Noriega's Troops Smash Apparent Coup Effort

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Soldiers loyal to Panama's military strongman, Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, apparently put down an attempt to take over his headquarters and force him from power today.

Residents of the area near the Panama Defense Forces headquarters said they heard heavy shooting inside the walled compound starting at about 8:15 a.m. and continuing for at least half an hour.

"They were kisses," Noreiga said in response to reporters' questions about the gunshots.

About an hour after the firing ended, Noriega appeared at the top of a stairway on one side of the headquarters building, along with members of his high command.

To reporters' shouted questions, the general responded: "What happened is that you are visiting us here."

A revolt in the military would be a serious blow to Noriega, who heads the nation's 15,000-member Defense Forces and is considered to be the real power behind Panama's civilian government.

Washington has been exerting pressure to drive him from power. President Reagan said Tuesday the United States wants him "out of there."

Earlier today, the Spanish news agency EFE reported that a group of army captains and majors, with the backing of the Air Force, took over the military barracks. EFE quoted unidentified military sources.

Two Associated Press reporters and a photographer were stopped by soldiers as they approached the headquarters, forced from their car and marched into the compound at gunpoint.

As they were being held inside, they saw at least one officer with his hands behind his head being taken into a barracks behind the headquarters building. But a captain told them the apparent prisoner was simply taking part "in a simulated exercise."

The captain, who declined to identify himself and wore no name tag, said units at the headquarters periodically conduct training exercises aimed at halting coup attempts.

"Everything is normal," he said.

Hundreds of soldiers in battle gear surrounded the headquarters, in one of the older sections of Panama City. Residents were kept at least a block away from the compound.

Reports said the coup attempt was led by the 3rd Infantry Company of the 5th Battallon from Chiriqui Province, bordering Panama's frontier with Costa Rican. The light infantry company is known as the "Diablos Rojos," or Red Devils.

PCMH Wants Approval Of 140 Additional Beds

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Memorial Hospital trustees voted Tuesday night to begin work toward the construction of 140 new beds, the renovation of 100 beds and the addition of support services for the beds.

A financial feasibility study and preliminary consultation with architects was approved. The project is expected to cost "not more than $50 million." Work is under way to convince state facilities services agencies that these beds are needed.

The beds are needed to relieve congestion at the hospital, PCMH Vice President Dave McRae said. He said certificate of need applications will be developed and material from long-range studies conducted by Hamilton and Associate will be cited.

McRae reported that the hospital was "busting at the seams" Tuesday night, with some patients being housed in the ambulatory surgery unit temporarily and with people slated for elective surgery being "bumped" in favor of people needing emergency surgery.

As an illustration of the growing use of the hospital by residents of the entire eastern region, he said use of the heart catherization lab of the hospital has doubled in the past year.

During the meeting, Robert "Bob" Harrington was elected chairman of the board and began presiding. Elected to serve with him were William "Bill" Flowers, vice chairman; Kathryn Lewis, secretary; David Speir, treasurer; Charles Joyner, assistant treasurer, and Dr. E.C. Land, Arlee Griffin, Robert Spivey and Dr. H.W. Gooding, executive committee members.

New board members were welcomed. They are Charles H. Gaskins, Dr. James D. Carter, Kelly Barnhill

Zoning Panel Will Study Use Policy

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Planning and Zoning Commission unanimously agreed at Tuesday's monthly meeting at City Hall to follow City Council's request to re-examine special and permitted uses in Greenville's medical district and consider the possiblility of eliminating special uses in the MD-1 and Md-2 (medical) zoning classifications.

The commission also asked staff members of the Greenville Planning Department to bring any deficiencies in the zoning classifications to the commission's attention for review.

The unanimous decision was agreed upon following a lengthy discussion by commission members on whether to study the plan as requested for a period of 30 days or to refer the Medical District Plan as it currently exists back to the council without the requested review.

"It would seem to me the response of this commission would be to be one of two," said commission member Burney Warren.

"One, that we need to study it for another 30 days, and I'm not sure I understand why we would need to do

Pitt Man Faces Tax Indictments

Walter Levon Miles, 49, of Bell Arthur surrendered to authorities in Greenville Tuesday after a Pitt County grand jury earlier returned true bills of indictment charging him with nine counts of embezzling state property.

Dewey Sanders, supervisory special agent with the N.C. Department of Revenue, said Miles was charged with five counts of aiding and abetting National Roofing and Siding Inc. to embezzle $21,544 in state income taxes withheld from employee wages.

The indictments state that from Oct. 1, 1980, through Feb. 1, 1982, Miles, as president of National Roofing and Siding, was the responsible corporate officer under the law due to remit the withheld taxes to the revenue department.

Four other indictments against Miles state that from April 1985 through October 1985, and from January 1986 to October 1986, Miles, as president of National Contractors of Greenville Inc., aided and abetted that corporation to embezzle $2,311 in withheld income taxes.

Sanders said that in addition to the

Simon Opens Field With Illinois Victory

CHICAGO (AP) — The Democrats are searching anew for a presidential front-runner after the home-state revival of Sen. Paul Simon, who declared today he has "as good a shot as anybody" after his victory over Jesse Jackson in the Illinois primary. George Bush won easily in the Republican contest, although he still had to contend with a battered but dogged Bob Dole.

The candidates went on spring break today after a grueling month that featured 20-odd primaries and caucuses in both parties.

"This is the state, it will be remembered, which locked it up for George Bush," Gov. James Thompson said after Illinois shattered Dole's comeback bid and brought Bush two-thirds of the way to a GOP nominating majority.

The Democrats had no luxury to talk of locking up anything. The race for a nominating majority of delegates was a dead heat between Jackson and Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis with Kansas and Michigan next up on the calendar.

However, Dukakis was expecting to pick up about 100 uncounted delegates from caucuses already held in Minnesota, Texas and Washington state.

"Now we move on to Michigan," said Dukakis, "where there are no favorite sons. The field is wide open."

Jackson, in an interview on NBC-TV today, congratulated Simon on his victory but in almost the same breath seemed to dismiss it as Illinois voters paying "respects to a sitting senator" who had focused on his home state while Jackson was competing in the Super Tuesday states.

Simon, on the other hand, said on ABC-TV that his Illinois win showed he is in the thick of a battle that will go all the way to the Democratic National Convention this summer.

"I don't know who out there will emerge, but I think Paul Simon has as good a shot as anyone," he said.

Simon said in several interviews that his relative lack of campaign money wasn't a big problem, though he concluded his appearance on CBS-TV by saying with a smile, "Any of your viewers who want to send in a contribution, I'll be happy to accept it."

Pitt's Bus Drivers Can Stay On Job

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

The announcement Tuesday that 17-year-old school bus drivers can remain on the job in North Carolina until June 15 was timely news for D.H. Conley's assistant principal, Claude Kennedy.

"I'm elated," said Kennedy, who is also the bus supervisor at Conley. "All these kids that are 17 years old I haven't had any problems with."

The U.S. Labor Department agreed to allow 17-year-old drivers to stay on the job on the condition that Gov. Jim Martin ask the General Assembly for $24 million to raise bus driver salaries across the state. The state will use the higher pay to attract adult drivers.

All counties will be allowed to use 17-year-old drivers who will turn 18

Consultants Assist City's Staff

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Staff writers Cherie Evans, Carol Tyer, Greg Laudick and Jerry Raynor contributed to research for this article.

This is the last article in a series exploring the amount of money spent on consulting fees by public entities in Pitt County since 1985.

The city of Greenville over the past 2½ years has paid $90,179 to consultants to become the third largest user of outside expertise in the county since the beginning of the 1985-86 fiscal year.

"Sometimes you use consultants because of a limited staff," according to City Manager Greg Knowles. "You have to look at your basic staff makeup and say, 'Can my staff do this?' If the answer is yes, but it's too long into the future when it will be accomplished, you may go for a consultant.

"If you say, 'No, my staff can't do this because it's too technical,' you would use a firm, a consultant, whatever you want to call it ... an outside agency to perform that particular function. It would be project-specific with a specific goal in mind."

Knowles said, "Consultants come in and have a specific outline of what they're going to do, unlike staff, who does this today and that tomorrow. They do a specific technical project that is a question of what you want them to do.

"The city would make the policy; they would execute as a consultant. They don't set policy; they take the policy directives and from that, perform their particular project, return that to the city to see if that complies with the policies and outlines that are established by the staff and council," Knowles said.

"Sometimes cities use consultants because it's better to have somebody else tell them what to do, than for them to say it themselves," Knowles suggested. "If there is a controversial issue, some cities will use an outside consultant to come in and tell them this is the way you should do it; relying on their professional expertise and then let them take the heat from the audience."

And, "Sometimes you use a consultant when there is more than one entity involved. Consultants can work differences out between two different, competing agencies and come up with a standardized and agreed upon solution.

"Sometimes you use a consultant because you flat out need someone to come in and give you some more ideas. You have a problem and you don't know; it's not intuitively obvious what you should do. You need someone to come in and say, 'Well, here's some ideas, why don't you look at these things?'

"They provide alternatives and help you delve into the basics as to why the problem is there in the first place. They'll help you find the problem that you are trying to solve. They'll go in and check the problem out, do a problem analysis, then pro-

Zoning Panel Supporting Residential-Area Banking

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission unanimously approved the recommendation of two zoning-related requests by the Greenville Planning and Development Department at its monthly meeting Tuesday at City Hall.

Recommended for approval is an amendment to Section 32-61 of the Zoning Ordinance which would allow banks and savings and loan institutions within the CN (neighborhood commercial) zoning district.

Currently banks and savings and loan institutions are permitted in every commercial zoning district except CN.

"I think if I had property close to a neighborhood commercial area, I think a bank or a savings and loan is the type of business that would be much more preferable to many of the other things in that district," said Commission Chairman Wallace Wooles.

"That seems to be what people want and it's not an offensive industry ... they locate in nice buildings," added commission member Burney Warren.

The commission also recommended approval of an amendment to Section 32-74.6 of the Zoning Ordinance by reducing the minimum side yard setback for duplex (single family attached) from 16 feet to 12 feet, in Planned Unit Developments.

The commission also unanimously approved recommending a request by Greenville Properties to annex a 128.15-acre subdivision located on Stantonsburg Road approximately two miles from Pitt Memorial Hospital. The subdivision, West Pointe, is the city's first approved planned unit development.

In other action Tuesday, the commission considered three rezoning requests.

Unanimously approved was a request by Charlie Speight to rezone a .27-acre tract located off the northwest intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Alexander Circle from R-9 (medium density residential) to O&I (office and institutional).

Three residents of the area spoke in opposition to the request, citing such concerns as the potential for an increase in traffic accidents, the safety of children in the area, and the possible devaluation of residential property values. A representative for Speight said O&I zoning would provide a desirable buffer to the residential area from the highway developments that exist along Greenville Boulevard.

The commission also unanimously approved recommendation of a request by Virginia Nichols to rezone 2.07 acres located off the Evans Street Extension and west of the Roy H. Park Broadcasting Co. property from RA-20 (residential agricultural) to O&I.

The commission unanimously denied recommendation of a request by Robert Smith to rezone 11.27 acres east of North Green Street and south of Farmer's Street from RA-20 to I (industrial).

Smith told commission members he needed the area rezoned to expand recycling operations. Several residents spoke in opposition to the request, saying the expansion of the salvage yard was inappropriate for the area and conflicted with attempts to beautify the Green Street neighborhood.

Commission member Ric Miller, who owns property near the requested zoning site, spoke in opposition to the request and excused himself from voting on the matter due to a conflict of interest.

In other matters, the commission unanimously approved two subdivisions.

Unanimously approved was the preliminary plat of Cypress Glen Villas Phase II, located east of the proposed Brownlea Drive and north of Fourth Street. The plat involves 66 duplex units and 550 lineal feet of public street on a 20.36 acre tract.

In addition, the preliminary plat of Treetops Section VI, located on Hidden Branches Close, and south of White Road was also approved. The plat involves five buildings with four townhouse units in each building.

The commission also unanimously approved recommending a request by Garnett B. Roberts to annex .49 acres located at 716 Mumford Road, and approved a request by the Greenville Planning Office to change the street name of Cheshire Drive to Guilder Lane. Cheshire Dive is located in the Bedford Subdivision Section 3.

Lynne James, a representative from Greenville Planning and Development, presented to the commission a detailed description of the Airport Land Use Plan. The commission then voted unanimously to recommended to City Council that the plan be adopted as is currently proposed and that implementation procedures be considered.

A request by Christine McCaskill to rezone a 48.7-acre tract located north of N.C. 33 and east of Country Squire Estates from RA-20 to R6-MH (mobile homes) was withdrawn from the agenda. Approximately 15 people had come to City Hall regarding the matter.

The decision on whether to approve the revised preliminary plat of South Hall, located west of the Evans Street Extension and north of White Road and involving 75 single-family lots on a 76.9-acre tract, was continued until the commission's April 19 meeting.

Also continued for the next meeting was a discussion of historic districts within the city.

Board Of Health

The Pitt County Board of Health will hold its regular meeting on Thursday at 7 p.m. in the conference room of the Pitt County Health Department.

New Term On Board

The manager of the Pitt & Greene Electric Membership Corp. in Farmville has been re-elected to the board of directors of Tarheel Electric Membership Association, the central purchasing and materials supply operation serving the state's membership corporations.

Mark A. Suggs of Farmville was elected to a three-year term during the 1988 annual meeting of North Carolina's statewide Electric Membership Corp. in Raleigh. He was elected to the board last year to fill a vacancy.

Suggs, who has been manager of Pitt & Greene EMC since 1983, also serves on the boards of North Carolina Electric Membership Corp. and the North Carolina Association of Electric Cooperatives.

A director of the Pitt & Greene agency was also cited during the meeting for his years of service to the rural electric program. Lloyd Gay of Fountain was presented a meritorious service award honoring him for 25 years of service.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

ECU Needs To Act On Parking Needs

East Carolina University's trustees and leaders should take firm action supporting long-range solutions to East Carolina University's parking problems.

Instead of reinforcing its endorsement of additional parking spaces — a move which represents only a short-term approach to the issue — it's time the board pledged its support of long-term answers. That support should include the feasibilty of a parking deck.

The shortage of parking for ECU students, faculty and campus guests is a crisis that will only worsen as the university grows. Not only do figures illustrate the crunch — 12,619 vehicles for 5,682 parking spaces registered for fall semester 1987 — but the abundance of double parked and illegally parked vehicles on and near campus make this crisis a visible problem.

Furthermore, it is a dilemma reaching beyond university boundaries. Businesses and neighborhoods near ECU bear the brunt of this overflow, a fact which creates conflict between the university and the community.

Clearly, parking is a problem which must be faced by ECU's leaders, and a parking deck is the most effective means of addressing the issue. Officials must face several realities when considering this expensive alternative.

First, the amount of land available for ECU's expansion is limited. Existing green spaces should be preserved and prime building sites reserved for instructional needs.

Second, a parking deck, although expensive, is the most cost-efficient means of providing additional parking. A deck is the only feasible approach for a growing campus where there is little room for ground parking.

Finally, a deck is the only alternative capable of providing a long-term solution to the University's vehicle overflow. Any other approach would amount to applying a Band-Aid.

ECU Chancellor Richard Eakin was correct to point out to the trustees recently the need for a deck and he was correct when he stated the parking problem will not go away. He should continue to raise the issue until a long-term plan is implemented.

Vehicles are a fact of life at a major university. In this role, ECU has little choice but to accommodate them. The need will not subside. Only with foresight and planning by the trustees and financial committment from the university can a permanent solution to parking woes be effected.

Recent action did nothing to move ECU closer to this goal. It simply added a few more yards of concrete for a few more cars to use. The university's leadership must do better.

Secret Report Hints At Violation

WASHINGTON — Mikhail Gorbachev's insistence that the May Moscow summit can produce a strategic arms treaty ignores official but still secret U.S. reaction to an unreported ABM treaty violation that could move the Soviets close to a nationwide defense system against a U.S. retaliatory missile strike.

The violation, which has been privately confirmed to President Reagan by U.S. intelligence, is imminent deployment of a new mobile anti-missile missile, the SAM 12B. Labeled "The Giant," this nuclear-tipped missile threatens to change the nuclear balance of power.

It is believed capable of destroying any incoming U.S. missile except the MX and Minuteman III. That means knocking out all current U.S. submarine-launched missiles, the main U.S. retaliatory force to a Soviet first strike (designed to destroy MXs and MMIIIs in their silos). President Reagan is hardly likely to sign a strategic arms reduction pact with Gorbachev in May in the face of such a threat to this nation's nuclear doctrine.

The ABM treaty prohibits mobile anti-missile missiles. Unlike U.S.-Soviet feuding over what the treaty means on space-based missile defenses, such as President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI), there can be no dispute over its ban on ground-based mobile ABMs.

Yet the swift Soviet development of the new 12B matches Soviet treaty-blindness in deploying such offensive missiles as the SS24 and SS25 far more rapidly than the United States thought possible. Neither the SS24 nor 25 was deployed in compliance with nuclear treaties.

American intelligence officials have long thought that the soonest the Soviets might be able to start deploying the 12B would be 18 months from now. In the latest National Intelligence Estimate (NIE), the deployment date has been advanced to the second half of this year.

Only half a dozen members of Congress are aware of the 12B and understand how essential it is in developing the nation-wide missile-defense system that the Soviets have been working on for years. Its mobility will enable it to be linked wherever needed to a new mobile fire-control radar called the Griddle Pan, which in turn is linked to much larger radars like the one at Krasnoyarsk (whose location also makes it a treaty violation).

These larger radars will send instantaneous tracking data of an incoming U.S. missile, picked up as it crosses the horizon, to the fire-guidance Griddle Pan radars, cutting precious minutes for targetting the 12B defense missile on the incoming warhead. The 12B fires a nuclear bomb at the target and the explosion destroys the incoming warhead.

Gorbachev has made much lately of his insistence on quick U.S.-Soviet agreement for the long-discussed strategic nuclear reduction plan. But given the chilling logic of nuclear arithmetic, the United Sates, in its current love affair with arms control deals, would be unlikely to sign a treaty that reduces the number of sub-launched strategic missiles and thus enhances the value of the new Soviet defense. The fewer sub-launched missiles there are to handle, the more effective the new Soviet defense system will be, thus reducing fears of retaliation.

The political force of this equation is as great a Soviet asset as its military force because the United States has no defense at all against strategic missiles. Complying with all the small print in the 1972 ABM treaty, and even declining to make use of the limited, ground-based ABM-weapons it permitted, the United States instead is researching new technology for a possible space-based defense system.

That explains the sharp concern here over the late intelligence that Moscow is on the verge of deploying its new "Giant" anti-missile missile. The Moscow-based Soviet defense system, legal under the ABM treaty, may be poised for what geopoliticians call "breakout." In eye-boggling treaty violation, "breakout" means sudden expansion to a nationwide defense system based on instantaneous "handing off" of tracking data from early-warning Krasnoyarsk radars to smaller Griddle Pan fire-control radars and then on to the highly accurate SAM 12Bs.

Gorbachev's latest scolding of the United States for alleged foot-dragging at the Geneva arms talks came in a three-hour Moscow session with Sens. Alan Cranston, Sam Nunn and others last Friday. He also took an oblique poke at Reagan, criticizing him without naming him for "recent official statements" that, he said, "have added to the uncertainty" over a new treaty.

League Backs Treaty

To the editor:

The recently signed Intermediate Nuclear Forces (INF) Treaty between the United States and the Soviet Union is a cautious but important first step in the global effort to reduce the threat of nuclear war. The United States, and our senators in particular, should move quickly to approve the treaty without adding crippling amendments.

While it would reduce the superpowers' nuclear arsenals by only 3 percent, the INF Treaty represents a significant step toward U.S.-Soviet cooperation and away from the competition and brinkmanship that has characterized the nuclear arms race for the last several years. In addition, the precedent-setting on-site verification provisions contained in the treaty will help pave the way for an even more important agreement to reduce the superpowers' enormous strategic nuclear arsenals.

At the same time, support for the INF Treaty should be coupled with support for restraints on strategic weapons. Congress must not allow support for the INF Treaty to become a smokescreen behind which the arms race in strategic weapons accelerates. Without the existing constraints on offensive and defensive strategic weapons, the weapons included in the INF Treaty could easily be replaced by strategic weapons and the treaty's significant step forward by a major step back.

The League of Women Voters urges quick Senate action in support of the INF Treaty.

Strength For Today

People are easily misled by size. We are inclined to believe that a big city means a prosperous city, a big nation a prosperous nation, and a big buck a happy life.

Some people are prone to believe that big political units mean a better government, that big industrial combination mean huge profits.

The philosopher William James once said, "I am with great things and big things, great organizations and big successes. And I am for those tiny, invisible molecular cells which work from individual to individual, creeping through the crannies of the world. If you give them time, they will rend the hardest monuments of man's pride."

God has wrought His greatest work through insignificant individuals standing valiently for what is right.

Whooping It Up For Child Care

WASHINGTON — Like those famous dogs of Dr. Pavlov, members of Congress develop conditioned reflexes. They salivate when a bell rings. This season the bell is "child care," and almost every mouth on Capitol Hill is watering with anticipation of political rewards.

A Senate subcommittee began hearings this week on what is known as the "ABC Bill," by which is meant the Act for Better Child Care Services. Its principal sponsor is Sen. Christopher Dodd of Connecticut. Rep. Dale Kildee of Michigan has sponsored a companion bill in the House. A rival bill, much more modest in scope, comes from Republican Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah with help in the House from Rep. Nancy Johnson of Connecticut.

It's not fair to say that everyone has jumped aboard one or the other of these locomotives, but the idea of a federal role in child care has gained impressive steam. At least in the form of the Dodd-Kildee bill, it is a thoroughly bad idea. Dodd is proposing a brand-new, full-blown, gilt-edged entitlement program. He seeks $2.5 billion for the first start-up year. After that, he would hit the Treasury for "such sums as may be necessary" through 1992.

Dodd's bill is in the classic pattern of such measures. It begins with copious findings about the children of single-parent families. Generally speaking, these children lack "quality child care." This unavailability is "critical." It is therefore necessary to establish an elaborate program of grants, loans, subsidies, certificates, licenses, inspections and regulations, all to be administered by the states subject to the overriding decree of a new federal administrator of child care before whom every knee must bend.

The bill envisions a vast array of committees. Each state is to have at least two advisory committees of 15 to 30 members. One committee is to advise on advice; the other is to advise on standards for licensing. As a practical matter, these state committees are for dumb-show.

The committee that matters is the National Advisory Committee on Child Care Standards. It is to have 15 members, six of whom will not attend a single meeting after the opening photo opportunity. The rules and regulations will be drafted by staff from the Department of Health and Human Services. After the usual perfunctory hearings and comments, these minimum standards will be imposed upon the states.

What standards? The superior wisdom of Washington would fix minimum standards for a ratio of children to teachers, minimum standards for the "qualifications, training and background of child care personnel," minimum standards of health and safety, minimum standards for the minimum age for care-givers, and so on. Any deviation below these standards would cost a state its allocation of federal funds.

Plainly, Dodd's initial $2.5 billion appropriation is a merchandising gimmick. The average cost to keep a child in a child care center is about $2,000 a year. Roughly 16 million children of low-income and middle-income families are thought to be eligible. We are talking of a program that swiftly could soar out of sight.

These prospective costs alone are sufficiently alarming. A greater objection lies in the whole idea of pervasive state control over the lives of little children. As the bill itself recites, the years from birth to age 6 are of crucial importance to a child's development. The bill contemplates development of "curricular and resource material" that would be certified for use in the certified centers. All this has the innocently ominous ring of a sudden quiet in the playroom. What in the devil are they doing in there?

The bill speaks of providing "a diversity" of services and "a variety" of arrangements and options, but in Sections 19 and 20 the bill contradicts itself. It first prohibits discrimination on the basis of religion, and it then grossly discriminates on the basis of religion. The bill would deny benefits to parents who now make use of nearly 2,500 child care centers and other educational programs that are maintained by churches. These would be absolutely excluded. No certificates for them! Yes, there may be a constitutional problem here, but it is a problem that should be worked out before a bill is seriously considered.

Let us ponder where we are going with this bill. My own thought is that the states respectively should experiment for a few years with their own ideas of child-teacher ratios, curriculum materials, licensing requirements and the like. Day care is a serious problem in our changing society. No one doubts it. But a nationally imposed solution may be no solution at all.

Bush Really Does Have A Constituency Of His Own

Analysis

It seems there are people out there who actually want George Bush to become president of the United States. That novel notion may explain why the primary election count is now Bush 20, Sen. Bob Dole 1.

That simplest of explanations is about the only one that has not been advanced by the political sages during the remarkable month-long string of victories that leaves Bush the all-but-certain GOP nominee.

More popular explanations for Bush's lopsided success run this way:

As vice president, he has the benefits of President Reagan's popularity. His organization is strong, Dole's is weak. He has the biggest campaign bankroll by far. He has had the support of governors in key states: New Hampshire, South Carolina, Illinois.

Each of those factors certainly helped. In addition, the trappings and status of the vice presidency have so far served Bush well, overcoming the disadvantage No. 2 men always have had in running for the top job — they can't argue with the boss and they must defend what's already in place.

But all those elements combined could not produce the kind of landslides Bush has been gaining unless the vice president had a constituency to call his own, and was strengthening it.

Just a month ago today, Bush won his first significant victory in New Hampshire. On Tuesday, he trounced Dole, the most credible rival still standing, in the Illinois primary.

Dole hasn't won a primary or caucus state since opening day in Iowa.

The total popular vote in the 21 GOP primaries held so far this year is Bush 3.3 million, Dole 1.6 million.

Bush already has 772 of the 1,139 delegates needed to win the GOP nomination in New Orleans next Aug. 17. Dole has 180.

All of that has wiped away the memory of embarrassment in Iowa, where Bush ran third to Dole and the rapidly vanishing Pat Robertson, and of the week he then spent on the political critical list.

Since then he has been winning big, with only minor setbacks.

Dole complains that the primaries are ending up as a referendum on Reagan, not a contest with Bush. "If I hit him directly, I get Ronald Reagan first and then they say, oh, oh, he's out there attacking Ronald Reagan," the Kansas senator said. "It's pretty hard to reach Bush except by phone."

He found plenty to hit Bush with earlier in the contest, and he still taunts the vice president as a man who got where he is "without ever doing much."

He also calls him a loser. "Sooner or later, the voters in one of these states are going to say 'Hold it, we're about to nominate a candidate who can't win,'" Dole said after losing 16 primaries to Bush on Super Tuesday.

But recent polls conducted for USA Today, Time and Newsweek show Bush leading potential Democratic nominees. Besides, at this point no one can say who's a likely winner in the fall. The tickets aren't known, the issues aren't set, and the odds are subject to wide swings. In fact, the pollsters said Bush trailed several of the potential Democratic nominees just before his Super Tuesday sweep.

The Dole camp has not managed to zero in on a state likely to reverse the trend; in contests over the next month the polls point to Bush.

Accepting defeat in Illinois, which he had said would be his comeback state, Dole said he would keep campaigning.

"We're just going to hang in there," Dole said. In Washington, the pundits thought Dole was waiting to see if any of the upcoming Iran-Contra indictments might reflect badly on the vice president.

But against a runaway delegate leader, Dole doesn't have much else to hang in for, nor does he have a limitless bankroll with which to do it.

Dole argues that it is too early for the competition to end, and says that he has been encouraged by other Republicans, including former President Richard M. Nixon, to stick with the race.

That was not one of his themes after Iowa, when there were suggestions that a New Hampshire defeat would doom Bush and trigger a Dole runaway. Nor did Nixon value competition for its own sake 20 years ago, when he drove George Romney out of the running even before New Hampshire, and sailed through the primaries without real opposition.

For all that, the script isn't completed, and the convention is five months away. There could still be damaging disclosures about Iran-Contra, or about CIA links with Panamanian boss Manuel Noriega when Bush headed the agency, a question Dole has been posing lately.

Bush has shown himself capable of saying the wrong thing and hurting his own cause. To guard against that, he's avoided saying much of anything lately.

Walter R. Mears is a veteran political writer who is now executive editor of The Associated Press.

No Front-Runner

WASHINGTON (AP) — The five Democratic presidential contenders all made it out of Illinois alive, with Jesse Jackson declaring today that "Illinois voters were quite generous to both favorite sons" and Paul Simon claiming momentum for the primaries still to come.

Simon's victory over Jackson has rendered talk of a nationwide Democratic front-runner meaningless and given new boost to discussion of a brokered national convention next summer.

Both Simon and Jackson said today that they would participate if Democratic Chairman Paul Kirk called a summit to close ranks behind a probable nominee if no one emerged from the primaries with enough delegates to win.

But Simon said on ABC, "I am not optimistic that it will provide answers."

IN THE STATE

Disbarred

RALEIGH (AP) — Lawyers in Sanford and Wilmington have been disbarred, two Durham lawyers have been censured and a Raleigh lawyer has been reinstated by the N.C. State Bar.

John Kevin Stokes of Sanford and M. Anderson Howell of Wilmington were disbarred after admitting misappropriating clients' funds. Dennis Wayne Gaddy of Raleigh was reinstated to the practice of law Feb. 4 after a two-year suspension. Gaddy was suspended in 1985 for appropriating $3,500 in funds entrusted to him as attorney for the estate of a Raleigh woman.

Separate committees of the bar's Disciplinary Hearing Commission ordered the public censure of Durham lawyers Timothy Oates and Douglas Holmes.

The committee found that Oates had allowed an insurance company's draft to be endorsed and negotiated without first abiding by conditions required by the insurance company. A separate committee found that Holmes commingled client funds with personal funds and inadvertently used client funds to satisfy a personal obligation.

Film Library

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The financially troubled De Laurentiis Entertainment Group Inc. has agreed to sell the foreign TV, video and nontheatrical rights to virtually its entire 320-movie library for $69 million.

The foreign rights are being acquired by a newly formed United Kingdom company controlled by financier Michael W. Stevens, the De Laurentiis company said Tuesday.

The sale will pay off $57 million in bank debt and provide capital for the company, which posted a $36.2 million loss in the first nine months of the last fiscal year.

The company's founder, Italian filmmaker Dino De Laurentiis, 68, stepped down as chairman and chief executive last month. The company still seeks a buyer for remaining library rights and its vast Wilmington, N.C., studio.

CP&L Refund

RALEIGH (AP) — Carolina Power & Light Co. took steps Monday to make a $6.3 million refund to its customers — a $2.88 credit on April bills of residential customers using 1,000 kilowatts a month.

The refund is a result of a Feb. 29 order by the N.C. Utilities Commission that ended a two-year battle over the way CP&L fuel costs were included in its rates.

The commission actually ordered CP&L to refund $14.1 million in fuel charges collected in 1985, but offset that amount by allowing it to keep $10 million in excess charges that resulted from lower-than-expected fuel costs in 1986.

After accounting for interest and taxes paid on the fuel charges, the refund totals $6.3 million. The one-time credit will vary among customers and will be based on use of electricity in February.

No Stay

OXFORD, N.C. (AP) — U.S. District Court Judge James Fox of Wilmington said he will not grant a stay for the 1988 Granville County Board of Commissioners election.

The election will proceed as ordered by Fox in a February decision in the Andrew J. McGhee vs. Granville County voting rights lawsuit, "unless something else happens," said attorney Michael Crowell.

Fox's decision in February called for a creation of a seven-member board, with five seats up for election this year and each voter getting two votes.

However, the county appealed the decision to the 4th Circuit of Appeals. As part of the appeal process an election stay was requested from Judge Fox.

There are 12 Democratic candidates for the five open slots on the board. With no Republicans running, if the Democratic primary is held on May 3 it would in effect determine who is elected.

Infection

WILMINGTON (AP) — Doctors say infection was found Tuesday in the reattached ear of a 2-year-old boy who was attacked by dogs last week.

Dr. Dennis Nicks, the plastic surgeon who reattached Chris Graham's ear after it was recovered from the stomach of a pit bull, said there had been no problems with the ear until Tuesday.

Nicks said he prescribed an antibiotic to halt the infection.

If the infection cannot be halted, Nicks said the ear may have to be removed and a new one constructed. He said he would wait several months before beginning a reconstruction process.

Nicks said the child's hearing did not appear to have been affected. The boy was listed in good condition Tuesday at New Hanover Memorial Hospital.

Three dogs, two of them pit bulls, attacked the boy at his Delco residence. When rescue workers could not find the ear, Nicks suggested the dogs be killed and their stomachs searched.

New Sentence

MOCKSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — For the third time in three years, a former Winston-Salem man has been sentenced to a prison term in the stabbing death of a cab driver in 1984.

Lawrence Clinton Coleman, 30, was sentenced to 45 years in prison Monday at a hearing before Judge Thomas W. Ross in Davie County Superior Court.

Coleman had been sentenced twice before to 50 years in prison in the same case. Both those sentences were overturned by the state Court of Appeals, and new sentencing hearings were ordered.

Coleman pleaded guilty in February 1985 to second-degree murder in the death of Joseph Grey Privetta, a driver for Blue Bird Cab Co. Privetta's throat was cut May 11, 1984, in Davie County as he drove Coleman and another man on Interstate 40, authorities said.

GOP At Odds Over Delegates

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina supporters of Pat Robertson and Vice President George Bush remain at odds over the state's convention delegates, but Robertson forces have picked up support from the head of Sen. Jesse Helms's political committee.

Carter Wrenn, executive director of the Raleigh-based National Congressional Club, said the different presidential campaigns could reach no agreement on delegates during a two-hour meeting Tuesday at state GOP headquarters.

The National Congressional Club was seemingly left out of the presidential battle when its candidate, Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., dropped out. But Wrenn said he agreed to attend the meeting as a Robertson representative on behalf of conservatives.

"We want to involve as many conservatives in the Republican Party as possible," Wrenn said. "And we want the Robertson people to get a fair shake. ... The old country-club, practical Republicans are trying to keep them out of the party. They would rather meet in a telephone booth and control the phone.

"They (the moderates) are trying to disenfranchise these new people in the Republican Party," Wrenn said. "It is not in the best interest of George Bush to do that. It is not in the best interest of (GOP Gov.) Jim Martin to do that."

State party chairman Jack Hawke said the dispute over the state delegation to the national convention might have to be settled in court.

"We may end up there," Hawke said after the two-hour closed-door meeting. "And most any action we take from this point on could lead to a challenge at the national convention."

Party rules require delegates to the national convention to reflect the outcome of the state primary on the first ballot. But delegates are free to vote for anyone on subsequent ballots. A state law, however, requires to delegates to reflect the primary in their voting, and makes no reference to first or subsequent ballots.

In the state primary last week, Bush won 29 of the state's 54 delegates, and Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kansas, won the other 25. Robertson, who finished with less than 10 percent of the vote, got no delegates.

But Robertson supporters have been jamming local precinct meetings to control the delegate-selection process. That would mean Robertson supporters at the national convention could affect the party platform and cast ballots for Robertson if the nomination is not decided on the first ballot.

Bush forces, however, want Bush supporters to fill the 29 delegate spots he has been allocated.

State Sen. Larry Cobb, Bush's state campaing manager, has said he would like to avoid asking a judge to decide whether the state law outweighs the party rules. Cobb said he would prefer to have the party's executive committee settle the squabble, but he was tight-lipped Tuesday on what he would do next.

"I have no comment," he said. "We're not trying this in the newspaper on the steps of state party headquarters."

Hawke said said he plans to talk to all parties again. He said, however, that regardless of the outcome of the current dispute, he doesn't think Robertson supporters would abandon Republican candidates in the fall.

"I have a very difficult time believing that anybody who really believes in a cause would choose to stay home," Hawke said. "If they really care about it, they cannot stay at home."

Court Upholds Parents' Dram Shop Suit

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Court of Appeals says a Haywood County couple can sue a motel lounge that allegedly served their 19-year-old son tequila and beer just before an auto crash that took his life.

The appeals court Tuesday said Haywood County Superior Court Judge Robert W. Kirby last April improperly dismissed a claim in the couple's lawsuit against the Ramada Inn West motel in Asheville and its owners that sought relief under the state's dram shop statute

Wayne Scott Jordan, 19, was served four double shots of tequila and four bottles of beer at the motel's lounge on Dec. 5, 1985, court documents show. He was involved in a single-car wreck on his way home and died the next day.

The dram shop statute allows victims of drunken drivers to seek damages from bars or bartenders who served the driver before an accident.

The appeals court also said a wrongful death claim filed by Jordan's parents, Arlin and Carol Clark, was properly dismissed.

In other decisions the court found no error in the Wilson County Superior Court trial of Harold Hoover, who is serving 10 years in prison on convictions of crime against nature and taking indecent liberties with a 13-year-old boy.

Hoover appealed, saying he had inadequate counsel and evidence was unavailable at the trial.

Ousted Official Vows New Fight

WAKE FOREST, N.C. (AP) — Randall Lolley, who will step down as president of Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary April 1, has told the conservative-dominated trustees he will devote himself to returning the school to moderate control.

"I declare eternal hostility against every tyranny over the minds and hearts of God's people anywhere on this Earth," Lolley told trustees Tuesday at his final board meeting. "I commit from this day forward every moment of my time and every millibar of my energy to restoring this school into the hands of her friends and out of the hands of her foes — so help me God!"

Lolley's remarks draw a standing ovation from students, faculty and administrators at the meeting.

Earlier in the meeting, students cheered as the board presented Lolley, a bird hunter, with a Winchester shotgun and named a women's dormitory in his honor.

The board Monday selected Lewis Drummond, an inerrantist professor from Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Ky., to replace Lolley.

Lolley, a moderate, had announced his resignation last fall after conservatives took over the trustee board. He said at the time he could not support the board's decision to hire only inerrantist professors and make the school more conservative.

Inerrantists, who have controlled the 14.6 million-member Southern Baptist Convention presidency for nine years, believe that the Bible is entirely accurate, even in matters of science and history. Moderates, such as Lolley, believe that all Christians have the right to interpret the Bible for themselves.

In a silent demonstration, five students — hands tied and mouths gagged in protest of the new administration — sat in a circle before the trustees, heads bent in prayer. They remained there until the Rev. James Bryant, a fundamentalist trustee from Arkansas, threatened to close the meeting unless they went back to their seats.

The trustees also voted 23-6 to endorse the 1987 Peace Committee report, which recommends that "the theological positions of seminary employees be determined in order to guide them in renewing" their allegiance to the prferred statement of belief of the denomination's conservative leadership.

Crowley and Drummond said they didn't know what effect it would have.

Jones Backs Oregon Inlet Jetties

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Walter Jones, D-N.C., and other speakers at a congressional hearing say controversial jetties are the only way to halt the shifting sands at Oregon Inlet and save a Coast Guard station and key Outer Banks bridge.

Jones, the chairman of an oversight subcommittee of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, said Tuesday there was "a vague, faint hope" the U.S. Interior Department might abandon its opposition to the jetties.

Orman Mann, chairman of the Dare County Oregon Inlet and Waterways Commission, told the subcommittee the federal government should approve the jetties to stop the inlet's constant shifting.

"It is Dare County's position that the Department of Interior is 100 percent to blame for what is happening at Oregon Inlet today, because they have actively opposed the only plan that has Congress's OK for stabilizing the inlet," Mann said.

Environmentalists and other critics say the jetties would increase erosion problems in other areas near Oregon Inlet, an opening in the outer banks of Dare County created by an 1846 hurricane. The U.S. Interior Department has blocked construction of the jetties, which the Army Corps of Engineers proposed years ago.

The hearing Tuesday was a one-sided affair. No critics of the jetties spoke, although Jones said one had been invited.

Orrin H. Pilkey, a Duke University geologist and outspoken critic of the jetty project, told the News and Observer of Raleigh he had been invited to speak but had a scheduling conflict.

The $110 million project would involve construction of a pair of mile-long stone jetties to stabilize the inlet. The Interior Department has said it cannot provide land for the jetties without congressional approval.

A consulting firm hired by the federal Office of Management and Budget reported in December that economic benefits of the jetties would not offset their cost.

During the hearing, Coast Guard officials said the Oregon Inlet station was threatened by erosion and must be relocated unless the erosion is stopped. The station's personnel help fishermen and boaters in distress, fight drug smuggling and provide other services, said Capt. Anthony J. Pettit, chief of the Coast Guard's search and rescue division.

The Coast Guard has been forced to move the largest ship assigned to the station, the cutter Point Brown, to a site in Wanchese, slowing response time to emergencies in the inlet, Pettit said.

The agency is looking at a federally owned site on Bodie Island as a possible new home for the station. It would take rescue workers 30 more minutes to reach the inlet from that location, Pettit said.

Pilkey agreed that erosion threatened the Coast Guard station and the Herbert C. Bonner Bridge over the inlet, but he said that the loss of both structures did not justify the jetty project.

The bridge is doomed because it was built in a location that is particularly vulnerable to erosion during major storms, he said, and the jetty project could not be built in time to save the Coast Guard station even if it was approved.

Steel Box Keeps Pig Heart Alive 15 Hours

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Charlotte medical researchers say time and distance no longer have to come between people who need heart transplants and the donated hearts that could save them.

In a round-trip flight to California Monday, researchers from Charlotte's Heineman Medical Research Center used a special 300-pound stainless steel box to keep alive the heart and lungs of a pig for 15 hours.

That is more than triple the time a human donor heart can be kept alive by the current method.

The heart box could make it possible to have donor hearts waiting for recipients. Today, transplant recipients usually are waiting, on the operating room table with chests opened, while donor hearts are being transported.

Duke Duncan, Heineman's associate director, said the system of preserving hearts and lungs will make it possible to deliver donor hearts to waiting recipients anywhere in the world.

"I am absolutely thrilled," Duncan said Tuesday. "We had no idea what we would find."

Heineman Director Thomas Masters said the system has been used at the University of Pittsburgh to keep a human heart alive for six hours. It has never been used to transport a human heart, but Masters said that could happen in Charlotte in the next six months to a year.

Report Says Man-Made Chemicals Shrinking Earth's Ozone Protection

By THOMAS H. WAUGH II
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

Man-made chemicals have shrunk the Earth's protective ozone layer by about 2.3 percent over most of the United States since 1969, and by significantly larger amounts near the north and south poles, scientists disclosed Tuesday in a long-awaited report.

The average ozone depletion over Australia and New Zealand was even higher, about 4 percent — large enough to cause at least a 20 percent increase in skin cancer in those areas over the next two decades, researchers said in the report issued by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. The depletion may already be decreasing agricultural and fishery productivity in most temperate regions of the world, they added.

Researchers said there was little doubt that the ozone depletion was due to the continued release of the destructive chemicals, called chlorofluorocarbons or CFCs, which are widely used in refrigerators and air conditioners as well as for the production of plastic foams. CFC molecules, when exposed to sunlight, can destroy ozone molecules in the stratosphere, the segment of the atmosphere extending from about 9 miles to 30 miles above the Earth's surface.

Ozone molecules in the stratosphere absorb more than 99 percent of the ultraviolet radiation emitted by the sun, thereby protecting life on Earth from its destructive effects. When the CFCs destroy the ozone, more ultraviolet radiation reaches the Earth.

Perhaps most disturbing, the researchers said, was that the decrease in ozone was more than twice as large as scientists had expected when they began the study 17 months ago. This indicated that the long-term effects of CFCs on ozone depletion may be much worse than previously believed.

The new report was issued one day after the Senate, by a vote of 83-0, ratified a treaty that would reduce future production of CFCs by 50 percent by the end of the century. Representatives of 46 nations agreed to the treaty in September in Montreal, but the United States will be the first large CFC-producing country to ratify it when President Reagan signs it.

The most recent projections, made by NASA in 1985, said that the average amount of ozone in the stratosphere would fall between 4.9 percent and 9.4 percent during the next century, with the greatest decreases occurring at high latitudes.

Based on the new results reported Tuesday, those estimates may be much too low, said University of California, Irvine, chemist F. Sherwood Rowland, who headed one of the panels that prepared the report.

Asteroid May Have Eliminated Dinosaurs

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — An asteroid collision with Earth may have released enough gas to heat the planet 65 million years ago, causing gradual extinction of dinosaurs and other species by destroying their food, researchers say.

The study drew guarded praise from a critic of the theory, because the findings attempt to explain why only certain creatures became extinct and why the extinctions were gradual, not sudden.

The asteroid impact theory differs from ones in which scientists said such a collision caused mass extinction by kicking up enough dust to block sunlight, plunging the planet into a freezing darkness that killed plants, a source of food.

California Institute of Technology planetary scientist John O'Keefe and geophysicist Thomas Ahrens reached their conclusion by analyzing experiments in which Ahrens and geophysicist Manfred Lange shot steel bullets into rocks at 4,500 mph.

Based on the amount of carbon dioxide released by the shattered rocks, the scientists calculated that a 6-mile-diameter asteroid hitting limestone or other carbon-rich rocks on Earth would have released enough carbon dioxide to increase the amount of the gas in the atmosphere two to five times.

Such an increase in the gas, which traps solar heat like glass in a greenhouse, could have caused a "greenhouse effect" that warmed the planet by 9 to 36 degrees Fahrenheit for 10,000 years after the asteroid struck, Ahrens said Tuesday.

"The leafy plants which dinosaurs ate were selectively destroyed" by the heat while other plants survived, Ahrens said. "So there was probably (increased) competition for available food, and eventually food supplies declined to a point where different species, including the dinosaurs, became extinct in a less-than-sudden manner."

Fossils show dinosaurs and other creatures became extinct gradually, while many species survived. Many biologists and paleontologists argue the mass extinction 65 million years ago was caused by gradual climate change, not an asteroid or other sudden catastrophe.

William Clemens, paleontology chairman at the University of California, Berkeley, and a leading critic of asteroid theories, said he was skeptical of the O'Keefe-Ahrens theory because the dinosaurs started to die earlier than 65 million years ago.

But he called their study "clearly a positive step" because it is consistent with gradual, selective extinction.

O'Keefe will present the study Thursday in Houston at the 19th Lunar and Planetary Science Conference.

Exhibition Depicts Nation's Homeless

WASHINGTON (AP) — The faces stare at you in unrelenting succession, none with a smile. They are faces of adults without hope and children without childhood.

There is photograph after photograph of families being evicted, mother and children sitting outdoors on their piled-up belongings. They are pictures that have the impact of war, of the Great Depression, of children orphaned and victimized by fighting not of their making.

These are the scenes in a new exhibit called "Homeless in America," that opened Tuesday at the Corcoran Gallery, a block from the White House. The exhibit of 64 pictures will tour 32 cities in the coming years to act as, in the words of its sponsors, "a centerpiece for public education."

"It's a national disgrace that in this country of plenty there are people who don't have a place to live,," said Susie Elson, immediate past president of the National Mental Health Association, which joined in producing the exhibit along with Families for the Homeless, a group that includes congressional, administration and media families.

Tipper Gore, wife of the senator from Tennessee, headed the project.

"In America we have become adjusted to the image of poverty," she said. "The half-clothed child in a shack in Appalachia is what many people still think of when they think about poor people in this country," she said before the exhibit opened. "Today's realities far outstrip this outdated image and that is why we felt it was important to have top photojournalists communicate through the power of their images."

Simultaneously with the opening of the exhibit, a book of the photographs was published. Many of the photographers represented in the exhibit and book were commissioned by Michael Evans, formerly President Reagan's personal photographer.

"The exhibit will endure as a lasting work of art and that, too, is important," said Mrs. Gore. "But the key component, the key element is using the photographs to ... drive home that there are maybe three million homeless people in this country, that they are families, that they are children, the elderly, that they are veterans, that they are mentally ill, that they are the most vulnerable people in our society and that they are growing."

Evans said the project cost $450,000. Its principal funding was provided by Triangle Industries, Inc.

The photographs, all black and white, depict such urban scenes as a pair of legs sticking from a box that obviously served as a night's accommodations; a child eating from a metal bowl in her home, under an underpass; a small girl weeping as a humane society worker removes her cat in a cage, prior to her own eviction; families with their belongings in plastic bags.

They show two young men scavenging through a metal trash container; a man and woman asleep on a park bench, his knee serving as her pillow; a food line, with the splendor of the Dallas skyline as a backdrop.

The honorary patron of the project is Barbara Bush, wife of the vice president. The board of directors includes Susan Baker, wife of White House chief of staff Howard Baker.

King Henry VIII of England divorced his fourth wife, Anne of Cleves, in 1540.

New NASA Schedule Includes Retrieval Of 11-Ton Satellite

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An 11-ton satellite in orbit three years longer than planned will be rescued by a space shuttle crew next year, just months before it would fall back to Earth in pieces.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration on Tuesday included the retrieval of the satellite — the Long Duration Exposure Facility — in a new schedule of flights and cargoes. The rescue was added to a mission beginning July 13.

The orbit of the satellite, which gauged the effects of space's hostile environment on metal coatings and on 13 million seeds, is decaying and officials fear it will crash through the atmosphere and break up if it is not recaptured by mid-1990.

The new schedule makes no change in the date of the much-delayed first post-Challenger flight, now set for Aug. 4. There have been no American manned missions in space since the Challenger — the 25th shuttle mission — exploded on liftoff Jan. 28, 1986 and killed its seven-member crew.

The six-sided Long Duration Exposure Facility — LDEF in space jargon — was tossed overboard by astronauts in April 1984 to be hit by meteors, pelted by cosmic rays and corroded by oxygen atoms.

The bus-size frame held 57 experiments, including one that tested 120 varieties of vegetables, fruits and flowers to see whether cosmic radiation caused useful genetic changes.

The LDEF was to have been retrieved by another shuttle mission 10 months later and brought back in the cargo bay.

But delays in the space program combined with grounding of all shuttles after the Challenger disaster kept the 11-ton satellite in its lonely journey around Earth. The $14 million package has no on-board propulsion systems or ability to transmit signals.

It is orbiting 292 miles above Earth, according to the North American Defense Command.

The NASA schedule also calls for six small and medium-sized expendable rockets to be launched this year, four in 1989 and seven in 1990.

The shuttle schedule reverses the order of one military and one civilian flight early next year. This enables NASA to orbit a pair of huge communications satellites earlier than planned. They will be needed in June 1989 when the $1 billion Hubble Space Telescope is launched from a shuttle.

NASA places such emphasis on the two communications satellites that they will be the principal cargoes on the first and third flights in the new series. Together they will provide communications with the shuttle 95 percent of the time it is in orbit and be a spaceborne switchboard for many satellites.

NASA was forced to change its priorities for shuttle payloads in order to be ready to launch the Magellan probe to map Venus at a time when the least amount of fuel will be needed to traverse the 90 million miles.

The Magellan flight is scheduled for April 27 and it will be the first U.S. planetary mission since a Pioneer probe was launched to Venus in 1978.

NASA has scheduled the launch of the Hubble Space Telescope for June 1, 1989, and another important planetary flight — Galileo — for Oct. 8, 1989. Galileo is a cooperative project with Germany to survey Jupiter and its moons.

The first shuttle flight will have a five-man crew commanded by Navy Capt. Frederick Hauck.

The next mission, scheduled on the Atlantis for Oct. 27, will launch two military communications satellites. The next flight, Discovery again, will be on Jan. 19, 1989 and the fourth, using Columbia, will be March 2 — a Defense Department mission to launch an advanced reconnaissance satellite.

A Spacelab mission — so-called because a complete laboratory is carried in the shuttle's cargo bay — was delayed in the new schedule to push the TDRS satellite ahead.

NASA said the mission to study the universe in the ultraviolet spectrum is being reconfigured to enhance study of the brightest exploding star seen by astronomers in more than 200 years. The discovery of Supernova 1987A has drawn attention of astrophysicists around the world.

The new schedule also adds two Spacelab flights in 1990, using the shuttle Columbia. Also, the Gamma Ray Observatory has been moved forward in the schedule to March 1990. The Ulysses mission to study the sun and its environment remains in an October 1990 launch date.

Students Seeking Simple Tax Form

WASHINGTON (AP) — If your idea of a good tax form is one with short sentences and short words, take heart.

A group of students, venturing where government has been less than successful, vows to come up with a series of tax forms that are understandable even to the high school dropout. And the students say they will finish the job within less than six months.

"I don't say it's a simple task, but we're going to try," Professor Nicholas J. Creme, director of the Center for Taxation Studies in the Akron University School of Law, said in an interview Tuesday.

He said he wants the students to work with the Internal Revenue Service on the project, although the IRS has not yet embraced the idea.

The students' interest was piqued by what they learned while representing low-income taxpayers in audits, collections and other actions involving the IRS. They learned that on the average, only 11 percent of taxpayers with less than a high school education have the reading skills to comprehend instructions for filling out Forms 1040 or 1040EZ.

The students concluded that if taxpayers can't understand how to comply with the tax laws, they probably won't. Or as Creme, a tax lawyer for 20 years, put it, "When people can't figure out the right answer, they will take the answer that gives them the best break."

High school dropouts aren't the only people having trouble with this year's tax forms. Even tax professionals shake their heads at some instructions prompted by the more complex provisions of the 1986 tax overhaul, which was initially billed as tax "simplification."

Creme says that about 20 students training in law, business or education will develop a more-readable W-4 withholding form; W-2 yearend wages-earned statement; 1099 interest-earned form and the basic 1040, 1040A and 1040EZ forms.

Creme and some of the students volunteered for the project Monday while testifying before a Senate Finance subcommittee about IRS penalties.

Test Critic Files Suit In 50 States

NEW YORK (AP) — A leading critic of commercial achievement tests said today he has filed consumer fraud complaints in all 50 states accusing four major publishers of selling deceptive tests.

The complaints were the latest in a series of salvos at test publishers by Dr. John Jacob Cannell, a Daniels, W.Va., physician who gained prominence last November with his report charging that elementary students in all 50 states apparently are scoring above average on standardized achievement tests.

His 26-page report argued that the seemingly excellent test scores in every state "give children, parents, school systems, legislatures, and the press misleading reports on achievement levels."

It found, for example, that 82 percent of 3,503 school districts surveyed reported above-average scores for elementary students.

Cannell's research prompted top officials of the U.S. Department of Education to call 40 test experts and publishers to a closed door meeting last month to discuss possible actions.

His complaints, filed March 9 with all 50 state attorneys general, included 38 against CTBMcGraw Hill, which publishes the California Achievement Test and Comprehensive Test of Basic Skills; 36 against The Psychological Corporation, which publishes the Stanford Achievement Test and the Metropolitan Achievement Test; 31 against Riverside Publishing Co., which publishes the Iowa Test of Basic Skills, and 26 against Science Research Associates, publisher of the SRA exam.

Cannell's complaint demanded that publishers identify all school districts using their tests, provide free annual updates of the norms that determine how students score, and provide new test questions for free each year to ensure that schools cannot "teach to the test."

Cannell, founder and head of the 700-member West Virginia education watchdog group "Friends for Education Inc.," also called upon each state to analyze standardized tests to determine if they have gotten easier over time.

Prison Guards Under Scrutiny

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Hundreds of prison guards here have engaged in corruption including drug sales and aiding escapes, the district attorney said in announcing the first nine arrests from a continuing investigation.

Authorities say seven guards, one prison cook and an inmate were charged as a result of "Operation Ferret," an investigation begun 18 months ago.

"The investigation will potentially yield the largest number of arrests related to official misconduct by correctional officers in this country's history," District Attorney Ronald Castille told a news conference Tuesday.

"We are gathering the evidence to present to the special grand jury that will lead to the arrest or discipline of hundreds of guards over the coming months," Castille said.

Senate OKs Bill Calling For Notice On Covert Acts

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate approval of a bill requiring the White House to tell Congress about all covert actions within 48 hours after the operations start marks a major step toward avoiding another Iran-Contra affair, say the measure's sponsors.

"This will help immeasurably toward preventing the kind of mistakes that were made" in the Iran-Contra affair, Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., chairman of the Intelligence Committee, said late Tuesday after the Senate voted 71-19 in favor of the bill.

The measure now goes to the House, where "overwhelming approval" is likely, according to both Boren and Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, vice chairman of the Intelligence Committee.

The House Intelligence Committee is considering a similar bill, but no date has been set for a vote by the panel or for floor action.

President Reagan has threatened to veto the legislation as an unconstitutional restriction on his ability to conduct foreign policy.

But Boren said, "That kind of threat has been heard before and it hasn't come true."

Cohen noted that the 71 votes are four more than the two-thirds which would be required to override any presidential veto. "And that 71 total is without some of our supporters here," he said.

The bill arises from the Iran-Contra affair, when U.S. weapons were secretly sold to Iran and some of the profits were diverted to the Contra guerrillas in Nicaragua.

Reagan withheld notification about the arms sales from Congress for 10 months.

Current laws require only that the White House give Congess "timely notice" about covert actions, but they do not define the term. The Intelligence Committees had been operating on the assumption that the phrase meant only a brief delay in notification.

"This bill clarifies what we thought was the procedure all along," Cohen said. "We believed timely meant a couple of days and we were surprised to find out that the administration was working under a different definition."

The measure doesn't give Congress a veto over covert operations, Cohen noted.

"There's no piece of legislation that can weave a web of security around good or bad judgment," said Cohen. "I can't say for sure this would have prevented Iran-Contra, but it would mean that we can give the president the benefit of our advice. The function we serve is to have a second opinion outside the administration."

Boren said if the bill eventually becomes law, "it will help" prevent future problems because "it clears up so many ambiguities that are in the existing law. It makes the notification process so much more clear."

But he warned that "you can never prevent absolutely any future Iran-Contras, anymore than a law against bank robberies will prevent bank robberies."

In the wake of the Iran-Contra affair, Cohen noted, Reagan has promised to tell Capitol Hill about all future covert actions and has moved administratively to make many of the changes proposed in the law. "This only writes into law what the president has already said he would do," Cohen said.

The bill also requires written "findings," which are the presidential orders authorizing covert operations. Some actions in the Iran-Contra affair were done under an oral finding which was open to misinterpretation, Boren said.

Lancaster, Stewart Plead For Protection Of Films

By PAUL PAGE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Burt Lancaster was the fast-talking tough guy, James Stewart his drawling partner with homespun common sense as they rode into town to fight for a principle — only this time it was real life, not a movie.

The two Hollywood legends began a two-day whirl of lobbying in Congress and on television talk shows Tuesday to plead for the preservation of their film classics against modern moguls out to "make a buck."

Lancaster shook his finger at a packed room of reporters, arguing passionately for a halt to the controversial coloring of black and white films.

Media entrepreneur Ted Turner has led the colorization field, releasing computer-colored versions of such classics as "Casablanca" and Stewart's "It's a Wonderful Life."

"All of this is done for them to make a buck," said Lancaster. "Let them go out and make an honest buck."

Stewart told reporters in his halting cadence that he agreed with Lancaster, "but for me to say the same thing would take so very much longer, I better not say it."

The two were joined in their rounds by directors Peter Bogdanovich, Fred Zinneman and several other top American filmmakers. The Hollywood push for legislation included testimony before a congressional committee two weeks ago by directors Steven Spielberg and George Lucas.

Stewart said he came to Washington because he was appalled by the colorization of Frank Capra's "It's a Wonderful Life," after Turner bought the rights to the movie.

"As Frank's health deteriorated, he found to his horror that 'It's a Wonderful Life' was one of the first films that was colorized. It broke his heart," an emotional Stewart said.

"I am determined to do whatever I can to make things right for Frank Capra," he said.

The directors and actors want Congress to expand the nation's copyright laws to give directors and writers perpetual "moral rights" over what can be done to their works.

Under a plan supported by the Directors Guild of America, those who hold exhibition rights to completed movies would not be allowed to make changes — such as adding color — without the filmmakers' permission.

"I see myself today in movies where the story has been distorted and the movie chopped up," said Lancaster. "Yet, my name is on it. I think, 'What are they doing to me?'

"They don't own me. They're using my name as a kind of draw. That's felonious, really."

Although he was passionate before the news cameras, drawing memories of his roles as a tough guy dating back to the 1940s, Lancaster said he toned down his private performance before members of Congress.

"We're dealing with politicians — we have to be a little political too," he said.

Black Archbishop Named

L.A. Times-Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Bishop Eugene A. Marino, a longtime leader in black Roman Catholics' fight for equality within the church, became the first black archbishop in the United States Tuesday. His appointment to head the archdiocese of Atlanta makes the 53-year-old Marino, currently an auxiliary bishop in Washington, the highest-ranking black prelate in the country.

As one of 32 archbishops, Marino assumes a position just below cardinal. His appointment, which he called "overwhelming ... and shocking," caps a career that, in some ways, matches the tumultuous relationship of the nation's 1.3 million black Catholics to the church's white leadership.

On a visit to his new archdiocese Tuesday, Marino said his appointment is "a sign of hope to all minorities that the church" is sensitive to their needs.

His greater mission, he added, is to "all people of good will." Drawing on his 14 years in Washington as an advocate for programs for the poor, he said, "There are many things that militate against people having hope — crime, poverty, drug addiction. I see my job as one of calling people to the vision that God has something better for us in this life."

Marino, currently one of 12 black bishops in the United States, began his career in the church as an altar boy and attended the local, segregated parochial school in Biloxi, Miss. His parents were strict, he said, making him come home immediately after school instead of playing outside, but they gave him and his seven brothers and sisters a sense of stability and encouraged them to share what little they had.

His father was a baker, his mother a homemaker, and "by all reckoning we were poor. But there were always people poorer than we were, and we gave," he said.

Reagan Says U.S. Will Not Dictate Mideast Settlement

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan assured Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir before their meeting today that the United States will not try to dictate a Mideast peace settlement, but he said regional negotiations are essential.

The president underscored the U.S. view that Arab-Israeli negotiations would help both sides and are urgently needed.

"When it comes to Israel, the United States is not a bargainer or a broker," Reagan said in a speech Tuesday to a United Jewish Appeal group. "The United States is a friend and an ally."

The White House meeting came on the third day of Shamir's four-day visit, marked so far by his opposition to the U.S. plan for negotiations.

It began with another call on Secretary of State George P. Shultz at the State Department by the Israeli prime minister.

His spokesman, Avi Pazner, summing up three hours of talks Shamir held Tuesday with Shultz, said "he did not give an answer. He did not say yes, he did not say no."

But Pazner said Shultz's proposal to hold an international peace conference next month was "a sticking point that has to be resolved if we are going to go ahead."

The Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip have been plagued by protests in which 96 Palestinians have been killed in clashes with Israeli forces in a little more than three months.

The peace conference would set the stage for negotiations starting May 1 between Israel and a mixed delegation of Jordanians and Palestinians to set up Palestinian self-rule in the territories for three years.

In the second stage of Shultz's plan, negotiations on an overall settlement of the 40-year Arab-Israeli conflict would begin by December. There the United States would call on Israel to relinquish at least some of the territories in exchange for Arab recognition.

Shultz acknowledged Tuesday he was unable to bridge differences with Shamir. But he said "we feel encouraged to continue our efforts to work with Israel and others in the Middle East."

Shamir said that in Israel's view, the Middle East peace conference could not play "any positive role."

Pazner, the Israeli spokesman, claimed that King Hussein of Jordan wants the conference to let Israel's enemies "put pressure on Israel, to try to bring Israel to agree to solutions it would not agree to in free negotiations."

Shamir offered last October to hold Israeli-Jordanian negotiations in Washington with U.S. and Soviet "blessing." Pazner said Shamir stands by the offer even though it was rejected by the king.

Reagan told the Jewish group "we will not leave Israel alone to stand alone."

"Nor," the president said, "will we acquiesce in any effort to gang up on Israel. Peace will not be imposed by us or by anyone else. It will and must come from the genuine give-and-take of negotiations. That's what we're working to set in motion now."

Shultz had set this week as a "deadline" for a reply from Israel and Jordan. In Amman, a senior Jordanian official told The Associated Press that Jordan is still consulting with its Arab neighbors on the proposal.

On Capitol Hill, Assistant Secretary of State Richard W. Murphy sought to reassure supporters of Israel that an international conference would not dictate solutions to any side.

Pressed by several congressmen on why Shultz had softened his opposition to Soviet participation, Murphy said no Arab state would enter peace talks without a Soviet presence. "They're (the Soviets) in the region, and we have to find a way to deal with them," he said.

Meanwhile, nine Republican senators made public the text of a letter to Shultz urging him not to subject Shamir to U.S. criticism or pressure.

It said American support should not be used "as a lever to force Israel's leaders to adopt a policy which they see as dangerous to the national security of their country — especially when such policy entails injecting the Soviet Union into the peace process."

Man Who Rejected Protection Killed

NEW YORK (AP) — An organized crime informant who rejected an offer to enter the federal witness protection program has been found murdered in a California parking lot, authorities said.

The body of George Peter Yudzevich, 46, was found near a business-industrial center in Irvine, Calif. He had been shot at least three times in the head, police said.

Irvine police said they did not know the motive for his murder, which was discovered Saturday.

Yudzevich turned down an offer for federal protection before testifying last fall at the racketeering trial of Joseph N. Gallo, 76, the reputed former consigliere of the Gambino crime family; Joseph Armone, 70, the reputed Gambino underboss, and two other Gambino associates, according to Edward McDonald, head of the Brooklyn-based Organized Crime Strike Force.

His testimony against Armone and the two associates was "critical" in the trial, which ended in December with the conviction of all the defendants, McDonald said Tuesday.

"We sponsored him for the program and even went so far as to prepare necessary paperwork, but for his own reasons he chose not to enter the program," McDonald said.

Yudzevich admitted to being an FBI informant from 1980 to 1985, McDonald said. He refused to speculate about the motive behind the slaying.

Yudzevich also testified in California last fall against alleged organized crime figure Robert (Fat Bobby) Paduano of Newport Beach, Calif., who was arrested in February and charged with 73 felony counts of robbery, burglary, assault and extortion, said Orange County Deputy District Attorney Wallace Wade.

Paduano's lawyer, Alan May, said his client denied any knowledge of or involvement in Yudzevich's murder.

Yudzevich also had been awaiting a judge's decision on whether he should be tried for allegedly bilking Orange County investors out of about $350,000 in a money laundering case, authorities said.

Explosions Kill 3, Injure 20 During IRA Burial

By EDITH M. LEDERER
Associated Press Writer

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Explosions and gunfire ripped through a cemetery during a funeral for three Irish Republican Army guerrillas, killing at least three people and injuring at least 20, police said.

A spokesman for Belfast's Eastern Health and Social Services said there were 23 injured, four of them seriously. A witness said rifles were fired and hand grenades or mortars exploded.

The blasts erupted about 15 yards away as the flag-draped coffins of the guerrillas, shot by British troops in Gibraltar, were being lowered into graves. A police spokesman who spoke on condition of anonymity said one man at the scene was arrested.

Thousands of mourners clustered in the Roman Catholic Milltown cemetery in West Belfast and flung themselves on the ground as organizers appealed for calm.

Several mourners grabbed a man evidently suspected of setting the explosions. Hundreds of others rushed from the graveside toward where the explosions took place.

The explosions erupted after more than 4,000 mourners had followed the flag-draped coffins of Mairead Farrell, 31, Sean Savage, 24, and Daniel McCann, 30, to the cemetery.

Several mourners shouted out they believed the explosions were caused by Protestant paramilitary groups.

Sinn Fein vice-president Martin MacGuinness said he saw at least three people with gunshot wounds, including one shot through the nose.

He said that shortly before the explosions witnesses reported seeing four men jump out of a white van on a highway running alongside the cemetery.

"We believe that a number of men, four is the figure, came out of white van on the motorway and came up onto the cemetery," MacGuiness told reporters at the cemetery.

"We believe they either threw hand grenades or mortars or a mixture of both. Certainly some rifles were fired at the crowd. ... Quite a few people are suffering from gunshot wounds."

MacGuinness held up a few pieces of metal and a pair of black gloves. "The gloves are the gloves used by one attackers and the bits of metal are, we believe, remnants of the grenades."

He said a group of mourners had grabbed one the attackers, but then police moved in and arrested both the suspect and the mourners.

After the attack, which happened as the third coffin was about to be lowered into a joint grave, the funeral was completed.

Police and troops, in an evidently deliberate policy, had kept out of sight during the funerals, which began with a Requiem Mass in a packed parish church, St. Agnes.

The mourners had followed the coffins, draped in the Irish tricolor, through somber streets, with shops shut, to the cemetery.

At the mass in St. Agnes, mourners listened silently as the priest charged that the unarmed trio, ambushed on what the government said was a bombing mission, were murdered.

Shortly before the funeral began, a bomb exploded on a street more than a mile from the church, slightly injuring a British soldier on foot patrol, police reported.

Earlier, about 150 mourners watched, with no sign or police or troops, as relatives and members of Sinn Fein, the IRA's legal political wing, carried the coffin of McCann from his parents' two-story row house to be driven to the church.

The almost exclusively Catholic Irish Republican Army is fighting to push the British out of Protestant-dominated Northern Ireland, join it with the Republic of Ireland and set up an all-Ireland socialist state.

In his funeral oration at St. Agnes, the Rev. Tom Toner called the March 6 shootings in Gibraltar "murder" and accused British authorities of "gloating" over them.

More than 1,000 mourners listened in silence broken only by a the crying of a baby.

"We have a mounting, accumulated anger at the treatment of Irish people by Britain over the past weeks and months," he said.

Britain says the guerrillas were shot by commandos while preparing a car bomb attack on the changing of the guard outside the governor's residence in the colony on the southern tip of Spain.

The three were unarmed, but Britain said they made movements that led the soldiers to believe their lives were in danger. The Irish government has complained that the soldiers should have tried to arrest the trio, who the IRA said were on "active service."

Outside the chapel, a crowd of about 3,000 gathered to accompany the coffins to Milltown, the burial ground for many other guerrillas killed in nearly 20 years of sectarian strife which has claimed more than 2,600 lives.

In the tense buildup to the funerals, Protestants stoned hearses that brought the IRA bodies home Tuesday on a 100-mile route from Dublin. The coffins had been flown from Gibraltar on a plane chartered by Sinn Fein.

Hooded IRA gunmen fired a three-shot volley, the IRA's traditional salute to guerrillas killed in its bomb and bullet campaign against British rule, to coincide with the arrival of the coffins on Irish soil.

Two Catholics, including IRA member Kevin McCracken, 33, shot by British troops near Savage's home on Monday, were fatally wounded in Belfast over the past two days.

Another Catholic, Charles McGrillan, died when unidentified gunmen opened fire as he arrived for work Tuesday. Police said they suspected a sectarian attack by Protestant militants.

Sandinistas Launch Major Offensive In 'Knock Out' Effort Against Contras

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — About 6,000 Nicaraguan soldiers used helicopters and heavy artillery in a major offensive against Contra rebel forces, but the government denied reports its troops had crossed the border into Honduras.

Honduran officials also denied Contra claims that Sandinista troops fighting in northern Nicaragua on Tuesday had entered Honduran territory.

Heavy fighting was reported throughout Nicaragua's 5th Military Region, which includes Boaco, Chontales, Rio San Juan and Zelaya South. The Contras said Sandinista troops had overrun some rebel positions.

The Defense Ministry said 35 Contra fighters, seven Sandinista soldiers and one civilian had been killed in the fighting.

A State Department official in Washington, speaking on condition of anonymity, said on Tuesday that initial reports suggested the Sandinistas hoped to deliver a "knockout blow" to the Contras.

The Defense Ministry announced Tuesday that the offensive was launched last Friday and intensified Monday and Tuesday.

The drive occurred a week before the leftist Sandinistas were to negotiate with the U.S.-supported rebels about a cease-fire in their six-year war. Three days of talks scheduled to begin next Monday in the small southern town of Sapoa, near the border with Costa Rica.

The U.S. House of Representatives defeated a $30 million aid package for food and clothing for the rebels two weeks ago, just after U.S. aid ran out. President Reagan opposed the package because it did not contain military aid.

In a White House meeting Tuesday, Reagan pleaded with congressional leaders for a renewal of Contra aid, but met an icy reception from Democrats.

Congressional sources, declining to be identified, said Reagan pounded the table and said, "There are some people around this table who don't seem to know who the bad guys are down there."

Nicaragua did not report the offensive until Tuesday evening, when a Defense Ministry spokesman said it was under way but denied Contra claims that Sandinista troops crossed into Honduras, where the rebels have bases.

"The army has undertaken major offensive operations ... Reports that the army has penetrated Honduras are not true," the spokesman told The Associated Press in a telephone interview. He cannot be identified for security reasons.

In December 1986, Honduran warplanes and artillery pounded Sandinista troops who had penetrated Honduras to attack Contra bases, and U.S. Army helicopters were brought in to ferry Honduran infantrymen to the front.

Honduras charged at the time that up to 2,500 Sandinista troops had gone up to nine miles into Honduras before returning to Nicaragua about a week later.

Contra spokesmen in Washington and Miami claimed Tuesday that Sandinista troops entered Honduras in the latest offensive in pursuit of rebel forces.

Col. Manuel Suarez Benavides, a Honduran armed forces spokesman, said on Tuesday he had no information of Sandinista incursions into his country. "Nevertheless, tomorrow we will probably be able to report on the situation."

President Jose Azcona Hoyo of Honduras was watching developments closely and a government team "is monitoring reports on the subject," a Honduran government source said on Tuesday in Tegucigalpa, the Honduran capital. The source spoke on condition of anonymity.

Israel Cuts Palestinians' Phone Links, Clamps Down On Travel

JERUSALEM (AP) — One Palestinian died today in clashes with Israeli troops in the occupied territories, and hospital officials said soldiers shot and wounded at least eight protesters.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin defended Israel's decision to curtail activities of Palestinians after the government cut telephone links between foreign countries and the West Bank and Gaza Strip and clamped a travel ban on Palestinians in the occupied territories.

The restrictions were aimed at hampering Palestine Liberation Organization activists, whom Israel blames for keeping alive unrest that has claimed 97 Arab lives since Dec. 8.

The army said one Palestinian died and six were wounded in protests near Tulkarm, 40 miles northwest of Jerusalem. The army said the circumstances of the death were under investigation and that no other details were available.

The Arab-owned Palestine Press Service identified the victim as 60-year-old Salim al Yehyeh and said he died after soldiers threw tear gas into his home in a refugee camp on the outskirts of Tulkarm.

Hospital officials said Israeli soldiers shot and wounded eight Palestinians, six of them in the Gaza Strip and two in the West Bank.

In other developments, a PLO-ordered general strike entered its second day today, keeping most Arab workers from their jobs in Israel.

Rabin told high school students that nightly curfews in Gaza were necessary to "reduce their (the Arab activists') capability to move by night, to prepare explosives ... to obstruct roads that carry workers to Israel."

"We will use whatever measures we find necessary within the law," he said.

Trade and Industry Minister Ariel Sharon called for a law that would allow the expulsion of stone throwers. "If we had done it at the right time, there would be far fewer stone throwers now," he said on Israel Army Radio.

According to army estimates, about 2,600 Palestinians have been arrested on riot-related charges, most for throwing stones.

Sharon also called for the expulsion of PLO activists.

"We know exactly who is behind all of these disturbances ... the political arm of the PLO," he said.

Israel deported four Palestinian activists to Lebanon in January, prompting international protests that the action violated the Geneva Conventions on treatment of civilians in occupied lands. Five others detained during the current unrest are facing deportation orders.

On Tuesday, soldiers clashed with Arab protesters throughout the territories, and Arab hospital officials said two Palestinians were shot and killed and 12 wounded. The army, which said one Arab died and four were injured, prevented media coverage of much of the violence.

The telephone and travel restrictions have a two-fold purpose: to demonstrate Israel's determination to regain control of the streets and to keep Palestinian activists from receiving telephone instructions from abroad or from moving freely between the West Bank and Gaza Strip. Israel seized the territories in the 1967 Middle East war.

The ban on direct-dial overseas telephone calls was not likely to be completely effective, however, since it excluded Arab neighborhoods in east Jerusalem, where 130,000 Palestinians live.

The army-run territorial government will lift restrictions when authorities feel a change and the situation calms, informed sources said.

Statewide Winners

W.H. Robinson and Wintergreen elementary schools in Pitt County were statewide winners in the Children's Dental Health Month competition, according to Dr. George Dudney, chief of the state's Dental Public Health Section, and Dr. Lloyd R. Rothschild, chairman of the N.C. Dental Society's Children's Dental Health Month Committee.

The 25 winners out of the 205 schools that participated this year will receive $80 to be used any way they wish to benefit the school. Each of the five district dental societies also offered cash awards.

Events At School

First-grade students at Falkland Elementary School celebrated Newspaper in Education Week with a presentation from Gigi Walter of The Daily Reflector.

Ms. Walter used visuals to demonstrate how the newspaper is made and how color is used. Class members received Newspaper in Education Week balloons.

Black History Month drawing-poster contest winners were Justin Worrell, Kristen Bolton, Christy Williams, Eutebuis Bynum, Heather Sword and Kimberly Bunch.

Winners in the poster contest for Dental Health Month were: Wesley Juezan, Kim Bunch, Crystal Ross, Victor Britton, Melissa McLawhon, Eric Jones, Matthew Ottinger and Bess Clark, first place; Heather Sword, Sheron Pollard, Katie Williams, Akia Harper, Donna Price, Donnie Chavis, Reggie Harper and Kurk Johnson, second place, and Nakiya Harris, Donny Nobles, Carlton Harper Jr., Mike Rogister, Brian Meeks, Trevon Powell, Kristen Bolton and Nathan Esposito, third place.

Pitt County Sheriff's Deputy Tim Copeland visited second-graders at the school and presented preventive techniques on safety for children and stranger awareness. The slide "Power Kids" was presented, and students took a pledge against crime and had booklets to share with parents on crime prevention.

Drivers

by June 15, and specified counties with little chance of hiring enough adult drivers can use 17-year-old drivers whether they turn 18 this school year or not.

Pitt County qualifies for the exception, and all 39 17-year-old bus drivers in the county will be able to work through the school year, said Kennedy.

"The need was more critical in the Conley attendance area than it was in any of the other four attendance areas," said Kennedy. Rural schools and county schools have a more difficult time finding enough adult drivers, he said.

Kennedy said he would have had to replace 16 drivers — more than any other attendance area in the county — by April 1. "That's what we were looking at," he said. "I don't know why they chose that date ... That's going to upset the kids that are riding the buses, especially the elementary kids."

There were also more positions open for high school routes than elementary routes, he said, and that will be a problem again next year because most adults prefer driving elementary school routes.

Kennedy said he has been building a reserve pool of adult drivers and some may begin driving later this year as student drivers give up their routes. The adult drivers will also be ready to step in next year. "When we do begin to work on bus routes next year we will have them in place," he said.

Martin's success in lobbying the General Assembly for $24 million will be a key factor in attracting the adult drivers, said Kennedy. "I hope they put their party differences behind them and say, 'Hey, we need to get drivers to get our kids to school.'

"I think the bottom line there is going to be the amount of money we're going to pay. If the starting pay is going to be in the $6 range it's certainly going to be more attractive than the $4.68 we're starting off at now."

The state has been relying on student drivers for many years, said Kennedy, "and now all of a sudden we're not going to depend upon them any longer. Our whole way of thinking of a bus driver has got to change."

State Sen. Bob Martin, D-Pitt, said there has been talk over the last five years in the General Assembly of increasing salaries and hiring only adult bus drivers, but there was no formal action.

Now that the state's agreement with the Labor Department hinges on more funding for bus drivers, Martin said state lawmakers will work with the governor. "I think that the Senate will do what it takes to solve the problem," he said.

The agreement with the Labor Department also requires the state to remove any 17-year-old drivers who have tickets for moving violations or at-fault accidents on their driving records.

City Ranks Third In Use Of Consultants

vide you with information and data. They'll give you options and alternatives. You choose one that sounds appropriate, then they help you work up to that end," Knowles said. "They give you more documentation on how to get from here to there — implementation and direction."

Knowles said consultants "don't tell a city which policy to choose. They provide a city with an options list and the city chooses, and then you march on.

"Consultants do not dictate policy," Knowles said, "but they can influence it by the options they show. They can influence it by the data they project, but more than often, they are there reacting to policy.

"I don't think the use of consultants is increasing as much as maybe the public perceives it to be increasing. Most cities do not overuse consultants," in Knowles' view.

Have city officials been satisfied with work done by consultants since mid-1985? The answer seems to be, "Yes."

City Attorney Mac McCarley said "we were extremely pleased" with work done by Bobby Bowen of Columbia, S.C., in establishing a new district voting plan for the election of members of the Greenville City Council. "Our plan was approved by the U.S. attorney general the first time we submitted it.

"He was a one-man operation — no computers, just a map and a hand-held calculator. As it turned out, the bidder who was the most qualified was also the low bidder," at $9,000, McCarley said. "The reason we chose Bowen to do this work was because of his extensive experience with other government projects. He had done this same work for two states and over 40 units of local government."

That same year the city began a $45,000 telecommunications study that resulted in a new $13,000 telephone system for the city and a new $650,000 radio system for the police and fire-rescue departments.

According to Ron Kimble, city finance director, OmniCom Inc. of Talahassee, Fla., gave three alternatives for a new telephone system: upgrade the current switchboard ($68,000), buy and install a state-of-the-art switchboard at a cost of $179,000, or move to a telephone company central office-based system with direct indial at a cost of $13,000.

Kimble said the City Council chose the last option and the telephone company allowed the city $10,000 for the trade of the city's old switchboard. So the actual cost of the new telephone system was about $3,000 plus the monthly telephone service charges.

And the police and fire-rescue departments now have a new radio system and OmniCom will continue to follow up to ensure that the system is functioning as planned, Kimble said.

The following fiscal year — 1986-87 — the city spent $25,000 for a new classification and compensation plan study done by Arthur Young.

Gerry Dail, the city's director of personnel, said of the pay plan study, done in conjunction with the Utilities Commission: "A project as big as this really has to be done by a consultant." An outside consultant prevents bias from creeping into the result which allows the conclusions to be more credible, she suggested.

"When you talk about something as sensitive as an individual's paycheck, it's important to maintain a high degree of objectivity," she said.

So far this fiscal year, Greenville has spent $11,179 (out of a total project cost of $26,475) to have a consultant organize and update the city's zoning ordinance, according to Bobby Roberson, Greenville's director of planning and development.

Roberson said the law firm of Robinson & Cole of Hartford and Stamford, Conn., will conduct a comprehensive analysis of the existing ordinance and provide an assessment of necessary changes.

"The two major factors in selecting" Robinson & Cole, Roberson said, "were their experience and their cost." The first is the third largest law agency in Connecticut, and has a "well recognized national reputation for expertise in land use matters," he said.

How about Ayden, Winterville, Farmville and Bethel, the four largest communities in Pitt County behind Greenville?

Farmville, Bethel and Winterville have not used consultants in the past 2½ years, according to officials in those communities.

But Don Russell, Ayden's town manager said that community has spent about $2,900 in consulting fees for several town projects.

Plan To Be Studied

that after a year or so of study that went into it. The other response would seem to me to send a very strong signal back to the City Council that would reiterate the time that the medical committee put in, the time that planning and zoning put in, and the previous City Council put in and state that, 'We've got a good plan and we need to stand by it,'" he said.

Several commission members expressed concerns that sending the plan back without the requested review might create negative repercussions.

"It would seem to me to be politically astute for us to put a month into reviewing it, and make some minor changes abiding by their wishes," said commission member Charles Ziehr.

Ziehr suggested such an action might "smooth some ruffled political feathers" and help create an atmosphere "so everything doesn't get shot down 4-3 as it seems to be setting up to be done."

Ziehr said sending the plan immediately back to council without the requested review might create an atmosphere on the council where "they'll continue to rip the guts out of the medical district plan and make it worse off than it is."

Ruth Leggett agreed that the commission needs to be cautious of the "political realities" surrounding the controversial issue.

Ms. Leggett said it would not be a good idea to say to council "we looked at this for a year and a half and we know this is the best thing."

"We're not getting anywhere by saying it like that," she said.

Ms. Leggett said she felt there must be some misunderstanding by some council members of the process for which special use permits are granted.

Chairman Wallace Wooles said, "I can't really accept the fact that they didn't know the process, they had five months to learn the process."

Wooles also said council members had access to many "experts" including the city manager to help learn the process.

Steve Blades agreed with Wooles and said the idea that they didn't know the process was "difficult to swallow. Ignorance is no excuse," he commented.

Other members of the commission considered the idea of sending the plan back to the council without the requested review.

Warren indicated he did not understand the council's decision.

"It seems to me to be extremely illogical for one point to say I'm going to vote to approve something that was denied by Planning and Zoning and the Board of Adjustments, and then turn right around and say that I want to strengthen, or make more restrictive the MD and MD-1. The two are not consistent in terms of the decisions that were made," Warren said.

"There was a lot of time and effort put in the plan by the Medical District Committee, there was a tremendous amount of review put into the plan by this committee, and then there was a tremendous amount of review put in by City Council before they voted on it, so there were three bodies that spent a lot of time," Warren said.

"It does not seem logical to take special uses that we've set up, and make them permitted uses which is one alternative. The other alternative would be to wipe out all the special uses. That certainly seems just as illogical because they were well thought out when they were placed in there," Warren added.

Ric Miller suggested that by rewriting the plan, it might set a precedent for which the "rules" are changed with every request that comes before the council.

"I say we write back to the council and say the thing's fine just like it is," he said.

After that action was described as a potential "slap in the face" to the council, Willie Pate said, "I certainly take this as a slap in our face by asking us to review it again."

"I know the agony that we've gone through in trying to get this plan in place and I guess they just took it as a personal affront to this commission that they should overrule us and the Board of Adjustments also, and I don't frankly give a damn if they get slapped in the face," he said.

The United States, Britain, the Soviet Union and 58 other nations signed the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty in 1968. It was designed to halt the spread of nuclear weapons.

British Fashion Week Gets Royal Welcome

By BETTIJANE LEVINE
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

LONDON — Persons entering the royal apartments at Kensington Palace were shocked Monday night at finding themselves eyeball-to-eyeball with their hostess, Princess Diana, her hand extended in a cheery hello. Next to the princess, hair slicked back and hand also extended, was wee Prince William, age 5, who solemnly greeted each guest.

The cozy reception for 200 people capped off British Fashion Week here. Everybody had expected to see Diana and perhaps be introduced. Few expected such animated and personal conversation with the future queen, who was elegant in a pale yellow, slim, knee-length suit designed by London's Catherine Walker as she navigated through the crowd, apparently determined to chat with each and every one.

When one emotional guest mentioned that she had watched Diana's wedding on TV and was rather awestruck to meet her in person, the princess gently put her hand on her arm and said, "Don't you get upset or I shall do so, too, and we'll both end up in tears."

Among the guests were British designers Zandra Rhodes, in a long black glittery dress of her own design; Jean Muir, in a simple dark brocade knee-length suit; and Bruce Oldfield, along with U.S. retailers Ellin Saltzman, fashion director of Saks Fifth Avenue, in a cocoa-color, knee-length suit; Bernard Oser of Associated Merchandising Corp, Bernard Taubman of Bloomingdale's, plus a clutch of journalists from Japan, Canada, the continent and the United States.

The palace reception, for which invitations were sent well in advance, was part of the British government's ongoing attempt to persuade influential retailers and journalists to visit the United Kingdom. The government need not have worried.

This city's quirky fashion charms exert such lure for retailers that even those with little budget for English clothes this season came to scout fall trends at 300 booths and in dozens of fashion shows at the huge Olympia Trade Center.

The devalued dollar and rising production costs in Europe has elevated prices for American buyers by 20 percent to 35 percent, according to most estimates. Still, there are bargains to be found, especially in English ball gowns and party dresses, which will constitute the biggest percentage of U.S. retailer purchases this season.

Last weekend, fresh off the plane from Milan, dozens of buyers crammed into booths of Bellville Sassoon and Murray Arbeid, both of whom specialize in evening frocks. Arbeid, who estimates that 70 percent of his business is done in U.S. stores, does jewel-toned satin and glitter-splashed formals, which are lavish with "the kind of details that go into couture clothes." The average price of one of his dresses is $1,750 at such stores as Saks Fifth Avenue, I. Magnin, and Neiman-Marcus — a price that would be doubled, buyers say, if the British made dresses were made in Europe or the United States.

Not everyone here is cost-conscious, as was evidenced this week at Anouska Hempel's show in a posh London club. Hempel's velvets, crepes and silk taffeta after-five dresses are mostly black and torso-hugging, but with such precision cut and unusual details at shoulders, sleeves and necklines that they could never appear mass-produced or inexpensive. Still, the $5,000-to-$10,000 price tags on these dresses is a shocker until you talk to someone like Tommy Perse of Maxfield's in Los Angeles, who says they sell as soon as they reach the store.

Aside from the amazing array of special party dresses for rich and not-so-rich women, there is no specific London look this season as designers here have receded into their own fashion fantasies rather than seeking inspiration from the social fabric of the streets. In fact, the streets are a sea of pale blue denim legs peeking out from beneath conservative cloth jackets of every description. And the British collections of daytime clothes seem equally bland.

Vivienne Westwood, former fashion rebel, has matured into a fan of Miss Marple mysteries and medieval armor. Her hot-ticket show featured vests that transmute to jackets withn the addition of pieces of fabric that snap onto shoulders and down the arms, in the same way armor must have been made. The fabric pieces are all mismatched, giving a sort of "found object" look to the garments. For more fun, Westwood places miniature crinoline under the kick pleats of her tweed skirts, so that the skirt bottom juts forward to reveal the frills. Wispy chiffon capes and cover-ups float above clunky tweed suit jackets for men and women, a trend inexplicably turning up at many London shows.

Westwood's best received items were miniskirted dresses in bright prints or leather, one of which had a front and back but no sides.

Katharine Hamnett, once London's fashion iconoclast, now favors an Edwardian dandy look with brocade vests gleaming under high-button frock coats above trousers often tucked into boots. Models wore Hamnett's luxurious, cocoon-like, velvet cloaks with nothing else but huge, portrait-brim hats.

Among the most-applauded clothes shown this week were those of Jean Muir and Emanuel. Muir's zingy color scheme (including bright pink, orange and green) took equally zingy shape in daytime cashmere sweaters, jersey dresses and suits with lots of body curves, including undulating peplums. Her evening wear was embellished with sequins or shiny leather appliques.

David and Elizabeth Emanuel, who designed Princess Diana's wedding dress in 1981, also showed elegantly body-conscious clothes, invariably above the knee and of jewel-toned lush fabrics such as silk velvet.

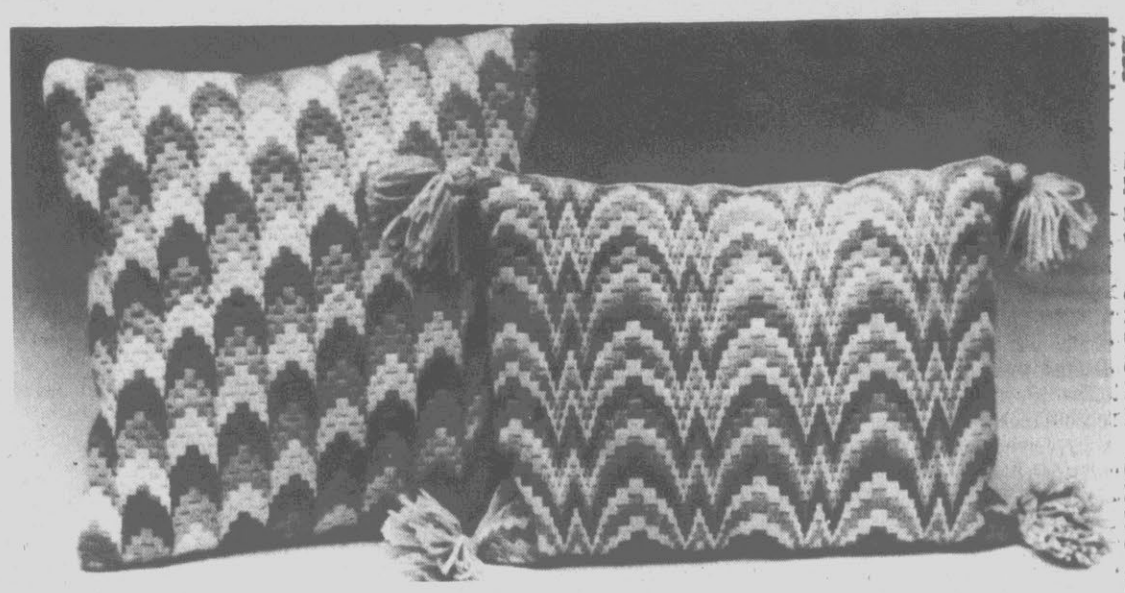
Rifat Ozbek, the London-based Turkish-born designer, was another who opted for the short, clingy look — although his stretchy chenilles and velvets are tighter, brighter and shorter than almost anyone's. He also showed very wide-leg, ankle or calf-length jump suits, above-the-knee coat dresses, and shiny Lurex miniskirts over body suits. Ozbek often mixed multiple jewel shades and shiny with matte textures all in a single, sleek outfit.

Jasper Conran's look was based on the Z-shape, with jackets zigging down from waist to hips on one side, and skirts zagging down from knee to calf in the other direction. This asymmetric look was somewhat disorienting to look at, and would probably be even more so to wear.

Alistair Blair majored in pants that stopped at the knee, calf or ankle. His newest trouser is wide-leg with an elongated petal of fabric that runs down the outside of each leg, flapping slightly as the wearer walks. With these, he showed a variety of slim, belted jackets. Blair also likes checks mixed in different sizes, teaming a large black and white houndstooth check over a smaller tablecloth check in the same colors.

John Galliano opted for what he called a medieval look, except when he switched to a flamenco theme. But promotional names hardly matter with this young designer, a rising star in the international fashion firmament. For colder climates, Galliano has devised huge stoles that button onto suits, shrouding the shoulders and forming a picture frame for the face. For warmer zones, Galliano's one-piece, double-breasted jump suits have generously proportioned tops and wide-leg pants cropped at knee, calf or ankle.

Ten days of fashion shows start in Paris Wednesday.



FLAME STITCH — This stitch is seen in Renaissance period tapestries, upholstery and pillows.

Flame Stitch Decorates Pillow

Pat's Pointers
Pat Trexler

If you're not already a fan of bargello needlepoint (also known as Florentine embroidery) — now's the perfect time to find out how quick, easy and fascinating this ancient needle art can be!

The bold and beautiful flame stitch used in these handsome pillows is widely seen in Renaissance period tapestries, upholstery and pillows, but it adapts beautifully to the most modern decor, and you'll be amazed at how easy it is to create a masterpiece!

To obtain directions for making the Flame Stitch Pillows, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-031388 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. N-031388 by sending check or money order for $14.95 to Pat Trexler at the same address. Kit price includes shipping charges, instruction leaflet, canvas, needle and yarn in your choice of off-white with shades of blue or shades of rose.

People who think of needlepoint only as tiny diagonal stitches worked as a background around a reworked center design may tend to think of bargello stitchery as a "new" type of needlepoint.

Actually, it is a very ancient needle art, steeped in history and called by various names. You may have heard it referred to as flame stitch, Florentine embroidery or canvas work, Hungarian point or some other title. I usually use the term bargello because more people tend to recognize that term for the long, straight stitches that characterize this type of canvas work or needlepoint.

There are various legends about the origins of bargello stitchery. It is said that it was originated in the 15th or 16th century by prisoners in the dark and dank Bargello Prison in Florence, Italy, which is now a great museum.

Another story concerns a Hungarian princess who is said to have brought a trousseau of exotically embroidered garments with her to Italy when she married the son of a noble Florentine family.

Whether these myths have any foundation in fact or not, you can create beautiful designs with bargello or Florentine work. The stitches can be worked vertically or horizontally, which distinguishes this type of stitchery from other needlepoint stitches that are usually worked diagonally.

The bargello patterns follow a definite geometric patter. In almost all types of design, the first row requires careful counting, but all following rows are worked just below or above, following the same "peak and valley" lines, eliminating further counting.

While it can be worked with vividly contrasting colors, it is traditionally done in softly blending shades, with a new shade introduced on each successive row.

Also, each stitch is usually worked over four or more canvas threads, making for quick work. Although the stitches themselves are perfectly straight, you can achieve illusions of curves, peaks and a variety of other shapes with the different patterns available.

These descriptions may convince you that this is an advanced needlepoint technique. Nothing could be further from the truth. When I have occasionally given seminars on needlepoint, I have found that the beginners find bargello the easiest needlepoint stitch to learn.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: We have a very dear family member who loves to entertain. However, she does not wear her eyeglasses in the kitchen (only for reading) and her kitchen gets dirtier by the week. We find silverware with particles of old food on them, and it is at the point where we'd rather not eat there. We go to her house quite often, but we know no way to tell her.

Perhaps she and others who are too vain to wear their eyeglasses will take heed. I'm sure there are many of them. — M. IN WEST PALM BEACH

DEAR M.: Your relative has a bigger problem than the vanity that prevents her from wearing her eyeglasses. She needs to learn how to wash dishes and flatware properly. You do her no favor by pretending not to notice old food particles on the silverware. Take this dear family member aside and tell her!

It's far better than inventing excuses to refuse her invitations.

DEAR ABBY: Can a person turn in another person — a friend or spouse — for drunk driving? Say, for example, you know that this person is out getting drunk and plans to drive himself home. Could you phone the police and tell them where this person is and describe the kind of car he's driving, so he can be followed, pulled over and arrested?

Or must the drunk driver commit some kind of traffic violation before he can be pulled over, made to walk a straight line, have his breath tested and all that?

Also, can the person who is turning someone in remain anonymous? I am just a good citizen who wants to remove someone from the streets temporarily before that person removes someone from the earth permanently. Sign me ... A GOOD CITIZEN

DEAR CITIZEN: I cannot speak for other cities, but a spokesperson for the L.A. Police Department said: "If a caller phones to report that he or she has witnessed someone driving erratically, the LAPD will send someone to check out the report. But they will not send an officer to a bar to lie in wait for potential drunk drivers. We cannot arrest someone for what he 'might' do. Someone must witness the person breaking the law. 'Knowing' that person is about to do so is not sufficient.

"For example, if I pull up to a red light and see a man slumped over unconscious in his car and I investigate and smell liquor from two feet away, can I arrest the man for drunk driving? No! I can charge him for being drunk in a public place, but since I did not see him driving, I cannot arrest him for drunk driving.

"And, yes, the name of the witness can be withheld on request."

NCPC To Honor CharterMembers

The N.C. Press Club, an affiliate of the National Federation of Press Women, will celebrate its 10th anniversary Saturday in Chapel Hill by honoring its charter members.

National press officials who will participate in the spring meeting include Mary Lou Webb, president of NFPW; David Kinney, editor of Business North Carolina, and Stephen Koepp, associate editor for Time magazine.

Koepp, specialist in economy and business writing, and Kinney, former Bagehot Fellow in Economics and Business Journalism at Columbia University, will be featured speakers at a morning session at the UNC School of Journalism on "Crash, Boom, Ticker Tales and Deficit Woes: Reporting on a Changing Economy."

Mrs. Webb, associate editor of the Franklin Advocate of Meadville, Miss., and editor of the Record, Gloster, Miss., will be the featured speaker at the annual communications contest awards luncheon to be held in the State Dining Room, Morehead Planetarium. She will also officiate at the installation of new officers.

Other activities include a special session for student participants, some of whom will receive press awards at the luncheon.

Members who will be honored include those who participated in the chartering: Clara Cartrette, Whiteville, founding president; Pat Alspaugh, Greensboro; Pat Bailey, Graham; Barbara Fussel, Raleigh; Winnie McLohon, formerly of Ayden; Ellen Scarborough, Fayetteville; Gwen White, Kill Devil Hills; Marianne Baines, Patricia Moore and Rosalie Trotman, all of Greenville.

Other charterers being honored are: Claire Brisson, Clinton; Sondra J. Covington, formerly of Hendersonville; Bessie Culpepper, Elizabeth City; Catherine Graziano, Raleigh; Catherine Monk, Hamlet; Cookie Snyder, Clemmons; and Lib Swindell, Greensboro.

Mrs. Webb, as former southern regional coordinator of NFPW, also participated in N.C. Press Club's charter ceremony.

Since its founding with 17 members in June 1978, NCPC has increased its membership to include 106 men and women in communications, including newspaper, radio, public relations, photography, freelance and fiction writing. The NFPW has chapters in 50 states and the District of Columbia.

Ross-Howard Vows Spoken

MRS. ROSS

MAGNOLIA — Rebecca Lea Howard and Donald Arthur Ross were united in marriage in a candlelight ceremony March 5 at Carroll Street Church. The Rev. Harold Turner of Beulaville, former pastor of the bride, officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert L. Howard of Magnolia. The bridegroom is the son of Juanita Ross of Kinston and Arthur Ross of Birmingham, Ala.

Escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a floor-length gown with a chapel train of traditional bridal satin and re-embroidered alencon lace. The fitted bodice featured a scoop neckline outlined with scalloped alencon lace motifs, leg o'mutton sleeves and torso waist. Alencon lace motifs encrusted with seed pearls were appliqued on the bodice and sleeves. The satin circular skirt extended into a chapel train. Scalloped lace bordered the hemline of the skirt and train. She wore a tiered waltz-length veil of illusion with a hand-rolled edge accented with scattered clusters of seed pearls flowing from an alencon lace bandeau etched with seed pearls with crystals. She wore a single strand of pearls and pearl earrings. She carried a nosegay of all white silk roses.

A program of music was presented by organist Linda Wood of Wilmington and vocalist David Knowles of Watha. Both are cousins of the bride.

Pat Matthis of Richlands served her sister as matron of honor and Terri Tyndall of Snow Hill, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. Laura English of Snow Hill, niece of the bride, was flower girl.

Michael Garrett of Kinston was best man. Groomsmen were John Nelson of Ayden and Gray Matthis of Richlands.

Jean P. West of Warsaw directed the wedding and Debbie Nelson of Ayden presided at the register and distributed programs.

The bride and bridegroom are employed by Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Having had a wedding trip to Williamsburg, Va., the couple lives in Greenville.

After the ceremony, a reception was held in the church fellowship hall given by the bride's parents.

The wedding party and immediately family members were entertained at an after-rehearsal dinner at Josef's in Kenansville.

The bride was honored at a miscellaneous shower and bachelorette party prior to her marriage.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed a small gain today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose .83 to 2,048.24 in the first half hour.

Gainers slightly outnumbered losers in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 468 up, 446 down and 578 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 19.47 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Among actively traded blue chips, Union Carbide rose 5/8 to 25 and Coca-Cola was up 5/8 at 39 1/8, but American Telephone & Telegraph dropped 1/4 to 28 3/8.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks edged up .03 to 150.02. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .35 at 297.10.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 2.66 to 2,047.41.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 10 to 9 on the NYSE. Big Board volume totaled 133.17 million shares, against 131.89 million million in the previous session.

Monk

in Texas and has a master's degree from N.C. A&T State University.

He has been principal of Nichols School, Bruce-Falkland Elementary School and South Ayden High School and is currently principal of Ayden Middle School in Ayden.

"Having been born and reared in Pitt County, I have a first-hand perspective of needs of this area," he said. "I grew up on a farm and still live in a rural community. My entire educational career, with the exception of college, has been in Pitt County schools. My entire work experience as an educator has been as a teacher and a principal within the county system. My background of experience will be an invaluable aid to me in serving the people of this county.

"In addition to an awareness of the many problems in the everyday lives of the citizens of Pitt County, there is a need for increasing minority representation in public jobs, on committees, and governing bodies, and for increased and more sincere efforts from all concerned for the betterment of race relations at every level of county interaction," Monk said.

Monk has served twice as president of the Pitt County chapter of the North Carolina Teachers Association, president of the Pitt County Principal's Association, member of the Pitt County schools' Minority Task Force and is currently chairman of the Pitt-Beaufort Selective Service Board and is a member of the board of directors, Ayden Council of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

He is a deacon of Arthur Chapel Free Will Baptist Church and is a member of the Christian Education Department of the United American FWB Denomination Inc.

Married to the former Virginia Mills, Monk is the father of four children and has nine grandchildren.

Shooting

HENDERSON, N.C. (AP) — A 2-year-old Henderson child shot himself with a .25-caliber automatic pistol Sunday morning, according to police reports.

The child, Shelton Keon Harris, found the pistol at 11:30 a.m. on a porch bannister where he was visiting a friend, Alice Harris, authorities said. Mrs. Harris said she had the pistol nearby because a man threatened her daughter.

Mrs. Harris said she was distracted when the child walked behind the chair she occupied, picked up the gun and shot himself in the chest.

He died at Maria Parham Hospital.

Outgoing board chairman Reid Hooper and other outgoing board members Norma Van Veld, Joe Parker and Gene Paramore were honored. Each was given a plaque noting his or her years of service and a picture of the hospital.

Chief finance officer Kathy Barger reported that revenue-per-patient-day is $789, $52 more than was budgeted for this fiscal year. Net income for February was $806,626, $614,904 above budget. Year-to-date net income was $904,021 above budget.

The board approved capital budget requests of $326,662. These included a modem for a hospital dictation system for medical records at $10,740; work on parking lots and driveways costing $49,000; $250,000 for a materials management system for the information systems; $7,525 for pulse oximeters for respiratory care, and a mobile food cart for dietary at $9,397.

Minimum pay for registered nurses was raised from $9.73 an hour to $10.50 an hour, with a "clinical ladder" program for nurse profiency and experience approved. It was reported that $412,462 will have to be spent this year to institute the pay raises.

Trustees were invited to attend the annual employee picnic to be held April 30, the anniversary of moving into the present hospital building 11 years ago.

Fire Strands Cruise Ship Off Mexico

MIAMI (AP) — An engine fire broke out today on the Scandinavian Star, leaving the cruise ship adrift in the Gulf of Mexico with more than 700 people on board, authorities said.

"The fire is under control right now, but I don't have word that it's out," said Chief Petty Officer Joe Dye of the Coast Guard Miami office.

No fire injuries were reported, but an unidentified 71-year-old male passenger suffered a heart attack, Dye said. A helicopter was dispatched from Homestead Air Force Base south of Miami to the man up.

The Scandinavian Star was about 35 miles off Isla Mujeres, a Mexican island north of the tourist resort Cancun in the Yucatan peninsula, the Coast Guard said.

Coast Guard spokesmen said that even though the fire was under control, the engine room had been sealed off and carbon dioxide had been pumped in, and the ship was dead in the water.

The cruise ship Canada Star and another vessel, the Vera Cruz I, were standing by to assist, and a U.S. Coast Guard cutter was en route to the scene about 500 miles southwest of Miami.

The Canada Star's captain, Jens Thorn, said that the fire appeared to have been brought under control, and there was no reason to evacuate the 439 passengers. There were also 268 crew members aboard.

"In the event that the fire breaks out again, and that passengers have to evacuate the vessel, we will be there to assist and take the passengers," Thorn said.

"Our report is that it's under control, they have engine compartment sealed and they've pumped CO2 in there to smother the flames," said Petty Officer Dan Vogeley said.

Petty Officer Brian Lincoln said the ship's captain had requested additional fire-fighting equipment, such as foam and CO2.

Dye and Ms. DeChello said officials weren't sure what sparked the fire, which began shortly after 1 a.m.

Charges

embezzlement charges, Miles was charged with six counts of wilfully attempting to evade or defeat North Carolina individual income taxes for the years 1977, 1978, 1979, 1980, 81 and 1982, as well as one count of aiding and abetting National Contractors to wilfully fail to pay the state use tax.

The charges against Miles resulted from an investigation by a special agent with the N.C. Department of Revenue's special audit unit in Raleigh, Sanders said.

According to Sanders, if convicted on the embezzlement charges, Miles could receive a maximum sentence of 20 years in prison on each count and fines at the discretion of the court. If convicted of the tax evasion and failure to pay charges, Sanders said Miles could receive a total of three years and one month in jail and fines of $6,200.

Miles was released under $10,000 bond pending a court appearance.

Connecticut Feels At Home In 10-2 Pasting Of Pirates

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

The University of Connecticut Huskies responded to the icy-cold weather at Harrington Field Tuesday afternoon, and, thinking they were back at home, pounded East Carolina, 10-2, in college baseball action.

The Pirates were held firmly in check by the Huskies' Chris Gaudio, who went the first eight innings and allowed but four hits and two unearned runs. He walked one and struck out five.

"He did an outstanding job for them," Pirate coach Gary Overton said. "It was just the reverse of (Monday — when ECU's Jake Jacobs shut out the Huskies on two hits)."

This time, however, the Huskies came out with their bats loaded and struck quickly for a 3-0 lead that the Pirates never overcame.

"Today we faced a hungry team," Overton said. "They wanted it more than we did. We fell behind early and it took our offense away from us. They kept banging and banging and adding to the lead."

The Pirates started Gary Smith, who hadn't worked in over a week, and he was drilled early, lasting only two and a third innings, giving up five hits, six runs, a walk and recording two strikeouts. Tim Langdon came on in relief, but he was also pumped and left after just a third of an inning, having allowed two hits and a run.

Jonathan Jenkins came on after that and — except for one bad pitch that was tagged for a homer — retired 15 of 16 he faced until an error and a hit helped score a run in the eighth.

"I thought Jenkins threw well us for, except for that one changeup he hung up there," Overton said. "And by then, it didn't make that much difference."

Overton said he probably made a tactical mistake in pitching two straight left-handers against the Huskies (Smith and Langdon). "They seemed to handle the lefties better than they did the righties. Smith has to keep his fast ball away and has to hit spots. Right now, he's not doing either."

The game was over quickly as it turned out. Brian Specyalski opened the first with a triple down the right field line. Scott Reimold walked and Marcelino Sellas followed with a three-run home run to left field.

It was the a lead the Pirates never overcame.

The Huskies added to the lead in the third with four more runs. Specyalski opened with a single and with one away, Sellas singled also. Andy Walker singled through the hole into right, scoring Specyalski and Ken Coffee followed with an identical hit bringing in Sellas. Mark Drabinski got a hit to left, loading the bases and Dave Federowicz walked, forcing in Walker. Coffee then scored on Mark Pizzella's ground out.

A home run by Walker to left in the fourth made it 8-0 for the Huskies.

Another run scored in the eighth. With two away, Pizzella reached on an error and stole second. He took third on an error on the play and scored when Chris Saunder singled to right.

The final run came in the ninth. Sellas walked and Walker reached on a fielder's choice. Drabinski singled in Sellas.

"You know, they got a lot of hits, but except for the two home runs, they didn't get any of the hits in the air. They were all ground balls that just found their way through the infield," Overton said.

East Carolina's only runs came in the sixth. David Ritchie reached on a fielder's choice and Jay McGraw was safe on an error. With two away, Steve Godin singled to center, scoring both runners.

Smith Is Happy Just To Be In

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — With one of his youngest teams ever and a rigorous schedule, North Carolina coach Dean Smith says he was worried at the beginning of the season that his Tar Heels might not make the NCAA tournament this year.

But North Carolina, led by all-American J.R. Reid and Scott Williams on the inside, and by Jeff Lebo around the perimeter, achieved a 24-6 record and captured the top seed for the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament with an 11-3 league mark.

"I do think this team has improved over the course of the season. I think we're playing much better and that's why I feel pretty good about them," Smith said Tuesday.

Smith said a look at his schedule indicates why he worried that he might not have made the 64-team field. Eight of the 14 conference games were decided by six points or less, and four of the six losses were by four points or fewer.

"So many close games. The worst that could have happened — we're fighting to be .500," Smith said.

Smith will be making his 14th straight trip to the tournament, but he says he was worried about the streak in October.

"I know you guys might laugh, but I really wanted to make sure we made the NCAA tournament," Smith said at a news conference. "Then you always have a chance. And that wasn't a given in my mind."

Smith was last doubtful in 1978. North Carolina was the No. 1 pick in pre-season, but had lost three of the players who had led the Tar Heels to the championship game in 1977. That team got to the first round of the NCAA tournament and lost to San Francisco. And he said other teams may have made the same mistake of assuming an NCAA berth was a certainty based on past performances.

"I'm sure it was a year ago after Louisville won, that they thought they were going," Smith said.

The Tar Heels won't have the added edge of playing in front of their fans in the East Regional at Chapel Hill in the Dean Smith Center, however. North Carolina is seeded second in the West Regional and will meet North Texas State Thursday night in Salt Lake City.

Smith is thankful that he is entering an NCAA tournament with all 15 scholarship players, a rarity for recent Tar Heel teams.

"In '82, if we'd had one of the five guys out, we wouldn't be having that banner up there," Smith said, referring to a blue-and-white banner chronicling the 1982 Tar Heel national championship team.

To start this year's march toward a second title, the Tar Heels will want to rebound quickly from a 65-61 loss to Duke in the ACC finals, a tough loss that Smith said took its toll on the team because he'd placed special emphasis on winning the title.

Smith also will have to get Reid and Williams back into the offense after they were shut down by the Blue Devils. Reid score seven points in the ACC title game, all in the second half, and Williams had eight.

Then, there's North Texas State.

"Right now, to get ready mentally for North Texas State is what our goal is," Smith said. "I think that is essential because they're capable."

The Mean Green, 17-12, is a very quick team, Smith said, but not very tall. That would give North Carolina an edge close to the basket. But to counter, North Texas State has 6-foot-7 Ronnie Morgan, whom Smith compares with Adrian Dantley in physical — and scoring — attributes.

Morgan averaged 15.3 points and 9.9 rebounds per game, while the leader for the Mean Green is Tony Worrell, a 6-7 North Carolina native averaging 20.3 points per game.

But Smith is looking forward to winning a title with the team he was wondering about six months ago.

"I think we'll struggle early and play well in the tournament," Smith said. "I say struggle early, I mean getting over the Duke loss."

Headed To Salt Lake City

Greene Central Upsets Wolfpack

SNOW HILL — Greene Central jumped on top of Whiteville early and never looked back, as the Rams upset the Wolfpack, 75-54, in the 2-A Eastern Regional Preliminary Tuesday night.

Tyrone Streeter scored the first four points of the game, staking the Rams to a 4-0 lead they would never relinquish. Greene Central led 15-13 after the opening period and then moved out to a 37-24 lead by halftime thanks to a 22-13 scoring edge over the second quarter.

Shay Beaman scored seven of his 15 points during the second period while Anthony Jones had seven of his 13 and Reggie Atkinson had six of his 10 points during the same period.

Greene Central led by as many as 24 points in the final quarter and Whiteville could get no closer than 18 during the final eight minutes.

Chester McGlockton led Whiteville with 24 points while Wayne Gore added 13.

The Rams move to 17-11 and will face Wake Forest-Rolesville, an 83-73 winner over Wallace-Rose Hill Tuesday night. That game will be played Thursday at 5:30 p.m. at the Cumberland County Arena in Fayetteville.

Conley To Defend Title

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

If D.H. Conley is to have a chance to defend its state 3-A basketball title, the Vikings will quite possibly have to make it a clean sweep of the top three teams from the Mid-State Conference.

The Vikings earned the right to return to Fayetteville for the Eastern Regionals Thursday by defeating the No. 2 team from the Mid-State Conference, Burlington Williams, 67-61.

3-A Eastern Regionals
D.H. Conley vs. Western Alamance
□Records: Conley 20-7; Western Alamance 18-9
□Mascots: Conley — Vikings; Western Alamance — Warriors
□Conference: Conley — Coastal; Western Alamance — Mid-State
□Coaches: Conley — Walter Claybrook; Western Alamance — Mike Tolley
□Probably Starting Lineups:
D.H. Conley Vikings
•C — Phil Medlin 6-8
•F — Paul Merritt 6-4
•F — Jonathan Bonner 6-3
•G — Bershaun Thompson 6-1
•G — Bronswell Patrick 6-2
Western Alamance
•C — Jon Brown 6-3
•F — Garland Summers 6-3
•F — B.J. Evans 6-0
•G — Tooey Loy 6-0
•G — Derrick Miles 5-10

Next up for Conley is Western Alamance, the third-place team from the same conference.

Should Conley win that game, lying in wait is 29-1 Bartlett-Yancey, who the Vikings eliminated in the Eastern Finals last year, 53-51.

The Buccaneers face Northwest Guilford in the early game Thursday with the winner taking on the victor from the Conley-Western Alamance contest in the Eastern final Saturday.

The Warriors weren't in the playoffs a year ago, so as far as experience goes, the edge should supposedly go to Conley.

"I don't think it can hurt any," Claybrook said. "I really don't know (though). Each night you walk on the floor, you really don't truthfully know. With our consistency you don't know from quarter to quarter."

Consistent play hasn't exactly been a hallmark of the Vikings this season. When they are good, they can be dominant. But on the other hand, when they are bad, they can be dominated.

"Overall we are playing better than we did early in the year," Claybrook said. If you could throw out the West Craven loss in the conference tournament. We still have inconsistency. We can look great for three minutes and then we can look below average for a few minutes. But it's improved over what it has been."

Claybrook has juggled the lineup all year, looking for the right combinations. One by-product of that has been that a lot of people have played and that has added depth to the squad.

"I think that has really been something that has helped us," he said. "Our depth helped us (against Burlington Williams). We were fresher at the end. As far as starting, we've gone back and forth between guards and forwards. that's just the way we're doing it."

Lately, Bershaun Thompson and Bronswell Patrick have been starting at the guards, with James Smith and Sherwood Wilder backing them up. Both Thompson and Smith have similar statistics with 2.5 points a game and two assists per game. At the off guard, both Patrick and Wilder average about six points a game. At one of the forward spots, sophomores Terry Williams and Paul Merritt average just over eight points and five rebounds a contest.

The two set spots are at center with 6-8 senior forward Phil Medlin and 6-3 forward Jonathan Bonner.

Faison's Jumper Sinks Pant-Hers

BETHEL — Jennifer Faison hit a jumper with just under a minute to go to put James Kenan ahead by one and the Lady Tigers held on from there for a 52-51 win over North Pitt in the 2-A girls' pre-regional championship Tuesday night.

Faison's basket came with 52 seconds remaining. On the ensuing inbounds possession, North Pitt had trouble getting the ball into play and turned the ball over to the Lady Tigers.

With eight seconds remaining, two James Kenan players converged on a loose ball with a North Pitt player, who was then called for the foul. That sent Faison to the foul line, but she missed the front end of the one and one. Keisha Pilgreen rebounded the miss for North Pitt, dribbled the length of the court but then missed a shot at the buzzer to give James Kenan the win.

North Pitt led early on, using a 14-8 scoring edge in the second quarter to hold a 27-21 halftime lead. Amy Heath keyed the run for North Pitt with six second-period points.

James Kenan rallied in the third quarter to narrow the gap to 37-34.

In the fourth quarter, Teresa Collins scored nine points of her 14 points to help the Lady Tigers rally to take the lead.

James Kenan, which was led by Anita Southerland with 16 points, Collins with 14 and Faison with 13, advances to the regionals at South View High School in Fayetteville Wednesday.

North Pitt, which was led by Gwen Pilgreen with 19 points and Keisha Pilgreen with 12, closes the year at 18-8.

Bunn Rallies, Nips Chargers By 74-69

BUNN — Bunn put an end to Ayden-Grifton's basketball season Tuesday night, handing the Chargers a 74-69 loss in the 2-A Eastern Regional preliminaries.

Ayden-Grifton had forged out to a 61-60 lead with four minutes to go but soon after that lost guard Ronnell Peterson, who scored 20 points on the night, to fouls, and Bunn took advantage, outscoring the Chargers 14-7 the rest of the way to take the win and advance to Fayetteville for the 2-A Eastern Regionals.

Ayden-Grifton moved out to an early 20-14 lead after the first quarter as Leon Dixon scored six points.

But Bunn rallied in the second period, outscoring the Chargers, 26-12, to take a 40-32 lead into intermission.

Milton Richardson had nine of his 22 points in the second quarter while Bobby Richardson had six of his 15 during the same span.

The two teams played even over the third quarter before Bunn pulled away from the foul-plagued Chargers in the final minutes.

"I though we played poorly the second quarter and the foul situation piled up on us as the game went on," said Charger coach Bob Murphrey. "I thought the real difference in the ballgame was that every player we had got in foul trouble. We couldn't play aggressive defense."

Dixon was the game's high scorer with 28 points.

"I was real pleased with Leon Dixon," Murphrey said. "He's been real steady. He's averaged 25 points a game for the playoffs since we started the sectionals. I'm real pleased with his game right now. He's by far our most improved player."

The Chargers close out the year at 19-9.

Cards Confirmed In Phoenix Move

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — As with the Oakland, er, Los Angeles Raiders and Baltimore, er, Indianapolis Colts, before them, it may take a while before Phoenix Cardinals rolls trippingly off the tongues of football fans.

But the Cardinals, kept in limbo for two months, are finally here and already settling in. NFL owners, brushing aside a last-minute plea from St. Louis politicians and businessmen, voted 26-0 with two abstentions to ratify the move announced in January by owner William Bidwill.

"We want to become part of the community as quickly as possible," Bidwill said in his usually reserved tone after only the Raiders and Miami Dolphins abstained from making the league vote unanimous.

The shift marks the third in six years for the once stable NFL and follows the moves, made without permission, by the Raiders in 1982 and Colts in 1984. In fact, the last franchise shift that was made with league permission also involved the Cardinals — in 1959 from Chicago to St. Louis.

It also creates an NFC East that stretches 2,500 miles from New York to Phoenix, a kind of geographical "X" pattern with the NFC West, which runs from San Francisco to Atlanta. But despite the seeming logic of swapping the Cardinals and Falcons, Commisioner Pete Rozelle said there was unlikely to be any realignment until the next league expansion, at least three years off.

Moreover, NFC East teams seem happy with taking home the extra revenue — visiting teams get 40 percent of the gate — from that 70,000-seat Sun Devil Stadium at Tempe where the Cardinals will play rather than 40 percent from an often half-empty Busch Stadium at St. Louis.

The Cardinals also got to move without paying the indemnity to the league based on the differences in markets — estimated between $10 million and $24 million — because the owners want to see what precedent is set when the courts decide the indemnity in the Raiders' move to Los Angeles. But that means they could get off cheaply. Al Davis, the Raiders' managing general partner, predicted he would have to pay nothing, putting Bidwill in what could be a similar position.

But there was a big difference between the move of the Raiders and Colts on the one hand and the Cards on the other.

Unlike Davis and Robert Irsay of the Colts, Bidwill is considered "a league man," someone who is as concerned with the NFL as a whole as with his own franchise.

"We kept everyone informed," Bidwill said. "I don't think anyone supports the movement of franchises unless there is a forceful reason. I believe we had one."

Bidwill's reason was the lack of action by the city and county of St. Louis to build a new stadium. A civic group promised to construct a 70,000-seat domed football stadium but that was deemed too little, too late by the owners.

"I'm always wary when there's government involved," Tex Schramm of the Dallas Cowboys said. "You've always got politics in the way before things get approved."

The move creates some scheduling problems for the NFL because daytime temperatures in September and October often run into the 100s here. Bidwill said that he had asked for his schedule to be "pushed back," with the bulk of his early season games on the road and perhaps an early night game thrown in.

At least one division rival agreed.

"Since the league seems to send us to St. Louis to freeze every Decmeber, I hope they'll remember that when they schedule now and let us visit the Cards in December again," George Young, general manager of the New York Giants, said.

The other action Tuesday involved rules changes.

The most significant move involved increasing from 30 seconds to 45 the amount of time for putting the ball. The 45-second interval will begin immediately after the whistle blows ending the previous play.

The rule, which will be used during the regular season, is an offshoot of a 40-second clock that was used experimentally in last year's preseason, then rejected after almost every coach in the league objected that it didn't give them enough time to make changes.

The teams also passed a rule that may encourage more attempts to block punts.

But they rejected a proposal that would have allowed defensive units to score one point by returning a botched extra point attempt to the opponent's end zone, and another that would make any infraction by the ofensive team on a kick a 10-yard penalty from where the ball is whistled dead after the play.

They also turned down a move by the Seattle Seahawks that would have allowed linebacker Brian Bosworth to wear the number 44, the number he wore in college. NFL rules allow linebackers to wear numers only in the 50s or 90s.

The punt block rule stems from only a slight modification in the penalty for running into the kicker. But it retained the 15-yard penalty and automatic first down for roughing the kicker, which accounts for only about 10 percent of such calls.

Under the old rule, running into the kicker — sometimes simply brushing him — resulted in a 5-yard penalty.

Jags, Rams Win Openers

SNOW HILL — Cedric Collins and T.J. Johnson both collected two hits as Greene Central opened its high school basebal season with a 9-1 win over West Craven Tuesday.

West Craven moved out to an ealy 1-0 lead before the Rams came back to score two runs in the fifth and seven more in the sixth to take the win.

Jeff Tyson singled to open the fifth. He was balked to second. After one out, T.J. Johnson singled to put runners on the corners. After two outs, Tommy Eason singled in Tyson and Johnson.

In the seventh, Walt McKeel doubled in one run. Tyson drove in two more with another double and Eason had a three-run homer.

McKeel, Eason, Cornelius Hill and Allen Vandiford all had two hits apiece for the Rams, 1-0 on the year.

Greene Central returns to action at North Lenoir Friday.

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central opened its 1988 baseball season with a 10-4 romp over Roanoke High School.

The Redskins jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the first inning of the contest. Bob Harris walked and stole second, scoring on Jesse Carlyle's single. Mark Whitaker was hit by a pitch and Rusty Carmon walked to load the bases. Stacy Whitfield then singled in Carlyle.

Farmville Central broke the game open with five runs in the bottom of the third. Alexander Daniels walked and George Burnette singled. Mike Vandiford, who went the distance for the Jaguars on the mound, helped his own cause with a run-scoring single. Monte King doubled in Burnette and Shae Terrell doubled to score two more. Chris Ross then brought in Terrell with a single.

Farmville added one in the fourth, three in the fifth and one in the sixth while Roanoke got two more in the top of the sixth.

Burnette, Ross and Howard Collins each collected three hits for the Jaguars; two of Burnette's were doubles. Terrell had two hits. Mike James had three hits to lead Roanoke.

The two teams meet again on Friday at Roanoke.

HOLLYWOOD — SouthWest Edgecombe handed D.H. Conley a 5-2 loss in the opening baseball game of the season for both teams Tuesday.

SouthWest pushed across a run in the third inning to take a 1-0 lead before the Vikings came back to go ahead 2-1 after the fourth.

In the fourth, Jim Faulkner doubled with one out. Kervin Vines then singled in Faulkner. Clemons sacrificed Vines to second. Paul Jackson reached on an error which scored Vines from second. Gray Mills then grounded out to second to end the inning.

But SouthWest rallied for two runs in the fifth to make it 3-2 and added one more run in each of the final two innings for the win.

Conley, 0-1, returns to action Friday against Ayden-Grifton.

Ayden-Grifton.....7

KINSTON — Kinston pushed across two runs in the bottom of the sixth to rally past Ayden-Grifton, 8-7, Tuesday in the opening baseball game of the season.

The Chargers fell behind 5-1 after four innings of play before rallying in the fifth.

Gene Stancil started things off in the fifth with a walk. After one out, Johnny Moore singled. Wayne Peacock then singled in Stancil. Scott Cannon then singled to load the bases. Billy Miller reached on a fielder's choice which scored Moore but forced Peacock at third.

Ty Little then walked to load the bases again. Gary Eubanks then hit a grand slam to clear the bases and give the Chargers a 7-5 lead.

But the lead was shortlived as the Eagles rallied for one run in the bottom of the fifth and two more in the sixth to take the win.

In the bottom of the fifth, Jeff Sparrow walked and advanced on a single by Joey Cannon. An error on the throw allowed both runners to move up. Sparrow then scored on a ground out to the right by David Cupstag.

In the sixth, Jeff McMann reached on an error. Frankie Swindell reached on a fielder's choice. An error on the throw allowed both runners to be safe. A walk to Brian Lang loaded the bases. Sparrow and Joey Cannon then had consecutive singles which scored both runners.

Kinston was led by Cannon and Sparrow, both of whom went 2-2.

Steven Tucker, Stancil and Scott Cannon all collected two hits apiece for the Chargers, who were playing without four probable starters who are still playing basketball.

Smith Chosen ACC Coach Of The Year

GREENSBORO (AP) — North Carolina coach Dean Smith, who guided the Tar Heels to the top seed for the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament, has been selected ACC coach of the year by the Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Association.

Smith edged North Carolina State's Jim Valvano for coaching honors by a 39-38 vote.

Roanoke, Conley Open With Wins

FARMVILLE — C. Leggett went 3-4 to lead Roanoke's girls to a 17-5 win in high school softball action Tuesday in the opening game of the season for both clubs.

Roanoke pushed across seven runs in the first inning and never trailed. The Lady Jaguars rallied briefly in the bottom of the first, scoring four runs to pull within 7-4, but that was as close as they would get as Roanoke punched across four more runs in the second for 11-4 advantage.

Farmville was led by Madeline Streeter who went 2-3.

Farmville returns to action Friday at Roanoke.

in the opening game of the season Tuesday.

Conley got all it needed in the first inning, scoring three times. Nikki Adams walked and Charlene Davenport singled. Lori Powell then singled and an error on the play allowed all three runners to score.

Conley added nine more in the fourth for a 12-0 lead. SouthWest's only run came over in the sixth.

Tabitha Daughton led Conley with three hits while Adams, Davenport, Powell and Tracy Summrell each had two.

British Track Officials Brace For Budd Protests

LONDON (AP) — As a black African boycott gained momentum, British track officials braced today for an order from the sport's governing body to pull South African-born runner Zola Budd out of next week's world cross country championships.

With time running out, the British Amateur Athletic Board said it would have no alternative but to obey — reluctantly.

Pending an investigation into allegations that Budd had competed in her homeland against its rules, the International Amateur Athletic Federation requested the BAAB leave her off the roster for the March 26 event at Auckland, New Zealand.

The board declined Tuesday, saying it had insufficent evidence, and threw the issue back into the hands of the IAAF.

Sources close to the world body said its decision-making council of members was expected to instruct the British board to keep Budd at home.

"We have asked more than once for the IAAF to produce the evidence they say they have regarding Zola Budd and we have not seen any of it," BAAB spokesman Tony Ward said. "We need to see that evidence before we can take action."

Ward said Budd had given "written confirmation" that she had not taken part in any illegal activities in South Africa.

"Because of the strong evidence on one side and the lack of it on the other, we have no alternative but to maintain her on the team," Ward said. "If the IAAF feel strongly that they do have the evidence, we would say, 'Tell us to de-select her.' If they did that, then we would have to. It's their competition and they are clearly concerned about it."

As Budd waited to hear of her fate — she is due to fly to Auckland on Thursday with the rest of the British squad — three countries were reported to have walked out of the championships.

Ethiopia announced today that it would join Kenya and Zimbabwe in boycotting the event. Ethiopia and Kenya are two of the strongest cross-country nations in the world.

Ward said he expected more nations to walk out if Budd stayed with the British team, but he added that he couldn't understand why.

"I think most of the African countries will withdraw if Zola Budd competes," Ward said. "I think it is unfortunate, but frankly I don't think that Zola Budd is that big an issue to throw the whole of world athletics into turmoil."

Budd was unavailable for comment but was reported by the domestic British news agency, Press Association, to be preparing a lawsuit if she is banned from taking part.

Her coach, John Bryant, said there was no genuine evidence against her.

"Zola has gone to great trouble answering every question she has been asked," Bryant said. "In fact, she swore an affidavit giving lots of details and, armed with that, the Board seemed quite happy that the so-called evidence just doesn't stand up."

Black African states claim Budd should be left off the team for allegedly violating bans on sporting contacts with South Africa. One of the cases involves a cross-country meet at Brakpan, South Africa, last June, with which she is alleged to have been involved.

Bryant said that although Budd was in South Africa at the time, she did not compete.

"She did some training but was mainly there to have an injury treated and see her family," he said. "She had to test out the injury to see if she could run. But she did certainly not compete anywhere."

Last month, Budd, who has been plagued by controversy since gaining a British passport four years ago, pledged to sever all ties with South Africa and remain in Britain, where she has bought a home.

But that failed to allay opponents, including the New Zealand government which said Budd would not be welcome at the cross-country championships.

Bryant said Budd not been back to South Africa since Christmas when she went to visit her family again.

"She has been back ever since and intends to stay here," he said. "As far as I can see, the pressure to bar Zola from international competition is based entirely on spurious evidence to try and get her barred. In terms of natural justice, this seems a bit harsh."

Friday Charges Television Is Corrupting Influence

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Television has become a corrupting influence at colleges because of the money it pours into athletics, and it is time for college presidents to say enough, says William Friday, former president of the University of North Carolina System.

"Television has a magnificent thing here," Friday told the Greensboro News & Record. "They don't have to train actors, they don't have to pay the athlete, they don't have to even play the music. They just turn on their cameras and there it is. And now this whole thing has developed as a culture all its own and it will do a lot of damage before it can be harnessed. Everyone who has put their lives into it can see it happening.

"Now, if we could just get everyone in on the chorus to say 'This just isn't going to be any more," he said. "If the presidents of these institutions would just pull together one more time ...

"What we've done is turn this thing into a major industry and what looked like a game and a way to teach sportsmanship has become something else.

"It's time somebody stood up and said that we're not a product and we're not something to be merchandised," he said.

Friday said the answer to television domination of college athletics is for all Division I colleges to withdraw from the NCAA, and form a governing body "that would be as tough as it can be."

"I don't think the NCAA can handle it any longer because they make too much money themselves (from television) now," Friday said.

"Money has become our master, and it's (television) the source of the money. It's the power of the dollar that no college administration has yet devised a way of controlling," Friday said.

"We've got to have leaders now who will say 'This is enough' and 'Stop it.'"

Friday said that a newspaper story that appeared recently pointed out that the North Carolina basketball players flew home from a 9 p.m. televised game at Clemson recently and were in class on time the following morning. "They did that because of the demands of television, plain and simple," he said.

"And one Sunday recently, there were two college basketball games on television before people got out of church. Now, people can say I'm old-timey, but the truth is that we are being controlled by television. They tell us when a game will be scheduled and what time we will play.

"And no one has raised a hand and said, 'Wait a minute. We're going to take a look at this.' In athletics, we've created in this country a fervor of a religion."

For more than 30 years Friday guided the UNC System through rough athletic waters and smooth. It was Friday who presided as a priest over the last rites of the popular Dixie Classic Basketball Tournament and who saw the transformation of college athletics into a television industry. He is a man who has fretted about academic standards among college athletes.

In his final two years as system president, Friday became a major national figure in efforts to reform college athletics and was one of the driving forces behind the adoption of the NCAA's Proposition 48, a rule that sets minimum academic standards for freshman eligibility.

"What we're doing is destroying the very thing we cherish," he said of college athletics. "The people who can tell you most intensely are the disappointed athletes, the disappointed coaches and the parents of basketball players who didn't make it in the NBA.

"I'm telling you, I'm concerned about our priorities in this country. When you watch the Super Bowl football game and you realize that you were watching players, any one of whom grossed more in one season — one season — than the most distinguished teacher at Page High School in Greensboro will earn in 30 years, that's some commentary about our values."

The Pirates left runners in scoring position in the first and second innings, but had no other threats.

Specyalski, Sellas and Drabinski each had two hits while no one had more than one for the Pirates.

Connecticut's record improves to 3-1 while the Pirates fall to 11-4.

East Carolina will play host to Vermont on Thursday at 1 p.m. in a doubleheader.

with an average of 16.2 points per game.

But Claybrook said the guard play has improved as the season has gone on.

"I'd have to say it's improved," he said. "It's not ideal but it's definitely improved. We've played enough people that we can make different changes and use different combination."

In the Warriors, Conley will face a smaller team that likes to run the floor and utilize the 3-point shot.

Western Alamance's two biggest players are 6-3 center Jon Brown and 6-3 forward Garland Summers. Brown averages 18 points a game, while 6-0 guard Tooey Loy chips in with 15.0 points per outing.

"We like to run up and down the floor as much as we can," said coach Mike Tolley. "We'll probably just try to play man to man and mix our defense up and throw different looks and see what works. They won't be the biggest team we've played, but they'll be one of the biggest."

Ironically, Claybrook said the pressure to win may have been more intense last year during the playoffs than it has been this time around.

"I would truthfully feel more pressure if I was in the situation I was in last year when we had never won anything. Just going back is a tribute to the guys because this year everybody was gunning for them.

"Basically we are a low key team and I think that can be a advantage becuase you don't get too keyed up."

Bay Hill Is A Tossup

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Picking the favorite in a pro golf tournament is fairly simple, Tom Watson said.

"The favorite always is the guy who's playing best right now," Watson said.

But that guideline doesn't help much in the $750,000 Bay Hill Classic, which gets underway Thursday. It's all but impossible to isolate any one player as the man who's playing best at the moment.

Pirates Set To Open Spring Drills

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

If you ask East Carolina coach Art Baker about his offense heading into spring drills, his face quickly breaks into a smile, but if you switch the topic to defense, a look of deep concern takes over.

The Pirates open spring football practice Thursday and return nine of 11 starters on offense, but on the other side of the ball ECU loses six key starters as well as a valuable reserve.

"We return nine of 11 starters on offense so there is not quite the concern there," Baker said.

"The problem on defense is that so many of the starters from last year are missing. (But) we have a new defensive coordinator (Richard Bell) and a new defensive scheme (a multiple front, end-coverage scheme) which I think puts our players in their best positions. Our players have needed a more aggressive scheme on defense."

The Pirates most pressing needs come on defense where they must replace their top three inside linebackers, as well as All-Star safety Ellis Dillahunt, along with two more starters on the defensive line and a defensive end.

Departed are Vinson Smith and Bubba Waters, who were two-year starters at linebacker along with top reserve Essray Taliaferro. Medrick Rainbow and Ron Gilliard are also gone from the defensive line and John Williamson is gone from one of the defensive end/outside linebacker positions.

Of the returning linebacker candidates, Glen Willis, (6-4, 223, Jr.) is the most experienced player after having 44 tackles a year ago. Others who have played there include Compton McCurry (6-1, 230, So.), James Singletary (6-3, 215, So.) and Mike Leggett (6-3, 210, Fr.).

Anthony Thompson (6-2, 218, So.), reported to be one of the top athletes on the team, also has been moved to inside linebacker after stints at outside linebacker and slot.

"I would be disappointed if he and Singletary don't end up having good springs," Baker said. "The other three boys have been around and have experience."

Other new players who could make a run at substantial playing time include Joe Holmes (6-5, 250, So.), a junior college transfer, who will play defensive end. and Ken Portis (6-2, 230, Sr.), an inside linebacker. Portis has returned to the team after a one-year absence and could have a big impact, according to Baker.

"Our biggest problem is finding out our top 22 players, particularly on defense," Baker said. "When you look at defense, we've played about 55 players in every game. Shannon Boling (defensive end, 6-4, 233, Jr.) started some games, Junior Johnson (outside linebacker, 6-4, 210, Jr.) has started some games. Inside linebacker is the position where we have the biggest number of problems. We lost our top three inside linebackers."

The new defensive scheme will also employ a rover who will be a combination linebacker/defensive back.

Bryan Haywood (6-0, 185, Jr.) is the leading candidate to replace Dillahunt. The Pirates also return starting cornerbacks Ed Brogden (5-9, 170, Fr.) and Junior Robinson (5-11, 183, So.), along with experienced reserves Ricky Torain and Donald Porch.

"They all return so they should do very well," Baker said. "We just hope that a year later they are going to be better."

Robinson is running track and Baker hopes he will benefit from a spring of working with track coach Bill Carson.

Offensively, things are looking up for the Pirates. Quarterback Travis Hunter (5-10, 190, So.) returns for his second straight year as a starter and will line up behind an offensive line which will return all its starters for next season.

Kevin Gilbride takes over the reigns of offensive coordinator from Clyde Christensen, who was moved to defense. Gilbride joined the Pirates late in the preseason last summer and helped out on offense and special teams. He is a veteran coach from the Canadian Football League and has extensive experience with the run and shoot offense, of which ECU runs a variation.

"The option is still going to be the basis of our offense," Baker said. "But the passing game will take on even more emphasis since most of his experience has been in the (pure) run and shoot.

"We've worked real hard during the off-season to develop our offense to fit our talent a little bit better. One of the strong points about our offense is for the first time in the four years I've been here we have an experienced, proven quarterback returning and he's done an excellent job for us."

Hunter threw for 1,107 yards last fall, with three touchdowns and five interceptions. He also rushed for 371 yards and five touchdowns.

"I think our offensive line ought to be pretty good, they return all intact except for (guard Billy) Michel who is going to be out of spring drills (with a knee injury) but will be back next fall. Wade Perry (6-3, 277, Jr.) needs the work there. We have a couple of young players (Billy Maxwell, 6-2, 251, Fr.; Chad Martin, 6-4, 280, Fr.; Tod Creech, 6-4, 261, Fr., and Dean Taylor, 6-3, 260, Fr.) and we want to see what they are capable of.

"The position that looks very strong for us is slot. We return six players that all played and all have good speed and quickness. The receivers, there are some young players there that have to come through for us."

Baker said he hoped for big things from some of his young wide receivers this spring, singling out Terry Bennett (5-8, 155, Fr.), who is reportedly the fastest player on the team, along with Al Whiting (5-11, 166, Fr.) and Bojack Davenport (6-1, 175. So.).

"We ought to have a little better handle on things. We have an offense that we've been running for the third year in a row," Baker said. "So we think we should be improved and pretty good at that."

ECU will be without fullback Anthony Simpson for the first time in four years but returns a more-than-capable backup in Tim James (5-11, 235, Jr.), who ran for 284 yards last year and averaged 4.9 yards a carry.

Also returning is No. 2 rusher Reggie McKinney (5-10, 191, Jr.), who had 486 yards on the ground last year.

ECU loses kicker Chuck Berleth from last year and must choose from among a number of inexperienced candidates during the spring. Robb Imperado is the leading candidate while punter Craig Losito also can handle place-kicking chores. Other options here include Jake Fine and Pat Lennon.

Losito handled punting chores but will be challenged by Tim Wolter.

The Pirates, though, will likely be without a few players throughout spring practice as five players (defensive end Ernie Logan, linebacker Shane Hubble, defensive back Errol McCorvey and slots Ernest Pendleton and Lewis Wilson) presently are involved in litigation in three separate incidents and are suspended from the team pending outcome of their court decisions, according to Baker.

"I think it always hurts when you have situations that come up like this. You just have to put it behind and hope it's been a good valuable lesson for you," he said.

Former Tech Coach Diagnosed With Tumor

ATLANTA (AP) — A tumor has been found in the left lung of former Georgia Tech football Coach Bobby Dodd and tissue is being tested to see if it's malignant, Dr. Crawford Barnett said.

Dodd, 79, the winningest football coach in Tech history, was in stable condition Tuesday at West Paces Ferry Hospital where he was admitted eight days ago with a kidney infection.

Vikings Win Opening Golf Match Of Season

AYDEN — D.H. Conley won its opening golf match of the year over New Bern and Farmville Central Tuesday behind an 80 by Greg Segal.

Segal was medalist for the match as Conley totaled a team score of 333, while New Bern had 351 and Farmville Central tallied 359.

Conley returns to action Thursday against Kinston and Ayden-Grifton at Ayden Golf and Country Club.

Conley: Segal 80, Gentry Pinner 82, John Pinner 84, John Parker 87, Frank Pugh 87.

Chargers Top Conley In Area Tennis Action

AYDEN — Ayden-Grifton High School opened its tennis season with a 5-4 win over D.H. Conley Tuesday.

The Chargers took five of the six singles matches to ensure the victory. Conley came back to win all three of the doubles matches. Two were shortened due to a power failure but declared official. Nearly all of the matches were hard-fought.

Conley returns to action today, facing Farmville Central, while Ayden-Grifton entertains Bear Grass on Thursday.

Summary:

Chico Spruill (AG) d. Derek Harrell, 7-5, 3-6, 6-4.
Jeff Bennett (C) d. Jody Tingen, 6-2, 6-0.

Winterville Bambino League Sets Tryouts

WINTERVILLE — Tryouts for Winterville Bambino League will be held Saturday from 9 a.m. until noon at Winterville Recreation Park.

The league is for youths, 9-12, as August 1, 1988. The league is for youths living in the D.H. Conley High School attendance area.

Conley JV, Ayden-Grifton JV Take Wins

PINETOPS — D.H. Conley took a 13-5 win over Southwest Edgecombe in JV baseball action Tuesday.

Paul Pajak was the winning pitcher for the Vikings. Tim Allen went 3-4 with four RBIs to lead Conley, which returns to action Friday at Ayden-Grifton.

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton handed Kinston a 14-2 loss in JV baseball action Tuesday.

Brian Haddock was the winning pitcher for the Chargers, who move to 1-0 on the year and return to action Friday at home against D.H. Conley.

Conley Track Team Tops In Dual Meet

KINSTON — D.H. Conley's Angie Baker was a double winner for the Valkyries in a 101-35 win over Kinston in girls' high school track action Tuesday.

Baker took wins in the high jump and the 300-meter hurles.

ECU Softball Team Tops Wilmington, 9-6

WILMINGTON — Mickey Ford went 2-4 with a home run and three RBI to lead East Carolina to a 9-6 win over UNC-Wilmington in women's collegiate softball action Tuesday.

ECU pushed across one run in the second inning to take the early lead.

Linda Barrett led off with a walk. She was sacrificed to second by Leslie Cramer. She then scored on a single by Kim Adams.

In the third, Mona Jackson opened with a walk. Jeannie Murray sacrificed her to second. Chris Byrne then singled in Jackson. Tracey Kee followed with a reach on a fiedler's choice which put out Byrne. Ford then tripled to score Key. Kramer then singled to scored Ford for a 4-0 ECU lead.

In addition to Ford, Kramer and Adams each had two hits for ECU.

Lisa Hepler went 2-3 to lead the Lady Seahwaks.

ECU improves to 8-3 and hosts North Carolina Wesleyan Thursday in a doubleheader.

Scott Chosen ACC Freshman Of The Year

GREENSBORO (AP) — Georgia Tech freshman Dennis Scott, who emerged as the Atlantic Coast Conference's premier 3-point shooter, has been selected as the ACC rookie of the year by the Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Association.

Scott collected 103 of 125 votes cast, out pacing Chris Corchiani of North Carolina State, who had 14 votes, and Maryland's Brian Williams with eight.

Scott, a native of Oakton, Va., averaged 15.3 points, 5 rebounds and 3.6 assists per game. He leads the league in 3-point shooting percentage at 47.6 and averages three 3-pointers per game. His 90 3-pointers this season set a league record.

Smith Is Mum On Reported Team Scuffle

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — North Carolina basketball coach Dean Smith refused Tuesday to comment on reports that forwards J.R. Reid and Steve Bucknall were involved in a fight outside a Chapel Hill restaurant the night before the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament championship game.

WTVD-TV in Durham reported Monday that an unidentified fan had witnessed the incident in the parking lot at Slug's At The Pines. The station reported that Reid and Bucknall began arguing during a team meal in the restaurant and then got into a scuffle outside.

"Our policy has always been on team dynamics, anything that happens in the team (not to comment)," Smith said. "That's why our practices are closed. Somebody yells at a another player, or shoves. That's why I don't want anybody around.

"I never comment on anything that has to do with our players — I call it team dynamics. Maybe there's a better way to describe it."

Smith said he was not present at the meal.

The alleged incident occurred following the Tar Heel's 74-64 semifinal victory over Maryland in the ACC tournament at Greensboro Saturday. North Carolina lost 65-61 to Duke Sunday in the championship game, when Reid was held to a season-low seven points.

3 Drivers Reportedly Shatter Record

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Three Winston Cup drivers, led by Ken Schrader, unofficially shattered Darlington Raceway's track record Tuesday while testing Goodyear tires for the TranSouth 500 later this month.

Schrader, the defending TranSouth pole winner, drove his Chevrolet around the track's 1.366-mile, egg-shaped track in 30.45 seconds, or 161.497 mph. The fast lap bettered the record of 30.89 seconds, or 159.197 mph, that was set by Geoff Bodine in qualifying for the 1986 TranSouth.

Four-time TranSouth 500 winner, Darrell Waltrip, and Rusty Wallace both had identical times. The pair covered the track in 30.75 seconds, or 159.922 mph.

While Waltrip, in a Chevrolet, and Wallace, in a Pontiac, worked most of the day gradually improving their speeds, Schrader consistently ran in the low 31-second to high 30-second range.

"Wow," Schrader said completing his record run. "It was good. It did perfect. The car and the tires are working great. Without a doubt, the official track record will be in jeopardy when we come back to qualify. And it won't be just me. I think a lot of cars will break it."

Schrader's veteran crew chief, Harry Hyde, said the Goodyear tires were responsible for the record run.

"Give the tires all the credit for it," he said.

NORTH CAROLINA
IN THE GENERAL COURT OF JUSTICE SUPERIOR COURT DIVISION BEFORE THE CLERK
87 SP 257

In the matter of the foreclosure of a deed of trust executed by Calvin C. Henderson in an original amount of $19,520.19 dated June 25, 1986, recorded July 2, 1986 in Book 86 at Page 810 of the Pitt County Public Registry by Stanley M. Sams, Trustee

AMENDED TRUSTEE'S RESALE OF REAL ESTATE

Under and by virtue of the power and authority contained in that certain deed of trust executed and delivered by Calvin C. Henderson, dated June 25, 1986, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Pitt County, North Carolina in Book 86 at Page 810, the undersigned Trustee offered the property described herein for sale and filed a Report of such sale on February 2, 1988, but an upset bid having been filed within the time allowed by law, and the Clerk of Superior Court of Pitt County having entered an Order on February 17, 1988, requiring such Trustee to resell the property, the undersigned Trustee will on March 23, 1988, at 12:00 o'clock noon at the front door of the Pitt County Courthouse, Greenville, North Carolina, offer for sale to the highest bidder for cash, at public auction, upon an opening bid of Twenty-one Thousand One Hundred Ninety-seven and 92/100s (21,197.92) Dollars, subject to the confirmation of the Court, that certain property described as follows (including the house and any other improvements thereon):

That certain lot or parcel of land lying and being in the City of Winterville, Pitt County, North Carolina and more particularly described as follows: Being located on the West side of May Drive and BEGINNING at a point in the Western property line of May Drive at the common corner between Lots No. 4 and 5 in Block "A" of the Robinson Heights Subdivision, as shown on the map hereinafter referred to, said beginning point located 97.8 feet northerly from the northwest corner of the intersection of May Drive and Kennedy Street, and running thence N. 12-20 E., with the west property line of May Drive, 83 feet to the corner with Lot. No. 3; thence running N. 67-40 W. 160 feet to a common corner between Lots No. 3 and 4; thence running S. 12-20 W., 83 feet to the common corner between Lots No. 4 and 5; thence running S. 67-40 E. 160 feet to the Point of Beginning, and being Lot No. 4, Block "A" of the Robinson Heights Subdivision as shown on map thereof prepared by McDavid Associates, recorded in Map Book 16 at Page 63, Pitt County Registry; and further being the identical property conveyed by B. Vernon Cox, et als, to Herbert H. Forrest by deed dated April 4, 1969, as recorded in Book L-38 at Page 288, Pitt County Registry, to which map and deed reference is thereby made for a more accurate description; and being the identical property conveyed to Calvin Henderson, et al, by deed dated August 15, 1969 and recorded in Book R-38 at page 86, Pitt County Registry.

Property address: 512 Maye Street, Winterville, NC 28590.

The real estate shall be sold subject to all prior liens (including attorney's fees, foreclosure expenses, and Trustee's fees), unpaid taxes, restrictions and easements of record and special assessments, if any.

Pursuant to North Carolina General Statutes 45-21.10(b), and the terms of the deed of trust, any successful bidder may be required to deposit with the Trustee immediately upon conclusion of the sale a cash deposit of 10.0% of the bid up to and including One Thousand ($1,000.00) Dollars plus 5.0% of any excess over One Thousand ($1,000.00) Dollars. Any successful bidder will be required to deposit with the Clerk of Superior Court a cash bond or, in lieu thereof, at the option of the bidder, a surety bond such as may be approved by the Clerk of Court of Pitt County. Any successful bidder shall be required to tender the full balance of the purchase price so bid in cash or certified check at the time the Trustee tenders to him a deed for the property or attempts to tender such deed, and should such successful bidder fail to pay the full balance of the purchase price so bid at that time, he shall remain liable on his bid as provided for in North Carolina General Statutes 45-21.30(d) and (e).

This sale will be held open ten (10) days for upset bids as required by law.

This the 1st day of March, 1988.

Alaska Gets Requests To Give Things A Name

By LARRY PERSILY
Associated Press Writer

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — A fisherman's pet dog dies, dead blackfish are found floating on a lake, a college student loses his a skiff in a storm, British paratroopers scale an Alaskan peak.

Those are some of the events that inspired requests from people who want the state of Alaska to name a lake, stream, creek, island, mountain or some other landmark in honor of someone or something.

Don Lallemand from the state of Washington buried his dog Mitzi on an unnamed Southeast Alaska island 12 years ago. He wrote the State Geographic Board in 1986 asking that the two-acre island be named in honor of Mitzi.

"We buried a small dog who had traveled with us for years aboard the boat and loved the area as much as we do," he wrote.

Lallemand included a picture showing the sign he posted on the island, naming it for Mitzi. He plants flowers and trees near the grave site every year.

But Lallemand has not heard anything from the state board in the two years since he submitted his request. "We're very disappointed," he says.

He is not alone.

The board has almost 100 requests on file, waiting for action.

The board last met in August. Before that, it met in March 1985.

"We are swamped," says Gladyce Williamson, secretary to the board.

Williamson serves as secretary to the state community and regional affairs commissioner, who chairs the geographic board. She said there is no extra staff for the board, and she

BIRD MAN — Frank White of Midland, in North Carolina's Piedmont, says his whirly-birds draw a lot of attention during the daylight hours and his designs made with reflectors get even more attention at night. White says he started making the birds to have something to do when he retired. (AP Laserphoto)

RABBIT AND ADMIRERS — Jason Myers, center, the Velveteen Rabbit, is bracketed by two admirers, Wayne Clark, left and Sarah Pauling. A musical production, "The Velveteen Rabbit," is being presented by the Smiles and Frowns Childrens Playhouse at D.H. Conley High School. Performances will be given at 7 p.m. Friday and at 2 and 7 p.m. Saturday. The show is sponsored by the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council. (Photo by Sally Bramley)

Tar Heel Has Yard Full Of Colored Whirly-Birds

By SUSAN TURLEY
The Concord Tribune

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Frank White loves what he hears when night-time travelers spot the yard of his house near Midland.

"Sometimes at night you can hear the big trucks slow down as they come around the curves. They're coming down the road wide open and then you hear the gears whine as they slow down.

"People stop here from all over the country — even all over the world."

People stop at night because White, a 70-year-old retired contractor, has put red truck reflectors on several posts in his yard. "You can see it from a long distance — it looks like Christmas."

They stop in the daytime because of White's whirly-birds, brightly painted wooden birds and creatures with whirling wings.

White had retired in 1982 after 37 years in business, "but I'm ambitious; I can't just sit around in a rocking chair."

So he made a few brightly painted wooden birds with whirling wings and put them out on the fence. "They've been sent all over the U.S., and to Canada, Mexico, England and Germany."

Although he began by making the birds himself, White says he is "too busy" now and discovered someone else can make them for less than he could.

The whirly-creatures are not actually all birds. There are at least 15 varieties, with red, yellow and blue birds, parrots, ducks, geese, roadrunners, chickens, roosters, jay birds, albatrosses and seagulls. Other styles are bumblebees, honeybees and airplanes.

"They call me the Bird Man of Midland," White said.

"I meet so many people and I love that," he says. He doesn't take the devices anywhere to sell them, "no flea markets or anything like that. The people come here."

According to White, beach-goers from Ohio, Kentucky and West Virginia see the birds and other

Law Could Mean End Of Cabooses

By JOHN LANCASTER
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Every day about 20 freight trains grind slowly out of the gigantic Potomac Yard in Alexandria, Va., hauling everything from toxic chemicals to United Parcel Service packages to rail depots up and down the Eastern seaboard.

Those trains heading north operate, for the most part, without cabooses. Those heading south through Virginia, on the other hand, must adhere to a 74-year-old state law requiring cabooses.

In late January a House of Delegates committee in Richmond voted to repeal Virginia's caboose law, setting the stage for a significant victo-

Reeve Seeks New Image

L.A. Times-Washington Post

HOLLYWOOD — In the movies, image is a tricky thing for an actor. Think of Christopher Reeve and you think of Superman. The two are interchangeable. Reeve soared to the heights of stardom as "Superman," only to find typecasting as lethal to his career as Kryptonite is to the health of the Man of Steel.

"The Bostonians" (opposite Vanessa Redgrave and Jessica Tandy), "The Aviator," "Deathtrap" (opposite Michael Caine), "Monsignor," "Somewhere in Time" (opposite Jane Seymour), "Street Smart" — interesting roles all and yet Reeve is remembered as the guy who played Superman.

New York-born Reeve, 35, is a serious actor. It is not that he takes himself overly seriously. It is that he clearly enjoys acting, especially stage work. After receiving a bachelor's from Cornell University, Reeve did graduate study at Julliard, was a stage hand at London's Old Vic, and appeared on Broadway with Katharine Hepburn in "A Matter of Gravity."

He did a stage reading of "Mesmer" (based on the life of Dr. Friedrich Anton Mesmer, a hypnotist from whose name the word mesmerism is derived) at the Roundabout Theater in New York. Through April 10, he is starring with Christine Lahti in a Los Angeles stage production of "Summer and Smoke."

"Switching Channels," in which he plays the love interest of Kathleen Turner, is yet another attempt by Reeve to put some distance between himself and the guy in the red cape with the big S on his chest. Two scenes in the film even lampoon Reeve's Superman image. His character, an athletic equipment tycoon, is afraid of heights.

"The character's such a dork that almost anything goes," Reeve said in a recent interview here.

In one scene, Reeve is going up in a glass-walled, exterior elevator. "It's a little, private in-joke. I'm famous for being a personal high-flyer. To get to play a scene of acrophobia in an elevator — I enjoyed it."

Another scene, where Reevee rescues Ms. Turner, who is stranded in the middle of a lake in a rowboat without oars, also mocks the man of steel. The sound track swells when Reeve arrives.

Playwrights Focus On 'The Dark Tower'

"The Dark Tower," a play by Raleigh playwright Rudy Wallace, is being featured for the month of March by the Playwrights Fund of North Carolina.

Two readings will be given, on Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m., in the Downtown, Downstairs area of the Humber House, 117 W. Fifth St.

Admission to the two-character play is free to members of the PFNC, with a small donation suggested for others attending a performance.

Playwright Wallace is a native of St. Thomas, the American Virgin Islands. He holds the bachelor's degree in English and education from Morgan, State University, Baltimore, and the master's degree in American and British literatures from the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia.

One of his plays, "The Cave," winner of the Thompson Theater Playwriting Competition at N.C. State University in 1987, will be read in New York City in April by the Frank Silvera Writers Workshop.

He is a winner of the Caribbean-United States Theater Exchange Prize for Best Play through a National Endowment for the Arts support fund and the Virgin Island Arts Council.

Other honors accorded Wallace have been awards of honorable mention by the Academy of American Poets poetry contest, a Ford Foundation doctoral fellowship, the

RUDY WALLACE

Hawkins-Ryan Memorial Award, a Martin Luther King grant, and a Woodrow Wilson Teaching Internship.

His plays have been produced by Theater in the Park, Raleigh; the Raleigh Ensemble Players; the Negro Ensemble Company, an off-Broadway theater; Imani Productions, and at colleges and universities in Delaware, Maryland, Pennsylvania and the Virgin Islands

Additionally, Wallace has written and directed a video taped drama, "Calypso 'Bout Clayton," with grants from the Virgin Islands Council on the Arts and the National Endowment for the Arts. The script was awarded the Judy Lee prize from dramatic writing.

After having taught for a number of years, Wallace has recently resigned from teaching to devote full time to the craft of writing plays.

Ford Finds More Mature Role

NEW YORK (AP) — "Star Wars" and "Raiders of the Lost Ark" made Harrison Ford one of America's top box office draws, but the actor says both he and his audience are maturing.

"I'm not an ingenue anymore," the 45-year-old actor said.

His most recent effort leaves Han Solo and Indiana Jones in hyperspace. In the just-released Roman Polanski thriller, "Frantic," Ford's cocksure quality disappears as he portrays a bespectacled father and husband caught in a situation beyond his control.

It follows "Witness" and "The Mosquito Coast," two other movies where Ford shucked invulnerability for more complex and sensitive roles. In his next film, the Mike Nichols comedy "Working Girls," he has a Cary Grant-type part. "I'm not trying to make a transition into a different kind of persona; I do whatever I think is appropriate for that character to tell the story," he said during a recent interview.

"But this is also related to growing older," he said, fingering his reading glasses in his right hand. "I mean, 'Star Wars' was almost 15 years ago. I am 15 years older. There's no sense denying it. In fact, I revel in it. I've been more interested in those characters that are more mature."

In "Frantic," Ford grows more uncomfortable in every scene. He plays a California heart surgeon at a medical conference in Paris. Terrorists kidnap his wife, but police and U.S. officials believe she willingly left him. He meets a sensuous young French woman who provides clues to the abduction and joins him in a struggle to find his wife.

"The whole thing depends on this doctor, this fish out of water, reaching this emotional exhaustion, where he does things that are well outside of his nature and experience," said Ford.

A concern for his real-life wife's safety led Ford to Paris, Polanski and the part. He accompanied his pregnant wife, screenwriter Melissa Mathison ("E.T."), to meetings in Paris on an another project with Polanski, the director of "Tess," "Chinatown" and "Rosemary's Baby."

"After the first few days, Roman described the film to me and it sounded interesting," Ford said.

The script was in French, a language the actor does not speak. "Roman stood up and for two hours — he told me the movie," Ford said. "He played all the parts, and he was great. When it was over, I said, 'If you'll right that down in English, I'll do it.'"

Ford calls himself "monomaniacal" during filming, but always returns to his ranch in Wyoming to "go grocery shopping, pick up the laundry, work on the fence, plow the snow, read a little, fish a little and go cross-country skiing."

Wyoming is now home for Ford. He was raised in a suburban Chicago, went to school at Ripon College in Wisconsin and struggled as an actor and carpenter in southern California.

Newborn

WESTLAKE VILLAGE, Calif. (AP) — Having a newborn baby won't keep three-time Grammy-winner Deniece Williams from the recording studio, her publicist says.

Miss Williams, 35, who gave birth Saturday, is planning to record an album next month, press agent Bob Angelotti says.

"Mother and child are doing fine" but will remain in the hospital for several days, he said.

Forrest Matthew Westering, who weighed 9 pounds, 3 ounces at birth, is the first child for the singer and her husband, Brad Westering, who were married in 1986.

Everyone Wants Place Of Honor Set Aside In Alaska

ry for the railroad industry, a defeat for railroad unions and the end of a railroading era that the public associates with steam locomotives and shrill whistle blasts splitting the night quiet.

"All of these icons had a place in the past, and the caboose did too," said William Dempsey, president of the Association of American Railroads. "But at the present time we just don't need it anymore."

Montana is the only other state that still requires cabooses, although a federal court ruled in November that the law could no longer be enforced. The case in on appeal.

In Virginia the state's house is expected to vote in favor of repealing the law, and proponents expect the state senate will follow suit.

Railroads have already begun to phase out the caboose, replacing it with a $4,500, shoebox-sized electronic device that indicates whether the train's cars are attached and their brakes are working properly, functions once performed by men in red kerchiefs and overalls. Those men also used flags and lanterns to warn following trains of the traffic ahead, a task now performed by automatic signals.

Most retired cabooses are sold for their scrap value. Still others become additions to restaurants or parks; a few have even been sold for hunting lodges, according to John F. McGinley, superintendent of the Potomac Yard.

Hoping to protect jobs, railroad unions have negotiated contracts calling for cabooses on some trains and have lobbied heavily against the repeal of the Virginia's caboose law.

"Even if these machines were perfect, they don't have a sense of smell or sight," said Houston Kitts, legislative director for the United Transportation Union in Richmond, which represents about 180,000 railroad employees nationwide. "I've never seen one yet that could see down the side of a train."

History does not record when the first caboose appeared on an American railroad. John White, senior historian with the National Museum of American History, said the term first appeared in railroad literature in the 1850s.

The name itself has maritime roots, according to White. Caboose was the term that described an outdoor kitchen on the deck of a ship, "a place of shelter and warmth," he said.

The first cabooses were crude affairs, often converted boxcars or simple huts built on railroad flatcars. Eventually, cabooses (for a time, "cabeese" was the accepted plural) acquired windowed cupolas, where trainmen could sit and watch the cars ahead to check for dragging gear or smoke from a "hot box," an overheated set of wheel bearings.

The caboose assumed a vital role with the invention of air brakes around the turn of the century, according to White.

Crewmen were required at the rear of the train to monitor air pressure in the lines, among other things.

The "end-of-train" device, an electronic box that can alert the engineer in a locomotive to changes in the air pressure in the brake lines, removed that job from human hands. Train crews, meanwhile, have shrunk from five members — engineer, brakeman, fireman, flagman and conductor — to three or four.

The railroads would like to reduce crews to two members. Federal regulators have concluded that the disappearance of the caboose does not compromise safety and believe the matter should be resolved through labor negotiations. "We've never considered it a safety issue," said William Loftus, a spokesman for the Federal Railroad Administration.

Unions concede that cabooses are not necessary on every train, but they are not willing to give them up entirely. Kitts would like Virginia to require cabooses on trains more than a mile long and those carrying hazardous materials.

"We feel like we're doing the lobbying that should be done by the environmentalists," Kitts said.

The Association of American Railroads estimates that cabooses cost the industry about $400 million nationwide each year, or more than a fourth of the $1.3 billion in profits earned by the railroads in 1986.

The eight-member board, comprised of state officials and one public appointee, reviewed 10 requests at the August meeting. "The federal people had really been pushing and really wanted some action on the oldest cases," Williamson says.

The oldest cases date back six or seven years, she says.

All recommendations from the state board go to the U.S. Domestic Geographic Names Board for final approval.

One of the priority cases was a request from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to name a mountain near the interior Brooks Range for a federal geologist. His name is Reuben Kachadoorian. For ease of pronunciation, Williamson said, the Corps proposed Reuben's Peak.

Most requests come from individuals, not government agencies. Some landowners get upset when the board refuses to allow them to name features on their own property.

A home-site owner had asked that a lake be named for dead blackfish found floating on the surface. His nomination of Deadfish Lake southwest of Fairbanks was deferred by the board.

Homesteaders north of Anchorage want to pick their own name for a small lake on their property. "We felt it was not only our responsibility to the community, but also our privilege to name a feature on our property," they wrote in their nominating letter.

The backlog of nominations includes the expected personal requests such as Otto's Lake and Moore's Mountain, and also some unexpected ones.

In 1985 a 24-year-old college student from the Lower 48 wrote a sad tale of losing — and finding — a skiff while crab fishing in the Aleutian Islands.

His crew lost their skiff in a storm and then recovered it. "Now, when we happen to anchor at this cove, we affectionately refer to it as Skiff Cove."

The board also deferred action on Skiff Cove.

creatures on their way south. "They stop on the way back."

He said five women from England stopped at his house to buy his creations. "They flew to somewhere in New England, rented a car and headed south, not on the interstates but on the secondary roads, and just stopping at all the unusual things along the way."

White is a Cabarrus County native and a Navy veteran of World War II. The house he built in 1948, where he and his wife Madeline live, is on part of his family's original homestead.

"Honey, I am a wheeler-dealer," he said. He buys and sells antiques and heavy equipment, including fork lifts, back hoes, tractors, trucks and trailers.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY March 17

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Your intuition is working rather well today, so be sure to follow it. Continue with any plans you started and left on the back burner.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): An acquaintance will offer to give you some unsolicited help, so be sure this person is trustworthy. State you aims clearly and concisely.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): If you need a big favor from a person in a position of power, just explain your reasons and you'll get it. Show your gratitude for the help.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): A new acquaintance has the know-how you need to complete a difficult project, so don't hesitate to ask questions of this person.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Your hunches about solving a problem will be right on-target, so follow them without reservation. It is important that you drive carefully.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Outline the basic premise of a new project with an associate. This will help the venture to run more smoothly when you get under way.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): A co-worker can give you the information you need to improve your efficiency, so ask for some help. Pay more attention to your health.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): You will have a considerable amount of luck today, so don't be afraid to take any risks. Be more considerate of your mate.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Take the time to talk privately with each member of your family, and achieve a more comfortable environment at home.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Finish up any reports or statements which have been put off, but be sure they are accurate. Don't allow anyone to ruin your schedule.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Set up a new budget which is more realistic, and try to save some money for a rainy day. Use your energy wisely today.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Stay around people who share your opinions today, or you could get into a big argument. Do something special for your mate.

Naturally, the French have a word for it. An "impasse" is the normal finesse where you lead to the lower card of a broken sequence. An "expasse" is where you lead toward an unsupported honor in the hope of finding a higher honor favorably located. The latter play frequently will gain a trick or two.

North-South conducted an orderly auction to a good slam. South could not use Blackwood because of his two fast losers in diamonds, so he cue-bid the ace of hearts, then made a grand slam try when his partner showed the ace of diamonds in response.

West led a heart to declarer's ace, and there was work to do—there were losers in both pointed suits (spades and diamonds), and both could be handled with the help of an "expasse." Which should South choose?

Both lines need more than just the "expasse." If South chooses to play for the king of diamonds with East, the spade finesse must also succeed. If he elects to play West for the king of spades, it must be no more than twice guarded, or declarer must find the unlikely combination of the queen of hearts being tripleton, in which case the jack of hearts will provide a second diamond discard from the closed hand.

After clearing trumps in two rounds, ending on the board, the spade "expasse" was the more attractive line. Even if East held the king, declarer would still get home if the suit split evenly. Declarer came to hand with a heart ruff, and led a low spade. When West produced the king, declarer was able to discard a diamond on the fourth spade and ruff a diamond in dummy (the other diamond was pitched on the king of hearts) for his contract.

Grandma's Button Box

By Tammy Gaskins

I recall fond memories of days gone by at Grandma's house when I was five. My doll baby, Elizabeth, was often left in the middle of the floor to cry for her bottle and for my arms to hold her. Elizabeth didn't get much of my attention whenever Grandma was sewing or mending dresses because I had much rather play with grandma's button box than with Elizabeth.

Grandma had spent most of her life working on the farm and raising seven children. She was always willing to save a few extra pennies however she could. After sewing and mending for sixty years or more, she had quite a large collection of buttons that she would never throw away, just in case she was lucky enough to find matching buttons to sew on a dress or shirt.

That old button box couldn't compare to any toy at my house. I could sit for an hour at a time just looking at all the different shapes, sizes and colors of buttons. I would group them by color, then by size. Of course, I had my favorite buttons. They were usually the medium sized ones. Perhaps my favorite button was the crystal clear button with the silver flower petal design on it. My second favorite was white and had a gold wagon wheel print. I had my least favorite buttons, too. The ugliest were the mushroom-shaped ones.

Memories of playing with that old button box as a child will always linger in my mind. I don't know what it was about that old button box, but it had a magic that held my attention for hours. My Grandma is not with me anymore, but I still have that gold button box. Every time I see it, I can see a little girl sitting on the floor at her Grandma's feet, playing with colorful buttons.

The Story Of How Cold It Was

By Sheri Small

One day I went to the zoo. I looked at a prairie dog. He looked at me. Then it got cold. He got so cold he froze. He froze so bad he couldn't pull his ear. When he did pull on his ear, it snapped off. Then he was a one-eared prairie dog.

Sheri Small, 7, a student at Sadie Saulter School receives special mention.

Eskimos

By Douglas Dennard

We usually call them Eskimos but they don't like that name because it means "blubber eater". They prefer Inuit.

The Eskimo people hunt animals like fish, walrus, white whales, seals and other northern animals.

In the summer they live in tents made of deerskin. In winter the father goes on a trip to hunt for meat. He gets out the dog sled and rides off. He carries spears, snow knives, harpoons and a gun. Then they hunt, when he has a lot of meat he goes back and rubs his wife's nose because it is like a kiss because he missed her.

Douglas Dennard, 8, a student at Sadie Saulter School receives special mention.

Proud Father

By Michael Nelms

One day a boy wanted to play soccer but his father did not let him play. He wanted him to play football but he did not want to play football.

One day his father said, "O.K., but the first game you lose, you do not play anymore."

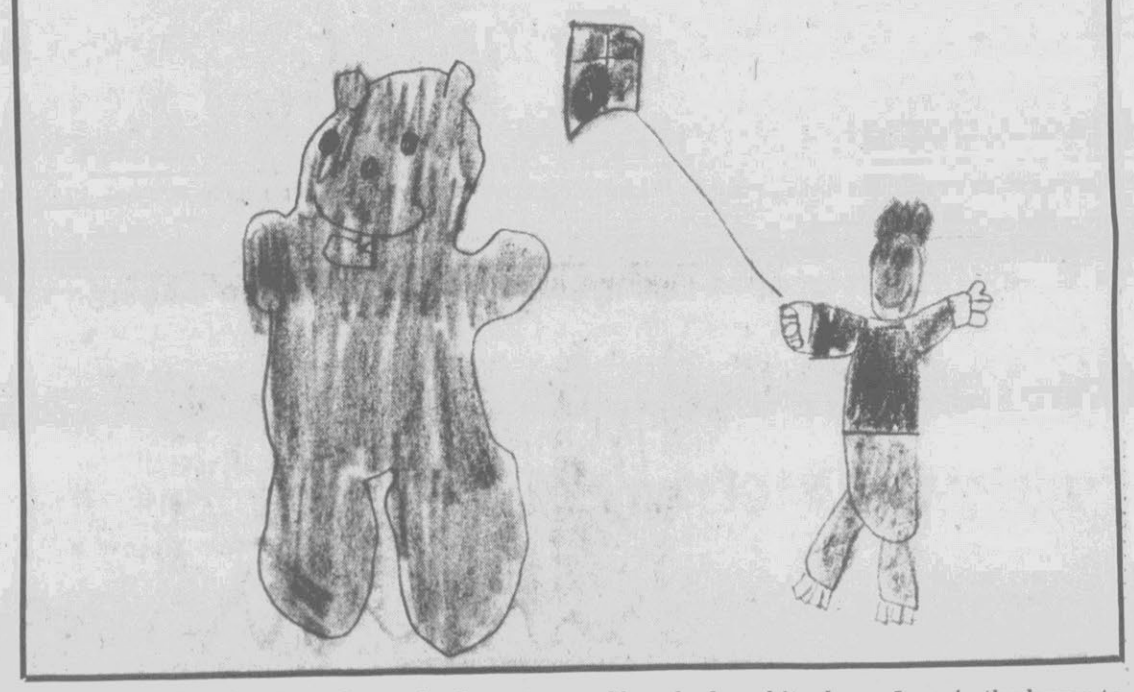
The boy said, "O.K." He played the game. The boy lost and he did not play anymore.

So he waited and waited for four years, and the boy was 14 years old. One day his father said, "O.K., you can play soccer but the next game you lose you do not play anymore." So the first game came up and the boy played in high school, and they won and his team went to the tournament.

The score was tied with less than 20 seconds to play. The boy got in the middle of the goal box, and someone passed the ball to him, and he shot the ball and scored. The score was 4 to 3 and the boy was the hero of the game. He went to the professional soccer league and got married and had a little boy and girl.

His father was very proud of him.

Michael Nelms, 10, a student at Wintergreen Elementary School receives special mention.



I was flying my kite one day and a lion came and knocked my kite down. I ran in the house to tell my daddy there was a lion outside. My dad went out and shot the lion.

Footprints In The Snow

By Rudy Waller

I went walking in the woods on a snowy day. I followed footprints to a trap. I ran back and I told my parents it was orange and white. The animal was big and had arms like wings. I asked mama if I could bring it home. She said, "Yes." I could bring it home because it was a good pet.

Tar Heel Trivia

The General Assembly

The government of North Carolina is run by an elected legislature called the General Assembly which meets in Raleigh.

The members follow a constitution last rewritten in 1971; two constitution revisions preceeded 1971 action.

Just like the U.S. Congress, the legislature of North Carolina has two branches or parts — a Senate and House of Representatives.

CHANGE-OF-PACE BREAKFAST — Look to Fruited Grits Cereal for an easy, change-of-pace breakfast. Featuring favorite fruits — peaches, apples or blueberries — this hot and creamy cereal can be made in the microwave or on the range top in about five minutes. Served with whole wheat toast and juice, it makes a wholesome morning meal.

Change-Of-Pace Cereals Give Breakfast A Boost

Breakfast is back. Vigorous promotions by fast food chains have sold Americans on how easy and enjoyable the morning meal can be, and now eating breakfast at home is on the rise. Microwaveable pancakes, toaster waffles and fast-to-fix hot cereals make it almost effortless.

New from The Quaker Kitchens are two fast-to-fix hot cereal recipes that begin with convenient quick grits. Ideal for hurried mornings, both recipes can be prepared in a microwave oven or on a range top in just five or six minutes.

Fruited Grits Cereal gives breakfast a new twist. Fresh or frozen fruit — peaches, apples or blueberries — teamed with creamy, hot grits provide a fresh approach to the morning meal.

Heaty Morning Grits are richly flavored with maple syrup, nutmeg and cinnamon. Lightly sweet, with the chewy and crunchy additions of raisins and walnuts, they're a great beginning for a streamlined breakfast.

For more quick, nutritious and flavor-packed recipes, look to "Hurry, Let's Eat!," a colorful, 48-page recipe book available free from The Quaker Oats Company. Created specifically for cooks with busy lives, it contains great-tasting, easy-to-make recipes and tips on menu planning, food safety and shopping. Health-conscious cooks will appreciate the book's low-fat, low-cholesterol and high-fiber recipes. Nutrition analysis and calorie count is included with each recipe.

FRUITED GRITS CEREAL

2 1/2 cups milk
3/4 cup enriched hominy quick grits, uncooked
1/2 cup firmly packed brown sugar
1 cup sliced peaches, chopped apple or blueberries

Microwave oven direction: Combine milk and grits in medium microwaveable bowl; stir. Microwave at high setting, 5 1/2 to 6 1/2 minutes or until thickened. Add brown sugar; stir well. Stir in fruit. Serve with additional milk if desired.

Stove-top directions: In saucepan, bring 3 1/4 cups milk to a boil. Slowly stir in grits. Reduce heat; simmer uncovered 2 1/2 to 5 minutes or until thickened, stirring occasionally. Add brown sugar; stir well. Stir in fruit. Serve with additional milk if desired. Recipe makes four servings. Each serving contains 280 calories, 52 grams of carbohydrates, 8 grams of protein, 5 grams of fat, 80 milligrams of sodium, 200 milligrams of calcium, 20 milligrams of cholesterol and 2 grams of dietary fiber.

HEARTY MORNING GRITS

1/2 cup syrup or lite syrup
3/4 cup enriched hominy quick grits, uncooked
1/3 cup raisins
1/3 cup chopped walnuts
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1/8 teaspoon nutmeg

Microwave oven directions: Combine water, syrup and grits in medium microwaveable bowl; stir. Microwave at high setting, 5 1/2 to 6 1/2 minutes or until thickened. Stir in remaining ingredients. Serve with additional syrup, if desired.

Stove-top directions: In saucepan, bring 2 1/2 cups water and 1/2 cup syrup to a boil. Slowly stir in grits. Reduce heat; simmer uncovered 2 1/2 to 5 minutes or until thickened, stirring occasionally. Stir in remaining ingredients. Serve with additional syrup, if desired. Recipe make four servings. Each serving cantains 310 calories, 60 grams of carbohydrates, 4 grams of protein, 6 grams of fat, 30 milligrams of sodium, 20 milligrams of calcium, 0 milligrams of cholesterol and 3 grams of dietary fiber.

Homemade Quick Bread Is Healthful, Delicious

Old fashioned quick breads are back. Across the country, muffins and cinnamon rolls fill specialty shop windows. In supermarkets and malls, the aroma of fresh baked breads is tantalizing.

As tasty as they may be, commercially-prepared quick breads, rolls and muffins can be notoriously high in fat, sugar, and calories. Those baked at home can be far more healthful and every bit as delicious. Using recipes that incorporate whole grains, fruits and nuts while keeping fat and sugar in line, homemade quick breads boost nutrients without compromising flavor.

With healthful eating and great taste in mind, the Quaker Test Kitchens have created two new alternatives to commercial quick breads. Banana Orange Muffincake can please in two ways, either as coffee cake or as a muffin recipe. It takes its hearty flavor and texture from whole grain oats, which also provide water-soluble fiber, and it features a fresh fruit combination that is readily available year 'round.

Garden Confetti Corn Bread makes any simple entree special with its blend of fresh vegetables, herbs and yogurt complimenting the goodness and great taste of corn meal. It's a healthy treat at lunch or snack time, too.

For additional wholesome quick breads and lots of fresh ideas for good eating, look to "Hurry, Let's Eat!" a 48-page booklet offered by The Quaker Oats Co. This colorful collection of fast-to-fix recipes includes microwave recipes, nutrition information, shopping tips, storage guidelines and more. To receive a free copy, send your name and address on a postcard to: "Hurry, Let's Eat!", 231 S. Green St., Dept. US-D, Chicago, IL 60607.

BANANA ORANGE MUFFINCAKE

1 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
1 cup quick or old fashioned oats, uncooked)
1/3 cup firmly packed brown sugar
1 tablespoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/4 teaspoon salt
2/3 cup mashed ripe banana (about 2 medium)
1/2 cup orange juice
1/3 cup margarine, melted
1 egg, lightly beaten

Heat oven to 400 degrees. Grease bottom of 9-inch round springform pan or cake pan. Combine dry ingredients. Add combined banana, juice, margarine, egg and orange peel, mixing just until dry ingredients are moistened. Pour into prepared pan. Bake 30 to 35 minutes or until golden brown. Cool 10 minutes on wire rack; remove from pan. Combine remaining ingredients; drizzle evenly over cake while still warm.

A variation would be to grease 12 medium muffin cups or line with paper baking cups. Prepare batter as recipe directs; fill prepared muffin cups almost full. Bake 15 to 18 minutes or until golden brown. Combine remaining ingredients; drizzle evenly over muffins.

To freeze, wrap muffins securely; store in freezer up to 3 months. To reheat frozen muffins in microwave oven, microwave at HIGH 25 to 30 seconds for each muffin.

Each serving (1/12 of cake or 1 muffin) contains 190 calories, 32g of carbohydrates, 3g of protein, 6g of fat, 250mg of sodium, 70mg of calcium, 20mg of cholesterol, and 1g of dietary fiber.

Shad: Springtime Sensation That's Well Worth The Wait

By Tom Sietsema
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

Forget robins, crocuses and cherry blossoms. The surest sign of spring, connoisseurs will tell you, is the arrival of the finny migrant known as shad.

The largest member of the herring family, shad is extremely perishable and therefore one of the world's few remaining delicacies that is available only during its local season.

Beginning in January and continuing through May, the silvery fish ascend the rivers along the Atlantic Coast, from northern Florida to the Gulf of St. Lawrence, to spawn.

The availability of shad is restricted to small regions as the fish move up the coast. Shad lover Robert Gabrielson, president of the New York State Commercial Fishermen's Association, boasts that "they're on a better timetable than most bus companies."

An oily fish, shad is best eaten fresh, soon after harvesting; the supply, say retailers, gives aficionados from now to about the end of April to satiate their craving.

Shad is a fish blessed with a meaty, delicately sweet flavor; those who relish its heavy, pale pink flesh say it has no equal. "People wait for it all year round," reports David Kottler, manager of U.S. Fish in Kensington, Md. Then they "will eat it two, three, four times a week during the season," he adds.

Others hold the shad's roe in even higher esteem; the small, red-brown eggs, encased in a nearly translucent membrane, are in fact sold separately from the fish, but some fans have

Dear Readers: I was so pleased that my colleague Nancy Gray, a nutritionist in the pediatrics department at East Carolina University, got a Ronald McDonald research grant to study nutrition and sickle cell in children. I am pleased to be cooperating with her on the nutrition assessment of the project. Since Nancy got such nice publicity about the grant, I asked her to tell met more about sickle cell disease and the role of nutrition.

Sickle cell anemia (SCA) is an inherited disease that cannot be cured. Sickle cell is seen predominantly in our young, black population, and is a disease that is often painful and crippling. In SCA the hemoglobin (which is the red, protein part of your blood cell) is defective, and the erythrocytes (the whole red blood cell) are sickle-shaped. This sickling causes painful cramps in the blood vessels throughout the body and leads to what is called a "crisis" for this person.

Treatments to lessen the severity of the disease and increase the life span and quality of life for people with SCA have been developed. But, no "cure" has been found. We think that children with SCA may need more calories (food), protein (in meats and cheeses), and certain vitamins and minerals to grow better and live longer. Our pilot research program will be done at the Regional Comprehensive Sickle Cell Clinic at the ECU School of Medicine, Pediatric Department, to see if more calories and nutrients are needed for these children. We will be comparing their nutritional intake with those of other children without the disease.

Many factors lead to nutrition complications. Some children don't get as much food as they need to eat to replace the red blood cells they use up because their family's finances are limited. Sometimes the disease affects the child's ability to get enough foods and nutrients — the pain is so real during crisis that a "normal" lifestyle, including eating, is difficult for the SCA child. So far, making sure the patient has good knowledge about good nutrition and also access to food supplement programs, such as food stamps and school meals, are the two things we do to manage the nutrition aspects of SCA. If our studies show that a high calorie, high protein diet with special vitamins and minerals are necessary, we will work toward developing a treatment program that will include more emphasis on diet to improve the quality of life and lengthen the life span of SCA sufferers.

We're looking forward to working with SCA children and others in our region to better understand the role of nutrition in sickle cell disease.

Dear Readers: I've been delighted at your response to my article about potato skins. M.P. called to say she enjoyed potato skins while growing up in the south. R.T. told me she never had a baked potato until she was an adult but now loves the taste and texture of the skins. Others have told me they did peel their boiled potatoes but mostly as an easy way to clean them.

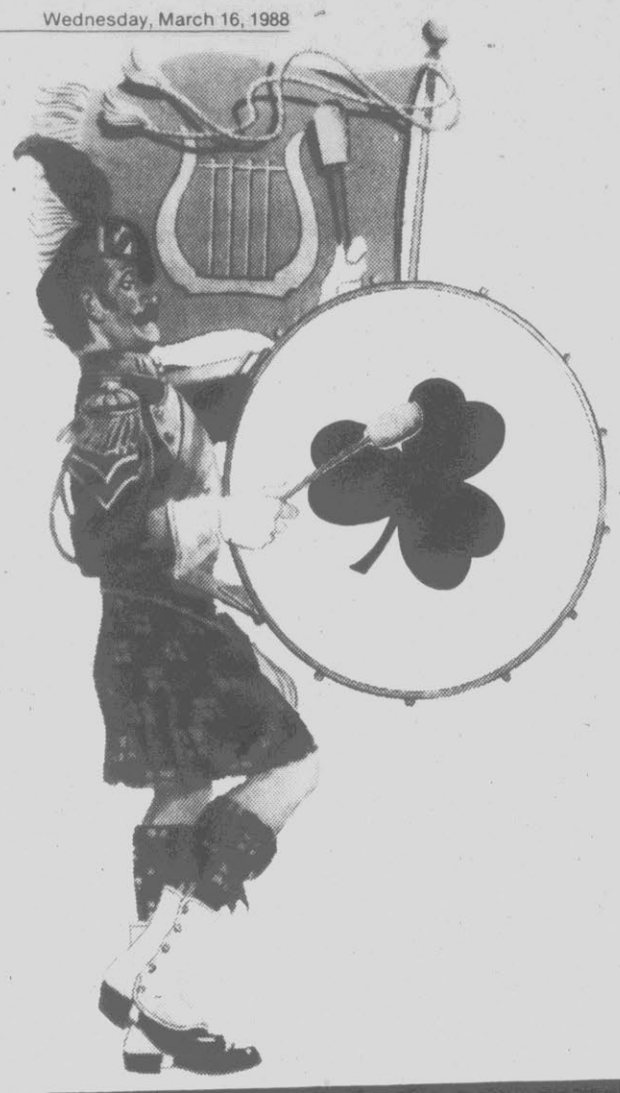
Cookbooks Are Always A Hot Dish

By Becky Aikman
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service



Fads in publishing come and go, but one genre remains a reliable seller in most any bookstore: cookbooks.

"Cookbooks sell day in and day out, season to season," said Mary Shapiro, director of retail marketing for Baker & Taylor, a book wholesaling company. "And they make excellent gifts."

Although individual cookbooks can flop, just as any other form of publishing can, the category performs well overall, partly because classics, like "The Joy of Cooking" or the Betty Crocker cookbooks, continue to sell over many years. On top of those, new, hot books, like the current bestseller "The Frugal Gourmet Cooks American," published by William Morrow & Co., often add an extra spurt to sales.

"Some people like biography, some like fiction, but cookbooks span all different kinds of people," said Dara Tyson, a spokeswoman for Waldenbooks. A recent survey by Mediamark Research bears her out. It says that 13.8 percent of all adults in the United States bought cookbooks last year. The only category that finished ahead of that was paperback novels, at 17.5 percent.

But cookbook popularity seems to be growing, too. Waldenbooks' cookbook sales were up 4 percent last year. "It's part of the cocooning phenomenon that's going on now," Tyson said. "People are staying at home and entertaining at home more."

"There is a phenomenon going on where some cookbooks are selling better than cookbooks ever sold before," said Ann Bramson, a senior editor at Morrow. She attributes that to television, which has boosted the career of Jeff Smith, author of "The Frugal Gourmet" books. "He is somewhat charismatic on the air," Bramson said. More than 2.7 million copies of his three books are in print.

What else makes for a bestseller? "A wonderful combination of subject and author and timing," Bramson said. That helped another of Morrow's cookbooks, Barbara Kafka's "The Microwave Gourmet." It combined, Bramson said, "somebody with upmarket tastes" — Kafka — "and what had been considered a somewhat downmarket appliance."

A recognizable author's name, or a recognizable institution can also help, she said. She thinks that should win attention for a Morrow release in April, a cookbook of recipes from the American Cancer Society on how to eat properly to reduce chances of getting cancer.

Among dedicated food buffs, "the direction is absolutely up and up" for cookbooks sales, according to Nach Waxman, proprietor of Kitchen Arts & Letters, a New York City store that caters to serious cooks. His customers are now buying books on exotic cooking, like Burmese or Ethiopian cuisines. But they are also reading about traditional American foods.

Waxman said his buyers also go for "healthy and absolutely unhealthy books" — like those on spa cooking or outrageous desserts. Which shows that even among such stable, reliable sellers as cookbooks, readers still go for variety.

Bread

GARDEN CONFETTI CORN BREAD

1 cup corn meal
1 cup all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon snipped fresh basil leaves or 1 teaspoon basil
2 tablespoons sugar (optional)
4 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
One 8-oz. carton (1 cup) plain yogurt
1/4 cup milk
1 egg, lightly beaten
1/4 cup vegetable oil
1/2 cup chopped red bell pepper
1/2 cup shredded carrot
1/4 cup sliced green onions

Heat oven to 400 degrees. Grease 8 or 9-inch square baking pan. Combine dry ingredients and basil. Add combined yogurt, milk, egg and oil, mixing just until dry ingredients are moistened. Fold in vegetables; pour into prepared pan. Bake 25 to 30 minutes or until golden brown.

Each serving (1/9 of bread) contains 200 calories, 27g of carbohydrates, 5g of protein, 8g of fat, 350mg of sodium, 160mg of calcium, 35mg of cholesterol, and 1g of dietary fiber.

Shad Is A Springtime Sensation

been known to buy a whole shad for its roe (which comes in sets or pairs) alone.

When cooked, the fragile roe is transformed into what looks vaguely like steak — gray in color, granular in texture and subtle in flavor.

As good as they are on their own, shad and its roe, some think, are even better when paired. To show them to their best advantage, they should be simply seasoned.

The hoopla surrounding the seasonal delicacy isn't only in the eating. In Wakefield, Va., the fish run becomes an excuse to socialize. Already, the rural civic organization known as the Ruritan Club is gearing up for its 40th annual "shad planking."

This combination fund-raiser and cookout, held the third Wednesday of April, involves hundreds of volunteers and, estimates co-chairman Buddy Savedge, about 1½ tons of shad, which are nailed onto oak planks, then slow-cooked over wood fires until the fish are near melting.

In recent decades the menu has grown to include appearances by political figures, but organizers insist the fish retain star billing.

Of course, the American Indians were eating shad long before the current citizens of Wakefield. And it is said that shad was so abundant in colonial days that the fish became unfashionable among the upper classes, who feared that others would think them unable to afford more expensive foods.

Consequently, the story goes, shad was eaten in secret. Later, no less a fan than George Washington succeeded in introducing presidential houseguests to the delights of the fish.

While this native to the Atlantic was transplanted to the waters of the Pacific as long ago as the 1870s, shad remains primarily an East coast specialty.

Unfortunately, there's a flip side to this prized fish. An old verse illustrates its primary drawback:

"When the Lord made shad,
"The devil was mad
"For it seemed such a feast of delight;
"So to poison the scheme
"He jumped in the stream,
"And stuck in the bones out of spite!"

Indeed, the fish's wire-like bone structure, which resembles a Victorian-era corset, is so elaborate that it can take even a seasoned shad boner 10 minutes (and about a dozen separate cuts) to clean a single fish.

Shad boning is a skill handed down from generation to generation, a talent that is neither easily nor quickly learned: "Just because you're a fish-cutter doesn't mean you're a shad-boner," emphasizes U.S. Fish's Kottler.

Worse, the pool of professional shad-boners — a mostly elderly group — is dwindling, report fish suppliers up and down the East Coast. "It's a lost art," claims Lou Goodwin, vice president of E. Goodwin & Sons, a fish wholesaler in Jessup, Md. Goodwin's five experienced fish-cutters, hired for the brief shad season, process an average of 150 shad a day.

Sporadic though the job may be, trained shad-boners can earn as much as a dollar a fish. "It's not something that comes cheaply," offers Kottler, who likens the skill to that of the stone-carver.

(From the consumer's standpoint, times have apparently improved since 1922, when the price commanded by one Peter Andreotti of New York's Fulton Fish Market was reported to be a whopping $1.50 per fish. According to a state Fishery Council press release, the fish-cutter used tweezers and pincers to extricate the tiny bones from the shad, which was then sold to the J.P. Morgan Co. restaurant.)

In an effort to increase the number of trained fish-cutters — and raise the profits of shad fishermen — the New York State Commercial Fishermen's Association is racing to finish a video demonstrating the shad-boning process. The tapes are expected to be sold to shad fishermen, according to spokesman Gabrielson, who figures they can more than quadruple the current profit of 30 to 40 cents a fish by learning to bone the shad themselves

In Washington the price for filleted shad ranges from about $5.99 a pound to $7.59 a pound. Giant supermarkets also sell whole buck shad for $1.99 a pound and whole roe shad for $3.39 a pound. Depending on size, roe sets range from $4.50 to $10.99.

At least one restaurant chef, Freddie Mallory of the Georgetown Seafood Grill in Washington, is waiting for mid-season and lower prices before putting shad on his menu. As one of the few Washington chefs to profess a knack for boning shad (he says he learned the technique while working under the chef of a now defunct restaurant), Mallory says he can't justify the high menu prices it would require for him to bone his own fish.

Of course, shad doesn't necessarily have to be boned; one way to avoid the tedious process of extricating the skeleton is to cook shad for a long time at a low temperature, the technique employed by the Wakefield shad-plankers, and some home cooks, who steam the shad by placing it in an oven under tight cover and baking it for up to six hours. While the slow cooking disintegrates the bones, reducing them to a harmless pap, it also lessens the flavor of the flesh, say critics.

Another school of thought suggests quickly and lightly cooking the shad by broiling, sauteing or poaching the fish, which can be prepared to any recipe suitable for mackerel or herring.

Either way it's fixed, the skin of the shad should be left on, to preserve the soft-fleshed meat. And it should be cooked as soon as possible after purchase.

The roe requires more delicate handling. To prevent the membrane from exploding and splattering the tiny eggs, the roe should be pricked with a needle, then cooked gently over low heat.

For best results, place the roe sac in cold water to cover, along with a tablespoon of lemon juice or vinegar. and boil gently for 6 to 8 minutes. Then broil or saute on each side before serving.

SHAD AND SHAD ROE IN CREAM SAUCE WITH CAPERS

3 shad fillets with skin
3 pairs shad roe
Salt and freshly ground white pepper
2 tablespoons unsalted butter
4 tablespoons finely chopped shallots
1 1/4 cups whipping cream
1/2 teaspoon freshly grated nutmeg
1/3 cup drained capers
Juice of 1 lemon

Cut the shad fillets in half crosswise. Season the fillets and the roe with salt and pepper.

Put the butter and the shallots in a large frying pan over medium-high heat. When the shallots are wilted, add as much of the shad and shad roe as will fit in one layer without crowding (to save time use 2 pans simultaneously). Add the cream, nutmeg and capers. Bring to a boil, cover, and simmer for 6 to 8 minutes, or until fish flakes when poked with a fork.

Remove the fish with a slotted spatula to warm serving plates or a platter. Separate each roe pair lengthwise. Place a strip atop each piece of shad.

Bring the sauce to a boil and reduce it to about 1 cup. Add the lemon juice, stir, and pour the sauce over the shad. Serve immediately.

From "The Seafood Cookbook" by Pierre Franey and Bryan Miller (Times Books, 1986)

SHAD AMANDINE

(4 servings)
2 pounds shad fillets, boned
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
1/2 cup milk
1/2 cup flour
3/4 cup dry bread crumbs
1/2 cup peanut oil
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1/2 cup almonds, blanched and slivered
1/2 cup (1 stick) butter

Season fillets with salt and pepper. Dip them into milk, then into flour, then into milk again, then into bread crumbs. Brown fish in oil, then reduce heat and cook for approximately 8 minutes. Drain fish and arrange on a heated platter. Sprinkle with lemon juice. Saute the almonds in butter until golden brown, and pour almonds and butter over fish.

SHAD AND SHAD ROE WITH GARLIC AND TARRAGON

(2 servings)
Dry white wine
2 shad fillets with skin
1 pair medium shad roe
2 tablespoons unsalted butter, melted
Salt to taste
Freshly ground white pepper to taste
2 cloves garlic, finely minced
2 tablespoons fresh tarragon leaves

Into an oven pan large enough to fit the fish and roe, pour wine to a depth of ⅛ inch. Lay the fillets and the roe (separated in two) in the wine. Pour the melted butter over, then sprinkle with salt, pepper, garlic and tarragon.

Bake in a 450-degree oven until the fillets are slightly browned on top, about 20 minutes. Press the roe with your index finger to establish whether it is cooked through. Be careful not to overcook as they tend to dry out and become tough.

Slice the roe on the diagonal, if you like, to improve its appearance and arrange on warmed plates or a platter with the fillets. Serve with the liquid from the pan poured over the fish and roe.

—From "Saucing the Fish" by Shirley King (Simon and Schuster, 1986)

Bread With Italian Flair

Given below are two quick and easy recipes for main dish breads with Italian flair. Sausage Pizza Roll is filled with spicy Italian sausage, cheeses, onions and green pepper. The pizza is rolled up and baked and then cut into thick slices. Calabrese, from the province of Calabria in southern Italy, has a rich spinach and cheese filling. Both breads are made with frozen bread ready-dough for time-saving convenience. Serve with a crisp green salad for a satisfying and delicious meal.

CALABRESE

1 (one-pound) loaf frozen bread ready-dough
10 oz. package frozen chopped spinach, thawed
1/4 cup Parmesan cheese
2/3 cup spaghetti or pizza sauce
1 egg
2 cups grated mozzarella cheese (8 oz.)

Let frozen bread dough thaw until pliable. Drain thawed spinach thoroughly, squeezing to remove excess water. Combine spinach, Parmesan, sauce, and egg. On a lightly floured board, roll dough out to a 10-inch circle. Place dough on a greased pizza pan. Spread filling mixture over half of dough circle. Sprinkle mozzarella over spinach. Fold other half of dough over filling. Pinch along edge tightly to seal filling in. Cut slits in top crust for vents. Bake at 375 degrees for 30-35 minutes or until well browned. Remove from pan immediately. Cut into wedges. Makes 4 servings.

SAUSAGE PIZZA ROLL

1 (one-pound) loaf frozen bread ready-dough
1 pound Italian sausage (1 pound gound beef may be substituted)
1 onion, chopped
1/4 green pepper, chopped
1/2 cup pizza sauce
1/4 cup Parmesan cheese
1 1/2 cups grated mozzarella cheese

Let frozen dough thaw until pliable. Cook sausage in a skillet until brown and crumbly. Add onion and green pepper and cook until tender. Drain well. Add pizza sauce. On a lightly floured board, roll dough out to a 12-inch square. Spread meat mixture over dough and sprinkle with Parmesan and mozzarella. Roll dough and filling up jelly roll style. Pinch edges to seal. Place on a greased baking sheet and sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Cut slits in top for vents. Bake at 350 degrees for 35-40 minutes or until well browned. Cool slightly and cut into thick slices.

America Is Returning To Its Roots, And Tubers

By Minnie Bernardino
L.T. Times-Washington Post News Service

We are back to our roots, and tubers — those wonderful foods from underground. A prehistoric inheritance, these unsinkable vegetables are reappearing more and more on America's tables as we return to basics and comfort foods.

Roots and tubers are energy foods. It is hard to believe that the slaves who built the pyramids in Egypt were fed a steady diet of radishes. When the Germans imprisoned French agronomist Antoine Augustin Parmentier during the Seven Year War, potatoes became his means of subsistence during three years of confinement.

"Root vegetables are complex carbohydrates, the energy storage for plants," said Kathryn Boyd R.D., assistant director of clinical nutrition at Saddleback Hospital and Health Center in Laguna Hills, Calif. "Although they vary a great deal in nutrient value, they're good sources of fiber, low in fat and relatively low in calories. In general, they have moderately significant amounts of vitamins A and C."

Ugly ducklings in the garden, roots, fortunately, grow out of sight. Picture the monstrous celeriac, or celery root, or the freaky-looking horseradish. And the bumpy sunchoke tuber is certainly a far cry from its pretty sunflower offshoot. Anyone would be turned off by dark and dirty-looking gobo (burdock) sticks, the hairy taro, the finger-shaped ginger or the ginseng root, whose shape suggests a strange human form. Lacy when sliced, the lotus root in its fresh form resembles link sausage.

Beneath the fibrous, knobby skins of many starchy root crops is a creamy flesh that when delicately simmered turns into a tender mealy pulp. Others, such as jicama, daikon and red radishes, beets, and carrots, show a juicy content with crisp textures and a sweet taste. There's nothing like a glass of carrot juice to start an energy-filled day.

We are all familiar with the goodness of potatoes, sweet potatoes, beets, carrots, turnips, rutabagas (the Swedish turnip that is a cross between cabbage and turnips) and parsnips. New varieties, however, can be discovered. If you grow your own, try the golden beet or the white beet varieties that do not bleed like the red ones. Another good variety is the little finger carrot, grown for its extra-sweet gourmet flavor and smooth skin.

Now available in many markets, golden or Finnish yellow potatoes as well as purple and blue varieties can be grown. Both can be boiled and sliced to show off their pretty colors as an accompaniment to an entree.

The simplest preparation of roots and tubers is fresh and julienned, served plain or with a lemony or vinaigrette-type dip. "Couch potatoes" glued to the TV screens can graze on crisp jicama or carrot sticks, radishes or blanched celeriac. Although not as energetic as the slaves of Egypt, these people rooted to the couch would likely benefit more by way of a lower calorie intake.

LOTUS ROOT-CRAB-EGG SOUP

2 shiitake mushrooms
3/4 cup peeled and diced lotus root, water chestnuts or gobo
2 (14-ounce) cans clear chicken broth
1/4 cup cornstarch
6 to 8 small Chinese pea pods, stringed
1/2 cup cooked crab meat
1 egg, lightly beaten
2 drops sesame oil

Soak shiitake mushrooms in warm water until tender. Drain and cut in quarters. Place lotus root in saucepan and add enough water to cover. Cover and simmer until lotus root is tender-crisp. Combine chicken broth and cornstarch. Stir until cornstarch dissolves. Add to saucepan and bring to boil over medium heat. Simmer until thickened.

Add pea pods and crab meat. Cook a few minutes. Slowly drop in beaten egg, stirring gently. Add sesame oil. Makes 4 servings.

CARROT, PARSNIP AND CELERIAC SALAD WITH CILANTRO VINAIGRETTE

3 medium carrots, peeled and sliced julienne
3 medium parsnips or jicama, peeled and sliced julienne
1 pound celeriac, peeled and sliced julienne
1 cup boiling salted water
1/4 cup chopped fennel
Cilantro Vinaigrette
Lettuce
Peeled orange cartwheels, optional

Add carrots, parsnips and celeriac to boiling salted water in saucepan. Boil 3 minutes. Drain and cool. Add fennel and Cilantro Vinaigrette. Toss and chill covered several hours. Serve on lettuce and garnish with orange cartwheels. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Note: Other root vegetables such as daikon and blanched and peeled turnips or rutabagas may be substituted.

Cilantro Vinaigrette

1/4 cup rice vinegar
2 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons chopped cilantro
Salt
1/2 serrano chile, seeded and minced
Juice of 1 lime
1 shallot, minced
1 small clove garlic, minced

Combine oil, rice vinegar, sugar, cilantro, salt to taste, serrano chile, lime juice, shallot and garlic. Stir well. Makes about 3/4 cup.

CHICKEN-CELERIAC-POTATO SALAD

1 pound yellow or red potatoes, cooked, peeled and diced
2 cups finely diced peeled celeriac, parboiled until tender-crisp
4 cups cubed cooked chicken
1/2 cup chopped sweet pickles
1/4 cup sweet pickle juice
1 cup mayonnaise
1 cup julienned Chinese pea pods
1/2 cup chopped green onions
Salt, pepper
Bibb lettuce
Red radishes

Cool potatoes, celeriac and chicken. Combine in bowl with pickles, pickle juice, mayonnaise, Chinese peas and green onions. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Cover and let stand in refrigerator overnight. Mound on Bibb lettuce and garnish with red radishes. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

CASSAVA (OR YUCA) COCONUT PUDDING

3 egg yolks
2 eggs
1 (14-ounce) coconut milk
1 cup whipping cream or evaporated milk
2 cups chopped or shredded peeled cassava or yuca root
1 cup bottled macapuno (shredded coconut preserve), optional
Sugar
10 to 12 strawberries

Combine egg yolks and eggs in bowl and stir to blend. Add whipping cream, cassava and macapuno. Add 1/2 cup sugar or to taste. Turn into 10 to 12 buttered ramekins or custard cups leaving about 3/4-inch head space. Place on baking sheet and bake at 350 degrees 35 minutes or until knife inserted near center comes out dry. Remove from oven.

Cover tops with about 1 tablespoon sugar. Broil to caramelize or brown the sugar topping. Top with strawberries, sliced or left whole. Makes 10 to 12 servings.

Note: Macapuno is available at Filipino or Chinese markets. Remove any woody centers from cassava if present.

KAREN LEE'S BEET AND SWEET POTATO TEMPURA

1/2 cup flour
1/3 cup cornstarch
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon sesame oil
1 teaspoon dark soy sauce
2/3 cup beer, cold and flat
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 bunch watercress
4 small to medium beets
1 medium to large sweet potato
3 cups peanut oil
1 lime, cut into wedges

Place flour, cornstarch and salt in bowl. Mix with chopsticks. Combine sesame oil, soy sauce and beer in second bowl. Add liquid all at once to dry ingredients, mixing until batter is almost smooth. Add baking powder and mix again. Refrigerate uncovered at least 4 hours or up to 12 hours.

While watercress is still tied, cut off and discard 2 inches of stems. Wash watercress, then dry. Separate beet roots from greens, leaving at least 3 inches of stem on root ends. Reserve greens for another use. Scrub beets and sweet potato. Steam beets and sweet potato 15 minutes. Peel and cut into thick rounds, slightly over 1/4 inch.

Place wok over high heat about 1 minute or until it smokes. Add peanut oil and heat to 350 degrees. Dip beets and sweet potato rounds, 1 at a time, into batter. Place up to 6 rounds in wok and deep fry about 2 minutes or until golden brown. Remove rounds from wok with wire strainer and drain on several layers of paper towels. Repeat until all tempura is cooked. Place tempura on bed of watercress and garnish with lime wedges. Makes 4 servings.

SWEET ROOTS

2 pounds taro, sweet potato, malanga or yuca, or combination
1 (14-ounce) can coconut milk
1 cup sugar or to taste
1 teaspoon grated orange zest, optional
Coconut-Sesame Topping

Peel and slice taro (if small, leave whole) or other root vegetables to be used about 1 inch thick. Place in bowl of water as you slice. Drain. Place roots in saucepan and add water to cover. Cook over medium heat, 30 to 40 minutes or until roots are tender. Drain out liquid. Add coconut milk and sugar to taste to roots in saucepan.

Return to heat and simmer until thickened, about 20 minutes. Stir in orange peel, if desired. Serve warm or at room temperature and serve sprinkled with Coconut-Sesame Topping. Makes 6 servings.

Coconut-Sesame Topping

3 tablespoons butter
1 cup freshly grated coconut
2 tablespoons sesame seeds
3 tablespoons sugar

Melt butter in skillet over medium heat. Add coconut and toast until lightly browned, stirring frequently to prevent browning. Add sesame seeds and sugar. Continue toasting until coconut and seeds are golden brown. Cool to crisp.

DEX'S GOBO ROOT

2 tablespoons oil
1/2 pound gobo root, peeled and cut into fine julienne strips
2 tablespoons soy sauce
2 teaspoons toasted sesame seeds
1/2 teaspoon sugar
Few drops sesame oil
Cayenne pepper
Finely chopped green onions or shredded carrots, optional

Heat oil in skillet. Stir-fry gobo until tender-crisp. Stir in soy sauce, sesame seeds, sugar and sesame oil. Season to taste with cayenne pepper. Serve hot garnished with finely chopped green onions or shredded carrots. Makes 2 servings.

GOBO-JICAMA STIR-FRY

1/2 pound thinly sliced sirloin
1/4 cup soy sauce or to taste
3 tablespoons oil
1/2 pound gobo root, peeled and cut into fine julienne strips
2 large stalks bok choy, coarsely chopped
1 cup coarsely chopped Chinese broccoli
1 cup sliced or cubed peeled jicama
2 tablespoons toasted sesame seeds
1 teaspoon sugar
Cayenne pepper
Few drops sesame oil

Season beef with 2 tablespoons soy sauce. Heat oil in wok or large skillet over high heat. Add gobo strips and stir-fry until tender-crisp. Add beef and stir-fry just until it loses pink color. Add bok choy and broccoli and stir-fry 3 to 5 minutes. Stir in jicama, sesame seeds, sugar, cayenne pepper to taste and sesame oil. Stir-fry 1 to 2 minutes. Serve immediately. Makes 4 servings.

SALSIFY WITH HAM AND TOMATOES

2 1/4 pounds salsify
Lemon juice or vinegar
1 small onion
7 ounces boiled ham
2 tablespoons oil
1 cup meat stock
1/4 cup dry white wine
1/2 teaspoon salt
Freshly ground pepper
2 medium tomatoes
1/2 cup whipping cream
1 tablespoon chopped parsley

Scrub salsify under running water. Peel. To prevent discoloration, immediately drop into bowl of water acidulated with lemon juice or vinegar. Peel and chop onion. Dice ham. Heat oil in large saucepan. Add onion and saute until tender. Add ham and saute briefly. Cut salsify into pieces about 1 1/4- to 1 1/2-inches long. Add to saucepan.

Pour meat stock and wine over. Season with salt and pepper and cook over medium heat 20 minutes.

Blanch tomatoes briefly in boiling water then drain. Peel and dice tomatoes. Add to salsify with cream. Reduce heat to low and cook about 10 minutes. Sprinkle with parsley and serve. Makes 4 servings.
