Contras Seeking More Time On Peace Talks

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Nicaraguan rebels called Saturday for a postponement of peace talks but the Sandinista government said a delay would violate the cease-fire agreement.

The high-level talks between delegations from the government and rebels, known as Contras, were scheduled to begin Wednesday.

A rebel leader indicated the Contras were seeking more time for technical commissions of both sides to administer five zones inside Nicaragua where rebel forces are gathering under the cease-fire accord.

A government communique signed by Deputy Foreign Minister Victor Hugo Tinoco said it was "extremely important" to comply with the pact outline that specifies the meeting be held Wednesday, April 6, in Managua.

"We feel it (a postponement) is not violating the accord," said Adolfo Calero, a leader of the Nicaraguan Resistance, in a telephone interview from Miami. "If we are to continue talks on the 6th, we need a starting point."

Nicaraguan Resistance is the Contras' umbrella organization.

After two days of talks that ended last Tuesday to work out details for the cease-fire, both sides agreed to establish five zones where the rebel fighters would gather during a 60-day cease-fire that went into effect Friday.

Both the cease-fire and the April 6 meeting are called for under the peace agreement signed after three days of negotiations in the southern border town of Sapoa last month.

"My God, (an end to) a 7-year-old war can't be jeopardized by one week while a cease-fire is in place," Calero said. He proposed the talks take place on April 12 in Managua.

"We are not coming on the 6th but we'll be there on the 12th," Calero said.

Meanwhile, the Nicaraguan Resistance said it had notified Tinoco of two Sandinista violations of the Sapoa accord.

In a statement released in Miami Saturday, the rebel leaders said the government failed to include all the prisoners the Contras had requested be among the 100 political prisoners released March 27.

It also said the government "denies the selling of the necessary printing materials" to the opposition La Prensa newspaper "while it continues granting all paper and other materials for publication to the other newspapers." It said that violated the accord's condition for full press freedom in Nicaragua.

"With the purpose of expediting the government to the cessation of these unfulfillments, we hope that these violations will be overcome as soon as possible since persistence impairs the climate that must prevail at the highest level meeting to be held in Nicaragua," the statement said.

Indians Write Soviets

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Two Robeson County Indians charged in the armed takeover of a Lumberton newspaper said they have written to Soviet General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev, describing the plight of American Indians.

The letters will be delivered to Moscow by civil rights attorney William Kunstler, who hopes to make Indian rights an issue at the May summit between Gorbachev and President Reagan, said Eddie Hatcher on Saturday.

Hatcher, 30, and Timothy Jacobs, 19, both of Pembroke, are charged with hostage-taking and the manufacture and possession of illegal weapons in connection with the Feb. 1 siege of The Robesonian newspaper in Lumberton.

"We raised several issues in our letters regarding the Reagan administration and past administrations' treatment of native Americans that has been brought about by lies and broken treaties," Hatcher said in a telephone interview with the Fayetteville Observer-Times. "We are political prisoners, and we raise the fact that there are many other political prisoners like us."

Hatcher wrote in his letter: "There are many native Americans who now stand behind bars in American prisons for reasons none other than attempting to bring to light the many injustices the United States government has brought upon us."

Hatcher said several treaties made between Indians and the U.S. government "have fallen as leaves on the ground, only to be walked upon and crushed into the dirt to be covered and stood upon."

He later said in the letter, "Does Ronald Reagan tell you there are no political prisoners in the United States? If so, he lies! There are many political prisoners held in the United States, only they are being held quietly.

"Our tradition and culture are being taken from us under the disguise of a corrupt system, and with this, our rights and beliefs are taken

New Computer Tracks Claimants

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Employment Security Commission's information booklet on unemployment insurance benefits warns claimants they will be ineligible for benefits for one year if they submit a fradulent claim, and they also may be prosecuted.

The warning ends with the statement: "The Penalties Are Severe."

Individuals who receive unemployment benefits and do not report earnings are guilty of fraud, and each violation carries a maximum penalty of two years in jail or a $1,000 fine.

"If a person commits fraud, the chances are very good we will catch them through our computer program," said Joan Thomas, ESC fraud investigator in Greenville.

The ESC uses a computer program which cross-checks employer payrolls with unemployment insurance records and produces the Social Security numbers of the people who appear on both lists, according to John Lynch, chief fraud investigator with the state ESC office in Raleigh.

The computer program was first implemented early in 1987, said Lynch, and the ESC recovered a record $1.2 million from fraud overpayments. "That's the most ever recovered by North Carolina. The figures, I think, indicate better use of the computer to detect improper payments."

The ESC recovered a little less than half of the fraud overpayments in 1987, but that was because the new computer program detected many more cases — about 4,300 — than in the past. "Early in 1987 we were able to run this improved cross-matching program," said Lynch. "There is always lag time in recovering the money."

The U.S. Department of Labor requires a recovery rate of 55 percent, said Lynch, and the state ESC exceeded the federal minimum for the last quarter of 1987 and the first quarter of 1988.

Ms. Thomas receives hundreds of cases each quarter from Pitt, Beaufort, Martin, Hyde, Craven, Pamlico and Jones counties and she screens each case to determine if fraud occurred.

If there is evidence of a violation, Ms. Thomas contacts the individual by mail to explain the situation and set a date for a conference. "There

ECU Alumni Will Honor Bennett, Horne, Pierce

The East Carolina University Alumni Association will present Distinguished Service Awards to Thomas A. Bennett of Winston-Salem, Eugene B. Horne Jr. of Sanford and the late Ovid W. Pierce of Greenville at its annual Alumni Day luncheon April 23 at the Greenville Country Club.

The awards are given in appreciation to alumni and friends who have provided outstanding service toward the advancement of the university through gifts of time and talent.

Bennett is executive vice president of Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. A 1959 ECU graduate, Bennett earned a bachelor of science degree in business administration.

He currently is chairman of the ECU Board of Trustees and has served on the board since 1981. He also has been active as a board member of the ECU Foundation Inc., and is a member of the Chancellor's Society and the Pirate Club.

Bennett is a native of Beaufort County. He taught school for three years before joining Wachovia in 1962. He rose to office head and, by 1968, was vice president of the

Rose Student Named University Scholar

Terri Lynnette Jarvis, a student at J.H. Rose High School, is one of seven graduating high school seniors from across the state selected for the 1988 East Carolina University Scholars Award.

The scholarships provide for four years of tuition and fees-paid study at ECU. Recipients are chosen on the basis of academic achievement and potential for leadership.

Each of the University Scholars Awards is made possible by a privately funded and named endowment. Now in its fourth year, the University Scholars program has more than 30 scholarships in force at ECU.

Miss Jarvis has participated in several activities while at Rose including cheerleading, gymnastics and marshal. She is a member of the National Honor Society, the Honors Medical Program, the Academic Decathlon Team and the math team.

She is the daughter of Melvin and Barbara Jarvis of Greenville.

Other 1988 University Scholars who will enter the university for the fall semester are: Derrick Slade Hyman of Tarboro, Scott Richard Smith of Clemmons, Lori Ann Davis of Beulaville, Rodney Lee McCaskill of Goldsboro, Stephanie Lee Singleton of Kinston and Rhonda Gale Matthews of Rocky Mount.

Nominations for the University Awards are made by principals, superintendents and university alumni from all parts of the nation. For the 1988 awards, 85 semifinalists were chosen from more than 120 nominations and screening was conducted by regional selection committees. At least a dozen finalists will be offered academic scholarships, according to ECU officials, but seven will receive University Scholars Awards.

Public Input Sought On Parks

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville-area residents — with the coming of spring and its warm temperatures and sunny skies that make people want to get outdoors — have the opportunity to visit seven state parks that are within about 90 minutes' driving time of the city.

Area residents will also have the opportunity Thursday night to have impact on what direction the state park system will take in future management of its resources.

The parks and recreation division of the N.C. Department of Natural Resources will hold a regional public meeting at 7 p.m. at the Jaycee Park recreation center to give citizens a chance to articulate concerns and opinions on state parks.

North Carolina counts 53 units within its state park system — 32 of them permanently staffed to accommodate public use.

Don Reuter, public information officer for the parks and recreation division, said in an interview that North Carolina's parks had their highest visitor total in 1987, with 7.5 million people participating in activities throughout the park system, up from 5.5 million visitors in 1983.

But the park system, which includes 125,000 acres of land and water, has problems, according to Reuter. He said state park officials have "documented over $20 million in needed repairs to buildings and utility systems," and estimate that "$80 million is needed for minimal development of park facilities."

Full development costs are difficult to assess because master plans for parks that have them are more than 10 years old.

Los Angeles Police Expanding Force To Combat Gang-Related Shootings

By PAUL FELDMAN
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — In the wake of one of the worst gang-related shooting incidents in the city's history, Los Angeles Police Chief Daryl F. Gates angrily announced Saturday that he was preparing plans to flood the streets of the south-central area of the city with 1,000 additional officers on random nights in order to control "the rotten little cowards."

Gates, who recently instituted sporadic anti-gang sweeps of 200 to 300 extra officers, also called for additional night courts, new courts in south-central Los Angeles and passage of a state wiretapping law as additional weapons in what he called a "war" against gang violence.

Gates spoke at a press conference held in reaction to a drive-by shooting incident Friday night in south Los Angeles in which two men in a sedan fired more than 20 shots at a group of more than a dozen people, killing one and wounding eight others. Moments earlier, the gunmen, armed with at least one semi-automatic weapon, had wounded two others nearby, police said.

The shootings took place as 200 Los Angeles Police Department officers slated to participate in Gates' eighth anti-gang sweep since late February were attending a roll call at the Coliseum, just a few blocks north. It also came hours after Gates announced at a news conference that gang violence had decreased dramatically since the sweeps, which have resulted in the arrest of more than 750 gang members in South Los Angeles.

"It is frustrating and I'm angry, and now they're going to listen," said Gates Saturday morning. "We are going to hit them with every single law there is in the books."

"I mean this is Easter weekend, the holy weekend, and we have all this shooting going on on the holy weekend. People in south-central Los Angeles want to go to church tomorrow and we're going to make sure they feel safe when they go to church."

The people in the large group that was fired upon about 7 p.m. Friday had been standing together chatting at the corner of 46th St. and Raymond Avenue. Police said members of the group, who ranged from 4 to 29 years old, were apparently not affiliated with gangs.

Police said Stacy Childress, 19, a south-central Los Angeles resident, was killed. Four-year-old Deshawn Holly was wounded four times — twice in the abdomen and in each leg. He was reported in stable condition Saturday at Los Angeles County-University of Southern California Medical Center. Two other victims were reported in fair condition and several others were treated and released from four area hospitals.

Authorities said the group was attacked moments after the same unknown assailants shot and wounded a rival gang member two blocks north. Police, who refused to disclose the identity of the gang member, speculate that shooting may have stemmed from a continuing dispute over which gang would sell drugs at a nearby park.

After that shooting, the gunmen drove south in a brown or cream Cadillac or Buick sedan, and shot a second pedestrian, whose identity was withheld by police. Then, the gunmen reached the corner where the large group was standing under a street lamp.

Lionel Robinson, 20, was among the people on the corner.

"We were just talking .... Next thing you know, a car came up and all you heard was gunfire," Robinson said. "They just shot for nothing. I don't know what it was about."

Robinson, a student at Transwestern Institute, a business school in Los Angeles, was hit four times in the legs. He was in fair condition at the Los Angeles County-USC Medical Center.

An eyewitness who escaped the gunfire described the scene on the corner as "what you hear about Nicaragua and all those other countries. It was like that — people getting shot down. That's how it is in Los Angeles now."

"We'll put everybody on 12 hours," Gates said. "That's how we did it during the Olympics and we'll do it here."

Pope Leads Vatican Easter Service

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Flickering lights from thousands of candles illuminated St. Peter's Basilica late Saturday as Pope John Paul II followed a procession of cardinals and bishops in ceremonies to usher in Easter.

A two-hour vigil on the eve of Christianity's holiest day of the year culminated with a midnight Mass celebrating the resurrection of Jesus Christ.

Thousands of people packed into the pews and aisles lit small candles as the silent procession moved through the cavernous church.

The pope carried a long white candle as he walked to the main altar under the "Baldacchino," the baroque canopy designed by the 17th century sculptor and architect Gian Lorenzo Bernini. The pontiff's candle was lit from a large Easter candle in an act that symbolizes the light of Christ.

The "Lumen Christi," or Light of Christ, was chanted three times as the pope reached the main altar. After the third time, the lights of the Basilica suddenly came on.

"During this night of vigil we are baptized in the death of Christ. We are buried together with him in death, so that we may walk in a new life, like Christ," John Paul said in his homily delivered in Italian.

After the homily, John Paul baptized and confirmed 27 people from 11 countries. They youngest was a 7-year-old boy from India, Asmathy Cristofanilli, and the oldest was Joana Maria Evora, 49, from Cape Verde.

The only American in the group was Sean Lamb, 19, a baskeball player at the University of California at Los Angeles.

"Via you I send my greeting to your respective countries: Korea, Germany, Japan, India, Indonesia, Cape Verde, Italy, Peru, The United States of America, Hungary and Vietnam," the pope told them.

"Coming from different parts of the world you symbolize the universality of the church, the universality of redemption."

In his homily, the pontiff said "this night of vigil invites us to the greatest joy, the joy of the Easter of Christ."

On Sunday, during an open-air mass, the pope will give the traditional "Urbi and Orbi" greetings to the pilgrims in St. Peter's Square and television viewers around the world.

That Mass caps a week of Easter activities. On Friday evening, the pope carried a simple black wooden cross in a torchlit procession at the Colosseum. Tens of thousands watched the "Via Crucis" or way-of-the-cross, as the pope stopped at the 14 stations that symbolize Christ's agonizing walk to his crucifixion.

On Thursday at the Basilica of St. John the Lateran, the pontiff washed the feet of 12 priests in a service recalling Christ's last supper with the apostles.

ESC Computer Seeks Out Fraud

are people who deserve unemployment insurance," she said, "and it's kind of my job to protect the interests of the unemployment insurance program."

After the investigator meets with the claimant, the state office makes a final decision on whether or not fraud occurred in the case. The claimant has 10 days to appeal the decision.

"A person has the opportunity to say, 'Hey, that's not right,' before it gets to the court system," said Ms. Thomas.

"We try to give the claimant an opportunity to be heard before we take any adverse action against that claimant," said Lynch. "We make an effort to contact that person at least once, maybe two or three times.

"We feel the quality of our information is such that we have no hesitation in allowing a person all their due process. Our cases are good enough to stand on their own," said Lynch. "We lose very few. So far this year we've lost one."

Ms. Thomas has worked as a fraud investigator since 1983 and she said she doesn't remember anyone who was found not guilty in court. "What we have is pretty cut and dried," she said.

The state ESC office in Raleigh makes the final decision on which cases merit prosecution. "The dollar amount, I believe, is a good indication of how flagrant the case is," said Lynch. "The most flagrant case is the case chosen for prosecution."

About 1,000 fraud cases go to court each year in North Carolina, he said.

"It depends on the seriousness of the case," said Ms. Thomas. "If someone has done it for 22 weeks, that's pretty blatant." Each week the claimant collects unemployment benefits and fails to report additional earnings results in a separate charge of fraud.

There is also a two-year statute of limitations from the time the offense occurred, said Ms. Thomas, and ESC officials may want to prosecute an older case before the time expires. The time constraints are a factor because cases reach the investigators for screening about one year after the violation occurred.

If the case goes to court, the ESC fraud investigator can submit employment payroll records showing the claimant worked, canceled unemployment insurance checks endorsed by the claimant and the claim filed in which the individual declared no other earnings. "Most of the people plead guilty," said Ms. Thomas.

"We have all kinds of fraud cases and that's just one kind that you see," said Pitt County District Attorney Thomas Haigwood. "We've been very successful in the prosecution and conviction of Employment Security fraud. The Employment Security folks do a very good job of identifying and collecting evidence necessary to secure a conviction."

The prosecution considers the serverity of the offense, the number of weeks it occurred, the explanation of the defendant and the position taken by the ESC investigators, said Haigwood.

Investigators have success with using employer payroll records, but employers who pay workers in cash or do not contribute to unemployment insurance present problems. "I feel confident in saying we catch the vast majority" of fradulent claims in which the individual works for a legitimate employer, said Lynch. "The underground economy gives us trouble."

The individual who works for a legitimate employer will likely be caught because the computer will find a match with the employer records and the unemployment insurance records, said Lynch, but the underground economy is a bigger problem.

"It's a different situation," he said, "just like it is for the IRS, and the Social Security people for that matter. We're all losing that tax money."

Unemployment insurance is financed totally by employers, said Lynch, and businesses pay premiums based on how much they use the system. Money recoverd goes back into the ESC coffers and helps keep employer costs from rising and, in turn, saves consumers money, he said.

ESC investigators encourage citizens to report suspected fraud, said Lynch. "We'll give everything a look. That neighbor or that angry spouse may report that person, and we will pursue it," he said.

Chester Stocks, retired agricultural extension agent from Lenoir County, will teach the classes. He has worked in fruit and vegetable production and marketing while serving as an extension agent.

Topics include variety selection, fertilizer recommendations, nematode control effects of insects and diseases and marketing alternatives. Vegetables to be discussed include collards, cabbage, bean crops, pea crops and others grown in eastern North Carolina. Fruits to be discussed are strawberries, blueberries, peaches and apples.

Superior Ratings

Career Club

Members of the Career Club of G.R. Whitfield School recently attended the Career Exploration District I Rally in Elizabeth City at Elizabeth City State University.

Whitfield winners were Kim Allen, first place in Personal Service; Sam Simmons, first place in Environmental Control; Frankie Williams, second place in Parliamentary; Michael Ross, second place in Agri-business and Natural Resources; Jennifer Whitehurst, third place in Job Application Skills, and Jason Moore, third place in Health. The 28 participants received certificates of participation.

Third grade students at Whitfield recently visited The Daily Reflector and toured the Pitt-Greenville Airport in conjunction with social studies lessons.

The students learned how newspapers are published. Gigi Walter of the Newspaper in Education program at the Reflector visited the classes prior to their visit.

Vacancies

There are vacancies still open in a 10-week course in basic creative writing to be taught by Joan Boudreaux at Pitt Community College beginning Wednesday. Each class will be from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. Wednesdays, with registration taking place during the first class.

Concentration will be on poetry in the beginning weeks and the course will later cover all forms of writing including fiction and non-fiction.

The course is designed for people who have not had extensive writing experience. For information, call Mrs. Boudreaux, 756-2678.

Registration

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will hold preregistration for its youth gymnastics program on Wednesday from 5 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. at the Elm Street Center.

This program is for boys and girls ages 2 1/2 to 16 years old, beginners, advanced beginners, intermediate and advanced classes. This session will begin on April 11. Youth will be divided according to age and/or ability.

For more information, call April Butler at 752-9432. There is limited registration.

VICA Contest

The Vocational Industrial Clubs of America Club from Farmville Central High School traveled to Roanoke Chowan Technical Institute recently to compete in the regional VICA Leadership and Skills Conference with 16 other schools.

The Farmville VICA Club had five regional winners. Jay Tripp and Greg Stallings won first and second placein the electrical trade contest. Jeff Fisher won first place in safety-single section and Joe Cox won third place in job skill demonstration from the carpentry program. Earl Evans won third place in blocklaying.

All first and second place winners will go on to the state competition in Asheville April 14.

Joins Firm

Greenville native Jack W. Jenkins has become a principal in the Morehead City law firm of Kenneth M. Kirkman, P.A. The name of the firm has since been changed to Kirkman, Kirkman and Jenkins, P.A.

Jenkins graduated with honors from J.H. Rose High School in 1975 and graduated magna cum laude from East Carolina University. Following college, Jenkins served as an auditor with the North Carolina Department of Commerce. In 1984, Jenkins received his law degree from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and began practicing with the Greenville firm of Mattox & Davis, P.A. In early 1986, Jenkins moved to Morehead City and became associated with the firm of Kenneth M. Kirkman, P.A.

Jenkins is married to the former Mary Charles Stevens, also of Greenville, and is the son of ECU Chancellor Emeritus Leo W. Jenkins.

Math Contest

Math students at E.B. Aycock Junior High School competed in the East Carolina University Math Contest Thursday.

The algebra I and the geometry teams placed first in the competition. Katrina Cherry and Kevin Allegood placed third in the Algebra I Division, while Edward Rampersaud placed second and Laura Howel placed first. Jon Ames placed third in the Geometry Division.

Other students on the math teams were Laura Howell, Josh Glienke, Brian Marks, Milton Carawan, Holly MacKenna and Jalyn Parsley.

Reading Program

Sadie Saulter School students are attending "Reading Bucks Store" each month and are purchasing items with play money earned by reading books outside of the classroom.

Items for the store, which creates a reading incentive for students, were donated by area businesses, parents and the school Parent Teacher Association.

The school PTA recently held a family skate night at Sportworld. Students, their families and the staff participated, and prizes were given to the students with the best St. Patrick's Day constume.

Book Ready

A book designed to keep public school administrators abreast of how state and federal requirements affect public primary and secondary education has been produced by the Institute of Government at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

"Education Law In North Carolina" is a two-volume, loose-leaf publication undertaken as part of the Principal's Executive Program at UNC and edited by Robert E. Pray, program director and professor of public law and government. It discusses transportation law, religion in schools, working with police, employment discrimination, recruitment and selection of teachers and public school finance. The discipline of students, teacher tenure regulations, special education, liability of school boards and textbooks and curriculum also are discussed.

For more information or to purchase the book, call the Principal's Executive Program at 966-4478.

Housing Month

Greenville Mayor Ed Carter has proclaimed April as Greenville Fair Housing Month in tribute to the accomplishments of citizens and the housing industry in promoting fair housing for all citizens.

"Greenville is proud of its record of promoting equal housing opportunity. Consequently, Greenville has become a model for eastern North Carolina," he said.

"The city of Greenville encourages organizations, community leaders, and the housing-related industry to join together in promoting fair housing for all citizens in Greenville," he said.

Membership

Several Pitt County residents have been elected to membership in Sigma Theta Tau international honor society of nursing at Atlantic Christian College. They are Judy H. Page of Ayden, M. Lynn Jones, Wanda F. Flake and Katrina Gray, all of Greenville, and will be inducted as members of Theta Iota chapter April 16.

The honor society is an organization of scholars and leaders in nursing. Founded at Indiana University in 1922, it has more than 230 chapters in colleges and universities across the country.

Initiated

Murriel B. Best of Greenville recently was initiated into the Gamma Epsilon chapter of Kappa Omicron Phi, a national home economics honors society, at North Carolina Central University. Eligibility for membership is based on scholarship, leadership potential and personal qualities.

NCCU's chapter is part of the society's Region II South, which includes chapters at N.C. A&T State University, Meredith College, Appalachian State University and South Carolina State College.

Chairman

John Hutchens, director of the arts and science division at Pitt Community College, recently attended the Conference on College Composition and Communication in St. Louis, Mo. He was appointed to chair a task force to plan a national meeting of two-year English instructors.

Representing the Southeast as a member of the National Two-Year College Council and of the executive committee of CCC, Hutchens is the former editor of the National Council of Teachers of English journal, "Teaching English in the Two-Year College."

New Member

Kimberly Ann May, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Curtis E. May of Greenville, recently was initiated into the Meredith College Kappa Nu Sigma honor society, opened to junior and seniors who maintain at least a 3.5 grade point average. The society was founded at Meredith in 1923.

Caucus

Democrats in Pitt County will hold a caucus at their county convention in the Pitt County Counthouse Saturday at 1 p.m. J.B. Spilman, chairman of the Pitt County Democratic Party announced Friday. Delegates elected at county precinct meetings and registered Democrats are encouraged to attend, he said.

"I want to stress that this convention is not just for Democratic regulars. We hope that people who have never been involved in politics will see this as a good place to start," Spilman said. "The more people who get involved, the better the party can represent the views of all Democrats."

The convention will elect delegates to the district and state conventions and will choose members to different district executive committees. Precincts also will have the opportunity to pass resolutions expressing their views on political and public policy issues.

Mexican Life

Edward Haughton's third grade class at Third Street School recently studied Mexican life under the direction of Julie Turner, a student teacher from East Carolina University. The children tried on clothing from Mexico, wove Mexican blankets, and learned the Mexican Hat Dance and several Spanish words.

A Spanish professor at ECU visited the class, and the unit was concluded with a fiesta featuring tacos and refried beans. Students also broke a Mexican pinata.

Shaw Players

The Shaw Players of Shaw University will present the musical entertainment "Don't Bother Me I Can't Cope" Saturday at 6 p.m. in the Ayden Auditorium on South Lee Street.

The Pitt County chapter of the Shaw University Alumni is sponsoring the play, which was written by Vinette Carroll, with music and lyrics by Micki Grant. Proceeds will be used for the Pitt County Shaw Students Scholarships.

For information, call 752-3688.

Mended Hearts

Eastern Carolina chapter No. 23 of Mended Hearts will meet Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Gaskin-Leslie Building. Mike McCammon, of the human performance lab, physical education department, East Carolina University, will speak.

Support Group

The Caregiver Support Group will meet at St. James United Methodist Church April 12 starting at 7 p.m.

Alumni Meeting

The Pitt County chapter of the N.C. A&T State University Alumni Association will meet Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in Sycamore Hill Baptist Church, 226 W. Eighth St. The remainder of the year's calendar will be discussed.

Arrests

Two separate incidents of employee theft were reported to Greenville police Friday.

Officer M.R. Benton said Barbara Lee McCord, 42, of 1400 E. 10th St., was arrested at Carolina Imprints, 715 Albemarle Ave., on a charge of larceny from an employer. Officer F.G. Pruitt said Billy Turcotte was charged with the theft of $500 from Kroger Sav-On.

Officer E.M. Haddock said Bobby Joe Mason was arrested on a charge of stealing a 73-cent can of beer at Shop-Eze Foodland, Buyers' Market, in an incident reported at 12:53 p.m. Friday, while Officer S.C. Locke said William Earl Ebron, 39, of 110-A Howard Circle, was arrested on a charge of assault inflicting serious injury in an incident reported at 12:50 p.m. Friday.

Officer K.L. Jones said Zelbra T. Bunn, 39, of 1203-B N. Van Dyke St., was charged with assault on a female in an incident reported Saturday at 1 a.m.

Police Say Check Taken From Mailbox

Investigators said several thefts, including a $354 Social Security check from a mailbox, were reported to Greenville police Friday and Saturday.

Officer C.A. Elks said the Social Security check was stolen from the mailbox of 408-A W. Fourth St., Friday at 12:15 p.m., while Officer F.G. Pruitt said a 1987 Jamis men's bicycle was stolen from the University Apartments complex in an incident reported at 12:37 p.m. The bicycle is lime-colored and is valued at $215, Pruitt said.

Officer L.E. White said two antique lawn mowers valued at $80, a shovel valued at $10, a ladder valued at $25 and a kitchen countertop valued at $35 were stolen in an incident reported at 4 p.m. Friday, while Officer J.G. Jenkins said a brown Fendi purse valued at $100, a pair of Ray Ban sunglasses valued at $46 and a beige Liz Claiborne wallet containing several credit cards and checks were stolen in an incident reported at 9:18 p.m. Friday. The theft occurred at Farm Fresh on Greenville Boulevard, Jenkins said.

Officer K.L. Jones said the wallet was lifted at Paddock Nightclub in an incident reported at 2:04 a.m. Saturday. Jones said John Earl Barnes Jr., 22, of 704 W. Fourth St., was arrested at the club.

Officer D.R. Wyrick said a boys' 24-inch Western Flyer 10-speed bicycle was stolen from 421 W. Fourth St., in an incident reported at 10:45 a.m. Saturday, while Officer C.A. Elks said a wine-colored leather shoulder bag, containing several credit cards and about $36, was stolen in an incident reported at 12:39 p.m. Saturday. The incident occurred at Sears in East Carolina Mall, Elks said.

Officer E.M. Haddock said a Howard Miller clock valued at $250 was stolen from Taft Furniture in an incident reported at 12:49 p.m., while Officer S.C. Locke said a $4.20 pendant from Lerner's at Carolina East Mall was stolen in an incident reported a 2:21 p.m. Saturday. Karie V. Moore, 24, of 108-A Albermarle Drive, Plymouth, was arrested for larceny in the incident.

Boosters Stand Test

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP) — A stress test showed the space shuttle's redesigned solid rocket boosters apparently can withstand the weight of the orbiter, launch pressures and then some, a NASA spokesman said Saturday.

The structural load test was another step in certifying the space shuttle for flight, said Ed Medal, a spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration at its Marshall Space Flight Center.

Hydraulic systems were used to apply pressures to a shortened solid rocket booster.

Greenville Has Seven Parks Within 90 Minutes' Driving Time

And, too, park officials "say $15 million is needed to purchase land to provide environmental buffers" at park facilities across the state, according to Reuter.

"Many of the buildings in the parks were built in excess of 30 years ago and are in a serious state of disrepair" due to inadequate funding, he said. And "the majority of the open units are staffed by three or less full-time employees."

North Carolina ranks last nationally in per capita spending for state parks, "at 99 cents per citizen," Reuter said. "The state spends seven-tenths of one percent of its budget to staff and operate parks.

"The average in the Southeast is $3.20 (per resident) ... nationally it's $4.09. Kentucky ranks No. 1," according to Reuter, at $13.91 per resident.

The meeting Thursday night, "which anyone can attend," is part of an effort to improve the parks, Reuter said.

Those parks within 90 minutes of Greenville include: Fort Macon, two miles east of Atlantic Beach on secondary road 1190 — the state's most popular park, which counted over 1.22 million visitors in 1987; Cliffs of the Neuse, 14½ miles southeast of Goldsboro off N.C. 111, which saw 150,633 visitors last year; Goose Creek, 10 miles east of Washington off SR 1334, with 113,225 visitors in 1987, and Pettigrew Place (with Lake Phelps), nine miles south of Creswell off U.S. 64 on SR 1166, where 52,875 persons visited in 1987.

Others include: Hammocks Beach, 4½ miles south of Swansboro off N.C. 24 on SR 1157, which counted 47,280 visitors last year; Medoc Mountain, 15 miles southwest of Roanoke Rapids off N.C. 561, with 29,696 visitors last year, and Merchant's Millpond near Gatesville, which counted 70,242 visitors in the past year.

All of the near-by state parks offer picnicking, fishing, nature programs and hiking trails, and all but Pettigrew and Fort Macon offer camping.

Want to swim? There's the ocean at Fort Macon and Hammocks Beach (with bathhouses and refreshment stands), lake swimming at Pettigrew and at Cliffs of the Neuse (which also has a bathhouse and refreshment stand) and river swimming (the Pamlico) at Goose Creek.

If you had rather be on the water than in it, boating is available at Goose Creek, Cliffs of the Neuse, Pettigrew and Merchants Millpond. Facilities at Goose Creek and Pettigrew include boat ramps, while boat rental is available at Cliffs of the Neuse and Merchants Millpond. And canoeing at Goose Creek, Medoc and Merchants Mill Pone (where canoe rental is available) is also allowed.

Like to ride horses? Medoc Mountain has bridle trails.

And if you like museums, Pettigrew and Fort Macon have them.

All the parks have three year-round workers with the exception of Fort Macon, which has six full-time employees, and Medoc Mountain, with two.

The parks's budgets — with one exception, Hammocks Beach — seem to correspond to their ranking in the "number of visitors" column, rather than by size.

Fort Macon, established as a park in 1924, is the smallest of the seven, at 389 acres. But its $213,820 budget ranks No. 1 in the group, along with its top visitor position.

Hammocks Beach, which entered the park system in 1961, ranks fourth in size, with 892 acres. But its second place $212,602 budget is out of line with its sixth place visitor ranking.

Established as a park in 1945, the 608-acre Cliffs of the Neuse ranks third in budget with $201,460 (and second in the number of visitors), while Goose Creek, a state park since 1974, with 1,327 acres, is fourth in budget with $95,851 a year and third in visitors, and the 2,508 acre Merchants Millpond area, a park since 1973, ranks fifth in budget — $93,677 — and fourth in visitors.

Pettigrew's 768 acres of land make No. 5 in size, unless of course you include the 16,600 acres of water in Lake Phelps, which then ranks the park, founded in 1939, as the largest. Its $85,016 budget ranks sixth among the group (fifth in the number of visitors), while Medoc Mountain, established in 1973 with 2,286 acres, ranks seventh in budget with $80,721 and seventh in the number of visitors.

In addition to an opportunity to vent concerns, the public hearing Thursday will give citizens a visual look at the park system.

"There will be a slide presentation with background on the park system ... the dilemmas facing the parks due to funding and a review of the state parks act (passed by the 1987 General Assembly) which mandates the meeting," Reuter said.

He said public input from the Greenville meeting, one held in Greensboro last week, and two other sessions, will be used to develop "a systemwide plan by Dec. 31," for guidance and management of the parks.

The function of the park system, as defined by the act, Reuter said, is to "preserve representative examples of unique geologic, biologic, archaeological, recreational and scenic resources. And the system, as defined, includes state parks, state natural areas, state recreation areas, state trails, state rivers and state lakes, together with surrounding lands."

The act "specifies that parks lands should be used to promote understanding of and pride in the natural heritage of the state," Reuter said.

The 1987 legislation also calls for the development of general management plans for each unit, outlines conditions for the process of adding parks to the system and deleting them (a majority vote of each house of the General Assembly), and provides that "additions must be accompanied by adequate authorization and appropriations for land acquisition, development and operation," Reuter explained.

The hearings, Reuter said, will help officials "evaluate existing parks, identify duplications and deficiencies ... current uses, conflicts created by those uses," and lead to "recommendations for corrections."

According to Reuter, the public meetings will "give people a chance to talk about what they want to see in parks."

Park Hikes Planned

Three members of Greenville's Cypress Group of the Sierra Club will lead hikes at North Carolina state parks May 1 at 2 p.m. as part of a statewide parks appreciation day sponsored by Friends of State Parks.

Diane Hankins of Greenville, past chairman of the Cypress Group who will lead a hike at Cliffs of the Neuse in Wayne County, said "the whole purpose is to call attention to the parks, get people out ... generate interest in the need for the parks and more money for parks."

In addition, Barbara Peoples of Greenville will lead a hike at Medock Mountain in Halifax County and Melvin Twiddy of Manteo will guide a group on Jockey's Ridge in Dare County.

Mrs. Hankins said the Sierra Club supports improvements in state parks, but emphasized the Friends of State Parks is heading the May 1 hiking program.

The Sierra Club's Cypress Group has about 500 members in 21 northeastern North Carolina counties. Grace Smith of Greenville is chairman.

For information about the Friends of State Parks or the hikes May 1, call Nancy Everhart in New Bern at 633-4490.

Indians Seek Help

also," Hatcher said. "Our voice of protest is hushed by the same methods the United States government calls denial of basic human rights' in other countries."

Jacobs wrote to Gorbachev, "When you sign a treaty with the U.S. government, I hope you remember my people. If the U.S. can't keep their word to my people, how can they keep an agreement with you and your people?"

He challenged the Soviet Union leader to ask President Reagan several questions during the superpowers summit about Indian rights in the United States, and to meet with Indian leaders to discuss the treatment of the race. The summit will be held from May 29 to June 2.

Robeson County Offers Contrasts In Views

By ERICA JOHNSTON
Associated Press Writer

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — It could almost be "A Tale of Two Counties."

In one account, related by elected officials, Robeson County is a gold mine that — if it plays its cards right — could be on the verge of an economic boom. It is a beautiful place, as seen in the huge wooden and brick houses that line the main street of Lumberton, the county seat, framed by gracious porches, generous lawns and blooming azaleas.

"Things here aren't really as bad as you may have heard," said Milton Hunt, a Lumbee Indian who is mayor of Pembroke, which calls itself "home of the Lumbee."

With a little patience and discussions by black, Indian and white leaders, the county — one of the state's poorest — could be a model of prosperity and a showcase for tri-racial harmony, elected officials say.

"In the last 10 years, Robeson County has made fantastic strides," said Lumberton Mayor David Weinstein. "I think everybody's willing now to work together. ... It's time, as the song goes, to accentuate the positive and (eliminate) the negative."

But in another account, given by activists of all three races, the county they call home is a morass of poverty and illiteracy that has earned the nickname "Little Miami" because of its drug trafficking. The county has great potential, they agree with elected leaders, but they say their unrealized hopes threaten to tear their world apart instead of spurring it forward.

"Some folks say we're going too fast, and a lot of folks say we're not going fast enough," said Eric Prevatte, a white Lumberton resident who joined with Indians and blacks to spearhead a successful fight to merge the county's five school systems.

"Normally, the people who are calling for you to go slow are the ones who already have the rights," said Prevatte, who acknowledged that he "caught some grief" from fellow whites for his efforts.

"For generations, our poverty has been a closely held secret," said Christine Griffin, a Lumbee Indian. "The forces that control those things would love for it to continue to be a closely held secret."

Elected officials "say the publicity is hurting our economy, giving us a bad image," she said. "Well, if we're poor, call us poor. We're tired. We're sick and tired, and we're fed up."

AT THE BURIAL — Ruth Locklear, girlfriend of slain Lumbee activist Julian Pierce, and her daughter, Rebecca Locklear, 10, were at the graveside during burial rites for Pierce on Wednesday. Pierce, a candidate for a Superior Court judgeship, was slain at his home in Wakulla. (AP Laserphoto)

The flames of discord were fanned last week, when Julian Pierce, a Lumbee who was a candidate for Superior Court judge, was shot and killed. County Sheriff Hubert Stone and state officials say the shooting was the result of a domestic problem, and was not politically motivated.

Most people here believe that explanation, but the violent death of a man called a hero by county residents of all races nonetheless brought tensions — never far from the surface here — to the forefront. A local Lumbee newspaper says the killing shattered the county's "pretense of harmony."

"When we lost Julian, we lost too much to let the world forget it," said Ms. Griffin, who became co-director of a public-interest law firm for low-income residents after Pierce resigned from the post in January to run for the judgeship.

"There will be change," she said. "It's already in motion, and it's snowballing. We are determined.

"Right after Julian's death, I was so furious and so angry," Ms. Griffin said Friday in her office at Lumbee River Legal Services Inc. "But I woke up this morning, and I was so excited I didn't know what to do. I didn't feel that all-consuming desire to strike back. I kept hearing Julian saying, 'Christine, don't get mad. Vent that fury into energy, and finish the work we've started."

By all accounts, Pierce started a great body of work. Under his leadership from 1978 to 1988, Lumbee River Legal Services' staff grew from three to 24. He played a key role in pulling together the Lumbees' application for federal recognition to the U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs, which was submitted in December.

Pierce helped establish the Robeson Health Care Corp., which serves low-income residents. He also was a former board chairman of "Strike At The Wind," an outdoor drama on Lumbee history, and began to dig it out of debt.

"He cannot be replaced," Ms. Griffin said. "He could see the most important issues in the smallest things. I've never met another individual like him, and I don't anticipate in my lifetime ever meeting someone like him."

Although blacks and Lumbees together make up almost two-thirds of the county's population, it has been only recently that they have gained significant representation in local political offices. And Lumbees and blacks say they still don't wield significant power in the county courthouse.

The issue now is whether change will come by discussions and the passage of time, or whether it can come only through struggle.

"We're having meetings now," Lumberton Mayor Weinstein said. "I think we're getting to understand one another. ... We're agreeing to disagree."

A march is planned in front of the county courthouse for Monday, in commemoration of the 20th anniversary of Martin Luther King's assassinations and the deaths of Pierce and other Lumbees. Weinstein said he would not be among the marchers.

"Instead of marching and rallying and yelling ... we need to sit down," Weinstein said, adding that people from outside the county would be there. "We do not need outsiders here. I think it's our problem, and we can handle it."

But others disagreed.

"We were left alone for 100 years. That's why we are where we are today, because people just ignored us," said the Rev. Joy Johnson, leader of a coalition group called Concerned Citizens For Better Government, which is sponsoring the march.

"Before, it was like we didn't exist," said Johnson, who is black. "We weren't heard until we stood up to protest and started going to the ballot box."

One activist, who did not want to be named, said he had moved out of his house on Thursday after receiving a bomb threat. "I'll go back after the march," he said. "I don't want to take any chances."

Ms. Griffin praised Concerned Citizens.

"They do not advocate violence. They want change," she said. "They're going to keep up the ruckus until we get that change. I say, 'Hallelujah.'"

"People are beginning to think independently of the (elected) leaders," she said. "They've been saying, 'I'll do your thinking for you.' It's as if we've been in a long, deep sleep, and we're suddenly waking up."

Weinstein, Pembroke Mayor Hunt and other elected officials do not speak highly of Concerned Citizens, though Weinstein hastens to add that the criticism "is not adversarial."

"I don't see peace coming from that group — there's a lot of chaos and confusion," said McDuffie Cummings, Pembroke's town manager.

Johnson bridled at that label.

"I've been pastor of the same church for 36 years ... I was in the state House of Representatives from 1971-78, the second black elected" in this century, he said. "I was elected by whites, blacks and Indians alike. If you call that radical, how did I get elected?"

Johnson said elected officials were fearful of what will happen in the county when blacks and Indians gain representation proportional to their population.

"The concern is that once you have control, you don't want to share that control. And that's the problem," he said. "Nobody's going to give you an elective office. You're going to have to take it, if you can.

"I think one problem is that if we gain control, they're afraid that we will treat them like they treated us for 200 years," Johnson said. "But no one has that in mind. We just want our share of elected officials and jobs."

But while he stressed the need for activism, Johnson agreed with Weinstein and Hunt that progress is being made in Robeson County, citing the recent formation of a human-rights council.

"It's a beginning," he said. "We are beginning to talk and communicate, which we haven't done before. But just to sit down and talk won't be enough."

Jack Morgan, a Lumbee who is a county commissioner, spoke Thursday night to about 600 people — mostly Lumbees — in a packed school cafeteria about Pierce's legacy.

"I've never been so proud of a place in my life as I was in Robeson County on Saturday, Sunday and Monday," he said, referring to the period after Pierce's death before anyone was charged in the killing. The situation appeared to many to be racially charged, and many felt there was tremendous potential for violence.

"It was terrifying to think of what could happen," Morgan said. "It was very gratifying that everything was peaceful.

"I feel very good about the change about to take place," he said. "... Change has always been very painful. But I feel very good about what's on the other side of the pain."

Britt Opposes Special Session

RALEIGH (AP) — Robeson County District Attorney Joe Freeman Britt is "strongly opposed" to a special legislative session to consider reopening a campaign for a Superior Court judgeship, Martin administration officials say.

"He feels like the law is well-established and that he is the nominee of the Democratic Party," Phil Kirk, chief of staff for Gov. Jim Martin, said. "He (Britt) sees no reason for a special session."

Britt met with Martin for about an hour Friday morning in Raleigh, but he said little as he departed. "You'll have to get your comments from the governor's office," Britt said as he briskly strode from the Capitol.

Britt's meeting came one day after supporters of slain Lumbee Indian activist Julian Pierce asked Martin for the special session. Pierce and Britt were the only candidates in the May 3 Democratic primary for the judgeship, and there is no Republican candidate.

Kirk said the Pierce supporters had stressed that the new judgeship — one of 10 created last year — was designed to allow minorities to become judges. But Britt and two lawyers who accompanied him to the meeting argued that the aggressive prosecutor was a minority in racially mixed Robeson County.

"Mr. Britt's supporters implied that he was a minority because whites only make up 37 percent of the population" in the county, Kirk said. "That doesn't hold water, because in each of the districts that were created, whites are the minority. The districts were created with a majority of minorities living in those districts so that a black or an Indian could get elected."

Martin told reporters he remained undecided and would discuss the matter with advisers, legislative leaders and others over the Easter weekend. He said he hoped to make a decision early next week.

"I've tried to be as judicious as I can in the case, to hear all sides...," Martin said.

Under state law, if a candidate dies more than 30 days after filing for a primary has closed, his opponent wins the nomination.

Martin said he wanted to talk with Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, House Speaker Liston Ramsey and Jim Van Hecke, the state Democratic Party chairman, before reaching a decision.

Shooting

OXFORD, N.C. (AP) — An Oxford woman underwent surgery at Duke University Medical Center Saturday morning after being shot three times by a Durham man in the Oxford Holiday Inn parking lot, authorities said.

Joan Evans, 49, was transferred from Granville Medical Center to Duke by LifeFlight helicopter after she sustained bullet wounds to her leg and buttocks at 10:10 p.m. Friday. Her condition was unknown.

Oxford Police Lt. Bob Williamson, who was off-duty at the time, witnessed the shooting and arrested Jimmy Lee Woods, 47, charging him with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill and inflicting serious injury, and with discharging a firearm inside the city limits.

Woods is being held in the Granville County Jail under $10,000 bond, Williamson said.

Literary Awards

NEW YORK (AP) — Sixteen American writers have won literary awards from the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters, the academy announced Friday.

Nine of the 16 awards include $5,000 purses given to encourage writers in their creative work. Winners included James Seay of Chapel Hill, N.C. Kaye Gibbons of Raleigh, N.C., won one of the seven remaining awards.

Worker Killed

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — A 23-year-old Kinston man was killed Thursday night in an industrial accident at Kinston Neuse Corporation in the Industrial Park, authorities said.

Wayne Cline, an employee at the fork lift plant, was checking a machine he was operating after it jammed. The machine began operating again injuring Cline in the head, officials said. The accident occurred shortly before 10 p.m.

Cline was transferred to Pitt County Memorial Hospital where he died at 2:29 a.m. Friday from head injuries, according to a PCMH spokesman.

Child Killed

SNOW HILL, N.C. (AP) — A 4-year-old Snow Hill girl was killed when she attempted to cross a rural road and was hit by an oncoming automobile approximately seven miles south of Snow Hill, authorities said.

The accident occurred shortly before 4 p.m. Thursday, the state Highway Patrol said.

LaDonna Faye Walters was pronounced dead on arrival at Lenoir Memorial Hospital, officials said.

Murder Arrest

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A Southmont man has been arrested on murder and attempted robbery chargest, thanks to the help of two young witnesses who described the suspect for Davidson County Sheriff's Department investigators.

Kenneth Benard Kennedy, 22, of Southmont, was charged in the Thursday night slaying of Dan Gilley Melton, 55, also of Southmont.

Authorities did not identify the two Southmont youths, aged 11 and 14, who said they witnessed the beating.

Expansion

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Wake Forest University's Board of Trustees has approved a $54.9 million capital projects plan for the 153-year old institution.

"It's the biggest undertaking since the university's relocation to Winston-Salem in 1956," said Wake Forest President Thomas K. Hearn Jr.

The plan outlines construction of three buildings, including a previously unannounced professional center, and renovation of six other buildings as well as landscaping, parking and campus sign improvements.

The projects will be financed by lease of the former RJR Nabisco World Headquarters building donated to Wake Forest after RJR Nabisco moved its headquarters to Atlanta in 1987, and private gifts, such as $1 million donated by PepsiCo Inc. A $25 million to $30 million bond issue will provide the balance.

Baby Found

SUMMERFIELD, N.C. (AP) — A newborn girl was found Friday night, apparently abandoned, in an Easter basket behind Summerfield United Methodist Church, authorities said.

The baby was less than a day old, said Detective R.A. Lawrence of the Guilford County Sheriff's Department.

Good Friday Holiday Sends Tourists Streaming To Coast, Lake Resorts

RALEIGH (AP) — Most oceanside hotels in North Carolina are booked solid at least through next weekend, spelling relief for coastal businesses that were virtually paralyzed by the red tide that has scared vacationers away from the beach since the fall.

"It's been really rough on us until now. We've waited a long time for this," said Jackie Hauger, manager of the Sandstepp Motel in Carolina Beach. "It's really great. It's really turning out great."

North Carolina residents wasted no time taking advantage of the state's first Good Friday holiday, streaming toward the coast and other pleasure spots to shake off the last of the winter blues.

"Oh boy, this is about the biggest weekend I've seen so far for this time of year," Officer M.W. Dunford of the Carolina Beach Police Department said Friday afternoon.

North Carolina this year became the last state in the nation to begin observing its Easter holiday on Friday instead of Monday. State and county governments, banks and some other businesses were closed Friday.

The holiday was evident along the Outer Banks, where weather was warm, fish were biting and hundreds of cars were lining up at prime beaches.

"Traffic Thursday night was even greater than we anticipated for such a big weekend, even greater than we thought it would be by Friday and Saturday," National Park Service spokesman Robert Woody told The News and Observer of Raleigh. "Grocery stores are all full, and the roads have plenty of traffic."

Bobby Rogerson, a Highway Patrol dispatcher in Williamston, said highways throughout the eastern part of the state and up and down the coast were clogged.

Commanders said every available trooper would be on duty this weekend, geared toward cutting down on drunken driving and speeding.

Weekend temperatures should hover in the 70s, approaching 80 on the southern coast, said National Weather Service meteorologist Michael Sabones. Although skies will be partly cloudy, he said, there is little chance of rain.

Russell Rhodes, vice-president of Neuse Sports Shop in Kinston, watched cars pour down U.S. 70 toward the coast Friday.

"I tell you, it has been something else," he said. "We are flabbergasted."

"Everywhere I looked there were cars parked and people fishing," Thomas said Friday. "I'd say it's going to be a big weekend. Without a doubt the biggest" this year.

At Kerr Lake, assistant resource manager John H. Feild estimated there were 20,000 people in and around the lake early Friday afternoon. He predicted at least 50,000 people would be there, fishing, camping, swimming, boating or just sunning themselves, before the weekend was over.

Morgan Says Wiretaps Unnecessary

RALEIGH (AP) — The state's top FBI official says North Carolina is becoming more susceptible to drug trafficking and organized crime because it lacks a wiretap law, but the director of the State Bureau of Investigation says the law needs to be controlled.

"The potential abuses of wiretapping have been demonstrated time and time again in the history of the FBI," Robert Morgan, the director of the SBI, said in an interview. "It needs to be totally controlled."

Morgan, a Democratic U.S. senator from 1975 to 1981, served on a congressional panel that investigated civil rights abuses by federal law enforcement agencies, and he became a vocal critic of the FBI during that time.

Despite opposition, Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, said that he will continue to push for passage of a bill that would allow the controlled use of wiretaps during drug investigations. Rand is the sponsor of the bill, which will be considered during this summer's session of the General Assembly.

"The only way we can penetrate the sophisticated conspiracies in narcotics is with electronic surveillance," said Rand, who is a Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor.

During a news conference Thursday, Paul Daly, the special agent in charge of FBI operations for North Carolina, said that this is one of only 11 states that do not permit their law enforcement officers to use wiretaps in criminal investigations.

Daly said that drug traffickers find it easier to operate in states that don't allow their officials to use telephone wiretaps. Federal officials may use wiretaps anywhere with court approval, Daly said, but he added that state investigators with wiretap authority often provide valuable assistance to them.

"I believe it (wiretapping) is the most effective tool against organized crime," Daly said. "I think you're going to see an increase in the very near future of crime figures and crime groups from the Northeast coming into North Carolina."

Morgan declined to respond specifically to Daly's comments, saying that he wanted an opportunity to review a complete transcript of what Daly said.

But, Morgan said, "We have never had an occasion when we needed wiretapping equipment when we have not been able to get full cooperation of federal authorities, or when we have gotten in the way of their investigations."

Rand's bill would allow police chiefs, county sheriffs and the state SBI director to ask for permission from the state attorney general to use wiretaps in drug trafficking investigations and to help apprehend people indicted for such crimes. The proposed law would require the attorney general, if he thinks that the request is justified, to seek a court order authorizing the wiretap from a special panel of three judges appointed by the chief justice of the state Supreme Court.

The bill was approved by the state Senate in May, two weeks after it was introduced, but was still pending before the House Judiciary II Committee when the legislature's 1987 session adjourned in August.

Assemblies Of God Unites On Year Ban On Swaggart's Reinstatement

By ALAN SAYRE
Associated Press Writer

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — If fallen evangelist Jimmy Swaggart fails to quickly reverse his defiance and accept a year-long bar on preaching and television appearances demanded by the Assemblies of God, the church will move to dismiss him, officials say.

Swaggart, whose worldwide ministry is scrambling to overcome financial problems, has said he will defy the church order and preach again on May 22, only three months after he confessed to unspecified sins.

A rift between the church's leaders over how to discipline Swaggart was settled Friday when the Louisiana District Council announced it would not contest stern sanctions ordered by the Assemblies' General Presbytery.

The church's General Presbytery, meeting at its national headquarters in Springfield, Mo., on Tuesday banned Swaggart from the pulpit for at least a year for "moral failure" that reportedly included hiring a prostitute to pose nude.

On Friday, Louisiana church officials said they would go along with the order despite their own recommendation that Swaggart be barred from preaching for only three months.

"I would hope he would see the wisdom of submitting himself to the judgment of his brothers because there is a strong desire ... to be helpful to the man," said the Rev. Thomas Zimmerman, the Assemblies' retired general superintendent.

On Feb. 21, Swaggart tearfully confessed to unspecified sins and stepped down from the pulpit.

On Wednesday, he announced through his attorney that he would return to the pulpit May 22 — the end of the three-month suspension recommended by the state council — in defiance of the national leadership.

"What was said at the Wednesday press conference still holds," Swaggart spokesman Gus Weill said Friday. "Reverend Swaggart is still planning to return to the pulpit May 22 and we're still examining the rights to appeal."

Church bylaws, however, do not allow inisters to appeal rehabilitation decisions, said Juleen Turnage, a spokeswoman at the Assemblies' national headquarters.

"If they haven't heard from him (Swaggart) in a few days, a reasonable period of time, they'll assume he is rejecting their offer. In that case, they would move immediately to dismiss him," she said.

The national office expected to hear from Swaggart on Monday, Mrs. Turnage said.

Swaggart's ministry is not controlled by the Assemblies of God. Officials have said the credentials of the organization's ministers are the only direct link with the Assemblies, the nation's largest Pentecostal denomination.

Bill Treeby, Swaggart's lawyer, said lack of denomination credentials would not affect the ministry's operations.

Television appears to be the lifeline for Swaggart's ministry, which includes worldwide missionary and hospital programs, a Bible college and a worship center that seats 5,000.

Ratings from the A.C. Nielsen Co. showed Swaggart's average viewership dropped from more than 1 million households in November 1986 to 860,000 homes a year later as he lost his position as the most-watched TV preacher.

Swaggart's ministry conducted a telethon in mid-March in which the evangelist's wife Frances and son Donnie warned that many programs faced cancellation. Ministry officials have refused to reveal how much money was raised through the telethon.

The March issue of the ministry's magazine, The Evangelist, said the organization faced a $14.7 million deficit through February, before the sex scandal surfaced. The magazine's April edition was about half the size of those published in previous months.

The ministry's bank account was overdrawn by $2 million, Swaggart said in a March 19 appeal for funds sent to supporters.

The organization recently mortgaged more than 100 acres of property to cover a suspended connstruction project and to secure a $20 million line of credit.

Swaggart's ministry has contributed between $10.3 million and $11.4 million annually over the past three years to the Assemblies' foreign missions program, Turnage said.

"There have been indications that a number of people sending money to individual organizations ... will now send through the church where there is accountability and they know what the money is used for," she said.

Spring Storm Brings Two-Foot Snowfall, Rain, Tornadoes

By ROGER PETTERSON
Associated Press Writer

A storm that dumped up to 23 inches of snow on the western Great Plains and piled it in drifts 4 to 5 feet high poured heavy rain from Oklahoma into the Gulf states Saturday, forcing scores to evacuate and causing one death.

Tornadoes caused scattered damage in Louisiana early Saturday after hitting four towns in eastern Texas on Friday.

"We had wave after wave of thunderstorms move into this area during the night," said Mike Koziara of the National Weather Service in New Orleans. "They raked it hour after hour after hour after hour."

Snow and blowing snow continued to cause travel problems in northwestern Kansas and northeastern Colorado, where wind gusted to 40 mph, and many roads in the Oklahoma Panhandle were closed.

Louisiana was hit hardest Saturday. In the New Orleans suburb of Marrero, about 200 people had to leave their homes. A tornado damaged 30 to 40 houses and 20 businesses in Slidell and neighboring parts of St. Tammany Parish, where fallen trees left many subdivisions without power into the afternoon.

Only 10 to 20 houses were flooded in New Orleans itself, but bags of trash left out for garbage pickup floated down St. Charles Avenue while cars drove along the raised streetcar tracks in the median.

New Orleans and Gretna, on the west bank of the Mississippi, both got 8 inches of rain in 12 hours, with more expected, the weather service said.

One woman drowned early Saturday in Marrero when she turned off a flooded street and drove into a drainage canal, said Sgt. John Fortunato of the Jefferson Parish sheriff's office.

Flood crests were forecast from Sunday into Wednesday along many rivers in southern Louisiana.

Water also flowed into dozens of homes Saturday in Mississippi, officials reported. Civil defense director Wade Guice said 4.2 inches of rain fell on Harrison County from midnight to noon Saturday, and that the flooding was not from streams but from water standing on already saturated ground.

Oklahoma had both floods and snow, from 23 inches of snow in the Panhandle to 4 feet of water in streets in Skiatook, in the northeastern part of the state.

Skiatook fire officials said about 30 homes were evacuated and more than 15 businesses were shut down after Bird Creek overflowed. The water began to recede Saturday afternoon, said Fire Capt. Lonnie Fisher.

One Skiatook resident, Arthur Elam, 88, rejected pleas from neighbors to move to higher ground because of his dog, Blackie.

"No one would want to let him in their house," Elam said, adding that Blackie wouldn't like getting out in the water. "This water bothers me, but it don't bother me bad."

In the Oklahoma Panhandle, "We're just now starting to open some roads back up," said Rick Foreman, a communications officer at the state Highway Patrol. He said all but two highways in Cimarron and Texas counties were closed during the morning.

In the adjacent southeastern corner of Colorado, 20 inches of snow had fallen at Walsh with 16 inches at Fowler. The weather service said snowdrifts stood 4 to 5 feet high in the area.

In nearby Clayton, N.M., where 8 to 10 inches of snow fell, travelers resumed their journeys Saturday after spending the night stranded in the town. About 140 people took shelter at the First United Methodist Church when motels filled up, carloads of people went to other churches and the National Guard Armory, and 65 stayed at the Fire Department.

In Albuquerque, up to 100,000 customers lost power for a time Friday when up to a foot of heavy snow downed power lines.

In Chandler, Kan., about seven families moved out of their homes Friday night because of rising water.

"They're kind of used to it," said Lincoln County Civil Defense Director Mike Clarkson. "They just kind of put things up high on the lower floors and move out for a few hours."

50-Mile Oil Spill Spoils Ohio River

By THOMAS S. WATSON
Associated Press Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A diesel oil spill floated along about 50 miles of the Ohio River on Saturday, and the Coast Guard and state officials were searching for the source of the fuel.

"We want to make sure it's not still flowing into the river," said Lt. Eric Mosher. "We're looking for the source and have teams from Louisville and Cincinnati making bank searches."

The oil extended from the area of Madison in southeastern Indiana to Louisville.

Indiana conservation authorities also helped in the search, Mosher added. Barge fleets, towboats and holding tanks along the river were all being checked.

Mosher said the water was too choppy for an attempt to contain the oil slick.

The spill apparently caused no serious problem for communities that use the river as a source of drinking water and Mosher said none of them had closed water intake valves.

"We're treating (the river water) for some of the byproducts of oil, but the river is relatively warm and it doesn't look like it's emulsifying and it looks like it will float past," said Jerry Ford, manager of administrative services for the Louisville Water Co.

"Shutting down (intake valves) is always an alternative to treating, but when you have oil byproducts that will float on top of the water, normally you don't have that much effect," Ford said. He noted that the intake valves are on the river bottom.

Indiana State Police Sgt. James Hickerson said the slick was not thick and heavy all the way, but there were traces for the entire distance.

Officials were unable to say what effect the spill might have on the environment.

Giant Lobsters Will Be Jetting Back Home

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A 25-pound lobster that nearly became somebody's Easter dinner has been rescued and will be jetting to Maine on Monday to live out its old age beneath the Atlantic.

Publicity forced a seafood company owner, a seafood lover, an animal-rights group and the Maine Department of Marine Resources into an unlikely alliance to save the creature, which was estimated to be between 40 and 125 years old.

Also saved from the pot was a 19¾-pound companion.

"This was something that strikes you in your moral craw," said Gloria Felscher-Cohen, vice president of the rights group, Pity Not Cruelty Inc.

"Here is a very old lobster and it just seemed disgusting that it should end its life to the cruelest predator — man — in a pot of boiling water."

The 25-pounder, equipped with claws the size of baseball mitts, arrived from Boston on March 25 after an order got mixed up at Hill's Main Line Seafood Co. in Ardmore.

Crated and covered with seaweed, the lobsters are due to fly to Portland Monday afternoon for a few hours of observation.

Costly Farm Research Proposal Snags Trade Bill

By MIKE ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Efforts to wrap up farm provisions of the 1,000-page trade bill are snagged over a plan by Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, to pump $75 million a year into crop research every year for 20 years.

The plan is designed principally to spur demand for corn and soybeans by finding new, non-food uses for them, leading to higher farm earnings. "It's really a long-term agricultural bill, an investment in the future," press secretary Pam McKinney says.

Thus far, House negotiators on the trade bill aren't so sure.

The plan would be a boon for Iowa State University and similar research centers but could whet other lawmakers' appetites for more of the same for the folks back in their own states.

The chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, E. "Kika" de la Garza, D-Texas, has been cool toward the notion thus far. And for that reason farm lawmakers were still wrangling late in the week, when most other conferees on the trade bill had reached tentative agreement.

It now appears unlikely that the matter will be resolved until after April 11, when Congress returns from its spring break.

As big as it is, the plant research provision is small potatoes compared to some of the subsidy programs that do have tentative approval from the trade conferees.

Chief among them is a so-called "triggered marketing loan" program, similar to export subsidies contained in the 1985 farm law, that sent U.S. cotton and rice exports skyrocketing — but at a hefty price to taxpayers.

The latest proposal focuses on the Reagan administration's goal of using the current Uruguay Round of trade talks to start the United States and its trading partners on a course of phasing out all agricultural subsidies.

Failure to make "substantial progress" on such an agreement by 1990 would trigger the estimated $500 million marketing loan program designed to boost exports of wheat, feed grains and oilseed crops.

Soybean farmers have been clamoring for a marketing loan program, under which producers receive price-support loans from the government as usual, pay them off at the lower, world price of the crop and pocket the difference.

Even if Uruguay Round talks bogged down, the next president could refuse to put the 1990 marketing loan into effect if he were prepared to assure Congress that the subsidy program would would harm the international negotiations.

Doing that, however, would trigger one of the trade package's most expensive and complex features — an offshoot of the 1985 Export Enhancement Program, which has sent millions of dollars in government-owned surplus crops to private exporters.

Big grain companies and other exporting firms receive the surplus crops as bonuses to spur overseas shipments of American farm products.

The program remains in effect and the trade proposal would extend it through 1990 and boost the price tag from $1.5 billion to $2.5 billion.

A presidential waiver of the marketing loan would automatically trigger a new export program, requiring the government to pay out no less than $2 billion in additional surplus-crop bonuses. These bonuses represent a heavy cost to taxpayers because the commodities were acquired mainly through unredeemed price-support loans to farmers.

Boat Snags Rocket Booster

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A scallop fisherman's net snagged part of a solid-fuel rocket booster in the Atlantic Ocean east of here, and the boat brought the dangerous catch into port.

The 1,000-pound booster piece, about 7 feet square, contained unspent fuel that could have ignited if heated, said Dave Sargeant, assistant fire chief of the Cape Canaveral Volunteer Fire Department.

The 75-foot Triton II, operated by Canaveral Seafoods, netted the motor Thursday while scalloping 22 miles east of the port, said U.S. Coast Guard Petty Officer Dan Brosseau.

Brosseau said the ship's captain, Billy Phillips, notified the Coast Guard of his cargo when he reached port Friday. Sargeant said firefighters had some difficulty clearing the area because few people believed the benign-looking debris was dangerous.

"People just didn't understand what it was they were handling," Sargeant said. "It's non-toxic until it burns.

Air Force ordnance experts trucked the motor to the Cape Canaveral Air Force Station, where it will be burned, said Capt. Ken Warren, an Air Force spokesman at Patrick Air Force Base.

Warren said the debris was identified as a Castor 4 rocket motor, a solid-fuel booster used primarily on Delta rockets.

The booster is manufactured at a plant in Huntsville, Ala., said Rocky Raab, manager of external affairs for Morton Thiokol Inc. in Brigham City, Utah. The propellant, about the consistency of a rubber eraser, will burn, but not explode, if ignited.

Reagan Fears Research Decline

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan voiced fear Saturday that the United States could slip to a second-rate world power in technology, saying scientific research is "an indispensable investment in America's future."

"We can travel as far as the eye of our imagination can see," Reagan said in his weekly radio address to the nation. "But one thing is certain: If we don't, others will, and we'll fall behind."

"This is why I've urged Congress to devote more money to research," Reagan said in the speech delivered from his ranch in the Santa Ynez Mountains near this seaside resort city.

"This year, we'll begin work on the great-grandchild of those particle accelerators that have meant so much to our economic growth," he said. "It's called the super-conducting supercollider. And it will harness the galloping technology of superconductivity so we can explore sub-atomic particles in ways we've never been able to before."

Reagan also said that "we'll also continue developing the space station. When it's in orbit, the space station will let us perform once-impossible experiments in the weightless environment of outer space, and understand our world and universe better."

"Meanwhile, back on Earth, we will be pursuing breakthroughs in biotechnology that promise to revolutionize medicine, agriculture and protection of the environment," he said.

But in his talk, Reagan acknowledged that scientific research is expensive.

"Some say that we can't afford it — that we're strapped for cash," he said. "Well, leadership means making hard choices, even in an election year."

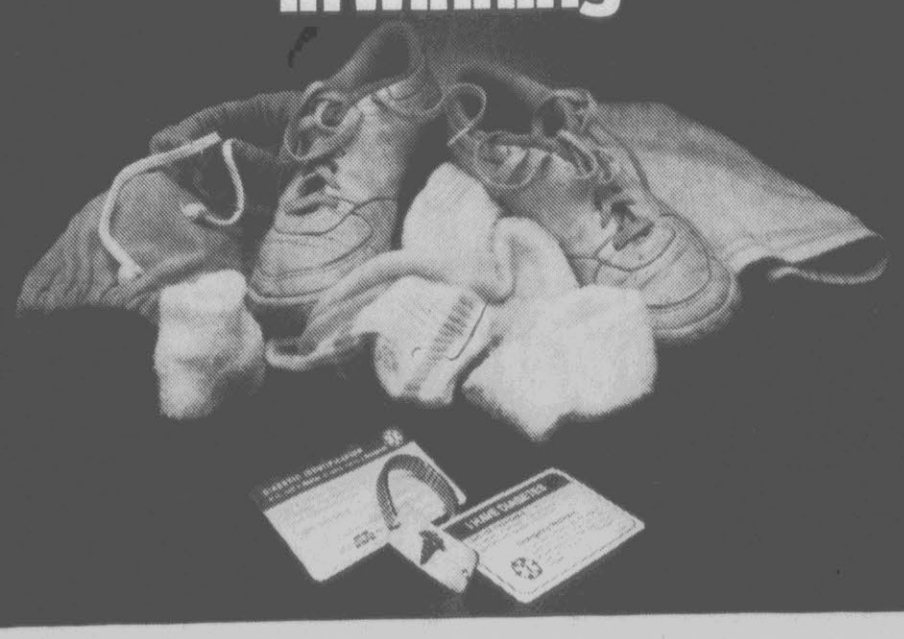
Without citing dollars-and-cents figures, Reagan said that federal spending for scientific research is 58 percent higher than a decade ago, after discounting for inflation. But he indicated this is still not enough.

"We've put our research budget under a microscope and looked for quality and cost-effectiveness," he said. "We've put together the best program for the taxpayers' dollars.

"After all, the American tradition of hope is one we can't afford to forget.

"The problem here is that science, unlike a bridge or an interstate highway or a courthouse, has no local constituency," he said.

This is an exercise in winning



Today, most of us are aware of the value of exercise, yet many still neglect it. However, a structured exercise program is essential to a diabetic, and must be coordinated with proper nutrition, blood sugar monitoring, and medication.

A diabetic is more vulnerable to many health problems, and exercise is an important way to improve circulation and strengthen the heart. For a diabetic, proper self management is an exercise in winning. The Diabetes Education Program, administered by Pitt Internal & Renal Medicine Associates, Ltd., is a comprehensive program that teaches self management of diabetes. The importance of when to exercise and how to coordinate an exercise program with meal planning, medication and blood sugar monitoring are all incorporated into the Diabetes Education Program. The program staff, working closely with diabetics and their personal physican, takes a positive approach to managing everyday life with diabetes.

Arizona Senate To Vote Soon On Impeachment Of Governor

By LAURIE ASSEO
Associated Press Writer

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — This week's expected verdict in Gov. Evan Mecham's impeachment trial won't necessarily end the legal morass that surrounds the Arizona governorship.

The Senate plans to vote Monday or Tuesday on whether Mecham, a first-term Republican, should be the first Arizona governor removed from office.

Senators heard five weeks of testimony on allegations that Mecham misused $80,000 in state money by loaning it to his auto dealership, and that he tried to thwart an investigation of an alleged death threat by a state official.

With 20 of the 30 Senate votes required for conviction, nobody is predicting what will happen.

If he is acquitted, Mecham will automatically regain the gubernatorial powers he gave up to Acting Gov. Rose Mofford, the Democratic secretary of state, when he was impeached by the House Feb. 5.

If the Senate convicts him on either count, Mecham will be removed from office immediately.

In either event, the matter won't necessarily end there.

If acquitted, Mecham faces two more battles to keep the governorship.

A criminal trial is due to start April 21 on a charge similar to one impeachment charge the Senate dropped: failure to report a $350,000 campaign loan. The governor faces six felony counts of fraud, perjury and filing false documents, and his brother and 1986 campaign treasurer, Willard Mecham, faces three similar counts.

Senators who voted to drop the impeachment count said they feared that if they heard evidence on the charge it would jeopardize Mecham's right to a fair trial.

If convicted in the criminal trial, Mecham would be removed from office automatically and could face up to 22 years in prison.

Mecham also is running against six candidates in a recall election May 17. Polls vary widely, with some showing him far behind but one putting Mecham and Mrs. Mofford in a dead heat for first place.

If the Senate votes to oust him, the governor and his defense attorney, Jerris Leonard, say they could appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court on grounds that Mecham's constitutional rights were violated.

It's also unclear whether the May 17 recall must be held if the state Senate convicts Mecham on the impeachment charges.

Attorney General Bob Corbin, a Republican, said Friday he believes the recall still must be held because the Arizona Constitution says a recall is aimed at the office, not the officeholder.

However, Corbin said he philosophically opposes holding the recall if Mecham has already been removed.

"I don't think our founding fathers who drafted the Constitution ever dreamed we would be in this position," he said.

This and other remaining legal questions should be settled in court, Corbin said.

If the recall were to go ahead following a Senate conviction, officials say it's also unclear whether Mecham would be allowed to run.

He has an automatic spot on the ballot, but Paul Bender, dean of the Arizona State University law school, argues that a Senate vote to remove him would apply to the entire four-year term and he could not remain in office even if he won the recall vote.

Legal questions surround Mrs. Mofford's gubernatorial candidacy too. A campaign was formed to draft her because Arizona's "resign to run" law apparently would require her to quit as acting governor and secretary of state if she declared her candidacy.

A court challenge has been mounted to see if the Mofford draft campaign was handled properly, without any involvement by the intended candidate.

Corbin said his office warned years ago that the laws were unclear and should be straightened out, "and nobody has, so here we are."

Survey Indicates Athletes 'Happy'

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — A study that is looking at ways to help students enjoy college has found that the happiest students at Harvard University are athletes.

The preliminary study also has found that too many students don't give enough thought to their major and suggests a need for better advising.

The results are too new to have been properly interpreted, cautions Richard F. Light, director of the Harvard Seminar on Assessment. He suspects athletes are happier because of the social life inherent in their activity.

"Almost by definition anybody in an athletic group has a group of people they become very good friends with," Light said in a recent interview.

The seminar is a three-year, $350,000 project funded by private, federal and college funds. It involves 90 faculty, administrators and students from Northeastern colleges including Amherst, Brandeis, Pennsylvania, Princeton, Smith, Williams, MIT and Brown.

Among the findings halfway through the project, a student at Wellesley College said she chose a joint major in Middle East and peace studies after a friend suggested it fit her personality, said Wellesley professor David Pillemar.

Another student chose psychobiology the first week of her freshman year because her mother, leafing through a course catalogue, thought it sounded interesting.

"A lot of people feel an improvement in the overall college experience may not come from teaching the subject a tiny bit better but from better advising," Light said.

The researchers also have found that less than half the female freshmen who entered a science program at Dartmouth, Harvard or Yale graduated in the field, but they aren't sure yet what that means, Light said.

"One interpretation is that is bad — we're losing talented women," he said.

Acting Governor Walking Tightrope

By LARRY LOPEZ
Associated Press Writer

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Democratic acting Gov. Rose Mofford has walked a tightrope in the nearly two months since Republican Gov. Evan Mecham was impeached, and from all appearances she has enjoyed nearly every minute of it.

"She's everyone's Auntie Rose," said state Rep. Cindy Resnick, and there's proof in the way children come up without prompting to hug the tall woman with the white beehive hairdo.

"She may not be the kind of technocrat some people want her to be, but she certainly knows people," says Democratic House Minority Leader Art Hamilton.

She moved quickly to calm Arizona's troubled political waters after Mecham was impeached on Feb. 5 and she, as secretary of state, took his office until he is acquitted or ousted. Her bipartisan volunteer staff included many who served under Mecham's predecessor, Democratic Gov. Bruce Babbitt.

With Mecham's fate up in the air pending a Senate verdict on the House impeachment allegations, plus an upcoming criminal trial and recall election, Mrs. Mofford has avoided any policy initiatives beyond indicating a willingness to consider tax hikes that Mecham opposes.

Mrs. Mofford did not seek a place on the ballot in the May 17 recall election, but a draft committee gathered enough petition signatures to put her on anyway and she is the favorite in a seven-way race.

A court challenge has been filed arguing that she cannot remain on the ballot unless she files a financial disclosure report. If she files that, she could be considered to be actively campaigning and that, under Arizona law, would mean she would have to resign both as acting governor and as secretary of state.

"God only knows what the future holds for Rose Mofford, but I'm telling you while I'm sitting up there as acting governor I'm there to serve you," she told a luncheon club in one of her many public appearances.

Besides speaking at building dedications, county fairs and countless luncheons and dinners, she has posed for photos with school children, cotton farmers, mayors, basketball players, lawmakers, Annette Funicello and Mickey Mouse. As she goes, she hands out Mofford pens, address books and watches.

When she isn't making speeches, she can be found flipping through her three huge rotary files for the telephone number of those who are on her list of birthdays or anniversaries that day.

"No matter who you want to see, honey, you call me — I'll probably know him," she tells visitors.

In her 46 years in state government, many of the roles she's filled have had little substance, and there are conflicting views of how well she will do on heavier matters.

But a statewide poll released by The Phoenix Gazette last week gave Mrs. Mofford an 81 percent approval rating for her job performance.

Mecham is automatically on the ballot unless he is ousted via impeachment in a vote expected this week. Also on the ballot are another Democrat, two Republicans and two minor candidates.

As secretary of state, Mrs. Mofford's duties included such non-controversial functions as keeping the state's Great Seal, attesting to official acts of government and handling government publications.

Back To Court

SEATTLE (AP) — A judge who released an 18-year-old suspected car thief will be seeing the man in court again. This time, the young man is accused of stealing the judge's car.

Seattle District Court Judge Philip Y. Killien ruled there was no compelling reason to hold the teen-ager after he was arrested for investigation of driving a stolen car.

The judge decided to release the man, although he had no job and no permanent address, while police and prosecutors investigated. The judge's own car was stolen soon afterward.

Killien said he thought the theft of his car March 22 was nothing more than a coincidence. He got his car back four days later.

Killien was expected to testify against the suspect, who is charged in two other cases but has not been charged in the judge's case.

Dukakis, Jackson Battle For Wisconsin Delegates

By EVANS WITT
AP Political Writer

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Democratic presidential hopefuls Michael Dukakis and Jesse Jackson campaigned Saturday for momentum and Paul Simon fought for survival in this week's Wisconsin primary, as the state reclaimed its historic role as a decisive crossroad on the long nomination trail.

Dukakis and Jackson are locked in a close Wisconsin contest whose outcome could label one the front-runner in the 1988 race.

Both men were in Wisconsin and Colorado on Saturday, preparing for Colorado's precinct caucuses Monday that will set the stage for the Wisconsin balloting Tuesday.

Dukakis, delivering a major foreign policy speech Saturday at the University of Wisconsin at Oshkosh, offered strong support for Israel while blaming Arab leaders for the failure to achieve peace in the Middle East.

At a news conference later, Dukakis said he disagreed with Jackson's embrace of PLO leader Yasser Arafat and his position that Israel and the Palestinians are moral equivalents.

Jackson, who was campaigning near Greeley, Colo., kept his attack on the Reagan administration, which he said has "the most indictments, the most corruption, the highest sleaze factor in the history of American government. we deserve better government — we deserve honorable leaders."

In Wisconsin, both candidates have laid down a clear appeal to the blue-collar workers who are critical to Democratic success in the state.

"I have argued your case. I've stood with you and with the working people of America," Jackson told a crowd at St. Norbert College near Green Bay late Friday. "And now I want you to stand with me."

Dukakis turned his fire on the coporations.

"If we're serious about winning the battle for our economic future, we've got to get control of the merger and acquisition binge that's ... leaving the average working men and women of America holding the bag," he said in Racine.

The two other Democrats — Sens. Simon of Illinois and Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee — ignored Colorado in favor of Wisconsin.

The latest poll, published Sunday in the Milwaukee Journal, showed Dukakis with a 43 percent to 35 percent lead over Jackson among voters who said they would vote for, or leaned toward, a Democratic candidate. Gore received 15 percent and Simon was fourth with 5 percent. The poll, conducted last Wednesday and Thursday among 845 likely voters, has a margin of error of plus or minus 5 percentage points.

"This is the most important primary vote we have had since 1960 because of the closeness of the race." said Suellen Albrecht, chairwoman of the Wisconsin Democrats. "This is our moment in the sun."

Simon put the rest of his chips on Wisconsin, playing for an upset that would keep his hopes alive. The polls suggested his effort could end next week.

"Not since 1960 has Wisconsin had a chance to say in such concrete terms: We want a basic change," Simon told a crowd in Madison last week.

In 1960, then-Sen. John Kennedy upset Sen. Hubert Humphrey in the Wisconsin primary and took a big step toward the White House.

Gore is making a major effort in the state with hard campaigning and a big investment in television ads. A surpising showing in Wisconsin could be a big boost for what Gore has set as his pivotal contest two weeks hence, in the New York primary.

The Republican primary in Wisconsin is drawing little attention since Sen. Bob Dole dropped his bid last week, leaving the nomination wrapped up for Vice President George Bush. There are 47 GOP delegates at stake.

The lack of a Republican race adds uncertainty for the Democrats, since the Wisconsin open primary law allows GOP faithful to vote in the still-disputed Democratic race.

"I'd welcome any Republican into the Democratic Party who wants to vote for any candidate we have, if the vote is given sincerely," Ms. Albrecht said. "This is the very nightmare that we had with the national party four years ago,"

While academic experts say crossover voters have never made the difference between winning and losing, Democrats were upset when Republican Gov. Tommy Thompson said last week he would vote for Jackson if he were a Democrat. Thompson later said he was not trying to encourage crossover voting.

In the delegate race, Dukakis held a narrow margin — 653.55 to 646.55 for Jackson. Gore held 381.8 votes and Simon 169.5. A total of 468.6 votes are uncommitted. At the July convention, 2,082 votes are needed to win the nomination.

Jackson got a three-delegate boost Saturday wehn he swept the party caucuses in the U.S. Virgin Islands. Party vice chairman St. Claire Williams said Jackson got 634 votes while Dukakis trailed with only 37 votes. They were the only two candidates on the caucus ballot.

Six people, who each will cast one-half vote as delegates to the Democratic National Convention, were chosen in Saturday's caucuses in the U.S. territory.

The Wisconsin primary offers 88 Democratic delegates, but that is not the big prize. The winner in Wisconsin has the chance to start momentum for a five-week stretch of big-state primaries that could decide the nomination.

Dukakis is looking for a big-state win to get his campaign back on track after Jackson derailed it with a win on March 26 in the Michigan precinct caucuses.

The Massachusetts goyernor has started to retool his campaign style, unveiling a new speech in Milwaukee Thursday night. Dukakis, sometimes called a cold technocrat, admitted that he will never be the "Great Communicator" in the mold of Ronald Reagan, but what he called a "Great Builder."

Jackson is looking to keep on winning, particularly in a state where his base — black Democrats — is so small. Less than 4 percent of the state's population is black.

But Jackson has made a major effort to reach out to blue-collar workers and farmers — and has drawn dramatically large and enthusiastic crowds in that effort.

"He's one of us, not a Washington big-wig," said Dave Dittman from St. Croix County as he attended a big farm rally for Jackson in the northern dairy country.

A poll published in this week's editions of U.S. News & World Report said that if Jackson became Dukakis' vice presidential running mate, the Democrats could defeat the GOP ticket, regardless of who became Bush's running mate. A Dukakis-Jackson ticket was supported by 47 percent of the 1,004 people contacted last week by telephone for the poll, while a hypothetical GOP ticket of Bush and Illinois Gov. Jim Thompson would win 42 percent.

The poll, conducted by the Roper Organization, has a margin of error of plus or minus 4 percentage points.

McGovern Warns Against Division

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Democratic presidential candidate George McGovern on Saturday warned Democrats that an attempt to deny the party's nomination to the front-runner at the convention could spell defeat in November.

"I don't want to see a big, divisive fight at the convention and a desperate attempt to block the front-runner because I think that would bring a repeat of 1972," McGovern told The Associated Press.

Robertson Backers Bid To Take Control Of GOP In Dozen States

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

Pat Robertson's presidential candidacy may have ground to a halt but his famed "invisible army" is still on the march, threatening in some places to take over the Republican Party, planting the seeds for a Robertson resurgence in 1992.

Battles already fought or being waged this spring could leave the party machinery in part or entirely under the command of forces loyal to the former television evangelist in such states as Georgia, Oklahoma, South Carolina, North Carolina, Virginia, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Iowa, Nevada, Hawaii and Alaska.

That will make things easier for Robertson if he chooses, as he has hinted he will, to run again for the Republican presidential nomination in four years — even if it means challenging an incumbent Republican.

The Robertson campaign hit the wall in the South on Super Tuesday, and the candidate has conceded that George Bush will win the GOP nomination, but his people are not giving up. They are still winning skirmishes across the map, in places where a precinct's party machinery can be seized merely by turning out a handful of loyalists to the cause.

"We in the evangelical right are here to stay," said Robertson activist Tom Vestal, pastor of the Mount Olivet Baptist Church in Raleigh, N.C., where supporters of Robertson and George Bush may wind up in court in a fight over the composition of the state's delegation to this summer's Republican national convention.

"We're not trying to take over the party but we want to be an influence, to ensure that the party is an instrument of godliness, righteousness and morality," Vestal said.

Robertson talks of his people running for Congress and state legislatures in 1990, and of using his troops "to maybe lay the foundations for something in 1992."

"We have hundreds of thousands of people who are right now in the Republican Party who have never been there before and they all, almost to a man, are saying, 'We're in it for the long haul,'" Robertson said in an interview.

In many places in the South, a minority Republican Party, eager for new blood, hungrily accommodated the influx of Robertson people. Ideologically, the newcomers and the old timers think alike; differences are more likely to be over style and personality.

But that doesn't rule out frictions.

"They don't want participation, they want domination," grumbled state legislator Harry R. "Bob" Purkey, who was ousted in 1986 as district Republican chairman by a religious school principal in Robertson's back yard, Virginia Beach, Va.

This year, at a district convention in Newport News, Va., long-time party stalwarts also were thrown out by Robertson supporters.

Said Anne Kincaid, head of the Virginia chapter of Americans for Robertson: "We will do whatever it takes, ethically and within the rules, to get Pat nominated."

Terry Wade, chief of staff at the Republican National Committee in Washington, said the new blood energizes the party.

He called the Robertson challenges a weak echo of the party takeover by Barry Goldwater's people in 1964. Nor does it have anything like the magnitude of Ronald Reagan's putsch in many places in 1976 which led to his winning the nomination four years later.

"If our party were to become perceived as a single issue party or one having a very narrow viewpoint of America, that would be a problem, but I don't see that happening," Wade said.

"There's always going to be some dissatisfaction and disruption when new people move in, but, hey, if we're going to become the majority party, we have to grow."

Checks by Associated Press reporters around the country found instances in which Robertson forces fit right in — and instances in which they didn't.

There were old guard complaints that the Robertson people are not interested in day-to-day party work and complaints from Robertson people that the regulars preferred the comforts of clubbiness to winning elections.

In Michigan, a year and a half of chaotic battle, in and out of court, battered the Republican Party and put Robertson forces in the majority in the state central committee. The likely result: competing Bush and Robertson delegations demanding to be seated at the national convention in New Orleans in August, touching off a nasty credentials fight pitting Bush forces against Robertson.

In Hawaii, where Robertson swept party caucuses Feb. 4, GOP chairman Howard Chong was ousted by a Robertson supporter, losing his chance to attend the party's state convention as a delegate.

Chong first pledged to unite the warring factions, but later called a news conference to denounce the "lies and innuendoes" of Robertson people and announced: "Frankly speaking, I have had enough."

Under the rules, Bush won all 48 delegates in Georgia, but when the state's delegates are selected as many as half are expected to go Robertson people. They will be bound to Bush for two ballots at the national convention, but free to vote with Robertson on platform issues, credentials challenges and party rules.

"It is our aim to see that the party is broadened," said attorney Don Johnson of Marietta, Ga., a Robertson supporter. "...We're either going to broaden it with them or broaden it over them."

Bob Bell, former state GOP chairman, said, however: "Nothing in their numbers would lead me to believe this group can take over the party."

Robertson supporters dominated many precinct meetings and county conventions in Oklahoma. One likely result, says Matt Seward, Bush's state director: the Oklahomans will support a plank denouncing the arms control treaty coming before the Senate for ratification even though Bush vigorously supports it.

Bush swept the 111 national delegates available from his adopted state of Texas, but Robertson forces, based on their showings in county conventions in March, think they have a chance to elect their own candidate as state GOP chairman in Houston in June. Some Texas counties will send delegations that are 100 percent Robertson people.

"If the new Robertson-type people will filter out some of the biblical language and keep their principles, they can realize more of their goals," commented retiring Texas chairman George Strake, a former Democrat who converted to Republicanism in 1961 "because I thought Republicans were firmer against communism."

Nevada, reflecting the outcome of February's caucuses, will send a pro-Robertson delegation to the national convention. Robertson's state director, Steve Wark, said the Nevadans will be in no mood to jump aboard a Bush bandwagon.

Virgin Islands Go For Jackson

CHARLOTTE AMALIE, U.S. Virgin Islands (AP) — Jesse Jackson overwhelmed Michael Dukakis in Democratic Party caucuses Saturday to win three of the Virgin Islands' delegate votes at the national convention.

Party vice chairman St. Claire Williams said Jackson got 634 votes while Dukakis trailed with only 37 votes. They were the only two candidates on the caucus ballot.

Six people, each casting one-half vote at the convention, were chosen in the caucuses held on the islands of St. Thomas and St. Croix.

Some 18,000 registered Democrats live in this U.S. territory, whose three major islands are St. Thomas, St. Croix and St. John.

St. John Democrats traveled to St. Thomas to attend the caucus.

Saturday's caucuses were the only step in the Democrats' process to pick national convention delegates from the Virgin Islands. Party members register their support by showing up at a caucus site and filling out a sign-in sheet, which is similar to casting a ballot in a primary.

In addition to the six people being selected Saturday, four members of the Democratic National Committee from the Virgin Islands, including Gov. Alexander Farrelly, automatically will be delegates to the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta July 18-21. Those four DNC members each cast one-quarter vote at the convention.

John Paul Blesses Shultz' Mission

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II gave his blessing Saturday to U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz's new Middle East peace mission and stressed that any settlement must respect the rights of Israel and the Palestinians.

Shultz, who is on a three-day visit to Italy, briefed the pope on his Mideast peace proposals during a 30-minute private audience in the papal library.

"God bless your efforts," John Paul told Shultz as the two posed for pictures with the rest of the American delegation after the meeting.

"I go from here to the Middle East with your blessing to sustain the effort" to promote Arab-Israeli peace negotiations, Shultz responded.

The American plan calls for Israel to give land to the Palestinians in exchange for peace.

Under the plan, negotiations would begin May 1 on arrangements for self-rule for the 1.5 million Palestinians on the Israeli-held West Bank and in Gaza. Israel would deal directly with a joint delegation made up of Jordanians and Palestinians.

In December, negotiations on an overall settlement of the 40-year Arab-Israeli dispute would open with Syria's participation.

The U.S. envoy leaves Sunday for Israel, the first stop on a trip that will also take him to Jordan, Syria, Egypt and Saudi Arabia. Shultz visited the region last month but found no consensus for an agreement.

"Progress comes in small increments," Shultz said, holding up his thumb and index finger close together to stress his point.

Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro said the pope and Shultz have a "common preoccupation for international peace," and their talks focused on East-West relations, "the continuing grave situation" in the Middle East and developments in Central America.

The pope "insisted on the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people and on the moral duty to find a solution that also takes into account the legitimate rights of Israel," the spokesman said.

John Paul voiced "great interest in the efforts under way for the search, obligatory for everyone, of a process that opens the way to solutions acceptable to all," Navarro said.

The pope has spoken frequently in favor of a Palestinian homeland.

The Vatican does not have diplomatic relations with Israel. Vatican officials have cited the Palestinian question, Israel's unsettled boundaries and the status of Jerusalem as reasons for the absence of ties.

The Vatican also does not have diplomatic relations with Jordan.

At a news conference later in Rome, Shultz declined to give details of his meeting with the pope. "It is always an extraordinary privilege to have the opportunity to talk with his holiness the pope," he said. "I have benefited greatly from that audience."

Shultz was asked whether in his talks with Vatican and Italian officials he had urged them to play a role in Mideast peace efforts.

"I found very warm support for our efforts and a readiness to help in any way they can," he said.

Shultz, who is Episcopalian, brought to the Vatican on Saturday an entourage of 31 people, including his wife, Helena, a Roman Catholic.

Scientists Await New Tests On Shroud Of Turin

By ROBERT GLASS
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — After centuries of debate, scientists in England, the United States and Switzerland may finally determine whether the Shroud of Turin is a medieval forgery or old enough to have existed at the time of Christ's death on the cross.

The Vatican, for the first time, is allowing radiocarbon-dating of the mysterious linen, which appears to bear the image of a crucified man and is venerated by some as Christ's burial cloth.

Although the Roman Catholic Church has never formally accepted the Shroud of Turin as Christ's burial cloth, it has kept it wrapped in red silk inside a silver chest on the altar of the cathedral of Turin — on the chance that indeed it might be genuine. Modern science may be on the verge of an answer.

A date from the Middle Ages will be compelling evidence of what skeptics have argued all along — that the Shroud of Turin is a fake.

Although no one will ever prove the image is Christ's, a date anywhere near 2,000 years old could cause a sensation, for it would indicate the shroud existed when Christ was crucified.

"I would be rather awed if it looked extremely probable that it was his burial cloth," said Oxford University's Dr. Robert Hedges, one of the scientists carrying out the tests.

The British Museum has agreed to guarantee the scientific validity of the carbon-dating, which is to be done independently on nuclear atom-counters at Oxford, the University of Arizona and the Swiss Federal Institute of Technology at the University of Zurich.

No timetable has been set, but Dr. Michael Tite, director of the museum's research laboratory, said tests should begin this spring and the results announced possibly by the summer.

The triple carbon-dating should reveal the shroud's age within a 200-year range, he said.

"If you get a medieval date, then clearly it is not The Shroud," Tite said in an interview.

"If you get a date of the period of Christ, then it doesn't tell you anything — except that it tells you it could be the genuine thing."

The most extensive investigation was the 1978 Shroud of Turin Research Project, in which dozens of scientists subjected the cloth to chemical analysis and took 30,000 photographs of it.

They concluded the stains were human blood and the image too thin to be an artist's work.

The shroud, 14 feet, 3 inches long and 3 feet, 7 inches wide, bears a faint yellowish image of both the front and back of a man's body. Stains, scientifically identified as blood, can be seen around the wrists, forearms and head, corresponding to New Testament descriptions of Christ's wounds from being whipped, speared, nailed to a cross and crowned with thorns.

Skeptics, however, maintain it was painted during the Middle Ages, when the production of fake religious relics was commonplace.

Historical records have authoritatively traced the shroud to 1354. References to the shroud before then are sketchy, and scientists have long tried to persuade the Roman Catholic Church to subject it to carbon-dating.

The Vatican, which owns the shroud, previously argued that carbon-dating would damage the cherished linen. But the development of an atom-counter known as an accelerator mass spectrometer in the 1970s made it possible to date objects with much smaller samples.

The old technique would have required a piece of the shroud the size of a paper napkin. The spectrometer can use a sample no bigger than a postage stamp. The Vatican refused to say when samples would be cut from the shroud, which is locked away in the cathedral at Turin, Italy. Scientists doing the tests have been barred from witnessing the sample-taking procedure or saying when they received their samples.

Instead, the sample-cutting was being videotaped and photographed for documentation. Tite and the archishop of Turin, Cardinal Anastasio Alberto Ballestrero, were to witness the cutting to certify the procedure.

More controversially, the Vatican announced in January that it would allow only three laboratories to take part in the tests, instead of the seven originally planned.

The decision outraged, among others, Dr. Robert Otlet, director of one of the rejected labs, the British Atomic Energy Authority's Isotope Measurements Laboratory at Harwell. The lab is a world leader in dating archaeological finds.

"I think it's as much a catastrophe as it would be if you allowed bulldozers to go over an archaeological site before you've examined it," he said in an interview.

Another test center rejected by the Archdiocese of Turin was the Nuclear Structure Research Laboratory at the University of Rochester in New York state, which developed the nuclear carbon 14-dating technique chosen for the tests.

Professor Harry Gove, the lab director who spearheaded the campaign to carbon-date the shroud, said in a telephone interview that restricting the tests to three labs and thereby eliminating a second carbon-dating technique would make the results "a lot less believable."

"There are a lot of people who think the shroud is a phony, so if the dating is a number that comes around 2,000 years, they're going to say there's been some kind of conspiracy," he said.

New Scientist, a British journal, accused the Vatican of revising the testing protocol to produce an ambiguous result that would allow people to continue believing in the shroud is a genuine relic.

Professor Luigi Gonella, scientific adviser to the Archdiocese of Turin, said the church never claimed the shroud was authentic, only that it might be and "must be treated with respect and caution."

The number of testing labs was restricted to minimize damage to the shroud, Gonella said, adding that the archdiocese had never agreed to allow more than three labs to participate.

"Critics talk about us reducing the number of labs from seven to three, while we see it as increasing it from one to three," he said in an interview.

The British Museum's Tite said there is no reason to think that three labs could not produce a sound result.

"It is in fact quite unusual to do two or three measurements on a normal archaeological specimen," he said. "One is the normal number, two you're providing a check and three you're providing a doublecheck."

Tite said each test lab will receive a 0.3-square-inch sample of the shroud. They also will get two dummy cloth samples, one carbon-dated and the other dated historically but not scientifically, to see if they get consistent results for all three samples.

The labs are not supposed to know which sample is from the shroud, but Tite acknowledged that the linen's distinctive herringbone weave would probably give it away under the microscope.

Hedges, head of the radiocarbon-dating unit at Oxford's Research Laboratory for Archaeology and the History of Art, said he would not deliberately try to determine which of the three samples is from the shroud.

"In a sense, it almost puts one under too much pressure," he said in an interview. "It's sort of more relaxed if one doesn't really know."

Either way, he added, it wouldn't affect the findings.

Hedges said carbon-dating would establish the time at which the flax in the shroud was growing, rather than when the cloth was made, although the two dates presumably are about the same.

Asked how confident he was of establishing the shroud's age, Hedges said: "I wouldn't put my life on it. But on the other hand, I'd make a pretty hefty bet."

Real, Or Forgery?

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The history of the Shroud of Turin goes back only about 800 years, when a crusading knight said he saw it in Constantinople. It never has been traced to the Holy Land.

The Roman Catholic Church does not claim it is Jesus' burial cloth, and many critics have dismissed the linen cloth and its image as a clever forgery.

Perhaps the shroud's earliest known debunker was Pierre d'Arcis, bishop of Troyes. In a 1389 letter, he told Clement VII, the papal claimant in Avignon, that the bishop who preceeded him in Troyes knew who painted it.

"The church is aware there is a big historical gap and it is also aware this historical gap will never be filled satisfactorily," Professor Luigi Gonella, the scientific adviser to the archbishop of Turin, said in a recent telephone interview.

The shroud, bequeathed to the pope by ex-King Umberto II of Italy upon his death in 1983, has been kept in the cathedral at Turin since 1578.

Through records, the shroud can be traced to Lirey in France in 1354. In 1453, the royal family of Savoy got the shroud and kept it at the castle of Chambery, where fire damaged it in 1532.

There are references to it as early as the 5th or 6th centuries, and coincidences have been found between the shroud and 7th-century Byzantine art and liturgy.

Witnesses including William of Tyre in 1171 and Robert of Clari of the fourth crusade in 1203 reported seeing the shroud in the imperial palace at Constantinople. The trail then is lost until the shroud appears in France.

Fellowship Says God Played Joke

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It's the big switch, the great turn-about, a joke on death. Ancient imagery has the resurrected Christ confronting the Devil and laughing at him about it.

That's a little known aspect of Easter lore, the zanily uproarious, upside down funniness of a holiday Christians celebrate this weekend.

"Blessed are you that weep now, for you shall laugh," Jesus said, and the Fellowship of Merry Christians seeks to restore that bubbling note of laughter to the occasion.

The "joke that God played on Satan by raising Jesus from the dead was indisputably the greatest and most imaginative practical joke in the history of the world," says Carl Samra.

Samra of Box 668, Kalamazoo, Mich., is coordinator of the ecumenical fellowship, grown to about 10,000 members, and editor of its news-and-joke bimonthly, "The Joyful Noiseletter."

The fellowship, which sees humor and delight in faith and circulates comic anecdotes about it, wants to resurrect an old Christian custom — celebrating "Bright Monday" — a day for merry pranks and frolic.

Also called "White Monday," it comes the day after Easter, and according to the fellowship, used to be celebrated as a "day of joy and laughter" by Roman Catholic, Protestant and Eastern Orthodox believers.

It's a time for "the laughing of the redeemed, the dancing of the liberated," writes noted German Protestant theologian Jurgen Moltman.

As Jesus put it, "your sorrow will turn into joy." He reassured his apostles "that my joy may be in you and that your joy may be full."

Such passages inspired artist R. S. Riddick of Tucson, Ariz., to paint his sketch of Jesus smiling, "The Joyful Christ." Another painting, "Jesus Laughing," is by Willis Wheatley of Praise Screen Prints, Traverse City, Mich.

The Fellowship of Merry Christians sponsors its "Holy Humor Month" in April, with Monday set for a day of happy festivities — picnics, singing, dancing, telling jokes and fun.

Mrs. Soule Papademetriou, librarian at Orthodoxy's Holy Cross School of Theology in Brookline, Mass., says that in early Greek tradition, Easter Monday was a "day of joy and laughter" at Christ's triumph over death.

That zest, games and high spirits continued through "Bright Week," she says.

Although origins of the celebration are hazy, she says, it may have been inspired by an Easter midnight sermon by fourth-century Greek preacher John Chrysostom who envisioned the resurrected Christ laughing at the Devil.

"Hell was angered when it encountered thee (Christ) in the lower regions...for it was mocked (ridiculed with laughter)," Chrysostom said.

An old adage has it that the Devil can't stand the sound of laughter, and slinks away from it.

Monsignor Arthur Tonne of Marion, Kan., a Roman Catholic priest of 83 and author of five volumes of "Jokes Priests Can Tell," says several Catholic orders have observed Monday as a day of fun.

JOKE ON DEATH — This painting copyrighted by R.S. Riddick was inspired by biblical passages describing Christ being overjoyed at the "joke" played on Satan by his resurrection. (AP Laserphoto)

The Rev. Francis Weiser in "The Easter Book," writes that in early Christianty "all of Easter Week was one continuous feast" and Easter Monday remains a legal holiday in most European countries.

He says in medieval times, Easter Monday was a time of "special festivities," of "Emmaus walks" into the woods and fields for pinics, folk dancing, singing and games.

One sport was was called "drenching," a good-natured game in which boys and girls in outlandish costumes doused each other or their families with buckets or bottles of water, reciting playful ditties.

A Protestant custom in England was "heaving." Groups of men carrying a chair aloft would go from house to house, getting a lady to sit in the chair, then lifting her three times, shouting hurrahs, demanding forfeit of a kiss.

During this "Holy Humor Month," the fellowship urges divided Christians to be, in the word's of the apostle Paul, "fools for Christ," to see the follies of their divisions and work for Christian unity.

That was what Jesus prayed for on the night before his crucifixion that led to his resurrection — that "all may be one so that the world may believe."

U.S. Soft-Soaps Idea Of Ousting Noriega By Force

By MERRILL HARTSON
Associated Press Writer

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — The Reagan administration so far has rejected using military force to oust Panamanian strongman Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, a White House spokesman said Saturday.

Marlin Fitzwater scoffed at reports of a clamoring within the State Department for tougher measures to push Noriega out, saying the Panamanian problem has presented a "fertile ground for rich imaginations."

Several news reports have said that Secretary of State George P. Shultz urged in high-level White House meetings that the United States attempt to kidnap Noriega, who is under indictment in this country on drug-trafficking charges.

Fitzwater on Saturday sought to minimize reports indicating the administration was weighing military or covert action moves to get Noriega out of power.

And Shultz, speaking with reporters in Rome Saturday as he continued a Mideast peacemaking mission, sidestepped questions about his advice to Reagan.

"We debate various possible options," Shultz said. "But basically, this is a question of a person who no longer is wanted in his country. The position of the United States government is that he should go. Everybody agrees about that. He's been indicted."

Shultz steadfastly refused to get into a debate about the options he has proposed, saying that "I never comment on speculative news articles."

The Los Angeles Times reported in Saturday's editions that Shultz and Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams also had urged the dispatch of about 3,000 U.S. military forces to Panama to further undermine Noriega's grip on power.

The State Department, it said, was displeased with the Pentagon's decision to bolster the U.S. military presence in Panama by sending about 1,300 troops, many of them military police officers.

But Fitzwater described the deployment of these forces, beginning early this week, as simply "a continuation" of the U.S. effort to strengthen security for Americans in the troubled Central American country.

"There have been any number of offensive plans raised, but to this point, they have been rejected," he said.

Fitzwater said "the United States' intentions in Panama is to protect" U.S. assets and the approximately 40,000 American citizens living there.

"Clearly, the decisions at this point have been limited to defensive (options)," he said, "reinforcing security in Panama. We want to be sure we have enough troops to protect our 40,000 citizens there."

Deputy White House press secretary Leslye Arsht said "the whole range of diplomatic, political and military options have been considered. The kinds of things being reported can be considered in that category."

She said "the only decision the president has made is to enhance the security forces, as announced by the Pentagon."

Fitzwater declined to be drawn into a discussion of the reported feud between Shultz and Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci over the options to be pursued in Panama.

But the spokesman did say that the decision to send the additional 1,300 troops to the county was made by Carlucci, with Reagan's approval.

Fitzwater had said Friday that Reagan would be kept abreast of the Panamanian situation as he and his wife, Nancy, vacation this week at their mountaintop ranch near here. National security adviser Colin D. Powell accompanied Reagan to California, and is staying at a hotel in Santa Barbara, along with several other presidential aides.

The United States so far has mainly applied economic sanctions and diplomatic pressure to oust Noriega, but the administration's moves have not succeeded.

Late last week, the administration said it was considering a plan to seek the withholding of tax payments owed to Panama by U.S. corporations that do business there.

Shortages Hit Hardest At Poor

By JOSEPH B. FRAZIER

SAN MIGUELITO, Panama (AP) — In the best of times, which these are not, life was no cinch in San Miguelito.

But a general strike aimed at overthrowing the regime of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega closed Panama's banks and much of its business and sent the poor suburb's unemployment even higher. The few who have jobs often can't cash their checks to buy food because of government-ordered banks closures and U.S. financial sanctions.

Better-off Panamanians had cash at home or were able to withdraw some before the banks closed, and by buying only essentials they are managing to get by.

But in the hillside shacks of San Miguelito, that option didn't exist.

Hunger spread so rapidly that the parish churches, which were distributing food, have had to pass the job to Caritas, a Roman Catholic relief organization, and content themselves with trying to catalogue the soaring need.

"They are giving out 3,500 meals a day in my parish," said the Rev. Reynaldo Karamanites, who heads the Samaria parish in San Miguelito. Three days earlier, he said, the number was 2,800.

"In 1980, there were about 80,000 people in the parish and 44,000 were unemployed," he said. "Add at least 30 percent to the unemployment figure now."

"Unemployment always has been bad," said the Rev. Jorge Altafulla of the slightly less impoverished San Miguelito parish of Christ the Redeemer. "A lot of people here had only occasional day work and now they have lost even that."

Caritas is feeding about 9,000 families in the province of Panama, which includes the capital, and the number is soaring. Most of the 9,000 are in San Miguelito.

The Caritas food is donated or bought with donated money.

"We keep praying that people will give more food and money," said the Rev. Laurino Duran, who heads Caritas in the Panama City area.

He said donations are meeting the present need but worried about the near future.

"We've received nothing from the government," said Ursinis de Castillo, who helped dish out cooked rice and scrambled eggs to residents of Sector 28, where she lives in Christ the Redeemer parish. "All we have is the church and our community."

"Some people from the government were here with 100 bags of food to sell to government workers," said one man. "They charged $15.60."

"Yesterday, (Caritas) brought rice with chicken," said Soia de Aguilar, who was waiting for food. "They try to see that everybody has enough, but each family gets the same and some families have eight or nine members."

Caritas started giving food to churches to distribute starting in early March after banks closed because a political crisis had sparked panic among depositors.

On March 3, the United States froze Panamanian funds in American banks, one of several steps intended to force Noriega from power. Noriega, head of Panama's armed forces and the power behind the civilian government, is under indictment on drug trafficking charges in the United States. The freezing of funds deprived Panama of its supply of dollars, the official Panamanian currency, and on March 4 Noriega ordered the banks to remain closed.

The churches stopped trying to hand out the Caritas packages last week when the crowds got too big too fast, and now the food is brought to central distribution points, cooked over wood fires and distributed to the list of the neediest compiled by the church.

Even if banks were to reopen, they are critically short of dollars because of the American freeze. The government has been unable to pay most of its 130,000 employees, and the banks likely would have trouble producing dollars to cover checks waiting to be cashed.

Generally, stores insist on cash and will not take checks or credit cards.

Caritas officials say it now requires about $600,000 in donations a month to keep the people it feeds supplied with basics such as rice, beans, cooking oil and powdered milk. In Sector 28, a Caritas worker said the list of families deemed eligible is growing by five or six families a day and that the increase is higher in other areas.

"A few people here worked for the government, a few had other jobs, all sorts of jobs," said Mrs. de Aguilar. "That's San Miguelito. We do a little of everything and a lot of nothing."

Panama's Socio-Economic Crisis Puts Damper On Holy Week Events

By DOUGLAS GRANT MINE
Associated Press Writer

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — The incense vendor accepted a poor woman's coins and spooned tiny measures of powdered red sandalwood, honey-crystal myrrh and dried rosemary into scraps of paper.

"Thirty cents," lamented Miguel Valencia, appraising the three dimes paid for the incense. "This is the worst year ever."

The tall, ebony-skinned man, who peddles crosses and other piety objects, said he has sold only a $1 portrait of Jesus Christ since midweek.

Holy Week is usually the best time of year for Valencia and the small business he runs from a rickety stand in front of the Metropolitan Cathedral. Indeed, the Easter holiday usually brings joy throughout this country where about 95 percent of 2.2 million people are Roman Catholic.

But an economic and social crisis over the rule of military chief Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega has cast a pall over this year's celebration.

Gen. Noriega, under drug-trafficking charges in the United States, has moved to consolidate control despite increasing U.S. pressure on him to step down and leave the country.

He closed banks a month ago to prevent a cash panic after Washington froze Panamanian assets in the United States. The government has failed to pay most of its 130,000 workers, and private employees have nowhere to cash their checks. The money crisis worsened nationwide hunger and unemployment.

Meanwhile, the U.S. government has been stepping up its military presence in Panama, though administration officials say they don't intend to use force to oust the strongman they once backed. Another 1,300 military personnel will arrive Tuesday, bringing to nearly 12,000 the number of U.S. troops there.

The administration says the troops are intended to protect U.S. bases and 45,000 Americans living in Panama.

"Never have we Panamanians lived a Lent with such tension, division and increasing want in great sectors of the country," said a Catholic church statement. "The people suffer and await the Feast of the Resurrection, that it may signal some light of hope."

Few Panamanians saw cause for optimism. The church said Saturday that opposition leaders had accepted a church role as mediator in the country's travail. But the opposition continued to demand that Noriega leave the country, something he has doggedly refused to do.

Many people in the streets expressed despair over unremitting price increases and hunger. Fresh fish, a typical Easter meal in years past, has risen beyond modest means

Angolan Rebels Kill 57 Soldiers

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Angolan rebels killed 57 government soldiers and shot down a Cuban-piloted helicopter in three attacks last week, the rebels said in a statement issued here Saturday.

The National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, which is fighting the communist government with U.S. and South African backing, said it killed 51 Angolan soldiers last Sunday in Tota in the northern coffee-growing province of Lunda.

The UNITA rebels said they captured 63 Soviet-made AK-47 automatic rifles and destroyed three trucks.

In another attack, the group said it shot down the Soviet-built MI-28 helicopter, killing its Cuban crew, close to the southern town of Menongue. The statement did not say how many Cubans were on board or give the date of the attack.

In the third attack, the rebels said they killed six enemy soldiers from an army patrol Monday near the town of Luma-Kassai in Lunda province.

The statement gave rebel casualties in the attacks as four killed and seven wounded.

There was no independent confirmation of the claims.

UNITA has been fighting since 1975 to force the Cuban- and Soviet-backed government to share power in the former Portuguese colony.

Strike Ends

CALAIS, France (AP) — Striking ferry sailors voted Saturday to return to work, ending their 17-day walkout in time to carry Easter holiday travelers across the English Channel.

Seamen in the French ports of Calais, Dunkirk and Dieppe voted to accept an agreement worked out Friday between their unions and the maritime arm of the state-run railroad. The accord provides for employment guarantees, better working conditions and higher salaries for part-time employees.

The workers were readying three idled ferries to serve Easter Sunday passengers.

U.S. Lowers Rhetoric, Expectations As Nicaraguan Peace Talks Near

A News Analysis

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The guns are silent for the time being in Nicaragua and there is even a truce of sorts between Republicans and Democrats on the contentious issue of aid to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

And as Nicaragua's leftist government and the U.S.-backed rebels prepare to negotiate a settlement to end their six-year war, the Reagan administration has remained uncharacteristically silent, no longer using apocalyptic terms to discuss its perception of the stakes involved.

Along with its rhetoric, the administration is lowering its expectations of its ability to influence events in the region. But most officials believe the Sandinista government is going into the peace talks in a commanding position because of Contra military weakness.

For now, almost everyone, from the Sandinista government to administration and congressional hardliners, believes the peace process should be allowed to go forward without guns ablaze.

Just a few weeks ago, bipartisanship on the Contra aid issue seemed beyond reach. An administration aid proposal was defeated narrowly in the House on Feb. 3 and a substitute Democratic plan also was rejected by a slim margin a few weeks later.

But this past week, both houses of Congress overwhelmingly approved a $48 million package providing humanitarian aid for the Contras as well as for children on both sides who have been injured in the conflict. The package includes $10 million for independent verification of the cease-fire agreement.

Following Contra acquiescence to a 60-day cease-fire on March 23, both Republicans and Democrats agreed that this type of aid package was the only option available to them. But the legislation also includes a promise by House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, that he will not block "fair and orderly" consideration of a new military aid request if the peace talks collapse due to Sandinista intransigence.

Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., noted that the aid bill did not provide weapons for the rebels, as Contra supporters had hoped. And it went too far for Contra opponents, who object to sending any aid.

"This package strikes a balance," Dodd said during an unusually harmonious floor debate on the proposal last Thursday.

Dodd said the sole purpose of the package is to support the cease-fire agreement: "If not for that agreement, we wouldn't be doing this today."

The official administration line is that the temporary cease-fire was a step forward, and it is now up to the disputants to resolve their differences at the bargaining table when peace talks begin on April 6.

The administration's low-key attitude was symbolized by President Reagan's decision on Friday to sign the aid legislation in his White House residence, forgoing the ceremonial fanfare that attends some bill-signings.

The administration has long contended that the Sandinistas will be forced to democratize and demilitarize only through Contra military pressure, or at least the threat of it.

Talks on a permanent truce start in Managua on Wednesday when the Contras are expected to issue demands for 17 democratic reforms, abolition of the draft, the repatriation Soviet bloc military advisers and other measures.

In effect, they will be asking the Sandinistas to negotiate the revolution, something the government has said it would never do.

Iraq Claims Major Victory In Raids On Iranian-Backed Kurdish Rebels

By MARTIN MARRIS
Associated Press Writer

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraq said Saturday its forces killed thousands of Iranian troops and overran bases of Iranian-backed Kurdish rebels in mountainous northeastern Iraq.

Iranian warplanes bombed an Iraqi garrison in the region, Tehran radio reported, but Iran's news media had no immediate comment on the Iraqi victory claim.

Iran's Islamic Republic News Agency reported that Iraqi forces were leveling the Kurdish town of Seyyed Sadiq in Sulaymaniyah province and its inhabitants were seeking refuge in nearby towns.

Kurdish separatist leader Jalal Talabani confirmed there was heavy fighting and said Iraq was "waging a genocide campaign against our people through the daily use of poison gas."

A tenuous halt in the "war of the cities" held as Iraq continued to silence its long-range missile launchers for the duration of a trip to Baghdad by Turkish Prime Minister Turgut Ozal. Iran did not report any attacks on civilian targets either.

Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz reaffirmed his nation's readiness to continue the halt even after Ozal returns to Turkey, probably Sunday evening, the Iraqi News Agency reported.

But it quoted him as saying the truce would continue only if Iran accepted several Iraqi demands, including an Iranian withdrawal from Iraqi territory, that Iran has repeatedly scoffed at.

Kuwait's ruler issued a new appeal to Iran to end the war with Iraq through negotiations.

Baghdad radio quoted a high command communique as saying Iraqi troops "completely purged" the area around Qara Dagh in the Sulaymaniyah region of Iraq in the last two weeks.

Qala Dagh is only 20 miles west of Lake Darbandikhan, where Iranian Revolutionary Guards have thrust into Iraq in a 16-day-old offensive.

The Iraqi News Agency quoted its correspondent as saying thousands of Iranians were killed. He did not give figures for casualties among the Kurdish guerrillas.

The correspondent also specifically denied a report, carried Friday by The Associated Press, that Kurdish rebels were within five miles of a major highway linking Sulaymaniyah with other Iraqi cities.

The communique quoted by Baghdad radio said "all traitors have finally been destroyed," in a reference to the Iranian-backed Kurdish rebels who have been fighting Baghdad for an independent homeland for years.

It said an Iraqi force, including Kurdish fighters loyal to Baghdad, had overrun 21 Kurdish bases and villages used by the guerrillas in the last few days.

Tehran radio said Iranian warplanes bombed an Iraqi garrison at Shanandari, in the heart of the area of hostilities, "inflicting heavy losses and damage."

Talabani, leader of one of the two main Kurdish rebel groups, the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan, said an Iraqi chemical attack on the village of Seo-o-Saru earlier last week killed 60 Kurdish villagers and wounded 211.

"They are now resorting to a scorched-earth policy, killing defenseless women and children indiscriminately and destroying whole villages," he said in London on Friday.

IRNA reported that Iranian troops who were nearby heard "several huge explosions" coming from Seyyed Sadiq on Saturday and "many buildings in the Iraqi town have been demolished."

It said groups of inhabitants were escaping from the town to nearby towns and villages.

Massud Barzani, leader of the other big rebel group, the Kurdish Democratic Party, had said several days ago that the Iraqi army launched a major offensive against the guerrillas March 23.

He said two divisions of troops, backed by tanks, artillery and air strikes, were seeking to dislodge rebel fighters and their allies, the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan, from the Qara Dagh mountains between Kirkuk and the provincial capital of Sulaymaniyah.

An Iraqi division usually numbers about 12,000 men.

The villages are north of the Iranian bridgehead around Lake Darbandikhan, where Iran claims Iraqi chemical bombing attacks March 16-17 on "liberated" Kurdish towns killed 5,000 civilians and injured 5,000 more.

Kuwait's ruler, Sheik Jaber al-Ahmed al-Sabah, said in an address at the inauguration of the sixth conference of Arab justice ministers, "Judging by Islamic and Arab history, we find that inter-Islamic wars did not provide any radical solution to problems."

He called on Iran "to abide by the Islamic teachings, stick to good neighborliness and accept reconciliation and dialogue instead of aggression and the continuation of war and destruction."

Sheik Jaber's peace appeal came only three days after three Iranian gunboats opened fire on a military post on Kuwait's Bubiyan Island, wounding two Kuwaiti soldiers.

Filipino Coup Leader Flees Prison, Military On Alert

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The military rushed extra troops to the presidential palace Saturday and launched a nationwide hunt for the leader of an August coup attempt after he escaped from prison.

Military leaders warned that former Lt. Col. Gregorio "Gringo" Honasan, who escaped with 14 prison guards and who remains a popular figure in the armed forces, might try to topple the government again.

"If he pursues his attempts to change the government and lead the AFP (Armed Forces of the Philippines), then we will have a problem," military spokesman Col. Oscar Florendo said Saturday. "We are asking the support of the citizens to help us. We anticipate they (the rebels) will go on with consolidation and propaganda and they will again try to divide the AFP."

Honasan, 39, escaped from a prison ship before dawn Saturday with 14 elite navy personnel who were supposed to be guarding him. He had been confined there since his arrest Dec. 9 for the Aug. 28 attempted coup, which left at least 53 people dead and hundreds wounded.

His daring escape was a blow to the prestige of the armed forces, already facing threats from communist and Moslem rebels.

President Corazon Aquino hurried back to Manila Saturday after the escape, interrupting an Easter holiday in northern Luzon for emergency meetings and a nationally televised address.

"I have instructed the chief of staff to issue a warning in unmistakable terms to all military personnel that any assistance given to the renegades will be dealt with promptly and severely with the full force of the law," she said in the address.

Mrs. Aquino, who had refused to grant amnesty to Honasan, appealed to the public for help in tracking him down. She said he fled to avoid court-martial for mutiny and sedition, arson, murder and conduct unbecoming an officer. His escape, she added, "is tantamount to an admission of his guilt."

Justice Secretary Sedfrey Ordonez hinted the government would shut down news organizations if it felt their reports in any way helped the rebels' cause. Honasan had given several interviews to local and foreign media before his arrest in a Manila suburb.

Florendo said Honasan fled from the "Andres Bonifacio" prison vessel with a navy lieutenant and 13 enlisted men. The ship was anchored in Manila Bay about 500 yards from navy headquarters.

They escaped in dinghies that had been sent to the ship to increase security after reports that Honasan would try to escape. Florendo said loyal guards fired on the fleeing boats but apparently missed.

Mrs. Aquino said the prison ship's captain had been arrested and he and members of his crew would face court-martial for negligence.

Military officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the former colonel was so popular that he had become the dominant figure aboard the vessel which was supposed to be his prison. He remains widely respected in the 160,000-member armed forces even though he has officially been dismissed from the military.

Meanwhile, the government rushed to strengthen security in and around the capital Saturday. Trucks and bulldozers blocked entrances to military camps in Manila, and mobile checkpoints were set up on roads leading north.

Defense Secretary Fidel V. Ramos said the military was "taking every possible action to bring him (Honasan) back and to minimize or neutralize any further demage that he can make."

Despite the crisis, presidential spokesman Teodoro Benigno said Mrs. Aquino would go ahead with a visit to China, scheduled to begin April 14.

Honasan, a former defense ministry chief of security, played a key role in the Feb. 22, 1986, civilian-military uprising that toppled President Ferdinand Marcos and brought Mrs. Aquino to power. But he later accused Mrs. Aquino of weak and inept leadership in the face of the communist insurgency.

In August, Honasan led 2,000 men in a coup on the presidential palace and seized several media and military installations in the capital. But they were driven off by pro-Aquino forces.

It was the most serious of six major plots to unseat Mrs. Aquino. Honasan escaped and went into hiding before his arrest four months later. The military says 11 officers and 90 enlisted men involved in the coup attempt remain at large.

Mrs. Aquino said Saturday that Honasan had carried out his coup attempt while facing investigation into misappropriation of military equipment. She also said he wanted to avoid a combat command.

Israeli Troops Kill Six Arabs In Bloodiest Day

By JOCELYN NOVECK
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli troops shot and killed six Arab protesters Saturday on the eve of U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz's visit to the Middle East. It was the highest one-day death toll in four months of unrest in the occupied territories.

The violence, coming at the beginning of the Jewish Passover holiday, was expected to take its toll on Christian Easter celebrations as well.

Church officials have said they expect a severe drop in pilgrims attending the traditional Easter Sunday Mass in Jerusalem because of the unrest.

Thousands of Christians usually attend the Mass at the 12th-century Church of the Holy Sepulchre, where tradition says Jesus Christ was crucified and resurrected.

In Bethlehem, army helicopters buzzed a funeral procession for a slain Palestinian and flew over the site where Chrisitans believe Jesus was born.

Since Dec. 8, 133 Palestinians and one Israeli soldier have been killed in the violence in the territories occupied by Israel in the 1967 Middle East war.

The most violent clash Saturday took place in the seaside Gaza Strip, where the army said a gang of Palestinian protesters hurled knives and metal rods at troops patroling a main street of Gaza City.

An army spokesman said the protesters tried to seize the soldier's weapons, and troops opened fire to extricate themselves, killing three Arabs and wounding two.

One Israeli soldier suffered medium stab wounds and was taken to nearby Tel Hashomer hospital, the spokesman said. He said another soldier was slightly injured.

Troops in the biblical West Bank town of Bethlehem shot and killed a 23-year-old Arab during a battle with hundreds of protesters in the winding, cobblestoned streets of the town's main market.

Troops also killed a protester in Beit Liqya, in the West Bank 10 miles north of Jerusalem, and killed another in nearby Deir al Sudan when their patrols came under attack, the army spokesman said.

Palestinian reporters identified the dead as Jihad Assi, 19 from Beit Liqya and Hamis Mahmud Ahmed, 41, from Deir al Sudan.

The army's version of the clash in Gaza conflicted with reports from U.N. officials, who said the violence began when Israelis in civilian clothing got out of two cars and tried to arrest a Palestinian youth.

Christine Dabagh, a U.N. spokeswoman in Gaza, quoted local residents as saying the boy's father attacked the Israelis with an axe, and troops who arrived at the scene killed the father. In the ad men as Jamil Rashad al Kourdy, 55, Ahmed Samir al Kourdy, 40, and Hassan al Kourdy, 21, all members of the same family.

There were conflicting reports on the number of wounded protesters. The army reported two wounded by gunfire, but Palestinian journalists set the number as high as 13.

In Bethlehem, a crowd of Easter holiday tourists outside the historic Church of the Nativity watched as a funeral march for Salim Hallas El Shaer, the 23-year-old shot earlier Saturday in Bethlehem, become a defiant anti-Israeli demonstration.

After burying El Shaer on the outskirts of Bethlehem, about 700 mourners marched back to central Manger Square chanting: "PLO! Israel, no!" and "Allah Akhbar" (Arabic for "God is great").

As army helicopters buzzed over the square, the site where tradition says Jesus was born, an Associated Press reporter saw angry mourners smash the windows of the municipality building.

El Shaer, an electrician, was killed after Israeli troops tried to keep a market from opening. Groups of youths attacked the soldiers with rocks and the soldiers responded with bullets, witnesses said.

Iraqi Pilot Confirms Gas Used

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — An Iraqi pilot held captive by Iran said Saturday he was shocked to learn how many civilians were killed in an Iraqi gas attack on a border town and assumed the raid was a mistake.

Air Force Maj. Ahmed Sakr Salaleh, 31, said he was shown an Iranian documentary of the aftermath of the raid two weeks ago on the Kurdish town of Halabja, in northeastern Iraq.

"All of us suffer seeing these pictures," Salaleh told reporters in Tehran. "I ask God to take all of them to paradise."

Salaleh said he was aware that the Iraqi air force had been dropping chemical weapons but added: "We are under orders. We are officers."

He said the chemical bombs were dropped to halt Iranian advances into Iraqi territory. Iran and Iraq have been at war since September 1980.

Iraq has denied using chemical weapons, which are banned by international law.

Iran has said it captured large tracts of territory in northeast Iraq in league with Kurdish separatists. Iraq said Saturday it routed the attackers.

Iran says chemical weapons raids on Halabja, 160 miles northeast of Baghdad, killed 5,000 people and wounded another 5,000 on March 16-17.

The Iraqi pilot said his Soviet-built Sukhoi Su-22 was shot down 30 miles south of Halabja on March 18 after the gas attacks were over.

He said he earlier had released four conventional-explosive 1,100-pound bombs over uninhabited territory when clouds prevented bombing of a road.

Salaleh said he ejected and parachuted into Iranian-held territory. Iran has claimed shooting down more than a dozen Iraqi warplanes since mid-March.

The Iraqi officer said he was not involved in the Halabja attack. He said he was assigned to drop a chemical bomb into wetland border territory of Iraq in 1983 to prevent an Iranian offensive there.

Soviets No Longer Expect Arms Plan Before Summit

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet officials negotiating with the United States on halving nuclear arsenals no longer believe they will have an agreement to sign by the time President Reagan visits next month, well-placed Soviet sources say.

The ruling Politburo officially remains determined "to work intensively for the speediest drafting of a set of documents" to have them ready for signing at the Moscow summit. But Soviet officials said privately they do not sense a similar urgency on the American side.

Reagan is scheduled to meet Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev in Moscow May 29 to June 2 at the fourth U.S.-Soviet summit since Gorbachev came to power three years ago.

One source familiar with the negotiations said the United States still has not responded directly to four specific proposals Gorbachev put forward at his last meeting with U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz in February.

"They don't appear to be in a position to make decisions at this point," the analyst said of the American negotiators.

Speaking on condition he not be identified, the source said there are "major, substantive issues" outstanding on how to cut both sides' strategic arsenals by 50 percent even before consideration of the U.S. "Star Wars" program for a space-based shield against nuclear attack. Disputes over that program have blocked agreement in the past.

The concept of a 50 percent cut has been accepted by both sides, but the issue is complicated by the differing numbers and types of weapons in each side's arsenals.

The source said the two sides remain far apart on how to reduce mobile intercontinental ballistic missiles, which make up an important element of the Soviet arsenal, and on cuts in sea-launched cruise missiles.

Chief U.S. arms negotiator Max Kampelman acknowledged differences in those areas as well as others in testifying before Congress last week.

A Western diplomatic source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the United States is pressing for a ban on mobile ICBMs such as the Soviet SS-25 because it would be too difficult if not impossible to verify the number of such weapons remaining in the Soviet arsenal after an agreed-upon number had been destroyed.

The Soviets, the diplomat said, are pressing to include sea-launched cruise missiles in any agreement, but U.S. negotiators contend they should be left out because no acceptable verifications measures exist to ensure compliance.

A Soviet source said, and the diplomat confirmed, that the Soviets have proposed a joint project to test a verification procedure using airborne electronic sensors.

U.S. Blames Afghans For Bombings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bombs planted by the Afghan intelligence agency, created and run by the Soviet KGB, have killed more than 400 civilians in Pakistan, according to U.S. and Pakistani officials.

Pakistan has balked at signing a United Nations-brokered deal calling for an end to covert U.S. aid to Afghan guerrillas at the same time that Moscow stops aiding the the Kabul regime.

"The bombings definitely have people worried. They are designed to get Pakistan to sign the Geneva agreement. But the government has stuck to its position," said a Pakistani official. He, like U.S. intelligence sources interviewed about the bombings, spoke on condition of anonymity.

The Afghan Ministry for State Security, or WAD, "is a mirror image of the KGB," combining domestic and foreign intelligence activities with military functions, said one U.S. intelligence analyst.

A State Department report issued last year said WAD had 20,000 agents, although some U.S. and Pakistani officials put the number at 30,000. WAD has its own uniformed military units and assigns officers to regular military units to bolster discipline, according to the State Department.

WAD has 1,500 advisers from the KGB, which has run it since since shortly after the coup that brought Marxists to power in April 1978, the sources said.

The most recent terrorist episode was last Thursday, when a bomb exploded in a poultry shop near the Afghan border, killing seven people and injuring 18.

The bloodiest incident was last July 14, when three car bombs exploded at the main bazaar of Karachi, the largest city in Pakistan, killing 72 and injuring 260.

WAD staged about a dozen bombings inside Pakistan in 1985, 20 in 1986, and more than 100 in 1987, said a second U.S. analyst.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Jordan's Dropout Proposals Not Workable Ideas

The notion of taking driver's licenses away from high school students if they drop out of school is an unworkable proposal that could encourage failure, not prevent it.

Instead, the problem must be addressed by strengthening instructional content in North Carolina's schools so courses meet the needs of students — and keep them in school.

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan's proposals for reducing high school dropouts — which include revoking the driving privilege for those who leave school — should be viewed with caution. The package he plans to take to the 1989 N.C. General Assembly if he is elected governor raises serious questions about manageability and feasibility.

For example, who will be authorized to take away dropouts' drivers licenses? A school board? The N.C. Department of Transportation? A highway patrol trooper? A school administrator? And who will provide record-keeping? The school systems? The state? Teachers and principals? Educators don't need any more paperwork, and the idea of state-kept records means red tape and delays.

The proposal just can't be effectively administrated.

In addition, taking a drivers license away may not persuade borderline students to remain in school. Instead, it may deprive drop outs of work and push them toward more desperate circumstances. The state does not need to be in the position of depriving dropouts of employment.

And what about hardship cases where personal circumstances force kids to go to work? Revoking a driving license makes them unemployable. Who will make the decision to except these students? Again, a school board? That would take too much time when emergencies arise.

Jordan also suggested the state require employers who hire dropouts to provide them with only 15 hours of work a week and guarantee them full time work if they return to school and graduate.

That proposal has merit, but should not be state mandated. The program could be feasibly administrated on a volunteer basis, with both the state and community strongly encouraging local employers to participate.

North Carolina's dropout rate is an issue that needs attention. The state loses around 25,000 students each year from its high schools. These individuals represent 25,000 citizens annually who wind up unemployed or underemployed because they lack the most basic requirement for success — a high school diploma.

But Jordan's proposals can't practically be applied to the problem. The state needs to fortify its instructional programs to keep kids in school, not dangle privileges as enticement.

Late For Church? Blame The Clock

Some might be thinking the clock has played a cruel trick on this Easter Sunday. By government decree, the clock was moved forward one hour during the early hours of the morning as the nation officially goes from Standard to daylight savings time. The idea, of course, is to allow an extra hour of evening daylight during the spring and summer months.

That means those who attend 11 a.m. church services should set their biological clocks to 10 a.m. if they don't want to miss services. To put it another way, if you haven't moved your clock forward and attend services at 11 a.m. you will meet the congregation coming out the door.

Why Easter Sunday to make the change? Well, last year the daylight time move was made on the last weekend in April. To allow a few more weeks of daylight time Congress changed the starting date to the first Sunday in April. This year that just happened to coincide with Easter Sunday. It won't be that way every year since Easter Sunday moves. But daylight savings changeover will remain on the first Sunday in April, assuming Congress doesn't change the law.

Maybe Easter Sunday isn't the ideal day to change the time, since we all lose an hour of sleep and some of us risk being late for church. Remember, though, as the day progresses there will be an extra hour of daylight this evening to be enjoyed — and we will have that extra hour for most of April whereas last year we did not.

If that is no consolation, remember that we regain a hour's sleep the last weekend in October when the clocks are moved back an hour. That one, however, comes this year the day before Halloween.

Some Habits Are Better Not To Start

Alvin Taylor

Sunday Morning Notes

Things I'm glad I never did:

Take up smoking.

My family couldn't have lived without tobacco income when I was growing up. Nevertheless I'm glad I never turned to cigarettes. Oh, I tried them. I inhaled once and felt as if someone had hit me in the chest. In one of the few exercises of wisdom in my youth, I decided that if it was that difficult to acquire the habit, I didn't need it. I threw away the package and never got the cigarette habit. That is particularly fortunate since any bad habits I did acquire I never seem to be able to shake. With that history I can sit back in smug satisfaction as my friends go through the agonies of cigarette withdrawal.

Mountain climbing:

I once saw a movie as a teen-ager where some soldiers attempting to make their way back to friendly territory had to go around the rocky side of a mountain. One fell to his death. It haunted me that I might be drafted and ordered to scale a rocky mountain. I was drafted into the Army, but I never climbed a mountain ... and I've never had any desire to since.

Take up motorcycle riding

As a teen-ager I attended a Scholastic Press Association meeting at Columbia University in New York. Somehow I met up with a messenger on a motorcycle who was on his way to the New York Daily News offices. I told him that as a student interested in journalism I sure would like to see the Daily News plant. He promptly offered to take me there and I climbed on the back of the motorcycle. No doubt bike riding on rural eastern North Carolina roads can be pleasant. On the streets of New York it is terrifying. Roaring down Fifth Avenue with taxis darting in front of you is like playing "chicken" with automobiles at home.

Anyway we made it, I toured the Daily News and have had little desire to ride a motorcycle since.

Growing up in the drug culture.

The worst drugs around in those days were beer, moonshine and state ABC store booze. Marijuana we knew about but its impact was best characterized by such old movies as "Reefer Madness."

Drug addicts were people who got hooked on some pain killing opium derivative given by physicians because they needed it for injuries or other pain.

I'm glad the drug culture didn't exist when I was a teen-ager. I tell myself now I would have resisted the temptation... but that's in the light of maturity. You never know.

Gore Gets A Cloakroom Shock

Rowland Evans & Robert Novak

WASHINGTON — Sen. Albert Gore got the shock of his life in the House cloakroom Wednesday when Rep. Ron Dellums, an intimate of Jesse Jackson, moved in so fast to castigate him for his March 29 criticism of the black preacher that one witness thought a physical encounter was inevitable.

Gore, 40, was visiting the House in quest of super-delegates for his own candidacy when he was confronted by the 53-year-old veteran black legislator, one of the most liberal in the House. Dellums denounced Gore for "moving away from the issues" in attacking Jackson during Gore's pro-Israel New York speech. Gore had denounced Jackson's "embrace of (Yassir) Arafat and (Fidel) Castro."

Surprised Democratic bystanders in the usually austere cloakroom thought they might have to seperate the two, but in the end, a Dellums aide told us, the congressman shook hands with Gore, signaling an uneasy truce. The incident could help Gore in the April 19 New York presidential primary, but it could sour his relations with black voters.

Which Beach?

California political leaders, calculating that George Bush faces no easy task in carrying their state, have decided to ask the vice president to come there — instead of Maine — for his summer vacation.

The idea was conceived during a meeting last week between California GOP legislators and Gov. George Deukmejian, with the governor's braintrust sitting in. They recognized that a California vacation would require Bush to forego his Maine home and the powerboat he loves to speedride on the Atlantic.

A footnote: Bush political planners want the prospective Republican candidate to travel abroad this summer. They had considered a visit to the Korean Olympics until realizing that this year's games would be held during the autumn, not the summer.

Shootout

Secretary of State George Shultz, demanding a more activist policy, is caught in a rare stand-off with Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci on how to get rid of Panamanian strongman Manuel Noriega, the first time in months that high-riding Shultz has failed to get his way.

Carlucci, backed by the military brass, has warned President Reagan that if the U.S. gets tougher with Noriega he may order his national guard troops to close down U.S military bases in the Canal Zone. Shultz' practical answer to that is: for how many hours? The U.S. might only need a credible show of force to take control of the whole country.

No To Lukens

Rep. "Buz" Lukens got a flat turndown when he asked the House Republican Congressional Campaign Committee for the names of GOP House candidates in the 1988 election who, because of their constituencies, would profit most from an on-the-scene study of the Nicaragua crisis.

No thanks, said Peter Rintye, a campaign committee operative. Rintye was reflecting the views of campaign committee political director Kenny Kling. GOP candidates will do better staying in their districts to campaign than traveling south to study the controversial Sandinista-Contra issue, he told the Council for Inter-American Security (CIS), which is helping Lukens organize the journey.

Apples Aren't The Only Thing Teacher Recruits Offered

Tina Drye

Local Perspective

Local Perspective, presented today for the first time, will be a continuing feature on The Daily Reflector's Commentary pages. Today's author, Tina Drye, has recruited teachers for Pitt County schools since 1985. She is currently completing her doctorate thesis on minorities in education.

'This young teacher is too bright to be distracted, or attracted, by an apple. She has carefully selected a cross section of the school systems present and has interviewed the interviewers.'

Teacher recruiter ... Teacher Job Fair ... When I was an undergraduate studying to become an English teacher, teacher recruiters didn't exist. We went out and found a job. No one ever came to campus courting us.

When I changed jobs as a young teacher moving to eastern North Carolina, I remember being told that I would have a hard time getting a job. East Carolina University was "down there and they have all the teachers they need." Eastern North Carolina, I was repeatedly advised, didn't need teachers. Luckily my pessimistic advisors were wrong. There was a job for a classroom teacher in English. But I had to file several applications to find it. No recruiter found me.

In my years as a classroom teacher and in my years as a central office staff member I never heard of a Teacher Job Fair. As an administrator, I interviewed prospective teachers. But these teachers were seeking jobs. The school system didn't go out and recruit the teacher. The teacher came to us and followed the method of getting a job that I was familiar with. The teacher put in a job application, prayed for an interview and was appropriately grateful when selected to go to work. Usually good candidates vied for each spot and the school system luxuriated in its right to pick and choose.

Imagine my surprise when I entered my first Teacher Job Fair three years ago. A teacher shortage must really exist! Carmichael Gymnasium in Chapel Hill had been turned into 109 personnel offices. No, that's wrong. Carmichael had been turned into a carnival. One hundred nine school systems hawked their wares from carnival booths.

I did little focused recruiting that day. I was too distracted by the competitors. I had to stop and watch. I had to wander around and vicariously play the games at the numerous booths.

A Maryland recruiter stood proudly beside a chrome and royal blue advertising display furnished by the local chamber of commerce. She handed an apple to each passerby and pointed to the four color layout as she began her sales spiel. Why was I expecting student art work and letters made from stencils worn with bulletin board use? I refused her apple, but I later went back to find out where to order a similar display. A free apple right here, folks. Step right up.

Florida replaced the hand-lettered Magic Marker sign with a glossy photo of a beach scene littered with skinny bodies in bikinis and brightly colored beach umbrellas. Step right up folks and get your tan ... Oh, and get a teaching application. You will need to work in between beach trips. One hundred and fifty jobs ... Step right up. Buy the good life.

One of the California booths was quiet and understated. Almost like the pinstriped suiter who maneuvers the shell game, the interviewer sat at a bare table and intensely watched the face of the applicant talking across from him. I guess if you are considering offering a free flight to California you need to lay your odds carefully.

Las Vegas recruiters laughed amiably when prospects joked about slot machines and free trips to try out the prevailing industry.

The Virginia hawkers whispered their message. Step right over the state line, ladies, and win a several thousand dollar raise. The crowd heard the message and a line formed. The youth took a turn spinning the "wheel" and hoped their number would win.

I know to arrive early and double park at the side door. My partner and I go through a practiced routine. One of us sets up while the other finds a parking space safe from towing.

I slip the table top display from its canvas carrying case.. It has proven an attracter for candidates to the system. The soccer pictures, the science equipment, the happy faces sell the system. I quickly cover the table with the school system's flag, put out the applications and pull out the pencils and rulers. Step right up folks. Get your pencils. Get your applications right here.

This year I don't have time to see the other displays. I am too busy. I am no longer distracted by the competition. I know what the competition is offering. But I don't see or hear the recruiters around me. I am too busy searching the face in front of me trying to read the mind behind it.

This young teacher is too bright to be distracted, or attracted, by an apple. She has carefully selected a cross section of the school systems present and has interviewed the interviewers. This young teacher asks questions about our programs and our youth. She wants to know if our university offers the opportunity for a master's. When I ask her what attracts her to less glitter and the smaller town life, a faint blush crosses her cheek and she lowers her lashes. Ah ha, a young man. Of course, she never volunteers this personal information and I can't ask.

She quickly covers her slight embarrassment and tells me that she is looking for a school system where children matter and parents care. She wants a university nearby and the opportunity for professional growth. I laugh and tell her that she's heard our "sales pitch" about the school system and the surrounding area. She smiles, yet says seriously, "Well, I've talked to a lot of the recruiters here, and," sweeping her hand in a gesture that includes my partner and using the collective you, "you seem to care." She finally volunteers that she has friends in the Pitt County area and states that she is uncertain of her plans right now. She may stay at the university and complete her master's before going into the classroom. She has some personal decisions to make.

Before leaving the booth she reviews the application and asks thoughtful questions. As I respond I am torn because her questions are ones I would like to continue answering. But I sense that someone is waiting. I lift my eyes to the next face. I am grateful to see a line of interested youth. Our system attracts applicants. I am momentarily distracted enough to pan the aisle and assess how the competition is doing. Some better, some worse. I pause long enough to be thankful that North Carolina's youth want to stay in North Carolina.

I face the next candidate and almost think aloud, "Step right up ... No, step right in! Step right into the hearts and minds of the youth you will teach. Step right into a supportive school system that will help you learn how to be better. Step right into a community that will welcome you and will still teach its youth to respect the teacher. Step right into a classroom — one of the best places on earth to be. Step right in and UP! It really is UP. Help me remember to impart that teaching is a step up for them — not just now when we're recruiting them — but also when they are veterans."

Getting a job today as a teacher is different. This is not how it used to be. Teachers — even the first year teachers — are aware of their options. The competition is stiff. Systems can no longer wait for applications to search out the personnel office and ask for an application. But the change is not all bad. The teachers who select us have careers, not jobs. They come to a school system not by default but by choice. These recruits don't come away from a job fair with a chance number on the wheel. These teachers have a winning spirit and they pick a school system with a winning spirit.

Ultimately our children will win because these youth chose to teach. Step right up to be a teacher!

Welcome to the Teacher Job Fair!

To the editor:

When I went by the post office Wednesday afternoon, I was dismayed to find the counter area had closed at noon. The notice on the locked doors said the employee hours were cut short because of budget reductions.

I watched several customers go in and out in disappointment. The gasoline that goes into an extra trip home for a stamp ... the time spent returning to the post office to have a package weighed ... the mailing deadlines missed ...multiplied by the dozens of people who came in that afternoon. The money, time, effort and energy spent by postal customers must have a value many times that of the wages saved by reduced service hours. It would be better to spend a few tax dollars than to have people spending more time and money running around town.

Parallel examples exist on a larger scale. Because we've been unwilling to properly dispose of toxic chemicals, we'll face large cleanup bills when those chemicals leach into our drinking water supplies (a more or less permanent situation). We'll face increases in birth defects, cancer, and chronic diseases. In some areas, it's unwise to drink anything but shipped-in bottled water. Doesn't it seem backward that people are willing to pay more for bottled water and health-care costs than they originally would have paid to keep their water supply clean? Viewed in this light, the millions of dollars for early cleanup of toxic waste dumps seems less like a cost and more like a wise investment.

No one wants a huge deficit, because it will eventually devour the skills and the output of our citizens. But a situation like the one just described could also do a good job of sapping our productivity. Let's budget our hard-earned tax money wisely now to avoid future mammoth expenditures.

To the editor:

Last weekend I was witness to a shameful incident caused by parking violations in a shopping center parking lot.

Upon entering the parking area in front of a supermarket, my progress was impeded by another car approaching me from the opposite direction. The other driver was picking his way through illegally parked automobiles and there was scarcely room for one car in a spot which should have permitted ample passage to both.

While waiting for the other car, I noticed a woman getting into one of the illegally parked cars. When I was finally able to progress, it was my intention to say something to her about her choice of a parking space. Moving forward, I could then see that she was struggling with her packages from her wheelchair. Not only had all the yellow zone areas been blocked, but the several spaces reserved for the handicapped were also taken. I did not see any special license plates on these vehicles.

Certainly most of us park in the designated parking places, but there seems to be a growing number of people who do not care for anyone but themselves. Storeowners can help by keeping their parking areas painted and signs maintained. They can certainly go a step further and ask their patrons not to disobey the signs.

The Greenville Police are conspicuously absent. Perhaps if they have no authority, they should be given some. Parking lots are dangerous enough with the complications of hazards caused by parking.

Finally, perhaps more of us ought to speak out.

To the editor:

Money is necessary to educate the youth of Pitt County. Administration is also necessary. But when a disproportionate amount of the money is used to pay the top administrator, educational priorities are out of kilter. The Superintendent of Pitt County Schools is grossly overpaid. There is no justification for this. The Board of Education and the County Commissioners, who are accountable to the people, should take immediate action to correct this glaring imbalance. The Superintendent should insist that this be done. The people should demand it.

To the editor:

Kudos to Northwest Airlines' total ban on smoking on domestic U.S. flights. At the present time, no other major airline is prepared to follow suit (Northwest is the fifth-largest airline in the U.S.A.)

I believe this move will catapult them light years ahead in the industry. Believe me, many more non-smokers will switch to Northwest Airlines than smokers will leave. They are right on time with the pulse of today's freedom from smokers move.

Even with non-smoking areas on planes and in restaurants, etc., high levels of toxic gases are present in all of the air spaces. This simply has to go.

Perhaps Pitt County Memorial and Beaufort County hospitals should take note and get on the ball. It's shameful that health care facilities allow smoking to continue on their premises.

To the editor:

We Americans have played a big role in the establishment of Zionism in Palestine and the expelling of Palestinians from their natural homes — land that has for nearly 1400 years been theirs. We subsidize Israeli apartheid in the occupied territories by giving nearly $4 billion in taxes last year, a whopping 20 percent of its per capita income. That's more than all post-World War II Europe received under the Marshall Plan.

Knowingly or unknowingly, we are virtually subsidizing Israel, buying the weapons, bullets, and batons that have in the past month alone killed more than 100 boys, girls, and women and broken thousands of bones, imprisoned thousands, including intellectuals and deporting some.

What kind of God-forsaken system sends soldiers after midnight into the privacy of a refugee camp home to beat and maim innocent people? What evil will straps children to windshields of armored vehicles to protects its soldiers from stone-throwing youth or ropes children to jeep tailgates and drags them into deserts where they are buried alive? What kind of democratic country is this which considers civil protest by teen-agers under her military occupation as the war act?

What kind of soldiers arrest teen-age boys and threaten to sodomize them if they don't confess to treason? Not only do they shoot the unarmed, but they go into the hospitals where they lie bleeding and beat them and bludgeon the nurses and doctors who treat them. For 40 years Americans have witnessed the dehumanizing oppression of Palestinians.

America should not help Israel in breaking the will of the Palestinian freedom fighters by promoting a phony peace plan with limited autonomy. Instead, a comprehensive peace plan recognizing their rights to have their own homeland should be implemented. If Israel refuses and continues human rights violations, we should consider withholding the aid.

Massachusetts' Success Confirms Sun Belt's Drawing Power

Lester Thurow

With Gov. Michael S. Dukakis promoting the so-called Massachusetts economic miracle as one of the reasons to elect him president of the United States, pundits have been weighing in with their opinion of his role in that success.

The truth, of course, is not as dramatic as either Dukakis supporters or critics would like it. The rapid growth of high-technology industries in Massachusetts actually began in the late 1950s, long before Dukakis became governor, but until the mid-1970s it was hidden because old industries, such as textiles and shoes, were dying at an even faster rate. Once there were practically no more shoe or textile workers to lay off, the boom in new industries that had been there all along became visible.

Nevertheless, Dukakis certainly helped the boom along during his 10 years as governor. Both the educational system for training labor and the state's infrastructure improved during a period when they were deteriorating elsewhere. Poor government services could have destroyed the boom, but they didn't. In other words, the governor helped, even if he did not cause the growth.

The most interesting thing about the Massachusetts now-fading boom, however, is not the role of Dukakis, but the extent to which it strangely reaffirms the existence of the Sun Belt as an economic force. The dampening of the economic upturn in that cold, snowy, cloudy state is further evidence of the hypothesis that the center of American economic activity will gradually move to sunny, warm states simply because that is where people prefer to live.

With the economic decline of Texas and much of the Southwestern United States, the term Sun Belt is used much less today than 10 years ago. The Sun Belt was always less than it seemed. Most of the growth was in three states — California, Texas and Florida — and many Sun Belt states — Arkansas, Mississippi, Alabama and Louisiana, for example — never were part of any economic boom.

With the development of air conditioning to make summers bearable, most Americans simply would rather be in an area with a warm climate. The old factors that led to a rich north and a poor south have been replaced by a different set of factors leading to a rich south and poor north.

Historically, Americans have always moved to where the jobs were. New York, Chicago and Detroit all in their time have been boom cities with thousands of people moving in. Yet no one talked about preference for cold, cloudy weather at the time. Similarly, noticing that millions of people were moving South to get jobs did not prove that there was anything special about the Sun Belt.

But Boston proves the existence of the Sun Belt. Initially, Boston thrived because of the unique relationship between technology and the skills of the area's work force. Boston was and is a relatively cheap place to buy skilled labor for the simple reason that its educational system turns out a very abundant supply.

The Sun Belt is real; something has changed. Americans are no longer willing to move to a cold, snowy, cloudy state even if good jobs are readily available. And the Massachusetts boom has essentially ended in this unwillingness. There are simply no workers to be hired and any Massachusetts firm wishing to expand must expand elsewhere. Employment has quit growing rapidly because it had to. There are no workers left to be hired.

Unless there is something strangely unattractive about Boston that does not apply to other northern cities (and that seems unlikely since it is widely believed to be one of the most livable of northern cities), we will not in our lifetime again see a rapidly growing northern urban area.

Judge Cites Increasing Crime Rate

BEIJING (AP) — China's liberal economic reforms have caused a major increase in economic crimes, debt cases and divorce, the president of the Supreme People's Court said Saturday.

Zheng Tianxiang told the National People's Congress, China's legislature, that since a crackdown on white-collar crime began in 1983 about 760,000 people have been sentenced to punishments ranging from a jail term of five years to execution.

He also said there were 547,000 divorce cases last year, almost half the 1.2 million civil cases heard.

China's reforms, started in 1976 after the fall of the ultra-leftist Gang of Four, have loosened state controls over business and opened the nation to foreign influences.

But they also have prompted the "corrupt and ugly" phenomenon of nouveau riche "upstarts who use money to seduce or philander with women, and even take concubines," Zheng said.

In addition, bribery, embezzlement and speculation have become commonplace, he said.

From August 1983 to the end of 1987, the nation's courts passed judgment on 2 million people for white-collar crime. About 38 percent, or 760,000, received sentences of at least five years in jail, he said.

Last year the number of criminals given sentences of 10 years or more for such crimes more than doubled, Zheng said, although he did not provide figures.

Zheng said that of the offenders since 1983, government employees made up 15 percent while 28 percent were factory workers.

Zheng did not say how many people were sentenced to die.

Foreign analysts have estimated that more than 10,000 people have been executed since 1983, but China has never released figures on capital punishment. It is unclear how many people were executed for white-collar crime.

Zheng said the growth of nongovernmental loans, many without written contracts and with high interest rates, has led to a sharp jump in debt cases. Last year, there were 256,000 cases, eight times the 1983 figure.

Divorce cases are also up, he said, partly because women have become more economically independent under the government's reform policies.

Some women with greater economic means "cannot bear the bond of arranged marriage or maltreatment by their husband, thus demanding divorces. Their demand is progressive and the people's courts give them full support according to law," he said.

In a separate speech, Yang Yichen, head of the Supreme People's Procuratorate, or prosecutor's office, said 1,500 leading officials had been prosecuted over the past five years for such crimes as tax evasion, trademark counterfeits and manufacturing fake and faulty commodities.

Zheng said the courts continued to deal with cases of people wronged during the leftist anarchy of the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution. He said courts had taken up 789,000 related criminal cases, and new verdicts were given in 286,000 cases.

Rembrandt Reworked Painting

MOSCOW (AP) — Restoration work on Rembrandt's "Danae," which was cut and splashed with acid by an attacker in 1985, has revealed how the Dutch painter reworked the 17th-century masterpiece, the Tass news agency said Saturday.

Restoration experts in Leningrad using X-rays, ultraviolet and infrared light, have completed the first stage of their work and now are getting ready to retouch the areas where the original paint was destroyed, the report said.

A "case history" of hundreds of pages has been recorded, Tass said.

The painting was damaged June 15, 1985, by what officials described as a "madman" who threw sulphuric acid on it and slashed it twice with a knife at Leningrad's Hermitage museum.

Soviet art officials have said the damage was serious, but never have said specifically how much of the painting was destroyed.

Restorers, including chemists, biologists, physicists and other scientists, began work immediately on the canvas. The painting depicts the mother of Perseus, who, according to Greek legend, killed Medusa and her head of snakes.

Soviet art books say Rembrandt painted "Danae" in 1636 and repainted it in 1646-1647.

"X-ray studies showed that Rembrandt had repainted the gesture of the right hand, changed the appearance of the old woman looking from behind the canopy, that he had painted over Danae's earrings and beads, and that he had altered her facial features several times in the course of the work," Tass said.

Up For Two

Manning Leads Kansas By Duke

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Kansas may not be a one-man team, but this was Danny Manning's one-man show Saturday as the Jayhawks earned their first trip to the NCAA national championship game in 31 years.

Kansas got an 18-point lead on fifth-ranked Duke with barely nine minutes gone in the game, then held on to beat the Blue Devils 66-59 in the semifinals of the Final Four.

The unranked Jayhawks held Duke to just one field goal in the first 11 possessions, and the Blue Devils shot just 34.3 percent for the game, their worst of the season, to 50 percent for Kansas.

"We came out and played great defense," said Manning, who scored 25 points, had 10 rebounds and led a smothering Kansas defense — borrowing Duke's trademark in beating the Blue Devils and avenging a 1986 Final Four semifinal loss to Duke.

Duke, led by Danny Ferry, twice cut the Kansas lead to three points in the second half, but each time, Manning was there along with teammate Milt Newton.

The 59 points were the fewest scored by the Blue Devils this season, and it was the first time in 20 games that Duke had lost while holding its opponent to less than 70 points.

"They attacked us well," Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "Our youngsters did a good job in the second half to get us back in, but Manning and Newton had great games. I just wish we got off to a better start. We were very tentative."

Kansas will play the winner of Oklahoma-Arizona game on Monday night for the championship.

Kansas, which last went to the national final in 1957 and won its only title in 1952, got only four points from Manning as a sophomore when the Jayhawks went to the Final Four two years ago.

This time, the two-time All-American not only scored points, but he rejected six shots, made four steals and had a pair of assists.

Kansas ran up a 24-6 lead in the first nine minutes of the game, and this time, they held onto it. Two months ago, Kansas led Duke by 15 points in a regular-season game before losing in overtime.

"We hung together and competed, and that's why we're here," Kansas Coach Larry Brown said.

Manning got two baskets inside and Newton had a 3-pointer and a fastbreak basket as Kansas ran off to its 14-0 lead with 15:27 still left in the first half.

Duke finally got its first basket, on a short baseline hook by Alaa Abdelnaby, with 4:48 gone in the half. Manning came back with a dunk that started a three-point play, and Scooter Barry hit a free throw to make it 18-2 with 13:44 left.

Ferry hit his first basket of the game, a layup with 13:21 left, then added a jumper to make it 18-6 before Manning scored four points in a six-point Kansas run that put the Jayhawks ahead 24-6 at the midway mark of the first half.

On Feb. 20, Kansas had led Duke at Lawrence, Kan., 23-8. By halftime, the score was 28-27 Kansas, and the Jayhawks lost 74-70 in overtime. This time, the Jayhawks held an 11-point lead at the half, 38-27, and refused to surrender the lead.

Actually, Manning refused. Duke pulled within 24-14 after a run of eight in a row, including a 3-pointer by Greg Koubek. But Manning fed Chris Piper for a layup with 7:28 left, and the lead was 26-14. Manning had a jumper in the lane and a layup over the final 3:56 of the half, finishing with 15 points.

Duke shot 45.8 percent from the floor in the first half, Kansas 55.2.

Valvano No Longer A UCLA Possibility

LOS ANGELES (AP) — North Carolina State basketball Coach Jim Valvano withdrew his name from consideration for the head coaching job at UCLA, saying it was in the best interests of his family, the university announced Saturday.

Valvano said in a statement that he came to his decision after meeting with UCLA officials and talking it over with his family.

"After meeting with the folks from UCLA and discussing the situation with my family, it is my decision to withdraw my name from consideration from the position," Valvano said.

"It is a great job and the people I met with were wonderful, but I feel it is in my family's best interests to stay at North Carolina State. My oldest daughter is a freshman at N.C. State and my middle daughter is a sophomore in high school and I think it best for them that we stay where we are at this time," Valvano said.

Walt Hazzard, who helped UCLA win its first NCAA title in 1964, was fired on Wednesday, less than three weeks after completing his fourth season with the Bruins.

UCLA was only 16-14 this season, well below expectations for a team coming off a Pacific-10 Conference championship in 1987. The Bruins finished in a tie for second in the Pac-10, but were upset by Washington State 73-71 in a first-round game of the conference tournament on March 11.

Lyle Confident At The Top Spot

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — It was a supremely confident Sandy Lyle who assessed his position three shots in front of the pack going into Sunday's final round of the $1 million Greater Greensboro Open.

"I've been in this position before, and I don't usually let them get away," said the globe-trotting veteran from Scotland who has scored victories on three continents.

"It all depends on the start," Lyle said of the final 18 holes of the chase for a $180,000 first prize.

"If I get off to a good start — and the second hole is a par-5 I can reach — I'll be hard to catch," Lyle said Saturday after he'd surged past struggling Jeff Sluman and put himself in position to write a little golfing history.

A victory by Lyle Sunday would make him the first Scot ever to lead American money-winning list.

Lyle, who won this title in 1986, came from two shots off the pace with a 4-under-par 68 and tied the tournament scoring record for 54 holes at 199, 17-under par.

"I don't think I could have squeezed much more out of the round," said Lyle, a former British Open champion who is seeking his second victory of the year on the American Tour.

Sluman, who led through the first two rounds, slipped to a 73. He takes a 202 total into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $180,000 first prize.

"I didn't play bad. It was just a day when the putts lipped out and the drives trickled into the rough in funny places," said the slight, slender Sluman who has yet to win in five seasons of Tour activity.

Ken Green moved into third place at 204 after a 69. Scott Hoch was next at 72-206.

Dr. Gil Morgan and Donnie Hammond were at 207, eight shots off the pace. Morgan, who hasn't finished lower than eighth this season, shot 71. Hammond had a 73.

No one else was within 10 shots of the leader.

Lyle, a winner at Phoenix, Ariz., earlier this year and winner of more than 20 international titles, needed only two holes to overtake Sluman.

Lyle lofted his approach to within six feet of the flag and made the birdie putt on the first hole. He reached the par-5 second in two and 2-putted for another birdie that tied it.

He went ahead when Sluman, playing with him in the last group on the Forest Oaks Country Club course, missed the green and bogeyed the fifth.

They went along with pars until Sluman's 6-iron shot bounced over the green and he bogeyed the 12th, giving Lyle a two-stroke advantage.

It went to three on the 16th when Lyle hit a 180-yard shot from a fairway bunker to within 15 feet of the cup and made the birdie pitt.

King And Grant Lift Oklahoma

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Stacey King and Harvey Grant each scored 21 points and No. 4 Oklahoma pressured second-ranked Arizona out of its game Saturday night, 86-78, setting up an all-Big Eight showdown for college basketball's national championship.

Oklahoma, 35-3, will meet Kansas, 26-11 and the only unranked team in the Final Four, in Monday night's championship game. The Jayhawks, two-time losers to Oklahoma this season, beat No. 5 Duke 66-59 in the other semifinal game.

King, a 6-foot-10 junior center and the Sooners' leading scorer at 22.9 and the NCAA tournament's leading scorer with 135 points in five games, was charged with his fourth foul with 9:16 remaining in the game and Oklahoma leading 58-49.

But the Sooners, second in the nation in scoring this season with 104 points per game, turned into a patient team and ran the 45-second clock down on each of its possessions.

The Sooners seemed to take command of the game with an 11-0 run in the first half and they led 39-27 at halftime.

But the Wildcats got within 51-48 with 12:51 left on a three-point play by All-American Sean Elliott. The Sooners then went on a 7-2 run capped by Ricky Grace's 3-pointer with 10:42 left that gave them a 58-49 lead.

King's fourth foul came on the next possession and the Sooners showed they can work the ball and be a patient offensive team.

Arizona was taken out of its game by the Sooners as the Wildcats committed 15 turnovers, nine in the first half, after averaging just 12 per game this season.

Arizona was also far from its usual 3-point shooting team as it made just six of 23 compared with a season percentage of 49.

Arizona's Steve Kerr, who made 60 percent of his 3-point attempts during the season, was just 2-for-13 from the field.

This will be the third championship game played between two members of the same conference.

Indiana and Michigan of the Big Ten met in 1976 and Villanova and Georgetown of the Big East were both in the 1985 championship game.

The victory was the 200th at Oklahoma for Coach Billy Tubbs, tying him with Bruce Drake as the winningest coach in Sooner history.

Arizona took a 9-2 lead as Cook scored five points and Elliott four in the opening 4:15, but the Sooners put

Pirates Sweep Indians By 5-0, 13-2 Margins

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina baseball coach Gary Overton watched his team kick the ball around in the first inning of a twi-nighter against William & Mary and must have wondered if the Pirates were going to throw their chances again once more.

After opening with a 1-4 record against Colonial Athletic Association opponents, the Pirates appeared headed down the drain quickly.

But they rebounded and not only prevented the Indians from scoring in the inning, they swept the doubleheader, 5-0 and 13-2, to move their CAA record to 3-4 while dropping the Indians to 2-2.

To do, the Pirates settled down after the two-error first and played good defense the rest of the night. They also unleashed their bats, collecting 10 hits in the first game and 11 in the second.

But on top of it all, the Pirates got an outstanding pitching effort from Jake Jacobs in the opener, and a steady performance from Scott Stevens in the second.

"Jake was the story in the opener," Overton said. "He was just masterful, working like a surgeon."

Jacobs cut the Indians up with a three hit performance, retiring 13 in a row at one point. He struck out seven and walked none in gaining his fourth win in six decisions.

Stevens, who has been the hard-luck kid for the Pirates, boosted his record to 3-4 with the win, scattering five hits, walking three and also striking out seven.

"Just as important (as the pitching) was the way we made runs here and there and put the (first) game away against an outstanding pitcher (Bill Prezioso). We did it the way it was supposed to be done."

Prezioso came into the game as the league's second winningest pitcher with a 5-1 record. He also stood fourth in earned run average at 2.57.

But he didn't appear to have all his stuff against the Pirates — for if he did the Pirates made him look bad with their bats.

"In the second game, we just hit the ball well. And I was pleased with our defense too. We seem to be getting everything together again, and that's important at this time of the year."

Overton may have wondered, however, as he watched the first inning. After giving up a leadoff base hit, the Pirates allowed an extra base on an error. Then, an infield out moved the runner to third with one away — an excellent scoring opportunity. The next two batters also reached, one on an error and the other on a fielder's choice — but in each case, the runner at third had to hold and the Pirates escaped without giving up a run.

It might just have been an omen of what was to come as only one other Indian reached scoring position against Jacobs, and only three more

1st Inning Keys Rose Win

HOLLYWOOD — When Rose pushed across four runs in the first inning, the Rampants did a lot more than just take the lead.

They took the pressure off young pitcher Paul Powers and put it directly on the underdog North Lenoir Hawks en route to a 10-0 win in the second game of the D.H. Conley Easter Baseball tournament Saturday afternoon.

"It really helped Paul to get ahead and feel like he could loosen up and throw," said Rose coach Ronald Vincent, whose team moved to 8-0 on the year. "That's what the four runs did. It really helped us and it affected them psychologically."

After North Lenoir's Clifton Jones opened the game by reaching on an error, Powers put the Hawks down in order with two pop flies and a strikeout.

Rose then wasted little time getting on the scoreboard. Tim Moore opened with a double and went to third on a bunt single by David Leisten. Axel Smith followed with a fly ball to leftfield that was dropped by James Sutton, allowing Moore to score.

Smith was called out for passing Leisten on the basepaths, but Leisten remained alive at third. Dave Daniels followed with a reach on a walk.

Leisten came home with the Rampants' second run of the inning on a wild pitch, which moved Daniels to second. Tom Moye followed with a single. Jamie Brewington and Chris Christopher then hit cconsecutive run-scoring singles to bring in Daniels and Moye for a 4-0 lead.

"We just didn't get in the game mentally or physically," said North Lenoir coach Wayne Barwick. "Our kids felt like they were playing Goliath and Goliath got the better of them."

Still, the Hawks still had a chance to get back in the game in the top of the third when they loaded the bases. Fred Kittrell singled with one out. Jeff Herring followed with a walk after another out and Rickie Killinger singled to load the bases. But Powers got Dave Hinson to ground out to first to end the threat and the inning.

"If we could have just gotten two in, it might have given us some hope," Barwick said of the Hawks' missed chances in the third inning. "We swung ourselves out of it."

Rose added a run in the third as Daniels singled, stole second and third and scored on a wild pitch to make it 5-0.

After North Lenoir went out quickly in the top of the fourth on a double play and a stikeout by Powers, the Rampants pushed three more runs across in the bottom of the inning to further extend their advantage.

Heath Clark started things off with a single and advanced on two straight groundouts before scoring on an error. Axel Smith and Daniels followed with consecutive solo home runs, over the left centerfield and the right centerfield fences, respectively. Moye followed that with a deep double to left that almost cleared the fence for a third round tripper, but a pop up ended the inning.

Rose added two more runs in the sixth when Moore reached on a passed ball, went to second on a walk to Andy Miller and scored on an error that allowed Joe DeLoach to score. One out later, Brian Wille drew a walk and Brewington followed with a another walk, this one scoring Miller.

The game was finally called after that run scoring base on balls to give the Rampants the win.

Powers went the distance for the win, giving up only three hits while walking three and striking out seven.

"I was real impressed with Paul's pitching," Vincent said. "He did an excellent job. He stayed ahead of the hitters. He stayed in control and we never had to do anything. Our defense (also) played well behind him."

North Lenoir starter Jeremy Copeland went out in the first inning and was replaced by Sutton, who went the rest of the way.

"Copeland pitched Tuesday but he seemed to be pretty loose before the game," Barwick said. "He was just a little bit tight and he had a problem with his elbow."

Daniels and Moye both went 2-3 to lead Rose, which totaled 12 hits.

Rose advances to play Havelock, a 7-1 winner of Farmville Central in the opening game of the tournament, Monday at 5 p.m.

Vikings Get Win; Jaguars, AG Fall

HOLLYWOOD — Sherwood Wilder went 3-4 to lead D.H. Conley to a 9-4 win over New Bern in the nightcap game at the Pitt County Easter Baseball tournament Saturday.

New Bern took the early lead by pushing across three runs in the opening inning, keyed by a two-run homer by Jimmy Alexander.

The Vikings finally got on the scoreboard in the fourth inning when Sherwood Wilder and Kervin Vines hit consecutive singles before Robbie Nichols reached on an error to load the bases. Travis Clemons followed with a ground out that scored Wilder to make it 3-1.

The Vikings then took the lead in the fifth by scoring three more runs. Bronswell Patrick started things off in the fifth by knocking in Gray Mills with a sacrifice fly. Wilder followed by singling in Scottie Barnhill to tie the game. Brian Bullock came home with the final run of the inning on an error to make it 4-3.

Conley added five more runs in the sixth to take control of the game.

Mills opened up by reaching on an error. Barnhill followed with a single. Bullock then doubled in both runners. Patrick followed with another single before coming home along with Bullock on a single by Wilder. Nichols added the final run of the inning by scoring Wilder on a sacrifice fly.

Barnhill added two hits for the Vikings, now 5-2, who will play Kinston Monday in the semi-finals of the tournament at 8 p.m.

Farmville.....1

HOLLYWOOD — Gaylan Finney and Stephen Gainey collected three hits apiece to lead Havelock past Farmville Central, 7-1, in the opening game of the Pitt County Easter Baseball Tournament Saturday.

Farmville tied the game early in the bottom of the second when Howard Collins reached on an error, went to second on another error and third on a ground out by Eddie Little before being forced home by a walk to George Burnette.

But Havelock broke the tie by pushing across two runs in the top of the third. The Rams then took control in the fourth by scoring three runs, keyed by a two-run single by Finney to make it 6-1.

Farmville falls into the consolation bracket and will meet North Lenoir, a 10-0 loser to J.H. Rose, at 11 a.m. Monday. Havelock advances to play the Rampants.

Ayden-Grifton.....8

HOLLYWOOD — Kinston took advantage of Ayden-Grifton's miscues to take a 10-8 win in the Pitt County Easter Baseball Tournament Saturday.

After Kinston went ahead 3-0, Ayden-Grifton rallied to tie the game in the second inning when Ronnell Peterson and Johnny Moore ripped consecutive singles and advanced on a wild pitch before coming home on a single by Steven Tucker. Tucker went to second on a ground out and scored on a single by James Woodard to make it 3-3.

The Vikings pushed across a run in the bottom of the second to regain the lead before taking control in the fourth.

The Vikings scored six runs by taking advantage of four errors and three wild pitches in the fourth by the Chargers to key a six-run inning that expanded their lead to 10-3.

The Chargers tried again to rally in the sixth as Peterson led off with a single. Moore followed with another single before Tucker drove in Peterson with a base hit. Woodard drew a walk. Darryl Moye singled in Moore and Tucker to before Gary Eubanks followed by driving in Woodard with a base hit to make it 10-7.

Ayden-Grifton added another run in the seventh but that was as close as the Chargers would get.

Peterson, Moore and Tucker each went 3-4 while Moye had two hits for the Chargers, who fall to 1-6. Ayden-Grifton moves into the consolation round set for Monday.

Frankie Swindell went 2-2 to lead Kinston.

Pirates Sweep Tribe...

East Carolina broke the scoring ice in the second, pushing over two unearned runs. Steve Godin opened with a single and stole second. He was sacrificed to third and scored when Tommy Yarborough reached on an error. The misplay moved Yarborough to second and he scored on David Ritchie's single to center.

A third run scored in the third. Jay McGraw led off with a triple off the fence in center, scoring on John Adams' two-out drag bunt down the third base line.

Ritchie led the Pirate hitting in the game with three, while Thomas and Godin each had two.

Again, the Pirates dodged an early bullet, then took the lead for good. In the top of the first, Sam Champi doubled to left, but got no further than third.

East Carolina then struck for five runs in the bottom of the inning. Ritchie led off with a walk and moved up on a wild pitch. Thomas reached when his grounder to first took a bad hop over the first baseman. He stole second and a wild pitch scored Ritchie and put Thomas on third. McGraw walked and stole second and Calvin Brown's sacrifice fly scored Thomas. Godin then reached on a three-base error, allowing McGraw to third. Adams grounded out, scoring Godin and Yarborough walked. He scored on Kevin Riggs' double to right center, giving the Pirates a 5-1 lead.

East Carolina boosts its overall record to 19-9 with the sweep, while William & Mary falls to 11-15.

Georgia Takes Title At Furman Invitational

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Georgia's Matt Peterson shot an 8-under-par 64 to take the individual title and lead the Bulldogs to the team championship in the Furman Intercollegiate Golf Tournament on Saturday.

Peterson entered the day four shots behind second-round leader Joe Gay of North Carolina State, but he carded 32s on the front and back sides of the course to finish at 11-under-par 205. That was six strokes better than Gay, who finished at 211 after shooting a 74.

Peterson's final round at the 6,800-yard Furman University Golf Course tied the tournament record set by Jodie Mudd in 1981.

Uly Grisette of North Carolina State and Eoghan O'Connell of Wake Forest both finished at 215. Next were Len Mattiace of Wake Forest and Andrew Pitts of Appalachian State at 216.

Georgia finished with a team total of 11-under-par 869, two shots ahead of North Carolina State. Wake Forest finished at 877, Georgia Tech at 878 and Virginia and Clemson were next at 888.

Medlin, Borden Lead All-Coastal Team

D.H. Conley's Phil Medlin and Havelock's Derek Borden lead the Coastal 3-A All-Conference basketball selections.

Medlin, a 6-8 senior, and Borden, a 6-5 senior, led their teams to first and second place finishes, respectively.

Also selected to the team were North Lenoir's Dave Hinson; West Craven's Willie Manley; Washington's Ryan Dixon; Havelock's Ledel George; West Carteret's Eric Lewis; West Craven's Keith Roundtree; East Carteret's Billy Ellison and Havelock's Anthony Robinson.

Jonathan Bonner of Conley was also selected honorable mention , as was Bob Rhodes of Washington.

Also selected to the team were Havelock's Laura Maxwell; West Craven's Chundra Crouelle; West Carteret's Wendi Nelson; Havelock's Dee Godette; West Carteret's Stacy Kyle; North Lenoir's Tisha Bouie and Paula Johnson of East Carteret.

Other selections were 103-pounder Marvin Brooks of Havelock; 112-pounder Travis Day of West Carteret; 125-pound Tom Doherty of West Carteret; 130-pounder Dean McCormick of West Carteret; 125-pounder Dennis Fleming of Havelock; 140-pounder Robert Reynolds of West Carteret; 145-pounder Walt Gerard of Washington; 152-pounder James Boyd of Washington; 160-pounder Kenny Frazier of Havelock; 171-pounder Josh Hooten of Havelock; 189-pounder Larry Harris of Washington and heavyweight LeVon Morris of Havelock.

Conley JVs Ease By New Bern, 10-3

NEW BERN — D.H. Conley defeated New Bern 10-3 in JV baseball action Friday afternoon.

Alcott Expanding Her Lead

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Amy Alcott, threatening to turn the $500,000 Dinah Shore tournament into a runaway, said she's trying not to think about how well she's playing.

"If I'm going along shooting good scores, the minute I think about it, I shoot a 77," said Alcott, who had her second consecutive 6-under-par 66 Saturday.

Alcott was at 13-under-par 203 after three rounds of the event at Mission Hills Country Club, four shots ahead of Colleen Walker.

"I'm playing as well as I can play," said Alcott, who has been one of the tour's most consistent players during her 14-year career.

"I'm concentrating so hard on my game that I don't even get real excited, don't jump around or do my Mick Jagger imitations.

"Since I'm so focused on my game, the most I can do is smile."

Walker, who began the third round one shot behind Alcott and had a 69 to remain in contention, said she hoped she could make a run at the leader on Sunday.

"I am going to try to play the golf course, not Amy."

Marta Figueras-Dotti of Spain had a 70 and was at 7-under-par 209, while Jan Stephenson, with a 70, was at 211.

Amateur Caroline Keggi, a senior at the University of New Mexico, carded a 66 to go to 4-under-par.

Alcott, 32, was on the brink of ending what has been her longest winless spell since she joined the Tour in 1975.

Alcott has collected 26 tournament victories, including at least one win a year, until 1987. She won twice in 1986 before going winless last year.

Alcott, who already has won more than $1 million during her career, needs to win just three more titles to become eligible for the LPGA's Hall of Fame.

She won the Dinah Shore, regarded as the tour's most prestigious tournament, in 1983.

Alcott, who had an opening 71, began the third round at 7-under. She clipped another shot off par on the third hole, went to 9-under with another birdie on No. 6, then birdied No. 9 for a 33 that put her 10-under at the turn.

She then made birdies on the 10th, 15th and 16th holes to pull away from Walker.

Walker, who has won just once, in 1987, was within two shots of the lead until she bogeyed No. 13.

Alcott's round was a model of consistency, as she had six birdies and no bogeys. She had nine birdies, a bogey and a double bogey during the second round.

Playing conditions again were ideal at Mission Hills, with sunny weather and virtually no wind. Gusting winds had kept scores relatively high the first day, but the weather turned nice on Friday.

The winner of the Dinah Shore will collect $80,000. Sunday's final round will be televised by NBC.

Valvano Staying ...

UCLA Athletic Director Peter Dalis praised Valvano as a coach and said the search would continue, though he did not name other candidates.

"Jim is one of the best and first available coaches with whom we have had discussions about the head coaching position," Dalis said, "and we will continue to discuss the job with other candidates."

In withdrawing, Valvano, 42, said he had "meaningful and productive" discussions with UCLA officials "but I want to stress that nothing was ever reduced to a final proposal."

Valvano said he wished to make clear that North Carolina State had given him permission to look at the UCLA job.

"My contract did not enter into my decision to withdraw, rather it was my concern for the best interests of my family," he said.

The coach added that he loved living and working in North Carolina and was "looking forward to leading N.C. State's basketball and athletic program to the best of my ability in the future."

Hazzard, who guided the Bruins to the league championship and was named Pac-10 Conference Coach of the Year for 1986-87, played at UCLA under John Wooden and was the Bruins' fifth coach since Wooden resigned after taking the school to the 1975 NCAA title — its 10th in 12 years.

But UCLA has been to the Final Four only twice since then — in 1976 under Gene Bartow and in 1980 under Larry Brown. Gary Cunningham coached the Bruins for two years between Bartow and Brown, and Larry Farmer held the job between Brown's and Hazzard's stints.

Valvano succeeded Norm Sloan as North Carolina State's head coach in 1980. After successive winning seasons, he guided the Wolfpack through the West Regional en route to the 1983 national championship. He made the Final Eight in 1985 and 1986. In 1986 he also became athletic director.

Sooners Roll ...

on their vaunted press and steals by Blaylock and Grace brought Oklahoma within 9-8.

The teams traded points and after the Wildcats pulled within 20-19, the rest of the half was all Oklahoma.

The Sooners went on an 11-0 run with Grant scoring four of the points, including the driving jumper that ended the run with 5:25 left in the half.

Oklahoma took its first 14-point lead at 36-22 with 2:33 left on a banker by Andre Wiley.

Arizona's tough first half — in which it shot 39 percent from the field and committed the nine turnovers — came to an appropriate end when Elliott missed a dunk on an alley-oop pass from Craig McMillan. He was fouled on the play, however, and made both free throws for the halftime margin of 39-27.

N.C. State Officials Upset By Show

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina State University officials are upset by the CBS news show "48 Hours," saying the network unfairly painted N.C. State as a school that emphasizes athletics over academics.

The weekly documentary show Thursday night zeroed in on college athletics, specifically the Feb. 25 basketball game in Raleigh between N.C. State and Duke.

During one segment of the show, an NCSU class called "Introduction to Leisure Activities" was featured. Several athletes were in the class, which is part of the Recreational Resources Administration curriculum. Among those interviewed were basketball players Chris Corchiani and Chucky Brown, who implied the course was easy.

"I've gone back and looked at the parks and leisure department, and it's a fairly decent program," said Thomas Honeycutt, an associate professor of computer science and chairman of NCSU's Faculty Senate. "It's got the same requirements that you would find in any Bachelor of Arts program at State, with math and science requirements. They could have been a little more fair about the the parks and recreation program, because it's not an easy one."

"We stand by our story," CBS spokesman La Mott Britto told The News and Observer of Raleigh. "Some issues were raised about college basketball in general, but we weren't going after any specific program. It was pretty much a lighthearted look at the competitive attitude of sports, the frenzy and popularity of the sport."

Honeycutt's contention that State was picked on was echoed by Malcolm Gillis, Duke University's vice provost of academic affairs and graduate school dean.

"I'm not surprised by the show," Gillis said. "I think State has been unfairly treated on many occasions. I would not have expected otherwise. They (the network) are out to get advertisers."

"They (CBS) could have, and I wish they would have, shown a complete spectrum of the curriculum at State," said Albert Lanier, director of university relations at NCSU. "I'm sorry they didn't show some of our athletes taking calculus or engineering or some of the more difficult courses, but when you turn over free reign to an organization like CBS they're going to do what they want, which they did."

Among those interviewed for the show were Wolfpack Coach Jim Valvano, NCSU Chancellor Bruce Poulton, Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski and NCSU alumni booster, Rep. Wendell H. Murphy, D-Duplin. The show was narrated by CBS News anchor Dan Rather.

Murphy said he had anticipated the worst so the show did not upset him. Murphy was interviewed about the Wolfpack Club's involvement at NCSU.

"I really had dreaded to watch the program, but after I watched it, I was relieved," Murphy said. "I guess when you consider they had at least 48 hours of tape, they can do just about anything they want with the show."

At Duke, CBS focused on students taking more difficult courses. One athlete interviewed said his courses included calculus.

The show mentioned that 85 percent of the athletes at Duke graduate while at State the rate is about 58 percent, which is about the same percentage as the entire student body.

"If you listened carefully, they (CBS) covered their bases, but while they talked about academics first at Duke, they talked about that last when it came to State," said Honeycutt. "And did they talk about easy programs at Duke? No. Surely, they have some easy programs at Duke, because they're a liberal arts school. We're not. We're a professional school.

"It would be nice, I suppose, for some students if we had a basket-weaving program at State, but we don't. I challenge you to find one, but I'm not sure the same could be said at Duke," he said.

Gillis agreed there may be easy courses at Duke, the Durham school, but they can be found at all institutions. The key, he said, is to make the courses tougher or delete them from the curriculum offerings once they are identified. He also disputed Honeycutt's claim about basket-weaving.

"I'm not a betting man, but if I were, I'd bet 45-to-1 that we don't have a class called that," Gillis said. "But whether it is State, Harvard, Duke or Vanderbilt or (University of) Chicago, they all have what we called at Harvard 'gut courses,' or what you and I remember as crip courses. And you can correct them in the long run, but not in the short run, because you can't just end a course in mid-session."

Old Faces To Open In New Places

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Kirk Gibson, Jack Clark and Lee Smith signal a year of familiar faces in new places while spring's high hopes turn to reality Monday when Roger Clemens throws the first pitch of the 1988 baseball season.

The Los Angeles Dodgers, New York Yankees and Baltimore Orioles all made major changes during the winter with Bob Welch, Brett Butler and Danny Jackson among those others who switched leagues.

The Minnesota Twins, trying to become the first World Series champion to repeat since the 1977-78 Yankees, stood pat. The only changes they made came in the financial department — they now have seven million-dollar players, the most in the major leagues.

"I think "repeat" is the most hated word around here," Twins outfielder Tom Brunansky said. "That's all everyone asks us about."

In Boston, they are asking whether Clemens can become the first pitcher to win three straight Cy Young awards. He will begin that effort Monday at 1:05 p.m. EDT when Detroit and starter Jack Morris face the youthful Red Sox at Fenway Park in the first game of the year.

"We're probably a better ballclub than we were in 1986," Boston manager John McNamara said, referring to the Red Sox team that came within one strike of winning the World Series. "It's a different type of club, by design. It's taken us three years to change to what we wanted."

The acquisition of Smith, a top reliever from the Chicago Cubs, was one of the changes made in the off-season.

Detroit, wiped out by Minnesota in the American League playoffs, will try to squeeze another year out of its veterans, now minus Gibson, who signed a free-agent contract with Los Angeles. The Tigers, as usual, had the worst record in the AL during spring training while looking at lots of youngsters.

Mario Soto, back from two years of injuries, will start for host Cincinnati an hour later against St. Louis in the traditional National League opener.

Soto was not expected to make the Reds roster when spring training began, but pitched himself into the opening-day assignment. Joe Magrane will start for the NL champion Cardinals, the only team to reach the World Series three times this decade.

The Reds are favored by many to win the NL West. They will have to fend off Los Angeles and NL West champion San Francisco, who play at Dodger Stadium in one of nine openers Monday.

Gibson, Alfredo Griffin, Jay Howell, Jesse Orosco and Mike Davis are among newcomers in Los Angeles, while Welch and Matt Young are gone. The Dodgers have had two straight losing seasons and saw their attendance dip each year. They had the best record in the NL during spring training.

"Our ballclub had to change, it was a must," said General Manager Fred Claire, in his first full year. "We could not stand pat."

Baltimore, like Los Angeles, is a once-strong power that has fallen on hard times in recent years. Orioles general manager Roland Hemond, who took over after last season's sixth-place finish, changed the team — 14 of the 24 players were not on the roster last opening day.

"The pitching is better. The infield is better. The outfield has a chance to be better and we have more speed. The next question is, 'Will we be better?'" Manager Cal Ripken said.

The Orioles and Mike Boddicker open Monday at home against Milwaukee and starter Ted Higuera. Last season, the Brewers began the season with 13 straight victories, tying the major league record.

On Tuesday, the Twins start the season in New York. World Series MVP Frank Viola, who grew up watching games at Yankee Stadium, will start for the Twins against Rick Rhoden.

New York, under pressure from owner George Steinbrenner to make its first World Series appearance since 1981, also overhauled their club. Billy Martin is back for his fifth turn as Yankees manager. Clark, Rich Dotson, John Candelaria, Lee Guetterman, Don Slaught and Rafael Santana are among the new Yankees. Clark left the Cardinals as a free agent.

The Yankees had the best record of any team in the exhibition season. That won't mean anything starting this week.

"I'm anxious to get going," Martin said. "I think we're going to do very well."

Griffey Hoping To Attain One Of Two Career Goals

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Ken Griffey has two goals — one realistic, the other just wishful thinking.

Griffey, who turns 38 on April 10, enters his 16th major league season and third with the Atlanta Braves, needing just 47 hits to reach the 2,000-hit plateau.

That milestone is realistic.

"I'm working on it. I should get it this season. It will be a milestone," he said.

Griffey's other goal is said with tongue-in-cheek.

"What I'd really like to get is 4,000, like Pete," said Griffey, kiddingly referring to Pete Rose's 4,256 hits, the most in the history of the game.

Griffey, a .299 lifetime hitter who played with Rose on the Cincinnati Reds in the mid-1970s and early 1980s, is expected to be a role player with the Braves in 1988, playing the outfield and first base and pinch hitting.

"That's what (manager) Chuck (Tanner) told me; he expects to use me that way, but that depends on a lot of things in camp. It's early and things could change," said Griffey, who played in 122 games last season and hit .286 with 14 home runs and 64 runs batted in.

However, he tailed off late in the season after hitting .351 with 10 homers and 38 RBI in his first 47 games.

"As for the rest factor, I don't know if I'll be any stronger at the end. I'd like to play as many games as I can," said Griffey, the National League's top pinch hitter in 1987 with a .611 batting average (11-18) with eight runs batted in.

Griffey may get his wish of playing as much as he can. He will start in left field in Tuesday night's regular season opener against the Chicago Cubs.

His playing time depends on what happens in center field, where Terry Blocker, acquired in a trade with the New York Mets, and Albert Hall competed during the spring.

Dion James, who played there last year, was switched to left field to make room for either Blocker or Hall. But neither hit during spring training, and Tanner said he will play James in center at times, with Griffey in left.

"I wouldn't be surprised if he doesn't play as much as he did last year," said Tanner. "We just want to give Blocker a shot and hope to keep Griffey strong, which will be good for him and for us."

Expos Upend Yankees, 5-4

By The Associated Press

Canada's first spring training game was a success Saturday as Hubie Brooks doubled twice and scored a pair of runs and Tim Wallach hit a two-run homer to give the Montreal Expos a 5-4 victory over the New York Yankees.

A crowd of 22,191 saw the game in Olympic Stadium as the Yankees made their first-ever visit to Montreal.

Mike Shade pitched one perfect inning of relief for the win while Charles Hudson took the loss.

New York took a 3-0 led with a run in the first and two more in the second off Pascual Perez, who went two innings. One of the second-inning runs came on Claudell Washington's solo homer.

Wallach's third homer of the spring, with Brooks on base, made it 3-2 in the third. The Expos got three off Hudson in the fifth on an RBI double by Brooks followed by a single by Andres Galarraga and Tom Foley's triple.

Mets 11, Astros 5

Gary Carter hit two-run homers in each of the first two innings as the Mets scored seven runs off Joaquin Andujar before he retired a batter. Howard Johnson and Mookie Wilson also homered for New York.

Nelson Rood had a three-run homer off New York starter Bob Ojeda, who allowed four unearned runs on three hits in five innings.

Pirates 4, Orioles 1

Brian Fisher and Bob Kipper allowed the Orioles five hits with Fisher allowing just two hits and an unearned run in his 5 1-3 innings. The only run for the Orioles came on Fisher's three-base throwing error and Billy Ripken's RBI groundout.

Tigers 7, Red Sox 6

Brewers 5, Mariners 4

Robin Yount's two-run homer in the eighth off Dave Stapleton led Milwaukee in the final exhibition game for both teams. The Mariners had taken a 4-3 lead in the top of the inning when Rich Renteria singled to drive in Mickey Brantley, who had opened the inning with a double off Juan Nieves.

Dale Sveum and Glenn Braggs each hit solo homers for Milwaukee and Rey Quinones homered for Seattle.

Astros (ss) 6, Phillies 2

Troy Afenir hit a two-run homer and Bob Knepper, Rafael Montalvo and Ernie Camacho limited the Phillies to six singles. Knepper gave up one run on two hits in four innings, Montalvo pitched three scoreless innings and Camacho allowed an unearned run in the ninth.

Kluszewski Mourned At Memorial Service

CINCINNATI (AP) — Funeral services were held Saturday for Ted Kluszewski, the former Cincinnati Reds' slugger and batting coach who died Tuesday of an apparent heart attack at the age of 63.

The muscular first baseman was a naturally gifted athlete who developed his rippling biceps by tossing heavy sacks in a cornstarch mill, his brother recalled Saturday.

Friends, family and former baseball greats including Stan Musial, Tony Perez, Johnny Bench and Pete Rose, were in attendance as was former Reds pitcher Joe Nuxhall, now a radio broadcaster for the team.

John Kluszewski, 60, who worked with his brother Ted in the cornstarch mill while they were growing up in Argo, Ill., said Ted was a natural athlete who won all-state honors in baseball, basketball and football. The son of Polish immigrants, Ted Kluszewski went on to star as an end on the Indiana University football team that won the Big Ten championship in 1945.

"He was a natural in everything," John Kluszewski said.

Musial, the former St. Louis Cardinals' batting star, was in town to attend a Cincinnati-area horse race and amended his plans to attend the funeral of an old friend.

"He was a great hitter. Great guy, good competitor ... He loved to hit, loved to play, he was a good teacher," Musial told reporters after the funeral service at suburban Gate of Heaven Cemetery. "For all his power, he was a gentle man, had a kind word for everyone."

Reds' Davis Gives A Deceiving 1st Look

He stands there by the batting cage, overshadowed by thick-muscled teammates who look like home run hitters. But when his turn comes, he uncoils a fluid, quick swing that meets the ball perfectly and redirects it toward the pond beyond the outfield wall with unseen power.

It's hard to believe that this 6-foot-3, 182-pound player who looks more like a basketball guard than a power hitter is one of the most imposing players in the major leagues.

"I'd like to be 6-foot-7, 210 pounds," he says, wistfully.

If he were, Davis wouldn't be the prototype that he's become, a wonderful blend of speed and power that has become the epitome of greatness in baseball today.

Players like Davis are changing the game and the definition of the ultimate player. The most coveted players are those, like Davis, who have plenty of offensive tools.

"It's not the game (that's changed), it's the personnel," he said. "Guys in the last few years have gotten stronger and faster. Guys are more complete players now.

At age 25, he hit .293 with 37 homers and 100 runs batted in. He stole 50 bases and won the Gold Glove in centerfield in just his second full season. He became the seventh player to reach the 30-homer, 30-steal mark. Injuries prevented him from becoming the first player to hit 40 homers and steal 40 bases in a season.

Davis reached those heights in a season shortened by injury to 129 games. He ran into the outfield wall at Wrigley Field to make a game-saving catch Sept. 4, causing him to miss 17 games.

"I had a tremendous season going until the fourth of September," Davis said.

The Reds have always projected Davis as a superstar. But initially, they tried to make him a lead-off hitter, asking him to make contact and use his speed. His power and productivity prompted the move to the cleanup spot.

"I didn't consider myself a lead-off hitter, I just batted first," he said.

Moderately built players with speed usually are coached to hit the ball on the ground and try to beat out singles or stretch hits into doubles.

"They say, 'Utilize your speed,' " Davis said.

For instance, Davis thinks he'll be able to steal more bases this season as a cleanup hitter than he could when he batted lead-off.

Price, Cavaliers Dig In, Upend Indiana 108-94

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Guard Mark Price says the Cleveland Cavailers have something to prove.

"This shows a lot of character in our team. We're just digging our heels in and saying that we want to win," Price said after his 32 points and 10 assists led the Cavaliers to a 108-94 victory over the Indiana Pacers on Saturday.

The victory was the Cavaliers' third straight, all against teams they are battling for one of eight Eastern Conference playoff berths. Cleveland now holds the sixth spot in the playoff race, percentage points ahead of the Pacers.

The Cavaliers had lost 13 of their previous 16 games before bouncing back with key victories over the New York Knicks, Washington Bullets and Indiana.

"The way that people were talking about us when we were losing, we could have hung our heads and continued to slide. But we wanted to get back to playing good basketball, and that intention has shown over the last three games," Price said.

Price made 11 of his 14 field goal attempts and converted nine of 10 foul shots. He was on the bench when the Pacers cut a 16-point lead to seven points early in the fourth quarter, but the Cavaliers regained the momentum when coach Lenny Wilkens rushed Price back onto the court.

"I was playing well, and we were getting a little out of synch, so he wanted me to get the team moving," Price explained.

Pacer coach Jack Ramsay said Price's improvement over his rookie season "has been dramatic. He's been playing well, and it's been evident from the beginning of the season. Judging from the way he played last year, I wasn't sure he'd be able to handle the responsibility, but he certainly has."

The Cavaliers led 84-68 starting the fourth quarter, but the Pacers closed the deficit to six points on four occasions in the last five minutes.

Vern Fleming pulled the Pacers to within 100-94 on a layup with 2:17 remaining, but the Cavaliers assured the victory with a short hook shot by Brad Daugherty and a dunk by Mike Sanders after Price came up with a loose ball.

That gave Cleveland a 104-94 lead with 1:35 remaining.

Indiana led 43-41 late in the second quarter before Cleveland rallied for a 55-49 halftime lead. The Cavaliers gained their 16-point margin entering the final quarter by shooting 72 percent from the field and outrebounding the Pacers 12-2 in the third period.

Wayman Tisdale led Indiana with 20 points, and John Long had 18 as the Pacers lost their third consecutive game. Daugherty scored 19 points for the Cavaliers.

Rodman Is Busy Building A New, Better Reputation

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

Dennis Rodman, best-known for his fist-waving antics and for claiming during last year's playoffs that Larry Bird is over-rated, is building a better reputation for himself with the Detroit Pistons.

The team appeared to be in trouble when high-scoring forward Adrian Dantley sprained his ankle just after the All-Star break. At the time, the Pistons had lost three of four games and trailed division-leading Atlanta by three games.

But Coach Chuck Daly inserted the 6-foot-8 Rodman in the starting lineup as the small forward on Feb. 9, and he has played so well that Dantley has remained a reserve despite returning from the ankle injury.

In Rodman's first 41 games as a reserve, he averaged 10.0 points and 7.8 rebounds.

In his first 27 games as a starter, Rodman averaged 15.7 points and 10.9 rebounds. More importantly, the Pistons went 21-6 and are now firmly entrenched in first place in the Central Division.

"I had to prove to myself, and to my teammates, that whenever I take A.D.'s spot, I can do the job," Rodman said.

Rodman's offensive rebounding, which makes him a scoring threat despite his weaknesses as an outside shooter and free-throw shooter, has been most impressive. In the entire NBA, he trails only Roy Tarpley of Dallas for most offensive rebounds per minute.

"An offensive rebound is an easy way to get two points," Rodman said. "You have to be willing to go in there and bang with the big guys. Some guys don't want to go in there and get hurt. Me, I like that stuff. I don't mind getting knocked around."

His best performances during his starting stint were on Feb. 13, when he had 15 points and 19 rebounds against Chicago, and on March 11, when he was 8-for-11 from the field with 21 points and 15 rebounds against Phoenix.

Rodman, whose ability to jump quickly compensates for his relative lack of size inside, said he plans to improve his free-throw shooting and outside shooting during the off-season. He has made barely half of his free throws.

Philadelphia forward Cliff Robinson has played for five teams in his nine NBA seasons. Until March 25, when the 76ers rallied from a 30-point deficit to beat the Celtics, he had never won a game at Boston Garden.

Sometimes it takes years to evaluate a trade, but it hasn't taken long to make it clear that Denver got the best of Washington when the Nuggets acquired Michael Adams and Jay Vincent for Mark Alarie and Darrell Walker before the season started.

Adams quickly became Denver's starter at point guard, and Vincent is the team's third-leading scorer behind All-Stars Alex English and Lafayette Lever. Walker and Alarie have played minor roles off the Bullets' bench.

While playing nearly three times as many minutes, Adams-Vincent have outscored Walker-Alarie more than 3-to-1, also have a 3-to-1 edge in assists, a 2-to-1 margin in rebounds and a 50-to-1 advantage in 3-point goals.

Milwaukee's John Lucas, who has had more than his share of drug problems, said New Jersey's Orlando Woolridge has three choices in dealing with his cocaine dependency.

Greene Central Rips Panthers

By TIM CHANDLER
Reflector Sports Writer

BETHEL — Experience seems to always make the difference.

It certainly did Friday. The experienced defending state 2-A baseball champion Rams of Greene Central rolled to an easy 13-4 rout over youthful North Pitt to open play in the Eastern Plains Conference.

The victory pushed Greene Central's record to 5-1 for the season, while the Panthers slipped to 1-2.

"Greene Central is the class of our conference, they are an experienced, good ball club," North Pitt assistant coach Doug Warren said. "We're an inexperienced, young team and we made some mistakes out there that cost us. But I don't think we will be making them (mistakes) by the end of the year. It will just take a little time to get some experience — there aren't any seniors on this team, we are starting two freshmen and five sophomores."

Anthony Jones got the inning off to a quick start when he towered a home run over the centerfield fence. Tommy Eason then reached base courtesy of a Panther error, followed by a single to right by Shay Beaman. Walt McKeel then brought the second run of the inning across with a fielder's choice. Ricky Freeman managed to get the third run to home base following a error on the Panthers' second sacker David Rhodes.

Greene Central sent all nine batters to the plate and set the stage for the thumping in the top of the second inning with a four-run burst, which helped to build a 7-0 cushion.

Cedric Collins reached base to start the inning with a walk. After Collins had stolen second, T.J. Johnson ripped a single to centerfield to score the first run. Eason then singled to center to move Johnson to third. Beaman then aided the Rams cause by swatting an RBI single. Beaman and Eason then closed out the inning when they managed to score following an errant throw to third base by Panther catcher Roosevelt Hines.

The Greene Central lead grew to 10-0 in the top of the third frame following a score from Collins and a two-run roundtripper over the centerfield fence from Eason.

"We swung the bats pretty good today — not as good as we'd like to though," Greene Central coach Jim Fulghum, whose team had 14 hits for the day, said.

The Panthers made their only push towards a comeback in the bottom half of the third when they sent seven batters to the plate and managed to push four runs across.

Shawn Howard opened the inning with a walk. Howard then moved to third when Reggie Daniels connected for a double to center. A Ram error allowed Collins to score. And a home run blast by Chuck Whitehurst accounted for the other three.

"We showed in the third that we can hit the ball," North Pitt coach Ray Moltz said. "With more experience, we hope to develop that kind of hitting throughout the game. Right now the scoreboard against them is where it should be, but we hope to turn it around by the end of the season."

The Rams added two more runs in the fourth. After Jeff Tyson led the inning off with a walk, Johnson belted an RBI double to left to score the first run. Jones then allowed Johnson to score following a run-scoring single.

The final score of the day by the Rams came in the sixth inning when Collins, the number nine batter in the lineup for Greene Central, belted a home run to centerfield.

Cornelius Hill led a trio of Greene Central pitchers to the win. Hill combined with Richie Britt and Rodney Letchworth to strike out 17 North Pitt batters, while giving up only four hits.

"Our pitching has been solid for us so far this year," Fulghum said. "We wanted to get a look at a few people today and when you get ahead like we did, you have the luxury of being able to do that."

Panther pitcher Reggie Daniels took the loss after pitching two and one-third inning. Daniels gave up 10 hits and 10 runs before he was replaced on the mound by Al Roberson.

North Pitt will be back in action on Monday in the SouthWest Edgecombe tournament, while Greene Central's next game will be against Wilson Beddingfield in Wilson's Fleming Stadium in the Wilson Optimsit Club Tournament on Thursday.

Hawkins Honored

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — John Chaney and Hersey Hawkins were given chances and they turned those opportunities into awards.

Chaney, the sixth-year head coach at Temple, was selected coach of the year and Hawkins, the nation's leading scorer at Bradley this season, was chosen player of the year as The Associated Press announced its annual awards on Friday.

Temple finished the season 32-2 and earned its first No. 1 ranking and held it through the final poll. The Owls were defeated by Duke in the East Regional championship game.

Chaney never got the opportunity to play at Temple, a school located in his hometown of Philadelphia. Instead, he went to Bethune-Cookman and turned to a life of teaching and coaching with the accent on the former.

"I certainly want to thank the president of Temple for giving me an opportunity to coach at Temple University where at one time I looked forward to a scholarship but for whatever reasons I could not get into Temple at the time. I'm so old it's easy to understand what happended many, many years ago," said the 56-year-old Chaney, the first black to receive the coaching award. "That's one of the reasons I fight so desperately for youngsters today to be given a chance ... I hope I can continue to do that and I hope that people will not misplace or misunderstand a coach to provide opportunity for the young."

Chargers Win

BAYBORO — Pamlico County High School pushed across a run in the bottom of the ninth inning to squeeze past Farmville Central, 5-4, Friday in an Eastern Plains Conference baseball game.

The Hurricanes took the lead initially with three first inning runs. Kerry Willis walked and stole second, scoring on a double by Chris Warren. Jamie Reagan walked and both moved up on a wild pitch. William Respass then singled to score both runners.

Farmville scored once in the third only to see Pamlico match that in the fourth. Farmville got another run in the fifth to close within 4-2.

Then, in the top of the seventh, Farmville scored twice to tie it up. George Burnette led off with a double, scoring on another two-bagger by Mike Vandiford. Shae Terrell then reached on an error, allowing Vandiford to score, tying it at 4-4.

It stayed that way until the ninth, when Pamlico pushed over the winning run. Jimmy Byrd and Willis both singled and Guion Sawyer reached on an infield hit. Craig Mizelle then singled to drive in Byrd with the game-winning run.

Warren led the Pamlico hitting with two while Burnette had three to lead Farmville.

The Jaguars, now 3-4 overall and 0-1 in EPC play, returned to action Saturday and will continue action on Monday and Tuesday in the Pitt County Holiday Tournament at D.H. Conley.

LITTLEFIELD — Steven Tucker nailed a three-run homer in the bottom of the sixth inning to help Ayden-Grifton come from behind and top South Lenoir, 5-3, giving the Chargers their first win of the baseball season Friday.

South Lenoir took an early 1-0 lead before Ayden-Grifton tied it up in the fourth when Ronnell Peterson reached on an error and stole second. Gene Stancill followed with a double to drive in Peterson.

The Blue Devils regained the lead in the fifth by pushing across two more runs to make it 3-1, but the lead was shortlived.

Ayden-Grifton, keyed by Tucker's shot, scored four more runs in the sixth to take the lead. Peterson got things started with a single. Stancill followed by reaching on an error. Wayne Peacock came up after that and singled in Peterson. Tucker then nailed the game-winning shot.

Tucker went 2-3 with three RBI while Darryl Moye also added a 2-3 performance.

Ayden-Grifton moves to 1-5 on the year and 1-0 in the conference.

Texas Agent Reportedly Paid Coaches

NEW YORK (AP) — A Texas-based agent named Lance Jay Luchnick paid high school and college coaches to influence such future NBA players as Cliff Levingston, Ricky Pierce and Terry Catledge to sign with him, Newsday reported Sunday.

In a the first installment of a copyright two-part series the newspaper said that Luchnick, who lives in San Antonio and has an office in Houston, paid the coaches with the understanding that they were to keep some of the money and that some of it was to go to players.

Luchnick, 37, told the paper he has never used coaches to acquire clients or given coaches cash or gifts as paybacks for helping him sign players.

But he said that he has some favors for friends who are coaches. Confronted with check stubs from his corporate checking account, he acknowledged that he gave gifts and some cash payments to those coaches.

And he added:

"I would sure hope that a good friend of mine, if he's a coach, would speak highly about me to a prospective pro ball player."

NCAA rules prohibit members of college athletic departments from representing college athletes "directly or indirectly" in dealings with professional teams or receiving any kind of compensation or gratuities for the service.

Rick Evrard, director of legislative services for the NCAA, told Newsday that based on the newspaper's findings about Luchnick's relationship with coaches, he may have violated that rule. Evrard cited specifically Silas McKinnie, a former assistant coach at Rice, Alabama and South Alabama, whose activities with Luchnick are detailed in the Newsday story.

"The facts that you've presented would concern the NCAA membership enough for the Infractions Committee to review those sets of circumstances," he said. "We do certainly think that those facts offend enough of the language in the legislation to ask for a committee to review them, and the most logical committee would be the Infractions Committee."

Kentucky coach Eddie Sutton, president of the National Association of Basketball Coaches, told the newspaper that he believes there's nothing wrong with a coach advising players on selecting an agent. But, he said, a coach's own code of ethics should prevent him from accepting anything of value.

"I mean, a coach should never receive anything, in my opinion, from an agent," Sutton said. "I just think that's unethical. I don't know of any situations where it has been done, but I would be disappointed in any coach who does that."

The 42-year-old McKinnie, now the assistant athletic director at South Alabama, was the coach most frequently mentioned in the Newsday article.

According to the paper, he helped Luchnick recruit several players who became first-round draft picks in the NBA, including Buck Johnson and Ennis Whatley of Alabama and Catledge, who played for South Alabama. Catledge is now with the Washington Bullets, Williams with the Houston Rockets and Whatley is in the Continental Basketball Association after playing for the Chicago Bulls.

The paper also reported that when Levingston, who now plays for the Atlanta Hawks, was a junior at Wichita State in 1982, Luchnick agreed to give 30 percent of his 10 percent agent's commission on Levingston's contract to Ron Davis, Levinston's high school coach, if Davis would use his influence on the player.

That year, Luchnick represented five first-round picks in the NBA draft — Baylor's Terry Teagle, Rice's Pierce, Purdue's Keith Edmonson, Houston's Rob Williams and Levingston.

"I was the first attorney to ever represent five first-round draft picks in the NBA, which, to my knowledge, nobody (else) has done," the paper quoted him as saying in a deposition in the case.

"(Luchnick's) pattern is the same with everybody," Levingston told Newsday. "He's going to look and look until he finds that person who's really close to a player he wants, pull him to the side and sweet-talk him."

Luchnick acknowledged to Newsday that he gave McKinnie close to $3,500 over a 22-month period, while McKinnie coached at Rice and Alabama "to help him out on a few bills," including money to pay a delinquent American Express bill.

He said that none of those situations was related to his recruiting of those coaches' players and denied that McKinnie has ever recruited players for him. "Not at all," he said. "No way, shape or form."

McKinnie refused to be interviewed for the story, the paper said.

Picking All-Final Four Team Not Easy

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Picture yourself in a candy store, surrounded by sweets, a celebration of sugar for your taste buds to savor. The temptation is to dip into all of them and enjoy. But life has limits and that means you must be selective, choosing only a few and leaving the rest for someone else.

That job is very much like picking an all-time Final Four team. You will be forced to pass over some tasty candidates, but what you come away with should more than satisfy your basketball sweet tooth.

On the 50th anniversary of the NCAA Division I tournament, it seemed appropriate to pick a squad of the best Final Four players in history. The team goes 10 players deep, because nobody can play a full game without substitutes and because there's simply too much talent to stop at five. There may be too much talent to stop at 10.

Because basketball has evolved into a big man's game, we start in the middle with Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who was known as Lew Alcindor when he led UCLA to three straight championships in 1967-68-69.

Alcindor set no tournament records but was unquestionably the catalyst for those championships and was named Most Valuable Player in each of those Final Fours, a feat unmatched in the history of the event.

His uncanny ability to consistently play over the rim forced the NCAA to temporarily bar dunking because he was so efficient at the maneuver. Forcing a rule change makes you an automatic choice on this team.

If the big man needs a rest, we have plenty of backup talent. You might want to go with Bill Walton, who succeeded Alcindor at UCLA and was the MVP of the Bruins' 1972 and 1973 championships. In the '73 title game, he scored 44 points, missing just one of 22 field goal attempts against Memphis State. It ranks as the most efficient championship game any player has ever played.

Or, if you prefer a little defense, how about Bill Russell, who led San Francisco to consecutive titles in 1955-56?

Russell merely revolutionized the center position, casually swatting away enemy shots one end of the court and gently guiding teammates' attempts into the basket at the other end. He was MVP of the 1955 tournament and, like Alcindor later, forced rule changes with the coaches widening the three-second lane from six feet to 12 and outlawing offensive goaltending. Another automatic pick.

Our team needs experience, so from the Final Four's first decade, 7-footer Bob Kurland gets the call. He also was a two-time MVP, helping Oklahoma State to consecutive championships in 1945-46.

Except for Walton's 44-point outburst against Memphis State, these four centers did not have big scoring games. However, points on this team could come from other sources.

For firepower, there's Princeton's Bill Bradley, who set a record with 58 points against Wichita State in the third place game at the 1965 tournament. He was 22-for-29 from the field that night and no Final Four player ever scored more points in a single game.

At the other forward, you could use Elvin Hayes of Houston, who led the tournament in total points for two straight years, 1967-68. His 167 points for five games in 1968 remain the total points record for a single tournament. And his 24 rebounds in the semifinal game against UCLA a year earlier is another record that still stands, two decades later.

If you prefer to get your points from the backcourt, you could go with Gail Goodrich of UCLA and Hal Lear of Temple.

In the 1965 title game against Michigan, Goodrich scored 42 points, including a record 18 free throws. A decade before that in 1956, Lear had 48 for Temple in the consolation third place game against SMU.

To complement Lear and Goodrich at the guards, swing back to the modern era and complete the 10-man team with two of the game's most innovative players, Magic Johnson from Michigan State's 1979 champions and Isiah Thomas from Indiana's 1981 winners.

Both Johnson and Thomas appeared just once in the Final Four, each in their sophomore years, and each won the MVP award before moving on to stardom in the NBA.

The reserve list — for emergency injury replacements — can include Jerry Lucas, a consecutive MVP winner with Ohio State in 1960-61, and Alex Groza, who did the same thing for Kentucky in 1948-49.

No team can win without a coach and no coach has won as many Final Fours as the legendary John Wooden of UCLA. From 1964-75, a span of 12 years, Wooden's Bruins captured the national title 10 times, including seven in a row.

UCLA's string of championships was interrupted only by Texas-El Paso in 1966 and North Carolina State in 1974. Four of Wooden's title teams completed their seasons undefeated at 30-0 and three others went 29-1.

Since the end of UCLA's dynasty with Wooden's retirement in 1975, nine teams have won the NCAA title with only Indiana (3) and Louisville (2) capturing more than one crown.

La. Tech, Auburn Gain Finals

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Tennessee, the defending champion, was denied a chance to repeat as the NCAA women's basketball champion, but the Southeastern Conference will have another representative in the finals.

It'll be third-ranked Auburn, appearing in the Final Four for the first time, and fifth-rated Louisiana Tech, winner of the first NCAA women's championship in 1982, in the 1988 title game Sunday in the Tacoma Dome.

Louisiana Tech, 31-2, reached the finals Friday night by knocking off top-ranked Tennessee 68-59 in the first semifinal game and Auburn, 32-2, stopped Long Beach State's running game 68-55 in the semifinal nightcap. Tennessee had a 22-game winning streak broken and Long Beach State had a 20-game victory string snapped.

"I wasn't surprised Louisiana Tech beat Tennessee," Auburn Coach Joe Ciampi said. "Any time Leon (Louisiana Tech Coach Leon Barmore) has time to prepare for one game, he's got a good shot at beating you. I hope he doesn't have enough time to prepare for us."

Barmore's Lady Techsters avenged a 67-44 loss to Tennessee in last year's NCAA title game in Austin, Texas.

"If you would have been kicked like we were a year ago, it's hard not to be inspired," said Barmore. "We wanted to give a good account of ourselves and show we could play. That was our motivation."

Auburn will counter with 6-2 junior center Vickie Orr and 6-3 senior forward Sharon Stewart.

"Louisiana Tech is known to be physical and we're physical," said Ciampi. "It'll be a physical game."

Both the Lady Techsters and Auburn had all their starters in double figures in scoring. Guard Ruthie Bolton had 18 points to lead the Lady Tigers.

Louisiana Tech led Tennessee 36-23 at halftime, but the Lady Vols cut the deficit to five points at 48-43 with 9:12 to go. Barmore called a timeout and Louisiana Tech scored nine of the next 11 points to take a 57-45 lead.

"They (the Lady Vols) were going inside a little better than we were," Barmore said. "We simply were not aggressive offensively. I felt like we got a little better movement after the timeout."

All Tennessee Coach Pat Summitt could do was sit on the bench and grimace.

"I thought we backed off and they took it at us," she said. "That's the mark of a great team to me."

Louisiana Tech, which had lost 76-74 to Tennessee in Knoxville during the regular season, outrebounded the Lady Vols 45-36, with both Lacy and 6-0 junior forward Nora Lewis pulling down 10 rebounds.

Sheila Frost, Tennessee's 6-4 junior center and No. 2 scorer with 14.9 average, was held to three free throws. Tennessee shot just 37 percent from the floor.

"I think they (Louisiana Tech) came here to win a national championship," Summitt said with a sigh.

In the Auburn-Long Beach State matchup, the 49ers wanted to run and Ciampi wanted to slow them to a walk. Ciampi's strategy worked.

The Lady Tigers won on a night when Long Beach State's highly touted guard tandem of Penny Toler and Traci Waites went a combined 15 of 37 from the floor. Toler finished with 19 points.

The 49ers made it tense in the second half, though. Long Beach State went ahead 46-42 with 9:10 to go with an 11-0 run as Toler reeled off seven straight points.

"Basketball is a game of streaks," Ciampi said. "When you're dominanted by your perimeter game like Long Beach State is, you're going to have some bad nights."

In the final nine minutes, Auburn outscored its West Coast opponent 26-9 as Ruthie Bolton scored 12 of her points, including six straight free throws.

Auburn won on a night when both teams shot 39 percent.

Disappointed for the second straight year with her team's performance in the Final Four, Long Beach State Coach Joan Bonvicini said she was looking forward "to a great game" between Auburn and Louisiana Tech.

"Obviously, both these teams are real good rebounding teams," she said.

GOLF NOTES — The annual Pitt County Heart Association's golf tournament will be held at Brook Valley Country Club on May 3.

The tournament is open to all amateur men and women in teams of four. The winning foursome will advance to the Pro-Am Golf Championship where they will compete for a $100,000 purse.

That championship will be held at Mid Pines Resort in Pinehurst on July 29-31.

A tax-deductable entry fee for the Brook Valley tournament is $140 per team and includes greens fees and a social following the tournament.

Proceeds from the event will help fund the American Heart Association's research.

For more information on the tournament, contact John Lamonica at Brook Valley at 765-5500.

The second annual Pitt Community College Benefit Golf Tournament has been scheduled for April 21 at Farmville Golf and Country Club.

A four-person superball format will be used and pairings will be made up by PCC officials, using handicaps supplied by the entrants.

Prizes will be awarded for the first four teams, with additional prizes available for aces on certain holes, as well as closest to the pin and longest drives.

An 11:30 light lunch is included, with a shotgun start at noon. A dinner will follow play, at which time prizes will be awarded.

The entry fee is $40 per person and includes green fees, cart, the meals and other activities.

For more information, or to entry, contact Mary Langston, P.O. Drawer 7007, Greenville, N.C. 27835, or call 756-3130, Ext. 220.

□ □ □

The Brook Valley Ladies Golf Association held its Member-Member Tournament this past week.

The team of Missy Decker and Wanda Bonds took first low gross with an 83 while Elsie Wilson and Martha Alcorn took first low net with a 66.

Second low net went to the team of Susan Cox and Dorothy Wooles with a 67, while Wanda Bonds had the low gross individual score with an 88.

Sandra Smith won the drive closest to a line on the second hole while Mary Bruton took long putt honors on the fifth hole. Dorothy Wooles had the closest shot to the pin on the 12th hole.

The Century 21 Home Realty Regional Golf Classic for Easter Seals will be held at Carolina Pines Country Club in Havelock, on May 22.

The tournament, one of 27 regionals across North Carolina, will have two divisions in an 18-hole Better Ball of Pair format. One division is for men's team and the other for a mixed twosome.

A 1 p.m. shotgun start will be used.

Gross and net winners in each division will advance to the state championship, a 36-hole event set for Oct. 13-14 at Raintree County Club in Matthews.

An entry fee of $40 per person is charged, and it includes greens fees, cart and a barbecue.

HERE'S WHO MAKES OUR LIFETIME GUARANTEE ON CAR REPAIRS POSSIBLE.

Because we offer the free Lifetime Service Guarantee on car repairs, my job as service manager is a little tougher. I have to make sure car repairs are done right the first time. Because if they're not, it's our problem, not yours.

Here's how the Lifetime Service Guarantee works. If you pay for any covered repair and it has to be done again, we fix it free. That's free parts and free labor. For as long as you own your Ford, Lincoln, Mercury, Merkur or Ford light truck.

The Lifetime Service Guarantee covers thousands of parts and repairs. And it doesn't matter how old your vehicle is, how many miles are on it, or even where you bought it. Add all this up and you've got the best car repair guarantee in America.

Ask us to see a copy of the Lifetime Service Guarantee. Then give us a chance to turn our guarantee into a lifetime reality.

FARMVILLE — Pamlico County jumped on top early and cruised to a 16-8 win over Farmville Central in a high school softball game Friday afternoon.

Pamlico wasted no time in taking command, scoring five runs in the first and followed that up with two more runs in the second.

Farmville scored one run in the first and another in the second to pull within 7-2 but the Lady Hurricanes added another run in the fourth to make it 8-2.

Diane Hudson tried to get the Lady Jaguars back into the game as she doubled in two runs in the fourth to key a three-run inning but that was as close as Farmville would get.

Pamlico added four runs in the fifth, two more in the sixth and two others in the seventh.

Gloria Brown went 3-4 to lead Farmville with one triple. The Lady Jaguars fall to 0-7 and 0-1 in the EPC and return to action April 14 at home against North Pitt.

SNOW HILL — North Pitt pushed across three runs in the top of the seventh to break a 6-6 tie and went on to take a 9-7 Eastern Plains Conference softball victory Friday over hosting Greene Central.

Greene Central pushed across a pair of runs in each of the first three innings to take a 6-0 lead.

But North Pitt rallied in the fourth. Sebrina Baker reached on an error to open the sixth for the Pant-Hers. Eva Harris followed by reaching on another error. Tracy Palmer then singled to score Baker and move Harris to third.

Renee Jacobs reached off an error which allowed Harris to score and make it 6-2. Keisha Pilgreen followed by also reaching on an error, this one allowing Palmer to score. Tonya Clemons then singled in Jacobs and Pilgreen to make it 6-5. Gwen Pilgreen followed with a single to score Clemons and tie the game.

North Pitt then took the lead in the seventh as Gwen Pilgreen led off with a single. Maggie Blount followed with another single. Teale then reached on an error to load the bases. Harris reached on an error which scored Pilgreen and gave the Pant-Hers the lead. Palmer then reached off an error and allowed Blount and Teale to score.

Gwen Pilgreen went 4-4 to lead the Pant-HErs while Laticia Warren went 4-4 to lead the Lady Rams.

North Pitt, now 2-3 overall and 1-0 in the EPC, returns to action April 12 at Ayden-Grifton.

Receives Wildlife Award

Anthony W. Mullis of Greenville accepts an award from Gov. Jim Martin as Wildlife Conservationist of the Year. He was honored during the N.C. Wildlife Federation's annual presentation of the Governor's Conservation Awards. Mullis received the award for his extensive research on the striped bass fish population.

Greenville Man Named Conservationist of Year

Anthony W. Mullis of Greenville, an employee of the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission, was named Wildlife Conservationist of the Year last week during the 43rd annual convention of the North Carolina Wildlife Federation.

Gov. Jim Martin presented the awards in 19 wildlife and environmental categories. Mullis, a native of Burlington, is the Commission's research coordinator in the coastal region. He received the award for his work in the development of the Commission's striped bass management program.

"It's a heck of a honor to have the work recognized like this," Mullis said Saturday. "I look at this award as recognition of our entire striped bass program and the work of a lot of people, as opposed to entirely of an individual, of me."

Mullis has worked for the Commission since 1974 following his graduation from the University of Georgia with a master's degree in fisheries science. He is a member of the American Fisheries Society, Ducks Unlimited and is the president of the N.C. Fishery Workers Association.

"I'm responsible for the striped bass program, but there's a lot of people working on it," he commented. "It's a good feeling to be recognized. It makes you feel like somebody is out there looking. It lets you know people are watching and they approve of the program."

As chairman of the American Fisheries Society's Southern Division Striped Bass Committee in 1987, Mullis guided the revision of "Guidelines for Striped Bass Culture," a manual used by striped bass culturists throughout the country. In the past year, he has led a task force to evaluate the state's striped bass stocking needs and has developed a course of action to meet those needs.

Mullis said the striped bass program is aimed at rejuvenating reservoir and coastal populations of striped bass.

"The striped bass program in the state's reservoirs was supported in the past by fish being stocked by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, but they have had some cutbacks," Mullis said, adding that striped bass do not reproduce in reservoirs. "We have done quite a bit of work in the last couple of years to come up with some alternatives, such as nursery ponds and trades with other states for fish they need."

Coastal striped bass are self-reproducing, but those populations "are in trouble, too. They have experienced reduced reproductive success in the last 15 years and we're trying to determine the causes so we can preserve these stocks."

Mullis said he is in charge of both areas, but district biologists complete much of the work being done.

Spring Blues Blitz

Almost on cue, the first big bluefish blitz of the 1988 spring fishing season spread across the Outer Banks on Palm Sunday weekend. And last Monday, the blues were running at the Nags Head Fishing Pier when hundreds were feeding at day break, according to Eddie Blevins, pier manager.

More than 200 vehicles were reported at the north point of Oregon Inlet last Sunday, said Garry Oliver, manager of the Outer Banks Pier and Fishing Center. Blues and speckled trout were so plentiful last weekend that many were being caught by hand nets, he reported.

If you have never experienced a "Blue Blitz," it's a show you must see. The bluefish feed in a frenzy in the surf and will strike almost any lure. Oliver said the blues were running from Oregon Inlet north to Coquina Beach, South Nags Head, Kill Devil Hills and Kitty Hawk.

With excellent weather conditions predicted through Easter weekend, the blues were expected to remain in the area, offering a great chance for anglers to try their hands at catching big ones.

Meanwhile, the offshore charter boat fleets at Pirates Cove Marina, Hatteras Fishing Center, Albatross Fleet and Salty Dawg Marina were ready to launch their 1988 seasons this weekend.

Dare County's Outer Banks have more than 100 charter boats available for deep-sea fishing. With tuna already running, reservations are being taken now at all marinas.

Business Notes

Manager Is Named

Empire Brushes announced the appointment of Stanley W. Zicherman from manager of manufacturing operations to director of purchasing.

The company said Zicherman will be involved in the sourcing and acquisition of Empire's raw materials, tool crib inventories, and other purchased items. He will report to Jim Sloan, vice president of manufacturing.

Zicherman joined Empire at Port Chester, N.Y., in 1969 and within two years transferred to Greenville as manufacturing superintendent. By 1983 he assumed additional duties of the conventional and foam molding departments as manager of manufacturing operations.

A graduate of New York University with a bachelor's degree in management, he and his wife, Barbara, reside in the Greenville area. They have a son, Larry, and a daughter, Lisa.

PNB Fills Position

Planters National Bank announced that Mary V. Ellis has been hired as a newcomer representative in Greenville.

A native of Memphis, Tenn., Ms. Ellis previously worked for a financial services firm in Rocky Mount. She is a graduate of North Carolina Wesleyan College, where she received a bachelor's degree in business administration in 1984.

Planters Bank, a wholly-owned subsidiary of The Planters Corp., has 60 offices in 27 North Carolina communities.

Management Session

Ginger Longino, president of Travel Express in Greenville, recently participated in a three-day management seminar in New Orleans, sponsored by the national Institute of Certified Travel Agents.

Goes Retires, Ends 3 Decades On Job At Burroughs Wellcome

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

After being employed 30 years in all aspects of pharmaceutical manufacturing, James L. Goes of the Burroughs Wellcome Company retired Thursday as general manager of the Burroughs Wellcome plant in Greenville.

Goes had responsibility for all site services of the Greenville manufacturing complex, along with various public and government relations duties.

Goes said he intends to stay in the area, eventually moving to the Outer Banks near Kitty Hawk where his children live. He indicated, however, that he still intends to stay busy.

"I hope to do some overseas consulting work and maybe do a little teaching," he said.

Goes began his career at Burroughs Wellcome in 1959 as a line manager in the tablet production area. Previous to that, Goes spent several years in pharmaceutical sales at other companies following his graduation from Temple University with a degree in pharmacy and four years of service in the military.

Goes moved through the ranks at Burrough Wellcome, becoming department head of the drug stock department, then being named head of the general packaging division.

In late 1966, Goes traveled south of the border to help in the construction and planning of the company's pharmaceutical plant in Monteray, Mexico, an assignment which Goes said he regards as one of his most significant achievements.

"I was the only person from Burroughs Wellcome down there at the time," he said. "I had to import all of the equipment, sort it and also train a staff. By the time I left the plant after four years there, the plant was running in the black," he said.

Goes became pharmaceutical production manager in 1973, with direct responsibility for the company's four major divisions, comprising the major production departments. In early 1984 Goes was promoted to the position of general manager of the entire site.

During his years of employment in Greenville, Goes said he has seen some significant changes occur at the Burroughs Wellcome site on N.C. 11, most notably in the number of personnel and in volume of sales.

When he first came to the site, approximately 300 people were on the payroll. Now the company boasts a work work of over 1,585 people. In addition, Goes said company sales in the early '70s were at about $100 million. Today that sales figure is approximately $800 million.

Contributing to that growth, according to Goes, is the company's strong commitment to the research and development of new pharmaceuticals.

"Our research people are probably some of the best antiviral researchers in the world," he said. "Discoveries which helped control Herpes came from that group. The only product that's been approved for the treatment of AIDS, Retrovir (AZT), has done a tremendous job in helping to control and prolong the life of people with AIDS. Hopefully from the same research will come a cure," he added.

Goes said he's seen not only some changes at Burroughs Wellcome through the years, but also in the city of Greenville.

"The advent of the new medical school has made a tremendous difference in the community. The scarcity of medical care here was one of the early concerns about the community, and now we have fantastic medical facilities here in town."

Besides his work at Burroughs Wellcome, Goes has been active in the community as well. He has been a member of the Pitt County United Way Board of Directors, the Salvation Army Advisory Board, The East Carolina University Foundation, and a member of the board of directors of both Evergreen and Adventures in Health.

In addition, he has served on various committees for Pitt County schools, including the Rural Education Committee, the Model math-Science Committee and the Junior ROTC Advisory Committee.

"I've been active in a lot of things having to do with the arts and I've also enjoyed working with people in the school system. We (Burroughs Wellcome) take a particular interest in what goes on in the schools and helping out where we can," he said.

Sale Of Big Chain May Shake Up Retail Industry

By JOYCE M. ROSENBERG
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The sale of Federated Department Stores Inc. to Campeau Corp. is more than just a retailer changing hands. Analysts fear the $6.58 billion deal may lead to more centralization and less innovation in the retail industry.

When ownership of the nation's fifth-largest retailer passes to Campeau, the Toronto-based developer will do what it did when it acquired Allied Stores Corp. at the end of 1986: pare the company down, sell its less attractive divisions and keep its most profitable stores.

The forecasts are that Federated, now a collection of diverse department and specialty stores, will become a centralized retailer with few differences among its various units.

"The structure will be much more of a chain store company," said Walter Loeb, a retail industry analyst with the investment firm Morgan Stanley & Co.

Robert H. Morosky, the president of Allied Stores, denied Saturday that Campeau would centralize buying operations of Federated department store divisions that include Bloomingdale's and Abraham & Straus in New York, Lazarus in the Midwest and Burdine's in Florida.

Operations such as distribution will be centralized, he said, but the stores' merchandise mix "will be determined by the local department store divisions."

However, Loeb predicted that under Campeau, Federated would consolidate operations such as purchasing and marketing that are now carried out separately by the Federated units.

"The merchandise will be uniform," said Loeb, who has been tracking the industry for almost 40 years. "It's bad for the whole industry."

Retail industry watchers want to see what Loeb called "innovativeness and testing," which helps develop new styles and trends. When there are more retailers buying and experimenting, there is a greater opportunity for growth in the retail industry.

Friday's announcement of an agreement between Federated and Campeau ended a grueling takeover battle that began Jan. 25. Federated resisted Campeau's overtures for a month, agreed to negotiate with the Canadian company, and then in early March accepted a buyout offer from R.H. Macy & Co. Inc.

The wrangling continued for yet another month, until Macy agreed on Friday to bow out. But the New York-based retailer came away from the fight with the Federated divisions it wanted most, Bullock's stores in California and the Southwest and the San Francisco-based I. Magnin chain.

Many retail industry analysts were rooting for Macy to win the battle outright. They believed Macy would have re-energized Federated's department store divisions in much the way Macy has revitalized its own image in recent years.

Campeau, they believed, was interested more in Federated's real estate than its retail operations. The stores would give Campeau Chairman Robert Campeau an instant entree into major shopping malls in the United States.

The expected sale of several of Federated's divisions represents a chance for the retailing industry to move in a new direction, but whether that happens depends on who buys the stores.

Morosky said Campeau will retain Bloomingdale's, Abraham & Straus, Lazarus and Burdine's, as well as Tennessee-based Goldsmith's and Atlanta-based Rich's department stores.

Campeau has already agreed to sell Federated's Texas-based Foley's and Boston-based Filene's department stores to May Department Stores Co.

Federated's discount and specialty store chains and its supermarkets divisions are expected to go on the block. However, Morosky said, "After we complete our review, we might choose to keep certain divisions."

Campeau wants to sell some of the divisions to pay off debt incurred in the Federated purchase and to simplify operations, Morosky said.

Thomas Tashjian, an analyst with the Los Angeles investment firm Seidler Amdec Securities Inc., said recently that if Campeau sells Federated's units to larger companies — such as May — it would continue the trend toward central control and "sameness."

However, he said, if the stores are sold to smaller companies or to entrepreneurial management groups, it would mean increased competition, which in turn leads to growth in the retail industry.

"The long-term benefit is to the consumer," Tashjian said.

Morosky said Campeau already has received inquiries from retailers, existing management and real estate developers about some of the Federated stores. He said the stores would go on sale several days after the purchase of Federated is completed.

Many Taxpayers Find New Reforms Mean Higher, Not Lower, Tax Bills

By BILL SING
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

Most Americans will pay less taxes this year, thanks to tax reform. But Norm Zareski will not be one of them.

Due in part to losing several key tax deductions and reduced tax shelter benefits, the 49-year-old computer sales executive from Palos Verdes Estates, Calif., discovered last week — to his surprise — that the total tax liability for him and his wife will jump sixfold, to about $27,000 from $4,300 last year, despite little change in their income.

"It's shocking to look at the difference," says Zareski, who will have to dip into savings, sell shares in a mutual fund and scale back celebrating his 25th wedding anniversary to pay the tax bill. "We've always handled our money conservatively, never getting into big debts, and all of a sudden this surprise. ... It just got away from us this year."

The Zareskis are among many Americans completing their returns now and discovering to their dismay that their tax bills are higher, not lower, often because of loss of key deductions, quirks in tax rates or other factors.

Some, particularly high-income individuals with tax shelters, were forewarned by their accountants and thus are taking the news in stride. For them, reduced benefits for tax shelters and real estate, among other things, more than offset declines in tax rates.

But others, particularly middle-income taxpayers with few deductions and tax shelters, are angry. They had been led to believe that the new law would generally result in lower taxes for individuals and higher taxes for corporations.

These taxpayers' ire, coming on top of confusion and anxiety over the complexity of the new law and new tax forms, could reduce support for tax reform and result in the reinstatement of key tax breaks or other changes.

"People feel conned," says Sidney Kess, partner with the accounting house of Peat Marwick Main & Co. "Everybody was led to believe taxes would be going down."

Indeed, most people are expected to pay lower taxes for 1987 returns, thanks largely to lower tax rates. The congressional Joint Committee on Taxation estimated in October 1986, when tax overhaul was passed, that only 18.5 percent of all taxpayers would pay more tax for 1987 returns, compared to the previous year.

That percentage declines for lower-income taxpayers. Only 12.2 percent of those with annual adjusted gross incomes under $10,000 will pay more this year, the committee estimated. By contrast, 53.7 percent of those with adjusted gross incomes between $75,000 and $100,000 were expected to pay more tax.

A much higher percentage of taxpayers may perceive — possibly incorrectly — that their taxes will be higher this year. A Washington Post-ABC News poll released last week, for example, shows that nearly six in 10 taxpayers expect to pay more this year.

But these taxpayers may believe they are paying more only because their refunds are lower. Indeed, many taxpayers incorrectly adjusted their withholding on W-4 forms last year, resulting in severe cases of over-withholding or under-withholding. Those who were under-withheld may be socked with large additional tax due April 15, instead of getting refunds as they normally expect. However, their total tax liability actually may have declined.

Many of those taxpayers with lower bills do not itemize deductions and thus are not touched by tax reform's closing of various loopholes and writeoffs.

Others are lowering their taxes by using what few tax breaks are preserved under tax reform. Karen Hew, 26, an accountant in Rancho Santa Margarita, Calif., says she cut her taxes simply because she bought a house recently and is now taking a deduction for mortgage interest for the first time.

But higher taxes are coming as a shock to many individuals, particularly middle-income taxpayers who prepare their own returns and thus were not forewarned by accountants or other financial experts that tax changes would affect them adversely. Many of these higher-tax individuals are only beginning to fill out returns now; those who expected lower tax bills, or higher refunds, tended to file earlier.

However, even some taxpayers who use professional preparers have been surprised by higher bills. They had little advance warning because their practitioners have been snowed under, far behind in processing returns because of glitches in computer tax software, delays in receiving K-1 income-statement forms from limited partnerships, and simple frustration.

Some lower-income taxpayers appear to be victims of quirks in tax rates. Louis Gettleson, a 72-year-old retired Los Angeles store owner, figured there was no way his taxes should go up much, because his taxable income of about $8,500 did not change much from the year before, and he does not itemize.

But due to a quirk in tax rates, in which his income is taxed between 11 percent and 15 percent this year versus between 0 percent and 14 percent last year, Gettleson's tax bill will double, to about $1,151 from $559.

Perhaps the most likely group of middle-income taxpayers to be hit with higher taxes will be those with an unfortunate combination of writeoffs rolled back under tax reform.

Couples with both spouses working, for example, may lose $7,000 in deductions right off the bat. First, the two-earner deduction for working spouses, worth up to $3,000 in deductions, has been repealed. Second, each spouse may lose $2,000 in writeoffs for contributions to individual retirement accounts, which are no longer deductible for higher-income individuals covered by qualified company retirement plans.

Federal Pork Report Falls Short Of Market's Fears

By DAVID DISHNEAU
Associated Press Writer

The contract for June delivery of live hogs plunged the 150-point limit for daily trading Thursday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange in a late sell-off ahead of an important government report, analysts said.

On other markets, in mostly thin trading ahead of the three-day weekend, grains and soybeans were mixed; precious metals retreated; energy fu-tures were mixed; and stock-index futures advanced.

Speculation that the Agriculture Department's quarterly 10-state hogs and pigs report would prove bearish for the pork complex sparked the late plunge in hog prices, analysts said.

But when the report came out after the close, experts called it neutral to bullish.

The report showed the hog and pig count in states that account for 80 percent of U.S. production at about 40.5 million head as of March 1, a 6 percent increase over the same date a year ago.

The average of analysts' pre-report estimates was a 5.9 percent increase. The market had already adjusted to reflect the estimates, so many analysts termed the report neutral for pork futures prices.

But a breakdown of the report showed relatively small increases of 3 percent for hogs weighing 60-119 pounds, and 4 percent for hogs weighing 120-179 pounds.

Those animals will be coming to market in April and May, resulting in a smaller increase in slaughters than the market experienced in March, said Tom O'Hare, an analyst in New York with Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co.

The likely near-term outcome is slightly higher pork futures prices, especially on contracts for delivery in the summer and fall, O'Hare said.

"Initially, it may help the back months and the fronts may sit still," he said. "But as people realize that kills are not picking up, I think it's going to help everything."

Live cattle settled .10 cent to .58 cent lower with the April contract at 74.90 cents a pound; feeder cattle were .45 cent low-er to .05 cent higher with March at 82.77 cents a pound; hogs were 1.50 cents lower to .17 cent higher with April at 45.52 cents a pound; frozen pork bellies were .42 cent lower to .50 cent higher with May at 56.12 cents a pound.

Grain and soybean futures finished mixed on the Chicago Board of Trade ahead of two eagerly awaited government re-ports.

The Agriculture Department's annual report on spring planting intentions and its quarterly report on grain stocks, both issued after the close, were construed as very bullish for soybeans and slightly bearish for corn and wheat.

The plantings report, based on farmer surveys conducted in March, predicted about a 1 percent increase in soybean acreage to 57.9 million acres. The number was well below the average pre-report estimate of 59.1 million acres.

Soybean stocks, estimated at nearly 1.15 billion bushels as of March 1, were slightly below the average pre-report estimate.

Because the markets will be closed Friday, they cannot re-act to the reports until Monday. Analysts said they expected soybean futures prices to climb sharply to encourage more farmers to plant soybeans.

During the next two weeks, "I think we may go 30 to 60 cents higher from (current) levels," said Cathy Leow, as-sistant vice president of Thom-son-McKinnon Securities Inc.

The reports showed corn planting intentions at 66.9 million acres, up 2 percent from last year but slightly below ex-pectations. That number was offset by the corn stocks estimate of 7.6 billion bushels, slightly above pre-report estimates.

Wheat plantings were estimated at about 65 million acres, down very slightly from last year's total, while wheat stocks were pegged at 1.9 billion bushels, down significantly from last year but above expectations.

In trading Thursday, wheat settled 3 cents lower to ½ cent higher with May at $2.99¼ a bushel; corn was ¼ cent lower to ½ cent higher with May at $2.09¾ a bushel; oats were 1½ cents to 3 cents higher with May at $1.61½ a bushel; soy-beans were 3 cents to 4½ cents higher with May at $6.53½ a bushel.

Gold settled $3.40 lower across the board with April at $454.40 a troy ounce; silver was 0.2 cent to 1 cent lower with April at $6.755 a troy ounce.

West Texas Intermediate crude oil settled unchanged to 1 cent higher with May at $17.08 a barrel; heating oil was .24 cent to .45 cent lower with April at 48.15 cents a gallon; unleaded gasoline was .15 cent lower to .02 cent higher with April at 48.67 cents a gallon.

Chrysler Contract Is Expected

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp.'s labor problems, inflamed by the closing of a Wisconsin plant and the threatened sale of a parts subsidiary, are not expected to prevent it and the United Auto Workers from reaching a settlement in contract talks this month.

Since Chrysler backed down in early March from the planned sale of its 28,000-worker Acustar Inc. parts subsidiary, caustic rhetoric and threats of crippling strikes have been replaced by silence as negotiators prepare demands and strategies for the opening of talks April 18.

The union's demands will be discussed and approved by the 140-member UAW national Chrysler council during a meeting this week in Kansas City, Mo.

The talks are likely to be much less dramatic than the unrest that led to Chrysler's agreement to negotiate early, since the contract must follow an industry pattern contract established last fall at Ford Motor Co. and used at General Motors Corp.

"The framework should be there, and the readiness to bargain early should generally be an admission that things will go smoothly," said Harley Shaiken, labor and technology expert at the University of California at San Diego.

However, Shaiken added: "Given all the trauma (at Chrysler) in recent years, there could be a surprise. There is discontent in Chrysler plants, a real unease that could come out in this bargaining."

Chrysler's contract covering 59,500 active workers and 8,000 on layoff expires Sept. 14. The UAW wanted to adapt the three-year Ford and GM contracts to Chrysler last fall.

Chrysler, however, didn't agree until it backed off from the Acustar sale, realizing it had opened a wound that would only fester if left until the normal mid-July opening of talks.

Chrysler's workers agreed to concessions in the early 1980s to help the company survive its brush with bankruptcy.

Many workers say they are disillusioned because a spirit of camaraderie, of fighting together, has disappeared now that Chrysler is in the black and their contributions aren't so keenly needed or appreciated.

"The average auto worker at Chrysler in 1979-81 had no business assuming they were going to have a job there. But they made it through beautifully, the company's done very well. To now have to start worrying about your job is very nerve-wracking," said Michael Luckey, an independent auto industry analyst who has worked closely with Chrysler.

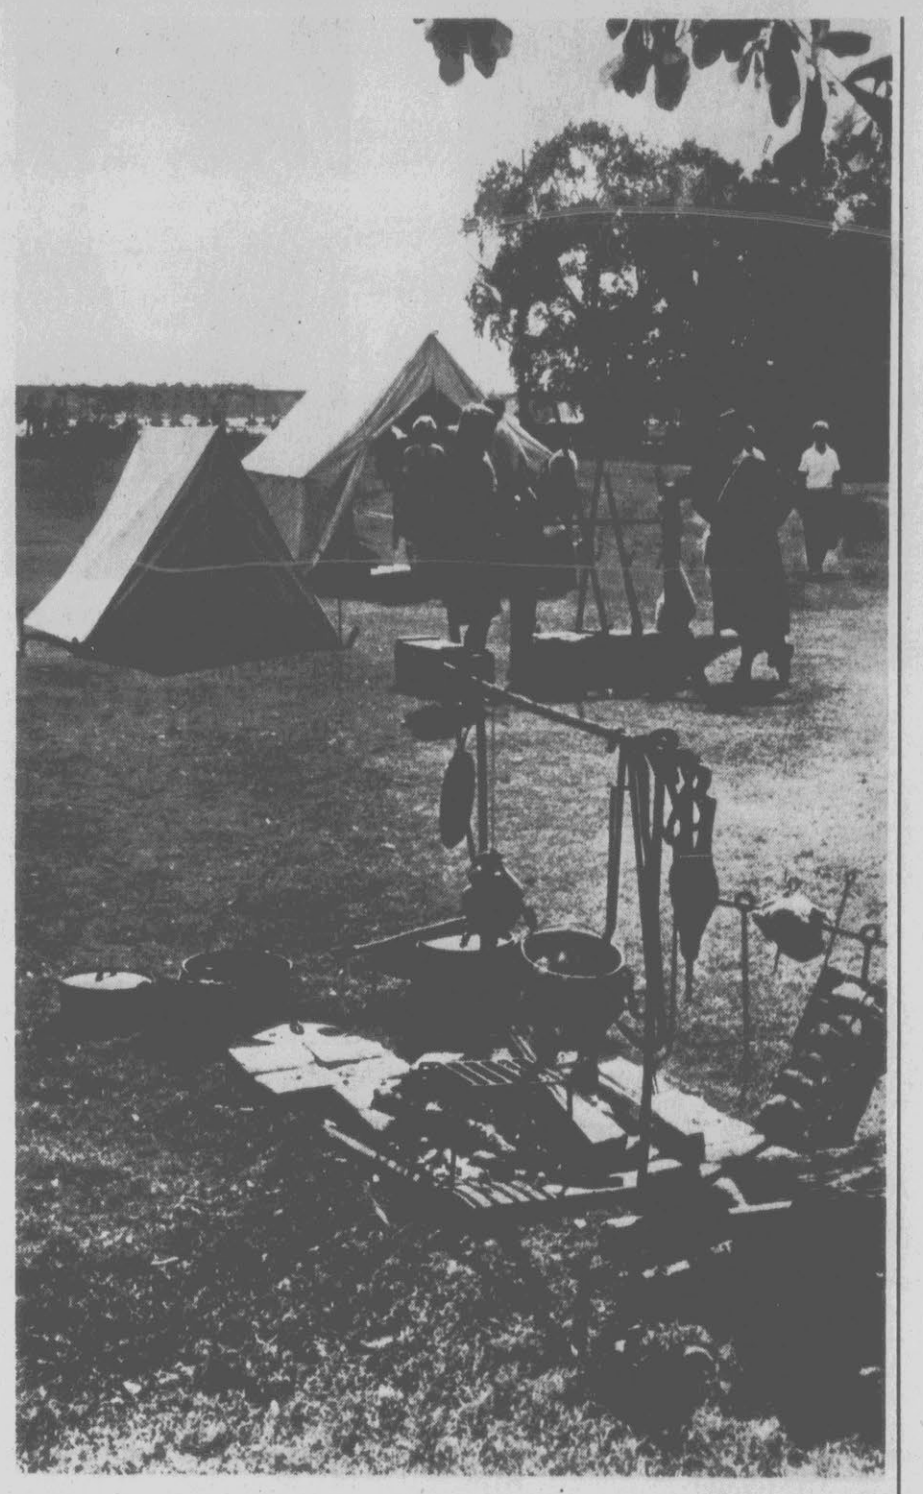
MAUDE MOORE LATHAM GARDEN — This spr ing,all nine gardens at Tryon Palace will provide an array of flowers. More than 30,000 tulips are expected to be at their peak this month.



HIGHLAND REGIMENT — The N.C. Highland Regiment will drill and demonstrate the lifestyle of yesterday's soldiers on Colonial Living Day.

Springtime Gardens Provide Enchantment

NEW BERN — Weaving intricate patterns of shape, texture and color, the springtime gardens at Tryon Palace provide an array of flowers — daffodils, tulips, flowering cherry trees, pansies and violets.

The gardens at the palace today use these flowers in a way they would have been used 200 years ago. The major documentation of gardens on the grounds is a 1769 map by French mapmaker, C.J. Sauthier, which depicts several carefully planned gardens. Many, however, believe these were never realized as the Tryons only inhabited their "palace" for 13 months. Had they been completed, it is believed the current gardens are a representation of what would have been, as they are a depiction of a garden in the 1770s.

The care of the nine gardens throughout the 13-acre palace complex is the responsibility of Herb Rea, palace horticulturist, and Susan Ferguson, assistant horticulturist.

Rea has spent years researching historic plants and balancing the color and texture of one flower against another and creating gardens of lasting beauty. To his credit, the Stanly House garden was awarded the Judges Award by the American Association of Nurserymen, Inc.

Planned events in New Bern this spring are the Historic New Bern Homes and Gardens Tour Friday and Saturday. The palace complex gardens will be a part of the tour. The Tryon Palace Gardener's Sunday will next Sunday from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

More than 30 craftspeople will demonstrate their colonial-era skills throughout the gardens and grounds on Colonial Living Day at the palace from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. May 28. Colonial games for children, entertainment, special events and demonstrations by the N.C. Highland Regiment will be included.

The eighth annual season of dreams tours from out of the palace's past, including Royal Governor and Mrs. William Tryon will be shared in "Moments in History" from May 30 through Aug. 11.

To Confront Cancer, Child Turns To Writing

By VICTOR COHN
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — There is no harder role than being a patient when the diagnosis threatens life. Sometimes doing something helps.

Nearly four years ago, a 6-year-old boy named Jason had to be told he had cancer. He did something. He wrote a book.

Newspapers heard about it and printed stories. A publisher read them and produced Jason's book. Monday, 10-year-old Jason Gaes of Worthington, Minn., received an American Cancer Society Courage Award as part of a two-day celebration here of the society's 75th anniversary. Tuesday, he was among 57 cancer survivors honored at the White House.

The news about Jason is good. He is doing well after treatment. He looks well. As he says in his book, in a small boy's spelling:

"I want to tell you kids don't always die. If you get cansur dont be scared cause lots of people get over having cansur and grow up without dying. Like Mike Nelson and Doug Cerny and Vince Varpness and President Reagan and me."

The story started in June 1984. Jason and family — parents Craig and Geralyn, brothers Tim and Adam, baby sister Melissa — had just moved from Storm Lake, Iowa, to Minnesota. They were back in Storm Lake visiting, and Jason and his Uncle Terry were playing with a magnifying flashlight.

"Open up your mouth and let me see if you've got any cavities," Terry told Jason.

What Terry saw was an odd bump. A dentist the next day sent them to a surgeon who did a biopsy, then told Craig and Geralyn, "It's a lymphoma."

"Craig asked if it was all right to take Jason home," Geralyn remembers. "The doctors just looked at each other. They mentioned the word 'malignancy.' I almost stopped breathing."

That evening, as she cuddled Jason, he stirred and said, "Mom, I got this funny bump in my stomach."

Another tumor was growing. The Gaeses called the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., and drove almost all night.

By the time Jason was examined the next day the golf-ball-sized "bump" was the size of a grapefruit. A fast growing Burkitt's lymphoma, the doctors said. There were other tumors, too. The outlook was not good. Jason might not reach his seventh birthday, three months away.

At 4 a.m. the next day chemotherapy began. A few days later the doctors added radiation. One day he walked into a shower and left it bald, hair going down the drain.

To give him some motivation, his parents told him he could wish for something very special. He asked for a party where "all the ladies would wear new dresses and all the men drink beer" and have a good time.

"The drs in Rochester found lots of more bumps inside of me. There called toomers ... so I take medasin that melts those. It's called keymotharupy. ... Sometimes keymotharupy makes you sick and you throw up. Sometimes you looz your hair. ... Mostly kids don't care when your bald. And if they laff or make fun there not very good friends anyway. ...

"The spinals and bone mairos (tests of the bone marrow) are bad ... but they go faster if you curl up tight and try to relacks. That's hard to do but try thinking about your party till the bad part is over."

Jason underwent treatment for 21 months. He became weak and haggard. Sometimes he said, "It's not fair," and once he wanted to give up. "I don't want to do this any more," he said.

But he continued and was able to go back to school. He went to classes with a book in one hand and a barf can in the other.

"We talked a lot," his mother says. She and Jason would curl up in a chair and talk about the things that frightened him.

"Being scared is a bad part of cansur too. It makes you feel bad. But Dr. Karen (Karen Bringelsen, one of his Mayo doctors) will tell you what is going to hurt. So you don't need to be afraid of everything. It doesn't help to be afraid anyway."

In mid-1985 his mother read him parts of a book by another boy with cancer. The boy had died before finishing it. "Why don't they write a book about a kid who doesn't die?" Jason protested. "I ought to write a book about someone who doesn't die."

"I said, 'Why don't you?' " his mother remembers. "But I didn't take it seriously."

Jason went right up to his room and started dictating into a tape recorder. After a while he put his words on folded typing paper. Six months after that first conversation he came down with his book.

"Having cansur isn't fun. In fact it's the pits but it's not all bad either. You get lots of cards and presents when your in the hospital. You have to have cansur to get invited to go to Camp Courage. ...

"If you can find it get a poster that says, 'Help me to remember Lord that nothing is gonna happen today that you and me can't handle together.' Then hang it in your room and read it at night when your scared. If you get scared and cant quit go and talk to your Mom and she can rock you or rub your hair."

Jason's tumors all disappeared. His hair grew back. In March 1986 he had his last treatment. "The doctors don't ever say 'never' to you," says his mother, but they said that if he went a year without a recurrence, he would have every chance of a normal life.

Jason enlisted his older brother, Adam, then 10, and identical twin, Tim, as illustrators, and finished his book. "We gave him some guidance, but the writing is his," his mother says. "He wrote it, then he worked and reworked it."

In June, Jason had his party, with friends and family from 11 states gathering for a mass of thanksgiving — the family is strong in its Catholic faith — then dinner and five hours of music and dancing, with Jason in a tuxedo waltzing with then 2-year-old Melissa.

Jason is a normal, tawny-haired, energetic figure now on Worthington playgrounds. He likes swimming, basketball, football, skateboarding, biking. Also the Miami Dolphins. Also video games.

Except for the fact that he may need some dental surgery — the radiation retarded the movement of his permanent teeth — "you'd never know he was ever sick a day," his mother says.

The experience has not always been easy on the family. The medical bills have been largely covered by Craig Gaes' employer, a packing company, but "largely" still leaves $10,000 or $11,000 in bills. "The Mayo Clinic says there's no hurry," says Geralyn, "as long as we make an attempt."

There have been more news stories. Jason's picture was on the cover of the cancer society's Cancer News. There is a coming Home Box Office special, and he's already been on TV so often his mother has called him "Johnny Carson."

All of which makes Jason seem a bit older than his years. "It's kinda fun," he has said of all the notice. "I'm glad kids are reading my book. Adults can read it too, I guess. They might get some hope from it."

Happy Birthday Rachel

Two years ago today, April 3, 1986, Rachel Lavonya Fields was born in the PCMH Neonatal Unit, weighing 2 lbs., losing down to 1 lb. 8 oz. in a matter of six days. During her 3 month stay, she had a series of complications. But, because of many prayers sent up by churches, family and friends and wonderful support of the Neonatal staff, Rachel is a healthy, happy two year old.

Adults Are Visiting Orthodontists

By JAMES WEBB
Associated Press Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Connie Lohr sits patiently in the waiting room while her son sits in the orthodontist's chair having his braces adjusted. When he's finished, they trade places.

Mrs. Lohr, 41, is the latest member of her family to get braces, and one of a rapidly increasing number of adults nationwide to get them.

Braces are no longer just for adolescents. They have become acceptable, even popular, for adults who are unhappy with their appearance or who need treatment to correct a bite that is painfully out of alignment.

The number of adults with braces doubled in the past decade as the social stigma of wearing them gave way to increased emphasis on appearance and health, said Dr. Lee Graber, a Kenilworth, Ill. orthodontist and consultant to the American Dental Association health foundation. One of four orthodontic patients today is over 18, according to the American Association of Orthodontists in St. Louis.

"It's part of an increased health consciousness in adults," said Graber. "Just as they're more concerned about what they eat, they're concerned about their teeth and how their teeth look."

The increase of adult patients also is due partly to a greater awareness of jaw-joint problems and the development of comprehensive dental treatment plans, which may include an orthodontist and a gum specialist, Graber said.

Advances in the field have produced braces that are faster-working, more comfortable and less noticeable, he said. They include braces that can be attached to the back side of teeth, out of sight, and new ceramic braces that are transparent.

Mrs. Lohr's braces, though visible, need be worn only four to six months to adjust the spacing of her teeth.

"Some of my children's friends have made remarks — all very nice though," she said, showing off a near-perfect smile that she intends to improve with the small metal band on her upper teeth.

While many adults seek orthodontic treatment for health reasons, up to one half of adult patients are seeking to improve their appearance, said Rhonda Richards, communications coordinator for the association of orthodontists.

Graber said he was putting braces, also called appliances, on an increasing number of businessmen and salespeople who "realize that having an attractive smile is as important as being dressed well."

St. Louis orthodontist Ed Shaheen has fitted braces on local television news personalities, physicians, attorneys, and a professional golfer.

"I've got a lot of people who are in the public eye who want to look as good as they can," said Shaheen.

"Today it's psychologically OK to say I don't like the way I look," said Graber, who has a Ph.D. in human growth and development from the University of Michigan in addition to his medical degrees.

"It's OK to have braces on — (people) see it as somebody undergoing a self-improvement program," said Graber. It is comparable to someone beginning an exercise routine, he said, although braces tend to be a bit more costly.

Graber said fees might range from as little as $75 for a simple appliance used for less than a year to as much as $4,000 for comprehensive therapy, which may include surgery and three years of treatment. The price tag varies greatly depending on the doctor, prescribed treatment, and even the area of the country, Graber said.

Costs are normally budgeted over the course of treatment, Graber said.

"It's just like buying a car," he said.

Wedding Invitation Doesn't Invite

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Our niece is being married in June. She is the daughter of my husband's sister. We do not see this family very often although they live less than 50 miles from us.

Yesterday we received a beautifully engraved invitation to this niece's wedding, but there was no RSVP or dinner card enclosed, so I phoned my sister-in-law (the bride's mother) to thank her for the invitation, and let her know of the omission.

She said, "My daughter just wanted you to 'see' the invitation — you are not actually 'invited' to the wedding."

Abby, I couldn't believe my ears. Although we do not have the kind of money they have, and we live on a small farm, we are respectable people with good manners and not the kind of relatives one would be ashamed of.

My husband felt hurt, but thinks we ought to send some kind of wedding gift. What are your thoughts? — ALSO HURT IN KANSAS

DEAR HURT: I agree with your husband. Send these insensitive clods catalogs from Tiffany, Waterford and Georg Jensen so they can "see" what's available in fine china, crystal and silver.

DEAR ABBY: You are all wet about the man who looks at a picture and says: "Brothers and sisters I have none, but this man's father is my father's son." Who is the picture of? The answer is: He is looking at a picture of himself!

Abby, I am 73, and I have heard that riddle for as long as I can remember, and the answer has always been: "He is looking at a portrait of HIMSELF!" (Substituting family names makes no difference.)

I wrote to the Sunday tabloid and told them they were wrong, but they have not admitted their error. Will you? — LILLIAN S. BLOSE, SOUTHAMPTON, PA.

DEAR LILLIAN: Watch my lips: If the man is looking at a portrait of himself and says, "This man's father" — meaning his own father — "is MY father's son," it cannot be. How could his father be his father's son?

If the man is looking at a portrait of HIS OWN son, he can say, "This man's father (meaning himself) is my father's son."

Lillian, please don't worry about this too much; I am up to my ears in letters from readers who insist that the man is looking at his own portrait.

If the rhyme went this way, "Brothers and sisters I have none, but this MAN is my father's son," he would indeed have been looking at his own portrait, but he said, "this man's FATHER is my father's son," so he had to be looking at a picture of his own son.

Got it? Goodnight, Gracie.

DEAR ABBY: Our local animal shelter puts out a bumper sticker that says it all: ANIMALS ARE KIND TO DUMB PEOPLE. How sad the reverse is not practiced. — BERNITA H. MERRITT, LORENA, TEXAS

Couple Marries On Saturday

BETHEL — Jamie Elaine Hardy and William Bray Daniels Jr. were united in marriage Saturday at 2 p.m. in the Bethel United Methodist Church.

The Revs. Earl Dulany and Ellis Bedsworth conducted the double-ring ceremony. Music was provided by organist Gerald Herring and William Clayton Warren Jr., who sang "To Me" and "The Gift of Love."

The bride is the daughter of Dennis Earl Hardy Jr. of Albany, Ga., and Elaine Taylor Hardy of Bethel. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Bray Daniels Sr. of Jamesville.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal-length gown of white satin designed with a sweetheart neckline and off-shoulder Juliet sleeves defined with alencon lace beaded with pearls and Austrian crystals. The elongated torso bodice of eyelet embroidered satin and alencon lace were hand-beaded with pearls and Austrian crystals. The full circular skirt was bordered with alencon lace and extended into a cathedral train. Matching lace and crystals with beaded lace motifs enhanced the train. She wore a headpiece designed with miniature silk orchids and seed pearls.Accented with pearl loops of filament, the fingertip veil of illusion was enhanced with lilies of the valley and pearls. She carried an European cascade of sonya roses, sterling white lilies, white tuberoses, ming fern and baby's breath.

Lisa Stancill of Raleigh was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Joyce Daniels of Jamesville, sister of the bridegroom, Mary Beth Carson of Bethel, Nona Elliot of Roper, Ashely Herald of Windsor and Joan Loftin of Wake Forest. Each attendant wore a tea-length gown of satin in periwinkle blue fashioned with a sweetheart neckline and pouf sleeves. A dropped sash bow accented the hipline. Each carried a European hand-tied arm bouquet of melon pink carnations, blue cornflowers, yellow and white daisies with a periwinkle bow and streamers.

Honorary attendants were Martha Ann Allen and Ann Hamm, both of Bethel, Cindy Carraway of Greenville and Rebekah Maddry of Raytown, Mo. Each carried a single long-stemmed sonya rose tied with a perwinkle bow and streamers. Erica Herald of Greenville was a flower girl.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Parker Hardy of Bethel, brother of the bride, Eric Elliot of Roper, Jimmy Holliday of Jamesville, Chris Matthews and David Smithwick, both of Greenville. Kyle Holliday of Jamesville was ring bearer.

A reception was given by the bride's parents.

MRS. DANIELS

A brunch, luncheon, dinner, pig picking and several showers were also given for the couple.

The bride is a student at Martin Community College and the bridegroom attends East Carolina University. They will live in Greenville.

Jarvis-Taylor Vows Exchanged Saturday

GOLDSBORO — Mary Anita Taylor and Jeffrey Lee Jarvis were united in marriage Saturday at 3 p.m. in Ebenezer United Methodist Church. The double-ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Leon Lewis.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. C. Marvin Taylor of Route 2, Princeton, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Jarvis of Route 3, Ayden.

Organist Steele Sasser and vocalist Scott Boyette presented wedding music. Vocal selections included "There is Love," "One Hand, One Heart" and "The Lord's Prayer."

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore her mother's wedding gown of white lace over satin. The floor-length gown was fashioned with a V-neckline outlined with rhinestones and pearls. The dress was fashioned in back with satin covered buttons and the skirt ended in a chapel train. Her fingertip veil was trimmed with pearls and was attached to a lace-covered tiara. She carried a cascade bouquet of white roses and daisies centered with an orchid.

The honor attendant was Rhonda M. Price of Goldsboro. She was dressed in a yellow satin tea-length dress fashioned with a boat neckline, pleated bodice with a sash. She carried a nosegay of white daisies.

Bridesmaids were Kay Chance and Wendy Wise, both of Greenville, Jenny Lewis of Goldsboro, cousin of the bride, and Harriet Jarvis of Morehead City, sister of the bridegroom. They were dressed like the honor attendant.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Glenn Cannon and Chris Jarvis, brother of the bridegroom, both of Ayden, Nelson Jarvis of Columbia, S.C., brother of the bridegroom, and Daniel Taylor of Princeton, brother of the bride.

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University and is a teacher in Washington City Schools. The bridegroom attended Mount Olive College and Lenoir Community College and is self-employed.

A reception was held at the church given by the bride's parents. Cake was served by Inez Perkins, cousin of the bride, and Bess Mitchell, aunt of the bride. Punch was poured by Rebecca Thompson. Goodbyes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Delmus Bridgers, aunt and uncle of the bride.

After a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, S.C., the couple will live in Greenville.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom.

Store Changes Enable Paralyzed Manager To Go Back To Her Job

By SUE ERNDE
Waynesboro Record Herald

WAYNESBORO, Pa. (AP) — Just five months after Judy Ott's spinal cord was injured in an accident that paralyzed her from the waist down, she's back as manager of the Sheetz store in this small south-central Pennsylvania town.

The owners of Sheetz modified the store so Ott could return to work, scooting around in her wheelchair like a pro.

"One of the reasons I came along so well is that I had a job waiting for me," Ott says. "So many people in a situation like mine aren't as fortunate."

Ott, 36, and her fiance, Jim Monsold, collect antique guns, and they were unloading a 1,200-pound gun vault at their home near Chambersburg last September, when the vault shifted and knocked her into the back of a pickup truck.

She underwent surgery in the Hershey Medical Center, where two steel rods were inserted in her spinal cord to stabilize it and a bone from her pelvis was grafted around the rods.

Ott is not bitter.

"I'm never going to give up and feel sorry for myself," she says. "Life goes on. Sure, I have my bad days, but they're getting further and further apart."

Ott has refused to become a victim of her paralysis. She still cleans her house, makes the beds, cooks, washes, irons and does the grocery shopping. "I can do everything I did before the accident. It just takes me a little longer.

"I've asked the other employees not to help me unless I ask for help. I do tend to get in the way, though. I've run over a few toes with my chair," she says with a laugh.

Sheetz converted one of the store's two public rest rooms to meet Ott's needs and built ramps behind the counter and in the back rooms. The store also installed buttons that enable Ott to open the double doors in the front of the store to accommodate her wheelchair.

A handicapped parking space was added, interior and exterior barriers were removed to enable Ott to maneuver, and the food service was lowered so she can make sandwiches.

More permanent changes are planned in late spring, after Ott has worked in the store for awhile, according to Phil Schreyer, Sheetz's director of human resources.

Ott says she can't describe how she feels about the management of Sheetz. "I hope what they've done for me will open the door for others. And by my coming back to work, I hope to urge other 'special people' to do the things they did before their accidents."

Ott has worked for the Sheetz convenience store chain for eight years, beginning as a salesperson at one of Sheetz's Chambersburg stores. She's managed the Waynesboro Sheetz for three years.

FAME'S IN A NAME

NEW YORK (AP) — Celebrities often change their names, either because they are too long, too hard to spell or they don't fit a star's image.

That's why Frances Gumm became Judy Garland, Sophia Scicoloni is now called Sophia Loren, and Frederick Austerlitz became Fred Astaire.

BETSY DRAKE LEWIS' DECORATING TIPS
A GOOD BUY

Since everybody is so conscious of what they should spend their money for these days, we thought we'd pass along some thoughts made recently by an economic analyst on family spending.

He said in his opinion, among the best buys today are quality furniture and other home furnishings--and his reason is that one should consider the knowledge that furniture and home furnishings last longer and therefore give the purchaser a longer run for his money.

He said it makes sense to him to put money into something of a permanent or semi-permanent nature such as quality furniture, where the cost is amortized over a long period of time, and where you get continued pleasure from it.

He also brought out the point that it makes sense to put one's money into a place where people spend as much time as they do in their homes.

In any case, whether you're thinking about economics or simply the comfort and beauty of your home, remember that we not only have good furniture values and selection, but we're aware of helping you consider your budget, and getting you the most for your money. The highest quality at the lowest price equals the greatest value possible. We invite you to stop in often.

Kids And Elderly Interact In Wisconsin College Lab

By MARYANN MROWCA
Associated Press Writer

MENOMONIE, Wis. (AP) — Jesse Dyer's harmonica is a big hit with 4-year-olds at the University of Wisconsin Child and Family Study Center.

There, 80-year-old Dyer and other elderly residents visit weekly with preschoolers to help teach college students about the generations.

The intergenerational lab began at UW-Stout last spring when 10 senior citizens and 45 preschoolers came together under the direction of eight college students.

It is one of many such labs nationwide that have grown in importance as the average age of the population rises, said Jan Hare, UW-Stout assistant professor of human development.

Recently, Dyer entertained his young friends with old-time tunes on a day 4-year-old Eric Tyson of Menomonie called "special."

Dyer said he enjoyed the youngsters' attention.

"When they saw me coming they started yelling, 'Jesse's here!' and they climbed into my lap," he said. "I like kids, especially small ones."

Family development programs and research focus much attention on children, but students need to know more about the aging American population, Hare said.

Research shows that the 85-and-over population has quadrupled in the United States in the past 70 years and is expected to double again by 2010, she said.

"The need for understanding between the generations is going to become more important, particularly while the population is getting older," she said.

Fewer students, however, seem interested in that end of the age spectrum, she said.

"There seems to be a hesistancy to join the class," Hare said. "They (college students) have a reluctance to deal with the elderly themselves."

At the UW-Stout lab, five elderly residents visit about 20 3- to 5-year-olds, but only one college student is taking the course in an independent project.

"Just getting the two groups together and seeing the interaction that takes place ... was the neatest part," said UW-Stout senior Becky Hunt of Cashton.

The main goal of the lab is to improve attitudes of college students and children toward the elderly and to help change attitudes of the elderly toward the younger generations, Hare said.

Research has shown, for example, that many children think elderly people are sick, ugly and cranky, but only 5 percent of the elderly population is disabled, Hare said.

The senior citizens in the intergenerational lab show different degrees of mobility. Dyer uses a wheelchair; Helen Andren, 72, does not.

Mrs. Andren says she looks forward to the weekly visits when she often reads stories to the youngsters.

"I love kids," she said. "I don't get to see my own very often."

Both Dyer and Mrs. Andren are residents of the Dunn County Health Care Center, where activities director Dianne Wuethrich said, "You find children really don't visit nursing homes anymore."

Like many similar facilities, the Dunn County home has long invited school groups and 4-H clubs to the facility.

"An intergenerational program is not a new thing for nursing homes, but it probably is for teaching," Ms. Wuethrich said.

The programs are more important now than they would have been when extended families lived nearby, and different age groups mingled more frequently, Hare said.

"Now, we're such a segregated society," she said. "We hang out with people our own age."

Wedding Vows Are Solemnized

CRISP — Sherry Marie Lafave, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Wilfred Lafave of Brockville, Ontario, Canada, and John E. Moseley Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John Moseley of Crisp, were married Saturday at 3 p.m.

The Rev. Ken Singley conducted the double-ring ceremony in the Eagles Baptist Church in Crisp. Organist Brenda Stallings and Lorretta Barrow presented wedding music. Vocal selections included "The Rose," "Annie's Song" and "The Lord's Prayer."

Patricia Heniford of Greenville was honor attendant. Patricia Lafave of Kingston, Ontario, Canada, sister of the bride, Debbie Lafave of Brockville, Ontario, Canada, niece of the bride, Janie McIntyre of Rocky Mount, and Tracy Lupton of Greenville, were bridesmaids.

Amanda McIntyre of Rocky Mount, cousin of the bridegroom, was flower girl and Ryan Heniford of Greenville was ring bearer.

Ushers were Mitchel Briggs, Michael Lafave of Maitland, Ontario, Canada, Marshal Taylor of Wilson and Michael Webb of Crisp. Ryan Heniford of Greenville was ring bearer. The father of the bridegroom was best man.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white satin gown designed with a high shadow neckline and long puffed lace appliqued sleeves. The basque waistline was enhanced with lace accented with pearls and sequins. The full skirt extended into a cathedral train and was trimmed with lace motifs and schiffli lace at the hemline. Her veil of silk illusion was attached to a lace headpiece of pearls and crystals. Her cascade bouquet of sonya roses was mixed with stephanotis, baby's breath and ivy tied with sonya ribbon and streamers.

Each of the attendants wore an ivory satin tea-length dress. Flowing over the satin was lace with embroidered neck and hemline. The neck and matching low back were enhanced by lace. Crossing in back was a satin cummerbund with a bow. Each carried a bouquet of sonya roses, white lilies, pom pons and baby's breath tied with ivy and sonya streamers.

After a wedding trip to Dahlonega, Ga., the couple will live in Ayden.

The bride is a neonatal nurse clinician at Pitt County Memorial Hospital and is a graduate of Sir Sandford Fleming College. The bridegroom is dining manager at the Greenville Country Club and attended East Carolina University.

MRS. MOSELEY

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. John Benjamin Purvis of Route 1, Bethel, announce the engagement of their daughter, Julia Ann, to Michael Clyde Robinson, son of Ann Saulter Robinson of Winterville and the late Alvin Lamar Robinson. The wedding will take place May 21.

Neighborhood Clean-Up Set

Plans for a neighborhood clean-up April 30 have been made by members of the Brook Valley Garden Club.

The hours will be 9 a.m. to noon. For further information call Julia Fallon at 355-3589.

The club's annual luncheon and fashion show were announced by President JoAnn Corey. It will be held April 25 and JoAnn Honeycutt will show designer clothes from the Carlisle Collection. Ticket information is available by calling 355-6932 or 355-6455.

Rosalee Farley, nominating committee chairman, reported on the following officers, Mrs. Corey, president; Frances Tyson, vice president; Peggy Briley, treasurer; Cheryl Isarey, secretary, and Nickey Watson, corresponding secretary.

By BELLA STUMBO
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service.

PUEBLO OF ACOMA, N.M. — Stanley Paytiamo, 63, governor of the Acoma Nation, population 4,200, stood on a bluff overlooking a rugged wilderness of prehistoric lava beds, fumbling for words and looking shamed as he described aspects of the Acomas' sacred fall Corn Dance to bring rain. It is an ancient religious ceremony that the tribe has always held in fiercest secrecy from the prying eyes of outsiders.

"We place, uh, certain articles, religious items out there (at distances of several miles) in a certain pattern ... which we believe helps guide the rain spirits, the rain clouds, into Acoma from the West. It's the same principle, sort of, as the runway lights at an airport."

A few miles away, in one of the reservation's two tiny villages down by the highway, the tribal cacique, or holy man, a shadowy figure invested with absolute authority over every Acoma man, woman and child, and who, by tradition, does not grant interviews to the white man, opened the door to his home and, with weary resignation, said, "Come on in."

Historically, the Acomas have been near legendary for their determined, tight-knit isolation — and so touchy about their ancient religious practices in particular that most books on the subject have been little more than apologetic essays in guesswork, or based on the dubious data provided by paid snitches.

Called Sky City by locals, the Acoma pueblo is about 1,000 years old and widely thought to be the oldest continuously inhabited village in North America. Previously it was also so strictly off-limits to non-Indians, except for rigidly directed, miserably quick 45-minute guided tours. An Acoma woman who once tried to bring her white boyfriend home for dinner was reportedly stopped by angry neighbors before she even got to her front door and ordered to get him off the mesa pronto.

Then along came a federal bill to turn some 380,000 scenic acres adjacent to the Acoma reservation into the El Malpais (Badlands) National Monument and wilderness-conservation area. The whole New Mexico congressional delegation thought it was a fine idea. So did the environmentalists. Small towns around the Malpais began to count the ways they might cash in on the tourist boom.

It was the threatened loss of a sliver of 13,000 acres that the Acomas leased from the government for grazing that literally flushed them into the open, forcing them to frantically solicit as much national attention as they could get.

At issue, according to the Acomas, was no mere cattle pasture or squabble over water rights.

This area had also been their most sacred, secret religious site since time immemorial. And one reason they hadn't mentioned it earlier, they said, was because the region is also a virtual museum of 1,000-year-old Acoma ruins, burial grounds, shrines, relics and secret caves crammed with priceless Indian artifacts. It gave them nightmares, just thinking about the desecrating thunder of tourist feet now about to be unleashed on the area — never mind the swarms of looters who would probably follow.

And so, in place of their former narrow-eyed, ill-concealed distrust, they began wooing the media with a passion, inviting reporters to drop by the reservation any time — and never mind yesterday's unyielding rule that an official tribal escort must accompany them wherever they go.

Where it was once taboo to even carry an Instamatic without special, paid permission, television and movie crews soon freely roamed, stringing up whatever equipment they might need. One night, a documentary team even staged a bonfire outside the majestic old Spanish church for special effect, while several Acomas donned ceremonial beads and feathers and danced about.

Some Acomas are humiliated, disgraced and angry at all of the above.

Others, however, applaud the whole show as a small price to pay if it shoves the tribe out of its secretive little world and into the mainstream of the 20th Century, bringing down the theocratic rule of the cacique in the process. They want elections.

But the opposition is so dead-set determined to preserve tradition that the last time it was seriously challenged, in 1985, some of them even threatened to murder the culprit — their own governor, Merle Garcia, then in his sixth one-year term.

By comparison, the Malpais pales as an emotional issue — but, for the first time in memory everybody was at least mad as hell over the same thing.

New Mexico legislators, after several futile attempts to satisfy the tribe with compromise plans, refused to sell or otherwise hand over the land outright, insisting that Acoma rights were fully protected, whether the Acomas agreed or not.

"This isn't a religious issue, it's a land issue," declared Sean Bersell, aide to Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., clearly annoyed at all the haggling, "and these lands are mine and yours, they belong to the whole country, not just the Acomas, and they are not for sale."

A So, in a unanimous vote at the end of one of the stormiest tribal council meetings on record, the Acoma Nation threatened to break its treaty with the United States government — that is, to secede from the union.

It fell to Stanley Paytiamo to bear news of these latest events to the outside world, via a media event next day at Sky City.

He was dressed for the occasion in special, brilliant Indian garb, ropes of fine turquoise beads around his neck, his long, silvering hair formally bound in hand-embroidered felt and satin ribbons. In his arms, he carefully cradled an elegant silver-and-wood, hand-engraved walking cane, presented to the Acomas in 1863 by Abraham Lincoln as a symbol of their sovereign authority.

The pueblo's narrow streets were mostly deserted except for a large population of dogs sleeping in the dust. The sun was harsh. Nothing grows up here, not even weeds; few birds fly by.

A few crumbling adobes remain, but most homes have been refurbished with everything from stucco siding and paint to sliding glass doors, and forget those quaint pueblo ladders — modern-day Pueblos travel by stairway. Although the mesa has neither electricity nor running water, residents make do with propane and generators, and nearly every home has a TV antenna. In another contemporary touch, many dwellings also feature iron grillwork guards on their front windows and doors — security, obviously not from outsiders, but from Sky City's own juvenile delinquents.

Pueblo Acoma Nation Is An Isolated World

And, in a final, minor measure of old ways colliding with the new, it's a rare potter, however rickety her display table, or how sloppy her work, who doesn't sport that familiar little red and gold placard reading, "Mastercard accepted here."

The largest building in the pueblo is the 17th-Century church, located within yards of several sacred kivas (religous meeting halls) the Spaniards tried so vainly to eliminate, along with every other vestige of Indian religion.

Today most Acomas call themselves Roman Catholics, and they go to church. But Sky City's grand old mission doesn't get much use nowadays because, although all Acomas still maintain ancestral homes on the mesa, the permanent, year-round village population is no more than maybe 100 — mostly kiva heads and war chiefs, sometimes called field commanders in these modern times, who are required to live there for performance of their (undisclosed) religious duties.

And so, the reservation's Franciscan priest, Father Galen Hoffman, mostly tends to his flock in two churches down by the highway. And he doesn't have the faintest notion, either, of what goes on at Sky City or in the Malpais on ceremonial occasions.

Paytiamo pointed out the cacique's ancestral home in passing. It is no larger, nor more modern than that of any other ordinary Acoma.

By no stretch of the imagination, however, is the cacique an ordinary fellow. A religious leader unique to the Pueblo tribes, he personally hand-picks every leader of consequence on the entire reservation, both religious and governmental. His is a lifetime, hereditary position, limited to members of one family bloodline, the Antelope Clan, for reasons so ancient that not even the Acomas can say why.

Juanico Sanchez is the current Acoma cacique, said Paytiamo. But everybody calls him Nick. He is 61, and Paytiamo believed he had either recently retired or was maybe laid off from his job at a nearby uranium mill.

And that was enough. Most Acomas seem uncomfortable discussing the cacique even casually with outsiders. Paytiamo's face closed down, no more prying.

He finally brought his little band to a halt at the far edge of the mesa, a particularly dramatic site he has long since learned that photographers love, the pueblo to one side, another huge mesa looming lavender and mauve in the distance.

Stanley Paytiamo, the mildest of men, couldn't look militant if he tried. But he did look immensely sorrowful as he gazed at the cane. Somebody had dolled it up for the occasion, too, with a purple Easter bow around its graceful neck.

The Acomas were so "insulted and hurt" at the way the government was treating them, Paytiamo began, that they had no choice. The cane must go.

"The council has directed me to take it back to Washington and tell them to break it, since they won't respect our rights." Paytiamo sighed. He isn't cut out for grandstanding gestures either. But, by making a final, public scene, Paytiamo shrugged, they might "at least embarrass a few politicians."

Nobody will ever accuse the Acomas of being radicals.

Some Acomas, in fact, have outright contempt for the council's latest move. In their view the battle over the Malpais was lost months ago, and it's high time the tribe turned its attentions back to the 410 square miles it already owns.

By far the most outspoken of these is Merle Garcia, 63, the former governor who so offended traditionalists that he was evidently lucky to escape office alive. But no mere assassination threat has caused Garcia, now returned to his ranching operation, to hold his tongue.

Instead, he stands in the Sky City Plaza, within easy earshot of half a dozen of his tight-lipped neighbors, complaining for a solid hour to an outsider about everything from the current administration's do-nothing attitude, to the senseless poverty on a reservation that could easily support itself in handsome style, to what he sees as the lazy, hypocritical and secretive ways of the Acomas themselves.

" ... Underneath almost every single project that's failed here has been this overriding fear of the white man somehow learning too much about us," Garcia says. "And just look where it's got us — a reservation where absolutely nothing is happening!"

Which is almost literally true. Despite the fact that this is a relatively tiny reservation both in size and population, sitting on a major interstate highway with one of the country's most interesting tourist attractions at its center, the Acomas have done little to capitalize on their potential.

There is one small gas station-cafe-gift shop-grocery store complex on the reservation, and a bingo parlor (both built during Garcia's terms), and that's it.

Accordingly, reservation statistics are nearly as dismal as those of any Indian tribe in the nation: Unemployment is about 65 percent, with a per capita income of around $1,200 per year.

During Garcia's terms in office, plans were discussed to build everything from an Israeli-supported plant to manufacture hot water heaters — which would have employed at least 150 Acomas — to a flashlight factory and a radio station. He is still incensed at their demise.

And, in the final analysis, Garcia places blame squarely on the cacique. The reservation will always be on the federal dole, in his opinion, unless the Acomas step out of the "dark ages" and take responsibility for electing their own government leaders, instead of leaving it to one family of mostly "uninformed, ill-qualified people."

Even Paytiamo favors tribal elections and, in fact — with the undoubted exception of all the other Antelopes — about the only Acoma around who sees no room for any improvement whatsoever is the chief Antelope himself.

The cacique was home alone on a Sunday afternoon, watching the Denver Broncos on TV. He's a big John Elway fan. He came to the door barefooted, in a T-shirt and jeans, with the two-day stubble of a man who sees no sense in shaving on weekends. In appearance, he was ordinary in every respect — average size, modest paunch, pleasant face, nice smile, full head of black hair, cut short, barely touched by gray. He hesitated momentarily, on the verge of refusing, then reconsidered and, in the name of the Malpais, invited an outsider into his home.

The place was small and cozy, similar to dozens of other government units on the reservation. The living room was crammed to overflowing with splendid Acoma pots, gifts from the people. Mostly, though, it was a shrine to Elvis Presley.

One entire wall was covered with a huge, eye-popping velour hanging of the King in the garish gem-studded white jump suit he wore during his last Hawaiian tour. On the opposite wall, bracketing the room in dazzling, stupefying redundancy, was another identical hanging, only slightly smaller. "My wife," the cacique remarked, hurrying back to his chair in front of a big color console, "was a fan."

As it turned out, Juanico Sanchez, 62, is an unusual mix of a man. Amiable, unaffected and circumspect one minute, sly, cynical and crude the next. His verbal skills are spotty.

"On this voting business, I don't think it would ever work, not at all," he said. "You start having elections and some of those guys are gonna be running all over the place, doing their own thing. They wouldn't work with the religious side, people wouldn't like each other, everything will just fall apart. ... "

There was no telling what Sanchez actually thinks of his own immense personal role in the present system.

"It's sort of like being the king, I guess you'd say," he offered vaguely. "But I don't feel, uh, well over everybody, you know? I mean, it's my job. They (the Antelope Clan) picked me, so I'm stuck with it, whether I like it or not."

On the other hand, he likes it, too, being the tribe's top guy, he said with a little grin. "I get treated nice wherever I go, and I've never had anybody, uh, harass me."

He enjoys the power, too. He wanted to make it clear, for instance, that, while he listens to the advice of the Antelope Clan, , "The final decisions are mine, nobody else's."

He was vague about how he settled on Stanley Paytiamo to succeed Garcia after the former governor dared to oppose him, although, judging from his expression, Stanley is not Nick's kind of guy by a long shot. "The priest here loves him," said Sanchez with a sarcastic little grin, "because he goes to church two or three times a week."

The cacique seemed largely bored by the Malpais dispute, it's been going on for so long. He didn't sound particularly bitter.

At the door, the cacique toyed with the notion of being photographed, then decided against it. Some Pueblo tribes won't even tell outsiders their cacique's name, and Sanchez thought he had already sacrificed enough of his mystique in behalf of the Malpais.

A River Of Life And Death

EDITOR'S NOTE — The Yellow River, has been largely tamed by the Chinese government's relentless dike- and reservoir-building efforts. But many still remember the day 50 years ago when a ruptured dike sent the waters cascading over village rooftops, killing 890,000 and leaving millions homeless.

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer

ZHENGZHOU, China (AP) — Shi Xiaoshan was just 5 years old when Chinese Nationalists broke the dike on the Yellow River 50 years ago in a vain attempt to stop advancing Japanese troops. Shi took refuge in a large floating pot.

"The water was over the roofs in some villages," Shi recalls of the 1938 calamity that claimed an estimated 890,000 lives and left millions homeless and without food. Shi's family had to beg to survive.

Today, the retired worker lives quietly a short stroll away from that once-ruptured dike, confident neither man nor nature will ever again unleash the river known as "China's Sorrow."

The 3,388-mile Yellow River, the cradle of Chinese civilization and the bane of its existence, has been largely tamed by relentless dike- and reservoir-building efforts of the Communist government since it took power in 1949.

But there remains an undercurrent of threat to the 110 million people who live along the banks of the world's muddiest river.

"Nature does not change easily," says Chen Xiande, deputy director of the Yellow River Conservancy Commission based in Zhengzhou, the capital of central China's Henan province.

The river begins in the remote plateaus of western Qinghai province and winds through nine provinces before reaching Bohai Bay in Shandong province. Over the past 2,000 years, it has flooded some 1,500 times. It has changed course 26 times in recorded history, about once every century, each time disrupting the lives of millions.

In 1887, when the river tore through its banks in Henan, 11 large cities were inundated and a 50,000-square-mile area was under water for two months. Hundreds of thousands — perhaps millions — died.

There has been no major flood since 1946, largely because of a dike-building program comparable to the excavation of two Panama canals. Chen says his 29,000-member commission has overseen the construction of seven of the 30 reservoirs that are planned to help control the river while supplying electrical power and irrigation to the barren riverside plains.

But he says his engineers have still made only small gains in controlling the flow of sandy yellowish sediment that gives the river its name and its unique power to destroy.

As the river courses southward from Inner Mongolia through the chalky and erosion-pocked loess plateau of China's midsection, it deposits 1.6 billion tons of silt in its middle and lower reaches.

Every year the riverbed in the lower reaches rises another 4 inches, creating what is called a "suspended river" where the water level is 13 to 23 feet above the surrounding land.

Since 1949 the dikes have been heightened and reinforced three times to contain the rising waters. The huge Sanmenxia dam in western Henan had to be rebuilt almost immediately after it was completed in the 1960s because engineers were fooled by the onslaught of silt.

The Yellow's powers of deception can be seen from atop the 500-year-old dikes north of Zhengzhou breached by Chiang Kai-shek's troops in 1938 and repaired in 1947.

The river channel is 6 miles wide, but in the dry winter months the water is only several hundred yards across, a faint glimmer far out over the frozen mud flats packed with silt from the loess plains of Shaanxi province 600 miles to the northwest.

Yet in the summer rainy season the entire channel is filled, and after hard rain the waters pound against the 16-foot high concrete embankments.

A new, computerized warning system, built with U.S. and United Nations assistance, gives engineers 20 hours' notice of a potential flood, says Yellow River Conservancy Commission Senior Engineer Niu Zengqi. That's time enough to open sluices and fill water-retention reservoirs. In the distant past, news of impending floods came via horseback.

Niu says the government has spent $1.3 billion since 1949 to harness the river, and is now planning a new dam at Xiaolangdi, eastern Henan, that should reduce sediment buildup by 40 percent over 50 years.

There are other, more visionary plans, such as changing the course of the river — largely discounted as too expensive and disruptive — and linking the sluggish Yellow with its slightly longer sister to the south, the Yangtze.

The idea is that the Yangtze, which carries far much more water than the Yellow, would help flush out the sediment on the Yellow's riverbed.

But Deputy Director Chen stresses that "most important is solving the sediment problem by soil conservation in the loess region. Without vegetation, the problem of silt will only get worse."

Flowers In Bloom At Plantation

WILMINGTON — The spring flowering season is under way along the Lower Cape Fear coast, at Orton Plantation Gardens, one of America's oldest plantation showplaces.

In full bloom now are camellias of many varieties and hues, flowering peach, and beds of pansies, along with other spring plants. This wide range of floral display will continue in the days and weeks ahead, with emphasis on thousands of azaleas, wisteria, and dogwood.

Kenneth M. Sprunt, manager of Orton Plantation Gardens, says there was no winter damage to the buds and plants, which helps to account for the current level of blooms and color. The azaleas should be flowering in time for the North Carolina Azalea Festival at Wilmington on April 7-10, with flowering to continue through April.

Orton's spacious gardens and grounds include several special islands of color set against a backdrop of ancient liveoaks, magnolias, and pines. They provide color during the spring and into the summer months as well. These special sites are the formal Scroll Garden, the Sun Garden, and the White Circle Garden.

The gardens and grounds are linked by paved walkways and pathways, many of them borderedd with plants and flowers.

The centerpiece of the gardens and grounds is the large, two-story Orton Mansion in Greek Revival architecture, and columned facade. It is a private residence but can be viewed from many excellent vantage points.

An admission fee is charged.

Season Tickets Available For MCCC's Season

WILLIAMSTON — Tickets for the entertainment lineup for the 1988-89 Martin County Community Concert Association season are now available.

Season membrship tickets will not be sold after April 23, with membership cards to be mailed in the fall.

Entertainments scheduled for the coming season are: The Banjo & American Jazz featuring Cynthia Syaer and her Crazy Rhythm Band; the Earl Rose Trio which performs a wide spectrum of music, and the Guy Lombardo Royal Canadian Orchestra with Dick Wickman.

Season membership ticket are priced at $18 for adults, $6 for students and $40 for a family membership good for two adults and students residing at home.

Additionally, special membership in five categories are available ranging from $50 to $1,000.

To order a season membership ticket, send check or money order to: MCCCA, P.O. Box 1192, Williamston, N.C., 27892. For details on special membership, write to the same address.

Paper Workshop Set At Onslow Council

JACKSONVILLE — Sneads Ferry artist Kelly Grant will instruct a workshop on "The Making of Hand-Made Paper" April 12 and 13 at the Onslow County Arts Council, 826 New Bridge Street. Workshop hours will be 10 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

Mrs. Grant studied graphics and illustration at East Carolina University. She has been making hand-made paper for five years.

Class size is limited and pre-registration is necessary. The registration fee, including supplies, is $10. For further information call the arts council at 455-9840.

The four-man Irish band, which won Grammies for best group and best album this year, is funding the film directed by Phil Joanou, a protege of Steven Spielberg.

The group grossed more than $26 million on its 1987 tour to promote their album, "The Joshua Tree."

Free Enterprise In China's Hainan Island

EDITOR'S NOTE — They call it Treasure Island, the Hawaii of the Orient, and tout it as a place where smart investors can get rich, thanks to its mineral deposits, sparkling beaches, and other resources. Unabashed free enterprise is the name of the game, in the new Chinese style.

By DAN BIERS
Associated Press Writer

HAIKOU, China (AP) — Dominating a wall of the Qiongyuan restaurant in this capital of tropical Hainan Island is an eye-catching red shrine to Caishen, the traditional god of wealth.

The figurine, explained a waitress, was expected to bring prosperity to the restaurant. It appeared to be working. The room was jammed with high-spending customers gulping bottles of beer to wash down earthworms cooked with golden mushrooms and other specialties.

Open worship of Caishen in Communist China would have been unthinkable not too long ago, but today seems perfectly appropriate on this lightly developed but resource-rich island, which is to be the biggest proving ground yet for the country's capitalist-style economic reforms.

Chinese leaders last year promised to offer a slew of incentives to speed development and attract much-coveted foreign investment to this island off China's southernmost coast, between the Philippines and Vietnam.

Since mid-1987, the Chinese media has breathlessly reported almost daily on the big plans for the island. "'Hawaii of Orient' a Vast Building Site" said one recent headline in the China Daily.

New highways, deep-water ports, airports, railways and power stations are promised. Official reports in early 1988 indicate that a nuclear power plant could be in the cards.

"All projects that are helpful to the island's economic development will be encouraged," said Peng Qinghai, vice-director of the Hainan Economic Commission.

The Chinese leadership views the iron, rubber, copper, oil and other natural resources found throughout the 13,368-square-mile island — nearly twice the land mass of the Hawaiian Islands — as a magnet for foreign investors.

They also hope the sparkling white beaches that seductively curve for miles on end along the island's southern coast will attract foreign tourists to a Waikiki of the South China Sea.

The island — which local officials often refer to as 'baodao,' or Treasure Island — is to become China's 31st province this spring as a sign of Beijing's serious intentions to bring Hainan into the modern world.

Beijing's bold plans, if carried through, could mean profound changes for the population of about 6 million people, many of whom remain firmly planted in the past.

Hainan's people work the water and land in timeless fashion; wooden fishing junks crowd the main harbors while peasants work small rice paddies with simple plows pulled by water buffalo. Others cultivate fields of sugar cane, coffee, pepper, pineapple and tea that dot the lush countryside.

In the capital city of Haikou, population about 300,000, the central district's streets are lined with worn two-story buildings that date from the early decades of the century. In the countryside, some peasants live in huts of baked mud and straw and go without electricity.

Nearly four decades of Communist rule has failed to quash ancestor worship and the belief in spirits.

For example, clansmen accompanied by musicians with horns, drums, gongs and cymbals can be seen walking in procession down the island's main road in a ceremony to implore their long-deceased ancestors to return home.

In the mountainous region of the island's interior, the Li ethnic minority still send off their dead amid elaborate rituals that include burials peppered by the noise of firecrackers and vintage flintlock rifles and by drinking parties at which rice wine flows for several days and nights.

The people understand their backwater island is to become a "special economic zone" — China's name for regions where economic practices can stray from the Marxist straight and narrow to spur development — and hope it will mean more money.

"We're very happy" about the plan, says a man surnamed Zhen who earns $16 a month at a Haikou firecracker store. "Our standard of living will go up, our wages will go up."

An employee of the Xinglong Overseas Chinese Farm in southeastern Hainan, taking a brief pause from burning brush to speak with visitors, said she believed that in the future "our wages will rise and so will prices."

But scholar Huang Youjing, a 23-year-old researcher of Hainan's minorities, said he was unimpressed with government efforts to build up the area.

Speaking in Tongza, the minority region's central city where markets are well-stocked and apartment buildings are popping up all over, Huang said the government had neglected the countryside.

"I know what I'm going to say will bring me trouble," Huang, an ethnic Li, said intently within earshot of a foreign affairs official. "The central government has spent a lot of money to put up buildings and give outsiders the impression of a flourishing and rich (minority) area.

"But in reality, the people's standard of living is very low. The central government is not providing money to improve the standard of living" in areas far from the view of visitors, he said.

Whether Beijing's grandiose plans for Hainan development will be realized remains to be seen. The record of the four existing special economic zones along China's southern coast — all much smaller than Hainan geographically — is mixed.

In Shenzhen, which borders Hong Kong, nine years of special status has transformed a sleepy rural area into a boom town of half a million people. But development has been haphazard and the economic incentives offered foreign developers has attracted primarily basic assembly plants instead of high-technology industry.

And Chinese authorities are painfully aware that a previous effort to build up Hainan's economy led to a widespread racketeering scandal three years ago.

From 1980, Hainan was allowed to import duty-free vehicles and 16 other luxury goods for its own use to help speed development. But with the complicity of local authorities, enterprises from kindergartens, banks and newspapers turned themselves into importers and resold the goods to the Chinese mainland.

The trade in 3.3 million cars, color television sets, video recorders and motorcycles lined the pockets of individuals and enterprises with millions of illegally earned dollars.

This time, authorities warn, such behavior will not be tolerated. "Our policy is that getting rich through labor is glorious. However, you should get rich according to our policies," Hainan party official Yao Wenxu explained at a news conference in Beijing last year.

Officials say those policies will include offering 50-year leases on land, relaxing foreign currency controls, waiving duties on imported production material and granting the new province decision-making autonomy. China has said that details of the vague promises will be announced this year.

Reported plans to build a modern infrastructure have been vague, too, although some financing details have started to surface.

For example, about $100 million in World Bank loans are to go to construct the Daguang Hydropower Station, which is expected to generate 240,000 kilowatts of electricity and irrigate about 164,500 acres of farmland by 1990, a press report said.

The need for a stable electricity supply was made clear to visitors recently when power outages occurred three evenings in a recent week at one of Haikou's pricier hotels.

Many Chinese from the mainland believe Hainan is the place to be and are applying to move to the island by the tens of thousands, officials say.

"This is an open place that has a future," said one young doctor who traveled 800 miles from Wuhan in central Hebei province to seek a job at a local hospital. But his chance of success was slim, he said while relaxing at a seaside tourist area, because "too many people are applying."

Design #10492

At last, a magnificent home dedicated to personal pleasures. You'll find a room to suit everyone. A separate TV room removes that dominating influence from the family room and allows the fireplace to soothe. Large formal living and dining areas permit formal entertaining in style. Two patios and an upstairs deck, a den, and an unfinished space lend flexibility. The master suite is stunning and huge, with a separate sitting area with fireplace, a striking walk-in closet, roman bath, and private deck.

Exhibit Focuses On Unique Creations Designed For Personal Home Tastes

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Specialization has been the rule when it comes to furnishing the contemporary American home.

Manufacturers make the furniture, appliances and accessories. Retailers sell them. And, the public, considering pocket-book, taste and convenience of shopping outlet, selects from what's available. If outside help is desired, a decorator may be called in to coordinate the process.

But with many consumers displaying a more active interest in furnishing a home personally, the traditional shopping sources are being augmented and the unique creations of artists and craftsmen are coming home.

In a triple exhibition at the American Craft Museum in New York through the end of April, a variety of objects that inhabit the multiple worlds of art, craft and manufactured products are on exhibit.

They include silver holloware, flatware and jewelry by John Prip, ceramic sculpture by Jack Earl and a mixed selection of artful and useful objects for living created by Scandinavian artist-craftsmen who are carrying to new lengths a rich hand-crafted-art tradition.

(This spring and summer, the Scandinavian exhibition will travel to the Cleveland Art Institute and Fine Arts Museum of the South in Mobile, Ala. The Jack Earl show goes on to the Charles Wustum Museum of Fine Arts in Racine, Wis., and the Octagon Center for the Arts in Ames, Iowa.)

Multiple lives for objects we live with is a good idea according to metalsmith Prip. He says cooperation between artists and manufacturers can stem the tide of mediocrity in product design.

"European countries and Japan gain a reputation for design at the expense of American design because manufacturers have settled for second best. But Americans don't have to look to other countries for design inspiration," said Prip, whose career has included stints as a teacher, shopkeeper and product designer.

In his native Scandinavia, there is a tradition of artists contributing to the design of home furnishings products, according to Prip, who came to the United States in the 1940s at the invitation of the School for American Craftsmen.

At the time there was little or no formal training for metalsmiths in this country. He was instrumental in changing this by building what today are regarded as outstanding educational programs at the School for American Craftsmen, now part of the Rochester (N.Y.) Institute of Technology, and at the Rhode Island School of Design.

Among Prip's credentials are several years as co-owner of a craft shop in Rochester. Later, he was artist-in-residence at Reed & Barton, the holloware and flatware manufacturer, between 1957 and 1970. Some of the silver designs he created then are still being manufactured.

While it is unusual in this country (though not in Scandinavia) for an artist to work in an industrial setting, it is not totally unknown for there to be artist-in-residence programs. But ceramic artist Earl may have broken new ground by seeking an opportunity to learn from the industrial process, rather than to teach something.

Earl says he acquired priceless knowledge by working with skilled laborers at Kohler Co., a plumbing fixture manufacturer in Wisconsin. During the 1970s at Kohler, he observed and learned from workers skilled in slip-casting, mold-making and porcelain firing.

He even brought other ceramists to Kohler in 1978 by conducting a mold-making and slip-casting workshop with another ceramist for 46 artists.

In three separate residencies, Earl fashioned artworks from the raw materials of plumbing fixtures. One well-known piece is a sink with which he created the illusion of a seated girl with shoulder-length hair and a lace collar without substantially altering the fixture.

On The House

By ANDY LANG

From various sources come these bits of information for homeowners:

If you think San Simeon, the former William Randolph Hearst residence in California, is tremendous, you can buy one that's a lot bigger. It's the Otto Kahn residence in Cold Spring Harbor, N.Y., which is up for sale. The 170-room house and 22½ acres of land, known as Oheka Castle, can be bought for $52 million. It encompasses 112,000 square feet of living space, compared to the 40,000 square feet of San Simeon. It was originally built in 1921 by Kahn as a weekend retreat and is being sold as a single family house, largest in the country. No trouble keeping warm in it. Besides a huge central heating system, it has 39 fireplaces.

Young couples having a difficult time trying to buy a new house may find the above data about the Kahn place a bit overwhelming, but just as disturbing is the news that the median home purchase price in the nation increased last year to $95,000, up from $58,000 in 1979. The figures come from the U.S. League of Savings Institutions, which says total household expenses went up even faster than housing expenses. Not true, though, in 11 western states, where home buyers had to dig deeper in their pockets than everyone else to pay their monthly expenses — mortgage payments, real estate taxes, utilities and insurance.

Federal Bureau of Census figures show the percentage of American families who own their own homes has declined every year since 1980, going from 65.6 million to 63 million. Owner-involved construction is seen as one solution to the affordability crisis in housing. The 1988 program of Miles Homes offers owner-involved home builders a package that includes pre-cut materials, cash allowances to cover site work, foundations, permits, well and septic systems and other professional labor services. The Minneapolis-based firm also offers a plan with no down payment.

Condominium purchasers in a Great Neck, N.Y., development get a chance to have a custom-designed residence via a computer program that permits adapting the square footage to their individual needs. Kraus Enterprises helps buyers to individualize their apartments through the first-ever computerized multi-media design display program visualized on four split screens. That makes it a virtual certainty that no two apartments ever will be alike.

A survey by Weyerhaeuser Co. shows real estate appraisers believe well designed and maintained landscaping adds an average of 7.8 percent to the sale price of residential property. The survey was handled for North America's largest exporter of forest and paper products by Trendnomics and the National Gardening Association. It sampled 1,234 members of the Society of Real Estate Appraisers. The appraisers who cited qualitative factors such as appearance and condition were more numerous than those who cited such quantitative factors as replacement and installation cost, which usually are used to determine dollar values in other areas of real estate appraisal.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much helpful information on a variety of subjects in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $2 to this paper at Box 5, Teaneck, NJ 07666.)

Garden Clinic

Q. What should be done in the garden in April?

A. Prepare soil properly prior to planting. Use plastic mulches to warm the soil. In the mountains and Upper Piedmont there is still time to plant cool-season vegetables. Plant warm-season vegetables in the Lower Piedmont and Coastal Plain. Protect tender transplants against cutworms and cold weather. Thin vegetable plantings that are too thick. Feed vegetable plants one cup of starter solution when transplanting.

Purchase materials to stake and cage tomatoes. Check and repair garden tools and spray equipment. Replant snap beans, lima beans, corn, melons and other crops damaged by seedcorn maggot. Keep a garden record on planting dates, varieties, weather, ect. Celebrate National Gardening Week April 10-16.

Q. Not long ago I read about a society formed in North Carolina for daffodil fanciers. Do you know where I can get more information about it?

The North Carolina Daffodil Society is still in the beginning stages but already has members from Asheville to Pantego and Tyner. Direct your correspondence to N.C. Daffodil Society, c/o Ms. Alex Hightower, 2405 Glenwood Ave., Raleigh, N.C. 27608. Dues are five dollars per year. The society's first major event is a daffodil show to be held in Totten Center at the N.C. Botanical Garden in Chapel Hill on April 2 and 3. The society will publish a newsletter and will meet twice yearly. A September meeting is being planned. Q. Will there be another toll-free telephone line to answer garden questions during National Gardening Week like there was last year?

A. Yes. "Organic Gardening" will offer all U.S. gardeners a toll-free hotline from April 11 to April 15. Any gardener may call 1-800-542-GROW between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m. Eastern Time. The staff of "Organic Gardening" will answer questions along with celebrity gardener Eddie Albert.

Here's The Answer

Q. — We want to refinish the floor in our living room. The old finish is stained, scratched and generally in bad condition. We want to remove it. I have been told it can be done with a hand scraper. Is this so? If it is, what kind of scraper should we use?

A. — Forget about the hand scraper. It may be OK for a small area, but not for a sizable floor. Your best bet is a floor sander. Rent an electric one from a dealer who rents power tools. Sometimes your neighborhood hardware store handles floor sanders. You also should rent an edging sander. Be sure the dealer shows you how to attach the paper to the sander and how to operate the machine. The most important thing in handling this machine is not to permit the sander to touch the floor unless it is moving. If it rests on the floor for even a moment when the machine is not moving, it will oversand at that point and you will have a difficult time getting everything level again. The sanding will cause a lot of dust in the room where you are working, even though it has a dust bag. Keep the door to the room closed and be prepared to use some kind of vacuum cleaner and attachment as soon as you finish the sanding.

Q. — We get mildew on the siding on one side of our house. A landscaper told us it was caused by a large tree that is too close to the house and should be removed. Will this be necessary?

A. — The landscaper gave you sound advice. When a large tree is next to the house, it not only keeps the sun's rays from hitting the house, it retains moisture and prevents the circulation of air. These are all conditions that cause mildew. The only way you can save the tree is to find some way of allowing the sun's rays to reach the house. You might try experimenting by cutting off some of the branches but the odds are not in your favor.

Q. — I once used pumice powder and oil to smooth a newly finished wooden surface and small circles were left. Now, I have to do a similar job. How can this be avoided?

A. — By rubbing only with the grain of the wood. Circles are left when the rubbing is done in a circular fashion.

Q. — We neglected to store our long garden hose during the early part of winter and it froze with some water in it. Is it possible to repair the hose or must a new one be purchased?

A. — No way to tell from here the extent of the damage, but it sounds as though a new one might be in order. If the hose is damaged in only two or three places, you probably can do some patching. All kinds of splicers and mending tubes are available. Be sure to tell the dealer whether the hose is rubber or plastic.

Q. Will the type of sand used for a child's sand box be suitable for rooting cuttings?

A. Yes. Mix one-half coarse sand and one-half peat moss and you will have a good medium for rooting stem cuttings of many ornamentals. Keep the medium moist and in partial shade.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 75 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

HAZARDOUS WASTE

DENVER (AP) — With many industries faced with the problem of disposing of hazardous waste, a firm has been formed to provide hazardous waste incineration services.

John Scott, head of Incinatrol Inc. here, says the firm will design and build facilities based on technology proven on a commercial scale in Bartlesville, Okla.

"The Oklahoma incincerator was the first to get an operating permit under the Federal Resource Conservation and Recovery Act and has destroyed more than 4 million pounds of hazardous waste in an environmentally acceptable process," Scott said.

"Simply storing these wastes in permitted sites is not a desirable long-term solution. Incineration has proven to be a safe and reliable form of hazardous waste management," he said.

The abolition of slavery in Canada began in 1793 when Upper Canada officially prohibited the importation of slaves and ruled that children of slaves be free at age 25.

ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS

Sealed proposals, so marked, will be recieved in the office of the Director of Support Services, Greenville Utilities Commission, Greenville Utilities Building, 200 West Fifth Street, Greenville, North Carolina, until 10:00 a.m. (EDST), on April 28, 1988, and immediately thereafter publicly opened and read for the furnishing of load management switches.

Instructions for submitting bids and complete specifications for the equipment or materials to be provided will be available in the office of the Director of Electric Systems, Greenville Utilities Engineering Center, 801 Mumford Road, Greenville, North Carolina, during regular office hours.

Greenville Utilities Commission reserves the right to reject any or all bids and to waive informalities.

GREENVILLE UTILITIES COMMISSION
April 3, 1988

ADVERTISEMENT FOR PROPOSALS

Pursuant to General Statutes, of North Carolina, Section 143-129, sealed proposals are invited and will be received by the Greenville Housing Authority until 11:00 a.m. on Monday the 25th day of April, 1988; at which time at the Central Office, Greenville Housing Authority, 1103 Broad Street, Greenville, North Carolina, the sealed proposals will be publicly opened for the provision of the following:

From the date of this advertisement until the date of opening the proposals, specifications of the materials or equipment are and will continue to be on file in the office of the Greenville Housing Authority, 1103 Broad Street, Greenville, North Carolina, during regular business hours, and available to prospective bidders. Vendors may demonstrate their offered item between April 11, 1988 and April 22, 1988 at 1103 Broad Street, Greenville, North Carolina. The mower(s) will be judged in the following functional areas. a) speed, slow and fast; b) evenness of cut at speeds; c) maneuverability; d) ease of operation; e) difficulty of belt or chain changes; and f) ease of servicing by operator. The carrying trailer is to be industry standard for size and model proposed.

The Greenville Housing Authority reserves the right to accept or reject any or all proposals, waive formalities, and to make the purchase which is in the best interest of the Authority.

The bidder to whom the contract may be awarded must comply fully with requirements of General Statutes Section 143-129, as amended. For further information and to set up time and date for demonstration, contact James E. Barnhill at 830-4000.

K.E. Noland
Executive Director
April 3, 5, 1988.

FEATURES

GIVING POINTERS — Dr. David Phelps, center, a professor of anthropology and the person in charge of the ECU laboratory housing the university's artifacts collection, gives pointers on a group of items unearthed in the Lake Phelps area of Washington County. Listening in, left to right, are Kaea Morris, John Byrd, Wayne Crumpler and Rolf Sundwall. Details of this distinctive Algonquin pottery is shown in the photograph at right.

ECU's Collection Of Archaeological Artifacts Is Expanding

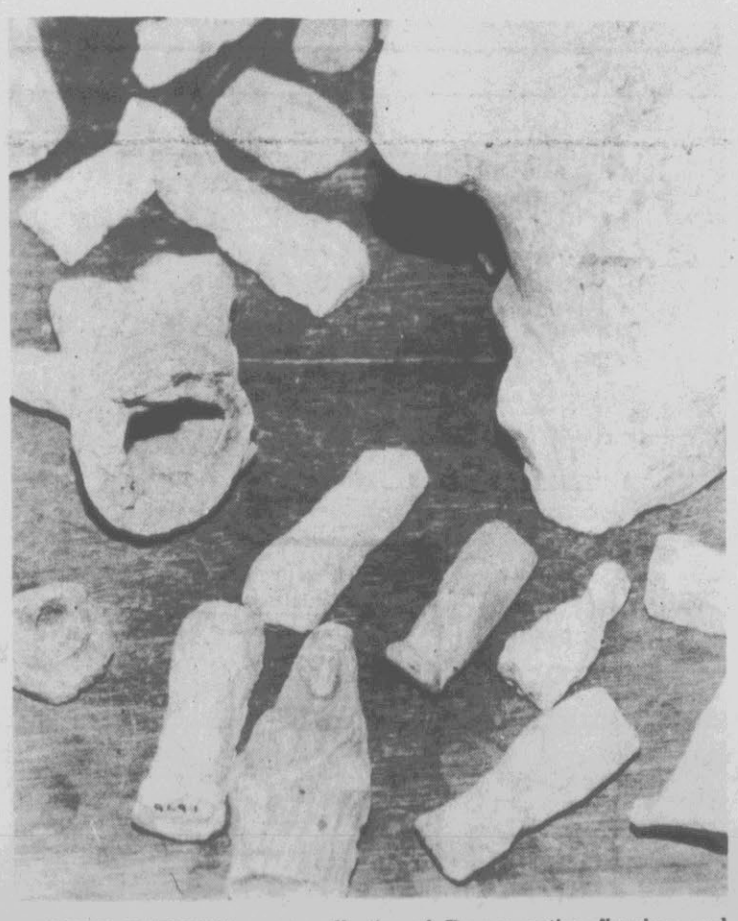
David Phelps is pleased about the space he has been allotted for his archaeological work at East Carolina University. "The light from the outside windows is ideal for working conditions, and personally I think the high arched windows of this old building (the old ECU Cafeteria) are architecturally attractive.

"Nevertheless," he said, "I do look forward to the day somewhere down the road when we can have a museum to exhibit the riches of our collection, where it can be available for use by both our students and the community."

The riches Dr. Phelps referred to is a constantly growing collection of archaeological artifacts that represent items uncovered in excavations throughout eastern North Carolina, along with items from other Southeastern sites, and a selection from early and classic cultures in Central and South America. To a lesser extent the collection contains artifacts from China, Italy, the Philippines, and the American Southwest.

Currently, there is a real problem in adequate space to sort, catalog and store the collections. Opportunities to exhibit a few choice pieces for public viewing rarely come about. The most recent instance of public exhibition was a display of Central and South American artifacts at the ECU School of Art's Gray Gallery in conjunction with a month-long focus by several university department on studies of Latin American cultures.

"Our collection includes objects that can be classified as fine arts as well as a large number of items of a cultural interpretive type," Phelps said. "A university collection needs to include both types in order to have outstanding examples of museum quality for exhibitions and pieces for students to study and interpret."



ROMAN MATERIAL — A collection of Roman votive figurines and miniature ritual vessels of the type used in offerings to temple gods and goddesses are valuable as reference material for students. Many of the pieces are fragments, some are complete specimens. The collection is a gift from the Hazel Smithwick McLane collection.

Eastern N.C. Native

A native of Gates County near the Virginia border, the ancestral home of his family was nearer Greenville, in Bertie County. "My earliest childhood memories are of searching for arrowheads and bits of pottery at Shipyard Landing in Bertie County," Phelps said. "I had a great uncle who used to take me there to let me search. Archaeology is my first love, has been since long before I was old enough to know what the word meant."

Phelps, officially a professor of anthropology, has been at East Carolina University since 1970. "Actually, my main job is running the archaeology lab here. I work with students majoring in anthropology and archaeology. The collection here in the lab is the main source in training students.

"The bulk of student study and work is done here. We go to the field where they learn to excavate and accumulate data. There's an old rule about archaeology — three months in the field and nine months doing class work in the lab."

Coastal Counties Sites

A dominant portion of field work carried out by Phelps and his students has taken place in coastal counties of eastern North Carolina.

"Over the years, we have worked at a number of sites in several counties. One of our major sites was Jordan's Landing in Bertie County on the shores of the Roanoke River. Jordan's was a fortunate find, an almost intact site. The assistance given us for excavation and study there is an outstanding example of the spirit of cooperation and care shown by nearly all landowners when they discover or suspect they have found an Indian site. It's really heartening."

At Shipyard Landing, Phelps noted "because of extensive modern usage, we were able to salvage things only from a few areas still intact. What we did determine is that it was an interesting site, the scene of a densely occupied Algonquin village of the period of 1200 to 1300 A.D.

"Currituck County has provided a number of rewarding sites, in particular a cemetery area with big ossuaries, or communal burial sites. It's the only place along the Atlantic coast discovered to date that has supplied the type of information found there. Such data leads to a better understanding of populations, of the social and political patterns of the Indians."

(The March issue of the National Geographic carries a color photograph of this Currituck site, picturing an ossuary containing a number of skeletons in one burial pit).

"The site has now been placed on the National Register of Historic Places," Phelps said.

Another site that is continually yielding exciting archaeological evidence is Lake Phelps in Washington County. "The discovery of ancient, fairly well preserved dugout canoes on the bottom of the lake has received considerable publicity locally and nationally," Phelps said. "Pottery unearthed there has also been instrumental in our studies. We are still in the process of analysis, typing the pottery. Pottery discovered there gives us dates that help us establish how long Native Americans have used the lake. The last known occupants were the Algonquins. Indications are that there had been continuous occupation there from as long ago as 11,000 years."

Phelps said that the Bertie, Currituck and Lake Phelps sites "are but a few of a sizeable number of places from the Cape Fear to the Virginia line where text excavations have been made. Already we know of more sites in eastern North Carolina than we can get to in the next few years.

"Excavation, study, analysis is a slow process, one that cannot be rushed. Fortunately, from the archaeological viewpoint, the absence of modern industrialization in many areas of rural eastern North Carolina is a blessing. In places like Greenville, where growth is rapid, more possible sites are lost each year because of rapid expansion. Contractors and landowners are however, becoming more aware of realizing when they have come across a possible find. State law specifically requires notification on any repository of human skeletons unearthed. This law provides a protective measure, both of ancient and more modern burial sites."

Student Assistants

Throughout the years, the university has provided valuable assistance to Phelps by assigning students as assistants in the lab as part of their credit requirements.

"At this time, I have working with me two graduate students. Kaea Morris is the senior graduate assistant and John Byrd is junior graduate assistant. Wayne Crumpler, an art major is a lab assistant working on design. I also have an intern from Rose High, Rolf Sundwall, who helps us and is getting early training. These are fine people, dedicated, hard workers."

Other Assistance

Increasingly, Phelps said, "we are having the extent and quality of our artifact collection enriched by gifts and bequests. This is a very encouraging development, one we happy about. People like Donald H. Tucker and Michael Ramsdell are staunch donors who have added immeasurably to our Southwest U.S. Collection. Richard Mauger of the ECU Geology Department and his wife Lucy have given us some fine material. Her father worked and collected for years in Ecuador, and they have donated items from his collection.

"Others have donated too. We're always pleased to receive material, whether it's a single item or a collection."

Funds for ECU's work in archaeology comes "primarily from the state, with occasional corporate donations of funds and now and then some federal funds," Phelps said. "There's not enough to do what should be done in eastern North Carolina, but we're grateful for the help we do get.

Although a museum to house the growing collection may be some years away, David Phelps is confident that "it will come about someday. Somewhere in the future there will be a museum with space enough to do a tasteful, fascinating and useful display along with study areas for both the public and the university people.

"It's going to be nice when Greenville becomes known as a place that has an outstanding regional museum of artifacts from our area and from all areas of the world."

CELADON WARE — Celadon ceramics from the Chinese Sung and Ming dynasties of the 12th and 13th centuries are a prized addition to the collection of artifacts at East Carolina University. The items shown here, plus others, are a recent bequest from the collection of William Knox of Wilmington.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY April 3

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Stay at home during the morning, and catch up on all those little chores you have been putting off. Tonight, however, go out with your friends.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Make some down-to-earth plans for the comming week. Be sure to avoid getting involved in an argument between two of your good friends.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Enjoy the company of your friends and associates for some recreation today. Don't allow a sulky person to ruin your good mood.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): This is a good day to tackle home repair jobs, whether small or large, and get good results. Entertain friends at home tonight.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): You'll have some free time today, so use it to gather the information you'll need to handle a project this week. Be sure to pay your bills.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): If you have a project in mind for this evening, get the backing of your family and it can be fun instead of being so much of a chore.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Set aside some time to revise your budget and make it more realistic. This is a good time to contact your old friends on the telephone.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Remember to use your past experiences as a guide to keep you from making the same mistake twice. Be considerate of your mate.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): If you decide to throw in with some friends on a project, be sure to do your share of the work. Discuss your plans with your mate.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Pay no attention to the grumbling of an old friend, since you know exactly what you are doing. Use your spare time constructively.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): A new contact can give you some good ideas which will help you to progress more quickly. Don't turn down an offer of assistance.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Make sure you know exactly what your responsibilities are, and attend to them conscientiously. Stay at home with your family tonight.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY April 4

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): It may take some serious effort, but it is important that you get your work better organized. Try to be more understanding of your mate.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): If you cooperate with your business partners, you can work much more efficiently. Don't neglect to do any important shopping this morning.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Take the time to think over how you will proceed, and how to handle any problems which pop up, and you'll get much better results.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Make a careful schedule of the day's activities early today, and don't try to rush through your work. Romance blossoms tonight.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Practice some preventive maintenance around your home, and avoid having to make costly repairs later. Avoid social affairs tonight.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): A close friend can put you on the right track to finding the information you need. Rest up at home tonight, and enjoy the company of your kin.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Get the advice of an expert on property and financial affairs, and find out exactly where you stand, where you are headed and how to proceed.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Indulge yourself with some favorite recreational activities, and improve your mood immensely. You can make some great new contacts now.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): This is a time to avoid over-exertion of any kind. Instead, stay at home with your family and organize your finances.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): You have an opportunity to improve your social life tonight, so don't hesitate to take it. Don't rush into any new business projects.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Be sure to pay careful attention to details today, or you could get into a sticky situation. Be succinct and to the point in any conversations.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Put some energy and enthusiasm into your daily routines, and they won't seem so "routine." Keep an eye out for a lucrative business proposition.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 ♠	2 ♠	6 ♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♠ Defense is a difficult art. The correct solution to West's problem was found the day after the hand was played!

South's bidding was strictly for the birds. He might have ended up in an unmakeable six-heart contract when seven diamonds was an absolute laydown. As it was, he was most unfortunate to find that much of his partner's values was in the preemptive bidder's suit and opposite his void.

West got his side off to an excellent start when he chose to lead the ace of clubs rather than a spade. East followed with the ten. Since a spade shift was obviously futile, West continued with a club in the hope that it was his partner who held the singleton. Declarer rose with the king of clubs and successfully finessed the the jack of diamonds. The ace of trumps was followed by a trump to the king, felling the queen. When both defenders followed to the repeat diamond finesse and the queen held, the slam was home.

The key to the hand was to restrict declarer's ability to take two diamond finesses. A shift of only one suit at trick two will prevent declarer from being able to do that. Obviously, the lead of either black suit gives declarer the second entry for two diamond finesses. It is equally apparent that a diamond shift does declarer's work for him. The only suit which does not help declarer is a trump, possibly sacrificing a trick with the queen!

Not surprisingly, we located no one who found the winning defense. Be honest with us: Would you have?

Mexican Museum Offers Clues On Pre-Aztec Civilizations

EDITOR'S NOTE — A museum in southeastern Mexico offers clues to three civilizations that predate the Aztecs. Among other things, there is evidence that these ancient people probably perceived the earth as round, designed remarkably accurate calendars and had an advanced knowledge of mathematics and astronomy.

By ISAAC A. LEVI
Associated Press Writer

XALAPA, Mexico (AP) — Huge carved stone heads, tiny clay figures and thousands of other artifacts at a museum here tell a strange story about three civilizations that flourished long before Columbus discovered America.

It's about the Olmecs, Totonacas and Huaxtecs, who inhabited a long stretch of coast on the Gulf of Mexico.

The fascinating and sometimes gruesome story is told vividly at the Museum of Xalapa, which specializes in the region's archaeological treasures.

A lot is still unknown about the three civilizations. They are believed to have been part of a series of migrations from Asia that started about 35,000 years ago across the Bering Strait, by way of Alaska, and lasted several millenia.

But, says museum director Fernando Winfield Capitaine, "as new finds are made and studies of old ones shed new light, the results may rewrite quite a few history books.

"We don't know what their language was, or what they even called themselves," he adds. "Even the names we use for them are false and relatively new. They are 'nahuatl' names, the trading language of the Aztecs, which didn't even exist at the time."

Only 3,000 of the museum's 29,000 pieces are on display for lack of space. They tell how these people performed human sacrifices, probably perceived the earth as round, designed remarkably accurate calendars and had an advanced knowledge of mathemathics and astronomy, among other things.

The artifacts range in size from a tiny Olmec carving of a rain god 4 inches high, to huge stone altars. The museum's centerpiece is a monolithic head 9 feet high and weighing 16 tons, carved from andesite rock.

Now housed in a new $3 million set of modern buildings covering 14,400 square yards and surrounded by eight acres of wooded park, the museum is part of the Veracruz state university in Xalapa, the state's capital 74 miles northwest of the port of Veracruz.

The Olmecs, Totonacas and Huaxtecas based their agriculture on corn, frijole beans and squash, supplementing their diets with dog meat, river fish and wild animals and birds, which they seasoned with chili peppers, herbs and other spices.

Both their weapons and their tools were crude, mostly made out of stone or wood, and no one is sure how they carved such huge stone statues. But their civilizations were surprisingly advanced for its time.

In his guidebook "Master Works of the Xalapa Museum," Mexican anthropolgist Alfonso Medellin Zenil says it's possible the Olmecs were the first to make paper out of wood pulp in America.

Archaeologists believe the political organization was more of a loose coalition of small towns or city-states than one big government entity. But their influence spread far and wide and some of it survives in present-day Mexico.

They could read and write and knew what a wheel was, but didn't use it, probably because they had no draft animals. Their ancestors had hunted them all out of existence, including the ancient American horse and the elephant.

They spun and wove fibers, including cotton. They tailored their clothes, wore earrings and jewelry, blackened their teeth with natural tar for cosmetic purposes and made rubber from the rubber tree, which is native to the region.

Being cross-eyed was considered a sign of beauty.

By polishing metallic rock, the Olmecs made flat mirrors which they hung over their chests as jewelry, or concave ones, which they used to light fires.

They made music on drums, whistles, ocarinas, clay flutes and other instruments. They traveled and traded extensively, as far west as the Pacific Coast and as far south as El Salvador in Central America, spreading their cultures and acquiring new ones.

As a result, cacao — the bean from which chocolate is derived and is native to the Gulf Coast — became a popular currency for trade throughout pre-Columbian Mexico.

At first, they cremated or simply buried their dead, but later they built little pyramidal rock mounds to mark the sites. Later still, they built the monumental pyramids that survive today.

They played a ceremonial sport with a rubber ball, which was a combination of soccer and basketball. The winning team was afterwards beheaded as a sacrifice, usually to a sun god, although some authorities claim it was the losers who lost their heads.

Other victims had their hearts cut out atop some pyramid or other sacred altar. Some were skinned alive and priests donned their skins to dance before Xipe Totec, the "god of the flayed," in a fertility rite to mark the beginning of spring.

Prisoners of war often had their hands severed so the victors could acquire their strength, skill and magic.

Worship was centered on the sun, the moon and the planet Venus.

All three cultures worshipped the jaguar as a sun god and hunting the animal was forbidden, except for its skins, which priests wore during sacred ceremonies. The jaguar was often depicted in partly human form.

It was said that in times long past a woman mated with a jaguar, giving birth to a "were-jaguar." Archeologists believe this explains the Olmecs' morbid fascination with dwarfs, hunchbacks and other human deformations.

Little is known about Venus, usually depicted as the lesser of the three, except that Ehecatl Quetzalcoatl, god of the hurricane and other winds, and Xochiquetzal, goddess of love and the spring, were probably associated with it.

The most fascinating of the moon deities was Tlasolteotl, the Totonaca goddess of confession, protectress of childbirth and advocate of illicit love and passions. She encouraged people to sin so that she could later absolve them.

Sinners had to confess to her, so that she could devour the "rubbish or spiritual garbage" that weighed upon them.

"But," says Winfield, "only one confession was allowed in a lifetime, and people tried to put it off as much as they could, since there was no forgiveness for a second offender."

Back Issues Are Available

RALEIGH — Since 1924 the "North Carolina Historical Review" has been a definitive source for the study and understanding of North Carolina history.

Now, for a limited time, back issues of the quarterly journal of history are available at half price.

For the first time in many years, the Historical Publications Section of the N.C. Division of Archives and History, publisher of the Review, is conducting a special back-issue sale.

Some early issues of the Review published from 1924 until 1960 are still available in limited quantities. Most issues published from 1960 through 1987 are available. The price is $3 per issue, which includes postage and handling.

To determine the availablility of back issues, write to: Historical Publications Section, Division of Archives and History, 109 East Jones Street, Raleigh, N.C. 27611. State the month and year and the number of copies for each back issue desired.

Send no money until you are notified as to the availability and total cost of the issues wanted.

This offer is on a first come, firt serve basis while supplies last. This will possibly be the last opportunity for interested persons to build a complete set of th "North Carolina Historical Review."

The back-issue sale ends Dec. 31.

Wendell Castle, Creator Of American Art Furniture

EDITOR'S NOTE — Like Thomas Chippendale, 18th century cabinetmaker and woodworking artist before him, Wendell Castle is both a sculptor who makes furniture and a furniture craftsman who makes sculpture. Experts say he's currently acknowledged to be the only major artist working in furniture.

By RANDOLPH PICHT
Associated Press Writer

SCOTTSVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — Wendell Castle, the kingpin of art furniture in the United States, takes delight in creating pieces that sometimes defy definition.

His work, whether it's a chair with a wooden suit coat draped over it or a cabinet that appears destined to topple over, always seems to have a "fooled you again" quality.

The 55-year-old artist has found an interesting niche between the art and furniture worlds.

For example, a ladder-like, impractical sculpture contains a tiny, working cabinet. A beautifully crafted table has an open book and eyeglasses carved out of wood sitting atop the delicate inlay.

He can turn wood into wrinkled sheets and cabinets into spectacular sculpture.

Castle, trying to explain his career recently to an acquaintance who is an attorney, told him, "I make art furniture."

"In this case, that statement didn't help matters," Castle recalls. "So I said, 'It's sort of halfway between being furniture and sculpture.'

"That is exactly what I do, but whether that description means anything to a lawyer, I don't know."

His creations sell for anywhere from $8,000 to $130,000. They have been shown in art galleries and on the pages of woodworking magazines.

His two most important commissions recently have been designing the 500,000th Steinway piano and a 19-foot tall clock sculpture in downtown Toronto.

Castle, a slender, bearded man who wears half-glasses when he delicately trims blocks of wood on a band saw, doesn't mind being a man without a label. In fact, he prefers it.

"I sort of bounce back and forth," he says. "Whenever I get real close to one or stay close to one for very long, it bothers me. Staying in the middle is more difficult, but there's where I really want to be."

In the art world, Castle is well known as the only major artist working in furniture, a field that has a rich history dating back to the Renaissance, says art historian Penelope Hunter-Stiebel.

Probably the "most recognizable artist of this type" is Thomas Chippendale, the 18th century English cabinetmaker, says Hunter-Steibel, a former curator at Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, who acquired a Castle loveseat for the museum. "There's been lots of cabinetmakers, but only a few artists. Wendell Castle is one of the few."

In the furniture world, Castle's name is a "household word" among woodworkers and furniture designers, says Paul Bertorelli, a senior editor at Taunton Press, publisher of "Fine Woodworking" magazine.

Castle graduated from the University of Kansas with an undergraduate degree in industrial design and a master's degree in sculpture.

He painted abstract expressionist art before coming to the Rochester Institute of Technology in 1962 and starting his innovative career that took him to Brockport State College in 1970 and then to his own furniture design school in 1980.

During that time he's created some of the world's strangest-looking chairs, desks, clocks and book shelves. He's tackling a musical instrument for the first time.

"I've never even made a guitar. I've been interested in building a piano for maybe 10 years," he says. Castle was approached by the Smithsonian Institution about building a piano in the 1970s, but the project fell through.

Castle was given the prestigious commission of designing the 500,000th Steinway Model D grand piano last summer and submitted 10 designs to Steinway & Sons.

All of the designs were somewhat conservative, at least by Castle's standards.

"There wouldn't be any point in reinventing the piano," he says. "And since the Steinway Model D is the standard concert instrument in the world I didn't think it would be smart to deviate from it too much."

The 100,000th Steinway is in the Smithsonian and the 200,000th, presented to President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1938, is in the East Room of the White House.

The names of the more than 1,000 Steinway artists, such as Vladimir Horowitz and Van Cliburn, who chose to play Steinways professionally, will be etched into the dark ebony.

In his workshop, Castle gently brushes the sawdust from the dark, unfinished wood as he explains how moving the rear leg on his design dramatically changed the piano's sound.

The rear leg, he says, is always found on the edge of the piano so it won't affect the vibrations that produce the instrument's sounds.

"But I don't like the look of that, so we're going to do a little bit of extra work so we can put the leg here," Castle said pointing to an area in the middle of the piano.

The change will require the construction of a bridge-like device that will keep the leg from actually touching the underside of the center of the piano.

Guild Entry Invitation

WILLIAMSTON — Artists and craftsmen are invited to submit their art or craft for screening for prospective membership into the Roanoke Arts and Craft Guild. The deadline for entry is April 21 at 5 p.m. The place of submission is the Martin County Agricultural Extension Service office, Williamston.

Persons eligible to seek guild membership are artists or craftsmen who are residents of Pitt, Bertie, Beaufort, Chowan, Edgecombe, Halifax, Hertford, Martin, Northampton and Washington counties.

Membership provides the opportunity to participate in the annual Roanoke Arts and Crafts Fair to be held in November, as well as entry into other events.

Requirements for screening entry by April 21 include submitting a minimum of three arts or crafts in one category. A person may submit for more than one category, but must submit at least three examples of each art or craft category.

Materials used, workmanship, design, utility and color are some of the criteria the committee will used in judging. Items made from kits, commercial molds, etc. will not be accepted for screening.

For more information and for application forms, write or call: Agricultural Extension Service offices in: Pitt County, 1717 W. Fifth Street, Greenville, N.C., 27834 (telephone 830-6370); Martin County, P.O.Box 1148, Williamston, N.C., 27892, (telephone 792-1621), or Bertie County, Drawer K, Windsor, N.C., 27983, (telephone 794-3194.)

Art Items In Brief

Paul Dinkins Wins Chapbook Competiton

LAURINBURG — Paul E. Dinkins of Roswell, Ga., a third-year student at St. Andrews Presbytrian College, is winner of the college's 1988 chapbook contest. Dinkins won for his book of poems, "Sins and Cigarettes." The prize for winning the competition is a printing of 300 copies of the book, with the author to receive 50 copies and the remaining copies to be sold by the St. Andrews Press for $3.00 each.

Art Entries Acceptance Dates Set

WINSTON-SALEM — Hand delivered entries for the Seventh Annual Henley Southeastern Spectrum will be accepted Thursday, Friday and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Associated Artists, Inc., 226 North Marshall Street, Winston-Salem. Entry is limited to two pieces of two dimensional work per artist. All work must be original, uncopied and completed without instructor supervision within the past two years and not have been previously exhibited in any other juried show. Maximum dimensions must not exceed 90 inches, length plus width, including frame. Artists whose work is accepted for the show will compete for cash and purchase awards totaling $11,300. For more details call 722-0340.

Elizabeth Darrow Art In New Bern Show

NEW BERN — Art by Elizabeth Darrow is currently on view at the Craven Arts Council and Gallery, 317 Middle Street, New Bern. The show will be on view through April 30. Now a resident of Wilmington, Ms. Darrow is a native of Connecticut and a graduate of Oberlin College, Ohio. She has taught in Pennsylvania, was a fabric designer for Holston in New York City, and district manager of The New Mexican newspaper in Santa Fe, New Mexico. Her work has been exhibited nationally and is in several public collections in North Carolina including Duke Hospital, NCNB, Wachovia Bank and BB&T. Ms. Darrow is also winner of several art awards.

Fans Dote On Author De Wetering

EDITOR'S NOTE — Janwillem van de Wetering wrote his first book at age 40 after years of hopping around the globe and pursuing an interest in Zen Buddhism. The Dutch-born author, who now lives in Maine, was interviewed in New York where he was visiting his publisher.

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Fans of offbeat mysteries set in exotic locales dote on Dutch author Janwillem van de Wetering, a former Amsterdam cop who spent two years in a Zen Buddhist monastery in Japan.

But even though his novels often have a Zen flavor, van de Wetering says the three heroes of what his publisher calls "the Amsterdam cop series" are not followers of the Oriental philosophy.

"They've never heard of Buddhism or Zen," says van de Wetering, who now makes his home in Maine, drawn there first by a Zen teacher. "I mention it sometimes, in a joking manner, because it's popular with the Dutch intelligentsia. The police couldn't care less. They think it's all long-haired nonsense."

Yet, their supercool investigations read like they're following the Zen practice of attaining enlightenment by intuitive insight, beyond intellectual reasoning.

Van de Wetering, now 56, wrote his first book when he was 40. It was "The Empty Mirror," about his experiences in the Zen monastery.

He has written three childrens books, two novels, two books about Zen, a biography of Dutch diplomat-author Robert van Gulik and is best known for 12 mysteries, most set in Amsterdam.

The first mystery van de Wetering wrote, "Outsider in Amsterdam," introduced the wonderfully detached Commissaris, a Dutch municipal police officer, and his underlings in the murder brigade, Adjutant Grijpstra and Sgt. De Gier.

"Originally I wanted to write a realistic book about the police," Van de Wetering said during a visit to New York to visit his publisher. "I had been a policeman myself and thought I could do it. It never came off, even at first. None of the characters wanted to do that.

"Grijpstra was going to be the nasty guy. He immediately became sympathetic. He is my Dutchman, my everyman, my superego. He is not into fantasy. I intended him to be pretty dumb but he isn't.

"De Gier turned out to have tremendous energy that everybody has as a child and then it gets repressed and organized by society. With De Gier it never got organized. He is not in the police for any good purpose; he's an adventurer. He's tremendously curious; he wants to see what goes on. He doesn't necessarily sympathize with goodness and frown on evilness.

"The only one who's got it all together is the Commissaris. He looks like a gray mouse, with his limp, but he really is a combination of them and goes beyond both of them. He is what I think a Zen master ought to be like. The Commissaris is convinced it doesn't matter what you do but he will always do the nice thing."

Two of van de Wetering's mysteries have been made into movies in Holland. Contracts for an American movie have been signed for "Hard Rain," published in 1986 by Pantheon. Ballantine has published all the mysteries and the two books about Zen in paperback.

The author, whose name is pronounced yan-villum van de vet-tevin, started visiting a Zen teacher on the coast of Maine in the 1960s. In 1975, he and his Colombian wife, Juanita, settled nearby. He became disillusioned with the Zen teacher but stayed in Maine because he likes the country. His wife took up gardening. Their daughter is married.

"We live on 60 acres, which is quite normal there," he says. "I see my neighbors when I go look for them. But too many artists hang out in that part of the world. We meet each other in endless encounters that consume too much time. I really have to discipline myself when I go to the post office not to lose all day.

"The weather is so interesting. We all have boats. There's a big colony of seals and we talk about what they do and what bird is coming for the summer or leaving for the winter.

"I have very little discipline. If I don't want to work, I peer at the window and hope the dog will come in. When I want to work, I'll work through the night and the next day won't go to the post office."

Van de Wetering's hobby is making junk sculpture, which he displays around his property.

"I was always frantic about finding certain parts. An old man said, 'Just let it come to you.' I do that all the time now. When I turned 50, I was worried about dying. I wanted a vehicle to guide me across — a horse. The afternoon I thought of it, I went to the beach and found legs and ribs, a sheet of plywood that was a wonderful fit and rope for the tail."

Van de Wetering learned about the Amsterdam police work during seven years in the reserve police, working mostly nights and weekends.

"I had to do it because I got accused of dodging the draft. I left Holland when I was 19 and never remembered to come back. It was kind of a punishment. I liked it. After four years I could have quit."

At 19, van de Wetering went to South Africa to work, then to England to study philosophy for a year.

Dissatisfied with Western philosophy, he spent two years in a Zen monastery in Kyoto, Japan. After that he worked for a chemical company in Colombia, in real estate in Australia, returned to Amsterdam to take over his uncle's wholesale textile business. He got bored with that, sold it after seven years and moved to Maine.

He started to write during the seven years in Amsterdam.

"I always wanted to write," he says. "I couldn't. I did bits and pieces and articles. I read that Henry Miller started when he was 40. I kept the desire alive. I started writing when I was 40."

April Events At GMA

Three events have been announced for the April calendar at the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 South Evans Street. All are free and open to the public.

• At 2 a.m. April 10, a Robert Flaherty film documentary, "Nanook of the North" will be shown. Flaherty, a trained geologist, developed a deep bond with the Eskimos during his hazardous northern travels. The final result of his travels was the silent film document, "Nanook of the North," made in 1922. His discovery of Nanook, a mighty hunter of the Itivimuit Tribe located on the Canada's Hudson Bay began Flaherty's research for the film, the first documentary to show everyday people doing everyday things.

The film was the beginning of Flaherty's career that included "Man of Aran," "Elephant Boy," and "The Louisiana Story." Edward Leahy is coordinator for the screening.

• On April 12, at 10:30 a.m., Ken Marsh, visiting artist at Pitt Community College, will present a gallery talk. Marsh, from Kentucky and with an Indian ancestry, is an artist specializing in stone sculpture, sketches and paintings that reflect the nature of his cultural heritage

• At 3 p.m. on April 24, The East Carolina University Collegium directed by Robert Link will perform at the museum. Hugh Robertson, visiting artist at Wayne Community College, will be guest artist.

The collegium is comprised of ECU students and faculty, as well as members of the community. The group will perform songs and dance music from the Renaissance. The music will be performed on viola da gamba, recorder, crumhorn, lute, and Renaissance lute, all in common use during the Renaissance period.

Poetry Forum Meets Tuesday

The first meeting in April of the East Carolina University Poetry Forum will take place at 8 p.m. Tuesday in room 248, Mendenhall Student Center on the ECU campus.

Those bringing manuscripts to be read and critiqued are asked to bring 10-12 copies for distribution.

The forum, directed by Dr. Peter Makuck of the ECU English Department, meets the first and third Tuesday evenings of each month. The forum is open, without charge, to all persons interested in poetry.

A Tractor Book

"How Johnny Popper Replaced The Horse," a book of full-color photographs tracing the 40-year history of John Deere 2-cylinder tractors, has been published and is now available.

The book illustrates the history of John Deere tractors produced between 1918 and 1960. It features photographs of over 150 tractors taken at the John Deere Antique Tractor Expo in July, 1987.

Persons interested in obtaining a copy can send $27.95 ($24.95 plus 3.00 postage and handling charge), payable to John Deere to: How Johnny Popper Replaced the Horse, 1400 Third Avenue, Moline, Illinois, 61265.

Bath Schedule

BATH — The summer schedule for historic Bath began Saturday. Summer hours are 9 .m. to 5 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays and from 1 to 5 p.m. on Sundays.

The tour of Historic Bath includes the visitor center with an orientation film, the 1790 Van Der Veer House with exhibits and guided tours of the 1744 Palmer-Marsh House and the 1830 Bonner House durng the summer operating period.

Wilson Show

WILSON — An exhibition of painting, jewelry and sculpture by Paul Hrusovosky will open Thursday at The Arts Council of Wilson Gallery, 205 Gray Street. A reception for the artist, free and open to the public, will be held that date from 6 to 8 p.m.

The featured artist with work in Gallery III will be Jim Lux from Apex. He is showing hand-built pottery made form coils of clay.

Playwright Bewildered By Rejections

ROBERT M. ANDREWS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas playwright Larry L. King is scratching his beard in puzzlement.

His blockbuster musical, "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas," ran on Broadway for 1,588 performances to rave reviews, spawned four national touring companies, played on four continents, became a hit movie and has grossed more than $175 million at last count.

But when he mailed the script of his latest play, "The Night Hank Williams Died," to a big New York producer, it was returned a week later stamped "UNSOLICITED MATERIALS NOT ACCEPTED."

Other producers and theater directors responded with polite yawns, broken promises, excuses or no response at all.

"Perhaps I should have sent them 'The Night Abe Lincoln Died,'" King says.

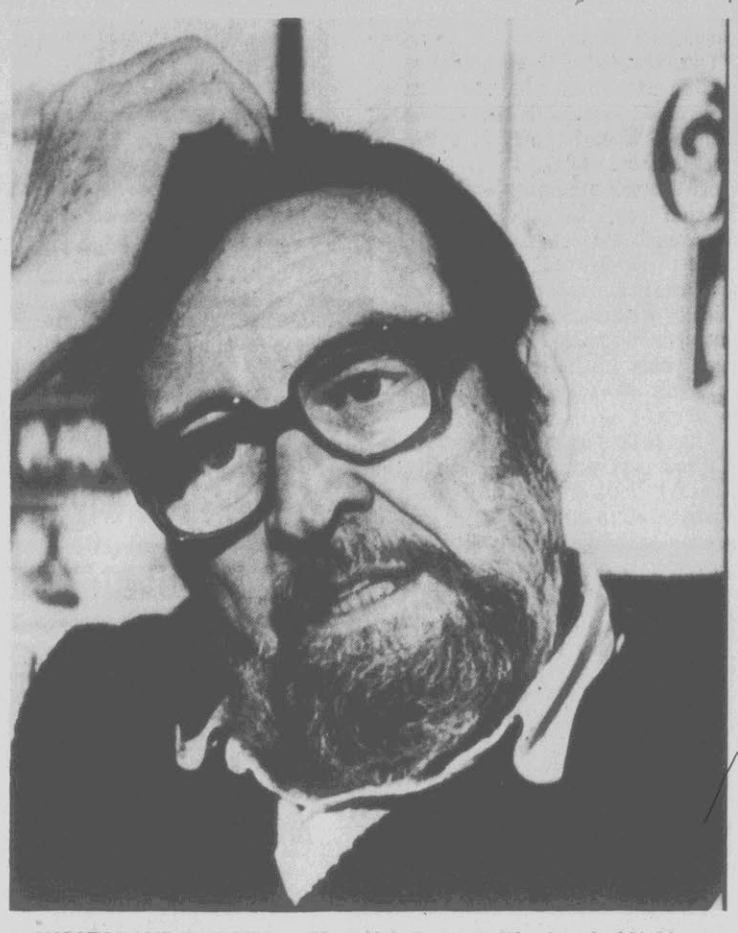
After investing four years and an estimated $7,000 in travel, phone calls, postage, script copying and lawyers' fees, King finally got his play on the boards at Washington's small, financially struggling New Playwrights' Theater, where it finished a successful five-week run in early March.

It's something of a humbling and perplexing experience for King, who already has 11 books, five stage plays, four television documentaries, hundreds of magazine articles, a TV Emmy and nominations for Tony and National Book awards to his credit.

But the playwright shrugs off suggestions that New Playwrights' was a humiliating comedown after the bright lights of Broadway.

During the day, King hustled tickets by phone and delivered show posters to swank downtown restaurants where his pals dined without him.

On arriving at the 125-seat teater near Dupont Circle, his first job was to wash coffee cups for the cast and crew. Then he donned costume and makeup to perform a starring role in his own play, seven times a week.



SUCCESS AND FAILURE — Playwright Larry L. King has the blockbuster hit "The Best Little Whorehouse" in Texas under his belt, but when he mailed the script of his latest play to a New York producer, it was returned a week later stamped "UNSOLICITED MATERIALS NOT ACCEPTED." King says that getting plays produced anywhere in the U.S. is "a perpetual crapshoot." (AP Laserphoto by J. Scott Applewhite)

King has concluded that getting plays produced anywhere in America is "a perpetual crapshoot," no matter how famous the playwright.

"This is not as good as Billy Dick's stuff," King said in a recent interview, using his down-home nickname for William Shakespeare. "But I know this is not a bad play."

The critics agree. And a New Playwrights' spokeswoman, Paige Gold, said "it was the biggest ticket-seller we've had this season."

"The Night Hank Williams Died" is not a play about the legendary country western singer. It's about the death of "a dreamer in a dreamless land," a former high school football star named Thurmond Stottle who's pumping gas in a small west Texas town, working on a beer gut and desperate to escape.

King tells the tale, both funny and sad, with dialogue as hot and spicy as three-alarm chili and the indisputable truth of a man who's been there himself. Unlike Stottle, who was gunned down before he could flee with his guitar and his dream of singing fame in Nashville, Tenn., King made good his escape from west Texas.

He began his writing career as a reporter on a string of small newspapers in Texas and New Mexico before he moved to Washington in 1954 as a congressional aide. While working for Rep. Jim Wright, D-Texas, now House speaker, King finished his first book, a political novel titled "The One-Eyed Man."

Today, while trying to arrange future engagements for "Hank Williams" in Texas theaters and a possible Off-Broadway run this fall, King is finishing his 12th book, a largely autobiographical anti-war novel called "War Movies."

At the same time, he's working on another play, "The Golden Shadows Old West Museum," which is tentatively scheduled to premiere next season at the Arkansas Repertory Theater in Little Rock.

"It's a helluva hard way to make a living," said King, 59, as he lit another cigarette and brushed his blue jeans in the den of his comfortable home in a wooded section of northwest Washington.

Because of enormous production costs and limited financial resources, he says, most theaters play it safe in favor of proven hits. "There just aren't that many theaters willing to do new plays," he said.

He finds it "very peculiar" that the author of the wildly successful "Whorehouse" would have so much difficulty finding a producer for his new play, even in Texas where he is immensely popular.

"All I can figure is those folks don't have much imagination," he said. "When you send in your manuscripts, you just don't hear from theaters. I don't know if they open their mail or even see it. That's not good manners, much less good business."

Dedicated To Adapting Father's Novels

By DIANNE HENK
Associated Press Writer

NAPANOCH, N.Y. (AP) — A realist in the video age, writer Thom Steinbeck believes that film offers him the best opportunity to carry on in his famous father's footsteps.

Sitting in the secluded Catskill Mountain studio of artist Eugene Gregan, his film company partner, Thom Steinbeck explains his plans for Steinbeck Films Inc.

"Our concern is with craftsmanship. Steinbeck spent a lot of time on his work," says Thom, who frequently refers to his father by the family name. "We're going to spend as much time on his work as he did."

With dark, combed-back hair, ruddy complexion and piercing blue eyes, the 43-year-old Thom resembles the prize-winning author who wrote "The Grapes of Wrath," "East of Eden" and other classics of American literature.

Following years of struggle to make a living as an author, John Steinbeck gained national attention in the early 1930s as a writer who could masterfully depict the plight of the disenfranchised and downtrodden. He produced 19 works of fiction, eight of non-fiction and also plays, a documentary and a screenplay.

His 1939 book "The Grapes of Wrath," about the hopeless migration of Dust Bowl farmers, won a Pulitzer Prize. It also was one of the many Steinbeck stories adapted for film.

In 1962, six years before his death at age 66, Steinbeck was awarded the Nobel Prize for literature.

Steinbeck's two sons, Thom and John IV, are writers themselves and now partners in the film venture.

"We chose Steinbeck to work with first because there've been very few accurate interpretations of his work that have been translated into film," Thom says. "In many cases, companies have chosen pieces that are far too long for a 125-page script, which is usually standard."

The results, Thom says, have been films which cut the writing of his father and others to fit the filmmaking "formula."

"On Broadway, the author owns the stage. In Hollywood, he's lucky if he can get invited to a couple of parties," says Thom, who recently completed the screenplay of his father's novel, "In Dubious Battle" for a Los Angeles film company, Zupnick Enterprises Inc.

"Steinbeck is not like a lot of authors," Gregan says, "because he thought visually and wrote visually. Some writers are totally verbal. Steinbeck is easy to intepret to film because he saw it that way. He loved movies. All his best friends were involved in movies."

Thom says his father knew and influenced the writers who adapted his stories for film while he was alive. "It's the films that have taken place since his death that I think he would roll over in his grave about," he says.

The company plans to make full-length feature films based on "Travels With Charley in Search of America," Steinbeck's last book, and "The Moon Is Down," a story about Nazi occupation of a Norwegian town in World War II.

Short stories from "The Long Valley" and "The Pastures of Heaven" are also slated for production, with "The Long Valley" scheduled for release in about a year.

"We want to stay very close to the novel," Gregan says, "so that eventually what people can have is a videotape library of John Steinbeck's work."

If translating books to film is so difficult, then why not leave Steinbeck's efforts in their purest form?

"Because people don't read any more," Thom says with a laugh. "And the only way I can start them to read is by doing accurate interpretations of Steinbeck's work so that they might be enticed to read it."

Some of Steinbeck's work that is already on film shouldn't be duplicated, Thom says.

"Who could play Tom Joad better than Fonda?" Thom said of actor Henry Fonda who starred in "The Grapes of Wrath."

Viking Penquin Inc. has continued to print Steinbeck books in hardbound and paperback editions. The largest printings since 1986 have been 280,000 paperback copies of "The Grapes of Wrath" and 119,500 of "East of Eden."

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By ALAN R. BAILEY

Enterprising children are always on the lookout for ways to make money, and your local public library has the ideal book for them. "Fast Cash for Kids" by Bonnie and Noel Drew (Homeland Publications, 1987) is loaded with ideas.

Everything a child needs to know to be a success at earning spending money is included:

- How to see money-making opportunities wherever you go.
- How to set goals by choosing a money project that's right for you.
- How to make action plans that will get you going toward your goal.
- How to talk to customers and get them to say yes.
- How to be sure your money business makes a profit.
- How to make important choices with your time and money.

The first three chapters offer general tips on money-making — how to get customers, sell the offered service, set prices, and manage time — followed by 101 clearly described projects ranging from the traditional (baby-sitting, running errands) to the more esoteric (painting house numbers on curbs and building floats for parades).

The projects themselves are conveniently divided by category: making money by helping people, working for people, devising holiday projects, selling things, and so forth. An extensive glossary of "money words" is appended.

The authors of "Fast Cash for Kids" do stress that those who undertake any business activity should be aware of their responsibility to contact appropriate authorities for information on regulations, taxes, permits, or licenses. It is also the responsibility of the individual to follow proper health and safety precautions when using the projects suggested in the book.

The authors also believe, "The greatest factor that influences young people's success in life is how they feel about themselves. They need all the positive influence and support they can get to overcome the difficult and stressful challenge called "growing up" that threatens them with self-doubt and feelings of inferiority. Our subject is money, and we cover it thoroughly. But our message to kids is about believing in themselves. They're special! They're born to be winners! Let's do everything we can to help them be successful!"

Art Deco Glamor Being Rediscovered In Miami

EDITOR'S NOTE — Some of the old color is returning to Miami Beach, the art deco treasure-trove that had fallen on hard times. Now, affluent young people are rediscovering the district, lured by refurbished buildings with their pastel-painted accents and distinctive, geometric designs.

By SANDRA WALEWSKI
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A painstaking facelift of the historic but seedy southern tip of Miami Beach appears to be more than skin deep.

City officials are working to ensure the project's success and younger, more affluent tenants keep moving in.

Not long ago, investors remained leery of the run-down area, uncertain whether it could be turned around by refurbishing historic buildings that were crumbling around the edges and cloaked in layers of grime.

But attitudes are changing about the much-publicized district, home to one of the largest concentrations of resort art deco-style structures in the world.

"Investors are beginning to beat a path to my door instead of me to them," says Doris Meyers, who owns Deco Realty. "Now that people have come down and seen others succeed, they're more inclined to jump in."

In the past five years, renewed interest in the district has brought increased property values, higher occupancy rates in rehabilitated apartment buildings, a more supportive stance by city officials and a brighter image for the South Beach area.

While progress has been slow, tourists, curious locals and new residents are finding more redone buildings, with architectural details such as decorative air vents, uneven roof lines and "eyebrows" or sun shades popular in the 1930s, accented in powder blue, turquoise and pink.

With the return of the colors has come nostalgia for a bygone Miami Beach.

Many buildings are being completely redone, with attention to maintaining the historical integrity of the structures.

The district is "in transition," says City Commissioner Bruce Singer. "I think the initial sweep has been done...the initial paint jobs. But the real substance is being put in place."

With change has come displacement. The 1980 Mariel boatlift brought thousands of jobless Cubans to South Beach, where several would share the $200-a-month apartments that were among Dade County's cheapest.

When the city began spurring renovation, inspectors forced landlords to upgrade apartments and limit the number of residents per dwelling, according to Jud Kurlancheek, director of planning. That, along with new interest by young professionals, drove up prices.

While the city doesn't keep track of the ethnicity of its residents, Kurlancheek says the post-World War II Eastern European immigrants who retired to Miami Beach from New York and Chicago weren't replaced. Generally, he says, the advent of condominiums and planned retirement communities elsewhere in South Florida curtailed Miami Beach's image as a retirement haven.

The reaction among those who have stayed has been mixed. Some complain that they've been priced out of their homes, while others welcome the revitalization.

For Saul Gross, a New Yorker who began investing in the area three years ago, when many were still unconvinced of the district's potential, the payoff has been big.

"Everybody told me I was crazy at the time," says Gross, president of the beach-based Streamline Development Co. "It turns out I have 175 apartments and 165 of those leased in the past year at higher rents than anybody ever thought."

Gross' holdings now include 11 apartment buildings and 25,000 square feet of commercial property being renovated on Washington Avenue, which cuts through the heart of the district with an area of about a square mile.

Out-of-town investors in particular have taken more of an interest in the district, acquiring a number of the 800 or so art deco structures. Local investors have not been as quick to jump in.

Some say that could soon be changing.

Chuck Lennon, executive director of the Builders Association of South Florida, says local builders are geared more to large, planned developments on virgin tracts of land. As less land becomes available, builders are likely to turn more readily to refurbishing projects, he says.

City officials are doing their part to lure local investors. Recently, they staged a two-day seminar for members of the powerful Latin Builders Association to promote investment possibilities on the beach.

To protect and promote one of its most popular sections, the city recently passed an amendment to its historic preservation ordinance that gives officials the option of imposing a permanent moratorium on demolition of significant buildings.

The initial 1982 ordinance only provided for a six-month delay in demolition, little more than "a delaying factor, or cooling-off" period to try and convince buyers of historic buildings not to raze them, Singer says.

A 10-month project will begin in March to enhance pedestrian traffic on Ocean Drive, where deco hotels fronting the ocean have become a symbol of the rebirth. Sidewalks will be widened to 15 feet, three times their current width, and ocean-side Lummus Park will be spruced up.

Stuart Rogel, director of economic and community development, says he recognizes the art deco district as "a source of pride and reason for attracting people to our city, whether they come to visit or live in the buildings. ... It's an important area for the city."

Although only about 10 percent of the deco-style buildings have been renovated, progress has picked up in recent years, says Richard Hoberman, president of the Miami Design Preservation League.

"In the past two years, more than half the properties on Ocean (Drive) and Collins (Avenue) have changed hands," Hoberman says.

"The direction of things six years ago was that everything was on the decline," says Denis Russ, executive director of the Miami Beach Development Corp., a private, non-profit group. "Now there is occurring here the development of a neighborhood fabric."

Younger, more affluent tenants are moving into the refurbished apartments, which now rent for up to $850 for a two-bedroom unit, Ms. Meyers says. The average vacancy rate of redone buildings is about 10 percent, a significant drop from a high of 30 percent among buildings not yet renovated.

Meanwhile, apartment buildings in need of upgrading, which five years ago sold for about $12,000 a unit, now command up to $20,000, Ms. Meyers says. Hotels that used to sell for about $6,000 a room, are going for up to $20,000, especially along the ocean.

"We are experiencing a change, a revitalization, a recycling and this will be a continuing phenomenom," Russ says. "I think it's not measured in weeks or seasons, but years. It won't reach the peak of its happening for another 10 years."

Ms. Meyers says the increased activity is snowballing.

"We're not yet out of the woods," she says, "but if the pattern continues, we'll see tremendous change in three years."

India's Ancient Relics Crumbling From Neglect

By SEEMA SIROHI
Associated Press Writer

PURI, India (AP) — Thousands of monuments and temples from India's ancient past are neglected and forlorn, slowly crumbling under the onslaught of time, weather and vandals.

Even the Taj Mahal, the 17th-century "monument to love" that perhaps is the best-known symbol of India's past, is in trouble, its marble yellowing and cracking under the assault of fumes from a nearby oil refinery.

Decay and disregard also blight such famed monuments as the domed, 12th-century temple to the Hindu Lord Krishna here in Puri and the erotic temple sculptures of Khajuraho.

Hundreds of poor people make their homes or even keep their cattle in Mogul tombs. Others cart away chunks of monuments to build makeshift houses. Marble is scratched with uncaring visitors' names, and peepul or fig trees sprout from cracks in ancient walls.

Critics attribute the disrepair to a lack of regard for history by most Indians, a large majority of whom are concerned with day-to-day survival, and a lack of will on the part of the government.

Despite protests from environmentalist, the oil refinery still operates near the Taj Mahal in Agra, the magnificent tomb built by the Mogul Emperor Shah Jahan for his favorite queen, Mumtaz Mahal.

But even at that, the Taj, which attracts 1.4 million visitors a year, is the best preserved of India's monuments, with pollution levels at least monitored and treatment applied to stained marble.

The famous erotic temples at Khajuraho in central India are one of India's main tourist attractions. But large parts of the temples are covered with moss and algae, and hundreds of smaller statues, awaiting transport to museums, lie exposed to the sun and rain.

Of the 85 temples built in the years 950 to 1050, only 22 survive. Those are protected from vandals and treasure hunters only by a single barbed wire fence.

In India, the Archaeological Survey, a 125-year-old government body, looks after 3,524 monuments of "national importance," and state governments are responsible for 1,500 other historic buildings. But that still leaves thousands of sites, either ancient or notable for artistic beauty, with no protection.

"We try to maintain what we have in the best possible condition," said J.P. Joshi, the Archaeological Survey's director general.

"We have helped them survive. Ninety percent of India's ancient history is our contribution. We have worked hard and quietly."

But conservation enthusiasts, such as Abhishek Singhvi, vice president of the Delhi Conservation Society, contend that the Archaeological Survey and the states simply do not have the money or qualified personnel to look after all the majestic remains.

"This is not a priority area and funding is a perpetual problem," Singhvi said.

The survey received about $12 million for monument protection in 1985-86, or an average of $284 a month for the maintenance, repair and protection of each of the 3,524 monuments on the list.

The conservationists maintain the nation as a whole has become complacent about its history.

At Puri, one of the four major Hindu pilgrimage centers, major leaks appeared in 1966 in the dome of the temple to Lord Krishna, but 21 years passed before restoration started.

Haliwa-Saponi Indians Schedule Pow-Wow On April 15-16

HOLLISTER — The 23d annual Pow-Wow of the Haliwa-Saponi Tribe will be held April 15 and 16 at the Haliwa Indian School, Bethlehem Crossroads, near Hollister. All events will take place on the grounds and adjoining meadow area of the school.

DANCE COMPETITION — The Native American dance competition is the highlight of the annual Haliwa-Saponi Tribe Pow-Wow, with Indian dancers coming in from North Carolina and out-of-state tribes to compete. The 23rd annual Pow-Wow takes places at Bethlehem Crossroads near Hollister April 15-16. Shown here are dancers in elaborate costumes in a previous Haliwa-Saponi Pow Wow competition. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor

The annual celebration begins on Friday with a Grand Entry Intertribal Dancing processional at 6 p.m. from the meadow area into the performance area under the trees.

Persons wanting to tent-camp in the meadow area (without hook-up facilities) can do so on Friday and Saturday nights for a fee of $1 per tent.

The admission fee for viewing the dance performances and other events is $1 per car and $1 per passenger in each car. Ample parking space is available in the meadow.

Registration of dancers will be held from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday, with the intertribal dancing and competition to begin at noon. Prize money for winning dancers has been provided by several corporate sponsors.

During the intertribal dance performances, native American music will be performed by drummers, other instrument players and singers.

Native Americans from a large number of Indian tribes in North Carolina — Lumbee, Meherrin, Waccamaw-Souan, Cherokee as well as from tribes outside North Carolina, including Sioux, Oneida, Narragansett and others will be attending the celebration and will compete in the dance competition.

Guest speaker at the Pow-Wow will be Lucille Dawson, director of the East Division of the Administration of Native Americans, based in Washington, D.C.

Other events will include the traditional pipe smoking ceremony coordinated by Haliwa-Saponi Chief Talking Eagle (W.R. Richardson). A display of native American art by artists of various tribes will be on display and native American food will be served.

Hollister is located 26 miles north of Rocky Mount on N.C. 43. Signs will direct visitors to the Bethlehem Crossroads site two miles north of Hollister.

For more information, interested persons can call Linda Mills, executive director of the Pow-Wow at 586-4017.

Neil Diamond Reflects On Career, Music

By RICHARD DE ATLEY
Associated Press Writer

WEST HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Neil Diamond, one of pop music's great iconoclasts, recently contemplated his current songwriting.

"I'm not trying to design any music," he said. "I'm not good at that." Diamond, an electrifying concert performer, has perhaps satisfied the millions who can't seem to get enough of his music with a two-record set, "Hot August Night II," a compilation of his most popular and intriguing work.

The album comes out 15 years after his "Hot August Night," the first to capture Diamond live at the same venue where "II" was recorded — Los Angeles' Greek Theater.

The new album features such favorites as "Song Sung Blue," "I Am, I Said" and "Cracklin' Rosie," along with "America," "Brother Love's Traveling Salvation Show" and "Holly Holy." The LP also includes more recent tunes, such as "Heartlight" and "I Dreamed a Dream" from "Les Miserables."

The concerts in his 1986 world tour, his first in four years, drew 1.7 million fans and sell-out performances, including eight nights at New York's Madison Square Garden and 14 nights at the Greek.

Although he is currently writing material for an album of new songs, Diamond took time to reflect on the past one recent afternoon at his production offices.

It was a different music business in the late 1960s, when Diamond, a hard-plugging songwriter with few successes, finally began to score with "Solitary Man" and "Cherry, Cherry." Radio stations have tightened up since then, responding more to demographics these days than artistic instincts. But even in the '60s, Diamond said, you were expected to fit into certain molds.

If he had been good at bending tunes around what radio needed, he would have been more successful as a staff songwriter, instead of getting bounced from job to job in New York City.

"You go outside the system and try some direction that's your own and hope that somebody likes it," said the 47-year-old Diamond. "I really have to do my best work and hope that somebody likes it, as opposed to trying to fit it into any kind of format. Hardly any of my really good songs fit into any format.

"What is 'Brother Love?' If you look at what the charts were then, it's totally ridiculous. 'America' (was done) before anybody was singing about America, when it was still embarrassing; 'I Am I Said?' takes a look at what was happening in 1971-72.

"I know it was different, I felt it was different," he said. "I just knew that I loved it and it was the best kind of work I could do and that's why it went out and it hit."

Diamond, a self-described "Brooklyn cowboy," has been riding the fences on the edge of music for a long time. He has twice backed off from concert appearances, going on hiatus' to reflect and gather.

In 1972, he abruptly broke off concerts for a three-year period, even though he was the best-selling male recording artist in the country. At the time, he said he did not want to be swept along with success and wanted to take control of the reins.

In 1984, he went to court to force Columbia Records to release his "Primitive" LP, and finally reached a compromise by recording three new songs for the album.

But his trend for musical exploration was formed early in his career with "Taproot Manuscript," an exploration of African music released in 1970 that Diamond attributes partly to his association with South African trumpeter Hugh Masekela at Uni Records, his second label.

"I would definitely like to try that again. 'The African Trilogy' was like a musical experiment. I had never done anything on a scale that large. Although it was only one side of an album, it was really large scale for me — I was used to writing singles," he said.

He attributes "Taproot" to the beginning of a writing period that blended music and theme, continuing with the LPs "Jonathan Livingston Seagull" and "Beautiful Noise," a tribute to the Tin Pan Alley music that was dying when Diamond became a songwriter.

"Beautiful Noise" gave way to the movie score for "The Jazz Singer," in which he starred.

"There's something about getting down to basics that's refreshing," he said. "You get out as high as the moon and somehow you want to get back to Earth and stand on firm ground.

"I just did a duet of 'Heartbreak Hotel' with Kim Carnes, and we just did it for fun," he said. "We loved it, both of us. ... 'Heartbreak Hotel' is one of the bedrock rock songs. ... It's from the era when I was a fan and I was a teen-ager."

Diamond's life began in near poverty in tough, rundown neighborhoods of Brooklyn, where his father was a struggling dry goods salesman.

Music By ECU Faculty, Students To Be Performed

A program of contemporary music to be performed on Thursday will feature works composed and performed by East Carolina University School of Music faculty and students.

The concert is scheduled for 8:15 p.m. in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall. It is free and open to the public.

• Works by faculty are: "Alternate Loopholes" (1988) by Mark Ford, to be performed by the ECU Percussion Ensemble I, Ford directing; "Memoire de M. Monroe" for clarinet and tape, by Otto Henry, to be performed by assistant professor of clarinet Deborah Chodacki; "Notturno" (1988) by Mark Alan Taggard, to be performed by Mark Ford, solo percussionist and the ECU Brass Choir, with Jeffrey W. Jarvis of the School of Music faculty conducting.

• Works by students are: "Symphony for Brass and Percussion" (1987-8) by Michael Bell, to be performed by the ECU Brass Choir, Jeffery W. Jarvis, conductor; "Selections from the 'People who have passed by' Suite" (1988) by School of Music alumnus Barney B. Barker, to be performed by Karla Scott, soprano, Chris Holliday, marimba, and Alisa Wetherington, piano.

A World Class Air Show For Pope AFB

FORT BRAGG — This year's Pope Air Force Base/Fort Bragg Open House on Saturday will feature a world class air show, highlighted by a re-enactment of the bombing of Pearl Harbor, a demonstration to be carried out by the Valiant Air Command group.

This will be the first air show of its kind in this part of the country and will comprise a blimp, balloons, biplanes and barnstormers. The show will include an American-Japanese dog fight, aerobatics, and a number of hot air balloons aloft.

The Valiant Air Command is a group of flyers in World War II vintage planes who will carry out the Pearl Harbor re-enactment. A variety of other civilian-flown aircraft, modern and vintage, will perform in the show.

There is to be an extensive display of modern military might with the Department of Defense's aircraft inventory well represented. This will include F-16 Falcons, A-10 Thudnerbolts, and row upon row of aircraft on the ground. C-130 Hercules will deliver paratroopers and equipment to mock battle areas on the flightline.

Fort Bragg's own Golden Knights, the Army Parachute Team, will open and close the air show, with performances at noon and again at 4 p.m.

The Pearl Harbor re-enactment will be held between 1 and 2:30 p.m.

The open house begins at 9 a.m. and ends at 5 p.m. No admission is charged. Visitors will be parked in designated areas on Fort Bragg where shuttle transporation will be provided to the show sites.

Saturday Opera

NEW YORK — Mozart's "Cosi fan tutte" will be broadcast live from the stage of the Metropolitan Opera beginning at 1:30 p.m. Saturday. Locally, it will be heard over radio stations WRRF, Washington, N.C. and WTEB, New Bern.

Kiri Te Kanawa and Diana Montague will sing the roles of the two sisters, Fiordiligi and Dorabella, in love with two officers — Ferrando and Guglielmo, sung by David Rendall and Hakan Hagegard.

Hei-Kyung Hong will sing Despina and John Cheek will be Don Alfonso.

Earth, Wind & Fire Returns With A Whirl

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Earth, Wind & Fire aren't making a timid comeback. They're touring the world like a whirlwind on fire.

The group, which disbanded in 1983, has always been known for its stage spectacles and this time is no exception. Magician Doug Henning staged the tour in 1979, with levitation and vanishing acts. In 1982, their last tour, founder-leader Maurice White exchanged thunderbolts with Darth Vader.

This year, the set cost $1 million. But White wouldn't say too much about their special effects just before the Jan. 9 opening show in St. Petersburg, Fla., except that it's "illusionary."

The sound, the audience already knows. A single, "System of Survival," was released in October and a Columbia Records LP, "Touch the World," followed in November. As the new year began, the single was No. 1 on the dance chart and the album was headed for the pop Top 20.

Earth, Wind & Fire is back because of its high-voice singer Philip Bailey.

Bailey has given concerts of Christian music since 1975. In 1984, Phil Collins produced Bailey's album, "Easy Lover." They did a duet on the title song, which was one of the biggest hit singles of 1985 and brought Bailey more fame and name recognition than he'd had in Earth, Wind & Fire.

But it was Bailey who, for a year, would call White and press for a group reunion.

"In the beginning I had no feelings about trying to get it back together," White said. "He finally convinced me. It just started to feel right, after awhile. That's the reason I took the break in the first place; I had lost the feeling for doing it. When the feeling returned, it was time for me to get to work.

The 46-year-old White has been on the stage since he was 6. "You have those times when you miss it. I still love the studio also. Both things kind of pulled at me all the time."

Since 1983, White made a solo album, wrote and produced three cuts for Barbra Streisand's "Emotion" album, wrote and produced four cuts for Neil Diamond's "Back to the Future" album and wrote and produced the soundtrack to the film, "Armed and Dangerous."

"After the 1982 tour I decided I had grown very tired of touring and performing," he said. "I had a meeting and said I was going to take a hiatus. We were going to separate and do different things. For some of them I'm sure it came as a surprise. Others pretty much saw it coming. There were no bad feelings. Everybody stood up to the occasion. Everybody went out and started doing things on their own."

The tour band then had nine people in it. Now there are six: drummer White, vocalist Bailey, White's bassist brother Verdine, saxophonist Andrew Woolfolk and percussionist Ralph Johnson from the old band and guitarist Sheldon Reynolds.

After drumming for Ramsey Lewis for four years and drumming on 10 of his albums, White formed Earth, Wind & Fire in 1970 and became its leader.

"I still have the last word," he said. "I'm still leader, but on a different level. Now I give everybody a lot more responsibility. I told them I wanted the duties to be split up. We have a more democratic type of situation. It works better this way.

"Philip has assumed a lot more responsibility. It's sort of divided between him and Verdine. It takes a lot of the load off me."

The first single, "System of Survival," arrived in an unusual way. White and Bailey were in San Francisco recording the album.

"We came out of the motel one morning to the car. Attached to the door handle was a pouch with a tape of the song in it; it was by Skylark. He's a bass player, out of San Francisco. He had followed us around. He was very polite in the sense he didn't want to disturb us. He left the tape and his phone number. I called him and told him the song was going on the album. It's the first tune he'd ever had a tune recorded."

The second single will be "Thinking of You," which White wrote with Wanda Vaughn, lead singer of the Emotions, a group he has produced on record.

When Bailey was in Norway on tour, his pianist, the Rev. Oliver Wells, played him a song he'd written, "Touch the World." That became the album's title song.

Ron Ely Has New TV Role

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ron Ely is back in the swim of television as underwater investigator Mike Nelson in a new syndicated version of "Sea Hunt."

The original "Sea Hunt" was rejected by the networks in 1957 because they didn't think it would hold water — the first of many water jokes made about the show, which was syndicated from 1958 through 1961.

In the meantime, the networks had second thoughts. CBS came up with "The Aquanauts" in 1960 from the same producer, Ivan Tors. One of its stars: Ron Ely.

"It was fairly simple to step into the role for 'Sea Hunt,'" said Ely. "I looked at the concept as they had designed it for the 1980s. I didn't consider the old project. The only similarity between the two characters is that they're both divers.

"The new Mike Nelson is a Vietnam vet, a former Navy SEAL. He's a widower with a grown daughter. There's something compelling about that, the image of an action-oriented man who has a sensitivity and a sense of responsibility."

The idea for revising the show began with Lee Rich, chairman of MGM-UA Communications Co. Rich was looking for a show to compete in the tough syndication market against situation comedies. A little research showed that United Artists had bought a number of shows in the 1960s, among them "Sea Hunt," "The Aquanauts," and "Highway Patrol."

"Sea Hunt" was the highest-rated action adventure series ever produced directly for syndication. In its 156 episodes, it averaged a 40 percent share of the audience and was first in many cities.

So, the decision was made to do another version of "Sea Hunt." A 7½-minute presentation film was made to show to the convention of television programing executives. The boat used in the film was the San Pedro-based "Golden Dubloon" owned by Mel Fisher, who recovered millions in Spanish gold off the Florida Keys.

The old "Sea Hunt" was one of most expensive series of its day, running $40,000 per episode because of the costs of chasing warm water, from Southern California to Florida to the Caribbean.

When it came time to film the new "Sea Hunt," the production company didn't head south, but north to Victoria, British Columbia. Underwater scenes, however, were done by a second unit in the Bahamas.

"We went to Victoria because we needed an island and the open sea," Ely said. "Plus they had several very picturesque harbors in the vicinity. We were able to duplicate the Caribbean, Southern coast and Mexico fairly well.

"A double does the underwater diving in the Bahamas," he said. "I do the entries and surface and topside stuff. Logistically, I couldn't do both. The water around Victoria is extremely cold, and visibility is limited to 10 feet.

Ely started as a contract player at 20th Century-Fox. "Everything was available to you," he recalled. "You could taking riding lessons, fencing, dancing. You did your apprenticeship and learned your way and were judged by your peers. I like the old studio system, and I think the project showed that it worked. It mattered whether you did a good job. The attitude today is that if you're doing a small part, you can fluff it off and it doesn't matter."

Ely, a former TV "Tarzan" and "Doc Savage," as well as the host of the "Miss America Pageant" for two years, looks right for the role. He's tall and muscular, has a handsome, tanned face and white hair. The image was boosted by the diver's watch he was wearing.

Ely said he was able to read 15 scripts before he went to Victoria.

"We were well ahead of the game," he said. "We had a good, fast, energetic crew. We did 22 shows and we're finished for the year."

He had moved to Santa Barbara with Valerie, his wife of four years. They have two children.

"When I accepted the role in 'Sea Hunt' it became the major focus of my life," he said. "I took the whole family to Canada."

He also talked over the role with his tennis buddy, Lloyd Bridges.

"He told me what every actor tells another going into a TV series — watch the scripts," he said.

The two events cancelled are: The Monday faculty recital by Deborah Chodacki and John O'Brien, and the Friday graduate recital for Joanna Legg.

Empire Brass Quintet To Perform At ECU On Friday

ECU News Bureau

The Empire Brass, a versatile instrumental quintet which plays all types of music — from Baroque to contemporary, from Bach and Handel to Bernstein, from Gershwin to Jelly-Roll Morton, will perform at East Caroina University Friday.

Their concert, the final event on the 1987-88 ECU Artists Series, is scheduled for 8 p.m. in Wright Auditorium.

Since its inception, the Empire Brass has been in the vanguard of new music performance. The group has commissioned a total of more than 50 works from leading contemporary composers, while maintaining their "archaeology" repertoire of rediscovered music. The latter type includes two collections of popular 19th century American brass music which were discarded from the Library of Congress.

The quintet is the first brass ensemble to win the prestigious Naumburg Chamber Music Award, and has toured Europe and Japan. The Empire Brass has given a command performance for Queen Elizabeth II and appeared at a presidential inauguration concert; other performances have been broadcast on television in the U. S. and abroad.

Among the more than 20 recordings featuring the Empire Brass is the acclaimed "Bach Festival for Brass and Organ" with Douglas Major for Angel-EMI.

The ECU appearance by the Empire Brass is partially funded by the National Endowment for the Arts.

A reception honoring the quintet will be hosted by the ECU Department of University Unions and WTEB-FM Radio, New Bern, following the concert at the ballroom of the Greenville Hilton Inn.

Refreshments will be served at the reception, scheduled for 10 p.m. to 1 a.m. Admission to the reception is $15 per person for ticketholders.

Tickets to the concert only are available at the ECU Central Ticket Office in Mendenhall Student Center, open weekdays from 11 a.m. until 6 p.m., telephone (919) 757-6611, ext. 266. Reception tickets at $15 each and concert-plus reception tickets at $25 each may be ordered from WTEB-FM, P. O. Box 885, New Bern, N. C. 28560.

FRIDAY PERFORMANCE — The Empire Brass quintet will perform at 8 p.m. Friday in Wright Auditorium on the ECU campus. Members of the quintet are J. Samuel Pilafian, tuba, Jeffrey Curnow, trumpet, Martin Hackleman, French horn, Scott A. Hartman, trombone and Rolf Smedvig, trumpet. For ticket information on the concert and for a reception at Hilton Inn call 757-6611, extension 266.

Festival In Farmville On April 21

David Wheeler of New Orleans will present Art Riot Theatre in Farmville April 21 during the town's Dogwood and the Arts Festival.

The performance will be offered at 7 p.m. at the Farmville Community Arts Center on N. Main Street.

The A.R.T. is a miniature theater with marionettes, hand puppets and kinetic sculptures cast in polyester resin. It is used to lampoon debuts — unveilings and presentations of this century that resulted in violent audience reactions.

Included are renditions of Igor Stravinsky's "Rite of Spring", a Dadaist performance at the Salle Gaveau in Paris, the initial screenings of Luis Bunuel and Salvador Dali's "L'Age Dor," the expulsion of Lenny Bruce from London as an undesirable alien, the debut of Arnold Schoeberg's "Pierrot Lunaire," and an unauthorized exhibition of modern art in Moscow in 1974.

The response is provided by small mechanical audiences that throw scale-model vegetables, hoots and howls and waves arms in displeasure.

The performance is partially funded by a matching "New Works Grant" from the North Carolina Arts Council. The grant was written with the East Carolina University Art Department, assisted by Dr. Edward Levine, dean of the department.

Lesotho, an 11,700-square-mile kingdom in southern Africa (completely surrounded by the Republic of South Africa) has issued a set of four new stamps hailing the explorations of Christopher Columbus. Lesotho was known as Basutoland until 1966, when it gained independence from Great Britain.

Free Concert At Reynolda House

WINSTON-SALEM — Arijanti van Dierendonck, a pianist from Holland, will present a concert at 8 p.m. Thursday at Reynolda House, Winston-Salem. It is free and open to the public.

Pamela Harriman with husband Averell, who died in '86

Q. In my opinion, there is no more fascinating, spellbinding and beautiful woman in Washington than Pamela Harriman. She is the widow of W. Averell Harriman, who was governor of New York, U.S. Ambassador to Moscow and one of our greatest statesmen. She also was married to the producer Leland Hayward and to Randolph Churchill, son of Sir Winston. Here is a woman who has lived an enthralling life. Yet no major articles or books have been written about this lovely lady. Is there a reason? Can it be, as rumor has it, that she once worked for our CIA?—K.L., McLean, Va.

A. British-born Pamela Digby Churchill Hayward Harriman, 68, has indeed lived an engrossing life, studded with the names of famous men. There is no evidence, however, that she ever worked for our Central Intelligence Agency or any of Britain's intelligence services. For reasons of her own, Mrs. Harriman, a power in Democratic Party politics, does not care to submit to interviews in depth by reporters or biographers. One day she may.

Q. Before he made it big in Hollywood with his "Rocky" and "Rambo" pictures, is it true that Sylvester Stallone was a porno star at $250 a week?—L.G., Pacific Palisades, Calif.

A. Stallone was never a porno star. To keep body and soul together in his poverty-stricken days, however, he acted in a soft-core porno movie called "Party at Kitty and Studs."

Q. Please bring me up-to-date on Tracy Austin, the tennis player. She was 14 when she competed at Wimbledon and 16 when she won the U.S. Open in 1979. Has Tracy retired?—Lizabeth Spencer, Daytona Beach, Fla.

Peter Borsari

Austin and actor Andrew Stevens

A. Owing to injuries, Tracy Austin, 25, of Palos Verdes, Calif., hasn't played in a Grand Slam tennis tournament since 1983. There is talk, however, that she may shortly embark on a comeback. For the last few years, Tracy—unranked since 1984—has been living on product endorsements and modeling assignments. She is single, plays tennis when the mood seizes her.

Q. Jimmy Stewart will turn 80 on May 20. He has starred in motion pictures for about 50 years, yet one hardly ever reads about all the loot he has earned. Wouldn't you say Stewart has to be one of the richest actors in the business?—J. Whitaker, Hyattsville, Md.

A. Yes, we would say that. Stewart—one of the shrewdest financial cookies in Hollywood, although he doesn't look or sound the part—entered into a contract with Universal Pictures in the 1950s whereby he took a sizable percentage of his films' profits. He also had available the advice and guidance of a top talent agent, the late Herman Citron. It was Citron who saw to it that Stewart reaped a hefty fortune by combining forces with Alfred Hitchcock, Anthony Mann and other commercially successful directors. The actor's fortune has been estimated at $25 million.

Ron Galella

Gloria and Jimmy Stewart

Q. Here's a question about the wife of Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, who wants to be the Republican Presidential candidate: Elizabeth "Liddy" Dole is 13 years younger than her husband. She is better educated, having been graduated from Duke University and Harvard Law School. She has a more friendly, likable disposition. She's a lady of experience, erudition, breeding and unblemished character. Wouldn't she make a better President than her trigger-tempered husband?—B.N., Topeka, Kan.

A. Elizabeth Dole undoubtedly is kinder, more gentle, sympathetic, educated and agreeable than her husband, but these traits are not necessarily the most important for a President. The office requires decisiveness, resolution, courage, calmness under fire and intensive political experience.

Q. Kevin Costner, who was so terrific in "The Untouchables" and "No Way Out"—is he married?—Marcia Madison, Fort Wayne, Ind.

A. Costner and his wife, Cindy, have been married since 1978. They have two daughters—Annie, 3, and Lily, 1.

Q. What famous actor was arrested for homosexual importuning in the gent's room of a London park and then knighted? I've written countless times, suggesting several names, not out of idle curiosity but from an earnest desire to learn. Why do you refuse to reply?—G.T., Somerville, Mass.

A. It is clear from your inquiries that you already suspect his identity. To name him would do him harm, and surely you want no part of that.

ministration in 1861, we had the same sort of situation, a period of stagnation. The four Presidents in that period were Taylor, Millard Fillmore, Franklin Pierce and James Buchanan. I think it was one of the worst periods the country ever went through.

Taylor was a field general, one of the great ones. But when he became President of the United States, I don't think he knew what to do. I can't be charitable and say that he failed to carry out his program; he didn't have any program to carry out.

He was just elected as a military figure, and he spent his time in office behaving like a retired general. He became expert at doing nothing. Millard Fillmore, Taylor's Vice President, became President when Taylor died in 1850. He was another of those Presidents who did nothing worth pointing out.

Bettmann Archive

FRANKLIN PIERCE

A Democrat from New Hampshire, he had even features and curly hair and was one of the best-looking men ever in the White House. He was also one of the most vain. But, though he looked the way people who make movies think a President should look, he didn't pay any more attention to business as President of the United States than the man in the moon, and he really made a mess of things. Though he was a Northerner, he believed in slavery, pretty much, and once said in a speech, "I believe that involuntary servitude, as it exists in different States of the Confederacy, is recognized by the Constitution."

Bettmann Archive

JAMES BUCHANAN

He was one more do-nothing President. The worst thing about that is that he came just before the Civil War and had a lot to do with bringing it on. He ended up throwing everything into Lincoln's lap.

He also wrote a message on the veto of the first land grants and the first land grant colleges that's a comic masterpiece. He was more or less for free land grants himself but didn't really have the guts to go against its opponents, so he simply vetoed the bill and put it off into the indefinite future. The thing that was comic was that he also had to veto land grant colleges, and he justified this by explaining that the country didn't require further education. In fact, the old fool went on to say educated people were too hard to handle, and he thought there were too many already!

Culver

ULYSSES SIMPSON GRANT

His period in office seems to prove the theory that we can coast along for eight years without a President. Well, of course, we also did it with Eisenhower.

I think Grant did what he had to do all through the Civil War and did it well. He came to accept Lee's surrender with the mud still on his uniform, instead of acting like a God and a conqueror the way Douglas MacArthur sometimes did when I was Vice President and President.

His Administration was one of the most corrupt in our history, but he didn't even know all the crooked business was going on when he was President of the United States. It's hard even to imagine that, but it's true.*

Grant's period as President was one of the low points in our history. I don't think he knew very much about what the President's job was except that he was commander in chief of the armed forces. He was pretty naïve or ignorant about everything else.

*I wish my father were around today to give me his views, and to tell me what he believes or doesn't believe, about the Reagan Administration and Irangate.

Culver

BENJAMIN HARRISON

I tend to pair up Benjamin Harrison and Dwight Eisenhower, because they're the two Presidents I can think of who most preferred laziness to labor. They didn't work at all. Harrison was a general in the Army of the United States and in the Civil War, and he just wanted to retire as a general, just as Eisenhower did. The only thing that's remembered about him today is that he had a billion-dollar Congress during his term in office.

WARREN GAMALIEL HARDING

Culver

His Administration was the most corrupt in our nation's history, and it was a lot worse than Grant's.

Harding didn't really understand the responsibilities with which he was faced. I don't enjoy making detrimental remarks about a man who had been President of the United States, but he never did know what the Presidency was all about. His previous work as a Senator and as a newspaper publisher just didn't seem to give him any insight into the job. I don't think there's any point in editorializing on the Teapot Dome scandal and the other scandals of the Harding Administration, either. They speak for themselves.

CALVIN COOLIDGE

H. Armstrong Roberts

As Vice President, he took over when Harding died in office. He was quite a character, and there are a lot of funny stories about him, but I guess pretty nearly the only thing I like about him are those stories. He believed that the less a President did, the better it was for the country, and I don't agree with that at all. He sat with his feet in his desk drawer and did nothing. He just sat there and signed bills when they came up, and vetoed a few, and that's all there was to it. Coolidge didn't think the President ought to interfere in any way with the policies of the legislative branch, and yet the President is the man who makes policy, or should make policy, for the whole country.

Frederic Lewis

DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER

He's the final President in my no-enthusiasm category, and I've sprinkled enough comments throughout the pages before this one so that you know that I'm not one of Mr. Eisenhower's admirers. Even if I say so myself, I tried so hard to be pleasant and cooperative when I was turning the office over to Eisenhower, but he acted as if I was his enemy instead of the fellow who'd had the job just before him.

It's interesting that a single thing, that great smile of Eisenhower's, gave him the worldwide and lifelong reputation of being a sunny and amiable man, when those of us who knew him well were all too aware that he was essentially a surly, angry and disagreeable man, and I don't just mean to me, either.

None of that is important, of course; the important thing is that he didn't do a thing as President.

It just isn't the case that when, as I believe Eisenhower did, a President thinks that he's a kind of monarch or king who should be above everything that happens in the world and in the country, the Congress will do all the work. That's bad not only for the Presidency; it's bad for the country and the world. The Chief Executive has to transact the business of the country: He has to provide leadership, and he has to have a program and the guts and ability to put it over. And Eisenhower never made any effort to put forward the leadership to which he was entitled, and he didn't have any program.

What Makes Good Presidents Good

NOW, LET'S TAKE A LOOK AT THE things I believe a man has to have inside him, and the things he has to do or not do, in order to be a good President.

First and most important, a President must be strong, particularly where there's the temptation, as there so often is, to look the other way and do nothing because the matter at hand is unpopular or unpleasant or difficult to attempt or accomplish. It may well be true that the best government is the least government, but when it comes to the point where an emergency arises, or when something has to be done (and sometimes in a hell of a hurry), then you want somebody in charge who knows how to do the job.

You might think this is obvious, but it really isn't, because the odd fact here is that there are times when the general public seems to prefer weakness in a President.

I happen to be in a minority in my opinion of that man who came after Coolidge, Herbert Hoover. I know most people think he was a poor President and practically caused the Depression single-handed, but I think he was actually a President who tried hard and did the best he possibly could but was faced with difficulties he just wasn't able to overcome at the time. I think he and his Administration were blamed for things which were not their fault, things which were coming on ever since Wilson left office and Harding became President in 1921.

Equally important, a good President must have the ability to come up with new ideas and an understanding of how the implementation of these ideas will affect not only the present but also the future. To put it a different way, a good President has got to have an understanding of history.

The next essential quality is the ability to convince the Congress to go along with his ideas, and, of course, also convince the general public that his ideas are good—particularly when, as often happens, a lot of legislators and a large segment of the general public don't think much of the ideas when they're first presented. And with this quality must go the ability to be able to determine and understand exactly the way the people are thinking.

A good President should also have the ability to continue and further the good programs of former Presidents and not try to abandon them simply because the previous President, or Presidents before that one, belonged to a different political party.

My definition of a leader in a free country is a man who can persuade people to do what they don't want to do, or do what they're too lazy to do, and like it. Of course, you've got to have a program that you yourself believe is the best you can get together.

And, to get his programs over, a good President must inform the people of exactly what he's trying to do and keep on informing them. The dictators of the world say that if you tell a lie often enough, people will believe it. Well, if you tell the truth often enough, they'll believe it and go along with you.

FROM THE FORTHCOMING BOOK "MORE PLAIN SPEAKING." EDITED BY MARGARET TRUMAN AND SCOTT MEREDITH

It's up to parents to instill the desire

Does Your Child Love To Read?

BY CLAIRE CARTER

Brent Petersen

By sharing the magic of that special story, you can help a child develop a lifelong love for books.

How can you inspire a child to read? Today, many children never develop a love for books. A 1980 California study revealed that nearly 70 percent of sixth-graders polled said they rarely read for pleasure—an identical percentage said they watched four or more hours of TV a day.

How can you help a child discover the magic, joy and wonder that can come from reading a book? To find out, I spoke with Charles Schulz, the cartoonist, Maurice Sendak, who draws and writes books for children, Judy Blume, who writes for young adults, and Jim Trelease, an authority on motivating children to read.

CHARLES SCHULZ, the creator of Peanuts, doesn't think it matters what children read, as long as they read something. As a child, Schulz loved reading comic strips—especially Buck Rogers and Popeye—but in his day, says the cartoonist, "teachers frowned on that kind of reading material."

Schulz thinks young readers are turned off by books with long descriptive passages. "The books that have a lot of conversation," he says, "are easier and more fun to read." In comic strips, he adds, "the characters talk just the way you do, and when a comic strip is well drawn, it's fun to look at too."

"The business of pushing adult classics on children too early is ridiculous," he says, "because they hate reading them and don't understand them." He incorporated this idea in Peanuts when Linus had to write an essay on Ethan Frome and commented, "How can I write about marriage and the problems of adults? I'm too young."

Tip for parents: It doesn't matter so much what your children read as long as they read something—even a comic strip.

The books of MAURICE SENDAK deal with the real feelings children have—anger toward a parent, jealousy over a new baby, being bored during summer vacation.

In his most popular book, Where the Wild Things Are, the boy, Max, misbehaves, and his mother sends him off to bed without dinner. He is angry with her and uses his imagination to carry him away. Sendak feels that "children take courage from the things that happen in stories that reflect on their own lives." He adds, "Stories give them answers when no one else will."

For both the child and the man, reading has played an important role in Maurice Sendak's life. "It is a natural, intense appetite," he says, "probably stimulated by being the youngest of three siblings. My brother and sister were avid readers, and the youngest child wants to compete with what the older ones are doing."

His father greatly influenced his interest in reading, he says, but not by reading stories from books. His father did something better—he made them up. To the young Sendak, that was wonderful. "They were like fresh from the oven," he recalls. "All the twists and turns were spontaneous."

Tip for parents: Tell your children stories and read to them as much as possible.

JUDY BLUME—the author of many best-selling books for young adults, such as It's Not the End of the World, Blubber and Are You There God? It's Me, Margaret—feels that when a child lacks interest in reading, it's because "he or she hasn't found the right book that clicks." She suggests taking children to the library, where they can browse and be exposed to many kinds of books. "They should be allowed to choose their own books without the parent being judgmental," she says.

Blume discovered her first favorite book at the public library at age 5. It was called Madeleine and, Blume says, "I loved it so much that when it was time to return it, I hid it. And I didn't tell my mother where, because I thought it was the only copy in the world."

Blume feels inspiring kids to read is not something one does by talking about it, but by example. She remembers coming home from school as a child to find her mother engrossed in a book. "Children are encouraged to read by seeing their parents read for pleasure and by being read aloud to."

Tip for parents: To inspire your children to read, be a reader yourself. Take your children to the library and let them pick out books for themselves.

Inspiring children to read has become a passion for JIM TRELEASE. He wrote The Read-Aloud Handbook and now devotes his life to giving seminars on how to encourage children to read.

For Trelease, besides reading aloud to your children, salesmanship is important. Children can be sold on reading, he says, the way advertisers sell a product. A child isn't born with the desire to read, but desire can be instilled.

You can set a good example for your youngster—be a reader yourself

"If a child never tastes a McIntosh apple," Trelease says, "he doesn't know enough to want it. If a child never tastes the pleasure of reading, then he or she won't hunger or thirst for it."

He also emphasizes starting early. Trelease says he tells parents to start reading aloud to their children from the day they are born.

To sell the idea of reading, Trelease stresses what he calls the three Bs: Book ownership. "Again and again, I meet people who can tell me the name of a special book they owned and didn't have to share," he says. Book rack. Trelease suggests keeping reading materials in book racks in the bathroom. Bedlamp. Every child's bedroom should have one, he says. "Even at age 3, you can say to the child: You are old enough to read in bed like Mom and Dad."

Tip for parents: Start reading to your children in infancy. Then, do all you can to make reading fun, and praise and reward a child who reads.

TEARS AND JOY FOR SOPHIA LOREN

Sophia Loren and "husband," Edward James Olmos

Better watch the last hour of Mario Puzo's The Fortunate Pilgrim with a hanky in your hand. Puzo (The Godfather) based this story, about an Italian immigrant woman's struggle to hold her family together in New York in the early 1900s, on his own mother's life. And it is a wrenching tale of high hopes, disappointment and reconciliation, as Mama Lucia (Sophia Loren) loses one after another of those close to her. Finally, her favorite, Gino—based on the author himself—runs away to join the Army in World War II. Fortunately, as we know, he came home. NBC, tonight, 9-11 p.m.; tomorrow, 8-11 p.m. EST.

Giving It All Up For Love—Again

British actress Jane Seymour plays the American divorcée Wallis Simpson and Anthony Andrews is the playboy Prince of Wales who became King Edward VIII of England in The Woman He Loved, about their famous romance and his abdication to marry her. Seymour—who, before she got the part, knew "almost nothing" about the woman who became the Duchess of Windsor "except that there was some great jewelry involved"—says she was "quite depressed" after the shoot, "perhaps because I was playing a woman who was so hated in my country." Or maybe Seymour just didn't like giving up all those jewels. Tonight, 9-11 p.m. EST, on CBS.

Here Comes the Judge

Justice Thurgood Marshall—the first and, thus far, the only black justice to sit on the Supreme Court—has signed a contract with Little, Brown and Co., a subsidiary of Time Inc., to write his autobiography. Carl Rowan, the black political columnist and TV commentator, will help Marshall. It was President Lyndon Johnson who appointed Marshall to the Supreme Court in 1967 and Rowan to direct the U.S. Information Agency in 1964.

Of the justices currently occupying seats on the Supreme Court, only two have served longer than Thurgood Marshall, who turns 80 on July 2. They are William J. Brennan Jr., appointed by President Eisenhower in 1956, and Byron R. White, appointed by President Kennedy in 1962.

Born and reared in Baltimore, educated at Lincoln and Howard universities, a former Solicitor General of the U.S. and renowned for years as the special counsel for the NAACP, Marshall is recognized as the most liberal justice on the Supreme Court. His autobiography should make a fascinating, informative read.

Sign of the Times

There's nothing like raising one's status. Car washers in California have taken of late to advertising themselves as "vehicle appearance specialists."

Movies Cost a Fortune—To Make

It now costs $20 million on the average to make a movie at a major studio. Add marketing and advertising costs to the finished film, and—hold onto your hat—the total tab comes to $29 million.

Even for Hollywood, $29 million a movie is a lot of moola. But that's the accurate figure, declares Jack Valenti, the diminutive, dynamic dandy who runs the Motion Picture Association of America, a trade group in Washington, D.C. Valenti recently released those numbers at a convention of theater-owners in Las Vegas. No one doubted the numbers publicly, but several veteran producers suggested to this reporter that they may have been inflated, skewed or hyped—unintentionally, of course.

"If you pay Sylvester Stallone $10 million or $12 million to star in a film," explained one producer, who prefers to maintain his anonymity, "and you pay out $5 million for other above-the-line costs—for the director, the story, the producer, the writers and the rest of the cast—and the studio charges you for a variety of overhead expenses, and you try to cover your rear end by buying expensive TV commercials, you can easily spend $20 million or $30 million on a single film. But not if you're in your right mind.

"I wonder how many pictures Paramount, Touchstone [Walt Disney] or Warners will make this year that cost $29 million?"

Walter Shenson—the independent producer who made A Hard Day's Night in 1964 for $500,000 and Help! in 1965 for $1.25 million, two films starring the Beatles—readily admits, "I've never produced a picture for a major studio, but $20 million to produce the average major studio film sounds like a lot to me, especially if you don't include advertising and marketing. I produced Reuben, Reuben in 1983, with Kelly McGillis and Tom Conti, for $2.3 million and Echo Park in 1986, with Susan Dey and Tom Hulce, for $1.5 million—both small pictures—and I'm in preproduction preparation on several now, so I do have some idea of rising contemporary costs. The major studios, of course, are interested in making blockbusters and so-called 'high-concept pictures,' and they don't mind paying astronomical salaries. Frankly, I don't know what I'd do if I had $29 million to spend on one picture. Probably faint."

Movie Still Archives

Columbia Pictures

A Hard Day's Night*, with Paul McCartney (l) and this statuesque showgirl, cost $500,000, and its producer says he'd faint if handed $29 million: Even that wasn't enough for Ishtar, with Dustin Hoffman and Warren Beatty, which cost $45 million

In the Mood

Do Great Britain's Prince Charles and his wife, Princess Diana, look as if they've come to the parting of the ways, as was rumored recently? Certainly not from these photographs, taken earlier in the year.

The royal couple were Down Under in Melbourne, attending Australia's bicentennial celebration and jiving to the beat of "In the Mood," the Glenn Miller big band classic from the 1940s.

BY JAMES BRADY

Ethel Kennedy

THIS IS, I'M AFRAID, GOING TO BE one of those sadly nostalgic years when we look back in sorrow. Too often. Twenty-five years since John F. Kennedy was shot; twenty years since Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.; twenty years since Robert F. Kennedy.

Bobby Kennedy. How young and boyish and alive he seemed. And then, on a June night in California, minutes after winning an astounding Presidential primary that could propel him into the White House, he was shot to death by a muddled killer nursing grudges against parties vaguely known. Bobby left behind shattered dreams and a wife with 10 children and an eleventh, Rory, to be born after his death.

On April 11, Ethel Kennedy, his widow, turns 60.

I first met Bobby and Ethel in 1957, in a hearing room of the Senate. I was a freshly minted and decidedly overawed Washington correspondent, and he was a tough young lawyer for the Senate investigating committee that was probing labor-management corruption and grilling organized-crime figures from New York and Las Vegas. The hearings went on for two years and, by the end of them, Bobby was nearly as famous as his brother Jack, then a Senator. Just about every day of those two years, Ethel Kennedy was in the hearing room.

The reporters all loved her. She chewed gum and called us "kiddo" and helped us get hold of Bobby for a quote when he was closeted with more important people. She also invited us out to the house in Virginia to play football and get thrown in the swimming pool and meet the famous jocks and the pretty girls who always seemed to be hanging around. She was lively and unspoiled, suntanned and athletic—no great beauty and no intellectual, but she was everything else the Girl Scout oath requires.

Eventually, Bobby became Attorney General and then, after his brother died, a Senator from New York. I don't believe Ethel changed, not one bit.

Then came 1968 and the assassination. Ethel was 40 years old and pregnant, and her kids saw their father killed on TV. How she got through the funeral —that long black train back to Washington, passing railroad stations where people stood bareheaded and sang "The Battle Hymn of the Republic"—I didn't know then and don't know now.

Ethel has tried to keep bits and pieces of the dream alive. This winter, she was over in Brooklyn raising money for a Bedford-Stuyvesant program Bobby had begun. One night some years ago, she played host at a Neil Diamond benefit concert, and we went to Sardi's afterward and talked about old times. They say for a long time she drove Bobby's old convertible with its RFK plates. Maybe she lives for the dream.

BORN: April 11, 1928, in Chicago; reared in Greenwich, Conn.

Wyman/Sygma

Twenty years after Robert Kennedy's assassination, Ethel Skakel Kennedy has raised their children and survived. Somehow. This month, she'll be 60 years old. I only wish she were happy.

BRADY'S BITS

Her kids are grown now and scattered, and one of them, David, who was 12 when his father was killed, is dead himself. Dead of drugs. The others seem to be doing fine. People say Ethel fell apart after Bobby was killed, that she was disorganized and erratic and needed sedatives to sleep, and that she alternately spoiled and bullied the children. Maybe so. But when you consider that her parents died in one plane crash and her brother in another and that her husband was shot to death, the fact that she has raised a family and functions at all is a small and gallant triumph. At least, I think so.

Holding their services under one roof taught a Christian and a Jewish congregation to like each other

A HOME TOGETHER

Joyce Ravid

"To overcome distrust and prejudice." The Rev. Douglas Evett, rector of St. Clare of Assisi, and Rabbi Robert D. Levy of Temple Beth Emeth stand on terrace of the building in Ann Arbor, Mich., that houses both congregations.

THE TOWERING METAL Christian cross and the outsize Star of David seem at home with each other. Side by side on the terrace of a glimmering white building in Ann Arbor, Mich., they are a study in harmony, equal in size and grace and in the aspiration with which they triumphantly point upward. More than one passerby has done a double take—amazed at the two symbols coexisting here.

The confusion is understandable. For the low-slung modern building is a house of worship with two names and two functions: It is both St. Clare of Assisi, a parish of the Episcopal Diocese of Michigan, and Temple Beth Emeth, a Reform Jewish congregation.

It began almost by accident. Back in 1970, a group of families that had broken off from a Conservative synagogue in Ann Arbor to start a Reform congregation rented space from St. Clare of Assisi until they could find their own building. Such arrangements are fairly common and usually temporary. "A lot of us were interested in ideas that would break down barriers, that would terminate historic separations," recalls the Rev. Douglas Evett, then and now the rector of St. Clare.

The two congregations existed happily in a landlord-tenant relationship for several years. While the character and services of each faith remained distinct, the two also began to share some things: They held Passover seders together, organized pulpit exchanges and prayed together for world peace. They grew comfortable with each other. "By the time the temple was large enough to begin seriously thinking about buying its own property and its own building, it just seemed to us that it would be appalling for them to leave," says Mr. Evett.

Both congregations felt the same way, so lawyer Bob Creal, a member of St. Clare, drafted an inspiring legal agreement. In part, it reads: "Understanding that both congregations will maintain their unique, separate, ethnic identities... each believes that their actions herein will stand as a symbol of the power of reason and love to overcome distrust and the prejudices of our separate histories."

The two groups formed a corporation named Genesis of Ann Arbor to administer the building; its board of directors includes members from both congregations, with the presidency rotating every year. The agreement was entered into not without unease on the part of a few: Some members of St. Clare moved to other churches; some members of the temple almost did. "One family that had been through the Holocaust was distrustful of what this relationship might bring," says Arnold Spellman, a temple member. "But they stuck by it, and they have become one of our biggest supporters." Peg Patterson, a member of St. Clare's Altar Guild, admits that at first she resented the temple's presence in the building on Saturdays. "But over the years I've learned to love the whole thing," she says. "I have great friends in the temple."

> 'We're making a statement that we get along and we want our children to get along'

Living under one roof has demanded accommodation. The sanctuary of the building has been modified. The cross behind the altar folds up and back, out of sight, when the Ark of the Covenant is brought forth from behind a panel in a wooden screen. The Eternal Light before the Ark slides along a track, illuminating the flag of the Episcopal church on Sundays. Even the kneelers, used at St. Clare's Communion services, become chair cushions so that young members of Beth Emeth can see their services. Temple school classes are held on Saturday mornings; church school on Sundays. "Luckily, feasts rarely coincide," says Rabbi Robert D. Levy. "The main High Holy Days in Judaism never occur on Sunday. Occasionally, Christmas Eve will be on a Friday night, and we work out some alternative space. There has never been an insurmountable problem."

Both sides agree that their success has a lot to do with the fact that each congregation has maintained its independence. "We're not trying to create a middle religion out of the two," says Rabbi Levy. "This is not a commune." The church and the temple worship separately, and some members of each never associate with members of the other. But for most, the things that they do share are the magic of the Genesis experiment. "I think this is a wonderful way in which to raise our children," says Bette Cotzin, a temple member. "It gives them a sense of trust. You don't have to take your children and say, 'This is a church. This is what they do here.'"

Other churches and synagogues have approached Genesis of Ann Arbor for advice about starting similar projects. "We're aware that this arrangement does make a statement to the world," says Art Lindenburg, a temple member, "but that's not our primary purpose. We're making a statement to ourselves, for ourselves—that we like each other, we get along with one another, and we want our children to get along with one another. It works for us."

It has worked almost too well. When Genesis started, each congregation had about 150 families. Today, St. Clare has 200, Temple Beth Emeth 300; on major feasts, the sanctuary is too small to accommodate everybody. Now Genesis is beginning to think about ripping out some of the beautiful wooden panels that form a circle around the sanctuary. It is a painful thought, but the only other solution might be for the two congregations to go their separate ways.

And that is too painful for them to even think about.

Just look at what's happened to the prices on videocassettes! Contemporary hits like The Karate Kid II have been reduced from $79.95 to $19.95! Classic favorites like The Sound of Music have come down from $79.95 to just $29.95! What's more, new releases are no longer automatically priced at $69.95 or $79.95—many of them are now immediately available at $29.95 or less. So you can now easily build a library of your favorite movies—at truly affordable prices!

And the most economical way to start your movie collection, or add to it, is by joining the CBS Video Club. As a new member, you may have any 4 of the movies offered here—all 4 for $2.49 each, plus shipping/handling. (And you can even save up to $65 on a fifth movie—see Advance Selection box in the coupon.)

There's no membership fee for joining, nor do you have to buy a lot of movies. Just five more within the next two years. And you'll have no problem in finding five movies you want, because our library holds over 2,500 titles; from the very newest releases to classical favorites. Our regular Club prices currently range from $79.95 to $29.95, plus shipping and handling; and we also offer a selection of lower-priced videocassettes, down to $14.95. Your only membership obligation is to buy five movies for as little as $29.95 each—and you may cancel membership anytime after doing so.

How the Club operates: about every four weeks (up to 13 times a year) we send you our CBS Video Club Magazine, reviewing our Director's Selection, plus many alternate movies. And up to four times a year, you may also receive offers of Special Selections, usually at a discount off regular Club prices, for a total of up to 17 buying opportunities.

Choose only the movies you want: if you want the Director's Selection, don't do a thing—it'll arrive automatically. If you'd prefer an alternate movie, or none at all, just mail the card always provided by the date specified.

You'll always have two full weeks to decide. (If you ever receive a tape before having had two weeks to decide, just sent it back at our expense.)

Half-Price Bonus Plan: after buying your five movies, you'll automatically become eligible for our Half-Price Bonus Plan. With each movie you buy at regular Club prices, the plan currently lets you take another movie of equal value or less at 50% off.

10-Day Risk-Free Trial: join today and we'll send your four movies, along with more details on how the Club works. If for any reason you're not satisfied, return everything within 10 days for a full, prompt refund and no further obligation.

For fastest service: use your credit card and our toll-free number to order. Just call 24-hours a day

If you now have a CD Player, or are planning to get one, you may prefer to join the CBS Compact Disc Club. As an introduction, you are entitled to any 6 CDs for only $1.00 plus shipping and handling. And you'll have no problem finding six CDs you want, because most of the selections shown here are now available on Compact Discs.

To get your 6 CDs, simply fill in and mail this application. No need to send any money now—we'll bill you for only $1.00, plus shipping and handling. In exchange, you agree to buy just four CDs within the next 2 years, at regular Club prices (which currently are $14.98-$15.98, plus shipping and handling)—and you may cancel anytime after buying four CDs. If you decide to continue as a member, you'll be eligible for our money-saving bonus plan, which lets you buy one CD at half price for each CD you buy at regular Club prices.

Otherwise, the CBS Compact Disc Club works in the same manner as the Columbia Record & Tape Club, so be sure to read the "How the Club Operates" and "10-Day Free Trial" information on the following page. Act now to get your 6 CDs!

Advance Bonus Offer: as a special offer to new members, take one additional Compact Disc right now and we'll bill you an additional $6.95. It's a chance to get a seventh selection at a super low price!

To get 12 cassettes or records for 1¢

plus shipping and handling

...just join the Columbia Record & Tape Club at this time. You have over 370 selections to choose from on these three pages. All you have to do is fill in and mail the application together with your check or money order for $1.86 as payment (that's 1¢ for your first 12 selections, plus $1.85 to cover shipping and handling). In exchange, you simply agree to buy 8 more tapes or records (at regular Club prices) in the next three years—and you may cancel membership anytime after doing so.

How the Club operates: every four weeks (13 times a year) you'll receive the Club's music magazine, which describes the Selection of the Month for each musical interest...plus hundreds of alternates from every field of music. And up to six times a year you may receive offers of Special Selections, usually at a discount off regular Club prices, for a total of up to 19 buying opportunities.

If you wish to receive the Selection of the Month or the Special Selection, you need do nothing—it will be shipped automatically. If you prefer an alternate selection, or none at all, simply fill in the response card always provided and mail it by the date specified. You will always have at least 10 days to make your decision. If you ever receive any Selection without having had at least 10 days to decide, you may return it at our expense.

The tapes and records you order during your membership will be billed at regular Club prices, which currently are $7.98 to $9.98—plus shipping and handling. (Multi-unit sets, special and classical recordings may be somewhat higher.) And if you continue as a member after completing your enrollment agreement, you'll be eligible for our "buy one—get one free" bonus plan.

CDs and videocassettes also available to Club members. Each issue of the music magazine contains a wide selection of the latest hits and old favorites on Compact Discs. In addition, from time to time, videocassettes are also available. And best of all, the CDs or videocassettes you purchase as a Club member will count toward fulfillment of your membership obligation.

10-Day Risk-Free Trial: we'll send details of the Club's operation with your introductory shipment. If you are not satisfied for any reason, return everything within 10 days for a full refund and you will have no further obligation.

Sophia Loren Plays A Determined Mother

By Evan Levin

We want her to be sultry, to float into the room wearing a shimmering gown and smelling wildly of perfume. Instead, Sophia Loren sits placidly on the couch of her hotel suite, sipping tea, worrying about the weather and whether it will prevent her from catching a plane back to Switzerland that evening. She is still beautiful; the hair more henna colored, taller than expected, the famous eyes framed in heavy black eyeliner.

The woman who made headlines with her beauty, her roles with co-stars such as Marcello Mastroianni and her offscreen romances is quiet and reserved in person. She is especially eager to talk about her family, even when the conversation turns to her role in "The Fortunate Pilgrim," a five-hour NBC miniseries airing Sunday, April 3 and Monday, April 4. Based on Mario Puzo's best seller, the miniseries co-stars Edward James Olmos, and centers on the struggle of an Italian woman (Loren) to keep her family together in America.

"The role of Lucia was that of a very strong-willed woman, with great feelings, great emotions," says Loren, who adds that the role was especailly important because it reminded her of the same kind of fierce dedication to her children her own mother had shown. "And now that I'm a mother, I know what those emotions are like," she adds. Loren, who starred in such movies as "Two Women" (1961), for which she won an Academy Award, talks eagerly about her two sons; more eagerly in fact, than she does about her family co-stars. These include Cary Grant ("Yes, he was wonderful; very handsome") or Mastroianni ("We will always be friends").

"I have to like what I do," she says firmly. "I choose toles that are special; I have wanted to do this role for 15 years. And it's important to me to spend time with my family, and it's very important that I have private time, alone." Asked what she would do with a free hour, she says immediately, "Take a walk in the park, and just think, and feel. Sensations are very important to me, in my acting as well. What you remember most about anything is your first impression, the sensations you felt, like the smell of a particular morning. That is how you recreate experiences. That is what I did on this film."

Loren says that she worked hard on the film ("15 hours a day") but that it was a small price to pay. "This was a very personal movie," she claims. "It was the fulfillment of a dream."

Sophia Loren and Edward James Olmos star in "The Fortunate Pilgrim," a five-hour miniseries based on Mario Puzo's best seller about a strong-willed Italian woman and her family. It airs Sunday, April 3, and Monday, April 4, on NBC.

ASK ME ABOUT TV

Pearl Bailey's credits include acting and a college degree

By Toni D'Amato

Please tell me how old Pearl Bailey is and a little bit about her. – F.D., Waterbury, Conn.

Pearl Bailey

Pearl Bailey is 70 years old. In 1968, she won a Tony Award for her role in "Hello Dolly." Her film credits include "Porgy and Bess" (1959).

In 1978, Bailey received an honorary degree from Georgetown University. She entered the school as a freshman and graduated in 1985.

In 1971, Bailey hosted her own TV variety show. From 1984 to '85, she played Lulu Baker on "Silver Spoons." In 1986, she received an Emmy award for Best Actress in a Children's Special for "Cindy Eller: A Modern Fairy Tale."

Please tell me the names of the Smothers Brothers and what year they had their own TV show. – G.P., Burlington, Vt.

These folk singers turned comedians are Tom, 51, and Dick, 48. They began their TV career as regulars on "The Steve Allen Show" in 1961. From 1965 to '66, they starred in "The Smothers Brothers Show." Next came "The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour," which aired from 1967 to '69 and became one of the most controversial shows on television. It was popular with younger audiences because of its anti-establishment slant.

They starred in "The Smothers Brothers Summer Show" in 1970, "The Smothers Brothers Show" in 1975 and a sitcom called "Fitz and Bones" in 1981.

The brothers recently appeared in "The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour 20th Reunion Show," and will host six variety specials later this year on CBS.

What happened to Richard Eyer, who was in "Stagecoach West"? We never see him anymore. – P.L., Knoxville, Tenn.

Eyer was a child actor who starred in "My Friend Irma" from 1953 to '54, and the series you mentioned from 1960 to '61. Now 44, Eyer left acting in the '60s to become a teacher.

Michele Will Tell

By Michele Marks

Dear Michele: Would you please provide a quick rundown on actress Rae Dawn Chong? — RUSSELL FOSTER, BAKERSFIELD, CALIF.

A mix of Cherokee, African, Chinese, French, Scottish and Irish heritage, Rae Dawn Chong's film roles are as diverse as her ethnic background. The daughter of comedian Tommy Chong and a 17-year-old stenographer named Abigail, Chong was born in Edmonton, Canada. Her parents never married and, at age 3, Rae Dawn went to live with her father and stepmother following a bitter custody battle. In 1982, she got her first big film role as a cavewoman in "Quest for Fire." Her highly unusual career includes appearances in a Playboy pictorial and the erotic Mick Jagger video "Just Another Night." In 1984, she appeared in three films, "Fear City," "Beat Street" and "Choose Me." In 1985, Chong hit it big with four films: "American Flyers," "City Limits," "Commando" and "The Color Purple." Her other credits include "Soul Man" (1986) and "The Squeeze" (1987). Chong, 27, is the mother of a 5-year-old son, Morgan, from a short-lived marriage to stockbroker Owen Baylis.

Dear Michele: Who sang the theme song to the miniseries "I'll Take Manhattan"? I say it was Liza Minnelli; others say it was Barbra Streisand. — GENE JAMESON, OLD TOWN, MAINE

It was neither Minnelli nor Streisand. The legendary Ella Fitzgerald sang the title tune for this 1987 miniseries based on Judith Krantz's novel.

Dear Michele: I never tire of watching reruns of "M*A*S*H." Where was this series filmed? — C. GIBSON, NEWPORT, R.I.

The outdoor scenes for "M*A*S*H" were shot at the 20th Century-Fox Ranch, which later became Malibu Canyon State Park. Interiors were shot at the Fox Studios. The "M*A*S*H" compound on the set was only 45-by-90, which just goes to prove you don't need grand-scale sets to provide an Emmy-winning, history-making series!

Dear Michele: Who were the three regulars on "The Dakotas"? We can remember Chad Everett and Jack Elam, but the third male lead remains a mystery. — DORIS MacDONALD, LUDLOW, VT.

"The Dakotas" aired on ABC from January to September 1963. The series starred Larry Ward as Marshal Frank Ragan, and Jack Elam, Chad Everett and Mike Greene as his three deputies.

BEHIND THE SCENES

'Stranger' Pinchot takes his show's move in stride

By Frank Lovece

Bronson Pinchot, whose series, "Perfect Strangers," has just moved from Wednesday to Friday night on ABC, swears the move came as a surprise.

Bronson Pinchot

"I read about it in the newspaper!" he announces. "They didn't tell me or my manager." But like his character, Balki, Pinchot accepts the inevitable and plunges ahead. "It's easier," he says, "to get your audience to follow you from 'Beverly Hills Cop'" – his big break – "to a TV show than from Wednesday to Friday night. But the (new) competition isn't very tough," he adds, referring to "Beauty and the Beast" and "The Highwayman."

Pinchot, whose exuberantly innocent Balki provides constant frustration for cousin-roommate Larry (Mark Linn-Baker), is used to sudden transitions. He was a starving New York actor/typist after graduating from Yale, and in little more than a year was a major supporting character in the hit movie "Risky Business." After a short, uneventful span that netted him a few more films, he shot to stardom as Serge, the outrageous art-gallery employee in "Beverly Hills Cop." In short order followed the series "Sara" and his current hit show.

Now 28 years old, Pinchot talks comfortably about "my show. They came up with it specifically for me." Nonetheless, he gives credit to co-star Baker, who was best known for the film "My Favorite Year."

"There's no way you could get what we have and not respect each other, and we love each other on top of that," Pinchot says. But he admits, "Unless we were brain-dead eunuchs, there's no way we could be together as much as we are and not get on each other's nerves.

"There's this bit where we're handcuffed together," explains Pinchot. "Old Lucy-Ethel type routine. And we had a 25-minute fight because I wanted him to look thoughtful while I stroked his chin. And Mark insisted that Larry wouldn't look thoughtful because he'd see Balki's hand.

"Well, we ended up really angry with each other for half a day," he says, "just like brothers who fight over something one says at Thanksgiving." But they didn't wind up as strangers – perfect or otherwise.

TV Chatter

By Frank Sanello

Although Noel Coward once said Sophia Loren should have been sculpted in chocolate truffles so the whole world could devour her, the Italian actress looks decidedly unglamorous in this week's NBC miniseries, "The Fortunate Pilgrim." In the miniseries, based on Mario Puzo's novel, Loren plays an Italian immigrant raising a brood of unruly children alone in a New York tenement during the 1920s. Loren sports an unflattering frizzy hairdo, a shabby wardrobe and wears no makeup except for a light base to prevent washout under the bright lights. But Loren, 53, is philosophical about her transformation. "I don't care. I don't mind playing ugly. I don't have to prove I'm beautiful. I never did. When I was 27, I played an unattractive mother in 'Two Women.'" And to prove that looks don't mean everything, all that 1961 Italian film did was to win Loren an Oscar for Best Actress.

Playing hard to get paid off for Edward James Olmos, who created the role of the enigmatic Lt. Castillo on "Miami Vice" and is currently seen in the feature film "Stand and Deliver." Four years ago, when "Miami Vice" executive producer Michael Mann called asking him to join the series' cast, Olmos turned him down flat. The actor, whose first love is the theater, did not want to be tied down for up to seven years with an exclusive contract. After Olmos politely rejected Mann's offer, the producer called back five minutes later with an offer that doubled the original salary. "I told him, 'Michael, it's not a matter of money. I just can't do an exclusive.' And I hung up." Five minutes after that, the phone rang again. Mann had another offer, double the previous one. Now Olmos began to sweat. He realized that in one month he would make more on "Miami Vice" than his father, a retired welder, had made in his entire lifetime. Nevertheless, Olmos said "Thanks, but no thanks" and hung up. That's when his son, then 11, began to cry in the other room. His wife explained, 'He doesn't know why Daddy doesn't want to work.'" Mann called back again, offering even more money as well as complete artistic control of Olmos' character. No deal. Finally, Mann called again with an offer Olmos couldn't refuse: a non-exclusive contract. "Thank you very much," replied Olmos. "I'll take your last offer."

Charles Robinson, who plays court clerk Mac on "Night Court," wants to take charge of his destiny. Although his sitcom will probably continue to air for several more seasons, Robinson isn't going to sit back and collect residuals when "Night Court" finally goes into syndication. The actor has enrolled in UCLA's prestigious film school, and will study screenwriting there this summer. "It's been a while since I've been back to school," he told Hotline at a party to celebrate "Night Court" 's 100th episode. "And I have to confess to having some butterflies about it, but I'm still very excited. I just feel that what this business is about is finding a way to constantly grow. I'm 42 years old, and I'm going to keep on trying to learn as much as I can."

Princess Diana and the Duchess of York intimidate Tracey Ullman, whose roots are working-class. "Whenever I see them, I feel they're going to trample me under the feet of their polo ponies," she says.

SOAP OPERA WEEK

'GL' actress's baby made its acting debut on the soap

By Kimberly Redmond

You've probably printed this question before, but I'll ask anyway. Can you tell me if the baby who portrays Marah on "Guiding Light" is Kim Zimmer's (Reva Shayne) real child? – S.O., Houston, Texas.

Kim Zimmer

Zimmer's infant son, Maxwell Tyler, did substitute once for Nicole Otto, who portrays Marah. However, Max's television debut only lasted for a couple of days, until Nicole was well enough to return to work.

I'm positive that I've seen the actor who portrays Beth Logan's (Nancy Burnett) doctor on "The Bold and the Beautiful," but I can't remember what show he was on. I hope you can help me out. – E.P., Huntsville, Ala.

Dr. Bailey was portrayed by Frank Telfer, who also played Luke Dancy on "The Doctors" and Brian McColl on "As the World Turns."

Can you tell me if Martha Byrne, who portrays Lily Walsh on "As the World Turns" ever appeared on the show in another role? – B.C., Cassopolis, Mich.

Byrne started playing Lily in 1984. That's the only role she's played on "ATWT."

I'm a long time fan of Thaao Penghlis, who played Antony DiMera on "Days of Our Lives," and I'd like to know what he's been doing since he left the soap. – B.J., Greensboro, N.C.

Thaao Penghlis

Penghlis returned to his native Australia right after he left "DOOL" and appeared in a television series Down Under. He will soon be seen in the Operation Prime Time five-hour miniseries "Queen of the South Seas," with Barbara Carrera.

Sophia Loren's acting career is still inspired by her mother

By Bill Anderson

Saying she was inspired in the role by the love of her own mother, Sophia Loren makes a rare TV appearance this week as a turn-of-the-century Italian immigrant fighting to give her sons a better life in America.

Sophia Loren

"The Fortunate Pilgrim," airing on CTV on Sunday, April 3 and Monday, April 4, is a five-hour adaptation of the Mario Puzo novel. It also stars Edward James Olmos and Hal Holbrook.

Loren, of course, plays the heroine, Mama Lucia – a woman who marries an Italian-American by proxy and meets him for the first time on her arrival in America.

While dealing with personal tragedy and strife, Lucia also must see the Americanization of her children – one who falls in with gangsters, another who joins the Army to fight against her native country in World War II and a third who succumbs to the depression of the ghetto.

"My mother has been an inspiration to me," Loren said in a recent interview. "She is a woman of great courage, of total dedication to me and my sister. I've always admired her. Maybe that's why I've always felt privileged to play the role of the mother.

"I think that an actress, when she plays the role of a mother, can give vent to her most inner feelings. She can go through so many emotional states of the soul that no other role can compare."

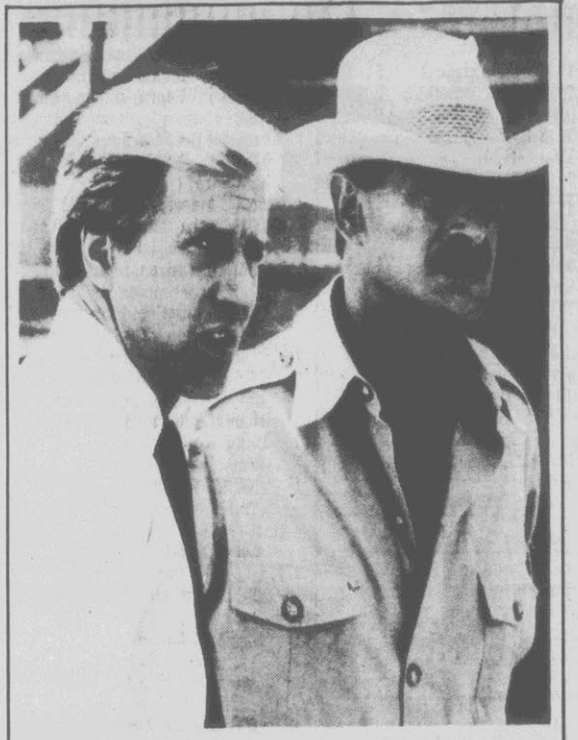
Loren has gone through many stages herself – from her start as a teenage beauty-contest winner in rural Italy to international stardom and now a quieter, family-oriented life at homes in Switzerland, France and the United States.

"I don't have to prove anything to anyone anymore," Loren said. "I only take parts that have special meaning or let me prove something to myself.

"Mama Lucia is a character that when I first read her in Puzo's book, it was somebody I always knew," she said. "Mama Lucia is my grandmother. She's my mother. She's all the people that lived around me in my little home town.

"She was not foreign to me, so that's why I wanted to play her so much, because I knew every little thing, every little secret that Puzo was talking about. I knew."

THURSDAY



While investigating the death of their father, who passed away 35 years earlier, A.J. (Jameson Parker, l.) and Rick (Gerald McRaney) learn some painful information on CBS's "Simon & Simon." It airs Thursday, April 7.

Stations reserve the right to make last-minute changes.

American Comedy Awards

The American Comedy Awards, which aired for the first time last May, will return Tuesday, May 17 on ABC. Most of the awards are presented to comedy performers. But this year's Lifetime Creative Achievement Award, an honor fashioned after similar awards in the film and music industries, will be presented to film maker Blake Edwards.

Innocent Victims

Tim Matheson is the star of "Innocent Victims," a CBS movie about Dr. James Oleske, a New Jersey pediatrician who was among the first doctors to detect AIDS in children. Oleske, a specialist in immunology, discovered that the disease was striking young patients whom he had believed to be cured. The movie is now in production in Atlanta.

Late late show

In August, NBC, which already airs "The Tonight Show" and "Late Night with David Letterman," will introduce "Later with Bob Costas," a half-hour talk-show scheduled to air after "LateNight." Costas, a broadcaster for NBC Sports, will interview guests "from all walks of life." The show is being produced by Dick Ebersol, the producer of NBC's "Friday Night Videos" and a former producer of "Saturday Night Live."

Favorite Son

"Favorite Son," a political thriller by Steve Sohmer, is now being adapted for a six-hour miniseries scheduled to air next season on NBC. The novel, set in Washington, D.C., during the summer before the 1988 election, focuses on an aide to the vice president who tries to gain control of the White House. Sohmer, who will be executive producer of the miniseries, was a vice president of NBC's entertainment division from 1983 to 1985.

SATURDAY TOUR OF DUTY

On "Tour of Duty," Terence Knox plays Zeke Anderson, a no-nonsense sergeant who's doing his best to keep his men alive and functioning as a unit. The critically acclaimed CBS series airs Saturday, April 9.

Baseball Openers Hail True Start Of Spring

By Marty Linehan

The wait is over! The real sports year begins tomorrow, with major league baseball's opening day. NBC makes it official when that network's April 9 Game of the Week features the Toronto Blue Jays at the world champion Minnesota Twins. The backup game has the New York Mets playing the Philadelphia Phillies.

And as icing on the cake for baseball's fans, this year will have what no other season has ever offered. Wrigley Field in Chicago will be equipped with lights after 72 years!

While many purists and die-hard Cubs fans are still protesting, we can look forward to eight night games this year after July 1, and there will be 18 after-dark games a season in Wrigley Field until the year 2002. Who says baseball is a slow-moving game?

Something else that could be different about the coming season is the possibility of a subway series in New York between the Mets and the Yankees. That would be a first since 1956.

As for the season itself, we expect the Mets to go all the way in the NL East, winning the flag their many injuries denied them last year. Their closest competitor should be the St. Louis Cardinals (What again?), if they can get over losing their big gun, Jack Clark.

The AL East's top team has to be the New York Yankees. The recent addition of Clark from the Cardinals adds to a heavy-hitting squad, although the ages of the players and a not-too-strong pitching staff could hurt.

* College basketball fans get their Super Bowl and World Series wrapped up in one on Monday, April 4, when CBS televises the NCAA Championship game from Kansas City, Mo. After that, all the roundball fans have to look forward to is the never-ending professional basketball championship series.

* TV golf buffs have a goody on tap for Saturday, April 9, when CBS televises the third round of the prestigious — it's always called prestigious — Masters Tournament from the Augusta National in Augusta, Ga., where all the top pros battle to wear the winner's traditional green jacket.

Baseball Season Opens On Monday, April 4

By Bob Remington

Over the next two weeks, The Sports Network commentator will cover five hockey and three baseball games as he does double duty on both sports for TSN. With the pay-TV sports channel airing National Hockey League playoff games for the first time this year, Hughson will juggle overlapping seasons and log more than 10,000 kilometres as he does hockey play-by-play in addition to calling Montreal Expo games for TSN.

TSN begins coverage of hockey divisional playoffs on Wednesday, April 6. But for many viewers, hockey will be upstaged by the opening of baseball season on Monday, April 4.

• ELEVEN UP! Challenge: Insert missing numbers 1-11 in circles of the diagram at right so that each row of three numbers in a straight line through center totals 18.

Six is already in place, so that adding the rest should be easy.

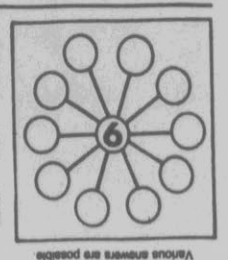
Time limit: One minute.



One way, clockwise: 1,2,3,4,5,11,10,9,8,7. Various answers are possible

• CRACK CODE! Decode this secret message, if you can: PBMFE AAAAX CGKSI KSETT. Clue: initial letters form word PACK. Now go on.

PUZZLE OUT A POSY

Solve this verse-riddle by puzzling out the name of an early spring flower, letter by letter, if you can.

My first is in dog, but not in cat.
My second's in coat, and also in hat.
My third's in tail, but not in rise.
My fourth's in fool, but not in wise.
My fifth's in wrong, but not in right.
My sixth's in day, but not in night.
My seventh's in pig, but not in ham.
My eighth's in jelly, but not in jam.
What flower am I?

I'm a daffodil.
