Cargo Plane Hits House, Leaving 3 People Dead

WARREN, Mich. (AP) — A cargo plane flying erratically dove into a residential area, struck a garage and a house and exploded early today, killing a couple in the house and the pilot, officials said.

The couple's three children, who were sleeping in an upstairs bedroom, were unhurt and were led to safety by neighbors, said Herbert Kauffman, assistant police chief for this Detroit suburb.

The twin-engine Beechcraft plane had just taken off from Detroit City Airport, not the city's main airport, about 12:30 a.m. when it went into a nosedive and struck a garage, propelling a van into the first-floor bedroom of the house next door before crashing into that house and bursting into flames, said police Lt. Orba Underwood.

"There are parts of the aircraft and car inside the bedroom," Underwood said.

"The plane was seen faltering in the air by two Warren scout cars, and they were literally on the scene immediately after impact," Mayor Ron Bonkowski said. "They thought at first he might have hit the school playground on the other street. You look another 60 feet, and he'd have been in the street."

Kauffman said police officers Craig Garwood and Alex Sywak saw the airplane shortly before it crashed.

"The aircraft appeared to be flying lower than normal and was ascending and descending erratically," Kauffman said, quoting a report by the officers. "It disappeared out of sight, and seconds later they saw a fire flash."

Kauffman identified the victims as Norma and Harold Richardson, both 29. Their neighbor whose garage was struck was unharmed, but her house was damaged by flames.

Zoning Lifts Eyebrows

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

A controversial 4-3 City Council decision allowing flower shops as permitted uses in the MD-2 (medical) zoning district has focused important attention to medical district zoning, according to the president of Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Other citizens also have voiced their opinions on the complex subject.

Hospital President Jack Richardson said the council's decision at a workshop session Monday highlighted the need to be more cautious as to how zoning exceptions are handled in the future.

"There's always the possibility that something could be put out here that wouldn't add to the total content (of the medical park) and that's my concern," he said.

"I think the attention that has developed to this and the principle is very important and we don't want to lose sight of that," he added.

Richardson said the growth of the hospital and the East Carolina University medical school is an important and vital asset to the economic health of the community.

"What we've seen happen here is a unique growth that is unparalleled in any other community, not only in

Pitt County should have a master plan for county office and jail facilities by July and work on plans for a new jail facility should be well under way by year's end, according to a jail study committee report adopted by the Board of County Commissioners Wednesday.

Commissioners have for some months been trying to find ways to alleviate overcrowding and other problems at the jail, now located in the basement of the courthouse annex. A jail study committee was appointed in December to look for short-range and long-range solutions.

According to the committee's findings the jail, built in 1965 for 83 inmates, "averages a daily capacity of 90." And, "During any given month, the daily capacity will exceed the approved capacity on 21 days. The overcrowding would occur 26 to 30 days (a month) if not for the weekend satellite lock up" at the county office building on West Fifth Street, the report said.

The county uses jails in Farmville, Ayden and Bethel to alleviate some of the overcrowding in the main jail, the report continued, but the time required to transport prisoners to other lockups takes away from the time deputies have to spend on their other duties.

Since "the present jail is inadequately sized to accommodate the number of prisoners required to be detained by the courts and the laws of the land," and since the present facility "cannot be altered to meet the standards imposed on county jails by federal and state laws," the committee said a long-range solution would be to "construct a new county jail adequate in capacity to meet projected county requirements for the year 2010."

Also a part of the recommendations: "Set a deadline of July 1... for completion of a master plan (and) set a deadline of September 1... to contract with an architect experienced in jail design and construction to draw plans for a new jail facility."

On the subject of a master plan, the committee recommended that the board, "interview, select and contract with an architect experienced in jail design and construction to furnish a facilities master plan for county government," with such a plan to include, "but not be limited to the following:

— "Where should the jail be constructed?"

— "What should be the capacity of the jail?"

— "How can the new jail be enlarged at a future date?"

— "Should the Sheriff's Department be a part of the facility?"

— "Should the county and city plan for a joint city-county law enforcement center with the jail?"

— "How will the county ensure adequate space for future court facilities?"

— "How can the present courthouse be used in the future?"

Kemp Pulls Out, Hart To Follow

By The Associated Press

Republican presidential hopeful Jack Kemp quit the race today, saying "we may have suffered a political defeat but our principles have not been defeated." Democrat Gary Hart was ready to drop out a second time as the shrinking field converged on Illinois for the next big campaign test.

Kemp was crushed in the Super Tuesday landslide of Vice President George Bush, who rejoined the campaign trail today after taking a day off to rest and celebrate.

The New York congressman congratulated Bush and said he would "be proud to campaign" for whoever wins the nomination, but he endorsed none of the three remaining GOP contenders.

"I am folding up my tent, but I plan to continue to carry the flag high," said Kemp, the former pro football quarterback who portrayed himself as the natural conservative heir to President Reagan, whose economic programs have included many of Kemp's ideas.

"I ran for the presidency to ensure that the torch that we lit in 1980 in Detroit, Mich. — when we nominated Ronald Reagan and revolutionized our party — would burn even brighter and help light the way into the 1990s," Kemp said at a news conference. He said both Bush and Sen. Bob Dole have embraced conservative positions.

Kemp said he would not seek a new term in Congress and was "not making any plans" to run for the Senate or to pursue the vice presidency.

On Wednesday, Bush suggested to Dole, his closest competitor, that the race for the GOP nomination was becoming just a bit beside the point. It might be time, he said, to turn the attention toward the general election in November.

"I believe it is now time to look ahead to the issues which distinguish us from the Democrats," the vice president told Dole in a telegram in which he rebuffed the Kansas senator's request for a series of one-on-one debates.

"Good luck," Bush added.

Canvass

An official canvass of Tuesday's presidential primary voting in Pitt County shows Democrat Al Gore and Vice President George Bush as the frontrunners, the county Board of Elections said today.

The official returns were: Democrats — Gore, 4,841 votes; the Rev. Jesse Jackson, 4,716; Michael S. Dukakis, 1,677; Richard Gephardt, 870; Gary Hart, 256; Paul Simon, 117, and Bruce Babbitt, 25. There were 238 no preference Democratic votes.

Republicans — Bush, 1,246 votes; Robert Dole, 1,081; Pat Robertson, 527; Jack Kemp, 139; Pierre du Pont, 19, and Al Haig Jr., 7. There were 39 no preference Republican votes.

There were 15,798 total votes cast in Pitt County.

Mercer Files Again For County Board

Linwood Mercer of Farmville has refilled as a candidate for the Pitt County Board of Commissioners from District 4, which includes Falkland, Fountain, Farmville and Arthur townships.

County To Help Shell Building Fund

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners Wednesday, at the request of the county's Development Commission, pledged to appropriate up to $500,000 for a shell building fund as a means to attract more industry.

The county's money would be used to match, dollar-for-dollar, up to $500,000 in private donations, John Chaffee, the development body's executive director, told the board.

Chaffee reported that "85 percent of the industrial prospects who contact the N.C. Department of Commerce are looking for existing buildings." And Chaffee said, "In Pitt, we don't have any good quality buildings available."

The shell building fund, Chaffee said, will be a "50-50 share between the public and private sector. Our objective is to raise $1 million for the building fund."

Chaffee, who said his agency would like to have "two buildings on the market at any given time," emphasized that the program is not intended to subsidize industry. He said the buildings would be sold at fair market value and the money returned to the shell building fund to build other buildings.

Development Commission member Bill Clark told the board that with a promise of support from commissioners, "a committee will go out and start a fund-raising drive," probably in April.

"There's a lot of excitement about the program," Clark said, adding that private money given to the shell building fund "will be a donation to

County Agent Retiring In April

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

County Commissioners accepted "with regret" the resignation of Leroy James, chairman of the county agricultural extension service, on Wednesday and set a public hearing on a proposed outdoor advertising sign ordinance for the county.

In a letter to the board, James said he will resign "for retirement," effective April 30, after 26 years' service in Pitt County.

Speaking to the commissioners James, who came to the county in 1962, thanked the board for its support of his agency. "I've never been sorry I came to Pitt County," he said.

A public hearing on the proposed sign ordinance was scheduled for April 5 at 7 p.m. The commissioner's hearing will follow a planning board hearing on the ordinance which is scheduled for Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at the County Office Building.

County Planner Jeff Ulma said the planning board gave approval to a draft ordinance to regulate outdoor advertising signs on roadways throughout the county on Feb. 25.

Commissioners, in mid-February, imposed a 90-day moratorium on the placement of outdoor advertising signs along the U.S. 264 corridor, and asked the planning board to consider an ordinance to regulate signs.

Ulma said that the planning board, rather than place restrictions on signs along U.S. 264, decided outdoor advertising on all roads in the county should be regulated.

Ulma, in a brief review, told commissioners that the proposed ordinance would "allow signs in proximity to commercial and industrial activity" along Pitt's roads. "It won't prohibit but will more strictly regulate them," he said.

Under the draft proposal, signs could be no more than 400 square feet in area, no more than 35 feet tall, and no sign would be allowed within 500 feet of any existing residence, church, school or public institution. The proposal would require a minimum separation between outdoor advertising signs of 1,000 feet, a minimum setback of 50 feet from the highway right-of-way, and limit the distance signs could be erected to 500 feet on either side of a commercial or industrial activity.

Mother Hit By Truck

A Greenville-area woman was killed Wednesday afternoon when she was struck by a truck on N.C. 43 some 2.5 miles northwest of Greenville.

Highway Patrolman John Tomer said Caroline Comyns Whitt, 30, died at the scene about 1:30 p.m. He said she apparently had parked her car on the side of the road and had been walking facing traffic along the shoulder of the road when she stepped onto the pavement in the path of the truck.

The truck was operated by Julius Walter Stancil, 20, of Route 2, Farmville. Tomer said the accident appeared unavoidable and that no charges will be filed.

He said an 18-month-old child and a 2-month-old infant were inside the parked car. He said Mrs. Whitt's husband, Dr. John A. Whitt, picked up the children from the scene.

Dr. Whitt, an East Carolina University School of Medicine graduate, is a resident in psychiatry at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. His wife was a nurse. She had been employed at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, but had not worked there since the first child was born. An Asheville native, she had been a Greenville area resident for the past five years.

Board OKs Guides For Skateboard Site

Commissioners of the Greenville Park and Recreation Department Wednesday night approved a five-part report of recommendations for guidelines in establishing a skateboard site in Greenville.

The report was prepared by representatives of the department and the City Council.

The five recommendations contained in the report are:

- To establish a skateboard area on a trial basis for one year, with an evaluation at the end of a year to determine its future status.
- To develop a skateboard area to measure approximately 30 by 174 feet, to be located at Jaycee Park adjacent to the basketball court there.
- The skateboard organization requesting a city skateboard area must provide funds for purchase and installation of a chain-link fence to surround the skateboard area.
- The skateboard association must provide and install equipment that will meet the city's building regulations.

- A joint committee is to formulate applicable rules and regulations to govern skateboard operations.

The report of recommendation presented to commissioners had input from city officials relative to guidelines that will protect the city against unwanted liability situations. It was noted that with proper guidelines to be followed, there would be no objections on establishing a skateboard area.

The approved report of five recommendations will now be presented to the skateboard association to determine whether or not the association is able and willing to meet the stipulated requirements.

After the association's response, action will be taken to establish a skateboard area if the association's people agree to the stipulations.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Council Position Damages District

The Greenville City Council's disregard for the integrity of the Medical District zoning is an ill-advised and regressive position that will, unless reversed, damage an asset essential to the community's growth.

Permitting a commercial endeavor — a flower shop — to locate in the strictly-regulated MD-2 zone is a serious adulteration of the district's intent. The action is tantamount to opening the door to commercial development in the area immediately surrounding Pitt County Memorial Hospital and the East Carolina University Medical School.

In addition, the council's decision to have the Planning and Zoning Commission review zoning stipulations in the Medical District is an unnecessary and counterproductive action. The Medical District plan is sound and should not be tampered with. Planning and Zoning should reiterate its firm support of the current regulations.

Neither Mayor Ed Carter nor council members have presented a logical reason why a review is needed. Carter's statement alleging favoritism interferes with zoning decisions in the district can only be seen as rhetoric to justify a questionable position on an important issue.

Neither is 'fairness' a real issue, as Carter would have voters believe. The current zoning plan allows commercial endeavors, but in MD-4 and MD-6 zones — appropriately, at a greater distance from the medical center. Controlling congestion from development along the crucial medical corridor was the intent of the Medical District plan, but apparently the city's elected officials have either forgotten or overlooked this fact.

Council members Bill Hadden, Inez Fridley and Nancy Jenkins correctly voted against the revisions and should be recognized for their responsible stance.

If the mayor and council members who voted to commercialize the district are truly concerned about fairness and the future and integrity of the Medical Park, they would not have allowed a incompatible commercial land use in the MD-2 zone.

In fact, that action is contradictory to the council's stated purpose of reviewing the plan to eliminate further intrusions. Again, if council is worried over abuses of zoning rules in the district, why did it permit a commercial endeavor that conflicts sharply with medical uses?

The council committed a serious error that could dilute the effectiveness of a community and regional resource. The decision was unfair to their constituents, and voters should vigorously question elected officials' understanding of this issue.

Not Effective

Super Tuesday didn't work — not at least as the Democratic strategist who originally envisioned it intended.

It worked well for Vice President George Bush, but he was running on the Republican ballot. For Bush it was a landslide victory as he swept most of the states conducting presidential primaries on Super Tuesday.

For Sen. Bob Dole it was a disappointing day and for Pat Robertson, who hoped to find strength in the south, it was a disaster. For Jack Kemp it was the final blow.

On the Democratic side, the strength of Super Tuesday was split between Jesse Jackson, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis and Sen. Al Gore, the bona fide southerner on the ticket.

The Democratic results only further clouded the outlook for a front runner going into the Democratic convention. It is obvious now that no one will win on the first ballot and then the committed delegates will be largely free to support other candidates on future ballots. Certainly nothing will be decided until the dealing begins among Democratic delegates.

Democratic leaders had envisioned a southern candidate emerging with strong regional support. There are those who speculate that perhaps Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Georgia, could have filled the role and pulled the south together. The nation, however, will never know. Nunn didn't run.

It is likely that Super Tuesday will go the way of many other failed political plans and southern states will be free to conduct their presidential primaries as they choose.

Why the failure? Certainly the right man was not available, but it must be recognized that there is no solid South of the past. Vote patterns have changed, black vote being a major factor. Populations of states like Florida and Texas have changed with new people having new ideas as to what they want out of government. The traditional South likely will never again be delivered as a political package, and the Super Tuesday concept will not be very effective in projecting a unified southern viewpoint.

To the editor:

In yesterday's news, it stated that the U.S. Postal Service was asking for an increase in First Class postage from 22 cents to 25 cents. I find this a little hard to accept, considering the service my family has had in the past year.

Just last week, my daughter, who lives in Knoxville, Tenn., received a Christmas card mailed in St. Petersburg Dec. 27, 1987. It took nine weeks to reach its destination. Now just how did it travel? By snail? On another occasion, it took a birthday card seven days to travel from Raleigh to Clayton, N.Y. A postcard mailed in Ayden on a Sunday afternoon about a meeting on Monday arrived on Friday. Then a plane ticket was mailed in Greenville by registered mail to Knoxville, Tenn. No one was at home when it was delivered, so my daughter had to go to the post office to sign for it. It took over 36 hours for them to locate the letter. All these letters were addressed correctly, including the Zip Code.

Now considering this quality of service, as well as a three cents increase, we also face no postal service on Wednesday PM and Saturday AM and no pick up on Sundays and holidays. It certainly ends up to be more for less — more cost for considerably less service and then we're supposed to memorize a nine-digit Zip code?

To the editor:

I have been concerned recently by the astronomical amounts of money spent by candidates for public office in this state. It appears that candidacy may be reserved for only those with access to "megabucks" to finance their campaigns.

I was pleased when our Pitt County representative, Walter B. Jones Jr., emerged as a legislator most concerned about ethics and reforms in our campaign finance system. He won his first battle when his finance reform bill passed the N.C. House last summer by a 40-vote margin. He has since traveled all over the state making speeches and speaking out forcefully for opening the electoral process to all citizens regardless of their personal incomes.

The N.C. Senate must decide in June of this year whether it is serious about campaign finance reform. I hope the Senate will act favorably on Rep. Jones' efforts — HB1124.

Jackson: Victory Over Racial Division

In his novel "Black Boy," Richard Wright dramatically captured black alienation from the American South. Born in Mississippi, Wright fled the South in order to launch his career as a writer. His flight was a tale familiar to thousands of blacks who left a region known for slavery and Jim Crow to seek better jobs and living conditions in the North.

The novelist chronicled this experience in his fiction and, through it, showed the grim world that blacks faced in the region. Wright, like many other Southern black artists, felt that he could not live and create in a society that denied his manhood. While his fellow Mississippian William Faulkner remained at home in Oxford, Wright found his home outside the region — first in Chicago and later in Paris.

In 1987 Wright's daughter, Julia, flew from Paris to receive on behalf of her father an Award of Distinction from the University of Mississippi. While in the state, she visited her father's birthplace in Natchez and met relatives who recalled her father and his life there as a child.

Julia Wright viewed her emotional journey as a pilgrimage: "This trip to the university to accept my father's award and then on down to Natchez to find my tribe cannot leave me quite the same person ever again. Nearly 50 of our relatives welcomed me and wished me well in a small church not far from the cemetery where so many of us are buried. I thought how enriched I am for having found a way back to my father's home."

Julia Wright's impressions reflect the dramatic changes that have occurred in the region that so threatened her father. Jesse Jackson's success in the "Super Tuesday" primaries underscores the depth of change that the South has experienced. His victory is a victory for the South over its history of racial division.

Like many other Southerners, Jackson was drawn by the winds of change during the 1960s into the civil-rights movement. Inspired by Martin Luther King Jr., Jackson was an important voice in demonstrations protesting racial segregation in the South. Both King and Jackson clearly understood that voter registration was the key to the political changes that they sought. Since King's tragic death, Jackson has been enormously successful in expanding voter registration by blacks.

'White and black Southerners joined hands in a historic election, and brought political change to the region in a dramatic fashion.'

Yet while the black vote was essential to his success Tuesday, Jackson's greatest achievement was in securing the white vote that gave him an important margin of victory in many states. As Southern whites crossed racial lines to vote for Jackson, they broke with a century-old tradition that had divided Southern worlds into white and black castes. Jackson courted the white vote by forthrightly addressing issues that affect both the region and the nation. His statements on education, energy, environment, the family farm, voting rights, peace and drugs strongly appeal to the younger generation of white Southerners.

Generations of white liberals have called for and celebrated the "New South," a world of economic growth that sought to balance agriculture with industry. For blacks, however, this New South differed little from the old one. Poverty and racism continued to plague the region. Given this history, it is a major change to hear a black presidential candidate appealing to voters to help build a truly new South. A Jackson campaign tabloid that was distributed to Southern voters contained this quote: "Twenty years ago racial violence in the Old South was not only constant, but legal. Today, racial violence still occurs but it's illegal, so we can struggle effectively to end it. But economic violence is legal and is devastating the lives of Americans of all races. On March 8, we can begin to move forward from racial battlegrounds to economic common ground to achieve economic justice in a New South."

"Economic violence" is a familiar problem to poor and working-class black and white Southerners who heard Jackson's appeal and responded with their votes. He carried 10 percent of the Southern white vote and received a clear majority in Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, Virginia and George Wallace's home state of Alabama. These victories symbolize fundamental changes in the heartland of the Old Confederacy.

Yet Jackson's concern for the economic problems of working-class people is clearly not limited to the South. His success in Vermont and Maine indicate that his platform is national, and issues that appealed to Southerners on Super Tuesday will also attract voters outside the region.

Jackson's showing on Super Tuesday is part of the healing of wounds of racism and a divided house that the South has known for so long. White and black Southerners joined hands in a historic election, and brought political change to the region in a dramatic fashion. Issues rather than race governed the Southern vote, and both black and white Southerners should be proud of the real New South that they are shaping.

Strength For Today

When a house is moved, instruments are placed inside to indicate whether the house is being kept on a level plane. If it were to tilt one way or another, damage might result.

Just as the instruments inside the house inform the contractor whether his project is on the safe side or the dangerous, so there are emotional and mental devices in the lives of all of us which perform the same service.

Experience and self-restraint teach us to bridle our tempers and not to go to extremes in anything. The conscience keeps ringing a little bell every time we turn off the highway of rectitude. Family life, fidelity, background, eagerness to be well thought of — all these influences, like delicate instruments, go clicking along at a great rate as we move along the highway of life.

There is an implication here which should have meaning for all of us — always stay on the level.

Dukakis Has Easier Road To Democratic Convention Than Gore

In the wake of the massive "Super Tuesday" presidential competition, Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, the Democratic front-runner, and his newly established principal challenger, Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore, each have something essential to prove in the forthcoming weeks of battles for convention delegates.

But all Dukakis has to do, party officials and activists agreed Wednesday, is to keep doing what he has been doing — finishing first in most of the major primaries. Gore on the other hand must show that he can accomplish something he has yet to do, win a big contest outside his home region.

As for the Rev. Jesse Jackson, the extent of his role in shaping the struggle for the nomination probably depends on what happens to the Dukakis and Gore candidacies. Though he won nearly as many delegates as Dukakis Tuesday and about 10 percent of the white votes, most analysts still regard Jackson more as a potentially influential supporting player than as a possible standard bearer.

As the Democratic arithmetic stands now, Dukakis may well have a hard time getting a majority of the 4,160 Democratic convention delegates by the time the primary calendar closes in California and New Jersey June 7.

The Massachusetts governor, buoyed by his victories in Texas and Florida, now has 456 delegates compared to 346 for Gore, who carried four Southern states beside his own. Jackson, who won five states Tuesday, has 395.

To get to the magic number of 2,081, Dukakis would have to take nearly 75 percent of the 2,100 pledged delegates at stake in forthcoming primaries and caucuses. That would be a much higher proportion than he has been able to get so far, and difficult for any contender to achieve in a multi-candidate race because of Democratic proportional representation rules.

But many people believe that as long as Dukakis comes close to a majority, psychology will supplant arithmetic and put him over the top. California Democratic chairman Peter Kelly said that if Dukakis could win 40 percent of the delegates in primaries and caucuses, the rest would come to him from unpledged delegates and supporters of other candidates eager to climb on the front-runner's bandwagon and avoid a divisive convention fight.

"Once you get to 40 percent, the leverage is tremendous," Kelly said.

Among the possible targets for Gore are the primaries in Pennsylvania, which votes April 26, and Ohio May 3.

"Gore could win Ohio and Pennsylvania if he can capture the blue collar and conservative vote," said Sergio Bendixen, a consultant to the now-defunct presidential campaign of former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt.

That bloc of voters has been the main target of the presidential campaign of Missouri Rep. Richard A. Gephardt. Gephardt's campaign was damaged seriously, perhaps even fatally, when he failed to get his populist message with its stress on tougher trade policy across in the Super Tuesday vote.

By offering "a more moderate version of populism" than Gephardt, Tully suggested, Gore might find a growing constituency in the 1988 Democratic electorate. "I think there is still the air about this campaign of people supporting candidates but not being moved by them," Tully said.

Indeed, Gore seemingly was putting increasing emphasis on themes and arguments that sounded much like Gephardt's. Wednesday, for example, he talked about "putting the White House back on the side of working men and women" and the need for "fundamental change" in the country.

Gore's message is less abrasive than Gephardt's because it avoids such proposals as Gephardt's call for tougher trade legislation. But it was questionable whether, shorn of such specifics, a populist theme could win much support.

"I heard Gore say his campaign is about 'solving America's problems and solving them correctly,'" said Peter Kelly. "What the hell does that mean?"

The speculation about Dukakis and Gore served only to add to the post-Super Tuesday frustration of Jackson aides, resentful that most analysts still did not give him a serious chance to win the nomination.

"Dukakis has yet to run well in a Southern state," said Steve Cobble, Jackson's top delegate strategist. "Gore has yet to do well in a Northern state. We're the only ones running strong everywhere."

Frank Watkins, the campaign's political director, put it another way. "In an Olympic year," he said, "we ought to count gold and silver medals." In terms of first- and second-place finishes in Super Tuesday states, he pointed out, Jackson finished with 17, Gore with 11, and Dukakis with 10.

Still campaign manager Gerald Austin said he expects Jackson's strong performance on Super Tuesday to change the way he is regarded by the media and the voters.

"Looking at the headlines today," Austin said, "we are finally getting headlines that correlate to what we did. The press is finally starting to treat us with credibility and as a viable player."

"We showed that his is not a black campaign any more. What we get from yesterday is that here is a qualified person running for president who happens to be black."

Asked whether Jackson was really expanding the coalition to a broad base of white voters or whether his support had come mainly from white leftists, Cobble said, "We won Beaumont (Texas). That ain't University of Vermont students with posters of Che Guevara on the wall."

For all of that, Jackson's delegate strength may not come into play at the convention unless Gore, who is considered a more plausible prospect for the nomination, can defeat Dukakis in a major primary.

The Deficit Pony

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leave it to Ronald Reagan to find something good to say about budget deficits.

For decades, Reagan has denounced the big-spending crowd in Washington that he said was dooming future generations to a life of debt and penury.

In his seven years in office, he has promised repeatedly to do something about it and blamed Democrats in Congress for the deficits that nevertheless flourished.

In a recent interview with Lou Cannon of The Washington Post, however, Reagan was reminded of the sizable deficit he will leave behind, and was asked:

"Do you think that this is going to have a negative consequence on the next generations? Is this going to be a real burden for the country?"

Reagan's reply:

"It's a burden. There's no question about that. But ... not the disaster some people proclaim. ... one of the major factors in our budget right now is the interest. But who gets that interest? And you find out then that a great many institutions, universities, educational institutions of all kinds, that part of their endowment are government bonds. And so a lot of that interest is going to them ... (and) to individual Americans ... (as) part of their savings, instead of putting it in the bank or something."

"So, instead of it being something that's just disappearing down a rat hole, it's a kind of a redistribution ... of national wealth in that these institutions and so forth are getting this interest from the government. Now maybe some of them would have to be getting straight grants from the government if they were not getting that interest. So, no, I don't think it's a disaster."

Reagan, still saying that he was "disappointed that we haven't been able to do better" and that "the Congress added to that budget," conceded that his position was "really a reversal of roles" for him.

It sure is.

As the president noted: "Way back before I ever thought I would be governor, when I was just out making speeches on the mashed-potato circuit about things that I thought should be changed ... I was complaining about the fact that, for almost 60 years now, with only eight single-year exceptions, this country has been running a deficit."

It still is running a deficit, but now Reagan calls it a redistribution of wealth.

As the president would say, it reminds one of a story. In fact, one of Reagan's favorite stories.

The story is about two boys, one a pessimist and one an optimist, who are taken to a psychiatrist. He puts the pessimist in a room full of shiny new toys and finds him crying because he's afraid the toys might break. The optimistic child is put in a room with piles of horse manure and is found joyfully exclaiming, "I know there's a pony in here someplace."

It's the same way with deficits. Ronald Reagan always knew there was a pony in there someplace.

Robertson Backers To Keep Fighting In N.C.

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Pat Robertson finished a distant third in the Super Tuesday voting across North Carolina, but his supporters say they plan to stick with their candidate as long as he sticks with the race.
Robertson has vowed to continue his campaign until the Republican national convention this summer. "I'm in it for the long haul," he said.
"That's all I needed to hear," Ed Pitts, Robertson's New Hanover County campaign chairman, told the Wilmington Morning Star. "As long as he doesn't drop out of the race, I'm going to back him And I think most of the other Pat Robertson people feel the same way We plan to support him through the county, the district and the state conventions."
Ed Higgins, chairman of New Hanover County's Republican Party, pointed to Robertson's defiant refusal to withdraw from the race, saying it "confirms mainstream Republicans' suspicions that Robertson and his supporters lack genuine interest in the party."

"He is going to continue to fight on, even though the people don't want him," Higgins said. "It really begins to tell what Pat Robertson is all about. He's not for the Republican Party. He's for Pat Robertson."
Higgins said this is "the telling time" for Robertson supporters who turned out in droves to precinct meetings and prevented many mainstream Republicans from becoming delegates to the county convention.
"Now is the time for those people to come forward and say 'I am for the party' or 'I am not for the party' My position will be that as delegates of New Hanover County, they must represent the wishes of the Republicans of New Hanover County."

Supporters of Vice President George Bush, meanwhile, want an apparent conflict between state law and Republican Party rules clarified.
The party rules require delegates to the national convention to cast 29 votes for Bush and 25 votes for Sen. Bob Dole in the first ballot, based on Tuesday's voting. But delegates would not be bound by the primary outcome on any subsequent ballots under party rules.
Robertson supporters, his so-called Invisible Army, have been jamming precinct meetings to get their delegates selected, hoping Bush won't be selected on the first ballot, so they can push their candidate.
But state law requires delegates from each party to vote in a way that reflects the primary outcome. It makes no distinction between first and subsequent ballots.
A ruling that the state law overrides party rules would benefit the Bush supporters, observers say.

"Evidently, the Invisible Army is about to get axed," said Theodore Arrington, an active Republican and chairman of the political science department at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte.
"I feel like they're attempting to change the rules in mid-stream," said Jon Rawlson, Robertson's deputy national campaign director. "If the state party has the integrity it says it does, they'll abide by the state party rules and not allow the state party rules to be challenged."
State Republican Party Chairman Jack Hawke could not be reached for comment.
Meanwhile, supporters of Albert Gore Jr. claimed his narrow victory in North Carolina demonstrated the wisdom of a regional primary.
"It worked — almost on the money," Wallace Hyde, a key Democratic fund-raiser and co-chairman of Gore's state campaign, said Wednesday. "You definitely came out of it with a moderately conservative candidate."

But Hawke said Gore's failure to win by a comfortable margin showed his appeal was limited. Hawke and other Southern state GOP chairmen launched a coordinated effort to portray Gore as a liberal earlier this year, contending there is no conservative in the Democratic race.
"This is very typical of the Democrats' great ideas," Hawke said. "They end up with unexpected consequences. They could not come up with a candidate who was attractive to Southern voters."
With all 2,387 precincts reporting unofficial returns, Gore had 235,345 votes or 35 percent to 223,207 votes or 33 percent for Jackson. Michael Dukakis finished a distant third with 137,755 votes or 20 percent.
Richard Gephardt had 37,483 votes or 6 percent, Gary Hart 16,450 votes or 2 percent and Paul Simon 8,072 votes or 1 percent

A Raleigh television station, WRAL-TV, reported Wednesday night that a North Carolina Hart organizer said the Colorado Democrat would pull out of the race Friday.
George Breece told the station that "the people have decided and they decided against Gary."
In the Republican race, 100 percent unofficial returns gave Bush 124,028 votes or 45 percent to 109,916 or 40 percent. Robertson was far behind with 26,747 votes or 10 percent and Jack Kemp had 11,374 votes or 4 percent.
Until the results are certified it will be unclear the state's delegates to the Democratic and Republican nominating conventions will be apportioned.
Unofficially, Bush appeared to win 29 delegates, Dole 25 and Robertson and Kemp none. Gore appeared to win 34 convention delegates, Jackson 31, Dukakis 17 and the others none.

Champion Wins New Variance

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Tennessee has agreed to grant Champion International a variance on its water quality standards that will significantly lighten the Pigeon River, but allow the paper mill to continue operating, company and state officials say.
News of the agreement was announced in Canton Wednesday with long, loud whistles from the 80-year old mill, where workers had feared that Tennessee's strict water quality standards might cost them their jobs.
"There have been times during the last few years, and particularly the last few months, when I doubted that I would get the chance to stand here and make this announcement," Champion plant manager Oliver Blackwell said during a press conference attended by dozens of employees and community leaders at the company's volunteer center in downtown Canton.
"For a while, I honestly believed that we would be forced to close this mill," said Blackwell.

Environmental officials in Tennessee have determined 50 color units per million units of water to be the maximum allowed in the Pigeon River, which begins south of Canton and flows into Cocke County, Tenn.

But Champion's proposed permit will allow twice that much color — 100-120 apparent color units, or 85 true color units — and the EPA asked Tennessee to either change its water standards on the river or establish rules for a variance.

The state did that this week, opting for a variance process that will force Champion to meet its 50-unit standard at the end of this five-year permit or again apply for a variance. Champion already has applied for a variance from North Carolina, which must be approved before the wastewater permit is issued by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Statewide Tornado Drills Have Checkered Results

By The Associated Press
Four years after a swath of tornadoes left 44 North Carolina residents dead, officials say apathy about severe weather is resurfacing and warning systems are unreliable.
A statewide tornado drill Wednesday produced checkered results, authorities say.
In Mecklenburg and 11 surrounding counties, the crucial Emergency Broadcast System failed. Authorities said communications between the National Weather Service and a key radio station broke down.
The failure meant most residents of Catawba, Lincoln, Cleveland, Gaston, Cabarrus, Union, Anson, Stanly, Montgomery, Mecklenburg and Richmond counties did not know of Wednesday's drill, said authorities.
Also, two of four aging Charlotte

Civil Defense sirens that would warn thousands of residents that a tornado was imminent didn't sound. Similar problems were reported elsewhere in the state.
Wednesday Severe Weather Awareness Week drill was intended to boost public knowledge of how to survive tornadoes, lightning and flooding.
Instead of waiting for a surprise warning that came at 10:15 a.m. Wednesday, many schools throughout the state staged drills Tuesday or before classes Wednesday, authorities said.
In Charlotte, Ron Kuhn, chief of the National Weather Service office, said the area Emergency Broadcast System was to have been activated at 10:15 a.m. by a weather service call to a local radio station.
A weather service employee made the call, said Kuhn, and a station employee replied, "Got'cha, that's all I need." But the station apparently did not activate a tone to more than 50 area radio and television stations, alerting them to broadcast the tornado warning.

Kuhn said the weather service should have "pursued it and dogged it to make sure (the station) followed up."
But Kuhn said problems are common with the Emergency Broadcast System, which relies on commercial stations to voluntarily broadcast drills and real warnings.
Some commercial radio and television stations object to the system because drills irritate listeners and cost the stations money, said Kuhn.
New station employees sometimes aren't familiar with the system, he said.

PTL Wins Delay On Taxes

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A federal appeals court judge in Richmond, Va. has halted attempts by the Internal Revenue Service to revoke PTL's tax-exempt status.

"PTL has enjoyed a tax-exempt status since May, 1973," wrote 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Judge William Wilkins in his order, filed late Wednesday.

"If it is subsequently determined that the District Court incorrectly reversed the Bankruptcy Court, there is a great likelihood that PTL and those having a financial interest in it will suffer irreparable injury," Wilkins wrote.

Wilkins set a March 31 hearing in Greenville, S.C., where PTL attorneys are expected to argue that loss of its tax-exempt status would be a death blow to PTL. PTL is trying to reorganize itself under the protection of the federal bankruptcy court.

The matter reached Wilkins on appeal from a Monday order by U.S. District Judge Karen Henderson. Ms. Henderson had ruled that the IRS could revoke PTL's tax-exempt status. Her ruling overturned a December order by U.S. Bankruptcy Court Judge Rufus Reynolds.

IN THE STATE

Sentence Upheld

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Supreme Court has upheld the death sentence for a Wake County man convicted of the execution-style slayings of three people, saying the shootings were "especially cold-blooded."

The state's highest court Wednesday unanimously rejected Alton Garner Green's contention that the death penalty had been wrongly applied. Green was convicted following a Feb. 12, 1985, shooting spree at the Chief's Club, located off N.C. 55 near the Wake County town of Apex.

School Merger

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — Opponents of a plan to merge Robeson County's five school systems said they would seek a formal recount today because the margin of victory in a referendum was .01 percent of 22,205 votes cast.

Complete but unofficial totals from the school merger referendum Tuesday showed 11,236 voted for merger, and 10,969 voted against it — a 267-vote margin.

Robeson's five separate systems include a countywide system, and city systems in Lumberton, Fairmont, St. Pauls and Red Springs. The legislative bill which set up the referendum said the merger should be completed by July 1, 1989.

Salaries

BURNSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The Yancey County Board of Commissioners has agreed to a new pay scale for county social services workers after learning that some of the workers nearly qualify for benefits themselves.

A recent study conducted by the North Carolina Office of State Personnel showed Yancey County ranks 100th in entry-level salaries paid to clerical workers, eligibility specialists and directors, and 99th in pay to social workers.

Yancey salaries for beginning clerical workers ($8,916 annually) are barely half what the state pays.

Bankruptcy

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The Waddell Investment Group, whose president was charged last month with illegally diverting more than $1 million from clients, has filed for bankruptcy.

Attorneys for the Chapel Hill firm, which listed assets of about $80,000 and liabilities of nearly $500,000, filed the petition in federal court in Greensboro.

The firm's liabilities do not include money missing from clients, said attorney Robert Epting, a court-appointed receiver who supervised an audit of the firm that began Jan. 22 and resulted in the Feb. 22 arrest of the company's president, Guilford T. Waddell III.

Yacht Plant

WILMINGTON (AP) — The first yacht has rolled off the assembly line at Carver Boat Corp., less than one year after officials announced plans to build the $10 million plant in Pender County.

A 48-foot yacht took the plunge into the Northeast Cape Fear River Tuesday afternoon. The boat isn't finished, but workers hope to put the final touches on the yacht — and the plant, which also has not been completed — in time for a dealers' meeting scheduled later this month, said general manager John Adams.

While the boat is in the river, workers will test the engine and other parts.

The plant, which has more than 200,000 square feet, is on a 40-acre site off N.C. 133, near Rocky Point.

Environmental Issues Frustrating State From Coast To Mountains

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE (AP) — North Carolina draws a lot of praise for its pristine environment, ranging from the sandy beaches of the Outer Banks in the east to the peaks of the Blue Ridge and Great Smoky mountains in the west.

But the Tar Heel state also is faced with what some experts say are an unprecedented number of difficult environmental issues that have frustrated Gov. Jim Martin and swelled the ranks of state environmental groups.

Some of these include the battle between North Carolina and Tennessee over the condition of the Pigeon River, the red tide, the state's efforts to find a site to treat and burn hazardous industrial waste, and opposition to the state's bid to land the $4.4 billion superconducting super collider project.

There's also the controversy over a hazardous waste incinerator in Caldwell County, the state's search for a site to dispose low-level radioactive waste and North Carolina's participation in the Southeast Compact Commission.

"It does seem that a lot of issues have come together at once," said Earl Mac Cormac, Martin's science adviser. "But it's not unique to North Carolina. It's the same in every state because we live in a throwaway society."

Martin recently expressed his frustration over the state's inability to build solid and hazardous waste disposal facilities.

"We're opposed at every turn," Martin said at a Feb. 25 news conference. "Whether it's landfills or incinerators or anything else, nobody wants any kind of facility near them and therefore we're stymied. We've got to get the determination in this state to move forward."

William Holman, a lobbyist for the N.C. Chapter of the Sierra Club and the Conservation Council of North Carolina, disagrees with Martin's assertion that opposition by environmentalists is to blame.

"We need good faith on both sides," Holman said. "In the old days all of the decisions were made by people such as Dr. Mac Cormac. The people were excluded."

"This doesn't happen anymore because people have discovered that their opinion is valuable," he said. "The state needs to include the people in the decision-making process."

Holman agrees with Mac Cormac that there are a large number of environmental issues facing the state. Environmental stories seem to crop up every morning in the newspapers and every night on the television news.

On Feb. 23, for example, North Carolina won an award for the nation's best surface water protection program. Two days later, a new environmental organization backed by a $450,000-a-year budget opened for business.

The new N.C. Environmental Defense Fund will operate with a staff of four professionals out of Raleigh, said its director, Steve Levitas.

"I've been a lobbyist for nine years and as far as I can tell there are more environmental issues on the front burner and the back burners now than any time," said Holman. "We welcome the defense fund."

Holman said part of the reason is the state's increasing population and rapid growth.

"It's also because for many years these issues were neglected," he said. "All of these waste issues were put off and put off and now they've come home."

For his part, Mac Cormac accused some environmental groups with preying on the emotions of the average citizen.

"I would urge the environmentalists to be honest," he said. "They haven't help alleviate the problems."

As an result, Mac Cormac said, the media picks up on misinformation and compounds the problem. He pointed to a recent hearing on the proposed supercolliding super conductor.

"Ninety five of the 100 people there supported it," he said. But the television news zeroed in on the five opponents, he said. "They can't resist using the screaming momma who's afraid her children will be hurt by radiation," he said. "The fact is this facility will put out less radioactivity than sunning on Myrtle Beach."

Holman said there's strong evidence to refute Mac Cormac's claim that environmental groups are the only ones concerned about the state's plans for a hazardous waste treatment facility.

"When the Hazardous Waste Treatment Commission held the hearing in Davidson County (on a proposed site for the facility in the county), 15,000 people showed up to oppose it," he said. "Not a single person from the Sierra Club got up and spoke. The people who organized it were the county commissioners and local businesses."

The prevailing mood, he said, was public mistrust in government officials. "The way it's been done has caused a lot of ill will," he said.

Deborah Parker, chairman of the commission, said this week the panel would tentatively choose at least one site for the plant by March 11. The commission has been searching privately for a site. The public will be told March 25, she said.

Holman said the secrecy surrounding the news is "bound to alienate people."

"This was well manifested in Davidson County when 15,000 people came to say 'We don't think the government is doing enough to protect our health and our environment,'" he said.

One irony, he said, is that most environmentalists support the construction of a hazardous waste facility in the state.

"What we disagree with is the approach the commission has taken," he said. "They've treated it as solely a technical problem that can be fixed after a site is chosen. But it's really a socio-economic-political problem with a technical component."

Another controversy which refuses to die is the environmental impact of the superconducting super collider. North Carolina is still in the running to host the high-energy proton accelerator with an underground oval tunnel about 53 miles in circumference.

Opponents of the federal project say the collider would displace hundreds of families and create few local jobs. They also claim it would use as much electricity as a small city and be one of the state's top five sources of radioactive waste.

One ad hoc group, called Save the Water, has charged the project and the urban boom it would spawn will threaten water in Raleigh and Durham.

"The real issue is the displacement of homeowners, not the degradation of the environment," said Mac Cormac. "We'll win it at the end of the day. The snowball effect won't take place."

Martin is opposed to efforts in the General Assembly to pull the state out of the Southeast Compact Commission — one of nine that have been formed by federal legislation to provide regional solutions to handling low-level radioactive waste.

The Southeast Compact last year picked North Carolina to host the region's next waste facility. It will replace one in Barnwell, S.C., that will close in 1992.

"We're willing to take it," Mac Cormac said. "But we need assurances the other states won't pull out after we've hosted a facility for 19 years."

Holman said there are obvious differences between the hazardous waste treatment plant and the Southeast Compact facility.

"This facility is a dump," he said. "People are always worried about underground facilities because the materials can leak out."

Many environmentalists oppose such regional dumps because they believe it lets the producers of the waste off the hook and places the responsibility of managing the dump on the American taxpayer, he said.

If installing inside window frame, measure width and length. If installing outside window frame, add desired overlap, such as molding width, to inside width. If there is no molding, recommended overlap is 1/4" per side. For example, if you are installing inside a window frame that measures 23 1/2" wide and 56 1/2" long, select the package marked 23" to 23 3/8" wide x 64" long. Blind lengths can be shortened at home.

Reagan Makes Nostalgic Trip Back To Notre Dame, And Blows His Line

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer
SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — For a brief moment, President Reagan was transported back in time — hurling a pigskin to a wide receiver at a sentimental celebration of Notre Dame's Knute Rockne and his own days as a Hollywood star.

"The Gipper" returned to the Notre Dame campus Wednesday to pay tribute to the late football legend and dedicate a 22-cent stamp issued in honor of the coach's 100th birthday.

It was a nostalgic trip into the past for Ronald Reagan, the one-time actor, sports announcer and college football player who clearly reveled in the crowd's friendly applause.

The Notre Dame gathering of students and faculty — including many wearing Roman collars — roared approval as they were treated to clips from Reagan's 1940 film portrayal of Notre Dame football star George Gipp in "Knute Rockne: All American."

The film showed the fresh-faced Reagan, playing Gipp, as he playfully kicked footballs high above the playing field while Pat O'Brien, playing Rockne, persuades him to join the team.

Another clip showed O'Brien, as Rockne, giving a pep talk to his players at halftime of a 1928 game against Army, with both sides scoreless. Gipp had died eight years earlier, but the coach tells his charges that on his deathbed the young athlete said, "Some time when the team is up against it and the breaks are beating the boys, tell them to go out there with all they got and win just one for the Gipper."

Army went ahead in the third quarter, 6-0, but Notre Dame went on to win the game, 12-6. Army was one yard from the tying touchdown as time ran out.

Reagan's supporters adopted the "Win one" phrase during his presidency to help garner support for his programs. And the nickname "the Gipper" has since stuck.

At the end of his speech, the filled-to-capacity crowd was silent as Reagan tried to repeat the lines from Gipp's deathbed scene. Few, however, noticed that Reagan flubbed the line and instead of saying "Gipper," actually pronounced it "Gippet," since his listeners erupted in a joyful cheer at the sentimental moment.

Handed a football, Reagan hurled it towards member of the Notre Dame football team seated strategically near the podium.

Aiming at one young man who held his arms high, Reagan heaved the pigskin — directly, it turned out, at Heisman trophy winner Tim Brown. Again, the crowd roared approval.

Reagan had told his audience that the role of Gipp "was a young actor's dream" but that playing in a film about Rockne "was more than that" to him.

"I know that, to many of you today, Rockne is a revered name, a symbol of greatness and, yes, a face on a postage stamp," he said.

"But my generation, well, we actually knew the legend as it happened — we saw it unfold. And we felt it was saying something important about us as a people and a nation," the 77-year-old president said.

"Most of all, the Rockne legend meant this: ... that on or off the field, it is faith that makes the difference, it is faith that makes great things happen."

Rockne, a graduate of the Roman Catholic college, was its head football coach from 1918 to 1931. He compiled a record of 108 victories, 12 losses and five ties. During his tenure, the Fighting Irish were undefeated in five seasons and won six national championships.

The White House has worked for years to produce picture-perfect events to frame the president as the nation's leader — but few could have been as nostalgic.

"He loved it," said Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng, a 1940 Notre Dame graduate who traveled with Reagan aboard Air Force One.

The Cabinet secretary said Reagan particularly enjoyed tossing the football.

"The president threw a perfect strike," Lyng added with a laugh.

Crash Probed

FORT CAMPBELL, Ky. (AP) — The probe of the collision of two Army Blackhawk helicopters that killed 17 soldiers has found no link to mechanical problems that have grounded the military's UH-60s in recent years, an investigator says.

"I would say now there is no indication of any mechanical factor" in Tuesday night's crash, said Chief Warrant Officer Joe S. Adams, one of three investigators from the Army Safety Center at Fort Rucker, Ala.

"We are looking at human and environmental factors. The human factors might include some restriction of vision," he said Wednesday.

Both pilots were using night-vision goggles, which amplify light from the stars and the moon, allowing pilots to fly undetected at night. Officials said they were trying to determine whether the choppers were flying without lights.

The crash was the worst Army aviation disaster since 248 soldiers, also based at Fort Campbell, died in a chartered plane crash in Canada while returning from a Mideast peacekeeping mission in December 1985.

The 17 died instantly in the collision, the worst ever at the fort in southwestern Kentucky, but eight bodies remained buried under the wreckage for hours, spokesmen said.

'ONE FOR THE GIPPER' — President Reagan is shown in his portrayal of George Gipp in the 1940 movie "Knute Rockne: All American," during his days as an actor. "The Gipper" returned to Notre Dame, where Rockne coached, on Wednesday to pay tribute to the late football coach and to help dedicate a 22-cent stamp issued in honor of Rockne. (AP Laserphoto)

Helicopter Firm To Refund $90 Million

WASHINGTON (AP) — A four-year dispute over allegations that the Army was fraudulently overcharged for helicopter spare parts has been resolved, with Bell Helicopter Textron Inc. agreeing to pay the government $90 million, Pentagon sources say.

The settlement, believed to be the largest of a defense contracting fraud case to date, grew out of findings by Pentagon auditors of numerous accounting and inventory irregularities at the Fort Worth company, the sources said Wednesday night.

A Pentagon official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the settlement is to be announced Friday by federal prosecutors in Fort Worth, Texas. A company statement said, "We believe a settlement is in the offing."

A House committee is conducting its own investigation of the case.

Trio Flees E. Berlin

BERLIN (AP) — Three men in a flatbed truck smashed today through steel barricades blocking Glienicke Bridge in Communist East Berlin and roared over the "bridge of spies" into West Berlin, police said.

The dramatic escape across the bridge made famous by numerous East-West spy exchanges over the years occurred shortly before dawn, said a West Berlin police spokesman.

East German border police apparently did not fire their weapons and the three men fled uninjured, said the spokesman, who asked not to be further identified.

The 7.5-ton truck crashed through two steel gates and an electrified fence on the East Berlin side, raced across the bridge, and smashed through another control gate in West Berlin, police said.

The three men — two of them age 37 and the other 27 — then reported to West Berlin police.

Among the most famous swaps on Glienicke Bridge was the Feb. 10, 1962 exchange by the United States of convicted Soviet KGB master spy Col. Rudolph Abel for Francis Gary Powers, whose U-2 surveillance plane was shot down over the Soviet Union.

Six Died In Soviet Hijack Attempt

MOSCOW (AP) — Armed hijackers threatened to blow up an Aeroflot jet and kill passengers unless they were flown to London, but authorities stormed the plane and at least six people died in a shootout, Soviet media reported today.

Three passengers, a flight attendant and at least two of the hijackers were reported killed as a result of Tuesday's hijacking, the second of a Soviet domestic flight in 1½ years.

The official Tass news agency reported the hijacking attempt the day after it occurred, but an account in today's editions of the Sovetskaya Rossiya daily and reports broadcast by state-run Radio Moscow gave more details.

None of the accounts said who the hijackers were, how many there were, how many passengers were on the plane or whether there were any foreigners among them.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Richard Gilbert said today that the embassy had inquired and been told no Americans were aboard.

The Tupolev-154 jetliner, on a scheduled flight from the Siberian city of Irkutsk to Leningrad, was hijacked after a fueling stop in the Ural Mountains city of Kurgan, Sovetskaya Rossiya said.

The jet, which can carry up to 168 passengers, took off from Kurgan at 1:08 p.m., the paper said. Shortly before 3 p.m., when the plane was nearing Leningrad's Pulkovo airport, a person aboard demanded that senior flight attendant Tamara Zharkaya take a note to the cockpit.

The note said: "We demand that you change course. Fly to London. Otherwise we'll blow up the plane along with the passengers," the newspaper said.

The crew kept calm, it said. Pilot Valentin F. Kupriyanov carefully calculated how much fuel was left, then landed at an unidentified airfield in the Soviet Union.

"After landing, the crew entered into negotiations with the bandits, asking them to give up their criminal intentions and not to endanger passengers' lives," the newspaper said.

But the hijackers refused to listen, it said.

"With every passing minute, they became more aggressive, and started to behave like hooligans in the cabin. The armed bandits threatened to kill passengers. Several hours of negotiations had no result."

"Under these conditions, the only decision that could be taken was to render the criminals harmless," said Sovetskaya Rossiya, indicating the plane had been stormed.

Arabs Say Settlers Attacked

HEBRON, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Soldiers shot and wounded three Palestinians today in a pre-dawn riot that Arabs said was started by gangs of Jewish settlers who shot at Arab homes and vandalized their cars.

Jewish settlers said the clash began after they were awakened by Arab rioters shouting "Slaughter the Jews!" and "God is great!" Fearing the Arabs wanted to attack their homes, some settlers said they rushed into the streets of Hebron and fired warning shots.

But Arab residents said they were awakened at about midnight by carloads of settlers raiding their neighborhoods.

"All the city was sleeping, nobody was in the streets," Mustafa Natsche, the former mayor, told The Associated Press. "It was a dreadful night. There was a sort of battle under the windows of my house, shooting, crying, moaning."

He said the Arabs responded to the attack by throwing rocks at the settlers and Israeli troops who arrived.

But Rabbi Moshe Levinger told the AP, "They (the Arabs) ran down near the synagogue. They wanted to enter Jewish homes. They carried stones. We responded by throwing stones and firing in the air."

The area military commander disputed Levinger's claim.

"It's important to stress that the riots were directed at the army, and at no stage was there an intention or attempt to attack Jewish homes," the commander said on Israel radio. He did not give his name, in keeping with military regulations.

An AP reporter saw dozens of vandalized Arab cars, including a station wagon with all its windows broken. Arab residents showed several revolver cartridges they collected after the clash and said they turned over nearly 100 to the Israeli authorities as evidence.

Levinger, who has lived in Hebron nine years, is one of the founders of the 40-family Beit Hadassah settlement inside the predominantly Arab city of 50,000. There is a second Jewish enclave in Hebron, the hillside neighborhood of Tel Rumayda.

Levinger claimed 500 Arabs were involved in the rioting and came to within about 100 yards of Jewish homes.

Delvalle's Wife Says U.S. Must Be Ready For Military Action

By WILLIAM BRANIGAN
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

PANAMA CITY, Panama — The wife of ousted president Eric Arturo Delvalle has sent a message to the Reagan administration asking the United States to be prepared to intervene militarily in Panama if her husband requests it.

In an interview Wednesday, Mariela Delvalle said she had asked two U.S. congressmen who visited her Saturday to pass the oral message on to Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

She said her husband, whom the United States still recognizes as Panama's legitimate president, would request U.S. military intervention only as a "last resort" if the situation in Panama deteriorated badly or if the country were about to become "another Nicaragua."

Mariela Delvalle said she made the appeal on her husband's behalf to Reps. Alan B. Mollohan, D-W. Va., and John P. Murtha, D-Pa. She said Delvalle, who has been in hiding since Feb. 27, is working indirectly with opposition leaders on forming a new "national reconciliation" cabinet, whose members are to be announced shortly.

She asserted that under strongman Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, who ousted Delvalle as president Feb. 26, leftists in the military-controlled government were gaining the upper hand and Panama was veering toward communism.

"We are going to wait until the last moment, until we see that we are losing the country," Mariela Delvalle said. Then, the United States "should intervene at the moment that we ask for it." She said her message to Shultz stressed that the U.S. government "should start thinking about" military intervention and making the necessary consultations and preparations.

In the event that Delvalle requests U.S. military help in getting rid of Noriega, she said, "We want you to be ready. We don't want to wait for days, because a country doesn't wait for days. You just simply lose it, and you'll be having another Nicaragua here."

President Reagan has publicly ruled out military intervention to get rid of Noriega, and U.S. officials have ridiculed a Panamanian government charge yesterday that American military maneuvers under way here are preparations for an invasion.

She said she did not know when such intervention might be called for or how the plea was received, but added, "I hope he (Shultz) is doing something about it."

Speaking on condition that the site of the interview not be disclosed, Mariela Delvalle said she had been telephoning Latin American leaders this week on behalf of her husband to explain Panama's situation and appeal for political support.

She said she spoke Monday to presidents Oscar Arias Sanchez of Costa Rica, Raul Alfonsin of Argentina, Jose Napoleon Duarte of El Salvador and Vinicio Cerezo of Guatemala.

She said she had urged the leaders to support U.S. moves against Noriega, but had not been able to persuade any of them that American military intervention might be necessary.

She said she told Arias, who won the 1987 Nobel Peace Prize for his Central American peace plan, that "we wouldn't like an intervention; we would like to solve our problems alone." She said she added, however, that "in case we need the United States to intervene," Arias should help get other Latin American countries behind the move or risk having "communist" countries on both his northern and southern borders. Mariela Delvalle said Arias replied "that the Latin American countries would do whatever was necessary."

She added, "I don't know what he meant by that."

In his growing conflict with Washington, Noriega has fought back by making overtures to such countries as the Soviet Union and Libya. In Latin America, only Cuba and Nicaragua have expressed support for Noriega.

ON MANEUVERS — Members of the U.S. Army's 193rd Brigade check their weapons during military exercises Wednesday in Panama named "Total Warrior."

Panama's foreign minister has charged that the maneuvers are a prelude to U.S. military action in Panama. (AP Laserphoto)

Iraq Offers Cease Fire

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraq fired its 50th long-range missile into Tehran today and then President Saddam Hussein offered to halt the so-called "war of the cities" if Iran does.

But he warned in a Baghdad Radio broadcast, monitored in Nicosia, that Iraq will go on pounding Iranian cities with missiles and air raids if Iran continues to hit population centers, launch ground offensives or attack "any Arab city."

Iran said some civilians were killed in the latest attacks. Iraq fired two long-range missiles into the Iranian capital, raising to 50 the number it claims to have shot into Tehran in 11 days.

The missile attack was in retaliation for an overnight Iranian artillery attack on the southern Iraqi port of city of Basra and nearby Qurna, Baghdad's official Iraqi News Agency reported.

The agency, monitored in Nicosia, said "a number of civilians" were killed in Basra and Qurna. Qurna is 40 miles north of Basra.

Zoning Plan Eyed

directly across from the hospital is a good business decision.

"I don't think it's very wise to open a flower shop out there," said Marie Cox, the owner of Cox Flower service.

"It's too busy and congested out there. Also, I think by the time people go out there to visit somebody that's sick, I think they've already ordered flowers," she said.

Ms. Cox said she doesn't think there will be many more requests for commercial development near the hospital.

"Visitors to the hospital are going there because someone is sick, they're just not going out there for a pleasure trip. They're already broken hearted, most of them, and they're not going to go out and visit shops around there. That's my opinion," she said.

Ms. Cox said she believes the council should have followed the lead of the Planning and Zoning Commission, which unanimously recommended that council deny the request of Clyde Simmons to allow flower shops as permitted uses in the stringent, medically related MD-2 zoning district.

"I think they should have followed whatever they told them to do. These people work at that. They don't get paid for that. They go in there and they study these things. They know more than we know — they better, at least. They get the insight," she said.

Ms. Cox said she was not angered at the council's decision to let flower shops exist in the MD-2 district. She said the first mistake made in the matter was to let lawyers and real estate agents in the district.

"If you're going to let in one, then let somebody else," she said.

Wallace Woole, chairman of the Planning and Zoning Commission, said he was disappointed in the council's decision.

"These people went around campaigning (that) they would preserve the medical district and, at the first opportunity, they open it up for commercialization," he said.

Jail Plan Accepted

— "How can adequate space be provided for parking?"

— "How will future county office space fit into a master plan?"

— "What facilities should be constructed immediately?"

— And "What facilities should be constructed in 1995 ... in 2000?"

Recommendations for short-range solutions for some of the problems — some of which are already in the process of being carried out — include: the continued use of the satellite jail and the jails in Farmville, Ayden and Bethel; the implementation of an in-house medical plan for treating prisoners, and the installation of security lights in all jail cells and a security glass panel to allow jailers to observe attorney-client visitation in the attorney-client room.

Other short-range measures: speed up the process of transferring prisoners to state prisons once sentence has been imposed; improve ventilation and install a device to exhaust smoke in the event of a fire; move fire hoses out of the jail chase area to make them more accessible to jailers; purchase and install adequate chemical fire extinguishers; improve security by installing additional closed-circuit television monitors; provide additional storage space for jail use, and explore a policy not to accept inmates when the jail is at maximum capacity.

Commissioner Kenneth Dews, who presented the jail committee study, said "there are many other aspects we will have to go into. There are a lot of things to be studied before we get down to building a new jail." But he urged the board to adopt the report, including the schedule.

In addition to adopting the study committee's recommendations, commissioners also asked County Manager Kramer Jackson to contact city of Greenville officials about the possibility of using the old city jail.

The 24-cell city jail, on the fourth floor of city hall, was closed a number of years ago and is now used for storage.

Jackson, who reported that there was "a 50 per cent increase in jail population from 1984 to 1987," said this morning that the cost of a new jail would depend on "how much we do."

Suggesting that modern jails cost in the neighborhood of $30,000 per cell, Jackson said a 160-cell jail could cost in the neighborhood of $4.8 million. "If it's a jail and law enforcement center," Jackson predicted, "it could cost close to $6 million."

Board

In other business, the board agreed not to rent the 59.6-acre county farm near Bells Fork for $20 per acre — the only bid received. Instead, the board agreed to participate in a federal grain set-aside program that would pay the county $3,462.

Dr. James Carter, Charles H. Gaskins, Kelly Barnhill and Mark Suggs were appointed to three-year terms on the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees, while Glynnis Jones, Marie Neal and Patrice Alexander were reappointed to the Community Based Alternatives Juvenile Task Force and Palmyra Leahy and Grace Carraway were given first-time appointments to the task force.

Commissioners also adopted a resolution naming March as Red Cross Month in Pitt County and approved awarding a contract — for $2,000 — to L.E. Wooten Co. to prepare a Community Development Block Grant program application.

Shell

continued good growth of this county."

Chaffee said that more than 500,000 square feet of industrial space in Pitt County has been sold or leased during the past three years, and suggested that "we could have been even more successful" had other suitable space been available when contacted by companies seeking new locations.

Armani Has Smash Triumph

By LEONORA DODSWORTH
AP Fashion Writer

MILAN, Italy (AP) — The fashion king of Milan, Giorgio the Gorgeous, achieved the impossible and bettered his own best.

Armani's fall-winter collection, shown Wednesday, was a power house of ideas. He showed the tiniest jackets, cropping them just above the waist. Sleeves were long and tight. The definitely marked the demise of wide armholes and overly-padded shoulders.

Always a jacket specialist, he offered more new shapes than ever before. The choice ranged from a jacket that was raised in front and dipped at the back. Then there was the one with the soft cowl neckline and yet another that sported a side-zipped bandolier in matching fabric.

Pants were plentiful. They came cuffless in smooth wools, falling loosely from unpressed waist pleats. He also showed some Bermuda shorts and accompanied them with the thigh-high suede wader boots that have been a main feature of these Milan shows.

There were lots of different hat shapes, ranging from a coal miner's cap to a broad-brimmed, flat-crowned felt of the sort that Clint Eastwood usually favors in his cowboy movies.

Fabrics, designed thread by thread by Armani the perfectionist, were superb.

Laura Biagiotti, the designer who lives and works out of a medieval castle nestled in the countryside outside Rome, showed styles that were perfect for an elegant castle dweller.

There were soft cashmere "horse blankets," ideal for keeping out the chill along the ramparts. They wrapped up comfy sweater-dresses, oversized twinsets or slim-fitting pants, all in flat knit.

Daytime colors were rustic: oatmeal, moss-green and maize. And there was moderation in the details with a more natural shoulderline, flat-heeled footwear and skirt-lengths just a fraction above the knee.

Biagiotti took Paisley-patterned fringed head scarves in fine wool and fashioned them into wraparound skirts and did an attractive series of that fashion indispensable — the ever-popular little black dress in velvet or silk crepe.

On a completely different wavelength was the baby doll look of the collection designed by Muriel Grateau for Comptee. Models, with elfin hairdos, wore short, high-waisted styles with tight-fitting bodices and jauntily gathered skirts.

A brand-new girlish look for coats in double wool crepe featured a shoulder-framing cape collar and a broad martingale belt that tied tightly in a bow at the waist in back.

Party dresses came in the same style with waist gathers transferred to just under the bust while mini-skirts were decorated with frills and ribbon cockades.

Almost all the clothes at Comptee came in a rich Titian red, lace-up shoes and stockings included.

There is a certain style that the Italian designers have always done beautifully: understated but elegant tailored blazers, well-cut pants and loose top coats in men's-type smooth wools.

It is a look that is timeless and unbeatable, and the women of Milan love it. Basile did it for them again, tucking pants into the newly fashionable winter boots and putting velvet on collars for an even more well-bred air.

Thankless Gift Leaves Bitterness

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Well, another Christmas has passed, and with it remains the hurt of receiving no acknowledgment from a few friends and relatives for gifts carefully selected, wrapped and given with love.

The biggest disappointment was from our daughter and her family. My husband and I provided a vacation for the four of them at a cost of several thousand dollars, and we did not even receive a note of thanks. We did, however, hear that they thoroughly enjoyed the trip.

Our children were always taught to say "thank you" for any gift, large or small. Our two sons always graciously remember us with prompt thank-yous.

When our will is read, I hope my daughter will realize that the trip she and her family took in 1987 was her "inheritance". And to the others who failed to send a simple thank-you, you have had your last fruitcake. — BITTERSWEET PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: Failing to acknowledge a gift of any kind may be rude, thoughtless and inexcusable, but it is not unforgivable. Assuming that you and your husband gave your daughter and her family a lovely vacation because you wanted them to have it, knowing that they enjoyed it should have made your gift well worth the investment.

But to punish your daughter by "disinheriting" her is, I think, tantamount to bringing down a fly with a cannon.

Please reconsider such vengeful retaliation.

DEAR ABBY: I have been a frequent blood donor for many years. I consider it a privilege and wish to continue. Because of the AIDS crisis, my friend of many years has expressed concern that I could be exposing both of us to danger.

I am personally convinced that the equipment used in the donation process is new, sterile and safe, but realize that I must consider his life as well as my own.

What can you tell us that will help us arrive at a decision that will be comfortable for us both and give the maximum amount of security? — WANTS TO BE A DONOR, EXCELSIOR SPRINGS, MO.

DEAR WANTS: Blood donors are in no danger of being exposed to the AIDS virus, because the only blood they come in contact with is THEIR OWN, and only sterile equipment is used to collect it.

DEAR ABBY: I was a heavy smoker for 20 years, but I quit 11 years ago. All of us non-smokers must be more verbal to the smokers, as I doubt that they ever read anti-smoking literature. I didn't, because the truth hurts.

I would like to propose an anti-smoking campaign of billboard messages that just might reach the smokers. The message would say: "EDUCATED PEOPLE DO NOT SMOKE." This, to me, has more impact than: "SMOKERS GET CANCER."

If the American Cancer Society would start a special fund for these billboards, I will be the first to contribute.

What do you say, Abby? — JEANINNE DRAKE, ST. CHARLES, MO.

DEAR JEANINNE: The billboard idea is good, but your anti-smoking message, "EDUCATED PEOPLE DO NOT SMOKE," is not only offensive, it's untrue. There are educated people who smoke up a storm. An addiction is no respecter of education.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding hearing aids: The sign in my audiologist's office says it all: "Your hearing loss is far more obvious to everyone else than your hearing aid will be!" — W.W.H. IN ATLANTA

Danish AF May Take In Women Fighter Pilots

By FRANK POWLEY
Associated Press Writer

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Katrine Hvitved, a 16-year-old high school student, wrote an irate letter to a newspaper complaining that Danish air force discriminates against women and keeps her from fulfilling her dream of flying an F-16 jetfighter.

But the air force has told her, maybe not.

"I would like to be a pilot, but can't be one in the military," she wrote to the newspaper Jyllands-Posten. "It's unjust!"

Two weeks later, Defense Minister Bernt Collet replied to Katrine in a letter to the same newspaper saying an air force policy of keeping women from piloting military planes is under review and likely to change.

Women are accepted in Denmark's armed forces but they cannot fly planes.

Katrine, who specializes in science and mathematics at school, said by telephone from her home in the port city of Aalborg she was delighted with Collet's response.

"I've been crazy about jet planes for years and enjoy visiting air force bases."

But she added that she still has a problem.

"My parents would rather I stayed on the ground."

Nevertheless, she's decided to join a parachutist's club.

Last year the military began a study women pilots. Based mainly on the experiences of other NATO countries, the report is expected to be submitted to a parliamentary committee for action later this year.

"The military chiefs seem to be very positive towards the proposal," said Maj. Benny Hansen of the air force, the Defense Ministry official who deals with personnel.

A decision to allow women into flight training would be in keeping with military policy laid down in 1980 of equal rights in all branches of the armed forces, Hansen added. Experiments since 1980 placing women in combat units have proven successful, Hansen said.

"The military hasn't noticed any weakening of fighting strength in combat units with women in them."

A total of 844 women, including 58 officers, were serving in all armed forces branches as of June last year, the date of the latest available statistics. They were in field units in the infantry, the tank corps, surface-to-air missile squadrons and base patrol duties.

The navy has five women officers and 99 sailors. They serve on inspection vessels, corvettes and torpedo boats. But they aren't on submarines, where quarters are too close.

Hansen said he sees no problems for women as helicopter or transport plane pilots. But experts are still concerned about how women would stand up to the extreme gravitational forces experienced by pilots of supersonic jets.

G-stress and speed and precision of reaction were problems for male fighter pilots, too, Hansen said.

In Denmark, aspiring combat pilots go to a two-year civilian flight school supervised by the military before being sent to United States for advanced training.

"Female pilot trainees will face the same physical and psychological demands that men do, and there will be no lowering of standards to get women in," Hansen said.

Texture Updates Sweater

The happy news in sweatering for '88 is that the classics are back — stronger than ever. And the use of new yarn textures is adding up-to-the-minute excitement. A perfect example is this timely sweater best designed to be knit in a crimped acrylic yarn with contrasting "nubs." The yarn gives the link of colored popcorns randomly scatter through the pattern, with no extra-fancy stitchery on your part.

Highly versatile, it can be worn as a vest during the cooler months or alone as a comfy sleeveless sweater when the weather warms up. Large needles and a beginner-easy pattern stitch with a minimum of shaping guarantee a super-quick finish.

The gauge is 3 1/2 stitches to the inch and directors are given for petite, small, medium and large sized with finished bust measurements of 34, 36, 38 and 40 inches respectively.

To obtain directions for knitting the Quick and Easy Vest, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-030688 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Pat's Pointers Pat Trexler

Or you may order Kit No. K-030688 by sending a check of money order for $24.95 for petite and small or $30.95 for medium and large to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price included shipping charges, instruction leaflet and white crimped acrylic yarn with pastel highlights.

Dear Readers: To see just how much fun pattern stitchery can be, try your hand at the pattern stitch used in the featured sweater vest. For your sample swatch, use any yarn you have on hand even though the effect will not be the same if you work with a smooth yarn rather than the quick-knit nubby yarn the sweater is designed for.

Begin casting on any uneven number of stitches and work four rows of stockinette stitch, beginning with a purl row. The odd-numbered rows will be the right side of your work.

On Row 5, knit the first and last stitches of the row in the usual way. On all other stitches, knit every stitch, but wrap yarn twice around the needle for each stitch instead of just once as you normally would.

On Row 6, purl all stitches, dropping the extra wrap off the needle as you work across the row. Hold the needle level and puff the work sharply to even up the stitches.

Repeat these six rows over and over for the pattern. After you have worked three or four repeats of the pattern, you will see what a lovely, light and airy pattern stitch you have created with very little effort.

Dear Pat: The cast-on edges of my ribbings always look bumpy and uneven. Can you suggest any way to overcome this? — R. Moore, Loveland, Colo.

Dear R: An easy solution is to cast your stitches very snugly on a needle two or three sized larger than your plan to use the ribbing. Then simply switch to the correct size for the first and following rows of ribbing. This will give a neat finish to the cast-on edge.

If you wish to go a step further, the next suggestion is a bit more trouble, but gives a finer finish and greater elasticity. Instead of ribbing the first row, knit in the back of every cast-on stitch; start your ribbing pattern with the second row.

Children Express Feelings

At Wits End Erma Bombeck

When I was a child I always wondered when was a good time to talk. You couldn't do it in school, at the table, in the car, in church, in bed, or when someone else was talking. I think I was 15 or so before I realized my name wasn't "Shhhh."

Today in this column is a good time for children to talk. A Mr. Bernagozzi who teaches the third grade in a school in New York puts out a class newspaper every month, and his students have some interesting things to say.

When asked if they were Christopher Columbus's mom or dad, what are some of the things they'd tell him before he left on his voyage, they answered:

"Don't fall overboard ... be nice to the Indians ... take a bath once a month ... put on new clothes before you land ... don't fall off the edge of the world ... don't hog all the food at dinner ... wash your hands before eating ... don't forget to write ... put on suntan lotion ... don't fool around with the steering wheel and bring back gold for us." (The only thing they missed was "Go to the you-know-where before you leave home.")

When asked what they would tell him if he was still alive, one child wrote, "You don't have to go around the world now for spices or jewels or silk. You can go to Macy's and the malls to get what you need."

Given one wish, another child wrote, "I wish that I could go to the nursing home and make everyone feel better. I know that people in the nursing home used to be teachers and nurses and have other important jobs. I would want them all to be well again."

And another, "I wish for the whole world to stop being bad. There would be no more crimes like killing and stealing. People would get along together everywhere."

They talk about their ambitions to "be a famous artist when I grow up. I'll sell my pictures for $99. They will be in stores and museums."

They talk about what they think freedom is. "It means I'm free to walk around my neighborhood in shorts and eat bananas when I feel like it." About how to cook a turkey they wrote: "First you take off the paper." There's even a resident third-grade critic who reviewed the Broadway musical "Starlight Express" with the following comment: "Once you understand it is about a railroad race, there isn't much more to the story."

Mr. Bernagozzi is a wise teacher to listen once in a while instead of talking. Maybe this country should have been as wise when 11 children from the United States, Poland, Finland, West Germany, Japan, Afghanistan and Switzerland asked to meet with President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev during their meeting last year. They bore messages of peace from 230,000 children throughout the world. They were refused. A 13-year-old West German girl, Claudia Thorun, said, "We just wanted to tell them we want to be so old like Mr. Reagan and Mr. Gorbachev."

I have never heard of a better reason for peace.

Training

Area residents with radios that monitor police, fire and rescue calls were wondering what was going on Wednesday.

They heard of such things as a fire in a high-rise building, a fire in a nursing home, a propane gas truck burning in a Greenville subdivision. And a number of them called the fire-rescue department and police for additional information.

But the radio calls were simulated emergencies being used to train dispatchers who will be on duty when the city moves to a combined police-fire-rescue central dispatch system on Monday.

Fire-Rescue Department Chief Jenness Allen said the simulated emergencies were being used because that's the best way to train dispatchers.

AG Up 17-0 After 1st Quarter

Chargers Stun Jags, 63-54

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

WILLIAMSTON — Perhaps Farmville Central coach Mike Terrell summed it up best: "It was like March, and Ayden-Grifton came out like a lion and we came out like a lamb."

Terrell was referring to a 17-0 hole that his Eastern Plains Conference champion Jaguars dug for themselves in the first period of the 2-A Sectional Basketball Tournament game against the Chargers Wednesday night.

Farmville never overcame that hole and suffered a 63-54 upset at the hands of the Chargers, who now advance to the sectional finals, to be played Saturday night.

Ayden-Grifton will meet the winner of tonight's game between Ahoskie and Greene Central Saturday at 8 p.m. at Williamston.

Terrell watched his Jaguars missed all 10 shots they managed from the floor in the first quarter and as they turned the ball over six times, wondering just what went wrong.

"I don't know what happened," he said. "Ayden-Grifton came out excited and played great defense at the start. They were ready and we weren't quite into it. We dug ourselves a real deep hole to have to climb out of and we spent all night trying to climb out. We got close, but then we dug another one at the start of the second half and came back again and just ran out of gas."

The Jaguars closed the gap to as little as six in the second quarter, saw Ayden-Grifton go back out by 15 again, then closed it to four with 1:23 to play, only to not score again.

"I knew that the lead wouldn't hold up," Ayden-Grifton coach Bob Murphrey said of the big first period spread. "Early leads like that throw your game plan off. They came out flat and we were doing good things at both ends of the court."

"We were real aggressive," Murphrey added. "I think that's as good a defense as we've played this year. We were helping in all the right places."

Murphrey said that in the first two meetings of the two, in regular season play, he felt that his Chargers "gave up" on the Jaguars after falling behind. "But this time it was a question of mental toughness. We fought off every rally they had and I'm proud of that. Without our guard (the injured Eric Blount) we could have blown it, but our inside players came through for us and played great."

Murphrey was referring to Leon Dixon, who scored 18 points and Aaron Harper who added 15. Then, Ronnell Peterson was outside, inside and all around, scoring 19 points and dishing off a number of assists. Peterson would drive to the basket, get double teamed and pass off to a teammate for an easy basket.

The big men also shut down Farmville Central's big man, Jarvis Lang, holding him to just two points on the night.

"The difference is that they are so strong inside," Terrell said. "They just muscle us off the boards and get the second and third shots. We are more of a finesse team." Ayden-Grifton held a strong 46-34 edge in rebounding — and that included a five-rebound swing back to Farmville in the final period.

Like a lion, the Chargers clawed their way out into a 17-0 lead in the first period as the lamb-like Jaguars were totally helpless during the period. Peterson got things going with a baseline jumper and Harper followed from underneath. Dixon then scored five straight points before Harper sandwiched two baskets around a couple of more by Dixon for the 17-0 edge.

Farmville finally broke the ice 29 seconds into the second period when Alexander Daniels hit on a layup. Daniels added another before Ayden-Grifton scored again.

After a couple of exchanges of baskets, Farmville ran off seven in a row to trim the lead to 22-15, then added a 5-point run in the late stages to cut the lead to 28-22. Both teams scored once more to make it 30-24 at halftime.

But Ayden-Grifton opened the third quarter with nine in a row, five by Peterson and four by Harper, upping the lead to 39-24. Farmville outhit the Chargers, 12-5 the rest of the quarter, but still trailed, 44-36, as the last quarter got underway.

Dixon scored four points and James Woodard added a basket as Ayden-Grifton opened the lead to 12 again, 52-40, but the Chargers got two 3-point baskets from George Burnette to help them rally once more to chip the lead back to just four points, 58-54 with 1:23 to go.

The Jaguars fouled Harper with 38 seconds to go, and the strategy worked — he missed. However, Peterson came up with the rebound and was fouled, making both shots. The Jaguars turned it over and Peterson again was fouled and again made both with 14 seconds to go. The foul had been ruled intentional and the Chargers also took the ball out of bounds and one second later, Peterson was back on the line, making the first of two to make it 63-54.

And just to show that their luck was running bad, the Jaguars missed three practically uncontested shots in the final seconds.

"I never thought that we would not come back and win it," Terrell said. "We respected them, but maybe they just wanted it more than we did."

"We're not in Fayetteville yet," Murphrey said, in reference to the regional finals, "but I feel good about avenging those two losses in the regular season. And I've never been prouder of a group of guys like I am with these guys."

Farmville's offense was led by Daniels, who scored 14, while Tyrone Joyner had 13 and Reggie Barrett had 11.

Farmville closes its year at 20-5.

By winning, Ayden-Grifton is also assured of a berth in Tuesday's regional preliminary. The winner of Saturday's championship game will be a host team for the preliminary, while the loser must go on the road.

North Pitt Is
54-47 Winner

WILLIAMSTON — North Pitt's Pant-Hers rallied in the second half and came away with a 54-47 victory over Plymouth in the semifinals of the 2-A Basketball Sectional Tournament in Williamston Wednesday night.

The victory boosts the Pant-Hers, now 17-7, into Saturday night's championship game against the winner of tonight's contest between South Lenoir and Charles B. Aycock — ensuring an all-Eastern Plains finale.

Plymouth, the last remaining team from the Northeastern Conference, jumped out to a 17-12 lead in the opening quarter of the ball game. North Pitt was able to start gaining control of the game in the second period, outscoring the Valkyries, 8-5, but the Pant-Hers still trailed at halftime, 22-20.

The third period, however, saw the Pant-Hers move ahead for good. They outscored Plymouth, 14-5, taking command of the game, 34-27. Both teams pushed through 20 points in the final quarter but North Pitt never lost the lead the remainder of the game.

Keisha Pilgreen led North Pitt's offense with 22 points while Gwen Pilgreen added 18 and Amy Heath scored 10.

Tracy Hyman led Plymouth with 19 points while Paula Owens contributed 18.

North Pitt's win also ensures it of playing in the regional preliminary on Tuesday. Both finalists advance with the winner getting a home court advantage.

Dickens Back With Deacs

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

A trip to the hospital and a little negotiation over his rigorous class schedule was enough to lure Alan Dickens back to the basketball court for Wake Forest this season.

Dickens, a first-year medical student, had watched the Demon Deacons defeat North Carolina-Wilmington on Feb. 3, and he went to the hospital the next day to talk to two of Coach Bob Staak's players. Tony Black was already there recuperating from an injury, and Darcie Keys went in after being injured the previous night against the Seahawks. That brought to four the number of Wake Forest basketball players sidelined because of injuries this year.

Then, during the hospital visit, Dickens ran into one of Staak's assistants, Jeff Capel.

"We just started talking about it back and forth. I decided to go see Coach Staak," he said.

Dickens gained some national attention two years ago when he walked off his church league team and onto the Demon Deacon squad after a rash of injuries left Staak's bench thin. His performances were good enough to earn him a scholarship for his senior year, where he hit 50 percent of his field goals in 29 games, although he averaged just 2.9 points per game.

All this came while the Greenville native was preparing for Bowman Gray School of Medicine. Now, in the midst of his first year of medical school, Dickens has come back to Staak's rescue, but with a different set of priorities.

"He bent a little and I bent a little," Dickens said.

This term, Dickens is enrolled in five classes covering 23 credit hours. That's where the negotiations came in, and one of the terms was that Dickens would be able to skip practice if a big exam was upcoming.

The whole idea of playing Atlantic Coast Conference basketball, this time while trying to become a doctor, has given Dickens a different perspective on college life.

"It's a little different than last year. College is difficult and everything, but it pales in comparison to this in terms of the difficulty level," Dickens said. "The one thing I've really had to do the last couple of weeks that I've been playing is, when I'm off the court, I don't think about basketball at all. I think about medicine."

"As soon as I get to practice, I just try to switch over, change modes and just start trying to remember the plays I'd forgotten over the summer," he said.

Dickens didn't play basketball this summer, choosing to chase a golf ball instead. He admits that he's had to play his way back into shape, although his season will end with this weekend's Atlantic Coast Conference tournament.

With the increased load, Dickens says he's had to plan more carefully if he's to meet the responsibilities on and off the court.

"When I get the chance to study, I really try to concentrate hard," he said. "I try to study in the morning if I have a break in between classes, stay up a little later the night before the test."

There were no aspirations to be a star when he first joined the Wake Forest team, and nothing has changed. He wants to be a doctor, and maybe someday he'll be treating the injuries which have indirectly led to his ACC career.

"I can be, maybe not the best at both, but fairly good at both things," Dickens said.

"The toughest thing in the Big Ten is the game after a tough, physical game. It's hard to play well in that situation," he said.

As for the chance of Ohio State, 16-11, receiving an NCAA bid, Williams said, "The NCAA selection committee has a tough job. It'll be the greatest thing in the world if we make it, but I won't be disappointed if we don't."

Tournaments

A bench-clearing scuffle at the end of the first half marred Fairleigh Dickinson's 94-84 victory over Long Island in the semifinals of the ECAC Metro. Four separate altercations broke out, including two involving FDU's Charlie Roberts. Officials, coaches and security personnel needed four minutes to restore order.

When the teams returned for the second half, the officials levied three technicals against each team. Roberts sank six free throws for Fairleigh Dickinson, 22-6, and Glenn Daniels did the same for Long Island.

ECAC Metro Commissioner Chris Monasch visited both locker rooms and told players that any more fights would result in immediate ejections and suspensions for the tournament's title game on Thursday.

That game will match FDU against Monmouth, which beat St. Francis, N.Y., 61-48.

In the Western Athletic Conference, Reggie Cross scored 27 points and Chris Gaines added 23 as Hawaii defeated Air Force 84-76. Hawaii's reward: a date with host Brigham Young, the top seed and the nation's 17th-ranked team.

The Big Sky playoffs began with Weber State edging Nevada-Reno 96-93 in overtime and Montana beating Northern Arizona 77-72 at Bozeman, Mont. The quarterfinals tonight pit Weber State against Idaho State, while Montana takes on Montana State.

Weber State guard Timmy Gibbs drove the right side of the lane, drew a foul and scored with five seconds remaining, breaking a 93-93 tie.

"He just beat the defender to the glass and laid it in," Coach Larry Farmer said. "It was a great play."

At Denton, Texas, the Southland Conference tournament began with Northeast Louisiana downing Texas-Arlington 78-63 and North Texas State beating McNeese State 82-61. The winners meet tonight for the NCAA bid.

Derrick Pollard scored the first six points of a 19-5 spurt early in the second half, sparking Northeast Louisiana, 21-7.

Tony Worrell had 16 points as regular-season champion North Texas State whipped McNeese State, which had four players foul out.

In the Pacific Coast Athletic Association tourney at the Forum in Inglewood, Calif., Fullerton State took Fresno State 73-59 as Henry Turner and Richard Morton scored 26 points apiece. In the other contest, San Jose beat Pacific 76-60. It Pacific's 22nd consecutive loss.

Regular Season

Illinois, 21-9 after its seventh victory in eight games, registered its third straight victory over a ranked team as Ken Battle and Nick Anderson scored 25 points each. The Illini beat Indiana and Iowa in previous games.

Boston Arms Seem Improved

By The Associated Press
Despite the presence of Roger Clemens, the Boston Red Sox pitching staff last season could have been described as "Arms and the Man."

Clemens won his second straight Cy Young Award but the rest of the Boston staff, with the possible exception of 15-game winner Bruce Hurst, was just a bunch of arms.

No pitching staff in baseball allowed more than the 1,584 hits surrendered by the Red Sox and only the hapless Baltimore Orioles and Cleveland Indians had higher staff ERAs than Boston's 4.77.

Obviously, there is plenty of room for improvement — and so far it's there.

"The pitching has been very encouraging. Sellers threw the ball very well, and so did Lynch," Manager John McNamara said Wednesday after Jeff Sellers, Ed Lynch and three young pitchers combined for a four-hitter as the Red Sox edged the Chicago White Sox 2-1. Boston pitchers have allowed only 13 runs this spring for a sparkling 2.72 ERA.

McNamara was more impressed than Sellers, Boston's No. 4 starter, and Lynch, a major-league veteran but a non-roster pitcher who is bidding to become No. 5.

"It was all right," said Sellers, who allowed one hit, walked two and struck out one in three scoreless innings. "I didn't throw great, but I felt it was decent."

Lynch, who was 2-9 with the Chicago Cubs last year, did even better, retiring all nine batters he faced.

Lady Pack Is Beaten

BURLINGTON — Southern Durham High School took an early lead and powered to a 43-30 victory over Washington in the girls' 3-A Sectional Basketball Tournament Wednesday night.

Southern Durham posted a 15-4 lead in the opening period and it was all over after that. Washington came back with a 10-9 advantage in the second quarter, but still trailed 24-14 at intermission.

The two teams both pushed through 10 points in the third quarter, raising the score to 34-24. Southern then outthit Washington, 9-6, in the final period to wrap it up.

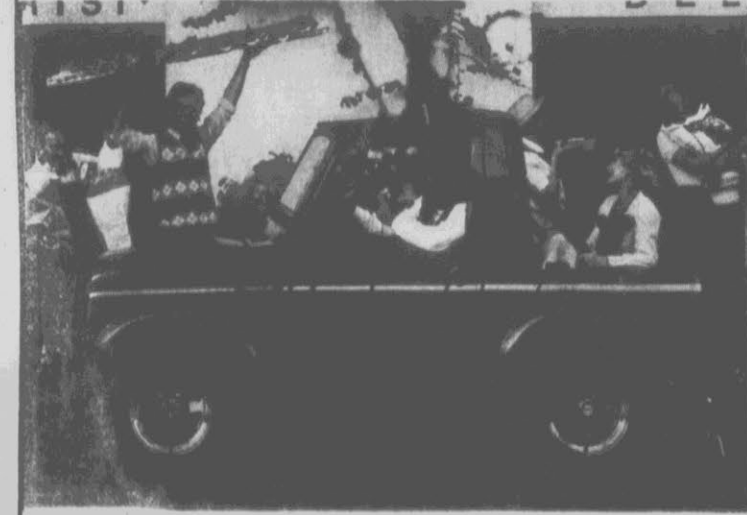

Connie Small led a balanced Southern attack with 14 points while Doris Kelly added 13 and Melinda Woods had 11. Tonya Holley had 10 points to lead Washington.

The Lady Pam Pack closes out the season at 20-5 while Southern, 20-3, advances to the sectional finals on Saturday.

"Every time I go out there is like the seventh game of the World Series for me," the 32-year-old Lynch said. "I have to pitch well every time I get the chance here. This is not a training camp for me. I have to pitch in midseason form."

Last Friday, Lynch limited Detroit to one tainted run in three innings.

"I think I may have thrown better my first time out, but I can't argue with the results today," Lynch said. "This is what I have to do every time I pitch. I have to get people out."

The best throwing of the day, however, belonged to Boston left fielder Carlos Quintana, who threw out two baserunners in the eighth inning — Tim Lulett at third and Ozzie Guillen at home.

While the winless White Sox were dropping their fourth game, the unbeaten Los Angeles Dodgers made it six in a row by edging the Cincinnati Reds 6-5. Dave Anderson's RBI single capped a two-run rally in the eighth inning.

The New York Mets made news on and off the field. They pounded out 19 hits — only seven fewer than the combined total in their first four games — and trounced the Baltimore Orioles 11-6 for their first exhibition victory. Mark Carreon went 4-for-5, including a double and home run.

All the hitting took place following a closed-door meeting that produced an uneasy truce with Darryl Strawberry a day after the outfielder blamed Manager Dave Johnson and some teammates for the club's problems last year.

"I don't think anybody likes to have derogatory things said about them," said Johnson, Strawberry's prime target. "But I don't want to drag this out and make it any bigger than it is."

In the April issue of Esquire magazine, Strawberry charged that Gary

Carter and Keith Hernandez "quit" last season, had some uncomplimentary comments about Wally Backman and Len Dykstra and said the Mets would have won 120 games with Whitey Herzog as the manager.

Meanwhile, the world champion Minnesota Twins split their squad and won two games. One group nipped the Kansas City Royals 6-5 when Sal Butera drew a bases-loaded walk off Luis Aquino in the bottom of the ninth inning. Tom Brunansky hit a three-run homer to give the Twins a 4-1 lead but the Royals scored three times off relief ace Jeff Reardon, making his spring debut, to tie it.

The other Twins beat the Detroit Tigers 10-7 as Kent Hrbek drove in three runs and Detroit ace Jack Morris was called for three of the game's six balks. Morris gave up six runs and nine hits in three innings. Gary Pettis and Pedro Chavez homered for Detroit.

Cardinals 3, Blue Jays 1

Mike Laga's 11th-inning single following an error by Toronto shortstop Kelly Gruber on a potential inning-ending double play grounder snapped a 1-1 tie after three pitchers limited St. Louis to six hits over the first 10 innings. Toronto starter Dave Stieb went four scoreless innings and allowed two hits.

Athletics 7, Giants 5

Oakland's Mark McGwire hit a pair of home runs, including a tape-measure blast over the center-field fence, giving him four homers in the last three games. He hit a solo homer off Mike Krukow in the second inning and a three-run shot off Craig Leferts in the ninth, a towering drive that cleared the 30-foot-high fence 430 feet from home plate.

Leferts told a friend outside the Giants' clubhouse afterward: "I'll be out in about 20 minutes. I'm icing my arm, my head and my neck."

Chocowinity Is In The Finals

CHOCOWINITY — Chocowinity High School's girls' basketball team moved into the finals of the 1-A Sectional Tournament Saturday night with a 64-48 win over fellow Tobacco Belt Conference member Bath Wednesday night.

Chocowinity will play Gates County, a 57-54 winner over Belhaven, for the championship of the sectional on Saturday at 7 p.m. at Edenton High School.

Both teams, however, have already assured themselves of berths in the preliminary regionals next Tuesday but a home court advantage will be at stake.

Chocowinity jumped off early and sped out to an 18-8 lead in the opening quarter of the game. They continued to control the contest in the second quarter, although Bath did manage to hold them to only a 14-13 advantage. That left the Lady Indians up, 32-21, at the half.

The Tribe continued to pull away in the third period, 14-10, boosting its lead to 46-31. Then, despite the fact that leading scorer Druscilla Crawford fouled out with six minutes left, the Indians outscored Bath, 18-17, to wrap it up.

Crawford finished with 23 points to lead Chocowinity while China Grice had 15 and Wendy Dixon had 11. Stephanie Satchell led Bath with 19 while Robin Satchell added 16.

Chocowinity is now 22-1 on the season.

The Indian boys play tonight at Gates County for the right to move into the sectional finals of their division.

Another thing you can count on is Brody's for Men. You will receive the finest selection of quality merchandise and the best service in Eastern North Carolina.

Padres 9, Brewers 2
San Diego pitchers Eric Nolte, Candy Sierra and Dave Leiper combined for 13 strikeouts, including six in four innings by Sierra. The Padres went ahead to stay with three runs off Chris Bosio in the second inning, including Chris Brown's RBI single and Mark Parent's run-scoring triple.

Yankees 10, Rangers 3
Newly acquired veteran Jose Cruz hit the Yankees' first home run of the exhibition season and Mike Pagliarulo added a two-run shot. Pagliarulo also had an RBI double. New York starter John Candelaria allowed an unearned run in three innings.

Phillies 4, Pirates 3

Darren Daulton's two-run triple keyed Philadelphia's four-run fourth inning against rookie Stan Fansler. Bill Dawley, a non-roster pitcher who was 5-8 with two saves and a 4.47 ERA for St. Louis last season, allowed one hit in three scoreless innings.

Astros 4, Expos 1

Rafael Ramirez sparked a two-run sixth inning with a run-scoring triple as Houston snapped a three-game losing streak.

Braves 6, Expos 2

Gerald Perry drove in a pair of runs with a fifth-inning double to power Atlanta over a split Montreal squad. Atlanta starter Rick Mahler pitched three scoreless innings, allowing two hits.

Cubs 1, Angels 0

Rick Sutcliffe, Jay Baller, Drew Hall and Jeff Pico combined for a seven-hit shutout as the Cubs won for the fifth time in six spring games and lowered their team ERA to 2.89. Sutcliffe, who allowed five hits in five innings, hasn't yielded a run in eight innings this spring. The Cubs scored in the seventh inning off Donnie Moore on singles by Wade Rowdon, Doug Dascenzo and Darrin Jackson.

Mariners 11, Indians 5

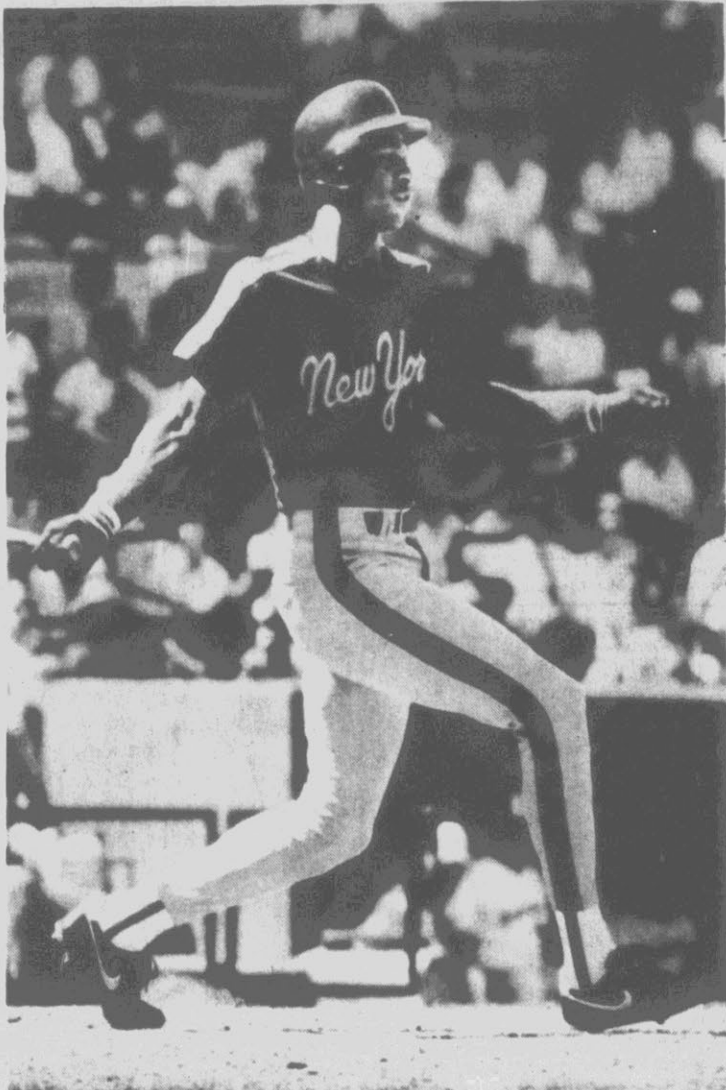

Brick Smith went 4-for-4 with two doubles and a home run. Smith drove in the first run with a sacrifice fly in the first inning and put Seattle ahead to stay in the second with a run-scoring double off Andy Ghelfi. He doubled again in a six-run sixth inning and homered in the seventh. Eddie Williams, Randy Washington and Ron Washington homered for Cleveland.

To The Sports Editor:

I would like to comment on the article by Tom Morris in the Feb. 28 Reflector entitled "Hart Defining ECU Athletic Goals." In the article Mr. Morris states that the only successful non-revenue sports in recent years have been track and baseball.

This is obviously a very poorly researched statement. If someone had done his homework two other sports would of emerged on top. The men's and women's swim team have been a tremendous credit to ECU. After looking through their media guide I find that the men have had winning seasons 17 out of the last 20, plus a conference championship in 1986. The women have posted a 54 win 21 loss record over the past six year, by far the best record of any of the women's sports at ECU.

Let's peek in the POOL once in a while.

Bethea Named To Second Team All-CAA

Alma Bethea of East Carolina University's women's basketball team has been selected to the Colonial Athletic Association's all-conference second team.

The awards were presented Wednesday night at a banquet to kick off the women's CAA basketball championship tournament which begins tonight. James Madison's Sheila Moorman was named as the coach of the year for the third straight time, while JMU's Sydney Beasley was selected as the player of the year.

Bethea was the leading scorer and rebounder for the Pirates this year, hitting 13.3 points a game and 8.7 rebounds an outing.

East Carolina plays George Mason in the tournament opener at 5 p.m. at American University's Bender Arena tonight.

East Carolina Baseball Rained Out

East Carolina University's baseball game at Coastal Carolina College in Conway, S.C., was rained out Wednesday.

The Pirates return to action in Greenville on Friday morning at 11 a.m., hosting Fairleigh Dickinson-Madison at Harrington Field. They will also play Virginia Commonwealth at 3 p.m.

East Carolina is 9-2 on the year, having won eight straight games.

Strange Tries To Recover His Game

CORAL SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — Curtis Strange, who was at the peak of the PGA Tour in 1987, now is trying to find his way out of a valley.

"It's a bit slow," Strange said. "There are times when you don't play as well as you'd like to. This is one of them."

Strange won three titles and a record-setting $925,941 last year. This season, he hasn't even come close to winning and ranks 50th on the money list.

"There are so many ups and downs in this game. There are ups and downs in a single round. And there are ups and downs over a period of time," said Strange, who hoped to change his luck when he began play today in the first round of the $700,000 Honda Classic golf tournament.

"I got to playing poorly at the end of '87. I got into some bad habits, and I'm still trying to work my way out of them," Strange said. "It's just something you go through."

"When you're working your way out of it, a slump or bad play or whatever you want to call it, you get to thinking about mechanics and you forget what the game is all about — scoring."

"You might play a pretty good round, but because you're not thinking about getting the ball in the hole, you don't score very well. That's what I'm going through right now."

"But I think it's coming around. Maybe not this week, maybe not next, but pretty soon. I'm very optimistic about it. You have to be. When you're playing bad, you have to keep a positive attitude."

Strange, 33, plans a heavy playing schedule to avoid a repeat of his 1986 season. He was golf's leading money-winner in 1985 only to drop to 32nd the following year. He came back for another money-winning title last season.

"Maybe it's enthusiasm," Strange said. "You have a good year and you come out the next season and the drive and enthusiasm just isn't there. That can happen."

"But that's not my problem this year. At the start of the year, I was ready to go, eager to go, lots of enthusiasm. It just hasn't happened."

"I want to get it going. And to do it, I have to work my way out of it. I have to play my way out of it. I can't do it at home," he said.

So Strange, who has played six of the eight tournaments held so far, will miss only one between now and May.

"In the game of golf, you just can't stay on top every week, every tournament. But if you believe in yourself, if you're good enough, if you're willing to work at it, it'll all come back."

In the Honda, he faces a 144-man field that includes defending champion Mark Calcavecchia, Sandy Lyle of Scotland and Bernhard Langer of West Germany.

Other major figures in the chase for a $126,000 first prize are Paul Azinger, John Mahaffey, Payne Stewart, Andy Bean, Mark McCumber and Steve Pate, the only two-time winner on the Tour this season.

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by NBC.

Packer Says Anyone Can Win NCAA

Billy Packer is a man of many opinions. Just don't ask him to predict the outcome of the NCAA basketball tournament.

The CBS commentator thinks the 64-team tournament will be the most wide-open in history.

"I think there are 50 teams that can win a game," Packer said. "That means you can only throw out 14 teams. It used to be more like half."

Packer and Brent Musburger will be the No. 1 announcing team for CBS' extensive tournament coverage, which starts with a first-round game next Thursday night.

CBS will televise 47 hours of tournament action, including a record 10 hours of prime-time coverage that will climax with the championship game from Kansas City, Mo., on April 4.

While Packer is reluctant to predict the Final Four, he says the four top-ranked teams — Temple, Purdue, Arizona and Oklahoma — have what it takes to win a national championship.

"You look at recent history and there's a few things that stand out," Packer said. "One, you need an established backcourt. Two, you need experience. Three, you must have enough power so you can't be dominated on the boards. And finally, you have to be a threat with the 3-point shot."

"When you analyze Temple, Purdue, Arizona and Oklahoma, they have all of those elements."

The tournament is the first under CBS' new three-year, $166 million postseason basketball contract with the NCAA. The event has grown tremendously since CBS began televising it in 1982, when a three-year deal was worth only $48 million.

The rapid growth of the sport has led to some abuses and scandals, but Packer feels the overall effect has been positive.

"The game has changed, and all for the better," he said. "The quality of players is better and the quality of coaches is better."

Injured Bird Still Dangerous

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

Dennis Johnson, having one of his worst seasons, is still dangerous at crunch time. Larry Bird, with a broken nose and a broken eye socket, is still dangerous anytime.

Johnson, with a career-low 41.5 shooting percentage and a 12.5 scoring average that is the lowest since his rookie year of 1977, had six points, two offensive rebounds and a victory-clinching blocked shot in the final 1:13 Wednesday night. The performance carried the Boston Celtics to a 119-118 victory over the San Antonio Spurs.

"DJ saved us at the end," said Bird, who had 36 points and 13 rebounds while wearing goggles for the first time in his career to protect his eye.

"He always has been better in the clutch than in the regular flow of the game," Spurs Coach Bob Weiss said of Johnson, a five-time All-Star.

Bird said the goggles "bothered me throughout the game, but if I get hit there again it could mean surgery."

"If Larry has blurred vision and sees two hoops he's twice as dangerous," Weiss said.

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Washington 115, Phoenix 111; Cleveland 117, Milwaukee 91; Detroit 103, Utah 98; the Los Angeles Lakers 104, New York 99; New Jersey 97, the Los Angeles Clippers 93; and Seattle 106, Sacramento 97.

San Antonio scored 10 consecutive points to pull ahead 116-113 with 1:31 left before Johnson hit a jumper with 1:13 left and a layup with 56 seconds to go for a 117-116 Boston lead.

Mike Mitchell, who led the Spurs with 20 points, then sank a jumper with 37 seconds remaining, but Johnson rebounded a missed 3-pointer by Bird and was fouled after rebounding his own missed follow shot.

"On that (second) rebound he must have jumped about four feet off the ground," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said. "It's hard to catch your breath after a play like that and I thought about calling time to give him some rest."

After making both foul shots to give Boston a 119-118 lead, Johnson then blocked a jumper by Jon Sundvold with two seconds left and Bird retrieved the ball before time expired.

"The Celtics do things like that to win ballgames," Sundvold said. "Most other teams probably would have stood around and watched. Boston was covering everything."

Johnson finished with 16 points, 11 assists, six rebounds, four steals and just one turnover.

Kevin McHale added 21 points for the Celtics, who played without center Robert Parish because of a lower back strain.

The Celtics set an NBA record by taking 21 3-point shots, breaking New Jersey's mark of 20 in a 118-106 loss to the Spurs on Feb. 2. Danny Ainge made four of his 12 3-pointers, giving him 261 attempts for the season, breaking the NBA mark of 257 set by Utah's Darrell Griffith in 1985.

Lakers 104, Knicks 99
Los Angeles snapped New York's 13-game home winning streak as Magic Johnson had 26 points, 14 rebounds and nine assists to help Coach Pat Riley win his 400th NBA game.

Mychal Thompson scored eight of his 10 points during a 17-7 run in the first 7:42 of the fourth quarter, turning an 80-78 deficit into a 95-87 lead for the Lakers.

Byron Scott added 22 points for the Lakers, who have won four straight and 21 of their last 23 for an NBA-best record of 49-10. The Knicks were led by Mark Jackson with 17 points and 13 assists.

Bullets 115, Suns 111
Washington won its seventh straight game and pulled 1½ games ahead of New York in the Eastern Conference playoff race as Moses Malone scored eight of his game-high 24 points in the final four minutes.

The Bullets led 91-77 after three quarters, but Phoenix rallied for a 100-97 advantage with 4:29 remaining. John Williams' layup cut the lead to one point and Malone made a pair of free throws to put the Bullets ahead to stay with 3:18 left as Phoenix went almost four minutes without a field goal.

Bernard King, playing for the first time since Feb. 22, scored 21 points. Jeff Hornacek led the Suns with 15.

Pistons 103, Jazz 98
Detroit snapped Utah's five-game winning streak as Bill Laimbeer scored 21 of his 27 points in the first half.

The Jazz outscored Detroit 15-4 in the first 6:40 of the fourth quarter, closing to 87-86 on a 3-point field goal by John Stockton. But consecutive baskets by Isiah Thomas capped an 8-0 spurt and gave Detroit, which led by 23 points in the third quarter, a 95-86 lead with three minutes left.

Thomas scored 20 points and Rick Mahorn 17 for Detroit. Karl Malone had 26, Stockton 25 and Thurl Bailey 20 for the Jazz.

Cavaliers 117, Bucks 91
Ron Harper scored 23 points and Brad Daugherty 20 as Cleveland ended a six-game losing streak.

The Cavaliers scored the final seven points of the second quarter, the last four by Craig Ehlo, to lead 56-44 at halftime. Milwaukee got no closer than nine after that and the Cavaliers clinched it with a 15-2 run near the end of the third quarter for a 90-65 lead.

It was the Cavaliers' first victory since acquiring Larry Nance and Mike Sanders from Phoenix on Feb. 25. Nance started and scored 15 points and Sanders added nine off the bench.

Terry Cummings scored 22 and Jerry Reynolds had 18 for Milwaukee.

Nets 97, Clippers 93
New Jersey, 3-26 on the road this season, won its second road game in three tries under new coach Willis Reed, limiting Los Angeles to 32 points in the second half.

John Bagley scored 10 of his 24 points in the final six minutes for the Nets, who also got 21 points from Otis Birdsong.

It was the fifth straight defeat and 19th in 21 games for the Clippers, who were led by Benoit Benjamin's 23 points.

Leading 61-43 at halftime, the Clippers went without a field goal in the first 4:46 of the fourth quarter, and Roy Hinson's long jumper with 7:32 left tied the score 79-79. Bagley then hit a long jumper, a pair of free throws, a 3-point field goal and a layup to highlight a 13-4 run that gave New Jersey its biggest lead, 92-87, with 2:38 to play.

Sonics 106, Kings 97
Dale Ellis scored 24 points and Seattle hit 24 of 25 free throw attempts against Sacramento.

The Sonics, who never trailed, held their biggest lead at 25-14 with 2:07 left in the first quarter.

Sacramento, which got 27 points and 10 rebounds from Otis Thorpe, pulled within one point three times in the final quarter, the last time with 7:42 left when Seattle held an 88-87 advantage.

Two players share the big league record for most times hitting for the cycle. They were Bob Meusel and Babe Herman, each of whom did it three times.

The Kings hit only 61 percent of its free throws, with Kenny Smith missing seven of eight.

ACC Fervor Is Undiminished

By The Associated Press
The Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament is 35 years old this week and ACC basketball fervor hasn't diminished since the first tournament was staged in Raleigh in March 1954.

Practice in the tournament starts today at the Greensboro Coliseum, site of the 1988 tournament. Wake Forest, Georgia Tech, Maryland, Clemson and Duke will engage in practice at Greensboro. North Carolina, North Carolina State and Virginia decided to stay at home for the practice day.

Tournament play starts Friday at noon with top seed North Carolina facing No. 8 Wake Forest. At 2 p.m., fourth-seed Georgia Tech faces No. 5 Maryland. The night schedule starts at 7 p.m. with second-seed North Carolina State facing No. 7 Clemson. At 9 p.m., third-seed Duke faces sixth-seed Virginia.

The tournament is more than a showcase for conference teams — it offers four nationally-ranked teams a chance to build momentum before the NCAA playoffs begin next week. Duke is ranked No. 8, North Carolina is No. 9, North Carolina State is No. 11 and Georgia Tech is No. 18.

The pressure of the early decades of the tournament has passed. In the years before the NCAA tournament field expanded from 24 to 32 teams and ultimately to 64 teams, the ACC tournament exacted a toll on its players. If regular season winners were beatene in the tournament, they lost an NCAA berth; tournament champions often didn't have the emotional reserves to be at their best in the national competition.

"It was most unfair," said former North Carolina and South Carolina coach Frank McGuire. "Every regular-season game was murderous, then you had to play the tournament in Raleigh, which was not exactly a neutral court. It was so tough, because if you lost, you had to pack your bags."

"In those days, all the athletic directors were football men who didn't understand the pressures of basketball. They didn't listen to me or any other basketball people. It was criminal that we had to beat Wake four times in 1957 (including the tournament semifinals). It was only because we had a great player, Len Rosenbluth, who hit a great shot at the end, that we won 61-59."

The modern tournament may be an anti-climax for all but a few, but the financial payoff, boosted by television, is rewarding.

There are other rewards, as well:
— For TV fans, a three-day feast.
— For the 15,000-odd ticket holders, social status of the first order.

— For every coach who ever suffered gastric distress and every 20-year-old who ever misfired on a jump shot because of too much adrenaline pounding through his arteries, a set of vivid impressions that somehow survived the burnout of the tournament experience.

Berger Tops Wilander

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Jay Berger ousted top seed Mats Wilander of Sweden in the second round of the $415,000 Du Pont Classic.

In other matches Israel's Amos Mansdorf beat the fourth-seeded Boris Becker, of West Germany, Soviet Andrei Chesnokov rallied to eliminate the fifth-seeded Andres Gomez, of Ecuador, second-seeded Miloslav Mecir of Czechoslovakia beat countryman Tomas Smid to become the only player among the top four seeds to advance to the quarterfinals.

Also advancing were Argentina's Martin Jaite, Aaron Krickstein of Grosse Point, Mich., and David Pate of Las Vegas.

Some of those who played and coached in the tournament in the 1950s, '60s and '70s were seared by the intense pressure. And when they consider what the tournament has become in the 1980s, it's hard for them to conceal a macho pride in having come through such a draining experience.

"People today talk about the pressure of trying to make the NCAA field of 64, but it's nothing like it used to be in the ACC tournament," Jeff Mullins, a Duke star of the mid-1960s who is now coach of UNC-Charlotte, told The News and Observer of Raleigh.

"It was a tremendous teacher of what tournament basketball is all about, and the lessons carried over into my pro playing career and my career as a coach. When we got upset my sophomore year on a long jumper by Clemson's Jim Brennan, I vowed never to let that sort of thing happen to me again. I never wanted anyone else to get close enough to us to hurt us at the end."

Vic Bubas, who coached Mullins at Duke and is now commissioner of the Sun Belt Conference, said he never experienced anything as draining as the ACC tournament.

"You knew you would see three teams that would probably hold the ball against you, and that's hard to endure for three nights," he said. "So I always felt you had to do all you could just to get ready for the ACC tournament and let the NCAA tournament take care of itself. I never gave the NCAA a thought until after the ACC tournament."

"Of course, it's a lot different now. Coaches can experiment late in the regular season when they are sure they are going to be in the NCAA field. They can fool around with different combinations and offensive sets. You can get away with things today that you couldn't way back then."

The week when it all began, Kentucky was No. 1 in the national wire service polls, followed by Indiana. Duke was 11th, State 18th.

There wasn't a lot of pre-tournament hype.

When the teams arrived in Raleigh on Wednesday, they were greeted by a short article in the sports section of the newspaper, along with a photo of Duke's Ronnie Mayer and Joe Belmont. Mayer, at 6 feet 4, was the team's leading rebounder.

State's Everett Case, who had been influential in the withdrawal of seven teams from the Southern Conference, leading to the formation of the ACC a year earlier, attended what was headlined as a "peace parley" with Carolina's McGuire in Chapel Hill.

Feelings were strained after a regular-season game when McGuire criticized Case for using a full-court press for the purpose of trading fouls and thinning out the Tar Heel bench.

Case called McGuire "a crybaby," but when the men met over a breakfast of ham and eggs at the Carolina Inn, a truce was reached. "I hope a fellow is allowed to blow his stack now and then, but I also hope Everett and I can be good friends," McGuire said.

In fact, they were, McGuire said recently. "After I signed a new contract, Everett, who worked without one, asked me what I got," McGuire said. "I told him what I received, and he then asked for the same things."

No one could have asked for more from the first round of the tournament:

Wake Forest, with Dickie Hemric scoring 21 points, beat South Carolina 58-57 in overtime, prompting this press account: "The first game of the ACC tournament came within a whisker of providing one of the biggest upsets in championship tournament play in 20 years."

Virginia, despite getting 42 points from Buzz Wilkinson, lost to Duke, and Maryland pounded Clemson.

State beat Carolina 52-51 despite stalling tactics by the Tar Heels. A newspaper photo showed officials watching with folded arms. Fans booed, and one observer fretted about folks staying home to watch TV if slowdowns couldn't be eliminated.

State and Wake won their semifinal games, setting up a rematch of the 1953 Southern Conference final. Wake had won the preceding year to end a Wolfpack streak of 20 consecutive tournament victories and six straight conference titles. But this time, Ronnie Shavlik and Mel Thompson led State to an 82-80 overtime win, giving Case his first ACC championship banner.

Lefty Driesell, who played for Duke in the first tournament and later coached at Maryland for 17 years, wasn't a fan of the tournament, but he accepted the terms.

"We (Maryland) were in the finals more often and won more tournament games than anybody except North Carolina," he said. We lost the final game five or six times before we won it. It wasn't fair, but it was a fact of life. If you lost, you went to the NIT. That was just the way it was."

The world is different now, more equitable in its treatment of ACC teams who don't win the tournament. With the expanded NCAA field, four or five ACC teams have another tomorrow even though there's still just one ACC tourney champ.

What the ACC tournament and its brethren have become, in the eyes of Bubas, are unofficial first-round NCAA tourney games.

"The way I see it, the NCAA tournament now has 245 teams in it, because that's the number of teams in conferences with their own tournaments," Bubas said.

"In effect, we have a completely open NCAA tournament. You can't get much more motivation than that. How motivated do you think Wake Forest would be if they got to the ACC tournament finals?"

Darryl Says Flap Over

MIAMI (AP) — The New York Mets need Darryl Strawberry's big bat in the lineup but want him to keep his big mouth shut.

"There are too many distractions as it is," Mets Manager Davey Johnson said Wednesday. "But that's life in the Big Apple."

Strawberry created another storm of controversy this week by criticizing Johnson and several teammates, blaming them for the team's failure last season. He claimed catcher Gary Carter and first baseman Keith Hernandez "quit" during the pennant race and that Johnson cost the club games.

Wally Backman and Len Dykstra were also the targets of uncomplimentary remarks by Strawberry.

Strawberry's attack appeared in a story about him in the April edition of Esquire magazine. An advance copy of the magazine showed up in the Mets clubhouse on Tuesday and set off a shouting match between Strawberry and Dykstra.

The Mets met for 20 minutes behind closed doors Wednesday morning at their spring training camp in Port St. Lucie, Fla., before driving four hours to Miami for an exhibition game against Baltimore.

Strawberry, who said Tuesday that his views were misrepresented, offered no comment Wednesday.

"It's over" is all Strawberry said.

The Mets, beset by injuries and off-the-field squabbles last season when they failed to repeat as World Series champions, seemed anxious to forget this latest incident. But they did not appear ready to forgive Strawberry.

"I don't think anybody likes to have derogatory things said about them," Johnson said. "But I don't want to drag this out and make it any bigger than it is."

Of Johnson, Strawberry said, "I always wonder how many games this team would have won if Whitey was managing." Asked playfully how well Whitey Herzog, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, would have done with the Mets last year, Johnson said, "Whitey would have won 120 games."

This season, the Mets came to camp healthy and ready to overtake the Cardinals in the National League East. They have been made the favorites, and had hoped to avoid just the kind of confrontation Strawberry sparked.

The Mets, however, have seen this before from Strawberry. For all his talent, he is prone to saying things and doing things that come back to haunt him, prompting some teammates to call him immature.

"He's a moody guy," said Carter, who did not attend the morning meeting. "He says one thing one day, another thing on another. That's Darryl."

"I know myself. I've proved myself," Carter said, responding to Strawberry's remarks that he stopped playing hard during last September's race. "But it's history as far as I'm concerned."

Strawberry and Johnson, whose off-season and spring have been interrupted by reports that he is a lame-duck manager, have had several disputes in the past. There was a highly publicized incident in Game 6 of the 1986 World Series when Johnson removed Strawberry for a pinch hitter.

Johnson fined Strawberry twice during spring training last year and the All-Star outfielder was fined again last month for missing a team photo session.

In the Esquire story, Strawberry said Johnson had one set of rules for him and pitcher Ron Darling, and another set for the rest of the team. Strawberry also charged that Johnson made managerial moves last year that had the team wondering what was going on.

"You don't like to see these things happen," Johnson said. "I've never made it a practice to criticize players and I don't think others should, either."

'Mr. Marathon' Semple Passes Away At Age 84

BOSTON (AP) — John Duncan "Jock" Semple was a tireless worker and colorful character who earned his "Mr. Marathon" nickname by virtue of 58 years as a runner, coach and organizer for the Boston Marathon, his friends said.

Semple, a Scot by birth who never lost his accent, died Wednesday in a Peabody, Mass., nursing home of cancer at the age of 84.

Friends and sports acquaintances praised Semple's dedication to the Boston Marathon, which he first completed in 1929, and to the city's professional sports scene as a therapist for basketball's Celtics and hockey's Bruins.

"He was a major factor throughout the years — and a wonderful guy," said Will Cloney, marathon director from 1946 to 1982. "He divided his loyalties among the Boston Athletic Association and the Boston Garden. He was always involved."

Semple was best remembered for a confrontation with runner Katherine Switzer, who tried to run in the 1967 marathon when women still were banned. After spotting Switzer, Semple hopped off the press bus, ran after her and tried to tear off her entry number.

The incident was credited with helping to get official sanction for women marathoners in the 1970s. It was a cause Semple supported, but not at the expense of rules.

"Once the rule was adjusted and women were allowed in the race, Jock was one of their staunchest supporters," said Marjaa Bakker, administrator of the Boston Athletic Association, which organizes the marathon. "He was very progressive."

Semple was born in Glasgow, Scotland, on Oct. 26, 1903, and began running at the age of 15 for the Clydesdale Harriers, a running club in Clydesdale, where he grew up. He emigrated to the United States in 1923 and worked as a cabinetmaker in Philadelphia before moving to Boston in 1930.

He ran in his first American marathon in 1926. He finished in the top 10 in the Boston Marathon seven times but had his greatest impact on the 26-mile, 385-yard event as an administrator.

"He was really the protector of the marathon as we moved from one era to another up to the present," current marathon director Guy Morse said.

Semple for years was official registrar for the race, which has grown from about 150 entrants immediately after World War II to nearly 7,000 today. He personally took calls from participants and often paid air fare for athletes to come to Boston.

Sutton Glad To Be Back With The Dodgers Again

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Thomas Wolfe said you can't go home again. Don Sutton hasn't exactly gone home, but he has gone back to the organization where his professional baseball career began 23 years ago.

"I don't consider the ballpark home, the ballpark is where I do my job," Sutton said Wednesday at the Los Angeles Dodgers' spring training complex. "Let's just say I've come back to my alma mater. It's nice to be back here where it all started."

"I grew up here as a pitcher. This is where I got my start. I walked in here with 200 other minor leaguers in 1965."

Sutton, who turns 43 two days before the 1988 baseball season opens, was a minor leaguer for only one season. He began what has turned out to be a brilliant big-league career in 1966 with the Dodgers.

And now, 22 years later, he's back with the Dodgers, the team with which he figures to end his career. It's been a career which almost certainly will land him in the Hall of Fame someday.

Sutton will start the year with 321 big-league wins, the 11th-highest total in baseball history. He has accomplished that despite having only one 20-win season.

He ranks high in several other career categories, and has a fine lifetime earned-run average of 3.25 in 5,194 1/3 innings.

Sutton left the Dodgers following the 1980 season, when he was 13-5 with a 2.21 ERA, when he was unable to agree to contract terms with the club. Since then, he has played for Houston, Milwaukee, Oakland and California.

The Angels released him shortly after he went 11-11 with a 4.70 ERA last season, and the Dodgers signed him with the understanding that he'd be a starter for them in 1988.

He said he expected the Angels to release him, and didn't harbor any bad feelings about the move.

"They said they were going to go with younger pitchers and wished me well," he said. "I certainly wish that for them. I spent two wonderful years there."

"I've never played at a place where I didn't come away with wonderful memories and good friends."

Sutton admitted that before last winter, he figured the years he spent with the Dodgers would remain memories, and nothing more.

"It never made sense (to rejoin the Dodgers)," Sutton said. "They always had (Fernando) Valenzuela and (Orel) Hershiser and (Bob) Welch and some fine young kids. When Welch was traded (to Oakland during the off-season), that opened a spot."

"Of all the options that were available, this was the best thing that could have happened. After I signed, I got calls from three other teams I had been talking to. They all wished me well."

When he left the Dodgers, Sutton was the team's career victory leader with 230. It's a record he still holds, and one he hopes will be increased significantly before he leaves the organization and the game for good.

"The given for me is I'll be allowed to make my starts, not screw up, keep the team in the games I pitch," he said. "That'll enable them to bring the kids along a little slower here than maybe they'd have to if I wasn't here."

"I've been blessed with the fact that I've never been injured," he said. "I believe if a guy keeps himself in shape, stays healthy, there's a spot."

"One thing that helps is I've always considered it a job, and I enjoy my work. I think I work harder at it now. Staying in shape is a year-round job. The winter has actually been my spring training. Getting in shape and refining skills are two different things."

"The time and the circumstances and my effort plus not being injured have all combined to keep me around."

Sutton said he hasn't set a retirement date.

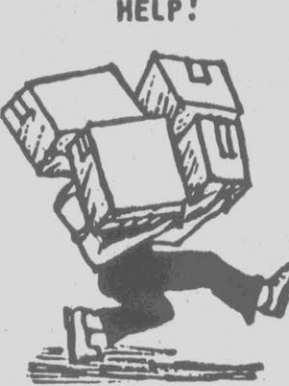

"I've painted myself into corners before that I've had to unpaint," he said. "If I reach a point where I'm going to embarrass myself, I'll get out. I think I'll know it before anyone else."

Sutton didn't blink when asked how he feels about possibly making the Hall of Fame after he retires.

"I hear a lot of guys say if it happens, it happens," he said. "It's been one of the greatest motivators I've had to continue to play."

"Ever since I heard there was one, I wanted to make it. I never wanted to be the flashiest, the best paid, or the best liked. It pleases me to see the numbers I've put up. I came to the park to do my job, and I have."

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how senators of local interest were recorded on major roll call votes last week. There were no recorded votes in the House.

The Senate failed, 53 for and 41 against, to achieve the 60 votes needed to end a Republican filibuster against legislation to change the way congressional campaigns are financed.

This victory for the GOP minority appeared to shelve the long-pending bill (S-2) for the rest of the year.

Drafted by Democrats, the bill limits political action committee (PAC) contributions to House and Senate candidates, sets voluntary spending ceilings on Senate primary and general election races, and provides inducements such as lower postage and television costs to Senate candidates who limit spending.

The legislation also would provide limited public funding to candidates who limit spending.

The legislation also would provide limited public funding to candidates whose foes decline to curb campaign spending.

Although Democrats called it a reform bill that would curb the influence of special interests on congressional actions, Republicans termed it an incumbents-protection measure that would lock-in Democratic majorities in both houses.

Sen. Terry Sanford, D, voted yes in support of the legislation and Sen. Jesse Helms, R, voted no.

By a vote of 45 for and 3 against, the Senate instructed its Sergeant-at-Arms to arrest absent senators and bring them to the floor so that a quorum could be assembled during a GOP filibuster against campaign finance legislation.

The extraordinary vote resulted in Capitol police rousting one Republican, Robert Packwood of Oregon, from his locked-and-barricaded office in the early morning of Feb. 24 and carrying him to the chamber.

Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said the arrest order was necessary because senators are paid to vote, "not to run and hide."

Commenting later, Republicans said the arrest of Packwood smacked of police-state tactics and gave the Senate "the aura of a banana republic."

Sanford voted yes supporting the arrest of absent colleagues and Helms did not vote.

Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending March 4:

HOUSE
Civil Rights Act — By a vote of 315 for and 98 against, the House gave final congressional approval to a bill making it illegal for colleges, agencies, corporations and other entities receiving federal aid for a specific program to discriminate in any of their programs.

The legislation (S 557) reverses a 1984 Supreme Court ruling, in a case involving Grove City College in Pennsylvania, that a 1972 anti-discrimination law applied only to specific campus programs receiving federal aid, not to the entire institution. The Administration had used that narrow interpretation in enforcing several other civil rights laws.

The bill does not require teaching hospitals or campus medical units to perform abortions, and it exempts institutions controlled by religious organizations from its reach.

Members voting yes favored the civil rights bill.

North Carolina voting yes: Walter Jones, D-1, Tim Valentine, D-2, Martin Lancaster, D-3, David Price, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, James Clarke, D-11.

Voting no: Howard Coble, R-6, Alex McMillan, R-9, Cass Ballenger, R-10.

Not voting: none.
GOP AMENDMENT — By a vote of 146 for and 266 against, the House rejected a Republican attempt to soften S 557 (above) by making it less difficult for corporations and church-related colleges to gain exemptions from the bill.

Schools closely identified with the tenets of a religious organization — not just those controlled by religious groups — were to be exempted from S 557's broadened application of federal civil rights laws. Also, only the parts of corporations receiving federal aid were to be subjected to the broadened anti-discrimination laws.

Sponsor James Sensenbrenner, R-Wis., said his amendment should be adopted "in the name of the First Amendment, religious liberty and freedom...."

Opponent Hamilton Fish, R-N.Y., termed the GOP language a loophole that would enable thousands of private schools to gain exemption from the new civil rights law.

Members voting yes wanted to soften the bill.

North Carolina voting yes: Lancaster, Coble, McMillan, Ballenger.

Voting no: Walter Jones, Valentine, David Price, Neal, Rose, Hefner, Clarke.

Not voting: None.

CONTRA AID — By a vote of 208 for and 216 against, the House defeated legislation (HJ Res 484) drafted by Democrats to appropriate $30.8 million in non-military aid to the American-backed Contra rebels fighting in Nicaragua.

This was a major defeat for the Democratic majority. Party leaders hoped its approval would help the Contras and deflect charges the Democrats had abandoned them.

The legislation offered food, clothing and medical aid in place of military funding the Administration had unsuccessfully sought last month for the anti-Sandinista forces. House Democrats were instrumental in rejecting that bid.

Members voting yes wanted to provide $30.8 million in non-military aid to the Contras.

North Carolina voting yes: Walter Jones, Lancaster, David Price, Neal, Rose, Hefner, Clarke.

Voting no: Valentine, Coble,

McMillan, Ballenger.

Not voting: None.

SENATE

Lie Detector Tests — By a vote of 69 for and 27 against, the Senate passed and sent to conference with the House a bill limiting the use of lie detector tests by employers in the private sector.

The bill (S 1904) was supported by the American Civil Liberties Union and opposed by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

It bans the polygraph in random testing of employees and in screening job applicants, while permitting lie detector testing of employees in limited situations such as when theft of company property is suspected.

The bill is less restrictive than its House counterpart, which outlaws polygraph testing virtually throughout the private workplace.

Senators voting yes wanted to limit polygraph testing by private employers.

Voting yes: Sanford. Voting no: Helms.

WORLD BANK LOAN — By a vote of 45 for the 48 against, the Senate failed to table (kill) a non-binding resolution objecting to a $400 million World Bank loan to benefit the Mexican steel industry.

Despite the Senate action, the low-industry loan from the bank to the Mexican government will take effect. The World Bank is capitalized by developed countries. The United States provides about 20 percent of the bank's budget.

Sponsor Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, said it was wrong to use American tax dollars "to develop a competitive steel industry."

Foe Daniel Evans, R-Wash., said the Senate vote "could have some very, very bad effects" on America's ability to conduct foreign policy with Mexico.

Senators voting yes were opposed to the resolution.

Voting yes: Sanford. Voting no: Helms.

Death Rate Still Among Leaders

L.A. Times-Washington Post

A WASHINGTON — The United States' infant mortality rate, considered one of the most important measures of the nation's health, still ranks among the highest of any industrialized country and improvement has slowed during the 1980s, according to a new report by the congressional Office of Technology Assessment.

More than 40,000 American babies die annually before their first birthdays, about 1 percent of all babies born. In 1985, the U.S. infant-mortality rate — 10.6 deaths per 1,000 infants — ranked 17th internationally and was higher than rates in most Western European countries. The report said that if the U.S. rate had equaled that of Japan, which has the world's lowest infant-death rate, about 19,000 fewer U.S. babies would have died that year.

The report cited the slowing in improvement of the infant-death rate as a major health concern. It said an important contributor to the slowdown was a rise during the last decade in births of very small infants, those weighing less than 1,000 grams (2 pounds, 3 ounces). Despite advances in medical technology, such small, premature infants have a much greater likelihood than normal-sized newborns of dying in their first year of life.

The OTA report strongly endorsed mandatory expansion of the Medicaid program to cover all pregnant women with incomes below the federal poverty level.

Fox Starts New Late Night Show

L.A. Times-Washington Post
HOLLYWOOD — Fox Broadcasting Co. will make its third stab at creating a late-night talk-show success tonight with a re-vamped version of its original effort, "The Late Show."

The new program will feature Los Angeles comedians Jeff Joseph and John Mulrooney as hosts.

The new "Late Show" comes on the air just as its competition, NBC's "The Tonight Show" with Johnny Carson, has been forced into reruns at least until the end of this week due to the Writers Guild of America strike. NBC's other late-night show, "Late Night With David Letterman," also is in reruns until Monday, but they had been planned before the strike.

Michael Binkow, Fox Broadcasting's vice president of corporate communications, said that the premiere date for the new "Late Show" had been selected three to four weeks ago. He denied that it was being launched this week to take advantage of weaker-than-usual competition.

"It (the strike) has absolutely nothing to do with the timing. The show was planned to start as soon as we could get everything together," Binkow said.

He said the program would have the same talk, comedy and music format as the original "Late Show Starring Joan Rivers" that debuted in October 1986. Rivers was dismissed from the show last May, giving way to "The Late Show" with various guest hosts. That show was replaced last December by "The Wilton North Report," a comedy-news experiment that was canceled after three weeks on the air. Since then, Fox has aired repeats of "The Late Show."

Binkow said that, unlike the Carson and Letterman shows, production of new "Late Show" installments would not be forced to a halt by the strike. "Since we're using stand-up comedians (as hosts), they are writing their own material," he said. "The immediate official word is that there are no (Writers Guild) writers on the show."

Binkow acknowledged that under ordinary circumstances, "The Late Show" would have employed union writers to come up with questions for the hosts to ask the guests and some other material, but Joseph and Mulrooney will handle those tasks during the strike. "It's not going to be easy, but it's a necessity," he said.

In addition to his "Late Show" duties, Mulrooney is slated to co-host with Allen Funt the new "Candid Camera," a syndicated revival from Blair Entertainment.

Fox Broadcasting has also hired Los Angeles juggler and comedian Daniel Rosen to be the announcer on the show. The house band will be the local group Jack Mack & the Heart Attack. The show will be produced by Ron Vandor, a former Fox Broadcasting executive who was involved in the production of "The Late Show Starring Joan Rivers."

Navy Withdraws Support For ABC's 'Supercarrier'

By JAY SHARBUTT
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

NEW YORK — At issue was how men go down to the sea in scripts.

Producer Charles Fries said he and ABC thought action-adventure was the way to go with the new "Supercarrier" series. But the Navy did not think the scripts accurately portrayed it or its people.

And so, even though it had no objections to last Sunday's opening episode, the Navy has yanked its support of "Supercarrier" because of differences over future plots in the six other episodes still on tap.

The problem, a Navy spokesman said Wednesday, is that in the remaining shows the Navy "just becomes a backdrop" for action-adventure stories having little or nothing to do with the Navy or its mission.

The parting was not acrimonious, and there still is a chance that Navy support will be reinstated if there is a meeting of naval and Hollywood minds on future scripts for the series, emphasized the spokesman, Capt. Michael Sherman, director of the Navy's West Coast information office.

He declined to be specific about plots the Navy had found objectionable, but laughed at a report that officials were disturbed at one in which the captain of the show's aircraft carrier falls in love with a female jet pilot. "I never saw a story line like that," he said.

The show, set aboard the fictional USS Georgetown, has been likened to a small-screen version of the hit movie "Top Gun," right down to the rock music that accompanies the launching of F-14 jet fighters.

The series initially planned to concentrate on the lives of the men and women in the Navy, focusing on the carrier, Fries said, but the pilot episode proved so exciting that the series' emphasis was changed to action-adventure.

"From that point on, the Navy became more and more disenchanted because essentially they're concerned about their perception (by the public)," he said. "Right now, the Navy is in a peacetime mode... but to do an action-adventure show we had to get off the carrier and bring in some conflict and jeopardy."

Fries, who, like the Navy's Sherman, was interviewed by phone from Los Angeles, said he had ample shipboard footage left from the filming of the first episode and could continue production without Navy help. Only two episodes remain to be shot.

The show shoots its interior sequences on a carrier mockup set in Valencia, Calif., Fries said, and probably could film aboard two old carriers that now are floating museums—the Intrepid here and the Yorktown in Charleston, S.C.

'Weekend' Show Offers Adults Saturday Choice

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If you're the sort who puts off planning your weekend until Saturday morning, "Great Weekend" is probably just the show you're looking for.

This new one-hour show of news and information will help you sort out your weekend by telling you what's happening and where.

There's also a small side benefit. It offers adults a Saturday morning alternative amid the glut of cartoon shows.

"I tend to plan my weekend rather spontaneously on Saturday mornings," said George Merlis, the show's executive producer. "This addresses that need. It tells you what you can do on the weekend. On Valentine's Day weekend, for instance, we showed the romantic getaways.

"Everything we've done has been reachable by the audience. We don't play voyeur — our host goes there but you can't. We also offer information on medicine, tips to consumers, and the schedule of sports you can see this weekend."

"Great Weekend," which goes out live by satellite, is currently telecast on 31 stations across the country. It picked up 12 new stations at the recent convention of the National Association of Television Program Executives in Houston. The co-hosts of the show are Dale Harimoto and Bob Goen.

"Before we went on, the opinion was expressed by one station that only a network could do a show like this because we originate from several points," said Merlis. "But 'Great Weekend' is produced in association with USTV."

USTV is the program development arm of Hubbard Broadcasting Co. of Minneapolis and has three transponders on a communications satellite. Each transponder can handle two signals. Hubbard also operates the CONUS news delivery service and TV Direct in partnership with The Associated Press.

"We went on the air in January with 16 stations," said Merlis. "The first station we picked up was the one that said only a network could do this. For our show on Feb. 20 we had our weatherman in Savannah, Ga., Bob Goen was in Calgary, Canada, Dale Harimoto was in Los Angeles and our news and medical news came out of Minneapolis."

Merlis also runs a company that produces video press tours. Most recently, Elizabeth Taylor appeared on talk shows across the country to promote her new diet book without ever having to leave Los Angeles.

Merlis developed ABC's "Good Morning America" into a hit program. He also has been a producer for "The CBS Morning News," "The Dick Cavett Show" and "Entertainment Tonight."

Merlis said that every show he's produced has had a consumer outlook. "If it didn't, I gave it one," he said.

NIE
Newspaper In Education

The following activities have been prepared by The Daily Reflector's Newspaper In Education Department in celebration of NIE Week March 7-11.

Family Circus will return to this space on Monday, March 14th.

Ask your child to play a "Guess Who" game. Instruct your child to select a person who is currently in the news and gather as many news articles as they can about this person. Clues can be the profession of this person, age, sex, etc. Each night ask your child to reveal one clue. The rest of the family should try to guess who the person is. How many days can the guessing continue before the identity is discovered? Reverse this game asking the child to guess the identity of the person. Who is the better detective?

Advertising is important to a newspaper, in fact, about 60% of each paper is advertising. Locate a large ad in The Daily Reflector and see if you can locate the 5 W's (Who, What, Why or How, When and Where) in the advertisement.

There is a vast difference between the various forms of tournament bridge. In pair events, each board is a mini-tournament of its own, where every trick counts. Team matches are more like rubber bridge, where the safety of the contract is paramount. How would you play this hand from the recent Bermuda Regional, held at the Southampton Princess?

You have reached a nearly iron-clad contract of four spades. When partner responded in your void and then took a simple preference, you elected not to look beyond four spades. West leads a trump, which you win in hand. How do you continue?

Obviously, the answer is you don't know—at least, not until we tell you whether you're playing in a pairs or team competition. This hand was dealt in the team championship and the declarer, Bruce Ferguson of Boise, Idaho, returned a trump. Just as well. East could win, lead a club to his partner's ace, and then get a diamond ruff. But that would be the third and last trick for the defense.

At pairs, you see the chance for an extra overtrick. You can cross to dummy with the king of diamonds, discard a club on the ace of hearts and then lead a trump, scoring two overtricks. You must go for it, and the fact that East ruffs away the king of diamonds, gets to his partner with the ace of clubs and then scores another diamond ruff for a one-trick set is just unfortunate.

After all, that should be an average score, and that's what makes bridge such a fascinating game.

Dissident Says Warsaw Pact Moving Away From Kremlin

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The man known as the godfather of East European dissidents says the reforms of Mikhail S. Gorbachev and the promised Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan are nudging other Warsaw Pact nations toward greater independence from the Kremlin.

"Eastern European nations will insist on trying to find ways toward greater autonomy from the Soviet Union," said Milovan Djilas, whose native Yugoslavia parted with Moscow in 1948.

Similar nationalistic impulses also are being expressed in the non-Russian republics of the Soviet Union, such as Armenia, Azerbaijan, and the Baltic states, where the Kremlin has been cracking down on demonstrations.

In the West, said Djilas, people "should have hope, but not illusions, should be strong but not unreasonable" in reacting to Gorbachev's foreign and domestic policy initiatives.

Djilas, now 77, began his dissidence in 1953, a year later quit his posts as Yugoslavian vice president and member of the Communist Party Politburo, and was imprisoned from 1956-61 by Yugoslavia's then-president, Josef Broz Tito.

From prison, he wrote his best known work, "The New Class," in which he argued that communist leaders in the Soviet Union and throughout Eastern Europe had created a system in which power, wealth and privilege were as abused as in the governments they replaced. His writings made him an icon in the West, and became a model for dissidents throughout the Communist world.

Djilas, who addressed the Heritage Foundation last week and later was interviewed by The Associated Press, last visited the United States in 1968. The government of Yugoslavia took away his passport in 1970 and did not restore it until 18 months ago.

"I am not a good boy," he said, grinning impishly despite his advanced age and a nagging heart condition.

The Yugoslavian government, he said "is not very happy about my speaking" but apparently has given up its futile efforts to silence him.

Western attention to his predicament made life easier, he said.

"I think the West and America saved me," he said. "Certainly, my fate would have been much worse if public opinion had not been aroused on my behalf."

Djilas had warm words for Gorbachev, whose reforms he said were an attempt to end the repressive system imposed on the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe by Soviet dictator Josef Stalin.

Even if Kremlin conservatives topple Gorbachev, Djilas predicted, the process will continue.

"Gorbachev is a man in the middle of the party, between the hardliners and more radical elements like (Boris) Yeltsin," who was forced to quit his post as the Communist Party first secretary for the city of Moscow because he criticized Gorbachev for going too slow.

The reforms and the promised "Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan will strengthen democratic elements in the Soviet Union" and encourage other Warsaw Pact nations in their own economic and political experiments, said Djilas.

East European leaders are trying to avoid a confrontation with Moscow while seeking greater independence, he said. "There is no sign of an uprising."

"Yugoslavia is farthest along in this crisis of communism," retaining a communist government while allowing market forces to play a powerful role in the economy, he said.

The crisis is also acute in Poland, where the army stepped in to preserve communist rule in 1981, and where the economy is mixed between state and private ownership, said Djilas.

"We cannot exclude that Poland would develop a different (non-communist) social system, and still remain within the Warsaw Pact" and thus pose no military threat to the Kremlin, said Djilas.

Austrians Examining Past As Nazi Anniversary Nears

By ALISON SMALE
Associated Press Writer

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — This week Austria marks the 50th anniversary of Anschluss, its annexation by Nazi Germany, with soul-searching events likened by some to an exorcism.

The disclosure of President Kurt Waldheim's World War II service in the German army has coincided with a historical reckoning that forced many Austrians to confront the Nazi past they have tried for decades to forget.

"Nobody wanted to talk about the past," prominent Austrian writer Gerhard Roth said in an interview. "Waldheim forced it. If Waldheim hadn't come along, this never would have happened."

"There is a kind of exorcism going on at the moment," said Roth, who has written extensively about Austrian society for publications in his homeland and West Germany.

"It brings up a lot of filth with it, but it is basically a cleansing process," Roth said, acknowledging there have been outbursts of anti-Semitism since the Waldheim controversy came to light two years ago.

The leader of Vienna's Jewish community, the city's Socialist mayor and former concentration camp inmates were expected at the formal opening tonight of the "Gedenktage," or days of remembrance.

Events culminate Friday with a memorial in parliament and another ceremony at the former imperial Hofburg palace.

Roth said many thousands of Austrians of the war generation, together with postwar babies educated by unrepentant Nazis, absorbed National Socialist teachings that went unchallenged for decades.

Now, the nation is beginning to work the past out of its system. Dozens of plays, films, seminars, exhibits, books and a major television series are confronting Austrians with rarely viewed pages of their history.

Recurring images of throngs cheering Adolf Hitler or crowds ogling Jews scrubbing Vienna sidewalks contrast with many Austrians' view that their country was more a victim of Hitler than an accomplice.

A highly praised, prime-time television series takes Austrians back through the turbulent years from 1918 to 1938, when the small alpine nation struggled to come to terms with the loss of the Hapsburg empire.

At Vienna's Austrian Film Museum, long lines form for tickets to a three-week series of documentary films showing the days of the Nazi Anschluss, the brutality of World War II and the horrors of the concentration camps.

The Burgtheater, Austria's most prestigious stage, is presenting anti-Nazi plays, including one by Bertolt Brecht and a mock "Mein Kampf" by Hungarian-born Georg Tabori, to mark the Nazi takeover in March 1938.

At the Volkstheater, other plays recall life under the Nazis. In one, "The Schoolfriend," a common man muses why prisons were full during World War II, but Nazis were left unpunished after the war.

"So much power doesn't disappear so fast," another character concludes, to applause from the audience.

In Graz, a city that hoisted the Nazi swastika on its Town Hall before Hitler even sent in his troops in 1938, an extensive exhibit probes what happened in the town 50 years ago.

In Linz, the city of Hitler's youth that welcomed him as a returning hero in 1938, city fathers will mark the anniversary with a visit to the nearby former concentration camp of Mauthausen to honor Nazi victims.

Another exhibit is being held in Salzburg, and two Vienna museums have exhibits tracing the history of the city's Jews, a thriving intellectual community of 200,000 before the war and now numbering just 6,000.

The Austrian students' union, representing 170,000 students, received $833,000 from Chancellor Franz Vranitzky's office to finance a year-long program to confront people born in the 1960s with a past most of their parents and grandparents rarely discussed.

The controversy over Waldheim's wartime past plagued both events, forcing Waldheim to drop plans to speak at Friday's ceremonies. Instead, he is to deliver a television address tonight.

Waldheim's inability to play a leading part in events marking the Anschluss illustrates the deep division among Austrians over both the president and the nation's past.

As Austrians mull over their history, debate has intensified over a historians' report that questioned Waldheim's integrity.

The report, published Feb. 9, said he covered up his service as a lieutenant with the German army in the Balkans, where he knew about Nazi atrocities and did nothing to prevent them.

The report and Waldheim's calm initial response that "knowledge is not a crime" and that he was not a war criminal has triggered fierce debate throughout Austria.

Barely a television program goes by without some reference to the controversy or to its damaging effect on Austria's image abroad. Many people say the divisions caused by Waldheim are an uncomfortably close reminder of the splits among Socialists, Nazis and Austrian Fascists 50 years ago.

Roth, who is in his mid-40s, likes the soul-searching to the aftermath of a nuclear disaster.

"It's as if we had this Chernobyl in 1938," he said. "The dust settled, and slowly we forgot about whether it was radioactive."

"Waldheim is like a big geiger counter we brought out to measure the strength of the emissions, and now we have to think how to get rid of the nuclear waste we've discovered."

Coup Effort Is Crushed

LUANDA, Angola (AP) — Security forces in Sao Tome and Principe shot and killed a suspected American mercenary and captured another in an aborted coup in the West African nation, the head of the national news agency said today.

A South African official denied earlier reports that his country was involved in the coup attempt in Sao Tome and Principe, a Marxist-ruled island nation off the coast of Gabon.

STP-Press director Manuel Dende told reporters in the Angolan capital of Luanda one of two foreign mercenaries presumed to be American was killed when the invaders attacked the central police station in Sao Tome, the capital, early Tuesday. He said the other was captured by government troops.

Authorities in the two-island nation say two armed raiders were killed, one wounded and 43 captured after they landed on beaches close to Sao Tome in an abortive attempt to overthrow the government of President Manuel Pinto da Costa. A policeman also was wounded.
