Violence On West Bank Leaves 2 Arabs Dead

By SERGEI SHARGORODSKY
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli soldiers shot and killed two Arabs Saturday and wounded three others in rioting in the occupied West Bank. The army arrested 64 Palestinians in an operation to protect pro-Israeli collaborators.

In northern Israel, four members of a family were wounded by Soviet-designed Katyusha rockets fired from southern Lebanon, military sources said. The wounded were taken to the hospital in the town of Nahariya.

It was the first time in 18 months that casualties were reported from Katyusha-rocket attacks from southern Lebanon.

Nahariya Hospital deputy director Moshe Daniel said two of the victims were aged 60 and the others were in their 20s. He said they suffered light to moderate wounds.

Israel army radio reported that a Palestinian who was wounded Friday in the occupied Gaza Strip died Saturday at the Tel Hashomer hospital near Tel Aviv.

An Arab reporter in Gaza City identified the man as Mohammed Saahin, 32, of the Bureij refugee camp and said he had been shot in the leg and abdomen. The radio report said the man attacked an Israeli officer and the officer shot him.

A soldier was injured in Saturday's West Bank fighting, according to the army. In the Gaza Strip, two Palestinians were wounded Saturday by gunshots, 11 suffered beating or rubber-bullet injuries and 18 were arrested, Arab and Israeli news media reported.

Army officials said a patrol entered the village at about 10 a.m. to quell a violent protest and opened fire after a soldier was injured by the stone-throwing rioters.

"We received reports about two fatalities and, apparently, two wounded among the residents," one

Bush Laps Field In S.C. Primary

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Vice President George Bush stormed to a resounding victory in the South Carolina Republican primary Saturday, overwhelming three GOP rivals with a showing he hoped would trigger a decisive harvest of Super Tuesday delegates.

Sen. Bob Dole was edging Pat Robertson in the battle for second place, and hoping Bush would not run away with the GOP nomination in the Southern contests to come. Bush stood to win all the state's 37 convention delegates.

Rep. Jack Kemp was fourth, putting a virtual end to his longshot hopes. Still, he said, "We're alive, we're going on."

It was a serious setback for Robertson. He once said he would win here and instead polling place interviews suggested his popularity might be waning.

ABC polling showed that 36 percent of the voters described themselves as born-again Christians, and Bush and Robertson both got support from a third of them. In South Dakota and New Hampshire primaries, said ABC, the former television evangelist got half the born-again vote.

Seven percent of those surveyed told ABC said they were generally Democrats; they preferred Dole — not Robertson — to any of the others.

In North Carolina, one of the Super Tuesday states, Bush said he was "encouraged and grateful," by his victory. "Even though we're locked in a close race, these results are going to help," he said. 'I believe I will be the next president of the United States."

Board Hears Expansion Options

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt Greenville Airport Authority discussed options for expanding the airport terminal at its workshop Saturday.

Architects from the LPA Group Inc. of Columbia, S.C., presented four options to the authority ranging in cost from $800,000 to $1 million. The expansion will expand the airport from 5,400 square feet to about 13,000 square feet.

The authority budgeted $700,000 for the project, but airport director Jim Turcotte said the final cost will fluctuate, depending on how much of the expansion is public use space.

The Federal Aviation Administration will pay 75 percent of the cost of public use space, said Turcotte, and state and local government pay 12 and 1/2 percent each. If a $100,000 addition is public use space, only $12,500 is needed from local government. Private space or revenue producing space, such as airline ticket offices, is funded totally by local money.

"We really need your input," architect Joel McCreary told the authority, "The goal we have in this meeting is at the end of it we'd like to sit down and have a hard discussion and see what you would like to do."

Authority members expressed concern over situating the airline ticket offices and the baggage claim area so they could easily be expanded in the future. The expansion plan is designed to accommodate the airport until 2006, and authority members want to provide space so a third carrier could eventually move into the airport.

Authority members informally recommended a modified version of one of the schemes. The plan calls for a new departure lounge and new waiting and circulation area. These additions would be public space and funded mostly by the FAA.

Airline ticket offices and a rental car area, both private spaces, will also be part of the new construction.

Authority members want to combine a concession area with additional waiting area instead of creating a restaurant. A restaurant is private, revenue-producing space, but a concession area is considered public space.

Elizabeth Dole, Haig Stump In Greenville For Bob Dole

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

Elizabeth Dole, wife of Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., a candidate for the Republican nomination for president, made a brief campaign stop in Greenville Saturday as she hopscotched across the state stumping in six North Carolina cities.

Mrs. Dole, a native of Salisbury, was joined by former Secretary of State Alexander Haig and Voyager pilot Dick Rutan at a press conference at the Pitt-Greenville Airport shortly after 5 p.m. She stresed her husband's electability and his record in the Senate of supporting President Reagan.

Recent polls show voters feel Dole is the Republican candidate with the best chance of defeating a Democrat in the general election, said Mrs. Dole. "Bob Dole will be the next president when he gets the nomination," she said.

Haig also said Dole's electability is vital. "Bob Dole is the single most electable Republican candidate of them all," said Haig, who dropped out of the Republican presidential race early and endorsed Dole. "What difference does it make if we elect a candidate because the party bosses say he's the number one candidate, and he can't win?

"I'm with Bob Dole because I know both candidates very, very well," said Haig, referring to Dole and Vice President George Bush. "I've worked with both for 20 years. There's no question in my mind that Bob Dole is head and shoulders above the frontrunner."

George Bush is still the frontrunner in most polls in the South, said Mrs. Dole, but she said her husband is making up ground in what she labeled a two-man race. "In every part of the country his campaign is doing well," she said.

"We're the underdog in the South," said Mrs. Dole. Bush and his staff have claimed the vice president is "invincible" in the South, she said, and Bush is under pressure to sweep army official said. The casualties were "most likely" the result of the army shooting, he said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Violence On Occupied West Bank Saturday Left 2 Arabs Dead

The Arab-run Palestine Press Service said Mahel Wreidet, 25, was shot in the chest and died at Jerusalem's Mukassad Hospital. It said another villager, 30-year-old Rasem Al Kadeirat, died at the Alia Hospital in Hebron after being shot in the back.

The Arab agency also said a 36-year-old man and two girls, aged 17 and 18, suffered gunshot wounds to the head during the Dhahiriya clash. Israel radio said the army clamped a curfew on the village.

Saturday's fatalities brought to 81 the number of Palestinians killed since violence erupted in the occupied territories on Dec. 8, according to U.N. figures.

In Ramallah, Associated Press photographer Martin Cleaver saw about 20 Arab youths hurling stones at soldiers. The youths stayed close to the Ramallah Hospital entrance. The soldiers surrounded the hospital and fired tear gas at the youths.

Israeli and foreign journalists said the army lifted some of the roadblocks it erected on Friday to limit media coverage in the occupied territories.

Sixty-four Palestinians were arrested in three West Bank locations in what the army said was a move to protect pro-Israeli collaborators.

At the Jalazoon refugee camp near Ramallah, 50 Palestinians whom the army command described as "rioters and instigators" were arrested.

An Israeli photographer who witnessed the operation said troops surrounded the village at midnight and imposed a curfew four hours after. He said soldiers went from house to house, arresting suspects according to a list they had.

Brig. Gen. Gabi Ofir, the newly appointed operational commander of the West Bank, told Israeli television that Jalazoon residents "harmed local citizens who they claim and think are (pro-Israeli) collaborators."

Army officials said the arrests followed an incident last week in which angry villagers lynched a collaborator in the West Bank village of Qabatiya.

Nine Palestinians, also described as "rioters and instigators" were arrested in Araba, a village 50 miles north of Jerusalem, where troops killed one Arab and wounded another during a violent demonstration Friday, an army spokesman said.

The spokesman, who spoke on condition of anonymity in keeping with army regulations, said another five Palestinians were arrested in the village of Adiq.

In the occupied Gaza Strip, the army imposed curfews on Bureij and Deir el Balah refugee camps with a total population of 27,000.

An Arab reporter said troops clashed with protesters who raised the Palestinian flag on top of a mosque, threw rocks and burned tires in Khan Yunis. Israel army radio said one protester was wounded, and the Arab reporter said three suffered rubber bullet injuries and 18 were arrested.

Gaza City's Ahli Arab Hospital and Shifa Hospital reported that eight people were brought in with beating injuries, including a girl aged 15 and a 55-year-old woman.

In the Jabel Mukaber Arab neighborhood on the southeastern outskirts of Jerusalem, police ordered all men aged 15 to 35 to gather at the soccer field, the Palestine Press Service said.

Israel radio said the residents were warned not to participate in riots. Three people were arrested, the radio said.

Bush Laps Field In South Carolina Primary

With 92 percent of the precincts reporting, Bush had 82,354 votes, or 48 percent. Dole had 35,457, 21 percent, and Robertson 33,324 or 19 percent. Kemp had 19,810 for 11.5 percent.

With results from South Carolina and Wyoming caucuses Saturday, The Associated Press delegate count gave Bush 125, Dole 64, Kemp 35, and Robertson 8.

Gov. Carroll Campbell, Bush's Southern campaign chairman, cheered the big victory and said of Bush: "He's the man who has the most experience, the most qualifications. They (the voters) like Ronald Reagan. George Bush stood by him. They like loyalty."

Robertson, who has yet to win a Republican primary, made South Carolina a test of strength when he said after the New Hampshire primary, "I'm throwing the gauntlet down to Bob Dole and George Bush; South Carolina is the first Super Tuesday state, and I'm going to beat you there convincingly."

He backed off when the pre-election polls came in. "A good strong second place would keep the momentum going," he said. His problem is that while showing strength in some caucus states, he has faded into the pack in the primary elections.

Robertson's best showings have been in Michigan, Hawaii and Alaska caucuses where his grass-roots organizational skills have enabled him to get his supporters to party meetings.

"We're very happy with what we did," said Rod Shealy, Dole's South Carolina state campaign director said Saturday night. "He made a good, solid showing, without spending a lot of money."

The South Carolina vote was a near-fatal blow to Kemp, who had hoped a surprise showing among the state's strong conservative electorate with revive his faltering candidacy.

"More is to come," Kemp told supporters in a downtown hotel. He said he planned to campaign through the Republican convention in New Orleans but he talked more about the triumph of his ideas than of his candidacy.

"The win isn't always the finish but what eventually triumphs," he said.

In Wyoming, Republicans and Democrats were holding caucuses to begin the process of selecting that state's national convention delegations. Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee and Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts won four Democratic delegates each, while Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri got three. Two others were uncommitted.

In the contest for Republican delegates, Bush and Dole won three each with another 5 to be alloted. One GOP delegate was uncommitted.

Options Presented

Part of the existing facility will also be renovated for a baggage claim area, which is also public space.

The architects discussed possibilities with the members and will make a more specific presentation at they authority's next meeting April 21. McCreary said they will present one or two very similar schemes, and if the authority is satisfied, the basic requirements will be in place.

The airport will receive a tentative allocation from the FAA soon, but will not receive the grants until bids are taken for the project, said Turcotte. Construction could begin in late summer or early fall.

In other action, the authority "heartily endorsed" the city's land use plan. The City Council's Planning Commission will move on the plan next, then the full Council will consider it.

Jack Dufus, chairman of the Airport Authority, praised the city and county for their work on the plan.

"There is no question that we wanted it and needed it badly," he said.

John Reed, CCAir vice president, also asked the authority to consider a maintenance facility for the company. CCAir is the corporate name for Piedmont Commuter.

Reed said he will submit detailed plans within 10 days. The authrity's operation subcommittee will consider the plan at its March 31 meeting.

Funds Available

The N.C. Department of Human Resources, Division of Youth Services, has announced the availability of $134,998.00 in community-based alternative funds for fiscal year 1988-89.

The money may be used for public or private non-profit agencies to develop alternatives for training schools for status offenders or juvenile delinquents. A 10 percent local cash or in-kind match is required.

The Pitt County Youth Services Advisory Committee (CBA Task Force) has identified several priority needs, which include the continuation of the Juvenile Services Restitution Program and the Student Assistance Program.

The implementation of an adult volunteer program, parenting classes and tutorial classes also are considered priority services.

Applications for proposals may be secured from Karen Forbes and should be returned to her by March 23 at the Pitt County Office Building, 1717 W. Fifth St., Room 410, between 8:30 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Project Funded

State Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr., D-Pitt, recently announced funding of $35,512 for a flood prevention and drainage project at H.B. Sugg School in Farmville.

The funds are available through the Mid-East Resource Conservation and Development Project administered by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service.

The Pitt County Board of Education will pay for one-half of the cost of the project and administer the contract. Soil Conservation employees will provide engineering assistance.

Flower Shop Request Tops Council Workshop Agenda

A request to allow flower shops as permitted uses in the MD-2 (medical) zoning district will be considered by the Greenville City Council at a workshop session Monday at 6 p.m. in the third floor conference room of City Hall.

The request by Clyde Simmons, which has been up for consideration and continued six times since Oct. 8, is to amend sections 32-46 of the Zoning Ordinance to allow "florist shop" as a permitted use in the MD-2 zoning district. Flower shops are now allowed as special uses in that district.

The MD-2 zoning district was designated for medical-related uses. The purpose of the district is to create areas in which hospitals, rehabilitation centers, medical offices, and clinics may be compatibly mixed.

Originally, Simmons requested a special use permit from the Greenville Board of Adjustment to allow the flower shop to operate at a site directly across from Pitt County Memorial Hospital. That request was denied.

Simmons then went before the Planning and Zoning Commission, requesting a recommendation from the board to have flower shops allowed as permitted uses in the MD-2 zoning district. The commission unanimously agreed not to recommend approval of the request to the City Council.

A public hearing was held on the matter at the Feb. 11 council meeting. Several people spoke against the request including a member of the Planning and Zoning Commission and a representative of the League of Women Voters.

The Council will also consider authorizing an application to the N.C. Department of Transportation for Section 18 funding to provide for operating, administrative, and capital expenses regarding rural public transportation services.

The board will also consider an offer by Randy and Carol Batts to purchase a section of land currently part of the Teen Center property.

In addition, City Council members will discuss and review agenda items for the regular monthly meeting set for Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in Council Chambers of City Hall.

Agenda items for Thursday include a request by Greenville Properties to rezone two tracts of land on the northwest corner of White Road and the Evans Street Extension; a request by the Methodist Retirement Homes to close an unopened portion of Third Street; a request to extend the extraterritorial planning and zoning jurisdiction south of White Road and being the Geneva M. Jackson property; a request to extend the extraterritorial planning and zoning jurisdiction south of White Road and east of SR 1725 to Highway 43, and a request to rezone the former drive-in theater property on Highway 11, and north of Pitt Community College.

Other agenda items for Thursday to be reviewed Monday include an amendment to the Budget Ordinance to appropriate funds for a computer room air conditioning unit; the addition of a computer programmer to the city's pay plan; a request to establish a 25 MPH speed limit on Quail Ridge Road; establishing a no parking zone on Arlington Boulevard from Merry Lane to Mulberry Lane; an ordinance establishing the placement of new stop signs; the permanent maintenance of new streets; an amendment to the City Code regarding trains blocking city streets; the sale of a disposal parcel in the South Evans Redevelopment area; consideration of tax releases and refunds, and appointments to boards and commissions.

Campaign Stop Made

With Mrs. Dole being a North Carolina native, some feel the state can make or break Dole's campaign. Mrs. Dole would not go that far, but she said the state is her "stomping grounds" and the results are important. "Believe me, I feel a responsibility," she said.

Bob Dole "is the man that has made it happen for President Reagan," said Mrs. Dole, citing his leadership as Senate majority leader. "He's been carrying the ball for President Reagan for all these years. He's the one candidate in this race who served on the House and the Senate," she said.

Dole's number one priority as president would be reducing the deficit, said Mrs. Dole. "He can work well with Democrats and Republicans in the House and the Senate. He has a specific proposal. I don't know of another candidate with a specific proposal."

Dole would implement a one-year spending freeze, she said, that would save about $150 billion and allow time to review the budget item by item.

Rutan planned to join the campaign trip in Raleigh, said Mrs. Dole, but their aircraft caught fire and they had to use another plane, so Rutan became the pilot for the flight into Greenville.

Rutan's nine-day Voyager journey was the first non-stop flight around the world. "We were free people with a dream," said Rutan. "We were free to go and pursue a dream." Dole represents that freedom and spirit and will lead the country to bigger and better things, he said.

Dole fought for Social Security when it was almost bankrupt in 1973 and he has protected Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative plan, said Mrs. Dole.

She also said Dole supported Reagan's 1981 tax cut and has worked to help farmers. "Bob Dole understands agriculture. He won't need a fleet of advisers in the White House."

Mrs. Dole flew to Salisbury from Greenville Saturday evening to attend a Catawba College basketball game. She will join her husband in Miami Sunday to campaign in Florida.

Postal Potholes Anger Motorists

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

Motorists driving into the parking lot of the 10th Street Post Office across from East Carolina University are becoming increasingly aggravated over potholes scattered across the lot.

"This has gotten out of hand. They're not just little potholes, there's a lot of big potholes," said Chuck VanHook, an ECU student.

"Something really ought to be done about this," said Kenneth McIlwean from Greenville, after his car bounced in and out of one of the holes.

"It's a real surprise to see the kind of mess this lot is," said Ann Molic of Greenville. "I was careful. I saw the holes and tried to drive around them. It's not like the federal government not to take care of their post office grounds. They usually do," she said.

When asked about the potholes, Greenville Postmaster Charles Caulk said he is aware of the parking lot problems of the 10th Street Post Office.

"We've received at least four or five written complaints on the matter," he said.

According to Caulk, a report on the condition of the lot has been compiled and submitted to the Post Office's Management Sectional Center in Raleigh.

That center is responsible for the functional and administrative needs of post offices with zip codes 275 through 279.

David Mathews, postal operations associate, agreed the parking lot potholes are a problem and said the 10th Street Post Office parking lot project is one of the top priorities on the list of the department's repairs and alterations.

Mathews said repairs on the lot were originally scheduled for this month. However he said uncertainties resulting from congressional actions relating to postal service financing caused various repair expense projects to be temporarily put on hold.

Mathews said a postal funding committee meets in Greensboro twice a month and approves financing for repair projects. He said he expects that committee to approve funding for the parking lot project in the immediate future.

Thefts Reported

Greenville police said four breakins and thefts were reported Saturday.

Officer S.C. Locke said Libby Mozingo of 600 E-3 Kings Row apartments reported a breaking and entering at 12:19 p.m. Locke said someone kicked in the front door of the residence, causing $2,500 damage.

Officer L.R. said Shirley Edwards of 1007 N. Pitt. St. reported a larceny at 7:21 a.m. involving the theft of a color television worth $580, a microwave oven worth $150, a cassete player worth $125 and a portable radio worth $75.

Locke said Leland Tucker of Hastings Ford reported a larceny at 8:51 a.m. Ferrings were taken from an automobile causing $1,000 damage and the back window of another automobile was broken causing $100 damage, the officer said.

Officer L.R. Kepler said Arrie Houston of Niagra Falls, N.Y. reported a larceny at 405 Bonner Lane at 12:56 p.m. Kepler said a radio worth $50 was taken from the residence.

Skier Said Missing

OVINDOLI, Italy (AP) — An avalanche roared down the main ski slope at Mount Magnola on Saturday, and at least one skier was missing. Two others were buried in the snow but rescued by other skiers.

Authorities said the avalanche, about 80 miles east of Rome, might have buried other skiers who had not been reported missing.

Rescue teams strung electric lights along the slope as the hunt continued into the night. Italian news agencies said hundreds of volunteers joined authorities in the search.

The skiers were hit by a wall of snow 15 feet high and 300 to 400 yards wide. A man and a woman were immediately rescued.

Students Taking Part In Pilot Program

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Communication is a key element in the Lions-Quest Skills for Adolescence Program at Wellcome Middle School, which provides a positive approach to drug education, the facilitators of the program said in a recent interview.

Sunday through Saturday is recognized as Drug and Alcohol Awareness Week in the Pitt County schools.

The 150 seventh-grade students participating in the pilot program this school year have an opportunity to communicate the confusion of adolescence in dealing with parents, self-esteem and peer pressure in addition to alcohol and drugs, Bill Clayton and Del Starling said. They are teachers at Wellcome Middle who guide the children through the program.

Quest is balanced with physical education in the seventh-grade curriculum, but it is not quite like the other classes, Ms. Starling said. "It's not structured like social studies or science or even P.E. There's a lot more freedom" as the students participate in role plays and brainstorm for ideas on how to handle different situations.

"It was designed as a peer pressure thing dealing with alcohol and drugs," Clayton said discussing the origin of the program. Lions International sponsors the program, which was designed by 57 educators and researchers for students between the ages of 10 and 14. Clayton and Ms. Starling participated in a three-day workshop to conduct the program.

Quest at Wellcome is sponsored by the Greenville Lions Club and currently is the only program in the Pitt County schools.

Principal Ed Tadlock has presented the program to the Pitt County Board of Education, which eventually may decide to implement it throughout the school system following an evaluation of its benefits, he said.

And, the facilitators said there have been several benefits. Ms. Starling said a student she taught in the sixth grade was very withdrawn in class. "She would not open her mouth" to participate in class discussion, she said. But, as a seventh-grade student in the Quest program, she has become more self assured. "I also have her in health and she's starting to raise her hand."

Ms. Starling said it also has made her more aware of students who may feel intimidated or have low self-esteem. "I am more aware of the children who need help." And it has helped her be a better teacher in other classes by reassuring students that they can do well in their studies, she said.

It also provides an access for guidance counselors to identify students who need help, the facilitators said, as some children have been referred to guidance counselors.

The students "bring in personal experiences and problems, but not that personal," Ms. Starling said. For example, in discussing a sitution they are encouraged to say "I know somebody who...," or "A friend of mine is ...."

The students enjoy the program for several reasons, according to evaluations they completed after the first semester it was implemented, the facilitators said. There is no homework from the class, and grades are given according to the student's participation. They also liked the way the information was presented.

Negative comments surrounded having to lose physical education classes to include the program. The students attend Quest three times each week.

Seventh graders were targeted for the program for several reasons, Clayton said. Sixth graders may not be mature enough to discuss adolescent emotions, while eighth graders already are well into the period of adjustment.

Also, seventh grade students will return to the school for another year, which will allow some monitoring and reinforcement, Tadlock said, while eighth-grade students would move to North Pitt for the ninth grade.

The program also includes some parent participation, Clayton said. There is a handbook for parents to read in an effort to benefit the student at home through re-enforcement of the principles of the program. Also, the program requires that seminars be held for parents during the time their student is in the program. During the seminars, parents participate in similiar activities as their students.

Low-Income Families Get Phone Installation Break

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Telephone installation and connection charges could be reduced by 50 percent for up to 200,000 households under a program designed to make phone service affordable for all North Carolinians, officials say.

"Link-up Carolina," which began Tuesday, will be funded by companies that provide long-distance service in the state. It will not result in higher rates for other customers, according to Ruth Cook, a member of the North Carolina Utilities Commission.

Under the program, eligible customers can get an installation discount of 50 percent or up to $30, depending on local rates. A Raleigh residential customer who normally would pay $42.75 would be charged $21.38 instead. The discounted charges can be paid in interest-free installments over two to six months.

The Utilities Commission "is concerned that some low-income households do not apply for telephone service today because they are unable to pay installation and connection charges," Ms. Cook said Friday at a news conference. "By reducing these charges, we hope to make telephone service more readily available."

About 89 percent of North Carolina's households have telephone service — about 3 percent below the national average, she said. Ms. Cook said she did not know the exact number of households without phones in the state, although the nationwide total is 7 million.

"We can all agree that telephone service is no longer a luxury," she said. "It is a vital, necessary link to the world outside."

Participants must be recipients of either Aid to Families with Dependent Children, Supplemental Security Income or food stamps. They must live at an address that has been without phone service for the past three months and must not be dependents for federal income tax purposes unless over age 60.

Application forms can be obtained from telephone companies. A local social service agency must verify that the applicant meets eligibility criteria.

Ms. Cook acknowledged the program would not help defray monthly charges for the poor after their phones are installed. She said it would be up to the customers to use long-distance service sparingly and make the necessary spending decisions to be able to afford the monthly charges.

Ed Hipp, another utilities commission member, said the poor would be helped somewhat by a monthly discount begun statewide July 1, 1987. Through a combination of a federal grant and a state income tax credit, people who receive AFDC or SSI get a $5.20 credit per month on their phone bills.

At the end of last year, 16,221 people were benefiting from that program, Hipp said.

The typical beneficiary of the two programs is a household headed by a woman with one or two young children, according to Kay C. Fields, chief of the public assistance section of the state Division of Social Services.

About 68,000 households in the state receive AFDC and the average payment is $221 per month, which covers housing, transportation, clothing and food, Ms. Fields said.

About 140,000 North Carolina households receive food stamps, with the average payment about $90 per month.

Iceland was proclaimed a republic in 1944.

Duke Power Says Land Is For Sale

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The new owner of Jackson County's Panthertown Valley, Duke Power Co., now says it is willing to sell most of the land to the U.S. Forest Service.

Duke and federal officials met earlier this week and are to meet next week to discuss the sale and the route of utility lines, according to Duke and a Forest Service officials in Asheville.

The official, Ralph Bauman, said he was confident the western North Carolina valley will become part of the Nantahala National Forest.

"I feel good in the end we'll be able to work something out with Duke," said Bauman, lands and minerals staff officer.

In the past few weeks, Duke has settled on a route for the power line and has indicated it will sell the rest of the 7,100-acre valley. Duke previously had hinted it would sell the unused portion but has not said so specifically.

Duke angered environmentalists in January when it bought the valley just weeks after Congress had appropriated $6 million for the spectacular tract.

The valley, called by some "the Yosemite of the East," because of its high rock walls, had been a priority acquisition for the Wilderness Society and other groups.

Bauman said the Forest Service still has the $6 million and still intends to buy the land. Duke announced it January it was buying Panthertown from Liberty Life Insurance Co. of Greenville, S.C.

Bauman said discussions now center on finding a route for a 30-mile, high-voltage line that would mar the landscape the least.

Permit Held Up

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A proposed permit that allows a variance from water color regulations for Champion International's paper plant at Canton is being delayed by a disagreement between federal and Tennessee environmental officials.

Tennessee officials say they will allow Champion a variance from state water standards for five years, but will not change those standards permanently.

But the federal Environmental Protection Agency sees it differently, and the two interpretations appear to be stalling a permit finally agreed on after months of negotiations, accusations and public hearings.

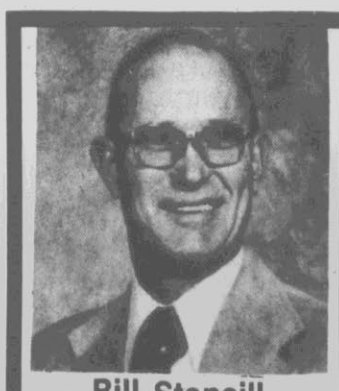

Champion, the EPA, Tennessee and North Carolina have agreed to a modified discharge permit that will allow the plant to dump darkened wastewater into the Pigeon River, which flows into Tennessee. In Tennessee, water standards require the river to have less than 50 color units, but the state has agreed to raise the acceptable color level to 120 units in the modified permit.

"We're not objecting to the permit," said Linda Tidwell of the Tennessee Department of Health and Environment. "What we've contended is that they would reach this color standard that's written into the permit. We'll live with that for five years."

EPA spokesman Haga Thompson in Atlanta said Friday, however, that an integral part of the agreement was that "both states have to modify or change the water quality standards."

Tennessee is studying the EPA's request, but even an immediate decision to change its water standard could take months, delaying Champion's permit that much longer.

In Canton, Champion officials are urging restraint, saying the papermaker still has no permit.

Treatment Ordered

HIGH POINT (AP) — A Guilford County judge has ordered a psychiatric evaluation for a High Point man charged with strangling his 3-year-old son, but the man's mother says he should have been helped long ago.

"Now they want to send him to Dorothea Dix to see if he's crazy," said Linda Locklear, who found her grandson strangled Thursday morning. "I did tell them he needed to be in the hospital. I believe they could have helped him."

Ms. Locklear's son, Timothy Garfield Morgan, 20, was transferred Friday to Dorothea Dix Hospital in Raleigh after a hearing in Guilford District Court. Judge J. Bruce Morton ordered doctors to determine if Morgan is competent to stand trial on a first-degree murder charge and to learn Morgan's mental state when his son, Michael J. Morgan, was killed.

Morgan did not speak during the hearing, at which a probable cause hearing was set for March 16.

Turtle Program

FORT FISHER, N.C. (AP) — If sea turtles become extinct in the Atlantic Ocean and Gulf of Mexico, it won't be because biologists aren't trying to save them.

Sea turtle experts told about 250 fellow biologists during a national conference last weekend at the North Carolina Aquarium that increased use of turtle excluder devices by the commercial shrimping industry is a key way to protect the turtles from drowning in shrimp trawls.

Charles Oravetz of the National Marine Fisheries Service, St. Petersburg, Fla., said biologists who work with turtles and document strandings should present their information to lawmakers as proof that the TEDs may save endangered turtles.

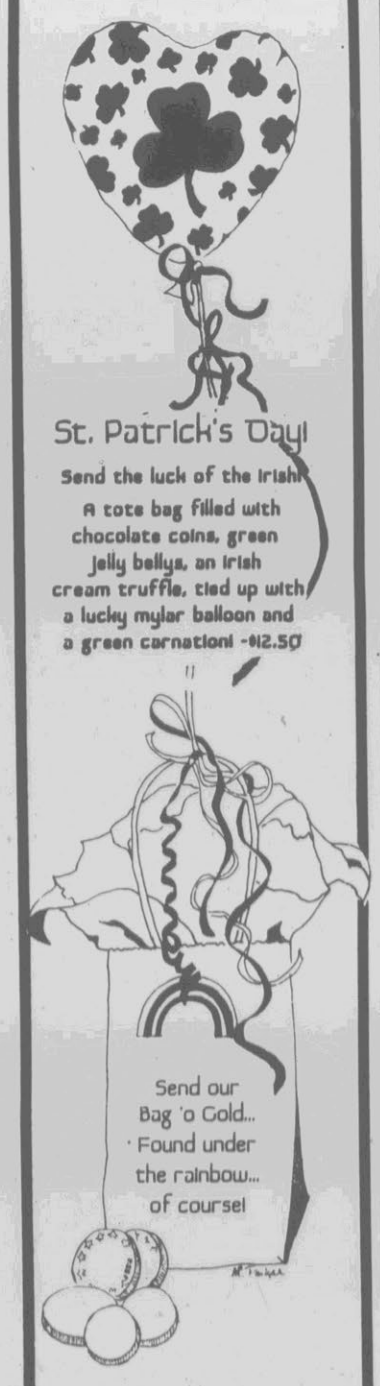

The national Marine Fisheries Service has enacted regulations that require TEDs to be used in certain seasons.

Voting Allowed

RALEIGH (AP) — Unaffiliated voters should plan to participate in the Republican presidential primary Tuesday, say officials with the state GOP and the state Board of Elections said.

The officials are giving the go-ahead to the GOP's plan to open its primary to 132,000 unaffiliated voters although they are awaiting word on whether the U.S. Justice Department will approve the plan.

"Instructions to the county boards are to allow unaffiliated voters to vote in the Tuesday primary," said Robert N. Hunter, chairman of the elections board. "Until we receive a court order to the contrary, that is what we intend to do."

Heart Patient Throws A Party After Beating Survival Odds

Those 12 doctors, along with a few hundred other people, are among Foushee's closest friends. They were all invited to a party for the retired grocer Saturday.

"It's a lot cheaper than a funeral," said Foushee, 67. "And a heck of a lot more joyous.

"I kept telling everybody that if I got out of this alive, we'd have a big recovery party. Everyone thought my time had come," he said. "After I got well, all the nurses came in and said 'If there ever was a miracle, you were one.'"

Foushee almost didn't come out alive. After he underwent triple-bypass heart surgery last December, his lung nearly collapsed, his kidneys malfunctioned and he developed double pneumonia and eight bleeding ulcers.

Three times doctors called in his family to Presbyterian Hospital, expecting him to die any minute. But he didn't.

About 370 people were invited to the gymnasium at Mulberry Baptist Church for prime rib and all the trimmings, shrimp salad, cheesecake, clogging, singing and a little praying.

Invited were his doctors, nurses, aides, a hospital janitor, patients he befriended, old friends, family and strangers. Mayor Sue Myrick planned to go. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., Foushee's political hero, was invited, but says he couldn't make it.

"Everyone he comes into contact, he asks to his party," said Frances Query, a family friend. "It doesn't matter if he just met them."

Days before entering Presbyterian, Foushee had been to Dallas to be with his old unit from George Patton's army. Then he took two Germans — children of friends he'd made during the war — to Washington.

Shortly before Christmas, Foushee returned home short of breath.

Later doctors would tell him that one artery to his heart was completely blocked, another 95 percent blocked and a third 60 percent blocked.

After daughter Melanie wheeled him into Presbyterian Hospital, the last thing Foushee remembers is seeing an old friend, also with a bum heart.

The friend — he's coming to the party, too — had surgery and went home after eight days.

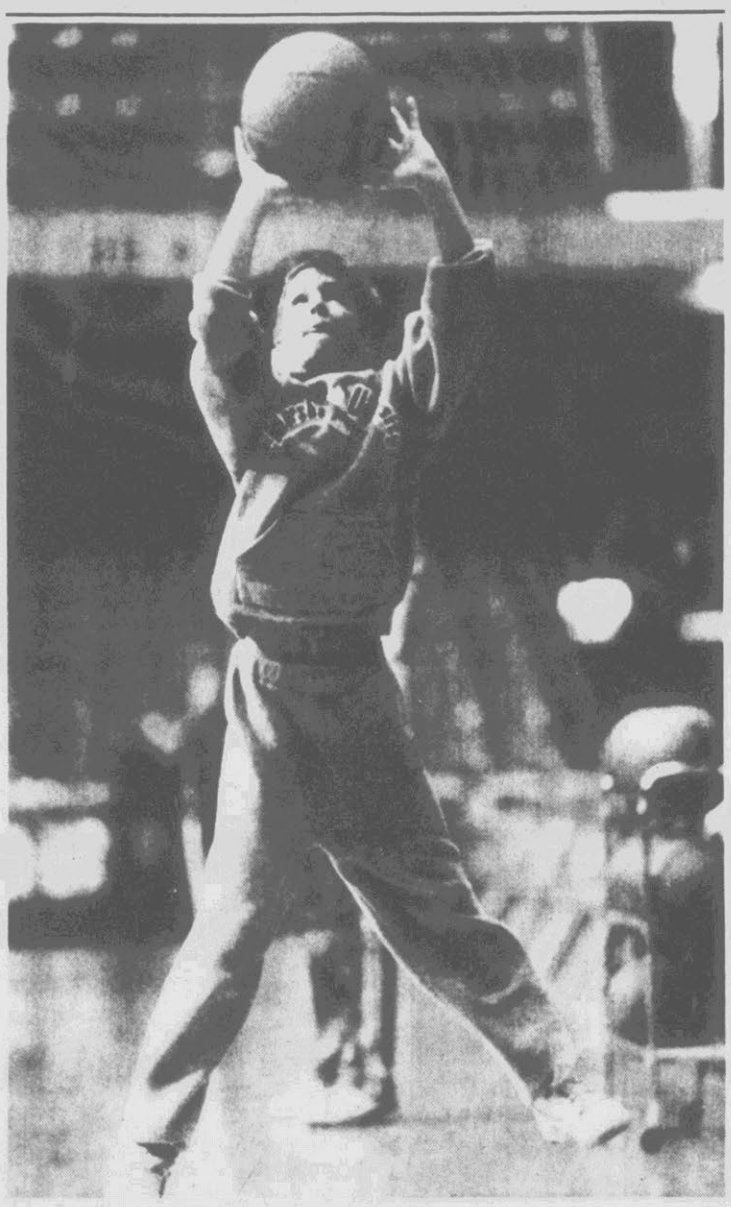

Foushee didn't leave until Feb. 9, 44 days after he was admitted.

"I was out of it for all that time," Foushee said.

So out of it, he couldn't speak, didn't know his name or what city he was in for a month.

There's a reason why so many people take an interest in this one man's recovery — he never meets a stranger.

Swaggart Team Cuts Work Force

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Jimmy Swaggart's admission of sin and allegations of sexual misconduct have caused a sharp drop in donations, forcing his ministry to lay off 100 workers and halt construction work, a spokesman said.

"Obviously these layoffs are due to what transpired," said Gus Weill, whose public relations firm works for Swaggart. "We're not looking for an alibi ... (to) gild the lily."

Louisiana leaders of the Assemblies of God have confirmed seeing photographs of Swaggart, one of the nation's most popular television evangelists, with a known prostitute at a New Orleans-area motel.

A woman who claims to be that woman said he paid her to pose naked for him.

Weill said Friday he was unsure how far donations had dropped since Swaggart's tearful admission to followers Feb. 21. Telephone calls to the ministry were not returned.

The most recent construction work was for a dormitory and offices at the Jimmy Swaggart Bible College. Now, the only work planned at the site is getting it in shape to shut down work.

"These steps are being taken as a prudent precaution to await an evaluation of public support for the activities of Jimmy Swaggart Ministries," he said.

Swaggart Ministries employees began getting pink slips Thursday. Seventy full-time employees and 30 contract or part-time employees were let go, he said. The ministry has about 1,200 employees.

The Jimmy Swaggart Ministries took in $141.6 million in 1986 — about $500,000 a day — according to figures released by the ministries in July 1987.

More than 90 percent, $128.5 million of the 1986 revenues, came as contributions. The rest came from sales of Bibles, books, records and cassette tapes of sermons and songs by Swaggart, whose television program reaches 150 countries.

Last week the Louisiana Council of the Pentecostal church suspended Swaggart from the pulpit for three months.

Meanwhile, psychologists analyzing Swaggart's fall from grace told the Los Angeles Times in an article published Saturday they believe his evangelizing was a therapeutic way to confront a battle with sinful tendencies.

"I would have to conclude that for years he has been struggling with his own lust and impulses. It's all theory, but my hunch is that people who preach angrily and repeatedly are trying to work out their inner conflicts," said psychologist Bruce Narramore, dean of Psychology at Biola University, an evangelical school in La Mirada.

Swaggart has condemned such behavior as dancing, public swimming and movie-going as arousing sexual desires. In a book published in October, he wrote the Bible contains four definitions of "fornication," one being "consorting with prostitutes."

During this public hearing, objections or suggestions will be duly considered by the Planning and Zoning Commission, and the general public is invited to attend.

PLANNING OFFICE
CITY OF GREENVILLE, NC

NTSB: Jet's Engine Didn't Malfunction

DENVER (AP) — Engine failure has been ruled out as a contributing cause in the crash of a Continental Airlines jet that rolled over on its back just after taking off from Denver's airport, killing 28 people, federal investigators say.

The National Transportation Safety Board is scheduled to hold four days of hearings this week in suburban Golden on the Nov. 15 crash of Continental Flight 1713.

"There's just going to be no discussion about the engines. I think everyone agrees the engines are not an issue in this investigation," NTSB spokesman Ted Lopatkiewicz said. "There's no evidence of malfunction before the loss of control of the aircraft."

The DC-9, powered by two Pratt & Whitney JT8D-7 engines, had just lifted off the runway during a snowstorm when it rolled over and crashed upside down.

The safety board is planning to examine the experience of the jet's pilots, turbulence from another jet that was landing on an adjacent runway and wing icing among potential factors, Lopatkiewicz said.

Investigators have called 29 witnesses, including some of the 54 survivors of the crash. After the hearings, the board may take several more months before reaching a conclusion on the cause of the crash.

"There is a tremendous amount more of work that has to be done in the months ahead," Continental spokesman Bruce Hicks said. "I don't expect that you're going to have any member, anybody at that hearing that will proffer a probable cause finding."

Lopatkiewicz said the jet's engines were torn down and the results showed they were producing full power from the time the plane took off until it crashed.

The flight data recorder had "burps" or what were considered compressor stalls within the jet turbines. But Lopatkiewicz said such stalls can occur when the air flow into an engine is interrupted.

"When a plane loses control, then you start getting compressor stalls because the air is no longer flowing properly into it," he said.

Four Arraigned In Officer's Death

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the four men who allegedly plotted the point-blank shooting of a rookie police officer guarding a witness' house is a suspect in two other drug-related murders, police said Saturday.

Commissioner Benjamin Ward said police believe a major drug dealer ordered the hit. The New York Post quoted sources Saturday as saying the suspects received "a few hundred bucks" to carry out a contract on the officer.

The Daily News said one of the four men arrested allegedly danced in the street after the killing, later boasting: "Did you see his blue eyes? Did you see his blue eyes! Did you see his brains?"

Todd Scott, 19, was arraigned late Friday with Scott Cobb, 24, and Philip Copeland, 22, on second-degree murder charges in the death of Officer Edward Byrne.

The fourth defendant, David McClary, 22, was arraigned Saturday on the same charges, said Richard Piperno, spokesman for the Queens district attorney. All four pleaded innocent and were ordered held without bail.

Byrne, 22, was gunned down Feb. 26 while sitting in a patrol car guarding the home of a man who had complained about crack dealing in the South Jamaica section of Queens.

Records show Scott is wanted for the murder of Michelle Garland, 23, of South Jamaica, a convicted prostitute who reportedly owed drug dealers money. She was found shot to death Nov. 18 in Greenwich, Conn.

Scott also is the suspect in the December murder of Crystal Bybum, 21, whose body was found dumped on a Queens street, police say.

Detectives picked up Scott, 19, and Cobb, 24, in Queens on Thursday, Ward said.

McClary, of Queens, surrendered Friday. Copeland, of Brooklyn, was arrested late Friday at the Rikers Island city prison, where he was being held on an unrelated charge.

The arrests followed a weeklong investigation that included a roundup of 294 suspected drug dealers in Queens.

"We believe the four were acting on the direction of a high-level drug dealer, aware of the round-the-clock police protection of a witness ...," said Ward.

Ward told reporters the suspects met Feb. 25 to plan the murder. Police alleged that Copeland was at the planning session, but not the murder scene.

Bush Looks For Super Tuesday Voting To Provide Momentum

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer

Vice President George Bush, hoping to set off a southern stampede in South Carolina, is out to grab a commanding lead over Bob Dole and the Republican presidential field in Super Tuesday primaries. Democrats are battling at close quarters in a volatile, four-way race marked by regional and racial splits.

Both campaigns explode this week into multi-state contests for convention delegates — 1,307 Democratic and 712 Republican — that make February's battles in Iowa and New Hampshire seem like relics of a simpler era. Gone is the day of coffee shop campaigning, replaced by television commercials costing millions of dollars — and lasting 30 seconds.

With 21 contests on the Democratic side, many of them in Southern and border states, this is the week that Jesse Jackson's black supporters begin voting in substantial numbers. Jackson leads the Democratic field in some regional polls, and rivals say he may win as many as five or six states and 300 or so delegates.

It is also the week that Sen. Albert Gore Jr. hopes to redeem his Southern strategy and emerge as a serious contender for the industrial state battles that lie ahead. His Super Tuesday base is at home in Tennessee and next-door in Kentucky, but there were signs Saturday of trouble in the bigger states of Florida and Texas.

It is also the week that Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis and Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt, the two best performers in Midwestern and New England contests that have gone before, resume their increasingly heated battle on a broader, regional scale. Each has attacked the other in speeches and television commercials in the run up to Super Tuesday.

Dukakis, the best-financed Democrat, hopes to win in Florida and perhaps elsewhere in the South. He is counting on victories in Maryland, Washington state's caucuses and in Rhode Island and Massachusetts to give him the delegate lead after the ballots are counted.

Gephardt begins with his home base of Missouri, and has highest hopes in Oklahoma. His goal is to defeat Gore in enough states to drive him from the race.

All contenders worked their way across Southern and border states on Saturday, while their television commercials played on.

Bush hoped for a decisive victory in the South Carolina primary that could burnish his already excellent chances on Tuesday.

Dole and Gore sounded like men whose fortunes were fading. In what sounded like a Super Tuesday concession of defeat, Dole's aides began touting their chances in Illinois, which votes on March 15.

A senior adviser to Gore said the chances were "extraordinarily remote" that the Tennessee senator could carry Texas or Florida — the two biggest states involved in Super Tuesday contests. This aide, speaking anonymously, said Gore was hoping to deny Gephardt a victory in either of those two states.

So muddled is the Democratic race that it may be possible for Super Tuesday to offer enough sustenance for all four. Some may brag about delegate totals, others about winning several states, another perhaps about rolling up a combined popular vote edge.

Ironically, the losers appear likely to be the southern political barons who set out after the 1984 race to organize a multi-state primary in hopes of providing a powerful boost for a moderate-conservative contender in the nominating race.

Sen. Paul Simon, a fifth Democrat, is skipping the southern primaries to concentrate on his home state of Illinois next week. Last spring's frontrunner Gary Hart is on the ballot, too, but has generated little obvious support.

The picture seems clearer on the Republican side, where Bush's organization decided months ago to try and build a "fire wall" in Dixie to stem any damage from the early primaries and caucuses.

A month ago, after a strong victory in the Iowa caucuses, Dole dreamed of breaching the wall and marching to the nomination. But that was before New Hampshire granted Bush a dramatic comeback victory.

A New York Times-CBS poll published on Friday gave Bush the support of 44 percent of the 2,251 likely voters surveyed between Sunday and Friday in 14 southern and border states. Dole was runner-up at 20 percent, former television evangelist Pat Robertson was third with 12 percent and Rep. Jack Kemp trailed with 3 percent.

Other surveys have reported roughly similar results, and Dole's aides already are saying they hope to merely hold down the size of Bush's expected Super Tuesday landslide and regroup for a make-or-break fight on March 15 in Illinois.

Dole is concentrating his efforts on Oklahoma, Missouri, Maryland and his wife's home state of North Carolina and hoping for a surprise in a few other states, such as Arkansas and Alabama, says one aide.

As in earlier states, Robertson is an unknown quantity.

Rep. Jack Kemp, who has failed thus far to emerge as a lightning rod for conservative support, fares poorly in the polls.

In contrast, the Bush campaign looks strong.

Campaign aide Rich Bond says he hopes the vice president can merely win half the delegates at stake, leaving Dole and Robertson to split the rest.

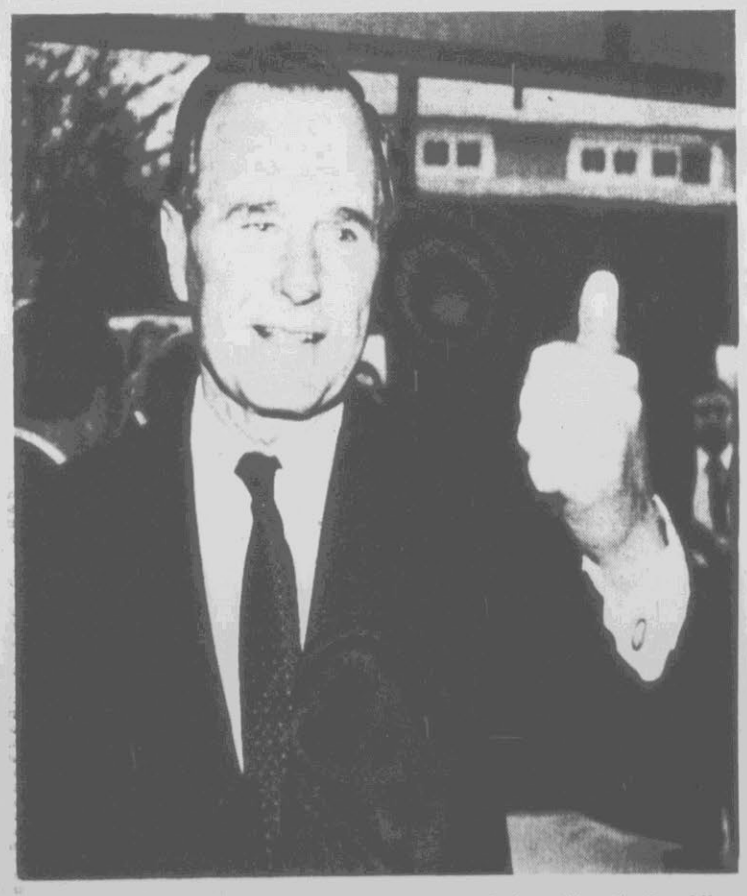

The Dole forces, hoping to set an almost impossible standard for the vice president, speak of trying to hold Bush's yield to roughly 500 of the 712 delegates at stake.

Even if the results fall somewhere in between Bond's understated prediction and Dole's overstated forecast, the elements of a smashing day appear to be in place for the vice president, who has stressed his loyalty to a popular President Reagan in his campaign travels across the south.

His good prospects extend from his political home in Texas — 111 delegates — to Florida — 82, and most of the states in between. He is strong in Massachusetts, where 52 delegates make it the fourth biggest delegate prize.

In the Democratic race, the polls point to a series of closely contested races, and campaign officials saying the result may be influenced largely by the costly round of television commercials that will be served up in the final hours.

"You've got enormous confusion out there," says Ed Reilly, Gephardt's pollster. The voters "are getting this incredible shotgun blast of information ... they're trying to sort it out," he says.

THUMBS UP — Vice President George Bush, who is seeking the Republican presidential nomination, signaled to supporters Saturday in Greenville, S.C., as he accompanied S.C. Gov. Carroll Campbell to the poll where Campbell voted in the state's primary election. (AP Laserphoto

Mecham Trial — An Arizona Soap Opera

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — With its allegations of death threats, sexual affairs and political payoffs, Gov. Evan Mecham's impeachment trial is becoming Arizona's favorite soap opera.

When testimony heated up last week in the nation's first impeachment trial of a governor in six decades, the spectators' gallery at the Arizona Senate was filled to capacity.

"We are in this for the duration," said Dan Durrenberger, station manager of television station KAET, the public broadcasting affiliate that carries the impeachment proceedings live.

He said the station is getting a higher than usual volume of viewer calls and the majority are "thanking us for broadcasting the trial." Only four callers complained that other programming was pre-empted, he said.

Trial watchers have heard witnesses detail what they say was a threat by a Mecham aide to kill a witness testifying before a grand jury investigating the Republican governor's campaign finances. They've heard tales of political jobs for sale and have listened to senators debate whether sex has a place in the proceedings.

"This is neither a circus nor another episode of 'Peyton Place,'" said Democratic Sen. Jesus "Chuy" Higuera who was outraged at an effort by Mecham's lawyers to attack one of the governor's key accusers with accounts of alleged sexual exploits.

Another senator suggested that Arizona would become world famous for dispensing "cactus justice" or "frontier justice" if such inflammatory claims were permitted.

"Clearly, the introduction of this evidence would make these proceedings more sensational and titillating," said Republican Sen. Greg Lunn.

Lunn added that it would be unfair to allow airing of clearly irrelevant evidence concerning an alleged 1982 affair between Department of Public Safety Director Ralph Milstead and one of his former employees.

The woman reportedly claimed that Milstead threatened her with death if she disclosed their affair.

With Milstead scheduled to take the witness stand Monday, the senators decided to resist hearing the allegations, which Milstead branded "a ridiculous pack of lies."

"I don't believe the entire life of director Milstead is on trial," said Lunn. "The character and actions of Gov. Mecham are on trial."

Mecham, 63, a former automobile dealer who won the governorship on his fifth try, is boycotting the trial. He says he'll appear only when he needs to testify.

He prefers to take his case to the people and can be seen around town giving speeches at luncheon meetings, addressing defense fundraising rallies or appearing on television.

"I have broken no laws," he declared in many forums last week, including morning network television programs.

Mecham is charged in 23 articles of impeachment with thwarting investigation of an alleged death threat against a grand jury witness, concealing a $350,000 campaign loan and misusing $80,000 from the governor's protocol fund by loaning it to his car dealership.

If convicted by a two-thirds vote of the 30-member Senate, he would be removed from office. The senators could then take another vote to bar him from ever holding state office again.

Mecham's problems don't end with the impeachment trial. He faces a criminal trial on the loan charge Mar. 22 and a recall election May 17.

Meanwhile the senators, who have dropped most other business to sit as judge and jury in the impeachment trial, grew restive by the end of the first week's testimony and demanded that things move faster.

Asked about impressions of the first week's disclosures, Senate Democratic Minority Leader Allan Stephens said he was surprised at the level of tension, suspicion and secrecy which pervaded Mecham's executive offices on the ninth floor of the capitol.

Study Says Democrats' Registration Lead Chopped

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Democrats still outnumber Republicans in the four Southern states that don't allow crossover voting but the gap has shrunk by nearly 1 million voters in the past four years, a researcher said Friday.

"What we're really seeing is white flight from the Democratic Party," said Bob Hall, political research director of the Institute for Southern Studies. The study "seems to show that the number of new white Democrats is not making up for those who are leaving."

The numbers cast doubt on the wisdom of the "Super Tuesday" strategy conceived by Southern Democrats who hoped that holding most of the region's primaries on the same day would enhance prospects for nominating a moderate, Hall said.

"I think Super Tuesday is going to be a failure," he said. "It was really designed to court those conservative white voters and it's not working."

The study by the institute, a non-profit, non-partisan research and education organization based in Durham, examined voter registration trends in Florida, Kentucky, Louisiana and North Carolina.

In 1984, their combined number of registered voters was 11,841,594, including 10,081,630 whites and 1,759,964 non-whites.

The latest available figures from the four states show overall registration at 12,545,508 — including 10,728,359 whites and 1,817,149 non-whites, according to the study. Those numbers were compiled in early February in all the states except North Carolina, where statewide totals have not been updated since October 1987.

The number of Democrats in the four states has fallen from 8,228,990 in 1984 to 8,055,709 during the period — a decrease of 173,281 or 2.1 percent. Meanwhile, Republicans gained 784,220 voters, a 26.4 percent increase — from 2,972,608 to 3,756,828.

"To have an actual net drop is pretty startling," Hall said. "The margin between the Democrats and Republicans has been shifting for some time but it's gotten to the point where the Democrats aren't even increasing their own fold."

The trends have been influenced by Democratic presidential candidates Jesse Jackson and Pat Robertson, both of whom have conducted voter registration drives, Hall said.

Jackson's 1984 efforts brought more blacks into the Democratic Party but also spurred some conservative Democrats to switch to the GOP, he said. This year, Robertson has induced additional Democratic changeovers and has brought previously unregistered voters into the GOP.

The month before registraation books closed in Louisiana on Feb. 8, Robertson's organization sent out a statewide mailing calling on supporters to register Republican, Hall said. During that month, the number of white Democrats in the state fell by 15,300 while the GOP ranks grew by 23,000.

— North Carolina: 2,961,719 total registered as of April 9, 1984 including 2,369,016 whites, 592,703 nonwhites. As of Oct. 5, 1987, 3,092,138 total registered including 2,476,753 white, 615,385 nonwhite, increases of 4.5 percent white and 3.8 percent nonwhwite.

— Florida: 4,853,404 total registered as of Feb. 11, 1984, including 4,326,099 whites, 527,305 nonwhites. As of Feb. 6, 1988, 5,358,667 total registered including 4,836,045 whites, 522,622 nonwhites — increase of 11.8 percent white registration and 0.9 percent decrease in nonwhite registration.

Democrats, 3,011,720 in 1984 and 2,975,086 in 1988, a 1.2 percent decrease. Republicans, 1,545,391 in 1984 and 2,026,017 in 1988, a 31.1 percent increase.

— Kentucky: 1,893,108 total registered as of May 24, 1984 including 1,786,818 whites, 106,290 nonwhites. As of Feb. 8, 1988, 1,910,907 registered including 1,806,267 whites, 104,640 nonwhites — increase of 1.1 percent in white registration and 1.6 percent decrease in nonwhite.

Democrats, 1,305,614 in 1984 and 1,302,067 in 1988, a 0.3 percent decrease. Republicans, 525,060 in 1984 and 549,631 in 1988 — a 4.7 percent increase.

— Louisiana: 2,133,363 total registered as of March 31, 1984 including 1,599,697 whites and 533,666 nonwhites. As of Feb. 12, 1988, 2,183,796 registered including 1,609,294 whites, 574,502 nonwhites — increases of 0.6 percent white registration and 7.7 percent increase in nonwhite.

Democrats, 1,774,651 in 1984 and 1,669,190 in 1988, a 5.9 percent decrease. Republicans, 197,856 in 1984 and 330,829 in 1988, a 67.2 percent increase.

Democrats, 2,137,005 in 1984 and 2,109,366 in 1987, a 1.3 percent decrease. Republicans 704,301 in 1984 and 850,351 in 1987, a 20.7 percent increase.

Albert Gore Wins Wyoming Caucuses

By KURT J. REPANSHEK
Associated Press Writer

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr. won a photo-finish in Wyoming's Democratic presidential caucuses on Saturday and said the Western victory was "a pretty good time to have your first win."

With results in from all 23 county caucuses, Gore claimed 79.5 of the state convention delegates, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis 77 and Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt 68.

Jesse Jackson trailed with 38 state convention delegates, Illinois Sen. Paul Simon had 10 and Gary Hart 1.

"Three days before Super Tuesday is a pretty good time to have your first win," Gore said in Roanoke, Va. "I've been telling you something was happening out there."

"This is the first level playing field we've had," he said, adding that it was a state not effected by the "afterglow" of New Hampshire or Iowa, where he fared poorly. Gore also benefitted from the support of still-popular former Gov. Ed Herschler.

"It's a three-way tie," Gephardt aide Mark Johnson contended, "but Gore and Dukakis should be embarrassed. They threw the kitchen sink at Wyoming, each spending five times as much money as Gephardt but we still kept up with them."

No numbers were yet available on the Republican side, where Vice President George Bush and Sen. Bob Dole fought for 12 of the state's GOP delegates.

Wyoming Democrats attended county caucuses to select delegates to the May 7 state convention, where the 13 national convention delegates will be allotted.

The Republicans followed an unusual system whereby 12 counties each name one national convention delegate. Six more will be chosen at the GOP state convention May 7.

Three counties met earlier last week and picked their national convention delegates, giving one each to Dole and Bush, while another was uncommitted.

State officials noted that Wyoming is the first Western state to assign presidential delegates.

"We have a real potential to influence the process," state Democratic Party Chairman Muffy Moore said.

Wyoming has not played a major role in presidential politics since 1960 when it gave John F. Kennedy the votes he needed to clinch the Democratic nomination.

Gore and Dukakis traveled to the state earlier in the week with hopes of boosting their candidacies.

Gore, who has garnered the support of two of the state's five so-called super delegates, said at a rally here Wednesday that he hoped Wyoming gave him a boost going into Super Tuesday's 20-state collection of primaries and caucuses.

"Right here is where it could begin," he said. "You can feel it beginning to happen here."

Dukakis, in a stopover in Cheyenne Friday night, said the Democrats were in "a very tight race" in Wyoming.

Supporter Wants To Be A Delegate

By DAN SEWELL
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Alan G. Greer, an attorney with a history of non-partisan civic and environmental activism, had made up his mind he wanted to get involved in a presidential campaign for the first time.

So when a friend called nearly one year ago this month to ask if he would support Michael Dukakis, Greer replied quickly: "Funny you should mention that."

Because of close friends in the Boston area, he had heard about Dukakis for years and had a favorable impression. He then studied the Democratic field at the time and decided on Dukakis.

"So many politicians are like onions. If you keep peeling the layers, eventually there's nothing left. But with Dukakis, it just seemed he had a solid core, both as a politician and as an individual," Greer said the other day.

"There were some things I liked about other candidates and some things I disagreed with him on, but he was the only candidate that my head and my heart both said 'yes' for," he said.

Greer liked Dukakis' progressive social record and thought he had the vision the nation needed.

When the Massachusetts governor visited Florida for the first time as a candidate last May, Greer acted as his driver and hosted a luncheon.

From supporter, he grew to become fund-raiser, to member of the campaign's national financial board. A senior partner in a 40-lawyer firm, he took a month off — his vacation time — to serve as Dukakis' Florida field coordinator temporarily in January, when the regular field coordinator was shifted to Iowa.

Now, he's hoping Florida's Super Tuesday primary will enable him to become a delegate to the national convention in Atlanta this July. He's filed in the Miami-based 19th congressional district, one of Dukakis' strongest.

"Having gotten this involved, I'd like to continue to be part of the process all the way to the end. If I drop off now, it would be like taking a college class and dropping out right before the final term paper," Greer said.

A University of Florida law graduate who grew up in Miami after his family moved here 25 years ago from Arkansas, Greer had been active for Miami civic improvement, parks, the arts and, chiefly, for the environment. He recalls working, pro bono, for the National Wildlife Federation and other environmental organizations.

Civil Strife Leaves Panama In Turmoil

By REID G. MILLER
Associated Press Writer

EDITOR'S NOTE — First El Salvador, then Nicaragua, now Panama. Like chain reactions, crises spread through Central America. Despite protests, despite U.S. pressure, Panama's military leader, Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega remains in power, surviving charges of drug dealing, illicit money laundering, election fraud and violations of human rights. Here is a look at how it all came about in a country the United States deems vital to its security.

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Many Panamanians have lived for years with the belief, if not the sure knowledge, that their government is corrupt, their elections are unfair and their leaders lust for money and power.

There were protests from time to time, but they seldom lasted more than a few days. Then the nation would sink back into a tropical lethargy abetted by prosperity. The voices of opposition were few.

Now the lethargy seems to be gone.

The country is in turmoil over the military rule of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, who has been indicted in the United States on drug charges. Prosperity is threatened by a large foreign debt, U.S. economic pressure and the freezing of Panamanian funds abroad.

In recent years, money poured in from the Panama Canal, the new offshore banking center, an oil pipeline that helped carry Alaskan crude to Atlantic Coast markets, a thriving re-export industry and a large U.S. military presence.

It all helped an economy traditionally based on bananas, sugar and coffee weather the ups and downs of unstable agricultural markets, and made Panama by far the wealthiest country on the Central American isthmus.

"They were years of indulgence and indifference," says Roberto Brenes, a Panama City investment banker and a leader of the broad new opposition movement that took firm root only nine months ago.

"The rich were getting richer, the middle class was growing and the lot of the poor was improving," said a diplomat with long experience in Central America. "It's always been a tolerant society, and few people saw any need to rock to the boat."

Neither did the United States, which saw in Panama enough stability to make a treaty in 1977 that will deliver control of the vital canal between the Atlantic and Pacific to the Panamanian government at the turn of the century.

Omar Torrijos Herrera, a charismatic army colonel, seized the government in 1968, broke the traditional rule of wealthy merchants and land barons and began a costly series of reforms.

He built schools, schools, hospitals, health clinics, farm-to-market roads and other public works. With fervent nationalism, Torrijos brought a new sense of pride and identity to the country, even its wealthiest citizens.

Much of his popularity came from his ability to tweak Uncle Sam's nose while maintaining relations with Washington. Few Panamanian leaders had risked the slightest impertinance with the United States.

His ideology became known as "Torrijismo" and survived his death in an airplane crash in 1981, four years after he signed the canal treaty with President Jimmy Carter and fulfilled one of the fondest dreams of the Panamanian people.

Although the country maintained the fiction of a president, Torrijos ruled supreme as "chief of government" and commander of the National Guard. He had no real opposition and the nation prospered from economic growth and public spending financed with money borrowed abroad.

Noriega came to power in 1983, four years after Torrijos was killed, and the first presidential election since the 1968 coup was held the following year.

Nicolas Ardito Barletta, a respected economist, was elected president despite the fact that he had spent years with the World Bank in Washington and was little known at home.

His election, by a margin of fewer than 2,000 votes, was tainted by charges of fraud. Opponents held marches and auto caravans, honking horns, waving white banners and banging pots and pans in a traditional Panamanian form of protest.

Like those before them, the demonstrations died within a week.

The United States and the rest of the world recognized Ardito Barletta, as they had six other figurehead presidents installed and removed by the military since 1968. The first vice president was Eric Arturo Delvalle, in his first elective office.

Less than a year later, in September 1985, it became Ardito Barletta's turn to go.

He was summoned to military headquarters and held for 12 hours after calling for an impartial investigation into the murder of Hugo Spadafora, one of Noriega's chief opponents. Ardito Barletta announced his resignation and Delvalle was sworn in to replace him.

Once again, government upheaval was greeted largely by public apathy.

Noriega kept building his power, increasing the size of the military with the help of the United States.

Washington poured millions of dollars into the general's newly renamed Panama Defense Forces, a single command encompassing 15,000 members of the army, air force, navy, police forces and state security agency in this nation of 2.2 million people.

The canal treaty gives Panama primary responsibility for the security of the waterway beginning with the year 2000. The Carter administration, then President Reagan, wanted the Defense Forces to be up to the task.

Rumors of military corruption recurred. Then Col. Roberto Diaz Herrera, one of Noriega's top aides, told reporters last June after his forced resignation that his former boss had rigged the 1984 elections, was engaged in the illegal selling of visas and had engineered the Spadafora murder.

Spadafora's headless, mutilated body was found in August 1985, stuffed in a canvas U.S. Mail bag just across the border in Costa Rica. He had threatened to offer proof of Noriega's involvement in drug trafficking, and his family and friends insisted the general ordered the brutal murder.

Until Diaz Herrera began talking, however, no one in the military's tight inner circle had accused Noriega of so much as fixing a traffic ticket.

The former aide's frequent press interviews caused a sensation They also spawned the National Civic Crusade, a movement begun by a few wealthy businessmen whose disgust and anger at the military's increasingly heavy-handed interference in the government and economy had been building for some time.

Within weeks, the Crusade grew to an umbrella organization covering about 200 professional, business, labor and political groups and had gained support from Panamanians of the middle and lower classes.

The Crusade called its first strike June 10. It had little success but was followed by others and a series of mass protests, despite a state of emergency decree that forbade public gatherings and closed opposition newspapers and broadcast stations.

By July 10, Noriega had enough. He sent soldiers and riot police to break up a mass rally. More than 100 people were injured, many peppered by birdshot, and up to 600 were arrested and detained for four days.

The movement appeared to lose heart, but bounced back with a successful strike in late July and a rally Aug. 6 that attracted 30,000 anti-Noriega demonstrators, despite the threat of repression. Leaders of the Civic Crusade began seeking foreign support.

Delvalle's government responded with pro-Noriega rallies and increasingly virulent attacks on the United States in speeches and government-owned newspapers.

It all was done under the cloak of "Torrijismo," but the garment did not fit Noriega well. In late August, a Gallup poll indicated three of four Panamanians wanted him to step down.

After an attack on the U.S. Embassy in June, the Reagan administration had suspended all military and economic aid, which would have totaled $21 million this year. That brought howls of "economic aggression" from Delvalle and other Panamanian leaders.

Loss of the aid was particularly painful because Panama faced a fiscal crisis, brought on by years of deficit spending that piled up a $4.5 billion foreign debt and capital flight caused by the civil unrest.

Early in February, two federal grand juries in Florida indicted Noriega on charges of drug trafficking, money laundering and racketeering.

Among other things, he is accused of helping Colombia's notorious Medellin Cartel by providing safe airstrips for its cocaine shipments and safe haven for its hired killers.

"What he did was utilize his position to sell the country of Panama to the traffickers," said U.S. Atty. Leon Kellner of Miami, who led the investigation for one indictment.

Events began unfolding rapidly Feb. 25 when Delvalle, scorned by the opposition as a puppet, decided he had had enough and ordered Noriega's dismissal. The United States said it knew of his intentions, and continued to recognize him as president through the ensuing trouble.

Noriega arranged for the Legislative Assembly to remove Delvalle the next day — the special session lasted 10 minutes — and hours later Devalle went into hiding.

The Civic Crusade called another strike, its sixth, last Monday but acknowledged it would not be enough to drive Noriega from office even the country closed down completely.

Opposition leaders said only the United States, with or without the support of the rest of Latin America, had the financial clout to depose him.

At week's end, Roberto Aleman, a lawyer and Civic Crusade leader, summed up the alliance's hopes:

"The government will find itself besieged by economic and diplomatic measures taken in the United States and Latin America. The measures will oblige the regime to take extremely unpopular measures such as raising taxes and firing public employees."

Rioting Tibetans Burn Police Station; Officers Are Attacked

By KATHY WILHELM
Associated Press Writer

BEIJING (AP) — Tibetans seeking independence from China attacked a police station in Lhasa on Saturday, beat up officers and destroyed their vehicles as a major Buddhist festival came to a close.

The official Xinhua News Agency made no mention of casualties or arrests in the first anti-Chinese violence reported in the Tibetan capital since October. At least 14 people were killed during those riots, which also included an attack on a police station.

Xinhua said demonstrators shouting "reactionary slogans" Saturday also attacked an office of the Tibetan Buddhist Association, which is controlled by China and is considered by many Tibetans to oppose an independent Tibet.

The terse two-sentence Xinhua report did not say how many people were involved. "The situation was soon brought under control," it said without specifying what measures were taken. It said Lhasa was calm enough later Saturday to hold a scheduled horse race.

Efforts to contact Lhasa by telephone were unsuccessful. The Chinese long-distance operator said hotels in the Tibetan capital were not answering their telephones.

The violence occurred as hundreds of Tibetan Buddhist monks and pilgrims in Lhasa concluded the annual Great Prayer Festival, one of the major events in the Tibetan religious calendar.

Chinese authorities had considered canceling the 10-day festival for fear of a resurgence of last year's violence, but went ahead and gave it heavy publicity as proof that the troubled Himalayan region had returned to normal.

The festival began Feb. 25 and ended Saturday.

Many monks boycotted the festival because of a heavy Chinese police presence. Attendance by pilgrims was also down, according to Tibetan sources and Westerners who observed the festival this year and in the past.

In September and October last year, Tibetan monks and laypeople angered at 37 years of Chinese Communist rule held three protests over a two-week period.

In the largest, an estimated 2,000 people stoned and torched a Lhasa police station on Oct. 1 and police opened fire. At least 14 people were killed.

Authorities expelled all foreign reporters from Tibet at the time and only a handful have been allowed in since. Tourism also has slowed.

Chinese authorities blamed last year's protests on a handful of Tibetan nationalists they claimed were instigated by the Dalai Lama, Tibet's former religious and temporal ruler, who fled to exile in India in 1959.

Xinhua similarly said Saturday's violence was caused by "a number of agitators" acting against the wishes of local residents and monks.

Monks and Western observers said hundreds of monks angered and frightened by the police boycotted the initial sessions Feb. 25, with fewer than 600 showing up. Attendance swelled to nearly 800 the second day under official pressure, but dozens of monks at nearby Drepung Monastery held their own, alternate prayer festival.

Several monks told The Associated Press last week that they feared arrest if they attended the regular festival and trouble broke out. Only one predicted a repeat of October's violence.

Most Tibetans dispute China's claim to seven centuries of sovereignty over the mountain-bound region. Chinese rule was exercised only intermittently during that period, with actual administrative control in the hands of the Dalai Lama and leading monasteries.

Chinese Communist troops crossed into Tibet in October 1950. Nine years later, thousands of Tibetans rebelled when it was rumored that the Chinese planned to kidnap the Dalai Lama, and he fled to India.

The Chinese have invited the Dalai Lama to end his exile but say he would be allowed to live in Tibet only part of the year and could have no political power.

Xinhua reported the clash with unusual speed. It disclosed last year's first protest, on Sept. 26, three days after it happened and took nearly 48 hours to report the bloody Oct. 1 clash.

The report came a day after the news agency reported that a Buddhist monk jailed for advocating Tibetan independence had died in prison.

It was not clear whether today's protest was linked to that report.

On Friday, Xinhua quoted Gyamco, vice-chairman of the Tibetan Autonomous Region government, as saying Lobsang Wangchuk died last year of lung ancer while serving an 18-year prison term.

Tibetan exile groups in India said last year that Wangchuk died Nov. 4 of injuries suffered in a beating after he refused to say he was wrong for supporting Tibetan independence. He was 74.

STATION ATTACKED — Tibetans attacked a police station in the capital of Lhasa Saturday, beat up police officers and destroyed vehicles in the first repeat of anti-Chinese violence since last October, the official Chinese news agency, Xinhua, reported. (AP Laserphoto)

'Interference' Charged

MOSCOW (AP) — Pravda charged Saturday that anti-Soviet insurgents are moving large quantities of arms and ammunition into Afghanistan in the midst of negotiations seeking an end to Afghanistan's bloody civil war.

"Interference in the domestic affairs of this republic is not diminishing and, if anything, is escalating," the Communist Party daily said in a dispatch from Kabul, the Afghan capital.

Afghanistan and Pakistan, which represents the U.S.-backed Afghan guerrillas, began a new round of negotiations in Geneva last week designed to end the fighting.

On Thursday, they agreed on the main elements of a U.N.-mediated peace accord that includes provisions for the withdrawal of about 115,000 Soviet troops from Afghanistan within nine months.

The Kremlin, which sent troops and tanks into Afghanistan in December 1979, backs the Marxist government of President Najib against the Moslem guerrillas.

Pravda said guerrilla arms dumps and bases have begun to be moved from neighboring Pakistan to Afghanistan.

Pravda said its reporter was told at the headquarters of the Soviet military force in Afghanistan that the guerrillas are moving the weapons to make sure a peace agreement reached in Geneva would not deprive them of arms.

Under terms of the Geneva accords, the United States would have to stop supplying arms to the insurgents within 60 days of the signing of an agreement.

On Friday, a U.S. senator and strong proponent of aid to the Afghan guerrillas said there had been a sharp decline in the movement of U.S. aid.

Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., told a Washington news conference: "I want to know if this is negligence or a sell-out of the Afghan resistance."

Humphrey said one of his staff members, Michael Pillsbury, spent four days in Peshawar, Pakistan, and came back with the conclusion that "the flow of weapons has decreased markedly and suddenly."

Freed Hostage Goes Back To Live In City Where He Was Abducted

By RIMA SALAMEH
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — West German engineer Ralph Schray and his pregnant wife returned to live in west Beirut on Saturday, two days after he was released from more than five weeks of captivity by pro-Iranian Shiite Moslems.

FREED WEST GERMAN — Former West German hostage Ralph Schray talks to reporters during a news conference he held Saturday in Moslem West Beirut, Lebanon. The Lebanese-born Schray, 30, was handed over to West German diplomats Thursday in Damascus, Syria. Schray, who was kidnapped Jan. 27, returned, two days after he was freed, to live in the city where he was abducted. (AP Laserphoto)

Schray's arrival here marks the first time a foreigner taken hostage in Lebanon has returned to live in the city where he was abducted.

"Here is my home. I feel great. I am so happy to be next to my wife and relatives," a beaming Schray said at a news conference he held at west Beirut's Sporting Beach Club, which is owned by his wealthy uncle, George Abu Nassar.

The Lebanese-born Schray, 30, an industrial engineer, was handed over Thursday to the West German Embassy in Damascus, where he stayed until his return to west Beirut early Saturday.

His uncle, a Lebanese businessman of Palestinian descent, and his pregnant Lebanese wife, Rana Mounla, accompanied Schray on the 55-mile trip to Beirut from Damascus.

"This place is my only country. It is my past, my present and my future. It is my identity," Schray said. His wife sat on his side at the conference.

A family source earlier said that Schray, who was kidnapped Jan. 27, "returned to resume his normal life in west Beirut. He still feels he is more Lebanese than German despite his abduction ordeal."

The source, speaking on condition of anonymity, noted that Schray was born and brought up in west Beirut and had stayed with his mother's family after her separation from her West German husband, Rudolf Schray.

Forty-seven other foreigners kidnapped by various factions in lebanon since January 1984 have been freed, but all swiftly returned to their home countries.

Marcel Coudary, a Frenchman held hostage for nine months until he was freed last November, returned to Beirut for a one-week visit in December. But he spent most of it in the capital's Christian sector.

Schray was the second foreigner abducted and freed since the Syrian army took charge of security in west Beirut on Feb. 22, 1987. The other was American journalist Charles Glass, who was kidnapped June 18 and gained freedom two months later.

Five other foreigners were seized in a new spate of kidnappings after Schray's abduction. But they all were grabbed in south Lebanon, which is outside the control of Syrian troops.

Among them is U.S. Marine Lt. Col. William R. Higgins, 43, of Danville, Kentucky, who was kidnapped near the southern ancient port of Tyre on Feb. 17. He served with a U.N. observers' group in south Lebanon.

U.N. Scandinavian relief workers Jan Stening, 44, of Sweden, and William Jorgensen, 58, of Norway were kidnapped Feb. 5 near the southern port city of Sidon by what U.N. officials had described as unruly Palestinians. They were freed March 2.

The latest two believed to be abducted were a British official of the Oxfam relief organization, Peter Coleridge, 44, and his Syrian aide Omar Traboulsi, 31. They were grabbed in Sidon Thursday.

Lebanese security officials on Saturday accused the Palestinian guerrilla group Fatah-Revolutionary Council — led by wanted terrorist Abu Nidal — of holding Coleridge and Traboulsi.

Shultz Offered 'Ambitious' Plan For Peace Talks In Middle East

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz acknowledges that the plan he left with Arab and Israeli leaders for peace talks in the Middle East is "very ambitious" in its scope and time frame.

It would bring Israel, Jordan, Syria and Palestinian Arabs — but not the Palestine Liberation Organization — to an international peace conference within a few weeks.

By May 1, Israel and a joint delegation of Jordanians and Palestinians would be discussing a three-year self-rule program for the 1.5 million Palestinian Arabs on the Israeli-held West Bank and in Gaza.

The aim is to quell the violent protests there that claimed some 80 lives over the past three months. Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir offered in a letter to Shultz in mid-January to grant the Palestinians control over all activities except security and foreign policy. If an agreement is reached within six months, negotiations for an overall settlement of the 40-year Arab-Israeli conflict would begin. The target date is Dec. 1.

Among the issues on the table would be Israel's annexation of part of the Golan Heights territory Syria lost in the 1967 war.

Shultz said Shamir and Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres agreed it was a topic for negotiations.

If the autonomy talks fail, the process would stop dead in its tracks. — "in which case," Shultz said at the end of his 10-day, 21,916-mile trip, "the moment can be lost and you route yourself over into a different time frame."

Shultz put the plan in writing and gave identical versions to King Hussein of Jordan and Prime Minister Shamir, with a copy to Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres.

Different letters, dealing with their more limited involvement, were given to Syrian President Hafez Assad and Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak.

"What we have said to each person is 'we hope you will consider this carefully. We would just as soon you don't respond immediately because we would like you to study it and think about it. And within the next week and a half or so, we'd like to hear from you,'" Shultz said.

Shamir is expected to bring his reply with him to Washington March 14 for talks with President Reagan and Shultz. Hussein, who apparently is not interested in visiting Washington, can reply through diplomatic channels.

Shultz left behind in the region Wat Cluverius IV, an experienced State department official with strong ties to the Palestinians and other Arabs, to go from Cairo to Saudi Arabia, Jordan and Israel, "to listen and to explain.".

So far, Shultz said, "no one says 'no' and no one says 'yes.' Everyone seems to want us to continue with this process."

There is no indication the PLO is among them, however.

Yasser Arafat's organization, which is committed to dismantling Israel as a Jewish state, prevented 15 Palestinians from meeting with Shultz. In effect, the PLO has boycotted the U.S. initiative. And the Reagan administration is excluding the PLO from the peace talks.

Even though Jordan and Syria said publicly the PLO should play an active role, Hussein evidently agreed to try to revive an old formula of making Palestinians part of a Jordanian delegation.

The PLO killed the idea in 1986, after Hussein negotiated for a year with Arafat.

"He continues to believe that that's the right way to go, and we do, too," Shultz said.

The U.S. plan, which sprang to life after the uprisings on the West Bank and in Gaza, is a broad one. "There are many things about what we are doing that are very ambitious, and the time-line is very ambitious," Shultz said. "But we also think that there is an attitude of a readiness to work to change things that should be taken advantage of by everybody."

Shultz also has told the Arabs and Israelis to move quickly.

"Deadlines are very good things in trying to get people to make up their minds," Shultz said. "So we have pointed out the fact that the situation carries inherent in it a certain sense of deadlines. I don't mind trying to make use of that, although you can't push people if they don't want to be pushed."

Silence Please

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Many a tourist has stood in awed silence inside St. Peter's Basilica, the largest church in Christendom, but now their guides will have to do the same.

Basilica authorities have asked tour guides to explain the church's features to their charges while in the atrium, before walking through the main part of the church.

The ANSA news agency said the church had received letters from visitors complaining about the tour guides' speeches as the tourists viewed the interior, which houses Michelangelo's Pieta and many other art treasures.

"ENCOURAGING" PLAN — Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, left, met with U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz in Cairo, then said the peace plan Shultz carried to the Middle East is "encouraging." Shultz returned to Washington, D.C., after ending a visit to Israel, Syria and Egypt on Friday. (AP Laserphoto)

This is food for thought

Although most of us realize the benefits of proper nutrition, many of us disregard sound meal planning. For a diabetic, it is essential to know what, when and how much to eat. A diabetic must know what food for thought is all about.

A diabetic is more vulnerable to health complications, so proper nutrition becomes essential for an active lifestyle. Good nutrition, combined with medication, exercise and blood sugar monitoring, is vital to diabetic self-care. The Diabetes Education Program, administered by Pitt Internal & Renal Medicine Associates, Ltd. is a comprehensive program that teaches self management of diabetes. The importance of proper meal planning, coordinated with appropriate medication, blood sugar monitoring, and exercise is the focus of the Diabetes Education Program. The program staff, working closely with diabetics and their personal physician, takes a positive approach to managing everyday life with diabetes.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Joint Meeting Big Step Toward Community Unity

Wednesday's joint meeting of the Greenville City Council and the Pitt County Commissioners is an illustration of how better cooperation between the two entities could improve public services.

This type of joint approach must be encouraged. The two boards' constituents should easily recognize that coordinated problem-solving efforts can better serve the public needs.

The boards were correct to discuss the problem of police space and to explore what can be done mutually to effectively solve the crisis. The county's jail is ill-equipped and unsuitable and the city's police force cannot adequately operate in its present facility.

The idea of a joint law enforcement center deserves support, but must be approached with other long-range city-county planning needs in mind. Court expansion and the need for increased office space make relocating county offices necessary. In addition, the city, even if space is freed by moving the police department, needs a more suitable municipal facility.

With these facts in mind, a joint city-county government complex located in downtown Greenville is the most feasible solution to office space problems. Other mutual projects, such as a law enforcement center, should be planned within this framework.

As Greenville and Pitt County expand, the significance of unity between the two entities increases. Growth in one sector inevitably affects the other. Problems that arise are mutual crises, and can only be solved by combined, not single, effort.

Recognition of this fact is important in a community like Greenville and Pitt County where growth frequently makes city limits meaningless.

The proposal for a joint law enforcement center is the first tangible step for the community toward an atmosphere of teamwork. It is an action that could significantly benefit taxpayers if it is properly planned and administrated.

As further collaboration occurs by public officials, the community likely will see an improved level of service. Pooling resources — financial and human — is a more efficient approach and yields a more effective product.

The two boards deserve praise for taking an intelligent tack on a mutual problem. That trend should continue.

Fire Prevention Sound Approach

A residence hall fire at Chowan College pointed to the need for preparedness in dormitories at East Carolina University, and school officials appear to be on the right track toward preventing a similar occurrence.

ECU officials say they plan to distribute a flyer about the incident in the dorms to call attention to fire safety and how to react in the event of a fire.

Carolyn A. Fulgum, assistant vice chancellor and director of residence life and housing at ECU, said the flyer is designed to remind students that fires can happen and that they should be prepared.

With 15 buildings in its residence hall system, ECU has a large safety concern. The buildings are equipped with fire alarms and smoke detectors and they have fire extinguishers. The equipment is regularly inspected.

Students are oriented to evacuation procedures and a fire drill is held within the first three weeks of each semester.

The true test of any plan is a real emergency. Residence hall occupants should be regularly informed of the dangers of fire and how to evacuate the buildings in the event of fire.

There are a variety of resident buildings on campus ranging from Jarvis, the oldest building on campus, to dorms 10 stories high. Each has a different need in fire safety and each poses unique problems for Greenville fire fighters in the event of a fire.

The most important factor, always, is the saving of human life in the event of a fire, and the expedient way to do that is to have a quick and orderly evacuation of the buildings in the event of a fire.

While the planning at ECU seems advanced, it should be regularly reviewed and emergency plans activated to make certain equipment and procedures are in the best order possible.

A Four Lane Trip To The Mailbox

Sunday Morning Notes

On Highway 264 between Greenville and Pactolus is a two-mile stretch where the residents who are unfortunate enough to live on the north side have to cross four lanes of traffic and a median to get to their mailboxes.

It is a hair-raising experience. Only those with the luck and agility of a cat can hope to make it across.

The following list of thirteen helpful suggestions for these people:

1. Get you a STOP sign and hold it up to see if traffic will stop for you. It won't.

2. Send your cat across first. If he makes it, then you go.

3. Make a flying leap across the first two lanes. Of course, when you hit the median at high speed, you will slide into the ditch which is in the middle of the median.

4. Always wear flat shoes with (a) cleats, (b) grooved rubber soles. You will have to wash these when — and if — you get back to the house; that is, if you still have them on. Some people lose their shoes in the ditch, so it is better to have several pairs.

5. If the temperature drops below freezing, forget it; you won't make it. The slopes of the ditch will be slick as an eel's hindparts.

6. Move your house to the other side of the road. As soon as you do this, the Post Office Department will move the boxes across the road.

7. If you have made it to the median and a log truck is coming, lie flat down on the ground. Otherwise, you will be blown away.

8. If you have made it all the way across and an 18-wheeler is approaching, (a) wrap your arms around the mailbox post and recite rapidly, "Our Father, which art in Heaven ...", (b) jump in the ditch. This will save you a lot of trouble, as you will be blown into the ditch anyway.

9. Call the Post Office. They will tell you they have the matter under advisement, which translates, "We're not going to do anything."

10. Call your Congressman. If it is an election year, he will do something; if not, he won't.

11. Never, attempt to cross between the hours of 4:30 and 5:30. People going home from work are already tired and irritable, and they will love running you down.

12. Don't write letters. If you mail them, that means you've got to cross two more times.

13. If it's raining, forget it; the ditch in the median will be full of water and/or ice. If it's foggy, forget it. If dust is blowing, forget it. In fact, you might decide that life, limb, and a normal blood pressure are more important than mail and say, "The hell with the whole thing."

To the editor:

In the course of this issue-oriented presidential campaign of 1988, much emphasis has been placed upon the need to help the poor. Certain candidates tell us we need higher taxes to fund bigger and better social programs. I pay taxes to support indiscriminant social spending because I am forced to.

Richard Gephardt said that he had been in welfare offices talking to people and that "everyone wants to work." This is absolutely false. I've personally known more than a few welfare mothers who were not working, had never worked, nor had any desire to work. Why should they when they get paid to stay home and have babies? I've know people who lived in government housing, received a monthly government check and spent all their time drinking booze and smoking pot. I realize that all welfare recipients do not fit into this category, but we have to support the ones who do right along with the ones who don't.

Jesse Jackson says if he's elected, he will declare a "war on poverty." He wants to eliminate "classes of peoples." This was also Karl Marx's dream, as outlined in the Communist Manifesto. Jesus said, "The poor you have with you always." You cannot change attitudes with programs.

Rev. Jackson seems to feel that being wealthy is immoral and illegal and that rich people are the root of all our problems. Yes, I plan to be wealthy one day and I'm not ashamed of my ambition because I plan to achieve it by hard work, not by cheating and stealing. I also feel that with financial blessing comes a responsibility to help those less fortunate. No doubt I could do more to help the truly needy if I were not forced to pay so much tax money to support the freeloaders.

To the editor:

March is "Music in Our Schools Month." The sesquicentennial celebration of music in our schools is an invitation to America to "take note" as we continue the advancement of music education.

"America Takes Note" is the theme for the 150th anniversary of music in our public schools. The national celebration being held in March is sponsored by the Music Educators National Conference, a 55,000-member professional association.

The history of music education began in 1838 when the Boston School Committee decided that music should be a part of the school curriculum. One-by-one, communities throughout the United States realized that music is essential in our nation's culture and our children's education.

This year's theme conveys the importance of music education as a unifying force throughout our country. America's rich musical heritage is a vital part of our schools, communities, and the nation's place as a world leader.

I believe that music education during a person's early years can help him or her develop a sense of community with others that brings joy and a deeper understanding of oneself and the world around them.

Manufacturing Can Revive U.S. Industry

Joel Kotkin

Conventional wisdom now ordains that the U.S. industrial economy has fallen into a deep, perhaps irreversible, decline. Yet in reality, the nation's manufacturing sector, far from dying, is in the midst of an entrepreneur-led restructuring that could re-invigorate the U.S. economy in the 1990s.

Over the past few years, for example, industrial productivity and capital investment in plant and equipment, declining in Europe and Japan, have been rising in the United States. And while as many as 30,000 positions were lost on post-crash Wall Street, industrial employment — despite continuing weakness in the automotive sector—has soared since June by as many as 300,000 jobs. Spurred by the weak dollar, manufacturing exports have been increasing at more than a 15 percent annual rate.

If these trends continue, the late 1900s could be remembered for a dramatic shift in the economic paradigm from a financial ethos to one centered around actual production of goods. This new paradigm represents a major departure from the recent accepted axiom on Wall Street — and in many corporate board rooms as well — that manufacturing amounts to, in John Naisbitt's phrase, "a declining sport" best left to the Japanese and other Asians. The New York Stock Exchange, in a 1984 proclamation, echoed this view, stating, "a strong manufacturing sector is not a requisite for a prosperous economy."

Today Wall Street is reaping the reward of such folly. Without thinking out the connection between production and wealth, U.S. business was caught by surprise by the new muscle of Asian companies — particularly in banking, securities, real estate and insurance — who were free to spend the wealth accumulated through their proficiency at Naisbitt's "declining sport." Only two years after Wall Street's anti-industrial pronouncement, for instance, the total value of shares traded on the New York Stock Exchange fell to second place behind Tokyo's. Japan's banks, none of which ranked in the top 50 only three decades ago, now control as many as eight of the world's 10 largest banks.

Unfortunately, Wall Street's anti-industrial prejudice also helped undermine much of the U.S. manufacturing economy. Pressed by analysts demanding short-term profits, many corporations, including such giants as U.S. Steel Corp., eschewed the necessary investment in plant and equipment. Other companies, such as RCA Corp., sold away rights for their own technology to competitors overseas, with licenses to Japanese alone reaching $19 billion by 1980.

As a result of this transfer — what one business consultant described as "the greatest fire sale in history" — U.S. companies frittered away the leadership of such industries as consumer electronics to the Japanese, South Koreans and other foreigners. Similarly, many Fortune 500 companies surrendered their industrial birthright, with firms such as General Motors, RCA and Chrysler Corp. handing over large portions of their basic product line to their fiercest competitors.

Politicians and pundits have rightly criticized such corporate policies as self-defeating. Yet when addressing the issue of national re-industrialization, the elites of both political parties almost invariably call for either protectionism or tax breaks for the likes of firms such as GM and Bethlehem Steel, or greater industrial planning conducted by big government, high finance, big business and, sometimes, big labor — the very forces that most contributed to the current crisis and seem to have learned so little from it.

A Town In Georgia The New South Forgot

Bill Stall

WAYCROSS, Ga. — Driving away from Savannah and into the swampy heart of southeast Georgia, Old South charm fades to decomposing autos forming bunkers in front of nearly every house along U.S. 82. An automobile driver battles for lane rights against semis stacked with skinny pine logs roaring toward the pulp mill. The AM car radio options are country-and-western gospel ("Walkin' On With Jesus") or traditional gospel.

The two-lane roadbed across the flat Georgia lowland is a levee separating swamp and pine forest on one side from swamp and pine forest on the other. There are no hills, no horizon.

A hundred miles from Savannah, beyond the First Free Will Baptist Church and a National Guard armory marquee advertising Ladies and Midget wrestling, U.S. 82 threads a strip of fast-food stands and convenience stores into Waycross, population 20,000, the mini-metropolis of southeast Georgia, locally proclaimed as "The Largest City in the Largest County in the Largest State east of the Mississippi."

Waycross, Ware County, Ga., is part of the playing field in the South's "Super Tuesday" presidential primaries, but Waycross voters have been distant observers of the action. The candidates have campaigned from one New South city to the next, from Charlotte, N.C., to Nashville, Tenn., to Atlanta, but not to Waycross. Waycross voters were not necessarily uninterested in the contest, but in the weeks before the primary they had more immediate concerns, such as an election for mayor, racial incidents in the local schools and a campaign to attract jobs to the area.

The South is no longer a political monolith. It is also not as monolithic culturally as outsiders assume. In many aspects, the problems and issues of Waycross may be more like those of Rock Springs, Wyo., or Manistee, Mich., than Atlanta or Jacksonville, Fla.

Candidates may bypass Waycross, but Waycross is accustomed to being bypassed, first by the interstate highways that siphoned off Florida-bound tourist traffic, and then by the New South economic miracle that brought shiny office towers and research parks to the cities. Even the modern technology that has touched Waycross has been a mixed blessing. Waycross, founded as a railroad town in 1875 where the Savannah, Florida and Western R.R. intersected with the Brunswick and Florida R.R., has one of the largest rail switching yards in the East. But with deregulation, and computerization of the CRX-Chessie System facility, employment has declined to about a third of its one-time peak 3,000.

So Waycross remains an isolated, economically depressed trade center where population and retail sales have remained flat for 20 years. The median household income is half the national level. The population is aging and local residents despair that the best young people go away to school and never return.

Waycross' sin is being rural in an age of urbanization — so rural it gets little fallout from the metropolitan success. When Chamber of Commerce Manager Saralyn Stafford talks of southeast Georgia to outsiders, she draws empty looks. "They all know about Atlanta. They think Georgia ends when you get to Macon," Stafford said.

A woman in charge — particularly one under 30 — is something new. Stafford, weary of hearing "we've never done that before," is out to get a stagnant Waycross working together and moving.

In the past, businesses lived off the railroads and little was done to attract new industry. There was no coordinated leadership. No one knocked on doors of the state economic development people in Atlanta and demanded attention.

"We are building relationships now — from ground zero," Stafford said. "We haven't always had that. We've had a good ol' boy network."

Waycross is beginning to get attention, but pulling the community together is not easy. Businesses have moved from downtown to the Hatcher Point shopping center out U.S. 1 on the way to Okefenokee Swamp Park. City-center brick buildings are dingy. Shoppers complain of the lack of parking and the traffic, complicated by railroad grade crossings in the middle of town, of poor service and the lack of a downtown department store and good restaurants.

"I hate to see it die, but there's nothing to draw me downtown," said one respondent to a shopping survey. "They waited too late to save it and the stores got old and run-down."

Complicating the political fabric is an ethnic gulf between Waycross and surrounding Ware County. Blacks account for about half the city population but only a fraction in the rural area. Most counties in the region have one high school but Waycross and Ware County maintain separate schools, with occasional racial tension between them. Stafford has begun a political education campaign among businesses and school consolidation is high on the agenda. But one Waycross old-timer chuckled at the mention of consolidation and drawled, "Oh, that subject comes up every once in a while."

All in all, Waycross is not an ugly or unpleasant town, unless a visitor comes with unrealistic expectations about the elegant charm of the antebellum South or the extent of the economic vitality of the New South. The older downtown buildings may be dingy, but are still solid and could be refurbished at modest expense. The center of town is anchored by government offices and a federal courthouse. If additional business leaves, however, the downtown may become moribund and the outskirts even more tacky and cluttered.

Waycross has pleasant residential areas with wide, tree-lined streets and handsome homes with spacious lawns. A modern three-bedroom house can be had for $50,000. There is a community college, a vocational-technical school and several small industries.

Will Tuesday Be Super For Candidate Jesse Jackson?

Linda Williams

Jesse Jackson's mainstream campaign is working. Although his total white support remains low, the early primaries and caucuses demonstrate that he is winning more of the white vote in 1988 than in 1984. In three states, Jackson beat three white male candidates — former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, former Colorado Sen. Gary Hart and Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore. That a black candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination could have such appeal among whites would have been unthinkable even four years ago.

Out of Super Tuesday's 20 primaries and caucuses, in the 14 scheduled in Southern and border states he should do even better. Recent surveys indicate that the lion's share of the black vote will go again to Jackson. In addition, if Southern white conservatives desert the Democratic party to vote in this year's competitive Republican primaries and caucuses (as an Atlanta Constitution poll shows a substantial number might), then blacks voters would be even more influential in Democratic results.

Finally, more important for Jackson's chances in the South than his expanded white support in Iowa, New Hampshire and Minnesota is the fact that all of the primaries and caucuses held to date have left no clear Democratic front-runner. This means that at least three white candidates (Gov. Michael S. Dukakis of Massachusetts, Rep. Richard A. Gephardt of Missouri and Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee) will still be viable in the eyes of the electorate and may end up splitting the white vote. In such a scenario, Jackson could win the plurality of votes in most of the deep South states — maybe even a majority in Mississippi — and come second in several border states. Thus Super Tuesday raises the stakes for the potential impact of black voters in 1988, in all likelihood to Jackson's benefit.

Nevertheless, the real contest is not over winning slim pluralities in a number of statewide results; the name of the game is winning delegates. And even with massive black support, the battle might not go all that well for Jackson.

The rules of delegate allocation are the key. In most states, delegates are allocated by congressional districts, not a candidate's statewide tally. Given the heavy concentration of blacks in some districts and their slim representation or virtual absence in others, Jackson could win a plurality of the popular vote and not end up with a plurality of delegates in that state. That happened in 1984 in both Mississippi and Virginia.

As important as the black vote will be this Tuesday, it may do much more for building a burst of momentum for a candidate — especially if it is Jackson — and bringing him a shower of media attention, than be decisive in the actual delegate count. The overall winning Democratic candidate on Super Tuesday, as elsewhere, is likely to be the one who demonstrates that he can consistently attract both black and white votes.

But if we are talking about actual nomination politics, the candidate to watch is probably not Jesse Jackson. The basic reason is that he won't get enough white support. Whites tend to say this is because Jackson is too radical and not experienced in holding public office. Blacks, most commonly, say it is Jackson's racial identification.

To be sure, Jackson is to the left of the other Democratic contenders, especially vis-a-vis foreign policy and the defense budget. Indeed, it is not at all clear that a white candidate who embraced Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat and Cuban President Fidel Castro would even be in major party competition in the United States in 1988. But, like the other Democratic and Republican candidates in the race, Jackson has modified his political views and behavior. He speaks far less about the Third World in general in 1988 than he did in 1984 and argues that his earlier behavior revolved around an attempt to open up much needed lines of communication.

Whether this is opportunism or ingenious excuses, it is nonetheless true that black candidates, despite their political views, are often viewed as exceptionally liberal or radical simply by the fact they are black. The case of former Wayne County Executive Bill Lucas is instructive. Lucas ran as a Reaganite Republican nominee for governor in Michigan; yet polls kept showing that whites thought he was a liberal like Detroit's Democratic Mayor Coleman Young.

Jackson is also quick to point out that the lack of officeholding experience did not keep Dwight D. Eisenhower from being elected president and that only a few blacks have been able to get experience even in the House of Representatives; only one black has been a member of the U.S. Senate in the 20th century, and none has won a governor's office. The reasons here too seem to be race-related. Since there are no states that are majority black, and most black candidates for higher office have found it difficult to win white votes, blacks usually lose in statewide contests. In short, both the view of Jackson as a radical and his inexperience in public office are themselves factors inextricably linked to race.

Thus it is probable that Jackson's Southern white support will remain at best at the level he has won in the early primary and caucus states — roughly 8 percent to 10 percent — and will come as it did in those states not predominantly from poor farmers or blue-collar workers, but from younger whites in academic centers. That proportion of the white vote coupled even with massive black support will not be enough to propel him into a sustainable front-runner status. Meanwhile the 20 percent or so of Southern blacks who said they remain undecided in late January polls might very well go to some other candidate or candidates.

Nevertheless, it is clear that Jackson is a major factor in Democratic politics in 1988. Super Tuesday will make Jackson and his supporters a force to be reckoned with at the Democratic convention; and his siphoning off votes from white candidates has the probability of leaving the Democratic race so muddled that it could produce a brokered convention.

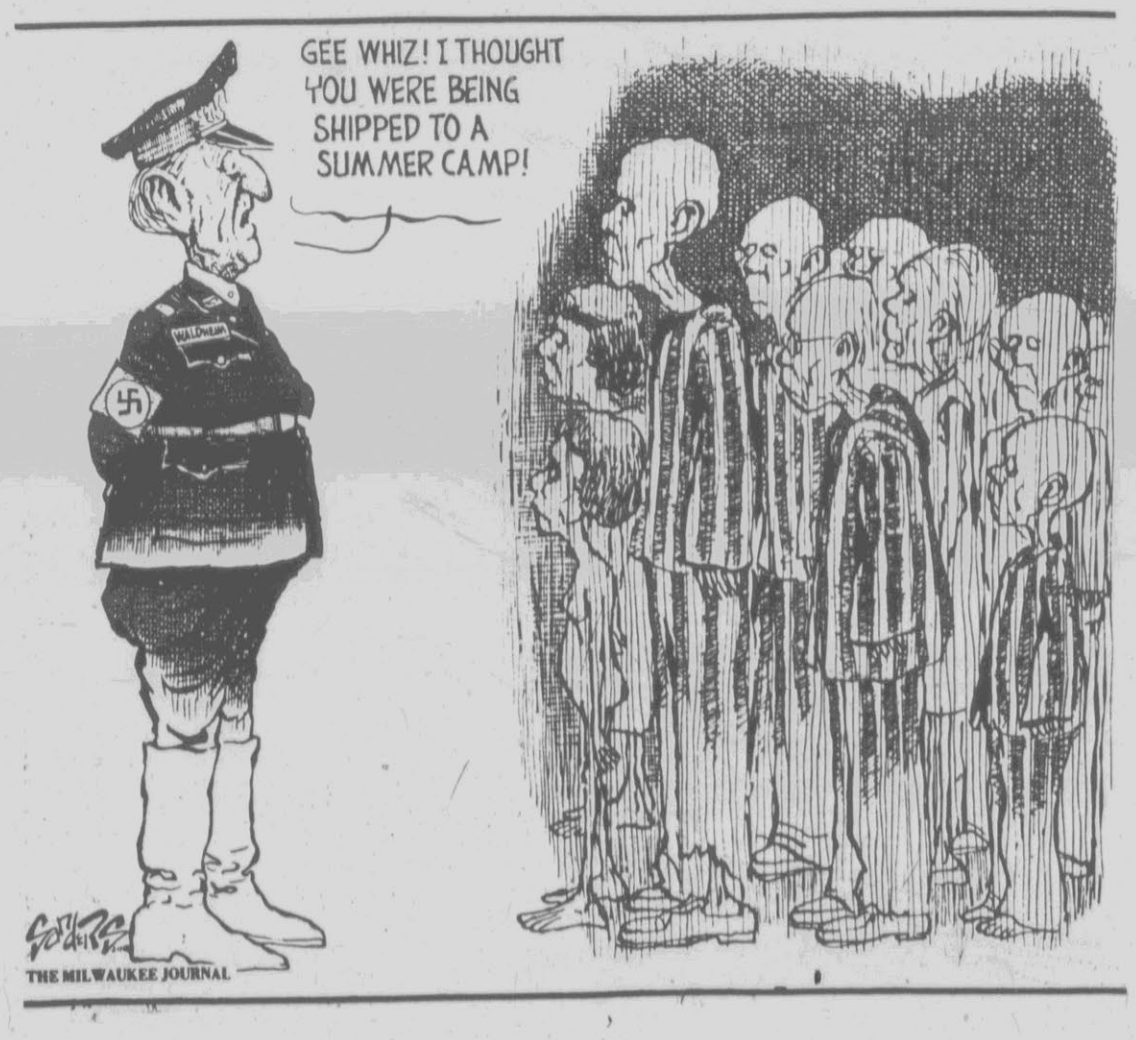

In this latter possibility, there are obviously two scenarios — one of the leading white candidates bargains with Jackson, or they bargain with each other. The bargaining in both instances would probably involve the vice presidency, the more than 106,000 presidential appointments, the platform and the delegate selection rules for 1992.

The danger in bargaining with Jackson is that for the Democrats it may bring back the charge of caving in to "special interests"; the danger in not bargaining with him is that it may lead to an exodus of black voters from the Democratic Party. Blacks may decide to vote with their bottoms — stay at home, that is, on the day of the general election; or a substantial minority may support the Republicans or third-party candidates if they view Jackson as being mistreated. Either of the first or second outcomes — alienating whites or alienating blacks — may well doom the Democrats in November, for it is no more likely that they can win in 1988 without keeping their substantial majority of black voters than they can win without getting at least 40 percent to 45 percent of the white vote.

What appears probable is that Jackson will be the wild card if the Democratic party is brokered; he could make or break it for either of the leading candidates. Gore is also a wild card — but after skipping Iowa and New Hampshire — only the lowest wild card in a hole; he depends on what's in the other players' hand. Simon is an outside straight — the long shot in the race whose fortunes depend, like Gore's, on the cards in the other players' hands; and Dukakis and Gephardt are trying to get a full house.

Super Tuesday may decide little, but it will dramatically influence how the game finally shapes up.

Allies Distance Themselves

Norman Kempster

BRUSSELS, Belgium — President Reagan's NATO allies Thursday endorsed his plans for a spring summit meeting in Moscow, but they distanced themselves from the sort of rid-the-world-of-nuclear-weapons rhetoric that marked the president's earlier meetings with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

The presidents and prime ministers of the 16 nations of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization outlined a generally hard-line approach to East-West relations, one intended to last well beyond the end of Reagan's term next Jan. 20.

When Reagan and Gorbachev talked about an eventual ban on all nuclear weapons during their 1986 summit session in Iceland, it sent shock waves through the alliance. Ever since, European members of NATO have been trying to make sure that Reagan's hopes are not fulfilled.

Although they seldom talk about it in public, most European leaders are far more concerned about the possibility of a war fought with conventional weapons than they are about nuclear war. Although they agree that a nuclear conflict would be far more devastating, the Europeans think that such a war will never be fought. If nuclear arms are removed, many of them fear, a conventional war might break out.

"By maintaining credible deterrence, the alliance has secured peace in Europe for nearly 40 years," the NATO chiefs said in their final communique. "Conventional defenses alone cannot ensure this."

The communique added, "For the foreseeable future, there is no alternative to the alliance strategy ... of deterrence based upon an appropriate mix of adequate and effective nuclear and conventional forces."

Secretary of State George P. Shultz said following the NATO meeting that the United States would heed the alliance's advice to move "carefully and deliberately" on nuclear arms control.

"You don't want to make the world safe for conventional warfare," he said.

In the next to the last paragraph of the communique, the NATO leaders expressed "hope" that Reagan's next meeting with Gorbachev, expected to be held in Moscow in May or June, "will be able to build on the progress they achieved at their Washington meeting last December.

"We strongly support the efforts of the United States," the communique said.

Reagan was afforded the deference that goes with being the leader of the alliance's strongest member. For instance, during a largely ceremonial session Thursday morning, Reagan was called on to make the final speech, in effect summing up the meeting.

However, Reagan did most of his talking during closed sessions of the summit. He made a brief public statement at the end of the conference, but he left it to Shultz to respond to reporters' questions.

The president did not dominate this session the way he did the last NATO summit in November 1985. And the alliance seems to be pointing toward the post-Reagan era.

The Brussels NATO summit called for renewed East-West talks on controlling conventional arms, outlining a process that could take many years to complete.

Major Attraction

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A Japanese company's proposal to build and operate a 300 mph train that would whisk visitors 20 miles from Orlando International Airport to Disney World in 10 minutes is generating interest among officials.

"Without question, it would put this community on the map as a transportation showcase," said Orange County Commissioner Lou Treadway.

The train "could become a major attraction itself," Charles Ridgway, director of publicity for Disney, said.

The project, still in the experimental stages, would cost between $500 million and $800 million and would be privately funded, according to representatives of the company, Mag-Lev of Florida.

The company's representatives said they would need the commission's help in acquiring the needed right-of-way for the train but that it would be possible to opereate the trains within the next 10 years.

Spiders Too Much For Pirates

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

HAMPTON, Va. — In the end, it was just a case of Richmond having too much and East Carolina just not having enough.

The Spiders used their advantages in size, experience and talent to take a 67-41 win over East Carolina in the first round of the Colonial Athletic Association basketball tournament Saturday.

"Richmond was just much better and really played well," said ECU coach Mike Steele. "We didn't play well and Richmond had a lot to do with that."

For the Pirates, who have battled all season with a collection of freshmen and walkons along with a few inexperienced upperclassmen all of whom are under 6-6, the game was made even tougher due to the loss of leading scorer Gus Hill (19.3 ppg) two weeks ago with a broken foot.

Woolfolk scored 14 of his points in the opening 20 minutes as the Pirates failed to control the inside.

He opened the first half scoring with a free throw and closed it with a short jumper inside as the Spiders held a 34-21 halftime advantage over the smaller Pirates.

ECU led once, at 5-3 in the opening minutes following a score by Dominique Martin inside.

But from there, Richmond retook the lead as Woolfolk hit a free throw and Rodney Rice hit a jumper for a 8-5 lead.

After Rice's basket, the Pirates had three shots at the basket on their next possession but came away empty.

Rice then scored again for a 10-5 lead. ECU countered with a 3-pointer by Reed Lose to make it 10-8 with 13:36 remaining.

But Richmond went back ahead by four on a dunk by Woolfolk. It was the first of three straight baskets by the burly 6-5, 230-pound senior that put Richmond ahead 16-8. Rice added another jumper and the Spiders were up by 10 at 18-8 with 11:04 remaining.

The lead fluctuated from there, with Richmond maintaining at least a nine-point advantage for the rest of the half.

But in the second half, things got even worse for the Pirates. After hitting on only 33 percent of their shots from the field in the first half, ECU connected on only 26 percent over the final 20 minutes. And for a team with virtually no inside game, that spelled doom.

"For us to have a chance to win the game, we had to shoot the ball real well and they would have had to shoot the ball poorly," Steele said.

It just didn't happen. The Spiders shot 52 percent for the game and more importantly held a 29-17 edge on the defensive boards.

"The most important thing was we took control of the boards in the second half," said Richmond coach Dick Tarrant. "I think fatigue set in on East Carolina. They were so undersized and they just tired out."

For the top-seeded Spiders, the wide margin of victory was much different than the past two games against the Pirates during the regular season when both games went down to the final minutes.

For ECU guard Reed Lose, who led the Pirates with 18 points, the game was a disappointing end to the year.

"It's too bad we didn't shoot the ball well," he said. "It's too bad we got beat by that many points because we've worked so hard this year.

"With Gus out, we had to all pull

Safely In

East Carolina's John Adams slides safely into home plate in the second inning of the opening game against Providence Saturday. Adams had scored from third on an error on the relay of a fly ball that had moved him from second to third. Friar catcher Joe Mariani (left) makes the catch but it unable to make the tag. Pirates Sweep Twinbill From Providence Nine

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Tommy Boswell's grand slam home run keyed East Carolina to an 8-3 baseball victory in the first game of a doubleheader against Providence College Saturday afternoon, while Calvin Brown drove in three runs to help the Pirates to a 12-5 win in the nightcap.

The sweep brought the Pirate record to 6-2 on the season while the Friars continued to suffer through a swing through North Carolina, dipping to 1-7.

For Boswell, a junior transfer from N.C. State, playing college baseball for the first time this year, it was his first collegiate hit.

Providence was led by Don Martone on the afternoon as he hit three home runs off Pirate pitching.

"We swung the bats well," Coach Gary Overton said afterward. "That was the whole key for the day."

East Carolina collected seven hits in the opening game, including two doubles and Boswell's homer. In the second game, the Pirates banged out 13 hits.

"I thought (Gary) Smith (winner in the second game) threw well. (Scott) Stevens (who went the first game) threw the best he has, but he is still capable of doing better."

East Carolina took the lead in the opener in the second inning and never was caught. Steve Godin led off the second with a double to left and John Adams walked. Both were sacrificed up and Whit Whitley's sacrifice fly brought in Godin. An error on the relay allowed Adams to score also.

The Friars closed the gap to 2-1 on Martone's first homer, in the top of the fourth.

But the Pirates came right back with four in the bottom of the inning. With one away, Adams singled and both David Ritchie and Whitley drew walks, loading the bases. Boswell then responded with his grand slam, knocking the ball out in left field.

East Carolina added two more in the fifth, making it 8-1. Brown singled and Godin beat out a bunt single. Both were sacrificed up and a balk scored Brown. Ritchie singled to left, driving in Godin.

Martone's second homer accounted for the final two Providence runs in the sixth. Chris Maloof led off with an infield hit and Bob Kelley came on to run for him, scoring on Martone's homer to left.

Stevens went the distance for the win, his second in three decisions, giving up six hits.

The Pirates took the lead in the second game in the third. Chris Cauble walked and Jay McGraw was hit by a pitch. Brown then singled in Cauble for a 1-0 lead.

The Pirates made it 2-0 with another in the fourth. Adams singled and moved up on an error on Ritchie's grounder. Both were sacrificed up a base and Dom DiGirolamo's single to left brought in Adams.

Providence came back to tie it up in the top of the fifth. Branden Beckstein walked and with one out, Martone again came up with the long ball, knotting it at 2-2.

The Pirates then exploded for nine runs in the bottom of the fifth, putting the game away with an 11-2 lead. With one away, Godin reached on an error and walks were issued in order to Adams, Ritchie and Boswell. The latter brought in Godin with the go-ahead run. DiGirolamo singled to right, scoring Adams and Thomas singled to right, scoring Ritchie. Cauble followed with a single to center, scoring Boswell and courtesy runner Kevin Riggs, but Thomas was thrown out trying to score.

McGraw kept it going with a walk and Brown doubled in both runners. Godin followed with another double, scoring Brown, and Adams singled in Godin.

Providence came back with three in the sixth. Beckstein singled with one away and Bill Butler doubled to center. With two away, Kelly reached on an error, scoring Beckstein and Butler. Steve Wright walked and Tom Mazzanotte singled in Kelley.

Thomas and DiGirolamo led the Pirates with three hits each while Brown, Godin and Adams each added two.

The Pirates return to action this afternoon at 1 p.m., hosting Fairfield in a single game. The two teams also meet in single games on Monday and Tuesday, both of those scheduled for 3 p.m.

Clemson Surprises Injured Jackets In Double Overtime

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — With starting center Tom Hammonds out with an ankle injury, Georgia Tech coach Bobby Cremins wasn't sure what to expect when the 13th-ranked Yellow Jackets met Clemson on Saturday.

What Cremins got was a 97-94 double-overtime loss to the Tigers, who took advantage of Hammonds' injury against North Carolina on Wednesday.

"Believe it or not, I was afraid we might get blown out," Cremins said. "Our players really responded well. When you respond like that, and you play like that, you'd like to see them get a reward, a win.

"But I tell you what, we're a pretty good basketball team if we can come in here without Hammonds and play like that."

The victory was Clemson's second straight over a top 20 team. The Tigers beat No. 9 Duke 79-77 on Wednesday. Going into the Duke game, Clemson had lost eight of their last nine games.

With the late-season turnaround, Clemson Coach Cliff Ellis is now thinking of Atlantic Coast Conference tournament possibilities — but not beyond that.

"I'm not even thinking about the postseason bid," Ellis said. "Just the tournament. This doesn't salvage the year, but it soothes a whole lot."

Jerry Pryor hit a short baseline jumper with 1:10 left in the second overtime, and Tim Kincaid hit both ends of a one-and-one with four seconds left as Clemson stunned Georgia Tech at Littlejohn Coliseum.

Clemson finishes the regular season 14-13 overall and 4-10 in the ACC. The Yellow Jackets fell 21-8 and 8-6.

Georgia Tech forward Dennis Scott, who finished with 18 points, twice tied the game with 3-pointers, including a long bomb with 52 seconds left in regulation to tie it at 75 and send the game into the first overtime.

But it was Scott's 12-foot miss from the lane with seven seconds left in the second overtime that left the Yellow Jackets with a 95-94 deficit and forced them to foul Kincaid.

Clemson center Elden Campbell, who had 14 of his 26 points in the first half, gave Clemson an early 14-6 lead. Duane Ferrell, who had a game-high 34 points, helped bring Georgia Tech back as the Yellow Jackets tied it at 33 at the half.

Georgia Tech charged to 42-35 early in the second half. But after the Tigers cut the lead to one, Scott hit a 3-pointer to give the Yellow Jackets a 53-45 lead with 13:26 left.

Campbell and freshman Dale Davis worked inside to help the Tigers tie it at 69 on a jumper by Davis with 3:21 left in regulation. A jumper by Brian Oliver, who had 26 points, and a free throw by Ferrell gave Georgia Tech a 72-69 lead before Clemson scored six straight for a 75-72 lead to set up Scott's 3-pointer to send the game into the first overtime.

The Tigers led by four points four times in the first extra period before Scott hit a 3-pointer with 1:36 left to cut the lead to 85-84. After a Campbell dunk, Scott tied it with a second 3-pointer to force a second extra period.

The Yellow Jackets took an 93-89 lead with 3:11 left in the second extra period before Campbell and senior Grayson Marshall scored to tie it. Pryor then drove the baseline for a bucket to give the Tigers the lead for good.

Pryor finished with 20 points, Marshall added 19 and Kincaid had 17. Davis had 13 points for Clemson.

Mason Holds Off Late Dukes Rally

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

HAMPTON, Va. — George Mason held off a late charge by James Madison to avoid being the second upset victim of the day in the Colonial Athletic Association Basketball Tournament Saturday, taking a 61-57 basketball win over the Dukes.

Earlier in the day, William and Mary upset American, 76-75.

The Patriots led at the half, 37-26, but JMU rallied back and at one point, even took a one-point lead at 55-54 with 4:18 remaining.

But GMU quickly tied it on a free throw by Robert Dykes. Kenny Sanders then added two more free throws with 3:08 to go to give the Patriots a 57-55 edge.

Robert Griffin pulled the Dukes back into a tie with 1:48 to go on a short jumper but that was the last tie of the ballgame.

The Dukes had a chance to tie with 14 seconds remaining when Benny Gordon drove the lane and was fouled, but he missed both free throws.

GMU then was able to seal with win with two free throws by Dykes with three seconds remaining to provide the final margin.

Dykes led the way for GMU with 18 points and nine rebounds. Brian Miller added 13 and Anthony Davis chipped in 11 for the Patriots, 19-9.

Barry Brown and Kennard Winchester were the keys for JMU, scoring 16 and 13 points, respectively.

GMU led 52-45 with 6:40 left when Brown hit three free throws over the next two possessions to make it 52-49 with 6:14 remaining.

Gordon pulled JMU within 52-50 with a free throw at the 5:39 mark. He missed the second but Ralph Glenn came up with the rebound and scored underneath to tie the game, 52-52 with 5:08 left.

Gordon later hit a 3-pointer for a 55-54 JMU lead but it would prove to be their only lead of the second half as GMU held the Dukes off from there.

Indians Upset American, 76-75

By TIM CHANDLER
Reflector Sports Writer

HAMPTON, Va. — American University gave new meaning to an old phrase by snatching defeat from the jaws of victory Saturday.

William & Mary's Tribe rallied from a 12-point second half deficit in the opening round of the Colonial Athletic Association Basketball Tournament to score a 76-75 upset over the Eagles.

The seventh-seeded Tribe pulled out the victory thanks to a 10-foot jumper by Mark Batzel, who led all scorers in the contest with 24 points, with eight seconds remaining.

American, which entered the tournament as the second-seeded team, had a last second chance to pull out the win, however, a 3-point attempt by Eric White at the buzzer was short.

The win boosted the Tribe's record to 9-18 for the year and sent them into the tournament's semifinals for the first time since 1985. American winds up its season with a 14-13 record.

The Eagles led by as many as 14 points, 57-43 with 12:04 remaining, before William & Mary began a comeback.

Behind the inside scoring of 6-9 Tim Trout, who scored 14 points (13 in the second half) and hauled in 15 rebounds, and the perimeter accuracy of Jimmy Apple and Greg Burzell, who finished with 18 and 12 points respectively, the Tribe whittled away at the lead.

The Tribe outscored the Eagles 14-2 over the final 4:18 of the contest enroute to posting their finest shooting percentage (58.5 percent) of the year. During that run, Trout, Batzel and Burzell took care of all of the scoring duties for the Tribe.

The Tribe put itself in position to win the contest when Burzel drove the lane and canneda 12-foot jump shot and was fouled by the Eagles' Mike Sumner. His free throw made it 75-74 in favor of American with 46 seconds showing on the clock.

American had a chacne to extend its lead with 23 seconds remaining, but Dale Spears missed the front end of a one-and-one opportunity, giving the Tribe a chance for the game-winning shot.

American was led by Daryl Holmes' 19 points. Mike Sampson added 12, while Brock Wortman and Sumner chipped in 11 and 10 points respectively.

Postema Dreams Impossible

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — Pam Postema, who could become major league baseball's first female umpire, is dreaming an impossible dream.

"What I'd like to do is sneak up real quietly if I do get there," Postema said Saturday before she worked the Atlanta Braves and Montreal Expos exhibition game — one of a full slate she is umpiring this spring.

"She's here not because she's a female," Al Vargo, National League supervisor of umpires, said of Postema's tryout. "She's here because she's an umpire.

"After spending 11 years in the minor leagues, she deserved a look and we're giving it to here. What the future is, I don't know?"

Postema and Vargo were at a news conference scheduled by the league more than a week ago to make the umpire available for interviews.

The 34-year-old Postema, who is 5-foot-8, is under contract to the Triple A American Association, where she worked last season after four years in the Pacific Coast League.

"I'm hoping to do well and make it to the major leagues." Postema said. "That's the hope of every Triple A umpire. There are a lot of other guys hoping too."

Postema, a native of Willard, Ohio, who lives in Phoenix, Ariz., during the offseason and drives a delivery truck for United Parcel Service, said she played softball as a girl, but never thought about umpiring until she saw an ad in a Gainesville, Fla. newspaper for the Al Summers umpiring school while living with her sister.

"It's not something I always wanted to do," she explained. "I was at a period in my life where I didn't know what I wanted to do."

So she went to the school and got a job in the Gulf Coast League that year, sending her on the route to her new career.

"The minors are tough. It gets easier as you go up. The ballplayers are better, the pitching is better and you get better."

together. If we shoot the ball well, we play well."

The closest the Pirates would get in the second half was 11 points after a follow shot by Kenny Murphy made it 34-23 just 1:08 into the final 20 minutes.

From there, Richmond steadily pulled away. Woolfolk scored on a 3-point play with 16:37 remaining to make it 40-25 and the rout was on.

Richmond would lead by as many as 29 points at 67-38 with 29 seconds to go.

"We didn't shoot the ball well," Steele said. "They stayed in a zone. The way you pull a team out of a zone is to hit the outside shots. We didn't."

Rice added 13 points for Richmond, mostly on long-range shots that kept ECU honest defensively.

Richmond takes on the winner of the Navy-UNC-Wilmington game Sunday in the semifinals. Richmond moves to 22-6 on the year with the win while ECU ends the season at 7-21.

"We had more adversity than any other group I've been associated with," Steele said. "We didn't win many ballgames but I'm anxious to get back here next year.

"We could have won some more games and that was with some kids with some real deficiencies, (but) I'm proud of what they accomplished."

Purdue Tops Michigan For Title

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Junior center Melvin McCants felt woozy early and after calming down some "butterflies" scored a career-high 24 points and grabbed 10 rebounds to lead No. 2 Purdue over No. 10 Michigan 80-67 as the Boilermakers clinched their first outright Big Ten basketball championship since 1969 Saturday.

"I guess it was nervousness, because we knew we could win the conference championship. I felt some butterflies in my stomach and I felt woozy," said McCants, who asked coach Gene Keady to pull him in the game's early moments.

Keady agreed, and after a few minutes on the bench McCants returned to score 13 first-half points and help Purdue take the lead for good.

"I just sat down, relaxed and was ready to go when coach sent me back in," said McCants, who was 14 of 16 from the free throw line, including three key tosses in the final minutes.

Purdue survived frigid shooting down the stretch despite shoting 51 percent for the game. The Boilermakers, seemingly in control with a 65-53 lead and 8:58 to play, went nearly 6½ minutes without scoring before McCants made two free throws with 2:36 to play.

Gary Grant, who led Michigan with 16, had helped pull the Wolverines to within two at 65-63 before the free throws.

Troy Lewis then made a pair of free throws to give Purdue a 69-63 lead. After a Grant basket, McCants made the first of two free throws with 1:11 to play. Todd Mitchell got the rebound of the missed second shot and hit a jumper as he was fouled with 1:09 to go. He made the free throw to give Purdue a 73-65 lead.

"Sometimes that just happens," Lewis said of the dry spell in the final minutes. "It sort of shows our character, We didn't fold ... I think it shows our maturity."

Lewis made one 3-point shot, extending his Big Ten record of games with at least one 3-point goal to 29 and giving him one in 44 consecutive games overall. Purdue's No. 5 career-scorer with 1,941 points finished with 11 as he reached double figures for the 30th straight game and the 61st time in his last 62 contests.

"I just think Purdue played extremely well," said Michigan Coach Bill Frieder. "McCants had a career game. We knew what he could do, but he was just outstanding there."

Purdue, 26-2 and 15-1 with nine consecutive victories, trailed only once, when the Wolverines scored the game's first four points.

Michigan, 23-6 and 12-4, fell behind 18-10 as Purdue made eight of its first 11 shots.

"I don't think we played well, but I think it was their defense that caused our poor shooting," Frieder said after his club shot 44 percent, compared to the 54.6 percent mark it brought into the game.

The Boilermakers opened their biggest lead of the game, 15 points, as Michigan made only one field goal within a 7:07 span.

A McCants free throw gave Purdue a 21-10 advantage with 11:15 remaining in the opening half. A rebound layup by Kip Jones put Purdue up 25-12 and, after two consecutive Michigan baskets, the Boilermakers scored six straight points to take a 31-16 lead with 8:10 left in the half.

Nebraska.....93

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs says all three of his Big Eight Conference titles have been sweet, although he admits the one his fourth-ranked Sooners won Saturday may be a little bit special.

"For some reason, I don't know, I thought we would win the Big Eight championship," Tubbs said after Oklahoma rolled to a 113-93 victory over Nebraska. "I sensed that in early November.

"They did some things that probably a lot of people back in the summer didn't think they could do," he said of his players. "And we didn't exactly catch the Big Eight Conference on a down year ... that makes this special."

The Sooners were picked by conference media in the preseason to finish third behind Missouri and Kansas. However, Oklahoma swept every conference team except Missouri and Kansas State to finish the regular season with a 12-2 league record. Kansas State was a game back at 11-3.

"I don't think anybody's ecstatic over it. We just kind of go about our job," said Tubbs, whose teams also won conference crowns in 1984 and 1985. "This was almost like another day at the office, and the reason they like to think that way is because we feel we've got a couple of goals ahead of us."

Oklahoma, 27-3 overall, will be the top seed in the upcoming conference tournament, and will meet eighth-seeded Colorado in the first round.

The Sooners are also hoping for a top seed in one of the NCAA regionals, and while Tubbs said he hasn't spent too much time thinking about that, "I think winning it (the conference tournament) will help us a lot."

For a while Saturday, Nebraska didn't do much to help Oklahoma's cause. The Cornhuskers were sharper than the sluggish Sooners and handled Oklahoma's press well, grabbing a 15-10 lead six minutes into the game.

The score was tied at 27-27 with seven minutes remaining before halftime when Oklahoma substitute Andre Wiley scored eight points to spark an 18-8 run that made it 45-35. The Sooners led 52-44 at the half.

"I think Andre Wiley did an outstanding job," said Tubbs. "I think it speaks well for him to hang in like he has through the ups and downs.

"I think he was well-prepared, and he was a big factor."

Wiley, a junior college transfer who is ninth on the team in minutes played, finished with 16 points and 10 rebounds in a season-high 22 minutes.

"I just wanted to come in and help out, do what I can to contribute to the victory," Wiley said. "I think I'm really in sync now, and just ready to take off."

Oklahoma broke the game open in the first five minutes of the second half, outscoring the Cornhuskers 24-6 for a 76-50 lead. Forward Harvey Grant scored 11 of his team-high 26 points in that run.

"I just think it was a matter of time before the python ate us, or swallowed us," said Nebraska Coach Danny Nee, whose team dropped to 13-17 overall, 4-10 in the Big Eight.

"We were just going to come in and attack against the press and play as well as we could play," Nee said. "I'm very proud of the way Nebraska played today. It was good for us emotionally and mentally."

The Sooners led by as many as 30 in the second half, and topped the 100-point mark for the 17th time this season.

Ricky Grace scored 19 points and Stacey King added 17 for Oklahoma. Guard Mookie Blaylock had three steals to set a Big Eight single-season record with 117, two more than Colorado's Jay Humphries had during the 1982-83 season.

Nebraska was led by Pete Manning's 27 points, 21 in the second half. Henry T. Buchanan added 20 and Derrick Vick had 10.

Texas-El Paso.....80

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Tim Hardaway made four free throws in the final 83 seconds of the second overtime, including two with 12 seconds left, as Texas-El Paso upset No. 15 Brigham Young 83-80 Saturday in the final Western Athletic Conference basketball game for both teams.

BYU, 24-4 overall and 13-3 in the WAC, had won 15 straight at home but the streak ended when Marty Haws' 3-point attempt rolled off the rim as time expired in the second overtime. UTEP is 21-8 and 10-6.

The Miners nearly gave away the game several times after leading 65-57 with four minutes remaining. BYU went on a 11-3 spurt and tied the game 68-68 on two free throws by Michael Smith with 42 seconds left in regulation.

But the Cougars missed five free throws in the second overtime, including the front end of a one-and-one opportunity by Haws with UTEP ahead 81-80 and 13 seconds left.

BYU also had chances to win at the end of both regulation and the first overtime. BYU had the ball with time running out at the end of regulation but Antonio Davis blocked Smith's shot with three seconds left. Brian Taylor's 15-foot jump shot at the end of the first overtime hit the front of the rim.

Two free throws by Prince Stewart put UTEP ahead for good 76-74 to start the second overtime. Hardaway, who finished with 24 points and eight assists, put the Miners 80-76 with a pair of free throws with 1:23 left and his two free throws with 12 seconds left sealed the victory.

Chris Sandle scored 21 points for UTEP. Smith had 25 for BYU and Jeff Chatman scored 22 points and grabbed 18 rebounds before fouling out in the second overtime.

Loyola (18).....110
Portland.....104

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — Hank Gathers had a tournament-record 33 points and 18 rebounds Saturday to lead 18th-ranked Loyola-Marymount to a 110-104 victory over Portland in the first round of the West Coast Athletic Conference tournament.

The Lions, 25-3, matched their Division I-leading scoring average and extended the nation's longest current winning steak to 22 games.

Despite 23 points by Gathers, Loyola led only 50-48 at halftime as Portland repeatedly beat the Lions' full-court press with long passes that resulted in uncontested layups.

The Pilots, 6-22, pulled into a 73-73 tie with 10:23 left in the game but Loyola scored nine points in 44 seconds, triggering a 29-10 run that gave the Lions a 102-83 lead with 4:23 remaining.

Portland used a 19-4 run to pull within 106-102 with 30 seconds left, but the Lions sank four free throws to ice the victory.

Guard Bo Kimble, who made only one of 12 shots in the first half, finished with 23 points and guard Corey Gaines added 20.

Portland was led by center Adam Simmons' 28 points and 18 rebounds and guard Adolphus Gaffney's 23 points.

DePaul.....77
Louisville.....58

ROSEMONT, Ill. (AP) — Stanley Brundy scored 26 points and Rod Strickland added 19 as DePaul defeated Louisville 77-58 Saturday, giving the Blue Demons their sixth consecutive victory.

The loss halted Louisville's seven-game winning streak as the Cardinals, champions of the Metro Conference, closed the regular season with a 20-10 record. DePaul, with one game remaining, is 20-7.

Strickland put on a show for the national television audience. He broke a 9-9 tie to start a 12-point run in less than three minutes and assisted on the next five baskets, with Kevin Edwards scoring eight of the points.

Trinity Captures League Title

HOOKERTON — Trinity Christian inched past Faith Christian, 47-46, to capture the Mid-Atlantic Christian Athletic Association's basketball tournament championship Saturday afternoon.

Raleigh Christian won the girls' title, downing Trinity, 42-22.

Faith jumped out to a 14-9 lead in the opening period of the boys' title game. Trinity rallied to cut one off that in the second period, but was still down, 23-17, at the half.

Faith led by as much as eight points in the third period, but Trinity again rallied to draw even at the end of the period, 31-31.

In the final quarter, Faith moved out by five, 41-36, but Trinity again came back to tie it up with three minutes left. Then, with about 1:30 left, Kreston Welch hit two free throws to put Trinity ahead, 47-46. Trinity then got the ball back with 1:13 remaining and froze the ball. Faith was then called for a technical for non-action with 30 seconds left, but Trinity missed both shots, then took a shot with 23 seconds left and Faith rebounded.

But Faith missed in the final seconds and Trinity got the rebound and ran out the clock.

Kirk and Kreston Welch each had 18 points to lead Trinity. Kirk Welch led Trinity on the boards with 18 while Michael Harrell pulled 10.

Raleigh's girls inched out to a 10-8 lead in the first quarter, then pulled away in the second frame, posting a 12-2 margin. That left Raleigh up 22-10 at the half.

Raleigh ran the lead out to 30-16 in the third period and outscored Trinity, 12-6, down to the wire.

Gatlin Paces Maryland To 69-63 Win Over Cavs

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Keith Gatlin scored 20 points and Brian Williams keyed a 15-1 second half run to lead Maryland to a 69-63 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over Virginia Saturday.

Williams, a 6-foot-10 freshman, scored eight of his 17 points during the decisive seven-minute stretch to help the Terrapins, 16-11 overall, 6-8 in the league, turn an 11-point deficit into a 56-53 lead with 5:42 remaining.

Virginia, 13-7, 5-9, could manage just one Kenny Turner free throw during that same stretch.

Maryland took the lead for good at 61-58 with 2:45 left on a three-point play by Williams. The Terps outscored the Cavaliers 11-5 from that point on to build its final margin of victory.

Virginia used a six-minute Maryland drought midway through the first half to build a 27-16 lead.

Richard Morgan led Virginia with 19 points.

The victory was Maryland's third in its last four games and keeps the Terps in the running for an NCAA Tournament bid.

The Terps' spot in the 64-team field, however, may be contingent on how it does next weekend at the ACC Tournament in Greensboro, N.C.

Fifth-seeded Maryland will play either Duke or Georgia Tech in the first round of the conference event Friday.

"I'm not on the (NCAA) committee, but I think it's going to take at least one win next week to get us in," Lewis said. "It's a judgement-type thing. I know if it was up to us, we'd belong."

Williams, who played the role of emotional leader — frequently gesturing to the crowd and his teammates during the game — said Maryland's uncertain postseason position might have contributed to its problems early in the game.

"We knew how much this game meant to us and early on, I think the importance might have gotten to us," Williams said.

Even though it took until the final 13 minutes of the game for his team to finally come to life, Maryland Coach Bob Wade said he was never worried about the Terps' ability to come back.

"We came out sluggish in the second half and went down by 11, but we never gave up," he said. "I had no doubts. I never do, no matter what the score is. Even though we were struggling on offense we were still playing good defense."

Drug Testing Not Only S.C. Motive

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Bob Marcum says his handling of the drug testing program at the University of South Carolina is not the only motive behind his firing as athletic director, a published report said Saturday.

Marcum on Friday told The Greenville News that other motives will be revealed in the course of his planned contract lawsuit against the school.

"I'm sure that will come out," Marcum said without elaborating. He said the university's board of trustees began an internal audit of the athletic department several weeks before his firing this week, and that exerpts from the audit were mailed anonymously to trustees and others in an effort to discredit him.

"It did not come from within the athletic department," he said. "They had an ax to grind or it was a witchhunt."

Holderman said Marcum was fired because he had misrepresented South Carolina's drug-testing program and had not followed school policy.

Othniel Wienges, the chairman of the Sotuh Carolina board, said Thursday there had been earlier disagreements between Marcum and Holderman over Marcum's contract.

Wienges also said there were "disgruntled" employees in the athletic department and that allegations had been made to the board about the department's expenses.

The task force assembled by Holderman to examine the testing program found that in at least one instance, a player tested positive for drugs at least three times but was not suspended from the team as required by school policy.

Marcum said Friday some of the task force's conclusions were inaccurate.

He said he and head football coach Joe Morrison knew of an incident involving the retesting of a football player for drug use, but the player did not test positive three times.

Meanwhile, the task force did not conclude that Marcum covered up positive test results, the group's chairman said Friday.

"I didn't think it was our job to see whether or not there was a cover-up," said Dr. Alexander Donald. "I have no way to say Mr. Marcum covered up anything."

Donald said the group found Marcum had not properly carried out the testing program.

Knights End In 2nd Place

WINSTON-SALEM — Woodland Christian rolled to a 71-51 victory over Greenville Christian in the North Carolina Christian Activities Association basketball championship game Saturday afternoon.

The Knights, who wound up the season with a 22-5 record, held a slim 17-16 lead after the first period. But Woodland pulled away in the second period, posting an 18-9 margin. That left Woodland in a 34-26 halftime lead.

Woodland added another point to the lead in the third period, taking a 48-39 lead into the final eight minutes. In that quarter, Woodland outhit the Knights, 23-12, to take the win.

"They played weli and had balanced scoring," GCA coach Dale Thatcher said. "We tried everything we could to get them off balance, but they played over our heads. We may have been a little tired, but they were a good team.

"We overachieved the whole year and we went further than a lot of teams with more talent," Thatcher said. "So we're not discouraged with the outcome (second place in the state). I'm proud of our guys."

Ashley Bell led Woodland with 17 points while Keith Tucker had 15, Mark Hutchins had 14 and Jamie Shumate added 10.

GCA was led by Robin House with 27 while John May added 14.

Even Stadium Attacks The Mets

By The Associated Press

The New York Mets' got off to an inauspicious start at their new training complex in their first game at the new St. Lucie County Sports Complex in Port St. Lucie, Fla., Saturday.

Not only did the Mets lose to the Los Angeles Dodgers 5-2 in 10 innings, but the Stadium rebelled against them in the eighth inning, when 37 outfield sprinklers suddenly erupted in unison, forcing the fielders to scatter for cover.

The artificial shower was symbolic — elsewhere in Florida, the showers were real, causing six games to be postponed by rain — the Chicago White Sox vs. Boston; Philadelphia vs. Toronto; Detroit vs. Minnesota; Pittsburgh vs. Texas, ppd; Japan's Chunichi Dragons vs. Atlanta's split squad and Cincinnati vs. St. Louis.

The Dodgers-Mets contest was one of only four that got played in Florida. In the others, Houston beat Kansas City 5-4 in 10 innings; Montreal beat Atlanta 6-3 and Baltimore beat the New York Yankees 3-2.

In games played in Arizona, it was Seattle 7, Oakland 5; the Chicago Cubs 5, Milwaukee 4 in 11 innings; San Francisco 5, Cleveland 2 and California 7, San Diego 3.

The Dodgers' rally was keyed by an ex-Met, Danny Heep, who drove in Tracy Woodson with a single off rookie Todd Wellborn for the go-ahead run in the 10th inning. John Shelby later drove in two more for a double.

Astros 5, Royals 4 (10 innings)

The Royals led 4-1 before surrendering three runs in the bottom of the eighth, with the tying run scoring on an error by Royals catcher Dan Billardello.

Expos 6, Braves 3

Ron Shepherd's three-run homer off Jim Acker capped a five-run Montreal seventh inning to give the Expos the win. Gregg Colbrunn had an RBI double and Tom Foley added a run-scoring single in the big inning. The Braves scored their three runs in the fifth off rookie lefthander Steve Shirley.

Orioles 3, Yankees 2

Carl Nichols' two-out homer in the seventh gave the Orioles the win. Trailing 2-1, Baltimore got one run when Joe Orsulak grounded into a double play before Nichols' shot, which hit the top of the left-field wall and bounded over. Cal Ripken also homered for the Orioles. Mariners 7, Athletics 5

Alvin Davis hit a two-run home run to highlight a six-run Seattle second inning.

Seattle began the inning with five consecutive singles and Davis finished the rally with his two-out homer.

Giants 5, Indians 2

Mike Aldrete had three hits and scored two runs as San Francisco evened its spring record at 1-1.

Aldrete led off the third inning with a single and later scored on Jeffrey Leonard's single to put the Giants ahead to stay. Jose Uribe and Aldrete singled home runs in the sixth for a 5-1 lead. Angels 7, Padres 3

Jack Howell had two RBI, including a run-scoring double in a six-run ninth inning that carried California past San Diego.

The Angels, who have beaten the Padres twice, sent 13 men to the plate to erase a 3-1 deficit. Loser Ed Vosberg, who allowed eight of nine batters he faced in the inning to reach base. Cubs 5, Brewers 4

Paul Noce scored from third base on the second error of the 11th inning by second baseman Billy Bates, giving the Cubs their second victory in as many days.

Bates singled in two runs for the Brewers in the fifth inning.

INJURIES:

Boston right-hander Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, a 16-game winner in 1986 who missed most of last season because of a shoulder injury, was hit on the inside of the right leg by a line drive while throwing batting practice. Boyd was taken to Winter Haven Hospital, where X-rays were negative. He is expected to miss a scheduled start against Kansas City Tuesday at Baseball City....

Terry Leach, scheduled to pitch for the Mets Saturday, was scratched because of a mild back spasm. He is scheduled to pitch Monday in a Mets-Dodgers game at Vero Beach, Fla.

SIGNINGS

Outfielders Ellis Burks and Carlos Quintana have agreed to terms with Boston, putting all 39 Red Sox under conteract. Burks, called up last April 29, .272 with 20 homers, 59 RBI and 27 stolen bases in 133 games ...

San Diego signed right-handed relief pitcher Lance McCullers to a two-year contract and renewed the contracts of pitchers Mark Grant and Dave Leiper.

Memphis State Downs Hokies

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Senior guard Dwight Boyd, playing in his final regular season game, scored 28 points and grabbed eight rebounds Saturday to lead Memphis State to a 112-104 Metro Conference victory over Virginia Tech at the Mid-South Coliseum.

Fellow senior Dewayne Bailey, who was honored with Boyd before the game, added 18 points as Memphis State finished the regular season with an overall record of 17-10.

Virginia Tech finished the regular season with a 19-9 overall slate. Both teams finished with 6-6 conference marks.

The Virginia Tech Hokies were led by Bimbo Coles with 28 and Wally Lancaster added 25, reserve Quinton Nottingham contributed 23, Anthony Moses had 12 and Roy Brow scored 10.

Nottingham and Lancaster both had 18-point performances in the second half.

Other Memphis State players in double figures were Elliot Perry and Rodney Douglas with 14 each and Cheyenne Gibson who scored 10.

Memphis State's Steve Ballard led all rebounders with 12. Brow and Tim Anderson had eight rebounds each for Virginia Tech.

Virginia Tech, which trailed by 22 at the half, battled back behind a tight press, which caused numerous Memphis State turnovers, and 3-point field goals, mainly by Lancaster and Nottingham.

Virginia Tech cut the Memphis State lead to three at 105-102 on a 3-pointer by Coles with 2:16 remaining but could manage only one more field goal the rest of the game.

But Virginia Tech also shot poorly, hitting on 11 of 32 field goal attempts in the half. Memphis State, meanwhile, connected on 25 of 45 field goal attempts in the first 20 minutes.

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Sophomore Damon Williams scored 20 points, including 11 in a key second-half surge, to lead Virginia Military Institute to a 79-60 upset of East Tennessee State Saturday and a berth in the Southern Conference Tournament finals.

The seventh-seeded Keydets, 13-16, will face fifth-seeded Tennessee-Chattanooga, 18-12, in Sunday's final.

After holding a 31-30 halftime lead, the Keydets went on a 21-2 run early in the second half to put the contest away. During the seven-minute stretch, Damon Williams sank four jumpers, including a 3-point shot, and two free throws. His free throws with 10:29 left gave the Keydets a 54-37 lead.

A Greg Dennis jumper with 10:13 remaining ended a three-minute scoring drought by the Buccaneers, but they could pull no closer than 11 points the rest of the way.

Damon's twin brother, Ramon — who scored six points in the second-half surge — finished with 18 points. Bobby Gardner had 14 points and 11 rebounds.

The third-seeded Bucs, 14-15, were led by Keith Jennings' 13 points, while Dennis had 12 and Roy Donaldson 11. The Bucs shot only 33 percent from the field.

Georgia.....80

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Willie Anderson scored 24 points and Alec Kessler had four points in a 10-2 burst at the start of the second half that put Georgia in control as the Bulldogs downed Tennessee 80-69 in a Southeastern Conference game Saturday.

Georgia, finishing the regular season 16-14 overall and 8-10 in the SEC, stretched a 31-29 halftime lead to 41-31 with the early run and the Vols were never able to get closer than five the rest of the way.

Mark Martin Captures Goodwrench 200 Running

ROCKINGHAM (AP) — Mark Martin inherited the lead when Harry Gant ran out of gas six laps from the end, and raced off to an easy victory Saturday in the Goodwrench 200 Busch Grand National stock car race.

Earnhardt finally fended off Shepherd and had his Chevrolet solidly in front when he suddenly slowed on lap 148 and drove to the garage area, a victim of an engine failure.

Shepherd took over the lead in his Buick, but Gant, who had been cruising along in third, suddenly came on to take the lead on lap 156, then began pulling away.

Meanwhile, Shepherd had to pit for a tire change on lap 167, losing a lap. Another pit stop on lap 182 ended Shepherd's chances.

Gant, also driving a Buick, built his lead over Martin's second-place Ford to about 14 seconds and appeared to have the race well in hand until he suddenly slowed on lap 192.

Gant coasted slowly to the pits, still leading. His crew dumped in a can of gas and tried to get Gant back onto the 1.017-mile oval in a hurry. But his engine failed and the crew had to push-start him.

By that time, Martin had roared past to take the lead on lap 193.

Martin beat second-place Mike Alexander to the finish by 13.54 seconds, winning the fourth Grand National race of his career.

"We didn't whip 'em," Martin said happily. "We just hung in there and ran as hard as we could all day long."

Most of the cautions were caused by spins or crashes, but no injuries were reported.

"We had calculated it to be pretty close," Gant said. "We really thought we were going to make it."

One thing that hurt Gant was that after the early rash of caution flags, the final 88 laps were run under the green flag.

Moody Holds 3-Shot Lead

INDIAN WELLS, Calif. (AP) — Orville Moody shot a 2-under-par 70 Saturday to maintain a three-stroke lead over Al Geiberger after three rounds of the $350,000 Vintage Invitational seniors tournament.

Moody, who tied the PGA Senior Tour 36-hole record of 14-under-par on Friday, put together a three-birdie, one-bogey round to go 16-under 200 heading into the final round.

Geiberger, who sank a 13-foot eagle on the 503-yard, par-5 No. 18 for a 67, reduced Moody's lead from five strokes to three.

All the golfers are playing the final two rounds on the 6,907-yard Mountain Course at the Vintage Club. The Desert Course also was used earlier.

"At least I'm in range now," said Geiberger, who lives in Indian Wells. "But I'm going to have to have a similar round Sunday. I just don't see Orville backing up at all."

Geiberger, who started the day with a bogey on the second hole, sank a 35-foot birdie putt on No. 8 to start his run at Moody.

"I played pretty good today," Moody said. "But when Al sank that long putt on No. 8, it seemed to turn his game around. I know Al can get hot, so I'm glad I've got a three-stroke lead going into the final day.

"I really hit more greens today (15), but I wasn't as close to the pin as I was the first two days."

Defending champion Bob Charles of New Zealand matched Geiberger's 67 to move into sole possession of third place with a 10-under-par 206.

Larry Mowry, second after two rounds, shot a 2-over-par 74 to drop into a tie with Miller Barber and Dale Douglass at 8-under-par.

Barber shot a third-round 66 and Douglass had a 68.

South African Gary Player finished the third round at 211 after posting a 70. Chi Chi Rodriguez was at 212 after shooting a 68. Arnold Palmer had a 71 for a 213 after three rounds.

In the super seniors (60 and over) division of the tournament, Roberto De Vincenzo shot even-par 72 to take the $7,100 first prize with a 3-under-par total of 213. Charlie Sifford was second at 215, collecting $5,340.

Sunday's final round will be televised nationally by ABC.

Third-round scores Saturday in the $350,000 Vintage Invitational seniors (50 and older) tournament at the Vintage Club's 6,-907-yard par-72 Mountain Course. Includes super seniors (60 and older) final totals and winnings:

Ferry, Reid Pace AP's All-ACC

AP Sports Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Duke junior Danny Ferry and North Carolina sophomore J.R. Reid, the players on whose shoulders their teams have rested in 1988, were runaway leaders in balloting for the 1988 all-Atlantic Coast Conference team announced Saturday by The Associated Press.

Ferry, the league's leading scorer at 19.4 points per game entering the final week of action, drew 97 out of a possible 100 points in voting by a panel of 10 sportswriters and broadcasters from throughout the ACC region.

Reid, second in the ACC in field goal accuracy at .630, was second in the voting with 91 points. He is averaging 18.2 points per game for the Tar Heels, who collide with the Blue Devils in the season finale leading up to the ACC tournament later this week.

Ferry and Reid were second-team members in 1987.

"Aside from his obvious talent, Danny's greatest asset is that he understands the game so well," Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "He's a 6-1 guard in a big man's body, and that's such a help to him because at 6-10, he sees more than a 6-1 guard can."

Last year, Reid was the object of criticism from Coach Dean Smith because of his defensive deficiencies, although his offense often made up for it. In 1988, Reid's game is different.

"J.R. has had an excellent year and has improved in all areas of his game from last season," Smith said. "Defenses on him have changed a great deal from last year and he's handled that well in doing what's best for the team."

The remaining members of the first team are Tom Hammonds of Georgia Tech, and North Carolina State's Charles Shackleford and Vinny Del Negro.

Hammonds, who got 76 points, is averaging 19.3 points per game, but had been scoring at a 26-point clip during Georgia Tech's seven-game winning streak. It was his play that helped the Yellow Jackets climb out of the second division of the ACC and get into contention for the ACC title before last Wednesday's loss to North Carolina.

Shackleford emerged as a catalyst for the Wolfpack's inside game this season, scoring 16.3 points per game and adding a league-leading 9.5 rebounds per game. Del Negro earned a starting spot this season and responded by scoring 16.1 points a game and ranking second in the league with 49 steals.

Shackleford collected 66 points and Del Negro had 50 points.

"I am very proud of kids like ... Vinny, who (was) not everybody's all-American, and then Shack, who has taken his share of criticism," N.C. State Coach Jim Valvano said.

Voted to the second team were Jeff Lebo of North Carolina, Duane Ferrell of Georgia Tech, Sam Ivy of Wake Forest, Chucky Brown of N.C. State and Mel Kennedy of Virginia.

Lebo leads the league in free throw shooting, hitting .877, and he is handing out 4.6 assists per game to rank in the league's top 10. Ferrell joined with Hammonds to help the Yellow Jackets earn another 20-victory season for Coach Bobby Cremins and move toward an NCAA tournament berth.

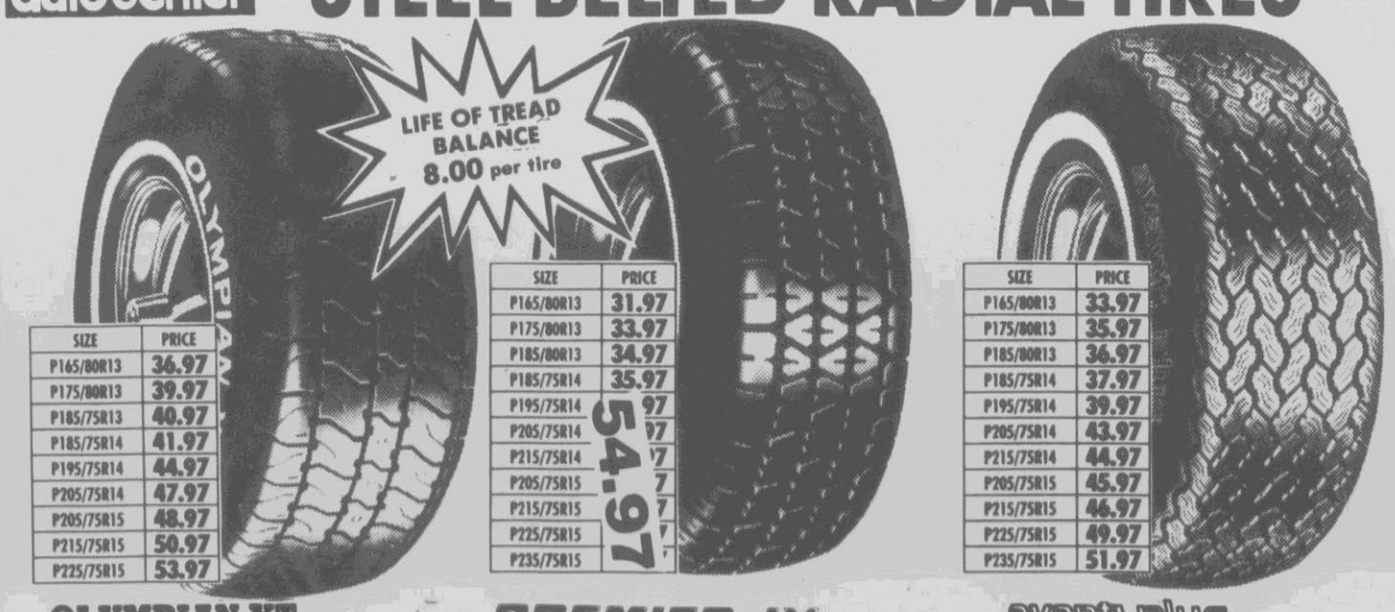

Ivy's performances have been a bright spot in a hard season at Wake Forest. As four of his teammates were knocked out for the season because of injury, Ivy helped pick up the offense and his 18.5 points per game make him the ACC's fifth leading scorer.

Brown teamed with Shackleford to form a tough inside duo for N.C. State. His intensity has produced nearly 17 points per game on 57 percent field goal shooting.

Kennedy sat out the early part of the season, but he has returned as the prime weapon in the the Virginia attack. Last week, Kennedy scored 29 points and guided the Cavaliers to an overtime victory over Wake Forest. Named to the third team were Maryland's Derrick Lewis, Georgia Tech's Craig Neal, Clemson's Elden Campbell, N.C. State's Chris Corchiani and Duke teammates Billy King and Kevin Strickland.

Nicklaus Still In Chase At Doral

Chip Beck has a chance to win his second.

"I'm, what, four back? But there's only three fellows in front of me," the 48-year-old Nicklaus said after Saturday's third round.

"I've been in this position about 17,000 times. And I've won a fair share of tournaments from where I am now. If I play a good round tomorrow, I stand a good chance of winning."

But Wadkins said Beck is "the man to beat" in Sunday's final round of the chase for a $180,000 first prize.

"He's playing mighty, mighty well," Wadkins said.

Wadkins, a 14-year PGA Tour veteran, came back from "a mental lapse" that cost him a bogey-6 to salvage a round of 70 and retain his two-shot lead after 54 holes.

"I was really pumped up, really excited. I'm pleased I was able to get excited and still control my emotions," he said.

Looking ahead to Sunday's final round, he said he would 'try to remember all the good last rounds I've had, try to remember all the good things I have done and just see what happens."

Wadkins, who has led all the way, finished 54 holes over the Blue Monster course at the Doral Country Club in 204, 12 under par.

Mark McCumber, battling what he called "a touch of the flu," moved up with a 68. McCumber, a two-time Doral Open winner, was alone at 207, three off the pace.

"I have a chance to win the championship and I've just felt awful all week — aches and chills and dizzy," he said.

Nicklaus remained in contention despite some shaky putting and bogeys on three of the par-5 holes. He had a hard-earned 71 that left him in a five-way tie at 208.

"I got away with a 71, but I gave up too many shots on the par-5's," Nicklaus said.

He was tied with Sandy Lyle of Scotland, Ray Floyd, Bruce Lietzke and Ben Crenshaw.

Floyd, another two-time Doral champion, shot a 68, as did Lietzke. Lyle moved up with a 67. Crenshaw had a 69 despite a double bogey from the lake on the 18th hole.

Wadkins, who has earned more than $1 million in his career without a victory, said he was "both pleased and a little disappointed.

"I'm pleased I was able to hang in there after making that bogey," he said. "But I'm a little disappointed I wasn't able to make some more birdies and open it up a little bit.

"But I still have a two-shot lead, so I didn't lose anything."

Wadkins birdied the first, third and fifth holes on putts of 8, 15 and 20 feet and had a four-shot lead.

He suffered what he called "a mental mistake" on the par-5 eighth, where he attempted to lay up short of the pond with a 4-iron but hit it into the water.

"A stupid mistake," he said.

But he brought it home with a string of 10 consecutive pars.

Nicklaus 3-putted the first and 12th holes and took three from the fringe on the eighth, all for bogey-6s. He also 3-putted for bogey on the par-3 13th.

"I gave away about 4-5 shots to the field on the par-5s," he said.

Beth Daniel's Eagle Putt Gives Her 3-Stroke Lead

Beth Daniel sank a nine-foot putt for an eagle on the 18th hole Saturday to take a three-stroke lead after three rounds of the $300,000 Women's Kemper Open.

The eagle gave Daniel a round of 2-under-par 70 and a 54-hole score of 8-under 208 on the Mirage Princeville Ocean and Lakes course on the island of Kauai.

"That was probably the best shot I made all day," Daniel said. "It really made a big difference."

Daniel, looking for her first LPGA tournament victory since 1985, led by one stroke after 17 holes. She hit a 6-iron 172 yards to within nine feet from the pin and sank the putt for her eagle.

"That was probably the best shot I made all day," Daniel said of her approach. "It really made a big difference.

"When I hit it, I knew it was going to be on the green within 20 feet. I didn't know it was going to be as close as it was. It just settled down on the green really nice.

"It certainly gives me a lot more breathing room," Daniel said.

Daniel started the third round one stroke ahead of Marci Bozarth, who shot an even-par 72 to finish in a four-way tie for second.

Joining Bozarth at 5-under 211 were Betsy King, Ayako Okamoto and Amy Alcott. King shot a 66, Akamoto a 69 and Alcott a 70.

It was two strokes back to Kim Bauer, Elaine Crosby, Rosie Jones, Colleen Walker and Ok-Hee Ku of South Korea at 213.

Martha Nause, Kim Shipman, Alice Ritzman and Tammie Green were six strokes back at 214.

Daniel played in the afternoon, when trade winds gusting to 25 mph drove scores higher.

"It was a tough day out there," Daniel said. "The wind got really strong and it was gusty, which made it really difficult."

King's 66, the best round of the day, came during the morning, when the winds were lighter. She played a bogey-free round, with birdies on the fourth, eighth, 10th, 11th, 14th and 18th.

"It wasn't windy when I started out. That's probably an advantage," King said.

Okamoto, who won last week's Hawaiian Ladies Open, also played a bogey-free round with birdies on the fifth, 14th and 18th holes.

"Today my putting and my shots were pretty good and pretty bad, but they were hanging in there," Okamoto, the 1987 Player of the Year, said through an interpreter.

Alcott, the touring professional for Princeville, had bogeys on the ninth, 12th and 16th holes with birdies on the eighth, 10th, 11th, 17th and 18th.

Alcott said she's not thinking about winning the tournament.

"Whenever you try to win you don't win — that's the way it works for me," Alcott said. "I've won by trying to play aggressively and trying to have fun."

Bozarth had three birdies and three bogeys and needed a birdie on the final hole to earn a share of second place.

"I was there on the front side, but I got distracted on the back side," said Bozarth, winless on the LPGA Tour. "I was thinking about TV, and that's not the way to play golf."

The tournament's final two rounds are being televised by NBC.

Rams End North Pitt's Hopes

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

FARMVILLE — The dream ended for North Pitt Friday night as Greene Central took advantage of a late turnover and eked out a 45-44 victory in the championship game of the Eastern Plains Conference basketball tournament.

North Pitt, which had been seeded fifth in the tournament, upset fourth seeded Charles B. Aycock in the first round, then downed number one Farmville Central in the second to advance to the finals. The Panthers needed a victory to gain a berth in the 2-A Sectional tournament which begins Tuesday, but with the loss, they end the season with a 10-15 record.

Earlier in the evening, North Pitt's regular season girls' champions added the tournament title with a 72-56 come-from-behind victory over Charles B. Aycock.

The boys' game was tight all the way, although both teams built up near 10-point leads at one time or another.

Greene Central got the initial lead on a 3-point goal by Anthony Jones, but North Pitt came back behind four points by Calvin Hunter to take a 6-5 lead midway through the first period. But the two swapped the lead twice after that before William Morning hit with 2:28 left to give the Panthers a 13-11 lead. Neither team scored in the time remaining.

After holding a 15-14 lead, North Pitt got a 3-pointer from Randy House and added a jumper by Clayton Cherry to run out to a six-point lead, 20-14.

But Greene Central rallied behind two baskets by Tyrone Streeter and a pair of free throws from Jones to tie it at 20-20 with 1:38 left.

North Pitt missed a chance to regain the lead when Billy Hardison failed to convert on the front end of a one-and-one and the score remained tied the rest of the half.

The Panthers missed out on nine scoring tries, counting the free throw, in the final five minutes of the half when they did not score at all.

House put North Pitt back up and Hunter added a 3-point play for a 25-20 lead with 6:23 left, but Streeter made a free throw, Jones hit a 3-pointer and Johnnie Joyner hit a jumper to put the Rams back up 26-25.

North Pitt regained the lead on two free throws by Cherry and a steal by Reggie Daniels, 29-26 and led the rest of the quarter. The Panthers took a 33-32 lead into the final eight minutes.

In the last period, the lead swapped hands five times before Joyner scored with 3:57 left to put the Rams up, 39-38. Tyrone Hardy then scored off a fast break to give the Rams a 41-38 lead.

"We had the 3-point play set up on the side but messed it up," Coach Cobby Deans of North Pitt said. "After that, we got helter-skelter and didn't come up with what we needed."

Deans said he thought his team played well in spots, "But we went back to sleep in a couple of stages of the game that hurt us.

"We got beat on the boards (36-24) and that hurt us too. We were just out of position a lot of times. We just had some young people make inexperienced mistakes at crunch times."

Deans didn't really feel that his team played a Cinderella role in the tournament. "We played well against the good teams all year long and I never thought we were out of any game we played. I thought we had a good chance to beat Farmville Central (Wednesday) and we did. I expected us to play well in the tournament and, for the most part, we did play well."

Winning coach Lewis Godwin felt that his team didn't play all that well but got the job done. "We didn't shoot well at all (35.4 percent), but we did a good job on the boards. Defense and rebounding did the job for us.

"I thought we were somewhat tired too. We expended a lot of energy (in beating Ayden-Grifton Thursday night). Too, our boys were tight. I told them at the half that we were looking more like the team that was in the corner, fighting for its life, not North Pitt. It looked like the pressure was on us (to win and survive)."

Jones led the scoring for Greene Central with 16 points while Streeter added 11. Morning had 11 points to lead North Pitt.

Despite the final 16-point spread, North Pitt's girls had trouble with Aycock, trailing by as much as eight points in the first half.

After some early lead swapping, Aycock pushed ahead at 12-11 with 2:28 left in the first period. But North Pitt scored the next eight points, including three straight baskets by Keisha Pilgreen to take a 19-12 lead at the end of the period.

It looked then like the Pant-Hers might make a rout of it.

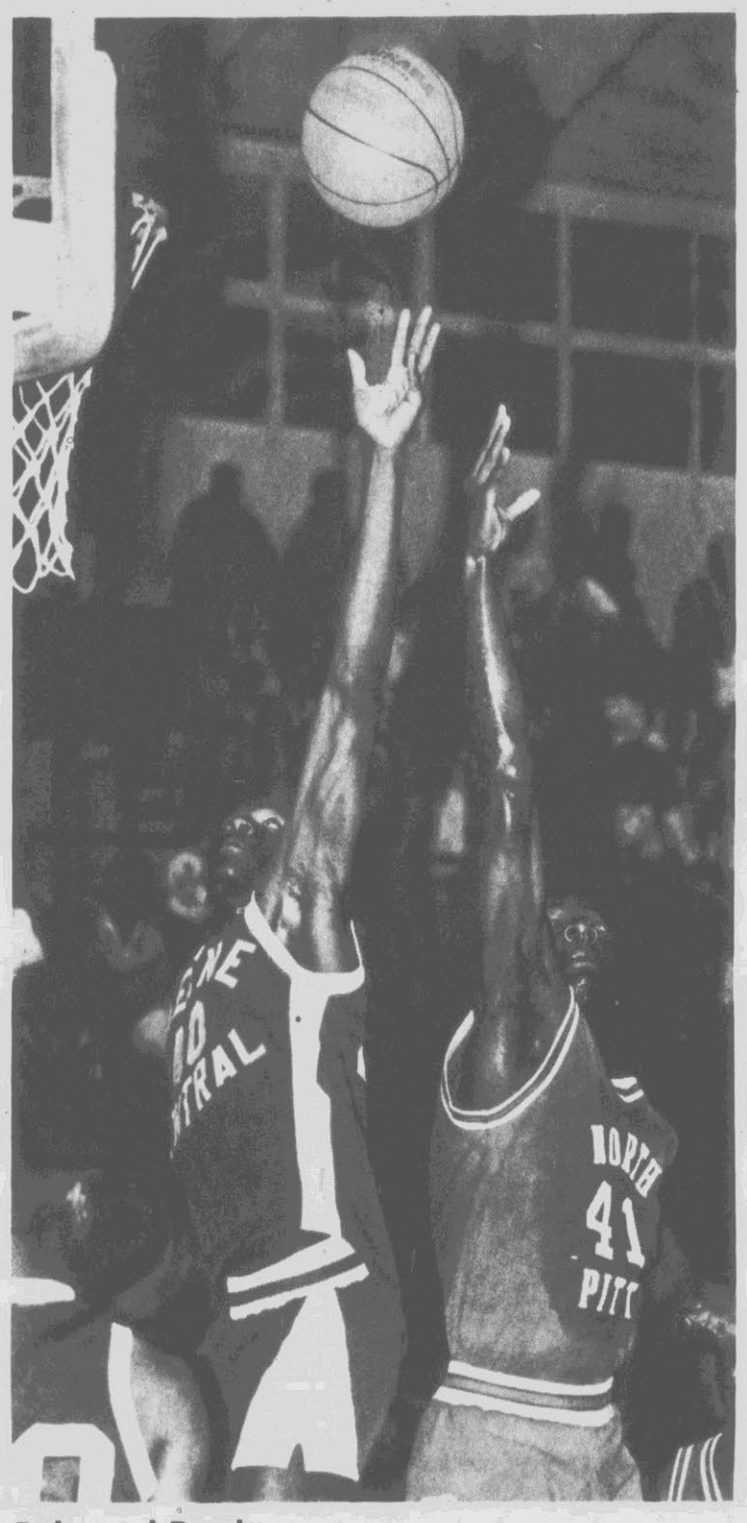

But after North Pitt scored the opening basket of the second period, Aycock ran off nine straight points to tie it at 21-21. Cafina Powell scored six of the nine, including the tying points on two free throws.

After another North Pitt basket, Gail Coley and Crystal Kennedy both scored for Aycock to give the Lady Falcons a 25-23 lead. North Pitt tied it up on a basket by Amy Heath, but Coley hit two free throws and Kennedy made a layup to give Aycock a 29-25 lead.

Aycock stretched that to 35-27 by the end of the half.

After exchanging baskets to open the second half, North Pitt ran off nine straight points to take a 38-37

Aycock regained the lead on a jumper by Coley and a 3-pointer by Connie Lancaster, 42-38. But Gwen Pilgreen made a field goal and a free throw and Keisha Pilgreen hit a 3-pointer to put North Pitt back up, 44-42, at the end of the period.

Kennedy tied it once more for Aycock to open the final quarter, but from there on, North Pitt was in command. Gwen Pilgreen started an 8-point spurt, scoring half the points while Yvette Fraley got the other four. That made it 52-44.

North Pitt stretched the lead from there on out, scoring the final six points of the game to wrap up the championship.

Keisha Pilgreen led the way for North Pitt with 25 points while Gwen Pilgreen had 24 and Amy Heath hit 12. Kennedy led Aycock with 21 while Coley had 14 and Lancaster, 12.

House Scores 50 In Knight Victory

WINSTON-SALEM — Robin House scored a season-high 50 points Friday night, but it was two free throws by Brad Dixon that meant the most to Greenville Christian Academy.

The Knights, battling for a chance in the finals of the North Carolina Christian Activities Association basketball championship, took an overtime win over Gospel Light, 80-77, to advance to Saturday's finals against Woodland Christian.

The two teams played on nearly even terms throughout the game although Gospel Light pushed out to a 15-point lead at one time in the game. Greenville led by 18-17 after the first period but was outhit, 15-14, in the second quarter, leaving it tied at 32-32 at intermission.

Gospel Light came back with a 20-15 margin in the third quarter, roaming out to a 52-47 lead. In the final quarter, the Knights reversed that trend and rallied, tying it up at 72-72 on a pair of free throws by Dixon with 12 seconds left.

GCA fouled John Bowman as Gospel Light came back down court, but he missed on the front end of the one-and-one, but the Knights missed on their final shot to force the overtime.

In the overtime, GCA made four of four shots at the stripe and added two more field goals to wrap it up, outscoring Gospel Light, 8-5.

"We did a real good job of coming back," Coach Dale Thatcher said. "The guys did a super job of setting picks for Robin. (Gospel Light) played either man-to-man or a box-and-one (on House) all night trying to stop him.

"I think we had more poise in the final minutes of the game than they did and it pulled is through."

House in scoring his 50 points, hit on 16 field goals, five of them from 3-point range. He also added 13 of 15 free throws. John May added 10 points for the Knights.

Bowman led Gospel Light with 32 points.

Washington's girls took an early lead in the game and doubled the score on Havelock in the first period, 14-7. The Lady Rams inched back in the second quarter, however, with an 11-10 margin, but still trailed 24-18, at intermission.

Havelock cut another point off the lead in the third period as Washington was outscored 7-6. That left the Lady Pam Pack up, 30-25. Then, in the final period, Havelock came to life and rolled up a 20-11 margin, charging into the lead for good.

Chocowinity Boys, Girls Capture TBC Crowns

BATH — Chocowinity's boys upset North Edgecombe and Chocowinity's girls outlasted Belhaven in overtime to sweep the Tobacco Belt Conference basketball tournament championships.

The Indians gained a 72-70 win in the boys' game, handing the Warriors their first loss against a TBC team this winter. Chocowinity's girls, which won the regular season title, outlasted Belhaven in the overtime, 56-54.

In the boys' game, North Edgecombe held a 17-13 lead after the first quarter and extended that in the second frame. The Warriors outscored the Tribe, 23-17, and held a 40-30 lead at the half.

But Chocowinity took charge of the game in the third period, holding North Edgecombe to just 11 points while scoring 20 of its own. That cut the lead back to 51-50. In the final period, Chocowinity charged ahead and held off North Edgecombe over the final minutes to preserve the win.

Curtis Myers led Chocowinity with 21 points while Dale Garrett added 16 and Martin Abdullah had 12. Derrick Belcher led North Edgecombe with 21 while Rodney Conyers had 14 and Tim Connery had 10.

Chocowinity's girls held a 13-10 lead after the first quarter of their game. But Belhaven rallied, 21-12, in the second period to charge into a 31-25 halftime lead.

Chocowinity used a strong third period to move back in front, outscoring Belhaven, 18-4. That gave the Lady Tribe a 43-35 lead. But Belhaven again rallied, 17-9, and tied it up on a basket by Michelle Leathers with 58 seconds remaining. Chocowinity held for the final shot, but missed, sending it into overtime tied at 52-52.

In the extra period, Druscilla Crawford and Chrylene Myers both scored baskets for a 56-52 lead before Belhaven scored. Both teams had other scoring opportunities after that, but neither scored again.

Crawford led Chocowinity with 22 points while China Grice added 16 and Myers had 14. Leathers had 20 points, including 10 in the fourth period. Tara Brewington added 15 points while Waconda O'Neal had 10.

Chocowinity's girls will play host to Manteo in the first round of the 1-A Sectionals at 8:30 p.m. Monday. Chocowinity's boys take on the number three team from the Albemarle Conference at Gates County on Tuesday at 7 p.m.

Wilson To Be Coach

HOLLYWOOD — Alan Wilson, head baseball coach at D.H. Conley High School, has been selected by North Carolina Amateur Sports as the head coach for Region I for the 1988 State Games of North Carolina baseball competition.

A meeting will be held for the regional coaches on March 13 at the University of North Carolina to cover details of the competition.

A graduate of East Carolina, Wilson has been at Conley since 1984. His teams have been the Coastal Conference 3-A champions three times and he has received Coach of the Year honors three times. In the last four seasons, Conley's teams have been 80-18 under him.

UT-Chattanooga 71
Marshall 70

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Senior center Lance Fulse sank two free throws with two seconds left Saturday to lift Tennessee-Chattanooga past defending champion and top-seeded Marshall 71-70 and into the Southern Conference Tournament finals.

The third-seeded Moccasins are now 19-12 and advance to the finals for the first time since 1986 when they lost 42-40 to Davidson. The Thundering Herd, 24-7, had won three of the past four conference titles.

Fulse, who had no points in the first half, was fouled on the back by Maurice Bryson in a wild scramble for the ball after Bryson had blocked Fulse's foul-line jumper with about four seconds left.

To The Sports Editor:

I would like to comment on the article by Tom Morris in the Feb. 28 Reflector entitled "Hart Defining ECU Athletic Goals." In it Mr. Morris talks about the "non-revenue" sports in relation to the revenue producing sports. Mr. Morris lists track and baseball as the only successful non-revenue sports in recent years. The others, he says, have been "woefully unsuccessful." He goes on to say that baseball and track have been consistent winners without an abundance of scholarships and coaching. "But the remainder of the non-revenue sports programs have been mired in mediocrity for quite some time," he says.

It is almost unbelievable to me that Mr. Morris and Mr. Hart could overlook a whole section of "non-revenue" sports as important in today's society as women's sports. At ECU the two major sports involving women are basketball and softball. I had no way of looking up the record for women's softball (but I do know that they are consistent winners!), but I did look up the record for Lady Pirate basketball. In the Lady Pirate Media Guide I found that with the exception of two years ('76-'77 and '83-'84) the ladies have had winning seasons before this year.

In another article in Sunday's Reflector by Woody Peele, the ECU chancellor, Dr. Eakin, says that he wants a group of men and women in sports who will, as students and athletes, make the university proud of them. Some of us think most women's sports — especially basketball and softball — have done this for a long time. And they have done it, year after year, with very little help from the athletic department, as far as publicity, etc., is concerned.

I would like to thank Dr. Eakin for at least mentioning women's sports, and to Tom Morris and Dave Hart, I say "shame on you!" for such an oversight.

Hill Named As Rookie Of Year

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

HAMPTON, Va. — For East Carolina's Gus Hill, being named first team All-Conference and rookie of the year in the Colonial Athletic Association was a just reward for his efforts over the last three years.

Finally healthy after two years of rehabilitation, Hill averaged 19.3 points per game, second best in the conference this season.

Ironically, though, Hill did not play in the CAA Tournament this weekend due to a foot injury suffered two weeks ago against William and Mary.

"It's been beyond my expectations," Hill said following the CAA Tournament Tip-Off Banquet Friday night.

"I can't ask for much more, (though) a healthy foot would probably do me good. It (the award) is a reward for two years of hard work."

Heading up the remainder of the first team all-conference team was unanimous selection and CAA player of the year Kenny Sanders. A 6-5 junior forward, Sanders averaged 22.6 points a game and 11.7 rebounds per contest this season.

Also named to the team were Richmond's 6-5 forward Peter Woolfolk (18.3 ppg), UNC-Wilmington's 6-9 junior center Larry Houzer (16.6, 7.7 rpg) and American's 5-10 point guard Mike Sampson (14.6 ppg).

Named to second team All-CAA were Richmond guard Rodney Rice; William and Mary forward Tim Trout; James Madison forward Kennard Winchester; GMU guard Amp Davis and Navy guard Cliff Rees.

Tapscott led the Eagles to a second-place finish in the CAA this year with a 14-13 overall record and a 9-5 mark in the CAA.

Barnes, in his first year as a head coach in the CAA, guided the Patriots to a 18-9 overall mark and a 9-5 CAA record.

"This is really quite an honor," Tapscott said. "This year in the CAA there were some great coaching jobs.

"Look at Mike Steele at East Carolina. He came into a tough situation and performed well beyond expectations."

"I think any time you are part of a team sport, individual awards should go back to the team," Barnes said. "Good players make good coaches. I think that's the case with me."

Hill was also named to the All-Rookie team along with GMU's Robert Dykes (who was in his first year of basketball after five years in the Army); Navy guard Joe Gottschalk; Navy forward Eddie Reddick and William and Mary guard Jimmy Apple.

UNC-Wilmington's Greg Bender repeated on the all-academic team and was joined by GMU's Brian Miller and Kevin McNamara along with Richmond's Steve Kratzer and UNC-Wilmington's Antonio Howard.

The final team honored was the all-defensive team. Kratzer, Houzer and Sampson headed up the team, along with Navy center Byron Hopkins and William and Mary guard Curtis Pride.

Trinity Teams Gain Finals

HOOKERTON — Trinity Christian School's boys and girls basketball teams each moved into the championship game of the MACAA tournament Friday night.

The Trinity girls defeated Faith Christian, 26-22, while the boys took a 54-29 win over Raleigh Christian.

Trinity's boys jumped out to an 11-4 lead in the first quarter, but were outscored in the second period, 9-8. That still left the Tigers up at the half, 19-13.

"We were only six of 30 from the field in the first half," Coach Don Southerland said. "But we did a great job on the boards. They were taller than we were but we did a good job of blocking out." John Griffin, Kirk Welch and Michael Harrell each pulled 11 rebounds for Trinity.

Trinity pulled away in the third period with a 14-7 margin, building its lead to 33-20. The Tigers finished off Raleigh, 21-9, in the final quarter.

Trinity was led by Kirk Welch with 15 points while Kreston Welch had 13 and Harrell had 12. Joey Betts led Raleigh with 15.

In the girls' game, Trinity nearly put the game away in the first quarter, running out to an 11-0 lead. Faith got moving in the second period but was still outscored, 6-5, as Trinity built up a 17-5 halftime lead.

Trinity was outscored by Faith in the third quarter, 9-6, but still led 23-14. An 8-3 margin by Faith in the final quarter closed the gap but it was not enough.

Julie Suggs led Faith with 10 points while Rhonda Harris had nine for Trinity.

Trinity's girls were to face Raleigh while the boys met Faith on Saturday afternoon for the championships.

Kinston Tops Rose, 47-41

WILSON — Kinston High School, which tied with Rose for the regular season Big East Conference basketball championship, defeated the Rampettes, 47-41, Friday night in the finals of the league's tournament.

The win locked up the number one seed for Kinston in the Sectionals, which begin on Tuesday.

Kinston moved out to an early lead in the game, taking a 16-9 advantage after the first quarter of play. Rose rallied in the second quarter, however, posting a 15-4 margin that put the Rampettes into a 24-20 halftime lead.

The Rampettes were unable to hold onto it, however. Kinston came back with a 17-5 margin in the third period and charged into a 37-29 lead. Rose rallied once more, but only by 12-10, and that wasn't enough.

Sandra Darden led Kinston with 21 points while Melvina Barnes added 13. Lisa Leisten led Rose with 13 while Tina Smith hit 12.

The loss drops Rose to 20-3 on the season.

No Panic For Earnhardt Team

ROCKINGHAM (AP) — Dale Earnhardt says there is no panic on his team after starting the NASCAR season with a pair of disappointing 10th-place finishes and struggling to qualify for Sunday's Goodwrench 500 at North Carolina Motor Speedway.

The two-time defending Winston Cup champion will start the 500-mile, 492-lap event 22nd in the 41-car field.

His lap speed of 143.133 mph on Thursday, in the opening round of qualifying on the 1.017-mile oval, was far off the pole-winning speed of 146.612 by Bill Elliott.

Then, on Friday, he stood on his first-day lap, choosing to concentrate instead on qualifying for today's Goodwrench 200 Busch Grand National race and winning the pole at 142.282.

"I sure was happy to sit on the pole for Saturday," Earnhardt said. "It made my day.

"One day like (Thursday) doesn't panic Kirk and Richard and them," he said, referring to crew chief Kirk Shelmerdine, team owner Richard Childress and the rest of the crew. "It just makes 'em bear down and try to be more consistent."

"The competition is always tough," Earnhardt said. "It's been tough and it's gonna get tougher. It's real competitive out here.

"We were just off a little bit. This is the same car we put on the outside pole here last fall, but we never did run good (Thursday). Whether it was the engine or a tire-stagger combination that was the problem, we don't really know. But we'll be OK for Sunday.

"There's a lot of cars out there that can run one fast lap," he added. "It's different when you have to run 492 laps (on Sunday).

"When the race gets started, there'll be maybe seven or eight cars I'll have to race. That'll probably include Elliott, Neil, Davey Allison and Harry Gant, because all of 'em have been running good."

Dave Marcis was the fastest among the 13 drivers who attempted second-day qualifying rather than standing on their first-day speeds.

Bobby Allison and Bonnett, who stood on their earlier speeds, will start 23rd and 30th, respectively.

Michael Waltrip, who crashed Thursday in practice and had to wait until Friday for his backup car to arrive at the track, managed to get into the lineup in the 37th spot with a lap of 139.714.

The race, which will be televised live by ESPN, is to start at 12:15 p.m. EST.

The lineup for Sunday's Goodwrench 500 NASCAR stock car race, with hometown, type of car and qualifying speed in mph:

1. Bill Elliott, Dawsonville, Ga., Ford Thunderbird, 146.612.

Mavericks Look Ahead To Lakers

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

It didn't take long for the Dallas Mavericks and their fans to forget about the Houston Rockets and start looking ahead to the Los Angeles Lakers.

"Beat LA, Beat LA," the sellout crowd chanted early in the fourth quarter of the Mavericks' 118-110 victory Friday night.

"The Lakers are the team we need to beat to make this streak meaningful," said Sam Perkins, who had 18 points and 14 rebounds for the Mavericks against the Rockets. "The Lakers are the world champions. The teams we have been beating are not like the Lakers. We have been at every level except the one the Lakers are on."

Derek Harper scored 14 of his game-high 27 points in the third period as Dallas took a 96-84 lead.

"This win gives us a lot of confidence," Harper said. "Now we have to get after LA right from the start. They have the reputation and the tradition, but we are really rolling."

Elsewhere, it was the Lakers 120, Golden State 107; Boston 121, the Los Angeles Clippers 90; New York 110, Philadelphia 108 in overtime; Washington 95, Indiana 88; Sacramento 134, San Antonio 132; Denver 116, Phoenix 108, and Utah 125, Seattle 116.

The Rockets said they would be pleased if Dallas would take them for granted.

"We played like a team that's been on the road all week, and they played like a team that's been home all week," Houston Coach Bill Fitch said. "We would certainly like to draw them come playoff time."

"I wouldn't mind it at all if we had to play Dallas in the playoffs," the Rockets' Robert Reid said. "I still think that we match up very well against them."

Akeem Olajuwon and Purvis Short each had 22 points for the Rockets, while Mark Aguirre added 20 points.

Lakers 120, Warriors 107

Byron Scott scored 12 of his 30 points in the third quarter and Kurt Rambis added a season-high 17 points as Los Angeles dealt Golden State its sixth straight defeat.

The victory was the Lakers' 10th straight at home against the Warriors and 35th in 39 games overall.

Celtics 121, Clippers 90

Larry Bird scored 32 points as Boston, which broke a three-game losing streak, handed Los Angeles its 21st consecutive road defeat.

The Clippers, at 12-43, have the worst record in the league.

The game was tied 10 times before Bird's long jumper with 7:22 left in the second quarter started a 16-3 spurt that gave Boston a 48-35 lead. The closest the Clippers got thereafter was 57-49 with 1:13 gone in the third period.

Danny Ainge added 18 points for Boston.

Los Angeles, 2-17 in its last 19 games, was led by Michael Cage with 23 points.

Knicks 110, 76ers 108

Mark Jackson scored eight of his 19 points in overtime after tying the score with two seconds left in regulation as New York won its 12th straight home game and handed Philadelphia its 20th consecutive road loss.

In the third period, Philadelphia's Charles Barkley was knocked out when he was hit in the head while fouling Bill Cartwright, and New York's Patrick Ewing was ejected for punching Mike Gminski of the 76ers.

Cartwright scored 15 of his 17 points after Ewing was ejected. Gerald Wilkins added 16 points and Sidney Green 17 rebounds for New York.

Cliff Robinson had 23 points and Maurice Cheeks and Barkley 20 each for Philadelphia.

Bullets 95, Pacers 88

Moses Malone scored 27 points, including 13 of 15 free throws for Washington, which took command with a 13-0 run late in the fourth quarter.

The game was tied at 82-82 when Charles Jones' layup with 3:46 remaining launched the Bullets' spurt. Jeff Malone's layup capped the string and put the Bullets up 95-82 with 41 seconds to go in the game.

Soto Looking Good On Mound

By The Associated Press

The Cincinnati Reds like the looks of an old pitcher better than their new training complex.

Well, Mario Soto really isn't so old — he's 31 — but shoulder problems limited him to eight victories and five trips to the disabled list in the last two seasons, including May 22 to the end of last year.

The Reds' one-time pitching ace worked three scoreless innings Friday in a 9-3 exhibition victory over the Toronto Blue Jays, the first game played in Cincinnati's new $5 million Plant City, Fla., spring headquarters. He shut out the media, too.

"I keep my mouth shut. That's best for me. I don't want to make any comment," Soto said after throwing 58 pitches, allowing five hits and striking out four. "I just work here. Nobody wanted to find out about me all winter. Nobody wanted to know if I was dead or alive."

The Reds' bats were alive. Nick Esasky hit a three-run homer and Paul O'Neill hit a pinch homer. Both came in a five-run third inning against Dave Stieb — who allowed eight hits and six runs, four earned, in 2 1-3 innings — and Todd Stottlemyre.

Newly acquired Jose Rijo followed Soto with three more scoreless innings, allowing two hits.

Meanwhile, Los Angeles outfielder Kirk Gibson still didn't have much to smile about. He went hitless in two at-bats, but the Dodgers edged the world champion Minnesota Twins 6-5 on Mickey Hatcher's RBI single in the 10th inning. The Twins had tied the score by scoring three runs in two innings off reliever Jesse Orosco, making his first appearance in a Dodger uniform.

An enraged Gibson stormed from the field minutes before Thursday's exhibition game against Japan's Chunichi Dragons when he discovered that a practical joker had smeared the inside of his cap with eye-black. Manager Tom Lasorda said the matter was resolved Friday following a meeting with Gibson.

"Everything is fine," Lasorda said. "As far as the manager, the coaches and the players are concerned, everything is in order." He said the players had agreed to lighten up on practical jokes.

"I just booked. 'I said, 'I'll see you clowns later,' " he said. "It hit me totally wrong. It was our first game of the year. I had just gotten into my uniform and had my cup of coffee. I was getting a little intense.

"I'm not here for comedy. I didn't think it was too funny. When I walk on the field and people are laughing at me ... I don't find that funny. If they can't accept that, maybe I don't fit in. Some race horses walk up to the gate. Some get a little hyped up. I guess I get a little hyped up. I don't want to be part of the pranks.

"I was totally in the right, although I may not have handled it totally properly."

Los Angeles' Orel Hershiser pitched three scoreless innings. Minnesota's Steve Carlton allowed one run and two hits in three innings. Veteran catcher Rick Dempsey, a non-roster player, hit a two-run homer for Los Angeles and Kirby Puckett homered for the Twins.

In other exhibition games, it was St. Louis 6, Texas 2; Detroit 5, Boston 1 (another Red Sox squad beat the Chunichi Dragons 5-2), Chicago Cubs 7, San Francisco 4; Milwaukee 14, Oakland 1; New York Yankees 5, Atlanta 4; Pittsburgh 6, Philadelphia 3; Houston 9, Kansas City 7; California 6, San Diego 5.

Cardinals 6, Rangers 2

Bob Horner made his debut for St. Louis with a two-run homer. Horner, returning to the majors after playing in Japan last year, connected off Ed Vande Berg in the eighth inning after Jim Lindeman led off with a walk. Tom Pagnozzi hit a three-run homer off Texas starter Paul Kilgus and Ray Stephens homered off Dale Morhocic in the sixth for the Cardinals' other run.

The Rangers loaded the bases with none out in the sixth against Mike Perez, who last season set a minor-league record with 41 saves at Class A Springfield, Ill. Perez then struck out Steve Buechele, got Curtis Wilkerson to hit into a force at the plate and retired Tom O'Malley on a grounder.

Tigers 5, Red Sox 1

Detroit ace Jack Morris and three other pitchers held Boston to six hits. Morris pitched two hitless innings, striking out two.

Red Sox 5, Chunichi Dragons 2

Cubs 7, Giants 4

Brewers 14, Athletics 1

Rookie Joey Meyer, bidding to become Milwaukee's designated hitter, drove in four runs with a double, single and sacrifice fly as the Brewers rapped out 22 hits against Steve Ontiveros — who gave up 11 hits and six runs, five of them earned, in three innings — and two relievers.

Teddy Higuera, who will be the Brewers' opening day pitcher, gave up two hits and struck out two in three scoreless innings.

Yankees 5, Braves 4

Rookie Hensley "Bam Bam" Meulens singled home two runs off Zane Smith in the first inning and Joel Skinner hit a two-run double off Pete Smith in the sixth. Dale Murphy homered for Atlanta off New York starter Rick Rhoden, who allowed three runs on five hits in three innings.

Rhoden also batted second in the Yankees' lineup and had a single and double. Zane Smith left the game in the second inning with a sore elbow.

Pirates 6, Phillies 3

Barry Bonds homered and Pittsburgh scored five unearned runs, three in the first inning after the first of shortstop Steve Jeltz's three errors. Pittsburgh's earned run came on Bonds' homer off Cy Young winner Steve Bedrosian in the seventh. Greg Jelks accounted for the Philadelphia scoring with a three-run homer off Mike Dunne.

Astros 9, Royals 7

Houston's Pat Keedy and Cameron Drew hit solo home runs off Dan Quisenberry in the eighth inning. Quisenberry complained of back spasms after the game and will miss at least four days of work. Both starters, Houston's Mike Scott and Kansas City's Bret Saberhagen, allowed five hits and three runs in three innings.

Angels 6, Padres 5

Chili Davis, playing in his first game in a California uniform, had a single, double and triple, scored two runs and drove in another. The Angels went ahead for good by scoring two runs in the top of the first ff Eric Show on a single by Mark McLemore, a triple by Davis and a single by Wally Joyner. San Diego's Tony Gwynn homered off Mike Witt.

Black Coach Is Named

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A program that pales in comparison with the elite in women's college basketball has led Minnesota to promote LaRue Fields from interim coach to head coach.

Fields, 34, is the first black head coach ever to be employed by the school's women's athletic department.

Merrily Dean Baker, the women's athletic director at the university, said after Friday's news conference announcing the appointment that Minnesota is "fortunate LaRue was born black."

"The women's athletic department needs a strong black female role model," said Baker, who is white. "We are a very pale department and always have been. Those who know me know how strongly I feel about this notion of role modeling.

"The reasons she was selected are far more than skin deep. She's a great role model, regardless of color. But we're just very fortunate LaRue was born black."

Two years ago, when she came to Minnesota as Ellen Hanson's assistant, Fields was the first black female coach — assistant or otherwise — in school history.

Clem Haskins became the university's first black head coach when he took over the men's basketball program in April 1986. There have been a number of male black assistants over the years.

"To be a black and a head coach in America, you're an exception," Fields said. "Clem and I, we're exceptions. I see it as a positive that can work to our advantage."

She said she would immediately intensify efforts at recruiting black players from inner-city high schools around the country, adding that the quality of girls basketball in Minnesota is "not the best."

"I know we get in trouble when we say that ... but it's true," Fields said. "It's not the worst, either. We still need to get the best Minnesota athlete.

"We have so much sameness, young women from upper-middle class homes or lower-upper class homes. I'm not saying we need an all-black team. That's not the focus at all. People see a black coach and say, 'Oh, brother.' But I just think we need more diversity."

Fields, who took over when the embattled Hanson resigned last August, has been signed to a three-year contract. She will receive $38,500 in 1988-89.

In her official head coaching debut Friday night, Minnesota lost 73-57 to Michigan State, dropping this season's record to 8-16 overall and 4-11 in the Big Ten with three games to play.

Turkey Calling Said Overrated

By BILL SCHULZ
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — The best advice for a rookie turkey hunter planning to try his luck this spring is: don't be overawed by professional callers and think you have to be that good to get your gobbler.

"A good caller and a good woodsman does have an advantage over someone who doesn't possess both of those qualities, but the calling many times gets a little overrated," said Rob Keck, a former world champion caller who is executive vice president of the National Wild Turkey Federation.

Being able to get into a proper position and other factors lessen the importance of the call, Keck said in an interview during the federation's convention in Atlanta.

Turkey hunting is unlike most other kinds of hunting in that most often the technique is to call the game to you. "Instead of the hunter, you become the hunted," Keck said.

Many hunters feel they must sound as good as the champion callers to be effective, Keck said. It's not true.

Start simple, and work up to champions' techniques, he said.

Start with something easy, such as a push-pin call, he said, don't insist on using a mouth call the first time out.

A novice turkey hunter should start with a push-pin call, box call or slate call, "and then once you get a few (turkeys) under your belt, then mix a little bit of the mouth call in with it," Keck said. "You'd be further ahead in the game" than if you'd started with a mouth call.

"You can take a box call and put in the hands of the beginner and with some simple instructions make a call that is good enough, something that is really far superior than the call you can make with your mouth call," he said.

"My favorite is a slate call. I love to call on the slate. There are some boxes I just love to cuddle. Those are the calls a lot of people say of, gosh, that's for beginners. Bull!"

The other important thing is attitude.

"You've got to have confidence in your equipment," he said, and that your call "is going to do the job calling in the turkey.

"If you go out there with a defeatist attitude, then the turkey's going to whip you every time, even though he's going to to do it most of the time ... because if you think that, you never will win. There are a lot of people walking around in the turkey woods that I have seen for 10 or more years, that still haven't gotten their first turkey. It's because they've been saying this thing is too tough to kill. You've got to get your mental attitude right.

"Don't go out there with the feeling this bird is so mysterious and so tough that I can't beat him," Keck said.

Finally, don't get a case of bloated skull with early success and don't get destroyed by early failure. The turkey hunter success rate is something like 10 percent.

Sometimes success is pure luck.

"There are hot gobblers," Keck said. "You could rub two sticks together and that sucker's going to come to you, and then you say, 'Man, I'm the greatest caller that ever was.' Then the next 10 times you go out he's going to knock your socks in the dirt."

Environmental Problems Revealed

The 20th annual Environmental Quality (EQ) Index, a widely respected report card on the environment, reveals a dismaying array of environmental problems, including groundwater contamination, acid rain and threats to wildlife. The index was released by the National Wildlife Federation.

On the positive side, conservationists were heartened early in 1987 by the enactment, over President Reagan's veto, of an eight-year extension of the federal Clean Water Act. The act provided for $20 billion for fighting water pollution and for the first time addressed the problem of "nonpoint" pollution — runoff from farms, city streets and other sources.

Another success was the President's signing of a federal law setting new energy efficiency targets for home appliances, which consume one-quarter of the nation's electricity. The new efficiency standards will save enormous amount of energy over the coming years.

Nevertheless, according to NWF President Jay D. Hair, these bright spots were often obscured by other disturbing trends and events.

□ Wildlife — The last California condor in the wild was captured for a controversial breeding plan, and the dusky seaside sparrow became extinct, the victim of habitat loss and pesticide poisoning. Many species of ducks increased their numbers from 1986, but they remain well below their historic levels. The main threat is the continuing loss of wetlands in the northern states and Canada.

□ Clean Air — Important progress has been made toward cleaning the nation's air in the last two decades, but some 76 million Americans still live in areas with dangerous ozone levels, and millions more breathe unhealthful amounts of other pollutants. In 1987, the Interior Department found that air pollution now obscures scenic views in more than 90 percent of the national parks monitored regularly by the department. Also, a Congressional committee was told last year that acid rain poses a serious threat to the health of children and the elderly, in addition to harming streams, lakes, wildlife, forests and historic monuments and buildings.

□ Clean Water — The extension of the Clean Water Act provided $20 billion for fighting water pollution and signaled a stronger Congressional commitment to clean water. Meanwhile, evidence mounted that subterranean groundwater, the sources of half the country's drinking water, is more vulnerable than ever to contamination. Also, according to testimony heard by a Congressional subcommittee last spring, many fish in the Great Lakes region have high concentrations of toxic chemicals.

□ Energy — In a bid to boost domestic supplies of petroleum, the Interior Department proposed opening for exploratory drilling the 1.5-million-acre coastal plain of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge in Alaska. Conservationists believe that wildlife, air and water quality could be severely affected by drilling in the refuge. In addition, they charged, the administration has neither examined alternative energy sources, nor proven the national security need for extracting the Arctic oil, if any exists in commercial quantities.

□ Forests — A Forest Service study released in July forecast the loss of as much as 18.8 million acres of southern timberland by 1995. Conversion to agriculture is a serious problem, as is the failure of private landowners to replant cutover land. As a result, pressure is increasing on the Forest Service to open more public land to timber cutting, and the prospects of protecting wildlife are becoming more precarious. And, according to the Wilderness Society, the U.S. has consistently lost money selling timber in 76 of the 123 national forests. One reason: the cost of building logging roads.

U.S. Forest Service continued to be afflicted in 1987 with slow growth rates and high tree mortality. One reason could be acid rain. Another could be toxic chemicals. Last February, scientists reported that fog samples in California and Maryland contained high concentrations of toxics, including pesticides.

□ Quality of Life — Each year, the editors of "National Wildlife" magazine conduct an opinion survey on environmental quality from a cross-section of readers. The 1987 survey found that an overwhelming 91 percent of respondents would rather pay higher taxes than have the government reduce budget deficits by cutting pollution cleanup programs.

Only 13 percent of the magazine's readers thought that the environment was in better shape five years ago, while 37 percent thought it was worse and 50 percent thought things were about the same. Likewise, only 11 percent of the readers thought the environment will be more livable in five years. Fifty percent thought conditions will be worse is five years, and 39 percent thought things will be about the same.

The EQ Index, which has been compiled every year since 1969, represents the collective thinking of the NWF staff, based on a review of the year's media accounts and consultations with government experts, private specialists and academic researchers.

The National Wildlife Federation is the nation's largest conservation organization, with more than 4.8 million members and supporters and 51 affiliate organizations nationwide. A private, not-for-profit organization, the Federation was founded in 1936.

Boat Titles May be Required

The North Carolina Marina Association met recently in Wrightsville Beach to discuss the lack of titles on boats in North Carolina.

The Association, primarily consisting of coastal recreational marina operators, boat brokers and related businesses, has formed a committee to begin the groundwork for legislation to require boat titles in North Carolina.

According to Association President Susan Herbert, the organization recognizes that "it will be a long process, but hopes are high that eventually such a bill can be introduced and passed through the state Legislature."

Ms. Herbert said the lack of boat titles is troublesome and detrimental for dealers, brokers and buyers, and has a "negative impact on the willingness of banks to finance vessels, not to mention the open road it paves for boat theft."

Members of the Association hope that if boat titles are required, tax information would be processed by the state as it is for automobiles, relieving marina operators of having to produce tax listings for counties and cities each year.

The Little Things Pay Off

By TOM FEGELY
The (Allentown) Morning Call

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Summer or winter, it's always a puzzle as to why the angler in the boat or at the ice hole only a few feet away is enjoying action while my partner and I, seemingly doing the same things, soon get bored at the inactivity.

I've discovered that it might well be their attention to the "little things" that account for their successes.

Several years back a couple friends and I watched a group of anglers on Shohola Lake in Pike County fill their buckets with perch, crappies and bluegills while we experienced only an occasional tap on our jigging sticks.

Surely location may have been the key, but we were fishing in what seemed to be similar structure less than 75 yards away.

"Try some of this," one of them offered, handing me a near-empty bottle of Fish Formula scent when I wandered over to snap a few pictures and question their methods.

They were using small lead jigs with plastic twister-tails, each time dunking the lure in a solution of the attractant before dropping it into the frigid water.

I had several bottles of Fish Formula stored in my boat and knew of its effectiveness in summer fishing but hadn't thought to bring it along for my hardwater pursuits. Call it coincidence or common sense, but our catch rate improved when we began dousing our baits — jig heads and mousee grubs — in the fluid.

Fish scents have become an integral part of the angling scene. Some believe in them and others don't. I've found that they work, especially when fishing for species where the fast movement of a plug or spinner isn't employed.

Winter fish are surely less active than they are in the warm months and will approach and look over a bait more cautiously, often nibbling the offering rather than slamming it. The added enticement of a reliable fish scent may make the difference — at least it did that day at Shohola.

Over the years I've learned other tricks of the trade from anglers who pride themselves on their ice fishing skills. One Nick Kuzo of Jim Thorpe showed me on a trip to Lake Wallenpaupack for yellow perch during the late season.

It was a day when we decided to stick to jigging and leave the tip-ups at home. Perch can be finicky nibblers and it's often necessary to detect their delicate strikes and set the hook.

As we drilled six holes and each attended three of them, it was possible to only have one jigging stick in your hand at a time. So Kuzo fashioned a few strike detectors — simply a wire spring taped to the second guide and tipped with a small bobber.

The line was threaded from the spincast reel, through the guide, into the spring and back through the top guide. Even the most delicate of nibbles was signaled by the vibrations of the spring and bobber.

The rod holder, the same kind used in holding rods on the gunwales of rowboats, was clamped to a plastic bucket which doubled as a container for carrying gear and a seat. I've used the simple technique ever since to manage several jigging rods — even the one that is hand-held.

Thin line is another important tool for winter jigging. Most of the fish taken on jigs are panfish and there's seldom need for eight or 10-pound test line to bring them in.

Wyoming Wins Slowdown

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — Wyoming Coach Benny Dees would rather go fishing than play Boise State's deliberate style of basketball, and he figures most Cowboy fans would, too.

"Up here on the prairie in Wyoming we have a really good franchise," Dees said Friday after 23-5 Wyoming closed the regular season with a 56-50 victory over Boise State. "If we played that way we couldn't recruit diddly up here.

"I'd just as soon watch two men fish," said the coach, who added that he will not schedule Boise State in the future.

The Cowboys appeared ready to head for the nearest pond after the first half, when they hit just 36 percent of their shots and seven of 15 free throws in scoring a season-low 17 points.

"I don't like to play that kind of ball and I know (Fennis) Dembo doesn't like to play that ball," Dees said. "It puts him in 'Never-Never' land."

Boise State, which dropped to 22-5, went scoreless for 3:21 early in the second half while Wyoming scored eight points and took a 31-26 lead with 14:09 to play on a one-handed dunk by Dembo that brought the 13,158 fans to their feet.

Boise State fought back and trailed just 52-50 with 53 seconds left and after a timeout worked the ball down court. However an errant pass with 35 seconds to go gave the ball back to Wyoming.

Eric Leckner, who scored 22 points, including 14 of 17 free throws, put the game out of reach by canning four foul shots in the last 25 seconds.

"If you can't make free throws and you turn the ball over late in the game, you can't win," said Boise State Coach Bobby Dye, whose team made eight of 11 first-half free throws but missed all six attempts in the second.

Postal Proposals Include 25-Cent First Class Rate

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 25-cent stamp will be here soon, but people could get a break on the cost of paying their bills under a sweeping series of new proposals recommended by the Postal Rate Commission.

And while the average American will pay more, the increases are even steeper for so-called "junk" advertising mail, which the commission said wasn't paying its way.

Overall, postage rate increases totaling 17.5 percent were recommended Friday by the agency. Individual customers face a 14.7 percent hike compared with jumps of 18.1 percent for newspapers and magazines and 24.9 percent for advertising mail.

The detailed and complex series of rate recommendations, the result of 10 months of hearings and study, will be sent to the Postal Service for consideration next week. That agency's board of governors, which last May requested a rate increase, could put the new prices into effect in 10 days to two weeks.

NEW MAIL AND RATES — Postal Rate Commission Chairman Janet Steiger holds up a newly proposed discounted prepaid courtesy reply envelope during a news conference in Washington, D.C. Several postal increases were also announced, including a boost in the cost of first class leters to 25 cents. (AP Laserphoto)

The total increase is even more than the 16 percent originally requested by the Postal Service. Rate Commission Chairman Janet Steiger saidthe agency will need the money to avoid a deficit that otherwise could reach $5 billion in 1989. The Postal Service lost more than $220 million last year.

When postage rates change, the basic first class rate always gets the most attention, and under the recommendation it would increase from 22 cents to a quarter, as the Postal Service had requested.

At that rate, sending a letter will take about the same bite from the average wallet as it did in 1932. Adjusted for inflation, the 3 cent postage rate introduced in 1932 would amount to 25.5 cents today.

Noting that typical consumers are one of the few groups that don't get any discounts for bulk mail, the commission made an innovative proposal to give these people a break.

It suggested a new courtesy mail discount, in which business could prepare special envelopes with proper coding and ZIP codes for automatic processing, and which would be addressed to post office boxes to save carrier delivery.

Consumers using these envelopes, for example to pay bills or respond to an advertisement, would be given a discount on the postage. The agency didn't suggest an amount of the discount, but said the Postal Service should study the costs and come up with an amount.

The rate commission did recommended a 2-cent cut in the current 7-cent minimum cost for pre-paid business reply envelopes in order to encourage companies to provide these for consumers.

In the first-class category, the price for each additional ounce of mail would rise from 17 cents to 20 cents, as requested by the postal service.

But the cost for a post card would increase from 14 cents to 15 cents, a penny less than had been requested.

The minimum rate for third class mail would jump from 12.5 cents to 16.7 cents, slightly more than the postal service had requested. The per pound rate would rise from 38 cents to 48 cents, 3 cents more than asked.

Newspapers sent within the county would rise to 9.8 cents per pound and 3.4 to 5.9 cents per piece. The current rate is 9.1 cents per pound and 3.1 to 4.9 cents per item.

The commission agreed to a Postal Service proposal for an $8.75 letter rate for the highly competitive Express overnight mail. That new rate covers mailings up to eight ounces. Rates for packages up to 2 pounds and up to 5 pounds would increase, but the overall increase is calculated at 2 percent because of the new letter rate.

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader criticized the recommendations, saying, "They're undermining the first class stamp by overpricing it at the same time they want to drive more first class users into using Express mail."

Steiger said it will be up to the Postal Service to decide whether the new rates would affect the closings and cutbacks in collections announced recently by the service.

The original rate request was filed months before the service cutbacks, which were blamed on congressionally mandated spending reductions, so the two are not tied together.

When the new rates take effect, they will end the price structure that took effect Feb. 17, 1985.

Lorillard CEO Angers Judge

By Morton Mintz
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

NEWARK, N.J. — The top officer of P. Lorillard Inc. has incited a judge's wrath by eluding personal service of a subpoena to testify in a smoker-death trial in which his cigarette company is a defendant.

President and Chief Executive Officer J. Robert Ave (pronounced Ahvay) has frustrated the efforts at Lorillard's New York headquarters as well as at his Park Avenue apartment, which has been staked out by process servers.

U.S. District Court Judge H. Lee Sarokin brought up the matter this past week after Lorillard filed a motion to quash the subpoena, on the sole legal basis that the subpoena hasn't been handed to Ave.

"We're entitled to have proper service on employees of the corporation," Robert E. Northrip of Shook, Hardy & Bacon in Kansas City, Mo., told Sarokin.

Plaintiff's lawyer Marc Z. Edell disagreed. Ave "has been ducking service," he contended.

Come To Terms With Your Insurance.

During the past few years, the consumer has been subjected to reluctance and/or refusal by insurors to provide some forms of coverage. Nearly all insurance categories seem to have been designated as "high risk." Premiums have soared. These conditions describe what is called a "hard" marketplace.

Has your present agent informed you that the insurance environment is "softening" for certain classes of coverage? Or is he just beginning to understand and talk to you about increasing rates?

Product knowledge is an essential factor for the professional insurance representative. Armed with the most current information available, Fickling Insurance Associates is able to selectively place coverages in markets which are unfamiliar to others.

Economic Seminars

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Although most students know how to use a computer and word processor, few of them possess even a basic knowledge of economic principles, says an education expert.

"Most students in elementary schools are woefully lacking in any understanding of the relationship of economics to the news and to government policies," says Dr. Gerald Swanson, professor of economics at the University of Arizona and also president of Richmond-based Academy of Economic Education.

The academy, through the sponsorship of major universities and colleges, offers three- to four-week summer economic seminars for elementary, secondary and high school teachers, who then pass their knowledge on to their students — starting right in kindergarten.

Congratulations on the Opening Of PEDS Medical Park

Terry Paige Is Cancer-Free, Looking Ahead

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Terry Paige is no longer playing football at East Carolina University, but the ECU senior isn't mourning his loss.

"Everybody has disappointments," Paige said. "I had my share when I was a child. And having to stop playing football was another one. Finding out I had cancer was another one. But I'm not crying. I'm rejoicing. My last two CAT scans have shown I'm cancer-free and that's enough to be happy about that I'm not going to spend my time being sad about having to give up football."

"Right now I'm set on getting my education," he said. "And I do have a little to do with the football team and probably will more later on when I can get out in the sun more. Now, because of what all that radiation did to my skin, my doctors tell me to stay out of the sun all I can."

Paige, now 24, was home in Whiteville on Christmas break in December, 1986, when he first went to a doctor about the headaches and nosebleeds he'd started experiencing a few days earlier. Always having been very healthy and never having had any problems other than some athletic injuries to his knees, he was puzzled by the headaches and nosebleeds that started in mid-December, but believed that getting too little sleep while hitting the books during examinations was the cause. He thought that he'd be all right once he was home and could get some rest.

His doctor first diagnosed him as having sinus problems and gave him a decongestant and some pills, both of which made his condition worse. Later, after his nose bled all night on New Year's, he was sent to the New Hanover County Hospital for surgery to remove polyps from his nasal passages. It was while he was there that x-rays revealed a tumor behind his forehead, eyes and nose.

He was sent to North Carolina Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill, where doctors determined that the tumor, a rare type, was inoperable. He was offered little hope of full recovery, but was put on an eight-week regimen of radiation and chemotherapy.

"The people around me were very sad," he said. "They all thought I was going to die. But I just never thought so.

"I've had a very strong religious faith since I was a child and I've always believed that if we take our problems to God, He will work them out for us. I talked to God. I said, 'God, this is something I don't understand and don't want to accept, but I will if I have to. But I have faith that I can get well, that's there's something more you want me to do on this earth.'

"Nobody could understand why I wasn't depressed, and, at times, I couldn't myself, but I never did get really down emotionally. I just kept thinking that, if it were God's will, I was going to get better. And, if not, it would all be all right some how or another."

He said his mother would gladly have stayed with him in Chapel Hill during his treatments, but he told her no. "It just seemed like it would be too hard on her. And I felt I needed that time alone to pray and to think and get my strength back. I stayed in a motel with a lot of other outpatients and got to be good friends with many of them. And my mother called me every night."

"My mother, my whole family" — He's the youngest of his father's 17 children; the youngest of his mother's four — "all the people at home and all the people in Greenville, it seemed like, plus a lot of other people I didn't know were so thoughtful of me during that time. I never can fully thank or repay everyone."

Paige had begun playing football for ECU in 1983. He had to stop because of knee injuries prior to learning he had cancer. In high school, he had been an All-American football player and a track star and was one of the most highly recruited football players in NOrth Carolina the year he graduated from Whiteville High School.

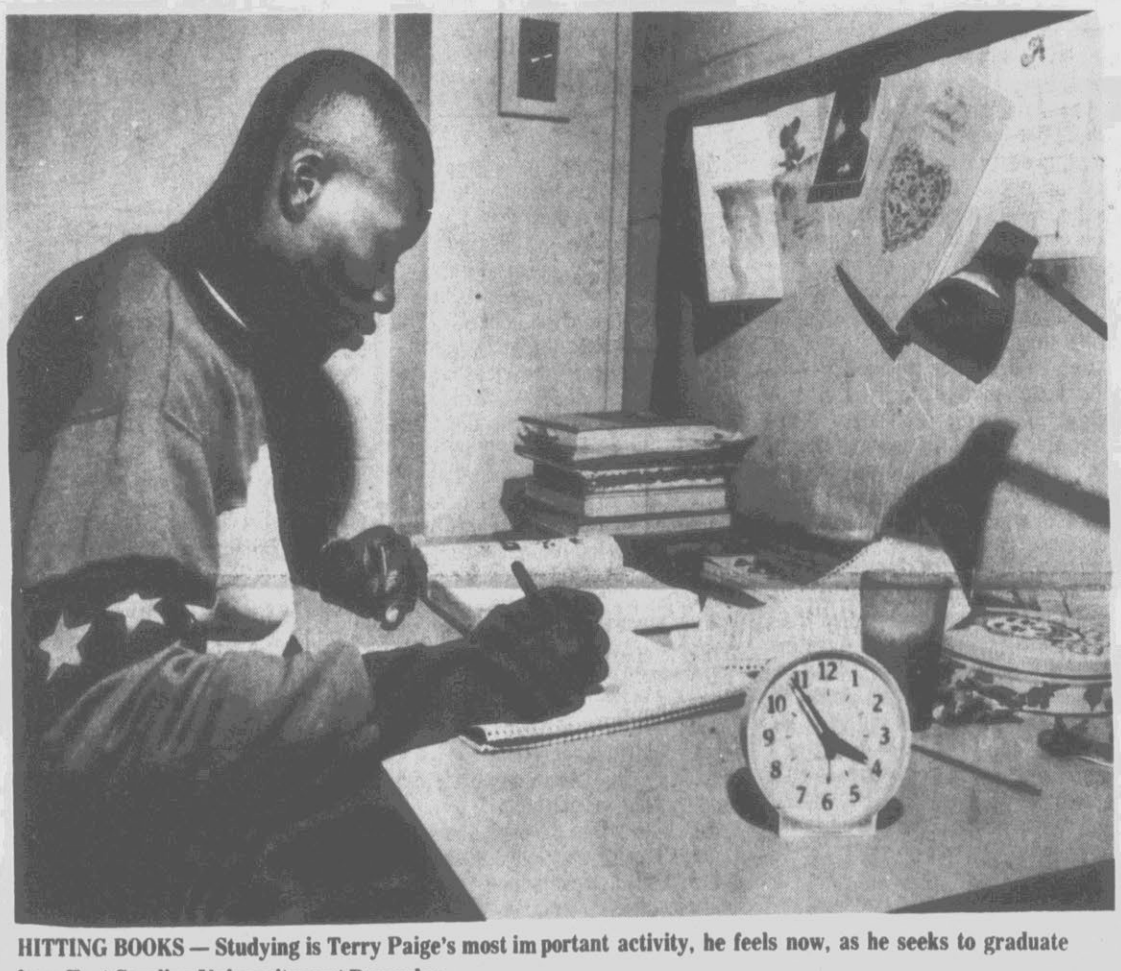

He said that the emotional support of the ECU football team and coaching staff and of the Greenville community especially touched him. He received so many cards, letters and phone calls from his team mates and coaches, plus many others in Greenville. And the team held a softball game and a car wash, both well supported by the community, which raised money for him and his family.

While he was undergoing radiation and chemotherapy was the toughest time, he said. His taste and smelling ability went away and his skin was "cooked black as tar" on his face and neck. During chemotherapy, he couldn't eat nor drink without nausea.

All during this time, he had a goal: to be back in school at ECU by fall semester.

He made it. He's continuing to pursue a degree in criminal justice, expecting to graduate in December of this year, and is active in church and community activities in Greenville. He attends Mount Calvary Free Will Baptist Church and volunteers his time to the Pitt County chapter of the American Cancer Society. He recently was chosen, along with local businessman Joe Gantz, to be chairman of the Cancer Society's "Daffodil Days" fund-raising effort. He's recounted his experience with cancer to some local groups in appearances arranged for by the Cancer Society. And he hopes, once he can get back into the sun, to start filming or doing other volunteer work for the ECU football team.

"It's hard not playing football," he said, "but I know there is more than one way to win in life. So I'm not going to worry too much about that one thing. I've already won against cancer and I'm going to win some other ways, too, and make this world a better place because I was here."

HITTING BOOKS — Studying is Terry Paige's most im portant activity, he feels now, as he seeks to graduate from East Carolina University next December.

'For Spacious Skies' Designed For Kids

(EDITOR'S NOTE — A Boston television reporter took to the streets a few years ago and asked dozens of passersby to describe the current sky without looking up. Only one in 10 could do so. That inspired him to design a sky-watching program for schoolchildren called "For Spacious Skies" that is getting rave reviews from many educators.)

By GEORGE JAHN
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — It was a blustery New England morning, with a cutting wind blowing off Boston Harbor. People were staying inside if they could, but Pat Keohane and her first-graders were up on the school roof again, looking at the pale winter sky.

"The wind," reply the kids in an enthusiastic chorus.

The boy next to her interrupted: "There's a swordfish with a long nose." His comments were suddenly lost in a babble of other kids' voices.

"I see an upside-down dragon," another giggled.

Back at their desks later, the children took turns spelling sky-related words in a variation of the classic hangman game, doing well on big ones like "lightning," and "showers."

A diminutive boy spelled "rain," and Ms. Keohane asked: "What would happen if we didn't have rain for 100 days?"

"There would be no flowers and no wildlife," one of the pupils piped up.

"That wouldn't matter," said another. "We'd still have water in the sinks."

In Ms. Keohane's inner-city classroom at the Josiah Quincy School and at about 1,400 others across the country, teachers say that a program called "For Spacious Skies" is. helping pupils academically and emotionally.

Some of those involved with the program go even further, suggesting that sky watching can turn tough inner-city kids away from drugs and desperation and on to aesthetic beauty instead.

Jack Borden, originator of the program, says, "Wherever you are you have the sky, whether you are living in the high mountains or the worst of slums. As a matter of fact, the person living in the worst slums often has access to the most sky."

A study conducted by researchers at Harvard University's Graduate School of Education appears to support some of the positive claims made by teachers enthused about sky watching.

Using two classrooms at an elementary school in Needham, a community about 15 miles west of Boston, the study compared pupils who participated in "For Spacious Skies" in the fall of 1985 and again at the end of the school year, with those who were not encouraged to look at the sky.

The researchers found that the emphasis on looking up, followed by drawing pictures and writing about the sky, "significantly increased the level of aesthetic sensitivity in visual art and literature."

"The benefits gained from a program such as this would have a great value in any school curriculum," the study said.

The program encourages children to keep journals on their observations and some of them write poetry and draw pictures, said researcher Liz Rosenblatt. "The fact that kids are exposed to the arts in this way helps create an awareness that probably helps the increase in their skills."

"For Spacious Skies" is named after the familiar first line of the Katherine Lee Bates poem, set to music by Samuel A. Ward as "America the Beautiful."

Borden, a quixotic former television reporter, believes that we cannot spend life looking at our feet. His vision came to him about 10 years ago, while working at Boston's WBZ-TV.

Taking to the street, he asked dozens of passersby to describe the current sky without looking up. Only one in 10 could do so.

"I myself was a non-aware person," Borden says. "Then I began to see that it's a good thing to turn people on to the sky."

Since that summer day in 1977, Borden, 59 , has formed a non-profit company to distribute "For Spacious Skies" teaching kits, which offer suggestions on how to use the heavens to teach just about anything.

"'For Spacious Skies' is designed to help teach mathematics, English, creative writing, music, art and science," according to the preface of a booklet meant for schools in the New England area. "This program, just like the New England sky, is limitless. With the sky as a catalyst, your student's imagination can be challenged to its limits."

The kits, which are mailed to schools for about $7.50, include guides for teachers on presenting the material. They contain tables of wind-chill factors, relative humidity and barometric pressure, songs about the sky, and sample observation sheets for students to note weather conditions.

"Some of the upper classes are keeping charts about the length of the day and how that relates to the harvest and growing cycles, and that brings out social studies...what are some of the origins of feast days and festivals that are based on the length of the days and the growing season.

"At lower grades, kids can do bar graphs of how many sunny days there were in January and how many snowy days there were...measuring and counting and a number of interdisciplinary skills. It allows children to write. They might also do a science project around wind speed."

Gov. Michael Dukakis proclaimed last March 18 "For Spacious Skies Day" in Massachusetts. The American Meteorological Society honored the program for its work in public education a year ago and scheduled presentations on "For Spacious Skies" at its annual meeting this year at Anaheim, Calif.

Weather forecasters are Borden's key allies in getting the word to teachers about sky watching. Many have mentioned the program during their broadcasts, and some have gone even further, incorporating aspects of "For Spacious Skies" in weather lectures and seminars for children and teachers.

Meteorologist Bruce Schwoegler of Boston's WBC-TV said he was amazed at the interest in "For Spacious Skies" booklets offered on the air to teachers.

"I ran a three-part series in our news last March in which we offered 3,500 teachers' guides...and we had a very enthusiastic response," he said. "They were all gone within a month."

In Pittsburgh, weatherman Brian Sussman of KDKA-TV said his station's booklet giveaway had similar success.

Discussing the program's value in tougher inner-city schools, Sussman drew parallels between sports and sky watching.

"Just like athletics has been a vehicle to get kids out of the ghetto, I'm looking at 'For Spacious Skies' as a vehicle for sparking interest in a particular field like geography," he said. "What I'm seeing is kids who are interested in something else than MTV. They, for the first time, are observing the beauty of nature."

Violet Witherspoon, a disciple of sky watching who teaches the third-grade at the John Marshall Elementary School in Boston's Dorchester section, expressed similar sentiments.

"I told the children, 'You don't need drugs, let the sky be your drug,'" she said.

"They can look at the sky and daydream. They don't have to have fine clothes, they don't have to have fine cars, beauty is all around them, and it's free."

Wanting Comfort Is Maturity Sign

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

The real thing that separates youth from maturity isn't just years or attitudes. It isn't even energy. It's comfort.

I have reached that stage in my life where I no longer find it adventurous to camp next to a public toilet and do my laundry in the top of a double boiler. I want my own bathroom that you cannot unlock from the outside with a straightened paper clip. I do not want to go to a beach and get caught in the crossfire of dueling transistors.

You can imagine how this goes over with my kids. To them, I'm right out of "Masterpiece Theatre." They have stereotyped me as some kind of royalty who would look at the hungry masses beating down the palace gates and sniff, "Let 'em eat cold pancakes."

My defense is I have earned the right to go to a theater and listen to what is on the screen rather than some motor-mouth behind me talking about his transmission.

OK, now that you're set up, I can tell you about our recent vacation with the family. We went to a small island, and one morning our son suggested we all board a charter boat and go to a nearby island just to poke around. It sounded like a great idea and we went into town to the travel office to get our tickets.

The kids bought the cheaper seats on the boat. My husband said, "I think your mother would be more comfortable in first class." You would not believe the jokes that ensued. "Mom can't be classless for two and a half hours?" "What does she think we're going to do? Ride next to the chickens?" "Why don't you ride back in tourist and take your place at the oars like the rest of us?"

We took their jokes and paid $30 extra for each of our first-class seats.

We were divided from the kids by a curtain.

Five minutes away from the dock on our way to the neighboring island, I grabbed two barf bags and realized I wanted to die. Cold sweat broke out on my forehead. My body was chilled. I could find relief only by lying out flat on the floor on my back and holding a bag in each hand.

Our kids poked through the curtain, stepped carefully over my lifeless body and exclaimed, "So, this is first class!" Another one said, "Nice seat you got, Mom. Good thing you reserved it." Another one observed that we had a television set and it was too bad I was on the floor and couldn't see it as I was missing an old Perry Mason episode.

When they got to "Wow! I think the Mal bags are personalized," I ordered them out.

My husband and I may change the will. We're thinking about it.

WORKING ABROAD

WILTON, Conn. (AP) — A survey shows that 42 percent of Americans working abroad reported their job productivity as higher than it was in the United States.

According to the survey made by Homequity Inc. for Resources International, 38 percent of those polled felt their productivity was the same as in the U.S. while 20 percent said their production was lower in their new location.

The survey found that a typical expatriate has relocated overseas because of a company transfer, lives in Western Europe or Asia, and is in the third of the four years he expects to live overseas.

SANDRA JEAN HARRELL — is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rodrick T. Harrell Sr. of Greenville, who announce her engagement to Steven Darrell Cook, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence H. Cook of Niagara Falls, N.Y. The wedding is planned for April 16.

LU ANNE DIXON — is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clair Dixon of Route 4, Snow Hill, who announce her engagement to David James Price, son of Mr. and Mrs. M.B. Price of Route 2, Robersonville, and the late Christine Price. A June 25 wedding is planned.

BIRTH OF A CITY

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The story of how Pittsburgh got its name dates back to 1758, during the French and Indian Wars.

British troops under Gen. John Forbes attacked and beat the French at Fort Duquesne, strategically situated where the Monongahela and Allegheny rivers join.

BATTEN DOWN THE HATCHES

NEW YORK (AP) — The Beaufort Scale, used by weathermen to indicate wind force, was devised by Admiral Sir Francis Beaufort in 1806.

The scale uses numbers from 0 to 12 to measure wind strength. Force 2, for example, means light breezes of four to seven mph. Force 9 is a strong gale blowing 47-54 mph. Force 12, a hurricane with winds of 73-136 mph, was originally desribed as "that which no canvas could withstand."

Present Relatives Storage Bill

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have a solution for "Angry and In Doubt," the lady who was given a piano years ago by an elderly woman who was moving into smaller quarters and had no room for it. Now, 36 years later, her relatives want the piano back — for "sentimental" reasons!

She should let the relatives have it. She should also present them with a bill for storage. Let's say $10 a month for 432 months, which is cheap for heated storage. Insist on cash. No checks.

If the family is really that sentimental about the piano, they will gladly pay $4,320, and the present owner can go out and buy herself a new piano. — WANDA FROM LEBANON, ORE.

DEAR WANDA: What a great idea. (Judge Wapner, move over.)

DEAR ABBY: My daughter is thinking about getting married. She and Bobby have been living together for nearly seven years and have two children. He wants to be married in a church but neither one of them belongs to one, so his aunt is trying to get them married in the church she belongs to because it's close to the hall where they want to have their wedding reception.

My daughter would just as soon have a quick ceremony by a judge, but Bobby wants a big church wedding with her in a white wedding gown and veil and him in a white tux. He is paying for everything so she is doing it his way. They have everything they need in a house, so how do we go about telling people if they want to give them a gift to please make it money? Would that be in bad taste? I have heard it would be. I thought maybe if the invitations were written up explaining their circumstances, it would be OK. What do you think? — KENTUCKY READERS

DEAR READERS: It would be in poor taste to ask for money. And it would be unthinkable to "explain their circumstances" in the wedding invitations.

HOW TO PLAY THE PIANO DESPITE YEARS OF LESSONS

By SUSAN BROILI

Bynum Kirk still remembers when she was 10 and taking piano lessons from her cousin.

"I would start practicing when I would see her coming down the road," Kirk says.

Those lessons only lasted two years, but since then she has taught herself to pick out a few tunes. Sometimes she's called on in Sunday School to play the piano when the regular pianist is out.

"I always tell them," she says, "I'll play if they will sing 'What A Friend We Have In Jesus.'"

That's the only hymn she knows how to play. She would like to be able to play other hymns as well and that is one reason why she attended the preview of a piano course with a twist: "How to Play the Piano Despite Years of Lessons."

Betty Wendt, mother of three, also came to the preview, conducted earlier this week by Suann Strickland, who teaches this class at a Durham music store. "I want to be smart and make that piano do something other than sit there," said Wendt.

This piano course was designed to do just that, according to Strickland. The Piano Consortium in New York City developed the course 10 years ago in response to a Rockefeller Research project that asked the question: Why are there 30 million unplayed pianos sitting in homes across the country?

Findings revealed that people kept dropping out of classical lessons. "Classical music requires such incredible technique. People have to play little Bach sonatas they don't understand, when what they really want to do is play something they enjoy," said Strickland.

In addition to playing the classics, most of us want to be able to play the songs we enjoy singing. Music has historically been the people's music, a way of expressing the emotion of the culture. Popular music is a powerful cultural force and can't be ignored.

Classics are the forte of traditional piano courses, which stress technical perfection. "The teacher corrects you if you're playing the wrong note. We're so busy trying to get it right, we can't enjoy it. We're afraid to really play around with the music."

People believe their enjoyment of playing the piano is subject to someone else's judgment. This is a "crippling attitude" that Strickland seeks to overcome in her teaching. She concentrates as much on frame of mind as playing method.

Personal enjoyment rather than critical standards is stressed in this course. "You don't have to win contests, give recitals or concerts. In these lessons we have a basic rule: "If it sounds good, (to you) it is good." It helps get people back to enjoying music, said Strickland.

"It's one thing to play the notes, sort of like being a typist, and another thing to make your own music. If you hear a song by Billy Joel, the sheet music isn't going to be what you hear on the radio. That's because Billy Joel is playing the way he feels it," she added. "If you understand the basics, the whole keyboard opens up to you," said Strickland, listing the basics as melody, rhythm and harmony.

This course teaches students 25 arranging styles, such as jazz and bolero. Strickland has students count aloud because she wants them to feel the rhythm. She also has them work on developing an ear for music by listening to chord structure in music at the dentist's office, mall and grocery store. There is not a large emphasis on practice; students are asked to practice 15 minutes a day if they can.

The course is designed for people who at some point dropped out of piano lessons. Strickland's past classes have included retirees, a Duke biology professor and a potter. If people can read a simple melody line of notes and find their location on the keyboard, this eight-lesson course will teach them how to play by ear, arrange and enrich a song, according to Strickland. She also teaches a course for those who have had no experience.

"I think playing the piano is just about the most wonderful thing to do," said Strickland as she sat down at the keyboard and proved it by playing "Love Walked Right In." This rendition sounded fancy with all those grand chords and flourishes. "All I had to work with was the melody line," Strickland told her prospective students. The rest was added by Strickland, based on knowledge taught in this course, which she has been teaching for five years.

She took the course herself in Chicago, where she was playing piano for a dinner theater. A native of New Mexico, she began taking piano at age 6. Her 27 years of classical training included studies at Wheaton College in Illinois, American Conservatory of Music and DePaul University in Chicago. She had been trained to play music as printed on the page, so she felt frustrated at the dinner theater when a singer would say: "I want this in the key of E flat."

The course taught her how to read chord symbols, actually guitar symbols found on sheet music. These chords could be played in any key. Her new-found ability supplemented her classical training and allowed her to be more versatile.

The course is not meant to replace classical training, but does have endorsement by classicists, she said. Norman Lloyd, former dean of education and director of musical studies at Julliard School of Music, helped develop this course. Vanderbilt University requires all music education majors to take the course, she added. Strickland has presented the technique to the Durham Music Teachers' Association and piano teachers have taken her course.

Everyone who takes the course starts out playing "Red River Valley" and "Jingle Bells." Strickland still recalls a former student, a Jewish woman, who announced she was having her first Christmas party, just so she could play Christmas carols to show off ther new-found ability.

BETSY DRAKE LEWIS' DECORATING TIPS
FREE STANDING FURNITURE OR A BUILT-IN?

When you're thinking about a wall unit of any kind, or a bookcase, it's good to consider advantages of free standing units as opposed to built-ins for many worthwhile reasons.

Now, we're not saying that built-ins aren't good, too, but free standing units do give you so much. For one thing, because they are not built-in they can be put on different walls whenever you decide to re-decorate or change a room around.

The same applies if you ever move. Built-in shelves usually have to be left behind, but cabinets, bookcases and other wall units can go with you and be used in your new home.

Not only do you have the great versatility with free standing units, but there are so many attractive ones today that are really beautiful pieces of furniture.

Etageres, bookcases and wall units are available -- not only to hold and display the things you want them to -- but also to "stand on their own" decoratively. And such pieces can be used not only against a wall, but many may also be used, if you wish, as room or area dividers away from the walls. It all adds up to a way of decorating you might consider, and we'll be happy to help you. Come in and see our large selection of interesting pieces including the new pickled finishes, glass and brass and the new ash finish from Century.

We Offer Your Company More Health Coverage Choices Than Anyone Else In The Field.

Not long ago, employees could only get one type of health coverage. Because basically that's all that was available.

But times have changed. Employers and employees have become more health conscious. And the people who provide health coverage have found new ways to deliver it.

But nobody has found more ways than Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina. We offer the widest variety of health coverage plans in the state. And when your employer signs up with us, he or she has the option of letting you choose the program that best suits your health care needs and the needs of your family.

Sue Wray
Group, Individual

And you don't have to pick the same plan as the person working next to you. Because your needs and that person's needs may be completely different.

Here's what you get to choose from:

Traditional Group. This is the plan you're probably most familiar with. It offers basic comprehensive coverage.

The Personal Care Plan or HMO of North Carolina. Your company may select one of the two. The Personal Care Plan is an HMO. One monthly payment covers virtually every health care need. HMO of North Carolina is an HMO, too. But it differs from the Personal Care Plan in that it utilizes the staff and facilities of a participating hospital. It is presently available in selected areas of the state.

Preferred Care. Preferred Care covers treatment wherever a patient prefers. But deductables and co-payments are reduced or eliminated when doctors in our CostWise® program and participating hospitals are used. Preferred Care is presently available in selected areas of the state.

Jake Scott
Group, Family

Group Insurance Services. Group Insurance Services is life insurance coverage that can be attached to any of our group plans.

So there they are. The widest choice of health programs in North Carolina. And one of the reasons nearly two million North Carolinians choose us as their coverage carrier.

If your company has Blue Cross and Blue Shield coverage, talk to your employer about providing you the option of picking the plan you like best. And if your company's not covered by Blue Cross and Blue Shield, ask your employer to pick up the phone and call us. Because when it comes to health coverage, we're clearly the best in our field.

The Task Of Keeping Wilderness Areas Protected

By BILL SCHULZ
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Peter Kirby's job is to keep most of the Southeast's remaining wilderness wild until Congress can officially protect it.

"About 5 percent of the 12.5 million acres of national forest land in the Southeast is protected now. Another 5 percent is eligible," said Kirby, 37, new Southeastern regional director of the Wilderness Society, a leading national conservation group.

"That compares with about 17 percent protected nationally."

Protecting wilderness involves prevention of roadbuilding and timber cutting in areas which conservationists hope will some day be designated as wilderness.

This year's federal budget is a major breakthrough in that area, Kirby said. Congress cut $12 million from the president's proposals for building roads while appropriations to build and maintain hiking trails were increased $16 million. Money for wildlife enhancement programs was increased $6 million, to $47.6 million.

The budget includes $1.9 million for trail construction and maintenance in the Southeastern forests. Funding for recreation programs is $124 million, up $14 million.

The 1988 budget for roadbuilding is down $50 million from two years ago, Kirby said.

Roads are built to give loggers access to the trees, but the sale of the timber seldom brings in as much as it costs to build the roads, Kirby said.

National forest lands are supposed to be managed for multiple uses, including timber production, wildlife habitat and public recreation.

"We'd like to see wildlife and recreation to essentially be equal to timber production" as a use of the national forests, Kirby said. "The public lands produce benefits that private lands don't provide."

Kirby said Earth Day 1970 convinced him his job was to work to protect the environment. An attorney with "some undergraduate training in forestry," Kirby joined the staff of the National Wildlife Federation, handling public lands issues involving many branches of the federal government.

He joined the Wilderness Society in 1980 and became a specialist in national forest issues.

He was appointed to the Atlanta office late last year, replacing Ron Tipton, who was promoted back to the Washington office.

The U.S. Forest Service is in the process of drafting plans for management of the national forests for the next 50 years. Most have been appealed by conservation groups. Here is where the major plans for Southeastern forests stand:

Alabama — Conservation groups have appealed to Forest Service chief Dale Robertson to increase the Sipsey Wilderness area by about 4,500 acres.

"I went to the Sipsey two weeks ago," Kirby said. "There are about 1,000 acres of old growth trees there, including the largest tulip poplar I've ever seen. It must be 500 years old. It was 20 feet or so in circumference. It sits right smack in the middle of a box canyon, surrounded by virgin beech trees as tall as office buildings, and coming down the canyon are two waterfalls."

Tennessee — "The appeal of the Cherokee National Forest plan raises all the basic issues found in the Southern mountain forest cases," Kirby said. They include roadbuilding, recreational use, black bear habitat protection and protection of biological diversity among wildlife.

"We are waiting with baited breath" to see the outcome of negotiations to reshape the plan to meet those objections, Kirby said.

The Carolinas — The Pisgah-Nantahala is the largest of the Southern forests, connecting the Smokey Mountains with national forests in Tennesse, Virginia and Georgia.

"It has the largest area of roadless land," Kirby said.

Stamp News

The Pacific Reef-Heron stands 20-23 inches high and is the largest shorebird in Micronesia. The Bar-Tailed Godwit is a winter visitor to the Marshalls, migrating from northern Alaska and Siberia where it breeds. The Masked Booby is about 32 inches long and breeds on all the Marshall atolls and rocky offshore inlets.

Debates Slated At N.C. Historical Sites

By PEGGY HOWE
N.C. Department Of Cultural Resources

Two hundred years ago, in March, 1788, North Carolinians were gathering in town meetings across the state to elect delegates to the Hillsborough constitutional convention in July. Would North Carolinians ratify the new United States Constitution? It would take two-thirds of the states' approval to adopt the document.

With support grants from several organizations, the Historical Albemarle Tour (HAT) will recreate this town meeting at five northeastern sites during March and April.

Today's North Carolinians are invited to participate in these town meetings, entitled "Freedom or Tyranny: A Town Meeting to Discuss Our Proposed National Constitution" to recreate the election of delegates to the Hillsborough convention.

Meetings and dates are:

- March 24, Halifax County Courthouse.
- March 29, Tarboro's Calvary Episcopal Church.
- April 14, Bath's St. Thomas Church.
- April 21, Elizabeth City, Museum of the Albemarle.
- April 25, Edenton, old County Courthouse.

All meetings begin at 7:30 p.m.

In the 1788 meetings Federalists (pro-Constitution) and anti-Federalists (against adoption) debated the pros and cons of the new Constitution.

Professional actors in costume at these upcoming gatherings will debate the Constitution guided by a moderator. All dialogue will be from a script which reflects both the Federalist and anti-Federalist viewpoints, according to project director Cliff Tyndall of the Archives and History Eastern Office, Greenville.

Dr. Fred Ragan, professor of history at East Carolina University, acting as program scholar at each site, will introduce the program and afterward lead a discussion concerning the Constitution. The audience, portraying local townspeople in 1788, will be asked to vote as to whether or not they support the newly-proposed document.

What were North Carolinians' views 200 years ago? The audience will be participants, offering comments or asking questions of characters. According to Tyndall, characters will use "both reason and emotion in their appeals to the audience."

The N. C. Humanities Council provided more than $3,800 to the Historic Albemarle Tours in support of the program. The Humanities Council's "overall purpose is to develop within the general public and among academics an appreciation of the humanities as an essential resource in human life, both private and public."

Additional funding for "Freedom or Tyranny" comes from the Northeastern Historic Places Office and the N. C. Commission on the Bicentennial of the U. S. Constitution.

Admission to each program is free.

For details, write Tyndall at the Eastern Office, Archives and History, 117 W. 5th St., Greenville, N.C. 27858; or telephone 752-7778.

Certainly, taking tricks on defense is the key element in defeating any contract. However, when you win a trick can be critical, as this hand from the recent Bermuda Regional, held at the Southampton Princess, bears eloquent testimony.

North-South bid well to a good slam that was placed in jeopardy only by the terrible trump break. However, Martin Chaitt of Gaithersburg, Md., who with his wife Ellasue was one of the partnerships on the winning knockout team, sailed home with an assist from East.

Declarer won the opening lead in dummy, and had mixed feelings when he led the ace of hearts and West showed out. The trump break was unlucky, but at least he had cashed the high trump from the right hand. He reverted to the king of diamonds, and East fell from grace when he ruffed. The rest was easy.

Declarer rose with the ace on the spade return, crossed to dummy with the king of clubs and took the marked trump finesse. A club ruff provided the dummy entry for another trump finesse, and the king of trumps picked up the queen. Declarer was able to discard two spades on the long diamonds to land his slam, since he could reach the table with his remaining diamond.

Note the difference if East refuses to ruff the second diamond, but waits for the third round. Declarer is an entry short to both pick up trumps and run diamonds, and the slam must go down.

Halogen Light Is Doing Good Job In Substituting For Old Sol

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Natural light is best. But bringing the sun into a cave-like room can be an expensive proposition if it involves skylights or new windows.

That's why halogen light is catching the attention of a sun-starved public. This new ingredient in the mix of lighting products available for the home has the advantage of resembling natural sunlight and producing an intense, clear light that shows colors in true tones, making it an excellent medium for artworks, general illumination and, with precautions against glare, for task lighting.

Halogen lamps and fixtures come in standard 120 voltage and in 12 volts (known as low-voltage). Although not yet widely available and apparently not being made by American manufacturers for home use, a replacement halogen bulb that can be screwed into a standard incandescent socket can be purchased in specialty bulb outlets. A source at General Electric said the company was considering marketing a replacement halogen bulb for home use.

Just Bulbs, a shop in New York, sells a replacement halogen bulb made by Osram, a German company, in 150 watts and 250 watts. The Osram bulb, which is covered with an extra glass jacket for safety, is $25 plus tax.

According to Shirley Brooks, co-owner of Just Bulbs, because of the heat halogen generates, precautions need to be taken when replacing an incandescent bulb with a halogen bulb.

"Make sure the lamp or fixture has a porcelain socket, instead of a plastic socket, and don't exceed the maximum wattage recommended by the lamp manufacturer," she said. Halogen bulbs are extremely hot and could conceivably melt a plastic socket or burn out the wiring.

Though the use of halogen goes back at least 25 years as stage and sports arena lighting, it is only within the last few years that it has become common in residential lighting in the United States.

A halogen light bulb works on the same principle as a conventional incandescent bulb in which a tungsten filament is mounted inside a quartz glass exterior. When the electric switch is turned on, the filament produces light.

In conventional bulbs, tungsten particles are burned off and settle on the inside of the glass, gradually reducing the light output so that an older bulb is less efficient and gives off less light than a new one.

The addition of halogen gases to the tungsten filament eliminates the darkening process by completely removing the tungsten residue. The bulb retains the same amount of light through its entire life.

Halogen bulbs offer about 2,000 hours of light, retaining consistent light output throughout life, compared to about 1,000 hours of light for incandescent bulbs. Another advantage is the halogen bulb can be smaller than an incandescent bulb.

The drawbacks associated with halogen bulbs include greater heat and higher prices. A halogen bulb might cost between $6 and $12 compared to an incandescent bulb cost of between $2 and $3. A halogen fixture might sell for 25-35 percent more than the same fixture outfitted with incandescent bulbs, said Pam Green of Thomas Industries.

Because of intense heat and the fact that halogen bulbs contain gases under pressure, consumers should be aware that under some circumstances, the bulb could shatter. Don't buy a halogen fixture or lamp unless the bulb is covered, advised Nancy Christensen, General Electric's residential lighting specialist.

The cover might be a surrounding fixture or closed shade, a lens or a screen. All GE halogen bulbs carry a warning that filament tubes generate intense heat, are pressurized and could unexpectedly shatter.

Green said that for safety and longevity bulbs should be handled with special care. "Don't try to remove a bulb from a fixture before it has cooled. This takes at least 10 minutes or more," she said. If there is a screen or shield over the bulb, don't try to touch this part either until the bulb has cooled.

Keep halogen lamps and fixtures away from draperies, bedspreads and other fabrics that could catch fire from the heat of the bulb.

Never touch a bare halogen bulb with your fingers or hand. A cloth should be used to dust or replace a halogen bulb.

Otherwise, body oils deposited on the bulb's quartz exterior can create heat sinks that cause lamps to fail prematurely, says Green. The precaution is not necessary if the bulb has a double envelope and consumers should ask before purchasing a halogen bulb, lamp or fixture.

Because of its brightness at full power, a halogen lamp or fixture usually comes with a dimmer siwtch. Before turning the light off, it should be turned all the way up to full power for a few minutes. This extends the life of the bulb by cleaning the bulb surface and restarting the cycle.

Here's The Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — We had a leak in a cold water pipe a year ago. I put a temporary patch over it and it has held up well but I worry the patch might not hold. Is there a better repair I can make that I can be reasonably sure will hold indefinitely? I am fairly handy with tools.

A. — Sounds as though you made a good patch originally, although you did not say what kind of patch it was. In any case, there are many different kinds of semi-permanent solutions for your problem. Two of them involve sleeve-type coverings. One is like the hose clamps sometimes used in automobiles. Ask the dealer to explain how it is put around the pipe and then tightened. The other is called a pipe sleeve and is available wherever plumbing supplies are sold to plumbers, although some well-stocked home centers carry it. It is made of metal, is fitted around the pipe and then clamped in place with nuts and bolts. It comes in various sizes, so be sure to get one that will fit around the pipe which has the leak.

Q. — I have been having all sorts of noises in my old plumbing system and have been told at least one and probably more air chambers are needed. Is this something I can do myself?

A. — I have no way of knowing without having some idea of your capabilities. But this is a specialized task that requires both knowledge and skill. In addition, some communities will not permit you to do that kind of work. The fact that you ask the question indicates that, at the very least, you may not have the necessary knowledge.

Q. — While I have never replaced a faucet washer in the house we now live in, I did in our previous residence. It is an old-fashioned faucet, the same as the one in the other house. I assume I should do the same things I did before in order to replace the washer. However, the last time there was a shutoff valve under the sink. This one doesn't have any. Will it be necessary to shut off the water to the entire house in order to fix the faucet?

A. — If you can't find the valve that shuts off the water to the sink or whatever fixture it is, then you have no choice but to close the valve that lets water into the house. If you don't, you will have water shooting up to the ceiling when you remove the faucet stem.

Q. — I know hardware stores don't count the nails, but to settle an argument, can you tell me how many 10-penny nails are supposed to be in a pound of them? I understand there is some kind of chart that tells this.

A. — Technically, there are supposed to be 69 10-penny common nails in a pound. Note this refers to common nails. You didn't say which kind. There are 10-penny sizes in other kinds of nails, too.

(Pipe leaks, leaky faucets, troublesome toilet tanks and tank condensation are among the various subjects discussed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Simple Plumbing Repairs," which can be obtained by sending 75 cents and a long, stamped self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y., 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Garden Clinic

Q. What are some things that need to be done in the vegetable garden in March?

A. It is not too early to purchase garden supplies. Wait to turn the soil if the ground is wet. Lime the garden site if your soil test analysis recommends it. Plant onion sets, green (English) peas, leafy greens, broccoli, cauliflower, radishes and beets in the Piedmont and Coastal Plain sections of North Carolina. Plant seeds indoors for later transplants of warm-season vegetables in the Piedmont and Coastal Plain. Make plans to protect tender vegetables against cold April weather.

Q. Please tell me about the plant called treasure flower. It looks somewhat like a daisy.

A. Treasure flower is another name for gazania. It is a daisy-like flower that has many colorful hybrids of pink, bronze, yellow, red and gold. There are usually bold contrasting markings on the flowers. The leaves of the plant are gray-green and the plants grow about 8 to 11 inches tall. Gazanias like full sun and well-drained soil. They flower in summer and early autumn.

Q. What is a starter solution?

A. A starter solution is a fertilizer solution expecially made to use on young plants in the garden to help them get a good start. Commercial starter solutions have a high percentage of phosphorus which stimulates root formation by young transplants.

Q. What is the name of Carolina jessamine that blooms in the fall?

A. "Gelsemium rankanii," the autumn-blooming Carolina jessamine, is a rare Southeastern species of jessamine very similar in appearance to the commonly grown Carolina jessamine, "Gelsemium sempervirens." Perhaps the most significant difference between the two species is that G. sempervirens flowers in the spring and G. rankanii flowers in the spring and fall. Another important difference is that G. rankanii is not reported to have the fragrance that G. sempervirens has.

On The House
By ANDY LANG

The natural beauty of wood complements any architectural or landscape design. Which is why it is used for decks behind or close to houses in every section of the country.

Because there is a significant investment of time, money and work in the building of a deck, homeowners should realize the necessity of protecting and maintaining the original character of the wood. The very thing that makes it so treasured — its naturalness — is the same thing that makes it highly susceptible to the environment. It responds to sun, rain, snow and exposure by shrinking and swelling, which can damage the wood and weaken its structural integrity.

These changes occur in all types of wood, although not as much in the durable species such as redwood, and pressure-treated lumber, which nevertheless suffer to some extent. Stephen McGarr of the Dartmouth Co., a manufacturer of preservatives, stains, sealers and similar products, says wood reacts when it dries to the moisture level of the environment. It can warp, twist, bow, crack, develop darkened streaks and provide a breeding ground for mildew.

McGarr says mildew can be prevented by cleaning the wood thoroughly once a year with a stiff brush, warm water and a low-sudsing, non-abrasive household detergent. He suggests there is a way to tell whether the discoloration is caused by weathering or mildew. Apply a solution of one-to-one chlorine bleach and water to the suspected area. If it lightens quickly, the trouble is mildew. To get rid of mildew, clean the wood surface with a mixture of two parts of water and one part of bleach. It can be applied easily with a pump-up garden sprayer. Wait 30 minutes, then rinse with fresh water.

Before applying a protective finish to wood, it should be allowed to weather for about three months. If it is pressure-treated wood, you can let it weather for six months or immediately apply a clear wood sealer that is compatible with pressure-treated wood. Check the label of the product to be sure it has that quality. It causes water to bead up and roll off while allowing the wood to weather naturally.

There are products on the market, readily available in local hardware stores and home centers, that will remove accumulated dirt, mildew and algae and restore the original beauty of the wood surface in a single application. Some contain no acid or chlorine bleach and are safe for all types of lumber, including the pressure-treated kind. These are available in convenient powder form and are dissolved in one gallon of water. They can be applied in four easy steps, using a mop and an ordinary garden hose.

If you are contemplating building your own deck, you might want to consider a weatherproof, siliconized acrylic-latex caulk to reduce the chances of nail popping or the loosening of fastening points that can cause squeaking at some later time. When this caulk is applied to the places where the joints are fastened, it gives added strength and reduces the number of nails you will need to use. Before applying it, the wood should be cleaned of all loose scale, oil and dirt. The caulk should be allowed to cure for 24 to 48 hours after it has been applied. McGarr says it will not crack, peel or dry out for the lifetime of the deck.

Plan For Spring Planting

From HOUSE BEAUTIFUL
A Hearst Magazine

Now is the time when garden addicts can do something almost as important as spring planting — and that is winter planning.

Many gardeners are hopeless collectors, as Ken Druse confessed to being in the current issue of House Beautiful, and he offered some tips on ways to control your runaway horticultural appetite.

Gardeners who are tempted whenever they see a new, unusual or particularly beautiful plant in a nursery catalog or garden center should keep in mind these rules:

— Dont' buy plants that have needs, such as full sun all day long, which cannot be met.

— In tight quarters, every selection must count; choose flowering plants that bloom for at least two weeks.

— Don't bring any plant into the garden unless adequate growing space has been chosen in advance.

Druse wrote that until now his extravagant orders had him scurrying around the garden plugging new additions into all available space.

"This year," he wrote, "I made copies of my plant orders and listed the intended sites for every species and variety. I've already prepared the new soil for the plants that will be arriving any day now."

To keep the garden from becoming a hodgepodge, you must at least suggest an appearance of order.

"Structure can come from such permanent design elements as a patio, path, formal edging and steps that create transitions between levels," Druse wrote.

"And I've found that the colors and textures of botanicals can also give a coherent impression of tidiness. One thing I've learned: with annuals or perennials, one-of-a-kind rarely looks good."

He said that massing and repeating some long-season plants that do well could effectively hold a garden design together.

A DREAM HOUSE — Lewis Woolard's five story house, much of it constructed with salvaged materials, is capped by a large window-filled room with a viewing balcony. The basic design is an adult version of a youth person's tree house. The view of the house up a lane from the dirt road into the area is impressive.

ROUND HOUSE — George Mason's circular house, though not yet completed inside, is quite liveable for him, his wife and two children. The spacious house has a basement, two stories and an ample attic. Tall windows serve both main floors. A central stairwell in season conveys heat and cool air to all the house.

Two Unusual Houses In Rural Pitt County

Text By LaRona Murray, Photographs By Jerry Raynor

Two homes with unusual architectural designs are located in Pitt County, a short distance off highway 264 east of Pactolus. They are in a secluded area in a rural environment in the edge of a wooded area of mostly hardwood trees, and are within sight of each other when trees are bare of leaves.

One is a large round house topped by a conical roof, featuring tall windows that serve both the first and second stories. A heavy arched door is the home's main entrance point.

George Mason, his wife Charlotte and two children are occupants of the ample house, shaded by sturdy beech and other hardwood trees in a spacious yard. Some of the trees are draped in Spanish moss. From the yard, one can hear the sounds of water from nearby Grindle Creek, along with the cluck of chickens on the premises and birdsong from the trees. A white goat has freedom to roam in the yard.

Construction on the round house began in 1977. It consists of four levels, a basement that serves primarily as Mason's workshop; a first and second story, and an attic.

The heating system for Mason's house is in the basement, a wood burning furance with pipes encased in a cinder block stair well which dispenses warmth to all the house.

"Since the blocks maintain temperatures they can also be used for cooling purposes," Mason explained.

The first floor at this time includes a large living area, a modern kitchen, the children's room, and a bedroom. "There are no room divisions in this part of the house; it's just one large round area," Mason said.

Except for the attic, the second level of the house will eventually be used for bed and bathrooms. "These rooms will be separated by walls, they are not completed yet," he said. "In fact, there's a lot to be done, but I'm paying for it as I go, so it's rather slow."

Mason says he had extra space in mind when he designed the house, pointing out that there is one third more wall space in a rounded area. "I also wanted a substantial home, one that is fireproof and with capabilities of enduring bad weather. So that's why I've built it with cinder brick walls and cement floors."

Another factor Mason mentioned as determining the choice of design for the house "is its minimum of building cost. I have spent about $30,000 on the house to date," he said. "It's been appraised at a value of $100,000 when it's completed."

While the house was in its early stages of construction, Mason and his family lived in a bus for a year and then moved into a small house they built where they stayed until moving into the round house in December, 1986.

Mason said "I just kinda dreamed up the whole idea of the design of the house. But I really had in mind building a house similar to the 19th century historial Octagon House near Englelhard in Hyde County. It was reportedly designed by my great-grandfather, J.H. Mason." (The Octogan House, also known as the Inkwell House is now fully restored. It is patterned after plans made by Orson Fowler, a New York phrenologist, in 1854.)

One Of Washington, D.C.'s Most Captivating Buildings

THE GREAT JUMBLE — The Old Executive Building in Washington, D.C., a full block structure adjacent to the White House, has been called the nation's prime example of great jumble architecture. The huge five-story structure is a romantic hodgepodge of towering chimneys, columned porticos, varied window and roof designs, and wide, well-worn entrance steps. Despite its vastness and architectural diversity, the building has a dramatic visual appeal and reflects a time in American history when it was economically feasible to lavish time and money on such a structure. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

The Tree House

The tree house belonging to Lewis Woolard is the first of the two houses to be seen by a traveler on the unpaved road leading into the area. Although not actually a tree house, it has been given that name and it seems quite appropriate, as it has the architectural ambience of an adult's concept of a youth's tree house.

The idea for the building was conceived by Russell Manning in 1982. He had intentions of using it for a men's clubhouse. About a year later, when the structure was in its framing stage, Manning sold the building to Lewis.

"It's a five story building," Woolard said. "The second and top floor, the fifth story, are both totally completed and furnished. All the stories except the third story has a balcony."

The big deck fronting the fifth story, which slightly overhangs the rest of the building, "is 40 feet off the ground," Woolard said.

"A good part of the material used in constructing the house is recycled," Woolard said. "Much of it came from buildings I tore down along U.S. 264, houses and other buildings that had to be removed because of the highway widening project."

Although it is unoccupied, Woolard said "It's really a dream house, something like a play house for me. It's a fine place to retreat to, has a good vantage point for observing wildlife and the countryside all around."

One interesting feature of the area is a shallow, tree-filled pond located between the two houses. The trees, mostly tupelo gum, stand slender and light of bark in the winter months, reflected in the still dark waters of the pond.

A Vivid History Of Perquimans County

PERQUIMANS COUNTY. A Brief History. By Alan D. Watson. Raleigh, N.C., Historical Publications Section, Division of Archives and History, 109 East Jones Street. Illustrated. Paper, 122 pages. $4, plus $1 postage and handling.

The real drawback to this thoroughly interesting history of the northeastern North Carolina rural county of Perquimans is, as its subtitle implies, its brevity. Granted it was essential for author Alan D. Watson to pen the work in a tightly compacted structure to meet what seems to be a prescribed size for such specialized publications, but the material could be readily be expanded for at least another couple hundred or more pages.

With a current population of about 10,000, and with only two incorporated towns, Hertford, the county seat, with about 2,000 and Winfall with 634 people in 1980, Perquimans is indeed a rural area — some would even say a flatlands backwater.

Watson, professor of history at UNC-Wilmington, is well known for his writings about the colonial history of North and South Carolina. Consequently, it's understandable that he's at his best in "The Colonial Era." Not that he shuns the later eras — "From Revolution to Civil War"; "Civil War and Reconstruction," and "The Last Century," but the Colonial chapter sparkles where the remaining chapters principally inform.

Drawing information from a wide array of early primary sources — minutes of meetings, probate records, and the like, Watson has a keen eye for small details that speak volumes.

The isolation, hardships and what we today would label the lowest denominator of poverty runs in an unbroken thread during the first century of settlement, a time marked too by a growing dissension among the populace between those advocating independence from the mother country and those whose loyalty to the crown remained strong. "The dissatisfaction produced . . . particularly the Plantation Duty of 1673 and the question of the legitimacy of the government in the mid-1670s, resulted in civil strife known as Culpeper's Rebellion in 1767."

Especially exasperating was the arrogant attitudes of Virginians a short distance to the north, some of whom laid "claims of ownership of the Albemarle region."

Other handicaps in the early history of Perquimans included Indian unrest — the whites were unable to bind the natives to effective slavery; imperial regulations with a tariff on exported tobacco and general neglect by the proprietory government.

Through these years, Watson relieves the darkness with bits of history that enliven and furnish information on eastern North Carolina in general that few Tar Heels would suspect.

One of the most significant developments was the struggle between the Quakers, the first established religion in the area, and the Anglican church. As years passed, the Quakers became strongly opposed to black slavery, and lost social standing as well as suffering hardships from the actions of other landowners who readily embraced this source of labor.

Other commonplaces which would be incredible in today's society are such things as laws regulating livestock. In 1853,"'Men hired to care for the courthouse and grounds were allowed to graze their livestock in the courthouse yard as compensation but were cautioned 'not to suffer the livestock to go into the courthouse.'"

Road maintenance in the early years — and in fact extending to the 20th century — constituted a recurring problem for government and the populace. Due to the marshiness and wetness of the flat soil, roads tended to alternate in wet or dry periods from deep mud and holes to dust and holes. Roads into the county from the north had to traverse the Great Dismal Swamp. "Other than the costly and tedious passage through the Dismal Swamp Canal, Perquimans shippers relied upon Currituck Inlet and Ocracoke Inlet for access to external markets. But the Currituck Inlet, once a half mile wide and 12 feet deep, closed in 1828 " — due to nature's unpredictability in shaping and reshaping the geography of the Outer Banks.

Watson relates the importance of ferries before the advent of paved roads and bridges; the strange alignment of bedfellows in the quirky world of early politics; the importance women played in upholding family ties and moral principles; the agricultural, fishing and naval stores industries that prospered, waned or changed with the times, and the wide economic and social gap between a handful of plantation aristrocacy and the spartan life of ordinary citizens.

The Civil War, its aftermath, and events in the last century are more than adequately conveyed in brief form. Above all, however, it is the early two centuries that Watson brilliantly illuminates in telling the story of hardships and courage enlightened by accounts of colorful eccentrics and the fascinating lifestyles of rural Perquimans County.

A Reflector Review

Exploring America's Forgotten Century

The National Geographic magazine, now marking its centennial year of publication, continues to provide excellent thought provoking articles that inform, entertain, and sharpens a desire to discover more about the world in which we live, its past, its present.

In the March issue of the National Geographic, senior associate editor Joseph Judge has written a fascinating summation, "Exploring Our Forgotten Century," illustrated with photographs by Bill Ballenberg and others and paintings by John Berkey.

Focusing on the years between the discovery of America by Columbus and the first permanent English settlement in Jamestown, Va., Judge brings to the reader's attention just how much is forgotten, how little is generally known or dealt with to any extensive degree in the history of early developments along the East coast of America from Jamestown south and into the interior of what is now the South.

Specifically, the author chronicles the adventures and misadventures of Spanish explorers as they embarked on perilous journeys in search of riches, searches that most often ended in tragedy instead of gold and silver; a result that eventually led to a decision on the part of the Spanish king to abandon such efforts.

The question arises — what would modern America be like today if the Spanish had prevailed in their attempts to settle the new land of continental North America.

Judge has penned concise accounts of explorations carried out by Spanish Catholic explorer-dreamers such as Panfilo de Narvaez, Pedro Menendez de Aviles, Hernando de Soto and Tristan de Luna, as well as attempts made by two ill-fated French explorers.

These wanderers in search of riches reached points as far inland as Indian villages in the central and western Carolinas, eastern Tennessee, northern Georgia, southern Alabama and western Florida. The only permanent surviving evidence of these journeys and attempted settlements is St. Augustine, Florida, the oldest continually inhabited town on the North American continent.

In this account, Judge touches on the excitement of discoveries being made through modern research employing the use of old documents, often re-discovered from dusty archives, the science of careful digging for evidence by archaeologists whose knowledge and slow, patient work adds bit by bit invaluable evidence to confirm written records.

One such piece of evidence is a brief account, supplemented by a photograph, of work done by archaeologist David Phelps in the preservation of the bones of 30 individual native Americans unearthed from an Algonquian ossuary along North Carolina's Currituck Sound. Dr. Phelps is a faculty member at East Carolina University.

The tales of two young Spanish men who lived with Indians, one by choice, the other through captivity, could easily inspire a writer of fiction with material for spirited novels.

The 34-page article is both an exhilarating account of highlights of the forgotten developments in the 15th century and a feast of visual beauty. Superb photographs by Ballenberg and others of artifacts, of sites being excavated, of individuals involved in modern research help tell the colorful story. Best of all are the exquisite full-color drawings provided by artist John Berkey.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By MEREDITH FOLTZ

Sheppard Memorial Library readers will be delighted with these new nonfiction books distinguished by their many colorful illustrations and intriguing information.

"The Sea Remembers" presents the work of marine archaeologists who scour shipwrecks for clues to life in the past. Articles about underwater investigations in oceans around the world reveal the techniques of this young science and the well-preserved artifacts it has produced.

From the cargo, both precious and mundane, recovered from sunken ships, marine archaeologists have been able to learn about the commerce, technology, art, everyday habits, and beliefs of former civilizations. From the remains of the ships themselves, scientists have been able to trace the shipwright's art and conjecture the shape, fittings, construction methods, capabilities, and functions of various watergoing craft.

The numerous maps in "The Sea Remembers" locate former trading routes and the rich wrecksites of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans and especially the Mediterranean Sea. Other illustrations include photographs of underwater drawings of what ancient ships might have looked like; and depictions of sailing and boatbuilding in art contemporary to the wrecks.

"Remarkable Animals" is a wildlife-wonders compendium from the publishers of "The Guiness Book of World Records." Brief descriptive facts and a color photograph are given for each of the curious creatures included. A short article for each explains the unusual characteristics which earned the animal its place in the book: the only mammal with a venomous bite, the fastest surface-swimming bird, the world's most valuable fish, the small frog with the long jump, the cricket that grows to be four inches long, etc.

N.C. Whaling Highlighted In Journal

By PEGGY HOWE
N.C. Department
Of Cultural Resources

RALEIGH — For centuries, whales have held a special fascination for humans; however, few North Carolinians may realize that the huge creatures were once hunted along the coast of their state. An article in the January issue of the "North Carolina Historical Review" focuses on this previously unexplored part of the Tar Heel state's natural history.

In "The Pursuit of Leviathan: A History of Whaling on the North Carolina Coast," Marcus B. Simpson Jr. and Sallie W. Simpson trace the history of whaling along the state's coast from colonial times until the early 20th century.

Of special interest are a number of colorful accounts of local whaling around Shackleford Banks in the latter half of the 19th century. Included is a description of the catch of the "Mayflower," North Carolina's best-known whale, whose skeleton is now displayed in the N.C. Museum of Natural Sciences in Raleigh.

Other whales killed in the Beaufort-Shackleford Banks area were dubbed the "Little Children's Whale," the "Cold Sunday Whale," and "Haint Bin Named Yit." The authors point out that "this custom of naming individual whales appears to have been confined largely to the Carolina shore waters and probably reflected in part by the fact that only a few whales were taken in a typical season, thus conveying some uniqueness to each capture."

Marcus B. Simpson Jr. is associate professor of pathology at George Washington University, Washington, D.C. He has written a number of articles about the natural history of North Carolina for the "Review." Sallie W. Simpson is a graduate student in psychology at the University of Maryland, Baltimore County.

In "The Last Hurrah: Bob Reynolds and the U.S. Senate Race in 1950," Julian M. Pleasants, associate professor of history at the University of Florida at Gainesville, describes the events and circumstances surrounding one of the most controversial and hotly contested elections in North Carolina's history.

Pleasants recounts how the colorful Robert R. Reynolds of Buncombe County disrupted the 1950 senatorial campaign when he ran against the liberal Frank Porter Graham for the Democratic nomination.

Ultimately, another conservative Democrat, Willis Smith, won the nomination by resorting to vicious political warfare. To discredit Graham, Smith hurled charges of Communism and pandered to racist hysteria. In his account of the campaign, Pleasants openly and accurately depicts the flamboyant and bawdy personality and political style of Bob Reynolds.

Exhibition Of Kimonos Next At NCMA

By ANNA UPCHURCH
N.C. Museum of Art

An exhibition of 90 kimonos, marking the first direct loan of work of art from Japan to a museum in the South, will be seen at the North Carolina Museum of Art begining Saturday and continuing through June 19.

JAPANESE ROBE — A furisode with plovers, pine trees on the seashore, seaweed and shells is one of the items in the exhibition, "Robes of Elegance: Japanese Kimonos of the 16th-20th Centuries" to go on view Saturday at the North Carolina Museum of Art, Raleigh. The show will continue through June 19. (Photo courtesy N.C. Museum of Art)

"Robes of Elegance: Japnese Kimonos of the 16th-20th centuries" is organized by the museum in cooperation with the National Museum of Japanese History, Sakura, with assistance from the National Museum of Modern Art, Tokyo.

Scheduled exclusively at the N.C. Museum of Art, this is the first time that many of these kimonos have been on view in the United States outside New York City.

The exhibition will trace the development of the kimono over a span of 400 years in three four week installations of 30 kimonos each. The first group, to be shown March 12-April 10, comprises kimonos from the Momoyama perod (1573-1615) and the Edo period (1615-1868). It will be followed April 15-May 15 by additional kimonos from the Edo period. Both of these groups are lent by the National Museum of Japanese History. The exhibition will conclude May 20-June 19 with kimonos from the modern era, lent by the National Museum of Modern Art.

The short viewing period for each group is required to reduce the effect of exposure to light on the delicate textiles. Two curators from Japan will accompany the kimonos to the U.S. to personally install them.

The kimono has been a major art form in Japan since the 16th century, with its large, flat expanses providing a "canvas" for a work of art that it meant to be worn. As an article of clothing, the kimono is rooted in the daily lives of the Japanese people, imparting a cultural significance unparalled in Western society.

The kimonos in "Robes of Elegance" present a variety of designs created by the type of weave, method of dyeing and applied decoration such as embroidery, brush painting and gold or silver leaf.

During the late 16th and early 17th centuries, kimonos were worn only by the aristocracy, military elite and wealthy merchants. Many of the traditional kimonos in the exhibition wre worn by members of the Japanese Imperial family. The conservative taste of this class and the limited weaving and dyeing methods available made the early kimonos of the period generally simpler in design, with flowers and plants favored.

As the 18th century approached, the diverse tastes of a new class of well-to-do townspeople, along with the development of new weaving and decorating techniques, led to a much wider range of designs. Intricate patterns, including humans, animals, landscapes and cityscapes, became popular as fashion books were published in rapid succession.

At the end of the Edo period, the later part of the 19th century saw a return to more restrained designs, with decoration often confined to hems and sleeve edges. The modern kimonos demonstrate how contemporary artists continue to experiment with weaving and dyeing techniques, but often use traditional images from the land and sea.

Seventy-three of the kimonos are from the Nomura Collection, an extensive collection of garments and ornaments assembled by Shiojiro Nomura, an art collector and dealer from Kyoto, before World War II.

Brought to the U.S. by the Nomura family in the 1950s, the collection was exhibited at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York and helped develop public interest in traditional Japanese textiles. It was returned to Japan in 1976 and was transferred to the new National Museum of Japanese History in 1983.

"Robes of Elegance" is supported by funding from several North Carolina, New York and Japanese foundations and businesses, and is supported by an indemnity from the Federal Concil on the Arts and Humanities.

A free gallery guide will be avaiable, and a full-color catalogue which accompanies the exhibition is being published with assistance from DNP (America), Inc.

Additionally, the museum will present an extensive schedule of related activities, including lectures, films and performances. A family day observance, "A Celebration of Japan" will be held at the museum on April 30.

The museum is located at 2110 Blue Ridge Boulevard, Raleigh. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays, until 9 p.m. Fridays, 12 noon to 5 p.m. Skndays, closed Mondays.

Parking and admission are both free. For more details, call 833-1935.

Art Outreach Discussed

Outreach was the main topic for discussion and planning for board members of Art Enthusiasts at East Carolina University held recently. Ed Levine, dean of the ECU School of Art, spoke of plans for faculty to make their expertise available to groups and businesses in the community and expressed the desire that Art Enthusiasts would also extend their activities to include many aspects of community life.

The group voted funding for honorariums for judges and awards for winners of the ECU undergraduate art show to be held in April. This request was made by Perry Nesbitt, director of Gray Gallery.

The meeting, held at Jenkins Fine Arts Center on the ECU Campus, was chaired by vice-president Sharon Kanter of Kinston, in the absence of the president, Dr. Leo Jenkins.

Stephanie Evancho accepted the duties of recording secretary. Other officers of the group include corresponding secretary Carmen Albea and treasurer Richard Cox. The committee for the major fund raiser, the annual art auction, will be chaired by Stacy Brody and Paula Blumenfeld will chair the film committee.

The function of new and existing standing committees was discussed, along with long range plans for Art Enthusiasts.

A request to support Gray Art Gallery receptions for exhibitions and artists lectures received funding support as well as a possible donation for Gray Gallery to add to the designer fee to support the catalog for the "Enigmatic Inquiry" exhibition.

Arts Enthusiasts serves as liaison between the School of Art at East Carolina University and the community which it serves. The membership is open to all interested persons.

Coastal Art At PCMH

The themes of power and serenity displayed by North Carolina coastal waters is the basis for the majority of artist Bernard S. Dunn's work in the current show at Pitt County Memorial Hospital during the month of March.

The hospital show is located along the main ground floor hallway and can be viewed 24 hours daily, seven days weekly.

Originally from New Hampshire, he joined the Marine Corps when he was 16, and retired to Atlantic Beach in 1972.

For five years Dunn worked in hotel management. Later, he was owner, operator and disc jockey for three years at the Paddle Wheel Lounge, Atlantic Beach. During this time he began drawing and painting to promote events at the club.

Last year he won three awards in juried shows and successfully did three one-men shows, all in the coastal area. In addition to his one-man show at Pitt Memorial this month, Dunn will have a one-man show in May at Carteret County Library in Beaufort.

Native Texan Makes An Alamo Film

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — At age 65, native Texan George A. McAlister is a big, friendly, drawling former coach, educator and inventor turned businessman, rancher, historian, author and dreamer.

With blazing cannons and bloody sabres, the heroes of the Alamo relive on a giant new screen this week the fateful 13-day siege that inspired Texas to win its independence from Mexico in 1836. A black-tie premiere of the docudrama was held March 5.

Entitled "Alamo ... The Price of Freedom," the 45-minute film is an account of the battle based largely on the research and books of McAlister, and it has stirred some controversy.

Academy Award-winning filmmaker Kieth Merrill directed the movie, part of a $7.2 million project that includes a new IMAX theater with its 84½-foot wide, six-story high screen. The 426-seat theater is housed in the new Rivercenter Mall, which overlooks the Alamo grounds.

The IMAX system is designed to give viewers visually stunning images as well as a sense of participation in the on-screen activity.

"The Price of Freedom" was filmed last summer at Alamo Village near Brackettville, where John Wayne built the set for his epic 1960 film, "The Alamo."

Gov. Bill Clements attended the formal dedication ceremonies, which coincide with the 152nd anniversary of the fall of the Alamo to Mexican Gen. Santa Anna.

"There are two great symbols of freedom in America," McAlister said. "First is the Statue of Liberty. But it is just that — a symbol of freedom. Then there is this old stone mission, the Alamo, a shrine to the price of freedom.

A veteran of World War II and the Korean conflict, McAlister pointed out gently that a lot of people are willing to live for a cause but only a very few are willing to die for one.

"The defenders of the Alamo were willing to die for freedom," he said. "And more than 3 million people from all over the world came to the Alamo last year to pay homage to those 189 brave men who gave their lives that Texas might be free."

McAlister once stood outside the Alamo for days asking visitors if they would pay to see an authentic movie of the historic battle and if they were familiar with IMAX theaters.

He liked the answers. And the premiere this weekend showcases the results of that private poll.

While stressing the importance of authenticity, McAlister points out quickly that much of what occurred at the Alamo is subject to speculation and individual interpretation.

"There are no chronicles of the Alamo and what happened there," he said.

Still, McAlister spent 12 years researching his books. His travels took him to Goliad, San Jacinto, Washington-on-the-Brazos and other battle sites and to Louisiana, Tennessee, South Carolina and Alabama to visit the hometowns of the most famous defenders of the Alamo: Col. William B. Travis, Jim Bowie, Davy Crockett and James Bonham.

McAlister also describes the Alamo contribution of the Tejanos, the nine Mexicans who supported the Texas cause.

He and his colleagues say they have made their movie as historically accurate as possible without sacrificing dramatic and entertainment value.

"If we were going to make a movie for several generations, I did not want it to be fiction," McAlister said.

The movie has no stars but uses 450 members of war-enactment societies across the country who are dedicated to historical accuracy, costume and customs.

McAlister was surprised and dismayed when San Antonio City Councilman Walter Martinez and a group of residents accused the producers of distorting historical facts.

After viewing a rough cut of the movie, Martinez complained that the film demeaned Hispanics by making them look like bad guys, and presented a list of objections to Texas Cavalcade Corp., the production group headed by McAlister.

Kathy Pena-Sosa, a spokeswoman for Texas Cavalcade, said some objectionable scenes were deleted in the final editing from 73 minutes to 45 minutes, but professed to be puzzled by the criticism.

"In a community that's 54 percent Hispanic," she said, "we're not going to make a movie that's offensive to Hispanics."

Born and raised in East Texas, McAlister got his first exposure to Texas history in a two-room, two-teacher schoolhouse in a tiny hamlet near Commerce.

He interrupted his collegiate studies at East Texas State in 1942 to enlist in the Marines, but returned after the war to get a master's degree in math. His minor was history.

During an academic career that was interrupted when he was recalled to active duty in Korea in 1950, McAlister was a dean at Howard County Junior College in Big Spring, as well as chairman of the math department, coach of the track team and an amateur inventor.

In 1955, with $150, he founded a company called GAMCO to create and build teaching aids for math students, including a classroom computer and an electronic teaching machine. The sale of GAMCO in 1966 made him a millionaire.

It also freed him to pursue his ranching and writing interests and to devote more time to historical research.

His first novel, "Nothing is Forever," was based on the early life of Travis. That book evolved into a second novel, "A Time to Love ... A Time to Die."

This led in turn to "Alamo ... The Price of Freedom," a non-fiction book which McAlister describes as "history as I view it and my personal research reveals it."

For McAlister, "The Price of Freedom" is more than a movie or a business venture.

Funds Given To Restore A Luxury Railroad Car

By JOANNE LATHAM
Office of the Governor

RALEIGH — Duke University has awarded a $50,000 grant to the N.C. Transportation History Corporation for the restoration of James Buchanan Duke's private railway car, the "Doris." The tobacco magnate and philanthropist was the founder of Duke University.

The check was presented to Charles Peacock, president of the N.C. Transportation History Corporation, by Duke University Archivist William E. King in Feb. 29 ceremonies at Historic Spencer Shops, Spencer near Salisbury, where the "Doris" has been housed since 1983.

The "Doris" was built by the Pullman Car Company of Chicago in 1917 for James Buchanan Duke, then president of Piedmont and Northern Railway Company. Duke used the car, named for his daughter, to travel between his offices, homes and on vacations until his death in 1925.

In February of 1925, Duke traveled to Durham on the "Doris" with landscape architects to select a site and begin the planning for Duke University's Gothic West Campus.

The luxurious "Doris," aptly named the "rolling palace," was typical of that eras's private rail cars. The 82-foot car had an open brass-railed platform, four private rooms, a complete kitchen and porter's quarters.

The N.C. Transportation History Corporation, the non-profit support group for Historic Spencer Shops, plans a full restoration of the car to include outfitting "Doris" with all the mechanical requirements of Amtrak for interchange approval and high speed rail service.

According to Dr. William Price, director of the Division of Archives and History, the state "would have an historic artifact that could serve as both a fine exhibit at Spencer Shops as well as a traveling goodwill ambassador for the site."

Full restoration will take approximately ten months. N.C. Transportation History Corporation also has received grants totaling $15,000 from the Rowan County Board of Commissioners and Duke Power Company.

A Reflector Review

Strong Mixed Media Work In Current Gray Gallery Show

A wall metal sculptor by Richard Reese

Whether or not "Enigmatic Inquiry" is strewn with enigmas is up to each viewer to resolve. The exhibition, currently on view at Gray Gallery on the East Carolina University campus, comprises art by three practictioners of mixed media — Richard Reese, Alison Saar and Italo Scanga.

This show confirms that mixed media in the contemporay world of art is indeed a potent creative force, one that loosens the bonds of conventionality without necessarily leading to a purposeful veil of obscurity.

One common denominator in presentation by each of the artists is the individual variation in style, size and materials used by the artist.

• Richard Reese's pieces range across a spectrum from "Why Not," a colorful work of felt pen and crayon on paper to small, realistic black and white felt pen drawings, on to formal wall pieces of wire, wire mesh and metal to several sculptural pieces that lean against a wall for support.

His "XX," a wall arrangement of shaped metal contained within cones of mesh wire, is made forceful by its simplicity. In the same manner, several larger pieces convey understated power in their precise structure and a rightness of scale.

Another variation in Reese's art is constituted of a wider mixed media format, where he uses saplings and branches of wood to form shapes akin to a cutaway of a teepee-like structure. Within the confines of the inverted v's he has placed, in two instances, large stuffed animals. These give the impression the artist has attempted to emphasize nature's objects and shapes such as those found in shamanistic ritual art with the addition of a Teddy Bear motif. For me, the combination does not work well — I find them less articulate than his more crisply defined work.

• Alison Saar's pieces range from small, icon-like portraits to wall statuary and drawings, both the latter on a large scale. The large drawings have considerable interest, particulary in the manner in which she uses many small cutouts applied to "Tattoed Lady" and the startling contrast of a brilliant red chair in the foreground of a misty gray dream infused drawing, "Invisible Man."

Saar's small, beautifully colored and bordered paintings of oil or enamel on linoleum are inspired jewels on a small scale. In pieces like "Jesus Jones," she invokes a marvelous haunting quality in the portrait of a young black man. He stares into the unknown, his hands wounded as were the hands of Jesus Christ. A halo, a tattoo on his arm, a cigarette in his fingers do not degrade the beauty and magic of this fine work. A small shelf with two red candle bulbs reinforces religious echoes. Enigmatic? Maybe. But not obscure.

• Italo Scanga, like Reese and Ms. Saar, amazes in what he achieves in varied styles. The most immediately noticeable, and visually appealing, are the intricately shaped and brightly standing sculptures of oil paint on wood. There is a strong influence of Picasso's cubist paintings translated to Scanga's sculpture. They are joyful, bright as spring flowers, works that will please both young and old.

His black and white compositions on paper — dark, somber portraits of Darwin and Chihuly, etc., are totally different in mood. To these he had added grace notes of stands reminiscent of altars before the portraits. Clear glass vases decorated with black figures rest on each stand, and each holds a large real flower. No contrivance in these combinations. Rather, an aura of homage.

Scanga's six medium-sized drawings, four black and white, two in color, reveal his skill in composition and placement of subjects, his judicious use of heavy black outlines for accent.

Altogether, this show offers an instructive look at the manner in which three artists today are creating art in mixed media with all that medium's inherent possibilities for rewards and failures. It is not only instructive, it is fascinating.

"Enigmatic Inquiry" will be on view at Gray Gallery through March 18. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays, and until 8 p.m. Wednesdays.

African Roots Symposium Scheduled

ECU News Bureau

Okra and beans and collard greens will be among the things discussed — and consumed — at a symposium on African Roots of Southern Culture March 14 at East Carolina University.

The symposium begins at 2 p.m. in room 244 of Mendenhall Student Center. A keynote address by novelist Paule Marshall, author of "Praisesong for the Widow," will be made at 8 p.m. in Hendrix Theatre. An Africanized country-soul food dinner is also being planned.

The symposium is free and open to the public.

"We want to let southern people know about their heritage," said Dr. Gay Wilentz, an ECU English professor and director of the project.

Wilentz said that many southerners don't realize that a part of what is considered the heritage of the South is rooted in the traditions of Africa. She said it is a mutual heritage for both blacks and whites.

"Things like collard greens, beans, rice and okra came to us from Africa," she said.

She said African culture has also influenced art, music, literature, folklore and religious ceremonies.

The symposium will begin with a panel discussion, "African Cultural Traditions," at 2 p.m. in Mendenhall Student Center. Panelists include Arlene Morgan, an Afro-American artist; Thandekile Muusi from Bennett College in South Carolina, an authority on African influences on religion; and Dr. Wilentz on folk tales and Afro-American literature.

A second panel discussion will begin at 4 p.m. on "African Family Organization." Panelists for this session are Peter Wood of Duke University, author of "The Black Majority"; Audrey Johnson of the School of Social Work at UNC-Chapel Hill; Kaylene Ekeh of St. Augustine's College and David Dennard of the ECU Department of History.

The keynote speaker, Paule Marshall, will discuss women's role in preserving African heritage. She will also read from her works which include "Praisesong for the Widow," and two other novels.

Dr. Mulatu Wubneh, a professor of Geography and Planning and the coordinator for African Studies at ECU will deliver opening remarks. Closing remarks will be made by Marie Farr, an English professor and director of Women's Studies.

The symposium is a community-campus project and is sponsored by the ECU African Studies, Women's Studies and Honor's programs and by the Department of English, Minority Arts Committee and the North Carolina Humanities Committee.

For more information contact Dr. Wilentz in the Department of English at 757-6041 or Ron Maxwell, University Unions, at 757-6611.

Black Heritage Group Now Touring In N.C.

By MARY COOK

RALEIGH — After three successful seasons, the 1988 Black Folk Heritage Tour is again spotlighting the creative and expressive folk traditions of North Carolina's African-American community.

During the spring, this N.C. Arts Council project will present such artists as storeyteller and gospel singer Celester Sellars and Chuck Davis's African-American Dance Ensemble in communities across the state.

The tour began in Gastonia Saturday and continues at Spindale on March 12, Winton on March 19, Durham on Oct. 8, Wilmington on Nov. 5, and Elizabeth City on a date to be announced.

Each tour performer or group is representative of various black folk traditions such as spirituals, blues, buckdancing and Br'er Rabbit tales. The tour is partially funded by the National Endowment for the Arts and coordinated by the N.C. Arts Council's Folklife Section, organizer of the event.

Mary Anne McDonald, folklife specialist at the N.C. Arts Council and Tour coordinator notes, "we try to help smaller arts councils collaborate with local black community organizations to present the Heritage Tour. This expands the arts councils' usual constituency and involves the black community in planning and implementing local arts programs."

The individual shows will be narrated by Chuck Davis, leader of Durham's African-American Dance Ensemble, the program openers. These performances also will feature The Badgett Sisters from Yanceyville, spirituals and gospel singers, Winston-Salem's Mighty Wonders, contemporary gospel singers, and John D. Holeman and "Fris" Holloway of Durham along with Zebulon's Algia Mae Hinton, blues and buckdancing, in addition to local community performing artists.

With the exception of Davis and his ensemble, none of the Heritage Tour participants are professional artists. They have learned their art forms in the folk tradition from family and friends.

Because of both the quality of the Black Folk Heritage Tour's performers and its innovative programming approach of targeting small to mid-sized black community audiences, the tour has received national recognition.

It recently served as a model for an African-American concert tour produced by the National Council for the Traditional Arts. In addition, it has been the subject of a case study by the Association of College, University and Community Arts Administrators.

For further information on the Black Folk Heritage Tour, contact Mary Anne McDonald, Folklife Section, N.C. Arts Council, Department of Cultural Resources, 109 E. Jones St., Raleigh, N.C. 27611, or call 733-7897.

Q. Is it true that Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis was the ghostwriter of Michael Jackson's autobiography? I think the title is "Moonwalk."—Shirley Nelson, Jersey City, N.J.

A. Jackie Onassis reportedly edited "Moonwalk," but a spokeswoman for Doubleday, the publisher, says, "Michael Jackson wrote his own autobiography." An outstanding singer and dancer, Jackson is not particularly literary.

Q. I am told that one of the best-selling recording artists in the country was excused from pulling military service during the Vietnam war after claiming that he was a homosexual. Is homosexuality a valid reason for draft exemption?—O.P., San Pedro, Calif.

A. Homosexuality has been used as a reason for a medical draft exemption.

Q. Who said: "The moral test of government is how it treats those who are in the dawn of life—the children; those who are in the twilight of life—the aged; and those who are in the shadows of life—the sick, the needy and the handicapped"?—Martin Littlefield, St. Petersburg Beach, Fla.

A. The author of that statement was the late Hubert Horatio Humphrey (1911-78), Democratic Senator from Minnesota and Vice President of the U.S. from 1965 to 1969, in the administration of President Lyndon Johnson.

Q. Did Garry Trudeau, creator of the comic strip "Doonesbury," attend Auburn University in Montgomery, Ala.?—R.F., Northport, Ala.

A. Trudeau never attended Auburn but did attend Yale, where he was graduated in 1970.

Q. If Prince Charles and Princess Diana were to divorce, would Charles lose his right to the British throne? Also, what would happen to Diana? Would she be given custody of their two children, Prince William and Prince Harry, or would custody go to their father? Is there any British law which bans a divorced prince from becoming king?—Mark Grant, Buffalo, N.Y.

A. A divorce would not cost Prince Charles the right of accession. In the unlikely case of divorce, Princess Diana would probably be given a house of her own and a generous financial settlement for the remainder of her life—provided she agreed never to write her memoirs. She would be permitted to marry the man of her choice but in that case would have to relinquish the care and control of her sons to the royal family, even if she and Charles were granted joint custody. She would then be allowed the most generous rights of visitation and the retention of her title.

Princess Diana is a child of divorce who was reared by her father. Experiencing firsthand the trauma that it caused, she no doubt will do anything to avoid a divorce—even to the point of permitting her husband to take a mistress or two, if it ever comes to that.

Q. Is there a chance that singer-actress Barbra Streisand will reconcile with Richard Baskin, whose daddy co-founded the Baskin-Robbins chain of ice cream stores? Or have Barbra and Richard wrapped up their love affair for good?—Daphne Robinson, Boulder City, Nev.

A. Barbra Streisand, 45, and Richard Baskin, 38, shared each other for three years. Now Don Johnson, 37, star of TV's "Miami Vice," reportedly has replaced Baskin as the object of her affection. Students of Streisand's off-camera love life say she is decisive when it comes to men and predict no reconciliation with Baskin. In Hollywood affairs of the heart, longevity is a rare ingredient.

Natasha Richardson (l) and real Patty Hearst on film set

Q. Which actress finally was selected to play Patty Hearst, granddaughter of the fabulously wealthy publisher William Randolph Hearst, in the movie "Patty Hearst"? What has happened to the real Patty? Wasn't she sentenced to 10 years in jail for hooking up with her radical kidnappers?—Victor Ferguson, Baltimore, Md.

A. Natasha Richardson, 25, British-born daughter of the actress Vanessa Redgrave and director Tony Richardson, plays Patty Hearst in the film of the same name. The real Patty, 34, was pardoned by President Jimmy Carter after serving 22 months of a seven-year jail term. She is married to Bernard Shaw, her former bodyguard, and they live in a suburb of New York City with their children, Gillian, 6, and Lydia, 3. The film is based on Patty's autobiography.

The Quiet Ambition Of Bill Bradley

Burnett/Contact Press

Noboby doubts that Bill Bradley, 44, a Senator from New Jersey for 10 years, will one day aim higher.

By David Halberstam

THERE HAVE ALWAYS BEEN GOALS. William Warren Bradley of Crystal City, Mo., Denville, N.J., and Washington, D.C., has never been without purpose—high, unbending and singular. Before big games as a college basketball player, he would put on a recording of The Sound of Music, picking the particular place on the record he wanted. "Climb every mountain," the music went, "ford every stream/Follow every rainbow/till you find your dream!" When he was in college, his contemporaries already spoke of him as a future governor of Missouri. A few years later, as a pro basketball player, his teammates teased him about his coming years as President.

But his goals have always been internalized—that is, they are goals that he has worked out for himself after elaborate inner deliberation and then has pursued for reasons with which he alone is comfortable. They are not necessarily the goals mandated by those who think they know what he ought to aspire to. That is a crucial distinction: It allows him to be at once intensely ambitious and yet almost uniquely immune to the pressures and demands of the infinitely pressurized political world around him. This was a source of strength in the past, and it is a source of strength now that he is a United States Senator and someday a likely Presidential candidate.

The second and perhaps even more important thing about him is that there has always been cheering—since the time he was a junior in high school and already something of a basketball legend. For much of his public career, he has sought greater privacy rather than greater personal fame. "When I was still an undergraduate at Princeton, I was getting 40 or 50 letters a day, so the question of fame starts very early, at 19," he says. "How do you deal with it?" Yet in a television-driven mass society like ours, where there is a growing confusion between fame and achievement, he represents a rare combination of both. That is no small asset: Where many contemporary politicians are moved first and foremost by an almost desperate need to get on the evening news for 30 or 40 precious seconds, Bradley knows that if he needs exposure, he will in time get it. That has allowed him in his term and a half as Senator to be substantive and thoughtful, to work on serious, complicated issues such as tax reform without worrying about whether he will get immediate credit for his work. As such, he has impressed his colleagues while at the same time, of course, getting all the credit and national exposure he could possibly need.

Television, after all, is more interested in the theater of politics than in the substance of it. It favors the dramatic and pseudodramatic (as Gary Hart has shown us repeatedly in the past year) over the complex issue. In the hyped-up, volatile political arena which has ensued, Bradley seems somewhat old-fashioned—and, indeed, the most lasting charge against him has been that he is boring. Of his early speeches, he says, "There was a strong sense that I was competing with Sominex." In truth, he is a man fascinated by process in an age when our principal means of communication finds real process dull and tends to ignore it. Bradley may be a New York-Washington-Oxford sophisticate, but he is still a small-town banker's son from Missouri, and he has the soul of a square. He learned long ago in basketball a basic lesson of politics—that if you do the right thing in the right way, in the end, people will know. "Besides," he adds, "even if they don't know, you know, and that's what counts."

Indeed, the thing that is most attractive about him is his lack of glamour and modern charisma. His curriculum vitae is charismatic—he himself is not. At 6 feet 5, he is tall and easily identifiable. His hairline is receding. He fights a reasonably successful struggle to keep his weight down. He has a face that can easily run to jowl and an affection for sweets. His clothes clearly matter very little to him. He is intensely ambitious but, unlike many politicians, he gives off no heat from that ambition; the ego is there, but it is well controlled and primarily focused on issues.

At 44, Bradley is one of a generation of new American politicians—post-Depression, post-World War II—indeed, in any true sense, post-Vietnam (though he graduated from college in 1965, his opposition to the war was largely private and carefully muted). He comes to power at a time when American economic power seems in decline. Not surprisingly, the issues he focuses on reflect this: America's trade relationship with Japan, its tax policy and Third World debt. It is not surprising that to a Democratic Party in self-evident decline, in search not just of a candidate but also a purpose, Bradley has emerged, like Mario Cuomo, as a potential candidate in the wings, bearing the special allure of the non-candidate. In Cuomo's case, it is the sheer poetry of his speaking, a remembrance of voices past. In Bradley's, it is different: he is young, famous, talented, fair-minded, not very ideological, a candidate tuned to the issues of the present and future who bears no scar tissue from the past.

A great many very powerful people have in the last year pushed him to seek the Presidency. Yet, despite his ambition and his confidence, he has so far proved stubbornly resistant. As usual, he has thought out the entire scenario: He is not quite ready, and a Presidential race puts him ahead of his own timetable. There is still more to do and learn in the Senate, he says, and the learning process is very different once you start running for President. You no longer enjoy the freedom of making mistakes. "You can no longer quietly and anonymously visit with and listen to ordinary Americans in their homes," he says. "You start to exist tarmac to tarmac." This year just does not feel right, he adds. What happens, asks his wife, Ernestine, a professor of German language and literature at Montclair State College, if he suddenly decides that the time is right, and it is by chance February 1989? So be it, he says. He is, after all, what he has always been.

Crystal City is a small town near St. Louis. It was, Bradley points out, rural and poor rather than suburban and flush. He was a privileged son of Crystal City: His father—a man who had not finished high school—was the local banker. When Bradley was a sophomore in high school, basketball became his means of self-expression. He went at the sport with a singularity of purpose, practicing by far the longest hours of any kid in town. There was a reason for that. "It was," he notes, "absolutely mine, something that in no way came from my parents or was derivative. The achievements in basketball were truly mine." They were not something surreptitiously handed to him because of his parents' position. He chose his sport well: What he had in addition to his height were exceptional hands—soft and quick, in basketball parlance—and wonderful peripheral vision, with which he could see the entire court.

Certainly, his parents sent subliminal messages of their own that he, their only child, should amount to something. There was no lack of ambition in the family. His mother wanted him to be a success; his father wanted him to be a gentleman. "I was," he notes somewhat laconically, "raised to be a successful gentleman." There was always a remarkable willingness to work, to pay the price of his own ambition. He tells how, at 15, he went to the summer basketball camp run by Easy Ed Macauley, a former college and pro star. "Just remember that if you're not working at your game to the utmost of your ability," Macauley told his assembled campers, "there will be someone out there somewhere with equal ability who will be working to the utmost of his ability. And one day you'll play each other, and he'll have the advantage." There seemed to Bradley to be a totality of truth in those words. Some 30 years later, he not only remembers that moment but also notes: "The important thing about the story is the type of young man I was, who would be so totally accepting of words like that and who, hearing them, immediately acted on them."

In basketball, as in life, there was always a moral to his quest, something to prove beyond mere winning: in high school, it was whether a small rural school could beat a big-city powerhouse (it lost by one point to St. Louis University High in the finals); in college, it was whether an Ivy League school, whose players were first and foremost students, could win a national championship against more traditional basketball powerhouses (Princeton came surprisingly close); and finally, in the pros, it was whether a comparatively small, unselfish team, which was first and foremost a team, could beat bigger, more physically talented teams (it could and did; the New York Knicks captured the NBA championship twice, and came close a third time, in Bradley's 10 years).

Even as a high school student, the nation knew of him. He seemed even then almost too good to be true, an American role model: superb athlete, superb student, child of the small-town heartland. Seventy-five colleges offered him scholarships. He chose Duke; it was a serious school, and it had a strong basketball program in a strong basketball conference. But the summer after his high school graduation, Bradley went on a vacation trip to the Continent. All the other tour members were college girls, and they were fascinated by this tall, serious young man who literally took a basketball with him everywhere he went (while he did not actually dribble through the Louvre, he did in fact dribble his way up and down the deck of the Queen Elizabeth). "They, oddly enough," he says, "seemed to think this was unusual behavior." What, several of them kept asking, happens to you after basketball? After all, no matter how well you do in college, one of them persisted, there has to be a moment when you give it up. It was a good question, one he had long avoided, and it was brought home to him even more that summer when he broke his foot. "For the first time in my life, I was forced to contemplate life without basketball," he says. At the very last minute, he decided to enroll at Princeton.

In a TV society that confuses fame and achievement, Bradley is a combination of both...

Princeton was to play a considerable role in his life and to amplify the Bradley myth even more. It was a perfect place for him. He could excel there as a player and yet find himself constantly growing as a student and a person.

That freshman year, he was recovering from his broken foot and working out in the Princeton gym in a three-on-three pickup game. In came a young man in what appeared to Bradley's Missouri-trained eye as an odd basketball getup. The student had a mustache, carried a squash racket and wore old cutoff pants. An Englishman, Bradley decided. How strange—everyone knew the English didn't play basketball. The stranger asked if he could play. "Sure, Candy," Bradley thought to himself, using the playground vernacular for a novice. The Englishman took the ball, moved to the basket and immediately hammered Bradley with a hard shot from his right elbow while hooking over him with his left hand. This is no Englishman, Bradley immediately decided.

Instead, it was a former Princeton captain named Carl Belz, then working on his doctorate in art history and playing at night in the notoriously rough Eastern League. After the practice, Belz—who had entered Princeton as a pre-med student—took Bradley to the art museum on campus to show him a Manet reproduction, "The Fifer." "I want you," he said in words that Bradley remembers 25 years later, "to see this painting the same way you see the court—I want you to see the wholeness of it."

Everything at Princeton was like that. In the beginning, he had felt the stark terror of whether he—the raw and unfinished small-town public school boy—belonged at so finished a place as this. In the end, he had no doubts. Princeton was nothing less than a feast. He stayed on to become, if not the most famous scholar-athlete of his day, certainly the most celebrated one as far as America's political-literary-intellectual elite was concerned. More remarkable, he managed to avoid being swallowed up by the fame. It was as if he knew even at 20 what to extract from that around him and what to ignore; he had an almost miraculous instinct for what was real and what was false.

Oxford, on a Rhodes scholarship, followed Princeton. He believed that basketball was behind him. People had spoken to him about pro basketball, but it had never seemed that real. But near the end of his second year at Oxford, he wandered into the university's new gym. Up until then, he had not given that much thought to his exact future. There had been some vague thought about a career in the foreign service. He started shooting. Suddenly he was swept up in his love of the game; he was shooting, announcing the game to himself, setting up critical situations, making the key shots. With that, he decided to turn pro. It was not what he had intended to do. "But I realized," he says, "that not to play was to deny an aspect of my personality more fundamental than any other. So I signed."

The first pro year was absolute torment. He had signed one of the sport's first big contracts, for the then unheard-of sum (for a rookie at least) of more than $100,000 a year. He was viewed not merely as a white hope but also as a savior to a Knick franchise long in disarray. But in that first year, he could barely save himself. By NBA standards, he was almost fatally slow for a guard. Everyone seemed to want to make a reputation off him. When he was awarded two free throws late in an important game against Boston, he heard a referee say, "Now we'll see what you're made of." Even the referees! he thought. Rarely had he envisioned the idea of failure so complete on so public a scale.

He responded the only way he knew, by working harder and pushing himself further. That summer he played against the best black players in New York City's playground basketball leagues. He had to learn how to compensate for his lack of physical ability in the new, quicker, more physical, predominantly black game. In addition, twice a week he would grab a train to Philadelphia, where he was virtually the only white player in that city's famed Baker League. There, he played for Jimmy Bates' B-Bar. In that citadel of black playground basketball in a culture as different from that of Crystal City as one could imagine, he proved himself.

In his second pro season, he found his place. An injury to Cazzie Russell, with whom he had often been compared, opened up a spot at small forward. There, his lack of speed less of a problem, he could use his other skills to advantage. The trademark of him as an NBA player was as a dogged, relentless, exceptionally smart player who, by dint of his constant movement without the ball, helped create scoring opportunities not just for himself but also for his teammates. He ran more physically gifted opponents into exhaustion. If he was a star, he was the star as a grunt.

He was also very supple about his social position on the team. He endorsed no products. He generally negotiated his own contract and managed, in order to minimize jealousy, to give out the impression that he was making a good deal less money than he actually earned. "I knew that the New York media wanted me to play a certain role—white hope, team spokesman," he notes. He was absolutely sure that such a role would subtract from the tissue of the team. He therefore became a willfully bad interview. Yet, the price of all that publicity on someone so essentially private was significant; his friend and roommate, Dave DeBusschere, found in him in those days an almost pathologically secretive young man who whispered so that others might not hear him and sought out dark corners of unknown restaurants where he might eat and not be seen.

...But he has the soul of a square; indeed, the most lasting charge against him is that he is boring.

Gradually the idea of politics crystallized for him. By 1972, he had made some speeches for Democratic politicians in New Jersey and seriously considered a 1974 race for the House. But he had just married, was still playing basketball and was working on a book on his years as a player. By 1977, the team had changed dramatically, the game was little fun, and he decided to seek a Senate seat. The New Jersey Democratic apparatus wanted no part of him. Michael Kaye, a media adviser who has become a close friend, can still remember the horror of his announcement: Bradley so badly wanted to make a good impression that he was wound too tight; he was still awkward, and his voice cracked. But he struggled through, managed to win and was handsomely re-elected in 1984. Slowly and systematically, aided in part by his success in professional basketball, he relaxed and became more at ease with people. To DeBusschere, the scene of Bradley at a fund-raiser last year, open and warm with complete strangers, was remarkable; he had mastered this, his old friend thought, as he had done so many other things—because he needed to.

In the Senate, Bradley did well. He worked hard. He was, as he had been in the past, dogged. He used the Senate and his subcommittees, one friend noted, as nothing less than a university—taking an issue which interested him, mastering it through careful preparation, only then speaking out. He was gradually perceived as he wanted to be: not as some famed jock with a handsome resumé passing through and using the Senate as a stepping stone to higher office, but as someone who paid his dues.

In time, he became more comfortable with the duality of his roles. Basketball memorabilia—once noticeably absent from his Senate office—began to appear in the antechamber. At the same time, his speeches improved. He spoke thoughtfully and skillfully to an assembled group of Americans and Russians on what it was about the Soviet Union that bothered those Americans who yearned to limit the arms race and have better relations. At a roast featuring the Democratic candidates, he gave the best and funniest speech. He even needled Jesse Jackson. Jackson, he noted, had often hung around Madison Square Garden when Bradley was playing. "Even then he was a man of the cloth," he said. He waited a moment. "Cashmere." He suggested that there had been many complaints about the maniacal quality of the primary system and many suggestions about what to replace it with. "Personally," he added, "I favor a jump shot from the top of the key." William W. Bradley, at the age of 44, was learning how not to be boring.

Hepburn Meets The Common Folk

NBC-TV

Hepburn shows Austin she likes children

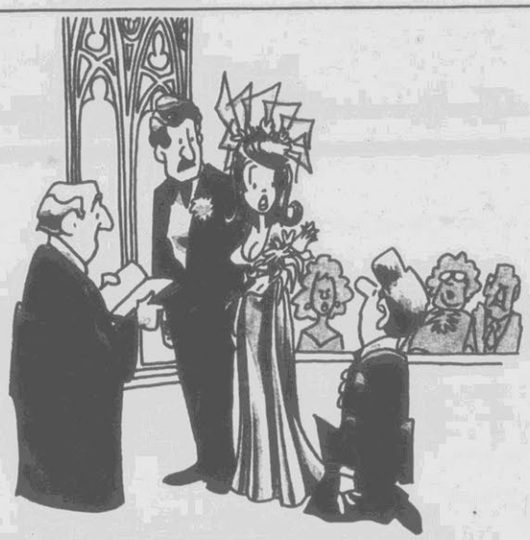

Is Katharine Hepburn anything like the imperious jet-set novelist she plays in NBC's Laura Lansing Slept Here, who agrees to spend a week in the suburbs with an ordinary family to prove she hasn't lost touch with the common folk—and then arrives with a limo full of champagne and sets about rearranging their lives? No, says Karen Austin, who plays the unsuspecting housewife that the star novelist visits: "Katharine has her opinions, and she definitely makes sure that they're known. But she doesn't make you crazy, because she's right most of the time. And she cares—if the crew eats on time or she thinks you're being overworked." Monday, 9-11 p.m. EST.

A Loverly Evening With Lerner & Loewe

Glorious is the word for Lerner & Loewe: Broadway's Last Romantics, with its generous excerpts from the famous composer-librettist team's magical plays and movies—My Fair Lady, Gigi, Camelot, Brigadoon. With co-hosts Audrey Hepburn and Richard Kiley, the program is the least talky of any TV bio you've seen, having the great good sense to let songs like "Wand'rin' Star," "Wouldn't It Be Loverly," "It's Almost Like Being in Love" and "If Ever I Would Leave You" say it all. (And look out for the young Clint Eastwood singing "I Talk to the Trees" in Paint Your Wagon.) PBS, Wednesday, 9-10:30 p.m. EST. Check local listings, as date and time may vary.

All-Male Hybrid Asparagus Never Goes to Seed...Puts All Its Energy Into Growing Colossal, Succulent Spears

(Asparagus Officinales L.)

Farmers in some California communities have a little trick to growing extra-large spears of asparagus that fetched top prices. They would go down their rows and remove all the female plants — those that produce red berries — leaving only the males to produce stalks. Since the males never "go to seed", they put all their energy into growing fat, succulent spears.

Plant scientists took this idea a little further and produced a variety of asparagus that would only grow males, also making it a HYBRID so that the productivity of the males could be increased even more. We call our variety "Ben Franklin" in honor of the energetic American Patriot.

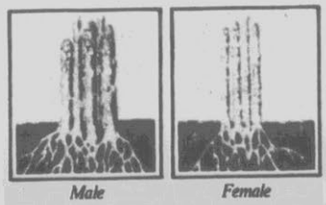

More Than Doubles Your Yield

We send you plants — not seeds or roots. These plants are already green and leafy with healthy root systems, ready to plant into garden soil. The resulting yields of asparagus are more than two times that of regular asparagus. A higher percentage of thick spears is assured, many as thick or thicker than a man's thumb. What's more, these hybrids have inbred disease resistance and are true perennials coming up year after year with no replanting. They are hardy in subzero weather and tolerate poor soil.

First Public Offering

We have secured almost all the available supplies of "Ben Franklin" and this is the first public offering. Until now only a few professional growers and university researchers have had access to them.

Be one of the first to grow these succulent giants. You can grow as few as six plants — or plant a whole patch of 100 plants. Supplies are limited, so be sure to send your order in today.

Male Female

Male asparagus grow top quality flavorful spears, thick and succulent. Female has thin, seed bearing stems. Ben Franklin is a hybrid with all male stems, and gives you more than twice the yield.

ARE YOU TOO TRUSTFUL?

LONG AGO, AS A BOY OF 10, I crouched at the top of the stairs and heard the adults talking about Grandfather, whose trusted partner had stolen all of their business's assets and disappeared. They were saying things about Grandfather like this:

"No judgment about people...a dreamer... no head for practical matters...a dupe for any crook."

I hated to believe it. Was Grandfather—whom I knew to be a fair, kind, sensible and trusting soul—in actuality naïve, weak and foolish? As a matter of course, then, was it better and wiser to be suspicious and mistrustful of people?

In the present era of Irangate, headline-making fraud on the stock market, and a divorce rate of nearly 50 percent, such questions matter more than ever. And how we answer them determines how we treat others and conduct our lives.

Fortunately, a number of psychologists recently have completed research on the characteristics of trustful and mistrustful people and, after more than 80 studies, have come up with answers we can—yes!—trust and live by.

Here are six common beliefs about trust. Ask yourself whether you agree, then see what the latest scientific evidence shows.

1. Trustful People Are Gullible

To investigate this widely held belief, the clinical psychologist Julian Rotter, a professor at the University of Connecticut, first asked a number of undergraduates who knew one another fairly well to rate each other as to gullibility; then he tested them for trustfulness. When he compared their gullibility scores to their trust scores, he found that, contrary to popular wisdom, the trustful ones were no more likely than the mistrustful ones to seem gullible to their friends.

Professor Rotter, a leading researcher in human personality theory, measured trustfulness in the students by means of the "Interpersonal Trust Scale," his own creation. It's a questionnaire that asks whether you agree with dozens of statements like, "In dealing with strangers, one is better off to be cautious until they have provided evidence that they are trustworthy."

In a related experiment, Rotter and David Zuroff, a graduate student, tested a group of volunteers for trustfulness, then had them read a courtroom scene in which the defendant offered a weak and illogical alibi. Those who scored high on trust weren't taken in by the alibi any more than those who scored low—evidence that trustful people weren't more gullible.

Illustrations by Elwood H. Smith

2. Trustful People Are Less Perceptive Than Mistrustful People Of What Others Are Really Feeling

The psychologist Ronald Sabatelli and two colleagues at the University of Connecticut tested 48 young married couples for trustfulness, using Rotter's Trust Scale. The husbands and wives then were secretly videotaped as they individually watched a slide show. Some slides were scenic, some sexy, some repulsive and some strange.

Finally, each spouse was shown pictures of his or her mate's expressions and asked to identify what the mate was feeling in each case. The results contradicted the popular belief: Those who scored high on trust were better than the mistrustful at interpreting their spouse's emotions. The likely reason: If you can't "read" other people well, it's easy to be suspicious of them; if you can, it's easy to trust them.

3. People With A Poor Opinion Of Themselves Are Less Trustful Than People With A Good Opinion Of Themselves

Several studies show that people who score high in tests of self-esteem score high in trustfulness. The explanation, cited in a 1985 report by the psychologists John Rempel, John Holmes and Mark Zanna of the University of Waterloo in Ontario, is that a person's self-esteem contributes to the extent to which he or she is willing to take emotional risks. Or, more simply: Those with high self-esteem are more likely to think well of others; those with low self-esteem are less inclined to do so.

4. Stupid People Are Trustful; Smart People Are Mistrustful

According to popular wisdom, trustful people are dumb; intelligent people are skeptical and suspicious.

Not true. Research by a number of psychologists at various universities consistently has shown that people with high college aptitude scores or high scholastic scores are no less trustful and no more skeptical than people with low scores. Evidently, being intelligent doesn't necessarily make one mistrustful of others, nor does being stupid make one trustful.

"It's easy to distrust everything and everybody," says Rotter, "but it's not an intelligent way to live. I used to distrust workmen doing repairs on my house—and they got sore at me and did a lousy job. I've learned to trust them, and I find it costs me less—and gets better results."

5. Trustful People Rely On Others To Direct Their Lives For Them; Mistrustful People Rely On Thelmselves

Or, to put it the other way around: People who don't feel in control of their own lives—dependent college students, for instance, or low-ranking members of the armed services—are trustful because they must rely on others.

But exactly the opposite is true. Three different teams of researchers at the University of Connecticut found that people who feel controlled by outside persons and forces are relatively mistrustful. In contrast, those people who feel pretty much in charge of what happens to them tend to trust others.

BY MORTON HUNT

6. Trustful People Are More Trustworthy Than Mistrustful People

The ancient Greeks used to say, "He who mistrusts most should be trusted least." Now, scientific evidence verifies that people who trust others can be trusted more than those who are mistrustful.

The psychologist Geraldine Steinke, in her doctoral dissertation research at the University of Connecticut, gave volunteers a test at which it was easy to cheat, telling them that the best performer would win a cash prize. What she didn't tell them was that she had rigged it so she could tell if anyone cheated. Her finding: Low trusters cheated distinctly more often than high trusters.

In another experiment, Joel Gilbert, a graduate student of Professor Rotter's, found that low trusters lied or withheld uncomplimentary information about themselves more often than high trusters when answering questionnaires.

In a third experiment, Daniel Boroto, another of Rotter's graduate students, gave his volunteers a test to take, then left the room—leaving folders containing information about them on his desk. Low trusters were more likely to sneak a look at what was inside.

Rotter explains: "If low trusters believe that other people cannot be trusted, they feel less moral pressure themselves to tell the truth. They may feel that lying, cheating and similar behavior are necessary for defensive reasons—because everybody else is doing it to them."

Informed by these findings, the mistrustful may well ask themselves whether their reasons for being suspicious are irrational and, if so, should try to rethink them. To be sure, the goal isn't to become totally and unquestioningly trusting: Only a fool would trust a street-corner peddler offering gold chains for a few dollars, or an investment broker who has served time in prison for fraud. But general trust, whatever its risks, is a better way of life than general suspicion. If you doubt that, review the evidence:

- Trustful people, the psychologist Donna Heretick reported in the Journal of Research in Personality, are less anxious and suffer less psychological distress than mistrustful people.
- Trustful people are liked by nearly everyone, while mistrustful people aren't, according to research conducted by Dorothy Hochreich for her doctoral dissertation at the University of Connecticut.
- Trustful people, Rotter reported a few years ago, are sought out as friends more often than mistrustful people.
- Trustful people, according to a 1985 report by Dr. Judith Hibbard, professor of community health at the University of Oregon, tend to be in better health than mistrustful ones.

— ORAL HEALTH ALERT —

Open Wide, America.

Public enemy #1: plaque. Plaque has almost become a household word. It is certainly a household problem. But even though everyone is affected by it, few people really understand the seriousness of plaque or the importance of controlling it. Plaque is an almost invisible sticky film of bacteria that continuously forms on the teeth. Plaque germs are constantly multiplying and building up. Any dentist will tell you that controlling plaque is the single most important step to better oral health.

The victims of unchecked plaque: teeth and gums. Ignoring plaque is a risky proposition. If it is not removed and controlled, the results are sometimes merely unattractive, but oftentimes far more serious.

A serious result of unremoved plaque is gingivitis, the early, reversible stage of gum disease. As plaque builds, the bacteria produce by-products that can irritate the gums, causing redness, swelling and sometimes bleeding. These signs indicate there is a problem that should be looked at by a dentist for an accurate diagnosis. If left untreated, gingivitis can lead to periodontitis, an advanced stage of gum disease, which possibly can result in tooth loss. Periodontitis can be diagnosed and treated only by a dentist.

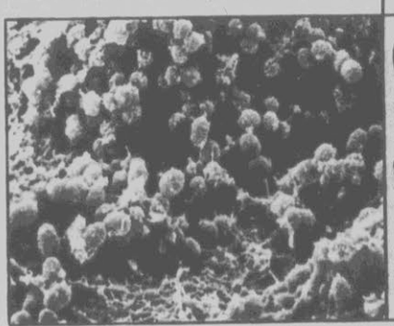

The unattractive problem, tartar, is a hard calcified material which can trap plaque. This appears as yellow-brownish stained accumulations on the teeth. While many anti-tartar toothpastes and mouthrinses can help prevent new tartar from forming, none can remove existing tartar. That can be safely removed only by a dentist or a dental hygienist. Unlike gingivitis, tartar above the gumline is basically a cosmetic problem.

The best defense is a good offense. The best way to guard against gingivitis is to stop it before it starts. You should begin by brushing and flossing daily, and visiting your dentist regularly. In reality, however, many people do not clean all areas of their mouths thoroughly with these methods alone. That's why rinsing with Listerine® Antiseptic is important. Long-term clinical studies with hundreds of patients have proven that daily use of Listerine kills plaque bacteria, helping to prevent plaque build-up and gingivitis. Listerine has also been proven to reduce existing plaque and gingivitis.

The American Dental Association Council on Dental Therapeutics recently has granted the Seal of Acceptance to Listerine for helping to prevent and reduce both plaque above the gumline and gingivitis. Listerine is the only non-prescription mouthwash that has been accepted by the ADA for these conditions. So, wherever you see Listerine, you'll see this Seal of Acceptance.

ADA ACCEPTED American Dental Association

"Listerine Antiseptic has been shown to help prevent and reduce supragingival plaque accumulation and gingivitis when used in a conscientiously applied program of oral hygiene and regular professional care. It has not been shown to have a therapeutic effect on periodontitis."
COUNCIL ON DENTAL THERAPEUTICS AMERICAN DENTAL ASSOCIATION

Gingivitis is not inevitable. With certain preventive measures, it may be avoided. Remember to brush and floss daily and visit your dentist regularly. And for extra protection, rinse with an ADA accepted antiseptic mouthwash such as Listerine. It's as simple as that.

Relax! Your Skin Will Look Younger

By the time you're 30, you need to take extra precautions, such as making time for relaxation on a regular basis. That's one of many helpful points made in the booklet "How Your Skin Ages...And What You Can and Can't Do About It."

The booklet also pinpoints the ages when you should reconsider your moisturizer and makeup types and advises what to do about wrinkles.

Keep Fit After 50

MY FATHER, WHO TURNED 72 in November, plays golf nearly every day. He never uses automatic carts or caddies. He walks nine holes, carrying his own bag. My mother, who is the same age, walks two miles several times a week. Regular moderate exercise like this is a key to good health, particularly for those over 50.

Most older people can develop an exercise routine that includes walking, hiking, low-impact or modified aerobics, calisthenics or yoga. (It's a good idea to check with your doctor first.)

For a list of exercise programs and free or low-cost publications about exercise, write to the National Institute of Aging Information Center/Exercise, Dept. P, 2209 Distribution Circle, Silver Spring, Md. 20910.

We'd like to hear from you. Send your suggestions to "Bright Ideas," PARADE, 750 Third Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017.

Why Are We Offering Our Nationally Advertised GFX DIMENSION-4™ AMBER OPTICS For Only $5

MAKES YOU SEE CLEARER, SHARPER, MORE DISTINCTLY

A near-miracle in optical filtration technology actually makes you see objects sharper, clearer and more distinctly than ever before. Cuts through aerial haze, fog and mist. Blocks out harmful blue and ultra-violet light rays to give your eyes needed protection and enhanced vision.

Now, as part of a continuous nationwide publicity campaign, RBM Ltd., a multi-million dollar distributor of sporting equipment offers its nationally advertised GFX DIMENSION-4™ AMBER OPTICS—for only $5 to every person who writes to the company address (below) before April 25, 1988.

These are the same sports optics currently being nationally advertised by us in leading media throughout America. GFX DIMENSION-4 AMBER OPTICS are as different from ordinary sunglasses as a Concorde Super-Jet is from a World War I Curtiss "Jenny"! Exciting scientific optical technology permits you to see and distinguish objects more clearly, sharply and distinctly than ever before—even through fog, haze and mist. This same startling development also gives your eyes needed protection from potentially harmful sun rays.

We've named these remarkably different sports optics DIMENSION-4 AMBER OPTICS because they seem to extend vision within the accepted three dimensions of height, width and depth. While ultra-violet rays are long known to be hazardous to eyes, optical scientists today have become increasingly concerned about effects of "blue light" rays. DIMENSION-4 AMBER OPTICS' UV/blue ray filtration blocks out BOTH types of potentially harmful rays. (Incidentally, many conventional "sunglasses" expose the eyes to more of these dangerous rays by forcing the pupils to open wider to overcome reduced light transmission.)

Blue light has been likened to radio-TV sound interference and has been referred to as visual "noise". Particles of dust and moisture in the atmosphere diffuse this blue light, interfering with the eye's ability to perceive objects clearly, especially at distances.

In much the same way as an electronic filter blocks out unwanted interference that distorts and blurs voices and music (and shows up as "snow" on TV screens) DIMENSION-4 AMBER OPTICS block out this visual "noise". So, the green and red portions of the light spectrum focus clearer and sharper on the eye's retina. Distant objects previously blurred by particles in the air come more clearly into view. Everything appears more distinctly clear and better defined.

Drivers may see road signs, hazards more clearly in haze, fog and mist. Tennis players see balls in bright sun more sharply defined. Skiers, on cloudy days, can better judge moguls, steepness of downhill runs. Golfers can more accurately determine distance to the pin, "lies" of greens. Boaters can sight other craft, buoys easier in overcast weather.

DIMENSION-4 AMBER OPTICS will not be sold at this or any price by the company in any store. There is a limit of two (2) pair per address, but if you order early enough (before April 17) you may request up to five pair. Each pair is covered by the company's full one-year money-back guarantee.

To order: Mail your name and address (on a sheet of paper) and $5 for each pair of DIMENSION-4 AMBER OPTICS. Add only $2 shipping regardless of the size of your order. (New York residents add sales tax.) Allow up to 6-8 weeks for shipment. IMPORTANT: specify regular style (Item R54260) or "clip-on" style for eyeglass wearers (Item R54262). One size fits all. Make check payable to RBM Ltd. Mail to: RBM, DIMENSION-4, Dept. 931-168, Box 1784, Hicksville, N.Y. 11855. 'Elephant Woman' Dethroned

Michelle Deakin before and after: Her "magic" pills helped—but cost her the crown

Each year Slimmer, a British magazine, gives 1000 pounds ($1750) to the determined young woman who has shed—by natural diet—the most excess weight and, in the process, improved her health and lifestyle. The winner this year was Michelle Deakin, 19, a blonde from Liverpool who was so obese that neighbors called her "the Elephant Woman."

Michelle, whose vital statistics had been 48-50-60, lost 175 pounds in 12 months and now tips the scales at 140 while boasting a 36-26-37 figure. That's the good news. The bad news is that Michelle has been stripped of her title, "Young Slimmer of the Year," and the magazine wants its money back.

Jeremy Jackson, publisher of Slimmer, says: "When Michelle entered our competition, she assured us she had lost weight by rigorously adhering to a sensible, well-balanced diet of salads, fruit and wholesome low-calorie foods. Now she is claiming she achieved her remarkable weight-loss by eating some 'magic' pills. If that is the case, she lied to us... and we're talking to our lawyers."

To get Michelle's side of the controversy, we rang her up in Liverpool. "I'm willing to contribute the money to any worthwhile charity," she declared. "I told the magazine about the granules [pills] I took as part of the diet. Anyway, money doesn't come into it. I've got a manager now, and we're going to promote the Deakin Diet around the world to help people. That's what I want."

The Deakin Diet, of course, will consist in part of Michelle's "magic" slimming pills, the sale of which she hopes will earn her a fortune.

Are federal officials more corrupt than people in the private sector? Is the so-called "sleaze factor" more prevalent in our capital than ever before? Has ethics in government reached a new low? The following figures seem to indicate a trend.

The Port Wine Stain

People are born with all sorts of birthmarks. One of the most common is the "port wine stain," a deep red or purplish discoloration of the skin (called a hemangioma). You've probably noticed such marks on the faces or necks of friends and strangers, or on the forehead of Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. They're present at birth, persist through life and frequently cause psychological problems to those who bear them.

According to Dr. Nicholas Lowe, professor of dermatology at the UCLA School of Medicine, an important advance has been made in the treatment of port wine stains through the use of a new type of laser—"the flash pump dye laser"—whose energy emissions fade the stains, making them significantly less noticeable and in some cases "coverable" by makeup.

One of the outstanding skin-disease researchers and practitioners in the nation, Dr. Lowe reports that until recently the two lasers used most frequently in dermatology have been the carbon dioxide laser and the argon laser. "The carbon dioxide laser," he points out, "is used for cauterization and the relatively bloodless removal of skin tumors. The argon laser has been used for the treatment of port wine stains and other skin lesions, including tattoos."

"The problem with the argon laser," he adds, "is that when it's used with sufficient energy to produce some improvement in the port wine stain, it often causes excessive crusting, scabbing and scarring of the stain. It also causes enough pain to require local anesthesia."

The flash pump dye laser, on the other hand, eliminates the crusting, scabbing and scarring and doesn't require anesthesia, so it can be used on birthmark-sensitive younger children, which is its major virtue.

Invented by Horace Furumoto, the Hawaiian-born chief executive officer of Candela Laser Corp., near Boston, the new laser was approved by the Food and Drug Administration in November 1986. It's currently available for patients at NYU Medical Center in New York City; Duke University Medical Center in Durham, N.C.; UCLA School of Medicine in Los Angeles; Thomas Jefferson University Hospital in Philadelphia; Northwestern University Hospital in Chicago; Boston University Medical Center and Massachusetts General Hospital, both in Boston.

Reagan and Rockne

On Wednesday, President Reagan is scheduled to visit the University of Notre Dame in South Bend, Ind., to highlight the issuance of a postage stamp honoring Knute Rockne, the school's famed football coach, who died in a 1931 plane crash.

Almost 50 years ago, Reagan filmed Knute Rockne—All American with the late Pat O'Brien, who played Rockne. Reagan portrayed George Gipp, a star halfback who died of pneumonia. The movie was shot in Los Angeles on the Loyola University campus, and Reagan has always considered it one of his best.

SIX-FOOT-10 ALONZO MOURNING of Indian River High in Chesapeake, Va., is the Player of the Year on PARADE's All-America High School Boys Basketball Team. Alonzo, who led his team to the Virginia AAA championship last year, has averaged 25 points a game, 15 rebounds and 12 blocks this year. He makes 70 percent of his shots from the foul line and has been instrumental in Indian River's winning streak this year, which stands at 42 games as we go to press. "Mourning is the best high school player I've seen since Moses Malone," says Marty Blake, director of scouting for the National Basketball Association.

Mourning, who will attend Georgetown University next fall, was a virtually unanimous choice for top player in the voting by the college coaches and recruiters who selected the 48 players on this year's squad, the 31st annual PARADE team.

"Statistics on Alonzo should include the fact that last year he had 13 triple-double games [double figures in points, rebounds and blocked shots]," notes his coach, Bill Lassiter. "In our first 16 games this season, he had 10 triple-doubles. He has a strong determination to excel and consequently is a very hard worker. What I like most about him is that he finds time to be accessible to youths and adults in charitable programs."

This year's players represent 21 states and the District of Columbia. New York had the most players on the squad with seven, followed by Virginia with six and California with five.

Runner-up in the voting was the 6-foot-9 Billy Owens of Carlisle High in Carlisle, Pa. Owens, who will attend Syracuse University, has helped his team win the Pennsylvania AAAA championship three years in a row. "His greatest attribute is his overall ability," according to his coach, David Lebo. "He can play inside and out. He has excellent perimeter skills, is a tremendous passer and is fundamentally very sound."

Three of the players on this year's squad have been named to the PARADE team three times, and 12 are repeaters from last year's squad. The three-year players, in addition to Alonzo Mourning, are Shawn Kemp of Concord High in Elkhart, Ind., who will attend Kentucky, and Jerrod Mustaf of De Matha High in Hyattsville, Md., who, as we go to press, had not made a college commitment. These players join an elite group of three-time all-Americans. They include the NBA standouts Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Patrick Ewing.

A player who may well join the ranks of three-time all-Americans when he becomes a senior next year is Kenny Anderson. The 6-foot-2 Anderson, who came in third in the voting, attends Archbishop Molloy in Queens, N.Y., and was named MVP of the New York City Catholic high school playoffs. His coach, Jack Curran, says Anderson is "extremely intuitive, with his basketball instincts being the greatest part of his overall game." He adds, "I've never seen a better dribbler at the high school or professional level."

It is safe to assume that many of PARADE's all-Americans will someday play in the NBA. Eight players on the current Boston Celtics, for example, are PARADE grads, and it would be nine except Bill Walton is out for the year with an injury. The NBA champion Los Angeles Lakers field seven

I PROMISE . . . You Can lose weight, and may keep it off PERMANENTLY with my Deal-A-Meal™ Weight Loss Program!

. . . Richard Simmons

Over 233,000 people in our first 8 weeks . . . Makes Deal-A-Meal perhaps the FASTEST GROWING WEIGHT LOSS PROGRAM IN HISTORY!* Here's Why:

Doesn't starve or punish you . . . Gives you a safe, nutritionally balanced way to control your calories, without counting them!

Lost 44 lbs.

Lost 165 lbs.

Lost 110 lbs.

HERE'S HOW IT WORKS

1. Food Groups are divided into 6 colors of cards:

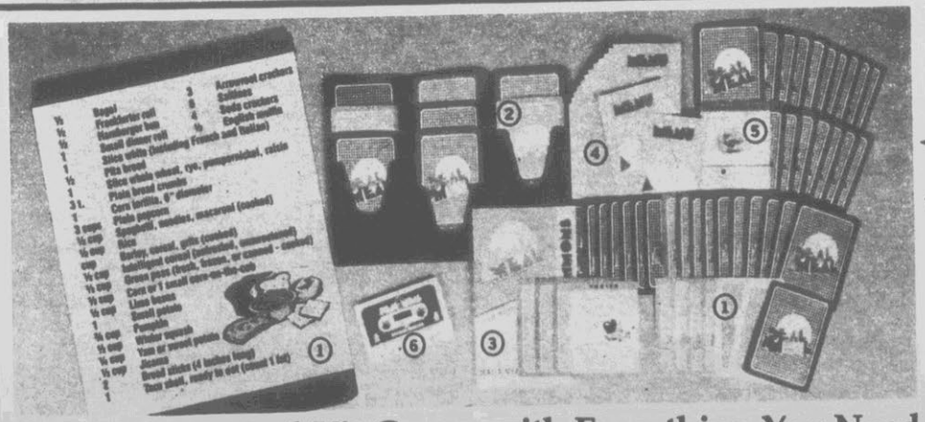

Meats are Red, Breads-Brown, Vegetables-Green, Fats-Yellow, Dairy-White, Fruits-Pink. The back of each card lists the food equivalents that card is worth. For example, one bread (brown) card is worth a slice of bread, a dinner roll, half a bagel, half a bun, a half cup of pasta, a tortilla, etc.

2. You start each day with a set number of cards of each color.

For example, if you want to lose 40 pounds or more, you start off each day with 6 Red cards, 6 Brown, 2 White, 4 Green, 4 Pink, 5 Yellow.

3. Whenever you eat a meal or a snack, you "play" the appropriate cards.

Anytime you eat, whether a snack, or a complete meal, you simply take the appropriate cards out of the left side of your "Deal-A-Meal Wallet," and place them into a "meal" pocket on the right side of the wallet. When you run out of cards, you're done eating for the day. You've eaten the appropriate number of calories in a nutritionally balanced combination.

Swoosie Kurtz

Swoosie Kurtz is funny, sweet, unspoiled and doesn't have a guy. She also may star in more hits this season than any other actress.

WHILE SWOOSIE KURTZ was being born, her dad, a onetime Olympic diver, was flying his B-17 on bombing missions over Germany. "The whole time my mother was pregnant with me," Swoosie said, "she sometimes didn't know if he was alive. She wrote a book about it, My Rival the Sky." But Col. Frank Kurtz—one of our most decorated pilots—survived the war, and he and Swoosie's mother are alive and well and living in California.

Swoosie was named after her father's plane, "half swan, half goose." Today she is, if not the finest American actress, then certainly the busiest. When I spoke with her recently, she was in Los Angeles doing a stage play called Hunting Cockroaches. A month before, she had been in a TV play. Vice Versa, a film with Judge Reinhold, is set to open next week. And Bright Lights, Big City, with Michael J. Fox, will be released this spring. Over the last few years, she has won two Tony Awards for Best Actress—in The Fifth of July and The House of Blue Leaves, the latter in which she played a character delightfully named Bananas Shaughnessy.

Born in Omaha and raised as an "Army brat," Swoosie attended 17 schools before her folks settled in Los Angeles. She now has an apartment in Manhattan but has been so busy, she rarely sees it. "How's life?" I asked. "What's life?" she replied. "All I do is work. I thought there'd be a directors' strike, and then I'd get a vacation. But it didn't happen." Hunting Cockroaches was still running, but Swoosie already was making other plans.

"Finally, I'll take some time off," she said. "First, I'll shop 'til I drop. I'm really a compulsive shopper. Then I'll see lots of movies and go see my friends work [onstage]. I have a fantasy about going to Bora Bora. There are no telephones. It's so remote, non-urban. But that's a fantasy. I'll be back in New York soon."

She doesn't really have a preference as to movies vs. the stage. "I prefer to alternate," she said. "Stage takes a certain kind of energy, doing the same role over and over. You have to put your life on hold. Film takes another kind of energy. You work a 17- or 18-hour day, but you have real weekends and, if you're not in a scene, you have days off.

She once worked with David Letterman. "It was a variety show featuring Mary Tyler Moore. We taped 11 shows, and they showed only five. It was a bomb, but it had Letterman and Michael Keaton and Dick Shawn. We did skits, and I actually sang." I asked, perhaps impolitely, if she could sing. "Michael Bennett thought I could," she said with a certain vigor. Bennett, who created A Chorus Line, put Swoosie in Scandal, the last musical he worked on before his death.

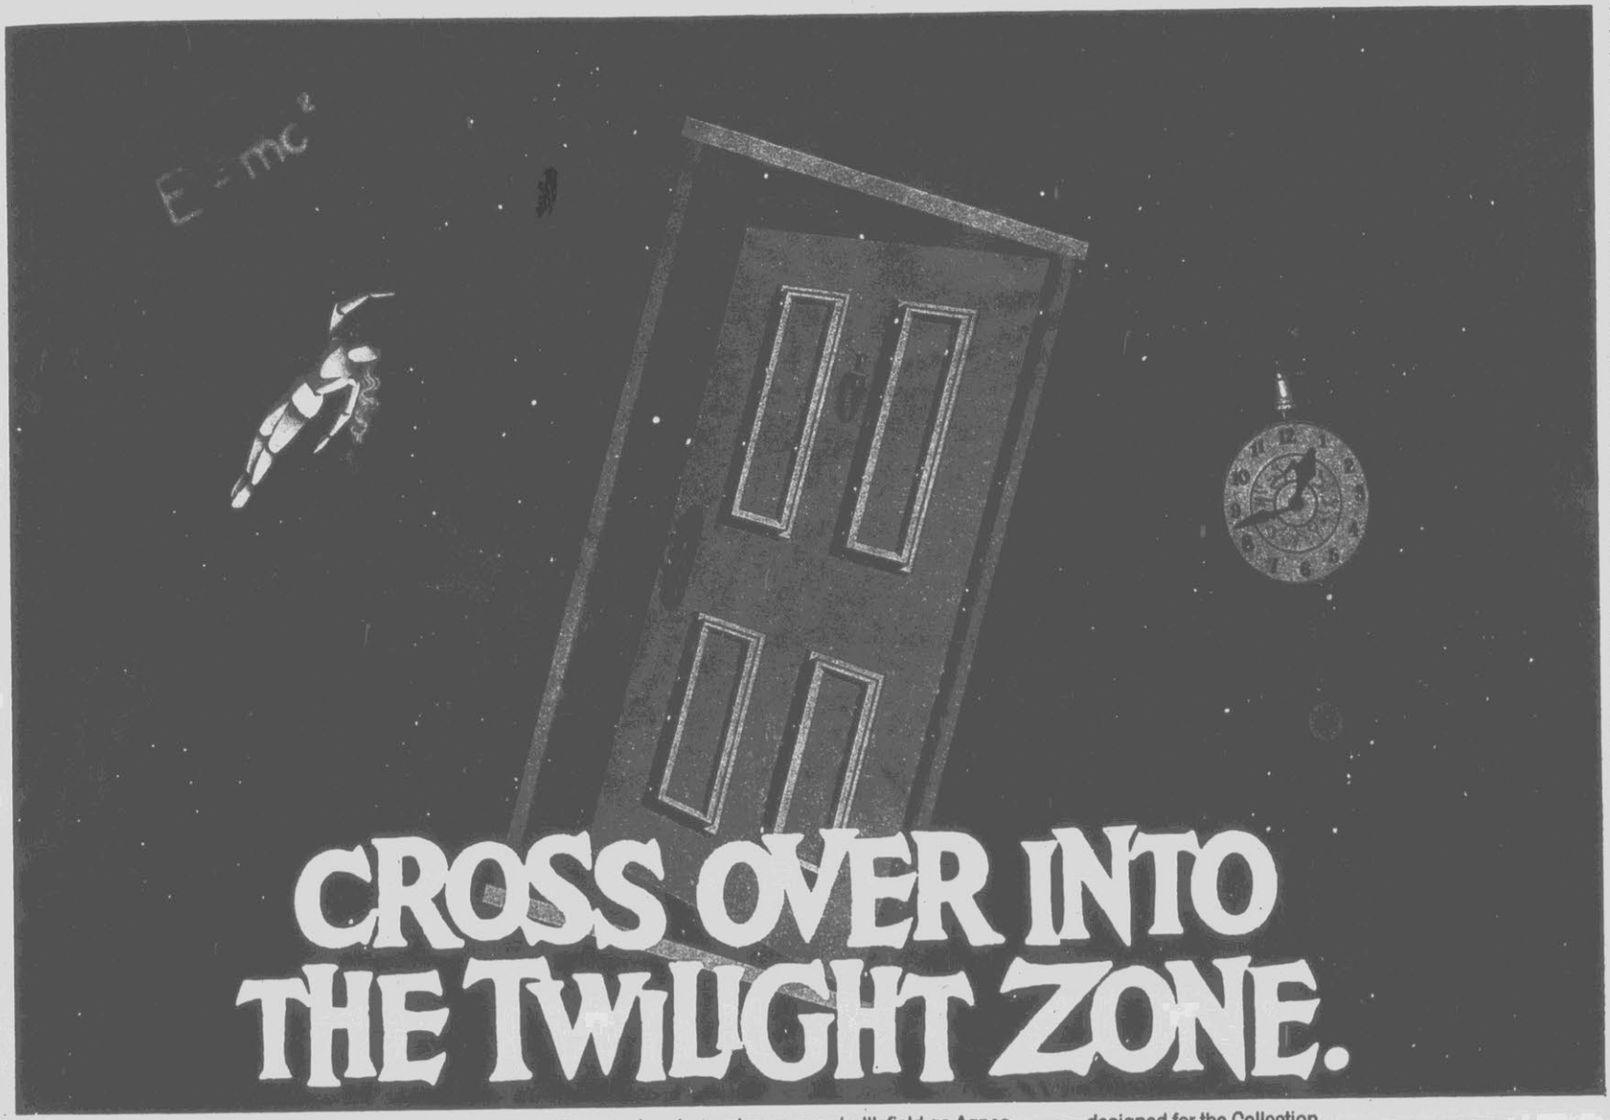

BRADY'S BITS

More on Swoosie: For one thing, it's not pronounced as in "woozy" but as in Lucy. She never has been married. "In love? I have crushes on people," she said, "but they're always married or very happy with someone else." In Hunting Cockroaches, she had to learn a deep Polish accent. "And the day my voice coach arrived, the Pope landed in L.A.," she said. "I knew it was a good omen." When we finished talking, she said, "Wait a minute. Do you know why debutantes don't go to orgies?" She laughed. "All those thank-you notes..." She was still laughing when I put down the phone.

To get 12 cassettes or records for 1¢

...just join the Columbia Record & Tape Club at this time. You have over 370 selections to choose from on these three pages. All you have to do is fill in and mail the application together with your check or money order for $1.86 as payment (that's 1¢ for your first 12 selections, plus $1.85 to cover shipping and handling). In exchange, you simply agree to buy 8 more tapes or records (at regular Club prices) in the next three years—and you may cancel membership anytime after doing so.

How the Club operates: every four weeks (13 times a year) you'll receive the Club's music magazine, which describes the Selection of the Month for each musical interest...plus hundreds of alternates from every field of music. And up to six times a year you may receive offers of Special Selections, usually at a discount off regular Club prices, for a total of up to 19 buying opportunities.

If you wish to receive the Selection of the Month or the Special Selection, you need do nothing—it will be shipped automatically. If you prefer an alternate selection, or none at all, simply fill in the response card always provided and mail it by the date specified. You will always have at least 10 days to make your decision. An Actress Appears With Her Screen Idol

By Evan Levine

Karen Austin doesn't mind that the only subject people want to discuss with her these days is Katharine Hepburn. She's starring with the four-time Oscar winner in NBC's "Laura Lansing Slept Here," airing Monday, March 7, and she still can't believe she was in a movie with the same woman who starred in "The Philadelphia Story" and "The African Queen." Austin seems to be more eager to promote Hepburn's virtues than her own.

"It would be like letting a writer go work with J.D. Salinger," she explains. "You bet I was intimidated." Austin was starring in the Los Angeles production of "Nuts" when she was seen by the producers and asked to audition for the role. "They thought I might be too young," she explains. "But they've never seen me when I wake up in the morning!"

The movie stars Hepburn as Laura Lansing, a flamboyant writer who moves in with a suburban family for a week to win a bet with her agent. Austin and Joel Higgins play the couple whose lives are disrupted by Lansing, who ends up reorganizing their bathroom time, their furniture and their lives.

"At first, Joel and I would do a scene with her and rush off and compare notes," says Austin, whose best-known role was in the miniseries "Celebrity" (1984). "It took a while to realize that the more she picked on you, the more she liked you.

"It was terrifying to do a scene where I had to yell at her," Austin continues. "I was glad when I got it right, when I met her standards."

Meeting a set of standards, claims Austin, was Hepburn's trademark, "I knew she was opinionated, but I didn't realize what a terror she could be; how feisty. But she translated that into the way she protected the work. She knew that what mattered was the finished product. That's one thing I took away from working with her."

When it came to that finished product, Hepburn was very willing to pitch in and offer a name for the movie. "First it was 'Guest Appearance,'" explains Austin, "but the producers thought it sounded like Katharine only appears briefly. I suggested 'Holiday in Hicksville' (the name of the town), and Katharine offered, 'It's Only a Week, Dear.'"

The final choice, "Laura Lansing Slept Here," brings to mind the kind of screwball comedies for which Hepburn is best known. "But you'll see a somewhat difference Hepburn," promises Austin. "You'll see her in lots of jewelry, big earrings. But it's still the Hepburn you know.

The legendary Katharine Hepburn plays a famous novelist who moves in with a suburban family for a week in NBC's "Laura Lansing Slept Here." Karen Austin and Joel Higgins co-star in the movie, which airs Monday, March 7.

SOAP OPERA WEEK

'DOOL' actresses each have had recent bundles of joy

By Kimberly Redmond

I heard that Mary Beth Evans (Kayla Deveraux) and Patricia Pease (Kimberly Donovan) of "Days of Our Lives" are both pregnant in real life. Can you tell me if that's true? - L.M., Conover, N.C.

Mary Beth Evans

Both Evans and Pease were pregnant. Evans gave birth to a son, Daniel Luke, on Oct. 6, 1987, and Pease delivered a son, Joshua Ray Jeffers, on Jan. 24, 1988.

Recently I had the chance to take some photos of Bryan Genesse (Rocco Carner on "The Bold and the Beautiful"), who was in a parade near my home. Can you tell me his address so that I can send him a copy of the photo? - J.U., Bayport, Minn.

You can write to Genesse c/o "B&B," CBS-TV, 7800 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, CA 90036.

Is it true that Billy Warlock (Frankie Brady) of "Days of Our Lives" is married in real life to Marcy Walker (Eden Capwell) of "Santa Barbara"? - R.R., New Haven, Ky.

Warlock and Walker were married, but we recently learned that they have split up and are in the process of divorcing.

I remember reading that Peter Simon (Ed Bauer on "Guiding Light") is married to an actress whom he met while he was appearing on "Search for Tomorrow." Can you tell me the actress's name? - N.S., Green Cove Springs, Fla.

Peter Simon

Simon is married to Courtney Sherman, who portrayed Kathy Phillips on "SFT" from 1971-78, and then reprised the role in 1983 for an additional year.

Michele Will Tell

By Michele Marks

Dear Michele: Whatever happened to the two male leads of the series, "Car 54, Where Are You?" Also, when did this show run and for how long? — HENRY ESPOSITO JR., PORT SAINT LUCIE, FLA.

"Car 54, Where Are You?" was an NBC sitcom that aired from 1961 to 1963. Joe E. Ross starred as Officer Gunther Toody with Fred Gwynne as his partner, Officer Francis Muldoon. Ross, a veteran nightclub comedian, went on to star in the short-lived CBS comedy "It's About Time" (1966-67). The short, pudgy-faced comedian died Aug. 13, 1982. Fred Gwynne, the son of a Wall Street broker, is also widely recognized for his portrayal of Herman Munster on the CBS series "The Munsters" (1964-66), which is still popular in syndication. The tall, lanky Gwynne is a graduate of both Groton and Harvard, where he was president of The Harvard Lampoon. Following his two hit sitcoms, Gwynne went back to his theater roots, and pursued a successful New York stage career. More recently hehas appeared in such feature films as "The Cotton Club" (1984), "The Boy Who Could Fly" (1986) and "Off Beat" (1986). The actor also remains busy starring in both TV movies and miniseries.

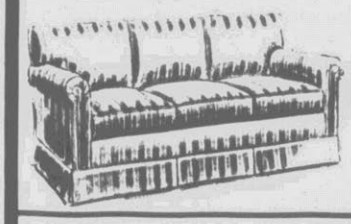

Dear Michele: Who is actor Martin Sheen married to? Is she the mother of his children? — JESSICA GURROLA, BAKERSFIELD, CALIF.

Sheen met his wife of 25 years, Janet, backstage at New York's Living Theater while he acted in "The Connection." At the time, Janet was studying art at the New School for Social Research in New York. The Sheens have four children, and they're all actors: Emilio Estevez (born in 1962), Ramon Estevez (1963), Charlie Sheen (1966) and Renee Estevez (1967). The Sheens also have three grandchildren — two by Emilio and one by Charlie. Neither son is married.

Dear Michele: While watching an episode of "Sledge Hammer!" I noticed that the woman who plays Dori Doreau looked like a character from one of the soaps. Am I right? If so, which one? — BILL WEST, CANONSBURG, PENN.

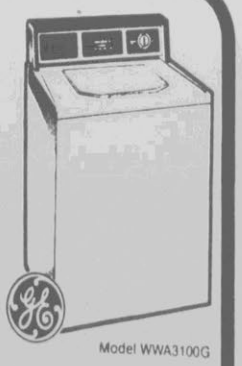

Right, you are! Many prime-timers, including "Sledge Hammer!" co-star Anne-Marie Martin, got their start on soaps. Martin's credits include a three-year stint as Gwen Davies on NBC's "Days of Our Lives." Her days as Dori on "Sledge Hammer!" seem numbered, since ABC recently put the series on hiatus.

THE Rook Look AT GARMENT CARE

DICKIE ROOK
FINISHES: CLOTHING CHEMICALS
Almost every garment you buy has been treated with chemicals. Some finishes, like the gloss of chintz, are set in permanently with heat and pressure. Some finishes need to be renewed; fabric softeners, for example. Some are an integral part of the fabric no matter how it is cleaned; such as flame-retardant properties.
A common finish is sizing. Sizing is added to make garments feel heavier, with more body, and with a better "drape." Most sizings are water-soluble, which is why your clothes look starched in the store and come out of the wash limp and fuzzy.
Clothing labels do not have to say anything about the finish. You won't know until after you have tried to remove a stain, and made a ring, that the fabric was sized.

TV Chatter

By Frank Sanello

Although her breakthrough role on "Cheers" has made Kirstie Alley more recognizable, the actress says she couldn't care less about her new-found fame. "After I did (the miniseries) 'North and South,' playing a disturbed abolitionist, they said, 'You're going to be a huge star!' Needless to say, I didn't become one, and I've never aspired to be a celebrity. What I've always wanted to be is a really good actress who's still working at the age of 95."

If Alley ever decides to give up on acting, she has another interest that she might pursue full-time. The actress is a strong supporter of animal conservation and her suburban Los Angeles estateis already a haven for dogs, cats, cockatoos, pet mice, rabbits, birds and a miniature horse. But what the Kansas native would really like to do is turn her spread into a refuge for one endangered species and thus save it from extinction. Her choice? The Malaysian otter.

NBC hopes to attract viewers with "Day by Day," a mid-season replacement about a yuppie couple (Linda Kelsey of "Lou Grant" and Doug Sheehan of "Knots Landing") who decide to abandon their fast-track careers and open a day-care center. The series, which airs Sundays, starting March 6, features dozens of kids. But during the show's run-through rehearsals, adult midgets were substituted, since the kids were permitted to work only a few hours each day. "It was very weird hearing adults says things like, 'I want my Maypo,'" says co-creator Andy Borowitz. "It made it seem like atotally different show."

The pilot was co-written by Gary David Goldberg, creator of NBC's huge hit "Family Ties" and the executive producer of "Day by Day." If the new show rings particularly true, it's because it's based on Goldberg's own experiences. Fifteen years ago, when Goldberg and his wife were living in Berkeley, they decided to stay home and take care of their baby. To pay the bills, the Goldbergs ran a center called Organic Daycare. The center, says Goldberg, was very much of its time. Its motto was "Rain or shine, we take your kids on a trip every day."

In "Hot Paint," a CBS movie airing this season, Gregory Harrison ("Trapper John, M.D.") and John Larroquette ("Night Court") play a pair of befuddled thieves who steal a Renoir without realizing its value. It looked as if the same could be said for Harrison's appreciation of the world's greatest Impressionist. "The painting reminded me of a couple of blurry naked fat babes taking a bath in the river," he says. We never knew Harrison was such a Philistine — until he told us he was just kidding. "That was a line my character used in the movie," he says. You had us fooled, Greg.

NBC News correspondent Connie Chung, who once anchored the local news in Los Angeles, offers this tip on how to tell which local anchors are actually smart, and which ones are real-life versions of William Hurt's character in "Broadcast News." "You can tell who's really cutting the mustard by which anchors they choose to do live interviews," she says... Here's why veteran film actor Tony Roberts finally decided to do a TV sitcom, "The Thorns": "Mike Nichols is producing, and that's a pretty strong attraction, but the fact that it's shooting only 20 blocks from my home (in New York City) made it irresistible."

BEHIND THE SCENES

Producer of Elvis special offers a Barry Manilow treat

By Frank Lovece

Steve Binder

The scale is somewhat different, but Binder says the latest Manilow TV special proved as much fun in its own way as Presley's legendary 1968 "Comeback Special." And the title of his latest project couldn't agree more: "Barry Manilow: Big Fun on Swing Street!" It airs Monday, March 7, on CBS.

Along with the Elvis special, Binder directed the concert film "The T.A.M.I. Show" (1964) as well as TV specials for everyone from Danny Kaye to Diana Ross. He won an Emmy for Barry Manilow's first special in 1977; he now produces the children's show "Pee-wee's Playhouse." And he's leased the rights from Michael Jackson for a projected TV series based on Beatles songs.

The new Manilow special "is sort of a 10-year reunion for Barry and me," says Binder. "He's had kind of a dry spell, and maybe this will help get him back in the spotlight. I'm a great believer in timing and luck, and we've talked about doing this project for two years. This must be the right time. With my good luck," he jokes, "that's the way it seems to go!"

Both Binder and "Big Fun" have more than luck going for them. The special is an ambitious musical fantasy, the kind you used to see in Technicolor on a big movie screen. The guest performers are no slouches, either. Among them: jazz singers Carmen McRae and Phyllis Hyman, musical greats Gerry Mulligan and Stanley Clarke, and those doo-wop-salsa-calypso critics' darlings, Kid Creole and the Coconuts.

Ironically, "Big Fun" might give the Kid as much exposure as Manilow, yet the band was a last-minute replacement. "We originally had a segment based on a song that Barry did with Miami Sound Machine," Binder explains. "But then their record companies clashed, the duet couldn't be released, and we asked Kid Creole."

So overall, did Binder have fun doing the special? "I was pre-med in college, so this is like a hobby. I always enjoy it," he says, "and I never look at the clock."

Sisterhood

Barry Bostwick is the star of "Sisterhood," an upcoming ABC movie about a con artist who romances four women at once in order to swindle them. Larry Hogan, the character played by Bostwick, assumes four different identities to woo the women, who are played by Polly Bergen, Erin Gray, Linda Purl and Dee Wallace Stone. The movie will air this spring.

Bourne Identity

Richard Chamberlain and Jaclyn Smith are the stars of "The Bourne Identity," an upcoming ABC miniseries based on the novel by Robert Ludlum. The miniseries, filmed in London, Nice and Zurich, casts Chamberlain as a victim of a murder attempt who is himself suspected of murder. He suffers from memory loss, though, so he can't prove that he's innocent. Smith plays his lover.

WEDNESDAY SHATTERED INNOCENCE

In "Shattered Innocence," Jonna Lee plays a young woman who isn't quite ready for what she finds when she moves to Los Angeles — and drifts into pornographic movies. The CBS movie airs Wednesday, March 9.

Basketball And Golf Dominate Air Waves

By Marty Linehan

On Sunday, March 6, sports viewers have a choice of basketball or golf. The big basketball game on CBS involves two top Big East Conference teams: Pittsburgh and Syracuse, both aiming for the upcoming Big East finals. In golf, meanwhile, we'll see a seniors battle, a PGA tournament and an LPGA tournament.

* The Big East hoop classic from the Carrier Dome in Syracuse not only has the two teams battling, but two friends, Pitt's Charles Smith and the Orangemen's Rony Seikaly, going at each other.Smith and Seikaly attended the same basketball camp as youngsters, but friendship goes out the window when the game starts. After the college game, CBS presents NBA action with the Los Angeles Lakers playing the Dallas Mavericks.

* The NBC college game on March 6 features the North Carolina Tar Heels vs. the Duke Blue Devils. When the two teams met in January, Duke surprised North Carolina with a close win, and the high-ranked Tar Heels are looking for revenge.

* On March 6, ABC, which has run out of Olympic events, also resorts to college basketball. ABC's offering is the University of Illinois playing the University of Florida. The Illini weren't supposed to be too tough this year, but they have found themselves in the top 20.

* It's also getting close to Final Four time, with conferences putting their championships on the line. On Saturday, March 12, NBC presents the Southeast Conference semi-finals. And CBS has the semi-finals of the Big East conference.

* As for the golfers, last year's golf promoters started a new super-seniors event — for golfers over 60 — so we get a chance on Sunday, March 6, to watch the gray-haired heroes of yesteryearplaying in the Vintage Invitational at the Vintage Club in Indian Wells, Calif. ABC carries the action, which is probably aimed at the same seniors who enjoy old-timers baseball games.

• STAR WARP! Challenge: Insert numbers 1 through 14 in the star-shaped diagram, right, so that each of the figure's seven rows of four numbers in a straight line total 30.

Numbers 1 through 7 are already in place, leaving 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13 and 14 to be inserted properly.

Clockwise, beginning at top (7 to 3 row): 11,9,12,14,10,13,8.

• MURKY MATH! It's possible for six to be half of eleven and seven to be half of twelve. Quickly explain, if you can, how this can be.

In Roman numerals, upper half of XI is six, upper half of XII is seven.
