Postal Rates Going Up Sunday

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer
Greenville residents may soon find themselves with a mailbox full of "junk mail," according to a local postal official.
Van VanDyke, superintendent of postal operations in Greenville, said bulk business mailers will likely try to get out large amounts of circulars before the rate increase on Sunday.
"Historically, that has been the case with the two rate increases that I have been involved in," he said.
Effective Sunday, business mailers will experience an approximate 25 percent increase for advertising material.

In addition, the cost of a first class stamp will jump nearly 15 percent, from 22 cents to 25 cents.
Because there would not be time to print enough first class stamps with the 25-cent denomination, the postal service is currently distributing special "E" stamps to carry the first class mail.
VanDyke said the "E" stamps, which have no marked denomination, initially went on sale March 23. Initial local supplies sold much faster than expected, causing VanDyke to reorder more from the Raleigh headquarters.
"We'll sell many more this week before the rate change goes into effect," he said.

With the new shipment of first class stamps arriving today, VanDyke said the Greenville Post Office has over 1 million of the new stamps and is in little danger of running short of demand.
"I'm also well stocked in makeup stamps," he added, referring to small denomination stamps such as the three-cent stamp which can be used to supplement prior denomination amounts to meet new mailing costs.
VanDyke said the post office will not exchange old denominations for new ones. People will have to purchase and use the "makeup" stamps to cover the cost increase.

Currently not available at the Greenville Post Office are envelopes and post cards featuring the new rate increases. VanDyke said they have been ordered and should be available within the next few weeks.
He expressed doubt the Greenville Post Office would experience problems distributing new stamps to people in light of recent window hour cutbacks.
"We would have more people work the windows if the situation warranted," he said.

French Fighter Crashes, Explodes Near West German Nuclear Plant

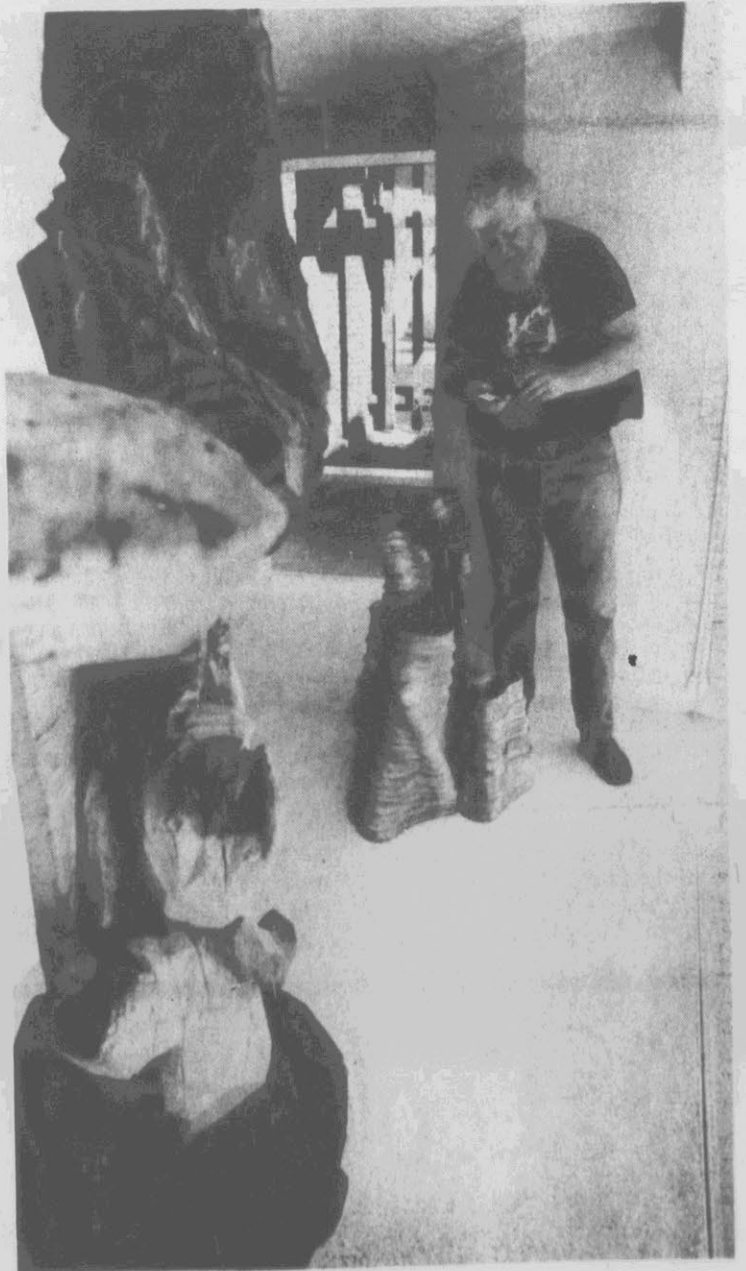

LANDSHUT, West Germany (AP) — A French jet fighter plane crashed and exploded today in a wooded area about a mile from a nuclear power plant, killing the pilot, officials said.
There was no danger of a nuclear accident from the crash, said Alfons Metzger, a spokesman for the state of Bavaria's Interior Ministry.
The Mirage jet fighter went down at 9:20 a.m. near the Isar nuclear power plant located at the village of Ohu, said police in the nearby city of Landshut. It burst into flames and exploded on impact, a police spokesman said.
He said wreckage was scattered over a wide area.

Munich on the Isar River, which runs through the Bavarian capital.
The plane had taken off from the Strasbourg-Entzheim air base in the suburbs of Strasbourg and was on a "totally routine, low-altitude mission," according to a French air force spokesman, who spoke on condition of anonymity in line with regulations. The identity of the pilot was not released.
Aircraft are normally barred from flying over nuclear power plants in West Germany, Metzger said.
Still, the two-reactor facility is built to resist damage in plane crashes, plant officials said.
"There was no danger at the power plant," said Edith Volz, a spokeswoman for the state-run

Bavarian Utilities in Munich. "The complex is protected by heavy concrete walls and the reactors are safe from plane crashes."
France has military forces based in West Germany and its military aircraft frequently fly training missions over West German territory.

The Mirage, a multipurpose jet fighter, normally carries only one pilot.
The 870-megawatt Isar I nuclear reactor began producing electricity in 1977. Isar II, a 1,300-megawatt reactor, is not yet on-line, officials said.

The plant is 35 miles northeast of

NEW LIFE FOR DOWNTOWN — A series of art shows and displays in the store windows of vacant downtown buildings are adding a note of new life to the Downtown Mall and nearby downtown areas. The first in the series to be installed is a show of art by sculpture students of the East Carolina University School of Art. Faculty member Norman Keller is shown at work Tuesday installing a show in a window at the Blount-Harvey Building. Jack Steelman, director of Evergreen, said that organization, the Downtown Greenville Association, ECU and various civic and public groups will install displays in the show windows of several stores. U.S. Hints At Military Action

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is raising the prospect that the U.S. military may be used to protect the estimated 50,000 American citizens in Panama against possible harassment by that country's security forces.
White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater appeared to open the door to that possibility Tuesday after an incident the previous evening in which Panamanian troops confiscated the tapes of four U.S. television networks and briefly detained several American journalists.

Discussing the harassment against Americans, Fitzwater said, "It has always been a principle that we will protect American citizens as best we can and, while we have said that we don't plan to go in militarily, it's also important to note that there are limits."
But when President Reagan met with senior advisers Tuesday afternoon to discuss the Panama situation, use of military force was not discussed, according to an administration official who asked not to be identified.

The official said other options were discussed for bringing pressure to bear on Panamanian strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega, the de facto head of what the United States considers to be an illegal government.
It was not clear whether Fitzwater's comments represented a genuine re-evaluation of U.S. policy or were part of the continuing war of nerves between the administration and Panama's military-dominated government.

One major deterrent to military intervention is that any such move would generate a hostile reaction throughout Latin America. Most delegates attending a conference of Latin American representatives in Venezuela on Monday and Tuesday called for the U.S. to exercise restraint.

Byrd Says Meese Should Resign

Related story on A-13

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd called today for the resignation of Attorney General Edwin Meese III, calling Meese "the crown jewel of the sleaze factor in Reagan administration history."
"He ought to get out," Byrd, D-W.Va., told reporters. "The country cannot have confidence in the Justice Department when the top law enforcement officer obviously has to spend an inordinate amount of his time defending himself."
"He should be spending his time fighting the war on drugs, crime," Byrd said.

Deputy Attorney General Arnold Burns, Assistant Attorney General William Weld and four of their aides abruptly resigned on Tuesday. Burns and Weld offered little public explanation, but told associates they were concerned that the nearly year-long criminal probe of Meese is hurting the entire Justice Department, according to several department sources, speaking on condition of anonymity.

"I don't really see how he (Meese) can expect to continue to lead the department after resignations and circumstances like this," former Attorney General Elliot Richardson said on the CBS show "This Morning."
"This man is the head of the chief legal agency, the law enforcement agency of the United States government. And there comes a point at which the mere fact that he is not indicted is insufficient," said Richardson.

Byrd opened his regular morning meeting with reporters by saying:

Rate Rising

The Greenville Utilities Commission board approved a gas rate increase Tuesday night to track through an 8.5 percent rate increase from GUC's wholesale supplier, North Carolina Natural Gas.
Malcolm Green, GUC's general manager, said the increase, effective April 1, will add about $2.16 per month to the average residential gas customer's bill.
The new rate for residential customers will be 68 cents per hundred cubic feet, a 5.6 percent increase from the present 64.4 cents per 100 cubic feet, while the new rate for interruptible gas customers will be 59 cents per 100 cubic feet, up 6.5 percent from the present 55.4 cents per 100 cubic feet.

Walkout Cripples Soviet Plants

MOSCOW (AP) — Officials appealed to workers to end a walkout that has shut or crippled factories in a disputed southern region, but many pledged to stay home until the government bends to their demands, reports said today.
"People are sitting home, home, without noise and without demonstrations," a resident of Stepanakert, the main city of the disputed Nagorno-Karabakh region, said in a telephone interview today.
A bread factory, stores, medical institutions and other essential services were operating, but many facories still were shut down, said the man who answered the telephone at the official newspaper Sovetsky Karabakh.

"People say they are going to stay away until they get a decision from the government in their favor," said the man, who said he was not a journalist but refused to give further information about himself.
He said he could not estimate the number of people who were staying away from work. Reports in the official press provided information about the situation earlier in the week.

Constant appeals by authorities to get people to return to work received mixed results, said reports in the newspapers, which in recent days have been providing wide coverage to the walkout.
Newspaper reports said 120 of about 1,500 people showed up for work at a shoe factory Monday morning, an insufficient number to run the plant.
"We're only two or three steps from catastrophe," plant director Vasily Atadzhanyan told the labor newspaper Trud. "We will pay huge fines for not fulfilling our obligations to our customers. We say directly: not coming to work is sabotage."

Officials have warned that workers who stay away from their jobs are hurting themselves and will not convince government and Communist Party authorities to take the predominantly Armenian region away from the Azerbaijan republic and annex it to neighboring Armenia.
Instead, authorities have unveiled a plan to spend up to $640 million to improve social and economic conditions in Nagorno-Karabakh.

Theft Arrests

Greenville police have arrested four people in connection with three theft cases reported to the department.

Sgt. T.V. Woolard said Tuesday that Robert Michael Etheridge, 32, of Route 1, Wilson, and George Fountain Williams, 32, of Wilson were arrested March 19 on possession of stolen property charges.

Woolard said the charges stemmed from the theft of a car from Joe Pecheles Volkswagen Inc. on Greenville Boulevard that was reported on Jan. 30.

Officer B.M. Highland said Jasper Earl Mills, 26, of 116 Howard Circle was arrested Monday on a charge of robbery with a dangerous weapon in connection with the theft of money from a Pizza Transit Authority deliveryman in the 400 block of Roundtree Drive on Jan. 28.

Officer E.E. Laughinghouse said Michael Wayne Heath, 22, of B28 Glendale Court was arrested on a possession of stolen property charge Tuesday. The officer said the charge stemmed from the theft of a ring from 1002 E. Third St. on March 20.

among them $1,550 worth of radio equipment from a car parked at Wilson Acres, were reported to the department Tuesday.

Officer S.C. Locke said the radio equipment — including a radio-compact disc player, equalizer, amplifier and other items — were taken in an incident reported at 10:46 a.m.

Officer L.R. Kepler said 12 cartons of cigarettes and $20 in cash were taken from Shawn's Grocery at 1706 Garland St. in a break-in reported at 7:09 a.m.

Officer B.M. Highland said a wallet containing $10 in cash was taken from the Sav-A-Center at Greenville Square Shopping Center in an incident reported at 12:15 p.m., while Officer D.C. Johnson said two brass statues valued at $109 were taken from Heilig-Meyers furniture store at 518 Greenville Blvd. in an incident reported at 6:59 p.m.

Officer J.K. McCarthy said an estimated $241 worth of clothing was taken from 900 W. Third St. in an incident reported at 8:10 p.m., while Officer S.R. Ward said $3 worth of food was taken from 1627 S. Pitt St. in a break-in reported at 9:30 p.m.

More than 210,000 pounds of ham, 168,000 pounds of potatoes, 84,000 cans of vegetables and 42,000 loaves of bread will be delivered to the families on Thursday, K mart said.

Rose High Project

The Interclub Council of Rose High School recently donated over 500 daffodils to the cafeteria and various classrooms in order to beautify the school setting.

Through their contribution to the American Cancer Society, the ICC was able to distribute daffodils to announce the annual spring beautification project.

The project, coordinated by Sonya Daniels, ICC president, has been set for Thursday after school. The planting of shrubbery and grass was made possible by a donation of soil by Harvey Lewis of E.R. Lewis Construction Co.

Campaign Treasurer

Wilton R. Duke, Democrat candidate for the Pitt County Board of Commissioners from District C, has announced that Dr. Frank Longino Sr., a retired Greenville physician, has accepted appointment as treasurer of the Duke for Commissioner campaign. Dr. Longino practiced medicine in Pitt County since 1956.

District C includes Arthur, Farmville, Falkland and Fountain, and parts of Winterville and eight Greenville precincts.

Drug Charge

Julius Graham, 34, of Woodridge, Va., was arrested by Greenville police Monday on a possession of heroin charge.

Detective D.R. Best said the charge against Graham stemmed from a March 3, 1987, incident at 1301 Ward St.

Property Stolen

Greenville police said six thefts,

Shoplifting Count

Dorothy Alexander Lamb, 49, of 6A Riverside was arrested on a shoplifting charge by Greenville police Tuesday.

Officer W.T. McCarter said Ms. Lamb was charged in connection with the theft of eight packages of steak from Kroger Sav-On at 600 Greenville Blvd. in an incident reported at 7:03 p.m.

Motorcycle Found

Greenville police said a motorcycle was reported taken from 422 W. Fifth St. early today but later recovered from a vacant lot behind 413 Bonners Lane.

Officer K.L. Jones said the motorcycle was reported missing at 12:56 a.m.

Attempted Rape

Thomas Ray Streeter, 20, of 1505 Myrtle Ave. was arrested by Greenville police on an attempted rape charge about 2:06 a.m. today, according to Officer B.W. Lewis.

Lewis said Streeter was charged in connection with an incident reported to the department about 10:14 p.m. Friday.

Detective J.E. Harris said Streeter was charged with entering a home in his neighborhood and attempting to assault a 16-year-old girl who was asleep in her bedroom.

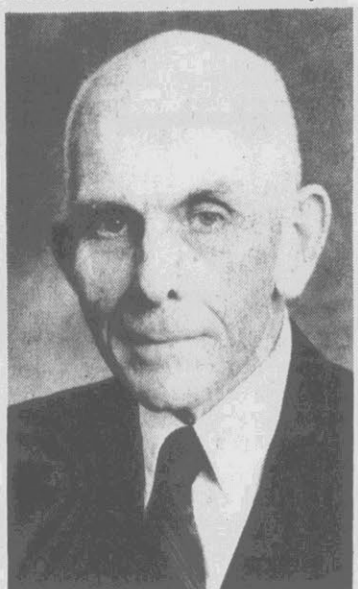

Symposium At ECU

Korea, the host country for the 1988 Summer Olympic games, will be the topic for a symposium April 7 at East Carolina University.

The 14th symposium on Asia, "The Far East in Transition: Focus on Korea," will begin at 2 p.m. in Room 1032 of the new classroom building. At 7:30 p.m. Dr. Donald McDonald of the School of Foreign Service at Georgetown University will deliver the keynote presentation in Room 1031 of the new facility.

McDonald, a research professor of Korea studies, will discuss "South Korea: The Future of Democracy."

DONALD MCDONALD

Afternoon presentations beginning at 2 p.m. include "Security for the Olympiad and Inter-Korea Relations" by Dr. Han Shick Park of the University of Georgia. He will be followed by Thomas Dunlop of the U.S. State Department on "The United States and the Two Koreas in Transition."

Mary Helen Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walker Allen Jr. of Greenville, was inducted as a member of Mortar Board in a ceremony Sunday in Belk Chapel at Queens College, Charlotte.

Miss Allen is a member of Tri Beta, a national biology honor society, and serves as a group leader for Interservice Christian Fellowship and as vice president of Kappa Delta sorority.

Jones Endorsement

U.S. Rep. Walter B. Jones was endorsed recently by the National Education Association and the North Carolina Association of Educators.

Jones, an incumbent Democrat, is seeking re-election to a new term in Congress.

The endorsement and the presentation of a check for $2,000 was made at Jones' Farmville headquarters by NCAE Government Relations Committee member Eliza Fields of New Bern and congressional contact team members Jackie Wooten of Bethel and Deborah Ivey of Garysburg.

Dentist Starts Drive To Help Ailing Kids

A Greenville dentist has started an organization to grant wishes for terminally ill children in eastern North Carolina and he is giving an Easter egg hunt Saturday to kick off the fund-raising for the project.

The new organization is called Wishing Well of Eastern North Carolina and its founder is Dr. Gary Michels.

"It seemed to me," Michels said, "that it would be neat to have a local group that could speedily grant wishes of children who are seriously or terminally ill, have local people raise the money, and keep it in this area. We talked to some national groups, but none could work with us to establish a local chapter. So we decided to form our own."

He said Robert K. Adams II, director of the East Carolina University School of Medicine's Development and Alumni Affairs office, has agreed to serve as the first volunteer administrator of the organization. A board of directors will be set up soon, he said.

The Easter egg hunt will be held Saturday from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Green Springs Park on East Fifth Street. The hunt will be held in stages, with children aged 2 to 5 participating beginning at 9 a.m.; 6 to 10 year olds from 10 a.m. and 10 to 12 year olds from 11 a.m.

There is no charge for participation in the egg hunt, but pizza, hamburgers, doughnuts and other concessions will be sold at the site, with 100 percent of proceeds going to The Wishing Well, Dr. Michels said.

Hero Was Just Doing His Job

GREENSBORO (AP) — Dennis Ivey says he isn't a hero.

All he did, he says, was spot a house on fire, turn his car around, help an elderly couple away from their burning home, turn off a gas line, then help firefighters prepare hoses to extinguish the blaze.

In short, he did his job.

Ivey, 40, has been a firefighter at the Piedmont Triad International Airport for 18 years. But he proved last Friday that he's on the job — even when he's off.

Ivey and his wife, Saye, were on their way to Carolina Beach when they saw a small, white frame house on fire just south of Monkey Junction, about 10 miles from the beach. They turned to the house, helped an elderly couple to safety, then ran to turn off a propane tank that was leaking gas into the home.

"It was running full force," Ivey said Tuesday, back from his weekend at the beach. "The gas was escaping from a heater inside the house. The man woke up and smelled gas."

The man is Richard Walker, 79, who has trouble walking. Mary, his 74-year-old wife, is blind. The couple were slowly descending a ramp when Ivey approached them.

"We helped them get clear of the fire," Ivey said. He had the help of a neighbor and another passer-by who stopped.

"He aided the fire department in getting the hoses pulled," Elrod said. "Once the other fire units arrived, he kind of backed away from the scene. He didn't have protective clothing."

The Walkers were burned out of their home of 50 years, and are living with their grandson while relatives search for a permanent home. They had no insurance.

Senior Activities

Dates on future activities were announced at a recent luncheon of the Town and Country Senior Citizens.

Members were told that reservations for the visit to Chingqua-Penn Plantation, Reidsville, must be made by April 7, while the deadline for reservations for the Aug. 7 through Aug. 6 trip to Nova Scotia are due by May 1.

Senior Games will be held on the East Carolina University campus April 8-9, and a silent auction will be held April 7 with Pauline Spain as chairman.

For more details on the future trips call Sarah J. Ashton at 752-2912.

Institutes Planned

Five math and science institutes for middle grade school teachers will be held this summer at East Carolina University.

Sponsored by the ECU Science and Mathematics Education Center, the institutes provide special study for teachers who wish to become certified, renew their certificates or update their skills in science and mathematics.

The institutes include: Field Geology, June 20-July 8; Foundational Approaches to Science Teaching, first session June 20-July 1, second session July 11-22; Math 5268 Logo: A Computer Language for Educators, June 23-July 12, and Applied Mathematics for Educators, July 18 through July 29.

For more information contact Dr. Katharine Hodgkin at the ECU Science-Math Education Center, ECU, (757-6885). The deadline for applications is April 8.

St. Peter's Church

St. Peter's Catholic Church will recall the crucifixion, death and resurrection of Christ Friday at 12:15 p.m.

Participants will walk "The Way of the Cross," praying together at each of 15 stations marked along the outdoor route, according to Marlene E.

Hughes. There also will be stations inside the church.

Joyner Holiday

Joyner Library on the East Carolina University campus will be closed Friday for Easter.

Waste Pickup Dates

Saturday recyclable household waste pickup point collections by the city will be held the second Saturday in April since the first Saturday falls during Easter weekend.

The pickup points are the parking lots of Buyers' Market on Memorial Drive, Overton's on Jarvis Street, and Eastgate Shopping Center. Hours are from 8 a.m. until noon. Separated clear glass, colored glass, aluminum cans, newspaper and other mixed paper and cardboard will be collected.

The same materials may also be taken any weekday between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. to the Bell's Fork refuse collection container site off N.C. 43 South. For information call 756-9869 or 830-6354.

Medical Scholarship

The East Carolina University School of Medicine student chapter of the American Medical Women's Association recently collected $1,400 for its scholarship fund.

The money was raised during the association's fall sweatshirt sale.

With assistance from the school's Medical Foundation and the Eastern North Carolina Physician American Medical Women's Association chapter, the student chapter will award a $1,000 scholarship annually to a deserving ECU medical student, said Beverly Harris, chapter president.

ROTC Inspections

The North Pitt High School Junior ROTC recently participated in its bi-annual formal inspection designed to evaluate what the cadets have learned during the program. The inspection was conducted by active duty Army officers.

Formal briefings were presented to the inspecting officers and principal Joshua Potter by the battalion commander and primary staff officers.

Article Published

An article by the Rev. Murphy Davis, a former Greenville resident, has been published in the March edition of "Fellowship" magazine.

Ms. Davis ministers to death row and women prisoners in Georgia. She and her husband, the Rev. Ed Loring, and their daughter live and work in a house of hospitality for the homeless in Atlanta.

The article on "Prison: Housing for the Poor" appears in a magazine published by the Fellowship of Reconciliation.

Ms. Davis is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Thomas M. Davis, former Greenville residents now living in Greensboro.

Club Activity

The Greenville Garden Club has saved items for recycling since the city first began recyclable refuse pickup last September.

Each of the 31 members weighs her paper each month and a tally has been kept by Christine Helms, a club member. She said club members had recycled 7,000 pounds of paper by last month's first Saturday pickup.

The goal for this club year, which ends in May, is six tons, she said.

Spring Revival

A spring revival will be conducted at Mills Chapel Church in Black Jack Monday through April 8 at 7:30 p.m. by evangelist Eugene Joyner and Pastor James Swinson.

Guest churches will include: Monday, Elm Grove Free Will Baptist; Tuesday, Joe's Branch FWB Church; Wednesday, Moyes Chapel FWB Church; Thursday, Sweet Hope FWB Church; and Friday, First Timothy FWB Church.

Panel Nominations

The Farmers Home Administration will begin accepting nominations Tuesday for election of county committee members under new rules that the agency says make it easier for farmers to qualify as candidates and to vote.

The committee decides whether an applicant is eligible for a farm loan.

Two of the three committee members are elected by farmers in the county, and one is appointed by the administration. One of the elected seats is scheduled for June 30.

The Gospel Chorus and the Ever Ready Ushers will accompany the pastor to Friendship FWB Church, Snow Hill, for services at 3 p.m.

Driving Competitions

The East Carolina University portion of the second half of the sixth annual National Collegiate Driving Championships is being held in Greenville today and Thursday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The competitions among college student drivers are taking place in the Allied Health Building parking lot at Greenville and Charles boulevards. The contest challenges students to drive a serpentine rally course marked by pylons. Drivers are scored by clocking the time taken to drive the course, with one second added to the time for each pylon knocked down.

The competitions are hosted by the ECU Student Union Special Events Committee. Nationally, the events are sponsored by the Dodge Division of Chrysler Motors and supported by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration and the National Safety Council "to promote safe driving habits in young drivers."

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Robeson Troubles Merit Attention

Julian Pierce's death was far more than just another murder and its significance extends beyond the apprehension of his killers.

Regardless of the circumstances, the incident was a politically chilling occurrence that articulated the mistrust and prejudice of a community. It appears Pierce was the victim of a domestic squabble, but the fact Robeson County and the state quickly assumed his death was a political assassination brings the nightmare of a community to life.

That supposition is one which send chills down the spine of believers in the American political system. It marks the acknowledgment of a canker — corruption and force — in a system built on freedom of choice.

The incident should be used by Robeson and North Carolina leaders to make a strong statement against a system where violence, not votes, rules. Robeson — and the state — came perilously close to having an event of monumental proportions on its hands.

Now, with the racial turmoil and fears of political browbeating revealed, the state bears a large responsibility for stepping into Robeson County to take a close look at allegations of drug trafficking and a system of power that perpetuates itself through force and intimidation.

Robeson County is not a South Africa, Israel or a Central America. But a parallel exists. Past incidents of lawlessness, along with Pierce's murder, make it clear inequities — coupled by decades of prejudice — have moved the disturbed area to the boiling point. This unrest demands statewide focus.

North Carolina also has an obligation to ensure the citizens of Robeson County the upcoming election in which Pierce was a candidate is a sound one. By law, Joe Freeman Britt, Pierce's opponent, is now the winner. But this procedure is not necessarily in the best interest of the electorate, nor is it fair.

The state's leaders should take whatever steps are necessary, within reason and legal confines, to provide these voters with a choice in a meaningful election.

Julian Pierce was young, intelligent and caring. He was dedicated to justice. But the very system to which Pierce was devoted will fail him if it allows the fears his death exposed to continue unchecked.

If the impact of his murder is not powerful enough to shock a community into intense self-scrutiny and to awaken a state that has taken little note, until now, of the need for active intervention in change, Pierce may as well have been the victim of political assassination.

Welcome Home 82nd Airborne

American military adventures have stretched around the globe since the nation was founded.

Some have been short-lived such as the Spanish-American War. Others have stretched out in years like the Vietnam involvement. What they all have in common is U.S. military men fighting and often dying far away from home.

At times it has been worth it. Few Americans doubted from 1941 to 1945 that the sacrifices were necessary. Even today the prospect of a United States dominated by an Adolph Hitler mentality is too horrible to contemplate. Perhaps dying honorably is preferable to that.

Today the nation can be joyful that the latest military excursion appears to be ending peacefully. Some 800 paratroopers from the 82nd Airborne Division returned from Honduras. Soldiers from Fort Bragg and Fort Ord, Calif. were sent to Honduras by President Reagan after it was reported that Nicaraguan troops had crossed the border in pursuit of Contra rebels.

The U.S. troops went to Honduras on military maneuvers. The intent was clear, however, that this was a show of force to keep the Nicaraguans in line. Anytime force is shown the strong possibility is there that it will be necessary to use it. Fortunately that didn't happen in this case. The Sandinistas and the Contras have agreed upon a ceasefire and the threat to Honduras sovereignty no longer appears imminent.

The American soldiers are returning to their home bases and the nation can hope that with a respite in the shooting, a permanent peace will be worked out in Nicaragua.

U.S. Owes Nicaragua Chance For Peace

'The Sandinistas and the Contras have decided to give peace a chance. The United States, having fueled their war for six years, owes them that opportunity.'

Nicaragua rode a political roller coaster last week — from the brink of wider war, when the United States deployed combat troops to Honduras, to the threshold of peace, when the Sandinistas and the Contras signed a cease-fire agreement in the little border town of Sapoa. These two events, portending such different futures for Central America, spring from the same causes: the essential weakness of the Contras and the Sandinistas' desperate need to staunch their economy's hemorrhaging.

With their military fortunes receding and the Reagan administration drawing to a close, the Contras' dreams of overthrowing the Sandinistas have vanished. Even the patronage of Ronald Reagan has not been enough to guarantee Washington's backing. Twice this year Congress has voted against additional aid, leaving the Contras demoralized at the fickleness of U.S. support.

The Hondurans have also become less hospitable toward the Contra army. They worry that the United States will eventually abandon the Contras, leaving Honduras alone to cope with "the disposal problem." Honduras President Jose Azcona Hoyo's main motive for signing the Central American peace accord last August was the hope that it would lead to the normalization of relations with Nicaragua and the repatriation of the Contras.

When fighting intensified along the Nicaraguan-Honduran border, the Reagan administration saw an opportunity to reassure both Hondurans and Contras that Washington was unwavering in its commitment to the war against Nicaragua. The introduction of front-line U.S. combat forces was tangible proof that Washington would not abandon the fight.

The Nicaraguan "invasion" of Honduras was largely a fictional drama written in Washington. Like all good fiction, it was based on a kernel of truth. The Honduran-Nicaraguan border has been the main battleground in the Contra war, and Sandinista troops have regularly pursued Contras across it. These border incursions are comparable to the terrorist incidents that the United States used to justify escalation in Vietnam. In McGeorge Bundy's phrase, they are like streetcars — another comes along every few minutes.

Although the 82nd Airborne dropped into Honduras for a brief visit, its main objective was to take Capitol Hill. The administration hoped that the specter of a wider war would stampede Congress into funding its smaller one. The plot may be transparent and the acting unconvincing, but this drama played well enough in Congress on previous runs to justify an encore.

Before all the reviews were in, however, the Nicaraguans stole the show. The weaknesses that prompted the Reagan administration to send troops to bolster the morale of its allies led the Contras to sign the cease-fire agreement. It was their last chance to go home. The Sandinistas signed because peace offers the only hope of rebuilding their shattered economy.

Beneath these pragmatic motives, one could also sense a common emotional bond between these two bitter enemies. Six years of war have left tens of thousands dead and made daily life a misery for survivors. It was time, said Contra leader Adolfo Calero, for brother to stop killing brother. At the signing ceremonies, both delegations sang the national anthem with fervor.

The Contras — originally organized, armed and directed by the United States — did not even inform Washington of their decision to sign the agreement until the last minute; then they ignored the administration's admonition against signing. Like the Central American presidents who agreed to a regional peace accord in August, the Contras seemed to recognize that their interests and those of the Reagan administration were not necessarily the same.

The administration's reaction to the cease-fire was no less odious for being predictable. Lukewarm public support was combined with predictions of failure and, on background, condemnation. The pretense that U.S. policy was aimed at nothing more than helping the Contras secure their political rights dissolved overnight. The real Reagan agenda remains what it has always been: to overthrow the government of Nicaragua by armed force. If the cease-fire agreement leads to permanent peace, it will be the death knell for Reagan's desire to "win one back" from the communists.

The Sandinistas and the Contras have decided to give peace a chance. The United States, having fueled their war for six years, owes them that opportunity. Washington has no right to fight the war to the last Nicaraguan, destroying their country in order to save it.

Protecting Ozone International Task

'Canada, England, France, Italy, Japan, the United States and West Germany represent more than two-thirds of the world's CFC use. If these leaders were to call for a phase-out of CFCs in their countries, the effect would be immediate and significant.'

The startling discovery of a significant worldwide depletion of the Earth's protective ozone layer demands an immediate response from world leaders.

As scientists attempted to explain the unanticipated Antarctic ozone "hole," they questioned whether chemicals called chlorofluorocarbons, or CFCs, were indeed "the smoking gun." Now, in the words of Dr. John Gille of the National Center for Atmospheric Research, the work of 100 scientists has produced "the corpse" — CFCs are the principal cause of ozone depletion.

The evidence uncovered by this project, sponsored by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, requires action based on a combination of international cooperation and leadership by individual countries.

President Reagan and Secretary of State George P. Shultz should strongly urge the nations of the world to quickly ratify last September's Montreal treaty to protect the ozone layer. Representatives of 31 nations signed the protocol, but only two countries — the United States and Mexico — have acted on it. The ratification of this treaty will lay the foundation for a worldwide effort to restore the ozone layer.

This process will most likely be accelerated by the Du Pont Co.'s announcement that it supports a phase-out of CFCs. That significant reversal by the largest manufacturer of CFCs, along with the new evidence of depleted ozone levels, are reasons why the United Nations Environment Program should set a date for reconvening the representatives of the 31 nations who signed the Montreal protocol. And those representatives should strengthen the protocol by requiring a worldwide phase-out of CFCs.

Although the Montreal treaty is an important step in protecting the ozone layer, it still allows the concentration of CFCs in the atmosphere to double from the levels of today. The ozone destruction detailed in the recent study is the result of CFCs emitted more than a decade ago. Additional decreases in ozone are an inevitable consequence of released CFCs that have not yet reached the stratosphere.

Had the findings that were released by NASA been known last September, the participants of the Montreal protocol conference would have had ample grounds to conclude that the text before them was far too weak. Nevertheless, the U.N. group should also urge nations to go ahead and ratify the existing protocol before they are reconvened to improve on the work that they completed in Montreal.

To achieve a rapid phase-out of CFCs, several steps should be taken in coming months:

- A substantial fee must be placed on CFCs, based on per-pound produced. Raising the price of CFCs will encourage their recycling and conservation, and speed up the development of substitutes. Safe substitutes are on industry's horizon, but they will stay there as long as the price of CFCs remains low. A hefty CFC tax will prod industry to get alternatives out of the research-and-development departments and into the marketplace. Such a tax is consistent with Du Pont's announcement, and represents an effective transitional policy to bring about a phase-out. The opportunity for industry is enormous when one considers the potential worldwide market for safe, inexpensive alternatives to harmful CFCs. In an era in which competitiveness is essential for economic survival, substitutes for CFCs present an excellent chance to compete — and succeed.

- National governments must act immediately to ban the non-essential uses of CFCs globally — for example, in aerosol cans, foam products like those that are used in food packaging, unnecessary servicing of automobile and other air conditioners, and many uses in the electronics industry, in which alternative products are currently available. Although the United States, Canada and Sweden banned the use of CFCs in aerosols more than a decade ago, other countries did not — and today aerosols represent 27 percent of worldwide CFC use.
- When the seven major industrial nations meet at their economic summit in June, they should pledge to lead the international movement to phase out CFCs and begin rapid development of safe alternatives.

The countries that will be at the table at the Toronto summit meeting — Canada, England, France, Italy, Japan, the United States and West Germany — represent more than two-thirds of the world's CFC use. Except for Canada and the United States, they are also the world's heaviest users of CFC aerosols. If these leaders were to call for a phase-out of CFCs in their countries, the effect would be immediate and significant.

Given that the new research on ozone depletion has produced a "corpse," it is now time to prevent further damage to our delicate atmosphere and to human health, the food chain and the natural environment. To do that requires aggressive action and creative cooperation by America and concerned nations worldwide.

Strength For Today

"Build thee more stately mansions,
 O my soul
 As the swift seasons roll,
 Leave the low vaulted past Leaving thine outgrown shell
 By life's unresting sea."

If the learning process is what it ought to be, we leave the "low vaulted past" and push on to something higher. We learn some new skill out of every failure, some new truth out of every mistake; and we gain some new insight into a larger body of knowledge every time we can be candidly critical of ourselves rather than of others.

A Bumpy Road To The Summit

Analysis

WASHINGTON — Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze's discussions in Washington last week set the dates for the Moscow summit meeting May 29-June 2, but in almost every other respect the visit left relations between the two nuclear superpowers more troubled and uncertain than before.

The reasons are the subject of much discussion within senior ranks of the administration, with most explanations centering on Soviet troubles in Afghanistan and in its internal affairs.

In arms control, human rights and the conflict in Central America, Shevardnadze brought to Washington new proposals that, in the view of U.S. officials, were crafted to sound enticing to the uninitiated but that have little chance of gaining Reagan administration acceptance. Among proposals in this category were:

• A U.S.-Soviet experiment in the Mediterranean next month, derided by the administration as impractical and irrelevant, in which neutron counters on hovering helicopters would try to distinguish between nuclear-armed cruise missiles and those with conventional warheads on ships and submarines.

• An international conference to limit major navies of the world, initially involving at least the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France.

• Negotiations to begin in April and an "open exchange" in May of detailed data between NATO and the Warsaw Pact on land armies and their armaments in Europe. The same information has been the topic of fruitless jockeying for nearly 15 years in East-West negotiations in Vienna.

• Immediate meetings of U.S. and Soviet judges to exchange views on capital punishment.

• Soviet willingness to stop its flow of all but police-type arms to Nicaragua — if the United States will cease arms aid to El Salvador, other Central American and perhaps South American countries in the traditional U.S. sphere of influence.

"This was like a throwback to the old days when they used to trot out the propaganda proposals instead of working on things seriously," said a State Department official who participated in the talks, noting little substantive advance in any area of discussion. Another official, referring to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's slogan for foreign policy shifts, said Shevardnadze last week displayed "the oldest of the New Thinking."

Another U.S. official who was deeply involved in the discussions said, "it was almost as if someone in Moscow had decided to put on the brakes" for now.

Shevardnadze raised the issue of Afghanistan with Secretary of State George P. Shultz in their initial conversation at the State Department Monday night, a discussion that had been expected to deal only with agenda-setting for the meetings and not with substance. Afghanistan was discussed with great intensity and excruciating detail throughout Tuesday by Undersecretary of State Michael H. Armacost and Deputy Foreign Minister Anatoli Adamishin and their aides. And on Wednesday lengthy and often emotional appeals by Shevardnadze on Afghanistan were a major reason his final meeting with Shultz ran nearly three hours overtime.

"There is no doubt in retrospect that Shevardnadze came with Afghanistan at the top of his agenda rather than arms control or anything else," said a U.S. participant in the talks. On this subject of urgent importance in Moscow, Shevardnadze is reported to have left town a deeply disappointed, even dejected figure.

As Shevardnadze made the case in private, nearly everything has been done as Washington demanded to arrange a Soviet pullout: the political decision to withdraw taken and announced; a short withdrawal period established starting from a definite and early date, with half of the Soviet forces to depart in the first 90 days; "private" U.N. mediation for a future interim Afghan government approved, and all other U.S. and Pakistani conditions met — except for what the visiting minister called somewhat imploringly "this one last piece."

The final sticking point is the U.S. administration's insistence that it will terminate its military aid to the Afghan resistance only if Moscow takes a "balancing" or "symmetrical" step of terminating military aid to the Kabul government, its side in the eight-year-old war.

In last week's discussions, Shultz reportedly said Washington would be flexible on the nature and timing of a mutual aid cutoff or mutual moratorium, but he was unyielding in insisting that U.S. action be balanced by a Soviet move. Shevardnadze argued with passion that this is a backtracking on previous U.S. commitments.

Administration officials concede that the U.S. demand for a "balanced" cutoff is a recent development, but they insist it flows logically from previous policy.

According to an official source, the demand began in an off-the-cuff

Reagan remark to network television anchormen last Dec. 4, and was repeated in private by Reagan to Gorbachev in the Washington summit the following week. In one form or another, officials said, the U.S. demand figured in a Shultz letter to Shevardnadze following the summit, in Shultz and Armacost presentations to Soviet Ambassador Yuri Dubinin in January and February, in Shultz's meeting with Gorbachev in the Kremlin Feb. 22 and in other diplomatic exchanges as well as a variety of U.S. public statements since January.

The projected Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan is widely recognized in official Washington as Gorbachev's boldest and riskiest foreign policy move so far, with far-reaching potential consequences inside and outside the Soviet Union. While the Soviet pullout is applauded, there is little disposition here to assist Gorbachev at a cost to the political or military position of the Afghan resistance, which is fervently supported by Reagan and both parties in Congress.

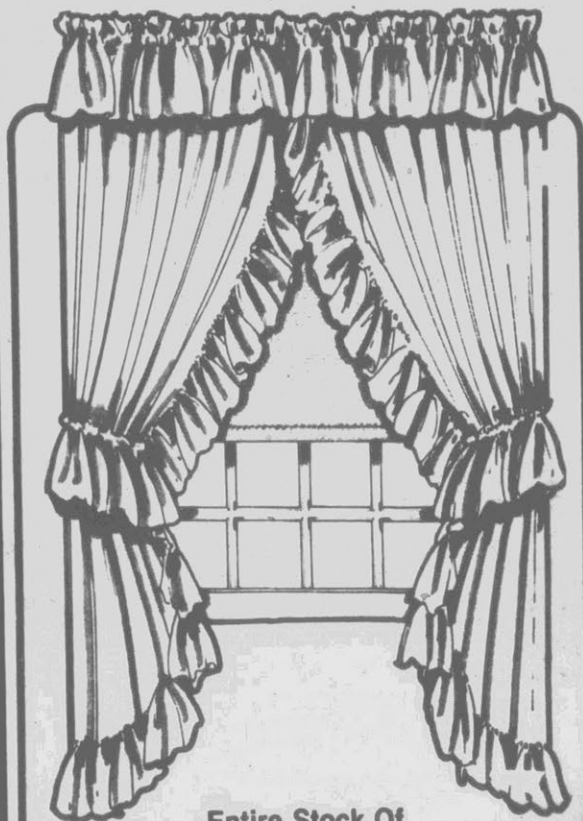

From the U.S. standpoint, the Soviets are in a weak bargaining position on Afghanistan, having created irreversible expectations by announcing their pullout. In fact, Soviet forces are turning over responsibilities and facilities to Afghans and are starting their withdrawal.

The big test of the year for Gorbachev is the Communist Party Conference scheduled to convene in mid-June, just two weeks after Reagan leaves Moscow at the end of the next summit meeting. Intense domestic maneuvering is believed to be under way about the makeup and powers of the party meeting, the first formal Soviet "party conference" (as contrasted with congresses or plenums) since 1941.

Activists Skeptical Of Robeson Death Report

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer
LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — Despite the arrest of one suspect and the suicide of another in the shotgun slaying of Indian lawyer Julian Pierce, some Robeson County activists said on the eve of Pierce's funeral that racial and political turmoil is bound to continue.

"In light of our history here, any hasty conclusions to a murder in Robeson County will always be highly suspect in the community," the Rev. Mac Legerton, director of the Center for Community Action in Lumberton, said Tuesday.

"The result here is similar to that of President Kennedy's assassination, where the main suspect is now dead. So it is really too early to gauge how the community will fully respond," he said.

Robeson County Sheriff Hubert Stone Tuesday said that Sandy Gordon Chavis, 24, a Lumbee Indian, had been charged with first-degree murder in Saturday slaying of Pierce. Stone said John Anderson Goins, 24, whom Chavis had identified as the gunman in the Saturday slaying, committed suicide as investigators were searching for him early Tuesday morning.

Stone said Goins had broken up with 16-year-old Shannon Bullard — the daughter of Pierce's fiancée, Ruth Locklear. Ms. Locklear last week took out two trespassing warrants against Goins.

"Goins felt Pierce had something to do with it," the sheriff said. "He got mad and he killed him."

"I can assure the world that there was no political involvement in the case," Stone said. "I think the people of Robeson County will understand that it's just another murder."

Pierce was shot three times with a shotgun early Saturday morning at his home in rural Robeson County. Funeral services, including a memorial at Pembroke State University, were scheduled today.

Some activists had called Pierce's death a "political assassination" because he was seeking a Superior Court judgeship in the May 3 primary. His opponent was District Attorney Joe Freeman Britt, who is white. Many of them expressed skepticism of Stone's explanation Tuesday.

"It's very amusing," said Ray Littlefield, a Lumbee Indian leader. "Situations including murder are not so uncomplicated."

"You got a few who believe it's the real thing, but I don't," said the Rev. S.D. Lewis, assistant pastor at Hilly Branch Baptist Church, a predominantly black church in Lumberton. "They're trying to pull a cover-up on us."

"Oh Lord. Boy, oh boy, oh boy," state Rep. Sidney Locks, D-Robeson, a black minister and community activist, said of the sheriff's explanation.

"Maybe there was another time when such results pleased an entire community," Locks said. "I'm sure the Sheriff's Department has done the best job they could in bringing a quick solution to this. But I think there are going to be some people who have difficulty reconciling the story as presented."

At a news conference on the steps of the county courthouse Tuesday, the Rev. Joy Johnson, chairman of Concerned Citizens for Better Government, said he "had no quarrels with the investigation thus far." But he said the citizens coalition "still has many concerns which need to be further investigated."

"There seems to be enough doubt to justify an outside investigation into this murder as well as all of the violence that has taken place in this county," Vernon Bellecourt, a national representative of American Indian Movement, said at a Tuesday news conference.

"There seems to be a lot of speculation, a lot of doubt in the community that justifies their demand for an independent investigation," he said.

Indian leaders have called for a special session of the Legislature to change a law that prevents another candidate from running in Pierce's place. They also have called for a special prosecutor to investigate Pierce's death.

Gov. Jim Martin said Tuesday he would continue to investigate the possibility of a special session and would meet Thursday with those calling for it. He also said he had talked with Britt about a special prosecutor, and would continue those conversations.

"I have shared with (Britt) my counsel that I thought that would be the wisest thing to do," Martin said.

"He said that he had thought about the things that I was thinking about and at the moment was not prepared to do that."

Under state law, a special prosecutor could be appointed only if Britt requested one from Attorney General Lacy Thornburg.

Martin said he was convinced Pierce's slaying did not involve racism or politics.

"While we continue to be burdened by the tragedy ... it will surely be a relief to many, even those who had suspected worse, that this untimely and tragic death was not related to any political considerations or to any racial motive," Martin said.

But Bellecourt said AIM representatives have talked with many local people, who find it hard to believe the two men were involved in a murder.

"Many people knew this young man. They are shocked at what he is alleged to have done. They also can't believe that he would have taken his own life," Bellecourt said.

Some activists had called Pierce's death a "political assassination" because he was seeking a Superior Court judgeship in the May 3 primary. His opponent was District Attorney Joe Freeman Britt, who is white. Many of them expressed skepticism of Stone's explanation Tuesday.

"It's very amusing," said Ray Littlefield, a Lumbee Indian leader. "Situations including murder are not so uncomplicated."

"You got a few who believe it's the real thing, but I don't," said the Rev. S.D. Lewis, assistant pastor at Hilly Branch Baptist Church, a predominantly black church in Lumberton. "They're trying to pull a cover-up on us."

"Oh Lord. Boy, oh boy, oh boy," state Rep. Sidney Locks, D-Robeson, a black minister and community activist, said of the sheriff's explanation.

"Maybe there was another time when such results pleased an entire community," Locks said. "I'm sure the Sheriff's Department has done the best job they could in bringing a quick solution to this. But I think there are going to be some people who have difficulty reconciling the story as presented."

At a news conference on the steps of the county courthouse Tuesday, the Rev. Joy Johnson, chairman of Concerned Citizens for Better Government, said he "had no quarrels with the investigation thus far." But he said the citizens coalition "still has many concerns which need to be further investigated."

"There seems to be enough doubt to justify an outside investigation into this murder as well as all of the violence that has taken place in this county," Vernon Bellecourt, a national representative of American Indian Movement, said at a Tuesday news conference.

"There seems to be a lot of speculation, a lot of doubt in the community that justifies their demand for an independent investigation," he said.

Indian leaders have called for a special session of the Legislature to change a law that prevents another candidate from running in Pierce's place. They also have called for a special prosecutor to investigate Pierce's death.

Gov. Jim Martin said Tuesday he would continue to investigate the possibility of a special session and would meet Thursday with those calling for it. He also said he had talked with Britt about a special prosecutor, and would continue those conversations.

"I have shared with (Britt) my counsel that I thought that would be the wisest thing to do," Martin said.

Stone said Goins had broken up with 16-year-old Shannon Bullard — the daughter of Pierce's fiancée, Ruth Locklear. Ms. Locklear last week took out two trespassing warrants against Goins.

"Goins felt Pierce had something to do with it," the sheriff said. "He got mad and he killed him."

"I can assure the world that there was no political involvement in the case," Stone said. "I think the people of Robeson County will understand that it's just another murder."

Pierce was shot three times with a shotgun early Saturday morning at his home in rural Robeson County. Funeral services, including a memorial at Pembroke State University, were scheduled today.

Some activists had called Pierce's death a "political assassination" because he was seeking a Superior Court judgeship in the May 3 primary. His opponent was District Attorney Joe Freeman Britt, who is white. Many of them expressed skepticism of Stone's explanation Tuesday.

"It's very amusing," said Ray Littlefield, a Lumbee Indian leader. "Situations including murder are not so uncomplicated."

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — Hours before he committed suicide, the suspected killer of judicial candidate Julian Pierce left flowers, a teddy bear and some cards on the doorstep of his former girlfriend's home, Pembroke's town manager says.

McDuffie Cummings said John Anderson Goins, 24, of Pembroke — the man authorities said killed Pierce early Saturday — apparently had visited the Prospect community home of Shannon Bullard, 16, Monday night or early Tuesday.

"He left a stuffed animal, a dozen roses and some cards for his family," Cummings told the News and Observer of Raleigh.

Cummings said he learned of the gifts from Pembroke Police Chief Larry T. Roberts, the man he credited with providing the clues investigators needed to break the case.

Cummings said Roberts collected evidence that linked Goins, Pierce, Pierce's girlfriend and her daughter, Miss Bullard. Roberts recalled Pierce's girlfriend, Ruth Locklear, had sworn out two warrants against Goins March 22.

Convinced the killing might be the result of a domestic dispute, Cummings said, Roberts briefed the town manager and then took his suspicions to the 55 investigators working the case.

It apparently was the clue they needed.

Goins committed suicide as investigators were searching rural Robeson County for him early Tuesday. Sandy Gordon Chavis, 24, of Route 1, Pembroke, had been arrested a few hours earlier and charged with first-degree murder in Pierce's death.

Ray W. Davis, district supervisor of the State Bureau of Investigation's Fayetteville office, said Tuesday that investigators had constructed "as solid a case against a defendant that you could ask for."

Pierce, 42, was shot three times with a shotgun in the kitchen of his rural Robeson County home early Saturday morning. Investigators said window panes in the kitchen door had been broken either before or during the shooting.

Davis said investigators had found a fingerprint, in blood, on the kitchen door at Pierce's home. Davis said the print matched Goins' prints. The blood in the print appeared to be a mixture of Goins' and Pierce's, Davis said. Davis said Goins apparently cut himself on glass from the door during the shooting.

Property Seized

WILMINGTON (AP) — In the largest drug seizure in the state's history, authorities have confiscated $2 million in real and personal property, including a boat factory and several homes in connection with a drug investigation.

The seizure came after an investigation by the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force, headed by the office of the U.S. Attorney.

U.S. District Judge James Fox issued warrants Monday which authorized the U.S. Marshals Service to seize the properties, according to U.S. Attorney Margaret Currin. The warrants charge that the properties were used either to facilitate drug trafficking activity or were purchased with proceeds generated from drug sales.

Approximately 20 acres of land and several residences were seized. Some of the property fronts the Cape Fear River, according to the statement.

Two 82nd Soldiers Come Home To Greet Their New Offspring

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — Lts. Patrick Donnelly and Joseph Marshall of the 82nd Airborne met the newest members of their families when they parachuted into a Drop Zone after spending 11 days in Honduras.

On the drop zone, Donnelly for the first time held his daughter, Caitlin; and Marshall saw his new son, Patrick.

Donnelly heard of his daughter's birth a week earlier about 2½ hours after she was born, while he was walking with his platoon down a hill near Juticalpa. It was about 5:50 a.m. Honduran time, and his platoon was about to start training with a Honduran platoon.

"I got all choked up. I was extremely happy," said Donnelly, whose company commander gave him the news.

Donnelly said he spent his first night at home awake, getting to know his daughter. She insisted, he said.

Denise Donnelly said she didn't start worrying about having the baby until her labor started. She had been too busy with the battalion's family support program to think about her situation.

A backup Lamaze partner, Lisa Coyle, helped her through the delivery phase, Mrs. Donnelly said.

Patsy Marshall was aware her third child was due any moment when her husband left for Honduras. Patrick was born at 8:47 a.m. Thursday, and the Red Cross was able to contact Joe Marshall late that night at Palmerola Air Force Base.

"It just confirmed what I expected," he said. While he would have liked to have been there, Marshall said the situation wouldn't allow it.

"I wasn't real thrilled, but there wasn't much we could do about it," Mrs. Marshall said. "He was so busy, and it was so fast, there wasn't much time to worry about it," she said.

Tar Heels Get Average $711 Refund

GREENSBORO (AP) — More than half a billion dollars in federal income tax refunds have been issued to North Carolinians, with an average refund of $711, up $40 from last year, the Internal Revenue Service announced Tuesday.

More than 1.5 million North Carolinians have already filed their returns. The IRS expects that another 1 million returns and 200,000 extension requests will be sent in by the April 15 deadline.

The IRS also expects that nearly $1.5 billion in refunds will be issued to North Carolinians by June 1.

More than 7 percent of the returns have been filed electronically rather than on paper. The 144 North Carolina tax preparers who have been accepted into the special program have filed more than 106,000 electronic returns. This constitutes more than 23 percent of the 464,000 electronic returns filed nationwide by 16 IRS districts.

Taxpayers who file electronically get their refunds in an average of 18 days.

Taxpayers who are now filing paper returns should expect to wait six to seven weeks for a refund. But those who wait until the week of April 15 to file a paper return will have to wait eight to 10 weeks for refund, the IRS said.

Airplane Ambulance Service Set

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — North Carolina Baptist Hospital has entered into a partnership with Piedmont General Aviation Group to start the state's first hospital-based airplane ambulance service.

Under a partnership with Baptist Hospital, Piedmont General Aviation Inc., provides the flight crew and one aircraft, a $500,000 twin-engine Beechcraft King Air 100.

ical crew and equipment, consisting of a startup investment of about $60,000.

The new service will be ready this weekend, officials say.

Baptist Hospital already has an AirCare helicopter program, but the airplane service has the added advantage of greater speed and distance. It gives the hospital a stronger link with specialty hospitals in Cincinnati, Houston, Pittsburgh, Miami and Baltimore.

The majority of patients using the plane service, however, will be transported to Baptist Hospital from smaller general hospitals in North Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia and South Carolina. Other major medical centers such as Duke University Medical Center and N.C. Memorial Hospital may also contract with Baptist to transport patients.

The average patient cost for the plane service will be about $1,200.

Death Suit

BALTIMORE (AP) — A former Army enlisted man whose two sons died of meningitis 12 days apart at the Fort Bragg, N.C., military hospital has filed a $1.2 million medical malpractice and wrongful death suit against the federal government.

Former Spec. 4 Charles V. Wernz Jr., who now lives in Aberdeen, Md., is co-administrator of the estate of his infant son Christopher, his second son to die at Womack Army Hospital in 1984.

Wernz filed the U.S. District Court suit under the Federal Tort Claims Act, which allows the government, but not the doctors themselves, to be sued for damages.

Magazine

DUBLIN, N.C. (AP) — The publisher of a magazine for pit bulldog owners says she feels obligated to run articles on dog fighting — especially when they are submitted by advertisers.

"I'm no different than a politician to his constituents," Kim King, publisher of "Pit Bull Advisor," said. "If they say this is what they want to see more of, then this is what they'll see. We could not put out the magazine if people didn't send stuff in. We'd be stuck."

Mrs. King, a self-described dog lover who took over the magazine 18 months ago, said she has about 150 subscribers.

North Carolina and Arkansas are the only Southern states in which dog fighting is a misdemeanor, not a felony. A person convicted of using a dog for fighting can serve up to one year in prison and pay a fine of up to $1,000. A spectator at a match can serve up to six months and pay a fine of up to $500.

President

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — The Lenoir Community College Board of Trustees has selected Lonnie Blizzard to serve as the institution's fourth president.

Blizzard was chosen from a field of 69 candidates and his selection was unanimously approved by the trustees. Blizzard, subject to state approval, will succeed Jesse McDaniel, who will retire June 30 after serving as president since 1971.

Blizzard, 47, has been employed by the college for 13 years and has served as executive vice president since January 1986.

Child Killed

RALEIGH (AP) — A car slammed head-on into a milk truck early Monday in Raleigh, killing a 2-year-old boy and injuring his mother, authorities said.

Lamont Kay, son of Rebecca Winters Kay, died in the accident. Mrs. Kay had surgery at Wake Medical Center and was reported in stable condition.

Mrs. Kay, 34, is the daughter of John W. Winters, a developer who was formerly a state senator, Raleigh City Council member and a member of the state Utilities Commission.

Klan March

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Members of the Christian Knights of the Ku Klux Klan says they are planning to march in three Catawba County cities on Easter.

The group has been granted parade permits for Conover, Newton and Maiden, officials said. Virgil Griffin, Klan imperial wizard, said he expects about 50 Klan members to march.

Griffin said the group would be "passing out literature, and speaking in those towns against communism, drugs and abortion."

Annexation

TARBORO, N.C. (AP) — Superior Court Judge Thomas Watts sympathized with an Edgecombe County clothing manufacturer seeking to overturn its annexation into Conetoe but ruled that the town board had followed correct procedures in annexation.

Tarboro attorney Bill Aycock, representing Tom Togs Inc., gave notice of appeal pending review of the ruling and consultation with his client.

Aycock had argued that Tom Togs was annexed Aug. 11 for the sole purpose of tax revenues and that no services at all would be provided in return.

Economic Panel Seeking Changes For Interest Rates, Tax Structure

GREENSBORO (AP) — A state commission charged with suggesting economic growth initiatives has recommended that lawmakers deregulate credit-card interest rates and fees, establish a revolving clean-water fund and establish a graduated corporate income tax.

Those are among 23 proposals costing more than $90 million that the N.C. Commission on Jobs and Economic Growth will recommend to the General Assembly. Most will be for the short session that begins in June.

The proposals are intended to develop jobs, entrepreneurship and state government's ability to assist economic expansion.

They are seen by commission members as crucial to the state's economic future.

"This is part of the growth-from-within strategy," S. Leigh Wilson, director of the commission, said Tuesday following the group's meeting near Greensboro. "North Carolina has to do these things within the state if we're going to move the economy. Unless we do some of these things, we're going to fall behind."

During a luncheon, Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, sought the commission's support for child care legislation, worker training programs and clean water and waste water facilities. The commission proposed programs to address each.

Jordan, who helped create the commission in 1985, also promoted his 21st Century Fund which would invest $100 million from public and private sources in North Carolina companies, a state economic development corporation to replace the state Department of Commerce, and a program to attack the state's dropout problem.

Although the proposal to deregulate credit-card interest rates and fees would cost taxpayers nothing, commission members fear it will be the most controversial. They say the purpose of the recommendation is to protect 1,500 to 1,800 banking jobs, but they think most people will take the proposal as a signal to credit-card companies that they can boost their rates significantly.

"I wonder if the loss of jobs is worth a consumer uprising?" asked commission member Harvey Gantt, Charlotte's former mayor.

But proponents say deregulation is necessary to keep bank credit-card centers from moving to states that have lifted ceilings already — primarily Georgia and Delaware.

"If you wait another 12 months, it's going to be an academic question because they're all going to be gone," warned E.S. (Jim) Melvin of Greensboro, chairman of the commission and of 1st Home Federal.

Wachovia and First Union already have moved their operations out of state, Melvin said.

If the proposal is adopted, credit-card centers operating in North Carolina can let interest rates and fees fluctuate with the market. They could, therefore, compete with out-of-state companies doing business in North Carolina. That could mean lower rates for customers, supporters said.

The commissioners also proposed setting up a clean-water loan and grant revolving fund that would sustain itself in seven years. The proposal would require the General Assembly to contribute to the fund $55.1 million a year for seven years. Federal funds, destined to run out in 1994, would boost the annual total contributed to $100 million.

Local governments could get grants and loans from the fund, repaying some of the money over time.

"There are 84 units of local government that can't add a single customer to their sewer system," said Wilson, former executive director of the N.C. League of Municipalities. With the fund, he said, water and sewer systems could be expanded and new commercial and industrial plants added.

Commission members also recommended that legislators adopt a graduated corporate income tax. Such a tax, they said, would stimulate development of small businesses that have been providing most of the state's new jobs.

"This could be the most powerful thing that we as a committee and we as a commission can do at this time," said Dave Phillips, a High Point businessman and chairman of the subcommittee that made the proposal.

"The implications are dramatic."

Last year, the corporate income tax was increased from 6 to 7 percent on pre-tax profits. Under the commission's proposal, companies with less than $75,000 in profits would be charged as little as 4 percent. Those with profits of more than $75,000 would continue to pay 7 percent.

Other recommendations include a tax credit for employers helping employees with child care, a worker-training trust fund, making it easier for municipalities to participate in highway right-of-way acquisition and assisting small business incubators.

Young Bus Drivers Pass Checks

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina has compiled a list of about 1,300 names of 17-year-olds qualified to drive public school buses after Friday under federal conditions.

North Carolina will send the U.S. Department of Labor its list of qualified drivers Thursday and must check the records of all drivers on the list at least every two weeks, according to Nancy Temple, deputy chief of staff for Gov. Jim Martin. In addition, the state Department of Transportation will conduct field audits, she said.

The Division of Motor Vehicles reviewed the list with its computers and found 24 drivers with records of moving violations or at-fault accidents that violate federal conditions, said M. Worth McDonald, the division's director of school bus and traffic safety.

The state found about 20 more drivers who had not had the required physical examinations within the past year, Ms. Temple said.

The Labor Department will check some of the drivers' records with one or more audits, said spokeswoman Linda Tavlin.

After federal audits in January and February revealed 80 violations of federal conditions in 10 counties in North Carolina and 200 violations in South Carolina, the Labor Department issued an order banning the use of all 17-year-old bus drivers after April 1.

But the department agreed March 15 to allow the two states to continue using some of their 17-year-old drivers until June 15 if the drivers meet certain conditions.

Assembly May Seek Power To Confirm Board Members

BEAUFORT, N.C. (AP) — A legislative panel is considering legislation that would give lawmakers the authority to confirm appointments to state boards and commissions dealing with environmental problems along the coast.

The co-chairmen of a legislative committee studying coastal water pollution also said they had been considering legislation that would spell out more clearly the qualifications and backgrounds of such commission members.

"I can see the General Assembly possibly looking at the method with which we accept members of commissions that decide coastal water quality (issues) and that sort of thing," said Sen. Marc Basnight, D-Dare. "We would like to see the most talented people — not just political appointees."

"Any time you can remove politics in a Commission or board, I think you should do it."

Basnight, and co-chairman J. Fred Bowman, D-Alamance, said they might recommend such changes primarily in response to recent controversies involving the state Environmental Management Commission. But they said changes also might be needed in the Coastal Resources Commission.

"It might be a good idea to look at some kind of review committee," Bowman said.

The governor now appoints 13 of 17 members to the Environmental Management Commission, with the lieutenant governor and speaker of the House of Representatives each appointing two. There is no legislative review of the appointees.

"We need to be sure that their agenda is to protect the environment," Basnight said of commission members. "We need to get the best people we can get. They shouldn't just be simple political appointees."

The commission has been criticized by environmentalists in recent months on several issues, including outstanding resource waters and a change in coastal stormwater regulations. Last October, the commission had to convene a special meeting to vote again on an issue after revelations that 10 of the 17 members had met secretly the night before a meeting to discuss a key vote.

Basnight says a two-day trip to Carteret County convinced him that western Bogue Sound should have been nominated as an outstanding resource water.

Earlier this month, the Environmental Management Commission voted against the nomination, saying that more criteria are needed to determine what qualifies as an outstanding resource water. Once designated as an outstanding resource, a waterway receives extra environmental protections.

Basnight said he was puzzled that the commission rejected the nomination after approving three similar ones at an earlier meeting. He said the vote raises questions about the commission's overall performance.

The Martin administration — which has battled with legislators over the power of the executive branch — reacted coolly to the idea of legislators confirming commission appointees.

"The idea is puzzling," said Jim Sughree, Martin's press secretary. "The governor, lieutenant governor and speaker all have appointees to the Environmental Management Commission. Yet those appointees often don't vote in a political pattern."

Environmentalists, however, said they supported the proposal.

"The Environmental Management Commission has abused its discretion and lost public confidence," said Bill Holman, lobbyist for the Sierra Club and the Conservation Council of N.C. "It's going to be up to Gov. Martin and the legislature to get them under control and restore public confidence."

In other testimony, the director of the state's Shellfish Sanitation Branch said pollution is fast destroying North Carolina's most productive shellfishing waters.

Bob Benton said a survey of the state's 22 most productive sounds and bays shows that pollution has caused the temporary closing of 58 percent more acreage in 1988 than in 1980.

The state is required to close shellfishing waters when bacteria counts reach high levels because of the health risks associated with eating contaminated seafood. The waters can be reopened if the bacteria counts drop.

"We're losing the battle for water quality in North Carolina," Benton said. He blamed the problem on runoff pollution from inadequately regulated coastal development.

In 1980, Benton said, 8,392 acres in the 22 waterways were closed to shellfishing. This year, that number has risen to 13,301 acres. The figures do not include sounds and bays closed by red tide, the toxic algae that has infested the state's coastal waters since last fall.

The problem is even worse than the figures suggest, he said, because the 22 waterways — which are mostly in Carteret, Dare, Brunswick and New Hanover counties — contain about 90 percent of the state's clams and 50 percent of its oysters.

Training Overruled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Using a North Carolina air cargo company to train non-union pilots to fly Eastern Airlines jets in a possible strike violates Eastern's labor agreement, a federal judge has ruled.

U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker issued the preliminary injunction pending trial on a lawsuit by the Air Line Pilots Association. The order says Eastern must stop training non-union pilots on its planes by Orion Lift Services, Inc.

In the order handed down late Tuesday, Parker said the training program "constitutes a unilateral repudiation of the collective bargaining agreement" Eastern has with the pilots union.

"The plain language of the agreement requires that Eastern utilize pilots from the system seniority list to perform any type of flying" — including flight training, the judge said.

Moreover, "Eastern has failed to offer a reasonable interpretation of the contract which would justify its conduct nor has it proven that this type of leasing arrangement is justified by past practices," Parker said.

The judge dismissed as "completely spurious" the company's argument it was entitled to engage in strike preparations "irrespective of the terms of its agreement with ALPA."

Eastern spokesman Robin Matell said the Miami-based airline would not comment on the decision until company officials had an opportunity to review it.

Orion, based in Raleigh, N.C., signed a contract earlier this year to hire and train 350 to 400 non-union pilots to fly Eastern planes in the event ALPA honored a possible strike by 13,000 airline employees represented by the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers.

Church Bars Swaggart From Pulpit For A Year

By DONNA BRYSON
Associated Press Writer
SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — Assemblies of God officials who barred TV evangelist Jimmy Swaggart from preaching for a year say their church has survived a constitutional dispute touched off by the scandal that led to his downfall.

"I believe that the church is strong and I believe that the church is purified and strengthened by this," said Rev. G. Raymond Carlson, the Assemblies' general superintendent.

The Executive Presbytery, which serves as the church's board of directors and is headed by Carlson, announced Tuesday that the fiery Swaggart must stop preaching for at least one year and undergo two years of rehabilitation to remain a minister in the nation's largest Pentecostal church.

Swaggart confessed to unspecified sins during a tearful appearance at his Baton Rouge, La., church on Feb. 21 and stepped down from his pulpit. A prostitute has said Swaggart paid her to pose nude for him.

Carlson said Swaggart "thanked" him and the two said a prayer over the telephone when Carlson gave him the news Tuesday, but they did not discuss whether Swaggart might refuse to accept the terms.

"I will just await word from him. ... It is very possible he may do that," Carlson said in an interview on ABC-TV's "Nightline."

"If he does not accept, then the Executive Presbytery would no doubt take action to dismiss him," he said earlier.

Swaggart has 30 days to appeal his suspension, according to church bylaws. He could not be reached for comment Tuesday after the decision, but his organization, Jimmy Swaggart Worldwide Ministries in Baton Rouge, La., scheduled a news conference for today.

Swaggart is the latest evangelist to be forced from the pulpit. His accuser, Marvin Gorman, was forced from the Assemblies of God when he admitted to an immoral act with a woman. And Jim and Tammy Bakker were forced from their PTL ministry in a scandal that included a sexual encounter between Bakker and young female follower.

According to the terms of rehabilitation, Swaggart must stop preaching and distributing videotaped sermons that reach a worldwide audience for at least one year, and undergo counseling and supervision by church elders for two years.

Swaggart's preaching may be limited during the second year of his suspension, church officials said.

Carlson said the rehabilitation formula announced Tuesday was the same plan recommended last month to Louisiana district officials, who had urged only a three-month suspension and resisted the recommendation.

"Basically, he has been caught in the middle of a power struggle between Louisiana and Springfield," said Cliff Jackson, a Little Rock, Ark., attorney and Assemblies of God member who was involved in mediating the dispute.

Louisiana district officials, who refused comment Tuesday, have close ties to Swaggart's multimillion-dollar church, television and Bible school enterprise. Cecil Janway, superintendent of the Louisiana district, also sits on the board of Jimmy Swaggart World Ministries.

The Louisiana district had recommended that Swaggart be barred from preaching for three months during a two-year rehabilitation.

Louisiana officials were unswayed by arguments that every other Assemblies minister who had confessed to moral failure had been barred from the pulpit for at least a year. They apparently began then to question the Executive Presbytery's authority in ministerial matters.

On March 3, the Executive Presbytery asked an oversight body, the 232-member General Presbytery, to resolve the impasse during a special meeting convened Monday. The General Presbytery discussed the matter for about eight hours Monday and Tuesday.

When they adjourned, Carlson announced that the General Presbytery had reaffirmed the 13-member Executive Presbytery's authority to discipline Swaggart.

Church spokeswoman Juleen Turnage said that decision and another approving the Executive Presbytery's rehabilitation plan were approved by the General Presbytery by voice vote, "and there were no nays."

Roberts Begins New Fund Drive

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — TV evangelist Oral Roberts said he will ask followers to donate another $8 million for his troubled medical school, but he did not repeat last year's warning that God would call him "home" if the drive failed.

Roberts, in a taped appearance Tuesday on his son's program, "Richard Roberts Live," said he would reinstate the medical missionary program that the university canceled two months ago for lack of funds.

"Now, by faith ... we will undertake a second year of scholarship. You heard me say it the way I said it, by faith, we will go for a second year," Roberts said on the program, which was to be broadcast today.

The evangelist agreed with his wife when she said their "faith wavered a little" when they announced cancellation of the scholarship program.

The scholarships are provided to the students, who in return work in Third World countries after graduation for several years as part of the Roberts ministry.

In 1986, Roberts announced the drive to raise by March 1987 the $8 million needed to fund the scholarships and the medical school, saying he wanted his students to concentrate on their education without worrying about tuition.

In announcing that fund-raiser, Roberts said God told him, "I want you to get this going in one year or I will call you home."

On Tuesday, Roberts and his wife Evelyn spoke via satellite from Anaheim, Calif., to a gathering of students, faculty members and university trustees in Tulsa. The exchange was recorded for use on his son's program.

The taped segment included statements from the chief financial officer of the university, and from auditor firms who said the $8 million raised last year was used to underwrite the total costs of the medical school for one year.

Medical students appeared confused when Roberts made the announcement to reinstate the program. Mark Claussen, president of the junior class at the Oral Roberts University medical school, spoke out.

"I just want this to be clear, President Roberts. Two months ago, all of the students here were directly told that all money would be discontinued in May," Claussen said.

"You fine young men and women ... have come face to face with the

Ginsburg Joins Law Faculty

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — Douglas H. Ginsburg, whose nomination to the U.S. Supreme Court was withdrawn because he once used marijuana, will join the faculty of the George Mason University School of Law as a visiting professor.

Ginsburg, who will remain a judge on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, was one of four new law school professors appointed Tuesday.

Law school Dean Henry G. Manne said of Ginsburg's drug use: "I think it had nothing to do with his qualifications to sit on the Supreme Court" or his qualifications to be a professor.

The law school, which opened in 1979, has about 700 students.

Ginsburg, who will join the faculty in September, will teach courses in antitrust law and business regulations.

Aides Leaving As Meese Probe Broadens

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese III faces an expanded criminal investigation and top Justice Department officials are resigning for fear of being tainted by his mounting legal problems, officials say.

Independent counsel James McKay has widened his probe by subpoenaing payroll records and other documents of the Washington chapter of the Multiple Sclerosis Society in connection with a $40,000-a-year job Meese's wife, Ursula, got with the group in 1985.

Washington attorney James Bierbower, legal counsel for the society and a board member, said the records were delivered to McKay's office on Monday.

The independent counsel is trying to determine whether longtime Meese friend E. Robert Wallach used his influence to help get Mrs. Meese the job, said several sources familiar with the probe, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Meanwhile, Sens. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., and Carl Levin, D-Mich., demanded that Meese explain why Deputy Attorney General Arnold Burns, Assistant Attorney General William Weld and four of their aides abruptly quit on Tuesday. Specter, a member of the Judiciary Committee, said it may be necessary to convene hearings if an explanation is not forthcoming.

"It's absolutely necessary that the American people be told why these six have resigned," Specter said. "It appears to be unprecedented in the history of the Justice Department. The department isn't operating when six resign together."

Burns and Weld offered little in the way of public explanation, but they told associates they were concerned that the nearly year-long criminal probe of Meese is hurting the entire Justice Department, according to several department sources, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Meese said he won't step down and he repeated that assertion as he left the office Tuesday night.

Weld, who as an assistant attorney general oversees all federal criminal investigations, told assistants at a final staff meeting that the continuing investigation of Meese and Wallach was casting a "cloud" on the Justice Department, according to several department sources.

Another top Justice Department official, Solicitor General Charles Fried, said the resignations were leading him to reconsider his own future at the Justice Department.

Weld quit as of the close of business Tuesday, telling his staff he didn't want to get in "50 fights" and have "blood on the floor," said the sources. Burns will stay on until April 22.

Meese did not learn the two were quitting until Burns and Weld walked into his office Tuesday morning and informed him of the decision. Several department sources characterized Meese as "shocked."

CBS News and The Washington Post reported that Burns and Weld had met with White House Chief of Staff Howard Baker a week earlier and expressed their concerns about Meese. According to CBS, they asked if the Reagan administration was willing to urge Meese to step down, but Baker responded that the president felt Meese was a victim of political backstabbing and they could expect no help from the White House.

Meese has been under investigation for nearly 11 months by McKay, the independent counsel who last May 11 began looking into Meese's involvement with the scandal-plagued Wedtech Corp.

The investigation later expanded to include his involvement in a $1 billion Iraqi pipeline project, with the independent counsel trying to determine whether Meese may have been paid off by Wallach or others in exchange for helping Wedtech or the pipeline project.

Regarding the new area in the Meese probe, Wallach's lawyer, San Francisco attorney George Walker, was quoted in today's Post as saying Wallach played a "peripheral" role in getting Mrs. Meese the job at the MS society.

However, Bierbower said the idea for hiring Mrs. Meese came from the chapter's executive director, Jeanne Bradley, who was pleased with Mrs. Meese's volunteer work for the group. The attorney general's wife has been associated with the group's Washington chapter since 1981.

Bierbower said Mrs. Meese accepted the MS job rather than an offer to do public service work for local radio station WWDC.

Walker said Wallach had "suggested the possibility" of the radio job, and Bierbower said a foundation run by the family that owns the station ended up paying Mrs. Meese's $40,000 salary for the MS society job she took instead.

One Justice Department source said Weld has frequently expressed an interest in returning to Massachusetts to seek political office, and didn't want to be associated with the department because of Meese's continuing legal problems.

Weld, a former U.S. attorney in Boston who has prosecuted a number of important public corruption and white-collar crime cases, is widely mentioned as a potential Republican gubernatorial candidate. He also has said he wants to run for the U.S. Senate, the source said.

Burns has been urged by family members and friends to quit based on fears that the taint of the Meese probe will damage Burns' reputation, said several department sources. Burns also felt undercut on a number of issues, they said. For example, his plans to announce that the Palestine Liberation Organization office at the United Nations would be closed were sidetracked by Meese, who then had another department official announce the plans several weeks later.

Another source said the precipitating factor was an internal fight over the successor to Stephen Trott as associate attorney general, the department's No. 3 post, which Weld wanted.

Burns quickly denied that as the reason for the resignation, however, telling reporters Tuesday night at the Justice Department that the suggestion was "silly." Another department source who is a Meese loyalist said the loss in the job fight was "an irritant" to Burns and Weld, but certainly not the reason for their resignation.

Fried, the solicitor general who represents the government before the Supreme Court, said he would think about his own future with the department in light of the resignations.

"The possibilities include my departure, or that this is just a tempest in a teapot or many other things as well," he said.

Burning Ban
RALEIGH (AP) — A ban on all outdoor burning has been issued for 24 Western North Carolina counties because of dry conditions, low humidity and an increasing number of wildfires, State Forester Harry Layman says.

The ban became effective at 6 p.m. Tuesday in the following counties: Alexander, Alleghany, Ashe, Avery, Buncombe, Burke, Caldwell, Cherokee, Clay, Graham, Haywood, Henderson, Jackson, Macon, Madison, McDowell, Mitchell, Polk, Rutherford, Swain, Transylvania, Watauga, Wilkes and Yancey.

Forest officials in the counties have reached the capacity for handling new fires, officials said.

A ban on burning was in effect in the 24 counties from March 23 through March 25. Light rain in the mountain region allowed state officials to lift the ban, but the rain did not alleviate the dry conditions.

Officials say the southwestern mountains need 11 inches of rain to alleviate dry conditions, and the northern mountain section needs more than eight inches of rain.

Dole Bows Out, Beaten But Not 'Defeated'

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican Bob Dole, who for one winter week looked like a good bet for the Republican presidential nomination, has ended his quest for the White House as much the victim of his own campaign's shortcomings as of George Bush's success.

"My friends know that I am a fighter. I don't like to lose," the Senate Republican leader said in bowing to the inevitable Tuesday. "I have been beaten before, and no doubt will be again. But I have never been defeated and never will be."

In an ad-libbed addition to his prepared speech, Dole promised to do "all I can for our nominee, George Bush."

Bush, with an insurmountable delegate lead, called Dole while campaigning in Wisconsin to thank him for a "very generous statement." He added, "It's been a hard-fought campaign and I respect the tenacity of Bob Dole."

Only Pat Robertson remains in the GOP race as a stubborn challenger to Bush. Robertson conceded "it seems obvious" that Bush would be the nominee but said he won't withdraw as a candidate.

Dole formally withdrew surrounded by family and friends in the Senate Caucus Room, scene of Watergate and Iran-Contra hearings. A supportive audience of Senate and House colleagues jammed the room.

Also present were two former senior aides to the campaign, David Keene and Don Devine, who because of the public manner of their firings were reminders of the Dole campaign's internal divisions and ineptitude.

Dole's withdrawal must have been painful for a candidate who, in the glow of his lead-off victory in Iowa, could see the nomination almost within his grasp.

He benefited in that farm state from his rural, humble roots in neighboring Kansas, and the contrast with the patrician Bush. His victory in the nation's first delegate contest left Bush a stunned third-place finisher behind Dole and Robertson.

For the next week, critics called Bush a failed campaigner and Dole appeared on a winner's roll. Even his own pollster told Dole that he would likely win New Hampshire, riding a surge in popularity built on his Iowa success.

But the Dole campaign, thinking it could coast across the finish line, did not answer tough, last-minute Bush television ads that suggested Dole would raise taxes.

Fiercely and historically opposed to taxes, New Hampshire voters dealt Dole a loss from which he could not recover. Dole later described his failure to answer the Bush ad as his big mistake.

Dole's campaign was beset by internal divisions and vacillation. Critics said it was a reflection of Dole himself, calling him a consummate legislator but lacking in an executive's ability to delegate authority or organize.

After New Hampshire, Dole's campaign went into a tailspin. It seemed to unravel in embarrassingly full view.

Campaign manager Bill Brock, in a struggle for control, fired Keene and Devine as reporters watched. He ordered the two off the campaign plane in Florida.

Dole's strategy for winning the White House had been based primarily on winning the first two contests, and when he fell short in New Hampshire his candidacy collapsed.

He found himself far behind Bush in the Southern primaries on Super Tuesday three weeks later. Unable to focus his energies on his best opportunities, he lost everywhere. In one night, Bush moved halfway to a delegate majority.

Dole couldn't turn the race around in Illinois and was effectively out of the running.

In a metaphor of his sputtering campaign, a live 30-minute television broadcast in Illinois — planned in 11th-hour desperation — was ruined by an electronic glitch.

Dole was always dogged by a reputation for meanness born of his hatchet-man role as the 1976 vice presidential nominee. He was unable to shake it this time around.

Bitter on the night of his New Hampshire loss, Dole snapped at Bush during a joint, live network television interview for "lying" about his record.

He was frustrated by a feeling he still had to run against Ronald Reagan, the man who defeated both Dole and Bush in the 1980 GOP race. Bush, Reagan's loyal vice president, inherited much of the president's support.

"I'm sort of running against the ghost of Ronald Reagan," Dole once said.

Dole campaigned gamely last week in Wisconsin, his campaign jet and entourage gone. But Bush had a massive lead in the polls.

By week's end, Dole appeared to be weary of waging a campaign that was only going through the motions.

"One thing you learn how to do pretty well in our business is to count," he said in withdrawing. "You come to trust your instincts to tell you when it's over, and in my heart I know the time is now."

Panel OKs Ship Sale To Japan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Armed Services Committee has voted to make some of the Navy's most sophisticated technology available to Japan to help defend western Pacific seas against the Soviet Union.

The decision came Tuesday as the Democratic-controlled panel voted 48-4 approval of a bill authorizing the Pentagon to spend $299 billion in the fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

The committee also cut President Reagan's request for Star Wars anti-missile spending and his plan to put multiple-warhead MX missiles on western railroads.

By a 46-6 vote, the committee approved the tentative administration plans to go ahead and sell Japan up to four of the Navy's $1.2 billion Aegis-class destroyers.

An elaborate array of sensors and radars connected with guns and missiles makes the Aegis the Navy's most sophisticated system of defenses for surface ships.

Japan wants to buy the ships as part of the Japanese role in helping defend vital sea lanes near the Soviet Union.

Some legislators have opposed the move, arguing that the Aegis weapons should remain in the U.S. Navy. Critics have pointed to the case of Toshiba, a Japanese company which has admitted helping in the illegal sale of sophisticated machinery to the Soviet Union to build quieter Soviet submarines.

Dukakis Takes Decisive Victory In Connecticut

By LAURA KING
Associated Press Writer
Michael Dukakis today thanked "the people who know me best" for his decisive win in the Connecticut primary, which puts his Democratic presidential campaign back on track for coming contests. Jesse Jackson chalked the results up to Dukakis' regional ties.

George Bush, with the GOP nomination all but in hand, called on Republicans to "keep together and get to work." Bush won overwhelmingly in Connecticut — as he had been expected to do even before principal rival Bob Dole dropped out of the race on primary day.

Dukakis celebrated the 2-1 victory as a "good win for us."

"We won with a big, big margin, but it's not the first of my victories," the Massachusetts governor said on NBC-TV's "Today" show. "I've won in the South. I've won in the Northwest. I've won in the Midwest. I've won up here in the Northeast and I'm very pleased."

"But this is a marathon and it's going to be all the way to the finish line. I'm just very pleased that people who know me best were so supportive," he said.

Jackson, who has beaten Dukakis in two states in the last two weeks — Michigan and Illinois — congratulated the Massachusetts governor but suggested geography and campaign finances played a key role.

"You did well with your home field advantage," said Jackson, who also appeared on the NBC program.

Sen. Paul Simon, who barely contested Connecticut, made the same point Tuesday night. "We assumed this was Dukakis territory," he said.

Sen. Albert Gore Jr., who spent $75,000 in the state, called the Connecticut results a "total non-surprise."

Dukakis, however, insisted that his win was no less important for coming on home ground.

"It's as absurd to say those should be discounted as it is to say Jesse's should be because it's next to Illinois," he said Tuesday night.

With 100 percent of the Connecticut precincts reporting, Dukakis had 58 percent to Jackson's 28 percent. Gore trailed with 8 percent, and Simon had 1 percent.

That restored Dukakis' lead in the national delegate race. The latest AP count put Dukakis at 647.55; Jackson at 634.55 and uncommitted at 500.6. Gore had 364.8 and Simon 169.5.

Labor Loses Fight For Warning

WASHINGTON (AP) — Labor unions have suffered their first major loss in the Senate since Democrats gained a majority in the 1986 election, as senators refused to guarantee warnings to workers facing on-the-job exposure to toxic chemicals.

The Senate's rejection on Tuesday of a bill to require notice for workers exposed to carcinogens and other job hazards ended a string of union victories this congressional session. In earlier industry-labor showdowns, the Senate had approved measures to ban most uses of lie detector tests and require advance notice of plant closings.

Sens. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, and Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., chief sponsors of the worker notice bill, could get only 42 of the 60 votes needed to cut off an eight-day filibuster led by Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah.

Barbara Sinatra Finds Herself By Aiding Children

By NIKKE FINKE
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. — You think you know her without even talking to her. After all, she looks like just another pampered wife flocking to this playground for the privileged. You know the kind. The worry-free, wrinkle-free woman married to the Hollywood Living Legend, whose meticulous grooming is as perfect as a mannequin's, whose 56-year-old legs are Nautlius-toned, whose biggest headache probably is deciding which Oscar (as in de la Renta) to wear. You tell her so. And, she agrees. "Yes," Barbara Sinatra says. "I love being a desert bum."

The one-time Long Beach charm school teacher, Las Vegas showgirl and divorced mother landed in luxury's lap when she married the "serious" Marx brother, Zeppo, and moved here in 1963. She fell into "the slow, lazy, indulgent life" of the desert, as her good friend Dinah Shore describes it — mornings of golf and tennis (sometimes barefoot and in bathing suits), lunch at the exclusive Palm Springs Racquet Club, afternoons of gin rummy, nights spent poolside.

Her world became even more idyllic in 1976 when Barbara Marx became the fourth Mrs. Frank Sinatra — and the most anonymous. Then she found a way to escape that limbo known as "the wife of." She raised $2.25 million to build the Barbara Sinatra Children's Center, a state-of-the-art center for sexually abused children that opened in November 1986 on the grounds of the Eisenhower Medical Center here. Now she is working to locate another $5 million to endow it, for which she and her husband will host a "Weekend With the Sinatras" for 25 couples in May, where for $25,000 for two, even strangers can rub shoulders with them here and in Las Vegas. And on the weekend before that, she will be the first woman ever honored by the New York Friars Club.

Of course, the mystique of her husband's name counts for a lot — as she is quick to note. But so does Barbara Sinatra's own toughness, which she developed long before becoming Mrs. Marx or Mrs. Sinatra. And which she now cleverly disguises under that honey hair and milky complexion whether she's chairing a board meeting or competing for dollars in this desert oasis already flooded with charity fund raising.

"For someone who's not very pushy," actor Roger Moore notes, "she's very good at asking anybody for anything for her cause."

How tough is she? Well, for all of her husband's support of her cause — estimated at $250,000 in monetary contributions, plus personal appearances, singing performances and arm-twisting of his famous friends — his wife casually lets it drop that he's persona non grata at the center where molesting fathers often come for treatment.

Why? "Because my husband's from a totally different school. My husband wants to break their legs. He wants to round up all the men and break their legs," she says matter-of-factly.

She laughs and adds, "He says, 'You can talk to them all you want to, but let me teach them and they'll never do it again. If you put them in a hospital for a year, when they come out they're not going to do that.' So he's not allowed in here, you know."

But her statements don't mean that she is criticizing her husband, she says. "I just hope the day ever comes," she says softly, "when I do as many good things as he does."

She acknowledges that "there's good and there's bad" about him. "Not everybody fits into one category."

"But the ones in the press who want to write the negative things are going to write them anyway. So if you're an important name like he is, then you have to expect some of that. And your skin gets a little tougher as you grow older, but I don't think there isn't ever a time when it doesn't hurt."

After years of being influenced by her husband's contempt for the media, Barbara Sinatra nevertheless has come to realize that she now needs to publicize her cause — which is why she granted a rare interview at the center, a stone's throw from the Betty Ford Center.

So this one-time outsider who became the ultimate insider of Palm Springs society is coming out from behind the heavily guarded walls of her compound on Frank Sinatra Drive to answer questions about herself.

The former Barbara Blakeley was born in Bosworth, Mo., which she pronounces with a decided Midwest twang. "Its population is 500, and they're still there, the same 500."

When she was 10, her parents moved to Wichita, Kan., and fell on hard times during the Depression. Shy and withdrawn, she also was gangly. "I always felt like the bones stuck out. I didn't consider myself pretty at all. But I realized that the best thing I could do in life was to work as a model."

After graduating from high school, she moved to Long Beach, Calif., with her parents, began modeling for department stores and auto shows and married a singer. (Was he good? "He thought so," she says wryly.)

At 19, she landed a coveted contract with the Eileen Ford modeling agency in New York. But she was pregnant and returned to Long Beach.

Her friends clamored to learn from her modeling experiences, and, at age 21, she opened the Barbara Blakeley School of Modeling and Charm.

Four years later, she was a divorced businesswoman without business skills, and single parent to a son. (Bob Marx, 36, who took the Marx surname when he came of age, is a New York attorney.) She found money to be a constant problem and recalls working "my tail off" 6 a.m. to midnight.

"Life was not easy, but worth it," she says, frowning her unfurrowed brow. "And I do think it made it easier for me to appreciate some of the things that I have now. Because there isn't a day that I wake up that I don't thank God."

She moved to Las Vegas in 1959 and became a showgirl at the Riviera Hotel, fulfilling a "secret yearning."

Enter Zeppo Marx. "He came in to rehearsals and he kept hanging around every night," Sinatra remembers. After three years of off-again, on-again dating, they were married.

He was 57 and retired from show business when she moved into his estate on the grounds of the Tamarisk Country Club. Suddenly, she had money, position and entree. Zeppo Marx was so accessible that he even listed his phone number and address in the local telephone book. "And that's when I first started meeting Hollywood-type people," she says.

Though Marx kept her amused, eventually the difference in their ages drove them apart, she says. "I really think that at the time I married him, he was a young man. But the longer we were married, the more he wanted to be reclusive."

They divorced in the mid-70s. And in 1979, when Zeppo Marx died of lung cancer (after dating her sister, Patricia Wells), she was already Barbara Sinatra. But even today, a lot of people locally persist in calling her Barbara Marx.

During her marriage to Zeppo, Ol' Blue Eyes was just another neighbor she passed in her golf cart. "I'd always been a fan of his singing. I'd always had all his records," she says. "But I really didn't care about knowing him because of the press I'd read. It just wasn't a pretty picture."

And she laughs. Imagine, his own wife believing the media reports about him.

But her impression improved after she glimpsed the "other" Frank Sinatra when she planned a City of Hope fund-raiser around the premiere of "Spartacus," and then needed to find another movie.

"So Zeppo talked to Frank on the golf course and told him what had happened. And Frank said he'd fill in and he'd bring his movie ('Come Blow Your Horn') and all the stars and everything. And he did, and that's how we really got to know each other."

Though married to another man, she acknowledges that she felt the legendary Sinatra magic. "I think anyone who met Frank Sinatra would have to have sparks," she explains. "Because he is a flirt. That's just part of his make-up. And there's no way to avoid that flirtation. No way."

Once divorced from Zeppo, she bought Groucho's old desert home and became Sinatra's almost constant companion. By this time, he had been a bachelor for nearly a decade after three failed marriages — to Nancy Barbato, Ava Gardner and Mia Farrow.

And when did the romance begin? Suddenly, her face freezes and an icy expression indicates that the interview has become too personal.

"I don't think it's really important," she says. "I'd rather talk about the Children's Center."

He was 60 and she was 46 when their July 1976 nuptials took place three months before the couple's announced wedding date. Her good friend Barbara Kaplan remembers, "We received an invitation from the Annenbergs to come to a party at their home. And it said, 'Pray Silence.'"

That was one of the singer's favorite sayings.

Even Kitty Kelley — whose 1986 unauthorized biography of Frank Sinatra, "His Way," contained negative tales — cannot find anything bad to say about Mrs. Frank Sinatra No. 4.

"I think she's a beautiful, beautiful, woman," says Kelley, reached by phone in Washington. "She has chosen the life she wants, and I salute her."

She has succeeded in getting the "Chairman of the Board" to toe the line as a husband, even though his other wives tried and failed. "She's very powerful in that marriage," one source says, "and he really does what she says now."

Pet Owners Urged To Omit Names

DEAR ABBY: To the person who wrote to alert pet owners to outfit their pets with collars and tags bearing the animal's name and the owner's telephone number — good advice, indeed. But please, do not put the cat or dog's name on an I.D. tag. With dogs especially, it will make it so much easier for someone to steal your beloved companion.

If the dognapper calls the dog by name, the dog will be more apt to follow the stranger to who knows where — cruelty? Experiments? So, a word to the wise: The pet's license number and the owner's address and telephone number are all you need to include. Omit the name. That's between you and your pet! — LISA BARSOTTI, LOS ANGELES

DEAR ABBY: You printed a letter a while ago about a woman who had had breast reduction surgery and was upset because pictures of her breasts (before and after) were on file at her doctor's office, and she heard that some of the nurses were spickering about them.

It reminded me of my own experience concerning "confidential medical records." When I was 20, I had an abortion. Seven years later when I was pregnant with my first child, my doctor asked if this was my first pregnancy, so I told him about the abortion.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

At one of my early prenatal visits, his nurse walked into the examining room, looked me straight in the eye and said, "So you've decided to keep this one?"

Abby, I was speechless! I'm sorry now that I didn't report her right away to my doctor. Needless to say, never again will I disclose that information on my medical history. Anyone in a doctor's office has access to the patient's records.

Please print this, Abby. I hope that bimbo sees it. And I'd also like to tell her now what I should have said seven years ago: "You don't belong in the nursing profession!"

SPEECHLESS IN NEW JERSEY
DEAR SPEECHLESS: Since it's still bothering you, tell your doctor now. He ought to know that your right to privacy was violated by nurse so-and-so, and you no longer will disclose your full medical history. I have heard that some physicians record highly confidential information in Latin, Spanish, German or French. Clever? Maybe your doctor should consider it.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for your answer to "Life Must Go On" — the woman who wanted to begin dating six months after the death of her husband. You responded that grief is very personal, and no one can presume to make rules for others in that situation.

My husband of five years died, leaving me with a 7-month-old son. I know that some people were shocked when I met a man four months later, and we were married three months after that.

Abby, I adored my first husband. We both knew that he was going to die, and he made me promise to remarry and give our son a good father as soon as possible. I was fortunate enough to meet and fall in love with a wonderful man who is the best father my son (and now our 3-month-old daughter) could hope to have.

Where is it written that one must mourn alone? It took me a long time to deal with my first husband's death. Having someone to love, share my problems with and support me made it possible.

I thank God for having married the two most wonderful men in the world. And thank you for your understanding attitude. — LIFE DOES GO ON

DEAR LIFE: Not everyone thanked me. Many held to the traditional: "Out of respect for the deceased, one should wait a full year before taking company of the opposite sex." But I stand by my answer.

Problems? Write to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. All correspondence is confidential.

These super-smile crochet place mats couldn't be easier to create or care for. Novice and expert crocheters will find these oval mats quick and easy to make in a pretty pattern, finished off with a picot stitch.

To obtain directions for making the Super-Smile Place Mats, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-032788 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. C-032788 by sending a check or money order for $11.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions an ample off-white craft cord to make a set of four place mats.

Dear Pat: I'm a longtime seamstress and have only recently started to crochet. To date, I have made small items that required little or no finishing, but I am eager to make some garments now. Is there anything wrong with sewing the various pieces together by machine, and, if not, are there any special tips you could give me? — Sally J., Greentown, Ohio.

Dear Sally: Generally speaking, hand-finishing is preferable to machine-finishing for knits and crochets. If you are an expert seamstress, however, you may achieve excellent results with certain types of yarn and pattern stitches.

Before starting a garment, I would suggest that you make a couple of sample swatches with the yarn and pattern stitches to be used. Then try stitching them together by machine, perhaps using a zigzag stitch.

The first thing to check in these samples is the amount of bulk in the seams. This is one of the primary objections to machine joining. If the resulting seam is not too bulky, check to see if it has enough elasticity. Finally, turn the pieces to the right side to see if the machine stitching has interfered with the effect of your pattern stitch.

If you are satisfied on all three points, you will probably be quite successful in using your sewing machine to join the various pieces of a knit garment.

You may have to make some slight adjustments as you crochet, adding extra stitches to the edges for seam allowances. Normally, knit and crochet directions are written assuming that an edge-to-edge joining will be used, so no allowances are made for seams.

If yours is a simple pattern stitch with repeat of the pattern of the pattern every two or three stitches, this will represent no problem. With many crochet patterns, however, it will take several stitches to work one repeat of the pattern. In this case you would need to be expert enough to know how to work partial patterns at the side edges.

You might also want to place a piece of tissue paper or wax paper below and on top of your crocheted fabric so that it will not catch on the sewing machine. The paper is, of course, torn off after the stitching is completed.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed higher today, following through on Tuesday's rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 7.79 to 2,006.13 in the first half hour of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 2 to 1 in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 632 up, 313 down and 474 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 23.01 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Analysts said the market's drop last week apparently attracted some buyers who had been waiting for a chance to get in on the rally in stock prices that began late last year.

They also noted that the dollar had shown signs of steadying again in foreign exchange. That sparked a rebound in bond prices in Tuesday's activity.

Wall Streeters were generally pleased with the government's report Tuesday that the index of leading economic indicators rose 0.9 percent in February.

That was taken as a signal that the economy was neither weak nor dangerously strong.

Texaco rose 3/8 to 48 3/8 on top of a 3 1/4-point jump Tuesday, when Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co. said it would seek regulatory clearance to buy as much as 15 percent of the company's stock.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained .49 to 147.71. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.00 to 295.33.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 18.57 to 1,998.34.

Advancing issues outpaced declines by more than 2 to 1 on the NYSE, with 1,015 up, 467 down and 482 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 152.69 million shares, against 142.82 million in the previous session.

Plants Crippled

Trud said people in Stepanakert are grateful for the government's efforts, but that some still believed it was necessary to stay away from work to press their demand to transfer control of Nagorno-Karabakh to Armenia.

The newspaper Sovetskaya Rossiya said about 100 specialists and workers appeared for work at an electrical-technical factory Tuesday morning.

"Yesterday we held yet another meeting, and again Communists voted to go to work," plant director B. Arushanyan said. "The first results, however, are not great. But all the same we've started to work and this number will provide an example for others."

Ninety percent of the workers at a plant manufacturing construction materials appeared for work Monday morning, only to walk out en masse, the newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda said.

Sovietsky Karabakh published an appeal in today's edition from the city Communist Party urging workers to go back to their jobs, said the man who answered the telephone at the newspaper. He declined to read it over the telephone.

A woman who answered the telephone at city Communist Party headquarters refused to answer questions, saying she only answered to higher party authorities.

About three-quarters of Nagorno-Karabakh's people are ethnic Armenians. Azerbaijanis, who are predominantly Moslems, and Armenians, who are mostly Christians, have long been rivals.

Armenians began mass protests in February demanding that Nagorno-Karabakh be turned over to Armenia. On Feb. 28, ethnic rioting broke out in the Azerbaijani city of Sumgait, and officials said 26 Armenians and six Azerbaijanis were killed.

Official reports said Tuesday that a curfew in Sumgait had been lifted, and that the city was returning to normal.

Israel Closes Arabs' Only Information Service As Annual Protest Day Nears

RAMALLAH, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Israel today closed a key Arab information service and its soldiers shot and killed a Palestinian woman and wounded three family members in their home in the occupied West Bank.

Hospital officials said three other Arabs were wounded in clashes today, an annual day of violent protest in the occupied territories.

Israeli officials hoped their ability to control unrest today might signal the end of nearly four months of violent Arab protests.

Eight police officers swept into the Arab-owned Palestine Press Service in east Jerusalem and ordered it closed for six months under 1948 emergency regulations. The service is the only Arab information agency and has been a critical source for journalists since Israel ordered the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip closed Monday.

The move was one of several measures taken by Israel in an effort to block major rioting to mark Land Day, an annual day of demonstrations against Israeli land confiscation. Six Arabs were killed in a Land Day protest 12 years ago.

An extra 4,000 police were stationed today in Israel's Arab sectors, including traffic police placed on riot duty.

Telephone lines to Gaza remained severed, troops warned on loudspeakers that curfew violators would be shot and Gaza and the West Bank were closed to most outside traffic. Only the territories' 65,000 Jewish settlers were permitted to travel freely.

The tight security failed to prevent a clash in Deir Abu Mashal, a West Bank village 20 miles northwest of Jerusalem, according to hospital officials and a report by the Palestine Press Service made moments before it was closed.

Troops entered the home of Wajalah Rabir, 50, while she and her family were eating breakfast, and fatally shot her in the head, Ramallah Hospital officials told The Associated Press in a telephone interview.

A visitor to the hospital quoted Mrs. Rabir's 17-year-old daughter Zeinab as saying the soldiers came in and asked if there were any men in the house.

The visitor said the girl told the troops no men were home, but they entered anyway. The visitor, who spoke on condition of anonymity, quoted the girl as saying a soldier shot one brother who started to run. Other family members then lunged toward the troops who opened fire on the family.

The hospital officials said Mrs. Rabir was killed and her husband and two sons were shot and in serious condition. The officials, who have been banned from speaking to journalists, insisted on anonymity.

The army confirmed the woman was killed and three people were wounded. The fatality brought to 120 the number of Palestinians who have been killed by Israelis since the unrest in the occupied lands began Dec. 8, according to U.N. figures. One Israeli soldier was also killed during that time.

Three other Palestinians were wounded today in the West Bank — one in a clash near Betunuya, a small village south of Ramallah, and two, including a 12-year-old girl, in Sair near Hebron, hospital officials said.

In New York, the U.N. Security Council scheduled an urgent, Arab-requested meeting for today on the unrest. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar expressed "acute concern" over the continued killing of unarmed Palestinians.

Ibrahim Kareen, publisher of the Palestine Press Service, called the closure order "another act of repression. Israeli officials are trying to impose a complete blackout on what is happening in the occupied territories."

He said police told him the agency was being closed in part because it was funded by the Palestine Liberation Organization, an allegation he denied.

Kareen vowed he would continue providing information to foreign journalists: "All we need is a telephone."

A general strike was observed today in Israel's Arab towns, east Jerusalem and the West Bank. Dozens of mounted police and foot patrols moved through east Jerusalem's main Salah Edin Street.

In Nazareth, the village where tradition says Jesus grew up, Arab activists today monitored the effectiveness of the general strike.

"We've been sitting in this car since 4:30 a.m. and everything has gone according to plan," Suheil Diab, head of the local strike organization, told the AP. "This is the most successful strike we have ever had."

About 900 Arabs have been arrested in east Jerusalem since Dec. 8, Israel radio said. Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said on Tuesday night that more than 4,000 Palestinians were being held in Israeli jails.

Rampants Roll Over Nash, 9-2

By TIM CHANDLER Reflector Sports Writer

Rose combined clutch hitting with a fine pitching performance from Jamie Brewington Tuesday afternoon to record a 9-2 victory over Northern Nash in Big East Conference baseball action.

Brewington, who improved his pitching record to 2-0 for the year, went the distance on the Guy Smith Stadium mound to pick up the victory, giving up only three hits while striking out nine.

Brewington's only trouble in the game came in the third inning when he walked the first three batters to load the bases with no outs. RBI singles by Dean English and Don Whitley then allowed the Knights to score their only runs of the game.

Brewington put a damper on any more runs by Nash in the inning by recording three consecutive strikeouts.

"I thought Jamie did a good job for us out there today," Rose coach Ronald Vincent said. "After he got past that one tough inning, he just got stronger — he's gonna be a good one."

Nash head coach Rod Ramsey agreed. "He (Brewington) seemed to catch a second wind after we gave him a little trouble early," Ramsey said.

The win lifted Rose to 5-0 for the season and to 1-0 in the Big East Conference, while the Knights slipped to 3-2 for the season and 0-1 in league action.

The Rampants broke out on top in the bottom of the first inning when Axel Smith took his first pitch from Whitley, whose record dipped to 2-1 on the mound with the loss, and towered a home run over the leftfield fence.

Rose moved out to a 2-0 lead in the second frame when designated hitter Tom Moyer powered a roundtripper to the same spot Smith did.

After the Hawks had tied the game at 2-2 in the top half of the third inning, the Rampants seized the lead for good in the bottom half of the inning. Centerfielder Timmy Moore opened the inning with a double to right. With two outs in the inning, Moyer, who finished the day three-for-three with four RBI, delivered a run-scoring double down the leftfield line.

The Rampants ended any upset hopes by the Hawks in the fourth inning with a five-run burst.

Jay Surles opened the inning with a bunt single. Following a walk to shortstop Brian Wille, Heath Clark reached base on a bunt single to load the bases with no outs in the inning.

"We failed to cover first base on those bunts," Ramsey said. "It was simply a mental mistake, but sometimes that makes the difference in a baseball game."

Whitley then issued a walk to Moore to bring the first run of the inning in for the Rampants. A two-run single by Smith, who was three-for-four with four RBI for the game, to center, followed by a two-run single to left by Moyer, closed out the scoring in the inning and left the Rampants holding on to an 8-2 lead.

"I think Moyer and Smith really came through with some big hits for us today," Vincent said. "It seemed like whenever we needed a hit they were at the plate and they delivered it."

Rose put a little icing on the cake in the sixth inning with one more run. Moore reached base by error and then stole second. Smith then drove him home when he laced a single to center.

The Rampants finished the game with 11 hits, while not making a error.

Rose will be back in action in the Big East Conference on Thursday when it travels to Rocky Mount, while Nash will also be in action Thursday on the road against Wilson Beddingfield.

Duke Remembers Manning

DURHAM (AP) — When Duke beat Kansas 74-70 in overtime Feb. 20, Jayhawk star Danny Manning scored 31 points and 12 rebounds — a performance good enough to win the respect of his opponents.

"What I remember most about Manning is how hard he worked," said Duke's Danny Ferry. "I was impressed by that. I knew he had great skills, but I think I underestimated him a bit. After that, he had my vote for player of the year in the country."

But Ferry and Blue Devil Coach Mike Krzyzewski know that Manning won't be the only player on the floor when they face Kansas again in the Final Four of the NCAA tournament.

"It'd be a real mistake if we concentrate solely on Manning," Ferry said. "They have other, like (Mill) Newton, who people don't pay much attention to, but they're great players."

"You can't ever say to a great player, 'Let him have what he's going to have,'" Krzyzewski said Tuesday. "A great player thinks that he can have everything — and rightfully so."

"I've never felt that way because I've never been a great player, but I've seen some great players feel that way. I think you have to make Manning earn everything and not let him have everything. And when you're making him earn everything not to lose track of the other guys."

"You can't let their other players hurt you," he said. "The focus should be how to make things difficult on Manning but we haven't come up with a game plan yet."

Manning, averaging 24.6 points and 8.7 rebounds, has scored 30 or more points 10 times this season in leading the Jayhawks to a 25-11 record.

Duke is 28-6, largely due to defense and a deep bench. However, Krzyzewski said he's a bit worried he won't have 6-8 reserve center John Smith to help guard Manning. Smith missed the Temple game with a broken hand and is lost for the Final Four.

"We'll miss Smith," Krzyzewski said. "That's not an excuse ... but you like to use John's experience. One thing our younger players aren't attuned to is our defense. It's something you learn after a few years."

Ferry, a 6-10 second-team All-American; 6-10 reserve Alaa Abdelnaby; and 6-5 starting center Robert Brickley all will be guarding Manning at different times, Krzyzewski said.

"I think it's an evenly matched game," Krzyzewski said. "Larry (Brown's) philosophy and mine are pretty similar. Defensively, both teams play good man-to-man, both have good team unity, we use a number of players and are pretty simple in what we do. He's probably done as good a job as anybody this year in the country in coaching.

"He's a great basketball coach and a good guy," he said. "I haven't followed his career and I don't have his picture up in my room or anything, but just being friends with him over the past few years ... to me I think he's done a great job. I like their program. I think there's mutual respect (between the programs)."

there's no question about that," Tubbs said. "It means that we're headed in the right direction, and I think it answers some of our eight-year critics who said we could never accomplish something like that."

"It lets people know that Oklahoma basketball is here, it's sound and hopefully it's going to be around like this for a long time."

When Tubbs came to Oklahoma, a trip to the Final Four was the stuff of fantasy. He replaced Dave Bliss, who left for Southern Methodist after a disappointing 15-12 year in 1980. Tubbs went 9-18 in his first season.

Then, as had been the case in his coaching jobs at Southwestern and Lamar, Tubbs began to win in his second season. The Sooners finished 22-11 in 1982 and reached the semifinals of the National Invitation Tournament. Then Tisdale came aboard, the Sooners averaged 28 victories a year for three years and went to the NCAA Tournament each year.

In 1986, the year after Tisdale left, Oklahoma finished 26-9 and lost in the second round of the NCAA's to DePaul. A year ago, Oklahoma was 24-10 and reached the round of 16.

Three of the top eight scorers in school history graduated from the 1987 team. This year, in what was expected to be a rebuilding season, Oklahoma has run off winning streaks of 14, 12 and eight games in building a 34-3 record.

For the past several years, Tubbs has heard critics say Oklahoma could get only so far in the tournament, but never get over the hump. He removed that millstone when the Sooners beat Villinova to win the Southeast Regional.

"People said we couldn't make it; well, we did," he said. "It means that we have that potential and that capability. It's not just a dream — it's a reality."

"We've kept in touch with realism throughout our Oklahoma basketball program in the last eight years. We said that we thought realistically we could be at this point. We said that throughout the year."

"It means that what we're saying is true," Tubbs said. "There's some amount of dream in it, but it's true."

Tubbs Keeps His Promise To Make FB Team Proud

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — On his first day as basketball coach at Oklahoma, Billy Tubbs said he planned to build a program that would make the football team proud. Everybody had a good laugh over that one.

Yet eight years later, it appears Tubbs has kept his word. His teams have averaged nearly 25 victories a year, have been invited to the NCAA Tournament each of the past six years and have won three Big Eight Conference titles.

On Saturday, Oklahoma's basketball program takes another step up when the fourth-ranked Sooners take part in their first Final Four since 1947. Oklahoma plays second-ranked Arizona in one of the semifinal games, with the winner to play either Kansas or Duke in Monday's championship game.

Oklahoma has been a fixture in the Top 20 since the 1983 season, when Wayman Tisdale came out of a Tulsa high school and turned the college game on its ear, becoming the first freshman to be named All-American. In Tisdale's junior year, Oklahoma reached the final eight, coming within a whisker of making the Final Four.

Tisdale's talents let people know that football and spring football aren't the only major sports in Oklahoma. And Saturday's appearance at Kansas City, Tubbs said, will remind people that the program didn't shrivel up when Tisdale packed his bags for the NBA.

"It means a lot to the program,

Conley Pitchers Too Much For Jaguars In 7-0 Victory

By TOM MORRIS Reflector Sports Writer

FARMVILLE — D.H. Conley used four different pitchers against Farmville Central Tuesday, but it wasn't because the Vikings were in trouble.

"I feel like pitching is going to be our strength," said Conley coach Allan Wilson. "When we were coming in (today), we had intentions of pitching all four."

And those four combined to limit Farmville to only two hits as the Vikings rolled to a 7-0 non-conference win over their cross-county rival.

Bronswell Patrick started for the Vikings and pitched three no-hit innings. Sherwood Wilder followed in the fourth, pitched two innings while giving up one hit. He was then relieved by Brian Bullock, who was pitching for the first time this year while recovering from an ankle injury. Hal Conger then came on in the seventh and struck out three batters in a row to end the game.

"Their pitchers did a good job of keeping us off balance," said Farmville coach Bill Davis. "Their pitchers did a good job of mixing up the pitches."

Conley also got good hitting support for their pitchers, banging out two homers in seven hits.

The Vikings opened the game's scoring in the first when Scottie Barnhill drew a walk, went to second on a ground out by Brian Bullock and third on a wild pitch.

After one out, Wilder singled to score Barnhill and give the Vikings a 2-0 lead.

Farmville Central put a baserunner on in the second but failed to move him beyond first base.

Conley extended its lead in the third when Gray Mills reached after being hit by a pitch by Jaguar starter George Burnette. Mills then stole second and went to third on a ground out by Barnhill.

Bullock then came up and nailed a pitch over the right centerfield fence to make it 3-0.

"I think that really helped," Wilson said. "I knew we were going to use a lot of pitchers so that gave us some leeway."

Patrick then shut down the Jaguars three in a row in his last inning of action. The Vikings then added two more runs in the top of the fourth as Robbie Nichols opened with a single and came home on a home run by Travis Clemons to make it 5-0.

Farmville had a chance to get back into the game in the fifth when Wilder, with two outs, got into trouble and walked Alexander Daniels, Billy Barnhill and Jeff Tyson to load the bases. But the Jaguars failed to capitalize on the opportunity as Wilder struck out Howard Collins, who had collected Farmville's only hit up until then, to end the inning.

Conley came back with two more runs in the sixth. Clemons opened with a single, stole second and went to third on a ground out by William Crandall. Mills then singled him home to make it 6-0. Mills followed by stealing second and moving to third when Barnhill walked.

Eric King then came on in relief of Burnette and gave up a walk to Bullock to load the bases.

Patrick then scored Mills on a sacrifice fly to complete the scoring.

Burnette went five and one-third innings for the Jaguars and pitched well except for the two home runs, according to Davis.

"I was pleased with the way he threw," he said. "We just didn't swing the bats very well. They got the key hits when they needed them."

Burnette gave up five hits and struck out three.

For Conley, Patrick struck out six, Wilder struck out four, Bullock two and Conger three for a total of 15.

Wilson said he wanted to use both Patrick and Wilder to get them ready for conference play after they got a late start due to basketball. But their return, along with Bullock, has also helped improve the Vikings offense, according to their coach.

"It's picked up some with Bullock, Patrick and Wilder back in the lineup," he said. "They are three of the top four in the lineup so that's made a difference."

Clemons was the leading hitter for the Vikings, 3-2 on the year, with a 2-3 performance and two RBI.

Farmville drops to 3-3 on the year and travels to Pamlico County Friday.

Redskins, Trinity Among Victors

ROBERSONVILLE — Roanoke, aided by a trio of singles from Mike James, cruised to a 5-2 victory over Ahsokie in Northeastern Conference high school baseball action Tuesday afternoon.

After falling behind 1-0 in the first inning the Redskins bounced back to seize the lead for good in the third inning with a two-run effort.

Bob Harris singled to open the inning and then stole second. After Jesse Carlisle walked, Mark Whitaker ripped an RBI single to score Harris and advance Carlisle to second. After the bases were loaded by walks, James Nicholson received a walk, which scored Whitaker.

Roanoke struck again in the fourth inning for three more runs and a 5-1 lead. Rusty Carson walked to open up the inning. Harris and Carlisle each walked also to load the bases for the Redskins. James then connected for a two-run single. The final Roanoke run scored following an Ahsokie error.

The win boosted Roanoke to 2-2 for the season. The next action for the Redskins will come Thursday when they will battle Edenton at home.

CHOCOWINITY — Aurora High School held off a Chocowinity rally and gained a 7-6 Tobacco Belt Conference baseball victory Tuesday.

Aurora jumped into the lead with three in the first inning then added two in the fifth.

Chocowinity got into the action in the sixth, scoring four times to cut the lead to 5-4. Curtis Myers singled and stole second. Steve Carrow then walked. Lee White singled in Myers and Vance Bryant singled, loading the bases. Dale Cole singled in both Carrow and White and stole second.

Jonathan Hawley reached on an error, allowing Bryant to score.

But Aurora came back with two in the top of the seventh to stretch the lead to 7-4. Daniels walked and Sireci walked. Gaynor singled in Daniels and Alston reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Sireci.

Chocowinity tried to rally once more, but fell a run short.

Gaynor had four hits to lead Aurora while Bryant had two to pace the Indians.

Chocowinity, now 0-3 both overall and in conference action, travels to North Edgemcombe on Thursday.

Wilson pushed across seven runs in the second to take the early lead.

GCA came back in the third, scoring three runs to narrow the gap to 7-3.

Billy Potter opened the third with a single and stole second and third. After two outs, Mike Whitehead singled Potter home. Whitehead then scored on a passed ball. Jesse Leneave reached on a passed ball, advanced to third on passed balls and then scored on a balk.

But that was as close as the Knights would get. Wilson scored two runs in the third, five in the fourth, one in the fifth and four more in the sixth to complete the scoring.

Billy Potter had two hits to lead GCA, 0-3 on the year.

GOLDSBORO — Trinity Christian School opened the 1988 baseball season with a 9-5 victory over Faith Christian of Goldsboro Tuesday.

Trinity took the lead with a run in the first. Kreston Welch singled and stole both second and third. He scored on a sacrifice fly by Kirk Welch.

After scoring two in the second and one in the third for a 4-0 lead, the Tigers added two more in the fifth to score what was to be the difference.

Kirk Welch led off with a single and John Griffin was hit by a pitch. They both stole up a base and Mike Chandler was walked. Mike Willis then singled to drive in Welch and Griffin.

Trinity added three more in the sixth before Faith finally got to Griffin for three runs in the bottom of the inning, adding two more in the seventh. Griffin, in six-plus innings, walked four and struck out nine.

Kreston Welch and Willis each had two hits while Chandler hit a solo homer in the third. Kenneth Gurganus had two hits to lead Faith.

Bath took control in the second inning, putting across four runs to take control.

Cartwright singled and Keith Boyd reached on an error. Laurs Joyner followed with a walk. Newman then doubled to score Cartwright and Boyd. B.G. Woolard followed with a walk. Jay Shiverly then reached on an error to score Newman and Woolard to make it 4-0.

Bath added one run in the third and one more in the seventh to complete the scoring.

Craig Dickerson went 2-3 to lead Jamesville.

Jamesville falls to 2-2 overall and 2-1 in the Tobacco Belt 1-A Conference. The Bullets travel to Creswell Thursday.

Former Cincinnati Slugger Ted Kluszewski Is Dead

CINCINNATI (AP) — Ted Kluszewski, the slugging first baseman remembered for bulging biceps and cut-off sleeves during 11 years with the Cincinnati Reds, is dead at age 63.

He died Tuesday night, apparently of a heart attack.

The soft-spoken Kluszewski was a favorite of Cincinnati fans long after he quit playing and coaching. He had been having health problems in recent years.

"Big Klu" retired as the Reds' minor league hitting instructor last year and had undergone bypass surgery after a heart attack in 1986. Kluszewski, the Reds' first baseman from 1947 to 1957, was a four-time All-Star. He led the National League with 49 homers and 141 RBI in 1954, his best season.

Kluszewski, a burly former football end with Indiana University, was one of baseball's most feared hitters in his prime. He had 279 homers with 1,028 RBI and a .298 average in his 15-year career and was enshrined in the Reds' Hall of Fame in 1962. His .642 slugging percentage set in 1949 is still a Cincinnati team record.

He also played for the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1958-59 and with the Chicago White Sox 1959-60. He played his final season, 1961, with the Los Angeles Angels.

In his only World Series, in 1959 with the White Sox, Kluszewski hit three homers, drove in 10 runs and batted .391 in a losing cause.

The Reds discovered Kluszewski at Indiana, where he played football and baseball. The Reds held spring training at the university from 1943 to 1945.

Kluszewski, born in Argo, Ill. in 1924, drew attention by hitting line drives that broke through a wooden outfield fence.

He played on National League All-Star teams from 1953 through 1956.

Kluszewski returned to the Reds as a batting coach from 1970 to 1978, where he oversaw the hitters on the "Big Red Machine" teams under Manager Sparky Anderson. Kluszewski became the organization's hitting instructor in 1979.

Kluszewski, who had a reputation for rarely being fooled as a hitter, also was an innovator. He put a video tape machine behind the batting cage to show the hitters what they were doing wrong. He also taped opposing hitters for the pitching coaches.

Asked once how the short, Joe Morgan, could hit so many home runs, Kluszewski pointed to a video tape machine showing the second baseman swinging and said, "See that, he has great bat speed. He swings the bat faster."

Funeral arrangements were incomplete.

"He was a big guy with a heart as big as his entire body," said John Murdough, former Reds' traveling secretary. "He was just a wonderful, wonderful person."

Kluszewski once recalled the flack he got for ripping the sleeves off his uniform shirt.

"We had those flannel uniforms, and every time I'd swing it would get hung up on the sleeve," he said earlier this year.

"I complained about it, but they hemmed and hawed and finally I took a pair of scissors and cut them off. They got pretty upset, but it was either that or change my swing. And I wasn't going to change my swing."

"He was a fine hitter along with being a slugger," recalled Bucky Walters, the former Reds pitching star who later managed Kluszewski. "He wasn't bad with the glove, either. He was no Charlie Grimm or Bill Terry, but he could handle the glove."

Johnny Vander Meer, who played with Kluszewski from 1947 to 1949, said, "Off the field, there was nothing about him expressive of strength. If you sat around and talked to him, he was just another, average guy."

"When he first came up, he hit the ball mostly to left field. His shoulders were tight from playing football. That was his problem. But then, the more he played the more his shoulders loosened up and he started pulling the ball."

"He'd hit home runs with one hand," Murdough said. "He was so strong, he'd get fooled on a pitch and hit it out with one hand."

"I only saw him mad once," Mur-dough said. "Ernie Johnson (of the Braves) ... threw one that he said slipped and it went behind Klu. Klu almost fell back into it."

"The next pitch Klu hit it to the first baseman and Johnson had to cover. Klu took a swing at him. He missed. Ernie still talks about it. He says, 'If he'd have hit me, I'd be finished.'"

When Bob Howsam took over the Reds in 1967, one of his first moves after hiring Anderson was to hire Kluszewski as hitting instructor.

"Ted was running his restaurant in Cincinnati. We felt he was the type of hitter and had such ability as a hitter that we wanted to see if he could do as good a job as he did as a player."

Miller Leads All-Frosh Selections

By JIM O'CONNELL
AP Basketball Writer

Miller was able to do what freshman basketball player had done before — lead Division I in rebounding — and his coach had a explanation.

Miller led the nation in rebounding because his teammates gave him so many chances with missed shots," said Gene Sullivan of Loyola, Ill. "Obviously, you never even think of something like that. But the kid got off to such an unbelievable start. He grabbed 26 and 22 in his first two college games."

Miller, who averaged 13.6 rebounds a game, was named Tuesday to the Associated Press All-Freshman team along with Temple's Mark Macon, Georgia Tech's Dennis Scott, Indiana's Jay Edwards and Florida's Livingston Chatman.

Sullivan said the 6-foot-9, 225-pound Miller "hasn't matured physically, so he'll spend some time in the weight room. He can only get better in the years ahead. We needed his rebounding this year so we weren't worried much about his offensive game. Now we can work on that aspect of his game."

Miller did average 14.7 points per game while hitting a school-record 59.5 percent of his shots.

"What makes Kenny such an excellent rebounder is that he's an explosive jumper," Sullivan said Tuesday. "He knew no freshman had ever led the nation so he gave it an extra effort to get them at the end of the season."

Macon was the best known of the freshmen as he led the Owls to their first-ever No. 1 ranking.

"Without question, he is one of the most consistent basketball players I've ever been associated with," Temple Coach John Chaney said. "What he did for Temple was raise the level of excellence here as no one had ever done as a freshman, both on and off the court."

Macon led the Owls with a 20.6 scoring average while grabbing 5.7 rebounds and handing out 2.9 assists per game.

Chaney said Macon's huge contribution to the Owls' success wasn't limited to what happened during games.

"We knew that he had a chance to be a great, great player in his first year. He had already shown that," Chaney said. "But it was his overall character, on and off the court, that lifted us to a level never reached before in the history of the university."

Scott, a 6-4 guard, did everything for Georgia Tech this season, averaging 15.5 points, 5 rebounds and 3.7 assists per game.

He made 98 of 208 3-point attempts, setting Atlantic Coast Conference marks for number made per game and accuracy. He also set a conference record for assists by a freshman.

"Some players don't always deserve honors they receive but in Dennis' case this honor is richly deserved," Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Cremins said. "I can't think of a freshman who had a larger impact to his team than Dennis did this year."

Scott was the fifth Georgia Tech player in the last six years to be named conference rookie of the year.

Edwards, who was third in the Big Ten in scoring at 19.2 per game, was the player that turned Indiana's season around.

The Hoosiers were 1-4 in conference play when Coach Bob Knight inserted Edwards in the starting lineup. The Hoosiers rallied to finish with an 11-7 Big Ten record and earn an NCAA Tournament bid.

Edwards averaged 15.6 points a game, with a high game of 36 in a victory over Minnesota.

"It's not just Jay's scoring," Knight said. "He's an excellent passer and may be our best defensive player."

Chatman, 6-8 and 235, averaged 12.6 points, and his 6.4 rebounds a game was just behind 7-2 Dwayne Schintzius, the team leader at 6.5.

Problems with his knees, including surgery on both before the season and three more operations during the season, couldn't stop Chatman. He missed just four games.

"It's a great honor to be named to the All-Freshmen team," Florida Coach Norm Sloan said. "Livingston fought through some tough times with his injuries. I'm extremely happy for him."

Conley Rolls; Rose Falls

GREENVILLE — D.H. Conley exploded for 12 runs in the first inning of a 20-0 blowout over Farmington Central in high school softball on Tuesday afternoon.

Powell opened the inning with a slam home run to put the Vikings on top and from there, never looked back.

Conley led the way in hitting for the Vikings as she went four-for-four at the plate with a pair of home runs. Nikki Adams was four-for-five. Conley, Miriam Fulford 3-4, and Gail Cash 3-5.

Farmville was led by Anita Williams with two hits in two trips.

The Lady Jaguars fall to 0-6 and Eastern Plains Conference play Friday, hosting Pamlico.

Conley opens Coastal Conference play on Thursday at West Carteret.

Hawkins singled in Cowan and Forehand scored on a hit by Dana Hardison.

Williamston added eight in the third and five in the fourth.

Cowan and Kristie Barber each had two hits to lead Williamston. Stephanie Grimes, Michelle Lee, Jennifer Coburn and Jennifer Moore each collected a pair for the Lady Yellow Jackets.

Williamston is now 2-0 in league play, 4-0 overall. The Lady Tigers travel to Bertie on Thursday.

Northern Nash broke a 1-1 tie with two runs in the fourth and went on to take a 7-2 win over Rose in high school softball action Tuesday.

Rose had tied the game at 1-1 after scoring a run in the bottom of the second.

Andrea Rogers started things off when she reached on an error. Jenny Stoneham singled her to second. Toranda Gilbert then singled her home.

But the Knights broke it open in the fourth and fifth innings, pushing across two and three runs, respectively.

Rose added another run in the sixth as Cammy Smith and Joann Brown got back to back doubles to complete the Rampettes' scoring, but Northern Nash scored one final run in the seventh to make it 7-2.

Rose, which suffered through seven walks and six errors, falls to 4-3 overall and 0-1 in the conference and returns to action at Rocky Mount Thursday.

TKE Boxing Tourney Set For Second Night

The Tau Kappa Epsilon 13th Annual Boxing Tournament enters its second night of competition tonight at Mingest Coliseum. Admission is $2 at the door for non-students and $1 for students. There will be 10 bouts tonight in various weight classes and 10 more on Thursday night to close out competition. The tournament, which benefits St. Jude Children's Research Hospital, began 13 years ago in Wright Auditorium and the bouts were held on mats with no ring. Since then it has grown to become the largest amateur boxing tournament on the East Coast and is now sanctioned by the United States of American Amateur Boxing Federation.

Rose, Leisten Roll Over Northern Nash

Lisa Leisten set a school record by scoring five goals Tuesday afternoon as the Rose Rampettes defeated Northern Nash 10-0 in high school soccer action. Leisten goal total surpassed school records for both the men's and women's squads. The win boosted the Rampettes to 3-0 overall, the only undefeated and untied team in the Big East. Camilla Brown started the scoring at the 6:59 mark, becoming the first ninth-grader ever to score a goal for the Rampants. Tyler Hill, another ninth-grader, added Rose's second goal. Jennifer King, Jenny Jones and Missy Coyle all added goals for the Rampettes. Leisten scored two of Rose's six goals in the first half and then added three more in the second. Susan Grimsley opened the game in the goal for Rose and had the only three saves of the game. Amy Tomlinson and Melody Hahn also both played in the game. Rose outshot Northern Nash 30-3. Rose returns to action Thursday at Rocky Mount.

Jags Romp to Win In 4-Team Track Meet

DEEP RUN — Farmville Central had three double winners as the Jaguars romped to victory in a four-way track meet Tuesday. Farmville closed out the day with 102 points while East Duplin was second with 79, followed by hosting South Lenoir with 48 and North Lenoir with 47. Gary Tripp won the shot put and discus, Tyrone Joyner took the long and triple jumps and Marty Baker won the 1,600- and 3,200-meter runs. Jeffrey Waters was a double winner for East Duplin, taking the two hurdle races. Farmville is now 4-1 on the year and will entertain Ayden-Grifton and Pamlico on Thursday. Summary:

Leonard-Jeff Gagnon (E) d. Pat Campanaro-Tim Morris 6-3, 6-4.

Conley JVs Top Farmville Central, 12-2

D.H. Conley defeated Farmville 12-2 in a JV baseball game Tuesday. Scott Brock pitched a one-hitter for the win while Carl Jackson had three hits and Bill Jenkins added a two run homer for the Vikings.

Falkland Speedway Holds Seven Races

FALKLANDS — The Falklands R/C Speedway and Speed Shop held seven races March 28. Charles Gibbs took first in the open truck division, followed by Edward Proctor and Tony Ward. In the open car division, Robbie Kibbe took first while J.P. Stancil and Sonny Newman finished second and third, respectively. In the four-wheel drive A Main race, Tom Price was first while George Ryals was second and Steve Rawls was third. In the B-Main race, C.D. Bartee took first, followed by Mike Hatten and Kibbe. In the two-wheel drive A Main event, Joe Price was first, Bartee took second and Jamie Cannon was third. In the B main race, John Dupree won, followed by Jon Rawls and Kavin Marvell. In the C main race, Bill Long came out on top, followed by Dan Benson in second and Otis Oakley in third. In the open car class, J.D. Stancil's car pushed Robbie Kibbe's car to victory after his car died inches from the finish line. The next set of races will be April 10.

ECU Sports Medicine Conference Scheduled

A two-day Sports Medicine Conference for athletic trainers, coaches and team physicians will be held April 15-16 at East Carolina University. The conference will place special emphasis on the treatment and care of arm and shoulder injuries. Some other topics will include AIDS and the athletic trainer, abdominal injuries, and kidney and urinary tract problems in athletics. Rod Compton, ECU director of Sports Medicine, said the program is designed to provide necessary skills and techniques for developing a systematic program of prevention, treatment and rehabilitation of athletic injuries. He said the program will provide instruction for certified athletic trainers, teacher-trainers, coaches, student trainers and team physicians in schools with or without a sports medicine program. Members of the conference staff include Compton, Karen Baker and Greg Beres of the Sports Medicine Division. In addition presentations will be made by medical doctors Edwin Bartlett, James Bowman, James Carter, James McCallum, Denis McGillicuddy and Emmett Walsh. Phillip Callicutt from the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center will discuss AIDS and the athletic trainer and Robbie Lester of the N.C. Department of Public Instruction will present information about sports medicine in North Carolina. Friday and Saturday sessions will be held in the Carol G. Belk (Allied Health) Building from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day. Some other activities include a tour of the National Athletic Trainers Association national office, a tour of the ECU sports medicine facilities and an eastern North Carolina style pig pickin'. For information and to register contact the ECU Division of Continuing Education, Greenville, N.C. 27858-4353 or call 919-757-6143. The registration deadline is April 1.

Cats Still Feel Overlooked

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Although the Arizona Wildcats have been ranked no lower than third for most of the season, including six weeks as No. 1, they style themselves as overlooked and underpublicized.

In some respects, they may have a point. Center Tom Tolbert was pictured Monday in an Eastern newspaper battling Rick Fox of North Carolina for a rebound during the NCAA Tournament West Region final. The caption identified Tolbert as Steve Kerr, who is Arizona's point guard.

Despite the occasion slipup, the Wildcats are hardly strangers to bright lights. The real Kerr even finds it invigorating.

"I kind of enjoy the attention," he said. "I think most of the guys on the team do, but we all know this is a very serious time. We still have two games to win."

Considering that Arizona has beaten Final Four contestant Duke once this season, Arizona's next hurdle toward the national title may be the biggest — No. 4 Oklahoma, which has scored over 100 points in more than half its games and whose record is just one win shy of Arizona's best-in-the-nation 35-2.

The second-ranked Wildcats play the Sooners, 34-3, on Saturday. Duke, 28-6, and Kansas, 25-11, meet in the other semifinal.

Arizona Coach Lute Olson has spoken frequently of his concern that his players might be distracted by the furor surrounding the school's first-ever trip to the Final Four. On Tuesday, he told reporters at his weekly press luncheon that his players are off-limits until Friday, when they'll be trotted out for press conferences at Kansas City.

"We've been pretty fair with our time with the media. At this point, it's important to let the guys be comfortable, so we can concentrate on winning this thing," Olson said.

The move may have been aimed at easing the pressure on Sean Elliott, the All-American forward who led the Wildcats in scoring and was second to Kerr in assists.

Elliott said over the weekend that he hoped to end speculation that he would bypass his senior year in favor of offering himself in the NBA draft. But the speculation continues as the national publicity surrounding the team snowballs.

Olson, who took Iowa to the Final Four in 1980, has Arizona riding a 15-game winning streak, the last a 70-52 defeat of North Carolina on Sunday. It was the only time in four tournament games that Arizona won by less than 20 points.

Given Olson's feeling that the coverage has been biased for Eastern teams, where the bulk of the nation's newspapers are located, Arizona's path through the playoffs probably has been a delight to him.

His team squashed Cornell by 40 points in the first round and demolished Seton Hall, a team from a New Jersey suburb of New York City, by 29 before running to a 20-point victory over Iowa in the regional semifinals.

Then came the 18-point pasting of North Carolina, which seemed to finally dispel any lingering doubts concerning Arizona's claim to legitimacy.

Worthy, Scott Lead Laker Win

By The Associated Press
 The Los Angeles Lakers are up to their old tricks even though their magic man is still sidelined. Losers of six of their previous nine games and still without injured Magic Johnson and Michael Cooper, the Lakers got 31 points from James Worthy and 29 from Byron Scott and beat the Utah Jazz 122-111 Tuesday night.

The Lakers decided to take matters into their own hands and held a team meeting before practice on Monday without the coaches.

"It was a great motivating thing for everybody," said Wes Matthews, who dished out 13 assists. "Instead of sitting back on our heels waiting for the season to end, we have to close out the season strong."

In other NBA games, it was Atlanta 120, Dallas 106; Cleveland 108, New York 103; Portland 136, San Antonio 113; Denver 107, Sacramento 103, and Seattle 106, Chicago 103.

Los Angeles also got 21 points from Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. Karl Malone led the Jazz with 25 points and Thurl Bailey added 21.

"The only adjustment we made was that we stopped looking over our shoulders at Magic and Coop sitting on the bench and hoping they would come in and help us," Mychal Thompson said. "We have to stop feeling sorry for ourselves and just go out and play."

That they did. The Lakers, who have beaten the Jazz 10 straight times at The Forum and 29 times in 31 meetings altogether on their home court, used a 14-2 run in the first quarter and a 12-3 spurt in the second to build a 48-26 margin after only 15½ minutes.

"I think the players took it upon themselves," Coach Pat Riley said. "You can win on effort. I liked the fact that we outrebounded them 25-6 until they started trapping every time down. In the first part of the game our rebounding effort and offensive execution were flawless."

Utah Coach Frank Layden was impressed with the Lakers' performance.

"They're that much better than us anyway," Layden said. "They're playing without two very good players, but when you play with adversity, sometimes it's a benefit because you can see if the other guys can play. If they're truly a championship team, they must prove they can play without their big players."

Hawks 120, Mavericks 106

Dominique Wilkins scored 40 points, including six in a second-quarter run that gave Atlanta control of the game. Wilkins and Antoine Carr had six points each as Atlanta outscored Dallas 20-7 to turn a 31-28 lead into a 51-35 bulge. The Mavericks never got closer than seven points thereafter.

It was the 14th time this season Wilkins scored 40 or more points. It had been 131 games, the longest such streak in the NBA, since an opponent scored 40 or more against the Mavericks. The last to do it was Sleepy Floyd, then with Golden State, who scored 41 points on Dec. 6, 1986.

Mavericks Coach John MacLeod was ejected in the second period after getting his second technical when he protested too vigorously on what he thought should have been a goaltending call. MacLeod had only two prior technicals this season.

Derek Harper led Dallas with 25 points and Rolando Blackman added 22 but the Mavericks saw their Midwest Division lead shrink to 2½ games over Denver.

Wilkins credited teammate Randy Wittman's 9-for-11 shooting for his big night.

"It really opens up my game when Randy's hitting," Wilkins said. "When he's hitting, they have to give up something. They can't double-team me as much."

Cavaliers 108, Knicks 103

Mark Price scored 24 points and reserve Dell Curry scored 13 of his 19 in the fourth quarter and made a key steal as Cleveland handed New York its 30th setback in 34 road games.

Cleveland's victory, only its fourth in its last 17 games, put the Cavaliers a half-game ahead of Philadelphia for the seventh spot in the eight-team Eastern Conference playoffs.

Philadelphia leads Washington by half-game and the Knicks by 1½.

A 3-point shot by Trent Tucker brought New York within 105-103 with 19 seconds left and the Knicks regained possession on a Cleveland turnover. But Curry stole a pass by Gerald Wilkins, was fouled and made one of two free throws. Wilkins led the Knicks with 21 points.

Trail Blazers 136, Spurs 113

Clyde Drexler scored 29 points, Kevin Duckworth 24, Jerome Kersey 22 and reserve Rich Anderson made five of seven 3-pointers and scored 21 points as Portland snapped a three-game losing streak. Alvin Robertson scored 25 points and Walter Berry 21 for San Antonio, which has lost 12 of 15.

Kersey and Drexler combined for 16 first-quarter points to give the Trail Blazers a 35-28 lead. Portland led 69-59 at halftime and 103-92 after three periods before pulling away by outscoring the Spurs 33-21 in the final quarter.

Nuggets 107, Kings 103

Alex English scored 30 points and led Denver to its sixth consecutive victory. Sacramento trailed 104-101 with 20 seconds left but Denver's Michael Adams made one of two free throws and Danny Schayes hit a pair. Otis Thorpe, Harold Pressley and Kenny Smith scored 19 points apiece for the Kings, who trailed throughout.

SuperSonics 106, Bulls 103

Tom Chambers scored 34 points and Xavier McDaniel added 25 as Seattle clinched a playoff berth and moved within one game of Utah for the sixth position in the Western Conference.

The Bulls, who trailed the entire game, got 26 points from Michael Jordan, who was held to 10 in the second half, four on free throws in the fourth period.

Chambers made four key free throws after Chicago rallied within 100-99 with 47 seconds left.

Jordan was held to 17 field goal attempts, seven under his per-game average.

"Our defense was good," Seattle Coach Bernie Bickerstaff said. "We kept the ball out of the hands of the guy they wanted to go to. We did a good job of helping out."

GGO Still Tuneup For The Masters

GREENSBORO (AP) — Some recharging, refining and regrouping of internationally famous golf games is in order this week in the Greater Greensboro Open.

"Well, you like to go into the majors with the idea you're playing pretty well, at least decently," PGA title-holder Larry Nelson said.

"There are a lot of people who need to restore some confidence," Nelson said before a practice round for the Greensboro tournament that gets underway Thursday. It is the last stop before next week's Masters, the first of golf's Big Four events.

Nelson is among the starry group that needs to rebuild some confidence after the devastating cut in last week's Players Championship. He, along with U.S. Open winner Scott Simpson, British Open champion Nick Faldo of England, 1987 Players champion Sandy Lyle of Scotland and Ian Woosnam of Wales, who led the world in money-winnings last season, all missed the cut in the Players championship.

"That's not exactly what you want in the back of your mind going into the Masters," Nelson said.

Nor is a round of 80, which Ray Floyd struggled to in the final round at Ponte Vedra, Fla.

All will attempt to get things back in order this week. They are spurred by more than thoughts of Augusta.

The enriched Greensboro event offers $1 million in prize money, putting the tournament in the upper quarter of the Tour's purse tier, with $180,000 to the winner.

Despite their troubles last week, Lyle, Faldo, Woosnam, Floyd, Nelson and Simpson all rank among the leading contenders this week. Floyd, Lyle and Nelson have each won at Greensboro before and Simpson is the defending title-holder.

The most consistent challenger, however, is Gil Morgan, who is coming back from 1986 surgery. Morgan, sixth in last week's tournament, hasn't been lower than eighth in any start this season.

Some other major figures in the 144-man field are Fuzzy Zoeller, Andy Bean, Hal Sutton and each 1988 tournament winners as Lanny Wadkins, Chip Beck, Steve Pate, Steve Jones and Joey Sindelar.

ESPN will provide national television coverage.

Pat Sale Has Tentative OK

DEDHAM, Mass. (AP) — A tentative agreement reportedly has been reached to sell the New England Patriots to Reebok International President Paul Fireman and a group of Philadelphia businessmen suing for control of the NFL team.

Negotiations were continuing to complete the sale of the financially troubled team, and a decision was expected to be announced today, The Boston Globe and the Boston Herald reported.

The three-way deal for the team reportedly included Fireman, a group led by Philadelphia businessman Francis Murray and current owner Billy Sullivan.

"They'll have a press conference that will say one of two things. Either the deal is completed or Fireman will have walked out," the Herald quoted one person involved in the negotiations as saying.

A proposal made by Fireman reportedly would have him and Murray as co-owners of the team. Billy Sullivan would not be retained in any capacity, but his son, Patrick, would remain as general manager at least for the immediate future.

The Sullivan family and Fireman reportedly have negotiated almost around the clock this week. Fireman reportedly made a counter offer to Sullivan last week after rejecting a Patriots' proposal.

A spokesman for Fireman said negotiations were continuing but would not comment further.

Superior Court Judge Harold Flannery granted a 24-hour postponement of the case Tuesday after being told those involved wanted time to continue negotiations for the sale.

Losing Skid Turned Year Around For Jayhawks

By The Associated Press. Lawrence, Kan. (AP) — An illogical turning point in this improbable season helped make Kansas the unlikely Final Four team of them all.

It happened on a cold night in January. Kansas State, the archival, came into Lawrence and topped the Jayhawks' 55-game home winning streak. That 72-61 loss was immediately followed by an eight-point setback to Oklahoma, leaving Larry Brown's crew with a four-game losing skid, a 12-8 record and three available starters.

What a pity, people said, that Danny Manning's senior season is to be wasted on a team that probably won't even make it to the NCAA Tournament. Everybody who said that would have been shocked at Brown's jaunty mood.

"The night we played K-State and lost, I knew we were going to be good," Brown said. "But with our schedule the way it was ... I was just hoping we could get into the tournament. We hoped we could win 17 games and with a player of Danny's stature, maybe the NCAA would take us."

stream runs, the heavier it weighs. "I think it took a lot of pressure off us," Pritchard said.

Brown decided at the last moment to postpone a post-game team meeting. "I wanted to tell the kids how proud I was about how we played," he said.

"It's been an amazing year, I can't deny it, I knew we were going to be good," Brown said. "But with our schedule the way it was ... I was just hoping we could get into the tournament. We hoped we could win 17 games and with a player of Danny's stature, maybe the NCAA would take us."

Brown noted during that game a different attitude in his players and himself. "I had fun on the bench that night. Everything I said to the kids, they listened," he said.

"But in that game, everything I said, they listened. K-State played great. But we still had a chance to win, and then we had a chance to win the Oklahoma game. Everything just seemed to change."

Guard Kevin Pritchard also points to the Kansas State loss. "We felt bad about losing, but there was a feeling that we were getting a lot closer to where we wanted to be," he said.

Besides, the longer a winning

Huskies, Buckeyes Make NIT Finals

NEW YORK (AP) — Connecticut, last in the Big East, and Ohio State, sixth in the Big Ten, are taking a back seat to no one in the 51st National Invitation Tournament.

"There's nothing magic about the number 64," Connecticut Coach Jim Calhoun said Tuesday night, referring to the number of teams invited to the NCAA tournament. "Why does parity stop at 64 and not 96? We can play with a lot of teams in the NCAA."

The Huskies, 19-14, rallied in the second half to beat Big East rival Boston College 73-67 and advance to tonight's final against Ohio State, 20-12, which defeated Colorado State 64-62 in the other semifinal.

"The Big East prepares you for tournaments like this," Calhoun said. "In the Big East, you play against great basketball teams every night, and it brings you up a notch."

Connecticut trailed 41-33 at halftime as Dana Barros scored 22 points on five 3-point goals in the first 20 minutes. The Huskies then started the second half with a 33-12 spurt for a 66-53 lead.

Boston College, 18-14, scored 10 consecutive points to get back into the game, but the Eagles couldn't recover from having Barros held to two shots and two points after halftime.

"Their box-and-one defense on Dana really shut him down, and we couldn't get the other players going," Boston College Coach Jim O'Brien said. "Our kids hung in and I'm proud of them. We showed a lot of character in coming back and making the game close."

"Psychologically, if Barros had kept going like he did, I don't know if we could have come back," Calhoun said. "But he didn't slow down, we slowed him down."

Lyman DePriest, a 6-foot-5 freshman, scored only four points in the game, but Calhoun gave him credit for stopping the 5-11 Barros, the Big East's leading scorer.

"We put a tough athlete on Barros," Calhoun said. "DePriest is only a freshman, but he's our toughest player. We started pushing Lyman through picks to get to Barros."

"They played good defense," Barros said. "They shut us down, but we didn't shut them down. It wasn't a case of me wanting to get more shots. We have other guys who can score."

Cliff Robinson scored 29 points for Connecticut, six of them during the 33-12 spurt in the first 14 minutes of the second half, during which the Huskies were 14 for 19 from the field. After Boston College cut the 13-point deficit to three, Robinson scored the next six points for Connecticut as it rebuilt the advantage to 72-65 with 58 seconds left.

"I was confident we could make a run at them," Robinson said of his team's halftime deficit. "We did a good job of keeping them off the boards. Lyman did a great job."

Tate George scored eight of his 12 points and Phil Gamble six of his 15, including a three-point play and a 3-point goal, during Connecticut's comeback.

Ohio State also trailed Colorado State at halftime, but only by 28-25 despite 15 points by the Rams' Pat Durham.

The Buckeyes used a pressure defense to hold Durham to five points in the second half, and they weathered a brilliant shooting exhibition by guard Trent Shippen.

"The offense just came off the pressure defense," Ohio State Coach Gary Williams said. "The big thing is not steals and layups, but tempo. I was going to live and die by the press right to the end."

Shippen scored 23 of his 28 points in the second half, when he was 9 for 12 from the field and 5 for 6 from 3-point range. He hit his first six 3-pointers, an NIT record, before missing in the final minute.

"It's a neat feeling to do as well as I did, but it's not a good feeling to lose," said Shippen, averaging fewer than 10 points per game. "Their full-court pressure took us out of our offense."

Jay Burson scored 16 of his 18 points in the second half for Ohio State after taking only two shots in the first 20 minutes and 12 in the game.

"I was frustrated, but I didn't want to force anything in the second half," Burson said. "In the second half, the press really helped us."

Burson, a 6-foot guard, got inside help from 6-7 junior Tony White, who scored 17 points for the Buckeyes.

"In the second half, it was a typical Jay Burson game, and Tony White was outstanding," Williams said. "Our decision was to keep going inside. They're not the biggest team in the world."

Colorado State, 21-13, had only one player taller than 6-6 for much of the second half as 6-8 center Eric Frieauf sat on the bench with foul trouble.

Rams Coach Boyd Grant said a 33-20 rebounding deficit cost Colorado State the game.

"We got devastated inside," said Grant, who coached Fresno State to the 1983 NIT title. "We don't have fresh people to put in there."

Colorado State was making its first postseason appearance since losing to Drake in the 1969 NCAA West Regional final, but Grant said the Rams weren't satisfied just making it to New York.

"We wanted to win it," Grant said. "But I felt we played undisciplined at times."

Colorado State hit its first three shots of the second half, including a jumper and a 3-pointer by Shippen, and grabbed its largest lead, 35-27, with 18:33 left.

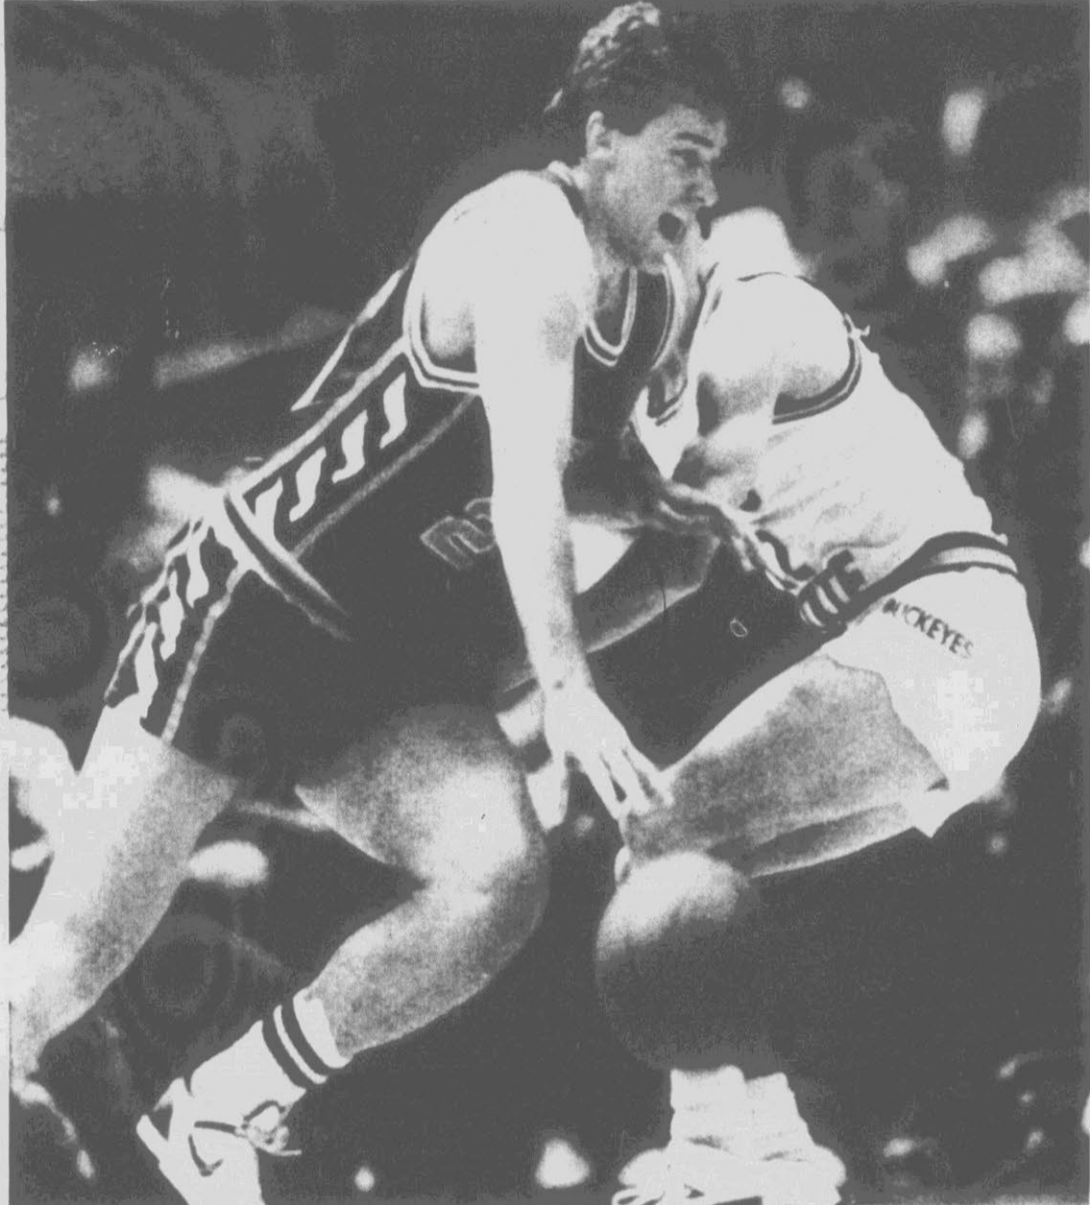

Another 3-pointer by Shippen put the Rams in front 40-33 two minutes later before Ohio State scored eight straight for a one-point edge. Burson completed the run with a steal and layup.

Shippen gave the Rams 50-46 and 53-48 leads with 3-pointers and a 55-52 edge with an outside jumper.

But Ohio State responded with a 7-1 spurt, including Burson's 3-pointer with 4:07 left that put Ohio State ahead to stay, 59-56.

Trailing 62-60, Colorado State had a chance to tie the score, but Durham was called for charging with 57 seconds left. Burson followed with two free throws with 19 seconds left.

Shippen then missed his only 3-pointer of the game, then made a jumper at the buzzer for the final margin.

Hockey's Norris Division Dogs Battling For Final Playoff Spot

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Here they come, folks, driving through the stretch, nostrils flared, pounding for home. The NHL's Norris Division dogs are heading for the finish line.

Is it unfair to call the Minnesota North Stars and Toronto Maple Leafs dogs? Well, it is merely an extension of Detroit General Manager Jimmy Devellano's description of hockey's Lilliputian division.

"The Norris Division is a little like puppy love," Devellano once said. "It's not important, unless you're a puppy."

Awaiting the survivor of this dog race is the Norris Division's final Stanley Cup playoff berth. Can you stand the excitement?

A better question is whether hockey can stand the embarrassment.

In another week, one of these lightweights will be in the playoffs, a party that ought to be reserved for the league's elite. That's what makes baseball's playoffs so special. You have to finish first to make it. You don't get there by finishing fourth and winning one of every four games, which is about the pace Minnesota and Toronto are maintaining.

The North Stars and Maple Leafs aren't exactly driving to the finish line. What they are doing is more like staggering through the stretch. But the fact of the matter is when the playoffs begin, one of them will be there with the Edmonton Oilers and Calgary Flames, the Montreal Canadiens and Boston Bruins, the haves of the NHL.

If you see Lord Stanley, please don't tell him about this. It might upset his Lordship to hear that his beloved, handsome old mug actually will be offered to one of these impostors.

The NHL is very protective of the original Stanley Cup because of its advancing years — it has been around since 1893 — and, in fact, uses a replica for public and ceremonial appearances. But when it comes to letting teams compete for the mug, the league follows a most liberal policy. Four teams make it from every division — even the Norris, where Detroit is the only team over .500 for the season.

So Pittsburgh, New Jersey and the New York Rangers struggle through the season's last days, jockeying for the one remaining Patrick Division playoff berth. All have far better records than Minnesota and Toronto — no major accomplishment, considering the way the puppies have been playing — but two of them will be eliminated.

The North Stars edged ahead of Toronto in the titanic Norris battle the other night by tying Chicago 7-7 in a game that set defensive hockey back, oh no more than a decade or so. That left Minnesota 3-17-5 in the last 25 games and right in the thick of the playoff hunt.

Despite the sad sack pace, the North Stars are one point ahead of Toronto. That is because over the same 25-game stretch, the Maple Leafs are 5-19-1.

While Minnesota was giving up a goal in the final three minutes to settle for the tie with the Blackhawks, always cooperative Toronto gave up three goals in the last four minutes to manufacture a 6-4 loss to Edmonton.

There was, however, a promising sign for the Maple Leafs. They managed 33 shots on goal, their first time over 30 in 11 games.

The tie against the Blackhawks left Minnesota with 19 victories, 13 ties and 45 losses with three games to play, beginning tonight at Edmonton. The North Stars finish with games Saturday at Vancouver and Sunday at Calgary. They could lose all three — entirely possible given their recent record — and still make the playoffs unless the Maple Leafs (20-48-10) can figure out a way to finesse some points out of their final two games, Friday and Saturday, both against first-place Detroit.

Sixteen of the 21 NHL clubs make the playoffs, so it should not be all that difficult to do. However, it also should not be so easy that a team with 19 wins in an 80-game season can be in position to make it.

To have a Norris puppy like Minnesota or Toronto in these playoffs is an embarrassment to the rest of the field, teams like Los Angeles, who earned their way in with better records.

The Kings can't afford to be too indignant, though. They're 28-42-7.

Bedford Asks For Treatment

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Detroit Pistons center William Bedford turned himself in to the NBA this morning for treatment for chemical dependency, a team spokesman said.

Bedford, a 24-year-old center out of Memphis State, is to begin treatment today at the Adult Substance Abuse Program based in Van Nuys, Calif., team spokesman Matt Dobek said. He will be under the care of Dr. Rex Fine.

The program is provided for in rules set out by the league and the players' association for treating players who abuse substances.

USDA Says Cigarette Exports To Increase This Year

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cigarette exports are expected to rise sharply this year, largely because of rising demand in some Asian countries, according to an Agriculture Department analysis.

In all, cigarette exports are forecast to be up 10 percent to 110 billion "pieces" in 1988, the department's Foreign Agricultural Service reported.

"Recent efforts to lower trade barriers in Japan, Taiwan and now, South Korea, are having a major impact on U.S. cigarette trade," the report said. "Sales have yet to reach their full potential in Far East markets, with sizable gains expected in 1988."

Much of the increase will be in Japan, which last year was the largest single foreign market for U.S. cigarettes, surpassing the longstanding leader, Belgium-Luxembourg.

South Korea, on the other hand, has "the greatest untapped potential for rapid growth" as a U.S. cigarette customer, depending on the outcome of a U.S. trade complaint, the report said.

Overall, U.S. cigarette sales to Europe are expected to increase slightly this year.

The growing popularity of U.S. blends of tobacco is "a strong stimulant to further sales" of cigarettes in Spain, and the Netherlands is expected to "absorb more cigarettes due to re-export demand" from neighboring countries, the report said. Re-exports are also contributing to the expected rise in sales to Belgium-Luxembourg.

"Gains also are expected in Turkey, Jordan, Cyprus and South Africa due to the increasing popularity of U.S. cigarettes, whereas slight decreases will occur in Morocco and Tunisia," the report said. "In the Western Hemisphere, increased shipments to Central and South American countries will more than offset decline in sales to Canada."

Exports of unprocessed tobacco are expected to increase 4 percent to 203,000 metric tons this year, with larger shipments to Indonesia, Hong Kong and Taiwan "due to the accelerating trend towards consumption of American-blend cigarettes in the Far East," the report said.

But in Western Europe, imports of U.S. leaf may drop due to declining cigarette use.

"The exceptions will be Spain and Italy where the falling dollar, lower U.S. prices and a continued preference for U.S. blends will stimulate U.S. leaf sales," the report said. "In Spain, higher prices for dark-type cigarettes will encourage consumers to substitute American blends, thus increasing U.S. leaf sales."

Extension Of Corn Loans OK'd

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has reversed a 2-month-old policy decision and will allow farmers to extend price support loans for some old-crop corn and sorghum for a year longer than their normal maturity dates.

The one-year extensions were approved for 1984-crop corn and sorghum held in the farmer-owned reserve program, and for 1985 and 1986 corn and sorghum under price support loan. No extensions will be allowed for 1983 and older corn and sorghum loans.

Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng said Tuesday the announcement on 1985 and 1986 corn and sorghum loans reversed a previous decision announced on Jan. 29.

The change was made "to alleviate grain movement problems due to a rail car shortage, grain congestion at some country elevators" and other logistical problems, he said.

But the Agriculture Department will reserve the right to "call at any time" the 1985 and 1986 crop loans, Lyng said. Grain in the farmer-owned reserve program can remain until prices rise enough to trigger its release.

The loans are extended to farmers by the department's Commodity Credit Corp., which uses the grain as collateral. If prices rise significantly, farmers usually repay the loans and sell or use the grain as they choose.

But farmers have the option of not repaying the loans, in which case CCC takes over the grain when the loans mature, or come due. By extending the loans, farmers continue to own the grain and retain their CCC options.

Parts of the Jan. 29 order still stand, including the decision not to extend loans on 1987-crop wheat, feed grains and soybeans. Also, loans that already had been extended on 1985 and 1986 wheat, feed grains and soybeans will not be extended further when those mature.

The reversal was announced here by USDA and by Lyng himself at the Governor's Agriculture Conference in Kearney, Neb.

U.S. To Study Korean Beef Ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has agreed to investigate a complaint that South Korea's ban of high-quality U.S. beef and veal is in violation of international trade practices.

The American Meat Institute filed the complaint on Feb. 16 under section 301 of the Trade Act of 1974, alleging that South Korea's May 1985 ban on imports of U.S. beef was "unjustifiable" and "unreasonable."

Manly Molpus, president of the trade association, said the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative accepted the complaint on Tuesday.

Acceptance by the office "has sent a clear signal to Korea that this country is not going to continue to tolerate unfair trade practices against our beef," Molpus said.

"We hope the Korean government will be reasonable and move quickly to lift the ban, which has no justifiable basis."

Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter said in a statement that he accepted the industry's petition "following extensive consultations with Korea for nearly three years aimed at achieving market access for U.S. high-quality beef."

Prior to the 1985 ban, South Korea was the fourth largest overseas market for U.S. meat, averaging about $5 million worth of imports annually.

Yeutter said the door is still open to South Korea for resolving the issue through negotiations. But if those efforts fail the United States could retaliate against South Korea for violating its obligations under GATT, the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, he said.

Bulldozers Replace Pineapples Tiny Hawaiian Plantation Island Is Changing To Spa

By TAMARA JONES
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

LANAI CITY, Hawaii — For the last 66 years, since James Dole bought Lanai and carved the tiny island into neat, golden rows of pineapple, little has changed.

A whistle still tells plantation workers when to get up, when to come to the fields, when to take their siestas, when to go home. People leave doors unlocked and keys in ignitions. The favorite beach is a paradise-perfect crescent of sand soft as talcum, fringed with coconut palms facing a translucent sea.

But now, bulldozers growl and saws whine over the slap of waves at Hulopoe Beach. Trees are coming down, a new recreation center has been built with Lanai's first swimming pool. Before long hotels, parking lots, movie-star mansions, sculptured hedges, a refurbished marketplace and even a lawn bowling green will sprout.

Many islanders publicly embrace the change that will nearly quintuple the 2,100 population over the next decade, saying Los Angeles developer David Murdock's plans for his new island will invigorate Lanai, giving its young a reason to stay.

But others quietly resent the face-lift, arguing that a place so small cannot support a dream so big.

"The idea obviously is to look for the rich and famous," said Bob Oda, Murdock's vice-president in charge of Lanai development. He keeps a scale-model future Lanai under glass at his office, where he talks excitedly about the millions Murdock will spend turning a plantation into a playground.

Already the dusty old town with the grandiose name of Lanai City is being put to the white-glove test.

Murdock has had junked cars and other unsightly rubbish removed from Lanai for free. And as Lanai emerges buffed and polished and painted and trimmed, many islanders have taken it as a sign that the future, too, will be bright. Others are not so sure.

"He came in and literally painted the flowers white," scoffed one resident. "You always know when Mr. Murdock is coming to town because they get out the lawn mowers, paint the signs and put out potted plants."

"He trimmed the mesquite into bonsai and closed the beach for a private picnic with linens and china."

Fumed another: "He's cutting down all the cypress. He has a thing about cypress. I'm going to plant 20 in my front yard just to spite him."

But Murdock also gave Lanai a $3 million recreation center with tennis courts, a pool, track, gymnasium, playground equipment and a football field, even though Lanai has no football team.

"Definitely there will be some adjustment, but I don't think it'll be as bad as some think," said Goro Hokama, who has represented Lanai on the Maui County Council for 34 years. "A youngster coming up will have more choices, more exposure," he said. "They won't be as secluded as we were."

Helen Pascua, a 30-year-old mother who emigrated from the Philippines four years ago and holds two part-time jobs, welcomes the changes.

"I like it. I know most people don't," she said, "but it's about time. I'd like to work for the hotels."

Oda insists that the changes will not be drastic.

"We're going to maintain the same plantation atmosphere," he promised, outlining plans to "polish up downtown" by tearing down some old buildings and renovating the survivors.

"You won't find strip malls in Lanai. It's not going to be honky-tonky or anything," he said. "We just want to create a little interest for visitors."

With a view of booming Maui to the east, Lanai can see clearly what creating too much interest will bring — high-rise hotels, traffic jams and tourists splayed freckle-to-freckle on the beaches.

On the other side, literally, Lanai also can see the consequences of spurring development, a decision neighboring Molokai made only to suffer high unemployment when its pineapple industry collapsed.

But unlike their neighbors, Lanaians do not really control their island's destiny. They may belong to Lanai but Lanai does not belong to them. And if they do not like it, as one resident noted, "it's not as if we can pack up the station wagon and just move 100 miles up a freeway to another town."

Lanai, at least 98 percent of it, belongs to Castle & Cooke, parent company of Dole, which turned the 141-square-mile speck of ranchland into — as the sign at the airstrip breathlessly proclaims — "Lanai, The Pineapple Island, The World's Premier Pineapple Plantation, Grower of Famous Dole Products."

But recent times have not been as expansive as the sign suggests, leaving Castle & Cooke deeply in debt. In July 1985, Murdock's New York-based Flexi-Van Corp. paid $337 million to merge with Castle & Cooke, making Murdock chairman of the board and chief executive officer. He also owns 25 percent of the new company. With that comes the power to redesign both the life style and landscape of Lanai.

Criticism of Murdock and his make-over is muted even from the

New Riverboat To Make Debut At Wilmington Pier Saturday

WILMINGTON — A new tourist attraction is due to make her debut portside at Riverfront Park in Wilmington on Saturday — a new cruising ship named Henrietta II. She is 86½ feet long and 28 feet wide and sports two tall smokestacks.

The riverboat was constructed in Greenville, Miss., and has been leisurely traveling to her Wilmington home for the past couple of weeks via a water route down the Mississippi River, across the Gulf of Mexico, then into the Caloosahatchee River in Florida. From there she traveled through Lake Okeechobee and along the St. Lucie Canal to Stuart, Fla., where she was boarded by Capt. Carl Marshburn III, who piloted her up the Intercoastal Waterway to Wilmington.

Honors to welcome Wilmington and North Carolina's newest 1988 attraction will get under way at 2 p.m. Saturday with a flotilla featuring a number of water vessels — including a representative from the U.S. Coast Guard Oak Island Station at Caswell Beach, a city of Wilmington fire boat, and private boats whose captains will be marshaled by Capt. Dick Pindell of the boat Pisces.

Docking honors at Riverfront Park will go to members of the Submarine Battery Service, Torpedo Division, Confederate States Navy. Greeters at the traditional riverboat landing will be the River Rats Jazz Band with Duke Ladd, keyboard, Dick Gable, trumpet, Norman Tyson, bass, Bill Coopers, drums and Dick Conrad, clarinet.

In addition, students from Cape Fear Academy's Art Department will salute Henrietta II with welcome banners. Horse and buggy rides will be furnished by Springbrook Farms Inc. and an antique automobile exhibition will be displayed compliments of the Cape Fear Chapter of the Antique Automobile Club of America. Photographers from the Cape Fear Camera Club will take part in a photography contest of Henrietta's debut, with the results to be shown at the New Hanover County Library in May.

Don Holmes of WKMD Radio will be master of ceremonies and will announce disembarking passengers which will include area dignitaries, area queens, friends and family of Cape Fear Riverboat, as well as various steamboat-riverboat era characters. Actor and musician participants forming the welcome committee will be drawn from a variety of Wilmington and Cape Fear groups and individuals.

Once the river lady makes her debut, she will later take passengers on narrated Cape Fear River sightseeing cruises daily Tuesday through Sunday at 2:30 p.m. Dinner cruises, offering buffet dining and entertainment, will be available evening hours from 7 to 9 p.m. (boarding time 6:30 p.m.) on Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings.

The new Henrietta II is named in honor of an earlier Henrietta, a trail blazer for steamboats on the Cape Fear River. The first Henrietta enjoyed a long and successful life. She was built in 1817-1818 by James Seawell at his plantation at what is now Fayetteville. The boat was launched April 30, 1818, and was named for Seawell's daughter, Henrietta. She made her first run from Fayetteville to Wilmington in July 1818 and cruised the Cape Fear from Wilmington to Fayetteville for 40 years.

Henrietta II has two decks. The lower deck is heated and air conditioned with a seating capacity of 100 for dinner, a dance floor and a full-service bar. The canopy-covered upper deck will house tables and chairs for sightseeing.

It is a true paddle wheel — no propellers. It has a crew of three and can carry 149 passengers.

For information on prices for dinner cruises and for chartering Henrietta II for civic group, business and other functions, call 392-1140.

LOS ANGELES — Daniel Van Meter's back yard is unusual, to say the least.

Behind half a dozen junked cars, an old bus, washing machines, water heaters, an old outhouse and even a turret from a battleship stands Los Angeles Historic-Cultural Monument

No. 184 — the Tower of Wooden Pallets.

Constructed by Van Meter in 1951, the 22-foot-tall tower is made up of about 2,000 wooden pallets that were tossed out by a brewery. The pallets are placed in a 22-foot-wide circle and stacked on top of each other in brick-like fashion. Beneath the structure is the grave of child buried in 1869.

Carolina Events

April Symposium Set At St. John's Museum

WILMINGTON — St. John's Museum of Art on April 15 will host a symposium, "Criticism: Friend or Foe," to discuss the role of the critic in development of art since 1940.

New York art critic John Perreault will present a perspective of criticism in a lecture at 11 a.m. The afternoon session will be a panel discussion. Dr. Edward Levine, sculptor and dean of the School of Art, East Carolina University, will be one of the panel members.

For reservations call the museum at 763-0281.

N.C. Awards Nominations Being Accepted

RALEIGH — Nominations for the North Carolina Awards, the highest honor that North Carolina annually bestows on individuals, will be accepted April 1 through May 31. The awards recognize outstanding accomplishments in four categories: science, fine arts, literature and public service.

The competition is open for North Carolinians living and working in the state, native born or newcomers. Anyone may submit a nomination for the awards. Nominations, including biographies, resumes and letters of support, are to be sent to: Secretary Patric Dorsey, Department of Cultural Resources, 109 East Jones Street, Raleigh, N.C., 27611.

Kupferer Author Of Indian Book

GREENSBORO — Anthropologist Dr. Harriet Kupferer, professor emerita at UNC-Greensboro, has written "Ancient Drums, Other Moccasins," an introduction to North American Indians in the 17th and 18th centuries.

Published by Prentice Hall, "Ancient Drums" explains the emergence of native North American cultures from a cultural ecological point of view. Her book offers in-depth descriptions of ten economically and socially diverse aboriginal societies.

Weatherspoon Art On View At St. John's

WILMINGTON — "The '80s to the '90s: American Art from the Weatherspoon Art Gallery, UNC-Greensboro" is the show now on view at St. John's Museum of Art, 114 Orange St.

The show is highlighted by works of artists such as de Kooning, Rauschenberg, Lichtenstein, Grooms, Warhol and others. The exhibition will remain on view through May 28. Admission is free. For more details and for information on gallery hours call 763-0281.

Soviets To Visit School Of Arts

WINSTON-SALEM — The North Carolina School of the Arts will serve as host for a delegation of three visitors from the Soviet Union.

Guest artists from the Soviet Union scheduled to lecture and teach in the NCSA School of Design and Production on Thursday are Alexander Vasiliev, Sergei Barchin and Tatyana Oskolkova.

Vasiliev and Barchin are prominent Soviet designers. Mrs. Oskolkova is executive director of the Soviet Center of the International Organization of Scenographers. The three will be AT&T Foundation distinguished guest artists during their stay at the school of art.

In addition to discussing her work, Mrs. Oskolkova will serve as the Ruksian-English translator for the trio.

The delegation is in the United States under the auspices of the New York-based U.S. Institute for Theater Technology.

Game Show Winner Wins Twice, Loses

GARLAND, Texas (AP) — D.J. Smith claims he's a victim of double jeopardy because the TV game show "Jeopardy" won't pay him $5,000 he won.

"Jeopardy" disqualified Smith from $5,000 in winnings because the 55-year-old business analyst won $1,200 on "Wheel of Fortune" on Thanksgiving Day. Game show rules enacted after a 1958 scandal prohibit contestants from appearing on game shows more than once a year.

"I feel like I'm in double jeopardy," Smith said. "They won't give me my money, and they won't let me be on the show again."

Smith said he disclosed his "Wheel" appearance to a "Jeopardy" representative who invited him to play in a seniors tournament on the ABC show in January. He said he mentioned his earlier appearance again when he filled out a "Jeopardy" registration form.

Smith said he won a berth in a semifinal contest and $5,000 before being told his appearance on "Wheel" disqualified him. Game show officials withheld the money but did award him a $1,000 quarter-final prize.

"We didn't enjoy having to do that," said George Vosburgh, "Jeopardy" producer. "Even though the network stressed (the rules), it got by him and it got by us."

Oscar Has Had Magic Moments

By BOB THOMAS Associated Press Writer
 HOLLYWOOD (AP) — When the 60th Academy Awards are presented on April 11, the evening is likely to produce at least one magical moment that will last in the memories of those who watch Hollywood's annual salute to itself.

That has happened throughout Oscar's fabled history: one unscripted, unexpected and spontaneous moment that electrified the audience. Rarely have the awards failed to produce such an event.

Everyone has his or her own favorite, and here are just a few:

— Sacheen Littlefeather. In 1973, there was speculation that Marlon Brando, nominated as best actor for "The Godfather," might pull a surprise. He did.

When Roger Moore announced that Brando had won, a woman in a Native American costume came onstage and brushed away Roger Moore as he tried to hand her the Oscar statuette. She said her name was Sacheen Littlefeather, that she was Apache and president of the National Native American Affirmative Image Committee.

"Marlon Brando... very regretfully cannot accept this very generous award. And the reasons for this being are the treatment of American Indians today by the film industry." The audience was stunned as she left the stage.

— The Naked Stranger. In 1974, David Niven's introduction of Elizabeth Taylor was suddenly interrupted by screams and laughter from the audience. Niven turned around just as a naked man flashing a peace sign raced past him. Streaking was the year's fad on college campuses and elsewhere.

Henry Mancini had the orchestra play "Sunny Side Up," and the imperceptible Niven commented: "Just think, the only laugh that man will probably ever get is for stripping and showing off his shortcomings."

Miss Taylor came on stage and said, "That's a pretty tough act to follow."

— The Tramp's Farewell. In 1972, the Academy voted Charlie Chaplin a special award. The event was packed with drama because it was Chaplin's first return to Hollywood since his self-exile 20 years before. The furor over his politics was forgotten. More important was the "incalculable effect he has had in making motion pictures the art form of the century."

When Chaplin appeared onstage at the end of the ceremonies, the ovation was thunderous. Frail and overwhelmed, he did a little flipping trick with the black derby that was his trademark.

— Last of the Duke. In 1979, John Wayne was scheduled to appear at the awards despite his desperate fight with lung cancer. A trailer was parked outside the Los Angeles Music Center so he could rest before his entrance.

"Ladies and Gentlemen, Mr. John Wayne," announced Johnny Carson. When the cheers finally subsided, the Duke cracked, "That's just about the only medicine a fella'd ever need." Within three months he was dead.

— A Sign of Thanks. Last year, Marlee Matlin was the favorite for best actress because of her role as the deaf woman in "Children of a Lesser God." When her name was announced, the Music Center audience roared its approval.

Miss Matlin's graceful hands described her gratitude, and her remarks were swiftly spoken by her interpreter. Her performance reminded many of Louise Fletcher's acceptance of her 1976 best actress award for "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest." As she spoke her words, she used sign language for her parents, who were both deaf.

— Patton Says No. George C. Scott had once requested that his name be withdrawn as candidate for supporting actor in 1961 for "The Hustler" (the Academy declined). So everyone wondered if he would accept the Oscar if he won for "Patton" in 1971.

He won, and he wouldn't accept. Frank McCarthy, the producer of "Patton," accepted Scott's award, but it was never delivered. Scott's opinion of the awards: "A two-hour meat parade."

— Miss Bergman Returns. In 1957, Ingrid Bergman was nominated as best actress for "Anastasia." Would Hollywood forgive her desertion and disgrace when she mothered a child by Roberto Rossellini before they were married? It would.

Her victory was a dramatic moment, even though she wasn't at the awards to enjoy it. Cary Grant accepted for her and remarked: "Dear Ingrid, if you can hear me or see this, I want you to know that we all send you our love and admiration."

— "Aw, Coop." Gary Cooper, who had won two Oscars during his career, was given an honorary Oscar in 1961 but he was not at the ceremonies. His close friend, James Stewart, accepted the award for him.

Stewart began crying during his speech and could only say, "Aw, Coop," before walking tearfully off stage. The world realized the desperate health of Cooper, who was too ill to attend. He died of cancer a month later.

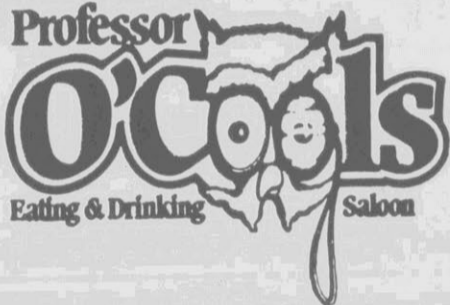

— Kate Shows Up. The all-time acting winner with four Oscars, Katharine Hepburn never appeared to collect her awards. Finally, in 1974 she came to the ceremonies to present the Thalberg award to her longtime, ailing producer, Laurence Weingarten.

"I'm the living proof someone can wait 41 years to be unselfish," said the indomitable Hepburn.

— Elizabeth Redux. Elizabeth Taylor had been reported near death from pneumonia in 1961 when she was nominated for best actress in "Butterfield 8." Miss Taylor herself had termed it "the most pornographic script I have ever read," but she played the New York call girl so she could escape her MGM contract and star in "Cleopatra."

"I don't believe it!" she exclaimed when Yul Brynner announced her the winner. She told the audience, "Thank you with all my heart," then went backstage and fainted.

Resort

angriest handful of Lanaians. Jobs, businesses and homes could be at stake. Commercial leases on the island are up for renewal this year, and even those islanders who do not work directly for Castle & Cooke often owe the company something.

A grass-roots group organized to discuss community concerns debated for hours over the least offensive name, settling on Lanaians for Sensible Growth and vowing to keep the 180-name membership list secret.

The cautious group's major battle was winning guaranteed public access to Hulopoe, the island's nicest beach and the only one considered safe and accessible. But with a 250-room luxury hotel under construction on a ridge overlooking Hulopoe, is' said Ron McOmber, who settled in Lanai more than 16 years ago and spent the last five building his own dream house, nail by nail, on a slope that now overlooks construction sites.

"We're very protective of a very special place," he said. "They can build the Taj Mahal there. We just want to know what is going on with our island and we want to participate in it."

What's going on, according to Oda, is something of a weaning process.

"They're used to the company taking care of them," he said. "We'd like people to be a little more independent and less dependent on the plantation ... to do everything for them."

Since 1922, Lanai has been a company town under a paternalistic, plantation rule. Even residents who quarrel with Castle & Cooke's new plans readily admit that Dole has been a benevolent overseer.

NEW RESORT — On the Hawaiian island of Lanai, until recently a remote spot that was essentially one giant pineapple plantation, a bulldozer clears land for a luxury hotel. Developer David Murdock has bought most of the island and plants to convert into a tourist resort. (L.A. Times-Washington Post Photo)

Because agriculture has been unionized in Hawaii since the 1940s, the hours Lanaians spend stooped over the prickly pineapple plants bring a decent paycheck, and Dole has provided such perks as subsidized housing, a dispensary, a free golf course and space on its barges for furniture or goods the Lanaians buy off the island.

"We don't want the island solely dependent on pineapple," Oda said. "This obviously will provide residents here with an alternative source to earn income as opposed to the plantation. It will give the economy stability."

Oda has promised Lanaians first crack at the hundreds of new jobs, and training programs will be offered.

"Instead of working in the hot sun, they can work in air-conditioned hotels," he said. "Nothing is harder than plantation work."

But Filipino immigrants with little or no English make up most of the island's population, and Oda conceded that language skills will be a major consideration in hiring.

Murdock, during his periodic visits to Lanai, already has run afoul of local etiquette. Local police have had complaints about Murdock and his sons running frightened drivers off the rugged roads, and the industrialist also intentionally rammed his Jeep Cherokee into a coco palm.

"Since then, he realized you don't use a car to get a coconut," Oda said. Murdock did not return telephone calls from the Los Angeles Times.

Between two luxury hotels and more than 550 lots for housing, Oda said, the company plans to pump approximately $200 million into Lanai over the next three to four years. The Hulopoe hotel will fetch $350 for a night's lodging, and rumors abound that entertainers Kenny Rogers and Tina Turner will build mansions on some of the custom lots.

The Easter Cat

By Kelly Garner

One day the Easter Bunny was sick. The cat knew that the Easter Bunny was sick. He had the measles. The cat came in to see the Easter Bunny to see if he could be the Easter Cat on Easter morning.

The children could find the eggs. The Easter Bunny said, "Yes."

The cat got the ears. He got everything that looks like the Easter Bunny. Then the cat took the eggs and put them in his mouth. He got his bicycle and he rode to all the children's houses.

The cat went around the world so the children could get Easter baskets and the Easter eggs. He painted the eggs for all the children.

Still the Easter Bunny was sick and the cat got sick, too, like the Easter Bunny. But the cat went to all the children's homes and got the eggs in good places. All the children found them and he went home.

The children were happy.

Kelly Garner, 7, a student at Sadie Sautler School wins this week's writing contest.

The Easter Fox

By Traye Smith

One day there was an Easter Bunny. In the hollow tree there was a fox. The fox wanted to be an Easter Fox. Hmmm. I need some bunny ears and a tie and I need a tail and a cart, and a basket. O.K. Now, I only have to do one thing. I have to go to bunny school.

So he went to the bunny school and he learned that you can do anything that you want to and you have to wear bunny ears, a tie and carry a basket and a cart.

So he decided to go on a jeep. He went down the road

Traye Smith, 6, a student at Sadie Sautler School receives special mention.

The Best Easter Ever

By Rosemary Johnson

On Easter we went to Grandma's house. We had an Easter egg hunt in the yard. I was looking for the eggs when I saw a little bunny behind a tree. I dropped my basket and ran after the bunny. Finally, I caught him. Mom said that I could keep the bunny and it was the best Easter ever.

Rosemary Johnson, 5, a student at Third Street School receives special mention.

Easter

By Stephanie Rogerson

E is for Easter, a good time. A is for all the sunshine that brings good cheer. S is for spring, a very big thing!

T is for the tulips that make us sing. E is for the eggs we eat. R is for rabbits and their cute feet.

Stephanie Rogerson, 8, a student at Stokes Elementary receives special mention.

The Sick Easter Bunny

By Rick Clay

One day the Easter Bunny got sick. He was sick with the stomach virus. His stomach hurt so bad he threw up at the doctor's office. The doctor said, "He has the stomach virus. He can't be the Easter Bunny."

The Easter Bunny was very sad. All the little children will be very sad. They'll cry all year at home, at school, and at play. They won't learn anything at school.

The president of the U.S.A. was sorry for the little children. He went on T.V. asking for a substitute Easter Bunny. The salmon thought he could be the substitute Easter Bunny. But the salmon couldn't deliver the eggs because if he got out of the water he would die. Then he had an idea! He was going to dig a hole with a shovel and shoot the eggs out of a bullet gun. And the children would be very happy.

Easter

By Twana Blow

E is for Easter Sunday, A is for all our love that day, S is for the sun that shines. T is for the tulips that are fine. E is for Easter time.

Twana Blow, 8, a student at Stokes Elementary receives special mention.

The Easter Wolf

By Brian Walker

Once upon a time there was a sick Easter Bunny who had the measles. And the wolf said, "I can be sneaky." The wolf got the job as the Easter Wolf.

The wolf got into his 280ZX and went to all the houses. He

Brian Walker, 6, a student at Sadie Sautler School receives special mention.

By Cameron Wilson

One day the cat signed the form to be the substitute bunny. The cat had to get bunny ears, a tail, a basket and a tie. In her basket were pretty eggs. When she started running, she dropped the eggs. She was sad. The cat still wanted to deliver the eggs.

She got busy and colored some more eggs. Then she got on her skateboard and delivered eggs to the children.

April Fool's Day

By Lisa McLaughlin

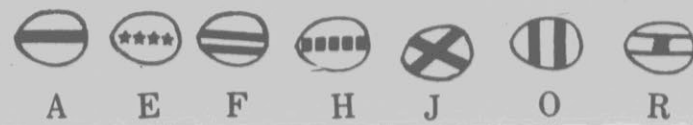

April Fool's Day is the first day of April. It is the day jokes are played on unsuspecting people. The start of the custom is unknown. On April Fool's Day all people are given to play the fool. The custom of playing April Fool's jokes was taken to America by the British. To this day children and adult's play jokes on friends. Be careful!

Lisa McLaughlin, 8, a student at Sadie Sautler School receives special mention.

 The par hands prepared for the 1987 National Intercollegiate Championship by Jeff Rubens provided a fair challenge in both play and defense. To see how you would have fared, cover the East and West hands with your thumbs and decide how you would go about collecting 12 tricks at six spades.

Once the cue-bidding sequence showed that there were not two fast losers in any suit North, whose hand was greatly improved by the opening bid, wasted no time in setting the level of the contract. That left it up to South to make the slam.

Obviously, there's no problem if hearts break 3-2—there's only a club to lose. Therefore, the problem lies in a possible 4-1 heart break. Again there's no problem if West holds a singleton honor; declarer cashes the ace-queen and, when West shows out on the second round, takes the marked finesse against the remaining honor. Alternatively, if East holds a singleton honor, the suit can be run if declarer cashes his honors in a different order. But what if a defender holds a low singleton?

Careful planning will circumvent even that holding. Win the opening club lead, draw trumps and cash the ace-king of diamonds. Now cash just the ace of hearts (or the queen) before exiting with a club.

Since a minor-suit return will give declarer a ruff-sluff, whichever defender wins the club will have to return a heart, if he has one. When that defender leads a heart, declarer simply allows it to run to fourth hand. Either he will know the suit splits 3-2, or else he will have a finesse position against the other honor. Try it—you will see it works against either defender.

Japanese, American Children Compare Prize-Winning Inventions

WASHINGTON (AP) — When American and Japanese children got together Tuesday to compare prize-winning inventions, one side brought most of the frivolous, fanciful toys while the other displayed no-nonsense solutions to everyday problems.

But in a reversal of stereotypes, it was the Japanese kids who brought the marionette and robot on skis, and the Americans who produced door guards, portable seat belts and diapers with built-in disposable bags. The meeting was arranged by a program to spur creativity among American students called "Invent America!" and the Japan Institution of Invention and Innovation, which has sponsored competitions for Japanese schoolchildren since 1941.

The Japanese students' inventions included the mechanized marionette of Takakiyo Katami, 11, of Gufu City; a robot that can slalom back and forth on skis by Yasushi Nishiyama, 15, of Nagoya; and an illuminated constellation model made from 2,000 optical fibers by Takahiro Tsurita, 14, of Toyota City.

Tomoyuki Imura, 15, of Miki City, Japan, came up with a ball retriever that consists of several tennis cans open at both ends and taped together.

Sally Mallison, 12, of Wilmington, Del., who devised her "Bag-A-Diaper" to help her parents cope with messy diapers on car trips, said, "I think from the Japanese I've learned that inventions can be mechanical and they can also be ... like mine where they don't have anything mechanical to do with them."

Yasushi Nishiyama, maker of the slalom robot, said through an interpreter, "After observing all these inventions I notice Japanese students' inventions seem to be more like toys, something kids can play with."

Most of the Americans' inventions, he added, seemed "more practical, something in your daily life that you can actually use."

How does that square with the image Americans have of Japanese students spending endless hours in school or studying?

"There are some people who study hard, but there are some who just enjoy playing," Nishiyama said. "They stay away from that work. Instead, they try to create something more interesting so they can enjoy themselves."

Two of the young Japanese inventors' devices did have a practical tilt. Hiroshi Aoyagi, 12, of Tokamachi, built a door that can slide up or swing out.

And Yoshitaka Tanimoto, 13, of Takayama City, won top honors, the Prime Minister's Prize, for inventing a device to help his grandfather regain use of his hand after a stroke.

Tanimoto's hand rehabilitation machine consists of two crescent shaped handles attached by strong rubber bands that can be stretched apart.

The U.S. Patent Model Foundation launched Invent America in December 1986 with corporate financing and moral support from the Reagan administration. It expects 8 million students in 35,000 U.S. elementary schools to take part.

Pallets

In 1977, the Fire Department declared the tower "an illegally stacked lumber pile" and a fire hazard.

A year later, it was named a landmark by the city Cultural Heritage Commission, joining such other historic-cultural monuments as the Watts Towers, the Hollywood sign, the Venice canals, a 1,000-year-old oak tree and the cruise ship Catalina.

"Maybe we were drunk," joked a former commissioner when asked why the Tower of Pallets, as it is known officially, was designated a landmark.

But to its creator, 74-year-old Van Meter, the tower is a special place to get away from the turmoil of urban society.

"I have a place where it is quiet, despite the apartments, the noise of the boulevard and the hum and screeches of the rat race on the freeway 200 feet away," he said.

At night, Van Meter said, he climbs to the top of the tower and looks at the moon and the stars. "To me, this is a spiritual place."

Tucked away at the end of Magnolia Boulevard in the Sherman Oaks neighborhood of Los Angeles, a few feet from the San Diego Freeway, is Van Meter's house. The house and 2½ acres, where Van Meter has lived since 1947, is the only single-family residential property left on the block, which has been developed with a condominium complex, a fire station, an office building and a private school.

Van Meter's property is filled — some might say littered — with historical memorabilia. There are wooden wagons that date to 1912, rusty old cars, washing machines, water heaters, a boat, a kitchen sink, an old outhouse and sheds full of other dusty stuff. A red gasoline pump, advertising gas for 24.9 cents a gallon, stands beside a 1938 city bus.

With every item, Van Meter tells a story. "That was used to build the first road from Los Angeles into the (San Fernando) Valley," he said, pointing to an old wagon.

Van Meter, who says he is a descendant of John Quincy Adams, has been interested in history since he began picking up coins and artifacts as a child. A founder of the American Independent Party and supporter of former Alabama Gov. George Wallace's 1972 presidential campaign, Van Meter loves to talk politics. But his first love appears to be collecting historical memorabilia.

A life-long bachelor who has held odd jobs, Van Meter's most unusual item is the tower.

Van Meter got the pallets as a result of a labor dispute at Schlitz Brewing Co. Union workers at the brewery refused to repair the pallets, which were slightly damaged. They wanted the company to hire workers from another union to make the repairs. The company stacked the pallets outside the brewery until the dispute could be settled.

"Then they got word that some big shots from back East were coming to inspect the brewery," Van Meter said. He said the supervisor at the plant wanted to get rid of the pallets before the executives arrived. Van Meter said he offered to take "a few" off the company's hands.

When five truckloads of the pallets arrived at his door, "I decided I had to do something with them," Van Meter said. He decided to build the tower because he wanted a place to look out across the Valley.

Revitalize Menus With Refreshing Poultry Salads

RALEIGH — With spring always comes the start of something new. So why not break out of old winter heavy-eating habits during April (Poultry and Egg Month in North Carolina) with something new for your family menu ... a repertoire of cool and refreshing poultry salad recipes.

The North Carolina Poultry Federation recommends these three light, yet satisfying poultry salads to put some "spring" into your meal-planning. These great salads combine the mild flavor of poultry with the bounty of fresh fruits and garden vegetables that are readily available throughout the spring and summer months.

These are just a few possibilities for serving up nutritious poultry in salads that are light, great-tasting, time-saving, interesting to the eye and easy to prepare. Another bonus for busy homemakers — many salads, like the "Turkey and Vegetable Salad" can be prepared ahead and will keep (refrigerated) for several days.

RAINBOW CHICKEN SALAD

2 whole broiler-fryer chicken breasts
2 cups water

1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1 head romaine lettuce
2 avacados, peeled, seeded, sliced into sections
1 lemon, juiced
4 naval oranges, peeled, seeded, sliced sections
1 sweet red onion, sliced

Midwestern Cuisine Has America Buzzing

"Seasonal, very fresh, very creative and large portions." That's how Kaye Zubow describes food from America's heartland. And Ms. Zubow should know, as the co-founder of the Heartland Food Society and the owner of Wild Game Inc., a Chicago-based distributor of game and gourmet foods.

The formation of the Heartland Food Society is a by-product of the creative energy that is sizzling and bubbling among food professionals in the Midwest who are no longer content to take a back seat to their colleagues on the coasts. The society is out to show the world that the Midwest has some of the best cuisine, restaurants and chefs in the world.

During the 1980s, Americans, led by innovative chefs, became interested in authentic, regional American cuisines. Cajun and California-style became household words. Now the county is witnessing a growing interest in the cuisine of the Midwest.

But make that cuisines with an "s" because as Ms. Zubow sees it, there are really several different cuisines that come from the Midwest. As well as being the nation's Heartland, the Midwest also is a place where ethnic cuisines are still very strong. Different nationalities have added their traditional foods to the American melting pot, or in this case, stewpot, while retaining their fundamental diversities. From Kaye's point of view, the Midwest offers the most American of American foods and many ethnic cuisines as well.

If Midwest cuisine seems to elude definition, there are certain words that occur repeatedly in any conversation about it: honest, sincere, fresh, real and comforting. Members of the Heartland Food Society also agree that their cuisine takes its cue from the cornucopia of fresh vegetables, fruit, meat and fish that can be found in the region.

"Midwest cuisine has integrity. It's not trendy. When we bring it out here, we make it good," Zubow says.

The following recipes exemplify the hearty good taste of the Midwest. Italian sausage, onions and condensed zesty tomato soup/sauce provide full flavor for this main dish. Serve with fresh tossed salad, fresh bread ... and join in the salute to America's Midwest!

Chicken Pot Pie is a delicious one-dish meal featuring mushrooms, carrots and chicken in Cheddar cheese and condensed cream of chicken soup sauce.

Bierocks, a sandwich-like dish native to the region, combines potatoes, carrots and onions with ground beef, seasoned with prepared mustard. Condensed gold mushroom soup and frozen bread dough add 1980s convenience to this flavorful dish.

Easter Meal Doesn't Have To Be A Task

By Betsy Balsley
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

There are times when it definitely is more trouble to eat out than in. And Easter often proves to be one of those times. It is a day when the crowds at popular restaurants tend to be so horrendous, it is hardly worth the effort to dine out. Whether you are brunching, lunching or going out for dinner, reservations are an absolute must. Even then you can almost count on a wait no matter how far ahead you made them. So what is the alternative?

A spring feast at home, of course.

But even that idea has its drawbacks. After getting the family dressed in all their spring finery and off to church or the community Easter egg hunt on time, who wants to come home and prepare a big holiday meal? This year there is even an additional problem; Easter Sunday is the day the powers that be have designated as the day most of the country sets clocks forward an hour in observance of daylight-saving time. For the designated arbiter of family activities, trying to figure out what to do is

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

Q. What do you think of these exercise beds for weight control? G.M., Greenville.

A. When I got the first letter asking this question, I shared it with Patrick and his reaction was, "why are they asking you — you're a nutritionist?" So, I decided not to answer the question in the newspaper but replied to the person who asked. But, we have had many people ask the same question. Since part of our business is to give information about weight control methods, I did some background research about these beds. If you haven't seen them, these exercise beds are motorized machines that continuously move your muscle groups through their range of motion without effort by the user.

We look at every new method of possible weight control to evaluate its effectiveness for our patients. Our dream would be for every eastern North Carolinian to be a desirable weight for his or her height, sex, age, physical condition and body frame size. We try to do all we can to help folks who want to be at desirable weight. Because if they were at desirable weight, their risk of dying at a younger age from heart disease, diabetes or some cancers would be much less. All the area nutritionists agree that every person who wants to lose weight needs a diet program specifically tailored for them. What may work for one person might not work for someone else. But, we do only support programs that lead to slow but permanent weight loss. Generally, that requires reducing your food intake and might also require increasing exercise. For exercise to be useful in weight loss, your body must burn calories and it generally takes 300 calories a day to make a difference.

In my research on the exercise beds, I read an article in "The Physician and Sports Medicine" journal about "continuous passive motion; the no-exercise exercise" and I asked a variety of people about the exercise beds. I was privileged to be an invited speaker at the National Governors' Council on Health and Fitness. I asked every fitness researcher there for their opinion on the exercise beds. I also discussed them with one of our Family Medicine physical therapists, Margy Maira, and also faculty in the ECU Department of Health, Physical, Fitness and Recreation. The answers were all the same. There is no data to describe the value or lack of value of these exercise beds. I was told that none of the 17-bed manufacturers of continuous passive motion tables can give research data about weight loss using those beds either.

An exercise physiologist at Stanford told me that "passive exercise goes against the basic concepts of physiology so how could they possibly cause weight loss?" And, I agree that if you don't use calories, weight loss can't happen.

Several folks did suggest there might be benefits such as increased flexibility; increasing and maintaining joint motion for patients with knee surgery or joint replacement; increase motion for people who cannot exercise on their own such as the elderly, stroke victims and people with neuromuscular disorders, and as a temporary measure to help people who have not exercised for years to get started. For those folks, getting their bodies used to doing some movements they have not done in 10 to 20 years might be helpful. But, the professionals who work in these areas tell me that the routine should be individualized and under medical supervision — just like diets.

I know they have just started some research at the University of Arizona and also some ECU faculty are considering careful evaluation of these machines this summer. If I learn something different, I'll let you know, but right now I can't encourage you to use "continuous passive motion machines" for weight loss.

Try New Idea For Easter Sunday Brunch

RALEIGH — Looking for creative idea for your Easter Sunday Brunch? "Scrambled Eggs in a Turkey Ham Basket" makes an impressive "centerpiece" for spring brunch entertaining. Just add an assorted fresh fruit tray and your favorite beverage and the menu-planning is done!

In addition to the ease of preparation and great visual appeal of this simple (yet elegant) recipe is the added bonus of high nutritional value. Along with vitamin and protein packed eggs ... one of nature's most nearly perfect foods ... the recipe calls for turkey ham (cured fully-cooked turkey thigh meat) which is high in protein, low in saturated fat and almost identical in taste and texture to traditional cooked ham.

Just try this delicious recipe from the North Carolina Poultry Federation on your guests for any special spring or summer occasion such as wedding breakfasts, debutante brunches, or graduation parties. Discover for yourself the joy's of entertaining during Easter and spring by using a combination of easy, versatile and economical poultry food products ... eggs, turkey, chicken, and duckling. And be sure to keep the refrigerator stocked with poultry for backyard cook-outs, picnics and other warm weather "fun" times, too!

SCRAMBLED EGGS IN TURKEY HAM BASKET

6 to 8 slices turkey ham, cut in half
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/4 cup green pepper, chopped
1/4 cup onion, chopped
8 eggs
1/2 cup milk or cream
1/2 cup cheddar cheese, cubed or grated salt and pepper

Cut top from round bread, cutting at angle down into the bread. Line cut edge of bread with half-slices of turkey ham. Wrap completely in foil and place in 325 degree oven while eggs are scrambled. Melt butter or margarine in large frying pan on medium heat. Add green pepper and onion; cook until soft. Stir milk or cream into eggs, pour into pan and cook, lifting and stirring gently until almost done. Add cheese and season with salt and pepper to taste, stirring gently until done.

Remove warm bread from oven, fill "basket" with scrambled egg. Cut carefully into pie-shaped wedges to serve. Serves 6 to 8.

Easter Bread Tastes Great All Year Long

Kulich, the traditional Easter bread of old Russia, is a delicious almond and raisin-flavored bread with white sugar frosting. Baked in special molds in Russia, the same shape can be obtained by baking the loaves in empty coffee cans. The dough rises above the tops of the cans and forms domes which are said to resemble the domed roofs of Russian churches.

Kulich can be made with the time-saving convenience of frozen ready-dough. The recipe below calls for the addition of almonds, raisins, sugar and grated citrus peel to the fresh yeast dough. Happy Easter!

RUSSIAN KULICH

1 (one-pound) loaf frozen ready-dough
1 tablespoon melted butter or margarine
3 tablespoons sugar
1/3 cup raisins
1/3 cup slivered almonds, chopped
1 teaspoon finely grated lemon or orange rind

ICING:
1 cup powdered sugar
5 teaspoons milk or water
Optional: Colored sprinkles and/or chopped nuts for decorating

Let frozen dough thaw until pliable. On a lightly-floured board, roll dough out to a 12-inch square. Brush dough with melted butter or margarine and sprinkle with sugar. Sprinkle with raisins, almonds and grated rind. Roll dough up tightly in jelly-roll fashion. Pinch dough along edge and at ends to seal filling in. Cut in half. Form each half of dough roll into a ball by bringing ends together. Place each ball into a greased one-pound coffee can. Let rise until dough reaches 1/2-inch above top of cans. Bake at 350-degrees for 30 minutes or until golden brown. Remove from cans immediately to cool on a rack. When cooled, frost domed tops of loaves with mixture of powdered sugar and milk or water. Let frosting drip down sides of loaves. Slice crosswise to serve. Makes 2 loaves.

KULICH — Enjoyed as the traditional Easter bread of old Russia, Kulich is an almond and raisin flavored bread with white sugar frosting that can be made with frozen ready-dough.

Easter Meal Prepared At Home Doesn't Have To Be A Burden

almost enough to make one settle for a peanut butter sandwich.

There is, however, a genuinely easy solution to the whole decision-making process. In this day of almost simplistic meal-planning, there are a couple of easy options for holiday entertainment at home. The operative words to solve Easter menu problems are familiar ones these days: take out and do ahead.

With all of the elegant choices of portable foods at both boutique and supermarket delis, one can assemble a ready-made meal fit for any number of guests with practically no effort. Or, if that is not quite what you have in mind, try the second suggestion and offer family and guests a holiday brunch that can be almost totally prepared at least one day ahead.

Either option will take the pressure off, making it possible for the family cook to enjoy this special day as much as anyone else.

In suggesting a brunch menu that will fit into the hectic pattern of living in most households gearing up for the spring holidays, we have opted to combine the take-out and do-ahead ideas in one simple menu. The do-ahead portion of the menu involves preparing fresh fruits for a salad and putting together the ingredients for a truly easy strata casserole made with traditional Easter foods, ham and asparagus. A sinfully rich cheese sauce accompanies the strata. Best of all, it should not take much more than an hour or so in the kitchen to do all of the advance preparation for the whole meal.

Preceding the brunch, we suggest serving Mimosas, which are nothing more than orange juice combined with a splash of Champagne or, if you prefer a non-alcoholic introduction to the meal, club soda.

For dessert, anything goes. That is because dessert falls into the take-out category. Ice cream and a spectacular cake or a big platter of fancy cookies or a nut tart... whatever suits your fancy when you drop in at your favorite bakery will take care of that portion of this simple, yet elegant, brunch.

Sound easy? It is. And it will certainly beat writing in line while waiting for your reservation to be honored at a crowded restaurant.

EASTER BRUNCH MENU

Mimosas

- Easter Brunch Strata
- Spring Fruit Salad
- Ice Cream, Cake or Cookies
- Coffee or Tea

Prepare strata and fruit the day before. For dessert, buy a cake or cookies from your favorite bakery and serve with store-bought ice cream.

MIMOSAS

- 3 cups orange juice
- Champagne or club soda
- Kumquats or orange slices
- Chill orange juice and champagne well. For each drink, fill champagne flute with two parts orange juice to one part champagne. Garnish with kumquat on skewer or with orange slice split half-way through and attached to rim of glass. Makes 6 to 8 drinks.

EASTER BRUNCH STRATA

- 1 1/2 cups diced asparagus

- 6 cups cubed sourdough bread
- 1 1/2 cups diced ham
- 4 eggs, beaten
- 2 1/2 cups milk
- Salt, white pepper
- Spicy Cheese Sauce
- Blanch asparagus briefly in boiling water and drain well. Spoon 1 1/2 cups bread cubes in bottom of greased 2-quart ovenproof casserole. Scatter 3/4 cup asparagus over bread cubes. Top with another 1 1/2 cups bread cubes. Layer all of ham over mixture. Add 1 1/2 cups bread cubes and top with remaining 3/4 cup asparagus. Cover asparagus layer with remaining 1 1/2 cups bread cubes. Combine eggs, milk and salt and pepper to taste and pour evenly over strata. Cover and chill 3 or 4 hours or overnight.

Bake, uncovered, at 350 degrees 1 hour 15 minutes. Let stand 10 minutes before serving with Spicy Cheese Sauce on side. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Spicy Cheese Sauce

- 3 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 3 tablespoons flour
- 1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
- 2 cups milk
- 1 cup shredded Cheddar cheese
- Salt, pepper
- Hot pepper sauce
- Melt butter in heavy saucepan and stir in flour. Stir in mustard and mixture forms a paste. Do not brown. Add milk and cook, stirring, until mixture comes to boil. Boil, stirring, 1 minute, then add cheese and continue stirring until cheese is melted.

Season to taste with salt, pepper and hot pepper sauce. Makes about 3 cups.

SPRING FRUIT SALAD

- 1 cup strawberries
- 2 very ripe kiwi, peeled and sliced
- 2 oranges, peeled and sliced
- 1 cup red seedless grapes
- 1 cup green seedless grapes
- 1 small pineapple, peeled, cored and cut into chunks, optional
- Fruit Dressing
- Lettuce leaves
- Prepare strawberries, kiwi, oranges, red and green grapes and pineapple day before serving and store separately in sealed plastic bags until serving time. At serving time, pour any juices that have accumulated in bags into a small bowl for use in Fruit Dressing. Toss fruits together and spoon into large lettuce leaf-lined serving bowl or arrange attractively on serving platter. Serve with Fruit Dressing on side. Makes 8 servings.

Fruit Dressing

- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 2 tablespoons reserved fruit juices
- 1/4 teaspoon Chinese 5-spice powder
- 2 teaspoons sugar
- 2/3 cup oil
- 1 teaspoon poppy seeds
- Combine lemon juice and reserved fruit juices in small bowl. Whisk in 5-spice powder and sugar. Continue whisking while adding oil slowly. Whisk in poppy seeds and chill well. Makes about 1 cup.

America Is Buzzing

- 1/2 pound ground turkey
- 1 medium onion, chopped
- 1 can (11 ounces) condensed tomato soup-sauce
- 1 package (10 ounces) frozen chopped spinach, thawed and drained
- 1 cup cooked brown rice
- 1/2 cup water
- 2 tablespoons vinegar
- 1 head cabbage
- In 10-inch skillet crumble sausage and turkey with onion. Over medium heat, cook until meat is no longer pink, stirring often. Spoon off fat. Stir in 1/4 cup of the soup, spinach and rice; set aside.
- In 4-quart saucepan in 6 cups boiling water, add whole head of cabbage. Cover; simmer 2 minutes until leaves are softened. Carefully remove 8 outer leaves. Save remaining cabbage for another use. Spoon 1/2 cup meat mixture in center of each cabbage leaf. Place in same skillet.
- In small bowl combine remaining soup, water and vinegar. Pour over rolls. Cover; simmer 45 minutes or until cabbage is tender. Spoon sauce over rolls. Makes 4 servings.

- 1/2 cup milk
- 2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley
- 1 prepared pie crust
- In 10-inch skillet over medium heat in hot butter, cook onion, mushroom and carrots with thyme until vegetables are tender, stirring often. Stir in chicken, soup, milk and parsley. Spoon into 9x9-inch baking dish. Sprinkle with cheese. Press crust to fit over dish; crimp edges. Bake at 325 degrees 45 minutes or until crust is golden. Let stand 10 minutes before serving. Makes 6 servings.

MIDWESTERN BIEROCKS

- 1 pound ground beef
- 1/2 cup chopped onion
- 1 can (10 3/4 ounces) condensed golden mushroom soup
- 1 cup shredded potato
- 1/2 cup shredded carrot
- 2 teaspoons prepared mustard
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 1 pound loaf frozen bread dough, thawed
- 1/2 cup shredded Swiss cheese
- In 10-inch skillet over medium heat cook beef with onion until meat is no longer pink, stirring often. Pour off fat. Stir in soup, potato, carrot, mustard and pepper. Simmer 5 minutes. Divide bread dough into 6 pieces. Press each into a 6-inch circle.
- Spoon 1/2 cup meat mixture over each; sprinkle with cheese. Bring edges up over meat mixture pressing together firmly to seal. Place on greased cookie sheets. Bake at 375 degrees for 25 minutes or until golden. Makes 6 servings.

CHICKEN POT PIE

- 1 tablespoon butter or margarine
- 1 large onion, thinly sliced
- 1 cup sliced mushrooms
- 1 cup diced carrots
- 1/4 teaspoon dried thyme leaves, crushed
- 2 cups cubed cooked chicken
- 1 can (10 3/4 ounces) condensed cream of chicken soup

Menus Get A Boost

Orange-mustard mayonnaise: recipe follows
In deep saucepan, place chicken. Add water, salt and pepper; cover and simmer about 45 minutes, or until fork can be inserted in chicken with ease. Cool. Separate meat from bones and skin. Reserve broth for later use, if desired. Cut chicken into thin strips; set aside. On large platter, arrange leaves of washed romaine with stalks toward center of platter and tips outward. Alternate slices of avocado and grapefruit in outer ring; sprinkle with lemon juice. Alternate orange and onion slices for an inner ring. In the center, arrange chicken. Drizzle orange-mustard mayonnaise over chicken and serve remainder in separate bowl. Makes 4 servings.

Orange-Mustard Mayonnaise

In medium bowl, beat 2 egg yolks together with 2 teaspoons Dijon mustard and 1 teaspoon lemon juice. Add 1 cup olive oil, very slowly in thin stream, until mixture thickens. Add grated peel from 1 orange and juice from 1/2 orange. Add salt and pepper as desired.

TURKEY AND VEGETABLE SALAD

- 6 cups cooked turkey pieces
- 3 large new potatoes, peeled, cooked, and cut into cubes
- 3 large carrots, peeled, cooked and cut into cubes
- 6 hard-cooked eggs
- 1 package (10 ounces) frozen peas, thawed
- 2 cups chopped dill pickles (6 to 8 large)
- 1 bunch green onions, thinly sliced (tops included)
- 1/3 cup finely chopped parsley
- Paprika as garnish
- Dressings
- 3/4 cup mayonnaise
- 3/4 cup sour cream
- 1 tablespoon mustard
- 1 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 3 tablespoons lime or lemon juice
- Combine all dressing ingredients. Combine all salad ingredients except 2 hard-cooked eggs. Add dressing and mix well. Cover and chill thoroughly. Garnish with 2 hard cooked eggs, sliced and sprinkle with paprika. You may add other garnishes also, such as cherry tomatoes, olives, watercress or lettuce. This salad will keep about four days in refrigerator before serving.

- 2 cans Pillsbury Ready To Spread Vanilla Frosting Supreme
- 14 oz. Baker's® Angel Flake® Coconut
- Food coloring
- Baker's® Real Chocolate Chips
- Jelly beans
- Red string licorice

1. Prepare mix batter in two 8 or 9-inch round cake pans as directed on package. Cool completely.
 2. Cut cake as shown in diagrams. 3. Frost sides of each cake piece. Assemble pieces as shown in diagrams on separate sheet, large tray or 16x15-inch cardboard covered with aluminum foil. Frost top of cake. 4. Sprinkle about 20 cups coconut evenly over top and sides of cake, gently pressing coconut onto sides. 5. Put coconut in small bowl; toss 2/3 cup coconut with 2 to 3 drops red food coloring until evenly colored; repeat with 1/4 cup coconut and 2 to 3 drops green food coloring. 6. Sprinkle pink coconut over each side and top; outline with chocolate chips. 7. Decorate bunny face as shown in photo. 8. Sprinkle green coconut evenly around cake.
 *TIP: For chocolate sprinkled cake, coarsely grate 1 oz. (1 square) Baker's® Semi-Sweet or German's® Sweet Chocolate. Gently stir into white, yellow or chocolate cake batter before spreading into pans.
 TIP: For chocolate bunny, frost cake with Pillsbury Ready To Spread Chocolate Fudge Frosting Supreme and sprinkle with chocolate coconut. To make chocolate coconut, in medium saucepan, melt 1/2 cup Baker's® Semi-Sweet or German's® Sweet Chocolate with 1 tablespoon vegetable shortening until smooth. Add 1/2 cup Baker's® Angel Flake® Coconut; toss with fork until coconut is evenly coated.

Greet The Sunny Spring With A Backyard Brunch

By Nina Killham
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

You knew back during the winter that one of these days the sun was going to shine. The earth would warm, the backyard maple tree would thaw, and your wool coat would grow heavy. And you would want to celebrate.

So string up the hammock and pull out the party hats. Throw out the crock pot, the hot-chocolate mugs and the cow-sized roasting pans. It's time for light, bright fare. It's time finally for fun.

Welcome the sun by setting up a brunch in your backyard to watch your crocuses grow. Stomp on tradition and serve champagne mixed with grapefruit juice instead.

But do not mix traditional, crisply steamed asparagus with lemon butter melted smoothly over each long, green stalk — it's one of the pleasures spring shows up for.

Raid the chicken coop, or for the more faint of heart, the poultry section of your supermarket, and select a nice, plump bird. Stuff with fresh parsley, rosemary and thyme. For a crusty skin, puree garlic, parsley, salt and pepper together and stuff the area between the skin and the chicken breast. An 8- to 12-pound chicken will take about 2 to 2½ hours to roast.

Or make this simple lemon-basil sauce featured in "Good Friends, Great Dinners," by Susan Costner (Crown, 1987): In a medium-size saucepan, combine 1½ cups white wine, 2 small minced shallots and 1 cup whole fresh basil leaves, and reduce to ½ cup over high heat. Strain through a sieve lined with cheesecloth and return to the saucepan that has been wiped lean. Whisk in ½ cup butter, 1 teaspoon at a time, over low heat; then stir in 2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice and season with salt and pepper to taste. Serve over sauteed chicken breasts or veal scallopine.

Instead of the usual season-stirring gazpacho, try this cold, elegant curry chicken soup from Jacqueline Heriteau's "A Feast of Soups" (Ballantine, 1981): In a saucepan, simmer 5 cups chicken broth. In another bowl, beat 4 egg yolks until thick and lemon-colored. Add 2 teaspoons curry powder, ¼ teaspoon cayenne pepper, and ¼ teaspoon lemon juice. Stir in 2 cups whipping cream. Stir in 1 cup hot broth, then return the mixture to the saucepan and heat until just below boiling; any hotter will curdle it. Add salt and pepper to taste. Refrigerate, covered, for 3 to 4 hours. Add 1 cup finely chopped cooked chicken breasts before serving.

But nothing says spring more than a country French dish. If you have salt, pepper and butter, it won't take long to prepare this garlicky dish below.

Express-lane list: pike, thyme, garlic, wine vinegar

PIKE WITH GARLIC AND VINEGAR SAUCE
(2 servings)
2¾-pound pike, including head and tail (red snapper, striped bass or monkfish may be substituted)
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1 sprig fresh thyme
¼ cup (½ stick) butter, softened

16 large cloves garlic, unpeeled
9 tablespoons wine vinegar
Wash the fish under cold running water, and sponge it dry with paper towels. Sprinkle the pike, inside and out, with salt and freshly ground pepper; then slip a sprig of thyme into the cavity.
Rub a roasting or gratin dish just large enough to hold the fish with 2 tablespoons butter and scatter the unpeeled cloves of garlic over all.

Lay the fish on its belly over the garlic, spreading open the ventral area to stabilize the fish in an upright position. Press the remaining butter lavishly over the top and sides of the fish.
Bake fish about 30 minutes at 225 degrees, basting it every 5 minutes with the cooking butter and pan juices. Make sure that the butter does not burn. If you should hear the butter sizzle, place your roasting pan within another, slightly larger, roasting pan. The cold metal will take away some of the heat from the pan holding the fish.

After the fish has baked 15 minutes, add 3 tablespoons of the wine vinegar, sprinkling it over the fish. Every 5 minutes thereafter, baste the fish, adding another 3 tablespoons of vinegar, until you have added 9 tablespoons of vinegar in all. At this time cooking should be finished.

The butter and vinegar will glaze the fish, giving it a beautiful golden brilliance. The cloves of garlic will be cooked, and thanks to the emulsion of the butter and the vinegar reduction, the juices should be the consistency of thick syrup.

Chicken Tetrizzini

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Food Editor

Use both microwave oven and range to put this recipe together quickly. Cook the chicken and make the sauce in the microwave while the spaghetti cooks on the range. Then heat the completed casserole in the microwave.

CHICKEN TETRAZZINI

2 whole large chicken breasts (about 2 pounds total), skinned, boned and cut into bite-size pieces ½ cup chopped sweet red or green pepper

¼ cup margarine or butter
¼ cup all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons instant chicken bouillon granules
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 cup water
1 cup milk
½ cup shredded Swiss cheese (2 ounces)

8 ounces spaghetti, cooked and drained
One 4-ounce can sliced mushrooms, drained
12 rich round crackers, crushed

In a 2-quart microwave-safe casserole combine chicken and red or green pepper. Cook, covered, on 100 percent power (high) 6 to 8 minutes or until chicken is no longer pink, stirring once. Drain. Cover and set aside.

For sauce, in a 4-cup microwave-safe glass measure cook margarine on high about 45 seconds or until melted. Stir in flour, bouillon granules and pepper. Stir water and milk into flour mixture. Cook on high 5 to 7 minutes or until thickened and bubbly, stirring every minute. Stir in cheese.

In the 2-quart casserole combine chicken mixture, sauce, spaghetti and mushrooms. Sprinkle cracker crumbs on top. Cook, covered, on high 1 to 3 minutes or until heated through. Makes 6 servings.

Buttermilk — It May Be Secret Ingredient Of Southern Bakers

Ever wonder why Grandma's biscuits and cornbread turn out moist every time and have that great distinct taste? She may not want to give away her secret, but it's probably buttermilk.

Southern bakers have long recognized the benefits of baking with buttermilk — the tangy taste and extra moist texture. Nothing else can provide the special flavor buttermilk does to biscuits, cornbread, fluffy pancakes and other Southern favorites.

For many, the thought of buttermilk evokes memories of making butter the old-fashioned way. Churning butter was no easy task, but the result was well worth it — fresh homemade butter and the remaining fluid called buttermilk.

Colonial homemakers brought to America the chore of buttermaking — churning a cool cream in a deep wooden tub with a long-handled dasher. Milkfat particles, or butter, separated from the fluid, which was drained off for use as a beverage or cooking ingredient. The inventive homemakers discovered many ways to utilize the baking potential of the buttermilk.

Despite the flavor and moistness buttermilk adds to cooking, it is low in fat and calories. The fat goes into the butter when it separates from the milk. And for those who count calories, that's good to know. Buttermilk is also nutritious, supplying substantial amounts of protein and calcium.

Today, buttermilk is made by adding a special culture to milk, usually skim milk which contains less than 0.5 percent fat. Churning is no longer necessary because the culture added to the milk creates the same characteristic tang of churned buttermilk.

Most buttermilk sold in the U.S. is made from skim milk and contains only 90 calories in eight ounces, as compared to whole milk which contains 150 calories. Low-fat milk (2 percent milk fat) has 120 calories in eight ounces. Manufacturers sometimes add flecks of butter to the buttermilk, which increases fat content slightly, but it's still generally less than 1 percent milk fat. Be sure to check the buttermilk labels on grocery shelves for nutritional information on fat and calorie content.

To catch up on a few facts about cooking with buttermilk, read the following tips:

- Buttermilk will keep for as long as two weeks after purchase. Its acidity retards growth of spoilage bacteria. The date stamped on the carton is when the buttermilk should be withdrawn from retail sale, but does not allow additional storage time in the consumer's home.

- Although the finished product may not be as flavorful, when there's no buttermilk on hand and a recipe calls for it, the following substitution can be made: In place of 1 cup of buttermilk, add enough regular milk to 1 tablespoon vinegar or lemon juice to make 1 cup. Then let it stand 5 minutes.

- For Southern-style fried chicken: Dip or soak chicken pieces in buttermilk, roll in seasoned flour and fry. Serve with Buttermilk Biscuits.

Snack Breads, Good Eating Are A Natural

There's no doubt that Americans are really watching what they eat. Light, healthy, and natural are used daily when describing our new emphasis on truly good food.

Snacks continue to play a major role in the family diet — tucked in lunches, enjoyed after school or perfect when entertaining friends. To preserve the goodness of flavor and freshness, even wonderful snack breads, once the specialty of home cooks, are now frozen. Tasty as is, these winsome little flavored snack breads are even better when accompanied by delicious, simple-to-create spreads which are quick and easy to spread.

SUNSHINE BREAD
 2 tablespoons plain yogurt
 1 tablespoon frozen orange juice concentrate Mix together and spread on carrot snack loaves

CINNAMON SPREAD
 2 tablespoons plain yogurt
 1 3/4 teaspoons granulated sugar
 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon dash of nutmeg

NUTTY SPREAD
 1 tablespoon small curd cottage cheese
 2 tablespoons chunky peanut butter
 Mash cottage cheese with fork; add peanut butter and mix well. Spread on banana snack loaves.

APPLE CRUNCHY SPREAD
 Spread prepared apple butter on cinnamon raisin snack loaves; sprinkle sesame or sunflower seeds.

1/3 cup snowdrift shortening
 1 cup buttermilk
 Melted butter

Preheat oven to 425 degrees. Sift together flour, sugar and soda. With pastry blender or two knives, cut shortening into flour mixture until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Stir in buttermilk. Knead dough on floured board or cloth 10 times or until smooth. Roll to 1/2 inch thickness and cut into 2 1/2 inch rounds with floured biscuit cutter. Place biscuits, touching on ungreased baking sheet. Bake for 12 to 15 minutes or until golden. Brush with melted butter immediately after removing from oven. Makes 8 to 10 biscuits.

BUTTERMILK CORNBREAD
 Makes 1 9-inch skillet, 1 9-inch square pan, 12 muffins or 16 corn sticks.
 1 egg
 1 3/4 cups buttermilk
 1/4 cup melted shortening or vegetable oil
 2 cups self-rising corn meal mix

Preheat oven to 450 degrees. Grease skillet, pan or molds; place in oven to heat. Beat egg in mixing bowl. Add remaining ingredients; stir until well blended. Pour batter into prepared pan or molds. (Fill muffin cups or corn stick pans 2/3 full.) Bake 15 to 18 minutes for muffins and sticks or 20 to 25 minutes for skillet and pan.

For a wonderful treat, try this next recipe for Buttermilk Pie. Although buttermilk is known for its tangy taste, this pie has a more delicate taste. Buttermilk Pie is similar to Chess Pie in its appearance and creamy texture.

BUTTERMILK PIE
 1 1/4 cups sugar
 2 tablespoons self-rising corn meal mix
 3 eggs, lightly beaten
 1/2 cup (1 stick) butter or margarine, melted
 1/3 cup buttermilk
 1 teaspoon vanilla
 1 unbaked 9-inch pie shell

BUTTERMILK FAVORITES — These three traditional recipes all have something in common — the tangy taste and moistness of buttermilk. Featured clockwise from the left, are: Buttermilk Cornbread Wedges, Buttermilk Biscuits, Buttermilk Cornbread Sticks, and Buttermilk Pie.
