folk songs, especially those by Leadbelly and Pete Seeger.

"I think folk music is a choice I made at 12 or 14. To me, folk music is the simplest and most direct way of telling a story. And a good song in the 1920s is still a good song today. I don't know why it tickled me at that age but it made a big impression. And folk songs are very personal. They're about people and real-life situations."

At 19, Vega took an office job. If she had a few days off, she'd book some gigs for herself upstate. She finally quit her receptionist job at the urging of her managers, Ron Fierstein and Steve Addabbo, and signed with A&M Records in 1984.

She likes minimalist music because of its simplicity, and often repeats musical ideas when composing, as minimalists do. She wrote lyrics for two songs by minimalist composer Philip Glass on his "Songs From Liquid Days" album.

"I love the words and rhythm of words. I get all caught up in that. Some of my songs don't have any melody. I don't set out to write hit singles so I'm like, 'Who cares?' With words I'm very particular and specific. I pick them because of how they sound and how they fit together. Now I'm starting to think about music in a similar way."

She has been invited to Moscow in March to sing at an anti-drug concert.

Her manager has suggested that his brother, playwright Harvey Fierstein ("Torch Song Trilogy") help her expand a senior thesis she wrote at Barnard College on Carson McCullers' short stories into a theater piece.

She's also planning to write songs for a third album.

Filmmaker Tries To Make Rhinoceros Look Cuddly

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It isn't easy to make a rhinoceros look noble, tragic, even charming, but producer-writer Philip Cayford does just that in his stunning National Geographic special, "The Rhino War."

"That was part of what I was trying to do, tried to make them look attractive, tried to make them look cuddly, because they're not very cuddly and attractive, and they're not very appealing, but they can be," said Cayford, a British filmmaker and conservationist, during a recent visit to New York.

The 1-hour documentary, shot in Kenya and Zimbabwe last year, airs Sunday on SuperStation TBS. It is narrated by Richard Kiley and features music by Ladysmith Black Mombazo.

Cayford has serious reasons for doing rhino PR. Of the more than 30 species of rhinoceros that once existed on the African continent, only five remain, and all are endangered, especially the black rhino. In the early 1970s, there were 65,000 rhinos in Africa. Now there are 4,500.

Says a park ranger in Zimbabwe, "You do not want to show to your children one day how an elephant or a rhino look in a storybook."

"Ironically," notes Cayford in the film's narration, "the very feature that evolved for the animal's defense may bring about its extinction."

Poachers are killing rhinos for the horn. A rhino's horn is caratin, like a human fingernail. The easiest way to remove it is to kill the animal.

Contrary to popular belief, rhino horn powder is not primarily sought as an aphrodisiac, but rather in the Far East as a supposed fever reducer.

More recently, however, conservationists uncovered an alarming new market for much of the rhino horn — North Yemen, where rhino-horn dagger handles are symbols of virility that command up to $15,000. In the oil-rich country, there is plenty of money for such extravagances.

In Africa, the battle to save the rhino has in fact become a war, complete with soldiers, helicopters, guns and death. The enemies, notes Cayford, are "greed, corruption and ignorance."

In Zimbabwe, where armed poachers moved after virtually wiping out the rhinos in eastern Africa, the government has given park rangers authority to shoot to kill poachers. Cayford's cameras capture the rangers' exhilaration after a violent confrontation. A dead poacher is juxtaposed with grim eloquence against the carcass of a rhino.

Since 1985, more than 30 poachers have died. So have 330 rhinos. The rangers say they don't like to kill humans to save animals, but feel the decision is a moral one. The poachers are on the short end of the economic stick. They risk their lives for a few hundred dollars.

Books For Children Combine Stars' Voices, New Technology

 three years ago, he was determined to produce children's books, records and videotapes that used new-fashioned technology to create old-fashioned effects.
 The results form a collection of painstakingly assembled video adaptations of favorite children's stories, such as Beatrix Potter's "The Tale of Peter Rabbit," Rudyard Kipling's "Just So Stories," and Hans Christian Andersen's "The Ugly Duckling," that Sottnick describes as "more like picture books and oral storytelling than they are like cartoons."
 They are video picture books of a slick, artistic quality that have already begun to register on the more respected show-biz barometers. When this year's Grammy Award nominations were announced Jan. 14, Sottnick was not too surprised to learn that the sound tracks from two Rabbit Ears videos had been nominated for Best Children's Recording.
 Singled out for nominations are Bobby McFerrin, a human synthesizer who uses his voice, lips and hands to create unique 'music' and sound effects for Kipling's "The Elephant's Child," narrated by actor Jack Nicholson; and Mark Isham for his Orient-inspired music heard in the Hans Christian Andersen tale "The Emperor and the Nightingale," narrated by Greenwich-born actress Glenn Close.

 "I'm really happy for the artists, because they did a wonderful job," was Sottnick's comment on the nominations. "It's really great to be recognized by your peers, and as a result, maybe more people will know of our work."
 If most people don't yet know of Rabbit Ears' videotapes, records and books by virtue of their sales in children's bookstores, they may have seen the videos on the Show time cable network's family lineup last autumn, or the Rabbit Ears children's Christmas special, "Santabear's Highflying Adventure" aired by CBS on Christmas Eve.
 By narrating children's classics with the celebrated voices of Nicholson, Close, Cher and Meryl Streep, illustrating them with rich, original artwork by David Jorgensen, Tim Raglin and Robert Van Nutt, and using background music by such accomplished musicians as McFerrin, Isham and George Winston, Sottnick has achieved a combination of wholesome and funky that nods to the tastes of today's parents as well as to the needs of their children.

 Sottnick said that the latter represent his highest priority.
 "We try to set each story at a pace that will allow the child to actively participate in it, in the way that, when you read or tell a child a story, you have that active engagement," said Sottnick, a boyish looking man with a laid-back demeanor.

 "The videos have far fewer drawings than a full animation, but a few hundred more than a picture book," he explained, and indeed the videos' images slide by in a way that gives the effect of pages gradually turned.
 "The odd thing is that we couldn't do it without the technology," Sot-nick adds. "Without video, we couldn't have each picture dissolve into the next. So with all this technology at our fingertips, we've taken a giant leap backwards."

 Sottnick developed an active interest in children's filmmaking when he was a student at Fordham University in the 1960s, then as a public school teacher who taught film to junior-high students in the 1970s, and then as a graduate student at Yale University's now-defunct film program in the early 1980s.
 At Fordham, he got his first taste of children's programming when he worked on what he describes as "live-action musical interludes" for the "Captain Kangaroo" show. Later, at Yale, he helped produce several films on children's issues such as foster care, autism and child abuse.

Island For The Birds

 60,000 birds call this small island home.
 Half the breeding population of rhinoceros auklets in the 48 contiguous states is here. So is the largest gull colony in the state of Washington as well as bald eagles and peregrine falcons.

President Reagan signed an act establishing Protection Island as a National Wildlife Refuge and authorized the secretary of the interior to acquire all the property on the island except the sea-bird sanctuary on the west end, which continues to be administered by the state of Washington.
 "We bought one of the seven homes on the island in 1977 and lived in it two years," said Bill Sterling, 40, a Seattle ambulance driver. "We felt guilty. We realized it was wrong to erect houses here. People should not be here. Human presence threatened to wipe out the wild bird population."
 The Sterlings sold their Protection Island home in 1979 and moved back to Seattle, where they became active in the campaign to stop development of the island, to set aside all of it as a bird sanctuary.
 They returned to the island last April as caretakers at the invitation of the Fish and Wildlife Service. They are volunteers, receiving no income. But they live rent-free in the home they once owned and have all their utilities paid and are provided a four-wheel-drive vehicle to use in keeping unauthorized people from coming ashore. They are the island's only full-time residents.
 The six other families who own homes on the island are permitted to keep them under an arrangement with the federal government that stipulates the structures will eventually be purchased by the Fish and Wildlife Service. These families use their homes for weekends and vacations.
 "Many people could not take the isolation but I enjoy it. I am busy all the time," Suzanne Sterling, a lifetime bird watcher said. "I maintain continuous bird-population counts. I record what the birds are doing, what they are eating. I check dead birds for banding. I make note of anything unusual."
 Once a week she spends three hours walking around the island perimeter, observing bird activity on the 150-foot-high cliffs and in the waters around the island.
 "It's never quiet. Not with thousands of birds hollering at you all the time," she laughed.

Yet, man was on the verge of moving in and squeezing out the birds.
 For more than a century, a third of the island was farmed for wheat, alfalfa and potatoes. The birds tolerated the farmers. The few farmers tolerated the birds.
 But in 1969, developers bought Protection Island, which is two miles off the Northern Washington coast, where the Strait of Juan de Fuca meets Puget Sound.
 The developers plotted 831 lots, each averaging 80 to 100 feet in the gull rookeries, nesting areas of the auklets, tufted puffins, eagles and cormorants.
 They bulldozed 7 1/2 miles of dirt roads. They put in a marina, a 2,600-foot-long grassy airstrip. Every inch of the 365-acre island was checkered with roads and home sites, except for 48 acres on the west end, the Zella M. Schultz Sea-Bird Sanctuary owned and managed by the Washington State Department of Fish and Game.
 Over the years, 570 of the lots were sold for between $2,000 and $10,000. Seven homes were built. Many property owners barged trailers out to the islands to their lots. Some erected makeshift dwellings.
 The future looked grim for the birds.
 Many wells were drilled but none produced potable water. There is no electricity on the island, no sewage system, no water to drink and there are no telephones.
 Jefferson County authorities refused to issue any more building permits because of the lack of drinking water. The Audubon Society and other nature groups launched a campaign to stop the development, to protect Protection Island and set it aside solely for birds.
 The campaign was successful. In October 1982 Congress passed and

"Can't have a Kiwi boat going out looking like that," Fay said, and set the New Zealand team to work helping the seafarer put his vessel right.

It was Fay, among others, who raised the money for Gerry and Marge Clark to fly to New York last week to collect the CCA award at the New York Yacht Club. The Antarctic voyage, largely self-financed, left the Clarks very nearly broke and he was planning to accept the plaque by mail.

Clark already has been awarded the Northland Harbor Board's Blue Water Medal in New Zealand, the Tilman Medal of the Royal Cruising Club of Great Britain and was named a Member of the British Empire by Queen Elizabeth for his Antarctic exploits.

But what he looks most fondly upon are the wild places he's been. Clark carried a revolving crew that numbered 22 by the time the voyage was over, as ornithologists and sailors joined him for different stretches. They stayed in the most astounding, severe, forgotten places.

On South Georgia, Clark watched albatrosses, which mate for life but go to sea for months at a time, reunited at their nests. What a spectacle, he said, to see them preen and flirt after a long stretch apart.

He anchored almost always in places where there was no sign man had ever been. "We've been most privileged to go to these places, really," he said.

Leopard seals and elephant seals tried to sink the inflatable in which he made the treacherous passage from anchorage to shore.

When sailing offshore, Clark followed the line of Antarctic convergence, where bitter Antarctic waters meet the warmer currents from further north, creating nightmarish weather conditions. But "there is a great upwelling there," he said, and as food comes rolling to the surface, birds gather to feed.

He always counted birds, whether they were out to sea feeding or on the islands nesting or resting, and always on the islands he looked for signs of predation from cats and rats.

A curious mission, why? "I love birds, the sea and adventuring," said Clark, "and being retired, I had the opportunity. The only way to do it was in a small boat, so you can get places where a big boat can't go. Anyway, it was all we could afford to build."

The boat, Totorore, lies safely now in New Zealand's Bay of Islands, awaiting her next adventure. Clark has finished a book, "The Totorore Voyage," rich with photos as well as his prose, which is being published by Century-Hutchinson in New Zealand and should be out in the United States next year, though an American publisher hasn't been picked.

Meantime, he's hunting a new mission in the conservation-oriented research field. A Briton, Peter Harrison, is looking at bird life on sub-tropical Pacific islands, which might be a nice respite from the cold.

Clark said "I'd love to help."

Softball Benefit

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Singer Barbara Mandrell will be the host of a celebrity softball game June 3 to benefit the organ donor program at Vanderbilt University Medical Center.

Miss Mandrell said at a news conference Monday that celebrities at the event will include Roy Acuff, Lucille Ball, Patrick Duffy, Ralph Emery, Morgan Fairchild, Frank Gifford, Bob Hope, Gladys Knight, Emmanuel Lewis, Willie Nelson, Walter Payton, Minnie Pearl, Ahmad and Phylcia Rashad, Herschel Walker, Danny White, Betty White and Oprah Winfrey.

The game will be played at Vanderbilt's football stadium. Tickets will cost $10 each, the university said.

Haley Award

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Pulitzer Prize-winning author Alex Haley will be the first recipient of the Bootstraps Foundation Award for overcoming adversity.

He will be honored for "pulling himself up by his bootstraps" at an April 14 banquet in Nashville at which 45 high school seniors will be honored and seven will be awarded college scholarships.

Haley, who was reared in the small western Tennessee town of Henning, won a Pulitzer Prize for his book, "Roots," which traced his ancestry about 200 years. He determined that his fourth great grandfather was Kunta Kinte of Gambia, West Africa, who was kidnapped in 1767 and brought to America as a slave.

Haley enlisted in the U.S. Coast Guard in 1959 as a mess boy and served for 20 years in the military before starting a free-lance magazine writing career.

Actor Returns

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ed Flanders is returning as Dr. Westphal for an episode on NBC's "St. Elsewhere" inspired by "Our Town."

The Craigs, Dr. Novino and Lizzie Westphal go to the quaint New Hampshire village where Dr. Westphal is living so he can provide insightful, third-person commentary.

Do not commit yourself to a particular line earlier than necessary. The more information you have about the hand, the more informed a decision you can reach.

You have bid well to reach an excellent grand slam. After partner's artificial and strong two-club opening bid, you made a waiting response and he showed a powerful balanced hand. When he supported your suit, you confirmed all four aces with your bid of five no trump, and partner decided that his prime cards, ruffing value and good five-card suit merited a jump to the grand slam.

The first bit of information you need is how the trumps break. So win the ace of spades at trick one and cash the ace-king of trumps. When both defenders follow, you realize that you can afford to ruff your spade loser on the table and try

Biking

By Keith Makuck

Pumping, pumping slowly up a hill, your forehead shining with sweat, muscles tight you relax at the top as you slide down a steep slope and feel your soul slipping behind you. Wheels turn faster. People blur with your speed. The wind pushes against your body like an invisible obstacle, makes you want to break free and go as fast as a racehorse striving to win. By the time your destination appears, you're all sweaty and tired, but it doesn't matter, because it's the break you desired.

Mr. Langston

By Benjie Phillips

I think my P.E. coach, Mr. Langston, deserves praise for hard work. I chose Mr. Langston because he is a nice person. Secondly, whenever you need someone to talk to, he's always around and he tries very hard to correct you from doing wrong. He really tries to help you stay healthy.

Another reason is because he's a good teacher. For example, when you have a test, he reviews over and over the test and really encourages you to make good grades and to do your best. Another reason is he works very hard in P.E. to help you improve in things you can't do too well.

Snowball Doesn't Like Winter

To Limit Or Not To Limit TV Viewing

By Sophia Barrett

I strongly believe parents should limit television viewing.

The reason I say this is because you need plenty of rest. If you don't get plenty of rest, you'll be ill in some ways. If you are ill and can't get along with the people you are around, you could lose them from being your friends.

From there you could make bad grades in school. When you are watching television and trying to do your homework, your mind goes from what you are supposed to be doing to the television. Then the next day in class, the teacher will ask you where your homework is and you will have to say you don't have it. Then you get a zero, and it may make you fail.

Furthermore, too much television would make you have poor health. While watching television, most people like to snack on food. Most of the food is not good for you and you would become overweight. Also while watching a good movie, you would forget all about going outside to play and keeping in shape. That will make you even fatter and make you feel bad.

Now to conclude, I strongly urge parents to limit television viewing time for students.

Sophia Barrett, 14, a student at Farmville Middle School receives special mention.

Andrew Johnson

Raleigh is the birthplace of the nation's 17th president.

Andrew Johnson was born to a poor family and at a very early age became an apprentice to a tailor. He later worked as a tailor making clothes in South Carolina and Tennessee.

While in Tennessee, he married. His wife taught Johnson to read and write. Johnson later became governor of Tennessee and a senator from the state.

Johnson was vice president of the United States under Abraham Lincoln. When Lincoln was assassinated, Johnson took over the presidency.

During the Johnson administration, there were many conflicts which contributed to his impeachment by the House of Representatives. When tried by the Senate, Johnson escaped dismissal by a one vote margin.

SHRIMP PECAN SALAD — North Carolinians may still enjoy shrimp and other shellfish in spite of the Red Tide, according to a foods and nutrition specialist at North Carolina State University. Shellfish contaminated by the

Seafood Lovers Can Still Feast Without Worry

By JOAN GOSPER

NCSU Agricultural Communications

Has the news about the Red Tide made you reluctant to eat seafood? "People are nervous without cause," says Dr. Nadine Tope, extension foods and nutrition specialist at North Carolina State University. "Contaminated shellfish aren't being sold in the supermarket. Once the high toxic counts were discovered, commercial fishing for shellfish in those areas was stopped."

North Carolina commercial fishermen will have lost an estimated $5 million due to the Red Tide. Fishermen not affected by the Red Tide are also being hurt because the public mistakenly believes that all seafood may be contaminated.

Dr. Tope is encouraging North Carolinians to eat seafood. "It's not just good for the fishermen, seafood is good for you," she said. She offers the following healthy and tasty recipes that take advantage of North Carolina seafood.

SHRIMP PECAN SALAD

- 1 1/2 pounds medium shrimp
- 1/4 cup thin French dressing
- 1 cup diced celery
- 2 hard-cooked eggs
- 1/4 cup chopped pecans
- Mayonnaise

Shell and devein shrimp. Boil 3 minutes in salted water. Drain. Pour French dressing over the shrimp. Set aside for 30 minutes. Mix shrimp with celery, eggs and pecans. Moisten with mayonnaise. Serve on lettuce with quartered tomatoes and whole sweet gherkin pickles. Serves 6.

Pizza — Delicious Pie Of A Thousand Faces

By Marie Bianco

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

Just what is a pizza? Translated from Italian, pizza means pie. So the term pizza pie is redundant. But as with any pie, there are infinite varieties.

Federal regulations governing pizza are a bit confusing. If pizza has a meat or a meat-and-cheese topping, it is regulated by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, which defines pizza as a dough-based meat-food product with tomato sauce, cheese and meat topping.

According to Judith Quick, chief of the standards branch of the USDA's safety and inspection service, part of the topping must be real cheese and not imitation cheese, and a minimum of 12 percent cooked sausage, 10 percent pepperoni or 15 percent raw beef must be present.

If a frozen pizza is labeled cheese pizza, it falls under the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. Although the FDA does not have a regulatory standard for pizza, the topping must contain 100 percent real cheese — imitation and substitute cheeses cannot be used unless the package is so labeled. Any kind of real cheese qualifies — mozzarella, Gorgonzola, goat or cheddar — and no minimum amount is required.

Many frozen pizzas use cheese substitutes and imitation cheeses, but it's not always easy to discover that. Look for the fine print, which will show an ingredient list that includes vegetable fats and chemical stabilizers.

These rules largely govern frozen and chilled pizza and not pizza purchased at local pizzerias, which come under the jurisdiction of local authorities. In these instances, if the menu reads pepperoni pizza, it must contain pepperoni, and if it reads cheese pizza, it must be real cheese, but no minimum amounts are required.

A MEAL ON A CRUST

Pizza is a complete food and fits into a well balanced diet, but according to a dietitian and frequent pizza eater, it may not be the ultimate family food.

"Pizza is a fun food and it is nutritious, but it should not be given to children seven days a week," said Bettye Nowlin, a Los Angeles registered dietitian. "Children's stomachs are smaller, and they fill up quickly. Pizza is a filling food, and it prevents children from eating other foods. Kids need more of a variety," she said.

Pizza hits the basic four food groups: The crust (bread-cereal), cheese (dairy), tomato sauce, green peppers, mushrooms and other vegetables (fruit and vegetable) and pepperoni et al. (meat).

Since most of the calories are fat calories — watch out for the cheese and meat — Nowlin suggests making pizza at home, where you can control the toppings. Instead of sausage and extra cheese, use more vegetables and bits of cooked shrimp, chicken and turkey. "You can make it as nutritious as you want," she said.

The calorie count for pizza varies with the ingredients, and how large a slice one considers to be a serving. According to the USDA, 1 ounce of cheese pizza is 67 calories.

BOOKS FOR THE DEVOTEE

Only a few years ago, a reliable pizza recipe was hard to find. Today almost every Italian cookbook and bread-baking book carries at least one recipe for pizza, and there are entire books devoted solely to pizza-making.

In her book, "The Joy of Pizza"

(Random House, $5.95 soft cover), Berkeley, Calif.-based baker Pamela Asquith learned many of her secrets from professional pizza-makers.

Ceil Dyer couldn't find a pizza cookbook she liked, so she wrote her own — "Pizza Cookery" (McGraw-Hill, $6.95 soft cover). And since she believes that there is more to pizza than the classic Neapolitan style, Evelyn Slomon's "The Pizza Book, Everything There Is to Know about the World's Greatest Pie" (Times Books, $14.95) gives variations from many countries.

One of the latest books on the subject has been written by Elizabeth Romer, who begins her story of pizza with the beginnings of bread. "Italian Pizza and Hearth Breads" (Clarkson N. Potter, $15.95) follows the journey of flat breads baked on hot stones to "modern" pizza, which Romer calls the emblem of the Neapolitan man in the street.

Soup Makes A Meal

By Linda Giuca

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

Those icy soups of summer — a tangy gazpacho or a delicate cantaloupe that tastes like a melted sorbet — are fine when the mercury soars. But in the dead of winter the words "steaming hot" and "stick to your ribs" are a comfort even before you dip a spoon into the soup bowl.

One advantage of the thick chowders and ingredient-laden soups of winter is that they serve as a meal. Couple a fish chowder or a herbed minestrone with thick slices of bread and some cheese, and dinner is ready.

The tastiest soups begin with homemade stocks. If you planned ahead, broth made from the carcass of the Christmas turkey is stashed in the freezer. Or maybe you made a pot of chicken soup in anticipation of winter colds.

Commercial broths are a great convenience and are rated in "Tastings" (Crown; $14.95) by Jennifer Harvey Lang. Lang, a chef and food writer, gathered other food ex-

Kathy Kolasa

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

Q. Tell us something about feeding Alzheimer's patients. S.K., and J.M., Greenville.

A. I was privileged to meet with the Alzheimer's Support Group recently to talk about nutrition for the patient. It's unfortunate that many of us face learning that a spouse, friend, parent or relative has the memory loss disease. Many children and spouses try to provide care to keep these people independent living as long as possible. Unfortunately, many of this disease's victims become worse with time. Eating and nutrition is an important part of that care. We want to prevent malnutrition; keep the person from either gaining or losing too much weight; and make eating as pleasant an experience as possible for everybody. The nutritionists at the Family Practice Center have developed a handout giving feeding hints and suggestions. If you need one, let us know.

It's important to keep the person eating independently as long as possible. This can be made easier by using specially designed dinnerware like plates with suction cups and two-handed drinking cups. Sears has a special catalog and our local medical supply stores can order items for you. Dehydration can be a serious problem, so it is important to watch the person's intake of liquids. Most of us, even when healthy, don't drink the recommended eight to 10 glasses of water or liquid daily. We hope all aging people, including those with Alzheimer's, will eat a nutritious diet. Eat two servings from the dairy group, two to three servings of protein foods (meat, fish, poultry, beans), four servings of fruits and vegetables, six servings of whole wheat and/or enriched cereals, breads, rice or noodles daily.

Alzheimer's patients seem to do better nutritionally if they are served the foods they liked before the disease. They also do better if meals are scheduled and a routine is followed.

At this time, no nutrient or food supplements have been found to relieve the symptoms of the disease. Although a daily multivitamin-mineral supplement might be helpful, if the doctor advises. We encourage caregivers of Alzheimer's patients who still live in their own home, to regularly check the refrigerator to both make sure there is food available and to remove spoiled foods.

I enjoyed meeting Judy McLawhorn, who is the volunteer facilitator for the support group, and other attendees. She's been a caregiver for many years. Call 752-7448 for more information about the support group that meets monthly on Tuesdays at noon. It is sponsored by the Mental Health Association of Pitt County. Best wishes to all who give this type of care.

New Chicken Appetizers Are A Snap To Prepare

If you love to entertain, you're probably always on the lookout for new, easy appetizer ideas; appetizers that will give a unique, posh touch to your food presentations without too much time or effort on your part.

Here's a trio of unusual chicken recipes that use convenient chunk white and dark chicken. Both types of canned chicken are packed in water with no MSG.

The first recipe, Curried Chicken Bites, is a low-calorie chicken-chutney curry filling for healthful vegetable and fruit carriers. You'll find this a delicious combination of flavors and textures with color and crunch added by apple wedges, zucchini or celery spears. You may also serve this recipe with crackers, toasted French bread or melba toast.

Chicken Quesadillas are a hot and tasty medley of cheese, chicken and chilies wrapped in fried tortillas. The four tortillas may be cut into 16 wedges and served with salsa.

The fruit and Chicken Triangles give you a creamy-crunchy aromatic blend of white and dark chicken with fruit, nuts, spices and yogurt baked in small triangles of phyllo dough. Baking time is only 15 minutes and they should be served hot.

Whatever the occasion, these three are sure to become favorites all through the year.

Pizza Is A Complete Food That Fits Into A Well Balanced Diet

 Her delightful history is filled with anecdotes of her 15-year quest for the ultimate pizza recipe. "Pizza," she said, "is such a simple food, a comforting food; it tastes amazing, is cheap and is good for you."
 The first pizzeria opened in Naples around 1830, and workmen, students, artists and writers would gather in these small shops to talk and to eat. "As competition increased," she said, "owners would stand in their welcoming doors and sing out in melodious tones the merits of their wares: pizza, 'the yeast of life,' the 'talisman of happiness,' the 'soothing unguent for the weak of stomach.'"

Italian pizza changes with the countryside. "Pizza is different throughout Italy," Romer said, "taking on the personality of the area." In Umbria, for instance, it is topped with porcini mushrooms; in Naples, it would be bufala mozzarella.
 At first glance, her recipes can be slightly confusing. General ingredients are listed in bold type on the left and the right page margins, so that one flipping through the book can choose a recipe that matches staples on hand.
 The precise amounts of ingredients are printed in a run-on fashion in italics, which makes them difficult to read. The instructions, although written in a friendly fashion, contain things like "as soon as the grill is vibrant." The book includes recipes for focaccia and savory pies and is illustrated with Romer's colorful drawings.

WHAT'S NEW

During 1987, there were more than 70 different kinds of frozen and dairy-case pizza products introduced in the marketplace, according to Lynn Dornblaster of New Products News.

After an informal taste-tasting, the best thing that can be said about many of the new commercial pizzas is that they are convenient, readily available and cheap. There is one, however, that is outstanding.

Wolfgang Puck's California Pizzas are copies of the original pizzas he devised for his Spago restaurant in Los Angeles five years ago. The 12-inch pizzas come in Sausage & Herbs (Spago's sausage, rosemary, coriander and thyme), Spicy Chicken (flavored with cilantro and jalapenos) and Four Cheeses (goat, mozzarella, fontina and Parmesan).

These frozen pizzas are made with a thin, crisp sourdough crust and topped with a variety of fresh ingredients. And they taste as close to the original pizzas as you can get when you are 2,500 miles away.

Each pizza retails for $5.99, and they should be available in frozen-food sections soon. For now, you can call (800) 453-1900 to order a minimum of four pizzas, which will arrive within 48 hours. The cost is $36, plus $11 shipping.

Manufacturers of food on a large scale are also entering the pizza field. In several parts of the country Kraft Foods is test-marketing its new Delisso Pizza Kit containing pizza dough, pizza sauce, spices, mozzarella cheese and pepperoni. It's meant to put a 12-inch pizza on the table in 20 minutes.

Some new products are from smaller companies like Mother's Food Products based in Newark, N.J., which is packaging frozen kosher pizza made in Israel; a 21-ounce poly bag containing 6 five-ounce pizzas retails for $3.29.

Also headed this way is Pastrolini, made by B and H of Harrisburg, Pa., a new 79 cent pizza-like pastry filled with tomato sauce, cheese, pepperoni and Italian sausage.

Out in Petaluma, Calif., Old Chicago Whole Wheat Pizza is made with soya kaas, a soy product that tastes and looks like cheese but is sell you a few pounds of dough ready for baking. Or you can try your hand with the following recipe.

BASIC PIZZA DOUGH

1 cup plus 2 tablespoons warm water (105 to 115 degrees)
 1 package active dry yeast
 1 teaspoon granulated sugar
 3 to 3 1/4 cups flour, preferably bread flour
 1 teaspoon salt
 1/4 cup olive oil (approximately)

1. Pour water into a warm bowl and sprinkle with yeast and sugar. Stir well using finger tips to make sure all the particles are dissolved. Set aside for 5 to 10 minutes until mixture foams.

2. Place 3 cups flour and salt in a large mixing bowl and toss lightly with a fork to combine. Make a depression in the center and pour in yeast mixture and 2 tablespoons olive oil. Mix together until well combined. Transfer to a lightly floured surface and knead until smooth and elastic, adding additional flour as needed.

3. Grease a large bowl with olive oil. Smear dough with olive oil and place in bowl. Cover with plastic wrap and set aside to rise until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour. Punch dough down.

4. To make Neapolitan-style pizza (thin crust) divide dough in half. Roll out each portion to a 13-inch circle. Sprinkle a 12-inch pizza pan (preferably dark or black metal) with corn meal. Lay the dough on the pan and press the excess dough up the sides to form a rim. Brush lightly with olive oil.

5. To make Sicilian-style pizza (thick crust) grease the bottom and sides of a 10-by-15-by-1-inch baking pan. Roll out dough to a 10-by-15 rectangle and transfer to pan. Brush lightly with olive oil.

6. Cover pizza(s) with sauce. Bake Neapolitan style in the center of a 450-degree oven for 10 minutes. Remove pizza and cover sauce with cheese and toppings. Return to oven until cheese is bubbly and crust is brown and crisp, 10 to 15 minutes longer.

7. Bake Sicilian style in the center of a 400-degree oven for 15 minutes. Remove pizza and cover sauce with cheese and toppings. Return to oven until cheese is bubbly and crust is brown and crisp, 15 to 20 minutes longer.

Chicken

 1/2 teaspoon curry powder
 Finely chopped peanuts
 In medium bowl, combine all ingredients except peanuts. Serve in various vegetable or fruit carriers such as zucchini boats, apple wedges, celery spears. Garnish with peanuts. Makes 3/4 cup.

CHICKEN QUESADILAS

1 can (5 ounces) premium white and dark chunk chicken, drained
 1/2 cup shredded Monterey Jack cheese

2 tablespoons chopped chilies
 1/8 teaspoon chili powder
 4 flour tortillas
 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
 salsa

1. In small bowl, combine chicken, cheese, chilies and chili powder. Divide mixture evenly among tortillas. Fold tortillas in half.

2. In 10-inch skillet over medium heat, in 1 tablespoon hot oil, cook 2 tortillas at a time until lightly browned on both sides. Repeat with remaining oil and tortillas.

3. Cut each tortilla into 4 wedges. Serve with salsa for dipping. Makes 16 appetizers.

FRUIT 'N' CHICKEN TRIANGLES
 2 cans (5 ounces each) premium white and dark chunk chicken, drained

1/2 cup plain yogurt
 1/4 cup chopped peanuts
 1/4 cup chopped golden raisins
 1/2 cup chopped apple
 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
 8 sheets phyllo (strudel leaves)
 1/2 cup butter, melted

1. Preheat oven to 375 degrees Fahrenheit. In large bowl, combine chicken, yogurt, peanuts, raisins, apple and cinnamon; set aside.

2. Place phyllo sheets one on top of the other, cut into 5 equal strips and cover with plastic wrap.

3. Brush one strip with butter. Place 1 teaspoon chicken mixture at end of strip.

4. Bring right corner up at right angle to form triangle. Fold again toward strip. Repeat until end of strip. Brush with butter to seal. Repeat with remaining strips. Bake 15 minutes or until golden.

Soup, Served Steaming Hot, Makes Icy Winter Days Tolerable

 parts for blind tastings of 31 staple items. Lang says she was "pleasantly surprised at the results of this tasting." She had separated canned stocks from bouillon cubes and powders because she assumed that the canned soups would be a better-tasting product.

The best canned broth, the Swanson brand, was superior to its powdered counterparts. However, Lang points out that some canned brands were unacceptable to the panel and more expensive than the powdered variety. Besides Swanson, the taste panel rated highly Campbell's, Manischewitz and College Inn chicken broth and College Inn and Campbell's beef broth. In the bouillon category, the tasters recommended Knorr-Swiss Instant Chicken Flavor Bouillon Cubes, Herb-Ox Chicken Flavor, Wagner's Beef Soup Base, Maggi Instant Beef Bouillon and Bovril Concentrated Beef Flavored Liquid Bouillon.

There is no limit to the concoctions a cook can brew in a soup pot. Vegetables and dried beans add fiber and color to a soup. Bits of cooked, leftover meat or chicken lend protein and flavor. Macaroni or rice will help to thicken a broth. Experiment with herbs and seasonings. Ground cumin and cayenne pepper can turn a plain split pea soup into a more exotic first course. Fresh basil and parsley give a summery flavor to a classic minestrone.

The stockpot both gives and receives leftovers. There is an easy way to turn cooked vegetables such as cauliflower, broccoli or mushrooms into a creamy first course soup. Puree the vegetables, add seasonings to taste and thin the puree with cream or milk. Extra portions of soup can turn up as a brown-bag lunch when packed hot in a thermos.

Some soups benefit from an overnight stay in the refrigerator, where the flavors can meld and the fat can rise to the top of the broth, where it can be skimmed away.

The following recipes are fairly simple soups and chowders that will make a meal.

BEAN AND SAUSAGE SOUP
 1/2 pound dry small white, Great Northern or navy beans
 Water
 5 cups chicken broth
 1/2 cup chopped onion
 1 teaspoon salt
 1/4 teaspoon ground cumin
 1/8 teaspoon pepper
 8 ounces smoked sausage or frankfurters, diagonally sliced 1/2-inch thick
 1 8 3/4-ounce can whole kernel corn, drained, or one 10-ounce package frozen corn
 1 cup diced red potatoes
 Chopped parsley
 Wash beans, and soak in 3 cups cold water overnight. (For quick-soak method, bring beans and 3 cups water to a boil, and boil three minutes. Remove from heat, cover and let stand one hour.) Drain and rinse beans. Add chicken broth, chopped onion and seasonings. Cover and simmer about one hour or until beans are almost tender. Add sausage, corn and potatoes, and simmer 30 minutes or until beans and potatoes are tender. Ladle into soup bowls, and garnish with parsley. Serves four or five.

FISH CHOWDER
 2 pounds white meat fish such as cod, haddock, pollock, monkfish or whiting
 1 cup clam juice
 1 cup water
 6 potatoes, unpeeled, cut into 3/4-inch pieces
 4 onions, sliced
 4 carrots, sliced
 1 bay leaf
 1/2 teaspoon salt
 1/4 teaspoon pepper
 1 teaspoon curry powder
 1 cup diced red pepper
 1 cup corn kernels
 1/2 cup milk
 1/4 pound bacon, cooked crisp and crumbled (optional)
 Cut fish into bite-sized chunks. In a large saucepan, combine clam juice, water, potatoes, onions, carrots, bay leaf, salt and pepper. Cover and simmer 45 minutes. Add fish, curry powder, red pepper, corn and milk. Cover and simmer 10 minutes. Remove bay leaf. Sprinkle individual servings with bacon garnish, if desired. Serves six to eight.

MINISTRONE
 1 1/4 cups cannellini beans
 1/2 pound fresh spinach
 1/2 of a small head Savoy cabbage
 2 carrots
 1 potato
 1 medium red onion
 2 stalks celery
 1/4 pound string beans
 3 tablespoons chopped fresh Italian parsley
 2 cloves garlic, minced
 3 slices bacon or 3 slices pancetta (Italian bacon; available in Italian grocery stores)
 1 tablespoon tomato paste
 1/4 cup olive oil
 Chicken broth
 If you use dried beans, soak overnight in cold water to cover. Drain beans, place in a saucepan and cover with salted water; partially cook beans 20 to 25 minutes. If you used canned beans, rinse them and drain well. Remove stems of spinach leaves and rinse well to remove any dirt. Wash cabbage leaves. Cut spinach and cabbage leaves into thin strips, and steam, with only the water left on the leaves after washing, until tender but not soggy. Drain and set aside.

Cut carrot, potato, onion, celery and string beans into small pieces. Chop together parsley, garlic and bacon or pancetta (Bacon will add a smokier flavor to the soup; pancetta, which is cured but not smoked, will lend a more delicate flavor).

Heat olive oil in a large, deep kettle over medium low heat. Add parsley mixture, and saute about 5 minutes. Stir in vegetables, except spinach and cabbage, and saute about 10 minutes, stirring often. Add spinach and cabbage and enough broth to cover vegetables. Stir in tomato paste, and simmer about 30 minutes. Add cannellini beans and simmer until heated through. Serve with grated Parmesan cheese. Serves six to eight.

Variations: Add 1/2 cup rice or small macaroni such as orzo or ditalini. Leftover cooked chicken or sausage can be added for a heartier soup.

CURRIED SQUASH SOUP
 1/4 cup butter or margarine
 2 cups chopped onion
 4 teaspoons curry powder
 3 pounds butternut squash, peeled, seeded and diced
 2 Granny Smith apples, peeled, cored and chopped
 4 cups chicken broth
 Salt and pepper to taste
 Seasoned croutons

In a large saucepan, heat butter until melted. Add onion and curry powder, and saute onion until it is soft, about 15 minutes. Add squash, apples and chicken broth; cover and simmer 25 minutes or until squash is tender. Puree soup, about 2 cups at a time, in a blender or food processor. Return to saucepan and season with salt and pepper. Serve hot with croutons. Serves eight to 10.
