Unemployment Hits Lowest Level Since 1979

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's economy created half a million jobs last month, dropping the civilian unemployment rate to 5.7 percent, its lowest since the summer of 1979, the government said today.

Total employment grew by 280,000, the Labor Department's monthly household survey said, with the number of jobless Americans falling by 108,000 to 6.9 million.

January's civilian jobless rate had been 5.8 percent.

A separate survey of business payrolls showed a net increase of 531,000 jobs in February, 40 percent of which were in service industries. Health services added 60,000 workers while business services added 55,000.

Retail trade employment, adjusted for seasonal variations, climbed by 110,000 despite evidence of declines in consumer spending.

The commissioner of labor statistics, Janet L. Norwood, said the gains in retail-trade employment reflect "post-Christmas cutbacks this year that have been much smaller than usual."

The only service industries that did not show job gains were finance, insurance and real estate. In finance, which includes banks, savings and loans, and investment houses, employment actually fell by 110,000 after several months of minimal increases.

"This probably resulted from the employment retrenchment following last October's financial market upheavals," Ms. Norwood told the congressional Joint Economic Committee.

Meanwhile, factory job growth, which had been averaging 50,000 jobs a month, moderated in February, with a gain of just 20,000. Employment in the furniture and electronic equipment industries fell by 3,000 while automobile industry employment held steady at 822,000.

Construction jobs jumped by 105,000 after a drop of 60,000 in the preceding month.

The percentage of the nation's adult population with jobs rose to a record 62.2 percent in February. The Labor Department said recent job growth has been particularly strong in the administrative and management areas, accounting for more than one-third of the growth of 3 million jobs in total civilian employment over the last year.

The biggest beneficiary of that trend and the recent rebound in manufacturing and construction has been adult men, whose jobless rate has dropped from 5.8 percent in February 1987 to 4.9 percent last month. The jobless rate for women, also at 5.8 percent a year ago, was 5.2 percent in February.

Jobless rates for minority groups remained high despite the fact that blacks and Hispanics have obtained one of every three new jobs over the last year.

Black unemployment, at 12.6 percent last month, was more than double the 4.8 percent for whites.

SUPER POTHOLE — This double-decker bus was stuck in the bus lane, literally, after its rear end was swallowed by a huge pothole in Norwich, England, on Thursday. Authorities believe the road was built above

British, Syrian Workers Kidnapped In Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A British official of the Oxfam relief organization was kidnapped with a Syrian colleague in the southern port city of Sidon, Oxfam headquarters said today.

Oxfam spokesman John Magrath said in Oxford, England, that the organization's Middle East coordinator, Peter Coleridge, 44, and its Lebanon representative, Omar Traboulsi, were seized Thursday night in Sidon, 25 miles south of Beirut.

"We've had conflicting reports as to whether they are still being held or not," Magrath said.

No one claimed responsibility for the abductions, which brought the number of foreigners missing and believed kidnapped in Lebanon to 24.

Oxfam is a British charity that aids refugees and poor people around the world.

Nissrine Rawda, an official at Oxfam's Beirut office, said Coleridge went Thursday to Sidon accompanied by at least two local Oxfam staff members and had been expected back in Beirut later today.

Magrath said he could not give any other details of the abduction. A police spokesman said Lebanese authorities had no information about a missing Briton.

"We have ideas about who might have done it, but we don't want to speculate," Magrath said.

"The people we work with on the ground have told us not to panic. We know they're making contacts in Sidon to find out exactly what's happened and see that Peter and Omar are released."

On Wednesday, pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem militants released a West German captive, Ralph Schray, 30, in Beirut five weeks after he was kidnapped.

Two U.N. Relief and Works agency officials, Jan Stening, 44, of Sweden and William Jorgensen, 58, of Norway, were kidnapped near Sidon Feb. 5, apparently by Palestinians acting independently of guerrilla groups.

Their abductors handed the two over to the Palestine Liberation Organization on Tuesday after 25 days in captivity.

Twenty-two other foreigners are missing and believed kidnapped in Lebanon.

Tar Heel Kidnapped

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Contra rebels kidnapped 13 people in northern Nicaragua, including an American volunteer for the Witness for Peace organization, its local director said today.

Edward Griffin, the local director for the organization, identified the kidnapped American as Richard Boren, 29, of Elkin, N.C.

Organization officials said Boren was a Witness for Peace volunteer in the Jinotega province of Nicaragua and had been documenting Contra activities, including human rights abuses.

Witness for Peace opposes the Contras and the Reagan administration's policies in Central America.

Griffin said Boren was abducted Tuesday in the Mancotal area of Jinotega province, about 120 miles north of Managua. It is a zone where the rebels operate regularly in their six-year fight against the Sandinista government.

Gail Farris, the U.S. southeast regional coordinator for Witness for Peace, said four people were killed and 11 wounded in the attack.

In Washington, Witness for Peace said it had contacted the U.S. State Department and the U.S. Embassy in Managua. The State Department had no immediate confirmation.

Strickland Files Again

Bruce Strickland, a member of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners since 1960, filed as a candidate for re-election this morning from District 4, which includes Falkland, Farmville, Arthur and a portion of Greenville townships.

Strickland had filled earlier this year as a candidate under the county's old method of election.

"I think Pitt County is one of the leading counties in the state," Strickland said. "I'm glad to have had a part in its development and hope to continue. I think we've just scratched the surface in the county's growth and progress."

"My record stands for itself," Strickland added.

During his more than 27 years as a member of the board, Strickland has served five terms as chairman, has been chairman of the Pitt County Board of Health and has been a member of the board of the Department of Social Services, the board of trustees of Pitt County Memorial Hospital, the Pitt-Greenville Airport Authority and the Pitt County Development Commission.

He is in the warehouse business and owns and operates several farms in the county.

Strickland has two children and is a member of the Deciples of Christ Church in Bell Arthur.

"I appreciate what the people of Pitt County have done for me, and would certainly be happy to serve them again," Strickland said.

Under the new election plan, the commissioner elected from District 4 will serve only a two-year term. Then in 1990, a commissioner will be elected to a regular four-year term.

Search For Police Chief Draws Praise

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

While Chief Jerry Tesmond completes his first week at the helm of Greenville's police force, City Manager Greg Knowles is reflecting on the prolonged and exhaustive process by which the former lowman came to be selected.

Meanwhile, local officials praise both the chosen candidate and Knowles' methodology.

"It was a long, arduous process, but I don't think I could have done it any shorter," Knowles said of the search. "There are times when I wished I had had it done in November but you can't go fast and come up with the wrong candidate," the city manager said in a satisfied tone. Then he added, "Initial impressions can sometimes be wrong."

Knowles received approximately 40 responses from across the country from applicants interested in the vacancy created by the resignation of former Police Chief Floyd "Ted" Holmes.

After narrowing the applicants down to the workable number of seven, Knowles, in conjunction with city Personnel Director Gerry Dail, brought together an outside group of experts to act as judges in an assessment center for the candidates.

Designed to weed out applicants, the assessment center consisted of an extensive array of scenarios and conditions to test the candidates' strength, composure and fortitude in handling a wide variety of police-related situations.

"I think the assessment center was excellent because it indicated the strengths and weaknesses of all the candidates," Knowles said.

"The series was meant to put the most stress that we could in a short amount of time. We called upon their years of experience and forced them to make gut reactions," he added.

Knowles said several of the candidates with high levels of education could not produce responses on several occasions because the pressures were too great.

"In any kind of environment, it's not just that you went to school, it's how you react, how you come across to people that matters," he said.

In retrospect, Knowles said he feels the importance of the assessment center was crucial.

"If we had gone without an assessment center, gone just on what I saw on paper, I may have made a mistake," he commented.

Following the assessment center, Knowles reviewed the comments the assessors had made on each of the seven candidates. After much consideration, the list of potential chiefs was narrowed down to three.

Exhaustive background checks were then conducted. College records were reviewed. Previous employers were contacted, and references were checked and rechecked.

Finally, Knowles made a decision, selecting the man who, he believed, would be the best leader for the department.

His name was Jerome M. Tesmond, the 54-year-old police chief of Muscatine, Iowa, population of 28,000.

But there was still one thing Knowles felt he had to do.

"I thought it was important for me to go out there, to see the town, and actually talk to the people of the community," Knowles said.

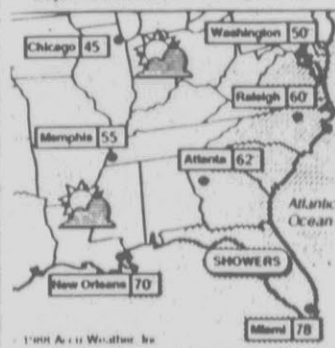

The members of Greenville's City Council thought it was an excellent idea and on the morning of Feb. 25, Knowles left the Tar Heel state for an important two-day encounter in the Midwest.

"I talked with police officers,

Polls Open At 6:30 On Tuesday

Voters in Pitt County participating in Tuesday's Presidential Preference Primary will have an opportunity to vote early this year, according to Margaret Hardee, elections supervisor.

In order to accommodate voters, Mrs. Hardee said polls will open Tuesday at 6:30 a.m. and stay open until 7:30 p.m.

Mrs. Hardee also reminded that, for the first time, unaffiliated voters will be eligible to vote with registered Republicans in the Republican primary. Only registered Democrats will be eligible to vote in the Democratic primary. A new law allows unaffiliated voters to participate in a primary if the political party agrees.

According to Mrs. Hardee, registration books for Tuesday's primary closed on Feb. 8. Registered voters who wanted to change their party affiliation had to do so on or before that date. She said that a change of party affiliation dated after Feb. 8 will not be effective for Tuesday's voting and party affiliation cannot be changed at the polls.

The deadline for voting absentee ballots by the one-stop method at the Board of Elections office is 5 p.m. today. The deadline for applying for an absentee ballot to be mailed to a near relative was Tuesday at 5 p.m.

Mrs. Hardee said Pitt County's vote on "Super Tuesday" will help determine how North Carolina delegates vote on the first nomination ballot at the Democratic and Republican National Conventions this summer. Percentage of votes received by each candidate on March 8 usually determines how many delegates the candidates receive.

North Carolina will send 54 delegates to the Republican convention in New Orleans and 89 delegates to the Democratic convention in Atlanta.

The program, which began in December and concluded in January, was designed to update principals three years after they completed the basic 20-day residential program.

ECU Study Finds Sex Attitudes Are Developed Outside Schools

ECU News Bureau

Sex education classes for seventh and eighth graders do little to change their attitudes about sex, an East Carolina University study has found.

In a study by Dr. Robert M. Brown, an education professor, and Margaret S. Brothers of the ECU School of Education, the researchers say their findings dilute previously held notions about sex education in the public schools.

"Many parents feel that sexual knowledge and sexual attitudes go hand in hand," said Brown. "But from this study it appears that an increase in sexual knowledge had little or no effect on sexual attitudes," he said.

He said the students in the study became more aware of sex, but the students did not become more permissive in their attitudes about sex after completing the course.

"There was a slight shift toward being less permissive after the course than before the course," Brown said.

In the study, 92 seventh and eighth grade students were taught a two-week sex education course. Parental consent was obtained for the students to participate in the class which met once a day for 50 minutes. Girls met in one class and boys in another.

Brown said the course was designed to present factual information. Time was allotted for group discussions for students to discuss their values, beliefs and feelings. For students too shy to enter into open discussion a question box was provided and these questions were discussed in class.

Students were given tests before the course and after the course was completed. The tests evaluated the students' knowledge of sex, their concerns about it and finally their attitudes about what is or is not permissible.

The results showed that most of the students, except for seventh grade boys, increased their sexual knowledge after the course. All of the students, however, continued to miss questions about contraceptives and pregnancy. The seventh grade boys also missed questions about the biological female.

There were fewer sexual concerns or worries after the course than before, Brown said. Most of the concerns were about how to tell if someone loves you, pregnancy and venereal disease. Concern over AIDS was not specifically observed but came under the broad heading of venereal disease.

In a test measuring sexual permissiveness the students showed a slight drop indicating they were less permissive after taking the course. Brown said the change was so small it was not considered significant.

"It could be inferred from this finding that sexual attitudes are not particularly influenced by the school," said Brown. He said sexual attitudes are more likely formed outside the school, probably in the home and the peer group.

Nursing Students Discuss Cancer

Nursing students from four eastern North Carolina colleges and universities learned of the challenges and rewards of caring for cancer patients during a mini-conference sponsored by the East Carolina University School of Nursing and the National Institutes of Health Cancer Nursing Service.

An estimated 200 nursing students and faculty from Atlantic Christian College in Wilson, the University of North Carolina at Wilmington, Pitt Community College and ECU attended the daylong program designed to introduce future nurses to varying issues and topics involved in the management and treatment of cancer patients.

Emilie Henning, dean of the ECU School of Nursing and coordinator of the program, said the mini-conference is the first held at ECU involving nursing students from the four schools.

"The program offers an opportunity to discuss the important role of nurses in the long-term care of cancer patients as well as focus on current information pertaining to the available types of treatment and their side effects," she said.

The key speakers for the program were Carole C. Kuzmik and Maureen P. O'Connor, both staff nurses at the National Cancer Institute in Bethesda, Md.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Gore's Ability Merits Support

The qualifications of Albert Gore Jr. for nomination as the Democratic candidate for president are not mere capabilities on paper.

Gore is the most able contender and his leadership potential places him as the clear choice for North Carolina Democrats in the Super Tuesday primary.

Gore's degree from Harvard University in government and his law training at Vanderbilt University give him a firm base of knowledge. His experience as a four-term congressman and then as a senator broadens this background with demonstrated expertise.

Furthermore, his election to these offices has been by an impressive majority vote — only once did he receive less than 70 percent of the vote and three times received over 90 percent. Gore has clearly been responsive to the needs of his constituents.

His committee work in Congress represents a diverse range of involvement, including armed services, consumer interest, commerce and science, and environment and energy.

In addition, there can be no doubt of his dedication to country. Gore served in Vietnam from 1970 to 1971, the only Democratic candidate with that distinction.

Gore has a strong agenda of concerns and his position and expertise in the area of national defense is particularly impressive. Gore supports security and peace in Central America and correctly feels self-determination for the citizens there goes hand-in-hand with continued American strength.

Gore's stance on trade and financial issues is equally responsible and should be supported by North Carolina Democrats. His desire to restore fiscal responsibility in federal spending and reduce the budget deficit is the best approach to realigning trade imbalances.

In addition, Gore correctly advocates strengthening America's trade prowess by increasing productivity through education, internal improvements and expanding the nation's export muscle. This position represents a realistic approach to success in a global economy.

Also important to North Carolina is Gore's understanding and support of agricultural issues. His backing of commodity programs — including tobacco — has been clearly stated, and his insistence on better management for them applaudable.

Gore is a candidate whose character and judgment match his intellectual gifts, and whose leadership potential is significant. He should receive a clear endorsement from Democratic voters on Tuesday.

Dole's Experience Meets Requirements

Bob Dole's experience and indisputable acuity should win him the support of North Carolina's Republican voters on Super Tuesday.

Dole is knowledgeable and, as a longtime Washington hand, is the most capable Republican candidate for the nomination for president.

His training as a lawyer is impeccable, and his demonstrated use of that knowledge deserves recognition.

Dole has served in public office for 27 years, both in Congress and in the U.S. Senate. His experience in the Senate gives him unquestionable leadership qualifications that his Republican opponents lack. Dole served as both Senate majority and minority leader. In addition, he sat on the Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry committees and chaired the powerful Senate Finance Committee for three years.

This expertise places him in a proper position to accurately assess and address the needs of the nation. Dole knows firsthand the effects of the budget deficit, and seems committed to reducing it. His insistence that the nation's education system must be strengthened to face the challenge of world competitiveness is a position worthy of support.

North Carolina's Republicans should readily endorse the expertise Dole's role on the Senate Agriculture Committee offers. Dole defends federal crop loan guarantees to farmers, as well as backing the Farmers Home Administration and conservation measures.

Dole's viewpoint, vision and determination are firm and his character appears unquestionable. Dole is a driver, a "boss" that can get things accomplished. His record in public office bears out this fact.

North Carolina's Republicans can vote Dole as their choice Tuesday with the assurance they are making a sound decision. Simply stated, Dole is the best Republican candidate for the job.

Panama Impatient For Noriega's Farewell

We Panamanians have been preparing a party for a long time. It will be no surprise. The guest of honor knows about it. For almost 20 years we have been dreaming of the day when we would celebrate the end of a long night of dictatorship. That day now is at hand. So we are making arrangements for Manuel Noriega's going-away party.

The festivity is a send-off for an undesired guest. In 1968 Panama's newly elected president was overthrown by a military coup. The new regime, led by Gen. Omar Torrijos, was, unfortunately, quickly recognized and backed by the United States. Panama's foremost columnist, Guillermo Sanchez Borbon (now in exile in Miami), summed it up in the December issue of Harper's magazine:

"Panama, 'once prosperous, stable, democratic, with the narrowest gap between rich and poor of any country in Latin America, with a higher percentage of its budget earmarked for education than any country in the region, is now what Conrad called 'a place of darkness' — a strife-ridden kleptarchy (rule of thieves) in the power of an interesting monster."

Now much attention is being paid to the general; Americans have just "discovered" what in Panama has been a long-term open secret: that Noriega and many other high-ranking officers were getting rich on arms and drug deals. Just look at how these men live — their mansions, their luxurious cars, their daughters' opulent weddings confirm the extent of their corruption.

But arms and drugs are not the only reasons Panamanians have opposed the military regime. We have also been fighting for freedom of expression, freedom of the press, for democracy and for free elections. In the 20-year process, many Panamanians have been beaten, jailed, exiled and murdered.

Last June, after the former second-ranking officer made a sensational disclosure, coupled with a confession, about corruption and racketeering in the Defense Forces, Panamanians decided that enough was enough. We had to start planning the party. Panamanians organized under the Civic Crusade, a non-partisan entity made up of businessmen, civic clubs, professional associations, students, workers and the church, and took to the streets in a series of peaceful demonstrations. Noriega's response was tear gas, birdshot, arrests and expulsions from the country. Independent and opposition newspapers and radio stations were closed. The remainder were subjected to government censorship.

We almost threw the party after Christmas. On the morning of Saturday, Jan. 9, rumors were rife that Noriega had fled the country. (For Christmas, an underground leaflet that was addressed to Santa asked just one gift for all Panamanians: "Please take Noriega with you!" We thought that our Christmas wish was being granted just a bit late.) By noon the rumors were more assured: The general was in the Dominican Republic. By 3 o'clock in the afternoon people were on the streets celebrating; one of Panama's main avenues was closed to traffic in a carnival-type festival. But it was a false alarm. In a few hours the Defense Forces' elite troops arrived to spoil the festivities. People were once more beaten and arrested. The celebration was premature.

Again, last week, we thought that the time had come, when President Eric Arturo Delvalle ordered Noriega to step down. Delvalle is almost universally regarded in Panama as Noriega's puppet; moving as he did, at the cost of his office, was dramatic evidence that the circle of dissent is widening. We had already been encouraged by the defection of one of Noriega's closest henchmen, Jose I. Blandon. His revelations about Noriega's corruption were not surprising; the news was that Blandon was the source of the accusations.

No one knows what it will take to rid Panama of the general. But there is no question that we will end military rule and restore democracy. And we will do it without violence. Now that the United States no longer props up Noriega, things will be simpler.

When will the general's farewell occur? Next week, next month, maybe even in three months. Good parties, as Noriega and his henchmen know, are costly. But the general will have his party!

The Bottom Line On Litterers

Nearly every morning, when I walk my dog, I'm confronted with garbage thrown in the common area outside my townhouse. This morning it was a paint can box. Usually it's a drink cup, hamburger wrapper or beer can that some slob discarded as he crossed the lawn to a neighboring subdivision.

What's wrong with people that they behave so crudely, throwing trash all over my lawn and the public's roads and parks? An official of the Department of Transportation's anti-litter program says a recent study by Keep America Beautiful gives some insight into these pigs.

First, people litter where they feel no sense of ownership for the property, says DOT's Jean Dodd. Therefore, they throw garbage on my property, but not on their own.

Second, litterers throw their junk out onto areas that are already littered. Ms. Dodd says that once an area becomes littered, the litter builds up quickly.

The flip side to this, however, is that people do not litter, generally, in well kept areas. "That's where the beautification planning comes into play," said Ms. Dodd. "If an area has been beautified with flowers and shrubbery, people are less likely to throw stuff down to mess it up."

Third, people litter where they feel someone will follow up and clean up their mess. Therefore, the jerk who walks past my house every night and drops his dinner leftovers on my grass figures I'll pick up after him. People who litter outside a fast food restaurant figure Ronald McDonald will come sweep up after them. People who litter on the highways figure it is the DOT's job to clean up their mess.

But intentional litter represents only part of the trash problem we'll find along our roadsides and in our neighborhoods. A great deal of litter comes not from sloppy people, said Ms. Dodd, but from careless people.

Household garbage that has not been properly bagged before being thrown out is a major source of neighborhood garbage, she said. If people would put garbage and trash in plastic bags and then secure those bags before placing them in their outside cans, a lot less refuse would be lying on our streets.

Some people do secure their garbage, but fail to secure the garbage can cover. Dogs and squirrels can then get into the garbage can. "In these cases, people tend to blame the dogs or the garbageman for the mess," said Ms. Dodd. But, in reality, it's the homeowners fault.

The same problems exist in commercial areas. Businesses fail to bring the lid down on their dumpsters, or they fail to secure loose material as it sits on loading docks.

Then there is the problem of the uncovered truck. State law restricts the amount of loose material a carrier can have in his truck, but the law isn't enforced very strictly because of loopholes. The result is that trash flies off the back of the trucks.

Much is being done in North Carolina to fight litter. Public and private efforts seek to educate the public on the need to act responsibly, and many groups sponsor clean-up sweeps along the highways, beaches and other public areas. State anti-littering laws and fines have been strengthened.

As for me, I'm fighting the problem with my dog. Every morning she takes her walk in the cut-through area that nightly litterers use, laying land mines, so to speak. I figure that after the litterers soil a few pairs of shoes, they'll find some other place to walk.

Strength For Today

Albert Schweitzer, a great physician, theologian, and organist, some sixty years ago went to the jungles of Africa and started a hospital in order that he might help pay what he considered to be the great debt which the white race owed to the black race.

One day, in a mood of weariness and despair, he threw himself into a chair in his consulting room and exclaimed bitterly, "What a blockhead I was to come out and myself in this place."

His black assistant was silent for a moment and then replied, "Yes, Doctor, here on earth you are a blockhead, but not in heaven."

The assistant had touched on the vital distinction between the standards of the world and those of philanthropy. At home Schweitzer would have been a celebrated figure, but in Africa has had a life of fulfillment knowing he had sacrificed himself for others.

Public Forum

To the editor:

In six to eight years, the landfill on Allen Road will be full. Two hundred tons of garbage go into it each day at a cost of $840,000 per year. That figure could go as high as $7 million. Pitt County leads all counties in the state in recycling 16 percent of all waste products, and they do this with little or no increase in man power or money. Why should we care? Why should we recycle?

It saves us money because we will pay less for garbage pick-up. We will pay less for items made from recycled material. We will pay less in taxes for it will cost Pitt County to either truck it out (to where?) or to buy expensive land (if available) for a new landfill. Every county in the state is having the same problem — only worse.

The solution is in place. The county has just opened a pilot recycling and compacting center at Bell's Fork Solid Waste Container Site during daylight hours. Make use of it! OR take it to designated places on the first Saturday of the month between 8 a.m. and noon. These sites are Rivergate Shopping Center, Overton's Supermarket parking lot on Jarvis Street, and West End Shopping Center.

What can we recycle? Glass, aluminum, newspapers, cardboard of all kinds, and scrap paper (at last, a place for junk mail.)

Now we know what, how and where. Let's do it!

Commuter Crashes Near Paris, Killing All 22 Aboard

PARIS (AP) — A twin-engine commuter plane flying from Nancy to Paris crashed near the capital this morning while waiting to land, killing all 22 people aboard, aviation authorities said.

The Fairchild 227 turboprop, owned by the small aviation company TAT, apparently hit high-tension wires and crashed in a field in Pamfou, a town near Melun, 25 miles southwest of Paris, police said.

The force of the crash gouged a huge hole in the plowed land, police said. Officials said there was snow in the region and temperatures were below freezing.

The aircraft was carrying 19 passengers, including a baby, and three crew members, TAT Commercial Director Patrice Decourt told The Associated Press. Earlier reports said 21 people were aboard.

Debris from the plane was spread out over hundreds of square yards and workers were combing the field and surrounding forests.

The director of the Nancy-Essey airport, Jean-Claude Philippe, said the plane had been circling the Melun area in the Seine-et-Marne region, 25 miles southeast of Paris, waiting for orders to land at Orly airport.

"Planes are landed sooner or later. So they are stacked up, waiting for a free runway," Philippe said. "They don't wait long, of course. Several minutes."

Decourt said the plane was in the holding pattern for six to seven minutes after the 50-minute flight from Nancy, then "plunged very rapidly" to the ground.

The cause of the accident was not immediately known. Police and rescue workers were searching the area for the aircraft's black box.

"The plane ... was perhaps in a situation of intense icing, but TAT's experience with this type of plane leads us to believe that circumstances which we are not yet aware of led to the accident," said a statement issued by TAT.

The U.S.-made Fairchild 227 is built under license from the Dutch company Fokker.

The last ground contact with the plane was at 7:32 a.m., according to the control tower at Orly. The aircraft disappeared from the radar five minutes later.

A trainee flight attendant, Helene Guillou, said in Nancy that she missed the flight because she overslept.

"I was an intern hostess and this morning I didn't hear the alarm clock," Ms. Guillou said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press.

She said the same plane made a trip without problems Thursday

House Rejects Aid For Contras, Leaving U.S. Policy In Limbo

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has killed its Democratic leadership's proposal for a package of "humanitarian" aid for the Nicaraguan Contras, leaving the vacillating U.S. policy toward Central America once again in limbo and the rebels without support.

The lawmakers voted 216-208 Thursday to reject the Democrats' $30.5 million proposal that would have provided four months' worth of food, clothing and medical supplies to the rebels and created a new $14 million program to aid children who are victims of the Nicaraguan civil war.

Forty-five Democrats, mostly liberals who oppose any aid to the Contras, joined with Republicans, who thought the aid proposal too weak, to deal it a fatal blow. Only five of 176 GOP members present voted for the measure on the final ballot.

The vote showed the difficulty of coming up with any kind of agreement on the contentious issue. It was a particular setback for House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, who had sought to keep the Contras in place in Nicaragua to pressure the leftist Sandinista government into concessions as part of a regional peace process. Democrats had hoped, too, that their milder aid package would relieve pressure to give the rebels more weapons later this year.

But the surprise outcome also appeared to dim any administration hopes of speedy action to keep supplies flowing to the rebels, who by some accounts are in dire need of food and other non-lethal materiel. Previous U.S. aid, and the authority to deliver it by airdrops inside

Nicaragua, expired Tuesday.

Wright, D-Texas, said the vote may prove "a somewhat pyrrhic victory" for Republicans, adding that he had no immediate plans to revive a Contra aid plan.

"We have thus far done our best," Wright said. "It was as good an effort as could be made. I don't know how you would find a better consensus among those who have a sincere effort to help the peace process."

Other Democrats vowed to make any new try for aid difficult.

"As far as I'm concerned, it ought to be a damned lengthy process," said Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., a Contra opponent who is chairman of the House Appropriations subcommittee with jurisdiction over the matter. "The Republicans sandbagged us."

The vote came exactly one month after the House rejected a $36 million Reagan plan to aid the rebels, one which included money for weapons and other military supplies. Wright won that showdown partly on the strength of a promise that he would give moderate members of his party a later chance to vote for a purely "humanitarian" aid package.

"We fulfilled our commitment to them," Wright said after the vote.

With no aid plans left before Congress, U.S. policy toward the Contras — who were organized seven years ago with U.S. backing — was in limbo.

The confusion was illustrated by conflicting reactions to the vote from President Reagan, the Contras' most prominent supporter, and a rebel spokeswoman in Miami.

As he flew back to the United States from a NATO meeting in Brussels, Belgium, Reagan said: "I'm very happy." His spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, later explained that the president meant he was glad to be able to work on an improved aid package.

But Contra spokeswoman Marta Sacasa said the rebels had wanted the aid to pass, and said the United States was turning its back.

"Every time the United States turns its back on the Contras, it puts us in a less favorable position," Sacasa said. "We are fighting against an enemy that doesn't have these kinds of problems. The aid from the Soviet Union has not stopped flowing to the Sandinistas."

In drawing up their aid proposal, Democrats led by Rep. David Bonior, D-Mich., were faced with the challenge of attracting support from moderate members, many of them southerners, while not alienating the party's liberal wing — most of whom never have backed the rebels.

To gain every possible advantage, Democratic leaders had set up an unusual procedure under which their package would come before the House as an amendment to a competing but similar Republican bill. The Democratic version was adopted on a vote of 215 to 210, thus wiping out the GOP version and replacing it with the Democratic plan.

But minutes later, voting on final passage for the same bill, 26 members switched their votes and the entire package was defeated. The largest group of those abandoning the bill comprised liberal Democrats who had been uncomfortable voting for it in the first place.

Shultz Takes Peace Hunt To Damascus

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz flew in today to discuss American ideas for peace in the Middle East with the pro-Soviet government of President Hafez Assad.

Shultz, on his second stop in Damascus in less a week, arrived from Jerusalem where he had met with Israeli leaders. But his efforts to promote negotiations on a settlement in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip did not appear to have made any significant progress.

Shultz was greeted at Damascus airport by Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharaa. The two drove immediately to the Muhajerine presidential palace for a meeting with Assad.

He planned to leave for Cairo after the talks with Assad, a strong critic of Washington's Middle East policies.

Shultz, on a second, unscheduled swing through the region in the past week, did not indicate he had achieved any progress in a statement before leaving Israel.

"The president sent me back to work at it some more and while he told me he'd let me come home tonight, he made it clear that we would keep pushing and working," Shultz said at Ben Gurion International Airport.

Israel radio reported that Shultz presented a written version of his peace proposal to Israel's rival leaders, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir of the right-wing Likud bloc and Foreign Minister Shimon Peres of the leftist Labor Party.

Peres is said to favor the proposal while Shamir is believed to oppose it.

The radio said Shultz expects Shamir to reply to the American proposals when the prime minister visits Washington on March 14.

The draft proposal also was given to Jordan's King Hussein in London on Thursday, the radio said.

Crowding In Prisons Forces State To Begin Early Release Program

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — For the second time in less than a year, North Carolina's overcrowded prisons have triggered a state of emergency, forcing state correction officials to begin releasing criminals early from prison.

And Gov. Jim Martin said Thursday that he would ask the General Assembly to enlarge the probation and parole staffs because the state prison system probably would face more emergencies from crowding.

"We are just in a bind now," Martin said.

"The prison crisis developed over a long period of time and it's not going to pass quickly," Martin said.

"There's no quick fix, no easy solution."

The emergency provisions, designed to prevent takeover of the prison system by federal courts, are stopgap actions that offer no long-term solution to the population explosion, the governor said at a news conference.

Correction Secretary Aaron Johnson, who submitted his annual report to Martin on Thursday, said his department needs 199 additional employees including 77 probation and parole officers plus clerical workers.

"Much of the difficulty we have experienced can be traced directly to the most chronic shortage of support staff in all of state government," Johnson said.

Probation and parole officers are so busy answering phones and doing clerical work, it's undermining the parole system, he said.

Under a 1987 law, the emergency steps must be taken whenever the prison population exceeds the state-mandated ceiling of 17,460 for 15 consecutive days. Thursday's population in the state's 87 prison units totaled 17,568, triggering the emergency provisions.

The correction system has 60 days to reduce the population to 17,280 — 96 percent of capacity. During that period, non-violent, misdemeanor lawbreakers sentenced to between 30 and 180 days won't be admitted to the system, Johnson said.

Additionally, the parole commission will release enough misdemeanor prisoners over the next two months to reduce the population to the required total. Martin said the paroles would be granted "on a case-by-case basis to assure that no early release will endanger the public safety."

Johnson also is empowered to refuse to accept some misdemeanor prisoners from county jails and to transfer back to county jails some inmates known as safekeepers who are being held in prisons while awaiting trial.

Martin said the emergency threshold would be exceeded periodically until the Legislature implements all the items in a 10-year blueprint he submitted in 1986.

The plan took a "balanced" approach to reducing overcrowding, proposing construction of new facilities and broader use of alternatives to incarceration such as intensive probation and electronic surveillance.

The Legislature last year appropriated $29 million for a crash construction program and has provided funds for additional probation and parole officers, but not as much as the administration has sought.

Martin also reiterated his call for contracting with the private sector to build and operate a facility for convicted drunken drivers.

House OKs Driver Extension

RALEIGH (AP) — That U.S. House has unanimously approved a bill that would override the U.S. Department of Labor and allow North Carolina to use 17-year-old bus drivers until June 15.

The Labor Department last week notified North Carolina and South Carolina it was ending an exemption allowing the 17-year-old drivers April 1 because both states had violated the terms of the exemption, primarily by using drivers who had moving violations.

"We got an exemption several months ago, and we should have done a better job of protecting our exemption by making sure that no one who was driving had moving violations."

said Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., who sponsored the legislation with the unanimous backing of the N.C. and S.C. delegations.

"The bill we passed today says that North and South Carolina shall have the right to use 17-year-olds until June 15th under the conditions they have already agreed to with the Department of Labor — that is that these 17-year-olds don't have moving violations," Rose said.

State officials have been scrambling to replace 2,085 17-year-old drivers by the April 1 deadline, but said some buses might have to be parked for lack of qualified drivers.

Rose said the bill came to the floor Thursday night after he conferred with House Speaker Jim Wright and asked that the matter be brought up by unanimous consent. Wright asked if there was any opposition to the bill, and when no opposition was voiced, declared it approved unanimously.

Rose said the bill should reach the Senate early next week, but he said he hoped the Labor Department would reconsider its action before then.

"I hope that the Department of Labor will see that this is a united action on the part of the congressional delegation from two states and reconsider what they have done," Rose said. "If they don't reconsider it, I hope the president, when he gets the bill from the Senate, reconsiders what his Department of Labor has done and not veto the bill."

"It just made good sense," said Rep. Howard Coble, R-N.C. "Now our senators are going to have to get moving over there. Hopefully, we are on the right track."

Brushy Swallow

CHICAGO (AP) — The annals of medicine yield some interesting questions. Why, for example, did an outbreak of toothbrush swallowing erupt in Durham, N.C., in 1986?

Like many other medical mysteries, no one seems to have the answer.

But researchers who looked into the history of swallowing things said there's no reason to think that people in Durham have a thing for doing this.

Yet, the researcher, who presented their findings in the March issue of the Archives of Surgery, could find in the medical literature only 31 cases of toothbrush swallowing ever.

And four of these cases cropped up in Durham, said Dr. Allan D. Kirk of Duke University Medical Center.

None of these incidents involved people with psychiatric problems, although two of them apparently had drunk a large quantity of alcohol.

The other reports of toothbrush swallowing in this country are isolated with one each in San Francisco, Tennessee and Louisiana.

Widow Says She's Innocent

CLINTON, N.C. (AP) — Donna Jones Arnold says her music minister husband admitted having a homosexual relationship with Carl Stufel and that she was forced to have sex with Stufel, but she did not conspire with Stufel to kill him in 1984.

Mrs. Arnold, crying at times, testified Thursday in her own defense for 90 minutes in Sampson County Superior Court, saying that Stufel forced her to have sex with him three times by threatening to tell church members her husband was a homosexual.

"I loved Dan. He was my husband, and I loved him," Mrs. Arnold said.

Mrs. Arnold, 35, of Weyers Cave, Va., is charged with first-degree murder and conspiracy to commit murder in connection with the slaying of her husband, Robert Daniel Arnold Jr. Arnold, 33, was beaten and stabbed to death July 18, 1984, outside Clinton's Immanuel Baptist Church, where he was minister of music and his wife was the organist.

Two State Bureau of Investigation agents have testified that Mrs. Arnold told them that she sent her husband back to the church following an evening worship services to retrieve her pocketbook, which was left near the organ.

Mrs. Arnold testified she did not know her husband was going to be murdered and that she did not plan the murder with Stufel and another Wake County man, Jerald J. Tart, 24, of Raleigh. Tart has testified that Stufel asked him to murder Arnold and that Stufel told him that Mrs. Arnold would send her husband to the church to get her purse.

Stufel, 25, pleaded guilty last year to second-degree murder and conspiracy to commit murder. District Attorney William Andrews accepted the plea in exchange for testimony against Mrs. Arnold.

Pilots File Suit Against Eastern

RALEIGH (AP) — The Air Line Pilots Association filed suit in federal court to prevent Raleigh-based Orion Air Inc. from operating flights under a contract with Eastern Air Lines Inc.

The union's suit, filed Wednesday in U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia, seeks a temporary restraining order against the transfer of the aircraft or their use by Orion.

Eastern, which is in federal mediation with its machinists union, has contracted with Orion to operate some Eastern flights beginning April 1. The Miami-based airline, a subsidiary of Texas Air Corp., faces a possible strike by its machinists and a sympathy walkout by its pilots.

As many as 30 Eastern aircraft are scheduled to be transferred to Orion, which has started hiring pilots, the union said. It said Eastern already had begun shifting aircraft to Orion, which is using them to train up to 300 pilots who will operate the Eastern flights.

The union said the "subcontracting" of Eastern flights violated its contract with the airline.

Eastern has said it would use Orion only if its pilots honored picket lines in the event of a strike by Eastern's machinists.

But the union said a congressional hearing last month indicated Eastern might "go through with the Orion arrangement regardless of whether there is a strike."

Orion, the largest U.S. operator of aircraft for the small package industry, has asked the Federal Aviation Administration to allow it to operate passenger aircraft.

Jailbreak

WAYNESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Haywood County deputies have captured one of the two men who escaped the county jail by crawling out of a hole in their cell wall.

The men got out by squeezing through a hole in the wall created by plumbers who removed a cell toilet for repairs.

Sheriff Tom Alexander said Brian McDermott and Scott Taste squeezed through the 1-by-2-foot hole in their fourth-floor cell and made their way to the third-story ledge of the courthouse. From there they dropped 40 feet to the courthouse lawn and ran toward North Main Street.

Taste, 22, was captured at 1:15 a.m. today by Jackson County authorities in a car that had been reported stolen. McDermott is a 23-year-old Clyde man jailed since Jan. 26 on armed robbery charges.

Drug Arrest

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — A Kinston man has been arrested on charges of heroin possession following a scuffle with officers in which he tried to swallow the drugs, police said today.

Calvin Lindell Johnson, 35, was charged with possession with intent to sell and deliver heroin, possession with intent to sell and deliver cocaine and assault on a law enforcement officer, said Capt. Tom Moss of the Kinston police.

When officers entered the house, a man and several women were in the residence, and Johnson attempted to get to the bathroom. Officers grabbed the man and while they fought, the man attempted to swallow nine packets of heroin and 19 vials of crack that were in a plastic bag, Moss said.

The man also had $2,040 clutched in his fist during the scuffle.

Charges Dismissed

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — The suicide of a narcotics officer has forced Cumberland County authorities to dismiss charges against 26 people arrested on drug charges, authorities said.

Eric D. Majette, 25, a member of the Fayetteville Police Department since 1985 who had been assigned to the City-County Bureau of Narcotics for the past year, was found shot to death on Feb. 9. His body was discovered by another member of the bureau who had gone to check on him because he hadn't come to work.

Assistant District Attorney Michael Schmidt said cases would be jeopardized that involved instances in which defendants and Majette were involved in hand-to-hand sales of narcotics — and where there was neither an informant nor surveillance by other officers.

School Merger

RALEIGH (AP) — Nash and Edgecombe county officials have hired a negotiating firm to help devise a school system merger plan that could make a scheduled two-county merger referendum unnecessary, says an education official.

"When you go to a referendum, no one is assured of victory, and if you come out with a unanimous plan, everybody is sure of what they will come out with," said Charlie Harrell, chairman of the Tarboro Board of Education.

Harrell also chairs the Nash-Edgecombe School Organization Steering Committee, which has been charged by the General Assembly with drawing up merger plans for the referendum.

Election Suit

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A black Democratic group has filed a class-action lawsuit in U.S. District Court charging that Cumberland County's present method of electing officials discriminates against blacks.

The lawsuit was filed by the Fayetteville-Cumberland County Black Democratic Caucus against the Cumberland County Board of Commissioners, the Board of Elections and Elections Supervisor Ann Barbour. Caucus president Ted Kinney and caucus members Clinton Harris and Robert A. Edwards were listed as plaintiffs in the case.

Harris said the county commissioners were not moving ahead fast enough in changing the way the Cumberland County Board of Commissioners is elected.

Election Delayed

WARSAW, N.C. (AP) — Primary voting for the Duplin County boards of commissioners and education will be postponed because of changes involved in voter redistricting, the chairman of the county Board of Elections said.

John Godbold said procedural matters will prevent candidates from participating in the May 3 primary as scheduled. Other races on the May 3 ballot will not be affected, he said.

Godbold said the county Board of Elections probably will announce on Tuesday the new primary date for the two boards.

Applications

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — It looks like it's going to be a little tougher to get into the state's two largest universities this year.

Although they haven't finished counting yet, officials at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and N.C. State University predict the schools will receive a record number of applications this year.

UNC-CH is on target to receive about 17,000 applications, said Anthony R. Strickland, associate director of undergraduate admissions. That is about 1,700 more than last year's figure.

The university plans to have a freshman class of 3,250.

Candidates Differ On Approaches To Poverty

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Most of the presidential candidates agree that new jobs are the key to combating poverty, especially in the rural South, but their proposals for creating them differ widely, from minimum wage revisions to education, enterprise zones and saving the family farm.

Responding to a survey by The Associated Press on how to deal with rural poverty, Democrats Jesse Jackson and Gary Hart both pushed an increase in the $3.35-an-hour minimum wage, while Republican Pat Robertson said there should be a subminimum "youth opportunity wage" to help teen-agers break into the job market.

The Republicans, in general, stressed economic development. Vice President George Bush said rural America "has been strongly tested in recent years," but is "headed back up."

Bush's chief rival, Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas, said that as a disabled war veteran, "I am sensitive to the needs of people who, due to factors beyond their control, may need a boost in climbing the ladder of opportunity."

Dole said he would change the formula for funding poverty programs that he said "discriminate against rural America."

Both Bush and Rep. Jack Kemp of New York suggest rural enterprise zones. Robertson said education is "the turnkey" to resolve poverty in the South.

Among the Democrats, Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee, who is hoping to score heavily in his home region during the Super Tuesday primaries March 8, said, "Our greatest defense against poverty is education."

Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri said his "trade, agricultural and competitiveness initiatives ... will restore economic health to rural America."

Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis said every distressed area in America, urban or rural, could benefit from the same development and welfare reform policies that have worked in his state, including job training for welfare recipients and public-private development partnerships.

Jackson said, "The cornerstone of anti-poverty policy is full employment at adequate wages." He called for a national floor on welfare payments, universal national health care and a commitment to save the family farm. Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., said day care was vital for the rural poor. He said his public works program would give people a better opportunity than welfare or unemployment benefits, and he pledged to "bring farm prices back up."

The Associated Press asked all the presidential candidates on Feb. 11 to respond to the following question:

"The Census Bureau reports that in 1986, when the national poverty rate was 13.6 percent, the poverty rate in the South was 16.1 percent. More than 13 million or 40 percent, of the nation's 32 million poor people live in the South. As President, how would you deal with poverty in general and rural poverty in particular?"

Here is how the Democrats replied:

MICHAEL DUKAKIS
"In Massachusetts, we have made 'Opportunity for All' a fundamental economic goal. We have reduced unemployment from nearly 12 percent in 1975 to three percent today. ... Our ET (Education and Training) Choices program has helped more than 40,000 Massachusetts residents lift themselves from public assistance to real jobs. And the Massachusetts Housing Partnership has helped provide decent and affordable housing for 30,000 families of low and moderate income, with thousands more in the pipeline."

"America can and must do the same. Through a strong national urban policy and a parallel commitment to regional development, we can bring to every distressed area and to every region, rural or urban, the opportunity to combine public investment with private resources and create new jobs."

"Through national welfare reform, we can make the success of ET a nationwide success. And with a National Partnership for Affordable Housing — one that combines a renewed federal commitment with the sensitivity of local initiative — we can end the national disgrace of homelessness and provide affordable housing for working people, the poor and the elderly."

RICHARD GEPHARDT
The Missouri congressman said welfare benefits should be high enough to bring poor families up to the poverty line. Welfare programs must be reformed to give people "the skills and experience they need to leave welfare and poverty behind," and provide preschool education for their children at age 3.

Gephardt supports "higher Medicare prepayment rates for rural hospitals" and federal efforts to strengthen "both our infrastructure and our transportation system in rural areas."

The urgent need to boost employment in the depressed rural South is a point on which Democratic and Republican presidential candidates agree. But to create jobs in the hard-hit region, they take different routes. This story details the candidates' proposals, from training and basic education to rural enterprise zones and increased wages and farm prices.

To spur rural development, Gephardt "will utilize the expertise of local governments, rural electric and telephone cooperatives, Cooperative Extension (through land grant universities), and the private sector to help communities build their own economic development strategies. ... The FmHA Business and Industrial Development Loan Guarantee Program, which has languished in recent years, will be aggressively reorganized and expanded."

ALBERT GORE JR.
"The key to winning the war against poverty is giving all Americans the first-rate education that will guarantee them a job. ... Job training and retraining programs, like formal education, are also vital to preventing poverty. ..."

"I believe there is a great deal we can do to revitalize the rural economy so that fewer families are forced to live in poverty. First, we must improve and maintain our ability to compete for jobs and markets. We need to improve rural infrastructures to attract new jobs. We must make it easier for new enterprises to get started and for small businesses to stay in business. We need strong presidential leadership to open markets abroad and help workers and farm families earn a decent income at home. Above all, we need an agricultural policy that works."

GARY HART
Jay Angoff, a Hart campaign aide in Washington, said the former Colorado senator favors a comprehensive strategy "of promoting better health care in rural areas, higher quality education, more and better paying jobs, a better infrastructure and a greater availability of transportation and other services."

Among the anti-poverty strategies Hart has proposed: raising the minimum wage to $5 an hour; voluntary national service, including a literacy corps; universal access to pre-school education, and incentives for student teachers to teach in rural areas.

JESSE JACKSON
Jackson, a native of South Carolina, said: "The cornerstone of anti-poverty policy is full employment at adequate wages. Punitive work programs aren't the answer for families on welfare. People need livable wages, access to education, training, and affordable child care. We also need strong affirmative ac-particular concern in rural areas because of the distances between jobs ... and the lack of well-developed public transportation."

Here are the Republicans' replies:
GEORGE BUSH
"Opening markets abroad is my top agricultural priority ... We should also concentrate on developing new markets for our farm products at home. I strongly support the development of alcohol fuels. ..."

"Finally, we should emphasize development of our rural economy. America has been hit hard in recent years. What rural America must do is attract new businesses by offering a productive work force and strong infrastructure. To help rural America rebuild itself, we should have a partnership of the federal, state, and local governments, and the private sector. ..."

"We should ensure that rural hospitals are treated fairly under federal health programs" and create "rural, as well as urban, enterprise zones."

ROBERT DOLE
"I am committed to a federal role in helping those Americans who need help in entering the mainstream of society. As someone who is disabled as the result of wounds received during World War II, I am sensitive to the needs of people who, due to factors beyond their control, may need a boost in climbing the ladder of opportunity. For these people, I am committed to continuing and strengthening programs that provide assistance

Presbytery To Rule On Swaggart Case

PRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — The policy-making body of the Assemblies of God will resolve an unprecedented rift between national and state church leaders over the punishment of fallen TV evangelist Jimmy Swaggart, a spokesman says.

"This will be a final decision with no right of appeals," said Juleen Turnage, Assemblies secretary of information. "Our executives feel that this is a situation that needs to be ... expedited quickly."

G. Raymond Carlson, the general superintendent of the Pentecostal denomination based here, said in a statement Thursday that the General Presbytery would meet March 28 to make a decision.

Meanwhile, in New Orleans, three state appeals court judges heard arguments on whether they should revive a $90 million lawsuit filed against Swaggart by a preacher he accused of adultery.

A lawyer for preacher Marvin Gorman said evidence gathered by private detectives who investigated Swaggart will be made public in court if the lawsuit is reinstated. If the judges refuse to revive the suit, attorney Thomas Frasier said, the evidence will be made public in some other manner.

The judges gave no indication when they would rule.

Swaggart, a Baton Rouge, La., evangelist with a $150 million empire and a worldwide television following, confessed to undisclosed sins after reports linked him to prostitutes.

Swaggart has admitted sinning against his wife, but has not gone into detail. What others are saying he has done, depending on the specifics, might best be described as voyeurism, sexual perversion or pornographic acts.

An investigation to determine if Swaggart can keep his ministerial credentials has grown into a circle of meetings with the Louisiana District Council and the Executive Presbytery debating his punishment.

The Louisiana officials recommended Swaggart be suspended from the pulpit for three months, but national leaders have said such a short suspension for a minister who has confessed to moral misconduct would be unprecedented.

National officials asked the state leaders to reconsider their recommendation, but in another unprecedented move, the state refused.

Mrs. Turnage said the executives had hoped to have the March 28 meeting earlier, but previous commitments by some of the 250 General Presbytery members prevented it. The General Presbytery meets annually, usually in August.

The General Presbytery consists of the 13 executive presbyters, representatives of the Assemblies' districts, foreign missions and colleges and honorary members.

New Mexico Has Model Kids' Program

EDITOR'S NOTE — New Mexico's Medically Fragile Children's Program enables families with chronically ill and developmentally disabled children to care for them at home. Health-care officials say the program is unique in that parents — not doctors or bureaucrats — were instrumental in its development and implementation.

By JOAN GOESSL
Associated Press Writer
TOME, N.M. (AP) — Mico Padilla was a baby when his parents noticed he wasn't growing and developing at a normal rate.

"I remember once when he was about 9 months old, I went to a laundry and a woman accused me of not feeding him," says his mother, Elizabeth. "That used to happen a lot."

Today, Mico — short for Dominico — is 13 years old. He weighs 32 pounds and stands a little more than 3 feet tall. His mental abilities are that of a 7- or 8-year-old.

Shortly before his fourth birthday, Mico was diagnosed as having chronic renal failure. Doctors determined he was born with kidneys that failed to develop. His mother also says an aluminum-based medication doctors prescribed for Mico years ago was toxic to his system and invaded his bone and brain tissues. He also has fragile bones and an ulcer and suffers seizures. He has learning problems and his ulcer medication triggers side effects that impair his memory and leave him needing things repeated over and over.

At one time, Mico's bones were so fragile and caused him so much pain his parents could not hold him and had to lift him off his bed with a sheet.

For years, Mrs. Padilla and her husband Fabian struggled to care for Mico together. With three other children and mounting medical bills, it was not easy.

About two years ago, thanks to a statewide program for children with chronic life-threatening illnesses, the Padillas received a helping hand.

Mico is one of 30 children enrolled in the Medically Fragile Children's Program, which enables families with chronically ill and developmentally disabled children to care for them at home.

The 2½-year-old program, administered by the state Human Services Department, is funded with 30 percent state Medicaid dollars matched by 70 percent federal Medicaid dollars.

Ibby Jeppson, chronic illness projects coordinator with the national Association for the Care of Children's Health in Washington, D.C., says the New Mexico program is unusual in that parents — not doctors or bureaucrats — were instrumental in its development, implementation and now its evaluation.

"New Mexico is also unique in that it has a very effective coalition of professionals, parents and legislators working on behalf of children," she says.

The University of New Mexico Mental Health Center in Albuquerque, under contract to HSD, provides the program's case management through its developmental disabilities division. Four case managers — three nurses and a social worker — line up health-care providers, visit the families and help parents determine the type of care the child requires.

Mico was one of the first children enrolled in the program. Today, a home health aide spends three days a week caring for him at the family home in the rural hamlet of Tome, south of Albuquerque.

His parents say the program has provided them with a much-needed respite, easing their frustrations and freeing up time to spend with Mico's older sister and two younger brothers.

It also has eased much of the financial burden.

Padilla estimates Mico's medical bills — including five bone operations in two years and two parathyroid operations in a year's time — totaled nearly $200,000.

A child enrolled in the Medically Fragile Children's Program can receive up to $3,000 per month, and also becomes eligible for Medicaid, says program director Georgia Cleverley of Santa Fe.

The program first makes use of parents' insurance, Cleverley says. If the parents have no insurance or have exhausted their coverage, a special Medicaid provision pays for the child's care.

"It costs about $15,000 a month to maintain a child in the hospital," she says. "If we can maintain a child at home for $3,000 a month, it greatly reduces the cost to taxpayers."

The program goes a step beyond physical care, also paying for medical supplies, family counseling, therapies and other services.

It provides Mico with physical and occupational therapy and buys round-trip air fare twice a year so Mico, accompanied by one of his parents, can be examined by a doctor at the UCLA Medical Center in California.

"The philosophy is that if we can take the child out of a hospital or institution and put him in his home with his family, then his quality of life, no matter how short it is, is vastly enhanced," Cleverley says.

Dr. Stan Handmaker, an Albuquerque pediatrician and director of the UNM Mental Health Center developmental disabilities division, says the program's benefits are twofold.

"First, the family is able to provide care most of the time, but gets a respite," he said. "Parents can do it up to a certain point, but sometimes they need time off to recharge their batteries."

"Second, it provides for a much more nurturing environment, rather than the child being away from the family in an institution-type environment. A lot of technological advances have kept children alive... Now what are we going to do? Are we going to keep the child in the hospital for the rest of his life?"

The program began at the grassroots level when a young mother, Tammy West of Albuquerque, fought for government and private aid so her infant daughter could be cared for at home.

Ms. West's daughter, Nicole, suffered from lack of oxygen at birth and was left with cerebral palsy, blindness and severe retardation.

Ms. West and members of a statewide parents support group, Parents Reaching Out, took their cause to the state Legislature and were successful in persuading legislators to launch the Medically Fragile Children's Program.

Nicole died in October 1983 at the age of 22 months, two years before the program was implemented in New Mexico.

This year, program staffers plan to ask the Legislature to allocate enough money so they can enroll 10 more children in the program.

Shelley Carter, who manages the program from her UNM office, says about 100 children in New Mexico are medically fragile — meaning they have chronic life-threatening conditions, require an extraordinary amount of care and often are dependent upon technological devices to sustain their lives.

Children like Mico.

"It was very hard for us to find anybody to watch Mico in the daytime," Padilla says. "There are not that many people willing to come over and take care of a kid like Mico. I saved 43 days of sick leave and I used just about all of them to take care of him when he didn't feel good."

After staying home for years and caring for Mico, his siblings and an ailing grandmother who has since died, Mrs. Padilla, 39, began teaching special education at a Los Lunas elementary school.

Padilla, 38, quit his job teaching high school horticulture and agriculture last year to care for Mico, farm the family's land and raise cattle.

"Without the program we'd have to find somebody to stay here and we'd both have to work," Padilla says. "Things would have been different if we would have had this years ago. Definitely."

Use Legal Names on Cards

DEAR ABBY: I work in the public relations office of the Hughston Sports Medicine Hospital in Columbus, Ga., and one of my duties is to forward mail to patients after they are discharged. Sometimes this is next to impossible.

For example: Mrs. John Smith. We have hundreds of discharged Smiths on file, but I don't know which Smith is married to John, so I have to go through every Smith in our files to find the most recent patient. If there are three or four, I must return this card to the sender.

I have the same problem trying to find Buddy, Cissy, Tootie, Red or Slim. Our patients' names are listed under their legal names, not their nicknames, so all cards addressed in this manner must be returned to sender — if the name of the sender is on the envelope. If it's not, it must be returned to the post office and put in the "dead letter" office.

Please, Abby, print this so people will remember that hospital patients must register under their LEGAL names, and a married woman uses her GIVEN name — Dorothy, Helen, Esther, Pauline — she is not "Mrs. Anybody." — PAT BROWN, PUBLIC RELATIONS SECRETARY

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR PAT: Consider it done. What a shame when someone has found "just the right card" to let a special friend or relative know that he or she is remembered, loved and prayed for, and that person never receives the card. Cards are not cheap these days and neither is postage, so, readers, please note.

DEAR ABBY: As a longtime reader, I am aware that you frequently print educational items concerning public health.

Here's the 1988 dental patients' "Bill of Rights," courtesy of the California Dental Society:

YOU HAVE A RIGHT to see a dentist every time you receive dental treatment.
YOU HAVE A RIGHT to know in advance the type and expected cost of treatment.
YOU HAVE A RIGHT to expect dental team members to use appropriate infection controls, such as gloves.
YOU HAVE A RIGHT to ask about treatment alternatives and be told in language you can understand the advantages and disadvantages of each.

YOU HAVE A RIGHT to know what professional rules, laws and ethics apply to your dentist and the dental team.

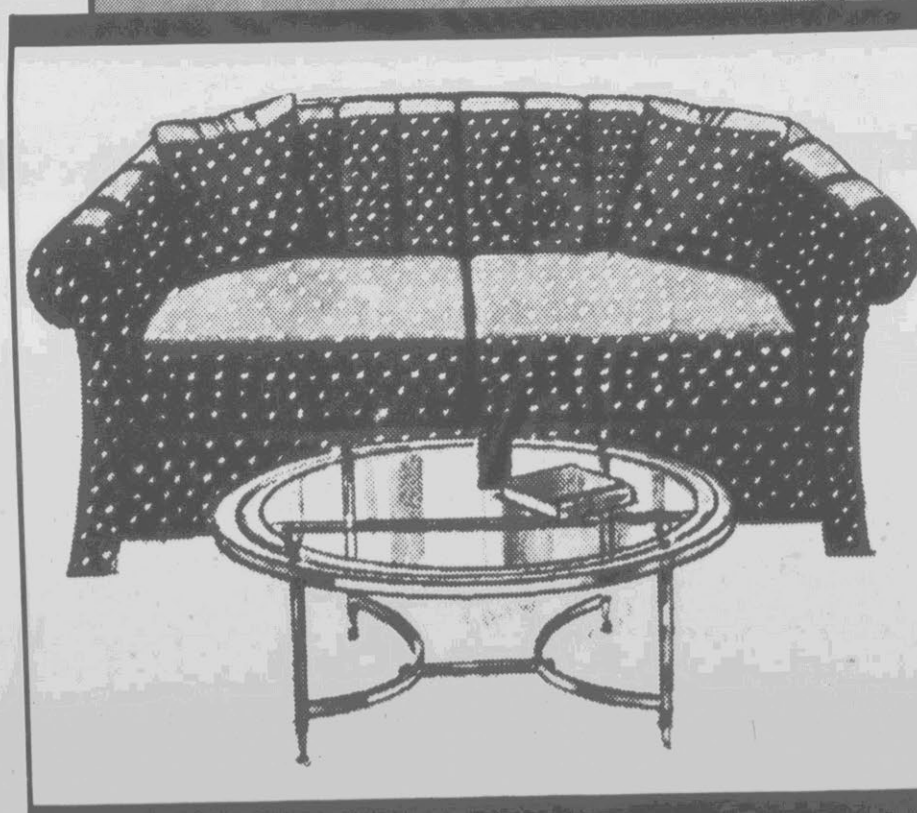

Abby, if your dentist does not have the above "Bill of Rights" in evidence in his office, he or she should have. — CALIFORNIA DENTIST

DEAR DENTIST: Thank you. Next time I see my dentist for my routine checkup, I'll look. And if the dental patients' Bill of Rights is not in evidence, I'll open my mouth — even wider — and complain.

Choir Singer Loves Experience

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (AP) — Soprano Linda Braithwaite is one musician in the Mormon Tabernacle Choir who doesn't sight read her music. But that doesn't slow her down. She memorizes it before rehearsal.

Blind since birth, Ms. Braithwaite doesn't let much slow her down.

"I've developed tenacity almost to a fault," she says. "I'm so used to being told my limitations, I won't give up until I prove to myself what I can do."

She's proved a lot. A talented musician, she teaches private voice and piano lessons. She's conducted church choirs, is a professional piano tuner, and is a certified Red Cross instructor in life saving, cardiopulmonary resuscitation, first aid and emergency survival.

To earn a living, she works as rehabilitation teacher for the state of Utah, teaching music, homemaking and communications skills to the visually impaired.

Her great love as a child was music, and she studied piano. She did not take singing lessons until she was an adult.

"I studied voice at the University of Maryland because I didn't have a piano at home. I discovered there was this instrument inside me I had no idea existed," she says.

Later, when she moved to Salt Lake City, she met a blind woman in the Mormon Tabernacle Choir who encouraged her to audition.

"I had to submit an audition tape, and after that was accepted, I took the music fundamentals test. Then came the live audition, which included singing without accompaniment, testing my range, and a sight reading test.

"The vocal coach played four measures of the sight reading for me. I memorized the phrase instantaneously and sang it with the accompaniment. Then the conductor doubled the length of the phrase, but I was still able to remember it. I guess I did well, because I was invited to join the choir."

With that invitation, Ms.

Braithwaite's challenge began. The Tabernacle Choir performs about 350 selections a year in its weekly nationwide broadcasts and in concert, and rarely rehearses a piece more than three times before performing it. The choir's 340 members rely on their sight reading skills to help handle the demanding repertoire.

"I receive a schedule of the music two weeks ahead of time," Ms. Braithwaite explains. "A reader dictates the words to me, and I copy them in Braille. She sits at the piano and plays my part slowly, and reads aloud the note values, dynamics and expression marks. I take all of it down in Braille."

There's no way to read music and words together in Braille, so Ms. Braithwaite memorizes either the words or music, whichever is simpler, in a selection.

"I don't have any more difficulty with the harder pieces than anyone else in the choir," she says.

Conductor Jerold Ottley agrees. "We have three blind members of the choir who memorize faster than anyone else in the group," he says. "They're generally prepared with their music before anyone else."

Ms. Braithwaite's nine years with the choir have been fulfilling. Though choir members are not paid, the satisfaction in sharing their talent with others is great.

"There's a lot of joy in the music we sing," says Ms. Braithwaite. "It's an uplifting experience. There's nothing like sitting in the middle of 300 voices singing. That big sound is overwhelming."

"There's a heritage about the choir, too. Thousands of people have sung in the choir before me, and I'm part of a deep tradition that keeps growing. It's a wonderful experience."

"I like to meet challenge head on," she adds. "I don't know that I'm any better than anyone else, but I've gotten a lot of wonderful breaks. I'm not afraid to take risks. I decided that if I'm going to be blind, I'm going to be the very best blind person I can possibly be."

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is one of a series of periodic reports by Associated Press correspondents on the way of life in other countries.

By DILIP GANGULY
Associated Press Writer

CALCUTTA, India (AP) — What hamburger is to Americans, cheese to the French and potatoes to the Irish, mustard oil is to India's 55 million Bengalis.

The lack of it has plunged Calcutta and most of surrounding West Bengal state into a "kitchen crisis."

The shortage, brought on by a year-long drought and subsequent hoarding, has triggered riots, police raids and political wrangling. It has provoked debates in the national Parliament in New Delhi.

The government has urged Bengalis to switch to peanut or rapeseed oil, but Bengalis want none of that.

"We cannot fry and make fish curry without mustard oil," said housewife Malobika Chowdhury. "It is a terrible situation."

A typical Bengali meal is incomplete without fish curry and a few drops of raw mustard oil and salt on rice.

"No oil can match the aroma of mustard oil. There is no substitute," said another Calcutta housewife, Sipra Halder.

"We all know Calcutta is a crazy city," said Prasan Mukherjee, "but can you just imagine people fighting over mustard oil and creating a law and order problem?"

The crisis began with this year's drought that affected a third of India's 780 million people.

Dwindling supplies caused the price of mustard oil to jump from the equivalent in rupees of 85 cents a pound in September to to $1.58 a pound in October. (Oil is sold by weight in India).

Then the government imposed a price ceiling of 87 cents a pound. People started hoarding. Mustard oil vanished from marketplaces. Riots broke out.

At least one vehicle was set on fire during disturbances in Calcutta in late October. An effigy of West Bengal's chief minister, Jyoti Basu, was burned.

"For mustard oil, we Bengalis can do anything," said restaurant owner Bana Behari Pal. "I support the boys who demonstrated for it."

The Bengalis' use of mustard oil is not limited to cooking. Tradition holds that the liberal use of mustard oil on one's head before a bath increases brain power and intellect.

West Bengal state is by far India's largest consumer of mustard oil.

Of the annual mustard oil seed production of 1 million tons, about 350,000 tons — more than one-third — are consumed in the state alone.

West Bengal itself produces only a little more than 50,000 tons. The rest comes from other Indian states.

Pitt Quilt Donated

ECU News Bureau

The commemorative quilt created by a group of local quiltmakers for the 1984-87 America's 400th Anniversary celebration has been donated to East Carolina University.

Gladys Howell, who chaired Pitt County's quadricentennial observance committee, formally presented the quilt to ECU Chancellor Richard Eakin at a Feb. 25 ceremony in Joyner Library. The quilt will remain on view in a display case in the library's lobby exhibition area.

The quilt, consisting of cotton calico appliques and piecwork on a muslin background, was constructed with trapunto and embroidery stitching. It was designed and made by members of the Greenville Quilters Guild over a period of several months, and completed in 1984.

Symbols significant of Pitt County's history are featured in the quilt's design. At each corner is a stylized pine tree, done in piecwork, and the center is marked by a large mariner's compass. Other images in the quilt are North Carolina and British flags, tobacco plants, a tobacco barn, maps of the state and county, a pirate's chest, and symbols for education, industry and medicine.

The quadricentennial quilt project was coordinated by Kay Clemens, chairman of the Greenville Quilters Guild.

Other members who worked on the design and stitching were Grace Karnes, Pat and Edward Reep, Bertie Hengeveld, Beth Howard, Juanita Pleuddeman, Lynn Strausbauch, Margaret Phelps, Mary Robinette, Carole Exum, Sylvia Wheless, Mozelle Exum, Charlotte McLawhorn, Betty Ruth Staton, Roxie Waters, Martha Williams, Jenny Hall, Judy Kushnick and Mildred Whichard.

Following the quilt presentation to ECU, Mrs. Howell was presented a 400th Anniversary clock by Donald Lennon, director of the ECU Manuscript Collection and member of the county's 400th anniversary committee.

Attending the presentation ceremony were campus officials, county quadricentennial observance committee members, Quilting Guild members and other invited guests.

REAL ESTATE FACTS

by: Rudy Schulte

THE FIRST THIRTY DAYS!

If you've ever considered offering your home for sale privately, by yourself, have you also considered the length of time you are willing to continue that method of sale? Obviously, if your home sells in the first thirty days you won't need to answer that question. In fact, the first thirty days will be the easy part. You'll get plenty of calls from prospective buyers, you'll keep the house sparkling during that time, and you'll probably feel quite enthusiastic, anticipating the rapid sale of your home. But how long are you willing to maintain this high level of activity?

It is extremely important that you locate a buyer during this critical time of high activity. Why? Because shortly after thirty days has elapsed, all that activity is likely to wane. Then what? Is that when you call upon your favorite real estate agent?

Consider making the most of that critical first thirty days your home is on the market. By trying it yourself, then passing it on to a real estate company, your house is no longer "fresh" inventory on the shelf. By selecting a real estate company up front, the sale of your home may be hastened dramatically. During that first thirty day frenzy of activity, your agent can use valuable negotiating skills to turn prospects into buyers while they're still interested in your home. It's a case of either calling now or being prepared to wait longer later on.

We'll be happy to put our professional sales talents to work for you! Give us a call at 756-2121!

and promote the goal of economic self-sufficiency, not dependence on government aid.
"Furthermore, I would ensure that the benefits of the federal programs reach rural communities. Currently, federal funding formulas, particularly those which target low-income groups, discriminate against rural America. Retraining programs should focus on the explosion in services and information-based industries. And finally, the federal government should use existing loan programs to foster private investment in rural industries."

JACK KEMP
"I believe the best way to make opportunity real for every rural community across the South is to lower interest rates and income tax rates, while focusing new pro-growth incentives for entrepreneurship, investment and business growth in depressed rural areas."

"I have proposed enterprise zones for depressed urban and rural areas. Experience with state enterprise zones proves that federal tax incentives, regulatory relief, and community involvement can unleash a flood of new seed capital, new businesses, and new hope for the rural South."

PAT ROBERTSON
"The costly welfare bureaucracy must be streamlined so that funds reach those truly in need. ... I would initiate measures that would restore people to productive lives, while giving special attention to the needs of single women with children, and the long-term health care needs of the elderly."

"We need a youth opportunity wage to bring our young people into the job market, and more on-the-job training for them. ... The needs of our rural citizens deserve the same priority as those of their city counterparts."

"Resolving poverty in the rural South goes hand-in-hand with upgrading excellence in education. Education is the turnkey."

Robertson proposed launching a private program "to combat illiteracy among America's poor — all without spending one dime in government assistance. ... I would move swiftly to mobilize every resource to provide rural students with qualified teachers and a competitive, quality education — an urgent need in the South."

"With the decline of industrial relocation to the Sunbelt, more creative initiatives must be taken to stimulate the Southern economy. ... Strategies of cooperation between government, universities and business that helped spark an economic revival in the Northeast can be adapted to the unique growth potential of the South."

command officers, patrol officers, people in the streets, newspaper people, bankers, enough people so I knew who this man was," Knowles recalled.

"I talked with minority officers on their police department relative to his affirmative action positions, how did he come across, how did the minorities perceive him. He got high marks from just about everyone I talked to," Knowles said.

His search was over.
On Monday Tesmond was sworn in as Greenville's police chief at a ceremony at City Hall. In attendance were many of the officers Tesmond will command.

"He's very charismatic," Knowles commented. "He'll be a good leader for the department, he'll bring a positive image to the city, and he'll be able to interact with other chiefs in the state very easily," he said.

Meanwhile, other community leaders say Tesmond's appointment was a good decision.

"From what I've seen of him, I think he's an extremely qualified individual," said Greenville Mayor Ed Carter.

"He has an impressive list of schools that he has attended. His educational background is superb, and of course his years of experience in police work I think will serve as a valuable asset to him in this job. I feel very optimistic about his potential as our chief," Carter added.

For further information call Candace Currin at 752-7448.

Pitt Commissioners

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners will meet Monday at 9 a.m. at the county office building, 1717 W. Fifth St.

Agenda items include: a report from the jail study commission; a request for a cable television franchise by ENSTAR Communications; a review of an ordinance regulating outdoor advertising signs along the U.S. 264 corridor, and consideration of a request by the Development Commission to appropriate up to $500,000 for a shell building fund.

Permit Approved

The Greenville Police Department has issued a solicitation permit allowing the Eta Delta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi to raise money for the Children's Hospital of North

Carter also praised Knowles' selection process.

"I think it was a very methodical and thorough approach in analyzing backgrounds and capabilities and I think it served well in identifying 'Mr. Right,'" Carter said.

Council member Inez Fridley said she is impressed with Knowles' selection of Tesmond.

Rams Surprise Ayden-Griffton

By TIM CHANDLER
Reflector Sports Writer

SNOW HILL — Greene Central overcame a 12-point third quarter deficit Thursday night to upset second-seeded Ayden-Griffton, 68-63, in overtime in the Eastern Plains 2-A Conference Basketball tournament.

The win by the Rams insured that neither the top-seeded team in the tournament nor the second-seeded squad would make the finals to be played in Farmville tonight.

The Chargers entered the game as the second seed, while the Rams were the tourney's third seed. On Wednesday, top-seeded Farmville Central was ousted by North Pitt, 57-52, clearing the way for the Panthers and Greene Central in the title contest.

In the girls' game, Cafina Powell scored four points in the final minute and a half as C.B. Aycock held off Farmville Central, 59-57, to advance to the finals of the EPC girls' bracket against top-seeded North Pitt.

The win boosted Greene Central's mark to 13-11, while Ayden-Griffton, who will enter the state's class 2-A District playoffs as the conference's third-seeded team, falls to 16-7.

The big boost for the Rams came when they were trailing, 44-36, with 7:30 remaining in the contest. At that point, the Rams burst for an eight-point run to knot the score at 44-44 with 5:08 to play.

Reggie Atkinson sparked the run with six of his team-high 19 points.

"Greene Central was ready for the kill early in the third quarter," Ayden-Griffton head coach Bob Murphrey said. "We let them hang around though and then they caught fire late in the game and the momentum switched in their favor."

"Instead of continuing to go inside where we had been successful we began to play pretty darn sloppy."

More trouble then struck for Ayden-Griffton. After already losing center Leon Dixon for the game due to fouls, guard Eric Blount went down suffering from a broken bone in his ankle that ended his senior season.

After later giving up a pair of free throws to the Chargers' James Woodard, Atkinson once again soared inside to even the game again, this time at 46-46.

Ayden-Griffton then managed to stretch back out to a five-point lead, 51-46, with 3:44 to play behind the scoring of reserve Eric Nobles, who came off the bench in replace of Dixon. Nobles, who was playing in only his second game since being called up from the JV team, scored all five points in the run and wound up the game with 11 points, nine of which came in the final quarter.

Greene Central shook off the effects of the deficit and with a pair of tosses from the charity stripe by Tyrone Hardy and a 3-pointer from Shay Beaman, who totaled 15 points for the game including four treys, evened the score at 51-51 with 3:15 showing on the game clock.

"I think Shay was the guy that loosened us up," Greene Central head coach Lewis Godwin said. "Those shots looked like they were going to bring rain but they went through."

Murphrey agreed.

"I thought they took control of the game when Shay started sinking those 3-pointers," Murphrey said.

After Nobles scored again inside for the Chargers, Tyrone Streeter completed a 3-point play for the Rams to give them their first lead since the second quarter at 54-53.

It was Nobles once again answering for the Chargers this time with a pair of free throws giving Ayden-Griffton a 55-54 lead with 2:20 to play. Beaman countered that move, however, by drilling another 3-pointer at the 2:09 mark for a 57-55 Ram lead.

Ayden-Griffton's Ronnell Peterson, who led all scorers in the game with 24 points, then evened the score with a 15-footer with 1:09 to play in regulation. It would prove to be the final score during regulation.

Following a Greene Central turnover, the Chargers had an opportunity to set up the game's final shot, but it was futile.

In the overtime period, the lead see-sawed until Beaman gave Greene Central a little breathing room with his fourth 3-pointer of the game. That pushed the Rams lead to 64-62 with only 53 seconds to play.

After Peterson managed to connect on only one shot from the foul line, all the Rams had to do was ice the game at the free throw line, which they did. For the contest, Greene Central shot a sparkling 22-of-26 in free throw attempts.

Hardy added 13 points to Rams' scoring total, while Anthony Jones chipped in 10.

At the game's outset, Ayden-Griffton quickly seized a 4-0 lead by the 6:11 mark of the first period. The Chargers then stretched their opening-quarter lead to five, 7-2, before settling for an 11-8 lead by quarter's end.

The lead swelled back to five at the opening of the second quarter before Atkinson sparked an eight-point Greene Central run by scoring six. The burst gave the Rams their first lead of the game at 16-13 with just under six minutes to play in the half.

Ayden-Griffton answered with a seven-point spurt of its own to retake the lead at 20-16. Dixon led the Chargers' drive back to the lead by scoring five of his six points.

The Chargers managed to stay in the lead for the rest of the half and enjoyed a 28-22 advantage at intermission.

Even with his team's impressive showing Thursday, Godwin is not looking past the matchup that awaits the Rams tonight in the tournament title game.

"Our job isn't done yet," Godwin said. "We've still got to go again tomorrow night. North Pitt is hungry for this thing just like we are so I know they will be prepared for the game. We definitely can't go in there thinking that we are going to win — we've got to be ready."

North Pitt must win to qualify for the districts while the Rams, by virtue of their third-place finish in the EPC, have already nailed down a slot.

Game time for the championship is 9 p.m. tonight at Farmville Central.

In the girls' game, Aycock broke out to a 53-47 lead with 4:47 remaining but Farmville rallied back, scoring seven straight points to tie the game at 53-53 with 1:45 left on the clock.

Powell scored with 1:12 remaining to put the Lady Falcons ahead, 55-53, and then hit again for a 57-53 advantage.

Kim Harrison then countered for the Lady Jaguars to make it 57-55 with 17 seconds remaining.

Connie Raye Lancaster then put Aycock out of danger with two free throws for a four-point bulge at 59-55 with 10 seconds showing on the clock.

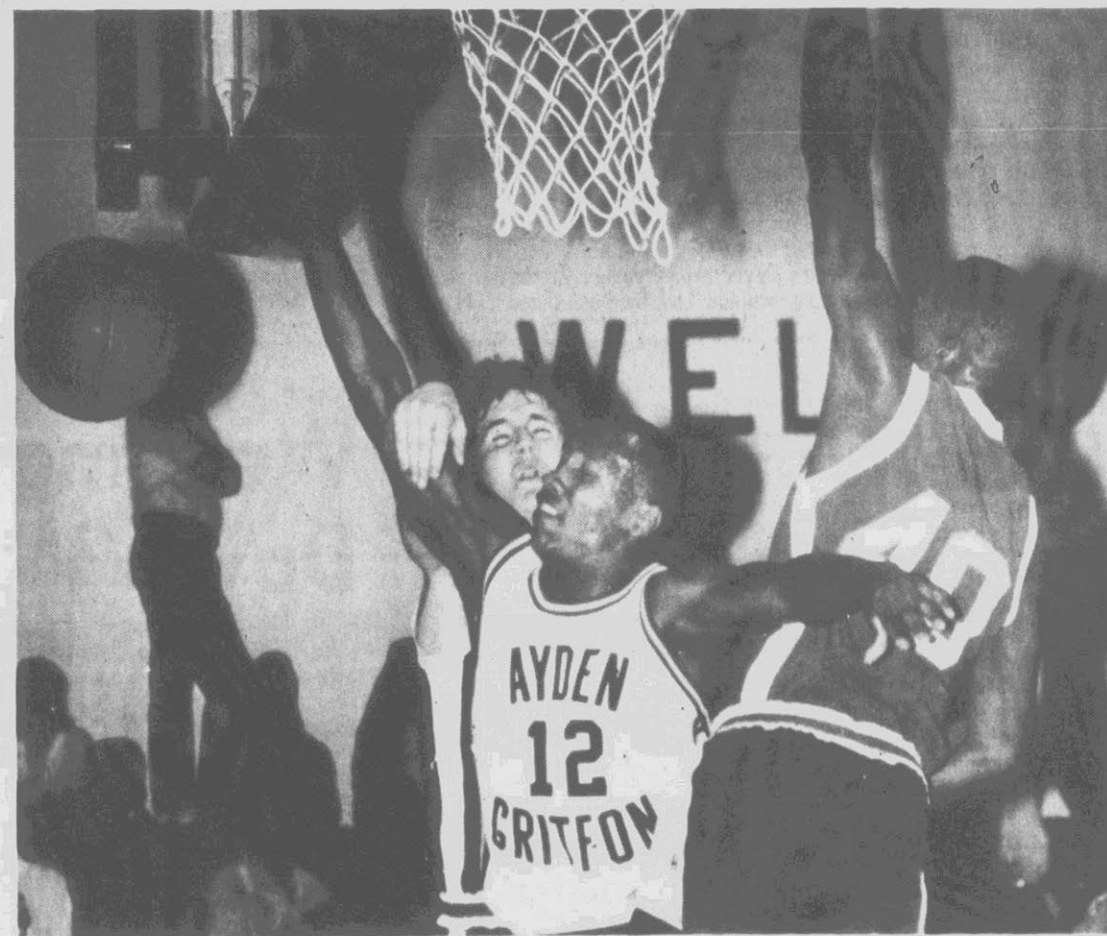

Brenda Reid followed with a basket in the final second to draw Farmville back within two at 59-57, but it was too little too late.

Aycock moves to 17-8 on the year while the Lady Jaguars fall to 13-12.

Powell led Aycock with 17 points while Gail Coley added 15 and Lancaster chipped in with 13.

Reid scored a game-high 26 points for the Lady Jaguars while Harrison added 16.

Aycock and North Pitt play for the championship tonight at 7 p.m.

Rose Girls Rally To Nip Fike

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Sometimes just being good isn't enough. You have to be lucky, too.

Thursday night, Rose High School's Big East co-ops were not very good, but they did prove to be lucky, rallying from 12 points down with three minutes left to pull out a 51-47 overtime win over Wilson Fike.

The victory put Rose into the Big East basketball tournament finals tonight at Wilson Fike against Kinston, a 53-35 victor over Northeastern Thursday night in the other semifinals. Kinston and Rose tied for first place in the regular season standings.

Still to be decided is the issue of which of the two will be the conference's number one seed in the tournament. Kinston officials say that their winning of the coin toss included the sectionals. Rose officials, meanwhile, say that the coin toss was only for the conference tournament seeding and that the winner of the game tonight should be the top seed for the sectionals, with the loser taking second.

Fike, behind the play of Denise Hill, had surged out to a 12-point lead in the game with only three minutes left to play, 44-32.

But Rose scored the net 12 points to come back and tie it up at 44-44. Lisa Leisten got the drive started with a 3-pointer and Tina Smith tossed back a missed shot for a score. Nicole Maxon hit another 3-pointer and Leisten made two free throws. Then, with 38 seconds to go, Sharon Kuykendall hit a jumper to tie it up at 44-44.

Over those two-plus minutes, Fike had missed on two chances at the free throw line and committed several turnovers against the Rose defense, helping the Rampettes to get back into the game.

But even then, it seemed like Fike had the game in hand. Vanessa Moore made two free throws with 26 seconds left, putting the Lady Demons back up, 46-44. Rose then missed a shot and Fike rebounded with Hill drawing a foul with 14 seconds to go.

Hill hit the first of the one-and-one, but then missed the second and Rose rebounded. Rose drove down court and Maxon launched a 3-pointer that swished through with six seconds left, tying it once more at 47-47.

That took the wind out of the Fike sails. They failed to make any effort in the final seconds and the game went into overtime.

In the extra period, Fike failed to score, missing on five attempts from the floor and two from the line.

Rose, meanwhile, took the lead on a jumper from the line by Andrea Rogers with 1:29 left. Leisten then hit on the first of two one-and-one attempts with seven and two seconds remaining to lock it up.

Rose Coach Bill Kuykendall said he was shocked that his team came back and won.

"We didn't play at all in the first half and just weren't in the game. We didn't really start to play until we were 12 points down. But when it came time to play, they really got with it and played very, very hard."

"Too, we got some breaks," Kuykendall said. "Nicole hit a very clutch shot and, believe it or not, it was a set play. We designed it that way, trying to spread the offense and let her take it from the middle. She did all you can ask of her and we were just lucky."

Fike coach Eddie Summerlin was crushed by the loss. "Greenville made a great comeback," he said. "You have to attribute it to their making a great effort. We got a little reluctant to shoot there at the end and it hurt us."

"The 3-point shot broke our backs. I felt that we had played well enough to win and it was a terrible disappointing loss. We took it to them and

Pirates Face UR In CAA Opener

By TOM MORRIS

(Editor's Note: For a complete roundup of first-round matchups for the Colonial Athletic Association basketball tournament, see B-2)

East Carolina basketball coach Mike Steele and his Pirates have worked hard during a tough 8-19 season, but now their season now comes down to a game-by-game situation.

The Pirates open Colonial Athletic Association tournament play Saturday at 7 p.m. against top-seeded Richmond. If the Pirates lose, their season is over. A win gives them new life in the second round.

ECU, which returned no starters from last year's team following the suspension of senior forward Blue Edwards prior to the season, battled through the season with no one taller than 6-5 in its starting lineup.

The Pirates went 3-11 in the CAA, but played just about everyone close. In fact, in 10 of its 11 CAA losses, ECU had the ball and at least a chance to tie in the final minute.

"It's been a difficult year when you look at some of the things that have happened on and off the floor," Steele said. "But really, it's been a really positive year and very rewarding year in the fact that all the kids came together and formed a very competitive basketball team."

But as if those limitations weren't enough, in the second to last game of the regular season against William and Mary, the Pirates lost forward Gus Hill, their leading scorer and rebounder (19.3 ppg, 5.5 rpg) to a broken foot.

And for their efforts, the Pirates have gained the unenviable task of taking on the Spiders, arguably the CAA's best team, in the opening round of the tournament.

"It's obviously more difficult without Gus," Steele said. "I thought some of our guys came through and did a nice job against (UNC) Wilmington (in a 65-60 loss Feb. 27), especially Stanley (Love) and I (also) thought Dominique (Martin) had some good minutes."

"But we were shorthanded to begin with and losing Gus obviously makes it more difficult."

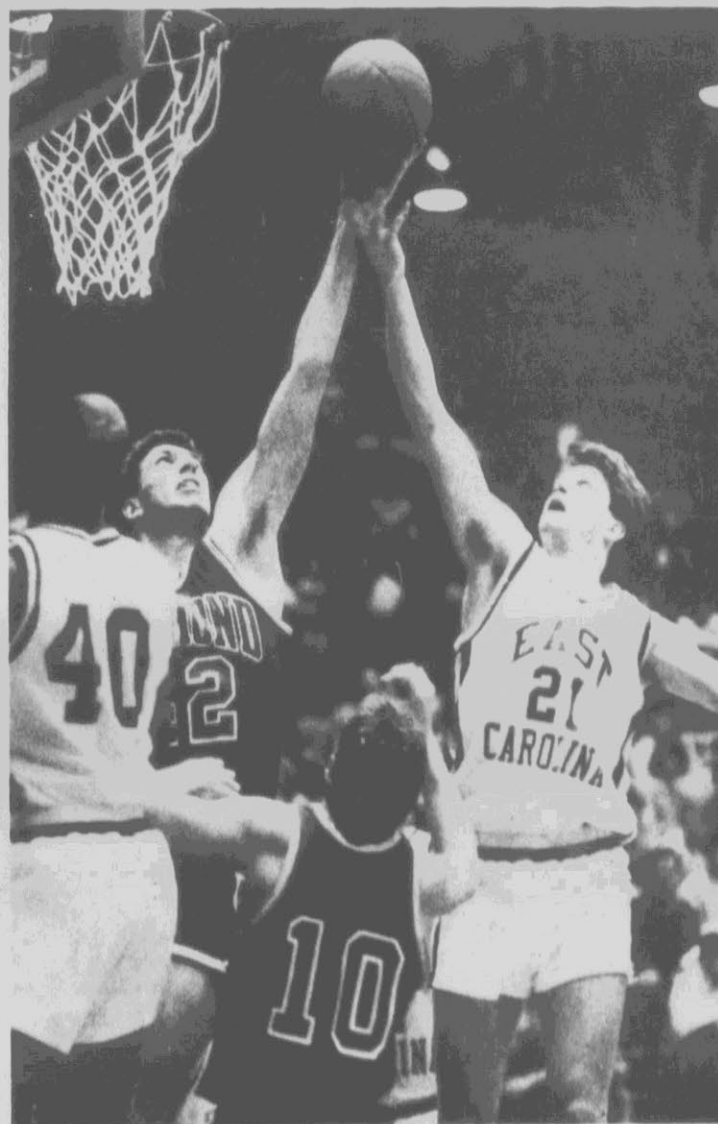

With Hill, the Pirates played the Spiders tough in two close losses during the regular season. In those two games, Hill scored a total of 47 points.

"We've played them really well both times," Steele said. "One of the key factors in playing them well was Gus was a dominant player on the floor."

"So we're going to be a different team. What we have to do is overcome that. We've got to have guys like (junior point guard) Jeff Kelly and (junior forward) Kenny Murphy playing like seniors because by the end of the year, they should be playing like they should next year."

Without Hill, the Pirates will probably start a lineup of three freshmen in guard Jimmy Hinton (5-7), along with frontcourtmen Stanley Love (6-5) and Marc Lacy (6-4), junior forward Gus Hill, their leading scorer and re-

CAA Cage Tournament Previews

American at William and Mary — Noon

The Eagles and the Tribe open tournament play at noon Saturday in a game that could be typical of the whole tournament — a complete toss up.

American finished 14-13 overall but went 9-5 in the conference. The Tribe, meanwhile, started slow this year but have improved as the year has gone on. A good measure of their improvement was a 86-68 victory over George Mason at home.

The Eagles are led by guard Mike Sampson, who leads the team with a 14.8 average per game. Darryl Holmes, a strong 6-7 leaper, provides the inside game for American. Holmes is third in the conference in field goal percentage, connecting on 54 percent of his shots.

William and Mary relies on the inside-outside combination of 6-7 senior Tim Trout (who leads the Tribe in scoring with an average of 16.4 points a game) and 6-5 guard Greg Burzell. While Trout bangs inside, Burzell roams the perimeter and is one of the most dangerous 3-point shooters in the CAA.

James Madison vs. George Mason — 2 p.m.

Second-seeded George Mason may have a tougher time with seventh-seeded James Madison than originally thought, if last weekend is any indication.

The Dukes, who weathered a midseason coaching change from John Thurston to assistant John McCorry, regrouped from a disappointing 10-17 year with a 63-55 win over American in the final game of the regular season.

But still, the Patriots, led by 6-5 forward Kenny Sanders (22.3 ppg, 11.6 rpg), have to be considered the favorite. GMU finished the year 18-9 overall and 9-5 in the CAA.

The Patriots also have sharp-shooting guard Anthony Davis and 3-point shooting whiz Brian Miller (51.7 percent from beyond the stripe).

JMU counters with 6-5 forward Kennard Winchester (16.2) and 6-0 point guard Benny Gordon (4.8 assists per game, 1.9 steals).

Richmond vs. East Carolina — 7 p.m.

The Spiders and the Pirates played two very close games during the regular season with Richmond winning both by a combined margin of nine points. But there is one big difference this time around. The Pirates are without forward Gus Hill, who is out with a broken foot. Hill scored a combined 47 points in the teams two meetings.

The Spiders were the league's top team this season, finishing 21-6 overall and 11-3 in the league.

ECU, meanwhile, brought up the rear in the CAA, closing out the regular season 8-19 overall and 3-11 in the conference.

But despite the loss of Hill, the Pirates, who have had the ball and at least a chance to tie in the final minute in 10 of their conference losses this season, came close to knocking off fourth-seeded UNC-Wilmington in the final game of the season before falling 65-60.

Richmond will rely on the inside game of 6-5 Peter Woolfolk (18.5 ppg, 8.9 rpg) while 6-2 guard Rodney Rice (14.1 ppg) will keep defenses honest from the outside. Woolfolk, though, might be slowed by an ankle injury suffered last week.

ECU will counter with the outside scoring of 6-3 wings Kenny Murphy (8.6 ppg) and Reed Lose (14.9 ppg).

Navy vs. UNC-Wilmington — 9 p.m.

The Seahawks started strong this year but faded in February while the Middies did just the opposite. UNC-Wilmington finished just ahead of Navy with a 8-6 CAA mark (14-13 overall) while Navy closed the regular season out at 6-8 in the league and 12-14 overall.

The Middies may be boosted by the return of 6-7 forward Derric Turner, who went out with an injury Jan. 6. Turner, along with guard Cliff Rees, is a returning starter from last season's CAA title team.

The Seahawks are led by 6-8 junior college transfer Larry Houzer (16.6 ppg, 8.7 rpg) and get good support from 6-7 forward Greg Bender and guard Antonio Howard.

Navy is led by Rees (14.2 ppg) as well as 6-6 forwards Eddie Reddick and Matt Nordman.

Notes: The Richmond-ECU winner meets the UNC-Wilmington-Navy winner Sunday at 4 p.m.

The American-William and Mary winner takes on the GMU-JMU winner Sunday at 2 p.m. The respective winners from those games meet for the championship Monday at 7:30 p.m.

Elliott Drives To Pole Position

ROCKINGHAM (AP) — Bill Elliott is used to racing at the front of the pack.

In the past four years, he has won 28 pole positions and 21 races.

That's why his 1988 start has had the driver from Dawsonville, Ga., talking to himself.

"This is a lot more like it," Elliott said out loud Thursday after winning the pole for Sunday's Goodwrench 500 NASCAR stock car race at North Carolina Motor Speedway.

"I'm just happy to be starting anywhere but 31st and 16th," he said, referring to his starting positions in the Daytona 500 and the race two weeks ago at Richmond, Va.

Elliott drove his Ford to quiet 12th-place finishes in both races.

"We haven't made much noise yet," he said. "But I'm gaining on it. Maybe we can put together a good year after the bad year we've started with."

Elliott's fast lap around the 1.017-mile, high-banked Rockingham oval averaged 146.612 mph, which was just a bit shy of the track record of 146.989 set last spring by Davey Allison.

Asked if he went into Thursday's qualifying session thinking he could win the pole, Elliott replied: "I felt like I was close. I felt I had as good a chance as I've ever had here."

"The thing about this place, the corners are so tight, you slip just a little bit and it can really hurt you, especially only running one (qualifying) lap."

As if to support Elliott's words, the list of drivers who failed to finish among the top 20 in the opening qualifying session read like a who's who of NASCAR racing.

Defending race champion and two-time defending Winston Cup champion Dale Earnhardt failed to nail down one of the first 20 positions and will have to try again today in the final round of time trials to fill the 40-car field.

Also failing to make the field on Thursday were Daytona 500 winner Bobby Allison; Neil Bonnett, who won the Richmond race and an all-star event last week in Australia, as well as veterans Buddy Baker, Benny Parsons and Dave Marcis.

Alan Kulwicki took the outside of the all-Ford Thunderbird front row at 146.220, followed by Ricky Rudd at 145.975 and Davey Allison 145.917.

Ken Schrader and Rusty Wallace will start from the third row Sunday, followed by Dale Jarrett, Geoff Bodine, Harry Gant and, rounding out the top 10, Terry Labonte.

Richard Petty was the slowest of the top 20 at 143.183.

Elliott said of his slow start this season, "I'm not really disappointed, just downhearted, I guess."

"It seems we've worked so hard in the shop and not had anything to show for it," he added. "I'm just trying to get everything turned around. We have to keep the guys going in the right direction."

Elliott, who has won two races at Rockingham, including last fall's AC Delco 500, picked up his first-ever pole here and the 30th of his NASCAR career.

showed what we can do. I thought that we wanted it more than they did — until the final couple of minutes. I'm just so disappointed for our girls."

Rose was beaten in nearly every phase of the game — except the final score. Fike shot a fine 46.0 percent from the floor while Rose made just 33.3 percent of its shots. Rose was outscored by the Golden Demons, 41-29. The Rampettes did have fewer turnovers, 21 to 30.

Maxon hit a 3-pointer to open the final quarter, cutting the lead to just one, 33-32, but Rose seemed to fall apart there. Fike scored the next 11 points in a row, five by Hill and four by Pope, to shoot out to a 44-32 lead with 3:17 remaining.

But the Rampettes caught fire there and stormed back for the win. Leisten led Rose with 17 points while Maxon had 12 and Smith added 10. Hill paced Fike with 22 points.

Washington Girls Down W. Craven

VANCEBORO — Washington High School's girls, second seeded in the Coastal Conference basketball tournament, eased past West Craven, 40-32, in the semifinals Thursday night.

Washington will face top-seeded Havelock in the finals tonight at 6:30 p.m. at West Craven High School.

In the boys' semifinal, Havelock nipped North Lenoir, 80-78, to gain the finals. Havelock will face fourth-seeded West Craven for the championship tonight. West Craven upset regular season champ Conley, 59-43, on Wednesday night.

Washington's girls jumped off to an 11-6 lead in the opening quarter of the game. The Lady Pam Pack followed that with a 10-5 margin in the second quarter, gaining a 21-11 halftime lead.

Washington again outit West Craven, 8-6, in the third period, taking a 29-17 lead into the final quarter. In that, the Lady Eagles rallied, 15-11, but it wasn't enough.

Wolfpack Downs Terrapins

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina State coach Jim Valvano says his team is tired, but that hasn't lessened his pride in them.

"I think they have answered every call," Valvano said after the 16th-ranked Wolfpack took a 74-68 victory over Maryland which helped it solidify its hold on second place in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"From the Kansas game, a game we felt we should have won, to Cal-Santa Barbara, the heartbreak of losing at Wake Forest, the North Carolina overtime game, they have come back every time," Valvano said. "We have not had a slide. I think the kids have had a terrific year."

Last year, the Wolfpack had to rally from the depths of a terrible mid-season slide to win the ACC tournament championship. No such slide has occurred this season and N.C. State raised its record to 22-6 after beating the Terrapins.

Valvano also said he is proud of players like Chucky Brown and Vinny Del Negro, players who didn't come to N.C. State with all-American credentials. Valvano is equally as proud, he said, of Charles Shackleford, whose 14 points in the second half helped N.C. State rally from a halftime deficit and hold off the Terrapins.

"I don't look at Charles and say he is now older chronologically," Valvano said. "I think he is a more mature basketball player. He's been through so many situations, he knows the things he can do, the things he can't do."

One thing Shackleford couldn't do in the first half against Maryland was score. Both teams were reduced to half-court basketball, but the Terrapins took advantage behind Tony Massenburt and used his baseline jumper with 5:01 left to take a 36-29 lead on the way to a 39-34 edge at halftime.

In the second half, the Terrapins went cold and Shackleford made them pay for it.

"Not being able to score coming out in the second half hurt us again," Maryland Coach Bob Wade said. "We built up some really good momentum at the close of the first half, but we came out and couldn't put the ball in the basket."

Maryland missed its first eight shots of the second half and committed five turnovers in the opening eight minutes. Meanwhile, Shackleford scored six points in a 14-2 run that helped the Wolfpack take a 48-41 lead with 11:36 left.

"Our game plan for the second half was to get it inside," Valvano said. "We did and Shack hit the big shots."

It was a trend that Wade also noticed, but his team couldn't seem to stop.

"Derrick Lewis played Shackleford the first seven minutes, then Brian (Williams) and Massenburt took turns," Wade said. "We just tried to keep a fresh man on him. In the second half, they seemed determined to get the ball inside to him, and we were unable to stop him."

But the Terrapins regained their touch, went on a 10-2 run in a two-minute span and took a 51-50 lead on Derrick Lewis' three-point play with 8:21 left. The lead switched hands five times in the next three minutes,

The Wolfpack held off the Terrapins by hitting 10 of their last 11 free throws.

"This was a tough, tough game," Valvano said. "They made everything they shot at the end. We were lucky we hit our free throws."

Brian Howard scored 15 points and Chucky Brown had 14 for the Wolfpack.

Massenburt led Maryland with 16 points and Lewis scored 15 as the Terrapins fell to 15-11 and 5-8. Teyon McCoy had 11 points and Rudy Archer 10 for the Terrapins.

ward Kenny Murphy (6-3) and sophomore guard Reed Lose (6-3).

Richmond, meanwhile is on the other end of the spectrum with seniors Peter Woolfolk (6-5) and Steve Kratzer (6-8) heading up the frontcourt along with 6-4 junior Scott Stapleton. Sophomore Ken Atkinson (6-1) and senior Rodney Rice (6-2) man the backcourt spots.

But despite the problems the Pirates have faced, from inexperience to the loss of Hill, Steele remains positive.

"We've been fortunate in that we've had very few injuries for as many minutes as these guys play," he said. "I mean, here's Gus Hill coming back from major knee surgery and we didn't know if would play a game and the guy plays virtually the whole season and never misses a game."

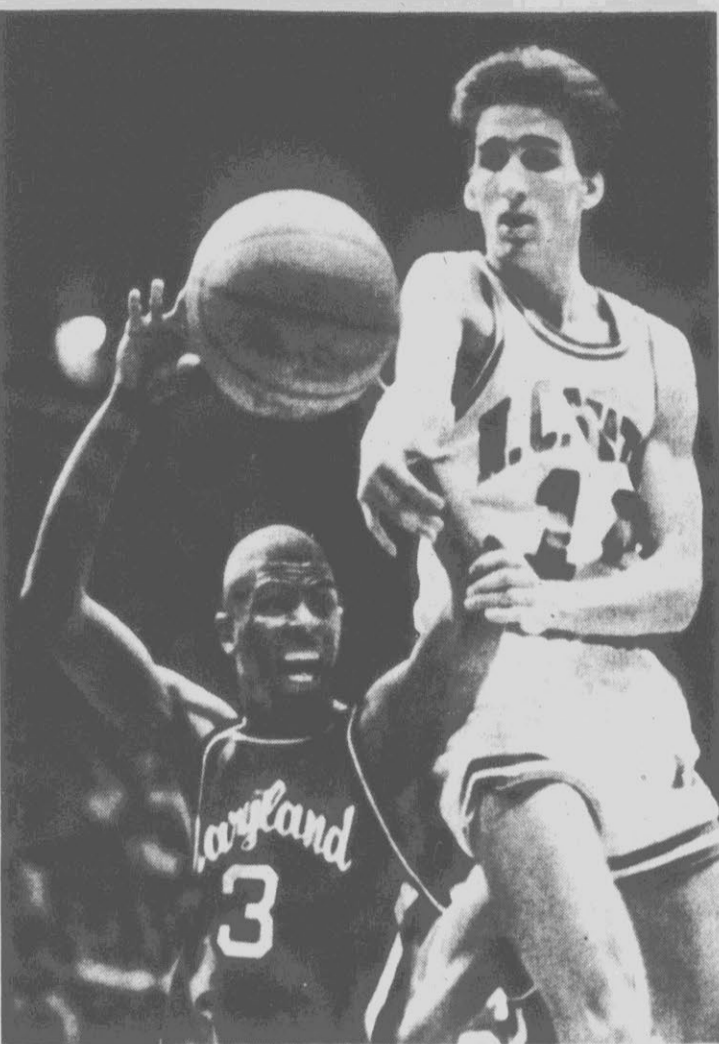

"I think we've set a very solid standard for how we're going to play in the future in that the kids throughout the year played with lots of enthusiasm. They were competitive and they were unselfish."

"That was the major goal coming in this year, not how many games we were going to win, but how we were going to try and play."

Through 1987, the winner of the first game of the World Series has gone on to win the classic 48 times and the loser has rallied on 36 occasions.

Stacy And Bozarth Take Different Routes To Lead

PRINCEVILLE, Hawaii (AP) — Hollis Stacy and Marci Bozarth took different routes to share the first-round lead of Women's Kemper Open.

They shot 4-under-par 68s to take a one-stroke lead entering into today's second round of the $300,000 tournament on the Hawaiian island of Kauai.

Stacy had seven birdies and was 6-under before she double-bogeyed the 17th hole. Bozarth, on the other hand, shot a bogey-free round.

"Other than that nap on 17, it was a good starting round," said Stacy. "I started out strong and that kind of changes your thought processes for the day."

Stacy had four birdies against a bogey on the front nine. She went to 6-under with birdies on the 13th, 14th and 16th holes.

Stacy's approach shot on the 17th went into the water.

"The distance looked a lot closer to me," she said.

Stacy missed a 6-foot birdie putt on the 18th that would have given her sole possession of the lead.

Stacy, who missed the cut in last week's Hawaiian Ladies Open, said she was just happy to be in the running.

"It's the best opening round I've had in a long time," she said.

Bozarth, winless in four years on the tour, finds herself in the same place as two years ago.

Bozarth held a one-stroke lead after the first round in 1986. She finished third, the best showing of her career.

Bozarth hit 17 of 18 greens Thursday, missing only on the par-5 fifth hole, where she made an eight-foot putt to save par.

"I started out hitting it really close — the whole front side I really didn't have it outside 15 feet on the greens," said Bozarth, who birdied the first, third and ninth holes.

On the back nine, Bozarth birdied the 11th.

"On the backside, I got impatient," she said.

"I hit the fairways, hit the greens and made a putt once in a while," Bozarth said. "It was just a good, solid round."

Light winds led to low scores at the 6,210-yard Mirage Princeville Ocean and Lakes course.

Connie Chillemi, Chris Johnson, Vicki Fergon and Laura Hurlbut were one stroke back at 69.

Chocowinity Gains Finals

BATH — Chocowinity's second seeded boys gained a 62-57 victory over Belhaven's third-ranked Bulldogs Thursday night to advance to the finals of the Tobacco Belt Conference basketball tournament.

Belhaven's girls, the number two seed, downed number three Bath, 55-39, in the other semifinal game Thursday night.

Chocowinity's boys will face regular season champ North Edgecombe in tonight's championship game while the Chocowinity girls, top-seeded, take on Belhaven for the girls' title.

Belhaven inched out into a 15-14 lead after the first quarter of the boys' game. But the Indians took charge in the second quarter, outscoring the Bulldogs, 21-11. That gave the Indians a 35-26 halftime lead.

Both teams pushed through 13 points in the third quarter, leaving the Indians up, 48-39, as the final frame got underway. In that, Belhaven rallied, 18-14, closing within two on one occasion, but the Tribe held them off for the win.

Greg Heggie led Chocowinity with 16 points while Curtis Myers had 14 and Dale Garrett had 13.

Tolliver Daniels led Belhaven with 15 points while Kevin O'Neal added 12.

Possinger Named Western Carolina Coach

CULLOWHEE, N.C. (AP) — Dave Possinger, who has guided St. Thomas Aquinas College to a 35-1 record and the No. 1 ranking in the NAIA this season, was named Thursday to take over the Western Carolina basketball program. Western Carolina Chancellor Myron Coulter said Possinger's appointment was approved by the university's Board of Trustees Thursday and will be effective March 14.

"Dave Possinger will bring to Western Carolina one of the truly outstanding coaching records in the nation," Coulter said. "Equally important to me is his commitment to the education of the athletes he coaches."

Possinger has 11 years of head coaching experience at the collegiate level, including the last eight seasons at St. Thomas Aquinas. He has a 298-64 mark at the school and a career record of 338-80.

Possinger began his coaching career at Rhode Island College in 1976, where he compiled a 40-16 three-year record.

76ers Sign Ex-Duke Cager Henderson

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia 76ers signed guard David Henderson of the Continental Basketball Association to a 10-day contract Thursday, one day after placing Andrew Toney on the injured list.

In playing for three CBA teams this season, Henderson averaged 14.9 points and 5.3 rebounds in 30 games. The 6-foot-5, 195-pound guard was drafted in the third round of the 1986 NBA draft by the Washington Bullets from Duke.

"David is an off-guard, who, in Duke tradition, plays aggressive, hard-nosed defense and most recently had an outstanding 41-point performance Sunday," Nash said.

Henderson will join the 76ers for their game against the Bulls in Chicago Thursday night.

The Bullets waived Henderson at the start of last season. He finished the season with the Albany Patroons. He will join the Sixers from the Charleston Gunners.

Toney returned to the injured list Wednesday because of the chronic foot problems that have plagued him for three seasons.

Wake's Sanchez Gains ACC Honor

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Joe Sanchez of Wake Forest was named the Atlantic Coast Conference women's basketball coach of the year, the ACC Commissioner's office announced Thursday.

Sanchez, in his third season at Wake Forest, led the Demon Deacons to a 21-6 record and 9-5 conference mark, establishing school records for victories and conference victories in a season. Wake Forest also finished third in the league, the highest finish in school history.

Sanchez has also been nominated for district coach of the year by the Women's Basketball Coaches Association. He has an overall record of 229-106 in 11 seasons as a collegiate head coach and is 50-34 at Wake Forest.

Coastal Opens Big South Tourney

ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP) — Top-seeded Coastal Carolina takes on Winthrop and defending conference champion Baptist plays Radford tonight in the Big South Conference tournament.

In first-round action Thursday, Winthrop defeated North Carolina-Asheville 63-58, Baptist beat Campbell 69-61 and Radford beat Augusta 96-62.

John Weiss hit three 3-point baskets to help rally Winthrop to its victory over N.C.-Asheville.

Radford pivotmen Ron Shelburne and Aswan Wainwright combined for 48 points to lead Radford to its 96-62 victory over Augusta.

Wainwright converted a game-high nine rebounds into 10-of-10 shooting from the floor en route to 23 points while Shelburne tallied 25 points.

The victory moved the Highlanders, 15-13, into the semifinals tonight where they will face Baptist, which tied Radford for second place in the regular season.

Dee Riley sank three 3-point goals during a five-minute stretch of the second half to lead Baptist to victory over Campbell.

Baptist improved to 17-10, while Campbell finished at 11-16.

Citadel Hoping For A Possible Upset

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Upsets are always possible in college basketball, and Citadel Coach Randy Nesbit is hoping for one against heavily favored Marshall in today's opening round of the Southern Conference tournament.

"Other coaches have said that the tournament is being played to determine the runner-up to Marshall, but surprises are always possible in the tournament," said Nesbit, whose team lost to the Thundering Herd 87-67 and 105-78 during the regular season.

Top-seeded Marshall, 23-6 and 14-2, faced No. 8 seed The Citadel, 8-19 and 5-11, in today's tournament opener.

"I've been reminded a million times we're supposed to win," Thundering Herd Coach Rick Huckaby said about facing The Citadel. "The heat is always there. If it wasn't there I'd put it on us because I think that is the way you make great teams play is to put their back to the wall and say, 'Now, let's see you produce.'"

The other afternoon contest pitted fourth-seeded Davidson, 15-12 and 9-7, against fifth-seeded Tennessee-Chattanooga, 17-12 and 8-8.

The night session starts at 7 p.m. with No. 2 seed Furman, 18-9 and 11-5, battling No. 7 seed Virginia Military Institute, 11-16 and 6-10. The 9:30 p.m. contest pits third-seeded East Tennessee State, 13-14 and 9-7, against sixth-seeded Appalachian State, 16-12 and 8-8.

The semifinal games on Saturday are scheduled for 1 p.m. and 3:30 p.m., while the Sunday championship contest is slated for 7:30 p.m. and will be shown nationally by sports cable station ESPN.

Duke Mascot Offers Apology For Headband

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Duke University mascot Jeffrey Wilkinson says he has apologized to the Black Coaches Association for an alleged racial slur, but believes he is being made a "scapegoat."

During the Feb. 7 game with Notre Dame, Wilkinson wore a Buckwheat headband on the oversized head of his Blue Devil costume.

Buckwheat is the name for the black character from the 1930s movie shorts "Our Gang," which later became "The Little Rascals."

Eddie Murphy has used the character to spoof condescending racial attitudes, and Jim Tobin, Duke's alternate mascot, said that was what he and Wilkinson had in mind when they made the Buckwheat headband.

Tobin said Notre Dame's David Rivers was the object of their attention because of his hairstyle. Rivers appeared on the court early to shoot and shouted a familiar Buckwheat expression, "otay," he said. "He (Rivers) was laughing and playing to the crowd."

"I was looking for something that was humorous and pokes fun at the other team," Wilkinson said. "I had no idea I was poking fun at a group. That was not my intention."

But the Black Coaches Association protested the headband as a racial slur. Wilkinson told the Durham Morning Herald that the protest is "basically taking something that has nothing to do with anything and using me as a scapegoat."

Rudy Washington, executive director of the coaches' group, sent a letter dated Feb. 16 to Duke President H. Keith H. Brodie.

Tigers Again Hand Sooners A Loss

By The Associated Press
Missouri has been giving Oklahoma trouble.

Last November, Mizzou gave the Sooners fits in football before losing 17-13.

They beat them in basketball 93-90 in overtime Thursday night, after No. 4 Oklahoma rallied from a 14-point second-half deficit.

"We didn't play well in the first half and they outrebounded us and that was probably the key to the loss," Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs said. "Missouri played great, probably as well as I've ever seen them play. I don't think we'll lose any national respect after this loss. A game like this speaks well of the Big Eight."

Oklahoma, 26-3 overall and 11-2 in the conference, needs to beat Nebraska Saturday to win the Big Eight title. It would be the first time the Sooners have won both the football and basketball championships in the same season.

"Billy has done a tremendous job," Missouri Coach Norm Stewart said. "This is a good basketball team. It would be easy to make a lot of noise for them to be No. 1."

Derrick Chievous had 35 points and 18 rebounds for Missouri and freshman Doug Smith broke an 88-88 overtime tie with a slam dunk.

After Smith's go-ahead basket, Missouri, 18-8 and 7-6, increased the lead to 92-88 when Chievous made two free throws with 27 seconds left.

Mookie Blaylock made two free throws to pull the Sooners within two points and Lee Coward's free throw increased Missouri's lead to three. Ricky Grace's long 3-point attempt at the buzzer fell short.

In other Top Twenty games, No. 2 Purdue beat Wisconsin 84-56, No. 3 Arizona beat Washington State 79-41, Long Beach State upset No. 5 Nevada-Las Vegas 79-77, No. 11 Iowa beat Michigan State 103-87, No. 15 Brigham Young beat New Mexico 89-82 and No. 16 North Carolina State beat Maryland 74-68.

Smith, who scored two points in the first half, finished with 21. He said Chievous inspired him.

"He motivates everybody," Smith said. "His hard play carries over. He's just a great guy to be around."

"It was a great win for us," Stewart said. "I was really happy that our players came back and played with a little more intensity. Our defense was much better. Except for a few times, we never really got our offense established. If we can get that established, we'll be in good shape."

Stacey King, who fouled out in the overtime, scored 23 points for Oklahoma and Blaylock scored 19.

No. 2 Purdue 84, Wisconsin 56

Troy Lewis scored 18 points and Purdue held Wisconsin to 16 first-half points. The Boilermakers, 25-2 and 14-1 in the Big Ten, led 28-16 at halftime and scored the first eight points of the second half to open a 20-point lead. Lewis made consecutive 3-pointers during the run and Melvin McCants a jumper from the lane.

Wisconsin, 10-15 and 4-11, cut the lead to 40-23 before Purdue scored nine consecutive points to lead by 26 with 11:46 remaining. Danny Jones scored 20 points for the Badgers.

No. 3 Arizona 79, Washington State 41

Anthony Cook scored 15 points as Lute Olson won his 100th game at Arizona. Olson is 291-143 in 15 seasons at Long Beach State, Iowa and Arizona. He is 100-50 in five seasons at Arizona.

Arizona, 27-2 and 16-1 in the Pac-10, led by at least 26 throughout the second half. The Wildcats twice led by 40.

Neil Evans scored 11 points for the Cougars, 11-15 and 6-10.

Long Beach 79, No. 5 UNLV 77

Morlon Wiley made two free throws with one second remaining as Long Beach State gave Nevada Las-Vegas its third loss at home this season. The Rebels, 25-4 and 14-3 in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association, were 72-4 at the Thomas and Mack Center before this season.

Long Beach State, 17-9 and 11-6, overcame a seven-point deficit in the second half as Wiley scored 18 of his 22 points. Riggo Moore's layup with three seconds remaining tied it at 77. After timeouts, Jarvis Basnight in-bounded the length of the court, over everybody's head and out of bounds.

Wiley was fouled by Stacey Augmon with one second remaining and made both ends of the one-and-one. Gerald Paddio scored 22 points for the Rebels.

No. 11 Iowa 103, Michigan State 87

Roy Marble scored 23 points and B.J. Armstrong added 20 for Iowa, 21-7 and 11-4 in the Big Ten.

Iowa outscored the Spartans 18-1 from the foul line in the first half, taking a 56-42 lead. Iowa made 32 of 41 free throws in the game.

Ken Redfield scored 17 for Michigan State, 9-16 and 4-11, which got no closer than 87-80 in the second half.

No. 15 BYU 89, New Mexico 82

Michael Smith scored 24 points and Jeff Chatman added 19 as Brigham Young overcame an 11-point deficit midway through the second half.

New Mexico led 65-54 with 10:46 left, but the Cougars scored eight consecutive points to close within three with 9:01 left.

The Lobos still led by three with 3:05 to go, but Brigham Young, 24-3 and 13-2 in the Western Athletic Conference, scored nine consecutive points to lead 83-77 with 47 seconds left.

Charlie Thomas and Hunter Greene scored 20 points each for New Mexico 20-11 and 8-7.

A New Wadkins Leading Doral

MIAMI (AP) — The same name that was atop the leader-board at the Doral Open Golf Tournament a year ago is there again.

But it's a different golfer this time.

"I just want to see how long I can keep the Wadkins name on top of the leader-board," Bobby Wadkins said after a 5-under-par 67 gave him a one-shot lead Thursday in the first round of this $1 million event.

Wadkins, not yet a winner in 14 seasons of PGA Tour action, is the younger brother of the tournament's defending champion, Lanny Wadkins.

"I'm just trying to pick up where Lanny left off last year," Bobby said.

Bobby's attempt to keep the Wadkins name on top, however, was under assault by a group of four — including the 48-year-old Golden Bear, Jack Nicklaus — who were one stroke off the pace at 68.

Also at that figure, four under par on the windblown Blue Monster course at the Doral Country Club, were PGA champion Larry Nelson, Tom Kite and Chip Beck, who scored the first victory of his 10-season PGA Tour career last week in Los Angeles.

Nicklaus, a part-time performer since scoring his sixth Masters victory in 1986, put a new metal-wood driver into competition for the first time and said that club was responsible for his strong effort.

"I wouldn't be here if I'd used my old driver," said Nicklaus, holder of a record 18 major professional titles.

"I'm hitting it long enough and I'm hitting it very, very straight."

"It's the first time in my life I can stand on the tee and feel like I can drive it on the side of the fairway I want to," he said.

"I drove it well. I hit the irons pretty good and I made most of the putts. It turned out to be a pretty good round," said Nicklaus, who one-putted nine times, including a 10-footer to save par on the first hole.

Ray Floyd led a group of six tied at 69. He was tied with Dr. Gil Morgan, Bruce Lietzke, John Mahaffey, Ed Fiori and Tommy Nakajima of Japan.

Lanny Wadkins, a winner last month in Hawaii, took a fat, double-bogey 7 on his first hole and came in with a 74.

"He's probably home breaking his clubs," brother Bobby said. "But that's one shot better than he was in the first round last year. I expect a good round from him tomorrow."

Matthews Retires

CHICAGO (AP) — Second string is not good enough for former Chicago Cubs outfielder Gary Matthews, so he is retiring from baseball.

Matthews said Thursday his future plans include hosting a radio show called "The Major League Baseball Notebook."

"Over the last couple of years, I've always been a leading player on just about every team I've ever played with," Matthews said at a news conference.

"To take a role as a part-time player at this time in my career doesn't set all that well with me," Matthews, 37, said.

Matthews lost his starting position with the Cubs in 1987 and played only 44 games, mostly as a pinch hitter, before being traded to Seattle. The Mariners did not offer him a contract this year.

Matthews' syndicated radio program will air for five minutes twice daily Monday through Friday on the Sheridan Broadcasting Network. The program will run April 4-Oct. 23.

Matthews said his proudest moments in baseball came when he played in a World Series for Philadelphia in 1983, and when he helped the Cubs win the National League East in 1984.

"That's something I'll never, ever forget as long as I live, because that brought a lot of happiness ... to Cub fans all over the country," Matthews said.

Matthews got his 2,000th career hit in August at Oakland while playing for the Mariners — only the 168th major league player to do so.

In 1973, Matthews was the National League's Rookie of the Year after batting .300 with 12 home runs and 58 runs batted in.

He became a free agent four years later and signed with Atlanta, where in 1979 he was named to the NL All-Star team. He batted .304, with 27 homers — both career highs — and 90 RBI.

In 1981, Matthews was traded to Philadelphia. After the 1983 season, he was voted most valuable player of the National League championship series, which the Phillies won before losing to Baltimore in the World Series.

In the Cubs' division-winning year, Matthews batted .291 with 14 homers, 82 RBI, 101 runs scored and a league-leading 103 walks.

TANK McNAMARA

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — If major league baseball is soon to have a female umpire, Pam Postema appears to be the leading — and only — candidate.

The 34-year-old Postema impressed all on hand on Thursday for her work behind home plate in the Atlanta Braves' 5-0 exhibition game victory over the University of Georgia.

"Yes, I think she can handle it in the major leagues," Atlanta Manager Chuck Tanner said.

"She has the experience and she wouldn't embarrass them (the major leagues)," Tanner said. "I evaluated her like an umpire, not a woman umpire. You forget after one inning that she's a woman. She was very impressive."

Postema, professional baseball's only female umpire, gave a crowd of 2,313 at West Palm Beach, the entire University of Georgia squad and most Braves their first view of a female at work in a man's game.

She didn't draw any negative reviews.

"She was fine. She did great. I wasn't even thinking about it," said Atlanta rookie left-hander Derek Lilliquist, who started on the mound.

"Ladies are in everything else, why not baseball?" he said of Postema, who has been learning her trade in the minor leagues since 1977.

She began her pro umpiring career in the rookie Gulf Coast League and eventually moved up to the AAA Pacific Coast League where she spent four years, 1983-86. She presently is under contract to the AAA American Association, where she worked last season.

The Phoenix, Ariz., resident worked a couple of American League spring exhibition games in 1985 and 1986 and the 1987 Hall of Fame game in Cooperstown, N.Y., between the Braves and New York Yankees.

She was not available Thursday for interviews under orders from the National League office, but will be available for interviews Saturday.

"I kind of wonder why a woman would want to be an umpire," said Atlanta right-hander Rick Mahler, who was one of nine Braves' pitchers used in the game. "But sometimes I wonder why some men want to be umpires, too."

Mahler, however, said "She was good. She wouldn't have gone as far as she has gone so far, if she wasn't."

Tanner lightened up the atmosphere quickly, smiling and asking her if she would like a kiss during the meeting at home plate as both teams exchanged lineup cards.

"She smiled at Tanner, but declined. Then it was on to the business at hand.

"She did a heck of a job," Braves' General Manager Bobby Cox said. "She hustles more than anybody I've ever seen. I think she's being considered for some openings in the league."

Randy Mobley, an American Association official, said Postema was scheduled to handle a full slate of National League spring games.

"I pitched with her behind the plate for three innings in the Hall of Fame Game and today," Braves' pitcher Jim Acker said.

"As a pitcher, I don't even consider her a woman, just an umpire. She has a strike zone and she sticks with it."

'Mr. Rogers' Builds Superpower Bridge

L.A. Times-Washington Post

Fred Rogers believes in building bridges. For years, he has been the gentle friend who tries to help tots understand their expanding world.

Next week he tries to build a bridge between superpowers when "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood" includes his visit to Moscow and the exchange visit of a Moscow children's-show host to Pittsburgh, where Rogers' show is taped.

In September Rogers became the first-ever guest on "Good Night, Little Ones," seen nightly across the Soviet Union. In November the show's hostess, Tatiana Vedeneyeva, returned the visit, stopping first in Washington, D.C.

The two children's shows have some things in common. Both are daily television staples for youngsters. "Good Night, Little Ones," in fact, is the longest-running children's program in the Soviet Union and has had several hosts besides Vedeneyeva. It airs in all eight time zones of the U.S.S.R. at dinnertime.

"Mister Rogers' Neighborhood" is in its 20th season on the Public Broadcasting Service and is carried by about 300 PBS stations in daytime hours, reaching about 7 million families. From 1963 to 1967, it was televised in Canada in a 15-minute format, and aired on National Educational Television stations in this country.

Burt, Loni To Say Yes

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Burt Reynolds says that for a long time he felt it was impossible to marry an actress, but he's changed his mind.

Reynolds, 52, says he'll probably marry longtime steady Loni Anderson, 43, within the year, and that they want to have children.

"It's so difficult for an actor and actress to get married, to fight for the mirror," he said in an interview in the current issue of Us magazine. "Loni has been successful in breaking down all of those things."

Reynolds also said Ms. Anderson has suffered the classic "dumb blonde" misperceptions.

"She's a college graduate, an art major and she's taught school. She's raised a fabulous daughter," he said. "All of that speaks for itself. That's part of what makes me so proud of her."

Added Ms. Anderson, "You'd think that when I peroxidized my hair my brains went down the drain."

Nelson, Manilow Specials Set

NEW YORK (AP) — If you're heavily into the Bon Jovi and the Beastie Boys, you're in probably the only demographic group that won't find something to like in two widely divergent music specials offered by CBS.

On Saturday, Willie Nelson is host of his own network special, "Willie Nelson, Texas Style," a tribute to his home state which he reveals in a soothing hour of country, rock and blues music combined with an affectionate travelogue to some of his favorite Lone Star places.

Then on Monday, Barry Manilow pays homage to jazz and big band music in "Barry Manilow: Big Fun on Swing Street," set in an imaginary neighborhood of break dancers, saxophone players and blues singers, where the '40s meet the '80s.

Manilow wasn't, shall we say, successful in his last network venture, the 1985 CBS musical movie "Copacabana," which marked his acting debut. This time, he sticks to the music. There is no dialogue in "Swing Street," a bluesy, jazzy, coolly evocative, extended music video.

"There's no dumb sketches on it. We did that on purpose," said Manilow, during a recent break in the midst of his two-year tour. "Bruce and Jack and I sat down and wrote a conceptual hour that takes the viewer on a trip down this imaginary place called Swing Street, during which we meet all the characters who inhabit Swing Street, and they are played by the guests. There's no talking except for the voiceovers, and it's all music, because I wanted to do a music special with a capital M."

Bruce and Jack are Manilow's collaborators, Bruce Sussman and Jack Feldman. Their concept also produced an album, "Swing Street," that features the performers on the special, plus Stan Getz, who was in the hospital when the special was taped, Manilow said.

Sussman suggested that this kind of high-style music special is the wave of the future on network television, which still tends to rely on the standard host-guest-song-sketch kind of variety program.

"One of the problems with variety television is that MTV has forever changed variety television, and it hasn't responded to that," Sussman said. "This is something else, it's not MTV, but something that certainly has been influenced by that development."

"Who knows whether this is going to make it rating-wise," said Manilow, "but what was definitely not making it was somebody standing up there saying, 'My next guest is Dionne Warwick, my next sketch is, you know. This sort of had a point of view, even if it was odd.'"

The special includes Manilow songs such as "Hey Mambo" and "Black and Blue," but also standards such as "Summertime" and "Stardust."

Manilow's guests are jazz singers Carmen McRae and Diane Schuur — her duet with Manilow on "Summertime" is a show-stopper — saxophonists Gerry Mulligan, Tom Scott and Dana Robbins, bass player Stanley Clarke and singer Phyllis Hyman, plus the vocal groups Full Swing and Kid Creole and the Cocanuts.

Nelson's special is as bright and sunny as Manilow's is dark and smoky, with footage of Nelson walking around his Hill Country home, playing host to his band members and friends on his golf course, riding his bicycle down to Mona's Yacht Club for a game of dominoes with the locals, and floating down the Rio Grande with jazz guitarist Jackie King.

Next door to the golf course is Willie's own recording studio — dubbed "Cut 'n' Putt" — where Bruce Hornsby does a session. Ray Charles joins Willie at Alley Oop's on East Sixth Street in Austin, and Asleep at the Wheel jams with him at Carl's Corner, a truck stop.

Willie also takes a sentimental tour of his boyhood home of Abbott, Texas, where his sister Bobbie recalls their grandmother tying young Willie up to keep him from running off.

"She staked him just like she did the cow," Bobbie laughs.

"That didn't stop me from running away," Willie recalls. "It slowed me down some."

Blake Honored

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Director Blake Edwards will be honored at the second annual American Comedy Awards with the Lifetime Creative Achievement Award. Edwards made such films as "The Pink Panther," "Victor-Victoria," "10," and more recently "Blind Date" and "That's Life."

The awards show will be broadcast May 17 on ABC.

Still Working

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Academy Award-winning actress Bette Davis says she set aside five years to establish herself as an actress. Sixty years later and a month away from her 80th birthday, she's still working.

Miss Davis, born April 5, 1908, is preparing for her role in a new Larry Cohen thriller.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

"How do you color your lips without going outside the lines?"

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY March 6

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Be sure you do nothing which will alienate others, especially in the business world. Take the time to talk to your loved ones.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): If conditions at work are not pleasant, keep poised and avoid a big argument. Be sure that you drive with the utmost care this evening.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): You had planned a happy, carefree day, but take care of your responsibilities. Don't argue with your mate in the evening.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Several problems have to be straightened out early today before you can establish harmony at home. Entertain guests tonight.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): You may be tempted to tell off an associate who is not living up to your expectations, but hold your tongue. Enjoy a hobby with a good friend.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Don't listen to a usually trusted adviser who could get you in some serious trouble. Use your common sense, and don't overspend.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Get together for a night on the town with a group of congenial friends, but get all you work finished before you go out.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Something which has been upsetting you can now be cleared up easily. Avoid an argument with your mate, and have a happy evening.

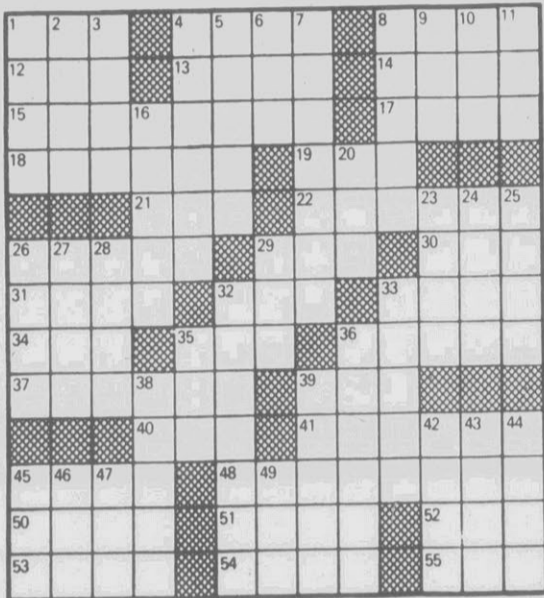

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): A close friend of yours has been acting strangely. Rather than arguing about this, see what the problem is and try to help solve it.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): This morning is a good time to handle your shopping and errands, as you could find some real bargains. Get out on the town tonight.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Don't make any radical changes in your immediate environment today. This would be a good evening to make some new friends.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Don't follow your hunches today, as your judgment is not really up to par. Don't become involved in the troubles of a friend tonight.

This is another hand from the Bermuda Regional, held at the end of January at the Southampton Princess hotel. The declarer was Andrew Gabrilovitch of Vienna, Va. North-South would have done better to double two hearts, but North could not know that. In the partnership methods, his jump to three no trump denied a heart stopper.

West led his fourth-best heart, and dummy's ten won the trick as East signalled in clubs. Obviously, the diamond suit would have to be developed if declarer was going to make his contract, so he continued with a diamond to the ace and a diamond back, noting with interest that West produced the ten on the first round of the suit.

West found the best defense, shifting to the queen of clubs. Declarer held up the ace for one round, then won the club continuation. A Bermuda Regional, held at the end of January at the Southampton strengthened that probability. Unless he was being rather brilliant by dropping the ten from a holding of K-10-x, the specific combination of K-J-10 was more odds-against than K-10 doubleton. Declarer, therefore, went for the endplay.

He came to hand with a high spade and led the king of hearts. West ducked (winning would have made no difference), and East had to let go of a black card to keep his diamond guard. Now declarer cashied his remaining high spades and then threw East in with a club. At the end, East had to lead away from his J-7 of diamonds into dummy's Q-9 tenace. That permitted declarer to get home with three spade tricks, two hearts, three diamond tricks and a club.
