Pitt Agencies Paid Consultants Over $1.61 Million Since 1985

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Staff writers Cherie Evans, Carol Tyer, Greg Laudick and Jerry Raynor contributed to research for this article.

This is the first of a four-part series exploring the amount of money spent on consulting fees by public entities in Pitt County since 1985.

In this modern-day, fast-changing world many firms and individuals make their living as consultants — providing professional advice or services about matters in the field of their special knowledge or training.

And from time to time, government agencies in Pitt County make use of consultants for a wide variety of projects — more than $1.61 million worth in the past 2½ years.

How do administrators feel about hiring consultants? To what extent are consultants used, and why are outside "experts" used at all? Is the "expert" advise beneficial?

These questions and others have been addressed by a number of administrators over the past few weeks as The Daily Reflector has looked at the public use of consultants since mid-1985 by the county, various municipalities and other entities, such as Pitt County Memorial Hospital, the Greenville Utilities Commission, the Pitt County Development Commission and East Carolina University.

"I think there's a place for consultants. But I think also that there's a very limited place ... and caution should be used when engaging consultants," according to Pitt County Manager Kramer Jackson. "I think that consultants should be called upon in rare situations, when staff is unable to solve problems.

"To me, excessive use of consultants is an indication of staff with very limited abilities," Jackson said, "and I believe there is a tendency to overuse consultants. I've seen lots of money spent for consultants to provide something of little or no value.

Since July 1, 1985 — the beginning of the 1985-86 fiscal year — Pitt County has spent some $72,863 on consultants. By far the biggest portion of that, $62,863, has gone for the services of Raleigh lawyer Mike Crowell, who has guided the Board of County Commissioners through the steps of creating a new method of electing commissioners.

Crowell, Jackson said, was "someone from out of county who had experience in that area."

Another $3,000 has gone to Risk Consultants, a firm which advises the county on what to do to get the best insurance coverage possible for the lowest price, while $7,000 has been spent for a firm to review digitized tax map data to ensure that the county will be able to use the information with its mainframe computer.

In Jackson's view, a consultant should be used "only when the county is faced with something for the first time (such as the new election method) or to study a situation in which management and elected officials may be too close to the pro-

Hearing On Outdoor Advertising Ordinance Set By Planning Board

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

Charles Coble, dean of the School of Education at East Carolina University, said he would like the Pitt County Board of Commissioners to ban billboards along U.S. 264 "to create something on the order of a gateway to the east."

Coble's letter to the board earlier this year prompted members to place a 90-day moratorium on outdoor advertising signs along U.S. 264, giving the county planning board time to develop an ordinance regulating billboards.

With the moratorium in place until April 19, the Pitt County Planning Board will hold a public hearing Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. to receive comments on a new ordinance aimed at restricting outdoor advertising along all roads in unincorporated areas of the county.

If adopted, the ordinance would provide one set of rules for all roads in the county outside city and town limits, said county planner Jeff Ulma. The county currently follows the state's Outdoor Advertising Control Act, but that does not regulate billboards on every road in the county, he said.

"What I had hoped for, frankly, is that 264 would be billboard-free," said Coble. The highway is the major route into eastern North Carolina, he said, and officials from neighboring counties should work together to create a parkway to showcase the area.

Some people see his position as anti-business, but many thriving areas, including New Jersey's Garden State Parkway and the Research Triangle

Panama Facing Payroll Woes

By REID G. MILLER
Associated Press Writer

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — In an atmosphere of deepening crisis, Panama's leaders met again Saturday to figure out how to pay the 130,000 public employees whose salaries come due early this week.

With its treasury virtually empty, the government reportedly was considering delaying or reducing the semi-monthly paychecks of the workers who have been among its staunchest supporters.

Panama's new chief of state, Manuel Solis Palma, and his Cabinet have been meeting almost constantly since Thursday evening in an effort to solve the problem, which could have strong political repercussions.

It became even more critical Friday when the Reagan Administration in Washington announced new economic sanctions against Panama, including the withholding of $6.5 million in monthly Panama Canal fees.

The sanctions were meant to force the ouster of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, who has ruled Panama since 1983 as head of its Defense Forces. He is under indictment in the United States on drug smuggling and money laundering charges.

Panama uses the U.S. dollar as its currency and even before the latest sanctions were announced Washington had halted normal transfers of funds from the U.S. Federal Reserve. Other monies on deposit by Panama in private U.S. banks also have been tied up by legal actions.

Jackson Wins S.C. Caucuses

By BRUCE SMITH
Associated Press Writer
(Earlier story on A-12)

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Jesse Jackson won easily Saturday in his native South Carolina's Democratic precinct caucuses, giving his already surging campaign a boost just days before the primary in his adopted Illinois.

"Just because you're born in the slum doesn't mean the slum's borne in you," Jackson said in Greenville. "I came home tonight to tell America there is a way out."

With 68 percent of the state's 1,788 precincts reporting, Jackson won 5,075 county convention delegates for 51 percent, followed by uncommitted with 2,016 delegates for 21 percent.

Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr. was in third place with 1,858 delegates for 19 percent.

Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis trailed far behind with 692 county convention delegates for 7 percent, followed by Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt with 209 delegates for 2 percent and Illinois Sen. Paul Simon with just 31 delegates.

"In South Carolina ... I want to win another gold medal," Jackson said, noting his strong showing in the Super Tuesday primaries.

"I hope to walk away with the majority," Jackson said. "I should be the favorite son from South Carolina."

Gephardt, who was campaigning in Michigan, congratulated Jackson on his victory, saying "I thought he would do very well there -it's his home state - and he did."

Gore spokesman Fred Martin called his candidate's performance "a strong showing" and added "we expect to pick up a majority of the uncommitted."

Democratic Party officials expected as many as 20,000 voters would participate in the caucuses in which 44 convention delegates were at stake.

During a campaign swing across the state Friday, Jackson predicted he would emerge as the leader in the muddled race for convention delegates once the votes are tallied in South Carolina and Illinois, which holds a primary on Tuesday.

Gore has waged an active campaign in the state and a newspaper survey of Democratic Party chairmen statewide found Gore expected to finish second to Jackson.

In the past, South Carolina Democrats have had a penchant for going to the caucuses and voting for uncommitted delegates. Jackson was the top candidate four years ago but a plurality of the delegates remained uncommitted at the precinct level.

This time around, campaign aides for Gephardt and Simon, were asking their supporters to remain uncommitted and work to become delegates at county conventions later in the month.

But Gore urged supporters during a stop in Charleston Friday to stand up for his candidacy and "don't let anyone talk you into being an uncommitted delegate."

Falkland Post Office Has 150th Birthday

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Prior to opening in Falkland on March 13, 1838, the post office serving the area was located at the Atkinson homeplace north of the Tar River known as Bensboro for 25 years.

Woodrow Wooten, a longtime resident of Falkland, says he remembers "a little something about a celebration in 1937 when the post office was said to be 100 years old. I think they served some cookies or something. Mr. Robert Cotten, living then in Baltimore, had been by some time the year before and reminded my uncle, K.R. Wooten, that the centennial would be coming up in March of 1938."

Wooten said he has seen the post office in a number of different buildings within a few hundred yards of the present building and seems to remember hearing that, before he came to Falkland in 1933, it was in several different homes, including that of the Mayo family for about 40 years.

James L. Cobb was the first postmaster to serve in Falkland. He began work on March 13, 1838, and served for 20 years.

Education Board Discussed Attendance Lines

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Board of Education members "put their cards on the table" on attendance line and long-range planning issues of the school system Friday, when it was agreed that implications of a new kindergarten through fifth-grade school for the Stokes area and usage for Third Street School other than a teaching site will be evaluated.

During a six and a half-hour workshop session at the Pitt County office building, the board first focused on the attendance line issue, looking at organizational patterns and racial balancing — factors that help determine where attendance lines are drawn. The board studied these factors in each high school attendance area.

Before the process began, board member Nicholas Patrone said he wanted his counterparts to "put their cards on the table. I want to know what you care about (and how that affects) your particular area," he said.

Heading the discussion with the North Pitt attendance area, board member Mary Williams presented a letter from a concerned citizen to the board, and said, "there is a lot of concern out there that Stokes is being left out" of long-range planning for the school system.

She discussed the importance of having a reputable school in an area for residential growth. "School factors are very important when you're deciding where to purchase your next home," she said.

Board member Leonard Lilley said, "I don't believe we can afford not to have a school in the Stokes area," citing the need to provide some relief to Belvoir Elementary School as it continues to increase enrollment. He suggested a possible site may be near the old Stokes high school gymnasium.

In the D.H. Conley attendance area, Lilley expressed concern with the increasing enrollment at Conley and suggested there may need to be some trade-off between the school and Ayden-Grifton High School. There also was considerable discussion over the racial imbalance at Wintergreen.

Expanding the thoughts of Lilley, board member Jack Collins said "Ayden-Grifton needs additional students" to ensure educational equities. He said while students at the Ayden-Grifton may be offered the same programs, the number of sections for the courses are not being offered. Therefore, scheduling may prevent a student from benefitting from a particular course.

Collins suggested the board consider moving the ninth through 12-grade students from the Chicod area from Conley to Ayden-Grifton. Another alternative discussed by the board was splitting the Chicod area between the two attendance areas.

But the board made no decision as to what to do about providing Ayden-Grifton with more students. It instructed Superintendent Eddie West and his administrative staff to develop several options to be considered.

However, the board agreed to consider allowing the fourth-grade students at Ayden Elementary School stay there. The fourth-grade currently is scheduled to move to Ayden Middle School in the 1988-89 school year.

Consideration of developing Third Street School into something other than a teaching facility stemmed with Patrone's concerns with the J.H. Rose attendance area.

He said children are being "phased out" of the inner city of Greenville as the area continually becomes expanded living quarters for East Carolina University students. Racial balancing already is a potential problem for the school, which has a ratio of 74 blacks to 26 whites. "It could very quickly get out of line," Patrone said.

Patrone also pinpointed the small cafeteria at Third Street and the lack of an assembly room. Currently, books are moved out of the library of the school when there is an assembly.

A problem with the Rose attendance area that the Third Street issue addresses is that there are too many schools, which make them hard to racially balance, board member Frank Grooms said. He said a 60:40 racial ratio "would be acceptable to people" and is possible in the Rose attendance area with fewer schools.

Board members also said they need to address the increased enrollment at Rose, and consider long-range plans to include an additional high school for the city in the mid to late 1990s.

The board also discussed the grade organization in the Farmville Central attendance area, especially the kindergarten, fourth through fifth-grade configuration at H.B. Sugg. Board member Anne McGaughey presented the rationale for that configuration by saying "Bundy (school) can't house K through third. Rather than disrupt the entire community, first through third should be together (because) kindergarten could better be self-contained."

Fourth- and fifth-graders already attended Sugg, and the kindergarteners were added. Bundy accomodates first through third graders. "We perceive ourselves as really not having any problems," she said. The board agreed the current configuration in the Farmville area is appropriate.

On the racial balancing issue, the board said it will consider adopting a policy in the 1988-89 school year that will target a 15 percent deviation between black and white students at a school and will limit the deviation to 20 percent. The policy would be implemented in the 1990-91 academic year.

In setting those limits, "we would really be in control," board member Walter Morehead said.

Exceptions to that rule would include the amount of time a student has to ride a bus to provide an acceptable racial balance, the maximum use of the building capacities and changing organizational patterns.

The board agreed to the Basic Education Plan implementation schedule and the building construction needed to fill those needs when considering the long-range plan for the school system.

It also suggested that a bond referendum may be needed to provide money for needs of the school system, which would include the new school in Stokes, probable acquisiton of the Boys Club, full implementation of the BEP and facilities and equipment that go along with that, and at least a new middle school. The current long-range plan suggests that an additional elementary, middle and high school will be needed.

Consultant Fees Cost Pitt Agencies $1.61 Million Since 1985

"Sometimes an outside consultant will carry more weight, provide an opinion viewed as being unbiased," Jackson suggested.

"The larger the amount of the cost of a project, the better justification for some outside consultation," Jackson said. "If the county was spending $8 million on a project, a second opinion might be advisable. It's a lot like brain surgery. You don't want a second opinion before someone starts to cut your head open."

A company or governing body, according to Jackson, "should turn to consultants only when apparent solutions are not available from within and hopefully that would be extremely infrequently."

"I'm not consultant-oriented. I've seen too many studies done by consultants when the consultant would change names and basically present the same study they've done for some other organization."

But, Jackson said, "From time to time, boards want a second opinion and consultants give a second opinion."

Margaret Roberts, the county's finance officer said, Pitt County "has hired a lot of consultants in the 25 years I've been here."

Citing a 1980-81 computer study, done at a cost of $80,000, Mrs. Roberts said, "We were disappointed. Everything done ... was already written down somewhere."

On the other hand, Mrs. Roberts said, $22,000 spent in 1984 for a telephone study "probably at the time was well spent. We updated our system. It was a good study."

And a $3,400 study by Risk Consultants of the county's insurance was "good," Mrs. Roberts said. "So much was happening in the insurance market at the time, we needed guidance." And Mrs. Roberts feels the study, and an on-going relationship with Risk Consultants to review and advise on insurance matters, has saved the county money.

How does Pitt compare?

Onslow County Manager Rick Leary said Onslow, during the same period, has spent about $94,000 on consultants for projects such as solid waste planning, a sewer study, parks and recreation planning, and planning for a jail and sheriff's department addition.

Another project ultimately paid for by Pitt taxpayers, but spent by the Pitt County Development Commission, was a $49,000 study completed in early 1987 to find out what is good and what is not so good in the area of industrial recruitment.

John Chaffee, the development commission's director, said the Fantus Report, as the study was called, "was definitely worth it ... without question. It did a lot of things for us, gave us a strong foundation from which to work."

The Fantas report, Chaffee said, "addressed issues confronting us, suggested some things we could be doing that we weren't doing, listed liabilities of the community," as well as Pitt County's strengths.

"If we had tried to do it on our own, the time, the sheer time involved would have taken away time from other duties. Another thing, by hiring a professional, people give a lot more weight to what they say. People take stock in what they say (and it) provides leverage," to get things done, Chaffee suggested.

Joe H[illegible], dean of administrative services at Pitt Community College, defined a consultant as, "someone from out of town, wearing a three-piece suit, costing a lot of money and only staying a few days."

"We've been able to handle most of our consulting needs in house," Hunniecutt said. "We try not to use them."

And PCC has not paid out any money for consultants since mid-1985. But, Hunniecutt said there are two being used this fiscal year on a new personnel administrative plan, however there has been no discussion of the costs as yet.

Not so with the Pitt County schools. In the two years the consolidated system has been in existence, the county school board has spent $60,191 on consultants, according to financial controller Dan Thomas.

During the 1986-87 fiscal year, the schools paid Delma Blinson, former superintendent of the Greenville city school system, $12,000 in consulting fees and paid George Redfern of Ohio $18,000 — that's out of a total budget for the year of $58 million. So far this fiscal year, Thomas said, $30,991 has been paid to consultants from a total budget of $63 million.

The 1987-88 consultant fees include: $2,174 for task force speakers; $3,017 for an operational services study; $7,800 for a risk management study involving the school's insurance coverage, and another $18,000 to Redfern, who Thomas said specializes in school management and planning and visits Greenville "about once a month" to advise the staff on various matters.

The studies and task forces now under way are part of a campaign to make programs in the school system equitable and to keep the school system progressive, Thomas said. "After the school system has a history, maybe there won't be a need," and the money would be appropriated to other areas.

A comparison? Pete Andrews, a spokesman for the Onslow County Board of Education estimated that that school system spends $18,000 a year on consultants.

At East Carolina University, some $59,283 has been paid to consultants since mid-1985.

Rod Seymour, assistant purchasing director at the university, said in fiscal 1985-86 Birchfield Food Systems was paid $6,282 for advice on student food services. The result: a food service was hired to handle student feeding.

The following year, Seyhmour said, consultants were hired: to provide advice on insurance for the medical school's practicing physicians at a cost of $8,474; to set up a billing system for patients seen by medical school doctors at a cost of $1,924, and to advise medical students on how to successfully set up a medical practice. Others include $10,000 for scale drawings of Ficklen Stadium, $2,068 for design of a proposed parking lot, and $7,000 for legal advice.

So far this fiscal year, Seymour said, ECU has spent $9,579 for legal services, $10,556 for advise on a bonding issue and $1,500 for preliminary planning and drawings for a proposed building.

"A lot of the money used on consultants" at the university, according to Seymour, "is from 'generated-type' funds." For example, the university receives some of the profit the food service makes. And monies patients pay to the medical practice is used to provide more services to medical students.

Teachers Receive CPR Instruction

A project with the primary aim of expanding the number of persons in Pitt County and eastern North Carolina qualified to administer cardiopulminary ressucitation (CPR) was carried a step further Friday when 30 teachers from the city schools were given a day-long instructional workshop at Rose High School.

The workshop, programmed by Rosemary Stocks, coordinator for the teaching of CPR precedures as a project for the American Medical Association, was assisted by 10 students in the medical student section and the emergency medicine department of the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

"A study made last year reveals that North Carolina has one of the lowest rates of any state with persons knowledgeable in administering CPR," Ms. Stocks said.

"Our goal in providing CPR classes and workshops is to improve this record. As it stands now, fewer than one in every 20 persons in eastern North Carolina has any idea of how to help persons who may suffer cardiac arrest or those who may be choking."

A typical day of instruction, such as that held Friday at Rose High, consists of a pretest given prior to instruction, ending with a post-test administered at the end of the course.

"This will be followed by a check of each participant, testing them on mannequins," Ms. Stocks said. After the pretest, a session is devoted to general instruction, followed by a closer, more intense period of training with the med students working with smaller groups."

Those who successfully pass all phases of the training are qualified as CPR persons.

One of the plans hoped for by Ms. Stocks as a primary future goal is "getting the school board to authorize our group to teach CPR to high school seniors. We would like to have a full day allocated for this purpose, and to take the program to all the high schools in the county.

"There is a pressing need to train and qualify people for CPR procedures in Pitt County and throughout eastern North Carolina," she said. "We definitely want to see the numbers qualified at a much higher percentage than what now exists."

Annual Institute

Helen Harris Perlman, service professor emeritus at the University of Chicago, will discuss "The Art of Problem Solving" Thursday afternoon at the annual professional institute of the School of Social Work, East Carolina University.

A banquet for the institute will be held Thursday evening.

Perlman is the author of six books and helped to develop one of the country's first family assistance projects.

Mayor Visited Class

Mayor Ed Carter visited Vivian Roach's class at Greenville Middle School recently and was interviewed on video tape. Daniel Turner, a student, asked Carter questions pertaining to his personal life and his political background.

In a message to students, Carter said, "Be the very best that you can be in all that you do." He stressed that an education is something that no one can take away and that students must prepare themselves to become productive and responsible adults.

Other students participating in the video taping session were Chris Kidd, Germarlon Harris, Stacy Vandeburg, Brian Dupree, Jason Smith, Derrick Jenkins, Shannon Grooms, James Rodger, Retha Hunter and Wendy Morgan.

Hells Angels To Be Tried

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Twenty members of the Hells Angels Motorcycle Club are scheduled to go on trial July 11 in federal court in Louisville.

The 20 are charged with conspiring to violate federal firearms and explosives laws.

The indictment says the alleged attacks were planned in Louisville and other cities to avenge the 1986 shooting death of Hells Angel John Cleve Webb of Anchorage, Alaska, outside a Louisville bar.

Hearing On New Outdoor Advertising Ordinance Is Scheduled

Park, prohibit billboards, said Coble. "I think when people go through the Research Triangle Park they really get a different feel of the vision people have for that area," he said. "That's the kind of vision it seems Pitt County ought to try and put together."

Coble said he has received letters from other area residents interested in the idea and he will attend the public hearing Wednesday to speak to the planning board.

Ulma said the planning board members "feel comfortable so far" with the ordinance and will likely support it as it was drafted unless public input causes them to reconsider.

The planning board worked with Ulma to draft the nine-page ordinance, which lists six reasons for the tighter restrictions: to maintain roadside views; to enhance the attractiveness of the area; to protect property values; to protect public investment; to minimize distractions for drivers and to promote the overall economic welfare of Pitt County.

The ordinance would not regulate merchants' signs at their places of business, but it would provide detailed regulations for outdoor advertising signs, or billboards, which are defined as structures directing attention to a business or activity at a location other than where the sign is located.

Existing billboards would be allowed to remain for the reasonable life of the sign, according to the ordinance, and new copy or advertisements would be allowed on the existing sign as long as the activity does not increase the extent of nonconformity.

The ordinance restricts billboards to within 500 feet of commericial or industrial activity, and businesses must face the highway and have access to the highway. Betty Waller, with Naegele Outdoor Advertising Co., said those three requirements make the regulations tougher than any other local ordinance.

"We can support that because the spirit of the ordinance is still fair. It allows the placement of billboards within commercial areas, genuine commercial areas," said Mrs. Waller. "That's really all we ever asked for."

In addition to requiring businesses to have access and frontage to the highway, the ordinance lists nine exceptions to areas considered commercial activity. Temporary structures, railroads, farms and activities not visible from the highway would not qualify an area for a billboard.

The tight regulations governing the location of outdoor signs would prevent U.S. 264 from quickly becoming a "billboard jungle" as Coble fears, but Mrs. Waller said the ordinance does not prohibit billboards if the area develops in the future.

"It's more restrictive than most cities," said Mrs. Waller, citing the state's more lenient regulation allowing billboards up to 800 feet away from businesses, "but it does allow room for growth in the future."

The ordinance would only apply outside of town limits and extra-territorial boundaries, so incorporated towns such as Ayden, Winterville and Falkland, would not be affected. The ordinance would apply in unincorporated communities such as Pactolus and Stokes, said Ulma.

There are about 6½ miles of unincorporated highway on U.S. 264 between Greenville and Farmville, said Ulma, and the ordinance would create tighter restrictions than those currently in place. The state requires just 500 feet between billboards of U.S. 264, but the proposed ordinance would require 1,000 feet between signs.

The ordinance would have an even greater impact on roads like N.C. 43, said Ulma, where there are presently no restrictions on outdoor signs.

The maximum height for any outdoor sign would be 35 feet, according to the ordinance, and the surface area of any outdoor sign would be limited to 400 square feet. The sign face could be no longer than 40 feet and no higher than 20 feet.

The ordinance would also require billboards to be painted with a "neutral color to blend in with the background environment" and a have a shield to block the source of lighting from mororists. No flashing or blinking lights would be allowed.

Property owners or agents leasing the land for a billboard would be required to obtain a sign permit from the Pitt County Building Inspections Department. They would also need approval from the state, said Ulma, but if an applicant met county requirements they would also meet state requirements.

The ordinance would require applicants to submit a site plan including buildings, roads and existing billboards within 2,000 feet of the proposed sign; an elevation drawing including the dimensions and description of the proposed sign and a description of the type of commercial or industrial activity being used to qualify the area for outdoor advertising signs.

Applicants would pay an initial $50 permit fee for new signs and an annual $25 renewal fee, according to the ordinance. Pitt County would issue a registration tag to be displayed on the sign.

Existing signs would have to be registered within six months after the ordinance is adopted. There would be no initial fee, but sign owners would have to display a registration tag and pay the $25 renewal fee each year.

The chief building inspector would be required to notify sign owners of any violation and could order immediate action or allow 30 days for the sign owner to comply with the ordinance. Failure to comply would be a misdemeanor and carry a civil penalty of $50 for each offense. Each day the sign is in violation would be a separate offense.

Sign owners would be able to appeal the building inspector's decision to the county commissioners, according to the ordinance, but the board could not modify or waive the location, height or size specifications. The board's decision could be appealed to Pitt County Syperior Court.

Howard Sworn In

Howard was nominated to the post by Republican Sen. Jesse Helms nearly a year ago. On Feb. 17, Howard went before the Senate Judicary Committee at a confirmation hearing and on Feb. 25, received word that he been unanimously approved by the Senate for the position.

After repeating the vows of judgeship, Howard described himself to those in attendance as first a Christian, then as a patriotic American who loves his country.

Howard also described himself as a strong believer in the work ethic, and a person who deeply believes in the constitutional process.

"... Second to the Holy Scriptures, our Constitution is one of the greatest documents ever written," he said.

Also attending the ceremony and speaking on Howard's behalf was Helms.

"A long time ago I made a judgement that I could perform a useful service to the nation ... by assuring that "Mac" Howard would one day be a part of the federal judiciary," Helms said.

Also speaking on Howard's behalf at the two-hour ceremony were Weldon Hollowell, retired First Assistant U.S. Attorney, Major General Hugh R. Overholt, The Judge Advocate General of the U.S Army, and Thomas M. Moore, Chief Bankruptcy Judge of the Eastern District of North Carolina.

Investing the robe were Howard's wife Eloise and Edward M. Walker, president of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce. At his side during the ceremony were his daughter, Shannon, and son, Josh.

Also offering remarks were Judge James C. Fox, Judge Terrence W. Boyle, Senior U.S. District Judge John D. Larkins, Jr., and The Rev. E.T. Vinson.

A native of Kinston, Howard received a bachelor of science degree from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point and a law degree from Wake Forest University.

Serving as a helecopter door gunner, an infantry company commander, and an ambush academy comandant during two tours of Vietnam. Howard received the Silver Star for personal gallantry, two Bronze Stars for heroism in ground combat, and a Purple Heart.

After resigning from the active Army in 1972, Howard was an assistant U.S. attorney for the Eastern District for 1½ years.

In 1974 he was an assistant special council to President Richard Nixon and a member of a team preparing an impeachment defense for the president following the Watergate coverup scandel.

Howard began a private law practice in Greenville in 1974.

In 1981, the Reagan Administration considered Howard for the job of Secretary of the Army. Howard retired from the U.S. Army Reserve in 1982 as a lieutenant colonel and in 1986 was appointed by Secretary of the Army John O. Marsh as a civilian aide to the secretary of the Army for North Carolina.

Martin TV Ads Had To Be Altered

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — The first television ads for Gov. Jim Martin's re-election campaign, set to air Saturday, had to be changed at the last minute because they included the private symbols of some North Carolina companies without authorization.

The television commercials, which begin during the semifinals of the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament, feature Martin giving a glowing appraisal of his performance.

Advance copies played for reporters Friday showed Martin talking about economic development as the logos for RJR Nabisco, American Express and American Airlines appear on the screen.

Ken Croft, public affairs manager for American Express Travel Related Services Co. Inc. in Greensboro told the Greensboro News & Record commercial use of the company's logo is prohibited without advance permission.

"There is the potential for implied endorsement that may or may not be accurate," Croft said. He stressed that the policy applies to all commercial uses of the logo — political and non-political.

American Express, after receiving questions from a reporter about the use of the logo in the commercial, contacted the Martin campaign.

The company indicated its concern, and an agreement was reached, Croft said. "They're not going to use it. They were simply unaware of anybody's concern about it."

Tim Pittman, a spokesman for the campaign, said during the Friday screening that, as far as he knew, permission to use the logos had not been sought. "If it was thought to be a problem, we wouldn't have done it," Pittman said.

A spokesman with RJR-Nabisco said company officials who contacted the Martin campaign late Friday afternoon were told the commercial didn't include the logo.

Bob Bradshaw, chairman of the Martin campaign, said the commercial was changed after questions were raised.

"It didn't seem to be that big a problem," Bradshaw said. "But since it could be edited easily and replaced, it seemed to be the prudent thing to do."

Campaign manager Kevin Brown said the 30-second spots will continue through March 18.

Bee-Free Zones Established

WILMINGTON (AP) — While swarms of killer bees wing northward from southern Mexico, North Carolina agricultural officials are trying to keep one step ahead of them by setting up bee-free zones around the state ports.

The bees aren't expected to reach the United States on their own wing power for another year or two, but state officials fear the insects could hitch a ride to Wilmington's port on board a South American vessel. If that happened, the killer bees could settle in domestic hives and multiply.

To lessen the chances of killer bees finding hives to settle in, the state Board of Agriculture has established bee-free zones, extending 2 miles around the state ports in Wilmington and Morehead City. The order prohibits beekeepers from having domestic hives in those areas.

State and local agricultural officials said last week they are unaware of any commercial or domestic hives near Wilmington's port.

"This is preventive medicine, not corrective medicine," Jim Devine, a spokesman for the state Agriculture Department, told the Wilmington Morning Star. "We're not being invaded right now by the African bees."

But an invasion is conceivable. Already, the bees have landed several times, carried aboard South American ships, at ports in Florida and California.

It took nine months to exterminate swarms of the bees that infiltrated a remote area of California in 1985, said Howard Singletary, director of the state Agriculture Department's plant industry division. The bees had come to California from South America on oil-drilling equipment.

"We are taking a measure as a first line of defense to prevent artificial infestations in this state," he said. "If a swarm would come in on a ship from South America ... federal inspectors at the ports would immediately make efforts to exterminate them. If one were to escape, we would have some mechanism in place to trap it."

Officials would set out "bait hives" around the port to lure the killer bee before it could establish itself in a local hive, Singletary said.

The state's beekeepers endorse the bee-free zones, said David Barkley, who is New Hanover County Agricultural Extension Service's liaison with the Carolina Beekeepers Association. In fact, some beekeepers favor extending the zone farther along the Cape Fear River, he said.

"Some of our beekeepers wondered what good is a 2-mile radius around the ports ... if bees can escape anywhere from the mouth of the Cape Fear River up to the port," he said.

If a bee is aboard it is most likely that it would escape once the vessel stopped at the port, he said. Vibrations, such as those from a ship's engines, tend to keep bees settled.

Federal officials at the Wilmington port do not regularly inspect South American vessels for killer bees, said Haywood Cox, assistant regional director for the state Department of Agriculture's Plant Protection and Quarantine Division. But posters advise anyone working at the port to report sightings of any bees.

Flu Bug, Nurse Shortage Strains Hospitals

RALEIGH (AP) — An increase in flu cases and a decrease in nurses at eastern North Carolina hospitals has prompted some doctors to reschedule elective surgeries and place emergency patients in the hallways.

At the 300-bed Cape Fear Valley Medical Center in Fayetteville, an employee described the patient situation as "over full for two months now. We had to put some emergency patients in the hall."

Merle Murray, supervisor of New Hanover Memorial Hospital in Wilmington, said four smaller hospitals in nearby counties have asked for help.

"The area smaller hospitals have called asking if we had rooms, but we haven't had. They were full, too, for the same reason," Mrs. Murray said.

New Hanover has 430 beds and has been at capacity for the past three weeks, she said.

"We called some of our staff in overtime to care for the influx of patients," she said. "Some of it is due to the flu, some is due the season — cold weather and older people unable to wait on themselves getting chest congestion," Mrs. Murray told The News and Observer of Raleigh.

At Nash County General Hospital in Rocky Mount, Bill Stancil, director of public relations, said the hospital was full. He blamed the national nursing shortage and flu cases.

Nash General has 299 beds but only about 250 are open because of a shortage of nurses. "When you have a nursing shortage, you can't open all your beds. So when you get almost 'an epidemic' of flu, available beds are filled," Stancil said.

"Our beds are full, and that's continued to be the case for some time now," said Kevin Cain, a vice president at Rex Hospital in Raleigh.

"Usually in a hospital, if 90 percent of your beds are full, you'll feel like you're at capacity because you do like to have some flexibility so that things that come in through surgery or through emergency can be accommodated," he said. "We have been operating at or close to that level since the (Christmas) holidays."

When the hospital gets too crowded, elective surgeries are rescheduled, Cain said.

"We are into that acute bed shortage phase. ... You cannot do that (reschedule surgery) for everyone," Cain said. "For those people, they go into recovery and stay there longer waiting for a bed to open up and for a room to be prepared for them. When those people are in recovery they have level of medical and nursing care as they would in their own room."

Bernard Kingsley, director of marketing for Durham County General, said, "We're calling it a bed shortage, but what we mean is its a staff-bed shortage — we can only staff a certain number of beds because there's a shortage of nurses out there."

Durham General has 482 beds, and Friday it had 332 patients. "The highest occupancy we had was up to 390, that was when we had to call in temporaries. It's not a bed shortage, but if I had to suddenly fill them with patients there's no way we could get that many nurses that quickly.

"A lot of people are having serious cases of flu," Kingsley said. "It's been much worse this week."

Revenue Windfall

RALEIGH (AP) — A potential rise in the state's highway trust fund, caused by unexpected increases in collections of vehicle registration and license fees and gasoline tax revenue, is a reflection of the state's growing economy, transportation officials said.

A surge in motor vehicle travel in North Carolina is generating a $23.6 million windfall in the highway fund, state Transportation Secretary Jim Harrington said Friday after a monthly meeting of the state Board of Transportation.

"If this pattern keeps up, it could be a comfortable year next year," Harrington told The Charlotte Observer. "The bad news is that it has been caused by an increase in vehicles, which means a greater burden on North Carolina roads."

Harrington said the 6 percent to 8 percent surplus accumulated from July 1987 through February.

But he cautioned that revenues may dip before June 30, diminishing the windfall. The Transportation Department will spend about $872 million through June for highway repaving and maintenance and to match federal construction funds.

If the surplus remains intact by June 30, the end of the state's 1988 fiscal year, then the General Assembly must decide whether the department can spend it.

State transportation analysts had predicted the highway trust fund would collect $568.4 million from North Carolina motorists from July through February. But a report completed last week showed collections to be $592 million, or 4 percent ahead of schedule.

About $12.8 million of the $23 million bonus is attributed to increases in license plate and driver's license fee collections, said Bill Deal, assistant transportation secretary.

A new state law requiring insurance companies to verify that each policyholder possesses a valid driver's license upon renewal of insurance is responsible for $7 million of the increase, Deal said.

Sales of personalized license plates have increased 26.6 percent through February, netting $1.1 million since June.

North Carolina drivers have burned 2.6 billion gallons of gasoline and diesel fuel over the eight-month period, a 3.5 percent increase over last year, officials said. State coffers have netted $405.8 million in gasoline tax revenue so far, $2.7 million more than expected from the levy of 15.8 cents per gallon.

If the revenues do not decrease, Harrington said, he will consult his staff before deciding in May how he might recommend the windfall be spent. He noted that the proposed 1989 federal budget could further cut highway support for North Carolina.

Men Hurt In Crash

ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP) — Two North Carolina men were seriously injured when their single-engine plane crashed in a field west of Rock Hill Saturday afternoon, authorities said.

Officials at Charlotte Memorial Hospital said John Henning, 33, of Rockingham, N.C., suffered a broken hip and arm and facial cuts and was in serious but stable condition. He was flown to the hospital by helicopter.

Mark Merrill, 26, of Charlotte, N.C., suffered a head injury and a broken leg and was in serious condition. He was treated at Piedmont Medical Center before being taken by ambulance to Charlotte Memorial.

The airplane crashed in a pasture early Saturday afternoon. Deputies from the York County Sheriff's Department and an investigator from the Federal Aviation Administration were trying to determine what caused the crash.

A Helping Hand

The students from the university's Baptist Student Union came to help at the Redland Christian Migrant Headstart program, where migrant farm workers leave their children to toil in nearby fields.

"I went to Fort Lauderdale three years ago for spring break, and I've been coming here for two years," said Kay Watkins, 21, a Western Carolina graduate student. "There's no comparison."

As Watkins talked last week, 2-year-old Lizzy Villegas tugged on her pants leg, flashed her brown eyes and held out her arms. Watkins leaned over, and the little girl hugged her neck.

"What they do there on the beach is just for the week," Watkins said. "What we do here is lasting. The love of the kids is forever."

The children range in age from six weeks to five years. Most are Mexican-Americans whose parents work in citrus groves or citrus nurseries, said Chris Suarez, who works with the program.

Orlando native Winston Hardman is the campus minister at Western Carolina, in Cullowhee, N.C. He organized the trip to give the students a taste of mission work. About 100 students have helped the migrant program in the past three years.

Waste Site Eyed

RALEIGH (AP) — The N.C. Hazardous Waste Treatment Commission wants to buy an option on 2,700 acres of "prime industrial land" in an undisclosed county for a plant to treat and burn industrial waste, the panel's chairwoman says.

However, the commission is not ready to commit itself to that site. The commission will continue to look at any new sites that are offered, Chairwoman Deborah Parker said Friday after the commission's closed meeting.

Mrs. Parker declined to say where the 2,700-acre tract is, other than it is not in Rowan, Davidson or Davie counties. In past weeks, Mrs. Parker has said the site is in the Piedmont near a major highway and a major river.

The commission had hoped to announce its choice for a site at its meeting March 25, but she said the announcement won't come for at least 60 days.

The treatment plant, which would include two incinerators and a series of chemical treatment tanks, would cover only about 50 of the 2,700 acres, she said.

McFarlane Plea Seen As Breakthrough For Prosecutor In Iran-Contra Affair

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — By allowing Robert C. McFarlane to plead guilty to four misdemeanor counts, Independent Counsel Lawrence E. Walsh virtually secured a major prosecution witness if other players in the Iran-Contra affair go to trial.

McFarlane's promise of full cooperation as part of the plea agreement is a prize for Walsh. The former national security adviser was among the inner circle of Reagan administration aides who masterminded the Iran-Contra scheme.

Walsh said McFarlane's cooperation would solve the technical problem of "joinder." Legal experts said this means Walsh could have live testimony from a crucial player instead of having to build his case around documents.

McFarlane, who was national security adviser from October 1983 through November 1985, initiated the review of U.S. arms policy toward Iran. After leaving the White House he remained a key policymaker, leading an unsuccessful arms-for-hostages mission to Tehran in May 1986.

His guilty plea focused on his role in secret U.S. assistance to the Nicaraguan Contras at a time Congress had banned such aid.

He admitted that he withheld information about the activities of Lt. Col. Oliver L. North and other members of the National Security Council staff in three 1985 letters to House committees.

He also admitted withholding information from the House Foreign Affairs Committee when he told the panel on Dec. 8, 1986, that he was unaware of any efforts to solicit donations for the Contras from a third country.

Although Walsh and McFarlane agreed that the cooperation was voluntary, the independent counsel acknowledged McFarlane could have faced much more serious perjury charges if he was uncooperative.

Each of the misdemeanor counts of withholding information carries a maximum one year prison term. By contrast, felony perjury charges carry a maximum of five years in prison, and larger fines also could be levied.

Walsh said McFarlane's cooperation wasn't the only reason he went the misdemeanor route.

He cited McFarlane's "undisguised demonstration of remorse after the false testimony was given in which he tried to correct his testimony; and actually imposed injury upon himself in a fit of depression," a reference to McFarlane's attempted suicide via an overdose of Valium last year.

While admitting his guilt, McFarlane told reporters he acted at a time that relations between Congress and the White House "broke down so tragically."

"My actions were motivated by what I believed to be in the foreign policy interest of the United States," he said.

McFarlane's comments were reminiscent of remarks by former CIA Director Richard Helms on Oct. 31, 1977, when he pleaded no contest to two misdemeanor charges under the same law used by Walsh.

The charges against Helms arose from his testimony to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that the CIA had made no attempt to prevent the election of Marxist Salvadore Allende as president of Chile in 1970.

"I found myself in a position of conflict," said Helms. "I had sworn by my oath to preserve certain secrets ... I didn't want to lie. I didn't want to mislead the Senate. I was simply trying to find my way through a very difficult situation in which I found myself."

Races Heated Up In S.C., Illinois

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

Jesse Jackson hoped his native state of South Carolina would add to his cache of Democratic delegates Saturday, while Sen. Bob Dole was going on television for 30 minutes in Illinois to try and halt George Bush's momentum in the Republican presidential race.

Conceding that "we're hanging by our fingernails," Dole, the senator from Kansas, invested $100,000 for a live broadcast to start at 6:30 p.m., CST, on Chicago station WGN.

A Chicago Tribune poll published in Sunday editions said Bush was far ahead of Dole while homestate Sen. Paul Simon was leading the Democratic field, followed closely by Jackson.

The newspaper also endorsed Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee in the Democratic contest, passing over native Simon and Jackson, who has made Illinois his adoptive home state.

"I dare George Bush to debate Bob Dole," Dole told a news conference. In originating his broadcast from Knox College in Galesburg, he had picked the time and site to conform to Bush's appearance at the same location, he said.

Gore, whose success in Southern primaries on March 8 catapulted him into contention in the Democratic race, was counting on another boost from South Carolina.

"We have worked very hard in this state and I think we have an opportunity to extremely well here," Gore said during an appearance in Columbia, S.C.

But favored to get a majority of the 44 delegates at stake in South Carolina was Jackson, a native of Greenville.

Jackson trailed Massachusetts Gov. Dukakis by 58 in the latest Associated Press delegate count. Strong showings in South Carolina, where he was born, and Illinois, which he now calls home, could propel Jackson into the delegate lead in the Democratic race.

Appearing at a meeting of the South Carolina Education Association, Jackson said, "I'm delighted to be home again. You taught me. You can have somebody in the White House that you taught."

Rival Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri has the support of former Govs. Robert McNair and Richard Riley, and is a strong backer of legislation to limit textile imports, an important issue in South Carolina.

Gore said he too supported the legislation.

Dukakis, Jackson and Gephardt made forays Saturday into Michigan, where Democrats hold caucuses March 26.

Jackson addressed the graduation at Michigan State Unversity, recalling the tumult of the civil rights movement and calling on graduates to work for more than material wants.

"A generation of young Americans died, sacrificed to keep America better and make America strong," he said. "Your generation must resist the dangerous trend of surrendering to the war of the opiate and the war of selfishness and the war of conceit and use your strength to take the torch another lap in this great struggle."

Dukakis visited the 250-worker Olofsson Corp. plant, which makes exotic, computer-controlled machines, and said the United States needs to re-invest in its industrial base.

Dukakis, seeking Michigan union support against stiff competition from Gephardt and Jackson, said he plans to target his message to working people, teachers, homemakers and professionals.

In Illinois Dukakis began airing a new commercial that appeared to be a veiled attack on Simon who has been saying he thought the Democratic nominee would be chosen at a brokered convention.

The ad did not name Simon, but said some people want to return to "the days when you didn't really pick the presidential nominee. They say you must turn over the power to them to use at a brokered convention ... On Tuesday you can pick the next president. Mike Dukakis is running for president in every state in America."

After campaigning in the city's "Greektown" region on Friday night, Dukakis stopped Saturday at an Italian bakery on the city's west side to help bake bread. He offered a modest goal for Illinois.

"If we can get some share of the delegates, I think it would be great," he said.

Bush has repeatedly rejected Dole's debate challenges.

"That ploy has been used before," he said. "Debates are cruel and unusual punishment. We've already had seven of them."

Republican candidate Pat Robertson also was in Illinois and insisted he did not need a victory in the state to remain the race.

"It looks strong for me in the West," he said. If he loses the fight for the GOP nomination, said Robertson "I'll dust myself off and be right back in it in 1992."

In the GOP race, Bush has 705 delegates, while Dole was a distant second with 163. Robertson has 17.

Reagan Issues Veto Warning Unless Trade Bill Cleaned Up

By HENRY GOTTLIEB
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan warned House and Senate negotiators Saturday he will veto a trade bill they are preparing unless "protectionist and defeatist" provisions are eliminated.

"The conference committee working on the final draft of the bill has already eliminated a number of troublesome provisions, including illegal quotas, budget-busting giveaways and protectionist measures," Reagan said from Camp David, Md., in his weekly radio address.

He added, however, that he opposes many remaining provisions, and "I'm hopeful within the next phase these will be jettisoned. Only wholesale elimination of many of the existing items will produce a bill I can sign."

The trade bill, a 1,000-page set of provisions that have been worked on for three years, is currently the subject of negotiations involving no fewer than 17 congressional committees.

One of the casualties of the process has been a controversial, House-passed amendment that would have required 10 percent annual rollbacks in "excess and unwarranted" Japanese surpluses in trade with this country.

Reagan expressed a willingness to work with Congress to produce a bill he could sign.

"A protectionist trade bill is a serious threat to our export boom," Reagan said. "It's a serious threat to the millions of American jobs that depend upon international trade. It is filled with scores of provisions that are protectionist and defeatist."

"My veto pen is ready if the final bill remains anti-trade, anti-consumer, anti-jobs and anti-growth," he said.

With an improvement in trade in recent months, he said, a protectionist trade bill "would be like closing the barn door just when the horse is trying to get back in."

Much of the recent narrowing of the U.S. trade deficit has been credited to a decline in the value of the dollar against foreign currencies, making American goods less expensive overseas.

Reagan said, however, that since the third quarter of 1986, the merchandise trade deficit in real terms has declined 18 percent and the volume of exports has grown four times as fast as the volume of imports in the past 15 months.

"Adopting protectionist measures and starting trade wars now would be like closing the barn door just as the horses tried to get back in," he said.

Lawmakers have said they want to have the bill ready by Easter. In recent weeks, quotas on lamb imports and payments to sugar refiners hurt by imports have been stripped from the legislation by the Senate conferees.

Sen. Jeff Bingaman, D-N.M., in his party's weekly radio speech, said Reagan's upbeat comments about exports "hides our trade deficit problem — staggering figures which are monthly reminders that America is not the economic power that it was."

The 1987 trade deficit was about $170 billion.

Texas Towns Threatened By Wildfire

By EVAN RAMSTAD
Associated Press Writer

ALBANY, Texas (AP) — Residents of three West Texas communities cast anxious looks to the horizon Saturday as a wildfire that already consumed 265,000 acres of prairie threatened their towns, but one got a reprieve.

Volunteer firefighter Phillip Rodriguez said he and hundreds of other workers stopped the flames just inside the Baird city limits, near Interstate 20, about 7 a.m. Saturday.

"When it was dark, all you could see was orange rolling down the hills," said Rodriguez.

The fire, which has killed livestock, burned trailer homes and oilfield equipment and closed roads, burned through an area about 60 miles long and 25 miles wide in portions of Callahan, Shackelford and Throckmorton counties, officials said. A 20-mile-wide swath of the blaze burned out of control Saturday morning.

"Smoke is drifting across Baird. It is like we are having a big wienie roast out here," said Callahan County Sheriff's Officer Jan Davis.

Some homes were evacuated Friday night in the Hannersville section of Baird and authorities set up a command post, but no dwellings were lost in the community 21 miles east of Abilene, said Ms. Davis. Residents returned to their homes Saturday.

But in Albany, 25 miles north, the fire consumed trailers and oilfield equipment, including oil tanks, and its relentless march eastward was fanned by strong winds.

"There's plenty of damage to rangeland, oilfield equipment — including storage tanks — and some trailer houses," said Albany Mayor Wayne Hogan. "We are still trying to get it under wraps after three days. But it seems to be under better control than this time yesterday.

"But if the wind changes, which it can do real sudden, we're in trouble again," he said. Albany, a town of about 2,500 people, is the seat of Shackelford County.

In Moran, 16 miles southeast of Albany, Morris Snyder Jr. gazed with neighbors through a smoky haze at a long bluff a few miles away. "I'm kind of worried about that," said the 34-year-old rancher, pointed toward a line of flames moving toward them from the west.

"That durned thing is going to come over that bluff," said Snyder, whose land was at the southern end of the long wall of fire. "We haven't been able to control this. This is the worst anyone living here has seen. It's the worst anyone can remember."

Federal officials, at the request of Texas emergency management officials, approved aid to help reimburse the state for expenses in fighting the blaze, which began Thursday from a trash fire.

"We're concerned that with the humidity dropping back down and the winds picking back up that we may lose everything we gained (Friday night)," said Murry Fly, a spokesman for the Texas Forest Service in Lufkin.

"We have very explosive conditions," he said.

Firefighting crews arriving from around the state gave tired Forest Service crews, volunteers and National Guardsmen the chance to rest, Fly said.

Numerous firefighters, among hundreds battling the blaze, have suffered injuries from smoke inhalation and minor burns, said Tom Millwee of the Division of Emergency Management.

An aircraft tanker containing 2,000 gallons of fire retardant chemical arrived Saturday from the U.S. Forest Service in Fort Smith, Ark., said Millwee.

"The Department of Public Safety in Abilene feels that because the winds and weather are looking more and more favorable, this thing is starting to look better," he said. "But it is still not under control. It is a major disaster."

"Yesterday, no sooner than you built a fire break, the flames would jump it," said Millwee. "If the winds cooperate, they may get a better handle on the fire."

'We are trying to survey the burned area from the air because you still can't drive through most of it," said Hogan, the Albany mayor. "We lit backfires last night to protect rural houses just west of the city limits to stop the flames, advancing from the west and northwest."

Elsewhere, a range fire in Central Texas' Val Verde County had consumed about 60,000 acres, said Millwee. Texas National Guardsmen and the state Department of Highways and Public Transportation were sent to fight it.

"We now have 54 people in the area and a couple of 2½-ton trucks with water trailers out there assisting the local people," said National Guard Maj. Ed Komandosky in Austin.

"The water trailers would not be of the type that could be used for firefighting, not really big enough, but they can be used to supply drinking water and that kind of thing."

ALA Says Lung Disease Claims The Most Workers

NEW YORK (AP) — Some 65,000 Americans a year develop lung diseases from on-the-job causes, making lung disease the most common preventable cause of job-related illness and death in the country, the American Lung Association said Saturday.

Long-term exposure to cancer-causing substances in the workplace, for example, is blamed for about 16,000 lung cancer deaths a year, the association said in its 1987 annual report.

That is about 12 percent of the nation's total lung cancer deaths last year, the association said.

Among the workplace substances that cause lung cancer are arsenic, a hazard in the oil refining, smelting and mining industries; asbestos, in asbestos milling and manufacture, insulation and shipyard work; chromium, used in glassmaking, potting and battery making; nickel, in nickel refining, and petroleum products and oils, the association said.

Not everyone in those industries is exposed to those substances, however, the association noted.

Other job-related lung diseases include chronic bronchitis, a stiffening of lung tissue called pulmonary fibrosis and industrial asthma, the association said.

On other topics, the annual report said smokers who kick the habit have to wait 10 years or more before their risk of lung cancer falls to about that of people who have never smoked.

But that should not discourage smokers from quitting, because quitting causes an immediate and dramatic plunge in the risk of other diseases, especially emphysema and chronic bronchitis, the report says.

The report also calls lung cancer statistics on blacks "horrendous," resulting from higher percentages of smokers among black men and women than among whites.

In 1985, about 41 percent of black men aged 20 and older smoked, compared to about 32 percent for white men, while about 32 percent of black women smoked, compared to 28 percent of white women, the association said.

From 1973 to 1984, the lung cancer death rate among black men rose 25 percent, from 64.3 deaths per 100,000 population to 80.3, three times faster than the rate among white men, the association said in a separate statement.

For black women the death rate nearly doubled, from 11.9 per 100,000 population to 20.4, the association said.

Unusual Allergies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Some hunters develop stuffy noses, wheezing and hives around deer in what one researcher calls a case of "Bambi strikes back," and some people are literally allergic to exercise, scientists have found.

Research also shows that cockroaches often prompt asthmatics to wheeze, while fleas make others sneeze, the scientists say.

Their studies of unusual, often unrecognized and potentially deadly allergies are being presented during the American Academy of Allergy and Immunology's annual meeting, which opened Friday and ends Wednesday.

The prevalence of such allergies is unknown, but the studies suggest they probably are more common than once thought, especially among people with common allergies, such as sensitivity to pollens, household dust and foods such as peanuts and shellfish.

"There's all kind of weird triggers to allergies," said Dr. Robert K. Bush, a University of Wisconsin allergist and chief of allergy at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Madison. Bush co-authored the study of 12 deer-sensitive Wisconsin hunters with Dr. David Schroeckenstein.

"This may not be real common," Bush said of the hunters' deer dilemma. "But there are certainly a lot of people who get exposed to these animals, and the potential is there for them to become allergic."

Most of the hunters suffered congestion, hives, asthma, sneezing, runny noses, itchy eyes, and swollen eyelids and lips after inhaling deer hair or touching the animals' hair, saliva, blood or urine. One was a state "deer checker" who went into allergic shock after cutting his hand on a tag he placed on a deer. The man recovered.

"Poor Bambi gets shot. Then Bambi strikes back. That's a good headline," Bush said.

The allergy academy's president, Dr. Albert Sheffer of Harvard University Medical School, co-authored the largest study to date of exercise-induced allergic shock, which was first recognized in 1969 and is "characterized by hives, choking and-or a life-threatening drop in blood pressure and loss of consciousness."

Snowstorm Buries Upper Midwest Highways

By ROGER PETTERSON
Associated Press Writer

A major snowstorm that dumped up to 7 feet of snow shut down travel in the upper Midwest Saturday and whipped up 15-foot waves on Lake Superior, while crews worked to reopen highways across the Plains where hundreds of people had been snowbound for two days.

"It's a little better than yesterday but not much," said Roberta Welsh, Nebraska State Patrol dispatcher at Scottsbluff.

High school basketball fans spent the night stuck in a Minnesota arena after a regional playoff, one of two busloads of Nebraska youngsters snowbound at isolated farms got to go home, and delivery instructions had to be given by telephone for a South Dakota woman in labor.

In the hard-hit Nebraska Panhandle, 31 inches of snow was reported at Chadron, with 10-foot drifts at Crawford. Up to 7 feet of snow stranded skiers on Terry Peak in South Dakota's Black Hills.

The Cheyenne County, Neb., sheriff's department worked through the night and into the morning Saturday to reach people believed stranded in vehicles in the Sidney area, said dispatcher Harlan Sage.

"We'll be lucky if we don't find someone out in the country ... dead possibly," said Kimball ambulance director Jim O'Brien and Kimball County Sheriff John Thacker Jr. They said the storm was the worst to hit western Nebraska in at least 18 years.

An elderly couple from Springview, Neb., were rescued Saturday by a relative on a snowmobile after spending the night stuck in their pickup, said Keya Paha County Sheriff Gary Sell.

More than a foot of snow fell Saturday in sections of northern and central Minnesota, and it was whipped up by 50-mph wind that closed the Duluth airport for six hours. Waves estimated at 15 feet topped some seawalls along Lake Superior, the National Weather Service said.

Hundreds of Hutchinson High School girls' basketball fans, including the school band, were stranded overnight in Mankato, Minn., by snow and zero visibility after a victory in regional playoffs. The seven busloads of fans stayed in Mankato State University's arena while the team got motel rooms. The motel said they checked out Saturday morning.

Up to 8 inches of snow and strong wind drifted over roads in northern Wisconsin moments after they were plowed Saturday. "We're totally shut down," said police Sgt. William Cronin at Superior, Wis.

Snow also fell across northern Michigan. "We're getting a blizzard," said state police Sgt. Larry Brown at St. Ignace at the southeastern tip of the Upper Peninsula.

On Terry Peak in the Black Hills, skiers had been snowbound since Thursday, and Terry Peak Lodge manager Bob Ekeren said 7 feet of snow had fallen by Saturday. "We're out of bread and meat and potatoes. We're making soup."

"There's three, four feet of snow on top of cars. We can't even find them," Ekeren said at the lodge, at an elevation of 6,700 feet.

Crews in Wyoming, Nebraska and South Dakota worked Saturday to reopen roads that had been closed by drifting snow and zero visibility, some since Thursday.

More than 200 miles of Interstate 80 across Wyoming and into western Nebraska reopened Saturday and north-south I-25 was reopened in Wyoming. But many other roads in eastern Wyoming remained closed, the Highway Patrol said.

The reopening of I-80 allowed travel for the first time since Thursday out of Kimball, Neb., where some 700 people had been holed up by Saturday in motels, private homes and the Kimball County Courthouse. "We're getting some people down the road," said Carl Farmer of the sheriff's office.

Conditions in Kimball were "a tad better. We can see across the street but we've got a long ways to go," said a woman who answered the phone at the Kimball civil defense office Saturday morning.

A 200-mile section of I-94 in North Dakota, closed Friday afternoon, was reopened Saturday but 265 miles of I-90 in South Dakota remained closed from the Missouri River to Wyoming.

A woman went into labor Friday on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation in southwestern South Dakota but could not reach a hospital, so a doctor had to give advice over the telephone, said Marleen Jensen of the Bennett County sheriff's office in Martin.

Two busloads of children spent a second night snowbound in isolated farmhouses in western Nebraska and awakened Saturday to blowing snow but clear sky. "We're encouraged this morning," said Linda Barrett, one of the bus drivers.

She and Sharon Grubbs were driving children home Thursday when the sudden storm cut visibility to zero.

Road crews reached Grubbs and her riders, aged 7 to 13, Saturday at the farm of Jack and Karen Holt, about 17 miles from Harrisburg. One child remained at the Holts because her parents were both stranded away from home.

Holt had been snowed in elsewhere and Mrs. Holt and her visitors were without electricity from Thursday night to Saturday morning.

Mrs. Barrett and her 13 passengers remained at Agnes Wynne's farm and slept wall-to-wall in her two-bedroom house. "There's snow halfway up the windows," Mrs. Barrett said Saturday.

A neighbor on a snowmobile took buffalo meat, eggs and bread to the Wynne farm Saturday morning because food was running short, Mrs. Barrett said.

Cultural Exchange Hailed By Envoys

BOSTON (AP) — A three-week festival featuring Soviet music opened with envoys for President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev praising the organizers of the cultural exchange for bringing the two countries closer together.

"Making Music Together," with its 285 Soviet musicians, dancers, composers and other artists, is the first part of an exchange that will bring a celebration focusing on American contemporary music to Moscow in the fall of 1989.

Reagan's praise came in a letter to Sarah Caldwell, a key organizer of the exchange and artistic director of the Opera Company of Boston. It was read Friday night by Greg Guroff of the government-run U.S. Information Agency.

The letter described the event as "one of the most ambitious cultural projects ever undertaken between the United States and the Soviet Union ... a testament to the potential of U.S.-Soviet cooperation in artistic and cultural endeavors."

'Platoon' Viewers

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — "Platoon," the critically acclaimed film about America's moral anguish and loss of innocence on Vietnam's battlefields, has been drawing tens of thousands of Vietnamese viewers, according to the official Vietnam News Agency.

People have been flocking to watch the film on video in Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon, said a VNA report seen in Bangkok on Saturday.

The agency said "Platoon" was the first U.S. film about the Vietnam war to be screened in Ho Chi Minh City since the communist victory over U.S.-backed South Vietnam in April 1975.

The brief report noted that the film was directed by Oliver Stone, who had fought in Vietnam, and that it received Academy Awards in 1987.

Convicted Killer Rolls The Dice As New Execution Date Nears

By RON WORD
Associated Press Writer

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A condemned man who insists he's innocent and whose case has become a rallying cry for death penalty opponents is seeking his seventh reprieve from the electric chair, with just two days left before his scheduled execution.

Willie Jasper Darden faces execution early Tuesday at Florida State Prison near Starke for the September 1973 killing of furniture store owner Carl Turman during a $15 robbery.

"Let me tell you something. Willie Darden is not a murderer!" Darden, 54, told The Associated Press in a 1985 interview, a claim that he has made to dozens of reporters who have interviewed him.

Darden has received six stays of execution, more than any other Florida inmate, and his case has attracted international attention, with supporters saying he was a victim of racial prejudice at his trial because he is black.

Two witnesses say they have information to back up his story, but their accounts were dismissed as mistaken and not new by the lawyer who prosecuted Darden.

"There is no question he is guilty," Ray McDaniel, now a Bartow attorney, said Friday in a telephone interview.

McDaniel said he believed Darden will die Tuesday. "I don't think you will find a judge with the guts to issue a stay," he said.

"I think it's time. I think it's about 12 years too late," McDaniel said, who added that Darden was linked, but never charged, with other murders.

Attorneys for the Office of Capital Collateral Review filed an appeal Friday with the Florida Supreme Court.

Darden's is one of the most-litigated cases involving a death row inmate, with nearly 100 judges involved in decisions. It has been before the U.S. Supreme Court four times already.

McDaniel discounted the assertions of two people who repeated claims Friday at an Amnesty International news conference in Tallahassee that they believe Darden is innocent.

The Rev. Sam Sparks, a Baptist minister, and Christine Bass, a Lakeland secretary, said they had information they say might clear Darden of the crime.

"I know Willie Darden is innocent. It is not a belief, it is a knowledge," said Ms. Bass.

Sparks said Turman's wife had told him that all blacks looked alike to her and that her identification of Darden was unimportant because lawyers had told her that Darden committed the crime. Helen Baum, formerly Helen Turman, recently denied having made that statement to Sparks and reaffirmed her identification of Darden as the man who shot her husband.

Ms. Bass said Darden's car was broken down near her home until a tow truck arrived about 25 minutes before the robbery, eight miles away.

McDaniel said the two are mistaken about the times and that the defense knew their claims at the time of the trial.

Amnesty International officials have claimed Gov. Bob Martinez is rushing to execute Darden for political reasons.

The governor signed a seventh death warrant for Darden on March 8, just a day after the U.S. Supreme Court refused to intervene, and set his execution for Tuesday, giving Darden's attorneys less than a week to prepare his case.

"I think what the governor is looking for some kind of ritualistic sacrifice that he can go through to prove he's tough on crime," said Magdaleno Rose-Avila, national director of Amnesty International's campaign to abolish the death penalty. He noted that the governor's popularity rating has been low in recent polls.

When Martinez signed the sixth death warrant in Darden's case earlier this year, Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov, American actress Margot Kidder and British rock star Peter Gabriel urged clemency for Darden. Sakharov won the 1975 Nobel Peace prize for his defense of human rights in the Soviet Union.

The governor's spokesman said politics had nothing to do with the decision.

"International attention has no real bearing on whether a legally imposed sentence that has been upheld by the courts should be carried out," said press secretary Jon Peck.

Father Turned In Sons For Murder

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A father whose two teen-age sons joined the racist Skinheads group turned them in to police after one of them confessed to fatally stabbing a homeless black man.

"I can't elaborate on it. But I will say that I did turn them in," Lowell "Bud" McKee told the St. Petersburg Times. "There are more things involved than I can make public."

Scott McKee, 18, and Dean McKee, 16, members of the Skinheads, a group known for its hatred of blacks, Jews and homosexuals, were arrested March 4 and charged with first-degree murder in the December slaying of Isiah Walker, 41.

McKee, who adopted the boys in 1977 after marrying their mother, also told The Tampa Tribune he tried to commit his younger son to a crisis unit last month but gave up after he was referred from agency to agency.

He sought treatment for Dean after the boy ran away several times and threatened to kill his mother and himself if he were placed in a program for disturbed children, McKee said. He did not know about the slaying at the time, he said.

McKee said he wanted to get his son committed under the state's mental health act, which lets judges order the temporary detention of anyone deemed by mental health experts to be a danger to themselves or others. But mental health officials said threats don't always constitute proof of mental illness.

Dean was hospitalized for two months at age 15 after attempting suicide and had private counseling for six months after he was released, McKee said.

Classy Getaway

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — It was an unforgettable getaway car, unfortunately for a man accused of using the white Cadillac limousine in two holdups and one attempted robbery.

A man dressed in a black leather jacket entered a doughnut shop early Friday and demanded money, police said. He got $20 and sped off in the white limousine, victims told officers. Soon afterward, a man tried to hold up a convenience store but fled without any money, again in a white Cadillac.

At another convenience store, the man escaped with $6, and witnesses remembered the limousine and black leather jacket, too.

Alexander J. Fulton Jr., 36, came out of his house while police were checking the car and asked what was going on, police said.

Police found a black leather jacket, and witnesses identified both Fulton and the car, they said. Fulton was booked on two counts of armed robbery and one of attempted armed robbery.

Iran Claims Iraq Attack On Town Violated Truce

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraq said Saturday its jets hit a tanker in the Persian Gulf and an oil pumping station on the Iranian mainland, indicating a return of hostilities to economic targets during a truce in the "war of the cities."

But Iran later accused Iraq of violating the truce by sending a warplane to bomb the town of Gachsaran in southwestern Iran.

Tehran Television, monitored in Cyprus, quoted a spokesman for the War Information Headquarters as saying the plane was "forced to flee under heavy anti-aircraft fire."

He said the aircraft was seen "dropping it bombs out of frustration in a desert area."

The unidentified spokesman said the incident "indicates Iraq wants to continue its acts of mischief, and the Islamic combatants will not remain silent if civilian targets are attacked again." Iraq did not comment on the report.

Iran's Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Cyprus, earlier reported that Revolutionary Guards attacked and set ablaze the offshore Al-Amaya radar facility in the northern tip of the gulf Friday night.

Al-Amaya had been transformed by the Iraqis from an oil platform to monitor activity in the gulf. IRNA said surface-to-air and shore-to-sea missile pads on the facility were destroyed in the attack.

The official Iraqi News Agency, also monitored in Cyprus, reported that Iraqi warplanes blasted the Imam Hassan oil pumping station in southwestern Iran Saturday afternoon.

The agency quoted an unidentified Iraqi military spokesman as saying the facility was "totally destroyed."

In an earlier dispatch, Iraq reported to have struck a "very large maritime target" off the Iranian coast Friday night. The attack was not independently verified by gulf-based shipping executives.

INA quoted a military spokesman as saying the Iraqi warplanes scored "an accurate and effective hit" on the vessel, and returned safely.

It quoted a spokesman as saying the raids reflected Iraq's "determination to destroy Iran's economic lifeline and deprive the enemy of revenues employed to finance aggression."

The cease-fire in the "war of the cities" passed the 24-hour mark, with no attacks on each other's capitals or major population centers.

Hundreds of civilian casualties were reported in the unprecedented 12-day duel. Iraq claimed to have hurled 71 long-range missiles into Tehran and two other cities and Iran said it fired 29 missiles at Iraqi cities.

The barrage ended Friday afternoon after Iraq fired eight rockets at Tehran and three at the holy city of Qom, the last one just 16 minutes before the 4 p.m. truce deadline.

Iraq had made its right to fire the last shot a precondition for the truce, on grounds that Iran, the "aggressive party," had triggered the exchange.

Iraq's terms for the cease-fire also stipulated that Tehran not attempt to launch a ground offensive against any Iraqi population centers.

It did not bar either side from continuing to attack military or economically strategic targets.

Ali Ahani, director general of European and American affairs of Iran's Foreign Ministry, speaking in the Hague, Netherlands, said Iran will unleash a new battlefront offensive against Iraq in response to the missile attacks.

"We are going to give a decisive response in the war of the fronts because of this bloodshed," he said, refusing to provide specifics on the offensive.

Baghdad's officially controlled press called the cease-fire a triumph and warned Iran against resuming the bombardment, INA said.

Al-Thawra, voice of Iraq's ruling Arab Baath Socialist Party, said the missile war taught the "charlatans of Iran" a "painful, bitter lesson." It said any Iranian "violation" of the cease-fire "would, for sure, generate a devastating Iraqi reply."

Iraq had vowed to disrupt oil exports by which Iran finances its share of the 7½-year-old war. The attacks concentrate on Iran's government-owned or chartered tankers that shuttle oil from Kharg Island in the northern gulf to centers in safer waters near the Strait of Hormuz.

Iraq broke a three-week lull in the "tanker war" on Wednesday, when its warplanes struck the 41,195-ton Maltese-flag tanker Tenacity.

Baghdad reported another attack on Friday, which like the one it claimed on Saturday, could not be confirmed.

The Iranians retaliate for Iraqi raids with attacks on neutral commercial shipping. Although gulf radio monitors say Iranian gunboats were actively challenging ships in the southern gulf in recent days, there have been no attacks since Feb. 11.

Indications arose of a new potential threat to shipping in the southern gulf, where Iran was reported by U.S. military sources to be building launch pads for its Chinese-made Silkworm anti-ship missiles on Abu Musa, a tiny island used as a base by Iran's Revolutionary Guards.

The Washington-based sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said American intelligence had detected no sign of actual missiles being installed.

Positioning the weapons, which have a range of 50 miles on Abu Musa would extend the so-called "Silkworm envelope" by about 100 miles into the gulf.

ROYAL WIRE WALKER — Britain's Prince Charles negotiates a river bridge made from only three strands of wire during a 1987 visit to the Lochabar mountain rescue team at the foot of Ben Nevis in Scotland. Charles' love for spills and thrills has always been known, but his involvement in an avalanche Thursday, which resulted in one man's death, has caused new discussion about his behavior. Sadat Kin In Trouble

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — A prosecutor charged Saturday that Anwar Sadat's brother and other relatives used the slain president's name "to ruin the country" and should lose $8.2 million in property as punishment.

Esmat Sadat, already convicted of using his brother's position to enrich himself during Anwar Sadat's 11 years in office, responded that the prosecution was sullying the late president's name by making the accusations.

The exchange came during a hearing of the Ethics Court to decide whether the assets of Esmat Sadat, three sons and seven other family members should be confiscated.

The property, estimated at $8.2 million, was sequestered in 1983 after the defendants' convictions on influence peddling, black marketeering, bribery and other charges. Esmat Sadat and three sons were sentenced to one-year prison terms.

The court adjourned Saturday after both sides presented their arguments. A decision is expected on April 9.

As the prosecution presented its case Saturday, blaming Sadat's relatives for "using the late leader's name to ruin the country," Esmat stood and objected vigorously.

Royal Daredevil Has Britain Edgy

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Falling off horses, plummeting oceanward in a tangled parachute or fleeing an avalanche on a ski slope, Prince Charles maintains an old royal tradition of thrills and spills.

The royal pratfall had become enshrined as a national joke until Thursday, when Charles narrowly escaped an avalanche that killed his close friend, Maj. Hugh Lindsay, on a Swiss ski slope.

British hearts missed a beat realizing how close the avalanche had come to claiming the 39-year-old heir to the throne. "It is only when you nearly lose someone that you become fully conscious of how much you value them," commented novelist A.N. Wilson in the Daily Mail.

Inevitably, a cry went up for the royals to stop playing daredevil. But at the same time Britons have come to expect it of them, judging by the derision Charles's youngest brother Edward has suffered in some quarters for shunning rugby and quitting the Royal Marines prematurely.

Zooming down the slopes with Charles at the Swiss resort of Klosters were his wife, Princess Diana, and sister-in-law Sarah, the Duchess of York.

On the morning of the avalanche, Sarah, 28 and four months pregnant, tumbled into a river while skiing. That probably was the only reason she and Diana stayed in their chalet and were not on the slopes when the avalanche broke loose.

Sarah's husband Prince Andrew, Charles's other brother, was off the Portuguese coast aboard the navy ship on which he serves as a helicopter warfare instructor. A few hours after the avalanche, the vessel lost a helicopter and two crewmen at sea.

Andrew flew combat missions in the 1982 Falkland Islands war, and few suggested he shouldn't. Risking one's life for the public good is a tradition set in stone by King George VI, when he refused to flee London during Hitler's blitz.

Charles's sister, Anne, races horses and sometimes falls off them. His father, Prince Philip, was a polo player and took a well-photographed spill in a carriage-driving race. His mother, Queen Elizabeth II, also is an accomplished, though more sedate, equestrian.

Anne's husband, Capt. Mark Phillips, has suffered a few riding spills. He is also a repeat offender at the wheel, and recently was fined for clocking more than 100 mph on a 70-mph highway.

On the outer fringes of royalty, risky sports and high-speed driving are routine. In 1972, Prince William of Gloucester, a cousin of the queen, was killed flying in an air race.

Charles has taken innumerable knocks on the sportsfields. He has a small facial scar from a fall playing polo, and in Florida he collapsed dehydrated during a match.

On his first ski run he pitched headfirst into snow. Flying a light plane he came within seconds of a midair collision.

His first parachute jump in 1971 came equally close to disaster. His foot snarled in the cords and he plunged thousands of feet upside down before righting himself and ending up in the ocean.

Charles's biographer, Anthony Holden, notes that the prince's grand-uncle, Edward VIII, was forced by his father to give up steeplechasing in the 1930s, but says it's unlikely the same will happen to Charles.

"We cannot legislate about whether the Prince of Wales goes skiing or not," he told a BBC interviewer.

"It's in his character. He feels a need to prove himself physically."

In Charles, royalty-watchers see the dilemma of a vigorous man in the prime of life, well-aware of his privileged status and feeling forever compelled to justify it.

Forced to stay out of politics, the endearingly jug-eared prince is limited to speaking out on issues like modern architecture and the plight of Britain's inner cities.

He can only hint at his state of mind through remarks to friends that reach the media second-hand. The picture that emerges is of a man searching for a role, fearful of becoming a museum piece.

He is exasperated at being labeled an eccentric because he is interested in alternative medicine, communes in solitude with nature and once let on that he talks to his plants.

His reverence for nature permeated the elegant, passionate statement he issued after the avalanche.

He spoke of mountains needing to be "treated with the greatest respect," and of the avalanche as "a whirling maelstrom as the whole mountainside seemed to hurtle past us into the valley below."

The Times of London, weighing the calls for the prince to stop taking risks, concluded Saturday that he should carry on regardless.

Soccer Match Stampede Leaves Over 90 Dead

By BINAYA GURUACHARYA
Associated Press Writer

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — Thousands of soccer fans Saturday stampeded into locked stadium exits to escape a sudden hailstorm, killing at least 93 in the crush, witnesses and hospital sources said.

Gumball-sized ice pellets rained down on the 30,000 fans watching a match between Nepalese and Bangladeshi teams at the National Stadium. Eyewitnesses said screaming spectators rushed to the stadium's eight exits but found only one open.

Police and hospital sources in the city confirmed more than 70 people, including two police officers, were trampled to death or suffocated. Government television reported 73 people were killed, and witnesses said another 20 bodies left at the stadium were later retrieved by relatives.

More than 100 people were hospitalized with injuries. Hospital sources said 12 were in serious condition. Many more were were treated and released.

At the government-run Bir Hospital near the stadium, Maya Laxmi Vaidya, a white-haired woman clad in a sari, said her 12-year-old grandson was killed in the stampede.

"I've told my family not go out on Saturday. Older people understand this and don't go out," she said.

The day is considered unlucky among Nepal's Hindus. It is named for the planet Saturn, which in Hindu mythology possesses strong negative powers.

The government ordered a judicial commission to investigate the disaster and announced payments of $450 to relatives of the dead and $90 to the injured.

Crowds angered by authorities' failure to open the gates attacked three cars with government license plates outside the stadium with rocks, smashing windshields.

Reporters who arrived at the stadium moments later found it largely deserted. Sandals and shoes littered the ground near the one open gate.

Witnesses said most of the deaths occurred there, as spectators who found other exits locked rushed toward the only outlet.

Ram Bista, a teletype operator who took part in rescue efforts, said spectators who got outside commandeered vehicles to rush victims to hospitals.

"We stopped all buses, all taxis, all rickshaws," he said.

One spectator who demanded anonymity accused police of being "selfish. They took care of themselves and nobody came to help the crowd," he said.

It was Nepal's worst sports-related disaster on record.

The downtown stadium was filled almost to capacity for the final game of a major tournament in Nepal's most popular sport. The Tribhuvan Challenge Shield Cup, named for a former Nepalese king, pitted a team from the National Cigarette Factory against the Mukti Joddha, meaning "Freedom Fighters," from nearby Bangladesh.

Stadium officials said none of the athletes was involved in the stampede or was injured.

Despite sunshine for most of the day, the storm howled through this Himalayan capital at midafternoon, packing winds of more than 50 mph. It uprooted trees throughout Katmandu Valley and temporarily disrupted telex lines.

On Thursday evening, panicked soccer fans in Tripoli, Libya fled knife-wielding ruffians and triggered the collapse of a sports stadium, killing at least 20 people, news reports from Malta and Yugoslavia said.

The reports conflicted with those from the Libyan news agency JANA, which said two people were killed and 16 were hospitalized.

The worst soccer disaster on record took place on May 24, 1964, when rioting left nearly 300 dead and 500 injured after Argentina beat Peru on a last-minute goal in Lima.

On May 29, 1985, 39 people died at Heysel Stadium in Brussels, Belgium, when British soccer fans went on a rampage against Italian fans.

Fifty-three fans died on May 11, 1985, when a fire engulfed the main stand during a match at Bradford City's soccer stadium in northern England.

On Jan. 2, 1971, 66 people died when an overcrowded stairway collapsed during a local soccer match between Glasgow Rangers and Celtic in Glasgow, Scotland.

In 1969, El Salvador and Honduras suffered thousands of casualties in the so-called "Soccer War," which began after a disputed soccer match between the two countries. The brief war was provoked by Honduras' decision to expel many Salvadorans who had settled in Honduras.

Elections Protest

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — About 150 people rode a convoy of 47 trucks and vans through Taipei on Saturday to demand direct elections for Taiwan's provincial governor and the mayors of the island's two largest cities.

U.S. Agents Help In Anti-Drug War

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Drug Enforcement Administration, at the invitation of Bolivia, Peru and Ecuador, has been assisting an offensive aimed at South American cocaine-processing facilities and growing areas that was first tried with U.S. military troops amid much controversy in 1986.

Under the initiative, DEA officials say, specially trained U.S. drug agents with the assistance of aircraft from the agency are accompanying Bolivian military forces into the jungles of that country and locating cocaine processing laboratories, which are then dismantled by the troops.

The effort, begun last year, is a continuation and broadening of Operation Blast Furnace in 1986, DEA spokesman Cornelius Dougherty said. In Blast Furnace, 170 U.S. Army personnel raided about 20 drug lab sites in Bolivia. The injection of U.S. troops drew criticism from civil liberties groups concerned about the use of the military to enforce civilian laws.

"We're working with the governments in the primary coca-growing countries of Peru and Bolivia, where they are using their troops and we are sending along DEA advisers as intelligence experts," Dougherty said.

The agents have undergone extensive training in weapons, language and jungle survival, in addition to the regular 14 weeks of field training DEA agents take. The jungle survival training is given by the U.S. Army special forces, the Green Berets.

In Peru, DEA agents began in mid-1987 to help immobilize and disrupt the flow of cocaine products from the principal area of that country where illicit coca is cultivated, the Upper Huallaga Valley. Extensive production of coca paste and cocaine base also takes place there, David L. Westrate, assistant DEA administrator for operations, said in congressional testimony earlier this month.

Partly as a result of the effort, there have been substantial seizures of coca leaves, cocaine base and chemicals used in producing coca paste and base, Westrate said.

Under an agreement made in 1987 with Bolivia, DEA agents helped the government there locate and destroy numerous coca processing facilities. A total of 26 labs for producing coca base or refining it were seized last year in Bolivia, Westrate said.

DEA agents also are taking a more active role in Ecuador, a transit country for large amounts of chemicals used in processing cocaine in other South American countries, DEA officials said. Most of the coca paste produced in Ecuador is transported to Colombia for conversion to cocaine hydrochloride.

Israeli Tactics Prompt Arab Police To Quit

By DAN IZENBERG
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — Hundreds of Palestinian policemen in the occupied territories resigned Saturday to protest Israeli treatment of Palestinians, prompting fears that other Arab employees of the government would follow suit.

Israel radio said close to 450 of the roughly 1,000 Arab police officers in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip have quit their jobs in the past two days and more resignations are expected.

Israeli and Palestinian officials said at least 330 had resigned and that they would take effect Monday.

Israeli bullets and beatings have killed 87 Palestinians in anti-occupation unrest since Dec. 8.

The resignations began Friday, one day after underground leaders of the disturbances in the occupied territories called on the Arab policemen to resign immediately. Some officers reported that their lives had been threatened.

Israeli warplanes, meanwhile, struck at guerrilla targets east of the port town of Sidon in southern Lebanon, the army command said.

Israel television reported that at least eight people were killed in the air raid, Israel's second this year against Palestinian targets in south Lebanon.

In other developments, 200,000 left-wing Israelis gathered in Tel Aviv to urge Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir to support a U.S. peace initiative that would allow limited self-rule for the Arabs in the occupied lands.

In the West Bank, Israeli soldiers shot and seriously wounded a Palestinian from the village of Bani Naim, near Hebron, after he threw a hand grenade at them, the army command said. The grenade did not explode.

In Nur el-Shams, near Tulkarem, a 50-year-old woman was wounded when prison service employees opened fire after their bus was stoned.

The continuing unrest in the occupied territories appears to be putting a severe strain on Israel's defense forces.

The weekend edition of Yediot Ahronot, the country's largest newspaper, carried at least four ads offering security-related jobs.

One ad sought recruits for a new police anti-terror unit. Another asked for Arab-speaking officers holding the rank of captain or major for "special work involving contact with the local population."

Other ads offered jobs to Arabic language translators along Israel's northern border and civilian guards to protect the Israeli-Egyptian border.

The mass resignation of Palestinian police officers will add a new strain and could be the harbinger of larger and more serious defections to come.

Bethlehem Mayor Elias Freij said the mass resignations "will vastly affect the process of the courts in the West Bank, and it is a precedent for many more civil servants to resign."

About 18,000 Palestinians work for the military government in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

National police spokesman Adi Gonen warned that the resignations would hurt the Palestinians themselves.

"The (Arab) police were not used for intelligence purposes, to put down protests or for anything political," said Gonen. "If they quit, we will have to reduce police activities and that will affect the quality of Palestinian life."

The resignations indicated the growing loss of control by Israel over the occupied territories and deprived it of a potent symbol of cooperation and coexistence with the Palestinians.

A survey by The Associated Press indicated that most of the 250 policemen in the southern part of the West Bank have handed in their resignations.

Arab police at the Ramallah station said all 50 policemen were quitting. Freij said that all 50 policemen in his district had resigned. The Arab-run Palestine Press Service put the figure in Hebron at at least 68.

Mordechai Bareket, police spokesman for the southern section of the occupied West Bank, said "over 100 policemen" handed in their resignations over the past two days.

Israel radio reported that 100 policemen in Gaza and 30 in the northern district of the West Bank also said they were leaving the force.

Police spokesmen said they were trying to persuade the Palestinian police officers to change their minds.

"We are talking to each one of them individually and looking into each of their problems," said Chaim Alter, commander of the northern West Bank police district.

The order to resign was issued Thursday by the National United Command of the Uprising.

Mustafa Adani, who resigned Friday, said his life had been threatened twice.

Earlier this week, a policeman from the Aqbat Jaber refugee camp near Jericho was killed.

RIOTERS DISPERSED — An Israeli solder shoots tear gas at demonstrators Saturday near the Ramallah hospital on the occupied West Bank. The demonstrators blocked a few roads near the hospital with burning tiers and rocks and hurled the rocks at troops. (AP Laserphoot)

Polish Defectors Eye Their Dream

By GEORGE JAHN
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Zbigniew Nowakowski jumped ship in the dead of winter with little more than the clothes on his back and hope. Less than two months later, he and fellow defectors from Polish vessels are working to build their personal American dream.

Nowakowski and 16 other Polish seamen walked off four ships docked in or near Boston in late January, saying they wanted to flee oppressive political and economic conditions at home.

Most left wives and children. None spoke English. They have had their share of struggle. But they say they have no regrets.

"I knew it would be difficult at first, and I expected hardships," said Nowakowski, 36. "I have no intention of ever leaving."

Defector Artur Misiaczuk shook his head vehemently when asked if he ever considered returning to Poland during the darker moments of his adventure.

"Return? No, this is my home now," he said.

The two men, both of whom say they were members of the outlawed Solidarity free trade union, spoke Friday through an interpreter.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service is processing asylum requests from the 17. While declining specific comments about the applications, INS District Director Charles Cob said requests from Soviet bloc countries "have a higher percentage of approval than those from other countries do."

Sitting in a booth of the Polish-American Citizens Club in Dorchester, a tough, working-class section of Boston, Nowakowski and Misiaczuk chainsmoked American cigarettes, a luxury in their homeland.

"Our initial dream has come true, and that is to have the freedom of mobility," said Misiaczuk, 25, who left his wife and 11-month-old daughter in the seaport of Szeczin.

"We want to fullfil our personal American dream, which is the American dream of all immigrants who come here, to eventually bring our families here and to continue living and working and geting acclimated to American society," he said.

"I intend to work very hard in the next 20 years," he said. "To me, the most important thing is that I am free now and I will be free in 20 years.

"Our overall goal is to be with our families, and yes, to have our own homes eventually, a nice place to live and for our families to live with us."

The two now share a two-bedroom apartment in South Boston with two fellow Polish defectors. Nowakowski works nights in a food processing plant, while Misiaczuk is a general laborer for a construction contractor.

Neither the cramped quarters nor the hard work draw complaints. Nowakowski, a trained refrigeration technician who attends English classes by day, spoke with relish about working his way up.

"Eventuallly, through school and my own personal ambition, I'd like to have my own business," he said.

Jet's Passengers Subdued Hijacker

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — A man waving a pistol rushed the cockpit of a passenger jet Saturday and demanded the pilot fly him to India or Afghanistan, then shot a guard three times before passengers pummeled and subdued him.

The Pakistan International Airlines jet was carrying 143 passengers and 13 crew members on a domestic flight from Karachi to Quetta when the attempted hijacking took place about seven minutes before landing, said APP, the Pakistani national news agency.

The hijacker also reportedly suffered a gunshot wound during the scuffle with the guard and passengers. There were no other injuries and the aircraft landed safely, the news agency said.

The news agency said a man identified as Mannan Achakzai, 28, from the Baluchistan province was arrested. It said two other passengers also were detained as suspected accomplices, but had no details.

The plane, an A-300 Airbus, was preparing to land at Quetta in Baluchistan, near the Afghan border in western Pakistan.

APP said a man from the first-class section apparently went to the bathroom, then returned shortly afterward with a revolver and rushed toward the the cockpit.

The gunmen shouted at the pilot to divert the aircraft to either the Afghan capital of Kabul or to New Delhi, APP said. It gave no information on the gunman's motive.

A guard on the aircraft, Liaquat Ali, tried to overpower the gunman but was shot three times in the back.

Two passengers "jumped on the hijacker and unleashed a volley of blows and punches," APP said. Officials identified the two passengers as provincial government ministers Masir Mengal and Mohammad Rind.

An airport official who spoke on condition of anonymity said that Achakzai was wounded by a bullet fired from his own revolver during the scuffle.

Two doctors, one Pakistani and one Dutch, were on board the plane and administered aid to the guard and gunmen, APP said.

"It was a miracle that the air guard survived although he was hit thrice," Dr. Louis Koster, a Dutch physician who was on board the flight, was quoted as saying. "Fortunately, none of the bullets could pierce through any vital organ."

Airport security is extremely heavy in Pakistan and airport officials could not explain how the gun was brought on board. Passengers must pass through two metal detectors and have their carry-on luggage inspected at least three times before boarding.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Discipline Move Toward Stronger ECU Standards

The suspension of five athletes charged with crimes from the East Carolina University football team is a move toward setting clear and appropriate standards for those involved in the University's athletic programs.

Those standards should be applauded and supported and ECU officials should apply them fairly and consistently to the athletic programs when violations occur. This approach can be seen as a new direction which can further the quality and integrity of ECU athletics.

The innocence or guilt of the five players in question can, and should, be determined only in court. Once a verdict is reached and the issue is cleared, ECU officials can take appropriate action as needed.

It is essential the University honor its educational obligation to these students. But suspending those accused of illegalities from athletic participation is appropriate.

Athletics is the University's most visible ambassador. The young men and women who represent ECU in the competitive arena bear a responsibility to behave in a manner that reflects the propriety of that privilege. Certainly, if there is any question regarding an athlete's actions, suspension from play is the correct course.

A University has the obligation to require uncompromising standards of its athletes. It must articulate those expectations clearly, and apply them consistently. The strict disciplinary action taken by athletic director Dave Hart and head football coach Art Baker last week sends the message that ECU will not tolerate allegations of rules and propriety that bring negative attention to the University.

It is a message that is overdue from ECU athletics but one that should be welcomed and encouraged by students, fans and supporters. Such a firm-handed approach can provide the athletic department with long-needed accountability.

Only with this accountability and increased integrity can the University truly excel in athletic competition. The strong actions mark a change in attitude at the University, one which can move ECU athletics in a direction befitting both the athletes' and supporters' needs.

Sunday Morning Notes

Garbage along the state's highways is a common sight; so common, in fact, that we almost don't see it any more.

Ride any major highway leading through Pitt County and it is certain there will be beer cans, soft drink bottles, assorted hamburger wrappers, french fry containers, bags ... you name it. There are those who dump large garbage bags filled with a week's supply of discards along the highway shoulders. Never mind if the bag happens to burst and the garbage is strewn along the highway right-of-way. That is the product of people too lazy to drive to a trash container and properly dispose of their garbage.

Now comes along new fun for those who think it is great to ruin what all the taxpayers of North Carolina have paid for. Four wheel drive vehicles are driven into the soft shoulders of roads — particularly on new stretches like U.S. 264 east and west — and wheels are spun until the newly planted grass is chewed up and spit out along with the soil.

Of course, all of this costs the taxpayers many thousands of dollars. Just cleaning up the junk is expensive. Replacing torn up shoulders and reseeding is even more expensive.

What to do?

Well the stocks would be too good for people who ruin the beauty of the countryside for the great majority of us who respect that. The stocks, however, went out with colonial times, evidently considered too much public ridicule to be acceptable punishment.

What else? If we could catch such people there was a time when public service projects were given as an alternative to jail sentence.

What a pleasure it would be to see convicted culprits picking up trash along a highway right-of-way. What a message that would send to others who might want to throw their junk out the auto window.

Or how about seeing those who tear up the shoulders out there with shovels repairing the damage they did? It would be hard physical labor but somebody has to do it.

Our society is now too civilized to impose such inhumane punishment. So, assuming we do catch somebody, it will mean a fine, and then back to the highways to litter and rip up some more. For those who get their kicks this way, is there any cheaper form of entertainment?

Before the phone calls come, I recognize there is a large majority of four-wheel drive operators out there who respect the environment. Many of them are hunters and fishermen and they are at the forefront in understanding that maintaining the natural habitat is to everyone's advantage.

Most of us also drive through the countryside without ever throwing out so much as a chewing gum wrapper. As with everything else, most of us abide by the rules of a civilized society.

Screening Process Invaluable Tool

City officials seem pleased with the rigorous screening process which was undertaken prior to choosing the new police chief, Jerry Tesmond.

In assessing the process, City Manager Greg Knowles said it was long and arduous.

The pool of applicants was narrowed to seven and an outside group of experts served as judges to assess the candidates face to face.

"I think the assessment center was excellent because it indicated the strengths and weaknesses of all the candidates," the city manager said.

Knowles sees the assessment center as crucial in choosing the new chief.

The final step, however, was a visit by Knowles to the prospective chief's community. There he talked with police officers, community leaders — anyone who could be helpful in making the assessment. Knowles also talked to minority officers on the force concerning the affirmative action plan.

Following all that, the decision was made to hire the new chief.

Mayor Ed Carter praised the selection process. He said it was a methodical and thorough approach in analyzing backgrounds and capabilities of the candidates.

The selection process required months and was delayed some because a new city manager was selected during the same period.

The screening process has merit. Both Greenville and Pitt County governments have grown large enough so some top administrative positions require careful review in the hiring process. The community is going to need the best to provide the efficiency in government that the taxpayers have a right to expect. Certainly that means candidates for such positions should be just as carefully screened. Following that course, the community can be confident that everything has been done to hire the best administrators possible.

'Super Tuesday' Results Shatter Illusions

Ross Baker

How symbolic it was that, on the way into television studios in Washington for a post-election interview Tuesday night, Charles Robb, former Virginia governor and the founding father of "Super Tuesday," ran smack into a plate-glass door. The incident was emblematic of the smashing of some illusions about who it is that votes for Democratic presidential candidates.

The air is now full of bogus rationalizations on the part of some of the Southern Democrats and Washington insiders who staged the event. In their desire to amplify the voice of the South and to come up with a kind of peckerwood Paraclete, they succeeded only in shooting Dixie's wad. They accomplished it in a single day, and they deprived the South of any further voice in the selection of the Democratic nominee.

It is important to understand the confused state of mind of the inventors of Super Tuesday. They fancy that out there somewhere in the country there are vast numbers of white male voters straining to find a Democratic presidential candidate to support if only that person had the fortitude to say boo to the special-interest groups that haunt the party. The most likely habitat for this hypothetical voter, they maintain, is in the South, which used to turn out huge Democratic majorities. Why, according to the analysis of the architect of Super Tuesday, have these expectant males voted so consistently Republican since 1968? Because Democratic nominees have been a dreary succession of pallid, liberal milksops stampeded into taking absurd and extreme positions by the hectoring of unionists, feminists, peaceniks, blacks and old folks.

If Robb and former Democratic Chairman Robert Strauss could climb down from their high dudgeon long enough to examine the characteristics of Democratic voters, they would find the party's staunch supporters to be: unionists, feminists, peaceniks, blacks and old folks. Not surprisingly, these people support liberal candidates in primaries.

What enabled these conservative Democrats to beguile and bamboozle people into thinking that Super Tuesday would not only be decisive but also yield a moderate Democratic winner was the amulet of electability — who shows the best promise of winning in November. Hypothetically, a very conservative Democrat might beat a Republican in the general election, but how such a person survives Democratic primaries in which liberal voters predominate remains unanswered by the political wizards of the party's right wing.

In rationalizing their failure on Tuesday night, the impresarios of the Southern primaries plumbed the depths of insincerity and unctuousness about Super Tuesday's most conspicuous winner, Jesse Jackson. You heard a lot of claptrap from establishment Democrats about how Jackson had become a national candidate and a force to reckon with in the party. They hate his guts. They regard Dukakis as unacceptably liberal and, hence, unelectable. Gephardt is viewed as an apostate. They would probably settle for Gore, but more for stylistic reasons than matters of substance.

Having bungled Super Tuesday, the disgruntled Democratic right now presents us with its fallback position in the form of a brokered convention in which its weighty and influential presence would be felt in the form of a large bloc of "super delegates" — elected officials and party leaders who are officially unpledged. Unpledged does not mean uncommitted. Such a group also is unlikely to go for the most conservative of the hopefuls.

If it comes to a brokered convention, these conservatives, with their ignorance of the Democratic electorate, are likely to end up with an even bigger surprise than they had on Super Tuesday — the nomination of Jesse Jackson.

Ross K. Baker, a professor of political science at Rutgers University, is the author of the coming book, "House and Senate" (W. W. Norton).

Votes Will Count In Lt. Gov. Race

Paul O'Connor

A small sign hangs in the campaign offices of Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenior, one of the Democratic candidates for lieutenant governor. It says, "400,000 will vote. We need 200,001."

That sign indicates the biggest question mark that hangs over the coming primaries for lieutenant governor - turnout. Hardison's prediction of 400,000 Democratic voters may be optimistic, or it may be grossly pessimistic. Firm guesses on turnout are rare because no prognosticator has any North Carolina history upon which to base a guess.

Neither party has a major gubernatorial primary, and the presidential primary is over. There are no U.S. Senate seats up for grabs and there aren't even any good congressional seat primaries being fought. The lieutenant governor's nominations are the highest ones at stake in this primary.

Voting in the lieutenant governor's races usually falls off from the high count set by gubernatorial campaigns. For example, in 1984, the 10 Democratic gubernatorial candidates garnered about 950,000 votes. About 70,000 fewer people cast a ballot, in the very same booths, for a Democratic lieutenant governor's candidate.

On the Republican side, there were about 140,000 votes cast for Gov. Jim Martin and his opponent, Rudy Hooper. About 10,000 fewer people voted in the GOP's contest for lieutenant governor.

Conventional wisdom — that intellectual phenomenon which reporters quote when they hear a bunch of their favorite sources say the same thing — says that voting this year will be very low. It's probably right.

On the Democratic side, scenarios exist which show any of three major candidates benefiting from a low turnout.

A low turnout might also help Hardison. He's popular with business folks — a high turnout group — and he's been organizing for a year now.

Parks Helms of Charlotte has the biggest population center as his base. His home vote may be big enough to get him into the expected runoff.

On the Republican side, the probable small turnout has everybody guessing. The race really is a dice roll despite the presence of Jim Gardner, the party's gubernatorial nominee in 1968. Rep. Bill Boyd, R-Randolph, appears to have built a strong base with fundamentalist Republicans, a group that turns out when motivated. Wendell Sawyer of Greensboro has a good urban center as his geographic base.

Remember that on the GOP side, the small numbers voting contributed to a major upset in the first primary four years ago. Unknown Frank Jordan won that primary because some voters apparently confused him with Bob Jordan. Now, as if the expected low turnout isn't enough to scramble all coming predictions, Frank Jordan has changed parties and is running in the Democratic primary for lieutenant governor.

If ever there will be an election when a few votes will count, it will be this May.

'Goring' Mike Dukakis

Rowland Evans & Robert Novak

ATLANTA — Twelve hours after Super Tuesday returns showed a breakthrough for Sen. Albert Gore Jr., the question of Democratic insiders was answered: He is running for president, not vice president.

On the Wednesday morning talk shows, Gore signaled he will not pull punches against Dukakis to avoid hurting his chance to be the governor's running mate. He talked about himself as the "future," Dukakis as the "past." That is shorthand for saying the Duke as presidential nominee would revisit upon the Democratic Party the horrors of McGovern and Mondale.

To have any chance to slow the Dukakis express about to roar through the industrial Midwest and Northwest, Gore must change from shorthand to longhand. If his advisers have their way, Gore will state specifically that Dukakis represents a reflexive liberalism of the party that can squander a golden chance at regaining the presidency.

That is also the judgment of disinterested party insiders, but they do not say it out loud. Save for the untouchable Rev. Jesse Jackson, no Democratic candidate has been so free of criticism as the briskly confident governor of Massachusetts. For all the complaints about negative TV commercials, he has hardly been touched.

That political mint condition was one reason for euphoria in the Dukakis camp Tuesday night. Another was that Gore, not Rep. Richard Gephardt, was the apparent survivor of Super Tuesday. Unlike Gephardt, Gore has not focused a hard-hitting message. If Gephardt had flipped on some issues, Gore's tone flopped back and forth whenever crossing the Mason-Dixon line.

Gore's performance north of that line has been dismal, failing to reach double digits in any non-Southern primary. Dukakis strategists clearly prefer him to a prickly Gephardt preaching blue-collar populism in the Rust Belt.

Besides, even friendly politicians Tuesday night doubted whether Gore was really interested in dumping on the Duke. As Gephardt can testify, Dukakis hits back hard. More important. he could endanger a vice-presidential nomination at age 40, which is what many think the Tennessee senator really had in mind.

But Gore's Wednesday comments put such speculation on hold. While Dukakis in post-Super Tuesday statements sounded as though he were announcing election returns, Gore began to target the announcer.

Even tougher were private comments of his staff, testing new themes: Dukakis combines George McGovern on foreign affairs and Walter Mondale on domestic; do Democrats for the second straight election really want to risk a 50-state blowout?

Behind his overall McGovernesque posture in foreign policy are Dukakis' blunders which until now have been treated gently by Democratic competitors but are being secreted in the Republican campaign bible. Apart from errant sniping in debates, Dukakis has gotten away with declaring the Monroe Doctrine null and void and suggesting street riots in Seoul are cause for pulling U.S. troops from Korea.

The extent to which Al Gore fires darts at him may determine Dukakis' fate. Even so, stopping him won't be easy. His momentum, party pros believe, must be slowed in Illinois Tuesday or in Michigan March 26.

But Gore starts at a low point in both states and the Duke could well win both states. More likely Dukakis-stoppers may be Jackson in Illinois and Gephardt in Michigan. Nevertheless, the wisdom newly perceived in the party, perhaps too hastily, is that if the presidential nominee is not Dukakis, it will be Gore.

That is remarkable success for the bash-Iowa, love-the-South strategy conceived by Fred Martin, a former Mondale speechwriter whose appointment as Gore campaign manager was greeted with amused condescension in the political community. But even if the strategy is now validated, it still remains doubtful whether the candidate is more St. Albans School or Carthage, Tenn.

It is now Al Gore's chance, following Gephardt's failure because of an empty treasury and brutal hits sustained from paid and free media. The young senator will show whether he can be a populist in the tradition of Estes Kefauver and Albert Gore Sr., or remains the neo-liberal darling of the New Republic. How much kidney he exhibits going after the tough little governor is the first test.

Can He Cut It?

Cody Shearer

RALEIGH, N.C. — The luckiest candidate to emerge from Super Tuesday has to be Tennessee's junior Senator Albert Gore Jr. Having captured five states in last Tuesday's regional sweepstakes, Gore is now the lone serious challenger to Massachusetts' Governor Michael Dukakis. Missouri Congressman Richard Gephardt is for all practical purposes down and out of the presidential contest, having only won his home state on March 8.

Gore is the miracle candidate, according to his own campaign aides, because for the last five months he has committed the classic political mistake of being one's own campaign manager. This has resulted in terrible scheduling problems and poor media buys — all of which Gore has overseen.

"I couldn't believe it," recalled one Gore aide, who was in charge of briefing the candidates before a recent debate. "Al spent our entire briefing session making phone calls to newspaper editors and TV advertising departments, securing commercial buys. It was insane."

Of course, trying to play candidate and campaign manager are mutually incompatible roles. Gore, for example, found himself in a Williamsburg, Va., hotel room, a week before Super Tuesday, making phone calls for four hours during the middle of the day when he should have been out on the hustings campaigning.

If Gore is going to have any chance of slowing the Dukakis bandwagon, he'll have to relinquish his role as unofficial campaign manager. He'll also have to switch gears and stop concealing his youthful 39 years. Early on in his campaign, Gore made a conscious decision to downplay his age. Only belatedly has he realized it's an asset, so he's contrasting his generational background with that of his opponents, stressing the need to pass the torch of leadership to a new generation of Americans.

Gore's chances of winning the Democratic presidential nomination are still a long shot. In days he'll find himself in the middle of an ideological battle with Gov. Dukakis, in which he'll have to decide who he is — the Super Defense Gore, the Old Liberal Gore or the New Populist Gore.

Whatever direction Gore moves he'll also have to be prepared to cut a deal with Rev. Jesse Jackson. Political insiders suggest Gore may be more willing to make concessions to Jackson than Dukakis would. This may be Gore's only way to secure the Democratic presidential nomination.

Political intimates of Massachusetts Governor Michael Dukakis report that the Democratic Party front-runner is increasingly mentioning the name of Georgia Senator Sam Nunn as a logical choice for vice president should Dukakis win his party's presidential nomination. Even though Nunn supported Tennessee Senator Al Gore during the recent Georgia primary, Dukakis tells friends that he definitely needs a well-respected Southerner on the ticket. If Sen. Nunn is not interested, Dukakis would then likely ask Sen. Gore or Sen. Bob Graham of Florida to consider being his running mate. Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas is another possible choice.

What kind of influence does Jesse Jackson want at the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta? Jackson aides are busy working on a list of demands which, as of this writing, include a request for blacks to serve in at least two or three Cabinet positions in any Democratic administration. Specifically, D.C. Representative Walter Fauntroy has drawn up a proposal that would require any Democratic presidential nominee to place a black as Secretary of Treasury — possibly Rep. William Gray of Pennsylvania — and Secretary of Health and Human Services.

For himself, Jackson is eyeing a position as a roving ambassador of some kind or possible serving as the next Attorney General.

Friends of Sen. Albert Gore are increasingly concerned about the high degree of influence that New Republic magazine owner, Martin Peretz, has on the Gore campaign. Peretz, a former political science instructor of Gore's at Harvard, is a fierce ally of Israel. He also has a long list of political enemies in Washington that can do nothing but harm the Gore campaign.

Marine Corps Myths

Leonard Bushkoff

Men in battle require morale-building myths as much as ammunition. Myths help them cope with danger, when the instinct for self-preservation would drive them toward safety. Successful units generate a powerful mythology, supported by slogans, rituals and ceremonies. Israeli paratroopers, the French Foreign Legion, British Guards regiments and of course the U.S. Marines all embrace these general myths: We're the bravest and best fighters around; we never retreat; we never abandon our comrades, and we'll fight to the death if ordered, knowing it won't be a useless sacrifice.

The problem for the Marines since Oct. 23, 1983, when a car bomb in Beirut killed 220 of them, along with 21 other American servicemen, is that the myths haven't been working. There was the much exaggerated but still disturbing sex-for-spying scandal among the embassy guards in Moscow. And there were the political shenanigans of Marine Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, in violation of all corps traditions.

The feeling that something had gone wrong was central to the decision last spring by former Secretary of Navy James H. Webb Jr., who was a Marine company commander in Vietnam, to nominate Gen. Alfred M. Gray Jr. as the new commandant and successor to Gen. P.X. Kelley. Gray is not a Pentagon insider but a "mustang," up from the ranks by virtue of combat experience. He is bringing fresh ideas and energies to a force that, still burdened by the Vietnam trauma, has been satisfied to play it safe, raking in its share of the Reagan largess.

Self-satisfaction can be dangerous. It obscures reality for a parochial military subculture that has sold itself and the world on three legends:

Legend 1: That Marines triumph out of sheer rage, disregard for consequences, a Rambo's delight in battle, for mowing them down along with the legendary Lt. Gen. Lewis B. "Chesty" Puller. The reality is that Marines are not immune to the terrors of battle; the corps' remarkable achievement lies in building cohesion, comradeship and unit pride to help overcome those terrors.

Legend 2: That every Marine is a rifleman above all, with even the cooks and clerks always ready to bolster the trigger-pullers in the line. The reality is that many Marines rarely see a rifle once basic training is over: The ratio of front-line to support troops is one to eight. The infantry has been quietly neglected in favor of high-tech weaponry; restoring infantry priority through advanced and refresher training is Gray's highest priority.

Legend 3: That the corps is a small, low-cost band of brothers — "The Marines Need a Few Good Men" — lean and mean, with sharp teeth and a minimal tail that makes it a $9 billion taxpayer's bargain in fighting power. The reality is that the 197,000-strong corps is noticeably larger than the British army and a fourth the size of the U.S. Army — neither so small nor so elite as commonly thought. There are more than 9,000 sisters among the brothers: women Marines whose role is still uncertain, and whose presence disrupts the macho behavior associated with male bonding and has resulted in female harassment. And there is plenty of rank, with 20,000 officers and 30,000 senior noncommissioned officers to supervise and direct.

Of the 197,000, there are only 23,000 trigger-pullers — who personally lay fire on the enemy — in all arms. So the Marines are no freer than anyone else from the masses of noncombat troops required for complex weapons and global supply lines.

The trend away from combat and toward mere soldiering is inevitable for any fighting force in peacetime. Rather than Rambo or John Wayne, many Marines are closer to Robert Duvall in "The Great Santini," a middle-aged pilot with a wife, a station wagon and adolescent children. The old way to counter this weakening of bonds was to discourage marriage, wall off the troops on base and wink at beer and brawling on Saturday night — to keep the boys feisty. That won't work today. Some 44 percent of the Marines are married; they have 210,000 dependents.

So Gray sharply criticizes both the careerist obsession with advancement, and the "homesteaders," those Marines who hang on for years at a post, jogging religiously, but losing their fighting edge in the daily round. He jokes indignantly about Marines who have been in Washington long enough to rate inclusion in visitor tours and those who moonlight selling real estate. The computer will finger those who have been on post more than three years. Gray warns: "Don't send out your laundry: you're going to move — and starting from the top."

The Marines at Beirut saw themselves as peacekeepers, fair-minded and neutral. They were psychologically unprepared for increasing attacks and mentally off-guard when the bomb hit. Gray is trying to change attitudes with new policies. One cue is his predilection for camouflage battle dress: Even his personal cards are camouflaged. Another is the School of Infantry, to which every Marine recruit will go after basic training, as well as squad and platoon non-commissioned officers for hands-on combat training.

Since the Civil War, U.S. conflicts have been characterized by weight: of manpower, firepower, wealth, equipment. This worked well against modern, industrial states but failed in Vietnam. Gray spent a lot of time in Vietnam and knows full well that American military action is far less likely in Europe than in the Third World.

Looking For Peace, Girding For War

Ehud Yaari

Egypt's current strategy is a paradox: Cairo is trying to be helpful in the current Middle East peace process, while, at the same time, its army is quietly preparing for the possibility of a future war with Israel.

Consider: The Egyptian army has been trying hard-albeit unsuccessfully-to prevent PLO terror squads from crossing the Sinai into Israel. Yet last week, the same Egyptian army, as if oblivious to surrounding events, staged its scheduled exercises in the Sinai, determinedly rehearsing a strategy of defensive deployment.

This was but one more indication that Egypt, while not prepared to sacrifice its ties with Israel for the sake of the Palestinians, has on no account forgone its long-term military objective of achieving a balance of deterrence with Israel.

For Israel's military planners, this emerging Egyptian doctrine is causing anxiety, because it provides Egypt with the option of challenging Israel militarily while avoiding actual warfare. This would give its peace with Israel an entirely new and prickly character.

Weighing Egypt's long-run intentions is one more headache for Israel at a time when it is beset with problems, within and without. Israel would like to regard its peaceful relationship with Egypt as a fixed beacon in the region — and to remove Egypt from its list of potential adversaries in any future Middle East war. But for all Egypt's help in trying to revive the peace process in recent months, Israel can't.

Cairo regards its deterrent capability less as a check against an Israeli military provocation than as an insurance policy in case Egypt's leaders decide to downgrade the peace treaty and change course towards greater political animosity.

The impressive growth in Egypt's military budget since 1982 has been used for building an air force capable of deep-penetration sorties and, most of all, for modernizing ground forces. Four of 12 army divisions are already armored units; six others are mechanized; another two infantry divisions are waiting to be revamped.

The Egyptian defensive plan is based upon a chain of fortifications in western Sinai. This line is manned by just over half a mechanized division — substantially less than the strength permitted by the military protocol of the 1979 peace accords.

Egypt's defensive plan calls for the line on the Sinai side of the canal to be fully staffed in less than 24 hours by five divisions stationed in permanent camps on the Egyptian side of the canal (and for the deployment further east up to the Israeli border within another 12 to 14 hours.)

The forces now stationed along the forward defensive line in Sinai are not a single cohesive unit; instead they are composed of the forward companies and advance headquarters of the divisions stationed in the rear.

To allow all units in a division to prepare for rapid crossings of the Suez Canal into Sinai, small forces at the battalion and company level are successively sent into practice. This allows Egypt to adhere to the military protocol while still practicing ways of breaking out of it.

Thus, when it suits Egypt — perhaps in a move to heighten tension with Israel or in participating in a Syria-led Arab coalition — its army would be able to activate its full defensive plan on short notice.

In this way, a purely defensive military move by Egypt could actually lead to its violating the military clauses of the peace treaty — and trigger an Israeli counter-mobilization. This would transform the peaceful character of the Egypt-Israel relationship even if it did not degenerate into actual hostilities.

For some years now, and most recently last October, the Egyptian army has rehearsed its defensive deployment against Israel in the Sinai peninsula. Although the annual exercises vary in detail, these maneuvers have long been built around a single scenario:

The forces of the "blue State" — in what is always a simulation of the Israel Defense Force's methods and order of battle — advance into the open desert and take up positions in the mountain passes commanding the area's main axes (representing the Mitla and Gidi passes in the western part of the peninsula).

In response, the Egyptian divisions deploy along a defense line, after crossing a water obstacle that stands for the Suez Canal. The Egyptians practice close air support, armored night battles and landing forces by helicopter. After this containment phase, the Egyptian troops go over to a counter-attack on the passes.

Heels Gain Tourney Finals

GREENSBORO (AP) — Exploiting the inside strength of J.R. Reid and Scott Williams, North Carolina moved another step closer to its first Atlantic Coast Conference Tournament title in six years.

Reid scored 19 points and Williams added 17 as the ninth-ranked Tar Heels held off Maryland in the second half 74-64 in an ACC Tournament semifinal game Saturday.

"We got the ball inside to the people we wanted to," said North Carolina guard Jeff Lebo. "J.R. and Scott were making the shots we wanted them to."

North Carolina Coach Dean Smith said he "wanted to call them easy shots (Reid and Williams made), but when you hear the footsteps of (Maryland's Brian) Williams and (Derrick) Lewis, they are not easy. We got the shots we wanted."

With the victory, the Tar Heels advanced into the tournament's final round for the 16th time in 33 years. North Carolina has failed to win the conference tournament the last five years despite winning or tying for the regular season title every year but 1985-86.

"We'd really like to win (the tournament) because we didn't win it last year when we clearly had the best team," Smith said.

The Tar Heels, 25-6, will meet No. 8 Duke, which beat 11th-ranked North Carolina State 73-71 in the other semifinal game.

"We don't care who we play we know it will be a tough game," Lebo said. "Three games in three days is always tough."

Maryland made 22 of 60 shots (36.7 percent) and was outrebounded 38-33. The Terps are 8-12 this year when bested in the rebounding department, 9-1 when they outrebound their opponent.

Duke Nips State

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

GREENSBORO (AP) — His teammates told him to keep looking for his shot, and when Danny Ferry found it, eighth-ranked Duke had earned a berth in the finals of the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament.

Ferry's one-hand shot in the lane with 1:45 remaining broke a tie and put the Blue Devils in Sunday's title game with a 73-71 victory over No. 11 North Carolina State.

"Too excited, I think. I was really forcing things a bit," said Ferry, who hit seven of 17 field goals. Coach Mike Krzyzewski took him out of the game for a few minutes in the stretch to give him some advice.

"He sat me down and I got my thoughts together," Ferry said. "When I got back on the court, my teammates really encouraged me a whole lot to look for my shot and they were looking for me. That really encouraged me."

The Blue Devils, 23-6, advanced to the championship game for the third time in five seasons and will face ninth-ranked North Carolina. The Tar Heels downed Maryland 74-64 in the other semifinal game.

For the third time this season, Duke took charge of the Wolfpack and held a big lead in the second half, only to see their shooting touch go cold in the closing minutes. Only this time, the Blue Devils held on for victory after two regular-season losses to N.C. State.

"Previously when they caught up, they took off," said Duke's Billy King. "We said 'OK, you've gotten back in reach, but we're going to stay in here and slug it out for the rest of the contest.'"

After Ferry's basket and a timeout, Vinny Del Negro missed a jumper from the baseline and Quin Snyder grabbed the rebound. Ferry had a chance to pad the lead, but missed a short jumper and N.C. State's Rodney Monroe got the rebound.

Conley Rally Overcomes Williams By 67-61 Score

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD — When it came down to crunch time, D.H. Conley regrouped while Burlington Williams faltered. The result was a 67-61 win for the Vikings in the 3-A Northeastern Sectional Championship Saturday night.

Conley came from six points down in the final quarter to advance to the Eastern Regional finals in Fayetteville Thursday night against an opponent to be named later.

"They came through tonight like you'd like to see them come through," said Conley coach Walter Claybrook. "I think it was a good team effort.

"I thought it had a snowball effect (at the end). All of a sudden, everybody pulled together and did what it takes to win."

Phil Medlin led the way for the Vikings, scoring 21 points, as Conley overcame a 30-point effort from Williams' guard Darryl Cheeley.

Conley trailed by six with 4:19 remaining following a 3-point shot by Cheeley that made it 59-53.

But Conley came right back to score as Terry Williams broke free inside for a layup. The Bulldogs then turned the ball over following a miss by Cheeley and Medlin scored in the paint to make it 59-57.

Cheeley missed again for the Bulldogs. Bronswell Patrick rebounded and was fouled with 2:50 left on the clock. He hit one of two from the line to pull Conley within 59-58.

J.B. Christian was then whistled for traveling and Conley had a chance to retake the lead for the first time in the second half.

James Smith, who came off the bench to score four points in the final period for the Vikings, fed Medlin inside for a layup with 2:19 remaining to make it 60-59.

Cheeley then came flying down court, drove the lane and pulled up for a shot. But Medlin was there for Conley and he blocked the shot into the waiting hands of Sherwood Wilder who was then fouled on a layup attempt with 2:03 on the clock.

Wilder hit both free throws and Conley led 62-59.

Cheeley missed again for Williams and Medlin rebounded the miss. Wilder was fouled at the other end and knocked in both shots of the one-and-one for a 64-59 advantage.

The closest the Bulldogs would get from there was 65-61 on a follow shot by Andre Francis with 57 seconds remaining.

"We just didn't protect the ball," said Williams coach Tommy Cole. "We had them right where we wanted them. We did everything we wanted to except for the last three minutes."

Cheeley, who was guarded by a variety of Viking defenders all night in a number of trick defenses, had 20 of his 30 in the first half, but slowed in the end, hitting only one basket, a 3-pointer, in the final minute.

"He's a great player, probably the best guard in the state," Cole said. "He just got tired and then he forced some shots at the end."

But while Cheeley had to put up with a chaser on him most of the night, Claybrook said he thought one of the keys to the Vikings' comeback was when they changed to a straight man-to-man defense at the end.

"I think the difference was that we had played junk defenses on Cheeley all night but when Kenny Jones hit those two 3-pointers (in the final quarter), we just decided to play man to man."

North Pitt Girls Take Sectional

WILLIAMSTON — North Pitt's girls' basketball team, with the Eastern Plains regular season and tournament championships already salted away, added the 2-A Northeastern Sectional Saturday evening, downing fellow EPC member Charles B. Aycock, 55-42.

Both teams will now advance to the regional preliminaries, to be played Tuesday night. North Pitt will be a host team, while Aycock will be on the road.

North Pitt will entertain James Kenan, a loser to Clinton in one of the other sectionals, while Aycock will travel to face the loser of the West Montgomery-Union Pines game. The two winners will then advance to the regionals at Fayetteville later in the week.

North Pitt had little trouble in gaining the sectional title. The Pant-Hers outscored Aycock, 17-6, in the opening quarter and were never in trouble after that.

The Pant-Hers allowed a 14-12 rally in the second period, and still held a comfortable lead at 29-20 at the half. Both teams scored 12 points in the third period, boosting the score to 41-32.

In the final quarter, North Pitt let Aycock know that there was no chance of a rally, outscoring the Lady Falcons, 14-10, to wrap up the title.

The win boosted the Pant-Her record to 18-7 on the season. Aycock falls to 19-10.

Rowan Is Winner In 10-K Run

Phillip Rowan of Greenville captured the 10-kilometer championship of the Rosco Run, held Saturday morning in the Pitt County Memorial Hospital medical district.

The run, which also included a 5-K race and a one-mile walk/run, was sponsored by The Daily Reflector and Ross Laboratories for the benefit of the Childrens' Hospital of Eastern North Carolina, a division of Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Rowan, 33, completed the 10-K course in a time of 32 minutes and 43 seconds, beating second place Rob Powell, also of Greenville, by just over forty seconds.

Powell, however, was the winner in the 5-K event, timed at 15:23, over a minute faster than Durham's Tom Trent, who was clocked in a 16:46.

Cynthia Wooten of Greenville was the top women's finisher in the 10-K race, clocked at 46:04, nearly 40 seconds ahead of Patricia Tilghman of Kinston.

Pam Allie-Morrill of Virginia Beach, Va., took top women's honors in the 5-K run, finishing in 18:33, nearly 1:30 ahead of second place Linda Miessh of Clayton.

NCAA Completes Bracket Today

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — If Arnie Ferrin is right that "20 or 30" teams see themselves winning this year's NCAA Tournament, Jim Delaney shudders to think how many see themselves getting in.

"Let's face it — some hopes are going to be shattered and some hearts are going to be broken," said the Ohio Valley Commissioner and member of the nine-man selection committee. "If you don't think so, you're living in dreamland."

Around 5:30 p.m. EST Sunday, committee chairman Ferrin will unveil on national television the 64-team bracket, in this year of rampant parity, for the richest-ever NCAA Tourney.

Fans and officials of 64 schools will instantly begin checking flight schedules, figuring ways to get to the first-round site, among eight scattered around the country, their team is assigned to.

Sixty-four coaches will scramble for information and game films on their first-round foe. Some will be wearing big smiles and accepting congratulations. Others will complain — some mildly, some angrily — about where the committee has seeded and sent them.

Less visible, but no less ecstatic, will be the budget-planners at many marginal programs. Just getting an invite to this 50th annual tournament will bring in an estimated $230,700, say NCAA officials, and a ticket to the Final Four in Kansas City will be worth more than $1,150,000.

On the flip side of this equation will be those who are left out. Or, as former committee member Dave Hart used to say, "Somebody will go win the NIT and come back and tell us that that proves we don't know what we're talking about."

Ferrin, Delaney and other tournament officials know there may be more of that than ever before. Twenty-seven spots go automatically to the winners of conference postseason tournaments. Three go to the regular season champions of the Ivy League, Big Ten and Mid-Continent Conference.

That leaves 34 at-large bids for the committee to distribute as it sees fit. For all practical purposes, this number is reduced by one every time a team that would not otherwise be considered gets hot and captures its league's postseason tournament. And many observers figured heading into this weekend that the possibilities for postseason upsets were ripe.

"You'd have to say there is a much better chance for upsets, a much better chance that some at-large spots might be swallowed up by people who would not have gotten in otherwise," said Tom Jernstedt, NCAA assistant executive director. "We usually have a few, but we've never been flooded with them."

Ferrin, the University of Utah official who succeeded Dick Schultz this year as committee chairman, believes there are more teams with a legitimate shot at the the national championship than there ever were. He gets no argument from Jernstedt, the tournament director the past 16 years.

"Potentially, this could be the most difficult and challenging bracket we've ever put together," Jernstedt said. "I can't recall a year when it looked like the committee's work in seeding the bracket and putting it together would be so difficult. It's going to make the committee's assignment tougher than ever. But on the other hand, it's great. It's another indication of the growth in the popularity of the game itself. There are more good players out there and more good teams than there ever have been."

There's also more money at stake.

Getting to the second round will net a team, in addition to travel and per diem expenses which the NCAA picks up, $461,511. Teams that lose in the third round will get $692,200. Falling one victory short of the Final Four will bring in $922,900, or almost six times as much as the regional finalists received in 1976.

"And that wasn't that long ago," said Delaney, a reserve guard on one of North Carolina's Final Four teams in the early '70s. "It's amazing how the sport has grown right before our eyes. In 1975, Junior Bridgeman was an all-American at Louisville when it lost to UCLA in the finals. A great player at a great program. You know how many times in his college career he appeared on national television? Once. This year, Middle Tennessee, Eastern Kentucky and Austin Peay have all played in games that were nationally televised."

The committee, following a decades-old tradition, planned to begin meeting behind locked doors at a mid-town Kansas City hotel Friday evening. Surrounded by stacks of computer printouts and reports from regional advisory panels, the committee will emerge early Sunday evening with 64 teams divided into four 16-team regionals. Each regional is seeded 1 through 16, with the top seed meeting the 16th seed, No. 2 going against No. 15, etc. The committee can choose as many teams as it wishes from one conference and send a team to any regional it wishes.

In the recent past, this has meant an exodus of Eastern teams to the West in an effort to balance the bracket. But Ferrin has indicated that an upsurge in the number of quality teams among Western conferences may slow that trend this time.

Winners of the first and second-round games next weekend will flow into regional semifinals and finals March 25-27 at either Seattle, Birmingham, Pontiac, Mich., or East Rutherford, N.J. The championship game in Kansas City will be the night of April 4.

"We'll spend all weekend pairing, comparing, separating and differentiating," Delaney said. The committee pays little attention to total victories, concentrating instead on strength of schedule and a team's road wins against quality opponents.

"Sixteen wins under some circumstances might be enough to get you in the tournament," Delaney said. "Twenty-four wins under other circumstances might not be good enough. It's a big responsible the commmittee has. It's worrisome, it's exciting, and we all love it."

Utah State Is PCAA Champion

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Kevin Nixon led a balanced Utah State scoring attack with 19 points Saturday as the Aggies beat UC Irvine 86-79 in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association tournament final.

The Aggies, who earned an automatic berth in the NCAA tournament by winning the PCAA title, improved their record to 21-9.

UC Irvine, which had upset No. 7 Nevada-Las Vegas 74-70 in the semifinals Friday night, finished its season at 16-14.

Dan Conway added 18 points and Kevin Houskeeper had 17, 11 in the second half, as Utah State won its first PCAA tournament title.

Purdue Wins Finale Over Gophers

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Purdue's Boilermakers, burned by the NCAA schedule-makers in the past, completed the regular season with a 93-66 victory over Minnesota on Saturday and began a nervous 24-hour wait to see who their first-round tourney opponent would be next week.

"I really don't care. I just want to play," said Purdue Coach Gene Keady, who got his 100th Big Ten victory in the Boilermakers' romp over the Gophers.

"I'm serious. It was bad last year, and I took it hard," he said of the Boilermakers' NCAA assignment to Syracuse a year ago instead of the nearby Hoosier Dome in Indianapolis. Purdue, the Big Ten co-champion with Indiana last year, lost a second-round NCAA game while the Hoosiers, who got the first-round assignment in Indianapolis, went on to the national championship.

"This erases that," said Keady, whose 1988 Boilermakers captured the outright Big Ten title and the league's automatic berth in the tourney.

The pairings will be announced on Sunday.

"If we don't get a No.1 seed, it's rigged," Keady said. "It would be unbelievable to be able to justify the Big Ten champions getting a lower seed.

"Now we're 0-0, like 63 other teams in the NCAA, and starting from scratch. We just have to be mentally tough."

Saturday's victory was keyed by the senior trio of Troy Lewis, with 17 points and 12 assists; Everette Stephens, with 16 points, and Todd Mitchell, with 15 points. Junior center Melvin McCants also had 16 points for the Boilermakers, who finished the regular season with a school-record 27 victories.

Purdue, raising its record to 16-2 in the conference and 27-3 for all games, survived a slow start, hit 18 of its next 22 shots over a 16-minute period and finished off the Gophers with a 19-4 run over the final five minutes.

"We played the No.1 team in the conference and probably the No.1 or 2 team in the country and they proved they are an outstanding ball club," said Minnesota Coach Clem Haskins, a former assistant to Keady at Western Kentucky.

"We played good basketball for 25-30 minutes, but their power and experience showed. Sooner or later, that's going to wear you down, and that's what happened in the second half.

"We just couldn't do anything with their strength," Haskins said. Minnesota, led by Ray Gaffney with 16 points, finished at 4-14 in the Big Ten and 10-18 overall.

A 3-point shot by Lewis gave Purdue its first lead at 15-14, and there were six ties and four lead changes before Stephens' second 3-pointer put the Boilermakers ahead to stay at 31-29.

McCants and Kip Jones added baskets and Stephens stole the ball and scored on a fast-break layup for a 37-29 lead with a minute to go, but a basket by Gaffney and free throw by Melvin Newbern cut the lead to 37-32 at halftime.

Purdue hit its first five shots of the second half and steadily pulled ahead of Minnesota. After a rebound basket by Willie Burton cut Purdue's lead to 69-58, the Boilermakers took complete control with their game-ending spurt.

Arizona (3).....97
Stanford.....83

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Sean Elliott scored a career-high 32 points as Arizona tied a Pacific-10 Conference record for most victories ever, avenging an earlier loss by beating Stanford 97-83 Saturday in a conference tournament semifinal game.

Trailing 55-33 at the half, Stanford three times pulled within 10 points, the last at 86-76 on Bryan McSweeney's layup with 2:13 remaining.

But Anthony Cook dunked off an Elliott pass, then converted three straight free throws, and Craig McMillan scored a layup before Elliott hit a slam dunk with 38 seconds left to put Arizona ahead 95-81. Todd Lichti hit five 3-pointers in scoring 23 points, and Howard Wright added 20 for the Cardinals, 21-10.

Cook finished with 18 points for Arizona.

Elliott hit a tournament-record 15 free throws. Stanford was called for 26 fouls and Arizona 23.

Elliott scored the first points on a layup 12 seconds into the game, and added a 3-pointer and a free throw as the Wildcats tore to a 16-2 lead in the first 3:32.

Arizona shot 61 percent for the game and hit on 66.7 percent in the first half, by which time Elliott had scored 18.

Arizona came into the game with a 55-7 home record over the last four seasons. The last 30-game winner in the Pac-10 was UCLA, which went 30-0 in the 1972-73 season.

Oklahoma (4).....102
Missouri.....99

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Stacy King converted a three-point play in the closing seconds and finished with 35 points as the fourth-ranked Oklahoma Sooners turned back a furious Missouri rally for a 102-99 victory in a semifinal game of the Big Eight tournament.

Missouri had rallied from 16 points behind to trail 97-96 when King made a turnaround jump shot in the lane and was fouled by Nathan Buntin with 31 seconds to play. With the victory, the 29-3 Sooners headed into the final Sunday to play either Kansas or Kansas State.

Derrick Chievous made a free throw for Missouri and Mookie Blaylock hit one for Oklahoma to make the score 101-97.

Lynn Hardy then made a driving layup, but the basket was disallowed and he was called for charging as the rally fell short for Missouri, 19-10.

Missouri trailed 83-68 when Chievous rallied the Tigers. Chievous had 10 points as Missouri outscored the Sooners 15-5, and his second 3-point goal in the spurt made it 90-84 with 7:47 left in the game.

Gary Leonard scored with 1:29 to play to bring Missouri to within 97-93, rebounded a missed shot by Blaylock and passed off to Byron Irvin. Irvin drove the length of the court and was fouled for a three-point play with 48 seconds to go.

Harvey Grant scored 26 points for the Sooners and Blaylock finished with 17.

Chievous had 25 points and Greg Church scored 16 for Missouri.

The Sooners outscored Missouri 10-2 midway through the first half to take a 37-25 lead.

Missouri scored seven in a row, but the Sooners answered with seven straight and led 57-46 at the half.

Villanova.....72
Pitt (5).....69

NEW YORK (AP) — Mark Plansky, Villanova's last link to its 1985 NCAA championship team, is reviving the memories of that upset with last-minute heroics in the Big East tournament.

Plansky, who beat St. John's Friday with a game-winning 3-pointer with 49 seconds left Friday night, did it again Saturday. His 3-pointer from the top of the key with 58 seconds remaining lifted the Wildcats to a 72-69 victory over No. 5 Pittsburgh and gave them their third chance at a Big East championship.

"These guys are making their own image at Villanova, but I try to cite some things I experienced in 1985," said Plansky, who finished with 25 points. "To compare this team to that team can only be a positive thing."

"Certainly this is one of our better wins since 1985 for a lot reasons," Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino said. "The players were outstanding in their execution and they hung in. Plansky, of course, again deserves all the superlatives.

"I've never had a player like him. He has played all five positions on the floor and his leadership has been outstanding."

No. 13 Syracuse, a 68-63 winner over Seton Hall, will play the Wildcats Sunday for the Big East title and an automatic berth in the NCAA tournament.

Plansky, who was 4-for-8 from 3-point range for the game and 3-for-4 in the second half, said his outside shooting was the second option for the offense in the second half.

"Three-point shooting was what got us an eight-point deficit," Plansky said. "I wasn't looking to shoot the three's I hit in the second half. They were 'inside-out' plays where the ball was inside and passed out to me when the defense sagged."

Pittsburgh Coach Paul Evans said he instructed his team to prevent the 'inside-out' 3-pointer down the stretch.

"We said 'Don't double down, don't help,' but Jerome (Lane) must not have heard us," Evans said of the pass to a wide-open Plansky.

"I had a good feeling about it," Plansky said. "Jerome went to help and I made a little move to the right and he lost me."

"Plansky made every shot he had to and he was the reason for the win just as he was (Friday) night," Evans said.

Pittsburgh, which got 20 points from Lane and 18 from Charles Smith, had several chances to pull ahead or tie after Plansky's shot gave Villanova a 70-69 lead.

Lane missed a wild shot with 15 seconds left that went off the head of Villanova's Greg Massey with 15 seconds left. Sean Miller then missed a long jumper with 10 seconds to go, and Pittsburgh had to foul twice to get Villanova into the bonus.

Tom Greis, a 7-2 center who scored 12 of his 14 points in the second half, then hit two free throws with seven seconds left and Smith missed a 3-point attempt at the buzzer, giving the Wildcats their first trip to the Big East final since 1982. They also lost in the finals in 1981.

Pittsburgh, 23-6, appeared to be on the verge of using its strong inside game to take control in the second half, outscoring Villanova 14-4 for a 52-44 lead with 14:41 left. Lane, a 6-foot-6 forward, had eight points and Smith, a 6-10 center, had four during the spurt.

But Villanova, 21-11, quickly rallied behind the deadeye shooting of Plansky, who started a 9-0 run with consecutive 3-pointers. An inside basket by Greis gave the Wildcats a 57-56 lead with 7:26 remaining.

But when Smith returned, Pittsburgh righted itself. He hit consecutive field goals to give the Panthers a 69-67 lead with 1:22 to go.

After Pittsburgh led 7-1, West and Plansky scored seven points apiece and each hit a 3-pointer during a 20-7 spurt that gave Villanova a 21-14 advantage with 11:33 left in the first half.

Demetreus Gore, who scored 13 points of his 17 points in the first 15 minutes, had all but one of Pittsburgh's points for nearly seven minutes during the Wildcats' run.

Smith then scored all of his eight first-half points in a six-minute span, including a short jumper that put the Panthers ahead 32-30 with 5:04 left.

The lead then see-sawed for the rest of the half until it was tied 38-38 at intermission.

Louisiana State.....80

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Freshman Eric Manuel scored 17 of his 24 points in the second half, including two clutch free throws with 33 seconds remaining, as sixth-ranked Kentucky trimmed Louisiana State 86-80 in the semifinals of the Southeastern Conference tournament Saturday.

Manuel, Winston Bennett and Rex Chapman sparked a second-half comeback that carried the Wildcats into the championship game of the SEC event for the 22nd time in 27 tournaments.

Kentucky, 24-5, will meet the winner of Saturday's Florida-Georgia game in the final on Sunday. The Wildcats, who won their 37th regular season crown this year, will be seeking their 16th tourney title.

Manuel's two free throws expanded Kentuckiy's lead to 84-80 moments after Rob Lock had broken an 80-80 tie on an inside move with 57 seconds to play.

Greene Central Captures Sectional Over Chargers

WILLIAMSTON — Greene Central put on a strong show in the finals of the Northeastern boys' 2-A sectional basketball tournament Saturday night and powered past Ayden-Grifton, 66-58.

The victory gives Greene Central a home berth in the regional preliminary on Tuesday, when they will face Whiteville, the runner up from the Southeastern sectional. Ayden-Grifton will also continue, but will travel to Bunn, the loser in the East Central sectional. That game will also be played on Tuesday.

Greene Central was just too strong for the Chargers to handle in the game, according to Coach Bob Murphrey. "They seemed to be a team that came on late in the game. They took charge on the boards and were physically more aggressive than we were. They hit some big shots and did an excellent job handling our pressure defense. Their perimeter people are handling the ball real well at this time. They were strong on the backboards and obviously were on top of their game. They were the better team tonight."

Greene Central powered out into a 20-13 lead in the first quarter, but the Chargers came roaring back in the second frame. They outscored the Rams, 17-7, and pushed out into a 30-27 lead at the half.

But Greene Central refused to roll over and die. The Rams outscored Ayden-Grifton, 15-11, in the quarter and eased back into the lead, 42-41. Then in the final period, Greene Central outscored the Chargers, 24-17, to pull out the win.

"Our board play and our defense won the game," Ram coach Lewis Godwin said. "Tyrone Streeter got 13 reboudns and Johnny Joyner and Reggie Atkinson got six.

"We scrapped hard and played hard. We hit the free throws in the end. In the fourth quarter, we were 9-14," Godwin added.

"We've had nine guys (and) everone has done something different. Tonight, we had Tyrone Hardy, Maurice Streeter and Tyrone Streeter playing exceptionally well. Anthony Jones has been steady for us all year. At different points in the game we've had guys coming off the bench producing.

"It's really been a team effort. I hate to single out anybody because it's been a lot of things. We were 2-7 (at one point), getting beat by Conley and North Lenoir and we gave one away to West Craven. Conley beat us twice and North Lenoir beat us three times out of those seven. I kept telling the boys that as long as the season is, if you learn from it, you'll know what to do at the end. They've just rallied to the occassion."

Hardy and Atkinson led Greene Central with 13 points each while Jones had 11. Leon Dixon led Ayden-Grifton with 22 while Ronnell Peterson had 16 and James Woodard had 10.

Conley...

Jones' two 3-pointers in the opening moments of the final period gave the Bulldogs a 56-51 lead with just under six minutes remaining, but the Vikings outscored Williams 16-5 over the remainder of the game.

Conley had jumped out to a lead in the opening moments of the game, at 10-2, but Williams came right back from there. Cheeley scored eight points in the first quarter to stake the Bulldogs to a 14-13 lead.

Then in the second quarter, Cheeley put the Bulldogs ahead, 18-17, on a 3-pointer, one of six on the night, with 6:15 remaining in the half.

But Conley stayed close and trailed by only two at the half, 32-30, and at the end of the third quarter, 48-46.

"In the first half, we realized this team was no pushover," Medlin said. "They were tough. We realized we had to play. We just kind of pulled together."

Jonathan Bonner added 12 for the Vikings while Wilder went 6-6 from the free throw line over the final eight minutes. The Vikings shot 23-32 from the charity stripe for the game, including 11-15 over the final quarter. Williams meanwhile hit on only 14-28 free throw attempts for the game.

"If we had hit our free throws, we'd have beaten them to death," Cole said. "Darryl is a 75 percent free throw shooter and he missed several times (8-15 on the game)."

Conley moves to 20-7 on the year.

Duke...

foot-10 center and Duke gained control. Although the Blue Devils missed three foul shots in the last four seconds, they held on.

Shackleford claims the pass bounced off Ferry's knee before going out of bounds and that the Wolfpack should have retained possession.

"All I know is Shack doesn't show much emotion," Corchiani said. "He really complained about the call."

Duke took a 53-43 edge on Alaa Abdelnaby's hook inside the lane with 13:20 left. But a 17-7 run by the Wolfpack, aided by three straight Blue Devil turnovers, tied the score at 60 after Kelsey Weems hit the front end of a two-hot foul with 8:30 left.

A Monroe basket gave N.C. State a 62-60 lead with 7:40 left, but Abdelnaby hit a jumper in the lane at 7:16 to tie the score. The score was tied at 64 and the lead changed hands four times before the next tie at 71 on Chucky Brown's baseline drive with 2:12 left. He was fouled and failed to hit the free throw, however, setting up the finish.

"Fatigue was a factor in the game," N.C. State Coach Jim Valvano said. "Our being tired helped them to that 10-point lead and their fatigue helped us get back in it.

"I'm disappointed that we are not in the championship game, but I'm not disappointed with our effort," Valvano said.

Robert Brickey led Duke with 16 points. Ferry had 15 and Abdelnaby 12 for the Blue Devils. Monroe scored 15 of his 17 points in the second half for N.C. State, 24-7. Del Negro scored 14, Shackleford 13 and Brown had 12 for the Wolfpack.

No. 20 Xavier Rolls Over Detroit, 122-96

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Byron Larkin scored 23 first-half points and finished with 38 to lead No. 20 Xavier over Detroit 122-96 Saturday as the Musketeers won the Midwestern Collegiate Conference tournament for the third straight year.

Xavier had six players in double figures as it set a tournament single-game record for the second consecutive night, bringing its record to 26-3 with its 15th consecutive victory and earning the conference's automatic berth in the NCAA tournament. Detroit, which set a school record for losses in a season but upset St. Louis and Evansvile to reach the title game, finished 7-23.

Larkin, voted most valuable player of the tournament for the third straight year, made 9-of-13 shots in the first half and was 15-of-22 for the night. He scored 14 straight Xavier points in one stretch of the first half, taking them from a 20-10 lead to a 34-19 advantage with 11:25 left in the first half. He boosted his career point total to 2,680, moving past Wayman Tisdale of Oklahoma and Navy's David Robinson into the No. 13 position on the NCAA all-time list.

Xavier appeared ready to break the game open early, taking a 44-25 lead with 8:59 left in the opening half.

The Titans, who led only once at 5-3, then mixed the 3-point shooting of Dan Kennedy with the jump shots of Archie Tullos, and pulled within five on a Marvin Owens free throw with 1:09 remaining in the first half. The Musketeers led 61-54 at halftime after a dunk by Tyrone Hill.

The Musketeers continued to pull away after the break, outscoring Detroit 6-2 to start the period, and led 79-64 after a later 10-2 spurt that included three straight Larkin baskets.

Tullos had 18 at halftime and Kennedy had 17, but both ran into foul problems in the second half. Tullos finished with 22, sharing scoring honors with McKinney for Detroit. Kennedy had 19.

Gates Defeats Chocowinity

EDENTON — Gates County paraded to the foul line in the final quarter to slip past Chocowinity, 69-61, in the Northeastern 1-A girls' sectional championship Saturday night.

Gates connected on 12 of 16 free throws and added nine more points from the field on field goals, one of them a 3-pointer, to pull off the victory and rally from three points down.

Gates jumped off to an early lead in the game, taking a 21-14 edge after the first quarter. The Red Baronesses were outhit by Chocowinity in the second period, however, as the Tribe made a 16-11 comeback. That cut the Gates lead back to 32-30 at intermission.

Chocowinity again outhit Gates, 17-16, in the third period, but still trailed, 48-47. Then, Gates took advantage of the foul situation, as it converted a total of 17 of 27 in the game to over come a three point lead by the Tribe in the final quarter.

The officials whistled a total of 21 fouls against Chocowinity, which was only two of three from the line in the game and never shot a one-and-one in the second half. Gates had only nine fouls called against it.

Both China Grice and Chyrlene Myers fouled out in the late stages of the game.

Barbara Jones led Gates with 25 points while Carolyn Reddick added 10 and Ala Jones had 12. Druscilla Crawford led Chocowinity with 20 while Myers added 18 and Grice had 17.

Chocowinity falls to 22-2 but is still in the hunt for a state crown. The Lady Indians will have to travel on Tuesday to a preliminary regional game, facing the loser of the Southeastern Sectional.

"The shots just weren't falling," Maryland Coach Bob Wade said. "We gave up too many weakside rebounds."

North Carolina opened the second half by outscoring Maryland 9-2, opening a 44-31 lead with 17:30 remaining.

After a 3-pointer by Maryland's Keith Gatlin pulled the Terps within 10 points, North Carolina went on an 8-2 run for a 52-36 lead with 13:15 left.

Reid converted a three-point play, then made a twisting shot from the baseline before Jeff Lebo sank a 3-pointer to give North Carolina its biggest lead.

North Carolina maintained a double-digit lead until Teyon McCoy sank a 3-pointer that pulled Maryland to 66-57 with 2:38 left. Another McCoy 3-pointer with 1:16 to play got the Terps to 70-62, but they could get no closer.

Derrick Lewis scored 15 points and Brian Williams added 14 for Maryland, which fell to 17-13.

"We never quit. We hung in there the whole basketball game and just ran out of time," Wade said.

Trailing 15-12, North Carolina outscored Maryland 19-6 for a 31-21 advantage with 2:58 left in the first half. Maryland, behind 3-pointers by Keith Gatlin and Rudy Archer, pulled back within 35-29 by halftime.

Michigan Defeats Ohio State

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Glen Rice scored 29 points to lead No. 10 Michigan to a 95-76 victory over Ohio State Saturday in the Big Ten season finale for both schools.

The Wolverines finished the regular season 24-7 overall and 13-5 in conference play. The Buckeyes fell to 16-12 and 9-9.

Ohio State jumped to a 10-2 lead and appeared poised for an upset. But the Wolverines took the lead for the first time, 19-18, on a jumper by Rice with 8:57 to go in the first half.

Michigan scored the final eight points of the first half to lead 42-31 at halftime. The Buckeyes got no closer than eight points in the second half.

The Wolverines locked up the victory with a 13-2 run that gave them a 73-53 lead with 6:53 to go in the game.

Loy Vaught scored 16 points for Michigan, while Gary Grant, who hit only six of 19 shots, finished with 15.

Rice, who was leading the Big Ten in scoring entering Saturday's action, finished the season with a 22.9 scoring average.

Jay Burson scored 23 points to lead Ohio State.

Seton Hall.....63

NEW YORK (AP) — Sherman Douglas just wouldn't let Syracuse lose and the Orangemen are back in the championship game of the Big East tournament.

Douglas scored 23 points Saturday including seven straight in the second half when the 13th-ranked Orangemen took the lead for good and went on to beat Seton Hall 68-63

Syracuse lost in the championship game last season to Georgetown and the Orangemen have a 1-3 record in championship games.

The chances of another appearance this season seemed bleak Saturday as the Orangemen trailed 46-37 with 12:11 to play despite the absence of Seton Hall's leading scorer and rebounder Mark Bryant, who picked up his fourth foul 1:05 into the second half and didn't return until there was 6:35 to play.

The Pirates, 21-12, who had never reached the Big East semifinals before, hung on behind Ramon Ramos who scored 10 straight points for the Pirates, the last two coming on free throws which gave them a 52-47 lead with 9:57 to play.

The Orangemen, 24-8, went on a 6-1 run to tie the game at 53-53 with 7:30 left on two free throws by Derrick Coleman.

After Douglas, who scored 17 in the second half, tied the game at 57-57 with two free throws, Syracuse's first lead since 2-0 came on a drive by Douglas with 4:06 left. He then added a free throw and a jumper to give the Orangemen a 62-57 lead with 2:28 to play.

"Sherman wouldn't let us lose," Syracuse Coach Jim Boeheim said. "He made the plays at both ends that had to be made."

Douglas relishes the situation.

"With the game winding down pretty close I knew the ball would be in my hands," said Douglas who had seven assists. "We had to get some scoring and penetration.

"At some points I just feel the need to do it," Douglas said of taking command of the game. "Coach usually tells me, 'Come on, take over the game."

Seton Hall Coach P.J. Carlesimo said his players just couldn't contain Douglas.

"Sherman came up big the last seven, eight minutes. He's the best point guard in the country," Carlesimo said. "We just didn't make enough plays and turned the ball over in crucial situations."

The Pirates also missed Bryant inside.

"Bryant had a frustrating game," Carlesimo said. "With him on the bench we're not as effective."

Coleman finished with 14 points, while Rony Seikaly had 11 and Stephen Thompson 10.

Ramos, who averaged 9.6 points per game during the season finished with 23. Reserve Daryll Walker had 14 and Bryant, who averaged 21.1 during the season, finished with four.

"That was an unbelievable effort off the bench by Walker," Carlesimo said. "We played the whole month of February with our backs against the wall but this would have been an important win for us. I believe we belong in the NCAA."

The Pirates extended the lead to 19-6 before Syracuse went on a 12-0 run with Coleman and Seikaly scoring four each.

The Orangemen, however, were never able to take the lead as the Pirates went on a 6-0 run and they maintained the seven-point advantage at halftime, 31-24.

Poor free throw shooting has hurt Syracuse all season but it missed all eight attempts in the first half.

"Seton Hall's free throw defense in the first half was good," Boeheim said. "I said if someone would make a couple everyone else would fall in line."

The first Orangemen to make a free throw was Douglas and they went on to make 19 of 27 in the second half.

Indiana.....116
Iowa (15).....89

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Keith Smart 24 of his career-high 32 points in the first half as Indiana defeated 15th-ranked Iowa 116-89 Saturday in the regular-season finale for both teams.

Dean Garrett scored 26 points and Jay Edwards 24 for the Hoosiers as Indiana set an Assembly Hall record with its third-highest point-total ever. The Indiana record was set in a 122-92 victory over Ohio State in 1959 and matched against Notre Dame in 1962.

The 6-foot-1 Smart, playing his final home game, made 11 of 13 shots in the first half as Indiana opened a 53-34 lead. He topped his previous high of 31 with a string of three consecutive baskets that gave the Hoosiers a 76-50 advantage, then sat down for more than 10 minutes.

Iowa's Kent Hill was ejected from the game with 1:11 to go in the first half. Todd Jadlow threw the ball in Hill's face from out of bounds, and Hill retaliated by poking Jadlow in the face. Hill and his coach both received technical fouls and Edwards went to the free throw line, where he made all three free throws.

The defending NCAA champions, who anticipate receiving an at-large bid to the 64-team tournament field Sunday, ended the regular season with a 19-9 overall record and 11-7 in the Big Ten Conference. The Hawkeyes, who also anticipate being in the NCAA tournament, are 22-9 and 12-6.

Roy Marble led Iowa with 24 points.

Indiana took the lead for good at 15-14 on a layup by Edwards. The Hoosiers broke the game open with an 18-3 spurt late in the first half.

The Hoosiers consistently were able to get the ball inside, shooting 67 percent in first half, making 21 of 31, to lead by as many as 29 points early in the second half, 64-35.

Georgia.....72
Florida.....70

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Patrick Hamilton hit a 3-point shot with 19 seconds left in the game to spur Georgia to a 72-70 victory over Florida in a fight-marred semifinal game of the Southeastern Conference basketball tournament Saturday.

Georgia, 19-14, meets Kentucky for the tournament championship on Sunday. Sixth-ranked Kentucky, 24-5, beat Louisiana State University 86-80 earlier Saturday in the other semifinal.

Each team made a trip down the court without scoring, then Hamilton hit his jumper to put Georgia on top 70-67.

Maxwell hit a pair of free throws with 15 seconds left to make it 70-69, then Georgia's Rod Cole hit both ends of a one-and-one after being fouled by Dwayne Davis.

With one second left and Georgia ahead 72-69, Maxwell went to the line with only one chance to send the game into overtime: make the first free throw, miss the second intentionally so his team could score with the rebound. His first shot went in, but his second bounced off the rim and time expired before the ball could be rebounded.

The game was less than four minutes old and Florida led 9-3 when Florida's Ronnie Montgomery and Georgia's Alec Kessler got into a fight.

Montgomery plowed into Kessler and hit him in the stomach. Kessler chased him down and landed two punches before referee Luis Grillo wrapped up Kessler and took him to the floor.

As Grillo lay atop Kessler, Montgomery landed two punches to Kessler's head.

Both players were ejected. Montgomery was charged with a double intentional personal foul and a double technical, Kessler with a double technical.

Jody Patton led Georgia scoring with 24 points, including three 3-pointers in the final 11:50 of the game. Hamilton had 17 points, and Willie Anderson 11.

Inside Men Strong For Heels

AP Sports Writer

GREENSBORO (AP) — The guards aren't doing a lot of scoring for ninth-ranked North Carolina, but it's not of the utmost concern to any of the Tar Heels as they enter the championship game of the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament.

In their 74-64 victory over Maryland on Saturday, the Tar Heels got their customary production out of J.R. Reid and Scott Williams. Reid scored 19 points on seven of 15 field goals, and Williams had 17 points on eight of 13 field goals before fouling out.

"When you have Scott Williams and J.R. Reid playing excellent basketball, you just try and get them the ball," said forward Steve Bucknall, who had nine points. "That's about the whole object of our offense, to get them the ball to get to get easy shots."

Point guard Jeff Lebo, in somewhat of a shooting slump, got six points on two 3-pointers. Kevin Madden, the second guard disguised in a forward's body, got 10 points including one 3-point basket. Reserve guard King Rice got eight points.

Bucknall said he's confident that when Williams and Reid are playing well, the Tar Heels will play well.

As for Reid, the problem with the guards is that teams are focusing on Lebo, making inside scoring a necessity.

"Now, Scott's come into his own and he's just playing outstanding basketball," Reid said. "Steve Bucknall's been playing great defense and he's been showing good offense, also."

But, unlike Bucknall, Reid wants the outside shots.

"If we don't have any outside shooting, they're really going to sag back on us," Reid said. "With Scott Williams popping the 3-pointers, it's making teams play a little more honest."

Derrick Lewis and his Maryland teammates did what most of North Carolina's opponents have done against Reid this season — get three defenders around him whenever he touched the ball. Early in the first half, the strategy forced Reid to pass the ball back to the perimeter. Slowly, Reid began to take charge inside at both ends of the floor.

"You can't really stop their inside game," Lewis said. "Sure, you can double up on one of them, but the other will be free and Scott Williams is really coming around. I think he's the key to why North Carolina is winning."

"They're just going to have to pound the ball inside," Lewis said. "I think they have an advantage inside over whoever they play tomorrow."

Lesser-Knowns Play Key Role In Duke's Victory

GREENSBORO (AP) — Danny Ferry scored the deciding basket, but it was left to some lesser-known names to play key roles in the final minutes of Duke's Atlantic Coast Conference Tournament semifinal victory Saturday.

Throughout the second half of Duke's 73-71 victory over North Carolina State, names like Alaa Abdelnaby, Rodney Monroe and Quinney Weems kept coming up.

"Everybody was so tired, you had to use a lot of people," North Carolina State Coach Jim Valvano said. "It came down to whose depth would come through for them."

Abdelnaby, who averaged 4.9 points per game, scored 10 points over a 6:43 span to keep the Blue Devils close. He was four of four from the field and two of two from the free-throw line.

Monroe, a 6-foot-3 freshman, came on and scored 15 of his 17 points in the second half.

Weems, a junior, scored five points in nine second-half minutes, including a driving layup that gave the Wolfpack a 64-62 lead with seven minutes to play.

Duke's starting guard Billy King said the play of the Blue Devils' bench was a key factor.

"You can't imagine how big their contributions were," King said. "The last two games, we played a lot of minutes yesterday. Those guys coming in, giving us that boost — Alaa, Phil (Henderson) and John (Smith). It's something that pleasing to see those guys come in and go to work. They've put their time in and I'm glad to see it pay off for them."

Abdelnaby said, "The guys off the bench, they're fresher. You go in there and hope you can give the team a lift. Fortunately, I was able to do that."

The 6-10 sophomore center had not scored as many as 10 points since Duke's 101-63 victory over Clemson on Feb. 1.

"That was my best game in a long, long time," Abdelnaby said. "Today was the most comfortable I've felt in a long time out there. The guys did a heck of a job getting me the ball."

Duke played the last the four first-round games Friday night, defeating Virginia 60-48. The short turnaround put a strain on the Blue Devils.

"I think we were all fatigued," Abdelnaby said. "We didn't get to the hotel last night until one o'clock in the morning. ... It's hard when you have the late night game and then have to come back the next afternoon."

Monroe, who fell two points shy of his career-high, kept the Wolfpack close, making four of six shots. His 3-pointer with 5:52 to play gave N.C. State a 67-64 lead.

"Rodney came in and nobody could stop him. Billy King couldn't stop him," Chucky Brown said. "He was killing them."

Valvano had praise for key reserves on both teams.

"Kelsey came in, made some steals, made some passes, scored some points. Then he got tired. Avie (Lester) came in and knocked in some free throws.

"Abdelnaby came in and scored some points."

Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski said the play of his reserves made the difference.

"I thought our bench was the key to the win," Krzyzewski said. " We got good contributions from Henderson, Abdelnaby and Smith. They were terrific coming off the bench."

Campbell Is No Qualifier

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Mark Rourke of Alabama and Daphne Jongejans of Miami, Fla. led 10 qualifiers Saturday for the NCAA Swimming and Diving Championships.

Rourke won the men's three-meter diving with a total of 579.30 points, easily outdistancing Patrick Hand of Louisiana State, who finished second with 537.35 points. Other qualifiers were LSU's Matthew Breeden, Clemson's Dale Hrovat and Steve Bell of Cincinnati. Bell had to defeat Steve Scanlon of James Madison in a dive-off for the fifth and final spot.

In the women's one-meter diving, Jongejans scored 512.55 points, finishing well ahead of Reyne Borup and Robbie Dalton of South Carolina, who were in second and third. Lisa Decker of Miami finished fourth and Jill Schlabach of Cincinnati finished fifth.

East Carolina's Sherri Campbell finished 23rd in both the 1- and 3-meter events and failed to qualify. Campbell had won both the events in the Colonial Athletic Association championship meet.

Terrapins Await NCAA Decision

GREENSBORO (AP) — Just one season after failing to win a single conference game, Maryland has a concern that seemed years away four months ago.

After finishing fifth in the Atlantic Coast Conference regular-season standings and advancing into the semifinals of the conference tournament, Maryland is a team that may or may not be invited to the NCAA's 64-team, postseason tournament.

The Terrapins have a 17-13 record following a 74-64 loss to North Carolina in an ACC semifinal game Saturday. One day earlier, the Terps defeated 18th-ranked Georgia Tech 84-67 in a first-round game.

The Terps also have posted road victories over Duke, currently ranked eighth in the country, and Notre Dame. Maryland's regular-season schedule has been ranked among the most difficult in the country.

"If Maryland is not an NCAA team, then we're in the wrong league," North Carolina Coach Dean Smith after Saturday's game. "They can beat anybody in the country."

Maryland is one of at least a dozen schools that will be hoping for one of the final few NCAA berths.

One year ago, the Terps were 9-17 overall and 0-14 in the ACC. It was a season overshadowed by the aftermath of the cocaine-related death of Len Bias.

This year, Coach Bob Wade, who took over the Maryland program just a month before the 1986-87 season was to begin, just wanted to win one ACC game. The Terps won six of 14.

"I'm optimistic about being included in the (NCAA's) field of 64," Wade said. "But we have to be concerned."

It's a concern Wade couldn't have expected before this season began in spite of the addition of freshman center Brian Williams and junior college transfer Rudy Archer to the Terps' lineup.

"I'm very pleased with our season," Wade said. "Anytime you can win some ACC games, you have to be pleased. I think we're on the upswing. Recruiting wise, I think we've done a pretty good job."

After Saturday's loss, Wade was asked about the possibility of an invitation to the National Invitation Touranment.

Raked Trap Helps Floyd Out

CORAL SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — Ray Floyd climbed into the bunker with visions of a bogey — or worse — flashing through his mind.

He was in the back of the sand, with the green sloping sharply away from him, and water on the other side.

Then his eyes lit up.

"I saw that the sand was raked up flush with the lip of the trap, so that there was no lip," Floyd said Saturday after the third round of the $700,000 Honda Classic.

"I figured I had two options — use the sand wedge and try to play for a (bogey) four — and I might make five — or go for the putter."

He chose the latter, putted the ball from the sand, up and over the smooth track where the lip usually looms, onto the green and to within a foot of the cup for an easy save of par.

It was the highlight of a windblown round of 68 that kept Floyd within two shots of the leader, Joey Sindelar, going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $126,000 first prize.

Sindelar also had a 68, finishing it off with a last-hole birdie that gave him a 206 total for three trips over the TPC course at Eagle Trace.

Even though he didn't know it more than a half-hour after finishing, he had a one-stroke lead over Scotland's Ken Brown.

"I don't know what the scores look like, but I'd guess I'm up there pretty close somewhere," Sindelar said.

It was better than close.

Brown, who led most of the day, played about a half-hour behind Sindelar and had the lead when Sindelar finished.

But Brown, a member of Europe's winning Ryder Cup team and winner of last year's Southern Open, bogeyed two of the last three holes and finished with a 70 that left him at 207.

Floyd was tied at 208 with Sandy Lyle of Scotland, Tommy Nakajima of Japan and Ed Fiori. Fiori and Nakajima each had a 71 and Lyle, a former British Open and TPC champion, shot a 70.

Floyd, winner of four major championships, holed three birdie putts in the 18-20 foot range and dropped two others from about 25 feet.

And there was that unusual save with putter from the bunker on the 17th hole.

"It's the only shot I had," he said. "I can't even remember the last time I did that. It's been many years. It's not something you practice.

"It doesn't always work. But it was worth the try. And it worked this time."

In addition to Sindelar and Brown, Nakajima, Fiori, Mudd, Lyle, Fred Wadsworth and Dan Forsman all had a piece of the lead at one time or another.

But Forsman struggled to a 77 and finished the day at 214. Wadsworth took an 80 and was at 217.

Sindelar, winner of three titles in his four seasons on the PGA Tour, was trailing by two shots when he got to the 18th.

He hit a 7-iron to about eight feet and made the birdie putt.

Moments later — even though he didn't know it — he had a share of the lead when Brown bogeyed the 16th from a bunker.

And one hole later — still without knowing it — Sindelar took the lead when Brown bogeyed again, missing the green on the 17th.

Mowry's Birdies Guide Him Into Seniors Lead

SIMI VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — Larry Mowry birdied six holes and shot a 3-under-par 69 Saturday to tie Harold Henning for the lead after two rounds of the $275,000 Seniors Classic at Wood Ranch.

Henning, who fired a 68 in the first round Friday for a one-shot lead, struggled with the wind and his putter, shooting a 73.

Both were at 3-under-par 141 heading into Sunday's final round of the 54-hole tournament.

Don Bies, a Senior Tour rookie who turned 50 in December, was one stroke back at 142 after shooting a 69.

Orville Moody, winner of last week's Vintage Invitational, shot a 72 and Butch Baird had 70 to tie at 143.

In the Super Seniors competition for golfers 60 and older, Howie Johnson successfully defended his title by shooting a 75 for a 36-hole total of 149.

That gave him a one-stroke victory over Freddie Hass, who had a 76.

"It would be an honor to win on a course like this," Mowry said about the 6,727-yard, par-72 Wood River course. "It's going to be an exciting final round. With so many players in contention, and on a course that I think is the toughest we play on the Seniors Tour, a lot of players still have a chance."

Henning had an inconsistent round with five birdies, four bogeys and a double bogey.

Elster Is Finally Warming Up

By The Associated Press

After a cold start, New York Mets rookie Kevin Elster is heating up in Florida.

Elster, who is slated to be the Mets regular shortstop this season, went hitless in his first 12 at-bats in spring training. But he now has two home runs in his last two games.

The latest was a two-run shot that sparked the Mets to a 13-4 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies Saturday.

"I better stop it or you guys will start to expect this from me all the time," said Elster, who is trying to fill the hole created when the Mets traded Rafael Santana to the New York Yankees.

Elster's first hit this spring was a solo homer in Friday's victory over Montreal.

"I've finally relaxed," he said. "No doubt, I was pressing. I needed that first hit."

Astros 13, Red Sox 3

Kevin Bass had three hits and Jim Pankovits drove in four runs, sparking a 19-hit attack for Houston.

Bass hit a homer in the sixth, while Pankovits drove in his runs with a single and a double. The Red Sox scored on Jim Rice's second-inning homer against winner Mike Scott and Angel Gonzalez's two-run double in the eighth.

Dodgers 2, Braves 0

Franklin Stubbs drove in two runs with a double and four Los Angeles pitchers combined for a three-hit shutout.

Blue Jays 4, Rangers 2

Rick Leach's bases-loaded sacrifice fly had tied the score 2-2 with one out in the Toronto eighth. Border then drove Mitch Williams' second pitch into right-center to score Phil Campusano and Lloyd Moseby.

Toronto starter Mike Flanagan yielded two singles in four innings. Bob Shirley, who pitched out of a bases-loaded jam in the eighth inning, picked up the victory.

Reds 9, Tigers 5

Cincinnati's Eric Davis hit a towering two-run homer and Detroit rookie Richard Carter allowed two runs to score on wild pitches.

With the score tied 5-5 in the Cincinnati sixth, Nick Esasky walked and moved up on Eddie Milner's single and a throwing error by Detroit right fielder Luis Salazar. Esasky scored on Carter's first wild pitch, breaking the tie, and Milner scored on another wild pitch.

Yankees 8, Twins 4

Claudell Washington's two-run homer highlighted a four-run first inning for the Yankees.

Washington's homer came off Twins starter Bert Blyleven, who gave up four runs in 1 2-3 innings before leaving the game with a pulled right hamstring. The Yankees had a total of 14 hits off four Twins pitchers.

Rick Rhoden, who gave up three earned runs on seven hits over the first three innings, was the winner. Blyleven took the loss.

White Sox 3, Pirates 1

The White Sox were led by pitcher Rick Horton and center fielder Lance Johnson, both acquired from St. Louis in an offseason trade.

Johnson drove in the go-ahead run with a fifth-inning bunt off Miguel Garcia, and added an RBI infield single in the seventh. Horton pitched three shutout innings, running his string of scoreless frames to eight this spring.

"I've always wanted to do well in the spring," said Horton, expected to be Chicago's starter on opening day. "I think it's dangerous to say this doesn't count or this doesn't matter because I want to work on something. You should always want to do well."

Athletics (ss) 9, Indians (ss) 5
Athletics (ss) 6, Indians (ss) 5

Mickey Tettleton and Dave Henderson homered during a five-run ninth inning to power Oakland over Cleveland at Tucson.

The game was one of two split-squad contests between the teams. In Phoenix, Oakland scored six runs in the ninth inning off Doug Jones to beat the Indians 6-5.

Cubs 5, Brewers 3

Ryne Sandberg tripled, singled, drove in two runs and scored another to lead Chicago.

Sandberg, who had been out of action with a stomach virus, drove in the Cubs' first run with a triple and then scored to tie the score at 2-2 against Teddy Higuera in the third inning.

All three Brewers runs came on solo homers, two by Robin Yount and one by Paul Molitor.

Royals 6, Cardinals 3

Danny Tartabull had three singles, drove in a run and scored a run as the Royals downed the Cardinals.

The Royals' 11-hit attack also included two singles and an RBI by rookie outfielder Gary Thurman and an RBI triple by George Brett in the first inning.

California 11, Seattle 3

Tony Armas hit two homers and drove in six runs for the Angels.

Armas connected for a two-run shot in the first inning off Mariners starter Mike Campbell. Armas hit another homer in the third following a lead-off single by Wally Joyner. His other two RBI came in the fourth and seventh innings.

Giants 3, Padres 2

NFL Owners Have Some Worries As Meet Opens

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — When the 28 NFL owners arrive here for the annual spring meetings this week, they would do well to come equipped with a case of fly swatters.

For no matter how many annoyances they seem to fend off, they always have new ones buzzing around their heads.

So while one problem was eliminated last week when a federal appeals court threw out the USFL's appeal of the $3 award in its antitrust suit against the NFL, these still figure to be the most troubled meetings in the last four or five years.

Or, as Tex Schramm, president of the Dallas Cowboys, put it after the USFL verdict this week: "at least we got one thing off our backs."

For along with the usual housekeeping items, like what looks like another close vote on retaining instant replay review for a third season, the owners also must consider more pressing itmes.

They include:

— The fates of the St. Louis and New England franchises — the move of the Cardinals, the financial troubles and prospective sale of the the Patriots.

— What to do about making college undergraduates eligible for the pro draft

— The lack of a contract with the players union, which took the owners to court after ending their 22-day strike last October.

One of the early items to be discussed will be the move of the Cardinals from St. Louis to Phoenix, announced in January by owner Bill Bidwill after three years of feints and counterfeints toward Baltimore, Jacksonville and other points east and west.

Despite a move by a civic group in St. Louis that will attempt to keep the owners from giving Bidwill permission, it is expected to get the 21 votes necessary. But only after the owners set an indemnity price to be paid to the league — the difference between what Bidwill could be expected to make in St. Louis and Phoenix based on such items as stadium size (20,000 more seats), market size and climate.

That ties in with expansion — or non-expansion.

These were once supposed to be the meeting at which a committee was expected to be named to decide the sites for two expansion teams and six cities — Oakland, Baltimore, Memphis, Jacksonville, San Antonio and Sacramento — are sending lobbyists to woo them.

But Commissioner Pete Rozelle announced in January he doesn't expect expansion until two years after the resolution of the collective bargaining agreement, which is pending in a Minneapolis court. And Rozelle's spokesman, Joe Browne, reiterated this week: "there will be nothing done about expansion."

The New England situation, meanwhile, is like a daily soap opera involving the debt-ridden Sullivan family; bankrupt Sullivan Stadium; at least two courts, and various prospective buyers, including a consortium headed by Fran Murray of Philadelphia that holds the first option.

The team has also been pursued at various times by some of the nation's richest men, including New York real estate magnate Donald Trump, who has dropped out, and former Postmaster General Robert Tisch, who hasn't. What the owners do about it may depend on what happens away from the meetings.

"It's hard to predict," Browne says. "Things change from day to day."

The same could be true of making undergraduates eligible for the draft. Except that circumstances seem to be bringing more pressure on the NFL — the last professional sports league that doesn't allow the drafting of undergraduates.

Under current rules, the NFL can draft players only if they have completed four years of eligibility, have graduated, or have gone five years since enrollment. But those rules have been bent already, largely because of the disclosures of signings by agents to underclassmen, making them ineligible for college play.

Last year, for example, the NFL held a supplementary draft for wide receiver Cris Carter of Ohio State after he signed with an agent after it was convinced by lawyers that it couldn't win if Carter took his case to court. He subsequently was drafted by the Eagles.

As for the rules changes, the most noteworthy is instant replay, which was approved for a second year last season by the narrowest of margins, 21-7 — three-quarters of the teams are needed to approve any change.

Barkley Ejected, But Sixers Win

By The Associated Press

Philadelphia's Charles Barkley and New York's Patrick Ewing were asked to leave their respective games by the officials — but for different reasons.

Barkley was given two technical fouls and ejected by referee Ken Mauer with 2:27 left in 76ers 124-118 victory over the Sacramento Kings. Before he left, however, he scored 32 points and Cliff Robinson added 29.

"We tell him all the time that he can't do that," Robinson said of Barkley's fourth ejection this season. "We need him down the stretch. I think he realizes that."

Nevertheless, the victory lifted Philadelphia into a third-place Atlantic Division tie with the Knicks, who couldn't overcome a season-low eight points by Ewing, who got into early foul trouble and played only 14:43 before fouling out with 3:12 to go in a 122-115 loss to the Atlanta Hawks.

"They're a different team without Ewing," Atlanta center Wayne Rollins said. "He's so aggressive on defense. Each time he went to switch out to a smaller man, we'd drive to the basket and he would shift his feet. That's why he got into foul trouble."

The victory lifted Philadelphia into a third-place tie with the New York Knicks in the Atlantic Division. They trail Washington, a 109-107 loser to Utah, by 1½ games in the race for the eight and final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference.

In other NBA games, it was Boston 122, Indiana 112; Detroit 116, Phoenix 88; Milwaukee 132, Denver 93; Cleveland 117, San Antonio 107, and Golden State 101, Los Angeles Clippers 96.

A free throw by Maurice Cheeks gave Philadelphia a 118-108 lead over Sacramento with 1:32 to go. The Kings then scored six straight points before Cheeks and David Wingate each made two free throws to clinch the victory.

Cheeks and Wingate scored 15 points apiece while Otis Thorpe had 31 and Reggie Theus 23 for Sacramento.

Barkley said he didn't know why Mauer ejected him for unsportsmanlike conduct.

"He got upset because I told him I make more money than he does," Barkley said. "I can't believe he got upset by that. I'm just glad we won and it's over with."

Hawks 122, Knicks 115

Dominique Wilkins scored 40 points, five during a 17-10 spurt over the last 5½ minutes as Atlanta broke away from a 105-105 tie. Rollins and Glenn Rivers scored four points apiece during the burst. Bill Cartwright led New York with 22 points.

Mark Jackson, Johnny Newman and Gerald Wilkins, Dominique's younger brother, each had 18 points for New York.

"It's very frustrating," Ewing said.

Jazz 109, Bullets 107

Karl Malone led Utah with 34 points while Stockton had 18 points and 16 assists. Jeff Malone scored 31 points for Washington, John Williams 22 and Moses Malone 21.

The victory was only the ninth in 30 road games for Utah.

"I thought we played well enough to win some before," Stockton said, "but we had trouble getting over the top. We'd get tied late, and lose games the way we won tonight."

Celtics 122, Pacers 112

Larry Bird scored 30 points, Kevin McHale added 27 and grabbed 17 rebounds and Mark Acres, subbing for an injured Robert Parrish, had 17 points and 10 rebounds. Boston led 113-110 before a 9-0 run in the final two minutes.

Wayman Tisdale scored 24 points for Indiana. Jim Paxson scored a season-high 15 for the Celtics while Dennis Johnson and Danny Ainge had 13 apiece. Ainge was 5-for-5 from the foul line, extending his streak to 36 straight free throws.

Coach K.C. Jones said Acres' performance took some pressure off Bird and McHale.

Pistons 116, Suns 88

Dennis Rodman scored 10 points and grabbed eight rebounds as Detroit built a 20-point lead in the first quarter. The Pistons were never threatened in extending their home winning streak to 14 games and handing the Suns their eighth consecutive setback.

Rodman finished with 21 points, including two 3-point baskets, and Adrian Dantley scored 16 points for Detroit, which had seven players in double figures. Armon Gilliam had 15 points for Phoenix.

Detroit's John Salley missed the second half due to an irregular heartbeat and was scheduled to see a cardiologist.

Bucks 132, Nuggets 93

Jerry Reynolds scored 24 points and Terry Cummings 22 as Milwaukee shot a season-high 60.2 percent and handed Denver its worst setback of the year. The Bucks led 36-18 after one quarter — thanks to a 14-1 run in the final four minutes — 76-50 at halftime and 104-69 after three periods.

Randy Breuer added 16 points and Jack Sikma and Ricky Pierce had 15 each for Milwaukee. Blair Rasmussen had 21 points and Alex English 19 for the Nuggets, who lost their third consecutive game.

Cavaliers 117, Spurs 107

John "Hot Rod" Williams, adjusting to his new role off the bench, scored a season-high 24 points, including two fourth-quarter free throws that put Cleveland ahead for good.

The loss was the fifth straight for the Spurs, matching their season high. They also have lost 11 of their last 12 road games while Cleveland has won six straight at home.

Williams hit two free throws with eight minutes left to snap the game's 20th tie, putting Cleveland ahead for good 94-92. The Cavaliers repeatedly took the ball inside and capitalized by making all 17 of their fourth-quarter free throws.

Ron Harper scored 24 points and newly acquired Larry Nance added 22. Alvin Robertson led San Antonio with 20 points.

Warriors 101, Clippers 96

Chris Mullin scored 24 points and Rod Higgins added six of his 21 in the final two minutes as Golden State dealt Los Angeles its sixth consecutive defeat. The Warriors have won two in a row after losing their previous eight games.

The Clippers, losers in 20 of their last 22, were paced by Mike Woodson with 21 points and rookie Ken Norman with 18 points and 13 rebounds, both season highs.

The Warriors, who led by 10 points in the first half, regained the lead for good at 82-81 on rookie Winston Garland's 18-footer with 7:17 left in the game. Ben McDonald followed with a short jumper and Higgins added a three-point play that put Golden State ahead 87-81 with 5:49 left.

Things Are Tough For Lowly Clippers

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

The Los Angeles Clippers have matched their victory total for all of last season, which hasn't stopped them from continuing as the worst team in the NBA.

"We simply don't have the talent to compete in the NBA," Clippers Coach Gene Shue said after a recent loss. "This has been a real challenge for me even though we have some players hurt.

"But even if we had everybody back, it would be a real struggle. Right now, I have to be very patient and hope the kids can get their act together."

Mark Jackson, winner of three of the four Rookie of the Month awards this season, was the 18th pick in the first round of the 1987 draft, leading to questions about the quality of NBA scouting.

Point guard, however, might be the toughest position to evaluate, since Jackson actually lies in the middle ground among draft positions of starting point guards.

Magic Johnson of the Lakers (No. 1), Detroit's Isiah Thomas (2), Kenny Smith of Sacramento (4) and San Antonio's Johnny Dawkins (10) are the only starters picked in the top 10.

Two 1988 All-Stars, Doc Rivers of Atlanta (31) and Maurice Cheeks of Philadelphia (36), were picked later than Jackson, along with former All-Star Dennis Johnson of Boston (29).

Other notables picked later than Jackson are Paul Pressey of Milwaukee (20), Cleveland's Mark Price (25), Denver's Michael Adams (66), and Portland's Terry Porter (24).

The hiring of Hall of Fame center Willis Reed as coach of the New Jersey Nets already is paying dividends in the improved play of center Tim McCormick.

Before Reed arrived, McCormick had not scored more than 18 points all season.

In Reed's first four games as coach, three of them victories, McCormick had 16 points and matched his season high with 13 rebounds against the Los Angeles Clippers, added 23 points in an upset victory at Boston, scored 20 more against New York and had 25 despite a loss to Utah.

VCU Edges Pirates In Typical Thriller

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

When East Carolina and Virginia Commonwealth tangle on the baseball diamond, it's usually a one-run thriller and Friday evening's game proved no exception to the rule.

The Rams took their second straight extra-inning game from the Pirates in the contest, gaining a 5-4 11 inning win. The victory kept VCU's win streak intact and ran it to eight in a row, while snapping a pair of ECU streaks.

The loss was the first after nine straight wins for the Pirates and it also marked the first time in five games that the Pirates had not scored in double figures.

The fifth time was earlier in the afternoon when the Pirates ran to an 18-5 win over Fairleigh Dickinson-Madison.

But the double digits were not to be repeated in the nightcap which turned into a true pitching duel.

East Carolina's Scott Stevens, a freshman, went the distance and took the loss, his second against two wins. Stevens gave up 10 hits but only two of the five runs against him were earned. He struck out 10 and walked six.

Jerry Dipoto, who started for the Rams, came out with one out in the ninth and reliever Jeff Zona got the win, his third in four decisions. Dipoto allowed nine hits and three earned runs while fanning eight and walking one. Zona in two and two-thirds innings, held the Pirates hitless and struck out five, as he retired all eight men he faced.

"It's just a shame that someone had to lose," VCU coach Tony Guzzo, a former ECU player and assistant coach, said. "Both teams played well and it was a great college baseball game. It was just a case of people coming up with great plays to end innings and some great pitching by all three who were in the game."

East Carolina coach Gary Overton echoed Guzzo. "There were three fine pitching jobs out there. If not for some infield hits and some errors, it might well have been a 1-0 ball game. Both teams made some crucial errors and I don't think either team swung the bats that well. Neither one of them really manufactured runs that well until they got theirs in the 11th."

East Carolina struck first in the game, scoring a run in the bottom of the first. With one away, Chris Cauble singled to center. Courtesy runner Tommy Yarborough then scored on a double to left center by Jay McGraw.

VCU struck for the lead in the third, scoring four times — three of the runs unearned. John Callis reached on an error but was cut down at second on Charlie Dragum's infield grounder. Dragum stole second and scored on a hit to right by David Ziara. Billy Wright beat out an infield bunt and Adam Knicely walked to load the bases. Tim Barker reached on an infield hit that scored Ziara. Juan Serrano's grounder to short forced Barker and scored Wright, and an error on the relay to first allowed Knicely to score.

East Carolina closed it to 4-3 with two in the fifth. David Ritchie opened with a walk and with one away, Tommy Boswell reached on an error. John Thomas singled in Ritchie. Cauble's grounder to second forced Thomas, but the relay was thrown away and Boswell scored.

McGraw then homered in the bottom of the eighth to tie it up, 4-4. The homer also allowed McGraw to tie Butch Davis for second place on the ECU career list with 26.

But the Pirates were unable to score again. They put a man in scoring position in the ninth, but left him standing on second.

VCU threatened in the fifth, advancing Barker to third on a hit, stolen base and error with one out, but the Pirates escaped undamaged. They left a man at second in the eighth and on third in the ninth.

But in the 11th the Rams pushed over the winning run. Dragum opened with a double to right and he moved to third on Ziara's grounder to first. Wright's sacrifice fly to center plated Dragum. Knicely followed with a double to right but was thrown out at the plate by Steve Godin on Barker's hit to right.

Barker had three hits and Ziara had two for the Rams. East Carolina was led by McGraw with three and Thomas with two.

□ □ □

East Carolina had little trouble with Fairleigh Dickinson-Madison in the opening game of the day. East Carolina took the lead in the first and never looked back.

Thomas opened with a double but was tagged out at third on Cauble's grounder to short. McGraw walked and Brown singled to right, loading the bases. John Adams drew a walk, scoring Cauble.

In the second, the Pirates added four more for a 5-0 lead. Dom DiGirolamo reached on an infield hit and courtesy runner Yarborough stole second, scoring on Thomas' single to right. An error on a pickoff try sent Thomas to third and he scored on Cauble's hit to center. McGraw added a hit and Brown singled in Cauble. McGraw scored on a sacrifice fly by Godin.

Two more crossed in the third, making it 7-0. Boswell walked and DiGirolamo reached on an error but was forced at second by Thomas. Cauble walked to load them up and McGraw reached on an error, scoring both Boswell and Thomas.

The Jersey Devils scored their first two in the fourth on a couple of wild pitches. Dino DiFrancesco had reached on a fielder's choice while Mike Laurie singled. Both moved up on a walk to Jim Throckmorton and the wild pitches brought them the rest of the way, cutting the lead to 7-2.

ECU then put the game out of reach with nine in the fourth, running it out to 16-2. Godin opened with a single and Adams walked. Ritchie reached on an error but was forced by Boswell as Godin scored. DiGirolamo's sacrifice fly scored Adams and a walk and a hit batsman loaded the bases. McGraw's walk forced in one and Brown followed with a grand-slam homer to right, clearing the bases.

A walk two errors, a base hit and a walk brought in the other two runs.

ECU added two more in the fifth on two hits, a walk and an error.

FDU-M scored one in the fifth on two walks and a hit and two in the sixth on three hits, including a two-run single by Brian Laing.

Brown had three hits and five rbi in the game for the Pirates while Thomas had two hits.

John West had three hits and DiFrancesco had two for the Devils.

East Carolina goes to 10-3 with the split while FDU-M falls to 0-5 and VCU climbs to 9-3.

The Pirates return to action on Sunday, hosting Rhode Island in a doubleheader at 1 p.m. at Harrington Field.

Herzog Appraises Oquendo Better Than An Arbitrator

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog recognizes Jose Oquendo's value to the Cardinals, even if a salary arbitrator didn't.

"If I'd have been the arbitrator, he'd be one guy that would have won his case," said Herzog, who last season started calling Oquendo "The Secret Weapon."

The reason was no secret.

Oquendo played every position except catcher last year, starting at seven, and was the primary backup at shortstop, second base and third base. He also was the National League's top pinch hitter, going 10 for 26 for a .385 mark. Overall, he hit .286 with one home run and 24 runs batted in. He's also a switch hitter.

"I know one thing, he can play a little bit," Herzog said.

Oquendo also showed he has a flair for the dramatic. He picked Game 7 of the National League Championship Series to hit the third home run of his career. His three-run shot put St. Louis into the World Series.

"I'm happy about what Whitey said and I'm very happy with my season," Oquendo said Friday. "I'm very satisfied with what I accomplished. I did feel that we built a pretty good case."

You would have thought so, at least.

But Oquendo, 24, got snubbed.

In his first year of eligibility for arbitration, the three-year veteran figured to get a nice boost, so he asked for a raise from $100,000 to $360,000. The arbitrator ruled in favor of the Cardinals' offer of $275,000.

"We had an arbitrator that didn't know anything about baseball," Oquendo said. "That made it tough.

"But there's nothing I can do but keep doing what I've been doing and continue to work hard. Maybe we'll win it next year."

Perhaps because of his hard work, Oquendo has gotten off to somewhat of a slow start this spring. He injured his throwing shoulder diving for a ball in the World Series and still experiences soreness.

"It's been going so-so this spring," Oquendo said. "My shoulder is coming along slowly."

The Cardinals will need him at full strength next month. They don't need him to pitch or catch, but he's in demand everywhere else.

"I have to realize I'm a backup player and I have to be ready for anything that could happen," Oquendo said. "As long as I'm in the game, that's what counts."

Oquendo's natural position is shortstop; he started 53 of the first 81 games with the New York Mets in 1984. But with Ozzie Smith having the best season of his career he got only nine starts there. He also got 18 starts at second base, 17 in right field, four in left field, three in center field and third base, and one at first base.

He was less successful on the mound, giving up four hits and three runs in a blowout loss in August against Philadelphia. But he did enjoy himself.

"It was fun, yeah," Oquendo said, cracking a big grin.

He wants to keep that outlook about the rest of his game, no matter what the arbitrator said.

Veteran Pitchers On Even Keel

By The Associated Press

Veteran pitchers Charlie Lea and Tippy Martinez, attempting to catch on with the Minnesota Twins, have learned never to get too high or too low.

"After 10 years (as a pro), you tend to stay off the roller-coaster," said Lea, who allowed two singles in four scoreless innings of Friday's 9-1 exhibition loss to Toronto.

"It was a good day, but it's early. One day at a time — that's the only way I can look at it. Today worked out and we'll see what happens next time."

Lea, who joined Montreal in 1980 but spent all of 1985 and 1986 on the disabled list with shoulder trouble and made only one major-league appearance last year, threw just 39 pitches and has a 1.50 ERA after six spring innings.

"There were moments in the minors last season when it all worked, only to fall apart a week later," he said. "If you can get in a rhythm, then your mechanics become refined, and at that point you start throwing quality strikes and usually you start getting people out. That's when you get that confidence back."

After Lea left, however, the Blue Jays hammered Martinez, Baltimore's one-time relief ace, for nine runs and nine hits in his only inning, including a grand slam by Willie Upshaw and solo homers by Jesse Barfield and Pat Borders.

"It was one of those days," Martinez said. "I threw everything except a knuckleball. I don't have a knuckleball, but I still thought about it.

"Let me put it this way — if I were to make the ballclub based on all of my performances, that one definitely would hurt me. I just got hit.

"I don't feel discouraged. You're going have days like this. The whole idea of being a reliever is to have better outcomes than this. But you have to be able to cope with this type of game, too.

"If you keep thinking about it, you will go out and get kicked again. Good relievers forget and then come right back and do the job."

Another nonroster veteran, outfielder Steve Kemp, had two doubles and a single and drove in a run in leading the Texas Rangers to a 4-3 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates. The 33-year-old Kemp is hitting .375 for the spring, with three doubles among his nine hits.

"I'm convinced I can still play in the big leagues," Kemp said. "If the Rangers don't think so, all I can do is go back to Oklahoma City and hope some other teams feel they can use me."

Another group of Pirates got RBI doubles by Bobby Bonilla and Sid Bream in the eighth inning and beat the Houston Astros 2-1 as Mike Bielecki, Bob Patterson and Jeff Robinson combined on a three-hitter.

New York Yankees relief ace Dave Righetti had another rough outing, allowing four runs and six hits in two innings of a 6-2 loss to the Chicago White Sox. Ex-Yankee Dan Pasqua had two singles, scored twice and drove in a run for Chicago. Righetti has a 15.75 ERA in two spring appearances covering four innings.

"I don't like to get hit around like this," he said. "I've had one good spring out of 12, and the year I had a good one it still got me sent to Columbus."

The California Angels played their first game without Manager Gene Mauch, who returned home for a medical examination, and Mark McLemore had four hits and Dick Schofield homered in a 22-hit, 14-3 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Mauch, who cited "health reasons" for taking a leave of absence, is scheduled to undergo an examination Monday in Palm Springs, Calif. Cookie Rojas, an advance scout for the Angels, will serve as interim manager.

"Since last August, I haven't really felt the way I think I should," Mauch said. "I'm going to find out if this is how you're supposed to feel when you're 62."

Mauch has managed 26 seasons in the majors, the longest of any active manager and fourth on the all-time list. He managed Philadelphia, Montreal and Minnesota before joining the Angels.

The New York Mets split their squad and won a doubleheader, edging the Atlanta Braves 2-1 as Dwight Gooden allowed one hit in four innings — he struck out two and walked two — and trouncing the Montreal Expos 8-2 as Darren Reed hit a grand slam. Reed's homer capped a five-run sixth inning against Bob McClure.

"Today was good. It was a load off my mind to do well," said Gooden, who gave up five runs on eight hits in three innings against Los Angeles in his first start. "I've never had a good spring. My best was in 1984, and that was mostly in 'B' games.

"My breaking ball still needs work. But I had good movement and good location."

Cardinals 7, Phillies 4

Nonroster second baseman Luis Alicea singled twice and added a run-scoring double, helping St. Louis extend its winning streak to three games. Bob Horner and Willie McGee hit run-scoring singles for the Cardinals in the first inning and St. Louis starter Bob Forsch allowed one hit in three scoreless innings.

Reds 11, Royals 2

Danny Jackson limited his former Kansas City teammates to one run and two hits in four innings while Lloyd McClendon and Jeff Treadway homered as Cincinnati ended a four-game losing streak.

Royals 5, Red Sox 3

Red Sox 6, Tigers 1

Athletics 10, Cubs 5

Giants 5, Mariners 3

Will Clark singled in the top of the ninth and Kevin Mitchell tripled him to break a 3-3 tie. Mitchell scored on Harry Spilman's single. The Mariners tied the score in the bottom of the eighth on a two-run homer by Alvin Davis.

Indians 4, Padres 3

Dodgers 10, Orioles 8

Pinch hitter Rick Dempsey's two-run double keyed a five-run eighth inning before a crowd of 24,247 in the first baseball game ever played at Joe Robbie Stadium, home of the NFL's Miami Dolphins. John Shelby and Mike Davis also homered for the Dodgers.

A Good Spring Is A Good Start

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — If exhibition games don't mean anything, then how come spring's big winners often springboard to success?

Contrary to popular baseball opinion, the Grapefruit and Cactus League standings might be worth watching. They were last year.

Minnesota, St. Louis and San Francisco each won its division in the spring. All three finished in first place in the fall.

"We learned to win last year, starting in spring training," said Twins pitcher Frank Viola, the World Series MVP. "No question, that's the time you get the right attitude and begin putting it together."

Other teams know the feeling. Prior to last season, the most successful teams in recent springs were the 1982 Atlanta Braves (18-7), the 1983 Chicago White Sox (20-7) and the 1985 Toronto Blue Jays (18-7). They all won titles in the regular season, too.

"I remember that spring real well," said Toronto's Jesse Barfield, recalling 1985. "Everyone was talking about how tough the American League East would be that year."

"We didn't want to let anyone get ahead of us, even in spring training. And we didn't."

It's happened before. In 1977, Los Angeles, Philadelphia and Kansas City had the best records during the exhibition season and went on to win championships.

Philadelphia did it again in 1978 and 1980.

The Giants went 20-10 last spring, the top winners in major-league exhibitions. They duplicated that success by taking their first National League West title since 1971.

"I like a team that gets into the habit of winning and I want to let teams like the Cubs and Padres, who we're playing in the regular season, know we're playing well," Giants Manager Roger Craig said. "They might look back and say, 'this is the team that beat us in spring training.'"

Said St. Louis' Bob Forsch: "Winning breeds confidence. Probably to an extent, that extends to spring training."

Of course, there are exceptions.

Detroit went 9-20 last spring, the worst record in the majors. The Tigers then went 98-64 when it counted, the best mark in baseball.

In 1986, Boston and Houston finished last in their divisions during the spring and wound up in the playoffs. The Chicago Cubs and San Diego did the same in 1984.

Playing poorly in the spring, however, is not usually a good sign. Since 1979, one-third of teams that had the worst record in their division during exhibitions went on to finish last or next-to-last.

Mostly it depends on what a team is trying to do in the spring. Anderson, for example, likes to look at a lot of players in the spring. Remember when he discovered Chris Pittaro, who seemed so good Anderson wanted to make room for him by shifting All-Star second baseman Lou Whitaker to third base?

Some veteran clubs, already knowing what their lineup will be in April, play a lot of kids early in the exhibition season. Many of those games are decided in the late innings with a Class AA reliever, not exactly a true indication of a team's talent.

Location also is a factor. The Giants did so well last spring partly because they are based in Arizona and got to play a lot of game against San Diego, Cleveland and Seattle. The Cubs, meanwhile, do not play against any other NL East team while in Arizona.

Most teams pooh-pooh the importance of exhibitions, especially ones early in March. But as opening day approaches, those games mean something.

"The last week, the guys going north begin to bear down," said Harold Baines of the White Sox. "They want to get into a groove."

That's what Viola and the Twins went through last year, finishing at 14-10 after three straight lackluster springs.

"Wins and losses don't have that much a bearing at the start of the exhibition season," he said.

Board Play Keys Terps' Win

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The proof is in the rebounds for the University of Maryland this year.

In the tournament's other first-round games, ninth-ranked North Carolina defeated Waked Forest 83-62; 11th-ranked North Carolina State outlasted Clemson 79-72; and eighth-ranked Duke downed Virginia 60-48.

The Tar Heels will meet Maryland in today's opening semifinal game, with the Wolfpack and Blue Devils squaring off in the second at the Greensboro Coliseum. The winners will play Sunday for the ACC championship and an automatic NCAA berth.

Maryland has only lost once this season when they equaled or bettered their opponents in rebounds. When they are outrebounded, the Terps are 8-11.

Coach Bob Wade credited a triangle-and-one defense for helping the Terps "get better rebounding position" against Georgia Tech.

Georgia Tech had outrebounded Maryland in both of their regular-season meetings and beaten the Terps 96-84 and 104-82. It was a different story Friday.

"We just couldn't get on track, and Maryland really came to play," Cremins said. "I think Maryland wanted it more than we did."

Keith Gatlin was the key for the Terps, scoring 18 of his season-high 25 points as Maryland, 17-12, opened a 43-29 halftime advantage.

"I think this was the best 40 minutes of basketball that we played this year," Wade said. "We have had some good wins, but for the entire game this is the best we played."

Duane Ferrell scored 18 points to lead the Yellow Jackets, who fell to 21-9. He fouled out with more than six minutes remaining.

North Carolina, trying to win its first ACC tournament in six years, took control of the opening game with a 21-1 spurt that gave the Tar Heels a 32-19 lead with 4:55 to play in the half.

The Demon Deacons went 6:13 without a point and were held without a field goal for an 8:38 span.

"North Carolina did a good job of using its bench and wearing us down," said Wake Forest guard Cal Boyd. Ranzino Smith came off the bench to score 11 points in a 2:58 span at the beginning of the Tar Heels' decisive run.

"I didn't think we were out of reach at the half," said Wake Forest Coach Bob Staak, whose club trailed 39-28 at halftime. "But we hit a wall about five minutes in the second half. ... We didn't shoot well in the second half, but I think a lot of that was fatigue."

North Carolina State survived a second-half comeback that saw Clemson rally from a 55-42 deficit with 13:40 to play. The Tigers ran off a 9-0 spurt and then outscored the Wolfpack 10-2, pulling even at 63 on a short jumper by Elden Campbell with 4:30 left.

Vinny Del Negro then sank a baseline jumper, stole a pass from Tim Kincaid, and fed Charles Shackleford for a breakaway dunk. Clemson never got closer than four points the rest of the way.

"Basically, we had to come from too far behind, but we tied the game, and I thought we had them this time," Clemson Coach Cliff Ellis said. "We made some silly turnovers, and missed some opportunities."

Shackleford finished with 26 points as the Wolfpack improved its record to 24-6.

North Carolina State jumped to a 44-30 halftime lead by making 20 of 28 shots, 71.4 percent, but led the advantage slip away.

"We've been fortunate that we've been playing a good half — whether it be the first half or the second half," Wolfpack Coach Jim Valvano said. "We played an outstanding 20 minutes of basketball, and then we just don't play quite as well in which ever half happens to be the not-so-well half,"

Campbell and Grayson Marshall each scored 19 points to lead Clemson, which fell to 14-14. Dale Davis added 18 points for the Tigers.

In the nightcap, Duke overcame a sloppy, cold-shooting first half to defeat the Cavaliers for the 12th straight time since the 1983 ACC tournament.

Danny Ferry led the Blue Devils with 20 points.

"We threw the ball into the post six times in the first half," said Blue Devils Coach Mike Krzyzewski. "We threw the ball into the stands more than that. It was tough. The last four minutes (of the half), we were absolutely horrible."

Duke made only nine of 23 shots, 39.1 percent, in the first half and committed 11 turnovers in the opening 20 minutes.

Mel Kennedy scored 16 points to lead Virginia, which fell to 13-18 on the season.

Defense Again Keys Devils

AP Sports Writer

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — With 10 minutes left to play and Duke holding a 45-35 lead over Virginia, the eighth-ranked Blue Devils went to their familiar defensive signal — the floor slap.

Although Duke didn't gain any significant ground after that signal, the Blue Devils didn't yield any. And that was the key in their 60-48 victory over the Cavaliers in the final opening round game of the 35th Atlantic Coast Conference tournament.

Virginia didn't get any points for three minutes after the Blue Devil defense slapped the wood, and managed two free throws by John Crotty at the 7:47 mark. A field goal by Mel Kennedy at the five-minute mark was Virginia's first basket in five minutes and it brought them within 47-39.

Still, the Duke defense held its ground and didn't let the Cavaliers get any closer.

"It's kind of hard when the ball's in the corner and they're trying to throw it out and it's getting stolen," said Kennedy, whose 16 points represented the only Virginia player in double figures.

"We kept going to the corners and getting caught, either getting it ripped or they flicked it out for an easy bucket," Kennedy said.

Danny Ferry, who got his 20 points despite a six-for-15 field goal performance, said there was no need to talk strategy at halftime after the Cavaliers took a 26-24 lead.

"We didn't talk X's and O's. It was all mental," Ferry said. "I think the biggest thing that we did in the second half was we got in the passing lanes much harder and created some turnovers."

At the half, Virginia had hit 11 of 23 field goals, and dropped to eight of 27 in the second half. The Cavaliers missed from the perimeter and from in close. Perhaps the most frustrated of all the Virginia players was John Crotty.

Brought in to replace the suspended John Johnson, Crotty was thought to be the catalyst who could lead the Cavaliers to an upset. With Billy King guarding him, Crotty scored eight points, handed out five assists, and committed seven turnovers.

"It was so tough coming in trying to fill John Johnson's shoes. I just did what I could. It's tough to end like this. I just don't think I played as well as I could have," Crotty said.

Duke was bothered by Virginia's offense as well, shooting 40 percent on 18 of 45 field goals and committing 17 turnovers. Still, the Blue Devils have a chance to avenge two regular-season losses to North Carolina State in the semifinals on Saturday.

"We missed some easy shots, especially in the second half, and I think we'll be able to turn that around," Ferry said. "The fact that we still have to work on our offense ... is what's of concern right now."

Keith Gatlin has been looking for redemption for a long time, and the Maryland senior got his in an 84-67 victory over No. 18 Georgia Tech in the opening round of the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament Friday.

Gatlin hit all six 3-point shots he took, scoring 25 points to boost the Terrapins into the semifinals of the tournament, where they will face North Carolina.

"We knew we had to come in and play well because Tech had really embarrassed us down there," said Gatlin in reference to a 104-82 loss in the regular season in Atlanta. "We let ourselves down and the coaching staff down. We did a little soul searching."

Whatever the scouting report was regarding Gatlin, it apparently gave little attention to his perimeter game. But he made Georgia Tech pay for its misinformation.

Brewers' Kiefer Is Assaulted

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — Milwaukee Brewers infielder Steve Kiefer suffered cuts that required nearly 200 stitches to close when hit in the neck by a beer bottle at a Mesa nightspot, Brewer general manager Harry Dalton said Friday.

Dalton said Kiefer, 27, was treated at a local hospital and released after Thursday night's incident at Bobby McGee's. He suffered cuts to the left side of his neck.

"The doctor told me it was one-sixteenth of an inch from the carotid artery," Kiefer said. "If it would have cut that it would have killed me. I feel lucky to be alive."

Police said there was an argument over a woman's belt before Neira left the bar, and he returned later and hit Kiefer with the bottle.

Kiefer said he was not aware that Neira had returned to the bar.

"When I walked in, I saw a belt on the ground," he said. "I was going to turn it in at the front desk."

Then he said he gave the belt to a woman who said it was hers.

Shortly after that, Kiefer said, Neira "came by and nudged me. I didn't accost him. I just said 'Excuse me.'"

Marshall To Redskins?

CHICAGO (AP) — The Washington Redskins have offered Chicago Bears' linebacker Wilber Marshall $6 million over five years, the Bears announced Friday.

Under NFL rules, Chicago has one week to match the offer of $1.2 million for each of five years, said Bears' spokesman Ken Valdiserri.

If the Bears fail to match the offer, Marshall, a free agent because his contract expired on Feb. 1, can go to Washington.

Should that happen, the Bears would acquire the Redskins' No. 1 draft choice rights for 1988 and 1989.

"This is something we have to put a lot of careful thought to," said Bears' President Michael B. McCaskey.

"We feel Wilber is one of the best linebackers in the league and we'd really regret losing him," he said.

McCaskey said part of the consideration is that the contract is guaranteed — that the Redskins pay Marshall even if injuries force him to quit.

"We have yet to discuss it internally," said McCaskey, "and it would be foolish of us to make any hasty decision at this point."

YOUR APTITUDE FOR LANGUAGE CAN GET YOU $25,200 FOR COLLEGE.

If you have just graduated or are about to graduate from high school, and have a desire to learn a foreign language, this could be the opportunity you're looking for.

The Army is seeking young men and women with an aptitude for languages. If you successfully complete basic training, you could have the opportunity to attend Army language school. In addition to a good salary to start, you'll receive food, lodging and medical benefits. Plus the opportunity to earn up to $25

NCAA Won't Tolerate Tourney Fighting

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The NCAA men's basketball committee said Friday that fighting during the NCAA Tournament "will not be tolerated."

NCAA Executive Director Dick Schultz told the Associated Press in an interview Thursday that any player who throws a punch would be subject to immediate suspension from the tournament. Fighting has erupted during several games this season, most notably Pittsburgh-Georgetown and South Carolina-Louisville games.

The statement from the committee Friday said the nine-man panel has "reviewed misconduct that has occurred in college basketball this season, especially in recent weeks. It agreed to instruct game officials and the Games Committee that is appointed at each championship site to deal firmly with any misconduct that may arise during the tournament.

Arnie Ferrin, committee chairman, will announce the 64-team bracket Sunday afternoon.

"The procedures to deal with misconduct have been in place for NCAA championships for some time," Ferrin was quoted as saying. "The committee has in the past disciplined players and coaches for misconduct that has been detrimental to the tournament. But we are placing special emphasis on fighting and the adverse effect it can have not only on the tournament, but on intercollegiate basketball. Our committee was unanimous in its feelings on this issue."

The statement listed NCAA Executive Regulation 1-2-(o) as the rule that permits the committee to "reprimand, disqualify andor ban from participation in subsequent championship competition a student-athlete or coach who is guilty of misconduct."

Speed Records 2nd Best Lap With New Tires

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Lake Speed recorded the second fastest lap ever at Darlington Raceway on Friday during tire tests for the Hoosier Tire Co., track officials say.

Speed ran consistent laps at 31 seconds, or 158.632 mph, and had a fast lap of 159.050 mph, which was just off Geoff Bodine's record of 159.197 mph set during qualifying April 10, 1986, for the TranSouth 500.

"We were very quick and smooth. And that combination is a sure winner at Darlington," Speed said.

Speed said he was looking forward to this year's TranSouth, which will be run March 27 at the 1.366-mile track. Speed was in the running for the TranSouth last year but an accident near the end ended any shot he had of winning the race.

"We've been just that close," Speed said. "I feel like we're right where we want to be and now, after this test, man I'm really pumped up.

"When the word gets out about my run here, I'll have all the guys in the racing business calling me."

Vols' DeVoe Given Contract Extension

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Tennessee Athletic Director Doug Dickey announced Friday night that the university has extended the contract of basketball Coach Don DeVoe for two years.

DeVoe's contract, which was to have expired at the end of the 1988-89 season, now extends through the 1990-91 season.

The announcement came shortly after Tennessee bowed out of the Southeasterrn Conference basketball tournament in a 67-60 loss to Florida, closing out a 16-12 season.

There had been speculation earlier this season that DeVoe was about to be fired.

"This is obviously a controversial matter," Dickey said. "I am aware that many people have orally commented or written to us expressing their feelings about the coaching situation."

DeVoe said he was told after he got back to his hotel after the game that his contract had been extended.

"I have confidence that there is a renewed strength in our program that will carry over into the 1988-89 season. Coach DeVoe's personal commitment to our recruiting, the work of his staff and the great basketball facility on our campus can give us a promising new future.

"I think that next season Tennessee can be a contender for the Southeastern Conference championship baed on the return of a predominantly senior squad."

NCAA Selection A Tough Process

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — If Arnie Ferrin is right that "20 or 30" teams see themselves winning this year's NCAA Tournament, Jim Delaney shudders to think how many see themselves getting in.

"Let's face it — some hopes are going to be shattered and some hearts are going to be broken," said the Ohio Valley Commissioner and member of the nine-man selection committee. "If you don't think so, you're living in dreamland."

Around 5:30 p.m. EST Sunday, committee chairman Ferrin will unveil on national television the 64-team bracket, in this year of rampant parity, for the richest-ever NCAA Tourney.

Fans and officials of 64 schools will instantly begin checking flight schedules, figuring ways to get to the first-round site, among eight scattered around the country, their team is assigned to.

Sixty-four coaches will scramble for information and game films on their first-round foe. Some will be wearing big smiles and accepting congratulations. Others will complain — some mildly, some angrily — about where the committee has seeded and sent them.

Less visible, but no less ecstatic, will be the budget-planners at many marginal programs. Just getting an invite to this 50th annual tournament will bring in an estimated $230,700, say NCAA officials, and a ticket to the Final Four in Kansas City will be worth more than $1,150,000.

On the flip side of this equation will be those who are left out. Or, as former committee member Dave Hart used to say, "Somebody will go win the NIT and come back and tell us that that proves we don't know what we're talking about."

Ferrin, Delaney and other tournament officials know there may be more of that than ever before. Twenty-seven spots go automatically to the winners of conference postseason tournaments. Three go to the regular season champions of the Ivy League, Big Ten and Mid-Continent Conference.

That leaves 34 at-large bids for the committee to distribute as it sees fit. For all practical purposes, this number is reduced by one every time a team that would not otherwise be considered gets hot and captures its league's postseason tournament. And many observers figured heading into this weekend that the possibilities for postseason upsets were ripe.

"You'd have to say there is a much better chance for upsets, a much better chance that some at-large spots might be swallowed up by people who would not have gotten in otherwise," said Tom Jernstedt, NCAA assistant executive director. "We usually have a few, but we've never been flooded with them."

Ferrin, the University of Utah official who succeeded Dick Schultz this year as committee chairman, believes there are more teams with a legitimate shot at the the national championship than there ever were. He gets no argument from Jernstedt, the tournament director the past 16 years.

"Potentially, this could be the most difficult and challenging bracket we've ever put together," Jernstedt said. "I can't recall a year when it looked like the committee's work in seeding the bracket and putting it together would be so difficult. It's going to make the committee's assignment tougher than ever. But on the other hand, it's great. It's another indication of the growth in the popularity of the game itself. There are more good players out there and more good teams than there ever have been."

There's also more money at stake.

Getting to the second round will net a team, in addition to travel and per diem expenses which the NCAA picks up, $461,511. Teams that lose in the third round will get $692,200. Falling one victory short of the Final Four will bring in $922,900, or almost six times as much as the regional finalists received in 1976.

"And that wasn't that long ago," said Delaney, a reserve guard on one of North Carolina's Final Four teams in the early '70s. "It's amazing how the sport has grown right before our eyes. In 1975, Junior Bridgeman was an all-American at Louisville when it lost to UCLA in the finals. A great player at a great program. You know how many times in his college career he appeared on national television? Once. This year, Middle Tennessee, Eastern Kentucky and Austin Peay have all played in games that were nationally televised."

The committee, following a decades-old tradition, planned to begin meeting behind locked doors at a mid-town Kansas City hotel Friday evening. Surrounded by stacks of computer printouts and reports from regional advisory panels, the committee will emerge early Sunday evening with 64 teams divided into four 16-team regionals. Each regional is seeded 1 through 16, with the top seed meeting the 16th seed, No. 2 going against No. 15, etc. The committee can choose as many teams as it wishes from one conference and send a team to any regional it wishes.

In the recent past, this has meant an exodus of Eastern teams to the West in an effort to balance the bracket. But Ferrin has indicated that an upsurge in the number of quality teams among Western conferences may slow that trend this time.

Winners of the first and second-round games next weekend will flow into regional semifinals and finals March 25-27 at either Seattle, Birmingham, Pontiac, Mich., or East Rutherford, N.J. The championship game in Kansas City will be the night of April 4.

"We'll spend all weekend pairing, comparing, separating and differentiating," Delaney said. The committee pays little attention to total victories, concentrating instead on strength of schedule and a team's road wins against quality opponents.

"Sixteen wins under some circumstances might be enough to get you in the tournament," Delaney said. "Twenty-four wins under other circumstances might not be good enough. It's a big responsible the commmittee has. It's worrisome, it's exciting, and we all love it."

Ty Cobb, the major league career batting average champion at .367, frequently held his hands well apart on the bat so that he could place the ball where he wanted.

California-Irvine Gains Upset Of Nevada-Las Vegas, 74-70

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

As California-Irvine closed in on its upset of seventh-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas, Coach Bill Mulligan knew why some of the crowd was cheering on his Anteaters.

"Everybody was cheering for us on that side because they want to play us, not Las Vegas," Mulligan said of the fans from Utah State and California-Santa Barbara as Cal-Irvine eliminated Nevada-Las Vegas 74-70 Friday night.

Cal-Irvine will face Utah State in today's Pacific Coast Athletic Conference tournament title game with a spot in the NCAA playoffs on the line.

Two other ranked teams were upset in tournament play Friday. Texas-El Paso knocked off No. 17 Brigham Young University 66-63 and Maryland downed No. 18 Georgia Tech 84-67.

In another surprise, Detroit won only its seventh game of the season against 22 losses by edging Evansville 75-74 to advance to today's final in the Midwestern Collegiate Conference tournament. One more victory and Detroit will be in the 64-team NCAA postseason tournament field.

"We were kind of possessed," Mulligan said after Cal-Irvine's stunning victory over the Runnin' Rebels. "We jumped out to a good lead early, they made a run at us but we didn't fold.

California-Irvine, barely over .500 during the regular season, was led by Engelstad, who scored 18 of his 30 points in the second half.

"We got outplayed," UNLV Coach Jerry Tarkanian said. "We were not mentally or physically in the game at the start. I thought when we cut it to three at halftime that we were back in it. But Irvine played great. They deserve all the credit."

The Runnin' Rebels, 27-5, rallied from an early 15-point deficit, but the Anteaters, 16-13, led all the way. Gerald Paddio led Las Vegas with 21 points.

Besides the Midwestern Collegiate Conference and the PCAC, other conferences to decide tournament crowns and automatic NCAA spots today include the Big Sky, ECAC North, Mid-American, Ohio Valley, Trans America and Western Athletic.

Seven other conferences — the ACC, Big East, Big Eight, Metro Atlantic, Pacific-10, Southeastern and Southwest — will play semifinals today and finals on Sunday.

Western Athletic

Texas-El Paso 66, No. 17 Brigham Young 63

Chris Sandle scored 18 points and Tim Hardaway 14 as Texas-El Paso played with just three reserves on the bench.

"We've dealt with adversity all year," Sandle said. "With the loss of the two players, we have taken it upon ourselves to play hard. That's what our team is about."

UTEP lost guard Chris Blocker to academic ineligiblity two weeks ago. On Thursday night, forward Antonio Davis broke his ankle.

Hardaway's 18-foot jumper with 1:04 remaining gave UTEP a 64-61 lead. After BYU's Andy Toolson sank two free throws, the Miners' Eddie Williams made two foul shots with eight seconds left to preserve the victory.

The 25-5 Cougars were led by Michael Smith's 20 points and Jeff Chatman's 17.

It was the first Big East tournament loss to any team but Syracuse for Georgetown, 19-9, which got 24 points from Charles Smith.

Villanova 71, St. John's 68

Mark Plansky's 3-point basket from the corner with 49 seconds left climaxed Villanova's comeback from an eight-point deficit in the last two minutes. Plansky led the Wildcats, 20-11, with 19 points and Gary Massey added 17. Shelton Jones scored 23 points and junior Matt Brust a career-high 18 for St. John's, 17-11.

Angela Bland

Most Fish Records Eaten

Attention spring fishermen: Imagine for a moment that you are fishing in the Tar River when you hook the biggest crappie you have ever seen, in person or in pictures. You are broke and cannot afford to mount it, so you take it home for the frying pan.

After the dishes are cleared and your stomach satisfied, you call a buddy to brag about the catch and learn from him that the crappie was indeed big — so large, in fact, that it was a potential line class record.

This may sound unbelievable, but it's a common story for the National Freshwater Fishing Hall of Fame, a non-profit organization in Wisconsin that recognizes record fish. Hardly a week passes that the Hall of Fame doesn't get a frantic phone call from an angler revealing that he just ate a record fish.

"It's usually well along after the fact that a fisherman will learn from his buddies that his fish was a potential line class record or even an all-tackle (heaviest), but then it's too late to document proof of the catch for record purposes," said a Hall of Fame spokesman.

Anglers, he said, are usually a private lot who will brag about a super catch only after it has been eaten or mounted, for fear someone will learn about their secret fishing spots.

"Few of our continent's millions of anglers pursue a specific record," the spokesman said. "Many fishermen don't realize record possibilities exist until it's too late to authenticate the catch by the process of certified weighing and witnesses — the most important part of establishing a record."

As a public service, the Fishing Hall of Fame distributes free rules, guidelines and application forms used to establish a world-record catch. Records are kept by all-tackle (heaviest) and all-line classes (strength of line used) for more than 100 species of freshwater fish.

Certificates, garment patches and pins are awarded to anglers, as well as a listing in the world book of records, a 60-page publication that documents official catches.

"The smaller fish varieties and less popular species are the easiest in which to beat current records in rod/reel, fly fishing, pole/line/no reel or ice fishing divisions," he said. "Anglers of larger game fish are more aware of the records program."

For free brochures, forms and tips on establishing a record, write the National Freshwater Fishing Hall of Fame, Box 33, Hayward, Wisconsin 54843, or call (715) 634-4440.

Forests are Theme of Wildlife Week

The National Wildlife Federation encourages people to help conserve forests during National Wildlife Week, March 20-26, and throughout the year. The theme of this year's celebration is "Forests Are More Than Trees."

Kermit the Frog, the renowned Muppet, is the honorary chairman of the 1988 National Wildlife Week. He will appear on televised public service announcements during the week, courtesy of his creator, Jim Henson.

The Federation will also distribute more than 500,000 National Wildlife Week kits to educators across the country for use in classrooms, nature centers, libraries and museums.

National Wildlife Week began in 1938 as National Wildlife Restoration Week. Among the people who have served as honorary chairmen are Walter Cronkite, Shirley Temple, Walt Disney and Robert Redford. This year's week will mark Kermit the Frog's third appearance as chairman.

Goodbye Red Tide

"Goodbye Red Tide," can evening of food, drink and entertainment to raise donations for the red tide relief fund, will be hosted March 24 by civic and state government organizations in Carteret County.

Fishermen and their families who were hit hard by the red tide still need financial assistance, according to William Hogarth, director of the N.C. Division of Marine Fisheries.

The evening will begin at 4:30 p.m. at the Crystal Coast Civic Center in Morehead City. A fish fry will start at 6 p.m. and last until 8 p.m. A dance band will play at 9 p.m. Snacks, drinks, entertainment and door prizes will be available throughout the evening, and many of these are being provided by local merchants.

A $10 donation per person is requested. Tickets are on sale now from these sponsors: Carteret County Chamber of Commerce, Morehead City Noon Rotary Club, Carteret County Sport Fishing Association, Carteret Community College and the N.C. Division of Marine Fisheries.

Organizers of the event hope people throughout North Carolina will attend, and Gov. Jim Martin has been invited. For more information, contact the N.C. Division of Marine Fisheries by calling toll free 1-800-682-2632.

Bats Help Keep Insects Away

By BILL SCHULZ
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Whether they're in the belfry or the backyard, bats are good to have around because they eat the insects that torment people on a warm summer night.

"Bats are the only predator of night-flying insects (such as moths). Nothing else eats insects at night," said Allen Padgett, a bat expert with the Georgia Department of Natural Resources, who's been studying the little flying mammals since he began caving 25 years ago.

He has designed a "house" to attract bats to help keep insects out of your hair on your deck at night.

There are 39 species of bats in the United States. "They're all insect or fruit eaters," he said, laughing off the tale of bats tangling in people's hair.

Bats possess a sonar system that will allow them to find and home in on a mosquito at night.

"Bats have no interest in getting into human hair," Padgett said in an interview. "If a bat can detect a tiny mosquito on a dark night, it surely isn't going to blunder into someone's head."

He said recent research has shown bats don't carry rabies or other diseases credited to them for generations.

Bats don't like to be bothered by people any more than people like to be bothered by bats, he said.

"Simply leave bats alone and they will happily return the favor and leave you alone. Bats do not pose a health hazard. They are exceptionally clean and having them in one's backyard should be a cause for rejoicing," he said. A single bat may eat 3,000 insects a night.

The bats send out a sound and listen for the returning signal bouncing off insects, "something more precise, more sophisticated than anything we've been able to build," Padgett said. Some insects have developed defenses.

"When they're flying along, and the bat puts that radar on them, it's like a Fuzzbuster, the insect goes into gyrations to escape. Bats like to hunt above a swimming pool because there's no place for an insect to go to get away, no background clutter of the forest.

"So sit around the swimming pool at night, turn the lights on to attract the insects, and watch the bats play. It's happy hunting time for them."

To attract bats, Padget has designed a bat "house." It looks like a bluebird house, 8-inches square and 16-inches high with a sloping roof, but no bottom and no hole in the front.

Use old, rough wood. Barnwood is best. Hang two vertical boards of rough wood down inside the structure. Bats fly up to the house and land on the edge of the board, "then use their fingers and toes and crawl up inside," Padgett said.

He said bats don't like the smell of new wood or treated wood and can't grab new, milled lumber. "If you don't want them to use it, paint it," he said.

Build two or three and put them in different places, in shade, or in sunlight, out in the open on a tree trunk or the side of the house, or amid branches on a tree trunk. If bats move in to one house, move the others into similar locations.

Now is the time to think about attracting the creatures. They hibernate through the winter until it is warm enough for insects to be flying at night. With the first insect-killing frost, they find caves or other places to spend the winter.

Winter-Weather Fly Fishing Can Be A Lonely Experience

By ERIC WILTSE
Bozeman Daily Chronicle

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) — Winter-weather flyfishing can be the best of times to catch trout and the worst of times to be outdoors.

There have been bitter cold days wading in northern Montana reservoirs at ice-out while hungry rainbows wolved down Wooly Worms.

Late-winter afternoons punching tiny No. 20 dry flies into the wind to rising spring creek trout.

And October days when the gray sky and snow kept other fishermen away, leaving me to share the water only with hook-jawed browns in Yellowstone National Park.

Those kinds of days stand out in my memory more than kinder summer excursions that also produced fish. And over the years, my winter fishing wardrobe has evolved from wool and down to more high-tech clothing that can better meet the common off-season conditions of wind, cold and wet.

Polypropylene booties, neoprene gloves, a wool hat, pile pants and jacket worn beneath waders and a wind-breaking shell have let me stay on the water long after other fishermen have given up to the elements.

It works for me, but two local experts hold other opinions on cold-weather fishing apparel, particularly on waders and undergarments.

"That gives us all the warmth we need for winter," Lilly says. "Neoprene waders really extended my fishing season."

Under the waders, he likes to wear two pairs of socks — a lightweight sock that wicks away moisture and a medium-weight wool sock, "not heavy ragg wool," he adds.

On his hands, Lilly wears fingerless wool gloves that keep hands warm when they get wet. But he says he'd like a pair of neoprene gloves.

Noting that there are many good brands of neoprene gloves on the market, both Lilly and Dave Kumlien, owner of the Montana Troutfitters Orvis Shop in Bozeman, singled out Glacier Gloves, made in Reno, Nev.

"The Glacier Glove is like a wet suit," says Kumlien. "You can stick your hand in the water and grab a fish and there's no loss of insulation at all."

U.S. Improving In River Rafting

BLOOMINGTON, Md. (AP) — More than any other river, the powerful Savage in western Maryland is the whitewater course most closely associated with America's rising distinction in international whitewater competition.

It was this increased recognition that helped America attract the 1989 world championships to the United States for the first time in two decades of world whitewater events.

"It was the training and trials at the Savage River that helped the young Americans snatch the gold from world competitors during the 1979 world competition in Jonquiere, Canada," said Bill Endicott of Bethesda, coach of the U.S. whitewater team.

"No other river has had as close an association with the rise of the U.S. team than the Savage especially because of its close proximity to Washington, D.C. where the top guys have come from for the last 10 years," he said.

Now the American team, which had the best overall finishes in 1979 and 1981 and has been undefeated in the single canoe slalom event since 1979, hopes its home-river advantage will help team members grab top honors in 1989.

Pre-world competition will be held June 23 to June 26 in western Maryland. It will be a dress rehearsal of sorts for the 1989 World Whitewater Championships June 11 through June 25, 1989.

An estimated 200 athletes from more than 20 countries are expected to travel to the United States in four months to challenge the turbulent Savage in Garrett County. More are expected for the world competition next year.

Planners have chosen a "frontier" theme to play off the pioneer aura of the remote, wooded site. The Savage River is a stark contrast to some European whitewater courses, such as one in Augsburg, West Germany.

"The Augsburg site is a totally artificial course — a concrete made river like a swimming pool with concrete obstacles," Endicott said. "It's quite an engineering feat and a really good course. It's a very excellent place to watch the race."

"The Savage is a natural river. Nobody's done anything to the river course itself," he said. "The drawback of the Savage is that it's not as accessible."

The remoteness of the U.S. site has posed the biggest logistical problem to Whitewater Championships Inc., a group in McHenry set up to plan last year's Savage River Invitational, this year's pre-world competition and next year's world championships.

Planners are wrestling with how to secure 30 to 40 buses to shuttle an estimated 5,000 athletes and spectators to the Savage River gorge from satellite parking lots 30 to 45 minutes away.

The 1988 and 1989 events are being organized on a $2 million budget. Half of the money is in the form of in-kind donations of time and equipment from business and corporations and about seven state agencies, said Don Storck, executive director of Whitewater Championships Inc. The bulk of the cash needed is coming from sponsors in the private sector and $105,000 in grant money from the state.

Volkswagen said the honor, which places Pecheles on the 1987 national "best-seller list" of VW/U.S., was based on his sales performance in 1987.

James R. Fuller, vice president in charge of VW/U.S., said the club represents the top 5 percent of the organization's sales body in terms of sales.

Bankruptcy Papers Filed By Contractor

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A construction company facing lawsuits and fines over a building collapse in Bridgeport, Conn., that killed 28 workmen has filed for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code.

Texstar Construction Corp. and its subsidiary Continental Lift Slab Corp. took the step so that any litigation can be heard in Texas rather than the unfriendly judicial environment of Bridgeport, said corporate counsel David T. Turlington.

It acted after a federal judge in Bridgeport approved a $187 million lien against company assets to cover any damages that might result from a suit filed over the April 1987 collapse of the L'Ambiance Plaza apartment complex by victims and families.

"You basically have convicted the guy and taken his assets, and he still hasn't had the right to a trial," Turlington said Friday. "We are concerned about the political and judicial atmosphere in Connecticut, which has been attempting to ban the lift-slab method."

San Antonio-based Texstar was the primary subcontractor on the L'Ambiance Plaza. It was constructed using the lift-slab method, in which concrete floors are poured on the ground, then lifted by jacks to their proper height along vertical steel columns.

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration fined Texstar $2.52 million for 238 instances of alleged willful violations. Texstar also has been referred to the Justice Department for possible prosecution.

On March 2, victims and families of victims filed suit in U.S. District Court in Bridgeport against Texstar. Judge Warren Eginton on March 2 gave the plaintiffs permission to attach $187 million of Texstar's assets.

Texstar listed unsecured debts of almost $190 million and assets of about $1.3 million. Continental Lift Slab listed unsecured debts of $150,449 and assets of $327,709.

Chapter 11 allows a company to hold off its creditors while it undergoes a financial reorganization.

In a statement, Texstar said Friday that it has not been given the opportunity "to a fair and impartial trial or hearing" and that bankruptcy court would provide a forum to answer the allegations.

"We are certainly not going to stop the presses just because Texstar has filed Chapter 11," said Bridgeport attorney Richard Beider, lead counsel for the victims' families.

Bieder called the action "unfortunate because it is another blow to the families of the victims that comes on the heels of the tragedy itself and on the heels of laws that are like hurdles that the families have to overcome to receive just compensation."

Legislation On Hold

ASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A House subcommittee has delayed action for the rest of the session on legislation that would allow Tennessee banks to expand into the insurance, securities and real estate industries.

Banking deregulation had been expected by some lawmakers to be a major issue this year, but now is virtually dead until the 96th General Assembly meets next year.

The banking subcommittee of the House Commerce Committee recommended a summer study of the legislation on a motion by House Majority Leader Jimmy Naifeh, D-Covington.

"I just feel that when the Legislature has before it such radical changes as we had before us today to any industry, especially one as sensitive as banking is, that it deserves and needs a thorough study before we embark on such a field as expanded services," Naifeh said.

The insurance industry has often been misunderstood by the majority of the population because of terminology used in policies. Furthermore, we have recently had to come to terms with some drastic changes in the insurance industry...changes which are a reflection of society today.

Come To Terms With Your Insurance.

During the past few years, the consumer has been subjected to reluctance and/or refusal by insurors to provide some forms of coverage. Nearly all insurance categories seem to have been designated as "high risk." Premiums have soared. These conditions describe what is called a "hard" marketplace.

Has your present agent informed you that the insurance environment is "softening" for certain classes of coverage? Or is he just beginning to understand and talk to you about increasing rates?

Product knowledge is an essential factor for the professional insurance representative. Armed with the most current information available, Fickling Insurance Associates is able to selectively place coverages in markets which are unfamiliar to others.

Growing Economy Makes It Hard For Candidates To Harp On Trade

By TOM RAUM
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the economy still growing and the trade deficit shrinking, presidential candidates who hoped to capitalize on economic pain are getting no mileage from pocketbook issues.

Recent upbeat economic statistics are making it hard for Democrats to use the economy to their advantage as a campaign issue.

And Super Tuesday voting appears to have eliminated from the race more than just a few candidates. It also may have buried trade, or at least protectionism, as a vote-getting theme.

The candidate who sought to capitalize on the issue the most, Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., was a big loser in Tuesday's contests. He captured only his home state of Missouri.

Gephardt didn't win a single state in the South, where his advocacy of a "get-tough" trade policy to protect import-battered U.S. industries had been expected to play well.

An amendment that bears his name, centerpiece of a House-passed trade bill, is expected to be stripped from compromise trade legislation now before a House-Senate conference committee.

The measure calls for mandatory reduction of trade surpluses maintained by countries who restrict their own markets to U.S. goods. The measure has been widely viewed as slap against Japan, Taiwan and other Asian allies.

Gephardt was not the only candidate who failed to get any political mileage from the trade issue. Sen. Bob Dole found his support for a textile-quota bill of little help in Republican caucuses in South Carolina, a key textile-producing state.

"When we have basic prosperity and basic optimism in the country, that 800-pound gorilla — the economic issue — doesn't sit down," said Norman Ornstein, an analyst at the American Enterprise Institute, a conservative research organization.

Rep. Jack Kemp's supply-side economic theories most closely matched President Reagan's, but the connection did not benefit him as he received only a fraction of the vote and was forced to withdraw.

Meanwhile, Vice President George Bush, who once derided supply-side policies as "voodoo economics," is now enjoying enormous GOP support, partly due to his identification with Reagan. "Bush is trying to surgically attach himself to Ronald Reagan," Ornstein suggested.

Lawrence Chimerine, chairman of the Wefa Group, a private economic forecasting service, said as long as the economy is fairly healthy, matters of personality and organization will have more impact on votes than economic philosophies.

"To the extent the economy stays where it is right now, obviously it will be difficult to use it as an issue," except in a positive sense, Chimerine said.

Gephardt has always disputed that his views are protectionist, even though critics suggest his amendment defines the term. In any event, support for the Gephardt measure has eroded since it was narrowly approved a year ago on a 218-214 House vote.

Congressional leaders kept the legislation alive this long, both as a courtesy to Gephardt and out of curiosity over how it and he would fare at the polls.

Much has happened on the trade and economic fronts in the past few months, changing the political landscape.

Just last fall, the trade deficit hit a one-month record of $17.6 billion in October, the stock market collapse sent tremors through the economy, the dollar plunged in foreign-exchange markets and a recession seemed imminent.

Since then, the trade shortfall has shown two dramatic months of export-led improvement, manufaucturing industries are enjoying a resurgence and the dollar has stabilized.

Interest rates and inflation remain restrained and the civilian unemployment rate fell in Feburary to 5.7 percent, its lowest rate since May 1979.

"On the political side, everything is coming up roses. This is another lucky Reagan year," said Allen Sinai, chief economist for the Boston Company Economic Advisors Inc. "Who could ask for anything more than continuing growth, reasonably low inflation and a reviving manufacturing sector?"

Exit polls taken by ABC-TV on Super Tuesday showed 18 percent of those surveyed considered a candidate's stand on trade as "very important" in making up their minds — but only 14 percent of them said they voted for Gephardt.

"The primaries have brought trade to the forefront of public discussion. But the trade issue is not the exclusive domain of any one candidate, nor was Super Tuesday a referendum on the issue," said Rex Hardesty, a spokesman for the AFL-CIO. The labor federation has been one of the most outspoken backers of the Gephardt amendment.

Gephardt himself said afterward that he still believed "a huge majority of people agree with my trade position."

"But they didn't know it was my policy. It was just our inability to be able to get that message out there," he said.

Showdown Looms On Wall Street

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A clash of titans looms on Wall Street in the next few days when the Trade Deficit meets head-on with the Triple Witching Hour.

Though both of these ogres have been bedeviling Wall Street for some time, they have rarely put in simultaneous appearances.

But all that will change on Thursday, when the Commerce Department issues its report on the nation's trade balance for January just as the markets head into the final stages of trading in a group of stock-index futures and options that are approaching expiration.

The combination looks highly explosive. The effect, however, may be not to create a fireworks display, but rather a period of extreme caution and safety-consciousness.

"Whenever something like this causes expectations to get high and heartbeats to get rapid, it often turns out to be a non-event," said Hugh Johnson, an analyst at First Albany Corp. in Albany, N.Y.

The triple witching hour, which occurs on the third Friday of March, June, September and December, apparently was tamed to some extent last year when procedures were adopted to spread it out.

Some futures contracts on stock-market indexes, which are used by professional traders in computer strategies known as index arbitrage, are now settled as of the opening on Friday, while others are settled at the close that day.

This time around, program traders will be operating under a further restraint — the so-called "collar" adopted by the New York Stock Exchange on Feb. 4.

This procedure closes off the exchange's main computerized trading facilities to index arbitrage any time the Dow Jones industrial average rises or falls 50 points from the previous day's close.

That poses a threat of problems to any program trader who might need to close out a position just before expiration.

For all the controversy surrounding them, index-arbitrage transactions are designed as low-risk propositions. If one were to go awry, it could quite conceivably cause a brokerage firm to lose valued clients and traders themselves to lose their jobs.

So the people who play this game are presumed to be proceeding very carefully as this triple witching hour approaches.

Market participants of all persuasions seemed to be playing it cautious in the past week. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials hit a new early-1988 high on Tuesday but then backed off, closing Friday at 2,034.98, down 22.88 from the week before.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index fell .98 to 149.45, while the American Stock Exchange market value index rose 2.35 to 296.09 and the NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market gained 2.12 to 375.48.

Big Board volume averaged 199.77 million shares a day, against 208.08 million the week before.

Since the collar was set up, it has never gone into effect, although the Dow has risen or fallen about 48 points on three separate occasions.

Thus, it appears that it has become a de facto boundary, an informal equivalent to the limits on daily price swings used in the commodities markets.

Wall Street analysts say it would be going too far to assume that there can't be days in the future when the Dow goes past the 50-point limit. The collar's potential impact in such circumstances is the subject of much conjecture.

Whatever the collar's merits and potential perils, many observers say it would be helpful for the market if it serves to reduce the perceived volatility of stock prices in the investing public's minds.

As Johnson observed, "Retail (individual) investors have been deeply alienated by volatility in the market."

Cotton Prices Leap

By DAVID DISHNEAU
Associated Press Writer

Prices for May and July delivery of cotton surged Friday on a combination of technical factors, bargain hunting and concerns about a drop in supplies, analysts said.

On other markets, livestock and meat futures finished mostly higher in a volatile session; precious metals were mixed; grains and soybeans were mixed; energy futures advanced; and stock-index futures moved higher.

Strong technical buying boosted near-month cotton futures prices on the New York Cotton Exchange, but fundamental factors also played a role in the rally, said Ernest Simon, cotton specialist in New York for Prudential-Bache Securities Inc.

With futures priced three to five cents below cash, cotton users who do not need supplies immediately can buy cotton at a bargain on the futures market.

But the buying interest also tends to raise futures prices, effectively bringing the futures markets more in line with cash prices.

BALLOON LIFT — Several grades at South Greenville School concluded studies on drug and alcohol awareness. Activities included a balloon lift following Ben Cherry's presentation on "Say Yes to Success Program." Cherry is pictured in the foreground.

'Blackbeard' Delivers Drug Message

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Lifestyle Editor

Ben Cherry of Plymouth has created a new spirit in the pirate Blackbeard.

One of Cherry's purposes in using the Blackbeard theme is to reach school groups with a message about the harmful effects of drugs and alcohol.

"Blackbeard gets the attention of the young men and women. I talk for 20 minutes about Blackbeard before I talk about drugs. I slip that in at the end. I tell them that the reason Blackbeard got killed when he did was that he was simply stoned. No sane man with his experience and skill would have sailed into Ocracoke Inlet with 15 men to face a ship with 80 men on it," he said.

"Blackbeard's mind had been burned out by alcohol and drugs. He was an alcoholic and a drug addict. That, as much as Lt. Robert Maynard's pistol and sword, is what killed him. At just 38, he was no longer a capable seaman because of the alcohol and drugs," said Cherry.

"There is not an individual that I speak to that doesn't have the capability to become successful. I relate things, something, they can relate to — cars, boats, clothes and jewelry. I try to express the fact they cannot have the things and/or success when their brain and bodies are controlled by alcohol and drugs," he said.

"I also tell them the drugs are a lie — they cannot base their life on alcohol and drugs because these items make them incapable of making the right decisions that contribute success and happiness to their lives," Cherry said.

Cherry takes the definition of success from a Southern comedian, Brother Dave Gardner. "'Success is getting what you want; happiness is wanting what you get,'" he said.

Cherry gets his motivation for his school presentations after agreeing to chair Nancy Reagan's Chemical People II Project, sponsored nationally by Kiwanis International.

"After I agreed to chair the project, I was cast as Blackbeard in the outdoor drama in Bath. After the season closed, I decided to keep my beard, costume and character and implement it into an anti-drug program which I like to call 'My Yes to Success Program,'" he said.

"I think the time has come for young people to have the opportunity to say yes to something — say yes to success and happiness. This is a positive approach to a negative problem. I specifically tell the young men and women there are three basic rules to allow them to achieve their goals — hard study, work hard and be honest to themselves," said Cherry.

"If we learn how to be honest with ourselves, we have made the first step towards eliminating the world's problems including drug addiction. This is the No. 1 problem in the U.S. Our nation's greatest problem isn't the threat of nuclear attack from the Soviets or Red Chinese or terrorist attacks by Palestine. The worst bomb that could possibly be launched has already been dropped on this nation and its fall out is spreading everywhere. That bomb is alcohol and drugs," he said.

"My whole goal is to eliminate the demand, as in supply and demand, and then we won't have to worry about the supply. That can only be done through education and awareness," he said.

"My pep talk is a high-energy appeal to motivate youth to set goals and to achieve those goals. Sometimes, I relate the names of individuals that could have been successful but failed because of drugs — Janice Joplin, David Kenney, John Belushi and Len Bias. Young people seek specifics and honesty," he said.

"I also relate things — a cocaine user will use three to five grams of cocaine a week at a cost of $300 to $500 per week. For that amount of money, they could be making a monthly payment on almost any make of automobile they would ever want to drive. So I ask them would they rather have drugs and prison or a new Corvette. They relate immediately to things money can buy," Cherry said.

Cherry's Blackbeard costume is on loan from the outdoor drama which was performed in Bath, where it was used for 10 years. It was made by Doris Fay Moore of Bath. "I have travelled in costume through airports in Norfolk, Atlanta, Miami and Cayman Island and have received numerous comments on the authenticity of the costume," Cherry said.

The costume is made of black material trimmed in gold braid and is worn by Cherry with a red sash, knee booths, white long-sleeved shirt with ruffles and a detachable ruffled dickie. He also has matching miniature red bows in this beard.

"There is little factual knowledge of Blackbeard's life. The only actual fact that we know is an account of his death written by Lt. Maynard on Dec. 18 following his death on Nov. 22. There are a lot of stories told about Blackbeard that are simply not true and we based this statement on a conflict of various historical dates. Most people only think of Blackbeard as a vicious criminal, responsible for taking many lives. My research leads me to believe that even though he was an aggressive and ruthless individual, he was not nearly vicious as many of the other pirates. I like to refer to him as an early advertising agent. He preceded himself with a reputation that allowed him to capture ships without a physical battle," he said.

"Portraying Blackbeard is fun. I am trained as an actor and it gives me an opportunity to perform in eastern N.C. and at the same time, it gives me an opportunity to have a positive influence on the young men and women I speak to," he said.

"Relating that things are not always what they seem, several of my props includes a boarding cutlass which is made from the sole of a shoe." For effect, Cherry will fire one of his pistols while talking. The pistol is loaded with black powder and a wadding of paper towel. The pistols are never loaded with actual bullets, he said.

Cherry's future plans include going to various schools in the state as well as traveling to the Caymans again this summer to participate in the Pirates Week Festival and also Lake Charles, La., for Buccaneer Days. He will travel to Seattle, Wash., for the Seattle Seafair and do travel shows for the Caymans.

Cherry lives in Plymouth, where he is an appliance dealer.

Cherry was in Greenville Tuesday speaking at South Greenville School where students concluded their drug and alcohol awareness program. The assembly ended with awards to winners of the school's T-shirt slogan contest and a balloon lift.

Cooking Oil, Sugar Are Scarce In Egypt

By DALIA BALIGH
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — More than President Hosni Mubarak's efforts to bring peace to the Middle East, Egyptians are talking these days about shortages of cooking oil and sugar. It's angry talk.

Cooking oil and sugar are important items on the Egyptian menu, used extensively by peasants who make up half the nation's 51 million people.

Cooking oil is added to beans, which are eaten at breakfast and dinner, and used to fry vegetables, especially eggplant and potatoes, the usual peasant lunch.

As for sugar, Egyptians consume so much in tea, pastries and candy that the Health Ministry has begun a television campaign in an effort to persuade people that more than six lumps a day is harmful.

The shortages have been assailed in the news media and heatedly discussed in coffee shops.

The subject has come up in the Shura Council, a government body of experts in various fields who give advice to Mubarak and to the People's Assembly, the national legislature.

And in the People's Assembly itself, Prime Minister Atef Sedki was taken to task because of his Cabinet ministers had denied that the shortages exist. Sedki admitted they were not being entirely candid, but he assured the assembly that Egypt once again will get by.

Food shortages are nothing new to Egypt. The country must import 60 percent of what it eats and it doesn't have the money to pay for all it needs. In addition, it increasingly has more mouths than it can feed, as the population explodes at a rate of 1 million every nine months.

That coupled with stagnant food production has transformed the country from the food exporter it was three decades ago to the importer it is today. The nation, facing a foreign debt of $44 billion, doesn't have the money to pay for it all.

Nobody has a ready solution. Increasing food production isn't easy because only about 4 percent of the country's land area, the Nile River Valley, is fertile, and little money is available to reclaim and cultivate the desert.

Egypt is among the world's biggest producers of cotton, which is the source of most cooking oil used in the country, but it must import more than 80 percent of its needs — at a cost of $250 million a year.

"We import 500,000 tons of cooking oil, at the cost of $500 a ton," said Rifaat Saadawy, an official in charge of oil imports at the Industry Ministry.

"So the cooking oil crisis is connected with the foreign exchange crisis, and any shortage in foreign currency means a shortage of providing cooking oil for local consumption."

Similarily, despite expanses of sugar cane in central Egypt, the country's farmers produce only about half the nation's needs, forcing imports of 700,000 tons for almost $158 million last year.

A further complication is that many stable foods are distributed through expensive subsidy and ration systems. Under pressure from the International Monetary Fund and at the urging of the United States, the government has been trying to reduce the subsidy systems' burden on the national Treasury.

For the past two years, it has tapered off the number of subsidized items available at government stores or purchased with ration cards from private markets. But the items taken off the list cost much more.

Despite the cutbacks, the government spent $2.2 billion in the 1986-87 fiscal year on subsidies for food and other items. That's only $675 million less than the subsidy bill in 1983-84 and remains much higher than levels Washington and the IMF want.

The government does not want to eliminate or sharply reduce subsidies because it fears a recurrence of food riots in which more than 70 people were killed in 1977.

A WORD'S IN A NAME

NEW YORK (AP) — Many everyday words, such as diesel, ampere, mesmerize, fahrenheit, boycott and pasteurize, come from the names of real people.

Mechanical engineer Rudolf Diesel patented the diesel engine in 1894. Ampere, a unit of electrical current, came from French scientist Andre-Marie Ampere in 1881. Dr. Franz Mesmer, a German physician, developed the theory of mesmerism, a type of hypnotism, in 1784.

Physicist Gabriel Fahrenheit (1686-1736) invented the first scale for thermometers. In 1897, Capt. Charles Boycott, an English land agent in Ireland, was ostracized for refusing to lower his tenants' rents.

Elderly Are Fluent In 'Insurancese'

At Wits End

Erma Bombeck

Mother fell off a ladder a few weeks ago and as she was lying on the garage floor suffering from a compressed fracture, my father went for the phone to dial for an ambulance.

"Get my purse," yelled my mother, "and make sure you get the company where we have full coverage."

This is the elderly couple of the '80s. They speak fluent insurancese. Their billfolds hold more phone numbers than the Yellow Pages. They use a copier more than the microwave. They have their own filing cabinet bulging with forms of illnesses past.

They didn't used to be so together. There was a time when they went to the doctor's office or hospital, received treatment, signed a few papers and were free to go. Today, it's a ticker-tape parade of forms to even get in. Getting out is another story. It's a lot like resigning from a book club. You're not out of it until the computer SAYS you're out of it. My brother-in-law was threatened with legal action if he did not fill out and return a stack of claim forms or remit payment in five days. The postman would had to have been Shirley MacLaine. He had been deceased for three months.

The only real thing that people know about insurance forms is that they outlast the illness and oftentimes the patient. When my father became ill last May, he went to the hospital and Mother went "corporate." Every day she dressed for success and opened up her kitchen office for business. There were forms for the prescription services for his medication ... forms for doctors and labs. Forms for the hospital, the ambulance, the emergency services, and forms for consultants ... some of whom they actually knew by name or face.

Death by intimidation became a possibility when checks and forms passed one another in the mails. She picked up an entirely new vocabulary of "benefits denied," "additional forms for your personal files at extra charge" and "direct billing preferred."

Everyone tries ... the bookkeepers in doctors' offices ... the claims experts ... the patient. But somehow the system has become a monster unleashed by computers.

The system has produced a new disease on our horizon: Insurance Dermatitis. It's an allergy of sorts resulting from direct contact with forms (usually in triplicate) that causes people to break out in a rash, put off surgery, walk around with broken legs, and consult Reader's Digest instead of a doctor.

All I know is there was a smile on Mother's face as she lay on a hard board, flat on her back, fighting muscle spasms.

"What's so funny?" I asked.

"It's your father's turn to fill out all those forms."

Silver Screen Is Tarnished, Former Movie Fan Asserts

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the lady who dislikes dirty jokes reminded me of something that has been bothering me for quite a while. Writing to you about it may not accomplish anything, but at least I'll get it off my chest.

I have been an avid movie fan for almost 50 years. For many years, my husband and I went to a movie once a week. During World War II, we went to two movies a week.

In recent years, we go to two -- maybe three -- movies a year. Why don't we go more often? Because the language in most movies today is just plain vulgar! Abby, nudity I can take -- but the foul language is disgusting.

I'm no prude. I sometimes resort to swearing myself, but to sit for two hours and listen to nothing but "s---" and "f---" in every other sentence is not my idea of entertainment.

I suppose because the young moviemakers use that kind of language in their everyday conversation, they think everybody else does. Well, everybody else doesn't!

This is especially frustrating for us because we live within walking distance of a theater with 10 screens -- and we can't find a clean one to go to. --- FORMER MOVIE FAN, ARROYO GRANDE, CALIF.

DEAR FORMER FAN: Amen, sister!

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating a 67-year-old widower for more than five years. I am 65. He says he loves me and will marry me under his conditions -- his conditions meaning that he is free to continue to date other ladies. (His term is to "service" them!)

What do you think of this? I don't care for those conditions at all. On the plus side, he is very good to me financially and otherwise.

He says he loves me and that I am No. 1. His theory is that when one is old, exclusivity isn't important. Help me decide, please. -- B.J. IN TEXAS

DEAR B.J.: Marry him? I wouldn't even date him. A woman, regardless of her age, who sleeps with a man who knowingly "services" other women should be examined after every contact with the "servicer" -- and the examination should include her head.

He may be clean as a whistle, but how about some of his lady friends who may have slept with a man who slept with Lord knows who!

DEAR ABBY: I am a 63-year-old woman who hasn't had sex in 15 years. My husband was in the garage today, and I asked him how he would like to go to bed, but he decided that it was time to smash the beer cans.

What can I do at this age? Any suggestions? -- NEGLECTED IN SANTA ANA

DEAR NEGLECTED: Help him smash the beer cans, then tell him what "ales" you. If that doesn't work, take your problem out of the garage to a family counselor. You may be sadder -- bud-weiser.

DEAR ABBY: What is wrong with a family where a mother decides she hates somebody, then the entire family has to hate that person -- or else?

When my mother gets a hate on for certain relatives, nobody in our family can have anything to do with them. If we do, we are considered "disloyal" to Mother. How do I handle this? I'm 33, married and tired of ... BEING MANIPULATED

DEAR TIRED: You can't be manipulated without your full cooperation. If you're really tired of that game, refuse to play, and take the consequences.

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054 (postage and handling included).

Denizens Of The Amazon

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

BELEM, Brazil — Within the vast Amazon rain forest, there is a tremendous variety of wildlife forms living in the rivers, swamps, forests and hills of this teeming land.

Some of the species are droll, some delightful, others are deadly.

A random listing of these denizens of the Amazon rain forest give an idea of the complexity of life existing there.

Some examples are:

Anaconda — The world's super snake, a 38-foot constrictor that suffocates rather than crushes its prey, the distinction usually being lost on the victim.

Bushmaster — Twelve feet of vicious, venomous viper.

Electric eel — It's a carp, not an eel, delivering 640 volts, enough to power a commuter train. Indians believe its most jarring jolt is saved for fishermen who catch more than they need.

Fer-de-lance — Hissing cousin of the copperhead, but faster and fiercer with the fang.

Manatee — Harmless, hapless and hunted, a flippered, whale-tailed mammal that grazes on waterlilies; known locally as the sea cow.

Piranha — Only 4 to 15 inches, these ravenous, razor-toothed fish, with a school enrollment into the thousands, can skeletonize a cow or a cowhand in a matter of minutes.

Tapir — A lumbering, leathery mixture of hog and rhino that's got to be seen, but not up too closely, to be believed.

Three-toed sloth — Upside down tree-snoozing quadruped of legendary lethargy; may be self-endangered for preferring siesta to sex.

SOVIET STUDENTS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — While American teachers worry about whether their students can read, write and do arithmetic well enough to score high on achievement tests, Soviet teachers worry whether their students can think for themselves.

"In Soviet schools there is a much greater emphasis on rote learning," says Guilbert Hentschke of the University of Rochester. "Their students perform well on achievement tests that measure mastery of factual materials.

Small Mississippi Towns Grow Smaller

By JANE HILL
Delta Democrat Times

GREENVILLE, Miss. (AP) — Small towns in the Mississippi Delta are getting smaller, and they're starting to show some age as well.

Statistics show that one of the biggest dangers these towns face in the fight for survival is the loss of their young people.

"We're seeing a trend where the general populations of these small towns are becoming older. Their median age is increasing," said William Peacock, planning director of the South Delta Planning and Development District Inc. in Greenville.

Peacock said the main reason for the trend is the out-migration of young people, both from the small towns and from the state.

"Younger people are simply leaving for better job opportunities and they are leaving the older people behind," he said.

The people who are left behind have bigger problems to face. With the reduced number of residents, the tax base shrinks but the cost of providing city services stays the same or increases, he said.

Financial decline and the increase in mechanization of agriculture are partly responsible for young unskilled laborers leaving for more populous areas. An agricultural boom wouldn't necessarily solve the problem, Peacock said.

Merigold in Bolivar County suffered a drop in population from 772 people in 1970 to 574 people in 1980. Peacock attributed the drop to Merigold's heavy dependence on farming.

"Merigold used to have three to five grocery stores and it only has one or two now," he said. "You have to have a reason for people to stay, and good jobs seem to be the best reason for people to stay. But even if farming became very productive, there would be no great demand for unskilled labor."

One answer for small town labor woes is industry, preferably one in which the labor is easily taught and the number of workers needed is manageable.

Catfish processing plants are good industries for rural areas.

The plants not only are close to feeder farms, but they can use unskilled labor, officials said, while industries such as Boeing Mississippi Inc., for which the labor must be highly skilled, couldn't employ the local labor force.

A business that needs about 50 employees "would be ideal for these small towns," Peacock said.

Industry isn't the only answer to keeping small towns thriving, Peacock said.

Promoting the best features of small town life could make them into ideal bedroom communities for people who work in more industrialized cities, he said.

"There is an atmosphere in small towns that people would like to have their children grow up in. It's quiet, the crime rate is low and the preservation of tradition is very attractive to some people."

LOST, GONE FOREVER

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — To the sorrow of scholars, some priceless works of English literature have been lost forever.

Until about 200 years ago, most literary works existed only in manuscript. Copies were few and easily lost. Even the survival of the works of the greatest English dramatist of all was a near thing, according to Cyrus Hoy, a Shakespearean scholar at the University of Rochester.

Had it not been for the devotion of Shakespeare's fellow actors, who collected his plays and put them together in the "First Folio," we might never have known of such works as "The Tempest," "Macbeth," "Antony and Cleopatra" and "Coriolanus."

A Hero's Street

EDITOR'S NOTE — Early this century, railroads looking for cheap labor brought Mexicans to an Illinois town where they lived first in boxcars and later in cramped bungalows along a narrow street. But that winding lane has earned the name Hero Street for the patriotism of its residents, and some think it should be made a national monument.

By BILL VOGRIN
Associated Press Writer

SILVIS, Ill. (AP) — For more than 40 years, scores of Mexican-Americans have gone off to war from a winding drive of tiny wood-frame houses perched on a hillside rising from an old rail yard in this Illinois town.

Eight have returned in caskets.

And since 1968, the street has been named Hero Street U.S.A. in honor of the 110 young warriors who have left it for the armed forces since 1941. Now a move is under way to get Congress to name the former dirt path a national monument.

For Joe Munos and his family, life on Hero Street always meant serving their country. Not only did Munos and his three brothers all fight for the United States — his younger brother Johnny died in Korea — but his three sons and his daughter joined the armed forces, as well as his grandson.

"That's the tradition of Hero Street," Munos says. "It must be in our blood. It's an honor for me to be a veteran of foreign wars."

For Georgia Sandoval Herrera, growing up on Hero Street meant watching a half-dozen brothers leave during World War II and seeing two return in caskets. Brothers Joe and Frank died 10 months apart and portraits of them in uniform still hang on her living room wall.

"It seemed like a ghost town during the war because so many of our boys were gone," she recalls. "But we were one big family on Hero Street. The losses pulled us together. We're still a very close community.

"My son says, 'why don't we move?' And I say the only place I'd want to live is Hero Street. There's no place like Hero Street."

Another Sandoval family sent seven boys into World War II and suffered one death.

Those kinds of statistics are common on Hero Street.

No other single block in America has made so great a sacrifice, according to local officials. Although the Defense Department can't confirm the claim, it's never been disputed in 20 years.

A memorial park was built on the site in 1971 and now a city alderman is leading the drive to have Congress declare Hero Street a national monument as a tribute to all who died in service — especially immigrant soldiers.

"These men walked into this country and picked up arms without a complaint," says Alderman Joe Terronez, 58. "Some weren't even citizens when they joined the armed forces. This is a great story about great heroes and it should be a national monument."

Located between Billy Goat Bluff and Honey Creek, Hero Street is a small Mexican barrio that winds its way back up a dead-end hollow near the rail yard in this town of 7,200.

Some of its 36 tiny bungalows sit precariously on the steep terrace of the bluff while others are perched just above the creek and appear to be sinking into the gully.

Many of the wood-frame homes are long and narrow, like the railroad boxcars they replaced. Until a few years ago, the street was a dirt path that turned to mud and trapped hearses as they brought home dead soldiers.

When Terronez was growing up, Hero Street was simply 2nd Street and a "tough neighborhood." Living conditions were poor for the large Mexican families crowded into the cramped houses.

The Mexicans were brought to Silvis early this century by the railroads who were looking for cheap labor. Originally, they lived in boxcars in the nearby rail yard but were moved to 2nd Street when townspeople complained about the growing Mexican population in the yard.

"This is a story of our parents coming to the United States and adopting it," Terronez says. "Although we were all viewed as aliens, the boys of Hero Street proved this was their country."

The fight for national monument status is more than just a battle for recognition of the contribution made by eight dead soldiers or even 110 men and women who joined the armed forces.

For Terronez, it epitomizes the struggle of Hispanic Americans everywhere for appreciation and respect as first-class citizens. He's enlisted the help of U.S. Rep. Lane Evans, a Democrat from nearby Rock Island, in achieving national recognition in Congress.

Federal money would be available for maintaining the memorial, built on a bluff to resemble a Mayan temple. Residents also hope it would become a tourist attraction after placement on national parks system maps.

Steve Vetzner, an aide in Evans' Washington office, said the congressman plans to work with the Illinois delegation to get some sort of designation for Hero Street, such as a national monument, historic site or historic landmark.

"Let's be honest — naturally this would be a shot in the arm to Hispanics," Terronez says. "Sometimes, we feel we are second-class citizens. But when you look at the blood shed by Hispanics on that one street you know we are real Americans. It would be a source of great pride for all Mexican-Americans."

BETSY DRAKE LEWIS' DECORATING TIPS
YES, YOU CAN USE SLEEP SOFAS IN LIVING ROOM... AND OTHER ROOMS
Years ago, some people thought of using sleep sofas only in such places as a den or spare room — but today so many of these sleep sofas are made so beautifully, that you can certainly use them in your living room for all the advantages they give you.
In fact, there are now even combinations of matching sleep sofas and love seats that can be used beautifully in your living room.
The main point to remember is that sleep sofas are manufactured in all kinds of designs, styles and sizes and come in marvelous and pretty fabrics, so they can look good in your living room, family room, or any room.
Many people are surprised at how well sleep sofas score in decorating these days. They can enhance a decor — and of course they give you wonderful convenience. They also have many mechanical improvements to make them easier to work, and they are far more comfortable for both sleeping and sitting than they used to be.
Thus, you can turn any room — including a living room — into an extra bedroom instantly and you don't have to sacrifice beauty.
We think it will be worth your while to take a look at the new sleep sofas; and to shop for this or any furniture for your home you always have a cordial invitation to come in and browse.

Furniture Pieces See Growing Acceptance As An Art Medium

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Are you having any fun with your furniture?

The question might once have been absurd. But with a growing number of pieces being made by artists with a sense of humor, the conversation-stopping chair, cabinet or lamp may soon be as easy to find as a damask-covered wing chair reproduction.

Perhaps the most outrageous and amusing collection was on view at On the Wall, a small storefront gallery in New York City. James Bacchi, gallery director, said work relating to home furnishings was among the most interesting art today. Included were lighting, furniture, bars, cabinetry, window treatments, decorative screens, clocks and mirrors (with prices ranging from $350 to $6,000).

A great variety of approaches were revealed in the work on view. Industrial chic was evident in a brushed aluminum bar on wheels by Andrew Pawlan. By mixing unlikely materials such as translucent silk appliqued with silicone patterns in a window covering, another artist conveyed the otherwordly atmosphere of present and future that might be imagined on another planet.

Delight in intricacy was a theme of a 6-inch-high ceramic clock which lifts out of its base to reveal a secret compartment.

Parody may have been the goal in Adam Kurtzman's 10-foot tall papier mache male nude painted in gold. Suspended from the figure's hand is a table lamp with a fringed shade. Then there was "Mr. Neon," a bar with its own pink neon lighting, by Kajur Kulp. Word play was another theme: for example, a three-drawer chest that was totally askew was called simply "Slant-top Dresser."

With art furniture, sometimes the idea counts more than execution. For example, Richard Holloway concealed a working radio inside a fanciful globe of the world. The user changes stations by giving the globe a spin.

At the Gallery at Workbench in New York, an experimental furniture art gallery in a retail furniture store, work of three furniture makers that was a far cry from the rest of the stock was on view. Among the one-of-a-kind pieces were cabinets in unusual shapes, made of different kinds of salvaged wood, used in all their varied, original weathered colors.

The show was the last regularly scheduled event for the gallery, which is being discontinued. The reason, according to its director, is that the number of art galleries for furniture is now so large that an experimental space is no longer needed.

The 16 makers whose work was shown at the Workbench and On the Wall might aspire to the renown enjoyed by Richard Artschwager. His furniture-like sculptures and paintings of rooms in a home are being exhibited at the Whitney Museum of American Art through April 3. Then the exhibition will travel to San Francisco, Los Angeles and Europe.

Artschwager's preferred material for the sculptures is Formica, a plastic laminate. The "canvas" on which he paints is Celotex wallboard.

He said he had chosen to use furniture as a metaphor for his art because it was something everybody used all the time. Employing these materials is a way to make art accessible to all.

Since furniture has been available to artists as a subject for centuries, one might question why it is being accorded so much attention as an art medium now, rather than before.

According to Richard Armstrong, curator of the Artschwager exhibition at the Whitney Museum of American Art, one explanation for the current popularity of furniture and other familiar objects as art subjects is that "there is a move to integrate art into daily life."

A number of people, both as makers and viewers, are attracted to the idea of art that doesn't look like art. Nowadays, he said, "Everyone wants to turn his life into an art form."

The front door is the first impression people get of a family's home. It should look nice as well as serve as an entranceway and buffer against the outside world.

Until fairly recently, wood and metal front doors just about split the market. A newcomer into the field, a molded fiberglass door, is beginning to win wide acceptance. Oddly, whatever resistance some consumers have developed to it stems from its being plastic. Deke Welles, marketing chief of the Therma-True Corp. of Toledo, Ohio, admits this is because plastic is sometimes associated with "cheap." He explains:

'Most common building products are in the plastic family, including siding and flooring. But they are referred to as vinyl because plastic has traditionally been a dirty word. But 'Made in Japan' used to mean something cheap and shoddy. Now it is a distinctive mark of good quality. We're working toward the day when people who manufacture and use plastic products will also get respect."

To make consumers more comfortable with the idea of a fiberglass door, the company keeps track of products that have shifted from wood to metal to plastic. Among the most familiar are boats, tennis rackets, golf clubs, skis, fishing rods and even automobiles. Welles says new technology has overcome such obstacles as plastics being subject to ultra-violet light degradation and deterioration from contact with solvents. The fiberglass doors are molded so that they look like wood and take a stain like wood. The doors' molded sills accept nails and screws and come in a wide range of grains and styles.

When Therma-True first experimented with a fiberglass-reinforced composite resin material — plastic — it came a cropper. The test turned into a plastic dud. It took several years of work and further experiments to make a fiberglass door that turned around a conservative industry.

Welles likes to point out one indication of how successfully the fiberglass door imitates the appearance of wood. It came when a trade magazine mistakenly used a photo of a fiberglass door in an article on wood doors. Deke's father, David, is president of the company. He founded it 26 years ago, taking over a bankrupt lumber company that had "no business, no inventory and little money." Now it sells metal doors and its new fiberglass doors in every state and in Canada. It has manufacturing plants in three states, employs more than 500 people and soon may be licensing its molded fiberglass doors overseas.

The fiberglass door is said to resist warping, cracking or splitting and can't rust or dent. Inside its fiberglass exterior is a solid polyurethane insulating core with a thermal protection value of 11.5, higher than many steel doors and about four times the insulation of most wood doors.

What about painting? It can be painted with an exterior oil-based or latex house paint. No priming is necessary, but two coats are preferred. As for staining, a solid-color, linseed oil-based stain or artist oil should be used. To further protect the finish, an exterior urethane top coat is recommended.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much helpful data on a variety of subjects in Andy Lang's handbook. "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $2 to this paper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J., 07666.)

Antique Bargains

By COUNTRY LIVING
A Hearst Magazine

There are real bargains available in antiques and collectibles that will greatly increase in value in five to 15 years — if only you could identify them.

What can we buy in 1988 for less than $500 that is destined to increase in value? That was the question Country Living asked experts in its current issue and here is their advice.

— Folk art. "I think Shaker smalls are a very good buy right now — Shaker tins, brushes, milkpans, dustpans, oil lamps, that sort of thing," said William Ketchum, author of 27 books, including the revised "Potters & Potteries of New York State."

The larger items, he said, are terribly overpriced.

He also recommended undecorated stoneware — good signed pottery, such as inkwells, soap dishes and small bottles.

— Collectibles. "I think the barometer in this area is anniversaries," said Charles Jordan, author of "What To Save From the Eighties."

"Get out the world almanac and look for important anniversaries that are going to occur in the next five to 10 years, then start looking for items that were closely related to them: programs, souvenirs, books, photographs — the closer to the actual event, the better."

He said Brooklyn Bridge collectibles tripled in price at its 100th anniversary. The same thing happened with Statue of Liberty memorabilia. But Halley's Comet collectibles fizzled.

Here's The Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — Our house has a large, unfinished attic. I expect to finish the attic and make it into two rooms. I need a little advice on the ceiling. I assume I can use almost any material on the ceilings, but would like to try ceiling tiles. Are they difficult to install? Will I be able to get instructions on their installation at the place where the tiles are purchased?

A. — By all means. The tiles will come with detailed instructions. And no, it is not difficult. A little tedious, perhaps. Most ceiling tiles are porous and have sound-deadening qualities, but if this is extra important, get the acoustical type. Look into the use of insulation, which will help conserve energy both in the air conditioning and heating seasons.

Q. — I plan to use hardboard for the walls of an attic I will be finishing. I have never used it, but have worked with wood. Can I use ordinary tools with the hardboard?

A. — Yes, but it is a rugged material, especially the tempered kind, so you will have to remember that it resists tools more than ordinary softwoods. Exercise the same precautions as you do with hardwoods and you will get good results. You can nail or screw hardboard to another surface, but you should not nail or screw some other product into hardboard because it does not serve well as a fastening base. To put it another way — you can drive a nail or screw through hardboard, but it should end up in something else. In feeding hardboard into a saw, you must go more slowly than you would with white pine or some other softwood.

Q. — I would like to put up wallpaper in the attic of our house. The walls already are there, but I want to cover them with paper. I have a fairly good notion of how it should be done. If you had to pick out a single bit of advice to offer on this subject, what would it be?

A. — Be certain the first strip of paper that goes up is straight. If it isn't, everything eventually may be out of line. Use a plumb bob and put it up near a door frame. Pick the least conspicuous one, because this is the point where you will end, as well as begin, and in case the pattern does not match exactly, it won't be noticed. Papering is not difficult, but it does require care and patience.

(You can get a copy of Andy Lang's booklet, "Save Money by Insulating," which details the insulating of an attic, by sending 75 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y., 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Garden Clinic

Q. Do you have any information about the Honey 'N Pearl sweet corn?

A. Honey 'N Pearl, a 1988 All-American Selections winner, is a white and yellow bicolor corn that has genetically elevated sugar levels. Honey 'N Pearl is very sweet and tender. It maintains a superior eating quality in the refrigerator for several days. Honey 'N Pearl needs to be isolated from other corn pollen. This can be achieved by planting it away from other corn or by timing the pollination of other corn, so that cross-pollination does not occur. Harvest is 78 days after sowing seed.

Q. We are installing a garden pool. Besides water lillies, what are some plants to use in a pool?

A. Besides species of tropical and hardy water lillies, you may consider using these plants in and around your garden pool: oriental iris, forget-me-not, lotus, water lettluce, arrowhead, water hyacinth, cattail, water cress, cardinal flower, marsh marigold, papyrus, umbrella flatsedge (Cyperus alternifolius), a pickerel weed and water chestnut.

Q. Does "Prunus mume," the Japanese flowering apricot, come in a color besides white?

A. The Japanese have over 250 named cultivars of "Prunus mume" with flowers of white, pink, rose and red in single and double-flowered forms on plants up to 20 feet tall and having normal, fastigate, corkscrew, or pendulous habits. It is hard to understand why this magnificent ornamental flowering tree (The Japanese consider it their most beautiful tree, even above the flowering cherries.) is so little known and little produced in this country. The glory of "Prunus mume" is its beautiful, fragrant flowers that open from January to March. "Prunus Mume" is well adapted to the Southeast and the West Coast.

Q. The leaves of my clematis are turning yellow. The leaves turned yellow last year and I thought the plant would die. I mulch the plant with pine needles, and in the fall I put lime on the soil. The plant looks as if it is undernourished. What might the problem be?

A. Have the soil tested. A clematis grows best when the soil pH is about 6.0, and liming every year could have raised the pH considerably above this. Some nutrients are unavailable to plants when the pH is too high or too low.

AMERICAN RURAL LIFE — Art depicting an active slice of life in the rural scene of America is this John Stuart Curry dramatic black and white lithograph, "Stallion — Jack Fighting." Curry, (1897-1946), born in Kansas, is noted for art that primarily reflects the American society in the 1930s. The work was acquired by the acquisitions committee in 1986.

A Spirited Work Of American Art

GMA's Recent Acquisitions Are To Be Exhibited

When the exhibition of recent acquisitions opens Tuesday at the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 South Evans Street, it will mark another manifestation to the public of the diverse riches in the permanent collection of the museum.

The museum's interim director, Becky Young, has chosen about two dozen works of art, ranging from 1984 acquisitions to the just recently purchased oil painting by Robert W. Grafton to highlight choices from the collection.

These works, collectively titled "Recent Acquisitions," are to be shown in the museum's South Gallery beginning Tuesday and continuing through April 29.

"I feel it is so important for the public to have as many opportunties as possible to see these fine works, to be aware of the wide range of art, the choice of representative artists whose work we have in the permanent collection," Mrs. Young said. "There's something for everybody's taste in art, works that appeal to both young and older viewers.

"Naturally," she added, "it would be most helpful if we had more space to devote to keeping art from the permanent collection on view. However, we have commitments to including special shows, to showing changing exhibits by individual artists and shows of group work. At the same time part of our obligation is to make the public constantly aware of the truly exciting art we have in the permanent collection."

The permanent collection is comprised of art primarily from two sources — from gifts to the museum including donations of works of art and of funds earmarked to buy art as a memorial to someone; and continuing purchase funds realized from an original endowment left to the museum by the late Mrs. Rachel Maxwell Moore.

Mrs. Moore's dream was to provide a reliable means for the then fledgling museum to acquire works to be added to the small permanent collection owned at the time of the museum's establishment. The bequest, made 30 years ago, was set up as the Rachel Maxwell Moore Foundation.

After her death, her brothers, the late Grover Maxwell, Sr. and Jeff Maxwell, of Augusta, Georgia, periodically made substantial contributions to the foundation fund until the principal amounted to a little more than $100,000.

Under the provisions of the bequest, only interest earned from the investment of the principal can be used for purchase of art.

Administrators and supporters of the museum have frequently noted that Mrs. Moore's restriction for use of the funds has proven to be a wise precaution, as it has each year resulted in money to purchase new works. Had this restriction not existed, the temptation, at times even the pressing necessity, to use the foundation funds for urgently needed repairs, maintenance and operation might have by now seriously eroded the annual earnings for purchase of art.

This foresight, coupled with patience, has paid off. In addition to city and county governments allocations for operational and maintenance funds, a recent campaign to raise funds for capital improvements made it possible to dramatically update and renovate the museum building.

To provide guidelines for the purchase of art from the foundation's earnings, an acquisitions committee was established. A rotating group of acquisitons committee members, drawn from the community, serve for a limited period.

A basic concept was early established to focus on the purchase of art by area, regional and state artists in order to give the collection a cohesive representation of regional art. At the same time, purchase of art by national and international artists was not precluded in order that the collection not be too limited. The overall goal in acquisitions has been that of acquiring fine representative art in all mediums — paintings, prints, mixed media, sculpture, ceramics, photographs.

Among well-known artists whose work is represented in the permanent collection are Francis Speight, Sarah Blakeslee, Hobson Pittman, Philip Moose, Louise Nevelson, Stuart Davis, Walt Kuhn, Ed Reep, and Thomas Hart Benton.

The portfolio of WPA art acquired through the efforts of the late Lucy Cherry Crisp was described by a New York professional group recently evaluating the collection as a fortunate acquisition in that field.

Just recently, the completion of renovation of the carriage house adjacent to the museum makes it possible to use that building for teaching art classes. Previously, classes had been taught in a large upstairs room. "This is a fortunate situation," Mrs. Young said. "It opens up this lovely large room for possible use as additional exhibition space or for other museum services."

Selected pieces of art from the permanent collection are also exhibited in cases, in the museum's parlor, and in the hallways of the museum — some, especially art in cases, on a permanent exhibition basis, others on a rotating basis.

"Our aim is to keep before the public to the greatest extent possible art the truly beautiful and outstanding art in the permanent collection," Mrs. Young said.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip: SAYS BIG CIGAR PUFFER TO PESTY NON-SMOKER: "BUTT OUT, MACK."

Today's Cryptoquip clue: D equals P

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

The correct management of a suit combination, considered in isolation, might not be the right way to play it in context of the whole hand. For instance, if you consider the spade and diamond holdings on this hand, the only way to avoid a loser in either suit is to take the finesse. Yet, if you take the whole hand into account, the play of the two suits is interrelated. You don't know how to tackle one unless you've already solved your problem in the other.

North-South reached six diamonds after a "modern" auction. North's bid of two hearts was "fourth-suit forcing." When it elicited the information that South had at least 10 cards in the minor suits, North decided that his support and outside controls merited a gamble on slam.

West led a heart, and declarer ruffed in hand to create an entry for the trump finesse. Unfortunately, West showed out on the lead of the queen of diamonds. Catastrophically, declarer now had to lose two trump tricks and his slam.

Declarer was a step ahead of himself. He could not know how to play the trump suit unless he knew whether or not he had a spade trick to lose. At trick two, declarer should have run the jack of spades. When that held, declarer could see he had no loser in the side suits, since one spade could be discarded on the ace of hearts. Therefore, he could afford a safety play in trumps. He should lead a low trump to the ace. If West follows, any 3-1 trump break guarantees the slam; if West shows out, declarer can lead trumps twice toward the Q-J in his hand, again limiting his trump losers to one. And if West has all the missing trumps, there is nothing declarer can do about it.

Scented Geraniums

From COUNTRY HOME
A Meredith Magazine

Turn-of-the-century hostesses tended geraniums with great care, relying on their fragrant leaves to perfume their homes. Scented geraniums were more popular then than any time before or since. The Victorians, fascinated by the leaves, grew the plants in profusion.

The scents emanating from these geraniums are strong, released outdoors by the heat of the sun or indoors by a gentle touch. According to Country Home magazine, each variety offers a different essence, including rose, cinnamon, nutmeg, peppermint, apricot, apple, coconut, lemon and lime. Scented geraniums are relatives of the more common blossoming geraniums.

Most varieties have an easily identifiable and distinct aroma, but there is some overlap and disagreement in the descriptions of others. There are several varieties called nutmeg-scented geraniums, for example, but their fragrances range from nutmeg to apple to pepper.

Scented geraniums grew first in South Africa. No one knows how long they thrived there before travelers from abroad discovered them. The story goes that one of the first foreigners to catch a whiff of these aromatic plants was an Englishman, the gardener to Charles I in the 17th century. The species he took back to England was Pelargonium triste, one of the few that have scented blossoms rather than scented leaves. The plant's name means "sad" and comes from its rather pitiful-looking brownish blossoms.

That first transplanted flower created an appetite for more that spread throughout Europe. Seventeenth-century sailors stopping off at the Cape of Good Hope in South Africa discovered other fragrant plants and took them home with them. For the most part, Europeans grew them indoors. They experimented with the exotic leaves as they did with other herbs, using them in unusual teas and poultices reputed to have health-giving properties.

Later, scented geraniums came to the New World with the colonists. In this hard new land, early Americans treasured them as houseplants as they had in the old country. The leaves provided fragrant reminders of the more civilized world the colonists had left behind.

The plants gained in popularity as the country grew. Thomas Jefferson is reputed to have taken several varieties to the White House in the early 1800s. They were most popular from the mid-1800s to the turn of the century.

Victorian women cut sprigs from the geraniums to add to flower arrangements. They tucked the leaves into sachets and dropped them into their baths. Clever cooks discovered flavor in the leaves as well as fragrance and used them in teas, cakes, candies, cookies, jams, jellies, puddings and even wines.

Aroma and flavor were not the only factors in the plants' allure: By the late 19th century, perfume makers had devised a method of deriving oil from rose-scented geraniums. They used the oil in their perfumes, producing a profitable market for geranium growers.

One of the first successful culinary experiments with scented geranium leaves resulted in flavored sugar, which the Victorians sprinkled on fruit, cookies and toast. The sugar was simple to prepare.

Three New Shows To Open At GMA

In the North Gallery, "New Works/New Directions," an exhibition of art by members of the art faculty of Western Carolina University at Cullowhee will be shown.

A show of drawings by father and daughter artists Ed Harris and Melissa Harris will be on view in the upstairs gallery.

In the South Gallery, the show will consist of recent acquisitions for the museum's permanent collection, with emphasis on acquisitions made within the past four years.

In addition to the new exhibitions, activities scheduled at the Greenville Museum of Art for the remainder of March include a gallery lecture at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday and on March 29, a day-trip will be made to St. John's Museum of Art, Wilmington, Elaine Warshauer, coordinator.

For more details on the shows, other activities and the tour to Wilmington, call the museum at 758-1946.

Admission and parking are both free. Current museum hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesdays through Fridays, and one 1 to 5 p.m. Sundays. The museum is closed Saturdays and Mondays.

GMA Tour To Wilmington

The Greenville Museum of Art is sponsoring a Wilmington tour in late March that will include St. John's Museum of Art; Thalian Hall, an 1858 opera house; the Burgwin-Wright House, and the Zebulon Latimer House.

The museum benefit trip will take place March 29.

Cost of the trip per individual will be $15 for GMA members and $20 for non-members. A time for a coffee break, a Dutch-treat lunch, and for afternoon shopping at the Cotton Exchange will be covered in the itinerary.

Transportation will be provided by the museum.

Plans are to leave GMA at 7:30 a.m. and return around 6:30 p.m.

Persons interested are to call the museum at 758-1946 for further information. Deadline for making reservations is March 22. Payment in full must accompany the reservation. Museum hours for receiving payments are Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Benefit coordinator Elaine Warshauer says highlights of the museum tour will be viewing the Mary Cassatt color prints from the St. John's Collection and other exhibits at the museum, including "The 40s to the 80s: American Art," from the Weatherspoon Art Gallery, UNC-Greensboro.

Workshops Set For Nature Celebration

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department and the Pamlico-Tar River Foundation are co-sponsoring, with support from Streamwatch, a series of workshops on crafts, science, folklore and drama in preparation for Coastal Carolina All Species Day to be held April 23.

Four workshops for children and for adults are scheduled, all to take place at River Park North in the Meadowbrook area of Greenville.

Those for children will be held Tuesday afternoons from 4 to 5:30 p.m., and for adults from 7 to 8:30 p.m. on Tuesdays.

The workshops begin Tuesday. The fee is $5 and pre-registration is required. To pre-register, call 830-4560 or 355-6516.

Topics to be covered on each of the four Tuesdays are:

• March 15 — Science: The geology and ecology of the coast and coastal plains region of eastern North Carolina including the seashore and barrier islands, salt marshes, swamps, rivers, woods and fields. This workshop will focus on choosing one creature as a totem and a symbol of entry into the spirit of wild nature.

• March 22 — Story Telling: Native American legends of the creatures are told by Indian artist Ken Marsh, visiting artist at Pitt Community College and by storyteller Ann Sullivan. The workshop will include movement and song.

• March 29 — Arts and Crafts: Classes will be given in mask making ranging from paper bag cutouts to papiermache sulptures of creatures for the All Species Day parade and play, and for other creations such as banners, streamers and posters. Those participating are asked to bring feathers, shells, skins, bones and other natural materials.

• April 5 — Drama: The great blue heron, the red wolf, loggerhead sea turtle, black bear and blue crab will be the stars of "The Council of Critters." an animal adventure drama that will be performed on All Species Day. There are to be parts for trees, birds, mammals, fish, reptile and butterflies — for all the creatures of eastern North Carolina whose voices will appeal to their cousin, man.

In addition to the River Park North workshops, an afternoon workshop for all ages will be held in the fellowship hall of the First Methodist Church in Washington, N.C. on April 6. Participation is $5 for a family and $2 for an individual child. For details call 946-7211 or 946-0546. Pre-registration is required.

Stegner Novel Deals With The Survival Of Friendships

CROSSING TO SAFETY. By Wallace Stegner. New York, Random House. 277 pages. Hardcover, $18.95.

This novel, by the author of "Angel of Repose," winner of the Pulitzer Prize in 1972, is about a couple's relationship with each other and another couple.

The friendship begins in mid-Depression when a poor, hopeful, happy couple from the West meets a rich, bright couple from the East at a Madison, Wisconsin University where both husbands teach.

The first impressions that take root at their initial meeting blossom into a lifelong friendship, weathering injury, failure and dispair.

Using several beautiful American landscapes, the author describes realistically the love, loyalty, and perseverence his foursome show one another during many long years. He describes people with a great capacity for excusing faults and flaws in others.

In a random world where diseases cripple and terminate lives, each of these people learns to live. They live courageously and become more loveable to the reader, with each passing year and events they face. Their persistence in fighting failure is impressive, but not half as impressive as their loving support of the others.

If it all sounds a bit too sugary, don't be fooled; the conflict between characters is there, but so is the genuine love between friends, a love that transcends the pettiness that usually turns friends into enemies.

Charity Lang takes charge in the beginning and remains in charge throughout the whole story. She makes all the right choices for herself, her friends, her family; however, she leads her husband, Sid, away from a potential writing career as a poet — not the best but a good poet. She pays bills for the Morgan's in Sally's tragedy, enabling Larry to become a famous writer. She has control over the foursome right to the end.

Near the end of the novel the two men discuss their marriages. They conclude that like most long marriages theirs are also based more on "addiction and dependence" than anything else.

Along with his skillfully poetic prose, Stegner points with his foursome to friendships that survive the dangers of closeness, friendships that persist with compassion. His characters accept themselves and the failures in life with profound affirmation.

Stegner has another award in his future with this one. The book is available at Sheppard Library.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By HANSY JONES

"A View From the Bench" is by and about Joseph A. Wapner who has become America's most trusted judge because of the phenomenally successful TV show, "The People's Court." But Wapner's credentials go further than his TV court. During his 20 years as a municipal and superior court judge, he brandished his gavel with the same no-nonsense wisdom, practicality, fairness and wit that are now so familiar to his viewers.

After one trial he passed out fortune cookies with the legend "Lean settlement better than fat lawsuit." And once when a man accused of speeding said his Cadillac wouldn't go as fast as the police alleged, Wapner — robes and all — took the car for a spin himself and found the defendant not guilty.

In "A View From the Bench," Judge Wapner brings the law to life in the way his millions of fans have come to expect. He shows why and how the system works, while recounting some unforgettable anecdotes from his courtroom experiences.

Reading his book, it is easy to understand why, when President Reagan considered a replacement for Supreme Court Chief Justice Warren Burger, countless Americans told pollsters they wanted Wapner.

Bob Thomas's "Liberace" is the tale of another TV superstar — one whose unique style of music, outrageous costumes and extravagant showmanship thrilled millions all over the world.

In reality, however, Liberace was a complex and misunderstood entertainer who led two separate distinct lives. To the public and his legion of fans, he was "Mr. Showmanship," a legendary superstar who never failed to delight and amaze an audience.

But there was a darker, more private side; often alluded to but never openly admitted. This biography reveals for the first time both the public and secret lives of one of America's greatest show business success stories.

Brief, pertinent data is given on addresses, phone numbers, and types and numbers of units at each facility.

"Alpine Adventures," an illustrated 48-page booklet by Margaret Zellers with tips for travels in Austria, Germany, Switzerland, Italy and Yugoslavia, is now ready for distribution.

Subjects covered are applicable to visitors using trains, boats, buses and roads, including walkers and hikers.

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's latest comic book heros are Emperor Hirohito and former Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone.

Comic books are widely read in Japan by both children and adults and often are used as teaching aids for such topics as history, economics or etiquette and even to explain frictions with the United States over trade.

The Hirohito comic book, which is in hard cover and is titled "Tenno Heika" (Emperor), follows the 86-year-old monarch from childhood through World War II, including his historic surrender broadcast in 1945, and into his quiet retirement in Tokyo's Imperial Palace.

The book on Nakasone is called "Yatchan's," which was the former prime minister's childhood nickname. It is published quarterly by Nakasone's office and sent to supporters and constituents.

Japanese prime ministers, once they step down, traditionally fade into the political background and take the role of party elder, occasionally seen but seldom heard.

But Nakasone, whose term in office ended this past November, has stayed in the news through trips abroad and the establishment of a think-tank group. "Yatchan's" helps keep attention focused on him.

"The idea for a cartoon newsletter has been gestating for a long time, and it just happens that it was produced after Nakasone-san left office," said Masaki Donji, a private secretary to Nakasone. "There was no deliberate timing to keep him in the news."

While purporting to depict faithfully the characters' lives and careers, the comic books seem overly flattering.

An essay by Nakasone's wife Tsutako says that, in his younger days when he was known as Yatchan, Nakasone pranced about in his underwear after baths, humming music from Swan Lake. And on state visits abroad as prime minister, he grudgingly allowed his wife off elevators first, but upon returning to Japanese soil, would instantly declare, "Ladies first is over."

"Yatchan's" opens with Nakasone's return from the 1987 summit in Venice, Italy, with photos of the six in-flight meals he was served on his special jet. It then flashes back to the beginning: a fiery-eyed Nakasone resigning from Tokyo's Metropolitan Police Department in 1946 to work toward Japan's postwar reconstruction.

He reveals himself as an idealist who patterns himself after Sakura Sogo, a 17th-century village headman who was executed for seeking reduced taxes for poor peasants. He eats potatoes for lunch — an expression of humility — and chooses a white bicycle for his first political campaign because Hirohito rode a white horse.

Subscriptions to "Yatchan's" are 2,000 yen ($15.50) a year. The booklet also includes reproductions of Nakasone's paintings, and samples of his haiku poetry.

The Hirohito book divulges some imperial trivia: the emperor has no surname, reached adulthood at age 18 (20 for ordinary Japanese), and cannot adopt children or vote. It also explains that his duties include opening sessions of the Diet (parliament), closing sessions of the House of Representatives, receiving foreign ambassadors, and formally approving laws, government decrees, amendments to the constitution and treaties.

Hirohito, once regarded as a living god, remains a sensitive subject in modern Japan, and ribbing of royalty by the press is neither tolerated nor attempted.

But the comic book touches on some sensitive points in the emperor's life, including an assassination attempt, the great Kanto earthquake of 1923 for which Hirohito was later criticized for not doing enough for his people, and a 1936 military rebellion that led to the death of one of his favored ministers.

It also touches briefly on his role in World War II, although it reveals little about his activities or motivations during the conflict, and portrays Hirohito's famed speech imploring the nation in August 1945 to bear the unbearable — surrender.

The emperor's trips to Europe and the United States are shown, including protesters waving signs saying "Go Home" and "Fascist Hirohito."

An official of the Imperial Household Agency, which tends to the imperial family's duties and needs, said the agency had nothing to do with the comic book and extended neither approval or assistance in its production.

A Blackbeard Anniversary

By NORMAN C. PENDERED

March 12 was the 269th anniversary of the trials of Blackbeard's pirate crew. It was on this day in 1719 that the Court of Vice Admiralty convened in Williamsburg, Virginia, to try the pirates in the crew of Captain Edward Teach, better known as Blackbeard — the fiercest pirate of all.

The king's men from Virginia had captured the pirates during a fierce battle off Ocracoke. The mighty Blackbeard fell dead on the bloody deck of his sloop, the "Adventure," after suffering 25 wounds including five pistol balls in his body. His crew fared little better. Every pirate was either killed or wounded. This was the first and only battle that Blackbeard ever lost.

Lieutenant Maynard, commander of the two ships sent to capture Blackbeard, knew he needed proof of Blackbeard's death to collect the king's reward. What better proof than to bring back the pirate's head? So, he cut off Blackbeard's head and tied it to the bowsprit of the "Adventure." The king's men watched in fascination as blood slowly oozed from the massive head to redden the waters of Pamlico Sound.

The king's men did not come through the battle unscathed; they suffered 48 percent casualties. As soon as the battle was over, the wounded were treated and the bodies of the dead pirates were unceremoniously pushed overboard.

Then Lieutenant Maynard with 29 survivors sailed the king's sloops and Blackbeard's "Adventure" across Pamlico Sound and up the Pamlico River to Bath. Here they licked their wounds for several weeks before beginning the sail northward to Hampton Roads, Va. In those days recovery was a simple matter; the patient either lived or died. Medical aid was conspicuous by its absence.

While at Bath Captain Brand, aided by Lieutenant Maynard, captured six more pirates lurking in the town. This made a total of 15 pirates captured.

All of the wounded pirates recovered, but they languished in the Williamsburg gaol for six weeks before their trials. When the court date arrived, the vice admiralty made quick work of the trials. Fourteen of the pirates were found guilty and sentenced to be hanged.

Samuel Odell was the only prisoner found innocent. The night before the battle Blackbeard had taken Odell from a nearby trading sloop to the "Adventure." The pirate chief had seen the king's sloop arrive that evening and knew a battle was immiment so he rounded up as many extra seamen as he could find. Odell took part in the battle because he was wounded. However, he pleaded that he had been forced against his will to serve aboard the pirate vessel, so the court found him not guilty.

Israel Hands, former sailing master of Blackbeard's infamous flagship, the "Queen Ann's Revenge," was not in the battle. He was at Bath recovering from a wound. Blackbeard had shot him in the knee just to show the crew that he, Blackbeard, was in charge.

The court found Israel Hands guilty of piracy. But, before he could be hanged a ship arrived from England with news that the time limit of King George's pardon for pirates had been extended. Hands pleaded his pardon and it was granted.

Hands was badly crippled after Blackbeard shot him and walked with a limp. After the pardon Hands sailed to England where he eked out a living as a beggar on the streets of London. Robert Louis Stevenson used Hands as a model for the gunner's mate in his novel, "Treasure Island."

The remaining convicted pirates of Blackbeard's crew were not so fortunate as Hands and Odell. All 13 of them were taken from the public gaol and hanged on 13 trees along Capitol Road in Williamsburg. For years afterward this thoroughfare was known as Gallow's Road.

(Editor's Note: Greenville resident Norman C. Pendered, a retired faculty mebmer of the School of Technology, East Carolina University, is the author of two books about pirates " "Blackbeard: The Fiercest Pirate," and "Steve Bonnet — Gentlamen Pirate." He is currently working on a third book about pirates, "Legends of Blackbeard.")

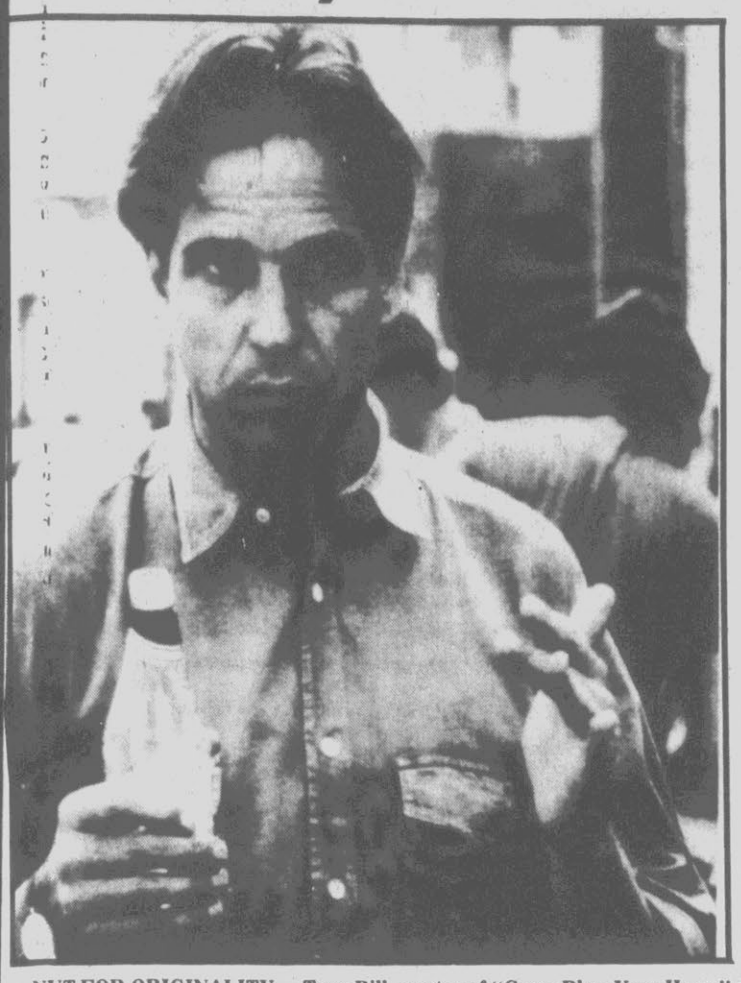
Burt Reynolds Recalls His Early Hollywood Days



NUT FOR ORIGINALITY — Tony Bill, co-star of "Come Blow Your Horn," co-producer of "The Sting," and director of "My Bodyguard," is shown on the set of his new film, "Five Corners," an off-beat comedy-drama about Bronx life in the 1960s. "I like original screenplays, ones that are not from books or plays or short stories," he says. Jody Foster is the only recognizable name in the cast. (AP Laserphoto)

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Burt Reynolds was recalling when he first arrived in Hollywood almost 30 years ago:

"I went to see a friend of a friend of a friend who was supposed to be in the movie business. It turned out he was in the insurance business and he wrote policies for a studio. He lived in the Valley, and I rented a car to follow him.

"Now, I'm from Florida. When I went through Laurel Canyon, I thought I was in Switzerland. I had never seen anything like that. I had the top down and was looking everywhere. I thought, 'This is about as close to heaven as I'll ever get. This is where I'll live.'"

Reynolds was in a rare reflective mood during a visit to help publicize the new Tri-Star movie "Switching Channels." He came here from his Jupiter, Fla., base to talk about the movie, which is "The Front Page" switched to television. But he also seemed to enjoy reminiscing about his early Hollywood days.

"When I went under contract to Universal," he recalled, "it was like a campus. You could walk across the lot and see all these people who were much prettier than you. Gorgeous guys — they all had names like Race Gentry. In those days the studios put beauty contest winners under contract. You could see Miss Universe and Miss America tripping off to class."

All contract players attended classes to learn drama, dance, singing, horseback riding and fencing. Reynolds recalled a boxing class in which he was pitted against a smaller actor and knocked him down: "It was Audie Murphy, and he went to get a gun. As it turned out, we became good friends. But I learned never to knock down a Congressional Medal of Honor winner."

The first big break for Reynolds, who was once married to actress and comedian Judy Carne, came when Universal cast him in "Riverboat," the first TV series in color. Co-starring with Darrin McGavin was "a little bit like playing tackle opposite Lyle Alzado; you learn to play the game very quickly."

Fired from "Riverboat," Reynolds practiced his craft in New York and returned to star in more TV series. "I'm the only actor who has been canceled by all three networks," he said.

After "Dan August," he appeared on several Merv Griffin talk shows. Johnny Carson saw him and invited him on "The Tonight Show." Reynolds was warned that Carson didn't talk between commercial breaks. But during the first one, Carson asked, "Do you want to host the show?"

So Reynolds was host of 10 "Tonight" shows in New York and was called to Hollywood for an interview with director John Boorman about a role in "Deliverance." It turned out Boorman had seen him as a talk-show host.

"I saw you in command of four people; that's what you have to do in this movie," Reynolds recalled Boorman as saying.

Twenty-odd movies later, Burt Reynolds, 52, remains as ambitious as when he was a contract player at Universal. "I'm healthy as a horse," he proclaimed, despite those rumors of three years ago that he had a fatal disease. He said a jaw injury on "City Heat" made eating difficult.

Reynolds was off the screen for more than two years. To dispel the rumors, he made three movies in a row: "Heat," "Malone" and "Rent-a-Cop," none of which ignited the box office. He has great hopes for "Switching Channels," in which he plays the Walter Burns role with Kathleen Turner as the reporter and Christopher Reeve as her fiance.

"I was a late comer to the film," said Reynolds. "I had the good fortune to live across the street from the producer, Martin Ransohoff. When Michael Caine got stuck in the mouth of 'Jaws IV' and wasn't available, Ransohoff was running around looking for a replacement. Richard Dreyfuss wasn't available. A lot of guys weren't available.

"I was across the street eating an apple. Ransohoff came over and said, 'Read this script.' Twenty-four hours later I was in the lap of Kathleen Turner," he said.

"The character was much more elegant with Michael Caine. He changed from David Niven to Broderick Crawford real quickly. They switched the pictures on the wall from Winston Churchill to Marvin Hagler. However, the dialogue wasn't changed. Just some ad libs added."

Driving Tour Of Battlefield Demonstrations On March 20

By PEGGY HOWE
N.C. Department
Of Cultural Resources

RALEIGH — A self-guided driving tour of the battlefield and Union and Confederate infantry demonstrations will be highlights of the 123rd anniversary of the Battle of Bentonville on March 20.

The noon to 4:30 p.m. activities at Bentonville Battleground State Historic Site near Newton Grove commemorate the anniversary of the confrontation of 80,000 Union and Confederate soldiers fighting in one of the last major battles of the Civil War.

More than 400 soldiers and volunteers from 10 states including states of the North and South as well as the Midwest will recreate the battlefield scenes at two Union and two Conferderate locations.

Visitors making the driving tour of the 6,000 acre battlefield will see General Joe Johnston's headquarters; trenches constructed by the 1st Regiment Michigan Engineers; the main Confederate line manned by N.C. Junior Reserves, and the 19th Indiana Artillery, providing artillery demonstrations.

Visitors are to stop at the visitor center before touring to receive directions, instructions and battlefield maps. Also at the visitor center, a slide presentation on Civil War fashions will be presented. The Ladies Aid Society will offer a special display on their wartime activities, including bandage rolling, letter writing and nursing at the Harper House field hospital, located in the Harper House on the battlefield grounds.

The driving tour, the first of this kind ever offered, will offer viewers a recreation of some of the scenes during the three-day Battle of Bentonville that took place March 19-21, 1865 in the battle known as "the last hope of the Confederacy."

General Jospeh E. Johnston placed his Confederate troops directly in the path of General William T. Sherman's Union forces as they advanced toward Goldsboro in their famous March on the South.

For the three days in March, 20,000 Confederates fought desperately against Union troops assembled in the area. By the third day Sherman had his entire army of 60,000 in the field and forced the Confederates to withdraw. As the noise and smoke of the battle subsided, the Union forces were still intact. Johnston had failed to stop the advance.

The Union forces commandered the home of John and Amy Harper for a field hospital as the battle raged in the fields and woods around their farm house. The house has been restored as a field hospital. Tours of the hospital, both during the March 19-21 anniversary and at other times, are available.

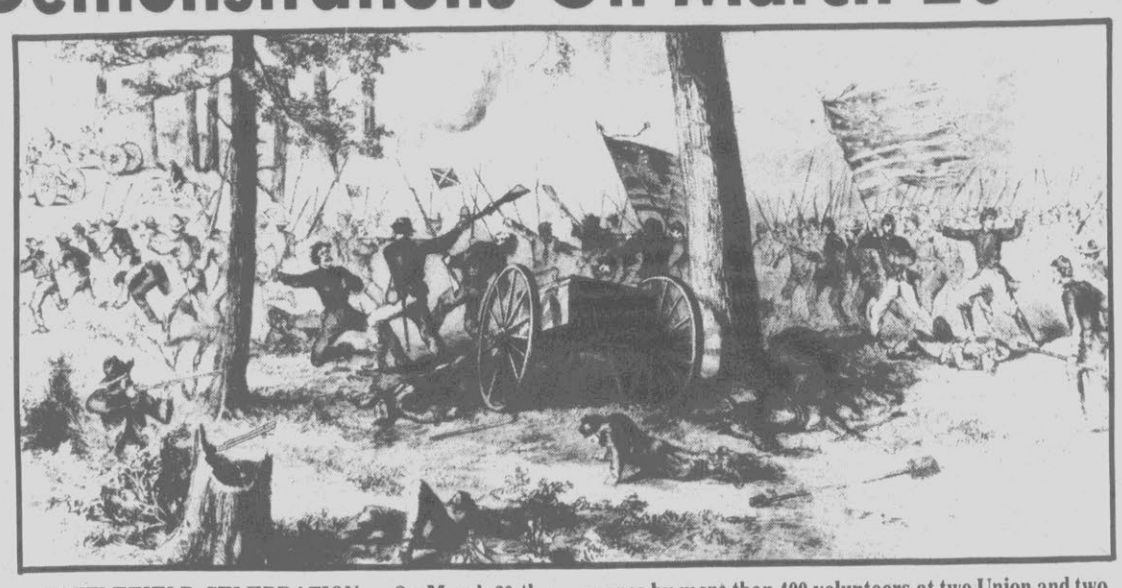
(NOTE: From Greenvile, the distance to the Bentonville Battleground is approximately 75 miles. Take U.S. 13 to Goldsboro, on to Newton Grove. At Newton Grove take U.S. 701 north for three miles, then take State Road 1008 east for three miles to the site.)



BATTLEFIELD CELEBRATION — On March 20 the 123rd anniversary celebration of the Battle of Bentonville will take place at the historic site near Newton Grove. For the first time, a self-guided tour of the 6,000 acre battlefield will let visitors take in recreated battlefield scenes by more than 400 volunteers at two Union and two Confederate sites. The battles will take place between noon and 4 p.m. Admission is free. (Photo from "The American Soldier in Our Civil War.")

EARTH STAMP — The U.S. Postal Service has announced the release of a new, non-denominated stamp featuring the earth, issued to correspond with the new domestic first class postage rate of 25 cents. Stamps In The News

By SYD KRONISH

Rockne, who lifted Notre Dame to the heights as a player and coach, is further honored on the latest 22-cent commemorative in the American Sports Series of U.S. stamps.

Rockne was born in Voss, Norway, in 1888. He came to the United States at the age of 5. He entered Notre Dame, a relatively unknown college in South Bend, Ind., and began an illustrious career in athletics.

His first achievement came as an end on Notre Dame's football team, where he combined with quarterback Gus Dorais to perfect a little-used offensive play called the forward pass. The Dorias-to-Rockne passes helped vault Notre Dame to sports fame in a 1913 victory over Army.

Later, as a coach for 13 years, Rockne's teams won six national championships and had five unbeaten and untied seasons. While coaching at Notre Dame, Rockne also served as athletic director, business manager, ticket distributor, track coach and equipment manager. He was also the principal designer of Notre Dame Stadium.

Rockne's death in a 1931 plane crash cut short a career that will never be forgotten. Rockne touched the lives of hundreds of athletes and thousands of fans. He was loved by his players and revered by opposing coaches. His name is enshrined in the National Football Foundation's College Football Hall of Fame.

First-day cancellations are available in the two usual methods.

Collectors desiring to affix their own stamps may purchase them at their local post office and place them on their own envelopes. No remittance is required. Send to: Customer-Affixed Envelopes, Knute Rockne Stamp, Postmaster, Notre Dame, IN 46556-9991. It must be postmarked April 8.

If you prefer to have the USPS affix the stamp, enclose a money order or personal check for 22 cents per stamp and send to: Knute Rockne Stamp, Postmaster, Notre Dame, IN 46556-9992. Deadline is April 8.

Q. Does Ronald Reagan wear bulletproof garments in public?—G.H., El Paso, Tex.

A. Only when the Secret Service, mindful of local conditions, so advises.

McGeogh/DMI

Margaux: Back on track?

A. It was Margaux Hemingway, 33, who checked into the Betty Ford Clinic last December, determined to defeat alcoholism. Before drink did her in, Margaux was one of the nation's top models, her face adorning the covers of "Vogue" and other magazines. Her attempts at a happy marriage and movie stardom have been disastrous—but, with good health and renewed beauty, she has some of the attributes necessary for a successful film career.

Q. Is it a fact that the financial worth of the Rev. Jesse Jackson is a tightly held secret and hardly anyone knows where his money comes from? Do you? If so, please share that hard-to-come-by information.—Arney Johnson, Louisville, Ky.

A. A financial disclosure statement filed by Jackson last October with the Federal Election Commission shows his annual income at more than $250,000. In 1986, he earned $192,000 from Personalities International, a lecture bureau in Chicago. He also earned $33,000 in honoraria for speeches and personal appearances at various churches, universities and conventions. In addition, he received $18,750 from his National Rainbow Coalition. Jackson is the owner of two residences—one in Chicago and one in Washington, D.C.—and recently gave a third to his mother. Estimates of his financial worth, based on little more than hearsay, range from $500,000 to $1 million.

Q. Are William Hurt, the star of "Broadcast News," and Marlee Matlin, the deaf actress who worked with him in "Children of a Lesser God," still taken with each other, or have they gone their separate ways?—Pat Rose, Pontiac, Mich.

A. The film stars' two-year love affair has diminished to the level where it now can be filed under the heading "Yesterday's Romance."

Q. How many National Security Council advisers has the President appointed to date? Can you name them?—Stan Gordon, East St. Louis, Ill.

A. To date, President Reagan has appointed six NSC chiefs: Richard Allen, William P. Clark, Robert McFarlane, Adm. John Poindexter, Frank Carlucci and now Gen. Colin Powell.

Q. Some sophisticated critics say that Dolly Parton's TV variety program is not so hot because her sincerity and Southern accent are exaggerated. What is your opinion?—Phyllis D., Chattanooga, Tenn.

A. On her TV show, Dolly Parton projects the image of the simple, ingenuous, guileless, unaffected country-western singer—which may be an affectation. More important yet, the TV variety genre seems to have gone out of style with the departure of "The Carol Burnett Show" nearly 10 years ago. Today, we have on television a number of talk shows in which the host interviews a variety of personalities who perform as comics, singers, musicians and celebrities. So who needs the old-fashioned "variety show" format?

Christina Onassis

Q. Could you please find out which woman of the world has been referred to as "the Greek tanker"?—Ardis J., Avon Park, Fla.

A. In European jet-set circles, Christina Onassis, 37-year-old daughter of the late Greek shipping tycoon Aristotle Onassis, has been known by that title because of her chronic obesity.

Q. May I impose upon you to answer this little bit of trivia: Who was the first President of the United States born in the 20th century, and where and when was he born?—Robert Proctor, Houston, Tex.

A. John F. Kennedy, born at home (83 Beals St. in Brookline, Mass.) on May 29, 1917, was the first U.S. President who'd been born in the 20th century. Lyndon Johnson, Ronald Reagan, Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford, in that order, all were born before Kennedy in this century but came after him in the White House.

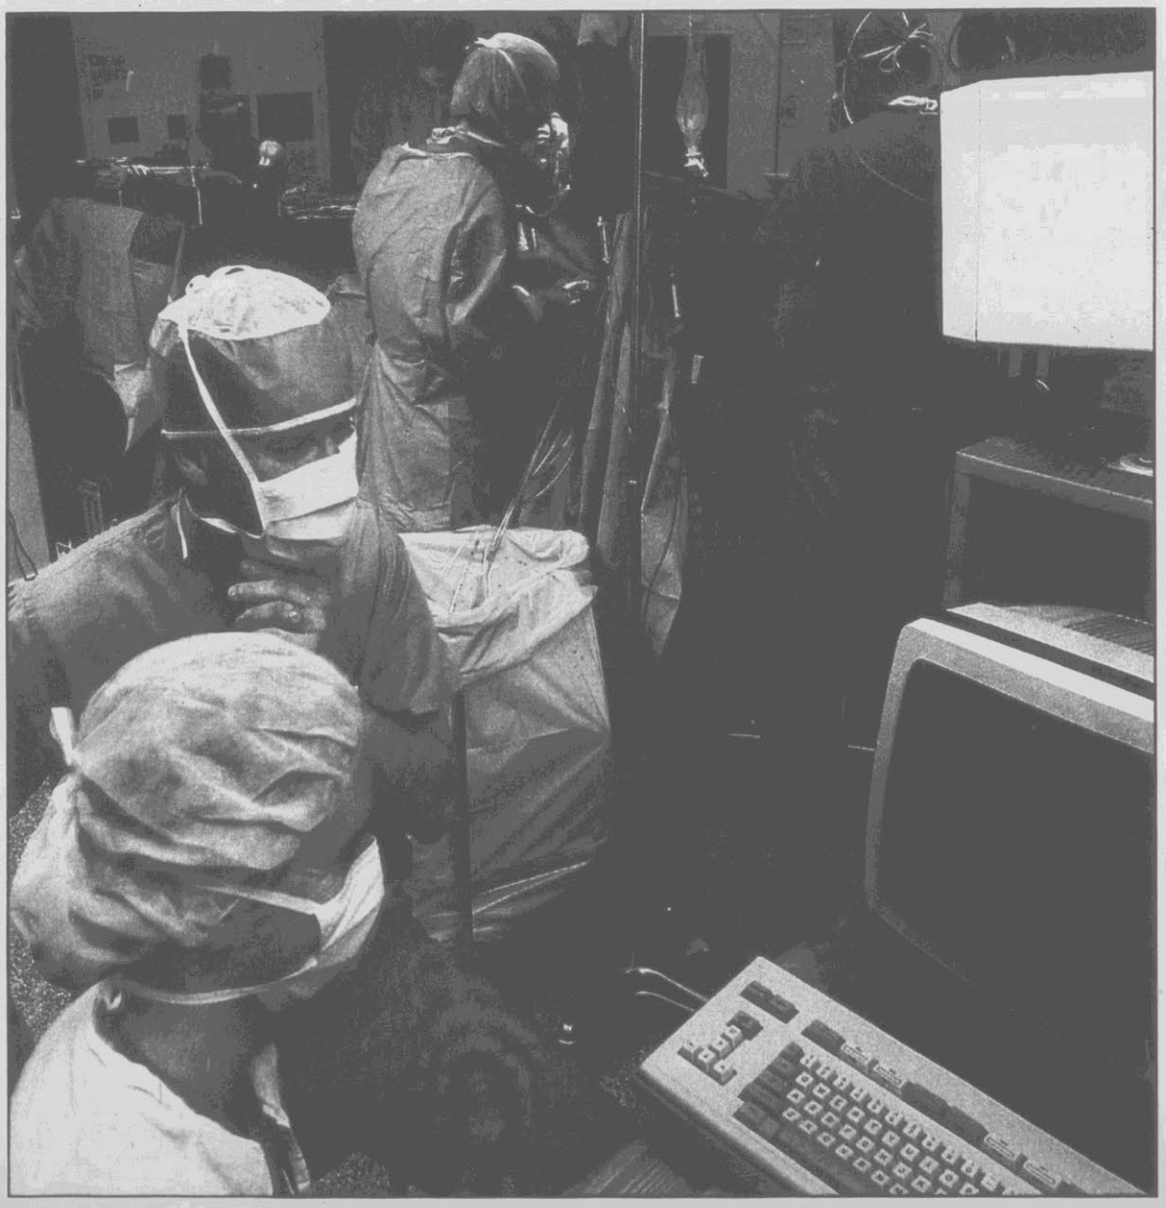
HOW COMPUTERS ARE HELPING



Prior to surgery, an anesthesiologist and a computer expert feed data into the system. Soon the screen will reply with the patient's full condition.

BY EARL UBELL

DOCTOR JONES EXAMINED HIS PATIENT at the hospital. Hastily, he scribbled a message on her medical record ordering the attending nurse to increase the patient's heart medicine. Then he left.

Fifteen minutes later, the nurse was complaining bitterly: She could not read the doctor's crabbed handwriting; neither could anyone else. And the doctor was somewhere between the hospital and his home. For all the nurse knew, the patient's life hung in the balance.

Similar incidents happen nearly every day in every hospital across this country, probably costing untold suffering and possibly hundreds of lives.

But at L.D.S. Hospital in Salt Lake City, Utah, a bedside computer system called HELP has all but eliminated such mixups. Now doctors and nurses can type their notes into a computer terminal. The computer's electronic record for each patient contains results of examinations, laboratory tests and treatments—from drugs to surgery. The computer stores the patient's data for the doctor.

Responding to questions by a doctor or nurse, the computer displays on a TV screen the numbers that describe the patient's condition, including temperature, blood pressure, fluid loss or gain, lab results, diet and diagnosis. At the push of a button, the doctor also can see these numbers charted on a graph. Printouts can be made immediately.

Sure, doctors and nurses still make some mistakes, but since computerization, their error rate has dropped dramatically. Says Dr. Doug Ridges, an L.D.S. cardiologist: "There's no question HELP improves the patient's care and the physician's efficiency. I can even use my computer in my office or in my home to check on a patient. I don't have to take a nurse away from my patient to hunt down a medical record."

Computers have started to enter medicine in a big way.

Says Dr. James Todd, a senior deputy executive vice president of the American Medical Association: "We here at the AMA are convinced the future of medicine and its advances will involve computers. Medical knowledge is doubling every eight years. It will be impossible to keep up with that if we can't computerize the information. We think more and more doctors will use the machines."

They are speeding diagnosis, eliminating foul-ups... and they're on call 24 hours a day

It's estimated that almost half of all physicians now use computers, mostly for keeping track of finances. But other uses are moving up fast. Here are some ways in which computers will affect your health, directly and soon.

Diagnosis. Today's doctor faces a formidable task. There are thousands of diseases. Each may have a cluster of symptoms. Some show up as patient complaints—abdominal pain in an ulcer case. Others are noted during the doctor's examination—swelling of the ankles, perhaps, in a patient with congestive heart failure. Laboratory tests of blood or tissues reveal other signs—high blood-sugar levels in diabetes. In addition, there are X-rays, stress tests, sonograms and a dozen other diagnostic techniques. That adds up to thousands of facts that the doctor must filter through to diagnose the illness correctly. To complicate matters, diseases may have similar symptoms. An example: indigestion and heart attack.

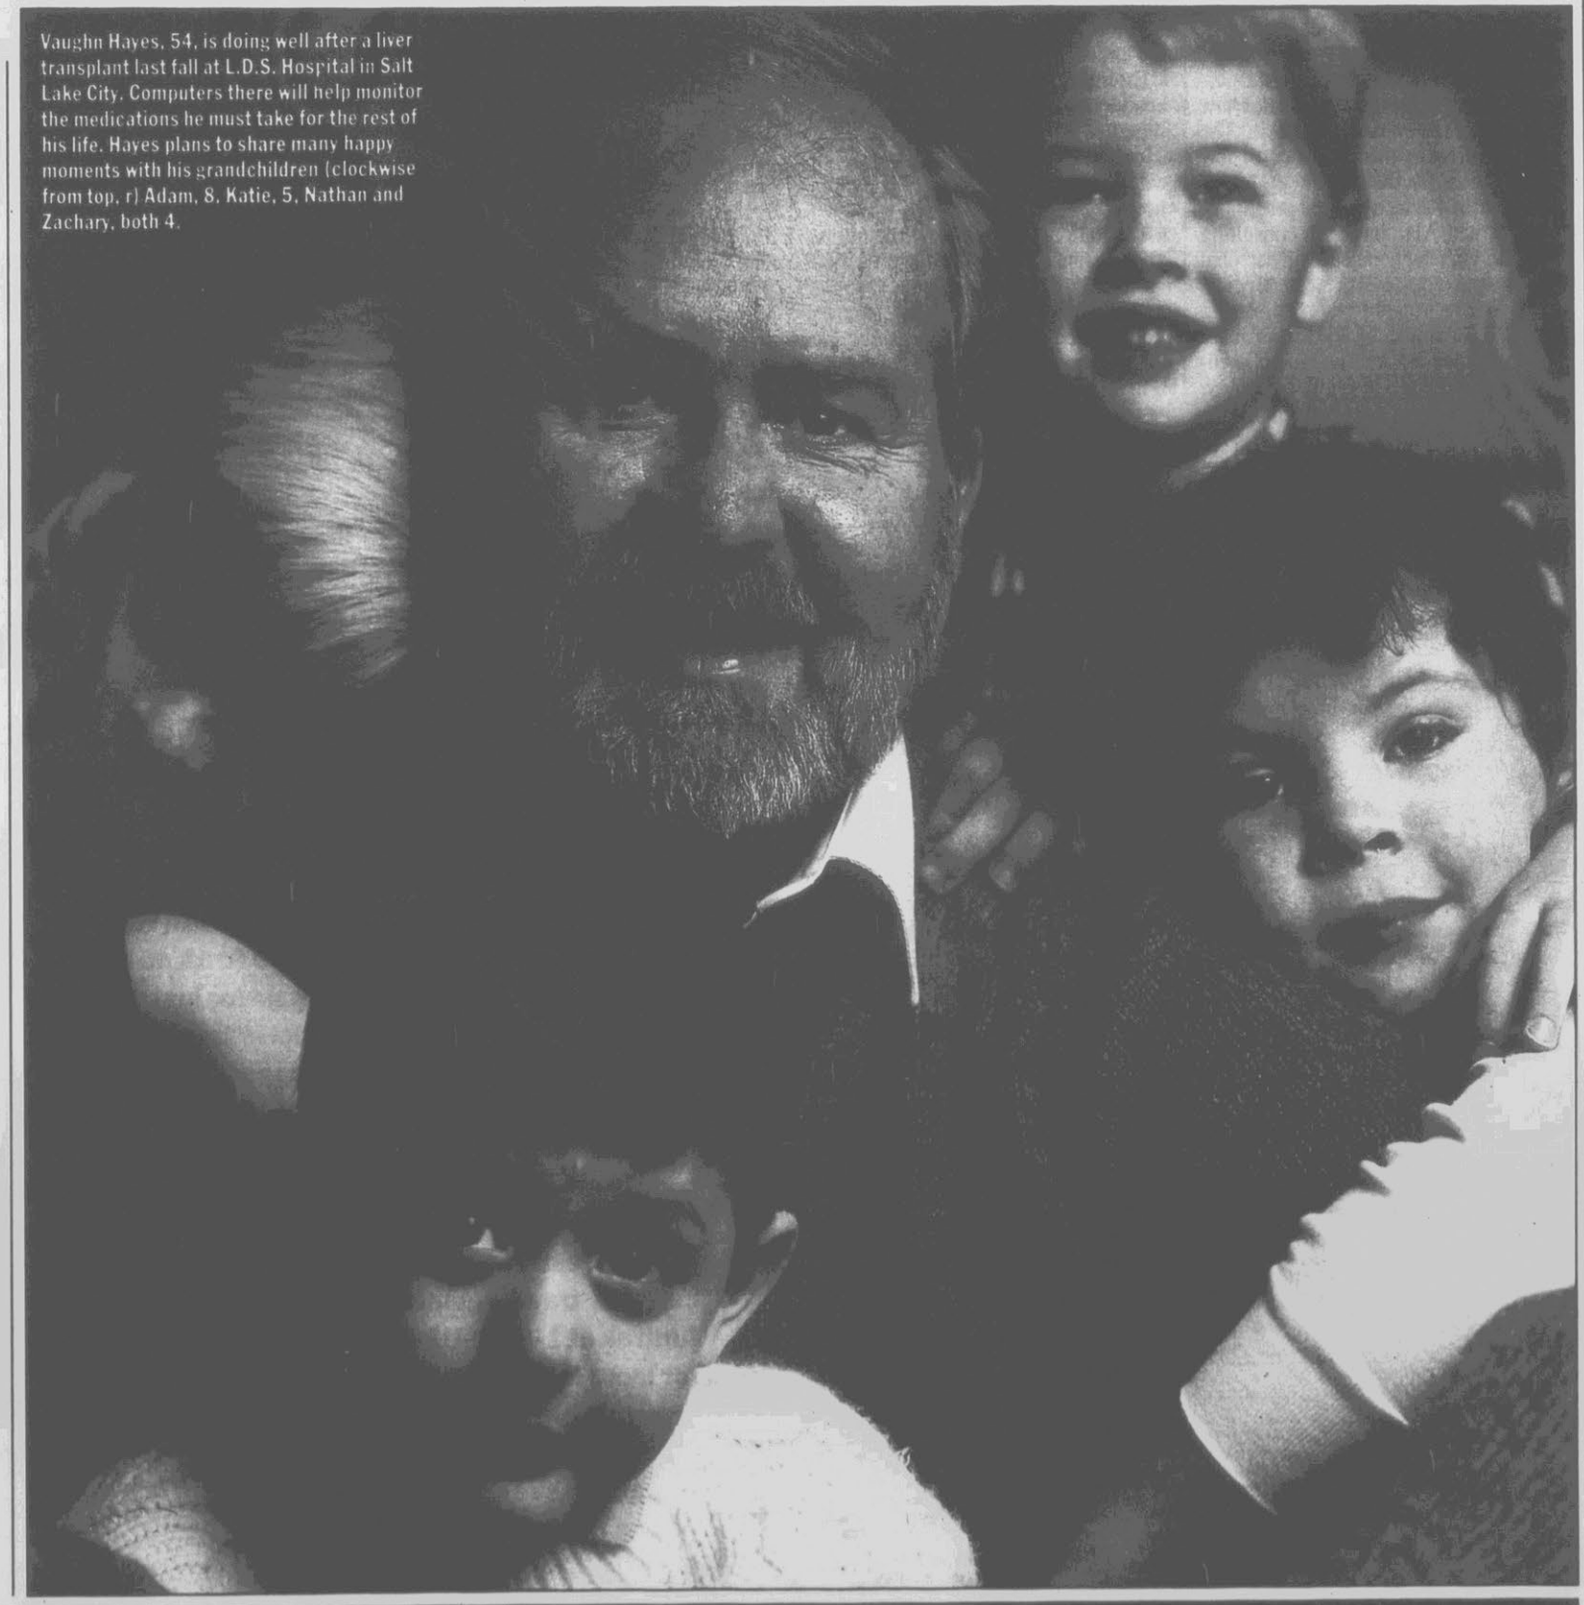
DOCTORS TREAT YOU BETTER



Vaughn Hayes, 54, is doing well after a liver transplant last fall at L.D.S. Hospital in Salt Lake City. Computers there will help monitor the medications he must take for the rest of his life. Hayes plans to share many happy moments with his grandchildren (clockwise from top, r) Adam, 8, Katie, 5, Nathan and Zachary, both 4.

A new computer program called DXplain can, in just a few seconds, propose a list of diseases based on the doctor's input into the system. The doctor might use any of 4700 medical terms: fever, arthritis, abdominal pain, anemia, and so on. DXplain helps narrow the possibilities and suggests to the doctor how he might focus on one diagnosis. The program also explains to the doctor how the diagnosis fits the patient.

Dr. Phillip Klein, a general practitioner in Parrish, Ala., has been consulting DXplain via telephone and his personal computer since the American Medical Association put the program on its AMA/NET computer network last June.

"I can practice the same kind of medicine they practice in New York City, and I'm just a rural doctor," says Dr. Klein. "I had this 30-year-old patient with a racing heart and fearing a heart attack. I put all the data into DXplain. It came up with 10 or 12 diagnoses, most of which I rejected as way out west."

One of the computer's suggestions was MVP, mitral valve prolapse, a floppy heart valve. It makes your heart jiggle and scares you, but it won't kill you.

"I sent the patient to Birmingham for tests I couldn't do—and out popped MVP," Klein recalls. "She's well today. She knows she's not going to die."

Essentially, the computer puts an extensive medical library at the doctor's fingertips 24 hours a day. Although other computer-diagnostic programs are available, DXplain probably is the one most accessible to doctors.

The National Library of Medicine also is developing a program to diagnose rheumatism. It's called AI/Rheum (AI stands for artificial intelligence). Scientists have programmed the computer to think like an expert in arthritis.

In the end, the doctor is still responsible for the final diagnosis and treatment—the diagnostic programs are no more than fancy textbooks designed to help the doctor to think and to manage information.

Treatment. Like HELP, which is used by L.D.S. Hospital in Utah, CARE is used by Wishard Memorial Hospital in Indianapolis to check a patient's electronic medical record. As data from examinations, tests and drug treatment pile up, the program may advise what treatment to try next, or it may warn against using the wrong treatment.

Another system now being tested, called ATTENDING, helps anesthesiologists find the optimal combination of drugs to use on a patient. The doctor enters his plan and the patient's characteristics into the computer. The program then weighs the characteristics and critiques the doctor's plan.

A program called ONCOCIN suggests possible cancer-treatment plans. A cancer patient might be given as many as eight drugs, X-rays, surgery or all of the above. At Mount Sinai Medical Center in New York City, Dr. Larry Norton developed the Norton-Simon Model computer program to find the best way to give drug therapy to breast-cancer patients. Since then, such patients' survival rates have increased significantly.

The National Cancer Institute developed a program called Physician Data Query (PDQ) to put doctors everywhere in touch with the latest cancer treatments. With a computer, a physician can find the right therapy for a patient with any type of cancer. The computer also can list the names and addresses of cancer specialists and identify those who are doing the most advanced research on cancer treatment.

At L.D.S. Hospital, a HELP computer checked on the use of antibiotics before and after surgery had begun. These chemicals kill bacteria so they do not spread to other organs during surgery. The computer system revealed that patients who were given antibiotics before surgery developed infections only half as often as those given antibiotics after the start of surgery. As a result, the system now sends automatic "alerts" to doctors, reminding them to give antibiotics at least two hours before the patient gets to the operating room. Since the alerts, infections have decreased measurably.

At Canada's Misericordia General Hospital in Winnipeg, Manitoba, doctors tested a desktop computer in the Drug Interactions Advisor system, which alerts doctors to drug conflicts. For example, if doctors simultaneously prescribe tetracycline, an antibiotic, and Coumadin, a blood thinner, the blood may get too thin and hemorrhaging could occur. There are dozens of such possibilities.

In a test of 100 patients, the Canadian physicians found that 51 had potential drug conflicts, and the computer advised changing treatment in 26 cases.

Doctor's training. Physicians now can play computer games to keep themselves intellectually sharp. A program called CYBERLOG, for instance, deals with one topic at a time—high-blood pressure, fluid balance, diabetes. The doctor gets a printed manual plus a floppy disc for a personal computer. The program challenges the physician to solve simulated case problems. The program also gives the doctor the tools to solve real-life medical puzzles—helping to determine the correct dose of insulin for a diabetic, for example, or which drug to use for a hypertension patient.

At Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston, doctors can study simulated medical conditions via telephone on AMA/NET. Medical students at Harvard practice on simulated "computer patients." Similarly, a program for a personal computer called MacDope—developed cooperatively by St. Bartholomew's Hospital in London, England, and McMaster University in Hamilton, Ontario, Canada—allows medical students to administer drugs to "computer patients" and to study the results. DxTER, a privately developed program, provides simulations for medical professionals.

Dr. G. Octo Barnett, a professor of medicine at Harvard Medical School, is enthusiastic about computer teaching. But he warns, "There is a lot you cannot learn on a computer: being compassionate, picking up the nuances of a conversation, reading the patient's face. Computers will never replace enlightened, humane instructors who provide role models and inspiration."

Information searches. Doctors and medical researchers can use their personal computers to delve by telephone into the vast literature that exists in the National Library of Medicine, which holds 10 million items on diseases, body parts and treatments.

Patient education. Like doctors, patients now can play computer games to learn more about their illnesses and how to cope with them. The University of Minnesota in Minneapolis has developed a desktop system for helping patients with cystic fibrosis, a severe, often fatal lung disease. The patients' parents also can use the computer to learn how to deal with this illness. Similar programs exist for diabetes, heart attack, sex and drugs. One program at the University of Minnesota will evaluate your health risks based on your lifestyle, parents' diseases and such factors as cholesterol levels.

In Louisville, distraught parents soon will be able to sit down at their own personal computers to get medical information instantly if their child is sick, thanks to Dr. Matthew Witten, who developed the PEDS program there. Connected by telephone to the University of Louisville, a parent at home will type the child's symptoms onto the computer screen. Back will come information on what to do immediately, when to see a doctor and when, simply, to wait.

In Tucson, laymen can dial a phone number at the University of Arizona for a health-assessment quiz to determine their risks for a particular condition. Callers can choose a quiz on one of 10 subjects, from stress to cancer. A computerized voice on the Tele-Health System asks the questions, and callers answer by tapping their touch-tone telephones. The voice then gives each caller's risk score, based on the answers given.

Beyond these major trends, computer science is spreading widely and deeply into the medical community with new systems, either recently established or in the testing stages. Some examples:

- Computers have made possible analyses of X-ray negatives so clear that pictures emerge of whole organs. Similar advances have been made with magnetic and soundwave probes. A doctor now can "see" a cancer that only a few years ago was not visible.
- The United Network for Organ Sharing, a nationwide computer system, now directs donated organs—kidneys, hearts, livers—to the right patients with the proper match of blood and tissue.
- Drugstores and hospital pharmacies are being computerized to reduce errors in prescriptions. A computerized pharmacy can spot drug conflicts, check to see if you are overdosed and find your prescription if you have lost it.

What one 53-year-old did when her leg was shattered

THE SPIRIT OF CHITA RIVERA

Barbra Walz

CHITA RIVERA is one of those people who can radiate excitement just by asking a waiter where the pay phone is. Back on April 6, 1986, she had lots to be excited about. A star on Broadway for three decades, since West Side Story, she was back again in the musical Jerry's Girls. She felt festive, so she went out to dinner in New York's theater district with some friends, then offered one of them a ride home. It was while making a U-turn on a Manhattan street that night that Chita Rivera encountered what would be the greatest test—and the greatest triumph—of her life.

"I'm a very careful driver," Rivera says in the sharp, rapid-fire word rush of an unself-conscious actress. "I turned on my blinkers, I looked in the mirror, I saw another car a block and a half behind, and I started to turn." Rivera had not spotted a taxicab coming up fast on her left side. "It must have been in a blind spot," she says. The cars collided. Within seconds, Rivera—actress, singer, but most of all dancer—was in clinical shock. Her lower left leg had been ripped open and shattered. She was 53. She would not return to her Broadway show, and most people assumed that she would never return to dancing. Most people were wrong.

"It never entered my mind that I wouldn't dance again," she says, the quizzical smile on her wide-open face suggesting that I was slightly crazy for even asking. "I guess it's connected to a whole way of thinking—my training, my faith. The only thing that I saw as a possibility was recovery."

Perhaps only God knows where Chita Rivera got the idea that she could recover. Although her foot-long surgical scar has healed well, the damage is evident when she invites you to feel her leg; the 12 metal screws that hold it together are evident to the touch. Moments after Rivera was brought to New York's Lenox Hill Hospital, a nurse looked at her injuries and said balefully, "You really did a job on yourself." Surgery was complex and difficult, and her leg remained swollen and discolored. "I didn't realize how bad it was until I saw people's faces when they looked at it," she says with a laugh. "Later, my doctor told me that I could have lost my leg—but he didn't tell me that until it was time to tell me. I appreciated that."

Rivera is generous in her praise for all the people who helped her over the next hard year: her doctor, John Carmody; her therapists, Armando Zettina and Debbie Baker; her two brothers and two sisters; and her daughter, Lisa. All were constantly at her side, urging her on. But the biggest factor in her recovery was Rivera herself. "There were just too many songs to sing, too many dances to dance," she says. "I didn't want to die until I die."

'It never entered my mind that I wouldn't dance again,' says Rivera. 'The only possibility I saw was recovery.'

She was determined, during the recovery process, to put the best face on her problems. "I don't like to let people see me looking down or angry," she says. When she asked Dr. Carmody how far back she could come, he said, "It's up to you." That was all Chita Rivera needed to get her through.

The road back was long and painful. As feeling returned to the injured leg, the daily physical therapy became excruciating. "I would feel like I was going to hit the ceiling," she remembers. "I would almost scream, 'Get me down from here!'" As her recovery progressed, Rivera had to fight a bat-

SUNDAY IN THE PARK

It's Sunday afternoon—their favorite time together. The lovely young mother and her pretty little girl stroll hand-in-hand, exchanging fond glances that need no words. The little girl's trusting gaze, returned by her mother's gentle look of love and pride, bears witness to that special bond that will last forever.

This is a moment that every mother knows—and cherishes—captured now by Lenox, in an original sculpture of fine bisque porcelain. Sunday in the Park.

Sculptured with careful attention to every detail, their charming Victorian finery is lavished with lace and ribbons, ruffles and embroidery . . . every frill and feather exquisitely defined. And all painted by hand with delicate precision in the soft, romantic hues of the period.

A work of art to treasure always

Sunday in the Park is a work of rare sensitivity to feelings not easily expressed. That is part of its irresistible appeal to any mother—and to anyone who hopes one day to have a daughter.

It is this quality of love and tenderness—so evocatively portrayed in hand-painted bisque porcelain—that will make it a memorable Mother's Day gift. And a greatly admired display piece in her home.

Available only from Lenox

This new and original work of art created for The Lenox Mother and Child Sculpture Collection is available only direct from Lenox. Each imported figurine will be individually handcrafted in the finest bisque porcelain and, as your assurance of quality, will bear the Lenox® trademark inscribed on its base in pure 24 karat gold.

tle with herself. "My exercise bicycle is four feet away from my bed. My Nautilus and rowing machine are eight feet away. So many days, I didn't want to get on them. I knew if I got on them for even five minutes, I'd feel better, but there was a side of me that said, 'I'm tired. I don't feel like it.'"

It was the positive side of her character that won out—but Rivera never doubted it would. "There are some people whose spirits are so high, their determination so great, that you practically have to shoot them to get them down," she says. "I guess I'm one of those people. The spirit is the strongest thing there is."

Rivera makes it sound matter-of-fact when she reports, "I spent the other morning practicing my splits. They're just fine." If she had only come along as far as practicing, it would be impressive enough. But by early last year she was already doing a few short engagements, getting back into form. "Of course, there's a difference," she says. "I have 12 screws in my leg. I wake up, and there are adjustments I have to make. So I make them. I'm not a Pollyanna; it hurts to dance. Sometimes it damn hurts. But you don't keep telling yourself that."

'There are people whose spirits are so high, you practically have to shoot them to get them down. I guess I'm one of those people.'

Now she has decided to push herself all the way. The day we met, she had just come from meeting with the director of a new revival of Can-Can—which she has called the "dancingest" musical there is. Chita Rivera has signed up to headline the show in a 10-month national tour, playing the female lead. Of course, she is 55 now and barely over her injuries. No one would be surprised if she wanted the part modified a little bit to fit her abilities, and the producers have been sympathetic to her special needs.

"I told them I wanted the part to have more dancing," she says. "So we added some."

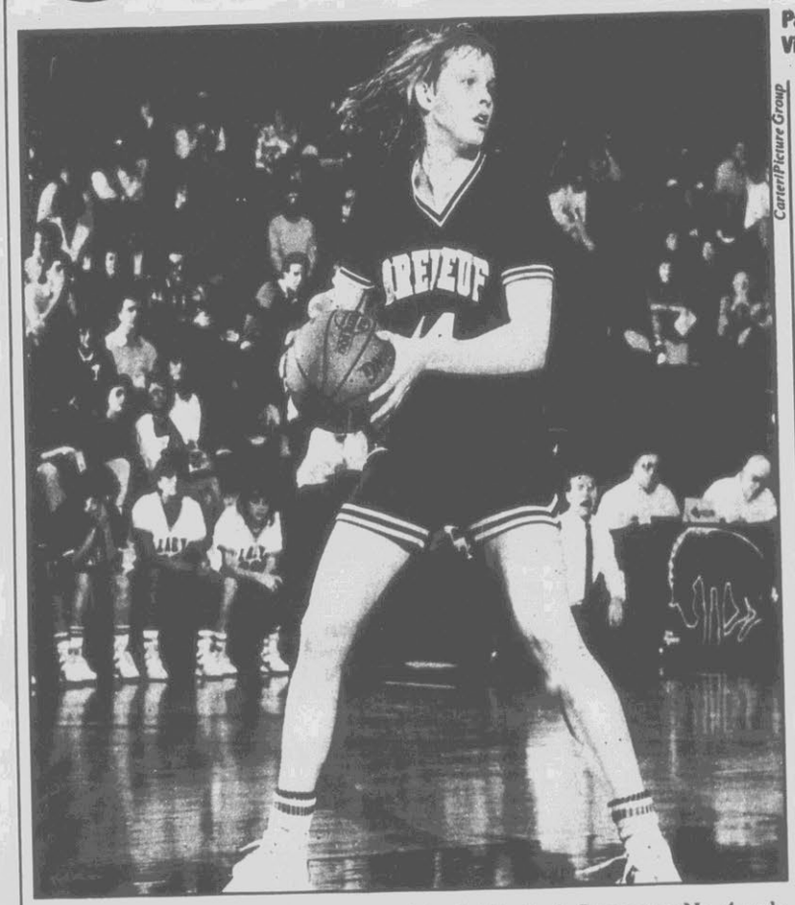
PARADE'S ALL-AMERICA HIGH SCHOOL

Girls Basketball Team



Carter/Picture Group

Parade's Player of the Year is 6-foot-1 Vicki Hall of Indianapolis.

A 5-FOOT-4 DYNAMO named Dawn Staley—who can leap to within two inches of the basketball rim, leads her team in rebounding and was the leading scorer among both boys and girls in Pennsylvania last year—went to the wire in the voting, yielding at the last moment to Vicki Hall, a 6-foot-1 senior from Indianapolis, as Player of the Year on PARADE's All America High School Girls Basketball Team.

The two young women head a group of 40 athletes from 22 states and the District of Columbia named to PARADE's 12th annual all-star roster by college coaches and recruiters. Indiana, home of our Player of the Year, placed six players on the squad, while California, Michigan and Illinois had three each.

Vicki Hall, who attends Brebeuf Prep, has led the Lady Braves to a No. 4 ranking in Indiana and, as we go to press, a 19-2 record. Over her four-season career, she has averaged 19.5 points a game, with 10.3 rebounds, and she makes 79 percent of her foul shots. She also maintains a 3.7 academic average.

Alan Vickrey, coach of the Lady Braves, says, "Vicki's greatest asset is her obsession with the game. She puts in two or three extra hours shooting during the day in addition to practice. During summer vacation, she plays in pick-up games six to eight hours daily. A team-oriented player, she gets all her mates involved during games. She could easily score 30 to 35 points each time out, but she directs traffic so the whole club is scoring."

Our runner-up, Dawn Staley, attends Dobbins Tech in Philadelphia and has led her squad to 50 straight victories over three years while keeping a 3.4 academic average. Staley is headed for the University of Virginia. Her coach, Dr. Anthony Coma, notes, "In our most recent game, she had a quadruple-double, with 27 points, 15 assists, 11 rebounds and 10 steals. She's unbelievably quick and is a tremendous team player. She gets the rebounds on the defensive board and gets the ball inside to the pivot shooter time and time again."

Vicki Hall is a three-time PARADE all-American, and eight other players on this year's team are repeaters from last year. They are: Shannon Davis, Kareema Williams, Molly Tideback, Trise Jackson, Dena Head, Yolanda Griffith, Chris MacMurdo and Michele Savage.

Because a quality first-year player can turn a good team into an NCAA title threat, college scouts and recruiters are zeroing in on the high schools as never before. As a result, the recruiting wars that go on during the winter and spring are being labeled by many basketball enthusiasts as "the second season."

Vicki Hall was one of those heavily recruited by colleges across the country. She picked the University of Texas—perennial contenders for No. 1 ranking in the female collegiate hoop circuit. The Texas coach, Jody Conradt, is very excited about having Vicki. Says Conradt, "She's very versatile and has size and mobility that is beautiful to watch."

It's been almost 50 years since Dorothy and Toto started their adventure down the yellow brick road. Since then, each new generation has thrilled to the fantasy of The Wizard Of Oz, one of the best-loved movies of all time.

And now in tribute to this movie classic, Dorothy, Toto, the Scarecrow, Tin Man and Cowardly Lion are captured to perfection, exactly as they appeared in the movie. D.O.A. Remake Is Still a Thriller

Touchstone

Together: Meg Ryan and Dennis Quaid

In D.O.A., Dennis Quaid plays a Midwestern English professor who has been poisoned—and spends his last days searching for his killer. It's a high-style remake (by the creators of Max Headroom) of the 1949 thriller. Only this time out, the dying man drags around a pretty freshman (Meg Ryan) who has a wild crush on him. Asked if Quaid flashes his famous sexy smile in this heavy drama, Ryan (who dates him offscreen) replies, "He can't help it! In one scene, my character says, 'You glued yourself to me, you dragged me out into the street half-naked, you almost got me shot...' and then she looks up at him adoringly and says, 'Most girls wait a lifetime for a date like this.'" REDFORD ON NEWMAN

No matter who you are, apparently, someone else seems to have it made: Listen to Robert Redford in the March Esquire: "I'd probably say that [Paul] Newman's my best friend... A couple of weeks ago, we went out to have dinner with him in Connecticut, and we're driving home and I'm thinking to myself: God, here's old Paul. What is he? Sixty? Sixty-one? I don't know. He looks great, feels great, has a lot of money, gives to great causes, he's in love with his wife, he races his cars when he wants to, makes a movie when he wants to, he's incredibly happy and still has that face that looks the way it did when he was twenty. God, by the time we got home, I wanted to shoot myself."

Buddy Holly Lives Again

The Buddy Holly Story is a first-rate, old-fashioned movie bio about the talented Texas songwriter-singer-guitarist—played marvelously by Gary Busey—who was among the first to combine black rhythm-and-blues with country music to create the new sound of rock 'n' roll. Holly had 45 hit songs before he died in a plane crash at 22. The movie jumps with the rock music, but it's also inspirational because of Holly's character and achievement. A companion movie is La Bamba, starring Lou Diamond Phillips as Ritchie Valens, the talented Chicano performer-composer who went down on Holly's plane when he was only 17. (Both from RCA-Columbia.)

Ten for Shirley Temple

"Animal crackers in my soup...," "Polly wolly doodle all the day..." Singing and dancing with stars like Bill "Bojangles" Robinson, Jack Haley and Alice Faye, Shirley Temple first appeared in movies 56 years ago, when she was only 3 years old. Ten of her films—including The Little Colonel and Poor Little Rich Girl—are now out on video (Playhouse).

Buying, Building Or Remodeling a Home?

IF SO, YOU WILL NEED TO organize your files to keep track of such details as these:

- Papers dealing with the purchase of your home and work done on it.
- Dates of purchase, receipts and warranties for such items as furniture and appliances.
- Measurements of all rooms and windows, inside and out.
- Ceiling, floor, wall and window coverings for each room, including paint and fabric samples.

A big help is The Home Owner's Journal: What I Did & When I Did It. Author Colleen Jenkins is a medical librarian with 30 years' experience as a home owner. One day she found herself standing on a ladder, painting her house and needing one more quart of paint to finish. She vowed that, from then on, she would keep track of the number of quarts it took. And she started working on her book—which should save you time and money.

It is organized room by room and includes information on how to keep track of purchases and services to deduct at tax time. To order: Send $7.95 (plus $2 for postage and handling) to Blue Sky Marketing, Dept. P, P. O. Box 21-583, St. Paul, Minn. 55121.

IN STEP WITH:

BY JAMES BRADY

Don Johnson

BORN: Dec. 15, 1950, in Galena, Mo.
PERSONAL: Married three times, including once to the actress Melanie Griffith, 1976-77. Lived with Patti D'Arbanville; one son, Jesse, 5.
TV: Includes First, You Cry, 1978; The Rebels, 1979; The Revenge of the Stepford Wives, 1980; Beulah Land, 1980; Miami Vice, 1984–; The Long Hot Summer, 1985.

Don Johnson's new movie, a romantic comedy, opens next week. Then he heads to Canada to make another film. Best of all, his 5-year-old son has come to town.

THIS WAS A DON JOHNSON I DIDN'T EXPECT: talking about his son, his boat, his father's work, his admiration for Jimmy Stewart and Henry Fonda, his own vulnerability.

He was filming an episode of Miami Vice and took a break between scenes to talk about his new movie, Sweet Hearts Dance, due to be released next week. It's a dramatic change of pace from his Sonny Crockett image. The film is set in a small New England town, and Johnson and Susan Sarandon play a couple whose 15-year marriage is coming apart. I asked why he was attracted to the story.

"I look for something in a film," he said. "What would Hank Fonda or Jimmy Stewart do if he were in my circumstances today? Not that I compare myself to them—but what would they do? Then Sweet Hearts Dance came along. There weren't any guns, no car chases, no shoot-'em-ups, no robots, no drugs. But I was moved."

In the movie, Don plays a carpenter. Because he attended the University of Kansas on a drama scholarship, I assumed he was a middle-class kid to whom a laborer's role might be alien. He quickly set me straight. "I did come out of a blue-collar background," he said. "My father was a master carpenter, a master mechanic. I grew up working alongside him and drew a lot of him into the character. He was a man with hopes and dreams, like Wiley [his character in the movie]."

Larry Hagman once told me he feared he was typecast forever as J.R. Ewing. Don doesn't think that has happened to him. "Sonny Crockett being a formidable stamp on everyone's frontal lobe makes it difficult," he conceded, "but I've been lucky in being accepted in other roles."

On April 5, Johnson starts another film for Lorimar in Calgary, Canada, with the director John Frankenheimer. I said, "You're always working, aren't you?"

"I always work," he agreed. "Right now, I can tell you I'm feeling the strain. It keeps me jumping. But I have a lot of energy since I cleaned up my act." I asked about that—his drug and booze period. "That period was a long time ago," he said. "Every day I see now as an opportunity. I have a lust for living."

Much of that living centers on his son. "He's 5," said Johnson. "He has been living down here in Miami four or five months now, going to school. We spend a lot of time together. He's a delightful child, and he thinks I'm terrific, though I don't know why."

Johnson was married before. Will he try again? "No marriage plans right now," he said. "I hope to one day." He paused. Then, laughing, he said, "I'm in the market." I'll say. These days, the market seems to include his frequent date, Barbra Streisand!

BRADY'S BITS

Don Johnson was in New York at the National Boat Show, promoting a sleek and pricey new speedboat with his name on it. "That's a part of my life I enjoy," he said. "I'm not really a sailor, but a boat racer. I was in the offshore races, the world's championship off Key West, and did very well the first two legs—but the boat broke down on the third. I won the New Orleans-St. Louis race." When I had asked all my questions, I said I was going to go over my notes to see if I could read them. "Well," said Don, "call back if you can't. If you need anything. We're like the dry cleaner. We never close."

The Franklin Mint presents
VIVIEN LEIGH

as

SCARLETT O'HARA

in Gone with the Wind

Crafted in fine bisque porcelain, and attractively priced at $195.

There never has been a motion picture like Gone with the Wind. Or a heroine like Scarlett O'Hara. In Vivien Leigh's brilliant, Oscar-winning performance as Scarlett, she evoked the very essence of Scarlett's indomitable spirit ... her beauty ... her incomparable charm and vitality.

Now Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Turner Entertainment Company have commissioned the creation of an authentic porcelain collector doll portraying Vivien Leigh as Scarlett O'Hara. Like the cherished collector dolls of yesteryear, this enchanting doll is handcrafted with meticulous attention to each and every detail.

Her upper body is formed of fine bisque porcelain in one delicately sculptured piece, and her porcelain feet and legs are sculptured with the same meticulous care. Her unforgettable face is painted by hand.

'Vivien Leigh as Scarlett O'Hara' will bear the distinguishing marks of M-G-M and of The Franklin Mint, identifying it as an original—and exclusive—issue.

Please return your commissioning authorization by April 15th.

Tips on Tanning

There is a great deal of difference between sunlight and suntanning. Everybody needs sunlight, but a suntan is something everybody can do without—and should—because all forms of tanning, indoors or outdoors, expose a person to the aging and thickening of the skin, in addition to the possibility of skin cancer.

That's the word from Dr. Paul Jacobs, acting chairman of the Dermatology Department at the Stanford University Medical Center in California. Dr. Jacobs maintains that getting a tan for tan's sake is foolish. If you insist upon it, however, he suggests the following simple precautions: Wear a hat and protective clothing of some type, and apply a good suntan lotion or sunscreen with a Sun Protection Factor (SPF) of 15 or higher. He also advises that you avoid exposure to the sun between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m., on both sunny and cloudy days. That's when the sun in most climates causes the most damage, because its ultraviolet rays are most intense.

Dermatologists usually are quick to point out that a person's most tender, well-toned, resilient and unlined skin is found on one's backside. The skin there rarely is exposed to the sun's rays.

French TV

A colleague of ours, fresh from Paris duty, reports that next month France will get its third government-run TV channel. France already boasts six channels, including three that are privately operated and one pay-TV channel.

"French TV," he informs us, "is not too different from American TV. The battle for ratings-superiority is endless. The programs on the French commercial channels have become increasingly risqué, in some cases offering live striptease shows that go on until 1 a.m. Meanwhile, Canal Plus, the pay channel, screens—in the early hours of the morning, when the kids are asleep—hard-porn programs that leave very little to the imagination. Some of the French maintain, of course, that they are more cultured, intelligent and tolerant than we are."

Faraway Retreat

Looking for a place far from the madding crowd? Diane Cilento—the 54-year-old actress and former wife of film star Sean Connery, the first James Bond—has such a retreat near Cairnes, on the Queensland coast of Australia.

Known as a "lifestyle education farm," Cilento's retreat attracts contemplative people who avoid reporters and other privacy-invaders like the plague. One recent guest reportedly was Marlon Brando, 63, the colorful and introspective actor, who still boasts his own island in the South Pacific. Called Tetiaroa, Brando's isle is about 30 miles from Tahiti.

Incidentally, Brando, who hasn't starred in a movie for the last eight years, recently wrote an original screenplay titled Jericho. Before the year is out, he will play the lead in the film, about a retired CIA agent called back to the fray.

Doctor a New Saint

In case you missed the Vatican announcement some Sundays ago, Pope John Paul II canonized an Italian doctor who devoted much of his practice to treating the poor and terminally ill in Naples.

Dr. Giuseppe Moscati, who died in Naples in 1927 at age 46, was declared a saint in an outdoor Mass in St. Peter's Square attended by more than 80,000 people. The Pope described Moscati, who began his practice at 23, as a role model to be admired and imitated by everyone and by health workers in particular.

Open Wide, America.

©1988 Warner-Lambert Co.

Public enemy #1: plaque. Plaque has almost become a household word. It is certainly a household problem. But even though everyone is affected by it, few people really understand the seriousness of plaque or the importance of controlling it. Plaque is an almost invisible sticky film of bacteria that continuously forms on the teeth. Plaque germs are constantly multiplying and building up. Any dentist will tell you that controlling plaque is the single most important step to better oral health.

The victims of unchecked plaque: teeth and gums. Ignoring plaque is a risky proposition. If it is not removed and controlled, the results are sometimes merely unattractive, but oftentimes far more serious.

A serious result of unremoved plaque is gingivitis, the early, reversible stage of gum disease. As plaque builds, the bacteria produce by-products that can irritate the gums, causing redness, swelling and sometimes bleeding. These signs indicate there is a problem that should be looked at by a dentist for an accurate diagnosis. If left untreated, gingivitis can lead to periodontitis, an advanced stage of gum disease, which possibly can result in tooth loss. Periodontitis can be diagnosed and treated only by a dentist.

The unattractive problem, tartar, is a hard calcified material which can trap plaque. This appears as yellow-brownish stained accumulations on the teeth. While many anti-tartar toothpastes and mouthrinses can help prevent new tartar from forming, none can remove existing tartar. That can be safely removed only by a dentist or a dental hygienist. Unlike gingivitis, tartar above the gumline is basically a cosmetic problem.

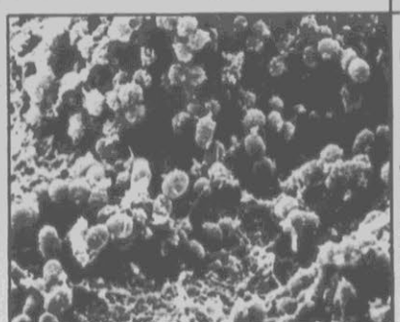
The best defense is a good offense. The best way to guard against gingivitis is to stop it before it starts. You should begin by brushing and flossing daily, and visiting your dentist regularly. In reality, however, many people do not clean all areas of their mouths thoroughly with these methods alone. That's why rinsing with Listerine® Antiseptic is important. Long-term clinical studies with hundreds of patients have proven that daily use of Listerine kills plaque bacteria, helping to prevent plaque build-up and gingivitis. Listerine has also been proven to reduce existing plaque and gingivitis.

The American Dental Association Council on Dental Therapeutics recently has granted the Seal of Acceptance to Listerine for helping to prevent and reduce both plaque above the gumline and gingivitis. Listerine is the only non-prescription mouthwash that has been accepted by the ADA for these conditions. So, wherever you see Listerine, you'll see this Seal of Acceptance.

ADA ACCEPTED American Dental Association

"Listerine Antiseptic has been shown to help prevent and reduce supragingival plaque accumulation and gingivitis when used in a conscientiously applied program of oral hygiene and regular professional care. It has not been shown to have a therapeutic effect on periodontitis."

COUNCIL ON DENTAL THERAPEUTICS AMERICAN DENTAL ASSOCIATION



Gingivitis is not inevitable. With certain preventive measures, it may be avoided. Remember to brush and floss daily and visit your dentist regularly. And for extra protection, rinse with an ADA accepted antiseptic mouthwash such as Listerine. It's as simple as that.

Oldest and youngest candidates: Bob and Elizabeth Dole (l), Albert and Tipper Gore on the bumpy campaign trail

Of the men who have served as President of the U.S., historians have rated five—Abraham Lincoln, George Washington, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Thomas Jefferson and Theodore Roosevelt—as "great." None of the five was in his 60s when he ascended to the Presidency: Lincoln was 52, Washington 57, FDR 51, Jefferson 57 and Theodore Roosevelt 42.

As we go to press, 12 candidates remain in this year's Presidential race. Of those dozen men, one is 39, three are in their 40s, six are in their 50s and two are in their 60s. Herewith a table of their birthdays and ages as of today:

Candidate & Party	Birthday	Age
Robert Dole (R.)	July 22, 1923	64
George Bush (R.)	June 12, 1924	63

Article II, Section 1 of the U.S. Constitution, which deals with qualifications for the Presidency, reads as follows: "No person except a natural born citizen...shall be eligible to the office of President; neither shall any person be eligible to that office who shall not have attained to the age of thirty-five years, and been fourteen years a resident within the United States."

Now It Can Be Told

A little while ago, we wrote a brief article about the Soviets turning to capitalism under the leadership of Communist Party chief MikhailGorbachev. We reported, as an example, that the first pay toilet in Moscow recently had been installed on Prospect Marx (Marx Avenue), not far from Red Square. What we unforgivably omitted from the report—according to a few dozen irate readers, who wrote demanding to know—is just how much it costs to use the facilities. The answer, according to a recent visitor: 10 kopeks, or about 3 cents.

'The Wonder Years': Low-Concept Angst

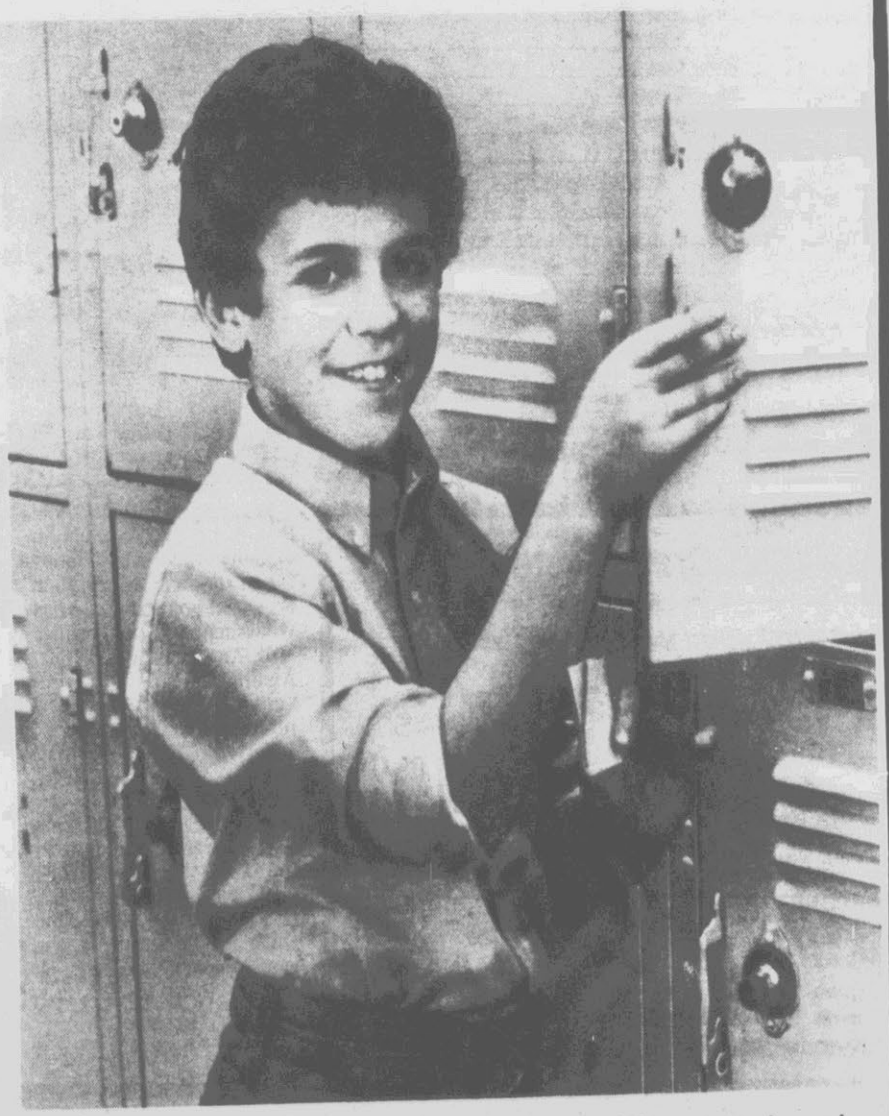
By Evan Levine

Television's view of the child as protagonist has ranged from the endlessly adorable ("Family Affair") to the supposedly typical ("Leave it to Beaver") to the winsomely precocious ("The Courtship of Eddie's Father"). Adult views of children have ranged from the patronizing to the sympathetic. But no show has fused the adult view with that of the child's. Now, ABC's "The Wonder Years," debuting Tuesday, March 15, attempts to explore the inner life of an adolescent by combining his views with those of his adult self; an ironic voice-over gives the show its definition.

The series, set in 1968, was created by Neal Marlens and Carol Black, who were previously known as a team for writing the film "Soul Man." "The Wonder Years" looks at the adolescent angst of Kevin Arnold (Fred Savage), a suburbanite with such typical trappings as a malevolent older brother (Jason Hervey), a dizzy older sister (Olivia Dabo), a stay-at-home mom (Alley Mills) and an overworked dad (Dan Lauria). While the elements are not new, the commentary that contradicts the action because of the adult view and the on-target writing are.

"The format is different," admits Marlens, who is married to Black. "The whole idea of an accurate depiction of kids told in this format is new." Kevin's first kiss, choosing an outfit for the first day of school and appropriate dinner conversation ("Don't upset your father," Mom says, while Karen, Kevin's sister, takes that moment to announce, I'm getting birth control pills"), ring especially true.

One of the duo's most pressing reasons for creating the series was to dispel the myth of the suburbanite as uninformed drudge. "This covers our experiences," says Black. "Everything you see — from waiting to gauge dad's mood when he comes home, to the whole climate of doom. There were a lot of predictions of doom. Everyone thought that by 1988, we'd be living in glass houses that were going to blow up."



In ABC's "The Wonder Years," Fred Savage stars as an adolescent growing up in the late '60s. The series, which uses a voice-over narration of the adult Kevin looking back, airs Tuesday, March 15.

The show is at its best when the '60s become a backdrop, and the everyday nuances of Kevin's life shine through. "It's very low-concept," admits Marlens, who also created ABC's "Growing Pains." "There are no talking horses or anything."

And what do the two want from the series? For Black, it's favorable notices from her hometown paper, The Washington Post. "They hate whatever I write," she says. "All I want is not to be trashed by them."

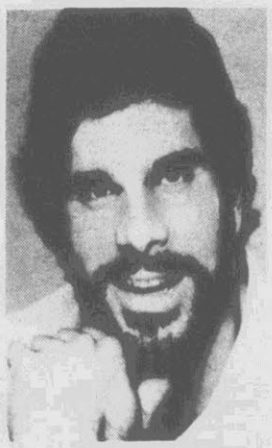
ASK ME ABOUT TV

Did those muscles precede the movie for 'Hercules'?

By Toni D'Amato

I recently saw Lou Ferrigno in "Hercules" and I was wondering if he built himself up for the movie or if he is a professional weight lifter. – C.P., Saskatchewan, Canada.



Lou Ferrigno

Ferrigno, who hails from Brooklyn, N.Y., is a champion bodybuilder whose interest in the field began when he was a youngster. He has won such titles as Teenage Mr. America (1971), Mr. America (1973), Mr. Universe (1973 and '74) and Mr. International (1974).

Ferrigno played football with the Toronto Argonauts, then moved to Los Angeles where he began his acting career with a part in the film "Pumping Iron" (1977). From 1978 to 1982, he played the Incredible Hulk in the series of the same name. In 1983 he starred in the short-lived "Trauma Center."

One of Ferrigno's greatest accomplishments was overcoming hearing and speech impediments from which he had suffered since childhood. Ferrigno has written a book about bodybuilders and his family owns a gym in New York.

I remember Nancy Sinatra when she first sang the song "The Last of the Secret Agents," but it doesn't seem that long ago. My husband says she's about 50. He recalls a movie she made called "Ghost in the Invisible Bikini," and thinks it's about 20 years old. Is this true? – A.F., Grants Pass, Ore.

Born on June 8, 1940, Nancy will be 48 this year. The old beach party film you mentioned was released in 1966, 22 years ago.

Please settle an argument. Is Frank Lovejoy alive? – J.S., Allentown, Pa.

Lovejoy, a radio actor and film star of the '40s and '50s, died in 1962 at the age of 50. Fans will remember his work in the film "Black Bart" (1948), "The Gunfighter" (1950) and "Force of Arms" (1951). He was also a familiar player on TV, starring in the series "Man Against Crime" (1956) and "Meet McGraw" (1957-'59).

(Do you have a question about a celebrity? Write Toni D'Amato at 200 Park Ave., Room 602, New York, NY 10166. Questions cannot be answered personally, but those of general interest will be answered in future columns.)

Michele Will Tell

Dear Michele: I recently spotted William Bendix on a late movie. No one seems to know much about him. When and where was he born? Any other information you can provide would be helpful. — T. WADE, JERSEYVILLE, ILL.

William Bendix, the star of TV's "Life of Riley" (1953-58), was born Jan. 14, 1906, in New York City. His father was Max Bendix, a concert violinist and conductor of the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra. Before he became an actor, William Bendix was a minor-league baseball player and Newark, N.J., grocery store manager. He died Dec. 14, 1964, at age 58.

Dear Michele: Could you please tell me if one of the Smothers Brothers died? If so, which one, when and how? — JACKIE YOUNT, ROSAMOND, CALIF.

Both Tom and Dick Smothers are alive and well, and recently hosted their "20th Anniversary Reunion" special on CBS. The special proved moderately popular and the brothers will return with six one-hour variety specials, beginning Wednesday, March 23. Time heals all wounds, since it was CBS which fired the Smothers in 1969, after frequent battles over content of their show.

Dear Michele: What's up with Clint Eastwood? After his film "Heartbreak Ridge," it seems as if he has devoted all of his time to being a mayor. — STEPHEN WELCH, LEVITTOWN, PENN.

Eastwood, the mayor of Carmel, Calif., recently announced he would not seek a second term. The 57-year-old Eastwood told reporters he wanted to spend more time with his teenage children (son Kyle, 19, and daughter Alison, 15). Eastwood's children live in the Carmel area with his ex-wife, Maggie. "I've really enjoyed this, but I have to take care of the personal stuff first," he said. "If you miss time with your family, you wonder if it's retrievable time. Sometimes it isn't." Although he would not rule out a return to the political arena in the future, Eastwood said he isn't interested right now.

Dear Michele: Recently I saw the "Pink Panther" movie where Inspector Clouseau disappeared. I understand that Peter Sellers died during filming of the movie. Could you tell us more about this, and list the films of the "Pink Panther" series? — ISMAEL CHAPA, TIERRA BLANCA MISSION, TEXAS

Dear Michele: Are Doris Day and the late singer Vera-Ellen related? — FRANCIS F. THOMPSON, ARLINGTON, VA.

There is no relationship between this pair that I've been able to turn up.

Please address questions to Michele Will Tell, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 2315, Grand Central Station, New York, NY 10163. Because of the volume of mail received, personal replies cannot be sent.

THE Rook Look AT GARMENT CARE

DICKIE ROOK
A leather garment is usually a major investment. It's important to choose it with care and care for it wisely.
...
In selecting a leather garment, look for careful match of colors and textures. Avoid a too snug fit. Hides are stretched during tanning and some relaxation shrinkage can be expected during use. Read and save any accompanying care information.
...
Proper care begins at home. Frequent brushing with a soft brush will help remove surface soil from suede. Smooth leathers can be carefully wiped with a damp cloth to remove surface soil.
...
It's wise to wear a scarf to protect the collar from perspiration and body oils. If the item gets wet, allow it to air dry. Never expose it to direct heat. Store it in a cool, ventilated area.
...
When having your leather garment cleaned, bring in all matching pieces for cleaning at the same time. Give your cleaner the care information that came with the garment.
...
Tell your cleaner about any unusual problem and ask whether your cleaner anticipates any problems with cleaning your garment. Don't be surprised if you're asked to sign a consent form before cleaning.
...
More useful hints about cleaning suede and leather can be found in a free International Fabricare Institute brochure: "Consumer Care of Leather and Suede," available from many fine member drycleaners.

We repair and alter garments. God repairs and alters lives.

TV Chatter

If "Frank's Place" chef Big Arthur seems so menacing, it's a testament to Tony Burton's acting talent. Other cast members say that between takes Burton is a genuine softie. The 50-year-old actor, best known before "Frank's Place" for playing Sylvester Stallone's trainer in the "Rocky" films, attributes his peace of mind to a religious conversion he experienced five years ago. "I went to a prayer meeting and I was born again. I just broke down and came apart," he says. "I was free in a way that I can't explain. I just fell down on the floor and repented. I started feeling very sorry for my whole life." Burton, a former prizefighter, reveals that he had a lot to feel sorry for. After breaking his eardrum in a boxing match, the out-of-work Burton turned to crime and ended up serving three-and-a-half years in a California prison for robbery. Prison turned out to be a positive experience, however. He began taking acting classes there, and after his release he found guest-starring roles on TV series until "Rocky" came along. "My life prepares me for my life," Burton says. "If I hadn't been to prison I wouldn't be an actor. And half the roles I played have been a prisoner. If I hadn't been a boxer, I never would have gotten the 'Rocky' role."

You may remember Fred Savage as the sick little boy whose grandfather (Peter Falk) reads him an off-the-wall fairy tale in the film "The Princess Bride." Now, the 11-year-old actor stars in his own series, ABC's "The Wonder Years," which premieres March 15. The series details the seriocomic experiences of a pre-teen growing up in suburbia during 1968.

Fred can't decide which decade he prefers. "The '80s are great because they have all this modern high-tech stuff and video games," he says. "But the '60s are really fun because of the music. The Beatles are my favorite group." Still, Fred doesn't think there is that much difference between the two periods. "Kids are pretty much the same today as then — except for the toys."

Twenty-eight years after they teamed in Stanley Kubrick's film classic "Spartacus," Kirk Douglas and Jean Simmons will be reunited in NBC's new version of "Inherit the Wind" (airing March 20). In this latest adaptation of the drama based on the 1925 "Monkey trial," Douglas plays prosecuting attorney Matthew Harrison Brady and Simmons plays his wife, Lucy. At Douglas's insistence, the role of Lucy was enlarged from the 1955 stage and 1960 movie versions. "They added gentle scenes with Kirk that weren't in the play," says Simmons. "Kirk felt it was important to show another side of Brady." Lucy also shows up in the courtroom scenes, even though her presence is seen primarily through reaction shots. But Simmons isn't complaining about the extra hours, sitting there without any lines. "I was delighted to be on the set all the time," she says. "I had a front-row center seat to catch all the action."

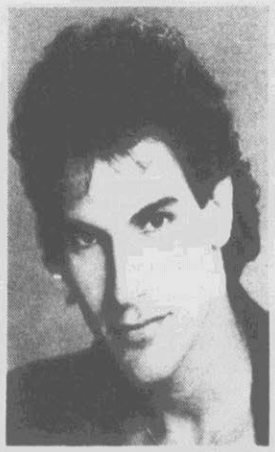
Katherine Helmond's early years in no way prepared her for her role as the sex-obsessed Mona on "Who's the Boss?" "I was so shy I was boring," she says. "I was also pretty homely." ... Here's Carol Burnett on one of her compulsions: "Sometimes I do dishes at friends' houses. I just like to clean. I wish I had stock in Windex."

SOAP OPERA WEEK

Confusion over which actor is Elizabeth Taylor's son

By Kimberly Redmond

I heard a rumor that Don Diamont (Brad Carlton on "The Young and the Restless") is the son of Elizabeth Taylor. Is that true? – M.B., Easton, Pa.



Don Diamont

Diamont is not Elizabeth Taylor's son. Michael Wilding, who portrays Jackson Freemont on "Guiding Light," is Taylor's son.

Justin Deas, who portrays Keith Timmons on "Santa Barbara" is an excellent actor, but it drives me crazy that the show doesn't make him get a haircut and a shampoo. He always looks as if he hasn't tended to his personal grooming in weeks! – C.B., Port Chester, N.Y.

It's obvious from the story line that Keith is supposed to be on the scuzzy side, but we agree with you that Deas does perhaps carry his character's image a bit too far. If you want to complain to "SB," you can write to the show c/o NBC-TV, 3000 W. Alameda Avenue, Burbank, CA 91523.

I'd like to know the name of the actor who played Keith Spotted Eagle on "As the World Turns" when Lily Walsh (Martha Byrne) and Holden Snyder (Jon Hensley) were living in Montana. – L.E., Hollister, N.C.

The role was portrayed by Paul Lemos, who had never appeared in a daytime soap before "ATWT."

Has Joanna Going, who portrays Lisa Grady on "Another World," appeared on another soap? She looks so familiar. – K.C., Dallas, Texas.

Joanna Going

This 'SNL' star steps out with a middling HBO special

By Connie Passalacqua

What do Tom Grundig, William Hurt's character in "Broadcast News," and Dennis Miller, who does "Weekend Update" on "Saturday Night Live," have in common?

Dennis Miller

Both are news "anchormen." Both know how to romance the camera and have a certain way delivering lines. We're not supposed to notice this (yeah, right) but both are great looking. But do either of them have anything inside their pretty little heads?

Grundig knows he doesn't, and spends most of the movie learning to compensate. In his HBO special, "On Location: Mr. Miller Goes to Washington," airing March 16, Dennis Miller steps out from behind the carefully scripted "SNL" spot to show us his smarts in his stand-up comedy.

Before Miller came to "SNL," he was a comedy-club regular; he still warms the studio audience with his routine before the taping of each week's show.

In the special, Miller wears a black suit that must have cost at least $1000. Before you think we're really getting carried away with Miller's looks, consider this: The comedy world is mostly filled with guys like Rodney Dangerfield, Bob Goldthwait and Sam Kinison.

Miller is pleasant, and certainly his strongest point is how he relates to the audience. His material, though, has no one theme. He bounces from berating Adrian Zmed's dancing ability to the unsophistication of the phasers on "Star Trek." Of course, since this is HBO, he throws in some profanity. His expensive suit seems really incongruous towards the end, when he goes into compulsory stand-up genital jokes. Oh, Dennis, say this part of the show isn't so.

Miller is funny in a pleasant, night-at-the-comedy-club kind of way, not really anything more. Before Miller takes off for his club stint, he's shown consulting with Edwin Newman in a hotel bar as to whether an anchorman should lower himself to go back to standup. Ed says yes. We say yeah, if you like to do it, but we'd also advise Miller that he could better spend his time taking acting lessons. Somehow, Miller has more to bring to the movies than, say, Rodney, Bob or Sam.

To Heal a Nation

Eric Roberts, who was nominated for an Oscar for his performance in "Runaway Train," will play Vietnam veteran Jan Scruggs in "To Heal a Nation," an NBC movie about the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington, D.C. Scruggs headed the Vietnam Veterans' Memorial Fund, an organization that helped bring about the construction of the monument. The movie, which also stars Glynnis O'Connor, Scott Paulin and Laurence Luckinbill, will air in May.

Education of Leda

Raquel Welch plays a cocktail waitress who becomes an activist in "The Education of Leda Beth Vincent," an NBC movie that recently completed filming in Los Angeles. Vincent, an uneducated mother from a small town, urges the local school board to fire an anti-Semitic history teacher (Ronny Cox), straining her relationship with her teenage daughter (Christa Denton). The movie will air next season.

'Chasing Rainbows' Is Just A High-Tech Bore

By Bob Remington

There was a line in last week's opening episode of "Chasing Rainbows" in which Booth Savage, as small-time Montreal gangster Benny Rose, looked around at his card-playing cohorts and said: "This city is positively inspiring."

Too bad the same can't be said about "Chasing Rainbows," CBC's $10.5 million, 14-hour high-definition-TV opus. Although an impressive technical and visual achievement, with meticulous attention to detail, the snail's-pace story is unfailingly dull.

High definition television (HDTV) may be on the leading edge of TV technology, but as entertainment, "Chasing Rainbows" is simply a yawn.

HDTV is a Japanese-developed technology that proponents say will revolutionize television. According to "Chasing Rainbows" executive producer Mark Blandford, HDTV pictures are more than twice as sharp, and the sound quality is equal to that of compact discs.

These advances are accomplished through an increase in the number of horizontal scanning lines and the number of frames per second that are used to create the images on a TV screen. The currentNorth American standard is 525 lines and 30 frames per second, while HDTV uses 1,125 lines and 60 frames per second. To get the full effect requires an HDTV set, which isn't yet on the market. Viewers who have been tuned to the series on their regular "low definition" sets have probably noticed improved clarity of picture, but the results are still not as good as an HDTV set would provide.

This Week, Countdown To Final Four Begins

By Marty Linehan

The late sportswriter Red Smith didn't like basketball. Smith once said that if the NBA championship games were played in his back yard, he'd pull down the shades.

Well, if Red were still around, he would have had to hibernate for the next three weeks, because basketball is just about all the networks will be offering.

* On Sunday, March 13, the three networks have conference championship games. CBS has the Big East championship game; NBC will carry the title game of the Atlantic Coast Conference; and ABC presents the final game of the Southeast Conference. After the SEC game, ABC will televise the championship game of either the Pac 10 or Big 8. The winners will be guaranteed a spot in the NCAA Basketball Championship Tournament, which leads to the Final Four. For those really interested in the tournament, CBS presents a half-hour show on the selection of teams for the tournament at 5:30 p.m. (ET).

* Also on March 13, so the pros won't be left out, CBS airs the Boston Celtics-Atlanta Hawks NBA game from the Boston Garden. Although the Hawks feature the all-around play of Dominique Wilkins, the Celtics will have Larry Bird and company, and they are playing in Boston. In the NBA it's almost illegal to lose on your home court.

* A Honda may be a small imported automobile elsewhere, but in Coral Gables, Fla., on March 13, it's a golf tournament. The pros play the final round of the Honda Classic over the Eagle Tracecourse on NBC.

* On Thursday, March 17, it's back to basketball. CBS shows a first-round game of the West regional of the NCAA championships from Salt Lake City, and ESPN will present five first-round games.

* On Friday, March 18, CBS offers another first-round game of the West region, and on Saturday, March 19, there will be an NCAA second-round triple-header on CBS.

* For variety, on Saturday, March 19, ABC and the Professional Bowlers Association break the spell by showing the $140,000 King Louie Open from Overland Park, Kan.

* And cable's The Nashville Network starts the 47th Annual Daytona Cycle Week from Daytona Beach, Fla., on March 13. All that road racing, supercross and dirt-track racing is as far from basketball as you can get. Red Smith would be pleased.

Teen Dance Shows Are Coming Back On Cable

By Andrew J. Edelstein

John Waters' new movie "Hairspray," which centers on a cultlike teen dance show in Baltimore in the early '60s, may seem like a quaint reminder of the days when every major city had such ashow.

But, thanks to cable TV, those days of the daily teen-dance show are long from gone — only the hairstyles and clothing have changed. In their own way, the garb and behavior of the audiences on USA Newtork's "Dance Party USA" and MTV's "Club MTV" are as amusing as that portrayed in "Hairspray." Will some 21st-century John Waters some day make a movie of the scene and call it "Mousse"?

"Dance Party USA" is hosted by a heartthrob named Andy Gury, who presides over a group of chirpy, good-looking teens. The show even has a star system of regulars, not unlike the "council" that "Hairspray" depicted. One regular's gimmick is that he never takes his sunglasses off. He answers questions from fans about who his favorite movie star is and whether he'll go to acting school.

And the show wants to make it clear that it is no festering ground for juvenile delinquency. Nosiree, these kids all talk about the jobs they have when the weekend begins!

The music may be techno-pop and funk, but the dancing looks like something out of "Shindig." "Dance Party USA" also sponsors a contest in which the winning high school gets a free concert from a rock star (this year's prize is a show from the Shelley Fabares of 1988, Miss Debby Gibson).

Rx Free Poison Prevention chart from your Eckerd Pharmacist

With National Poison Prevention Week in mind, your Eckerd Pharmacist reminds you to poison-proof your home:

- Make sure all household cleaning products are in their original containers or properly labeled, have child-resistant caps and are locked out of reach.
- Store all medicine in the original container with the label.

Remember, any medicine can poison if used improperly. Come in and ask your Eckerd Pharmacist for a free chart of first aid remedies for poisonings and a telephone sticker for emergency phone numbers.

CHRIS EVERT made a successful return to Tampa Bay, capturing the 1987 ECKERD TENNIS OPEN CHAMPIONSHIP, her second title in the event's 11 year history. The 1988 crown is up for grabs, when the ECKERD TENNIS OPEN returns to BARDMOOR COUNTRY CLUB, MARCH 28-APRIL 3. The best in women's professional tennis comes back to the Bay Area for Springtime competition and with the prize money raised to $200,000, the 1988 ECKERD TENNIS OPEN promises to be the best ever.

BILLIE JEAN KING, EVONNE GOOLAGONG CAWLEY, TRACY AUSTIN, CHRIS EVERT, MARTINA NAVRATILOVA, and GABRIELA SABATINI are just a few of the stars who have competed in this prestigious event.

The ECKERD DRUG COMPANY, along with Presenting Sponsor BASF SYSTEM CORP., combine to bring to the Florida sports audience the 12th year of the state's oldest professional tennis tournament.

• FISH NET! There are fish to be caught in this pool of letters. Moving across or down (but not diagonally), letter to letter, see how many fish you can land.

S	O	H	A	L	I	B
A	L	M	D	M	H	U
R	E	O	D	A	A	T
D	I	N	O	C	K	E
A	N	E	R	O	D	R
W	H	I	R	I	N	E
P	A	T	I	N	G	L

BIRTHDAY PUZZLER!

"By the way, Terence," said the leprechaun's chum, "what day of the month were you born, and how old are you?"

"If," said Terence, "you add together the numbers of the days of March that precede my birthday, you'll discover they total one-third of the total of the numbers of the days of March that follow it. As for how old I am, a man's age is nobody's business but his own."

• WORD MAGIC! Start with O; add a letter to make a preposition. Add another for a number. Add another, and alakazam — it's gone! Can you explain?
