Troops Return To Fort Bragg From Honduras

By CAM ROSSIE
Associated Press Writer

PALMEROLA AIR BASE, Honduras (AP) — The first battalion of U.S. troops deployed here in a show of force against Nicaragua is heading home.

About 800 paratroopers from the 82nd Airborne Division were expected to load onto transport planes at mid-morning today and head for an airdrop into their home base of Fort Bragg, N.C.

They are part of a force rushed to Honduras for 11 days of training exercises to flex U.S. military muscles after a reported incursion by about 2,000 Nicaraguan troops chasing U.S.-supported Contra rebels.

"I'm sure they'll be home for a late dinner at least," Maj. Gary Hovatter, the U.S. military public affairs officer at this base 40 miles northwest of the Honduran capital of Tegucigalpa, said Sunday. He said the soldiers would probably parachute into Fort Bragg at about 5 p.m. EST today.

"It's great to be going home," said Sgt. Dale Taylor, 22, of Red Springs, N.C. "It's going to be a sis-boom-bah occasion. They're going to have a band and our families will be there."

President Reagan ordered 3,200 paratroopers and light infantry to Honduras on March 17 and 18. Honduran President Jose Azcona Hoyo asked for a show of force against after the reported incursion.

Nicaragua denied the report and claimed the United States was preparing to invade or using the deployment as a cover for providing equipment to the Contras. U.S. officials have said the troops are taking back all the equipment they brought with them, including tanks and aircraft.

Leaders Seek Calm After Death Of Indian Activist

By ERICA JOHNSTON

WAKULLA, N.C. (AP) — Community leaders appealed for calm after the slaying of an activist who had sought to become the first Indian judge in racially tense Robeson County, but two other candidates reported receiving death threats.

Julian Pierce, 42, was killed in his home early Saturday by three shotgun blasts fired at point-blank range, in what authorities called the first assassination of a candidate for political office in the state. No arrests have been made.

Since the killing, two other candidates for local office, including Pierce's opponent in the judgeship race, have reported receiving death threats, The Charlotte Observer said today.

The Rev. Joy Johnson of the First Baptist Church said Sunday he hoped the crime could be solved "before the heat rises and before there is a war."

"We've had a calm night and day, but it will take at least a few more days until the tension is out of the air," said Johnson, who along with other community leaders appealed to residents on Sunday to avoid violence. "Anything could spark something. I hope that doesn't happen."

Pierce, a lawyer, was running for a Superior Court judgeship in Robeson County, where few Indians hold office or work in law enforcement.

Mayor Of Suburb In Manila Wounded; 7 Bodyguards Slain

By MIGUEL C. SUAREZ
Associated Press Writer

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Gunmen seriously wounded the mayor of a Manila suburb and killed seven of his bodyguards today in the bloodiest attack in the capital blamed on communist rebels. Gunmen also shot dead a businessman.

Police said Mayor Prospero Oreta of suburban Malabon suffered three gunshot wounds in the mouth, chest and arm but was out of danger after surgery. Seven of his bodyguards died in the attack and another was in serious condition.

The ambush occurred as military units in various parts of the country were on full alert in anticipation of stepped up rebel attacks marking Tuesday's 19th founding anniversary of the now 24,000-member communist New People's Army.

Seven hours after the ambush, three men in a car shot a businessman while he was driving in suburban Quezon City, just north of Manila, police said. The victim, who died at a hospital, was identified as Francisco Castro.

Police said they had no idea who his attackers were or what their motive was. But the victim's brother, Jose Castro, vice president of the Manila chapter of the leftist People's Party, told reporters he believed he was the real target.

Radio and newspaper reports said police Manila had received a call from the Alex Boncayao Brigade, the communist guerrilla unit operating in the Manila area, claiming responsibility for the ambush on Oreta. Police declined to confirm the reports.

Armed forces spokesman Col. Oscar Florendo confirmed such a call had been received, but added the army could not yet say if the guerrilla unit was behind the attack.

Murder Saddens Local Residents

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

A Greenville resident who is a Lumbee Indian expressed indignation today over the death of Julian Pierce, a Lumbee leader who was killed in his home this weekend.

"As a member of the Lumbee people, I am outraged that something like this could happen at this time in our history. I thought political killings ended with Martin Luther King's death," Dr. James Jones, chairman of the Department of Family Practice of the East Carolina University School of Medicine, said today.

Pierce, 42, was killed some time after 12:30 a.m. Saturday in his home in the Wakulla community near Lumberton. He reportedly had three shotgun blasts fired at him from point-blank range. He was a former director of the Lumbee River Legal Services who resigned to run for judge.

This is reportedly the first time in North Carolina history that a declared candidate for political office has been murdered.

Jones said he is "offended that the state has no better control over law enforcement than to have allowed a situation such as exists in my home area to have continued."

"I'm deeply hurt and troubled that my people are being killed off like this when all they seem to be asking for is the same civil rights and privileges afforded all Americans.

Jones also challenged the state to respond to the tragedy. "I'd like to call on the Governor and whoever else it takes to provide more aggressive action to look into just what's going on in the Robeson area."

Jones, who grew up in the Lumberton area, said he remembers racial tension during his boyhood, but not violence. "There's been racial tension in that area since I was a boy, but I don't remember people being killed in the middle of the night in their own homes even then. This smacks of corruption that goes beyond the usual. Solutions must be found."

"The appropriate amounts of people should be assigned down there to see what's happened. It looks like the situation now must go beyond racial tension to corruption, crime, and drug trafficking."

Local residents who knew Pierce described him as warm and caring.

"He was a very genuine and warm individual who cared about the work that he did for poor people," according to Willie Dawson, director of Pamlico Sound Legal Services, with offices in Greenville.

"I feel that his decision to run for judge was consistent with his commitment to working toward equal access for all people in our judicial system."

"I can only say it is a very tragic circumstance. Julian was my counterpart in his part of the state until he resigned to run for judge. His office served Robeson, Cumberland, Polk and Scotland counties. I last saw him about six months ago when he was given a farewell event by the Legal Services of North Carolina director group.

"I think that Julian's death should be responded to by an effort to find other candidates who have a similar commitment. His death must not be in vain."

Li Bunger of Greenville, records coordinator of Pamlico Legal Services, said Pierce was dedicated to justice. "I have known Julian for the last five years and have always known him to be a really fine man who was dedicated to doing everything he could to ensure justice for the people of his Legal Service

Spy Roundup Nets 10

KARLSRUHE, West Germany (AP) — Police in West Germany and Switzerland have arrested 11 people suspected of spying for the Soviet Union, authorities said today.

German Federal Prosecutor Kurt Rebmann said 10 people were taken into custody in West Germany last week. In Switzerland, the Swiss Federal Prosecutor's Office said today a foreigner had been arrested last Wednesday.

Rebmann said six of the 10 suspects captured in West Germany remained in jail today, including two teachers, three engineers and a businessman.

Swiss prosecutors said they had launched a criminal probe into activities of the arrested foreigner, an engineer living in Zurich. The suspect was arrested on a tip from West Germany, prosecutors said, declining to disclose his name or nationality.

Rebmann called the arrests "a heavy blow against the KGB," the Kremlin's main intelligence agency.

Speaking at a news conference, he said the West German arrests occurred Wednesday and Thursday in police raids on 33 different locations. A total of 169 police carried out the raids, Rebmann said.

Two of the suspects — identified only as doctors — were freed shortly after police took them into custody, he said. Two other suspects were freed in the following days, but the investigation against the four was continuing, he said.

Rebmann said three of the jailed suspects were Soviet emigres, but none were Soviet citizens.

He said the arrests marked "an important penetration of the KGB spy network in West Germany."

Rebmann also said a government secretary arrested March 18 on suspicion of spying had been working for the KGB. It was the first time the woman, Elke Falk, was linked to the Soviets.

Ms. Falk worked in federal ministries for several years and had access to secret information.

Gerhard Boeden, president of the federal Ministry for the Protection of the Constitution — the West German counter-intelligence agency — said West German intelligence officials had developed new ways to uncover East Bloc spies.

Fire Crews Go Home

By The Associated Press

East Tennessee firefighters are anxiously watching the weather as crews from out of state go home after fighting forest fires last week, officials said.

Since the fires ignited Tuesday in the Shop Creek area of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, 1,300 acres have been blackened and firefighters have dug a containment line around a 1,500-acre area to hold back the flames, said Margaret Yates, a park ranger.

Ms. Yates said 171 people were monitoring hot spots, digging the containment line and burning out extra brush Sunday. Two 20-men crews were expected to be sent back to their homes in Wyoming and Arkansas today, she said.

But she said the weather forecast was not encouraging, with temperatures in the 80s and high winds predicted for today and Tuesday.

"The weather service is predicting a drying trend so we may be into serious fire weather. Even though we had a little rain, the winds could make it worse," she said.

Ms. Yates said a 1 1/2 acre grass fire was started Sunday by a camper who had illegally hiked into the Gregory's Bald area and set up a cook stove.

Funds Allocated

Greene and Martin counties have been allocated funds for anti-poverty programs as part of the state's Community Services Block Grants.

Greene Lamp, Inc., which services Greene and Lenoir counties, has received $144,091.

The Martin County Community Action program, which covers Pitt, Martin and Beaufort counties, is the recipient of $317,506 in grant money.

Parks Meeting

One of the six public meetings scheduled by the North Carolina Division of Parks and Recreation will be held in Greenville in April.

The Greenville meeting will be at 7 p.m. April 7 at Jaycee Park, 2000 Cedar Lane.

At these public meetings, division personnel at the state level will receive input from the public on needs for recreation sources in the state park system and how those needs should be met.

Two Injured

Greenville Police reported two persons were injured Saturday in a head-on collision on Greenville Boulevard near Edgewood Mobile Home Park.

Investigators said a car driven by Mark Alan Jones, of Pine Level, was headed west on Greenville Boulevard when he apparently lost control of the vehicle and spun, striking an east-bound car driven by Parrish Scott Sasser, of Route 2, Winterville, head-on.

According to police reports, both drivers suffered serious injuries in the accident according to reports.

Damage to the Jones car was placed at $3,500 and damage to the Sasser car was listed at $16,600.

Jones was charged with careless and reckless driving in the accident.

UNC Student Dies

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill student died Saturday night after falling from a ninth-story window of Granville Towers West, authorities said.

David L. Mantey, a senior from Wilmington, died instantly after falling before 10 p.m., when residents found the body by the pool side of the building.

William R. Oliver, Orange County medical examiner, said Mantey died of a fractured skull. He said there were no injuries that could not be attributed to the fall. Blood tests were incomplete Sunday.

Mantey lived in a Carrboro apartment but was visiting Granville resident Timothy M. Klein. Klein said Sunday that he probably had seen Mantey about an hour before the incident.

Granville South Manager Blake R. Duty said no residents had reported seeing the fall.

Leaders Seek Calm In Robeson

 despite a population that is 37 percent Indian.
 He was alone Saturday morning in his brick ranch house, which is flanked by farmland and another small house, authorities said.
 "The best we can establish, he got home shortly after midnight, he undressed and went to bed," said Robeson County Sheriff Hubert Stone. "Then someone came to the back door, knocking. Pierce slipped on a pair of jeans and went to the door. When he got to the door, the person either shot through the window or stuck the gun through the window and shot Pierce in the chest.

 "As Pierce turned, he was then shot in the lower left side. Pierce fell to the floor," the sheriff said.
 "It just looked like he was actually assassinated," he said.
 Earl Moore, who said he had known Pierce for 15 years, said the candidate "knew that something could happen" to him. Moore said he knew of a threat against Pierce, but said he would talk only to federal officials in Washington, not to county, state or federal officials in North Carolina.

 Jim Hatcher, a friend of Pierce who is running for a seat on the Robeson Board of County Commissioners, told the Observer that he received an anonymous telephone call late Sunday in which someone said "get out of town."
 "I plan to talk to Gov. Martin," he said. "The people are wanting to talk, but they're scared. Either Martin's going to do something, or else."
 Hatcher is the uncle of Eddie Hatcher, who, with Timothy Jacobs, took over The Robesonian newspaper in Lumberton on Feb. 1 to protest alleged government corruption in Robeson County.

 service area and for everyone," she said.

"I last saw him last October when I was at his office as part of a monitoring team for Legal Services of North Carolina. I'm shocked and saddened that something like this still happens. This isn't supposed to happen any more."

Danny Dial is a Lumberton native of Lumbee Indian descent who teaches choral music at North Pitt and Wellcome Middle schools. He said, "I feel that Mr. Pierce's death is awfully suspicious and I'd be surprised to find that his murder wasn't politically motivated. I remember hearing my father and grandparents talk over the years about all the injustices that have gone on all their lives in that area. This thing is, I believe, the culmination of years of injustice."

"The part that scares me is that I don't feel confident that there won't be even more violence in the area before good solutions are arrived at. I hope I'm wrong, but I think the potential is there."

One of Pitt County's lawmakers compared Pierce's death with Central American and Middle East violence. "Such lawlessness in the conduct of North Carolina politics is frightening and rings of Central American or Middle Eastern politics of terror," according to state Sen. Tom Taft of Greenville. "We cannot afford to tolerate similar activity in this state."

Ed Carter, mayor of Greenville, said, "Julian Pierce's death in this manner is a tremendous tragedy. I just hope that it is not anything that negatively impacts on the system and would cause further polarization among people in the Lumberton area. I believe that responsible people of this state are really concerned that discrimination there and everywhere is dealt with effectively. I'm hoping that this murder is not shown to be racial thing and that his killer is arrested and brought to speedy trial."

Ken Marsh, Pitt Community College's current visiting artist, is of Kentucky Cherokee-Shawnee descent and uses Indian themes and images in his work. He said, "I think from what I've heard and read that the area where Mr. Pierce was killed does require a good close look to see what is going on related to human rights in his home area. It's really upsetting when a person running for public office is killed. I have a great sadness about it."

"Unfortunately, it's often from tragedy like this that good comes. Mr. Pierce's assassination will be noticed throughout the nation, certainly in the Indian communication network, and hopefully by everyone who cares about people. I haven't lived in Robeson County, but I've visited there and I have friends there."

"I know there's a lot of poverty, a lot of deprivation of every kind. I didn't agree with the method of the two young men who took hostages at the newspaper a few weeks, but I understand their motivation. They were operating at the level they were capable of to bring attention to the injustices in the area, not only to Indians, but to blacks and less politically powerful whites. Julian Pierce was a highly capable fellow and was operating at a level that would have brought great good to the whole community had he been elected or even if he had not. He had done a lot already and the sad part is that we will never know how much more he might have done."

Armed Robberies Probed By Police

Investigators said 15 thefts, including one armed robbery Saturday and another on Sunday, were reported to Greenville police over the weekend.

Officer L.C. Overby said a man armed with a pistol took an undetermined amount of money from the Pic 'n Pay Shoes store on Greenville Boulevard in an armed robbery incident reported at 7:20 p.m. Saturday, while Officer E.M. Haddock said a man armed with a pistol entered the Pizza Inn on Greenville Boulevard about 8:44 a.m. Sunday and demanded money. After receiving a quantity of cash and change, Haddock said the robber locked employee Lang James in a storage room and fled.

Officer J.W. Isenhour said $10 was taken from the Peanut Shack at The Plaza mall in a flim-flam incident reported at 4:45 p.m. Saturday, while Officer J.K. McCarthy said a bicycle was taken from S5 Doctors Park in an incident reported at 5:34 p.m.

Officer R.L. Vandiford said $344 worth of tennis shoes were taken from 1107A Brownlea Drive in a break-in reported at 5:55 p.m. Saturday, while Officer C.M. Credle said $70 in cash was taken from a car parked in a lot at The Plaza Mall in an incident reported at 10:59 p.m.

Officer J.W. Corbett said a radar detector was taken from one car parked in a lot at The Plaza mall in one incident reported at 11:06 p.m. Saturday and said $55 in cash was taken from another car at The Plaza in a second incident reported at the same time, while Officer W.S. Heath said a computer and printer were taken from South Greenville School in a break-in reported at 2:50 a.m. Sunday.

Sgt. D.D. Heinz said a Rolex watch valued at $3,800, a $628 gold chain, a $4,500 diamond ring, four shirts and $25 in cash were taken from a second floor guest room at the Hampton Inn on Memorial Drive in an incident reported at 11:30 a.m. Sunday, while Officer W.T. McCarter said a .357 caliber pistol was taken from 108B N. Meade St. in an incident reported at 3:23 p.m. and two bicycles and a tricycle were taken from J1 Doctors Park in an incident reported at 7:02 p.m.

Officer J.W. Corbett said a purse containing $80 in cash was snatched from the hands of a woman in a parking lot at Kroger Sav-On on Greenville Boulevard in an incident reported at 7:21 p.m., while Officer H.D. Hines said $50 in change and a video cassette recorder were taken from 117 Oakdale Road in a break-in reported at 8:15 p.m.

TEETH AND FACIAL FEATURES

The teeth have a number of functions besides chewing food. One of the most cosmetically important of these is the support of facial contours. Loss of teeth in the adult, and especially the older adult, produces more changes in facial contour and appearance than in the child. In most people, the middle, autumn, and later years of life are characterized by a thinning and sharpening of the facial contours. During these years the support provided by intact teeth is critically important in maintaining a symmetrical and pleasing appearance.

provide direct support to the shape of the lips, corners of the mouth, and front part of the cheeks. If these teeth are not replaced immediately, their loss causes or accentuates folding, drooping, and hollowing of the facial tissues. The result is that the person's features become unattractive or downright unpleasant.

Dirt Roads Need Attention

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners approved a program planned by the North Carolina Department of Transportation to pave an additional 5.2 miles of dirt roads in the county in 1988-89.

It is a program to be applauded. The $861,846 in road work will only make a dent in the 236.44 miles of dirt secondary roads still left in rural Pitt County, but it is a step forward.

Randy Doub, a member of the Board of Transportation, said the paving will serve 94 homes and families in the county. In a growing county as Pitt is, new housing seems to spring up where ever there is a rural paved road. It is a good bet that, as the dirt roads are paved and become more accessible, there will be more houses constructed along them, thus providing good roads to even more families than now projected.

Without a major influx of secondary road funding in the transportation budget it will be many years before a great deal of progress will be made on the over 230 miles of dirt roads which still remain on the state system in Pitt County. Obviously these roads are less traveled than the 543 miles of paved roads presently maintained in the county.

Nevertheless, school buses must navigate these roads in all types of weather, a hazard that inhibits decisions about school closings during inclement weather for the entire county.

The community can be certain that with few exceptions the paving of rural dirt roads will be a good investment of transportation funds. The roads will be more easily maintained and development will occur along their way. It is an excellent way to obtain better use of roads without purchasing new right-of-way or clearing additional woodland to make way for new roads.

Today, state roads exist almost totally to serve motorized vehicles. That usually means that a hard surfaced road is superior to a dirt or stabilized one. The area has made steady progress in reducing the miles of dirt roads and next fiscal year the community will be 5.2 miles closer to eliminating all dirt roads.

Tightening Efforts Are Appropriate

The United States' veterans saw their lives disrupted for military training. Many of them were shipped off to far off places to fight under the worst possible conditions.

Veterans deserve our appreciation and some benefits for their sacrifices.

The nation, however, doesn't deserve to be ripped off by veterans who cheat on benefits. Regrettably some do. A report by the General Accounting Office says some veterans are cheating the government out of many millions annually because they falsify their incomes and thus collect more benefits than they are entitled to.

A comparison of Internal Revenue Service information with veterans reports indicated that in one year pensioners, by understating their incomes, may have received $182.5 million more in pension payments than they were entitled to. VA pensions go to 1.4 million people and the size of the pension is related to the recipient's other income.

In 1984, according to the report, the investigation showed that 549,000 pensioners failed to report to the VA about $947 million in income.

Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska has called for the VA to revise its income checking procedures and he also suggested that Congress should allow the VA to cross check data with the IRS.

Clearly there needs to be some tightening up of income verifying procedures for veterans pensions. The program was designed to help needy veterans, not to be a retirement income source for all veterans.

Full efforts should be made to make certain that income of veterans pensions recipients is reported.

Today's Thought

Jesse Jackson wins in Michigan. Now Democratic party leaders are wondering, rather than whether Jackson might wrangle the vice presidential nomination, who he would choose as his vice presidential running mate.

Public Forum

To the editor:

Sunday, March 20, was The Great American Meatout. On this day, people were urged to "kick the meat habit" for one day and to "consider a more healthful and less violent diet." It is sponsored by the Farm Animal Reform Movement (FARM), with chairpersons, Doris Day, Hayley Mills and Casey Kasem.

I would like to urge the people of Pitt County to consider a vegetarian diet for three reasons: health, the environment and ethics.

On a meatless diet, a person can get all the nutrients necessary for health. It significantly reduce one's chances of contracting cancer, heart disease, hypertension, and other diseases. Also, being a vegetarian for almost three years now, I personally can attest that it reduces one's incidence of getting colds and increases one's overall energy level.

The raising of livestock animals on the massive scale presently employed in the United States is wasteful of food and land resources. It is also a major contributor to such serious environmental problems as deforestation, the water shortage and soil erosion. By becoming a vegetarian, you may not change much environmentally, but at least you'll have peace of mind knowing you're not contributing to the problem.

The last reason, though, is the one I find most compelling. The overwhelming majority of farm animals today come from "factory farms" which look at them as products rather than the sentient, feeling beings that they are. The animals are confined, crowded, and often mutilated (such as debeaking of chickens). When you consider that meat-eating is merely a luxury, these practices become difficult to justify.

Vegetarianism has a lot to offer. So for yourself, your fellow man and the rest of creation, please join the growing number of Americans who are kicking the meat habit and consider making a permanent switch to vegetarianism.

To the editor:

Lt. Bob Jordan, in making a pitch for the Governorship of North Carolina, at a meeting before black newspaper people and their leaders, said he needs their votes and the "redneck" voters of eastern North Carolina to win. At this moment, he will need a great deal more.

There is nothing wrong with the Democratic Party. This is an individual tactless misnomer and the use of a vulgarism that certainly implies disrespect to all eastern North Carolinians. The real tragedy is that Mr. Jordan cannot see the simplicity of a public apology that could possibly erase this stigma and possible slip of the tongue. Everyone might be guilty of the same thing at times in their lives.

Mr. Jordan, in my opinion, might be feeling the pressure of trying to unseat a very strong and charismatic opponent. Stress can make us do stupid things.

An apology is not only necessary for Mr. Jordan's position, it is imperative and left as it is, could create a serious problem for the man, his party and could be used in demand for an impeachment. Is this necessary, Mr. Jordan?

The Worst-Laid U.S. Plans Go Awry

Explosive events in Central America — near civil war in Panama, U.S. troops in Honduras, a surprise cease-fire in Nicaragua and a stronger guerrilla movement in El Salvador — all confirmed this past week that just as there is usually an enormous price for systematic lying in one's private life, so a nation may pay an enormous cost for resting its foreign policy on a foundation of lies and illusions.

In Panama the Reagan administration looked the other way as the Central Intelligence Agency put on the payroll a general recognized to be corrupt but considered reliable. We now know that Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega has been actively involved in drug-running to the United States and gunrunning to the rebels in El Salvador.

The administration claimed that U.S. policy in the area had support from governments within the region. We ended up with the Central Americans defying the United States by endorsing the plan initiated by Costa Rican President Oscar Arias Sanchez to bring peace to the area.

The administration pretended that the Contras were a serious military force. But within a few weeks of a congressional vote denying them further aid — a period so short it could not possibly have made a difference in their ability to fight — they have been routed by Sandinista forces who have driven them out of Nicaragua into Honduras. The administration had to send U.S. troops to save face (although another purpose may have been to frighten Panama). And the reaction of true Reaganites to the news of the cease-fire reached between the Sandinistas and the Contras is "bitter," according to press accounts.

The administration asserted that president Jose Napoleon Duarte was making progress in creating a democratic order in El Salvador and cutting the ground out from under the guerrillas. But Duarte's party last week suffered a major legislative defeat and the far right, which has been closely associated with the death squads that helped bring on the civil war in the first place, is stronger than it has been in years. Government repression against democratic elements is mounting as is leftist intimidation of government supporters. As a European diplomat recently stated, "American aid has paid for the illusion that things aren't going so badly — when in fact they are.

'Washington could give some of the recent peace initiatives a chance by finally facing up to the changing nature of the security threat confronting the United States. Certainly in this hemisphere, it has radically changed.'

Few postwar administrations have been so contemptuous of the role of honest talk, international law and the democratic process in dealing with international issues. But because this administration has continued to misrepresent the realities in Central America, U.S. policy toward the region is in tatters. Driving U.S. policy has not been a clearheaded assessment of the realities on the ground but an effort by an ideologically rigid administration to pass its failures onto someone else. Sen. Nancy Landon Kassebaum, R-Kan., innocently betrayed the real rationale of U.S. policy when, in speaking of her Senate colleagues, she noted: "A lot of people are looking for some political cover, quite frankly. They don't want to face that nagging question, 'Did you lose Nicaragua.'" Her remark is an even better description of White House policy.

Yet it will be a tragedy for North Americans and a catastrophe for Central Americans if the 1988 presidential foreign-policy debate descends to the level it did in 1952 when the Republicans accused the Democrats of losing China and in 1960 when the Democrats returned the favor by accusing the Eisenhower Administration of losing Cuba. It was never in the cards for the United States to "save" any of these countries from political and economic forces that were in the process of eliminating foreign influence, not responding to it.

The same point is valid in Central America today. U.S. pressure and economic aid can hold off change but it cannot stop it. Among the U.S. options is not a preservation of the status quo, as we are attempting to obtain in El Salvador. Nor is a return to the past — the previous Contra strategy — possible in Nicaragua.

What, then, would be the elements of a sensible policy? They might involve the following points:

To begin with, Washington could give some of the recent peace initiatives a chance by finally facing up to the changing nature of the security threat confronting the United States. Certainly in this hemisphere, it has radically changed.

In the past century when steamships and navies needed coaling stations to travel far and wide, small bits of territory scattered across the face of the globe acquired enormous strategic importance. Like the periodic watering stations needed by the American transcontinental railroad for its steam engines, the global system could not work without dependable points of supply.

Even in the post-World War II period, until the arrival of strategic rockets with transcontinental range, small countries near the coast of one of the superpowers still had major military significance. The United States needed to base its B-52s near the Soviet periphery. Until it got stronger rockets, it needed nuclear-weapons bases close to Soviet soil. But as the range and accuracy of these weapons steadily improved, the value of these bases began to decline. This is as true for the Soviet Union as it is for the United States.

Technology affects both countries.

The new threat or challenge to the United States, at least in this hemisphere, is the uncontrolled river of people and drugs flowing across the U.S. border. Former CIA Director William Colby is not wrong when he contends that the primary security threat to the United States now is not Soviet rocketry but illegal immigration from Latin America. He certainly is right if we ask ourselves what foreign factors are most likely to alter radically the character of political life inside the United States.

Administrations should spend more of their political capital trying to persuade the Congress to permit sugar imports from Central America than to finance arms for the Contras. Real American security would be better served, for Central America will either send us its products or its people.

But it is not possible to embark on this more realistic approach until political figures in Washington cease misleading the American people about the situation in Central America. U.S. policy in the area now requires, therefore, an uncommon measure of statesmanship and openness, without which the killing in Central America will probably not end despite some promising events. If it continues, it becomes ever more likely that one day soon among those lost will be a not insignificant number of young Americans.

Strength For Today

Tradition has it that one day as Sir Isaac Newton sat in an orchard an apple fell from a tree and struck him on the head. The incident started a train of thought which ended in a great discovery. As Newton pondered what had happened to him, out of this incident came the theory of gravity.

Many of the greatest inventions have sprung from apparently insignificant circumstances. Every event in life has about it the significance of Newton's falling apple. Every meeting with a friend, every chance conversation we have in the street, every miscarriage of our plans, every sorrow, every success, every disaster, has a message for us if we will only heed it.

Some Risks Give Hope To Nicaragua Pact For Both Sides

There is an eerie familiarity to the pattern. Last August, Central American leaders signed a peace accord and heralded it as a new declaration of independence. The Reagan administration was surprised; it welcomed the plan officially but in private was skeptical and opposed. The administration had the same response when the Nicaraguan government and its resistance signed a second significant landmark in the region's march toward peace Wednesday.

Although the accord signed in August requested the United States to stop military aid to the Contras, President Reagan disregarded the request, insisting that the Sandinistas would negotiate seriously only if Congress provided continued military aid. He was wrong.

At great risk, Congress responded to the Central Americans by not responding to the president. Since August, it has rejected military aid while providing sufficient humanitarian aid to indicate that it was not prepared to wholly abandon the Contras. This gave the Contras an incentive to negotiate seriously, and it provided face-saving space for the Sandinistas to make some hard decisions.

The division in Congress thus had a salutary effect. Central America exerted positive influence on legislators in Washington, which in turn reinforced Central America's progress toward peace. Although many believe that the United States calls the shots in Central America, the agreement signed Wednesday in Sapoia is proof that Nicaraguans can shape their country's destiny if they can treat each other with respect.

Yet there is much in the Sapoia accord that offers hope. It represents the first time that the Nicaraguan government and the resistance sent high-level delegations to negotiate face-to-face in Nicaragua. In a nation that has always been ravaged by armed struggle because the government and its opposition could never negotiate the terms for political change, Sapoia is a historic breakthrough. For the first time, both sides acknowledged one another's legitimacy and showed a willingness to compromise that is rare in Nicaragua's history.

The agreement is important less for what was accomplished than for the risks that each side was willing to assume. Contra leaders agreed to withdraw their forces to specified enclaves where they will be vulnerable and their true strength can be ascertained.

They agreed to reject any military aid, although the Reagan administration was close to obtaining some, and they will receive humanitarian aid only through "neutral organizations," although the administration had rejected this idea when it was proposed by congressional Democrats.

Most important, the resistance defined a more realistic negotiating agenda by accepting the constitution and President Daniel Ortega's incumbency until 1990. The next round of negotiations should therefore focus on ways to guarantee the full participation of all Nicaraguans in elections for local offices and the Central American Parliament.

For its part, the Nicaraguan government reversed many of its previous positions. In accepting the Contras and permitting them to keep their weapons during negotiations, the Sandinista leadership made itself more vulnerable to internal divisions. The government "guaranteed unrestricted freedom of expression," accepted a gradual but unconditional amnesty, invited the Contra leadership to Managua for talks on political issues and not just a cease-fire, and it accepted an ongoing role by the Organization of American States and Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo to verify this and other agreements.

Analysis

In its response to the region's peace initiatives, the Reagan administration has stressed problems with the various accords, but it has done nothing to help improve them or even to negotiate U.S. interests directly. The statement by Secretary of State George P. Shultz that the Soviet Union should now stop military aid to the Nicaraguan government is astonishing not only because the Sapoia agreement omits this point, but also because the administration has been unwilling to negotiate it.

Most of the Contras' political leaders fled Nicaragua after the war began in 1982. It is possible that the administration fears that the outcome of negotiations will permit these leaders to return to a country that has less political space and is poorer, more militarized and dependent on the Soviet Union than it was before they left.

It would be embarrassing for the administration to credit the Contra war with such an outcome, but it would be tragic to continue the war without the prospect of a better alternative. In separating themselves from the administration's strategy, the Contras demonstrated both their nationalism and their independence; this undoubtedly helped them to reach agreement.

Both sides have agreed to a follow-up meeting in Managua on April 6. Both will try to rally their supporters for that meeting, but the real test of success will be whether each side shows respect for the other. If both pass that test, the path toward peace will be that much shorter.

South Via I-77 Unemployed Workers' Destination

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Interstate 77 is the route south for many vacationing West Virginians. But for thousands of the state's unemployed workers, it is the path to what they hope is a better life in North Carolina.

Completed in the mid-1970s, I-77 sweeps down from southern West Virginia, piercing the mountains with its Big Walker and East River tunnels before arching into North Carolina — 190 miles and 3½ hours to Charlotte.

"Charlotte is a straight line south from West Virginia," says Cliff

Dean, 41, a former West Virginian who teaches at J.T. Williams Junior High School in Charlotte. "It's the first big city you come to, it's growing, full of energy, clean — and not full of storefronts boarded up."

With its coal economy bleak, unemployment in some areas as high as 25 percent, and a state government effectively bankrupt, West Virginians are pouring out of the state at a rate unmatched since the Dust Bowl displaced thousands of Oklahomans in the 1930s.

"There has been a long, historical affinity for Charlotte and the Carolinas," says Mark Wilson, an economics teacher at Jones-Benedum College of Business at the University of Charleston. "It's a joke up here — our people spend more time at Myrtle Beach, S.C., than in West Virginia."

Division of Employment Security says Mountaineers have always been at the mercy of coal. But they used to turn to automotive, tire and steel plants in states to the north when things soured at home.

Over generations, they coined the expression "Hillbilly Highway" to describe whatever direction they were going in search of work.

"Now there's trouble in the Rust Belt," Griffith told The Charlotte Observer. "The Hillbilly Highway has changed. It used to go north, now it goes south."

The extent of West Virginia flight will not be fully known until the 1990 census. But in Charlotte, there are indications now:

— In the last four months, Traveler's Aid in Charlotte has helped 47 West Virginia families who were relocating to Charlotte but ran into trouble.

— Mecklenburg Social Services

Director Ed Chapin notes a "noticeable increase" in West Virginia families seeking emergency help in the last year — an average of three a day.

— Of 60 teacher applications the Charlotte-Mecklenburg schools receive weekly, about 10 are from West Virginians. Two weeks ago, Mecklenburg teacher recruiters at Marshall University in Huntington, W.Va., were astounded when 74 education majors swamped them for interviews in one day. Fifty-eight more were put on a waiting list and interviewed last week.

Employment Security Commission officials estimate 100 West Virginians a month are joining the Charlotte area labor force. "The vast majority are blue-collar workers, mechanics, factory workers and in construction," says Claudie Lewis, director of the Charlotte employment security office.

Candidates Report Threats

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — As agents continued to look for clues in Lumbee Indian activist Julian Pierce's slaying, two Robeson County candidates for public office said they had received threats before and since Pierce's death.

Jim Hatcher, a friend of Pierce's who is running for a seat on the Robeson Board of County Commissioners, told The Charlotte Observer he was threatened. Hatcher said he received an anonymous phone call late Sunday in which someone said "get out of town."

"I plan to talk to Gov. Martin," he told the newspaper as he was leaving a hotel near Interstate 95. "The people are wanting to talk, but they're scared. Either Martin's going to do something, or else."

Jim Hatcher is the uncle of Eddie Hatcher, who, with Timothy Jacobs, took over The Robesonian newspaper in Lumberton on Feb. 1 to protest alleged government corruption in Robeson County.

Lumberton police said they began guarding District Attorney Joe Freeman Britt's home Sunday after he reported receiving threats since the killing.

Britt, who was running against Pierce for a newly created superior court judgeship, and his family were in seclusion under police protection.

Earl Moore, Pierce's longtime friend, said Saturday that Pierce on the day he died talked about threats he had received.

"We were looking for this to happen," Moore said. "He knew something could happen — I won't go into it...."

Robeson County Sheriff Hubert Stone said he has received many tips about Pierce's slaying. However, most of the tipsters "had seen a car or heard something, but that's about all," he said.

Honduras Protest

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Two dozen Durham-based protesters lined the edge of Fayetteville's Bragg Boulevard several hundred yards from the entrance to Fort Bragg to protest the Reagan administration's policies toward Central American peace efforts.

The weekend protest was quiet and without incident, except for an occasional catcall from a passing motorist.

The protesters were led by 26-year-old Sue McKinney, a staff member of the Durham chapter of Witness for Peace.

Ms. McKinney and Mandy Carter, staff member of the Durham chapter of the War Resisters League had organized the demonstration but Ms. Carter was in Arkansas for the weekend and did not take part.

Spring Lake Police Chief Don Latham, along with Cumberland County Sheriff Morris Bedsole and several of his staff officers, stood by the group during the 1½ hours of the demonstration.

patrol said. Dennis Wayne Price, 10, of Oriental, died late Saturday afternoon when he was struck by a car while walking along a state road west of Oriental, according to reports.

Also on Saturday, the patrol said, 36-year-old Andrew McRae of Durham was killed around 10:30 p.m. when the car he was driving ran off U.S. 401 north of Laurinburg and struck a bridge.

Three people were killed in Sunday accidents, the patrol said. Shelia Ann Thompson, 18, of East Bend was killed around 2 p.m. when the car she was driving on a state road south of Jonesville ran off both sides of the road, overturned and struck a tree.

Carmel Floyd Caldwell, 46, of Waynesville, was killed Sunday afternoon in an accident west of Asheville on U.S. 19, the patrol said. Caldwell's car collided head-on with another car, then was hit by two other vehicles. Woodrow McKay Shoaf, 65, of Lexington, died early Sunday morning when his car collided with another vehicle in a curve on U.S. 52 north of Lexington, the patrol reported.

Clarence Lee Yancey, 41, of Oxford, was killed at 8:10 p.m. Friday in Granville County when the car he was driving crossed the center line of N.C. 96. His vehicle hit another car, then continued on, throwing Yancey from the car and running him over, troopers said.

James Randall Holland, 28, of Jackson, was killed at 4 a.m. Saturday when he fell asleep while driving on U.S. 158 four miles east of Garysburg. His vehicle ran off the road and hit a tree.

Weekend Fatalities

RALEIGH (AP) — Eight people were killed in North Carolina traffic accidents this weekend, including two people who were struck by vehicles, according to the state Highway Patrol.

David Brent Price, 20, of Kenansville, was killed Saturday night when he was struck by a car on a state road north of Kenansville, the

Assemblies Of God Officials Ponder Swaggart Punishment

By DONNA BRYSON
Associated Press Writer
SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — The punishment of fallen TV evangelist Jimmy Swaggart was left to his church's key governing body today, in an effort to settle a dispute between state and national leaders of the Assemblies of God.

The Pentecostal denomination's 250-member General Presbytery opens a two-day meeting, with a decision on Swaggart's punishment expected Tuesday afternoon, church spokeswoman Juleen Turnage said.

The General Presbytery will have the final say on Swaggart's rehabilitation. Swaggart has been linked to a prostitute, but the exact nature of his transgression has not been disclosed since he tearfully stepped down from his pulpit Feb. 21.

The Louisiana Presbytery of the Assemblies of God had recommended that Swaggart undergo two years of rehabilitation and be suspended from his Baton Rouge, La., pulpit for three months.

But the Executive Presbytery, 13 men who serve as a national board of directors for the church, asked the state district to reconsider what some called an unprecedentedly lenient response to a minister's moral lapse.

After gathering again on Feb. 29 in a nine-hour session, the Louisiana Presbytery stood by its original decision. The General Presbytery, whose members include representatives from each of the church's state districts, has been charged with resolving the conflict.

Reports circulated that Swaggart would leave the Assemblies of God if church officials suspended him from his pulpit for longer than three months. But a spokesman for Swaggart's ministry said he has made no decision on how he might react to the national council's decision.

Mrs. Turnage said she did not believe the General Presbytery would be swayed by "rumors heard through the media."

Church officials refused to comment on a newspaper report that a compromise proposal has been offerred that would bar Swaggart from preaching for one year, but would order him to give public testimony about his sin.

The 10-page proposal, obtained Sunday night by The Springfield News-Leader, was worked out by Cliff Jackson, a Little Rock, Ark., lawyer and church member who said the plan has been endorsed by both Swaggart and Louisiana church leaders.

Swaggart, who addressed his congregation briefly in Baton Rouge on Sunday as he has done several times since formally relinquishing the pulpit, is not expected to appear at today's meeting, Mrs. Turnage said.

In response to reporters' shouted questions as he drove from the service, Swaggart said he wasn't planning to leave the ministry, adding, "Why should I?"

The General Presbytery is a court of last resort on ministerial credentials. A minister usually appeals to it after his course of rehabilitation has been set by the Executive Presbytery and a state council. The Executive Presbytery short-circuited that process when it decided March 3 to turn the Swaggart case over to the larger body.

The Louisiana Presbytery has close ties to Swaggart's Jimmy Swaggart World Ministries, a television-church-school complex based in Baton Rouge that broadcasts Swaggart's fiery sermons to several countries. Louisiana Superintendent Cecil Janway, for example, sits on Swaggart's board.

Jimmy Swaggart World Ministries took in an estimated $150 million in 1986. Donations have fallen off since Swaggart's confession, forcing the ministry to lay off about 100 people and suspend construction at the Jimmy Swaggart Bible School.

But the Executive Presbytery, 13 men who serve as a national board of directors for the church, asked the state district to reconsider what some called an unprecedentedly lenient response to a minister's moral lapse.

After gathering again on Feb. 29 in a nine-hour session, the Louisiana

Students 'Pretty Good'

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Police riding herd on tens of thousands of youths who jammed this desert resort for spring break have made 140 arrests and issued 545 citations, but report the students are behaving fairly well.

Authorities say there have been no repeats of the rioting that occurred in 1986, when youths went on a downtown rampage, throwing beer bottles and tearing the clothes off young women.

"About 99 percent of those arrested were for public drunkenness," said police Lt. Lee Weigel on Sunday. "But all in all, it appears as though the students are being pretty good."

Vacationing young people began invading this desert city 120 miles east of Los Angeles on Friday, clogging the streets as they cruised and caroused. Traffic was backed up for several miles on the roads entering Palm Springs on Sunday.

Instead of rioting, huge crowds have flocked to ice cream and yogurt parlors as temperatures soared to 100 degrees, said police Officer Karen Holtz.

From Friday through Sunday, police issued 545 citations for misdemeanor offenses and made 140 arrests, Weigel said.

Police prepared for the onslaught. The 82-officer Palm Springs force is working 12-hour shifts all week and being supplemented with officers from the California Highway Patrol and Riverside County Sheriff's deputies.

Officials were unable to estimate how many youths were in the city of 36,000 permanent residents because many visitors stayed in hotels outside the city, Weigel said.

BABY M'S BIRTHDAY — A smiling Melissa Stern is carried by her father, William Stern, from their home on Tenafly, N.J., on Sunday. The girl, who is also known as Baby M and was born under surrogate contract to Mary Beth Whitehead-Gould, was 2-years-old Sunday. A judge will hear arguments today from both parents concerning visitation rights for Mrs. Whitehead-Gould. (AP Laserphoto)

Hawaiian Quake

HONOLULU (AP) — A moderate offshore earthquake rattled the Hawaiian Islands but caused no damage or injuries, authorities said.

The temblor, measuring 5.5 on the Richter scale of ground motion, struck at 5:33 p.m. Sunday about 35 miles west of Hawaii Island. Fifteen minutes later, an aftershock of 4.1 was recorded.

A 5.2 earthquake hit in the same area two days earlier.

The strength of Sunday's quake was not great enough to generate a tsunami, or tidal wave, said Richard Silcox of the Pacific Tsunami Warning Center.

The temblor was unrelated to Kilauea, the world's most active volcano, which has been in eruption on Hawaii Island since Jan. 3, 1983, said Tom Wright, scientist in charge of the U.S. Geological Survey's Hawaiian Volcano Observatory.

STAIN-RESISTANT CARPET:
How'd They Do That?...

Just how do they make all that carpet I see on TV that's battered, bashed, stomped on, spilled, crashed, crushed, insulted and generally, made a mess of... and then can be wiped clean with a damp sponge? Is it a miracle, or just modern technology?

Actually, it's the latter: but it looks like the former!

Stain resistance in fifth-generation fiber is achieved in three stages. Now, don't worry; I promise not to get too technical, so read on...

Stage One - Most manufacturers use carefully selected nylon 6,6 fiber. Nylon 6,6 is harder to dye (thus harder to stain) than earlier, single-chain synthetic polymers, such as nylon 6. That's important!

Stage Two - After dyeing, fibers comprising the carpet are heated to expand them, and then treated with a special "acid-dye blocker" which resists the future, accidental application of acid dyes—say, from a three-year-old with a cup of Kool Aid or fruit punch! Think of this "acid-dye blocker" as a transparent dye which completely fill the fiber's dye sites so that unwanted dye (from juices, wines or medicines) can't be absorbed. Got the picture?...

Stage Three - Finally, following the careful application of the stain RESISTER, a quality soil and stain RETARDANT is applied, followed by curing at elevated temperatures. Products like DuPont Teflon or 3M Scotchgard are the ones most frequently use.

Together, these three stages combine to form a stain-resistant barrier which eliminates discoloration from problem products containing acid dyes, such as Kool Aid, fruit juice, fruit punch, red wine and many medicines. This barrier provides a level of protection that was never before known to carpet consumers—much to their delight!

Gephardt Bowing Out; Re-Election Bid Planned

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard Gephardt decided the fate of his sputtering presidential campaign after failing to gain the "Michigan miracle" he so desperately needed and with time running out to file for re-election to his House seat.

Gephardt, who faced a Tuesday deadline to file as a candidate for re-election to Congress from his Missouri district, scheduled a Capitol Hill news conference today to announce his decision.
For several days, however, signs had pointed to a planned exit.
He spent Sunday at home in seclusion at his suburban Virginia with family and advisers. Aides were mum about what went on, but as early as last week they had said privately that he would drop out if he didn't make a strong showing in Michigan's Democratic caucuses. He finished a distant third in Saturday's contest.
A Missouri Democratic leader, state Rep. Anthony D. Ribaldo, said he had spoken with Gephardt Saturday night, and that Gephardt indicated he would run for his House seat from St. Louis.
"Dick Gephardt has informed me he'd like to proceed with his career in Congress," Ribaldo said.
Going into Michigan, Gephardt indicated it was a do-or-die state for him, but said he believed his prospects were good. Michigan is an industrial and union state that offered as receptive an audience for his tough talk on trade as Gephardt was likely to find anywhere.
Gephardt's last campaign speech was in Milwaukee, before Wisconsin Democrats who vote next Tuesday. He delivered it as the size of his Michigan defeat was becoming clear.
"All things considered, I'd rather be back in Des Moines," said Gephardt, who won Iowa's lead-off caucuses but was unable to convert that into victories in other states aside from his own Missouri and in South Dakota.
Even in Iowa, Gephardt's candidacy was slipping away.
At county conventions there over the weekend, follow-ups to the precinct caucuses in February, Gephardt lost supporters to Dukakis, and Jesse Jackson gained ground as well.
"I think people see that Gephardt is pretty much out of it," said Tom Mann, a state senator from Des Moines who backed Jackson.
Gephardt had won 167 delegates through 31 contests, falling behind even Sen. Paul Simon, who was not a factor on Super Tuesday and only stayed in the race because he won his home state of Illinois.

His delegates, where people have actually been selected to fill those slots, would become free to do as they wished if Gephardt pulled out of the race. In states where no people had been selected yet to fill delegate slots won by Gephardt, his delegate share would be reallocated among the other candidates depending on state rules.
Gephardt surged to the top of the Democratic field in Iowa with savvy television ads and a tough, pointed campaign message blaming unfair trade practices for much of the nation's economic difficulty.
But his win in the Iowa caucuses Feb. 8 didn't provide the "bounce" that he hoped for in the states that followed.
"Gephardt got very little momentum out of Iowa," said Democratic Party professional Elaine Kamarck. Pat Robertson's surprise second-place finish over George Bush on the Republican side dominated the news.

Jackson's Victory Changes His Label

By DONNA CASSATA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Jesse Jackson's win in Michigan has sent a message to the Democratic Party that it can no longer ignore — at the rate he's going, Jackson just might wind up as its presidential nominee this fall.

However, New York Gov. Mario Cuomo has said that if two or three candidates are left in the Democratic race prior to the primary, Jackson would be the primary.

A poll by the Marist College Institute for Public Opinion found that 57 percent of 459 Democratic voters surveyed in New York earlier this month gave Jackson a favorable rating, to 30 percent unfavorable. In a survey by the same group in January, only 44 percent had given Jackson a favorable rating while 41 percent rated him unfavorably.
"New York is a fairly volatile state," Garth said. He noted that the state has a large Jewish vote, a group that has been skeptical of Jackson in the past.

In the most recent Marist College survey, 36 percent of the Jewish voters gave Jackson a favorable rating, an increase from 17 percent in January. Forty-three percent gave Jackson an unfavorable rating compared to 62 percent in January. The results had a margin of error of 5 percentage points.

The numbers suggest Jackson is mending fences with Jews whom he offended in 1984.

"There are still some in the political establishment who think 1988 is an inevitable replay of 1984," Ms. Lewis said. But, she added, "The day after Michigan a new world has dawned."

Political analysts say Jackson's almost 2-1 victory over erstwhile front-runner Michael Dukakis in Saturday's Michigan caucuses is a clear signal that the preacher-turned-politician is a very viable contender for the nomination.

Jackson, treated as an also-ran in 1984, has won in eight states so far this year — Michigan, Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, Virginia, South Carolina, Alaska — and in Puerto Rico's non-binding contest.

The string of victories is forcing the party to re-examine the theory that a black cannot be nominated for president in 1988.

"The Democratic voters are sending a very strong message to the party," said Ann Lewis, a Democratic strategist and informal adviser to the Jackson campaign. "The quality of leadership is something they like and admire. This is a referendum on him and a referendum he's winning."

The campaign-watchers also said the Michigan win could translate into victories in other high-stakes contests, including the New York primary on April 19.

"I don't believe Dukakis can stop him," said David Garth, a New York media consultant who is working for Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr.'s campaign, "unless something different happens."

New York, which has 255 delegates at stake, represents a serious challenge for Dukakis, who has failed in the major industrial states of Illinois and Michigan.

"The stakes could not be more critical," said Paul Maslin, pollster for Illinois Sen. Paul Simon's campaign. "He can't just finish second to Jesse Jackson. He can't say I'm the leading white candidate. It's not going to work this year."

"Dukakis has got to win big to even say 'This is the guy the party wants,'" Garth said.

A New York Daily News poll published Sunday showed Dukakis favored by 45 percent of the 528 Democrats surveyed to 29 percent for Jackson. The poll, conducted between Monday, March 21 and Thursday, March 24, had a margin for error of plus or minus 4.5 percentage points.

There are still some in the political establishment who think 1988 is an inevitable replay of 1984," Ms. Lewis said. But, she added, "The day after Michigan a new world has dawned."

Spring Fashion Mood Is Flirty And Fun

By KILEY ARMSTRONG
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Spring fashions will be sealed with a kiss from the '60s — but bows and bubbles will replace love beads this time around. The mood is flirty and fun — romantic and dramatic. And body-conscious. Short skirts were the most obvious blast from the past as designers revealed their upcoming lines. The tent dress — mini, of course — was revived by Adrienne Vittadini. Some models piled plastic bangle bracelets on their arms.

And there was plenty of Flower Power: frequent floral prints; skirts curved and layered like upside-down tulips; fabric flowers — attached as a simple corsage or, ala Betsey Johnson and Bill Blass, stuck all over the dress.

But the stark options of the '60s also have been tempered with plenty of old-style chiffon and elegant silk, along with buoyant skirts, frothy sleeves, pretty sundresses and even a few bustles.

Fanciful, pumpkin-shaped bubble skirts appeared frequently, along with a less-radical version that's been dubbed a "collapsed bubble." Bob Mackie took bubbles one step beyond, turning them into bustles, ruffles and stand-up collars.

Lace, sequins and gleaming, intricate beadwork also made for after-dark glamour.

Day or night, black and white still prevailed, along with bold teal, fuchsia and goldenrod yellow. Polka dots, ruffles, big buttons and bows cropped up often — the latter in every conceivable location. Waists were nipped and accented with wide belts or sashes.

Shoulders were bared in strapless, bustier sundresses and off-the-shoulder jackets and dresses.

When it came to gams, Cathy Hardwick's collection was the leggiest of the lot. One strapless, green and yellow cotton dress by Mary Jane Marcasiano was too snug and short for anything but mincing steps. Ronaldus Shamask also had some shockingly short selections.

Ellen Tracy's silk, knee-skimming tulip-shaped skirts were soft and feminine. Even a few offerings from traditionalist Laura Ashley crept slightly above the knee.

To hem or not to hem? The undecided could opt for Bob Mackie's tight, beaded black dress, featuring a diagonal hem slashed from knee to thigh. Or try the cookie-cutter hemlines, many to mid-calf, that spiced the new made-in-America collection by Soviet couturier Viyacheslav Zaitsev.

The other alternative — trousers — was the opposite of body-conscious: Perry Ellis' loose, ankle-skimming pants; Donna Karan's navy pajama pants, teamed with slinky, wrapped tops; Mary McFadden's flowing palazzo pants, with ridges of delicate mushroom pleats tumbling from waist to hem; Ronaldus Shamask's high-waisted pants, shorts or culottes with sashes.

Only bike pants, like those offered by Adrienne Vittadini, were slim, and they often were topped with long dusters or tunics.

Geoffrey Beene favored the jumpsuit, heralding his black, crepe version with a halter neck and a swimsuit back as "the new ballgown."

Shorts had fashion flair, too: like Williwear's cuffed, knee-grazing walking shorts teamed with a double-breasted blazer or a smartly cropped jacket; Vittadini's mint-green, cuffed shorts with a bra-top and unstructured jacket.

The shorts also were part of a new, below-the-waist, layered look.

Ashley's two-piece halter dress in a splashy print featured a wrap-around skirt that unraveled to reveal matching shorts. Carolina Herrera's billowing, black and white, silk organza skirts were cut away in front to reveal beaded camisoles and shorts.

Some designers also layered dresses and skirts with petticoats, or a second skirt, peeking out from beneath.

Williwear's eye-catching Egyptian print skirt opened to show a solid-colored, cotton-eyelid skirt. Johnson's stretchy tube-dress in black and white gingham was prettied up with a buoyant, knee-length skirt and can-can slip. Beene's short, sweet, baby-doll circle skirts were fluffed out with petticoats.

And just about every designer braved one ensemble that combined unlikely fabrics or prints. Mary Ann Restivo and Ralph Lauren, for instance, showed floaty, chiffon skirts with tailored jackets.

Make Invitation Official

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Our teenage daughter has been corresponding with a pen pal her age in England. We would like to invite the pen pal to come and visit us this summer.

My question: Would it be considered improper for us not to offer to pay her plane fare? — PENNSYLVANIA PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: No. An invitation to visit does not imply "paid transportation." Since these pen pals are teen-agers, I suggest that you either telephone or write to the girl's parents and make the invitation official.

DEAR ABBY: I have a message for "Angry," who feels that her husband is selfish for refusing to have a vasectomy. I was in the same situation after our second child was born. We had a boy and a girl and agreed that our family was complete, so I asked my husband to have a vasectomy.

He agreed, but his heart wasn't in it. The arrangements were made, and I prepped him for the operation the night before. When we arrived at the hospital, the nurse gave us reading material and consent forms to sign. We read about the surgery procedure, discomforts to be expected, the possible complications, follow-up visits, etc.

Ten minutes later, the nurse came in and said, "Mr. Smith, are you ready?" When my husband replied

"Yes," I noticed that his voice was pitched about two octaves higher than normal. At this point I realized that he was doing this just for me, so I said, "What do you say we go get some breakfast and forget this whole thing?"

That did it! He bolted for the door, and with a look of undying gratitude in his eyes, kept saying, "Thank you, thank you" over and over. He didn't even care when he was itching to death while his hair grew back in!

Shortly after, I had a tubal ligation. There was no pain, no swelling, no loss of work, and best yet, no weekly sperm checks.

I would have advised "Angry" to have a tubal ligation, and leave the family jewels alone. A vasectomy is not for every man. Trust me. — BEEN THERE IN MICHIGAN

DEAR BEEN THERE: I think you are a living doll for standing by your man as you have, but I fear that your testimonial may have done for women's lib what Jimmy Bakker and Jimmy Swaggart have done for television ministries.

 TARBORO — Mrs. Rosa Lee Jones Woolard, 94, died Saturday.

Her funeral will be conducted at 2 p.m. Tuesday in Carlisle Funeral Home in Tarboro by the Rev. Herbert Hill. Burial will be in Greenwood Cemetery in Greenville.

Mrs. Woolard was an Ayden area native.

Surviving are two daughters, Zadie Everette of Tarboro and Dot Adams of Harlowe; three sons, Horace Woolard of Tarboro, Jack Woolard of Williamston and Marshall Woolard of Petersburg, Va.; two sisters, Sally Clayton of Greenville and Thelma Jones of Winterville, and 19 grandchildren and 43 great-grandchildren.

The family will receive friends at Carlisle Funeral Home from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. today.

At other times, they will be at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Everette on Route 4, Tarboro.

Troops Return From Honduras

"First they'll have to go through a complete inventory of property to make sure they can account for all the equipment they brought," Hovatter said.

In addition to the 82nd Airborne, the reinforcements include soldiers from the 7th Light Infantry in Fort Ord, Calif. All are expected home by Wednesday.

The presence of the reinforcements, which raised U.S. strength in Honduras to more than 6,000, alarmed the region and raised the already high level of tension. Tensions eased when the Contras and the Sandinistas signed a broad cease-fire accord last week after three days of talks in Sapoa, Nicaragua.

The U.S. troops never saw action, but the Honduran president said all along he expected them to back him up if the Sandinistas didn't withdraw.

By late last week, Honduran officials said the Nicaraguan troops were back on their own side of the border.

Capt. Steve Walker, 30, of New Milford, N.J., said he thinks the strong U.S. presence helped bring about the cease-fire.

"The Nicaraguans did cease action and they did withdraw and they did sit down and start negotiation with the Contras without any shots being fired," he said. "It was an effective display of resolve."

Mayors Threaten Crackdown

By RICHARD COLE
 Associated Press Writer

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — The mayors of Panama City and its largest suburb today threatened to crack down on a mass demonstration aimed at ousting Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega and ending the worst crisis in the nation's history.

In a communique published in this morning's state-run newspapers, the mayors said they had instructed "competent authorities" to enforce a ban on public demonstrations.

Those authorities are the police and soldiers commanded by Noriega. But opposition leaders said they would proceed with plans for the afternoon protest march and called the ban illegal.

The protest march comes at the start of the second week of a general strike that has shut down an estimated 90 percent of the nation's industry and commerce, further aggravating a critical cash shortage.

On Palm Sunday, Roman Catholic church leaders said government authorities "fear this explosion of sentiments" and appealed to both sides to show restraint. The church leaders said in a statement they would send observers to today's march in Panama City to try to keep the peace.

Police and soldiers, under Noriega who heads the 15,000-member Defense Forces, have suppressed recent demonstrations with tear gas and shotguns.

Also Sunday, the Social Security Institute said it will pay its 55,000 retirees up to $150 of their semi-monthly pension benefits this week. They had threatened to join today's march if they didn't receive their payments.

Last week, the government was without money to pay the members of the Defense Forces and faces another $33 million payroll for its 130,000 civilian employees this week, raising the possibility of intensified protests.

In Washington, Elliott Abrams, the assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, predicted on Sunday that many of the marchers will be "members of the families of the Defense Forces."

The government on Sunday expelled a reporter for the French news agency Agence France Press because his visa had been issued a Panamanian consular official in Washington loyal to deposed President Eric Arturo Delvalle.

Opposition figures criticized the government for its planned

Mayor Is Wounded

The Alex Boncayao Brigade has been blamed for the killings of more than 150 policemen and soldiers in daylight ambushes on Manila's streets since last year. Before today, the attacks have killed one or two people. The rebels had announced they would soon kill officials as well as police and soldiers.

President Corazon Aquino said she was "shocked and saddened by these acts of violence."

"I have always asked our people to resort to the ways of peace," she said in a statement. "My hope is that as democracy in our country gains a strong foothold, violence and terror will gradually recede."

Investigators said Oreta and his party were riding in a van and a car to a flag-raising ceremony at the Malabon town hall when six men waiting at an intersection opened fire with automatic weapons.

Cpl. Mario Odulio said the killers were armed with AK-47 and M-16 automatic assault rifles as well as 9-mm and .45-caliber pistols. Police recovered more than 40 spent shells at the scene, Odulio said. He said the killers escaped aboard a van and a jeep.

Police said they believed the killers belonged to the Sparrow Unit, an assassination squad of the New People's Army, but were also looking into the possibility local politics was involved.

Malabon, a fishing community in Manila's northern suburbs, was among the places where last January's local elections were hotly contested.

Oreta is a brother-in-law of Rep. Tessie Oreta, younger sister of Mrs. Aquino's assassinated husband, former Sen. Benigno S. Aquino Jr.

Kerr, Elliott Leads Cats By Heels

Driving Through

Arizona Wildcat forward Sean Elliott (32) turns to drive toward the basket against North Carolina forward Steve Bucknall in the first half of Sunday's NCAA West Regional Championship game in Seattle. The Wildcats rolled by the Tar Heels, 70-52, to advance to the final four. (AP Laserphoto)

SEATTLE (AP) — Arizona Coach Lute Olson knew that guard Steve Kerr was joking. At least, he hoped Kerr was joking.

"Let's run with 'em, coach," Kerr said, a mischievous twinkle in his eye, when Olson asked him how second-ranked Arizona should play fourth-ranked Oklahoma on Saturday in a semifinal game of the NCAA Tournament.

"I don't think it would be in our best interests to run up and down the court with them," Olson said of a team that has scored 100 or more points in 20 games. "If you see Billy (Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs), tell him we'll start in a four corners like Villanova did."

Villanova's deliberate tactics worked for a time, but Oklahoma exploded to beat the Wildcats 78-59. Whether Oklahoma, 34-3, will do the same to Arizona will probably hinge on how the Sooners' pressing defense is handled by the Wildcats guards, Kerr and Craig McMillan.

The talented duo did just fine on Sunday, and the result was a 70-52 thrashing of North Carolina in the West Region final.

Arizona, which trailed at halftime for only the second time this year, outscored the seventh-ranked Tar Heels of the Atlantic Coast Conference 27-8 in the last 13½ of the game. It was North Carolina's worst defeat in NCAA play since a 104-84 loss to Drake in the national consolation game in 1969.

"We did better than anyone else, they only beat us by 18," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith, who had the Tar Heels in the NCAA Tournament for the 14th straight year.

Arizona has won its four NCAA games by 40, 29, 20 and 18 points in pushing its record to 35-2.

Arizona, down 28-26 at halftime, trailed 44-43 with 13:37 to go after North Carolina All-American J.R. Reid rebounded his own miss. That was the last hurrah for the Tar Heels, who were held to two baskets the rest of the way.

Arizona scored eight points to take a 51-44 lead, with Kerr putting the Wildcats ahead for good at 46-44 on a 3-point shot with 13:23 left.

All-America forward Sean Elliott, selected the outstanding player of the regional, led Arizona with 24 points, 14 in the second half. Center Tom Tolbert got 18 of his 21 points after halftime. Three of his baskets came on pinpoint passes from the 6-foot-8 Elliott.

Kerr, Arizona's fifth-year senior, chipped in with 14 points.

"Coach Olson sat me down in the first half and told me I wasn't screening out or going for rebounds," Tolbert said with a sheepish grin. "He asked me if I wanted to go to Kansas City. I told him, 'You bet I do.' He told me, 'You better go out and play harder.'"

Tolbert delighted the Kingdome crowd of 22,470 by flipping in a blind shot over his shoulder after being fouled by Reid with 14:09 remaining. That tied the score at 42 and the Arizona fans erupted in astonishment.

"I just put a little English on it and it went in," said Tolbert, whose free throw then gave Arizona a 43-42 lead.

"We play a lot of horse and I try to teach him as many funny moves as I can," Kerr said. "He was just trying to draw the foul."

"I love those kinds of shots," Olson said sarcastically.

It was a disappointing day for North Carolina, which finished its season at 27-7.

The Tar Heels thought they posed a legitimate threat because of their strong inside tandem of the 6-foot-9, 250-pound Reid and 6-10 Scott Williams, both sophomores. Williams finished with 13 points but Reid had only 10.

Olson switched defenses at halftime, scrapping the 2-3 zone in favor of a man-to-man. North Carolina answered by pushing the ball inside to Reid, who then flipped it out to an open man when he attracted an extra defender.

The strategy backfired when North Carolina couldn't hit those outside shots.

"We missed some easy shots that sometimes we will make, but sometimes they don't go," Smith said.

The Tar Heels shot only 31 percent in the second half and 35.7 percent for the game, with Reid and Rich Fox providing the only field goals of the last 13½ minutes of play.

"We all had some very good shots, even some inside shots that we usually make," North Carolina guard Jeff Lebo said.

"We just couldn't get the shots we needed to go in," Reid added.

Olson, who coached Iowa to the Final Four in 1980, said that, because of the man-to-man defense, "we became much more active in the second half."

The victory gave Olson a chance to brag a little about basketball in the West.

"How many teams are there left East of the Mississippi?" he asked, knowing the only one is Duke, which lost 91-85 to Arizona in December.

Olson long has criticized what he calls an Eastern bias against West Coast basketball.

"There are a lot of Western kids who are going to be sitting out east watching the Final Four on TV that might have had an opportunity to be there," he said.

Manning Gets Help, Kansas Wins

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Kansas isn't a one-man team. Because of that, it may become the nation's No. 1 team.

The Jayhawks do have center Danny Manning, perhaps the country's best college player. His brilliance overshadowed the work of his teammates throughout the basketball season. But on Sunday, they stepped into the spotlight and found it to their liking. In the process, they sent Kansas into the Final Four and pushed Kansas State out of the NCAA Tournament.

"We have the greatest player I've been associated with," Kansas Coach Larry Brown said of Manning. "Then I went into the locker room and there were a lot of kids who had a role in getting us to the Final Four."

The unranked Jayhawks got there with a 71-58 victory over 20th-ranked Kansas State, 25-9. Kansas, 25-11, will play fifth-ranked Duke, 28-6, next Saturday in the tournament semifinals. The winner plays the survivor of the Arizona-Oklahoma semifinal in the national championship game next Monday night.

In 1986, Duke beat Kansas 71-67 in the NCAA semifinals. Last Feb. 20, the Blue Devils downed the Jayhawks 74-70 in overtime after trailing 67-61. Manning had 31 points and 12 rebounds in that game.

"We're a better defensive team now than we were then," Manning said. "We've improved. Then again, so has Duke."

Manning, a two-time All-American, did lead all scorers with 20 points Sunday and did pass Elvin

Hayes' NCAA career total of 2,884 points to move into seventh place with 2,895, just 19 behind Alfredrick Hughes of Loyola, Ill.

But the improvement of the Jayhawks, 12-8 at one low point but now winners of eight games in nine starts, was evident in the number of players who made major contributions:

— Milt Newton, who became a starting forward when Archie Marshall suffered a season-ending knee injury on Dec. 30, had 18 points, nine rebounds and seven assists.

— Scooter Barry, the son of Hall of Famer Rick Barry, came off the bench to score a career-high 15 points after getting just 96 in his 32 previous games this season.

— Substitute Keith Harris had a key steal off Kansas State star Mitch Richmond and went in for a dunk that gave Kansas the lead for good, 43-42 with 13:51 left.

— Newton, Barry and Kevin Pritchard did all the scoring in a 20-8 run that turned Kansas' 45-44 edge with 12:32 remaining into a 65-52 margin with 1:44 to go.

"Danny Manning was outstanding and give the others credit, too," Kansas State Coach Lon Kruger said. "Kansas had a number of players who stepped in and did a great job."

"There are so many unlikely kids, who I wasn't smart enough to play (before), that came through," Brown said.

Manning was named the regional's outstanding player and joined Newton and Pritchard on the all-tournament team. Richmond and Will Scott, who led Kansas State with 18 points on Sunday, also made it.

Led by Newton and Harris, the Jayhawks played strong team defense against Richmond, a 6-foot-5 senior and a possible first-round NBA draft choice this year.

Averaging 22.9 points per game, he scored just 11 on 4-of-14 shooting. It matched his low for the season, which also came against Kansas last month. The Jayhawks, who had lost two of three previous games against Kansas State this season, did an excellent job of denying him the ball and bothering him when he did get it.

"They double-teamed me every time and tried to make me give it up," Richmond said. "I didn't feel frustrated. I tried to get the ball in someone else's hands."

In the first half, those hands belonged to Scott and they were hot. He made three of five 3-pointers and scored 13 points to carry the Wildcats to a 29-27 halftime lead.

But a 3-pointer by Barry two seconds before the buzzer gave Kansas a lift.

"It was a tremendous play for us," Brown said. "I thought Scooter's basket and the way we used the clock was a big factor."

Kansas State, however, expanded its lead to 40-35 with 15:55 to go.

But Kansas was controlling Scott, who made five of seven shots in the first half but one of eight in the second.

The Jayhawks closed the gap to 42-41 after Harris stole the ball as Richmond dribbled toward the foul line.

"I thought I got fouled," Richmond said.

But Harris scored, Manning hit a hook and Richmond followed with a jumper. Kansas led 45-44 with 12:32 to go.

Newton's 3-pointer started the 20-8 run that decided the game. He had eight points in the stretch, Barry and Pritchard six each.

"We knew they would play a zone and pack it in on Danny, so we'd have to hit some shots," Newton said.

He made seven of 10, Barry five of six.

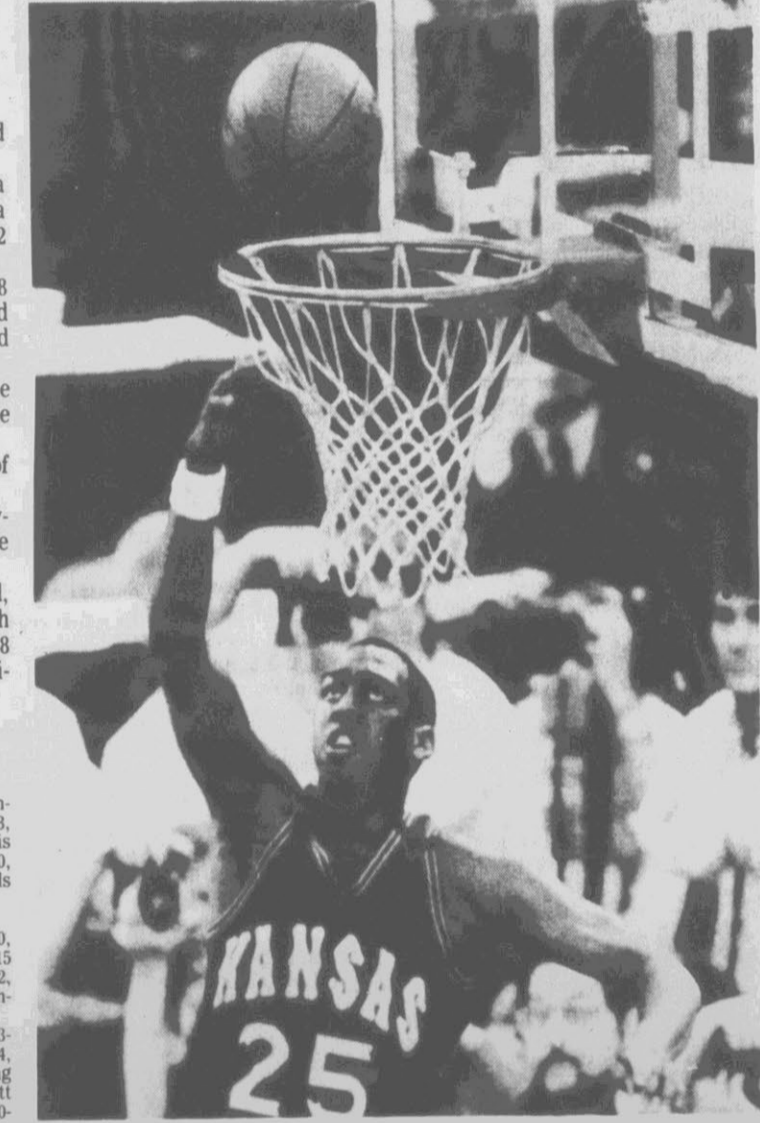

"I had a little incentive from playing so poorly against Kansas State earlier this year," Barry said.

Starting for the injured Pritchard, he took just two shots, missed both and finished with two points in 28 minutes in a 69-54 loss in the semifinals of the Big Eight tournament.

Dukes Take Two From The Pirates

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
James Madison came into East Carolina's Harrington Field tabbed as the team to beat in the Colonial Athletic Association this baseball season.

Sunday afternoon, they left no doubt in the minds of the Pirates that their reputation was well earned.

The Dukes handed the Pirates their first shutout of the year in the opening game, 5-0, and came within an out of a second one in the nightcap, settling for a 2-1 victory and a sweep of the series.

The third game between the two was canceled because of the weather conditions on Saturday when the doubleheader was originally scheduled.

The shutout was the first for East Carolina in two seasons. The last came against Richmond in the CAA's initial tournament three years ago. The last regular season shutout was at the hands of N.C. State in the 1985 season.

Dana Allison held the Pirates to only four hits in the opening game as he picked up his sixth win in as many decisions for the Dukes, now 16-2-2 on the year and 2-0 in the CAA. Allison walked only one and struck out five in going the full seven innings.

In the second game, Mike Linskey picked up the win but had to have relief from Brian Kimmel in the sixth inning. Linskey, now 3-0, gave up only four hits, walked two and struck out four in five and a third in.

East Carolina's Scott Stevens took the loss in the first game and falls to 2-4. He scattered nine hits and only two of the four runs scored off him were earned. He walked two and fanned five. Brian Berckman gave up the other run in relief.

Jake Jacobs took the second game loss, falling to 3-2. He gave up six hits, walked two and hit two in six and a third in.

"Allison did a wonderful job (for Madison)," Pirate coach Gary Overton said. "Linskey is supposed to be their ace, but Allison did an outstanding job."

Hunnicutt Takes Fifth Place At Meet

DURHAM — Susu Hunnicutt of the Greenville Gymnastics Club took fifth in the all-around at a Class III Optional Qualifying meet for the state championships Sunday. Hunnicutt, competing in the 9-11 year-old age group, totaled 30.55 in the all-around. She also took second in floor exercise with a 8.65; eight in vaulting with a 7.70 and 10th on the uneven bars with a 7.15. That qualifies Hunnicutt for the state meet. Wendy Dixon, competing in the 12-14 age group at the same meet, scored a 29 in the all-around to qualify for the state meet. Lori Evans and Anne Taylor both qualified for ribbons in their final meet of the season. Evans was 14th on the balance beam with a 7.36 while Taylor was 15th in vaulting with a 7.65.

State's Gay Wins Iron Duke Golf

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Joe Gay of North Carolina State shot a final round 72 Sunday to win the individual title at the Iron Duke Golf Classic and lead the Wolfpack to a 13-stroke victory in the team competition at Duke Golf Course. Gay shot a three-round total of 213 to take a two-stroke victory over Jimmy Johnston of Tennessee. Jim Sowerwine of North Carolina was third at 216, followed by Brian Lamb of Coastal Carolina at 217, and Charlie Rymer of Georgia Tech at 218. N.C. State coasted to the team title with a three-day total of 876. Georgia Tech was second at 889, and North Carolina was tied with Tennessee for third at 897. Virginia finished fifth at 902. East Carolina finished 16th with a three-day total of 952. The Pirates shot 307 at a team in the first round, but fell to 322 on the second day and 323 on the third.

Dawson Has Reportedly Inked 2-Year Deal

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — Andre Dawson, the National League's 1987 Most Valuable Player, has gotten his wish for a two-year contract with the Chicago Cubs, according to published reports. The tentative $4 million agreement was reached late Sunday between Dawson's agent, Dick Moss, and team management. Dawson, 33, had said earlier he would stay with the Cubs regardless of his possible free-agent status — if he could sign a two-year contract. In today's editions, The Chicago Sun-Times said an agreement was reached late Sunday night between Moss and Cubs business chief Donald Grenesko after a long weekend bargaining session here.

Steinbrenner Upset At Winfield's Book

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Even though Dave Winfield's book isn't in the stores yet, it's already drawn fire from one noted critic. Yankees owner George Steinbrenner issued his review of Winfield's forthcoming book Sunday and labeled it "disruptive," adding: "It certainly can't help the team, the book and all this coming out. I wish he hadn't written the book. If it isn't honest and truthful, then it's no good. And you can't just say that one part of the book is a lie. You can't say that." Steinbrenner was especially upset by a section of "Winfield, A Player's Life" concerning black players in the Yankees organization. Winfield paraphrased second baseman Willie Randolph as saying a black man can be a "good" Yankee and a well-respected one but would never be regarded as a "true" Yankee. Randolph, a black, has denied making the remark and said Sunday: "I said what I had to say. I'm not going to sell any books around here."

Wilander Tops Unwavering Connors

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — This time, Jimmy Connors waited until his match was over to talk about quitting. Connors, 35, brought up the possibility of retirement — and then dismissed it — after Mats Wilander beat him in four sets Sunday to win the International Players Championships. The loss was Connors' 11th straight in a tournament final. "I play for the like of the game now," he said. "It's still financially rewarding. How can I get out of the game? I'm still making a good living, and I'm doing something that I like to do." The temperamental Connors, seeded No. 2, provided plenty of excitement in the final two rounds of the two-week, $2.1 million tournament. He beat Miloslav Mecir in a stormy semifinal match Friday after threatening to quit because of the officiating. Then he lasted almost four hours against Wilander, the top seed, before losing 6-4, 4-6, 6-4, 6-4. "You've only got me a little while longer," Connors said. "Either you're going to like me now or you're not going to like me now, but when I'm gone (it's) adios, mama, because I'm out of here." West German Steffi Graf and Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina, seeded second, beat No. 4 Gigi Fernandez of Miami and Zina Garrison of Houston 7-6 (8-6), 6-3 to win the women's doubles title. Graf, the top seed, beat Chris Evert 6-4, 6-4 Saturday to win the women's title for the second straight year.

Ku Says She's Struck A Blow For Golf

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — While winning her first tournament in the Western Hemisphere, South Korea's Ok-Hee Ku says she's struck a blow for golf in her homeland. "This will make a big change for Korea, golf-wise, making golf more visible and popular," the 31-year-old Seoul native said through an interpreter Sunday after capping a 1-under-par 72 with a nerve-wrenching, 12-foot putt on the final hole to win the $350,000 LPGA Turquoise Classic. The putt for par — and to avoid a playoff — was uphill on the fast greens of the Moon Valley Country Club, baked by temperatures which reached 97 degrees during the afternoon.

McCumber Takes 4-Stroke Win

The Winner
Mark McCumber, shown here after sinking a birdie putt on the 9th hole at the Players Championship in Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla., held on to the early lead to win the tournament Sunday. (AP Laserphoto)

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Mark McCumber doesn't always agree with PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman. "I'm a pretty outspoken guy," McCumber admitted. But he liked what the Commissioner said at the presentation ceremonies following the Players Championship. And he agreed. "This ushers in a new era for Mark McCumber," Beman said following McCumber's front-running four-shot victory Sunday in the annual championship of golf's touring pros. "I've never played better in my life," said McCumber, 36, who had won five previous PGA Tour titles in a late-starting 11-season career. And, he said, his best years are in front of him.

"The first four or five years I played, I was kind of catching up with the guys who had played in college. Now I feel I'm even with them," said McCumber, who made six tries at the Tour's Qualifying School before gaining his playing rights. "I think the next five years should be the best of my career," said McCumber, who hasn't finished lower than 14th this season and has only one round over par this year. During the 32 holes he played Sunday, he made only one bogey — on the final hole. By then, it mattered not at all.

"Wonderful," said McCumber, who had to wipe tears from his eyes as the huge gallery — many of them his family, friends and neighbors — gave him a standing ovation as he walked up the 18th fairway with the victory in his pocket. McCumber was among the 42 players stranded on the course by a series of storms Saturday. He returned shortly after daylight Sunday morning and finished off a third-round 67 that gave him a two-shot lead. It was all the edge he needed. He led throughout the final 18 holes Sunday afternoon, compiling a 69 that produced the biggest victory of his career. He won it with a final total of 273, 15 under par and a record on the PGA Tour's home course, beating Calvin Peete's 1985 mark by one stroke. The victory was worth $225,000 from the total purse of $1.25 million and gave McCumber the money-winning lead for the year at $368,438. Perhaps more importantly, it provided him with a 10-year exemption for Tour events. Mike Reid, never really in the title chase, came on to take second with a 67 for 277. South African David Frost, who put the pressure on McCumber over the first nine holes of the final round, had a chance to tie for second until he bogeyed the final hole for a 72. That dropped him back into a tie for third at 278 with Curt Byrum and another South African, Fulton Allem. Byrum had a closing 70, Allem a 68. Only Frost really got close over the last 18 holes, but when McCumber birdied the 11th and 12th holes and Frost bogeyed the 13th, the margin was five shots with five holes to play. Frost's only hope was that McCumber would make a mistake. He didn't. "Winning Doral in my rookie year was the most exciting. Winning the Western, beating Tom Watson, one of the great, great players, was gratifying," McCumber said. "But this to me — winning a debated major — makes me feel wonderful."

A Skating Era Ends With Championships

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Every four years or so in figure skating, there comes a time to pass the torch. The medals are shelved or displayed on the mantelpiece. Champions fight off nostalgia for past glories and set their sights on the future. Some will turn pro. Others will turn to acting, even medicine. Some don't know. One thing is certain: they will be replaced and the 1989 World Figure Skating Championships in Paris will be without them.

All the winners of the world championships, which closed the season, will be heading in new directions. It is the first time in figure skating history that all four world champions are leaving. Ice dance was the last event to gain world championship status in 1952, joining singles and pairs. American Brian Boitano and Canadian Brian Orser, gold and silver medalists in men's competition, say they'll make their final decision on retirement soon. But neither is expected to continue as an amateur. Two-time Olympic gold medalist and four-time world titlist Katarina Witt of East Germany, Canadian Liz Manley and U.S. champ Debi Thomas all officially ended their careers here with a 1-2-3 finish in the women's singles. Thomas announced that she had married a 23-year-old University of Colorado student, Brian Vanden Hogen, just before the world championships. Also at the end of their competition days were four-time world champion ice dancers Natalia Bestemianova and Andrei Bukin of the Soviet Union, and teammates Elena Valova and Oleg Vasiliev, who won the world pairs title. Orser, who at 26 is getting old for such a youth-oriented sport, says "it's no secret I plan to turn professional."

Boitano, with his California good looks, has been showered with offers from both pro skating and television. And he says there's a bottom line. "I'll be 25 (in October) and I have to start thinking about making a living," the Olympic gold medalist said. Witt, too, would like to continue in the spotlight that has illuminated her during her brilliant days as an amateur. She has been studying acting and, in a radical departure for an Eastern bloc skater, has said she would like to skate with professional ice shows. "I do not want people to come up to me one day and say, 'Aren't you that skater who used to be famous?'" she has said. "I am, and I will be, much more than that."

Thomas, on the other hand, would like to slip quietly out of the public eye after her marriage. "I did not want this news to detract from my world championships. Now that they are over, I want to let all my friends and supporters know how happy I am," Thomas said, explaining why she didn't tell anyone of her wedding, reportedly not even her coach, Alex McGowan.

She called all the attention "frankly exhausting" and looked forward to finishing pre-med studies at Stanford. She plans to become an orthopedic surgeon and one day open her own training center for young skaters. Similar feelings were voiced by Valova, 25, and Vasiliev, 28. The husband-wife pair will tour with a newly formed professional Soviet team, but say they intend to start "a nice family" soon.

The pairs event is the one area of skating where there are no doubts about who will take over with the departure of the world champions. In fact, Ekaterina Gordeeva, 16, and 21-year-old Sergei Grinkov seemed clear favorites for a third straight world title until Gordeeva tumbled in the free skate and Valova and Vasiliev won their third world crown instead. Yet the 80-pound bundle of charm and grace and her tall, handsome partner have many a year to triumph again — with few real threats in sight. In ice dancing, the retirement of B&B seems to leave a clear path for junior teammates and silver medalists Marina Klimova and Sergei Ponomarenko.

Bronze winners Tracy Wilson and Rod McCall of Canada say they're "tempted" to stay in for another year after a dynamic performance here, but are expected to turn pro anyway. In men's and women's skating, the heirs apparent are less clear-cut. But there are plenty of prospects. Among the women, American Jill Trenary, 19, is most often cited as a potential world champion. That would be fine with Trenary. "Katarina is my idol and I'd love to take her place," she says.

Rojas Is Tabbed

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Cookie Rojas planned to lose his title as interim manager of the California Angels over the weekend. But he only lost part of the title — interim.

Rojas, expecting to hand the reins back to Gene Mauch, had made a plane reservation for Florida Saturday morning to scout the Chicago White Sox. Instead, he wound up at an early-morning news conference, where it was announced that Mauch was retiring and Rojas was the new manager. "That was the second shock of the spring for me," Rojas said. "The first was when Gene told me in Arizona he was leaving the club to have medical tests."

The 49-year-old Rojas, who has managed in Venezuela and the Dominican Republic but never before in the United States, had been filling in since Mauch left to have a physical examination two weeks ago. Although tests showed that Mauch, 62, was in good health except for having a mild case of bronchitis, he informed team owner Gene Autry Friday that he had decided to retire. Mauch, who had recommended that Rojas fill in for him while he took time off to have the physical exam, then recommended Rojas to replace him. "I had no idea what they (Gene Autry and his wife, Jackie) wanted to talk to me about," Rojas said, recalling being summoned to the couple's house Friday evening. "I thought they might want to ask me how the game went."

Rojas, a native of Cuba who is a naturalized U.S. citizen, played for Mauch with the Philadelphia Phillies and has worked with him with the Angels since 1981.

Speed Ends 9-Year Drought By Winning Transouth 500

Tolbert's Unbelievable Shot Looms As A Big Key For Cats

SEATTLE (AP) — Arizona's Tom Tolbert says it wasn't an impossible shot even though it sure looked like one.

As North Carolina center J.R. Reid came crashing down on him, the Wildcat center flipped the ball blindly over his head into the basket.

"I knew it wasn't a total 1,000 to 1 shot," Tolbert said. "I thought it was a 100 to 1 shot."

"I can't believe he made that shot," North Carolina coach Dean

Smith said. "That was a very big basket."

The shot was the most spectacular play in an 18-point second-half performance by the Wildcat senior, who's listed at 6-foot-7 but is, his coach says, 6-8½.

"Obviously it was a lucky shot," teammate Steve Kerr said. "But it was a great play because all he was trying to do was draw the foul."

The basket and subsequent free throw gave Arizona a 43-42 lead and set the tempo for a scoring onslaught that sparked the No. 2 Wildcats to a 70-52 victory Sunday over No. 7 North Carolina in the finals of the NCAA West Regional.

"I saw him (Reid) coming. He was a step late, so I decided to give him a pump fake and he went for it," said Tolbert, who finished with 21 points.

"I jumped into him a little bit. He came down on me pretty hard, but before I hit the ground I still had the ball so I figured I might as well let it go somewhere. So I put a little English on it and it went in."

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — An emotional Lake Speed put nine years of winless frustration behind him Sunday with a runaway victory in the Transouth 500 NASCAR stock car race at Darlington International Raceway.

"It's been a long ride," said the 40-year-old driver from Jackson, Miss., whose best previous efforts in 163 Winston Cup starts since 1980 were a pair of second-place finishes.

"A lot of people said, 'How in the world can you keep doing it after you get so close so many times and fall out of the race, or break down, or have somebody wreck you?' I kept telling them ... I was glad to be here, and I wasn't lying."

"There are tough, tough guys here. These guys are all excellent drivers. To be able to compete with them is an honor."

On Sunday, Speed started eighth in the 41-car field and was at or near the front all the way, leading four times and taking the lead for good 48 laps from the end.

"From the first practice session we knew we were going to be good if something didn't happen," he said.

The closest Speed came to disaster Sunday was on lap 16 when he weaved untouched through a multi-car crash in turn three.

"Darlington's been this way for me, it seems, every time I've been here. I've always run well, sometimes a little better than others. But it seemed like the wreck I missed up there early in the race, every other race it got me."

"This time ... I slipped right through it, went on and won the race."

He wound up beating second-place Alan Kulwicki to the finish line by a solid 19 seconds.

Speed, who started his own team in 1986, drove an Oldsmobile Cutlass

Supreme to the victory, averaging 131.284 mph in the race slowed by eight caution flags, three in the first 31 laps.

He won $49,435 Sunday, giving him career earnings of $1,037,300 and making him NASCAR's 30th millionaire.

It was the first victory at this track by an Oldsmobile since Cale Yarborough won the 1978 Southern 500 and only the second since Buck Baker drove an Olds to Victory Circle here in 1953.

Speed finished second in the 1985 Daytona 500 and also was runner-up earlier this season at Rockingham, N.C.

It was also the third victory in five starts this season for Hoosier Tire, which is in its first year in competition with traditional Winston Cup tire supplier Goodyear.

Davey Allison wound up a distant third, the only other competitor on the lead lap at the end of the 367-lap, 500-mile race, an event that saw most of the favorites slowed by accidents or mechanical problems.

Bill Elliott was fourth, a lap down, followed by Sterling Marlin, who ran out of gas one lap from the end while running third.

Dale Earnhardt, who came into this event having won three in a row on the 1.366-mile Darlington oval, had tire problems and became involved in one of several accidents and finished far off the pace.

It looked like the race would be a very eventful one when trouble began almost immediately. A blown engine in Kyle Petty's car started a chain-reaction accident at the start of lap six.

With the cars still tightly bunched from the start, Benny Parsons got sideways in Petty's oil and, before the melee was finished, cars driven by Neil Bonnett, Richard Petty, Bobby Hillin Jr., Ernie Irvan, Kulwicki, Michael Waltrip and Greg Sacks became involved.

The worst damage was suffered by Richard Petty, who was unable to continue.

Moments after green-flag racing resumed, pole-winner Ken Schrader, apparently having handling problems, slammed hard into the third-turn wall, starting another multi-car crash.

Schrader, who set a track qualifying record of 162.657 mph and led the first 14 laps, had slipped back to fourth place when the accident took place. Terry Labonte, Brett Bodine, Darrell Waltrip, Harry Gant, Rick Wilson and Morgan Shepherd became entangled, with the cars of Schrader, Labonte, Shepherd and Wilson all badly damaged. Schrader, Labonte and Wilson all got back out much later in the race after their crews made extensive repairs in the garage area.

The third caution flag came out on lap 31 when Brad Teague spun in turn three. He didn't hit anything, but stalled the car on the track apron.

Most of the next 200 laps were run under the green flag, with only two caution periods for minor incidents.

But, on lap 237, Geoff Bodine hit the wall coming off turn four. Buddy Arrington, slowing quickly behind him, slammed into the wall and tangled with Earnhardt, whose car suffered only minor damage.

Arrington was taken to McLeod Regional Medical Center at nearby Florence, S.C., for precautionary X-rays of his ribs and right shoulder and observation. There were no other injuries reported in the race.

A crowd estimated at more than 40,000 turned out for the race run in sunny, warm weather.

Pirates Are Swept ...

"Against a very quality opponent, you can't afford to make mistakes and we made bunches of them today," Overton said.

True. The Pirates had four errors in the opening game, and Stevens was charged with two balks. The Pirates also hit into two double plays in the first game.

In the second game, ECU made only one error, but was unable to take advantage of the openings that the Dukes gave them.

"We've got to find a way to eliminate our mistakes. We seem to make them at just the wrong time, too," Overton said. "They have cost us in close games."

The Pirates, now 1-4 against CAA opponents, lost the first two to UNC-Wilmington in a pair of one-run decisions, and were in the game all the way Sunday with a chance to win either or both of them, according to Overton.

"In games like this, it's a matter of who hits the line drives and who makes the fewest mistakes and we didn't come out on top in either one of them."

"We're in a hole now (in the conference race), but I feel like the toughest stretch of our season is behind us now. We just need to fine a way to get back on track and build some momentum."

The Pirates never got any momentum going in the first game as Madison dominated play. The Pirates never got a runner past first base into scoring position during the game.

Madison, after a first inning treat, pushed ahead with two runs in the second inning. Dave Kennett led off with a single and was balked to second. Steve Schwartz walked and with one out, Kurt Johnson's grounder to second forced Schwartz. The relay to first for the potential double play, however, was off-target, allowing Johnson to score. Sammy Rose followed with a single to center, scoring Johnson.

Two more came over in the sixth. Schwartz reached on a fielder's choice that erased an earlier runner and Matt Lasher reached on a walk. Johnson singled in Schwartz and Rose got a hit to center to score Lasher to make it 4-0.

ECU centerfielder John Thomas made the play of the day on the next batter, making a diving catch of Jeff Garber's line drive to left center to prevent another run from scoring.

The final run came over in the seventh. With one away, both Kennett and Schwartz reached on errors on shortstop Tommy Boswell. Lasher then singled to center, driving in Kennett.

The Pirates just missed on a couple of home runs in the game. Calvin

Brown lined one to right with a runner on base in the first but the ball curved foul just before crossing the fence. Brown fanned on the next pitch. Later, in the second with a runner on base, Whit Whitley backed Rod Boddie to the fence where he pulled back a homer for a fly out to end the final Pirate threat of the game.

Rose led the Madison attack in the first game with three hits while Mark Brockell had two. John Adams had two to lead ECU.

All of the Madison scoring came in the fourth inning of the second game. With one away, Boddie doubled to right center and took third on a wild pitch. Mark Brockell walked but was forced at second on Dwight Rowe's grounder. Boddie scored on the play. Kennett followed with a hit to center, driving in Rowe, who had stolen second.

The only other threat the Dukes had came in the seventh when they loaded the bases on a walk, a hit batsman and a single, but failed to score.

East Carolina offered its first true threat of the afternoon in the fifth when Steve Godin and Adams hit back-to-back singles and were sacrificed up. But a pair of popups ended the threat.

East Carolina did the same in the sixth, with Jay McGraw and Brown getting hits, but again, the Pirates failed to moved them around.

Finally, in the seventh, the Pirates avoided the double shutout. Adams led off with a single and Tommy Yarborough reached on an error. Boswell's attempted sacrifice bunt forced Adams at third and David Ritchie's fly to center was dropped, leaving the bases loaded. Thomas grounded to short, forcing Ritchie at second, but the double play attempt failed and Yarborough scored the only ECU run of the day.

Thomas then stole second to put the go-ahead run at second base, but a ground out ended the last hope for the Pirates.

Kennett led Madison's hitting with two while Adams again had a pair for the Pirates.

East Carolina falls to 15-9 overall and will go outside the conference for its next action Wednesday. The Pirates play at home against St. Bonaventure in a 6 p.m. doubleheader.

The resume CAA action on Saturday when they host William & Mary in a pair of games at 1 p.m. and a single game Sunday, also at 1 p.m.

Grant Has Team Back In Semis

NEW YORK (AP) — The cover of the Colorado State basketball media guide features a picture of Coach Boyd Grant and the exclamation, "Boyd's Back!"

The same slogan could apply to the National Invitation Tournament.

Grant, who won the NIT with Fresno State in 1983, will pit his Rams against Ohio State in the opener of Tuesday night's semifinals as the tournament reaches its Madison Square Garden stage. The other semifinal has Boston College and Connecticut in a matchup of the Big East's seventh- and ninth-place teams.

"It's the biggest thing that ever happened to our school," Grant said of the 64-49 victory over Arkansas State last Friday that brought the Rams to New York. "It's bigger than New Year's Eve."

Grant, 54, left Fresno State after the 1986 season and sat out a year before returning to his alma mater this season.

The Rams, 21-12, finished in a tie for fifth in the Western Athletic Conference but have outlasted the four WAC teams that made the NCAA Tournament field. The same is true of Ohio State, sixth in the Big Ten, and Connecticut and Boston College, who remain alive while the conference's six NCAA invitees have gone home.

Boston College, 18-13, was the last team to qualify, getting 24 points from Dana Barros and 17 points and 17 rebounds from Steve Benton to beat Middle Tennessee 78-69 Saturday night. Connecticut beat Virginia Commonwealth 71-62 and Ohio State beat New Mexico 68-65 Friday night.

Grant is the outsider among the four coaches, all of whom have ties to Boston.

PBS Documentary Offers Look At Soviets Under Gorbachev

By BRIAN FRIEDMAN
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Lisa, a first-grader and the daughter of underground artists in the Soviet Union, says she's afraid of what she will be asked at school the next day.

The questions won't be about her lessons, but about the people who had visited her parents.

When asked what she will reply, she tells the visitors, who are documentary filmmakers, that she will not tell her teachers that Americans were at her house, only "daddy's friends." She shows them her stuffed cat and tells them the cat knows she shouldn't tell "family secrets" at school.

The documentary "Back in the U.S.S.R.," airing Tuesday on PBS' "Frontline," illustrates the pervasive fears of Soviet citizens and the double lives some of them lead despite the economic and social reforms the Kremlin has launched.

The hour-long show looks at how the lives of the Soviets have changed in the last 20 years through the eyes of an American journalist and his family who lived in Moscow in the 1960s and returned last year for three months.

Jerrold Schecter, the former Moscow correspondent for Time magazine, and his wife and grown children looked up old friends, artists, Jewish refuseniks, writers, political dissidents and others, and talked to them about Mikhail Gorbachev's reforms, known as "perestroika."

The people they spoke with are the intelligentsia: those who have been Gorbachev's staunchest supporters and thus the ones with the most to lose if his experiment fails.

Americans have been able to see many documentaries in recent years on the other superpower, including Ted Turner's current seven-hour "Portrait of the Soviet Union," depicting the U.S.S.R. in glowing, flattering terms.

How the "Frontline" documentary differs from the others is that its producers managed to conduct many interviews on camera without the presence of officials from Gostelradio, the state broadcasting committee, who have always accompanied Western filmmakers in the Soviet Union.

"We negotiated a deal with them," says "Frontline" producer Sherry Jones. "It was unusual at the very least. If their presence would likely interfere with the conversation, I had the right to ask that he not be there."

Thus, the camera crew was able to elicit thoughtful, candid answers in their interviews from subjects who otherwise might be intimidated by the presence of a member of Gostelradio.

Because members of the Schecter family speak Russian and know the country well, there's no need for state-supplied interpreters or guides who might stage events for the camera.

In another candid scene, also shot without government intervention, a middle-aged couple strolls in a park with the Schecters in the rain under umbrellas. The couple, who lived through the era of Nikita Khrushchev and saw his reforms blossom and fail, said they no longer want to stay in the Soviet Union, describing it as a land of "lies and double-thinking."

"All thoughtful people hope perestroika won't stop," the woman says. "They are afraid. People our age lived through the disappointment of Khrushchev's times. That was a time of bitter disappointment."

The crew also interviewed Jewish refuseniks who tell the painful tale of how their daughter has been allowed to emigrate while they have not, and of the anti-Semitism they have encountered.

Even when the subjects were part of the establishment, the "Frontline" crew seemed to get frank comments.

At the state-controlled newspaper Izvestia, Jones said officials initially tried to persuade her to photograph a formal editorial meeting. But she begged off, saying she didn't have enough lights.

PLAY GATHERING — Jean Stapleton, left, Debbie Allan, and playwright August Wilson pose at a party for Wilson's new play, "Joe Turner's Come and Gone," Sunday in New York. The play will reunite Wilson with Lloyd Richards, who also staged Wilson's play, "Fences." (AP Laserphoto)

Report Pits Good Against Evil

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The title of "Facing Evil," with Bill Moyers' evokes images of 90 minutes in front of the television in a dark depression contemplating the worst in human nature.

Not so. As Moyers says in his introduction to this surprisingly uplifting report, a discussion of the dark mystery of evil seems inevitably to lead to a celebration of the light.

Part of Moyers' "news of the mind" series for PBS, the former network journalist taped the special at a symposium called "Understanding Evil," sponsored by the University of Texas and featuring a distinguished group of speakers, including poet Maya Angelou, Holocaust scholar Raul Hilberg, choreographer and author Chung-Liang Al Huang, author Philip Paul Hallie, and Dr. Samuel D. Proctor, a Baptist preacher.

Often as eloquent as the featured speakers are the audience members, ranging from a Holocaust survivor still struggling to understand what happened to her, to a Vietnam veteran who says his experience "has made me think of evil in another way, coming out of Vietnam, turning around and seeing it wearing my own face."

The message from the program — and it's never forced — is that good and evil reside in the human spirit, and it takes an act of will to repress evil in favor of good.

Angelou, a striking television presence, tells of being raped when she was 7. The man who attacked her was known to her family. Soon after he was released from jail, he was found dead, apparently kicked to death. The child believed she had brought on the man's death by speaking his name. She didn't speak again for five years.

A horrible thing to happen to a child. But, she said, during those five years, she sought solace in reading, everything she could get her hands on, memorizing poems, stories and plays. When she finally spoke again, she had truly found her voice, thanks to words and wisdom of others.

Hallie still grapples with the concept of evil after a lifetime of study. A soldier in World War II, he says he is horrified to recall enjoying the violence of conflict. He was so moved by the story of courageous, peace-loving French villagers who disarmed the German invaders with love, he wrote a book about them and found himself transformed. But later, he realized, it was not the villagers who defeated Hitler, but those like himself who killed the Germans.

Hallie likens the struggle between good and evil to the experience of being in a hurricane — all around is fury, but there can still be blue sky above. To a quotation from George Santayana, "In the midst of battle there is room for love," Hallie adds his own thought — "We can push back and expand the blue, but we're in the eye of the hurricane, and don't ever forget it."

Hilberg is more pessimistic, having studied the Holocaust and realized that it took thousands of typical — and well-educated — citizens to produce it. His presentation prompts audience members to wonder whether they could be caught up in evil mob psychology, be it Nazism or a lynching, if they had been there.

It's a compelling 90 minutes, thanks to Moyers' insistence on presenting ideas, not neat conclusions. Stylistically Moyers ignores the accepted television tenet that talking heads are boring.

"Is this your report card?"

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY March 29

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Try to use the creative side of your nature to further your business interests. Try to be more kind and understanding to your mate.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): You have some excellent ideas on how to make improvements to your home, so get busy on them. Enjoy the company of your kin tonight.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Your ability to communicate your ideas to others will be unusually good now, so use it. This will be a tiring, but satisfying, day.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You will find you have some spare time today, so use it to catch up on all those little chores you have been putting off until "later."
LEO (July 22 to August 21): Get in touch with some old friends, and make plans to get together for an evening on the town. Have a cheerful and friendly reunion.
VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Set aside some time to have a talk with your mate and come to a better understanding. Be calm and tactful with this person.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): A good friend has some ideas which can make both of you more financially secure, but you must work together in order to do this.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): You can get the support you need from a superior for a financial venture you have in mind. Take care of personal matters this evening.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): A new contact can give you some information which will help you progress more quickly, so listen carefully to this person.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Talk over an important idea with a person who is very fond of you, and come to a fine agreement. Be sure to drive carefully tonight.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Get your work finished early today, then go out on the town for some fun with your mate. Stick to simple pleasures, and don't spend a lot.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Be more cooperative with others, and you can be more efficient and financially secure. Be sure to drive carefully, this evening.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

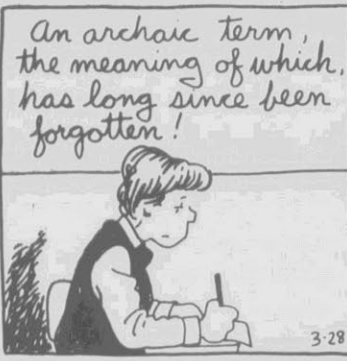

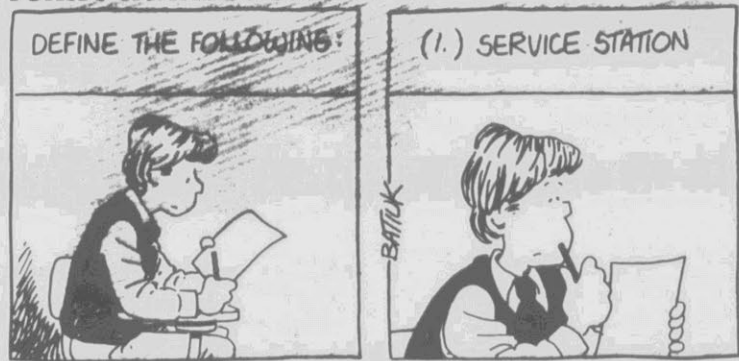

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠ 7632 ♥ KJ95 ♦ 10983 ♣ 5
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass
 3 ♠ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—In the modern style, partner is bidding a suit in which he needs help, and he wants you to consider that suit alone in deciding whether to bid game. A singleton is a perfect holding, so we would jump to four spades despite our minimum raise.
Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠ 7632 ♥ KQ5 ♦ KJ3 ♣ 852
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass
 3 ♠ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—You have a near-maximum raise to two spades, but if you are using help-suit game tries, you have the worst possible club holding for partner. Therefore, you must sign off with three spades. However, if partner's bid was strength-showing, we suggest you describe your red-suit high cards and balanced hand by bidding three no trump.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠ AKJ63 ♥ 9 ♦ 742 ♣ AKJ3
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—You should have good play for game if you don't have three fast losers in diamonds. Using help-suit game tries, you could now bid three diamonds to check on whether partner has values or shortness in that suit. If you don't use help-suit game tries, we would take a shot at four spades.
Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

 ♠ A6 ♥ KJ7632 ♦ 6 ♣ 9632
 The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 1 ♠ 2 ♠ Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—If partner had fair hearts, he might have made a takeout double. There is no reason to suppose that hearts will prove to be a better contract than diamonds, so pass and hope that your ace and king are enough for partner to scrape home.
Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠ 96 ♥ QJ10952 ♦ 6 ♣ K632
 The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 1 ♠ 2 ♦ Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—This time you have a reason to bid. Your hand might not produce a single trick for partner, but at a heart contract it should yield at least four tricks. In addition, any top cards partner holds in the side suits will increase your trick total. Bid two hearts.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠ Q5 ♥ 9542 ♦ A6 ♣ AK853
 The bidding has proceeded:
 East South West North
 2 ♥* Pass Pass 2 ♠
 Pass ?
 * weak
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Don't expect all that much from partner—a reasonable six-card spade suit would be enough for his balancing bid. However, that should be about all you need to make four spades, so go ahead and bid it without further ado.

Shultz Meeting With Two Linked To PLO Criticized

By JOCELYN NOVECK
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir today sharply criticized a meeting in Washington between Secretary of State George P. Shultz and two Arab-Americans linked to the PLO.

In another development, authorities reportedly arrested more Arabs overnight in the occupied territories to head off further violence.

Also today, PLO chief Yasser Arafat's chief spokesman was quoted as saying Shultz will have more meetings with PLO-affiliated officials, possibly when the secretary of state visits the Middle East beginning April 3.

On Sunday, soldiers shot and killed four more Palestinians in clashes in the West Bank, raising to 118 the number killed in 15 weeks of violent protests against Israel's occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip, according to U.N. figures. One Israeli soldier has been killed.

Shamir today told the Knesset, Israel's 120-member parliament: "We see as very grave the attempts of the Americans to initiate contacts with PLO members."

Shultz met in Washington on Saturday with Edward Said and Ibrahim Abu Lughod, both American citizens and members of the Palestine National Council, the parliament-in-exile of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

"Members of the board of the Palestine National Council are PLO members in every aspect," Shamir said. "The council is the supreme body of terror organizations. It decides the policy of terror groups."

Shamir's speech came a day after ministers of the center-left Labor Party told a stormy Cabinet meeting on Shultz's upcoming visit that Israel must adopt a U.S. peace plan if it hopes to end violence in the occupied lands.

Shamir leads the right-wing Likud bloc.

Israel has always refused to negotiate with the PLO and Israeli officials contend the Shultz meeting violated a longstanding U.S. commitment not to deal with the PLO.

Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger signed a pledge in 1975 that the United States would not talk to the PLO until the group recognized U.N. resolutions guaranteeing Israel's right to exist.

In comments published today in the Israeli Maariv newspaper, PLO spokesman Bassam Abu Sharif said the next meeting between Shultz and people linked to the PLO could take place in Jerusalem during Shultz's trip to the Middle East next week. Palestinians from the occupied territories refused to meet Shultz during his last trip in February under orders from Arafat.

But Abu Sharif said in a telephone interview to Israel that the PLO saw Shultz's meeting with Abu Lughod and Said as "an important step to the advancement of peace negotiations," Maariv reported.

During his visit to the Middle East, Shultz is expected to bring the text of a letter of invitation to a proposed international peace conference and ask Shamir for approval, an Israeli official today told The Associated Press on condition of anonymity. Shamir opposes such a peace conference.

The official said Shultz pledged to Shamir in the United States that he would not issue the letter of invitation without Israel's approval. But the official said Shultz could still change his position on that issue.

Israeli soldiers detained seven Arab youths in Bethlehem as they emerged from Palm Sunday mass at the Church of the Nativity, the traditional site of Jesus' birth, said Palestinian witnesses and a detainee who was released today.

Some youths were detained in the doorway of the church, first built in 330 A.D., by troops searching for youths who protested earlier in Manger Square, said the 14-year-old detainee, who would give only his first name, Tawfik.

"I was in the door of the Nativity church. They took me and put me in a jeep. They beat me with riot clubs and the butt of their guns," said Tawfik, who was released soon after midnight.

In a continued mass arrest campaign targeted at underground leaders of the Arab uprising in the occupied lands, Israeli soldiers have detained hundreds of Palestinians since the weekend, Israel radio said.

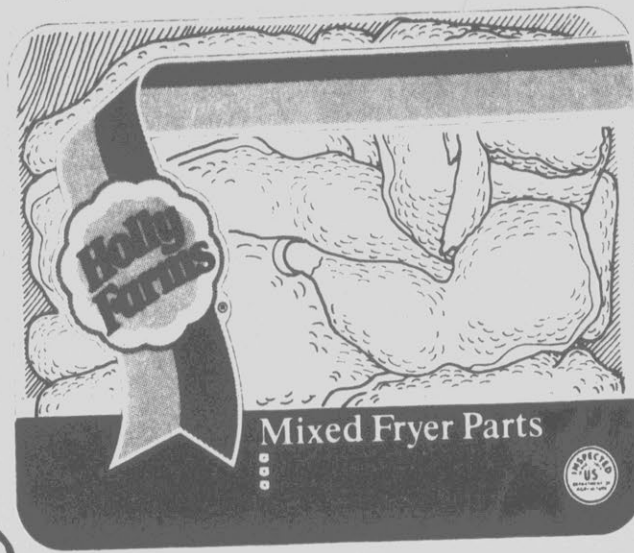

The army confirmed it was making large numbers of arrests to try to prevent violence on "Land Day" Thursday, when Arabs annually demonstrate against Israeli land confiscation and policies in the territories.

Twenty-five Arabs from the Jabaliya refugee camp in the occupied Gaza Strip, 10 from the West Bank village of Idna near Hebron, and 40 from the Deheishe refugee camp near Bethlehem were arrested overnight, according to the Palestine Press Service and other Arab reports.

Freed Rebel Will Rejoin The Contras

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — A Contra rebel freed after more than four years in prison said he will rejoin the Contras, who negotiated his release under an amnesty agreement with the leftist Sandinista government.

Roberto Amador was among 100 people who walked out of the Zona Franca jail on the outskirts of the capital Sunday as a result of the agreement, part of a government-rebel cease-fire accord signed last week in Sapoa.

"I will continue being a major in the FDN," Amador said, referring to the Contra military arm, the National Democratic Force, which will still be allowed to operate in designated cease-fire zones. Sandinista and Contra leaders were to meet in Sapoa again today to determine where those zones will be located.

When he was freed, Amador received a hug from his wife, Melba, who returned from Miami on Saturday with their two sons.

"It's a benediction from God that this happened," he said of his release. Amador, 43, was captured on Oct. 3, 1983, when Sandinista troops shot down the DC-3 supply plane he was piloting for the Contra rebels.

Two other captured crew members, Jaime Lau and Wilfredo Gutierrez, also were released Sunday. But a fourth, Miguel Angel Lopez, was not included on the list, said Amador, who also was a major in the now-disbanded National Guard of President Anastasio Somoza who was toppled in the 1979 Sandinista revolution.

Gonzalo Ramirez, president of the Nicaraguan Red Cross, said on Sunday that Contra negotiators had asked for Amador's freedom during last week's talks.

Isidora Zapata, a mother of two, also left the prison Sunday.

"I was condemned to 30 years in jail for counterrevolutionary activities," said Mrs. Zapata, the only woman among those released.

"I was jailed since April 16, 1982, and since then have seen my two children very little," she said. "My husband died the same year I went to jail. I don't know what he died of."
