POLICEMAN HELPS DRIVER — Officer M.R. Benton of the Greenville police assists Alice Reid of 218 King George Road, Greenville, after her vehicle plunged into the Tar River today at the Town Commons. Police said the car, which was headed west on First Street, swerved across the sidewalk near the Reade Street intersection and onto the Town Commons, then traveled through several clumps of small trees and across a wide expanse of grass before crashing through a guard rail and into the river. Officials at Pitt County Memorial Hospital said Mrs. Reid's condition was "still being evaluated" in the hospital's emergency department at noon. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis)

Pilot Denied Permission To Land Hijacked Plane

By ALEX EFTY
Associated Press Writer
NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — The pilot of a hijacked Kuwaiti jumbo jet with 55 people on board pleaded at gunpoint with the Beirut Airport control tower today to be allowed to land but was told he would be fired on if he tried.

"A gun is pointed to my head. I request landing permission to land to refuel," the captain of the Kuwait Airways Boeing 747 was overheard shouting through the jet's radio at 5:25 p.m. (11:25 a.m. EDT).

"We have been for 14 years under gunfire," an airport official replied, referring to Lebanon's civil war. "If you try to land by force, the plane will be fired on."

The jetliner left Mashhad airport in northeastern Iran at 2:28 p.m. (6:58 a.m. EDT) after the Arab hijackers threatened to blow it up. It was hijacked Tuesday on a flight from Bangkok to Kuwait.

According to sources monitoring radio traffic, a man speaking in Arabic with an east Lebanon accent came to the radio and asked that controllers put him in touch with Lebanese Public Works Minister Walid Jumblatt or Interior Minister Abdulla Rassi and saying he just wanted to refuel.

The blue-and-white plane could be seen from rooftops, overshooting Beirut airport during the contact with the Beirut tower. Earlier, the Lebanese controllers would not respond to the captains' calls.

The plane later was reported over international waters in the Mediterranean Sea, and the pilot said he had fuel for another 2½ hours.

Authorities in Cyprus denied the captain permission to land, airport sources in Larnaca said.

In Beirut, a control tower official told The Associated Press fire engines and passenger buses offecieve it," he said. He spoke on condition of anonymity.

Syrian troops, who control the airport, blocked all roads to the airport on Beirut's southern edge.

The gunmen — believed to number about six — released 57 passengers since Tuesday. One freed passenger described the hijackers as determined and "willing to die."

All the remaining hostages aboard the plane were believed to be Arabs, including more than 30 Kuwaitis, three of them members of the emirate's royal family. One passenger was believed to hold both U.S. and Egyptian passports.

The hijackers' main demand is freedom for 17 pro-Iranian terrorists (See HIJACKED, A-16)

Embassy Annex Burned; 5 Killed

By FREDDY CUEVAS
Associated Press Writer
TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Students stormed two U.S. Embassy annex buildings and set them ablaze before they were dispersed with bullets, beatings and tear gas. At least five demonstrators were killed and 10 wounded.

An Embassy spokesman reported extensive damage from Thursday night's attack, but said no U.S. citizens were injured.

Police said the crowd of more than 1,000 university students also set fire to about 25 automobiles belonging to embassy personnel that were parked near the annex complex.

The students were protesting the forced extradition this week of an alleged drug trafficker suspected of involvement in the killing of a U.S. drug agent. They also voiced anger at President Reagan's dispatch of additional American troops to Honduras last month.

Private Honduran guards posted at the embassy fired shots and lobbed tear gas grenades at the demonstrators from inside the main embassy building across the street from the annex buildings, said police sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

But Michael O'Brien, the Embassy spokesman, said neither U.S. Marine guards nor Honduran guards stationed at the embassy complex took violent action against the protesters. He said Honduran riot police had fired on the crowd.

Police identified the dead as Betty Molina, Alberto Pineda, Almenear Aguerro, Rolando Herrazo and Henry Mencitta.

They said the four men were uni-

Nofziger Gets 90-Days

By JAMES ROWLEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lyn Nofziger, President Reagan's former political director, was sentenced to 90 days in prison today and fined $30,000 for illegally lobbying administration officials after he left the White House.

U.S. District Judge Thomas Flannery said Nofziger could remain free pending an appeal of his three felony convictions of contacting former colleagues on behalf of private clients within a year of leaving President Reagan's staff.

Nofziger could have been sentenced to two years on each of the three counts. $30,000 was the maximum cumulative fine the judge could have assessed.

Flannery imposed a complicated sentence of two to eight months' incarceration for each of the counts but then suspended all but 30 days of each of the sentences so that Nofziger will have to serve only 90 days if his appeal is denied.

The judge rejected the defense plea that Nofziger be sentenced only to a short period of unsupervised probation.

Before he was sentenced, Nofziger stood before the judge and said he wanted to reiterate "my belief that despite my conviction I have done nothing ethically, morally or legally wrong."

"I am an honorable man," Nofziger told the judge. "Like other honorable people, I have gone through life making mistakes, doing stupid things. I doubt that there is a person in this room who hasn't. But I am not a criminal and I think the record of my life will bear out that statement."

Flannery ordered Nofziger to pay the $30,000 fine within 30 days.

The judge also ordered that after his imprisonment Nofziger be placed on two years' probation. The judge agreed to a defense request that Nofziger be sent to a minimum-security federal prison.

Before he was sentenced, Nofziger told the judge, "I know there are those in this courtroom who believe that I should be sent to prison unless I come here today and plead guilt, express remorse and ask forgiveness."

But, he added, "I cannot do that if I am to be true to myself and to those hundreds of fine people all over the country who have supported me in recent months because they believe I am an honorable man."

Residents Offer Suggestions On Park System Priorities

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

A number of Greenville area residents took the opportunity to tell the state what their priorities for the state park system are at a public meeting held by the N.C. Division of Parks and Recreation here Thursday night.

The suggestions ranged from more money for maintenance, land acquisition and park rangers, to more parks, improved and expanded services and higher user fees.

The session was one of six workshops scheduled across the state to collect views and information from the public on the needs for recreation resources in the state park system and on how those needs should be met.

The information will be used to develop a systemwide plan for state parks by the end of this year.

The North Carolina park system was established in 1915 when Mount Mitchell — at 6,684 feet above sea level the highest peak east of the Mississippi River — was designated as the first state park.

Since then, the system has grown to about 125,000 acres of land and water in 53 management units.

But only 32 of the system's management units are developed and permanently staffed to accommodate public use, because of limited funding.

The 1987 General Assembly passed the State Parks Act, which calls for unified plans to evaluate existing parks to determine their significance, identify duplications and deficiencies, describe resources and current uses and identify anticipated trends in usage and detail what impacts these trends will have on the system.

North Carolina now ranks 50th in the nation in per capita spending for operation and maintenance of its state park system at 99 cents per citizen. The average in the southeast is $3.20, while the national average is $4.09 per resident.

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Paul Hardin, a North Carolina native who has developed a tough reputation in athletics at the college level, was unanimously elected by the UNC Board of Governors today as the new chancellor of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The 56-year-old Hardin is currently president of Drew University in New Jersey. He succeeds Christopher Fordham III, who will retire on June 30.

UNC System President C.D. Spangler Jr. said the appointment of Hardin, who also served as president at Wofford College in Spartanburg, S.C., and Southern Methodist University in Dallas, marks "one of those rare occasions where the man, the position and the times are superbly suited to each other."

In a brief statement to the Board of Governors at its meeting in Chapel Hill this morning, Hardin said, "It is literally impossible for Barbara (Hardin's wife) and me to express how thrilled we are." He thanked the board for the "great honor you have given me."

Hardin's reputation in athletics may be tested immediately when he officially assumes his new role. As he inherits the job from Fordham, he comes at a time when UNC-CH's athletic program has been criticized in light of the resignation of football coach Dick Crum, the money used by the Educational Foundation to buy out Crum's contract and the overall relationship between athletics and academics in Chapel Hill.

PAUL HARDIN

At SMU, a group of trustees forced Hardin to resign after he exposed illegal payments to some athletes. The school was placed on the NCAA's so-called death penalty, canceling the football season for 1987 and 1988.

"Everybody is talking about athletics and academics and how the two should be combined," said Brian D. Bailey, former UNC-CH student body president and a member of the search committee. "We've got to stop trying to be Oklahoma on the weekends and Harvard during the week."

Before his election became official, UNC-CH athletic officials said they welcomed Hardin's tenure.

"I have tremendous respect for the stance of integrity that he took with respect to athletics at SMU," said Athletic Director John Swofford. "I think that his feelings about athletics are first and foremost on the integrity of the program, and I think that's what all of us want."

Moyer G. Smith, executive vice president of the Educational Foundation, or the Rams' Club, said he expected Hardin would be objective in dealing with the organization.

Board Resolution Backs 264 Work

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville City Council unanimously adopted a resolution Thursday recommending the completion of U.S. 264 as the highest road improvement priority in Pitt County.

The resolution, approved at a council workshop session and scheduled to be presented to the Department of Transportation later this month, also includes in order of priority, 10 other road improvement projects planned for the county.

In addition, the resolution contains recommended priorities regarding public transportation and placement of bicycle right-of-ways.

According to City Manager Greg Knowles, the resolution will be submitted to the DOT at a public hearing scheduled for April 13 at 2 p.m. at the County Office Complex in Snow Hill, 229 King Gold Blvd.

Knowles said the DOT will consider the resolution of priorities in formulating the state's Transportation Improvement Plan, a 10-year projected road improvement outlook.

"This is what we consider to be the top priorities based on the city's future growth as we see it," Knowles said. "This doesn't mean the state will fund any of the projects, but based on past practice, the state has, when funds are available, funded sections or portions of these requests."

Knowles said that generally, 1 mile of a five-lane road costs approximately $1 million. Consequently the dollar costs associated with Greenville's recommended road improvement projects will be high, Knowles said. Because the state has a finite budget for these projects, he said the state will "spread the money around," completing sections and portions of projects at a time.

"I think we will see incremental changes in our thoroughfare construction, a little piece here and a little piece there. Maybe in 10 years you're going to see all of it done," Knowles said.

In addition to the council, the Pitt County Commissioners earlier this week adopted a similar resolution endorsing several highway improvement projects.

"Generally speaking, these priorities are almost exactly in the same order as how the county adopted them," Knowles said.

Greenville Mayor Ed Carter said the council's unanimous passage of road improvement priorities is an indication of its seriousness in dealing with the city's increasing transportation problems.

"We realize we have to improve the traffic situation that exists in this community and we know it's going to take time. We're not going to be able to do it in one year and so forth but we certainly want to be responsible for establishing meaningful priorities and making sure that we have available funds to use in conjunction with

Skinner To Speak

A specialist on production and manufacturing will speak at East Carolina University Tuesday.

Dr. C. Wickham Skinner, retired Harvard Business School professor, will be the speaker for the School of Business Beta Gamma Sigma Distinguished Lecturer Series. His topic, "Can America Compete?" will be presented at 3 p.m. in the Jenkins (School of Art) Auditorium.

Skinner predicted over 20 years ago that America faced decline in the world marketplace. He first warned of shortcomings in U.S. manufacturing in the early 1960's and his views gained national attention in a 1966 Harvard Business Review article that anticipated America's competitive decline of the 1970s and 1980s. His subsequent work has focused on the lack of a coherent manufacturing strategy in the U.S. and resultant decreases in U.S. market share and manufacturing competitiveness.

Skinner is the author or co-author of eight books. His most recent, published in 1985, is "Manufacturing: The Formidable Competitive Weapon," a sequel to his 1979 book, "Manufacturing in the Corporate Strategy."

Beta Gamma Sigma is the national scholastic honor society in higher education for business.

Safety At Olympics In Seoul Discussed

Safety for athletes and travelers attending the 1988 Olympic Games in Seoul, South Korea will be unpredictable at best, an expert on Korean politics told an audience at East Carolina University Thursday.

"I'm really concerned about security for the Olympic Games," said Dr. Han Shick Park, a political scientist at the University of Georgia.

"It will be the largest sporting event in history with 165 countries attending," Park said. "But at no time in the history of the Olympics has there been an atmosphere of uncertainty, anxiety and fear of terrorism as there is in these games," he said.

Park, who has studied Korean politics and has traveled and taught in Korea, said the problem is that North Korea views the economic success and limited democracy of South Korea with a feeling of fear and desperation. He said the strong sense of ideology that supports political sovereignty and self-reliance in the north is threatened by the success of South Korea. He said the Olympic Games which are getting the support of China, Russia and the other Soviet Bloc nations is putting North Korea deeper into a corner with no room for escape.

"They feel no alternative but to scream and strike out," Park said.

Park cited the airborne explosion of a South Korean jetliner last year killing 115 civilians. He said there is little doubt that the tragedy was planned by the North Koreans.

"The question is will they do such terrorist acts again?" he said.

"I think the answer is somewhat affirmative," said Park. "I hope things will be safe but things will not be that rosy," he said.

Park made his presentation, "Security for the Olympiad and Inter-Korea Relations," at the 14th ECU Symposium on Asia. He was one of three speakers that included Thomas Dunlop, director of the Office of Korean Affairs at the Department of State and Dr. Donald S. MacDonald, a professor of Korean Studies at the School of Foreign Service at Georgetown University.

The symposium is sponsored by the Asian Studies Committee at ECU and the Office of International Studies.

Taft Seeking Pages

Sen. Tom Taft of Greenville is looking for students between the ages of 14 and 18 to serve as pages during the short session of the General Assembly which will convene June 2.

In a letter to The Daily Reflector earlier this week, Taft said, "I have had only one application for pages for the short session."

"I would appreciate your ... asking any students 14 to 18 years of age to apply to me," if they are interested, Taft said.

But other resident Pitt legislators — Sen. Bob Martin and Reps. Ed Warren and Walter Jones Jr. — say they have a number of students who have expressed interest in being pages, more, in fact, than can possibly serve during the coming session.

Warren said pages are "apportioned according to the time we are up there."

During the regular session, each member of the General Assembly may have "six, possibly seven" Jones said.

But during the short session this year, Jones, Martin and Warren said, "I have nine children already" on a waiting list.

"I have no shortage," Jones said, "I have nine children already" on a waiting list.

Warren said he has a list of more than a dozen "that have asked."

Martin said his list includes several from Wilson and Martin counties, although none from Pitt.

"It's a great experience for them," according to Warren.

Pages serve one week and are paid $100 for their service. While they have to provide their own transportation to and from Raleigh, they are housed with families in the Raleigh area.

BUYING TIME!

Once you've decided to buy a home, how much time will you need? How much time should you allow from the day of your decision to buy a home until moving day?

If you will call and ask me, I will help you build a homebuying timetable tailored to fit your family's needs. On the other hand, you might want to do it yourself.

If so, here are some ideas that might help. First, allow time to be qualified by a lender to determine the maximum loan for which you might qualify. This step is important since it lets you know ahead of time what price homes to include in your search.

Next, determine how much time you plan to devote to locating and inspecting homes which suit your needs. This includes finding suitable homes, making appointments, and inspecting the homes. Once you've seen a variety of homes, decide how much time you will allow yourself to make a decision and prepare a written offer to purchase the home.

Next, add in the time necessary to make your loan application, get credit reports and employment verifications, secure an appraisal and complete the necessary paperwork.

Finally, add in the time needed by the lender or attorney to examine the title and prepare the deed. Add up the total number of days, then count backwards from your desired moving date. Or...just give me a call.

I'll be happy to help you through this process and relieve some of your home-buying jitters. Please call me at 756-2121 or 756-2230.

Board Approves Highway Projects

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Board of Transportation today approved highway contracts for resurfacing more than 700 miles of primary and secondary highways across the state.

The contracts are part of a $31.9 million package of highway improvements that were on the board's April 8 agenda. The board, at a meeting on Concord, approved contracts for construction of a rest area on U.S. 17 north of South Mills in Camden County, construction of a railroad bridge to carry the tracks of the Duke University Railroad over a section of the East-West Expressway in Durham, and a widening of a 10.4-mile section of U.S. 264 north of Englehard on Hyde County.

Contracts were considered for 42 counties. At least 40 projects were under review by the board.

proved was for $1,035,633 for six sections of primary roads and four sections of secondary roads in Alamance, Caswell, Rockingham and Guilford counties.

The board rejected a bid offered by Outer Banks Contractors for the widening and resurfacing of secondary roads 1206 and 1208 between U.S. 158 and State Road 1210 south of Kitty Hawk. The company's bid came in 19.5 percent higher than state estimates, and more than 9 percent higher than a ceiling the board places on bids that are more than official estimates.

In addition to the highway projects approved, the board authorized funding for a wide variety of smaller projects such as the installation of traffic signals and stop signs, the widening of intersections and the paving of secondary roads.

No Hasty Changes
For School Lines

The Pitt County Board of Education should hold the line. It should not capriciously alter school attendance lines.

Hasty revision of district boundaries could hurt the recently-consolidated system more than it helps. That approach would not provide a long-term solution to problems of racial balance and classroom overcrowding. Instead, it might set a precedent of changing school district lines in response to each inadequacy that arises.

The board should seek facts and utilize this data to reach long-range problems.

Adjustments made barely a year ago have not had an opportunity to work. Board members should give these revisions a chance to either prove effective or ineffective before implementing more changes. If they aren't working after an appropriate interval, then they can be revised.

Redrawing attendance lines is necessary in a rapidly-growing school system like Pitt. The practice is an effective tool for achieving racial balance and correcting overcrowding and underuse. It should be used reasonably to address these problems.

But one year is scarcely time to judge the impact of past changes, especially with the liberal grandfathering clause the board of education allowed. Now, the board should take care not to obliterate the progress of past actions by hastily revising school district lines.

Granted, the board will have to address the uneven racial balance at Wintergreen School. A 70 percent white, 30 percent black student population is not acceptable. But it is the board's responsibility to base decisions on cumulative facts — especially when discussing closing schools and busing kids.

Attendance line changes, although they are essential, are disruptive to both schools and the children they educate. Flexibility is important to providing quality instruction; changing district lines is the key to flexibility. But it is possible to negate the purpose of this technique by overusing it.

The effects of constantly-changing attendance lines could hurt the school system. A child could switch schools — for perfectly sound reasons — until the quality of the education he or she receives is diminished. Even one instance of impairment hurts, but multiply that loss by the number of kids affected, and it is clear constant flux is damaging.

With that in mind, the board should take care to make changes only if absolutely necessary. The actions of the past should not be dismantled without sufficient evidence of inadequacy.

Who says bipartisan foreign policy is a thing of the past? Almost everyone in Washington is in favor of U.S. intervention to overthrow the de facto government of Panamanian strongman Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

Dovish Democrats, including Sen. John Kerry, Rep. Edward Boland and the Rev. Jesse Jackson, have for years denounced the administration's Nicaragua policy as interventionist. Now those same people support the efforts of President Reagan to topple the Noriega dictatorship. Ingeed, many of our nation's leading non-interventionists now criticize the administration for not acting quickly enough, or going far enough, to remove Noriega from power.

The left's flip-flop on the issue of interventionism stems in part from Noriega's indictment in February by two federal grand juries on charges of drug trafficking and money laundering. It is very important these days for politicians to look tough on drugs; demanding Noriega's ouster is an easy way to do it.

Noriega, who has been cozy with both Fidel Castro of Cuba and the Sandinistas, is not a bona fide fascist. Genuine fascist rulers have been scarce in the world for a long time. But Noriega is a corrupt military dictator and, unlike his dictatorial predecessor, Gen. Omar Torrijos, Noriega has failed to cloak his rule in the mantle of ideological leftism or anti-gringoism. Many of those in Congress who now seek to oust Noriega did not call for the removal of Torrijos and were among the chief backers of the 1978 treaty that promised to turn over complete control of the Panama Canal to Torrijos or his successors by Jan. 1, 2000.

Of course, I, too, want to see Noriega out as soon as possible. His dictatorship has become hateful to the vast majority of Panamanians, making for a highly unstable situation that imperils the security of the entire region. All the evidence suggests that his involvement in drug trafficking has made him beholden to both Castro and to the Medellin Cartel, the multibillion-dollar international drug syndicate responsible for murdering 22 high-ranking officials and hundreds of lesser officeholders in neighboring Colombia during the past three years.

From the standpoint of American and, indeed, Western security, it is intolerable that a man such as Noriega should one day take charge of the Panama Canal.

Yet the supreme irony in the whole situation is that the Panama Canal treaty was negotiated precisely so that the United States would not be open to the charge of interventionism in Panamanian affairs. Now Washington is obliged to intervene on behalf of Panama's democratic opposition precisely because the treaty threatens to transfer ownership of the canal to a regime in league with the criminal underworld and indebted to a strategic adversary of the United States.

Fortunately for the United States, there is responsible democratic opposition in Panama. Opposition parties and groups are united behind the U.S.-recognized government of national reconciliation headed by President Eric Arturo Delvalle. They not only welcome the economic and diplomatic pressures now being exerted by the Reagan administration to remove Noriega from power; many of them, including Mariella Delvalle, the president's wife, and Juan Sosa, Panama's ambassador to Washington, urge that the United States prepare itself to intervene militarily should Noriega refuse to step down.

Washington, however, has no wish to use military force in Panama, although this option should never be ruled out. Our quarrel is with Noriega, not with the 16,000-man Panama Defense Force and still less with the Panamanian people. What is more, the Reagan administration's policy of economic and diplomatic pressure appears to be working.

What the administration and Congress must ponder now is what should be done when Noriega finally goes.

A few suggestions:

- After having helped precipitate a paralyzing financial crisis in Panama, the United States must provide large amounts of economic assistance to reactivate the country's banking industry, restore investor confidence and provide immediate welfare benefits to Panama's poorer citizens, many of whom are now entirely dependent for their survival on the food furnished by relief organizations. Panama's democratic opposition leaders are requesting $400 million in post-Noriega relief. This is not an unreasonable amount.

- Offer to resume military assistance to the Panama Defense Force on condition that it take positive steps to remove itself from politics and adopt the professionalism required of a force entrusted with the future defense of the Panama Canal.

- Work with the government of national reconciliation to revise Panama's bank secrecy laws that encourage the use of Panamanian banks and corporations for illegal drug money laundering schemes.

Above all, we in Congress should be patient and firm and continue to give President Reagan the support he needs to see the Panama crisis through to a peaceful and democratic resolution.

Social Unrest

New Phenomenon

Social unrest is virtually unknown in the Soviet Union, probably because too many citizens still recall what happened to millions who opposed the Communist rule.

In this era of Glasnost, however, some of the discontent which grips the diverse people of the Soviet Union was certain to surface. Thus it is that the Armenians began demonstrations that led to violence concerning their plight.

The response wasn't that of the Stalin era when dissidents were shipped off to Siberia and often killed. The demonstrations were seen by some in the Politburo as a challenge to the strict rules of Communist society and thus a threat to that society. Soon Soviet troops and helicopters were patrolling the Armenian capital. Regulations were issued prohibiting public meetings that are not officially approved.

The Politburo was more conciliatory than it might have been in the past, however. Plans for new housing, roads, social services and schools were announced for an area where Armenians comprise a majority of the population. More Armenian language books and television were promised. The Armenians of the area had demanded that it be annexed into the Armenian republic, a demand Moscow refused.

Perhaps it is not so significant that democracy-style demonstrations — even violent demonstrations — can occur in the Soviet Union. Groundswell opposition is hard to control and even harder to overrule. It is significant, however, that the Kremlin is conciliatory in attempting to settle social unrest which has not previously been tolerated. It is also remarkable that the western world even knows about it.

Lazy Thinking On Drugs

WASHINGTON — Why are cocaine and heroin illegal while alcohol and tobacco are legal?

- Because cocaine and heroin are more addictive.

- Because cocaine and heroin cause more violent behavior.

- Because America wants to prevent a cocaine-heroin scourge.

And the answer is: All of the above — and they are all wrong.

Yet, as wrong as they are, the above reasons are generally accepted as to why a distinction should be made between alcohol and tobacco on the one hand and illicit substances on the other. That these reasons stand in the face of contradictory facts is just an indicator of how lazy our minds have become when confronting the drug problem in this country.

This short test was based on insights provided by Ethan A. Nadelmann, an assistant professor of politics and public affairs at Princeton University, from an article in the latest Foreign Policy magazine titled "U.S. Drug Policy: A Bad Export."

What this society has done, he says, is to make an essentially arbitrary judgment about which "high" is going to be allowed and which is not. The decision had nothing to do with relative safety of the drugs or morality. It was simply the "preference" of the majority for certain drugs and a certain "prejudice" against others.

Nadelmann makes a case that cocaine and heroin are safer than alcohol and tobacco, citing the fact that in 1985 fewer than 3,500 deaths were caused by the first two drugs while alcohol and tobacco cause nearly a half-million deaths every year.

But to justify legalizing some drugs — even the worst of them — while condemning the others, Nadelmann says it was necessary for us to fool ourselves.

"Many Americans make the fallacious assumption that the government would not criminalize certain (drugs) if they were not in fact dangerous," he writes. "Then they jump to the conclusion that any use of those substances is a form of abuse. The government, in its efforts to discourage people from using illicit drugs, has encouraged and perpetuated these misconceptions not just in its rhetoric but also in its purportedly educational materials."

Contradictions in accepting one kind of drug over another also resulted in the freezing of our national resolve to deal with the drug problem, he contends. Condoning drugs known to do the most damage while condemning those about which little is known simply made a mockery of all drug laws.

The result is that at least 30 million people regularly break those laws, he says.

"The most unfortunate victims of the drug prohibition policies have been the law-abiding residents of America's ghetto," Nadelmann writes. Because of current antidrug policies, many black areas have become battlegrounds where it is the "aggressive, gun-toting drug dealers who upset residents far more than the addicts nodding in doorways."

He adds that because of increasingly harsh criminal penalties imposed on adult drug dealers, many pushers have turned to widespread recruitment of juveniles as drug traffickers.

"Where once children started dealing drugs only after they had been using them for a few years, today the sequence is often reversed," he says. "Many children start to use illegal drugs now only after they have worked for older drug dealers for a while."

During a recent interview about his article, which I recommend to those who sponsor drug forums and seminars, Nadelmann pointed out that in most black areas "antidrug laws," which have done nothing to reduce the availability of drugs, also have nothing to do with people not using drugs. People choose not to use.

He suggests that now is the time to examine whether current antidrug policies are causing more harm than good.

Robeson Situation Likely A Political Wash

Analysis

RALEIGH (AP) — One almost could hear the sighs of relief from the Statehouse, the Capitol and various campaign headquarters as word surfaced of a compromise in the Robeson County judgeship dispute.

Although Democrats and Republicans tried to cast the developments in a favorable light for their respective gubernatorial candidates, the consensus in political circles appears to be that neither Gov. Jim Martin nor Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan gained from the episode at the other's expense — and that both could have fared worse.

"Looks like a wash to me," said Sen. R.P. "Bo" Thomas, D-Henderson.

The situation's potential impact on the gubernatorial race was a virtually unmentionable topic throughout the 17-day ordeal that began with Indian lawyer Julian Pierce's murder and ended when Jordan, local legislators and Pierce supporters hammered out a compromise Monday.

Under the deal, Pierce loyalists abandoned their call for a special legislative session to reopen filing for the Superior Court judgeship for which he was running when he died. Jordan and the lawmakers agreed to push for creation of another judgeship in Robeson County.

Martin promised to appoint a minority lawyer, probably an Indian, to the judgeship and refrained from grumbling about being kept in the dark about the negotiations until they were finished.

On Tuesday, Jordan and Democratic leaders said the resolution of the crisis demonstrated his leadership abilities. Most didn't openly criticize Martin's handling of the matter but implied he was indecisive. Ken Eudy, the Democratic executive director, said Martin had tried to minimize political risk by getting Democrats to advise him on the special session.

Jack Hawke, the state GOP chairman, retorted that Jordan's intervention was a "sad" attempt to grab headlines and that Martin's performance had been "masterful."

Some Democratic insiders said privately their party — and Jordan in particular — had dodged a bullet. They said a special session, which Martin acknowledged he'd been leaning toward ordering, could have proven disastrous.

Reopening the election filing period would have been a controversial proposal even in the Democrat-dominated Legislature and might have failed. This would have alienated minority voters in Robeson County and elsewhere whose help Democrats need in the November election.

Thomas said he probably would have voted against reopening the Robeson judicial filing period. He said District Attorney Joe Freeman Britt, a white who is unpopular with many of Robeson's blacks and Indians, had a just claim to the nomination.

"It seems to me like a lot of these people who don't like Britt are just mad because ... he does his job," Thomas said.

Even if Jordan could have persuaded the Senate to change the law, it was far from certain the House would go along. Leaders of the two chambers feuded often in 1987 with Jordan caught in the middle. A similar clash this year would be a major embarrassment for Jordan and enable Martin to strike an above-the-battle posture.

"The risk was relatively low for Martin," a Democratic strategist said.

Jordan's key role in the negotiations was a much-needed success story. It comes in the wake of news reports about his description of eastern North Carolinians as "rednecks" and complaints of some veteran Democrats that Jordan's campaign was in a slump, with his strategists lacking experience and savvy.

It also bolsters the image he's trying to cultivate as a problem-solver, someone who isn't flashy but gets things done quietly, behind the scenes.

Meanwhile, although Martin missed an opportunity to put Democrats on the hot seat — which aides insist wasn't his intention anyway — he hardly comes out a loser.

Indian leaders in Robeson County have praised him and one even noted that Martin had mentioned the possibility of creating a judgeship last week, although he didn't pursue the idea.

He can't claim credit for the settlement but did nothing to hinder it and quickly gave it his blessing, concealing any displeasure he might have felt over being cut out of the talks.

Thus, the issue probably will have faded from most voters' minds by November. Jordan may have scored points in Robeson County but it's Democrat territory anyway.

Trade Predicament Not Recognized

Last week's accord allowing U.S. construction firms to compete for certain public-works projects in Japan shows what can be accomplished when the U.S. government starts taking trade policy as seriously as it takes foreign and defense policy.

Whether U.S. firms actually gain access to anything like the $3 billion of business that Japanese construction companies enjoy over here will depend on both the aggressiveness of American companies, and, as Deputy Trade Representative Michael B. Smith remarked, "on the good will of the Japanese to make the procedures work."

But further progress in removing trade barriers and unfair practices will depend far more on the willingness of our government to treat trade matters as priority concerns than on the passage of the trade bill that is emerging from Congress.

The earlier history of the construction dispute is an excellent example of how trade and economic concerns are taken for granted in U.S. policymaking. When Japanese Prime Minister Takeshita visited here in January, the day after his arrival, a "senior government official," later identified as the assistant secretary of state for far eastern affairs, stated that Mr. Takeshita's construction proposal "will meet what we want for opening the Japanese market to U.S. bidders."

Less than a day later, the president's trade representative, Clayton Yeutter, sharply criticized the Takeshita proposal, saying that it contained no firm commitments from the Japanese and, indeed, offered no specific details at all. A not atypical industry reaction came from one executive who commented, "Why should the State Department upset us? They represent the Japanese. They are the enemy for us just as the Japanese are."

Dealing with this and other trade disputes conflicts with the traditional geopolitical concerns that dominate State Department thinking. Trade issues are seen as a nuisance factor. A major nuisance, perhaps, but a nuisance nonetheless.

During the Takeshita visit, the State Department sought to emphasize the increased Japanese contributions to mutual defense-an agreeable emphasis for the Japanese who, whenever trade disputes have heated up, have never been shy to play the "strategic card." Fortunately, in this instance, U.S. resolve did not end with a pleasant visit by a head of state.

Trade officials, of course, contend that trade and economic issues are part and parcel of our larger foreign policy interests. Their pursuit of a more "aggressive" trade policy to open markets to U.S. companies — barred as much or more by custom and practice than by identifiable trade barriers — is frustrated, however, by the fact that trade policy is generally relegated to department officials who have little role in the development of broader U.S. strategic or foreign policy.

This problem is compounded by the reward system of the State Department, which is so heavily weighted toward promoting political officers that there are few senior department officials with either an economic background or interest.

A former colleague and senior State Department official said it better: "Sometimes I think it's no more complicated than the fact that within this building (State) it's considered unseemly for a great power like the United States to go around begging or demanding other countries to open their markets."

But if our foreign policies fail to address our economic interests, our national-security policymaking arrogantly ignores them. It is not uncommon for the patriotism of those who even raise economic issues to be questioned.

I am talking specifically about export controls—restrictions or licensing requirements on exports of products and technologies which, although commercial in nature, may confer military benefit on the Soviet Union and other adversaries.

When the Reagan administration first took office, senior national-security officials were determined, quite correctly, to tighten up the export-control regime. They accomplished this quickly but with little input from other departments, including State and Commerce, or the business community.

New controls proliferated, old ones were strengthened and processing times for obtaining a license lengthened dramatically — all with slight regard to the economic impact of these changes, or even a realistic assessment that our national-security objectives could, in fact, be attained by the tightening.

The Defense Department succeeded in stifling most legitimate criticism by framing the debate as a simple choice between national security and corporate profits or "greed." Few businessmen are willing to run the risk of being labelled "soft" on national security.

A different perspective did not emerge until February 1987 when a National Academy of Sciences blue-ribbon panel on export controls, comprised primarily of former top defense and intelligence officials, concluded that certain controls — without actually improving national security—were unnecessarily costing U.S. businesses more than $9 billion a year in sales to western destinations.

Moreover, the controls had thwarted research and development in some cutting-edge technologies and created serious frictions with our allies. (During my tenure as the acting assistant secretary of commerce for trade administration, the single most controversial bilateral issue with almost all our NATO allies was the extraterritorial application of U.S. export controls.)

What the report did not note was the anachronistic arrogance driving the export-control regime, the false belief that this country is still the only developer and repository of leading-edge technologies, so that it can unilaterally prevent the Soviets from obtaining that technology.

In any case, despite the prestige and thoroughness of the academy panel, a senior Defense official promptly dismissed the report as "a bunch of businessmen seeking to feather their nest."

William Archey, international vice president of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, was formerly acting assistant secretary for trade administration in the Reagan administration.

Durham Lawyer One Of 12 Charged In Drug Ring

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
Associated Press Writer
DURHAM (AP) — Authorities say they have broken up a family-run drug ring that involved millions of dollars of cocaine funneled through Durham, New York and Miami.

Among the dozen people charged Thursday with distribution or conspiracy to distribute the cocaine were a Durham lawyer and four members of a Durham family. Four others indicted by a federal grand jury are still being sought.

Paul Daly, North Carolina special agent in charge for the FBI, told a news conference the conspiracy consisted primarily of family members who occupied the top positions in the so-called organization. Those family members operated a clothing store and a limousine service as a cover for their activities, he said.

"If you're going to generate money from narcotics, you have to have a way of showing you earned it. You just don't come up with the kinds of money you're talking about," he said.

Daly said investigators believed that George Royster, 46, who was arrested Thursday in New York, was the "kingpin" of the ring. He said Royster and three other members of his family in Durham — Charlestine Royster, 34; Fred Lewis Royster, 39; and Winston Lewis Royster, 27 — all held "main positions of authority" in the ring.

Authorities could not describe the family relationships of the Roysters. Among the 11 people arrested in Durham was lawyer Timothy Oates, 37. He was charged with one count of conspiracy to distribute cocaine and two counts of obstruction of justice. Authorities would not elaborate on his connection with the case.

Petition To Remove Sheriff Filed In Columbus County

WHITEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The Columbus County district attorney has asked a judge to remove Sheriff William Rhodes from office after Rhodes pleaded guilty to obstructing justice and attempting to obstruct justice.

In addition to the guilty pleas entered last month, a petition for Rhodes' removal filed Thursday also accuses the sheriff of other incidents, including unauthorized early release of inmates from the jail and two instances of improper conduct with young women.

"Some of these allegations I knew nothing about and were done by some of my employees. It's nothing, just human errors," said Rhodes, who was first elected sheriff in 1982 and again in 1986. "I think the judge will be fair about it."

"There are some political implications involved in this," said Edward Williamson of Whiteville, Rhodes' attorney. "The sheriff has had a little group of folks on his case, so to speak, since before he was even elected. He's had this to contend with ever since he's been sheriff."

"Actually, we're sort of relieved to finally have this out in the open where we can deal with it," Williamson said.

The petition, filed in Columbus County Superior Court by District Attorney Michael Easley, was delivered to the court by Bill Dowdy, a State Bureau of Investigation agent.

Dowdy said the petition would probably be heard the week of April 25.

Easley was out of town and could not be reached for comment, but Dowdy said he did not expect the petition, which alleges improprieties dating back to 1984, to result in additional criminal charges.

"This is the result of three different investigations we've done at the request of the district attorney's office," Dowdy said. "The first one was in June of 1986. It was initiated by complaints about improprieties in the housing of inmates at the Columbus County Jail."

Rhodes received a suspended sentence and a $1,000 fine after pleading guilty to warning two private clubs about raids by state alcohol agents. He had initially pleaded not guilty to the two misdemeanors, but later changed his plea.

The petition also charges that Rhodes released an inmate without authorization, reduced a charge of drunk and disorderly in the case of a man who helped Rhodes during the sheriff's campaign for election and seizing an undisclosed amount of money under the auspices of law enforcement from local businesses. Rhodes then ordered that the money be disposed of and not be held as evidence at the sheriff's department.

In the petition, Rhodes is accused of: — stopping a 22-year-old woman in September for investigative purposes, then driving her in his car down a secondary road in the county where he assaulted her by kissing her on the lips and neck and placing his hand on her leg.

— approaching a 15-year-old girl on the grounds of a local country club, embracing and kissing her. The petition says that when the girl pulled away, Rhodes allegedly told her, "Don't worry, your daddy didn't see it."

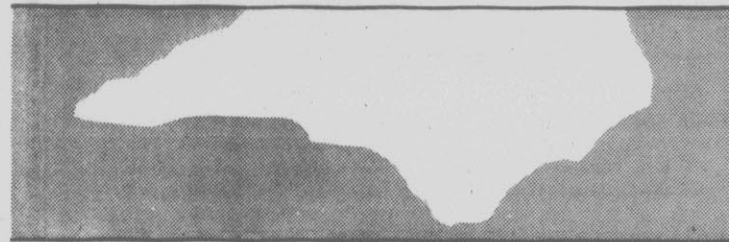

— declining to admit into the county jail to a man who had been convicted of driving while impaired and sentenced to seven days behind bars. The man repeatedly reported to the jail but was never admitted, although jail records say he served seven days from April 1, 1986 to April 7, 1986, the petition says.

— ordering deputies to take a jail inmate home several times and leave him unattended for about two hours. At the time, the inmate was serving a six-month sentence on a six-count larceny conviction.

Flag Replaced

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A University of North Carolina fraternity has replaced the controversial Rebel battle flag with the more obscure Confederate national flag for its annual "Old South" celebration.

"In light of recent bad publicity about the flag, this year we opted to fly the Confederate national flag," said Cutter D. Davis Jr., a junior from Charlotte and president of the Kappa Alpha fraternity.

The celebration is held each year and features a costume ball at which men wear Confederate uniforms and women don hoop skirts.

But this year, members at the fraternity chose to hang the Confederate national flag on the front of the white-columned fraternity house.

Davis said the less familiar national flag better represented the fraternity's intentions. "Our heritage is in the South," he said.

The Army also charged Gray with raping, robbing and attempting to kill another soldier on Jan. 3, 1987, and with stealing a .22-caliber pistol and a videocassette recorder from a Fairlane Acres Mobile Home City trailer.

Gray, born in Cochran, Ga. and who moved to Miami at age 3, has already been sentenced to eight life terms in prison after pleading guilty in civilian court to raping and killing two other Fayetteville women. He would have to serve at least 60 years on his civilian convictions before being eligible for parole.

Guilty Verdict

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — Army Spec. 4 Ronald Adrin Gray has been found guilty of all 14 charges against him in his Fort Bragg court-martial, including murder of two women and the rape of another.

The military jury today is considering whether Gray should be given the death penalty.

The court panel reached its verdict Thursday after more than nine hours of deliberations over two days. Col. Oren E. Oeschger, the foreman, read the verdicts to a standing-room-only crowd of about 50 spectators in the Staff Judge Advocate Building. The all-male panel consisted of three of-

Victims Buried

EDNEYVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A pall bearer who was shot and killed as he tried to help other shooting victims in a church parking lot Easter Sunday has been buried.

Russell Scott Bowles, 25, was one of three people killed when a man opened fire as mourners arrived at Mountain Home Baptist Church for a funeral. Bowles was buried Thursday a few miles away, at Calvary Episcopal Church in Fletcher.

Two other victims — Wilford Owensby and his wife, Ponnelle, Bowles' aunt and uncle — were buried Wednesday in private graveside rites in Skyland.

one party was telling the other one he can't understand what happened to him," Daly said. "The other party suggested 'Did it ever occur to you that your phone is being tapped?' That was the end of any good conversation."

"It's big business and what we have to do is raise the cost of that business," Hampton said.

Daly said the conspiracy was broken with the aid of electronic surveillance.

North Carolina law does not permit use of wiretaps by its law enforcement officers. Federal officials may use wiretaps in any state with court approval, Daly said.

"If you're going to reach into a drug network to identify the leadership, you're going to do it through electronic surveillance," Daly said, adding that the surveillance was ended when agents felt they had been discovered.

"We did it because when we intercepted the particular shipment and conducted the search, there was a conversation intercepted in which

NASA Selects Crew Escape Pole Method For Next Shuttle Flight

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — NASA says the first space shuttle to fly since the Challenger accident will be equipped with the equivalent of a fireman's pole so astronauts can slide to safety if the craft has to ditch in the ocean.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration chose the pole escape method Thursday over an alternative that would have used rockets to propel the crew away from the shuttle Discovery in an emergency.

By sliding down the pole, the astronauts would clear the shuttle's tail before parachuting into the sea, NASA says.

For all the strength that allows the shuttle to withstand the buffeting that accompanies a climb or descent through the atmosphere, the vehicle probably could not survive a crash landing on the ocean.

"The telescoping pole was selected as it has shown to be safer, simpler to operate, lighter weight and easier to support than the tractor rocket system," said Arnold D. Aldrich, a top shuttle program official.

Barbara Selby, a NASA spokeswoman, said the 10½-foot pole already is being installed in Discovery and will be ready for the first flight, scheduled for Aug. 4.

The aluminum and steel pole weighs 241 pounds, 70 pounds lighter than the rocket system.

Moreover, top NASA officials have said all along they were uncomfortable with storing explosive rockets in the crew cabin.

The Rogers Commission, which investigated the 1986 Challenger accident, found that no escape method would have saved the seven astronauts who died in that explosion. But, it said, "The crew should have a means of escaping the orbiter in controlled, gliding flight."

The pole is intended for just such a purpose. If the shuttle had to ditch — either on an aborted launching or on return from space — the pole would be extended out the side hatch and the crew would attach themselves to it with rings on their parachutes and slide down, one at a time.

During launch and landing, the unextended pole will be pointed toward the hatch. It will be stowed while the shuttle is in orbit.

The Challenger astronauts died during ascent while the solid rocket boosters were still firing and attached to the shuttle. Engineers say the new escape system cannot be used while the shuttle is connected to the rockets.

"This decision completes the crew escape system package," a NASA statement said. "The agency already has replaced the spacecraft's hatch so it can be jettisoned with explosive bolts and it is installing a partial pressure suit, oxygen equipment, a parachute, a life raft and survival equipment for each crew member."

Under the rocket system, the astronauts would have to jettison the hatch, and, one-by-one, lie on a metal ramp that slanted out the door. Each one would have to attach a line to a small rocket housed in an adjacent rack and be pulled out.

The pole system was tested in February and March, using a fixed pole that extended through a hatch-like opening in a C-141 cargo plane. Navy parachutists completed 66 jumps, using cords attached to their parachute harnesses to slide down the pole and descend to a safe landing.

NASA said the side hatch jettison system can also be helpful if an emergency should require a quick crew exit once the ship is on the ground. The new hatch contains an escape slide similar to those on commercial airliners.

New Dinosaur Is Discovered

CLEVELAND (AP) — A misidentified dinosaur skull found in the Cleveland Museum of Natural History's basement came from a previously unknown meat-eating reptile that was a pygmy cousin of Tyrannosaurus rex, scientists say.

The skull was found on a southeast Montana farm 46 years ago by a museum expedition, but was misidentified as a gorgosaur, a relatively primitive, common carnivore, scientists said at a news conference Thursday.

The new genus has been named Nanotyrannus, or "pygmy tyrant," by the three scientists who discovered it.

"This animal is so different from any other meat-eater that it merits its own branch of the tyrannosaur family tree," said Robert T. Bakker, adjunct curator of paleontology at the University of Colorado in Boulder.

Bakker said he found the skull, believed to be the only Nanotyrannus specimen, while rummaging around the museum's basement last spring.

"The best place in North America to find new (kinds) of dinosaurs ... is to look in basements, he said. "There are never enough scientists to study specimens as soon as they come out of the crate. This came out of the crate in 1942. But no one did a detailed study."

Tyrannosaurus rex roamed the Earth some 60 million years ago. Nanotyrannus resembled the bigger dinosaur, but was only about one-third as large and one-tenth as heavy. It probably weighed less than 1,000 pounds, stood about 10 feet tall, walked on its hind legs and measured about 17 feet from nose to tail, Bakker said.

The skull, about 22 inches long and 10 inches high, is about the size of a brown bear's head, Bakker said.

Nanotyrannus had the same advanced anatomical features as Tyrannosaurus rex, including eye sockets that faced forward instead of sideways and a neck joint that bent downwards.

Marine Corps Investigating Lesbianism At Parris Island

By BRUCE SMITH
Associated Press Writer

PARRIS ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — The Marine Corps has carried out "witch hunts" for lesbians while tolerating homosexual men, says a Marine who says she is a target in a lesbianism investigation at the service's East Coast boot camp.

The Corps denies the accusation, although statistics show a disproportionate number of women have been dismissed for homosexuality.

The Naval Investigative Service's investigation at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot centers on 10 women and is likely to expand, said the woman Marine, who denies being homosexual and has not been charged.

Five Marine women have been charged with various counts, including committing indecent acts. Two other women who were due to go before administrative hearing boards are seeking discharges.

"Every base I've been on has had one of these so-called witch hunts," said the woman, a member of the Marines for six years who spoke on condition of anonymity. "This is the only time I've know of that anyone has gone to the press."

She said she did so "to show there's an injustice being done."

"If they're going to conduct these investigations, they need to do it on the male side of the house as well," she said.

"It would be such an embarrassment for the men to do this," she said. "They would have to admit that among the few and the proud they also have some gays in there."

Each year, 20,000 recruits, men and women, pass through Parris Island, the Corps' only basic training base for woman Marines. There are 10,060 women in the Marines.

According to Defense Department figures, 90 women and 219 men have been dismissed for homosexuality in the past three federal fiscal years, although women comprise less than 5 percent of the Corps.

During the same period, 662 Marine homosexuality cases were investigated, the figures show. About a third of those investigations centered on women.

However, Corps spokeswoman Joanne Schilling in Washington said lesbians do not get special attention while homosexual men are tolerated. She said there is no clear reason for the disparity and that the matter has never been studied.

She said that it would be a commanding officer's responsibility to check out any reported violations of a military law.

The Parris Island investigation is not routine, but "it's not an unprecedented thing," said Maj. Robert McLean, a base spokesman. The base doesn't announce such hearings, but will answer media inquiries about them, McLean said.

He said that while records of such cases are usually kept only about two years, he understands there were similar proceedings three or four years ago. The current proceedings are Article 32 hearings, which are similar to civilian grand jury hearings.

They amount to an open investigation into the allegations in which the defendants have certain rights and witnesses for both sides can be called. Following the hearing, the investigating officer makes a non-binding recommendation to the Marine's commanding officer.

The recommendation may be that the charges go to a court-martial, that the Marine go before an administrative discharge board or that the charges be dismissed.

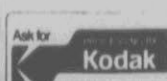

An administrative discharge board would determine whether the defendant has the potential for further service. A court-martial could lead to a prison sentence.

Shultz Holds 'Productive' Session

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer
LARNACA, Cyprus (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz met today with President Amil Gemayel of Lebanon in an effort to seal a Syrian-arranged deal for a new Lebanese constitution to end Lebanon's 12-year-old civil war.

Shultz, who is headed home from a futile effort in the Middle East to try to set up Arab-Israeli peace talks, met with Gemayel at Larnaca Airport for 90 minutes. The Cyprus stop wasn't announced in advance.

After the meeting, Shultz announced that April Glasbie, head of the Lebanon desk in the U.S. State Department, will go to Beirut to continue the American mediation. Ms. Glasbie is now in Damascus holding talks with Syrian leaders.

Shultz said his talk with Gemayel was "productive," but he gave no details. After the meeting, Gemayel returned to Lebanon in the army helicopter which brought him on the 100-mile flight to Cyprus. He made no statement.

Shultz told reporters before leaving Amman, Jordan, that stability in Lebanon would be "a great advantage in our efforts against terrorism" in seeking the release of nine Americans held hostage in Lebanon.

He said a new division of power among the competing factions would help all countries in the area, including Israel, and Syria itself.

"We want to see an election go off successfully" in Lebanon, Shultz said, referring to presidential balloting which must be held by September, when Gemayel's term expires.

Gemayel, a Maronite Christian, has sought for nearly six years to gain control of his country. But Syria, Lebanon's more powerful neighbor to the east, plays a dominant role in Lebanese politics.

A new distribution of political power in Lebanon could reduce Syria's military presence there, which is becoming an economic drain on Damascus.

Whether it would help American and other hostages is not clear, although a senior U.S. official said Thursday that Shultz also talked to Syrian President Hafez Assad about their plight.

Many of the 22 foreign hostages are believed held by an Iranian-influenced group, possibly beyond the reach of Syrian power, although Syria has close ties with Iran. The longest-held hostage is Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press. He was kidnapped March 16, 1985.

An administration source said Thursday in Santa Barbara, Calif., where President Reagan is vacationing, that Reagan sent a letter to Gemayel expressing concern about the continuing conflict in Lebanon.

The official said he had not seen the letter, but "I would characterize it as underscoring the mutual interests that the United States and Lebanon have in building peace in the region."

In Washington, a State Department official said the United States was "serving as a postman between Assad and Gemayel," who have not spoken to each other in over a year.

The two U.S. officials spoke on the condition of anonymity.

The aim of a new Lebanese constitution would be to modify the "national pact" devised in 1943 that allocated the top positions in the government to specific religious groups.

The president is a Christian, the premier is a Sunni Moslem and the speaker of Parliament is a Shiite Moslem. In the ensuing 45 years, Moslems overtook Christians as a majority and demanded a larger role.

In southern Lebanon, near the Israeli border, the situation is especially unstable. Palestinians fought with the Shiite Amal movement while Hezbollah, an Iranian-linked group, was suspected of kidnappings and hijackings.

VA Official Is Killed

CHICAGO (AP) — A high-level Veterans Administration official and two other people were stabbed to death Thursday in an apartment complex where a tenant flew into a rage over an eviction notice, police said.

Dr. Francis E. Conrad, 51, of Arlington, Va., national quality assurance director for the VA, was killed in the attack, police said. Two women also died, the manager of the complex and an assistant, police said. Their names were withheld pending notification of relatives.

Conrad was in the city to help his daughter, Dr. Lisa Conrad, find an apartment in preparation for her medical residency here, said Police Cmdr. Gerald Keller.

Conrad was sitting with his daughter and an employee of the recently built complex in an outer office when the assailant entered, went "right by them" to the inner office and stabbed the manager, Keller said.

"Immediately, they heard screams and shouts. At that point, Dr. Conrad's daughter and the other complex employee ran out of the office onto the street to flag down a squad car," the commander said.

When Ms. Conrad returned, she found her father on the floor. The assistant manager was found in a nearby hallway.

All three victims were dead on arrival at Northwestern Memorial Hospital, said spokeswoman Sandra Mines.

Keller said a maintenance worker who witnessed the incident later led officers to the apartment of Jerry Singer, 36, who had been served with an eviction notice for non-payment of rent.

13 White Supremacists Gain Acquittals On Seditious Counts

By BILL SIMMONS
Associated Press Writer

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP) — The acquittal of 13 white supremacists on seditious charges means that "religious freedom is still alive in this country," says one of the defendants in the seven-week federal trial.

An all-white jury Thursday acquitted the men of charges including conspiring to kill a federal judge and FBI agent and plotting to overthrow the federal government and establish an all-white nation in the Pacific Northwest.

Defendant Robert E. Miles, 63, a white supremacist leader from Cohoctah, Mich., praised the verdicts. But when asked how the trial had affected the supremacist movement, he said, "Who knows? What movement? What's left of it after this?"

"This proves that the common law is still alive," said defendant Richard G. Butler of Hayden Lake, Idaho. "This means we still enjoy the freedom of speech, freedom of assembly, freedom of association and freedom of religion."

The government presented 113 witnesses during the trial, which began Feb. 16. Prosecutors sought to prove that supremacists robbed banks and armored trucks of $4.1 million to finance their activities, including about $1 million still missing. The jury deliberated four days.

The defense, which called 79 witnesses, contended the conspiracy theory was made up by a key government witness, James Ellison, 47, who led a supremacist group in Arkansas and is serving 20 years for racketeering.

To discredit Ellison, the defense disclosed he had two wives, thought he received messages from God and had himself crowned King James of the Ozarks.

Defendants said the government was trying to suppress their call for white separatism and other aspects of their political and religious views.

But U.S. Attorney J. Michael Fitzhugh denied that the charges were politically motivated.

"We weren't after them because of what they believed or what they said," he said. "We were after them because of what they did."

Defendant Louis Ray Beam Jr., 41, of Houston, celebrated his acquittal by standing in the shadow of a Confederate memorial opposite the court building and claiming victory against what he calls the Zionist Occupation Government.

"I think ZOG has suffered a terrible defeat here today," Beam said. "I think everyone saw through the charade and saw that I was simply being punished for being a vociferous and outspoken opponent of ZOG."

Burton Levinson, national chairman of the Anti-Defamation League, called the verdicts "a real setback in the war against organized hate."

"Although many of the defendants are already serving prison terms growing out of their extremist activities, the others, including the most important leaders, will now be free to once again promote their anti-democratic and bigoted aims," Levinson said in a statement from New York. "The outcome means that we must and will remain vigilant."

Besides Miles, Butler and Beam, the other defendants were:

—Richard Joseph Scutari, 40, of New York, already serving 60 years for racketeering.

—Bruce Carroll Pierce, 32, of Metalline Falls, Wash., serving 100 years for racketeering and 150 years for violating the civil rights of Denver radio personality Alan Berg by killing him.

—Andrew Virgil Barnhill, 31, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., serving 40 years for racketeering.

—Ardie McBrearty, 60, of Gentry, Ark., serving 40 years for racketeering.

—David Eden Lane, 48, of Denver, serving 40 years for racketeering and 150 years for Berg's death.

—Richard Wayne Snell, 57, of Muse, Okla., sentenced to die for the murder of a pawn shop operator in 1983 and life in prison without parole for the 1984 slaying of an Arkansas state trooper.

—Lambert Miller, 47, of Springfield, Mo.

—David Michael McGuire, 25, of Greenville, Ill.

—Ivan Ray Wade, 35, of Smithville, Ark.

—William Wade, 68, of Smithville, father of Ivan Ray Wade.

Miles, Butler, Beam, Scutari, Pierce, Barnhill, McBrearty, Lane and Snell were acquitted of charges of seditious conspiracy; Scutari and Barnhill were acquitted of transporting stolen money, and Snell, Miller, McGuire and the Wades were acquitted of conspiracy to commit murder.

A fourteenth defendant, Robert Neil Smalley, 32, of Fort Smith, was acquitted earlier in the trial.

Nominee's Club Activities Blasted

By PHYLLIS MESSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese's choice to become the No. 2 official in the Justice Department is under fire for his membership in an all-male athletic club and an all-white country club.

"It makes it hard to imagine he'll be able to administer justice in government in a way that's non-discriminatory when in his own personal life he doesn't live up to that," Patricia Ireland, executive vice president of the National Organization for Women, said of John C. Shepherd.

The Senate Judiciary Committee will vote on whether to confirm Shepherd as deputy attorney general, if President Reagan goes ahead and nominates him. Committee members said Thursday that it is too soon to comment on Shepherd's membership in the Missouri Athletic Club, which has no female members, and the Bellerive Country Club, which has no blacks. Both are in the St. Louis area.

Shepherd, 62, a St. Louis attorney, could not be reached for comment Thursday. He was not in his office, and his home phone number is unlisted. But on Wednesday he told the St. Louis Post-Dispatch he had not yet decided whether he should resign from the clubs.

"I haven't made up my mind on whether that would be necessary," he told the newspaper. "I am going to Washington for nine months to help the attorney general as his deputy."

Shepherd said he told Meese and other Justice Department officials about his club memberships in conversations in Washington earlier this week. He added that the FBI "is aware of this."

In the same interview, Shepherd also said he was confident he would be cleared by the FBI of allegations that he had an affair with a former bookkeeper at his firm and that he had authorized her to write $147,000 in checks to herself.

He added that the allegations by Denise Sinner, 29, of St. Peters, Mo., "are absolutely untrue and unfounded."

Sinner was convicted last month in St. Louis Circuit Court on charges of making false statements and stealing more than $100,000 from Shepherd's law firm, Shepherd, Sandberg & Phoenix.

Sinner's attorney, Darrill S. Beebe, said Thursday he was surprised when he heard that Meese had chosen Shepherd for a top Justice Department post. However, he said he and Sinner would testify before the Senate Judiciary Committee about Shepherd "only if we're subpoenaed. We're not volunteering."

Shepherd, a former president of the American Bar Association, was tapped by Meese on Tuesday to fill the deputy attorney general's job following the March 29 protest resignation of Arnold Burns.

Burns quit along with Assistant Attorney General William Weld because of concerns that the 11-month criminal investigation of Meese was dragging down the Justice Department, department sources have said.

Meese left Wednesday on a trip to Latin America to discuss anti-drug efforts.

Shepherd's memberships in the Missouri Athletic Club and the Bellerive Country Club were first reported by NBC News. Jim Baer, a spokesman for the athletic club in downtown St. Louis, confirmed Thursday that Shepherd is a member and said the club, founded in 1904, does not accept women.

Arthur Wright, president of the country club in suburban St. Louis, said Shepherd has been a member there since 1970. "There are no black members," Wright said, "but our bylaws specify that the club is open to everybody."

Wright said, however, that membership in the country club is through invitation only and "to the best of my knowledge, no black has ever been proposed for membership."

A spokeswoman for the American Bar Association, Gail Alexander, said the group's code of conduct prohibits members who are judges from belonging to private clubs that practice "invidious discrimination."

Ms. Alexander said the ABA also has a policy that prohibits meetings from being held in such private clubs.

The issue of membership in exclusionary clubs has arisen before, with mixed results.

SHEPHERD ACCUSER — Denise Sinner leaves a St. Louis courts building for a break in this March photograph. Ms. Sinner had charged in court that she had an affair with John C. Shepherd, who has been nominated by Attorney General Edwin Meese to become the chief deputy to the attorney general. (AP Laserphoto)

FEEDING THE FIVE THOUSAND!

OF ALL THE MIRACLES WROUGHT BY JESUS, ONLY ONE IS NARRATED IN EVERY ONE OF THE FOUR GOSPELS! WHEN JESUS LIFTED UP HIS EYES AND SAW THE VAST MULTITUDE OF PEOPLE AND ASKED PHILIP, "WHENCE SHALL WE BUY BREAD, THAT THESE MAY EAT?" (JOHN 6:5) HE ALREADY KNEW WHAT HE WOULD DO—HE WOULD FEED THE FIVE THOUSAND WITH WHAT THEY ALREADY HAD, FIVE BARLEY LOAVES AND TWO SMALL FISHES! THE FIRST ACTION THAT JESUS TOOK WAS TO LOOK UP TO HEAVEN AND GIVE THANKS FOR THAT WHICH THEY ALREADY HAD, AND THEN HE GAVE TO HIS DISCIPLES TO DISTRIBUTE THE FOOD TO THE PEOPLE—HE DIDN'T WORRY ABOUT WHETHER IT WOULD BE ENOUGH—HIS OWN FAITH IN THE FATHER-IN-HEAVEN TOLD HIM IT WOULD BE MORE THAN ENOUGH!!

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A new generation has discovered "America's Riviera," replacing the glitz and glamour that faded decades ago with rock music clubs, quaint restaurants and neighborhood bars.

Instead of Frank Sinatra, Sammy Davis Jr., Jerry Lewis or others who frequented Miami Beach in the '50s and '60s, recent visitors saw Mick Taylor and Ron Wood, Rolling Stones past and present, at Woody's On The Beach. Others heard Stephen Stills and Savoy Brown at the China Club, where Doobie Brothers jammed with Steely Dan, and where rocker David Bowie, tennis star Vitas Gerulaitis and former Beatles' producer George Martin were among the crowd.

"The night life plays a great role in the revitalization of the entire community," says Mayor Alex Daoud, 44, a Miami Beach native who can recall passing Clark Gable, Gary Cooper and Kirk Douglas on the streets of his youth.

"One of the largest concerns people have is: 'Where can I go at night?' When I was growing up here, entertainment was very expensive. Now we have more affordable entertainment, and also family-oriented entertainment."

In less than five years, nearly 20 music clubs and restaurants have sprung up in formerly rundown hotels, some deserted, others occupied by the elderly poor or Mariel Cuban refugees.

The first time David Giles, a British-born investment consultant, walked into the future site of Woody's, "there were six guys on the floor doing crack cocaine. It was absolutely derelict."

Months later, Giles, 37, welcomed 600 people who paid $100 to $150 each to attend a New Year's Eve opening featuring the music of Wood, a minority investor in a European ownership group assembled by Giles.

"I still don't know if it will sustain itself, but the area appears to have turned a corner," says Giles, who plans to expand his club into a beach club with sauna, exercise facilities and a gallery showcasing Wood's artwork.

Jud Kurlanichek, city director of planning and zoning, says the night life is "a magnet for things that happen. It gets people to come here, and they look around and decide they'd like to live here."

Unlike in suburbia, where entertainment follows residential development, the reverse appears true in urban areas, Kurlanichek says.

In the art deco district undergoing restoration as a national historic area, the first wave brought upscale restaurants such as the European-style cafe The Strand, and trendy music clubs such as China Club, Woody's, Club Nu and the Tropics International. Now, the neighborhood is adding the trappings of a settled-in professional community: a sushi restaurant, chummy neighborhood bars, an art deco-style Burger King and, soon, Domino's Pizza, McDonald's and Wendy's fast-food restaurants.

The average age of Miami Beach's 100,000 people dropped from 66 in 1980 to 54 in 1985 and is projected to be under 50 by 1990, says Kurlanichek.

"Young people are happy to live blocks from the beach," says Jeffrey Cohen, a partner in the China Club.

"The weather has always been the finest on the continent and now, with the resurgence of the young people, it's like a rediscovery."

The shift in entertainment tastes and the onset of jet travel to the Caribbean and other competing resorts spelled the end to Miami Beach's heyday in the '60s, Beach veterans say. The South Beach area was hitting bottom by the time thousands of jobless Cubans from the 1980 Mariel boatlift crowded in with the elderly Eastern European immigrants who couldn't afford the condominium retirement communities springing up in South Florida.

Two efforts to gain legalization of casino gambling failed. Finally, developers stopped looking for the "quick fix" and instead concentrated on more lasting solutions such as widening the eroded beach from 15 feet in places to 300, adding a boardwalk and reviving interest in preserving art deco styles. At the same time, tougher zoning ordinances forced landlords to make costly improvements. The higher rents that resulted helped chase away many of those responsible for raising the crime rates.

Many involved in the night life comeback are people in their 30s and 40s who have been interested in Miami Beach redevelopment for years. Woody Graber, a Buffalo-born publicist who's been working for redevelopment and art deco preservation since 1979, says he's finally confident.

"People are finally realizing the potential. It's sort of like helping people find a buried treasure," Graber says. "This isn't going to die; there's too much going on for it to die now."

West German Women Serve In Once-Male Border Police

By GEORGE BOEHMER
Associated Press Writer
SWISTTAL-HEIMERZHEIM, West Germany (AP) — Bored with her office job, Michaela Busemann went off to learn how to shoot a machine gun and become part of an elite group of women breaking into an all-male domain — the West German border police.

The police are responsible for guarding the country's borders, including those separating West Germany from the communist East.

They also provide security at federal facilities and airports, run patrol boats along the coast in the North and Baltic seas, arrest drug smugglers, and are deployed to help state police control unruly demonstrators.

Since the federal border police force was founded in 1951, only men were permitted to join. But last year the government permitted enlistment of women.

On Oct. 1, 1987, 31 women chosen from a group of 1,000 applicants began 30 months of training at Swist-tal-Heimerzheim, 12 miles west of Bonn.

"I was working in an office and it was boring," Ms. Busemann said in an interview, "so I joined the border police because this is much more interesting."

Ms. Busemann, who is 20 years old, has her sights set on completing the tough 30-month course, which includes handgun and machine gun target practice.

The recruits also regularly train in the martial art of jujitsu, scramble through obstacle courses, and do required conditioning sports such as swimming and long-distance running.

In addition they have a full classroom schedule, including law courses and other police-related subjects.

Asked how she and the other women were accepted by the men, Ms. Busemann said: "At first there were a few funny remarks, but that ended quickly."

Ms. Busemann is one of 29 women remaining from the 31 that began the training.

"Two of them dropped out because they kept getting homesick," said spokesman Hartmut Ortlepp of Border Police Command Group West in Bonn.

He added that when the border police opened up for women applicants in 1987, "there were 1,000 applicants for the initial 30 slots offered."

"We culled that down and finally started with 31 last October," Ortlepp said.

West Germany's constitution bans women from the regular military services. Ortlepp said authorities at first had some reservations about women becoming part of the 20,000-member border police forces.

"But when the women joined there was a very quick change. The tone of the men has become more respectful, more courteous; it's a change for the better," said Ortlepp.

Some Students Are Faking It With Video 'Book' Reports

By CATHERINE DRESSLER
Associated Press Writer

Fourteen-year-old Tiffany Salzer got an "A" on her book report without opening the book. She watched the movie instead.

"It only took me three hours to watch the movie and it would have taken me 12 hours to read the book," said the ninth-grader from Ventura, Calif.

Her father, Jim, owner of Salzer's Video Store and a board member of the Video Softwares Dealers Association, is familiar with the situation.

"It's a problem," he said in a telephone interview. "A kid essentially can rent a classic movie and do a book report from it. Kids are taking shortcuts."

Videotape retailers across the nation say many teen-agers, children of the television generation, are taking study guides that summarize literature one step further and turning to videotapes for help with homework, renting rather than reading.

Tiffany said her teachers sometimes show movies in class, but only after students presumably have read the corresponding literature. She said she watched "Clan of the Cave Bear" the night before a report on the book was due.

"The teachers say the movie is different. Sometimes it is, but students don't really care," she said. "It's better to get a 'C' than an 'F.'"

At parents' requests, Art Marra pulled "To Kill A Mockingbird" from the shelves at his HTO Video store in suburban Pittsburgh after students were assigned to read the book.

Since then, Marra periodically has refused to rent certain videotapes to youths because he learned the corresponding books were homework assignments.

"We're a community-oriented shop. We try to give the community any cooperation we can," Marra said.

Mike Petraglia noticed young people make sporadic runs on certain films at his Video-O-Video store in Pittsburgh. He said a popular videotape among teens is "Dirty Dancing," but when assignments dictate, he can't find enough copies of "Death of a Salesman," "Treasure Island," "Grapes of Wrath" and "Billy Budd."

"'Gone With the Wind' has been picking up a little bit. I think it's book-related," he said.

Students always have searched for the easier way, and the video scholar is just a variation of the Cliff Notes customer, said Scott Treibitz, spokesman for the American Federation of Teachers, based in Washington, D.C.

For 29 years, students have used Cliff Notes to provide summaries and analysis of books, and sales of the study guides still are growing, said Doug Lincoln, spokesman for Cliff Notes Inc. of Lincoln, Neb.

"The problem now is with the access of video cassette recorders and with the access of video stores," Treibitz said.

Lincoln said Cliff Notes may produce its own videotapes, but he declined to discuss details.

"The generation that is in elementary school now, they're certainly in the video age," Lincoln said. "I would have to say the (use) of video will probably only increase."

Teachers are increasingly using videotapes in the classroom, and as a supplement the tapes are helpful, said Judi Boren, spokeswoman for the North Allegheny County School District in suburban Pittsburgh.

"You can't use the video as a Cliff Note kind of crutch," Ms. Boren said. "There's a saying, 'I read the book. I don't need to see the movie.' If you make some comparisons, maybe you need to do both."

"A teacher can give a lecture on the Grand Canyon, Niagara Falls, space exploration," Treibitz said. "A video not only gives that same material, but shows the visuals to reinforce that material."

"It can't replace reading, it can't replace writing and there are times it can't replace the lecture," he said.

A Bee Sting In The Mouth Hurts

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Delaware Beekeeper" and "Larry of Lakewood, Ohio."

The honeybee will indeed land on soft-drink cans and bottles and get into them. I know several people who were stung in the mouth from a honeybee that got into their soft-drink can.

True, honeybees will sting only in defense of their hive or if they are threatened, but when a honeybee gets into someone's mouth and feels pressure, it will sting to protect itself. I am a beekeeper, and I know the difference between a yellow jacket, wasp and a honeybee.

At work, at lunchtime we have to keep our soft drinks covered because the bees swarm on top of any open can.

I would also like to add that the flight of the bumblebee is not only from flower to flower. If you go to a swimming pool or watering hole in the summertime, if there is a beehive in the area, you will see bees collecting water for their hive.

Also, the honeybee does not gather honey from flowers as Larry stated; bees gather pollen and nectar from flowers and then make the honey. — BIG AL, LOUISIANA BEEKEEPER

DEAR AL: Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I was appalled to read in your column that great numbers of people wrote to say that bees get a bad rap because people mistake wasps and yellow jackets for bees.

Who cares? I wish you'd have focused on the real issue — that being stung on the inside of the mouth is a potentially fatal situation!

When I was stung on the tongue (at the age of 24), I was terrified of the very real possibility that my throat would swell closed, and I would die of asphyxiation!

So again I say, I don't care if it's a bee, wasp or whatever. It's terrifying to get an insect in one's mouth, feel it sting, then have to pull the stinger out of one's tongue or other oral tissue; worse if the stinger is too far down to reach. — JULIANNE TANSKI, LAKEWOOD, CALIF.

DEAR JULIANNE: Let's put the cap on this stinging issue with a final word from a reader with a sense of humor:

DEAR ABBY: Your "It was a wasp, not a bee column" reminds me of this story: A bee, wearing a yarmulke, met another bee who asked, "Why are you wearing that skullcap? You're not Jewish."

The bee replied, "I know, I just don't want anyone to mistake me for a WASP." — GEORGE H. RIESSER, Ph.D., HOUSTON

DEAR ABBY: You stated that when a man dies, he leaves only one widow — the woman to whom he was married at the time of his death.

Well, my ex-husband died after we were divorced and neither one of us remarried. Can I be identified as a widow? Yes!

Did you know that the government considers ALL ex-wives who were married to a man for more than 10 years his "widows"? That is, provided they have not remarried. Furthermore, ALL of those widows are entitled to collect his Social Security benefits!

It is possible for one to six "widows" to collect from the demise of a no-good fickle philanderer. — RESPECTABLE WIDOW, NEWPORT BEACH, CALIF.

DEAR WIDOW: Who would dream that after a marriage had been legally dissolved by divorce, an ex-wife could be considered a widow! Surely not I. Obviously I couldn't have been more wrong — as far as the folks at Social Security are concerned.

DEAR ABBY: You had an article in your column from a sailor on the USS Towers, telling how hard it was for sailors to be away from home for months at a time.

I know exactly how he feels because I recall those days during World War II and Korea. Of my 9½ years in the U.S. Navy, I had 42 months overseas duty aboard ships in war zones. No one knew where we were until our ship passed under the Golden Gate Bridge in San Francisco!

All outgoing mail was censored before it was sent off the ship. The Navy war sea duty was especially hard on the married men. There were married men on my ship who had children they had never seen — and some of the children were 2 years old — and older.

I joined the U.S. Navy for four years or for the duration of the war — whichever came first.

I don't know what the record of a sailor is for not going ashore, but I went for 11 months at one time without setting foot on dry land. — 1ST CLASS PETTY OFFICER CARLTON R. EPPERSON (RET.), LYNCHBURG, VA.

DEAR MR. EPPERSON: You served your country well. Congratulations and may your retirement be a long and happy one.

Bigger Stars Struggle As Wrenn, Nelson Tie For 1st Round Lead Of Masters

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — It was the kind of round young golfers dream about, and Robert Wrenn didn't want his to end.

While some of the game's biggest stars were struggling in gusty, bone-chilling wind, Wrenn found himself in a tie for the lead after the opening round of the 52nd Masters on Thursday.

"Don't anyone wake me up," Wrenn said after shooting a 3-under-par 69 to share the lead with PGA champion Larry Nelson.

"I want to enjoy this for a while," Wrenn said. "It's a dream come true."

"I never did three-putt and I think that's a miracle on these greens. These greens aren't exactly like hitting into peat moss. You could be here all day on some of them. You need to pack a sandwich to putt some of the greens."

Wrenn and Nelson fought through the gusting 30 mph winds to build a two-shot lead over four others who managed to break par — West Germany's Bernhard Langer, Scotland's Sandy Lyle and Americans Mark Calcavecchia and Don Pooley.

"My game has always been like the weather here," Nelson said. "Sometimes good, sometimes bad. I've played here when the weather was perfect and didn't shoot 69."

The weather was the major topic for some longtime Masters competitors.

Six-time champion Jack Nicklaus called it "maybe the most difficult" he's seen.

Tom Watson, who has won this revered title twice, said, "I'm always amazed that the wind does here. I don't think I'll ever figure it out. It was survival."

"It was almost totally by feel today," Ben Crenshaw, the 1984 champion, said. "You're out there just creeping around trying to find something."

Crenshaw and Watson both managed par 72s on the 6,905-yard Augusta National course. Nicklaus shot 75.

The wind was so bad it would move the ball on green.

"It was oscillating," Scotland's Ken Brown said after his 73. "I just let it roll wherever it fancied."

"There's some putts out there I defy anybody to read," Crenshaw said. "They're just optical illusions. A day like that you just get mentally wracked."

Gary Koch had to feel that way, too.

Koch came to the 18th needing a par to share the lead, but took a triple bogey seven when he caught a trap, left his next shot in the trap and three-putted for a 72.

Wrenn, 28, gained his Masters invitation by winning the Buick Open last year, his only victory in three years on the PGA Tour.

He said he was worried when he started his first Masters round.

"I thought, 'Good grief! Just don't shoot a hundred out here.'"

He got off to a fast start, rolling in an 8-foot birdie putt on the first hole and scoring another birdie on the par-5 second when he two-putted from 75 feet.

Wrenn birdied No. 8 from 15 feet and got his first of two bogeys on the 11th. He also bogeyed 14, chipped to two feet for a birdie on 15 and capped the round by sinking an eight-foot birdie putt on the final hole.

"I'm tickled to death where I am," he said. "I played well and got a couple of breaks."

Nelson, seeking his fourth major championship, also had a round of five birdies and two bogeys. All of his birdies were from 10 feet or less.

Kinston Eases Past Pirates, 4-2

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

KINSTON — All things considered, East Carolina coach Gary Overton was fairly satisfied after his baseball team came out on the short end of a 4-2 exhibition game against the professional Kinston Indians.

The Class A Indians, a farm team of the Cleveland Indians, were making their first public appearance in the game. They are scheduled to open the regular season tonight at 7 p.m. against Hagerstown in Grainger Stadium.

"All in all, I was well pleased," Overton said. "Except for a few mistakes that helped them we played a good game."

The Pirates made a couple of errors, both of which played a role in the Kinston scoring, and also made a couple of baserunning mistakes that took them out of threats.

"It gave us some experience against very quality personnel," Overton said. "We saw two fine pitchers and their closing man was good too. I hope that this will give us a little boost for our stretch run."

The Pirates did not use any of their top pitchers in the game, saving them instead for this weekend's important series against George Mason. However, Overton seemed pleased with the performance of most of the five pitchers he used in the game.

The last three (Preston Bowers, David Willis and Eric Gupton) usually don't travel with us, but this gave them a chance to show us what they can do. They were keyed up for the opportunity," Overton said. "It also gave our position players the opportunity to show what they can do against professional players."

The Pirates got only four hits off the Kinston pitching, including two by John Thomas, but they also picked up five walks. The three Kinston hurlers struck out 10 Pirate batters.

East Carolina's cast on the mound scattered seven hits, including two doubles, walked five and struck out four.

The Pirates had a chance in the top of the first as Thomas banged a double down the left field line and moved to third on a ground out. But the side was retired without further damage.

Instead, Kinston came up with two runs in the bottom of the inning. Mike Westbrook walked and stole second, taking third on an infield out. Joey Belle walked on a fourth-ball wild pitch, which scored Westbrook. Belle moved on to second on an error on the play, taking third on a hit by Beau Alfred. Belle scored on Mark Maloney's ground out.

The Pirates cut it to 2-1 with a score in the second. With one out, John Adams singled to center and Tommy Yarborough walked. Kevin Riggs also singled and Whit Whitley hit a long sacrifice fly to score Adams.

Kinston added two more in the fourth to make it 4-1. Maloney led off with a double to left and Allen Liebert singled to right. Mike Twardoski got a hit, driving in Maloney. Everado Magallanes reached when his sacrifice bunt was errored and Glenn Fairchild was safe on an infield hit, loading the bases. Westbrook grounded out, scoring Liebert.

East Carolina's last run came in the fifth. Yarborough walked and so did Riggs. With two away, Thomas singled to center, driving in Yarborough to make it 4-2.

East Carolina had two men cut down on the basepaths during the game. Yarborough was picked off third when a double steal was attempted. Calvin Brown was thrown out on a possible passed ball when he went into second standing up, running into the throw.

Maloney and Liebert led the Kinston hitting with two each.

The Pirates return to Colonial Athletic Association action on Saturday, traveling to George Mason, where they will play a doubleheader.

A single game is set for Sunday between the two schools.

GMU currently is in second place in the league standings with a 6-2 record, while ECU is third at 4-4.

"I wouldn't call the series critical or crucial, but I would call it important," Overton said of the meetings with Mason. ECU will have only its home series with Richmond, scheduled April 16-17, remaining in CAA action after this weekend.

ECU Expects Potent Offense

By TIM CHANDLER
Reflector Sports Writer

With nine starters returning on the offensive side of the football for East Carolina University this year, the question for first-year offensive coordinator Kevin Gilbride is not will the Pirates score, but how much will they score.

Gilbride, who joined the Pirates coaching ranks last fall, has extensive experience with the run-and-shoot offense which the Pirates employ offensively. Gilbride came to the Pirates after having served as offensive coordinator for both the Ottawa Rough Riders and the Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League. Gilbride joined the Pirates after the Montreal club folded prior to the beginning of the 1987 season. Both clubs used the run-and-shoot attack in their offensive game plans.

Gilbride also coached on the college ranks prior to going to the Canadian Football League as he lead the Owls of Southern Connecticut State University to a 35-14 record from the 1980 season through the 1984 grid campaign. The Owls were nationally ranked on the Division II level for two of Gilbride's last three seasons at the helm. The team also consistently stayed atop the Division II statistics in offensive categories.

Gilbride also served assistant coaching stints on the collegiate level at Idaho State (1974-1975), Rhode Island (1976) and American International (1977-1979).

Gilbride and the Pirate offensive coaching staff had one major thing in their favor heading into spring drills this year that had never been awarded an Art Baker coached team — a returning starting quarterback (Travis Hunter).

Hunter directed the Pirate offense last fall to a 5-6 record, starting all 11 contests. The sophomore signal-caller passed for 1,107 yards and three touchdowns last fall, while rushing for 371 yards and five scores.

"He's been everything that we had hoped for thus far," said Gilbride. "He still needs to continue to grow and improve, but thus far we are very pleased."

Head coach Art Baker agreed.

"He's (Hunter) seen it all (in scrimmages)," Baker said. "I was talking to one of the coaches the other day and he said that the defense has thrown everything but the kitchen sink at him. So he should be ready for almost any type of defense."

In an intrasquad scrimmage held by the Pirates a couple of weeks ago,

Kevin Gilbride

Baker said that the Hunter-led offense looked "absolutely the best" since he had been the coach for ECU.

Gilbride's addition at ECU gives the Pirate run-and-shoot offense the shot in the arm it needed, according to Baker.

"Kevin is well-versed in the run-and-shoot," Baker said. "He is one of the top coaches of it in the country. We are going to continue to run the run-and-shoot and hopefully (with Gilbride's knowledge and input) get better."

No one at the Pirate football office, including Gilbride, is going to deny that this year's Pirate offense could be an exciting one, but the small things such as the nine fumbles against Florida State (a 49-3 loss) last year have to be overcome.

"We feel that we can be a very explosive offense," Gilbride said. "We showed flashes of that in the latter part of last year (56-28 victory over Cincinnati) and a comeback effort that fell short at Southern Mississippi in the final game of the season). We simply need to be consistent on a play in and play out basis. We must improve on gaining positive yards on third and fourth down and short yardage situations."

And if that can happen, Gilbride feels that the Pirates could not only make the Pirate fans happy, but also surprise a few of the big boys along the way.

"We probably have as tough a schedule as anyone in the country," Gilbride said. "I would like to see us go out and week in and week out play the best that we possibly can and shoot for a winning season.

"If you play your best week in and week out then you can possibly sneak in a win or two against the tough teams on the schedule," Gilbride continued. "And that could make a good season suddenly turn into an excellent season."

Driesell's Arrival Could Boost CAA

HARRISONBURG, Va. (AP) — The coming of Lefty Driesell to James Madison brings the university and the 3-year-old Colonial Athletic Association the hope of more fans, better players and more time on television, school and conference officials said.

"Hopefully, with his name, we'll attract a better player and get into the NCAA, and who knows what can happen?" Athletic Director Dean Ehlers said Thursday. "A couple of good players could make us consistently good."

A day earlier, Driesell had been introduced as coach of the Dukes, and numerous inquiries about basketball tickets already were coming in, Ehlers said.

Colonial Athletic Association Commissioner Tom Yeager hopes that once Driesell goes to work adding to the 524-224 record he built in 26 years at Maryland and Davidson, more fans will show interest in the young conference that got a publicity lift last month when the Richmond Spiders upset defending national champion Indiana and Georgia Tech to make it to the final 16 in the NCAA tournament.

"After Dick Tarrant made it to the final 16 this year, this is kind of a nice icing on the cake that maybe will help move us into the next year," Yeager said from his Richmond office.

One area where Driesell's notoriety is expected to pay off is in television time, although Yeager would not predict how much of a benefit it will be to the CAA.

"I have no idea what the future could bring," Yeager said Thursday afternoon. "It's already better than what it was 24 hours ago."

The other teams in the conference are Navy, William and Mary, North Carolina-Wilmington, East Carolina, George Mason and American.

Many James Madison alumni also are holding high hopes for the basketball team that got going shortly after World War II, when men were first admitted full-time to the school. James Madison, with an enrollment now of 10,000, has built a 309-193 record since 1969, when it took on a schedule of all varsity teams and was recognized by the NCAA.

Driesell, a 56-year-old veteran coach, was forced to resign after 17 years at Maryland in the wake of the 1986 cocaine-induced death of Len Bias, but James Madison officials said when they announced Driesell's appointment that the much-publicized incident had not been the coach's fault. University officials said they were looking only toward a brighter future.

During the news conference, Driesell even mentioned the words "national title," but he stopped short of predicting the Dukes are on the verge of getting one.

"I personally believe in setting high goals for myself and my ball club," Driesell said when reporters pressed the point. "I can compete with Duke or Georgetown or North Carolina as far as academic recruiting."

It is academic reputation that worries Driesell's few detractors among James Madison alumni, director of alumni Steve Smith said. Following the Bias affair, Driesell drew criticism at Maryland over perceptions that he was not overly interested in the academic well-being of his players.

"There's been some concern it could tarnish our academic reputation," Smith said.

But overall, James Madison appears ready for whatever Driesell will bring to a basketball program that is not self-sufficient.

Two More Orally Commit To Pirates

East Carolina University's basketball team has added two more verbal commitments for the coming year, sources say.

The Pirates, who had already received oral commitments from two Alabama stars, have reportedly added one of the top players out of the state of Indiana, plus a junior college star from Alabama.

Jeff Perlich, a 6-2 guard from Churubco, Ind., averaged 32 points a game this past season, second in the state of Indiana. He will be an incoming freshman.

Joining him in giving an oral commitment is 6-7 Jerome Obey from Calhoun Junior College in Alabama. He was a first team All-Alabama junior college selection this year.

The Pirates had already received oral commitments from two Huntsville, Ala., players, Jay Scherer, a 6-2 guard, and Brooks Bryant, a 6-3 center. Scherer was the player of the year in the 6-A ranks for Alabama while Bryant was the most valuable player in the state tournament. The two led Gus Grissom High School to the state championship.

The NCAA's spring signing season for basketball players begins on Wednesday.

ECU Cheerleaders Host Festival

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — East Carolina University's cheerleader were the host squad for the first Busch Gardens Cheerleading Competition, held recently there.

They were also a special guest performing squad during the event. Teresa Ward, ECU's cheerleading director, was the festival coordinator for 45 junior high and high school squads that participated. The 45 squads came from nine states.

CBS Says Brown Signs With UCLA

NEW YORK (AP) — Larry Brown, who led the Kansas Jayhawks to the NCAA championship on Monday, will return to UCLA as head coach, CBS reported today.

On CBS-TV's "This Morning," reporter Jim Lampley quoted sources he did not name as saying Brown agreed to a contract Thursday to once again coach the Pac-10 school he took to the 1980 NCAA Championship game. Lampley said the agreement was for five years, but did not specify Brown's salary.

Brown, according to the report, will fly from Los Angeles to Lawrence, Kan., today to meet with the Kansas players. He will then return to Los Angeles for a news conference at UCLA Saturday.

Brown replaces Walt Hazzard, fired March 30 after a 16-14 season. Hazzard had a four-year record of 77-47.

Brown first led the Bruins during the 1979-80 and 1980-81 seasons, compiling a 42-17 record before leaving to coach the NBA's New Jersey Nets. In his first year at UCLA, he took the squad to the Final Four, losing to national champion Louisville.

Jordan, Bulls Agree To $28 Million Pact

CHICAGO (AP) — Michael Jordan and the Chicago Bulls have reached an agreement on a new contract that could pay him $28 million over eight years, making him the highest paid athlete, according to a published report.

The contract, which includes performance incentives, is expected to be signed next week, the Chicago Tribune reports in today's editions.

With a yearly income of $3.5 million over the life of the contract, Jordan would surpass New York Knicks center Patrick Ewing as highest paid player in professional sports.

Ewing signed a 10-year, $30 million pact after being the first player chosen in the 1985 National Basketball Association draft.

When asked about the new contract, Jordan would not comment, the Tribune reports.

Jordan, 25, is currently in the fourth year of a $6.2 million, seven-year contract. He could earn $880,000 this season, which includes incentives. Among the bonuses he has attained are making the All-Star team and helping the Bulls qualify for the playoffs.

Other incentives he could qualify for is making the all-league team and winning the scoring title. Jordan will receive another bonus if he is named the NBA's most valuable player, according to the Tribune.

The newspaper reports that Jordan's new contract retains the "love of the game" clause in the current contract, which allows him to play basketball anytime he wishes and protects him from liability.

Attributing its information to sources it does not name, the Tribune says Bulls owner Jerry Reinsdorf approached Jordan and his agent, David Falk of ProServ, about the new contract.

Since Jordan joined the Bulls, the team has improved steadily. The team is attracting an average 18,042 fans a game.

The season before the 6-foot-6 guard arrived, 1983-84, the Bulls averaged 6,365 spectators and were 27-55. Going into Friday's game at the Stadium against the Knicks, the Bulls are 44-30.

With three No. 1 draft picks in the next two years, the Bulls franchise has never been healthier.

Largely because of Jordan, ticket revenue alone this season will be around $10 million, according to ticket director Joe O'Neil.

Europeans Like Windy Masters Weather

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — It felt more like St. Andrew's than Augusta, and that was just fine with the European contingent at the 1988 Masters.

"All the European players are used to playing in the wind a bit more" than Americans, Ken Brown of Scotland said.

And there was definitely a bit more wind during Thursday's opening round than anyone wanted. About half of the elite field shot 77 or higher.

But, with one notable exception, the six-man European group felt right at home.

Brown posted a 73, Bernhard Langer of West Germany shot a 71, Spain's Seve Ballesteros was in at 73, Sandy Lyle of Scotland had a 71 and England's Nick Faldo used 75 shots.

All were within striking distance of co-leaders Larry Nelson and Robert Wrenn, who posted 69s.

The lone European flop was Ian Woosnam of Wales, who won five tournaments on the European tour in 1987 and might have been the best player in the world last year.

Not so this windy Thursday. Woosnam wobbled home to an 81.

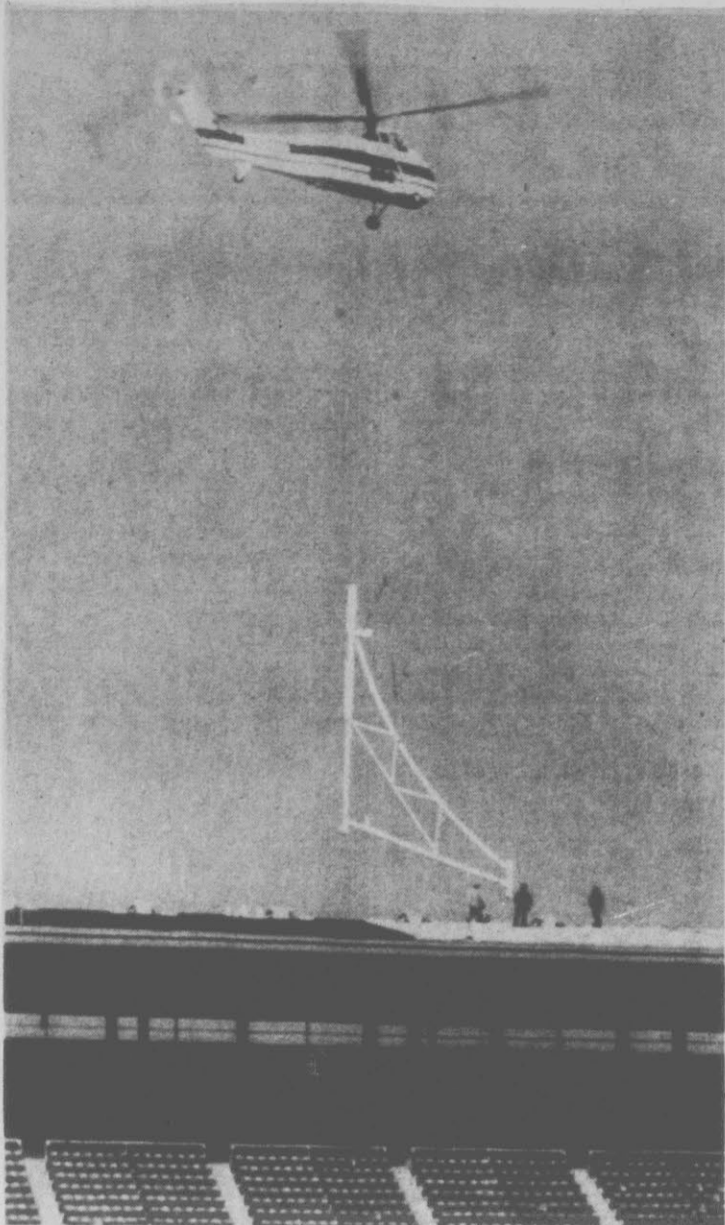

"It was a two-club day today," Brown said, explaining that the 30 mph wind gusts could mean a two-club change from the norm in either direction.

"It was extremely difficult to club yourself."

The European courses, particularly those in Britain, are made with the wind in mind. Not so Augusta.

"It was very similar to British wind," Brown said. "But you can't roll the ball onto the green here like you can in Britain," where a punch-and-roll shot under the wind is a very effective weapon.

Ballesteros agreed.

Lights Up

Rittenhouse Is Inamori Leader

POWAY, Calif. (AP) — Lenore Rittenhouse has discovered the pleasures of dull.

Sand traps, water, rough and all other such impediments to low scoring in golf fell away on Thursday as Rittenhouse shot a 6-under-par 65 to take a two-shot lead after 18 holes of the $225,000 San Diego Inamori Classic.

It was the best round of her career and left her hungry for more dull golf.

"Actually, these real good rounds are boring ... but I want to play boring golf all week," Rittenhouse said. "I hope I bore myself to death."

Three-time tournament winner Patty Sheehan helped make up for three bogeys with seven birdies to post a 67 that put her in a second-place tie with Anne-Marie Palli of France, who shot her lowest score of the season.

"I haven't led a tournament since my rookie season," said Rittenhouse, whose only victory was in the 1983 Mayflower Classic. "You can forget what you're doing by thinking about staying in the lead. Hopefully, I'm older and more experienced now."

Rittenhouse's previous low round in eight tour seasons was the 67 she shot in the first round of last year's Mayflower Classic, but she couldn't duplicate it and eventually finished tied for 41st.

On Thursday, she strung nine pars after a first-hole birdie before catching fire on the supposedly more difficult back side. She had birdies at

Nos. 11, 14 and 16 and an eagle at the par-5 17th hole.

"I hit the ball well and missed only one green," Rittenhouse said. "I hit good drives that were always in play. That's probably the key to this golf course, setting up good approaches."

Rittenhouse said her score was surprising because she hasn't putted well lately.

"Sinking a few 15-footers really helped. I haven't done that in a while."

Six players finished shot 68, three strokes off the lead, including Colleen Walker, who finished second in last week's Nabisco Dinah Shore. She was joined by 24-year LPGA veteran Sandra Palmer and Korea's Ok-Hee Ku.

Defending tournament champion Ayako Okamoto of Japan, Dot Germain and Lynn Connelly each finished with 69s, one shot ahead of a seven-player group at 70 that included Nancy Lopez.

Nineteen players broke par on the hilly 6,021-yard StoneRidge Country Club course, and 15 others matched par 71, including Kathy Whitworth, a 30-year LPGA veteran whose 88 career victories is the most for a woman pro.

Amy Alcott, the season's leading money winner after winning the Dinah Shore, finished near the middle of the 142-player field with a 72.

Sheehan, who won the Inamori tournament on different courses in 1982, 1983 and 1986, said she had one of her best opening rounds of the season.

Work Begins On Wrigley Lights

CHICAGO (AP) — The only question left to answer now is who will throw out the first bulb.

Years of political maneuvering, hand-wringing, name-calling, maybe even an era, ended Thursday when light stands began going up at venerable Wrigley Field, where for 72 years, the Chicago Cubs played baseball only in the sunshine.

"It's funny," said 14-year-old Josh Reingold, watching a helicopter lift girders to a work crew positioned atop the left-field deck. "I thought the people in the neighborhood had some fight left in them."

The Cubs owner, Tribune Co., had fought pitched battles with Chicago aldermen over noise ordinances, state legislators over statutes, and a handful of vocal neighborhood groups in court over lights at Wrigley since acquiring the ballclub in 1981.

But a City Council vote last month removed the final roadblock, even while limiting the team to 18 lighted regular-season contests each season.

And sometime later this season — team officials will not say when, pending completion of the construction — the Cubs will become the last team to join baseball's enlightened fraternity.

They do so more than five decades after the Cincinnati Reds played the first major league game under the lights of now-defunct Crosley Field, and 40 years after the Detroit Tigers became the last to do so. "It's about time," said Bud Hora, who figures he's spent 65 of his 75 years rooting for baseball's previously lightless lovable losers. "I wasn't sure I'd see them in my lifetime."

A helicopter arrived at 8 a.m., and began the first of two dozen short trips up the wall. Cars stopped, pedestrians gawked, and more than one neighbor ran back to grab a camera. A nearby McDonald's and Yum Yum donuts bustled with traffic.

"It is an event, I suppose, but we didn't want it to turn into one," said Don Greesko, the club's executive vice president and the point man in the pitched battles between the Tribune Co. and neighborhood groups. "That's why we didn't give any advance warning."

All told, Wrigley Field will have just six banks of lights, three each on the left- and right-field decks. The 1,500-watt floodlights will sit atop 26 panels, whose latticework mirror the arches found throughout the 74-year-old structure.

The bleachers in left, center and right will remain exactly as they are.

"That was my big worry," 80-year-old John Santos said. "I didn't take a position on the whole thing, but if they started fooling with the bleachers, they would have lost my vote — quick."

The ballclub insists it will remain a good neighbor, accommodating the community even in the design and position of the light.

"I grew up around Forbes Field (in Pittsburgh) and I can remember when they tore that down," Greesko said. "Obviously there is something unique about day baseball, and I can understand that something will be lost."

But we intend to remain a predominantly day baseball team ... and when we added up our responsibilities to baseball, the city, the community, we felt the most important thing was to retain Wrigley Field for the long term. Lights will enable us to do that."

For all Thursday's activity, however, at least one spectator was unimpressed.

"Is this history being made? I don't know. Is this the end of an era? I don't know," said Sgt. James Kehoe, whose district includes Wrigley Field and whose job it will be to control crowds of up to 40,000 spilling into a quiet residential neighborhood at 10 p.m.

Greene Central Rips Bruins, 10-4

WILSON — Greene Central wasted little time in letting Wilson Beddingfield know who was boss in the first round of the Wilson Optimist Baseball Tournament Thursday night. The Rams rolled up a 10-4 victory in the first round of the event.

The Rams will meet Wilson Hunt, a winner over Wilson Fike, in the championship game tonight at 7:45 p.m. Fike and Beddingfield will play for the consolation title at 5 p.m. All games are played at Fleming Stadium.

The Rams scored five times in the top of the first inning to put the game away. T.J. Johnson walked and Anthony Jones singled. Tommy Eason then cracked a three-run homer.

Shay Beamon kept it going with a single and Cornelius Hill walked. Alan Vandiford then singled in Beamon and an error on the play scored Hill.

The Rams added two more in the second, along with single runs in the third, sixth and seventh. Beddingfield scored three times in the sixth and once in the seventh for its total.

Jones, who had a solo homer in the second inning, led the Greene Central attack with three hits while Beamon, Hill and Cedric Collins each collected a pair of hits.

No one had more than one hit for Beddingfield.

Greene Central climbs to 6-1 on the year with the victory.

Interference Call Aids Chisox

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

You thought this was the Year of the Balk? In Chicago, it's the Year of the Interference Call?

For the second time this young season, an umpire's interference ruling at a key point in a tight ballgame went in favor of a team from the Windy City.

On Tuesday night, the Chicago Cubs beat Atlanta 10-9 in 13 innings after an interference call against Gerald Perry of the Braves wiped out what would have been the winning run in the bottom of the ninth.

On Thursday, the Chicago White Sox held off California 2-1 thanks to a game-ending double play that included an interference call against the Angels' Wally Joyner.

Chicago's Dave LaPoint lost his shutout bid with one out in the ninth on consecutive doubles by Tony Armas and Chili Davis. Reliever Bill Long walked Joyner but got Brian Downing to hit a grounder to second baseman Fred Manrique, who threw to shortstop Ozzie Guillen. Umpire Jim McKean ruled it a double play, saying the sliding Joyner had interfered with Guillen.

"There was no interference," California manager Cookie Rojas said. "Joyner was sliding into second base. He was trying to break up a double play. He's not out of line. He didn't grab the guy."

Maybe he did and maybe he didn't. "I'm not denying I stuck my arm out, but that's no different than sticking my foot out," Joyner said. "Ozzie wasn't making an effort to throw anywhere."

Guillen, on the other hand, said Joyner "tried to grab my right leg." And White Sox manager Jim Fregosi said replays showed Joyner had his arm locked around Guillen's leg.

"There's no question about it," he said.

In other American League games, Detroit outslugged Boston 11-6, Kansas City defeated Toronto 7-4 and Cleveland downed Texas 4-1. The Minnesota-New York and Milwaukee-Baltimore games were rained out.

LaPoint took a three-hit shutout in the ninth inning and had retired 15 California batters in a row before Armas' double.

"Early on, my fastball was moving because of the wind and the dryness," LaPoint said. "After I got going, my changeup was working."

The White Sox scored off Chuck Finley on Ivan Calderon's RBI single in the fourth inning. They made it 2-0 in the fifth when Lance Johnson's grounder to shortstop went through the legs of Dick Schofield, snapping his errorless game streak at 43. The error scored Guillen, who singled and took second on a groundout.

LaPoint called the game-ending double play "a thing of beauty," adding, "Wally's a gamer. He's going to try to break up the double play. He just got caught."

Tigers 11, Red Sox 6

Matt Nokes drove in five runs with a pair of homers and a single and Pat Sheridan and Tom Brookens had four hits apiece to pace a 21-hit Detroit attack. Brookens drove in four runs and Alan Trammell and Jim Morrison each had three hits.

Frank Tanana, 1-0, won it. He allowed 10 hits and five runs in seven innings, including a first-inning homer by Spike Owen and three hits by Marty Barrett.

Don Heinkel, making his major league debut, allowed one run over the final two innings to preserve the victory for Detroit in 40-degree weather.

Because of the chilly conditions in Boston, the Red Sox scratched Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd as their scheduled starter. Boyd, coming back from shoulder surgery, was replaced by rookie Steve Ellsworth, who was tagged for eight hits and five runs in two innings, plus three batters in the third.

Mike Smithson relieved Ellsworth and gave up five runs on eight hits in 3 1-3 innings. Rookie John Trautwein gave up five hits and one run before being relieved by Wes Gardner, who pitched a hitless ninth.

Nokes hit a leadoff homer in the second inning and a three-run shot in the third. Brookens had a double and three singles, Sheridan had a triple and three singles, Trammell had three singles and Morrison had a pair of doubles and a single.

Royals 7, Blue Jays 4

Danny Tartabull hit a three-run homer and Kurt Stillwell had a two-run inside-the-park homer as Kansas City salvaged the finale of the season-opening three-game series. Kevin Seitzer hit a solo homer and RBI single for the Royals and winner Mark Gubicza allowed three runs and five hits in six innings.

Tartabull homered in the first inning off Jim Clancy after Seitzer walked and George Brett singled.

Indians 4, Rangers 1

Cory Snyder's two-run homer broke a seventh-inning tie. Snyder connected after Brook Jacoby led off with a double, his third hit. Mel Hall added an RBI single in the eighth, while winner John Farrell gave up one run and six hits in six innings.

Loser Jose Guzman pitched a seven-hitter with 12 strikeouts.

"Last year, I never remembered him having the changeup he did tonight," Snyder said. "He really had great stuff. I just got lucky. He got it up too high, slow and inside, and I was able to punch it out."

DeLeon Is Given Little Chance

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Carlos DeLeon could be forgiven for feeling like a forgotten man going into Saturday's fight against Evander Holyfield for the undisputed cruiserweight title.

A prohibitive 9-1 underdog, DeLeon has been all but ignored as the pre-fight attention centered around the unbeaten Holyfield and his plans to leave the 190-pound ranks for a future fight against heavyweight champion Mike Tyson.

Even DeLeon's manager, Yamil Chade, doesn't exactly bubble over with confidence when he talks about his fighter's chances.

"If he loses, he's going to lose with dignity," Chade said. "He's not going to run from Holyfield."

If DeLeon stays put, however, he could be in trouble.

Holyfield has a 17-0 record with 13 knockouts since turning professional and has looked increasingly sharp in knocking out his last five opponents.

On paper, at least, the fight is a mismatch, despite the fact DeLeon is a champion himself, holding the World Boxing Council version of the cruiserweight title. Still, Holyfield knows he has too much to lose by taking DeLeon lightly.

"Tyson is definitely in the future but with me it's each and every fight that's important," Holyfield said. "I can't see myself fighting Tyson until I take care of the opponent in front of me."

Tyson's shadow has loomed large over the scheduled 12-round fight, which matches the veteran DeLeon against the fighter many consider a definite threat to Tyson in the heavyweight ranks.

Holyfield, a bronze medal winner in the 1984 Olympics after a controversial disqualification in a semi-final bout, has said this will be his last fight at 190 pounds. He'll return to Atlanta to bulk up for his heavyweight debut, now slated for July.

"I can dominate this division but what I really want is the heavyweight championship," Holyfield said.

Holyfield, who holds the World Boxing Association and International Boxing Federation 190-pound titles, plans three or four heavyweight fights before trying to fight Tyson in a potential big-money bout sometime next year.

"Tyson has built up the credibility as an unbeaten fighter and has proven that today he is the best," Holyfield said. "I want to be the heavyweight champion and I want to fight the best man to get there."

First, however, he must beat DeLeon, who won the cruiserweight crown for the first time in 1980. He has since lost it and regained it twice and carries a 43-3 record into the fight.

"This guy is crafty. He's got a good jab, a good right hand," Holyfield said.

"It will be a better fight than most people think," Chade said. "Holyfield is good, but not to beat DeLeon so easily as everyone thinks."

Carter Celebrates Early With A Pair Of Homers

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Gary Carter is getting older. Maybe he's getting better, too.

Carter, who turned 34 today, celebrated early by hitting two solo home runs Thursday night as the New York Mets beat the Montreal Expos 8-5.

The Mets are hoping this will be a good year for Carter, a 10-time All-Star who slumped to .235 last season. Manager Davey Johnson plans to give his catcher plenty of rest; Carter, who also threw out Mitch Webster trying to steal, may make that decision difficult if he continues playing well.

Darryl Strawberry continued hitting, connecting for his National League-leading third home run of the season. Strawberry usually does well against Montreal — .309 in his career.

But Carter, traded by Montreal to the Mets after the 1984 season, has never fared well against his ex-team, especially at Olympic Stadium. He began this season with a .216 career average against the Expos, his lowest against any club.

"I probably have been pressing when I came here in the past," Carter said. "When you hear the catcalls, you want to do well."

"But I'm not thinking about it anymore. Besides, this is my fourth year in New York, and my time here (in Montreal) is in the past."

Elsewhere in the NL, San Francisco beat San Diego 6-1, Los Angeles downed Atlanta 5-2 and Cincinnati defeated St. Louis 8-1. The Pittsburgh at Philadelphia game was rained out.

Carter homered in the third inning against Neal Heaton, 0-1, for a 4-2 lead.

Strawberry's two-run homer chased Heaton in the fifth and Carter followed with a home run against Andy McGaffigan. Carter has 28 multi-homer games in his career.

Keith Hernandez had a pair of RBI singles as Bob Ojeda beat Montreal for the first time in four career decisions. Ojeda gave up seven hits in seven innings and left because his right knee began stiffening.

"It's swollen, but I don't think it's serious," Ojeda said.

Heaton, averaging under two walks per game, walked three batters in the first inning as the Mets took a 3-0 lead. Hernandez and Kevin Elster had RBI singles and Tim Teufel walked with the bases loaded.

"I don't think my stuff was that bad," said Heaton, who has lost all three of his career decisions to the Mets. "But I just kept falling behind too many hitters."

Heaton hit a two-run single in the second, and Montreal made it 4-4 in the fourth on run-scoring singles by Luis Rivera and Casey Candaele.

Trailing 8-4, the Expos loaded the bases with no outs in the ninth on errors by reliever Roger McDowell and Elster, a rookie shortstop who pulled his foot off second base while trying to turn a double play.

McDowell escaped by retiring Tim Raines on an RBI forceout, getting Mitch Webster on a popout and finishing Hubie Brooks on a fly ball.

Giants 6, Padres 1
Mike Krukow pitched four-hit ball for seven innings and Bob Brenly and Brett Butler homered as San Francisco won its home opener before 54,543 fans.

Krukow, a 20-game winner two years ago who slumped to 5-6 last season, struck out six and walked one. Benito Santiago homered for San Diego in the seventh.

Brenly hit the Giants' first homer of the season, a three-run shot in the fourth against Eric Show, 0-1. Butler hit a solo homer in the fifth off Eric Nolte.

The Padres have lost all three of their games this season.

Reds 8, Cardinals 1
Danny Jackson pitched a three-hitter and drove home two runs in his NL debut as Cincinnati beat visiting St. Louis.

Jackson, acquired from Kansas City in the winter, worked around seven walks and a home run by Bob Horner. He contributed his first major-league hit, an RBI single after a fake bunt, and a sacrifice fly.

Eric Davis hit a solo homer and RBI single. Kal Daniels drove in two runs with two doubles.

Reds rookie Chris Sabo, filling in for the injured Buddy Bell, tied the major league record for assists by a third baseman with 11.

Jose DeLeon, obtained from the Chicago White Sox, gave up four runs on five hits and six walks in 3 2-3 innings.

Dodgers 5, Braves 2
Pedro Guerrero's two-run single snapped a 2-2 tie in the ninth inning and Los Angeles won in Atlanta. The Braves have lost their first three games this season.

The Dodgers loaded the bases against Paul Assenmacher, 0-1, and Guerrero singled off Jim Acker. Mike Marshall followed with an RBI single.

Wilkins Gets An Unusual Perspective At The End

ATLANTA (AP) — It was an unusual perspective for Dominique Wilkins.

"It was different finishing the last quarter on the bench," said Wilkins, who with the rest of the Atlanta starters sat out the final period in the Hawks' 120-94 NBA victory over the New Jersey Nets Thursday night.

"I had fun over there," said Wilkins, who scored 18 points, as did Kevin Willis and Randy Wittman.

It was the seventh consecutive victory for the Hawks and brought them within one-half game of Central Division leader Detroit. The Pistons play in Philadelphia tonight, then in Atlanta Saturday.

For the Nets, making their first road trip since Willis Reed was named coach, it was the eighth straight loss.

In the only other NBA game, Akeem Olajuwon scored 22 points, leading seven Houston players in double figures, and grabbed 15 rebounds as the Rockets held off Utah's fourth-quarter rally for a 113-107 victory.

"We needed one like this to go into the Detroit game," Hawks guard Glenn Rivers said. "Jersey gave us a good game. The last two were struggles. They have a good team and they'll get better under Willis Reed."

Reserve guard John Battle, who is working back into playing condition after a bout with hepatitis, led the reserves with 16 points.

"The Hawks are thinking they can beat anyone and that's the way we have to think," Battle said. "Everybody's playing well and we're really getting into the offense. Detroit knows we are playing well, and we'll be ready to play Saturday night."

Hawks Coach Mike Fratello benched his starters to give his reserves a serious workout.

"I wanted that group on the floor to assert themselves, especially after the last game," Fratello said. He referred to Tuesday night's victory over Milwaukee, when the Bucks put on a charge every time Fratello gave his starters a breather.

"One of Atlanta's strengths is they are 10 deep. Everyone came off and played well for them," said Reed.

"We tried to execute and run the plays, but it was just one of those days," New Jersey's Dudley Bradley said. "Even the dunks weren't falling."

Wilkins scored 14 of his points in the second quarter, when the Hawks broke away from New Jersey, outscoring the Nets 24-9 over the last six minutes for a 62-43 halftime lead. New Jersey could get no closer than 17 points in the second half.

"We set the tone with 15 first-half turnovers," said Reed. "They were a part of that. It's obvious that I've seen us have our best effort. We're down to a point where they don't have much left. I mean, where are we going? It was good for me to come in now and make general assessments.

"We have guys out that need to come back to make contributions. We have to try to play as best as we can for the rest of the season."

Tim McCormick had a game-high 23 points for New Jersey, which is 0-4 against Atlanta this season.

Both Atlanta and Detroit have 47 victories but the Hawks have lost 26 games to Detroit's 25.

Pressure Growing

VERSAILLES, Ky. (AP) — Pressure is growing for former governor and baseball commissioner A.B. "Happy" Chandler to resign from the University of Kentucky Board of Trustees because of a racial epithet he used.

But Chandler said Thursday his record on race issues is outstanding and he would weather the storm.

A group of Lexington civic and political leaders scheduled a news conference today to add their voices to the chorus calling for Chandler to resign.

Chandler, though, said it was a "minor proposition" that paled in comparison to his long dedication to improving race relations.

"I don't reckon there's anybody in this lifetime has made any greater contribution to race relations and good feelings between black and white people than your humble servant, and I think the record will show that," the 89-year-old Chandler said.

The controversial remark was made on Tuesday during an investment committee meeting. The university decided in 1985 to dispose of its investments in South Africa because of its racial policies.

"You know Zimbabwe's all nigger now. There aren't any whites," Chandler said.

Among the protests that resulted from the remark was a decision by the UK football team to boycott Thursday's practice session.

"He doesn't realize that this is the '80s. This is 1988 and we don't like being called that anymore. ... I mean, we never did like being called that. The term is not acceptable," said team spokesman Dave Johnson, a defensive back from Louisville who will be a senior in the fall.

The team planned to resume practice today and participate in a rally calling for Chandler's resignation.

107-104 with 1:06 left in the game on a basket by Thurl Bailey. A stuff shot by Rodney McCray and four free throws by Purvis Short preserved Houston's victory and gave the third-place Rockets a 3 1/2-game over Utah in the Midwest Division.

Karl Malone scored 33 points and grabbed 12 rebounds and led Utah's fourth-quarter charge. Bailey had 22 points. Sleepy Floyd and Short each added 20 for the Rockets.

Houston outrebounded Utah 61-45 after being outrebounded 66-45 in a 110-97 loss to Denver on Tuesday night.

"We knew we had to rebound to do better," McCray said. "We went for the ball more aggressively. If you get called for a foul, that's just the way it is."

"Every game with them is very physical," Olajuwon said. "(Mark) Eaton is so big and strong, you just know you have to play harder against them."

Opening lead: ? The great British author Terence Reese wrote that there is no such thing as a blind opening lead; only deaf opening leaders. What he meant is aptly illustrated by this hand.

Since North had guaranteed a heart suit with his takeout double, South might have tried three no trump, which would have been a touch-and-go affair, rather than contract for 11 tricks in a minor suit. But then we would not have had the chance to test your opening lead skills. To be completely fair, study only the auction and the West hand, then decide on your opening lead before reading on.

There is a tremendous amount of knowledge about the distribution to be gleaned from the bidding. For his takeout double, North had to have heart length and spade shortness. East's preemptive jump in hearts showed considerable length in that suit and, almost surely, spade shortness. Hence declarer, who had announced long clubs, had to have some spade length and, therefore, rated to be short in the red suits.

The chances of the defenders scoring any ruffs were slight; but declarer surely would be able to take ruffs in both hands. To cut down on his ruffing ability, West led a trump. That proved to be the killing lead. Before declarer could ruff all his losers, he had to give up a trick in either spades or diamonds. Whichever he chose, West would be able to win a quick spade or a delayed diamond trick (should South lead toward the king) and lead a second trump, and declarer would come to only 10 tricks.

Had West led a major suit, declarer would have had all the time in the world, with careful play, to complete his crossruff. See the difference for yourself by playing out the hand.

Nominees Look For First Oscar

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The race for best supporting actor of 1987 provides Academy voters a choice among a perspiring TV reporter, a steely Chicago cop, a philandering Brooklyn husband, a wily New York City pimp and a South African martyr.

The nominees are a diverse lot, ranging from the first James Bond to a stand-up comedian. None has ever won an Oscar.

Sean Connery is generally considered the quintessential 007, a role that seemed impossible for him to escape. But after 30 years in films, he has finally been recognized for his performance as another enforcer, the Irish beat cop Jimmy Malone in "The Untouchables."

"I thought it was a very clever concept to take the old cop and use him as a kind of old dog who teaches a new dog tricks," says Connery of his role as mentor to the young federal agent, Kevin Costner.

Morgan Freeman accomplished the near-impossible: winning a nomination in a film released early in the year to scant notice. His role as vicious "Fast Black" in "Street Smart" was dynamic enough to remain in Academy voters' minds.

Born in Memphis and raised in Greenwood, Miss., before moving to Chicago, Freeman built up an impressive number of stage credits before appearing in such films as "Brubaker," "Teachers" and "Marie." His performance in "Street Smart" prompted this outburst from the New Yorker's Pauline Kael: "Is Morgan Freeman the greatest actor in America today?"

Vincent Gardenia, Cher's excitable father in "Moonstruck," has been in the New York theater since 1954 and films since 1958. He also was a member of the "All in the Family" cast on television.

Gardenia was ideal casting as the Italian plumber; his family emigrated from Naples, and he began acting in New York's Italian theater. He was delighted with the "Moonstruck" script: "It was the first about an Italian family in a long time that you don't see shooting, killings, bombings. It's about love, about family."

Denzel Washington was cast in "Cry Freedom" after a worldwide search for an actor to play the vital role of Steven Biko, the black leader who was beaten to death by South African police while in their custody.

Washington admits that his nomination was "both a letdown and a great honor." The letdown came because Universal Pictures had been promoting him for best actor, and he had been nominated for a Golden Globe in that category. He adds that his reaction wasn't the result of an actor's ego.

Albert Brooks, the astute reporter and failed anchorman of "Broadcast News," is noted for directing himself in films: "Real Life," "Modern Romance," "Lost in America."

Oscar's Top Cop Is Ready

By JEFF WILSON
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — As top cop for the Academy Awards, Jerry Moon's job is to conjure up nightmarish scenarios and make sure he can respond to any calamity that might disrupt Hollywood's biggest night.

"Woe be unto anyone who tries to disrupt the show," Moon said.

Intruders simply won't get past Moon's security phalanx at Monday night's 60th annual Oscar ceremony, which has moved to the refurbished Shrine Auditorium five miles south of downtown.

Moon, 60 — a former professional wrestler, ex-policeman and retired security chief for Disney Studios — has been Oscar's bodyguard for 17 years, and he's ready for just about anything.

"By Monday, you just sit back and wring your hands and hope you thought of everything," he said.

In addition 6,000 of the well-heeled and glamorous, the Academy Awards attracts a worldwide audience of millions, a curbside throng of squealing fans and sometimes a seamy contingent of malcontents, derelicts and fanatics.

In the past, there have been bomb threats, political demonstrations, imposters, publicity-seekers and star-struck fans with elaborate schemes to get inside. There has never been a serious offense, however.

"We talk to young people and find out what the latest fad is," Moon said, when asked about anticipating untoward acts. "There was the pie in the face fad, the streaker fad, you name it and there is usually a new fad."

But discussions with students this year haven't given him any clues.

"Apparently the younger people are more intent on their studies," he said. "We can't find any one thing that is really in the mind of the kids. We have to think of everything as being a possibility and use our imaginations."

Many have tired to pass illicitly through entrances in the past, but only a few have succeeded. There was

Robert Opel, the infamous on-camera stalker of 1974.

Opel, since deceased, was able to obtain credentials that permitted him backstage. Moon said that security hole has been plugged. "I have yet to convince myself there wasn't some collusion there," he said.

There was once an imposter in a California Highway Patrol uniform who looked like actor Erik Estrada.

And a camper was once flushed out of a Music Center men's room stall the day before the awards show.

Demonstrators come almost yearly to the Academy Awards, drawn by the presence of the world's news media or irked by the nomination of a certain movie or star, such as Jane Fonda, Vanessa Redgrave and Charlie Chaplin.

$3 Billion Payment Settles Feud

By LAURA TOLLEY
Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — In the end, the four-year corporate war that forced oil giant Texaco into bankruptcy and the largest civil award in U.S. history came down to a silent, 10-minute electronic payment of $3 billion to Pennzoil.

borrowed $3 billion a couple of weeks ago so it could begin investing it in an orderly manner, spokesman Bob Harper said.

The transfer settling Pennzoil's takeover lawsuit against Texaco took place Thursday in a high-security room at Texas Commerce Bank-Houston — and, coincidentally, halfway between Pennzoil headquarters and the Texaco Building.

The war began with Texaco's acquisition of Getty. Pennzoil sued Texaco, claiming interference with a planned merger between Pennzoil and Getty. In November 1985, a Houston jury shocked Texaco by agreeing with Pennzoil and awarding the Houston company $10.53 billion in damages, the largest civil award in U.S. history.

As a half-dozen tight-lipped bank and Pennzoil executives watched, a green computer screen signaled the arrival of four Texaco payments, starting at 10:03 a.m. and ending at 10:13 a.m. About a dozen reporters and photographers watched.

A state appeals court upheld the verdict, but reduced the $3 billion in punitive damages to $1 billion.

When the transfer was complete, a few people applauded.

Nearly a year ago, Texaco filed for bankruptcy protection, saying it had to do so to avoid posting a potentially ruinous appeal bond.

"We're all very glad it's all over," said David Alderson, Pennzoil assistant treasurer.

In November, the Texas Supreme Court refused to hear Texaco's appeal and let the verdict stand. Texaco then said it was going to the U.S. Supreme Court, but a committee of shareholders proposed the settlement.

"Quite frankly, we've been in a holding pattern for over four years," Pennzoil Chairman J. Hugh Liedtke said later Thursday.

The premise of Pennzoil's case was that a handshake and a person's word was as good as a written contract, and that Texaco violated that rule by plucking Getty from Pennzoil's grasp.

"We think we're now in a position to invest these funds and to make up for lost time," Liedtke said.

Texaco contended Getty had invited it to bid and that there was no valid contract between Pennzoil and Getty because all the papers had not been signed by the appropriate parties.

The settlement of the suit, which stemmed from Texaco's 1984 acquisition of Getty Oil Co., allowed the White Plains, N.Y.-based company to emerge from bankruptcy protection.

It was part of Texaco's bankruptcy reorganization plan, which a federal judge approved March 23. Texaco also will begin paying $2.6 billion to other creditors.

Pennzoil, looking for long-term ways to invest the windfall, actually

P-GAC Serves As An Umbrella For Pitt County Groups

The Pitt-Greenville Arts Council is the umbrella organization for the arts in Pitt County. It serves 42 affiliated member groups and over 2,000 individual members, who represent visual, literary, performing and traditional folk arts.

P-GAC was formed in 1977 and reorganized into its present structure in 1979. It is operated by a 20-member policy making board of directors, and staffed by an executive director, office manager, and East Carolina University student interns.

It provides a variety of programs to the community which fall into two basic categories: services to member groups and community arts projects. Member groups are served through workshops conducted on arts management topics.

P-GAC also maintains a library on funding sources, provides grant writing assistance and public relations services, and offers financial assistance to emerging arts groups.

Many community arts projects are conducted and a variety of publications sponsored throughout the year.

In addition, P-GAC supports the Children's Holiday Celebration, school arts activities, and other projects developed each year.

Primary funding of P-GAC comes from the individual memberships and the generous support of businesses. Community support also comes from the City of Greenville, Pitt County, and the North Carolina Arts Council.

The Pitt-Greenville Arts Council has recently moved to a new location in the Flowers Complex at 101 W. 14th St. Everyone is invited to come by the offices to see the new space.

The present board of directors are: president, Su-Su A. Corbitt; vice president, Lou L. Miller; treasurer, Steve Blades; recording secretary, Margy Blount; corresponding secretary, Betsy Imsande; members are Elizabeth Allen, Dorenda Bryant, John Chaffee, Camilla L. Davis, Jo Eakin, Phil Flowers, Ellis Hall, James E. Holland, John McConney, Ronald Maxwell, Benta Newman, Rebecca Oats, Patricia Pertalion, Marian S. Steel, Kathy Taft, Emmy Whitehead, and Candace Dixon, immediate past president.

Varied Programs In Recreation

A large number of programs for Greenville citizens of all ages is available all year long, programs and activities furnished by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department.

The programs cover indoor and outdoor activities in fields such as art instruction, science programs in the parks, sports events in city facilities, fitness programs for young and old, and open park space designed for a retreat haven from the noise of daily life.

Each year, the department sponsors one of the most popular of all city outdoor events, the annual Sunday in the Park held on the Town Common.

County Survey

The architecture of homes, commercial and public buildings in Pitt County is currently being surveyed and recorded in a year-long project of the Pitt County Historical Society.

A specialist in architectural survey, Scott Power, is gathering information on the history of buildings from the past, and the ways in which they served a primarily agricultural society. Each site is recorded, and in many instances is intensively photographed.

Eventually, a publication is planned that will be a record of these places, many of a type disappearing from the local scene.

Rossini Opera On Stage At ECU Saturday

THE BARBER OF SEVILLE—Rossini's comic opera, "The Barber of Seville," will be performed at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in the A.J. Fletcher Music Center on the East Carolina University campus. Admission fee is $4 and tickets can be purchased at the door prior to the performance hour.

The National Opera Company will present "The Barber of Seville" on Saturday, at 7:30 p.m. at the A. J. Fletcher Music Center at East Carolina University.

The opera, to be sung in English, will delight both opera veterans and those people attending their first opera. The National Opera Company is a troupe of young singing professionals based in Raleigh.

First produced in 1816, the appeal of "The Barber of Seville" has never faded. Abounding in brilliant melody, rollicking good spirits, and comic situations, the opera provides an amusing and enjoyable spectacle of entertainment.

The irrepressible Figaro, who modestly admits he is the finest barber in all Seville, gives all his assurances that he can cure their ills and find any suitor a suitable spouse, for a suitable price, that is.

The National Opera Company, formerly the Grass Roots Opera, was founded in 1948 by the late A.J. Fletcher, an attorney and businessman in Raleigh. There were three major aims expressed by Fletcher for the opera group — to give experience to young singers; to provide the public an opportunity to hear opera in their own language, and to introduce opera as an art form to the school children of North Carolina.

The troupe has toured 36 states performing nearly 3,000 times, always singing in English. More than two million school children in North Carolina alone have attended their performances.

Artist Billy Walls To Be Showcased In Photo Exhibition

Greenville artist Billy Walls will be honored at a reception showcasing his 1988 Eastern Carolina Arts Festival photography exhibit on Wednesday from 6 to 8 p.m. in the lobby of the BB&T building, 2000 Venture Tower Dr. The show runs from April 11-16 to coincide with the arts festival.

THE ART SCENE

A wide choice of opportunities for viewing art is available year-long in Greenville. The Greenville Museum of Art, 802 South Evans Street, and Gray Gallery in the School of Art, ECU, are the two primary sources for art shows.

Wearable Art To Be Featured In Florist Show

On April 15 Jefferson's Florist will host an evening of mixed media and talent from 7 to 9 p.m. The first show of its kind, "Wearable Art" will feature artists from the Eastern Carolina community as well as faculty members from East Carolina University.

The artists are potters, painters, weavers, silversmiths, set designers, actors, and dancers reflecting a broad range of talent, all of whom will interpret their art into "wearable" form.

There are no restrictions on media, which will result in a visual delight.

Student Spring Joys Of Times Gone By

Older citizens can recall the days when spring's arrival signaled group singing of spring songs in weekly chapel programs held in school auditoriums.

Spring, too, was time for celebration of May Day with its May Pole, boys and girls dressed in their Sunday finery — that rare day when boys could chase girls to proffer a fistful of dandelions or clover flowers, and not be chastised or teased.

Today it seems these festive school events are not as much in favor as they were 20, 30 or 40 years ago. Perhaps the coming of the 21st century will bring a nostalgic return to these innocent student joys.

Tar Heel Festivals

Festivals in all seasons of the year have become an integral part of the scene in eastern North Carolina. Many are held in the spring, when people eagerly return outdoors after the chill of winter months.

One of the area's oldest area festivals, the Tulip Festival of Beaufort County, was celebrated in the late 1930s until the years of World War II and has recently been revived in Washington. Belhaven's Fourth of July observance is another well-known Beaufort County event.

In neighboring Martin County, a one-day Herring Festival on the banks of the Roanoke River in Jamesville draws big crowds for its food and its show of arts and crafts.

Fish is the centerpiece of Pitt County's annual Shad Festival, a time when a number of events bracket gourmet offerings of this small river fish.

Seafood again is the object of festivities for the fishing village of Sneads Ferry for its annual Shrimp Festival. Each year in Beaufort, the yearly Strange Seafood Festival is packed with visitors willing to devour anything that comes from the sea — a gourmet ritual of brave experimentation.

Wilmington, North Carolina's primary seaport, for nearly four decades has been the site of the state's foremost outdoor spring affair, the annual Azalea Festival where the arts, entertainment and parades are tied in with tours of historic homes and the city's famed azalea gardens.

Leo And Nancy Jenkins Are Festival Grand Marshalls

The eighth annual Eastern Carolina Arts Festival is honored to have Leo and Nancy Jenkins participate as Grand Marshalls during Festival week. The Jenkinses are dedicated friends of the arts.

Nancy Jenkins, a member of the Greenville City Council, is a past member of the board of directors of the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council.

Among her many civic endeavors is her membership on the Executive Mansion Fine Arts Committee in Raleigh. In Greenville she serves on the board of directors of the East Carolina University Art Enthusiasts, a support group for the ECU School of Art.

Dr. Jenkins was chancellor of East Carolina University until his retirement in 1978.

He has been involved in many cultural organizations including the North Carolina Arts Council. He is president of the ECU Art Enthusiasts, and is also an artist who has painted in oils for many years.

SUZUKI CONCERT — Young musicians, members of the Suzuki Violinists of Eastern North Carolina, will present a festival concert at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at Wahl-Coates School. The event is free and open to the public.

Suzuki Festival Thursday

The Suzuki Violinists of Eastern North Carolina will present a concert at Wahl-Coates School Thursday at 7 p.m. Among the works to be performed will be a selection of folk tunes, dances, concerti and fiddle tunes.

Marilyn Alexander and Diane Hawkins will be the piano accompanists for the concert.

The preschool through high school age students represent a wide range of achievement levels in the Suzuki repertoire. Members of the group are from towns in Pitt and Beaufort Counties.

The Suzuki method of music instruction was brought to the U.S. about 20 years ago and is now in practice worldwide. It was developed by Dr. Shinichi Suzuki shortly after World War II as a means to bring beauty and pride to the Japanese children.

Unlike traditional music education, all students learn the same pieces of music. Students learn an instrument in order to develop certain techniques in a logical progression. The Suzuki method also stresses parental involvement; parents attend classes to observe the teacher and take notes for practice at home.

Another popular aspect to this method is the emphasis on group performances and a minimization of competitiveness among students.

Greenville is the site of the state's only Suzuki Institute, a week long summer program offering intensive instruction and ensemble playing for strings and piano. The program has drawn students and teachers from across the U.S. and from Europe.

Area violin teachers who coordinate the work of the group include Kathryn Jenkins, Jon Shaw, Candace Dixon, Stephen Bath, Joanne Bath, Carol Moore, Dr. Rodney Schmidt, Wendy Bissinger, Mary Paul Castellow, Sarah Yarbrough, and John Livesay.

Farmville Schedules A Gala Festival Of Dogwood & Arts

MULTI-TALENTED PERFORMER — Meg MacLeod will be one of the performers at the Farmville Festival: Dogwood and the Arts. Ms. MacLeod is an artist-in-residence with the Mountain Arts Program in North Carolina elementary and middle schools.

Carolina Outdoor Dramas

Eastern North Carolina can proudly claim to be the first home of a 20th century form of entertainment, the outdoor drama.

Half a century ago, in 1937, Paul Green's symphonic drama, "The Lost Colony," performed on Roanoke Island, inaugurated a theatrical form that has taken root nationally.

Throughout North Carolina, summertime outdoor dramas tell the story of romance and historic highlights of a region. Most often the plot is supplemented with song and dance. Many of the dramas incorporate segments dealing with the lives of native American Indians.

The list continues to grow and include "Unto These Hills" in western North Carolina; "Inherit the Wind" at Pembroke; "The Liberty Cart" at Kenansville, and "First In Freedom" at Halifax.

There are others, too, and all serve dual purposes — fine family entertainment under starlight on warm nights, and opportunities for local talent to have an outlet for their dreams of being in the spotlight on stage.

FARMVILLE — On the weekend following the East Carolina Art Festival, the town of Farmville is having its Farmville Festival Dogwood and the Arts gala on April 22 and 23.

A wide spectrum of entertainment, arts, children's events and games will make up the offerings for the two day festival, which coincides with the peak time of dogwood flowering in the area.

In the area of entertainment, performers scheduled to appear include The Embers, the Super Grit Band, multiple-performer Meg MacLeod, a puppeteer show, a program of clogging, barbershop quartets and an appearance by Steve Myott, the Stilt Man.

Other events encompass such activities as Pitt County Schools on Parade, a progressive garden party and tour, basketball shoot-outs, a visit from Smokey the Bear and by McRuff the Crime Dog, Ronald McDonald and a children's kaleidoscope.

Hot air balloons will be featured, and there is to be art exhibits with a one-man show, an arts and antiques exhibit, sale of festival sweatshirts and caps, a dunkin' booth, sport and games events and a series of just-for-senior events, along with some special exhibits.

Celebrations of historic places in eastern North Carolina provides visitors with a wide choice of tours of old homes, courthouses, cemeteries and notable public buildings. These are held in places easily accessible to Greenville — in Bath, Edenton, Murfreesboro, Hertford and Tarboro.

Native American Trio Has Festival Spot On Saturday

Three Native Americans will be on hand Saturday at the Town Common to tell stories; with two to show and demonstrate Indian crafts and arts, and the third to relate his experiences as a modern day representative of folk medicine. They will be at the Town Common for several hours beginning at 10 a.m.

The trio is: Ken Marsh, part Cherokee-part Irish artist from Kentucky. Marsh is currently artist-in-residence at Pitt Community College. His work encompasses sculpture and paintings in the traditional Native American style.

His wife, Marty, will also be showing a selection of handcrafted jewelry.

The second artist, Davy Arch, now artist-in-residence at Craven Community College in Morehead City, will be showing his personal interpretation of traditional Cherokee Indian art. Arch's specialty is woodcarving and stone carving, with emphasis on masks formerly part of Cherokee religious rituals.

Ted Silverhead is a Tuscorara Indian now living in Philadelphia. He will tell visitors about his travels with a well-known Indian folk-medicine man, Rolling Thunder.

All three will relate the manner in which their work is a continuation in modern terms of their ancient heritage, customs and beliefs that is common to Native American tribes.

Some Things To Enjoy During Festival Days

PLEASURES OF GREENVILLE — Greenville offers many rewards to residents and visitors, things to be seen and enjoyed during the festival week and at any time of the year. Among these are shows at the Greenville Museum of Art where a sculpture of music (above) is currently on view. North of the Tar River, at River Park North, ponds, trees and nature trails provide a setting for quiet reflection. The scene shown here is a sandbag foot bridge that spans one of the park's streams.

Arts And Crafts To Be Demonstrated

DEMONSTRATIONS OF ARTS AND CRAFTS — Along with programs of entertainment activities scheduled for Super Sunday at Carolina East Mall are a number of demonstrations by artists and craftsmen to be on the scene. These will include weaving, pottery making and other forms of arts and crafts demonstrated by local and area people. The photograph above shows a weaver at work and answering questions during a previous Super Sunday opening festival day.

Life on the waters of North Carolina is observed each year with festivals in Beaufort, Elizabeth City and New Bern with competitions in sailing, canoeing and raft races combined with festive activities on shore.

Park Sites In And Near Greenville

Within a one-day driving distance of Greenville are several outstanding park and nature sites to be visited — places rich in natural beauty, places ideal for the loner, for lovers and for families.

In Greenville, the dominant park is River Park North. Here, open ground is ideal for light sports, with a large shelter for group picnics. Ponds offer fishing and wildlife viewing.

Other Greenville parks — Green Springs and the Town Common — are favorite places for sunbathing, strolling and a good place to meet friends.

Several state parks near enough for a one-day outing include Goose Creek State Park between Washington and Bath. Draperies of Spanish moss festoon twisted live oaks. A raised walkway over a marsh area is a safe way to observe swamp life year. In summer the small river beach is open. Picnic tables are plentiful, rough camping is available, and tree-shaded dirt trail meander through the forest and along the shore of Pamlico River.

Near Seven Springs, Cliffs of the Neuse State Park has fascinating evidence of geological changes, acres of native trees and shrubs and, in season, a lakeside place to swim.

North of Rocky Mount, Medoc State Park is another prime site for the enjoyment of nature at a point where rock outcrops and hills mark the beginning of the Piedmont. The park is in the center of the area inhabited by Haliwa-Saponi Indians.

Merchants Mill Pond near Gatesville is a favorite park, with its ancient cypress trees, dark waters covered with water lilies, and an abundance of bird and animal wildlife.

The best thing about all these places is that they are open all year for visitation, and all are free.

Art And Flowers Combined In Exhibition At Arlington Hall

FESTIVAL BOUQUET — Shown here is one of the floral arrangements at last year's exhibition of arts and flowers.

"Art In Bloom," is the title of the third annual art and flower show in conjunction with the East Carolina Arts Festival to held Tuesday, from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. at Arlington Hall Gallery. The flower part of the exhibition will demonstrate how flowers and plants can have a place in complementing fine art.

Pitt County garden clubs and a number of individuals have been asked to participate in the floral arrangements.

The art portion of this event is an exhibition of paintings by two artists, Joanna Huggins, a local artist and Jake Van Wyuck from Belhaven.

The two will show recent works of watercolors and pottery.

A reception to honor the two artists will be held at Arlington Hall during the two-hour opening night show of the floral art.

Their work will be on view through May 28.

The floral arrangements will remain on view for two days following the reception.

LITERARY CLUBS

Writers of poetry and fiction in Greenville can attend two clubs that meet on a regular basis. The Greenville Writers Club holds meeting at 8 p.m. each second and fourth Tuesday of the Month. The ECU Poetry Forum meets at 8 p.m. on the first and third Tuesdays.

Flowers In Art, And In Nature

For as long as history has been recorded, the beauty, color and fragrance of flowers have brightened the lives of mankind.

In art, flowers continue to be a traditional and beloved subject for artists. Their appeal never fades.

In nature, the cultivation of flowers has been practiced at all levels, in simple home gardens, in carefully planned landscaped yards, and in lavish parks where the art of planning for pleasing contrasts is an multifaceted, exacting art.

Flower arranging, too, is an art that reflects varying ideals of beauty in decoration — from the complicated simplicity of Oriental flower arranging to the creation of elaborate bouquets for home use, banquets and weddings, as a mark of love and as a final tribute at the time of death.

As long as mankind has a little space available, chances are he will devote time and effort to the cultivation of flowers — either outdoors or in potted soil indoors.

Poets have long lauded the touch of paradise and food for the soul that flowers offer.

GREENVILLE LIBRARIES

Greenville is served by three public libraries — the main library, Sheppard Memorial downtown and two branch libraries, Carver Library and East Branch Library.

At East Carolina University, Joyner Library is available to university personnel and also to community persons.
