General Strike Protests Shultz's Peace Mission

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
Associated Press Writer
JERUSALEM (AP) — Palestinians mounted a general strike today to protest the visit of Secretary of State George P. Shultz, who was trying to persuade Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir to accept an international peace conference.
Hospital officials said an 18-year-old Palestinian was shot to death and another 18-year-old was wounded during West Bank unrest that accompanied the general strike.
The fatality brought to 137 the number of Arabs who have died in four months of anti-Israeli protests. One Israeli soldier has been killed.
After meeting with Shamir and Foreign Minister Simon Peres, Shultz told reporters his talks focused on the content of prospective Arab-Israeli talks rather than the procedure of arranging a meeting.

"The encouraging part about it to me was that we have now engaged in this initiative on the important aspects of its content, namely the direct face-to-face negotiations," said Shultz.
Streets in the towns of the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip were nearly deserted today and shops shuttered after an underground PLO leaflet called for a general strike and three days of protests to coincide with Shultz's visit.
Hospital officials said Mohammed Abed Maadi Al Zaidan was shot in the chest and died during a demonstration in Bani Naim, a West Bank village near Hebron.

In Nablus, hospital officials said an 18-year-old Palestinian was wounded in the thigh by army gunfire during a protest at the Balata refugee camp. The army said a border policeman opened fire during the protest, wounding an Arab in the leg, after being attacked with an ax. The camp was placed under curfew.
About 600 police were deployed in Jerusalem's Old Walled City to prevent clashes between Moslems and a militant Jewish group that tried to enter and pray in the Al Aqsa mosque complex.

U.S. Ambassador's Car Chased By Panamanians

By JOSEPH B. FRAZIER
Associated Press Writer
PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — A Panamanian government official suggested the United States might have staged a chase of its ambassador's car to justify an eventual military evasion.
The U.S. Embassy said Ambassador Arthur Davis was pursued for two miles in Panama City on Sunday by a government military vehicle with its siren blaring. It called the incident serious.
Sunday's communique signed by Justice Minister Rodolfo Chiari de Leon said the incident began when a police sergeant saw civilians in three vehicles following the ambassador's car with "an exaggerated display of automatic arms."
"We do not want to think that they are fabricating false accusations against our armed forces to justify an announced invasion of Panama, and we reiterate the intent of the Panamanian government to protect the life and property of residents and foreigners, including North Americans," the communique said.
There was no immediate U.S. Embassy reaction to the statement.
The United States is sending 1,300 additional troops to Panama on Tuesday. Troops were loading weapons and supplies into helicopters today in the United States in preparation.

American officials have said the forces are intended to protect U.S. bases and American citizens. Washington has declared it will not use military force to oust Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, whose leadership has been the focus of a national political and economic crisis.

Sunday's edition of the government-run newspaper La Republica quoted pro-government labor leaders as urging Panamanians to prepare for an American invasion when the additional troops begin arriving.
There are 10,000 troops stationed at the U.S. Southern Command in Panama. Pentagon officials said

Shooting Outside Funeral Leaves 3 Dead, 3 Injured

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer
EDNEYVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Fletcher man was charged with three counts of murder after allegedly opening fire on his ex-wife, former in-laws and other mourners gathering for an Easter funeral, authorities said.
"The funeral was just getting ready to start," said Lester Justice, who was attending the funeral of his aunt, Effie Collins Justice, when he heard shots outside the Mountain Home Baptist Church. "They had just closed the coffin. The family had just arrived and had gotten out of the car when I heard several shots fired."

"We began to hear more gunfire, a shotgun and pistol both. Someone said a man was out there shooting the family. I didn't know whether he would come inside if he was after anybody else or not."
Michael Leslie Rainey, 41, was charged Sunday with three counts of first-degree murder in the deaths of his former in-laws, Wilford Owensby, 61, and Ponnelle Owensby, 60; and in the death of Scott Bowles, 24. It was not known if Bowles was related to Rainey, authorities said.

Rainey also was charged with three counts of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill in the wounding of three people, including his ex-wife, Andrea Rainey, 40, of Kennesaw, Ga., authorities said.
Barefooted and wearing a green jumpsuit, Rainey appeared before Henderson County District Court Judge Zoro Guice at 10:30 a.m. today. Guice ordered Rainey held without bond until an April 12 probable cause hearing.
District Attorney Alan Leonard told the judge he would be seeking the death penalty in the case.
Rainey, who was not handcuffed, looked down at the table in front of

PCC Fund Drive Off To Good Start

The Pitt Community College Foundation has collected approximately $50,000 in pledges and contributions in the first phase of its 1988 fund drive, and will continue with a second day of fundraising, according to Susan Nobles, PCC director of marketing.
"Our first day of the fund drive last Thursday was so successful that the phase one committee has agreed to continue its efforts with a second full day of fundraising on Tuesday, April 5," Ms. Nobles said.
Dr. Charles Russell, PCC president, said that foundation board members who are community leaders have assisted in the first phase of the foundation's fund drive.
"We are pleased and honored to have 'Booger' Scales lead our foundation's first fund drive," Dr. Russell said.

"His 30 years of experience in successful fund raising for so many important causes in Greenville has been very valuable as we began this new endeavor. With his leadership, I am confident that we will be able to receive the money we need to begin the foundation and to fund the scholarships, equipment and staff development needed at Pitt Community College," he said.
"I think that Pitt Community College plays as an important role in this community as East Carolina University," Scales said. "Because the college is so important to the community, and because of some very special people who have supported the college, I am happy to be chairman of this fund drive."

No Problems

The Easter switch to daylight savings time apparently had little effect on Greenville area residents other than provide them a longer afternoon, according to local officials and ministers surveyed today.
Randy Nichols of the Greenville police said, "Daylight savings doesn't affect us any at all, except that the people who worked through the night worked a seven-hour shift instead of an eight. We used to use the daylight savings changeover to change from 4-12 to 3-11 scheduling, but now even that stays the same."
No difference in scheduling is made by WNCT-TV, Ed Adams, program director, said. "Everything just goes on as always," he said. "Carolina Today starts at 6 a.m. standard time and 6 a.m. daylight savings time. It's the same for all the other programming 24 hours a day."
John Ferren, assistant general manager of Greenville Utilities, said the switchover to daylight savings makes "no difference whatsoever" in the operations of Greenville Utilities. "We do have a couple of crews who choose this time to change from 8-hour to 10-hour days," he said. "Other than that, it's not noted at all here."
The fact the changeover occurred on Easter apparently had no effect on attendance at area churches either. The Rev. Sam Loy, associate pastor of St. James United Methodist Church said his church's attendance "may have peaked."
Loy said about 800 people attended the church's 11 a.m. service and attendance at its sunrise service was also excellent. "I didn't hear of anybody getting confused about the time change," he said.
The Rev. Graham Nahouse, pastor of Our Redeemer Lutheran Church, said daylight savings had no ill effect on his church's Easter attendance. "We just moved our meeting time up from 7 a.m. to 8 a.m. and everything was fine," he said.

Convictions Upheld

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A federal appeals court today upheld the espionage and theft of government property convictions of a former intelligence analyst who gave spy photographs of a Soviet ship to a British military journal.
Samuel Loring Morison, grandson of the late Pulitzer Prize-winning naval historian Samuel Eliot Morison, was convicted in October 1985 of giving U.S. satellite photographs of a Soviet nuclear aircraft carrier under construction to Jane's Defence Weekly.
A unanimous three-judge panel of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals rejected arguments by Morison, who worked for the Navy, that the statutes under which he was found guilty were unconstitutionally vague and were intended to cover "classic spying" for a foreign government rather than leaks to the press.
The defense also said the espionage prosecution violated Morison's right to free speech and would intimidate low-level government employees from leaking information which would embarrass their superiors.
"The mere fact that one has stolen a document in order that he may deliver it to the press, whether for money or other personal gain, will not immunize him from responsibility for his criminal act," the judges said. "To use the First Amendment for such a purpose would be to convert the First Amendment into a warrant for thievery."
Morison remains free on a $100,000 appeal bond, his attorney, Mark Lynch, said today from his Washington, D.C., office. Lynch said he has not seen the 4th Circuit's opinion and has not decided whether to seek a rehearing before the full court or a review by the U.S. Supreme Court.
Because Morison's prosecution raised questions about the Constitution's free speech and freedom of the press guarantees, several news organizations — including The New York Times, The Washington Post, The Wall Street Journal and the nation's three major television networks — filed briefs in the case.
The photos were published by Jane's on Aug. 11, 1984, and later by other publications and news organizations.
Morison, a civilian employee of the Naval Intelligence Support Center in Suitland, also was convicted of the theft of the photos and government documents that described a May 1984 explosion at Severomorsk, the main

Four Peace Activists Arrested

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Four peace activists were charged with destroying government property after allegedly throwing blood on cruise missile housings aboard the battleship Iowa.

The protesters, part of a group touring the ship, were arrested Sunday and held without bond at Virginia Beach City Jail. They were to be arraigned this morning in U.S. District Court in Norfolk, the FBI said.

The group included veteran activist Phillip Berrigan and Gregory Boertje, a federal fugitive for more than four months.

The group picked the battleship as the target of the protest because "they see the Iowa as a symbol ... of super-state madness," said Max Obuszewski, a spokesman for Plowshares, a peace group founded by Berrigan eight years ago.

Capt. Archie Galloway, a Navy spokesman, said the incident occurred about 3:50 p.m. as a group of 10 to 15 people was being led on a topside tour of the Iowa, which was docked at Norfolk Naval Base.

The four wandered away from the rest of the group "and threw what they claimed to be blood on two of the ship's armored box launchers," which house the Tomahawk missiles, Galloway said.

Officer R.J. Brewington said Devie Lavior Hill, 24, of Williamston, was arrested on credit card fraud charges in connection with the purchase of a pair of tennis shoes from Athletic World at Carolina East Mall about 8:37 p.m. Saturday.

Wells, Septic Tanks Reported Prevalent

A large majority of rural residents and many living in small towns in eastern North Carolina still rely on individual wells for their water, while an even larger number are served by individual septic tanks in the treatment and disposal of sewage, according to a recent survey.

The survey on water and sewer services in eastern North Carolina was conducted by the Division of Facilities and Services of the Department of Community Development of the Eastern North Carolina Chamber of Commerce.

According to George M. Harris, Jr., executive director of the Northampton County Economic Development Commission at Jackson, 33 of the region's 43 counties completed the survey while 101 of 239 municipalities responded.

Harris, who also serves as vice chairman of community development for public facilities and services for the Eastern Chamber, said 16 of the 33 counties which responded operate county-wide water systems while only two of those counties operate sewer services.

Seventy-six of the 101 municipalities reporting operate water systems while only 62 have sewage treatment services.

Harris said 10 of the 16 counties with water systems reported their systems have now reached capacity. Forty-eight of the 76 municipalities with water systems reported to have presently reached treatment capacity. Thirty seven of the municipalities with sewer systems reported that they have reached treatment capacity.

"While it will cost hundreds of millions of dollars to provide water and sewer systems in those counties and municipalities that currently do not have such systems, those counties and municipalities that do operate these systems also have great needs," Harris observed.

Harris said counties with water systems listed their enlargement needs at $51 million. The two counties with sewer systems reported enlargement needs of $100,000.

Meanwhile, the municipalities operating water and sewer systems reported their water enlargement needs at almost $96 million, and sewer enlargement needs at more than $187 million.

Harris said the data gathered in the study indicates several needed steps:

•There should be an effort to encourage counties and municipalities that do not have water systems to work to acquire such systems.

•Efforts should be made to encourage those counties and municipalities that need sewer services most to develop them.

•Some outside assistance needs to be delivered to those counties and municipalities that operate water and sewer systems to help them upgrade their systems to meet current requirements both in level of quality of services and in the services themselves.

Harris said the Eastern Chamber will attempt to assist the counties and municipalities to communicate their needs to the North Carolina General Assembly and to Congress, with the hope that funding can be matched with local funds to meet these needs.

Farm Scene

By SAM UZZELL

Pitt County Agricultural Extension Agent

While spring cleaning is getting under way, containers of old pesticides of various origins may be found around the home. Many of the containers may have in them pesticides that once were in common use, but now the uses of them have been banned. In other cases, the pesticide is not usable because of rust accumulation or other contamination. Still others may not be wanted around the farm or home anymore. It is a good idea to dispose of these materials, but it is very important to do this in proper way.

In the cases of materials such as DDT, silvex, chlordane and several others, the uses have been banned by the Environmental Protection Agency. It is not against the law to possess these chemicals, but it is against the law to apply them. These materials should be wrapped in newspaper, placed in a plastic bag, sealed with tape, labeled in a readable fashion and delivered to the Agricultural Extension Service to be disposed of properly. They will be taken to a licensed hazardous waste disposal company.

When pesticides are used and the container is emptied, it should be rinsed three times and the rinse water used in the spray solution. This is true in the case of farm sprays as well as in the case of the homeowner who sprays his lawn with a broadleaf weed killer. The container can then be disposed of properly. With farm chemicals, proper disposal includes crushing the container after rinsing three times, puncturing the can, and taking it to the Pitt County landfill. Containers will be accepted without question if the above steps have been observed.

When using any pesticide, observe all the labeled instructions. Apply the correct rate, and be sure that all disposal, cleaning and other precautions are understood. Everyone who reads the paper is aware of how farm chemicals are under scrutiny. It is also important to know that pesticides are used annually on two million farms, seventy five million households, and forty thousand commercial farms. Therefore, it is the responsibility of each pesticide user to know the proper way to use pesticides safely. We all have a responsibility to do our part in protecting the environment.

By understanding the information on the pesticide label, and using the pesticide according to the labeled instructions, hazards are greatly reduced. The label is the best source of information concerning the use of a pesticide. For further information on pesticide use, contact your Agricultural Extension office.

FLUORIDE IN TOOTH PASTE

The mere presence of fluoride in a toothpaste does not necessarily give it therapeutic qualities. Fluoride alone is no guarantee of effectiveness. What is important is that the toothpaste contain fluoride in an effective combination with other ingredients.

There are a number of these on the market. They definitely possess therapeutic value and have accordingly been recommended by the Council on Dental Therapeutics of the American Dental Association in those now familiar words, "...has been shown to be an effective decay-preventive dentifrice that can be of significant value when used in a conscientiously applied program of oral hygiene and regular professional care."

This endorsement has real meaning. Scientific test studies have proven beyond doubt the effectiveness of the recommended toothpastes in reducing the incidence of tooth decay.

According to Chief Deputy Brooks Oakley, Jimmy E. Boles, brakeman, and H.E. Rosser, conductor of the train, contacted Deputy Mack Manning after the train hit an object reportedly lying on the tracks.

Oakley said Martinez was declared dead at the scene by Dr. Stan Harris, regional medical examiner.

An unidentified migrant worker who lives on the Grimes Plantation Farm told Manning that he and Martinez had been in Grimesland but he had left Martinez in Grimesland at an earlier hour, returning to the farm alone.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Windfall Should Address Needs

Good news for North Carolina. The state government has a windfall of $45 million.

The unexpected money came from RJR Nabisco Inc., which paid the amount in taxes to the state based on profits from its sale of Heublein Inc.

Now come the suggestions of how to spend the money. Obviously $45 million, large amount as it is, will not substantially affect the state's $18.4 billion biennial budget. Nevertheless, this is unexpected money and it is certain that both politicians and state officials will have lots of ideas on how to spend it.

Since it is a non-recurring source of revenue, it immediately becomes obvious it should not be used for salary increase or to establish programs which will require future funding to sustain them. That almost certainly means the funds should be used for capital improvements, and for the highest priority capital improvements which were not funded in the current budget.

Certainly North Carolina has needs in education, public parks and prisons. Even now planners are grappling with ideas on how to finance public school construction. The 1987 school construction bill only addresses a portion of these inadequacies, and new needs arise even as funds from this legislation are spent on facilities.

Higher education building needs are well documented. The state's university system, a leader in the nation, need facilities to adequate house growing resources.

In addition, the state is at the bottom in spending on state parks. North Carolina's parks system represents an investment in the state's natural heritage, and money is needed to adequately protect these resources.

And, while most citizens had rather not think of prisons, they are overflowing and the state is threatened with turning out prisoners early to ease overcrowding. The public expects convicted criminals to be sent to jail, but the jails must be there, and that means new construction. That is an issue which must receive attention when funds are being divided.

The needs are evident in North Carolina. If the state has a windfall of $45 million let it be applied to the most critical needs. The Legislature should make certain this windfall addresses the benefit of all citizens.

Dole May Play Continued Role

With the withdrawal of Sen. Bob Dole from the Republican presidential nomination race there is no question as to who the nominee will be. Vice President George Bush will receive his party's nomination almost certainly on the first ballot.

Sen. Dole was reluctant to withdraw but he saw that Bush's delegate count was becoming insurmountable. The senator had said some harsh things about his opponent. In the end, however, he promised to work for Bush and do what is best for the Republican party.

Even as he did so, however, Sen. Dole must have been thinking about some of the points he had made when he campaigned against Bush. The vice president still has questions to answer about the Iran-Contra arms shipment affair. While he has stonewalled it thus far, Bush faces the possibility of a Watergate kind of disaster.

As a loyal Republican, Dole would want his party to win in November, even if he is not to lead the ticket. That haunting fear has to be there, nevertheless, that everything has not been revealed about Iran-Contra — and if there is more to be revealed how close can it come to the vice president who will soon be the party's presidential nominee.

There are other problems wracking the Reagan administration as it completes its final year. With Bush so closely aligning himself with the president, how many of these problems can spill over to become incessant questions in the upcoming campaign. These are things that Sen. Dole seemed to be warning about as he campaigned against Bush.

There will be no more talk about Bush deficiencies from Dole for he will certainly assume the role of a loyal party leader who rallies around once party infighting has ended. Nevertheless there are major potential pitfalls in a George Bush presidential candidacy. While he now has the support of Sen. Bob Dole there is no doubt Dole privately will continue to have concerns about negative developments in the upcoming campaign.

Noriega: Staying Put In Panama

PANAMA CITY — Gen. Manuel Noriega has a message for America: He'll leave Panama when he feels like it, and not at the whim of Washington.

Dressed in a green camouflage uniform, sitting in his office at military headquarters with his pretty girlfriend listening nearby, Noriega has the look of a caged tiger. And last Tuesday, in his first interview with an American newspaper since the Panama crisis erupted, Noriega spoke bitterly about the American campaign to topple him. His comments suggest that in Panama, the worst may lie ahead.

When will he leave power? "I am leaving," he says. "I've got to go." But when? He rises from his chair and snaps: "At what time? At what minute? Please! This is a Panamanian problem, not an American problem... The State Department wants to create a Vietnam in Panama, to have U.S. troops confront the Panamanians. It's not Reagan — it's the State Department. If that happens, American mothers are going to see their sons fighting in a nation without necessity."

Noriega may be right in warning that the Panama crisis is heading toward a military confrontation. Some senior U.S. policymakers are saying the same thing, and they appear to favor the use of force against Noriega. In a dramatic show of force Friday, the Reagan administration announced it will send 1,300 more troops to Panama to reinforce the American garrison already there.

'Uncertain of the future, many Panamanians are leaving the country, valuables in hand. Meanwhile, the Panamanian left appears to be gaining strength with each passing day.'

One senior administration official who has helped design Panama policy bluntly describes two options: "To do enough small things to encourage the PDF (the Panama Defense Forces) to kill him," or "to go get him" with American troops.

The American pressure campaign, thus far, may be hurting Panama more than Noriega. The U.S. economic sanctions, for example, have left the Noriega regime short of funds — but they have also left the Panamanian banking system in shambles, hurt the formerly prosperous middle class, bankrupted businesses and left many workers without pay. Uncertain of the future, many Panamanians are leaving the country, valuables in hand. Meanwhile, the Panamanian left appears to be gaining strength with each passing day.

"Noriega is a creation of the CIA," says Fernando Boyd, a dissipated leader of the opposition movement known as the Civic Crusade, referring to charges that Noriega was until recently on the CIA payroll. His unspoken message is: You created him, now get rid of him.

But Noriega isn't going, and he's thinking these days mainly of himself. Sitting at a table with one of his cabinet ministers, a top military aide and a visiting reporter, he rings a gold bell and orders tea only for himself. In addition to drinking tea, he paces around the room, appearing unable or unwilling to concentrate or to sit still. Only a few months ago, Noriega had seemed like a different man — relaxed and in charge, boasting of his friendship with the United States.

Noriega dismisses the recent general strike organized to show opposition to his continuing rule, which shut down 98 percent of the businesses in Panama. He insists that his entire problem "originated with the U.S. State Department policies of freezing the economic funds that belong to the people of Panama and to the private enterprise of Panama."

He sweeps aside as a technicality the U.S. argument that Panamanian accounts should be under the control of the person recognized by the State Department as Panama's representative — Ambassador Juan Sosa, who has taken the side of President Arturo DelValle against Noriega.

Noriega even sees an American hand behind the demonstrations in the streets here. He claims that American Ambassador Arthur Davis and his deputy, John Meisto, "are the ones giving political orders and deciding strategies for the Crusade people." And he displays for a reporter hundreds of dollars in cash, which he claims the U.S. embassy paid last week as bail for Crusade members who had been arrested. (Meisto responds: "Noriega lies about the role of the U.S. and the role of the embassy.")

Noriega still has some bombshells he can hurl at the Reagan administration. He was on the CIA payroll until a few months ago, according to one senior U.S. official. Asked what services he performed for the United States, Noriega says he helped with "professional coordination, in the fight against drugs when no one was helping, and in military coordination for the (Panama Canal) treaties." He also helped the U.S. capture gangster Meyer Lansky when he was on the run in Israel and in Argentina.

It is ironic to remember that only a few years ago, Noriega had argued to a former U.S. secretary of state and a prominent politician that the United States should invade Nicaragua and overthrow the Sandinistas. When the politician protested that "then we would be behaving like the colossus of the North," Noriega retorted: "You are the colossus of the North. Behave like it!"

Restrictions Part Of Israeli Strategy

JERUSALEM — With eight terse sentences in a press release, the Israeli army this past week took a major step toward restoring the border between Israel proper and the occupied territories that this country had been slowly but steadily erasing for the past 21 years.

The sweeping three-day restrictions on travel and press coverage announced in the statement were the toughest imposed yet by authorities groping for some formula to smother a nearly 4-month-old Palestinian uprising. They sealed off the Gaza Strip and West Bank, confining Arab residents to their homes or villages, preventing outsiders from entering and arresting hundreds.

Invisible lines suddenly reappeared. Roads, on which traffic once moved freely in and out of Israel across the "Green Line" into the West Bank, were blocked off by soldiers checking identity cards and license plates and turning back Israelis as well as journalists. Motorists whose Israeli-made maps have not shown the border for the past decade wandered in confusion, not knowing if or when they were crossing the line and breaking the law.

For many Israelis and Arabs, the measures were a harbinger of things to come: more repression, but also increased separation between Arabs and Jews, more barbed wire — both physical and mental — and a retreat from Israel's long attempt to find an effective means of ruling the disaffected and rebellious 1.6 million

Arabs of the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

"It was a very symbolic action by a defense establishment that really was expecting the worst this week," said defense commentator Hirsh Goodman. "What they ended up doing was making a de facto admission for the first time in 20 years that you can't live with the territories."

While civil libertarians and liberals generally condemned the crackdown and hawks supported it, there were also less predictable reactions that suggested many here understood the deeper significance of the restrictions. Several Palestinian activists actually welcomed the measures as a further step toward the re-separation of Israel and the territories.

For the same reason, many leaders of the Jewish settler community in the West Bank opposed the restrictions and some even defied the ban by smuggling journalists into the area, risking five years in prison. Settlers themselves were exempt from the travel ban.

"It looks to me like this was a very big flexing of muscles in order to separate Judea and Samaria from the rest of Israel and to isolate us from our fellow Israelis," said Eliakym Haetzni, one of the main philosophers of the settler movement, using the biblical term for the West Bank. "It's a make-believe performance of mighty efforts so that later on they can say they couldn't succeed and we'll simply have to get rid of the land."

The politician whom Haetzni most admires, former Defense Minister Ariel Sharon, also criticized the restrictions, saying they were unnecessary and potentially dangerous. Sharon attempted to force a vote in Israel's policy-making Inner Cabinet on his own proposals for restoring order in the territories but was blocked by the leader of his own hawkish political party, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir.

Sharon and Haetzni offer a simple solution to suppressing the uprising, in which at least 118 Palestinians have been shot dead. They would expel dozens, perhaps hundreds, of alleged activists and their families; slam shut the doors of every Arab building society, trade union, professional group or student organization advocating a Palestinian state; and bulldoze tens, perhaps hundreds, of houses in retaliation against stone and gasoline-bomb throwers. Such measures, Sharon claims, would end the violence within a few days or weeks.

Israel's defense establishment appears to be moving — albeit slowly — in Sharon's direction. More than 4,000 alleged activists are in jail, about 500 of them in administrative detention in which they can be held indefinitely without charge or trial. The Shebibah youth movement has been banned, and the Palestine Press Service, an information conduit to journalists, closed for six months. Houses have been bulldozed, and numerous economic sanctions imposed.

The Jackson Appeal: Liberalism Plus An Offer Of Hope

CUDAHY, Wis. — The Rev. Jesse Jackson does many things in his campaign speech to confront racism. The most effective is the Sesame Street bit at the end.

"All children 12 and under come to the front," he says. "Children 12 and under. Come on up."

It sounds strange at a political rally, but the children begin filing toward the front until they fill the stage.

"Now repeat after me," Jackson says, standing in a circle of tiny faces: "I am."

"I am," chimes the diminutive chorus in a motley soprano.

"Somebody!"

"Somebody!"

"Save jobs."

"Secure farms."

"Secure farms."

The grownups in the audience invariably laugh and coo.

It is a silent syllogism about race, subliminal, emotional: The children, unconcerned with his color, accept Jackson so easily, even if the words mean little to them.

If the children embrace him, why not the adults?

In the words of the candidate himself, it is pure "Jackson action."

Against the odds, Jesse Jackson has won more popular votes than any other Democrat in the presidential race, thanks in part to a split vote among white candidates and a nearly total control by Jackson of the black electorate. But in selected states he also has won more than 20 percent of the white vote, and lately that number appears to be growing. Local polls suggest that he is an even bet to win Wisconsin on Tuesday, a state in which just 3 percent of the voting age population is black.

What is the essence of Jackson's appeal?

Part of it is that Jackson, say analysts, is embracing the progressive platform that others in the party had seemed determined to abandon.

"Even now, when Democrats hear that old-time Democratic fundamentalism, they laugh and cry and speak in tongues," said Times political consultant William Schneider, a political scientist at the American Enterprise Institute.

Part of it, too, is that no other Democrat is offering a compelling message at a moment when the party is weak and in a period of transition.

"No one has expressed an alternative vision," Schneider said.

Yet others this year, such as Missouri Rep. Richard A. Gephardt, have tried populism. Illinois Sen.

Paul Simon has tried unapologetic liberalism.

To these, Jackson adds not only charisma, but also promises so improbably wonderful, rhetoric so soaringly optimistic, and an approach so emotional rather than intellectual that believing him becomes a renewing act of faith for blacks and whites alike.

"When it came down to it, he is the only one who is offering hope for my kids," said Roger Rapoport, a 37-year-old white attorney from Lansing, Mich., and a father of two small children.

"I'm 24 and mine is the generation of apathy," said Kathleen Krause, a college student from Lansing. "Half the kids I know from high school aren't even registered to vote."

After seeing Jackson wow teenagers at a Lansing high school, Krause said she thought, "Maybe, just maybe he can get us out of this apathy."

Often the most poignant moment in Jackson's stump speech is when he mockingly poses the question of many political strategists, "What does Jesse want?"

His answer is breathtaking: "I want to stop drugs. What do I want? I want to wipe out malnutrition ... end ghettos ... save jobs ... secure farms ... invest in people ... raise minimum wage ... comparable worth for women ... build affordable housing ... make America better ... then let the sun shine on everybody!"

It is a list so impossible one cannot help wonder sometimes whether Jackson is naive or just insincere. Yet it is a list so full of hope and wonder that it brings crowds to their feet.

Jackson talks a lot about faith: "Faith has been renewed. Hope has been revived."

And faith, as a minister must know, involves the abandonment of rationalism in favor of spiritualism.

"Everything starts here, in the gut," Jackson said, one night recently on his campaign bus in a rare moment when his guard was lowered.

"Not here," pointing to his head.

"People go from feeling to action, and they use their heads to rationalize their actions."

"People begin to see, touch, feel and they begin to believe."

Jackson does not talk about explaining his position. He talks about "the affection level" between himself and his audiences.

"I love you," he will tell audiences, white and black.

In some ways, Jackson is at his most intimate from a distance of 30 feet or more — at the podium, before a group. From there he reveals more of himself, and gives more of himself. Up closer, he can be patronizing, dictatorial, uncomfortable — though at times, such as when he is talking about the civil rights movement, or music, he can relax.

Jackson's delivery differs depending on his crowds. Working-class blacks in churches hear the revival-meeting style. Upper-class blacks hear a far more tempered discussion of "the predicament."

Working-class whites hear another tone. College students another. And legislators still another. And Jackson talks candidly about "reading the cultural nuances" of a crowd before or while he speaks.

"Some people are listening, looking to reject, some are listening looking to rejoice. Some are there to convert. Some are just curious."

Sometimes Jackson avoids the question of color, relying instead on his use of children. Sometimes Jackson uses his race as not only an issue but as the most compelling issue.

To many black audiences, for instance, Jackson says his election means "there are no more impossible dreams. ... If I can make it you can make it."

To better-educated, more liberal white audiences, a group among which Jackson has had strong appeal, he also addresses race:

"You may have missed the March on Selma, Ala., 23 years ago to win for blacks the right to vote. But don't you miss March 26," he told a largely white audience in Grand Rapids, Mich.

"Vote for Medgar Evers. Vote for Dr. Martin Luther King," he tells a half-white audience of students at Western Michigan University. "Vote for your self-respect. Don't let their dying be in vain. Vote with a passion."

Norman Ornstein, a political scientist at the American Enterprise Institute, calls it "laying a heavy civil rights guilt trip on white liberals."

Not surprisingly, Jackson delegate coordinator Steve Cobble sees it more optimistically: "Casting your vote for Jackson really does embody an embrace of the civil rights movement," and a time, he says, when people were proud of what they were doing politically, and more optimistic about the nation's future.

Jackson's rhetoric embodies even more ancient calls of American nobility, too. Speeches are laced with references to "We the People," and the epigram from the Statue of Liberty, "Bring me your tired, your poor ..."

In a sense, his message is as simplistic as the Little Engine that Could. He said he could win, and — on the force of his own personality and a split opposition — he has.

And by draping his own election in the larger cause of civil rights and liberal optimism, a vote for Jackson becomes a vote of significance.

Maybe in America, anyone can grow up to be president. It is not difficult, in the moment of passion during a Jackson speech, to wonder: Maybe we really can end malnutrition and stop drugs.

"He doesn't seem like the kind of person who would let them go," said Katherine Cassidy, a white marketing director of a regional shopping mall in Lansing.

Nor, apparently, is it difficult to shed rational concerns about electability and budget deficits, and give oneself over to hope.

"Across the years," Jackson tells an integrated group at the Union Baptist Church in Hartford, Conn., "I have never seen hope fail as a force of change."

Supporters seem unconcerned that Jackson's platform has the ring of the fantastic:

"No presidential candidate is able to accomplish everything he says in a campaign," Cassidy said.

And congressional checks and balances, Cassidy said, will sand the rough edges off Jackson's policies.

"At least he has a wish list," says campaign press secretary Del Marie Cobb.

Jackson's essentially emotional, non-intellectual approach on the stump is one of the ways he deals with the issue of race. He picks up white children and they respond to him. He embraces farmers. He makes people feel powerful and positive.

Pollution Adds To Woes Of Carteret Fishermen

BEAUFORT, N.C. (AP) — Carteret County, with more commercial fishermen than any other county and the state's leader in fish landings, may be facing a severe threat to the water that provides that livelihood.

The outbreak of toxic red tide that hit Carteret County in late October drew most of the headlines, but pollution has also been at work, closing almost 50 percent of the county's shellfishing acreage since 1980.

County fishermen in 1986 landed 32 million pounds of fish worth $23 million — more than a third of the value of the total state catch for the year, but many residents fear that could be drastically reduced if pollution from developments on Bogue Banks and elsewhere outstrip efforts to protect the water.

"Those sort of things are causing people to have a lot of concern about water quality," state Rep. Bruce Ethridge, D-Onslow, a member of the legislative panel who lives in Beaufort, told The News and Observer of Raleigh. "The red tide stimulated a lot of interest. It made a lot of people realize how important it is to have a clean environment."

Bogue Banks, a 25-mile long island forming the county's southern shoreline, is one of the most intensely developed stretches on the North Carolina coast, containing the resort areas of Atlantic Beach, Pine Knoll Shores, Salter Path, Indian Beach and Emerald Isle. Many retirees, tourist and second-home owners are attracted to the area because of the abundance of nearby water for sport fishing, boating and swimming.

"It's all dependent on the water — clean water," said William Smith, a commercial fisherman and seafood dealer who is chairman of the Carteret County Board of Commissioners.

One of two proposals has raised fears in local residents. It calls for a marina and housing complex near Broad Creek, which flows into the waters of western Bogue Sound. Residents fear the marina would pollute nearby waters and force the state to ban shellfishing in one of the state's most productive waters for clams and scallops.

"We believe that we are slowly losing the battle to protect the estuaries that our coastal fishermen are dependent upon," said Allyn Powell, president of the environmental group Carteret County Crossroads.

Even developers, usually at odds with environmentalists about regulations to protect the environment, agree that local economy depends on the purity of local waters.

"Developers recognize that a healthy environment is the key to attracting citizens to the coast," said Ronnie Watson, an Emerald Isle developer and member of the state Coastal Resources Commission. "We cannot kill the goose that laid the golden egg."

Yet Watson and other developers say unbridled enthusiasm for protecting the environment could strangle economic growth. And they say it's not fair to blame development for all the water pollution problems.

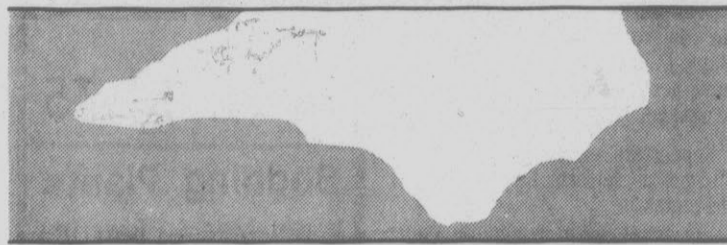

Recently, residents were dismayed when the N.C. Environmental Management Commission denied a request by several groups to designate two "outstanding resource waters" in Carteret County. One area was the western part of Bogue Sound adjacent to the proposed Broad Reach marina, and the other was the southern part of Core Sound.

Environmentalists and fishermen say they suspect the EMC denied the request because of pressure from developers. Commission members said they could reconsider their decision, based on studies by their staff. But some wonder what will happen to those areas in the meantime.

"While you're waiting, couldn't it be harmed in such a way that it would no longer qualify for that designation?" Ethridge asked.

Easter Egg Fight

FALLSTON, N.C. (AP) — At Sugar Hill on Easter morning, you don't hide eggs, you fight with them.

For more than 100 years, people from this farming community in northeastern Cleveland County have gathered early on Easter to break eggs and renew community bonds.

Donald Lingerfelt of Hickory started this year's fight at 7:10 a.m. in the middle of Sugar Hill Road.

A young girl stepped shyly forward with an egg clutched in one fist, the egg's light green tip exposed. Lingerfelt, holding an egg in his finger tips, tapped her egg twice.

The green egg yielded with a crunch. The girl reversed her egg to expose the unbroken blunt end. Lingerfelt tapped again and the green egg again gave way.

Lingerfelt claimed the broken egg and the child produced a new egg for a second fight. The match continued until Lingerfelt won four eggs, the girl two.

Within an hour, 150 people were fighting eggs along a 50-yard stretch of the road. Thousands of broken eggs, the spoils of the victors, filled pockets, baskets and the back of one battered pickup.

King Anniversary

RALEIGH (AP) — The 20-year anniversary of Martin Luther King Jr.'s death gave many North Carolinians time to reflect on how the civil rights leader affected their lives.

At 31, Thomas Johnson, a youth development worker, Baptist minister and member of the Reidsville City Council, comes between those who were teens or adults during King's life and those who have known about him all their lives.

One of three children supported by a mother who worked at menial cleaning jobs, his college tuition was paid for by federal assistance programs created in response to the federal civil rights movement.

"I would never have been able to go to college if it hadn't been for Martin Luther King's dream," Johnson said.

Carolyn Burgman, 44, of Greensboro, was playing with her infant daughter in 1968 when she learned King was shot to death as he stood on the balcony of a Memphis, Tenn., motel.

"I was outraged," she recalled in an interview. "I sat there sobbing, thinking 'this cannot be.'"

8 Die On Highways

RALEIGH (AP) — Eight people were killed in traffic accidents in North Carolina during the Easter weekend, including a 7-year-old Randolph County boy who rode his bicycle into the path of a car, the state Highway Patrol said today.

Stephen Wade Singleton of Asheboro died around 1 p.m. Friday when he rolled into the path of a car near Ramseur.

Christy Diana Franklin, 17, of Moravian Falls was killed at 10 a.m. Friday when she drove her car into the path of another vehicle on N.C. 16 just north of Taylorsville, the patrol said.

Robert Alan Lisle, 26, died at 9 p.m. Friday when his motorcycle hit a car on U.S. 158 north of Greensboro. Susan Evans Cahoon, 32, also was killed Friday evening when her car was struck by two vehicles after she reportedly ran a stop sign on U.S. 17 south of Vanceboro, according to the patrol.

George Fenton Helms, 48, of Charlotte was killed Thursday evening when the car he was driving collided with two vehicles on U.S. 29 and overturned, troopers reported.

Mildred Sams Sorrells, 53, of Canton, was killed Saturday morning when the car she was driving hit a culvert and overturned near Canton.

Phillip Alexander Jukoski, 33, of Apex, died at 5:15 a.m. Saturday when he ran in front of a car on U.S. 64 west of Cary, the patrol said.

Jerry Wayne Reel, 41, of Marion, was killed late Saturday night when the car he was driving hit an embankment off U.S. 70 near Marion and overturned.

The death toll for 1988 stands at 292 compared with 333 at the same time last year. The Easter holiday traffic watch began Thursday at 6 p.m. and concluded at midnight Sunday.

N.C. Farmers Optimistic

RALEIGH (AP) — Better prices and increased demand have farmers across North Carolina heading into their fields with renewed hope. They anticipate a good season — possibly their best in three years.

"We have three crops looking up ... in terms of profitability," said W.K. Collins, a specialist in charge of crop science for the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service. "Peanuts, cotton and tobacco."

Collins and other experts said demand for all three was increasing worldwide.

"There's more optimism out in tobacco land than there has been in years," said Larry Barbour, a Clayton farmer and the chairman of the board for Tobacco Associates Inc., a farmers cooperative. "Farmers are raring to get up and go at it."

While cigarette use in the U.S. is falling annually at a rate of about 2 percent, use in foreign nations is growing and exports now account for about 53 percent total flue-cured leaf sales.

The planting season is just days away and North Carolina's leaf growers — who produce 66 percent of the nation's flue-cured tobacco — have had their hopes boosted by increased foreign demand for U.S. cigarettes, better market prices, and reforms that have been working since 1986.

"The tobacco program is working and it's working ... at minimum cost," said Jim Graham, state agriculture commissioner. "In past years, assessments to run the government's leaf program — shared by growers and buyers — reached the 25-cents per pound level. This season, they are less than 3 cents per pound."

Government quotas have been increased, allowing farmers to grow more, and the assessments have dropped. Years-old surpluses are falling. When they were high, prices stayed depressed.

Last year, that changed. Tobacco sales brought an average price of $158.75 per hundred pounds, up $6.10 from 1986.

"Our crop last year averaged about 15 cents above the support prices," Collins told The News and Observer of Raleigh. He and other experts, including Gerald H. Long, chairman of R.J. Reynolds Tobacco USA, predict the trend will continue.

Carolina are finding it increasingly difficult to fill dozens of other specialty positions — many needed as the number of elderly people grows, officials say.

One example is in the field of physical therapy. The aging population, the rise in sports medicine and health programs, and new federal reimbursement laws encouraging home health care over hospital stays are increasing demand. And schools aren't keeping up.

"The marketplace is just expanding more rapidly than has the ability of the educational institutions to prepare people for entry into physical therapy," said Robert Bartlett, chairman of the department of physical therapy at Duke Medical School.

There are also shortages of medical technologists, who perform laboratory tests to help in the diagnoses of disease, and respiratory therapists, who treat breathing disorders.

"I'm not sure that people are aware that there are going to be generalized shortages; there's so much smoke and flame about the shortage of nurses," said W.E. "Pete" Royce, the director of management services for the N.C. Hospital Association. "I have the impression that this one is kind of slipping up on us."

Bob Wildermann, assistant director for hospital laboratories at Duke University Medical Center, told The News and Observer of Raleigh that last year was the first time there weren't enough students available to fill the staff.

The medical center has 23 vacancies among 214 positions for medical technologists. Though a 10 percent vacancy rate sounds minor, he said, "if you're part of the 90 percent that's left working overtime all the time, it's bad."

The Area Health Education Centers Program at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill recently issued a survey of job vacancy rates taken in the fall of 1986 that indicated serious vacancies in the three fields.

Kate McDonald, an associate director of the program, said there were indications the shortages had grown since the survey. For example, the survey showed that vacancies among radiological technologists had increased only slightly from 1981 to 1986, rising from 6.7 percent to 8.0 percent. "But we have had many people say in horror, 'Oh no, we know there's a lot of vacancies; we have several at our hospital," she said.

Many causes are similar to those for the nursing shortage: traditionally female-dominated fields are losing women to higher-paying jobs elsewhere; many avoid the field out of fear of contracting AIDS; salaries start fairly low, from $20,000 to $25,000, and grow slowly; and alternative health-care programs such as private clinics lure workers away from hospitals with higher pay, better hours and greater satisfaction.

National demographic trends are another headache.

"There just aren't that many high school graduates coming out with the necessary math and science skills to get out into these general health areas," said Royce.

Another problem in some fields is that declining enrollments are closing schools or programs, although demand for new graduates is likely to increase.

"In 1970 there were 118 accredited cytotechnology programs in the United States," said Nancy Gardner, branch head of the cancer cytology laboratory of the state Division of Health, which tests cell samples from Pap smears and other exams. "In 1988 there are 47 accredited programs, but only 39 are active."

The number of medical technology schools has been dropping, too.

STAIN-RESIST LIMITATIONS

Recently, we've been discussing the "miracle" of the new stain-resistant carpet you've been seeing and hearing so much about on TV. In fact, this new technology's advantages are so outstanding that advertisers and salespersons often get a bit carried away!

You can hardly blame them, since for years, they've had to hang their heads when a recent customer called for help the first time some chic dinner guest spilled a glass of red wine on the newly installed carpet. And that's not to mention the problems created by all the dye in the kid's punch or fruit juice!

Wonderful stain-resist carpet is...

Bullet-proof it isn't! Unfortunately, there are a few things that get through that magical barrier the manufacturers have given us—not a lot of things, mind you, but some. Consider...

First, bleaches are a definite no-no! Chlorine bleach, peroxide, even acne medications containing benzoyl peroxide (check the label) will remove color from your carpet either immediately or progressively over a few days or weeks. Second, watch out for spills or overapplication of plant foods, insecticides, animal shampoos (with flea killers) and animal "accidents", since all have the ability to remove dye in time.

Like to do-it-yourself? use caution!... Certain carpet cleaning chemicals, along with products designed for use in the kitchen or bath (highly ammoniated or alkaline), may remove your stain protection.

Maintenance considerations are so important that fiber manufacturers have even set up toll-free "hot lines" to answer your questions. Further, there are many "Certified" professional cleaners who have the answers to your fifth-generation cleaning and spotting questions.

Help is just a call away. All you have to do is ask!

Pope Issues Easter Plea For Peace

By JEFF DONN
Associated Press Writer
Christians braved Israeli-Palestinian tensions in the Holy Land, prayed in England for an end to Northern Ireland's religious bloodshed and listened worldwide to Pope John Paul II's Easter plea for peace.

Elsewhere on Sunday, traditional passion plays took place in Brazil and chaplains delivered services aboard U.S. warships in the Persian Gulf.

In Hungary, men prepared for today's more frivolous dousing of women with perfume during the traditional "sprinkling spree."

In Vatican City, 100,000 people gathered in St. Peter Square on Sunday to hear the pope's Easter message, which had a broadcast audience of millions.

"Pray for peace in the world, for justice, pray for the rights of man, especially for religious freedom," the Roman Catholic leader said.

In Jerusalem, about 1,000 faithful joined in services Sunday at the site where most Christians believe Jesus rose from the dead.

But only about half as many people came as last year to the services at the 12th century Church of the Holy Sepulcher, church officials said. Many had been deterred by four months of Palestinian protests and Israeli crackdowns in the occupied territories that have left more than 135 Arabs dead.

In Canterbury, England, Anglican Archbishop Robert Runcie compared the March 19 slaying of two British soldiers at an Irish Republican Army funeral in Northern Ireland to Christ's crucifixion.

The two soldiers were shot to death in a predominantly Roman Catholic district of west Belfast after they were beaten by mourners heading to the burial of an IRA guerrilla.

Runcie said in his Easter sermon that Christ's death was "a dark death, as dark in the cruelty and hatred which attended it as were the deaths of those two young soldiers in Belfast a fortnight ago."

But he said the joyous memory of Christ's resurrection should give hope for an end to Northern Ireland's sectarian violence.

In Belfast, thousands marched peacefully to mark the 1916 Easter uprising against British rule in what is now the neighboring Republic of Ireland.

In Hungary, men were stocking up on eau de cologne for today's "sprinkling spree" when they rove in groups perfuming girls and women. The custom is believed to stem partly from ancient fertility rites.

At St. Stanislaw Koska church in northern Warsaw, where the slain pro-Solidarity priest Jerzy Popieluszko is buried, a Christ figure was draped in a banner in the red lettering of the outlawed trade federation.

It read: "We will rise again."

In the Czechoslovak capital of Prague, 2,000 believers attended an Easter Mass at St. Vitus Cathedral just over a week after riot police broke up a peaceful demonstration for religious freedom in Bratislava.

In the Persian Gulf, where Iran and Iraq are at war, skippers of 16 U.S. Navy ships marked Easter with messages to their crews. Religious services were held aboard several vessels.

More than 10,000 people took part Sunday in peace marches in West Germany's major cities and at several U.S. military installations there. The traditional Easter weekend marches are held for world peace and the destruction of nuclear weapons.

Brazil, the world's most populous Catholic nation, celebrated Easter with traditional passion plays recounting Christ's crucifixion. In Rio de Janeiro, many of the main roles, including that of Jesus, were for the first time played by blacks in keeping with the church's equality campaign.

About 90 percent of Brazil's 135 million people are Roman Catholic.

Twisters Pop Mich.; Louisiana Mops Up

By The Associated Press
Thunderstorms spawned at least four tornadoes in Michigan, causing no injuries but damaging dozens of homes and disrupting electrical service, while Louisiana residents cleaned up from a weekend twister and flooding.

Much of the damage in Michigan was confined to Washtenaw County southwest of Detroit, where a funnel cloud touched down four times Sunday afternoon along a 13-mile path, said Dan Harsh, the county emergency management director.

The National Weather Service confirmed three other tornadoes in southeast Michigan, meteorologist Tom Fendon said.

More than two dozen homes and several barns were damaged by the four twisters, along with trees and utility poles, officials said.

A funnel cloud and golfball-size hail were reported late Sunday afternoon in the Washtenaw County community of Manchester, but the twister apparently did not touch down, Fendon said.

The storm system also produced severe thunderstorms elsewhere in the state's Lower Peninsula. Traverse City, Houghton Lake and Grand Rapids each received about 1 inch of rain, while wind gusts reached 63 mph near Ann Arbor, the weather service said.

About 9,000 customers lost electrical service during the storm, utility officials said.

In Louisiana, partly cloudy skies and 80-degree weather permitted a continued cleanup Sunday by victims of a tornado and floods that accompanied a torrential weekend rain.

Southeast Louisiana was waterlogged by more than a foot of precipitation. Rain-swollen rivers and streams continued to crest above flood stage, but officials said the flooding would be confined mostly to rural areas.

Hardest hit by flooding were the suburban subdivisions in Marrero, across from New Orleans on the west bank of the Mississippi River.

But Tony Rodi, coordinator for emergency management in Jefferson Parish, said streets hip-deep in water on Saturday were dry by Sunday, and power was restored to nearly all the houses.

Prisoners Escape

MOUNDSVILLE, W.Va. (AP) — State police today expanded into Ohio and Pennsylvania a manhunt for three convicted murderers who escaped from the maximum-security West Virginia Penitentiary.

The three inmates were serving life sentences without possibility for parole and were housed separately in cells in the same prison wing, said Jerrie Clutter, secretary to Warden Jerry Hedrick.

The inmates were noticed missing during a 10:15 p.m. Sunday cell check, Clutter said. They were still at large at mid-morning.

Few details of how the inmates escaped from the high security prison were available, Clutter said.

Heckler Yells At Swaggart

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — A teen-age heckler called Jimmy Swaggart a hypocrite after the fallen TV evangelist spoke at a church service, but the youth was drowned out by a hastily summoned mass prayer.

"Brother Swaggart, your hypocrisy is scornful of the government of God," the young man, about 16 years old, yelled during a brief lull in the service Sunday at Swaggart's Family Worship Center.

Swaggart, who has not been preaching since tearfully confessing to an unspecified sin Feb. 21, was sitting on the church stage at the time with his wife, Frances. He did not visibly react to the heckler.

The Rev. Jim Rentz, who has taken over Swaggart's role, watched the youth for a moment and then told the 3,000 worshippers, "Let's stand folks and let's just praise the Lord."

Rentz and the congregation drowned out the youth until he was escorted from the sanctuary by ushers. During his brief outburst, the youth also referred to "immoral sins" and "money."

Helping Kids Learn

Teacher Entertains Class

By JAN LARSEN
Joliet Herald News
PLAINFIELD TOWNSHIP, Ill. (AP) — Jim Aylesworth is spinning a yarn — and he's ensnared his pint-sized audience at Crystal Lawns Elementary School.

All eyes are on him as he paces the gym floor, sits, leaps to his feet, gestures, folds a piece of paper, and then scribbles on it.

Good teachers, he says later, are entertainers — and Aylesworth is an entertainer.

He is also a source of inspiration for these students, who will soon be writing stories for a Young Authors competition.

Aylesworth is an author himself. He's had seven children's picture books printed by major publishers. Three more are in different stages of publication.

He has taught first grade in the Chicago suburb of Oak Park for 16 years and has won several teaching awards. He teaches children's literature at three Chicago-area colleges and is given time off from school to lecture to students at schools and libraries and at teachers' conferences.

His mission, it seems, is to infect audiences with enthusiasm.

He loves words — the rhythm, the feel and the sound of them.

He sings the words of "One Crow, a Counting Rhyme," soon to be published.

He draws as he reads about barnyard animals settling down for a nap in his first book, "Hush Up!" He speaks slowly and thoughtfully as he tells the students that writing and rewriting is a lot of work. "And it makes your fingers hurt," he says.

Writing, he notes, can be painful — when the words won't come out right, when a publisher rejects you.

There are other problems, "like when I'm writing in the basement and my wife calls me to help with supper and I know I have to put aside what I'm doing," he said.

Aylesworth opens a battered suitcase he has brought with him and holds up a thick sheaf of papers. These are the letters of rejection, he says.

"There are a lot of hurt feelings here," he says, hefting the papers. "But I didn't quit."

He has just finished book No. 11, and is now starting to think about book No. 12.

"Go for it," his audience chants. "Go for it."

When it's time for questions, a dozen hands wave furiously in the air.

"I'll pick some of the best kids here to ask me questions," he says.

More hands shoot up.

"What's your favorite book?" asks one student.

"That's kind of like asking a father which is his favorite child," he replies. "I like all these books, but for different reasons."

"Do you pay them to publish the books?" asks another student.

Aylesworth smiles a big smile. "They pay me." He pauses. "Imagine."

Afterward, in an interview, Aylesworth says "quite a few" of his books haven't been accepted by publishers.

His favorite authors of children's books are Dr. Seuss and Beatrix Potter.

He began writing, he said, because books meant so much to him and he wanted to be a part of that world.

He is particularly fond of folklore and fairy tales and says the key to writing for children is "to know your audience. A lot of people don't. A child's book is not about childhood. It's for children. There's a big difference."

He says he became a teacher because "I'm trying to make a better world. I want to matter." And that's why he has stayed in teaching.

He admits a male first-grade teacher is a rare breed. "There are maybe 20 of us in the state," he said.

"It's sex-role stereotyping in our culture," he said. "It's been traditional that females take care of small children. But children definitely need male and female role models."

He and his wife, Donna, an interior designer, live in Hinsdale and have two sons, ages 18 and 21.

Uniforms Belong On The Players

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I agree with "Barbara in Ohio." In what other major sport in America besides baseball does the coach/managing staff dress in the team uniform?

Wouldn't it look rather strange to have K.C. Jones of the Boston Celtics or Pat Riley of the Los Angeles Lakers at courtside in basketball shorts, a tank top and high-top sneakers? Or Mike Ditka of the Chicago Bears on the sidelines in a football jersey, pads and all, with headset and clipboard in hand?

Baseball would do well to follow the example of other sport team leaders by wearing more dignified apparel. If not a business suit, perhaps some type of identified leisure wear. But, please, lose the tight pants and stretch over-socks! — SANDRA DAY, BLOOMINGTON, ILL.

DEAR ABBY: Where does that Ohio woman get off criticizing baseball coaches and managers for wearing the team uniforms with their potbellies hanging out?

Look at Don Zimmer of the Chicago Cubs, Whitey Herzog of the St. Louis Cardinals, Tommy Lasorda of the L.A. Dodgers and Roger Craig of the San Francisco Giants in their new form-fitting uniforms. They manage with their brains — not their bellies! — MARTIN SHONK, ANNAPOLIS, ILL.

DEAR ABBY: Why shouldn't baseball managers wear the team uniform? Can't you just picture Billy Martin kicking sand at the umpire in a $600 Hickey-Freeman suit? — ART DELMAN, ROCHESTER, N.Y.

DEAR ABBY: I don't know why baseball managers and coaches wear uniforms, and if their potbellies hang out, who cares? Most of those guys are over 50 and like their beer.

Wouldn't football and hockey managers and coaches look silly if they were suited up in uniforms, helmets and all that gear? And how about basketball managers and coaches in shorts? Heaven help us! — SPORTS NUT IN ATLANTA

Hotel Serves As A Temporary Haven

By SUZANNE CASSIDY
The Lancaster New Era
LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — The place looks like any other hotel. Same front desk. Same cash register. Same red-carpeted lobby.

But Harb-Adult, housed in the former King Douglas hotel, is not the kind of place where people spend their holidays. It's not a place to escape reality.

At Harb-Adult, reality is a permanent guest.

Harb-Adult, which stands for "harboring of adults," is a hotel for low-income people. It opened in June 1987, with the help of volunteer labor, low-interest loans and donations from individuals, churches and civic groups. With more than 50 rooms now renovated, the non-profit hotel runs consistently at full capacity.

Its mission, said Richard H. Maurer, chairman of the Harb-Adult board, is to serve as a way station, a temporary haven for rehabilitated people on the move up and out of poverty.

It's too soon to tell whether Harb-Adult will fulfill its mission. Harb-Adult manager Jay Kiralfy is taking things one day at a time.

Kiralfy, 38, was a hotel administrator in Las Vegas for 13 years before returning to his native Lancaster County to manage Harb-Adult. He has no social work experience but he's a down-to-earth guy eager to do some good.

Some of his guests, he says, are hard-working people simply down on their luck. Those people come to Harb-Adult looking for a cheap place to live so that they can put together enough money to find a real home.

Others, he says, are people with mental health problems who have "done the whole route," moving from a residential rehabilitation center to shelters to rescue missions. Harb-Adult is just one more stop on the route.

Still others are drug and alcohol users who lack the motivation, family support, training and money management skills they need to get and keep jobs and make their own way.

"The people who are here obviously have some kind of problem or else they wouldn't be here," Kiralfy said.

All that he and Harb-Adult can hope to accomplish, he said, is to help the people who can be helped.

Historic Homes Tour Planned

NEW BERN — The Historic Homes and Gardens Tour will be held April 8-9. Twelve privately restored homes, churches and the gardens of Tryon Palace will be included.

The 16th annual Tryon Palace Gardener's Sunday April 10 follows the homes tour event. The gardens and grounds of Tryon Palace will be open to the public 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The tour commences with the Forbes House (ca. 1760-70), and continues through Federal, Greek Revival and Victorian styles to the Anderson-Sprenger House built in 1920.

Along the route of the Historic Homes and Gardens Tour, more than a dozen special events will be offered. Refreshments, crafts demonstrations, and musical programs are included at many of the tour sites.

Homes tour tickets also include a horticultural workshop on "Spring Flowering Bulbs" at 10 a.m. April 9 in Tryon Palace Auditorium.

For ticket information write Homes Tour, Box 207, New Bern, N.C. 28560.

The palace complex hours are 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays, and Sunday, 1:30 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Does it cost more than $35 per week...total cost...no hidden fees?
Are the counselors educationally trained to help you?

OR
Are you required to buy products on a regular basis? How much will this cost?
At DIET CENTER we do not feel that injections or special products are necessary. We feel it is more important to learn to control your weight with regular foods that you will continue to eat for the rest of your life.

We offer our exclusive DIET SUPPLEMENT. This supplement is GIVEN to you at NO additional charge.

If the diet is guaranteed, what does the guarantee say? How much money will you get back if you are not satisfied? At DIET CENTER we feel it is impossible to guarantee weight loss, but should you decide to pay in advance for our program we will refund any unused portion of your money if for any reason you decide not to continue our program.

Are you discouraged from exercising? If so, take another look at the program, common sense tells us a safe diet and exercise program is the only sensible approach to good health and weight loss.

Proclamation
 In recognition of the efforts of small business men and women in the city's economy, Greenville Mayor Ed Carter has proclaimed the week of May 8 through May 14 as Small Business Week in the city.

"The small business men and women of Greenville work hard to retain that independence and are rewarded with success and pride in ownership. It is their dedication and their efforts in the marketplace which provide us with a healthy, vital economy, free of excessive government intervention.

shrines, is built atop the site of the ancient Jewish Temple destroyed by Romans in 70 A.D.

"The Temple Mount, the national symbol of our people, (is) in the hands of our enemies," read a banner carried by 50 members of the Jewish group, known as the Temple Mount Faithful. They were turned back at the entrance ramp by 30 police officers.

Anwar Khatib, deputy head of the 30-member Islamic Supreme Council, which administers the Moslem shrines, said if the Jewish group entered the complex Moslems would be forced to "defend themselves."

A Hebrew-language leaflet circulating in the West Bank town of Nablus called on Israeli soldiers to desert.

Between Jerusalem and the twin cities of Ramallah and El Bireh, there was virtually no traffic on the roads and the only open store was a bakery. Bakeries were exempted from the general strike call.

In the Gaza Strip, cars also stayed off the road today except for U.N. vehicles and Israeli army trucks and jeeps. Outlawed Palestinian flags flew from many rooftops and utility poles.

Rashad Al Shawwa, the deposed mayor of Gaza City, said the city had joined the strike and said Israeli soldiers had closed gasoline stations and bakeries and may have turned off electricity.

"Electricity has been cut off from the town altogether. We don't know if this is another punishment," Al Shawwa said in a telephone interview. "The closing of bakeries will definitely lead to a (food) shortage."

Shultz, in an interview Sunday night with Israeli journalists, said he intended to reassure Shamir that he would not allow an international conference to impose terms of a settlement on Israel.

"We are going to do things together," Shultz said. "The conference would have no authority to impose a solution, and would have no authority to veto an agreement reached by the parties."

The PLO rejected the U.S. proposal that calls for talks on some Palestinian self-rule to start on May 1 and on the overall settlement in December. In a statement issued in Tunis, the PLO demanded a role in peace talks.

The PLO-affiliated underground leadership called in a leaflet last week for a general strike today to protest the Shultz visit.

"Nobody from the Arab world can say, 'yes,' if the PLO says, 'no,'" said Faiz Abu Rahme, a moderate lawyer from Gaza whose name has been raised in the past as a potential non-PLO negotiator.

Three Arabs died Sunday, including one electrocuted when soldiers ordered him to climb a utility pole and take down a Palestinian flag, the army said. A spokeswoman said military police had started an investigation into the death of Khalil Jaber Hamzawy, 18.

him as the first-degree murder charges were read by Leonard. His only statement came in response to Guice's inquiry about whether he wanted a court-appointed attorney.

"I signed a waiver a few minutes ago. I don't want one," Rainey said. "I'd like to think about it awhile."

Rainey told the judge he intended to hire his own attorney to represent him.

"It would seem Mr. Rainey that you will need the services of an attorney very badly," Guice said. "These charges are as serious as they can get."

Henderson County Sheriff's Capt. Tom Hatchett said the shootings apparently stemmed from a family argument over real estate held in Edneyville, an unincorporated town about 20 miles southeast of Asheville.

"There seems to be some sort of domestic thing, over conflict over some land," Hatchett said, adding that Rainey owned land near the church which is adjacent to property belonging to Mrs. Rainey's family.

Witnesses said the suspect walked into the church to view the body of Mrs. Justice, and then walked outside. Mourners in the church then heard gunshots.

"I understand they were having visitation when he came to the church. He apparently had weapons in a vehicle outside the church. He went outside and got them out of the trunk and then started shooting," Hatchett said.

Witnesses said Mrs. Rainey drove away from the church after the shooting in her Ford sedan, which was riddled with bullet holes. Witnesses said Mrs. Rainey reached the Hendersonville city limits before authorities transferred her and two other wounded women from the blood-stained car to ambulances.

Hatchett said police spotted the car traveling at a high rate of speed at the intersection of U.S. 64 and Interstate 26, stopped the vehicle and had the wounded victims taken to Pardee Hospital in Hendersonville.

Ms. Rainey, who is also the granddaughter of Mrs. Justice, was listed in good condition with bullet wounds in her neck, said hospital spokeswoman Mary Ann Morris.

Sheila Johnston, 30, of Fletcher, wounded in the chest, was taken to Memorial Mission Hospital in Asheville, where she was in critical condition, said nursing supervisor Evelyn Woody. Mrs. Johnston's daughter, Wendy, 11, was wounded in the leg and was in good condition, Ms. Woody said.

Hatchett said Rainey was arrested without incident a short distance from the parking lot. Authorities recovered a handgun and a shotgun in the parking lot, Hatchett said.

Curtis and Ethel Justice, distant relatives of Effie Justice who lived next door to the church, said they had planned to attend the funeral but changed their minds when it began to rain.

"We heard the shots from down here, but I couldn't imagine what it meant," Ethel Justice said. "There were about 10 or 12 shots. Some of them went like bombs. We wondered what in the world it could be, what with it being Sunday and a funeral going on."

"I'm so thankful I wasn't up there, I could shout. I probably would have had a heart attack. This is the terriblest thing that's ever happened up here," Mrs. Justice said.

more troops may be sent if they are needed.

The chase on Sunday ended an otherwise calm Easter holiday and ushered in a week of uncertainty for Panamanians. A Roman Catholic Church offer to mediate an end to the country's political crisis was set to expire at midnight tonight.

Embassy spokesman Terence Kneebone said Davis was leaving the home of Vatican Ambassador Jose Sebastian Laboa when the Panamanian vehicle "began following immediately, picking them up right outside the gate." He said it tried to stop the chauffeur-driven car with its lights and sirens.

"The ambassador's driver, in accordance with instructions, did not stop. The ambassador was driven to his residence, and the other vehicle followed all the way," Kneebone said. The residences are about two miles apart.

"We consider this serious," Kneebone said. He declined to comment on what security provisions Davis had but said they were normal under the circumstances. No weapons were displayed in the chase, he said.

Embassy vehicles are clearly marked with special license plates.

Morison was sentenced to two years in prison by U.S. District Judge Joseph H. Young of Baltimore.

Jump Is Fatal

RALEIGH (AP) — A Durham man was killed Saturday after he apparently forgot to put on a parachute before jumping from a plane in Franklin County, authorities said.

Ivan Lester McGuire, 35, was planning to videotape two other parachutists during a jump at 3 p.m., said Franklin County Sheriff's Capt. Ralph Brown. A witness on the ground watched McGuire's fall and saw that no parachute opened, Brown said.

"I think he just got tied up in the moment," he said. "Everything was going so well and he just forgot to put on a parachute."

McGuire was an experienced parachutist who filmed other jumpers as a hobby, said Paul Fayard, owner of the Franklin County Sport Parachute Center. McGuire had made about 800 jumps, Fayard said.

The fatal jump, from 10,500 feet, was McGuire's third of the day, Fayard said.

work for the publication while employed by the Navy.

Defense attorneys contended their client was trying to educate the public about a Soviet naval buildup and that the photographs showed the Soviets nothing they had not learned already from a former CIA official's 1978 sale of the spy satellite's operations manual to a Soviet agent.

Judge J. Harvie Wilkinson III agreed that First Amendment interests in the case were significant, but said the way in which the photographs were released threatened an equally important public interest, "the security of sensitive government operations."

"To reverse Morison's conviction on the general ground that it chills press access would be tantamount to a judicial declaration that the government may never use criminal penalties to secure the confidentiality of intelligence information," Wilkinson wrote.

The judge added that the prosecution of Morison "was not an attempt to apply the espionage statute to the press for either the receipt or publication of classified materials."

Judge J. Dickson Phillips Jr. said the espionage statutes "as now broadly drawn are unwieldy and imprecise instruments for prosecuting government 'leakers' to the press as opposed to government 'moles' in the service of other countries."

However, Phillips said, the limiting jury instruction in Morison's case, requiring proof that the leaked information was either potentially damaging to the United States or might be useful to an enemy, was a sufficient remedy.

Final Game A Big 8 Showdown

Set For Final

Championship game tonight against Big Eight Conference rival Oklahoma. (AP Laserphoto)

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Final Four times two equals Big Eight, and that's the equation that will be used to crown college basketball's national champion tonight.

Not only will the championship be decided for the first time between two Big Eight teams, but it will be decided in the same building, Kemper Arena, where the Big Eight tournament is held each year.

Aside from sharing the same conference, however, No. 4 Oklahoma and unranked Kansas have little in common on the basketball court.

The Sooners raced through a 35-3 season, averaging 104 points per game and gaining a seamy reputation for embarrassing opponents by running up the score. The Sooners like to run wild, and they use a fullcourt press throughout the game.

"We love to knock people out," Sooners forward Harvey Grant said. "If they could knock us out, they would."

The Jayhawks, meanwhile, have a record of 26-11. If they win the national title, they would do so with more losses than any other champion in NCAA history. Both Villanova, in 1985, and North Carolina State, in 1983, were beaten 10 times. The Jayhawks lost two of their starters early in the season — Archie Marshall to injury and Marvin Branch to academics — and rely heavily on two-time All-American Danny Manning.

"This year, we've gone through so much," Kansas forward Chris Piper said during a Sunday news conference. "Adversity has brought us together. We weren't expected to do anything."

Manning, who leads the team in scoring and also creates scoring opportunities for his teammates with his inside play, said his game changed when the two starters were lost.

"I matured a lot," he said. "I learned how to accept a lot more responsibility."

Manning said the key to success against Oklahoma would be to limit the Sooners' number of possessions.

"It can be a real rat-race with them," Manning said. "The more possessions they have, the better they are."

Not since 1957 has a Big Eight team even made the title game. That year, Kansas lost to North Carolina 54-53 in triple overtime. Although Kansas is the traditional power, with eight Final Four appearances and a national title in 1952, and has a homecourt advantage with its campus only 35 miles away at Lawrence, Kan., Oklahoma was an early eight-point favorite.

"I don't care who's the favorite," Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs said. "That doesn't do you any good when the ball is going up and down the floor. If you'll notice, last night the favorites didn't win."

Second-ranked Arizona was slightly favored to beat Oklahoma, but the Sooners won that semifinal Saturday night, 86-78. Kansas upset fifth-ranked Duke 66-59.

"Kansas has had an up-and-down season, but they're on a roll now,"

Tubbs said. "It's kind of ironic, you know, that we would wind up in the NCAA championships and it would be at the same place we won the Big Eight tournament against primarily the same teams."

Oklahoma beat Kansas twice during the regular season, but the two teams did not meet in the conference tournament because Kansas was

Green's Miscue Aids Lyle's Win

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Sandy Lyle has an unprecedented position among British golfers, a new title and an improved chance to win the Masters.

Ken Green, meanwhile, has a week off.

It all came about because Green missed a two-foot par putt on the 72nd hole of the Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament on Sunday.

That little putt would have given Green the title and a place in the Masters field this week.

"I had given up, really," Lyle said Sunday. "I thought I was doomed. I didn't fancy he would miss it."

But he did. "I just gorked it to the right," Green said after the little lapse had spoiled what had been a great comeback and gave Lyle a second life in a playoff.

"When you give a guy a second chance, it almost always comes back to haunt you," Green said.

It did. The burly Scot won his second title of the young season with a 10-foot birdie putt on the first extra hole, and became the first British player ever to lead the American money-winning list.

The victory, Lyle's fourth in three years on the American circuit, was worth $180,000 from the total purse of $1 million. It pushed his earnings for the year to $408,021, the leading figure going into the Masters at Augusta, Ga., the first of the year's Big Four titles.

"That does a lot for my confidence going to Augusta," Lyle said. "If I can play about half as well there as I did here, I think I'd have a good chance."

Lyle, a former British Open champion, held a three-stroke lead over the field and five over Green starting the final round. At the turn, he led Green by four.

But Green made up the difference in four holes. He birdied three times and Lyle bogeyed from a bunker.

After both birdied the 16th — Lyle with a 60-foot putt — Green went ahead with a 27-foot birdie putt on the 17th, his fifth birdie in eight holes.

When Lyle's chip for birdie bounced out of the cup, Green needed only a two-putt par to win. He lagged to about two feet only to miss, setting up a playoff that was almost an anticlimax.

"It's going to take a little while for me to get over it. It's pretty difficult to handle, to play so well for so many holes, then throw it away," said Green, whose closing 67 was the best round of the drizzly final round. Green and Lyle finished regulation play tied at 271, 17 under par on the Forest Oaks Country Club course. Lyle matched par 72 over the final round.

Jeff Sluman, in second place when the day's play started, had a share of the lead after six holes but finished with a 71 and missed the playoff by two shots at 273.

Scott Hoch was next at 278 after a 72. Gil Morgan had a 72 for 279.

Baseball Ready To Open Season

Rick Mahler hopes to duplicate his opening day magic while Dave Stewart, Rick Sutcliffe and the Minnesota Twins want to repeat last year's success starting today when the 1988 baseball season begins.

Kirk Gibson, Dave Parker, Jack Clark, Phil Bradley, Brett Butler and Floyd Bannister lead an array of familiar faces in new places. A half-dozen managers, including Billy Martin, start this season fresh with their teams, full of the April optimism that springs eternal.

"I'm excited. There's anticipation," Kansas City Manager John Wathan said. "You get butterflies in your stomach. There is butterflies in the players, the coaches, the manager, the people in the front office. It's always there until the first pitch and then it goes away and it's baseball."

Roger Clemens, trying to become the first to win three straight Cy Young awards, was to throw the first pitch of the season this afternoon when Detroit played at Boston. Later, St. Louis was at Cincinnati in the traditional National League opener.

Nine games were scheduled today, including Cleveland at Texas and Seattle at Oakland tonight.

Tuesday's openers are Minnesota at New York, Pittsburgh at Philadelphia, San Diego at Houston and the Chicago Cubs at Atlanta.

Stewart, a 20-game winner, and Mark Langston, a 19-game winner with Seattle, meet when the Mariners play at Oakland.

A sellout crowd of 47,000 is expected to watch the A's, who have added Parker to Mark McGwire and Jose Canseco in a modern-day Murderer's Row.

"You've got to like that lineup," Stewart said. "We've got a power lineup."

The Twins are trying to become the first team to win consecutive World Series championships since the 1978 Yankees.

"I think that's the most hated word around here — 'repeat,'" Minnesota's Tom Brunansky said. "Everyone wants to know if we can repeat."

Frank Viola, the World Series Most Valuable Player, will start against New York's Rick Rhoden. Viola does not have to face Clark, the Yankees' free agent who begins the season in a familiar place — the disabled list.

At Atlanta, Mahler and Sutcliffe are the starters Tuesday night.

Mahler has pitched 34 straight scoreless innings on opening days, giving up just 13 hits, and three consecutive shutouts. Chris Short and Rip Sewell are the only others with three shutouts on opening day.

Sutcliffe, 18-10 last year, and the other Cubs starters might have to work overtime this season since relief ace Lee Smith was traded to Boston.

At Kansas City, college basketball is the big story as Oklahoma and Kansas play tonight for the NCAA championship. There was a good matchup in town this afternoon — Toronto's Jimmy Key, the American League earned-run average leader, against Kansas City's Bret Saberhagen.

Godin's Key Bunt Lifts Bucs To Win

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Steve Godin laid down the perfect bunt to score John Thomas in the bottom of the 11th inning Sunday afternoon as East Carolina's Pirates nipped William & Mary, 7-6, in a Colonial Athletic Association baseball game.

The win gave the Pirates a sweep of the two-day three-game series between the two schools. ECU took the Saturday doubleheader from the Indians, 5-0 and 13-2.

But Sunday's final game proved to be no pushover for the Pirates, who were outthit by the Tribe, 14-9. East Carolina had to struggle throughout the afternoon as the Indians battled back and finally tied it up at 6-6 in the top of the ninth, forcing extra innings.

And William & Mary went hard for the win, bringing on ace Bill Prezioso, an all-conference hurler, who had taken the loss in the 5-0 game Saturday evening.

"It's a real tribute to our players to have beaten him twice in one weekend," Pirate coach Gary Overton said. "He's one of the class pitchers in the league."

The run again him was unearned as Thomas had reached on an error with one away moved up on a walk to Jay McGraw, and reached third on an infield out.

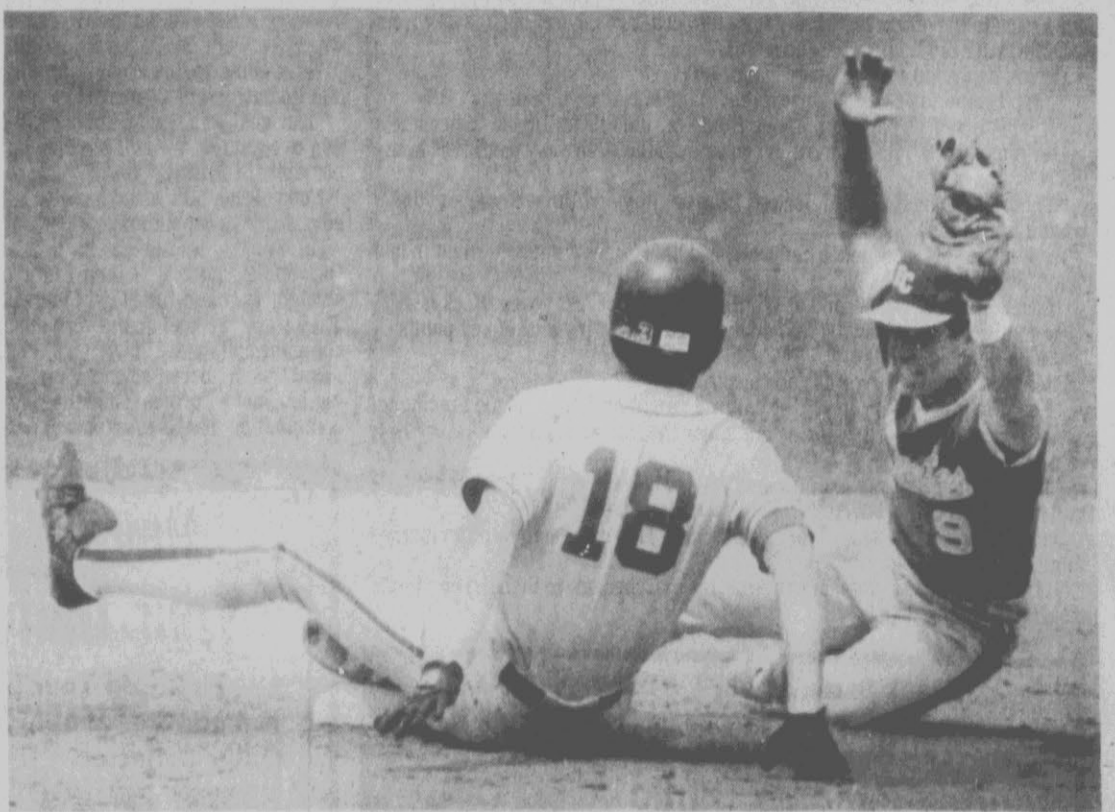

But then, Godin laid down the perfect bunt along the third base line and before Prezioso could reach it, Thomas crossed home sliding on his stomach as Godin reached first.

And while Overton was quite pleased to escape with the win, he wasn't happy about the wasted opportunities the Pirates had.

"We just left too many men on base," he said, referring to the 11 ECU left standing. "We didn't score when we had the easy opportunity. However, we did score when we had to, and that's a credit to us. Really, I thought it (the missed opportunities) would come back to haunt us."

William & Mary left a few standing themselves, 12, and had five extra base hits — four doubles and a triple — and got only two runs out of those North Pitt and Farmville Central are tied for the lead in the Wachovia Trophy standings for the 2-A Eastern Plains Conference at the end of the winter sports season while Chocowinity and Plymouth lead their conferences, the Tobacco Belt and Northeastern, respectively.

North Pitt earned 12 3/4 points in the winter, paced by a first-place finish by the girls in basketball. Farmville Central earned 15 1/4 points as its boys' won the basketball title.

That brought both teams to a total of 26 3/4 points for the fall and winter seasons.

Ayden-Grifton is in third place with 23 1/4 points while Greene Central is fourth at 20 1/2. C.B. Aycock has 18, South Lenoir 12 1/4 and Pamlico 8 1/2.

Points are awarded on a plan devised by each conference participating in the program across the state, usually involving the order of finish in each sport. The school with the most points at the conclusion of the spring sports season will receive the Wachovia Trophy, presented annually by Wachovia Bank and Trust Co.

Plymouth earned 42 1/2 points during the winter season as it won the 2-A Northeastern Conference wrestling title and tied for first in girls' basketball. That brought the Vikings' total of 68 1/2 for the year thus far.

Kansas Gives Bus Driver His Own Free Ride

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Meet Jimmy Dunlap — Detroit bus driver, Kansas Jayhawk good-luck charm.

When the Jayhawk basketball team captured the Midwest Regional a week ago at the Silverdome in Pontiac, Mich., it was Dunlap who drove the team bus.

Kansas Coach Larry Brown liked Dunlap so much, he arranged to get him on a plane for Kansas City, site of the Final Four and tonight's national championship game between the Jayhawks and Oklahoma.

"He's a great person and is very caring. ... You can see the way he treats our players," Brown said Sunday. "You can tell he really cares about every one of them."

"Jimmy can always drive for me. He's the best." Dunlap thought the whole thing was a joke.

"When I was loading the plane at the Pontiac Airport last Sunday I heard the players wanted me to go on the plane and, after I gave them all a high five, they said coach wanted me to come with them to Kansas City," Dunlap said. "I took that with a grain of salt. I've never heard of a bus driver flown nowhere."

"Monday morning I got a call from my Detroit office, and I still couldn't believe it. But here I am, and we're in the final."

Virtually overnight, Dunlap has become a star, signing autographs as he carts the Kansas team about.

"I'm no celebrity. I'm just the driver, but I'm hounded for autographs," said Dunlap, 46, decked in T-shirts, hats and everything else with Jayhawk emblems.

"And I don't think I'm any lucky charm," said Dunlap, who was raised in North Carolina but moved to Detroit 22 years ago. "But I think this team is on a mission."

The University of Kansas paid Dunlap's plane fare and gave him a ticket to the Final Four.

"I was offered $2,000 for my ticket, but I wouldn't sell it," Dunlap said. "That would be a breach of their trust, and, besides, I'm now a Jayhawk fan. They're my adopted college, but I'm still a Tar Heel at heart."

Kansas All-American Danny Manning said he likes Dunlap. "He's a great guy," Manning said. "We joke around a lot. Besides, I'm a little superstitious, too."

"If we go all the way, we'll hire him next season," added junior forward Mill Newton.

As far as tonight, Dunlap wouldn't hesitate on a prediction. "Kansas by three," he said.

Becker's Win Eclipses $3 Million Mark

DALLAS (AP) — With his championship in the WCT Finals, Boris Becker became only the ninth professional tennis player to pass the $3 million mark.

Becker defeated Sweden's Stefan Edberg 6-4, 1-6, 7-5, 6-2 in Saturday's title match at Reunion Arena to capture the $200,000 first prize and raise his career earnings to $3,044,927.

It was the first title in Dallas for the 20-year-old Becker.

The 22-year-old Edberg settled for the $100,000 second prize, which gives him career winnings of $3,780,182.

The win marked a return of form for Becker, who won the Wimbledon championship in 1985 and 1986, but faded to seventh in the world last year. His comeback has pushed him up the ladder to fourth.

That's bad news for Denmark, which Becker will battle this week in the quarterfinals of the Davis Cup in West Germany.

"I've been working very, very hard," he said. "I guess you can say I've gone back to the office. I work my tail off in practices. I sort of got away from working after my Wimbledon successes."

Becker served 19 aces against Edberg.

"I can't remember when I served that many aces," said Becker.

"It's the best I've played in a long time," he said. "I'm trying to become a better player and this is a most encouraging step. I've very confident in my game."

"Tennis is fun again," said Becker. "I'm healthy and I'm winning and that's what it is all about."

Becker said his resurgence can be traced back to his disappointment in last year's Wimbledon.

"Losing in the second round at Wimbledon hurt me last year," Becker said. "My confidence went down. I had injuries and was losing a lot of key points. It just all happened so quick."

But Becker said it served as good inspiration.

"Now I'm glad it happened," he said. "I can appreciate my good moments now." Becker has been working out under the stern discipline of Harry Hofman of Australia.

"This is proof that my training and my practice is right," Becker said. "I had been going easy on myself. Now, I'm working hard."

Becker was seeded second, one spot behind Edberg, going into the tournament.

But Becker served a total of 43 aces in his matches, more than the combined total of any other player.

Kansas Following The Script Closely

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Somewhere it must be written that this all was to happen. It just can't be an accident.

Kansas, which at one time appeared to have no hope of even getting into the NCAA Tournament, will play for the national championship of college basketball tonight, in an arena that's practically in the Jayhawks' backyard, in the final college game for the school's leading scorer of all time.

And who would the opponent be in this clash for destiny's darlings? Why, none other than Kansas' own Big Eight Conference rival, big, bad Oklahoma.

Kansas enters the game having won 14 of its last 17. One of those losses was to Kansas State, the team the Jayhawks defeated in the Midwest Regional championship. Another was to Duke, which Kansas sidelined 66-59 in Saturday's semifinals.

And the third team? Why Oklahoma, of course.

And just for fun, guess where Kansas' starting point guard hails from. Hint: It begins with O, ends with an A and has K-L-A-H-O-M in between.

Improbable, but all true. Naturally, Kansas is the underdog — Oklahoma is favored by eight points — but that doesn't faze the Jayhawks. They act like they belong in tonight's game at Kemper Arena, which is only 35 miles from the KU campus. And what's more, the Jayhawks think they can win.

"I don't know if it's all a complete surprise," said forward Danny Manning, a two-time All-American who has scored more points than any player in Kansas history.

"When you get in the tournament, you want to win. You don't want to just be here. That's the attitude we've taken all along. We wanted to win six games."

Manning said he can tell the Jayhawks are committed to their cause simply by comparing the attitude now with how the team felt heading into the 1986 Final Four, when Kansas lost to Duke in the semifinals.

"Making it to the Final Four is a great accomplishment, but it seemed we were more excited the first time when we went to Dallas," he said. "We've come to this Final Four with a more businesslike approach."

"Our goal was to come in here and win two games. We still have an opportunity to do that."

None of this talk would have seemed possible two months ago.

On Feb. 3, the Jayhawks lost to Oklahoma 73-65 — their fourth straight loss and fifth in six games. They were 12-8 and on the verge of a complete collapse.

But Coach Larry Brown kept juggling his lineup until he found the right combination and Kansas took off on a five-game winning streak that started the ball rolling toward an NCAA bid.

"When we lost four in a row, he (Brown) started getting easier on us," forward Chris Piper said. "He didn't want us to lose our confidence. He didn't start getting tough with us until we started winning again."

"We didn't change any of our offensive philosophy, we didn't change our defensive philosophy. We tried to find a team that would work together and develop some chemistry. Obviously, we did."

Once in the tournament, the Jayhawks benefitted from some more storybook happenings.

Seeded sixth, Kansas opened with an 85-72 victory over Xavier, Ohio. Third-seeded North Carolina State, a team that had caught fire late in the season, should have been the next opponent, but the Wolfpack was upset by Murray State in the first round.

The Jayhawks got by Murray State 61-58 and then should have faced second-seeded Pittsburgh. But Pitt was upset by Vanderbilt so Kansas drew the Commodores and won 77-64.

That should have sent Brown's troops against Purdue, the top seed in the Midwest. But Purdue had been ambushed by Kansas State in the regional finals, setting up an all-Big Eight regional championship game.

Kansas State had hammered the Jayhawks 69-54 in the Big Eight tournament, but Kansas prevailed this time, 71-58. Then came Duke, which had beaten the Jayhawks 74-70 at Lawrence on Feb. 12. Less than five minutes into the game, Kansas led 14-0 and the Jayhawks were on their way to the finals.

All this has Brown enjoying himself more than ever.

"No matter what happens, I have never really enjoyed much," he said. "I never allowed myself to enjoy experiences at the moment, maybe not until afterward."

"But since the middle of January when we lost to Kansas State to break our winning streak (at home), it's been the first time in my life where I really enjoyed what was going on."

A key factor in the Kansas resurgence has been the shift of sophomore Kevin Pritchard from off guard to the point. Pritchard, from Tulsa, Okla., was recruited by Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs, and will be responsible for getting the ball upcourt against the Sooners' oppressive full-court pressure.

Alcott Gets Win, Takes The Plunge

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Amy Alcott stood on the 18th green at Mission Hills Country Club and weighed a tough decision — to plunge or not to plunge.

Finally, taking the advice of her caddy, Bill Kurre, Alcott leaped into the lake that surrounds the green.

"Bill told me, 'Kid, you may never get a chance to do this again here in your lifetime,'" Alcott said Sunday after she celebrated her victory in the $500,000 Dinah Shore Tournament by going for a brief dip.

"I didn't know how deep it was; wondered if I'd break a leg. But then I said, 'What the heck, it's worth it.'"

Alcott was elated with the victory, her second in the Dinah Shore, for many reasons.

For one, she had said she wanted to win for a friend, 25-year-old Ann Paulson, who is suffering from cancer.

The win also ended the longest winless streak of Alcott's career and made her only the third player in LPGA history to hit the $2 million plateau in career earnings.

"I'm glad I went over $2 million in the Dinah Shore," said the 32-year-old Alcott. "The Dinah Shore really put women's golf on the map."

Alcott's cooling swim also came after runnerup Colleen Walker had put the heat on the leader during the final round.

Alcott had a closing 1-under-par 71 for a 14-under-par 274 total, a tournament record. But she finished just two shots in front of Walker, who had a final-round 69 after trailing Alcott by four strokes when the day began.

"It got a little tight, but I just had to play my game," said Alcott, who built her lead to two shots with a birdie on No. 14, then didn't let Walker any closer.

"If you start thinking, 'What if I hit a bad shot? What if I bogey here? Then it's going to happen.'"

Walker, who has won just one tournament since joining the LPGA Tour in 1982, said the pressure was on Alcott.

"She had a little tension on her back," Walker said. "But Amy's a heck of a competitor ... She's playing extremely well, with a lot of confidence."

Alcott, in her 14th year on the Tour, collected $80,000 for the victory, running her career total to $2,050,831. Only Pat Bradley and JoAnne Carner preceded her to the $2 million mark.

Alcott also moved nearer to the LPGA's Hall of Fame. The victory was the 27th of Alcott's career, leaving her just three shy of the 30 needed for eligibility.

Rosie Jones, with a 71, finished third, five shots behind Alcott.

Amateur Caroline Keggi, a senior at the University of New Mexico, finished an impressive fourth with a closing 69 to wind up at 281.

That would have earned her a $26,500 paycheck, but, since Keggi's an amateur, she settled for a trophy.

Nancy Lopez shot a 69 to finish tied for fifth with Marta Figueras-Dotti at 282. Figueras-Dotti, from Spain, had a 73.

Alcott's victory ended her longest victory drought since she joined the LPGA Tour in 1975. She had won at least once a year until 1987, when she was shut out. Her last previous win was in August, 1986.

Her 14-under-par total at Mission Hills bettered by one shot the tournament record set by Donna Caponi in 1980, when Alcott finished second; and matched in 1985 by Alice Miller.

Jordan Delivers Winning Message

By The Associated Press
Michael Jordan wanted to deliver a message. The Detroit Pistons heard him loud and clear.

"They had a 4-1 record against us," the Chicago Bulls guard said of the Pistons. "And we had to establish that if we play them in the playoffs ... we can beat them."

Jordan scored a season-high 59 points, including two free throws with four seconds left in the game, to snap a tie and give the Bulls a 112-110 victory over Detroit Sunday at the Pontiac Silverdome. It was Chicago's third consecutive victory and the Bulls' 12th in their last 16 games, and pulled Chicago to within 3½ games of first-place Detroit in the Central Division race.

The Pistons have lost four straight and five of their last six. They now lead Atlanta, 102-100 winners over Indiana, by just one game.

"This is a game that could do a lot for our confidence down the stretch,"

Jordan said. "This game showed us that if we meet Detroit any time in the playoffs, we can beat them. We're coming on strong."

The NBA's leading scorer, Jordan now owns the top five scoring performances in the history of the Bulls' franchise. It also was the 10th time in his career he has scored 50 or more points in a game.

Jordan helped set up his game-winning free throws when he and Brad Sellers teamed to steal the ball near midcourt and Jordan was fouled by Bill Laimbeer.

The play began as Isiah Thomas passed the ball to Laimbeer, who in turn tried to pass the ball when it was slapped away.

Celtics 110, Mavericks 101
Larry Bird sank seven 3-point shots, scoring 32 points to lead Boston over Dallas. Bird fell one short of the league record of eight 3-pointers in a game set by Rick Barry on Feb. 9, 1980, and tied by John Roche on Jan. 9, 1982.

The strategy helped forward Kevin McHale get a career-high 10 assists. The Celtics had 36.

Hawks 102, Pacers 100
Cliff Levingston stole the ball and fed Dominique Wilkins for a layup with 49 seconds to go to lead Atlanta over Indiana.

Wilkins finished with 35 points as the Hawks won their fifth straight game.

Bullets 105, Nets 103
Moses Malone scored 15 of his 31 points in the fourth quarter and Frank Johnson made a defensive gem at the buzzer as Washington handed New Jersey its sixth straight loss. The victory was Washington's fourth in its last five starts and kept alive the Bullets' playoff hopes.

Roy Hinson led the Nets with 25 points and 13 rebounds.

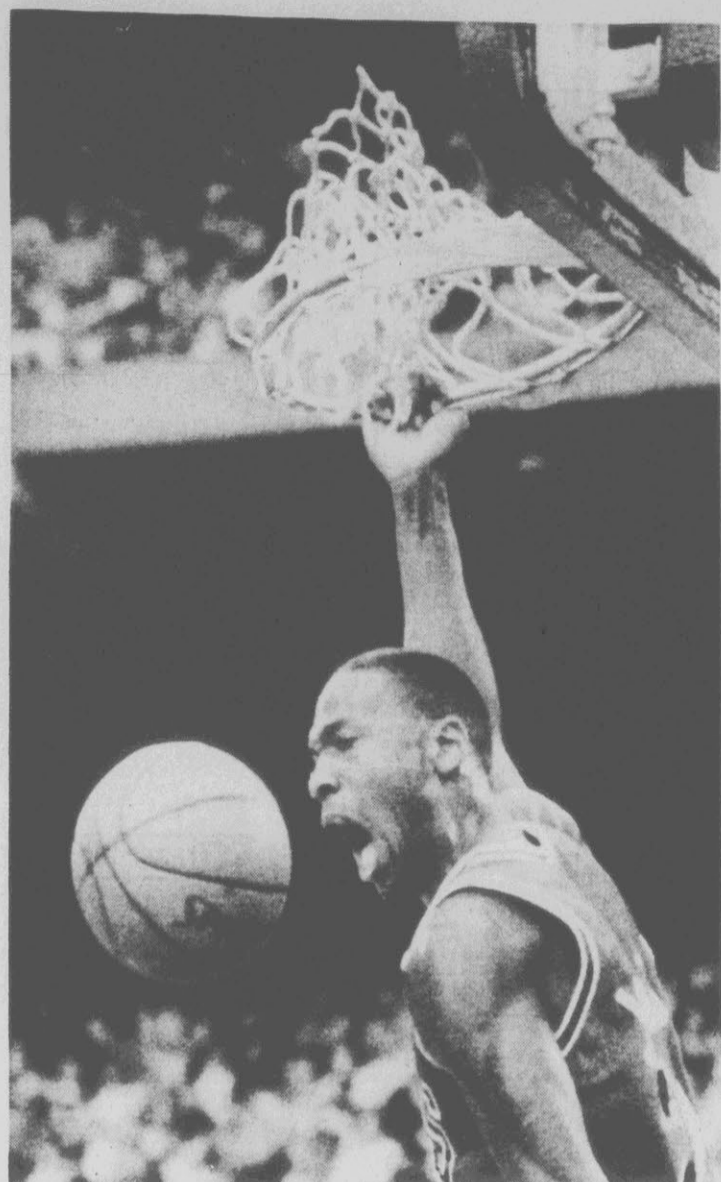

Trail Blazers 110, Spurs 107
Kevin Duckworth scored 24 points, including two key baskets in the final minutes, to lead Portland to a come-from-behind victory over San Antonio. Duckworth also had 12 rebounds.

He put the Blazers ahead 103-102 with 3:04 left before a foul shot by the Spurs' Greg Anderson tied the game at 105 with 1:42 remaining. A tip-in by Duckworth with 1:23 left gave Portland the lead for good at 107-105.

Lakers 108, Kings 104
James Worthy scored 24 points and Byron Scott added 23 points as Los Angeles posted its 34th consecutive home victory over the Kings.

The defending NBA champions, playing their fourth consecutive game without Magic Johnson and Michael Cooper, also got 19 points from Kareem Abdul-Jabbar en route to their 28th victory in their last 29 meetings with Sacramento.

Final Game ...

knocked out in the second round by Kansas State.

"That seems like a long time ago," Tubbs said of the two previous Kansas games. "It does, however, remove any doubt about your capability of winning."

While Tubbs had not taken a team to the Final Four before this year, Kansas Coach Larry Brown already had gone twice — in 1980 with UCLA and in 1986 with the Jayhawks. Two years ago, Brown brought a powerhouse Kansas team to Dallas but lost in the semifinals to Duke. This year, his Kansas team is being compared to the surprising Villanova and N.C. State teams.

"I can only speak for our team," Brown said when asked of the comparisons. "Once we got into the tournament, all I said to our kids was, 'Let's not be satisfied to win just one game.'"

"I do see some parallels, but they're with my UCLA team. We were, I think, 17-9 coming into the tournament, but we were playing our best at the end of the season, and we came within a layup of winning it all."

UCLA lost 59-54 to Louisville in 1980.

While Oklahoma was the No. 1 seed in the Southeast and won the region in overpowering fashion, Kansas came out of the Midwest as the sixth seed and got some help to make the Final Four.

In the second round of the tournament, Kansas could have faced N.C. State, but the Wolfpack was upset by Murray State. Kansas' opponent in the third round could have been Big East regular-season champion Pittsburgh, but the Panthers were beaten by Vanderbilt. And Kansas was all set to meet the region's top seed, Big Ten champion Purdue, in the Midwest final until the Boiler-makers lost to Kansas State.

"Obviously, you have to have some luck, some breaks, and win a game maybe that you weren't supposed to," Brown said.

Grant and Stacey King give Oklahoma a strong, quick front court, while guard Mookie Blaylock led the nation with 141 steals during the regular season. Oklahoma's press is designed to create turnovers.

KU's Brown Reportedly Is Top UCLA Candidate

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Larry Brown, who took UCLA to the NCAA championship game in 1980 and now finds himself there with Kansas, has emerged as a leading candidate for UCLA's vacant coaching job.

North Carolina State's Jim Valvano removed himself from consideration Saturday and, on Sunday, Duke's Mike Krzyzewski ended speculation that he would be the one to replace the fired Walt Hazzard.

According to published reports, sources close to UCLA say Brown is interested in returning to the Pacific-10 school.

Brown's Kansas Jayhawks play Oklahoma tonight in Kansas City, Mo., for the NCAA title.

Brown, coincidentally, will be in Los Angeles Wednesday, accompanying Kansas All-America forward Danny Manning to the John Wooden Award luncheon. The Wooden Award goes to the country's best college basketball player.

Wooden guided UCLA to 10 NCAA crowns in 12 seasons. Hazzard was the Bruins' fifth coach since Wooden retired after the 1974-75 season.

"I realize my name is going to come up because of the connection that I had," Brown said Sunday. "I love the school and I've always said that and I care about what happens."

"But this is a time of my life when I haven't been thinking of anything but Kansas and our team, and I don't want to focus on anything else."

"It's uncomfortable when your name is speculated all the time," Brown continued. "It's something I don't seek. I wish people would focus their energies on our program and these kids and what an opportunity we have."

Brown emphasized that he made a mistake in leaving UCLA.

"I was dumb to leave," he said Sunday. "I say that every year. I made a mistake. That was my first college job. My athletic director (J.D. Morgan) died and there were a lot of factors involved, but I was stupid. If I could change that I would, but I can't."

hits. Seven of the runners they stranded were in scoring position. Nine Pirates were left either at second or third.

"We played hard and intense, but not that well," Overton said.

The Pirates, after dodging bullets in the first two innings, took the lead in the bottom of the second, scoring twice. In each of the first two frames, the Indians put runners in scoring position with doubles, but failed to move them around.

William & Mary came up with its first run in the third. Adam Geyer led off with a triple to deep right center and scored on Bobby Knox' bunt to first. Knox reached when no one covered the bag in time.

The Indians then took the lead in the fourth with two more runs, chasing starting pitcher Brian Berckman. Steve Gatti opened with a double — the fourth extra base hit off Berckman in the first four frames. Gary Crocco added a single to center, and that brought on Jonathan Jenkins, whose wild pitch allowed Gatti to score the tying run. Crocco, who had stolen second, moved to third on the play and scored on a sacrifice fly by Pat Ansaldi, giving the Indians a 3-2 lead.

Jay McGraw put the Pirates back into the lead in the fifth with his sixth home run of the season. Thomas had walked just prior to the blast which made it 4-3. The Pirates added another run before the frame ended as Godin, who had reached on a fielder's choice, scored on a throwing error.

The Pirates added a sixth run in the sixth. Chris Cauble singled and courtesy runner Tommy Boswell stole second. He moved up on an out and scored on Brown's hit to right.

But the Indians struggled back after that, scoring single runs in the seventh, eighth and ninth innings.

In the seventh, Campi led off with a single and Tim Walsh's hit put him on third. He scored on Jim McCandless' sacrifice fly.

Dave Ryan led off the eighth with a hit and stole up. He scored on a double by Knox.

Finally, in the ninth, the Indians pushed over the tying run. Gatti led off with a single and was sacrificed to second. He took third on an out and scored on Ansaldi's single to center.

But Gary Smith, who had come on in relief in the fifth, didn't allow another runner past first base after that, giving the Pirates their chance to pull it out.

And, in the 11th, that's what they did.

"I thought Smith threw a good game for us," Overton said. "He threw maybe his best game of the year despite giving up a few runs. He has his best stuff today."

Brown and Godin led the hitting for the Pirates, each collecting two hits.

Gatti led the Indians with three while Knox, Champi and Geyer each had two.

The Indians fall to 11-16 overall and to 2-3 in CAA play.

East Carolina boosts its record to 20-9 and is now 4-4 in the conference.

East Carolina returns to action on Wednesday, hosting Liberty University in a 3 p.m. game. They then take to the road for an exhibition game on Thursday at 7 p.m. with the Kinston Indians in Kinston. Following that, they return to CAA action with a Saturday-Sunday three-game stint at George Mason.

For a luxurious Centipede lawn

USE Centi-Seed

For more than a generation, thousands of lovely lawns have been established annually with Centi-Seed, the original and dependable Centipede grass seed. New Centi-Seed is treated for fungus and bacteria protection and with a natural growth stimulant for quicker, surer results. Centipede develops and grows slower than other grasses but unlike "quicker starters" it produces a dense, weed-free, lifetime turf. Ask your neighbor who has used it and insist on Centi-Seed for planting your new lawn or converting your old lawn.

Down Comes The Net

Tech Avoids Crumble To Claim NCAA Title

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — For the second year in a row, a Louisiana Tech player in the championship game of the NCAA women's basketball tournament seemed a distinct possibility.

"We were flat on our backs, no doubt about it," Lady Techsters Coach Leon Barmore said.

But the team from Rustin, La., used a tough defense, strong rebounding and clutch shooting down the stretch Sunday to rally from a 14-point deficit and beat Auburn 56-54.

The Lady Techsters, 32-2, won the title for the second time in the tournament's seven-year history. They also captured the first championship in 1982.

A year ago, Louisiana Tech was blown out by Tennessee 67-44 in the title game, and the Techsters had made no secret of their desire to make amends.

"I was embarrassed last year," Barmore said. "I was embarrassed for the game of basketball. I was embarrassed because it was on national TV. I was embarrassed because I didn't think I'd done a good job. I just felt I'd let a lot of people down."

"I don't think I let anybody down this year."

"I think we all thought about last year's game quite a bit," Louisiana Tech player Teresa Weatherspoon said. "We felt we let the university down, too."

"When we were down by so many points, we just kept telling ourselves we can't let that happen again, so let's just keep fighting."

The fiery, 5-foot-8 senior led that fight. After giving up 16 points to Auburn's Ruthie Bolton in the first half, Weatherspoon held her scoreless after intermission.

Weatherspoon, meanwhile, had seven assists and only one turnover in the final 20 minutes while helping force Bolton into six turnovers.

"I don't see out a lot of players," Barmore said, "but it'll be a long time before you see a player like Teresa Weatherspoon. Teresa Weatherspoon has been one of the best there's ever been."

Auburn, 32-3 and ranked third in the final poll of the season, led the fifth-ranked Lady Techsters 31-19 at halftime and scored the first basket of the second half to build the margin to 14.

Barmore benched 6-foot-4 Venus Lacy in favor of a quicker lineup, and the rally began.

The Techsters finally caught the Lady Tigers at 51-51 on Angela Lawson's 15-footer with 3:02 remaining.

Erica Westbrook, who tied her career high with 25 points and was named the Final Four's most valuable player, followed with a steal and layup to give Tech a 53-51 lead.

Vickie Orr, who scored 11 points despite being bothered by sore knees, sank a 10-foot jumper to tie the game at 53-53 with 59 seconds to play. But Lawson put Tech ahead for good at 55-53 with a 16-footer with 39 seconds remaining.

"Ever since I signed with Louisiana Tech, I always dreamed of making the winning basket," Lawson said.

"It just seemed like it was my time to come forward," she said. "I wanted to be the one to take it. I was just happy that my teammates got me the ball when I was open."

After Tech's Nora Lewis made one of two free throws with 25 seconds to go, Auburn had a chance to regain the lead. But Westbrook's blocked Diann McNeil's shot on a baseline drive and, on the ensuing jump ball, Tech was awarded the ball.

"I kept thinking, 'Don't foul now, because she'll probably make the free throws,'" Westbrook said.

Auburn Coach Joe Ciampi said he had no criticism of McNeil's shot.

"The thing I like about Diann, and I told her this in the locker room, is she wasn't afraid to go in and try to win the basketball game," he said.

Weatherspoon made a free throw with three seconds to play to complete the scoring.

Cartoonist Milton Caniff Dies At Home Of Cancer

NEW YORK (AP) — Milton A. Caniff, who for half a century took Americans on daring adventures through the comic pages with "Terry and the Pirates" and "Steve Canyon," has died of lung cancer. He was 81.

Caniff, who had entered Beth Israel Hospital on Feb. 29, died Sunday at his home, according to a spokesman for King Features, which syndicated the strips.

Caniff set a standard for realistic drawing and quickly enthralled Depression-era readers with tales of danger in the Far East in "Terry and the Pirates," which debuted in 1934 in the Daily News.

He left the paper to join Marshall Field and the Chicago Sun Syndicate in 1946 with a new hero, "Steve Canyon," a fictional Air Force colonel who proved so popular he was eventually given his own file at the Pentagon.

Always attuned to what sells newspapers, Caniff liked to quote his high school art teacher in Dayton, Ohio: "Unless a piece of art inspired the viewer to part with cash money to acquire it, then the drawing was not worth a hoot."

But his technique was among the very best, and he was honored as the "Rembrandt of comic strips" at an exhibition at the Museum of Cartoon Art in 1985. He said he belonged to the "every wrinkle must show" school of art.

At the Dayton Daily News, Pulitzer Prize-winning cartoonist Mike Peters described Caniff as "the granddaddy of cartoonists."

"He was in the inner circle with Rube Goldberg, Al Capp, Walt Kelly and those guys," Peters said. "He was revered by all of us. He had some of the best drafted strips ever done."

Ted Hannah, a spokesman for King Features, said Caniff continued to work until very near his death, with his longtime assistant, Shel Dorf of California. Hannah said a decision on the future of "Steve Canyon" would be made this week.

Caniff's cartooning career began with "Dickie Dare" and "The Gay Thirties" for The Associated Press.

He was soon approached by Capt. Joseph M. Patterson, publisher of the News, who asked for an adventure strip packed with comedy, romance and adventure and set in the Orient, which Patterson regarded as the last outpost of adventure.

By 1946, "Terry and the Pirates" was in more than 300 newspapers and Caniff was making $75,000 per year. But he wanted to own a cartoon, and he developed "Steve Canyon," for which he was paid $2,000 a week and owned the rights.

Despite occasional complaints about violence, "Steve Canyon" kept flying and fighting, and early this year it was in more than 500 newspapers around the world, according to King Features.

Caniff was awarded the Air Force Exceptional Service Award, its highest civilian honor.

Caniff was a meticulous researcher, and some of the plots in "Terry and the Pirates" anticipated actual events in World War II, such as the Japanese attack on the United States. One of his memorable creations was the Dragon Lady, who was inspired by Joan Crawford.

When a "Terry" character named Raven Sherman was killed in 1941, Caniff received thousands of cards, letters and flowers, and he recalled that an elevator operator called him a murderer.

"Terry and the Pirates" was continued by George Wunder until the strip ended in 1973. Wunder died last December.

Caniff was born Feb. 28, 1907, in Hillsboro, Ohio, and by kindergarten was drawing recognizable human figures on scrap paper brought home by his father, a printer.

His first job was drawing cartoons for the Boy Scout page in the Dayton Journal Herald when he was 13. He also worked for the Columbus Dispatch while at Ohio State University, where he earned a fine arts degree.

Phlebitis prevented Caniff from joining the military.

"It was something I always wanted to do. It was like a small boy who dreams of catching the game-winning touchdown or rescuing the heroine from the villain. Fortunately, the strips have allowed me to have a close association with the military," Caniff once said.

Many of his strips had touches of autobiography and his Ohio boyhood, and friends often were prototypes for characters in the strip. Recently Caniff drew several weeks of strips based on his courtship of his future wife, Ester Parsons, at Stivers High School. They were married in 1930.

He donated most of his original material to Ohio State's Milton Caniff Library for Communications and Graphic Arts.

Caniff received at least three honorary doctorates, including one from the University of Dayton, and numerous other awards.

Conservationist Elliott Barker Dead At 101

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Conservationist and author Elliott S. Barker, who helped make Smokey the Bear part of American lore, has died. He was 101.

Barker died Sunday at a Santa Fe nursing home where he had lived for more than a year.

Barker, a founding member of the National Wildlife Federation, was named a "hero of our time" in July 1987 by Newsweek magazine.

In 1950, he sent a bear cub rescued from a fire in the Lincoln National Forest to Washington to represent the National Forest Service. Smokey the Bear became a fixture in the National Zoo where he was a living symbol for forest fire prevention.

Barker, who was born in 1886 in Moran, Texas, moved with his family to New Mexico in a covered wagon when he was 3 years old.

He worked for the U.S. Forest Service in New Mexico for 10 years as a ranger and a supervisor. In 1931, he was named the state's first game warden and stayed on the job until retiring 22 years later.

Barker joined a group of New Mexicans who lobbied for the state's first laws to protect game and fish. The state Legislature adopted a law in 1930.

During his tenure the state acquired 75,000 acres of land for recreation and wildlife refuges, established fish hatcheries and began the reintroduction of several species of animal into New Mexico.

After retiring in 1953, Barker began to write full-time. He wrote seven books and in 1972 received the Golden Spur Award from the Western Writers of America for his book, "Western Life and Adventures, 1889-1970."

He is survived by his wife, Ethel; three children, Roy Barker and Florence Giers, both of Santa Fe, and Dorothy Elmore of El Paso, Texas; and a sister, Grace Wilson of Aztec.

Services will be held at St. John's United Methodist Church in Santa Fe.

Box Office Success Doesn't Always Guarantee Oscars

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — If the Academy Awards were based on box-office popularity, "Fatal Attraction" would eliminate its four opponents and win as best picture with ease.

If Oscars were based on media acclaim, "Broadcast News" no doubt would be the winner. The funny, incisive look at how network journalists do their jobs under constant pressure captivated most critics, yet "Broadcast News" has been a disappointment at the box office.

Despite mediocre attendance and mixed notices, the home-stretch favorite for best picture of 1987 is the "The Last Emperor," a mammoth epic centering on the life of Pu Yi, boy emperor of China and later puppet ruler of Manchuria for the Japanese. Bernardo Bertolucci was nominated for director and co-writer, but the actors were overlooked.

The thriller "Fatal Attraction" was by far the biggest moneymaker of the year, its combination of adultery and terror selling $150 million worth of tickets in the United States and Canada.

"Fatal Attraction" also picked up nominations for Michael Douglas, Glenn Close and Anne Archer, as well as director Adrian Lyne and writer James Dearden.

Lyne, a graduate of British TV commercials, admits that he was sold on "Fatal Attraction" from the time he read the script.

"It was a page-turner," he said. "It was sent to me when I was in France. I sat down on some steps, and two hours later I was still on the steps, finishing it off. It was something I couldn't put down. I thought if I could provide the visual equipment and not screw it up, that it had a fighting chance of being as interesting a movie."

Lyne signed on with producers Stanley Jaffe and Sherry Lansing and worked with Dearden on the script. The director carries a tape recorder while preparing a film, and he made notes of matters he could use, such as his own son's attempt to demonstrate card tricks.

The three leading actors of "Broadcast News" — William Hurt, Holly Hunter and Albert Brooks — also were nominated for awards. James L. Brooks was named as writer and producer but, astoundingly, did not receive a nomination as director.

"I wanted to do a romantic comedy," Brooks said. "Just through a series of circumstances I wound up being around a number of network news people."

Brooks, who once worked as a news writer for CBS News, spent months hanging around in studios of Washington and New York for his research. The result is a verisimilitude that has attracted the praise of many network news people, including the curmudgeonly Andy Rooney.

Bertolucci amazed the film world by winning permission to film a movie with political overtones within China. More amazingly, he was able to shoot inside the fabled Forbidden City, the shrine of Chinese history.

"The fact that this movie exists is another proof that China is changing," the Italian director said. "Only eight years ago it was inconceivable for the Chinese to let a Western filmmaker do a scene about the Red Guards, as at the end of the movie when you see the Cultural Revolution."

Nominee "Hope and Glory" is John Boorman's valentine to his boyhood during the Battle of Britain. The writer-director-producer won triple nominations, but his actors received none. The movie's box-office performance has been less than impressive.

Despite the background of German bombings, the film is primarily comedic.

"For me as a child, the experience of the war was largely one of exhilaration, joy and fun," Boorman said. "This is what the film is; it's great entertainment, it's very funny. There were moments of horror, when people were killed. As a child, you forget this very quickly."

Also up for best film of the year is "Moonstruck," a romantic comedy about an excitable Italian family in Brooklyn. Cher, Vincent Gardenia and Olympia Dukakis are acting nominees, as well as director Norman Jewison and writer John Patrick Shanley.

"Moonstruck" has been a major success at the box office, doing more than $50 million in business so far.

After a pair of heavy dramas, "A Soldier's Story" and "Agnes of God," Jewison "was in the mood for a romantic comedy." His first choice to play Loretta, the widow torn between two lovers, was Cher.

"For me, there has always been something 'streety' about Cher, a lacking in pretension," the Canadian director said. "She's a very honest person — in-person and on the screen. She looks Italian, although she's part Armenian and part Cherokee."

Yet directors don't always get their first choice for lead performers, as was the case with "Fatal Attraction." As right as Glenn Close might seem for the role of the jilted Alix, director Lyne said Isabelle Adjani was actually his first choice, since she had played a similar role in a French film.

IRA Snubs Cease-Fire; Protestants Begin Marching

By EDITH M. LEDERER

Associated Press Writer
BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The Irish Republican Army dashed any hopes of a cease-fire by vowing to renew guerrilla attacks on British security forces until it "saps the political will of the British government."

The IRA statement was read aloud Sunday as thousands of Roman Catholics attended a dozen marches commemorating the 1916 Easter Rising against British rule in what is now the Republic of Ireland.

Protestants launch their marching season today when the fiercely pro-British Apprentice Boys commemorate Protestant resistance to the 1689 siege of Londonderry ordered by Catholic King James II.

Austin Currie, a prominent leader of the Social Democratic and Labor Party, expressed hope Sunday that talks between his moderate Catholic party and Sinn Fein, the legal political wing of the outlawed IRA, would lead to "a permanent end of military and violent activity."

In an Irish Radio interview, Currie said draft documents were exchanged at the March 23 Sinn Fein-Social Democratic and Labor Party meeting which could lead to a round-table conference that would also include Protestant parties and the Irish government.

But Martin McGuinness, vice president of Sinn Fein, told a 5,000-strong crowd at Milltown Cemetery in Belfast that cease-fires weren't even discussed at the talks.

"The IRA position on cease-fires has been on record for a long time: No more cease-fires," he said. "talk (can) take place but the war will go on."

Sinn Fein leader Gerry Adams told 1,500 people at a march in Londonderry, the province's second largest city, that the talks with the Social Democratic and Labor Party "are about exploring whether there can be an agreement in principle to an overall strategy for justice and peace."

However, he said the two parties were far apart in the talks.

Adams and McGuinness said they strongly opposed any solution to the nearly 20 years of sectarian strife in Northern Ireland based on self-government for the province. The only solution, they insisted, is for Britain to pull out of the province where Protestants outnumber Catholics by 3-to-2.

"Let the British give us a declaration of intent to withdraw and the fighting will stop," McGuinness said.

If Britain refuses to leave, the IRA statement said, it will have "a price to pay... a price so overwhelming as to force them to withdraw and leave us in peace... We have a message for the British government," the IRA said.

"We will demoralize you. We will make your six counties (of Northern Ireland) into a millstone which will strangle you.

"We will eventually defeat you. Our strategy is clear. It is to sap the political will of the British government and British people to remain in Ireland. The means are by limited guerrilla warfare against crown forces."

In the Creggan area of Londonderry, security forces on Sunday defused a bomb that the IRA said in a statement to Belfast media it planted but decided not to detonate when an army patrol passed because children were in the area.

There was a heavy police and army presence at all the marches as security forces abandoned their short-lived policy of staying away from events attended by IRA sympathizers.

The Sinn Fein march through west Belfast was led and tailed by armored police Land Rovers with soldiers riding shotgun, their rifles cocked. Police followed the marchers into Milltown Cemetery and encircled them, with a number of soldiers hiding behind tombstones.

The Milltown ceremony took place 25 yards from the spot where a Protestant extremist killed three people at an unpoliced IRA funeral on March 16.

The no-policing policy ended after two British soldiers who drove into an IRA funeral on March 19 were dragged from their car and killed by the IRA.

Jailed Soldiers Reported Missing

By ROBERT H. REID

Associated Press Writer
MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Four more soldiers jailed in plots against President Corazon Aquino were missing following the weekend escape of the leader of an August coup attempt, the military said today.

Chief military spokesman Col. Oscar Florendo also denied that troops had raided a vacation home of opposition Sen. Juan Ponce Enrile in connection with the nationwide search for former Lt. Col. Gregorio "Gringo" Honasan.

Honasan, 39, leader of the Aug. 28 coup attempt, and 14 guards fled a prison ship in Manila Bay before dawn Saturday aboard two rubber dinghies. He had been confined there since his arrest Dec. 9 for the attempted coup that left at least 53 people dead and hundreds wounded.

Florendo said three officers and one enlisted man jailed in connection with the August attempt and another in January 1987 were missing from the detention center at Villamor Air Base.

Florendo claimed, however, the four apparently fled because of "family problems" and their escape was not related to the Honasan incident.

An earlier report by a Manila newspaper, citing an unidentified air force officer, put the figure at nine soldiers who had escaped.

Military officials said earlier that troops Sunday raided Enrile's vacation house in Batangas province, southwest of Manila, as part of a search of a seaside vacation resort. But Florendo denied Enrile's house had been raided.

Enrile told a radio station today he had heard of the raid and charged the government was acting illegally by entering homes without search warrants.

Honasan served as chief of security at the Ministry of National Defense when Enrile was defense chief. Enrile was fired in November 1986, after an alleged coup attempt by his followers.

Manila newspapers have reported that leaflets were circulating in military camps calling for the overthrow of the government. The leaflets allegedly were from Honasan's Reform the Armed Forces Movement, the papers said.

Florendo said a nationwide search was under way for Honasan but that raids so far had failed because "either we were too late or perhaps the information was not so accurate."

Defense Secretary Fidel Ramos today told reporters the military was investigating "all angles" of the incident, "including alleged foreign intervention in the escape of Honasan." Ramos did not elaborate.

Leftist Rep. Venancio Garduce has charged that Americans may have helped Honasan escape to pressure the government as it begins talks with the United States this week on the status of U.S. military bases in the Philippines.

Presidential sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Mrs. Aquino had demanded a full-scale investigation into the Honasan escape because she did not believe it was simply a result of negligence.

The skipper of the prison ship was arrested Saturday, but the sources said Mrs. Aquino believed others in the chain of command should be punished.

Mrs. Aquino told a student group on Sunday that her government was stable enough to withstand any new coup attempt and that Honasan's escape "does not in any way discourage us in what we set out to do."

The government has survived about six major coup attempts and conspiracies since Mrs. Aquino took office on Feb. 25, 1986.

Investigators said Honasan and the others fled the prison ship aboard rubber dinghies and came ashore near the Folk Arts Center, a few hundred yards from the headquarters of the Philippine navy. They then boarded seven cars which had been waiting for them, investigators said.

ORDINARY QUARRELERS — Prince Charles and Princess Diana have "ordinary" marital quarrels, but then have to pretend in public that all is going well. Diana's father, Earl Spencer, was quoted as saying Sunday. In an interview with Woman's Own, a London magazine, the earl was also quoted as saying Diana, who has two sons, William, 5, and Harry, 3, wants a larger family — perhaps five children. (AP Laserphoto)
