Lumbee Indian Activist Slain In Lumberton

By ERICA JOHNSTON
Associated Press Writer

WAKULLA, N.C. (AP) — A Lumbee Indian activist who was a candidate for Superior Court judge in racially troubled Robeson County was shot to death Saturday at his home, authorities said.

Julian T. Pierce was shot three times at point-blank range with a shotgun, Sheriff Hubert Stone said. "It just looks like he was actually assassinated," the sheriff said, calling it "one of the worst" murders he had investigated in his 33 years as a lawman.

A longtime friend who said he had spent several hours with Pierce on Friday said Pierce had been threatened and feared for his life.

"We were looking for this to happen," said Earl Moore, owner of a cabinet shop. "He knew something could happen — I won't go into it. ... If he had been white he wouldn't be dead today."

Gov. Jim Martin appealed for calm in Robeson County, where two Indians were charged with holding a newspaper staff hostage in February. He said the state had offered a $5,000 reward for information leading to the killer's arrest and conviction.

"North Carolina has suffered another tragedy," Martin said at a Raleigh news conference. "I want to express on ... behalf of the people of the state the grief we share and the sadness for what has happened."

The Red Springs Police Department received a call about the death Saturday morning, said Chief Deputy Al Parnell of the Robeson County sheriff's department. Pierce's home was in the Wakulla community about 15 miles northwest of Lumberton.

FBI Special Agent Paul Daly said agents from the FBI and the State Bureau of Investigation were assisting county investigators.

"We will look into it from the aspect that it could be a potential civil rights violation," said Daly, in charge of FBI operations in North Carolina.

"We have very little to go on at this time," Stone said.

Martin said the crime scene was secured quickly and that he was confident a thorough probe would be conducted.

"The investigation will leave no stone unturned until we are able to identify the murderer, bring that person to justice and determine the motives involved," the governor said.

Pierce, 42, was an attorney in nearby Pembroke. He had resigned as director of Lumbee River Legal Services, which provided legal representation to low-income county residents, to seek a newly created Superior Court judgeship.

He was running against District Attorney Joe Freeman Britt in the May 3 Democratic primary.

"I was shocked and dismayed by the death of Mr. Pierce. His murder was so senseless and violent. It is very sad and tragic, and I extend my personal condolences to his family and friends," Britt said in a statement issued to the Robesonian newspaper in Lumberton. Telephone calls to his home were not answered Saturday night.

"He had a real good chance (to be elected) ...," said the Rev. Elbert Chavis. "I don't think he had any enemies. He was a fine man. He would have been elected. All we want now is a thorough investigation."

Pierce was "liked by all ... he had no enemies that I know of," Stone said, adding that he knew nothing about threats against Pierce. "It took a very mad person to commit a crime like that."

Noriega Loyalists Raid Panama City Port Area

By RICHARD COLE
Associated Press Writer

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Troops loyal to Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega raided Panama City's port area Saturday and cleared it of barricades set up by striking dockworkers. The army threatened force to make the nation's banks reopen.

Banks ignored the threats, and dockworkers stayed away from work as part of a general strike called by opposition leaders to force Noriega from power.

Troops also raided several flour mills and shut down a union hall.

Noriega announced Friday that soldiers would seize flour from the nation's mills, apparently to distribute it to Panamanians who have been short of food because of the strike.

Defiant mill owners retaliated by announcing they were donating the flour to the Roman Catholic church's food program for the needy, but troops began raiding the mills before donations could be made.

Esther Kwaiben, treasurer of the church's program, said more than 1.3 million pounds of flour stored in the mills apparently had been taken to government warehouses.

At the Harinas Panama mill, the general manager, Tirso Wolfschoon, his wife and other company employees were arrested. At General Mills de Panama, troops kicked out all the employees and took over the plant.

Noriega opponents got a boost when groups representing 55,000 retirees announced they will join nationwide street demonstrations which the National Civic Crusade has called for Monday.

"We will block the streets of this country. Let the president come and speak to us in the street," said retiree Manuel Escudero.

The Crusade is made up of about 200 political parties, professional groups, and student and labor unions. It was formed last June for the sole purpose of forcing out Noriega.

Noriega controls Panama through the 15,000-member Defense Forces which he heads. But that control could weaken the longer his soldiers

Jackson Wins

(Earlier story on A-12)

By EVANS WITT
AP Political Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Jesse Jackson won a decisive victory Saturday over Michael Dukakis in Michigan's Democratic caucuses, where Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt's fading presidential hopes may have come to an end.

Jackson ran strong across the state, where he had campaigned hard to big enthusiastic crowds. Even without substantial reports from his Detroit stronghold, he was just about even with the Massachusetts governor.

"It looks as if the Rev. Jackson has won the popular vote in Michigan. I congratulate him for that," Dukakis said in Milwaukee at a party dinner. "I don't think I did very well in Michigan."

For Gephardt, the "Michigan miracle" did not happen. Aides had said the Missouri congressman probably would withdraw from the presidential race and file for re-election to his House seat if he did poorly in Michigan.

"He's going to go home, meet with his family Sunday and look at the numbers. He'll have something to say Monday," said Gephardt spokesman ALi Webb.

With returns from 45 percent of the voting sites, the two front-runners were almost even — Dukakis 26,837 for 39 percent and Jackson had 26,512 votes for 38 percent. Gephardt had 11,757, or 17 percent.

Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois had 2,140 for 3 percent and Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee had 2,056 for 3 percent. Neither man put significant resources into the state.

Jackson's strongest areas — in Detroit — were only beginning to come in. The first precinct in the heavily black 13th congressional Democratic Party Leader Feels Roster Will Increase Before Nov.

Though membership in the Pitt County Democratic party has dropped since 1984, county chairman J.B. Spilman feels the party will increase its membership before the general election in November and maintain its longtime grip on local offices.

"We're holding parties and that kind of thing, finding people who have just come of voting age and people that just haven't participated before. There are plenty of them," said Spilman.

The Pitt County Republican party has grown to more than 9,000 members and the new plan for electing county commissioners may open doors for Republicans, but Spilman said his party should maintain control of the board of commissioners, which is traditionally made up of Democrats.

"We don't take anybody's vote for granted," said Spilman. "If our candidates perform like they have in the past, it will be a long time before they (Republicans) take any local offices.

"Mainly the party has been built on issues like Social Security and Medicare and the aging — people who worked their whole lives and paid taxes," said Spilman. "Social Security to a younger person may not be so important, but to a person over 50 Social Security is important. The Democratic party has an excellent record on that."

Spilman cited Sen. Terry Sanford's

Panelists Favor Dukakis

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis is the most acceptable Democratic presidential candidate and the one most likely to win the party nomination at the national convention in Atlanta, according to panelists at a forum on Super Tuesday at the Young Democrats' state convention in Greenville.

East Carolina University political science professors Dr. Carmine Scavo and Dr. Dorothy Clayton and former United Press International political reporter Elliot Warnock said Saturday that Dukakis is in the best position to win the nomination.

It is possible that no candidate will win enough delegates to secure the nomination before the national convention, but the panel agreed a brokered convention would not damage the party.

"Brokering now, it seems to me, is very difficult," said Dr. Clayton, explaining that candidates have no authority to order their delegates to change their vote a particular way. "All you can do is urge and encourage your delegates to follow your lead."

"There are no power brokers at this convention. It's going to be the candidates themselves," said Warnock.

New York Gov. Mario Cuomo has not ruled out accepting the nomination if delegates feel none of the candidates are acceptable, and Cuomo's situation will be a key at the convention, said Warnock. "We are in a situation where a lot of candidates are acceptable ... nobody has risen up and Cuomo still has that aura about him."

Though Cuomo may be a key player at the convention, Warnock said Cuomo's reputation may be too lofty.

"He has perhaps an unjustified image," said Warnock. Cuomo has a "mixed track record and barely beat Ed Koch" in the New York governor's race, he said.

Scavo suggested Cuomo may be choosing to run in 1992 to avoid overseeing the immediate post-Reagan years, but Warnock said that would be a poor decision.

"It behooves the Democratic party to prove why it is the better choice," said Warnock, instead of waiting for the opponent to make a mistake. "I would like to see the Democratc Party get back to the position where it is pushing its ideas."

Super Tuesday was created to allow the South to make an impact in the presidential nominating process, said panel member Betty Speir, who

'More Serious' Charges Filed

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

Investigators from the Pitt County Sheriff's Department filed new "more serious" charges Friday afternoon against Sandra Faye Haddock White, 45, of Route 2 Grimesland, in connection with the March 19 stabbing death of her husband, Bobby Charles White.

The new warrant states Mrs. White, who was arrested Wednesday and charged with solicitation of murder, conspired in January "with James Alton Mobley, James Earl Manning, and others, known and unknown, to commit the felony of murder against Bobby Charles White."

The solicitation charge means Mrs. White asked someone to kill her husband, but it does not necessarily

Pierce had been shot during a burglary. But State Bureau of Investigation Director Robert Morgan said "we don't have any motive" and Stone said nothing appeared to have been stolen. Morgan said he believed Pierce lived alone.

Pierce's wallet, containing money, was found in the house, Stone said.

Authorities received the first word of the death from "a friend" of Pierce, said Morgan, who would not identify the caller.

Pierce was found lying face down in the blood-spattered kitchen near a door which had several glass panes broken. Stone said the murderer either forced his way inside or broke the glass, stuck the gun through the opening and fired.

At midafternoon, the body was still in the house, in a rural area about 15 miles from Lumberton, as forensic experts combed the scene.

Robeson County, bordering South Carolina in the southeast corner of North Carolina, is the home of The Robesonian newspaper, where two Lumbee Indians were charged with holding the staff hostage Feb. 1. The men charged with hostage-taking, Eddie Hatcher and Tim Jacobs, said they wanted to call attention to racial injustice and corruption in the county.

A letter written by Hatcher before the hostage incident criticized The Robesonian's coverage of Pierce's announcement for the judgeship. The letter, which was published in the weekly Carolina Indian Voice newspaper in January, said Pierce's story didn't receive as prominent display as did Britt's announcement.

Robeson County's population is 37 percent white, 37 percent Indian and 26 percent black. Blacks and Indians long have alleged racism and corruption in the local criminal justice system.

Britt, who is known for the number of death-penalty verdicts he has won, has been a frequent target of the complaints.

A crowd of onlookers, mostly Lumbee Indians, stood outside Pierce's one-story brick ranch house Saturday afternoon. Many said they believed the slaying was politically motivated and that they didn't have much faith that the sheriff's department would investigate the killing adequately.

Morgan said, "I'm sure that there are those who share that feeling, but if they don't trust the county, the SBI and the FBI, I don't know who else we can turn to."

Later, about 100 residents joined reporters at an impromptu news conference outside the house. The crowd occasionally heckled the sheriff as he answered questions, especially when he appealed to the public for help.

"What we need is your cooperation — talking and listening," Stone said.

work on correcting an error in Social Security payments made to "notch babies" — those people born betwenn 1917 and 1923.

People born in those years receive less money than they should from Social Security, said Spilman. "They're a lot of people in Pitt County in that bracket," he said. "But Sen. Sanford is working on that now and so is Walter Jones."

Tom Johnson Jr., president of the Pitt County Young Democrats, also believes Sanford's victory in the 1986 senate race has been a boost to the local Democrats and he said Sanford has attracted many young people.

"I've seen a changes I think with the election of Terry Sanford. I saw more interest in the party," said Johnson. "I saw more young people involved in Sanford's campaign than I've seen in a long time. I saw a lot of young people really excited about the Sanford campaign."

After Gov. Jim Hunt lost the 1984 senate race to Rep. Jesse Helms, Johnson said Sanford helped revitalize the party. "I think there was a lot of enthusiasm generated by that. It was like a rebound and the party really gathered behind Terry Sanford in getting him elected."

"It showed we can really get behind a Democrat and elect a Democrat," said Johnson.

The ability of the Democratic party to rally around a candidate has been questioned in recent elections as registered Democrats have crossed over in the general elections to provide wins in North Carolina for Ronald Reagan, Jesses Helms and Jim Martin.

"That's real easy to explain in my opinion," said Spilman. "On the state level you can bring to bear television commercials." Television advertisements in state and national campaigns can break through party lines and cause voters to split their ticket, he said.

Voters have more first-hand knowledge about the local candidates and there is less chance ads or commercials will sway them away from their party, said Spilman.

"In local races it's always been that way," said Johnson. "Democrats have a stronghold and there has always been that difference." Republicans have done well in recent elections because of Reagan's popularity, he said, and a lot of conservative Democrats voted for Helms and Martin.

"You are always going to have that," said Johnson, explaining some people will vote for a candidate based on the political philosophy instead of the political party.

Another reason for the crossover voting is some voters whose politics were suited to the Republican party have often registered as Democrats in order to participate in state politics, said Johnson. "I think for a long time ... there have really been some people in the Democratic party that are there because they want to vote in the primary."

"We have vigorous primaries and that attracts a lot of it," said Spilman. "I think that's a big difference."

Some of those conservative voters are changing their registration to Republican, but Johnson said that is not a sign the Democratic party is weakening because those voters have supported Republican candidates in the past.

"I don't see it as anything really significant," said Johnson. "I don't think you're seeing a significant number moving from the Democratic party to the Republican party."

Though Johnson feels the number of registered Democrats should increase as the May primary draws near, he also said the Republican party may finally win some local offices, "I think you might see it."

"Any time when you have a contested race it makes you work harder," said Johnson. "I don't have any problem with having a Republican candidate. We'll just have to work hard and get our candidate elected. I like to see competition for the seats. We can get complacent if we don't have the competition.

"I think there's a concern about running quality candidates and good candidates," said Johnson. "I think the big thing is that we work together ... I think there's been more emphasis on unity and party unity and I like that."

"That's really our goal: to be unified," said Johnson.

After the primaries in May, the party will establish one headquarters for all county Democrats running in the general election, said Johnson, and the party will work to get voters to support all candidates on the ticket.

"I think that a lot of times you find the Republican party following behind a particular candidate, not a ticket," said Johnson. "Here, especially in Pitt County, we're really committed to working for the ticket."

The most important thing is getting more people involved and getting the general membership more active, said Johnson.

The Young Democrats have a pig-picking each year to involve new members, said Johnson, and the Young Democrat's state convention held in Greenville this weekend is an important event. "It's an excellent opportunity to get more young people in Pitt County involved, to see what it's all about," he said.

The Young Democrats invited all of the party's presidential candidates to visit Pitt County to allow voters to meet the candidates and to generate interest. "We made a concerted effort to do that and we got a lot of them to come here," said Johnson.

Memebers of the county party meet once a month for breakfast, said Johnson, and they also hold a rally once a year. The Young Democrats help out with the county rally and the senior party often returns the favor. "A lot of times we help each other out."

In Michigan, the state party was running the vote tally, which slowed after a quick start. And the calculations of each candidate's share of the 138 pledged delegates at stake were even slower and were not expected until late in the evening.

Michigan sends 150 delegates to the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta, with 12 of those slots reserved for unpledged party leaders and elected officials.

mean anyone agreed to carry out the murder, said Larry Parker, investigator with the Sheriff's Department.

The conspiracy charge is "much more serious," said Parker. Now "she's charged with actually hiring someone" to commit the murder, he said.

Mobley, 21, of Route 1, Grimesland, and Manning, 23, of Route 2, Grimesland, were arrested Thursday and charged with conspiring to commit murder.

Mrs. White, Mobley and Manning are each being held without bond while awaiting a probable cause hearing April 15.

Mrs. White made an offer of between $30,000 and $35,000 to have her husband killed, but no money changed hands, according to State Bureau of Investigation agent Jim Wilson.

The plan to kill White had been discussed for months, said Parker, "but the actual business transaction began in January. That's when we got down to the nitty-gritty."

Parker declined to comment on the relationship of the three people arrested, but he said the Whites had marital trouble, and love and greed were factors in the conspiracy.

"I think we're making excellent progress in the case," said Parker, "and we do anticipate additional charges being brought."

The new charges will come in the "fairly near future," said Parker, but he declined to comment on whether the additional charges would result in more arrests.

A fourth person could be arrested and charged with committing the murder or any of the three people already arrested could be charged with murder if there is sufficient evidence, said Wilson.

Two SBI agents have been assisting the Sheriff's Department with the case, and investigators have been working around the clock since the murder, said Parker. "We've run down every lead that we've had ... We've had a lot of good people in this county give us a lot of good information."

White, 47, worked as a diesel mechanic for the city of Greenville. Mrs. White reported finding him dead the night of March 19 after she had been away from the house for about two hours. White suffered more than 30 stab and cut wounds.

New YD President Says Club Focusing On Governor's Race

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Democratic Party is in the middle of a pivotal election year, according to the newly elected president of the North Carolina Young Democrats, who said the Young Democrats will work to help the party maintain control of state offices.

Lecil Henderson, currently vice president of the state organization, was elected president Saturday at the Young Democrats' state convention in Greenville. He will take office May 1.

After eight years of having a Republican in the White House, Henderson said the club wants to see Democrats elected in order to provide more Democratic role models. "We're very confident of our ideas, our policies and out goals," said Henderson. The party has not changed its philosophy, he said.

"We view the governor's race very much as the senior party views the presidential race," said Henderson. "Much of our thrust will be in electing the governor. 1988 has the potential to be the turning point as far as North Carolina."

The group will play a major role in the election process, he said, and members will work telephones, distribute election signs and help get voters to the polls, said Henderson.

The group also tries to remain "on the cutting edge" of new issues and to teach members how to become candidates, said Henderson. Many successful politicians, including former Gov. Jim Hunt, were once members of the Young Democrats, he said.

"We're going to be strengthening club membership early on in our administration," said Henderson.

The Young Democrats have clubs in about 40 counties and 10 colleges in North Carolina, said Henderson, who first became involved withe the Young Democrats while he was a student at Wake Forest University. He hopes to have clubs in 60 counties by 1989.

"Election years are always exciting years and they bring out more people," said Henderson.

Young Democrat district chairmen work in each of the 11 congressional districts in the state and the organization established regional coordinators last year to serve as a link between the district chairs and the state officers, said Henderson.

The regional co-ordinators provide additional support staff in large districts where Young Democrat clubs are spread thin, said Henderson.

Attention Deficit Could Be Key To Child's Problem

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

If a child is not attentive, is a troublemaker or performs poorly on assigned tasks, he or she is not necessarily a "bad" child, but could be suffering from an attention deficit, said an East Carolina University School of Medicine assistant professor in the pediatrics department.

An attention deficit is created with an imbalance of hormones such as norepinephrine or dopamine, Dr. Sudesh Kataria said in a recent interview. "What causes it (the imbalance), exactly we don't know," she said. But, the children use the hormones very fast, and "it creates confusion in their minds."

Many children who have an attention deficit are hyperactive and therefore are labeled that way, but usually hyperactivity is only a part of the problem children with this disorder experience, Dr. Kataria said.

And there is a small group of children that are not hyperactive but have attention problems, she said. "These children cannot pay attention to the desired tasks and get involved in something else, which gives them problems," she said.

The child with a higher activity level often may fidget with his hands or feet ... and is "always on the go," Dr. Kataria said.

The children usually have a high level of destructability coupled with a deficiency in self-monitoring skills. They make careless errors because of their lack of self control.

Sometimes their behavior is impulsive, and they have a "can't wait" attitude, best demonstrated on the playground when they cannot await their turn, she said. "That's why they become unpopular with their peers."

A lack of memory also is a problem as parents will say, 'He hears but he doesn't listen, and I always have to repeat.'" This also creates academic problems when children cannot remember their lessons, especially math or languages, Dr. Kataria said.

Children with these problems have "good days and bad days," she said. So, often on a bad day, parents or teachers "think the child doesn't want to do it. The performance inconsistency is very confusing."

Jean Averette with Pitt County schools said school officials sometimes make a request to parents to have a child evaluated because of attention problems or hyperactivity problems.

Children who go to the medical school's School Evaluation Clinic, which serves Pitt County and surrounding areas, are given an examination that includes behavior rating scales and a review of the child's medical history, Dr. Kataria said.

Attention deficit is becoming a recognizable problem, and more parents are seeking help, she said. There are about 22 children on the waiting list to be seen at the center.

Once the children have been evaluated, and it is determined that they have an attention deficit problem, they are given therapy that includes a series of steps, she said.

Behavior modification is stressed with younger children through creative activities, while cognitive training works better with older children, Dr. Kataria said. "We train them to monitor their own style of learning and behavior," which is self-rewarding as they improve.

Parent and teachers are explained the recovery process and are encouraged not to have unrealistic expectations such as overnight success.

Classroom seating, smaller assignments and consistency of discipline are encouraged modifications for children in school.

After these steps have been taken and there is no significant improvement, medication is introduced to "set the stage for other treatments to work," Dr. Kataria said.

Ritalin is the most effective medicine used, she said. "It restores the hormonal balance, and helps the child screen outside stimili" that adversely divert their attention.

When a child begins taking medicine, it is given in small doses and is monitored through regular checkups, Dr. Kataria said. When used properly, the medicine does not cause any side effects in the child.

But, "any drug has side effects if not used properly," she said. Very high doses of the medicine without monitoring may cause a decrease in appetite, abdominal pain, sleeplessness, excess crying and twitching of facial muscles.

Once these therapy factors are in place, the total performance of the child should improve, Dr. Kataria said.

Those wanting more information about attention deficits in children may contact the ECU School of Medicine, Department of Pediatrics' Evaluation Clinic.

ROBOTICS — Nick Pantelidis, 12, demonstrates a robot at Stokes Elementery School Friday. Nick and his mother, Dr. Veronica Pantelidis, discussed the role of robots in the future. Dr. Pantelidis teaches computer-assisted instruction at East Carolina University. The visit was made possible by a minigrant from the Pitt County Educational Foundation. After the discussion and demonstration the children got a chance to look at the robots and try thier hand at manipulating them. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis)

Arrests Reported By Local Police

Greenville police said several arrests were made in the area Friday.

Officer M.R. Benton said Glenda Holloway of 1302-B Battle St. was arrested at 8:22 a.m. on a charge of shoplifting in connection with the theft of $6.38 worth of merchandise from the Piggly Wiggly supermarket on Dickinson Avenue.

Detective W.A. Reid said David Edward Cox of Route 8, Box 330-P, Greenville, was arrested at 9:30 a.m. on a charge of obtaining property under false pretenses in connection with a March 4 incident. Reid said that Cox is charged with receiving payment for services he never provided to Credit Associates of 3101 S. Evans St.

Officer D.R. Wyrick said Ronald Jenkins of 1002-B Bancroft Ave. was arrested at 9 a.m. and charged with stealing a camera from the Bancroft Avenue address on March 18.

Officer S.A. Person said Ervin Sherrod Pollard of 101 Barney's Lane was arrested at 12:30 p.m. and charged with resisting resist and delaying, larceny of a vehicle and resisting and obstruction at the corner of West Third and Darden streets.

Officer S.B. Pass said Carlos Enrique Covidia of 2408 E. 10th St. and Joy Christie Newsome of 151 Fleming Hall, East Carolina University, were arrested and charged with credit card theft and credit card fraud in connection with an incident on March 17. Pass said a credit card was stolen from a person at the Employee Credit Union and over $300 worth of merchandise was charged on the card.

Officer H.D. Hines said Reginald Devon Wooten of 1305 Apt. B W. Fourth St. was arrested at 11:15 p.m. in connection with an affray at the Carolina East Center.

White House Correspondent Will Speak At ECU Program

ECU News Bureau

Veteran White House news correspondent Helen Thomas will be featured speaker at two East Carolina University programs next month. She will lecture at the annual ECU Phi Kappa Phi symposium-induction ceremony April 12 and appear on a panel discussion sponsored by the ECU Division of Academic Affairs the following morning.

The April 12 program will begin at 7:30 p.m. in Hendrix Theatre. The April 13 panel discussion is set for 10 a.m. in Auditorium 244, Mendenhall Student Center. Both events are free and open to the public.

HELEN THOMAS

Ms. Thomas is known as the "woman in red" who says "Thank you, Mr. President" following televised press conferences and has written and lectured on the various U.S. presidents during the past three decades. She has covered the White House on a daily basis for United Press International since John F. Kennedy took office in 1961.

A native of Kentucky who was brought up in Detroit, Ms. Thomas was educated at Wayne State University. Her first journalism job was with the now defunct Washington Daily News, as a copy girl.

For 12 years she wrote radio news for UPI. Before taking over the presidential beat, she covered such federal government agencies as the Justice Department, the FBI and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Ms. Thomas has been president of the Woman's National Press Club, and later was the first woman to hold office in the National Press Club after it opened its doors to women members following 90 years as a male-only organization. She became the first woman president of the White House Correspondents Association and the first woman member of the Gridiron Club. She received the Fourth Estate Award from the National Press Club in 1984.

As this year's ECU Phi Kappa Phi/Academic Affairs Symposium speaker, Ms. Thomas joins a list of men and women from from diverse fields, among them Ralph Nader, Alex Haley, Dean Rusk, former Secretary of Commerce Juanita Kreps and Ambassador J. William Middendorf.

Phi Kappa Phi inductees at the April 12 ceremony will include junior and senior students who have achieved the highest levels of scholarship on campus. Presiding at the induction will be Dr. Mary Ann Rose, president of the ECU Phi Kappa Phi ceremony.

Serving as panelists with Ms. Thomas at the Wednesday morning program will be Dr. Carson Bays of the economics faculty; Debbie Owens of the broadcasting faculty and two political science students, sophomore Mary Elizabeth Davis of Virginia Beach, Va., and senior David Hartford Green of Raleigh.

Noriega Loyalists Stage Raid

go without pay. Their payday was Friday, but because of Panama's current cash crisis, they didn't receive money.

Armed troops raided the capital's port before dawn, moving aside several ship containers that had been blocking the entranceway to the docks since March 14, when the port's 300 workers went out on strike because they had not been paid.

A few hours later, the nearby union headquarters was wired shut and scores of workers who had been keeping vigil disappeared. National Port Director General Diomedes Concepcion denied reports that some had been arrested.

"The port had to be opened," Concepcion told reporters, adding "if not, we are aiding the enemy."

Noriega reiterated threats to force banks to hand over an estimated $70 million in their vaults so the government could pay its troops.

But the Panamanian Bankers Association, which groups 90 of the 118 Panamanian and foreign banks operating in this country, rejected the request.

The government's request "does not solve the problem of the fiscal and financial crisis of the nation that has deep political roots," said a statement by the group.

Panama ran short of cash last month after the Reagan administration blocked all Panamanian funds in the United States, including revenues from the Panama Canal.

The Reagan administration recognizes Eric Arturo Delvalle — now in hiding — as Panama's legitimate president. Noriega supporters in the national legislature ousted Delvalle, who had been the civilian president, on Feb. 26 after Delvalle tried to fire Noriega.

Since then, street demonstrations and a general strike have failed to push Noriega out of power.

The strike has shut down more than 90 percent of the nation's industry. Cash and food are in short supply.

Dukakis Gets Panelists' Nod

is a member of the Democratic National Committee. "The South had been put secondary to all of the other caucuses and constituencies in the Democratic party," she said.

"It did show there is no more solid South," said Warnock. "You see the death of the idea that the South is necessarily a conservative region. In fact the strongest group to present its views was the blacks, the minorities."

The early caucuses and primaries in Iowa and New Hampshire focus on very small, Republican states, said Dr. Clayton, while Super Tuesday forced the candidates to concentrate on a large region of the country.

Though Super Tuesday accomplished the goal of directing national political attention toward southern states, Warnock said he doubted there would be a repeat of the 20-state primary. "I suppose we could also see the return of the Edsel. Super Tuesday was like a car with too many options, it had too much. I think the idea of a national primary will be kicked around."

After the New Hampshire primaries candidates had just a week to spread their messages across the South, said Warnock, and there was not enough time. "Something will have to be done about the amount of time between primaries if it's ever going to work."

North Carolina and other states will also have to consider whether they can afford to conduct primaries such as Super Tuesday, said Dr. Clayton. There were no state or local contests on the Super Tuesday ballot, so the state is saddled with the cost of holding an extra primary.

On the Republican side, Super Tuesday gave George Bush an opportunity to take a big lead and effectively end Bob Dole's campaign, said Dr. Clayton.

"Super Tuesday, particularly in North Carolia, caused all kinds of problems for the Republican party ... particularly the Congressional Club," said Warnock. "They really could not keep their horses in line. The team was tugging in all different directions."

The Congressional Club initially endorsed New York Congressman Jack Kemp, but Warnock said others in the club wanted to support Dole or Bush.

"This is the second time in a row the Congressional Club has taken it on the chin," said Scavo, citing the 1986 U.S. Senate race in which Jim Broyhill won the Republican nomination without the club's endorsement. "It's kind of good to see the Congressional Club losing influence when they don't align themselves with Jesse Helms."

Nuke Leak Reported

BUCHANAN, N.Y. (AP) — About 8,400 gallons of slightly radioactive water leaked into the Hudson River from the Indian Point No. 2 nuclear power plant, the plant's operator said Saturday.

The water was discovered missing from a 345,000-gallon storage tank outside the containment structure, said Bea Meltzer, spokeswoman for Consolidated Edison.

"It's really a minuscule amount" that is undetectable, because river water normally contains a small amount of ambient, or background, radiation, said Meltzer.

The discovery was made Saturday morning, but officials were unsure how long the leak had existed.

The radioactivity in the water, he said, was "about one-tenth of 1 percent of what they would be allowed to release to the river if they did it on purpose" in a scheduled discharge.

The leak in a steam line allowed water from a refueling water storage tank to leak into a non-nuclear boiler and condenser system, then into the river, said Con Ed spokesman John McCann. The leak was stopped by closing valves on the line.

Medallion Banquet Set For April 15

The Medallion Banquet, a black tie gala sponsored annually by the East Carolina University Foundation, the ECU Medical School Foundation and the ECU Alumni Association for members of the Chancellor's Society, will this year serve as the official inaugural ball for Chancellor Richard R. Eakin.

The private dinner and dance will be held April 15 in Minges Coliseum. Eakin will be inaugurated that morning in Wright Auditorium as ECU's ninth chief executive officer.

According to James L. Lanier Jr., vice chancellor for institutional advancement, the ball will be attended by Chancellor's Society members and special guests of Chancellor and Mrs. Eakin. More than 500 invitations have been mailed.

The Chancellor's Society is an organization formed in 1981 to recognize ECU's most generous patrons. Members make minimum gifts of $10,000 and, according to Lanier, "serve as advocates" of the university.

Since 1985, members have committed some $7 million for the enrichment of academic programs, faculty development and research, and scholarships for academically gifted students.

Medical Students' 'Match Day' Held

Wednesday was "Match Day" for medical students expecting to graduate and become enrolled in residency programs at teaching hospitals all over the nation.

All 62 students expecting to graduate in May from the East Carolina University School of Medicine were matched with a residency program, according to Dr. Edwin Monroe, executive dean of the school.

Monroe said 65 percent of the matches were in primary health care residency programs, including family medicine, emergency medicine, pediatrics and internal medicine.

He said 26 percent were in family medicine. Monroe said this is more than double the national average, which is 11 percent going into family medicine as a specialty.

Monroe said 24 out of the 62 were matched with North Carolina hospitals, including Pitt County Memorial, North Carolina Memorial, Duke, Baptist in Winston Salem, New Hanover in Wilmington, Charlotte Memorial, and Moses Cone in Greensboro. The Wilmington, Charlotte and Greensboro programs are affiliated with the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill School of Medicine.

Monroe said each of the 62 got either his or her first or second choice of a residency program. Many of those going out of state are entering very highly regarded programs, he said.

District History Day Winners Announced

Approximately 175 eastern North Carolina students participated in National History Day district competitions at East Carolina University recently. The competition was sponsored by the history department.

Students in grades six through 12 offered entries in seven categories, using the theme, "Frontiers in History: People, Places, Ideas." Competition categories were historical papers, individual projects, group projects, individual performances, group performances, individual media and group media.

District winners in the junior and senior divisions advance to the state competition to be held at Wake Forest University next month. State winners will compete in June at the University of Maryland.

Names and award categories of local ECU History Day competition winners include:

Pitt County: Paul Ayers, second place historical papers; Charles Harris, first place individual projects, and Jessica Mega and Mary Gray, first place group projects.

Also, Neosha Hough, first place historical papers; Rolf Sundwall, second place historical papers; Laura Barnes and Lee Nisbet, first place group media; Karla Blue, Karen Williamson and Lauren Wilms, second place group media; Mohad Dar, Mohammed Dar, Paul Huntsberry, Chris Richards and Alex Ferguson, second place group projects.

Also, Jonathan Lee and Bryan Harrell, first place group projects; Carole Stokes and Jessalyn Woods, second place group performance, and Jason Watson, second place individual projects.

19th Century Lifestyle Suits Caswell Native Fine

YANCEYVILLE, N.C. (AP) — But for a few modern conveniences such as light switches and a telephone, a walk through Tim Ross's house is a journey into pre-Civil War North Carolina.

"I think simplicity is the key to life," Ross says. "Every day I'm coming home to a different world."

He lives in a house built and furnished in 19th Century style. A descendant of both Caswell and Alamance county residents, Ross has collected antiques since he was 10 — along with knowledge of his area's past.

"I am kin to just about everybody in this county," he jokes.

Ross said he designed his house and planned its furnishings with an eye toward the 1830s and earlier.

"These furnishing are just about all antebellum and are from Alamance and Caswell counties," Ross told the Burlington Daily Times-News, adding that he obtain many of his treasures from auctions and antique sales.

Three years ago, he dismangled a log dwelling that had belonged to his great-great-great-great-great aunt and uncle: the Brannock-Ross house.

After numbering the logs, he moved it down the road and put it together with the original layout.

About the only differences between the old and new structures is a new floor and cement that replaces the mud which held the earlier house together.

Several months later Ross added a frame structure, which includes mantles and wainscoatings out of the Kerr house, a 19th century home in Caswell County.

On the lawn is a restored schoolhouse, a smokehouse, and a very unusual, triangular-shaped chicken coop, a replica of those used in the 1700s.

In his home, about all the furniture is antique, but Ross acknowledges the sofa and chair in the living room are modern pieces designed to look old-fashioned.

Elsewhere, solid walnut and cherry desk secretaries put together with wooden pegs are filled with receipts and papers from another era. One receipt is from a Caswell native for a child-support payment.

A ledger from Nick's store in Graham tells of transactions of a year in the 19th century. A family Bible dated 1811 lies atop a table, telling of the Jones family's travels from England to Caswell County.

Ross also possesses a corn sheller patented by a Caswell County native in 1807 and a clock made in the 1820s which has wooden gears instead of metal ones.

Ross says his fascination with the past is not motivated by a desire to earn money although he's made some wise purchases which eventually paid off.

He said he and his father did most of the restoration work themselves.

"About the only way you can restore these places is to do a lot of it yourself," Ross said.

He plans eventually to add a log structure to the back of the house to use as a kitchen, since kitchens of the 19th century were not connected with the house.

"I hope to add some more buildings," he said. "Anybody with a local early building who would like to see it restored can get in touch with me."

Continued Record Heat Sends Thousands To Calif. Beaches

By ROBERT JABLON
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of people inundated beaches Saturday as the third day of record heat scorched Southern California, while authorities guarded against gang violence and brush fires.

The noon high of 93 degrees at Lindbergh Field in San Diego broke a mark for the day set in 1923. Inland areas of San Diego County had highs near 100 degrees.

A high of 100 was reported in the desert resort of Palm Springs 100 miles east of Los Angeles, where the high of 98 broke the record for the date set in 1986.

The National Weather Service blamed northeasterly winds caused by a high pressure system over Western states reversing the usual flow of cooling ocean breezes for Southern California. Instead, the hot winds blew out of the desert.

Heat records were also set in Arizona, where the reading of 100 in Phoenix broke the record for the date by seven degrees, and a reading of 99 in Tucson topped the record for the date there by 10 degrees.

California forecasters predicted temperatures would drop to the 70s on Sunday as a front brought cooler marine air.

In Palm Springs, an estimated 50,000 young people on spring break dressed for the weather, wearing "bathing suits, shorts, tanks tops, as little as possible," said police Officer Karen Holtz. "They all seem to hover around the yogurt places and ice cream places. I don't blame them."

An estimated 200,000 people swarmed to Zuma and Santa Monica beaches to splash in 62-to-64-degree water, but surfers had to make do with 2-foot swells.

By early afternoon, there already had been several rescues, including a person who was taken to a hospital for a possibly serious neck or spine injury, he said. Rohrer estimated there would be up to 50 rescues for the day.

"The only thing that's saving us right now is favorable tide conditions," he said. "If the rips (riptides) were pulling a little stronger, we'd probably have well over 100."

On Friday night, three people were hospitalized after more than 20 gang members got into a scuffle at Dockweiler State Beach, near Los Angeles International Airport.

At Zuma Beach in the Malibu area, Los Angeles County sheriff's deputies were called in Friday night to quell a fight involving 300 youths.

The situation was under control Saturday, said Zuma lifeguard Glen DuPont.

"There is a large force of sheriffs (deputies) here, and that is a wonderful deterrent," he said.

Those who opted to stay home and use their air conditioners sent power usage soaring, but not to the record heights reached a day earlier.

Speakes' Book Jabs President

WASHINGTON (AP) — Getting President Reagan ready for a news conference was "like reinventing the wheel," says former White House press spokesman Larry Speakes in a gossipy new book, portions of which were published Saturday.

Some tidbits from the book entitled "Speaking Out" by Speakes and Washington writer Robert Pack, were included in the April 4 edition of U.S. News & World Report.

Despite the difficulties preparing the president for news conferences, Speakes describes him as a super guy, according to the magazine.

But Nancy Reagan is "likely to stab you in the back" when stirred up, while daughter Maureen is a "punch-you-in-the-nose type" who is "to the right of Attila the Hun," the book says.

In a generous sprinkling of criticism, Speakes describes former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger as "a whiny type ... the loosest of cannons, the baddest boy," while Vice President George Bush is called "the perfect 'yes' man" who "tried to avoid taking a portfolio."

Children Still Bothered By Dec. 1987 Dog Attack

WRIGHTSVILLE BEACH, N.C. (AP) — It's been almost four months since two of Lou Ann Gilligan's three children were attacked by a dog, but both she and her children still suffer from the memories of that frightful day.

Mrs. Gilligan has nightmares about dogs attacking her children. In those dreams, someone tries to stab the children. When she tries to get the kids out of the house, she's met at the door by a vicious dog.

"Everywhere I run in the dream there's a dog," said Mrs. Gilligan, whose children were mauled Dec. 4 by a neighbor's Siberian husky. "I think about it every day."

While the fear of it happening again is frightening for her, it's worse for the children — Richard, 4, and Marjorie Ann, 2.

They were attacked after the dog chased their 6-year-old brother, Matthew, to their home. A neighbor ran the dog off, but the dog ran to the back of the house, pawed open a screen door and attacked the little girl.

After Mrs. Gilligan chased the dog outside, it grabbed Richard, who sustained the most severe injuries. His face and head were badly bitten, requiring 150 stitches.

"If I hadn't gotten to him in time, it may have been fatal," Mrs. Gilligan told the Wilmington Morning Star.

"All this could have been avoided," she said. "Most dog attacks could be avoided if the owners were educated about choosing dogs and giving them proper obedience training."

The dog's owner, former Wrightsville Beach Alderman Ned Dowd, was charged with allowing a dog to roam free. He pleaded no contest to the charge in February, and was fined $50 and court cost. The dog was killed.

Mrs. Gilligan attended a conference about vicious dogs at the New Hanover County Library earlier this week. An authority on the subject, Randall Lockwood of the U.S. Humane Society in Washington, said the effects of a dog attack could last for years.

Marjorie Ann, who suffered puncture wounds to her head, cries when she hears a dog bark — even when she's inside the house.

Richard will not go outside until his parents assure him no dogs are outside the house. Mrs. Gilligan takes him to a child psychologist once a week to help him get over his fear.

"His teachers say he doesn't get along with the other children as well since the incident," Mrs. Gilligan said. "He's very insecure now."

Lockwood said humans are mostly to blame for their dogs attacking people. Some dogs, which are friendly breeds, are trained to attack. Other dogs are vicious by breed, he said.

A 2-year-old Columbus County boy was mauled March 8 by three dogs, two of them pit bulls, at his grandparents' house. The dogs tore away his left ear, which was found in the stomach of one of the pit bulls, and reattached by a surgeon.

Reading about that attack brought back bad memories, Mrs. Gilligan said.

Owners should consider the dogs' breed and temperament. A dog's aggressiveness should be evaluated to determine if he will attack people. Dogs also should be walked around the neighborhood to "properly socialize" them with humans, she learned at the conference.

The dog which attacked the Gilligan children was kept in a fence next door to their home. If the dog had been introduced to people other than its owners, he probably would not have attacked the children, Mrs. Gilligan said.

"We live in a world of children," she said. "If people are going to have dogs, they need to teach them not to attack."

Insect-Eating Pitcher Plant Said To Be In Short Supply

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Scientists say the insect-eating sweet mountain pitcher plant, found only in certain mountainous areas of North Carolina and South Carolina, is in danger of disappearing in the wild.

Probably fewer than 1,000 of the plants, formally known as "sarracenia rubra jonesii," grow in 10 sites scattered in bogs and along streams in the two states.

Insects are attracted by the plant's sweet nectar. The bug flies or crawls inside of one of the plant's hollow, tube-shaped leaves and slides down its polished walls.

It falls into a thicket of stiff, downward-growing hairs that block escape and struggles to get free, but eventually falls to the bottom of the tube, where it drowns in a tiny pool of liquid and is digested by plant enzymes.

The surviving plants are threatened by collectors, who have traded it as a novelty item for more a century. They're also threatened by people who are converting mountain bogs into land for livestock grazing farming and tourism-related development.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has proposed that the plant be designated an endangered species.

Such a designation is not granted casually. Only six species in South Carolina and nine in North Carolina have been termed "threatened" or "endangered" since the Endangered Species Act was passed in 1973, according to Nora Murdock, a federal wildlife biologist who is spearheading the effort to protect the plant.

A federal listing would not guarantee preservation of all the pitcher plant's habitat, but it would impose limits on selling the plant or using federal funds on lands that harbor the plant, Ms. Murdock said.

Wildlife officials are also talking to private property owners, who hold eight of the 10 sites where the plant grows.

Gun Identified

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A Fort Bragg Army sergeant and his wife have identified a pistol used to kill a female soldier as one that was stolen from their home, and another witness says Army Spec. 4 Ronald Adrin Gray confessed to stealing the gun.

Gray, 22, an 82nd Airborne division cook, is facing a general court-martial on charges on raping, robbing and murdering Laura Lee Vickery Clay, 18, an Army private, on Dec. 15, 1986, and civilian cab driver Kimberly Anne Ruggles, 24, on Jan. 6, 1987.

Gray is also charged with raping and attempting to kill another female soldier, and with stealing a video cassette recorder and the alleged murder weapon from an Army sergeant.

If found guilty of the crimes, Gray could be sentenced to death if the court panel unanimaously voted for it.

Profits For S&Ls

RALEIGH (AP) — Despite the heaviest savings institution losses nationally since the Great Depression, those in North Carolina posted their fifth straight year of high profits, officials said.

"The profitability of North Carolina's savings institutions greatly exceeded that of commercial banks nationwide, which declined significantly last year," said Thad Woodard, president of the North Carolina League of Savings Institutions.

Federal authorities said Thursday the nation's 3,147 savings institutions lost $3.2 billion in the fourth quarter of 1987, pushing red ink for the year to $6.8 billion, the worst loss since the agency began keeping track in 1934. Savings and loan losses were heavily concentrated in states like Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana, which are dependent on the ailing oil and gas industry.

Big Phone Bill

SPARTANBURG, S.C. (AP) — A long-distance telephone company could have a hard time collecting more than $28,351 billed to a Spartanburg man.

Ten North Carolina inmates face criminal charges after an investigation of Roy Lowe's bill, authorities say.

Lowe, a Moore resident, didn't have to pay the bill because other people were using his access code, said Tom Dyar, director of loss prevention for Southern Net, a long-distance telephone company.

An inmate had gained some billing numbers, including Lowe's, and sold them to other inmates for money or cigarettes, Dyar said.

National Attention

ROSMAN, N.C. (AP) — A town ordinance requiring a driver's license to operate everything from bicycles to scooters was intended to bring attention to bicycling problems in this town of 515 people. And if calls from Minnesota and Boston are any indication, it's been a success.

So many local, state and national media have picked up on the Transylvania County story that Mayor Will Cathey said his wife "has gone nuts" trying to keep up with his phone messages.

Among media Town Clerk Shirley Gillespie remembers talking to are papers in Boston and Sevierville, Tenn., and a Rocky Mount radio station. The town also got exposure on "Paul Harvey News and Comment," a nationally syndicated news break.

Aldermen passed the ordinance unanimously Feb. 15.

Investigators Say Fire Was Accident

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A fire that destroyed Chem-way Corp.'s westside facility was an accident and resulted from employees' improper handling of a chemical spill, Charlotte investigators say.

"It's being looked at strictly as an accident," said Jim Hollingsworth, chief of Charlotte's Hazardous Materials Team.

Charges probably will not be filed, he added. "The only thing they would be in violation of would be solid waste disposal regulations. You have to have physical evidence to back that up. You won't find that in that dumpster now."

Chief fire Investigator David Lowery said Friday that employees at the chemical distribution and storage company accidentally punctured a drum of sodium hydrosulfite while loading it onto a tractor-trailer truck about 6:30 p.m. last Monday. About 2 pounds of the highly flammable powder spilled from the 250-pound plastic drum.

Lowery said the employees swept up the spilled chemical and placed it in a dumpster. They repaired the punctured drum with tape and placed it back on the truck, Lowery said.

Sodium hydrosulfite, which is used in bleaching textiles, spontaneously ignites when exposed to humidity.

Fire investigators say the chemical smoldered for more than three hours in the dumpster and the tractor-trailer. At 10:52 p.m., an unidentified woman reported a "big fire" at Chem-Way. The three-alarm fire gutted the building and caused an estimated $2.5 million in damages.

Chem-Way spokesman David Pippin said the company will conduct an internal investigation to determine which employees were involved.

Lowery said the drum may have been punctured by a fork lift. Employees told investigators they had been taught how properly to dispose of the chemical.

Lowery said the four employees involved in the spill and clean-up should have placed the chemical in a noncombustible container and isolated it. They also should have hosed down the spill area with "massive amounts" of water, Lowery said.

Bone Marrow Recipient Back Home, Cancer-Free

By JIM KLAHN
Associated Press Writer

SEATTLE (AP) — Seven-year-old Brooke Ward, cancer-free but dogged by publicity, had just one word to say to reporters who wondered where the new medical celebrity would like to be.

"Home," the little girl from Raleigh, N.C., said Friday, wrinkling her nose from behind a baby-blue face mask.

Brooke, who has received national attention as the first bone marrow transplant recipient to use a computerized donor registry, got her wish Saturday as she flew home with her mother, Margurite Ward.

"We're anxious to go," Mrs. Ward said of her and her daughter's desire to rejoin family members after nearly four months in Seattle. However, she also gave profuse thanks to the medical personnel and others who helped in the ordeal.

Mrs. Ward said there had been little hope for her daughter, who had suffered with acute lymphocytic leukemia much of her life, when she arrived at Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center in Seattle on Dec. 2, 1987.

The transplant, with marrow from a Milwaukee woman traced by the computer, was accomplished Dec. 15. Christmas week was especially difficult, as Brooke's body tried to rid itself of the new, foreign marrow.

Finally, Brooke was able to be moved out of the hospital, as an outpatient, on Jan. 29.

"We're very excited about it," Mrs. Ward said of going home as she held an occasionally fussy Brooke. "Back at Christmas time we didn't even think we'd probably reach this day.

"We're just mighty thankful that Brooke's what she is today."

Dr. William Bensinger, of the hospital's physician staff, said there was no evidence of leukemia in Brooke's body, and that the transplant was considered a success.

"I think the outlook for her is favorable," he said.

Dr. Pat Beatty, director of the unrelated bone marrow registry at Fred Hutchinson, said of Brooke, "She's been a model patient."

Brooke, though, obviously would rather have been elsewhere. Dressed in a blue and white sweat suit, she refused to acknowledge reporters' questions, no matter how wide they smiled, and managed only a small wave at the coaxing of her mother.

Still, after the news conference and with the cameras turned off, she wandered away from her mother to converse quietly with a doctor, slipping her blue face mask off once to get some comfort from a thumb.

Beatty said three similar transplants had been performed at Fred Hutchinson since Brooke's operation, and five more were scheduled, including two next week.

Also, he said, the list of donors for bone marrow transplants has more than doubled in Seattle since the first transplant was done.

Both doctors said they expected the Ward case to help increase numbers of donors for similar cancer cases, and Mrs. Ward said she hoped her child's story would help people learn of the value of becoming a donor. Also, she noted, there is not a great deal of pain in becoming a donor.

The Wards had been told the chance of finding a donor outside the family was only one in 15,000. However, the new National Bone Barrow Donor Registry, based in Minneapolis, located Diane Walters of Milwaukee, whose marrow matched Brooke's.

Fund-raising to help pay Brooke's bills has accumulated about $118,000 at the Children's National Transplant Association.

The operation normally costs about $100,000.

Dismissed

RALEIGH (AP) — The Grievance Resolution Board, appointed earlier this year to consider complaints by inmates in state prisons, has fired three examiners.

The Rev. George W. Arseniu and Leon Owens had been examiners since 1974, when the Inmate Grievance Commission was created. It was replaced by the Grievance Resolution Board this year. The third examiner, Donnie Langdon, has held his job since 1985.

The three examiners' last day on the job will be March 31, after which they will receive a week of severance pay.

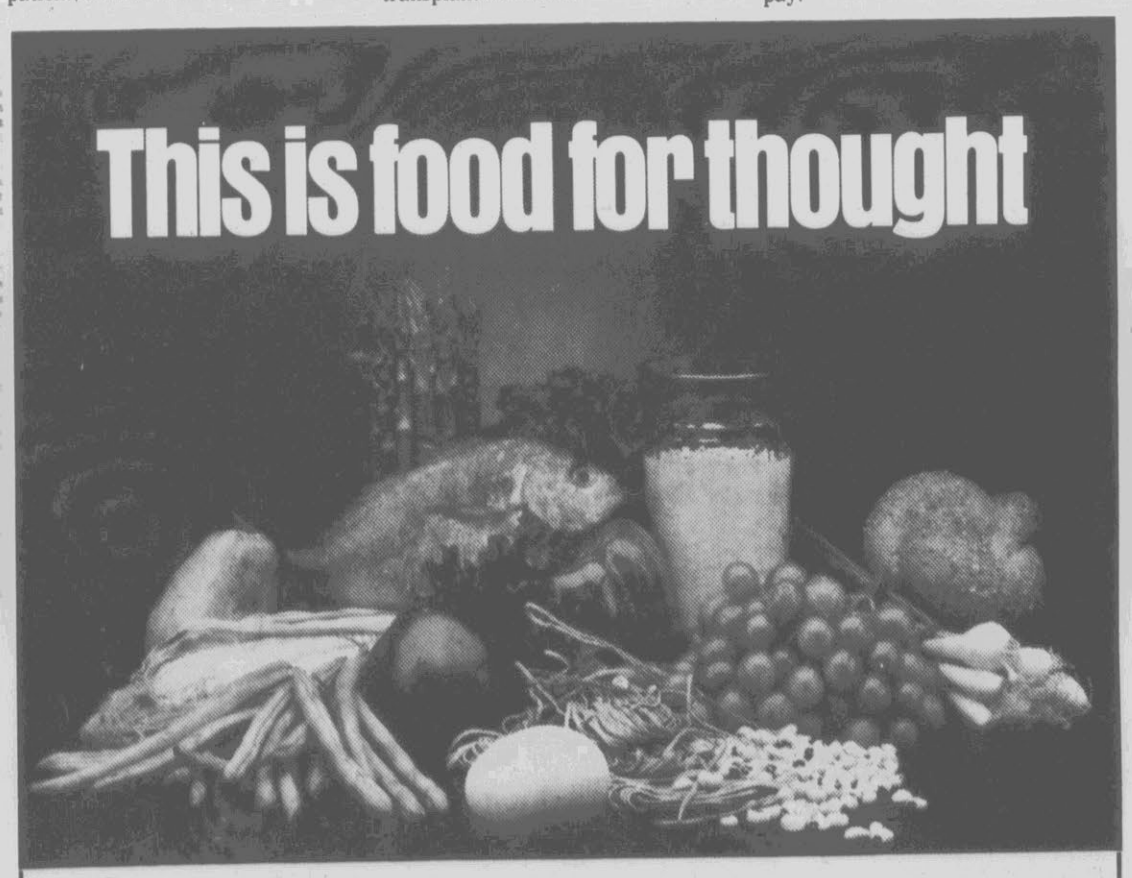
This is food for thought



Although most of us realize the benefits of proper nutrition, many of us disregard sound meal planning. For a diabetic, it is essential to know what, when and how much to eat. A diabetic must know what food for thought is all about.

A diabetic is more vulnerable to health complications, so proper nutrition becomes essential for an active lifestyle. Good nutrition, combined with medication, exercise and blood sugar monitoring, is vital to diabetic self-care. The Diabetes Education Program, administered by Pitt Internal & Renal Medicine Associates, Ltd. is a comprehensive program that teaches self management of diabetes. The importance of proper meal planning, coordinated with appropriate medication, blood sugar monitoring, and exercise is the focus of the Diabetes Education Program. The program staff, working closely with diabetics and their personal physician, takes a positive approach to managing everyday life with diabetes.

Michigan Leaves Imprint On Democratic Race

By EVANS WITT
AP Political Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Michael Dukakis jumped to a slim early lead over Jesse Jackson in early returns from the Michigan Democratic caucus on Saturday, with Richard Gephardt not far behind and looking for an upset to keep his campaign alive.

With returns from about 6 percent of the voting sites across the state, Dukakis had the lead with 38 percent to 30 percent for Jackson.

Gephardt had 25 percent after his trademark issue — trade — held center stage in this state dominated by the struggling automobile industry. Sens. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee and Paul Simon of Illionis trailed.

"Michigan, your time has come," Jackson told a cheering crowd Saturday morning at Northern High School in Pontiac. "We've won from Alaska to Alabama, Mississippi to Georgia. ... We've spent the least amount ofmoney: we got the most amount of votes. We can win."

"The enthusiasm of the last few days has really been remarkable," Gephardt said as he left Michigan. "On to Wisconsin."

By mid-morning, Jackson was the only candidate left in the state, as the others headed for Wisconsin, the next maior battleground with its April 5 primary. All the Democrats were gathering in Milwaukee for a party dinner Saturday night.

Gore and Simon campaigned in Michigan, but made little organizational effort here. Each spent more time in the upcoming primary states where they saw better chances for a breakthrough.

Early reports indicated turnout varied widely across the state, with Dukakis aides saying voting was heavy in Detroit but less impressive elsewhere. Michigan state Democratic Party chief Rick Wiener said, "The vote looks heavier than 1984, perhaps substantially heavier.

Michigan not only offers the winner a victory in a major industrial state, but also a shot at the 138 pledged delegates at stake. Michigan sends 150 delegates to the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta, with 12 of those slots reserved for unpledged party leaders and elected officials.

Campaign aides talked of the possibility of a split result, since Jackson's strength was said to be concentrated in two congressional districts in and around Detroit. Polls said Dukakis' strength was more evenly distributed across the state, raising the possibility that Jackson could win the popular vote, and Dukakis the delegate battle.

Before the caucuses, Dukakis held a slim lead nationally in the AP delegate count — holding 548.55 to Jackson' 520.55. Gore had 362.8 delegates, Gephardt 154, Simon 171.5 and uncommitted 354.6.

There was little hope for a big turnout in the state with more than 9 million residents. Officials talked about turnout similar to 1984, when about 134,000 Democrats voted.

"I'd like to say because of the coverage and the interest there will be more," said Rep. Dennis Hertel, one of the chairmen of Dukakis' campaign in the state. "It's the core group of Democrats" who will vote.

The verdict of Michigan Democrats could trim their party's candidate list.

Gephardt showed some late strength and talked of a "Michigan miracle" that could save his campaign. But he was still trailing in the polls and aides said the Missouri congressman would file for re-election to his House seat next week if he fared poorly in Michigan.

Gephardt's hopes for a win were hurt by the refusal of national labor union leaders to fall in behind his candidacy. He particularly felt the failure to win an endorsement from the United Auto Workers, big supporters of Gephardt's trade policies and the biggest union in the state.

Dukakis built an impressive organization in this industrial state, where he hoped a win would give him a lion's share of the delegates as well as a popular vote victory. The organization, a heavy dose of television advertising and backing from Detroit Mayor Coleman Young helped give the Massachusetts governor the lead in the polls.

"You just tell them to go with the guy with the eyebrows and we'll have a very good Saturday," Dukakis told the Polish-American Century Club in Hamtramck, Mich., refering to his distinctive, heavy eyebrows.

Jackson whipped up fervor across the state with large enthusiastic rallies and a bit of television advertising.

"The talking is over. It's time to work," Jackson said in Pontiac. "Everybody who even looks 17 or older, they are eligible to vote."

Michigan residents who are 17 but who will turn 18 by the general election may vote in the caucus.

The caucus was actually a limited primary. Voters merely had to show up at the poling places, provide Michigan identification, declare their Democratic allegiance and then vote.

Dukakis Strategy Targets 3 States

By RICHARD L. VERNACI
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Michael Dukakis has laid out plans to establish himself as the Democratic presidential front-runner by building up a lead of 250-350 delegates over his nearest challenger, targeting delegate-rich New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

In addition, the Dukakis organization hopes to reap delegates from what it sees as two rival campaigns about to collapse, as well as pick up support from "super delegates" and others now counted as uncommitted.

"I think that there's a magic number in this process in terms of what kind of distance is going to be adequate to separate a front-runner from second- or third-place candidates in this process," said Tad Devine, who handles delegate selection for the Massachusetts governor.

"That magic number is probably somewhere between 253, the unpledged number of delegates from Congress, and 362, the number of votes on the Democratic National Committee."

The strategy won't guarantee the nomination for Dukakis, but a strong delegate lead would encourage party leaders and uncommitted delegates to rally round the leader to avoid the spectacle of a deadlocked convention in July.

Dukakis, with 548 delegates, currently is locked in a three-way race for the delegate lead in the Democratic presidential race, holding a narrow edge over Jesse Jackson, at 520, and a wider margin over Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr., at 363.

Devine said he believed it was a "real possibility" that Dukakis could pick up the 1,500-plus delegates he needs to clinch the Democratic nomination as early as May.

But an aide to Gore, echoing the statements of other campaigns, said it was all but impossible for anyone to have the nomination won before the season's June 7 finale, the California and New Jersey primaries.

"I don't think it's in the cards for any candidate to have anywhere near 2,082 delegates by June 7," said Rick Hutcheson, who follows delegate selection for the Gore campaign.

In private, Dukakis aides are willing to discuss specifics, outlining how the campaign plans to do in each of the remaining states. However, neither the Jackson or Gore campaign want to talk about their prospects in such detail. Jackson's campaign declined a request for an interview.

"We haven't designated any state as a make-or-break state for us and we're not going to," Hutcheson said. "Instead, we're focused on a steady accumulation of delegates both by participating in the processes and by wooing, as we have done successfully to date, a good many of the super delegates."

The Dukakis campaign hopes to deliver a one-two punch by winning the New York primary on April 19 and the Pennsylvania primary on April 26. A total of 359 delegates are at stake in those two Northeast states.

"There are real opportunities for one candidacy, one candidate in this process, to move up from the pack," Devine said. "The break point in this process to put together a nomination is between April 19 and April 26."

In addition, 253 members of the House and Senate are to be chosen as super delegates in Democratic caucuses April 19-20 on Capitol Hill. Other super delegates, who hold seats automatically at the national convention because of their positions in the party or government, include members of the Democratic National Committee, Democratic governors and former party leaders.

"That week is almost a 'mini Super Tuesday,'" Devine said. "So I see that as a time when a candidate must put some distance between himself and his competitors."

The only place where a competitor could make up a lot of ground in one spot is New Jersey, with 109 delegates at stake, but Dukakis is strong there, Devine said. California, with 314 delegates at stake, is the largest single primary for the Democrats but the rules are structured that big delegate gains there by any candidate over another are unlikely, he said.

A total of more than 300 national convention delegates now committed to Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt and Illinois Sen. Paul Simon would be up for grabs if those two candidates, whose campaigns are fading, drop out of the race.

"I'm not predicting that either Simon or Gephardt is going to get out of this race in the immediate future," Devine said. "I'm just saying that I think that the pressures to sustain a candidacy, without putting on the board delegates, are going to be substantial and maybe insurmountable."

Rep. James Howard Dies

By BOB McHUGH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. James Howard of New Jersey, the influential chairman of the House Public Works and Transportation Committee, died Friday, a day after suffering a heart attack while playing golf. He was 60.

"It was very peaceful and he experienced no pain," his daughter, Marie Howard, said in a statement.

Howard, a Democratic member of the House for 22 years, collapsed Thursday on a suburban Maryland golf course. Doctors at Montgomery General Hospital in Olney, Md., labored for nearly two hours to get the lawmaker breathing on his own. He was then rushed by helicopter to the cardiac unit at Washington Hospital Center.

He never regained consciousness. A statement issued by his office said Howard died of complications from the heart attack, his third.

Funeral arrangements were incomplete Friday afternoon.

Reaction to Howard's death was quick.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said, "Jim always said he was inspired by President Kennedy to enter public service, and was one of the most effective and loyal supporters that John and Robert Kennedy and I ever had.

House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, said of Howard: "He worked hard, played hard, loved his family, his state and his country with a burning intensity.

Reps. Glenn Anderson, D-Calif., and John Paul Hammerschmidt, R-Ark., the two ranking members on the Public Works panel, issued a joint statement saying, "No person ever has done more to build this nation's backbone, its highway and public transit network, its dams and sewage treatment plants, its airports and its buildings."

Transportation Secretary James Burnley said in a statement, "He was a knowledgable and effective lawmaker who was, above all, a dedicated public servant."

Howard was known among colleagues as one of the House's toughest horse traders. He was an aggressive and agile lawmaker who wielded his considerable clout in an old-fashioned, behind-the-scenes way.

He was instrumental in passage of the Clean Air and Clean Water acts, and foughgt to end ocean pollution and to protect his largely coastal New Jersey district from the ravages of erosion.

When stricken on Thursday, Howard was in the company of one of the literally hundreds of lobbyists seeking to curry favor with his influential committee.

The Spring Lake Heights, N.J., Democrat was an avid golfer. He had a fondness for cigarettes and coffee.

Howard excelled at eyeball-to-eyeball negotiations with other members, using his clout to make deals, or to push his position.

Despite his power, Howard has sometimes held a tentative grip on his seat. During the Reagan landslide of 1980, he won re-election by a margin of only about 2,000 votes over his GOP challenger.

The committee which he headed since 1981 was one of Congress' least glamorous, but most powerful. The panel has jurisdiction over multibillion dollar highway and water projects, as well as the airline and trucking industries.

Howard was criticized for traveling and being entertained on the expense accounts of groups seeking his influence. He was also one of the largest recipients in the House of business-related campaign contributions.

REP. JAMES HOWARD

Reactions Mixed To Businessman Becoming Chief

By CHET BROKAW
Associated Press Writer

MISSION, S.D. (AP) — A businessman's elevation to special chief of the Sioux Indians might help his crusade to regain land that was taken from the tribes after gold was discovered, but some Sioux believe he is "impersonating an Indian."

"We seek to injure no one in South Dakota. We only seek the return of lands that are rightfully owned by the Lakota (Sioux) people," Phillip J. Stevens said at a news conference Saturday before the ceremony to make him a special chief at the Rosebud Sioux Indian Reservation.

"They (the Black Hills) are sacred to the Sioux people. They are our altar to God. ... It is like stealing their church," he said of the rugged area of western South Dakota.

The federal government signed a treaty in 1868 saying 7.3 million acres of the region belonged to the Sioux, but then abrogated the treaty and took the land after gold was found in the Black Hills.

Stevens supports a bill that would give the Sioux over 1 million acres plus money, but says more money is necessary to improve living conditions on reservations where unemployment reaches 85 percent.

However, not all Sioux believe Stevens has earned the right to become a special chief, and a historian said it's a unprecedented title. Some argued Stevens was not an enrolled member of any Sioux tribe and has not substantiated his claim to be a great-grandson of Sioux warrior Standing Bear.

Opponents also said he is splitting the Indian community and could damage efforts to regain the land.

On Friday, the Black Hills Sioux Nation Treaty Council filed for a temporary restraining order in federal court in Rapid City to make Stevens prove he is of Indian descent or stop making the claim. The council advises the eight Sioux tribal councils on treaty issues.

The complaint said Stevens "is impersonating an Indian, claiming Indian heritage that is questionable ...."

No ruling was expected until sometime this week at the earliest.

Stevens said at Saturday's news conference that he had given Sioux leaders an affidavit signed by his father saying Standing Bear was his great-grandfather.

He told reporters that he and other Sioux chiefs will ask Interior Secretary Donald P. Hodel to meet with them and set up a public hearing on the issue.

Stevens acknowledged that only one of the seven tribal councils that support the return of the Black Hills has endorsed his proposal and the plan to make him a special chief, but he said a petition signed by Sioux people in South Dakota indicates he is supported by a majority.

"I think that the will of the people has been neglected by the people elected to do the will of the people," Stevens said.

Stevens is an engineer who played a role in development of the Minuteman III before he founded Ultrasystems Inc. in Irvine, Calif., in 1969. He recently sold the $160 million-a-year engineering company to devote his time to the Black Hills effort.

Stevens, 58, supports legislation introduced by Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., that would return 1.3 million acres of federal land in the Black Hills to the Sioux.

The Black Hills region was deeded to the Sioux in the Fort Laramie Treaty of 1868. But after gold was discovered by an expedition led by Lt. Col. George Armstrong Custer, prospectors swarmed in and the treaty was abrogated in 1877. The Indians were forced onto reservations in less desirable parts of the state.

The Supreme Court in 1980 upheld a settlement for the land, which with interest has grown to nearly $200 million. Most of the Sioux tribal governments have refused the money, saying they want the land.

Bradley's bill would return about 1.3 million of the land covered by the original treaty. It applies only to federal land in the area of timbering, mining and tourism, and does not include Mount Rushmore.

Stevens argues the Sioux also should get up to $3.1 billion for their loss of revenue since the land was taken.

Bradley's bill, introduced two years ago and still not out of committee, is opposed by South Dakota's congressional delegation.

Many backers of Bradley's bill say Stevens' plan to seek additional money would wreck the bill's chances in Congress.

Albert White Hat, a history and culture teacher at Sinte Gleske College on the Rosebud Sioux Reservation, said traditional Sioux are interested in the Black Hills as a sacred area in which to pray and not in the money.

White Hat said many Sioux didn't understand what it would mean to make Stevens a special chief. "I've never heard the term," he said, adding that the Sioux traditionally select a chief or leader specifically to lead them in war, represent family groups in councils or perform other leadership roles.

"The people organizing for him ... they just have no regard for the spirituality of the thing," White Hat said.

Age Of World War II 'Boy Hero' Viewed As Both Blessing, Curse

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — An underage World War II veteran dubbed "the Boy Hero," who was decorated for shooting down Japanese aircraft and helping shipmates in two battles, says his age was both a blessing and a curse.

At age 12, Calvin Graham of River Oaks, a Fort Worth suburb, was one of this country's youngest war heroes.

For his exploits, which will be the subject of a two-hour television movie Sunday night, Graham, now 58, was awarded a Bronze Star and a Purple Heart.

But his youthful looks and a bureaucratic error landed him in the brig and cost him his medals. It took him over 30 years to win back his decorations, and the former gunner is still seeking disability benefits for his war injuries.

Graham enlisted in the Navy in July 1942 using forged papers that claimed he was 17. He was sent to the USS South Dakota for a Pacific tour.

Assigned to a 40mm gun crew on the ship's fantail, Graham helped shoot down about 300 enemy planes launched from five Japanese aircraft carriers in the battle of Santa Cruz.

Graham's gunnery officer asked him his age when he congratulated the crew.

"I told him I would be 13 in April," Graham said, according to a story in the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "He was shocked and I knew I had made a mistake. But I was proud of what we had done and I felt like I was 6-foot tall. I didn't care at the time if people knew how old I was. I felt like I had done what I set out to do."

Later, Graham tried to tell the officer he had been kidding, but the boy hero was called before the ship's captain, who told him he would have to go back home.

"He told me it wasn't anything to be ashamed of, he had already sent three others back that same day. But I stuck to my story and claimed I was 17," Graham said.

"He said, 'Well, you may have wished you took me up on this in the next 24 hours,' " Graham remembered. "We were headed for another battle."

At Guadalcanal, an enemy ship knocked out Graham's gun with a 14-inch shell, and he was assigned to help the wounded. The ship later took 47 hits on its superstructure.

"Everyone who was in there that night was either killed or wounded," said Graham. "I went up there and there were guys' hands and arms and legs floating around in the water. The bloody water was waist-high."

Exploding shrapnel hit Graham in the mouth but he continued to help medical officers attend to injured crewmen.

Graham received the Bronze Star for his actions. When his ship returned to Brooklyn Naval Yard in New York, the captain gave him leave to get a notarized letter from his mother permitting him to stay in the Navy despite his age.

But when Graham returned with his letter, he was told instead by an executive officer to turn himself in to naval authorities in Houston. He was sent to the brig at the Naval Air Station in Corpus Christi for over a month and treated like a deserter because authorities thought he was really 17 and trying to lie about his age. He also had his medals taken away..

Then the Navy admitted its mistake and released Graham after his 13th birthday, giving him a "cancellation enlistment" with honorable conditions. But the Navy did not return his medals.

Shultz Plans Another Middle East Trip

By HENRY GOTTLIEB
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz, trying to invigorate a Mideast peace plan, met Saturday with two members of a group affiliated with the Palestine Liberation Organization and will travel to Israel and four Arab countries next week to push the initiative.

Shultz will arrive in Jerusalem April 3 for talks with Israeli leaders and move on to Jordan, Syria, Saudi Arabia and Egypt before returning to Washington on April 8, State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman said.

"We're intensely involved in this process and we're going to continue to push forward to do everything we can," Redman said.

Asked if there had been any progress in getting other nations' approval of the plan since Shultz returned from his last trip, March 5, Redman asserted, "no one has said no; our proposal is still on the table, people are actively and seriously considering it."

Shultz's return trip "will give us a chance to continue to do what it is we've been trying to do, which is to see if we can be helpful in getting this this Middle East peace process underway," Redman said.

He said Shultz decided to make the trip Friday night after meeting his chief Mideast envoy, Philip Habib, who recently toured the area.

The U.S. initiative calls for interim negotiations beginning perhaps by May 1 and eventually more intensive talks designed to return the West Bank and Gaza to Palestinian control and to assure security for Israel.

While none of the countries in the region has rejected the plan outright, they have all expressed dissatisfaction with some of the proposals.

One of the stickiest points has been arranging for representatives of the Palestinians to take part in the talks. The Palestinians want to be represented by the PLO, but Israel will not meet that group and there also is a U.S. law against dealing with the PLO, which the United States has declared a terrorist organization.

The United States has sought to find representatives who would be acceptable to both sides and include them in a Jordanian delegation to any talks.

PLO chairman Yasser Arafat told a news conference in Baghdad, Iraq, meanwhile, that he rejected pleas by several Arab states to accept the Shultz plan because it does not recognize his organization as spokesman for the Palestinians.

"America still says 'no' to the PLO, 'no' to the Palestinians' right to self-determination, 'no' to the Palestinian state, 'no' to the representation of the PLO at this conference," Arafat said. "We say 'no' to this American position."

In what appeared to be a bow toward the Palestinians, Shultz invited two American members of the Palestine National Council — the PLO's self-described legislative arm — to an hour-long meeting at the State Department Saturday.

Israeli officials denounced the talks as a violation of a U.S. commitment not to meet with the PLO. Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir had protested the meeting to U.S. Ambassador Thomas Pickering, negotiator on Mideast problems.

The guests, Edward Said, a Columbia University professor and Ibrahim Abu Lughud of Northwestern University said they complained to Shultz about Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip, where 111 Arabs have been killed in recent demonstrations.

"One of the major aspects of our interest in seeing Secretary Shultz was to relate to him directly as Palestinians our extraordinary unhappiness, our anger at the repressive measures taken by Israel," Said told reporters.

"We also made clear to the secretary that all Palestinians regard the United States as directly involved in the repression since it is clear to everyone that the United States supports Israel and supplies it militarily and economically to an unprecedented degree," he said.

He and Lughud also reiterated the Arab view that the PLO, headed by Arafat, is the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people.

Both Redman and the two PNC members were repeatedly asked by reporters after the meeting if they considered Shultz's invitation a deviation from the U.S. policy of not dealing with the PLO.

"These gentlemen did not characterize themselves as members of the PLO," Redman said. He said the meeting did not represent a change in U.S. policy and he stressed the fact that the visitors are U.S. citizens.

"This was not a negotiation," he said. "This was a very useful exchange of views as far as the secretary was concerned. The secretary of course explained our proposal and what it is we're trying to accomplish in working with the parties in trying to advance the peace process."

The visitors agreed that they were not negotiators or designated representatives of the PLO.

At the same time, they likened the Palestine National Council to a national congress and said it plays an important role in PLO decision-making. They also said they had been in contact with Arafat about the meeting.

"This is probably one of the rare times that the secretary of state in practice is dealing with Palestinians in exile and therefore the message that ought to be understood by this is that there is a Palestinian people, irrespective of location that must be involved in the peace-making process," Lughud said.

Before heading to Israel next Sunday, Shultz will spend the weekend in Rome, meeting Italian officials and taking part in Easter celebrations.

Carter Endorses Shultz's Meeting With Palestinians

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Carter applauded Secretary of State George Shultz's meeting Saturday with two American members of the Palestine Liberation Organization's legislative body and said, "He should have met with them long ago."

Israeli officials angrily charged that Shultz was violating a longstanding U.S. commitment not to "recognize or negotiate" with the PLO as long as it refuses to acknowledge Israel's right to exist. But Carter said Shultz "is not violating anything."

Shultz conferred for one hour with the two Palestinian-Americans at the State Department to hear their views on Shultz's latest Middle East peace plan. The two professors, Edward Said of Columbia University and Ibrahim Abu Lughud of Northwestern University, are members of the Palestine National Council, the PLO's parliament-in-exile.

State Department spokesman Charles Redman stressed that Said and Lughud are U.S. citizens who did not characterize themselves as PLO members. He said the meeting was "not a negotiation" but "a very useful exchange of views" that represented no change in U.S. policy toward the PLO.

Carter, interviewed at a luncheon of business and government officials at Gannett Co. Inc. headquarters in suburban Arlington, Va., said he knew Said and Lughud personally. "They are very constructive in nature," Carter said. "They're American citizens. They're not radicals."

"We don't have any obligation not to meet with Palestinian leaders," the former president said. "The obligation we have is not to recognize the PLO officially and not to negotiate with the PLO. And Secretary Shultz is not violating any commitment."

Carter said Shultz "should have met with them long ago" as part of the Reagan administration's efforts to arrange Arab-Israeli peace talks. He said he hoped that Shultz's "belated effort" will succeed.

Carter endorsed Shultz's proposal for a preliminary international conference on the Middle East convened by the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council — the United States, the Soviet Union, China, Britain and France.

Under Shultz's plan, a joint Jordanian and Palestinian delegation would attend the conference with Israel and other Mideast parties.

Carter said such a conference is favored by the leaders of Egypt, Syria, Jordan, "the overwhelming number of Palestinians and half the Israelis."

If such a conference were held, Carter predicted, the Arab and Israeli leaders would be "very moderate and constructive in their presentation" because "it would be their one chance to have the world listening to their best arguments."

The former president, who has conferred extensively with Middle East leaders since he left the White House in 1981, also endorsed Shultz's call for direct Arab-Israeli peace talks after the international conference, with the aim of finding a way to grant self-rule to the 1.5 Palestinian Arabs living in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Carter said deadlocks in bilateral talks between Israel and its Arab neighbors could be referred to a wider conference for discussion of "new ideas."

Reagan Stand Blasted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter criticized President Reagan on Saturday for proclaiming the innocence of former national security aides Oliver L. North and John M. Poindexter, indicted on criminal charges in the Iran-Contra affair.

Carter told a meeting of government and business leaders that Reagan showed "a callous attitude toward the principles of law enforcement" when he said Friday that North and Poindexter would be found innocent of the charges and that he still thinks North is a hero.

"I think they violate basic principles of law enforcement in this country for the chief law enforcement officer — that is President Reagan, in case you've forgotten — to make the statement that indicted persons are guilty in his opinion ... or not guilty," Carter said at a meeting held at Gannett Co. Inc. headquarters in suburban Arlington, Va.

North and Poindexter, along with arms dealers Richard V. Secord and Albert A. Hakim, pleaded innocent Thursday to charges of consipiracy, theft and fraud in the Iran-Contra case.

Reagan has said previously he did not think any laws were broken in the Iran-Contra affair.

Chambers Awaits Sentencing

By RONALD POWERS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A life of privilege and promise came to an end Saturday as Robert Chambers left his comfortable Manhattan home for the city jail to await sentencing for killing a teen-age girl during a Central Park tryst.

Shortly after 10 a.m. under gray and rainy skies, the 21-year-old Chambers and his lawyer rushed past a horde of reporters outside his Upper East Side apartment and sped away in the back of a black limousine.

Chambers was processed at Manhattan Criminal Court and then delivered early Saturday afternoon to the hospital at Rikers Island where he will be held in protective custody until his formal sentencing April 15.

Defendants in cases that have received wide publicity are routinely segregated from the city jail's general population and held in the hospital, said Ruby Ryles, spokeswoman for the city Correction Department.

After sentencing, Chambers will be transferred to the state prison system.

Chambers reluctantly pleaded guilty Friday to first-degree manslaughter, bringing a surprise end to his murder case. Throughout 10 weeks of trial, he had insisted he killed 18-year-old Jennifer Dawn Levin accidentally during a rough sexual encounter in Central Park early on the morning of Aug. 26, 1986.

The case, with its elements of fast-lane lives of easy sex, drugs and drink, offered a glimpse into the lifestyle of some of the city's most privileged youth.

Chambers, a former altar boy and preparatory school graduate, and later a college dropout and drug addict, had been charged with second-degree murder in Miss Levin's death.

But he pleaded guilty to the manslaughter charge Friday evening and admitted he had intended to hurt Miss Levin the night he killed her.

The plea, proposed by Chambers' lawyer Jack Litman, was part of a deal that included burglary charges against Chambers and calls for a sentence of five to 15 years in prison.

The bargain was justified by the district attorney's office because the jury appeared headed for a deadlock after nine days of deliberations.

"I'm satisfied," said Ognibene, who works for an international banking concern. "To me it proves the justice system works."

Trial Of Governor Exposes Double Life

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The two lives of Evan Mecham — embattled governor and wheeler-dealer car salesman — have emerged in the second act of his impeachment trial as witnesses sketch a complex saga of money, politics and family ties.

Mecham, fighting to save his political life, is in his second round of testimony in the trial as the Senate considers the second of three charges. His son, Dennis, has stepped forward in a supporting role to help Mecham explain why an $80,000 loan from a protocol fund to the family car dealership wasn't illegal.

The governor, admitting he was "not enthused" about having his personal finances spread out in public, said he was told he could use the protocol fund for practically anything he wanted.

"I never heard the words discussed, 'public funds,'" said the first-term Republican who is the first U.S. governor to face an impeachment trial in six decades.

The Senate is examining a charge that Mecham misused state funds by borrowing the $80,000 originally raised by his inaugural ball.

When state law barred his inaugural committee from using the funds to pay off campaign debts, a "protocol fund" was set up instead to promote Arizona through events and gifts to visiting dignitaries.

The defense contends the fund always remained private money to be used at the governor's discretion. The prosecution says it was clearly transformed into a public fund by an agreement between Mecham's inaugural chairman, William Long, and the Maricopa County attorney.

The governor, whose testimony is to continue Monday, said Long told him exactly what to do with the money.

"Mr. Long said, 'We have gone through all of this rigamarole and you can spend it for any damn thing that you want,' those were his words, 'except you can't spend it for politics or personal living expenses,'" Mecham testified.

What he used it for, the prosecution contends, was to save his auto dealership from financial disaster. They presented evidence of overdue loans and bounced checks at the car company.

Mecham and his son insist that Mecham Pontiac was on sure financial footing and that Mecham's only motive for borrowing the $80,000 was to increase the fund by paying higher interest than it was getting in a bank.

To evaluate the opposing views, senators were given an education in the car dealership business. At the end of a week in which they examined loan agreements and check receipts and heard about car "floor planning" and cars "sold out of trust," the senators who sit as judges and jury appeared perplexed.

"Mr. Mecham, I'm absolutely baffled and confused!" state Sen. Tony West told Dennis Mecham at the end of a long discourse on deeds of trust, interest rates and loan agreements. He questioned the extensive "paper trail" of checks linking Mecham Pontiac to assorted members of the Mecham family and an organization called Constituent Communications.

Asked what that group was, Dennis Mecham, 37, who received a $15,000 loan from it, said he had no idea except "I know my uncle Wayne controls the checkbook."

U.S. Photographer Denies Drug Charges

By SUSAN LINNEE
Associated Press Writer

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — An American photographer stood trial Saturday on drug smuggling charges and testified that his only crime was being stupid enough to let a cocaine ring dupe him into doing its dirty work.

The trial of 23-year-old Conan Owen, whose case has drawn the attention of Attorney General Edwin Meese III, began and ended Saturday. The three-judge panel that took testimony for 2½ hours wasn't expected to issue a verdict for about a week.

The free-lance photographer from Annandale, Va., is charged with smuggling 4.13 pounds of cocaine into Spain in a suitcase on March 13, 1987.

James Kibble, a special agent for the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, testified that Owen was tricked by a drug trafficking ring into carrying the cocaine. Owen, he said, is "innocent — or stupid — but innocent."

The prosecution is asking for 10 years in prison on contraband charges and on charges Owen violated public health laws that prohibit the transport or sale of dangerous drugs.

Owen, a 1986 graduate of Syracuse University and a former summer intern in Vice President George Bush's office, has spent the past year in Barcelona's 85-year-old Model Prison without possibility of bail.

He told the court Saturday that he carried a suitcase to Barcelona from Santiago, Chile, for George Barahona, an Equadorean-born naturalized American who was living near Washington, D.C.

Owen said Barahona represented himself as one of the owners of the Sorosa Travel Agency near Washington, D.C. and offered him $1,000 to take travel brochure pictures in Spain. Owen said Barahona gave him a suitcase to take with him, which he believed to contain the brochures and film.

The suitcase contained $200,000 in cocaine.

Owen told the court he had always obeyed the law and acknowledged he had been "stupid — but that is not a crime."

Judge Jose Presencia Rubio, who heads a three-member panel hearing the case, refused to admit as evidence testimony about a polygraph test Owen took.

Owen's lawyer, Ana Campa, said the test, administered by a DEA agent, indicates Owen was telling the truth when he said he knew nothing about the drug.

On Feb. 5, Barahona pleaded guilty to a charge of conspiracy to smuggle drugs in U.S. District Court in Alexandria, Va.

He received a two-year suspended sentence after providing information that led to the indictment of three Spaniards and three Bolivians in a conspiracy to smuggle illegal drugs. They remain at large.

When Meese came to Spain to sign an annex to a 1970 extradition treaty Feb. 9, he handed over copies of Barahona's testimony to Spanish judicial authorities.

Prosecutor Teresa Calvo called only two witnesses — the paramilitary Civil Guard on duty at El Prat Airport who discovered the cocaine and the chemist who analyzed the drug as being 84 percent pure cocaine.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Justin Williams of Alexandria, Va., testified for the defense that statements obtained from Barahona following the plea-bargain arrangement indicated Owen had unwittingly taken the cocaine-laden suitcase to Spain.

"He (Barahona) specifically told us that Conan Owen had no knowledge that there was cocaine in the suitcase he carried into Barcelona airport March 13," Williams said.

Kibble, also testifying for the defense, said he became interested in the Owen case because Owen was from the Washington, D.C. area and the DEA was investigating a cocaine-smuggling ring that operated out of northern Virginia.

"I have found that there is a group of people involved in sending drugs from South America to Spain using unsuspecting people as carriers," Kibble testified.

"The DEA was interested in the details Conan Owen had to tell for the conspiracy case we were working on," he said.

His parents Ernest and Raquel Owen of Annandale, Va., sat directly behind him. His 25-year-old brother Evan was also present.

According to the U.S. Embassy in Madrid, as of last month there were 25 U.S. citizens in jail in Spain. Six are serving prison terms following conviction on drug-related charges, and another eight, not including Owen, are awaiting trial.

There are no jury trials in Spain, and courts generally take about a week to issue verdicts.

Iraq Admits Land Loss, Fires Missiles Into Tehran

By MONA ZIADE
Associated Press Writer

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraq on Saturday admitted losing ground to Iran in a major battle in its strategic northeast, and it reopened a deadly duel of the cities by firing two missiles into Tehran.

Iraq's Revolutionary Command Council, assembled by President Saddam Hussein, acknowledged Baghdad had lost land to an Iranian offensive, which Iran claims has resulted in 11,500 Iraqi casualties. The battle region is about 80 miles east of the Kirkuk oilfields, which produce about 1.5 million barrels of oil a day — more than half Iran's daily output.

Despite the losses, the Iraqi command said it was resolved to fight "with all available weapons" until Tehran agrees to settle the 7½-year-old war.

Tehran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, also monitored in Nicosia, said one Iraqi projectile hit an orphanage and the other roared into a residential neighborhood. It reported seven civilians killed.

In the Persian Gulf, U.S. warships were escorting reflagged Kuwaiti tankers in the 18th convoy of the year, part of an operation to protect the Kuwaiti vessels from Iranian attacks.

Iraq has fired 112 long-range missiles into Tehran and Qom, seat of Iran's religious hierarchy, in a missile duel that has killed hundreds of civilians. Tehran says it fired 43 such projectiles into Baghdad and dozens into other Iraqi cities since Feb.29.

In the offensive, the Iranian agency said Iranian fighter-bombers attacked Iraqi ground troops Saturday while Iranian Revolutionary Guards thrusted into the Kurdistan mountains.

Iranian communiques said Revolutionary Guards advancing into northeastern Iraq have also seized control of the eastern shore of Lake Darbandikhan. A hydroelectric dam on the lake provides power for most of the region.

The Iranians claim they have killed or wounded 11,500 Iraqis, captured 4,500 and destroyed 200 tanks and armored vehicles since they launched the offensive March 16. They say their troops have moved 10 miles into Iraq.

Meanwhile, other Iranian warplanes heavily bombarded Iraqi troops around the strategic southern port of Basra, Iran said.

It was the third straight day the Iranians have hit that area. An estimated 250,000 Revolutionary Guards and volunteers have massed east of Basra in past weeks for a long-expected offensive.

Baghdad Radio reported three Iranian warplanes, all U.S.-built F-5s, were shot down as they tried to bomb targets in the embattled Kurdistan province on Saturday. The Iranian news agency reported a Soviet-built Iraqi Sukhoi SU-22 was downed Saturday.

Iraq also hinted it may have used chemicals weapons that Iran claims killed about 5,000 Iraqi Kurds during the offensive. Many Kurds have long fought the Baghdad government for autonomy, and Iran claimed it had "liberated" their communities before the attack.

"Iraq has the determination and power to use all available weapons to crush the invaders," its command council announced Saturday in a veiled response to international condemnation of any use of poison gases.

The United Nations has said it will send a team of experts to investigate the reported Iraqi use of the weapons, outlawed under a 1925 Geneva agreement.

Iran agreed late Friday to send an envoy to the United Nations for indirect peace talks with the Iraqis. But a top Iranian official said he was pessimistic about the outcome.

In the gulf, the guided missile frigates Reuben James and Samuel B. Roberts escorted the 290,085-ton supertanker Middletown and the 46,723-ton gas carrier Gas Princess into the gulf. The 35,663-ton Courier, a Navy tanker, was sailing with them.

The trip north to Kuwait usually takes about two or three days.

The convoys began last July after Kuwait re-registered 11 of its tankers in the United States. Iran accuses Kuwait of aiding Iraq in the war.

Freedom Appeal

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A U.N. relief agency Saturday appealed to the kidnappers of British journalist Alec Collett to free him on the third anniversary of his abduction.

Collett, a New York-based journalist, was kidnapped in Beirut's Moslem sector on March 25, 1985 while on assignment for the United Nations Relief and Works Agency.

A group calling itself the Revolutionary Organization of Socialist Moslems claimed responsibility. The group is believed to be linked to the Fatah-Revolutionary Council, a radical Palestinian faction led by Abu Nidal.

"We call on those who unjustifiably kidnapped the innocent Alec Collett to let him return to his family immediately," said Per Olof Hallqvist of Sweden, director of UNRWA in Lebanon.

"Our recent experience of the kidnapping of William Jorgensen and Jan Stening has reminded us about the inhuman horrors and anxieties which the families of the kidnap victims have to go through," Hallqvist said in the English-language statement.

Stening, 44, a Swede, and Jorgensen, 58, a Norwegian, were kidnapped by Palestinians near the southern port city of Sidon on Feb. 5. Both worked for UNRWA. They were released March 1 after UNRWA, which takes care of Palestinian refugees, threatened to cut its services in Lebanon.

War, Hunger Has Become A Sad Way Of Life For Angola Citizens

EDITOR'S NOTE — The southwest African nation of Angola has known only war since independence from Portugal in 1975. A Marxist government is in place in Luanda, the capital, backed by the Soviet Union and Cuba. In the countryside is a U.S.-backed guerrilla force called UNITA. In between are people often suffering the bullets, mines and bombs of war. An Associated Press correspondent had a rare look at the war recently during a tour of an Angolan war zone.

By PATRICK REYNA
Associated Press Writer

CUEMBA, Angola (AP) — Land mines, people with legs blown off, orphans, abandoned farm fields, hunger, the thunder of artillery in the distance, the clatter of helicopter gunships overhead. All this is part of daily life for the people of Bie, a highland province in central Angola shattered by a dozen years of guerrilla war.

For a group of foreign reporters visiting this former farming town and the provincial capital of Kuito saw clear evidence of the heavy fighting between government forces and rebel guerrillas.

Cuemba, set on a rise in undulating grassy countryside, is ringed by trenches and machine-gun emplacements visible from the air, the least hazardous way to reach the town.

Approaching Cuemba from Kuito in a Casa CN-235 troop transport, a short-takeoff and landing aircraft, the visitors accompanied by government guides saw roads and railways empty of all traffic.

The fading outlines of abandoned farmlands farther out from Cuemba were also visible from the air, contrasting with orderly rows of lush growth, mainly corn, seen outside Kuito, 87 miles to the west, where the fighting of recent months has not been so intense.

It is much the same in other parts of Angola where the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola (UNITA), supported by the United States and South Africa, is fighting a Soviet-Cuban-backed Marxist government in Luanda, the capital.

An estimated 40,000 Cuban troops are in Angola, along with more than 1,000 Soviet military advisers. The United States sends arms to the rebels and South Africa lends air and ground-troop support.

UNITA claims to have full control of about a third of Angola — in the southeast and east, where about 2 million of Angola's 8.1 million people live. In the area it calls "liberated Angola," UNITA has established a government and runs schools and hospitals. The guerrillas say they operate in another third of the country while the government maintains full control of the rest.

Flying is perhaps the only safe way to travel in many parts of the country. Thousands of villagers have lost one or both legs to UNITA land mines, the government says. Hundreds of others have been killed, leaving children orphaned and making physical disability a common condition.

The International Committee of the Red Cross, which operates several physical rehabilitation centers in the region, last year estimated 15,000 Angolan army soldiers and 15,000 civilians have lost limbs in land mine explosions.

On the airport road in Kuito, the visitors saw three women who had lost legs moving along on crutches or with canes. In the city there were more.

There were children too, in tattered, filthy clothes — some too small, some too large, clearly the only clothing they owned.

In Cuemba, where UNITA has been fighting for control of the region since Jan. 25, children and older villagers show signs of malnutrition.

Bullet holes snake across the walls of many houses. The tracks of the strategic Benguela railroad, which links landlocked southern African countries to the Atlantic Ocean, are rusty and caked with thick, dried mud. It was obvious no trains have been through for a long time.

Hairdressers, cafes, clothing and photography stores, printing presses and transport companies lie abandoned. Their windows are broken and paint from before Angola gained independence from Portugal in 1975 is peeling from the frames. The municipal swimming pools in Cuemba and Kuito are long out of use.

Government forces killed 180 UNITA guerrillas in a recent three-day battle around Cuemba, the Defense Ministry says. The rebels had not shelled the airport's packed-earth runway or taken control of the town as they had claimed.

Government forces clearly were in control on this day.

The first foreign reporters to visit the region since UNITA launched a major offensive to seize Cuemba and Munhango, 40 miles to the east, were met by the fit and well-equipped Angolan army unit stationed in the town.

The commander, Maj. Jose Walter Freitas Gomes, displayed weapons, including anti-tank missiles, mines and mortars that he said were made in the United States and captured from the rebels.

No markings, however, could be seen on the weapons to indicate where they were made.

At the end of their 50-minute visit to the town, the reporters were seen off by a small crowd, most of them children, and there was a momentary disturbance.

A drum sounded somewhere in the distance and the children suddenly streaked off in fear, mistakenly believing the noise was artillery fire. Their lives are full of those sounds.

Leaving Cuemba, the Casa CN-235 lifted into the air long before reaching the end of the runway, climbing almost vertically in a spiral, to gain altitude fast and to get away from any UNITA snipers or artillery.

For the same reason, landing had been a reverse of this maneuver, dropping 21,000 feet to Cuemba's airport in four minutes. The Angolans call this corkscrew drop "the spiral of death."

In October, the International Red Cross suspended operations in Bie after its sole cargo plane in Angola, a Hercules C-130, crashed after takeoff from Kuito Airport following what appeared to be an engine fire.

Four people aboard the plane were killed, along with a woman and child on the ground. The Red Cross began operating in the area again in late February, flying in food and medicine.

The Red Cross resumed the services after rebel leaders at UNITA's Jamba bush headquarters in southern Angola said they would permit relief operations.

Angola's minister of state for inspection and control, Kundi Payama, said in Kuito that UNITA has supporters and guerrillas among the population of Bie. He noted that Jonas Savimbi, UNITA's leader, was born in the province.

"There are people working their family plots in this area who put down their hoes at night, dig up their hidden guns and become UNITA raiders, planting mines and laying ambushes," Payama said.

"These things happen if you can't feed the people and they can't get decent housing, or find a job or work most of the fields.

"We've got lots of food at the (Atlantic) port of Lobito, but getting it here is the problem," he said. Lobito is the starting point of the Benguela railroad but rebel attacks have made it impossible for trains to travel as far as Cuemba.

"Every time we try to bring a food convoy here by road, it gets attacked and burned," Payama added. He said the people understood, however, that the government was trying to get food through.

HORRORS OF DAILY LIFE — Mothers and their children rest in a field outside Cuemba, Angola, last week where UNITA, the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, supported by the United States and South Africa, is fighting a Soviet-Cuban-backed Marxist government. Land mines, people with legs blown off, orphans abandoned in farm fields, the thunder of artillery in the distance and helicopter gunships overhead are all part of daily life in central Angola. Thousands March For Women's Rights

ROME (AP) — Tens of thousands of people marched through central Rome on Saturday to call for more job opportunities for women and tougher laws against sexual abuse.

Organizers estimated that 100,000 people took part in the afternoon demonstration, in which marchers slowly made their way across the city's historic center.

The marchers, including large numbers of men as well as women, came from all parts of Italy by car, train and special buses. They carried banners, chanted slogans and blew whistles.

The demonstration was organized by the country's three main labor federations. Their slogan was "A job for everyone. A different kind of work. A society without violence."

They are seeking more jobs and better conditions for women, including flexible schedules for working mothers.

The women are also pushing for new laws against sexual violence.

Sign Ordinance Inadequate For 264 Corridor

What fits one foot often doesn't fit the other, and the county's proposed sign ordinance is an example.

While the ordinance provides reasonable regulations for the county's roadways, it does not adequately protect the important U.S. 264 Farmville to Greenville corridor. Neither would the proposal safeguard future freeway construction such as the northwest and southwest Greenville U.S. 264 bypass.

The Pitt County Commissioners should request revisions to the ordinance treating U.S. 264 more firmly than other roadways. The proposed ordinance effectively regulates billboards for now. But by allowing billboards to be located near structures that have frontage and access, the ordinance leaves the door open to inappropriate development at the two intersections along the Farmville to Greenville freeway.

U.S. 264 is Greenville's transportation link with Raleigh and Interstate 95; it is a connector to North Carolina's larger metropolitan areas. Its integrity is vital to the community's successful economic growth. The effectiveness of the roadway as an artery is significant to industrial recruitment. Many industries won't even consider locating in a community without a quality four-lane, uninterrupted link with other areas.

Clutter along this thoroughfare will impair the highway's performance as a transportation link. Weak, ineffectual regulations — such as the proposed sign ordinance — encourage this damage. If signs are going to be controlled, the measures adopted must be effective, not minimal.

The proposed ordinance is acceptable for other roadways in the county. But the commissioners will make a mistake if they do not take stronger action regulating billboards along the crucial U.S. 264 corridor. Once inappropriate development and the accompanying clutter are in place, it is highly unlikely that any amount of regulation can remove it.

Stronger regulations for signs along U.S. 264 is preventive medicine for the most valuable transportation artery in Pitt County. If that roadways falls victim to disarray, it would dismiss the years of fighting and political maneuvering it took to win funding and construction for a four-lane U.S. 264.

Pitt County's leaders should adopt a sign ordinance for U.S. 264 that does the job.

Just Saying 'Bubba' Won't Suffice

Sunday Morning Notes

Out of the mishmash of political profiling and thick-as-a-brick answers to wooden-headed questions, an issue of substance has emerged on the state gubernatorial campaign trail. The issue is rednecks, and that's a topic to which eastern North Carolina can relate.

Already, leaders have proposed answers.

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, campaigning in Greenville for the governor's office, gave the state a long-awaited definition of redneck. A "hardworking eastern North Carolina farmer" is what a redneck is, he said. Redneck — it's not a cuss word. It's a compliment.

Thank, you, Mr. Lieutenant Governor, for pinning down a condition that has heretofore remained quite elusive. It's astounding that such a simple description can cover a topic so broad and pervasive. In five words, Jordan covered a thousand miles.

Without any reference to white socks, pickups, dogs or fried egg sandwiches, the candidate set the record straight. He dotted the "i" and crossed the "t" in succinct. Redneckdom has moved beyond the nebulous and stereotypical "Bubba" image into the realm of astute articulation.

Of course Jordan borrowed a little phraseology from the distinguished editor, noted Southern author and adviser of presidents, Jonathan Daniels. But the lieutenant governor graciously credited Daniels with inventing both the word and the definition.

Whether Jordan's description is fresh is beside the point. By injecting it into the political scene, he's pumped new life into "redneck" and given the state a contemporary vision. Now, when someone whips out the term redneck, the image of a dusty-faced, sweat-browed farmer leaning on his tractor materializes.

And when candidates campaigning for office in North Carolina say they need the redneck vote, why everyone will know that means they want the agrarian support.

Jordan will likely be asked to expand on his definition. He'll probably be pressed to be more specific, and he should respond forthrightly to an issue of this magnitude. What type of soft drink does a redneck drink? Are jeans or coveralls the definitive redneck attire? And just what color socks do rednecks wear?

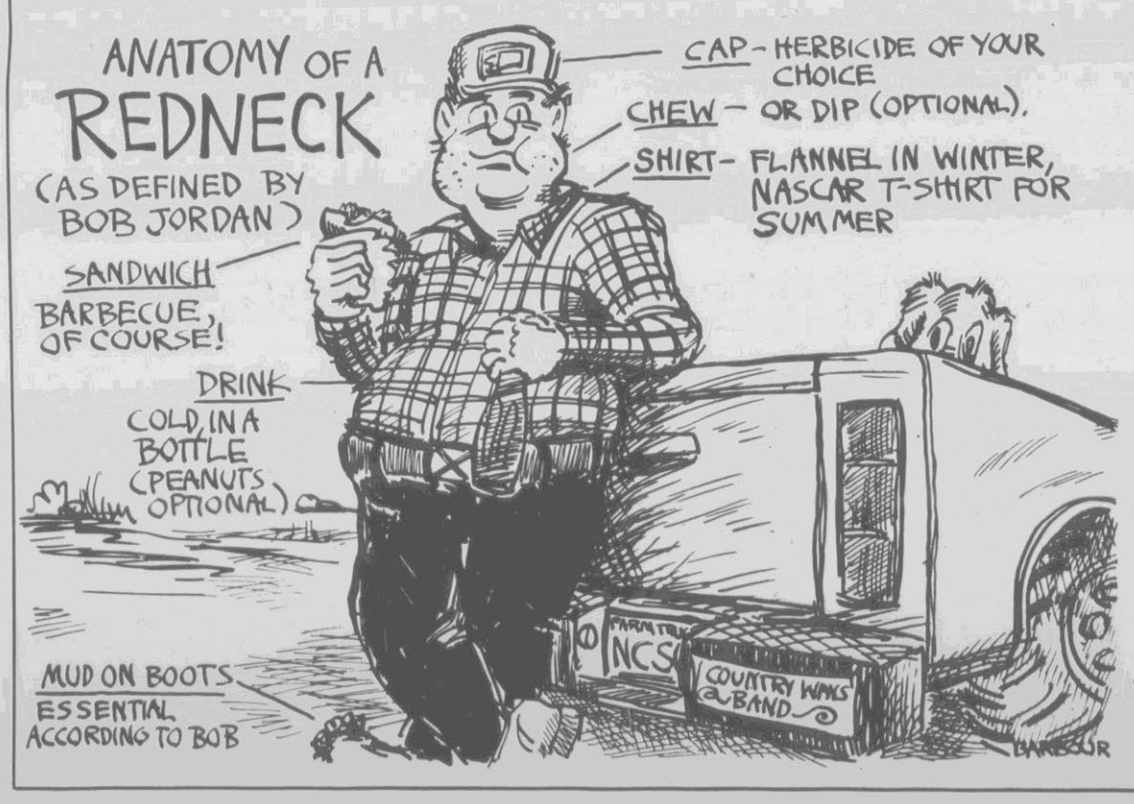
It may not be pretty, it may not be great, but the state has an issue for '88.

There's just one hangup. Saying a redneck is a hardworking eastern North Carolina farmer is one thing, but who's going to tell a hardworking eastern North Carolina farmer he's a redneck?

Let's get Bubba to do it.



No Weapons To Fuel Violence

The world watched in revulsion as two British soldiers were dragged from a car by a mob from a funeral in Belfast. The two were taken away, stripped and killed.

The Irish Republican Army claimed responsibility for the killing of the soldiers — that statement in the face of statements by Catholic church officials deploring the senseless slayings.

The brutal killing of the two soldiers is but another act in the endless bloodshed that goes on in Northern Ireland. An act of violence occurs and the result is retaliation between the Catholics and the Protestants. As long as such senseless reasoning grips Northern Ireland, there are not enough men in the British army to fully restore peace to this troubled area.

Northern Ireland, Lebanon, Iran-Iraq, Afghanistan, South Africa ... they are all areas where rule of the gun and explosives have taken over from civil law and peaceful resolution of differences. As tragic as any is Northern Ireland, where neighbors have conflicts which stretch back for centuries and animosities which can't be suppressed.

There will be more slayings and more bombings in a conflict which is seemingly endless. In full scale wars, one side eventually is whipped and submits to the will of the victor. Unless Northern Ireland is totally destroyed by one group or the other, the conflict seems destined to go on. That is a sad future for an otherwise civilized people.

It is a situation in which the United States can do little. One thing the nation can do, however, is make certain that weapons, explosives and money to purchase these implements of destruction do not reach any violent elements in North Ireland from America. The United States should not allow such senseless carnage to be fueled from our shores.

The Appeal of Dullness

Haynes Johnson

"It has been said of Michael Dukakis that he is dull-a charge with which I am not unfamiliar-but governance is not an amusement park."

— Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., endorsing Dukakis Wednesday

"I've had enough charisma and glamour to last me a lifetime. ... I'm trying to decide between Dukakis and Gore. Looks like a brokered convention."

— My southern aunt, in a letter that arrived the same day as Bradley's statement.

WASHINGTON — They're on to something, and their remarks help explain the confounding political situation.

In the last presidential election of the '80s, the qualities of colorlessness appear to be triumphing. Dull is in. Charisma and charm are out.

The plodders in both parties, Vice President George Bush and Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, are the overwhelming choices to become the competing presidential nominees.

That may not be as strange as it seems, despite explanations commonly offered. These fall into three broad categories and, in my view, are all wrong.

First, it is said, this is just a bad year. The crop is poor — stunted, pale, unappetizing. Jesse L. Jackson aside, about which more later, a more lackluster, emotionless group of political turkeys can hardly be imagined.

But that is not so. On the Republican side, Sen. Robert J. Dole of Kansas and Pat Robertson are strong figures who have campaigned with emotion and even passion. Both, too, had that great quality so prized by political press wizards. They had "the momentum." They were on a roll.

Yet Democrats have moved increasingly toward the cautious, low-keyed Dukakis, Duke the Dull.

Nor will they pick Jackson, the most emotional and charismatic candidate. So far, he has succeeded because he commands a near-solid bloc of black voters while Dukakis, Gephardt, Gore and Illinois Sen. Paul Simon have divided the remaining majority votes. When the field narrows to two, Jackson will not prevail — and not solely because of race. He won't win because there are too many questions about his credentials for the presidency.

'It's true that, in the television age, where couch potatoes are king, politics has become one of the least engaging spectator sports. It ranks below football, probably above wrestling and somewhere on a level with "Love Connection"'

Yet Republicans uniformly rejected them in favor of the bland Bush.

Among Democrats, Rep. Richard A. Gephardt of Missouri and Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee can stir emotion on the campaign trail. Not long ago, Gephardt was being hailed as the real comer, the one to beat, the probable nominee. He possessed, it was said knowingly, passionate populist appeal. He could ignite the sparks. He also had the other great quality so valued by analysts. He had "the message."

A second explanation for emergence of the least stirring candidates, Bush and Dukakis, involves political tactics and strategy. The losers blew it. They failed to capitalize on "the momentum." They didn't get "the bounce." They didn't get out "the message." Bunk.

The third involves the cynicism of this increasingly cynical age and the presumed disposition of the ever-critical news media to knock down the front-runner. There's something to this but not much. There's something, too, about the attitudes of the television generation come to political maturity.

It's true that, in the television age, where couch potatoes are king, politics has become one of the least engaging spectator sports. It ranks below football, probably above wrestling and somewhere on a level with "Love Connection" and dial-for-fortune game shows. See Vanna turn those letters, fans.

It's true, too, that we, the people, generally sit on the sidelines, leisurely flicking the dial and fleetingly focusing on campaign scenes. More often than not, they're instantly identifiable as phony. So we tune in, and quickly turn off, except, of course, for the periodic diversion of political scandal involving sex or money.

There are more reasons for the apparent triumph of colorlessness this year.

As the comments of Sen. Bradley and my aunt suggest, the aftermath of Kennedy charisma and Reagan charm has left voters wary about the appeal of personality. They also know that the nation faces serious problems that can't be solved by slick personal campaign styles, "message" sloganeering and political pandering. They seem cautious, seeking security, and want the next president to have proven competence and the ability to manage complex affairs.

The front-runners perhaps are unexciting but, lacking other alternatives, the voters might be making the wisest available choices.

Commentary

Noriega's Departure Won't Repair U.S. Latin Stance

Roger Morris

Washington is once more absorbed in the diplomacy of discreet exits. Two officials of the State Department are said to have flown secretly into Panama City last week, their mission to arrange the departure of Gen. Manuel A. Noriega, Panama's corrupt and drug-running strongman who has clung to power despite a U.S. criminal indictment, economic sanctions and mounting chaos in the small Central American nation.

But then the delicate negotiations reportedly hit a snag. Fresh from surviving an abortive military coup, the general was apparently demanding not only an "honorable" abdication with all felony charges dropped, but also control over the selection of his successor and other promotions in the Panamanian military, as well as continued tenure for his figurehead president, Manuel Solis Palma. The U.S. diplomats and Noriega's opponents in Panama were stymied. Those prerogatives of government would have to stay where Noriega himself found them when he seized power with Pentagon and CIA blessings a few years ago — with the new dictator or dictators and, of course, with the patrons in Washington.

It is all a sad case of deja vu. One more awkward client of the United States has outlived his usefulness and is bound for opulent exile on the model of Cuba's Batista, the Philippines' Marcos, Haiti's Duvaliers and so many others. And when he goes, whether with bloodshed or quiet assurances, there will be sighs of relief in the United States, along with assumptions that another crisis has passed and that another foreign-policy wrong has been righted.

As if the pervasive web of drugs and gun-running corruption that is encircling Noriega in Panama will not remain intact when he has gone — woven tightly through the bloated military establishment, the banks and the business community, the government bureaucracy, the police and the powerful underworld. As if the neat surgical removal of one overreaching general will heal the root injustices, inequalities and instability in Panama any more than it has elsewhere in the region. As if the purge of this defiant, grinning little man and his collection of odd-shaped military hats will cleanse us of the people and policies in the U.S. government who secretly collaborated with Noriega for so long in a grotesque mockery of our battle against drugs and crime at home and abroad — people and policies who have for so long ignored and abided the underlying human tragedy in Latin America.

This diplomacy of discreet exits stems, of course, from a well-established tradition in U.S. foreign policy, especially in Latin America. It is called the quick fix.

Looking south on a swelling wave of violent change, on societies riven by privilege and want, we have responded almost by reflex with a congenial new regime of right-wing generals in Chile; new, more efficient U.S.-trained police interrogators in Brazil, Uruguay, Colombia and Guatemala; always a few more weapons here, a little more money there to check the tide.

"How the hell are they coming?" Richard M. Nixon would ask his military aide about the plans for a Bay of Pigs invasion, the then-vice president being anxious to dispose of Fidel Castro before the 1960 presidential campaign. Even as Noriega was balking in his barracks last weekend, we were raining paratroopers over Honduras — another quick fix for the Nicaraguan revolution and the collapse of our proxy counter-revolution with the Contras.

At the same moment there was even a nice irony in neighboring El Salvador, where the intractably corrupt regime of Jose Napoleon Duarte has been our billion-dollar quick fix and is now besieged anew by resurgent violence on both the right and the left. The anti-Duarte, anti-U.S. guerrillas proudly announced that they had been buying black-market weapons from the Contras — U.S.-supplied M-16 rifles and M-60 machine guns.

It would all be a comic opera if the toll were not so gruesome. Why do we imagine that these people really fight and die and flee in such numbers, why they desperately take to the city streets or jungle hills from the isthmus to the Mexican border? Why do their ragged forces go on struggling whether the Soviets scavenge the upheaval with arms aid or not? Why must the Nicaraguan Contras on the other side be continually fed, outfitted, inspired by the CIA or wealthy patrons in the United States?

The truth is that the United States has been and remains very largely on the wrong side of this historic outpouring of human aspiration, and that, whatever our random good intentions, we have been allied in appearance and in fact with a repressive status quo throughout much of the hemisphere.

Noriega's leaving will not alter that reality in Panama. Nor will he take in his ample baggage the simplistic and self-defeating obsession with communism and the Russian bogyman that more than ever blinds and binds the State Department, personified by the hot-headed and dogmatic views of officials like Assistant Secretary of State Elliot Abrams.

The ultimate irony is that Noriega in his comfortable Spanish exile may be safer than we are in the aftermath, as our continuing heedlessness to change makes us the enemy of the future in Central America and truly mortgages our national security.

Teachers Trying Out Japanese-Style Management

Harry Bernstein

Tens of thousands of America's teachers are embarking with administrators on a provocative adventure in joint management of their schools.

Pilot programs that already have passed the preliminary stages are operating in such communities as Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Rochester, Toledo, Hammond, Ind., and Dade County, the country's fourth-largest school district, which includes Miami.

The teacher-administrator cooperative system may also be introduced soon in Los Angeles, spurred by recently appointed School Superintendent Leonard M. Britton, who inaugurated the Dade County program a year ago when he was school superintendent there. Wayne Johnson, president of United Teachers-Los Angeles, says he supports the idea enthusiastically.

The system, sometimes labeled the Japanese style of management when used in industrial settings, could provide significant help in the urgent task of improving the nation's deteriorating educational structure.

The system calls on teachers, in effect, to "heal themselves," or at least help heal themselves and the schools, too.

If it doesn't work as well as expected, the new "teacher, heal thyself" concept could turn out to taunt teachers as scornfully as that ancient proverb, "physician, heal thyself," has taunted physicians for nearly 2,000 years.

But teachers can help cure the problems of our schools.

Better training, pay and working conditions for the country's 2.5 million teachers are basic essentials for improving the schools. These necessities cost money and can be provided if education is given a higher priority than it now has in this country.

However, also crucial are increasing the status of teachers and their self-esteem, two less tangible factors that participatory management of the schools can help achieve.

An even more important benefit of joint management would be the fuller use that could be made of the often-neglected knowledge teachers have of the needs of pupils and of the overall operations of the schools.

There are several variations in the programs planned or now in use.

Dade County's program is now working in 43 of the county's 280 schools. Each "pilot" school's funds are spent according to decisions made by the school principals, other administrators and elected committees of teachers, who are usually union members.

The Dade County School Board and the union removed previous countywide requirements governing such major issues as class size, length of class periods and the school day. Teachers and administrators together now determine these and other issues based on their joint assessment of their particular school's needs.

Teachers are joining principals to, among other things, evaluate teacher performance, develop curriculum, select textbooks and design special programs for gifted students.

Teachers who spend significant extra time on administrative work are paid extra money. And, like other programs around the country, Dade is developing a career ladder for teachers.

The cooperative management system in Rochester includes a "Career in Teaching" program that offers teachers a second route to get at least close to the top of the school's salary structure without leaving the classroom.

Qualified teachers selected by faculty committees are offered assignments as lead teachers who, for example, serve as mentors to new teachers or handle the most difficult classes. If they agree not to seek supervisory or administrative posts for at least two years, they can earn up to $68,500 a year as classroom teachers.

Rochester, determined to improve its school system, also has agreed to a new contract that will boost teacher salaries by more than 40 percent over the next three years.

Tackling Trade

Charles Morris

Carl von Weiszacker, the physicist and philosopher, speaks of the "political fallacy," or the conviction that if your opponent's positions are demonstrably wrong, yours must be right. In a more refined version, the fallacy holds that if a government program is a failure, there must exist an alternative that will succeed.

The debate among political hopefuls and economists over America's $175 billion-plus trade deficit illustrates the fallacy in operation. Programs and recommendations abound. It is easy to point out the flaws in each; but no one admits that there might not be any ready solution at all.

It is important to understand how the trade deficit came to be. Despite all the ink spilled — rightly — over the loss of American competitiveness, the trade deficit is not primarily an exporting problem. There is no question that America lost markets in the 1980s. Had we been able to maintain export growth at the same rate as in the late 1970s, for example, we would have exported $35 billion more in 1987. Better export performance would have helped but would still have made only a small dent in the overall problem.

The biggest drop in export, however, came in trade with Latin America, which had little to do with "competitiveness." So long as American banks were supplying consumption capital to countries like Brazil, Mexico, and Argentina, they were strong markets for American commodities and manufactured goods. But we cut off lending around 1980 — and told those countries to earn their way out of their deficits by exporting more and importing less. Naturally, when Brazil, in particular, tried to follow our advice we threatened trade sanctions. Our Latin American friends may be excused if they sometimes show symptoms of economic neurosis.

A glance at the other side of the trade ledger makes it obvious that the U.S. trade deficit is primarily an import phenomenon. If the United States had merely maintained its share of world manufactured imports between 1980 and 1987, the trade deficit would have been $100 billion lower. The deficit, in short, is not caused primarily by other countries' refusal to buy American goods, but by the American enthusiasm for buying foreign goods.

Looking more closely, imports from Japan dominate the statistics. The Japanese enjoyed a $68 billion manufacturing trade surplus with the United States in 1986, accounting for more than half of our manufacturing goods deficit. West Germany had a surplus of less than $17 billion, somewhat smaller, interestingly enough, than Taiwan's.

Most of Japan's surplus is accounted for by motor vehicles and vehicle parts. The U.S. motor vehicle trade deficit, in fact, more than $50 billion in 1986 is, along with oil, one of the dominant elements in world trade flows. Consumer electronics and apparel items, each less than a third as large as motor vehicle imports, are far back in second place.

Understanding the sources of the deficit puts some of the more frequently touted solutions into perspective. There have been many suggestions — recently from Fortune Magazine, for example — that we might balance our deficit in manufactured goods with exports of services, exporting America's leadership in the information and communication revolution.

Agricultural and raw materials tell the same story. Our recent agricultural surpluses have been in the $3 billion to $5 billion range. Because of steady increases in agricultural productivity throughout the world, we will be hard-pressed to maintain even that level of surplus.

Democrat 'Pilots' Must Chart Course

Stewart Udall

Democrats great and small are now faced with a hard choice: Find a way at their convention in Atlanta to produce fresh nominees with a powerful national appeal, or rubber-stamp a scarred standard-bearer with a modest base of support who will probably "lead" them to another landslide electoral loss in November.

The "bad" news, underlined by the outcome in Illinois and a movement toward an uncommitted slate led by party leaders in New Jersey, is that it is now practically certain that no active candidate will arrive at the July convention with even one-third of the delegates he needs to win the nomination outright. But the good news is that an inconclusive contest offers the Democrats an opportunity to adopt what I will call an Adlai Stevenson strategy — namely, to turn their convention into an open search for a high-quality ticket that can win next November, which might or might not include some of the current candidates.

But this strategy is being held in abeyance now by the preposterous argument (propounded by Democratic Party Chairman Paul G. Kirk Jr. and supporters of the current crop of candidates) that the list of eligible aspirants should be restricted to the marathon campaigners who participated in the bleary-eyed steeplechase known as the primaries. On its face this is an absurd contention. Why should any political party automatically award its nomination to a weak candidate who has only been able to capture one-third of the elected delegates?

The truth is that the current process of year-long, high-risk campaigns drives out many of the best-qualified individuals in both political parties. Can one imagine a Dwight Eisenhower or an Adlai Stevenson wandering around Iowa for 148 days mumbling the same speech day after day? Or can one envision a Franklin Roosevelt abandoning his duties as governor of New York to conduct a year-long wheelchair campaign through the small towns of New Hampshire?

It is, to use a current phrase, "voodoo politics" to contend that only those who have "paid their dues" by participating in the primaries are entitled to have their presidential credentials considered at Atlanta. Does it make sense, for example, to argue that Albert Gore and Paul Simon are the only senators with presidential credentials, when talented colleagues like Maine's George Mitchell, Georgia's Sam Nunn, Arkansas' Dale Bumpers and New Jersey's Bill Bradley are standing in the wings?

Before the flawed "reforms" that generated the present predicament, California's former winner-take-all primaries had the merit of sending a loud message to the conventions — and often to the nation as well — at the end of the primary season. But now the fractionated results of jumbled primaries have cast the Democrats adrift on an uncharted sea.

Pakistan Says Pact Possible If Aid Issue Resolved

By MOHAMMED AFTAB
Associated Press Writer

GENEVA (AP) — Pakistan's chief negotiator at the Afghanistan peace talks said Saturday that an agreement could be clinched if the Soviets would agree with the United States to suspend all aid to the warring parties.

Acting Foreign Minister Zain Noorani said that since another outstanding issue — that of a transitional government — appears to have been resolved in principle, "we feel that as soon as the two guarantors resolve the issue of symmetry, the instruments can be signed."

By "symmetry," he was referring to Washington's position that it would be a guarantor of a settlement only if the Soviet Union stops military aid to the Kabul government at the same time the United States ceases military aid to the Moslem guerrillas fighting the government.

The Soviets have rejected that demand as amounting to interference with relations between two sovereign states bound by international treaties.

The Washington Post reported Saturday that the Reagan administration is cutting off its supply of Stinger anti-aircraft missiles to the Afghan resistance but is rushing at least $300 million in other weapons to them before an agreement is reached.

The Post cited diplomatic and other U.S. sources, who were not identified. It said the decision to stop supplying Stingers apparently was reached late last month in anticipation of a peace settlement in Afghanistan.

Among the U.S.-purchased military equipment being rushed to the resistance are 120mm Spanish heavy mortars and modern mine-clearing weapons, the Post said.

Noorani, briefing reporters, said the Soviet Union is not prepared to stop or suspend aid to Kabul. "It seeks the unilateral right to continue to supply arms to the Peoples Democratic Party of Afghanistan."

He said "a Soviet willingness to assume equal and reciprocal obligations as a guarantor can clinch the Geneva agreements and a political settlement of the Afghan problem."

Noorani said Pakistan has told U.N. mediator Diego Cordovez "that the texts of the four instruments (of an agreement) are now complete and that Pakistan does not seek any amendments or changes or modifications in the drafts."

He noted that the issue of a transitional government appeared to have been resolved following last week's meeting between Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

Pakistan has insisted during the talks that a broad-based transitional government would be needed in Afghanistan to ensure peace in the country following the withdrawal of the estimated 115,000 Red Army troops. Moscow had balked, saying this was outside the scope of the peace talks.

But a U.S. official said in Washington on Thursday that Moscow had indicated support for having Cordovez act in a personal capacity to promote an intra-Afghan dialogue.

In a related development, diplomatic sources said that Nicolay Kozyrev, the special Soviet envoy who has followed the talks from the wings since the latest round began March 2, met Noorani Saturday to brief him on the Shultz-Shevardnadze talks.

Armenians Stage Silent Protest Against Policy

By CAROL J. WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Armenians abandoned the streets of their capital to soldiers and attack dogs Saturday to protest an official crackdown that prompted activists to cancel a nationalist demonstration, dissidents said.

One activist said most Armenians heeded the call to stay inside and made Yerevan look like a ghost town.

"There are no children outside, no cars on the street, no activity whatsoever except for the troops occupying the city. Yerevan is like a dead city," said Christian rights activist Alexander Ogorodnikov of Moscow, who said he talked to witnesses by telephone.

The vast majority of people in Armenian-dominated Nagorno-Karabakh, in the neighboring republican of Azerbaijan, also refused to go outside, the dissidents' reports said.

Armenians campaigning for annexation of Nagorno-Karabakh had called for protests Saturday, when an unofficial committee spearheading the drive was to meet. But authorities threatened criminal action against those taking part in illegal protests in the region south of the Caucasus Mountains.

Nagorno-Karabakh has been part of the overwhelmingly Moslem Azerbaijan republic since 1923. Most Armenians are Christians, and many fear the ethnic character of Nagorno-Karabakh is being diluted.

In Moscow, Armenian church official Tiran Gureghian said about 15 young Armenians gathered Saturday at a small church inside Yerevan's Armenian cemetery to discuss Nagorno-Karabakh. Gureghian said police prevented them from going into the cemetery, which had been posted with a sign advising visitors to obtain permits before entering.

An Armenian telephone operator said in a phone interview that 20 to 30 people gathered near the Yerevan Opera Theater, the scene of huge demonstrations last month. The operator, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said that group was also talking about Nagorno-Karabakh.

The operator said Armenians were disappointed that their demands for annexation had been rejected. "They believed it would be ours. It probably won't be," she said.

Police patrolled Yerevan's streets and helicopters crisscrossed its skies. Radio Yerevan, monitored in London, appealed for calm and restraint.

Leaders of the unofficial Karabakh Committee in Yerevan had called off the strikes and demonstrations earlier in the week to avoid confrontation. But the Armenian government on Friday ordered police to "put an end to the activities of the Karabakh Committee," Radio Moscow reported.

Four Armenian activists were arrested Friday as authorities moved to prevent protests.

Andrei Bavitsky of the dissident journal Glasnost said he was told Nagorno-Karabakh's central city, Stepanakert, was occupied by 15,000 Azerbaijani policemen on Saturday. He said residents of the region were staying indoors to protest the show of force.

Local authorities said little of the situation. Someone who answered the telephone at the Armenian Ministry of Internal Affairs refused to give his name and said Saturday's activity was normal.

It was not clear how many Armenians stayed home out of fear of confronting authorities and how many stayed home to signal their displeasure. Bavitsky said he was told 60,000 troops were patrolling Yerevan, a city of about 640,000 people.

A national newspaper accused the Communist Party leadership of trying to suppress the sensitive ethnic dispute. Komsomolskaya Pravda said authorities should have openly discussed the proposal with Armenians.

The critical commentary in the party's youth newspaper contrasted sharply with articles Friday in the nation's two most official newspapers, Pravda and Izvestia.

Despite its hard line, the Soviet Politburo has ordered a major improvement in living conditions in the region, including improved reception of Armenian-language television programming and more Armenian literature.

Soviet authorities, meanwhile, allowed nationalist displays in Latvia and Estonia on Friday, activists said. They said the displays marked the anniversary of Soviet leader Josef V. Stalin's 1940 deportation of thousands of anti-communists before the Soviets took over the states on the Baltic Sea. In the Baltic, as many as 3,000 people were reported to have joined in a nationalist display in the Latvian capital of Riga and about 5,000 in the Estonian capital of Tallinn.

One resident, Ints Zalitis of Riga, said human rights activists were warned against organizing mass demonstrations. He said Latvians showed up in small groups to lay flowers at a central monument, and police did not disturb those who left quickly.

Nine people were detained for trespassing and disrupting transportation, Tass said.

Anti-Draft Activists Arrested

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Police arrested 21 members of a banned peace group who met in a Warsaw apartment Saturday, a spokesman for the group said.

Jacek Czaputowicz, leader of Freedom and Peace, said there had been no attempt to keep the meeting a secret. It was the first time police detained members of the group at such a session, he said.

The meeting was of the group's national board in charge of raising money, paying legal fines and providing financial assistance for imprisoned activists, he said.

A municipal official arrived with police at the apartment at about 11 a.m. and declared the meeting illegal, Czaputowicz said.

Police detained everyone present, and 17 people remained in custody Saturday night, he said. Opposition activists in Poland frequently are detained for up to 48 hours on misdemeanor charges.

Freedom and Peace opposes Poland's military draft and demands the right to alternative civilian service. It continues to operate even though it has been declared illegal.

On Friday, Poland's National Defense Ministry Council endorsed government proposals announced earlier to permit "alternative forms of military service."

Czaputowicz said the detentions may be intended to show that alternative service, if it eventually becomes law, did not result from pressure from Freedom and Peace.

Funeral Held

LERIDA, Spain (AP) — Queen Sofia joined more than a 1,000 mourners at a funeral Saturday for 10 children and five adults killed in an accident involving a train and a nursery school bus, Spanish National Radio reported.

Lerida Roman Catholic Bishop Ramon Malla Call read a telegram sent by Pope John Paul II offering condolences for the families of the dead and prayers for quick recoveries of the 17 children injured in Friday's crash, the radio said.

The accident in the nearby town of Juneda occurred when a bus carrying the children from the Los Angeles nursery school went past a stop sign at a rail crossing and was rammed by a high-speed passenger train bound for Barcelona, police said.

The crash killed six boys and four girls, four women in their 20s, including one who was seven months pregnant, and the bus driver, a Lerida province spokesman said.

Blue Devils Upend Owls, 63-53

Out Of Reach

Temple's Mark Macon trips and loses the ball to Duke's Kevin Strickland (31) as he is guarded by Duke's Billy King in the second half of Saturday's 63-53 Duke win in the NCAA Eastern Regional basketball tournament at the Meadowland Arena in East Rutherford, N.J. (AP Laserphoto)

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Temple lost its touch and any chance of going to the Final Four on Saturday when the top-ranked Owls lost 63-53 to fifth-ranked Duke.

It was a game that Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski didn't think the Blue Devils had a chance to win.

"We played very much like a veteran team to beat the most veteran team we've played all year — a team we didn't think we had a chance to beat," the Duke coach said.

Kevin Strickland scored 21 points and Danny Ferry had 20 as Duke, 28-6, won the East Regional and moved into the semifinals of the Final Four next Saturday in Kansas City against the winner of Sunday's Kansas State-Kansas game.

Temple, 32-2, which had won 18 consecutive games in a rise to the top ranking nationally, made only one of its first 12 shots in the second half and shot 28.6 for the game. The Owls scored only nine points in the first 14 minutes after intermission as Duke took control.

Macon, averaging nearly 21 points per game this season, scored 13 points and was 6-of-29 from the field, including eight shots that never hit the rim. Macon made 46.6 percent of his shots from the field during the season. Tim Perry also had 13 points for the Owls, and Howard Evans had 12.

"We played just great team defense, (especially) Billy King on Macon," Krzyzewski said.

"He got by me and missed some easy shots," King said of Macon. "I can't take all the credit."

Duke is now 7-0 at the Meadowlands Arena, including victories over DePaul and Navy in the 1986 East Regional.

The Owls, who led by as many as 10 points in the first half, pulled ahead 31-25 after Perry started the second half with a three-point play.

But they missed their next 10 shots, six by Macon, as Duke took the lead for good with 11 consecutive points.

Quin Snyder gave the Blue Devils their first lead, 34-31, with a 3-pointer with 13:59 left, and Strickland completed the 11-0 run with a fastbreak basket.

Evans stopped Temple's scoreless drought with two free throws, but a dunk by Duke's Alaa Abdelnaby and two free throws by Snyder made it 40-33 with 11:29 left.

Derrick Brantley finally broke the string of Temple misses from the field with a jumper, getting the Owls within five, but a 10-0 spurt by Duke, with Strickland hitting two 3-pointers, extended the margin to 50-35.

A basket by Perry and Macon's only 3-pointer of the game cut the deficit to 50-40, but Temple got no closer than that until it was 59-51 in the final minute.

The only other loss this season by Temple, whose last trip to the Final Four was 1958, was 59-58 at Nevada-Las Vegas.

Temple opened a 17-7 lead in the first 10 minutes as Duke missed 11 of its first 14 shots, had three shots blocked by Perry and was called for five traveling violations.

The Blue Devils weren't discouraged by a 1-for-7 performance from 3-point range in their 73-72 victory over Rhode Island in the regional semifinals. Against Temple, Duke missed five of six 3-point attempts while falling behind by 10 and was 1-for-10 in the first half.

After a television timeout midway through the half, Duke started finding the range, hitting eight of its last 13 shots of the half. A jumper by Greg Koubek and two by Ferry made it 17-13, and Strickland had a fullcourt drive and a jumper to close the gap to 19-17.

A three-point play by Vreeswyk, who started the game with a 3-point goal, helped Temple rebuild its lead to 26-19 with 2:11 left. But Duke scored six of the last eight points of the half, including another jumper by Strickland with four seconds left, leaving the Owls with a 28-25 halftime advantage.

Temple point guard Howard Evans said the team never told the struggling Macon to shoot less.

"He seemed to be pressing a little," Evans said. "I just told him to keep shooting and let it come to you."

"Mark has carried us through the whole year," said Temple assistant coach Jim Maloney.

Sitting Pretty

Sooners Overcome Villanova

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Oklahoma showed it couldn't be tricked by Villanova's slow-down offense. Instead, the fastbreaking Sooners tricked Villanova by playing defense.

The fourth-ranked Sooners had to overcome a deliberate offense run almost to perfection by Villanova before downing the Wildcats 78-59 Saturday, winning the Southeast Regional and advancing to the NCAA Final Four.

Oklahoma, known for its run-and-gun offense, held Villanova scoreless over a 5½-minute stretch near the end.

From the beginning, Villanova ran a three-man weave near center court to run time off the shot clock and keep the ball out of the hands of the Sooners, who scored 100 or more points 20 times this season.

"Villanova should keep time of possession like they do in football," Tubbs said. "We had the ball 10 minutes and they had it 30. Did you know that? I'm just guessing. I don't know for sure."

"Seven down in that kind of game is like being down 20 in our kind of game," Tubbs said.

The Sooners, 34-3, trailed by eight points with 14 minutes to play, but outscored the Wildcats 38-11.

Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino praised the way his team fought Oklahoma's pressure defense.

"I thought these kids did a fabulous job of bring it up ... establishing their tempo and doing what they had to do. That couldn't have been better," Massimino said.

Villanova, 24-13, forced the high-scoring Sooners into a slow-paced contest that had Oklahoma's offense out of synch and enabled the Wildcats to build a 38-31 halftime lead with a 13-3 run in the last 4:35 of the half.

Trailing 48-40 with 14 minutes left, the Sooners went on an 11-0 burst to take the lead for good — gaining a tie at 48 on Ricky Grace's driving left-handed layup with 11:43 left and going in front to stay when Grace nailed a 3-point basket from the top of the circle with 10:55 remaining.

Oklahoma advances to the Final Four in Kansas City next Saturday where it will face the winner of Sunday's West championship game between second-ranked Arizona and No. 7 North Carolina.

Players Event Washed Out

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A series of thunderstorms forced postponement of third-round play Saturday in the $1.25 million Players Championship.

Play was held up by a thunderstorm at 1:40 p.m., EST. It resumed at 3:15 p.m., then was stopped again by heavy, flooding rains at 3:50 p.m.

Thirty players — none of them among the leaders in the 72-man field — had finished their rounds when play was washed out at 4:45 p.m. EST.

Tournament official Arvin Ginn announced that third round play would be resumed at 7:15 a.m. EST Sunday, with the fourth round to be played Sunday afternoon.

The 42 players stranded on the course marked their positions and will resume play Sunday morning.

After the completion of the third round, the field will be re-paired in threesomes and both the first and 10th tees will be used to start fourth-round play.

"Our information is that this front will clear out overnight and the forecast is good for tomorrow," Ginn said.

Dan Pohl had moved into the lead at 10 under par through five holes when play was halted.

Pohl birdied four of the five holes he played.

Mark McCumber and Morris Hatalsky were a single stroke back at 9-under after four holes. Hatalsky

ECU Game Postponed

East Carolina's baseball doubleheader with James Madison University, scheduled for Saturday, was postponed because of weather conditions and wet grounds.

The two teams will meet instead in a twin bill this afternoon, starting at 1 p.m., instead of the single game that was scheduled today.

The Pirates are 1-2 in league play while James Madison will be opening its Colonial Athletic Association season.

Tar Heels To Take On Wildcats

Pre-game Meeting

Head coaches Lute Olson of Arizona (left) and Dean Smith of North Carolina share a light moment as they meet briefly Saturday between news conferences in Seattle. Their teams meet in the finals of the NCAA Western Regionals. (AP Laserphoto)

SEATTLE (AP) — One team thinks it doesn't get enough respect, the other thinks it might get too much.

By Sunday afternoon, one of them — either up-and-coming Arizona or traditional power North Carolina — will be headed to the Final Four of the NCAA basketball tournament.

They'll meet in the championship game of the West Regional at the Kingdome, where No. 7 North Carolina will try to slow down a No. 2-ranked Arizona team that has won its three previous NCAA games by margins of 40, 29 and 20 points and stomped on most of its opponents in rolling to a 17-1 Pac-10 Conference record.

Arizona Coach Lute Olson told reporters in no uncertain terms Saturday that his team isn't getting the credit it deserves for compiling a 34-2 record and bristled at suggestions it was accomplished at the expense of a weak league.

"It would take somebody who's not very intelligent to say, 'Who have we played?'" Olson said. "We're 5-0 against Big Ten teams, we've beaten Duke, we've beaten Syracuse. How long does this go on?

"I'll tell you another thing, we played some people in our league that were every bit as good as some people we've played in the playoffs, I'll tell you what, I'd rather play everybody we've played in the tournament than play Stanford again."

Stanford was the only Pac-10 team to beat Arizona, winning 82-74 in Palo Alto, Calif. Arizona's average margin in its 17 league victories was 27 points.

The Wildcats have been just as dominating in NCAA play, beating Cornell 90-50 and Seton Hall 84-55 in Los Angeles, then whipping No. 17 Iowa 99-79 on Friday night to earn the berth against North Carolina, which is 27-6 and advanced with a 78-69 victory over Michigan.

"We've had tougher games in the league than we've had in the playoffs," Olson said. "Don't ask these players any more, 'Do you feel you've been tested?' It's not our fault they haven't tested us."

North Carolina, on the other hand, never suffers from a lack of respect. The Tar Heels are in the NCAA tournament for a record 14th straight year and they've won seven regional championships under Coach Dean Smith, who guided them to the NCAA title in 1982.

"I don't think they should have a chip on their shoulder," he said. "They've won 34 games, no one's come close to them. It can serve as a paranoia, which is the best means of preparing a team.

"We get no respect, the Rodney Dangerfield idea — that's a heck of way to have a team. I hate to play teams that feel that way. I just wish our guys could get that feeling sometime. We have too much respect."

Actually, Smith was the one sounding like an underdog, which he is according to the seedings. Arizona was the top-seeded team in the West; North Carolina was seeded second.

Sports Notes

Holec Keys UNC-G Basketball Success

Chris Holec, a sophomore center, helped lead the women's basketball team at UNC-Greensboro, to a third-place finish in the NCAA's Division III Tournament and a 26-7 record during the past season.

Holec was a top player at Rose High School during her prep days.

She was the second leading scorer on the UNCG team this year, scoring 11.8 points a game. She was also the second leading rebounder with a 7.6 average.

In nine games this winter, she was either the top scorer or shared top scoring honors for the Lady Spartans and was the top rebounder on 14 occasions, only one of those shared.

"Chris was an integral part of our success this season," Coach Lynee Agee said. "She was our force in the middle. In two years, she has developed into an excellent post player.

"We are proud of the team's accomplishments this year. It advanced perhaps further than anyone expected and set the stage for our move to Division II next year," Agee said.

Holec was named to the second team All-Dixie Conference and also earned all-tournament honors at the Brand-Rex Invitational at Eastern Connecticut University in November.

She had a career high of 25 points and 15 rebounds on Feb. 2 against St. Andrews Presbyterian College.

Graf Turns Up Game, Tops Evert 6-4, 6-4

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — Steffi Graf practiced like the world's 400th-best player Saturday, but she lived up to her No. 1 ranking in the match that followed.

Graf overcame a shaky forehand to beat Chris Evert 6-4, 6-4 in the finals of the International Players Championships.

The 18-year-old West German said she wanted the title badly after losing to Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina in the finals of the Virginia Slims of Florida two weeks ago.

"I was eager to play; I was impatient," Graf said. "When I was practicing, I was not being calm enough. If you'd seen me (practicing) this morning, you would've asked if I was No. 400 or 500."

Top-seeded Mats Wilander of Sweden will play No. 2 Jimmy Connors of Sanibel Harbour, Fla., in the men's finals of the two-week hard-court tournament Sunday.

Graf, the top seed who has been ranked No. 1 since last August, won every set in her seven matches.

"I needed to win this tournament for myself, to get my confidence for the next tournaments," she said.

Evert, the second seed, said Graf regained her No. 1 form.

"In that match with Sabatini, she was pretty wild," Evert said. "She wasn't the same player she was today.

"It's like you're always tougher after a loss. She's a champion, and she was going to come back."

Graf won despite struggling with the forehand, usually her best stroke. She had only five forehand winners and committed 17 unforced errors.

"In the second set she was very consistent with her backhand," Evert said. "If anything, I thought it was better than her forehand."

Cards Put Tudor On Disabled List

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals placed left-hander John Tudor on the 15-day disabled Saturday because of a sore shoulder.

After recovering from off-season arthscopic knee surgery, he has been hampered by a sore shoulder and the flu and has pitched only one inning this spring. The earliest Tudor will be able to pitch is April 10.

Tudor suffered a broken leg last April 19 when New York Mets catcher Barry Lyons fell into the Cardinals' dugout and landed on Tudor. He came back in July and finished 10-2.

In 1985, Tudor went 21-8 in helping the Cardinals win the National League pennant.

In other moves, first baseman-outfielder Mike Laga, who suffered a separated right shoulder on Thursday, was placed on the 60-day emergency medical list.

Outfielder John Morris and pitcher Lee Tunnell, neither of whom have played all spring, were placed on the 21-day disabled list retroactive to March 20. Morris is recuperating from off-season back surgery and related hamstring problems. Tunnell has a shoulder injury.

Mets Complete Player Swap With Pirates

PORT. ST. LUCIE, Fla. (AP) — The New York Mets acquired Mackey Sasser, a left-handed hitting catcher, and rookie right-handed pitcher Tim Drummond from the Pittsburgh Pirates Saturday for rookie first baseman Randy Milligan and rookie right-hander Scott Henion.

Sasser will join the Mets Sunday. Drummond was assigned to Tidewater, the Mets' farm team in the International League.

Milligan will join Pittsburgh in Bradenton, Fla., while Henion was sent to Augusta, the Pirates' farm club in the South Atlantic League.

Sasser spent most of the 1987 season with Phoenix and Vancouver of the Pacific Coast League, hitting .318 in 115 games with three home runs and 56 runs batted in. He batted .185 in 14 games with the San Francisco Giants and Pittsburgh.

Drummond had a 2-6 record and a 2.97 earned-run average in 46 games with Vancouver.

Mets vice president Joe McIlvaine said Drummond was a key addition.

"We look at Sasser as an all-purpose guy. Drummond is a prospect. He was a very important part of this deal for us," McIlvaine said. "He throws in the 90s."

Milligan a right-handed power-hitter, was the International League's Most Valuable Player with Tidewater last season, batting .326 with 29 homers and 103 RBI, and is expected to get his chance to play in the major leagues with Pittsburgh.

"It's a great opportunity for me to start out in the major leagues," said Milligan. "I received a call from their GM, Syd Thrift, last night and he told me I would be with their club and I'd probably platoon at first base."

A.C. Reynolds Wins State Title

By DAVID DROSCHAK
Associated Press Writer

CHAPEL HILL, N.C (AP) — Junior Scott Hill scored 17 points, including five 3-pointers, to lead A.C. Reynolds to a 58-52 victory over Richmond County and the men's 4-A state high school basketball title Saturday.

The victory gives the Rockets, 27-2, their first state title, while ending Richmond County's Cinderella march to the finals. The Raiders finished at 19-10.

Both teams came out shooting cold in the opening half, but a 13-2 run by the Raiders late in the first quarter opened up a 19-12 lead.

Trailing 36-32 at halftime, the Rockets went to their outside game. A 14-6 run in the third quarter tied the contest at 40-40 heading to the final quarter. During the spurt, Hill, Willie Battle and Jimmy Sziksai all sank 3-pointers.

The Raiders closed to within two points twice, the last time coming on a Tony Diggs layup with 2:38 remaining, but Sziksai sank another 3-pointer with 1:52 left to increase the lead to 55-50.

Hill, the game's most valuable player, hit five of seven 3-pointers, while Willie Battle added 13 points,

Oscar Sturgis scored a game-high 20 points to lead Richmond County, while Diggs had 11 and Mitchel Bristow 10. Bristow, averaging 20.1 points, was held to four of 16 shooting after a box-and-one defense was put on him in the second half.

Junior Louis Williamson scored 20 of his 26 points in the second half as Bartlett-Yancey defeated North Surry 84-68 to capture the men's 3-A state high school basketball championship Saturday.

The Buccaneers raised their record to 31-1 in taking their first state title, while North Surry droped to 26-4 and lost its first state title in four tries.

Bartlett-Yancey led by two points at halftime after trailing by as many as eight early in the first quarter. But Williamson found his jumper and scored eight points in the third quarter to increase the edge to 51-45.

The 5-foot-11 guard then scored his team's first six points to start the fourth quarter on three foul shots and a three-point play to raise the lead to 57-45 with 6:46 remaining.

Williamson, the game's most valuable player, sank 10 of 16 shots and five of eight free throws. Keith Claiborne had 17 points, while Corey Elliott had 13 and Dana Elliott 12 and 16 rebounds.

Marcus Allen led North Surry with a game-high 28 points, while Kelly Holder had 15 and Jimmy George 11.

Williamson led a hot-shooting team that hit on 54.1 percent of its shots, while the Greyhounds shot 40 percent.

Robert Watson worked his way inside to score 29 points and grab 15 rebounds as Lexington defeated Pender County 91-71 to take the men's 2-A state high school basketball title Saturday.

The victory gives the Yellow Jackets their first state championship in basketball and raised their mark to 26-6. Lexington also won the 2-A state football championship.

Pender County fell to 27-2.

The Patriots led by one in the first quarter before the Yellow Jackets went on a 14-2 run to take a 24-13 lead with 2:39 left in the opening quarter.

Lexington continued to pound the ball inside and built the lead to 15 points in the opening half before the Patriots started hitting some 3-point shots.

A 3-point jumper by Craig Wilson with 5:12 left in the third quarter cut the lead to 50-44, but that's as close as the Patriots would come.

And while Pender was missing long-range shots — they hit eight of 27 3-pointers — game most valuable player Watson went on a scoring spurt to start the fourth quarter that raised the lead back to 15. In the first two minutes of the quarter, Watson hit a 5-foot shot in the lane, scored on a reverse layup and sank a follow shot.

Anthony Miller scored 18 points for Lexington, while Anthony Zellars had 15 and Derrick Scott 10.

The Patriots were led by Sharmin Marshall's 22 points, while Craig Wilson had 19 and Anthony Rowell 15.

Tony Bethea scored 26 points as St. Pauls shut down Rosman's inside game in the second half to claim an 80-62 victory Saturday and its first men's 1-A high school basketball championship.

The Bulldogs, 0-3 in previous title games, finished the season at 27-5. Rosman ended its year at 26-4.

Rosman grabbed a nine-point lead in the first quarter behind the inside play of 6-foot-7 center Chris Thomas, who had nine points in the quarter.

But the Bulldogs started to use their team quickness and the outside shooting of Bethea to take the lead for good at the end of the first half.

Bethea sank a pair of 3-pointers to end the half to give the Bulldogs a 40-37 lead. He then scored six of his team's first eight points in the third quarter as St. Pauls gradually pulled away to an 11-point margin.

A free throw by Thomas with 6:31 left cut the lead to 56-50, but St. Pauls went on an 8-0 run over the next 2 1-2 minutes, capped by Bethea's 3-pointer, to take a 64-50 lead.

Edward Gerald, the game's most valuable player, scored 20 points and had 11 rebounds for the Bulldogs. Brad Currie had 10 points.

Thomas finished with 23 points and 21 rebounds, but the senior was held to six points in the second half. Jamie Reid added 15 for Rosman, while Greg Owen had 13.

Wadkins, a former winner of this event that ranks as the annual championship of golf's touring pros, was 5-under for the 12 holes he played.

"I would have loved to have kept going." he said. "When you're playing as good as I was, you hate to have the round interrupted.

"But I learned a long time ago there's nothing you can do about it. You have no control over it.'You just try to stay up and come back tomorrow and try to pick it up again."

South African Fulton Allem, one of the early starters, completed a 7-under-par 65 before the storms hit and finished three rounds at 210, six under par.

Kansas State Star Made Long Journey

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — When Mitch Richmond left his Fort Lauderdale, Fla., home to go to school in a small Missouri town, he felt lost.

"Wow," he thought, "I'm way out in Moberly, Mo. Nowhere land. No beach or nothing."

But for two years he thrived in the junior college setting, a breeding ground of Division I stars. Then he moved to Kansas State and became one.

His new conference, the Big Eight, already had a star in the spotlight. Kansas' Danny Manning was getting the publicity. Richmond was getting points but little national recognition.

"I don't think people realized how good Mitch Richmond was," Kansas Coach Larry Brown said Saturday.

"I'm not frustrated by it," Richmond. "It is difficult, though, when you look in the paper and see your name is Rich Mitchman."

That's the funniest mistaken identity pinned on him, but not the only one, Richmond said.

On Friday night, when he was playing a big part in the upset of Purdue, he was called Milt Richman on national television.

No one will ever refer to Kansas' 6-foot-10 center as Manny Danning, but the 6-foot-5 Richmond is finally earning some national publicity of his own. He has led the Wildcats into Sunday's NCAA Midwest Regional final against Kansas.

After becoming the top single-season scorer and fifth leading career scorer in Kansas State history, he has been found.

A national television audience will get a chance to compare Richmond's skills with those of Manning, a two-time All-America.

"It's a good feeling that your mom can see you back home and your friends," Richmond said. "They've been waiting a long time.

"But we're not trying to change anything," he added. "Just because we're on TV, I'm not going to show off."

Richmond, a first-team All-Big Eight selection and an honorable mention All-America, had 27 points and 11 rebounds in the 73-70 shocker over third-ranked Purdue. He is averaging 22.9 points per game.

Manning had 38 points and five rebounds as Kansas beat Vanderbilt 77-64 Friday night. He is averaging 24.7 points per game.

"Manning is the best player in the nation," Richmond said, "so it's not frustrating to be behind Manning."

Manning is considered by many to be the likely top pick in this year's NBA draft. Richmond also figures to be chosen early and, with a good shooting eye, deft passing touch and 225 solid pounds, should switch from forward to guard in the pros.

"He's strong enough to go inside. He can go outside. He can handle the ball," Brown, a former pro coach, said. "He's the prototype NBA big guard.

"He's going to be a great pro, I think."

This season, Kansas State turned to Richmond when it was struggling.

Purdue had crushed the Wildcats 101-72. With a 5-3 record, Kansas State Coach Lon Kruger decided to change his offense. He would slow the tempo rather than play a pressing defense and a fastbreak offense.

The key to the change was Richmond.

"We made a conscious effort to get the ball in Mitch's hands," Kruger said.

Kansas State is 20-5 since then.

The Wildcats have beaten Kansas in two of their three meetings this season and Richmond outscored Manning in both victories. In the NCAAs, Richmond had 30 points, seven rebounds and eight assists in a 66-53 victory over La Salle and 19 points and eight rebounds in a 66-58 win over DePaul.

"He plays an all-around game," his teammate Ron Meyer said. "That's what people overlook about him because he scores so much. He's just our most complete player on the defensive end and the offensive end.

"It takes a lot of pressure off everyone else because we know who we're going to in the clutch and he likes the pressure."

"I feel nothing's going to stop me from what I want to do," Richmond said.

If the rest of the nation is just discovering Richmond, Brown has known about him for some time.

"If Mitch has a game like he's capable of playing," Kansas' coach said, "we're in trouble."

1st Base Choice Of The Stars

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Andres Galarraga. Greg Walker. Greg Brock. Leon Durham. Pete O'Brien.

Jack Clark, already a star, and Dave Magadan, one of the up-and-comers, won't need their first baseman's mitts this year. Those jobs are filled.

"We are spoiled in New York," Mets general manager Frank Cashen said. "We have two of the best ever in Keith Hernandez and Don Mattingly.

"It's almost unfair to our minor league first basemen," Cashen said. "At one of our meetings, someone will say, 'He's no Hernandez,' and I say, 'Who is?'"

Magadan, a .300 hitter everywhere he has been, will back up Hernandez and play some third base this season.

"Of course it's frustrating," said Magadan, 25, who hit .318 in 192 at-bats for the Mets last year. "But there's nothing I can do about it for awhile."

Clark likes to play first base, but left his glove back in St. Louis when he decided to sign a free-agent contract with the Yankees. They've got Mattingly, perhaps the best all-around player in baseball, so Clark will be a designated hitter.

"I still enjoy defense," Clark said. "Maybe I can play some outfield."

"It goes in cycles," he said. "When I played, third base was a big position. Now, it's first base."

The Toronto Blue Jays have fallen just short in recent years and part of the problem is first base.

Willie Upshaw, who drove in 104 runs in 1983, has seen his RBI total drop for four straight years. The Blue Jays now hope young Fred McGriff and Cecil Fielder, who combined for 34 home runs as DH-first basemen, can take Upshaw's place.

The Los Angeles Dodgers are overun at first base. There's Pedro Guerrero, Mike Marshall, Franklin Stubbs and Len Matuszek, along with some part-timers. Manager Tom Lasorda wants to move Guerrero to third base to make room for everyone, but it might be risky.

"I'm not a third baseman," said Guerrero, the best hitter in the bunch.

Said Dodgers coach Bill Russell: "He has the ability to do it. The question is will he want to play it, especially after a tough time?"

A popular theory is that first base is the easiest position to play on the field. Witness the number of greats — Carl Yastrzemski, Pete Rose and George Brett come to mind quickly — that wound up there after spending their careers elsewhere.

Dwight Evans, a Gold Glove outfielder for Boston, enjoyed his best season (.305, 34 HR, 123 RBI) last year while making the transition to first base. But Evans, 36, says it's not so easy.

Heels Take On Wildcats ...

"I hope we can stay within 20. No one else has," Smith said. "I suppose we ought to cut down the nets if we can keep it close."

The game will match North Carolina's inside game, powered by 6-9, 256-pound J.R. Reid and 6-10 Scott Williams, against Arizona's balance and frontcourt speed.

Each team used those strengths in Friday night's regional semifinals. Williams scored 19 points and grabbed seven rebounds, while Reid, a first-team All-America, had 18 points and eight rebounds against Michigan.

In blowing away Iowa, four Arizona starters scored at least 17 points. All-America forward Sean Elliott led the way with 25, Anthony Cook added 19 and Steve Kerr and Tom Tolbert had 17 each.

"The difference between Arizona and North Carolina this year is the experience factor," said Smith, who starts three sophomores and two juniors,

"They have three seniors and two juniors in the starting lineup. They've come up through the program and Lute's done a tremendous job with tem. I don't see any wekaness with them."

Olson said his team will try to counter North Carolina's inside strength by making Reid and Williams run. He also pointed out that the Wildcats have stopped other big men before, noting they held Seton Hall's Mark Bryant to 11 points on 4-for-11 shooting.

"Their big people are going to have to run the floor, I guarantee you that," Olson said. "They are not going to jog down the court for very long because that is the strength of both Anthony and Sean.

"Whether we score off it or not, I am not concerned, as long as we make them run."

Smith said he thinks his players can keep pace with the Wildcats.

"They (Arizona) would probably win a track meet," he said. "For 94 feet, I think our guys can keep up."

While Arizona's running game may not worry Smith, he is concerned about his team's injuries. Guard Jeff Lebo is bothered by a stress fracture in his upper left ankle and didn't practice Saturday, although he's expected to start Sunday.

Williams is bothered by a shoulder injury he aggravated in Friday night's game and Bucknall hurt a toe in that contest. Smith said having Bucknall is critical because the 6-6 junior would guard Elliott.

Olson got off a parting shot in defense of his league when a reporter asked him to respond to a magazine writer's opinoin that Reid, Lebo and three pickup players could win the Pac-10 tournament.

"What is it that suddenly makes somebody who writes an article an expert on everything? Circulation?" he said. "I guess it's got to be something because it's not knowledge in a large number of cases.

"If that's the case and we're from the Pac-10, then we'll challenge North Carolina to come out with J.R. and those people who were mentioned in there and let's have a go."

Mauch Retires From Angels Ending A 26-Year Career

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Gene Mauch of the California Angels ended a 26- year managing career, one of baseball's longest, by retiring Saturday.

Cookie Rojas, an Angels scout who was interim manager for the past two weeks, was named to succeed him.

Although the 62-year-old Mauch had left the club two weeks ago, saying that he had not been feeling well and wanted to have a medical examination, his retirement was unexpected.

After undergoing medical tests, Mauch, a heavy smoker, was diagnosed as suffering from a mild case of chronic bronchitis, but otherwise found to be in good health. Antibiotics, rest and no smoking were prescribed.

As recently as Friday, Mauch said he expected to be back in uniform Saturday morning.

He said he decided to retire Friday evening, and that his health was not a factor.

"I feel great physically, probably better than I've felt in a year and a half," Mauch said during the conference at the hotel owned by Gene Autry, also the owner of the Angels.

"Over the last couple of weeks, I've seen a very healthy situation develop, a very healthy atmosphere on this team," Mauch added.

He had selected Rojas to be interim manager.

"I'm satisified that that's directly attributable to Cookie Rojas and the coaches on his staff. I'm stepping aside because I want that situation sustained."

The 49-year-old Rojas, a former All-Star second baseman who is a native of Cuba, guided the Angels to eight victories in 13 exhibition games.

Rojas has managed in the Venezuelan League, but has no other pro managing experience.

Mauch, looking rested and relaxed, indicated that maybe he had just had enough of the job.

He has been in professional baseball as a player, manager and executive for 45 years.

Only Connie Mack, who managed for 53 years; John McGraw, for 33; and Bucky Harris, for 29, had more than Mauch's 26 years as a major league manager.

Mauch, a very intense man who guided the Angels to two American League West titles in the 1980s but never managed a team to the World Series, indicated that his inability to accept losses contributed to his decision.

"Unfortunately, even when you win championships, there are a certain number of games you're going to lose, 60 or more," he said. "As I've gotten a little older, I have developed an inability to cope with those losses.

"You'd think that when a guy's been around as long as I have, that tolerance would develop. It hasn't been that way at all.

"There are other things I don't deal with quite as well as I should, namely outside influences on the game of baseball by non-baseball people, specifically, certain agents, their (the players') union.

"I've watched outstanding young players minds messed around with," he said. "Baseball's always been more to me than just how much money you can make."

After winning the AL West in 1986, and losing to Boston in the league championship series, the Angels fell into a tie for last in the division in 1987.

"Gene's been under a lot of pressure the last few years," Autry said. "This is the way he felt about it, wanted some rest."

"I feel like the game of baseball has worn on him the past few years," California first baseman Wally Joyner said of Mauch. "I think a big burden has been lifted from his shoulders.

"I guess the big thing is that he's enjoying life again."

General Manager Mike Port, emphasizing that Mauch alone had made the decision to retire, said that Mauch would remain with the club in an advisory role.

"I will be around," Mauch said. "This team is going to do well, I know it."

Rojas said, since he thought until Friday evening that Mauch was going to go back to work Saturday, he had plane reservations Saturday morning for Florida, where he was going to scout the Chicago White Sox.

"I didn't find out about everything until yesterday evening," Rojas said, explaining that he had been summoned to Autry's house, where he was told by Mauch that he was retiring and the job belonged to him.

"I'm sorry the way it happened," Rojas said.

"But I'm also very glad this opportunity was given to me. I'm going to do the best I can to get this club on the right track."

Mauch, an infielder who spent much of his career in the minor leagues, got his first major league managing job with with the Philadelphia Phillies in 1960. He was there through 1968, then managed the Montreal Expos from 1970-75, the Minnesota Twins from 1976-80, then came to the Angels in 1981.

Viola Keys Twins By Mets With 4 Shutout Innings

By The Associated Press

Frank Viola, the MVP in last year's World Series, shut out the Mets on four hits over seven innings Saturday as the Minnesota Twins ended New York's spring training winning streak at eight with a 3-2 victory Saturday.

Viola struck out seven and walked only one while Gene Larkin had RBI singles in the first and fifth innings and Tom Nieto had a solo homer in the fourth inning. All the runs came off New York starter Rick Aguilera.

Mets starter Rick Aguilera gave up all three Minnesota runs, allowing eight hits in six innings. New York's runs came on solo homers by Gary Carter and Howard Johnson off reliever Keith Atherton.

The loss by the Mets came on a day in which they acquired catcher Mackey Sasser from Pittsburgh for rookie first baseman Randy Milligan. The two teams also exchanged minor league pitchers.

Milligan a right-handed power hitter, was the International League's Most Valuable Player with Tidewater last season, batting .326 with 29 homers and 103 RBI, but was behind Keith Hernandez and Dave Magadan with the Mets.

"It's a great opportunity for me to start out in the major leagues," Milligan said. "I received a call from their GM, Syd Thrift, last night and he told me I would be with their club and I'd probably platoon at first base."

Cardinals 2, Rangers 1

Tommy Herr's seventh-inning single broke a 1-1 tie and lifted St. Louis over Texas. Joe Magrane, likely to be St. Louis' opening day pitcher, allowed three hits walked two and struck out five in six innings.

Magrane inherits the job from John Tudor, who was placed on the 15-day disabled list, who had arthroscopic knee surgery in the offseason and has pitched only one inning this spring, suffering from a sore shoulder and the flu.

Orioles 9, Braves 4

The Orioles, looking for pitching, got five scoreless innings from rookie Jose Mesa, acquired in a trade with Toronto last summer. Continuing his bid to make the club's starting rotation, Mesa allowed four hits, walked none and struck out one.

Newly acquired third baseman Rick Schu went 3-for-4 with two RBIs and scored two runs. Larry Sheets was 2-for-4 with two doubles and one RBI. Cal Ripken Jr. and brother Billy Ripken each had two hits.

Expos 4, Yankees 2

Mike Fitzgerald's two-run single highlighted a four-run seventh inning that carried the Expos past New York. Randy St. Claire pitched two innings of perfect relief to get the victory.

New York went ahead in the sixth inning when Gary Ward hit a two-run single off Bob Sebra.

But Montreal rallied off Rick Rhoden, who had pitched scorless ball over six. Andres Gallaraga doubled home one run before Fitzgerald singled in two more. The final run scored on catcher Rick Cerone's throwing error.

Reds 8, Pirates 7

Jeff Treadway's single off Jim Gott scored Angel Salazar in the bottom of the ninth inning to give the Reds their victory. The Pirates had overcome a 7-3 deficit to tie the score with a pair of runs in the seventh off Bill Landrum and two in the eighth off Rob Murphy.

Jose Rijo started for Cincinnati and allowed his only run in 13 spring training innings when Darnell Coles doubled in the second. Barry Larkin had a three-run homer in the bottom of the second off Mike Dunne, who left after the third inning because of stiffness in his left side.

Blue Jays 3, White Sox 2

Glenallen Hill drove home the tying run with a double and Rick Leach knocked in the winning run with a sacrifice fly in the seventh inning to lead the Blue Jays. David Wells picked up the victory with two innings of one-hit relief after starter John Cerutti allowed only one hit over six innings but gave up both Chicago runs.

Jerry Reuss went six innings for Chicago, allowing four hits and one run.

Bodine Eases To NASCAR Victory

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Geoff Bodine overcame mid-race handling problems and came back to win Saturday's Country Squire Homes 200 Busch Grand National stock car race.

Bodine, who started from the pole in the 147-lap, 200-mile event at Darlington International Raceway, led the last nine laps in his Chevrolet Nova.

Dale Jarrett, who was driving with only about one hour of sleep after becoming a father late Friday night, found himself in the lead during the last of five caution periods.

The green flag came out on lap 133 and Jarrett moved off to about a 20-car-length lead over second-place Rob Moroso, who ran near the front throughout the race.

But Bodine and Harry Gant both came back strong, with Bodine taking over the lead from Jarrett on lap 139 and Gant moving into second place one lap later.

That's the way they finished, with Gant getting no closer than the two car lengths he trailed by at the end.

"We had trouble all day," said Bodine, one of 13 NASCAR Winston Cup drivers in the race. "The car just wasn't handling. But the crew did a great job. They made a little spoiler adjustment, a little chassis adjustment, a little tire adjustment and we really had it right at the end."

Bodine, who won $11,570, averaged 115.514 mph in winning his second Grand National event on the 1.366-mile Darlington oval. He previously won this race in 1982.

There were eight lead changes among six drivers in the race, with Gant leading twice for 62 laps and Morgan Shepherd, who dropped out due to a mechanical problem, leading 37 laps just past the midway point.

Bodine led twice for a total of 17 laps.

The caution flag was out for 34 laps. There were no serious accidents and no injuries reported.

Ku's Opening Birdie Keys Move To First

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — South Korea's Ok-Hee Ku took the lead with a birdie on the first hole and went on to shoot a 3-under-par 70 for a two-stroke lead after Saturday's third round of the $350,000 LPGA Turquoise Classic.

Ku, who has won 16 tournaments in Korea but is seeking her first LPGA Tour victory, was at 10-under 209 through 54 holes.

Rosie Jones and second-round co-leaders Amy Alcott and Colleen Walker were next at 211. Jones shot a 70 Saturday on the 6,404-yard Moon Valley Golf Course while Alcott and Walker carded ever-par 73s.

Japan's Ayako Okamoto, second on this year's earnings list at $60,750, was three shots back after shooting a 70 for a 212 total.

Juli Inkster moved into contention with an eagle and birdie en route to a 3-under 70 and joined Danielle Ammacapane and Dotti Mochrie at 213. Ammacapane and Mochrie both shot 71s.

English rookie Laurie Davies, last week's Tucson Open winner, had a 70 and was six shots back at 215.

Ku, 31, who dominated the 1985 Korean and Japanese LPGA Tours before joining the American circuit, took the lead on the opening hole when she made birdie and Alcott and Walker took bogeys.

Ku then maintained at least a share of the lead, despite several challenges.

She hit a 9-iron within two feet for a birdie on the seventh hole, but then put her second shot in a bunker on No. 9 and missed a 5-foot, par-saving putt for her only bogey.

Ku birdied the 10th, knocking in a 12-footer that gave her a two-stroke lead, and then parred out with putts from 4 and 6 feet on the 16th and 17th holes.

Alcott pulled to within one after birdies on the 14th and 15th holes, but then bogeyed the 16th.

Walker birdied the fourth hole to tie Ku but never got closer than two strokes back again.

Jones moved into contention and within one stroke of the lead when she birdied three of the first four holes, but a bogey on No. 14 dropped her two back.

Okamoto inched to within one with birdies on Nos. 7 and 8 and Inkster closed to within two following her eagle and birdie on the 13th and 14th holes only to bogey the 16th and 18th.

Scores Saturday after the third round of the $350,000 LPGA Turquoise Classic on the 6,404-yard, par-73 Moon Valley Country Club Course:

Daniels, McPherson Pace Rose

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

Rose pitcher Dallas McPherson may have been sick earlier in the week, but he was showing no ill effects Friday against Greene Central.

McPherson came on in the second frame and pitched five scoreless innings, allowing only one hit the rest of the way as the Rampants handed defending 2-A state champion Greene Central a 4-2 loss in a non-conference baseball game Friday.

McPherson was aided by the timely bat of David Daniels, who blasted a two-run homer in the top of the seventh inning that broke a 2-2 tie and put the Rampants ahead.

Rose coach Ronald Vincent started Paul Powers in an effort to give McPherson as much rest as possible but the junior struggled, allowing both of the Rams runs during the first inning.

McPherson came on with the Rams ahead 2-1 and the bases loaded with two outs in the top of the second. He threw three pitches and struck out Anthony Jones for the final out of the inning.

From there, McPherson retired 12 straight batters until the final inning. He gave up a leadoff single to Walt McKeel but then recorded three straight strikeouts to garner the win.

"Dallas threw the ball really well," Vincent said. "Paul is not that bad a pitcher. He got five or six outs, exactly what we wanted him to. Dallas had been sick, but (he) threw strikes and moved the ball up and down.

"He felt like he had pretty good stuff after the sixth inning. He felt like he had good stuff at the end."

But it would have all been for nothing had it not been for Daniels' homer.

Axel Smith had opened the seventh with a one-out single off of Chris Hooks. Daniels then came on and nailed a shot right over the left field fence to break the tie and put the Rampants ahead 4-2.

"We intended to play for one run," Vincent said. "Bunting was a really being considered, but I figured Dave could do something."

And with McPherson's pitching performance, it would be all the runs that Rose would need.

"He probably had his best two innings the last two," said Greene Central coach Jim Fulghum. "I thought our two kids pitched a good ball game. It was just (that) one pitch."

The game was played in a steady wind and quickly developed into a defensive struggle.

Rose drew first blood when Tim Moore reached on an error by shortstop T.J. Johnson. Moore then stole second.

Axel Smith followed with a single, but was then thrown out trying to steal second. But on the pickoff throw from catcher Tommy Eason, Moore raced home with the first run of the game.

The Rams, though, came back for two runs of their own in the bottom of the opening inning.

Johnson walked to open up for Greene Central and went to second on a wild pitch. Jones followed with a reach on a passed ball which allowed Johnson to go to third.

Eason hit into a double play, but Jones scored on the play to put the Rams ahead, 2-1.

Rose tied the game up at 2-2 with a run in the third.

David Leisten started things off with a by reaching on a error and went to third on ground out by Moore. Leisten then scored on a sacrifice fly by Smith to knot the score at 2-2.

Greene Central then had a chance to take control of the game in the bottom of the first.

McKeel opened up by reaching on an error, but then went out when Allen Vandiford hit into a double play. Jeff Tyson, Cedric Collins and Johnson followed that with consecutive singles to load the bases.

But Vincent went with the switch then, pulling Powers and putting in McPherson, who struck out Jones to end the inning.

"That was real big," Vincent said. "I knew Dallas would be tough on their lefthander. That's why I made the change when I did."

It was the first win of the season for McPherson, who allowed only one hit while striking out seven and walking none.

But Hooker was no slouch for the Rams. He came on in the fourth and allowed five hits the rest of the way while striking out two.

"Really the difference in the ballgame was the wind got still for a few minutes and Daniels hit that shot," Fulghum said.

Heath Clark and Smith had two hits apiece to lead the Rampants

Wayne Christian Sweeps Knights

GOLDSBORO — Greenville Christian Academy lost a pair of baseball games to Wayne Christian Academy as the Knights opened the 1988 season Friday.

Wayne captured the first game 8-1, then came back to take an 18-8 win in the second contest.

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

Despite recent slumps by Indiana and Cleveland, the NBA's Central Division still has a good chance to be the second division in league history in which every team makes the playoffs.

"I felt in the preseason, after watching what happened last year and seeing some players return, that this division would be very tough," Atlanta Coach Mike Fratello said. "What is happening wasn't unexpected at all."

Milwaukee Coach Del Harris said he is surprised that every team in a division has been able to play well.

"I assumed, just out of mathematics, that one team would disappear because of injuries or just not keeping the pace," Harris said. "But it looks like it's not going to be that way."

The Atlantic Division in 1983-84 is the only one in which every team made the playoffs, with Washington gaining the last spot with a 35-47 record.

Since the four-division alignment began in 1970-71, the only divisions in which every team finished over .500 are the 1982-83 Atlantic Division, the 1970-71 Midwest Division and the 1977-78 Pacific Division.

The 1982-83 Atlantic Division was the strongest ever, finishing 102 games over .500.

Philadelphia was 65-17, Boston was 56-26, New Jersey 49-33, New York 44-38 and Washington 42-40 that season. The Bullets, however, failed to make the playoffs.

The 1970-71 Midwest Division, with four teams, was 92 games over .500 and the 1977-78 Pacific Division was 74 games over .500.

The most competitive division ever was the Midwest in 1974-75. The difference between the top and bottom teams was nine games, with first-place Chicago finishing 47-35 and last-place Milwaukee 38-44.

At midseason this year, only six games separated Detroit and Cleveland in the Central Division, but the gap has widened to as much as 15½ games as the Pistons streaked and the Cavaliers slumped.

STEPPING UP THE PACE...

Pirate Club '88 Fund Drive

PITT/GREENVILLE • MARCH 16 - APRIL 23

As the E.C.U. Educational Foundation (Pirate Club) "Steps Up the Pace" in 1988, we continue our goal of excellence in the areas of academics and athletics and the total development of the student-athlete.

From the Desk of Tom Pauling
Volunteer Chairman

The Pitt-Greenville Pirate Club has set its fund-raising goal at $380,000 in 1988. The 1988 Pitt-Greenville Fund Drive officially began on March 16 and heading this year's drive is Tom Pauling.

The outlook for the year 1988 is very positive and brings with it the anticipation of a very successful athletic year for East Carolina University. We have been striving for excellence, going after the best, and driving toward our goal. Our goal has been a solid blend of academic and athletic excellence. We have gone after the best student athletes to represent our university and have scheduled quality opponents to bring out the best of the best. Leading this drive toward excellence is our own chancellor Dr. Richard Eakin and our new Athletic Director Dave Hart, Jr. The East Carolina University Educational Foundation/Pirate Club is very fortunate to have an energetic Executive Secretary in Charlie Carr who brings with him a wealth of talent and ideas for greater success.

The purpose of the Pirate Club is to provide scholarships to deserving young athletes who are seeking a quality college education while participating in intercollegiate athletics. As supporters of the sports programs, it is up to you and me to do the very best that we can to provide this scholarship opportunity. Each of you plays a vital role in helping the athletic program to be successful. Our ultimate goal is to completely fund athletic scholarships through your tax deductible contributions to the Pirate Club. We all must do our part and encourage greater participation from other people to support the Pirate Club and ECU. Our fund drive goal for 1988 is $1.5 million. The financial responsibility of operating a quality athletic program rests with us all.

We are fortunate to have some of the finest coaches available and they deserve the maximum support we can give them. As chairman of the 1988 Pitt County Pirate Club Fund Drive, I encourage each of you to Step Up The Pace and help East Carolina University and the Pirate Club meet our goals for excellence.

Sincerely yours,
Thomas W. Pauling, Chairman
Pitt/Greenville Pirate Club Fund Drive

Pirate CLUB™

What Is It?
The ECU EDUCATIONAL FOUNDATION, INC., better known as the PIRATE CLUB, is the official support group for ECU athletics through tax deductible contributions.

What Is Its Purpose?
The PIRATE CLUB's primary purpose is to provide SCHOLARSHIP AID to deserving young men and women who are seeking a quality college education while participating in one of 14 varsity sports at East Carolina University.

Who Can Belong?
Anyone! The PIRATE CLUB consists of individuals and businesses who support ECU athletics through tax deductible contributions.

What Are The Benefits?
The primary benefit is knowledge that your support will help ECU continue to develop a quality major college athletic program. Athletics provides the avenue for maximum visibility for the University, and that's a big responsibility. Your contribution assists in lightening the financial obligation required to operate a class program. There are also tangible benefits to PIRATE CLUB members ranging from membership decals to priority seating for football and basketball tickets. To find out more about benefits contact the PIRATE CLUB.

How Can You Join?
By contacting one of the people listed on this page or by contacting the PIRATE CLUB office at 757-6178 and saying YES to making a tax deductible contribution to the ECU Educational Foundation to provide scholarship aid for ECU student-athletes.

Arizona, Carolina In West Finals

SEATTLE (AP) — Having easily disposed of Iowa in the NCAA West Regional semifinals, second-ranked Arizona now finds itself staring directly at North Carolina's version of the Twin Towers — J.R. Reid and Scott Williams.

"I think the board work is going to be the key," Arizona Coach Lute Olson said Friday night after watching his team beat the Hawkeyes 99-79. "I think it'll get down to who controls the boards."

In the other West Regional semifinal game, seventh-ranked North Carolina defeated Michigan 78-69 to earn a trip to the final eight.

The prospect of playing the perennial Atlantic Coast Conference powerhouse from Chapel Hill in the Kingdome on Sunday doesn't bother the Wildcats, the winningest team in the country at 34-2.

"We've played great programs all year long," said Sean Elliott, who led Arizona with 25 points. "We're going to be confident we can beat them (North Carolina)."

"I think our entire team respects North Carolina, but it doesn't change our attitude," Olson said. "We have great respect for them, but we have no fear. If you're going to go into a game, you're going to have to go in with confidence."

In the 6-foot-10 Williams, North Carolina's sophomore center, and the 6-9 Reid, a sophomore who was one of three All-Americans in this regional, the Wildcats are presented with a problem they didn't have to face in Iowa.

Williams scored 19 points and Reid 18 as Arizona ended 10th-ranked Michigan's season at 26-8. Reid pulled down a game-high eight rebounds and Williams had seven.

"We're going to have to be 60 percent better on the backboards than we were tonight," said Olson, who starts 6-7 Tom Tolbert at center. Arizona outrebounded Iowa 32-30.

Arizona led only 38-34 at halftime, but jumped into a 62-43 lead in the first 6½ minutes of the second half. The Wildcats' biggest lead in the second half was 26 points. Elliott had 17 of his points in the second half.

Arizona is getting better as the season nears its end, Olson believes. The Wildcats are supporting that contention on the court.

They've blown out three NCAA tournament opponents, beating Cornell by 40 points and Seton Hall by 29.

"That has been the mark of this team all year long," said Olson. "They're never satisfied. They never look back at what's happened to them."

Against Iowa's relentless full-court pressure, Arizona committed nine turnovers in the first half, but only four in the second. Starting guards Kerr and Craig McMillan combined for a dozen assists and weren't charged with any turnovers.

"That gives you an idea of why this club is a good club," Olson said.

In his second year at Iowa City, Davis was at Stanford when Olson arrived in Tucson five years ago to take over a 4-24 program.

"They weren't put together overnight," Davis said of Arizona. "I think the best dimension they have is their experience."

Iowa, ranked 17th, ended its season at 24-10, the last of three Big Ten Conference teams to be eliminated from the tournament this season. In addition to Michigan, Big Ten champion Purdue lost in the Midwest Regional.

The North Carolina-Michigan game was another tournament disappointment for the Wolverines' Bill Frieder, who has been criticized in the past for his bench coaching. Michigan lost in the second round of the tournament the past three years.

"I just think Carolina played very well," Frieder said. "Their inside game really hurt us. We just couldn't get over the hump in the second half."

Gary Grant, Michigan's All-American senior guard, who probably will be a first-round NBA draft choice, tied a career low with just seven points.

"I feel bad for my team," said Grant, who entered the game averaging 21.5 points. "I wanted to go farther. I've just got to go on and build my life now."

"I just tried to keep between him and the basket," said Jeff Lebo of North Carolina, who defended Grant well despite a sore ankle.

Grant was only 3-for-10 from the field, including 1-for-5 from 3-point range.

Rumeal Robinson, a talented sophomore guard, kept Michigan in the game with a career-high 29 points.

North Carolina Coach Dean Smith said he had no preference about playing either Arizona or Iowa — before the game started. "I haven't even thought about it," he said.

Darlington An Enigma

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Darlington International Raceway is more than a racetrack — it's an enigma. Here, the track is as much an opponent as the other drivers.

"Every track has peculiarities, but this one is more peculiar than any of the rest," said Benny Parsons, a former Winston Cup champion and a former winner on the egg-shaped 1.366-mile oval.

The Darlington track, which opened in 1950, is the oldest superspeedway in NASCAR stock car racing, and it is the most mysterious, the most unique and, by most accounts, the most difficult.

Darrell Waltrip, a three-time Winston Cup champion and four-time Darlington winner says everyone has respect for, and even fear of, this track.

"You know it's going to get you," he said. "You just hope it's not this time."

Waltrip will be looking for his first victory of the season Sunday when the TranSouth 500 takes the green flag at 1 p.m. EST. The event will be televised live by ESPN.

"They say when you win here, you've proven yourself, and I can't think of another place where I'd rather win than Darlington because it's the granddaddy of all superspeedways," Waltrip said.

Current season points leader Neil Bonnett has won two of four Winston Cup events this year. Sunday, he will start 26th in the 41-car field because of mechanical problems on the opening day of qualifying.

"We gave ourselves quite a handicap," he said with a shake of his head. "Passing is next to impossible here. It's a one-lane track, and a real hard one, at that.

"No doubt about it, it's the toughest place there is to race," added the 1983 Southern 500 winner.

The lineup for Sunday's TranSouth 500 NASCAR stock car race, with hometown, type of car and qualifying speed in mph:

1. Ken Schrader, Concord, N.C., Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS, 162.657 (breaks track qualifying record of 159.157 set in April, 1986 by Geoff Bodine).
2. Dale Earnhardt, Doolie, N.C., Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS, 160.774.

Vikings Top Chargers By 9-7

By TIM CHANDLER
Reflector Sports Writer

LITTLEFIELD — D.H. Conley made it two-for-two against Ayden-Grifton this season by taking a 9-7 victory over the Chargers in high school baseball action Friday.

The Vikings, who improve to 2-2 for the season, opened the game with blazing bats as they built a 6-0 lead by the end of the first two innings. Conley's surge in the first two innings was aided somewhat by a trio of players (Brian Bullock, Bronswell Patrick and Sherwood Wilder) who made their first appearance of the season after being forced to miss the first three games because of the Vikings' success in the state basketball playoffs.

"We hadn't been hitting the ball well before today," Conley coach Alan Wilson said. "Getting those three guys into the lineup could be the key to our season."

Bullock led the way in hitting for the game for the Vikings with a pair of singles and a double, while Patrick and Wilder each contributed a home run and a single.

Conley scored two runs in the opening inning to seize the lead for good in the contest. William Crandall reached base after being hit by a Gene Stancil pitch, and Bullock connected for an RBI triple to make the score 1-0. Wilder then belted a run-scoring single later in the inning for the 2-0 lead.

The Vikings added fuel to the fire in the second frame by adding four more runs and chasing Stancil from the mound. Catcher Robbie Nichols opened the inning up with a single. Crandall then reached base once again by taking a lick from a Stancil pitch. Bullock then delivered a single to centerfield to score Nichols. Patrick closed out the inning by clearing the bases with a towering roundtripper over the leftfield fence.

The Chargers, who fall to 0-4 for the year, made up three runs in the third inning to close within 6-3. Ty Little got things started in the inning with a double to left. A Viking error then allowed Little to score and put Gary Eubanks on base. Ronnell Peterson powered a two-run homer to round out the scoring in the inning.

After Conley had added a run to its lead in the top of the fourth, Ayden-Grifton pulled back within three, 7-4, when Little belted an RBI single to center to score Wayne Peacock, who had reached base on a Conley error.

Neither team scored in the fifth or sixth innings as Conley pitcher Travis Clemons and the Chargers' Little began to shut down the bats.

Conley did manage to add some insurance runs in the top of the seventh to stretch its lead to 9-4. Wilder whacked a two-run home run to give the Vikings what proved to be the winning margin in the contest.

"I think the thing that did us in today were the home runs by Bronswell (Patrick) and Sherwood (Wilder)," Ayden-Grifton coach Joe Lawrence said.

The Chargers bats came to life in the bottom half of the inning as Peacock, Little and Stephen Tucker loaded the bases with a trio of singles. Clemons then walked across the first run of the inning by issuing a walk to Eubanks. A Peterson single to center scored Little and Tucker and put runners on second and third with no outs.

Freshman Hal Conger was then brought in by Wilson to try and deter the Charger rally. Conger did that by striking out the first two batters he faced and then getting the third to hit a fly ball to leave two runners stranded in scoring position.

"That was a crucial time for him (Conger) to hold them (Ayden-Grifton)," Wilson said. "He showed a lot of poise by going out there and striking out his first two batters."

"We have had the problem all season of getting men on base and not scoring at crucial times," Lawrence said referring to the seventh inning.

Ayden-Grifton will try to regroup in time for a Wednesday afternoon matchup against Havelock at home. Following a scheduled game against Kinston on Saturday, Conley will travel to Farmville Central for a contest Tuesday.

Extension of Striped Bass Season Opposed

Members of the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission are supporting development of a plan with the N.C. Division of Marine Fisheries to restore the state's declining bass population.

In a resolution adopted recently, the Commission opposed any extension of the commercial fishing season for striped bass in the Albemarle Sound beyond March 31. Last year, the commercial fishing season for striped bass was extended by proclamation through the month of April, which resulted in significant mortalities of mature striped bass entering the river on their spawning run.

The striped bass lives most of its life in coastal waters, which are under the regulatory jurisdiction of the Marine Fisheries Commission. But striped bass spawn in inland waters, which are under the jurisdiction of the Wildlife Resources Commission. The primary spawning grounds are located on the Roanoke River below Weldon.

Dams on the Roanoke River create unnatural water flow, which may be limiting the survival and hatching of the eggs. Unusually high or low water flows in the Roanoke River disrupt the availability of micro-organisms upon which newly-hatched striped bass feed. Inadequate food supply during this critical, early stage of life causes high mortality and prevents successful recruitment of young striped bass into the population.

"Considerable evidence has been amassed that shows commercial fishing to be a major source of mortality on young and adult striped bass in the Albemarle Sound," the Commission's resolution reads. "The Wildlife Resources Commission is committed to the conservation of the Albemarle Sound striped bass population as evidenced by the adoption of regulations to severely limit harvest from this population in inland waters."

In December 1986, the Commission signed a cooperative agreement with the N.C. Division of Marine Fisheries and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service that included a provision for development of a joint management plan for striped bass in North Carolina.

The Commission is asking for participation by the Division of Marine Fisheries to proceed immediately with development and implementation of this management plan.

Ten-Day Doe Season Planned for Pitt County

The N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission recently adopted new regulations for the 1988-89 hunting, fishing and trapping seasons, including a 10-day doe season for Pitt County.

The Commission added Pitt and surrounding counties to the 10-day either-sex deer season that will begin Nov. 30 and run though Dec. 10. Other counties where extensions of the doe season were made include Beaufort, Craven, Lenoir and Martin.

A 29-day either-sex deer season was established from Nov. 30 to Jan. 2 in Bertie, Chowan, Gates, Halifax, Hertford, Northampton and Pender counties.

Other changes include:

- A proposal to make it illegal to alter or change the appearance of game fish while fishing.
- Eliminating the diameter restriction of cast nets when used for taking bait fish.
- Establishing a daily creel limit of 200 bait fish when such fish are taken under regulations allowing the collection of bait fish.
- Reducing the bear season in Hyde and Tyrell counties to three days, Nov. 14-16. Gates County was added to the three-day season.
- A one-week bear season will be open in the following areas from Nov. 14-19: Beaufort County, Bertie County and Washington County.
- Permitting the harvest of one antlerless deer during the muzzle-loading season by allowing the antlerless-only tag to be used during the established muzzle-loading Eastern and Central seasons in areas that have a gun either-sex deer season.
- Restricting hunting on all posted waterfowl impoundments on game lands to the use of non-toxic shot.
- Prohibiting the setting of decoys before 4 a.m. and require the removal of decoys before 3 p.m. each day on managed waterfowl impoundments.
- Establishing a four-day gun either-sex deer season from Nov. 30 to Dec. 3 on the Angola Bay, Big Pocosin, Croatan, Goose Creek, Hofmann Forest and Tuscarora game lands.
- Establishing a permit system to allow managed hunting and trapping opportunity on the Roanoke River wetlands.

Kansas Will Qualify At Least 1 Team

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — A Big Eight team from Kansas will be going to the Final Four in Kansas City. That's not a bold prediction, just a fact.

Kansas and Kansas State will meet for the fourth time this season Sunday in the Midwest Regional final with the winner advancing to the NCAA Tournament semifinals that are going to be played in Kemper Arena, the site of the Big Eight tournament.

"I'm awfully proud of the basketball played in the Big Eight," Kansas State Coach Lon Kruger said Friday night after his 20th-ranked Wildcats beat top-seeded and third-ranked Purdue 73-70. "The competition in the league in front of soldout crowds prepares you pretty well for anything."

He must be right about that because Oklahoma, the top seed in the Southeast, is still alive as well in the round of eight.

But how about a fourth meeting with Kansas?

The Jayhawks, who lost two of three games this season against Kansas State, advanced to the round of eight with a 77-64 victory over Vanderbilt as All-America Danny Manning scored 38 points.

"It's a great rivalry as good as any," Kruger said of the Kansas-Kansas State history which dates to 1907 and has Kansas leading 129-84. "The regional final takes precedence over the fact that it's a rivalry."

The way Kansas State, 25-8, looked early against Purdue, 29-4, another meeting with Kansas seemed out of the question.

The Boilermakers scored the game's first 10 points and Kruger was forced to call a timeout with just 2:01 gone in the game.

"At that point it would have been easy for them to quit and say they beat us by 29 in December but they didn't," Kruger said referring to Purdue's 101-72 victory on Dec. 20. "The charge from down 10-0 to within one did something for our confidence and in the second half they went out and did it." The Wildcats erased a nine-point halftime deficit with a 12-1 run to start the second half.

"You could see it in their eyes. They were beginning to doubt themselves," Purdue Coach Gene Keady said of his Big Ten champions during the Kansas State spurt. "Bad things just kept happening and we couldn't get the enthusiasm back."

The Boilermakers never got the lead back, either, tying the game for the last time at 54-54 on a jumper by Troy Lewis with 11:45 to play.

Kansas State went on a 12-3 run over the next 4:56 to take its biggest lead as Mitch Richmond, who finished with 27 points and 11 rebounds, scored eight points including two 3-pointers.

Purdue got within 69-67 with 1:29 left on a 3-pointer by Everette Stephens who finished with 20. But the Wildcats made four free throws in the final 27 seconds and the Boilermakers turned the ball over twice in that time.

Kansas, 24-11, jumped on Vanderbilt, 20-11, early as Manning outscored the Commodores 21-20 in the game's opening 17 minutes.

Manning finished the first half with 25 points and Vanderbilt never got closer than nine the rest of the way.

"He was phenomonal," Kansas Coach Larry Brown said of Manning. "We won the game defensively in the first five minutes. It's tough to come back when you have to shoot from the outside."

Vanderbilt made just eight of 20 3-point attempts and was outrebounded by the Jayhawks 36-26.

"They played good pressure man-to-man defense and kept us far away from the basket," said Vanderbilt's 7-foot center Will Perdue, who finished with 16 points and eight rebounds before fouling out with 1:27 to play. "It was a combination of Kansas' defense and our slow start offensively."

Kruger knows what to expect from Manning who averaged 19 points and nine rebounds in the three gams against the Wildcats.

"He's outstanding and you can't stop him," Kruger said of the two-time All-American.

Connecticut Is Erasing Regular Season Memories

STORRS, Conn. (AP) — Now that the University of Connecticut, the last-place finisher in the Big East Conference, is among the Final Four of the National Invitation Tournament, its regular season is all but forgotten.

The Huskies have won three straight games in the NIT and five of six since the end of the Big East season. The key, they say, is playing each game as if it is a new season in itself.

"We're playing each game as if 40 minutes are left in our season," Phil Gamble said after scoring 18 points Friday night to spark the Huskies to a 72-61 quarterfinal victory over Virginia Commonwealth. "We've been confident since our win in West Virginia."

Connecticut has beaten West Virginia, Louisiana Tech and Virginia Commonwealth to lift its record to 18-14 and advance to the semifinals of the NIT at New York's Madison Square Garden on Tuesday.

Also advancing to the semifinals were Colorado State, a 64-49 winner over Arkansas State, and Ohio State, which eliminated New Mexico 68-65. The last quarterfinal game was today when Boston College took its 17-13 record to Middle Tennessee State to meet the 23-10 Blue Raiders.

"We've been a confident team of late and we want to carry that to New York with us," said Gamble. "Getting to the NIT Final Four is a great feeling."

UConn needed a 14-5 spurt to break past VCU while outscoring the Rams 19-10 over the final 6:53 to advance. The Huskies took the lead for good at 53-51 on two foul shots by Steve Pikiell.

"We were able to get points when we needed them, especially from the (foul) line," Connecticut Coach Jim Calhoun said. "Once we got ahead, we were able to spread our offense."

Gamble, who made seven foul shots in the closing minutes, got help from Cliff Robinson, who scored 17 points, and Jeff King, who made six of seven field goals for 14. The Huskies' balanced scoring, which also included eight assists from Tate George, offset a game-high 25 points by VCU's Phil Stinnie.

Chris Cheeks added 10 points for the Rams, who finished 23-12.

"UConn outplayed us and we missed some free throws at the end," said Coach Mike Pollio, whose team had reached the quarterfinals by ousting Marshall and defending NIT champion Southern Mississippi. "They were able to execute down the stretch and we didn't."

The game was played at the Huskies' tiny campus fieldhouse before 4,801 partisan fans, but Pollio said the crowd wasn't a factor in the game.

"The crowd had nothing to do with the outcome," he said. "UConn simply outplayed us and we missed some free throws at the end. They executed and we didn't."

Ohio St. 68, New Mexico 65

Jay Burson scored 20 points and Ohio State, 19-12, made 13 of 16 free throws in the final 14 minutes to avenge a defeat last December in the Lobo Invitational tournament.

The Buckeyes made only two field goals in the final 14 minutes, but pulled off the victory with accuracy from the line, where they were 22 of 26 for the night.

"We've done that before," Ohio State Coach Gary Williams said. "We're not that good of an outside shooting team. The percentage for us is to get to the line, where we shot 74 percent for the year."

Jimmy Rogers led host New Mexico, 22-14, with 18 points. Charlie Thomas added 17 points and Hunter Greene 14.

Colorado St. 64, Arkansas St. 49

Pat Durham scored 26 points and Colorado State used a relentless half-court pressure defense that subdued Arkansas State.

A native of Pitt County, Warren is a graduate of East Carolina University with a degree in political science. He and his wife, the former Cindy Boyd of Bath, attend the First Baptist Church of Farmville.

CCIM Designation

Mike Aldridge, a Greenville Realtor, has been awarded the "Certified Commercial-Investment Member" designation by the Commerical-Investment Real Estate Council of the Realtors National Marketing Institute, affiliated with the National Association of Realtors.

The award was conferred during the Council and Marketing Institute meetings held in conjunction with the 1987 National Association of Realtors annual convention in Honolulu.

The designation is awarded to commercial-investment real estate specialists who draw from market experience and advanced education to help clients analyze and meet investment objectives.

Aldridge, a partner with Aldridge & Southerland Realtors in Greenville, is a member of the Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors and the North Carolina Association of Realtors.

Leaders Conference

Barry C. Chesson, local district manager of the Equitable Financial Companies, attended Equitable's national leaders conference recently in New York City.

Qualification for the session was based on sales achieved during 1987.

City Executive

Edward B. McConnell, president of Barclays Bank of North Carolina, announced that Don Brinkley has been promoted to city executive for the bank with responsibility for commercial lending and business development in the New Bern area.

Brinkley has been in banking for eight years, including two years with Barclays Bank in Greenville. A native of Ahoskie, he is a graduate of East Carolina University. Brinkley and his wife, Debra, have two sons.

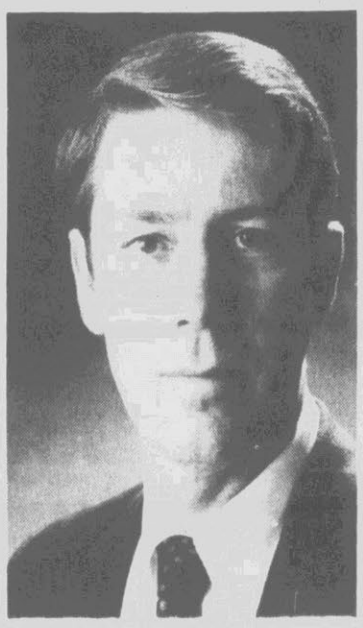
Barclays Bank is a subsidiary of BarclaysAmericanCorp. of Charlotte, a financial services company which is a subsidiary of Barclays Bank PLC.

New President-CEO

The board of directors of Home Savings and Loan Association, Appleton, Wis., announced the election of Greenville native P. Scott Carson as president and chief operating officer.

The company said that Carson, 44, will assume his new responsibilities immediately and is in the process of moving to the Fox River Valley in Wisconsin from Greenville.

Carson had served for three years as senior vice president of Barclays Bank of North Carolina in Greenville. Before joining Barclays, Carson had held various managerial positions with AmeriFirst Federal in Florida for 13 years, culminating with his appointment as executive responsible for converting 17 company offices to commercial banking operations.



P. SCOTT CARSON

Cox holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Florida and a master's degree from Florida International University. He and his wife, Caroline, have three children, Christopher, Jonathan and Amy.

Dealer Council

Claire Skinner, president of Coachmen RV Co., announced the appointment of A.L. Crisp of Crisp RV Center Inc., Washington, N.C., to the Coachmen Dealer Council.

During his two-year term, Skinner will represent the Georgia Division of the company, which includes Tennessee, Mississippi and Alabama.

The Dealer Council advises management of Coachmen RV in various areas of business, including product design and floor plans, pricing, sales promotion and retail training.

Annual Convention

Lory Johnston of Century 21 Bass Realty in Greenville joined over 9,000 Century 21 brokers and sales associates at the annual Century 21 international convention recently in Las Vegas, Nev.

Members from all over the United States, Canada, Japan, France and the United Kingdom attended the event, which followed the theme, "We Set The Standard."

Participants were updated on new and ongoing programs such as automation systems, client followup, relocation capabilities for both military and corporate clients, and various sales and management training systems.

Ms. Johnston also attended various educational and motivational sessions designed to assist brokers in providing services to their real estate clients.

New VP Is Named

Bill Erwin, president of CECO Contractors Inc., announced that Mitchell Meeks has joined the Greenville firm as vice president.

Erwin said that Meeks will be responsible for all commercial building accounts for the company, including estimating and project management.

The new vice president has had five years experience in the construction industry.

Meeks is married to the former Phyllis Sutton of Greenville and they have one child.

Sales Associates

Lida Gaddis, owner of Heartside Realty, announced that two new employees have joined the staff of the Greenville firm.

Ms. Gaddis said that Carolyn Henson is a new sales associate with the business, specializing in the residential market. She moved to Greenville in 1986 from Wilmington and resides in the Grimesland area with her husband, Johnny, and four children.

Ken Edwards is a new broker with the firm. He graduated from Grifton High School and East Carolina University with a degree in marketing. Edwards lives in the Ayden-Grifton area with his wife, Sue, and his children, James and Jessica.

Raleigh Seminar

Facility Opens

Trade Oil Co. of Greenville announced the grand opening of Trade Mart No. 9 on N.C. 258 South in Kinston.

Company spokesman Walter Williams said the new facility is a combination convenience, hot food and fuel center with a solariam.

Trade Oil, formed in 1984, has home offices at 210 W. 10th St. in Greenville. The company has nine stores with 170 full- and part-time employees.

Record Figures

Shoney's Inc. reported that it achieved record revenues, net income and earnings per share for the 16-week period ended Feb. 14.

The Nashville, Tenn., based company said that the first quarter of fiscal 1988 marked the 115th consecutive quarter in which revenues and pretax operating income exceeded the same quarter of the previous year.

Revenues increased 9 percent for the first quarter of 1988 from $194,314,839 to $210,990,054. Net income increased 16 percent from $11,363,744 to $13,141,260, while earnings per share were up 16 percent from 31 cents in 1987 to 36 cents in 1988.

Shoney's has a restaurant on Memorial Drive in Greenville.

Results Declined

Interstate Securities Inc. of Charlotte said that its operating results for the first quarter of fiscal 1988 reflect the market crash of October and its aftermath.

The company said that for the three months ended Dec. 31, it reported a net loss of $999,779, or 20 cents per share, on revenues of $29.4 million. The results, according to Interstate, compared with revenues of $25.5 million and earnings of 16 cents per share in the same quarter a year earlier.

Interstate has an office on Evans Mall in Greenville.

Citations Presented

The Life Insurance Co. of Virginia announced that Pittman and Associates of Eastern Carolina has been recognized with two President's Citations for agency management in 1987.

The company said that Harold Pittman earned the President's Citation for overall achievement as "Agency Manager of Eastern Carolina," while Francis Sullivan, a Pittman and Associates unit manager in Raleigh/Durham, was presented a citation for the achievements of his sales unit in 1987.

As citation recipients, Pittman, Sullivan and their spouses will attend the President's Honor Councicl meeting in Acapulco in April with the company's top representatives and senior officers.

Pittman joined Life of Virginia in 1968 and assumed management of the Eastern Carolina agency in 1976.

Sullivan joined the company in 1954 and became a unit manager in Raleigh/Durham in 1985.

Position Filled

Chuck Littleton has been named vice president-manager of Information Systems for Security Federal in Columbia, S.C.

The company said Little's responsibilities include the management of the Personal Computer Center and the implementation of hardware and software.

Littleton is a graduate of J.H. Rose High School and he received a degree in electronic data processing from Pitt Community College. He is the son of Walter and Gertrue Littleton of Greenville.

January Building Activity Dipped

Building activity in North Carolina's 45 largest cities for January 1988 skidded to a six-year low in the total number of units authorized for construction and a four-year low in the value of those units, according to State Labor Commissioner John C. Brooks.

North Carolina's major cities recorded 1,170 building permits with an estimated value of $120,762,860 in January, Brooks said.

"That's the fewest number of units in one month since 1,365 were recorded in January 1982. The previous low value month was February 1984 when permits with an estimated value of $114,581,749 were recorded," Brooks said.

The January 1988 permits were 40.1 percent below the 2,857 permits recorded in January 1987, and 34.4 percent below the 2,608 units recorded in December 1987.

Of those figures, Greenville recorded 29 permits for single family homes valued at $746,560, and 10 addition and alteration units valued at $73,960 for a combined total of 39 total residential units at $820,540.

The city recorded two non-residential unit permits at a value of $19,600 and 16 non-residential additions and alterations units valued at $1,824,531, combining for a total of 18 total non-residential unit permits at a total non-residential cost of $1,844,131.

Charlotte, with permits requested for a $4.2 million hotel, $4.3 million addition to Thalhimers, and an $11 million office building, led in value of construction authorized for the month with $32,180,709, followed by Raleigh, $17,962,488; Wilmington, 9,530,436; Greensboro, $8,970,771; Winston-Salem, $6,545,774, and Cary, with $5,040,481.

On a statewide basis, total residential unit permits in January, 974, fell 50.6 percent from January 1987's 1,972, and 43.9 percent from December 1987's 1,735. Value, $37,014,182, decreased 47.1 percent from $70,035,697 in January 1987; and fell 42.8 percent from $64,761,143 last December.

Single-family homes, 443 units, decreased 39.9 percent from 737 units in January 1987. Value, $28,948,910, fell 35.1 percent from $44,573,255 in January 1987. Units were down 33 percent from December 1987's 661, and value was down 42 percent from December 1987's $49,869,016.

Multifamily units, 136, sank 80.1 percent from January 1986's 684 and 70.9 percent from December 1987's 467 units. Value, $3,150,399, sank 84.4 percent from last year's $20,168,557, and 66.6 percent from December's $9,446,265.

IBM Offer Reported

NEW YORK (AP) — International Business Machines Corp. offered to sell important computer chip technology to a major U.S. competitor because it feared American electronics companies were relying too much on Japanese technology, a newspaper reported Saturday.

IBM made the offer last year to Digital Equipment Corp. in an effort to keep Digital from becoming more dependent on Japanese suppliers, The New York Times reported, citing a forthcoming book and sources in the industry.

The book, titled "Trading Places: How We Allowed Japan to Take the Lead," did not elaborate on what technology was offered or whether Digital accepted the offer.

The book was written by Clyde Prestowitz and is scheduled for publication in late April, The Times said.

China, Taiwan Put Aside Political Differences To Engage In Business

By DAN BIERS
Associated Press Writer

HONG KONG (AP) — The political invectives exchanged between China and Taiwan for decades can barely be heard over a new chorus: "Let's do business together."

Merchants are scrambling to trade across the Taiwan Straits as China presses ahead with its modernization program and Taiwan eases its nocontact policy with the Communist mainland.

The development could profoundly influence future political relations between the countries, some political experts say.

"How can you help but find that relations will just keep on rolling after this?" said Byron Weng, a political analyst at Chinese University of Hong Kong. "To be able to do business ... necessarily leads to (political) cooperation."

Taiwanese officials say direct trade will remain outlawed for the present. But signs of increased business ties, made through legal and illegal channels, are apparent in both countries.

Taiwanese markets openly display Chinese medicinal herbs, ginseng, dates, walnuts and other foodstuffs from the mainland. Mouthwatering mainland specialties — dried duck from Nanking, salted fish from Canton and whole hams from Jinhua in Zhejiang province — also are available in Taiwan.

In China, factory tours often reveal a Taiwanese connection. The state-of-the-art Haide Polyester Plant on Hainan island uses polyester chips from Taiwan. Shenzhen Plastics Corp. in Guangdong province boasts that money of an American-Taiwanese investor helped the firm gain favorable treatment from Chinese authorities.

The signs of cooperation arise against a backdrop of years of enmity.

After losing a civil war to the Communists on the Chinese mainland and fleeing to Taiwan in 1949, the Nationalist government strictly prohibited Taiwanese from doing business with the Communists. Anyone caught doing so was considered a traitor.

But the Nationalists, while continuing to reject official contact with the mainland, recently eased restrictions on people-to-people ties. They also gave a boost last year to now flourishing indirect trade by allowing imports of several mainland food items through third countries.

Much of the business comes through the British colony of Hong Kong on the southeastern China coast, where last year indirect trade between Taiwan and China totaled $1.5 billion, up 58 percent from 1986.

Taiwan's exports accounted for $1.2 billion of the trade and consisted primarily of textiles, machinery and electrical appliances, according to Hong Kong government trade statistics.

A group of Hong Kong Chinese merchants with ties to the Nationalist government recently opened the Taiwan Trade Center in Hong Kong to facilitate trade with China. About 150 Taiwanese companies display exhibits there to entice mainland Chinese companies to buy everything from machine tools to cosmetics.

"In the future, we will open the market in China," said center representative Tina Lee N. Hwai, "so I think this is the bridge."

The mass-circulation United Daily News of Taiwan recently reported an increasing number of companies have invested or plan to invest in China in textiles, footwear, fertilizers, chemicals and food processing. Such activity would have to be carried out through third countries.

A Chinese official this month disclosed plans to set up in southern Guangdong province a product-processing zone for Taiwanese companies that would receive preferential treatment.

Weng, the political analyst, said China might use such contacts with Taiwanese businesses as a way to reach "people who are not in the political field."

Political leaders have been deadlocked for 40 years, with each group claiming to be legitimate rulers over the mainland. Each country says it is committed to reunification — but under its own terms.

Despite the increasing trade, Taiwanese officials are still balking at too much contact too soon with the mainland.

Administration Trying Again To Allow Home Apparel Work

By MATT YANCEY
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration launched a final attempt Friday to overturn a 46-year-old law that prohibits manufacturers from hiring people to produce apparel in their homes.

The Labor Department said it will publish proposed regulations next week that would allow employers to contract work from people in their homes in five industries: gloves and mittens, embroideries, buttons and buckles, hankerchiefs and some jewelry.

However, unlike its two previous attempts to deregulate so-called industrial homework, officials said this time they will not try to remove the ban on women's apparel. Also, any allowed jewelry work would be limited to stringing beads and packaging.

Assistant Labor Secretary Fred Alvarez said excluding women's apparel, where investigators have found about half of the violations of the current law, was aimed at defusing opposition from the 210,000-member International Ladies Garment Workers Union.

However, the president of that union, Jay Mazur, said it will vigorously oppose any relaxation of the current ban, calling the administration's latest proposal "a betrayal of the rights and protections held by American workers for generations."

"We will take legal action as we have in the past," he said, indicating that the union will likely seek to overturn any changes in the courts if the administration tries to implement them.

Officials for the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union and the Service Employees International Union indicated said they also anticipate filing court challenges to any attempt to lift the current bans.

Mazur said he also has asked the House and Senate labor committees to launch investigations of what he called the administration's "unwillingness" durig the past seven years to enforce the current prohibitions on industrial homework.

The proposed new regulations do not attempt to overturn state bans on the same type of work at home in Hawaii, California, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, Rhode Island and New Jersey.

The ILGWU, other unions and employer associations in California and New York led a firestorm of attacks on the administration's last two efforts in 1981 and 1986 to repeal the industrial homework bans.

As a result, only the ban on knitted outerwear was lifted in December 1984.

Mazur said his union's review of government records show that since then only 72 knitted outwear employers have been granted licenses to contract out work to a total of less than 1,000 home workers "in a universe that is 10 to 15 times that size."

"We recognize what's happening; we're not fooled," he said. "If they get these bans, they'll come after us next. They've had this licensing program in outerwear for 40 months now and they've found violations in 80 percent of the cases they've looked at. It hasn't worked."

Alvarez said the government does not know how many people in the five industries that employers have illegally contracted to work at home, citing estimates by others ranging from 10,000 to 100,000.

"What we've got is a balance of more enforcment techniques and increased flexibility in attempting to open up new opportunities," he said. "The underlying policy is that people ought to have the freedom to work at home."

The latest proposal will be open for 30 days of public comment after it is published in the Federal Register next week.

Despite expected challenges from unions and anticipated court appeals, Alvarez said the administration hopes to have the prohibitions removed before Reagan leaves office next January.

"It seems to me we ought to be able to get a final rule sometime this summer," he said.

The current prohibitions were adopted between 1941 and 1943 under the Fair Labor Standards Act in response to what then was preceived as rampant exploitation of mostly immigrant home workers paid on a piecework basis.

Removing them was a cornerstone of President Reagan's campaigns in 1980 and 1984. And business groups such as the U.S. Chamber of Commerce have won repeated promises from adminstration officials that it is the one thing that will be accomplished before he leaves office.

"The recommendations of this administration demonstrate it has learned nothing from history," the AFL-CIO said. "The record shows that industrial homework has brought nothing but unfair competition, long hours and low wages for our poorest and most disadvantaged workers."

Platinum Futures Suffer As Buying Interest Dips

By DAVID DISHNEAU
Associated Press Writer

Platinum futures prices plunged more than $10 a troy ounce Friday as the buying interest that had propelled prices sharply higher earlier this week abruptly dried up.

On other markets, gold and silver futures also retreated; crude oil prices rose above $17 a barrel; stock-index futures fell sharply; livestock and meat futures were mostly higher; and grains and soybeans were mixed.

A five-day rally in the precious metals market skidded to a halt after speculators tried and failed to push prices through key resistance levels, analysts said.

Platinum took the hardest hit, settling $10.10 to $10.80 lower on the New York Mercantile Exchange with the contract for delivery in April finishing at $503.10 a troy ounce.

"From what I understand there was just no interest in buying it," said Jack Barbanel, director of futures trading for Gruntal & Co. in New York. "Usually the tendency is for the floor traders and speculators to go into the weekend and take their profits."

Inflation fears linked to rising oil prices had supported the precious metals through the week. But even Friday's solid gains in oil prices could not keep the metals from slipping.

On the New York's Commodity Exchange, gold settled $1.00 to $1.20 lower with April at $453.30 a troy ounce; silver was 7 cents to 7.4 cents lower with March at $6.665 a troy ounce.

Crude oil rose above the psychologically important $17-a-barrel mark for the first time since Feb. 11 on speculation that the five-member pricing committee of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries would take substantive action to stabilize prices when it meets the first week in April, analysts said.

In trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange, West Texas Intermediate crude oil settled 7 cents to 12 cents higher with May at $17.03 a barrel; heating oil was .38 cent to .47 cent higher with April at 47.78 cents a gallon; unleaded gasoline was .53 cent to .70 cent higher with April at 47.94 cents a gallon.

Analyst Bob Ray of Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. said trad-ing activity was mostly technically motivated.

"I think we're in the throes of a good correction," Ray said. "It's very orderly, very methodical and not what I would call very heavy volume, either."

Live cattle futures posted new contract highs for April and June delivery on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, where the bullish mood reflected higher cash prices increasing demand.

The higher cash prices for beef parts "suggest that retailers are coming in fairly strong looking to get their needs ready for after Easter," said Tom O'Hare, an analyst in New York with Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co.

"They do a lot of hams before Easter, then the week before Easter they start really getting interested in beef again," O'Hare said.

Pork futures prices advanced on higher cash prices and indications of slackening supplies, O'Hare said.

Live cattle settled .05 cent lower to .52 cent higher with April at 74.92 cents a pound; feeder cattle were unchanged to .52 cent higher with March at 82.72 cents a pound; hogs were .18 cent to .67 cent higher with April at 46.25 cents a pound; frozen pork bellies werre .03 cent lower to .62 cent higher with May at 57.37 cents a pound.

Corn futures prices closed higher while wheat and soybeans finished slightly lower on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Corn turned in the best performance but most of the buying was speculative in the absence of fresh fundamental news, an analyst said.

Soybeans retreated in line with soybean meal. The soybean complex also was pressured by ideas that the threat of weather damage to the nearly ripe South American soybean crop had passed, said Richard Loewy, senior grain and oilseed analyst for Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. in New York.

Losses in wheat futures were underpinned by the Agriculture Department's sale Thursday of 7.2 million bushels of surplus wheat, an unusally large figure for the thrice-weekly auctions in the face of slackening export demand, Loewy said.

Wheat settled 1 cent to 1¾ cents lower with the contract for delivery in May at $3.05 a bushel; corn was 2¾ cents to 3¾ cents higher with May at $2.09¾ a bushel; oats were ¼ cent to 1 cent higher with May at $1.68¾ a bushel; soybeans were 2½ cents lower to ¼ cent higher with May at $6.48½ a bushel.

EPA Faults Sewage Treatment Plants

By DAVID GOELLER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency says that three out of four municipal waste treatment plants it surveyed aren't able to stop water pollution from industrial toxics.

The EPA audit, made public at a House hearing last week, is likely to rekindle a long-standing debate over whether the agency has properly enforced the anti-toxics provisions of the Clean Water Act.

The audit focused on 265 of the 1,500 publicly owned sewage treatment plants with EPA-approved plans, which are supposed to minimize the amount of toxics reaching the environment.

The audit said that 57 plants have been generally unsuccessful in carrying out their plans, while another 147 plants have been only partially successful in meeting the EPA-approved goals.

Only 61 plants — 23 percent of the total surveyed — "have implemented a generally successful program and are effectively carrying out program responsibilities," the audit said.

James Elder, director of EPA's Office of Water Enforcement and Permits, said the audit indicates "that the toxic impacts on receiving waters from publicly owned treatment works is more significant than previously thought."

The audit focused on the so-called pre-treatment aspects of the Clean Water Act, which is considered one of the nation's most successful environmental laws because it has halted much direct discharging of untreated human waste into waterways.

According to EPA, between 100,000 and 200,000 industrial concerns of varying size pump their wastes directly into sewers along with the wastes of millions of households and other non-toxic sources.

The municipal plants are geared principally to treat human and other organic matter so it can be pumped into waterways with minimal environmental impact.

Toxic waste from industry, however, remains largely untreated in the process, exiting plants either in the pumpings into waterways or trapped in sewage sluge, the residue that is disposed of in a variety of ways, including landfills.

In order to minimize the amount of toxics reaching a treatment plant, the law requires manufacturers to pre-treat waste to remove chemicals, often an expensive proposition.

Under the pre-treatment program, begun in the mid-1970s, EPA generally leaves it up to municipalities to police the toxic sources for compliance with EPA-approved pre-treatment plans.

The audit, with findings similar to a smaller survey in in 1985, showed that 104 of the 267 plants had basically failed to implement their pre-treatment programs.

The audit also said that municipalities are also hampered in the battle against toxic waste in the sewage stream by inadequate legal authority, ineffective enforcement and too little money committed to the job.

"The results are shocking," Frances Dubrowski, a lawyer formerly with the National Resources Defense Council, told the hearing by two Merchant Marine and Fisheries subcommittees that are taking an in-depth look at pollution of coastal waters.

"Extrapolating this data nationwide, some 500 to 900 (plants) merited enforcement for failure to implement the pre-treatment program as Congress intended," she said. "Yet EPA referred only 10 enforcement cases for failing to implement pre-treatment."

The EPA's Elder said that while increased emphasis on the toxics problem is "making an impact, I agree we still have a lot to do."

Ms. Dubrowski said that EPA should require treatment plants to develop local limits for 126 toxics cited by Congress in the 1987 updating of the Clean Water Act. EPA has issued requirements for only 10.

Wayne Wagoner
Financial Manager
Semiconductor Research Corporation

Average energy is enough for average people. But to become an achiever, you need above average energy. Wayne Wagoner found that out. He discovered that building a successful career meant building his energy level. And he's been doing just that through a goal-oriented exercise program with the facilities of Athletic Clubs, Inc. Wayne credits a good deal of his success to the extra stamina and endurance we've helped him develop. And we can do the same for you

At the Greenville Athletic Club, you'll gain the stamina that a competitive work day demands. Your heart will become more efficient, your lung capacity greater, your legs and lower back stronger. So you can work longer and more efficiently.

Every Greenville Athletic Club exercise program is individualized. Highly trained staff members design and supervise your program.

Increasing the pace gradually. And safely. You'll never do more than your body can handle.

The Greenville Athletic Club is an exclusive health club. Luxurious facilities. State-of-the-art amenities. Superior staff. Quality of service equal to none. You'll be in and out in an hour, With no appointments.

Our 1,500 plus members include over 20 corporations. Chief executive officers. Vice presidents. Managers. Men and women who look fitter; feel better and are more energetic.

So come on in and have a look around. You'll see men and women like yourself. Running, rowing, cycling, swimming, lifting and climbing their way to success

TEP Enriches School Curriculum For Students

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Second-graders at Chicod Elementary School communicated with "gibberash" or baby talk recently and stood in a circle passing incomprehensible sounds around from student to student. But, some of the meanings from the "gibberash" messages were quite clear with added facial and body expressions.

There were expressions of excitement, impatience and even passiveness as the "gibberash" conversation moved along.

While this activity may not be appropriate for regular classroom instruction, it provided an introduction to a study of drama.

Mary-Anne Brannon, a Triad Enrichment Program (TEP) teacher, led the students in the "gibberash" exercise before guiding them in role playing and mirroring exercises.

The TEP activity provides an outlet for creative expessions and exercises that stem from the regular academic curriculum for the students, said Mary Alice Yarbrough, special projects coordinator for the Pitt County schools.

It provides enrichment to all students in a school, and concentrates on those who show above average ability, have task commitment or get his or her work done, and are creative.

Established in 1983 in what was then the Greenville city schools, TEP was implemented throughout the Pitt County school system this year for kindergarten through third-grade students. But, going from four to 17 schools has been a smooth process, Mrs. Yarbrough said. "It's gone extremely well."

"Every K-3 school has a TEP teacher" that has been trained in the Renzulli Triad Model for which it is patterned, she said. The eight teachers in the program are shared among the county elementary schools.

TEP is administered in three different ways or "types." Type I activities are for all students in the school and could include activities such as storytellers for the children or a special film series. Ms. Brannon's exercise was a Type I activity.

Small-group activites make up the Type II group, and usually the TEP teacher will instruct a small group of students from six to eight weeks. "Projects grow out of the regular curriculum," Mrs. Yarbrough said. For example, kindergarten students made senses bags in their TEP class as an extension of a unit in their regular class on the five senses. Other students have learned to write in braille as an extension of learning about the visually impaired.

"The TEP teacher works closely with classroom teachers to develop units and for scheduling purposes," she said. "It's not just pie in the sky." Activities "come out of the regular classes to enrich what they've already learned in their curriculum," she said.

Students rotate in and out of the type II program so that 25 to 30 percent of the students in a school may participate, Mrs. Yarbrough said. The students are taught from 30 to 45 minutes in the TEP class, and the time is set by the TEP and classroom teachers. A new TEP class is not necessarily taught the same information as the previous class. Regular teachers help identify projects for TEP teachers to concentrate on as students move through the curriculum.

Type III serves a limited number of students who "pursue on their own in greater depth a topic," Mrs. Yarbrough said. For example, a student interested in whales may independently investigate the humpback whale and make a booklet on it.

In the role playing exercise at Chicod, the students pretended to be a mother, father, children, grandmother, teacher and student and said things they felt those characters would say.

Ms. Brannon told the students, "the more you do the easier it becomes ... just say what you think you would feel" as that particular character.

She also reminded the students that as an actor, "an audience is always watching you ... remember to not play yourself but play your character."

The mirroring exercise teaches the students to use their bodies, faces and voices, Ms. Brannon said.

Students in the exercise represented a whole class from which "about seven or eight (of the students) would want to come back" to participate in other drama-oriented exercises such as a play.

While TEP activities are not identical from class to class or school to school, all students learn the same type of communication or creative problem solving skills, Ms. Brannon said.

TEP students at W.H. Robinson were read the story of Hansel and Gretle and were encouraged to be creative and to change parts they did not like.

The result? The witch became nice and had magical powers, which produced a map to take Hansel and Gretle home. The witch also was allowed to live with the couple.

In this exercise, the students "didn't have to learn parts and get scared about doing it (the play)," Ms. Brannon said. "They said what comes naturally."

Students at Ayden Elementary School learned all the essentials of beginning their own business as an extension of a social studies class on communities and "things you have in the community," said Linda Baldree, the TEP teacher.

The five students in the Type II activity decided they each would start a restaurant in their community, rather than a clothing store or some other business.

The students discussed every phase of creating their business, guided by Ms. Baldree and discussions with business professionals.

For example, a trip to a local bank taught them "how to borrow money and how the bank makes money," one student said.

Discussion with a representative of a local Chamber of Commerce led the students to decide not to locate their ice cream shop near a dirty creek and to consider other factors that may detract from their business. They also said they learned who to contact to provide utilities such as water and electricity for the business.

A local entrepreneur discussed where the students may go to get supplies for their business.

The students also gathered samples of applications and employee work schedules from various businesses and used them to model their own applications and schedules. They also developed advertisements and jingles to market their products.

Names of the businesses ranged from "Eat, Pay and Run," to "Licking at Lydia's."

A previous project on sign language led to a discussion on hiring handicapped people to work in their businesses as the students were developing their employee applications, Ms. Baldree said. "At first they said they wouldn't hire handicapped, but after we talked about it they changed their minds."

"It depends on their handicap," one student said, explaining how a deaf person could be a waitress if the customer checked off what they wanted on a menu.

Second-grade students at Belvoir Elementary School are studying ant anatomy — its heart, brain and eating habits — to develop their thinking skills, TEP teacher Jill Dineen said. "They're so use to writing something down or copying what someone else has," but this exercise helps them from a "discovery angle."

The students in the Type II activity first drew the external body of the ant on paper and then used a plastic overlay to color in internal organs such as the brain, the heart and the mouth and digestive tract. They researched the ant functions by reading the encyclopedia. "This helps develop their research skills," Ms. Dineen said.

The study of ants was an interest of the students and is an extension from a curriculum subject of animals and insects, she said. The subject also is being explored with students at Third Street School.

In addition to the anatomy of the ants, the students will learn about their habitat and will create an ant observation nest, Ms. Dineen said.

STUDY OF ANTS — Students at Belvoir Elementary School learn the functions of an ant's heart, digestive system and brain as an extension of a curriculum unit on animals and insects. They drew the external anatomy of the ant before drawing the internal parts they are studying.

WHAT'S ON THE MENU — Lydia Dickens, center, shows her classmates, Doug Garris and Sue Anne Bundy at Ayden Elementary School what's cooking at "Licking at Lydia's," the restaurant she created as part of a study on how to start a business. The students in the TEP program decided to begin restaurants rather than clothing or other service stores for their community.

No Apologies Are Needed

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I just had to write after reading that letter from the woman who spoke for the Sacramento Opera Association. She thought you owed them an apology for repeating the phrase, "It's not over until the fat lady sings."

I happen to be overweight — all right, "fat" — and while it may be harmful to my health, I do not demand an apology every time someone makes a remark about the "heavies." Sign me "Frankly Fat" or ... ROBERT L. SMITH, TERRE HAUTE, IND.

DEAR ROBERT: Move over and make room for another frankly fat person:

DEAR ABBY: Being a fat lady myself, I take no offense at that expression, "It's not over until the fat lady sings." I weigh 313 pounds and am a reasonably intelligent 36-year-old woman. I am a compulsive overeater and I know it. I've been on all the fad diets since 1966. I've been a four-time enroller in Weight Watchers, which is a terrific program.

I've gone to more Overeaters Anonymous meetings than I can count — great people, very supportive, loving and friendly.

I've also had therapy to help me stay on a diet. I am not giving up on myself. I get a lot of emotional support from my husband and children, but the bottom line is: I've got to do it myself.

You see, in your home, you can ban cigarettes if you want to stop smoking. You can ban alcohol if you want to stop drinking. You can ban drugs if you want to "go straight." But you can't ban food if you want to lose weight. You need food to live. But it's not over for this fat lady, because I've made up my mind that I am going to beat obesity. — LINDA FROM NAPLES, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: I noticed with interest the line, "It's not over until the fat lady sings," which appeared in your column. It had to do with a sporting event.

You might be interested in knowing that the expression originated in connection with opera, and the "lady" referred to was a heavyset female soprano who performed in Richard Wagner's opera "Gotterdammerung." — CHARLIE E. MILTON, CAPT., U.S. ARMY (RETIRED), WAGONER, OKLA.

DEAR CAPT. MILTON: Well, I'll be gotterdammerunged! Thanks for the interesting input.

DEAR ABBY: I'm sure you meant no offense when you used that expression, "It's not over until the fat lady sings."

It originated during the reign of that great opera star, Zinka Milanov, the gargantuan singer with a glorious voice who towered over most of her tenors. When they make fun of Wagnerian Brunhildes, they are really doing a parody of Zinka.

I still remember going with my sixth-grade class to the "Met" to see a matinee of "La Boheme" with Jan Peerce as Rudolfo and Zinka as Mimi. She towered over Jan, and when he sang the aria "Che Gelida Manina" ("What a frozen little hand") to Zinka, who had hands like Primo Carnera, it was too funny for words!

Jan, by the way, was my neighbor. When his father was alive, Jan did not want his father to walk the seven miles to the synagogue on Saturday, so he had a room of his house made into a chapel. He would invite some of the neighbors and his friends from the Met for services. I was in my teens at the time. You can imagine what it was like hearing the hymns sung with Jan, Roberta Peters, Robert Merrill and others in the little congregation. The house practically shook. — IRA D. SHPRINTZEN, NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y.

DEAR ABBY: If you burn a scented candle while cooking fish, there will be no fish odor whatsover. -- LOVES FISH

Adams-Spain Vows Said

First Free Will Baptist Church of Greenville was the scene of the Saturday afternoon wedding of Jennifer Louise Spain and Jason Bland Adams. The Rev. Harry Grubbs performed the double-ring ceremony at 2 p.m.

Daughter of Ms. Louise Dennis Spain and Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Raymond Spain Jr. of Greenville, the bride was given in marriage by her parents. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Bland Adams of Greenville.

Sabrina Nelson sang "Wedding Song," "One Hand, One Heart" and "Truly." Ann Davenport was the pianist.

MRS. ADAMS

Shelia Dixon of Greenville served as the maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Wanda Wingate of Winterville and Bobbi Jo Allen of Greenville, both sisters of the bride, Patty Dennis of Clarksville, Va., cousin of the bride, and Meloni Adams of Greenville, sister of the bridegroom.

The honor attendant wore a floor-length gown of daphne satin designed with a sweetheart neckline. The gown featured double French pouf sleeves. The fitted bodice was fashioned with shirred side panels extending over the torso to the basque waistline. The gown was completed with a gathered, full circular skirt. She carried a cascade bouquet of mini carnations, carnations, pom pons and alstromeria with white satin ribbon.

The bridemaids' gowns were styled identically to that of the honor attendant. Each carried a cascade bouquet of mini carnations, carnations, pom pons and alstromeria with rose satin ribbon.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers were Michael Adams of Greenville, cousin of the bridegroom, David Spain of Greenville, brother of the bride, Ollen Wingate of Winterville, brother-in-law of the bride, and John Bennett of Greenville.

The mother of the bride wore a silk royal blue tea-length dress. The bridegoom's mother wore a coral tea-length dress with a jewel neckline. Both mothers wore wrist corsages of white cymbidium orchids.

Vanessa Haddock of Vanceboro, cousin of the bride, was the flower girl. She was dressed identically to the other attendants. She carried a white garden basket filled with fresh flowers.

Mrs. Thurman Lee Dennis and Eva R. Spain, grandmothers of the bride, and Sara B. Adams, grandmother of the bridegroom, were remembered with corsages of white carnations.

Rice bags were distributed by JeDon Strickland, Vanessa Haddock, Crystal Haddock and Ginger Dennis, cousins of the bride.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall following the ceremony, given by the bride's mother. Ted and Barbara Dennis, uncle and aunt of the bride, greeted guests. Mike and Carol Adams, uncle and aunt of the bridegroom, said good-byes.

Assisting in serving were Sylvia Strickland, Carron Haddock, Barbara Dennis, Lois Dennis and Lela Jones, aunts of the bride.

After a wedding trip, the couple will reside in Greenville.

The bride and bridegroom are graduates of J.H. Rose High School. The bride is employed by the Burroughs Wellcome Co. The bridegroom is employed by A & B Auto Service of Greenville.

A bridesmaids' luncheon was given by Meloni Adams, sister of the bridegroo.. The couple was also entertained at several showers and parties.

Scout Mothers Need A Motto

At Wits End

Erma Bombeck

I never miss reading Letters to the Editor in the newspaper. There is no prose being written today that compares with it. The writers aren't concerned so much about the major issues of the day like stockpiling missiles or giving aid to the contras as they are with grass-roots grievances. Like the street light being installed outside of their bedroom or the road that has been under construction in front of their favorite bar for three years.

I saw a letter the other day from a woman who was really ticked off with the Girl Scouts. Yes! Girl Scouts! The little army of Willy Lomans who peddle cholesterol to your arteries and defy you to say no after you have looked into those Bambi eyes. The woman acknowledged that it is unsafe anymore for most of them to go door-to-door selling their cookies, but she is ticked off that the ones who really hustle the cookies today are not Girl Scouts, but moms, dads, aunts, uncles and grandparents. And how could Scouts have the dignity to take credit for cookies they never sold!

Lighten up, sweetie. I cannot believe anyone is so naive as to believe that someone called Crockery Hillheimer (or some such name) ever sold 40,000 boxes of cookies personally. It's the way kids are. They try. Their interest span is limited. I found that out the first year my daughter was a Girl Scout. I volunteered to accept delivery of the cookies in my garage for the entire troop. One dark morning around 3 a.m. they delivered those little suckers, and I never saw a single Girl Scout again. It was as if they had all gone underground.

By using threats of reprisals (I think I said things like, "You take 60 boxes of Scot Teas or your dog dies!"), I called the mothers who began to arrive one by one ... mothers without buttons on their coats ... mothers on their way to give birth ... mothers who didn't even know a Girl Scout ... mothers who had cookies in their freezers from four years ago ... mothers who were 25 and looked 60.

I don't know what they did with their cookies and I don't care. I took my 40 boxes and disposed of them in my own way. Grandma was the first on the list for 10 boxes. Grandma is always first on the list for everything from peanut brittle to fruit tree seeds.

The rest I got pretty creative with. I made two gallons of crushed cookies to use for topping on ice cream. I punched holes in several dozen and used them for napkin rings. I used them for poker chips.

I used them for tips when we went out to dinner. I made necklaces, earrings and bracelets for gifts. I put them in the bird feeder and put a few aside to make into Christmas ornaments.

Couple Marries Saturday

Royette Michelle Nobles and Jonathan Blount were united in marriage Saturday at the Zion Chapel Free Will Baptist Church in a 3 p.m. ceremony.

The Revs. Ollie Harris and Robert L. Blount officiated during the double-ring ceremony. A program of music was performed by Calvin Blount. Soloists were Annette Blount and Elaine Allen.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Nobles of Ayden. The bridegroom is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. Robert L. Blount of Jersey City, N.J.

Escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a formal gown of white satin designed with a sweetheart neckline, leg-o-mutton sleeves and enhanced with appliques of re-embroidered alencon lace, seed pearls and sequins. The fitted bodice, which extended into a basque waistline, was decorated with appliques of Alencon lace, pearls and sequins. The full circular skirt, highlighted with cut outs, fell into a chapel-length train edged with matching lace, pearls and sequins. She wore a fingertip veil attached to a floral wreath adorned with silk flowers and sprays of simulated pearls. She carried a cascade of white gardenias, stephanotis, miniature roses, baby's breath and greenery with white lace and satin streamers.

Renee Mills of Winterville served as maid of honor. She wore a peach satin tea-length dress with matching lace overlaid. The fitted bodice featured a sweetheart neckline, fitted sleeves and a full gathered skirt. A matching bow accented the front waistline. Her hair was adorned with baby's breath and she carried a nosegay of white and peach gardenias, stephanotis and greenery with matching bows and satin streamers.

Bridesmaids were Marcella Blount Haynes of Jersey City, N.J., sister of the bridegroom, Marion Ellis of Orange, N.J., Angelene B. Council of Raleigh, cousin of the bride, Cleo Brunson of Winterville, cousin of the bride, Felcia Greene of Ayden, and Wanda Teel, Josephine Williams and Lucy Williams, all of Greenville. Ina Braxton of Asheville, cousin of the bride, served as junior bridesmaid.

The attendants wore dresses similar to that of the maid of honor. Baby's breath decorated their hair and each carried a nosegay of white and peach gardenias, stephanotis, miniature roses, greenery and matching bows and satin streamers.

Flower girls were Erika Nobles of Ayden, daughter of the bride, and Rejinder Braxton of Asheville, cousin of the bride. They wore white satin drop-waisted tea-length dresses with matching lace overlaid. Each of them carried a basket of petals accented with peach and white streamers.

Robert Blount of Jersey City, N.J., brother of the bride, served as the best man. Ushers were Johnny Allen of Jersey City, N.J.; Gregory Blount of East Orange, N.J., brother of the bridegroom, Lamont Braxton of Raleigh, cousin of the bride, Kelvin Roberts of Jersey City, N.J., Michael Nobles of Virginia Beach, Va., brother of the bride, Shawn Staton of Jersey City, N.J., and James Whitfield of Ayden. Stephen Mills of Winterville served as a junior usher.

Ringbearers were Dwayne Allen and Byron Jackson, both of Jersey City, N.J.

The mother of the bride wore a mint green three-piece tea-length dress with a beaded bodice. The mother of the bridegroom wore a taupe two-piece tea-length dress with a beaded jacket.

The wedding was directed by Lisa Blount and Ilene Wooten.

A reception was held at the Holiday Inn of Greenville and was hosted by the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Braxton of Ayden. Cake was served by Ruth Harris and punch was poured by Vivian Green. Sarita Dorn attended the register. The parents of the couple said goodbyes.

The couple was entertained with a rehearsal dinner given by the parents of the bridegroom. Several showers were given prior to the wedding.

The bride is a graduate of Ayden-Grifton High School and of Pitt Community College. The bridegroom is a graduate of Snyder High School in Jersey City, N.J., and is employed by the City of Jersey City.

MRS. BLOUNT

Club Sold

BALTIMORE (AP) — Jazz vocalist Ethel Ennis says she and her husband have sold their struggling nightclub, bowing to another club owner in the effort to book top jazz performers in her native Baltimore.

"We just didn't have deep enough pockets to keep it going," Earl Arnett, Mrs. Ennis' husband, said at a news conference Thursday.

Mrs. Ennis and Arnett have tentatively agreed to sell the club to Blues Alley Inc., which runs a similar nightclub in Washington.

BETSY DRAKE LEWIS' DECORATING TIPS

JUST HOW IMPORTANT IS A COMFORTABLE BED?

We saw a statistic the other day that was really startling. Of course, we all know that we spend about one-third of our lives in bed (if we're in bed eight hours a night) - but the statistic we saw painted an even more dramatic figure.

This writer pointed out that the average person spends almost A QUARTER OF A MILLION hours in bed in his or her lifetime!

It stands to reason that if someone is going to spend that many hours (or even half that many) in a certain place, they ought to try to make it as comfortable as possible.

Yet it's amazing that many people spend lots of money for things other than those used in the home, and at the same time sleep on old, worn-out and uncomfortable mattresses. And they sleep in bedrooms that are not as pleasant as they might be.

If you feel you have beds that are too small or mattresses that are not right, we want you to know that we're here to help you obtain the right mattresses and beds for you and your family.

And, while you're thinking of beds, we also want you to know that we can help you with all the other furniture in your bedrooms, too, if you should be in need of that. We extend a cordial invitation for you to come in.

Wedding Vows Said Saturday

The First Presbyterian Church was the setting for the Saturday wedding of Sally Dana Dunn of Durham and John Lawson Maness of Kinston. The Rev. Richard R. Gammon conducted the double-ring ceremony at 5 p.m.

The bride is the daughter of Floyd Linwood Dunn of Greenville and the late Adelaide Skeen Dunn. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Lee Maness of New Bern.

Christia Ann Dunn of Madison, Ala., was maid of honor for her sister and Amanda Powers of Beulaville, sister of the bridegroom, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Donna Adams of Hickory, Robin Henderson of West Palm Beach, Fla., Lynn Landreth of Atlanta, Ellen Meekins of Kinston, Francie Bonney of New Bern, and Wendy Smith of Greenville.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included Elwood Lee Maness Jr. of New Bern, brother of the bridegroom, Matthew Mulholland of Charlotte, Mitchell Johnston of Raleigh, William Lamm of Fort Worth, Texas, C.A. Boyd of Durham, Melvin Garner of Greenville, and James Powers of Beulaville.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown fashioned with a sabrina neckline, fitted bodice with alencon lace and iridescent pearls. The A-line skirt flowed from a shirred waistline. The gown had Elizabethan sleeves and a semi-cathedral train. She wore a fingertip veil trimmed in pearls and carried a cathedral bouquet of white roses.

MRS. MANESS

Each of the attendants wore a formal gown of Versaille taffeta in a dusty rose color and carried bouquets of orchid lilies in dusty rose with greenery.

After a wedding trip, the couple will live in Kinston.

The bride and bridegroom graduated from East Carolina University. She is employed by Wachovia Bank and Trust Co. and he is employed by Yellow Freight Inc.

A wedding day luncheon was given at the Sheraton by friends and family of the bride. The parents of the bridegroom entertained at a rehearsal dinner at the Sheraton. A luncheon, cocktail party and lingerie shower were held prior to the wedding.

Dr. Edward Davis To Give Program

The Brook Valley Garden Club will meet Monday starting at 10 a.m. at the clubhouse. Dr. Edward Davis will be speaking on bluebird.

Miss Terry, Mr. Summerlin Are Married

ANDERSON, S.C. — Leslie Susan Terry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John David Terry Sr. of Piedmont, S.C., and Michael Derek Summerlin, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Michael Summerlin of Greenville, were united in marriage Saturday afternoon.

Dr. Robert Claytor conducted the double-ring ceremony at 3 p.m. in the St. John's United Methodist Church.

MRS. SUMMERLIN

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included Mike Staffelbach and Sammy Hodges, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, both of Greenville, N.C., John Terry of Spartanburg, S.C., brother of the bride, and Chad Carnes of Ocala, Fla., cousin of the bridegroom. Jesse Summerlin, brother of the bridegroom, was acolyte.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white satin. A wedding band neckline enhanced the bodice embroidered in French alencon lace and seed pearls. A modified basque waistline complemented the lace sleeves. The gathered skirt flowed into a chapel train. The bride wore a fingertip veil of illusion attached to a wreath of seed pearls and lace. She carried a draped bouquet of white carnations, roses and riises.

The maid of honor wore a gown of dusty rose with a rounded neckline, low back and a bow at the waist back. She carried a bouquet of pink carnations and white roses.

The bridesmaids' gowns were styled identically to that of the honor attendant in dusty rose. Each carried a single white carnation accented with baby's breath and tied with a pink ribbon.

The bride is a junior marketing major at the University of South Carolina in Spartanburg. The bridegroom attended East Carolina University and is employed at Stewarts of America, Inc. in Simpsonville, S.C.

Modern Woman Follows The Traditional Wedding Custom

By RICHARD M. WEINTRAUB
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

NEW DELHI, India — Like most weddings in India, it was a bittersweet occasion.

Rinku Roy, The Washington Post's New Delhi bureau assistant, an independent young woman with a winning personality and an occasional sharp word for recalcitrant bureaucrats, walked with the man chosen to be her husband seven times around the sacred fire as millions of Hindu brides have done for centuries.

The first hint of the impending event had come early last summer from Rinku's cousin, met during an assignment in Dubai to cover the Gulf war.

"They are looking for someone for Rinku, you know," she said.

At the time, Rinku herself said nothing. However, one day in late fall, she came into the office and sat silently at her desk, shuffling papers. Suddenly she turned and said, "I'm getting married."

The groom, found through an ad placed by his family in the marriage columns of the Sunday papers, was to be Debashish Ray Choudhry, a 36-year-old entrepreneur making his way in India's nascent computer industry.

From then it was only a matter of weeks until the families' priests determined that Feb. 8 was an auspicious date according to the horoscopes and family traditions.

Although it was Rinku's wish to marry, she grew apprehensive as the wedding day approached. "When all is said and done, it's going to be totally new, no matter what people say," she said. "For me, after 28 years, it will be all new."

Not only would she move abruptly from single to married life, she would be making the move most difficult of all for the Hindu bride — from the home in which she has grown up and been nurtured to becoming a member of her husband's family.

Nowhere is the separation between the Western world for which Rinku works and the Hindu world in which she lives more evident than in the customs surrounding a wedding.

In India it is the families that most often make a match, perhaps with a nod of agreement from the couple, perhaps not. The fact that the young woman is marrying not only a young man but also his family often weighs heavily in the decision.

In Rinku's case, her family had looked for a professional man, someone who had roots in Delhi as Rinku had, and a family that was socially progressive. As Bengalis, they naturally were looking for another Bengali. One ad looked particularly promising.

Rinku's mother and her brother Niloy, a doctor and a newlywed himself, contacted the Choudhry family and went to see them for the first time last April.

"We liked them," said Niloy, who had taken on new family responsibilities since the death of his father more than a year ago. "They also liked us. It turned out that one of their main goals was to find a professional woman who could be economically independent. This is a big change in the last 10 or 20 years."

Once the families had agreed, the prospective groom and his family came to visit Rinku at her home.

"They talked and had good vibes right away," said Niloy. The two families went ahead with the wedding plans, consulting priests and family horoscopes for the best day. While dowries play a major and often contentious role in negotiations for many marriages in India, they were not an issue in this marriage; a reformist movement among Bengalis in the early part of this century all but eliminated monetary dowries.

Rinku and Debashish met often and got to know each other, but for the most part it was tradition that took over.

In ritual and custom, much that followed, and especially the wedding itself, underscored the importance of Hindu life and of the shift for the woman from her own household to that of her husband.

After the wedding ceremonies the couple stays one night at the bride's house, a night of teasing for the newlyweds, and especially the husband. "A last reminder from us married girls to take care of her," said a cousin as she plotted the night's pranks.

Then, at dusk the following night, the bride and groom go to the husband's home, where she is welcomed formally by her new family and acknowledges her place within the household. It is all done symbolically at a dinner that follows ancient custom.

The groom first serves food to his wife, symbolizing his pledge to support and provide for her, and she serves the other members of the groom's family, symbolizing her entry into the new household. She then spends the first night in the house not with her new husband, but with her mother-in-law.

It is only a day later, after these rituals, that the marriage is consummated.

The role as a new member of a different family weighs heavily on a bride-to-be.

"Here, we marry an entire family," explained a cousin of Rinku's. "A daughter-in-law is never everything that is expected. At home, you were everything. Here, you have to prove yourself. It takes a long time for them to accept you for what you are, not what they expect you to be."

Rinku and her fiance had discussed this at length. Still, as the hours counted down, she admitted to being a bit ill at ease.

"I'm worried to some extent about acceptance by his family — in the sense of being treated like a daughter rather than a daughter-in-law," she said. "He is always very reassuring that there won't be a problem."

Rinku's family had anticipated this when they began the search for a husband. "Rinku has a mind of her own," said her brother. "Sometime after Dad died, she thought about it and said she was ready for marriage, that she was ready to start life with someone else."

More than once Rinku would come into the office and grumble in jest about being put under "Section 144," a reference to a virtual martial-law provision in India's internal-security regulations.

By the day of the wedding, life was in the hands of aunts, cousins, sister-in-law and all-pervasive tradition. From early morning to late at night, ritual ruled the day — and Rinku.

During the ceremony, Rinku clutched a symbol of Laxmi, the Hindu goddess of abundance and fortune. Why? "I don't really know," she said, "but I'm to hold it until they tell me I don't have to anymore."

The big day began with each family's holding a ceremony at its own house during which the family priest invoked the blessings of the family's ancestors on the new marriage, a linkage of past to present.

Then, the women of the groom's family brought gifts of clothing and other symbols of welcome to the home of the bride, a ritual that was reversed later in the day when the young men of the bride's family went to fetch the groom to begin the marriage ceremony itself.

Each offering was accompanied by a fish, either real or symbolic, in a reminder of that great source of sustenance for the Bengali.

Later the couple sat under the marriage canopy, built with the limbs of a banana tree and decorated with coconuts, symbols of richness and fertility. They walked seven times around the sacred fire, as couples have done since Vedic times thousands of years ago.

As the rites ended, Rinku fed a sweet to a young boy who sat on her lap, invoking her society's emphasis on male children, and then she and Debashish gave sweets to each other in a common hope for the future shared by brides and grooms everywhere.

For the elders in the families, there is reason for all this, reason that says much about the essentially conservative and family-centered nature of Indian society.

Shikhs Again Control The Golden Temple

By DILIP GANGULY
Associated Press Writer

AMRITSAR, India (AP) — No sand-bag bunkers bar the way, and Sikh radicals aren't waving rifles and submachine guns menacingly. But inside the Golden Temple, bearded young men look as determined as nearly four years ago when Indian troops stormed Sikhism's holiest shrine to dislodge militants.

Today, Sikh radicals are again in control of the 17th-century sanctuary, the seat of Sikh temporal power which has served as the base for their six-year campaign for a separate nation in the Indian state of Punjab.

Police in Amritsar estimate that 100 to 200 Sikh radicals, most of them armed, are inside the shrine at any given time, slipping in and out almost at will.

"They are a determined lot, ruthless killers. We are up against very nasty people," said Mohammad Izhar Alam, the Amritsar district police chief.

Again, the radicals are vowing to resist intrusion. But now they say they will carry the battle well beyond the walled temple complex.

"We have arms and very, very committed men," said Nirvar Singh, one of the top Sikh militant leaders in Punjab. "This time if we are attacked, the army will have to fight us all over northern India.

"It will be real bloodbath in true Sikh tradition."

As he spoke during an interview with The Associated Press in a windowless room of the temple, about 20 young Sikhs looked on.

"Warriors of the faith," Singh called them.

"Each of these men can die for the faith and we have thousands of them all over northern India."

The evidence is that, despite 35,000 police and 50,000 paramilitary troops in Punjab, the militants operate freely in the northern state bordering Pakistan.

They have been blamed for about 300 deaths in the state since January. In the same period last year, 135 slayings were reported.

At least 17 visitors to the Golden Temple, including a woman, have disappeared this year. All are believed to have been killed by the militants on suspicion of being police spies.

A classified police document shown to The Associated Press says the militants in Punjab have at least 200 AK-47 assault rifles, 1,000 Thompson submachine guns, 1,200 sten guns, 50 self-loading rifles, 10 light machine guns, 250 Enfield rifles, 800 revolvers, and a large number of hand grenades.

In almost every Sikh home, too, is a 3-foot sword, kept shining and sharp under a religious obligation of the martial faith founded about 500 years ago as an alternative to the era's warring Hindus and Moslems.

Alam, the police chief, said authorities could clear the shrine of militants if necessary, but he questioned the costs.

"We can storm the shrine, but it has to be a political decision because the consequences will be far-reaching," he told a reporter.

Sikhs, who make up 2 percent of India's 780 million people, have traditionally been the sword-arm of the Indian army. Many consider it a sacrilege for security forces to enter their shrines.

The 1984 assault on the Golden Temple left 1,200 people dead, most of them Sikhs. It so angered two Sikh bodyguards of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi that they assassinated her five months later in New Delhi.

S.S. Virk, the senior paramilitary officer in Amritsar, also expressed fear that driving Sikh radicals from the temple could backfire and build support for them.

"Clearing the Golden Temple of the terrorists is not a very difficult task, but after that what?" said Virk, who is the deputy director general of the Central Reserve Police Force.

Forty miles to the north, in the village of Haruwal, a young Sikh ventured an answer: "If police enter the Golden Temple we will declare a war."

He refused to give his name, but declared: "Seven of us from this village have been to Pakistan and we have enough arms to strike at will."

The village is a half mile from Pakistan, which denies India's repeated charges that it is supporting the Sikh rebels.

To the south at Fattu Bheela village, where the radicals recently killed three members of one family, Sikh farmer Gurven Singh said he knew the militants were killing innocent people.

"But I cannot support police entering our shrines to get them." In Amritsar, a spokesman for the Panthic Committee, an umbrella group of radicals, vowed to kill "any enemy" entering the Golden Temple.

"We have a hit list. If and when anyone from that list comes here, we kill them," said Giani Jagir Singh. "We will kill them with our bare hands, so much is our anger."

North Korean armed forces struck across the 38th parallel in a surprise invasion of South Korea June 25, 1950. North Korea was declared an aggressor by the U.N. Security Council, and U.N. forces led by Gen. Douglas MacArthur began the defense of South Korea. The conflict, which saw the Chinese Communist forces join the North Koreans, lasted until July of 1953, when a truce was signed.

Reception For Artist Golden

A reception for watercolor artist Mary Ellen Golden, who has painted "Carolina Dunes" as the scene to be reproduced on posters for the 1988 Eastern Carolina Arts Festival, will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. today at Flowers Complex, 101 West 14th Street.

The festival, an annual week-long event under the auspices of the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, is being held this year April 10-16.

A native of Rose Hill, Ms. Golden now lives in Wilmington.

She began painting in oils and worked in acrylics before turning to the medium of watercolor.

Speaking of her art, she says she "finds that the beauty in the natural world around us is my favorite subject. We experience all sorts of beauty in flowers — their colors, shapes, fragrances, the associations and memories which come crowding in. This seeing and feeling experience is the most important part of being an artist."

Ms. Golden was a member of the faculty of the Gibbes Art Gallery School in Charleston, S.C. before moving to Wilmington.

After relocating to Wilmington, she opened a studio gallery there and teaches classes in watercolor technique.

She is a member of the Wilmington Art Association, the Watercolor Society of North Carolina, and is an associate member of the American Watercolor Society.

Her work appears in many corporate collections such as those of General Electric, Boddie-Noell, UCB, NCNB, Pfizer, IBM, First Citizens Bank and Trust, Carolina Savings Bank, First Union National Bank, Interstate Securities, Dupont, Takeda Chemical, Corning Glass and others.

Her paintings are also owned by collectors in private collections throughout the United States, in Europe, Japan, Canada and China.

The gross domestic product of Latin America increased a mere 8 percent between 1980 and 1986, according to the Inter-American Development Bank. However, population went up from 341 million to 394 million, or 15 percent, which means the region's per capita income fell in the period to $2,140 from $2,288.

Watercolor Workshop To Be Held In Southport

SOUTHPORT — The Associated Artists of Southport will sponsor a watercolor workshop May 23-27. Registration is limited to 20 artists. Fee is $130, with a deposit of $50 to hold a reservation. For full details, write to: Associated Artists of Southport, Workshop-Chairman, Box 10035, Southport, N.C., 28461. Telephone contacts are Ortrud Tyler, 278-6101 or Verna McCracken, 278-6504.

Dance Theater Begins Campaign

NEW BERN — Atlantic Dance Theater, a non-profit orgnization, has begun its 1988 fund drive. The campaign is expected to raise $10,000 to fund programs and administrative costs for the company's 1988-89 season. Chairman for the drive is Dr. David Oliver.

Indian Burial Grounds Are Desecrated

By LARRY GREEN and WENDY LEOPOLD
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

UNIONTOWN, Ky. — Crows caw in the distance and a cold drizzle falls from a churning gray sky in this remote corner of northwestern Kentucky where hundreds of freshly dug holes, open wounds upon the land, mar a sloping farm field.

The crude excavations are littered with black fragments of ancient pottery, an occasional discarded beer can, abandoned shovels and the broken, mud-stained bones of as many as 1,200 Indians.

From a nearby rise a knot of local residents watch silently as three Native Americans walk among the opened graves and mounds of dirt. They carry a mussel shell filled with burning tobacco as they pray for the disturbed spirits of their ancestors.

"There have been incidents before, but something this massive is outrageous," says one of the three, John Thomas, a Shawnee and a Native American activist who conducts the solemn, makeshift ceremony every four days.

This site, on the banks of the Ohio River near its confluence with the Wabash River, is a ghostly symbol on a grand scale of something that is happening with increasing frequency in America — the looting and destruction of archeological sites and the desecration of historic graves by commercial artifact hunters. Profit-driven relic scavengers are harvesting the nation's history, digging up Indian, American pioneer and Civil War graves at sites on both private and public land.

Looters using metal detectors have been caught digging in Richmond and Fredericksburg Civil War battlefields while in some areas of the southwest looters have used heavy earth moving machinery to uncover Indian artifacts.

Here, in Uniontown, 10 men, four of them from neighboring Illinois and Indiana, allegedly paid a local farmer $10,000 for the right to dig on 40 acres in the months between the autumn harvest and spring planting.

Using rented water tanks to soften the hard, dry soil, the 10 allegedly used shovels to begin digging up the ancient graves in mid-October and continued until mid-December, when local residents complained and Kentucky State Police moved in to make arrests. The 10 are charged with desecration of a venerated object. They have pleaded not guilty and are awaiting trial.

"This site had greater potential than any I know of to tell us what happened to the native peoples of the Ohio Valley," says Cheryl Ann Munson, senior archeologist at Indiana University's Glenn Black Laboratory of Archeology.

"The value of (this) site was what it could tell us about the native cultures of the region and why they disappeared .... Looters have compromised much of what we can compare," says Munson, who was to begin studying the Uniontown site next month with a grant from the Kentucky Heritage Council.

"This was really a commercial mining operation of the burial ground for artifacts ... (and it) is a clear example of what's happening all over the nation," added Francis P. McManamon, chief of the U.S. Department of Interior's archeological assistance agency.

"This ranks as one of the five worst cases nationwide that I know of," says David J. Wolf, a forensic anthropologist with the Kentucky State Medical Examiner's Office.

"An archeological site is similar to an endangered species in wildlife," says Mark Leone, an official of the Society for American Archeology. "There are only so many of them. They don't reproduce. And once they're gone, they're gone .... The Kentucky example is disturbing because it is making a profit off the remains of the cultural past and exploiting another people's heritage."

"It's grave robbing," says Kentucky State Sen. John T. Hall. "They're looking at it for monetary value and that's not right. Digging up anybody's bones is wrong. It's just not a proper way to make a living."

If not proper, it is lucrative. Norman Reid, who owns the Indian Hill Museum in nearby Bone Gap, Ill., says items from similar graves have sold for thousands of dollars. One collector paid $17,000 for a stone ax. Slate pendants can fetch between $300 and $1,000. Pipes have been sold for $5,000 each. A copper death mask could be worth $100,000 or more. "That's like finding a Rembrandt."

"If you want to stoop that low it's a very profitable business," says Reid.

"There's a wide-open market for Indian artifacts," says Munson. "It's a black market only for lack of ethics involved."

"We need to cut off access to the markets," says Suzan Shown Harjo, executive director of the National Congress of American Indians. In addition to arresting looters, Harjo says penalties should be imposed on "all those intermediaries, brokers and final recipients whether it's the Smithsonian itself or the favorite local museum or a pawn shop .... It has to get to the point where the risk is not worth the price."

"Federal agencies ... have not been effective in identifying and prosecuting the buyers of looted artifacts," says a December report on the problem by the congressional General Accounting Office.

Long recognized as a problem in the West and Southwest, looting of historic sites is now seen as serious threat in the East and Midwest.

Currently it "is probably more serious in the eastern third of the country than it is in the Southwest," says Mark Michel, president of the Santa Fe, N.M.-based Archeological Conservancy. "Many of the sites there are on private land and are not protected by (federal) law and there is less of an awareness in that section of the country about Indian cultures."

Like many places along the banks of the Ohio River, Uniontown sits atop archeological treasures. The town is built above layer upon layer of ancient settlements that may date back hundreds of years before the birth of Christ.

This particular site was considered important because it is believed to be "very late prehistoric" says Munson. It might have yielded information about "European contact with Indian people ... it could tell us about the native cultures of the region and why they disappeared."

It is not uncommon for Uniontown residents digging in their gardens to unearth relics — pots, arrowheads, axes. For decades some local residents have spent springs and autumns gleaning artifacts from freshly plowed farm fields. And the sparsely settled countryside around Uniontown is dotted with potholes, apparently the sites of treasure hunting digs.

Yet in this community of 1,250, where livelihoods come from the ground — from mining coal, pumping oil and farming — and where artifact hunting is as much a part of life as raccoon hunting, this massive dig has sensitized and angered people — something that law enforcement officials and archeologists alike say distinguishes Uniontown from other places where sites have been looted.

For example, the General Accounting Office found that "much of the public in (Arizona, Colorado, New Mexico and Utah) condones the looting of archeological sites on federal lands both as a means of supplementing personal income and as a personal hobby."

Until the current incident, it was not seen as a serious problem here in northwestern Kentucky. But attitudes have changed.

"The Indians are human just like the white man is," says Uniontown Mayor Raymond L. Turner. "It's as if a bunch went down to St. Agnes Cemetery and dug up their grandfathers ... I guess nobody never thought of it as desecration of graves, they just thought of it as hunting for artifacts."

"I'm just like everybody else," says native resident Ronnie Butler, Uniontown's Avon lady, "I wouldn't want it to happen to my ancestors."

"It's outrageous that someone would desecrate a grave for profit," says housewife Bonnie Douglas.

"It's wrong, just wrong," says M. Greenwell, also a Uniontown native and factory worker. "I don't care how you look at it, you just cannot desecrate a person's grave. I don't care if they are black, white or Indian."

Local reaction has been so strong that when the city council discusses the digging and plans for reburial, town meetings have to be held in the larger Knights of Columbus Hall rather than City Hall. Residents in Uniontown and in other Kentucky cities ranging as far east as Louisville, have begun holding bake sales and chili dinners to raise money for a ceremonial reburial ceremony American Indian leaders plan to hold on Memorial Day.

"We'll call it Ancestors Day," says activist John Thomas who, with other Native American leaders, believe the Uniontown dig will help them in efforts to publicize and prevent desecration of Indian graves. Current plans call for busing in hundreds of Indians from throughout the United States for several days of ceremonies before the actual reburial.

"It's likely that none of the artifacts that would help us figure out the relationship of this culture to other cultures in the area will ever be recovered," says archeologist Cheryl Ann Munson. " ... there would have been a lot to learn."

A First For The U.S. Postal Service

AP Newsfeatures

An historic first in the chronicles of the U.S. Postal Service — a three-nation stamp issuance — is being hailed in philatelic circles all over the world.

Finland, Sweden and the United States are issuing stamps honoring the 350th anniversary of the settlement of New Sweden on the North American continent by Swedish and Finnish immigrants. All the stamps are international airmails.

The design basic to all three adhesives features an illustration from a 1702 book on the New Sweden colony by Thomas Campanius Holm, the first Swedish publication about America. It depicts a European settler negotiating with a pair of Indians.

A map of the area, which shows the various frontiers of the colony from its founding in 1638 to 1655, is pictured on the left. On the opposite side, a world map appears with Sweden and Finland highlighted in the upper right. Two Swedish ships that arrived in the New World are also included in the design.

The Swedish stamp is part of a booklet of six different stamps honoring New Sweden. Only full booklets will be available, not individual stamps. Also available: a $5 U.S.-Sweden-Finland joint issue folder, "The American Letter," and a $7.50 New Sweden brochure, a product of the Swedish Post Office.

The U.S. stamp will be available at most post offices throughout the country. However, the Finnish stamp, Swedish stamp booklet, "The American Letter" and the New Sweden brochure will be available by mail order only.

You may purchase the stamp at your local post office and affix it to your own envelope. The international airmail rate is 44 cents. No remittance is required. Send to: Customer-Affixed Envelopes, U.S. New Sweden Stamp, Postmaster, Wilmington, DE 19850-9991. Requests must be postmarked by May 28.

If you prefer to have the Postal Service affix the stamp, enclose a money order or personal check for 44 cents per stamp and send to: U.S. New Sweden Stamp, Postmaster, Wilmington, DE 19850-9991. Deadline is May 28.

Next week we will tell you how you can get the Finnish stamps and the Swedish stamp booklet as well as the "The American Letter" by mail from the Philatelic Sales Division in Washington, D.C.

The West African nation of Ghana has released a set of four stamps to publicize the importance of the UNICEF global campaign to immunize the children of all countries against six preventable but deadly diseases — measles, polio, diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus and tuberculosis.

It is estimated that each year 4 million children in developing countries die from these diseases. The goal of the UNICEF campaign is that all children be immunized by the year 2001. The 5-cedi stamp shows a nurse giving an injection to a woman. The 15-cedi has a close-up view of a woman receiving an injection. The 25-cedi shows a young girl in school with her leg in a brace as a result of polio. The 100-cedi depicts a nurse giving oral vaccine to a baby as the mother holds the child.

Ghana also issued a set of four new stamps commemorating various festivals important to the people of that country.

The charter of the United Nations was signed in San Francisco June 26, 1945. Representatives of 50 countries joined to outline future peaceful settlement of any disputes endangering world peace.

A New Lease On Life For Historic Singapore Hotel

By KENNETH L. WHITING
Associated Press Writer

SINGAPORE (AP) — It's the kind of place Englishmen left to join mad dogs in the noonday sun or perhaps strike out on the road to Mandalay. The more sensible sat around sipping Singapore Slings.

It's Raffles Hotel, which has survived for 102 years — ceiling fans still whirring, grillwork elevator clanking up and down, dark paneling and long corridors with creaking floors, wide verandas and elderly waiters shuffling around the Palm Court garden.

Dear as it was to the hearts of many, Raffles in recent times has become a bit seedy, and the talk was that it would come down because the land on which it sits is extremely valuable. One plan to renovate it was scrapped in 1983 because tourism had slumped and thousands of rooms in Singapore's more modern hotels stood empty.

But another chance has come for the legendary Raffles, with the announcement by its owners that it will be restored to some semblance of its old self in a two-year, $27.3-million face lift.

A tourist industry study two years ago had suggested that the "national asset" might make it if turned into a suites-only establishment for state guests and VIPs.

The 127-room hotel will remain open during the renovation, which will be done in phases, according to the bankers that now own it.

The central block will remain but the old ballroom and courtyard wing are to be demolished to make way for a basement parking garage, function rooms and a bedroom wing.

Raffles is in many respects the antithesis of a standard modern hotel, with its French Renaissance architecture and palm trees all around.

The atmosphere is still tropically relaxed, but with a residual whiff of stiff-upper-lip British colonial.

Raffles dates to the early 1800s, when it was founded as a "tiffin house," or lunchroom in a private home. The actual hotel in Beach Road was started in 1886 by three Armenian brothers and named for the founder of Singapore, Sir Stamford Raffles.

By the turn of the century it was the social center in a key outpost of the British Empire. Rubber planters, merchants, military officers, ships' captains, remittance men and other colonials stayed there. The years have left legends.

One says that C.M. Phillips, the principal of a nearby school, was summoned in 1902 to shoot a tiger that had taken refuge under the billiard table at the hotel. A stuffed tiger on the premises keep that legend alive today. Then, there's the hotel's Tiger Tavern, which serves the locally brewed Tiger Beer.

Lounge lizards who kept their elbows on the bar gave Cad's Alley its name.

Another legend has it that Joseph Conrad got the idea for "Lord Jim" while on the veranda reading a newspaper story about a British crew that abandoned ship and left 200 passengers to die.

"Feed at Raffles when visiting Singapore," was Rudyard Kipling's advice. But he found the beds less than comfortable and suggested sleeping elsewhere.

Those were the days of awesome appetites and massive meals. One dinner menu surviving from 1900 lists 18 courses.

When Japanese bombers attacked at the start of World War II, Raffles' band played on in the ballroom behind blackout curtains. Singapore surrendered to the Japanese on Feb. 15, 1942, and with occupation imminent the staff buried the hotel's silver in the Palm Court garden.

Hotel records show high-ranking officers of Japan's occupation army lived there. When the war ended in 1945, former inmates of Changi Prison and other Japanese internment camps were taken in by the hotel. The silver was dug up and Raffles reopened for business again in 1946.

Somerset Maugham, the late British novelist and short-story writer, once had said Raffles "stands for all the fables of the exotic East."

The hotel uses that as its motto today and has a plaque outside one of its rooms in Maugham's his honor.

Former Princess Now Leads The Cloistered Life Of A Nun

EDITOR'S NOTE — She was accustomed to the privileged life of an European princess, the daughter of King Ferdinand and Queen Marie of Romania and great-granddaughter of England's Queen Victoria and Czar Alexander II of Russia. Today Princess Ileana leads the disciplined life of a cloistered nun as the Rev. Mother Alexandra.

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press Writer

ELLWOOD CITY, Pa. (AP) — Her family jewels are gone and her castle is property of the communist state, but Romania's Princess Ileana has found peace at a monastery in rural western Pennsylvania.

The 79-year-old princess is now known as the Rev. Mother Alexandra, one of 12 nuns who share food, work and prayer at the Romanian Orthodox monastery.

The nun of 27 years was the founder of the Orthodox Monastery of the Transfiguration, the first English-speaking Orthodox monastery in the United States.

Portraits of her parents, Romania's King Ferdinand and Queen Marie, hang in the living room of the A-frame house she shares with another nun.

Gold and silver icons dating as far back as the 15th century fill a corner of her bedroom, including one handed down in the family from Czar Nicholas I of Russia and said to contain a splinter of Christ's cross. Antique icons also decorate the monastery's small, candle-lit chapel, as do crosses and triptychs, some of which she brought from Europe.

A small, gold container on a bed stand holds her most precious possession, a handful of Romanian soil snatched during her escape from Soviet communism in the wake of World War II. She wants it buried with her.

"There's a big gap between then and now," she says. "So much has happened in between."

Uncomfortable sitting with idle hands, the tall, stately nun worked on a knotted prayer rope as she reflected on her multifaceted life.

"It's been different so many times over," she says. "But, you see, one lives day by day, doesn't one?"

She refuses to compare her royal and religious ways of life.

"There is no point," she said. "I did my duty as a princess. And now I'm doing my duty as a nun."

Her superiors, nonetheless, are impressed by her example.

"As a person, as an individual, I have admiration because even not having a position, she could have had a social life, which would be much more in keeping with other people of her background," said Bishop Nathaniel Popp, 47, head of the Romanian Orthodox Episcopate of America.

"Instead of saying she was a princess who became a nun, I think it was more she was a nun coming through the life of a princess."

Although just a child during the German invasion of World War I, Princess Ileana accompanied her mother, the queen, from hospital to hospital, administering to Romania's wounded and hungry. By the time World War II erupted, both her parents were dead, her older brother, Carol, had ascended the throne, one sister had become queen of Yugoslavia and another queen of Greece.

Princess Ileana was living in a castle outside Vienna, wife of an archduke of Austria and the mother of six.

Afraid of the Nazi regime, Princess Ileana and her family moved in 1944 to Romania. There she set up hospitals and did what she could for her suffering compatriots.

In December 1947, the king of Romania was forced by the communists to abdicate and the following week, Princess Ileana and the rest of the royal family were exiled.

Princess Ileana immigrated with her family to Switzerland and then Argentina before settling in 1950 in the United States, a move that ultimately led to divorce. To support her children, she sold her cherished diamond and sapphire tiara, lectured about life behind the Iron Curtain, and wrote an autobiography titled, "I Live Again."

It wasn't until 1961, after her children were grown, that the 52-year-old princess became a postulant. She ended a second marriage to do so.

"In my heart," she says, "I always wanted to become a nun. But there was so much to be done in Romania when I was young."

Princess Ileana took the monastic vows of stability, obedience, poverty and chastity in 1967 and, with that profession, became Mother Alexandra. Later that year, she put up a trailer on 100 acres of farmland outside Ellwood City and began building an English-speaking monastery for Orthodox women of all ethnic backgrounds.

There are now 12 monasteries under the jurisdiction of the 2.5 million member Orthodox Church in America, all of them using English as the primary language, according to the Rev. Robert Kondratick, secretary of the church. They are home to 70 to 100 monks and nuns, called sisters before their vows and mothers afterward.

The Romanian Orthodox Episcopate of America, which is based in Jackson, Mich., is similar to the Greek and Russian Orthodox churches in that they share the same religious beliefs. Each is a self-governing unit, though, with separate administrations.

The Romanian and Russian Orthodox churches are part of the Orthodox Church in America, along with the Bulgarian and Albanian Orthodox churches and a few smaller factions. The Greek Orthodox church, however, is under the patriarch of Constantinople.

The Romanian Orthodox Episcopate of America has no ties with the church in Romania.

Even though she has stepped down as the monastery's abbess, Mother Alexandra's work goes on. She currently is overseeing construction of a new complex to accommodate more activities and the growing number of women drawn to the cluster of redwood buildings on a hill.

Her royal background, surprisingly, has helped her cope with the austerity of monastic life: two-hour prayer sessions three times a day, black habits and headdress revealing only hands and face, renunciation of the temporal world and all its trappings.

"As a royal person, you have to be very disciplined," she says. "From the beginning of your life, you are a public person. You belong to the country. Your own personal amusement does not play any part. Your duty comes first.

"From that point of view...I've watched the other sisters, the struggles they have I don't. For me, it isn't difficult."

"It's my cross I have to bear," she says.

Romanians come bearing gifts and mementos for their dear domnitza, or princess, last surviving child of King Ferdinand and Queen Marie and great-granddaughter of England's Queen Victoria and Czar Alexander II of Russia.

She graciously receives the pilgrims, Romanian-Americans yearning for what once was and will never be.

"It belongs to their past as it does to mine," she said. "They tell me, 'For us, you are a living page out of history.'"

"We live quite equally here," says the Very Rev. Mother Christophora, the monastery's abbess.

"Each of us has a background and a past. It's there and you think about it occasionally," says the 34-year-old abbess, a former alcoholism counselor from Lopez, Pa. "But most of the time, we're just getting along, surviving, living our faith. Of course, that's the way it should be. We should leave our past behind."

"Mother Alexandra is a nun, sure. She's in the garden, in the flowers, digging like everybody else," says the Rev. Roman Braga, 65, the monastery's Romanian-born chaplain who spent 12 years in communist prisons.

The princess's early years in America helped ease the way from castle to cloister.

"We had a very nice house in Newton (Mass.) which I then considered small," she recalled, laughing. "It had six bedrooms, two bathrooms, a living room and a very nice, large kitchen where I learned to cook.

"In spite of all my war experiences I had never really done any housework in my life."

"What stories she tells come out only when you ask her," says her oldest child, Stefan Habsburg, 55, a retired auto designer who lives in Farmington Hills, Mich. An American citizen, he boasts no royal titles or claims to any throne.

10. "I'll Always Come Back," K.T. Oslin

JUST A MINUTE

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Keeping track of time is a modern invention, according to Evan Edwards, curator of the Hoffman Clock Museum in Newark, N.Y.

Speaking at a recent conference on "Time" at the University of Rochester, Edwards said the first mechanical clocks rang bells in monasteries to remind monks when to get up, pray, eat or go to bed.

With the rise of cities and retail businesses, clocks took on new importance.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip: SOUTH AMERICAN RESORT'S DICTUM: "OUR SUN, THE DOCTOR."

Today's Cryptoquip clue: W equals R

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY March 27

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Enjoy some amusements you like with your mate, but be sure you don't spend too much money. Let your superiors see your talents.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): You may find it difficult to solve a problem at home this morning, but don't worry, since it will work itself out as the day goes along.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): You may find it hard to communicate this morning, but later it will be just the opposite. Handle your Sunday routines carefully.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Be cautious in handling any financial or property matters today. If some repairs to your property are needed, get several estimates.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): There may be some obstacles which will impede your progress today, but don't allow your temper to get the best of you and ruin your day.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): This is a good day to complete all of those little tasks which have been accumulating. Take some time to plan your schedule for the week.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): You will find it hard to get your opinions across to others early in the day, but later they will listen carefully to what you have to say.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): You have many duties to complete during the day, but this evening is fine for social activities. Avoid over-indulging acquaintances.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Study a new recreation before you get involved, and be sure you are really interested. Postpone a trip you have been planning.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Before you make a complaint about a bill, be sure the error is not your own. Have a talk with your mate, and settle that dispute.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): A good friend may be acting a bit strangely today, so try to find out what the problem is and see if you can help this person out.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Keep yurself busy by handling some small tasks you have been neglecting. Don't let an argumentative person disrupt your schedule.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY March 28

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): This is not a good time to let others know what your plans for the future are. Be cautious in handling civic affairs and driving tonight.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Don't bring any guests into your home today, and thereby avoid trouble. You should exercise extreme caution at all times.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): An annoying situation at work will attempt you to run off to something else, but this would not be any better, so stay where you are.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Don't get into any get-rich-quick schemes, as the only thing you will get is broke. Don't violate your ethics for any reason.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): If you don't study every phase of a new project, you could make some big mistakes. Stop all that wishful thinking, and be more practical.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Your intuition is not up to par at this time, so don't make any snap judgments. Your mate is in a poor mood, so be soothing.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): You will have to rely completely on yourself today, as others will be too busy to help you. Avoid any arguments with your friends.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Find out what is expected of you by those in power, and do what you can to please them. Don't do anything to spoil your reputation.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): If you want to give some attention to a new project, be sure you don't neglect other activities. take advice from a friend, but carefully.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): You may feel that you have too many reponsibilities ahead of you, but handle them in your own orderly fashion and get good results.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Don't sever your relationship with a good friend over a silly argument. Try to create a more cooperative atmosphere at your place of business.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Take some time to handle those tasks which are not much fun, but have to be taken care of anyway. Don't let criticism bother you.

When you are declaring, those fellows to your left and right, the defenders, can often be made to be very helpful. But beware of Greeks bearing gifts—unsolicited cooperation could be tainted.

We do not pick up the sort of powerhouse that South was dealt often enough to have a firm opinion of what we would have done had we held the South cards. And since South was our lawyer, Lee Hazen of New York, we would hesitate to offer an opinion for fear of a lawsuit. Nevertheless, we admit we would be tempted to do exactly what he did.

West laid down the ace of hearts, and declarer did not think much of his contract. Chances seemed to improve when West continued with a heart, on which South discarded a diamond. Declarer was in dummy for the first and last time, and it seemed that if East had started with a doubleton king of trumps, a finesse would land the slam.

Hazen led a trump from the table and was about to finesse when a sudden thought stayed his hand. Never before in a rubber bridge game had West appeared to be a charitable person. Yet here, when declarer almost surely had no entry to dummy (South would not have leaped to a slam with two fast losers in hearts), he was being kind enough to provide an entry to the board for a trump finesse.

Without that entry, declarer would have been forced to lead the ace of trumps and hope for a miracle. Why, then, was West going out of his way to lend a helping hand to an old foe? Obviously, because the miracle would have succeeded. So Hazen changed his mind, shot up with the ace, collected the king and his slam bonus.

Collectors Of Antiques Must Be On The Alert For Fake Objects

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

For most folks, April Fool's Day comes only once a year. But for active collectors, antiques dealers and museum curators, being an April Fool is a year-round hazard.

There are three kinds of fakes to trip up the unwary or unlucky antiques seeker, according to Samuel Pennington, editor and publisher of Maine Antique Digest and curator of an exhibition on fakes, opening in New York April 1.

There's the outright forgery — an object made intentionally to deceive; the authentic piece that's been "improved" to make it seem more interesting or valuable; and the unintended fake — often something which, after changing hands several times, becomes confused with an older piece.

Which are the most common fakes? It's a toss-up between the outright fake and the old piece that's been changed. In furniture, the embellished old piece is most common because for a fairly small amount of effort one can realize a good profit.

Asked to speculate on the reason for forgeries, Pennington downgraded the profit motive. "Over all, I don't think fakers have gotten rich. The revenge motive is the big one." For example, a reformed character told Pennington he wants to get away with just one more fake — not to make money, but for the fun of the thing.

Pennington, who had a 22-year career in the U.S. Air Force before establishing his monthly publication in 1973, says he has been fascinated with fakes since then and has wanted to curate an exhibition on the subject for at least 10 years.

It's an idea that also interested Robert Bishop, director of the Museum of American Folk Art and Frank Miele of Hirschi & Adler Folk, a gallery.

The resulting "Folk Art Fakes and Forgeries" is co-sponsored by the museum and the gallery and runs through April 30.

An example of an outright forgery is a Brewster chair. The real one is owned by the Metropolitan Museum of Art and was made before 1644 for Elder William Brewster. The fake on display in the show was made around 1970 by Armand La Montagne in Providence, R.I., to embarrass the museum world. Montagne revealed the hoax in 1977.

A redware lion that turned up recently for $7,000 is an example of the most likely innocent or inadvertent fake.

Authentic redware lions made by 19th-century Pennsylvania potter John Bell sell for about $20,000, so when a picture of one turned up for $7,000 in an ad in an antiques magazine, it piqued Pennington's interest. He soon learned the pictured piece was actually a 20th-century copy made in good faith by two potters who sell similar examples for $100 by the roadside.

"Somehow, one got dirtied-up and scuffed around and ended up in the ad for $7,000. The potters had nothing to do with the scuffing; they're still selling them for $100," he said.

Fakes are considered to be disruptive to the antiques business, since collectors who learn they've bought a counterfeit may leave the field in disgust. Even to show fakes in an exhibition is faintly disreputable. "There is a feeling that (the exhibit) will undermine the confidence in the market," said Pennington.

He disagrees: "Fakes — whether they are improvements, outright forgeries or honest mistakes — exist in every category of collectible and have always existed at least since the Romans began copying Greek art."

They aren't all bad since they add spice and "it would be a dull world if everything was exactly as it is purported to be," he added. The growing sophistication among collectors is leading to a more questioning spirit and exposing more fakes.

Professionals guard against fakes by purchasing with great caution. They judge the source of the antique; they understand the historic context; often, they can feel if something is subtly wrong for its purported period.

The ultimate test: is a buy too good to be true? A painted "Pennsylvania German" blanket chest that Pennington bought at auction for $450 is an example. The auctioneer made no attempt to pass it off as the real thing and he bought the piece knowing it was not genuine. If it had been, it would have gone for as much as $100,000.

Naturally enough, sometimes even the pros get caught. When they do learn they have been taken in, dealers are honor-bound to withdraw the item from the marketplace or to identify it for what it really is.

Pennington declined to speculate on the proper behavior for collectors who learn they own suspect objects. He hazarded the opinion that "usually they throw 'em into an auction and let somebody else worry about it."

On The House

By ANDY LANG

The best kind of brick patio floor is one held together with mortar, but constructing it usually requires the services of a professional mason to achieve good results. Thousands of homeowners have discovered reasonably good patio floors can be made of brick laid into sand, a procedure that can be handled by a do-it-yourselfer who may never have worked with masonry.

True, brick patios installed without mortar need a little more attention than those with, but the maintenance chores are uncomplicated and sometimes not needed more than once or twice a year.

Whatever secret there is to the laying of a brick floor on sand is wrapped up in the edging. The border not only lends a finished look to the project, it prevents the bricks from slipping. The edging can be simple 2-by-4s of a weather-resistant wood or bricks set on end or even concrete. Anything that holds the bricks solidly in place will do. As for the bricks making up the floor, they can be laid in any pattern you choose. Always remember, the more complicated the pattern, the more work it will be.

Take your time in planning the patio floor. Be sure there is a pitch that will allow rain to roll off, which means you should keep checking constantly with a long level to be sure everything is pitched in the right direction. Gravel will be needed under the sand where there is a severe drainage problem.

Since bricks must be laid one by one, one of your principal do-it-yourself ingredients will be patience. Be sure each brick is set firmly into the sand, about 2 or 3 inches in depth. Butt them securely. The use of a rubber mallet or hammer to tap the bricks in place will facilitate the task but do the tapping gently. Whatever pattern you have decided on, keep a sketch of it close at hand so it can be referred to frequently. Do not kneel on the bricks you have just laid. And every so often stand back and see how everything looks. Standing a little away from the job gives you a better perspective on how it is going.

It would be impossible to fill each joint separately with sand. Instead, dump some sand on the brick and sweep it into the joints, preferably with a pushbroom. The sand should be dry at this point. If it is damp, let it set for a few hours before using it. Oddly enough, one of the first things you must do after the sand is spread between the joints is to wet it down. This is best done with water from a garden hose, but be sure the nozzle is at the spray setting. Work very carefully, never letting the hose send water onto a single spot for more than a second. You merely want to dampen the sand so it will settle, not push it out of the cracks. The spraying will serve the added purpose of cleaning the surface of the bricks. When you have completed the spraying, check all parts of the patio floors to see whether extra sand is needed in certain spots. In fact, it is a good idea to do this every so often during the first few weeks after the floor has been installed.

What about maintenance? All you have to do is to keep an eye on the floor every time you use it to see whether there has been any settling and whether any adjustments are necessary. Every six months go over the floor a little more carefully for the same reason.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much helpful information on a variety of subjects in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $2 to this paper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J., 07666.)

Here's The Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — How do the solar collectors on a house collect and hang on to heat? We live in a moderate climate area and may be interested in changing to a solar house.

A. — Not sure whether you mean changing your residence or merely changing the house so it can collect heat from the sun's rays. The solar collectors atop a house (or, for that matter, alongside a house) trap heat and transfer it to a fluid that goes into a storage area, where it is released when the sun is not out. There are some variations on that, but that is basically the idea. There usually is a backup system that takes care of heating the house when the solar equipment isn't adequate enough to do so. It is important the solar collectors be placed where they can take advantage of the heat from the sun.

Q. — I have to refinish a considerable amount of furniture this summer. I would like to use an ordinary varnish for the first couple of coats, then apply the more expensive polyurethane varnish for the top coat. Will this work?

A. — Varnish manufacturers maintain that two different kinds of varnish should not be used on the same piece of furniture, since they are not always compatible. This has become especially true since polyurethane came on the market. Polyurethane is a synthetic, most other varnishes are not. It would not be wise to put one on top of the other.

Q. — I have recently started to use what is called wet-or-dry sandpaper. I find using it with water smooths the finish very well. However, I have used this only on varnish and lacquer finishes. I now intend to finish a piece of furniture with shellac, but I wonder whether it is OK to use wet sandpaper with it?

A. — Don't. Shellac and water do not get along with each other. You can try the sandpaper with oil, but the cutting or smoothing action is much slower.

Q. — I finished some furniture with varnish recently but it did not have the high gloss I wanted. How can I get it?

A. — You can buy one of the rubbing compounds made especially for obtaining a high gloss or you can use rottenstone powder and water or oil. You must have used a low-gloss varnish.

(The techniques of using varnish, lacuqer, shellac, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 75 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y., 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Q. Do groundcover azaleas have the same requirements as regular azaleas?

A. There is an increasing awareness and demand for good groundcovers to reduce lawn maintenance costs. Recently a whole series of low-growing evergreen groundcovers have entered the nursery trade. These plants grow 6 to 15 inches tall and spread 3 to 6 feet in diameter. They have the same requirements as most evergreen azaleas — light shade and moist, well-drained, acidic, organic soils. Some of these groundcover azaleas are "Pink Cascade," "Red Fountain," "Pink Pancake," "Michael Hill," and "Joseph Hill."

Q. What are some good annuals to fill in a bed where spring bulbs were planted?

A. If the bed is in full sun almost any annual could be used. Some suggestions are petunias, marigolds, vinca, zinnias, geraniums, portulaca, verbena, snapdragons and annual dianthus. Begonias and New Guinea impatiens will grow in sun or partial shade. Impatiens would be the best choice if the bed is now in full shade.

Q. A neighbor shared some seeds of a okra called "Burgundy" that is supposed to have burgundy pods. Does it taste like green okra? How tall does it grow?

A. The pods of "Burgundy" taste the same as green-podded varieties. "Burgundy" grows 4 feet tall and 2 feet wide. It bears in 60 days from seed. The pods of "Burgundy" should be harvested tender and young at 3 to 4 inches, but will retain excellent eating quality up to 8 inches. The unique color, earliness and high yield of "Burgundy" won it a 1988 All-America Selections Award.

Q. How can I start caladiums indoors?

A. Plant the bulbs in small pots in a soil mix high in organic matter. Water the bulbs thoroughly. Cover the pots with black plastic and lace them in a sunny window. This heats the soil. A soil temperature of 70 degrees F. is best for promoting root development. Once shoots sprout, remove the plastic because the shoots will not tolerate the heat. If you lack the time and space to start your own caladiums, consider buying them from a grower.

Closet Cleaning No Simple Task

By COSMOPOLITAN
A Hearst Magazine

Cleaning out your closet takes time, determination and a full length mirror.

The task involves taking out of the closet every single item, according to an article in the current issue of Cosmopolitan, and returning only the clothes you truly like and enjoy wearing.

That means trying on every garment, except those you hate and know you don't want to keep anyway.

As you try on clothes, be honest with yourself — is the fit and color flattering, have you worn this lately, did you feel good in it?

Anything that doesn't thrill you goes in the discard pile. Do not start a "maybe" pile — if you change your mind you can always retrieve it later. The act of decisiveness helps break the emotional bond with a garment and once you see it in the reject pile you probably will feel relieved, not sad.

If you find it too tough to be objective, ask for help from a friend who can be objective and whose fashion flair you admire.

Whether you go it alone or seek help, certain clothes will be particularly hard to discard — sentimental favorites or garments you once enjoyed but don't look wonderful in anymore.

If you feel attached to a garment given with love, don't leave it hanging in your closet — put it where you store your other memorabilia. There's no reason to keep every outfit you ever had fun in — you can keep memories without keeping clothes.

Take a long hard look at your older classics, especially those more than five years old. When you wear them, are you really dressing the person you are today?

When you go on a shopping trip, do some fine tuning on your closet. It's easier to get rid of garments you were undecided about if you have something to replace them with, and you have the added incentive of needing more room for your new things.

Keeping your closet in shape is an ongoing process. If you change wardrobes seasonally, go through everything before you put it away.

When you are deciding on clothes to save or get rid of, don't worry about the fate of a reject. After you have set aside the clothes you don't want to keep you can decide whether to sell them to a used clothing store or donate them to charity.

A creative alternative is a clothes-swapping party. Invite a group of friends and ask them to bring only their best castoffs. But be firm about helpng people take only what looks wonderful on them, or else one person's reject just becomes somebody else's closet clutter.

Once you are free of the skeletons in your closet, it is easy to organize what is left.

Fair Housing Practices In Greenville

As part of its continuing effort to provide fair housing opportunitites for its citizens, the Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors is releasing this public information notice concerning Federal Fair Housing Law.

Under Title VIII of the Civil Rights Act of 1968, in most instances, it is against the law to discriminate against a person in the buying, renting or financing of houses or apartments because of race, color, religion, national origin or sex. This law entitles any person who feels he or she has been discriminated against to file a complaint with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development by calling 1-800-424-8590 (toll free) or by writing: Fair Housing, U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, Washington, D.C. 20410.

The City of Greenville's Human Relations Council is also available to assist city residents in submitting complaints to HUD about housing discrimination. Interested persons should call Jessie Harris at 830-4499 or write the Human Relations Council, 306 So. Greene Street, Greenville, North Carolina 27834.

The Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors will also answer any questions or concerns regarding fair housing in Pitt County. Concerned citizens may contact D.D. Garrett, Chairman of the Equal Opportunity Committee at 757-1692 or 752-7756 (evenings), or the Board of Realtors office at 756-4211.

Recycling Is Enabled At Bell's Fork

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Phil Dickerson, Pitt County engineer, showed up at the Bell's Fork Refuse Collection Container Site recently with a paper grocery bag holding about eight pounds of paper, mostly newspaper.

"If each household in the county would bring us eight pounds of paper a week — and most of them generate much more than eight pounds a week — the county would save $180,000 a year," he said.

The county-owned-and-operated container site at Bell's Fork has recently been converted to a manned site planned for the separation of recyclable refuse. There's a truck transport container for mixed paper — newspaper, magazines, books — any clean paper. There's one for cardboard, one for clear glass, one for colored glass, and one for aluminum cans. The glass containers and cans don't have to be cleaned nor crushed. Machines do it all. The can crusher at the site, with magnets, even separates out any steel cans that might be mixed in with the aluminum before weighing. There is currently no market for the steel cans, but the county would like to have one.

All refuse that does not fit into any of these areas can be placed in a container which has a built-in compactor. Thus, the leftovers bound for the landfill are at the smallest volume when they are taken to the landfill and many previously needed trips are saved. The volume is reduced to about one-fourth the original volume, Dickerson said.

Even if the ideal of saving our natural resources were not considered, the value to county taxpayers of each household and business's separating refuse and taking it to this container site is easily seen. The county government saves money by every cubic inch of material that does not go into the county landfill. And the volume and cost of solid waste management has been growing yearly. In fiscal year 1979-80, the county disposed of 601,000 loose cubic yards of solid waste at a cost of $550,000. In fiscal year, 1986-87, it cost $750,000 to dispose of about 1 million cubic yards. Recycling seems a hope for turning the trend around.

The Bell's Fork container site is a model of efficiency and simplicity. It works largely because it's fenced in and manned during every hour that the gate is open — Monday-Friday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. County-paid workers are there to direct those who need assistance in placing items in the appropriate containers and to dissuade improper disposals. Those who wish can have their glass and aluminum cans weighed and paid for. Glass is paid for at two cents a pound; aluminum at 34 cents a pound.

As each container is filled, it's trucked to the appropriate recycler. The mixed paper and cardboard are taken to the East Carolina Vocational Center, which by its recycling efforts enables this county to be the top recycler in North Carolina. The glass is taken to a Foster Forbes Glass Company in Wilson. The Jeffries Beer and Wine Company of Greenville arranges for a tractor to come free of charge from Kernersville to pick up each trailer of aluminum cans the county generates.

"Obviously," Dickerson said, "it costs just about the same thing to transport the paper to the vocational center and the glass to Wilson that it does to take it to the landfill. And look at the volume saved at the landfill, plus we have the satisfaction of knowing it's being reused."

The Bell's Fork container site (actually 1½ miles south of Bell's Fork on the Old County Home Road) has been manned and fitted for recycling only since March 1. So it's anybody's guess how much it will be used by the public. "Conscientious thinking people will use it," Ann Maxwell, co-chairman of the Greenville Recycling Committee, said. "If we want to see our taxes stay the same or go down and our money be used better ways than buried in a landfill, we'll find ways to recycle," she said. She said she sees the Bell's Fork site as a "wonderful first step toward making recycling available to everyone."

Mary Ann Fletcher, a Cherry Oaks resident who visited the site Monday, said she is impressed with the ease with which the site can be used. She said she was first exposed to recycling efforts when her family lived in Madison, Conn., and that they missed separating household refuse when the family moved here. "This system's actually easier to use than the one we had in Connecticut," she said. "I'm very impressed with how nicely kept this site is so far."

The Bell's Fork site is the first of the 14 dumpster sites throughout the county to be so converted. If its operation proves worthwhile — and it seems highly unlikely that it will not be — then more sites will be converted during the next fiscal year which begins July 1 — and hopefully more in future years.

If separation of refuse became the rule throughout the county, use of the landfill would be cut to a minimum, perhaps as much as 50 percent, Dickerson believes.

The county has about 120 acres in the currently used landfill. About 70 acres of it are already used up. Environment protection requirements, like having to have wells to monitor groundwater quality in the area and the prospect of being required to supply liners in the future, make it wise for the county to continue to pursue these and other recycling efforts.

For now, money made from the sale of items from the Bell's Fork site is being used to pay salaries of the workers whose labor is contracted for with the Pitt County Mental Health Center. The Mental Health Center clients, until the refurbished site opened, operated the aluminum recycling portion of the service down the road at the greenhouse also operated by mental health clients.

Some landscaping of the site is under way. Bushes have been planted around the perimeter and planting of flowers is planned. The fencing and having attendants at all times has cut down on the amount of litter that used to be seen at the container site.

It is hoped that the provision of this and future recycling sites will go hand-in-hand with cleaning up of the roadsides of this and nearby counties by individuals and groups. This is an easily usable market for people who've gathered cans and glass containers to use.

Willie Barrett, a Farmville area resident, backed his pickup truck up to the glass container last week and sold about 1,100 pounds of glass at two cents a pound. He said he and some friends picked most of it up along roadsides in one morning.

1920s Art Reappearing In Russia

By ALISON SMALE
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Russia's avant-garde art of the 1920s, prized in the West but officially ignored in the Soviet Union, is reappearing in state-run galleries. Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's "new thinking" has finally reached the nation's fine arts.

September's packed exhibit in Moscow of works by Marc Chagall, who left the Soviet Union in 1922, attracted much attention at home and abroad for its display of several paintings that had been squirreled away for decades in museum storerooms or private collections.

A series of less high-profile exhibits is bringing other unknown works back to the public almost 60 years after socialist realism, heroic factory workers and towering industrial triumphs were decreed the basic fare of Soviet fine arts.

Over the past six months, major shows in Moscow and Leningrad have displayed the storeroom treasures of the nation's two major galleries — Moscow's Tretyakov and Leningrad's Russian Museum.

In the capital, there have been three personal exhibits devoted to artists of the '20s and their students, while a small show in a former church near the Kremlin contains gems from several private collections.

At one of Moscow's most prestigious exhibition halls, a larger show entitled "Art and Revolution" features such previously scorned works as Kazimir Malevich's "Black Square" and a view of Red Square by Vasily Kandinsky. Also on display are two large wall hangings done by Chagall for a Jewish theater and never before shown in public.

Many works have not been seen in public since the '20s and were executed by artists so long ignored that their names are virtually unknown to young Soviet art experts today.

Dmitri Sarabyanov, a professor at Moscow State University and an expert on Russian Art of the '20s, attributes the reappearance of the avant-garde to Gorbachev's "perestroika," or reconstruction, finally touching the fine arts.

"We were really lagging behind," Sarabyanov said in an interview. "In literature, it happened long before, in theater it happened long before, in film it happened long before." He was referring to the new books, plays and movies that have appeared in Soviet journals, theaters and cinemas over the past two years.

Although the fresh wind blowing through other fields has now rippled into the fine arts, Sarabyanov and others maintain that conservatives still block new developments in a country were authorities suppressed abstract art in the early '30s.

"Good artists just haven't had recognition," Sarabyanov said. Only a handful of specialists such as himself devoted their lives to preserving the works of the '20s. Three generations have grown up without them and public taste is unprepared for them now, he said.

In a Dec. 2 article in the cultural weekly Literaturnaya Gazeta, Sarabyanov criticized The Academy of Fine Arts for what he said was the spoiling of Soviet sculpture, painting and graphics.

The academy, founded in 1947 at a time of rigid Stalinist control over culture, mostly propagates the outmoded style of its founding members and has "lost touch with living young art," Sarabyanov said.

Difficulties still plague the showing of work from the 1920s. The paintings at "Art and Revolution" were hung in just two days, following a lively dispute about whether the exhibit should take place. As a result, the exhibition was barely publicized in Moscow and attracted fewer viewers than a show of 19th century American art at the same state-run gallery.

The need for such high-level backing indicates there is still powerful resistance to an abstract style long forgotten here.

The oblivion to which 1920s art was banished is illustrated in a story told by an art historian who asked not to be named. She related that a member of the Academy of Fine Arts, on a tour of Tretyakov storerooms off limits to the public, once was struck by an abstract work he spotted and asked who painted it.

Grant To N.C. Museum Of Art

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Museum of Art, Raleigh, has been awarded a $10,000 grant from the Kathleen Price and Josph M. Bryan Family Foundation, Inc. of Greensboro. The grant is to the museum's general acquisitions fund which is used to purchase works of art for the state's collection. Earlier, the foundation made a $5,000 grant to assist the museum in improving and maintaining its grounds.

Entry Dates For Shad Festival Art Show

GRIFTON — Entry dates for artists planning to enter the two-day Grifton Shad Festival Art Show are April 2 or April 9, between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. Artists may contact chairman Sylvia Mahoney at 524-4262. There is no fee charged for entry. The show will be held April 16 and 17 from noon to 6 p.m. both days in the Grifton Civic Center. Art work in all types of media, including photography, will be accepted for youth and adult categories. Also, persons wishing information on the Traditional Folk Arts area of the festival are to contact Betty Campbell at 524-5072. A complete schedule of the festival's 25 events is available by writing to: Grifton Shad Festival, Box 928, Grifton, N.C., 28530 or by calling 524-4075.

Details On Beaufort County Shows

WASHINGTON, N.C. — Dates and initial details of two upcoming shows sponsored by the Beaufort County Arts Council have been announced. The Fine Arts Show will be held July 23-31 with registration July 18 and 19. Last year's art show had over $10,000 in sales and over $4,000 in awards.

The annual Thanksgiving weekend craft show dates are Nov. 25 and 26. Forty booths are available for this juried event.

Artists and craftsmen interested in one or both shows are to send their name, address, phone number and brief details on their art to: The Beaufort County Arts Council, P.O. Box 634, Washington, N.C., 27889.

Additionally, artists interested in exhibiting at the arts council's galleries are to submit slides of their work for the Visual Arts Committee to review for exhibits in 1989. Mail slides to: Wanda Johnson, Gallery Coordinator at the above address.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By JIM FALCONI

With the 1988 presidential campaign well underway, new biographies about the candidates are appearing monthly. Three recent acquisitions focus on three contrasting political figures, and although each book may be viewed as self-serving, all offer factual histories, political records, and insights into the "character" of the candidates.

"Dukakis: An American Odyssey" is written by Charles Kenney and Robert L. Turner, two Boston Globe journalists who covered the governor for 20 years. Using interviews with Dukakis himself as well as those of friends, family, and adversaries, the writers examine both the political Dukakis (including his devastating defeat after one term as governor and his triumphant comeback and rise to national prominence) and the private Dukakis (including the family conflicts caused by an unstable brother).

"Pat Robertson: A Personal, Religious, and Political Portrait" by David Edwin Harrell, Jr., offers a well researched look at the son of Willis Robertson, the late senator from Virginia. The book traces his law student days at Yale, his brief climb up the corporate ladder in New York City, his spiritual struggles, and his decision to enter the ministry. His purchasing of a television station for $37,000 and developing it into a multimillion dollar enterprise makes a fascinating study of modern day televangelism. The emergence of the Moral Majority as a political force attracts Robertson into the political arena, and the last few chapters deal with Robertson's views on foreign policy, economics, and social issues.

"The Doles: Unlimited Partners" by Bob and Elizabeth Dole is a glimpse into a unique marriage. The book continuously shifts back and forth from Bob's to Elizabeth's point of view (with the last section written together — "If you can't decide who gets the last word you might as well share it.") Elizabeth describes her childhood in Salisbury, N.C., her rise in government to a position on Reagan's cabinet, and her decision to leave it in order to campaign full time for her husband. The description of Dole's 1976 campaign as Gerald Ford's running mate offers the reader some interesting "behind the scenes" campaign stories.

Whether or not these candidates will lead their parties in the presidential race, the books will provide some new insights into who these men really are.

Pleasures, No Surprises In GMA Shows

There are no surprises in the three exhibitions of art now on view at the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 South Evans Street. What is there is a number of quiet pleasures in art — contemporary art explored in realistic and abstracted art forms.

"New Works/New Directions" in the North Gallery, a traveling show of art by faculty members of the art department at Western Carolina University, Cullowhee, has ceramics, graphics, paintings, metal sculpture, blown glass, photographs and a woven piece.

Bill Buchanan's metal sculptures are lightly formed pieces, all untitled, but evoking music symbols transferred to metal. Two paintings by Lee Budhal contrast the ambience of Victorian houses — one in summer colors under a cloud-flecked summy sky; the other moonlight blue and silver, somewhat ghostly in the manner of a Poe story. A standing girl plays a violin on a porch.

Joan Falconer Byrd's small butterfly boxes (circular in shape), are glazed in misty gray and dull blue, dream-evokers in porcelain. The boxes are placed on a stand beneath Perry Kelly's "Cocoons," a beautiful, simply woven vertical wall hanging created of plastic and wool. It's all in white and silver except the top part which shades into warm burgandy.

One of the handmade paper works by James E. Smith depicts a stylized figure and boat fighting against surges of foaming water, in which the cast paper, according to the artist, "serves as a form of underpainting for further development in drawing." An unusual use of handmade paper.

The diversity of the WCS faculty artists is manifest in works as different as two large black and white photographs of young boys by Cathryn Griffin, and examples of blown glass pieces by David Nichols. Nichols employs unusual footed shapes in vivid or subdued colorings.

Jon Jicha shows sleeping dogs in chairs; Robert Godfrey has focused on dancers; and William R. Lidh has landscapes — of which "Mountain Landscape," executed in pastel and wax, is a markedly strong small work.

What is lacking in this exhibition is a larger number of works from each of the artists to provide more understanding of what they have achieved. Traveling shows, however, must be limited due to the mechanics of handling and costs involved.

"New Works/New Directions" whets the viewer's desire to see more works by these faculty artists.

In the upstairs gallery, the current exhibit is of drawings by artists Edwin F. Harris and Melissa Harris collectively titled "Souvenirs/Drawings." Both are architects. Yet, they go far beyond mere technical description in these small sketches to capture the immediacy of the moment, in mood as well as the recognizable characteristics of a building or landscape.

I find the black and white drawings in pencil, charcoal and ink considerably more resonant than the ones in color. The black and white drawings are both faithful depictions of chosen subject and works inspired by the inner core of poetry that an artist discovers. These drawings carry on the illuminating tradition of sketches that has never grown old through past centuries — miniatures far more expressive than any photograph could ever be.

"Souvenirs/Drawings" is a resource travel art project formed and coordinated by the University Center Gallery and N.C. State University.

In the South Galleries downstairs and in the entry hall, acquisitions of art for the museum's permanent collection are being shown. These newer pieces cover the gamut from sculpture to prints, paintings and photographs. It's a treat to see this newer grouping of acquisitions.

Together, the three current shows provide viewing as refreshing as these early days of pastel-hue spring.

"New Works/New Directions" will be on view through April 25; "Souvenirs/Drawings" until April 17, and the show of recent acquisitions through April 29. There is ample free parking space available. Admission is free. Museum hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesdays through Fridays and from 1 to 5 p.m. Sundays.

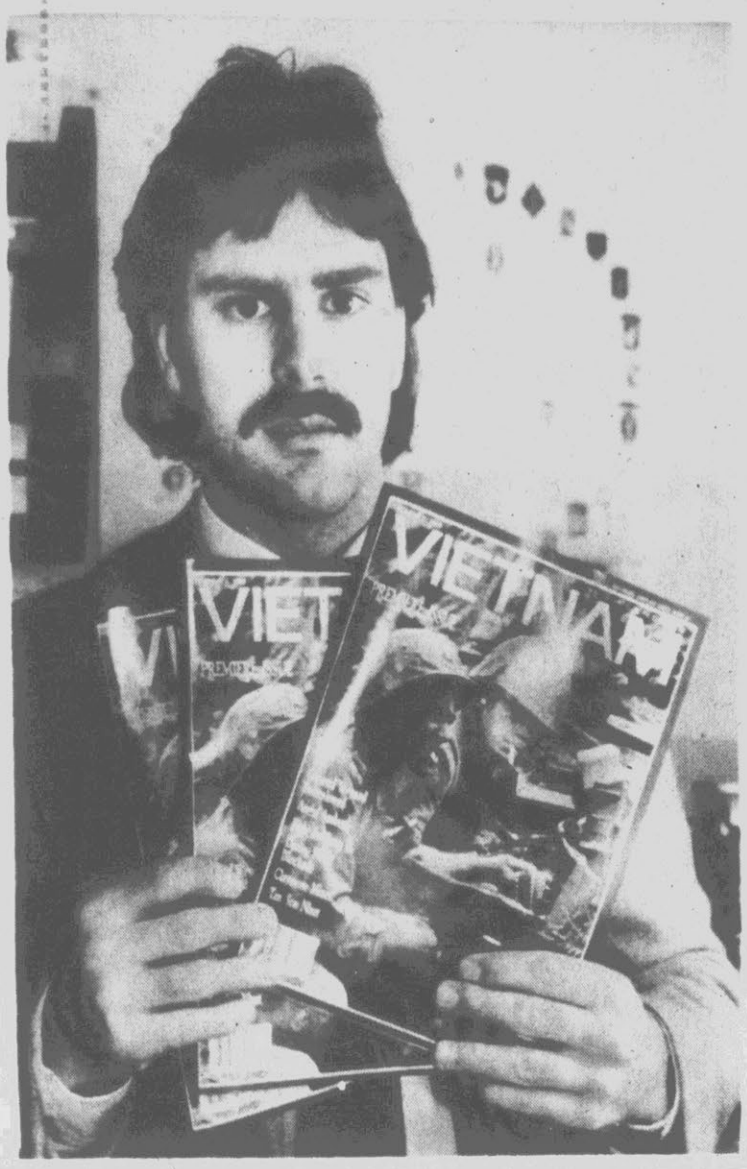
New Magazine Part Of Ongoing Vietnam Literary Scene



NEW MAGAZINE — Gregg R. Oehler, publisher of the new slick magainze named "Vietnam," holds copies of the premierie issue in his Leesburg, Va. office. Oehler said 150,000 copies of the first issue have been printed. They went on sale Tuesday. (AP Laserphoto by Barry Thumma)

By GEORGE ESPER
AP Special Correspondent

BOSTON (AP) — An old generation is remembering the Vietnam war and a new generation is curious, stirring a revival of the controversial era in books and movies. Now comes a new publication, a slick magazine simply named Vietnam, whose premiere issue went on sale Tuesday.

"Our timing could not have been better because right now, look at all the Vietnam movies that have come out," said publisher Gregg R. Oehler in a telephone interview from Leesburg, Va., where the magazine is published by Empire Press. "Look at all the major emphasis now on video, on books. It's Vietnam. Everyone now is talking about Vietnam."

Oehler said 150,000 copies of the first issue were printed, including 50,000 for subscribers and 100,000 for newsstand sales across the United States and in 16 other countries. The magazine, a quarterly, sells for $2.95 a copy on newsstands and for $9.95 for the four issues by subscription.

Oehler said the response has been so overwhelming from wholesalers, subscribers and the media that the magazine will probably go to six issues a year in 1989. Many of the subscribers are Vietnam veterans, a large number of them in prison.

"I've gotten hundreds of letters from Vietnam veterans in prison," said Oehler. "They're so happy to hear that a magazine is coming out."

Each issue will run 68 pages with a regular format of four feature stories and six departments including editorial, fighting forces, bases and installations, arsenal and book reviews.

The initial issue includes an interview with Gen. Fred C. Weyand, America's last military commander in Vietnam, and a story on Tan Son Nhut Air Base, the command center for America's forces in Vietnam which was called the "Pentagon East." It also includes 32 pages of color photographs and maps. The cover shows two soldiers defending their post with a machine gun.

"Thirty-eight years after American involvement in Vietnam began, 15 years after the withdrawal of all U.S. military forces there, and 13 years after the fall of Saigon, the war there truly remains an enigma. The goal we here at Vietnam magazine have set for ourselves is to find the key to unlock that enigma."

In an interview, Summers said that in visits to colleges he has found great interest in Vietnam among young people who want to know what really happened there. He said there seems to be a misunderstanding of the war especially among this generation, many of whom were not even born when American soldiers were pouring into Vietnam in 1965.

"There is the perception that the United States was defeated by a guerrilla army," he said. "That's not true. The American military withdrew from Vietnam 2½ years before the fall of Saigon. The North Vietnamese did not defeat the American military when they seized Saigon for a very simple reason: There was no American military there to defeat. One of our objectives is to refute some of the myths."

Summers, 56, is widely known and respected as an authority on military affairs. He served in both the Korean and Vietnam wars.

He is a columnist for the Los Angeles Times Syndicate, a contributing editor for U.S.News & World Report, and the author of two books, including the widely acclaimed "On Strategy: A Critical Analysis of the Vietnam War."

The magazine's editorial review board includes Gen. William C. Westmoreland, former commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam, and authors Stanley Karnow and Al Santoli, both of whom have written books on Vietnam.

Asked if the presence of Westmoreland and other former Vietnam officers on the board will leave the impression that the magazine will give only the official view, one that was often discredited during the war, Summers said:

"We've tried to get the voices as diverse as possible. I don't think Stanley Karnow's an apologist for the war. I don't think I'm an apologist for the war."

Another Star For Makuck

PILGRIMS. A Chapbook of Poems. By Peter Makuck. Bristol, R.I. Ameprsand Press. Paper, 32 pages. $3.50.

Poetry chapbooks serve a useful niche in poetry publication — a halfway place between the scattered publication of individual poems and the time wait for the issuance of a full collection of a poet's work.

"Pilgrims" by East Carolina University Department of English faculty member and director of the ECU Poetry Forum Peter Makuck, is a welcome collection of 14 poems from this talented word singer who has given us different cadances of poetry in recent years.

Like much of Makuck's earlier work, the poems in "Pilgrims" speak to seasons in weather, to moods and visual images of places drawn from distillations of sensitive responses to landscapes, and to a parallel, but lesser degree, of people inhabiting these spaces.

This chapbook deals primarily with the landscapes of Italy and France. The opening poem sets the stages of discovery through travel in an initial tour taken in Italy.

" . . . we move with our guide, small/ Under the chiseled saints/ Of Florentine and Roman masters,/ Unshaped by the vision/ That moved their hands and rested on absolute law . . ."

Then in "Toward Paris," the poet seizes on a common occurrence sighted from a train, transforms it into a vignette of visual beauty interwoven with symbolism. "Lower the window: new air,/ A deserted dirt road and/ A peasant pedaling away,/ A wand-like loaf in his hand,/ Taillight growing weak/ Red in the dark, as if his work/ Was to bring fresh light/ To woods and fields. Which he did, . . ."

How many of us in travels have been witness to such scenes? How few of us can articulate the sense of marvel, the spark of present and future memory that the moment engenders?

Throughout this slim volume, Makuck, in an unsassuming manner with no pretentiousness intruding into the telling, points out the possibilities of experiencing the wide range of rich visions, of emotions that exist in our daily lives.

On viewing a door in a hillside — "There is a cellar — a door in the hillside/ Where men escape wives, rack the guns, gut rabbit,/ Let wine rev up their lives . . ." The setting is French, the application universal.

At Valluris, where Makuck's son plays with a local lad, the poet records the scene — "Our son climbs/ With a dark-haired boy/ On the plinth of the "Goat Herd"/ That Picasso made for the square./ They hug its bronze legs/ And turn about/ Where merchants on Sunday morning/ Pile the newspaper/ To wrap their flowers and fish—/ A fresh indifference to art, . . ." A superb necklace of words and lines that economically chronicles the presence of a master work of modern art existing in indifferent harmony with the timeless art of wrapping fish and flowers.

Each poem in this volume has its own song of places, it word music of mood that confirms the rewards of adventure still open to travelers (and non-travelers) who still can dream, who can see our contemporary world in terms of poetry as vividly as ancient bards — men who did not know (or failed to practice) the secret of brilliant brevity that Makuck is able to conjure up.

Another star for poet Peter Makuck.

Spiritual Values Needed

HOPE FOR HEALING: Good News for Adult Children of Alcoholics. By Rachel Callahan and Rea McDonnell. New York, Paulist Press. 91 pages, paperback, $4.95.

Written by college spiritual director and teacher, Rea McDonnell and psychologist, Rachel Callahan, this book takes a religious approach toward healing adult children of alcoholics. It offers six steps for what the authors call "footholds toward grace."

They begin by defining alcoholism as a disease comparable to the disease of diabetes. According to the authors, both diseases run in families. Both diseases can "cause havoc within the person and within the person's network of relationships." Just as hiding from diabetes can cause death, they believe that denying alcoholism "can lead to physical death" as well as "all manner of psychospiritual death among the family members."

According to the authors, two specific denials plague the adult children of alcoholics: They deny the abuse of alcohol in their homes, and they deny that the non-drinking parent could have any flaw at all — all or nothing thinking.

They say that although ACOA's want to be healed, they fear wanting anything from anyone. They are afraid to let anyone know how desperate is their longing for approval, control, belonging and affection. Chocolate, work, sleep, sex, or even the hated alcohol itself substitutes for the deeper relationships.

The authors suggest that readers go slowly through the book, knowing that awareness of the denied pain is the first step toward healing. To discard old unproductive ways of coping and learn their new ways is the second step. They encourage ACOA's to go into pain, expose its source, share it with others in a group until it heals. Finally, they suggest ACOA's help via groups by reaching out to help others who fit into this stereotype.

Callahan and McDonnell's discussion makes a good argument that spiritual values are necessary for the alcoholic's children's recovery, spiritual values gained by the author's six-steps of transformation "from disease to integrity."

Readings At St. Andrews

LAURINBURG — Paul Jones and Gary Carden, writers of the North Carolina Writer's Network, will read at St. Andrews Presbyterian College in Mecklenburg Dorm Lounge at 8 p.m. Thursday.

The event is free and open to the public.

The N.C. Writer's Network is sponsoring readings across the state in a series, "Readers and Writers," being hosted in ten readings.

Jones, a communciations specialist in Chapel Hill, is the recipient of a Carolina Quarterly Poetry Prize, a N.C. Arts Council Writers' Fellowship, and the Theodore Christian Hoefner Award from the Southern Humanities Review. With Richard Kraweic, he edited "Cardinal — An Anthology of North Carolina Writing" and for more than ten years has directed a series of readings at ArtCenter in Carrboro. His poetry has appeared in numerous publications.

Carden is a former English and drama instructor who has won awards in both the classroom and theater. For eight years he was an employee of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians which provided him with the opportunity to explore Cherokee myth and legend, one of which serves as a basis for his play, "The Uktena." He will read from his plays and fiction.

The Wacky World Of Italian TV

By STEPHEN R. WILSON
Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) — The losing contestant on a game show strips. A gaudy emerald ring fills the screen for hours on end as the price flashes underneath. The host of Italy's most popular TV program tells his 12 million viewers to turn off their sets for five minutes in a peace gesture.

Welcome to the zany world of Italian TV, perhaps the oddest — some say most watchable — show on Earth.

There are so many TV stations in Italy today that it's almost impossible to keep up with all the talk shows, strip shows, auctions, astrology sessions, documentaries and song-and-dance extravaganzas.

With 1,100 private channels and new stations sprouting up every day, and a high-stakes war raging between state-run and private TV, the government says it is finally close to passing a law to regulate the industry and restore some sanity to the airwaves.

"We've been living in Wild West conditions," says Post and Telecommunications Minister Oscar Mammi. "Now it's time for the sheriff to step in."

Italy has undergone a television revolution in the past decade. Color TV was introduced only 12 years ago, and for years TV-starved Italians, limited to only two state-run channels, set up special antennas to pick up programs from neighboring Switzerland, France and Austria.

All that changed in 1976 when the nation's Constitutional Court ruled that the state-run RAI network did not have a monopoly of the airwaves, thus opening the door for commercial TV.

Since then, under the guidance of building magnate Silvio Berlusconi, the private Canale 5 network is challenging RAI for ratings supremacy.

Despite a ban on live nationwide broadcasts on private TV, the combined viewing figures for Berlusconi's three channels — Retequattro, Canale 5 and Italia Uno — often top those of RAI's three stations during prime time. The private networks tape their shows and deliver the tapes to relay stations around Italy for simultaneous broadcast.

But overall the race is heavily stacked in RAI's favor. The power of live television is strong: an average of 14 million viewers tune in to RAI Uno's nightly newscast, and many stick with the station the rest of the evening. RAI runs most of its commercials in a package between programs.

"Together we're running a 100-meter race. But they (RAI) get a running start while we're still in the starting blocks," Berlusconi said. "We have to stop for a commercial every 12 minutes, and we lose 8-10 percent of the viewers at each break."

Under Mammi's proposed anti-trust law, Berlusconi would have to drop one of his stations but could broadcast live on the others. One of RAI's stations would drop commercials altogether. But considering that the government has been promising for 10 years to push through an industry law, there's no predicting when or if Mammi's proposal will be approved.

Berlusconi's channels rely heavily on recycled American fare: soap operas such as "General Hospital" and "Dallas," cop shows such as "The A-Team" and "Starsky and Hutch," Hollywood movies and reruns of pro football and basketball games.

Canale 5 also runs countless game and talk shows, including a quiz show run by a man called Mike Buongiorno, and the comedy hit "Drive In," Italy's version of the old "Laugh-In" program, replete with a cast of busty women jiggling in skimpy outfits.

The ratings war is waged on one main front: the variety show and its megastar host.

Last year, Berlusconi hired away RAI's long-reigning king, Pippo Baudo, and made him host of the Friday night program, "Festival." Baudo was replaced on RAI's Saturday "Fantastico" program by singer Adriano Celentano, who has embarrassed the network with a series of gaffes and has become a cult hero.

Celentano has attracted between 11 million and 12 million per show, down about 2 million from Baudo's RAI audience last year. At Canale 5, Baudo's show averages about 8 million viewers. The two shows, which run for more than three hours, consist mainly of Broadway-style musical sketches and performances by pop singers, stand-up comedians and off-beat entertainers.

The Italian variety show often features Americans. The lead dancer on "Fantastico" is Californian Heather Parisi, discovered by Baudo in a Rome disco, and this fall's guest stars included a trio of sexy American female pop singers: Apollonia, Vanity and Jill Jones.

Top Dance Honors

The Jazz Ensemble of Greenville's Dance Art Theater won first place in a three-state regional competition held in Durham on March 20. The ensemble will now compete nationally in Myrtle Beach, S.C. in July.

The Jazz Ensemble performed "La Bamba" choreographed and staged by Michelle Fountain, faculty member of the N.C. Academy of Dance Arts, official school of the Dance Arts Theater. Performers were Jeremi Dilworh, Holly MacKenna, Blair French, Sandi Kannen, Genny Redding, Allyson Carter, Karen Whaley and Caroline Ames.

The ensemble took part in the jazz small group category and scored outstanding in areas of technique, routine, rhythm and sound, stage presence, costume and general impressin.

The Showstopper National Talent Competition to be held at Myrtle Beach encompasses 46 regional competition. This season the competition will host over 40,000 performers from all across the U.S. Winners will be televised nationally.

Sherryl Mercer, artistic director of Dance Arts Theater, said "Competition is a new area for us. We were not sure what the judges were looking for, and the competition was strong, so we were delighted to win first place."

Percussion Concert At ECU Monday

The 15-member Percussion Ensemble I of East Carolina University will perform in a program to be presented at 8:15 p.m. Monday in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall on campus. The event is free and open to the public.

Mark Ford is director of the ensemble which will play seven selections on its program.

Soloist for the composition, "Music of the Day" by Bill Molenhof will be vibraphonist Dan Davis. Davis, an ECU music student is winner of this year's ECU concerto competition. He was national winner last year in the percussion auditions category of the Music Teachers National Association.

Other pieces to be played are: "Alternate Loopholes" by Mark Ford; "Flying Dream" by Dennis Carlson; "Sonitana," by Fisher Tull; "Metal Things" by Chris Moore, and "Momentum" by William Craft.

Faculty Honored

Two faculty members of the School of Music, East Carolina University, have been honored recently.

• Selma Gokcen, cellist and cello teacher at ECU, was invited as a guest performer to play with the Istanbul Philharmonic at the Ataturk Cultural Center in Istanbul, Turkey. The concert drew a sell-out audience.

Ms. Gokcen was cello soloist in Edouard Lalo's "Concerto for Cello and Orchestra."

• Dr. Charles E. Stevens, dean of the ECU School of Music, was elected vice president in charge of membership of the North Carolina Association of Music Schools. He was elected during the annual conference of the association which met on the N.C. A&T campus in Greensboro.

Stevens is also continuing as a member of the association's executive committee.

An Adventure Drama, 'Terra Nova,' Opens Monday At ECU

In the winter of 1911-12, five Englishmen and five Norwegians raced to the Antarctic. Only the five Norwegians returned. "Terra Nova" is the story of the Englishmen.

Ted Tally's drama of Robert Falcon Scott's ill-fated expedition to the South Pole is the fourth offering of the East Carolina Playhouse's 1987-88 season.

The drama is directed by Donal Biehn.

It opens Monday at 8:15 p.m. in McGinnis Theater on the East Carolina University campus and runs nightly through Thursday. Tickets are priced at $5 and $4 for groups of 10 or more.

The ECU performance this week coincides with the 76th anniversary of the date of Scott's last entry into his diary, dated March 29, 1912, found on his frozen body.

In "Terra Nova," Tally has alternated scenes of Scott and his men at various stages of their ordeal with other scenes in which Scott conducts remembered or imaginary dialogues. These are with his wife, Kahhleen, an independent woman and companion of Isadora Duncan and Rodin; and with Norwegian Roald Amundsen, who beats Scott to the South Pole by one month.

Throughout the play, Amundsen functions as a combination goad, tempter, and alter ego for Scott.

Scott was a typically Edwardian, proper English gentlemen convinced of English superiority. His conquest of the South Pole was to be a human one, rooted in the British tradition of "playing the game fairly." He had his men haul their provision-laden sled over tricky crevasses through the frozen Antarctic and back without the use of huskies.

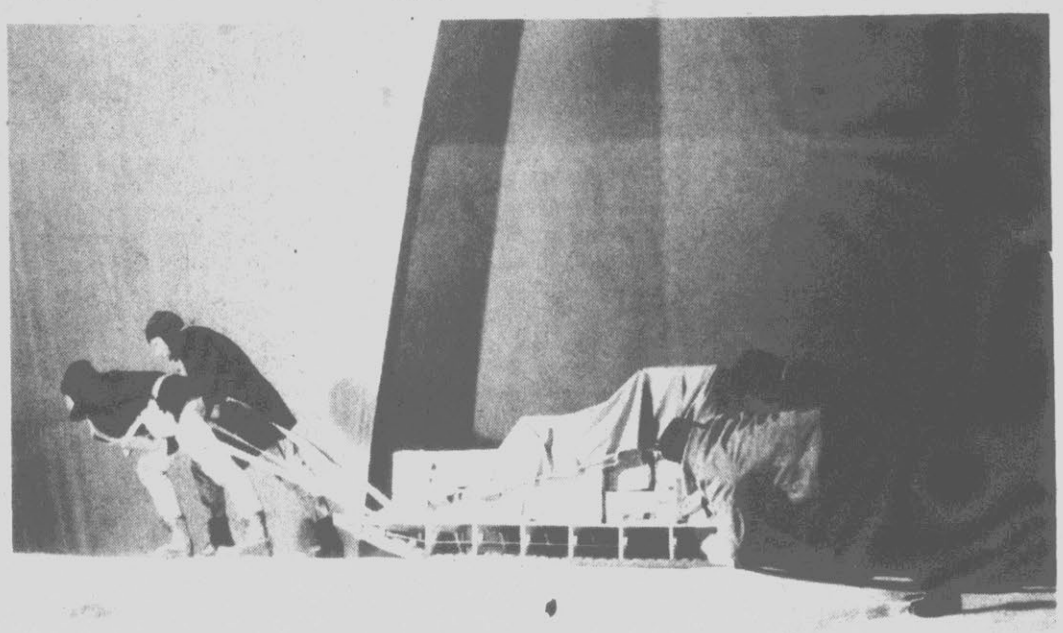
Amundsen, on the other hand, used huskies to pull his sled, and then used them as food on the return trip.

Scott reached the South Pole, only to find that Admundsen's group had been there, planted the Norwegian flag and left the British a note. Nonetheless, the British hoisted the Union Jack and took the famed photo later found with their bodies. That photo and others are projected on the stage during the show.

The return journey was savage. Scott's men falter and fall, from legs gone game, from snow blindness, from madness. The clash of ideals — common sense on the one hand, sportsmanship on the other — is present throughout the agony of the journey. As Scott makes his final entries in his diary, he is overtaken by exhilaration of "rightness," of belonging.

"Some men are only intensely alive for one moment," he writes for the world to read, "and this is it."

Was Scott a hero or a fool? Playwright Tally never makes this decision for the audience; it is left up to each individual to decide.



"Terra Nova" features an elaborate Antarctic set

The evocative Antarctica set designed by Robert Alpers has been in the planning stage for over five months. After constant consultations with director Biehn, Alpers used over 9,000 board feet of Styrofoam, 100 yards of muslin, gallons of paint and liquid plaster, and many man hours to transform the stage of McGinnis Theater into the stark, frozen landscape of Antarctica.

Costume designer Maria Costa said "The dress of Scott and his men is not what most people would think of as below-freezing clothing. As a matter of fact, it was hard to believe that men would go on such a journey with what the audience will see on stage." The costumes are based on actual photos of Scott and his men.

Dialects used by actors in "Terra Nova" are the result of many working sessions with associate professor of the Department of Theater Arts, Dr. Helen Steer. Born and educated in England, she had her own background to build from for the English dialects of Scott and his men. For the Norwegian dialect, Dr. Steer became alerted by Ms. Olav Osland of a possible resource in Lumberton. A foreign exchange student, Eva Marie Hassroed, was living there. Dr. Steer contacted her about using tape recordings of her voice to study Norwegian dialects. Dr. Steer went to Lumberton, met with and taped Ms. Hassroed, and later arranged information she had gathered in a logical order so that she could effectively teach the actors.

Lane Recital

Leigh Anne Lane of Sykesville, Md., a student of Deborah Chodacki in the School of Music, East Carolina University, will give her junior recital at 9 p.m. Wednesday in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall. It is free and open to the public.

She will be accompanied by Lee Ann Taggart, piano, and assisted by Jenny Grum, mezzo-soprano. For her program she will perform three compositions — Mozart's "Concerto for Clarinet, K622;" Ludwig Sphor's "Six German Songs,- and Poulenc's "Sonata for Clarinet."

Aman Recital

Melanie Leigh Aman of Jacksonville will be heard in her senior percussion recital at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall on the East Carolina University campus. The recital is free and open to the public.

She is a student of Dr. Mark Taggart in the ECU School of Music.

For her recital she will perform four works, all her own compositions. These are "Tomes I - II" for piano; "Spirits of Wars: I - Prelude, II - The Callings" for brass quintet; "On Children: I - Pondering, II - Lullaby, III, At Play," originally for string orchestra but will be synthesized, and "Confessions of A Music Box," for percussion ensemble with piano, celesta, string bass and tape.

New Comedy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Monty Python" alumnus Graham Chapman is starring in a new comedy series he has co-written for CBS, "Jake's Journey," loosely based on Mark Twain's "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court." Hal Ashby is directing.

FERRY PLEASURES — Ferries in eastern North Carolina provide an added dimension of excitement in travel — feeling a river breeze, getting good views of river and sound shores, and watching the antics of sea gulls who wing alongside the ferries. Reactions To A Play By Rudy Wallace

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Fortunately for playwrights striving to establish themselves to the point of being able to make a living from their art, there is a growing audience willing to listen to their scripts in progress presented in simplified reading performances.

One of North Carolina's principal forums for such presentations is the Playwrights Fund of North Carolina based in Greenville, which selects and presents readings of plays in progress on a monthly basis.

On the evenings of March 18 and 19, Rudy Wallace's one-act play, "Dark Towers," was given reading performances at the Downtown, Downstairs theater area of the PFNC in the Humber House, 117 West Fifth Street.

Charla Davis of Greenville directed the reading, with Roy Thomas of Tarboro and Chris Flynn of Greenville reading the roles of Joe Necessary and Phil Strater, respectively.

Because of limited seating, Greenville audiences attending such readings are necessarily small. But the lack of numbers is decidedly offset by the critical attention given by audiences to the words, the way words build or fail to build a plausible, cohesive plot. In short, in discussion sessions following readings, responses address the basics — words, moods, structure, plot — that are a playwright's building blocks.

"In these sessions, people's gut reactions to a play while it's still being worked on is vital to a playwright," Wallace said. "A playwright by nature has to be sensitive to the world around him or he'd not be struggling to write plays. He, or she, gains, benefits from honest, thoughtful feedback from these sessions.

"Sometimes something that is said will serve to pinpoint to flaw that nags the writer, but is something he's been unable to discover until a listener's words serves as a trigger."

"Dark Tower," first penned in 1974, has undergone four revisions. It's a play of dialogue between two black men. Both have in common — but on a different level — a fantasy world concept of the worth of their creative talent.

The older of the two, Joe Necessary, a flamboyant conversationalist in his 50s, is visited in his "dark tower" by a younger man, Phil Strater. Strater fancies he has talent and wants reassurance from Necessary that he too might be numbered among the blessed achievers. However, Strater is thwarted by the trappings of contemporary success — a teaching career, a wife, children.

Greenville listeners in general were in agreement that the strength of this verbal play is in the portrait of himself that Necessary builds up layer by layer in a spectacular account of his past achievements. He boasts of having been married three times, of siring six children. He has been a playwright, a poet, a sculptor, an artist, and had hobnobbed with the famous in Harlem, in Paris and in other exotic watering places of the creative world.

In the process of the conversation, young Strater becomes increasingly doubtful of the truth in Necessary's fantastic life tale. As they imbibe freely of gin in the plant-filled dark tower room that is Necessary's home, Strater becomes irritated by the manner in which Necessary puts him down, belittles his lifestyle and most wounding of all, casts doubts on Strater's talent.

The beauty of language was one of the strong points mentioned by members of the audience. Words, phrases — some humorous, some poignant, others expressions of a somewat bizarre philosophy, illuminated the development of the characters. The extravagance of Necessary's claims gives credibility to his turnabout in eventually unveiling the mask of make believe that has long been the real truth of his life. He sums up his life when he declares: "I am my art. My life is my art. I am the art and the artist."

Some of the play's shortcomings expressed by the audience included the lack of stronger development for the character of the younger man. Another was an opinion that the conclusion, which had Necessary frightening Stater with pulling out a toy pistol, was basically a convenient device to end the play, a ploy void of meaning in the context of the play.

Rudy Wallace, a native of the Virgin Islands, now makes his home in Raleigh. He has recently given up a teaching career to devote his energies fulltime to the pursuit of playwriting. "Dark Towers" is one of a triology of one-act plays written in 1974 that have been accorded productions over the years — by companies in Philadelphia and in New York, where they were staged by the off-Bradway Negro Ensemble Company.

On April 11, there will be a reading of one of his one-act plays, "The Cave" by a writer's workshop in New York. The Raleigh Ensemble Players this month staged a reading of another Wallace play, "The Moonlight Arms."

A staunch admirer of the work of playwright Tennessee Williams, Wallace nonetheless maintains that while "Williams' work is certainly an inspiration to me, yet I speak in my own voice, my own way."

PFNC Announces Audition Dates

Auditions for the two-act play, "Seafood," will be held at 7:30 p.m. on two dates, Tuesday and Wednesday, in the Downtown, Downstairs theater section of the Humber House, 117 West Fifth Street.

Actors needed to fill the roles for the reading presentation of the play are four males and four females between the ages of 18 and 50.

The play will be directed by local actor Greg Watkins and is scheduled to be presented on April 23 and 24 as the April offering of the Playwrights Fund of North Carolina, Inc.

Ava and husband in 1953: Sammy (r) was just Frank's friend

Q. Was Ava Gardner ever married to Sammy Davis Jr.? If so, when were they married and for how many years?—B.J. Helms, Garland, Tex.

A. Ava Gardner was never married to Sammy Davis Jr. The screen actress was married to Mickey Rooney from 1942 to 1943, to bandleader Artie Shaw from 1945 to 1946 and to Frank Sinatra from 1951 to 1957 (though separated after 1954).

Q. Each time I see President and Mrs. Reagan depart the White House for Camp David, I notice a crowd of people behind the ropes, waving goodbye to them. Who are these people? Are they tourists who are directed to this event with hopes of getting a glimpse of the Reagans, or are they White House staff and other paid government employees? —V. Milo Hansen, Bellevue, Wash.

A. The people who see the President and Mrs. Reagan off to Camp David consist of White House staff and their invited guests. Occasionally some tourists are allowed.

Q. I have never seen a motion picture with more extras in it than "The Last Emperor." How many extras were hired, and how much did the film cost?—Yi Chung, San Francisco, Calif.

A. "The Last Emperor"—filmed in China, directed by Bernardo Bertolucci and with only one big name, Peter O'Toole, in the cast—cost approximately $25 million to produce. Some 19,000 extras were employed in the picture.

Q. Some questions about Liz Taylor and her diet book, "Elizabeth Takes Off": Who wrote it for her? How much of an advance did she get? In her 56 years, what's the most Liz has weighed? Does she lose weight by plastic surgery or genuine dieting? Which of her husbands—she has been married seven times—and nonhusbands has Liz loved most?—Jacie Reed, New Orleans, La.

A. "Elizabeth Takes Off" reportedly was penned by ghostwriter Jane Scovell from tapes by Taylor. According to Chen Sam, who handles her publicity, the actress got an advance of about $750,000. Taylor's weight in the last 40 years has ranged roughly between 115 and 180 pounds, depending on her intake of food and alcohol. She admits to a chin tuck but angrily denies that her hefty weight loss was the result of liposuction or major plastic surgery. She is, after all, a woman of determination and willpower, without which she'd never have survived in the jungles of Hollywood. Of the many men in her life, she loved most the two from whom she learned the most: husband No. 3, Mike Todd, and husband No. 5 and 6, Richard Burton.

Q. Is there any truth to the rumor that Judge Joseph Wapner of TV's "People's Court" presided over the trial of Charles Manson, who was responsible for the murders of Sharon Tate and others?—Harriette Brent, Aurora, Colo.

A. No. The judge at the Manson trial was Charles H. Older of the California Superior Court.

Q. Who were "Time" magazine's first man and first woman of the year?—Jonathan Lee, Charlottesville, Va.

A. The magazine's first man of the year was Charles A. Lindbergh, in 1927; its first woman of the year was Wallis Warfield Simpson, in 1936.

First for Time: Charles Lindbergh and Wallis Simpson

Q. I am very interested in knowing which was the first country to recognize Israel as a state. —Jack Brauner, Rio Rancho, N.M.

A. The State of Israel came into being at midnight on May 14, 1948. It was first recognized as such 11 hours later, by the United States. Chaim Weizmann and David Ben-Gurion became Israel's first president and prime minister, and the new government was admitted to the United Nations on May 11, 1949.

Q. Is it true that Hugh Hefner, the publisher of "Playboy," won't date a female over 30? How old is Hefner anyway?—Madeleine N., Atlanta, Ga.

A. Hugh Hefner was born in Chicago on April 9, 1926, which means he is en route to 62. He has dated several women over 30.

America's "snow soldiers" watch their Soviet counterparts

THEY KEEP VIGIL IN ALASKA

BY PETER A. ISEMAN

CAMOUFLAGED WHITE-ON-WHITE against the snowscape, six enlisted men on snowshoes silently march north single-file. On a moonless midwinter Alaskan night, 150 miles below the Arctic Circle, it's now 30° below zero: America's new snow soldiers are out on war-game maneuvers.

Tonight, I am accompanying the squad on its mission: to spy on an imaginary unit of the elite Spetsnaz, or Soviet special operations forces, who, in this scenario, are ready to unleash chemical and biological weapons from howitzers.

My mission is to find out who these men are and what they are doing in this lonely frozen wilderness.

As they march through a terrain of frozen bogs and dense forests, the cold is their first and worst enemy. At 3:45 a.m., their breath freezes on their balaclava-type facemasks and ice crystals mat their eyelashes.

It is still too dark for me to read the thermometer, but snow soldiers can gauge the temperature by their bodies' telltale signs. At 30° below zero, exposed flesh freezes in 60 seconds. At 50° below, spit freezes as it hits the ground. At 70° below, exposed flesh freezes in six seconds and spit freezes in midair. Arctic gusts only deepen the chill.

Under these harsh conditions, the snow soldiers are schooled to be stoics. "I can deal with the cold real good," says Spec. 4 Steven Place, 27, of Howell, Mich. "You can always put on more clothes." A native of Florida, Staff Sgt. James Storter, 27, says, "They dress you right up here, and you get used to the cold."

viction that their presence here is vital. "The Bear is definitely there," says Sergeant Storter. Alaska forms our sole shared border with the Soviet Union, being only a few miles across the Bering Strait from Chukchi Peninsula. Indeed, a Soviet life raft, battery and gas mask recently were found on St. Lawrence Island, Alaska—a treeless, windswept island in the Bering Sea only 37 miles from Siberia.

Until last year, America had had no true snow soldiers for a generation. The new 41-man Long Range Surveillance Detachment is part of the Army's 106th Military Intelligence Battalion. Though comparable to the Army Rangers or Special Forces in mode of operation, their mission is unique—to be our human eyes and ears in the North. They must be capable of moving behind enemy lines to look and listen.

Already they have scored. During night maneuvers on a mountaintop high in gold country, Washington intelligence sources say, they were able to pick up the signals of an elite military unit in the USSR comparable to our Special Forces and known by the coded nickname "Soviet snake-eaters."

The ideal snow soldier, says Colonel Wilson, is curious, long on native memory, self-contained and stoical as well as tough. "We want men who can sublimate violence into vigilance," he adds.

On war-game maneuvers, to avoid being seen, they usually sleep in snow caves by day and march under the stars and Northern Lights for up to two weeks at a time. Shunning the open when possible, they drag branches to cover their ski and snowshoe tracks.

It's a job these men clearly enjoy. "Surveillance gives you a chance to be quiet out there, to sneak around," says Steven Place. Sgt. Alan Wika, a veteran of the French Foreign Legion, comments, "It's hide and seek. We can crawl up and listen, and they don't even know we're there. It requires more skill, and it's more fun. Sure, sometimes it's tedious [during war games], but you're hiding, and when people are walking over you as you lay still in a snowbank, the adrenaline comes up. It gets fascinating."

Like much of the Army's airborne-trained infantry, snow soldiers come from the smaller towns of the South and Midwest. Prospective candidates must pass a rigorous selection process. Twelve more are to be added to the unit by October.

Why volunteer for hardship? Sgt. Patrick Tipton, 23, of Wyoming, Mich., says he was "looking for something exciting, something different." Sergeant Storter saw in Alaska "a far-off assignment with good fishin' and huntin' in the backyard." Sergeant Wika told me, "I asked to come here. No other Army unit faces the problems we do: logistics, Alaska and the cold."

Spec. 4 Daniel Perez, 26, from Caguas, Puerto Rico—who weighs only 130 pounds yet carries a 70-pound pack—says, "I always wanted to be a professional soldier. Cold weather is new and exciting for me, but boy does it get to me! I never skied in my life, but we've got good instructors, and I worked at it on my own time."

In addition to training maneuvers, the snow soldiers take multiweek courses in survival skills at the Northern Warfare Training Center in Fort Greely, Alaska, and at the Air Force "cool school," where they learn to stalk game and live on birch bark and ptarmigan (grouse).

In the weeks ahead, they also will train with a unit of Eskimo scouts on St. Lawrence Island, then parachute onto the polar ice. Why? "Someday a Russian intelligence satellite might go down in neutral polar territory," one of their commanders explains, "and we'd be in a helluva race for the prize."

A visitor out with the snow soldiers is struck by their high morale. Beyond the sheer challenge of the elements, the Alaskan winter forces reliance on teamwork rather than rugged individualism. Checking each other for signs of frostbite in the field, the snow soldiers regularly count one another's fingers and toes.

vehicles and insignia, they are versed in Russian so they can process captured documents.

Ironically, in this icebox climate it is their own warm-blooded body temperatures that make them vulnerable to detection. Most major armies have heat-sensitive imaging devices sharp enough to track a moose from a helicopter by the heat signatures of its hours-old hoofprints in the snow. As a countermeasure, the snow soldiers drape themselves in loose mesh nets to disperse heat, curl up in a fetal position and hope to pass for moose calves.

It's radioing back their findings that puts them in the most danger. As long as they are eavesdropping with their own transmitters silent, they are almost imperceptible in the Arctic vastness. On the air, however, their lives and their mission would be in jeopardy. To reduce the risk of being pinpointed by ultra-sophisticated Soviet radio detectors, they follow a complex procedure of codes. The snow soldiers know that, in the words of their commander, Colonel Wilson, "They can survive only as long as they can hide."

Along with their rucksacks of Arctic survival gear, their night-vision goggles and their radio packs, the snow soldiers carry standard-issue M-16 rifles and a minimal 120 rounds of ammunition. "They have all the skills of a killer," explains Wilson, "but if they're doing their jobs, they should never have to pull the trigger." P

VITAL OUTPOST FOR SUBS, PLANES AND RADAR

ALASKA IS STRATEGICALLY important in part because it has five giant airfields that sit astride one of the world's great air hubs, the intersection of the "Great Circle" routes connecting the West Coast to the Orient and the Orient, over the pole, to Europe. Deployed by air, the snow soldiers would be only seven hours away from both Japan and Norway.

Alaska is also the gateway to the newly critical nuclear submarine theater of the Arctic. There, on a given day, a goodly number of the estimated 350 Soviet and American subs dodge sonar detection hidden in the lee of ice overhangs under the pole. Also, the vast perimeter of Alaska and its offshore waters are strewn with sonabuoys, remote sensing devices, undersea sonar detectors and long-range radar networks.

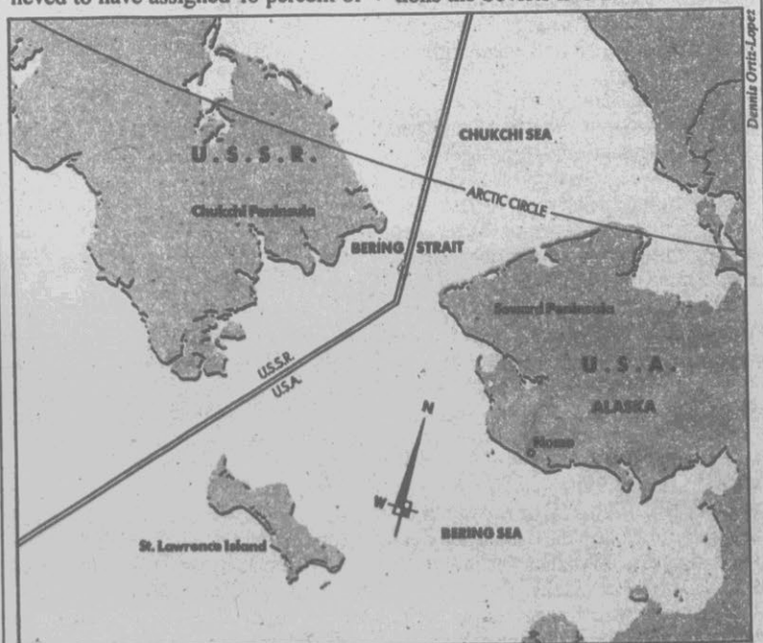
In the event of Soviet wartime attack, according to U.S. intelligence figures, these listening posts, along with our centers of military command, would be among the first targets. The Soviets would logically use bombing strikes, airborne and ground forces in tactical raids.

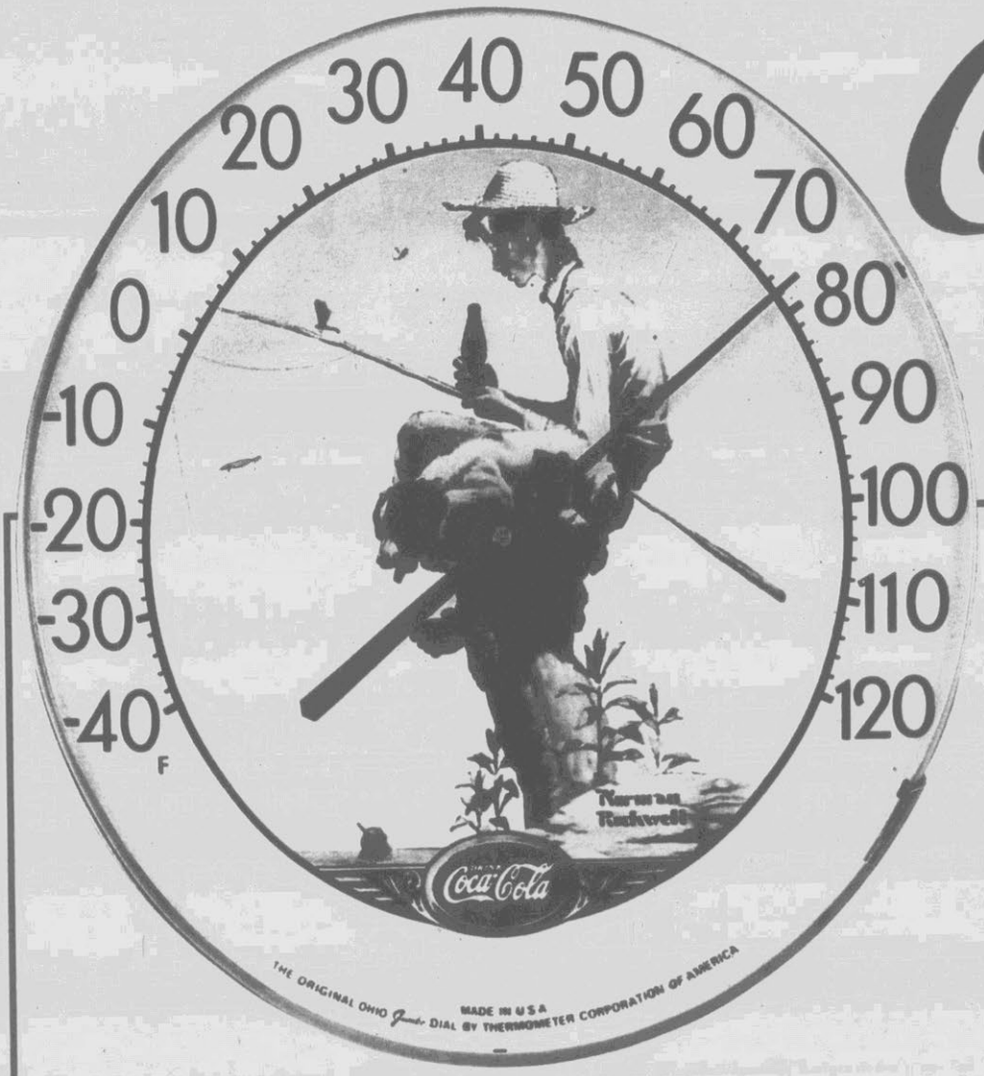
The Soviet High Command is believed to have assigned 10 percent of its bombers and fighter-bombers to its Far East Command at Irkutsk. Intelligence sources say they test Alaskan airspace about once a week. Along with seven airborne divisions and the globally deployable Naval Infantry Division in Vladivostok, there are 44 Soviet Army divisions in the Far East. Intelligence sources indicate that at least one is pointed at Alaska.

Intermingled with all these divisions are detachments of the Spetsnaz, the snow soldiers' counterparts. Fluent in English and organized in five- to 12-man teams specializing in reconnaissance and behind-the-lines sabotage, they're controlled by Soviet military intelligence and answerable to the KGB.

"They are very tough and very, very good," says one senior intelligence source. They reportedly have scale models with targets in Alaska already earmarked. Such Soviet forces fought much of World War II under Arctic conditions on the Eastern front. Today, they are far more accustomed to extreme winter operations than we are. The snow soldiers and their parent battalion and division are our only units that live and train in the same conditions the Soviets live in.



Alaska forms our sole shared border with the Soviet Union—mainland Alaska being only 55 miles across the Bering Strait from Chukchi Peninsula. St. Lawrence Island—on which a Soviet life raft, battery and gas mask were recently found—is situated only 37 miles from the Siberian coast. Alaska belonged to the Czars until 1867, when it was bought by the U.S. for 2 cents an acre ($7.2 million).



Coca-Cola® BRAND

"NORMAN ROCKWELL" THERMOMETER

Proudly MADE IN THE USA

ONLY $9.95

AF

AN AMERICAN ☆ FAMILY ☆ EXCLUSIVE

In 1935, The Coca-Cola Company commissioned Norman Rockwell, one of America's most beloved illustrators, to design "Out Fishin'" for its annual calendar. Nearly 2 million calendars in this design were distributed by the bottlers of Coca-Cola.

You'd have a hard time finding one of these calendars today, but now you may own a reproduction of the very same Norman Rockwell artwork featured on an attractive, durable thermometer...

In an exclusive arrangement with The Coca-Cola Company, American Family proudly invites you to share in the heritage of these two great American favorites with the limited edition thermometer featuring Rockwell's "Out Fishin'".

Hang it anywhere—the kitchen, the kids' room, the patio or near the pool. It's easy to mount and the jumbo dial and temperature readings are easy to read—even at a distance. Its sturdy full-metal casing and brass components assure you of years of reliable use.

Limited Edition Offer—
Expires December 31, 1988

Memorabilia issued by The Coca-Cola Company has long been a favorite of collectors everywhere. Here's your chance to own a genuine Americana work of art that may be a future collector's item. But remember—this is a limited offer. No Coca-Cola Thermometers featuring Rockwell's "Out Fishin'" will be sold after December 31, 1988—so you must act promptly. Order one—order several—today.

The Personal War Of Dr. Springer

Gwendolen Cates

Dr. Springer's wife, Heather, who died in 1980.

At first, he was drawn to the research by the sheer thrill of discovery. But then his work took on a new urgency.

WHEN GEORG Springer was a young medical student in Basel, Switzerland, he got this piece of advice from one of his professors: "Don't work in cancer. There's nothing but frustration there." Springer took the advice to heart and went on to become a respected immunologist and pathologist. His career took him away from his native Berlin to the University of Pennsylvania, to Walter Reed Army Medical Center and, finally, to Evanston Hospital in Illinois. His work in blood-cell chemistry won him respect: "He was a very solid investigator who did very good, careful work," one colleague recalls. Dr. Springer, his wife and three children settled into a comfortable life in the Chicago suburbs, where the family took up horseback riding, and Springer's elaborate garden made him the envy of the neighborhood. Then, in 1971, Dr. Springer went to Washington to attend a conference sponsored by the American Red Cross.

"It was during lunch at that meeting that a group of Harvard chemists told me that they had found a structure in the carcinoma of a mouse that looked very similar to a substance found in some human blood cells," Springer remembers. "Carcinoma is a type of cancer that amounts to roughly 75 percent of all cancers. Unless these are detected early, with the exception of skin and cervical/uterine cancers, they are uniformly lethal."

The Harvard chemists regarded their discovery as an oddity, not connecting the structure with the carcinoma itself; Georg Springer wasn't so sure. If you found something in the cancer of a mouse that also appeared in a human's blood cells, was the human also developing cancer? These tiny "structures"—molecular groups called T and Tn antigens—had not been closely studied before. Acting almost on a hunch, Springer decided to look for them in human breast cancers.

He found them, and his life was changed. Ignoring his old professor's advice, Dr. Springer found himself irresistibly drawn to the frustrating business of cancer research. "My mother had died of carcinoma in 1972, so that contributed emotionally to this," he recalls. "But it was not the main reason." At first, he was drawn by the sheer intellectual thrill of discovery. By 1974, Springer had published some preliminary findings. The antigens, he discovered, were crucial to the process by which carcinoma cells adhere to healthy tissues and begin the spread of cancer. But then his work took on a new urgency. That year, his wife, Heather Bligh Springer, was diagnosed as having breast cancer.

Springer knew that he might be on the verge of a major discovery: If you can isolate a part of the carcinoma, you might be able to develop a test that could detect the cancer long before traditional methods would. "If you get them [the cancer cells] early and remove them surgically, you can cure a breast-cancer patient with over 90 percent certainty," he says. The statistics are dramatic: More than 70 percent of breast carcinoma patients will die within 20 years of surgery. But only 7 percent of those whose carcinoma is detected in the earliest stages will die. More than 90 percent of lung carcinoma patients will die within five years; if the cancer is detected early, the rate falls to 31 percent.

By the mid-'70s, Springer was ready to try his test on human subjects. Dr. Edward Scanlon, former director of the Kellogg Cancer Care Center in Evanston, referred a group of patients to Springer's laboratory. "He sent people over and told them not to say anything to us about their condition," Springer recalls. "After we had tested about 100 persons, he told us that we had correctly recognized about 90 percent of those who had tested positive for carcinoma, but we had incorrectly tested about 8 percent as positive. We watched those 8 percent over the years. Not all of them, but about half, did develop carcinoma—even though it wasn't recognized at the time."

Springer and his laboratory—which now has a staff of 15—went on to develop both skin and blood tests for carcinoma. When both tests are done together, according to his figures, they are 100 percent reliable. "I have yet to see the patient who persistently tested positive and did not have carcinoma," he says. Patients who test positive can be put under close surveillance until physicians detect their cancers.

Today, at 64, Dr. Springer is still reticent about the possible benefits of his work. "I would rather understate than overstate," he says over and over, as he sits in his tiny basement office and explains his work. "I've seen again and again how you can excite people who have cancer by making false statements and exaggerations. The letdown afterward is horrible."

He speaks from painful experience. For six years, he watched as his wife suffered through the disease.

"This is probably the most horrible thing a person can go through," he says, with a level of emotion that comes as a surprise from a man who normally speaks in the cool language of science. "To see how this creeps—in the end, it goes not in any way fast, like a coronary, but very slowly. My wife couldn't walk. She was crawling on all fours. Then she couldn't sit. Then she was filling up with water—her chest, her heart, her abdomen. She never complained. Since then, I've had practically no interests but this research."

Springer's tests are not the solution to cancer. Dr. Scanlon, who has been supervising Springer's clinical research, praises them as an early warning system that allows doctors to watch some patients closely and treat carcinoma earlier than had been possible. The tests now are being used, for limited purposes, in medical centers in New York, Minnesota, West Virginia, England, Germany and Israel. They are not offered to the general public, and there are no plans to make them widely available. Since they only can detect carcinoma, not tell the physician where it is situated, the tests have only narrow use. "Think about it," says Dr. Maurice Black of New York's Westchester County Medical Center. "It could be horrible for both the physician and the patient if it tells you the patient has cancer, but it doesn't tell you where."

The test is not the major focus of Dr. Springer's current research. He is hoping to use his knowledge of T and Tn antigens to disrupt the process by which carcinomas adhere to healthy tissue in the first place. Twelve years ago, he injected a vaccine based on the T antigen into patients diagnosed with carcinoma. Three of the patients with the most advanced stage of breast cancer (which is usually fatal within a year) are still alive. Still, Springer again strenuously underlines the fact that these results are preliminary and that the study is not large enough to draw any conclusions. (His own wife received the injections and survived for six years after the diagnosis, although her cancer was well advanced when first detected by traditional means.)

Springer hopes to be able to test his treatment on a larger population, but money is tight. He gets some funding from the National Cancer Institute and private foundations, but he cannot always purchase the equipment he needs to further his work. Although he holds the rank of professor at Northwestern, Springer draws no salary from the medical school or hospital. He lives on money inherited from his parents and sometimes uses his own funds to keep his laboratory going. "With certain insects," he says wryly, "when you're through with them, you can put them in the refrigerator and thaw them out when you're ready to work with them again. Unfortunately, you can't do that with your co-workers. We survive by the skin of our teeth."

When I visited, an assistant had to show Dr. Springer the way to the doctors' dining room at the hospital; he is not used to taking time away from work to eat. If he wants lunch, he usually asks a staff member to bring something back from the cafeteria. He shaves imperfectly now and looks a bit tired and rumpled, like a man who devotes 75 or 80 hours a week to research. His children have grown: the older two, a son and a daughter, are physicians; the youngest, a daughter, is a researcher for the Federal Reserve Board. His famous garden, he confesses, is now "untidy"; he has hired someone to tend it for him. Almost his entire life now is his personal war against carcinoma. "I have strong faith that it will help," he told me.

Then he went back to work.

RETIRE IN MEXICO ON $10 A DAY

(Special) Publisher Ross Paron announced release of the new book Paradise Found: How to Live in North America's Best Climate for Under $300 a Month. The book reveals how over 25,000 Americans live the good life on a beautiful, 60-mile long lake nestled in the mountains of Mexico. Please read this exclusive interview.

Question: Where is this paradise located?

Answer: It's simple to get there. You can drive there in a few days from anywhere in the U.S. or Canada. By air, it's just a few hours away.

Question: Why do so many Americans live there?

Answer: The climate is near perfect year round. You're never too cold or too hot. Prices are ridiculously low. You can get a nice hotel room for $7 a night...Full course meals less than $2. Many people live comfortably on social security or small pensions.

Question: Besides the near perfect climate and low cost of living, what else draws Americans there?

Answer: The sheer beauty of the place. You're on a magnificent lake 60 miles long, nestled in the mountains. You'll breathe fresh, clean, unpolluted air. You'll see stunning colors. Blue water, green mountains, red and yellow flowers.

I have travelled throughout Europe, the Carribbean and Hawaii and never have I seen such an enchanting place. That's why I call the book Paradise Found, it's the closest thing to Paradise you'll ever find.

Question: How do the local people treat Americans there?

Answer: You'll be treated with warmth and kindness. They love Americans. We provide most of the jobs for the townspeople. You can have a maid, gardener or cook for about 52¢ an hour. And you'll be paying more than the going wage rates.

Question: Do Americans get homesick?

Answer: Not at all. You have an American library there, medical care, American style shopping facilities, clubs and many social activities. Best of all, you'll be living in one of the world's best climates for a fraction of your present living costs.

Question: What else does the book cover about this Paradise?

Answer: The book explains everything you need to know. How to get there, where to stay, where to eat, what to do. You'll discover how to buy a home at ridiculous prices. How to earn extra money. Most important, you'll discover how to turn away from stress and tension and start enjoying life to the fullest.

Whether you're looking for a place to retire, a low-cost vacation spot or somewhere to get away from it all, this place has something for you.

Question: Sounds like you've really hit on something here. How can readers get a copy of Paradise Found: How To Live In North America's Best Climate For Under $300 a Month?

Answer: You can order direct from the publisher and save. Send only $12.95 plus $1 postage and handling to: United Research Publishers, 249 South Highway 101, Dept. RP3, Solana Beach, CA 92075. You can return the book within 30 days and receive a full refund if not 100% satisfied.

Michael J. Fox Steps Out of Character

Louis Goldman

Kiefer Sutherland (l) leads Fox astray

A Michael J. Fox character snorting cocaine? Believe it! In fact, says Mark Rosenberg, co-producer of Bright Lights, Big City, "Michael was the perfect choice" for his role. He plays a charming and witty but irresponsible aspiring writer who—after his wife leaves him and his mother dies of cancer—dives into the swinging New York club scene of cocaine, alcohol women and the wrong friends, until everything catches up with him. "We needed to cast the role with someone who the audience felt was a basically decent person and, frankly, adorable," says Rosenberg, "so they would care about him despite what he does." Who better than the popular star of Family Ties?

TELEVISION

Breaking The "Chain of Evil"

On Moyers: Facing Evil, a former soldier speaks of how he loved killing and how he learned to deal with that side of himself, and the poet Maya Angelou tells of being raped and trying not to be violent in return. The program explores the problem of evil through many compelling personal stories, as Bill Moyers says, "about how the chain of evil can be broken." Drawn from a three-day Texas conference, it's filled with ideas and insights that can help you. PBS, tomorrow, 9-10:30 p.m. EST. (Check local listings, as date and time may vary.)

LINCOLN AS SEEN BY GORE VIDAL

Gore Vidal's Lincoln, a four-hour miniseries based on the best-selling novel, stars Sam Waterston as Abraham Lincoln and Mary Tyler Moore as Mary Todd Lincoln. It begins on Feb. 23, 1861, just nine days before Lincoln is sworn in as President, and ends with his assassination on April 14, 1865, just five days after the Civil War ended. Because of the liberties Vidal took as a novelist, the program offers an unusually personal—and contemporary—view of Lincoln, his marriage and events around him. NBC, tonight and tomorrow, 9-11 p.m. EST.

BOOKS

TRAGIC FIRST LADY

Abraham Lincoln's wife, Mary Todd, has gone down in history as a shrew, a virago and a spendthrift who wound up in an insane asylum. Now, Jean H. Baker, a professor at Goucher College, attempts in Mary Todd Lincoln (Norton, $19.95) to write a revisionist—not to say feminist—biography of the unfortunate First Lady. Conceding her eccentricities (such as buying 10 pairs of gloves at a time), Professor Baker regards Mrs. Lincoln as a much put-upon woman.

Nevertheless, even in this friendly account, Mrs. Lincoln becomes a sympathetic figure only in her widowhood, and it is in the 100 pages devoted to the final years of her life that this book really begins to explore convincingly the character of one of the unhappiest women in American history.

An Unforgettable Date

If you are among the thousands of couples who plan to exchange marriage vows on the eighth day of the eighth month of the eighty-eighth year of this century—Aug. 8, 1988—you had better firm up your wedding arrangements, if you haven't already.

Civil and church authorities report an unusually large demand for the performance of wedding services on the second Monday of August. Numerically, 8/8/88 is not the kind of wedding anniversary date one is apt to forget.

And Now, Cher the Producer

Cher with Nicolas Cage in film Moonstruck

To the list of successful Hollywood actresses who head their own production companies and who have entered into arrangements with major studios—among them Jane Fonda, Sally Field, Barbra Streisand and Goldie Hawn—you may now add the name Cher.

Last month, the 41-year-old former singer—nominated for an Oscar as Best Actress for her work in Moonstruck—closed a deal with Paramount Pictures. Cher will star in some, but not all, of her future productions for the studio. Her independent company is Isis Productions.

Caspar Weinberger—in London with wife, Jane—shows off new medals from the Queen (r)

Queen Elizabeth II of Great Britain last month awarded an honorary knighthood to Caspar Weinberger, former U.S. Secretary of Defense, making him an Honorary Knight Grand Cross of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire. The award was a measure of gratitude for his help during the Falkland Islands war of 1982.

In that conflict, Weinberger sympathized with Britain against Argentina and saw to it that the British—with whom we have long had a "special relationship"—were supplied with intelligence, Sidewinder missiles and other U.S. aid.

Weinberger, 70, who was nicknamed "Cap the Knife" during the Nixon Administration because he so brutally slashed most appropriation requests, is now referred to as "Cap the Knight" or "Knight Cap." Both would make fine names for Thoroughbred racehorses.

Super-Sensitive

Steffi Graf, at 18, is the No. 1 woman tennis-player in the world—the first Germany has produced—which may be why her countrymen are so proud and protective of her.

A few weeks ago, Sergio Passero, a sportswriter for the Italian newspaper Corriere Della Sera, described Steffi in print as "German, blonde and very ugly...but, we must admit, unbeatable." The hypersensitive German press promptly retaliated. "We will publish the names of Germans who will not vacation on the Adriatic," threatened the newspaper Springer Bild Am Sonntag, "until Steffi receives an apology from the Italians through official channels."

Cesarean Births: How Necessary?

Do you know what a cesarean section is? It's a major operation in which the doctor cuts through a woman's abdomen and uterus and lifts her baby out, rather than letting it proceed through the vagina—nature's normal mode of delivery.

In 1970, about 5% of the babies in this country were delivered via cesarean section. By 1986, the rate had risen to 24.1%.

Why such a dramatic increase, especially when so many women are opting for natural childbirth? Why subject women to c-sections when the mortality rate is at least two to four times greater than for those who undergo the vaginal delivery?

Some physicians say cesareans are needed to assure success in more difficult cases of labor or when a woman previously has delivered by c-section. Others, such as Dr. Sidney Wolfe, chief of the Public Citizen Health Research Group, describe the cesarean as "the No. 1 unnecessary surgery in the United States." Various studies point out that obstetrician-gynecologists resort to c-sections more often today because they must practice defensive medicine at a time when some patients are lawsuit-happy and malpractice insurance premiums have reached new highs.

In any case, what should a pregnant woman know or do about a surgical procedure that has become increasingly common, controversial and expensive and in which she may well become involved?

A recent Mayo Clinic Health Letter says to her: "If you are pregnant, discuss your options with your physician. Often, it's not until labor begins that a cesarean section may seem necessary. Making your preference known and working closely with your doctor are the best ways for mother and child to come safely through delivery."

GREAT IDEAS FROM THE CREATORS OF THE SILVER PALATE COOKBOOKS

"I Can't Get My Kids To Eat Right!"

Your strategies to assure they're eating healthy

Most kids can't last between meals without a snack. As the line between a snack food and a square meal becomes fuzzier, children are making more decisions than ever about what they eat, developing habits that may last a lifetime. Yet 11 million children in this country are overweight, many with at least one risk factor for later heart disease, including high cholesterol counts and poor physical fitness.

The need for stronger parental guidance is obvious. We offer here six recipes for delicious, high-nutrition snacks, with further suggestions for breakfast and after school (see boxes, at right). To help parents help their children, the child psychologist Dr. James Cossé shares the following strategies:

- Involve your children in shopping and preparing food.
- Kids love to make choices. Give your child healthy food categories and let him pick one from each (for example: fruit—apple, orange or banana).
- Have plenty of healthy and portable snacks in the cupboard and refrigerator. No junk food.
- Realize that kids will eat some junk food outside the home. Teach them to choose vegetable pizza rather than pepperoni, for example; ice milk, sherbet or a fruit bar rather than ice cream.
- Teach older children to help the younger ones develop good eating habits.
- Be a role model in your own eating habits.
- Share at least one meal a day to observe what they eat and don't. Then carefully supplement.
- Forcing food doesn't work, nor does a power struggle. Don't nag. Say please and thank you.
- Monitor your children's height and weight regularly!

A Masterpiece of Nature... An Artistic Triumph

WOOD DUCKS
by Rod Lawrence

Imagine yourself in a clearing by the edge of a lake, sheltered from the autumn wind. Suddenly... ripples disturb the water's surface, and a pair of wood ducks move slowly into view. The male is regal in appearance—his plumage is rich with iridescent greens, blues and purples. The female, though lacking the rainbow's spectrum of colors, is still quite striking, with her handsome gray crest and white eye rings. You are witnessing a breathtaking sight—a privileged glimpse of nature at its most spectacular.

An Important Art Premiere

You don't have to leave the comfort of your home to admire the grand entrance of North America's wood duck. For acclaimed wildlife artist Rod Lawrence has elected to make this handsome waterbird the subject of his very first limited edition collector plate.

Presented on a flawless canvas of fine porcelain, "Wood Ducks" offers a realistic portrait of one of nature's most striking creatures. And it provides a lasting testament to the special talents of an artist whose limited edition prints are in great demand throughout the United States and Canada, and whose original paintings command prices as high as $10,000.

"Wood Ducks" gains further significance as the premiere issue in an important collection entitled American Waterbirds. Each issue will feature a Lawrence masterwork, enhanced with a generous 23K gold rim, depicting one of North America's best-known species of waterbirds. Each plate will be hand-numbered on its reverse and accompanied by a same-numbered Certificate of Authenticity, attesting to its place within the edition limit of a total of 14 firing days.

No Obligation – No Risk

As an owner of "Wood Ducks," you have the right—but no obligation—to acquire the remaining plates in the collection, in the sequence presented to you. Breakfast Of Champions

Kids love granola. The statistics show that they consider it healthy (sales dropped when the granola-bar manufacturers started putting chocolate and marshmallows in it). Believe it or not, children's bodies crave nourishment, and children's minds listen.

1/2 cup Grape-Nuts or natural granola cereal
1/4 cup bran cereal
4 teaspoons sunflower seeds
1 tablespoon sliced almonds
2 tablespoons raisins
2 cups plain yogurt
1 small banana, peeled and sliced
Cinnamon
2 tablespoons honey
Sliced strawberries or other fruit (optional)

1. Mix cereals, 3 teaspoons sunflower seeds, almonds and raisins in a bowl.
2. Fold in yogurt. Divide mixture between 2 serving bowls and top each with banana slices. Sprinkle with cinnamon, drizzle with honey and top with remaining teaspoon of sunflower seeds. Add sliced strawberries or other fruit on top of all, if you wish.
Serves 2 hungry kids

After-School Fruit Salad

Fruit is available year-round. With a little imagination, you can make this an everyday snack—just keep changing fruit. And it's so easy, you can teach a child to make it.

1½ cups cantaloupe balls
1 cup pineapple chunks, fresh or canned, well-drained
1/2 cup green seedless grapes, halved
1/2 cup red seedless grapes, halved
1 cup sour cream
4 teaspoons brown sugar
2 teaspoons poppy seeds

1. Toss fruit together in a bowl.
2. In a separate bowl, mix sour cream with 2 teaspoons brown sugar and poppy seeds. Toss with fruit.
3. Divide salad among 4 bowls. Sprinkle each with remaining brown sugar. Cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate.
Serves 4 hungry kids

Fruit & Yogurt Morning Shake

This basic recipe has unlimited possiblities. Vary the fruit, the juices and the preserves; substitute a flavored yogurt. You could make a different combination every morning! For kids on the move, put shake in a covered paper cup with a straw.

3/4 cup plain yogurt
1 raw egg
1 small banana, peeled
1/2 cup orange juice
2 tablespoons strawberry preserves
2 ice cubes, crushed

1. Combine yogurt, egg, banana and orange juice in blender; blend for 2 minutes. Turn motor off.
2. Add preserves and crushed ice; blend 30 seconds more. Serve with a straw.
Serves 2 hungry kids

Pita Pockets To Go

These are great for kids on the move. The trick here is to have everything, including the special dressing, ready to assemble—or already assembled—and wrapped in the fridge.

8 mini-size pita breads
1 cup shredded lettuce
3/4 cup thinly slivered purple cabbage
1 cup seeded and diced ripe tomatoes
1/2 cup diced cucumber, peeled
1/2 cup chopped pitted black olives
1/2 cup grated Cheddar cheese
Pita Pocket Dressing (recipe follows)
1/2 cup alfalfa sprouts

2. To assemble: Divide vegetables and cheese evenly. Put layers of lettuce, cabbage, tomatoes, cucumber, olives and cheese into each bread. Wrap each pita with plastic wrap and refrigerate (if making in advance).
3. Before eating, drizzle dressing into pita pocket and top with alfalfa sprouts.
Serves 4 hungry kids, or 8 as a snack

Pita Pocket Dressing

2 egg yolks
1/4 cup red wine vinegar
1 tablespoon granulated sugar
1½ teaspoons Dijon-style mustard
1/2 teaspoon paprika
Pinch of salt
1 cup corn oil

1. In a bowl, whisk together egg yolks, vinegar, sugar, mustard, paprika and salt. Blend well.
2. Add oil slowly, whisking constantly until thickened. Refrigerate, covered, until ready to use.
Yield: 1 cup

Meal In A Burger

The most popular kid's food in America can be healthier with little effort. Broil a lean burger instead of frying it. Stuff the meat first with nutritious ingredients, and you'll have a real meal.

6 ounces ground round beef
1 egg yolk
1 tablespoon cooked spinach, well-drained and chopped
1 teaspoon grated onion
Salt and pepper to taste
1 tablespoon grated Swiss cheese or Cheddar cheese
1 toasted sesame bun
Mayonnaise and ketchup (optional)
1 slice of tomato (optional)

1. Mix beef, egg yolk, spinach, onion, salt and pepper in a bowl.
2. Form meat mixture into a patty, reserving one quarter of the meat. Make an indentation in center of the patty and fill with the cheese. Cover cheese with reserved meat and form finished patty.
3. Broil for 2½ minutes on each side for a rare, juicy burger. Cook longer according to taste.
4. Place burger on bun with mayonnaise and ketchup, if desired; top with tomato (or your own favorite fixin's).
Serves 1 hungry kid—lunch or dinner

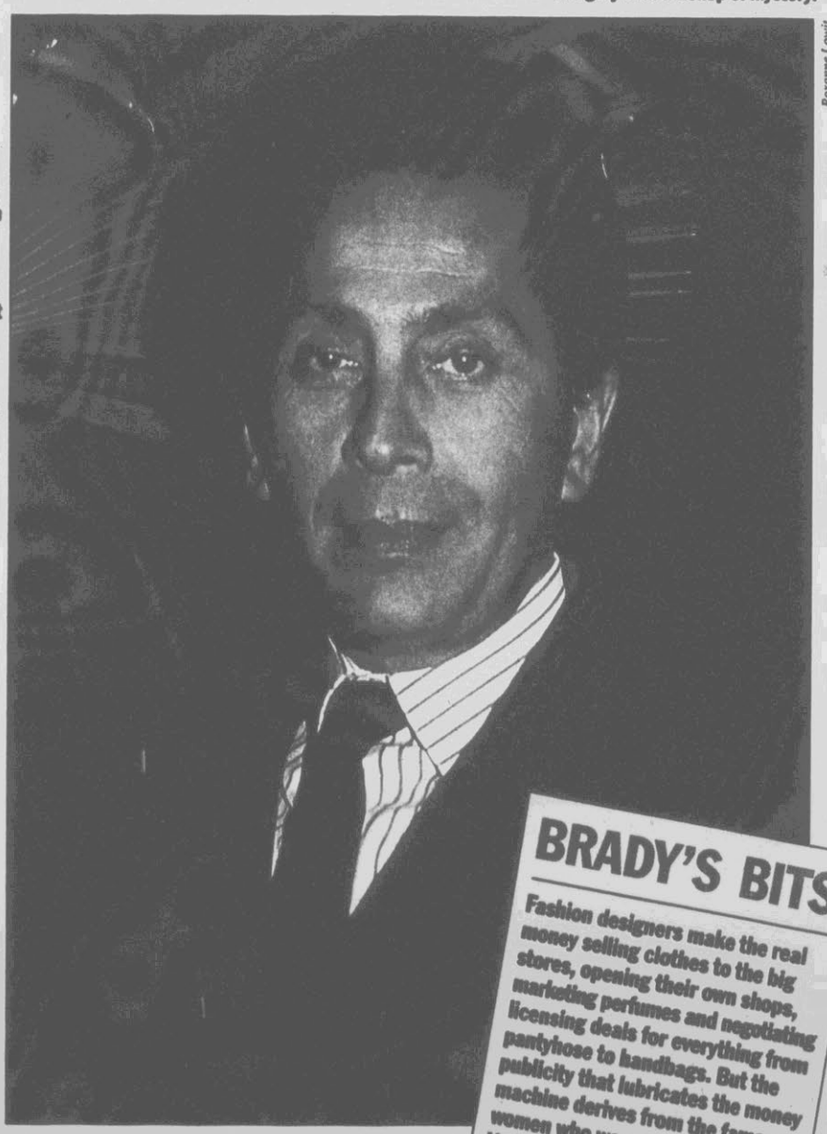
Valentino



Roxanne Lowit

Valentino is perpetually tanned...which may be the result of a cosmetic product or simply that strong Italian sun. That's part of what fashion is all about: creating imagery with a dollop of mystery.

HIS FULL NAME IS VALENTINO Garavani. He was born near Milan 55 years ago and, at 17, won a scholarship to a couture school in Paris, where he learned his trade. Today, he is one of the most influential fashion designers in the world and one of the richest men in Italy. But when I think of Valentino, I remember his parties.

Once he took over the ballroom of a New York hotel to throw a party for Barbra Streisand. He and Barbra sat there on cushions in a sort of Arabian Nights tent and greeted their guests. Another time, in Rome, Audrey Hepburn proved she could eat a dish of ice cream without ever bowing that splendid neck. Later that same evening, we went off to a discotheque, where Valentino introduced the smooth young man who ran the place and then whispered, "He's the man who stole the Vicomtesse de Ribes' jewels." Valentino does not travel in dull circles.

I recently saw Valentino again in Manhattan, where he keeps an apartment. It has a view of Central Park on one side and the Frick museum on the other. He also has a Moorish villa on Capri, a ski chalet in Gstaad, Switzerland, where he spent Christmas, and a palazzo outside Rome. I asked what he drives these days. "A Land-Rover," he said. And then, after a pause, "And a new Bentley. I sold the Rolls."

Did he worry about having all that money during the spate of kidnappings in his own country? "I arrived back in Rome five and a half years ago to find two bodyguards waiting," he said. He still has them, though he says the kidnap plague is over.

About a week ago in Paris, he showed his new ready-to-wear collection in a vast tent pitched on the lawn in front of the Louvre. "I like to make an extravaganza," he explained, "but most what I want is to make salable clothes. Women always want something new, but you must seduce them." In his January showing of more expensive clothes, he emphasized miniskirts. But he seemed unsure, when we talked, just how long the passion for shorter skirts would last.

The young boy who left home to learn how to make dresses is today a corporate giant. He has 48 boutiques around the world and perhaps 100 Valentino shops in department stores. He plans to launch a new men's scent. His women's perfume did not do well, because it was marketed badly, he said. Now he has a new perfume partner, and the stuff is selling.

He takes care of himself, drinking only a little white wine cut with water. Now that he's in his 50s, he said, "I do a little 'gymnastique,'" patting his flat stomach. He didn't learn to ski until four or five years ago. Now it has become a passion.

BORN: May 11, 1932, in Voghera, Italy.
CAREER HIGHLIGHTS: Moved to Paris to study couture, 1949; five-year apprenticeship with Jean Dessès and two with Guy Laroche; first show in Rome, 1960; first big success, at Palazzo Pitti in Rome, 1960; presentation of the "white collection," which made him a major fashion figure, 1967.

Valentino is the most important fashion creator in Italy. Last week, he proved it with a brilliant show of new clothes for this coming fall.

BRADY'S BITS

Fashion designers make the real money selling clothes to the big stores, opening their own shops, marketing perfumes and negotiating licensing deals for everything from pantyhose to handbags. But the publicity that lubricates the money machine derives from the famous women who wear the clothes. Valentino has made a career of dressing such women—from the former Empress of Iran to Brooke Shields and from Jessica Lange to Catherine Oxenberg. He has made clothes for Jacqueline Onassis for 20 years. When Aristotle Onassis died in Paris, Valentino flew in to fit Jackie in black for the funeral.

The Butterflies of the World

PORCELAIN SCULPTURE COLLECTION

So exceptional an artist is Brian Hargreaves of Great Britain that he was commissioned to portray the gardens and butterflies of Buckingham Palace for Queen Elizabeth II. And his works have been exhibited at the Smithsonian Institution and the British Museum of Natural History. Now he brings his talent to the design of an exclusive collection of porcelain sculptures: The Butterflies of the World.

This intriguing new collection makes it possible for you to have a garden of butterflies and flowers in your home all year long! Fifteen delightful butterflies in their own natural floral settings—representing all fifteen butterfly families.

You'll be able to display this miniature butterfly collection attractively in your home. For you will receive, as part of the collection, a beautiful étagère of brass and glass.

Brian Hargreaves' designs are so finely detailed that each delicate wing of a butterfly and each petal of a flower is precisely as you see it in nature. From the Monarch Butterfly with its bright orange coloring...to the boldly-striped Zebra Longwing...and the spectacular Malachite with emerald-shaped wings.

The variety of colors is astonishing. Brilliant reds and rich purples...soft greens and deep golds...subtle pinks and pale violets...every shade and tone nature has given to these charming creatures of flight.

Each imported sculpture will be sent to you along with reference information about the butterfly portrayed, and a Certificate of Authenticity will also be provided.

To acquire the collection, please mail your application by April 30, 1988.

Actual size.

Sam Waterston Tries To Redefine Lincoln

By Evan Levin

On a cold, rainy day in Manhattan, in an overdecorated office, Sam Waterston is slumped on the couch. He has been doing interviews out of this office all day, both for the recently opened Broadway production of "A Walk in the Woods," in which he stars, and NBC's "Gore Vidal's Lincoln," airing March 27 and 28, in which he also stars. The four-hour miniseries focuses on both the political and personal lives of Abraham and Mary Todd Lincoln during the Civil War years. It co-stars Mary Tyler Moore as Mary Todd Lincoln, and features Richard Mulligan, John Houseman, Cleavon Little and Ruby Dee in supporting roles.

Despite his obvious fatigue, Waterston is eager to talk about his research on Lincoln, the role he plays in the NBC movie, "I went to the Library of Congress and also read all the books about Lincoln in my local library," he explains. When asked how he was able to use the information in the role, he pauses. "It somehow managed to settle in my mind into a vision of who Lincoln was. One thing research does is to make you think you know what you've talking about! It's better not to stand around with other actors who know more than you do. No, honestly," he adds, "it's hard to pinpoint what research does. It just colors your idea of who the character was."

During Waterston's visit to the Library of Congress, he learned a choice piece of information. "A librarian showed me the actual contents of Lincoln's pockets when he died. They included Confederate money and a letter from a Confederate soldier. That told me a lot about Lincoln and his humanity."

Waterston, who was nominated for an Academy Award for his performance in "The Killings Fields" in 1985, nods vigorously when told that someone once said that any book or movie with the words "Lincoln," "Nazi" or "dog" was guaranteed success. "People are absolutely fascinated with Lincoln," he agrees. "He was such an American. And I hope that when people watch this, they will learn some new things about Lincoln that they hadn't known before."

Mary Tyler Moore and Sam Waterston star as Mary Todd Lincoln and Abraham Lincoln in NBC's "Gore Vidal's Lincoln." The miniseries depicts the struggles faced by the Lincolns during the Civil War. It airs Sunday, March 27, and Monday, March 28.

Waterston emphasizes that this production does not show sensationalistic aspects of Lincoln's life or his marriage. "There was no undercutting or exploitation in this production," he says. "We didn't just throw in excess sex or anything like that. Sometimes in a good production they throw in junk in case people don't want the good stuff, but I don't think we did that in this case."

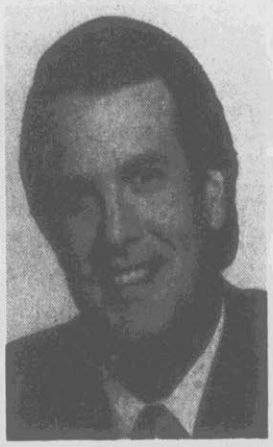
'ET' reporter's passions run to composing, not acting

By Toni D'Amato

Is John Tesh of "Entertainment Tonight" an actor? Please tell us something about him and where we can write to him. – W.P., Portland, Maine.



John Tesh

Tesh worked as a reporter in news and sports before joining "Entertainment Tonight" in 1986 as the show's co-host. He's also a trained musician and plays the piano. When he's not working on "E.T.," he works on music projects.

"I enjoy doing the show and am glad it's been successful for me," Tesh confides. "But actually, everything I've really worked hard on has worked out."

Tesh and his wife Julie, a former ballerina, have been married six years. "My wife is my biggest critic and she's been great about all my work," he says.

Tesh owns a clothing store and two restaurants. But music seems to be his biggest interest. He has created the music for CBS's coverage of the Tour de France for the past six years, as well as other compositions for CBS sports programs.

Whatever became of Alan Young after the series "Mr. Ed" went off the air? We loved him in that show. – C.P., Eau Claire, Wis.

Young broke into television with "The Alan Young Show" (1950-53) and won an Emmy for best actor in 1950. He worked in TV variety and dramatic anthologies, but made his biggest mark as Wilbur Post in "Mr. Ed" (1961-66). He left TV in the late '60s to work for the Christian Science Church. In the '70s he returned to the stage and TV and also did voice work in such cartoons as "The Smurfs." He is now on a mid-season replacement series called "Coming of Age," which also stars Glynnis Johns, Phyllis Newman and Paul Dooley.

Michele Will Tell

Dear Michele: I heard Richard Egan died last year. Is this true? Would you please furnish some information on him? — PERCY O'NEIL, RUTLAND, VT.

Egan died July 20, 1987, of prostate cancer. He was 65. Born July 29, 1921, in San Francisco, Egan received his B.A. from the University of San Francisco. In 1942, he joined the Army where he served in the Philippines and taught judo during World War II, eventually earning the rank of captain. Following his discharge, he returned to school where he earned an M.A. from Stanford University and taught public speaking before arriving in Hollywood in 1949. Ruggedly handsome, he was touted as a young Clark Gable. During his career, Egan appeared in more than 30 films and his credits include "Love Me Tender" (1956), "A Summer Place" (1959), "Pollyanna" (1960) and "The Destructors" (1968). Since the late '60s, he appeared mostly on TV, including starring roles in two short-lived series, "Empire" (1962) and "Redigo" (1964). In the '80s, he appeared as Samuel Clegg 2d on the daytime soap "Capitol." Egan is survived by his wife, the former Patricia Hardy, whom hemarried in 1958. He is survived by four daughters and one son.

Dear Michele: Where was actor Dolph Lundgren born? — FRED A. MESCH, JR., OLATHE, KANS.

Dolph Lundgren, 29, was born and raised in Stockholm, Sweden, where his father has worked as an economist for the Swedish parliament. The 6-foot-5 hunk, who has a degree in chemical engineering, was Europe's kick-boxing champ in 1980 and 1981, and is a karate black belt. Lundgren made his film debut in "A View to a Kill" (1985) and has since appeared as the evil Drago in "Rocky IV" (1985) and as the superhero He-Man in "Masters of the Universe" (1987).

Dear Michele: I've learned that Connie Stevens has two grown daughters. I recently saw one of them on a game show. Connie is so young-looking herself, I still can't believe it. Would you please check this out? — CAROL BRYANT, BANGOR, MAINE.

The effervescent, ever-youthful Stevens, 49, has two grown daughters. Joely, 20, and Tricia, 19, are both by ex-husband Eddie Fisher.

Dear Michele: My Dad says Adam West was one of the co-stars of the series "The Wild Wild West." I say it was Robert Conrad. Who's right? — LEE CORY, HOLLAND, MICH.

Robert Conrad co-starred from 1965-70 with the late Ross Martin in the CBS adventure series "The Wild Wild West." Adam West is best-known as television's caped crusader, "Batman," whom he played from 1966 to 1968.

THE Rook Look AT GARMENT CARE
DICKIE ROOK
COOKING OILS STAIN
A spot of salad dressing or mayonnaise on your clothing doesn't appear serious at first. But, it will develop into a permanent yellowish-brown stain if it's not removed promptly.
The oil "oxidizes" when it's exposed to the air and the oil turns brown. Sometimes it takes only a few days to complete the change from an "invisible" spot to a permanent, visible stain.
If you get cooking oils on a fabric, act quickly. Blot up any excess. Don't rub. Then have the spots removed as soon as possible. Be particularly careful with polyester. Cooking oils are difficult to remove from the synthetic fabrics even when the spots are fresh. A Cleaner World will help you with all your garment care needs. But, remember, time is very important in stain removal and point out any stains to us in order to help us serve you better.
We repair and alter garments; God repairs and alters lives.

TV Chatter

In the CBS movie "Too Young the Hero" (airing March 27), Ricky Schroder plays Calvin Graham, a 12-year-old who lied about his age and enlisted in the Navy during World War II. Before his trueage was discovered, Graham won a Bronze Star for fighting in the battles of Santa Cruz and Guadalcanal. But before his discharge, Graham spent time in the brig when he was mistakenly identified as adeserter. To shoot the scenes of the young sailor's incarceration, the production went on location to the Burgaw County prison in North Carolina. Although the institution is only a medium-security facility, Schroder, 17, says the experience was unnerving at first. "I was talking to guys who had killed people 15 years ago. But you know, not one of them had a bad attitude — at least not these days. When the director said, 'Quiet on the set,' they were quiet." Schroder returned the favor. On the day the production crew departed, Schroder ordered out from McDonald's for 220 inmates. Why? "Because they were so nice," he says.

We spoke with Mario Van Peebles a year and a half ago when the film "Heartbreak Ridge" had just come out. At that time, the young actor told Hotline he would never appear as a regular on a TV series, even though he had made several guest appearances on "L.A. Law." Van Peebles explained he didn't have anything against TV per se, but he just didn't want to get tied down playing the same character week after week on a series.

Well, Van Peebles, star of NBC's "Sonny Spoon," has obviously changed his mind about doing series television. But he's definitely not playing the same character every week. To ferret out criminals and witnesses, Sonny Spoon dons a variety of disguises and voices. "NBC came to me and said, 'We're going to write a character for you. He's going to be a leading man, but we want somebody who's also a character actor.' As an actor it allows me to do all these different people — and it's really fun! Today I'm doing a big fat, female church singer."

After specializing in playing such heroic figures as George Washington and Zachary Amberville, the good-guy publisher in "I'll Take Manhattan," Barry Bostwick is finally getting down and dirty. "This has been my year of villainy," the actor says. In January, he played a serial murderer in the TV-movie "Body of Evidence." In next season's 30-hour miniseries "War and Remembrance," he plays a preppie Naval officer who commits a war atrocity. And on March 28, Bostwick gets to do a little more mustache-twirling in the ABC movie "Addicted to Love," which centers on a con man who seduces and swindles lonely women. Like most actors, Bostwick says he always tries to find the good side of the bad guys he plays."It's a matter of finding depth to the character," he says. "If you don't, the villain comes off very cardboard and one-dimensional. Evil people don't think they're doing evil. When I played the serial killer, he thought he was ridding the world of evil."

SOAP OPERA WEEK

'Y&R' star Leighton paid her dues with minor roles

By Kimberly Redmond

I'm a big fan of "The Young and the Restless," and especially of Roberta Leighton. Can you give me some background on her? - K.K., Tresoose, Pa.

Roberta Leighton

Leighton graduated from Stephans College in Columbia, Miss., with degrees in acting and writing. After graduation, Leighton spent two years with the L'Homme Dieu theater company in Alexandria, Minn., before she moved to Los Angeles to look for acting work. Within six months she had a guest-starring role in the series "Baretta."

Before joining "Y&R" in 1978, Leighton appeared in many television series, including "Barnaby Jones" and "Switch." She had roles in the feature films "One on One" and "Stripes."

Ross Kettle (Jeffrey Conrad on "Santa Barbara") looks so familiar. Has he appeared on another soap? Can you tell me where he's from? - T.B., Newfoundland, Canada.

Ross Kettle

Before he joined "SB," Kettle portrayed Lord Stewart Markham Cushing on "As the World Turns." Kettle was born in South Africa, and as a young man moved to England where he studied acting at the London Academy of Music and Dramatic Arts. He moved to New York City in September, 1984.

Did Stephen Schnetzer (Cass Winthrop) of "Another World" appear in the TV movie "Illusions"? - T.G., Houston, Texas.

We could find no record of Schnetzer appearing in "Illusions," but he may have had a small role in the film.

(Have a question about soap operas? Write Kimberly Redmond at 200 Park Ave., Room 602, New York, NY 10166. Questions cannot be answered personally but those of general interest will be answered in future columns.)

YES OR NO?

People are different. So are the jobs we're asked to fill. That's why the Manpower System is so important. It's a breakthrough in personnel science that takes the guesswork out of matching the right temporary to each assignment. The System is an important reason to call Manpower for temporaries cut out for your office.

ANSWER: It Takes a Thief

Invader

Joe Cortese and Maryam D'Abo are set to star in "Invader," an upcoming NBC miniseries about a woman from a distant planet who joins a street-smart policeman to fight terrorism. Makeup artist Rick Baker ("An American Werewolf in London") has created the alien (D'Abo), and special-effects artist John Dystra ("Star Wars") has created the special effects. The four-hour miniseries, currently filming in Sydney, Australia, will air in May.

BEHIND THE SCENES

Prejudice about the elderly addressed in new CBS series

By Frank Lovece

Emily Marshall has come of age. After writing, producing and story editing for years, she's finally created her own series. The title? Appropriately, "Coming of Age." The CBS series, starring Paul Dooley and Phyllis Newman as a forcibly retired airline pilot and his wife, airs Tuesdays.

Emily Marshall

Though her show is a comedy, Marshall intends to explore a serious issue: prejudices and preconceptions about older people. She hasn't experienced it first-hand – despite the fact that at 45, she's a veritable grand dame in the TV business – but Marshall has seen its effects. "Six years ago, I had the idea for this show," she recalls, "but because it was about older people, a red flag would go up: 'Nobody wants to see that.' But thank goodness for 'The Golden Girls.' Without it, I might not have had the chance to do this show."

The seed came from first-hand knowledge. "My parents moved to a retirement community about 15 years ago," she relates. "That was my inspiration. A lot of what went on was incredibly funny, but also frustrating and sad. People who ran businesses the week before were suddenly thought of as 'nice old folks.' "

Marshall's sensitivity to ageism springs both from her marriage to an older man – 60-year-old "Tonight Show" bandleader Doc Severinsen – and from her own experience with sexism. "I began in television in the mid-1960s, before women's liberation, when we weren't allowed to even wear slacks to the office," she marvels. "But I was lucky. I worked in New York as a production assistant to David Susskind, a remarkable man who was very supportive of women in the workplace." Marshall emigrated to Los Angeles in 1969, working her way up from a "Tonight Show" assistant to a writer and story editor on such series as "Laverne and Shirley."

Now, with the help of executive-producer Barry Kemp, creator of "Newhart," Marshall has the chance to make some points about a topic close to her heart. "I'm happy," she says, "to be able to address whatever it is in this society that doesn't allow us to grow old with dignity."

Thalberg Award

This year, the Irving G. Thalberg Memorial Award, which honors film producers, will be awarded to director and producer Billy Wilder, the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences has announced. Wilder, winner of six Oscars, directed the films "Double Indemnity" (1944), "The Lost Weekend" (Best Director, 1945), "Sunset Boulevard (1950), "Witness for the Prosecution" (1957), "Some Like It Hot" (1959) and "The Apartment" (Best Director, 1960). The Academy Awards will air April 11 on ABC.

'The Canadians' Could Offer Fresh Insights

By Bob Remington

Ask for a definition of Canada, and you'll get responses as varied as the country itself. Those predisposed to kindness will say it is a rich cultural mosaic with complex regional diversities. A more cynical observation might be that it's a nation with a festering identity crisis.

Not many people have been able to put their finger on the elusive national character of Canada, but Andrew Malcolm probably came as close as anybody. His 1985 book, "The Canadians," was a probing, affectionate and discerning look at a country that refuses to be pigeon-holed or boiled down to some bare essence. It took Canadians on a voyage of self-discovery, a somewhat futile but nonetheless fascinating task.

"The Canadians" now comes to the small screen as a promising four-hour documentary to be broadcast in two segments on Sunday and Monday, March 27 and 28, on CTV (9 to 11 p.m. — check local listings). With Malcolm as a guide, it profiles a dozen unique Canadians and explores the country from coast to coast, and from the U.S. border to the high Arctic.

Although no previews were available at press time, the series should offer some insights to qualities often unrecognized by Canadians. Malcolm is a New York Times national editor and U.S. citizen whose parents were Canadian. He worked four years as the Toronto bureau chief for the Times, and his boyhood summers were also spent in Canada.

Also boding well for the series is executive producer Michael Maclear, the veteran Canadian TV journalist who was host, reporter and producer for CTV's acclaimed mid-'70s documentary series "Maclear." his current production company, Cineworld Inc., produced the 26-part television series "Vietnam: The Ten Thousand Day War," as well as the five-part miniseries "American Caesar" and thesix-part documentary series "The American Century."

* CBC's big show this week is "The King Chronicle," a six-hour docudrama on Canada's wartime prime minister, William Lyon Mackenzie King.

Are Younger Golfers Taking Easy Way Out?

By Marty Linehan

Pro golfer Lanny Watkins recently complained that the younger golfers don't play as hard as the older ones to win the big money. "A lot of the older players are still trying to win more than the younger players," he said.

"When I came on the tour," Watkins continued, "the object was to win tournaments and win plenty of money. A lot of the younger players are just trying to win money, not trying for the tournament win. It seems they are not mentally prepared to win."

Watkins points out that in a $1 million tournament, for instance, the prize for a 23rd finisher is more than $10,000. If a young pro can finish that high in nine or 10 tournaments a year, he can live pretty well — without trying too hard.

The young players will get a chance to extend their easy living on Sunday, March 27, when they compete in The Players Championship from the Tournament Players Club in Ponte Verdra, Fla. The course is the one with the almost impossible 17th hole (situated on an island in the middle of a pond). But the tournament also offers golfers total prizes of $1.25 million, with $225,000 going to the winner. NBC will cover the final round.

* Speaking of money, on March 27, ABC televises the final round of the Lipton International Players Tennis Championships, live from Key Biscayne, Fla. This one is a $2.1 million job. Ivan Lendl, Jimmy Connors, Mats Willander and Pat Cash will battle last year's winner, Miloslav Mecir, for the loot.

* In a sport where there's no money involved (chuckle, chuckle), the battle for the National Collegiate Athletic Association championship continues among the college basketball players. On March 27, CBS presents two NCAA regional final doubleheaders from the Silverdome in Pontiac, Mich., and the Kingdome in Seattle, Wash. And on Saturday, April 2, the final four square off in Kansas City.

* The pro basketballers get TV time on Tuesday, March 29, when TBS offers the Dallas Mavericks-Atlanta Hawks game, and on Friday, April 1, when TBS delivers the Detroit Pistons-Boston Celticsmatchup.

* Then there are the women basketball players. On April 1, ESPN will televise the final-four games of the Women's NCAA championship from Tacoma, Wash. Evidently, the women's teams don't rate the Kingdome in Seattle, like the men's teams. Not yet!

Shooter

Noble Winningham, Rosalind Chao and Jeffrey Nordling head the cast of "Shooter," an upcoming NBC movie about Vietnam combat photographers. The movie, currently in production in Thailand, focuses on a young photographer (Nordling) who risks his life seeking photos for an American wire service and seeking thrills in Saigon. Pulitzer Prize-winning photographer David Hume Kennedy is a producer of the movie.

Authorized Dealer.

"A CARPET IS ONLY AS GOOD AS ITS GUARANTEE... AND OURS IS THE BEST!"

Even at the best sales price, no carpet is a bargain if it is poorly installed or wears prematurely. That's why Carpet One has developed the most comprehensive warranty available on the market today. Read our promise here then visit your nearest Carpet One dealer. Take advantage of the great carpet prices and buy with the confidence that you will be completely satisfied with your purchase for years to come.

1. LOWEST PRICES

Most carpet dealers buy carpet for one or two stores only and end up paying the full price from the carpet distributor or manufacturer.

But our Carpet One dealers buy for more than 100 stores directly from the nation's manufacturers. And that means we can pass the economies of buying such larger orders directly to you.

2. SELECTION

Since we buy on such a grand scale, we're the favored customers of carpet manufacturers around the country. Because of this, we have access to more styles and colors than the typical carpet dealer.

If we don't carry a style you like, ask us about it. We can probably get it for you and still pass on substantial savings.

3. GUARANTEE

Have you ever heard of a dealer who offers a replacement guarantee if you don't like the color of your carpet? Or if you don't like your carpet for any reason at all? You have now!

We'll replace your carpet, free of charge, within 15 days of installation, if you don't like it for any reason. Plus we'll re-stretch or re-fit your carpet FREE in the future should the installation be unsatisfactory.

When it comes to wear, the Carpet One guarantee beats most others hands down! In fact many of our carpets are guaranteed to wear for the life of your home!

4. CONFIDENCE

Relax. Just one brief conversation with a Carpet One dealer will put you at ease. Our dealers know carpet inside and out and no matter what your questions may be, we'll have the answers to satisfy you.

You've got to have confidence in anyone who can offer the savings, selections and guarantee that Carpet One does. Talk with one of our dealers. You'll see what we mean.

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with these below.

Differences: 1. Hat is smaller. 2. Paper is moved. 3. Jacket is wider. 4. Drainpipe section is missing. 5. Curtains are missing. 6. Sign is missing.

by Hal Kaufman

• IRE WORKS! Five words at right contain letters IRE in positions shown. You are asked to complete these words in accordance with these definitions:

1. Color this country green. 2. Lightning bug. 3. Most impartial. 4. Departed from the rat race. 5. Football rally blaze.

1	I R E _ _ _ _
2	_ I R E _ _ _
3	_ _ I R E _ _
4	_ _ _ I R E _
5	_ _ _ _ I R E

1. Ireland. 2. Firefly. 3. Fairest. 4. Retired. 5. Bonfire.

• O FUDGE! If six pieces of fudge may be cut from a pan 10 inches square, how many pieces of similar size may be cut from a pan 20 inches square?

Twenty-four pieces

MAGIC NUMBER! PUZZLEMENT

Ask someone to pick a number between 1 and 9. Have him or her multiply the number by 3, add 1, multiply by 3 again, and finally, add the chosen number.

Once you know the total, the original number will be apparent — it is always the lefthand digit of the ensuing sum.

For example, let's say the number chosen is 7. Seven times 3 is 21, plus 1 is 22, multiplied by 3 is 66, plus 7, gives a total of 73, the lefthand digit of which is 7, the original number.

WHAT SAY! Add lines from dot 1 to dot 2 to dot 3, etc., to see what's missing from the scene above. What can you draw?

SPELLBINDER

SCORE 10 points for using all the letters in the word below to form two complete words:

ESPECIAL

- - - - - - - -

THEN score 2 points each for all words of four letters or more found among the letters.
