City, County Study Plan For Joint Law Center

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

In an atmosphere of cooperative effort, Greenville's City Council and the Pitt County Commissioners met Wednesday to discuss the possibilities of working together to deal with a variety of problems associated with the rapid growth of the community.

Held at the King and Queen Restaurant, the meeting included discussions on jail facilities and medical district zoning.

"Essentially this was a meeting to discuss mutual concerns in areas where hopefully we can jointly work together," Mayor Ed Carter said.

"I'm quite optimistic that maybe we can come out of this with some collaborative efforts that would satisfy the interests of both the city and the county and hopefully result in some savings to the taxpayers," Carter added.

According to City Manager Greg Knowles, the county board has approached the city with the possibility of developing a joint law enforcement center.

Knowles indicated the time may be right for such a venture.

With the recent construction of new offices in the City Hall building, Knowles said working conditions in the building have become extremely cramped. "We don't have any space, we're practically working out on the streets," he told the commissioners.

He said the problems resulting from "a serious shortage of office space" in the building might be alleviated if the police department could be moved to another facility.

"We could then stay in that building for quite a period of time," he theorized.

Meanwhile, Pitt County Commissioners are planning on abandoning their aging and underspaced jail facility.

But according to County Manager Kramer Jackson, the problem is not whether to abandon the old jail but, rather, where to build the new one. Jackson said it's important to consider the location of a new jail in terms of long-range planning which might also include other long-range concerns such as future court expansion and the addition of increased county office space.

With both governing bodies needing changes, the question of whether a shared facility might solve the needs of both was discussed.

"I think it's a marvelous idea. Without a doubt it's an idea whose time has come," said Greenville's newly appointed police chief, Jerry Tesmond.

"Without a doubt both the county and the city need this kind of facility. There's no sense in prolonging the agony. The sooner we move forward, the sooner we can develop something that will work not only for today but also for tomorrow. This is an excellent opportunity and I'm 100 percent behind it," Tesmond said.

Jackson told city officials the

Reagan Jubilant As Summit Ends

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The NATO allies vowed today to defend the West with both conventional and nuclear forces, and President Reagan declared that "we're strong, we're united, we're prosperous and we're free."

The first NATO summit in six years ended with a communique expressing the alliance's determination to "prevent any kind of war or intimidation." Reagan followed up with a tribute to NATO's 40 years of peacekeeping.

"The North Atlantic Alliance is the most successful in history," the president said. He said the medium-range nuclear weapons treaty signed by the United States and the Soviet Union last December was "a direct result" of alliance unity.

"It goes without saying that our allies support this treaty and every leader solidly reaffirmed its value," Reagan said. "... I reiterated the strong bipartisan support that exists for the alliance in the United States."

"We cannot and will not put our peace and freedom and that of our children and their children at risk," he said. "We will never trade that credibility (of deterrent) at the negotiating table and we will not give it away through neglect."

Reagan, making probably his farewell appearance before a high-ranking NATO gathering, proclaimed: "The state of the alliance is excellent. We're strong, we're united, we're prosperous and we're free."

Following Reagan's four-minute statement before reporters, Secretary of State George P. Shultz hailed the two-day summit. "Here was freedom on display," he said. "It was a very moving experience."

The secretary seemed fatigued from his recent Middle East peacemaking tour, and was leaving immediately for another round of talks with Arab and Israeli leaders on Reagan's orders.

After courtesy calls on his Belgian government hosts, Reagan headed back toward Washington aboard Air Force One. He was scheduled to arrive at the White House in time to observe his 36th wedding anniversary on Friday.

NATO Secretary General Lord Carrington said the summit "gives me some satisfaction" because of the 16 alliance leaders' good will and harmony as they charted future policy.

WALTER DAIL

Dail Enters Race For Pitt Board

Walter Dail, former mayor of Winterville, filed as a candidate for a seat on the Pitt County Board of Commissioners Wednesday from Consolidated District C.

District C, a combination of regular Districts 4 and 5, includes Falkland, Fountain, Farmville, Arthur, Winterville and a portion of Greenville townships.

Dail, who graduated from Winterville High School, was supervisor of transportation and maintenance for Pitt County schools for 10 years and was maintenance engineer for Pitt County Memorial Hospital for 26 1/2 years before his retirement in 1976.

Dail stepped down as mayor of Winterville in 1981 after 21 years in the post, and another 12 as an alderman.

He was a volunteer fireman in Winterville for 25 years, was an organizer of the Winterville Rescue Squad, and was a charter member of the Winterville Kiwanis Club, where he has 26 years' perfect attendance.

Dail is a member of the Winterville Baptist Church and has been Sunday School secretary for 25 years. He was also a member of the N.C. National Guard for six years.

U.N. Orders Arbitration On U.S. Plan To Oust PLO

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — A U.S. official said the General Assembly acted prematurely when it voted in emergency session to order the United States to submit to binding arbitration its plan to close the PLO U.N. mission.

The vote Wednesday was 143-1. America's Western allies joined the majority. Israel cast the only dissenting vote. The United States did not vote.

Arab diplomats hinted the United Nations might have to leave New York if the U.S. government insists on enforcing an anti-terrorism law that would close the Palestine Liberation Organization mission by March 21.

The U.S. deputy permanent representative, Herbert S. Okun, called the special session "inappropriate and premature."

Although U.S. Ambassador Vernon A. Walters was not present Wednesday, he has said various branches of the government are discussing the issue and its legal implications.

Clovis Maksud, Arab envoy, said America was opening "a Pandora's box of diplomatic, legal and political problems" by trying to close the mission and putting U.S. domestic legislation above international treaty obligations.

Most diplomats, however, said a move from New York was undesirable and unlikely. The PLO has non-voting, observer status at the United Nations.

Maksud, representative of the League of Arab States, told a news conference Congress should repeal the anti-terrorism law and said President Reagan could exclude the PLO U.N. mission from application of the law.

Higgins May Get Eagle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lt. Col. William Higgins, the American Marine kidnapped in Lebanon two weeks ago, has been selected for promotion to the rank of colonel.

Higgins, a military aide to former Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger before assuming a temporary assignment as the head of a United Nations observer detachment last summer, was listed today along with 78 other lieutenant colonels selected by a promotion board for advancement.

Higgins is No. 28 on the list of 79 and would not actually receive the new rank for another year at the earliest. Higgins was kidnapped on Feb. 17.

Higgins, 43, was in Lebanon because he had been assigned to temporary duty with the United Nations. A decorated Vietnam combat veteran, Higgins served as the junior military assistant to Weinberger for two years, from June 1985 to June 1987.

Mayor Seeks Funds For Alien

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville Mayor Edward Carter made a plea Wednesday afternoon for area residents to donate money to help bring Helmy Makarios' wife to the United States from Egypt.

Makarios lives in Greenville with two of his sons, but his wife and another son have not been able to obtain a visa needed to return to the United States. Makarios is unable to work because of an injury suffered on the job while living in New York and he cannot afford legal assistance, Carter said.

"I am pleading with the citizens of the community to join forces to raise money to get a lawyer and help resolve this situation," said Carter.

There are immigration lawyers in Raleigh, Durham and Chapel Hill, said Carolyn Bowen, a member of the Temple Free Will Baptist Church and friend of the Makarios family. One attorney estimated the legal costs at $3,300, she said.

Helmy and his wife Sarah were both in the United States from 1978 until last June when she returned to Egypt to renew her visa. She expected to be gone only about two weeks, but the American Embassy in Cairo delayed the process, Mrs. Bowen said.

Embassy officials wanted to verify Mrs. Makarios' babysitting and housekeeping work in the United States to make sure she would not return and be a ward of the state, said Mrs. Bowen. The final decision on the visa comes from Consulate General Conrad Drescher, and Mrs. Bowen said Drescher is now reviewing Mrs. Makarios' work experience in New York.

Several things complicate the situation. Makarios' two children living in Greenville, John and Andrew, were born in the United States and are American citizens. Mark, now living in Egypt, was born in Greece and is not an American citizen.

Makarios has undergone back surgery due to the injury he suffered in New York and doctors have also put him on medication to control epileptic seizures. Makarios' visa also expired in late 1980, within six months of when Mrs. Makarios' expired. Twice immigration officials have confronted him about deportation, Mrs. Bowen said, but they allowed him to stay in the United States because of his poor health and his children.

"At any time he could be deported. He knows that and he's not afraid of that," said Mrs. Bowen. "The primary concern is to get his wife back here to him and his two children."

Douglas Holmes, an immigration lawyer in Durham, said Makarios would qualify for permanent resident status under the legalization program began in May 1987. Illegal aliens who had been living in the United States prior to 1982 were given one year to apply for permanent resident status.

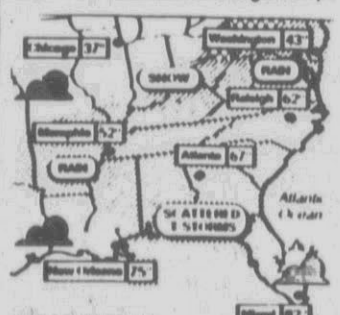

Makarios would have to complete forms, undergo medical exams, take an AIDS test and produce photographs and rent receipts to prove he was in the country prior to 1982, Holmes said. May 4 is the deadline for entering the program.

Under the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986, Makarios would be eligible for amnesty in 18

The monthly collections are sponsored by the Greenville Recycling Committee with support of local government and non-profit organizations. They are an adjunct of the pilot recyclable project recently opened at the container site in Bells Fork.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Airport Plan Merits Support

The Airport Authority should give its support to a proposed land use plan for the Pitt-Greenville Airport promptly so the plan can be considered by other entities and successfully implemented.

In addition, when it meets Saturday to examine the plan, the authority should carefully consider the concept of creating an airport zoning designation with restrictions specifically designed for aviation needs. The land use plan correctly lists this approach as one option open to the authority. It appears to be the most effective means of protecting the airport from encroaching inappropriate development.

The airport is a vital economic force in Pitt County because it provides a transportation link with the major metropolitan areas of the state. Its vigorous growth has earned the facility an ever-increasing significance in the community and prompted the need for long-range planning for future expansion.

Because of this prominence, the area around the airport needs protection from incompatible development that could squelch the facility's potential. Safety is also a primary concern, as well as freeing the area from navigation hazards that could hamper its expansion.

Specifically, space for adequate runway construction must be maintained. Room for terminal and parking expansion must be secured. Land uses in flight paths should minimize noise pollution concerns and strengthen safety requirements.

The land use plan under consideration by the authority provides a thorough survey of existing hazards and impediments to expansion. It correctly identifies conflicting land uses and specifies what development could threaten airport operation.

The survey makes it clear action is necessary to adequately protect the airport area. Airport, city and county officials should heed its message and deal with the issue to eliminate land use conflicts before they arise. The regulatory measures the plan suggests — particularly the creation of an airport zone — are reasonable and deserve merit.

The phenomenal growth of the Pitt-Greenville Airport and the potential it holds should not fall victim to inappropriate development. The airport authority had the vision to recognize the need for land use planning and now should back that foresight with action.

In addition, other public entities responsible for protecting the facility should strongly back this effort to protect one of Pitt County's greatest assets.

State Needs Extension

North Carolina faces a dilemma with the ruling of the U.S. Labor Department which bans using 17-year-old school bus drivers after April 1.

Some 4,000 of the state's 13,000 school bus drivers are 17 years old. Howard Haworth, chairman of the N.C. State Board of Education, said the deadline will "present us with a very difficult situation for school systems to comply by April. If there is no additional time to allow a smooth and stable transition, every effort will have to be made to comply on schedule," he said.

The handwriting is on the wall that North Carolina immediately will have to use only drivers who are 18 years or older. That will mean increased cost. Officials say drivers wages would have to increase by about $2 per hour to about $6.50 to attract capable adult drivers. Annual cost would go up between $25 million and $27 million per year.

If the April 1 deadline goes into effect, the system might have to use the adult drivers it has and run a limited number of buses. That could mean double or triple loads and a great deal of inconvenience for the students being transported.

Obviously it makes little sense to arbitrarily end the use of 17-year-old drivers on April 1 — so near the end of the school year. A much better planning job can be done if the deadline were pushed back to the opening of school next fall and certainly the U.S. Department of Labor should be flexible enough to extend its deadline through this school year.

State education authorities should do everything possible to obtain an extension at least through the end of this school year. Beyond that, it must be recognized that the days of using student drivers are numbered. North Carolina will have to plan and budget for adult drivers.

That should not be done haphazardly. The drivers chosen should be qualified and painstakingly trained for their profession. After all, their jobs entail a great deal of responsibility for life and limb. That fact, of course, will mean salaries adequate to retain mature, qualified people.

In the meantime there will have to be some flexibility in making the transition. To do otherwise will mean creating even more safety questions.

'Super Tuesday' And Southern Politics

"Super Tuesday" is shedding new light on a continuing upheaval in Southern politics, one pushing the Democratic Party toward the left while the two major factions in an increasingly strong Republican Party are on a seemingly inevitable collision course.

Creation of what amounts to a Southern primary next Tuesday is causing growing anxiety among Democratic strategists who said they anticipate high participation by Democratic voters in Republican primaries that 10 years ago drew so few voters in most states that they were considered a political joke.

"It could be that we planned this huge celebration at our house," Democratic pollster Harrison Hickman said, "and the people go to the party next door. All the Republicans have to do is open the door."

Among preliminary findings in a re-evaluation, forced by Super Tuesday, of the traditional view of Southern politics are:

•Although conservative and moderate Democrats created Super Tuesday in a calculated move to shift their party to the right, they do not appear to have the votes to back up the strategy.

In the 12 Southern states holding primaries Tuesday, the candidates perceived as most liberal — Jesse L. Jackson and Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis — have 33 percent support, far more than the combined backing of the two seeking moderate and conservative votes — Sen. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., and Rep. Richard A. Gephardt, D-Mo. Together, they have 22 percent, according to the Washington Post-ABC poll of 1,122 likely Democratic voters.

If Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., is considered, the vote for liberals becomes 41 percent, almost twice the level of support for Gephardt and Gore.

'Although conservative and moderate Democrats created Super Tuesday in a calculated move to shift their party to the right, they do not appear to have the votes to back up the strategy.'

•Conversely, the Southern Republican electorate appears to have undergone an ideological sea-change during the Reagan years. In the 1960s and 1970s, the Southern GOP was the party's revolutionary arm, spearheading the conservative takeover that led first to nomination of then-Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., in 1964 and repeated drives to nominate Reagan.

Now, Southern Republicans are firmly on the side of the establishment candidate, Vice President George Bush. He leads in the South with 59 percent, compared with 20 percent for Sen. Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., and 10 percent for Pat Robertson, according to the poll of 984 likely Southern Republican voters. Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., who claims that he is the legitimate heir to the Reagan revolution, has only 5 percent.

•Although Robertson is not showing up as a major factor in the contest, his candidacy has turned local and state parties into battlegrounds as bloody as those in 1962-1964 when Goldwater conservatives threw out the tiny universe of Republican blacks and businessmen who controlled what had been the party of Lincoln.

In the current struggles, Robertson deserves much of the credit for a surge in Republican voter registration in the region.

The Southern GOP electorate thus may have moved away from the hard right of the early Goldwater and Reagan years. But Robertson has mobilized a committed army that is challenging, and often beating, Bush forces in intraparty contests.

•The Southern Democratic Party, according to poll data, has been split much the way of the Northern party: among better-educated whites backing Dukakis, more blue-collar and conservative whites supporting Gore and Gephardt, and blacks firmly in Jackson's camp.

Several analysts have said they view this combination as a menu for defeat in November, particularly since the high percentage of Southern blacks will mean several Jackson victories.

"When a lot of white Democrats begin to associate the Democratic Party with Jesse Jackson, it's going to be devastating," University of South Carolina political scientist Earl Black said. "The Republican Party doesn't have to do anything except exist."

In time, the Democratic Party may find a way to deal successfully with race and combine conflicting constituencies in presidential elections as it has done in some Senate and gubernatorial contests in Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia.

•In some states targeted by Robertson, GOP registration gains have been striking. In Louisiana, the number of Democrats has fallen over the last year by 31,413, while the GOP has gained 35,480.

In Florida, where regular voter purges skew the figures, the GOP registered enough new voters to show a loss of only 12,813 from the rolls, while Democrats lost 239,669.

In Mecklenburg County, N.C.,

Democratic registration has grown by 6,518 while the far smaller Republicans added 9,989 voters.

Although registration data is incomplete, preliminary evidence suggests that the Jackson campaign has not generated black Democratic registration large enough to counter Robertson-induced GOP gains.

In Louisiana, while the GOP added more than 35,000 voters, black Democratic registration grew by only 1,635. In Florida, where the GOP held its own through voter purges, the number of registered blacks fell by 73,454.

"One event like Super Tuesday is not going to be disastrous," Democratic pollster William Hamilton said. "The problem is that there can be a crystallization of events — Reagan, the economic boom, growing Republican loyalty in the urban centers — which, all taken together, are not good. ... Having this hot Republican primary does not bode well for the trend."

While intensified campaigning by Democratic candidates should increase interest in that contest, preliminary findings bode ill for the presidential prospects of the party that once owned the South.

In Mississippi, Hickman said a survey of whites who had voted in the Democratic gubernatorial primary last year showed that only 35 percent intend to vote in this year's Democratic primary, while 30 percent said they will go to the GOP contest and the remainder appear likely to sit out Tuesday.

In South Carolina, a survey of 518 voters by The State newspaper showed that 319 said they would vote Republican if the election were held now.

News Media Serves Robertson's Purposes

If there were a correlation between the publicity a candidate generates and the winning of his party's presidential nomination, Pat Robertson would probably be neck and neck with George Bush and Bob Dole right now.

It doesn't matter that much of what is written and broadcast about Pat Robertson is negative, and that he hasn't really won anything as yet. All that is important is that they get his name right — something that he seems to understand better than his reluctant servants, the news media.

What counts is that he was the subject of a "Nightline" program last week, not George Bush or Robert Dole; and not Richard Gephardt, Michael Dukakis or Albert Gore, for that matter. And it was he, not any of the others, who was on the front page of The New York Times the same week, in another personality profile: "Pat Robertson: A Candidate of Contradictions," followed by close-ups in Newsweek and New York magazine.

The reason for all the attention is the string of outrageous statements he has made recently, beginning with his startling assertion that there were missiles in Cuba pointed at the United States. That was followed by his farfetched accusation that Bush was behind the revelations about Jimmy Swaggart's sex life, and his equally preposterous claim that his Christian Broadcasting Network knew where American hostages in Lebanon were being held. Well, you could say, the man obviously is dumb or daft or both, but it's also possible that he's dumb like a fox.

The charge about missiles in Cuba, delivered during a Republican candidates' debate, had reporters scurrying around the next day to the State Department and White House for a reaction, giving him more publicity than the debate.

At that point, his opponents should have charged him with grand larceny for swiping the spotlight, but they no doubt consoled themselves with the thought that he ended up looking foolish. He didn't think so, though. He pointed out that voters loved it in Florida and Texas, two of the big Super Tuesday states. So did the media. Because of his "newsworthy statements," said Dan Hayes, assignment editor for WJXT-TV in Jacksonville, Fla., "we will cover him every time he appears here."

When he accused Bush and his staff of engineering the timing of the Swaggart scandal to discredit his campaign, he sounded like someone who had gone off the deep end. It got him more ink, however, and the charge became a subject of conversation on "Nightline."

More important, the accusation diverted the media's attention. When the Swaggart scandal broke, it was believed that it would hurt Robertson's campaign to the extent that it reflected badly on all television evangelists, of which he was once one. Just as reporters were preparing to analyze that possibility to death, he threw out the Bush charge and they chased it. Foolishly, Bush cooperated by denying it, instead of simply pointing a finger to his head and twirling it around a few times.

Outrageous charges — otherwise known as the Big Lie technique — followed by denials and controversy, are emerging as a Robertson trademark. Under President Reagan, they were called, somewhat misleadingly, "whoppers."

It was therefore fitting and ironic that Robertson turned the tables on Reagan with his charge regarding the hostages' whereabouts. It got him mentioned prominently during Reagan's press conference. For a change, Reagan found himself knocking down someone else's whopper.

The media virtuously believe that by showing Robertson to be contradictory and perhaps a little mad, they will expose him as a charlatan. They forget the times they live in. Today, a lot of people are just as apt to think that he's their kind of guy.

Strength For Today

Phillips Brooks was one of the greatest preachers of the late nineteenth century. For years he held the people of Boston spellbound. He preached in Westminster Abbey on several occasions.

Yet Phillips Brooks was a disappointed man. The great desire of his life was not to be a preacher, but a teacher. As a young man he had been a teacher of Latin in a boys' school near Boston, but was an abysmal failure.

Yet failure is often the door through which we move toward our greatest successes. For example, Patrick Henry and Abraham Lincoln had both failed as storekeepers before they went into public life. William Blackstone's inability to get clients drove him to his study where he wrote his famous Commentaries on the Laws of England — the leading textbook on law for over 100 years.

Mixed Results

WASHINGTON (AP) — The good-news, bad-news assessment that Ronald and Nancy Reagan gave of America's drug problem pretty much describes the administration's record in fighting it.

While President Reagan and his wife have alerted people to the threat, the administration's war against drugs has produced only mixed results, and consequently a lot of arguing and finger-pointing.

Nowhere was this more evident than at this week's White House Conference on a Drug-Free America, where administration drug-fighting strategy came in for a lot of second-guessing.

Kicking off the conference Monday, Reagan claimed progress in attacking "the supply side of the crusade against drugs."

Reagan said "we've strengthened the laws" and "drug seizures are at an all-time high."

Seizures of cocaine and the confiscation of drug-related assets are at record levels, he said, and arrests are up by 66 percent.

Yet, his drug-fighting performance came under attack because horror stories about abuse still abound — in cities and in the suburbs. Many drug-producing countries remain ambivalent about cooperative drug-fighting efforts, while traffickers skirt interdiction efforts.

The conference turned into a critique of the administration's record. Several speakers, including a member of Reagan's Cabinet, barked that not enough is being done.

"If we are winning the war on drugs, I wish the commanders would go out and tell it to the troops in the field," said Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control.

"We need to get away from a policy of containment," said Rep. Clay Shaw, R-Fla. "We want you to come up with a plan for victory. Let's fight it like we fought World War II, not like Vietnam. Let's fight to win."

While an administration becomes accustomed to attacks from Congress, sometimes from both the Democratic and Republican sides of the aisle, Reagan's policy was also questioned by Secretary of Education William Bennett.

"We are in real danger of losing the war against drugs," Bennett told the conference. He called for direct U.S. military intervention in producing countries to destroy drug operations.

Reagan has taken comfort in a Health and Human Services survey showing that for the first time in 13 years, a declining proportion of high school seniors admit having used cocaine.

But a congressional report released Tuesday, while the conference was in progress, seemed to cast some doubt on that. A study by the General Accounting Office said some experts fear the decline from 16.9 percent to 15.2 percent among the respondents saying they used cocaine may not have taken into account the newly popular "crack" form of cocaine which is smoked.

The administration's war on drugs faces other problems. For instance, Reagan's principal initiative aimed at attacking the demand side of the problem — a program of wide-scale voluntary testing across America — has never gotten off the ground because of legal problems.

The Supreme Court just last Monday agreed for the first time to decide a case involving the constitutionally thorny issue of mandatory work-place drug testing — and its decision may not set widespread precedent because it deals specifically with law enforcement jobs rather than general employment.

Congressional critics also say the administration has shown little return on the more than $21.5 billion spent on combating drugs over the last seven years, and state and local officials have complained that Reagan budget cuts have adversely affected their ability to deal with the problem.

Bennett came closer than anyone in the administration to admitting that the counter-attack wasn't working very well.

"We should consider broader use of military force against both the production and shipment of drugs," he said.

Merrill Hartson covers the White House for The Associated Press.

State Will Allow Unaffiliated To Cast Ballots

Bill Filed

RALEIGH (AP) — State elections director Alex Brock says he has instructed local elections board to allow unaffiliated voters to cast ballots in the Republican primary and will not change those instructions unless ordered by the U.S. Justice Department.

Brock said a letter he received from the Justice Department Oct. 28 cleared a new law allowing unaffiliated voters to participate in party primaries if party rules allow it. The approval came after a review required by the federal Voting Rights Act.

"We've gotten it approved," Brock said Wednesday. "We have no problem implementing it. These people will vote March 8."

The North Carolina Republican Party in November agreed to open the GOP primary to unaffiliated voters, but Justice Department officials Tuesday said they had not been asked to clear the change.

Party officials Wednesday sent the department an urgent letter requesting expedited consideration so unaffiliated voters could cast ballots in next Tuesday's presidential primary.

"What we're doing here is opening the party, inviting more people in," state GOP Chairman Jack Hawke said in an interview. "We're not denying anyone a vote. We're trying to open the process."

Hawke said his letter had been hand-delivered to the Justice Department in Washington, D.C., by the office of Rep. Cass Ballenger, R-N.C.

He said the proposed policy is not controversial and raises no questions of discrimination.

"Knowing how the bureaucracy works, it could take a long time, but I wouldn't think it should," Hawke said. "It should be a cut-and-dried situation."

The News and Observer of Raleigh reported Wednesday that the state GOP had failed to obtain clearance from the Justice Department as required by the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

The law, enacted to protect voting rights of minorities, applies to 40 of North Carolina's 100 counties. It bars changes in election procedures in af-fectured areas unless approved by the Justice Department.

The General Assembly voted in 1987 to give political parties the option of opening their primaries to independents. About 132,000 people — roughly 4 percent of the state's registered voters — are unaffiliated.

The Justice Department approved the law, and Hawke said GOP officials assumed that action was sufficient to allow them to proceed.

But a department spokesman said the Voting Rights Act also requires parties to submit changes in their election procedures for review — which the GOP did not do.

Justice Department spokesman Deborah Bursston-Wade said it was unlikely the proposed GOP change could be approved before next Tuesday and that votes cast by unaffiliated voters without approval would be subject to legal challenges.

The GOP considers opening its primaries to the unaffiliated a good way to recruit new members, Hawke said. The Democratic Party is allowing only registered Democrats to vote in its primaries.

Presidential hopeful Pat Robertson is urging conservative Democrats to vote for him in GOP primaries in states that permit crossover voting. Because crossing over is not allowed in North Carolina, it is unclear which candidate — if any — stands to lose the most votes if the GOP plan falls through, Hawke said.

RALEIGH (AP) — U.S. Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., said Wednesday that he had introduced legislation to allow North Carolina and South Carolina continue using 17-year-old school bus drivers through June 15.

Rose said the legislation had been sponsored by the members of both states' congressional delegations. He said he hoped to see it brought to a vote within a week if it passes through the House Education and Labor Committee.

The bill, which is not attached to other legislation, would prevent North Carolina from having to replace 2,085 17-year-old bus drivers by April 1.

State Wants Texasgulf To Eliminate Pollutants

By The Associated Press
Texasgulf Chemicals Co. would have to eliminate the polluted water that it dumps into the Pamlico River under the terms of a proposed permit the state will release later this month, officials say.

The proposed discharge permit, which has taken the state almost four years to draw up, marks a fundamental change in pollution control. Instead of placing limits on pollutants, it would require that the company eliminate its polluted discharge entirely by recycling contaminated wastewater within a closed loop.

Texasgulf, which operates a phosphate mine and fertilizer plant near Aurora, now legally dumps tons of phosphorus and fluoride into the Pamlico daily. Those chemicals, some scientists say, have contributed to the river's declining health.

The proposed permit will be released March 14, Paul Wilms, director of the Division of Environmental Management, said Wednesday. Company officials and the public will then have 45 days to comment and make suggestions.

No date for a public hearing on the permit has been set, Wilms said, but it will probably be held in Beaufort County at the end of April. The final permit should be issued in May, he said.

Company and state officials have met several times to discuss the permit since a draft was released in December, Wilms said.

"We're all thinking along the same lines," he said.

Disagreement is likely over how much time the company would need to convert to a recycling system. The company has suggested that it be given five years, said Thomas Regan, the vice president in charge of the plant.

"We've had good meetings with the state and with environmental groups," he said. "People, I think, understand that it will take that long. There is some technology we have to develop, but we're committed to this."

Thomas Wright, the company's president, said that Texasgulf is asking for five years because engineers don't know what it would take to build the recycling system.

"The question is, what's going to take five years?" he said. "I'm not sure. It's the lack of knowledge that's the main thing. It's our intention to do it in less than five years if it can be done. It's not in our best interests to delay this."

The state recognizes that company officials would need time, Wilms said, but he said that he's inclined to give them three years.

The timing is just one question that must be resolved before a final permit is issued, he said. A completion date would be included in a special order of consent that must be approved by the Environmental Management Commission and would be issued with the final permit.

The order also would include target dates when parts of the recycling system must be completed and would place limits on the amount of phosphorus and fluoride that the company would be allowed to discharge until the closed loop is built.

"I think it's a good permit," Wilms said. "There's a lot of engineering that needs to be done, and a lot of the engineering questions won't be answered until we issue the permit."

The proposed permit requires that the company separate its water systems. Water used in the mining and manufacturing processes must be confined to the closed loop. The pure groundwater that the company draws from the Castle Hayne Aquifer to mine the phosphate rock could be dumped into the river or sold as drinking water. The company also must line ditches and settling ponds to prevent contaminated water from seeping into the groundwater.

Texasgulf's engineering and environmental staffs are studying how long it would take to build the system and how much it would cost, Regan said. The final cost, he estimated, would be in the millions of dollars.

Texasgulf's permit expired in 1984.

Super Collider Opponents Drawing On Lessons Used In N.Y. Campaign

UNC Gift

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The University of North Carolina Athletic Department has made a $50,000 gift to the school's University Fund with the proceeds from the Collegiate Legends Classic basketball game between the alumni of North Carolina and UCLA.

The basketball game, played in June at UCLA's Pauley Pavilion, matched Dean Smith and former Bruins' coach John Wooden. North Carolina won the nationally televised game.

Proceeds from the game and television rights were shared equally by the two schools.

Watauga Medal

RALEIGH (AP) — Joseph D. Moore of Charlotte, chairman of North Carolina State University's Development Board, received the university's highest non-academic honor Wednesday night.

The award, called the Watauga Medal, is given annually to as many as three people in recognition of "unusually distinguished service to the university." The presentation was made during N.C. State University's Founder's Day dinner celebrating the university's 101st anniversary.

Moore, involved for many years in N.C. State University development programs, has served since 1978 as chairman of the Development Board, made up of leaders of foundations which provide private, supplemental support for university programs.

Tower Arrests

RALEIGH (AP) — Two University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill students were ordered Wednesday to perform community service after admitting that they splashed paint on the bell tower at N.C. State University in retaliation for a similar incident in Chapel Hill.

Sophomores Richard B. Loth of Denver, Colo., and Daniel A. Rosin of Portsmouth, Va., both 20, acknowledged in Wake County District Court that they had defaced a public monument, which is a misdemeanor.

Judge George R. Greene, a UNC-Chapel Hill alumnus, pledged his allegiance to his alma mater before ordering the students to perform 75 hours of community service for their prank. Greene said the students' acts had brought dishonor to their school, adding, "Two wrongs don't make a right."

Currin

RALEIGH (AP) — Margaret P. Currin is scheduled to be sworn in March 11 as U.S. attorney for the state's Eastern District after getting an interim appointment to the job formerly held by her husband, Samuel T. Currin.

Mrs. Currin was given the interim appointment Tuesday by Attorney General Edwin Meese III, according to J. Andrew Hartsfield, legislative assistant to U.S. Sen. Jesse A. Helms, R-N.C. Mrs. Currin was recommended for the job by Helms last summer after Gov. Jim Martin appointed Currin, a former Helms aide, to a state Superior Court judgeship.

Meese's appointment allows Mrs. Currin to take office while the White House reviews the recommendation, Hartsfield said. The Justice Department has completed a background check of Mrs. Currin and sent the recommendation to President Reagan, whose nominee must be confirmed by the U.S. Senate. Hartsfield said.

Hepatitis

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Scattered cases of infectious hepatitis have been reported in Buncombe County, but health officials say there is no cause for alarm.

Cases of hepatitis A have been reported in the county each year, but the numbers seldom, if ever, reach outbreak proportions, said Helen Farrell, chief of adult health services at Buncombe County Health Department.

Infectious hepatitis, which by law must be reported to the health department, is caused by a virus found in human feces and is transmitted primarily by contaminated hands and through food preparation, she said. The most common vehicles for transmission are water, milk and foods such as sliced meats and raw or undercooked seafood, particularly shellfish, she said.

Tanker Spill

RALEIGH (AP) — A tanker truck carrying liquid fertilizer collided with a car on U.S. 1 North in Raleigh late Wednesday, spilling its cargo onto the highway and into a nearby creek.

Hazardous material cleanup crews rushed to the scene, about one mile north of the Raleigh city limits and mile from the Neuse River, after officials discovered that the truck was leaking. About 4,300 gallons of the truck's 4,500-gallon load of ammonia sulfate spilled, said Jeff Mullen, chief of Wake County-New Hope Fire Dept.

Authorities blocked both sides of U.S. 1 near the scene, but environmental officials said the accident posed no harm to area residents and no evacuations were ordered.

New Flu

RALEIGH (AP) — A new variation of flu virus may have come to North Carolina from China, and it may explain why some people are still falling ill even though they received flu shots, health officials said Wednesday.

The new variation is called Type A "Sichuan," for the area in China where the virus was first reported last year. It is the virus responsible for an outbreak among passengers on a ship cruising Chinese and Korean waters last fall. Since then, similar viruses have shown up in the United States.

The virus is very closely related, but not identical, to the Type A "Leningrad" flu virus that was used to devise the flu vaccine distributed this year.

DURHAM (AP) — Opponents of a superconducting super collider in North Carolina say they hope to use lessons learned in New York to keep the $4.4 billion atom-smasher out of the state.

Opposition from residents east of Rochester, N.Y., became so strong that on Jan. 14 New York withdrew its proposal super collider, even though the state was among eight finalists to be named the next week by the U.S. Department of Energy.

"We believe that once the facts are known the state and the citizens will see (the super collider) is not a good thing for North Carolina," Joe Haenn, an opponent of the collider, said Wednesday. "That is our ultimate goal — to see that the collider doesn't come here."

"We would rather our state would realize that it's not a good thing for North Carolina than have the federal government tell us that," Haenn said.

But state officials say they don't think that will happen.

"It would take an act of the Council of State, and given the support for the project, I don't see that happening," said William Dunn, leader of the state's effort to win the collider.

Dunn said the state will continue to try to build support among residents in Durham, Person and Granville counties — the area where the state proposes to build the 53-mile underground tunnel.

Haenn and others have met with Jim Alexander, who led the fight against the collider in New York, and they gather regularly to discuss strategy.

They adopted the name of the New York opposition — Citizens Against The Collider Here — and believe the lessons they've learned will help their cause in North Carolina.

New York officials announced plans last spring to submit three proposed super collider sites to the Department of Energy. They didn't push a remote site near the Canadian border and dropped a site in the Hudson River Valley after local political leaders objected.

The other originally proposed site was shifted north to Monroe and Wayne counties, about 20 miles east of Rochester. When state officials visited the area in October, they met an aroused public.

During one visit to the Rochester area, protesters threw apples at Lt. Gov. Stan Lundine, who coordinated New York's efforts to win the collider. The protesters also spit at him and rocked his car. David Egner, an aide to Lundine, said supporters of the collider were shouted down at public meetings.

"We weren't as loud," he said. "It's much harder to get people to appreciate the benefits of something than it is to get people aroused to fight for their homes."

Egner said about 700 families would have been displaced by the New York proposal. Alexander, however, placed the number at more than 1,000.

A similar disagreement has occurred in North Carolina. State officials say 105 property owners would be displaced. Opponents say dozens more would be affected.

In both states, officials did not meet with residents until after submitting their proposals to the federal government in September. The meetings were Oct. 7 in New York and Feb. 4 here.

Congressman Says Agency Suppressing Audi Report

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration and Volkswagen appear to be working together to keep the public from learning if sudden acceleration is still a problem in Audi 5000 cars, a congressman says.

NHTSA, which last year ordered a massive recall of the vehicles for installation of a device to fix alleged throttle problems, has failed to press Volkswagen of America Inc. to place post-recall reports of sudden acceleration on the public record, Rep. George Hochbrueckner, D-N.Y., said Wednesday.

In a letter to NHTSA Administrator Diane Steed, Hochbrueckner said he was "disturbed by evidence ... which suggests that NHTSA willingly acquiesced to (Volkswagen's) refusal to turn over the incident reports."

He demanded that Volkswagen turn over all documents relating to post-recall reports of sudden acceleration to Congress, rather than to the agency responsible for investigating the complaints.

Congress has no power to compel the documents be turned over to it, said Andy Kennedy, an aide to Hochbrueckner.

NHTSA is auditing its January 1987 recall of 255,336 1978-86 Audi 5000s for installation of the throttle device. The agency has received 1,750 complaints of sudden acceleration in Audi 5000s, resulting in 1,269 accidents, 430 injuries and five deaths.

A NHTSA memorandum by Wolfgang Reinhart, dated last January, said the agency asked VW for the documents in June 1987, but they were not included in the automaker's response in July.

The documents were made available by Volkswagen for inspection in its Washington office rather than being delivered to NHTSA, the memo said. "The source documents were reviewed by (NHTSA) personnel and the summaries were found to be accurate summations of the very bulky source documents," it said.

Volkswagen late Wednesday issued a statement in response saying that "NHTSA has not given us any special concessions, neither have we been relieved of any of the burden of responding to the agencies' requests for information."

The automaker said the summaries were an interim report. "At no time was it suggested that this status update would take the place of the technical data required by NHTSA, or that we had refused to provide NHTSA with this data, or that we would permanently retain the data in our possession," Volkswagen said.

A NHTSA spokesman said there had been other instances in which NHTSA had requested summaries of complaints rather than the complaints themselves. He was unable to say how common the practice was.

He declined to comment specifically on Hochbrueckner's allegations. The spokesman demanded anonymity, citing agency policy.

Sniper Wounds Four People

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A former mental patient opened fire with two six-shooters near the Alamo, shooting four people at random and trading shots with police before he was wounded and taken into custody, authorities said.

Marvin Duncan, 55, shot in the left thigh by police, was charged with six counts of attempted capital murder, police spokesman Sgt. Paul Buske said. Bond was set at $1.5 million.

The most seriously wounded victim, Deborah Reyes, 29, was shot in the chest and stomach and was in critical condition at Brooke Army Medical Center late Wednesday, said hospital spokesman Sgt. William Banks.

The three others, shot at point-blank range, were not injured seriously, officials said.

The shooting took place in the week that marks the 152nd anniversary of the fall of the mission to Mexican troops.

Court records show Duncan was placed in Rusk State Hospital for the mentally or criminally insane in October 1980 after being found incompetent to stand trial on an attempted murder charge.

He was released in March 1981 to stand trial, but Bexar County prosecutors dismissed the charge in favor of a civil commitment to San Antonio State Hospital. The records did not indicate Duncan's status at the state hospital.

Parachutists Test Shuttle Escape

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Six Navy parachutists slid down a 12-foot pole and floated 7,500 feet to the ground in what NASA said was another successful test of an alternate escape system for space shuttle crew members.

"In the opinion of both the jumpers and the astronauts who observed the test, the test was highly successful," NASA spokesman Ralph Jackson said Wednesday after returning from a remote viewing site in this Mojave Desert base 70 miles north of Los Angeles.

The escape system uses a telescoping pole that would extend down and to the rear of the shuttle. Astronauts would attach themselves to rings on the pole, slide clear of the shuttle and then parachute.

During the test, the parachutists slid down a pole protruding from a C-141 plane 7,500 feet above the desert and then deployed their chutes, Jackson said. "The dynamics of coming off the pole and getting away from the aircraft look pretty good," although it will be a week before NASA knows if the test showed that escaping astronauts would stay clear of the shuttle wing, said astronaut Steve Nagle, who was aboard the plane.

Jackson said the test also was watched by astronauts Carl Meade and George "Pinky" Nelson, who is scheduled to fly on the Discovery.

FmHA Preparing New Rules To Help Farmers Settle Debts

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seven states account for nearly half the $6.6 billion in delinquent loans owed by farmers to the Agriculture Department's traditional lender of last resort, the Farmers Home Administration.

The FmHA's mission is to lend money to some of the highest-risk farmers in the nation, those who cannot get credit from banks or other commercial lending institutions.

As of Sept. 30, 1987, the agency had 261,291 farm borrowers who owed about $26 billion, FmHA spokesman Joe O'Neill said Wednesday. Of those, 127,671 were in arrears, with past-due payments of about $6.6 billion.

The Sept. 30 figures are in the process of being updated but still are the most recent available, O'Neill said.

According to figures provided by FmHA but tallied by The Associated Press, the states with the largest past-due accounts, mostly in the South, were: Georgia, $697.3 million; Mississippi, $594.3 million; Texas, $542.5 million; California, $471.8 million; Louisiana, $399.7 million; Arkansas, $280.6 million; and Oklahoma, $228.2 million.

The loans were made under a variety of FmHA farm programs. Nationally, a few of the most popular and their over-due balances included: farm ownership, $444.4 million; farm operating loans, $1.1 billion; and emergency loans, $3.9 billion.

O'Neill said new rules are being prepared to help farmers settle their past-due FmHA accounts, including provisions to allow some of the debt to be written off so that families can stay on the land. The plan probably will be ready by June, he said.

However, O'Neill said he had no estimate of how much debt the FmHA might write off under the new rules.

"There's just no way of knowing,"

O'Neill said. "It'll be each individual case all the way through."

Congress, partly at the prodding of the activist organizations, agreed that FmHA should slow down and overhaul its policies. New credit legislation last year made the message clear.

As a last resort, the new rules would let FmHA write off debts in excess of a borrower's assets, O'Neill said. For example, if a farmer's assets were $150,000 and debts totaled $500,000, the write-off could be as much as $350,000 if the FmHA determined the farmer could handle the remainder by staying in business.

"It makes sense, then, to keep that person in business and write off the difference between what they owe and their assets — if the government stands a chance of retrieving more by keeping that farmer going," O'Neill said. "We're trying to carry out the intent of Congress in the Agricultural Credit Act of 1987 as closely as we can."

Aspirin Ads Pulled

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — The head of the Food and Drug Administration said today the agency hopes to make a decision in a few months on whether aspirin manufacturers can advertise claims that their products help reduce a first heart attack.

FDA Commissioner Frank E. Young said he was pleased with a voluntary agreement from the nation's aspirin manufacturers Wednesday not to make such claims until data from a recent study can be fully analyzed.

Young, interviewed on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America," said people with high blood pressure, liver disease, gout or ulcers face the risk of bleeding complications from aspirin and should seek the advice of a doctor on its usage.

He also said that while there is some evidence that healthy men between the ages of 45 and 85 might use an aspirin every other day to reduce the risk of heart attack, there is no evidence that it would help women or younger men.

Young said the agency was concerned that aspirin ads citing a recent medical journal study could be misleading.

Higher Prices Cut Into Imports' Sales

DETROIT (AP) — Three years of price increases are beginning to take their toll on foreign car sales, as buyers reconsider American models and find improved cars priced as much as $2,000 lower than comparable imports.

Automakers in Japan and Western Europe have been forced to raise prices to compensate for the plummeting dollar, which has fallen as much as 50 percent against their currencies since 1985.

General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. have turned the weak dollar to their advantage by holding down prices instead of matching their foreign competitors' increase-for-increase as before.

"They are all looking at 1988 as the year of the return of the domestic (car) or the start of that return," said Chris Cedergren, industry analyst with J.D. Power and Associates in Agoura Hills, Calif.

Japanese car prices have risen nearly 25 percent in the past three years. European auto prices have risen less on a percentage basis but more in dollar terms because they are predominantly luxury models that cost more to start with.

The price increases have added as much as $6,000 to the cost of a German car and $3,000 for a Japanese model since the dollar began falling. The price difference between a Japanese car and a comparable American model has reached $1,500 to $2,000, analysts said.

European makers felt the pinch from the weak dollar first because Japanese auto prices had a built-in cushion: U.S. dealers faced with heavy demand had been tacking $1,000 to $2,000 onto the sticker price and still selling all the cars they could get.

Buyers didn't notice that Japanese cars were growing more expensive until late 1986, when dealers had used up the cushion and began raising prices. Even then, the difference meant only a few dollars more in monthly payments.

Furthermore, buyers weaned from American cars by Japanese quality and reliability were willing to pay a little extra for the imports, said Joseph Phillippi, an analyst with Shearson Lehman Hutton in New York.

As a result, while total car sales declined 10.7 percent in 1987, Japanese import sales fell only 9.7 percent while GM, Ford and Chrysler's domestic car sales together fell 16.7 percent.

Man Claims Spiritual Awakening After 'Dying' Twice

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A 71-year-old retired coal miner who revived after being twice declared dead says he returned to life with a profound spiritual renewal.

"I think that it's from a spiritual standpoint that (my life) has changed," Shirley Barnett, who is also a retired Baptist minister, said Wednesday.

"When I came to ... I had nothing but a heart full of love and joy for everybody. I was refreshed in the Holy Ghost."

Barnett, who revived while his funeral arrangements were being made, was declared dead on Jan. 21 after a cardiac arrest. Doctors said he showed no vital signs for about 45 minutes during one episode and about 30 minutes during a second.

The slender, smiling man spoke to reporters from his wheelchair during a news conference at HCA Park West Medical Centers. Two of his doctors, who were at a loss to explain his revival, also were on hand to answer questions.

"I feel fine. A little weak, naturally," he said.

"The first thing I remember was my daughter telling me I was at Park West," he said. "She put it pretty bluntly that I had died."

On Jan. 16, Barnett was admitted to Methodist Medical Center in nearby Oak Ridge after suffering chest pains.

A heart artery constricted five days later, and doctors and nurses spent 45 minutes trying to revive him with an external pacemaker and electric shock, but he showed no pulse, blood pressure or neurological responses, said Dr. Victor McLaughlin, a cardiologist at the Oak Ridge hospital.

Weak, sporadic heartbeats were detected thereafter but were considered "a dying heart pattern," the physician said.

"It is very unlikely that if you can bring someone back (from that status) you'll have any functioning brain at all," McLaughlin said.

McLaughlin said he told Barnett's family members that the man had died, and he was disconnected from his intravenous feeding tubes and heart monitor.

Barnett's daughters signed papers to remove the body to the morgue and began calling family and friends to tell them of his death and to make funeral arrangements.

A nurse who began cleaning out Barnett's hospital room closet heard him start to breathe, McLaughlin said, and he was wheeled to the coronary care unit.

There, personnel again found no pulse or blood pressure. Barnett was hooked up to a pacemaker and respirator, but family members told doctors he had a "living will" requesting that he not be kept alive artificially.

That period of apparent death lasted about 30 minutes, McLaughlin said.

Doctors disconnected Barnett from the life-sustaining equipment, but once unhooked, he began breathing on his own again.

"The gentleman gradually began waking up ... and talked with us. He continued to do well on his own," said

McLaughlin. "There is no detectable short- or long-term memory loss in this man."

"I've never had an experience like this before," he said. "There are obviously things that happen that we cannot explain."

Barnett later underwent heart bypass surgery.

Dr. Gene Aaby, another of Barnett's doctors, has said a possible reason for the revival could stem from Barnett's black-lung condition.

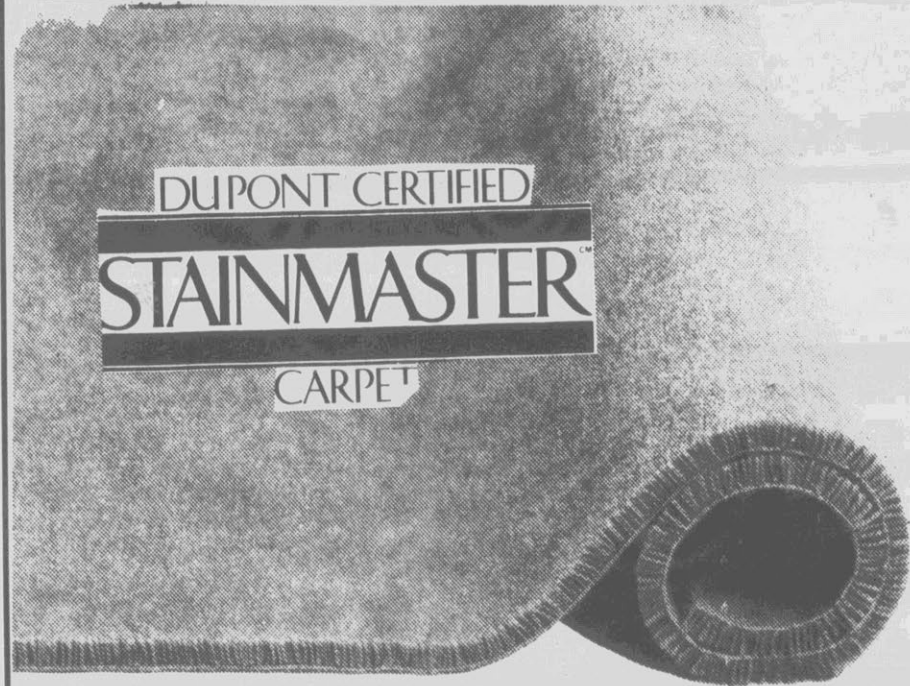

an occupational respiratory disease of miners.

"We came up with the theory that perhaps his brain had gotten used to less oxygen. We know various cells can adapt and function" in adverse situations, he said.

IRS Seeking Withheld Taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service is looking for ways to make 338,000 employers hand over $3.73 billion in delinquent employment taxes, most of which was withheld from workers' paychecks.

Because employment taxes account for 69 percent of all federal revenues, says William Wauben, IRS assistant commissioner for collections, "even a slight decline ... can have a devastating impact" on government operations.

The size of these delinquent taxes has grown 49 percent from $2.5 billion in 1982, Wauben said at a news conference Wednesday. This rise, which coincided with a steady growth in the value of business payrolls and increases in Social Security taxes on workers and their employers, is especially notable in the Southwest, where the economy has suffered from declining oil prices.

Repairmanese Is Toughest Language One Must Learn

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

We had a malfunction recently in our alarm system and they sent a man to check it out. When I asked him what the problem was he said, "One of the little wires is sick."

Call it a gut feeling, but I felt he was talking down to me so I said, "Could you get a little more technical than that?"

He said, "We were getting a silent signal when your toggle switch was inadvertently moved to the program position, so I reset it and checked to see if there were any problem zones from the protective circuit due to winds the other night."

I said, "Does that mean the boo boo is gone and the sick wire will wear a fuzzy smile now?"

He nodded.

For years I've been trying to speak the language of Repairmanese, but the natives all sound like they have a mouth full of Novocain. Besides, there are 56 known dialects to the language. There's electrical, plumbing, refrigeration, termite control, roofing and siding, painting, and washer repair to name a few. You haven't lived until you've tried to speak washer repair.

All I wanted to know were a few well-placed phrases to repeat to my husband that would justify a bill for $67.33. That's all I needed to know. By the time the washer repairman got finished with a 10-minute explanation, the only words I recognized were "pump" and "boxer shorts."

And by the time I translated it to my husband, he said, "I don't understand why the pump was wearing my underwear."

When we were building the house, it was like visiting the Tower of Babel. Everyone was speaking his own language at the same time. I remember saying something to the electrician about splicing a lot of wires together so two switches could have their hearts beat as one and they laughed for a week.

I haven't felt so intimidated since watching Louis Rukeyer one night when he told a stock market joke and everyone in the room laughed and I did too, but I didn't know why. I think I even said, "And I thought Carl Sagan was funny."

As the alarm system repairman prepared to leave, I said, "I understand why you weren't too technical. My job is the same way. I'm a writer and if I told you my creative level was stagnating and that cadences and insights were eluding me, you wouldn't know what I was talking about either."

He said, "It means you don't have an idea for a column."

The man is obviously bilingual.

Penny Proves It:

Independence Is Possible For Retarded

EDITOR'S NOTE — Penny Roderick was born retarded in 1946. Self-fulfillment was an idea she might never have grasped. She does today, thanks to the far-sighted people who helped her awaken something within herself buried deeply.

By NANCY SHULINS
AP Newsfeatures Writer
BATH, Maine (AP) — Penny Roderick was 18 when she lost her mother to cancer. Mildred Roderick was just 39.

"Please, God," Penny prayed every Sunday as her own 39th year drew to an end. "Just let me live to be 40."

On New Year's Eve 1986, Penny Roderick turned 40. For the birthday she thought would never come she got a string of beads, some new coloring books, and a rush of determination.

"The day I turned 40, I just said, 'That's it. I am going to become my own person.'"

To do that she needed a judge's permission. That meant opposing "Aunt Hedy," the conscientious and well-meaning guardian who for 11 years had managed her money and cooked her meals, shampooed her hair and picked out her clothes.

Hedwidge Rheame, whose soft voice still carries traces of the French accent she brought with her from Canada in 1939, had promised Warren Roderick during her church work that "the Lord would provide" for his retarded daughter.

Born with cerebral palsy, Penny was diagnosed mentally retarded and that's how she was raised, the only child of loving, protective parents. At school, she was placed with the other slow learners, in the "ungraded" class in the basement.

At some point she stopped going, but not before she had learned to read and to question, two things she never stopped doing. Later, that hunger for knowledge would get Penny noticed by the caseworkers who would help point the way to a new life.

But in 1967, the year her father died of a heart attack, Penny's prospects were limited. A letter from the school superintendent was all it took to strip away her legal rights.

When it came time to appoint a guardian, "I was obligated," says Miss Rheame, who'd served as godmother four years before when, at her urging, Penny was baptized.

She sent Penny to live with relatives and foster families for a time, but by 1975, "I didn't know where to turn," Miss Rheame says. "She just had bad luck. Within a few years, people would die. After the fourth or fifth place, I decided to try it myself."

For the next 11 years, Penny lived by her guardian's rules. But it wasn't Aunt Hedy who helped pick out the striped dress and navy blazer Penny wore to the Sagadahoc County Court-house last summer.

On July 14, the day she calls "my real birthday," Penny got the gift of a lifetime: A probate court judge gave her a month's freedom — 30 days to prove she could finally make her own choices.

"Special people — that's the term I like to use for mentally retarded — should have more rights for themselves," Penny says.

"They should be treated more like equals. They should be taught to do everyday things, like how to shop and do laundry. They should not be held back just because they're retarded."

Today, Penny lives alone in one of two independent-living apartments managed by the Elmhurst Association for Retarded Citizens. Hers is the one that smells perpetually of PineSol and Mr. Clean. "My friends always tease me. They say, 'Penny, you cleaning AGAIN?'"

For now, a court-appointed conservator controls the $20,000 that Aunt Hedy's careful investments have earned Penny. Most of it is tied up, says conservator David King, a Bath lawyer who is "eagerly looking forward to the day I can say: Here's your money."

Meanwhile, she lives on her $385 monthly Social Security check and $100 a month she earns cleaning under an Elmhurst training program.

But her life is her own. And in the six months since the judge officially granted the petition ending her guardianship, Penny has taken to homemaking with a vengeance.

She does her own laundry, shops for groceries, and cooks increasingly elaborate meals. Sometimes she shares them with her boyfriend David Johnson, who lives downstairs.

On a tour of the nondescript one-bedroom apartment, she points out her touches: the fruit bowl on the table, the spider plants on the sill. Her prized collection of Lawrence Welk records. And the new coloring books that are "more of an adult nature." She lays claim to each piece of furniture with a proprietary pat as she passes.

Shopping lists and menus papering the refrigerator attest to her progress from her first tentative sandwiches to burgers and frozen fish sticks, stuffed shells and chicken a la king.

"I love to do laundry and grocery shopping," Penny says. "I love paying bills. I love to cook! I've made hamburgers and meatloaf. Also blueberry muffins, which was exciting. And pudding! Did I mention pudding?"

"I think this has been a very good year for me. My life has changed so much. I'm like a big kid in a grocery store."

To Elmhurst's 35 other retarded clients, she's also a symbol. They watch her dash purposefully to market or laundry, a tall, slender

Beyond the clapboard houses, iron lampposts and brick warehouses of this sturdy old shipbuilding city, she underscores changing views toward the handicapped.

"I think there are probably some people who don't believe in all this independence," says Alice Clark, an old friend of Penny's whose daughter is retarded.

"I've thought about it both ways, but so far I can see only good. I've never seen her so happy. If she can have a little more freedom at this stage of her life, she certainly deserves the chance."

People with IQs lower than Penny's can learn to "lead relatively normal lives, be self-supporting and blend into the community," according to Dorin Zohner, a psychologist who tested her.

In November, Penny voted for the first time. "I exercised my human rights," she says, her shoulders squaring at the memory.

Her caseworker, Jean Lockhart, thinks Penny "hasn't even scratched the surface yet." Soon, Jean plans to help get her started as a hospital volunteer.

Junior Miss Program Will Be Held Saturday

Pitt County Junior Miss, 1988-89 will be crowned Saturday night. The annual Pitt County Junior Miss Scholarship will be held at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in Wright Auditorium on the East Carolina University campus.

The theme of this year's program will be "A Magical Journey." Phillip Evancho will be the master of ceremonies and Carol-Ann Tucker will provide special entertainment.

Other entertainers will be Laura Newton, Pitt County Junior Miss, 1987-88; Julie Padgett, North Carolina Junior Miss, 1988; Missy Byzek, Cary Junior Miss, 1988; Marcia Sherrod, Tarboro Junior Miss, 1988; Nechol Boone, Lenoir County Junior Miss, 1988; Malana Harris, Christie Evans and the "87 Has-beens."

According to Marlene Farrior, director of the local program, $6,800 worth of scholarships will be given and more than $8,000 other prizes will be awarded.

The event is sponsored by the Farmville Junior Woman's Club.

Judges are approved Junior Miss judges from throughout North Carolina. They will be served breakfast Saturday by the Winterville Junior Woman's Club and lunch by the Greenville Junior Woman's Club.

Mrs. Farrior said contestants have been rehearsing since January. "It promises to be a great program," she said. "The contestants have worked very hard to perfect their routines and their individual talent numbers. They are always the stars of the show. But with other talents like Philip Evancho and Carol-Ann Tucker participating, there is no doubt you'll be highly entertained."

Ms. Tucker is a Greenville resident, the director of the Regional Training Center at East Carolina University. Evancho is a music instructor at Craven Community College and a former visiting artist at Pitt Community College.

Laura Newton of Farmville, last year's Pitt County Junior Miss, will give her farewell speech.

COURTESY TO WOMEN

BOSTON (AP) — Women travelers are getting special attention in more and more American hotels.

Courtesy items available at some hotels include padded hangers, shoe trees, sewing kits, specialty soaps and shampoos, full-length mirrors and retractable clotheslines.

Many hotels concerned with women's safety try to give them rooms near elevators, says a spokesman for Sheraton.

Love Bridges The Age Gap 47-Years-Younger Wife Says

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I hope you remember me. My name is Mary Jane McCartney and my husband is Jack. I wrote to you about three years ago when you had a discussion in your column about big age differences between husbands and wives.

When I married Jack 12 years ago, I was 14 and he was 61. My mother nearly had a fit and tried to stop it, but we were very much in love and Jack got a lawyer. It cost him more than $2,000 in legal fees, but he said it was worth every penny.

Abby, when I wrote to you three years ago, I was expecting our first baby. He's now 2 1/2 years old and his name is Andrew Jackson. (We call him Andy.)

Well, I have some more good news for you. I just had a baby girl! We named her Sarah Elizabeth. (Jack calls her Shorty.)

Jack has three sons from a previous marriage and he always wanted a little girl. Now he has one, and he's crazy about her.

So go ahead and tell folks to forget about age — when you're in love, nothing else matters. I am 26 and Jack is 73, and I think we're the happiest married couple alive. — MARY JANE IN DENISON, TEXAS

DEAR MARY JANE: Congratulations. May you have many more years of happiness. And if there's any more "good news," let me know.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 31-year-old widow. My husband was killed in an accident six months ago, and I was left with two children, 7 and 3.

The children and I have gone through many nights of pain and grief, but we realize that life must go on, and so must we. Together we went through counseling and support group meetings.

Recently, I decided that it was time to start dating. It's OK with the children; however, when I mentioned it to my in-laws, they were totally opposed to the idea. They say it is much too soon — I should have more respect for my husband's memory.

Abby, I loved my husband very much. We had a good marriage and I feel that he would want me to be happy. But is it too soon? What is the accepted mourning period in this day and age? I don't want to hurt my in-laws, but don't my feelings count at all? — LIFE MUST GO ON

DEAR LIFE: I agree, life must go on, but grief is so very personal that no one can presume to make rules that will apply to everyone following the death of a beloved spouse.

A widow (or widower) may begin dating whenever she (or he) feels like it. Remember, your in-laws have lost a beloved son, and while their feelings should be considered, the decision should be yours. Good luck and may God bless you and the children.

DEAR ABBY: You have had many letters about how writing to a serviceman brought a happy ending. Here's mine: When I was in the fourth grade, during World War I, our English teacher asked the class to write letters to soldiers who were in the hospital during the flu epidemic.

The soldier who received my letter answered it, saying he would like to hear from me again, so I wrote to him again. In his next letter, he asked for my phone number and said he would call me when he was released from the hospital. Well, he called. He sounded so nice, my mother, who was a young widow, told me I could invite him to dinner! (He was stationed at a camp not too far from where we lived.)

When he came for dinner, he brought me a present, but he never took his eyes off my mother. After that, he spent all his free time with us, and ended up marrying my mother.

So you see, fairy tales do come true. I am now 81 years old and one of your faithful readers. — A NATIVE FLORIDIAN

DEAR FLORIDIAN: Thank you, my friend, for a lovely tale.

What teen-agers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." # West Craven Stuns Conley

By TOM MORRIS

Reflector Sports Writer

VANCEBORO — After losing to D.H. Conley in two close ball games during the regular season, West Craven found that the third time was the charm.

The Eagles handed the top-seeded Vikings a 59-43 loss in the second-round of the Coastal Conference basketball tournament.

The Eagles took control of a sloppy game in the final quarter, outscoring the Vikings 21-3 over the final eight minutes to capture the win which will send them into the finals Friday against the winner of Thursday's game between North Lenoir and Havelock.

The Eagles lost to the Vikings by a total of 12 points in their two regular season games but turned the tables this time by coming through in the end, according to coach Lorenzo Jones.

"The difference was we made the plays when we had to," he said. "Each (other) time, it was something different. Tonight, we held on."

And it was the final period that really doomed the Vikings.

Conley held a 40-38 edge after three quarters of play but West Craven quickly tied the game up on a basket inside by William Brown. The Eagles then went ahead when Steve Harris came up with a steal and scored on a breakaway layup for a 42-40 lead with 7:25 remaining.

Conley came back and worked the ball inside to Bronswell Patrick but his shot was blocked by Keith Roundtree. Willie Manley drew a foul and hit a free throw at the other end for a 43-40 lead.

Bershaun Thompson missed on Conley's next trip down the floor, and as was typical of the Vikings all night, West Craven rebounded and allowed them only one shot per possession.

"That's the thing that we talked about at halftime," Conley coach Walter Claybrook said. "We got one shot and stood around and watched."

"I don't know whether we were flat or what. I may be at fault. We didn't practice too hard this week."

Brown put the Eagles ahead 45-40 on a follow shot with 6:31 remaining. Manley then came up with another steal and raced down court for a layup and a 47-40 West Craven lead with 5:35 to go and the run was on.

The Eagles rolled up 13 unanswered points before Thompson hit a 3-pointer with 1:30 remaining to make it 53-43, but that was as close as the Vikings would get.

"What happened in the fourth quarter, we felt it was happening all game," Claybrook said. "We were flat."

Conley shot poorly in the game, hitting on only 15 of 52 field goal attempts from the outside for a 28.9 percentage.

Still Conley led most of the first three quarters, going ahead 19-12 in the first quarter on the strength of two 3-point goals by Sherwood Wilder and one more by James Smith, but it was really all downhill from there.

"We wanted to pressure more than we did," Jones said. "Our quickness helped in the 1-3-1 zone. Willie (Manley) stepped out a little further and got some good steals (four). We went to the 1-3-1 because they were killing us with the 3-pointer outside. Normally we're a 2-3 team."

And when the outside game deserted the Vikings, things started to go bad. West Craven rallied to tie the game at 29-29 by halftime as Manley had seven points in the second quarter.

Conley improved its play in the third quarter to regain the lead at 40-38 but it was all West Craven from there on out.

Even with the loss, Conley, 17-7.

still begins sectional play next week. The tournament had no real bearing for the Vikings. Last year, Conley lost in the finals of the tournament and then went on to win the state title.

"This tournament is what you make of it," he said. "There wasn't any pressure on us, (but) you don't want to play like this late in the season."

Manley led West Craven, 10-14, with 18 points, while Steve Harris added 13 and Delton Harris had 11.

Jonathan Bonner led Conley with 12.

In the girls' game, Havelock downed West Carteret, 58-45, and will meet the winner of tonight's West Craven-Washington game for the championship on Friday.

North Pitt Shocks Jaguars

SNOW HILL — North Pitt's Randy House scored the final six points of the ball game to help the Panthers upset top-seeded Farmville, 57-52, in the semi-finals of the Eastern Plains 2-A conference basketball tournament Wednesday.

North Pitt took the lead for good on a jumper by Randy House to make it 53-52 with about two and half minutes to go.

Then, in the final two minutes, House went 4-4 from the free throw line, both in one and one situations, to help the Panthers gain the win.

House's final two free throws came with eight seconds to go and sealed the win.

North Pitt hit seven of 10 free throws in the fourth quarter while the Jaguars failed to go to the charity stripe over the final eight minutes.

"I thought we had outstanding play off the bench," said North Pitt coach Cobby Deans. "I felt the turning point of the game was our ability to play tough man to man defense in the fourth quarter. The important thing was we didn't get blown out in the beginning and we made the crucial foul shots at the end."

The win keeps the season alive for the Panthers, who entered the tournament needing to win the event in order to qualify for the sectional tournament.

Farmville, which falls to 19-4, entered the tournament following a 12-0 regular season mark in the EPC. The Panthers improve to 9-15 and advance to play the winner of Thursday's Ayden-Grifton/Greene Central game for the championship on Friday at Farmville Central.

Farmville led 31-26 at the half before the Panthers rallied to tie it at the end of three quarters of play at 43-43 by outscoring Farmville 17-12 during the period.

In the girls' game, North Pitt took control in the second quarter and rolled over South Lenoir, 63-58, to (See NORTH, B-2)

Pirates Sweep Doubleheader

By WOODY PEELE

Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina's Pirates slipped past St. Augustine's College, 4-3, in the opening game with a run in the bottom of the seventh inning.

Then, the Pirates stormed past the Falcons in the nightcap, taking a 20-4 decision to raise their record to 4-2 on the early season.

But the Pirates suffered a serious loss in the game. Shortstop/second baseman Mike Andrews collided with freshman rightfielder Steve Godin in the fourth inning of the second game and suffered a double break of his leg. He broke both the tibia and the fibula and will miss the entire season.

"That is going to hurt us both offensively and defensively," Coach Gary Overton said. "He was a fine hitter and that takes a big bat out of the lineup."

Andrews had had problems with his fielding in the opening four games, committing seven errors, but he had switched to second base for the St. Augustine's series and had performed flawlessly. "I thought we had a good double-play combination out there with him at second and Tommy Boswell at short," Overton said. Freshman Kevin Riggs will replace Adams at second base.

The Pirates struggled through the first game, getting only two hits — one of them a fluke — off starting pitcher Andrew Perkins. But he tired and was relieved after the fifth inning and the Pirates rallied in the sixth and seventh to overcome a 3-1 deficit and win the game.

"Perkins did a great job in the first game for them," Overton said. "He pitched well against us last year and we still didn't find a way to hit him today. But when he came out, they were not the same. Then, in the second game, we just swung the bats well."

The Pirates got only five hits in the opening game, but collected 18 in the second, including six doubles.

"I've most pleased by the way we played defense today," Overton said. The Pirates committed only one error in each game and pulled off three double plays.

"Our pitching was fine today too. Gary Smith did a good job in relief in the first game and I planned to use a lot of people in the second game," Overton said. ECU used two pitchers in the first game and five in the second.

St. Augustine's scored its first run in the opening inning of the first game. With two outs, Joe Taylor double to right center and scored on a hit by James Reaves.

ECU quickly tied it up in the bottom of the inning. John Thomas led off with a walk and stole second. He scored on a hit by Andrews.

The Falcons pushed over two in the fourth to take a 3-1 lead. Taylor opened with a solo homer to right for a 2-1 lead. Reaves then reached on an error and was sacrificed to second. He scored on Maurice Butler's single to left.

After Perkins left the game, the Pirates rallied to tie it up in the sixth. John Adams reached on a fielder's choice that left one out and Godin drew a walk. Boswell also walked, loading the bases. David Ritchie singled in Adams and Thomas hit a sacrifice fly to score Godin.

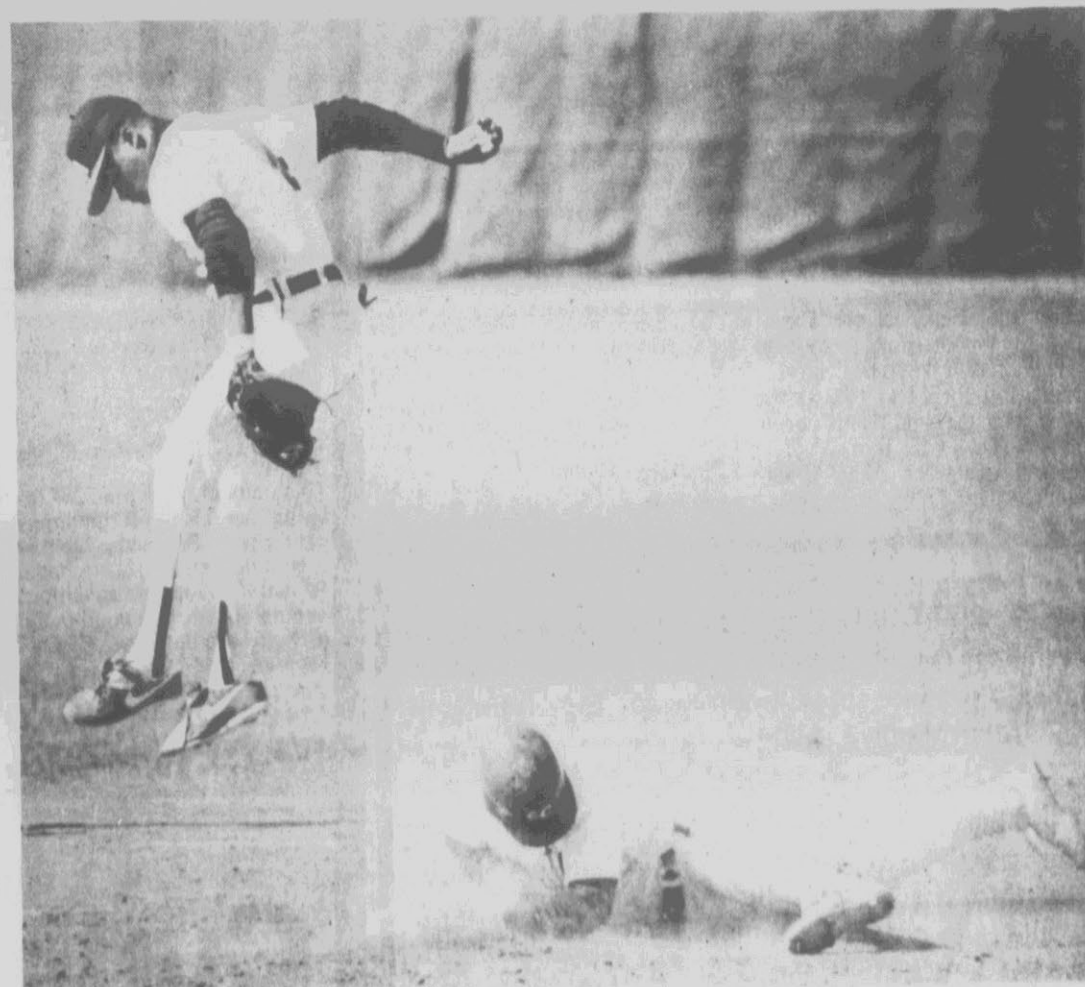

Then, in the seventh, the Pirates got the winning run. With one out, Calvin Brown walked and Chris Caudle singled to center. Both moved up on a wild pitch and Adams was intentionally walked. But Godin followed with a single to center, driving in Brown with the game-winner.

Andrews had two hits to lead ECU in the game, while Taylor had two for the Falcons.

St. Augustine's again struck for the lead in the first inning of the second game, scoring twice. Travis Smith singled and Jerry Waters got a hit.

Brewington Named To NCCU Hall

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer
 Rose high basketball coach Jim Brewington said some of the best lessons he learned about life came during his days at North Carolina Central University.
 Brewington said he has tried to impart those teachings on those he has come in contact with during his 26 years in prep coaching. And that is what makes his induction into the North Carolina Central University Athletic Hall of Fame that much more satisfying.

 "I had a great coach there in Herman Reddick," Brewington said. "He always taught us to be outstanding gentlemen. He always tough us how to dress and carry on around people. He was really instrumental in getting me on the right track."

Brewington will be formally inducted into the NCCU Hall of Fame at a ceremony on campus April 16.

Brewington went to NCCU following an outstanding prep career at C.M. Eppes High school where he was All-State in both football and basketball during his senior year.

Brewington went on to earn All-CIAA honors three years in a row as a defensive tackle for the Eagles, including All-America notice as a sophomore.

Following his collegiate career, he was drafted by the Green Bay Packers and played there during the 1961 season. He joined the Oakland Raiders of the old American Football League and played there for the 1962 season.

Injuries brought an end to his career after that and Brewington returned to Greenville where he helped out at his alma-mater as an assistant football coach.

In 1963, Brewington left Greenville and moved to Bowling Green, Virginia, where he was the head football and basketball coach at Union High School.

After a short stint at Union, he moved to Brentwood, New York, where he coached football, basketball and lacrosse for Brentwood High school. Brewington stayed there until 1968 and then returned to Greenville in 1968 to join the athletic staff at Rose.

Brewington was an assistant football coach at Rose and was the head coach of the boys' basketball team at Eppes Junior High. In 1977, he assumed the duties of head basketball coach.

Brewington said nomination to the NCCU Hall of Fame was a welcome thank-you for his commitment to athletics and coaching.

"I was overwhelmed because I felt that it was due somewhere down the line," he said. "I had played well there and had been a good leader there."

"When I think about it, I devoted all my time to help other kids. I was fortunate for having several kids I coached to go on and play pro ball. I felt like I had really paid my dues in helping kids through out the area. I can go back now and reminisce."

During his career at Rose alone, Brewington has had a number of players go on to play professionally starting with Al Hunter, who starred collegiately at Notre Dame before going on to the Seattle Seahawks of the National Football League.

Others include Doug Paschal, who played at North Carolina and then with the Minnesota Vikings; his son Mike Brewington, who went to East Carolina and then played with the Boston Breakers and the Memphis Showboats of the USFL; Harold Randolph, a former East Carolina standout who played for the Orlando Renegades of the USFL and William Frizell, who went on to NCCU and now plays for the Philadelphia Eagles.

"These are the things that make you glad you could be a coach," Brewington said.

"I tell all the kids, sports is one of the greatest things. It paid my way through school. It supported my family for years and still does. It is not something that should be taken lightly."

"I chose to stay here because I felt the kids here needed me. I had a good opportunity in New York to stay, but when the job came open in Greenville, I accepted it."

Chocowinity Girls Win; Gain Tournament Finals

BATH — Chocowinity's girls, champions of the regular season in the Tobacco Belt Conference, rolled to a 42-16 victory over North Edgecombe in the semifinals of the league's basketball tournament Wednesday night.

North Edgecombe's boys, unbeaten in regular season league play, also advanced, ousting Bear Grass, 72-56.

Bear Grass fell behind early, 17-11, but struggled back after that to have a chance. The Bears outthrew the Warriors, 17-14, in the second quarter and trailed only 31-28 at the half.

In the third period, Bear Grass took charge, outscoring North Edgecombe, 18-11. That gave the Bears a 46-42 lead to take into the final period. But in that, North Edgecombe caught fire and ripped the nets for 30 points while holding Bear Grass to just 10.

Derrick Belcher led the Warriors with 27 while Rodney Conyers added 12 and Larry Kings had 10. Almer Riddick had 16 and Steve Cowan had 13 for Bear Grass while Sean Stalls had 10.

Clemson Upsets Blue Devils; Carolina Clinches ACC Title

By The Associated Press
A month ago, ninth-ranked Duke thrashed Clemson 101-63 in Durham, but what a difference a month can make.

"Well, the team that played the best won," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said Wednesday after the Tigers broke a seven-game losing streak and defeated his Blue Devils 79-77. "That's a simple way of saying it. They outplayed us, which surprised me because we had two good days of practice."

"We were not very intelligent to-night," he said. "They got all the loose balls. They made it happen."
In other Atlantic Coast Conference games, North Carolina clinched the top seed in the league tournament by defeating Georgia Tech 97-80 and Virginia defeated Wake Forest 69-67 in overtime.

"We had something to prove to ourselves," Clemson guard Grayson Marshall said. "We had to prove that we could win. We really had to dig deep to do it."

"It's the first time we've beaten Duke since I've been here, and it feels good."

Marshall was not feeling good before the game or after because of the flu and has not practiced since Sunday.

"I feel terrible, like I'm about to die," he said. "But I knew we had a chance to win, and I wanted to be a part of it."

Marshall hit a short jumper with 1:11 left, and Tim Kincaid made four free throws in the final minute as Clemson beat the Blue Devils.

With the score tied at 72 with 1:33 left, Marshall drove the lane and made a 13-footer to give Clemson its first lead since midway through the opening half.

Clemson, which is last in the ACC, is now 13-13 and 3-10 in the league. Duke, 20-6 and 8-5, is tied for second in the league standings behind North Carolina.

Kincaid finished with 16 points for Clemson, which shot 57.1 percent to 39.7 percent for Duke. Jerry Pryor and Elden Campbell each had 12 points.

Duke was led by Quin Snyder with 20 points, while Danny Ferry had 18. J.R. Reid said he didn't want to share the top spot in the Atlantic Coast Conference with any other team, and Wednesday night he made sure sixth-ranked North Carolina wouldn't have to.

Reid scored nine of his 24 points in a decisive 23-4 second-half run that carried the Tar Heels to a 97-80 victory over No. 13 Georgia Tech.

"We knew we had clinched a tie, but we wanted to win it outright," Reid said. "I feel it's more important than the ACC tournament because you have to go through 14 games."

The five-minute run stretched a six-point lead to 90-65 when Reid capped it on a basket with 4:10 left in the game.

The victory gave Carolina, 22-4 overall and 11-2 in the conference, the top seed in the ACC tournament, marking the 20th time the Tar Heels have either won or shared the top spot in the 35-year history of the conference.

North Carolina Coach Dean Smith said he was pleased with the performance.

"We were aggressive," he said. "We got good play from a number of people, and perhaps this was the best game we played all season."

"I'm getting more confident with our team," Smith said. "I don't know if we can play any better."

The setback snapped a seven-game winning streak for Georgia Tech, 21-7 and 8-5, which is now tied for second in the league.

"I was afraid the bubble was going to burst, and it certainly did," Tech Coach Bobby Cremins said. "North Carolina's a great team. They came out and just beat us."

Scott Williams added 21 points for North Carolina, 17 in the first half. Duane Ferrell led Georgia Tech with 23 points and Dennis Scott added 21.

As Virginia prepares for the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament, the one thing Cavalier coach Terry Holland wanted to see was a victory.

"I'm real excited about the win," Holland said after Virginia defeated Wake Forest 69-67 in overtime. "We had lost seven in a row and getting a win like this is certainly important at this time of the year."

Hornets Formally Join The NBA

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The Charlotte Hornets formally became a member of the NBA Wednesday, one day later than scheduled, with the final payment of the team's $32.5 million fee for its expansion franchise. "I'm glad it's done," majority owner George Shinn said Tuesday. "Even though we had been awarded the franchise, we could have lost it until this stage had we not met all the league's requirements." Shinn, the Hornets' managing general partner, owns 51 percent of the team. General partner Cy Bahakel owns 35 percent and limited partners Rick Hendrick and Felix Sabates own 7 percent each. "We went through the weekend, at nights and all day today (Tuesday) getting all the details handled," said team attorney Spencer Stolpen. "There were just so many details that we couldn't complete everything until late today, so we're wiring the money to New York (to the NBA office) Wednesday morning." The Hornets made four payments: $100,000 at the time of application; $3.15 million when the franchise was awarded last April; $13 million and two cents last December; and Wednesday's final payment of $13.25 million and two cents. Why the two cents in two payments?

Pitt Falls To Seton Hall

By The Associated Press Pittsburgh wants nothing to do with these Pirates. Seton Hall is 2-0 against No. 7 Pittsburgh and 6-7 against the rest of the Big East. The Pirates are 2-0 against the Panthers, 18-10 against the rest of the country. Seton Hall completed a regular-season sweep of Pittsburgh on Wednesday night with a 83-79 victory over the Panthers. "I can't explain what happened," said Pittsburgh center Charles Smith, who scored 25 points. "We just weren't the Pitt team we have been in the past." "We match up with Pitt pretty well," said Seton Hall forward Mark Bryant, who had 23 points and 13 rebounds. "We're playing some great ball. We never lost our composure. We deserve it. We've lost so many games by one or two points."

The Pirates, who trailed by eight points with four minutes left, have lost four games by one or two points this season.

"We do match up fairly well against them, better than we do against some other teams," Seton Hall Coach P.J. Carlesimo said. "We have two big men (Bryant and Ramon Ramos) who are physical like Smith and Jerome Lane. Plus they've had only game to prepare for us each time we've played them."

Pitt beat Georgetown two days before its first game with Seton Hall and beat Boston College on Monday.

In other Top Twenty games, No. 1 Temple beat St. Joseph's 75-62, No. 6 North Carolina beat No. 13 Georgia Tech 97-80, Clemson upset No. 9 Duke 79-77, No. 10 Michigan beat Northwestern 105-67 and Florida beat No. 19 Vanderbilt 81-65.

Seton Hall led by 15 points six minutes into the second half but Pittsburgh took a 63-57 lead midway through the half. Demetresus Gore scored 12 points in that spurt.

Seton Hall outscored the Panthers 16-4 in the game's last 3:35. The Pirates went ahead to stay with 57 seconds left when Ramos made a hook shot and converted the free throw after he was fouled by Bobby Martin.

On Pitt's next possession, Nate Bailey's apparent layup was nullified by a traveling call and the Pirates made five of six free throws down the stretch.

Ramos had 19 points and eight rebounds and John Morton had 16 points for Seton Hall.

No. 1 Temple 75, St. Joseph's 62 Freshman Mark Macon scored a season-high 35 points as Temple finished the regular season 26-1 and 18-0 in the Atlantic 10.

The game was marred by several fights, and at one point both coaches were shouting at each other on the sidelines.

Temple trailed 10-4 and then scored 19 consecutive points. Ivan Brown and Henry Smith scored 15 points each for St. Joseph's, 14-13 and 9-9.

No. 8 Kentucky 80, Georgia 72 Ed Davender scored 20 points and had eight assists as Kentucky clinched a share of the Southeastern Conference title.

Kentucky, 21-5 and 12-5, has won or shared the regular-season title 37 times.

Toney Mack scored 21 points for Georgia, 15-14 and 7-10, which lost its eighth consecutive road game.

Clemson...

"At the end of each period, we let them get back in the game," Holland said. "I told the guys, that's all right, that's okay, we needed the practice and we needed the work on these kinds of situations."

Mel Kennedy scored 29 points, including a three-point play in the second overtime.

Wake Forest had the ball with eight seconds left in the second overtime, but Antonio Johnson missed a 3-point jump shot, and Steve Ray could not convert the follow.

"I thought we played extremely hard, great in the second half," said Wake Forest coach Bob Staak. "It was a great game for the fans, one you're disappointed that either team has to lose. We're disappointed and we'll recover and get ready for the next one and the tournament."

Another three came over in the third to make it 11-2. Thomas doubled and moved to third on an error on the relay. McGraw singled him home and took second on a passed ball. Brown walked and moved up on a wild pitch. Godin then singled both runners' home.

St. Augustine's came up with two more in the top of the fourth. Reaves opened with a homer to right to account for the first. Sweeting then double to right and moved to third on an infield out. He scored when Wayne Phillips' pop up to short right was taken by Andrews, who then collided with Godin and suffered the broken leg.

ECU came back with four in the fourth. Boswell reached on a fielder's choice and took second on a passed ball. He scored on Thomas' single. Riggs singled in Thomas and McGraw walked. Brown double to right center, scoring both runners.

Michael Misses Beat As U2 Tops Grammys

By LARRY McSHANE
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Irish rockers U2 led the new wave and a Brill Building songwriting team represented the old guard with two awards each at a surprising 30th Annual Grammy Awards, where Michael Jackson was shut out and Paul Simon won again for "Graceland."

"We don't see this as a peak for U2," lead singer Bono said Wednesday night after the socially conscious band copped its awards for "The Joshua Tree," its 12-million selling album. "It's just a beginning."

Simon, who won album of the year in 1987 for his South African project "Graceland," surprisingly captured record of the year honors in 1988 for the title cut, which featured backing vocals by the Everly Brothers.

But Little Richard stole the show at Radio City Music Hall by announcing, not once but three times, that he had captured the Grammy for best new artist. Richard, in a gold suit and sunglasses, finally broke down and declared one-time "Soul Train" dancer Jody Watley the winner.

"I have never received nothing — y'all never gave me no Grammys, and I've been singing for years," the manic voice of "Tutti-Frutti" and "Lucille" proclaimed. "I am the architect of rock 'n' roll!"

Veteran songwriting team Barry Mann and Cynthia Weil, joined by co-writer James Horner, won song of the year and best song written for a motion picture or television with their syrupy ballad "Somewhere Out There," a tune performed by two mice in the animated movie "An American Tail."

The pair is the last remaining songwriting team from the Brill Building, the Manhattan offices where dozens of classic '60s songs were written.

"I don't think there can be a best song," Weil told reporters. "Every song is unique. I love the U2 song ('I Still Haven't Found What I'm Looking For'), but it's apples and oranges."

After U2 won album of the year for

"Joshua," guitarist The Edge gave a rambling acceptance speech in which he thanked Bishop Desmond Tutu, Martin Luther King Jr., James T. Kirk, PeeWee Herman, Jimi Hendrix, Dr. Ruth Westheimer "and sumo wrestlers around the world."

The band sat sipping beer in the audience during the three-hour show, which featured an electrifying live performance by Jackson. Jackson, who captured eight Grammys for his "Thriller" album in 1984, received no awards for its follow-up, "Bad," despite four nominations.

The Los Angeles-based band Los Lobos, whose version of "La Bamba" was a bigger hit than the original adaptation of the Mexican folk tune by the late Ritchie Valens, came away with nothing despite four nominations.

And folk singer Suzanne Vega, with three nominations for her poignant song "Luka" about a battered child, also went home empty-handed.

"I was hoping it would win, but I was prepared for anything to happen," said Vega, a Greenwich Village favorite. "I'm a little disappointed, I guess."

Bruce Springsteen won his second Grammy, best rock vocal performance, for his "Tunnel of Love" album but was not around to accept the award. The same was true of Simon and of Sting, who topped Jackson and Springsteen for best pop vocal performance on his "Bring on the Night" LP.

Aretha Franklin, the Grammy-winningest woman of all time, added two more to her 12 with best female R&B performance and best R&B performance by a duo or group — her "I Knew You Were Waiting (For Me)" duet with George Michael.

One of Aretha's proteges, Whitney Houston, took best female pop vocalist for her effervescent single "I Wanna Dance With Somebody" from her "Whitney" album. Narada Michael Walden won the producer's Grammy for his work on Houston's second album.

"The world wants new faces in a way," said Walden, who beat the Michael Jackson-Quincy Jones team. "Quincy's won so many awards anyway, this is good. And he told me in private that he voted for me."

Jackson's "Bad" won just a single award: best engineered non-classical album, with Bruce Swedien and Humberto Gatica receiving the Grammys.

The Grammys' two all-time leaders added to their impressive totals. Sir Georg Solti, conductor of the Chicago Symphony, won his 26th Grammy, for his recording of Beethoven's 9th Symphony.

And Pianist Vladimir Horowitz, who had 20 Grammys entering the ceremonies, won two for best classical instrumental performance and best classical album for "Horowitz in Moscow." He also received the President's Special Merit Award from the National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences, which sponsors the Grammys.

"I am so very happy the classical music still has an appreciation," the fiery pianist told the crowd as he accepted the special award. After he won the best album award, he simply smiled and carried it away, saying nothing.

Soprano Kathleen Battle, who starred on four of the five operas nominated for Grammys, ended up winning two — for the Vienna Philharmonic recording of Richard Strauss' "Ariadne auf Naxos" and for her solo album, "Salzburg Recital."

Ladysmith Black Mambazo, the South African vocal group featured on the "Graceland" album, won a Grammy for best traditional folk recording for "Shaka Zulu." Simon produced it.

"First of all I thank God — and then Paul Simon," said Joseph Shabalala, lead singer of the 10-man group.

Frank Zappa's "Jazz from Hell" beat his son, Dweezil, and Springsteen for best rock instrumental — Zappa's first-ever Grammy. "Trio" by Dolly Parton, Emmylou Harris and Linda Ronstadt won as best country vocal duo or group performance.

The show, televised by CBS, saluted recordings released between Oct. 1, 1986, and Sept. 30, 1987.

The winners were elected by ballots cast by academy members in seven chapters around the nation. The academy's 6,000 members include recording artists, songwriters, musicians, producers and technicians.

Little Richard Steals Show

NEW YORK (AP) — His flash and frenzy undiminished by time, Little Richard took over the Grammy Awards ceremony and was still in outrageous high spirits when he met reporters on the seventh floor of Radio City Music Hall.

Hitting one of those fabulous high notes from his rock repertoire, Little Richard laughed and said, "I'm going to scream like a white woman."

Little Richard wasn't there Wednesday night to win a Grammy, but to present one.

"And the best new artist is — me!" he announced. "I have never received nuthin' — y'all never gave me no Grammys, and I've been singing for years."

"I am the architect of rock 'n' roll," he shouted as his flustered copresenter, Buster Poindexter, looked on and the crowd rose in a standing ovation. "I am the originator!"

Little Richard repeated that he was the winner, but finally gave the Grammy to Jody Watley.

Backstage, he sang the praises of Michael Jackson's performance on the telecast.

"I cried, 'The Man in the Mirror.' I just love that," Little Richard said. "I felt that. My big toe just shot up in my boot."

Asked if he was surprised that Jackson didn't win any of the four Grammys for which he was nominated, Little Richard's face expressed horror. "I'm shocked. Stunned. I think a whole lot of people are. I've never seen anything like Michael in my life."

"He is a hard worker. He gives his all. He don't hold nothing back. He puts it all out there and you can pull it wherever you want to carry it."

Asked how long he'd been bitter at

never receiving a Grammy. Little Richard said, "I'm not bitter, but it would be nice to have one."

Born Richard Penniman on Dec. 5, 1932, Little Richard broke into rock — smashed might be a better word — in 1955 with "Tutti-Frutti," and followed up with "Long Tall Sally" and "Shippin' and Slidin'" in 1956 and "Good Golly, Miss Molly" in 1958.

He was the most outrageous of the early rockers with a 6-inch pompadour, pancake makeup, a pencil-thin mustache and an all-out attack on the piano.

At the height of his fame, during a tour of Australia in 1957, Little Richard got religion. According to one version he has told, he had a horrifying dream of the apocalypse during an airplane flight. Once safely on the ground, he threw his jewelry off the Sydney Harbor Bridge.

He came back to rock in 1964 with "Bama Lama Bama Loo," and more recently had an acting part in the film "Down and Out in Beverly Hills." Working with Bette Midler was fun, he said Wednesday. "The only thing that got me was the dog. He bit me."

In 1986, Little Richard announced he had converted to Judaism.

Little Richard's on-stage tirade started when he accused Poindexter (a.k.a. David Johansen) of stealing his upswept hairdo. Later, Little Richard admitted he had borrowed one his trademarks — that "whoop."

Ann-Margret Still Up High On List

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When Ann-Margret recently won a Golden Globe for her television performance in "The Two Mrs. Glenvilles," she experienced a warming wave of nostalgia.

"It was just 27 years ago that they (the Hollywood Foreign Press Association) gave me the first award I ever received — as the most promising newcomer of the year," she recalled. "It was in the same room (International Ballroom, Beverly Hilton), and I remember everything about it, including the dress I wore."

In a town where most promising newcomers come and go like the Santa Ana winds, Ann-Margret is a phenomenon. After a quarter-century she continues high on any producer's casting list for sexually charged roles. At 46 she remains athletically curved, the emerald eyes smoldering, the voice throaty and inviting.

She remains unchanged in other ways as well. The deep, full laugh erupts often, more in nervousness than mirth. She speaks in quiet, hesitant sentences, recalling the immigrant girl who seemed bewildered when Hollywood proclaimed her sexuality in such films as "Kitten With a Whip" and "The Pleasure Seekers."

Ann-Margret and Roger Smith, her husband-manager for 20 years, live in the hilltop house overlooking Benedict Canyon; it had been the honeymoon home of Lauren Bacall and Humphrey Bogart. The other day in the sunny living room where Bogie once held court, the actress reminisced about her Hollywood career and talked about two forthcoming films: "A Tiger's Tale," with C. Thomas Howell and Charles Durning; and "A New Life," with Alan Alda and Hal Linden.

In "A Tiger's Tale" she plays a character named Rose Butts. Howell plays Bubber Drumm. "It takes place in Texas, as you might guess," she said. "Bubber is one of my daughter's boyfriends, and Rose tries very hard to get away from him. But he is so dear and so adorable, and he really wants to see her. They go out a couple of times as friends."

"But he is so insistent, she realizes he really loves her. And she realizes she loves him. He's very sweet, and quite innocent."

In "A New Life" she and Alda play a couple who have been married 26 years. They have a 24-year-old daughter.

"In the very first scene we're in the divorce lawyer's office, and he's saying 'Why are you doing this?'"

"He's a workaholic," Ann-Margret said. "He loves her very much, but he works five days a week and plays golf with clients on Saturday and tennis on Sunday. The rest of the film concerns all the people he dates and all the people I date. There are some very odd characters out there."

PHENOMENAL — Ann-Margret is shown in a scene from "A New Life," which co-stars Alan Alda and Hal Linden. (AP Laserphoto)

She was born Ann-Margret Olsson in Valsjoberg, Sweden, in 1941, and accompanied her parents to the United States at the age of 5. Her talent developed early, and at 16, she appeared on Ted Mack's Amateur Hour on television. After a year at Northwestern University, she left to tour with other students who formed a music group called the Suttletones. After a few bookings, the group broke up and Ann-Margret looked for work in Hollywood.

"I auditioned for George Burns at his office at General Service studio 28 years ago," she recalled. "He still has his office there."

"We found a piano on one of the stages. We took the tarp off, and my pianist played for me. I did a couple of songs, and Mr. Burns asked me if I would be in his show." She appeared with Burns at the Sahara Hotel in Las Vegas, and Burns' pal Jack Benny put her on his television show.

Frank Capra chose Ann-Margret to play Bette Davis' daughter in "A Pocketful of Miracles," and Fox cast her in the remake, with Rodgers and Hammerstein music, of "State Fair." But it was "Bye, Bye, Birdie" with Dick Van Dyke that established her as a hot new star.

Ann-Margret supplied her special brand of sex appeal to such leading men as Steve McQueen ("The Cincinnati Kid"), Dean Martin ("Murderer's Row"), Anthony Quinn ("R.P.M."), Alain Delon ("Once a Thief") and Elvis Presley ("Viva Las Vegas"). Not until Mike Nichols' "Carnal Knowledge" (1971) did Hollywood acknowledge that she could act. She won an Academy Award nomination as supporting actress, a feat she repeated with "Tommy" in 1975.

In 1967, she married Roger Smith, the handsome blond star of the "77 Sunset Strip" TV series of the '50s. He abandoned his own acting career to become her personal manager, guiding her not only for films but in her dynamic night club act.

Backstage at a Lake Tahoe casino in 1972, she fell 22 feet from a platform to the stage, suffering a broken arm, five facial fractures and a brain concussion. Within 10 weeks she was ready to star again her Las Vegas act.

The personal appearances ended abruptly in 1983 when Smith was stricken with myasthenia gravis, a disease of the nerves that weakens muscles.

"For a long time Roger had no strength, couldn't even make a fist," she said. "Happily, he has been in remission for two years now. He works out every day in our gym for an hour and a half. He skis and rides a bike. He's in good shape."

Ann-Margret works out daily, too, and she may one day return to the act. It all depends on Smith: "It's very simple: he's first."

British Papers Recommend Children's Reading Lists

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Assuming Johnny can read, the question remains: What should he read?

The Times of London and The Daily Telegraph have tried to answer the question with lists of classics recommended for children from 3 to 18. Apart from a few books, notably J.D. Salinger's "The Catcher in the Rye" and the basic works for children, the lists had little in common.

The papers revealed a powerful pro-British bias, with David Holloway, one of the conservative Telegraph's panel of experts, commenting: "American universities tend to supply their students with reading lists containing thousands of titles. This is not only daunting but counterproductive."

So The Telegraph suggested the 100 books every youngster who has gone to school ought to have read by the time he or she finishes. The Times' panel of teachers, writers and critics came up with 50 titles.

The Times went by age group and stuck to fiction, while The Telegraph cast a wider net: modern fiction, classics, translations, poetry, drama and entertainment.

The two papers found the most agreement on books for young children, with The Times recommending, among others, the "Winnie the Pooh" stories, Rudyard Kipling's "Just So Stories," "Charlotte's Web" by E.B. White and Maurice Sendak's "Where the Wild Things Are."

The Telegraph, altogether weightier in its approach, opened with a category called cornerstones that included the Bible, Homer's "Iliad," Horace's "Odes," Geoffrey Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales" and all of Shakespeare's plays.

"Don Quixote," by Miguel de Cervantes, John Milton's "Paradise Lost," Boswell's "The Life of Samuel Johnson" and Charles Darwin's "The Origin of Species" rounded out the list.

However, against such high-brow fare as Bertrand Russell's "History of Western Philosophy," the Telegraph also suggested an entertainment list that ranged from Arthur Conan Doyle and Edgar Allan Poe to "The Big Sleep" by Raymond Chandler and Agatha Christie's "The Murder of Roger Ackroyd."

Its children's category included one American work, Mark Twain's "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer." Many of the others in the category were the same as chosen by The Times.

In its 12-18 category The Times ignored Shakespeare and the ancients but suggested Twain's "Huckleberry Finn," George Orwell's "1984," "The Diary of Anne Frank," "Jane Eyre" by Charlotte Bronte and "Pride and Prejudice" by Jane Austen.

There was Robert Louis Stevenson's "Treasure Island" alongside "The Lord of the Flies," William Golding's frightening tale of power-corrupted children. Salinger's "Catcher in the Rye" rubbed shoulders with "Emil and the Detectives" by Erich Kastner.

The Telegraph recommended 13 translations, among them Boris Pasternak's "Dr. Zhivago," Gustave Flaubert's "Madame Bovary," "The Three Musketeers" by Alexandre Dumas, "The Plague" by Albert Camus, Franz Kafka's "Metamorphosis" and Gabriel Garcia Marquez's "One Hundred Years of Solitude."

"War and Peace" didn't make the list but "Anna Karenina" did.

The Telegraph's longer list found more room for American works, mentioning F. Scott Fitzgerald's "The Great Gatsby," Margaret Mitchell's "Gone With the Wind," Ernest Hemingway's "A Farewell to Arms," John Steinbeck's "The Grapes of Wrath" and Saul Bellow's "The Adventures of Augie March."

Vladimir Nabokov's erotic masterpiece "Lolita" also was recommended.

Poets on the Telegraph list included John Keats, William Wordsworth, Samuel T. Coleridge, Lord Byron, Alfred Tennyson, T.S. Eliot, W.H. Auden, Philip Larkin and Charles Baudelaire, plus "The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam."

Its recommended plays were Moliere's "Tartuffe," William Congreve's "Love for Love," Richard Brinsley Sheridan's "The School for Scandal," Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest," Henrik Ibsen's "The Master Builder," Anton Chekhov's "The Cherry Orchard," George Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan" and Samuel Beckett's "Waiting for Godot."

But as the Telegraph's Holloway acknowledged in his introduction: "It would be an ideal child who had read the lot, and a pretty remarkable one who could score more than 50 percent. Certainly, none ... could, read the whole list before leaving school."

Hepburn 'Exhilarates' Young Actress

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Karen Austin says she hasn't quite found the words to describe what it was like to work with screen legend Katharine Hepburn in the NBC movie "Laura Lansing Slept Here," but she gives it a shot.

"I was intimidated, I was exhilarated, I was overwhelmed, I was inspired, all those things. I don't know, it's like a kid getting to play baseball with Babe Ruth," said Austin. The made-for-TV movie airs Monday.

"She has a great sense of humor about herself. She has no reverence about herself as an icon. The fact that other people regard her so highly is, I think, a source of benign amusement for her."

Austin, who starred in the first season of "Night Court" and later had a recurring role on "St. Elsewhere," plays Melody Gompers, a suburban housewife whose life is turned upside-down when a publisher bets a fabulously wealthy novelist that she can't stand to live with a typical American family for a week.

"It's a gentle comedy," Austin says. "You can imagine her descending on suburbia in full sail, with chauffeur and luggage. It's a great part for her, and she's costumed wonderfully, hats and Tibetan jewelry and exotic clothes. I kept my hair in a braid, little house dress. It was kind of fun finding a character that was realistic, but also would contrast well with her. That was my aim, really, was to be a backdrop as much as anything for her, a springboard."

Hepburn plays Laura Lansing, a famous, relentlessly spunky author whose publisher (Lee Richardson) says she should give up writing because she's lost touch with the common people.

He bets her she can't stand to stay for a week with the Gomperses and their three children in their little tract house in Hicksville on Long Island.

It's a cute movie. Lansing expects to find a little gingham world, not a soap-opera plot with a philandering husband, crabby kids and a rebellious teen-ager on the road to juvenile delinquency.

For their part, the Gomperses are awe-struck when their famous guest arrives, cowering them to the point that they sit silently in the living room, terrified to turn on the television or make any noise that would disturb her.

"Is this what you do in the evening," Lansing asks innocently when she emerges to find them all lined up on the sofa, "sit in silent meditation?"

Joel Higgins plays Walter Gompers. Schuyler Grant, who is Hepburn's grand-niece in real life, plays the Gompers' teen-age daughter. Sean Harmon plays their prepubescent son, and twins Ryan and Kyle Comber play 17-month-old Malcolm.

"Katharine's grand-niece (Grant) and I used to sit around," said Austin, "and I would try to explain to her, because to her it's just Aunt Katie, but I would try and explain to her what it was like for me to work with her aunt."

In real life, Hepburn did descend on suburbia in Vancouver where the movie was shot last year.

"The neighbors actually would go away when we asked them to," Austin says with wonder. "They'd be crowding over the fence taking pictures, and she'd say, 'Go away, now. Go away, don't do that.' And they would actually leave. They were so polite and respectful."

Hepburn, Austin said, "knows what quality is, and it's great to be around someone whose standards will not be compromised, and who has the clout to just say, 'Well, we can't do it this way,' and everybody says, 'Well, we can't, I guess we can't.'"

West led his fourth-best heart, and dummy's ten won the trick as East signalled in clubs. Obviously, the diamond suit would have to be developed if declarer was going to make his contract, so he continued with a diamond to the ace and a diamond back, noting with interest that West produced the ten on the first round of the suit.

West found the best defense, shifting to the queen of clubs. Declarer held up the ace for one round, then won the club continuation. A 4-2 diamond break was more likely than an even split, and West's ten strengthened that probability. Unless he was being rather brilliant by dropping the ten from a holding of K-10-x, the specific combination of K-J-10 was more odds-against than K-10 doubleton. Declarer, therefore, went for the endplay.

He came to hand with a high spade and led the king of hearts. West ducked (winning would have made no difference), and East had to let go of a black card to keep his diamond guard. Now declarer

Robertson Has Toughest Stand On Tobacco

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pat Robertson, a reformed pack-and-a-half-a-day smoker, is taking the toughest stand against tobacco among the 10 presidential candidates. Most of his rivals, campaigning in the tobacco belt in advance of Super Tuesday, support the government's tobacco price support program.

In response to a survey by The Associated Press, nearly all the candidates said they would maintain or intensify efforts to discourage people from smoking. Seven of 10 said they back the government's price support program.

But Robertson wants to snuff out the tobacco industry entirely over 10 years and stiffen taxes on cigarettes to help pay for long-term health care for the elderly.

The AP surveyed the candidates about tobacco and smoking as they gird for the March 8 round of primaries across the South, where tobacco may no longer be king but remains the top cash crop.

Tobacco provides wages and benefits of more than $14 billion a year for 710,000 people across the region.

With the exception of Robertson and Democrats Gary Hart and Paul Simon, the candidates favor continuing the price support program for tobacco, which guarantees growers a minimum price and regulates how much they can produce.

Vice President George Bush said, "I support the law requiring the tobacco program to be run at no net cost to the federal government."

Bush did not reply to a separate question about whether he would expand government anti-smoking efforts.

Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee raised eyebrows at a Democrats' debate in Iowa in January when he brought up the death toll caused by smoking and said that despite the 100,000 tobacco farmers in Tennessee, "I don't think there should be any public subsidy of tobacco at all."

But in subsequent campaign appearances in the South and again in response to the AP survey, Gore made clear that he is no critic of the tobacco price support program, which he said "does not rely at all on taxpayers' dollars ... (and) helps many small tobacco farmers stay in business."

Gore added, "I believe the government should do everything in its power to educate the public about the hazards associated with smoking." He said he supports stronger warning labels on cigarette packages.

Gore, himself, quit growing tobacco on a family farm after his sister Nancy died of lung cancer in 1984.

Democrat Jesse Jackson strongly defended the price support program, although he favors shifting more of its benefits to small, family farms.

Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis said he supports tobacco price supports, as well as "a vigorous public health campaign to encourage smokers to quit and to discourage young people from taking up the habit."

Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., said he supports the current federal tobacco program, as well as a ban on smoking on short commercial flights and "an active public education campaign" against smoking.

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., who is not campaigning in the Super Tuesday states, favors doubling the excise tax on cigarettes.

Of price supports, Simon said: "The tobacco industry is very clear about getting the message across that the current tobacco program does not cost the taxpayers. While that may be true ... the fact is that smoking costs all of us greatly. I believe we must expand government efforts to discourage people from smoking."

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas said it is unlikely that the United States would ever outlaw smoking. If it eliminated domestic tobacco production, American smokers would just be forced to use "lower quality, imported" tobacco with "no real gains in public health," he said.

Robertson said smoking-related deaths cost the nation at least $65 billion a year. He called for earmarking revenues from a users' fee on tobacco "exclusively for meeting the long-term health care needs of our older citizens."

Robertson has called for a government buyout of farmers' tobacco allotments over 10 years and tax breaks to allow tobacco companies to phase out their investments.

The Associated Press asked all the presidential candidates on Feb. 11:

"Do you support the current federal price support program for tobacco? Would you expand government efforts to discourage people from smoking?"

All replied in writing except Hart, whose positions were outlined by a campaign aide.

Here are the Republicans' replies:

GEORGE BUSH
"I support the law requiring the tobacco program to be run at no net cost to the federal government."

ROBERT DOLE
"One of the most misunderstood aspects of tobacco is the government price support program, sometimes called 'the tobacco subsidy.' ... The Commodity Credit Corporation, which administers commodity stabilization programs for USDA, has in the past incurred minor expenses in the tobacco program — only $58 million over a period of 50 years prior to 1984. Meanwhile, federal, state, and local excise taxes collected from the sale of tobacco products have exceeded $150 billion.

"I have supported efforts to increase public awareness of the potential dangers of smoking. It seems unlikely that smoking will be outlawed in the U.S. and tobacco imports will undoubtedly continue, regardless of U.S. production. In other words, if the U.S. eliminated tobacco production, those U.S. citizens choosing to smoke would do so using lower quality, imported foreign tobacco instead of U.S. produced tobacco."

JACK KEMP
"I have not proposed any major reforms in the federal 'no net cost' tobacco program; I do support government (and private) efforts to discourage smoking."

PAT ROBERTSON
"Smoking-related deaths are costing the nation at least $65 billion each year ... one-third on direct health care costs, while the remaining two-thirds — a whopping $43 billion — is attributable to lost job productivity. Ultimately, these staggering costs are borne by the average citizen — and nearly 75 percent of Americans don't even smoke.

"It makes no sense that while the Surgeon General's office is waging a campaign against smoking, the federal government is involved in price supports for tobacco. And it's illogical for politicians to bemoan the grave health consequences of tobacco while, at the same time, supporting its production.

"I believe the federal government should get out of tobacco production, and continue its campaign to educate the public on the dangers of smoking ... A user fee on tobacco products would serve as an added incentive to stop smoking. Revenues from such a fee should be earmarked exclusively for meeting the long-term health care needs of our older citizens."

Here are the Democrats' replies:

MICHAEL DUKAKIS
"In Massachusetts, I have supported policies to protect the rights of non-smokers. And as president, I would support a vigorous public health campaign to encourage smokers to quit and to encourage young people from taking up the habit.

"I do not favor direct taxpayer subsidies to farmers who grow tobacco. However, I do not oppose the tobacco industry's own effort to provide economic assistance through the existing Commodity Credit Corporation loan program, which operates at no net cost to the taxpayer. And I strongly support efforts to encourage tobacco farmers to diversify so that they can deal with the economic impact of what I hope will be continuing progress towards a smoke-free society."

RICHARD GEPHARDT
"I do support the current federal program. There are a lot of small- and medium-sized farmers who depend on that program to give them a fair price. When properly run, this program does not cost the government any money; it's paid for by the people who smoke cigarettes.

"I support measures to ban smoking on commercial airlines on short flights and to restrict smoking to certain areas on longer flights. Also, although I do not favor a total ban on advertising and promotion of tobacco products, I do support an active public education campaign to inform people of the potential adverse effects that tobacco products can have on our health."

ALBERT GORE JR.
"I support the current federal program for tobacco which is funded entirely by the contributions of growers and processors and does not rely at all on taxpayers' dollars. The current program helps many small tobacco farmers stay in business.

"I believe the government should do everything in its power to educate the public about the hazards associated with smoking. I have been a strong supporter of stronger warning labels on cigarette packages and other mechanisms to inform the public of smoking-related health risks. I believe public education will result in a gradually decreasing demand for tobacco products."

GARY HART
Campaign aide Jay Angoff said Hart does not support price supports because "it makes no sense on the one hand to pay people to grow tobacco and then for us as a society to incur the tremendous costs that tobacco imposes."

On anti-smoking efforts, Angoff said Hart "certainly wouldn't spend a lot of money on it, but he would use the powers of the presidency to make people aware of the harm smoking causes."

JESSE JACKSON
"In general I support the federal tobacco program although ... I would like to see the tobacco program reformed so that small family farms benefit more than they currently do. At the present time production quotas are distributed in a way that favors corporate farmers and neglects the family farmer who is the backbone of the rural South. ...

"As long as there is a demand for tobacco and people who make their livelihood from meeting that demand, the federal government should offer its assistance.

"But we have to recognize that 350,000 deaths per year are related to smoking. The government must beef-up educational efforts to inform the public of this hazard. Just as importantly, we must make every effort possible to assist farmers to diversify out of tobacco production if they so desire. We should consider using some portion of the 16 cent tobacco excise tax to fund such an effort."

PAUL SIMON
"The tobacco industry is very clear about getting the message across that the current tobacco program does not cost the taxpayers. While that may be true of the program that assists tobacco farmers, the fact is that smoking costs all of us greatly.

"I believe we must expand government efforts to discourage people from smoking. ... I believe we must begin to take steps to protect non-smokers from the adverse effects of smoking. I generally support legislative efforts to discourage smoking. I am co-sponsor of legislation that would double the federal excise tax on tobacco products. ...

"This would have the effect of pricing tobacco products out of the reach of those most susceptible to developing a long-term smoking habit: teen-agers."

White House Hopefuls Heat Up Pitches For Super Tuesday

By LAURA KING
Associated Press Writer

George Bush rebuked Republican presidential rival Bob Dole for implying that Bush, as CIA chief, may have had dealings with Panamanian strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega. And Rep. Richard Gephardt was the target of stinging attacks by two Democratic opponents.

With Southern exposure at a premium in the final five days of Super Tuesday campaigning, the candidates are saturating the airwaves with attacks and appeals, and barnstorming their way from Lubbock to Little Rock.

Tuesday's 20-state round of primaries and caucuses is concentrated in the South. For both parties, more than half the delegates needed to clinch the nomination are at stake.

Dole and Bush traded jabs as the two campaigned in Louisiana. The Kansas senator, in New Orleans, hinted at a Bush-Noriega connection.

"There's some evidence (Noriega) was on the CIA payroll as far back as 1966. That's all I know," he said. Bush headed the Central Intelligence Agency during 1976 and 1977.

Dole offered no evidence that Bush was aware of Noriega's alleged drug dealing, but suggested that a lack of knowledge would be almost as damning.

"He says he made all these decisions at the CIA," Dole said. "What were they? Was Noriega on the payroll when he was CIA director?"

The vice president fired back from Baton Rouge: "I find it amazing that a United States senator will talk about CIA matters."

"I took an oath of office to protect sources and methods of intelligence and I would never discuss anything I was doing at the CIA that would affect the national security," Bush said, adding: "I would point out that it's the Reagan-Bush administration under which Mr. Noriega is being indicted in Florida for drugs."

Noriega is under federal indictment in Miami on drug-trafficking charges.

Dole, acknowledging he's "got a lot of catching up to do" in the South, is running a commercial that ridicules Bush for using the French phrase "c'est la vie" — that's life — in connection with textile imports that have hurt the economy in the Carolinas.

The ad touts an endorsement from South Carolina Sen. Strom Thurmond, pointedly noting that Thurmond's Southern-accented praise of Dole is delivered in English.

Dukakis weighed in with an ad attacking Gephardt, mocking the Missouri congressman's populist slogan, "It's your fight too."

After charging that Gephardt is taking campaign contributions from "big establishment power brokers," the commercial concludes: "Kinda makes you wonder, is Dick Gephardt fighting your fight or theirs?"

Gephardt also came under fire from Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr., who accused him of flip-flopping on issues. "Where he stands can change very quickly from day to day," said Gore as he campaigned in Wyoming, which holds presidential caucuses on Saturday.

Gore took issue with Gephardt ads attacking him, calling them "the mark of a failing campaign."

Gephardt took a campaign-trail detour down memory lane, returning to his hometown of St. Louis. Speaking at City Hall, Gephardt, who got his political start on the board of alderman, pointed to his former desk and said: "It's great to be back on home turf."

More to the point, he raised $25,000 at a Springfield campaign reception and told supporters he'd pour the money into his Super Tuesday effort.

"While other campaigns may be borrowing and scurrying to raise money for Super Tuesday, we put the money on the table," he said.

Democrat Paul Simon was staying above the campaign-commercial fray. Simon, citing a lack of funds, has bypassed active campaigning in the South to concentrate on his home state of Illinois, which holds its primary March 15. Even there, he's eschewing advertising.

"Abe Lincoln didn't do TV," said Simon spokesman Michael Kreloff.

Jesse Jackson was kicking off his first big media buy of the campaign season. His manager, Gerald Austin, said Jackson had purchased $100,000 in air time in several Super Tuesday states.

Jackson paid tribute to a generation of civil rights activists with an appearance in Selma, Ala. on Wednesday, at the spot where state troopers routed a voting rights march with billy clubs 23 years ago.

Republican Pat Robertson, meanwhile, sought to score some political points by repeatedly invoking Jackson's name.

"I see some signs here of my friend Jesse Jackson," the former television evangelist told a predominantly black crowd at the Orangeburg campus of South Carolina State College. "What Jesse has been saying is what I'm saying to you."

Simon Fighting At Home

CHICAGO (AP) — Paul Simon has come home to Illinois to fight for his life as a Democratic presidential contender. He's doing it without television, without big bucks and without many words of encouragement from political pundits.

While the rest of the presidential pack stalks votes in Super Tuesday land, the Illinois senator is hoping a hometown victory will revive his flagging campaign following a string of disappointing showings in early contests.

"We have to win, and we will win in Illinois," Simon said at a news conference on Wednesday. After a fundraising foray to California, he said he planned to remain here, for the most part, until the Illinois primary on March 15.

Some have dubbed him "Simple Simon" for choosing to skip the South on the 20-state Super Tuesday. Others have called him gutsy. But Simon remains upbeat and says his strategy will pay off in the end.

"The Super Tuesday of the industrial states starts with Illinois," he said. "Illinois is going to send a strong message to the industrial states and to the rest of the nation on behalf of Paul Simon."

Simon strongly denied reports that he was talking to Michael Dukakis about dropping out of the race and supporting the Massachusetts governor.

"I've never talked to Mike Dukakis about any such possibility," Simon said. "It's strictly a figment of someone's imagination."

Simon also denied reports that his Illinois supporters have pressured him to stay in the race so that they can be guaranteed a trip to the July convention in Atlanta.

"I wouldn't be doing it just so somebody can get a vacation in Atlanta," Simon said. "I'm in it because I want to be president of the United States."

LaRouche Wants Colony On Mars

WASHINGTON (AP) — Political extremist Lyndon LaRouche says he will solve the nation's economic problems by establishing a permanent U.S. colony on the planet Mars, a plan detailed in a half-hour program to be shown on ABC-TV tonight.

In the program, "The Woman on Mars," the Democratic presidential candidate proposes reviving the Apollo moon program and using the existing shuttle system to colonize Mars. The technology associated with the colony would spur the economy, he says.

"The old aerospace program paid us back 10 cents for every penny invested," LaRouche says in the program, which was previewed for reporters Wednesday. "The Mars program would pay us more."

LaRouche, a frequent fringe candidate for the presidency, paid about $180,000 to air the 30-minute program at 8 p.m., said Dana Scanlon, a spokeswoman for LaRouche.

The show will pre-empt "The Charmings," which ABC planned to replace this month with "Probe."

The program marks the second time LaRouche purchased prime network time to promote his views.
