GOP Optimistic Over No. 2 Spot

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — It took the Republican Party 72 years to elect its first North Carolina governor of the 20th Century, and the drought lingers on when it comes to the state's number-two office.

The long-suffering GOP sees 1988 as perhaps its best opportunity since Reconstruction to capture the post of lieutenant governor.

Republican optimism stems from several factors, including incumbent Democrat Bob Jordan's decision to forgo a re-election bid so he could challenge Republican Gov. Jim Martin. Also, the GOP's fortunes have improved in recent elections and Martin's coattails should help.

But what has some party insiders licking their chops is the candidacy of Jim Gardner, whom some view as the strongest Republican hopeful for lieutenant governor in modern times. Martin and Gardner would comprise "a hell of a ticket — fantastic," said Frank Rouse, former state GOP chairman.

"I can't imagine anyone beating Gardner in the primary," said Ted Arrington, political science professor at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte and a Republican.

But his two opponents are not about to concede the nomination to Gardner, a former U.S. Representative who was seen as the party's rising star before narrowly losing the 1968 gubernatorial race to Democrat Bob Scott. Gardner dropped out of politics after 1972, when he lost the race for the GOP gubernatorial nomination to former Gov. Jim Holshouser.

State Rep. Bill Boyd of Asheboro and former Sen. Wendell Sawyer of

JIM GARDNER

Greensboro have positioned themselves to the right of Gardner and portray him as a has-been, questioning his familiarity with current issues.

Sawyer accused Gardner, once the leader of the GOP's eastern-based, conservative wing in the pre-Jesse Helms era, of aligning himself with old-line Republicans for political expediency.

"It is my contention that Jim Gardner is a changed man," Sawyer said. "He is no longer a spokesman for the conservatives in the GOP."

Gardner says he has supporters from both camps and can bridge the gap between them.

Despite Sawyer's contentions, there's little evidence that the Republican candidates differ substantially on the issues — largely because there has been little in-depth discussion of them.

All three have pledged to support Martin's agenda. The most frequently discussed topic in their race is the need to confront "power brokers" in the Legislature, echoing the governor's charge that a handful of Democratic bosses make all the key decisions privately and intimidate or ignore dissenters.

"No longer will a legislative few deny the rights of the voting many," Gardner said in his announcement speech. "No longer will hidden agendas replace open discussion. No longer will private wishes take precedence over the public will."

Gardner, 54, co-founded the Hardee's hamburger chain in 1962 and now owns a group of barbecue restaurants. He's had successes and failures in business. Gardner has lined up endorsements from all 10 GOP senators and 23 of the House's 36 Republicans.

He also is backed by some of Martin's top advisers although the governor says he's neutral. Some Boyd and Sawyer supporters accused Martin of quietly urging Gardner to run, which Martin denied.

Boyd, 46, was the first Republican to enter the race, assembling an organization last spring. The owner of construction and real estate companies, he has the support of many leaders in the GOP's New Right wing and has championed their stands on social issues.

He is on good terms with key figures in the National Congressional Club, Helms' political organization, which has made no formal endorsements.

Boyd has called for legislation requiring couples to get AIDS tests before marriage and vows to support other measures to combat "this plague."

"We can leave our kids the best schools and roads money can buy," Boyd said. "But if we leave them a future riddled with AIDS we have left them nothing."

He also says he would seek less busing of schoolchildren but insists he doesn't want a return to segregation. Boyd opposes using taxpayer money to fund abortions and favors the death penalty for drug trafficking known to have resulted in death.

A House member since 1984, Boyd is not a member of the chamber's minority leadership and is regarded by some as a back bencher. He says it's hard for any Republican to exert much power in the Democrat-dominated House.

Sawyer, 37, is the darkhorse candidate, running with virtually no campaign organization and relatively little money. He argues that he is the Republican best positioned to do battle with the Democratic establishment, saying Gardner lacks legislative experience and Boyd is too passive.

"It is going to take somebody that is willing to raise hell," Sawyer said.

Combativeness was his trademark during his single Senate term in 1984-85. He lost his re-election bid to Democrat Mary Seymour in 1986.

Sawyer amused and sometimes exasperated his colleagues by waging persistent if futile battles. None of the 21 bills he sponsored passed. He often cast the lone dissenting vote on bills and was the only senator in either party to vote against Martin's highway financing program that included a gasoline tax increase.

He was dubbed "the amendment king" for his numerous attempts to change bills during floor debate.

Sawyer's platform includes bringing the Legislature under the open-meeting law, tougher restrictions on lobbyists and a halt to state abortion funding.

Race 'Wide Open'

Five Democrats Will Be On Ballot

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Two state Senate powerhouses and a former House leader are vying for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor, an increasingly powerful office with the growth of two-party politics in North Carolina.

Sens. Harold Hardison, a Deep Run businessman, and Tony Rand, a Fayetteville attorney, are running against Parks Helms, who served 10 years in the House before returning to his Charlotte law practice after an unsuccessful Senate bid in 1984.

Two other Democrats, Frank Jordan of Rockingham and Robert Hannon of Greensboro, will be on the ballot. A poll commissioned for several news organizations in early March showed Frank Jordan nominally ahead. Observers speculated that most of those who voiced support for the little-known Jordan confused him with the incumbent, Democrat Bob Jordan, who is running for governor.

The poll's most revealing finding was that 61.3 percent of the Democrats surveyed had no preference.

"My guess is that it's wide open," said Thad Beyle, political science professor with the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The winner will be favored in the general election because every lieutenant governor this century has been a Democrat — although some think 1988 offers the GOP its best opportunity yet to capture the office.

Although technically a member of the executive branch, the lieutenant governor presides over the state Senate and exerts enormous influence with his powers of committee assignment and bill referral.

With so much at stake, Hardison, Helms and Rand are fighting to raise the profile of their race — and themselves — as the May 3 primary approaches.

TONY RAND

Hardison, 64, is an 18-year legislative veteran who rose to power as a protégé of former Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green.

Hardison wanted to run for lieutenant governor in 1984 but a bad back kept him out. He entered the race to succeed Jordan in spring of 1987, months ahead of his competitors.

His head start in organizing and fund-raising led some to call him the front-runner, although Rand and Helms have picked up steam this year.

Hardison runs counter to the stereotype of television-age candidates. He's bespectacled, balding and husky, smokes a pipe and is far from smooth in front of cameras. But strategists hope he will come across as experienced and folksy; his TV commercials show him fishing with his grandson and accompanying his wife to church.

During the 1987 legislative session, Hardison surprised observers by

Species, Location Determine Shrimp Season

Did you know that warm water shrimp live for only 12 to 18 months? Adult shrimp migrate to deep off shore waters to spawn in late fall. During the winter months, the eggs are released to the currents. In early spring, the larvae hatch and are pushed by on-shore currents toward land. By late spring, the larvae reach the bays, rivers, and estuaries along the coast that will serve as their nursery. In early summer, the baby shrimp grow very quickly (one size every 3 weeks) and begin to migrate out into near-shore waters that are most suitable for each species. By late summer, the shrimp have reached their adult size and ready themselves to begin the off-shore journey to spawn. It is estimated that only 25 percent of the shrimp survive the first year of life and almost no shrimp spawn a second time.

The seasons of shrimp harvesting vary with species, water temperature and geographic location. The peak seasons in the Southern Atlantic and Gulf of Mexico are as follows: Brown shrimp peak harvest extends from June to October, white shrimp peak harvests run from August to December and pink shrimp harvests predominate from October to the following May. On the Pacific Coast of Mexico and the rest of Central America, the seasons are much earlier because of the more tropical temperatures. In places such as Ireland, Canada, and the Scandinavian countries, shrimp are harvested during the frigid winter months.

Frozen shrimp is frozen fresh immediately following harvesting to ensure you of the freshest possible quality. And perhaps nothing pleases the palate quite like shrimp—a versatile dish that marries well with a variety of other seafoods such as sole, pollock, haddock, sword fish, clams, crabmeat, lobster, mussels, flounder and scallops. But to enjoy the best quality of frozen fresh shrimp, several rules should be observed.

•Frozen shrimp should be transported from store to home freezer as soon as possible, being careful not to allow defrosting to take place.

•If selecting only a few shrimp from the package, re-close with tight tie and enclose, in plastic bag to insure protection from freezer crystals forming.

•To store other seafood, place in fresh plastic wrap and place in coldest part of refrigerator, if seafood is to be used within a day of purchase. Otherwise, wrap with freezer wrap and place in freezer. Mark date, and use within the month. Do not refreeze thawed fish.

•Always pack and store different seafoods separately.

Hint: Almost all seafoods (and particularly shrimp) love to be perked up with lemon juice after they come out of the refrigerator or as they are defrosting. The drizzle of juice is fine before and/or after cooking.

HELPFUL HINTS ... BARBECUING SHRIMP

There are two secrets to achieving the best results in barbecuing shrimp:

1. Prepare the shrimp by marinating before grilling.
2. Prepare the grill by preheating the coals to the appropriate degree of heat.

MARINATING:

Choose a marinade that has a base of oil and vinegar or lemon juice. Additional ingredients can be a variety of spices and herbs. If choosing a tomato based marinade, be sure it has some oil in the ingredient list. The oil is necessary to provide a protective coating, so the shrimp will retain its moisture during grilling. The vinegar, lemon, or tomato will help to retain the tenderness of the shrimp.

Raw shrimp is best marinated for at least 1 hour in a covered dish in the refrigerator. Do not leave shrimp out of the refrigerator during the marinating period. Shrimp can be marinated up to 12 hours or overnight for best results. Longer marinating time is not recommended. Be sure to use a glass or porcelain container for shrimp.

- SALMON TACOS
- 12 (6-inch) corn tortillas
 - 7 tablespoons olive oil
 - 6 radishes
 - 1 cup loosely packed cilantro
 - 1 cup chopped, peeled cucumbers
 - 2 tablespoons chopped red onion
 - 2 tablespoons chopped tomato
 - 3 tablespoons minced, seeded jalapeno chiles
 - 1/3 cup grapefruit juice
 - 3 tablespoons orange juice
 - 2 tablespoons lime juice
 - 1/4 teaspoon salt
 - 1 avocado
 - 4 cups shredded romaine lettuce
 - 1 (15 1/2-ounce) can pink salmon, drained
- Lightly fry tortillas in 5 tablespoons oil and drain thoroughly on paper towels. Process radishes and cilantro in food processor until finely minced. Set aside.
- Place cucumbers, onion, tomato and chiles in bowl. Add grapefruit, orange and lime juices and salt and allow to marinate 30 minutes. Peel and slice avocado into 12 pieces.
- Assemble each taco by layering tortilla with lettuce, cucumber mixture, radish mixture, salmon, avocado slice and drizzling with 1/2 teaspoon olive oil. Makes 12 servings.

PREPARING THE GRILL:

Preheat the grill so that coals have an ash coating, indicating the coals are glowing with radiant heat. When using an automatic grill accessory. Even skewered shrimp can sometimes slip thru wide openings in grates.

Thread pre-marinated shrimp onto skewers, alternating with vegetables that will also cook quickly. Cherry tomatoes, mushrooms, onion, green pepper, blanched cubed squash, or olives are excellent to use.

Mesquite wood chips tossed onto the hot coals offer a variety in flavor for grilling shrimp.

COOKING TIME:

Shrimp cook very quickly on outdoor grills. Two minutes per side is usually adequate. Keep a close eye as shrimp changes from a translucent color to opaque white and pink. If necessary grill up to five minutes per side, watching, turning and brushing with extra marinade to keep shrimp moist. It will be worth the attention, for the taste of a properly grilled shrimp can't be beat.

HELPFUL HINTS...STEAMED SHRIMP

Pour about 1 inch of water into bottom of medium size pot. Place steamer rack into pot. Cover. Bring water to boil. Remove cover carefully, and set shrimp onto steamer rack. Cover. Steam shrimp over medium heat for 5 minutes (pre-cooked, peeled and deveined frozen shrimp) or 15 minutes (uncooked frozen shrimp), or until pink. Remove. Serve hot.

Seasonings: Herbs and spices may be added to water for extra flavor during steaming of 1 pound shrimp.

Suggested combinations are:

1. 2 bay leaves, 1 teaspoon oregano, 1/2 teaspoon Rosemary
2. 1 dried red chili pepper, 1 tablespoon onion flakes
3. 1 teaspoon curry powder, 1 teaspoon garlic powder
4. 1 teaspoon thyme, 1 teaspoon Rosemary, 2 bay leaves
5. 1 teaspoon cilantro, 1/2 teaspoon cumin, 1 teaspoon coriander

BAKED STUFFED SHRIMP

1 pound peeled and deveined, uncooked butterflied frozen shrimp
2 cups fresh bread crumbs
4/5 tablespoons butter
1 cup chopped onion
1/2 cup chopped green pepper

- 1 cup chopped sweet red pepper
- 1 cup chopped celery
- 2 teaspoons dry mustard powder
- 1 teaspoon garlic powder

In a large skillet, melt butter and saute the onions, peppers, and celery until limp and transparent. Add dry mustard and garlic powder, mix well. Add bread crumbs and continue to stir until bread crumbs are moist. Extra melted butter may be added at this time or a few drops of water to moisten mixture for molding for stuffing shrimp. Butterfly shrimp by cutting along back edge and pressing flat open. Scoop one large tablespoon of stuffing onto butterflied shrimp and mold to shrimp for baking. Bake in preheated 350 degree oven for 20 minutes or until pink. Do not over cook.

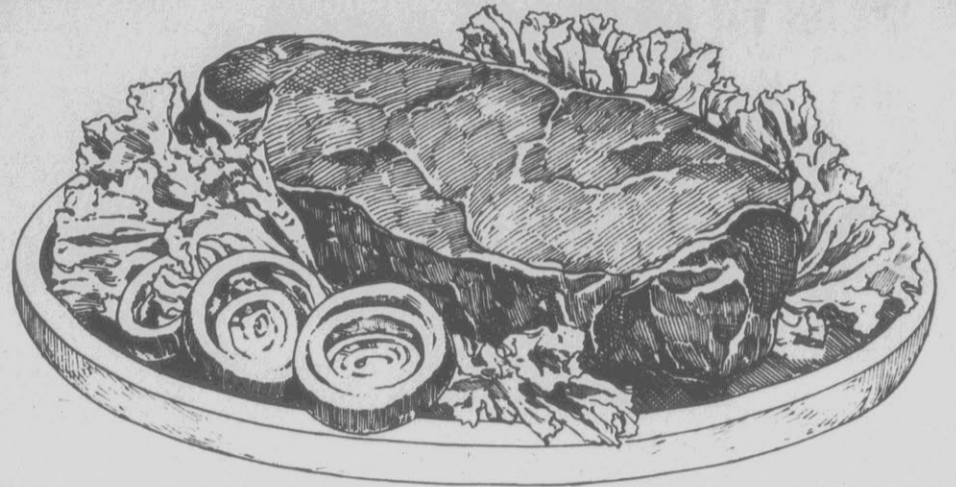

SPICY BARBECUED SHRIMP

- 1 pound peeled and deveined, frozen raw shrimp
- 1 cup catsup or canned plain tomato sauce
- 1/2 cup white wine or water
- 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
- 1 tablespoon honey or corn syrup
- 1 teaspoon chili powder
- 1/2 teaspoon cumin

Mix all ingredients together, except shrimp, in a large glass bowl. Add shrimp and stir to coat shrimp well. Cover bowl with plastic wrap and refrigerate for 3 to 4 minutes per side. Brush with remaining marinade during cooking. Do not overcook. Serves 4 to 6.

Breaking-Entering

Two men were arrested on breaking and entering charges by Greenville police Tuesday.

Officer D.R. Wyrick said James Antonia Worthington, 25, of 1518 Fleming St. was charged after a guest room at the University Inn at 3304 S. Memorial Drive was entered without permission about 7:20 a.m.

In addition to the break-in charge, Wyrick said Worthington was charged with resisting, obstructing and delaying an officer.

Officer R.J. Brewington said Michael Oneal Simmons, 16, of 2713 Webb St. was arrested on a charge of breaking and entering a motor vehicle about 5:05 p.m. in connection with an incident reported to the department earlier this year.

Treaty Petition

St. Peter's Catholic Church of Greenville has been circulating a petition this week to gather names of people who are in favor of the United States entering into a Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty.

The effort is being directed by each parish in the Diocese of Raleigh.

At St. Peter's Church, the pastor, the Rev. Kenneth Walsh, read a letter from Bishop F. Joseph Gossman urging members of the congregation to sign the petition. Videotapes featuring actor Paul Newman, scientist Carl Sagan and others are available from the church for public use. A poster contest about world peace for the youth of the church has been held.

The petitions, distributed during liturgies last weekend, will be delivered to the bishop this week.

In a 1987 national Gallup poll, it was indicated that 84 percent of the Catholics in the United States support a Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty.

Store Manager's Body Discovered

SARATOGA, N.C. (AP) — The body of a 36-year-old convenience store manager, missing for more than a day, was found Tuesday in a wooded area east of Stantonsburg in Wilson County.

Sheriff Wayne Gay said the cause of Shirlene Baker's death had not been determined. Meanwhile, Gov. Jim Martin announced Tuesday that the state is offering a reward of up to $5,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of those responsible for the woman's death.

Wilson County Sheriff's Capt. Edward Bass said in a telephone interview that Mrs. Baker's body was found five miles from the convenience store where she worked shortly after 8 a.m. Tuesday. Bass said a school bus driver discovered the body near a dirt road and called authorities.

"We're interviewing anyone that may have seen anyone there (the store) and also anyone who may have seen anything on the dirt road" near where the body was found, Bass said.

Bass said it appeared Mrs. Baker was shot in the face. An autopsy was being performed at Pitt Memorial Hospital in Greenville Tuesday night, he said.

Gay said there were bruises on the woman's body and scratches on her legs.

"It appeared she may have tried to get away from her captor," Gay said. "Apparently there was some type of struggle."

Road Contract Let

The North Carolina Board of Transportation has awarded a contract to a Greenville firm to widen a section of 14th Street Extension (SR 1704) in Greenville and two other road projects in Pitt County also have been announced.

The $282,868 contract has been awarded to Greenville Paving and Contracting Inc. It calls for widening to four lane a half-mile section of 14th Street between York Road (SR 1706) and the U.S. 264 Bypass.

Randy D. Doub of Greenville, a transportation board member, said the construction of curbs and gutters is also included in the contract. He said the widening is expected to start next month and to be completed in December.

According to Fred Edwards, county highway maintenance engineer, work started this week on the grading, drainage and paving of a .2-mile SR 1220 project off N.C. 121 north of Farmville. The $25,000 project is expected to be completed by July 1.

The creation of turn lanes in front of the new Weyerhaeuser plant site on SR 1110 east of N.C. 11 near Auden is expected to begin next week. Expected completion date for this $38,000 project is also July 1.

GUC Will Absorb Electric Increase

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville Utilities Commission customers, for the second time in seven months, were handed a reprieve from an electric rate increase as the GUC board voted Tuesday night to absorb a 4 percent wholesale price hike which will take effect June 1.

But the reprieve may not be long-lasting. Malcolm Green, GUC's general manager, recommended that "we absorb this increase until August," when a "significant" Carolina Power & Light Co. retail rate hike is expected.

In September 1987 the board voted to absorb a 2 percent wholesale rate increase, which amounts to about $1 million a year. The rate hike acted on Tuesday night will amount to about $350,000 for the months of June and July, Green said.

Green told the board that the staff recommended "we absorb this increase until August ... based on the savings we are currently obtaining from voltage adjustment, joint generator projects, Beat-the-Peak and improved efficiency."

Green also said, "With this action, our electric customers will be paying the same electric rate charged in November 1984."

Roger Jones, director of electric systems for the GUC, reported that operation of the load management program during the months of March resulted in a savings of $152,312 in wholesale power costs.

Included in the savings was $76,334 from operation of radio-controlled Beat-the-Peak switches on water heaters, $71,269 through voltage adjustments, and $4,718 through operations of generators at the GUC water plant and at Procter & Gamble Paper Products Co.

Since January 1985, the load management program has saved more than $5.15 million in wholesale power costs, which represents about 8 percent of the peak system load.

At the end of March, there were a total of 8,757 radio controlled switches on water heaters throughout GUC's system and 9,076 Beat-the-Peak switches in service on central air conditioning units.

Jones said it costs $95 to $100 to buy and install one of the switches, which allow the utility to cut water heaters and air conditioning units off to reduce the demand for electricity at peak use periods.

NOT WHAT THEY EXPECTED — A quintet of visitors to the Outer Banks on April 10 came with the expectation of surfing, sunbathing and swimming on a spring weekend. What they found instead was near wintry weather calling for warm clothing and a delay of their sun and surf dreams until warmer weather makes an appearance. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

British Singer Catches On In U.S.

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Rick Astley is attracting more attention with his first album than he probably expected to have in a lifetime. It has been 20 years since England sent America anything like Astley — when Joe Cocker arrived sounding a lot like Ray Charles. Astley's RCA album, "Whenever You Need Somebody," and the first rhythm and blues sounding single from it, "Never Gonna Give You Up," have shot up the best-selling charts in Europe and then followed the same pattern in the United States where the LP went gold. Besides getting a superhit with a first record, Astley excites interest because he's quite a surprise. His voice is super-soulful, deeply resonating, mature-sounding — and he's a 21-year-old English lad with a diffident air, chestnut hair and freckles.

"There's so much that gets crammed in," Astley said during an interview at RCA headquarters.

"Private life is one thing I don't get, basically, any more. Today we're a little rushed and that seems to be the norm these days. I don't see my family any more. I don't mean to moan about it. I knew I was letting myself in for this. I realize little things in life become suddenly important and you miss them.

"It's very nice traveling to all these countries. All the same, at the end of the day, all the RCA offices look the same.

Astley was born in Newton-le-Willows, Lancashire, England — not far from Liverpool. Like many performers, he started as a teen-ager.

"I took up drums around 15," he said. "I actually liked drums. With friends, a guitarist and bass player, we got a band together. One has gone to college now, studying computers. One is married.

"It was a fun thing. The bassist was doing most of the writing. We played anything that had three chords. We disbanded out of a mutual agreement sort of thing."

Then Astley at 17 was asked by a band named FBI to be its drummer. "It was in the same little town," he said. "Anybody who can play an instrument, everybody seems to know about them. It was an all-guitar band. Nobody could afford keyboards.

"I started to write most of the material about six months after joining," he said, "so I progressed on to be the singer as well."

The band's managers — one of whom still manages Astley — invited Peter Waterman, who owns production and publishing companies, to a performance. "The band was still very young; I was one of the oldest and I was 19," Astley said. "He offered me a solo deal which I ended up taking." FBI continues and Astley says they're still friendly.

"I went to work for Pete for eight months or so. I was a tape operator in a studio. It's computerized these days. I made tea a few weeks until I saw how a studio works. Then I started recording in December 1986, three songs. One was 'Never Gonna Give You Up,' the first single. I was writing like mad, doing demos weekends and nights, learning whatever I could, getting to know everybody."

Later, Astley played guitar on one track of the album, "No More Looking for Love."

"We did that at 2 or 3 in the morning," he said. "Nobody was around. The guy producing said, 'You do it.' I always play on my own demos. I said, 'Fine. I can get by on this.'

"I'm not stupid enough not to know there are better musicians than me. I'm not going to get into an ego trip when I play; time is money in a studio. I'd like to do it when I get older."

On "Never Gonna Give You Up," Astley said a few notes are high. "It sounds as if it is low. I'm not saying that to be hip and cool. I prefer to sing lower; it feels better and suits better."

Ex-POW Salutes Soldiers In Song

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Deep in the mountains of Vietnam, the Green Beret was held prisoner of war in a small shipping crate by captors who stabbed him with bamboo sticks. To save his sanity, Pat Murphy sang "Hound Dog" and pretended he was Elvis Presley by imitating the famous singer's gyrations.

"Sometimes they'd scream at me to shut up," Murphy recalled. "I'd sing that much louder."

Seventeen years later, the 47-year-old veteran is still singing. He lives in Long Beach, Calif., where he is a hotel general manager by day and a country music singer as a sideline. He's just released a song, "Combat Vet," which encourages his fellow veterans to put the war behind them and rebuild their lives as proud Americans who served their country.

The song says: "So buddy, please don't cry. That you lived is no disgrace.

"Please make us walk proud again. Wear a smile upon your face."

Murphy wrote the song in memory of his cousin, Carl Saintignan Jr. of Shreveport, La., a young Marine who took his life a year after returning from Southeast Asia.

"It's the story of a guy still fighting the war in his mind," Murphy said in a telephone interview from Long Beach. "A buddy tells him to let it go."

Murphy spent a month as a POW after being captured as he traveled by Jeep from Nha Trang to Dalat during his second tour of duty in Vietnam.

"I was taken an hour away and put in a shipping container, which looked like a railroad car," he recalled. "I was not mistreated but I was beat up a couple of times.

"They would come in and talk to me and (urinate) on my food and humiliate me. They asked a lot of questions which I didn't answer. I have a scar from bamboo being jabbed in my side.

"Music was the only thing that kept my sanity," he said. "I'd sit there and sing. It was hot as hell, there were mosquitoes and my skin was falling away. I was panicking because there was no way to get out.

"I'd always been able to sing and I'd had good response and I knew I'd do it when I got back. I kept focusing my mind on what songs I'd do and how. I remember singing 'Hound Dog' and going through the movements like Elvis did.

"I'd sing in that cage and the Vietnamese called me crazy — 'dinkydoo.'"

"I imagine I did look crazy. I said my prayers and kept thinking about getting back. I said if I'm gonna go (die), I'd go happy."

Murphy, who spent 15 years in the Army, escaped when two young Vietnamese tried to handcuff him. "I grabbed his weapon (an M-16) and I had to kill them," he said.

GREENVILLE CHORAL SOCIETY — Members of the Greenville Choral Society get ready to sing a selection from Mozart Sunday afternoon. They were one of several groups of entertainers who provided music at the festival's opening day at Carolina East Mall.

PLAYS INTENTLY — Caroline Um, 6, is a picture of concentration as she plays the violin at the Carolina East Mall Sunday. She was performing with the Greenville Suzuki Players.

Views Of Super Sunday Opening Festival Day

The Super Sunday gala opening day of the week-long eighth East Carolina Arts Festival taking place in Greenville this week was once again a successful venture.

The day of bright sunshine, plus the day being a chilly one that kept Greenville and area people away from early beach trips, were noted by coordinators as factors favoring the event.

From opening time at 1 p.m. until the end of festivities shortly after 5 p.m., an estimated 15,000 persons visited the mall.

Things to see, hear and take part in offered young and old opportunities for enjoyment. Children delighted in making beads and cookies, in having their faces painted, in talking to clowns and a stilt-walker.

Older visitors were attentive watchers at demonstrations of crafts and arts. Young and old alike watched dancing performances and listened to music by bands, choirs, ensembles and individuals.

Again, the Super Sunday grand opening of the Eastern Carolina Arts Festival was an afternoon of diversified pleasures for thousands from Greenville, Pitt County and areas nearby.

Sabo Helps Cincinnati 'Steal' Win From Giants

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

When Cincinnati rookie Chris Sabo went into the game as a pinch-runner, everyone knew he was going to run. He did just that, scoring the Reds' winning run against the San Francisco Giants.

Sabo ran for Buddy Bell, who led off the ninth inning Tuesday night with a single off loser Scott Garrelts, 0-1.

"When he went out there, I told him, 'If they give you third, don't be afraid to take it. You're on your own.' He's not shy," Cincinnati Manager Pete Rose said.

Sabo stole second after Bo Diaz tried to sacrifice and struck out. Then Sabo stole third.

"That pitcher looked pretty good, and it's a lot easier to score from third than from second," Sabo said.

After Dave Collins, pinch-hitting for winning pitcher Danny Jackson, 2-0, walked, Dave Larkin fled to right and Sabo easily beat Candy Maldonado's throw to the plate as Cincinnati beat San Francisco 4-3. "Speed is great to have when you play a lot of one-run games," Rose said. "I hope we don't have too many games like this. When we're leading 3-0 in the eighth, our bullpen should hold it for us."

Cincinnati led 3-0 and Jackson had limited the Giants to just four singles before the eighth inning. But with one out, Jose Uribe walked. Chris Speier scored him with a double to right-center and Kevin Mitchell hit his third homer of the season one out later.

The three-run rally broke a 20-inning scoreless stretch for the Giants, who were shut out on four hits by the Reds' Mario Soto on Monday night.

"We've got to take some heart. Our guys came back and showed what they can do in the late innings, which is important," said Mike Krukow, who pitched the first six innings for the Giants.

Elsewhere in the National League, it was the New York Mets 3, Montreal

0; Houston 8, Atlanta 3; St. Louis 7, the Chicago Cubs 5; and San Diego 5, Los Angeles 3.

"I got the win, but I'm not satisfied," Jackson said. "I should have had a complete-game shutout."

The left-hander, acquired from the Kansas City Royals in an off-season trade, gave up six hits, struck out eight and walked one. John Franco pitched the ninth for Cincinnati, earning his first save and sending the Giants to their third straight defeat.

The Reds opened the game with three straight hits for two runs off Krukow, who was touched for an unearned run in the sixth.

Padres 5, Dodgers 3

John Kruk felt he swung at a bad pitch and was waiting to hear San Diego manager Larry Bowa growling. Instead, he heard the home-opener crowd cheering his game-winning grand slam in the fifth inning as the Padres snapped Los Angeles' five-game winning streak.

"I had my eyes closed. I thought, 'Oh, no, Larry's going to be mad at me,'" Kruk said. "It was a terrible pitch. It was up in the strike zone. I shouldn't have even swung at it."

Kruk's homer came on a 1-0 pitch from Brad Havens, who was facing his first batter after entering the game in relief of starter Don Sutton, 0-1.

"It was a fastball up," Havens said. "I wanted both pitches down and away. I just had a bad day overall. Everybody else played great, but I messed up."

The homer came after San Diego starter Andy Hawkins, 1-1, reached on a fielder's choice, Tony Gwynn walked and Randy Ready singled, loading the bases. Mark Davis pitched the final 3 2-3 innings for San Diego to gain his first save, giving up two hits and striking out seven.

Astros 8, Braves 3

Nolan Ryan survived a shaky start to pitch a three-hitter through seven innings and Houston handed Atlanta its seventh consecutive defeat. The Braves equalled their worst start in the 22 years the franchise has been in Atlanta. The 1980 club also lost seven straight.

After Ryan, 1-0, was staked to a 3-0 lead in the first inning on a run-scoring single by Bill Doran and Kevin Bass' two-run double, the Braves tied the score on two singles, a sacrifice fly and three walks. Ryan then settled down to allow only one more hit and retired 20 of the next 21 batters before Larry Andersen relieved in the eighth.

The Astros went ahead to stay in the second off loser Zane Smith, 0-2, on Doran's RBI single.

Orioles Can Cal, Name Robinson As Manager; But Baltimore Still Loses

BALTIMORE (AP) — Even a new manager couldn't help the Baltimore Orioles from setting a club record for losses at the start of the season.

Hall of Famer Frank Robinson, the first and last black to manage in the major leagues, was named as Orioles manager on Tuesday and he could only watch as Baltimore dropped its seventh in a row, 6-1 to the Kansas City Royals.

"If I knew what would work I wouldn't be sitting here," Robinson, 52, said. "I would be sitting on some island some place."

Robinson might want to be sitting on an island if the Orioles continue in the manner that got Cal Ripken, his predecessor, fired.

Mark Gubicza and Dan Quisenberry combined on a two-hitter as Baltimore managed just two infield singles and hit only four balls out of the infield. Baltimore has been outscored 49-8 this season.

"I'm realistic enough to know I'm not going to wave a wand and change everything," said Robinson, who was the major league's first black manager with Cleveland from 1974-77. He also managed San Francisco from 1981-84.

Robinson, the third black to manage — along with Larry Doby and Maury Wills — doesn't think the Orioles need a major overhaul.

"I don't think the organization has hit rock bottom," Robinson said of the club that slipped to sixth place last year just four years after winning the World Series. "It's just a matter of putting it together and getting our heads up."

"I feel good about this team," he said. "I don't think we need a total restructuring. We have capable people. I feel good about the personnel we have."

"Management didn't give me any special instructions. Everyone is going to have to do what they're capable of doing, no more, no less. And if that doesn't work than we'll try some different players. That's not a threat or anything, we just have to play better."

The Orioles fell victim Tuesday to two three-run innings. Kansas City struck for three in the fourth, erasing a 1-0 Oriole lead on consecutive homers by Frank White and Bo Jackson. The Royals added three more in the fifth, with White driving in his third and fourth runs of the game with a single.

Ironically, Cal Ripken Jr., one of two sons of the fired manager in the starting lineup, drove in the Orioles lone run with a first-inning sacrifice fly.

The Ripkens were in a somber mood before and after the game.

"My job stays the same," Cal Jr. said. "I'm going to do the same things no matter who is managing. When you're in baseball, you realize it's a business. The reality of that is that no one's job is secure. It's just the way it works."

"As a player, the change doesn't matter. As a son, I'll keep my feelings to myself."

Bill Ripken, who is normally the clubhouse clown, was unusually quiet.

"It's a front office decision, and I don't get involved in front office decisions," the rookie said before the start of the game. "Right now I feel like it will be tough to play, but when gametime rolls around I don't think it will be."

After the game, Bill said "I don't think anyone thought we were going to get off to this bad of a start. There's no doubt in my mind this club is better than last year's."

"It's tough when the club's not hitting, because everyone is trying to do more than their capable of. It's just human nature. What happened to my father is unfortunate, and I certainly feel it. But I'm not going to go out and play anyway but hard. He wouldn't want it any other way."

Last year, Ripken became the first father to manage two sons simultaneously in major league baseball history.

Ripken replaced the retiring Earl Weaver at the start of the 1987 season, and under Ripken the Orioles finished sixth with a 67-95 record. It was the Orioles worst finish in 32 years.

General Manager Roland Hemond, who replaced the fired Hank Peters on Nov. 10, 1987, said Ripken will remain with the club as a special assistant to the general manager.

"Cal has done so much for this organization over the last 32 years, and we all feel very happy that he will remain with the Orioles doing special assignments for me," Hemond said.

"Unfortunately with the slow start and last year's disappointing record, I felt we had to make a change. He gave you 100 percent, and beyond. His two sons, Billy and Cal, personify that work effort. I'm sure they'll handle it with the utmost professionalism."

Earlier Tuesday, Ripken Sr. pleaded guilty to a drunken driving charge, and was sentenced to three years' probation and required to perform 100 hours of community service.

Hemond said the Orioles decision to fire Ripken was made Monday, and the manager's court appearance did not figure in the firing.

"I'm disappointed, no question," Ripken said by telephone. "There was no indication that it was coming. I was in uniform. I was at my desk getting ready to write the lineup. Roland called me to come up to his office and he told me I was being relieved."

Commissioner Peter Ueberroth was pleased with Robinson's appointment.

"I knew about it. I had discussions with Ed Williams yesterday," said Ueberroth who was at the New York Mets home opener. "I think it's the appropriate appointment. It is the kind baseball is very pleased with. It's not tokenism. It's a quality guy the Baltimore franchise believes in. He has a tough road ahead. I think he'll do OK."

Robinson Takes The Helm

Mark Malone Is Happy To Be Leaving Steelers

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Quarterback Mark Malone says he is ready for the change of professional and environmental scenery involved in his move to San Diego.

Malone, 29, whose trade from the Pittsburgh Steelers was announced Tuesday, is the leading candidate to replace Dan Fouts, whose retirement last month left the Chargers without a proven starting quarterback.

The trade was a relief for Malone, constantly booed in Pittsburgh by fans disenchanted with his lack of passing accuracy.

"It's a fantastic opportunity to go back there. I think I have a built-in support system," said Malone, who was born and raised in El Cajon, a suburb of San Diego, and has friends and family in the area.

"You're kind of starting a new era. You're starting with the slate clean."

The Chargers gave up a 1988 eighth-round draft choice and an unspecified conditional pick in 1989 for Malone, the Steelers starter for the past 3½ years.

"We're very happy to have gotten (Malone) him," said Steve Ort-mayer, Chargers director of football operations. "He gives us the NFL experience that we felt, when Dan retired, we were all of a sudden void of."

The Chargers have been uneasy about their quarterback situation because veteran backup Mark Herrmann has been effective only in relief and second-year pro Mark Vlasic lacks experience. Also on the Chargers' roster is Mike Kelley, who played quarterback on San Diego's 3-0 strike team.

"It's an opportunity to bring somebody in for not a magnificent price," said Chargers Coach Al Saunders.

Malone was the lowest-rated starting quarterback in the NFL last year. Playing in all 12 of the non-strike games, he threw 19 interceptions and completed only 46.4 percent of his throws (156 of 336). He had six touchdown passes.

"He hasn't had a real distinguished career in the NFL up to this time, but a lot of people feel like a change of scenery will ... be beneficial to him," Saunders said.

Despite Malone's acquisition, the Chargers are keeping their options open in their search for a successor to Fouts.

"We're coming off of a veteran Hall of Fame quarterback who's been a great, great player here for 15 years," Ort-mayer said. "You don't just wake up the next morning and feel like a quarterback situation is solved until somebody steps forward to prove something. And until somebody does step forward, we'll keep all doors open."

Saunders said the competition for No. 1 quarterback would be wide open, but indicated Malone is the frontrunner.

Hardin's Challenge A Job With Multi-Faceted Demands

North Carolina's flagship university has a new face, one that must bring thoughtful leadership to a position demanding both cooperation and individualism for success.

Paul Hardin, himself a Tar Heel, will assume the chancellorship at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. As he enters the role, he will face the challenge of guiding an institution with a multiple purpose — an institution that must foster individual excellence as well as effectively function within a statewide university system.

That challenge includes addressing reservations from within the University about priorities and UNC-CH's role in North Carolina's 16-member University system.

That is not a crisp assignment. It will be, for Hardin, a challenge he can only meet through careful, well-thought-out leadership.

Hardin must go to work evaluating the points made by a recent audit of the University, which indicated UNC-CH remains academically strong, but pointed to weaknesses in some areas. The new chancellor must assess these areas and be prepared to take action against inadequacies.

He must consider the internal conflict at UNC-CH, hear the concerns and respond to them appropriately — whether that response is to quiet the strife or institute reform.

Hardin must also consider the role of athletics and reckon with the influence of powerful groups like the Ram's Club on sports. Hardin's record here is one of intolerance for an athletic program where quality and integrity aren't primary. His resignation at Southern Methodist University in response to sports improprieties sends a clear message.

The chancellor of UNC will be tested by nothing short of the toughest circumstances a distinguished university can muster. As its leader, he can be expected to propose policy with major impact on the state's largest post-secondary institution.

Hardin should have the skills and ability to meet the multi-faceted demands of his position and successfully lead UNC-CH to continued progress and excellence.

An Overflow

East Carolina University is facing a dilemma that also affects several other state universities. There have been so many applications for freshman admissions that no further applications are being accepted.

ECU ended acceptance of out-of-state applications previously. Recently it was announced that no further applications are being accepted for freshman students for the summer and fall sessions. The action was taken after the university had received over 8,000 freshman applications for summer sessions and the fall semester. It is an increase of some 12.5 percent over last year. ECU set a record enrollment of 14,884 (actual count) for the fall semester, 1987, a record which is almost surely to be exceeded next fall.

The surge of applications doesn't match the numbers of college-aged population, which has been in a decline since the "baby boomers" passed through, although modest increases were projected for North Carolina.

It is uncertain why there are such pressures to be admitted to college. Undoubtedly there are some who have submitted applications to more than one university, but that is true every year. The percentage of high school graduates planning to attend college may be increasing. In addition, more adults are likely returning to college for retraining or career changes.

Whatever the reasons, the trend defies predictions of a few years ago that enrollment applications would slow because of the lower numbers of college-aged people.

For ECU, the deluge of applications means next year's freshman class can be selected from a larger pool of candidates which should provide an academically well-qualified class. There will also be room for more in-state students because the percentage of out-of-state students is decreasing. There will also be more places available. The full time equivalent (an averaging figure) number of students will increase from 12,388 in 1987-88 to 13,950 in 1988-89.

The applicants who are not admitted, however, should not despair nor should they waste a semester by not attending college. North Carolina has many community colleges which offer college level courses. Students can obtain college credit for freshman courses and transfer the credits to a university in pursuit of their degrees. There are also many fine private colleges in our state which offer small classes and more individual attention.

ECU is wrestling with the dilemma of having far too many applicants for the 1988 freshman class. While that portends new planning for future development it is not a situation which can be eased immediately. There is no choice but to cease accepting applications.

How Could Dukakis Lose New York?

'The answer, of course, is "very easily." Presidential politics is a particularly uncertain occupation, and much can happen before next Tuesday's primary.'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The question for Michael Dukakis this week is the classic one for a front-runner: it is not "How can he win the New York primary?" but "How could he lose it?"

The answer, of course, is "very easily." Presidential politics is a particularly uncertain occupation, and much can happen before next Tuesday's primary.

But now the Massachusetts governor is looking strong in the Empire State.

For the first time outside of New England, Dukakis is showing the depth and breadth of support that a politician needs to become the Democratic party's presidential nominee.

And his rivals — Jesse Jackson and Albert Gore Jr. — are fighting powerful negative feelings among Democratic voters in New York that make it difficult for either to catch Dukakis.

There are seven days of intensive media coverage of every candidate's utterance left before the ballots are cast. And the candidates are spending millions of dollars on television ads to reach the voters.

A major gaffe could wipe out Dukakis' lead. Or a particularly compelling move by Gore or Jackson could sway the voters into their column.

The latest Marist Institute poll, taken April 5-6, gave Dukakis a 47-31 lead over Jackson, with Gore picking up only 6 percent. An uncommitted slate drew 8 percent, 6 percent were undecided and the remainder were scattered.

"It's what I call the 20-20 question," said pollster Lee Miringoff at Marist College. "If Jackson gets 20 percent of the white vote and Gore and uncommitted together get 20 percent...then you've got a dead heat" for Dukakis and Jackson.

In the Marist poll, Dukakis drew 60 percent of the likely white voters; Jackson, 14 percent; Gore, 8 percent; and uncommitted, 6 percent.

"Gore is the wild card," Miringoff said.

In a state as diverse as New York, one can always quibble about this or that finding in a poll.

For example, Jackson gets "only" 80 percent of the black vote in the survey of 408 likely Democratic voters. Exit polls have shown him getting closer to 95 percent of the black vote this year.

If one gave Jackson every single black voter in the Marist survey, it would narrow the gap to about 45-35 for Dukakis.

If black voters actually total more than the 22 percent of the likely electorate in the Marist survey, that would cut Dukakis' margin further.

And then one must look at the Jewish turnout, which usually runs a fifth to a fourth of the Democratic primary voters.

Here it is Gore who has not done as well thus far as he must, despite his effort to cast himself as the strongest friend of Israel in the contest. The Tennessee senator drew the backing of 13 percent of the Jewish voters, while Dukakis took 69 percent.

Jackson has a particular problem with the Jewish vote, because his statements on the Palestinian question and dealings with Arab leaders have caused some to suggest that Jackson is anti-Semitic.

Jackson and his supporters strongly reject such characterizations, but those deep feelings against him are a problem in New York.

Dukakis' strength in New York is also reflected in the breadth of his support.

The Massachusetts governor wins the moderates and conservatives and splits the liberals with Jackson. He holds majorities in the New York City suburbs and upstate. Again, he splits New York City with Jackson.

He is leading among the two-thirds of the likely voters who are not in union households, and runs even with Jackson among the union members.

Dukakis leads among each income group, except the poorest likely voters.

The good news for Dukakis actually stretches beyond New York.

Provided he wins on April 19, the Massachusetts governor is looking good in the big states coming up next on the primary calendar.

He is leading in the polls for Pennsylvania's April 26 primary. Dukakis could get an added bonus there, since the state's process of voting directly for delegates favors a strong organization, offering him a chance for a big delegate win that is all but impossible to achieve in most states.

Dukakis is also leading in the polls on Ohio's May 3 primary, where Jackson has had some ballot troubles with his delegate slates.

Roots Of Hijacking Extend To Gulf War

The hijacking of a Kuwaiti Airways passenger jet and the killing of Kuwaiti military and security officers on board is another reminder that this small Persian Gulf state has become an unwilling player in the conflicts of the Gulf and elsewhere in the Middle East.

The hijacking and hostage-taking is related partly to Kuwait's domestic politics and foreign policies. But it stems also from spillover effects of the internal politics of Iraq, the Iran-Iraq war, and clan and family loyalties that link prisoners in Kuwaiti jails to factions competing for supremacy in Lebanon.

From the day they took over the plane (April 5) the hijackers sought the release of 17 prisoners held in Kuwaiti jails for eight simultaneous car bombings in December, 1983. The bombings left several persons dead and 87 injured. Only one or two of the perpetrators were Kuwaitis. Some were Lebanese. The majority were Iraqis and believed to be members of Al Dawaa, an Iraqi Shia Muslim opposition group with ties to Iran that has been fighting the government of Iraqi strongman Saddam Hussein. The bombings targeted Kuwaiti as well as American and French facilities, presumably because of the support of all three countries for Iraq in its war with Iran.

Powerful family loyalties explain several attempts to secure the prisoners' release.

In December, 1984, hijackers forced a Kuwaiti Airways passenger plane to land at Tehran airport, where they demanded freedom for the prisoners. Iranian commandos finally overpowered the hijackers, but not before two American passengers had been killed.

Hijackers of a TWA flight to Beirut in 1985 also listed the release of the prisoners in Kuwait as one of their demands. And members of Hezbollah, or Party of God, the shadowy Lebanese Shia umbrella organization holding a number of French and American hostages, have repeatedly made the release of the prisoners a condition for freeing their hostages.

One of the men in prison in Kuwait is the brother-in-law of Imad Maghniyya, a leader of Hezbollah's armed contingents and the man thought to be the mastermind behind these hijacking attempts.

These Hezbollah elements have been especially exercised to secure the release of the three Lebanese Shias in Kuwaiti jails; and PLO mediators trying to resolve the crisis have reportedly been in contact not only with the hijackers but also with their backers in Beirut.

Since the outbreak of the Iran-Iraq war Kuwait has tried to steer a difficult course between its two powerful neighbors. Either an Iraqi or an Iranian victory would pose threats to Kuwait. Iraq could always renew dormant claims to Kuwaiti territory; an Iranian victory could stir up Islamic and Shia sentiment in Kuwait, where there is a large Shia minority, and destabilize the entire region.

Kuwait, nevertheless, has thrown its diplomatic and material support behind Iraq. It has done so because it regards Iraq as the greater threat, because of Iraq's geographical proximity and out of a need to display Arab solidarity. It has joined Saudi Arabia and other Gulf states in providing Iraq with financial assistance and it has allowed its ports and overland routes to be used to move Iraqi imports.

Iraq retaliated early in the war by hitting economic facilities in Kuwait. In 1985-86, Tehran's relations with Kuwait, and with Saudi Arabia, too, improved markedly. But when Iraq resumed the tanker war last year, there was a sharp deterioration in relations and Iraq repeatedly attacked Kuwaiti shipping to induce Kuwait to end its assistance to Iraq.

None of this has deterred Kuwait. It has clamped down hard on what it regards as attempts at internal subversion. It has made life more difficult for Shia emigre workers in Kuwait, a policy that fuels Shia resentment. At recent conferences of Arab and Gulf states, Kuwait has played an unusually active role in urging a firm diplomatic stand against Iran.

Moreover, having traditionally avoided identification with American military strategy in the Gulf, Kuwait last summer sought protection behind an American military shield. It arranged for the United States to re-register Kuwaiti tankers. Thus Kuwait played an instrumental role in bringing about a sharp increase in the American naval presence in the Persian Gulf and Indian Ocean. This has provided Kuwait with the military protection it needs, but makes it vulnerable to propaganda attacks from Iran and Arab radicals, allegedly for serving American ends.

The latest hijacking affair is significant also for what it tells us about the politics of Iran and Syria, the two "radical" states of the Middle East. Having initially allowed the hijacked plane to land in Iran, the Iranians quickly sent the hijackers on their way. This lack of revolutionary zeal could lose Iran support among Shia radicals in Kuwait, Iraq and Lebanon. But the Tehran government clearly has no desire once again to be tarred with the terrorist brush. Syria, in control of Beirut airport, not only refused the hijackers permission to land, it even threatened to shoot them down if they attempted to do so.

The Palestine Liberation Organization, too, has been trying to earn points by helping negotiate with the hijackers. Israelis opposed to concessions to the Palestinians, however, will point to the hijacking as further proof that Arab radicals cannot be trusted. Yet the uprising on the West Bank, propelled by indigenous grievances, will not go away, and any diversion of world attention from the West Bank will be short-lived.

For Kuwait this has also been a particularly difficult time. In the past the lives of hostages of other countries have generally been on the line when the demand was pressed for the release of the prisoners in Kuwait. Other governments had to do the negotiating and make the hard decisions. This time it was Kuwaitis who were being cruelly tortured and killed by the hostage-takers, confronting Kuwait with a tough test of its announced policy of not yielding to hijackers, hostage-takers and terrorists.

Strength For Today

In a European museum there is a little piece of papyrus almost two thousand years old upon which is written in Greek this brief and pathetic prayer: "O God of the crosses laid upon us, help thy servant Appholias. Amen."

Who was Appholias? No one knows. But he was a Christian who these many centuries ago was carrying some heavy burden, as men and women carry such burdens today. Out of his misery, and with the darkness of despair settling around him, he sent up this simple prayer to God.

His prayer was directed to the God of the crosses. He knew that while he had to bear a cross, there was One in heaven who watched him in love and supported him lest he stumble and fall.

From this prayer we can gain the confidence that just as God helped our forebears bear their crosses, he will surely help us bear ours.

Coffee Renaissance Under Way

quality instead of just another mass-produced vacuum can."

As a result, he says, General Foods introduced Maxwell House Private Collection coffees in whole bean and ground forms — and even instant coffee makers are trying to attract coffee snobs. Recently, Nestle's Taster's Choice brand introduced Maragor Dark Roast, a darker, more flavorful coffee than traditional instant and freeze-dried products.

A General Foods spokesman contends that the Private Collection line, which is sold in sealed bags, makes better coffee than the beans purchased from open bins in gourmet shops. "Everybody knows that coffee degrades when it comes into contact with air," he says. In any case, he says, the new line is selling well in upscale communities around the country.

In a sense, the rise of the small roasters — who constitute a minuscule share of the market with an estimated $15 million in annual sales in the San Francisco area — have brought the industry here full circle. According to Folgers, the coffee roasting and grinding business began here in 1850, when San Francisco was more of a staging area for gold miners rather than a city.

The population had spurred to 40,000 by 1850 from 800 two years earlier as fortune hunters flocked to California from throughout the country; among them were James Folger and William Bovee. Bovee, who needed a carpenter to build a spice and coffee mill, hired Folger, and the pair later became partners in the Pioneer Steam Coffee & Spice Mills.

According to a corporate history put out by Procter & Gamble, theirs was the first commercial coffee-roasting firm in the West. The partners quickly realized that Northern California's then mostly male population would be an ideal market not only for roasted coffee but also for ground beans, so they inaugurated production of coffee that was ready for a prospector's pot: roasted, ground and packaged in small tins.

Though San Francisco's coffee was then commonly known by the slang term "Java," the name didn't reflect the origin of the beans sold here. The mountain slopes of Central America were the biggest source of beans brought into the local port; ships shuttling back and forth between San Francisco and the Isthmus of Panama picked up sacks of the stuff as they stopped at intermediate ports on their way north.

By 1855, according to most accounts, Jim Folger was peddling coffee "to every damned digging in California." Other roasters quickly sprang up, most notably in 1878 when Austin and Reuben Hills — the Hills brothers — set up the Arabian Coffee & Spice Mills. In 1890, the San Francisco directory included 27 coffee and spice mills, 24 importers and more than 100 so-called coffee saloons.

Nationally, the coffee roasting and packing industry grew around the three major ports of importation. Roasters in New York served markets on the East Coast; New Orleans served the Midwest and San Francisco the West Coast and Mountain states.

"There were literally hundreds and hundreds of roasters selling through small mom-and-pop type of grocery stores," Boecklin says. Some roasters expanded regionally, but it took the rise of nationwide grocery chains to give coffee roasters national reach.

By the late 1920s, coffee was San Francisco's largest industry, according to a survey by the city's Chamber of Commerce. "The West Coast was always reputed to have superior blends than back east," says T. Carroll Wilson, who joined Hills Bros. in 1924 and retired as a vice president and director in 1966. "We made a lot of noise about it."

In 1931, for example, a Hills Bros. advertisement noted that the per-pound value of coffee received in San Francisco Customs District was 30 percent higher than New York's and 50 percent higher than New Orleans', "proving superior quality."

Given San Francisco's history as a bustling coffee port and its reputation for top quality, Wilson thinks it is somehow appropriate the city is a leader in the trend toward "gourmet" coffee. The beans are roasted locally and sold through about 100 retail outlets, many of which bear such fanciful names as Daily Grind and Has Beans. Some of the shops also do a thriving business brewing and serving up espresso and cappuccino varieties.

"The industry began here as a large number of very small roasters, and, except for Hills Bros., that's what the industry is today," says Wilson. "What goes around, comes around."

Try Pancakes Without All The Sugar

By Marie Bianco

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

Pancakes doused with maple syrup, chunks of sauteed apple or powdered sugar are an all-time breakfast favorite. But when your sweet tooth is on vacation, or when you want to try pancakes for brunch or a light supper, try savory pancakes.

These pancakes are made with whole-wheat flour laced with shredded carrot and zucchini. A flash of flavor comes from the addition of Parmesan cheese and toasted almonds in the simple sauce made from cream cheese and heavy cream.

And for making perfect pancakes, keep these hints in mind:

—Make sure your griddle or skillet is hot. Sprinkle a drop of water onto the surface and if it sizzles immediately, it's ready for use. You may have to re-butter the griddle after each batch.

—For easy pouring, use a ladle or cup measurer.

—Stir the batter from time to time to make sure the ingredients are evenly distributed.

—Don't keep turning pancakes over. Gently lift one corner with a pancake turner to see if it is sufficiently browned, then cook the other side.

—Pancakes are best served hot. If necessary, keep them warm in the oven on the lowest setting, or heat the oven and turn it off. Cover loosely.

—To prevent pancakes from getting soggy, do not pile them on top of each other.

—To reheat, cover pancakes with paper towel and microwave for 10 to 15 seconds, or cover lightly with aluminum foil and place in 350-degree oven for about 10 minutes.

ZUCCHINI-CARROT PANCAKES WITH CREAMY ALMOND SAUCE

- 1/4 cup olive oil
- 1 medium onion, chopped
- 2 cups shredded zucchini
- 1 cup shredded carrot
- 1 cup milk
- 3 eggs, lightly beaten
- 1 cup whole wheat flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1/2 cup Parmesan cheese
- Pinch nutmeg
- Salt and pepper to taste
- Butter for cooking
- 4 ounces cream cheese, softened
- 4 ounces heavy cream
- 1/2 cup Parmesan cheese
- 2 tablespoons chopped toasted almonds

1. In a medium skillet, melt oil and saute onion 5 minutes. Add zucchini and carrots and cook 2 minutes. Cool. Stir in milk and eggs.

2. Combine flour, baking powder, Parmesan cheese, nutmeg, salt and pepper. Stir dry ingredients into vegetable mixture.

3. Ladle batter, 1-3 cup at a time, onto lightly buttered griddle or skillet. Spread batter into a 4-inch circle. Cook until set, 2 to 3 minutes. Turn and cook until brown and vegetables are cooked. Makes 12 pancakes.

3. To make the sauce, combine cream cheese and heavy cream in a small, heavy pan over low heat. Whisk the mixture until smooth. Add cheese. Pour the sauce over pancakes, then sprinkle with almonds. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

PARKS HELMS

HAROLD HARDISON

Democrats Compete

dropping his longstanding opposition to a ban on laundry detergents containing phosphorus. But environmentalists remain suspicious; a mailing by the North Carolina League of Conservation Voters dubbed him "Hazardous Hardison."

He sponsored legislation in the 1970s known as the "Hardison amendments" that bar state government from enacting environmental regulations tougher than those on the federal level, though he now says the measures may have outlived their usefulness.

To improve his standing with the education community, Hardison risked the wrath of religious conservatives by calling for a statewide lottery, saying it could pump up to $200 million into the public school budget each year and provide an alternative to tax increases.

Helms, 52, was highly regarded during his House tenure although his strength waned after he lost a race for speaker to Liston Ramsey in 1981. He was ranked as one of the 10 most effective House members in surveys by the N.C. Center for Public Policy Research, and in 1978 guided through the House legislation allowing mixed-drink sales.

He has a potentially strong political base in Charlotte. However, some question his electability in light of his loss to Republican Larry Cobb in the 1984 Senate race and what Helms acknowledges is a lack of "fire in the belly" for politics.

A former chairman of the North Carolina Courts Commission, Helms is competing with Rand for support from the state's legal community — lawyers, judges and clerks of court. Helms also is backed by some of former Attorney General Rufus Edmisten's top operatives.

Helms portrays himself as a progressive outsider who would take on the establishment — including fellow Democratic leaders in the Legislature. He has not hesitated to endorse positions favored by Martin, including veto power for the governor and merit selection of judges.

Rand, 48, has been a rising star in the Legislature since his appointment to the Senate to fill a vacancy in 1981. A close ally of Jordan, he was appointed chairman of the Senate Base Budget Committee and was elected majority leader in 1985. The Center for Public Policy Research survey ranked him the third most effective senator that year.

An avid cigar smoker with a dry wit, Rand is popular with politically active education and law enforcement groups. He won the N.C. Association of Educators' endorsement.

Despite being a defense attorney, Rand has sponsored tough anti-crime bills, including measures to permit investigative grand juries and expand wiretapping authority in drug trafficking cases.

He has proposed a 10-point plan to foster openness in the legislative process, including a ban on closed-door meetings, and an anti-illiteracy campaign with greater use of extended day schools as the centerpiece.

Rand has sought to exploit Hardison's unpopularity with environmentalists by calling for repeal of the Hardison amendments, which said had "put North Carolina's environmental future in a strait-jacket," and proposing a $20 million acquisition of land for state parks.

IN THE STATE

Settlement

RALEIGH (AP) — The state will pay $244,299.81 to settle a lawsuit that a fired state employee filed against her former supervisors and a federal contempt-of-court complaint, lawyers in the case say.

The settlement, negotiated with the aid of a federal magistrate, ends litigation in Wake County Superior Court and U.S. District Court over the firing of Janet Proctor, former director of the state Medical Student Loan Program.

Mrs. Proctor had accused her supervisors of violating an agreement not to retaliate against her for filing a lawsuit in 1975 contending that female state government workers were paid less than male workers for equal work.

Emergency

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Declaring a state of emergency, North Carolina Baptist and Forsyth Memorial hospitals have announced a $200,000 advertising and marketing campaign aimed at attracting high school students to nursing and other health-care professions.

The two hospitals joined to hire a Winston-Salem advertising firm to create a health-care career awareness campaign called "Code Blue." Code Blue is hospital jargon for an emergency.

The campaign is designed to show teen-agers how marketable they could be if they choose health-care jobs in fields that are severely understaffed.

Streets Closed

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Starting this weekend, Lexington streets will be closed to the young drivers who flock there to drive up and down Main Street, following the City Council's adoption of an anti-cruising ordinance.

The vote Monday night was 7-1, despite protests from many of about 50 youths and parents who attended the public hearing.

Those who spoke against the ordinance warned that the parade of cars would simply fan out if the downtown is made off-limits.

Trade Exhibit

WILMINGTON (AP) — Local businessmen and Dandong, China, officials have agreed to hold a trade exhibit of North Carolina and Wilmington-area products in May 1989 in Dandong.

A 15-member official delegation accompanied by several North Carolina businessmen will spend 10 days in China, said Edward Bromeier, president of the Cape Fear Chapter of the N.C. World Trade Association.

Manteo Report

MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — Swampy marsh and soft sand may scuttle plans for a new Dare County administrative complex on a waterfront site in downtown Manteo, according to a report that is to be reviewed by county officials later this week.

An engineering study and soil borings done by Contractors and Engineers Services Inc. of Goldsboro on a nine-acre site between Fernando Street and Shallowbag Bay reportedly shows that the tract's soils are too soft for anything more than a single-story building. Dare officials had planned on a multistory office building and courthouse on the site.

Honey — Just Right As A Natural Sweetener

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Food Editor

Winnie the Pooh was only a stuffed bear, but he had good taste; he loved naturally sweet honey. Honey adds flavor to any food and makes baked goods moist. Here are some tips for storing and cooking with Pooh's favorite sweet.

— The flavor of honey depends on the flowers it was made from; check the label. Most honey is made from clover, which gives a very mild flavor. In general, the paler the honey, the milder the flavor.

— Store honey at room temperature. Refrigeration speeds crystallization.

— Crystallized honey is not spoiled. When crystals form in honey, remove the lid and place the jar in warm water until they dissolve. Or cook 1 cup of honey in a microwave-safe container on 100 percent power (high) 2 to 3 minutes or until crystals dissolve, stirring every 30 seconds. To protect the color and flavor, do not overheat.

— Before measuring honey, spray the measuring cup with non-stick spray coating. It makes the honey easy to remove from the cup.

— When cooking with honey, it's easier to use recipes specially developed for the product, such as Microwave Honey-Baked Apples: Combine ¼ cup honey, ½ teaspoon shredded orange peel and ¼ teaspoon cinnamon; set aside. Pare 4 baking apples one-third of the way down and core. Arrange apples in 9-inch round or 8-inch square microwave-safe baking dish. Spoon 1 tablespoon honey mixture over each apple. Cover with vented clear plastic wrap. Cook at 100 percent power (high) 6 to 8 minutes or until tender, rotating dish a half-turn once. Serve warm. Makes 4 servings.

— Add flavor to vegetables with Honey Herb Sauce: In a small saucepan combine ¼ cup honey; ¼ cup margarine or butter; 2 tablespoons finely chopped onion; ½ teaspoon dried thyme, crushed; dash salt, and dash pepper. Bring to boiling; cook 2 minutes. Toss with 3 cups cooked carrots, cubed cooked winter squash or sliced cooked sweet potatoes. Makes ½ cup sauce.

— For a honey of a barbecue sauce: In a saucepan combine ½ cup honey; ¼ cup dry white wine; 1 tablespoon lemon juice; 1 teaspoon minced dried onion; 1 teaspoon dried rosemary, crushed; 1 clove garlic, minced; dash salt, and dash pepper. Bring to boiling. Reduce heat and simmer 5 minutes. Brush over chicken pieces, pork chops or steak during last 5 to 7 minutes of barbecuing or broiling. Brush again before serving. Makes 1 cup.

— If you do want to substitute honey for granulated sugar in recipes, you'll need to do some calculating before you begin.

Substitute honey for no more than half the sugar. In baked goods, reduce the amount of liquid in the recipe by ¼ cup for each cup of honey; add ¼ to ¾ teaspoon baking soda for each cup of honey. Reduce the oven temperature by 25 degrees to prevent overbrowning.

SHAD ROE BROILED IN BACON

(2 servings)
1 tablespoon red-wine vinegar
1/2 pound shad roe or roe of other fish, 1/2- to 3/4-inch thick
2 to 4 slices bacon
Bring 2 or 3 cups of water to a boil in a pot and add vinegar. Drop in shad roe and poach 6 minutes. Wrap in bacon slices, place on the rack of a preheated broiler 3 inches from source of heat and broil until bacon is brown and crisp on one side. Carefully turn and repeat on second side. Slice into center of roe to be sure it is cooked through before serving.

Omelet Makes A Lighter Meal Barbecue

1 tablespoon butter
1/2 cup turkey ham, diced
Choice of grated cheese, sliced mushrooms, green onions or alfalfa sprouts
2 tablespoons sour cream or yogurt
Mix eggs, water, salt and pepper with fork. Heat butter in 8 inch omelet pan or skillet until just hot enough to sizzle a drop of water. Pour in egg mixture, which should set at edges at once. Carefully push cooked edges to center so uncooked egg can flow to bottom. While top is still moist and creamy-looking, arrange turkey ham and other filling choices on half of omelet. Fold omelet over filling and turn out onto warm platter. Top with sour cream or yogurt and diced turkey ham. Makes 1 serving.

SUNSHINE OMELET

4 eggs
1/4 cup water
1/2 teaspoon salt
dash pepper
1 tablespoon butter
Mix eggs, water, salt and pepper with fork. Heat butter in 10-inch omelet pan or skillet until just hot enough to sizzle a drop of water. Pour in egg mixture. Mixture should set at edges at once. With pancake turner, carefully draw cooked portions at edges toward center, so uncooked portions flow to bottom. Tilt skillet as it is necessary to hasten flow of uncooked eggs. Slide pan rapidly back and forth over heat to keep mixture in motion and sliding freely. While top is still moist and creamy-looking, spread 1/2 cup filling on half of omelet. With pancake turner fold in half or roll, turning out onto platter with a quick flip of the wrist. Spoon remaining filling over top of omelet; sprinkle on remaining cheese. Makes 2 servings.

Filling
1 cup drained cooked mixed vegetables
1/2 cup condensed cream of celery soup, undiluted
1/4 cup shredded cheddar cheese
1 teaspoon instant minced onion

Combine vegetables, soup, 2 tablespoons cheese and onion; heat in saucepan. Keep warm while preparing omelet.

1/4 teaspoon pepper
Combine Smoky Barbecue Sauce ingredients and heat to boiling point. Use to baste thawed turkey breast roast occasionally as it barbecues in a covered grill or in 325 degree oven until meat thermometer registers 170 degrees F. For approximate cooking times refer to directions on turkey breast roast wrapper.

MYSTERY BARBECUED CHICKEN

3 large chicken breasts, split
1/2 cup corn oil
1 cup freshly squeezed lemon juice
2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon Accent
2 tablespoons molasses
1 teaspoon Tabasco
Place sauce ingredients in heavy saucepan and heat to boiling. Place chicken on grill, skin side up, about 8 inches above coals. Baste chicken with sauce and cook, turning and basting often, until done, 40-50 minutes. Serves 6.

in shallow roasting pan; discard marinade. Season lamb to taste with salt and pepper, if desired. Place in 425 degree oven. Immediately reduce heat to 325 degrees. Roast until meat thermometer inserted in thickest portion of meat reads 150 degrees for medium, about 30 to 40 minutes depending on thickness. While lamb roasts, add remaining minced clove of garlic, onion and butter to saucepan; saute until onion is tender but not brown. Add water and contents of rice and seasoning packets. Bring to a boil. Cover tightly and simmer 23 minutes. Stir in green onions; cover and continue to simmer until all water is absorbed, about 2 minutes. Slice lamb; serve alongside rice. Makes 6 servings.

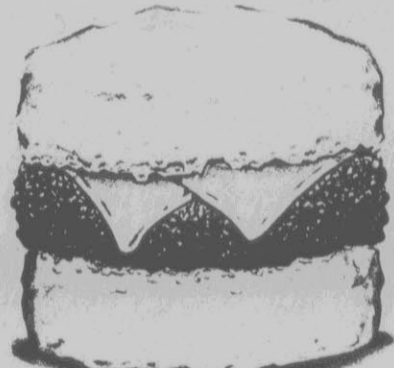

WILD SAUTE OF CHICKEN BREAST AND RICE

1 package (6 ounces) long grain and wild rice
2 1/3 cups water
1/4 cup butter or margarine
3 whole chicken breasts, boned, skinned and split
1 1/2 teaspoons ground coriander
1 1/2 teaspoons paprika
3/4 teaspoon salt
1 large clove garlic, minced
4 teaspoons lemon juice
1 bunch watercress leaves, stems removed (1 cup)
1/2 teaspoon grated lemon peel
Combine contents of rice and seasoning packets, water and 1 tablespoon of the butter in saucepan. Bring to a boil. Cover tightly and simmer until all water is absorbed, about 25 minutes. While rice simmers, pound chicken breasts to 1/2-inch thickness. Sprinkle evenly with coriander, paprika and salt. Heat remaining 3 tablespoons butter in 10-inch skillet over medium heat. Add garlic and chicken; saute until chicken is tender, about 4 minutes per side. Remove to serving plate. Add lemon juice to skillet; cook and stir 1 minute. Pour over chicken. Stir watercress and lemon peel into cooked rice; serve alongside chicken. Makes 6 servings.

SLOW GOING — Motorists traveling N.C. 181 north of Morganton in the Jonas Ridge area found the going tough after a second spring storm dumped heavy snow on portions of western North Carolina. The storm Tuesday and today left more than 17 inches of snow on Mount Mitchell, nine inches in the Asheville area and up to six inches at Blowing Rock. In the eastern half of the state, high winds and rain caused flooding along the coast. Wind gusts up to 50 mph were recorded in the coastal counties. (AP Laserphoto)

State Gets 17 Inches Of Snow

By ERICA JOHNSTON
Associated Press Writer

For the second time this month, a storm system brought winter back to the North Carolina mountains, while heavy rains and 50 mph wind gusts brought coastal flood warnings today in several counties.

The storm dumped 17 inches of snow on Mt. Mitchell, 9 inches on Flat Top Mountain near Asheville and 6 inches on Blowing Rock, the National Weather Service said.

Meanwhile, a coastal flood warning was in effect today for Carteret, Pamlico and Craven counties along the central coast.

"Foam on the ocean looks like snow on the road," said a dispatcher with the Dare County Sheriff's Office. Several roads were closed due to the flooding, but no injuries have been reported, authorities said.

Along the Outer Banks, ocean overwash was reported in Kill Devil Hills, Nags Head and Kitty Hawk. The beach road was reported under water at several places with debris on the road, authorities said.

Water levels on the southern end of Pamlico Sound and adjacent estuaries should rise to between 4 and 6 feet above normal today, the weather service said. Water levels should drop in some areas later in the day as the wind backs around to the north and diminishes in speed.

Hundreds of drivers were stranded for four hours Tuesday on U.S. 321 between Lenoir and Blowing Rock when visibility dropped to zero and jack-knifed trailers blocked the roads.

Avery County reported up to 10 inches of snow, which snarled traffic and caught school officials by surprise.

"All of our major routes are blocked, either by power lines, trees or jack-knifed tractor-trailers," said Avery County Sheriff's Department Dispatcher Larry Sudderth. "The phones have just been ringing off the hook. I couldn't tell you how many wrecks we've had."

The precipitation started out as rain in Avery County, and county children got off to school on schedule before the snow began.

The snow had let up by afternoon and school buses were able to navigate the mountain roads to get students home, school officials said.

Higher elevations were hit with the snow, but the precipitation turned to rain on the lower slopes.

Visiting Travel Directors Sample Area's Hospitality, And Like It

By JOHN BARE

Rebekah Vohoska, director of tourism for the Raleigh Convention and Visitors Bureau, visited Greenville for the first time this week to attend the Governor's Conference on Travel and Tourism.

She was impressed with the hospitality, but there is another town in eastern North Carolina that really caught her eye when she looked at a map: the Hyde County hamlet of Nebraska.

"I was looking at a map, and all of a sudden I saw Nebraska," said Miss Vohoska, who moved to Raleigh from Omaha, Neb., about a year ago. The Tuesday rainstorm drowned Miss Vohoska's immediate plans to visit the coastal namesake of her home state, but she said she will go another time.

"I'm going to go there someday, I promise, and then I'm going to send postcards to my friends back in Nebraska," she said.

"We didn't have the physical beauty North Carolina has," said Miss Vohoska, citing a specific pleasure in seeing the North Carolina dogwoods bloom. "As someone that is seeing it for the first time, I can't get enough of it."

"I'll always be a Cornhusker, but I definitely have some tar on my heels now," she said.

She also sampled eastern North Carolina barbecue and saw East Carolina University, the downtown commons and the medical center during her stay in Greenville. "The conference and Greenville exceeded my expectations," she said.

"The real neat thing for Greenville — about hosting a conference like this — is you have an audience of 400 people who regularly talk to travel writers, travel agents, meeting planners and tour operators," Miss Vohoska said. "We talk to the people who make travel decisions."

The three-day convention came to a close Tuesday afternoon, and Greenville should receive lots of favorable publicity as the delegates return to their cities, said Doug Stafford, the president of the Charlotte Convention and Visitors Bureau who was also making his first visit to Greenville.

"Before I came here, when I thought of Greenville, I thought of ECU. Obviously I still think of ECU, but it's more of a commercial and travel center for the East than I thought," Stafford said. "This is the kind of quality and service you would expect in a larger city."

Martin To Join In 264 Ceremony

FARMVILLE — Gov. Jim Martin will participate in a ground-breaking ceremony for the Farmville bypass of U.S. 264 at 2 p.m. Friday.

Martin will be joined by other state, local and federal officials at the event to be held west of Farmville where the four-laning of U.S. 264 ends.

In February, the Board of Transportation awarded a $4.2 million contract to Johnny C. Johnson Inc. of Mount Airy to begin work on the 3.3-mile project. The contract calls for grading and leveling a four-lane corridor from east of Dildy Road (SR 1311) in Greene County to U.S. 258 north of Farmville in Pitt County. The contract also calls for construction of a culvert to carry water from Little Contentnea Creek under the road. A bridge to carry traffic on Lang Road (SR 1229) over U.S. 264 also will be built.

The contract is the first of three scheduled for construction of the bypass.

Martin said the board's action is an important step in the construction of a four-lane highway linking Raleigh and eastern North Carolina. "This project is a top priority of my administration," he said. "U.S. 264 was identified by the board in November as a strategic corridor. Its completion will promote economic development in the area and will make travel much easier and safer for the millions of people who visit eastern North Carolina each year."

Randy Doub of Greenville, a transportation board member, said this portion of the project is scheduled to be completed in November 1989.

Hijackers Agree To Negotiations

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — Algerian officials today boarded a hijacked Kuwaiti jumbo jet and began negotiations with Shiite Moslem gunmen who killed two people and were holding about 35 others hostage.

A delegation of Kuwaiti officials arrived in Algiers to help in the effort to free the plane, which was hijacked April 5 on a flight from Bangkok to Kuwait with 112 people aboard. The Boeing 747 left Larnaca, Cyprus, Tuesday night after 12 more hostages were freed and flew to Algiers.

Fifty-seven others were released earlier when the plane was on the ground in Mashhad, northeastern Iran.

The hijackers are demanding that Kuwait free 17 pro-Iranian extremists convicted in the 1983 bombings of the U.S. and French embassies in Kuwait. Kuwait has rejected the demand.

Algerian Interior Minister Hedi Khediri visited the Kuwaiti Airways jet twice and told reporters he was assured the gunmen would "use no violence" on Algerian territory.

Three members of the Kuwaiti royal family remain aboard the jumbo jet.

Khediri said he had seen five or six hijackers, but did not know the exact number.

Adnan Rashi Majiki, an Egyptian passenger in his 60s who was one of the 12 passengers released in Larnaca, told The Associated Press that the hijackers "were six but I think in Mashhad they became seven."

A Kuwait newspaper reported today that one of the hijackers was believed to have boarded the plane in Mashhad.

ASTRONAUT AUTOGRAPHS — Former astronaut Wally Schirra signs autographs before speaking at a luncheon Tuesday at the Governor's Conference on Travel and Tourism Tuesday in Greenville. Schirra, the nation's only astronaut to fly in the Mercury, Gemini and Apollo aircrafts, is a consultant for the Burroughs Wellcome Co., which has a manufacturing plant in Greenville. Reporter Says TV Alters Campaign

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

The 1988 presidential campaign has changed significantly from campaigns in the past, with candidates relying primarily on the use of video images, according to a veteran White House news correspondent.

Helen Thomas, United Press International presidential reporter, said that in the current campaign, print reporters are used by the candidates as mere accessories.

"Television is everything," she said. "No longer do advance teams try to gather enormous crowds at airports or those big red, white and blue rallies. They stage a quick (appearance), they (the candidates) take a few questions from reporters and they move on."

Ms. Thomas criticized the current campaign process, saying it places no pressure on the candidates to be explicit in their responses regarding particular issues. She said they behave like moving targets, requiring only the attention of local television cameras.

GUC Board Elects Ebron As Chairman

By STUART SAVAGE

James Ebron Jr. was elected chairman of the Greenville Utilities Commission board Tuesday night, replacing Louis Zincone, who served as chairman for the past year.

Elected to replace Ebron as vice chairman was Jo D. Ball.

Bill Taft, a member of the board since October 1981, was presented a plaque recognizing his service to the GUC. The Greenville City Council recently appointed William G. Blount to replace Taft, who served two terms as chairman and two terms as vice chairman during his tenure.

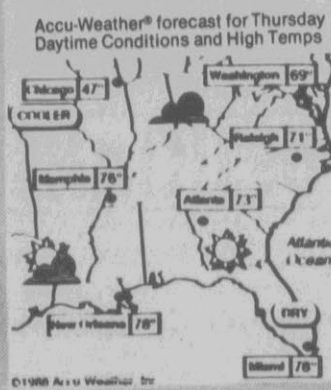

Donnie Paramore, meter superintendent for the GUC, told board members Tuesday that Greenville Utilities has become the first municipally owned utility in North Carolina to implement the nationwide Gatekeeper Program — a program designed to assist vulnerable older people who need help but may be unable to get it for themselves.

Paramore said that under the program, GUC's meter readers and meter service workers have been trained to look for signs and symptoms in older people which may indicate a problem.

If they notice any significant changes — such as unkept lawns, unattended pets, behavioral changes in older customers — Paramore said

Manufacturing Expert Says Economy Is Kicking, But Remains 'Pretty Sick'

Reflector Staff Writer

The assumption that the growing United States economy during the past several years has fueled a significant increase in the manufacturing sector is basically inaccurate, according to a manufacturing expert.

Dr. C. Wickham Skinner, a retired Harvard business school professor, says any regaining of competitive edge in the world marketplace is really more illusory than real.

"Very few sick industries have really recovered. The patient is still alive, even kicking occasionally, but is still pretty sick."

Skinner offered his views on the current state of manufacturing in the United States to approximately 150 people on the East Carolina University campus Tuesday.

Skinner was the featured speaker in the Beta Gamma Sigma Distinguished Lecture Series. Students, faculty and several local business leaders were on hand to hear Skinner's assessment of the state manufacturing in this country.

"We are reacting, we're struggling, we're always late, we're trying to fix things, we're trying to adapt, we're trying for quick fixes, we're trying to pull old tricks out of textbooks," he said.

Skinner said America was not prepared for the levels of global competition which occurred during the 1960s and 1970s.

"We thought it took 30 years to become excellent at manufacturing. ... We have discovered that any country with a will to it and a reasonably good education system can become industrial participants in five years and become a (manufacturing) powerhouse in seven or eight (years). Everybody globally is learning to manufacture and getting pretty good at it. They all want to grow and produce better jobs," he said.

"It's an entirely new and different global ball game than any of us ever dreamed," he commented.

Skinner said the manufacturing situation in the United States in the 1960s and 1970s included high production costs, low labor productivity and high dollar wages.

New participants in world manufacturing in this decade have created stiff competition for the U.S. manufacturing industry.

Skinner said some of the manufacturing industries hit hardest by foreign competition have been textiles, furniture and apparel manufacturers.

He said the United States has also been hurt by imports in the high tech industry.

"We are net importers of consumer electronics, semiconductors, computers, robots, machine tools, telecommunications, cars, and trucks," he said.

Skinner said that in order to better compete, U.S. manufacturing needs to attract the best intellects entering corporations to cope with the increasingly complicated nature of manufacturing.

"In manufacturing you have to deal with equipment tech flow systems, computers, inventories, and new products," he said.

Skinner is regarded as a leading authority on production management and manufacturing policy. After 10 years of manufacturing experience at Honeywell Inc., Skinner entered education, eventually becoming the chairman of the production and operations management area at Harvard University.

Since retiring in 1986, Skinner has continued to write, study, lecture and consult. Skinner predicted over 20 years ago that America faced decline in the world marketplace. He first warned of shortcomings in U.S. manufacturing in the early 1960s and his views gained national attention in a 1966 Harvard Business Review article that anticipated America's competitive decline of the 1970s and 1980s.

He has authored eight books including the recently published, "Manufacturing: The Formidable Competitive Weapon."

Army Cook Sentenced To Death

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — A military court-martial panel has sentenced Fort Bragg cook Ronald Adrin Gray to die by lethal injection for the rape and murder of two Fayetteville women.

Gray also was convicted of raping and attempting to kill Pvt. Mary Ann Nameth on Jan. 3, 1987, in a Fort Bragg barracks. Nameth, 20, who was stabbed in the neck three times, said Tuesday lethal injection was too painless a method for Gray's execution.

"They'll just put him to sleep and he won't feel anything — that's fine if you've got cancer and you're in pain, but he's hurt too many people to get off that easy," Nameth said. "I had this idea he'd get the death penalty, but I didn't think it'd be lethal injection. That isn't the way for him to go. Hanging would be better for him. Maybe the chair — that'd be painful."

Gray, 22, smiled Tuesday when the six-member, all-male panel returned a unanimous verdict for the death penalty after two hours of deliberations. The panel also reduced Gray from specialist 4 to private, required him to forfeit all his pay and ordered him to be dishonorably discharged from the Army.

Maj. Gen. Carl Stiner, the commander of the 82nd Airborne Division, must now review the verdict.

The death sentence automatically will be appealed to the U.S. Court of Military Review at Baileys Crossroads, Va., said Lt. Col. Bill Mulvey, an Army spokesman at the Pentagon. Gray's case then would automatically go to the Court of Military Appeals in Washington, D.C., Mulvey said.

If those appeals fail, Gray could petition the U.S. Supreme Court to review his case and the president of the United States must uphold the death sentence, Mulvey said.

Gray was convicted Thursday of 14 counts of rape, robbery, murder and attempted murder. In a separate civilian case, Gray was sentenced to eight life terms in a Cumberland County Superior Court trial after confessing to raping and killing two other Fayetteville women. He must serve at least 60 years before being eligible for parole.

In the court-martial, Gray was convicted of raping and killing Kimberly Anne Ruggles, 24, a civilian cab driver, on Jan. 6, 1987, and Laura Lee Vickery Clay, 18, an Army private, on Dec. 15, 1986.

Ruggles was found dead near her abandoned taxi on Fort Bragg wearing only a pair of socks, and she had been raped and sodomized, a pathologist testified.

Novelist Writes Woman's View 'Soul History'

By KEITH LOVE

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

"Oh, I guess I can handle it," Harrison says, reaching down to rough up the hunting dogs swirling about his legs.

He and a buddy have just driven in from a Georgia quail-hunting jaunt. Each night they sneaked the dogs into their motel rooms and ordered them bedtime snacks from room service — a revelation that brings a smirk from Jim's wife, Linda.

Harrison stoops to scare the dogs with his "googly" left eye, which was blinded by a playmate when he was 5 and is now so forbidding it often misleads strangers who meet this gentle man with the broad shoulders and big belly.

Letting out a raspy giggle as the conversation turns back to work, the 50-year-old writer acknowledges that the critics still do not know what to make of him even though they have decided, at long last, that he is one of the country's most original voices.

This conclusion has come with the publication of "Dalva," Harrison's new novel about a woman who quits her comfortable life in Santa Monica, Calif., to return to the family home in rural Nebraska and begin a search for the son who was taken away from her at birth.

As the story moves back and forth between the present and the 1880s, it lays out what Harrison calls "a soul history of our country," linking the systematic extermination of the Indians a century ago with the U.S. involvement in Vietnam and its current obsession with Nicaragua.

"Dalva" has been called "nearly flawless storytelling" by one major critic, and another said its protagonist "is a character the reader would dearly love to meet."

Some reviewers have praised Harrison for the risk of writing in the voice of a woman after being best known for his hard-drinking, womanizing characters in previous books.

In that sense, "Dalva" is just another experiment for Harrison, who has defied easy labels in his more than 20 years of writing.

The son of a county farm agent who gave him William Faulkner and Sherwood Anderson to read as a boy, he was hailed as one of the country's best young poets by the time he was 30.

Many of his poems are about nature — its beauty and its cruelty — but always there is an experimentation and a relentless philosophical questioning that attracts serious criticism.

When he was 33, Harrison fell into a ravine on a quail hunt. While lying in traction he wrote his first novel on a dare from his friend, writer Thomas McGuane, whom he met when both were students at Michigan State.

The novel was called "Wolf" and it showed the promise of Harrison's ability to use startling poetic images in prose.

Four more novels followed — "A Good Day to Die," "Farmer," "Warlock" and "Sundog." Three novellas were published in 1979 under the title "Legends of the Fall."

Some of Harrison's characters are so vivid that his fans often debate how much they are based on real people.

In "Dalva," one of the most memorable characters is Northridge, the protagonist's great-grandfather, a botanist who moved West after the Civil War to help — futilely, as it turned out — the Sioux learn agriculture so that they could survive the slaughter of the buffalo and the taking of their lands by white settlers.

Sprinkled throughout the book are entries from Northridge's journals, and they have such a ring of authenticity Harrison is asked often these days if Northridge and his journals were real.

"No, I make everything up," Harrison says, lighting another cigarette as he sits in the shack behind his house where he writes.

On the wall over his desk is a photograph of William Faulkner, and hanging from a rafter is a strange contraption that looks like something that would interest an Indian shaman.

Held together with string are a wing from a blue heron, bones from a coyote and a sea lion, grizzly bear feces and a pine cone from the forest in Spain where the poet Federico Garcia Lorca — a major Harrison influence — was killed by Franco's forces.

A baby's shoe dangles from the bottom of the heron wing.

"I was down in Palm Beach (Fla.) one day some years ago," Harrison says, touching the shoe, "and a little boat with some Haitians landed. They had a small boy with them.

"The police were waiting from them and these poor people immediately thought they were going to be shot. They got out of the boat, put their hands behind their heads and got down on their knees. But the police simply took them away for processing.

"I looked in the boat after they were gone and there was the little boy's shoe. It is my reminder of the real world, or one of the real worlds." (Begin Optional Trim)

Stacked on his desk are some books sent to him by his brother, John, librarian at the University of Arkansas.

Most of them are about Indian ritual and U.S. agricultural practices in the 19th century — both lifelong interests of Harrison that are evident in several of his novels, particularly in "Dalva."

Asked how "Dalva" came about, Harrison picks up another book. It is Northridge's journal — but the entries are in Harrison's hand.

"This sounds kind of goofy, I guess," Harrison says, "but before I began to write 'Dalva,' I was sitting out here one night and I sort of entered the character of Northridge. I began to write the journal. And out of that came the novel."

To get the authenticity of the book's passages on Nebraska, the Dakotas, Arizona and Mexico, Harrison simply drove around those areas for months. He drives thousands of miles a year.

"You ride down the road and look at things," he says. "All of this stuff enters my mind as images, rather than as knowledge."

Sampler Can Be Family Heirloom

Pat's Pointers

Pat Trexler

Well, here's hoping I can "push" more of you into discovering for yourselves just how easy and delightful cross-stitch is.

Cross-stitch can be worked on any even-weave fabric, but I would suggest that the beginner start on fabric especially designed for this type of stitchery. Six-strand embroidery floss is the most commonly used thread and is probably the best choice for the beginner.

One mistake often made by self-taught stitchers is the use of too many strands of thread in the needle. Unlike needlepoint, where the background fabric is usually completely covered, counted cross-stitch should have a light and airy appearance. As a general rule, you would use only one of the six strands of thread in embroidery floss on a tightly woven fabric such as 22-to-the-inch Hardanger fabric. With 14- to 18-count Aida fabric, two strands usually are enough, while three strands are good with 11-to-the-inch Aida.

It is important to hem the fabric edges to prevent raveling as you work. You can do this by machine or by hand. Or you can use fusible hem tape and just iron a hem in.

Try to keep your fabric clean as you work with it, but if it does become soiled, wash it before mounting. Even if washing is not necessary, you should iron the finished piece, placing it on a padded surface with the wrong side facing up and the right side against the padding.

Be sure to completely avoid using knots on the wrong side of your work.

Create a priceless heirloom as you cross-stitch this sampler with its inspirational message. "Teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts to wisdom. Our days are as the grass ... or like the morning flower/When blasting winds sweep o'r the fields it withers in an hour," reads the quotation, which is surrounded by angels, church and flowers. A special place is provided at the bottom of the 14-by-18-inch sampler for you to stitch your own name.

The design is stamped onto the cross-stitch fabric, included along with the other necessary supplies in the kit. If you choose to order the leaflet instead, you will receive a counted cross-stitch graph chart with the instructions. The size of sampler made from the leaflet chart will depend upon the stitch count of your selected fabric.

To obtain directions for making the Morning Flower Sampler, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-041088 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. N-041088 by sending a check or money order for $12.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, instructions, stamped fabric, needle and embroidery threads.

Since cross-stitch zoomed back into popularity a few years ago, thousands of women and men have discovered the joy, relaxation and satisfaction to be gained from this needlecraft. I once mentioned in a column that I had become addicted to cross-stitch and a reader replied, "Pat, you're not just an addict — you're a pusher!"

FLOWER SAMPLER — Inspirational message is featured on this cross stitch sampler.

Almost 70 percent of aerobic dance exercisers work out at least three times a week, according to the Reebok Aerobic Information Bureau.

An International Dance-Exercise Association survey of 831 dancers found that 40 percent of them exercised three times a week.

Secure loose thread ends under previously worked stitches. For your first stitch in a previously unworked area, hold the beginning thread against the wrong side of the fabric so it is covered by the first few stitches you make.

Keep a pair of small scissors handy and always clip any loose ends after they are secured. Knots or tangled threads on the wrong side will appear as lumpy spots when you finish and mount your needlework.

You can work the stitches vertically, horizontally or singly in scattered areas, but always cross your stitches in the same direction. It is helpful to use a small embroidery hoop to keep your fabric taut.

With just these few suggestions, you should find cross-stitch quick, easy and fun!

Sprouts Growing In Favor With Some Farmers

By Caroline E. Mayer
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WOODSTOCK, Va. — To Bob Peer, his alfalfa-sprout business is more than just a livelihood.

It's also a cure, not only for the ups and downs of the unpredictable agricultural business, but also, mysteriously enough, for his injured ankle.

Begun 6½ years ago as an alternative to the traditional agriculture business, Peer's alfalfa-sprout business has finally grown into a profitable concern, becoming one of the major suppliers of sprouts in the Washington area.

Along the way, the 32-year-old Peer admits, "we've eaten quite a few."

And Peer now attributes to that consumption the sudden healing of an injured ankle, received a few years back while playing volleyball. More than a year after hurting himself, Peer still struggled to get out of bed in the morning, finding it painful to walk.

Then, after starting his sprout business and eating the results, he found the pain suddenly vanished. "The only thing I changed at that time in my life was eating sprouts," Peer said. "Later I found out that alfalfa was used as an old remedy for arthritis."

But it wasn't for medicinal purposes that Peer ventured into the sprout business. He came across it in the early 1980s just as he was about ready to give up on his chosen vocation of farming. Having raised hogs, broilers, cattle, grains — "just everything but dairy farming" — Peer had become increasingly frustrated about his inability to control his livelihood.

"The weather was always a risk you had little control over," he complained recently. So too were the prices he received. "The prices were always set by outside forces and it was so easy for overproduction" that prices were often too low to cover costs.

"Out of five years, you'd lose money for three years and hope that you would end up more positive than negative in the end," Peer recalled. "I started looking at how I could limit the risks involved and do some of the marketing myself."

Growing alfalfa sprouts was his solution, for if produced correctly, they are not subject to the vagaries of traditional agriculture. For one thing, they can be grown in climate-controlled chambers. Even more significantly, Peer said, "with specialty food, price is not as much a factor as quality and constancy."

Although alfalfa sprouts are still considered a specialty food that has not won widespread consumer acceptance, Peer is confident the demand will continue to increase, noting his business has increased about 10 to 15 percent a year since he began.

Peer is one of many small entrepreneurs across the country who have discovered the attraction of the alfalfa-sprout growing business.

"It started with a few growers in California and within the last few years has caught on so there is an operation in almost every city," Rust said.

Peer's farm, for instance, is one of several suppliers of sprouts to Washington supermarkets and restaurants. Probably the biggest supplier, however, is AOE Inc. in Baltimore, which stocks the area's largest supermarket chain, Giant Food Inc.

But AOE, like many other sprout growers, declined to discuss its business. Although it seems like a minor business to most consumers, the specialty of growing alfalfa sprouts is highly competitive and secretive.

Meanwhile, an attempt to form an alfalfa-sprout organization to market the product failed a few years back because growers did not want to share their information with one another, said Peer, one of the few growers apparently willing to talk about the business.

"It is a fairly easy business to enter," Rust said. "Growers range in size of operation from mom-and-pop operations that grow the sprouts in the kitchen sink — that's the way we started our business eight years ago — to giants doing 20 tons a day."

Peer is in the middle, growing about 2,200 pounds a week of sprouts. "The sprout business is fairly competitive, because you can produce a heck of a lot of sprouts in a small area," added Michael McKay, general manager of Waterfield Farms, which distributes Peer's products in the Washington area.

That is certainly true in Peer's case. On his 30-acre farm outside of Woodstock, where he lives with his wife and two children, less than one-tenth of the space is devoted to the sprout business.

The rest of the farm is used to raise 6,000 laying hens, graze 50 sheep and grow 300 apple trees. Down the road, Peer also raises watercress in limestone springs that he rents from his neighbors.

The sprout business is housed in a four-room, 1,500-square-foot shed, with about $75,000 of equipment. The process is fairly simple, taking only five days to grow the seed to finished product.

Peer buys his seed through brokers, with most of it coming from California, where it is specifically grown for sprouting. "It's a warm climate, so the seed coat is real thin and has higher germination," Peer said.

The cost of the seed ranges from $1 to $1.75 a pound, with each pound producing about 10 pounds of sprouts, "if all goes right," Peer said. The sprouts sell for about 99 cents for a 6-ounce container at local supermarkets.

To grow the sprouts, Peer and two part-time workers first soak about nine pounds of seeds in a 5-pound bucket overnight. Then the seeds are rinsed and drained and placed in a 5-foot-diameter drum that automatically sprays the seeds every 5 minutes and rotates them every 90 minutes.

The rotating drum is an innovation for Peer, who recalled that in his earlier days he used to grow the seeds in 80 five-gallon buckets stored on shelves against the wall. Peer would have to take down the buckets every four hours, spray them with water, shake and then store again.

The drum not only makes that process less burdensome, but also helps produce higher yields, because the tumbling action breaks the seed coat, Peer notes.

After 2½ days in the drum, the then-germinated seeds are placed in the small plastic containers in which they will eventually be sold. These containers are placed in a 70-degree "growing chamber" to allow the sprouts to grow greener, fuller and taller before being moved to a refrigerated chamber until the distributor picks them up.

"We used to do all the deliveries ourselves," Peer said. "We had eight customers, mostly wholesalers and other distributors."

But that process got to be too time-consuming and costly. For one thing, even though Peer had purchased a brand new truck, it kept breaking down. But Peer also found that he had to hire extra workers to take care of the sprouts while he was on the road. "It got to the point where we had twice as much labor at the farm as we needed, and we were not coming out ahead."

However, this problem was minor compared to two other setbacks that almost forced him out of business. In one case, one of the wholesale distributors Peer was dealing with went bankrupt. "They took a large percentage of our product and our cash," Peer recalled.

Then, about 3½ years ago, before

Peer and his family moved to their current farm, his business suffered another blow when the refrigerated facilities he was renting broke down. "Everything rotted. It took three months before we got back to where we had a good product, because there was bacteria in the equipment and the sprouts kept rotting before they even got out of the bucket. We nearly lost our business totally."

"We're profitable now, but it's taken six years to get up to that point," Peer said.

Byrd's Departure Opens Race For Top Democratic Leadership

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A wide-open race for the Senate's top Democratic leadership post is developing in the wake of Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd's decision to step aside after a decade as his party's chief Senate strategist.

Three senators immediately announced their intentions to campaign to succeed the West Virginia Democrat.

Byrd, 70, announced on Tuesday that he will seek election to a sixth Senate term and, if he wins and his party retains Senate control, use his seniority to claim the chairmanship of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

"There is much to accomplish for my state in that capacity," Byrd said.

Many in the chamber praised the work Byrd has done as Democratic leader since 1977, noting his widely acknowledged mastery of the legislative process, but a number of Democrats also agreed it was time for a change. Byrd in recent years has been criticized by some Democrats for his leadership style and for lacking a slick television image.

With the retirement of other senior

Democrats this year, Byrd will become his party's most senior member and serve as the chamber's president pro tem if Democrats retain majority control.

"I believe I have been fair, firm and honest, and I have done my best," Byrd told his fellow Democrats. "Through a decade of quiet labor I have led my party from the ambivalence of the Carter years through the extremes of the Reagan administration."

Announcing their candidacies for the leadership post, to be decided after the November elections, were Sens. George Mitchell, D-Maine; Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii; and J. Bennett Johnston, D-La.

Several senators said there is no clear front-runner.

Inouye, who holds the Democrats' No. 3 leadership position, said his prospects are "very good" despite criticism that while serving as chairman of the Senate Iran-Contra committee last summer he permitted Lt. Col. Oliver L. North to steal the show.

Johnston, who challenged Byrd in 1986 but dropped out when it became clear he could not win, said he is "very encouraged" even though he does not yet have enough votes to win.

"No one does," Johnston said. The majority leader of the Senate is the controlling party's chief strategist and spokesman and Johnston called the job "an opportunity without parallel."

Despite grumbling about his image, Byrd told reporters he had great confidence he could have won because "I know where the votes are."

But according to congressional sources, Byrd had told some senators in 1986 that if they supported him for the post then, he would step aside when the two-year term expired.

Byrd said he had agonized over the decision until the last moment, not making up his mind until late Monday night.

He told his colleagues he had tried to give the Senate a voice of "resonance and power" in the nation's affairs.

Many senators said they believed he had accomplished that.

But many also said they thought it was time for a change.

Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont., told reporters the likelihood of Byrd's running again "seemed to fade over the past year."

At the moment, Melcher added, there is "no clear indication of who might be first, or second or even last."

Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., said: "The time for change I think is appropriate."

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said Byrd made himself "the grand master of Senate rules and procedure."

"He is one tough ball carrier for his party," Dole said.

Paul G. Kirk Jr., chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said that when Democrats lost control of the Senate in the 1980, Byrd "helped fashion and execute a legislative strategy that moderated the excesses of Ronald Reagan, George Bush and the radical right."

Since he first entered the Senate 30 years ago, Byrd forged a reputation as a courtly master parliamentarian who revered the Senate and its history and gained power inch by inch by attending to his colleagues' smallest wishes.

He called in those favors in 1971, ousting Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., from the No. 2 party post. Byrd succeeded Sen. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., as majority leader in 1977.

Congress Selects Delegates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats in the House and Senate went behind closed doors to begin deciding who among them will be delegates to the Democratic National Convention, while a tight presidential race hangs in the balance.

"We're proceeding on the basis of seniority," Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said Tuesday evening as he emerged from the Capitol's Lyndon B. Johnson room after a half-hour closed session to nominate 32 senators to be delegates.

The House and Senate Democrats next week finish the selection of more than 250 of their members who will be delegates, representing more than a third of as many as 646 "super delegates" to the national convention.

Tuesday's meetings were secret, despite a provision in the Democratic Party's charter that requires all meetings held under its auspices to be open to the public.

"We really have no authority on their rules," said Jim Carey, executive director of the party's Compliance Assistance Commission, which is charged with enforcement of the rules. "They have every right to decide how their meetings are run."

Carey said the House Democratic Caucus and the Democratic Conference of the Senate are not "official Democratic National Committee entities," even though both are picking delegates to go to the national convention and the rules for picking the delegates were approved by his commission, which also helped to write them.

Among the 32 senators nominated Tuesday was Sen. Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., a freshman who was picked because she is the only Democratic female in the Senate, according to Byrd.

Byrd did not name any other senators on the list and did not say whether every senator wanting to be a delegate had been nominated.

An aide to Sen. Carl Levin of Michigan said Levin also is among the 32 senators nominated.

However, Senate sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said that some low-seniority senators who had asked to be delegates were not nominated.

Those senators and others get a second crack at being picked. Nominations to fill the remaining 11 delegate slots from the Senate had to be filed by noon on Friday. Lists of nominees are to be circulated among Democratic senators, who will vote next week.

This week's meeting and the lists of nominees are secret.

Retired Cop Succeeds In Clearing Prisoner

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — A man who spent six years behind bars for a robbery he didn't commit credits his release from prison to the determination of a retired policeman who dug up the evidence proving his innocence.

"He knew I wasn't guilty. He knew I didn't do it," Charles Blake said Tuesday of the man who came to his aid, Robert Seymour. "I just got caught in the system and it took me along."

Blake, 43, was freed last week from state prison after Norfolk Superior Court Judge John D. Sheehan listened to a tape recording of another convict confessing to the armed robbery Blake was first jailed for in 1971.

Blake was returned to prison in 1985 after being at large for 11 years following an escape.

The judge reduced the one- to five-year sentence he had given Blake for his escape, saying he had served enough time. The sentence was the only one remaining, since another judge reduced Blake's original 10- to 15-year robbery sentence last fall after hearing similar evidence.

"I tell you, those court officers would have yelled 'Yea!' if they were allowed to," said Blake's cousin, Yvonne Barklow.

Blake said he will treat Seymour to dinner as soon as the former policeman has a free night from his part-time job as a security officer at Holyoke Community College. "He was the main ingredient in this," Blake said.

Seymour said an informant called him the night of Blake's conviction to tell him the government had the wrong man. Blake had been found guilty of one of two armed robberies in the Springfield area, both committed by a man wearing a full Afro hair style.

Blake escaped while on furlough in 1974 and worked as a roofer for the next 11 years until his arrest in Washington, D.C.

Seymour, meanwhile, kept in touch with Blake's family through the Episcopal church they both attended, and often visited them to keep their spirits up.

"All the support I had was Robert Seymour," said Blake's cousin, Ms. Barklow.

In 1986, two years after his retirement, Seymour visited Kelly in jail. Kelly confessed the robbery in writing and on tape, Seymour said, although he later refused to testify at any hearings.

The following year, James D. Kelly was convicted of the other armed robbery and given a 12- to 18-year sentence.

Seymour, then a sergeant conducting drug investigations, believed Blake might have been mistaken for Kelly because of his Afro. Although he was not assigned to the case, Seymour went to the prosecutor with surveillance photos and mug shots showing the similarities between the men. The prosecutor said he saw no resemblance.

Seymour said an informant called him the night of Blake's conviction to tell him the government had the wrong man. Blake had been found guilty of one of two armed robberies in the Springfield area, both committed by a man wearing a full Afro hair style.

Investors Buy Reagan Home

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two industrialists who have been members of President Reagan's "kitchen cabinet" and other wealthy businessmen paid at least $156,000 each to buy the California home the Reagans will occupy when they leave the White House.

A Washington law firm disclosed the information Tuesday by releasing an exchange of letters with the Office of Government Ethics in July 1986.

Businessmen Holmes Tuttle and Earle Jorgensen are among the 20 or so people who helped buy the home.

the newly released documents show when paired with articles of incorporation on file with the state in Sacramento, Calif.

Tuttle, whose son Robert is director of the White House personnel office, is a California automotive dealer and industrialist. Jorgensen is chairman of a steel and aluminum distribution company, and both men have been members of Reagan's "kitchen cabinet" of unofficial advisers.

Bono Elected Mayor

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Sonny Bono, who easily won the mayor's office of this desert resort, says his fame as Cher's ex-husband and former singing partner was both an asset and a handicap during his campaign.

"I think the celebrity status got me a lot of name identification," Bono, 53, said after Tuesday's victory, but said it was hard to overcome his image as "a straight man for Cher" — who won her first Academy Award the night before.

"At first, he was viewed as a joke. But then he got out and started talking to folks and became a legitimate and very popular candidate," said Rebecca Kurtz, managing editor of Palm Springs Life magazine.

Bono, a restaurateur and the state's newest celebrity mayor, won by almost a 2-1 margin, with 4,842 votes to 2,498 for accountant Lloyd Maryanov, his closest competitor in the field of seven, city officials said.

Mouse Patent Approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 20 patents for animals are pending following the government's first approval of a patent for a genetically altered type of mouse.

The action Tuesday drew prompt fire from opponents of genetic engineering, but was praised by a biotechnology industry group.

Patent Commissioner Donald J. Quigg said a patent was issued to Harvard University for a type of laboratory mouse that is abnormally sensitive to cancer.

The patent was applied for in 1984 and the mice have been in use at Harvard since that time, said university spokeswoman Lillian Blacker.

The mice are changed by giving them a gene that makes them more susceptible to cancer. The gene has carried through several generations of mice, Blacker said.

Using these mice in research can make it easier for scientists to test both chemicals that cause cancer and others that fight the disease, Quigg said at a news conference.

The gene that makes the mice more susceptible to cancer is introduced shortly after the mouse egg is fertilized, and that gene then becomes part of the mouse and its offspring, according to the Patent Office.

The genetic material used to change the mice is spliced together from an activated version of the mouse cancer gene and a virus that causes mammary tumors in mice, explained Blacker.

The patent, No. 4,736,866, named Philip Leder of Chestnut Hill, Mass., and Timothy A. Stewart of San Francisco as inventors of the altered mouse.

Despite the controversy, patents on forms of life are not new. Both plants and types of bacteria have been patented in the past.

The Supreme Court in 1980 ruled that man-made life organisms could be patented, but the Harvard patent is the first to protect a genetic change in a higher life form.

Mass Killer Electrocuted In Louisiana

ANGOLA, La. (AP) — Leslie Lowenfield was executed in the electric chair early today denying to the end that he killed his girlfriend and four of her relatives, including her 4-year-old daughter, in a jealous rage.

"Don't give up on me, although my life will be over tonight, because the one responsible is still out there," said the 34-year-old Lowenfield after he was led into the death chamber at the Louisiana State Penitentiary.

On Tuesday, his lawyer lost appeals to the Louisiana Supreme Court, a federal district judge and a federal appeals court.

His attorney had argued that he should be spared because he was a paranoid schizophrenic who could not understand what it would mean to be executed or why he was being executed.

Shortly after midnight, the U.S. Supreme Court refused to issue a fifth stay of execution for him.

Lowenfield was pronounced dead at 12:25 a.m.

It was the nation's second execution this year and Louisiana's second. The state has put to death 17 murderers since it resumed executions in 1983.

Lowenfield, a welder from Guyana who came to the United States from Canada in 1975 on a work permit, spent most of his final hours with Dale Brown, head basketball coach at Louisiana State University, and two spiritual advisers.

Happiness

By Wanda K. Smith

Happiness is something more Than what a man lays by in a store,
More than prestige, more than power
Or fleeting pleasures of the hour.

Happiness is kindness living In friendly hearts, in selfish giving,
A will to feel with one another

And treat a neighbor as a brother.

It is a faith, a nobler plan That seeks the good in every man,
That leaves all censured unexpressed,
Forgives the flaws and sees the best!

Happiness is gold refined,

Within the heart, a state of mind.
No need to travel, near or far,
You seek and find it—where you are!!

Wanda K. Smith, 17, a student at D.H. Conley High School wins this week's writing contest.

"Lie"ing At The Beach

By Sara Mann

Do you know what really gets me down?
A warm and sunny day
And goes to the beach to stay!

What I really love
Is when I'm swimming in the ocean
And get caught in a fishing net!

I love to step on sea shells
And get small cuts on my feet,
And to walk with my family down
The long and sandy beach.

I hate to watch the stars at night,
Or lie relaxed in the sun,
'Cause listening to rock and watching guys
Just ain't my kind of fun!

Sara Mann, 14, a student at E.B. Aycock Junior High School receives special mention.

A Mouse That Went To Space

By Edward Garner

There once was a space mouse named Tom. He lived in the United States in Washington, D.C. He knew a lot about space so he was chosen to go up on the next shuttle. He was about to take off in his space shuttle. Five, four, three, two, one, blastoff! Tom, the space mouse, had gotten into space in ten seconds.

Next, he smashed his drink button and got a Pepsi. He passed the moon, too. He had to go to the planet Cheese. He mashed his turbo button. His mission had been accomplished!

Edward Garner, 8, a student at Sam D. Bundy School receives special mention.

A Mouse And The Cats

By Chad Coggins

Once there was a mouse, he was tired of those cats chasing him. So one day he made some traps. The mouse put the traps where the cats slept. That day the cats got caught. The mouse went out of his hole to talk to the cats. He said, "Will you stop chasing me and get me some cheese?"

Chad Coggins, 7, a student at Falkland Elementary School receives special mention.

Adolescence

By Belinda Wiggins

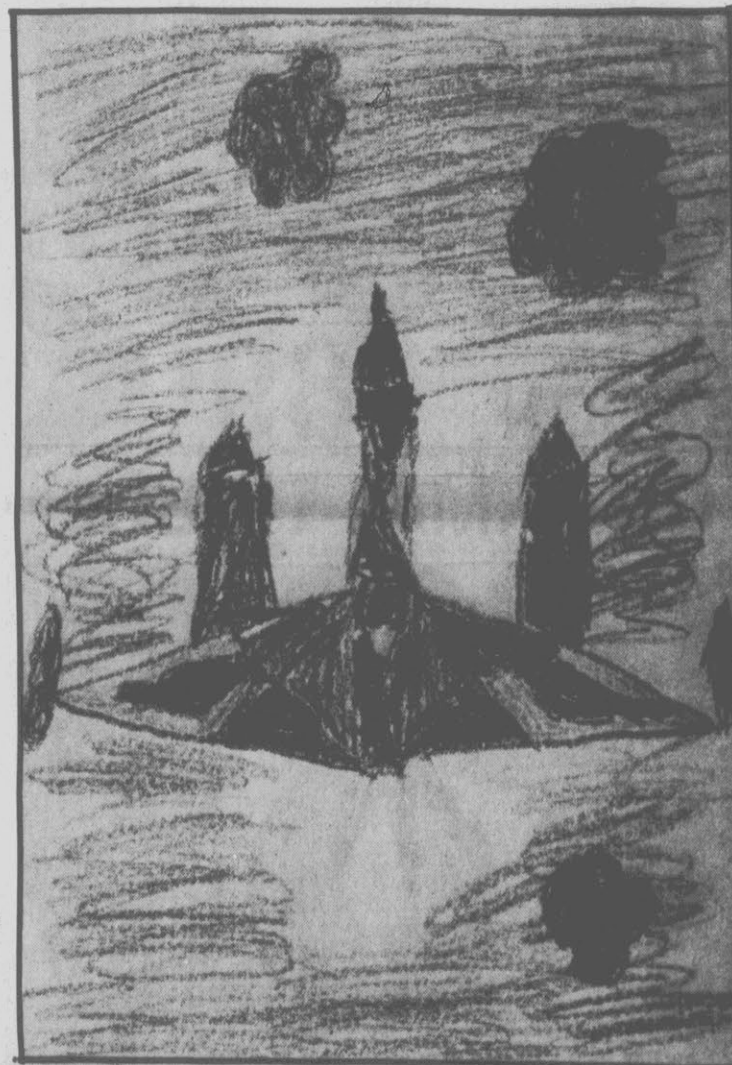

Be a kid while you have the chance
Laugh, play and even dance.
Cherish adolescence and your childhood friends
Because your free ride soon will end.

It will soon be time for you to go on your own
Yes, my friend, you're finally grown.
But being grown isn't as swell as it seems
Not even in your wildest dreams.

Being grown means.....
A job, responsibility, and even bills.
And all at once the children get ill.
So thank your lucky stars that you are young

Belinda Wiggins, 15, a student at Farmville Middle School receives special mention.

Lyle After Third Straight Tour Victory

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Masters champion Sandy Lyle will be seeking a rare third consecutive victory this week in the $700,000 Heritage Classic. "It's there to be done, isn't it?" the low-key Lyle said Tuesday after a practice session on the tough, tight Harbour Town Golf Links. "I haven't played all that well here in the past, but it's a course that should suit me very well." A letdown after his dramatic triumph last week in the Masters is possible, Lyle said, but he is not expecting it. "I'm really quite refreshed, actually, considering what I've been through the last two weeks," he said. In those two weeks, he won in a playoff at Greensboro, then followed with a nerve-wracking run over the final nine holes at the Masters. "That's behind me now," Lyle said. "I want to keep looking forward, keep moving forward and let my golf clubs do the talking for me." They have spoken recently with some eloquence. He now is the only man to have scored three victories this year on the American tour and leads in money-winnings with $591,821. Of that, $363,800 has come in the last two weeks. "I don't think I can play much better than I have this year," said Lyle, a British Open champion and the first man to win consecutive tournaments in the United States since Bernhard Langer of West Germany in 1985. On Thursday, Lyle will start the quest for a third consecutive title. That hasn't been accomplished since Gary Player in 1978. Opposing Lyle in the chase for the $126,000 first prize is an invitational field of 126, including some of his chief challengers at the Masters. They include runner-up Mark Calcavecchia and Australian Greg Norman, whose final-round 64 came too late. Langer and Tom Watson, each a final-round contender at Augusta and each a former winner of this title also are likely threats, along with British Open champion Nick Faldo, PGA title-holder Larry Nelson and defending champion Davis Love III. Other major figures include Lanny Wadkins, Curtis Strange and Dr. Gil Morgan, 1988 title-winners Jay Haas, Paul Azinger, Steve Pate, Steve Jones and Mark McCumber, and three veterans who have won this title twice each, Hale Irwin, Johnny Miller and Hubert Green. Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by CBS.

Braves Place Cary On 21-Day Disabled List

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Braves placed left-handed relief pitcher Chuck Cary on the 21-day disabled list, retroactive to Sunday, due to tendinitis in both of his knees, team officials said Tuesday. Cary, 28, pitched for Atlanta in three games this season. He compiled a 0-0 record with a 10.38 ERA in four innings, and allowed five runs on seven hits, walked two and struck out six. Cary will be replaced by right-handed pitcher Gary Eave of the AAA Richmond farm club. Eave, 24, was 0-0 with a 7.71 ERA at Richmond this season, allowing two runs on one hit, four walks and three strikeouts in 2.1 innings. Eave, who was sent to Richmond at the end of spring training, was 1-0 with a 4.66 ERA in six spring appearances.

Hawks Schedule 30-Year Reunion

ST. LOUIS (AP) — It's been 30 years since the St. Louis Hawks defeated the Boston Celtics to accomplish what only the baseball Cardinals have done for this city. They won a professional sports championship. To celebrate that old but not forgotten victory, Ben Kerner — who sold the Hawks to Atlanta investors 20 years ago — is convening a reunion of players, coaches and media from the championship season.

Johnson's Return From Injury Brings Magic Back To Lakers

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

The magic is back and healthy again for the Los Angeles Lakers, just two weeks before they start defending their NBA championship in the playoffs.

Magic Johnson, in his third game since returning to the starting lineup after a groin muscle injury, had 21 points, 11 rebounds and 13 assists Tuesday night as the Lakers defeated the Portland Trail Blazers 109-103.

Before the victory over Portland, the Lakers' 7-8 record since March 10, including a 6-6 mark with Johnson missing from the starting lineup, allowed Boston to cut an eight-game deficit in the overall NBA standings to 2½ games.

"This game was very important," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "We're looking at the schedule, Boston's looking at the schedule. If we drop a couple and they win, it gets critical. If we get a victory against Denver (tonight) and Phoenix Friday, we would have to go a long way to lose the homecourt through the playoffs."

The Trail Blazers outbounded Los Angeles 48-27 in their 119-109 victory at Portland on Saturday night, but the Lakers outbounded the Blazers 63-47 on Tuesday. Johnson, who was 4-for-15 from the field in Saturday's defeat, said there was no revenge on the Lakers' minds.

"We have no messages for nobody," he said. "We have sent enough messages. Everyone knows who they have to beat to win it all. We just got to go out and play. We've sent so many messages all season, we're all messaged out."

In other NBA games, it was Cleveland 116, Atlanta 103; San Antonio 127, Houston 119; Utah 100, Los Angeles Clippers 93; and Dallas 104, Sacramento 96.

Byron Scott and James Worthy had 25 points each for the Lakers, who led 59-47 at halftime and had to hold off a Portland comeback in the second half.

"We have been emphasizing the last couple of days is that we haven't been playing well," Riley said. "We've got to play hard, that's the key. Tonight we played hard, but not well. There was rebounding effort and defensive effort, but our offensive execution the last eight minutes was not good."

Portland guard Jerry Sichting's 3-pointer cut the Lakers' lead to 92-90 with 10:36 remaining, but the Lakers scored the next six points and held a 102-97 lead before Terry Porter's two free throws and Kiki Vandeweghe's jumper got Portland within one with 4:22 left.

Vandeweghe's layup with 3:27 left, after two free throws by Johnson, ended the scoring for the Trail Blazers. The Lakers scored the last five points of the game, and there was no scoring by either team in the final 1:51.

"The Lakers came out with a lot of defensive pressure in the first half, but they were not as tough in the second half." Portland Coach Mike Schuler said. "We were able to climb back in it. When you look at the Lakers' record when they are healthy, they are just tough to beat. They are the premier team in the league."

Clyde Drexler scored 25 points and Kevin Duckworth 24 for Portland. Schuler said Duckworth, with 16 points in the third quarter, was a key to Portland's short-lived comeback in the second half.

"He got bumped around a little in the first half and got frustrated," Schuler said. "But he responded well in the second half. He gets better every day."

Cavaliers 116, Hawks 103
Cleveland won its fourth straight game and improved its playoff chances as Ron Harper scored 25 points and Mark Price added 22 points and a career-high 14 assists against faltering Atlanta.

The Cavaliers, winning for the seventh time in their last eight games, took a two-game lead over seventh-place Indiana in the Eastern Conference.

The Cavaliers led 33-22 at the end of one quarter and 65-48 at halftime before increasing the margin to 26 points in the third period. Harper and Price had 17 points each in the first half, and Price had 11 assists.

Spurs 127, Rockets 119
San Antonio opened a four-game lead over Phoenix for the last Western Conference playoff spot as Frank Brickowski had a career-high 34 points and added 15 rebounds against Houston.

Brickowski, who scored his previous career high of 33 last Friday in Denver, scored nine points in the final period. The Spurs started the quarter with an 18-2 spurt, giving them a 108-88 lead.

The Rockets, who got 26 points and 20 rebounds from Akeem Olajuwon, got as close as four points in the final minute, but the rally fell short.

Jazz 100, Clippers 93
John Stockton continued his torrid assists pace with 20 and Karl Malone had 39 points and 15 rebounds in Utah's victory over Los Angeles.

Stockton now has the top 10 single-game assist totals in the NBA this season, and his 1,014 assists are the third-highest total ever. Stockton also has 62 assists in his last three games against the Clippers.

Los Angeles led 91-90 when Stockton passed to Malone for a dunk that put the Jazz ahead to stay. After a steal by Thurl Bailey, Stockton passed to Malone for another dunk and a 94-91 advantage with 2:27 left.

Cardinals 7, Cubs 5

Bob Horner led St. Louis out of a season-long hitting slump with four hits and two RBI as the Cardinals downed the Chicago Cubs. The Cardinals had a season-high 18 hits against five Chicago pitchers.

Steve Lake had three hits, including a solo home run, and Vince Coleman had three hits, an RBI and two stolen bases.

Jose DeLeon, 1-1, was the winner despite surrendering home runs to Chicago's Andre Dawson, Leon Durham and Vance Law. Todd Worrell came on in the eighth to gain his second save, although he gave up a run in the ninth.

The Cardinals scored two runs on three hits off Drew Hall, 0-1, and Les Lancaster in the sixth to overcome a 4-3 deficit.

Mets 3, Expos 0

Ron Darling pitched his first shutout since 1986, allowing just five hits, and Darryl Strawberry hit his fourth home run as the New York Yankees defeated Montreal in its home opener.

Kevin McReynolds went 3-for-4 for the Mets and Strawberry homered in the second inning, giving the Mets a major league-leading 14 home runs for the season.

The Mets beat Pascual Perez, ending his team record-tying eight-game winning streak. Perez won all seven decisions after joining the Expos last Aug. 19 and defeated Darling last week.

Darling, 1-1, allowed just two hits after the third inning. He struck out four and walked three in posting his first shutout since July 29, 1986.

Southern States Lawn Care Tips

1 Early Spring: Southern States Kleen Gro I with Crabgrass Control Balan helps prevent crabgrass from getting a foothold in your lawn. When forsythias start to bloom, apply it as directed, then water-in if it doesn't rain within 3 days of application.

2 Late Spring/Fall: Southern States Kleen Gro II Weed and Feed controls broadleaf weeds while it helps green your grass. When weeds are growing actively, apply to damp grass and avoid rain for 24-48 hours after applying.

3 Spring/Fall: If weeds aren't a problem, use Southern States Steady Gro. It contains water insoluble nitrogen for slow-release feeding without burning your lawn. In fall it nourishes your lawn after summer stress.

4 Spring, Summer, Fall: Southern States Oftanol 1.5G prevents insects and grubs from feeding on your lawn. For best results, water-in the product on or before July 1.

Of course, we have more products to meet just about any soil need. Just tell your dealer what you're looking for or what you're hoping to achieve. You'll learn about Southern States' extensive line of products for everything from lawns to trees, shrubs, flowers and vegetables. Henson Blends Early Russian Folk Tales In TV 'Storyteller'

By JEAN-CLAUDE BOUIS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Over the ages, storytellers have bridged generational and geographical boundaries by retelling folk tales, usually invoking some magic of their own to highlight their talents and suit the audience.

Continuing the tradition in the TV age is Jim Henson, creator of "Fraggle Rock," "The Muppet Show" and Kermit the Frog and Big Bird on "Sesame Street."

Borrowing a monster here, blending in a few fairy tales there, Henson has been delighting even the crustiest of curmudgeons with "The Storyteller," a series of half-hour specials on NBC. The fourth installment, "The Luck Child," airs Saturday.

For "The Luck Child," Henson has borrowed a griffin from the brothers Grimm and blended elements of some early Russian folk tales. The show's magic is seamless thanks to the witty script by British playwright Anthony Minghella, and, of course, the Muppet mutations.

The 14-foot-tall talking griffin (a thinking man's Big Bird — it claims to be misunderstood) is one of the biggest bunches of wood, wire and widgets ever created in the London-based Muppet "creature shop." With some high tech and human help, the people-eating, havoc-wreaking beast is brought to life by Henson's 24-year-old son, Brian.

"Performing the griffin on a small platform inside its neck, throwing my body out at different angles was sort of like being in an aerobics class," said Brian Henson.

On a smaller scale, he also "performs" the storyteller's talking dog with an assistant, a tiny TV monitor, a computer and 13 thimble-size motors controlling the dog's facial movements. He says the dog, a stylized blend of breeds, "has a hard edge, intended to play against the lecturing style of the narrator," played by British actor John Hurt in the title role.

"The Luck Child" borrows elements from "The Lucky Child" and "Marco the Rich and Vasily the Luckless" in a collection by Alexander Afanasev. A Russian ethnographer and lawyer, he published more than 600 native folk tales in the mid-1800s, becoming the Russian counterpart to the brothers Grimm of Germany.

"The Luck Child" also contains elements of Grimm's "The Griffin" and "The Devil with Three Golden Hairs." A peasant child is born and, according to a prophecy, he will one day rule the land, whose current leader tries to do away with him. But the luck child survives, after tricking the griffin.

The sponsors hope viewers will look for more stories like "The Luck Child" in books. One of the show's sponsors, Clorox, also is a sponsor of the national, non-profit literacy organization, Reading Is Fundamental, which has distributed 78 million books to children since 1966. It's a rare event: a prime-time network sponsor hoping you'll read more books!

One such book could be "Folk Tales of the Amur" (Abrams), which includes 31 stories from the Russian far east.

Swedish Director, Actor Return To Work At Home

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — After quarrels with the tax collector, Sweden's favorite theatrical sons have come home.

Max von Sydow is back on the Swedish stage after a 14-year absence. Director Ingmar Bergman, who lived in self-imposed exile for several years, also is rehearsing a new play.

Both Bergman, whose brooding, introspective films in the 1950s and '60s gave Swedish film an international reputation, and von Sydow, Sweden's most durable actor, left the country because of tax problems.

Von Sydow, who lives in Paris but comes back every year for summer vacation, never thought of himself as an expatriate and has returned twice to make films.

"I'm still totally Swedish," he said. "I still have my roots here."

Swedish taxes, among the highest in the world, are driving young artists away, he said in an interview. The average Swede pays half his salary in taxes, and marginal tax on top incomes can run as high as 78 percent.

"A lot of talent is not used in this country because of this. If you don't get anything financially out of it, why work here?" said von Sydow, 58.

Among his 40 foreign film roles are the Jesuit priest in "The Exorcist," the assassin in "Three Days of the Condor," and the artisthusband in Woody Allen's "Hannah and Her Sisters." He launched his career abroad in 1965 as Jesus in "The Greatest Story Ever Told."

Von Sydow left Sweden in a huff in 1973 after paying what he said was an unfairly large tax bill. He was assessed $20,050 for allegedly underpaying his taxes. His lawyers took the case to the European Human Rights Commission in 1985, claiming that the lack of an appeal mechanism against the tax authorities was an infringement of his rights. Last year, the Swedish government settled out of court, repaying him $33,333 compensation and $20,000 for costs.

Von Sydow said he is trying to put the tax affair behind him without bitterness.

"I'm trying not to be poisoned by paranoia," he said. "Today I feel freer than when I left, because this problem is solved and because I know that if I want to I could work abroad all the time."

His ties to his country are stronger than others have shown. Once Hollywood made stars of Greta Garbo and Ingrid Bergman, they were gone from Sweden for good.

Von Sydow is playing at the Royal Dramatic Theater, where he began his acting career 40 years ago and where he met Bergman, with whom he did 11 films.

He said one reason for returning to the stage was fascination with the character he was offered in "Master Olof," an 1871 drama by August Strindberg, Sweden's greatest literary figure.

He plays a roguish revolutionary during the 16th-century Swedish Reformation. It's a supporting role, but von Sydow said he doesn't care. "It's the best part in the play," he said.

He said he also was drawn by the double anniversary of the royal theater's 200th year and the 80th year since it moved to its gilded waterfront building, now a city landmark.

Working in the Swedish language again "is wonderful, it's exciting," he said. "It's still very difficult for me to act in English, and it always will be. . . . It takes a longer time to really make the lines your own."

Last year von Sydow, who does three projects a year, finished "Pelle the Conqueror," his first Swedish-language film in five years.

Air Force Tries To Put Brakes On Sonic Boom Damage

By BILL KACZOR
Associated Press Writer
EGLIN AIR FORCE BASE, Fla. (AP) — Three ear-shattering booms mark the flight of an F-111 thundering at supersonic speed only 200 feet above a test range in the Florida Panhandle.

The fighter-bomber drops an experimental bomb. Then, the pilot suddenly yanks the throttles back to idle, cutting the jet's thrust by 90 percent.

In seconds, the speed of the plane drops from 940 mph to just under 600 — a radical maneuver designed to limit noise and damage from sonic booms in nearby civilian communities. Without it, windows might have been broken in Holley and Navarre, which lie near the end of the range; with it, residents might not even hear the booms.

"It's such a violent deceleration we are actually thrown forward in the cockpit, held back by our seat straps," said Maj. Dan Isbell in a recent interview. "We try our best to be good neighbors. We don't want to go around breaking people's windows."

The test pilot from Chattanooga, Tenn., was describing a typical mission at Mach 1.2, or just over the speed of sound, at the Air Force's only supersonic test range in the eastern United States.

Isbell is one of only a few test pilots at the Eglin-based Air Force Armament Division who are allowed to fly low-level supersonic test missions. They test new generations of non-nuclear weaponry being developed at this Panhandle base, including so-called smart bombs that glide to their targets with pinpoint accuracy.

Damages caused by sonic booms are relatively small, said Col. Harvey Greenberg, Eglin's chief claims officer. He said the Air Force received 265 claims for $465,138 from throughout the nation in the 1987 budget year, but paid out only $67,003 for 160 claims deemed valid while denying 80. Some claims carry over from one year to the next.

Eglin alone accounted for 27, or 17 percent, of the valid claims and $4,931 in damages, Air Force records show.

But it has been worse in the past. A single boom in 1984 produced 34 claims that cost Eglin $15,865.

The only other places where the Air Force permits low-level supersonic flights are Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., and certain other desert areas in the West, Isbell said.

But none are as close to populated areas as Eglin's Range B-70. Holley and Navarre lie just five to seven miles to the west.

The 13-mile-long range is in the western half of a 720-square-mile military reservation, about 10 miles northwest of Fort Walton Beach, once billed as "Home of the Sonic Boom."

Air Force news releases about impending supersonic flights are carried by local newspapers and radio stations so residents won't be scared if they should hear the booms, said George Roberts, a civilian spokesman in Eglin's public affairs office. He said missions have been canceled when the releases failed to make the newspaper.

Predicting the strength of sonic booms is an inexact science that depends on such variables as aircraft size, speed and altitude and weather factors including wind, air pressure and temperature, Isbell said.

Temperature inversions are the most serious complication, capable of bouncing the sonic shock waves great distances. Isbell said inversions have been suspected of causing window breakage as far away as downtown Pensacola, about 30 miles to the west.

Weather data is gathered an hour before each test flight, but conditions can change dramatically in that time. If it is known a temperature inversion is present, the mission usually will be postponed, Isbell said.

The F-111 is the largest of several types of aircraft used in low-level supersonic testing and thus produces the loudest and most damaging booms.

An aircraft flying faster than the speed of sound generally creates three shock waves or booms, one by its nose, another by its midsection and the third by its tail, Isbell said.

Shock waves are caused because air molecules cannot get out of the way of a plane flying faster than the speed of sound.

The booms, however, dissipate rapidly over distance. Those produced at high altitudes rarely are heard on the ground and supersonic flight above 30,000 feet, or about six miles up, is unrestricted, Isbell said.

Studies conducted by the National Aeronautic and Space Administration, which was concerned about potential damage from the Space Shuttle, indicate window breakage is about the worst damage that can be caused by an aircraft.

Some people, however, give sonic booms credit for more damage than they possibly can cause, Isbell said.

A man living just across the Alabama state line about 50 miles west of Eglin once complained that a sonic boom knocked his mobile home off its foundation. The man later admitted he hadn't heard a sonic boom and wasn't even home at the time. He later told Isbell that he first thought it was caused by dynamiting at a quarry across the street until he saw a television news report about a boom causing broken windows at nearby cities.

The most recent effort to limit boom complaints has been acquisition of special meters that register shock waves even if they are inaudible, Isbell said.

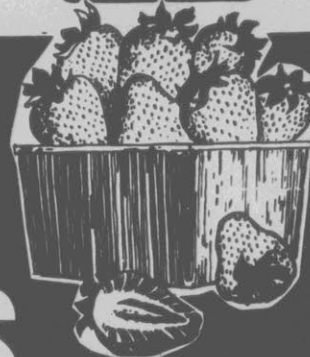

"Although arming the Air Force is our mission, we will always have a responsibility to be good neighbors," he said. "Minimizing sonic booms is one way to fulfill that responsibility."

Computer Aids Work On Bridges

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — It used to take Mark Burkhead weeks, maybe months, to design a bridge.

But he has now completed work on a new bridge in about 24 hours.

"For a normal bridge, it would take many, many times that," said Burkhead, a civil engineer with the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation.

The speedup was possible thanks to a computer program known as BRADD-2 — the world's first computer bridge design and drafting system.

BRADD-2 takes information — location, topography, bridge design, etc. — translates it into a few thousand points in space, connects the dots, and there's the bridge.

It's so fast that PennDOT expects to save millions of dollars in its current $1.4 billion bridge replacement and rehabilitation program.

The program includes 3,500 bridges, 2,800 to be replaced. Of those, 65 percent can be designed by computer, said M.G. Patel, PennDOT's BRADD-2 project manager.

Patel estimates that BRADD-2 can save $15,000 to $20,000 in design time per bridge.

The computer program will be made available to other states "when we think the system is bug-free," Patel said.

Thomas Says Candidates Play To TV

"Press conferences are avoided like the plague, particularly if it involves the national press. In that respect, national issues are obliterated," she commented.

Ms. Thomas' lecture was part of the program at Tuesday's Phi Kappa Phi initiation and installation ceremony on the East Carolina University campus.

Approximately 150 ECU students were inducted into the academic honor society.

Widely known as the woman who says "Thank you, Mr. President" following televised press conferences, Ms. Thomas appeared in her traditional red dress. During the evening she spoke to the 300 people in Hendrix Theater about the role of the press, her experiences on the presidential beat, and offered her views regarding the upcoming election.

"Clearly the role of the press is to pin candidates down, get to the specifics, to make sure people know who they're voting for and why, and let the chips fall where they may. Hopefully, there will be an informed public to decide," she said.

the workers would notify a supervisor who, in turn, will call the Pitt County Council on Aging. "Our involvement ends there and the Council on Aging will assume all further responsibility for following up on the situation," he said.

The Gatekeeper Program was originated in the state of Washington by Puget Sound Power. Duke Power, Carolina Power & Light Co. and N.C. Power participate in the program in North Carolina.

"Many elderly in our community may lack the support of family and friends," Paramore said. "We feel that this program will bridge the gap between these and social service agencies that can assist them in living independent lives."

City Wins Favor

"A city like Greenville is not known as a travel destination, so they have to be more creative to attract the travel dollars. One of the ways they can be creative is to offer good old-fashioned service," Stafford said.

"The hotels are really outstanding," he said. The Hilton Inn, the Sheraton Hotel and the Holiday Inn hosted events for the conference, and Stafford said more state associations will hear about the hospitality and want to bring their conventions to Greenville. "There's no doubt in my mind about it."

"These people are people in the hospitality business," said Art Thompson, general manager of the Hilton. "They're people that deal with conventions, and just knowing where we are now ... they know our name and know what we can do, and that's where it's going to help us."

"Greenville has a lot to be proud of," Miss Vohoska said. "The people have worked hard, they have pride in what they've done and they obviously have leadership. And you remember when you're treated well."

"It was wonderful and the hospitality was beautiful," said Nancy Underwood, director of travel and tourism for the Dunn Area Chamber of Commerce. "Someone told me that it was nice to see that someone east of Raleigh can have a convention."

"This is a hard group to play to because these are all our peers," Thompson said. "They've seen it all done in the bigger cities, and we had to show them what we could do here."

"Things went extremely well. We couldn't have asked for a better conference," Thompson said.

"The only thing that went different from the plan was we ended up with more people than we expected — and those are the good kind of problems," Thompson said. Nearly 400 people attended the banquet at the Hilton Monday night.

Most delegates stayed at the Hilton or the Sheraton, Thompson said, but other area hotel managers helped out.

"When our places are full, that displaces the regular traveler and it benefits the rest of the community," Thompson said. "It generates more traffic. That's why everyone is interested in making the conferences and conventions a success. It increases the whole pie."

"I think it's one of the finest things we've done in a long, long time," said Ed Walker, president of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce. About half of the delegates had never been to Greenville before the conference, he said.

"That was our whole purpose: to showcase Greenville and Pitt County, and I think we've had success," Walker said.

More than 70 companies sponsored events and the chamber raised more than $25,000 to finance convention activities, said Walker. "The thing I've heard most from all of the people is that they've never seen such teamwork as this governor's conference."

"It's wonderful, because it encourages everyone to work together," Miss Vohoska said. "We're part of a team."

 Preemptive bidding is a two-edged sword. Sometimes you will manage to jockey the opponents into a terrible contract by your tactics. Once in while, though, you will keep them out of an odds-on venture that can be defeated because of the distributional quirks of the hand.

Looking only at the North-South hands, a grand slam in diamonds is an excellent proposition. It needs only a 2-1 trump split and either a 3-2 spade division or finding West with the long spades if the jack isn't singleton. However, East-West were very busy in the auction. South doubled five clubs to show he had two losers in the suit and wasn't keen on slam. But there was no stopping North.

After the king of clubs opening lead was taken with the ace, declarer cashed the ace of diamonds and breathed a sigh of relief when East showed out. He now proceeded with the king of diamonds, then ruffed a club in dummy. After cashing just one high spade in hand, declarer took the king-ace of hearts and ruffed a heart. Next came the king of spades, and had both defenders followed, or had East been the one with spade shortness, declarer would have been able to claim.

West realized that he could not gain by ruffing the spade, so he discarded a club. He was merely delaying the inevitable. Declarer simply threw him on lead with his master trump to force a return of either a club or a heart. No matter which West produced, declarer would simply ruff in one hand while discarding his spade loser from the other, and the slam was home.

Mattingly Leads Yanks' Romp

By The Associated Press
Don Mattingly had had enough. Now, the Toronto Blue Jays have had enough of Mattingly.

Mattingly and the Yankees doubled their pleasure Tuesday night, getting 10 doubles in an 18-hit attack and routing the Blue Jays 12-3. Although Mattingly had just one of the doubles, he also had four singles in six at-bats.

It was the first big game this season for the lifetime .331 hitter, who was 3-for-22 coming in. And it came after Mattingly made some adjustments in his batting technique, allowing the bat to slump toward the ground before swinging.

"That's just where it starts," he said. "It's not where it ends. When the pitch is on the way, the bat is back to the same place it always is. The only difference is the looseness of the grip and the way I hold the bat."

"The whole key is to relax and to give easy freedom with your hands. You have to let your hands do the work. You talk to guys who hit well and they talk about being relaxed. And that's one thing I felt tonight: I was relaxed at the plate. I let the ball come to me."

Then he sent it all over Exhibition Stadium.

Mattingly had help, of course. Dave Winfield drove in three runs and Bobby Meacham scored three times as New York rebounded from a 17-9 whipping by the Blue Jays on Monday. Meacham and Claudell Washington had two doubles apiece as the Yankees came within one of the AL record, held by the 1934 Tigers.

John Candelaria pitched a nine-hitter, striking out six and not walking anyone.

"I had confidence in him right from the beginning, right from before spring training when we got him," Yankees manager Billy Martin said. "He pitches right at them, he challenges them. He's not going to beat himself."

Elsewhere, the Orioles did for new manager Frank Robinson as they did for Cal Ripken, who was fired Tuesday. They lost. Kansas City beat Baltimore 6-1, handing the Orioles their seventh straight defeat, a club record for slow starts.

Also, it was Detroit 4, Texas 1; Boston 3, Milwaukee 1; Minnesota 7, Cleveland 6; California 15, Chicago 6; and Seattle 6, Oakland 4.

Royals 6, Orioles 1

Robinson, who became the first black manager in the major leagues in 1977 at Cleveland and also managed in San Francisco, began his third tour in charge of a club. It wasn't an auspicious debut as the Orioles kept right on losing.

Mark Gubicza and Dan Quisenberry combined on a two-hitter as Baltimore managed just two infield singles and hit only four balls out of the infield. Baltimore has been outscored 49-8 this season.

Kansas City struck for three runs in the fourth inning, erasing a 1-0 Orioles lead on consecutive homers by Frank White and Bo Jackson. The Royals added three more in the fifth, with White driving in his third and fourth runs of the game with a single.

"Management didn't give me any special instructions," Robinson said. "Everyone is going to have to do what they're capable of doing, no more, no less. And if that doesn't work, then we'll try some different players. That's not a threat or anything, we just have to play better."

Tigers 4, Rangers 1

Balks were the order of the day for Detroit's home opener, with the Rangers' Bobby Witt being called four times, tying the AL record. One of the balks cost him dearly.

In the first inning, Witt walked Lou Whitaker, who moved to second on a balk. Witt walked Darrell Evans, and Whitaker moved to third on Alan Trammell's fielder's choice grounder. Whitaker scored on Witt's second balk, and Trammell, who took second on the balk, scored on an RBI single by Matt Nokes.

Witt walked the bases loaded in the third. Trammell's sacrifice fly drove in a run, as did Jim Morrison's single.

"This is really frustrating to me," Witt said. "I don't know what's going on. If it's a tight game in the eighth inning, it's not going to come down to a punt or something. It'll be a balk."

Red Sox 3, Brewers 1

Bruce Hurst improved his Fenway Park record to 21-7 since the 1986 season, allowing four hits and striking out nine in seven innings. Then Lee Smith did exactly what he was acquired to do, protecting the win with solid relief — striking out three in two scoreless innings.

The Red Sox scored on an RBI single in the first by Mike Greenwell,

Hurst didn't disagree with being lifted in the eighth.

"The cold weather was beginning to get to my hands," Hurst said. "Besides, that's why we have the big guy out there. Lee Smith is so intimidating. He comes in and does his job. It's fun to watch him pitch."

Twins 7, Indians 6

It wasn't fun watching Cleveland reliever Doug Jones. His first pitch of the year hit Dan Gladden with the bases loaded to force in the tying run, then he balked home the winning run in the eighth inning. Minnesota ended the Indians' six-game winning streak after trailing 6-2 through four innings.

"I sure wasn't expecting to get hit," Gladden said. "I was told he threw off-speed stuff so I was looking for off-speed stuff."

Down 6-2, the defending champions scored a run in the fifth on an error by left fielder Mel Hall and two in the seventh on Greg Gagne's two-run homer.

Randy Bush doubled leading off the eighth against reliever Chris Codiroli, 0-2. He walked Tom Brunansky and Steve Lombardozzi bunted before Gene Larkin was walked intentionally to load the bases.

Jones then hit Gladden before Gagne struck out. With Kirby Puckett batting, Jones balked in Brunansky with the go-ahead run. "I'd rather see the outcome of a ballgame decided by the players instead of a balk call," Gladden said.

Angels 15, White Sox 6

In a game marred by six balks, tying the AL record set Sunday by Milwaukee and New York, Devon White hit a grand slam, Chili Davis scored four runs and Jack Howell had four hits, including a two-run homer.

White's third-inning grand slam climaxed a five-run inning against Jack McDowell, 0-1, who suffered his first major league loss. He was 3-0 last season.

The Angels again batted around in the fourth inning, Davis' two-run homer, keying another five-run inning.

Howell homered in the eighth in leading the Angels' 14-hit attack. The

Mariners 6, Athletics 4

Home runs by Alvin Davis, Ken Phelps and Harold Reynolds fueled Seattle's victory, tying the Mariners with Oakland and Kansas City atop the West. A crowd of 35,321 watched the Mariners win their ninth home opener in the club's 12-year history.

After Oakland got five hits for two runs off starter Steve Trout, 1-0, in the first inning, Seattle tied the score in the second. Davis and Phelps hit consecutive homers in the third and Reynolds connected in the sixth.

Bruins End Big Search With Selection Of Harrick

LOS ANGELES (AP) — UCLA finally has a basketball coach. That accomplished, two things are clear — the Bruins are no longer the powerhouse they once were, and a nationwide search wasn't necessary because the man hired was right around the corner.

Jim Harrick, the coach at Pepperdine in nearby Malibu the last nine years and a former UCLA assistant, was named on Tuesday the successor to Walt Hazzard, who was fired 13 days ago.

Harrick, 49, said he planned to get right to work.

"Recruiting, that is my No. 1 priority sitting here right now," Harrick said at a packed campus news conference. "I've got to get things firm-ed up."

Actually, there's not a whole lot to firm up. Today was the first day of the late signing period for college basketball players, but UCLA has only two scholarships available.

Harrick and the Bruins know who they want to fill one of them — 6-foot-10 center Don MacLean of near-by Simi Valley High. MacLean is considered one of the finest prep prospects in the country and he has said he would not announce his decision until UCLA named a coach.

Another center, Andre Lamoureux of Los Alamitos High in Orange County, made a verbal commitment to attend UCLA, but that could change considering his commitment came when Hazzard was coach.

UCLA Athletic Director Peter Dalis admitted he had hoped to hire a coach much earlier, but it didn't happen, mainly because several big-name coaches were interviewed but none took the job.

Among them were North Carolina State's Jim Valvano, who visited the school but withdrew from contention on April 2, and Kansas' Larry Brown, who was offered the job last Thursday night and accepted it, but changed his mind the next day, deciding to stay with national champion Kansas.

"Deadlines came and went, many times," Dalis said. "It will always be that way in this business."

Harrick said he didn't care about not being UCLA's first choice for the job.

"Did you know that John Wooden was the fourth choice at UCLA? I'm serious," Harrick said, referring to the legendary coach who led the Bruins to 10 NCAA championships in 12 years before retiring in 1975.

"If it was good enough for him, it's good enough for me. I knew that when I was in Kansas City (for the NCAA Final Four April 24)."

Harrick, who signed a four-year contract, has high hopes for the future.

"I've worked every day of the last 28 years to prepare myself for this opportunity," he said. "I know the magnitude of this program. I know what we can accomplish."

"I've had the privilege of being in the (NCAA) tournament four times in the last seven years. I expect to get there every year. We have the nucleus to go next year."

"I don't think I would have left my position at Pepperdine for any other position than UCLA."

The Bruins were 77-47 under Hazzard, but only 16-14 this past season, well below expectations a year after they won the Pacific-10 Conference championship.

Under Harrick, Pepperdine was 17-13 this season and 167-97 overall. The Waves appeared in the NCAA Tournament four times and the National Invitation Tournament twice in Harrick's nine years.

Harrick is the sixth coach at UCLA since Wooden retired. Gene Bartow, Gary Cunningham and Brown lasted two years each; Larry Farmer held the job three years and Hazzard four. None won an NCAA championship.

Harrick was an assistant under Cunningham from 1977-79. He took over at Pepperdine the following season.

Dalis said he made up his mind to hire Harrick Monday night after an hour-long discussion with Louisville Coach Denny Crum, a former classmate of Dalis' and an assistant under Wooden. Harrick was informed of the decision Tuesday morning.

"When I called Jim this morning I asked him if he was ready to join me in the toughest job in college basketball," Dalis said. "It is, without a doubt. This place is a fishbowl, it really is. There is a built-in anxiety at UCLA."

When asked if Harrick was hired on the rebound of Brown's change of heart, Dalis said, "Maybe, indeed, that's what happened, but so what? Jim likes to point out he wasn't the first choice at Pepperdine and he's done an excellent job. I've always liked Jim Harrick as a coach. I think he can get the job done."

Contrary to what's been reported, Dalis said the job was actually offered to only two men — Brown and Harrick.

UCLA forward Trevor Wilson said he was relieved a coach has finally been hired.

"It's good," Wilson said. "Finally, a decision has been made. It takes all the pressure off us to find out who's going to be our coach. Hopefully, it will work out in a positive way."

A FAMILY MEAL — Celebrate the change of seasons and the arrival of spring with festive Herbed Spring Lamb with Onion Wild Rice. The wine-and-herb marinated leg of lamb roasts while the long grain and wild rice original recipe simmers to perfection. The result is a meal with lively, fresh flavors that sing of spring.

Salute Spring With A Special Family Meal

Spring is officially here, and it's time to celebrate with a special family meal.

Coax spring into your kitchen with flavorful wild rice. Blended with long grain rice and select seasonings it provides a festive accompaniment for your favorite meat or poultry. Add a favorite fresh vegetable, and you have all the makings for a memorable meal.

Lamb is one of the traditional rites of spring. For an elegant dinner that sparkles with the flavors of the season, serve Herbed Spring Lamb with Onion Wild Rice. Marinate boneless butterflied leg of lamb overnight in red wine with garlic, rosemary and bay leaf. While it roasts, the ideal accompaniment, long grain and wild rice, simmers to perfection.

Another celebration meal may call for Wild Saute of Chicken and Rice. Top coriander and paprika-seasoned chicken breasts with a light sauce made by deglazing the skillet with lemon juice. Add an accompaniment that combines fresh watercress and lemon peel with uniquely seasoned long grain and wild rice to complete the menu with flavors that sing of spring.

HERBED SPRING LAMB WITH ONION WILD RICE

- 1 1/2 pounds boneless butterflied leg of lamb
 - 1 tablespoon chopped fresh rosemary leaves or 1 teaspoon dried
 - 3 cloves garlic, minced
 - 1 cup dry red wine
 - 1 bay leaf
 - Salt and pepper (optional)
 - 1 small onion, cut into thin wedges
 - 1 tablespoon butter or margarine
 - 2 1/3 cups water
 - 1 package (6 ounces) long grain and wild rice
 - 4 small green onions, cut into 1-inch pieces
- Place lamb in glass dish; sprinkle with rosemary and 2 cloves of the garlic. Pour wine over; add by leaf. Let stand at room temperature 30 minutes or cover and refrigerate up to 12 hours, turning occasionally. Place lamb on rack

Warmer Weather Calls For A Backyard Barbecue

By BEVERLY BARHAM
N.C. Poultry Federation

Spring is here, summer is coming and the ever warming temperatures are calling you to spend more time in the great outdoors. What better way is there to enjoy the great outdoors than a backyard barbecue?

Down South, (and especially in North Carolina) there is nothing more popular on a warm spring or summer than a chicken barbecue. While chicken barbecue is a traditional favorite that is here to stay, there are other poultry food products that can be prepared on the outdoor grill to add a whole new dimension to barbecue grilling.

Boned chicken or turkey breasts or thighs can be cut in chunks, interspersed on skewers with chunks of pineapple, cherry tomatoes, green pepper chunks, etc., soaked in a marinade in the refrigerator overnight and cooked on the grill for easy, elegant and delicious outdoor entertaining. Turkey parts are also great barbecued on the grill using traditional barbecued chicken recipes.

Grilled quail or duckling is also a great choice for an easy, but impressive outdoor entree. For mouthwatering barbecued quail, just dip unfrozen quail into bottled Italian Salad Dressing and place on a hot grill. Cook for five minutes and baste with the dressing. Continue to baste and turn for about 25 minutes or until done. Grilled duckling can be served with a variety of sauces for elegant entertaining.

Here are some "sizzling good" grilled poultry recipes from the North Carolina Poultry Federation that will make your outdoor barbecuing more exciting than ever! Stock up on plenty of poultry food products now for a "hot" summer of sizzling outdoor entertaining.

Fast, Easy Omelet Makes Light Meal

During the hectic spring and summer months, many families prefer lighter, quick meals that get them out of the kitchen fast. One of the fastest, easiest meals to whip up any time of day or night is an omelet. A basic omelet requires only egg, water, salt, pepper and a little butter. Then by adding a variety of other ingredients that most people always have on hand (leftover cooked meats; chopped and sauteed fresh vegetables; shredded of sliced cheeses; drained, thawed, frozen, canned, chopped or sliced fresh fruits, etc.), family members or guests can design their own omelets to their own taste preferences. Just use 1/3 to 1/2 cup of the chosen filling per omelet and be sure to warm or pre-cook the fillings when necessary before adding to your omelet. (Heat from the omelet will warm most fillings, but is not enough to cook them.)

April is "Poultry and Egg Month" in North Carolina and the beginning of warmer days for more family-fun outdoor activities. Why not celebrate spring and "Poultry and Egg Month" by serving your family a quick, nutritious omelet for a breakfast, lunch or dinner meal that will get you out of the kitchen fast. Try one of these delicious omelet ideas from the North Carolina Poultry Federation for a taste of just how good an omelet can be.

TURKEY HAM OMELET

- 2 eggs
- 2 tablespoons water
- 1/8 teaspoon salt
- dash pepper

DOUBLE GOOD — Easy-to-make Walnut Bread is perfect for a spring picnic or for breakfast.

Walnut Bread Great For A Spring Picnic

The grays of winter are giving way to the beguiling colors of spring. Now's the time to arrange a few fragrant flowers and to bake a quick loaf of Double Good Walnut Bread.

It's chock-full of delicious walnuts, toasted to heighten their rich flavor. Half of the walnuts are used bold and chunky, straight from the package. The other half are finely ground to provide a delightful contrast of textures throughout the loaf. Together, ground and chunky walnuts add that special "walnutty" flavor that is doubly good.

Double Good Walnut Bread is great for breakfast — it slices easily and toasts beautifully; but you don't have to wait for breakfast to enjoy it. Bake it ahead and take it on a spring picnic. You can store it, carefully wrapped, in the refrigerator or freeze it for later use.

Double Good Walnut Bread is the perfect accompaniment to luncheon salads or fresh fruit. It's especially delicious when spread with cream cheese or your favorite jam or jelly. For a light dessert, top a slice with strawberries and whipped cream.

DOUBLE GOOD WALNUT BREAD

- 1 1/2 cups walnuts
 - 3 cups all-purpose flour
 - 3/4 cup granulated sugar
 - 3 teaspoons baking powder
 - 1 teaspoon salt
 - 1 egg, beaten
 - 1 1/2 cups milk
 - 1/3 cup butter or margarine, melted
- Spread walnuts in a flat pan. Toast in preheated 350 degree oven for 8 to 10 minutes or until very lightly browned. Cool. Finely grind 3/4 cup of the toasted walnuts in food processor or blender; set aside. In a large mixing bowl, combine beaten egg, milk and melted butter. Blend into the flour mixture just until dry ingredients are moistened. Stir in remaining walnuts. Turn into greased 9-by-5-by-3-inch loaf pan. Bake at 350 degrees about 65 minutes or until pick inserted in center comes out clean. Remove from oven; let stand in pan 10 minutes. Remove to wire rack to cool. Makes 1 loaf.

San Francisco Roast

By Victor F. Zonana
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Not long ago, the sweet smell of roasting coffee beans from a Hills Bros. plant at the foot of the Bay Bridge wafted fragrant welcome to travelers from Oakland, Calif., and beyond.

"On most days, you could smell it halfway across the bridge," recalls a librarian at the California Historical Society. The redolent air evoked a romantic era when San Francisco was one of the top three coffee-importing ports in the country — a bygone time when coffee was king in this city's economy.

But that aromatic vestige of the past vanished two years ago when the old plant was torn down to make way for offices and condominiums. Although Hills, now a subsidiary of Switzerland's Nestle food conglomerate, maintains headquarters offices at an adjacent site, the company transferred production to a facility in the industrial Potrero Hill section of the city.

And that is about all that is left of the big-time coffee industry in San Francisco, a city that spawned two of the nation's three biggest national brands — Folgers and Hills Bros. — and such regional favorites as MJB. (Maxwell House, the nation's leading coffee brand with about 19 percent of the ground coffee market and 24 percent of the instant trade, originated in Tennessee and was named after a classy hotel in Nashville where it was first served.)

A coffee renaissance of sorts, however, is under way here as San Franciscans and their sophisticated palates turn away from mass-marketed national brands and embrace locally roasted "gourmet" coffee. About 15 small roasters sell such exotic coffees as Jamaican Blue Mountain, French roast and Mocha-Java to demanding drinkers who often grind their own beans in their quest for the perfect cup of coffee.

"It's a trend that got going in the Bay Area and has spread to other parts of the country with affluent people who demand the best," says George Boecklin, president of the National Coffee Association, an industry group. According to Boecklin, the trend has forced the big national coffee makers "to recognize that there is a market out there for top

Dear Readers: I am always happy to congratulate a food company that makes changes that improve the nutritional and health promoting value of their products; especially if they are not required to do it.

Lance Inc. from Charlotte has made an important change in their snack foods. They reformulated their cookies and crackers to remove all animal fats, such as lard and beef tallow, and all the saturated oil — coconut and palm — from most of their products. It is important that we, as consumers, support the food makers who try to keep our food good tasting, reasonably priced and health promoting. If you want to write and congratulate them or get a copy of nutritional information about their crackers and cookies and nuts, write Lance Inc., P.O. Box 32368, Charlotte, N.C., 28232. If you eat snack foods, their information can help you choose among the products with are low in saturated fats, low sodium and sodium free.

Q. What is the best type of oil to use? G.L., Greenville.

A. If you are concerned about preventing heart disease, the best oils are vegetable oils. Each of these oils: canola (new Puritan Oil), safflower, sunflower, corn, olive, soybean and peanut have a slightly different amount of saturated, polyunsaturated (including omega 3 fatty acids) and monosaturated fat in them. None of these oils have any cholesterol. If you are selecting an oil for heart health, I would pick any one of these based on the brand, flavor and price you like. If your blood cholesterol level puts you at "very high risk" to heart disease, or your doctor has said to use oils high in monosaturated fats, then I would use either olive or canola oil. Olive oil has a stronger flavor and is generally more expensive than canola oil. The oils you want to avoid are those from the tropics, coconut and palm, since they are saturated fats.

Q. I have been watching my cholesterol intake for years. Before, I was told that shrimp should be avoided, now I have read that I can eat shrimp. What has changed? G.L., Greenville.

A. Scientists' knowledge of how much cholesterol is in shrimp has changed. The old Tables of Cholesterol Values on seafood came from analyses done many years ago of just a few shrimp. In recent years, the National Marine Fisheries Service has sponsored a more systematic analysis of the composition of shrimp. It looked at the cholesterol in more shrimp and different varieties and found them to have lower levels of cholesterol than originally thought.

Obviously, no two shrimp have the exact same amount but probably, even more important, we know that the amount of saturated fat we eat affects their blood cholesterol more than the dietary cholesterol we eat. And, shrimp (until it is fried) is low in total fat and low in saturated fat. So, you can enjoy shrimp baked, boiled or grilled — occasionally, on a heart-healthy diet.

Remember, you can have your cholesterol measured by ECU School of Medicine in cooperation with the Pitt County Health Department Saturday from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. at The Plaza. Call 551-2207 or 1-800-722-3281 for more information.

Double-Ring Vows Solemnized

WILLIAMSTON — Luann Dowdy and David Charles Manning were united in marriage Sunday at 3 p.m. in Redicks Grove Baptist Church.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Rankin Dowdy and Mr. and Mrs. Darrell Jones Manning, all of Williamston.

The Revs. James A. Carr and Calvin M. Kelley performed the double-ring ceremony. Music was rendered by soloists Suzi Perkins and Dwayne Baker of Williamston, and Glenn Buck, trumpeter. Pianists were Jeanette Swain and Mary Lane Baker of Williamston. Vocal selections included "This is Love," "Household of Faith" and "The Lord's Prayer."

Susan D. Dunlow of Williamston was honor attendant for her sister. Bridesmaids were Jennifer C. Harris of Williamston, cousin of the bride, Michele Lawson of Wilson, Mary Grace Massengill of Greenville, Jo Anna McMillan of Raleigh, Sandra Smith of Fremont and Cynthia Williams of Williamston.

Honorary bridesmaids were Ann

Frances Coronado of Morehead City, Amy Hatten, Elizabeth Johnson and Tammy Modlin, all of Greenville. Hillary Manning of Route 1, Williamston, cousin of the bride, was the flower girl.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Glen Kevin Allen of Rocky Mount, William Joey Dunlow, brother-in-law of the bride, Brian Eugene Leggett, cousin of the bridegroom, Gary Wilford Manning, Roger Wayne Manning and William Darrell Manning, brothers of the bridegroom all of Williamston.

Honorary groomsmen were Wyatt Coltrain Jr., cousin of the bride, and Michael Lane Leggett, cousin of the bridegroom, both of Williamston.

The bride attended Atlantic Christian College in Wilson and is employed by First Federal Savings and Loan in Greenville. The bridegroom attended East Carolina University and is employed by United Health Services, Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white satin and satin embroidered schiffli lace designed with a fitted basque bodice, sheer English net yoke and beaded collar. The Elizabethan sleeves of satin and English net formed calla points over the hands and were trimmed with satin embroidered schiffli lace. The gathered satin skirt flowed into a chapel train with satin schiffli embrodered lace cut-outs. Matching lace bordered the gown hemline. She wore a tiered fingertip veil of imported silk illusion with a rolled edge attached to a pearl and lace tiara headpiece with a pouf. She carried a formal cascade bouquet of white sweetheart roses, stephanotis, sonyas roses and gypsophilia with accents of pearls and satin streamers.

The matron of honor wore a mint green tea-length gown accented with a lace overlay. The fitted bodice was designed with a scalloped neckline, short sleeves and V-back. A back candy box bow and satin cummerbund accented the natural waistline. She carried a semi-cascade of red tulips, royal blue iris, yellow button pom poms, white daisies and gypsophilia with mint green streamers. The bridesmaids were dressed identically and their bouquets were similar.

The bridegroom's parents gave a rehearsal dinner for the wedding party and out-of-town guests. A rehearsal dance was given by friends of the bride's family.

After a wedding trip to the Bahamas, the couple will live in Greenville.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have written and rewritten this letter several times, but I haven't been able to send it — until now.

Our son, Michael Ratliff Jr., was struck by an automobile on Oct. 7, 1987. He was diagnosed as "brain dead." In the intensive care unit he looked as though he was sleeping, and would awaken any moment and speak to us. It was so hard to accept that he was really "gone" — much less think about allowing anyone to remove any parts of him — but time is so precious in this situation.

Over a year ago, my husband and I, Mike Jr. and his sister, Kelly, discussed a column you had written about the importance of donating organs after our death. We all agreed that we wanted to take nothing to our graves that could improve life for the living.

Abby, it was a tremendous comfort to be able to say with confidence that Michael wanted his organs donated at the time of death — which is what we did.

Most parents will find this decision impossible to make unless it has been discussed before. Please urge your readers not to say, "There's plenty of time," or, "I'll do it tomorrow." We signed the necessary papers and donated all Mike's usable organs, tissues and bone while our beautiful son was functioning on machines. Finally, we were informed on Oct. 9 that it was all over — Mike was dead, and we could schedule the funeral service.

Then, a few days after Mike's funeral, possibly during our lowest emotional time, we received the letter I am enclosing.

All of us read it, and read it again. It was such a comfort! Please, please, Abby, find a way to share it with your readers.

Because you so often write columns to encourage donating organs, we thank you, Abby. Please keep printing those helpful, informative, soul-searching columns from time to time. — MARILOU RUCKER (MOTHER), MICHAEL RATLIFF SR. (FATHER), KELLY RATLIFF (SISTER), BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

The enclosed letter was received from the University of Alabama at Birmingham:

DEAR MS. RUCKER AND FAMILY: On behalf of the Alabama Regional Organ and Tissue Center, may I express my deepest sympathy to you and your family for the tragic loss of your son, Mike. I would also like to express my gratitude to you for understanding our situation at such a difficult time and responding to the needs of desperately ill people whom you have never met. I admire your ability to express your love for Mike by allowing his death to give the "gift of life" to others. I can assure you that this most unselfish gift will never be forgotten by the patients and their families who have benefited from your generosity.

Both of Mike's kidneys were transplanted at our hospital. One kidney was received by a 23-year-old female, and the other was received by a 48-year-old male. I am glad to report that both recipients experienced immediate function of their transplanted kidneys and are looking forward to returning home to their families to live a more normal life free of dialysis.

We located a woman suffering from coronary artery disease in need of a transplant. She is the mother of six children and had received a previous heart transplant two years ago. She is in the intensive care unit recovering without complications from the transplant.

The Eye Foundation will soon inform you about how the corneas were used. Can you imagine what it must be like for those patients who have lived in darkness to regain this most precious gift of sight?

In closing, I would again like to express my sympathy and gratitude on behalf of these recipients and their families. I know that words cannot help the pain that you and your family must feel, but I hope that in the years to come you will gain some comfort in knowing that you have given the "gift of life" to many. — BRUCE A.
