Robertson Backers Sweep County GOP Convention

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer
Pat Robertson's so-called "invisible army" of supporters overwhelmed the Pitt County Republican Convention Tuesday night, battling through nearly six hours of parliamentary snags and vocal opposition to elect slates of 76 delegates and 76 alternates to represent Pitt County at the district and state conventions.
Robertson's strongest supporters claimed the victory shows they have the best organization, but others in the Willis Building at East Carolina University expressed disappointment over how the process was handled.

JoAnne Long, 1st Congressional District coordinator for the Robertson campaign, said she was "thrilled" with the results of the convention. "One down and 20 to go," she said, referring to the number of county conventions remaining to be held in the district.

Mrs. Long was one of a handfull of Robertson campaign workers gathered in the back of the room to observe, but some felt the visitors hindered the convention.

Howard Moye of Farmville said he paid for radio commercials for Robertson but was not elected as a delegate. He said the convention strategy damaged the Robertson campaign.

"It's hurt him, it's definitely hurt him," Moye said. "It's a so-called Christian crowd with a lynch-mob mentality. They're being led by a few mean-spirited leaders from outside of the county. It's just not good politics."

"I think some of the hardball stuff originated outside of Pitt County," said Steve Rader, chairman of the 1st District GOP. "The problem is a few people play cutthroat politics.

Ultimately that will hurt Pat Robertson.

"I think they're the ones that orchestrated this," said Rader. "When Rick Jennings was making nominations you could see them put their thumbs up or down."

Earlier in the convention Robertson supporters led the way in voting down a resolution to elect a specific number of delegates from each precinct in Pitt County. Once the floor was open for nominations, Rick

Jennings of Greenville presented a full slate of delegates

"There is a simple majority who are here for Pat Robertson tonight," Jennings said in response to objections from the floor, "and it was a vision put there by the good Lord."

Mack Beale of Greenville told the delegates all candidates had the same opportunity and Robertson supporters worked the hardest. "If

NATO Supports U.S. Arms Talks

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — President Reagan received the Western alliance's "full support" today for his efforts to negotiate new arms reductions with the Soviet Union, but was warned that a strong allied defense is still essential.

As the 16 NATO leaders met for their first summit talks in six years, Reagan sat next to British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and listened intently as NATO Secretary General Lord Carrington declared that "the alliance will not rest on its laurels."

Carrington said the alliance leaders had gathered to celebrate the new U.S.-Soviet ban on medium-range missiles, and for "charting the way ahead" as Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev pursues a peace offensive.

"One agreement which reduces some weapons, and indeed one new Soviet leader who is ready to reduce some tensions, however significant, do not in themselves remove the military capability and potential of the Soviet Union," Carrington said.

He added that NATO's "collective determination to deploy and maintain a military capacity where necessary were what convinced the Soviet Union of the better route of arms control and disarmament."

"We wish President Reagan and his negotiators well in the effort to secure an agreement on strategic arms reduction, which has the alliance's full support," Carrington said.

Reagan was the last of the leaders to arrive at sprawling NATO headquarters today for the opening session of two days of summit talks that are expected to stress alliance unity despite differences over nuclear arms strategy.

At the first closed meeting, Reagan reportedly underlined the U.S. commitment to Europe and urged his fellow leaders to guard against Soviet attempts to divide the Western alliance.

Panama Sees Anti-Noriega Strike Gaining In Strength

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Doctors put down their scalpels and industry and construction stopped today as a strike protesting the rule of Gen. Manuel Noriega picked-up support despite a violent crackdown on Tuesday.

Most businesses in the downtown commercial zone were open today, but many outside the area closed in support of the strike.

On Tuesday, security agents armed with shotguns ransacked a radio station that defied censors by broadcasting news and backing the strike. A former presidential candidate also was roughed up.

The raid by a score of state security agents shattered the uneasy calm that had marked the organized protest strike that began Monday to seek the ouster of Noriega, Panama's military strongman.

"The station was totally destroyed," said the owner, Carlos Ivan Zuniga, who ran unsuccessfully for president in 1984. "It will return to the air when there is democracy in Panama."

Many doctors appeared to have joined the strike today. Most of the main hospitals only were staffing their emergency rooms, a check of major hospitals and clinics showed.

Zuniga was arrested along with his son, Carlos, and two other people. Zuniga had managed to escape briefly when a car blocked the path of the security vehicle in which he was being driven away.

He was captured and later released and said he was unhurt. The other three were kicked, punched and beaten with truncheons.

At least three people were wounded by birdshot, none seriously.

Security agents confiscated the exposed film of several news photographers, including the Tampa Tribune's Allyn DiVito, who had a pistol held to his head until he surrendered his film.

At a news conference following his release, Zuniga called the attack an "act of official state gangsterism." He estimated damage to his station, Radio Mundial, at $100,000. The station is also known as Radio 10-FM.

Shortly before the attack, Zuniga said, the station broadcast an appeal to residents of the capital to demonstrate peacefully against the government by waving white hankchiefs, honking their car horns and banging on pots and pans each day at noon and 6 p.m.

That was in defiance of government censors' orders that the station only play music.

About 15 people were handing out anti-government leaflets outside the station when the security agents arrived suddenly in four four-wheel drive vehicles with darkly tinted windows.

The agents bolted from the vehicles, firing shotguns and revolvers in the air, quickly dispersed the leaflet distributors and charged into the station, smashing equipment and furniture.

The station is housed in the offices of the Popular Action Party, which Zuniga heads, and is in a middle-class neighborhood. At the first sounds of gunfire, about 150 neighbors poured into the street, many of them waving white banners and taunting the agents.

Young men threw rocks at the security men and set up barricades of burning trash on the street outside the station and several sidestreets. Order was not restored for several hours.

Jordan Says Schools Top Issue

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

Stressing the importance of education and tourism within the state, Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan brought his campaign for the Democratic nomination for governor to Greenville Tuesday at a fund-raiser at the Sheraton.

"Someone outside a few minutes ago asked me what the most important issue in this campaign is and I told them education," Jordan said. "There's a lot of issues in this campaign but I know what it means to me to know that my children have a good education."

Among the approximately 350 people attending the event were several local teachers who applauded Jordan's recognition of their profession.

Also in attendance were officials from the local colleges, including East Carolina University Chancellor Richard Eakin.

"When you see the chancellor of East Carolina University here tonight, it means he knows that what happens in politics plays a role in where East Carolina goes in the future," Jordan said.

Speaking with his wife Sarah at his side, Jordan said his campaign is attempting to reach out to the young people of the state.

Jordan cited a recent political endorsement from 14 student body presidents from the state's public university system as what he said was evidence of his campaign's appeal to young voters.

"We're on our way to one of the strongest campaigns that North Carolina has ever seen," Jordan said.

Jordan's fund-raiser in Greenville came less than a week after he briefly appeared at the Pitt-Greenville Airport announcing details of a proposed economic plan called the "21st Century Fund," which he says could generate new business in the state.

According to his proposal, "21st Century" would serve as a subsidiary to a proposed semi-private, semi-public corporation which would replace the state Department of Commerce.

"I'm not saying the Department of Commerce hasn't been working hard. What I'm saying is that this is 1988, not 1978 and we need to continue to try to get industry from outside the state. We need to continue to work on travel and tourism, all those things that we do well," he said.

Jordan said 70 percent of the nation's venture capital currently is directed to four states, California, Massachusetts, Florida, and Texas, while North Carolina receives only 1 percent.

"We know that North Carolina has a missing link in economic development. We're going to have to come up with a proposal like the '21st Century Fund' to see that North Carolina stays on the move," he said.

Although Jordan has received some criticism from state officials, including the governor, regarding his economic plans, Jordan says when people hear and completely understand

Possession Charge

Willie Mack Clark, 17, of 408A Roundtree Drive was arrested on a cocaine possession charge by Greenville police Tuesday.

Officers assigned to the department's special investigations section said Clark was taken into custody on Line Avenue about 7:45 p.m. on a charge of possession with intent to sell and deliver cocaine.

Investigators said nine plastic vials containing the illegal substance were confiscated at the time Clark was arrested.

New Sound System

A new sound system costing $82,000 will be installed at the 35,000-seat Ficklen Stadium at East Carolina University, officials have announced.

The ECU Board of Trustees authorized the sound system to be funded from excess revenues in the university's bond retirement reserve and similar funding of $157,500 for window modifications in Umstead and Slay residence halls.

Thefts Reported

Greenville police said three thefts were reported to the department Tuesday.

Officer L.R. Kepler said a radar detector was taken from a vehicle parked in the 200 block of Oak Street, while Officer C.A. Elks said money was taken from a wallet at the Dataflow Co. office at 223 W. 10th St. in an incident reported at 10:45 a.m.

According to Officer T.E. Nevelle, two juveniles took $25 worth of toys from Big Lots at the Buyers Market on South Memorial Drive in an incident reported at 6:29 p.m.

Property Taken

Greenville police said a car bra was taken from a vehicle parked at 717A Hooker Road early today.

Officer W.S. Heath said the theft was reported at 1:13 a.m.

Odyssey Tournament

The Coastal Regional Odyssey of the Mind tournament will be held at Memorial Gym and Brewster Building Saturday from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

The tournament is jointly sponsored by Pitt County schools, the Department of Special Education and Rural Education Institute of East Carolina University.

Over 450 students will participate, representing schools within educational districts one and two. First- and second-place winners will be invited to compete in the state tournament April 16 at J.H. Rose High School.

Registration Set

Falkland Elementary School will have kindergarten registration for the 1988-89 school year March 16 from 8:30 a.m. to noon.

Parents should carry a birth certificate and child social security number to register preschool-age children. Other information will be provided during the registration period.

FBLA Competition

Two Future Business Leaders of America members from North Pitt High School recently advanced to the state level of competition.

Angela Sheffield won first place in the District I level in the area of office procedures, while Christy Angle was screened for District I vice president and will advance to the state level.

State competition is set for March 24 through March 27 in Winston-Salem.

Club Guest Speaker

State Rep. Walter Jones Jr., D-Pitt, will speak at 6:30 p.m. Thursday to the Community Fellowship Club in Simpson.

Jones will discuss ethics in government and campaign spending limits.

Gymnastics Program

Following a recent meeting of the Parent-Teacher Organization of Falkland School, the physical education department presented a program on gymnastics, directed by coach Joey Nelson, involving students from third and fifth grades.

Carolyn Hoots was honored recently as the Falkland School Teacher of the Year during a reception given by the faculty and staff.

Renee Walden, nutritionist with Pitt County schools, visited second-graders this week and discussed the importance of the four food groups in relation to growth and development.

Edition Dedicated

The 1988 edition of Rebel, student literary and arts magazine at East Carolina University, will be dedicated to the late author Ovid W. Pierce, who was adviser to the publication for many years.

Pierce, a retired professor of English and author-in-residence at ECU, died Dec. 9 at the age of 77. He was a native of Halifax County.

Timothy D. Thornburg, editor of Rebel, said the issue will contain a history of the magazine and a eulogy to Pierce written by Dr. W. Keats Sparrow of the ECU English faculty. Sparrow delivered the eulogy at Pierce's funeral.

New Support Group

A support group has been formed for people who care for a parent, spouse or other loved one at home.

The group, which is led by Freda W. Cross of Pitt County Memorial Hospital and Susan Redding of the Creative Living Center, will meet at St. James United Methodist Church, 2000 E. Sixth St., Tuesday from 7 p.m. until 8:30 p.m.

Respite services are available for those attending. To make reservations call the Creative Living Center, 757-0303, between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. 24 hours in advance.

Precinct Session

Greenville's 4th Precinct will meet at 8 p.m. Thursday at Holy Trinity Church on Spruce Street.

Delegates to the county, district and state conventions will be selected, said Rufus Huggins, chairman.

Farmville Board OKs Demolition

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
FARMVILLE — Farmville commissioners agreed Tuesday night to use Community Development money to help demolish a building in the commercial district of South Main Street.

Dorothy Wooten, one of several owners of the building at 415-417 S. Main St. condemned by the town, asked for assistance in tearing it down. The project is expected to cost about $2,500.

Approval was given for two purchases for the Utilities Department from Rigby Electric. Some 10,000 feet of wire will be bought for $13,420 and capacitors will be purchased for $3,530 or $726 apiece. The capacitors will be used in the town's electric load efficiency program.

The board discussed ways to encourage the public to obey the one-way ordinance for Park Street. The one-way traffic was ordered to prevent vehicles from entering U.S. 258 (May Boulevard) from Park Street because it was considered to be a blind intersection.

Henry Smith, who lives near the intersection, told about several close calls he has seen and the number of people he has seen violate the one-way ordinance. It was decided to ask the state Department of Transportation to put up signs to warn about the upcoming intersection, to paint arrows on Park Street showing the direction of traffic, and to direct police to give tickets for violation of the one-way ordinance.

The town administrator asked for a go-ahead to start advertising tax liens in March. But the commissioners said they prefer to advertise in May, as has been done in the past.

Approval was given for the purchase of $7,675 worth of seating for the courtroom in the municipal building under construction. The pew-type seating is being bought from Imperial Woodwork, with Scott Sowers as the local representative.

GAPA Meeting Set

The Greenville Area Preservation Association will meet Monday at 7:30 p.m. at St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

Peter Sandbeck, restoration specialist with the N.C. Division of Archives and History, will speak about the publication process of an architectural survey.

Sandbeck's book, an architectural survey of Craven County and New Bern, will be published soon. GAPA is beginning the publication process for the architectural survey of Greenville.

Class Had Guest

Jerry Everhart, a science teacher with the Pitt County schools and a representative of River Park North, was a guest recently in Eva Scheib's sixth-grade accelerated science class at Wellcome Middle School.

Everhart discussed the importance of observation skills in both science and daily life.

The students participated as detectives in a simulated crime.

Deputy Injured

A Pitt County jail inmate was charged with resisting officers after a sheriff's deputy was injured Tuesday night while the prisoner was being transferred from one jail to another, Sheriff Ralph Tyson said this morning.

Tyson said Walter Joyner, 17, of 1903 Norcott Circle had been taken from a cell in the county jail and was being readied for transport to the Ayden jail when the incident occurred about 7:10 p.m.

Tyson said Joyner picked up a metal ashtray and threw it at one officer. But the sheriff said Deputy Gray Mayo caught the ashtray and, in doing so, cut his right hand. Several stitches were required to close the wound.

Tyson said Joyner was in jail awaiting trial on auto larceny and damage to personal property charges at the time of the incident.

Wintergreen Precinct

The Wintergreen Precinct will meet Thursday at 8 p.m. in First Free Will Baptist Church, 2600 S. Charles St.

Parking Permits

The Greenville Parking Authority has adopted a Proclamation of Honorary Citizenship for out-of-town visitors which will offer free parking in downtown public parking zones.

The certificates will be distributed by local organizations that are frequented by out-of-town guests, according to Loretta A. Lewellyn, public information officer for the city.

Ms. Lewellyn said the permit is part of an effort to promote the downtown area and goodwill with out-of-town visitors.

The certificate will be placed on the dashboard of the visitor's car and will allow the guest free parking for up to 72 hours from the time it is issued.

John Shannonhouse, GPA chairman, said the idea was unanimously approved after it was presented by a committee member who had received a similar permit while visiting another state.

NCSU Dean's List

Chancellor Bruce Poulton announced that 2,696 undergraduate students made the Dean's List during the 1987 fall semester at North Carolina State University.

To make the Dean's List, students must earn an academic average of 3.25 or higher if they are carrying 15 or more hours of coursework, or a 3.5 or better if they are carrying 12 to 14 hours.

Students from 94 North Carolina counties, 35 states and 21 foreign countries were among those who achieved the honor, Poulton said.

Poulton said that 559 undergraduates achieved a perfect 4.0 average for the semester, including 481 from North Carolina.

Area students earning a 4.0 were Martha Brown Rollins, Bethel; Judith Anne Heath, Greenville; Jeffrey Charles Moore, Greenville, and Melody C. Williams of Jamesville.

District Event

Michele Hall, a senior at D.H. Conley High School, placed second in public speaking at Future Business Leaders of America district competition recently.

Her speech was titled "FBLA: Strengthening Confidence of Students in Themselves in their Work." She will compete in state competition March 24 through March 27 in Winston-Salem.

Miss Hall is the daughter of Oscar and Fay Hall of Winterville.

QUIET PLEASE! — Door hangers, such as this one at Ayden Elementary School, are being placed on doors of classrooms in schools throughout North Carolina to promote the importance of teaching and its impact on the future, according to Barry Gaskins, public information officer of the Pitt County schools. The hangers are sponsored by the North Carolina School Public Relations Association as the first phase of a project to promote the professional image of teachers, he said. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis).

Winners Announced

St. Peter's School has selected several students to represent it during the Northeast Regional Science Fair at Elizabeth City State University March 11.

Julie Wondolowski will present her project on "Do Natural Preservatives Help Prevent Molds?" Drew Williams will present the "Effect of Centrifugal Force on Plant Sprouts," while Buddy Verzier will present "How to Tell If a Solution is an Electrolyte."

First through fourth-place winners and their grades were: Jeff Bandy, Vince Porretta, Archie Fallon and David Ruff, kindergarten; Stewart Clark, Lee Edwards, Stephen Harsany and Lawrence Duke, first grade; Arthur Berg, Ashley Orr, Todd Brishton and Chris Kerekes, second; Brian Wiegand, Lesley Coleman, Steven Shaw and Tom Bandy, third; Mindy Dellasega, John Powell, Mark Strausbach and Davis Williams, fourth; Matthew Dellasega, Margaret McPherson and Elizabeth Christopher, Tricia Verzier and Christy Coleman, fifth; Johathan Joyner, Benjamin Dennis, Jordan Markowski and Alex Easley, sixth, and Julie Wondolowski, Drew Williams, Buddy Verzier and Joel Fickling, seventh grade.

Census Activity

The Census Bureau will gather data on employment, income and migration from area residents the week of March 14-19, according to William F. Hill, director of the bureau's Charlotte regional office.

The local data will contribute to the national labor force picture to be released April 1 by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, Hill said.

In addition, data on income, work experience, and migration will be used to provide a study of median family income, poverty, and year-to-year mobility of the nation's population.

Information supplied by individuals is confidential by law and only statistical totals are published, the spokesman said.

Appointment Noted

Dr. Carolyn Hampton, professor of science education, East Carolina University, has been appointed acting assistant dean for research in the College of Arts and Sciences at ECU and will serve in the post through the fall semester.

Dr. Eugene Ryan, dean of the college, said Dr. Hampton would work to increase faculty awareness of external support for research, developmental and service programs and will be available to assist faculty members in writing grant proposals.

She will participate in long-range planning to enhance faculty research, scholarly publication and public service and serve as ex-officio chair of the research committee of the College of Arts and Sciences, Ryan said.

Professors Honored

A conference room in the department of foreign languages and literatures at East Carolina University has been named in honor of two retired foreign language professors — James L. Fleming and Marquerite A. Perry. Both are former chairmen of the department.

Course Participant

William Dunn of Pitt County is one of 40 young tobacco farmers who attended a tobacco short course conducted by the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service with the assistance of a grant-in-aid from Philip Morris USA.

Dr. Larry Sykes, director of agricultural programs with Philip Morris, and Dr. R.C. Wells, associate director, N.C. Agricultural Extension Service, presented certificates to those who completed the four-day course.

The group made an all-day bus trip to Richmond, Va., to visit the Philip Morris leaf processing, manufacturing and research facilities. All other sessions were held in Raleigh.

VFW Banquet

The Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Ladies Auxiliary will host the 1987 Law Enforcement Officer of the Year banquet today at 7 p.m.

The winner, Tim Copeland, along with six fellow officers will be honored. Dinner will be served.

Resume Medical District Planning

Pitt County's proposed Medical Park cannot and should not wait a year for protection from inappropriate development.

The county should take the Medical Park issue off the rear burner and promptly propose a strong plan for protecting the land earmarked for the park by the Medical Park Study Commission. Otherwise, the county may find itself faced with inappropriate development in an area that could yield significant, high-dollar growth.

Greenville has protected the portion of the Medical Park within its jurisdiction by stringent zoning ordinances. But a full one-third of the proposed park is in the county. Without its participation, the project is incomplete. Clearly, in the absence of county action, the effectiveness of the Medical Park could be diminished.

De-prioritizing the planning effort for the medical park is a mistake. The county has underestimated the impact of a medical park and incorrectly assessed the significance of the project. Setting aside planning for a tangible, potentially prosperous endeavor until a county wide land use plan is complete is the wrong approach.

Granted, a comprehensive land use plan is important and worthy of strong support itself, but it should not take precedence over the Medical Park.

In addition, the park should not be shaped around other land uses. That perspective is incorrect. Medical Park planning should be completed first, then fitted into the comprehensive land use plan. There is no reason this can't be accomplished.

The county area of the Medical Park is adjacent to the quickly-expanding western edge of Greenville, and for this reason can be considered prime for development. The current rapid growth of the city is sufficient evidence protection for this area is warranted.

It would be a shame if delay in addressing the issue allowed unsuitable development to blight the potential of a project with the economic impact of the Medical Park.

The county commission should direct the planning department to begin work on a Medical Park plan that places the property in question under appropriate protection. Then, it should expeditiously implement the guidelines and fulfill its responsibility to provide the community with a marketable, flexible asset.

Nomination Appropriate Move

When Greenville attorney Malcolm Howard is sworn in as a U.S. District Court judge he may be the first Pitt Countian ever accorded such an honor.

As far as is known, there has never been a federal judge who resided in Pitt County. Thus the honor and prestige of the position are obvious.

Howard was nominated for the judgeship by Republican Sen. Jesse Helms and also had the support of Democratic Sen. Terry Sanford. With that kind of backing, his nomination cleared the Senate Judiciary Committee and was ratified by the Senate in an evening session on Feb. 25. Support for his appointment was widespread in this area and it was bipartisan.

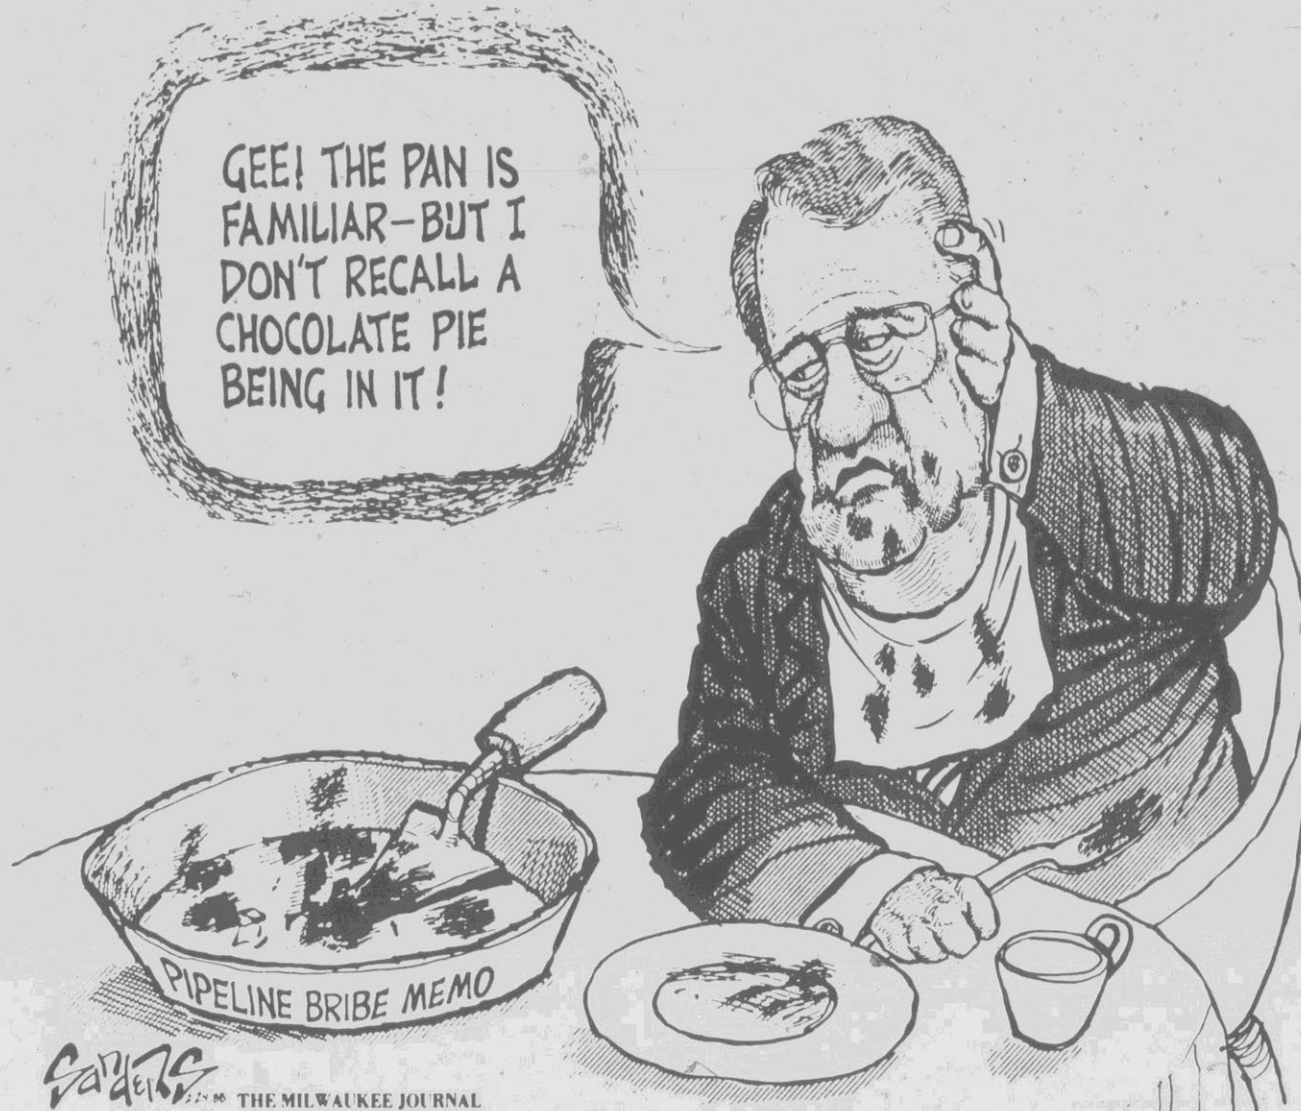

Howard anticipates being sworn in at New Bern about the middle of March and he is hoping to establish his chambers at the Federal building in downtown Greenville. It is possible, though, that he will have to maintain his offices at New Bern, the nearest regular Federal District Court.

Wherever his offices are, Judge Howard will be participating in important cases which reach federal court. His talent and judgment will be called upon to facilitate sound decisions in cases which are certain to be difficult. In light of these requirements, Howard's nomination is appropriate.

Howard has good qualifications for the position. He graduated from the U.S. Military Academy and Wake Forest School of Law. He is a decorated Vietnam veteran. He has served as an assistant U.S. attorney for the Eastern District and was an assistant special counsel to President Richard Nixon in 1974. Then he came to Greenville and private law practice.

Now he will be closing down his practice to accept one of the most prestigious appointments in our system of justice. Judge Howard will be in a prime position to make major contributions to interpretations of constitutional law.

It is significant to Greenville that a man the caliber of Howard will represent the community in the nation's federal justice system. His is an nomination that should be recognized for its soundness and integrity.

To the editor:

To anyone who supports the Intermediate Range Nuclear Forces (INF) Treaty with the Soviets:

If you were the New York City Police chief, would you sign a deal with the local Mafia boss to throw away your guns if the Mafia hit men promised to throw away theirs?

Would you sign that deal if you knew that the Mafia boss had broken practically every agreement he had ever made with anyone? And would you sign if you knew that the Mafia hit men were only throwing away a few of their pistols — but would be free under the agreement to keep the bullets and use them in their other guns?

Of course not!

But that's what the U.S. will have done if the INF Treaty with the Soviet Union is ratified by the U.S. Senate.

Without elaboration, the Treaty:

1. Lets Soviets aim warheads at the U.S. The Treaty does not call for the destruction of nuclear warheads, only the missiles that carry them.
2. Cannot be truly verified.
3. Involves the supposed elimination of Soviet missiles which we've never even seen — the Communists have never shown what they look like. Besides this, we don't know how many there are or where they're located.
4. Is made with the Soviets who've violated previous agreements 175 times since World War II — who've broken every one of their 66 treaties with other countries since 1917.
5. Is made with a man named Gorbachev, a disciple of Lenin who said, "Treaties are like pie crusts — made to be broken."
6. Leaves Europe open for conventional Soviet attack.

We should be extremely proud of Senator Helms for being against this terrible agreement!

In looking at the NBC mini-series, "Noble House," I was subjected to the following advertisements: Kellogg's, Delta, V05, Toyota, Alpo, Bayer, Loreal, Hycenda, TV Police Academy, Capri, BMW, Magnavox, tv programs and news ads, Ford dealers, Lasso, Red Lobster, Anacin, Oldsmobile, Visine, Raisin Nut Bran, Perry Mason, L.A. Law, Suzuki, Spring, Trident, Kaopectate, Crime Story, WITN, Chevrolet dealers, Yamaha, Franklin Baking, Century 21 and American Express — some of these more than once. In all, 44 interruptions by advertisements in a two-hour program. (4x44 equals 176.) I enjoyed "Noble House," but after all of the above, I could only subscribe to Kaopectate. I had all the symptoms it was supposed to cure.

However, when I read the book, there was not one single interruption and the book was fabulous with no advertisements. The pleasures of our city libraries are unlimited. We should all support and use Sheppard Memorial and Carver libraries.

Pipeline Facts Don't Flatter Meese

WASHINGTON — Revelations about Attorney General Edwin Meese III's role in a plan to build a $1 billion oil pipeline from Iraq to Jordan have been less than flattering to Meese.

They portray an attorney general who was willing to be influenced by and do repeated favors for an old friend involved in the deal. They show Meese willing to throw himself into a foreign-policy issue far outside the attorney general's usual domain. They show him receiving an unusual, handwritten letter from the prime minister of Israel, then writing an equally unusual one back.

Do they also show him breaking the law? That is what independent counsel James C. McKay is examining.

Meese's lawyers do not deny that Meese's old friend, attorney E. Bob Wallach, occasionally, perhaps even frequently, talked to Meese about the pipeline whose route would bring it close to Israeli territory. For instance, according to one Wallach memo whose contents were made available to The Washington Post, they discussed the pipeline on Aug. 7, 1985, after Wallach had spent a busy day promoting it at the offices of the Export-Import Bank and the National Security Council.

"On Wednesday evening (Aug. 7), I spent the time with my friend," Wallach said in the memo, using his usual description of Meese. "We discussed the current status. He correctly perceived, in my judgment, that there are separate groups milling around that may well need coordination..."

Wallach's brief account suggests that Meese may have served as a sort of adviser at the session. But did he? And if he did, was he violating a law?

One reason the question is difficult to answer is the character of Wallach, who met Meese in law school more than 30 years ago, and who openly traded on his friendship with the attorney general to win legal clients in recent years. Were his claims in this case just another example of self-promotion, or on this occasion did Wallach engage his old friend in activity that went beyond the law?

"That's the big issue," said one person who knows Meese and Wallach. "How much of this is bootstrapping and how much reality?"

With Wallach, it isn't easy to say. In the very memo recounting his August meeting with Meese, for instance, Wallach told of another session at the Export-Import Bank with officials of that institution and of the Bechtel Group, the giant, San Francisco-based engineering firm that was to build the pipeline.

Asked about the "security package" — the $400 million insurance plan that the pipeline's promoters were seeking from the Overseas Private Investment Corp. (OPIC) because of the danger that Israel might destroy the pipeline — Wallach undertook to impress the group in characteristic style.

"I dropped every major political name involved, understanding the effect it would have on him and his staff," Wallach said in the "personal and confidential" report to his client, Swiss financier Bruce Rappaport.

It would seem a safe bet that Meese's name was one of those dropped.

"Thereafter," Wallach reported, evidently referring to himself and the Bechtel contingent, "we went to lunch. I took them to Mel Krupin's, the 'No. 1 power' place for lunch in Washington. I am well received there. I paid for lunch."

An afternoon session was spent with a staff aide at the National Security Council (NSC). Wallach was received there because, two months earlier, Meese had arranged for Wallach and Rappaport to meet then-national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane to discuss their project. McFarlane gave it his blessing and assigned an NSC aide to expedite it. Why the attorney general intervened that way in a foreign-policy issue has yet to be explained.

After the meeting at the NSC, Wallach wrote, he spent the evening "with my friend. ... He correctly perceived, in my judgment, that there are separate groups milling around that may well need coordination. I told him I had been thinking about recommending a 'Geneva summit,' no matter where it is held, to try to utilize the combined synergy for a result."

Did Meese just nod politely while Wallach talked? Or did the attorney general do more, then and on other occasions, than he has acknowledged?

The most obvious law that might apply to these events is the 1977 Foreign Corrupt Practices Act, which prohibits U.S. citizens, companies or their agents from offering "anything of value" to foreign governments, officials or political parties for help in obtaining business abroad. The law explicitly authorizes the attorney general to take preventive action if he has reason to believe that a violation is about to occur.

McKay has authority to investigate whether a conspiracy took place in which Meese, Wallach, Rappaport and perhaps others engaged in a joint effort to violate the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act or any other law.

The most suggestive document so far made public in this matter is a "for your eyes only" memo to Meese. It began with a provocative first sentence: "I hesitate to provide the following information to you in memorandum form."

In the memo, Wallach reported to Meese that Rappaport — who had been commissioned by Bechtel to make sure that Israel did not attack the pipeline — had "confirmed the arrangement with (Israeli Prime Minister Shimon) Peres to the effect that Israel will receive somewhere between $65-70 million a year for 10 years out of the conclusion of the project."

Strength For Today

A hurricane can quickly destroy a house. So can termites, but in an entirely different manner. These insidious insects quietly and invisibly eat away the core of planks and beams, and if not controlled will finally send the building crashing to the ground.

People are sometimes destroyed by the hurricanes of great events such as financial loss, gross injustice, and disease. But more often the destruction is spread over a long period of time and is brought about unconsciously by moral termites in the form of flaws of character.

Animosity and hate, cherished over the years, are one type of termite. Covetousness, which robs the soul of all its spiritual values, is still another manifestation of the destructive power possessed and utilized by termites.

Richard Gephardt And The Vietnam Generation

Analysis

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Among '60s-generation liberals here, there is still one litmus test that every candidate for the 1988 Democratic presidential nomination must pass. The question is short and direct: What did you do to stop America's involvement in Vietnam? It may seem strange that 20 years after the issue of Vietnam ripped apart the Democratic Party at its convention in Chicago in 1968, that it is still critical to so many people. But it is. Many young people, in particular, took risks and sacrificed much during the period. Some fled to Canada while others altered career plans to redirect their country.

Accountability on Vietnam in selecting a presidential nominee is not as unusual a demand as one might expect. When Jimmy Carter was seeking his party's presidential nomination in 1976, he had to placate party liberals by saying that it was not the real Jimmy Carter who, as governor of Georgia, had hosted a day in honor of William Calley of My Lai massacre fame. Instead, Carter promised, he'd come clean with his past. As president, he said, his first act would be to pardon all Vietnam-era draft violators during his first week in office.

As the Democratic Party presidential field narrows, increasing attention is being focused on Congressman Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., a relative unknown outside House office building quarters in Washington, D.C. If Gephardt does well in the South on Tuesday, he will surely face the Vietnam question as he becomes the moderates' alternative to Rev. Jesse Jackson and Gov. Michael Dukakis.

Leadership in public life is often defined as the ability to persuade, to move people emotionally and intellectually and to give solid reason for action. Leadership is a quantum leap beyond consensus politics in which a politician waits to see how all the various voting blocs have positioned themselves before making up his or her mind.

Though many liberals were suspicious of candidate Jimmy Carter in 1976, he came through on Vietnam as president. Using the presidential authority by which Gerald Ford pardoned Richard Nixon, Carter issued a "full, complete and unconditional" pardon for anyone who had violated the Selective Service Act during the Vietnam War. This brought relief to some 10,000 young men, mostly white and middle-class, who had either fled the country or refused to be inducted into the service.

Carter's courageous act was made as a gesture to unify the country and to heal past divisions. He said he issued the pardon because "it is time for us to get over the horrible consequences of the Vietnam War and I felt that those young people have been punished enough."

In sharp contrast to Carter's better-late-than-never conversion on the Vietnam War, Richard Gephardt of St. Louis still was not ready to bury the cinders of Vietnam by late 1976. In fact, on Dec. 17, 1976, only weeks after being elected to the House of Representatives, Richard Gephardt joined 105 conservative colleagues in the House to request that president-elect Carter not issue a pardon to all Vietnam-era draft evaders.

In his first speech on the House floor on January 11, 1977 Gephardt spoke out on Vietnam and draft evaders. "Those individuals who evaded the draft or deserted our Armed Forces chose not to abide by the law," Gephardt declared. "There is a great tradition in our constitutional system for civil disobedience. But the tradition calls for participants in civil disobedience to pay the legal penalty for the disobedience so as to call attention to the immorality of the law being disobeyed... Civil disobedience without a penalty is not civil disobedience and is horribly destructive to our legal system.

"The Selective Service System law established expectations in our young men who were notified of the draft, or in fact drafted, to serve," Gephardt continued. "Those same young men respected the law, expected it to be enforced and abided by it in serving us. Sadly, thousands of these same young men died for it and in its defense and in defense of our system of government. Respect for the law, in their hearts and minds, was our strongest weapon with which to defend against the enemy."

That Dick Gephardt did not understand by 1977 the consequences of America's involvement in Vietnam or the sacrifices made by thousands of young people in stopping America's madness in Indochina, is a devastating indictment of his intellectual and leadership ability. Gephardt's record during the Vietnam era is nothing short of atrocious. If he did not sense what was going on around him during his 30s, how can he possibly be expected to lead our country during the 1990s?

Lacking Even Empty Promises

Ronald Reagan ran in two presidential campaigns, yet the current crop of candidates seems to have absorbed the lessons of only one of them — the vacuous "It's morning in America" campaign of 1984, which proved that mindlessness works in politics just as it does in entertainment. Reagan stood for re-election as if he were a national icon, a traveling Mount Rushmore. Conservatives warned at the time that it was a mistake to mount a pageant instead of an issues-driven campaign. They were right. The second Reagan administration, born of a directionless campaign, had no direction.

Like generals who robotically apply the lessons of the last war, the 1988 candidates are following in the wake that Reagan left in '84. Whoever winds up winning in the end, it's already clear who is losing: We are.

We deserve better than to have primary elections fought out over claims to propinquity. Vote for me: I live (vacation-was born) closest to you. That was Bob Dole's pitch in Iowa. With little to distinguish his position on the issues from George Bush's, the Kansas senator was reduced to telling Iowans, "I'm one of you." Bush, who has a summer house in Maine, told New Hampshire audiences the same thing. "We're neighbors," Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis shouted over the back fence. Bush, the man from everywhere, was in Houston, sporting cowboy boots, swigging beer from a bottle and boasting, "My hunting license is from Texas." We deserve better.

Whether it's Dole (to Iowa farmers) or Dick Gephardt (to Iowa farmers and Social Security recipients and displaced workers) or Dukakis (to enemies of Seabrook, the nuclear reactor on the New Hampshire-Massachusetts border) or Paul Simon (to the elderly) or Jesse Jackson (to blacks and white liberals) or Al Gore (to Southerners), pandering to narrow constituencies is the dominant note of this campaign. We deserve better.

We deserve better than to have to watch, in debate after debate, candidates magnifying trivial differences to elephantine proportions in order to mask their essential agreement on the issues. All the Republicans are against new taxes and for Contra aid and the Strategic Defense Initiative. Among Democrats, the two candidates with the least chance of winning (though who knows?), Jackson and Gary Hart, are for tax increases, but they join their colleagues in disgust on SDI and Contra aid. For the rest, the seeker after an intellectually satisfying message finds either pap — Simon wants a government that cares, Dukakis stands boldly for "good jobs at good wages," Gore and Bush both want to be the education president — or stirring political positions, like Gephardt's pledge to open foreign markets, that experts say would raise no end of hell as government policy.

Meant to inject substance, the plethora of debates has actually intensified the mindlessness of this campaign. In the past a candidate would be expected to prepare the odd Major Address on Foreign Policy, an exercise that would at least force him to think beyond his most shopworn cliches. In 1988 the candidates spend their time preparing for the next debate, a forum that puts a premium on one-liners and one-upmanship, on sound bites rather than sound ideas. We deserve better.

Reagan won hands down with an empty campaign in 1984 because that year saw a 5.8 percent surge in disposable per-capita income, the highest of any election year in modern times. Nancy Reagan could have been elected on that triumph of electionomics. (Come to think of it. . .) Four years earlier, in 1980, Reagan ran a powerful issues campaign — offering voters a real choice, not an echo. Besides Jackson, the only candidates with messages as bold in '88 have been Bruce Babbitt for the Democrats and Pete du Pont for the Republicans. Both stood for sweeping programmatic change. Both addressed real issues — the budget crisis, major reforms in the entitlement programs, education and welfare. Both dared to tell the voters what they did not want to hear. And both lost big.

Could it be that we really deserve this campaign after all?

Martin, Jordan Promise Support For Pay Raises

By SUSAN PRICE WILSON
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan says a pay raise for state employees will be the top priority in the short session of the Legislature, and Gov. Jim Martin says half the money allocated for raises should be awarded on merit.

"I am working to see that the state comes up with a compensation plan that does restore the merit system and performance evaluation," Jordan said Tuesday during a kickoff luncheon for a membership drive for the 50,800-member State Employees Association of North Carolina.

"My own experience in business and government has taught me that employees respond better and are happier when they are recognized for their good work," Jordan said. "I know how competitive the business world is, and we must reward hard working state employees so we can keep them in state government."

"I've been listening to what you as an association have been saying about the importance of restoring performance pay. I think this is very important if we are going to be competitive for experienced employees," Martin said.

He said that when he submits his 1988 budget, he will recommend that half of his proposed pay increase be awarded as merit increases.

"I hope we can re-establish that standard as you as an association have requested," Martin said.

Jordan said the revenue available for raises could be threatened by the U.S. Department of Labor's refusal to let the state use 17-year-old school bus drivers after April 1. Martin, Jordan and other state officials met Tuesday afternoon to discuss the situation, which Jordan said could cost the state some $30 million.

Martin said his administration has protected state employees by cutting in half the number of workers exempt from the State Personnel Act.

"...In my 1984 campaign, I pledged to protect career state employees and I've kept that promise. It is ironic that the administration with the cleanest record on that regard is the one to get sued..." Martin said.

"The truth is that state employees are no longer pressured to change their affiliation or to make campaign contributions — other than to the candidate they endorse."

Martin said state employees have also voiced concern about day care facilities, and announced that efforts were under way to establish a day care center at Dorothea Dix Hospital's Broughton Building.

"Although the state will provide the facility... the cost of operation of the center will be proposed to be the responsibility of the state employees who keep their children there," Martin said.

He said his administration would ask the General Assembly for $250,000 for renovations of the building.

Prisons Near Legal Cap

RALEIGH (AP) — It is "very likely" that special powers will be invoked Thursday to reduce the state's prison population, North Carolina Correction Secretary Aaron Johnson told Gov. Jim Martin and his cabinet today.

Under provisions of the Emergency Prison Population Stabilization Act of 1987, steps must be taken to ease prison overcrowding if the population of the state's prison system exceeds 17,460 for 15 consecutive days. Under that legislation, the prison population must be reduced to under 17,280 within 60 days.

Johnson expects to tell Martin that the "cap" has been breached Thursday morning. This will come after the population for March 2, the 15th day, is tabulated.

Republicans Still Lack OK To Open March 8 Primary

RALEIGH (AP) — U.S. Justice Department officials say they have not approved a plan by the North Carolina Republican Party to open its primaries to unaffiliated voters, and doubt the party can win approval by the March 8 primary.

But state Republican chairman Jack Hawke said the party was working with the Justice Department and the White House to try to get approval in time for next week's GOP presidential primary.

"If there is any way we could let these people vote, we will do so," Hawke said. "If there is no legal way, it is not us that is calling it off, it is a law that is keeping them (unaffiliated voters) from voting with us."

The federal Voting Rights Act requires approval of the Justice Department before the state's 132,000 unaffiliated voters can cast ballots in the Republican primary.

"As of today (Tuesday), we have not received a submission from the Republican Party," Justice Department spokesman Deborah L. Bursion-Wade told the News and Observer of Raleigh. "If unaffiliated voters vote next Tuesday it would be a violation of Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act. If this is carried out, I think there may be some problems."

About 4 percent of the state's registered voters are not affiliated with a political party.

Hawke said party officials had assumed that their plan to open the primary had been approved when the Justice Department gave clearance to enabling legislation passed last year by the General Assembly.

The federal Voting Rights Act of 1965, which was enacted to protect the voting rights of minorities, applies to 40 of North Carolina's 100 counties. It requires the Justice Department to approve any changes in election procedures, including those involving primaries.

"Any violation in the Voting Rights Act is not taken lightly by the Justice Department," Ms. Bursion-Wade said. "We would examine the remedies available to us under the law."

Those remedies include challenging the votes of unaffiliated voters, which could affect the outcome of the primary, she said.

The General Assembly last summer approved legislation giving political parties the option of opening their primaries to unaffiliated voters.

State Elections Director Alex Brock said the Justice Department approved the law in October.

But the Voting Rights Act also requires political parties to submit changes in their elections procedures — a requirement that state GOP officials missed.

The Republican Party decided in November to open the presidential primary and the May 3 state primaries to unaffiliated voters. But the state Democratic Party decided not to make any changes. Only registered Democrats can vote in that primary.

Cadet Death

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The death of a state Highway Patrol cadet Feb. 4 resulted from a virus-caused heart ailment rather than blows he received during a boxing exercise.

"His death was not due to boxing itself but to the serious underlying illness," Dr. John Butts, the state's chief medical examiner, said Tuesday.

W.E. Bayless III, 23, died Feb. 5, a day after he collapsed during a boxing exercise at the Patrol Training Center.

Gore's Father Says Polls Ignore Strong Points

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

The father of Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr. says his son will finish strong in the South because of his long list of endorsements, despite polls that show Gore lagging in Democratic support.

"The influence of leadership and the influence and effect of political organization are all completely ignored by the public opinion polls which are printed so widely and mislead so greatly," Albert Gore Sr. said at a Raleigh news conference.

Gore, himself a former senator, said his son had "the endorsement of 10 times as many leaders of the South as the others combined."

A Feb. 21 poll taken by the Charlotte Observer showed Gore, who has staked his candidacy on a strong performance in his native South, supported by 11 percent of the 402 North Carolina Democrats surveyed between Feb. 17 and Feb. 20.

The poll suggested Gore's support in the state had slipped since an earlier survey taken Feb. 1-4, when he had 16 percent backing. The later survey, which had a 4.9 percent margin of error, showed Jesse Jackson with 21 percent support, Michael Dukakis with 18 percent and Richard Gephardt with 13 percent.

Gore, who has been endorsed by Sen. Terry Sanford, former Gov. Jim Hunt and a variety of legislators and local officeholders, picked up the backing of a group of veterans' organization leaders Tuesday. The veterans said they were acting on their own behalf since their groups are non-partisan.

Meanwhile, the Gore camp said it would begin airing statewide two radio advertisements — one featuring Hunt and Sanford and the other country musician Johnny Cash.

In Chapel Hill, Democratic candidate Gary Hart urged University of North Carolina students to support his "National Service" program under which youngsters eventually would choose between military and civilian service.

Hart challenged the students to show theirs was not the "me" generation, but the "we" generation.

"Your generation can lead us to a new democracy and a political life that asks only one question: What is in the best interest of the nation," he told a packed audience in the student union.

The one-time front-runner for the Democratic presidential nomination, now waging a darkhorse quest in the face of repeated defeats in the early primaries and caucuses, said he viewed continuation of his campaign as a form of public service.

In the Republican presidential race, U.S. Sen. Bob Dole campaigned

Tuesday at Duke University and is scheduled to return to the state Friday for a breakfast appearance in Asheville.

Vice President George Bush's wife, Barbara, said while campaigning in Hendersonville her husband will come to Asheville Saturday, but state campaign officials said Bush's schedule is still up in the air.

"We have put together a wish list of places we would like to go, but there's no way (Bush) could get to them all even if he doesn't sleep," said Bob Schuler, a spokesman for Bush's campaign in the state.

"Asheville is certainly one of those if we can get things together."

Harris-Teeter Buying Big Star Stores

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Harris-Teeter Super Markets says it will purchase 52 Big Star stores in North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia, and will force Big Star's 2,000 workers to reapply for their old jobs.

"We will invite anyone in the labor force to apply for those jobs, and we'll hire based on qualifications and experience," Edward Dunn, vice president of Harris-Teeter said Tuesday.

Dunn said the Big Star stores probably would close this month and reopen under the Harris-Teeter name in May at the earliest.

The sale involves 43 North Carolina stores. The value of the deal, which is expected to be completed in early April, was not announced.

Harris-Teeter said it would buy the fixtures, leasehold improvements and machinery and equipment of the stores and a warehouse in Raleigh from the Grand Union Co.

U.S. Judge Fines Church Members In Child Exploitation Work Case

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A federal judge has issued a stinging rebuke of Shiloh True Light Church of Christ for exploiting children and cited church members for contempt of court for violating federal child labor laws.

U.S. District Court Judge Robert Potter Tuesday also ordered two companies owned and operated by church members to pay $203,272 to cover the federal government's investigation and litigation expenses and to pay employees back wages and interest.

The actions further set back the church's campaign to stop what it calls government interference with its religious beliefs.

Potter ruled that church members and the two companies — McGee Brothers Co. Inc. of Union County and Wendell's Woodwork Inc. of Mint Hill — violated his October 1987 order to obey federal child labor laws.

The judge levied his sharpest criticism on McGee Brothers. "The shenanigans defendants have engaged in throughout this action with the help of their attorneys," Potter wrote, "is a shameless effort to continue their exploitation of children in a commercial enterprise despite the laws of this country, which have been well settled for decades, that oppressive child labor is not to be tolerated."

"If defendants were allowed to prevail in their efforts to evade their statutory obligations not to employ oppressive child labor it would invite further mischievous schemes by other employers to avoid the burdens of a civilized society."

In separate judgments, Potter ordered both companies again to obey the laws and warned that McGee Brothers would be fined $10,000 and Wendell's Woodwork $5,000 for each day the companies remain in contempt of his order.

In addition, Potter said Wendell's two owners — Wendell Long and Herbert Long — would be fined $500 each per day that they remained in contempt of his order. The five brothers who own McGee Brothers face fines of $1,000 per day each if they remain in contempt.

Potter also ordered McGee Brothers to pay $133,890 in back wages and interest to employees who had not been paid minimum wages and for overtime work.

Spokesmen for the companies were not immediately available for comment.

Rommie Purser, the church's minister, vowed Tuesday to take the church's fight all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court.

"We feel like our freedom of religion and freedom of worship has been violated," Purser said. "We just plan to go on to the Supreme Court and see if we aren't being denied freedom of worship."

IN THE STATE

Presbyterians

DURHAM (AP) — A newly organized synod of the Presbyterian Church concluded a two-day meeting Tuesday after approving a proposal for a 30-member council.

The structural design adopted by the Synod of the Mid-Atlantic was written by a 20-member committee, and calls for the establishment of several committees. The synod also will have an executive and three associates executives.

The new synod, a governing body of church officials, covers five states — North Carolina, Virginia, Delaware, Maryland, part of West Virginia and the District of Columbia. It will have 349,000 members, 48 percent in North Carolina.

On Monday, the synod selected its name and voted to locate its office in Richmond, Va.

furniture customers of about $750,000 were caught trying to withdraw money from a bank, the FBI said.

Mark Paul Sarno, 28, and his wife Cindy Lee Sarno, 30, both of Greensboro, N.C. and Clark, N.J., were arrested Tuesday after trying to withdraw a fraudulent deposit from a Barnett Bank, said FBI spokesman Paul Miller.

Miller said the Sarnos were convicted previously of embezzling $186,000 from Lincoln Federal Savings and Loan in Scotch Plains, N.J., to pay the husband's loan shark debts.

While on probation, they set up a nationally advertised business called L'Ambiance Furniture in Greensboro, which promised up to 50 percent discounts on items from major manufacturers.

They failed to fill about $500,000 in customers orders, and in January of 1987 borrowed $250,000 from Union National Bank in Greensboro, supposedly to buy furniture. Instead, Miller said, they used the money for personal expenses, including a $31,000 pool for their home.

Tanker

HOFFMAN, N.C. (AP) — A tanker carrying propane slipped off its axle Tuesday, blocking U.S. 1 in both directions near the small town of Hoffman in Richmond County.

Authorities said they did not know how many gallons of the liquid the truck was carrying. The truck is owned by Suburban Propane in Rockingham.

The accident occurred between noon and 12:30 p.m. By 5:30 p.m., authorities were in the process of moving the tanker.

"The highway patrol and the fire departments were called in as a precautionary measure (until the truck was moved)," said Hoffman Fire Chief Ray Robbins Jr. "There was no fire involved, no injuries."

Alberly Trial

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A Davidson County man was sentenced to 35 years in prison Tuesday after he pleaded guilty to slashing an elderly female shopkeeper across the throat last spring.

Donald P. Alberly, 32, admitted robbing and slashing Jessie Poole Grubb, 71, shortly after noon on April 22 in the country store she had run for 37 years.

Capt. Billy Ray Nail testified in Davidson Superior Court that Alberly pushed Mrs. Grubb against the meat counter and hit her in the face and chest. Then Alberly wrapped his hands in socks, picked up a butcher knife lying nearby and cut her throat, Nail said.

Pilot Sought

CHERRY POINT, N.C. (AP) — Rescuers in boats and helicopters searched today for a Marine pilot following the crash of a Harrier jet during a training flight near Cherry Point Marine Air Station.

"We don't know exactly where he crashed," 1st Lt. Robert V. Stone of the joint Marine-Navy public affairs office said Tuesday night. "We have boats and helicopters searching the area. There are other planes in the area, but we don't know if anyone saw it. No one saw a chute."

The AV-8B Harrier II, an attack aircraft, which belongs to the Marine Attack Squadron 5412 at Cherry Point, crashed at 2:45 p.m., about 15 miles northeast of the Cherry Point Air Station, according to Marine Sgt. Lissa Sauve.

The aircraft went down in a remote, swampy area northwest of the air station near Piney Island, a bombing range used frequently for training, officials said. The Neuse and South rivers run alongside the island.

Martin Appeals Driver Ban But Says State Will Comply

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin has asked the U.S. Labor Department to reconsider its order to replace 2,085 17-year-old school bus drivers, but says the state will comply with the April 1 deadline, even if means parking buses.

"Your action will undoubtedly result in the elimination of up to 20 percent of our 13,000 school buses from service thereby denying transportation to school for over 100,000 public school children," Martin wrote in a letter to U.S. Secretary of Labor Ann McLaughlin Tuesday.

In his letter, Martin asked Mrs. McLaughlin to reconsider the order and to grant him a conference to present the state's case.

But the Department of Labor already had sent Martin a letter Tuesday that formally affirmed its order, spokesman Linda Tavlin told the News and Observer of Raleigh.

"It is my understanding that at this point this decision is final," Miss Tavlin said. "We understand it is going to be a difficult transition, and we understand their situation, but this isn't a new problem and the state, knowing we would enforce the law with an investigation, should not have violated the conditions on the extension."

Martin disagreed with the Labor Department's conclusion that there were widespread violations of federal conditions for allowing the state to use student drivers. For example, he said, 14 of the 80 violations found in 10 counties involved the absence of health certificates lost in a Johnston County school fire.

But Miss Tavlin said records from the state Division of Motor Vehicles indicated there actually were hundreds of certified bus drivers who had moving traffic violations and thus fell short of federal standards.

"I believe we will make it in some kind of way, but it can't be very pretty," Martin said Tuesday after meeting with other state officials to discuss the state's options.

Martin met privately for 75 minutes in his office with state school board Chairman Howard Haworth; Speaker of the House Liston Ramsey; D-Madison; Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan; James O. Barber, controller for the state Board of Education; and other leaders.

Martin said the state would see how Mrs. McLaughlin responded to his most recent request before considering legal action. Meanwhile, state leaders agreed to encourage the state's congressional delegation to push for legislation to allow the use of student drivers through the end of the school year as U.S. Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., has proposed.

The state cannot raise money to increase drivers' wages by April 1, but Haworth said the Board of Education's business committee Tuesday would decide how much the state should increase bus driver salaries and benefits so it can attract adult drivers for next fall.

The committee in February recommended increasing hourly pay from $4.91 to $6.50 and giving drivers health, social security and retirement benefits, which would cost $27.4 million.

The full board will vote on a proposal for bus drivers Thursday, and Martin said he would include whatever the board proposed in his budget request to the General Assembly in June.

Local officials say they are struggling to meet the deadline, but doubt they can replace all 17-year-olds with adults.

"We have been actively recruiting, and it has turned up no leads at all," Emmett Floyd, superintendent of Catawba County schools, said Tuesday. Catawba County's three school systems must replace 34 of 195 drivers.

Floyd said Tuesday he will try to recruit 18-year-old students, adults employed with the school system, part-time cafeteria workers and teacher assistants.

He said the system may park 10 high school buses and consolidate the county's elementary and middle school routes to cut the number of drivers needed.

"We were just absolutely appalled that they would change the ruling after we were led to believe we were going to be able to finish the year," Floyd said. "We were getting our bus driver's training ready for the end of the year, then the rug was jerked from under us."

DMV Tightens Procedures In Cases Of Multiple DWI

RALEIGH (AP) — State officials say a sweeping new program will tighten requirements for restoring driver's licenses to people convicted of multiple drunken-driving offenses.

"The message we are sending to repeat DWI offenders is simple," Bill Hiatt, commissioner of the state Division of Motor Vehicles, said Tuesday. "Multiple DWI offenses will result in the loss of driving privileges. And these privileges, once lost, will be difficult to regain."

The new policy will require drivers whose licenses have been revoked for a second driving-while-impaired conviction to present convincing evidence that they will never again drink and drive as a condition of gaining limited privileges to operate a motor vehicle.

Those with three convictions must meet even tougher standards, including appearing with witnesses before a three-member panel to prove they have corrected their drinking and driving habits.

"Some drunken drivers have been getting their licenses back that ought not to have them," said John Simmons, chief of state for Attorney General Lacy Thornburg. "The attitude among drunken driving offenders has been that their licenses would be automatically restored, but that's not the case."

The policy represents the "most significant step ever taken by this state to keep repeat offenders off our public highways," Hiatt said.

Effective immediately, Hiatt said, license restorations will be on a conditional basis. Driving will be limited to daylight hours only, except for people who must drive to and from work at night, and annual probation hearings will be conducted to monitor compliance with applicable restrictions.

A repeat offender whose license is restored under the policy will automatically lose his license for any alcohol-related violation of restrictions, and they will not be eligible for further restoration for a period of four years.

Under the Safe Roads Act, an individual convicted of a second DWI offense is given a four-year license revocation, which may be restored after two years. Under a revocation for a third offense, an individual may seek to regain his license after three years of revocation.

The policy reflects changes in the law made by the General Assembly last year.

Shultz Will Keep Up Peace Bid Although Few Gains Evident

By NORMAN KEMPSTER
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

LONDON — Secretary of State George P. Shultz conceded Tuesday that he made only imperceptible progress in the first round of his Middle East peace shuttle, but aides said that he would probably return to the region in two days to continue the effort.

Shultz, who conferred for three hours in London with Jordan's King Hussein, said that his proposal was "the only game in town" because all other peacemaking efforts had broken down.

Asked if he could see any narrowing of differences between Israel and its Arab adversaries on how to get peace talks started, Shultz said, "I can."

He added quickly, however: "I don't know that I can describe them in any way that would make them perceptible to anybody else. There are possibly some ways to get at it, but we'll see."

Nevertheless, Shultz said that all sides in the complex conflict had urged him to continue his mediation effort.

"Nobody has signed up to our proposals but everybody wants us to keep working, so we'll keep working," he said before leaving Tel Aviv.

Following his talks with Hussein, Shultz flew to Brussels, Belgium, to join President Reagan at a summit meeting Wednesday and Thursday of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

U.S. officials said that Shultz would probably be back in the Middle East Friday and Saturday, although Shultz said that Reagan would make the final decision on the next step.

The most obvious internal disputes over a Mideast peace proposal are taking place in Israel, where Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and his rightist Likud Bloc have opposed key parts of the Shultz proposal, while Foreign Minister Shimon Peres and his centrist Labor alignment have sought to encourage the American initiative.

Details of the plan have not been disclosed officially, but it is known to call for a brief period of limited self-rule for Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, followed within six months by the start of negotiations over the final status of the territories Israel seized in the Arab-Israeli war of 1967.

Shamir, who has said that Israel is prepared to permit limited self-rule in the territories for a five-year trial period, objects to the latest U.S. plan because he believes that it moves to final negotiations before the "autonomy" plan can receive a fair trial. But Arab leaders oppose any arrangement that would not move promptly to a final settlement.

Shultz told reporters last week that he was carrying a carefully balanced package proposal that he was unwilling to change in any fundamental way. But he said Tuesday that he had not yet put the proposal into writing, though he planned to do so shortly.

Hussein was the last of the key players in the conflict to meet with Shultz, except for the Palestinians. Most residents of the West Bank and Gaza Strip have said that they consider the Palestine Liberation Organization to be their representative, but the United States and Israel have rejected any dealings with the organization.

Shultz invited 15 hand-picked Palestinian moderates to a meeting in predominantly Arab East Jerusalem last week. But the Palestinians boycotted the meeting under pressure from the PLO. Shultz said that he remains ready to talk to Palestinian representatives, but he said that he had already communicated his views to them.

He said that he showed his good faith by agreeing to go to East Jerusalem, "a site where a U.S. secretary of state has never been willing to go before."

Britons Eagerly Awaiting Prospect Of Big Tax Cuts

By COTTEN TIMBERLAKE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — When Chancellor of the Exchequer Nigel Lawson steps before the House of Commons on March 15, he is expected to unveil one of the rarest of British commodities — a budget surplus.

The expectation is so real that already there is widespread talk of a massive tax cut — and also widespread criticism of the government's reputed plans for the extra money.

"The budget on March 15 should be the most momentous of Britain's postwar history," the Economist magazine said.

Anything could happen in the next two weeks, and the budget may turn out very different from what is now forecast.

But for the moment, analysts are assuming a tax cut is in the works, and the government's critics are attacking the budget as a gift to the rich at the expense of the poor.

Last autumn the government announced its planned expenditures of $278 billion for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1989, and the spring Budget Day is when it discloses how it will raise the money.

For the first time in almost 20 years, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government might produce a budget surplus for the current fiscal year, which ends March 31, said a Treasury spokesman, who wasn't identified, in accordance with British custom.

The government expects to outperform its most recent forecast of a deficit of $1.77 billion, which was down from a previously forecast deficit of $7.1 billion, the spokesman said.

"It will probably turn out to be a surplus," said Diane Coyoe, economist for the private forecasting firm DRI Europe.

"Very definitely a surplus," said Anthony Thomas, an economist at the London investment firm Kleinwort Grieveson Ltd.

The surplus will be $2 billion to $5 billion, the economists estimated.

If they are right, the surplus will have resulted from the government's tight grip on spending, its buoyant tax receipts and proceeds from its giant and continuing privatization program of selling off to the public billions of dollars' worth of state-owned companies.

The surplus has sparked speculation that the government will slash its top income tax rate of 60 percent to 50 percent or even lower in what would be the biggest cut in almost 10 years.

The cut, which applies to people earning more than $72,900 annually, would be effective in the fiscal year beginning April 1.

Thomas said there was much speculation that Lawson would cut it below 50 percent. "We suspect he will want to do those cuts over an extended time period. It will seem like too much of a giveaway (otherwise)."

But the Times of London said Lawson might slash the rate to as low as 35 percent, adding: "The chancellor has been stung by criticisms from his own party that President Reagan's tax reforms in the U.S. have overtaken Britain with a simplified system...."

Shelling Continues

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraq said it pounded Tehran with surface-to-surface missiles today for a third straight day and fired two missiles at Iran's holy city of Qom, seat of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's religious hierarchy.

Iraq said it launched two long-range missiles against the Iraqi capital of Baghdad early today.

One Iranian missile hit Baghdad at daybreak, killing or wounding several civilians, including women and children, and destroying houses, shops and cars, the official Iraqi News Agency said without elaborating on the casualties.

Iraq said it had sent 18 missiles into the Iranian capital since Monday, including two today that Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency said wounded 15 civilians, among them eight women and five children. Altogether, it says it has launched 20 missiles into Iran.

It was the first time Iraq has used surface-to-surface missiles on Tehran, a city of 6 million, since the Iran-Iraq war began in September 1980. It marks the worst escalation of the 3-year-old "war of the cities" that has killed thousands of civilians.

Jesus Postmark

LONDON (AP) — The Post Office today began delivering mail bearing the postmark "Jesus is Alive!" throughout Britain, a move that Jews, humanists, and others called offensive to other beliefs.

"It is absolutely outrageous," said Martin Horwood, spokesman for the British Humanist Association, a national organization for the non-religious.

"Imagine the furor if we had asked to have 'Jesus is Dead' printed on hundreds of millions of letters. We might think these things privately, but they should not be forced on everybody else in such an insensitive way," he said.

Horwood said he is writing to Post Office chairman Sir Brian Nicholson asking for the postmark to be withdrawn.

Christian evangelist Paul Slennet privately financed the arrangement with the Post Office. Slennet, 41, sells Christian literature at two bookstores in Southend-on-Sea, east of London. He said God told him to buy the postmark.

SOLDIERS BLOCKED — Doctors at the Ramallah Hospital on the Occupied West Bank blocked entrances of the hospital Tuesday in a futile effort to keep Israeli soldiers outside. The soldiers shoved the doctors aside and stormed the hospital after firing tear gas into an emergency room reception area. (AP Laserphoto)

Soldiers Tear Gas Hospital Patients

RAMALLAH, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Israeli troops hunting for Arab protesters stormed a hospital compound today and fired tear gas into the reception area of an emergency room, driving out dozens of elderly patients, doctors said.

Palestinians hurled firebombs and troops fired tear gas in scattered clashes throughout the night in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, where violent protests have occurred daily since Dec. 6.

Violence erupted for the second consecutive day at the government-run Ramallah Hospital about eight miles north of Jerusalem, the latest in a recent series of intense clashes at medical facilities in the occupied territories.

About a dozen Israeli troops arriving at the hospital were confronted by rock-hurling Palestinian protesters who blocked a street outside the building. One smoking cannister landed in the reception area of the emergency room and another landed in a hospital courtyard, doctors said.

Two physicians donned gas masks and others held onions to their noses to blunt the effects of the tear gas, one doctor said. About 30 patients, including elderly people, were driven outside.

"Even the doctors couldn't breathe, so imagine the effects on the patients inside, many of whom are seriously ill," said a doctor who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Arab doctors say injured Palestinians often are reluctant to come to hospitals for fear of being arrested by Israeli authorities while under treatment.

But hospitals also have often become refuges for Arab demonstrators fleeing arrest after violent confrontations with soldiers.

Soldiers detained three youths outside the hospital, including one with a gash on his forehead and bleeding from the shoulder. He was seen being dragged by a soldier.

On Tuesday, three soldiers had burst into the same hospital, fired tear gas and rubber bullets and struck two doctors with their rifles as they looked for demonstrators, doctors there said.

An army spokesman denied soldiers entered the hospital or beat doctors. He said soldiers detained two Palestinians, but that the youths were taken into custody at the entrance to the hospital.

In the occupied Gaza Strip, officials at the Shifa Hospital said Israeli soldiers entered the facility overnight and arrested two Arab demonstrators accused by Israel of trying to run over a soldier with their car.

Quake Hits Hawaii

VOLCANO, Hawaii (AP) — A moderate earthquake hit the south flank of Kilauea but was unrelated to the volcano's continuing eruption that began five years ago, scientists said.

There were no reports of injuries or damage from Tuesday night's quake, according to police.

The tremor measured 4.5 on the Richter scale, said Paul Delaney, a geologist at the U.S. Geological Survey's Hawaiian Volcano Observatory.

The earthquake, which struck at 10:42 p.m. (3:42 a.m. EST today), was centered six miles below the surface of the volcano to the southwest of where lava has been pouring from the Earth since the summer of 1986, Delaney said.

The quake was not strong enough to generate a Pacific-wide tsunami, or tidal wave, according to the Pacific Tsunami Warning Center in Honolulu.

Bush, Dukakis Win In Vermont

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — Republican George Bush and Democrat Michael Dukakis, on New England home ground, triumphed in Vermont's "beauty contest" primary, but Jesse Jackson and Bob Dole had reason to celebrate as well as the presidential pack headed into the final days of the Super Tuesday campaign.

"Our message continues to win," Jackson exulted after finishing a strong second in Vermont, which has only a tiny black population. Jackson garnered 26 percent to Dukakis' 57 percent.

Dole, outspent and out-organized, nonetheless made an impressive showing, gaining 39 percent to Bush's 49 percent in what his campaign called the vice president's "back yard." Bush has a summer home in Maine.

Still, the vice president pronounced himself pleased.

"This win gives us three out of three in New England, and I'm hopeful we can be as successful this Saturday in South Carolina and on Super Tuesday," said Bush, who was campaigning in Florida.

No delegates were at stake in the Tuesday primary. Delegate selection begins at local caucuses next month and representatives of the Dole campaign said they would work now on organizing for the caucuses.

Dukakis, fresh from a weekend win in Maine's Democratic caucus, was buoyant about his victory.

"It's terrific, we're rolling 'em up," said the Massachusetts governor, who was campaigning in Baltimore. With a strong organization and the endorsement of Gov. Madeleine Kunin, Dukakis had been expected to do well here.

Rep. Richard Gephardt, who has been Dukakis' chief opponent in some recent contests, trailed with 8 percent. Gephardt backers said his poor showing was caused by a lack of spending in the state by his national campaign.

"Dukakis and Jackson both made a decision to compete," said Lt. Gov. Howard Dean, Gephardt's state chairman. "You can't overcome national organizations with just a Vermont organization."

Some political observers had predicted a tight race between Jackson and Gephardt for second place, but Jackson stole the show. He ran a strong second in the state's largest city of Burlington and actually beat Dukakis in 27 communities and tied him in two.

In unofficial results, with 100 percent of the state's 262 precincts reporting, Dukakis had 28,244 votes or 57 percent; Jackson 13,030 votes or 26 percent; Gephardt 3,968 votes or 8 percent; Simon 2,596 votes or 5 percent and Hart 2,052 votes or 4 percent.

Bush received 23,550 or 49 percent; Dole got 18,636 or 39 percent; former television evangelist Pat Robertson 2,447 votes or 5 percent; Rep. Jack Kemp 1,866 votes or 4 percent.

Congressman Says Robertson Is 'Chickening Out' Over Suit

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former congressman who has accused GOP presidential contender Pat Robertson of ducking combat duty in Korea said today the candidate is "chickening out" by trying to drop his libel suit.

"He's chickening out of the trial just like he chickened out 37 years ago," said former Rep. Paul N. McCloskey Jr., R-Calif. "The courtroom's a great place to learn the truth. ... Now that he's up with the truth to be told and testimony under oath, he's backing off."

Robertson, who faced a trial date on Super Tuesday — the day 20 states hold primaries and caucuses, said Tuesday he wants to drop his $35 million libel suit against McCloskey.

"In order to compete in that trial, I would have to break off my campaign today and run the risk of losing Florida, Texas, South Carolina and other parts of the South," Robertson told reporters in Sarasota, Fla.

"That was an impossible decision for me to make and an unfair one," he added.

But McCloskey, who insists Robertson invoked his late father's political influence to avoid combat in the Korean War, said he will oppose the former television evangelist's request to drop the case.

"I think the truth ought to be told," McCloskey said on "CBS This Morning." "I don't know any better place to get the truth than in the courtroom. He invoked the process, he ought to go through with it."

McCloskey said he fears that an individual who avoided combat in his youth may try to make amends in the White House.

"You know when you get a president in office who has evaded combat in his youth and all his advisers are saying look tough against the Soviets ... I think there is a tendency to try to prove your manhood late in life," McCloskey said.

The case involves a 1986 letter that McCloskey wrote to Rep. Andrew Jacobs Jr., D-Ind., alleging that Robertson used the political influence of his father, the late Sen. A. Willis Robertson, D-Va., to get out of combat duty in the Korean War.

McCloskey, a decorated Marine, was aboard a troop ship from which Robertson was removed during a stop in Japan before the ship proceeded to Korea. He quoted Robertson as telling fellow Marines that his father had helped him get out of combat.

Church Group Reportedly Holds Firm On Swaggart's Sanctions

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — State Assemblies of God leaders have rejected a request by national church officials to toughen their sanctions against evangelist Jimmy Swaggart for his sins with a prostitute, a church official says.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Tuesday the 19-member state presbytery decided at a nine-hour meeting Monday in Alexandria to send back its original censure barring Swaggart from preaching for three months.

"The ball's in their court," the source said, indicating that it would now be up to national Assemblies of God officials to decide whether to abide by the state panel's recommendation.

The Assemblies' General Presbytery in Springfield, Mo., is scheduled to meet in regular session within two months and could take up the matter at that time. An emergency session could be convened sooner.

There was no immediate comment from the national headquarters.

The Rev. Raymond Hudson, the Assemblies' general treasurer, said he had no comment, and other officials could not be reached at home Tuesday night. Calls to the home of spokeswoman Juleen Turnage were met by busy signals.

The Louisiana Presbytery's original sanction was a two-year rehabilitation program that also included counseling for Swaggart, who heads a ministry that reportedly takes in $150 million a year.

Swaggart stepped down from the pulpit Feb. 21, telling the congregation at his Baton Rouge worship center in a tearful confession that he had sinned against his wife and God. Swaggart reportedly paid a prostitute to pose nude for him and then tried to make a deal with a minister who confronted him about it.

The national presbytery reportedly recommended barring Swaggart from the pulpit and television for a year.

Menus And Waiters Give Titillating Descriptions

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

I always mistrust restaurants who hire a James Michener to write their menus and an Annie Leibovitz to photograph their entrees. These tomes have been the most well-read romantic bits of fiction ever to be snubbed by the New York Times Best Sellers list.

I opened a menu the other night and saw a picture of a sandwich that was so real I could smell it. It was also larger than the table. When the waitress whipped out her pad, I read to her from the menu. "I'll have the 'gastronomic teaser that titillates the palate with a patty of prime beef, gently basted with mesquite, the elixir of the West, served with cheese that sensuously layers it between a toasty sesame-spangled bun!'"

She yelled to the cook behind the counter. "One cheeseburger."

I used to think wine connoisseurs were full of it, but compared to menu writers, they sound like the cast of "Hee Haw."

Menu prose is an art form. Make no mistake about it. Expensive restaurants cast and stage theirs. They have waiters who describe the specials and the catch of the day. First, they stand at the table until everyone has stopped talking and they have your full attention. Then they begin. "Our special this evening is a delicacy discriminately prepared by our chef who has come up with a tender, but gutsy calamari, moist-fleshed chicken rollatine oozing cheese and marsala, a crunchy salad of Bibb lettuce and bamboo shoots with just a hint of garlic, and a spoon and swoon dessert of cream and important little berries."

In the less expensive restaurants they have to depend on the menu to grab you by your taste buds. Most of them use the Tom Jones approach to food, depicting it as a sensual experience. They offer "voluptuous rolls, seasonings that will leave you gasping, and a clandestine encounter with a sauce that will make you forget you're married." With a relationship like that, who would want to get married?

Some use the "down home" approach, offering ribs to make licking under your fingernails a must, and chili dogs that you won't even mind if they "repeat" on you. I saw a barbecue sauce on one menu that was "too headstrong to keep home."

Unlike many people, food is a natural in front of the camera lens. The "finger-lickin'" chicken is always crispy and brown and they never put a bony back in the front row. Salads are always mounded high on the plate and you can't see the lettuce for the tomatoes, and shrimp can even be seen with the naked eye.

Did you ever wonder who writes and photographs this stuff? Who knows? Maybe old speech writers for politicians running for office. Maybe people from Weight Watchers who are writing for therapy. Maybe Mel Brooks.

Fish Odor Solutions Offered

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

FUSS ABOUT ODORS MAY LEAD TO FOUL NEIGHBOR RELATIONS

DEAR ABBY: "Irritated in Tampa" indicated that she lived in an "affluent condominium complex" and was regularly offended by the odor of fish cooked in a neighboring condo. You suggested that she speak to the offending neighbor -- or write a pleasant note, with a copy to the president of the homeowners' association.

Good grief! Why did you suggest that she take this petty complaint to the president of the homeowners' association? That is certainly not what I would call the good-neighbor policy. I can't think of a more sure-fire formula for open warfare! I once received a "note" from my next-door neighbor soon after I moved to a new home. She complained about the way I parked my car. Had she said, "Gee, I wish you'd move your car down about three feet so I can see my flowers," I'd have gladly done so. Instead I received a rude letter that I've kept on my desk for about a year, and every time I come across it, I boil.

Abby, you are right about 99.9 percent of the time, but lawyers send notes with carbon copies -- not friends and neighbors. -- SEETHING IN CAPISTRANO

DEAR SEETHING: All right, I blew it, but there's no ill wind that doesn't blow some good -- a fitting analogy for this fish tale. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Having been in the home-building business for a number of years, I've known that air-sealing doors and windows can do more than "keep out the cold." Weather stripping prevents offensive private odors such as cigarette smoke, cooking meat, fish, onions, garlic, etc. from escaping into shared areas such as hallways and stairwells, thus promoting neighborly peace by avoiding the need for confrontations!

I hope this helps. Sign me ... ONE FOR HARMONY

DEAR ABBY: In regard to the condo dweller who complained about her neighbor cooking fish frequently: Adele Davis said that most fish is overcooked; when you can smell it, you've already cooked it too long.

Just thought the rest of the world should be let in on this hint. -- JEAN M. DAVIS, EUGENE, ORE.

DEAR ABBY: I have a cooking tip for "Irritated in Tampa": Instead of complaining to her neighbor, suggest to the neighbor that she sprinkle a little powdered ginger on the fish while it's cooking, and there won't be any fish smell. Also, if she's frying the fish, tell her to put a few little balls of peanut butter (the size of a pea) in the skillet. Result: No fish odor! Sometimes I call myself "Dear Abby," but my name is ... RUTH B. JONES, BELLFONTE, PA.

DEAR ABBY: About fish odors: I should think all "affluent condos" would have a ventilating fan in the kitchen. Perhaps after "Irritated in Tampa" writes to the president of the homeowners' association, she will receive instructions as to where this fan switch is located, and how to turn it on. Also, how about buying a couple of cans of air freshener? -- CHARLES IN VANCOUVER

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Buck-Cuthrell Vows Said Saturday

The wedding of Katherine Michelle Cuthrell and Dodge Franklin Buck Jr. was performed by the bride's father Saturday at noon in Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

The Rev. Billy Boyd Cuthrell conducted the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are the Rev. and Mrs. Cuthrell and Mr. and Mrs. Dodge Franklin Buck Sr. of Route 1, Washington, N.C.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Billy Boyd Cuthrell II. She wore her mother's dress — a formal-length gown of white chantilly lace over taffeta fashioned with an elongated bodice, a scalloped medieval neckline embroidered with iridescents and long sleeves ending in calla points over her hands. Her full skirt featured taffeta bows and cascaded into a chapel-length train. Her floor-length veil was adorned with miniature taffeta bows, pearls, and sequins and was attached to a prayer cap of taffeta edged in pearls with a large taffeta bow at the back. Her bouquet was a cascade of phalaenopsis and japhett orchids, white butterfly roses, freesia, and white French lilacs nestled in a bed of ivory net tied with ivory satin and net.

The maid of honor was Melissa Lynn Cuthrell, sister of the bride, of Ayden. She wore a pink full-length gown of taffeta with a sweetheart neckline, diagonal shirred sash with a bow in front, long puffed sleeves, and a full skirt. She wore a pink bow in her hair.

The bridesmaids were Melanie Rae Bowen and Marian Kendra Tayloe Curtis, both of Washington, N.C., and Gail Peletier Fletcher of Raleigh and Barbara Smith of Wilmington. They wore mauve dresses styled like that of the maid of honor. They carried bouquets of mauve alstromerias, lilies, pink miniature carnations, pink Gerber daisies and baby's breath on a background of pink silk illusion tied with pink net and pink satin.

The flower girls were Atha Malissa Cutler of Washington, N.C., and Janna Hammond Rawls, of Raleigh, cousins of the bridegroom. They wore floor-length dresses of off-white taffeta, with high necklines, a front lace panel and long puffed sleeves. They carried pink ribbon-decorated baskets filled with pink miniature carnations, alstromeria, baby's breath, and pink rose petals.

The best man was the bridegroom's father. Ushers were

Billy Boyd Cuthrell II, brother of the bride, of Ayden and Phillip Gene Simmons Jr. of Washington, N.C.

The ringbearer was Jason Ray Buck, cousin of the bridegroom, of Washington, N.C.

The organist was Frances Cain; the soloist Jenni Grum. Music selections were "Morning Has Broken," "The Wedding Song," and "The Wedding Prayer."

A reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church. A rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's parents at the King and Queen Restaurant.

The bride and bridegroom are graduates of Washington High School. He attended Beaufort Community College and is a civil engineering technician for the City of Washington. She is employed by Senior Village Rest Home in Greenville.

After a wedding trip to Charleston, S.C., they will live in Washington, N.C.

Engaged

DEBRA KAY HAYES ... is the daughter of Lois M. Hayes of Fernandina Beach, Fla., and Elgin B. Hayes of Huntsville, Ala., who announce her engagement to Jeffrey M. Bolch of Hickory, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold I. Bolch Jr. of Hickory. A May 21 wedding is planned.

Tournament This Weekend

The Greenville Spring Duplicate Bridge Sectional Tournament will be held Friday, Saturday and Sunday at the Holiday Inn, Greenville.

Players are expected from across the state and from surrounding states. In the past, seven states and Nova Scotia have been represented, the tournament chairman said.

Play will begin at 2 p.m. Friday with open pairs. Friday at 8 p.m. the masters pairs and the non-master pairs will be held. Open pairs qualifying round will start at 1:30 p.m. Saturday; the second session at 7:30 p.m. Non-qualifiers and new entries will play at 7:30 p.m., also.

A Swiss team event will start at 11 a.m. Sunday, followed by a buffet dinner. The starting time of the second session will be announced.

Prizes will be given to first-place winners in all events. Section top prizes also will be given. Prizes will be given to the person who wins the most points for the entire tournament, as well as a prize to the regular Greenville player who wins the most points overall.

Partners are guaranteed for all events. The tournament is open to anyone who deire to participate.

If attendance warrants, sections for first-time duplicate players will be held. Those interested in bridge lessons may contact the tournament chairman at the tournament.

Players may enter as many events as they desire, with no minimum number required.

MORE THAN JUST SAUCE
PLYMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — Cranberries, introduced by the Indians to the Pilgrims, are one of only three native American fruits. The others are blueberries and Concord grapes.

Cranberries grow in bogs in Massachusetts, New Jersey, Oregon, Washington and Wisconsin and are harvested in the fall.

Until the early 1970s, the berries primarily were used to make sauce. Then Ocean Spray, a cooperative of 600 cranberry growers, began marketing cranberry juice drinks.

 and his concepts, they're likely to support him. "We've got the secretary of commerce going around trying to destroy what I'm trying to do. He's putting out the wrong story so I'm getting some negatives from groups that he speaks to, but from those people that I get a chance to talk to and who understand it, the response is very positive," he said following his speech. Jordan also said he believes the tourism industry is one of the hidden, potential economic strengths of eastern North Carolina. "I think we've got some places scattered all over eastern North Carolina that would make great places for tourists to visit. We've got to do a better job at advertising though," he said. "We're also going to have to help a little bit in restoring some of these places," he added. Jordan said one of the keys to opening up that tourism industry is the continued development of the highway system. "Once we get these arteries through eastern North Carolina, this place isn't ever going to be the same again," he commented. Jordan said he was impressed with the turnout Tuesday. "This is one of the greatest gatherings that we've had on the campaign trail," he commented.

 you don't believe in your candidate enough to work for him, don't expect us to send you to a social event," he said, referring to the upcoming district and state conventions. "If you didn't work, don't holler sour grapes now." Carlton Smith, county GOP Chairman and convention moderator, said many long-time Pitt County Republicans were being excluded. "While you were concentrating on your candidate... and that's all you had to do," Smith said in response to Beale's comments, "there were people who made this thing possible." Mary Lou Sugg, vice chairman of the Pitt County GOP, was included in the slate but she removed her name. "I withdrew in protest of the slating of the delegates, with no independent nominations being accepted from the floor," she said. "They should have included officers and elected Republicans in the county by allowing them to be delegates. Even with them they (Robertson supporters) would have had the majority," said Mrs. Sugg. Mrs. Sugg was involved in the first parliamentary problem of the evening when she and Dennis Kilcoyne were both nominated to serve as chairman of the convention. Not all voting delegates were seated and it was not clear whether alternates could participate in electing the chairman. Smith ordered a 10-minute recess until 8 p.m. but the issue was never continued and no chairman was elected once the meeting reconvened. Smith led the convention through the evening. After the final delegate count was settled around 9:30 p.m., Marvin Bright of Morehead City was nominated to be the convention parliamentary. Bright was with the visiting Robertson supporters in the back of the room and there was an immediate division over whether or not to allow people outside of Pitt County to participate.

Sweeps Delegates
 "They promised me they would come in and observe and they would not participate in the convention," Mrs. Sugg said in opposition to Bright. A motion to table and then a substitute motion took nearly an hour to settle and Bright's name was finally withdrawn. Kilcoyne was elected parliamentarian. "Things would have gone much smoother" if Bright had been elected parliamentarian, said Michael Mahler, field operative with the Robertson staff. "But the outcome would have been no different." Kilcoyne, former national executive director of the College Republicans, also said he didn't like the election process. "The whole Robertson campaign is just rife with arrogance... You don't get any more conservative than me, but because I didn't pledge my support to Pat Robertson I'm unacceptable." Kilcoyne said he supports Jack Kemp. Throughout the convention, which lasted past midnight, there were efforts to encourage everyone to remain unified and support the Republican party regardless of which candidate eventually receives the nomination, but some said they would not. "I will not support Pat Robertson," Billy Coggins of Swift Creek said to

Boeheim's Nerves Shot As Syracuse Squeezes Past Villanova By 71-69 Score

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Syracuse Coach Jim Boeheim says his team's recent string of close games is getting to him, and point guard Sherman Douglas knows what his coach is talking about.

"We were tired in the first half after a tough weekend. But it's great to win a two-point game and finally pull one through," said Douglas, who had 17 points Tuesday night to help No. 12 Syracuse to a 71-69 victory over Villanova in a Big East Conference matchup.

"We've had too many games like this. I'm not sure I can take any more. It seems like we go from one to another," said Boeheim, who's watched four of the last six games involving his team come down to the wire, including Sunday's 62-58 loss to No. 10 Kentucky.

"I thought we had a couple of opportunities to get them early but we just seemed to be a little bit tired," Boeheim said. "And we helped them a little bit from the free throw line, but that's not unusual."

In the only other game involving a ranked team, No. 20 Xavier of Ohio beat Niagara 93-80. Tonight, it will be No. 1. Temple at St. Joseph's, No. 6. North Carolina at No. 13 Georgia Tech, No. 7. Pittsburgh vs. Seton Hall, No. 8. Kentucky vs. Georgia, No. 9. Duke at Clemson, No. 10. Michigan vs. Northwestern and No. 19. Vanderbilt at Florida, 7:30 p.m.

Center Rony Seikaly scored on a twisting, reverse layup with 1:25 to play to give Syracuse its winning points.

Despite getting Villanova in serious foul trouble early and shooting 17 more free throws than the Wildcats, Syracuse never had the victory secured until Rodney Taylor's desperation shot bounced strongly off the backboard as time expired.

Both Stephen Thompson and Matt Roe missed the front end of one-and-one opportunities in the final 40 seconds for Syracuse, which shot only 16-for-31 from the foul line where the Orangemen are chronically poor performers.

Villanova had a last opportunity to score after Roe's miss, which came with nine seconds to play, but guard Kenny Wilson lost the ball as the Wildcats tried to set up a final play.

Taylor finally came up with it after a frantic scramble, throwing up his errant shot at the buzzer.

"Kenny was just a little too concerned with about the pick-and-roll because we were going to pick-and-roll it or get the ball inside to (center) Tom (Greis)," Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino said. "It just so happens he got a little bit nervous as he brought the ball down and Rodney wasn't there quick enough for the pick. He was too concerned about it instead of taking it to the basket."

Massimino said he was impressed the way his Wildcats held together after three starters and sixth-man Gary Massey collected three fouls apiece in the first half. Starters Wilson, Greis and Taylor all finished with four personals, while Massey was disqualified along with starting forward Doug West, who scored 17 points before leaving the game with 3:58 left to play.

"Again we made it a close game," Douglas said. "If we hit our free throws, we win by plenty."

Syracuse also got 15 points from Thompson while Seikaly added 13 points, 16 rebounds and three blocked shots.

The victory moved Syracuse into a showdown Sunday with Pittsburgh for the league title. The Orangemen, 11-4 in the Big East and 22-7 overall, trail the Panthers by a half-game with only Sunday's game left on their league schedule. Pitt will host Seton Hall tonight before coming to Syracuse.

The Wildcats, who got 15 points from Greis and 14 from Taylor, fell to 9-7 and 18-11.

Syracuse forged a 39-37 halftime lead after trailing for the first 10 minutes of the game. Derrick Coleman scored seven points in a 10-0 Orangemen surge that erased Villanova's early 17-11 lead.

No. 20 Xavier 93, Niagara 80
Xavier, ranked for the first time in 28 years this week, got a career-high 30 points from center Tyrone Hill. The 6-foot-9 sophomore had 19 of his points in the second half as Xavier overcame a 10-point halftime deficit.

"This team belongs in the top 20 with that comeback," Niagara Coach Andy Walker said. "Anything less from them and we would have gotten them."

Byron Larkin scored 18 points and Stan Kinbrough scored 17 of his 19 points in the second half for Xavier.

The victory was Xavier's 12th straight as the Musketeers improved their record 23-3.

Eldridge Moore scored 14 points to lead Niagara, now 12-14.

Xavier outscored Niagara 61-38 in the second half by using a full-court defense that forced numerous turnovers.

Tournaments

Junior Rodney Mack had career highs of 31 points and 25 rebounds to lead South Carolina State to an 88-77 victory over Maryland-Eastern Shore in the first round of the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference tournament. George Hamilton scored 18 points as Howard ousted Morgan State 67-59. Aldwin Ware scored 28 of his 30 points in the first half to lead Florida A&M to a 104-73 rout of Delaware State.

Rose Girls Roll, 73-52

Rose High School shot 61 percent from the floor Tuesday night and romped to a 73-52 basketball victory over Rocky Mount in the first round of the Big East Conference girls' tournament.

In other games Tuesday night, Kinston, which tied with Rose for the regular season title but drew top seed, downed Northern Nash, 65-38; number five Northeastern upset number four Beddingfield, 56-53, and number three Fike beat number six Hunt, 30-28.

The Rampettes had little trouble after the opening minutes, rolling out to a 17-8 lead in the first quarter. Rose followed that up with a 24-13 margin in the second quarter, allowing them to take a comfortable 41-21 lead into the dressing rooms at the half.

Rose continued to pull away in the third period, outscoring Rocky Mount, 19-14. That made it 60-35 going into the last quarter. In that, Rocky Mount was allowed a 17-13 comeback.

"We played very well offensively," Coach Bill Kuykendall said. "But defensively we got a little sloppy. It was more running and gunning than playing basketball."

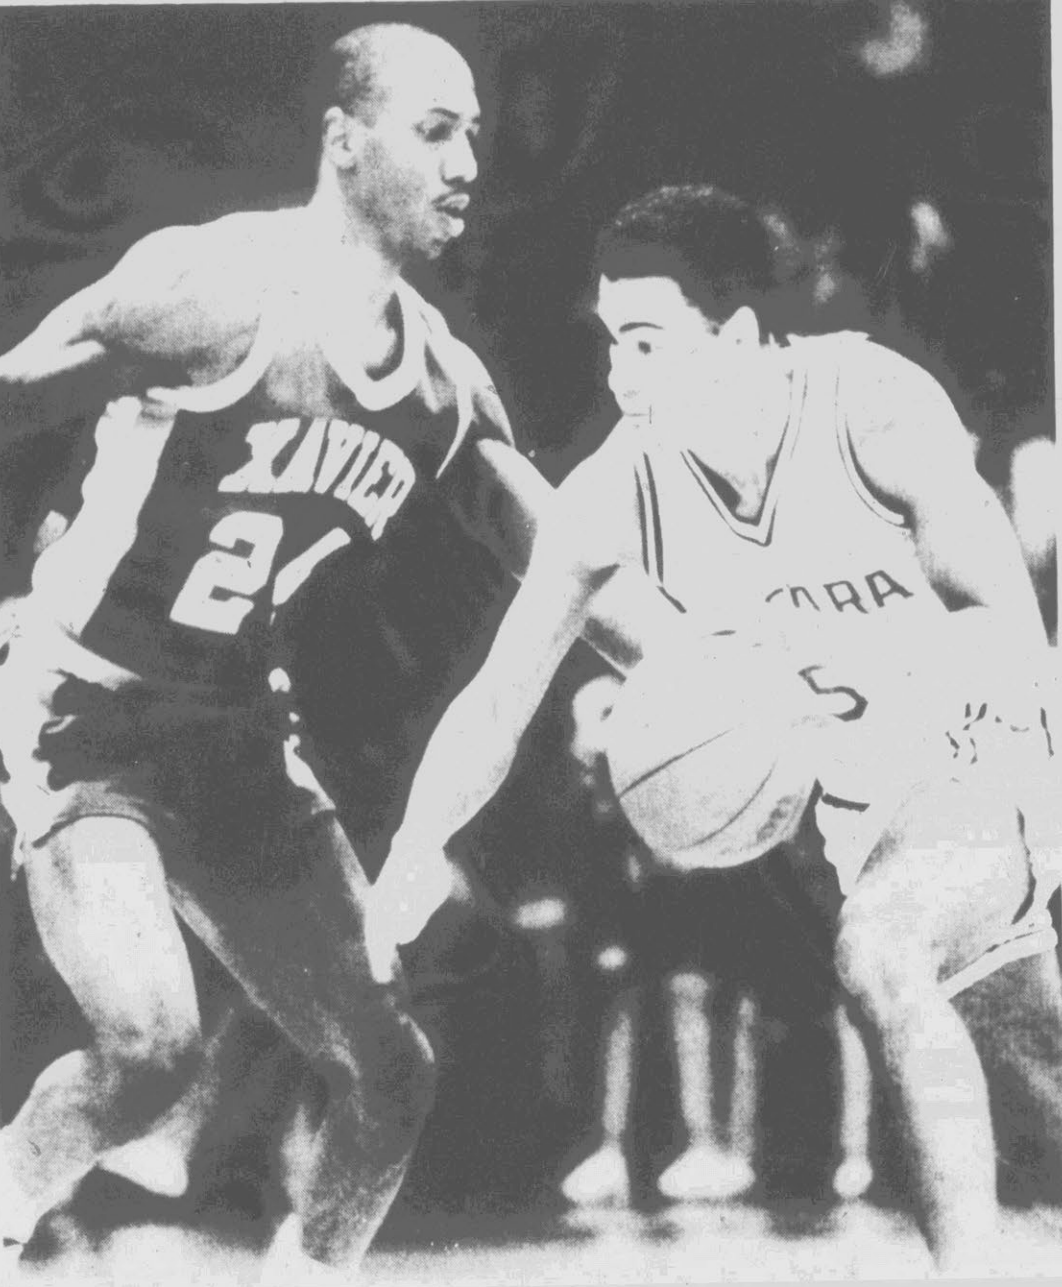

Nicole Maxon led Rose with 21 points, all coming on seven 3-point baskets. Lisa Leisten added 19 while Amy Barr had 10.

Rocky Mount was paced by Clark with 17 while Tucker added 10.

Rose advances to the second round where it will host Wilson Fike on Thursday at a time to be announced. Kinston meets Northeastern in the other semifinal game with the championship game set for Friday at 7 p.m. at the gym of the highest remaining boys' team.

Greene Boys, Jaguar Girls Advance; AG Girls Out

SNOW HILL — Greene Central's boys, along with C.B. Aycock's and Farmville Central's girls advanced to the semifinals of the Eastern Plains Conference basketball tournament Tuesday night.

The Rams, seeded third in the boys' division, slipped past sixth place Pamlico, 44-41, while Farmville Central's girls, ranked second, bombed number seven Pamlico, 60-35. Aycock's girls, seeded third, defeated sixth-ranked Ayden-Grifton, 44-29.

Aycock's girls eased out into an 8-6 lead over Ayden-Grifton in the first quarter of their game. The Lady Falcons then pulled away in the second period, 13-9, building a 21-15 halftime lead.

Aycock continued to build in the third period, outscoring the Lady Chargers, 15-6. That gave the Falcons a 36-21 lead to take into the final period. The two matched points in that frame, each scoring eighth.

Connie Lancaster and Gail Coley each scored 12 points to lead Aycock while Crystal Kennedy had 11. Carole Stokes led Ayden-Grifton with nine points.

The loss ends the season for the Lady Chargers, who wind up with a 4-19 record.

Farmville's girls had little trouble with Pamlico. The Lady Jaguars jumped out to an 11-5 lead in the opening quarter of the game and were never headed. They outscored Pamlico, 21-6 in the second period, building their lead to 32-11 by intermission.

In the third quarter, Farmville continued to pull away, albeit less quickly. They posted a 10-7 advantage and carried a 42-18 lead into the closing period. In that, Farmville outscored the Lady Hurricanes, 18-17, to wrap it up.

Vickie Best led Farmville with 21 points while Brenda Reid added 17. Dora Barber paced Pamlico with 19 points.

Pamlico threatened an upset early on and hung on through the very end of the boys' game. The Hurricanes inched out into a 10-9 lead in the first period and clung to that lead through the second frame. Both the Hurricanes and Rams pushed in eight points in the second quarter, leaving Pamlico in the lead, 18-17, at intermission.

In the third period, Greene Central outthit the Canes, 12-11, and that left it knotted at 29-29 as the final quarter got underway. In that, Greene Central managed a 15-12 advantage, helped along by some key free throws in the final two minutes. Anthony Jones hit on three of four at the line while Reggie Atkinson made one of three to allow the Rams to eke out the victory.

Atkinson led the Rams with 17 points while Jones added 12. Dion Gibbs and Guion Sawyer each had 10 points to lead Pamlico.

Tonight, North Pitt's girls, the regular season champions, take on South Lenoir at 6:30 p.m. while Farmville Central's boys, also top-seeded, face North Pitt at 8 p.m. in the first of the semifinal games. Thursday, the semifinals conclude with Aycock meeting Farmville in a 6:30 p.m. girls' game and Greene Central facing Ayden-Grifton in an 8 p.m. boys' game. The championships will be played Friday night at Farmville Central.

Bucs Suspend 5 After Incidents

Five East Carolina University football players have been suspended indefinitely by head coach Art Baker following the athletes' arrests last week in three separate incidents.

Pirate Athletic Director Dave Hart announced the suspensions in a news release today.

"Strict team disciplinary action was warranted in light of the fact that these young men are representatives of East Carolina University," Hart said. "With that goes the responsibility to conduct themselves in a manner which will reflect positively on the Department of Athletics and East Carolina University."

Tuesday, Michael Shane Hubble, a reserve linebacker, was charged with assault and damage to property in what ECU campus police termed an altercation in the parking lot area of College Hill Drive. In an unrelated incident, Ernest Edward Logan II, a starter at outside linebacker, was also charged with assault in what campus police termed an altercation in the College Hill Drive area Saturday night.

That followed the arrests of three other players Feb. 26 stemming from an incident that allegedly occurred the weekend before.

Lester Errol McCorvey, a reserve defensive back, and Ernest Pendleton, a reserve running back, were charged with assault on a female, while Lewis Wilson, also a reserve running back, was charged with two counts of aiding and abet-

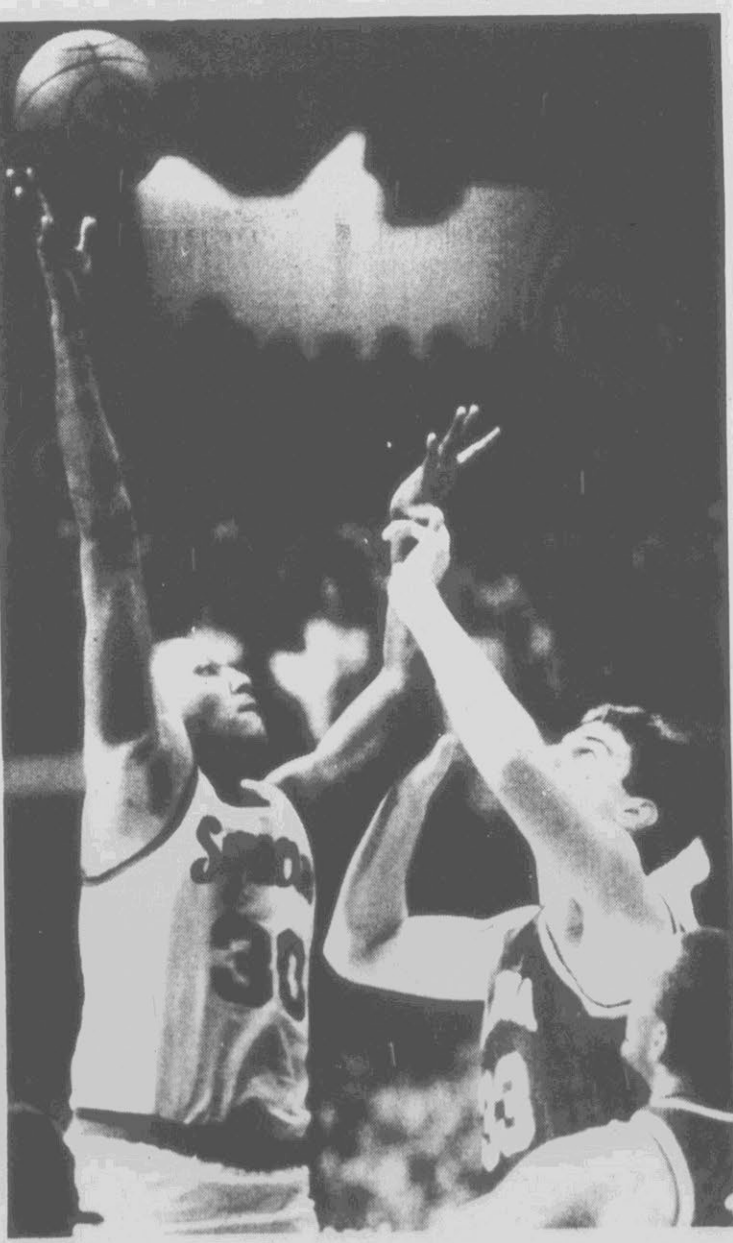

"Athletics is the University's most visible ambassador," Hart said. "We cannot, and will not, tolerate actions by our athletes which bring negative attention to their team and ECU. We intend to honor our obligation to these young men as it relates to their education."

"However, they are suspended indefinitely as representatives of the football team. We have to be more accountable as a department. That accountability is inclusive of all our athletes."

All five athletes are scheduled to come to trial March 14 in Pitt County District Court.

South Carolina Fires A.D. Marcum

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The task force that found the University of South Carolina had not conducted random drug tests of athletes in two years was unable to obtain an "adequate explanation" why such tests were not performed, a member of the committee says.

The task force's findings led school President James Holderman to fire Athletic Director Bob Marcum, who had served as head of the athletic department since 1982.

Team physician Paul Akers also has been relieved of his duties and "termination proceedings are being instituted," Holderman said at a news conference Tuesday afternoon.

The task force found no random tests had been conducted since the spring of 1986. The only tests during that time were team tests, where a whole team is tested and given 24- to 48-hours notice, according to Dr. Alexander Donald, head of the task force and chairman of the department of neuropsychiatry and behavioral science at the university's School of Medicine.

Under the drug-testing program, 1,600 tests should have been done during that period, he said. Only 400 were conducted.

"No one had an adequate explanation for that," he said.

Holderman said Marcum and Akers "misrepresented" the program to him, other school officials and the public. Asked if Marcum lied, Holderman said, "I don't know the word lie is appropriate."

"I think that the representations didn't turn out to be what was actually in place," Holderman said.

Holderman said he could not "put my finger on a motive" for the misrepresentations. He said "explanations had been given" by Marcum but declined to comment further.

The task force said it concluded from its investigation that the school's drug-testing program "as presented by the physician and athletic director does not exist."

"The program that does exist is inadequate," a statement signed by all five task force members said.

Akers didn't return phone calls Tuesday from The Associated Press, and Marcum said he could not comment on the matter.

"I've been advised by my attorney, Don Richardson, not to say anything," Marcum said. "We'll have a statement in a few days. ... Certainly, I was surprised. No doubt about that."

The university's drug-testing program came under heavy criticism after football player Ryan Bethea was arrested in early February for possession of cocaine with intent to distribute and simple possession of marijuana.

Holderman later appointed the task force to evaluate the school's drug testing program. Holderman said the committee presented him with its findings Friday night.

The task force also found:

- Positive steroid results are not systematically followed up by re-testing or referral to counseling services, and there was inadequate steroid testing other than in one sport.
- Inadequate follow-up on players who do not show for scheduled tests and failure to represent those as "positive" results as called for under the Lifestyle Program.
- Testing data available failed to substantiate that team testing included all team members.
- In firing Marcum, Holderman said the athletic director had worked "diligently to make Gamecock sports competitive at a national level" but the "clear failure" to implement an effective drug-testing program left him no choice in the matter.

Henderson, Rucker Lead All-Star Team

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Senior guards Skip Henderson of Marshall and Derek Rucker of Davidson lead the 1988 all-Southern Conference basketball team announced Tuesday.

Henderson was a unanimous choice in balloting by members of the Southern Conference Sports Media Association and becomes only the second player to be named to the league's all-star team in each of his four seasons.

Jonathan Moore, who played at Furman from 1977 to 1980, is the only other player to be named all-conference four times.

Rucker was one vote shy of being a unanimous selection and made the first team for the third season after being on the second team as a freshman.

Rounding out the team are Marshall center Tom Curry, Davidson forward Jeff Himes and Furman forward John Castile, all of whom are seniors.

Based on two points for a first-team vote and one point for a second-team vote, Henderson received 136 points, Rucker 135, Curry 107, Himes 103 and Castile 96.

Henderson, a 6-foot-2, 190-pounder from Cartersville, Ga., leads the conference in scoring this season with a 24.0 average and goes into the league tournament this weekend needing 83 points to become the conference's all-time scoring leader.

Henderson was also selected Southern Conference basketball player of the year by an overwhelming margin.

Henderson received 58 of the 68 votes in balloting by members of the Southern Conference Sports Media Association, which announced the selection today.

He has led Marshall to an 88-36 record in his four seasons, and the Thundering Herd will be shooting for their third conference tournament title this weekend.

In addition to leading the league in scoring, Henderson ranks eighth in field goal percentage (48.8) and steals (1.7 per game), fifth in free throw percentage (78.1), eighth in assists (3.7 per game) and seventh in three-point field goal percentage (39.8).

Others receiving votes for player of the year included Furman's John Castile (five), Davidson's Derek Rucker (four) and Davidson's Jeff Himes (one).

Rucker, a 6-1, 170-pounder from Beachwood, Ohio, is the league's second-leading scorer, averaging 21.6 points a game. He is second in free throw percentage (79.1) and steals (2.4 per game) and third in 3-point goal percentage (40.8).

Curry, a 6-9, 230-pounder from Baton Rouge, La., averaged 16.8 points and 6.8 rebounds a game this season. He leads the conference in field goal percentage (61.1) and blocked shots (1.9 per game).

Himes, a 6-4, 205-pounder from Columbia, S.C., averaged 18.5 points and 7.6 rebounds a game this season and ranked second in the league in field goal percentage (57.9).

Castile, a 6-4, 213-pounder from Columbia, S.C., averaged 12.6 points and 7.4 rebounds. A standout defensive player, he also averaged 3.9 assists per game.

The second team is headed by Tennessee-Chattanooga's Lance Fulse (81 points). The other four players are: Greg Dennis of East Tennessee State (67), Rodney Holden of Marshall (50), Kemp Phillips of Appalachian State (40) and David Brown of Furman (38).

Fulse and Holden earned first-team honors a year ago.

Here is the 1988 All-Southern Conference Team as chosen by the Southern Conference Sports Media Association (Points based on two points for first-team vote and one point for second-team vote, in parentheses. Maximum points: 136)

First Team
 Skip Henderson, Marshall (136), 6-2, 190, Senior, Cartersville, Ga., Derek Rucker, Davidson (135), 6-1, 170, Senior, Beachwood, Ohio Tom Curry, Marshall (107), 6-9, 230, Baton Rouge, La. Jeff Himes, Davidson (103), 6-4, 205, Columbia, S.C. John Castile, Furman (96), 6-4, 213, Columbia, S.C.

Second Team

UNCC's Dinkins Sun Belt's Top Player

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Byron Dinkins, North Carolina Charlotte's point guard, was named Tuesday as the Sun Belt Conference player of the year.

A 6-foot-2 junior, Dinkins received 18 points, three more than Virginia Commonwealth's Phil Stinnie, a 6-foot-8 senior.

Dinkins was selected in voting by the eight SBC coaches, who cannot vote for their own player. Each coach selects three players, with a first-place vote worth three points, a second-place two points and third-place one point.

Dinkins received four first-place votes and Stinnie two. Guards Jeff Hodge and Junie Lewis of South Alabama each got one first-place vote. Other players receiving votes were forward Darrell Coleman of South Florida and guards Brett McNeal of Western Kentucky and Michael Charles of Alabama-Birmingham.

Stinnie averaged 23.1 points and 7.3 rebounds. He hit 48.2 percent of his shots and was 83.2 percent at the line. Dinkins averaged 21.6 points and 5.4 assists. He hit 53.6 percent of his shots and made 75.5 percent of his free throws.

Proposal May Hurt Athletes

A proposal by the N.C. High School Athletic Association that would require student to pass five courses per semester to be eligible to play high school sports could have a bigger impact on schools — such as Rose High School — that have only the 10th, 11th and 12th grades, Bud Phillips, Rose athletic director says.

And the proposal could have a greater impact on spring sports than on fall sports, Phillips added.

The state Board of Education is to consider the proposal at a meeting today. "The state board is requiring 20 courses for graduation. Our requirement of passing four courses (to be eligible) did not keep our athletes on track for graduation," Charles H. Adams, executive director of the athletic association, said.

If approved, the new standard would take effect in the 1988-1989 school year and students who fail to pass five courses next fall would be ineligible to play sports next spring.

"If it goes through, kids will have to pass five courses each semester to be eligible," Phillips said. "For the student athlete in the spring, they would have to pass five in the fall to be eligible. He doesn't have the opportunity to go to summer school, so he's going to be out."

But Phillips said, "The student in the spring ... if he doesn't pass five, he can go to summer school, clear up the deficiency, and be eligible."

"People coming over here for the first time in the 10th grade have to be acclimated. It's easy to fall down that first semester (but) recover the second semester. That might hurt spring sports more than fall sports," Phillips said.

Phillips said he could go with a requirement that students have to pass five courses in the spring to be eligible to play fall sports. But he suggested that it might be better to require students to pass only four courses in the fall in order to be eligible in the spring.

"We just changed from three to four not too long ago ... in 1985. If athletics has a place in our curriculum, should we try to deny people the opportunity to participate? Athletics is the only thing requiring a student to pass five courses. It's not required for participation in clubs, band, other activities," Phillips said.

"I've been checking for this spring. I know we've got, in just about every sport, students who've just passed four. They're eligible this year," Phillips said. But unless they pass five courses this spring, they won't be eligible in the fall.

Phillips also noted that some "didn't even pass four. I don't know the number. A lot of those I wouldn't know about because they wouldn't come out."

Phillips said he thought it would make a difference "if we had the ninth grade here. (Students) would be more acclimated to our school ... have the opportunity to get adjusted."

"It's easy for students not to get started off right ... fail the first semester but do all right after that."

Rose High is one of eight schools in the Big East Conference. And according to Phillips, "most have ninth grade in their school ... (Northern) Nash doesn't. I don't think Rocky Mount does."

Most states require athletes to pass five courses each semester to play sports.

Washington Girls Rip E. Carteret

VANCEBORO — Washington High School's girls rolled to a 35-12 basketball victory over East Carteret in the first round of the Coastal Plains Conference tournament at West Craven Tuesday night.

In boys' action, number three North Lenoir downed sixth seeded West Carteret, 79-63, while number two Havelock beat number seven East Carteret, 66-51.

The Lady Pam Pack, seeded second in the conference, had little trouble with the Lady Mariners. East Carteret scored the first basket of the game, but didn't score again for over nine minutes and got only one more point in the first half.

Washington ran off 10 straight points to take a 10-2 lead after the first period, then added four more in the second as the Mariners got only one. That left Washington up, 14-3, at the half.

The Pam Pack continued to pull away in the third period, 11-8, as it built its lead to 25-11. Washington finished off East with 10-1 advantage in the final period.

Twanna Spruill led Washington's scoring with 10 points. No one scored in double figures for East Carteret.

Tonight, Havelock's top-seeded girls face West Carteret at 6:30 p.m. with Conley's regular season champion boys facing West Craven at 8 p.m. In the other semifinals on Thursday, West Craven meets Washington in a girls' game, while North Lenoir and Havelock meet in a boys' game. The championships will be played Friday night at West Craven.

Roanoke Boys, Tiger Girls Out

LEGGETT — Jeff Ramsey scored 17 points to lead Northampton East to a 52-39 win over Roanoke Tuesday night in high school basketball action from the first round of the Northeastern 2-A Athletic Conference.

The Rams moved out to a 17-14 edge after the first quarter before falling behind 22-21 by halftime.

But Northampton East regrouped over the final two quarters, outscoring the Redskins 15-7 in the third period and 16-10 in the final frame to take the win.

Fred McFadden led Roanoke with 11 points.

The loss ends Roanoke season at 8-13.

The Northampton East girls also came out victorious, topping Williamston, 57-39.

Jennifer Ramsey led the way with 16 points while Stephanie Harris added 14 and Anada Long chipped in 12.

The Lady Rams led 29-13 at the half and never looked back, cruising to the win over the Lady Tigers who close out the year 3-17.

Kim Hawkins and Dana Hardison led Williamston with 14 points and 12 points, respectively.

In continuing play from the NEAC Tournament, Northampton East's girls play Plymouth Thursday at Ahoskie while the boys play Edenton tonight at Roanoke.

Jack Trying Out Metal Driver

MIAMI (AP) — Jack Nicklaus pulled the driver from his bag on the first tee and Lee Trevino's mouth fell open.

"We finally got you, huh?" Trevino said, staring at the club in Nicklaus' hand.

It was a metal driver, a club favored by some of golf's older players and shorter hitters.

And Nicklaus used it for the first time in competition in the 10-man shoot-out Tuesday that preceded the $1-million Doral Open.

He won it, holing a 7-foot birdie putt on the final hole to beat Ray Floyd.

"I liked it," said Nicklaus, 48, holder of a record 18 major professional titles and now a part-time player on the PGA Tour.

"I hit it maybe a yard shorter than the old driver. But I hit I straighter. I don't lose it to the right. And that's something I've been doing for several years now."

"I like it," said Nicklaus, who will make his second start of the season in the tournament that begins Thursday on the famed Blue Monster course at the Doral Country Club.

Nicklaus said he played in the 9-hole shoot-out "because I needed the competition. I've played only once this year and thought it would be good to get in the extra day."

"And I won something. I won the

Hall Of Fame Committee Makes No Recommendations

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — So Phil Rizzuto, Richie Ashburn and some others were not voted into the Hall of Fame by the Veterans Committee.

Good.
For the first time since 1956, the panel did not elect anyone Tuesday. It should happen more often.

There are already 165 members of sports' most hallowed Hall. Many don't belong and the last thing the shrine needs is further dilution.

Sure, it's possible to make a case for many of those on the outside based on some of those inside. If Pee

Wee Reese made it, so should Rizzuto; if Bobby Doerr is in, Joe Gordon should join him.

Wrong.
The hall is for the greats, not merely the very good. Just because some managed to trickle in who shouldn't have, it's no reason to open the floodgates. Especially through the Veterans Committee loophole.

Nothing against the 20-member panel. It includes Ted Williams, Stan Musial and Roy Campanella and many distinguished baseball representatives — a committee certainly able of judging Hall of Fame talent.

But, why should those who did not get elected in the annual votings by the Baseball Writers' Association of America get more chances?

Leo Durocher, Ashburn and umpire Al Barlick were all fine additions to baseball. Yet the BBWAA did not see fit to elect them into the Hall and that should be the end of it.

Many members of the Veterans Committee expressed frustration that they could not muster a 75 percent majority for any of the 29 candidates. The committee, which is empowered to elect two people each year, wanted to put someone in this year and spent 4½ hours talking about it.

"We couldn't get enough votes," Musial said. "It is disappointing."

There were 18 members voting Tuesday, meaning 14 were needed for election. No one got more than 12 votes.

"The rules need to be changed," said Monte Irvin, another Hall of Famer on the panel. "I just think we're wasting time to meet and not elect anyone."

Maybe the process needs to be changed — to eliminate the committee.

If a batter swings and misses three times, he's out. He doesn't get another strike, and that's how it should be with the Hall of Fame.

The BBWAA has long-established rules that give everyone a chance. Why should a group of 20 get to undo those voting procedures and agree to put someone in?

The exception is with Negro Leagues players. Cool Papa Bell, Buck Leonard and others were recognized as some of the best players of their time, but racial segregation denied them a chance at the major leagues.

They did not have an opportunity to be voted in by the BBWAA and a system is needed to provide them a fair shot. Some critics claim that Negro Leagues players do not belong in the Hall alongside Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb and Joe DiMaggio.

Records from the Negro Leagues are often incomplete and their merits are sometimes a matter of word-of-mouth, passed on by those who saw them play. Trying to decide which of those players should be in the Hall may be an incomplete science, but they deserve some sort of opportunity.

Last year, the Veterans Committee elected only one person, Ray Dandridge of the Negro Leagues. This year, no one made it.

Ellis Redeems Himself With 26 Against Lakers

By Bill Barnard
AP Basketball Writer

Dale Ellis is convinced that no team, not even the Los Angeles Lakers, can stop him indefinitely.

Ellis held himself responsible for Seattle's 116-109 defeat on Jan. 24 that ended the SuperSonics' 17-game home winning streak.

On Tuesday night, Ellis, who was 5-for-21 from the field and scored 14 points in that loss, scored 26 Tuesday night as the Sonics snapped the Lakers' 10-game winning streak, 114-100.

"The last game against the Lakers, I was my own worst enemy," Ellis said. "I took myself out of that game. I don't think there's any one guy who can hold me down with my shot and my height. I think I present problems for most No. 2 (shooting) guards because I've been playing post all my life."

Ellis, who is listed at 6-foot-7, played forward until last season.

"Dale has been his own Achilles heel against the Lakers," Sonics Coach Bernie Bickerstaff said. "You don't stop the great ones. You don't stop a Magic Johnson, a Byron Scott or a Dale Ellis."

In other NBA games, it was New Jersey 104, Los Angeles Clippers 75; New York 98, Indiana 96; Detroit 117, Atlanta 104; Milwaukee 117, Boston 116; San Antonio 114, Phoenix 109, and Utah 113, Houston 112.

Xavier McDaniel added 24 points and Tom Chambers 22 for the Sonics, while Byron Scott scored 21 points and James Worthy 20 for Los Angeles, who lost for only the second time in 19 games.

Ellis scored seven points at the end of a 27-10 second-half spurt that turned a 74-73 lead by Los Angeles into a 100-84 Seattle advantage.

The SuperSonics started the decisive spurt with a 10-2 run at the end of the third period. Lakers Coach Pat Riley said his team folded when he took Johnson out of the game just before Seattle took control.

"We broke down horribly the last 54 seconds of the third period," Riley said. "That's where it was decided. I took Earvin out for a rest. I thought we could survive it, but at that point it was over. They smelled blood in the fourth and really came after us."

Johnson had 16 points and 13 assists in the game, including 10 points in the fourth quarter as the Lakers tried to rally.

Seattle continued to extend the lead in the fourth period. Ellis, who sat out much of the second half with foul trouble, finished off the spurt with a dunk with 6:07 remaining, giving the Sonics their largest lead, 100-84.

Pistons 117, Hawks 104

Detroit improved its Central Division lead to two games, beating Atlanta despite 50 points from Dominique Wilkins.

Joe Dumars had 25 points for the Pistons, who never trailed en route to their fifth consecutive victory.

Detroit, which got 20 points from Vinnie Johnson, used an 11-0 second-quarter run and a 21-9 third-period burst to go ahead by 18 points with 2:09 left in the quarter.

Wilkins, who along with Michael Jordan has two 50-point games this season, shot 18-for-35 from the field and made 13 of 14 free throws.

Bucks 117, Celtics 116

Milwaukee, which lost to Boston by 36 points last Friday, saw an 18-point lead dwindle to one before holding on.

Sidney Moncrief scored 12 of his 20 points in the fourth quarter, but the Celtics made the score 117-116 on Danny Ainge's two free throws with 33 seconds left.

Paul Pressey missed a layup with 18 seconds remaining and Boston got the rebound. But Larry Bird's off-balance jumper inside the lane hit the front of the rim at the buzzer.

Jazz 113, Rockets 112

Utah went scoreless in the last 1:47, but held on to beat Houston.

Karl Malone had 34 points and 17 rebounds and John Stockton matched his career-high with 26 points, including the last basket for the Jazz with 1:48 remaining.

After Stockton, who also had 12 assists, made it 113-106, the Rockets scored six straight points to get within one. In the final seconds, Cedric Maxwell got an offensive rebound for the Rockets and went up for a possible game-winning shot, but Mel Turpin blocked it, grabbed the ball and held on as time expired.

Akeem Olajuwon led Houston with 27 points.

Nets 104, Clippers 75

New Jersey made Willis Reed's debut as coach a success as Otis Birdsong scored six of his 18 points in a 14-0 run at the start of the game.

Los Angeles, which committed 30 turnovers, scored only 11 points in the first quarter as the Nets ended a six-game losing streak in a battle between the two worst teams in the league. New Jersey now is 13-42 and Los Angeles is 12-41.

Los Angeles, which got 16 points from Mike Woodson, was held scoreless for the first 6:24, missed its first 11 shots.

Tim McCormick added 16 points and 13 rebounds for the Nets.

Knicks 98, Pacers 96

New York came from 20 points behind Indiana in the second half and won its 11th straight home game on Mark Jackson's 10-foot jumper at the buzzer.

The Madison Square Garden streak is the longest by the Knicks since they won 20 in a row at home in 1972-73.

The Pacers, who led 75-55 in the third quarter, tied the score 96-96 with 10 seconds left on a 3-pointer by John Long. Jackson then took a pass from Patrick Ewing, who had 28 points and 16 rebounds, drove toward the basket, pulled up and swished the game-winner.

Indiana, held to 12 points on 3-for-19 shooting in the fourth quarter, was led by Chuck Person with 27 points.

Spurs 114, Suns 109

Walter Berry scored 29 points as San Antonio handed Phoenix its third straight loss and 23rd in 28 road games this season.

Trailing 87-85 after three quarters, the Spurs rallied behind Alvin Robertson, who scored 10 points in the fourth quarter, and David Greenwood, who added nine.

Robertson finished with 20 points and Greg Anderson had 20 points and 13 rebounds for San Antonio.

Eddie Johnson scored 23 points for Phoenix. Center Mark West, newly acquired from Cleveland, blocked nine shots.

Six Of Chosen Seven Stayed Put

By The Associated Press

Six of the seven free agents given a "new look" at free agency by arbitrator Thomas Roberts have decided not to look back.

Tuesday was the final day the seven players covered by Roberts' Jan. 22 ruling could switch teams, and all except Kirk Gibson elected to stay with their current clubs.

Gibson, who was to receive $1.3 million this season from the Detroit Tigers, signed a three-year $4.5-million contract last month with the Los Angeles Dodgers. The only other free agent to attempt to leave his current club was Carlton Fisk of the Chicago White Sox, who wanted to go to the Kansas City Royals.

Fisk, who has a one-year $700,000 contract with Chicago, wanted $1.2 million from Kansas City. The Royals offered $800,000.

The five other players affected by Roberts' ruling did not enter into negotiations with other teams and will remain with their current clubs. They are Donnie Moore of the California Angels ($850,000), Joe Niekro of the Minnesota Twins ($800,000), Butch Wynegar of the Angels ($700,000), Juan Beniquez of the Toronto Blue Jays ($400,000) and Tom Brookens of the Tigers ($350,000). Brookens agreed Monday to a one-year contract extension.

LOUD BELL

George Bell doesn't want Toronto manager Jimmy Williams to move him to designated hitter.

"We'll see who lasts longer with the organization, him or me," Bell said after arriving at the Blue Jays camp in West Palm Beach, Fla. "I know he's the manager; he's going to do what he wants. OK, I'm DH, I can deal with that; no problem. But we'll see who's going to be DH all season. I think me and Jimmy, we fight."

"There's gonna be a bomb explode. He says it's good for the team. Good for the team, my butt!"

"What's wrong with this team? He doesn't know me, the kind of man I am. He should know I don't want to be a DH. If they want to find a DH, they should call Cliff Johnson or Willie Aikens. Maybe they should bring back Otto Velez. I'm still too young."

Bell agreed to a two-year contract for a guaranteed $4.1 million last month.

"They think that just because they pay me a lot of money, they can make me do whatever they want," Bell said. "Well, they can't. Maybe I won't play quite so hard."

ABOUT FACE

Danny Tartabull asked the Kansas City Royals to trade him on Monday.

On Tuesday he agreed to a one-year contract for $330,000. He can earn $45,000 more in incentive bonuses.

"Basically the only thing I'm really happy about is going back to my teammates and my fans in Kansas City," Tartabull said.

He batted .309 last season with 34 home runs and 101 runs batted in and made $145,000. Kansas City was prepared to renew his contract today at $290,000 and that forced Tartabull to agree.

But he said he agreed with great bitterness.

"I think that's the feeling," he said. "If you weren't paid what you felt you were worth, you'd probably be a little upset, too."

ANYTHING TO GET ATTENTION

What do the frozen folk in Massachusetts want to do this time of year? They want to visit Red Sox training camp in Winter Haven, Fla.

Governor Michael Dukakis is no different, so he's stopping by today. That dozens of New England reporters and television crews follow the Sox and that the Massachusetts primary is next week probably may have something to do with it.

MORE SIGNINGS

Outfielder Ruben Sierra agreed to a one-year contract with the Texas Rangers for between $215,000 and $250,000. He batted .263 in 1987 with 30 homers and 109 runs batted in. ... Shortstop Rey Quinones and second baseman Harold Reynolds agreed to one-year contracts with the Seattle Mariners.

In the National League, infielder-outfielder Kevin Mitchell agreed to a one-year contract with San Francisco for $237,500 and Giants second baseman Robby Thompson agreed to a one-year contract for $232,500. ... First baseman Andres Galarraga, pitcher Jeff Parrett and outfielder

Ron Shepard signed one-year contracts with the Montreal Expos. ... Pitchers Greg Mathews and Joe Magrane, first baseman Mike Laga and shortstop Tim Jones signed one-year contracts with the St. Louis Cardinals.

STARTING ALREADY

During his last tour as Yankees manager, Billy Martin made the field at Yankee Stadium out to be Bastogne and the Metrodome out to be Carlsbad Caverns.

The Yankees open the exhibition schedule Friday against Atlanta at West Palm Beach, Fla., and because of the field, Martin will leave all-stars Don Mattingly, Willie Randolph and Jack Clark back at Yankees camp in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

"The field there is bad. They have two teams playing on it (Atlanta and Montreal)," Martin said.

FOR OPENERS

Pam Postema, who is getting a spring training tryout with the National League, will work her first exhibition game of 1988 when the Atlanta Braves play the University of Georgia on Thursday.

She received a tryout several years ago with the American League and worked the plate in the Hall of Fame game between the Braves and Yankees in 1987.

WAITING, WAITING, WAITING
Pascual Perez of the Expos will be delayed at least two more weeks because of visa problems in the Dominican Republic. United States immigration officials are checking him carefully because of his 1984 conviction on cocaine possession in the Dominican Republic.

HELP, HELP ME RHODEN

Yankees pitcher Rick Rhoden will bat second in the Yankees exhibition opener against the Braves. Yankees manager Billy Martin is thinking of using him as a pinch hitter this season.

Abernethy Given A Conviction

OPELIKA, Ala. (AP) — Prosecutors say the verdict sends a message to unscrupulous sports agents, but Jim Abernethy is confident he won't have to go to jail because of his dealings with a former Auburn football star.

Abernethy, a former sports agent from Atlanta, was convicted Tuesday by a circuit court jury of tampering with a sports event, a misdemeanor.

Despite a plea for leniency by defense attorneys, Lee County Circuit Judge Robert M. Harper imposed the maximum sentence: one year in jail and a $2,000 fine.

The jury, after 2½ hours of deliberations, returned innocent verdicts on two other misdemeanor counts, commercial bribery and violation of deceptive trade laws.

Assistant attorney generals Don Valeska and William Wasden, who prosecuted the case, issued a statement praising the decision.

"We're extremely pleased that college football is finally being protected and Attorney General Don Siegelman has been the only public official in this country to take on sports agents for giving college athletes money illegally and ruining their eligibility."

The charges stemmed from Abernethy's involvement with Auburn cornerback Kevin Porter before the 1987 season. Porter, an All-Southeastern Conference selection, testified that he signed a contract with Abernethy and received nearly $4,000 in cash.

Abernethy, who remained free on $1,000 bond, said he would appeal the verdict to the Alabama Court of Criminal Appeals, which probably won't consider the case for at least six months, according to attorneys on both sides.

"I'm comfortable with the two acquittals and we're confident that the conviction will be reversed on the appellate level," Abernethy said.

Defense attorney Bill Baxley, a former Alabama lieutenant governor and attorney general, said he was disappointed with the verdict but "this was a highly legal case. They (jurors) did the best they could."

He also said he was confident Abernethy's appeal would be successful.

The case went to the jury Tuesday afternoon after the judge, outside the jurors' presence, told state prosecutors they were stretching Alabama law "about to the breaking point" in their case against Abernethy.

Harper, however, rejected defense motions to find Abernethy innocent before sending the case to the jury.

In closing arguments, Valeska acknowledged that such a sports agent case had never been prosecuted before in Alabama. "This is the first time. But it's not the last. This time it's forever."

Sports agent Norby Walters of New York and his former associate, Lloyd Bloom, have been indicted on similar charges in Tuscaloosa for their involvement with former Alabama basketball star Derrick McKey, the Southeastern Conference Player of the Year in 1986-87.

McKey was ruled ineligible for his senior year and now plays with the Seattle SuperSonics in the National Basketball Association.

Porter testified Monday that he got $2,000 from Abernethy in his Atlanta office on Aug. 3, 1987, and later he twice received $900 in cash delivered by a go-between.

Porter said the contract he signed with Abernethy did not alter his performance during Auburn's 1987 football season, but disclosure of the deal disqualified the cornerback from playing his final game with the Tigers in the Sugar Bowl on New Year's Day.

Baxley told the Lee County jury that an innocent verdict would not "send a bad message" to the sports world. He said the charges simply did not apply to Abernethy's actions and that Siegelman should be drafting new legislation to curb sports agent abuses.

After the prosecution rested its case Tuesday, Harper said the tampering count was the only one that seemed to relate to the evidence offered.

The judge denied a defense motion to throw out the case on grounds that no criminal offense took place in Lee County, but he said that ruling may be argued successfully on appeal if the transcript shows Porter never mentioned getting money from Abernethy in Lee County.

Attorneys were unsure whether Porter said he received money in Lee County.

Porter said he did not find the Abernethy contract and payments totaling $3,800 to be "shocking to the conscience," as the deceptive trade indictment charged. He said they helped out at a time when his mother was in financial trouble.

Hindman Wall, associate athletic director at Auburn, testified about the manner in which National Collegiate Athletic Association rules affect Auburn student-athletes. Prosecutors attempted to show through his testimony that Porter was legally an agent of the university, as the indictment alleges.

On cross-examination by Baxley, Wall said he understood a number of Auburn football greats, including former Gov. Fob James and 1957 star Jimmy "Red" Phillips, were paid for playing in the Senior Bowl and apparently did not have their scholarship revoked.

★ Free Checking

There are two convenient ways to get free checking at First American. You can simply keep a $500 minimum balance in a regular savings account. Or, if you prefer, keep a $200 minimum balance in your checking account. Either way, you pay no service charges or per check charges.

★ Interest Checking

To earn 5¼% on your checking, simply maintain a balance of $1,000. If your balance falls below $1,000, you'll still earn 5% interest on your entire balance. As long as you maintain a $400 balance, you'll avoid all service charges and per check charges.

55 and Free

If you're 55 or over and have any automatic transfer arrangement, you're eligible for 55 and Free. It's a special package of free services including an interest checking account. Once you open your checking account with only a $100 deposit, there are no fees, no per check charges and no minimum balance.

New Park For Durham Bulls?

DURHAM (AP) — Miles Wolf, owner of the Durham Bulls baseball team, is talking with city officials about the possibility of building a ballpark that could help attract a top minor-league club, a Durham newspaper reported today.

Wolf met last week with Mayor Wib Gulley and Johnny "Red" Williams, chairman of the City Council's Public Works Committee, to discuss building a park on 12.5 acres of city-owned land in the Hayti section immediately north of the Durham Freeway, the Durham Morning Herald reported.

Both Wolf and Williams were reluctant to discuss the plan in detail Tuesday, saying the discussions were preliminary.

But Wolf said that "we're exploring a lot of options right now" with regard to the future of minor-league baseball in Durham, among them the Hayti location. "My first preference is this one, obviously."

And Williams acknowledged that "a meeting has taken place involving Mayor Gulley, myself, Miles and his architect."

The Bulls are currently members of the Class A Carolina League, roughly the middle rung on minor-league baseball's ladder. They play in 50-year-old Durham Athletic Park, which seats about 5,000 fans.

The new park envisioned by Wolf would allow the city to attract a Triple-A franchise, the last stop before the major leagues, the newspaper said.

Such a park would seat 10,000 to 12,000 fans and would be accompanied by parking for 1,000 to 2,000 cars, Wolf said.

The matter is "terribly politically sensitive," Wolf said, and Williams encouraged the idea of community discussions "because of the historic nature of that site."

Hayti was a black business quarter until the 1960s, when the urban-renewal theories then current dictated its wholesale demolition. The city acquired the vacant property, most of which lay idle for 20 years.

Assisted by the city, the district has shown new signs of life in recent years, attracting the Heritage Square and Phoenix Square business developments, along with some housing.

What happened to Hayti still rankles some black leaders, who view the area as having special meaning for the black community.

Williams, who is black, said he encouraged Wolf to talk with other black officials, including William Bell, chairman of the Durham County Board of Commissioners, and Mayor Pro Tem Chester Jenkins.

Williams said he was not opposed to the idea of a ballpark in Hayti — provided some additional use could be made of the tract on which it would sit.

"On the front end ... it was suggested that the baseball stadium alone would not be the best and most ideal land use," he said. Williams said he preferred some accompanying office-institutional use of the property, with parking for baseball by night and workers by day.

If that can be worked out, and if the idea creates no serious repercussions in the black community, Williams said, he would favor it. But "if it's going to create a controversy, I'm going to be the first one to lead the debate in opposition."

Wolf said the park alone would cost "in the neighborhood of $6 million," while Williams said the type of development he visualized might carry a price tag of $12 million.

"The key question in all the discussions is, 'How do you pay for it?'" Williams said. "No one wants to foot the entire bill."

If the area is to attract Triple-A baseball, Wolf said, a stadium other than Durham Athletic Park is a necessity.

The park's seating capacity is too small and its right-field fence too close for Triple-A sluggers, he said, and correcting those shortcomings would require expensive renovations. But Wolf said there is an even more significant difficulty.

"The real problem with Durham Athletic Park is you're never going to have enough parking there," he said.

Fan support has been exceptional since minor-league baseball returned to Durham in 1980 following an eight-year interruption. The Bulls have consistently led Class A franchises in attendance.

With that backing, with a new, top-of-the-line park and with major-league expansion anticipated by 1992, Durham would be in a solid position to attract one of the four to six Triple-A franchises that will feed the new teams in the majors, Wolfe said.

"I think we can get Triple-A baseball in the Triangle, and I think if we get it, it should be in Durham," Wolf said.

Wolf recently has been involved in a running battle with Raleigh over a Triple-A franchise.

Raleigh wants a team and has endorsed a bond issue for a park, but must get Wolf's approval under minor-league rules that grant territorial rights to a team owner in the 35-mile area surrounding his park.

Wolf had backed Stuart Revvo's bid to bring his Kinston team to Raleigh. But when Raleigh officials picked another group to bring a team to the Capital City, Wolf said he would not grant a waiver of his territorial rights.

Ozaki Is Getting Mixed Reviews

By The Associated Press

The Masters, U.S. Golf Association and the PGA Tour are taking different approaches to the controversy surrounding Japanese star Jumbo Ozaki.

Ozaki, an occasional competitor on the American Tour for the last decade "is fine with us," said Sid Wilson, director of public relations for the PGA Tour. Ozaki played last weekend in the Los Angeles Open.

And Ozaki, winner of three Japanese tournaments last season, has been given a special exemption by the U.S.G.A. to compete in the U.S. Open at Brookline, Mass. June 16-19.

"Ozaki was accused of keeping bad company and has apologized. He was not accused of criminal activity. He has not been penalized by either the Japanese PGA or the Japan Golf Association," said Frank Hannigan, senior executive director of the U.S.G.A.

But Ozaki, reported by nationally-circulated Japanese newspapers to have an association with members of an alleged organized crime group, will not compete in the Masters.

Hord Hardin, chairman of the Masters, told The Associated Press an invitation was extended to Ozaki in December and the veteran player accepted.

Shortly after Ozaki's acceptance of the invitation to Augusta, Ga. for the April 7-10 tournament, several Japanese newspapers published reports that Ozaki was a known associate of members of Ingawa-Kai, identified as an organized crime group.

Ozaki went into seclusion, and later issued a public apology.

"I deeply regret what I have done," he said.

Morisada Hosokawa, president of the Japanese Golf Association, was quoted by Japanese newspapers as saying Ozaki would not be welcome at the Japanese Open. He later withdrew the comments.

Ozaki was publicly censured by the Japanese PGA.

Masters officials were informed of the situation and were visited by Japanese golf officials.

"We let it be known," Hardin said, "that under the circumstances, we regretted issuing the invitation."

Some time later, Hardin said, Ozaki declined the invitation, saying he wanted "to make a fresh and purified start" for "the tournament of my greatest admiration."

Hardin said the action does not preclude Ozaki from being eligible for future Masters invitations.

Wilson said the Tour has received a letter from Shoichi Asami, chairman of the Japan PGA, saying the newspaper reports of Ozaki's associations were exaggerated.

"We can definitely say," the letter said, "the articles carried the news to the extreme."

Wilson said Tour officials would relay that information to Hardin.

Bell Makes Entrance And Blasts Williams

DUNEDIN, Fla. (AP) — Signing a multiyear contract for a guaranteed $4.1 million hasn't calmed George Bell. He arrived at spring training and blasted Toronto Manager Jimmy Williams, who wants to move him to designated hitter.

"We'll see who lasts longer with the organization, him or me," Bell said Tuesday. "I know he's the manager; he's going to do what he wants. OK, I'm DH, I can deal with that; no problem. But we'll see who's going to be DH all season. I think me and Jimmy, we fight."

Williams and Blue Jays General Manager Pat Gillick want Bell at DH and move Rob Ducey or Sil Campusano to the outfield.

"There's gonna be a bomb explode," Bell said. "He (Williams) says it's good for the team. Good for the team, my butt!"

"What's wrong with this team? He doesn't know me, the kind of man I am. He should know I don't want to be a DH. If they want to find a DH, they should call Cliff Johnson or Willie Aikens. Maybe they should bring back Otto Velez. I'm still too young."

"With our team, why is he screwing around with the lineup? In '85 we made the playoffs and he was the third-base coach. In '86, the lineup was screwed up when he moved Damaso Garcia out of leadoff and we finished 14 games behind. Now he's screwing with the lineup again. There's something going on with this club I don't understand."

When told of Bell's comments, Williams rolled his eyes.

"I'll talk to George," he said. "I can't worry about that stuff. If he goes out and does his job and we win, that's all I care about. We've got an excellent frame of mind at this camp and we don't want that upset."

Williams said the situation was made perfectly clear to Bell at a meeting Jan. 16 in Dallas and that Bell, the 1987 American League Most Valuable Player, reluctantly agreed.

Bell said there has been a serious misunderstanding about that meeting.

"He told me '10-15 games at DH,' and I agreed with him because that would be good for my legs and we've got some good young outfielders on this club ... but not every day," Bell said. "I don't appreciate it when the man is not honest with me."

"There's no way I'm gonna let him screw up my mind like he did Damo (Garcia). He can put my name down anywhere he likes, but I don't have to like it."

Randy Hendricks, Bell's agent, said last month that Bell would go along with the switch to DH, but that he hoped the Blue Jays would move Bell back to the outfield if things didn't work out.

"They think that just because they pay me a lot of money, they can make me do whatever they want," Bell said. "Well, they can't. Maybe I won't play quite so hard."

Geddes Set For Kemper

PRINCEVILLE, Hawaii (AP) — Jane Geddes is hoping to recapture some Island magic as she returns to defend her Women's Kemper Open title.

Geddes left Hawaii $72,750 richer in 1987, en route to the best season of her five-year LPGA career.

Geddes followed a second-place showing in the Hawaiian Ladies Open on Oahu with a sudden-death victory over Cathy Gerring in the 1987 Women's Kemper Open on Kauai Island.

She went on to win four other tournaments — the most of any player on the LPGA Tour last year.

Following a disappointing showing in the 1988 Hawaiian Ladies Open last week, Geddes returns to Kauai to defend her Women's Kemper Open title.

This year's Women's Kemper Open begins Thursday at the Mirage Princeville Makai Woods and Lakes nines on Kauai's breezy north shore. The $300,000, 72-hole tournament is scheduled to wind up Sunday.

Despite finishing 10 strokes off the pace in last week's Hawaiian Ladies Open, Geddes still has high hopes of improving her fortunes this week.

"It would be hard not to enjoy Hawaii," Geddes said. "I'm usually a slow starter, but I always play well in the heat."

Geddes' game failed last week in winds gusting up to 30 mph, but she believes she can overcome the weather.

"I'm not a great wind player, which helps here in Hawaii — I don't hit the ball low," Geddes said.

"But the reason I was good here last year is that you need to be a good course manager and think your way around. That's what happened."

Geddes was third on the 1987 LPGA money list with $396,818. Of the 28 events she played in 1987, Geddes placed in the top-10 14 times.

Not bad for a player who didn't swing a club until she was 17.

Pontiac To Close Fiero Plant

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — General Motors Corp.'s plastic-body, mid-engine Pontiac Fiero and the workers who make it have become the first victims of the slumping popularity of sporty two-seaters.

Michael Losh, Pontiac's general manager, said Tuesday that GM will stop making the Fiero after the 1988 model year and will close indefinitely the single Fiero plant here sometime this summer, idling 1,109 workers.

"The whole market's dead," said industry analyst Chris Cedergren of J.D. Power and Associates, blaming high insurance rates for a 30 percent drop in overall two-seater sales during 1987.

The slump has not spared Japanese auto-makers, who report slow sales of two-seat cars such as the sporty Toyota MR2 and the Mazda RX7, or Europeans, whose victims include four-cylinder Porsches.

Fiero also suffered problems that included frequent engine fires, which prompted GM to recall the entire 1984 model production run late last year. But analysts suggested the market killed the Fiero.

"We have seen a switch away from the high volumes of people who were willing to buy two-seat cars with limited luggage capacity," Losh said.

Fiero sales peaked at 101,720 cars in 1984 and fell to 47,156 last year.

Union and city officials said they were surprised by the Fiero decision despite the car's poor sales. When the Fiero is gone, no Pontiacs will be built in Pontiac.

UAW Local 653 President Harold Cox said his plant was one of the first at GM to accept Japanese-style team organization of workers under a contract that allowed the previously closed plant to reopen in 1983 to make the Fiero.

"We're going to continue to try to persuade General Motors to try to put something in there," Cox said. "It's a slap in our face that they rewarded us this way."

GM already closed a foundry, another car assembly plant, a heavy-duty truck plant and a bus plant in this town of 77,000 residents and had cut production at the Fiero plant several times, putting more than 1,200 other Fiero workers on layoff.

Pontiac spokesman Reginald Harris said GM will make sure Fiero parts are available into the future.

Moslem Wins Biggest Award

NEW YORK (AP) — Inamullah Khan of Pakistan today won the 1988 Templeton Prize for promoting interreligious cooperation. He is the first Moslem to win the $390,000 international award.

It is the biggest prize given in the world, about $40,000 more than the Nobel prizes in science and literature.

Announcement of this year's winner was to be made at a news conference at Manhattan's Church Center of the United Nations.

Khan, 73, a founder and secretary-general of the World Moslem Congress, was cited for his "tireless work as a coordinator for peace between Moslems, Christians and Jews."

Khan, of Karachi, also is chairman of the executive committee of the interreligious World Conference on Religion and Peace, presiding at meetings around the world.

He has been keenly supportive of United Nations concerns, including disarmament, human rights, education and welfare, and twice has chaired meetings of the World Federation of United Nations Associations in Geneva, Switzerland.

The annual prize, established in 1972 by American financier John Templeton, is given to recognize those "who through original and pioneering ways advanced the knowledge and love of God."

Of the previous 15 winners, 13 have been Christians, one Hindu and one Buddhist.

Scientists Confirm Material Loses Electric Resistance At High Temps

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Scientists in two laboratories say they have confirmed a report from researchers that a new kind of superconducting material loses all resistance to electricity at a record high temperature.

Researchers at the University of Arkansas say the material showed zero resistance at about minus 269 degrees Fahrenheit, more than 20 degrees above previous widely accepted reports for stable superconducting compounds.

Paul Chu of the University of Houston said he had confirmed the Arkansas results, finding zero resistance at minus 272 degrees. He said his sample also expelled an applied magnetic field, a hallmark of superconductivity called the Meissner effect.

The results also have been confirmed by researchers at International Business Machines Corp., said IBM spokesman Jerry Present. He said he could not release details.

Superconductivity is the ability to carry current without resistance. Scientists are trying to make materials that become superconducting at as high a temperature as possible, to make them practical for uses in high-speed computers, bullet trains and other applications.

Higher temperatures than the Arkansas mark have been reported in the press. But some have not been confirmed in other laboratories, and others refer to the temperature at which a sample shows initial signs of isolated pockets of superconductivity, rather than superconducting pathways along its entire length.

The new compound showed initial signs of superconductivity at minus 238 degrees, said University of Arkansas researcher Allen Hermann, who did the research with Zhengxi Sheng.

That is slightly higher than the mark of about minus 243 degrees recently reported for superconductors that include the element bismuth rather than a so-called "rare earth."

The Arkansas compound uses the element thallium rather than bismuth or rare earth. Other ingredients are calcium, barium, copper and oxygen.

The results were announced to the press and at a scientific meeting last month, but were not widely reported. They have been accepted for publication in the British journal Nature, Hermann said in a telephone interview.

Chu said lessons from the thallium and bismuth compounds will help in developing materials with still higher temperatures. He also noted that the thallium compound showed zero resistance above 100 degrees on the Kelvin scale, giving a psychological boost for hopes of higher temperatures.

The 100-degree Kelvin mark corresponds to about minus 280 degrees Fahrenheit.

Thallium is "not quite practical" for applications outside the laboratory because it is toxic and in limited supply, he said.

Hermann said he thinks thallium and bismuth eventually will be abandoned in favor of new materials with higher temperatures and better characteristics for applications.

Brian Schwartz, physics professor at Brooklyn College, said the Arkansas work is encouraging because it shows that substituting elements in superconducting materials may lead to higher temperatures.

Anti-Tape Protection Ineffective

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The music industry promises to find a new way to thwart home taping with digital recorders now that its proposed electronic anti-taping device has been declared ineffective by the National Bureau of Standards.

The bureau's report, released Tuesday, dealt a blow to the recording industry's campaign to prevent digital audio tape, or DAT, recorders from reaching the domestic market.

The recorders, manufactured by Japan and other foreign makers, can copy compact disc recordings with virtually no loss in sound quality. The U.S. recording industry fears that the machines will lead to mass copying that would devastate the compact disc and record markets, and so far has managed to keep the devices off the U.S. market.

Rep. Robert W. Kastenmeier, D-Wis., chairman of a House Judiciary subcommittee that handles copyright issues, said the results of the bureau's study — which he requested last year — shows that Congress should stop trying to prevent U.S. sales of DAT recorders.

Kastenmeier said the report appears to doom an industry-backed bill that would require equipping DAT recorders with scanning devices intended to prevent copying of specially coded recordings.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., also would prohibit the manufacture or sale of any device designed to bypass the scanner.

The bureau, an agency of the Commerce Department, said that the scanning device was unreliable and easily bypassed, and that it damaged the sound quality of recordings.

"Because the report was conclusive about the ineffectiveness of blocking devices, it is even more desirable that the DAT controversy be resolved by the industries involved, rather than by congressional imposition of a solution," Kastenmeier said.

Kastenmeier said in an interview that as a result of the bureau of standards report, "I think it highly unlikely that the Waxman bill will succeed."

U.S. manufacturers voluntarily blocked introduction of DAT units on the domestic market until Congress resolved the home taping issue, but the self-imposed ban has recently shown signs of crumbling under pressure from foreign manufacturers and demand from U.S. recording enthusiasts.

Kastenmeier said an alternative to a congressional solution might be payment of recording artists out of proceeds from sales of DAT units, or from an endowment fund created by the recording industry.

Jason Berman, president of the Recording Industry Association of America, said the industry accepts the study results but intends to find a new technological solution to home taping, which he said costs the recording companies $1.5 billion in lost sales annually.

"Working together with the hardware manufacturers, we are certain to find an acceptable technological solution," Berman said.

Meanwhile, recording industry officials promised to sue any manufacturer that tries to sell the machines in the United States before the copying issue is resolved, either legislatively or through industry negotiations.

But Gary Shapiro of the Home Recording Rights Coalition said "there is no reason at this point why manufacturers should not be selling" digital recorders in the United States.

Vitamin D Production Blocked

Acid Rain Pollutants May Boost Colon Cancer Risk

AP Science Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — Elevated rates of colon cancer in the nation's Northeast and north-central region may be due to an acid rain pollutant that absorbs sunlight, impairing the body's ability to make vitamin D, researchers say.

Preliminary studies have suggested that vitamin D and calcium combine to lower the risk of colon cancer.

According to the new theory, sulfur dioxide in the atmosphere absorbs ultraviolet rays from the sun that trigger the production of vitamin D in the skin, researchers said at a press conference Tuesday.

Sulfur dioxide, produced by the burning of high-sulfur coal, is a principal ingredient of acid rain.

A similar effect was observed in London more than 350 years ago, said the originators of the new theory, said Cedric Garland of the University of California, San Diego, and his brother, Frank, of the Naval Health Research Center in San Diego.

Around 1629, Londoners began burning high-sulfur coal from Newcastle, they said. Within a short time, children began exhibiting the leg malformations characteristic of rickets — a vitamin D deficiency disease.

Vitamin D aids the absorption of calcium, and calcium and vitamin D together appear to lower the risk of colon cancer, the Garlands said.

Dr. Martin Lipkin of New York's Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center said the Garlands' theory "is a legitimate theory" and work is in progress to clarify the role of vitamin D and calcium in colon cancer.

"We're looking into how many individuals might be benefited by calcium — and the degree to which they might be," said Lipkin. Two years ago, he showed that calcium supplements could change the growth of cells in the colons of people at high risk of colon cancer and might therefore lower colon cancer risk.

An authority on diet and cancer, Regina Ziegler of the National Cancer Institute in Bethesda, Md., cautioned that because this was only a theory, people should not begin taking vitamin D supplements to protect against colon cancer.

"People have trouble distinguishing theories from proven effects," she said. "With evidence such as this, you certainly don't want to start taking large doses of vitamin D. Vitamin D in high doses can be hazardous to your health."

The Garlands' explanation is not the only theory to explain why colon cancer rates are highest in the north-central and northeastern states.

"Other people have hypothesized that increased exercise, increased fruit and vegetable intake and differences in drinking water may lead to the lower incidence in the South," said Ziegler.

The Garlands cautioned that people should not spend more time in the sun to increase their vitamin D production because exposure to sunlight increases the risk of skin cancer.

Modern Barnstormers Take Act To The Skies

By ALBERTO S. FRANCO
Associated Press Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Five days a week, Karen McCollough can hardly catch her breath from juggling her college business courses and her job as concierge at a Dallas hotel. But beginning next month, the weekends will be the times that take her breath away. In mid-March, Earl Cherry and the Roll Models will take to the skies with Miss McCollough riding the wing of a barnstorming bi-plane for air shows across the nation. "When most people are 3 to 4 years old ... they wish they could fly like Superman," said Miss McCollough, 25. "This is the closest thing to it."

"There's nothing real I can compare it to," she said. "As a matter of fact, I hate rollercoasters and I'm afraid of heights."

Her partner is the namesake of the act, Earl Cherry. Cherry says his stunt flying group based in Lafayette, La., has performed in shows throughout the United States and Canada and has done some motion picture work.

Cherry, 43, has been involved with flying since he was 16. His father took him to an airport in his native central Illinois and signed him up for flying lessons.

In the 27 years since then, Cherry has flown for many different bosses.

"I flew 1,200 combat hours in Vietnam during 1968 and only one bullet hit me," he says. After a one-year tour in southeast Asia, where he was decorated for piloting a Huey helicopter, he finished his stint with the Army, training pilots in Alabama.

Over the next five years, Cherry flew different aircraft in jobs ranging from corporate aviation to cattle herding with a helicopter. It was in 1976 that he began aerial acrobatics.

"I saw this movie, 'The Great Waldo Pepper' starring Robert Redford, and it stirred up this great wall of desire in me like Jack London's 'Call of the Wild,'" he says.

Cherry bought a bi-plane and joined a group known as The Great American Air Show. He learned acrobatics under Grant Kirby, star of the 1950s television series, "Sky King."

"The big test was learning how to do it on the deck — at ground level," Cherry says. "If you make an error, then you don't have any room to make it up."

In 1981, Cherry decided he would start his own show; he now runs Earl Cherry and the Roll Models along with the aerobics operation known as Cherry Air at Lafayette Regional Airport.

His wife, Paula, served as one of the first Roll Models and rode the wing for five years. While the group has had a good safety record with no injuries in its seven performing seasons, Cherry says there was a scare early on.

"Our first year we had one engine failure," Cherry says. "We were coming down the airstrip upside down at about 100 feet with Paula on the wing. I managed to whip it back rightside up and landed it."

At 78, Tar Heel Fashions Straw Brooms By Hand

By ELIZABETH LELAND
The Charlotte Observer

JACKSON HILL, N.C. (AP) — Samuel Fine hung his hand-lettered sign beside N.C. 49 more than 25 years ago: "Brooms for sale $1.00 & up."

Fine, 78, still works most days in the worn white-frame building, his large gnarled hands as green as his work pants — stained by the dye he uses to color broom straw.

But his handmade brooms now fetch $2 to $4.

"I'm too lazy to climb that pole and take the sign down," he says. "Of course, I do sell those little ole, bitty ones for $1 and $1.25."

Fine's one-room factory is 100 yards and a lifetime away from the noisy stream of cars passing through Davidson County 40 miles northeast of Charlotte. Inside, he dyes straw in a rusty old bathtub. He removes the seeds in a handmade oak thresher. And he fashions the wispy straw into brooms on machines he bought for $1,000 from a bankrupt broom maker in Atlanta 25 years ago.

"When I started, there were 36 broom factories in North Carolina," he says. "There was a whole lot of competition and there ain't now. It's a thing of the past."

Fine learned the craft 51 years ago at the old Davidson Broom Co. in Newsom in Davidson County, where he worked for 25 years before starting his own business. Co-workers could make 17 or 18 dozen brooms on a good day. Fine says he could make 20.

He handles broom straw with a familiarity that comes from making up to 240 brooms a day, five days a week for more than 50 years — tens of thousands of brooms. In the past few years, Fine has slowed to a few hours and five dozen brooms a day.

"I work when I want to," he says. "And I don't if I don't."

Fine's brooms begin in a broom-corn field in Mexico. He used to buy the dried straw by the boxcar load, but now only as much as will fit in his '79 GMC pickup. Once the straw is dyed and threshed, he fits a yellow handle into a machine called a winder and wires tufts of straw to the handle in quick, graceful motions.

Next, at the stitching machine, he sews red and white nylon thread around the straw to keep its shape. He trims the ends at another machine. In a final touch, he pastes a "Little Jewell" label on each handle before bundling the brooms by the dozen.

Fine says he's sold every broom he's ever made — and always there was demand for more. For many years, cotton mills and groceries bought them. A few businesses in Kannapolis and Salisbury still do, but most customers these days are passersby.

One afternoon, he says, two visitors wanted to know about the yellow broom handles, made in Brazil and stacked around the factory floor. "These two ladies come from China Grove over here and asked me, 'Where do you get those handles? We didn't know they'd grow like that in these woods.'"

Fine said he learned by watching others.

"You don't learn it right easy," he says. "Some people never can learn, and some'll just catch on easy. I trained about a dozen people to make brooms. I used to have several people in here working with me. But it got so you couldn't get nobody no count. If more than a half-century. He says there are only a few like him still at work in North Carolina, and he now works only "when I want to." (AP Laserphoto)

Hotel Survey

Business, Leisure Needs Different

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The behavior and needs of people traveling on business are quite different from those of the vacation traveler, a recent survey on hotel guests indicates.

"Because their reasons for traveling are so distinct, the differences are reflected all the way from planning stages, room selection and the hotel stay through payment time," said Andrew Lien, senior vice president of worldwide marketing for Holiday Inns, which conducted the study.

The Memphis-based organization surveyed more than 1,200 randomly selected guests at 620 of the chain's lodgings at locations ranging from downtown, airport and suburban hotels to resort, roadside and small-town facilities.

While more business travelers book advance reservations than vacation travelers do, most of them make travel arrangements through their secretaries, corporate travel department or travel agents.

They are nearly six times more likely to travel alone than vacation travelers and three times more likely to arrive by air, traveling by air or rental car rather than their own cars.

Vacation guests have more time to use recreational facilities such as indoor pools and to read magazines found in their rooms. The study suggests they are more likely to spend their evenings out on the town, while business travelers will relax by watching TV in their rooms.

While it might seem that the vacationer would have breakfast in bed, it's actually the business traveler, pressed for time, who is more likely to take room service — twice as often as the guest with more leisure.

Slightly more than half of both groups request accommodations other than a standard room with two double beds. However, more business travelers prefer a room with a single king-size bed, while vacation travelers are more likely to ask for adjoining rooms.

Business guests are more apt to watch free in-room movies, make long distance phone calls and use the telephone wake-up service, as well as ask for room service more frequently.

Carolina Events

Greenville Artists In Beaufort Art Show

WASHINGTON, N.C. — An exhibit of art by three Greenville artists — Wanda Johnsrude, Maria McLaughlin and David Norris — will open at the Beaufort County Arts Council on Sunday, with a reception, free and open to the public from 2 to 4 p.m.

Ms. Johnsrude and Ms. McLaughlin will have a joint show of mixed media works in the Belk-Bracy Gallery of the council's center. Ms. Johnrude studied art in Durham and at East Carolina University. She has had shows in Greenville, Goldsboro and Raleigh. Ms. McLaughlin is a candidate for the MFA degree in painting at ECU. Her work has been exhibited in Greenville, Kinston and in Maryland.

Norris is exhibiting collages of landscapes based on his affinity for history. He holds the BFA degree in printmaking from ECU and has exhibited his work in Greenville, Raleigh, New Bern and New York City.

A concert by bassoonist Nancy Bondurant of Sandhills Community collage is scheduled from 2:30 to 3:15 p.m. during the Sunday reception.

'Music Man' Being Staged In Goldsboro

GOLDSBORO — "The Music Man" will be presented by Center Stage Theater Thursday through Saturday and again March 10-12 at Herman Park Center in Goldsboro. A matinee will be held at 3 p.m. Sunday.

For more details and reservations call 736-3300.

Silkscreens On View At Reynolda House

WINSTON-SALEM — Reynolda House Museum of American Art will sponsor an exhibit of 40 silkscreens from the collection of Dave and Reba Williams. This collection, from the National Academy of Design in New York City, will be on view at Reynolda House beginning Thursday and continuing through April 15.

The exhibit includes works by Jasper Johns, Jackson Pollack, Andy Warhol, Robert Gwathmey, Hans Hoffman and more 20th century American artists. The opening reception, free and open to the public, will be held on Thursday at 8 p.m.

History Written On N.C. State Unit

RALEIGH — Two former faculty members have written the first comprehensive history of the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at North Carolina State University.

Drs. W.L. Carpenter and D.W. Colvard are the authors of the 510-page book, "Knowledge is Power," which traces the college from 1877 to 1984. They begin their book with an account of how L.L. Polk and other 19th Century farm leaders succeeded in getting North Carolina to establish a college to teach "agriculture and the mechanic arts."

Copies of the book may be ordered by writing to: Agricultural Communications, Box 7603, N.C. State University, Raleigh, N.C., 27695.

Michael Caine Is Worried About Not Having Work

By MATT WOLF
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Michael Caine has just made his eighth film in three years and has a TV miniseries set to roll, but the Oscar-winning star of "Sherlock and Me" says he still worries about being out of work.

"You feel uneasy if you haven't got something to do," Caine said in an interview in North London's Camden Town, where the $8.5 million movie was concluding its nine-week shoot. "People say I work all the time, but I don't. What they (distributors) do is always put the bloody things out at the same time."

The actor's on-screen good cheer has been one of the few constants in the ever-changing Hollywood scene. Last year, he played Sally Field's love interest in "Surrender" and a British intelligence agent in "The Fourth Protocol." He starred in films as quintessentially American as "Jaws IV — The Revenge," and as quintessentially English as "The Whistle Blower," a political thriller.

In 1986 he was a British diplomat romantically linked with call girl Sigourney Weaver in "Half Moon Street," and had vivid supporting roles in "Sweet Liberty" and "Mona Lisa."

Then, too, there was his Academy Award last year for best supporting actor for his performance in "Hannah and Her Sisters." The erstwhile Cockney, who was born Maurice Joseph Micklewhite in 1933, the son of a porter at Billingsgate fish market in London, had integrated himself into the bittersweet world of Woody Allen's Manhattan neurotics.

"I'd known Woody for years, and I knew New York so well," said Caine. "I don't have a voice which is posh British, anyway."

"My attitude is that I'm more like an American, coming from a working-class background. Lots of Americans think I'm Australian, or something like that — Crocodile Dundee's father."

Caine's previous Oscar nominations were for "Alfie" in 1966, "Sleuth" in 1972 and "Educating Rita" in 1983.

In his new film, he impersonates that celebrated sleuth, Sherlock Holmes. Caine is a boozing, down-on-his-luck actor who is hired by Dr. Watson to play the famed fictional detective to prove him real.

"I get to play two parts and a particular hero of mine, which I like, because I've always been a great fan of Holmes," he said.

"We have the pipe, the magnifying glass, everything," said Caine, referring to the traditional Holmes ac-countments. "It's a chance to play a hero who I'm not really right for and to do it in an entirely different way, as a comedy."

The film, due out in the fall from Orion Pictures, co-stars Oscar winner Ben Kingsley ("Gandhi") as Dr. Watson, who is forced by public demand to find a real-life Holmes to match the figure he has been writing about in a magazine.

Caine compared his creation to the part of the inimitable Inspector Clouzot, created by the late Peter Sellers in the popular Pink Panther series. "Peter would have laughed at some of the physical humor I do. The character is such a putz," Caine said. "I'm having fun; I'll tell you that."

On March 14, Caine moves on to his next assignment: a CBS miniseries, "Jack the Ripper," which marks his first TV work since he played Horatio to Christopher Plummer's Hamlet in a 1966 production of Shakespeare's tragedy.

Caine will play the fictitious Inspector Frederick Abberline of Scotland Yard in the $5 million show.

Said to be based on confidential police and government files, the show will be aired in the autumn to coincide with the 100th anniversary of the notorious mass murderer, who terrorized Victorian London in the late 1880s.

Caine said he's made a conscious effort to vary his parts and his performances. "It gives you cachet as someone who can play anything," he said.

"I've been a leading actor, not a movie star who comes on and does the Michael Caine personality performance like a Cary Grant or a John Wayne, although I admire both of them very much."

His salary, he joked, reflected this attitude: "I know a lot of actors like Dustin Hoffman, Jack Nicholson, who don't do pictures for years, but they get $6 million, $7 million, $15 million a picture."

Grammy Awards Returning To N.Y. For Wednesday TV

By DOLORES BARCLAY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Everything's coming up New York at the 30th annual Grammy Awards, as the music industry returns to a town with a rich legacy of contributions to American song.

"We had a couple of choices this year," said Ken Ehrlich, producer of the show. "We opted to downplay that it's the 30th anniversary. Instead, we took advantage of what was really unique to New York. A lot of nominations are New York-based musicians and New York-oriented songs."

The three-hour show will be telecast live on CBS-TV at 8 p.m. EST on Wednesday from Radio City Music Hall. It is the first time in seven years that the presentation by The National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences will originate from New York instead of Los Angeles.

Highlighting the awards extravaganza is a production number celebrating the sounds of the city, featuring Tito Puente and Celia Cruz with their hot Latin rhythms; Run DMC with its funky rap; and Billy Joel, whose songs have traveled from downtown to uptown, from romantic Greenwich Village bistros to Spanish Harlem.

"It's a number that has a lot of different layers and textures," said Ehrlich, who is producing the show for the seventh time. "The size and the scope of the city is so big."

Guitarist-vocalist George Benson will perform "On Broadway." New York based do-wop groups will do what they do best. Do-wop.

Jazz legend Miles Davis and saxman David Sanborn will blow their horns in the art deco entertainment palace.

Michael Jackson, Suzanne Vega, Whitney Houston, Terence Trent D'Arby, Randy Travis, K.T. Oslin, Restless Heart and comedian Jackie Mason will also perform.

In the past few years, the Grammy show has struggled for an upbeat image, moving away from the banalities of middle-of-the-road pop music. Last year the accent was on blues, gospel and country music. The year before, Grammy tried jazzing things up with a tribute to bebop and swing.

This year the nominees range from the sensuous funk of Prince to the lyrical charms of Suzanne Vega.

Fun and love still make major notes, but South Africa, child abuse and national pride have claimed places on the charts as well. It seems that listeners are tired of the endless party with its synthetic orchestrations, and long for real emotions and a touch of reality backed by raw sounds and solid music.

U2 sold more than 12 million copies of its Grammy nominated LP, "The Joshua Tree," with its tunes about war and the meaning of life. Vega's Top 10 hit, "Luka," a soliloquy of an abused child, has been nominated for record of the year and song of the year, and she's up for best female pop vocalist.

Paul Simon also is nominated for record of the year for the title track from his Grammy award-winning "Graceland" LP, which fused the songwriter's poetry with the rhythms of the black township of Soweto in South Africa. The Graceland collection won Album of the Year last year.

Up for Album of the Year is Prince's "Sign 'O' the Times," with its allusions to drug addiction, destitution and AIDS.

Though the rock-pop mainstream is serving up serious songs for serious listeners, frothy feelings still sell: Dolly Parton, Linda Ronstadt and Emmylou Harris have been nominated for album of the year for "Trio"; Grammy winner Whitney Houston is up for her self-titled "Whitney" LP.

Although women have a strong presence in the three major Grammy contests, the record academy eliminated the "best rock vocal performance, female" category this year.

"I wish the nominations had been otherwise," Ehrlich said. "I think this has been a terrific year for women in pop music in general. I would have liked to have had more rock presence."

Why I like My Brother

By Angela Buffaloe

I like my brother because he plays with me and is nice to me. Jeff and I like rock music. He helps me with my chores. He is funny! Sometimes he gets mad but he gets over it. His name is Jeff. For Christmas he put a puppy in my stocking. I love him because he loves me. It's great to have a brother like Jeff!

A Visit To The Dentist

By Connie Harris

It all happened on a wet, dull day, because I couldn't find my shoes, and my socks. And to top it off my mother said, "Today I will be taking you to the dentist." She knew how I felt about going to the dentist. I could feel my eyes getting bigger and bigger. I was terrified! Then my hands began to shake and sweat! She told me she would pick me up at school at 11:30. When I got to school I couldn't hold my pencil. I got behind in my work. I could not stop looking at the clock. Then 11:30 came.

When we got to the dentist office my legs were stiffened. I couldn't seem to move them. I could tell by the way my mother was looking at me I'd better move quick. So I did.

Once I got to see the dentist he made me feel better. He had a soft voice. He looked in my mouth to see what was wrong. When he said I had good teeth and no cavities I was so relieved. He gave me a big balloon that said, Have a Nice Day! This was a nice day after all.

Connie Harris, 9, a student at Sam D. Bundy School wins this week's writing contest.

Healthy Teeth

By Jadene Lowry

Brush your teeth every day, before you go out to play. Brush them at night, to make them white.

And also cavities to fight. See your dentist, he is your friend. And this poem is at the end.

Jadene Lowry, 8 a student at Wintergreen School receives special mention.

Shanita Washington, 5, a student at Third Street School receives special mention.

coming a major epidemic at the bridge table. No longer can you simply encourage or discourage partner from continuing the suit he led originally. No matter what card you play to his lead, it gets examined carefully and, after going into the tank for some time, partner usually emerges with some catastrophe or other. When we once told partner that we thought his eight-spot might have been a singleton, he retorted: "If it was a singleton, I wouldn't have played the eight!"

Americans Are Warming Up To Convenient Frozen Foods

Ask your local grocer what's new and interesting in the store, and chances are he'll mention at least one new frozen food product.

That's because more shoppers are demanding quality and convenience, and frozen food manufacturers are answering the call. Between 1984 and 1986, over 985 new frozen food products were introduced, with almost 350 of those emerging in 1986 alone. Even well established brands are being reformulated — made lower in salt, preservatives, calories, etc. — in response to consumers' changing needs.

Because of shifts in the lifestyle, median age and education of the American population — and the frozen food industry's response to these shifts — the frozen food market is literally booming today. Retail sales of frozen foods totaled over $18 billion in 1986, and that number continues to grow. Frozen foods have found a hot spot in the hearts of Americans, but why?

One reason is the drastic change in lifestyle evident in today's society. More and more, two-income families are becoming the norm, as wives and husbands both hold down full-time jobs outside the home. Frozen food offers the ideal solution for nutrition and quality-conscious consumers in this situation, because entire meals, from soup to nuts, can be prepared quickly and satisfy even the pickiest eater. Gone are the days of stereotyping frozen food as "TV dinners". Today's entrees are nutritious, flavorful and often packaged in attractive containers with colorful garnishes that make home-cooked meals look like they came from the finest restaurant.

Of course, the popularity of the microwave oven has also had significant influence on the frozen food industry. Statistics show that an estimated 60 percent of all households had a microwave oven at the end of 1986, and that figure is expected to climb to 70-75 percent by 1990. And the microwave is one appliance in the home used by youngsters because of the ease of operation and relative safety. Many parents, therefore, keep the freezer well-stocked with nutritious hot snack food, like pizza, and even quick meals that the children can prepare for themselves in the microwave. For this reason, frozen, microwaveable products have become a staple in these households.

Statisticians tell us that the American population is aging, leaving more "empty nest" households of elderly couples and singles whose kids are grown. For these homes, too, frozen food provides a convenient and nutritious meal alternative to the long hours of preparation previously required for a healthy meal. Frozen food is economical for these households as well, because food can be purchased in single-serving, portion-controlled packages that virtually eliminate both waste and leftovers.

Finally, Americans are becoming more educated today, particularly as concerns health and nutrition. Whereas once a cup of coffee on the go served as breakfast for most people, today's health-conscious adults realize the importance of a big breakfast to both daily performance and overall health. That's why the frozen breakfast market has been one of the fastest growing segments in recent years. Frozen breakfasts are available in numerous varieties, from eggs and bacon to pancakes and sausage. But frozen has the advantage of taking only minutes to prepare, allowing those few extra winks of sleep that make the day seem much easier to face.

Americans are also more educated about nutrition. Recent studies have verified the claims that the frozen food industry has repeatedly stressed: frozen vegetables are as nutritious as their fresh counterparts. Every minute that a vegetable is exposed to heat and sunlight robs it of precious nutrients, so the hours spent in the fields and in transportation to your store steal some of the nutritive value from fresh vegetables. But frozen vegetables are picked at the peak of freshness and rushed to the processing facility where they are quick frozen, sealing in those precious vitamins. And with frozen vegetables, you're paying only for edibles parts — no stalks, stems, skins or seeds to throw away.

So next time you're looking for something new and exciting to serve the family, look to your freezer case for a "world of freshness at your fingertips."

QUALITY AND CONVENIENCE — Quality frozen pies, which are available in many varieties, are a no-fail alternative to time-consuming versions prepared in home kitchens. Frozen pies offer contemporary convenience with traditional taste.

Frozen Pies Are Smart Choices

Just as frozen entrees are no longer considered "T.V. dinners," frozen pies now offer even the fussiest shopper the best quality and convenience, and at a reasonable price.

When shopping for frozen pies, remember that there are different types of pies and different levels of quality. "Bake and serve" frozen pies are unbaked. Look for those that can be defrosted in the microwave to reduce baking time, then finished in conventional oven for a crisp crust. (Microwave defrosting can reduce overall preparation time to under 30 minutes.) Another type of pie, "oven fresh in minutes," is already baked. All you need to do is to warm in the microwave for about 10 minutes to enjoy full flavor.

If you intend to microwave the pie — whether for defrosting or heating — check the package to make sure the pie pan is microwave safe. The best packaging will allow microwaves to penetrate the bottom of the pan for even heating.

Available in many varieties — whether apple, cherry, blueberry, lemon meringue, pecan, pumpkin or mince — quality frozen pies are a no-fail alternative to home-prepared. Use your kitchen talent to create special toppings, sauces, and other creative garnishes to compliment the pie's distinctive flavor. Many of these additions take little time to prepare, especially using the microwave. Whether you are an experienced cook or a novice, experiment with homemade expressions to give a personal touch to any pie.

Remember, you have a good base to start from. Frozen pies, whether "bake and serve" or "oven fresh in minutes," offer contemporary convenience with traditional taste.

MINTED WHIPPED CREME

1 frozen pie (or baked apple)
3 tablespoons mint-flavored apple jelly
1/2 pint whipping creme
Mint sprig, optional
Heat pie in preheated 350 degree oven on baking sheet 45 minutes. Meanwhile, beat jelly in small bowl of electric mixer until smooth; slowly add cream, continue beating until fluffy. Refrigerate until ready to serve. Serve on warm apple pie; garnish with mint; if desired. Serves 6-8.

Variation: Grand Marnier Whipped Cream
Substitute 1/4 cup orange marmalade and 2 tablespoons Grand Marnier for apple jelly. Serve on warmed blueberry pie.

CUSTARD SAUCE

1 Frozen Apple, Dutch Apple, Cherry or Blueberry Pie
1 package (3 1/2 oz.) instant vanilla pudding
2 cups milk
1/2 cup dairy sour cream
Heat pie in preheated 350 degree oven on baking sheet 45 minutes. Meanwhile, prepare pudding according to package directions. Fold in sour cream. Serve immediately or refrigerate until ready to serve. Serve on warm pie. Serves 6-8.

VARIATIONS

Prepare pudding as above, stir in 1 of the following:
1/4 - 1/2 teaspoon brandy or rum extract; serve with apple or Dutch Apple pie.
1/4 cup chopped nuts; serve with apple or Dutch apple pie.
2 teaspoons grated lemon peel; serve with blueberry pie
1/4-1/2 teaspoon almond extract; serve with cherry pie
1/4 cup flaked coconut, toasted; serve with cherry pie.

Microwaves, Frozen Foods Perfect Match

Americans are continuously looking for ways to save, whether it be time, money, or energy resources, and frozen foods are helping them achieve this goal. Whether it be vegetables, entrees, side dishes, desserts or snacks, frozen, prepared in the microwave, are heightening the savings.

Besides the obvious advantages of speedy defrosting and cooking, the combination of frozen foods and the microwave oven are helping more and more consumers realize the considerable energy savings, ease in clean-up, and the unbeatable quality of frozen foods.

Energy is consumed only during the cooking time, which is short, and only by the food being heated. Unlike a conventional oven, no energy is wasted heating the baking dish or the oven interior. That means the kitchen will not heat up either.

Because little or no water is needed in microwave cookery, water-soluble vitamins are retained. Frozen fruits and vegetables keep their bright colors and fresh flavors.

After dinner clean-up also becomes less of a chore with a microwave oven. Food spatters do not bake on, so both cooking utensils and the oven can be wiped clean easily. In addition, many frozen foods can be cooked right in their containers. Plastic food pouches need only to be slit or punctured to let the steam escape. Other frozen foods are packed in oven-ready containers which can also be used in conventional ovens.

Many frozen food packages include microwave cooking instructions usually written for high power ovens. These directions should be followed carefully. The frozen food industry has also designed a special logo to make microwaveable frozen foods easily identifiable.

English Muffins Add New Twist To Sandwiches

Meals using frozen English Muffins are expanding way beyond breakfast, as more and more consumers, like restaurants, are finding them to be an excellent alternative to plain bread when creating sandwiches, hamburgers, cheeseburgers, chilburgers, and the like. Below are several serving suggestions your family members will love.

VEGGIE MUFFIN

Toast muffin halves and top with sliced tomato, alfalfa sprouts, sliced avocado and Russian dressing.

CREAM CHEESE VEGETABLE MUFFIN

Top a split and toasted English muffin with softened cream cheese stirred together with finely chopped radish, shredded carrot, chopped onion and parsley.

ASPARAGUS HOLLANDAISE MUFFIN

Split and toast an English muffin; spread with butter or margarine. Top this with cooked asparagus or broccoli and prepared Hollandaise Sauce.

Farm-Raised Catfish — "The Healthy Catch"

American farm-raised catfish is now recognized as the "fish of the future — TODAY." In only 20 short years, catfish aquaculture has made enormous advancements in technology, resulting in a superior product with all the advantage and virtually none of the disadvantages of ocean fish.

Farm-raised catfish has a very important "health" story to tell, too. It is highest in protein of all fin fish and lowest in cholesterol, fat and calories. And, because farm-raised catfish has no scales to trap algae and other impurities, it never develops that "fishy" taste characteristic of other fish. Instead, catfish has delicate, sweet taste — just right for any variety of culinary uses.

THE NUTRITIONAL FACTS
Farm-raised catfish is one of the best sources of nutrition today. It is low in calories, sodium, fat, and cholesterol, yet high in protein, vitamins, and minerals.

Per 100 grams of farm-raised catfish, the nutritional breakdown is as follows:

- Protein...17.7 grams
- Fat.....6.4 grams
- Calories...130.5
- Carbohydrate...0
- Sodium.....51.0 mg
- Cholesterol...58.8 mg

Potassium...270.0 mg.

Omega -3 fatty acids...0.33 percent (analysis from Mississippi State University Extension Service)

STATISTICS ON THE FARM-RAISED CATFISH INDUSTRY

•95 percent of the farm-raised catfish industry is based in Mississippi. Other states with catfish farms include Alabama, Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas and others.

•Mississippi has over 100,000 acres of catfish ponds.

•Although the farm-raised catfish industry is almost 20 years old, it has only become technologically sophisticated in the past seven years.

•In 1987, total dollar volume for the farm-raised catfish industry is estimated to be between $200 and $250 million.

•Currently the industry is growing at about 30 percent per year.

•It is estimated that approximately 400 million pounds of farm-raised catfish will be processed in 1987. (This is a little over 8 percent of the total fish and seafood market in the U.S., which was estimated at 3.3 billion pounds, in 1984. (Source:

Fisheries of the U.S., 1985 edition, published by the U.S. Department of Commerce.)

GINGERED CATFISH TAMALES WITH GREEN LENTIL RELISH AND RED PEPPER SAUCE

- 4-6 ounces frozen Catfish fillets
- 4 piece large cornhusks (water soaked)
- 8 strips Leeks-green part (blanched)
- 2 tablespoons Brandy
- 2 tablespoons Chardonnay
- 1 cup green lentils (cooked)
- 4 tablespoons tomatillo (diced)
- 4 clove garlic (finely pureed)
- 1 tablespoon ginger (finely grated)
- 4 tablespoons roast corn
- 2 clove shallots (finely chopped)
- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 1 tablespoon cilantro
- 1/2 tablespoons balsamic vinegar
- Salt, pepper

Clean and rinse catfish fillets. Season with salt and fresh cracked pepper. Rub each fillet with fresh ginger. Set aside in cooler. Prepare relish, sweat garlic and shallots in olive oil. Add lentils and corn, saute for 5 minutes. Season with salt, fresh pepper, cilantro and balsamic vinegar. Add brandy and chardonnay. Reduce, set aside and cool.

Rinse husks. Place fillet on each husk. Spoon relish on top. Roll up and tie with twine on both ends.

FARM-RAISED CATFISH WITH GINGER AND CITRUS FRUITS

- Two 5-7 ounce frozen catfish fillets
- 1 medium carrot (cleaned and sliced)
- 1/2 stalk celery (cleaned and sliced)
- 1/2 stalk leeks (cleaned and sliced)
- 1 medium onion (cleaned and sliced)
- 1 tablespoon chives (chopped)
- 2 1/2 cups orange juice
- 1/2 cups white wine
- 1/4 cup heavy cream
- 5 peppercorns
- 1 bayleaf
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 1 clove garlic (minced)
- 1 teaspoon ginger (minced)

In medium size sauce pot heat olive oil, add garlic, ginger, sweat for 1 minute. Add carrot, leek, onion and celery, sweat for 2 minutes. Add white wine and orange juice, bring to a boil. Add bayleaf and peppercorns. Reduce to low and simmer. Rinse fish and pat dry. Season with a little salt and pepper. Place on colander, insert above sauce. Cover and steam fish until done, but still firm over moderate heat. Place fish on serving plate. Keep warm. Bring reduced sauce to a boil. Add cream, reduce, season with a touch of salt and pepper. Remove from heat and whisk in soft butter. Add chives. Coat plates with vegetables and sauce. Place fish on top and serve.

FISH OF THE FUTURE — Technological advances have given farm-raised catfish new prominence and recognition as a superior product that offers a delicate, sweet taste.

Frozen Non-Dairy Creamer Meets Health Demands Of Consumers

Today, more than ever, America's consumers are nutrition aware and health conscious concerning the roles foods play in their overall personal well being. Specifically, concern over the effects of foods containing cholesterol, sodium and saturated fats has become foremost in consumers' minds.

That's why many have turned to frozen non-dairy creamer not only as an addition to the morning coffee, but as an alternative to milk in a host of delicious desserts and meals.

CHERRY ALMOND CAKE

Now, you don't have to deprive children of cake and ice cream at birthday parties just because they suffer from lactose intolerance....Instead, serve this delicious Cherry Almond Cake with vanilla ice cream, both made with a frozen non-dairy creamer!

- 1 16 ounce can dark sweet pitted cherries, drained and coarsely chopped
- 2 eggs
- 1/2 cup frozen non-dairy creamer, thawed
- 1/4 cup vegetable oil
- 1/2 cup sugar

- 1 3/4 cup flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/2 cup ground almonds

Beat eggs until thick. Add sugar, non-dairy creamer and oil. Sift together flour, baking powder, baking soda, salt and cinnamon. Add to egg mixture, blending well. Fold in almonds and cherries. Pour into greased 9-inch round or square cake pan. Bake at 350 degrees F. for 35-40 minutes. Recipe can be doubled to make a two-layer cake. Ice with non-dairy whip topping.

PASTA PRIMAVERA

- 6 ounces pasta
- 3 tablespoons margarine
- 3 tablespoons flour
- 1 cup frozen non-dairy creamer, thawed
- 1 cup water
- 1 package (envelope) French onion soup mix
- 1 1/2 cups broccoli flowerets
- 1 medium summer squash, julienne
- 1 1/2 cups sliced mushrooms
- 1 1/2 tablespoons margarine

- 1 1/2 tablespoons olive oil
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- salt and pepper to taste
- Parmesan cheese
- Fresh parsley

Cook pasta according to package directions, set aside. Melt margarine in a saucepan, stir in flour and cook for 1 minute. Gradually stir in frozen non-dairy creamer and water. Add onion soup mix and stir to blend, simmer for 10 minutes. Steam broccoli until just tender, set aside. Saute summer squash, mushrooms and garlic in margarine and olive oil. Toss pasta and vegetables in onion cream sauce. Add salt and pepper to taste, sprinkle with parmesan cheese. Garnish with parsley. Yields 4 servings.

CHICKEN TARRAGON CREAM

- 2 whole chicken breasts (boneless, skinned and halved, about 8 ounces each breast)
- 1 tablespoon vegetable oil
- 1 1/2 tablespoons milk-free margarine
- 2 shallots, chopped
- 1 carrot, pared, sliced
- 1/2 cup dry white wine
- 1 teaspoon dried tarragon

- 1/4 teaspoon dried chervil
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/8 teaspoon pepper
- 1/4 cup chicken broth
- 1 egg yolk
- 2 teaspoons flour
- 1/4 cup frozen non-dairy creamer

Heat oil and margarine and saute chicken breasts until browned. Remove chicken, add shallots and carrot slices and saute until golden. Return chicken to pan and heat. Add white wine, tarragon, chervil, salt and pepper. Bring to a boil, then reduce heat and simmer, covered, for 30 minutes. Remove chicken to heated serving platter and cover to keep warm.

In a small bowl, combine non-dairy creamer, chicken broth, egg yolk and flour; mix well with wire whisk. Add to strained drippings and bring just to boil. Spoon sauce over chicken. Garnish with fresh tarragon, if desired.

No Compromise Is Necessary When Frozen Chicken Selected

Are you short on time...tempted to use one of those convenience frozen meats? But you really hate to short change your family that way. Think again!

Convenience doesn't really require that compromise. In fact, it may be a savings in many ways. Poultry-based convenience products like fried chicken, chicken patties, tenders and fillets are made in well-controlled, federally inspected environments.

The chicken must be fresh and wholesome, well-cooked, quickly processes, and then frozen. Few additives and no preservatives are used because freezing is an excellent preservation method.

How much is your time worth on a busy day? Suppose you choose chicken tenders for a quick meal. Let's see how much time and money it takes to make them from scratch.

Using only prime breast meat ($1.79 per pound bone-in and $2.39 per pound skinned and deboned), debone and cut into strips (15 minutes). Make batter and breader and prepare tenders for cooking (15 minutes). Deep fry (2 minutes) or oven bake (15 minutes). Then, of course, there is the mess to clean up (10 minutes).

That's more than 40 minutes and the cost of the ingredients is at least $2.50, assuming that you already have most of them in your cupboard. Then, too, you have the trimmings from the whole chicken breasts and all of the leftover ingredients from the batter and breader.

On the other hand, chicken tenders from the frozen food case may cost $3 for nine ounces, can be baked in the oven for fifteen minutes with no preparation and no clean-up time. During the cooking time, you can set the table, prepare a vegetable, and make a salad. Presto! A meal ready to go.

Considering all that, is convenience really such a compromise?

CHICKEN TENDERS AND TORTELLINI PLATTER

- 1 package (9 ounces) frozen Chicken Breast Tenders
- 1 package (8 ounces) cheese filled tortellini
- 1/2 loaf Italian bread, brushed with oil and sprinkled with Parmesan cheese
- 1 cup spaghetti sauce
- 1 teaspoon wine vinegar
- 1 medium zucchini, cut in julienne strips
- 1 small jar (2 1/2 ounces) stuffed Spanish olives

Heat chicken breast tenders as directed on package. Prepare tortellini as directed. Broil bread until browned and bubbly; cut in chunks. Stir together spaghetti sauce and vinegar; heat, if desired. Arrange platter of tenders, tortellini, zucchini, olives and bread; serve with spaghetti sauce dip. Makes 4 servings.

Serve chicken tenders and tortellini as a main course, an appetizer, or on your next party buffet. The variety of color and texture enhances its versatility and it tastes good too.

IMARI CHICKEN AND PASTA

- 1 package (9 ounces) frozen chicken fillets
- 1 cup small pasta shells, cooked and drained
- 1/2 cup each cooked broccoli florets, carrot slices, and snow peas
- Bottled oriental salad dressing

Prepare chicken as directed. Combine shells and vegetables; drizzle with dressing. Makes 2 servings.

In minutes this inviting meal with an oriental flare can be on your dinner table. Enjoy this recipe or serve chicken fillets with a pasta and vegetable medley from your grocer's freezer.

THE CHOICE IS YOURS — Double Mustard Sauce with Chicken Nibbles and Dipsters looks mild this creamy concoction can be just as hot as you dare to make it.

Hot Sauces Complement An Assortment Of Foods

Grazing, one of the "smart" eating trends, permits the diner to eat several appetizers instead of one heavy entree. This form of dinner service is popular at restaurants and quickly adapts to home entertaining.

Convenience foods such as frozen chicken nibbles and dipsters make it easy for the busy hostess to prepare food for grazers. These plump, juicy chicken sections and a variety of fresh vegetables need only the addition of hot or cold dipping sauces to make a delicious grazing assortment.

These lively hot sauces are perfect complements for the chicken nibbles and dipsters and an assortment of broccoli or cauliflower florettes. Simple ingredients in unusual combinations are the secret of these special dipping sauces. If some guests like the milder flavor cut back on the "hot" ingredients such as horseradish and mustards.

Double Mustard Dip combines dry mustard with Dijon-style mustard in a buttermilk base. The sliced green onions provide a little crunch. This sauce with just a few ingredients is so easy and flavorful, you will find yourself serving it again and again. For Horseradish Dipping Sauce spike a cup of sour cream with a full tablespoon of horseradish. Add a little lemon juice and crisp chopped radishes and sliced green onions. This will give you a creamy dip with a fiery flavor. Hot Cran-Raspberry Dip has a sweet-tart red berry base that becomes sharper as orange peel and mustard are slowly stirred in and heated. This dark red tangy dip should be served hot.

All three sauces take very little (See SAUCES, D-9)

Q. What is an exchange diet? P.K., Greenville.

A. Oops! Patrick hasn't caught me using too much "nutritoneese" lately, but we failed to explain an exchange diet in our column about diabetes.

An exchange diet is a diet created by selecting servings or exchanges of foods found in "Exchange Lists, For Meal Planning." This diet is published by the American Diabetes and Dietetic associations. It lists foods which are grouped according to their carbohydrate, fat, protein and calorie content. In a diabetic exchange diet, there are six of these food groups: 1) starch-bread; 2) meat and meat substitutes; 3) vegetables; 4) fruit; 5) milk, and 6) fat. Each person is allowed a certain amount of food from each group. These are called exchanges. For example, a person on a 1,500 calorie American Diabetes Association (ADA) diet is allowed seven bread exchanges in a day. On the starch-bread list are foods that equal one bread exchange. The meal planner selects seven of those foods to eat in one day. For example, one slice of bread equals one bread exchange; one ounce of pork equals one meat exchange. The exchanges allow different portions or serving sizes for different foods. It does take practice to follow the diet correctly. But, after a while, it becomes automatic.

The number of exchanges of each food group is based on how many calories the person is allowed to eat. That depends on age, sex, activity level, and for a diabetic, the insulin dose. When a person follows an exchange diet (for weight loss or diabetes management), the exchange system insures the person gets all the nutrition (protein, carbohydrate, protein, fat, vitamins and minerals) needed daily. They are a bit complicated to start with, so generally, nutritionists calculate these diets using physician's recommendations.

Dear Readers: Several weeks ago, I wrote about a teleconference on women and chronic disease. We had a large crowd view it with us. But, for those who missed it, I'd like to share some of the speakers' specific comments about minority women's health.

A speaker from the Medical College of Georgia said minority women have a greater challenge as health givers and providers in our society. Most minority women, as heads of household and sole providers, face: a) financial barriers to health care; b) low self-esteem, and c) lack awareness of health problems.

These women have an overall higher rate of illness than others. The doctor called for culturally sensitive education about health.

A speaker from the National Cancer Institute said that by 1990 there will be a 99 percent increase in black women smoking. This is important since lung cancer is seen more often than other cancers in black women. Black women also suffer high rates of cervical cancer. Factors listed for women included smoking, alcohol and tobacco (together), diet and work place safety.

The speakers noted that young, poor, black, overweight women with family history of hypertension need to be made aware of hypertension and learn how to prevent or treat it. She said women with a family history of diabetes, who are overweight and of childbearing age should know more about the signs and symptoms of diabetes and that older women (50 and older) need to be aware of the signs and symptoms of cancer.

Souffles Don't Have To Be Dreaded Dishes

By Tom Sietsema
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Marcia Fox, an Alexandria, Va.-based cooking instructor, wants us to "rethink souffles."

She wants to lay to rest the notion that souffles are somehow too complex for the ordinary home cook to tackle; or too lofty a meal to serve to mere family and friends; or something to savor only when dining out.

Admittedly, this classic egg-based confection, be it sweet or savory, has an image problem.

Few dishes provoke more dread in amateur cooks than the souffle, which has been intimidatingly described as "a sauce that takes a breath and holds it" — and probably worse by those who've failed to get one to properly rise.

More simply, Fox refers to the souffle as "a white sauce enriched by egg yolks and a character ingredient," such as spinach or cheese or chocolate, and stiffly beaten egg whites. The cooking instructor goes so far as to call souffles "convenience food," a smart way to use up leftovers.

If you have a couple of extra eggs in the refrigerator, and some unexpected guests, she suggests, you can whip together a souffle and have it on the table in well under an hour.

While "souffles were meant to fall," Fox reassures us, there are a few general rules to advance their success:

—Be sure to use clean beaters and bowls when beating the egg whites; even a speck of yolk or butter can affect the rise of the souffle.

—Use room temperature eggs, which yield greater volume.

—Avoid using cream of tartar, which tends to dry the whites. On the other hand, don't add additional egg whites in order to achieve a higher crown — too many whites make for a bland-tasting souffle.

—When preparing the white sauce, make sure the flour is cooked through, so that it is neither pasty-tasting nor burned.

—The shape of the dish containing the souffle mixture should be round; don't use slope-sided, square or oval containers, which can lead to uneven heat distribution.

—Souffle ingredients can be assembled in advance. (Fox stores frozen egg whites, which she keeps in plastic foam cups, for later use, thawed.) But be sure to serve the finished dish as soon as it's removed from the oven.

—Ovens with windows and lights are a boon to the souffle cook, who can monitor the rise without opening the door — and thereby inadvertently causing the souffle to collapse. If after several attempts your souffles fail to rise properly, and you've followed the above instructions carefully, check your oven temperature.

While relatively easy to execute, a puffy souffle still denotes elegance, making it an ideal centerpiece for a Valentine's Day menu. For starters, Fox offers the following recipe for corn and cheddar souffle:

Express-lane list: Parmesan cheese, milk, white pepper, nutmeg, eggs, cheddar cheese, white kernel corn

A Leaner, Lighter Beef Is Available

By Rose Dosti
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

No food on the American table, with the possible exception of eggs, has been more beefed about than beef. Red meat has unquestionably been given a bum steer.

Well, the tide is turning.

Consumer demand for meat lower in fat is actually putting a leaner, lighter beef back on the American table with the blessing of U.S. government, the beef industry, and health and consumer agencies alike.

For years, government agencies and heart and cancer groups have called on Americans to reduce dietary fat to lower the risk of heart disease, cancer and obesity. The call was for low-fat protein sources, such as fish, legumes, low-fat cheese, skinless chicken and turkey, and lean meat trimmed of visible fat.

For years, consumer groups have had beef on their hit list, attributing to beef more ills than you would wish on your worst enemy.

The consumer has pooh-poohed red meat in favor of chicken and fish in recent years, while devouring 10 million beefy burgers daily in schizophrenic confusion. Indeed, according to 1986 U.S. Department of Agriculture Disappearance Charts (amount of beef sold in the retail market), per capita retail consumption of beef dropped from a 94.4 pounds in 1976 to 79.8 pounds in 1986.

Now, government, health, public advocacy and meat industries join together as willing, if strange

Celebrate A Little With Special Weeknight Meals

Life is full of little celebrations. A raise, a new car or a straight "A" report card all call for something special. Even on weeknights when time is short, a celebration dinner is the answer.

Shrimp and steak are always festive menu choices. When these fast-to-fix favorites are brought to the table with savory blends of long grain and wild rice and seasonings, the meal is sure to be a standout.

Richly-flavored and easy to prepare, the change-of-pace side dishes add a special touch to any entree.

Next time the meal must be festive but there's no time to fuss in the kitchen, try Fast & Wild Shrimp. The lemon-butter basted shrimp broil as the show-stopping accompaniment, prepared with Uncle Ben's Long Grain & Wild Rice Original Fast Cooking Recipe, simmers to perfection in just 5 minutes. Crunchy bok choy and a touch of lemon peel are stirred into the rice just before serving to complete the elegant, almost effortless meal.

When steak is the entree choice, Wild Steak Forestiere is just the ticket. Seasoned with garlic and pepper, the steak broils to desired doneness in minutes. With a side dish that teams the unmatched blend of herbs and seasonings in Long Grain & Wild Rice Original Recipe with bedfellows. Last November, at the suggestion of a consumer advocacy group, Public Voice for Food and Health Policy, and with the blessing of the meat industry, the U.S. Department of Agriculture issued a name change for lean meat, changing "Good" to "Select." Thus was launched a new era for beef as a government-and-consumer-approved food that Americans can now enjoy without guilt.

SHRIMP CELEBRATION — As easy to prepare as it is elegant, Fast & Wild Lemon Shrimp sets a festive tone for a midweek celebration. Crunchy bok

Leaner, Lighter Beef Can Now Be Found On The American Table

The good, old Good (now Select) grade of meat is lower in fat and calories, less expensive and takes less time to cook than the more popular grades, Choice and Prime, which are known for being higher in fat and, consequently, more tender.

The government's move to upgrade the name in order to attract buyers to the lowly meat grade will spotlight an alternative protein source for those looking for low-fat meats. Economically, the move also targeted the large segment of the population that has moved away from red meat because of concerns about diet and health: the younger, more affluent urban consumer.

Jim Wise, marketing specialist at the Agricultural Marketing Service of the Department of Agriculture, says that there has been no noticeable changeover across the country since the name change in November, but he indicated that the response had been positive "at least in attitude."

"It's still a little too soon to tell, but whether the markets actually will start buying still remains to be seen," he said.

Here are recipes using any less-tender meat cuts whether from Select or Choice grade beef.

BEEF CARIBBEAN

1/4 cup lime juice
2 oranges, sliced
1/4 medium onion, sliced
1/2 bunch cilantro, chopped
1 tablespoon minced garlic
1/2 teaspoon ground cumin
1 pound sirloin, rib eye or chuck steak, cut into 4 uniform portions
Combine lime juice, oranges, onion, cilantro, garlic and cumin in shallow pan. Add steaks and turn to coat well with marinade. Cover and let stand in refrigerator 2 hours.

Remove meat from marinade and grill over medium coals or under broiler 4 inches from source of heat, to desired degree of doneness. Arrange meat on plate and top with Pepper Confetti of Vegetables. Makes 4 servings.

Pepper Confetti of Vegetables
2 tablespoons olive oil
1/2 teaspoon minced garlic
1 sweet red pepper, cut into thin strips
1 green pepper, cut into thin strips
1 yellow pepper, cut into thin strips
2 oranges, sliced
Salt, pepper
Heat oil. Add garlic and cook until browned. Add red, green and yellow peppers and orange slices to pan. Sauté until peppers are bright in color and tender-crisp. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

SAKE BEEF

Sake Sauce
Honey
Grated peel of 1 mandarin orange
4 green onions, finely sliced
Place meat in shallow baking pan. Pour Sake Sauce over meat and turn to coat well. Bake at 300 degrees 2 hours, or until meat is tender, basting lightly every 15 minutes with honey.

Sprinkle mandarin orange peel and green onions over meat. Serve with rice, if desired. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Sake Sauce
1 cup mirin
1/2 cup soy sauce
1/4 cup orange juice
1 teaspoon grated ginger root
1/4 cup brown sugar, packed
1 tablespoon arrowroot or cornstarch
2 green onions or 1 small leek, thinly sliced

Combine mirin, soy sauce, orange juice and ginger in saucepan and heat. Remove from heat and stir in brown sugar.

Combine arrowroot with small amount of water until smooth. Add to pan. Cook, stirring, until sauce thickens slightly. Strain sauce through fine strainer into sauce boat. Add green onions. Makes about 2 cups.

KOREAN BARBECUED BEEF
1 (2- to 2 1/2 pound) beef blade steak, cut 1 1/2- to 2-inches thick
4 teaspoons sesame seeds
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
3 green onions, finely chopped
1/2 teaspoon black pepper
1/2 cup soy sauce
2 tablespoons oil
1 clove garlic, crushed
Place meat in shallow pan. Toast sesame seeds in heavy skillet, then crush with back of spoon or mortar and pestle. Mix crushed seeds with salt, sugar, onions, pepper, soy sauce, oil and garlic. Pour over meat.

Cover and marinate in refrigerator several hours or overnight, turning 2 to 3 times. Broil meat 4 inches from source of heat until done to medium rare. Slice to serve. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

PICADO

2 tablespoons oil
2 pounds boneless round steak, cut into 1/2-inch cubes
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 large bay leaf, crumbled
Salt
2 small green peppers, cut into 1/2-inch squares
1 to 2 hot yellow chiles, seeded and minced

1 onion, halved and sliced
4 medium tomatoes, cut into 6 sections each
Pepper
Heat oil in large skillet and add meat, garlic, bay leaf and salt to taste. Cook, stirring, until meat is browned. Add green peppers and chiles. Cook 4 to 5 minutes.

Add onion and cook 3 minutes. Add tomatoes and pepper to taste and cook 2 to 3 minutes. Serve with rice and refried beans, if desired, or spoon onto flour tortillas and wrap as for burritos. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

RIB EYE STEAKS SONORA

Salt, pepper
Salsa
1 avocado, peeled and sliced
Broil steaks 4 inches from source of heat or grill over medium coals to desired doneness. Sprinkle with salt and pepper to taste. Spoon 1/4 cup Salsa over each steak. Garnish with avocado slices. Makes 4 servings.

Salsa
4 tomatoes, cut up
1 (4-ounce) can diced green chiles
1 onion, cut into chunks
2 green peppers, seeded and cut into chunks
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1/4 teaspoon hot pepper sauce
Process tomatoes, chiles, onion, peppers, lemon juice and hot pepper sauce in food processor until coarsely chopped. Makes 2 cups.

THAI BEEF CURRY

2 1/2 pounds top round or rib eye roast
Oil
1/2 cup minced onion
5 cloves garlic, minced
1/2 teaspoon whole allspice
1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
1/2 teaspoon crushed dried red chiles

6 whole cloves
1/4 teaspoon ground cardamom
1 teaspoon salt
2 sticks cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon sugar
2 tablespoons cider vinegar
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
3 cups canned or fresh coconut milk
1 cup beef broth
1/4 cup roasted whole peanuts
1/4 cup thinly sliced green onions
Cut meat into thin slices. Heat 2 tablespoons oil in large skillet or saucepan. Add onion and garlic and cook until onion is tender but not browned.

Add meat, allspice, ginger, chiles, cloves, cardamom, salt, cinnamon, sugar, vinegar, Worcestershire and coconut milk and toss to coat meat well. Bring to boil. Reduce heat and simmer 1 hour, adding beef broth as mixture cooks down.

Stir in peanuts. Remove curry to serving dish. Heat 2 teaspoons oil in small skillet and add green onions. Cook until browned. Sprinkle over curry before serving. Makes 8 servings.

CALIFORNIA SUKIYAKI

1 1/2 pounds top sirloin or rib eye (sukiyaki beef) sliced bacon-thin
2 bunches baby green onions
3 zucchini, sliced or patty pan squash, halved
6 baby eggplant, split if large
1 sweet red pepper, cut in strips
1 yellow pepper, cut in strips
1/2 head napa cabbage or 1 head raddichio, leaves washed and split, if large, or 1 bunch spinach, leaves only or combination of three
1/2 block tofu, cubed
Suet
Sukiyaki Sauce
Hot steamed rice

Arrange meat, green onions, squash, eggplant, peppers, cabbage and tofu on large platter forming attractive pattern. Preheat 12-inch or larger electric skillet. Grease bottom lightly with piece of suet and discard suet. Arrange meat and some of each vegetable in groups on skillet. Pour half Sukiyaki Sauce over meat and vegetables.

Cook at high heat several minutes, turning vegetables and meat when done on one side to cook other side. Remove to individual plates, then repeat with remaining meat and vegetables. Serve with hot steamed rice. Makes 6 servings.

Note: Other vegetables may be used to vary sukiyaki: mushrooms, asparagus, broccoli florets, rape, bean sprouts, snow peas, sliced sweet onions (Maui or Bermuda), thinly sliced carrots, cauliflower, celery, onions and tomatoes.

Sukiyaki Sauce
2 tablespoons sake
2 teaspoons sugar
1/2 cup soy sauce
1/2 cup consommé or beef stock
Combine sake, sugar, soy sauce and consommé. Heat until sugar is dissolved. Makes about 1 cup.

SASHIMI OF BEEF A LA HAYES STREET GRILL
1 (1 1/2-pound) triangle tip roast or sirloin steak

1 Japanese or English cucumber
Salt
Rice wine vinegar
Sashimi Sauce
Grill or broil triangle tip roast or steak until outside is charred if grilled or browned if broiled. Immediately plunge beef into bowl of ice water to prevent further cooking.
When cool, dry meat and slice on diagonal across grain into 1/8-inch slices. Cut cucumber in halves lengthwise and remove seeds with spoon. Do not peel. Cut cucumber halves into crescent slices. Toss in small amount of salt. Let drain 10 minutes. Then toss cucumber crescents in small amount of rice vinegar just before serving.

To serve, fan steak out around platter. Place cucumber crescents in center of platter. Spoon Sashimi Sauce over beef. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Sashimi Sauce
2 teaspoons wasabi powder (green Japanese horseradish)
Water
1 tablespoon soy sauce

1 cup low calorie yogurt
1/4 cup half and half
1/4 cup rice wine vinegar
Make thick paste by adding several drops water to wasabi powder. Cover and let stand to develop flavor. Dissolve wasabi paste in soy sauce. Stir in yogurt and half and half until blended. Stir in vinegar.

Consumers Are Paying A Premium To Eat 'Lite'

By Carole Sugarman
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

A can of Campbell's Cream of Mushroom Soup was selling for 50 cents at a Washington supermarket recently. The company's Special Request version of the soup, with a third less salt, cost 55 cents. Campbell's Low Sodium Cream of Mushroom Soup was 59 cents. As the salt goes down, the price goes up.

Whether it's Campbell's soups, Polaner's reduced-sugar preserves compared to the company's standard preserves or Kraft's lower-fat cheese products as opposed to its regular cheese products, less costs more.

And consumers don't like it. "The sentiment is that they (shoppers) don't want to pay more for less," said Mona Doyle, president of Consumer Network, a market-research firm that tracks consumer opinion on supermarket services and products.

Five or six years ago, when a proliferation of "lite" products entered the market, shoppers expressed their dismay "with increasing vigor" about paying more for less salt or sugar, fewer additives and/or preservatives, according to Doyle's newsletter, The Shopper Report. Many consumers didn't understand the discrepancies, and others believed them to be "price gouging on the part of manufacturers."

Whether or not it is worthwhile to pay more for less depends on the product, your health status, your tastes, the size of your serving and the size of your pocketbook.

In making the determination, the first thing to do is to examine what the product difference really is. Pay attention to what is actually being removed and whether its presence was a significant concern in the original product.

For example, Skippy Peanut Butter, which boasts having "less sugar" than other leading brands, cost more — at least at an Alexandria, Va., supermarket recently — than three other brands. (At another chain it cost the same.)

The sugar reduction "is a false issue," says Bonnie Liebman, director of nutrition at the consumer-advocacy group, Center for Science in the Public Interest. "There's not enough sugar in any peanut butter to make a difference."

Pay attention to serving sizes. Swiss Miss Lite Hot Cocoa Mix, for example, may contain a third less calories than the regular version. But an envelope of the reduced-calorie cocoa mix contains a fourth less cocoa than the regular mix. At two Washington chains the prices for both products are the same.

Watch container sizes. Several "lite" products come in smaller container sizes than the original version.

A quick glance at a display of Marie's low-calorie salad dressings next to the company's regular dressings at an Alexandria store showed that they were each $2.29. But on closer examination, the comparison revealed that the low-calorie jars were 10 ounces, while the regular versions were 12 ounces.

In the case of fruit juices, you may not be even able to tell whether you're paying more for less. Late last month, the CSPI revealed the juice content of several brands of diluted juices. Current law does not require juice manufacturers — other than orange juice companies — to list the actual juice content on their product labels.

The group found that some products with more juice were cheaper than the ones with less juice. For example, Del Monte Pineapple Orange Fruit Blends, which does not disclose on the label that it consists of 50 percent juice, was selling at a Washington-area market for $1.60 a quart, while Johanna Farms Tree Rippe 100 percent Pineapple Orange Juice was selling for $1.43 a quart.

Bruce Silverglade, director of legislative affairs at CSPI, said that the difference may not have anything to do with the juice content, but simply that the smaller company (Johanna Farms) may have to undersell the more recognized company (Del Monte) in order to compete.

Yet even between high-profile companies, there are inequalities. At an Alexandria supermarket all of the varieties of Del Monte's Fruit Blends packaged in groups of three aseptic cartons were selling for $1.18. Comparable flavors of Minute Maid's fruit punches were also selling for $1.18. According to CSPI, however, Minute Maid's fruit punches have only 10 percent juice. Del Monte's products have 50 percent juice.

The less-is-more argument has another side, and that's what economists, manufacturers and retailers have to say about it. According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, an average of 30 percent of the retail cost of food is derived from the cost of the raw materials; the rest includes processing, packaging, transportation, wholesale and retail margins and advertising. That means a lot of factors that go into food prices have nothing to do with the food itself.

The "change in trucking rates may make more of a difference in a food cost than whether they (manufacturers) take the salt out," said Tom Earley, an agricultural economist with the Alexandria consulting firm of Abel, Daft and Earley.

If they do take the salt out, however, it may mean adding higher-cost seasonings. According to Doyle from Consumers Network, consumers are beginning to realize this from altering their own cooking habits and are becoming more tolerant when manufacturers charge higher prices for less salt.

Jim Moran, spokesman for the Campbell Soup Company, said that one of the reasons the salt is in there to begin with is that it is such a "low-cost flavor enhancer."

As is the case with reduced-sodium products, higher prices for less sugar may be the result of adding more of another, costlier ingredient. Pat Brailey, a spokeswoman for Polaner's, said that while the company's "lite" preserves may have half the sugar of the company's regular product line, they contain more fruit. Fruit costs more than sugar.

Aspartame also costs more than sugar, which is one reason many aspartame-containing products — such as puddings and gelatin — are more expensive than the sugar-added ones.

Economist Earley said that in 1987, the wholesale price of aspartame was about 35 cents a pound, when adjusted to an equivalent amount of sweetening power as sugar.

In comparison, the average price of all refined sugar offered for sale to manufacturers was more like 26 cents. High-fructose corn sweeteners, which are used more often than any other kind of sugar or artificial sweetener, were selling for between 14 and 18 cents a pound.

Ingredients in a "lite" product may cost more simply because they are in short supply. Pat Farrell, spokesman for Van Camp Seafood, makers of Chicken of the Sea Tuna, said that the company's dietetic product comes from a limited supply of albacore tuna which have less sodium in their meat. Chicken of the Sea Dietetic tuna, which was selling for 20 cents more at a Giant last week than the Van Camp's regular white albacore, contains 30 milligrams of sodium per 2-ounce serving as opposed to 310 milligrams per 2-ounce serving of regular tuna. There is also no added salt in the dietetic version.

Separate production runs or more labor-intensive processing may also make a product more expensive. Doyle from Consumers Network said that consumers "don't complain so much anymore" about paying for decaffeinated products, realizing an additional process is required. According to Odonna Mathews, vice president of consumer affairs for Giant Food, the company's no-salt-added bread is manufactured on a non-automated bread line, where there is some hand-stacking involved.

Mathews speculated that specialized processing procedures may be one of the reasons why Kraft's lower-fat cheese products sell for more than the company's regular cheese products in Washington.

Scott Horne, a spokesman at Kraft's Chicago headquarters had another story. Horne said that in most market areas around the country, the products sell for the same price.

The company generally sells the cheese products to retailers for the same price, although in some cases there "could be a small variance," Horne added.

Horne speculated that stores may alter the pricing structure because the lower-fat items are "perceived as value-added products. People are willing to pay a higher price" for them, he said.

Mathews said the Giant chain's sales of low-fat and low-salt cheeses are small. "Volume makes a big difference" in pricing, she emphasized.

In fact, volume may be one of the more crucial reasons why less costs more.

"The price is obviously going to be more for a product you sell less of," said Beth Adams of the H.J. Heinz company. "You pay a premium for its availability."

Heinz's Lite Ketchup, which has half the calories and a third less salt than its regular ketchup, was selling for 10 cents more than regular Heinz ketchup at a Washington store recently. At an adjacent supermarket, Heinz's Lite Ketchup was also 89 cents, but was only 7 cents more than Heinz's regular ketchup.

Liebman of CSPI believes that "you vote for salt reduction" when you buy products such as Campbell's low-sodium or Special Request soups. If sales are good, then the prices should eventually go down, Liebman explained.

Indeed, many high-volume products that contain less don't cost more. For example, at Washington chains the same prices were charged recently for diet and regular salad dressings, six-packs of diet and regular sodas, light and regular beers, unsalted Hanover's pretzels and salted ones, unsalted Planter's peanuts and salted ones, Del Monte's no-salt-added and regular canned vegetables, Hunt's no-salt-added and regular tomato sauce and Log Cabin's "Lite" and regular syrups.

High volume is probably one factor in the price of milk, which is one of the rare products in which less actually costs less. Whole milk costs more than 2 percent, which costs more than 1 percent, which costs more than skim milk.

A more crucial reason for the declining price scale is this: While processors obviously have to pay to remove the fat from milk, they are able to use what they remove. The fat can be converted to other products such as ice cream, cheese, butter or half-and-half.

This logic doesn't seem to fit, however, when it comes to decaffeinating coffee. George Boecklin of the National Coffee Association said that coffee manufacturers are able to sell the caffeine they extract to soft-drink companies or medicine manufacturers, who then use it in their products.

He said that he didn't know whether the money the coffee company makes from selling caffeine is enough to offset the costs of decaffeinating the coffee and then purifying the caffeine.

White Chocolate: Looking On The Brighter Side

By Marie Bianco

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

Let's face it. When it comes to white chocolate, Americans are snobs. True chocoholics are obsessed with dark chocolate, and white chocolate is often relegated to a second-class status.

Maybe dark-chocolate lovers are reluctant to accept white chocolate out of loyalty. But admitting a fondness for white chocolate does not mean transferring an allegiance.

The matter might be dissolved if manufacturers would change the name of white chocolate to something like or blanco sweeto or candis a la vanille.

Perhaps with a different name, the rivalry would cease. After all, white chocolate just doesn't taste like dark chocolate; it's not supposed to.

Another reason for white chocolate's unpopularity undoubtedly is the confusion between it and summer coating. Summer coating can look like chocolate and sometimes even taste like chocolate, but it is not real chocolate.

White chocolate and dark chocolate originate from the same cocoa bean. When the beans are separated into chocolate liquor and cocoa butter, the cocoa butter is mixed with sugar, milk solids and flavoring — usually vanilla — to produce white chocolate.

Manufacturers vary the ratio of these ingredients to produce a variety of tastes. Chocolate liquor is unsweetened chocolate. When sugar is added, it becomes semisweet chocolate; the addition of milk solids makes it milk chocolate.

Summer coating comes in "white chocolate" and two or three shades of "dark chocolate," as well as a rainbow of colors. Cocoa butter is never an ingredient; summer coating contains sugar, vegetable fat, milk solids, emulsifiers, fatty and nonfatty acids, flavorings and colorings. Candy manufacturers use it because it has a higher melting point and doesn't melt in your hands during warm weather. That's how it got its name.

White chocolate, on the other hand, contains enough cocoa butter to give it a slightly chocolatey flavor, and like chocolate, it has to be tempered.

One way to tell the difference between summer coating and white chocolate is to read the label. If it contains cocoa butter, it's white chocolate. And you can be sure the higher priced one is white chocolate.

Special care should be taken when melting white chocolate. Best results occur when it is melted very slowly in a double boiler and stirred several times.

Like dark chocolate, it will seize, or harden, if a drop of water is added. When melting white chocolate in a microwave, use 50 percent power and stir it every minute or so. Cool it slightly when combining it with other ingredients.

White chocolate cannot always be substituted for dark chocolate in recipes, especially in baking. The cocoa butter produces a heavy batter, and because white chocolate is sweeter than regular chocolate, the amount of added sugar has to be adjusted.

The white-chocolate flavor doesn't always come through in baked goods but does impart an aroma that seems to be enhanced by a touch of orange flavoring and cinnamon.

Following are three recipes especially developed for white chocolate.

WHITE CHOCOLATE CHEESE-CAKE

- 1 tablespoon butter
- 1/2 cup vanilla cookie crumbs
- 16 ounces white chocolate
- 2 pounds cream cheese, at room temperature
- 1/2 cup granulated sugar
- 1 cup heavy cream
- 4 eggs, lightly beaten
- 3 tablespoons cornstarch, sifted
- 1/2 teaspoon almond extract
- 1/2 teaspoon orange extract
- 4-ounce piece white chocolate for curls, optional

1. Butter the bottom and sides of a 9-by-5-inch springform pan. Sprinkle with cookie crumbs and gently tap out any remaining crumbs.

2. Melt white chocolate slowly; cool slightly. In large bowl of an electric mixer, combine melted chocolate, cream cheese, sugar, heavy cream, eggs, corn-starch, almond and orange extracts. Beat until smooth.

3. Pour into prepared pan. Bake at 325 degrees for 65 minutes. Cool 1 hour on a rack out of draft. Remove sides and cool completely.

4. To make curls, warm chocolate slightly in microwave oven for 20 seconds on defrost. Using a vegetable peeler, shave off strips of chocolate along one side. If shavings split, heat chocolate 10 additional seconds. Transfer to top of cheesecake with a toothpick. Makes 12 servings.

WHITE CHOCOLATE QUICK BREAD

- 2 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1/2 cup granulated sugar
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
- 6 ounces white chocolate
- 1 cup buttermilk
- 2 eggs
- 4 tablespoons butter, melted
- 2 tablespoons peach schnapps
- 1 teaspoon almond extract
- 1 tablespoon grated orange rind
- 1/3 cup chopped dried apricots

- 1 cup chopped pecans
- 1. In a medium bowl, combine flour, sugar, baking powder, baking soda, salt and cinnamon. Toss lightly with a fork to combine.
- 2. Melt white chocolate and cool slightly.
- 3. In a separate bowl, combine buttermilk, eggs, butter, peach schnapps, almond extract and orange rind. Stir lightly.

- 4. Add melted white chocolate, dry ingredients, apricots and pecans, and stir until just combined. The batter will be thick.
- 4. Spoon batter into a buttered and floured 9-by-3-by-5-inch loaf pan and bake in a 350-degree oven for 70 minutes or until the loaf tests done. Makes 12 to 16 servings.

- ### WHITE CHOCOLATE HAZELNUT COOKIES
- 1 1/4 cups all-purpose flour
  - 2 tablespoons cornstarch
  - 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
  - 1/4 teaspoon salt
  - 1/2 cup ground, toasted hazelnuts
  - 4 ounces butter
  - 1/2 cup brown sugar
  - 1 egg

- 4 ounces white chocolate, melted
- 1 teaspoon almond extract
- 1. In a small bowl, combine flour, cornstarch, cinnamon, salt and hazelnuts. Toss lightly with a fork to combine.
- 2. In a separate bowl, cream butter and sugar. Add egg and stir well. Stir in melted white chocolate and almond extract.

- 3. Add the flour mixture and stir until well combined. Refrigerate the dough for 30 minutes.
- 4. On a lightly floured board, roll out the dough on a lightly floured board to 1/8 inch thick. Cut with floured cutter.
- 5. Place on ungreased baking sheet and bake in a 350-degree oven for 7 minutes. Makes 3 dozen to 4 dozen cookies, depending on size.

BEEF SALAD WITH LEMON-CURRY DRESSING

- 2 pounds beef top round steak
- 1 pound green beans, trimmed and blanched
- 1/2 pound mushrooms, sliced
- 3 tomatoes, chopped
- 1 cup chopped green onions
- 2 tablespoons chopped parsley

Lemon-Curry Dressing
 Cook steak under broiler 4 inches from heat 10 minutes on each side for medium rare or longer if desired. Remove from boiler and let stand 10 minutes. Slice into thin strips. Cut strips into 2-inch pieces.

Mix beef with beans, mushrooms, tomatoes, green onions and parsley. Pour Lemon-Curry Dressing over ingredients and toss. Refrigerate at least 3 hours or overnight. Makes 12 servings.

Lemon-Curry Dressing
 2 cups beef broth
 Grated peel and juice of 4 lemons
 2 tablespoons sugar
 2 teaspoons cornstarch
 1 teaspoon curry powder
 1/2 teaspoon salt
 1/4 teaspoon pepper
 Place broth, lemon peel and juice, sugar, cornstarch, curry powder, salt and pepper in medium saucepan. Cook over medium heat, stirring occasionally, until dressing thickens slightly and boils. Remove from heat, let cool. Toss with beef salad. Makes about 2 cups dressing.

LIGHT BARBECUE BEEF

- 1/2 cup dry red wine
- 1/4 cup water
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
- 1 teaspoon dried tarragon
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 1 pound top round steak

Combine wine, water, lemon juice, onion, tarragon and pepper in baking dish. Trim steak of fat. Place in baking dish, turning to coat meat with marinade. Cover and refrigerate overnight or up to 48 hours.

Cook steak on barbecue grill 4 inches from hot coals 12 to 15 minutes or under broiler 4 inches from source of heat 10 minutes on each side or until desired doneness, basting often with marinade. Slice steak across grain into thin slices. Makes 4 servings.

CHINESE ORANGE BEEF

- 1 pound top sirloin or round steak
- 1/4 cup soy sauce
- 1 1/2 teaspoons cornstarch
- 1 tablespoon grated ginger root
- 1 tablespoon oil
- 3 pieces dried orange peel
- 1 or 2 dried red chile peppers
- 1 carrot, sliced
- 1 green pepper, sliced
- 1 sweet red pepper, sliced
- 1/4 pound pea pods, trimmed
- 1 (8-ounce) can sliced water chestnuts

1 head iceberg lettuce, shredded
 Trim fat from steak and slice into thin strips. Combine soy sauce, cornstarch and ginger. Pour over steak and toss to mix well.

Heat 2 teaspoons oil in non-stick skillet until hot. Add orange peel and chile peppers and cook over high heat 1 minute. Add beef and stir-fry until browned, about 3 minutes. Remove beef mixture to plate.

Add remaining 1 teaspoon oil to wok and heat. Add carrot, peppers, pea pods and water chestnuts and stir-fry 3 to 4 minutes. Return beef to skillet and stir-fry until beef is heated through.

Discard chiles and orange peel. Place lettuce on serving platter and top with beef mixture. Makes 4 servings.

FRENCHED FLANK STEAK

- 2 tablespoons oil
- 1/2 cup red wine
- 1/4 cup vinegar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon peppercorns, crushed
- 1 teaspoon marjoram
- 1 (1 1/4 to 1 3/4-pound) flank steak

Combine oil, wine, vinegar, salt, crushed peppercorns and marjoram. Place steak in shallow pan and add marinade, turning to coat meat. Marinate in refrigerator 6 hours or overnight, turning several times.

Place steak on rack in broiler pan or on grill so surface of meat is 3 to 4 inches from heat. Reserve marinade. Broil at moderate temperature 5 to 6 minutes, turn, brush with marinade and broil 5 to 7 minutes or to desired doneness. Carve steak diagonally across grain into thin slices. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

WINTER BREAKFAST WARMER

- 1 (12-ounce) package small prunes
- 1 pear, cored and sliced
- 1/2 cup dried apricot halves
- 2 cups orange juice
- 1 tablespoon honey
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 cinnamon stick
- 2 tablespoons chopped walnuts

Combine prunes, pear, apricots, orange juice, honey, vanilla and cinnamon in 2- to 3-quart saucepan. Bring to boil, then reduce heat and simmer 5 minutes. Cover and let stand 1 to 2 hours to plump fruit. Before serving, warm over low heat. Sprinkle each serving with walnuts. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Souffles

3 tablespoons flour
1 cup hot milk
Salt and white pepper
Freshly grated nutmeg
4 egg yolks
3 1/2 ounces sharp cheddar cheese, shredded
6 whites
8 3/4-ounce can tiny white kernel corn

Butter a 6- to 7-cup (to the brim) souffle dish. Coat with parmesan cheese and refrigerate. Melt 3 tablespoons butter in a sauce pan over medium heat.

Add flour, stir until blended, turn down heat and cook for 5 minutes. (This roux should be the consistency of applesauce while cooking.)

Cool roux by dipping pan into cold water for several seconds. Add hot milk, all at once, stirring well. Bring to a boil, and season mixture with salt, pepper and nutmeg.

Taste and correct seasoning — the mixture should be well seasoned. Remove from heat and cool 5 minutes.

Add yolks to the cooked mixture one by one — stirring well to incorporate into bechamel sauce. Add cheddar cheese. Mix well. Beat whites until firm but still smooth.

Mix one fourth of the whites into yolk mixture to lighten the mixture. Then gently fold in remaining whites. Pour mixture into the chilled souffle dish.

Bake in a 400-degree oven 22 to 25 minutes (or 12 to 15 minutes for individual souffles.) Serve immediately.

Celebrate

fresh mushrooms and spinach, the menu signals celebration.

Fast and Wild Lemon Shrimp
1 pound large shrimp, peeled and deveined, with tail on 1/4 cup butter or margarine
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
Freshly ground black pepper (optional)

1 package Uncle Ben's Long Grain & Wild Rice Original Fast Cooking Recipe
2 cups water
1 1/2 cups coarsely chopped bok choy or celery
1/4 teaspoon grated lemon peel
Lemon wedges

Thread shrimp onto skewers. Place on rack in broiling pan. Melt 2 tablespoons of the butter; add lemon juice and parsley. Brush half of mixture over shrimp; sprinkle with pepper to taste, if desired. Combine contents of rice and seasoning packets, water and remaining 2 tablespoons butter in saucepan. Bring to a boil. Cover tightly and simmer until all water is absorbed, about 5 minutes. While rice simmers, broil shrimp 4 inches from heat source for 3 minutes. Turn; brush with remaining butter mixture. Continue broiling until opaque, about 3 minutes. When rice has finished simmering, stir in bok choy and lemon peel; serve with shrimp. Serve lemon wedges.

MORDECAI HOUSE
RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA

We're proud to be part of the South and its rich cultural heritage and traditions. As part of our 100th Anniversary celebration, we're saluting great homes of the South in our "Home Accents" catalogues. The 18th and 19th Century Mordecai House and Historic Park in Raleigh, N.C. served as a splendid backdrop for our Americana folk-inspired Spring Housewares event! We found the Mordecai House unique in its architecture, and in its furnishings, portraits and books from the home's original collections!

Sweet and Sour Fish

1 (11-ounce) can mandarin oranges
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1/2 cup commercial sweet-and-sour sauce
2 pounds fish fillets
1 small onion, thinly sliced and separated into rings
Arrange oranges, reserving juice. Combine juice and cornstarch in a small saucepan; cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens. Remove from heat and stir in sweet-and-sour sauce; set aside. Arrange fish in a foil-lined 13x9x2" baking pan.
Arrange orange and onion over fish; top with sauce. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 to 30 minutes, or until fish flakes easily with a fork.
Yield: 6 to 8 servings.
