Iran Refuels Jet After Hijackers Fire On Police

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iranian workmen began refueling a Kuwaiti jetliner today after hijackers holding 50 hostages fired five shots at police and threatened to take off with near-empty tanks, the Iranian news agency said.

The gunmen earlier threatened to blow up the Kuwait Airways Boeing 747 and demanded that the runway at Mashhad airport in northeastern Iran be cleared, the Islamic Republic News Agency reported. IRNA said that the taxiway had been closed "to prevent the plane from flying."

"Disciplinary and relief forces are on full alert while the situation is presently out of control and anything may happen at any moment," said IRNA, monitored in Nicosia. It said an Iranian delegation in contact with the hijackers was advising them to "keep cool."

The shooting erupted after the hijackers demanded that the plane be refueled and allowed to take off for an undisclosed destination, IRNA said. Iran had refused.

The agency did not mention any casualties in the gunfire.

Earlier, IRNA reported that "Iranian officials have announced they would supply the hijackers with food and fuel provided that the passengers and crew members be released."

But the refueling went ahead without any release being reported. The hijackers have demanded that Kuwait free 17 convicted pro-Iranian extremists.

A member of the Kuwait royal family held on the plane appealed to Iranian authorities to provide the plane with fuel to take off.

"We're very tired and our brothers (the hijackers) are very serious in their threat to blow up the plane," Fadel Khaled Al-Sabah told the control tower by radio, IRNA said.

The Iranian agency said officials at Mashhad Airport in northeast Iran

"urged the hijackers to give up their threats."

The hijackers forced the Kuwait Airways airliner to land Tuesday after seizing it on a flight from Bangkok to Kuwait.

The hijackers, armed with grenades and guns, are holding about 50 hostages, including three members of Kuwait's royal family. Fifty-seven people have been freed since the plane landed, including 32 released early today.

IRNA quoted Iran's deputy prime minister, Ali Reza Moayerri, as saying failure to negotiate an end to the hijack drama could "God forbid, lead to unpredictable events."

It quoted him as saying the Kuwaiti negotiators sent to Mashhad airport in northeastern Iran appeared to "attach no importance to the lives of their own citizens" aboard the plane.

Many acts of terrorism in Kuwait have been blamed on Shiite Moslems acting for Iran.

U.N. Official Skeptical

Soviets Say Way Cleared To Remove Troops In May

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union and Afghanistan said today they had solved all problems blocking a settlement in the Afghan war. Moscow said it intended to begin removing its troops from Afghanistan next month.

In Geneva, the U.N. mediator in the Afghanistan peace talks indicated that major differences remain. But Pakistan's president said an agreement was ready to be signed.

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev and Afghan leader Najib said in a joint statement issued after meeting in the Soviet city of Tashkent that the troop withdrawal would start May 15 if the Geneva negotiations are successful "in the shortest period."

The statement didn't mention of the issue of foreign aid to the warring parties, which is seen as the main obstacle in reaching an accord.

After the statement was released, U.N. mediator Diego Cordovez said in Geneva, "There are very difficult decisions and the only good thing — I think that is important — is that the political will is obviously there to take them." He would not elaborate.

The negotiating parties — Najib's Soviet-backed government and Pakistan, representing Afghan guerrillas — tentatively agreed in February that the Soviets would start removing their 115,000 troops on May 15 if an accord were signed by March 15.

With the passage of that deadline, the sides have tentatively agreed that the Soviet withdrawal would begin two months after the signing of an accord.

The Geneva talks have been stalled since March 2 because of the aid issue. The United States, the guerrillas' leading weapons supplier, has called for a simultaneous cutoff in military aid. Soviet officials contend they have every right to aid their ally, Afghanistan, and say the issue has no place in the peace talks.

In Islamabad, Pakistani President Mohammad Zia ul-Haq was quoted today as saying that the United States and Soviet Union had solved that problem, "so the Geneva accord could now be signed any time."

The official Pakistani News Agency quoted Zia as telling Parliament: "According to unofficial reports, the two superpowers have agreed on the symmetry under which both would be able to provide continued assistance to their respective allies in Afghanistan." It did not elaborate on the "unofficial" reports.

The Gorbachev-Najib statement, carried by the official news agency Tass, did not clarify how much time the two sides would allow for conclusion of a Geneva accord before their offer of a May 15 pullout expires.

Wesleyan Installs Garner As President

ROCKY MOUNT — Former Greenville resident Leslie Holland Garner Jr. was formally installed as N.C. Wesleyan College's third president at an inauguration program here Wednesday.

"We have seen a steady decline in employment levels in textiles and in the security of tobacco as a source of income," in eastern North Carolina, Garner said in his inaugural address. And "We have relatively high levels of unemployment and poverty. Many of our fellow citizens go outside the region to work."

"Those regions that will prosper in a global, technology-driven economy will succeed through knowledge through their ability to translate new ideas into new or improved goods and services," Garner told the more than 500 people who attended the inauguration program, held on the front lawn of the school's administration building.

Garner, 37, is the son of former Greenville Mayor Leslie H. Garner. He is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, and received a master's and doctorate from Harvard University.

Garner had been director of UNC-CH's Government Executive Institute Foundation before becoming president of the Methodist-affiliated school, with 600 full-time and 850 part-time students, on July 1, 1987.

A symposium, "Eastern North Carolina in a Global Economy," was held Wednesday prior to the 2:30 p.m. inauguration, with Wayne Calloway of Purchase, N.Y., chairman of the board and chief executive officer of PepsiCo Inc., as the keynote speaker and William C. Friday, president emeritus of the University of North Carolina, as leader of a discussion of strategies for regional development.

VOA Taking On 'Fresh' Approach

WASHINGTON (AP) — Glasnost has brought challenges for the Voice of America, the U.S. government radio station reviled for years by the Kremlin: Now that the Soviets have stopped jamming its broadcasts, VOA has to be more interesting.

"We now use more actualities and music," VOA director Richard Carlson said in an interview. And instead of recycling programs several times a day to go through despite jamming, VOA now produces fresh material for every program.

"We now have to be more competitive," Carlson said, citing broadcasts of the British Broadcasting Corp. and the more-open Soviet media under the glasnost — or openness — policies of Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

"We have tried to make our programming more interesting, now that people don't have to listen through eight frequencies" of interference.

But the VOA hasn't softened its view of Soviet affairs.

Editorials try to put Gorbachev's reforms "within a realistic context," Carlson said. "Like jamming. It is intellectually difficult to applaud people for stopping what they were not supposed to be doing in the first place."

"One of the things that we have not changed is the tone and tenor of our broadcasting. We are not being kinder to Gorbachev. We think we have been fair all along."

Carlson last December returned from a 10-day tour of the Soviet Union, the first ever by a VOA director. Charles Z. Wick, head of the U.S. Information Agency which administers VOA, also has traveled to the Soviet Union and Poland.

And the head of VOA's Russian service, Gerd Von Demming, is just back from a trip that took him to Soviet Armenia a week before demonstrations broke out there in February.

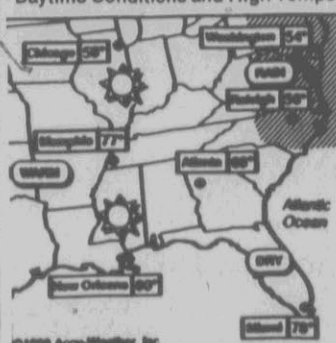

Carlson said he hopes that Kremlin ire will not torpedo VOA's longstanding request to open a bureau in Moscow.

"In keeping with all the remarkably successful public relations moves by the Soviets, we think we may win approval," Carlson said.

Later this month, VOA is planning its first call-in show, in which broadcasters will field questions relayed from Soviet listeners dialing direct to London.

RJR Nabisco Tops Fortune List

By JOHN A. BOLT
Associated Press Writer

The Southeast's industrial muscle got a bit soft last year in comparison with the rest of the nation, according to Fortune magazine's listing of the top 500 companies.

Sales figures for 1987 show a return to strength in the Rust Belt where, "you can hear the sound of champagne corks popping and beer cans spritzing open," the magazine said Wednesday.

RJR Nabisco Inc. continued to be the largest Southeastern-based firm, with 1987 sales of $15.87 billion. The company, which moved its headquarters from Winston-Salem, N.C., to Atlanta during the year, fell from 14th to 19th on the list as sales dropped from $17 billion.

The Coca-Cola Co. slipped to the third largest company, in part because of the spin-off of bottling operations into a new company and an adjustment reflecting the impending spinoff of the Columbia Pictures subsidiary.

But the new bottling company formed by Coke — Coca-Cola Enterprises Inc. — debuted on the Fortune 500 list at 126, with sales of $3.33 billion, making it the fourth largest Southeastern company.

In 1986, Coke was the 38th largest company overall, with sales of $8.67 billion; in 1987 the company was ranked 54th with sales of $7.66 billion.

Replacing Coke was Georgia-Pacific, also based in Atlanta, with sales of $8.6 billion compared to 1986 sales of $7.22 billion.

Overall, Georgia-Pacific climbed from 50th to 44th.

The 1987 list included 36 companies based in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi and Louisiana.

The departure of RJR Nabisco, plus the demise of Burlington Industries Inc., left Fieldcrest Cannon, based in Eden, N.C., the largest of three Tar Heel companies.

The textile company had 1987 sales of $1.4 billion, improving its national ranking from 284 to 247.

Burlington had been one of the nation's largest textile companies last year before it was taken private to avoid a takeover by Asher Edelman

N.C. Mountains Get Spring Snow

By The Associated Press

A post-Easter winterlike storm dumped snow on western North Carolina today with forecasters expecting as much as 6 inches by nightfall, the National Weather Service reported.

The storm, with its accompanying high winds, set a wind velocity record of 172 mph on Grandfather Mountain, observers said today.

That storm was originally expected to spark tornadoes, thunderstorms, damaging winds and hail, but forecasters said there wasn't enough moisture to set off the severe weather. But the low pressure system did bring about an encore of winter to Boone, Banner Elk and Newton in the northern mountains.

"We did not have moisture in lower levels of the atmosphere," said Jan Price, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service at the Raleigh-Durham Airport. "That is what got us off the hook as far as the severe weather was concerned. We're into the prime season for this kind of thing. We will probably see more watches."

But the low pressure system did bring sufficient moisture off the Atlantic Ocean to combine with the cold air at higher elevations to set off the snow.

"The roads are all clear," Watauga County Sheriff James "Red" Lyons said in a telephone interview this morning. "We've got a little bit of light wind right now. It's snowed heavily at times, but the main roads are clear enough to where no snow tires or chains are required."

Lyons said the snow is more of a blessing than an annoyance because the area needs and sort of precipitation to fill up dry creek beds and dusty crop fields.

"Usually we get enough snow and rain to build our water level up," Lyons said. "But I believe it's the lowest I've ever seen. The creeks look like the middle of the summer."

The wind velocity on Grandfather Mountain broke the previous record of 161 mph set on Nov. 18, 1976. Bill Hannah was working in the souvenir shop on the mountain when "the floor was vibrating and the walls were moving three to four inches."

A tornado watch for a large section of the state was canceled Wednesday night more than two hours before it was set to expire.

Meteorologist Rod Gonski said rain from the storm was heavier in the western portions of the state, with Charlotte receiving .53 inches, most of that in a 25-minute downpour.

Ortega Threatens Major Offensive If Peace Negotiations Break Down

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Daniel Ortega put pressure on Contra negotiators participating in cease-fire talks in Sapoa by threatening to launch a major military offensive against the rebels if the talks break down.

Ortega also said Contra leaders in Managua for peace talks will not be allowed freedom of movement to talk with internal opposition leaders until rebel fighters have moved into designated cease-fire zones.

The president of the leftist government spoke Wednesday as Sandinista and Contra military leaders reported making progress in technical cease-fire talks they planned to resume today in Sapoa, an outpost on the Costa Rican border.

Key issues on bringing about a lasting peace have yet to be negotiated.

The Sandinistas launched an offensive against the U.S.-supported Contras in northern Nicaragua last month. On President Reagan's orders, 3,200 U.S. troops flew to Honduras on March 17-18 after Honduran President Jose Azcona Hoyo said 2,000 Nicaraguan soldiers had invaded his country in pursuit of Contras.

The U.S. troops never saw action and returned home at the end of March.

Finishing their fourth technical meeting, the military negotiators in Sapoa agreed on seven zones in which Contra fighters are to gather by April 15 — two each in the north, central and Atlantic Coast, and one in the south.

Still to be worked out are details for the combatants' security, the key issue of what needs to occur before the Contras lay down their arms.

The two sides also agreed to postpone until April 15 a high-level meeting in Managua between Contra and Sandinista political leaders. Those talks had originally been scheduled for Wednesday.

"If the Contras don't accept the agreements, the people must be ready for combat and ... launch an offensive with all available force to be rid of (the Contras) once and for all and not prolong the war," Ortega told farmworkers at an agricultural cooperative in the eastern province of Granada on Wednesday.

"We have to fight so the (peace) agreements work, but for the agreements to work we cannot let down the defense of the country," he said in the remarks carried by state-run Voice of Nicaragua.

Both the political and technical cease-fire discussions are part of a preliminary peace agreement the two sides signed on March 23 in Sapoa.

Panama Issues Order For Devalle's Arrest

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — The government issued an arrest warrant for deposed President Eric Arturo Delvalle, saying he will be charged with crimes against the state and the nation's economic security.

In another development, the government offered to hold church-mediated talks with the political opposition. The offer came after police fired birdshot to break up an anti-government rally by 50 people on Wednesday. Two U.S. soldiers were briefly detained near the site of the protest.

Delvalle has been in hiding since Feb. 26, when he was removed from office after trying to fire Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega as head of the 15,000-strong Defense Forces. Noriega is the power behind the civilian government.

The United States, which still recognizes Delvalle as president, responded to his ouster by imposing economic sanctions on Panama in a bid to drive out Noriega, who was indicted in the United States on drug trafficking charges.

The sanctions forced Panama's banks to close and Noriega has not been able to make the government payroll. Food and cash are in short supply.

The government announced Wednesday night that it had issued arrest warrants for Delvalle and for Gabriel Lewis Galindo, a businessman and former ambassador to the United States. The government said a warrant was issued earlier for Juan B. Sosa, Delvalle's ambassador to Washington who has remained there.

U.S. Gives Dominican Republic Boats To Fight Drug Trafficking

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese III on Wednesday handed over to this island's military authorities two speed boats to be used to fight drug trafficking.

The long, sleek boats were confiscated from traffickers trying to smuggle cocaine into the United States, U.S. officials said. They can reach speeds of 65 mph.

Smugglers use this Caribbean island nation as a transit point for cocaine from South America bound for the United States.

"The Dominican Republic seems to be determined ... that narcotics trafficking should be totally eliminated," Meese told Gen. Antonio Imbert Barrera, the armed forces minister, on Wednesday.

Meese spoke on the first day of a five-nation Latin American tour. He arrived by Air Force jet and was due to leave Santo Domingo today for Bogota, Colombia. Meese also will visit Ecuador, Peru and Bolivia.

The Dominican Republic shares the island of Hispaniola with Haiti. Drug runners have turned to the island as governments on the neighboring islands of Jamaica and Puerto Rico tightened surveillance of boats and planes.

President Joaquin Balaguer, elected to a fifth term in May 1986, has made the war on drugs a top priority. In December 1986, the Dominican air force shot down a small plane that did not identify itself upon demand. Officials later said it was carrying hundreds of pounds of cocaine.

On Wednesday, Meese met with Balaguer at the National Palace.

PCC Foundation
Worthy Of Support

Fifty-thousand dollars in one day is no small change.

That's how much the new Pitt Community College Foundation collected its first day of fundraising. An effort drawing that strong a response is a success, and should continue as the organization grows.

The Foundation is an important element in securing a strong future for PCC and the students it serves. In an era of shrinking funding for education, vigorous private sector participation becomes vital to quality instruction. Viewed from this perspective, an organization such as the PCC Foundation acquires notable importance.

First and foremost, the Foundation can provide scholarship money to attract top students to PCC — or funds for those otherwise unable to obtain an education. As federal and state participation in financial aid is cut back, this type of resource assumes supreme importance.

Second, it can provide a supplement for facility and equipment purchase. This fact is important to a community college, where quality instruction depends on keeping abreast of technology changes — no small task in the high-tech world of today.

Finally, it brings the private sector into the classroom at PCC. As the community contributes to the fund, its awareness of student needs, programs and policies will likely increase. This heightened visibility and involvement will benefit the college.

This, the Foundation's first annual drive for donations, should set a precedent of success for subsequent years. Its first-day effectiveness is a pattern that should be repeated again and again. If it is, the community will be the benefactor of its own generosity by creating a better-rounded, stronger community college.

The Foundation is worthy of support. While PCC receives appropriations from tax funds, there are many needs — especially student aid ones — which cannot be met by state or county funds. There should be a resource which can address these special and often basic needs, and the Foundation can provide this enrichment for a rapidly-growing community college.

Pitt County is education rich with its good public school system, a university and PCC. The community college fills an important role in this education circle. It very much deserves the financial support of the area in fulfilling its role.

Golf Course Needs
Careful Scrutiny

The possibility of a municipal golf course on the former landfill property off East Third Street, while appealing, should be carefully scrutinized by city officials.

The landfill area and the old sewage treatment plant, located behind Greenwood Cemetery, are city-owned. The landfill was abandoned when the county began providing the service at its site off Allen Road west of Greenville. What was left is a large area which had been filled with refuse and then covered over with dirt.

At the time the site closed there was discussion on what could be done with the property. Since it will require years to settle, no substantial buildings could be constructed there. It does, however, have potential for recreational use. It could be used as park and playground areas, and a municipal golf course has been proposed. While the idea deserves study, it must be done with the admonition that before such a facility is constructed, the need should be demonstrated for new golf facilities and any plan should show a golf course would be self-supporting. Those with experience in building and operating golf courses will tell you that is difficult.

The possibility of a golf course on the property was discussed at a joint meeting of city and East Carolina University officials. The university could provide potentially a large number of golf course users for a facility located in such close proximity to the campus.

The property is available for a specialized use. Certainly all ideas should be pursued. A golf course, however, would probably require revenues which are not now in sight. Before any commitment is made by the city government, it should be ascertained that no city funding would be required to build or operate the golf course.

To the editor:

In the past few months, the State of North Carolina has been beset by a statewide crisis which is having somewhat of a "domino" syndrome on this great legal system of the United States of America, namely the United States Constitution. However, the answers in which the legal community and other forms of government are trying to utilize to circumvent or curtail this "run on justice" are not working.

Attempts to rescind jail overcrowding, decrease an overpopulous prison population are futile, for the solutions do not attempt to extricate the matters at hand, especially the law, from which comes the entire problem. Judges are trying to curtail the sentencing of defendants to prisons or jails by granting more probation. This causes the probation officers and offices to become overburdened with cases to assign members of its staff. And now the Office of Administrative Courts has requested more funding for its budget in reference to the pay disbursement of court-appointed counsel for defendants who are unable to pay for their defenses.

Meanwhile, the jails are being utilized to house defendants who are unable to make bond. However, unlike metropolitan areas, such as Greensboro, where defendants are taken to court before the proper judicial office to seek bond reductions on a weekly basis. Having conducted an in-house personal inspection of at least five North Carolina counties, Pitt County is the worst I've ever seen. True, the county needs new jail facilities as its present ones would not conform in a lawsuit of any type which would have the County Commissioners paying for more than feasibility studies, what have you.

Justice is not being served in Pitt County in accordance with a lawyer's Canon of Ethics. Believe it or not, the parameters that need to be adhered to by lawyers are the "prima facie evidence," as to jail and prison overcrowding.

In your March 10, 1988, issue, you responded to our City Council's latest meeting. I think our local paper should tell only what happened, not express personal dissatisfaction for our mayor or any council member. We the people elected our council to represent us. Each individual will not always agree. That is why we have more than one council person making our decisions. Let's show them support for their actions. Let the people speak through our paper.

Solution To Noriega Requires Patience

"Brutal wrongdoing," Theodore Roosevelt wrote in 1904, "may finally require intervention by some civilizing nation; and in the Western Hemisphere the United States cannot ignore this duty." The current object of this injunction is Panama's Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega. But nobody is quite sure how to do it or whether the price is worth paying.

Noriega's "brutal wrongdoing" does not meet the standard that has prompted most modern American interventions, in either hemisphere. He hasn't invaded a neighboring country — indeed, he is one of the Central American peacemakers in the so-called Contadora process. He isn't a communist or a Soviet stooge, although he allegedly has had some unseemly transactions with Cuba's Fidel Castro. And he hasn't overthrown a democratic, civilian government — at least not lately. In fact, for most of his rule he has been our kind of guy in providing peace and tranquility in his tiny but strategically important nation. And we rewarded him for it.

The Panamanian strongman does resemble one other contemporary object of American anger and action: Libya's Col. Moammar Gadhafi. Both stand accused less of disturbing the peace than of committing crimes against individual Americans: Gadhafi of terrorism and Noriega of "terrorizing" American society as a big-league drug dealer. And in recent years, the impact of foreign events on the lives of individual Americans has become increasingly important in shaping U.S. foreign policy.

As the crisis builds, there is little questioning in the United States, from any point of the political spectrum, about the value of seeing Noriega deposed and deported. His actions in making America's drug problem worse seem beyond dispute. There would also be a sense of accomplishment in seeing him go — although he is unlikely to be brought to justice — even if a likely successor from the Panamanian military carries on where Noriega leaves off. So most of the criticism of the Reagan administration's strategies has been limited to their effect — or lack of effect.

In February the administration encouraged President Eric A. Delvalle to dismiss Noriega and seemed nonplussed when Noriega returned the favor and dismissed Delvalle. It imposed economic sanctions that, like most other occasions when this tactic has been tried, have not done the job. In its efforts to cleanse Panama of this one man, the United States has created an economic mess that will take a long time and large resources to clean up. In contemplating "dirty tricks," the secretary of state reportedly favored kidnapping Noriega and bringing him to trial in the United States. Yet the secretary earned opprobrium for suggesting the idea without the benefit of its having happened.

What appears to be the administration's bumbling thus has merit. Noriega's departure must clearly have the strong support of Panamanians, not just be something made in Washington. Otherwise, the cure could contribute to a worse disease.

Patience is rarely an American quality, especially when an issue is joined as clearly as that involving the drug-dealing general.

What Do You Think He Wants?

Every time Jesse Jackson wins in the presidential primaries, people ask, "What does Jesse want?"

It happened again a few weeks ago when a group of distinguished Democratic kingmakers met with Mr. Jackson.

The leader of the group said, "Congratulations on winning all the delegates, Jesse. Now tell us what you (ital) really (unital) want."

"I want to be President of the United States," Jackson replied.

Everyone broke into laughter. "That's very funny, Jesse," a kingmaker said.

"I'm not joking. If I get the delegates, I get the nomination."

"But why would you want to be President?"

"I am somebody."

"Of course, you're somebody, but that doesn't mean you can be President."

"Why not?"

"Because you have a mustache. No one can win an election with a mustache. Tom Dewey proved that."

"So why have I been chasing around the country for the last six months debating with those oxymorons?"

"Jesse, we know you want something. What would you say if we gave you the Panama Canal?"

"I don't want the Canal. I want the White House. I want to do away with poverty and big business and those who would cut farm subsidies," Jackson said.

"How would you like Jimmy Swaggart's television show? He has a heckuva audience and you get to ask for money every 10 minutes."

"Swaggart is nothing compared to Air Force One. You have to excuse me. I'm going to round up more delegates," Jackson said.

A man in a Stetson said, "Jesse, we're reasonable people. Maybe you don't want anything, but we're prepared to give you something anyway. Would you be interested in Radio City Music Hall's Rockettes — all 36 of them?"

"No way. I want to sit down in the Oval Office and chat with PLO leader Arafat, Syrian President Assad and Libya's Kadafi."

"It's out of the question, Jesse. Surely there is something you've always dreamed of besides being President of the United States."

"When I was young I wanted an Exercycle," Jackson said.

"Then it's done. We'll get you an Exercycle if you get out of the race."

"I don't want that anymore. I want one of those long black limousines with Secret Service men hanging from all the doors."

"Do you really think you can beat George Bush in an election?"

"Why not? I beat Bruce Babbitt."

"Jesse, I have the authority to offer you something you can't refuse. Instead of President, how would you like to be basketball commissioner?"

"Professional or collegiate?"

"Both."

"I don't want to be a basketball commissioner. They don't play 'Hail to the Chief' when you walk across the court at Madison Square Garden."

An old Democratic hand from Chicago said, "What do you want, Jesse — WHAT DO YOU WANT?"

Jesse replied, "You really want to know? OK, I'll tell you. I want to be Ed Meese's best friend."

Strength For Today

In one of his famous preludes, Chopin employs a device of sounding a note continuously throughout the piece. The prelude is supposed to represent a mother's dream as she falls asleep with her baby in her arms. She dreams that the boy grows up to destroy her hopes and comes at last to a tragic end. The underlying motive which one hears in the boy's life will eventually lead to ruin.

There is a continuously sounding note in the hearts of every one of us, a basic tone which underlies all our actions and all our thinking. It may be an evil thing or a good thing, but contrary to Chopin's music, it can be changed. Christianity knows nothing about fate. It teaches that human nature can always be changed, that every person can be saved.

The dominant note which underlies a life can be transformed from tragedy and evil to hope and righteousness.

Agencies Opposing Marina

RALEIGH (AP) — Three federal agencies have opposed a controversial marina development on Bogue Sound, saying pollution from the project would have a negative effect on shellfish in the area.

The Environmental Protection Agency, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the National Marine Fisheries Service say the proposed Broad Reach development near the community of Ocean would affect both the quality and quantity of shellfish.

"Activity in and around the marina, including waste disposal systems, would have an adverse effect on the quality and quantity of shellfish," including the disturbance of shellfish beds and "introduction of pollutants (fecal bacteria, gasoline and oil) into the waters in and near the marina," EPA regional administrator Lee De Hihns said in a letter to the Army Corps of Engineers in Wilmington.

The corps would have to issue a permit for the 278-acre project, which also needs state permits.

"We and the state are hopefully getting to the point where a decision can be made on that application," said Cliff Winefordner, chief of the public permits processing section with the Corps of Engineers in Wilmington. "Two problems still exist, the comments from EPA with regard to water quality and some question as to whether the area planning has been satisfied."

"The Corps of Engineers has viewed with alarm any permit at the present time," Don Folmer, director of public relations for the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, told the News and Observer of Raleigh. "It's very much on hold until the situation gets a better look."

"Our marine people say there are shellfish in that part of the sound and they can't issue a permit if it will damage fishing resources. It's still very dicey whether a permit will ever be issued."

The project drew attention recently with suggestions that N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development Secretary Thomas Rhodes had pressured the Division of Coastal Management to issue a permit. Rhodes denied the charge, saying he wanted only to speed action on the application.

The project is being developed by Stephen Stroud of Raleigh, who has given Gov. Jim Martin $4,750 in campaign contributions since 1984.

Grant

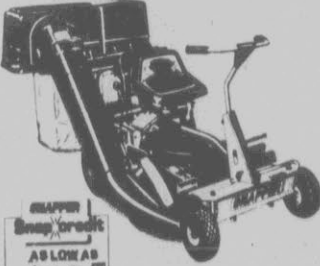

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Department of Public Instruction has accepted a federal grant to help identify homeless children in North Carolina and ensure they have access to public education.

Odell Watson, director of the department's Division of Student Services, said he had applied for the grant last month at the invitation of the federal government.

Court Orders New Trial In 'Bizarre' Death

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The state Supreme Court has ordered a new trial for a man convicted of killing and mutilating the body of his son-in-law, saying the case was a close call and the trial judge erred by not admitting evidence that might have led to an acquittal.

"The facts and circumstances surrounding the mysterious disappearance and death of Steven Wade Boyer are amongst the most bizarre and unusual in the annals of crime in this state," Associate Justice Louis B. Meyer wrote for the majority in the 4-3 decision.

Boyer's nude, headless and handless body was found alongside a rural Transylvania County highway Dec. 26, 1984. He had died of a shotgun blast; his body was dismembered in what investigators called an apparent effort to conceal his identity.

A Haywood County Superior Court jury convicted Jimmy Devoe McElrath of first-degree murder in August 1986 based on a prosecution case built on circumstantial evidence. He was sentenced to life in prison.

Boyer was married to the daughter of McElrath, who grew up in Haywood County but had divided his time between the North Carolina mountains and Florida since his retirement.

McElrath and his wife had traveled to Smyrna, Ga., to spend the Christmas holidays with their daughter, Ellen, who was separated from Boyer. They arrived Dec. 21, 1984.

McElrath and Boyer, who also lived in Smyrna, agreed to meet at a restaurant on Dec. 23 for a talk, according to Meyer's opinion. That day, Boyer disappeared. His roommate, Jim Baumgarten, testified that Boyer had telephoned a neighbor and told her to inform Baumgarten that Boyer planned to ride with his father-in-law to Waynesville, N.C.

Boyer's body was discovered three days later nearly 10 miles from McElrath's summer home.

McElrath testified that he never saw Boyer after their meeting at the restaurant. The defendant said that another car drove up as he and Boyer were talking in the restaurant parking lot, and that Boyer went over and argued with someone in the car.

Boyer returned, told McElrath he would see him later and departed in the other car, McElrath testified. He said he then went on to his home in Haywood County.

An attendant at a convenience store in Canton testified that McElrath had stopped there for gasoline on Dec. 23 and that no one was with him.

The Supreme Court rejected the defendant's contention there was insufficient evidence to send the case to the jury.

But it ruled that the trial judge erred by refusing to admit as evidence a crude map of the area around McElrath's home. The map, which included "numerous written notations" seeming to indicate a scheme to burglarize the house, was found among Boyer's personal effects.

In other cases, the court:

- Upheld James Earl Wilson's conviction of first-degree rape. Wilson, 21 at the time, was sentenced to life in prison in April 1987 for raping his 8-year-old sister in Martin County.
- Declared constitutional a state law meant to stop thefts from military bases by regulating businesses dealing in military goods.
- The 1985 law requires a business that handles military goods to be licensed, pay a $1,000 bond and maintain a log of sales and purchases.

Ex-Legislator Dies In Wreck

ALBEMARLE, N.C. (AP) — Clyde Hampton Whitley, a former member of the N.C. House of Representatives, was killed and three people were injured in a car accident in Stanly County, authorities said.

Whitley, 69, of Albemarle, died in the emergency room at Stanly Memorial Hospital after the Tuesday morning accident, according to the state Highway Patrol.

The patrol said Whitley was traveling west on N.C. 73 when a car driven by Ezekiel J. Lamb, 58, pulled into the path of his car. Whitley's car struck the Lamb car.

The two drivers and four passengers in the Lamb vehicle were brought to Stanly Memorial Hospital. Lamb, Hallie G. Lamb, 38, and David Lamb, 14, were treated and released. Two others escaped injury.

Whitley served two terms as a Stanly County commissioner and five years in the N.C. House of Representatives from Stanly County, ending in 1971. He was a native of the county and worked as a plumbing and heating contractor for a number of years before taking up farming.

Funeral plans were incomplete.

Opposes 2nd Robeson Judgeship

Britt Says Indian Activists Ran 'Bluff' On Politicians

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — Robeson County District Attorney Joe Freeman Britt says Indian activists bluffed politicians into backing a second judgeship for the county, a judgeship he says is a waste of taxpayers' money.

"Apparently a lot of people have been impressed by the claims of support by (Julian) Pierce supporters," Britt said Wednesday. "What's happened is a very small group of people have run a very good bluff for some politicians."

Britt said even though he believes there should be no second superior court judgeship in Robeson County, he will not appear before the General Assembly this summer when it considers creating that position.

"This is their business at this point. They've made their commitments and there's no point in my getting involved now. The legislature can do anything it wants," he said.

Britt, 52, was in the Democratic race for a new judgeship created by the General Assembly last year. The seat was created in Robeson County to give minority candidates a better chance to become judge.

But under state law Britt automatically became the party's nominee when his opponent Julian Pierce, a Lumbee Indian, was killed early March 26 in an apparent domestic dispute.

State law says if a candidate dies 30 days after the election filing period closes, the opposing candidate automatically wins. But Pierce's supporters lobbied state leaders to reopen filing for the judge's seat so another minority candidate could run against Britt.

Britt strongly opposed that idea, saying he would sue the state if legislators tried to reopen filing for the seat.

On Monday, Pierce supporters withdrew their request for a special session after Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan and local legislators met with them and agreed to back a second judgeship that would allow the appointment of a minority judge.

"I'm very disappointed that the people who entered into this agreement didn't consult with me or my advisers on it," Britt told The Fayetteville Observer. "Personally, I felt it was an unnecessary move."

Britt said the plan "is unfair to taxpayers" and would be a redundancy in this area.

"I don't really see how it (a second judge) can be justified," he said. "It's very unusual to have two judges from an area the size of Robeson County."

But Franklin Freeman, director of the Administrative Office of the Courts, said, "There's no question we can fully utilize this new judgeship. This will provide the extra judge power we believe is needed to handle the extra case filings across the state."

Freeman said the judgeship would cost the state $110,000 a year.

He said the courts office asked the General Assembly for four new judges last year, but only got three. So he said the addition of this judgeship in Robeson County would fit well with the courts office's expansion plans.

If it is added, the new judgeship will bring the total number of superior court judges in the state to 76, he said.

Arsenic Levels High In Some N.C. Oysters

RALEIGH (AP) — Oysters collected close to Battery Island in the Cape Fear River contained the highest arsenic levels among shellfish examined in a national study, a marine researcher says.

"It makes one wonder what is going on," said Peter Hanson, a research oceanographer with the National Marine Fisheries Service office in Beaufort. "Along the southeast Atlantic, the levels of arsenic were the highest in the nation."

Arsenic is a toxin that can be fatal at high concentrations in humans, but federal officials said they did not know whether the levels reported in the study were significant.

The study of contaminants in bivalves, shellfish that include oysters and mussels, was conducted by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration in winter 1986. Samples came from about 150 sites along the Pacific and Atlantic coasts and two in Hawaii. Results from a 1987 follow-up study should be available this summer, Hanson said.

Battery Island oysters had 43 millionths of an ounce of arsenic per ounce of dried oyster tissue. In comparison, the arsenic level in oysters from Pamlico Sound, the only other North Carolina site tested, was seven-millionths of an ounce per dried ounce of tissue.

"The tentative conclusion that was reached is that it may be ... natural high levels of arsenic in the Southeastern United States," he said, because levels were high from Cape Fear to Florida. If high arsenic levels were caused by pollution, he said, they would more likely be found in small, specific areas instead of in the large region.

Some researchers speculate that arsenic in geologic formations along the southeast coast may be leaching into the water, Hanson said.

He noted that shellfish such as oysters and shrimp naturally had higher arsenic levels than finfish, for reasons not yet determined.

G. Malcolm Meaburn, the principal staff officer for the federal Model Seafood Surveillance Program in Charleston, S.C., a department of the National Marine Fisheries Service, warned about jumping to conclusions regarding the risk of eating Battery Island oysters.

He said arsenic in shellfish usually was found in an organic form that was less toxic than the inorganic forms manufactured industrially.

However, he said, "We really don't know what is a hazardous level in shellfish. There are no guidelines available from the FDA (U.S. Food and Drug Administration)."

The British North America Act came into effect in 1867. It created the Dominion of Canada out of Upper and Lower Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. Upper Canada became Ontario and Lower Canada, Quebec. A vast central area, purchased from the Hudson's Bay Co. in 1869, became the provinces of Manitoba, which joined the confederation in 1870, and Saskatchewan and Alberta, which joined in 1905. The additions of British Columbia in 1871, Prince Edward Island in 1873 and Newfoundland in 1949 completed the 10 provinces which make up Canada.

School Panel Concerned Over Textbooks' Handling Of Religion's Role In History

RALEIGH (AP) — State education officials will review a wide range of North Carolina's social studies courses to determine whether the role of religion gets adequate coverage.

Some State Board of Education members believe that textbook writers, fearful of breaching constitutional demands for separation of church and state, have failed to explain the important role religion has played in history, board Chairman Howard Haworth said Wednesday.

"The board just felt the pendulum has swung too far," he said.

The N.C. Department of Public Instruction's division of social studies, which is conducting the study, may also determine whether a supplementary text to teach religion is needed.

Current social studies texts recently were approved for five years.

"Rather than wait five years to adopt new ones, it makes sense that the Department of Public Instruction look at the curriculum and develop a supplemental text," Haworth said.

"If we can agree on the supplement, we would ask the local education agencies and the teachers to use it. However, I am very strong in my belief that laws governing separation of church and state are most appropriate. This issue in no way goes against that."

He said the text would not teach religious dogma, but would explain its role in history.

Members of the state textbook commission said last fall that they were concerned that the role of religion received bland and obscure treatment in the social studies books they reviewed. The same concern has surfaced in numerous national studies by groups of varying political leanings.

"It's apparent to me that there was real concern that the historical significance of religion had not been adequately addressed in the curriculum," said Barbara Tapscott, chairman of the board's program committee.

Warren Nord, director of the Program in the Humanities and Human Values at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, reviewed nine high school history books and six economics textbooks used in North Carolina and found little about religion in any of them.

The history books devote more space to cowboys and cattle drives than to all religion after 1800, he said. "Triumph of the American Nation," the top choice of U.S. history books by the textbook commission and local school districts this year, has nothing substantial about religion's role in the nation's history, Nord said.

The economics books ignore the Protestant ethic related to the development of capitalism or religious criticism of capitalism, Nord said. Moral and religious considerations about solving economic problems never are raised, he said.

"They all begin with the assumption that people are basically self-interested and that society is essentially competitive," Nord said. "They are at odds with much religious teaching about human nature and society."

IN THE STATE

Jobs Program

RALEIGH (AP) — State Commerce Secretary Claude Pope Wednesday recommended to legislators three new training and assistance programs for unemployed workers.

In remarks before the General Assembly's Worker Training Trust Fund Commission, Pope proposed additional funding for the state community college system's Focused Industrial Training Program and new training programs for unemployed high school dropouts and other educationally disadvantaged workers.

He also suggested a skills training voucher system for unemployed N.C. workers. Under that program, unemployment insurance claimants would be hired by participating employers as trainees. Participants would receive state vouchers covering the cost of community college or comparable training as well as time lost to the employer during training classes.

Minister

RALEIGH (AP) — The Rev. W. Randall Lolley, the former seminary president who resigned rather than implement the ideological changes ordered for his school, was hired Wednesday as the senior minister of Raleigh's First Baptist Church.

About 500 congregants in attendance voted unanimously for Lolley, whose tenure as the third president of Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary in Wake Forest came to an end March 31. A 10-member search committee of the church had unanimously recommended Lolley two weeks ago.

Lolley succeeds the Rev. John M. Lewis, who retired in 1987 after 27 years at First Baptist. Lolley will begin as pastor July 1, though he will fill the pulpit on Mother's Day, May 8.

Panel Says Work Credits Abusive

RALEIGH (AP) — Many high school students have been earning credit toward graduation by working in the principal's office, helping a teacher or driving a bus, but all that may soon come to an end.

The Program Committee of the State Board of Education wants to eliminate those sources of credit and is recommending that school systems be prohibited from counting such work hours as part of a student's instructional day.

"Students have been getting credit for answering the telephone, and that's the kind of abuse we want to stop," board member Patricia Neal of Durham said Wednesday.

"My greatest concern is that we start serving students instead of just using students," member Mary Morgan of Jacksonville told the Greensboro News & Record.

Committee chairman Barbara Tapscott of Burlington said a draft policy statement would be submitted to the full State Board of Education today.

"This will make some waves," said Tapscott, who is an assistant superintendent for Burlington schools.

Office work and bus driving are sometimes considered job training for a vocational education course, said Joe Webb, assistant state superintendent. Some school systems count them as community service and give students credit for that.

Details of the proposed policy were sketchy Wednesday. But driving, cafeteria work and assisting teachers would be prohibited as part of any cooperative vocational education program, Webb said.

Webb said he did not know how many school systems would be affected if the board adopts the policy.

Webb, who will draw up the policy, said he is uncertain whether the policy would disqualify the work for course credit or whether it would permit credit under certain circumstances.

He said, however, that it would not eliminate peer counseling programs where students get credit for helping other students.

The issue came up in a discussion about the definition of a course credit. State law defines course credit as least 150 hours of instruction.

Bennett: Pay Church Schools To Take On 'Worst' Students

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. Education Secretary William J. Bennett today urged Catholic schools to enroll the toughest public-school students and ask for partial compensation from governments.

But his proposal raised questions about the separation of church and state. "Seek out the poor, the disadvantaged, the disruptive, the dropout, and take them in, educate them, and then ask society for fair recompense for your efforts," Bennett said in remarks prepared for delivery at the National Catholic Education Association's 85th annual convention being held here this week.

"The challenge is simple," said Bennett, a parochial school product himself. "Show educators around this country what works."

He said Catholic schools should ask state or local governments for half what it would cost to teach the students in public school.

The governments "would, I believe, be receptive to constitutionally sound efforts to pay for the education of such students."

But if government can't or won't, Bennett said, "business and others in the private sector would surely want to support such a worthwhile endeavor."

Bennett dubbed his proposal "Project Voluntas," Latin for good will.

The project would be "tangible proof that the disadvantaged can be helped, and that the Catholic schools performing this service deserve community support," he said.

But Bennett's idea of providing Catholic schools public funds for teaching "the so-called worst 5 or 10 percent" of students drew an immediate complaint from one public school official.

"It's a welcome challenge to Catholic schools that they educate the kinds of people he is suggesting. I have no quarrel with that. But when you get into the financing, it won't cut the constitutional cloth," said Thomas Shannon, executive director of the National School Boards Association.

"If the Catholic schools are going to do what they are supposed to do, that is, teach Catholic beliefs in an integrated way throughout the curriculum, it would be unconstitutional on its face" to support such schools with public funds, Shannon said.

Bennett's proposal is the latest of several he has advanced, largely unsuccessfully, aimed at expanding educational options including the private school sector. Key among those have been tuition tax credits and tuition vouchers that would offer tax breaks or direct assistance to parents of private school children.

He urged Catholic school officials to keep pressing "for the principle that a free people are entitled to choice in education. I believe that and Ronald Reagan believes that."

But with prospects bleak for tax credits or vouchers, Bennett offered Catholic schools yet another new tack.

He did not spell out why under "Project Voluntas" parochial schools would ask for only half what a public school would spend teaching a difficult student.

But Bennett said Catholic schools "have often done more with less."

Median tuition at Catholic elementary schools is about $700, and $1,500 for high schools, compared with an average of about $4,500 a year to educate a child in public school.

Twenty-two percent of parochial schools' current 2.5 million enrollment consists of minority members, up from 10 percent in 1970, he said. And 64 percent of the blacks enrolled are non-Catholic, Bennett said.

In Chicago, 44 percent of pupils in Catholic schools are minority youngsters. In New York, 55 percent are minorities, and in Newark, N.J., it's 74 percent.

Citing studies by University of Chicago sociologist James Coleman, Bennett said the dropout rate among parochial high school sophomores is just 3 percent, compared with 14 percent in public school.

"Some try to suggest that these students are the cream of the crop. Again, not true. Twenty percent of Catholic high schools admit students expelled or dropped from public high schools for disciplinary reasons. Eighteen percent of Catholic high schools accept public school students dropped for academic reasons," he said.

Simon Puts Campaign On Hold

By LAURA KING

Associated Press Writer

The Democratic presidential quartet effectively becomes a trio today as Sen. Paul Simon puts his campaign on hold. Michael Dukakis and Albert Gore, meanwhile, zeroed in on Mideast issues, seen as a likely sore spot for Jesse Jackson in the upcoming New York primary.

Simon, who has lost everywhere except in his home state of Illinois, scheduled a Capitol Hill news conference to talk about his campaign future. Aides said he was suspending the campaign, but stopping short of dropping out.

The three remaining active Democrats were all campaigning today in New York, which holds its primary April 19. At stake are 255 delegates, in what will be the biggest state contest to date.

New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, in an interview published today, said he is unlikely to make an endorsement before the primary. And he warned the Democrats — singling out Gore — that negative campaigning is "terribly dangerous."

On the Republican side, there was plenty of parley: Vice President

George Bush, the nominee in all but name, met Wednesday with former rival Sen. Bob Dole, who pledged to work to get Bush elected. And Dole talked with Pat Robertson, who remains in the Republican race although he concedes he has little chance of being nominated.

Simon's decision to suspend campaigning "reflects the reality of having lost a great many primaries and caucuses," said spokesman Terry Michael, adding that by remaining in the race he would give his supporters a voice at the convention.

Simon's mother, Ruth, said her son would remain an official candidate, if not an active one. "He's going to hang in there till the end," she said.

Simon made his last stand in Wisconsin, where he finished a weak fourth in Tuesday's primary. The Illinois senator ran second in the leadoff Iowa caucuses on Feb. 8, in what was to be his best showing of the campaign outside of his home state.

After finishing third in New Hampshire a week later, he did not have enough money to campaign actively for the round of contests on Super Tuesday, March 8, and was consequently clobbered.

Many expected him to drop out after that, but Simon, under pressure from Illinois supporters, stayed in for his home-state primary, then said his victory there was enough reason to remain in the race.

For the other Democrats, the battle of New York began in earnest on Wednesday. Dukakis was at work courting voters in New York's large Jewish community, stressing the need for a Mideast peace plan that would allow Israel to "live in peace and harmony."

Gore reiterated his strong support for Israel as he campaigned Wednesday in New York City. He said as president, he would create a Cabinet-level position to focus full-time on Mideast negotiations. Gore also blasted Dukakis and Jackson for a lack of experience in international affairs.

Cuomo decried such infighting, saying his admonition was directed mainly at Gore.

"It does not work, and it's terribly dangerous and counterproductive in a primary where one of you will be the nominee," he said in an interview with The Washington Post.

Cuomo, seen by some Democrats as a potential draftee in the event of a deadlocked convention, said he preferred to wait until after the primary season to make an endorsement.

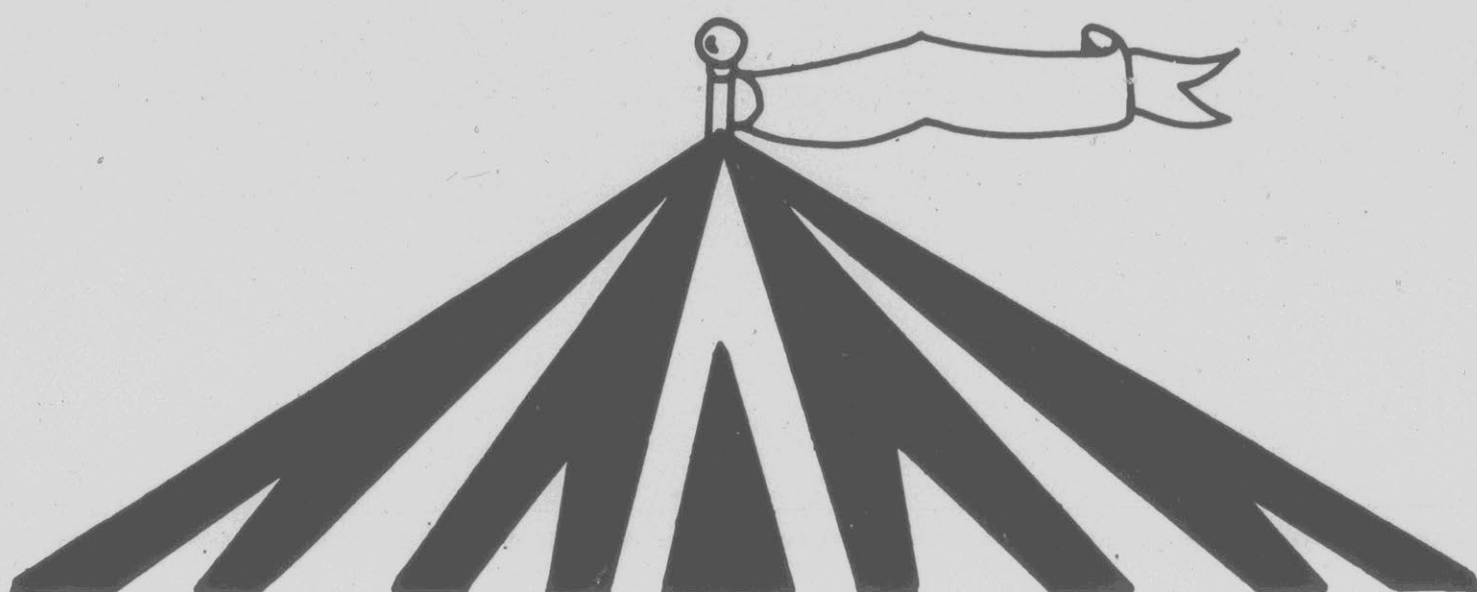

"That's the time for leadership in this process," the governor said.

Jackson was campaigning in New York today, after spending a day in Arizona, which holds Democratic caucuses on April 16, and Indiana, where primary day is May 3. In Indianapolis, Jackson was asked how he expected to do among New York's Jewish voters.

"You'll never get all of any one group," he said. "All you can do is reach out. I've reached out and I'm glad to see people are responding."

Many Jews were offended by Jackson's 1984 reference to New York as "Hymietown" — for which he apologized — and his association with Muslim leader Louis Farrakhan, who called Judaism a "gutter religion." Jackson no longer has ties to Farrakhan, his campaign says.

Jackson has made numerous efforts to mend fences with the Jewish community.

Black Explorer Gets Recognition 79 Years Later

By CAROLYN SKORNECK
Associated Press Writer

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — They were together at the discovery of the North Pole in 1909. But in death, Matthew Alexander Henson was in a shared grave in New York while Adm. Robert E. Peary was honored at Arlington National Cemetery.

Henson was black, and for that reason, said supporter Dr. S. Allen Counter, "he was denied proper recognition because of the racial attitudes of his time."

On Wednesday, 79 years to the day after Henson planted the American flag on the North Pole, the two explorers were reunited as Henson's remains and those of his wife were reinterred with full military honors at Arlington.

"Now, finally, Matthew Henson and Robert Peary can talk about old days out there," a part-Eskimo grandson, Qitdlag Henson of Qaanaaq, Greenland, said through a translator — his cousin Navarana Harper — at a news conference following the ceremony.

"I have waited for this day for over 30 years," Henson's great niece, Olive Henson Fulton of Roxbury, Mass., told the gathering of about 100 relatives and admirers at the windswept hilltop burial site.

Recalling that she was expelled from school because she had written a paper about Henson when her assignment had been to write about a hero, Ms. Fulton said: "Finally, my uncle is given his place in history."

Counter said the reinterment of Henson and his wife, Lucy Ross Henson, was "long overdue recognition for our hero ... (that would) right a tragic wrong."

"Welcome home, Matthew Henson," he said. "Welcome home to a new day in America. ... May your presence here inspire generations of explorers."

Last October, President Reagan approved Counter's petition to allow Henson's remains to be reinterred at Arlington. He had been buried in 1955 in Woodlawn Cemetery in New York.

Among those honoring Henson at the ceremony were Gen. Julius Beckton of the White House military office, who conveyed greetings from Reagan; John H. Johnson, the chairman and chief executive officer of Johnson Publishing Co., which publishes Ebony and Jet magazines; Col. Guion S. Bluford, the first black astronaut; and Dorothy Height, the president of the National Council of Negro Women.

Counter, an associate professor of neurophysiology at Harvard University who previously had brought together Henson's and Peary's part-Eskimo offspring, said Peary had insisted before his own death in 1920 that Henson's achievements be recognized.

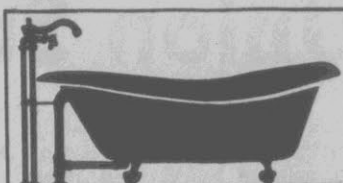

Descendants of Matthew and Lucy Henson were joined at the ceremony by Henson's part-Eskimo descendants.

"This is a very special day for them," Ms. Harper said at the news conference, translating for another of Henson's grandsons, Ajako Henson of Morriusaq, Greenland. "They don't even know how to express that."

Henson's eldest part-Eskimo grandson, Avataq Henson, also of Morriusaq, clutched to his chest the flag that had draped his grandfather's coffin.

"When he visited Matthew Henson's grave the first time in Woodlawn Cemetery in New York, he expected it to be a hero's gravesite," Ms. Harper said as she translated for Avataq. "He was disappointed to see him among ordinary people."

Quadriplegic Gets $15 Million

BOSTON (AP) — A man hospitalized since being left quadriplegic by a gun-fired nail that severed his spine two years ago has settled a lawsuit for $15.35 million and says he'll use some of the money to help him return home.

Eugene Doran, an insurance agent and Vietnam veteran, was getting a haircut at a barbershop in suburban Andover on April 15, 1986, when he was hit by a 3-inch nail fired from a high-velocity gun being used to install a storage chest next door.

The settlement, reached Wednesday in the second day of a U.S. District Court trial and described as one of the largest of its kind in the nation, is to be paid by Taylor Rental Corp., its Andover franchise and makers of the nail gun, said Doran's lawyers.

"Here's a guy who came through Vietnam and the Tet offensive unscathed only to be shot down while having his hair cut," said one of the lawyers, James Meehan.

The 40-year-old Doran, who has been hospitalized since the accident, said he will use part of the money to fit his home with lifts and ramps.

"I'm just very relieved that one item — a very important item — is off our shoulders," said Doran, accompanied by his wife, Kathy, at a news conference at the Veterans Administration Hospital here. The couple have three children.

"I really have never had much anger ... maybe because it was an accident," he said. "I couldn't even tell you the man's name who did it. I never asked. I have frustration at times ... and this has changed my family's life. I'm just glad it's over."

Leo Boyle, another lawyer representing Doran, said the suit cited Taylor and a Taylor franchise in Andover for renting the gun after company headquarters ordered the units destroyed due to insurance liability problems. A memo was sent to all Taylor company-owned rental centers a month before Doran was paralyzed, but the approximately 250 franchised outlets were not notified, the attorneys said.

The worker, an uninsured part-time carpenter, thought he was working on a concrete-backed wall when he shot the nail at chest level. The nail traveled through wood and Sheetrock before striking Doran in the side of the neck.

The high-velocity nail-gun used a .22-caliber cartridge to drive the nails at 700 to 800 feet a second, said Boyle. The guns are no longer produced in the United States, although low-velocity nail-guns are still in use, said Boyle.

The settlement is one of the top five lump-sum compensatory court settlements in U.S. history.

Union Sues Over Toxic Warning

WASHINGTON (AP) — Contempt citations are being sought against White House budget chief James Miller and Assistant Labor Secretary John Pendergrass on a claim they are illegally blocking court-ordered warnings to 18 million American workers about toxic chemicals.

The United Steelworkers union filed suit against the two Reagan administration officials Wednesday in the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia, which ordered the warnings last year.

Under "right-to-know" regulations ordered last May by the court and issued in August by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration headed by Pendergrass, the Labor Department was scheduled to begin levying fines of up to $10,000 when the warnings are absent.

However, the Office of Management and Budget headed by Miller has delayed implementation of the new requirements. The budget office claims some of the provisions run contrary to the 1980 Paperwork Reduction Act to reduce the mounting number of forms that the government requires businesses to handle.

In addition to the contempt citations, the Steelworkers want a court order fully implementing the regulations as issued last August by OSHA and an injunction prohibiting the administration from taking any further action to thwart them.

Barbara Clay, a spokeswoman for the budget office, said officials have not seen the suit yet and, therefore, had no comment on it.

The Philadelphia appeals court is the same one that last May ordered Pendergrass to issue the regulations or face a contempt citation then.

The regulations require employers in several industries to make sure warning labels are on some 600,000 hazardous chemical products in an estimated 3.5 million workplaces employing 18 million workers.

Administration officials have repeatedly cited the regulations as negating the need for the government to warn workers individually about health risks from exposure to carcinogens and other toxic substances.

Those arguments were instrumental last week in the Senate's defeat of a House-passed bill that would have required individual warnings from the government to go out annually to some 300,000 workers judged to be at the greatest risk.

The American Cancer Society had estimated those individual warnings and medical monitoring programs based on them would have prevented 250,000 cancer deaths over the next 10 years.

OSHA estimated that the "right-to-know" regulations would reduce chemically related injuries, illnesses and deaths in non-manufacturing industries by 20 percent a year.

The regulations were recommended in 1975 by a federal advisory commission to combat the annual 100,000 deaths and 340,000 disabling illnesses and injuries blamed on occupational diseases.

Formally known as the Hazard Communication Standard, the warnings were imposed by OSHA on the chemical industry and its 1.4 million workers in 1985.

A year later, under court orders in response to an earlier suit by the Steelworkers union, they were expanded to cover 14 million more workers employed by some 300,000 manufacturers.

Then the Philadelphia federal appeals court last May ordered OSHA to expand the requirements further to protect the 18 million workers in agriculture, construction, services, transportation and office occupations.

JUDITH HOPE

Hope Daughter-In-Law May Be Nominated To Replace Bork

WASHINGTON (AP) — Judith Richards Hope is the likely nominee to replace defeated Supreme Court nominee Robert H. Bork on a federal appeals court here, a Justice Department official says, but the daughter-in-law of comedian Bob Hope won't comment on the possibility.

President Reagan's nomination of Ms. Hope as a judge of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia is "on course," the official, who asked to remain anonymous, said Wednesday.

The FBI and the American Bar Association have been conducting background investigations of Ms. Hope, a lawyer in private practice here.

Bork resigned from the bench in February, four months after his nomination to the Supreme Court was defeated by the Senate in a bitter fight.

Ms. Hope reportedly turned down the judgeship originally but changed her mind after a call from Reagan. She declined to comment on her possible nomination.

Ms. Hope, 47, was national co-chairwoman of Lawyers for Reagan-Bush in 1984 and was general counsel to the presidential campaign of Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan.

She is a partner in the Washington office of Paul, Hastings, Janofsky & Walker, which has its headquarters in Los Angeles. She is married to Hope's son, Tony Hope, also a lawyer here.

New York No-Smoking Law Bans Public Puffers

NEW YORK (AP) — No butts about it, New York City's smokers are now officially prohibited from smoking in many of their old haunts.

"No Smoking" signs went up across town Wednesday as restaurants and other public places moved into compliance with the city's new anti-smoking law.

Mayor Edward I. Koch and Dr. Stephen Joseph, city health commissioner, hailed the new law on its first day.

"We're protecting the health of the people of the City of New York," Koch said as he posted a sign depicting the Big Apple and a crossed-out cigarette at the Tapis Rouge bistro on Duane Street.

Jean Goutal, the bistro's owner and a former smoker, said he likes the new law and may expand it to all of his 65-seat restaurant. Currently, he has set aside half his tables for non-smokers, as the new law requires.

The measure restricts smoking in workplaces, restaurants, hotels, theaters, large stores and taxicabs.

Employers and businesses have begun to comply, although Joseph said enforcement won't begin for two months. Koch said that would give smokers 60 days to quit "cold turkey."

There was no grace period at the New York Post, which has snuffed out smoking in all its offices.

"It's going to drive people mad," said Marie Cundari, a city desk assistant who planned to leave the premises every few hours to smoke.

"You feel like you're in school. Then, you snuck into the bathroom and if they smelled it, you were in trouble," she said. "It's horrible."

Tensions also ran high among some restaurant owners.

"I have customers who've come here for 25 years and they are on a certain table. Now, they say, 'If I cannot have my table, I'm not coming,'" lamented Andre Soltner, owner of Lutece. "How can I please everybody? It's a nightmare."

Alan Nussbaum, owner of Club 1407 in the garment district, said: "My complaint is that it's the restaurateur's job to become the policeman."

Gregory Camillucci, general manager of the Russian Tea Room, which phased in separate sections over the past three months, said most of his customers are understanding. "I guess maybe it's the flexibility of good old New Yorkers."

Smokers still light up wherever they please at the Philip Morris Companies. The law exempts tobacco businesses, including an annex of the Whitney Museum in the Philip Morris building.

"In that area, common courtesy and accommodation and consideration will prevail," said company spokesman Steven H. Weiss.

Philip Morris is mailing city businesses more than 81,000 pamphlets detailing the new law, as well as some 225,000 booklets to smokers' households. "We're going to continue to let smokers know that you can still smoke in New York City," Weiss said.

Family Of 30 Gets Keys To New Home

FIFE, Wash. (AP) — Bob and Linda Cornyn and 23 of their 28 children pulled up in the family bus and then received the keys to a 15-bedroom, eight-bathroom dream house remodeled for them with government help.

"This is all very exciting," said Cornyn, a 42-year-old chief warrant officer stationed at nearby Fort Lewis who has been in the Army for 24 years. "We're all very ecstatic."

The Cornyns adopted 25 of their children, including some who are South Korean, Colombian, Indian, Amerasian and black and some with disabilities.

Some are wheelchair-bound or move about on crutches. They all help care for each other.

"We have a rainbow family," said Cornyn. "We have just about every color there is. We look at the rainbow as God's promise."

The family, except for three children who were in school and two in a hospital, were at Wednesday's ceremonies.

"Perhaps in the future we'll need more bedrooms," said Mrs. Cornyn. "But this is a dream come true. Somebody believed in us enough to help us. This is something we thought would never happen."

Excited smiles shone on the faces of the children, who range from age 8 months to 26 years, as they explored the 5,620-square-foot house.

It has eight bathrooms, a downstairs family room that takes up nearly the entire floor and two washing machines, dryers and dishwashers. A yard big enough for a softball game surrounds the rambling white house at the end of a tree-lined road in this rural town 30 miles south of Seattle.

"I have two children. Believe me, you've got to be courageous," said Rep. Norm Dicks, D-Wash., who presented the keys to the Cornyns. "It's touching and rewarding to see a family like this."

The house was remodeled at a cost of $60,000 by the Pierce County Housing Development Association, which was formed last April 24.

Called Project 30 because the Cornyn family numbers 30, the home purchase and remodeling job is the first project undertaken by the association, which is leasing the house to the Cornyns.

The Cornyns were high school sweethearts in Michigan who married as soon as Linda graduated. They adopted their first child when the family was stationed in South Korea in 1979.

"I guess we do it because it feels good and it's the right thing to do," Cornyn said. "It just makes us feel good to help someone else. We enjoy seeing these children grow physically and mentally."

He noted that many of his adopted children would be in institutions if he and his wife hadn't adopted them.

Cornyn said some of his adopted children received supplemental Social Security benefits and the family also receives food from local food banks and clothes from "lots of people."

The Cornyns are the largest family housed under the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development's housing voucher program, receiving $700 monthly toward rent and utilities.

The Cornyns are moving from a six-bedroom home in Puyallup to their new home, which has been expanded during the past six months from eight bedrooms.

"It seems like we've never had enough room," said Cornyn.

Sanctions Imposed

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan has imposed fishing sanctions against Japan in reprisal for alleged violations of an international whale conservation accord.

In a letter to House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, Reagan said the Commerce Department found that Japan has been granting permits allowing the killing of its minke whales in the Antarctic for research purposes.

Invoking the Magnuson Fishery Conservation and Management Act and the Fishermen's Protective Act of 1967, Reagan ordered the State Department to withhold 100 percent of the fishing privileges that would otherwise be available to Japan in an exclusive U.S. fishing zone.

Ken Cook, a spokesman for the U.S. affiliate of the World Wildlife Fund, said Wednesday the announced fishing sanctions would hurt the Japanese to a degree. But he said the punitive measures come too late to save any of the 300 minke whales that Japan plans to take in this year's research program.

In his letter to Wright, Reagan said that Japan had been granting the whale-killing permits despite a 1987 International Whaling Commission resolution against this practice.

That resolution recommended that Japan refrain from issuing further permits "until uncertainties in their scientific research proposals were resolved."

John Montgomery Enjoys Senior Games

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

In 1948 John Montgomery, a Greenville resident, competed to qualify for the U.S. Olympic team and placed fourth. The top three pole vaulting qualifiers sailed for the first post-war Olympics in England; he went on to surpass his own jump height, but never tried for the Olympics again.

Today, Montgomery says his vaulting pole seldom sees daylight, but the 66-year-old athlete keeps himself in excellent physical condition and enjoys athletics as much as he did as a young man, thanks largely to the Greenville-Pitt County Senior Games program.

Friday and Saturday of this week, Montgomery and about 90 other Pitt County residents 55 or older will participate in 15 events during the fifth annual Greenville-Pitt County Senior Games to be held in and around East Carolina University's Minges Coliseum and in several other local recreation facilities.

There are 38 events. Montgomery will take part in 15 of them: the 100-meter dash, the 200-meter dash, the 400-meter dash, the 1,500-meter run, the five-kilometer run, the standing broad jump, the shot put, the discus throw, the one-mile walking race, golf and Frisbee golf — the last a new event he's new at but game to try.

He has participated in the local Senior Games since they started in 1984. Previously, he took part in most of the running events in this area and still does. He was in the Rosco Run to benefit the Children's Hospital of Eastern North Carolina a few weeks ago, coming in second in his 60-70 age group.

His body is lean and hard, with no fat or flab anywhere. This wasn't always so, he said. From some time before he was 30 until he was 50, he said his lifestyle became very sedentary and his body looked and functioned like those of most middle-aged people.

He said he believes it was in 1972 that he saw his friend, Tom Rivers, a local engineer, after several months of not having seen him. "Tom, you look great!" he said. "What have you been doing to get so fit?"

He said Rivers told him he was participating in the East Carolina University Adult Physical Fitness Program and invited him to take part. He signed up immediately.

He said the program was mostly indoor jogging and racquetball at first, with some outdoor jogging later on. It was after the outdoor jogging started, he said, that he met Clem Williams, then a Bethel resident, who invited him to "come on and let me show you some real running."

He started distance running with Williams and soon was participating in five-kilometer, then 10-kilometer races and finally marathons (26-mile-plus races) arranged by Williams and other running enthusiasts.

He still jogs at least every week-day. His Lynndale neighborhood morning runners' group has been comprised of various people at various times, but now he and his friends, Jerry Powell, Dr. Ted Sunder and Dr. Steve Thomas, meet each morning at 6:30 and run four-to-seven miles. He also participates in regular Senior Games practice sessions and lately has been playing some golf in preparation for the competition Friday morning.

Except during his "lazy middle years," he says athletics have always been important to him. He grew up in Baton Rouge, La., and remembers pole vaulting "from the time I could carry a stick." He set the state record in Louisiana with 13 feet, three and one-eighth inches in 1941. He won a track scholarship to Rice University and went there one year until he was drafted and entered the Marine Corps during World War II.

He recalled a run from Greenville to Kinston in early 1945 that was the hardest he has ever made. "I was stationed in the Marine Air Base at Kinston at the time," he said, "and often hitchhiked to Greenville and back to see Marylie." He had met Marylie Williams, the Greenville girl who soon will have been his wife for 42 years, at the USO in the old Woman's Club building at Greene and Third streets in Greenville. Her home on West Fifth Street in Greenville drew him like a magnet, even on weeknights with no sure transportation.

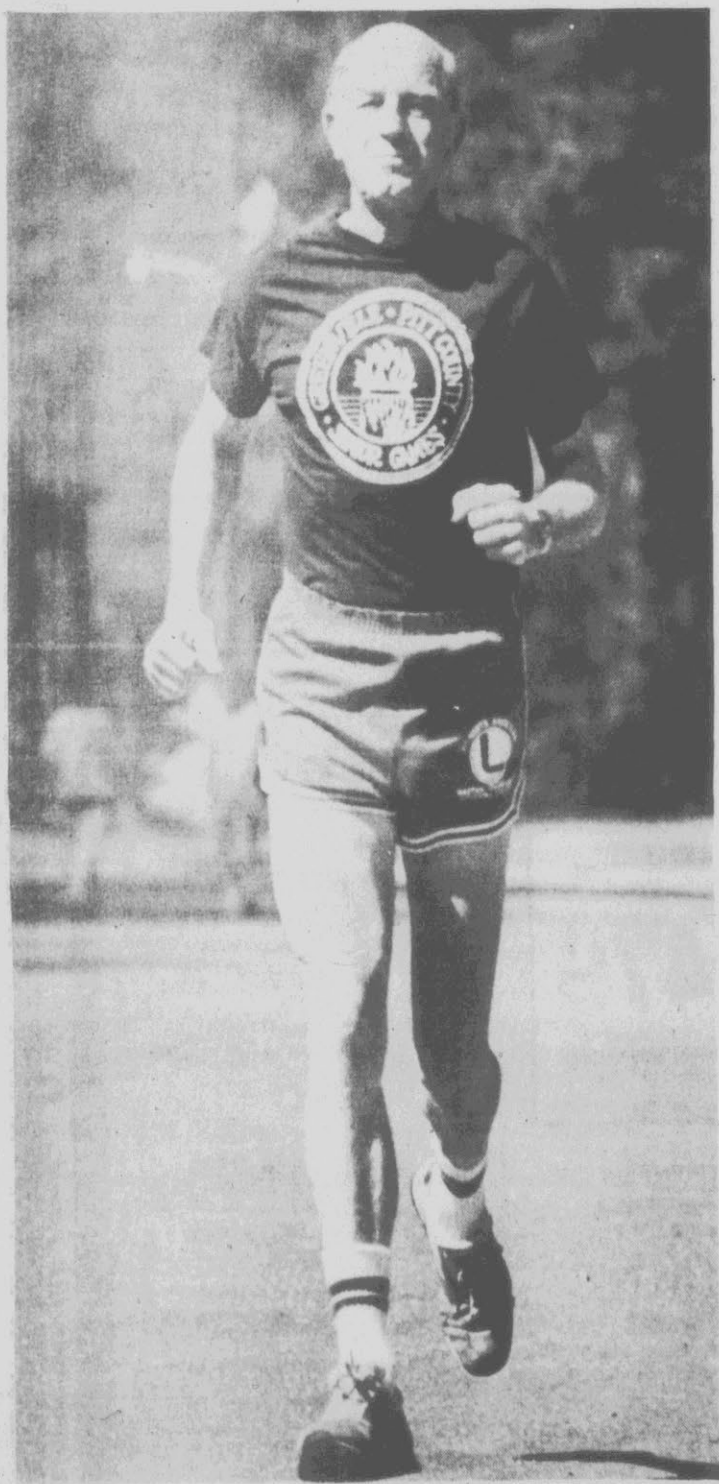

"That cold February night — a Tuesday or a Wednesday, I think — I stayed at the Williamses' a little later than I meant to and it was starting to snow when I left. Marylie offered to drive me back to Kinston, but gas was rationed then and I didn't want her to have to do that. But I knew I had to get out and find a ride — being late for roll call in the morning was a very serious matter."

"I remember jogging down to the West End Circle, expecting I'd have no trouble thumbing a ride from there. But the weather was getting worse and hardly any cars were out on the roads. After a while, I started jogging along, mostly to keep warm, still confident of getting a ride. No rides came and I just kept running. I remember passing through Winterville, through Ayden, across the bridge at Grifton. By then I had icicles hanging off my clothing and I was nearly exhausted and must have looked terrible. I remember 'hitting the wall' about the time I got to Kinston. I had never done that before. My legs were turning to jelly. I just couldn't run any more." He said he caught a cab inside Kinston and made it to the base at 8:30 a.m. when he should have been there at 8 o'clock.

He expected the worst, but his commanding officer took one look at him, believed his story about having run all the way from Greenville and told him to go to bed. The next morn-

PAST HONORS — Montgomery enjoys keeping trophies from the past, but says he likes the non-competitive participation-for-fun atmosphere of the local Senior Games in which he's taken part for the past five years. (Reflector Photos By Cliff Hollis)

RUNNING — John Montgomery, 66, will participate in several running events during the Greenville-Pitt County Senior Games to be held Friday and Saturday.

Nannies On Call Couple Speaks Vows Keep Sick Kids In Richmond Saturday

By JANET McCONAUGHEY
Associated Press Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Requests from hospital employees prompted the home care subsidiary of Ochsner Medical Institutions to set up a babysitting service for sick children.

"So many women who work in the hospital have had to lose days because they did not have someone to take care of a sick child," said Joan Savoy, administrator of Ochsner Home Health Services. "It just evolved as an outgrowth of our basic home care program."

However, "Nannies On Call" isn't a service to employees of Ochsner Foundation Hospital or other parts of the Ochsner Medical Institutions. Rather, it's a $6.25-an-hour program available to anyone who has paid the $20 registration fee and provided a detailed health history of the child.

"So when the mom calls, when her child is already ill, we already have in our computer system that this child has asthma or an allergy to a particular food or drug," she said.

For their $25 or more — there's a four-hour minimum — parents get a babysitter who has a background in daycare work or other work with children and has been bonded by Ochsner.

To qualify for the program, sitters also must pass a police background check and go through a two-day training course at Ochsner.

A registered nurse teaches the nannies cardiopulmonary resuscitation and describes symptoms and appropriate care for common childhood illnesses, Ms. Savoy said.

"They're taught comfort measures," not nursing care, she said.

The nurse also goes over what sorts of activities are appropriate for children of various ages with various types of ailments and the different ways that children of different ages are likely to respond to illness.

"We also go over safety precautions," Ms. Savoy said. These include getting the parents to provide a password for anyone who wants to call the child or go into the house.

"The parents may be divorced or separated, and it's also because of all the weirdos that are out in the world these days. You can't be too careful," she said.

Nannies On Call is geared to mildly ill children — kids with stomach flu, measles, chicken pox or stomach aches, for instance.

A nurse is on call 24 hours to tell the sitters what to do if the child becomes sicker, and, if necessary, to come out to check on the child in person.

"We do have guidelines for when a parent must come home," Ms. Savoy said. "If, for instance, a child's fever is very high — over 102 — and not responding, the nurse will go out, evaluate the child and call the parent."

There's no extra charge for the nurse. However, if the parent cannot be reached and the nurse decides the child must see a doctor, the doctor's fees are not covered.

Parents can either pay the sitter directly — the sitters give receipts — or authorize Ochsner Home Health to charge their Visa or Mastercard account.

Savoy said the program, which began in January, has about 10 sitters and 20 families right now. The sitters also do straight babysitting, for the same fee, in a program that caters largely to people in town for conventions.

"Quality Is Our Business"

Readers Clobber Abby

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from "My Turn in Minnesota." His parents disowned him six years ago when he was 19. (He got his 20-year-old girlfriend pregnant, and when he told his folks, they put his belongings on the front lawn and said, "You are no longer our son, and you are no longer welcome in our home!") The son had a job and never asked for money — only their love and moral support.

He married the girl, and did very well for himself; then he received a letter from his father saying his company had gone bankrupt and he needed $500 a month "for a while!"

I couldn't believe your answer, Abby! You actually advised him to meet with his parents and discuss how he could help them. This is how I would have answered their letter:

"Dear Mr. and Mrs. So-and-so: Six years ago when I needed your love and support, you threw me out of the house and told me that I was no longer your son."

"So, if I am not your son, how can you be my parents? I know families should help each other out, but we aren't a family anymore. Good luck. Yours truly."

Abby, I don't think this young man owes his parents a thing after the way they treated him. — MRS. M.E. HIGGINS, ABERDEEN, WASH.

DEAR MRS. HIGGINS: My readers clobbered me on this one. Thus far the score is: Readers, 289; Abby, 1.

Godin's Three-Run Homer Puts Icing On Cake As Pirates Top Liberty, 7-3

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Steve Godin missed by inches the first time, but the second time he drove the ball all the way out of the park for a three run homer as he helped East Carolina to a 7-3 baseball victory over Liberty University Wednesday afternoon.

Godin's first attempt hit the top of the fence and bounced back into Harrington Field in the sixth inning, starting a two-run rally that overcame a 3-2 Liberty lead at the time. The second time up, there was no question about it as the freshman rightfielder provided the padding to wrap it up.

The Pirates, who boost their record to 21-9 with the win, used three pitchers in the game, but limited the Flames to just three hits. All three of those came off starter John White, who went the first five and a third innings. He held Liberty in check without a hit until the fifth inning, when the Flames rallied for two runs to take a 2-1 lead, then came up with another off him in the sixth for a 3-2 edge.

Mike Whitten then came on in relief and pitched one and a third innings and gained the decision, his first of the year, before giving way to Gary Smith, who earned his first save with a two-inning performance. Neither gave up a hit, but a couple of back-to-back walks spelled the end for Whitten in the top of the eighth.

Smith, who had opened the game at first base — his first time starting at any position but pitcher — then quenched the Flames without another baserunner, fanning three of the six batters he faced.

"I didn't think it was a very intense game for either team," ECU Coach Gary Overton said. "Both teams seemed tired defensively, but we did have some timely hits."

Neither team made any errors, however.

"(Liberty starting pitcher Toby) Toburen did a good job for a freshman," Overton said. "I thought White struggled some. He didn't do that bad a job, but he got behind the hitters a lot and didn't pitch well with runners on base." White hit one batter, walked four, and had two wild pitches while striking out three.

"Whitten gave us two good innings and Smith did a fine job in relief," the coach continued.

"A win is a win and I'm not complaining," he added.

About his own freshman, Godin, Overton said, "He's swinging the bat real well now. For a couple of weeks there, he was not swinging the bat well — he was hitting the ball — but not swinging well. He's hitting much better now."

Godin was the only Pirate with more than one hit Wednesday, with his homer and double.

It was another home run, however, that put the Pirates into their initial lead. That came off the bat of catcher Chris Cauble in the third inning. He led off with a shot to right that got up into the wind and sailed out of the park for a 1-0 lead.

Liberty, which is coached by former New York Yankee great Bobby Richardson, scored twice in the fifth to take a 2-1 edge. Doug Reynolds was hit by a pitch and Kevin Price came on as a courtesy runner. With one down, Mike Tatum singled to right and both advanced on a wild pitch. Mike Rivas' long fly to center scored Reynolds with the tying run and Jamey Mason singled to right, driving in Tatum with the go-ahead run.

The Pirates quickly tied it up with one in the bottom of the inning. Smith led off with a walk and Kevin Riggs also got a free trip to first. With one out, David Ritchie delivered a single to left, plating Smith.

Gary McKay helped spell the end for White in the sixth, leading off with a homer to right, pushing Liberty back on top, 3-2.

East Carolina again rallied right away to move back ahead, scoring twice in the bottom of the sixth. Godin opened with his drive to left, which bounced off the top of the fence for a double. John Adams followed with a drive to center that bounced over the fence for a ground-ruled double, scoring Godin. Adams was sacrificed to third and scored on Riggs' hit to right, giving the Pirates a 4-3 lead.

The Pirates closed out the scoring in the seventh, scoring three more times. Jay McGraw and Calvin Brown both drew walks to set the stage for Godin, who left no doubt this time with a smash that easily cleared the fence for a three-run homer.

Liberty's record dips to 12-22 with the defeat.

East Carolina plays in Kinston's Grainger Stadium tonight at 7 p.m. in a exhibition against the Kinston Indians Class A professional team.

They return to Colonial Athletic Association action on Saturday, playing a doubleheader at George Mason. The Pats, who were swept by William & Mary two weeks ago, took three games from UNC-Wilmington this past weekend and are 6-2 in the CAA, in second place.

East Carolina 4-4, is currently third and could move into second with a sweep of the Patriots. Mason was the only team in the league to sweep the Pirates last season, winning all three games.

New Madison Coach

Charles (Lefty) Driesell dons a James Madison University cap as he faces the press minutes after being announced as the new JMU head basketball coach Wednesday. Lefty Driesell Is Named Coach At James Madison

HARRISONBURG, Va. (AP) — In Lefty Driesell's reincarnation as a college basketball coach, his new employers don't think he'll be haunted by the ghost of Len Bias.

After announcing Wednesday they had hired Driesell as James Madison's new coach, school officials said the cocaine-induced death of Bias was not the fault of Driesell, who ultimately was forced to resign as coach at Maryland.

"We certainly were aware of it," Athletic Director Dean Ehlers said. "I think everybody in America was aware of it. I personally don't think that was the coach's responsibility. A coach can only provide guidance. You can't be with them 24 hours a day."

James Madison President Ronald Carrier agreed, though he acknowledged some faculty members could be displeased by the hiring of Driesell.

"There may be some, but I haven't heard any," Carrier said.

Bias' death shortly after he was drafted by the National Basketball Association's Boston Celtics in 1986 unleashed criticism of Driesell's program at Maryland. Some critics said the coach showed little interest in the athletes as students. Driesell also was alleged to have hindered a police investigation into the death, although a grand jury did not indict him.

At Wednesday's news conference, Carrier pointed out that two of Driesell's students were Rhodes Scholars and others went on to become doctors and lawyers.

"After looking at his record for 26 years, I had no problem," Carrier said.

Driesell, whose overall record in nine years at Davidson and 17 at Maryland is 524-224, told reporters and a crowd of several hundred cheering students that he was ready to get back to work as a coach.

"I don't have anything to prove to anybody," Driesell said. "I'm a basketball coach. I've won games, and I've won them within the NCAA rules."

Driesell said he is getting a late start on recruiting, with signing day coming up next Wednesday, and so far the only assistant he has chosen is his son, Chuck.

"I just want to hurry up and get out of here and get recruiting and see if we can't win some basketball games," Driesell said.

Driesell, 56, said he had missed coaching, although he had been providing color commentary for televised Atlantic Coast Conference basketball games and working as an assistant athletic director at Maryland.

"I never really felt like I got out of coaching. When you do color commentary, you have to scout both teams," he said.

"I wasn't ready to give up coaching when I resigned. I think I've got 10 or 15 years left to coach," Driesell said, although his $65,000-a-year contract at James Madison is initially just for five years.

Carrier said Driesell also will be paid $10,000 a year by the James Madison Foundation as an annuity toward his retirement. He also will be able to operate a basketball camp.

Driesell refused to comment on reports that Maryland will make up the difference between his new salary and the $150,000 a year he would receive in each of the seven years remaining in his 10-year contract.

"That's personal between the University of Maryland and myself," Driesell said.

Carrier and Ehlers predicted their hiring of Driesell will add excitement to the James Madison program and boost home ticket sales.

Driesell takes over for John Thurston, who quit in midseason after learning his contract would not be renewed. James Madison was 10-18 overall last season and 5-9 in the Colonial Athletic Association.

Driesell said he expects no problems getting used to a new conference.

Spanish Omelet Fuels Seve's Try At Masters

AUGUSTA, GA. (AP) — Fueled by a "secret ingredient" Spanish omelet whipped up by his chef, Severiano Ballesteros faces his 12th Masters and 31st birthday with all the worry and concentration of a matador eyeballing a wounded bull.

"The longer I play this game, the harder it is to make a three-foot putt," sighed the dashing buccaneer who may regard as the Manolete of the Masters and a favorite to win his third green jacket.

The handsome, black-haired Spaniard has been here almost a week now, "cleaning up the short game" and gallantly avoiding southern matrons who call out to him from under the green umbrellas on the clubhouse lawn, golf's equivalent of the Royal Enclosure at Ascot.

"Oh, Seve, you just must meet my daughter, she just worships the ground you putt on, and she's almost your age."

Well, Seve himself worships this ground he putts on. Augusta National is his favorite course in all the world, which is homage indeed from an international star who has stunned galleries on every continent with the bold long iron shots that both won and lost titles for him here.

In 1980, Ballesteros, just turned 23, became the youngest ever to don a Masters jacket.

He won "La Chaqueta Verde," his dream green coat, again in 1983 and has twice since been runnerup, including last year when he tied with Larry Mize and Greg Norman and was the first to fall in the playoff eventually won by hometown boy Mize.

Even when home in Spain, Seve has Georgia on his mind.

In his backyard at Pedrena, on the stormy north Atlantic coast, Seve practices on a faithful reproduction of Augusta National's first green. "The grass, the slope, everything is the same, except for the sand," he describes the playpen he designed for himself not far from the farm where he was born and just across from Real Pedrena, where at age 7 he climbed the fence with a three iron.

Seve has given the name "Amen Corner" to the firm he founded to handle his commercial ventures, including sponsoring last month's Mallorca Open, which he organized and then won against top international competition like Ian Woosnam, Gordon Brand Jr. and Calvin Peete.

At Augusta, of course, the Amen Corner is the prayerful name given to the 11th, 12th and 13th holes, where skittish winds and the waters of Rae's Creek have made believers of so many fallen Masters contenders but where Seve's swashbuckling bravado has often wrought birdies and eagles.

Earlier in the week, Ballesteros walked his favorite chunk of real estate for more than seven hours, studying the subtle changes made on the second and 14th greens, but mostly fine-tuning his chip shots. As usual, older brother Vincente lugged the bag and took notes and some abuse in Spanish as the trusted picador to this moody matador.

"It is important to know every detail of this course," said Seve, who, as with the ingredients of his omelet, refused to reveal the "secrets" learned on his long day's journey over this lovely course.

Hord Hardin, the Masters' chairman, has expressed concern over top players maybe bypassing this classic event in future years in favor of tournaments offering larger prize money and more commercial tie-ins.

Seve seemed stunned by the idea. "This to me is the most honored may-hor" he said, giving major the Spanish pronunciation. "Titles are more important than money."

But with his 31st birthday looming Saturday, he seemed even more stunned when asked if in years to come he would keep returning to Augusta, like 86-year-old Gene Sarazen and 75-year-old Sam Snead, who are the honorary starters of this 52nd Masters.

"My God," said Seve, frowning as if over a difficult putt, "I like to think ahead, but not that far ahead."

Swindell Comeback Is Complete

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Greg Swindell not only came home — he came back.

Pitching (1) in Arlington, Texas, just a few miles from his Fort Worth birthplace, and (2) for the first time since last June 29 — when ligaments tore away from the bone in his elbow — Swindell scattered seven hits and struck out eight in hurling the Cleveland Indians to a 5-1 victory over the Texas Rangers Wednesday night.

"I was nervous," the 23-year-old left-hander said. "I didn't know what I was going to do. My arm felt OK in spring training, but that means nothing. Then I go nine innings against one of the toughest hitting teams in the league. I proved a lot. It's exciting for me to pitch a complete game so early in the season."

Meanwhile, rookie catcher Pat Borders had three hits and drove in five runs in his first major-league game and George Bell went 5-for-5 and scored three times as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Kansas City Royals 11-4.

Borders tripled home two runs on the first pitch in his first career at-bat in a four-run first inning. He singled with the bases loaded in the third to drive in two more off Charlie Leibrandt, who gave up six runs in three innings. Borders had another RBI single in the fifth off Ted Power.

Bell, who hit three home runs in Monday's opener as Toronto's designated hitter, played left field Wednesday night because Lloyd Moseby was scratched with a sore hip. Bell's three singles and two doubles gave him eight hits in nine at-bats this season. He also drove in his fifth run.

In other American League games, it was New York 5, Minnesota 3; Boston 6, Detroit 5; Seattle 6, Oakland 5; Milwaukee 3, Baltimore 1; California 4, Chicago 2 in 10 innings.

Indians 5, Rangers 1

Swindell's strong pitching took place in a ballpark that usually serves as a burial ground for the Indians, who have won only four of their last 20 games in Arlington Stadium. And Manager Doc Edwards said the best is yet to come.

"He can get stronger and throw the ball faster," Edwards said. "His arm is healthy, but it can get a lot stronger, and it will as he pitches more."

"The last three innings were his best. The true test was tonight. He answered all my questions."

Loser Bobby Witt lasted 6 1-3 innings and gave up all Cleveland's runs, including Brook Jacoby's solo homer, RBI singles by Andy Allanson and Pat Tabler and two RBI by Joe Carter with a double and sacrifice fly.

Oddibe McDowell's fourth-inning homer was the only run off Swindell.

Blue Jays 11, Royals 4

It won't always be this easy for Borders, who tripled off Charlie Leibrandt on the first pitch he saw in the majors.

"I had a dream just to get one hit in my first game," said Borders, who spent six years in the minors. "I was real nervous, but that first hit kind of relaxed me. I can't believe it happened myself. That calmed me down. I wasn't tired (after running out his triple). I was pumped up."

"Somebody should come up and slap me and wake me up. He (Leibrandt) was throwing all fastballs, and throwing me away, and he got it up and I got good wood on it."

Bell is so hot that Kansas City Manager John Wathan said it was time for "Plan B" — whatever that is.

Winning pitcher Mike Flanagan allowed two runs — both in the first inning, one unearned — and six hits in six innings.

Yankees 5, Twins 3

Rickey Henderson snapped a 2-2 tie with a two-run double off reliever Juan Berenguer in the seventh inning and scored on Willie Randolph's third hit, a single. Henderson's double came after Joel Skinner doubled and pinch-hitter Gary Ward was hit by a pitch.

The starting pitchers, New York's John Candelaria and Minnesota's Les Straker, each allowed two runs in six innings. Minnesota's Tom Brunansky homered off Cecilio Guante and Dan Gladden had two singles and two doubles for the Twins.

Red Sox 6, Tigers 5

Brady Anderson scored the tie-breaking run on a passed ball by catcher Mike Heath as Boston rallied for four runs in the eighth inning. After Doyle Alexander yielded eight hits over seven innings, Willie Hernandez took over with a 5-2 lead but retired just one batter.

Mike Greenwell walked and singles by Dwight Evans and Sam Horn loaded the bases. Rich Gedman hit a sacrifice fly, pinch-hitter Todd Benzinger had an RBI single and, after Anderson was hit by a pitch, Mike Henneman replaced Hernandez.

Marty Barrett forced Kevin Romine at the plate but Heath threw wildly to first trying for a double play, and pinch runner Jody Reed scored from second. Wade Boggs was walked intentionally, but a 1-1 pitch to Jim Rice bounced off Heath's glove, permitting Anderson to score.

Reliever Dennis Lamp pitched two scoreless innings in his Boston debut and boosted his career record against Detroit to 10-0.

Mariners 6, Athletics 5

Ken Phelps broke a 5-5 tie in the sixth inning with a sacrifice fly. Billy Swift was the winning pitcher with 6 1-3 innings of one-run, five-hit relief after starter Steve Trout walked five straight batters, committed an error and threw two run-scoring wild pitches in the first inning.

Dave Valle hit a two-run homer for Seattle and Henry Cotto, 3-for-3 in his debut with the Mariners, had a two-run single.

Brewers 3, Orioles 1

Chris Bosio pitched a five-hitter and Dale Sveum hit his second home run in as many games. After surrendering a single and triple and falling behind 1-0 in the second inning, Bosio allowed just three singles — one an infield hit — over the last seven innings.

After managing only two hits off Mike Morgan through five innings, the Brewers scored all their runs in the sixth, triggered by Sveum's game-tying two-out homer.

Morgan had faced the minimum number of batters when Sveum homered. Paul Molitor followed with his third hit of the game, a double. Robin Yount had an infield single and B.J. Surhoff doubled home both runners.

Angels 4, White Sox 2

Bill Buckner hit a tie-breaking, two-run pinch single in the 10th inning. Wally Joyner, who scored California's first two runs, opened the 10th with a single off Bobby Thigpen, his third hit. Devon White walked and one out later Jack Howell walked to load the bases after fouling off 11 pitches.

Buckner then batted for Bob Boone and singled up the middle, scoring Joyner and White. Donnie Moore, California's third pitcher, pitched 1 2-3 scoreless innings for the victory.

After being shut out by Dan Petry and DeWayne Buice for eight innings, the White Sox tied the game with two runs in ninth. Chicago starter Jack McDowell, who was 3-0 after coming to the majors last September, gave up four hits and one run in seven innings.

Penders Named As Texas Coach

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The University of Texas has hired Connecticut Yankee Tom Penders to pick up the reins of the Longhorns basketball program and run with the best teams in the nation.

Penders, coach at Rhode Island for the past two years, said he waited only a "New York minute" — or not at all — in accepting the job vacated when Bob Weltlich was fired March 14 after six years as Texas coach.

"The coach, in my mind, is one of the top coaches in the United States," UT Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds said Wednesday. "We want a basketball program that is as good as there is in the United States."

Asked if, as an Eastern coach, he might have difficulty recruiting in Texas, Penders tried his best southern accent, saying, "How do I all feel about that? I don't agree with that."

Dodds said a search committee that included former Texas football coach Darrell Royal sought a coach who could recruit nationally, not just in Texas, would graduate players, and was young and dynamic.

"They also mentioned they wanted someone with charisma — we've got to figure out yet whether he's got charisma or not," Dodds quipped.

"When he talked about charisma, this is the charisma right here, my wife Susie," Penders told a news conference at Erwin Center, where Texas plays basketball.

Dodds said there had been great interest in the job, and several other coaches were interviewed, but the first offer went to Penders.

Penders, 42, said he accepted without hesitation, although his two-year stay at Rhode Island "was a happy marriage."

"Basketball will be fun and exciting here," Penders said.

Penders said details of his contract at Texas had not been settled, but added, "It's a long-term situation, and I'm very comfortable with it."

His contract at Rhode Island was listed at $54,660, but he had a television show and Rhode Island president Edward Eddy had the option to pay him more.

"When Tom called me last night to tell me about his decision," Eddy said, "I realized immediately that there was no way Rhode Island could match this giant step for him. It is clear that Texas has unlimited resources and Tom, at this stage in his career, would be foolish not to enjoy them."

Penders said he was impressed by Austin and UT. "This a beautiful campus, it's a beautiful city, a gorgeous state and a great university. If I can't sell this, I should get out of it."

He said he met briefly with the Longhorn players, who are "dying to win."

Texas was 16-13 this season but 77-98 overall in Weltlich's six years.

"We will improve next year. We will play exciting basketball, entertaining basketball. And, I think, before too long, winning basketball," Penders said.

Texas scoring leader Travis Mays said, "If we get a coach that everyone is happy with ... and everybody gets excited about the program, that's all we need to really get on the road. I'm ready to run."

Another player, Alvin Hegg, said he was shocked that UT "got a big-time coach."

Penders said he first was approached by Texas officials during the Final Four in Kansas City, Mo.

"I was (surprised)," he said. "I don't know if I'm a household name down here."

Penders compiled a 48-17 record at Rhode Island, leading the team to the East Regional semifinals this year with upsets of Missouri and Syracuse.

Humphrey Breaks Foot, Out For Spring

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Alabama Coach Bill Curry said star tailback Bobby Humphrey would need surgery to repair a broken bone in his left foot.

Curry said the operation was scheduled for today at West Alabama Hospital. It will be performed by team physician Les Fowler and Dr. Jack Hughton, head of the Hughton Sports Medicine Hospital in Columbus, Ga.

"We feel like we have the best football player in the country and we want him to have the best care in the country," Curry said after a three-hour scrimmage Wednesday.

Curry said Humphrey was expected to be back at full speed when fall practice begins. He will be a senior this season.

"I do know, because we've called all over the country and we've spoken with other experts as well, that there's a very high rate of success in this type of operation," the coach said.

Humphrey, Alabama's all-time leading rusher, suffered the injury during Monday's practice. He will miss the rest of spring workouts and Saturday's A-Day game at Birmingham's Legion Field.

Curry said center Chris Robinette dislocated his elbow during the scrimmage Wednesday, while defensive lineman Byron Sneed injured his knee.

"It looked like Byron Sneed banged his knee," Curry said. "We hope that's not serious. That's being checked right now."

Valvano's Choice To Stay A Costly One

By The Associated Press

However much money Jim Valvano gets in endorsements as basketball coach and athletic director at North Carolina State, a sports business publication says he could have doubled it if he had decided to leave for UCLA.

There is enough around the Triangle and the nation to keep Valvano busy. Just this week alone, he appeared on national television on both CBS and ESPN, commenting on the Final Four as well as fending off questions from hordes of reporters on whether he would indeed be the man to replace Walt Hazzard, fired eight days ago as Bruin head coach.

But Sports Inc., a magazine which specializes in the business end of athletics, says he could have done far better at UCLA than the estimated $300,000 he receives in outside income from N.C. State.

Phillies Edge Pirates, 6-5

By BEN WALKER

AP Baseball Writer

Mike Schmidt wanted to win the game single-handedly and Bobby Bonilla stopped him.

Fourteen innings and 4½ hours later, neither was a factor when the Philadelphia Phillies finally beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-5 Wednesday night.

Schmidt, whose error set up three unearned runs in a 5-3 loss on opening night, homered for the second straight game and drove in three Philadelphia runs. He tied Mickey Mantle for 25th place on the all-time RBI list with 1,509 and hit his 532nd career homer, two behind Jimmie Foxx for eighth place.

Bonilla hit two homers — one from each side of the plate — and knocked in five runs with a career-high four hits for Pittsburgh.

In the bottom of the 10th inning, it came down to Schmidt vs. Bonilla: Schmidt was on second base when Chris James singled to left field. Schmidt ran through third base coach Dave Bristol's stop sign as Bonilla caught left fielder Barry Bonds' throw. Bonilla's relay to catcher Mike Lavalliere nailed Schmidt.

"I'm going head down," Schmidt explained. "In my mind, I'm scoring."

With two outs in the Phillies' 14th, Juan Samuel doubled off the left-field fence. Milt Thompson hit the next pitch for a game-winning single.

"I was set to hit the first good pitch I saw," Thompson said after pinning the loss on Bob Kipper, 0-1.

Mike Maddux, 1-0, worked three scoreless innings for the victory. Earlier in the day, younger brother Greg pitched a shutout as Chicago defeated Atlanta 3-0.

Had Mike and Greg ever won on the same day?

"Yeh, in wiffle ball," Mike said.

Elsewhere, Montreal beat New York 5-1 and Houston defeated San Diego 5-1. The St. Louis at Cincinnati game was rained out.

Schmidt hit a two-run homer in the fourth inning for a 3-3 tie. He had an RBI double in the sixth and scored on Lance Parrish's triple.

Bonilla, who hit a three-run homer in the third, tied it at 5 with a two-run

Bulls Stop Bucks For Third Time

By BILL BARNARD

AP Basketball Writer

Doug Collins came very close to providing some bulletin-board ammunition after the Chicago Bulls won at Milwaukee Arena for the third time this season.

"Our guys are very confident coming up here," the Bulls coach said after his team won 119-110 Wednesday night. "It's very similar to being a home game for us."

Collins quickly remembered that the two teams almost certainly will meet in the first round of the playoffs.

"When the playoffs start, it doesn't mean much," Collins added. "It's how you're playing going into the playoffs that counts."

Michael Jordan scored 37 points for the Bulls, who lead the Bucks by four games in the Eastern Conference. The Bulls are in fourth place and the fifth-place Bucks are five games ahead of sixth-place Cleveland.

"I'm confident playing against them. We may have a tendency to be overconfident against them," Jordan said. "We beat them three times here, but we can't get relaxed. We have to be ready to play them. It could easily turn around in the playoffs."

"The playoffs are a different game."

Dave Corzine added 18 points and John Paxson 14 for the Bulls, while Ricky Pierce scored 19 points and Sidney Moncrief 18 for Milwaukee.

In other NBA games, it was Cleveland 98, Washington 87; Dallas 119, Phoenix 93; Portland 111, Los Angeles Clippers 103; Sacramento 115, San Antonio 109; and Seattle 114, Golden State 102.

Milwaukee Coach Dell Harris is worried about his front line of Terry Cummings, Jack Sikma and Randy Breuer, which combined for only 18 rebounds against Chicago.

Paul Pressey, Sikma and Cummings fouled out and Sikma failed to score in double figures for the fourth straight game.

The Bucks also had trouble containing Jordan after Pressey got into foul trouble, picking up his fifth by the middle of the third quarter.

"Jordan hurts your rebounding and your defense," Harris said. "You have to make some adjustments. Any time you have penetration in your defense, it hurts your rebounding. He keeps constant pressure on you."

But Harris isn't ready to concede that the Bulls are the better team.

"We'll have an opportunity to find out in three weeks. That's to be determined, but they outplayed us tonight," he said.

The Bulls trailed 84-77 with 2:51 to go in the third period before scoring the last seven points of the third quarter and the first six of the fourth period for a 90-84 lead with 10:30 left.

Jordan hit two free throws with 8:58 left, and a follow-up dunk by Scottie Pippen gave the Bulls a 96-88 lead with 7:21 remaining. Milwaukee never threatened after that.

The Bucks led 64-59 at halftime behind 12 second-quarter points from John Lucas, who hit a pair of 3-pointers in the period.

Cavaliers 98, Bullets 87

Cleveland beat Washington for the sixth straight time and improved its playoff position as Mark Price scored 15 of his 20 points in the second half.

The Bullets, who dropped into a tie with the New York Knicks for eighth place in the Eastern Conference, spent about seven hours on a bus on Wednesday after their morning flight from Chicago was cancelled because of high winds. Their late arrival delayed the game by 45 minutes.

Cleveland jumped past Indiana into sixth in the tight race for three playoff spots, 1½ games ahead of the Knicks and Bullets.

The Cavaliers led 39-36 at halftime and extended their lead to 67-57 after three periods before Price capped a 12-0 Cleveland run with a 15-foot jumper, giving the Cavaliers a 90-67 advantage midway through the fourth quarter.

Steve Colter scored a season-high 29 points for the Bullets.

Mavericks 119, Suns 93

Dallas stayed in second place in the Western Conference and broke a four-game losing streak as Rolando Blackman scored a season-high 32 points. The Mavericks now lead Denver by a half-game for the Midwest Division lead behind the Los Angeles Lakers, leaders in the Western Conference.

shot in the eighth. Bonilla duplicated his feat last year as the only Pittsburgh switch-hitter to homer from both sides in a game.

The Pirates put runners on third base in the 11th and 12th innings, but could not score.

"They got the big hit and we didn't," Pittsburgh manager Jim Leyland said. "It was a fun game to manage."

Expos 5, Mets 1

Mitch Webster went 4-for-4 and scored three times and Pascual Perez matched a team mark by winning his eighth straight game.

Webster, 7-for-8 this season, tripled, doubled and drove in two runs. He was just 11-for-76 (.145) in spring training.

Perez, 8-0 since joining the Expos last Aug. 19, barely missed his first shutout since 1984. He took a five-hitter and 5-0 lead into the ninth inning and retired the first two batters before Darryl Strawberry singled and Kevin McReynolds hit an RBI double. Tim Burke relieved and got the final out.

Perez walked none and struck out nine. He tied the team record for consecutive victories, last accomplished by Burke.

Webster singled in the first and scored on Hubie Brooks' double. Andres Galarraga followed with an RBI single against Ron Darling, 0-1.

In the third, Webster grounded a ball past first base for a triple and scored on the play when Strawberry misplayed the carom in right field.

Cubs 3, Braves 0

Greg Maddux pitched a three-hitter for his second career shutout. Maddux, 1-0, walked six and struck out three. He completed only one of 27 starts last year and had one of the Cubs' five shutouts.

Neither team advanced a runner past second base until the seventh inning, when Vance Law singled off Zane Smith, 0-1, and moved up on a balk. Dave Martinez singled home Law for the lead.

Andre Dawson doubled and scored on Law's single in the eighth. Shawon Dunston, who homered on opening night, hit another in the ninth.

Astros 5, Padres 1

Glenn Davis homered for the second straight day, a two-run drive in a three-run first inning. Davis connected against Andy Hawkins, 0-1, for his 82nd career homer, moving him into sixth place on the Astros' all-time list.

Bob Knepper, 1-0, gave up seven hits in seven innings. Juan Agosto finished with hitless relief.

Rafael Ramirez and Bill Doran had RBI singles for host Houston. The Padres, who lost their first five games last season, are 0-2 this year.

'Nashville Now' Seeking Traditions In American Life

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — David Holt is on the road looking for traditional music and other celebrations of American life, from banjo makers to washtub players to cowboy poets.

Holt will begin reporting on his discoveries next Wednesday in "Celebration Express," a new segment of "Nashville Now" on the Nashville Network. The on-location reports, with upbeat and musical themes, will run every Wednesday until Sept. 28.

"Nashville Now" is a live, two-hour variety series that features the best of the country music stars. Next week, the show will come live from Grand Cayman Island with such guests as Randy Travis, Eddie Rabbit, Conway Twitty, Loretta Lynn and Hoyt Axton. The host is Ralph Emery, along with his puppet, Shotgun Red.

"I travel all the time," said Holt. "That's what I do for a living, playing concerts. I've been collecting music and songs from the old-time mountaineers for 20 years, so this is like an extension of that."

Holt's first "Celebration Express" segment on the show will come from Denver, a look at cowboy poet Baxter Black.

Another Denver segment will feature Daddy Bruce Randolph, who owns a barbecue restaurant and gives away an estimated 4,000 meals a year.

"He's a real inspiration," said Holt. "He's doing this out of the goodness of his heart. He's been doing it since he was a child and he's 88 now."

"Since this is a celebration of the Nashville Network's fifth anniversary," Holt said, "we're looking for people who are having a celebration. Or whose very lives are a celebration. We're going to travel 100,000 miles around the country."

"I'd love to see this become a series. It's been a wonderful experience for me just in the short time I've done it. It's wonderful to search out these people and spend time with them."

Holt, who previously served as host of TNN's "Fire on the Mountain" series, is a musician, storyteller and historian who is helping to preserve the Appalachian musical heritage.

In San Diego, Holt found the Deering Banjo Co., which is one of four places in the world that still make fine banjos. "Most of the craftsmen also play, and we got a little session going that I joined in," he said.

"Long Beach is celebrating its 100th anniversary as a city and I did an interesting musical piece. I played a 64-string dulcimer, which is made of spruce, in the cockpit of the Spruce Goose. It makes an interesting sound to play an instrument of the same wood as the room you're in." The Spruce Goose is the flying boat built by Howard Hughes in World War II, now on display in a Long Beach museum.

Holt then went to Claremont, Calif., to see David Lindley, a musician noted for unusual folk instruments.

"He plays the Hawaiian slide guitar and the saz, which is a Turkish instrument with a long neck and six strings," said Holt. "It gives a haunting sound. Lindley is a very tasteful musician who has mixed folk, country and rock. He recently was on the Trio album with Dolly Parton, Linda Ronstadt and Emmylou Harris."

Holt also talked in Phoenix to Marshall Trimble, who sings traditional cowboy songs. Another trip took Holt to Florida and Georgia, where he talked to a professional washtub player for Harry Belafonte and Pete Seeger, some Mayan Indians who use an instrument that takes five players, and an alligator trapper who has the ability to call alligators.

Holt has also been a musical goodwill ambassador for the U.S. Department of State. Frets magazine named him the "best old-time banjoist" and Esquire magazine picked him as one of its "men and women under 40 who are changing America." His newest album is "Reel and Rock" which features Doc Watson on guitar.

Eastwood Ends Term As Mayor

CARMEL, Calif. (AP) — Clint Eastwood has laid down his gavel for good after presiding over his last City Council meeting as mayor of Carmel — an event that made the day of some of his neighbors.

"It's kind of nice to have it all over with. We all enjoyed it, but the carnival's over now," said Clayton Anderson, one of six candidates vying to succeed the movie star.

Eastwood's ride into the political sunset will end the frequent lines of tourists outside council meetings, but the hard-bitten hero of "Dirty Harry," "Magnum Force" and countless westerns says he has no regrets.

"I wouldn't trade the last two years for anything," Eastwood said at Tuesday night's meeting. "I have always felt if we took our work seriously but didn't take ourselves seriously, we'd be a much happier community. I'll be out there sitting with you next time, and we'll all have some laughs with it."

Eastwood wished good luck to the mayoral candidates running in next week's election. His term expires in May, and he announced earlier this year that he wouldn't seek a second term.

Jazz Guitarist Shot By Intruder

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police searched today for two teen-age suspects in the shooting of Grammy Award-winning jazz guitarist Larry Carlton, who was wounded when he apparently surprised intruders at his Hollywood Hills home.

Carlton, 40, was in serious but stable condition today at St. Joseph Medical Center in Burbank after undergoing four hours of surgery, said nursing supervisor Debbie Fox.

Police say he was wounded in the neck Wednesday afternoon after he apparently encountered intruders in his hillside home in the exclusive Lake Hollywood area, 10 miles northwest of downtown. Detectives were looking for two teen-agers between the ages of 14 and 17.

"They were seen with a small German shepherd puppy," said police Detective Ron Ito. "We have no description of any vehicles. All we know is they fled on foot down the hill."

Carlton's secretary was working at an office in the home when the shooting occurred.

"She has no idea why it happened. We have no motive at this time," Ito said.

Carlton won a best pop instrumental performance Grammy this year for his version of the Doobie Brothers' "Minute By Minute," and shared the same award in 1981 with pianist Mike Post for their work on the "Hill Street Blues" theme.

The musician toured with the Fifth Dimension vocal group during the 1960s and was a member of the Jazz Crusaders during the early 1970s.

His most recent work is the "Discovery" album, released by MCA Records in last June.

Stars Set

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jack Lemmon and Dudley Moore have been set as the first stars for the second annual "American Comedy Awards" on ABC on May 17. The show will pay a special tribute to filmmaker Blake Edwards.

TV Break

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A television station is urging its viewers to take a 15-minute break from watching.

As part of its "For Kids' Sake" campaign, Pittsburgh's KDKA-TV will present a special half-hour edition of "Story Break" at 1 p.m. on Saturday, April 16. The program's hosts will read children's stories for the first 15 minutes, then a title slide will appear reading, "Right now, share a story with the child in your life. For kids' sake."

The station also plans to broadcast public service spots in place of local advertisements during the day.

It is all very well to know the basic percentages of the game. However, all of them have to be considered in relation to the play of any hand as a whole, where the main goal is to make or break the contract. For instance, consider that old bromide: "Eight ever, nine never." It's an accurate enough summary of the probability of playing a suit, providing that's your only concern.

In light of the vulnerability, we just give the nod to South's decision to preempt with four hearts. However, since the opponents could make at most eight tricks at a spade contract barring gifts from the defense, declarer had to bring home his contract to show any profit from his decision in the auction.

West led the top of his broken diamond sequence. Declarer won the ace and, in keeping with the odds, cashed the ace-king of trumps. Unfortunately, the queen did not drop. Declarer tried to recover by running clubs, but East ruffed the second club and shifted to a spade, and the defenders took three tricks in that suit to administer a one-trick set.

More important than just drawing trumps was to do so safely. Since declarer could afford to lose two spade tricks and a trump, he could have protected against the possibility of a 3-1 trump split.

At trick two, declarer should have led a trump from dummy and finessed the ten. At worst, that would have lost to the queen. The most the defenders then can do is to cash two spades. Thereafter, declarer can win any return, draw trumps, and take a discard, if necessary, on dummy's clubs. As the cards lie, the finesse succeeds and West follows suit, so declarer simply draws the last two trumps and claims all the tricks. Sometimes justice is done!
