Lumbee Slaying Linked To Domestic Spat

By JOHN FLESHER

Associated Press Writer

PEMBROKE, N.C. (AP) — One Lumbee Indian was in custody in the slaying of Robeson County judicial candidate Julian Pierce and another committed suicide, and the sheriff said today the motive was one suspect's girlfriend problems.

"I think it shows the people that nothing else is involved," Sheriff Hubert Stone told a news conference. "I think the people of Robeson County will understand that it's just another murder. I think the tension will drop now that we've made an arrest."

One Suspect Takes Own Life, Another's In Jail

"I can assure the world that there was no political involvement in the case," Stone said.

Stone said warrants were issued at 4 a.m. today charging Sandy Gordon Chavis, 24, and John Anderson Goins, 24, both of Pembroke, with murder. Chavis was in custody.

Pierce had been divorced since December 1983. He was shot in the chest, side and head with a shotgun early Saturday morning at his home after returning from a political rally.

Stone said officers went to arrest Goins, who had dated the daughter of Pierce's girlfriend, but the man eluded them about 3:30 a.m., went to his father's house and was later found dead in a closet. Stone said Goins died from a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head. His father was not at home.

Stone said the motive involved Shannon Bullard, 16, the daughter of Ruth Locklear — who was Pierce's girlfriend.

"They (the young couple) started having problems and they broke up," Stone said. "Two warrants were issued last week by the girlfriend's mother, charging Goins with trespassing. Goins felt Pierce had something to do with it. He got mad and he killed him."

Stone said Chavis signed a confession that Goins was the triggerman in Pierce's slaying. Stone said Goins had worked as a security guard in Raleigh.

Stone said Goins and Chavis came from "very outstanding families" and neither had prior criminal records, other than minor traffic violations.

Stone said the murder weapon was a 12-gauge, pump shotgun. He said the killers came to Pierce's home, broke a window pane in the back door and shot him once in the chest and again in the side as he turned. They entered the house and shot him a third time, Stone said.

Stone said Goins went to Mrs. Locklear's house after Pierce's death and talked with her.

"He didn't tell her he had killed Mr. Pierce," Stone said.

Stone was joined at the news conference by SBI Director Robert

ECU's Edwards, Three Former Cage Players Sentenced In Dorm Thefts

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

East Carolina University basketball player Theodore "Blue" Edwards, 22, of Walstonburg received a three-year suspended sentence and five years of supervised probation at a sentencing hearing in Pitt County Superior Court Monday for his participation in a series of dorm break-ins in December of 1986.

Three former ECU players also were sentenced for their participation in the five break-ins in Scott Residence Hall in which more than $5,700 worth of stereos, cameras, tapes, cash and other items were taken.

Edwards was initially charged with three counts of breaking and entering, but last fall he pleaded no contest to one count of receiving stolen property as part of a plea bargain. In a plea of no contest, the defendant does not admit guilt but does agree not to contest the charges. The university suspended Edwards from the basketball squad for one year and his punishment also included 50 hours of community service work with handicapped children.

Edwards' attorney, Allen Brown, presented Judge David Reid Jr. letters written by Edwards' employer at the Crow's Nest, an ECU administrators and the Louisburg Junior College basketball coach in support of Edwards' character.

Brown told the court the letters indicate Edwards is "a quiet, easy-going, peaceful type of guy." Edwards played high school basketball at Greene Central and was a second-team All-American during the 1985-86 season at Louisburg.

Brown called ECU head basketball coach Mike Steele to testify. Steele said Edwards was allowed to keep his athletic scholarship this year and he practiced with the team. "He's been good to work with," said Steele. "He's been very good with our young kids. He's not missed a practice."

Edwards is on schedule to graduate next year and he will also be in his final year of eligibility, said Steele. "He's done very well academically," Steele said on the stand. "He's back on track in getting his degree." Edwards is the only one of the four defendants enrolled in ECU this year.

Reid ordered Howard Brown, 23, of Brooklyn, N.Y., to serve 90 days in jail and remain on supervised probation for five years. Reid said Brown, who played high school basketball at Raleigh Millbrook, received a dif-

Expo '88 Declared 'Success'

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

As clean-up efforts at the New Greenville Warehouse were being completed Monday, officials of Expo '88 said the three-day event was an overwhelming success.

Sponsored by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, the Expo offered community businesses the opportunity to show off their products or services.

"I thought this year's show was very successful," Mark Garner, Expo '88 co-chairman, said.

According to Garner, approximately 22,500 people visited the trade show from the opening of its doors Thursday to its closing Saturday at 6 p.m.

Spread throughout the warehouse were hundreds of booths, representing area businesses ranging in diversity from health clubs to lawn and garden centers. Exhibitors had the opportunity to distribute product literature to patrons along with an occasional free sample or gift.

Garner said the large diversity of the exhibitors pleased many of the visitors.

"The success of the show is a tribute to the exhibitors and the time and effort they put into their booths. The people really had something to see this year," he said.

Boundary Concept Approved

County Board Schedules Architects' Interviews

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners agreed Monday to interview five architects — starting next week — in its hunt for a firm to do a master plan for county facilities.

The board, in a workshop session, also gave its approval to a concept to create a planning zone boundary between the city of Greenville and the town of Winterville.

The board, which has been searching for ways to relieve overcrowded conditions at the jail and provide additional space for offices in downtown Greenville, earlier this month set a deadline of July 1 for the completion of a county facilities master plan. It also set a deadline of Sept. 1 to contract with an architect "experienced in jail design and construction" to draw plans for a new jail facility.

County Manager Kramer Jackson told commissioners Monday that 14 different firms were invited to submit proposals. He said nine were received by the March 24 deadline.

Commissioners elected to interview five of the firms in conjunction with the master plan project: J.N. Pease Associates of Charlotte, which has done five master plans and three jails in North Carolina; Grier, Frapp & Orkan of Charlotte, which has done four master plans and 18 prisons and four jails — over 10,000 cells — in the state; Black & Veatch of Raleigh, with four master plans and one prison in North Carolina; Wm. Top Meese Aides Quit Their Posts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The No. 2 official in the Justice Department and the head of the department's criminal division abruptly resigned today amid continuing legal problems for their boss, Attorney General Edwin Meese III.

Deputy Attorney General Arnold Burns and Assistant Attorney General William Weld announced in letters to President Reagan that they were stepping down. Both have served since Oct. 17, 1986.

Two assistants to Burns — Randy Levine and Boykin Rose — and two assistants to Weld — Mark Robinson and Jane Serene — also resigned.

The officials provided no explanation for their sudden actions, but a source, who spoke on condition of anonymity but was familiar with the situation, said Meese's continuing legal problems were "definitely a factor" in the resignations.

Meese has been under criminal investigation for nearly a year.

Neither Burns nor Weld mentioned Meese's legal problems in their resignation letters.

The resignations, combined with the departure of Associate Attorney General Stephen S. Trott to become a federal judge, leave a leadership vacuum of major proportions in the Justice Department.

Their resignations were unexpected and were disclosed to other department officials at this morning's Justice Department staff meeting, said a department source,

Child Abuse Cases Increase

By GREG LAUDICK

Parents abusing children. Such reports are increasing nationwide, and Pitt County is no exception.

According to a Pitt County social work supervisor, the number of referrals of child abuse and neglect in Pitt County has increased nearly 50 percent in 1988 over the same period last year.

Charlene Gill, supervisor of the Child Welfare Unit of the Pitt County Department of Social Services, said 175 case referrals have come to the department so far in 1988 compared to 119 referrals received in a similar time period in 1987.

Contributing to the rise in referrals, according to Ms. Gill, is the public's increasing knowledge of the gravity of the child abuse problem and the subsequent lack of reluctance about reporting such incidents.

She also said school and medical officials are better trained to identify and report suspected abuse cases as they arise.

But Ms. Gill also reported, at Monday's Pitt County Social Service meeting, that another factor in the increase is a perceived lack of economic opportunities and the abuse of drugs in certain families. She said

Day Care Funds Critically Short

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County's Department of Social Services is experiencing a $20,000 shortfall in its budget and may have to curtail its tax-funded day care programs for the month of May, Director Edward L. Garrison said Monday.

Garrison told board members that funding for day care in Pitt County has reached a crisis situation.

"The necessity to find funds to run the program for the remainder of the fiscal year has created a situation where the department might have to either reduce payment to the centers or to terminate day care payments until the next fiscal allocation for the month of May," he said.

"These are very drastic alternatives," Garrison said. "Our hope is we can locate the money to continue the program at its current level."

Garrison attributed this fiscal year's $20,000 shortfall to two reasons: cuts in overall day care funding and rising rates at day care centers.

Due to a complicated staggered payment process by which the state reimburses the county and by which the county reimburses the day care centers, the shortage only affects day care payments in May. Payments made to day care centers in June will be covered with the onset of the new fiscal year beginning July 1.

After discussion, the board unanimously instructed the director to attempt to procure additional funds from the state Department of Human Resources, and to discuss with the Pitt County Board of Commissioners the possibility of a budget transfer to carry the program through the financial difficulty.

"Pitt County is not the only county facing a shortfall. Many counties are experiencing difficulty in meeting day care program needs with their current allocations," he said.

In other matters the board unanimously approved continuing the current distribution levels of food in the Commodities Distribution Program in light of expected shortages.

By September, the program is expected to be out of rice, cheese and honey, with only flour, corn meal and butter expected to be available for distribution.

Board members agreed that the public has responded responsibly to the program and it would be a disservice to cut back on distribution levels.

In other business, Garrison reported the first installment of a $13,000 emergency food and shelter grant has been received. Garrison said $6,419 has been received from the federal government with the ad-

B&E Arrests Made

Greenville police arrested three Maryland men on charges of breaking and entering a motor vehicle early today.

Officer K.M. Smeltzer said Bernard Gordon Helms, 20 of Clinton, Md., Jonas Adam Jacobson, 21, of Columbia, Md., and Paul Charles Snyder, 20, of Oron Hill, Md., were arrested about 2:30 a.m. in connection with an incident at Fifth and Summit streets that was reported about 2:05 a.m.

Top Award Winner

A North Carolina high school student is the winner of the $10,000 first-place award in the Duracell National Scholarship Competition.

Award winner Gary Fuller of Louisburg is a senior at the North Carolina School of Science and Mathematics, Durham.

Fuller's winning project is a digital frequency meter which measures the velocity or frequency of an object or sound to within one six-millionth of a second, yielding lab-quality data.

Other winners in second through sixth place in the competition are high school seniors from Michigan, Oklahoma, California, Vermont and Ohio.

Robinson Activities

The Fantasy Signing Club of East Carolina University performed at W.H. Robinson Elementary School in Winterville recently as part of the celebration for "Music in our Schools" month. The children learned to sing "Joy to the World" and performed it with the Fantasy group.

ECU School of Medicine students visited the first and second grades at Robinson and gave a presentation on the usage of medical instruments.

Kindergarten Triad Enrichment Program students visited River Park North recently to culminate their study on birds.

Deidre Barefoot, elementary education major at ECU, is student teaching in Teresa McLawhorn's first-grade class and has discussed nutrition. As part of the study, Jorja Murray of the Pitt County Health Department visited the class and presented "The Snacking Mouse," a filmstrip on nutrition.

Barefoot, who also presented a study on weather, organized a visit from Ben Pringle of WTN-TV. Pringle discussed various weather conditions including rain and tornadoes.

Nine Thefts Investigated

Investigators said nine thefts, including $3,000 worth of equipment from a Clarke Street business, were reported to Greenville police Monday.

Officer S.C. Locke said the equipment was taken from Hatteras Hammocks on Clark Street in an incident reported at 2:28 p.m., while Officer C.S. Candler said an undetermined number of items were taken from the Fast Fare at the intersection of Evans Street and Arlington Boulevard in a break-in reported at 4:57 a.m.

Officer S.A. Bass said $170 in cash was taken from The Plaza mail security office in a break-in reported at 6:22 a.m., while Officer R.C. Stroud said a license plate was taken from a car parked at Darryl's Restaurant on East 10th Street in an incident reported at 11:46 a.m.

Officer M.R. Benton said a bicycle was taken from 66 Country Club Drive in an incident reported at 2:28 p.m., while Officer J.W. Isenhour said $500 in travelers checks were taken from a coat at The Rafter's night club in downtown Greenville in an incident reported at 3:24 p.m. and $4.32 cents was taken from the Trade Station on North Greene Street in a flim-flam incident reported at 4:28 p.m.

Officer R.J. Brewington said a 1979 model Ford Thunderbird was taken from a lot at the Little Peoples Day Care Center at 1310 E. 10th St. in an incident reported at 4:29 p.m., while Officer J.K. McCarthy said a $100 drill and a $39 reciprocating saw were taken from a Lyndale Towne construction site on Red Banks Road in an incident reported at 4:42 p.m.

The class also visited the WNCT-TV weather station.

Dr. Linda Rikard, ECU physical education instructor and Pam Conleton, W.H. Robinson physical education teacher, have been involved in a cooperative teaching effort for two weeks involving both school programs.

Show-Sale Exhibitor

Tim Allen Jr., 15, of Winterville is among the exhibitors at the Coastal Plain Junior Livestock Show and Sale under way today in Kinston.

Allen, who will show a group of pigs at the show, had the reserve champion market hog at last year's show. He has been showing pigs for seven years.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Tim Allen of Winterville, he attends D.H. Conley High School.

Jenkins Supports Hardison's Race

Related story on A-6

Dr. Leo Jenkins, chancellor emeritus of East Carolina University, announced this morning that he was endorsing Sen. Harold Hardison for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor.

Hardison and Dr. Jenkins appeared together at a news conference at the Brody Medical Sciences building of the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

Dr. Jenkins said he sees Hardison's record as a solid one and considers him one of the strongest supporters of university status for ECU and for the establishment of the ECU medical school. He also acknowledged the Lenoir County resident's record on support for education, economic development and programs for farmers.

Hardison said he is basing his campaign largely on his belief that the state needs to be a strong factor in economic development for local communities. He said the state can do better helping local government with water and sewer projects, job development and educational opportunities.

He said he has called upon the governor to increase the state's reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons who killed Lumbee Indian leader Julian Pierce, who was running for Superior Court judge in Robeson County, Saturday from $5,000 to $10,000. He said he was putting up $1,000 of his own money to add to this reward fund and challenged other public officials to do the same.

Asked about the Hardison Amendment which has been severely criticized in recent weeks by environmentalist groups, he said he stands behind the intent of the amendment. It basically said, he contended, that no state water and air quality regulation can be more restrictive than a corresponding federal one, unless it is enacted by the General Assembly. He said he believes this measure keeps the people who make environmental rules in this state accountable by putting the responsibility on elected officials.

He said he believes he is the frontrunner in the Democratic lieutenant governor's race and does not believe that a runoff will be necessary.

Hardison, a lifelong resident of the Deep Run community, has been a state senator since 1972, having previously served one term in the N.C. House of Representatives.

PCC Foundation Plans Fund Drive

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt Community College Foundation continued plans to "raise money, exceed goal and celebrate success" Monday night as it outlined steps in for what will become an annual fund drive.

The first step in the drive will be taken Thursday as several board members visit those "related to the college in one way or another," said PCC President Charles Russell.

Led by Booger Scales, Russell and board members Bob Griffin, A.B. Whitley, Bill Grant and Reynolds May will begin their trek about 10 a.m.

With the idea that giving begins at home, Scales petitioned foundation members and PCC Board of Trustees members to donate to the foundation during its first meeting in February. Russell, who serves as secretary-treasurer of the foundation, told members Monday that $6,600 had been collected from foundation members and trustees. There are pledges of an additional $2,500, he said. That brings the foundation's total to $19,434, he said.

The board also divided the Pitt County community into sectors and assigned a member of the board as a chairman for each sector. The internal community of the college — foundation members, PCC trustees, faculty and staff and students — will be organized by Russell; Jim Young, director of institutional development at the college, and other members of the PCC staff. A fund-raising drive targeting the faculty and staff is scheduled for April 14-29.

The external community was divided into industrial, financial (including banks, savings and loans and brokers), business, medical, education and public agencies and the general population, especially PCC alumni. Members of the foundation board will chair each of these sectors.

Each chairman is to work with Young, who also serves as executive director of the foundation, to create a strategy for each sector. Each approach will be presented to the board for approval.

The board also established and categorized levels for its donors. Those donating more than $2,500 will be benefactors; $1,000-$2,499, President's Circle; $500-$999, patron; $250-$499, donor; $100-$249, subscriber, and $1-$99, friend of the college. Young said an incentive system will be established to encourage donors.

The board also created a list of possible new members. "It's to our advantage to expand the board," said Chairman John McConney. "I think we need to look at a representative cross-section of the community."

In listing names of possible members, the board concentrated on suggesting women, blacks and representatives from the Ayden and Grifton areas. The foundation has 12 members and may expand to 30 members.

Abuse

these factors create additional tensions within families which can enhance the probabilities of child abuse and neglect.

"Drug abuse is certainly a problem. We frequently see drug abuse including the abuse of alcohol as a problem within the family," she said.

The 47.06 percent increase in referrals within the county is also creating problems for the Department of Social Services. Ms. Gill said the three intake workers currently on staff are having difficulty in handling the dramatic upswing of child abuse reports.

"Intake workers are receiving referrals at the rate of about 15 new referrals per month. This is double what they can reasonably handle and meet the suggested 30-day time frame for completing investigations," she said.

Social Services Director Edward L. Garrison said that, despite the significant increase in reports, the department has a legal responsibility to conduct a thorough investigation of every case within 24 hours of the time it was reported.

Garrison said the need for additional child abuse intake workers will likely be a major consideration in upcoming budget discussions. A final budget proposal is to be submitted to the County Commissioners on May 6.

In the meantime, Garrison said other social workers within the department are in the process of being cross-trained to handle child abuse cases so that every child abuse case referral can be properly investigated.

"Child abuse is one of the monumental problems of our time and a very volatile topic nationwide," Garrison said.

"Estimates indicate that for every case which is reported, there might be seven or eight cases occurring which go unreported," he added.

Sentences Handed Out In Dorm Thefts

ferent sentence because he was also involved in a dorm larceny in May of 1987.

Brown pleaded guilty last November to two counts of breaking and entering. Investigators were never able to interview Brown about the case because he returned home to New York after the 1987 spring semester, according to ECU Public Safety Officer Lt. John Burrus. Steele had suspended Brown from the basketball team late in the 1986-87 season for disciplinary reasons.

Brown is now enrolled at Missouri Valley College. He told the court he has some of the stolen items, including a turntable, binoculars and a stereo receiver, at his home in Missouri. Reid ordered Brown to deliver the items to his probation officer by the end of the business day Friday.

Brown's jail term will begin the first Monday after his last day of class this semester at Missouri Valley.

John Williams, 20, of Atlantic City,

N.J., received a four-year suspended sentence, five years of supervised probation and 72 hours of community service.

Williams' attorney, Les Robinson, said Williams also had some of the stolen items at his home in New Jersey, but after Reid delivered the sentence Williams said he had some items with him in Greenville and would relinquish them to his probation officer. Williams pleaded guilty last November to two counts of breaking and entering.

Robinson told the court Williams is now working at the Tropicana Resort in Atlantic City and he may enroll in Rutgers University in the fall to play basketball.

Tracy King, 20, of Hampton, Va., received a three-year suspended sentence, five years' probation and 72 hours of community service. King's attorney, Hugh Cox, pointed out to the court that King had no prior criminal record, he was a "passive participant," he was just 19 at the time of the break-ins and he wants to enroll at another school.

King pleaded no contest to two counts of receiving stolen property as part of a plea bargain.

Steele said last September Williams and King were dropped from the squad for "academic reasons" and they would not return to school or rejoin the basketball squad.

Assistant District Attorney Nancy Aycock said the university suspended Edwards from the basketball squad for one year, but Williams and King were suspended from school.

In addition to the probation, Reid also ordered each defendant to make restitution based upon the value of the items taken in the particular break-ins in which they were involved. Brown and Williams were involved in all five incidents, King was involved in four and Edwards was involved in two, according to Burrus.

There was no evidence King or Edwards broke into the rooms, said Burrus, but they received items and helped carry them to other rooms.

Mrs. Aycock asked Reid to consider active jail time for the four, citing the fact that Brown and Williams still had not returned some of the stolen items more than a year after the break-ins.

"They thought they had gotten away with it," said Mrs. Aycock. "They're thieves, they're vandals and they stole from their friends."

"They had no need to do anything but study hard and do their best in athletics," District Attorney Thomas Haigwood said to the court. "They don't deserve the confidence that the citizens of the state or the Pirate Club gave them."

Reid agreed that the four had benefits other students did not have, but he said, "If they don't deserve an opportunity for probation, who would?"

Reid also said the four "have had their lives virtually wrecked and they're branded as felons."

Reid also ordered the defendants to pay the cost of dormitory damages to ECU, court costs and reasonable attorney fees.

Freeman Associates of High Point, with two plans and one jail, and Hellmuth, Obata & Kassabaum of Washington, D.C., which has associated with Dudley Shoe Ellinwood & Associates of Greenville for the project. Jackson said the Washington firm is one of the largest designers of jail facilities in the world, with one plan and one prison (Central Prison in Raleigh) to its credit.

The board asked Jackson to schedule as many of the firms as possible for interviews Monday, and said others from the list — among them Williams & Associates of Matthews, which has designed 24 jails in the state, but done no master plans — might be considered for the jail design phase.

Pitt's present jail, designed to house 83 prisoners, was built in 1965.

Jackson has estimated that a new 160-cell jail could cost in the neighborhood of $4.8 million — $30,000 a cell — and said the cost of a jail and law enforcement center could cost about $6 million.

In approving the concept of a planning boundary between Greenville and Winterville, commissioners — expressing concern that private water corporations serving customers in unincorporated areas of the county should be protected — said any final proposal should include a service area boundary agreement between Greenville and the Eastern Pines Water Corp.

Last week the board heard Malcolm Green, general manager of the Greenville Utilities Commission, outline a boundary proposal already approved by the city of Greenville, the town of Winterville and the Pitt County Planning Board.

Green said that, under the concept, White Road (Secondary Road 1708), would serve as the planning boundary from N.C. 11 to the Tar Road (SR 1700), with Greenville serving the area to the north and Winterville serving the area to the south.

The boundary would then follow south along Tar Road (with Winterville having all rights for planning and providing utility service to areas west of the boundary) to a creek flowing into Fork Swamp, then south along Fork Swamp to a point about 1,000 feet south of the Worthington Road (SR 1711).

Greenville's southern planning boundary would then continue east, paralleling Worthington Road, to a point east of County Home Road (SR 1725). The boundary would then turn north, paralleling County Home Road up to 2,000 feet east, to N.C. 43.

The proposed extraterritorial jurisdiction limit for Worthington, Green said, represents "the maximum reach of GUC sewer" service in the area.

But commissioners delayed action on the proposal last week, saying they wanted input from representatives of the Eastern Pines and Bell Arthur water corporations before endorsing the concept.

Glenn Hardee, president and manager of Eastern Pines' water corporation — saying, "I come to you with a situation that has been brewing" since the water corporation was founded in 1966 — told commissioners Monday that the non-profit water supplier is threatened by the city of Greenville moving into areas it now serves to the east of the city.

"One third" of Eastern Pines' 3,500 customers, Hardee said, lie within Greenville's one-mile extraterritorial jurisdiction. And if the areas are annexed by the city the corporation would be hard pressed to pay off the debt on the system, he said.

"How can it be solved?" Hardee asked. "Give us some protection. We want some protection up there."

"I'd like to see them not cross (SR) 1726." But Hardee conceded, "we can negotiate it. I think there's got to be some line drawn."

"I can see in the next five to 10 years the area will be consumed by Greenville. We've got to protect our investment."

Glenn Strickland, who heads the Bell Arthur Water Corp., told commissioners that the Bell Arthur non-profit had similar problems to the west of Greenville. But Strickland said "we worked out an agreement," and told the board that "Greenville Utilities has worked very well with us."

Strickland said the Bell Arthur Water Corporation is presently "doing a feasibility study" with the idea of providing water service "for the rest of the county" south of N.C. 43 and west of N.C. 11 that is not served by municipal systems. "Our only objective," he said, "is to provide as many people as we can with good water."

Winterville planner Alan Lilley, who attended Monday's meeting, told commissioners "we decided to support the idea because of the protection it offers us. At the rate Greenville is growing," he said, "we stand to lose a lot of area," if some boundary is not established.

In other business Monday the board heard Dr. Tim Monroe, the county's health director, say space at the health department is at a premium, with 80 employees housed in a building with 6,300 square feet of usable office space.

"We need 8,000 square feet of office space ... based on the number of employees," Monroe said, and "that doesn't include hallways, mechanical space."

Monroe then proposed that the board consider adding "4,000 square feet of space," which he said would not include growth for the future. "In the next five to 10 years," Monroe predicted, an additional 4,000 square feet of space will be needed.

Following Monroe's report, the board asked Jackson, the county manager, and County Engineer Phil Dickerson, to come up with a proposal for an addition to the building.

speaking on condition of anonymity.

Burns' letter to Reagan said that "under your leadership, I believe we have made important contributions to the administration of justice. ... Unfortunately, I have regretfully concluded that I must return to private life at this time."

Weld, a former U.S. attorney in Boston who has prosecuted a number of important public corruption and white-collar crime cases, told Reagan that "I am grateful to have been charged with the responsibility of seeing that justice be done without fear or favor."

Another department source, also speaking on condition of anonymity, said that neither Burns nor Weld acted in the belief that Meese is about to be indicted.

However, said the source, both men are concerned because the Justice Department's image continues to be damaged due to the ongoing criminal investigation of Meese, the nation's top law enforcement officer. Terry Eastland, a Justice Department spokesman, pointed out that it is not unusual for political appointees to leave government in the last year of an administration.

Eastland said that Burns, Weld and Trott, who was confirmed as a judge last week, were sworn into their jobs in 1986 and that "this is 1988; this happens to be a year when people are leaving and they all happen to be leaving at the same time."

A White House official, who spoke on condition he not be identified, confirmed that Reagan had received the letters, but that he had not yet composed a response.

The official said there was "no reason given" in the letters for the resignations.

"The president accepts the resignations with regret and good wishes for the future," the official said. "They served with distinction."

Meese has been under investigation for 11 months. Independent counsel James McKay launched the probe last May 11 to look into Meese's involvement with the scandal-plagued Wedtech Corp. The investigation has expanded to include his involvement in a $1 billion Iraqi pipeline project.

Meese got involved in both Wedtech and the pipeline through his longtime friend, E. Robert Wallach.

Expo

Expo '88 Co-Chairman Wayne Dempsey agreed with Garner on the show's outcome.

"It was an excellent show, a really tremendous success," he said.

Dempsey said that not only the visitors were happy with the production, but the exhibitors as well.

"The Expo generated a lot of activity for them, of course. That's one of the purposes of it," he commented.

1988 was the fourth year for the Expo and officials say there were few problems arising.

"Things ran very smoothly," Garner said. "The first three years were a learning process. This year we had basically no problems."

Garner said the amount of money brought in by Expo '88 will not be known for at least several months until after the expenses are tallied.

Sentence Changed

GREENSBORO (AP) — Guilford District Court Judge William A. Vaden reduced an active prison sentence imposed by another judge in a trespassing case but has agreed to reinstate the original sentence after the district attorney's office complained.

Vaden said Monday he cut the six-month sentence to 10 days because he thought the prosecutor did not oppose the motion by the defendant's lawyer, John B. "Jack" Hatfield Jr.

Watkins was convicted of trespassing at Smith's Ranch Motel in Greensboro.

Competitive Wages Attract Teachers

The question of improving the minority employment in Pitt County's schools is not a black and white issue.

Neither is it an issue that should be addressed merely with beefed-up recruiting efforts designed to put black and male faces in the county's classrooms quickly.

Instead, it is an issue of improving salaries, supplements, bonuses and working conditions for all teachers in the county so that Pitt can attract its lion's share of top-notch teachers — black or white.

Only by setting the highest standards for educators and concurrently providing competitive across-the-board financial incentives can the county expect its minority hiring to increase permanently. Even then, progress may be slow, but the effects on minority hiring will likely yield long-term benefits rather than a quick influx that looks good statistically.

For this reason, as the Pitt County Board of Education ponders changes to its fledgling affirmative action program, members should approach the issue by addressing the larger problem of obtaining a plentiful supply of the best teachers.

Only by endorsing high standards, a strong recruitment program and cross-the-board supplement improvements can the county expect to strengthen its minority muscle.

It is understandable for the board to be frustrated with the progress of the still-new affirmative action program. Increases that exceed the state average don't sound like much when the amount is only a fraction of a percent. It is equally appropriate for the board to want to hasten the improvement process.

But the board should be careful not to let reports and data mislead it into thinking the program isn't working or that the problem of luring good teachers is limited to blacks and males.

It is, rather, a dilemma that requires uniform commitment and long-range thought. What draws good teachers, draws good teachers - be they black, male, Indian or otherwise.

Having a competitive employment package will secure the county the best, not just in black and white, but in all colors. Only then can the minority presence in the schools improve substantially and permanently.

Trade Influence Strong Resource

North Carolina seems to be doing very well, thank you, in world trade.

And world trade may be where economic growth is in the decades ahead.

Wayne Cooper, president of the North Carolina World Trade Association, told representatives of the organization in Greenville last week that for every dollar in goods imported last year 94 cents in goods was exported. Nationally only 54 cents in goods were exported for each dollar of imports.

Cooper also reported that for the last quarter of 1987 and the first month of 1988, the state had a positive trade balance. Cooper, whose company exports grain silos, believes North Carolina companies should look to foreign markets for increased business.

There can be little doubt that aggressive international commerce is going to open the growth areas of the future. Major corporations are becoming international in ownership and sales and national boundaries may mean little in marketing strategies.

North Carolina, as an exporter of tobacco and other products, has long been an important player in the world markets. Now the state is doing better than the rest of the nation in exporting goods and it should have the expertise to be at the forefront of the expanding international market.

The state's manufacturers and producers must first be aware of the huge market which awaits them. Then sales strategies which will take advantage of the situation can be outlined.

All that can lead to unprecedented prosperity for North Carolina. Such an approach will continue to strengthen the position the state holds in world trade. In a global economy, that is the most beneficial course for a state whose economy offers diverse products that are in demand as exports.

North Carolina should capitalize on its influence and keep its strategy current. That is important if the state is to maintain its export strength.

Will 'Outside' PLO Moderates Prevail?

AMMAN, Jordan — The killing of an Israeli soldier in Bethlehem last Sunday suggests that the moderating influence of the Palestine Liberation Organization "outside" on the PLO "inside" the occupied territories is beginning to slip.

The two PLOs are linked, as indicated by the heading on the communiqués issued by "The Unified Command of the National Uprising — the PLO." Significantly, the outside suggested that the PLO should not be named lest this reduce the popularity of the resistance with the PLO's critics abroad, especially in the United States. But the inside insisted on clearly stating its affiliation to the mother organization.

The unified command consists of five groups, four of which are components of the PLO — Fatah, PLO leader Yasser Arafat's own group; the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, led by George Habash; the Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, headed by Nayef Hawatmeh, and the Communists. The fifth element is the Islamic groupings, which are more important in the Gaza strip than in the West Bank.

The loyalty or deference of the inside is the reward for the restraint and tact shown by the outside toward the resistance. It began in January with a meeting in Baghdad of the 90-member PLO Central Council. The fact that the PLO officially considered the intifada — the uprising — only a month after it began is testimony that it was spontaneous and not engineered from the outside. The council was supposed to consider the issue of establishing a Palestinian government-in-exile, but because of events in the occupied territories that question was set aside for the time being and, instead, the council took four decisions about the resistance.

The first was an expression of a new mood within the council, usually the scene of petty factional bickering. Confronted by the fearlessness and endurance already displayed in the territories, the council was suitably shamefaced because the resistance in a month had achieved more in terms of publicity, sympathy and support than the PLO had won in 20 years. The council was particularly impressed that the resistance had shown strength in two areas where the PLO is usually weakest: unity and secrecy. So an unusually united council decided that it would not even try to issue orders or directives to the resistance, but only suggestions and advice. In all cases the final policy decision would be left to the interior leadership that best knew the realities of the situation.

This restraint was perhaps no more than a realistic acknowledgement that since the intifada started on its own, the inside would not accept any exterior orders with which it did not agree.

Having decided on its general approach, the council suggested to the resistance that it should not, for some time, escalate its action to the next stage — armed struggle. Weapons are available; both sides of the PLO know that and Lt. Gen. Dan Shomron, the Israeli chief of staff, admitted it last Sunday: "There are large quantities of arms in the West Bank and in Gaza." This is why the PLO outside almost brought itself to condemn the attack two weeks ago by an outside commando on an Israeli bus in southern Israel, which killed three Israeli civilians. Yet in the occupied territories there was some open criticism of the outside PLO for its excessive moderation. But the PLO insists that the resistance should not yet turn to the use of arms. There are two reasons for this decision: the publicity advantage of being seen to be the underdog and Israel's overwhelming superiority in firepower.

The resistance is not wholly convinced by these arguments, especially the second one. The advocates of armed struggle, who are becoming more numerous as the repression becomes more severe, say that the people of the West Bank and Gaza are now so aroused and angry that not even unlimited force would frighten them or break their spirit. But looking ahead realistically, a resistance escalation to armed struggle seems inevitable. The killing in Bethlehem was the first small step in that direction.

The other decisions of the Central Council concerned planning for the second, and perhaps the third, round of the uprising, which could involve armed action and the provision of financial help.

Jackson Showing Blacks How To Win

"What does Jesse Jackson want?" Dan Rather asked "60 Minutes" correspondent Ed Bradley. "He wants to be president," Bradley responded matter-of-factly.

Some people doubt the Rev. Jesse L. Jackson's sincerity and question his motives for pursuing the presidency. They also seem bothered by his self-confidence and gall. After all, he is a black man and we are told that his chances of receiving the Democratic nomination are non-existent. This attitude is disturbing but not unexpected.

Black Americans are rarely accepted as serious contenders for positions of power and authority, mainly because their communities are viewed and portrayed as disorganized and inconsequential. For instance, there are white middle-class values vs. black underclass culture. The "haves" inhabit white middle-class suburbs and the "have-nots" wallow in black crime-infested ghettos.

Black Americans are carefully presented to the public as disenfranchised and powerless — locked out of mainstream life.

But then Jackson returned to the political arena, more powerful, more organized, and able to weave together a broad base of support. He has amassed more than 500 delegates, second only to Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis. Jackson has performed well in primaries and caucuses from Maine to Idaho. Somebody is voting for the man; yet, he is not treated as a worthy opponent.

We are told that the country is not ready for a black president. Is it racism? Is it the belief that black people are inherently inferior and, therefore, incapable of running the country? Or are Americans unwilling to recognize black aspirations that may collide with the aspirations of those in the majority?

I believe there is a fear that black Americans are rising above their intended station. Jackson symbolizes their aspirations. To thwart black Americans' aspirations to power, journalists and political analysts are honing in on Jackson's "unelectability" — his race. The intent is to divert attention from his political message and portray his campaign as a form of entertainment.

It was never this country's intention to share power with black Americans. Wealth and political might have long been held as privileges to be enjoyed and controlled by the majority. From the beginning, the wants of black America have been met with resistance as though, somehow, black people should be satisfied with whatever conditions and standards were established for them.

It seems not to matter that black Americans have fought in every war from the American Revolution to Vietnam or battled for civil rights. It doesn't matter that their roots in this country span three centuries. Black Americans are not taken seriously, nor are they treated as equal competitors in the political and business arenas.

But whether or not the country is ready, Jackson is showing black Americans how to play somebody else's game, a game it is thought they were ill-equipped to play. He is demonstrating how to master the rules, how to strategize and, most important, how to win.

Strength For Today

People who live in countries visited by earthquakes have learned that it is dangerous to build large and pretentious stone houses. Earthquakes quickly crack the rigid structures and bring them crashing to the ground.

People sometimes come to disaster because certain things they have built up suddenly fall and crush them. People who make the accumulation of wealth their chief end in life often find that the temple of avarice collapses and buries them in its ruins. People who long for fame often find that fame can quickly turn into notoriety and reproach.

All of these foolish desires constitute massive piles which in the day of earthquake fall on our heads and destroy us. Better a hut with happiness than a mansion with misery.

Cigarette Trial Breaks New Ground In Smoker-Death Cases

Analysis

In the fourth week of the cigarette product-liability trial now going on in Newark, N.J., a Wall Street Journal editorial shed a tear for the kin of deceased smokers.

"Bereaved families, led to believe by stories of big jury awards that they too might collect a big settlement, spend painful hours in court only to be disappointed in the final opinion," the Journal said in an editorial on Feb. 24.

Rose D. Cipollone smoked a pack or a pack-and-a-half a day for 43 years, starting when she was 16, and she died of lung cancer when she was 59. Her husband, Antonio, who sued the three tobacco companies whose cigarettes she smoked, sits quietly all day, every day, in federal court.

He has always seemed chipper to observers during the many weeks of trial. So on the morning the editorial appeared, a reporter asked him to read it, then asked him how he felt. "I feel wonderful," he said.

The gap between what the editorial writer assumed and what the plaintiff felt is symptomatic of a large truth: Wide chasms divide courtroom realities from outside perceptions, and the real world from judicial and legislative fictions.

Smoking is estimated to cause 350,000 Americans to die prematurely each year from lung cancer, heart disease and emphysema. Every medical organization in the world that has taken a stand says smoking causes disease.

The Cipollone case is the first in which cigarette makers have been compelled on a large scale to open their files, and in which many of their officers and scientists have been forced to testify in depositions and in open court. Such documents and testimony were obtained, in years of costly, difficult pretrial proceedings, by Cipollone's two (and sometimes three) lawyers, who will be compensated only if they win.

Thus, the case affords an unprecedented opportunity for the public to find out what cigarette companies, industry organizations, public relations firms and advertising agencies knew, when they knew it, and what they did about it.

Three quick illustrations of what's been discovered: A memo in which a Tobacco Institute executive reviewed the industry group's strategy over the previous 20 years for countering bad news about smoking; revelations about one company's development of a highly promising safer cigarette and of its decision not to market it; and testimony of top officers of cigarette makers — to jurors who must decide the case on fact — that they based their exonerations of smoking on "belief."

Guesses about the verdict, which may come in April, led to a tussle between wishful thinking and facts. The Journal assumed Cipollone will lose. By contrast, press accounts of the trial have led numerous readers to translate revelations that they viewed as putting the industry in a bad light into expectations that he will win.

Yet it's nearly impossible to divine a basis for a confident prediction of the outcome. Or, for that matter, for forecasting whether the jury will deal differently with Liggett Group Inc. — whose cigarettes Rose Cipollone smoked until after the initial federally mandated warning appeared on cigarette packages in 1966 — than with Philip Morris Inc. and Lorillard Inc. She smoked their brands from 1968 until sometime after 1981, when a spot was found on her lung. She died in 1984.

Consider the threshold question: Was Rose Cipollone's particular type of lung cancer caused by smoking the defendants' particular cigarettes? Impressively credentialed experts called by the plaintiff have testified that, yes, the cigarettes caused Mrs. Cipollone's cancer. In the next week or two, when the defendants will open their case, opposing experts with impressive credentials will testify that her cancer cells were not the kind associated with smoking.

If the jurors at the outset of deliberations should decide the causation issue for the defense, the case will be over. If, on the other hand, they decide it for the plaintiff but go on to agree with the defense that Mrs. Cipollone continued to smoke as a matter of free choice — and not, say, because she had become tobacco-dependent — the case will end with that.

In that event, the industry will have preserved its perfect record of never paying a cent to a litigant who blames smoking for disease and injury.

This reporter, sitting regularly on the bench closest to the jury box for six weeks, has never had a wisp of a clue as to how any of the jurors felt about any witness, document or issue. They were impassive, even stone-faced, when hearing or seeing explosive evidence that made reporters tingle.

Equally impressive, the jurors — except for one, on occasion — seemed wondrously attentive even when most anyone might have been bored out of their skull. Bored, for example, by the legally necessary ritual by which an expert proves he is, and how he became, an expert.

There's also an unusual reason for resolute uncertainty about who will win: No one looking at the dozen jurors can possibly know who among them ultimately will count. From a panel of more than 200 prospective jurors, primarily on the basis of a 22-page questionnaire, seven women and five men were selected. But under a compromise procedure adopted by U.S. District Judge H. Lee Sarokin, only six will decide the case.

Which six? That will be determined by a lottery at the end of the trial. Not to mention that the half-dozen who decide must return a unanimous verdict or cause a mistrial.

One more reason for uncertainty involves one of the widest chasms between ordinary life and legislative-judicial mythology. The lawyers' discussion is often impassioned, but the jurors hear none of it because it occurs either when they are not in court or in lawyers' conferences with the judge.

The chasm began to form in 1965, when Congress decreed that the first of the surgeon general's cautions against smoking must appear on cigarette packages starting on Jan. 1, 1966. On this issue, as in many others, Congress mustered support for sensitive legislation by waffling about its precise intent.

For most smokers, that warning, if they noticed it at all, turned out to have been a whimper. According to expert witnesses for Cipollone, it was drowned out by billions of dollars of advertising that associates cigarettes with glamor, sex and virility, and by the industry's unceasing claims that the case against smoking hasn't been scientifically demonstrated.

But for cigarette makers in product-liability litigation, Jan. 1, 1966, proved to be a momentous day. In the Cipollone case and others, the industry contends that Congress intended the warning on the pack to be a legal pre-emption: It bars a jury from being told that after Jan. 1, 1966, the warnings may have been undermined by industry concealment of knowledge of health risks, and by advertising, promotion and public relations campaigns. Simply put, conduct after the magic date can't be a ground for suing, and a jury can't be told about it, the industry says.

"...No matter how outrageous the conduct may be?" Judge Sarokin asked Robert E. Northrip, whose Kansas City law firm represents Philip Morris and Lorillard.

"I think that is my position," Northrip replied.

In prolonged pretrial proceedings, Sarokin overruled this defense position, but the Third U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed him, dealing a major blow to Cipollone. (Two other federal appeals courts have adopted the Third Circuit's position; if a fourth appellate court rules for the plaintiff — a double-amputee smoker in Tennessee — the issue likely will be decided by the Supreme Court.)

The cigarette companies argue that the Third Circuit ruling entitles them to try to show that because Mrs. Cipollone continued to smoke for at least 15 years while warnings were on every pack she bought, she would have smoked before Jan. 1, 1966, even if the defendants had voluntarily warned her about possible health consequences.

Plaintiff's lawyer Marc Z. Edell agrees that the decision allows the defense argument. But, he asserts, the decision — and equity, under court rules — must also permit him to show the jury how after Jan. 1, 1966, the industry tried to defeat the government warnings.

For example, he argued that he should be allowed to put in evidence a January 1968 article in the old True magazine in which a purportedly independent writer, Stanley Frank, attacked evidence indicting smoking as hazardous. Frank rewrote it, under the name of "Charles Golden," for the National Enquirer, whose headline was, "Cigaret Cancer Link Is Bunk."

Tiderock Corp., a public relations firm retained by the Tobacco Institute, distributed 600,000 copies of the True article; five cigarette makers bought 449,000 additional reprints, and the article was heavily advertised.

"Despicable," Sarokin said on

Feb. 19. "It is inconceivable that Congress intended to protect and insulate such intentionally misleading activities, but the Third Circuit has so declared and once again this court must follow that directive."

Finally, the judge, recognizing "a certain fundamental fairness that keeps cropping up in Mr. Edell's argument," ruled that Edell could put the True and National Enquirer articles in evidence. His theory was that the jurors were entitled to see such materials if Rose Cipollone had seen them, or was likely to have seen them. At the same time, he barred Edell from showing the jurors any internal documents bearing — after Jan. 1, 1966 — on the motives of the companies.

This was one a series of rulings made on a fundamental, recurring issue raised by the Third Circuit decision: If the defense can extrapolate backward from the fact that Mrs. Cipollone smoked after the warnings appeared, is the plaintiff entitled to try to show that the companies sought to undermine her perception of the significance of the warnings?

The issue has deeply troubled

Sarokin. He said at one point that he wished one of the appeals court judges had to grapple, as he does, with the real-world results of their decision.

IN THE STATE

Marina

BEAUFORT, N.C. (AP) — Developers say they have scaled back plans for a marina they want to build in Carteret County, but critics say they still oppose the project.

A committee of state legislators tromped through marsh grass and clam shells Monday to get a close-up look at a waterfront site where developers hope to build the marina and residential housing project.

The project, called Broad Reach, which is being developed by a supporter of Gov. Jim Martin, has drawn fire from environmentalists and residents, who fear the project would pollute the waters of Bogue Sound and force the state to ban shellfishing there.

"All the residents down here are upset about it," said Robert L. Fry, who lives next to the project site in Ocean. "The experience from other marinas is, once they get started they have problems."

State officials are expected to decide this week whether to approve a permit for Broad Reach's marina.

Pastorate

RALEIGH (AP) — Former Southeastern Baptist Seminary president Randall Lolley has been recommended by a search committee to become Raleigh First Baptist Church's senior pastor.

Letters informing First Baptist congregants that Lolley was the choice of the 10-member search committee were mailed Saturday.

Lolley will meet April 6 with the First Baptist congregation, which will vote on whether to hire him. If elected, Lolley would begin as pastor July 1. He would succeed the Rev. John M. Lewis, who retired in 1987 after 27 years at the church.

Lolley, 56, has been a leading moderate spokesman in the Southern Baptist Convention since actions by conservative trustees at a Southeastern Baptist board meeting in October prompted his resignation.

Trophy

GREENSBORO (AP) — Students win school spelling bees every year, but not many win the kind of trophy Julia Farmer got Saturday in Greensboro's annual competition.

She got one with a misspelled word on it.

Her trophy proclaimed her winner of the "City-Widen Spelling Bee" for the sixth grade. The incorrect word should have been spelled "Citywide."

"The kids are supposed to be the good spellers, not us," said Bob Parrott, whose firm, Awards By Parrott, made the trophy.

Parrott said he would be happy to correct the mistakes for the winners. But Julia said her trophy is going to stay on the fireplace mantel just the way it is.

"I think it's fine," she said. "It's the original."

Gem Fine

DALLAS (AP) — A chunk of crystal found by two hobbyists in North Carolina has snagged the attention of top gem dealers, but it could be days before its potential as a star sapphire is known, an expert said Monday.

John Robinson, a wholesale gem dealer and master gem cutter in suburban Plano, said estimates indicate the large corundum crystal shaped like half a tennis ball could be worth more than $1 million.

The stone was found recently by Craig Peden of Chattanooga, Tenn., and Steve Meyer of Atlanta, who were digging in North Carolina when they came upon the stone, Robinson said.

New Homes

GREENSBORO (AP) — Volunteers in Greensboro, Burlington and High Point are drawing plans to help 11 poor families in the Piedmont build houses this year through Habitat For Humanity.

Started 12 years ago by Millard Fuller, an Alabama millionaire who gave away his fortune to help the poor, Habitat For Humanity has been spreading rapidly through the United States and in 25 developing countries. So far, more than 3,000 homes have been built worldwide.

Based in Atlanta, Ga., Habitat has 23 affiliates in North Carolina. The ecumenical program often gets carpenter help — and national publicity — from former President Jimmy Carter.

State To Observe Easter On Friday

By DAVID DROSCHAK
Associated Press Writer

North Carolina will join the rest of the country in observing Easter on Friday this year, ending 60 years of headaches for financial institutions and other businesses that were open when everyone else was closed and closed when everyone else was open.

Businessmen say the state's practice of observing Easter Monday, in essence, cost them two days of business.

"They put me out of business for two whole days ... things happen in two days," said Sen. Bill Goldston, D-Rockingham, who introduced legislation last year to change the official holiday. "I started checking with other people ... and it became an inconvenience with them, too."

Goldston, who owned a trucking company until 1972, said in a telephone interview Monday from his Eden home that North Carolinians along the Virginia, Tennessee, Georgia and South Carolina borders can now share a common holiday with their neighbors.

"People couldn't share a holiday, it was terrible," Goldston said.

The senator said he hasn't received many complaints about the holiday being moved.

"Got two letters — one from a guy who plays golf on Monday and one from the department stores who like to hold sales," Goldston said.

"It's going to make for a whole lot smoother operation," said Earl Bardin, senior vice president and corporate banking executive for First Union National Bank.

North Carolina was the last state to observe the holiday on Monday. In the early 1920s, the Legislature declared that day the official state holiday so more people would be off of work to watch the Wake Forest University-N.C. State University baseball game in Wake Forest.

Bardin said the banking industry was glad to see the change.

"This thing was promoted by the N.C. Bankers Association as a two-fold change," Bardin said. "One, we were closed when every other financial institution in the country was open. It made it very difficult to do business ... Second, there were going to be some penalties coming down the pike that pretty much mandated that we get our schedules adjusted to the Federal Reserve."

"We (North Carolina) weren't going to change everybody from Friday to Monday, now we are," said Bardin, who has lobbied the Legislature the past three years in an attempt to get the change. "This has been an ongoing problem."

Troopers To Be Out In Force

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina State Highway Patrol is preparing for a record number of motorists to be on the highways during the Easter holiday weekend.

"With the arrival of spring and the first long weekend following the winter season, we expect traffic to be extremely heavy," said State Highway Patrol Commander Col. J.F. Cardwell.

Cardwell said every available trooper would be on duty Easter weekend with impaired drivers and speeders receiving special attention.

"Drinking drivers continue to be one of our primary concerns," Cardwell said. "In 1987, we made 45,098 driving while impaired arrests compared to 44,318 in 1986 and 37,517 in 1985. This increase is very disturbing."

"The patrol will be out in force in an effort to make Easter travel safer. We hope the high visibility of troopers will deter violations and provide assistance to motorists who experience difficulties in their travels. With the cooperation of all motorists, this Easter can be one of our safest. We urge everyone who plans to be on the highways over the holiday weekend to buckle up, drive defensively and obey the rules of the road."

During the 1987 Easter weekend, there were 1,003 accidents on North Carolina roads, 816 injuries and nine fatalities.

The 1988 Easter holiday weekend begins at 6 p.m. Thursday and ends at midnight Sunday.

Public Policy Group Wants Hardison Legislation Out

RALEIGH (AP) — Six weeks before the state primary, a North Carolina group is calling for repeal of environmental laws sponsored by Democratic lieutenant governor candidate Harold Hardison, a state senator from Lenoir County.

The state's "Hardison Amendments" hinder the ability of regulators to protect the environment, the N.C. Center for Public Policy Research says. The center said it found six instances where the amendments stand or stood in the way of stiffer standards.

The amendments, named for their sponsor, apply to water, air and hazardous waste and were enacted by the legislature in the 1970s. They prevent agencies from imposing standards more strict than those of the federal government.

"North Carolina is boxed in," Jack Betts, editor of the center's quarterly magazine Insight, said Monday. "Our standards are now set in Washington, and if the feds lower their standards, we will have to lower ours. But who would argue that Washington knows what's best for North Carolina's environment?"

A campaign spokesman said Monday that Hardison will review the amendments in light of the center's study, which was published in Insight.

"The senator plans to look carefully at the Insight study and talk to our state environmental officials," said press secretary Jerry Mobley. "It may be that we need to go ahead and review the amendments again just to clear up any misunderstanding."

Hardison is running for the Democratic nomination against Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, and former Rep. Parks Helms of Charlotte.

The center said the Hardison amendments kept state agencies from banning chemicals called biocides that kill aquatic life and from adopting standards to regulate toxic air pollutants.

The amendment dealing with air pollution lets the state come up with its own standards but only after doing a costly economic impact study. Money for that study is holding up proposed toxic air pollutant rules for industry.

"When they were adopted, the Hardison Amendments sounded reasonable," Betts said. "But it's become increasingly clear that the state will be ill-equipped to protect the environment if the Hardison Amendments continue to restrict what the state can do."

For example, the air pollutant ozone damages tobacco and corn, two of the state's largest cash crops. The federal standard for ozone is four times higher than the threshold for damage. The amendments preclude a tougher standard unless an assessment is done.

"In the past, officeholders have said we ought to repeal them (the Hardison amendments) but did not match those words with corresponding efforts to get them repealed," Betts said.

Dropout Prevention Task Force Draft Calls For More Emphasis On Parents

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A draft report of a governor's task force on potential dropouts calls for the state to make better students by helping to train better parents.

"With the Department of Public Instruction taking the lead ..., every school system should have a parenting program as part of a statewide parent support network," the report said.

George S. Kahdy, chairman of the task force and former state assistant superintendent, said the proposal would be directed primarily at disadvantaged parents such as welfare recipients and teen mothers and would send workers into a child's home.

"Trained people would go into the home and work with the parents on what they can do to help their children learn," Kahdy told the Greensboro News & Record. "It would not be forced on anyone."

Some of the task force's recommendations were outlined Monday during a three-day National Conference on Dropout Prevention.

The recommendations include creating a statewide pre-school screening program to identify children who are likely to drop out, encouraging more partnerships between government and business to make sure that potential dropouts get the health, social or educational services they need and increasing the number of elementary school guidance counselors who would concentrate on children at risk of dropping out.

Kahdy said he will write the final report after he gets comments on the draft from the 10 members of the task force. The task force included teachers, school administrators, business people and legislators.

He plans to submit it to Martin by April 15. However, Kahdy, who is advisor for the N.C. Business Committee for Education, said he does not expect any major changes in the recommendations.

About 6.7 percent of North Carolina's 1.1 million students dropped out of school last year. The state ranks 37th in the number of graduating seniors.

North Carolina has nearly doubled the amount of money it's spending to curb the dropout rate since 1985-86. It is spending $23.7 million now and plans to spend $25.7 million next school year.

The money is used for extended day school, in-school suspension, counseling, job placement and vocational training.

The report suggests using a Missouri program called "Parents

As Teachers," which helped more than 50,000 families this year, in the parent-training proposal.

"By helping parents be as effective as possible in their children's important early years as well as in the school-aged years, North Carolina can expect to reduce future risk for those young people," the report said.

Murder Charge Filed

HIGH POINT (AP) — A Thomasville man has been charged with first-degree murder in the death of his girlfriend's 10-month-old daughter, who was severely burned in scalding bath water in early February.

Tony Randolph Ruben, 20, was arrested at work Monday afternoon, said Debra C. Duncan, a detective with the High Point Police Department.

Setaria Commander died March 7 at Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem, Ms. Duncan said. The medical examiner, Modesto Scharj, said that Setaria died of a bacterial infection that was a complication of the burns.

The child was scalded Feb. 9 while in Ruben's care, Ms. Duncan said. Ruben was charged then with felony child abuse inflicting serious injury and was released after posting $10,000 bond, Ms. Duncan said.

Ms. Duncan said that she waited until the autopsy was complete and consulted with an assistant district attorney before charging Ruben with murder.

Clayton Policeman Shot Three Times

CLAYTON, N.C. (AP) — A Clayton police officer was in serious condition Monday after he was shot three times during a burglary at a grocery store, authorities say.

Eddie Winesett, 28, was shot once in the chest and twice in the back about 8:30 p.m. after answering a silent alarm triggered by the assistant cashier at the Food Town store, said Clayton Police Lt. J.B. Weaver.

Winesett was taken to Johnston Memorial Hospital in Smithfield and then sent to Duke Medical Center by helicopter. He was listed in serious but stable condition.

No one else was injured in the shooting.

Weaver said Winesett apparently walked into the store as a suspect was taking money from the store's main safe. Winesett was shot in the chest with a handgun shortly after entering the store, Weaver said.

Winesett was hit twice more as he moved away from the robber, Weaver said. Those shots hit Winesett in the back, Weaver said.

Weaver said a slug found in the store was from a .38-caliber gun. Winesett was not wearing a bullet-proof vest.

Four employees and about 10 customers were in the store at the time of the shooting.

Winesett has been a Clayton police officer for about two years and was a member of the Wake County Sheriff's Department before that, Weaver said.

KISSING IT OFF — Democrat Richard Gephardt gets a kiss from his wife Jane after he announced in Washington Monday that he was withdrawing from the race for the presidential nomination. Gephardt said he would file today for re-election to his seat in the House from Missouri. (AP Laserphoto)

'Luckiest Guy In The World'

Gephardt Pulls Out Of Presidential Race To Seek Re-Election To House

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Richard Gephardt took an aggressive tack in his Democratic presidential bid, but he bowed out of the race in a mellower mood with family and friends at his side.

"I have no complaints today. I'm the luckiest guy in the world," Gephardt said Monday after announcing his withdrawal at an upbeat news conference that contrasted with the grim economic tidings he purveyed in his campaign.

"We did the best we possibly could," he said. "We made our mistakes and we lost."

The Missouri congressman said he was ending his presidential candidacy but would file today for reelection to the House seat from St. Louis that he has held since 1976.

He said he intended to be back in the thick of House business on Wednesday and, in a variation on his campaign message to the economically disadvantaged, pledged that "your fight will always be my fight, too."

Gephardt, 47, ran some of the most negative TV ads of the campaign against Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis. But he was pushing party unity on Monday.

"I think our candidate is going to come from the people that are running now for the presidency and I think we're going to put a Democrat in the White House in 1988," said Gephardt, who is chairman of the House Democratic Caucus.

He declined when asked to give advice to Dukakis, noting the governor's delegate lead and ruefully admitting that "Michael Dukakis has sure done a lot better than I did. I don't think it's my place to tell him what to do."

As for Jesse Jackson, who trounced both Gephardt and Dukakis last Saturday in the Michigan caucuses, Gephardt commented: "I think Jesse Jackson can be nominated and I think he can be elected."

Gephardt refused to endorse anyone in the race but said he might do so later. Asked about the prospects of him running again in the future, Gephardt said he expected a Democrat to be elected this fall and re-elected in 1992. "Nineteen-ninety-six is so far off I can't even see it," he said.

Most of Gephardt's 167 delegates went into the uncommitted column, but Missouri state party rules mandate that the at-large and public official delegates are re-divided among the active candidates when a contender drops out.

According to the latest AP delegate count, Jackson had 606.55, Dukakis 605.55, Sen. Albert Gore Jr. 362.8, Sen. Paul Simon 168.5 and uncommitted 515.6.

Gephardt began campaigning in Iowa, the leadoff caucus state, some two years ago on the theory that an Iowa victory would translate into momentum and his campaign would take off. He did win Iowa, as well as South Dakota and his home state, but his candidacy never developed broad appeal.

Looking back, Gephardt attributed the failure to a lack of resources and said that where he was able to get his ideas across, "we did connect." But he added, "I have no alibis. We lost, no question about that."

He said he did not blame his defeats on either his position as a House member, a difficult jumping-off place, or press coverage that some considered unduly negative.

"By and large, the press has been fair to Dick Gephardt. I didn't like every article that was written, but I'm not supposed to," he said.

Gephardt was a pragmatic consensus builder in the House and many news stories focused on his transition to anti-establishment populist with controversial ideas on trade and farms.

"Gephardt was an insider trying to run as an outsider and he got creamed for it," said Robert Lichter, a media analyst logging all election stories on the three networks' evening news shows this year.

Gephardt was also vulnerable because he had switched positions on issues ranging from abortion to Reaganomics over the years.

The well-heeled Dukakis ran a television ad showing a man flipping through the air and another with a list of Gephardt's corporate contributors. Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee not only attacked Gephardt on his changes of heart, but appropriated the same populist theme.

After Michigan, Gephardt had less than one-third the delegate totals amassed by Dukakis and Jackson and fewer than even Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois, who didn't compete in the 20 contests on Super Tuesday, March 8.

Jackson Uses Own Life To Convey Hope

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — "Jackson is my third name; I'm adopted," the candidate told the overflow church audience.

"Never slept in my father's house one night, never watched him shave ... stayed with my grandmother till my mother got on her feet."

"I understand."

"Doors shut in your face — I understand."

"Born in the slum — I understand."

Then Jesse Jackson drove home the point with his own life as an example of hope:

"I was born in the slum, but the slum wasn't born in me."

Jesse Jackson this time was speaking in Flint, Mich., where he won a runaway victory in Saturday's primary election. But the message is about the same everywhere he goes. He tells those listening:

"Don't give up on yourself ... We the people can win!"

That emotional message and Jackson's campaign theme of "economic justice" have served him well in his 1988 presidential campaign, with a string of wins in eight states and several second-place finishes making him the popular vote front-runner and in a virtual tie with Michael Dukakis in the delegate count.

As crowds flock to hear him around the country, it is apparent that Jackson's compelling oratory and celebrity status generate excitement not only among the downtrodden but also in affluent communities like Georgetown, the nearly all-white domain of Washington's well-to-do.

On a recent visit, Jackson emerged from his limousine to find 50 squealing school children who grabbed for his hands and begged him to visit their classrooms.

After he led the captivated group in a chant of: "I am somebody. My mind is a pearl ... Down with dope, up with hope," an eighth grader giggled that he had kissed her forehead.

Her friend bubbled: "It was great."

Students from nearby Georgetown University rushed out to their porches to shake his hand. Jackson was the spontaneous toast of the most elite neighborhood of the nation's capital, whose residents have included presidents-to-be, diplomats and senators.

It is a long way from the textile town of Greenville, S.C., where an illegitimate son was born to a teen-age girl and the married man next door on Oct. 8, 1941.

That child grew up to be a fiery civil rights leader, an electrifying orator, a presidential candidate who says he knows "the American people better than anybody running."

"I know slave and slave master," he told an audience in his hometown of Greenville.

He recalls growing up in a segregated South where he had to ride in the back of the bus and sell soft drinks in a whites-only stadium.

His mother, who married the man who adopted him and gave him the name Jackson, worked as a maid for whites.

But his background was not cause for despair, Jackson tells his audiences.

"I was born in the underclass. I know how to get out because I got out."

From Greenville, he went to University of Illinois on a sports scholarship. After a year, he transferred to North Carolina A&T, where he was the student body president, star quarterback and civil rights leader.

After graduating he entered the Chicago Theological School, but dropped out to go south in the mid 1960s and join Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. in the struggle for civil rights.

Jackson's actions in the aftermath of King's death have led to speculation that he set himself up as King's heir apparent, manipulating the spotlight to himself by showing up in Chicago in a shirt he claimed was stained with King's blood.

While he was present at the Memphis motel where King was felled in 1968, others who were there have contradicted Jackson's claim that he cradled the slain leader in his arms.

Jackson has never held elective office, but his career since then has kept him in the public eye almost continuously.

He founded the Chicago-based Operation PUSH, which battled a number of corporations over hiring practices and franchise arrangements that Jackson said were racist.

By 1984, Jackson was ready to run for president, spurred on by the chants of black audiences across the country who urged him to "Run, Jesse, Run."

His powerful eloquence fired up audience after audience as he raced around the country and the world on a shoestring budget and a chaotic campaign.

He flew to Cuba to meet with Fidel Castro and Nicaragua to meet President Daniel Ortega.

He infuriated Jews by using the term Hymie and Hymietown, and by associating with Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan, who called Judaism a "gutter religion."

He took on the Democratic Party, attacking party rules as exclusionary and unfair.

Jackson emerged from the campaign with more 3 million votes, then supported the Democratic ticket and went on to help register large numbers of voters in the South.

His approach in 1988 has been one of fence-mending and reaching out to new constituencies. Aware that Democrats saw him as a polarizing and divisive force in 1984, he has set himself up as a peacemaker.

He refrains from attacks on his opponents and encourages them to focus on issues, not attacks.

And Jackson urges Americans to look at his example to see what is possible in life. He told a crowd of union workers in Detroit: "Many of you are doing less than your best because your spirit is broken."

"You think I can't win because you think you can't win. I can win and you can win. ... Expect your child ought to have a first-class education. Expect you should live in a decent house. You raise your expectations. ... Hold your head high. Know you're somebody."

Democrats Consider Possible Campaign To 'Stop Jackson'

By EVANS WITT
AP Political Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Dissent is building within the Democratic Party about efforts to strengthen Jesse Jackson's rivals in the wake of his stunning Michigan caucus victory.

Alabama Democratic Chairman John Baker suggested in a letter to party leaders around the South that they form a group of unpledged convention delegates who will commit themselves to "the most electable" presidential candidate.

"We've got to keep one eye, if not two eyes, on the November general election. I'm tired of the Democratic Party having a ticket that can't carry but one or two states," said Baker of Montgomery, Ala.

Others were dismayed by Baker's effort.

"The party can't afford that," said Jim Ruvolo, state chairman in Ohio. "Jesse Jackson is not where he is by some sleight of hand. He got there by winning votes."

Jackson overwhelmed Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis in the Michigan caucuses on Saturday, winning the industrial state by nearly 2-to-1. That victory stalled Dukakis' momentum and boosted talk that Jackson could be the first black to win the party's presidential nomination.

Baker denied his effort is aimed at Jackson.

"I'm not trying to stop anybody," he said. But he insisted Jackson's views do not fall within the party mainstream.

"A white candidate espousing what Rev. Jackson is espousing wouldn't have a chance at being elected," Baker said. "He's the most liberal candidate running. I wonder if he were white if he would have any delegates at all."

Baker's move did not get a positive response from John Henry Anderson, Georgia's party chairman.

"I don't want to look at anything as a 'Stop Jesse Jackson' movement. All I want to be looking at is electing a Democrat to the White House," said Anderson, who supports Dukakis.

And Democratic National Committee Chairman Paul Kirk would have no part of a "Stop Jackson" movement.

"I can't imagine that if he runs through the process and comes out on top they could take away from him. I would refuse to be part of that," Kirk said. "I haven't heard of one starting, and I wouldn't be a party to it."

As the party chief, Kirk promised to back the winner.

"We've still got the biggest primaries coming up to settle who the candidate will be, and I'll support that process and its winner whoever it is," Kirk said.

The DNC chairman said Jackson has won his victories with a positive message.

Midwives Offer Decision Made After Jail Stay Alternative

By SUSAN CAMPBELL
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

For most women, giving birth means doctors, anesthesiologists and nurses standing by with the latest technology in tiled hospital delivery rooms.

There are alternatives. Some hospitals offer birthing rooms — special units designed to look like home bedrooms. Many women opt for in-hospital, anesthesia-free natural childbirth.

And then there are midwives, literally women "with women."

"In a lot of ways, that sums up what they do," said Sandra Hvidsten, of the American College of Nurse-Midwives in Washington, D.C. "They are with the woman through her entire labor, providing her with emotional and physical support. People find them very comforting and reassuring and very effective."

In fact, much of the nurse-midwife's role is to educate couples, Hvidsten said.

"We believe the consumers should take charge of their own health care," she said. "And so nurse-midwives spend a lot of time with their patients, talking with them, and explaining what's going on, what they are experiencing."

Nurse-midwives attend about 3 percent of all births nationally, according to the college, a 2,700-member professional and accrediting association.

A certified nurse-midwife is educated in nursing and midwifery, and has passed tests given by the Washington college.

They are not the stereotypical grannies with black bags of herbs. Nurse-midwives are well-versed in all areas of delivery, but they try to screen out women who are prone to high-risk pregnancies.

"One of the differences between midwives and physicians is that midwifery involves a whole lot more teaching," said Russell Medberry of Chaplin, Conn. A nurse-midwife since November 1986, Medberry is one of 21 male midwives certified in the United States.

"You spend a lot more time with the person trying to educate, and dealing with the physical and psychological issues as well, because they can certainly affect the whole labor and delivery process," he said.

Several studies show that the influence of nurse-midwives has reduced the infant mortality rates in places as diverse as Holmes County, Miss., and Madera County, Calif.

"Some people think the delivery is the glory of what pregnancy is all about," said Cynthia Goetz, a certified nurse-midwife at Mount Sinai Hospital in Hartford. "The art really is prenatal care."

And even when women go into labor determined to use as much medical technology as possible, nurse-midwives can stand by to help.

"You have very little control over the system," said Nancy Burton, a Mount Sinai nurse-midwife. "If you don't like the way the system is treating you, there's not much you can do. In some cases, when you are meeting the residents and physicians for the first time, you are in active labor and you are at their mercy. If you set up a power struggle then, that's not too pleasant, either."

In general, couples who choose a midwife expect to use less medical technology during the birth of their children, Burton said.

The first professional midwifery program in the United States began in 1931 in New York. In the early days, midwives worked mainly with women in poor rural areas far removed from hospitals. In the '70s, when the consumer and women's movements began, midwives began serving more urban middle-class clients.

Medberry said he became interested in midwifery when he was not allowed into the delivery room at the birth of his daughter, now 18.

"I went all the way to the hospital administrator, who said that the rooms were too small for me to be there," Medberry said. Two years later, when his second child was born, he was adamant about being at the delivery.

After a two-year program in nursing and midwifery at Pace University in New York City, Medberry, formerly a bank trust officer, applied to Columbia University's midwifery program in 1984, and became the first male student there. For two years, he commuted between internships at North Central Bronx Hospital in New York, Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center, and Mount Sinai in Hartford. He now works at Windham Community Memorial Hospital's prenatal clinic.

The early discrimination that kept him from his wife's delivery room continued to plague him in his field, he said. He is not totally accepted in a predominantly woman's field that, in turn, is not always accepted by other members of the medical profession.

"It's subtle discrimination," Medberry says. "Sometimes, it's something you can't put your finger on. I was assigned to go to one clinical site, and the midwives decided it was OK with them, but their clientele might not accept me."

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the question of whether panties should be worn with pantyhose. You get a definite YES from me for a very good reason. Let me explain.

A few years ago, I was arrested for kidnapping my own daughter. I had legal custody of her at the time, but that's another story. After I was arrested, I was taken to the county jail, where I was booked and locked up. I was told there was some kind of regulation that prohibits women from having nylon stockings in jail, so they took my pantyhose away and I had no panties whatsoever! They issued me a county-assigned dress and locked me up with this dress on — and no panties.

Not that I ever expect to be arrested again, but now I always wear panties with my pantyhose.

I love your column in the Tuscaloosa News. Everybody in jail reads it. — ALABAMA MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Thank you for responding to my inquiry about pantyhose. About half of the respondents said they wear panties with their pantyhose, but your reason for doing so is one of a kind. Read on for another one-of-a-kind letter on the subject:

DEAR ABBY: May I be included in your questionnaire about pantyhose? I always wear panties over my pantyhose — and the prettier the panties the better. Panties are an important part of my wardrobe because I am a professional female impersonator. (All female impersonators wear panties over their pantyhose.) Catch my act if you're ever in New Orleans. — SHALIMAR ON BOURBON STREET

DEAR ABBY: I read your column about pantyhose and thought you might enjoy this poem I composed.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

You have my permission to use it in your column. — DOROTHY MURPHY, CARROLLTON, TEXAS

PANTYHOSE
We wrestle into pantyhose
That stretch across posteriors
And test the fit, when we pull them up
By looking in our mirror-ers
We checked the size before we bought
But always seem to botch;
Size medium C on the purple chart
Sags far below the crotch
So let's go back to stockings,
For after you have got 'em,
They only have to fit your legs
And never mind your bottom!

DEAR DOROTHY: You must be a new reader. About 12 years ago a woman with a "big bottom" wrote to say that she couldn't find any pantyhose to fit her. I published her letter. Then the H. Glaser & Son company, a manufacturer of pantyhose, sent me a sample of its Fat Fannie pantyhose. They were wonderful! The company is still in business at P.O. Box 702, Holliston, Mass. 01746-0005.

CONFIDENTIAL TO J.R. IN LEXINGTON, KY.: I agree, pornography is despicable. But censorship is worse.

Stock And Market Reports

By The Associated Press

HOGS: Market steady to 25 cents higher at North Carolina buying stations. Kinston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro, Siler City and Robersonville 41.00; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadbourne, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson 41.00; Wilson 41.25. Sows: (500 pounds up) Fayetteville 34.00; Wallace 36.00; Spivey's Corner 35.50; Rowland 35.00.

N.C. BROILER-FRYER: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 45.75 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. The market is steady to firm and the live supply is adequate to occasionally adequate for a light to moderate demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina on Tuesday was 1,668,000, compared to 2,029,000 last Tuesday.

HENS: Market steady. Supply barely adequate for a good demand. Prices paid per pound day of negotiation generally for slaughter the following week, heavy types, 7 pounds and up, 7 cents at farm with buyer loading.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn up 1 cent to down 1 cent at mostly 2.17-2.26 in the East and mostly 2.37-2.43 in the Piedmont. No. 1 yellow soybeans mostly 7-8 cents higher at mostly 6.46-6.61 in the East and mostly 6.47-6.51 in the Piedmont. New crop wheat (June-July) mostly 2.83-2.88; new crop corn 1.99-2.34; new crop soybeans 6.33-6.63. Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were steady to 1 percent higher and ranged from 101 to 102 1/2 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices advanced broadly this morning, helped by relatively strong economic reports, a stable dollar and falling interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 17.58 at 1,997.35 by noon-time on Wall Street. The closely watched index had closed a scant 0.82 higher Monday, although the rest of the market lost ground.

In the broader market today, advancing issues outpaced declines by more than 2 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 936 up, 401 down, and 479 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 72.98 million shares as of noon Eastern time, compared with 70.43 million shares at the same point in Monday's session.

Before the stock market opened, the government reported its chief economic forecasting gauge climbed 0.9 percent in February, after falling in three of the past four months.

In another economic report, the Commerce Department said that sales of new homes jumped 20.3 percent in February, the biggest advance in almost two years.

Traders said the dollar's improvement in foreign exchange trading helped stock prices by easing inflation fears and pushing interest rates lower.

Bond prices were up in early trading, depressing yields on long-term Treasury issues that had risen to two-month highs on Monday. At midday, 30-year bonds were yielding 8.78 percent compared with 8.83 percent late Monday.

Among most actively traded issues, RJR Nabisco rose 3/4 to 52 3/4; Gillette fell 2 3/4 to 42 3/4; Philip Morris rose 3 to 91 7/8; and IBM rose 1/8 to 108 3/4.

Lucky Stores jumped 1 3/4 to 50 3/4. American Stores Co. said it was prepared to raise its offer for Lucky to more than $1.9 billion if a friendly merger of the two grocery store chains can be achieved.

ROBERSONVILLE — Mr. William Kenneth Shaw, 54, died this morning in Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Arrangements will be announced by Wilkerson Funeral Home, Greenville.

Sullivan
AHOSKIE — Mr. James Murray Sullivan, 81, died Monday.

His graveside service will be conducted Wednesday at 1 p.m. in Pinewood Memorial Park in Greenville by the Revs. Jim Langford and Frank Stansbury.

Mr. Sullivan was a member of First Baptist Church of Ahoskie and was a member of the Hertford County Election Board for 22 years.

Surviving are his wife, Juanita Sermons Sullivan; two daughters, Mary Rose Doyle of Zebulon and Kay S. Vinson of Winton; three sons, James G. Sullivan of Chapel Hill, Maurice A. Sullivan of Harrellsville and Roger E. Sullivan of High Lands, N.J.; two sisters, Edna S. Bondurant of New Bern and Lorena S. Vincent of Greenville; three brothers, William G. Sullivan and Ralph F. Sullivan, both of Greenville, and J.B. Sullivan of Williamston; six grandchildren; three step-grandchildren, and one great-granddaughter.

Garrett Funeral Home in Ahoskie is handling arrangements.

Taylor
LA GRANGE — Mr. Henry P. Taylor, 70, of 1610 Eastern Parkway, Brooklyn, N.Y., formerly of La Grange, died Thursday in Interfaith Hospital in Brooklyn.

His memorial service will be conducted Wednesday at 8:15 p.m. in Rouses Chapel Missionary Baptist Church by the Rev. B.L. Kittrell. Burial will be in the St. Matthew Free Will Baptist Church Cemetery Thursday at 11 a.m.

Mr. Taylor was born and reared in La Grange, but had made his home in Brooklyn for the past 45 years. He was a member and a deacon in Little Rock F.W.B. Church in Elizabeth, N.J., and was a former member of Rouses Church.

Surviving are his wife, Johnnie Cherry Taylor of the home; two sons, David Taylor of Brooklyn and Willie James Harris of New Jersey; six daughters, Bettie Jean Taylor, Loretta T. Bennett and Joan Taylor, all of New York, Sherry T. Furst of Brooklyn, Tency R. Savage of La Grange and Nettie Taylor of Wilson; two brothers, Luther Taylor and Emanuel Taylor, both of Elizabeth, N.J.; five sisters, Thelma T. White of Brooklyn, Sallie T. Smith of Elizabeth, N.J., Pattie T. Gooding and Mary T. Wooten, both of La Grange, and Airmenella T. Coleman of Kinston; a stepson, Leon Albritton of Brooklyn, and one stepdaughter, Patricia "Sue" Albritton of Brooklyn.

The family will receive friends from 8 p.m. to 9 p.m. Wednesday in Rouses Church and at other times will be at the home of Mary T. Wooten, 202-A N. Wooten St., La Grange.

Arrangements are being handled by Norcott and Company Funeral Home in Ayden.

Wilkes
A funeral for Mr. John Wesley Wilkes Sr. will be conducted Thursday at 3:30 p.m. at Flanagan Funeral Chapel in Greenville by the Rev. James H. Wilkes. Burial will follow at the Branch Cemetery near Haddock Crossroads.

Wilkes lived all his life in the Simpson and Greenville communities. He retired from Pitt County Memorial Hospital and Greenville Villa Nursing Home after 53 years.

Survivors include one daughter, Lucille Corbett; three sons, Ocalas Randolph and William Thomas Wilkes, both of Greenville, and John W. Wilkes Jr. of Pontiac, Mich.; one brother, the Rev. James H. Wilkes of Greenville; eight grandchildren, and six great-grandchildren.

The family will receive friends at Flanagan Funeral Chapel Wednesday from 8:15 p.m. to 9:15 p.m. and at other times will be at the homes of the Rev. James H. Wilkes, 1830 Battle Drive and Mr. and Mrs. William Thomas Wilkes, 909 Howell St.

Suspect Found Dead In Pierce Killing

Morgan and Thomas McNally, an FBI special agent.

Despite the arrest, a leader of the American Indian Movement said AIM was joining with community leaders to ask Congress for "a full-scale independent investigation into all the details surrounding this, the killing of Julian Pierce, and the death of one of the suspects."

Vernon Bellecourt, of AIM's San Francisco office, said in a telephone interview he had been in Robeson County since Monday night.

"We are certainly not in the position to pass judgment," he said. "All we are saying is there are unanswered questions."

In Raleigh, about 35 people who had supported Pierce's candidacy said the push for an outside investigation and delayed election should continue even if charges are filed and regardless of the killer's motive. The Pierce backers made their statements at a news conference.

Investigators had said they were considering several theories for the slaying, including possibilities that Pierce was killed for political reasons or on the order of drug dealers worried that he might be elected.

Robeson County's racial makeup is evenly divided among Indians, blacks and whites. The southeastern North Carolina county was the scene in February of a siege at the Robesonian newspaper, where two Indians seized the newsroom and complained of law enforcement and corruption. The two were charged with hostage-taking by federal authorities.

The county commissioners met briefly Monday afternoon to adopt a resolution asking District Attorney Joe Freeman Britt, who was Pierce's opponent in the May 3 primary, to ask the state attorney general for a special prosecutor.

The resolution is not binding on Britt, said Commissioner Wayne Ox-enide. Harvey Godwin, Pierce's campaign manager, said the 25-member Committee to Elect Julian Pierce had asked Gov. Jim Martin to call a special session of the General Assembly to delay the primary and extend the filing period to allow another minority candidate to run. State law says if a candidate dies 30 days or more after the filing period closes in that election, the opposing candidate is declared the winner. The filing period for the judicial race ended Feb. 1.

Britt will be declared the winner under current state law. Since there is no Republican candidate in the county, winning the primary is tantamount to winning the judgeship.

Jim Sughrue, a spokesman for the governor, said Martin would meet Thursday with those requesting the special session.

Dole May Stop

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Bob Dole, his White House hopes crushed by George Bush, scheduled what his staff billed as a "major speech" today amid signs he was ready to give up his Republican presidential bid.

ABC News reported that the Kansas senator would end his candidacy, but Dole spokesmen would not confirm that.

"It will be a major speech on the future of his candidacy," the spokeswoman Katie Boyle said.

The Senate minority leader made a fast start out of the gate in Iowa, where he overwhelmed the vice president in Feb. 8 caucuses, but he stumbled a week later in New Hampshire's primary. Dole rebounded with a pair of wins in South Dakota and Minnesota on Feb. 23, but Bush stunned the Republican field with a 16-state primary sweep on Super Tuesday.

Dole never recovered. Though he made an effort to revive his campaign in Illinois, he lost heavily there and appeared to be merely going through the motions after that.

Dole campaigned last week in Wisconsin, where he hoped to make a comeback, but public opinion polls indicated a 2-to-1 Bush lead. By week's end, Dole told a Washington audience that he thought Bush's nomination was "a foregone conclusion."

"I can read the numbers and I probably know what's happening," he said.

"We need to keep a Republican in the White House. That's where I'm coming from," he said. "And if it can't be me, it will be George Bush."

On Monday, he delivered a speech that stopped short of a withdrawal but looked and sounded like a last hurrah. Joined by his wife, Elizabeth, and daughter, Robin, he said he wanted to thank his campaign workers and outline his vision for the future of the GOP.

Dole's second campaign for the Republican presidential nomination — the first, in 1980, also ended in failure — was flawed all along by internal disarray. The Senate leader was not inclined to delegate authority. He finally brought on former Labor Secretary Bill Brock last November to run the campaign. But it may have been too late.

Fund-Raiser

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Grammy Award-winning singer Lou Rawls has won the applause of the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors for his efforts in raising $100 million for the United Negro College Fund.

County Supervisor Kenneth Hahn presented Rawls with a proclamation Monday, praising his fund-raising successes as a "tremendous achievement and sacrifice."

"A mind is a terrible thing to waste," Rawls said, repeating the fund's motto. "A lot of young people are standing on corners, and you know their minds are wasting away."

The 51-year-old jazz, blues and ballad singer has raised millions for the fund in the eight years he has been host of the "Lou Rawls Parade of Stars" telethon. In just six hours last year, he collected $10.6 million.

Rawls said he found it gratifying to see how young people had been helped by college scholarships provided by the fund.

$18 Million Lineup

Highest Annually Paid Ball Players by Position

AP: H. Yarrington

All-Stars Don't Earn Top Pay

NEW YORK (AP) — The best lineup in baseball this season would cost an owner $6 million less than a lineup of the players with the highest salaries.

Rogers Clemens, Don Mattingly, Wade Boggs, George Bell and Andre Dawson — all members of The Associated Press major league All-Star team last season — do not have the highest salaries at their positions this year.

On the most expensive team, they are replaced by Rick Sutcliffe, Eddie Murray, Mike Schmidt, Jim Rice and Dave Winfield.

The most expensive lineup in baseball would cost an owner $18,469,222 this season, $100,000 less than the 1987 payroll for the entire New York Yankees, and more than the 1987 payroll of any other club.

Ozzie Smith, the St. Louis Cardinals' shortstop, will have the highest salary in baseball this season at $2.34 million, according to a review of major league salaries conducted by The Associated Press.

Rice is second at $2,229,822. Gary Carter of the New York Mets is third at $2,160,714 and Murray, fourth, at $2,160,035.

Schmidt is fifth at $2.15 million and Sutcliffe, sixth, at $2.07 million.

Completing the most expensive team in baseball are outfielders Dale Murphy of Atlanta at $2 million, Winfield at $1,958,651 and second baseman Paul Molitor of Milwaukee at $1.4 million.

Two of the nine players with $2-million salaries this season are excluded because of higher-paid players at their positions — Fernando Valenzuela of the Los Angeles Dodgers ($2.05 million) and Mattingly ($2 million), who signed a $6.7 million, three-year contract with the Yankees this winter, the most lucrative deal of the offseason.

Salaries were obtained from several player and management sources. They include pro-rated shares of signing bonuses and benefits but discount parts of salaries that are deferred without interest. Many of the players have incentive-bonus clauses that could increase their incomes.

None of the highest-paid players made the 1987 AP All-Star Team. Clemens, the two-time American League Cy Young Award winner who will make $1.35 million, was the pitcher with the most votes. Benito Santiago, the catcher, has the lowest salary of the AP All-Stars at $167,500. He also is the only AP All-Star not eligible for salary arbitration. Santiago was National League Rookie of the Year in 1987.

Mattingly was the AP first baseman, Juan Samuel ($1.06 million) was at second, Boggs ($1.65 million) was at third and Alan Trammell ($1 million) was at shortstop.

Bell ($1,933,333), Kirby Puckett ($1.09 million) and Dawson ($1.85 million) were the outfielders. Bell was the American League MVP in 1987 and Dawson won the award in the National League.

Dawson is close to displacing Winfield on the highest-paid team. He reportedly has agreed on a multiyear contract that would pay him $2 million this season, setting aside his arbitration loss.

The average salary on the highest-paid team is $2,046,580 while the average for the AP All-Stars is $1,344,648. The average for all players last season was $402,500, according to management figures.

When You're In The Final Four You're Everybody's Friend

DURHAM (AP) — By the end of the day, Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski will know who is staying in which hotel, who gets tickets and who gets interviews. When you're in the NCAA Final Four, you're everybody's friend.

"It's amazing how many people you haven't heard from in years you hear from this week," Krzyzewski said Monday. Krzyzewski's East Regional champion Blue Devils meet Kansas on Saturday in the national semifinals in Kansas City, Mo.

"Everybody wants tickets or interviews or something. I'm still worrying about who's in what motel room and whose family is staying with whom."

"But I learned a lesson last time," said Krzyzewski, whose 1986 club reached the Final Four, losing to Louisville in the championship game. "You get all the logistics out of the way today, and by Tuesday, we're ready to concentrate on Kansas, or whoever happens to be our first-round opponent."

There was another lesson from 1986, and that focused on two emotions — ecstasy and hunger.

"... I learned two years ago how hard it is to get there," Krzyzewski said.

"You dream about being there as a player and coach, and we might have teams that are better than this team ... that will never make it to the Final Four. I think if we don't take time to appreciate what a special event it is and take care of that emotion then we're missing out on what it's all about."

The Blue Devils, 28-6, also must be hungry for a title, Krzyzewski said. He thinks they are after losing in the 1986 championship game.

"The second feeling you have to take care of is hunger," he said. "Taking advantage of the opportunity of being there and remembering that you want to play two games, and you want to play them well and win both of them. It comes in order."

Krzyzewski gave his team Monday off and resumed practice today.

"We won't be a tired team," he said. "I don't even want our starters bouncing a ball today ..."

By today, reserve John Smith hoped to be back in uniform.

Smith said Monday he might play in the Final Four despite breaking two bones in his right hand in the NCAA East Regional semifinal victory Thursday over Rhode Island.

Smith's fracture did not require a cast, and doctors planned to insert a screw in the hand today to stabilize the injured area. Smith said that if the hand holds up in practice late this week, he will be available for some limited play against Kansas in the NCAA semifinals.

Smith is generally the first player off the bench for the Blue Devils. A 6-foot-7 junior, he is the team's fourth-leading scorer at 8.4 points per game and fifth-leading rebounder at 3.2.

Duke will be making its sixth Final Four appearance — 1963, 1964, 1966, 1978 and 1986 — but the Blue Devils have never won the national championship.

Saturday's game against Kansas, 25-11, in Kansas City, Mo., will be a rematch of the 1986 semifinal game, which the Blue Devils won 71-67. However, Krzyzewski said Duke's 74-70 overtime victory against the Jayhawks earlier this season is more significant.

"The youngsters playing for us now ... were not the guys that beat Kansas (two years ago)," Krzyzewski said. "It's different. It's their turn."

Duke, which usually plays a man-to-man defense, may have problems stopping Kansas' 6-11 All-American Danny Manning inside, Krzyzewski said. Manning has been the Jayhawks' leading scorer in 33 of 36 games. He's also averaging more than 24 points in four NCAA games.

"I knew he was a great player from watching him in the Pan Am trials and playing against him a couple of years ago ...," Krzyzewski said. "But when we went out there (to play Kansas) this year ... he's bigger, quicker and better than I thought he was."

"You have to expect him to be at a top level," he said. "What you hope is you don't let other people hurt you and don't let him have one of those 'all-time' games, which he's capable of having. There's no question in my mind that a Danny Manning could come into that game ... (and play a game) people would be taking about (for a long time). That's how good he is. We have to make sure he plays his normal first-team All-American game."

Krzyzewski said his top defensive player, 6-6 Billy King, may not be able to guard the taller Manning.

"They (Kansas) are a little bit like us in that they have one guy that's tall ... and the rest of the guys are about 6-5, 6-6 or smaller. I don't know if we can afford to put Billy King on Danny (Manning)," Krzyzewski said. "Billy hasn't guarded a guy inside like that."

Forward Danny Ferry leads the Blue Devils with a 19.1 average and 7.5 rebounds. Guard Kevin Strickland averages 16.3 points and center Robert Brickey 10.6.

Big Eight Hopes Image Put To Rest

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Kansas may not win the NCAA basketball championship, but the Jayhawks are happy to see the rest of the Big Eight Conference join them in the world of big-time basketball.

About 7,000 people greeted the Jayhawks Sunday night upon their return from a 71-58 NCAA Midwest Regional victory over Kansas State. With the Wildcats, Jayhawks and Oklahoma Sooners reaching the NCAA's final eight, Big Eight officials believe they have put to rest the old image of dull, slow-down hoops.

Kansas and Oklahoma comprise half of the Final Four that gets underway with semifinal games Saturday in Kemper Arena. It's the sort of distinction usually reserved for leagues like the Big Ten and the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"Watching two Big Eight teams get into our own Final Four was the most exciting thing I ever saw," said Bill Hancock, associate commissioner of the Big Eight and one of the major figures in planning and running this 50th anniversary Final Four.

"It's just a dream come true for us after all those years of struggling so hard," Hancock said. "We hoped against hope we would get a team in the Final Four. Now we have two. It's just unbelievable. Coaches and athletic directors from all over the conference have been calling each other and offering congratulations."

For many years, Kansas and Kansas State were the only Big Eight schools that seemed to put much effort or money into basketball. Most of the league's arenas were small, cramped and outdated. The few nationally recruited high school stars coming out of the Big Eight area almost always fled East or West to where football did not exert absolute, undisputed rule.

But then, slowly, change came. Coaches like Larry Brown, Billy Tubbs and Johnny Orr were hired at places like Kansas, Oklahoma and Iowa State. Players like Wayman Tisdale and Danny Manning were coaxed into signing Big Eight letters-of-intent.

New arenas were built at Oklahoma, Missouri, Iowa State, Nebraska and Colorado. Other facilities were upgraded. More money was spent on basketball than ever before.

When this season opened, Big Eight coaches told anybody who would listen that their league had come of age. By season's end, three of the league's top four career scorers were winding down brilliant careers — Manning at Kansas, Jeff Grayer at Iowa State, Derrick Chievous at Missouri. It is commonly thought that most of this year's second-team All-Big Eight squad would, in the lean years, have been prime candidates for player of the year honors.

"This underscores what we've been saying all year, that this is a great basketball conference," Hancock said. "We said all year that to survive in the Big Eight was a worthwhile goal for anybody. I believe this confirms that contention. It came down to put up or shut up time for the Big Eight, and by golly, our guys put up."

Money as well as honor will accrue to Big Eight schools. With five teams invited to the tournament and three advancing to final eight, the conference figures to split almost $3.75 million.

"People are talking about the money and getting out their calculators to total up all the dollars, but to be honest, what the Big Eight is getting out of this is absolutely priceless," Hancock said. "Compared to what we're getting in terms of prestige, the money is secondary. The glare of the national media at the Final Four is awesome, and half of that is going to be trained on the Big Eight Conference. It's like a priceless work of art."

If Kansas gets past Duke and Oklahoma overcomes Arizona in Saturday's semifinals, it would set up an all-Big Eight championship. The prospect leavens conference fathers glassy-eyed.

"It would be the greatest thing since 1971 when Nebraska, Oklahoma and Colorado finished 1-2-3 in the final football poll," Hancock said.

Tickets May Go For Up To $2,000

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Final Four tickets in this city brimming with well-heeled Kansas fans could sell for as much $2,000, some speculators say.

Police thought it a good time to remind residents that ticket scalping in Kansas City is against the law.

"From everything we've heard today, I do believe that this will be the toughest ticket in the history of sports," Richard Konzem, a harried Kansas athletic official, said. "We could sell out the Superdome."

The Final Four long ago reached parity with the World Series on the scalpers' list of profitable events. But when the Kansas Jayhawks beat Kansas State 71-58 Sunday in the finals of the NCAA Tournament's Midwest Regional at Pontiac, Mich., they did more than join Oklahoma, Arizona and Duke in the 50th anniversary of college basketball's party. They stirred up a ticket frenzy that 36 hours later was gathering strength and fury like the tornado that whizzed Dorothy and Toto away to Oz.

"I was told that I could probably get $2,000 per ticket on game day," said a Kansas City advertising executive with close ties to Kansas.

"If I had a bunch, I would take them to the bank and put them in the safety deposit box with the gold coins," added the man, who asked that his name not be used. "This town has gone crazy."

In the first semifinal game Saturday, Kansas meets Duke, the school that vanquished the Jayhawks in the 1986 Final Four. Oklahoma, another Big Eight school, meets Arizona in the other semifinal.

And thousands upon thousands of Kansans suddenly want to be there. The Jayhawk basketball tradition, in fact, was firmly established before John Wooden ever won a game at UCLA. When Kansans talk about their past, names like James Naismith, Wilt Chamberlain, Dean Smith and Phog Allen spill from the tongue.

Allen Fieldhouse, located on the Kansas campus just 35 miles or so from Kemper Arena, has been sold out for years. Students in need of pocket money can always get $40-$50 for a $10 ticket.

The populous Kansas alumni in the greater Kansas City area are mostly an affluent, upscale group of professionals and business leaders. They've suffered an embarrassing football program that won only one game last year and ranked near the bottom of almost every statistic the NCAA keeps. But they love their basketball, they have money, and cozy little Kemper seats only about 17,000.

"We have been allotted 1,625 tickets for the Kemper Arena Final Four," said Konzem, KU's assistant athletic director. "It's just unbelievable how far that is from filling our needs. From that allotment, we also have to take care of students, cheerleaders, faculty and staff members. There was a big stack of messages waiting for me when I got home from Pontiac Sunday night. When I got to work this morning, there was a much bigger stack. Every message is the same — tickets."

To Konzem falls the terrible job of saying no to thousands of loyal supporters who helped funnel almost $2.5 million in donations into the athletic department last year.

"Supply is very, very limited. Demand is very, very large," Konzem said. "The fact that one of the teams is KU is not the only factor in this. You have Duke, an ACC school with a great basketball tradition already and a lot of loyal fans. Then you have Arizona, which is making its first trip to the Final Four and has all that excitement surrounding it and creating interest among the fans."

"And then you have Oklahoma. Not only is Oklahoma a second Big Eight school with Kansas, but it's a bordering state with Kansas and Missouri."

Oklahoma may be new to big-time basketball, but it's an old hand at getting serious about sports. The same loyal army of red-clad Sooners who follow their football team around the nation are delighted to hop a plane for the 50-minute ride to Kansas City.

Konzem declined to speculate on what price scalpers may finally get.

Dawson Inks Contract

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — National League MVP Andre Dawson says he has agreed to a two-year contract with the Chicago Cubs for reasons of security — and $4.15 million.

"It provides me, first of all with the security that I wanted," Dawson said after the signing was announced late Monday. "Chicago is where I want to play, now and for the rest of my career."

In agreeing to the contract, Dawson waived his right to become a free agent again if the Major League Baseball Players Association wins the 1986 collusion case.

Dawson, 31, will receive a base salary of $1.85 million for this season and $2.1 million in 1989, sources told The Associated Press Monday night.

The Cubs have an option for 1990 for $20.1 million, but must pay Dawson $2.0 million to buy it out if they do not exercise it.

In addition, Dawson can make $300,000 in bonuses this season. He can earn $100,000 if he is named the National League MVP, $50,000 for making the All-Star team, $50,000 for

Tubbs Impressed With Road Wins

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs, who knows something about winning games by wide margins, likes one particular aspect of the Arizona basketball team.

It's not the way the Wildcats play as a team, nor the way they shoot, play defense and run the floor. They do all of those very well and Tubbs admires that. But there's something else.

"The thing that impressed me with Arizona this year, I thought they've had big numbers on the road in their conference," Tubbs said Monday. "They weren't just easing by in the conference. They were winning by 20 to 30 points a lot of times on the road."

"I don't care who you are and who you're playing, when you can win on the road consistently with big numbers, you must be doing something right."

Oklahoma, 34-3, won its games by an average margin of 23 points per game, best in the country. Arizona, 35-2, was next in line with an average of 21.7 points.

Both teams enjoy an up-tempo style of play, although few teams run like Oklahoma. The Sooners averaged 104 points per game to Arizona's 85.3.

Arizona and Oklahoma also were the only top-seeded teams that made it through the NCAA Tournament's four-game regional warfare to the Final Four. The Wildcats of the Pac 10, ranked second, beat Cornell, Seton Hall, Iowa and North Carolina to capture the West Regional. Fourth-ranked Oklahoma of the Big Eight, playing in the Southeast Regional, beat Tennessee-Chatanooga, Auburn, Louisville and Villanova.

"I felt the West was probably the toughest regional and the Southeast might be the second-toughest regional," Tubbs said.

The winner of the Oklahoma-Arizona game Saturday night at Kansas City will play for the championship two night's later against either Kansas or Duke. Oklahoma has beaten Kansas twice this season and Arizona has beaten Duke, leading some to believe the Oklahoma-Arizona game will decide the champion.

"I think this first game will definitely go a long way in determining the national champion. ... It's a national championship game, nobody can debate that," Tubbs said.

The spotlight of the Final Four has made household names of such coaches as Jim Valvano of North Carolina State and Rollie Massamino of Villanova, each of whom led teams to the national championships. Tubbs is known for his ability to toss out one-liners when the cameras are rolling, but said he wasn't looking to cash in on that.

"I'm serious about the game. Really," he said. "We're going up there to play. That's all I'm really interested in right now, is just going up and doing a good job and us taking care of business."

"We want to enjoy it, but we're up there for one reason. This isn't like a bowl game where you go lay on the sand for a week or something like that. This is, 'Let's go play some basketball.'" During the celebration after the 78-59 victory over Villanova in the region final, Tubbs said the magnitude of what had happened would take a while to sink in. By Monday, he said, that euphoria had worn off.

"We're excited about being in the Final Four, but I think our staff and players will do good jobs of taking care of our business," Tubbs said. "The real statistic is winning the national championship."

Olson, Arizona Get Respect

SEATTLE (AP) — If Arizona Coach Lute Olson thinks his basketball team is lacking the respect it deserves — and make no mistake about it, he does — Billy Tubbs will put his mind to rest.

Olson's No. 2-ranked team will play Tubbs' fourth-ranked Oklahoma Sooners in the semifinals of the NCAA Tournament in Kansas City's Kemper Arena on Saturday, a game that will match the only top seeds that survived the four-game regional tournament grind.

Tubbs said he's impressed by what Arizona has accomplished this season. The Wildcats' 35-2 record, the best in the nation, includes four runaway victories in NCAA play and domination of the Pac-10 Conference.

"They've had big numbers on the road in their conference," Tubbs said. "They weren't just easing by in the conference. They were winning by 20 to 30 points a lot of times on the road."

"I don't care who you are and who you're playing, when you can win on the road consistently with big numbers, you must be doing something right."

Olson has been irked by suggestions that his team compiled its glossy record because it played in a weak conference. He said the Wildcats' performance in the NCAA Tournament to date — an average victory margin of 27 points — should silence those doubters.

Arizona sidelined No. 7 North Carolina 70-52 on Sunday in the West Regional championship game at the Kingdome. Earlier, the Wildcats brushed aside Cornell 90-50, Seton Hall 84-55 and Iowa 99-79.

"All those people kept saying Arizona was never tested and wait until they get into the tournament and play some real teams," Olson said.

"Well, we played some good teams and we're still winning. I don't know how much more we have to do to prove to some people that this team is for real."

North Carolina Coach Dean Smith certainly needs no convincing. The loss to Arizona was the Tar Heels' worst in NCAA play since 1969, when Drake beat North Carolina 104-84 in the national consolation game.

"I think Arizona is certainly one of the toughest teams we've faced," said Smith, who had North Carolina in the NCAA Tournament for the 14th straight year. "I think we had the third- or fourth-toughest schedule in the nation. Duke certainly is and Temple and Arizona are all just outstanding teams."

Duke defeated North Carolina three times this season and Temple beat the Tar Heels 83-66 in what, until Sunday, was the most lopsided loss of the season.

In a further retort to what he considers an Eastern bias against West Coast basketball, Olson noted that Duke is the only team east of the Mississippi River to make the Final Four. The Blue Devils, who lost to Arizona in late December, will play Kansas in the other semifinal game Saturday.

"There are a lot of Western kids who are going to be sitting out East watching the Final Four on TV that might have had an opportunity to be there," Olson said, referring to the many West Coast athletes who have signed with eastern schools.

"So maybe we are making a point that you don't have to leave family, friends and freeze your butt off and go across the country to play on a team that has a chance to win it."

Olson's team includes 10 players from California and one from Tucson, where the university is located.

The Tucson product is All-America forward Sean Elliott, who led the Wildcats with 24 points against North Carolina after getting 25 against Iowa in Friday night's semifinals.

Elliott was voted the regional's outstanding player and was joined on the all-tournament team by Arizona teammates Tom Tolbert and Steve Kerr. Tolbert scored 21 points on Sunday and Kerr had 14.

"I think it's time for people to stop taking shots at one part of the country or another part of the country," Olson said.

"My understanding now is there are two Big Eight teams, one Pac-10 team and one ACC team in the finals. So there are a lot of voids from the areas where people are saying all of the basketball is being played."

This will be Arizona's first Final Four appearance and comes five years after Olson left Iowa to take over a team that had gone 4-24 overall and 1-17 in the Pac-10. The Wildcats are the first Pac-10 team other than UCLA to make the national semifinals since 1963.

"Playing in the Final Four is something you always dream about," said Kerr, the heady senior guard who is Arizona's floor leader.

Rampant Golfers Roll By Gryphons

ROCKY MOUNT — Rob Thomas shot a one-over-par 73 to lead Rose High School to a drubbing of Rocky Mount at Northgreen Country Club at Rocky Mount Monday in a Big East golf match.

The Rampants finished the afternoon with a 306 team total, well ahead of Rocky Mount's 351.

The victory boosted Rose to 4-0 overall and to 2-0 against Big East opposition. The Rampants travel to Goldsboro's Walnut Creek Country Club on Thursday to face D.H. Conley and Eastern Wayne.

Rose 306 — Rob Thomas 73, Lee Watson 77, Mitch Mitchum 77, Chris Warren 79.
Rocky Mount 351 — Meredith Tucker 79, Chris Zelesnick 84, Richie Cobb 87, Andy Bowman 91.

Ayden-Grifton 329
Farmville 331
Pamlico 389

FARMVILLE — Ayden-Grifton's Chris Brick led the Chargers to victory in a three-way golf match at Farmville Country Club Monday afternoon.

Brick had a 79 to lead the Chargers to a 329 team score. Hosting Farmville Central was second with a 331 while Pamlico finished third with a 389.

Lance Parker led Farmville Central with an 80 while Henry Rice was low for Pamlico with a 93.

Farmville is now 4-5 and will not return to action until April 11 when the Chargers travel to Pamlico. A match at Wilson Fike, scheduled for Thursday, has been canceled.

Ayden-Grifton returns to action on Thursday, traveling to Kinston.

Ayden-Grifton — Chris Brick 79, Trae Wilson 80, Todd Buck 80, Chad Tulloch 90.
Farmville Central — Lance Parker 80, Tyson Warren 81, Dave Baker 84, Brad Flowers 88.

Pamlico — Henry Rice 93, Steven Prescott 98, Clyde Roberts 98, Kelly Walling 100.

D.H. Conley 321
Washington 377

AYDEN — Washington's Paul Manning took top individual honors, but hosting D.H. Conley won the match as the Vikings downed the Pam Pack in a Coastal Conference golf match held Monday at the Ayden Golf and Country Club.

Manning fired an even par 72 but got little assistance from his teammates, as the next best Pam Pack score was a 98.

Hall Dunn led Conley with a 78.

The Vikings are now 6-3 overall and 1-1 against Coastal opponents. The Vikes travel to Goldsboro on Thursday to face Rose and Eastern Wayne at Walnut Creek.

Conley 321 — Hall Dunn 78, Gentry Pinner 79, John Pinner 80, Frankie Pugh 84.
Washington 377 — Paul Manning 72, Trey Wiseman 98, Matt Davis 103, Wesley Jones 104.

Pirates Gets Two Oral Commitments

From Staff Reports
East Carolina basketball coach Mike Steele has received his first two oral commitments for next season in 6-3 guard Jay Sherer and 6-8 forward Brooks Bryant.

The two are both natives of Huntsville, Ala. and played together on a 6-A state championship team at Gus Grissom High School. Sherer was the co-player of the year in the state while Bryant was the Most Valuable Player of the Alabama State Tournament.

Sherer averaged 20.5 points per game while Bryant chipped in with 13.5 points a game.

The two visited the ECU campus this weekend and made their oral commitments before leaving.

Also visiting this weekend was 6-6 forward Eric Sykes of Louisburg College. Sykes, who has yet to make a commitment, will reportedly still visit another school before deciding.

Recreation Basketball Tournament Set

The Supreme Team of Greenville is sponsoring an adult basketball tournament in order to help fund a possible trip to Fayetteville for the boys on the team.

The tournament will be held April 6 at West Greenville Gymnasium. The event is open to any five-man team with members over 18 years of age. The entry fee is $75 and includes first through third place trophy as well as MVP and all-tournament.

The Supreme Team is a recreation team of 13-15 year olds from the Greenville area completely funded by donations. For more information call Rodney Scott at 758-7920 after 6 p.m.

Aycock Downs Nash Central, 5-4

E.B. Aycock's 7-8th grade team defeated Nash Central, 5-4, in junior high school baseball action Monday.

Montez Barrett tossed a one-hitter at Nash, striking out 11 and walking five. He also went two for two at the plate with a home run and three runs batted in.

The win makes Aycock 3-0, and the Jaguars will travel to Ayden-Grifton on Wednesday.

Rose Thinclads Rip Beddingfield

Rose High School had little trouble in romping past an undermanned Wilson Beddingfield track team Monday as the Rampants ran their record to 4-0 on the season.

The Rampants finished the meet with 132 points while Beddingfield had only 17.

Most of those came when Don Batts won both the high jump and the 100-meter dash, the only events won by the Bruins on the day.

Rose was led by David Allen, who won both the 1,600- and 800-meter runs. The Rampants will entertain Kinston on Thursday.

West Craven Tops Lady Jaguars, 18-6

FARMVILLE — West Craven scored 10 times in the fourth inning and rolled up an 18-6 softball victory over 2-A Farmville Central Monday afternoon.

The 3-A Lady Eagles pushed over four runs in the top of the first inning to take the lead for good. J. Peele walked as did Bizzell. Bryant then double din Peele and Daughtry singled to score Bizzell. Errors helped bring the other two around.

Farmville tried to rally, scoring three in the bottom of the inning. Stephanie Rogister singled and scored on Karen Carter's double. Susie Stencil singled to score Carter and Madeline Streeter walked. Belinda House then singled in Stencil.

But Farmville got no closer. West Craven scored two in the third on a homer by Peele, then exploded for 10 in the fourth. Two more scored in the fifth on another homer by Peele. Farmville scored single runs in the fifth, sixth and seventh innings.

Peele led the West Craven hitting with three while Brimmer added two. Carter had three and Stencil, two, for Farmville.

The Lady Jaguars are now 0-5 on the year and will return to action today, hosting D.H. Conley.

Postema Not Among NL Umpire Choices

NEW YORK (AP) — Pam Postema is heading back to the minor leagues with little chance this season of becoming the first female umpire in major league baseball history.

"At this point, I would say the chances of her working in the big leagues this year would be slim," said Randy Mobley, administrator of the American Association, where the 33-year-old Postema will serve as a crew chief this year.

Gary Darling, 30, a Pacific Coast League umpire since 1983, and Mark Hirschbeck, 27, who has worked in the American Association since 1985, were named to National League staff on Monday by league president Bart Giamatti. Openings were created by the death of Dick Stello and the retirement of Billy Williams.

Darling and Hirschbeck, both of whom umpired part time in the NL last year, were among seven umpires given tryouts for the openings during spring training.

Postema, an 11-year minor league veteran, worked major league games in spring training on an American Association contract. Darling, Hirschbeck and three of the others were under contract to the National League.

Mobley said that fact alone would make it difficult for Postema to make the majors this year in the event of injury or illness to a regular umpire. She will be starting her sixth season in Triple A, her second in the American Association after four years in the Pacific Coast League.

Brewers' Meyer In Baseball Limbo

CHANDLER, Ariz. (AP) — Joey Meyer, a large man with prodigious minor league statistics, figured with one week to go in spring training he'd be packing his bags for Baltimore, not Denver.

His travel plans are still undecided. He isn't sure where he's headed and neither are the Milwaukee Brewers.

The 6-foot-3, 257-pound Meyer's immediate future with the Brewers depends not so much on his own performance in spring training as on the physical condition of one of the team's stars, Paul Molitor.

If Molitor is physically unable to play the infield, he will be the designated hitter. That's the spot Meyer hoped to occupy.

Last year at Denver, the Brewers' Class AAA affiliate, Meyer hit 29 homers and drove in 92 runs in just 79 games before tearing his hamstring.

In his previous three minor league seasons, Meyer hit 30, 37 and 24 homers with 102, 123 and 98 RBI. He has nothing left to prove in the minor leagues.

"I don't look at it that way," Meyer said. "If I start out there (Denver) it's because of the 24-man roster."

"If Molitor has to DH, he's the man who makes the team run. It's not like I didn't make the team. It's just circumstances."

Meyer started slowly this spring but in the last two weeks he raised his average to .298 with one homer and 12 RBI.

Huskies Hungry For Title

NEW YORK (AP) — The Connecticut Huskies are getting greedy.

"We've done a lot this year, but we want a little bit more," freshman Murray Williams said after the Huskies beat Virginia Commonwealth to advance to tonight's National Invitation Tournament semifinal against Boston College at Madison Square Garden.

"This is a fairy tale come true right now. There's no way I could ever have imagined this last year when I signed to play at UConn."

Last season, the Huskies went 9-19 under first-year Coach Jim Calhoun. This year, Calhoun has guided the team to an 18-14 record, including NIT victories over West Virginia, Louisiana Tech and VCU.

"You do really feel good for the kids," Calhoun said. "We've made them run hills. We've screamed and yelled. This pays them back for all the hard work. And it teaches the young players what they have to do."

Connecticut split two games with Boston College this season, with each Big East team winning on its home court.

"We've played five times the last two seasons," BC Coach Jim O'Brien said. "Maybe one of those games was well-played. The rest were sloppy. I hope we can put on a better show this time."

Boston College, 18-13, finished seventh in the Big East, while Connecticut was ninth and last. But both teams did well outside the league, the Eagles going 12-2, the Huskies 13-1.

"Of our 14 losses this year, 12 of them have come against people in the NCAA or NIT," Calhoun said.

The other NIT semifinal, Ohio State against Colorado State, matches coaches familiar with Madison Square Garden.

Boyd Grant of Colorado State coached Fresno State to the NIT title in 1983. Gary Williams of Ohio State was at Boston College for four years before taking the Buckeyes job two years ago.

Grant left Fresno State after the 1986 season and took a year off before returning to his alma mater.

The Rams, 21-12, advanced to the NIT semifinal with victories over

New Orleans, Houston and Arkansas State.

"It's the biggest thing that ever happened to our school," Grant said of the 64-49 victory over Arkansas State. "It's bigger than New Year's Eve."

Colorado State is led by Pat Durham, a 6-foot-8 junior forward. He is averaging 23.3 points a game during the tournament, four points above his season average.

Ohio State, 19-12, beat Old Dominion, Cleveland State and New Mexico to advance to the NIT Final Four.

Williams, who took Boston College to the NCAA round of 16 twice and to the final eight once, said his postseason success may be due to his teams' style of play.

GGO Announces Its 1988 Field

GREENSBORO (AP) — Six of the 10 PGA touring professionals who have won tournaments in 1988 are entered in this week's K mart Greater Greensboro Open at Forest Oaks Country Club.

Steve Pate, who has won twice this year, heads the list of 1988 winners that also includes Sandy Lyle, Lanny Wadkins, Chip Beck and Joey Sindelar. Commitments for the GGO, which will begin Thursday, closed at 6 p.m. Sunday.

Twelve of the current top 20 money winners are also in the field, headed by Beck, who ranks No. 2 with $302,657 after a tie for 11th at the Players Championship Sunday.

Rams, Vandiford Stop Goldsboro

SNOW HILL — Greene Central High School scored two runs on a homer by Alan Vandiford in the bottom of the seventh inning to take a 9-7 baseball win over Goldsboro Monday afternoon.

The Rams took the initial lead in the game in the first inning, scoring twice. T.J. Johnson and Anthony Jones led off with walks and both moved up on an infield out. Tommy Eason's infield grounder scored Johnson and Cornelius Hill doubled to drive in Jones.

Greene Central scored one in the third before Goldsboro got two in the fourth. Greene Central got one in the bottom of the inning, but Goldsboro scored two more in the fifth to tie it at 4-4. The Rams went back out with two in the bottom of the frame, but the Cougars, helped along by a run-scoring triple by Carlos Midgett, scored three times in the sixth to power out to a 7-6 lead.

Greene Central rallied for one in the bottom of the sixth to tie it up once again, 6-6.

Then, in the seventh, Walt Tyndall reached on an error, stole up and scored when Vandiford homered to win the game.

Hill led the Ram hitting with three while Cedric Collins had two.

The Rams climb to 4-1 on the year and travel to North Pitt on Friday for their first Eastern Plains Conference action of the year.

FARMVILLE — West Craven went ahead early and never trailed as the Eagles handed the Jaguars an 8-3 loss Monday in high school baseball action.

The Eagles pushed across two runs in the first, one in the second and three more in the third to take a 6-0 lead.

Farmville tried to rally in the fourth, pushing across three runs.

Jeff Tyson started things off when he singled and stole second. Howard Collins and Monte King followed with consecutive walks. Chris Ross then walked, to score Tyson. Billy Barnhill hit into a double play, allowing Collins to score. Eddie Little then singled in Ross.

But that was as close as the Jaguars would get as West Craven added two runs in the fifth to complete the scoring.

David Boyd went 2-4 with a double and two RBI to lead West Craven. Darrin Bizzell also went 2-4.

Farmville falls to 3-2 and returns to action at home today against D.H. Conley.

Rose Girls Gain 113-17 Track Win

Rose High School's girls romped to a 113-17 victory in track Monday afternoon.

The Ramettes won all but two events — not including the 3,200-meter relay, which was not held.

Angeline Mills won two events for Rose, the lone and triple jumps and was the only double winner of the day.

"We are beginning to do a little better in some of the running events, thanks to the weather," Coach Dennis Gibson said. "The field events should start being consistent as soon as more emphasis is applied to technique."

Rose, now 2-1, returns to action at Kinston on Wednesday.

Eastern Wayne.....83

D.H. Conley.....54

GOLDSBORO — Eastern Wayne High School dominated the sprints and gained an 83-54 victory over the D.H. Conley girls in a non-conference track meet Monday.

Conley failed to place in either the 100, 200 or 400 meter dashes, staking Eastern to a lead the Valkyries could not overcome.

Conley had one double winner on the afternoon as Angie Baker won the high and triple jumps.

Overall, Eastern won nine individual events while Conley took four. The two teams split the four relays, each winning one.

Conley, now 2-3, travels to East Carteret on Thursday.

Producers Dueling Over Rescue Film

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — Movie producers dueling for the rights to the Jessica McClure rescue will pitch their proposals to a committee charged with deciding who will tell the dramatic story.

Mayor Carroll Thomas said Monday he will appoint a citizens' committee to intervene in the squabble between two rescuers' groups about which producer will film the story of the girl's rescue from an abandoned well.

The five-person committee will review all proposals from producers who have submitted them, although only one deal has been made so far.

Thomas said the commitment that one rescuers' association has with Los Angeles producer Larry Spivey, president of Highland Communications Group Inc., will not mean that his proposal gets preferential treatment from the committee.

"The only consideration is that Highland will be one of the companies considered," the mayor said Monday.

Those involved in the rescue have formed two associations, one of mostly municipal workers and another of volunteers, each with its own idea about who should film the story.

"The other two committees have indicated that they will yield to (the citizens' committee's) decision," Thomas said. "Both groups have been saying they want what's best for the community."

The Jessica McClure Rescuer's Association, a group of more than 30 volunteers, committed to a contract with Spivey that includes an initial payment of $200,000, plus future revenues to be divided among members, said Kragg Robinson, the association's president.

The other 11-member group, the McClure Rescue Association, has not yet made a deal with a producer, but says it doesn't want to work with Spivey.

Jessica, who turned 2 years old this past Saturday, was pulled from the well last October after being wedged inside it for 58 hours. The rescue was televised live nationwide.

The McClures' attorney, Darrell Smith of Midland, again said the family won't stand in the way of a movie.

"They also wouldn't insist on making one if it wasn't in the best interests of the town," he said.

Basso Hines Keeps Busy Off Stage

L.A. Times-Washington Post

Jerome Hines has performed for more consecutive seasons than any principal artist with the Metropolitan Opera. The statistics: 41 seasons; 595 performances at the Met's Manhattan house; more than 800 including tour stops. His huge, plush bass has powered the Grand Inquisitor, Guernemanz, Phillip II, Boris Godunov and 41 other characters.

But the basso's Met value has diminished lately. While Hines performed with the Met 27 times in 1983-'84, he appeared only once in each of the last three seasons. His association with the opera company, he says, "is on ice now. I'm on a leave of absence." There was no "Macbeth" for him this season.

The record may be over, but the busy career continues. At 66, an age when most opera principals are teaching, writing memoirs and generally saving their voices, Hines still sings robustly across the United States.

A booming voice helped win Hines his first Met contract in 1946; he debuted that season as the Sergeant in "Boris Godunov." His towering height (6 feet 6½ inches) and forceful, personal characterizations led to a 1954 assignment as the Met's first American-born Boris. Eight years later, he portrayed the czar in a rare — for a non-Russian — one-night stand at the Bolshoi Opera in Moscow.

"Boris Godunov" has been very good to Hines. In 1975, four years after being dropped temporarily from the Met roster, he made a big splash in a company production featuring Mussorgsky's original orchestration and dramatic sequences. For about 15 years, he spiced recitals — a normally placid showcase — with the czar's costume, makeup, turbulence and grand, athletic death tumble.

"I was constantly socked by critics because I acted," Hines said in a recent telephone interview. "But I was an opera singer who sang recitals, not a recitalist who happened to sing opera."

Not all of Hines' most notable accomplishments have been secular, or live. His "I Am the Way," a rare opera on the life of Christ, has been staged many times over the last 20 years. Hines reports that this year an opera company will sponsor it for the first time.

Hines the educator is training young singers for professional operatic careers. This year his Opera and Music Theater Institute of New Jersey is testing vocalists in showcases around the state. Ten singers, chosen from approximately 400 applicants and 150 finalists, will perform in venues large (3,000 seats) and medium-sized (800), with and without orchestra and chorus, in complete and abridged operas.

'Young, Restless' Marks 15th Year

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Soap opera mogul Bill Bell had a producer on the phone, was doing running commentary on the action on two TV monitors, and was adroitly fielding questions on the 15th anniversary of "The Young and the Restless."

Bell looked deceptively calm in the eye of the storm, but it was Bell generating the hurricane whirling about his penthouse office atop CBS' Television City.

He is the executive producer, head writer and co-creator, with his wife, Lee Phillip Bell, of "The Young and the Restless" and "The Bold and the Beautiful."

At 15, "Y&R," as he usually calls it, is running neck and neck in the Nielsen ratings with ABC's "General Hospital" as the most popular daytime show. "The Bold and the Beautiful," which just passed its first anniversary, was in ninth place in the ratings.

"I think we brought a new approach to daytime programming because we featured young people," Bell said of "Y&R." "It's a very contemporary show and we make good use of music and closeups in ways that hadn't been used before. Our stories are provocative. I won't say sensual because that would give the wrong impression, but sometimes they are."

Bell said he is in good shape to weather the strike of the Writers Guild of America, provided it's settled soon. He has scripts for six weeks of "The Young and the Restless" and five weeks of "The Bold and the Beautiful." In addition, he has several weeks of shows already taped. They are taped far in advance to get them overseas.

As he talked to his visitor, Bell relayed instructions to producers on the sets and commented on the taping and the actors on the screen.

Bell watched a young actor on the monitor for "The Bold and the Beautiful." The actor was Ethan Wayne, the son of late film legend John Wayne. "Can you think of a better place for a young actor to train?" Bell asked. "They get new material every day, filled with conflicts and romance, and they get stretched every way possible."

Later, daughter Lauralee Bell came on the screen. She plays Cricket on "Y&R." One son, Bradley, is a script writer, and another, Bill, runs business affairs for "The Bold and the Beautiful."

Bell, a former Chicago advertising executive and writer for other daytime serials, was lured away from his job as head writer of NBC's "Days of Our Lives" to create a new show for CBS.

"Fred Silverman was the head of CBS programming then and he paid me more to quit 'Days of Our Lives' than I was getting paid to do it," he said.

"Lee had her own show in Chicago and I went back to Chicago. There we were staring at a blank sheet of paper. We did 70 pages, which took

'Shoeless Joe' Film Scheduled

DUBUQUE, Iowa (AP) — Kevin Costner and James Earl Jones will star in the movie "Shoeless Joe," about the disgraced baseball great "Shoeless Joe" Jackson, a producer says.

The movie is based on a novel by W.P. Kinsella about a ghostly return by Jackson, said associate producer Brian Frankish, who produced the "Max Headroom" TV series and the movie "The Boy Who Could Fly."

"We have a really magical film here," Frankish said at a news conference Monday.

Frankish, Gov. Terry Branstad and Dubuque Area Chamber of Commerce officials toasted the film with champagne glasses of Dubuque Star Brewery's Erlanger beer.

Jackson, a Chicago White Sox player, was kicked out of major league baseball for his part in the 1919 "Black Sox" scandal after an investigation found that the team threw the series to the Cincinnati Reds on the orders of gamblers.

Filming in the Dubuque area will begin after Memorial Day, Frankish said.

the story through the first two years."

Soap operas are difficult to establish because viewers are reluctant to break their viewing habits. Bell had hoped that "The Young and the Restless" would make a breakthrough, but when the ratings failed to climb he grew impatient and asked CBS to take it off the air.

"It wasn't doing as well as I thought it should," he said. "But Fred Silverman showed me ratings figures that convinced me to stay with it. It took the show a year and a half to get established."

"When you have a long-running show the audience grows older with the show," said Bell. "The Young and the Restless" was the first show to turn that around and attract a young audience for CBS."

In 1980 Bell did something that was unprecedented in daytime television.

The show had begun with the focus on two families, the Fosters and the Brooks. Several young actors decided to leave the show and it began to affect the two families.

"After one young actress told me she was leaving I knew it would be a mortal blow to try to replace her," he said. "I'd already had to replace several other actors. What I did was gradually move the focus from the Fosters and the Brooks and brought in two new families, the Abbotts and the Williamses."

"It was a fascinating thing, but we were also scared. We didn't know if it would work. But the audience stayed with us and the show has grown in the ratings."

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY March 30

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Don't try to force your views on anyone; avoid this, especially, with people in positions of power. Don't let yourself become confused.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Don't neglect your daily duties or other responsibilities in order to get involved in some recreation which is really not worthwhile.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): You should concentrate on a personal matter, and not let a small business affair take up your time. Be loyal to your friends.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): If a disagreement develops between a superior and a business partner, don't be afraid to stand behind your own opinions.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Although you have much work to do, it may be a good idea to take some time to find the data you need to get through it more quickly.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Be very cautious where finances are concerned. Avoid expensive entertainments, for starters, and don't get involved in any risky ventures.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): If you must meet with a person who tends to act rather hastily, don't meet in your home. An outside meeting would prevent trouble.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Ignore the complaints of a discontented co-worker, and carry through with your plans just as you have arranged them.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Forget unimportant practical affairs for a while, and concentrate on improving a talent you possess that can help you to be more successful.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): This is not a good time to just sit around and vegetate, as you could miss some great opportunities. Visit some good friends tonight.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Put more enthusiasm and energy into your activities, and you'll receive some fine benefits. Catch up on your correspondence tonight.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): If you get involved in an argument between a good friend and a financial expert, you will more than likely end up being the loser.

The bidding:

 1 ♠ Pass Pass 4 ♥
 Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠
 We have warned repeatedly about the danger of taking a finesse simply because it is available. All too often a superior line exists, but it is ignored because of the lure of a finesse.

The fact that West's opening bid was passed round to him made South sure that he could expect to find some help in his partner's hand. His decision to bid four hearts was a practical solution to an awkward bidding problem.

West led the king of spades, then shifted to the king of diamonds at rick two, and South wasted little time in going down. He took his ace, cashed the ace of trumps and entered dummy with a trump to the jack. A club finesse lost, and West cashed the queen of diamonds and continued with the ten. Declarer ruffed, but he had no way of avoiding the loss of another club trick for down one.

In his haste to take the club finesse, declarer overlooked the possibility that he could set up his game-going trick—in the enemy suit! After winning the ace of diamonds, declarer should enter dummy with a trump to the eight to lead the jack of spades. When East does not cover, instead of ruffing declarer should discard his diamond loser. No matter what West returns, declarer wins, enters dummy with a trump to the jack, in the process drawing the remaining trump, and perseveres with the ten of spades, discarding a club loser from hand.

West can win his ace, but the table's nine of spades is now high, and the remaining trump serves as the entry. Declarer can discard his last club loser to fulfill his contract, conceding only three spade tricks!

Drug Dealer Ordered To Repay $2 Million

NEW YORK (AP) — A judge ordered a wealthy heroin dealer to pay $2.2 million in restitution to the city's drug users, in what is considered the first such use of a state law that allows crime victims to be compensated.

The money will be given to a drug rehabilitation agency chosen by Mayor Edward I. Koch, said state Supreme Court Justice Lewis Douglass.

The judge said after the Monday court hearing in Brooklyn that the $2.2 million figure was based on the cost of treating about 900 heroin addicts for one year.

Douglass said it was the first time a section of the state penal law that allows restitution to be paid to crime victims was used in a drug case, although the practice occurs on the federal level.

"I hope this sets a precedent," he said.

When the defendant, Agapito Lopez, was arrested in 1985, police officers seized six ounces of heroin.

According to the judge's calculations, if those six ounces had made it to the street, the drugs would have been used by 898 heroin addicts who would have bought 20 bags each of heroin.

Douglass said he contacted numerous drug rehabilitation agencies to find out what the least expensive cost per person was for treatment. He was told it was $2,400 annually for out-patient care.

The judge multiplied the cost by the number of drug users to get the restitution figure.

Defense attorney Frank Ortiz said in court he would appeal the order. He argued that when the state Legislature approved the restitution law, it only contemplated crimes where there was a specific victim, like robbery or rape.

He also argued that the law requires a hearing to be held for any payment more than $10,000.

Lopez, 44, was convicted March 5, 1987, of numerous counts of drug sale and possession. According to Nancy Young, a spokeswoman for Brooklyn District Attorney Elizabeth Holtzman, Lopez sold 2,200 bags of heroin to an undercover officer for $26,000 between June and August of 1985.

Douglass sentenced Lopez in May 1987 to 25 years to life in prison and fined him $52,000, twice the amount of the actual heroin sale.

Black Patriots Bill Signed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fund raising for a proposed $4 million memorial to black Revolutionary War patriots will begin soon since President Reagan has approved placing the monument in the city's main tourist district.

Project coordinator Maurice A. Barboza said the memorial would be the first prominently displayed monument in Washington dedicated to blacks.

Barboza said Monday that the president signed legislation Friday permitting the proposed memorial to the 5,000 black veterans to be placed in Area I, which includes the Mall stretching from the Capitol to the Lincoln Memorial, the grassy Ellipse behind the White House, Lafayette Park and West Potomac Park.

The next step will be to study specific site plans being developed by three architectural firms and submitting the best one to the National Capital Memorial Commission, Barboza said.

The commission and other agencies must recommend a site before it goes to the Secretary of Interior for final approval.

Construction of the memorial must begin by the end of 1991 under an authorizing measure signed into law in late 1986. Barboza said July 4, 1991, is the target date for construction to begin.

Barboza predicted the memorial would cost about $4 million and said he hoped to announce a major fund-raising effort within several months.

Barboza said he hopes to build the black patriots memorial on the Mall near the Lincoln Memorial, Washington Monument and Constitution Gardens.

Legislation allowing the construction of the memorial was enacted in 1986, but another measure was needed to allow it to be built in the city's monument-crowded Area I. That complex procedure was established by officials who worried that the city's prime tourist areas would become cluttered with memorials.

Poe Book Found

NEW YORK (AP) — A rare first edition of Edgar Allan Poe's first book, a collection of poetry written when he was 14, is to be auctioned by Sotheby's, which calls it "the most exciting book discovery in many years."

In the 161 years since its publication, only 11 other copies of "Tamerlane and Other Poems" have been found. Published in 1827 by an obscure Boston printer when the poet, short story writer and critic was 18, it could bring as much as $300,000 at auction on June 7.

This 12th copy of the book was discovered in a bin of early 20th-century pamphlets on fertilizers and farming machines by a Massachusetts book collector while he browsed at an antique barn in New Hampshire. The price was $15.

Recognizing the title from an article he had once read, the collector contacted Sotheby's for an inspection and appraisal.

The Massachusetts man, who collects books on local history, said he suspected it might be an original when he found it, though he wasn't sure. He had the book only one night before turning it over to Sotheby's.

Poe, who was born in Boston in 1809, orphaned when he was 11 and raised in Richmond, Va., had the volume published during a short visit to Boston.

The literary importance of the 40-page book, which names the author only as "A Bostonian," is considered negligible; rather, the work's value has to do with the fact that it's the first work of one of America's greatest writers and a limited number of copies were printed.

The softbound book has its original, tea-colored paper wrappers and is in unrestored condition.

Reagans Leasing Home In L.A.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and his wife will lease a $2.5 million estate in the luxurious Bel Air district of Los Angeles, the White House says.

Elaine Crispin, press secretary to first lady Nancy Reagan, said the Reagans signed a lease and mailed it within the last 10 days. Mrs. Crispin said she did not know the amount of lease payments.

The 1 1/4-acre estate is owned by Wall Management Services, a group of about 20 friends of the Reagans who bought it with them in mind.

The three-year agreement gives the Reagans the option to renew the lease or purchase the property, which includes a secluded house with 6,500 feet of living space and a pool.

Wall Management bought the estate on Aug. 21, 1986, from a 90-year-old woman who the investors said would lease it back from them until the Reagans were ready for it. Mrs. Crispin said the previous owner has since died.

FDIC May Lose Funds On Bailout

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal fund that insures deposits in commercial banks may lose money this year for the first time in its history, but any shrinkage likely would be less than 5 percent, the head of the fund says.

Whether the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. loses money depends on how much it costs the government to rescue First RepublicBank Corp. of Dallas, FDIC chairman L. William Seidman told reporters Monday.

The deterioration of Texas banks, hard hit by losses on real estate and energy loans, has raised concern about the health of the fund, which backs deposits of up to $100,000 in 13,700 commercial banks.

Earlier this month, the FDIC pumped $1 billion into First RepublicBank, the largest bank company in Texas, to stem a run on deposits.

Seidman said in a luncheon speech it is too soon to tell how much more it will cost to fully restore the bank's health. But he said published estimates of $5 billion to $6 billion are "far higher than anything likely to be required."

A better guide, he said, would be the $1.7 billion it cost the government in 1984 to rescue Continental Illinois Bank & Trust Co., which was about the same size as First RepublicBank.

If the bailout is in that range and if banks, as expected, fail at about the same rate as last year, then the FDIC's 1988 loss would be "something under 5 percent ... certainly under ... $1 billion," Seidman said.

He said he did not see any prospect for what he termed a substantial loss, one approaching 20 percent, or about $3.5 billion.

Last year, the FDIC posted a slight increase even though a post-Depression record of 184 banks failed. Forty-four banks have failed so far this year and Seidman said he expected the 1988 total to be roughly the same as 1987.

As failures have increased, the steady growth of the FDIC fund — from $4.6 billion in 1970, to $11.6 billion in 1980 and $17.9 billion in 1985 — has slowed. The fund finished 1986 with $18.2 billion and 1987 with $18.3 billion.

Seidman contrasted the relatively healthy condition of the FDIC fund with that of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., which insures deposits in 3,170 savings institutions.

FSLIC was insolvent until last fall, when money began flowing from congressionally authorized bond sales. It has had to keep bankrupt S&Ls open because it lacked the money to pay off depositors.
