COASTAL DAMAGE — An oceanfront cottage, condemned earlier because of erosion, rests in a crumpled heap after it collapsed at Nags Head Wednesday evening as a northeaster pounded the coast with hurricane-force winds. Ship Hits Mine In Gulf

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. Navy frigate on patrol in the Persian Gulf apparently struck an underwater mine today, the Pentagon said. Four sailors were injured.

The ship, the USS Samuel B. Roberts, was in no danger of sinking, said Pentagon spokesman Dan Howard. He said that no one was killed and that the four sailors had not sustained life-threatening injuries.

The ship is based in Newport, R.I.

"At approximately 10:10 this morning EDT, the USS Sam Roberts ... experienced an underwater explosion in the Persian Gulf at a point approximately 70 miles due east of Bahrain Bell (a navigational aid)," Howard said.

The spot is near Farsi Island, which the Iranian navy has used in its attacks on gulf shipping.

The explosion "caused flooding in the engine room and some hull damage. The flooding is under control, and the ship is in the process of pumping out the water. It's operating under auxiliary power."

Howard said that the USS Wainwright, a cruiser, "is en route to the site to offer assistance and should be there soon."

The incident occurred in the central Persian Gulf, well to the south of the spot where a reflagged Kuwaiti tanker hit a mine during the first convoy operation last July. Howard said there had been no recent reports by mine-sweepers in the area that mines had been sighted.

The spokesman refused to say the underwater explosion had been caused by a mine, citing the paucity of information from initial reports.

"It really is too early to tell," Howard said. "Underwater explosion is the way to describe it. We don't know what caused the explosion. All we've got is an underwater explosion at this point."

Howard said the Roberts was steaming in the area after completing an escort operation Wednesday night. The spokesman said he assumed "there were no other U.S. vessels in close proximity," but couldn't say for sure.

"They say the flooding is under control and they're pumping the thing out and doing that under auxiliary power," Howard said.

The Roberts is the same type of ship as the USS Stark, the frigate that was hit last May in an Iraqi air at-

Wind-Swept Tides Bear Down On Tar Heel Coast

By The Associated Press

A fierce northeaster pounded the mid-Atlantic coast with heavy rains, winds near hurricane strength and waves that covered highways, toppled at least two houses into the sea and threatened the only bridge to Hatteras Island.

The storm bore down hardest on North Carolina, where whipped sea foam covered beaches like a blanket of snow. Winds gusted up to 70 mph and waves crested at nearly 25 feet off Cape Hatteras. No serious injuries were reported.

Forecasters were uncertain how long the storm would linger off the coast, meteorologist Harry Gordon at the National Weather Service's Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., said today.

In Raleigh, Gov. Jim Martin said he would fly to the North Carolina coast later today to inspect the damage and press his case for erecting jetties to stabilize the inlet, a project long opposed by the federal government.

Martin said he had invited Interior Secretary Donald Hodel by telegraph to meet him there but that Hodel was sending a deputy director instead.

The governor also said he was trying to arrange a meeting with President Reagan on the matter, saying the state was not getting a clear answer on the jetty question from various federal agencies.

"What I've conveyed to the White House staff ... is that I'm tired of having to go back and forth between agencies and never get an answer, yes or no," Martin said at a news conference. "They keep trying to put off an answer. And I intend to get an answer and I guess the only way to get that is to get it from the president of the United States."

In Sandbridge, Va., Dick Schumacher said his $200,000 oceanfront home tumbled into the surf, and officials said about 20 other homes were threatened by high water and pounding surf.

"My house is in the ocean. It's finished," Schumacher said Wednesday night. "I'm heartsick."

City officials Wednesday closed the area to all traffic except emergency crews and homeowners, and planned to survey the damage today.

Flood warnings also were issued for the Delaware and Maryland coasts.

At least one cottage in North Carolina fell into the ocean, and N.C. 12 was closed late Wednesday, stranding some Outer Banks residents in the town of Manteo overnight while cutting other residents off from the mainland, said T.C. McKimmey, of the Dare County Sheriff's Department.

"The cottage already had suffered severe erosion and had been leaning last spring, but the storm took the final toll," McKimmey said. Several other houses also were threatened by waters that rolled over the beach road in Nags Head.

Heavy surf washed away about 100 feet of sand from the south side of Oregon Inlet, threatening to damage the approach to the Herbert C. Bonner Bridge that leads to Hatteras Island, about 20 miles off the North Carolina coast.

Further erosion could wash away much of the sand from South Point, exposing the bridge and approach to direct waves, highway officials said.

School Foundation Reports $24,750 In Cash Receipts

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Educational Foundation has received about $24,750 in actual money and has accumulated about $400 in interest, Dan Thomas, treasurer of the foundation, told the organization's directors Wednesday.

In addition, school Superintendent Eddie West said the foundation has received pledges for about $7,800, while about eight other businesses or organizations agreed to make contributions. Exact monetary figures were not available because of calculator error but will be sent to directors in the mail, Thomas and West said.

"We've been received in every office," said Kenneth Dews, chairman of the board, who along with West and Betty Speir, secretary of the foundation, have visited area businesses, petitioning them to support the foundation.

"They're talking about what the potential of the board in the future is," and some have said the requests for financial assistance have been too "stingy," Dews said.

"We've had a good — very gratifying beginning," West said.

In other matters, the board received the resignation of Clifton Everett as a member of the board. In his letter of resignation, Everett said a "conflict of interest" requires him to give up his post as a director.

As the chairman of the Pitt Community College Board of Trustees, Everett is required to be a member of PCC's newly founded foundation as stated in the foundation bylaws, he said.

Members of the board said they will consider recommendations to replace Everett and will present them to the Board of Education and the superintendent for approval.

In addition to local funds, the foundation will be seeking funds from businesses outside the county that have customers in Pitt County, Ms. Speir said. Lance Corp. agreed to provide a $1,000 endowment for three years to earn enough money in inter-

U.S., Soviets Sign Accord

GENEVA (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union today signed an accord to end Moscow's intervention in Afghanistan and allow the Red Army to start pulling out its 115,000 troops on May 15.

Afghanistan and Pakistan also signed the agreement in a solemn 10-minute ceremony in a marble and gold council chamber at U.N. headquarters. Pakistan was representing the Afghan guerrillas, who have vowed to continue their war to oust the Marxist government in Kabul.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz, who signed for the United States, said the agreement would allow the people of Afghanistan to determine their own future and to restore the independence they have earned through "blood and sacrifice." Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze signed for the Soviet Union.

Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar of the United Nations said the U.N.-mediated agreements "represent a major stride in the effort to bring peace to Afghanistan."

Also signing the accord were Foreign Minister Abdul Wakil of Afghanistan and Acting Foreign Minister Zain Noorani of Pakistan.

The settlement followed six years of on-again, off-again negotiations between Afghanistan and Pakistan, which neighbors Afghanistan and is home to an estimated 3 million Afghan refugees.

The Moslem insurgents fighting the Marxist Afghan government for 10 years have headquarters in Pakistan. Pakistan also serves as the conduit for foreign military aid to the guerrillas.

Perez de Cuellar opened the 10-minute ceremony by thanking Afghanistan and Pakistan for their "tireless efforts." He also thanked the United States, which supports the guerrillas, and the Soviet Union, which backs the government, for ALARMS SAVE FAMILY — Steve Williams, sleeping in an upstairs bedroom of this duplex at 1714B W. Conley St., was awakened early today by smoke alarms and found his home filled with smoke. Williams roused two children, Takila, 4, and Alicia, 1, and rushed to a window. He dropped Takila about eight feet to the ground, and tossed Alicia to Clifton Teel, a Greenville Housing Authority worker who was passing by. Williams then escaped through the window, jumping to the ground below. Two other GHA workers, Dennis Baker and Willie Gilbert, helped in the rescue. No injuries were reported. (Reflector Photo by Thomas Forrest)

Tax Filing Deadline Is Here

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

April 15 — that ominous date when taxes must be postmarked for return — is nearly upon us.

The impending deadline for filing has created a noticeable increase in business for local tax preparers, and the Greenville Post Office has recognized the deadline by establishing a special tax return postmark policy for Friday.

Ann Kozak, manager of the H&R Block office in Greenville, said business is up considerably this week as people look for assistance in getting their returns submitted on time.

"We're seeing a lot more complicated returns this year as a result of the new tax laws," Ms. Kozak said.

She said many more people have an increase in their tax liability over last year, but many don't seem to notice.

"As long as they get a refund, they're satisfied," she said.

She also indicated many who choose to wait this late to file often choose to utilize the new electronic filing system to beat the many who file by mail.

"People who file electronically will likely get their refunds faster than those who mail in their returns," she said.

She said those choosing to file electronically today and Friday can expect to receive refunds in approximately 28 days.

Ms. Kozak suggests people who choose to utilize tax preparers to have all tax information neatly organized and prepared for presentation.

"It's difficult when we're really busy and someone comes in with a shoe box filled with paperwork," she said.

Richard Cox, a local accountant, also reported tax preparation has increased this week.

"The whole month of April has been busy. There's been a lot of anxiety among people this year not knowing exactly how the new law was going to affect them," he said.

Cox said he's assisted many people this year who normally would file on their own, but this year have struggled with the new laws and eventually opted for assistance.

"Then, you've always got the annual procrastinators who are always late no matter what," he added.

Meanwhile, Greenville Postmaster Charles Caulk said tax returns may be deposited Friday in regular collection boxes up to the posted collection times, which are normally 5 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

After that, he said, tax returns must be deposited inside the Main Post Office located at Second and Green streets. Those returns received up to midnight will receive an April 15 postmark, he said.

According to Deborah Diamond, public affairs officer with the IRS office in Greensboro, 1.8 million or 65 percent of the 2.8 million people in the state expected to file returns this year have done so as of last Friday.

She said the average tax refund this year has increased to $734 compared with last year's average of $661.

"So far we've issued over $751 million in refunds this year to North Carolinians," Ms. Diamond said.

In addition to the amount of refunds, the number of people requesting tax information from the IRS by telephone has also increased this year. Ms. Diamond said the IRS has received 15.7 calls this year com-

Dean Criticized

RALEIGH (AP) - Twenty-one faculty members in an informal straw vote Wednesday voted that Claude McKinney should be replaced as dean of North Carolina State University's School of Design.

The professors who attended Wednesday's noon meeting also decided to ask the entire design faculty to hold a vote of confidence on McKinney next week, said Denis Wood, an associate design professor.

Wood said an "absolute lack of action" and a "lack of focus on education" prompted dissatisfaction with McKinney. He said that more than a dozen department heads within the school had resigned in frustration with McKinney.

Piedmont Jet Lands With Hole In Fuselage

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) - A Piedmont airlines jet made an emergency landing today after a jet turbine apparently disintegrated in flight, ripping a large hole in the fuselage, airport officials and passengers said.

The cabin of the F-28 depressurized after the plane's body was punctured, and oxygen masks dropped as the plane made its descent, the passengers said. However, some of the masks did not work, they said, and some passengers fainted.

Flight 486 with 56 passengers and a four-person crew was headed for Columbus, Ohio, from Charlotte, N.C., said Piedmont Aviation spokesman Don McGuire in Winston-Salem, N.C.

"If somebody had been in the bathroom or the stewardesses' quarters, they would have been killed," said passenger Doug Bruce of Columbus, Ohio. "My first thought was, 'This is it.'"

Another passenger, Rafael Gonzales of Charlotte, N.C., said, "It began with a wearing noise and loud vibrations about five or 10 times straight, and then there was an explosion in the back of us."

He said it took about 15 minutes to land after the explosion.

Authorities reported no injuries in the incident.

"It appears to be a turbine disintegration in one of its engines, and obviously when you get disintegration like that, it flung some turbine blades into the side of the fuselage," Yeager Airport manager Jeff Bubar said.

Debris apparently ripped all the way through the plane, which had holes on both sides. A hole on the right side, adjacent to the engine that disintegrated, was 6 feet wide by 2 feet high. One the opposite side, the hole was 2 feet by 1 foot.

The pilot noticed a fire indicator signal for his No. 2 engine and decided to put down in Charleston, where he "landed without incident," McGuire said.

"One of the engines blew and blew a big hole in the plane," said passenger Fred Hinton of Raleigh, N.C. "It was big enough that I could crawl through it."

The plane made a deep descent immediately "but they got it under the control. They all did a good job," Hinton said.

"All the kids were screaming," he added.

Some of the crew members and older passengers went through the aisles and placed the oxygen masks on the children, Hinton said. Some of the oxygen masks didn't work, and passengers had to be moved to other seats, he said.

Gonzales, who was sitting three rows from the rear of the plane, said a woman in the seat behind him who was traveling with two children passed out.

"She fainted. I turned around and she was blue. The baby was blue. And her 3-year-old was blue," Gonzales said. "I grabbed her and put a mask on her, gave the baby to a woman who was sitting next to her and I took the 3-year-old up with me."

U.S., Soviets Sign Afghan Accord

Aides then carried the leather-bound documents from one minister to the next for signing. Copies go to each country and the United Nations.

The agreement commits Pakistan and Afghanistan to not support "directly or indirectly, rebellious or secessionist activities" against each other, and it provides for the withdrawal of Soviet troops who entered Afghanistan in 1979 to help the government.

Shultz said the accord was "a goal the world has sought" for a long time, and he said he was confident the Soviet Union would begin its troop withdrawal on schedule May 15.

But in Pakistan, President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq said today he foresees continued turmoil in Afghanistan because the agreement doesn't address the issue of a new government to replace the one headed by President Najib.

There is no provision in accord to end the war, and it says nothing about the composition of future Afghan governments.

Pakistan said it would continue to withhold recognition of the Kabul government pending formation of a new one. In a letter to Diego Cordovez, the U.N. mediator in the talks, Noorani said that "in view of the realities of the situation in Afghanistan and notwithstanding the accords signed today, (Pakistan) will continue to ... withhold extending recognition to the regime in Kabul."

Coast Battered

"That point is the protection for our south bridge abutment," state Highway Administrator George Wells said. "The ocean is eating away rapidly at that point."

At Carolina Beach, N.C., heavy rain and wind caused erosion almost as fast as a dredge pumped sand in a $1.4 million beach replenishment project.

"We're losing sand fast due to this inclement weather," Town Manager David Serrell said. "It happened almost overnight, but there's nothing you can do about it. I don't know how much is being lost in dollar figures."

In Virginia, about 5,000 people, mostly in Virginia Beach, temporarily lost electricity in the storm, which also tore up roads and washed out trees, road signs and utility poles.

The Downtown Tunnel between Norfolk and Portsmouth was closed for three hours Wednesday as water in the tube rose as high as 7 inches. The flooding was caused by water that poured into an electrical junction box left uncapped by construction workers, state Transportation Department spokesman John Hanke said.

"It was a combination of freak occurrences that will never happen again in a million years," Hanke said.

Deadline Is Here

pared to 14 million last year. "People have more questions regarding the newest provisions of the tax laws," she explained.

Among the most frequently asked questions regarding the new provisions, according to Ms. Diamond, are those tax issues pertaining to student scholarships. She said the cost of college room and board is now taxable while tuition remains untaxed. The new provisions also affect students who work part time and youngsters under the age of 14.

According to the new provisions, any investment income exceeding $1,000 received by a child under 14 is now taxed at the parents' higher rate, assuming the rate is higher than the child's rate.

Ms. Diamond said the Greenville IRS office, located at 101 W. First St., will be open one hour later both today and Friday for walk-in assistance regarding tax-related questions.

In addition, she said the IRS toll-free tax information phone service will also operate under a one-hour extension. The number, 1-800-424-1040, will operate from 8 a.m. to 6:45 p.m. both today and Friday.

In order to obtain an extension from Friday's deadline, Ms. Diamond said taxpayers might consider filing Form 4868. She said filing this form by midnight Friday will provide an extra four months to file, perhaps preventing some people from rushing their return and making a mistake. But, Ms. Diamond warns, the form provides for an extension to file, not an extension to pay.

She said those using Form 4868 must estimate and include the amount of tax balance due. She said if payment is not included with the form, it will not be considered a valid extension. Those underestimating their tax balance will be liable for interest and penalty on the shortage, she added.

No Hearing

RALEIGH (AP) - The National Transportation Safety Board has decided not to hold a public hearing on the cause of the February crash of an American Eagle commuter plane at Raleigh-Durham Airport that killed 12 people.

Ted Lopatkiewicz, an NTSB spokesman, said the board had voted 2-2 on whether to hold a hearing. Because of the tie vote, no hearing will be held.

Church Break-Ins

RALEIGH (AP) - A Wake County grand jury has indicted a Raleigh man on 38 criminal charges in a series of break-ins at Raleigh churches since January.

Robert Orlando Mitchell, 30, was charged with 19 counts of breaking and entering, eight counts each of larceny and possession of stolen of property, two counts of attempted safecracking and one count of safecracking.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Not The Beginning

Eakin Era Already Under Way

As Richard Eakin takes the oath of chancellor of East Carolina University Friday, his influence at the helm of the state's third largest university is already visible on the campus and in the community.

Eakin, throughout his first year as chancellor, has been quietly setting an ambitious and diverse agenda for ECU - an agenda that encompasses strengthened academic prowess, increased regional responsibility and long-range thinking.

The chancellor has targeted additional doctoral programs. He has undertaken a comprehensive planning project for the University and advocated an active role for ECU in the economic development of eastern North Carolina.

Closer to home, he has insisted more attention be given to campus aesthetics and initiated increased communication between the University and community.

These are all appropriate directions for a University that leads the East.

ECU has reached a hard-won summit of development in the past decade. Political combat for university status and the medical school produced a battle-wise school with considerable clout and venerable resources. But that status is not without responsibility, and the distinction not without growing pains.

Eakin is charged with addressing these side effects of the maturation process. His challenge is to provide regional leadership without sacrificing either academic quality or community perspective. His deeper challenge is to further the University's achievements and propel it to still greater accomplishment.

Guiding a diverse institution such as ECU has become a ponderous undertaking. University traditions and varied ambitions make rapid change all but impossible, appropriately, for the construction of a strong university is done brick by brick. Stagnation and disjunction must be removed, but solid progress preserved.

The inaugural ceremony Friday is the symbolic beginning of the Eakin era at ECU, even while changes that mark this passage are already taking place. The event is one of dignity and excitement, for it portends a compelling future for a University with an important mission of leadership.

Tourism Boom

Travel Pitt's Golden Goose?

There are no water front condos in Greenville and not an ocean wave is to be seen in Pitt County.

The major waterways of the county are the Tar River and Contentnea Creek, neither of which brings out the sun worshippers.

Nevertheless Pitt County suddenly finds itself in a major growth situation in the travel and tourism category.

It was reported at the Governor's Conference and Tourism that Pitt County's travel and tourism revenues increased to nearly $63 million in 1987. That comes to a 38 percent increase and was the highest percentage increase for any major tourism county in the state.

There's more to this golden economic goose. Hugh Morton, Jr. director of the state Division of Travel and Tourism said over 3,800 people in our county are now working in travel and tourism. The county now has more motel and hotel rooms available than any where else in the east, excluding the beach areas. All that is not bad for a county which has historically been isolated from the main highways of the state.

Most travelers, logically, are not coming here to soak up rays. Mostly they come for the many meetings and conventions held in connection with the medical, education, industrial and business climate.

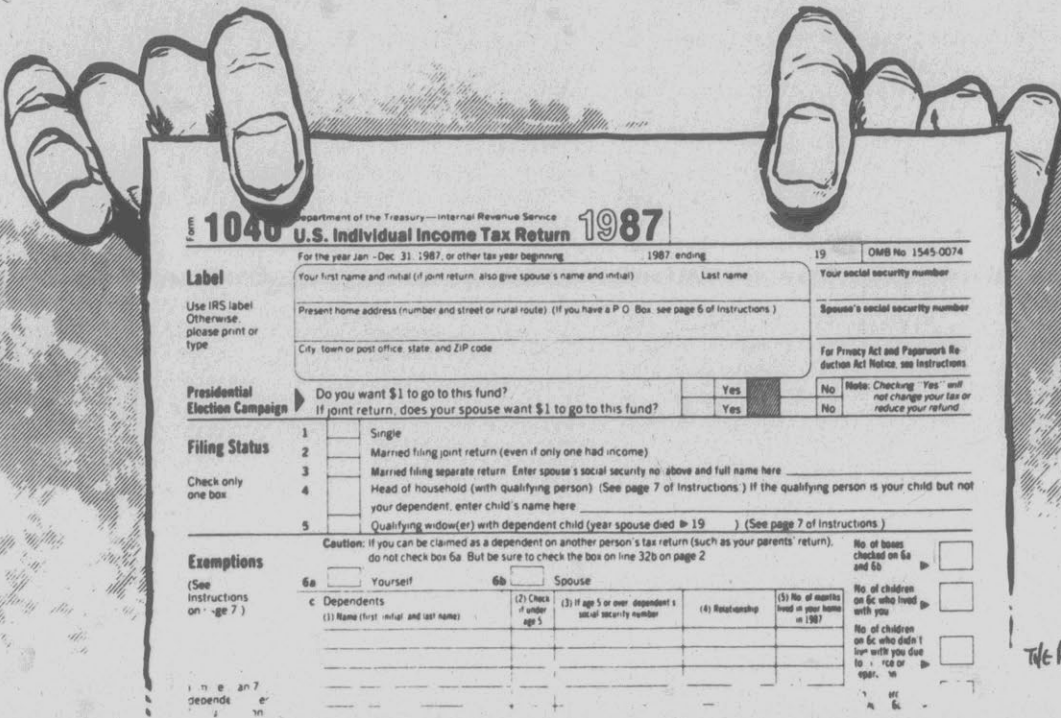

The future is unlimited. The county is centrally located and now offers the restaurants and spare time activities that are attractive to conventioners.

Pitt has the rooms and banquet facilities and planning is under way for a convention center to seat 14,000 people.

Drawing people for water recreation is not outside the county's scope. The vast waters of the Pamlico are now only minutes away by car and they remain virtually undiscovered by most of the nation. And, as a jumping off point to the Outer Banks, Pitt County is well situated - only 75 miles from the Swan Quarter ferry to Ocracoke. Visitors here can take that ferry, travel up the Outer Banks and return to Greenville via U.S. 64 or U.S. 264. The convenience to convention-goers is surely appealing.

A couple of decades back few would have taken seriously the prospect of Pitt County becoming important in travel and tourism. The figures tell the community, however, it has done just that. The exciting part is that this growth is just the beginning. The future in travel and tourism is unlimited. The county has the promotion machinery established and can accomplish great things.

GOOD MORNING!! It's APRIL 15th... DO YOU KNOW WHERE YOUR OUIJA BOARD IS?!

- Ross K. Baker -

It's Every Democrat For Himself

In a country with a strong political party system, you would not have the spectacle of an Al Gore belittling the credentials of front-runners when he himself is so far behind. He would be bundled off to the woodshed by party leaders and informed bluntly that he would be cut off from his money and organizational support.

That's the way it is today in Britain, and how it used to be in this country. But politics has changed a good deal since the days of kingmakers like the Republicans' turn-of-the-century despot Mark Hanna, who told his party's nominee, William McKinley, to stay home on his front porch in Canton, Ohio, and not bother to go around the country campaigning. Hanna and his Democratic counterparts controlled vast party organizations that could spread a candidate's message to the voters. Today, if the presidential hopeful can raise the money, he can hire his own organization and talk to the voters via TV. In 1988, the motto emblazoned on the banner of all Democratic candidates is "Every man for himself."

The rampant individualism in American politics that now puts the candidate, not the party, at the center of campaigns has produced a Democratic Party that is no greater than the sum of its parts and is often less. So the popular question, "Who will the Democrats nominate for President?" needs to be answered by another question: "Which Democrats?"

The most visible and seemingly institutionalized component of the party is the Democratic National Committee in Washington. The committee, however, inspires about as much awe as the Soviet Union's top parliament, the Supreme Soviet. Democratic Chairman Paul Kirk has less political clout than a U.N. secretary general. Sure, the committee does some useful things like choose the site for the national convention. But most of what goes on at Democratic headquarters is party housekeeping and the provision of useful but hardly essential services to Democratic candidates.

If the national committee is without much influence, what about the party elders?

The problem is that no two Democrats could agree on who should be included in their party's Sanhedrin. There seems to be a core group of party patriarchs located in Washington and consisting of some former aides to President Lyndon Johnson, the last Democratic President to have achieved a measure of delegates who hold elective office: They want to avoid someone with the negative coattails of Jimmy Carter, who in 1980 drove off the cliff with dozens of Democratic senators and House members in the back seat. While Democratic officeholders have shown themselves skilled at distancing themselves from unpopular ed off the Gary Hart challenge in 1984. But labor and other Democratic interest groups stung by the accusation that their special pleadings have burdened the party's nominees with extensive political obligations have remained officially neutral this year and may continue to lie low.

If these elite groups are not going to be decisive, what about the masses, the estimated 40 percent of the electorate who consider themselves Democrats? This component of the party enjoys the greatest legitimacy. The voice of ordinary Democratic voters has been decisive in all modern primaries. This year, however, they seem bewildered and hesitant. Jesse Jackson, who excites them, also makes them apprehensive. Michael Dukakis is blandly reassuring but sets no hearts aflutter. Albert Gore seems better at impeaching the presidential qualifications of his rivals than at fashioning his own distinctive appeal. Sizable numbers of these Democratic voters, moreover, have developed the habit of walking out on their party's nominee in general elections. Ronald Reagan garnered 25 percent of the votes of self-described Democrats in 1980 and 1984.

A great deal is riding on the April 19 primary in New York. If Democratic voters can at least begin to resolve their doubts about one candidate or other, the party can avoid serious discord. The other candidates will not chivalrously stand aside to allow the nomination of a late entrant such as New York Gov. Mario Cuomo. If uncertainty persists to convention time, Atlanta could see grim-visaged warfare as candidates and party factions struggle to interpret the will of an uncertain electorate.

If the party organization lacks the power to nominate, the elders lack the authority to nominate, the super delegates lack the legitimacy to nominate, the interest groups the boldness to nominate, and the Democratic electorate the enthusiasm to nominate, the party's viability is on the line.

Ross K. Baker is professor of political science at Rutgers University.

success. In this group are former Democratic chairman and trade negotiator Robert Strauss, Johnson's former Senate aide Harry McPherson, and former White House staffer Jack Valenti. The ranking Democratic graybeard probably is former Defense Secretary Clark Clifford, who won his spurs in the Truman Administration. This consistency of bigwigs does come in for a good deal of deference, but they are less kings of the forest than they are amiable inhabitants of the party's petting zoo.

Another Democratic element that may well be influential is the group of 645 governors, senators, representatives, and party officials dubbed "super delegates." This week, the Democrats in the House and Senate will choose 253 of their number to go to the convention.

One preoccupation unites the super presidential nominees, many feel they would need ejection seats to escape the negative gravity of a Jesse Jackson candidacy.

But what if Jackson comes to Atlanta with a plurality of delegates, or Dukakis falls short of the 2,082 delegates needed to nominate? Fearing an electoral Armageddon, many would commit to Dukakis. But these delegates would lack a fundamental credential in a party that venerates popular sovereignty: democratic legitimacy. They are not chosen by the voters. They are insiders in a year in which populism has been getting a good ride.

In the recent past, powerful interest groups associated with the Democratic Party have also played a decisive role in the primary process. Without the help of organized labor, Walter Mondale could not have staved

No Smoking During Execution

'Give Me Liberty Or Give Me A Marlboro'

The firing squad from Riker's Island marched out on the parade ground. Six soldiers, led by Captain Loughboro, lined up at attention, facing the wooden post.

Two soldiers, one on each side, marched Tony the Termiter to the post and tied his hands behind his back. Captain Loughboro stepped forward with a blindfold and tied it around Tony's eyes.

"Would you care for a cigarette?" the captain asked.

"Yes, I would," Tony said. "I'll take a king-sized mentholated."

The captain drew one out of a pack and placed it in Tony's mouth. He was about to light it when a uniformed inspector from the city's Anti-Smoking Unit ran on the parade ground and cried, "Halt! You cannot smoke on this property during a firing squad execution."

"That's ridiculous," the captain said. "Puffing a last cigarette before being shot is an ancient military tradition."

"Never mind tradition. No one is permitted to blow smoke within 10 feet of another person as it's hazardous to everyone's health. Tony isn't just doing harm to himself but to the firing squad as well."

"Suppose I move the squad 10 feet back?" the captain suggested.

"That still would be considered secondhand smoke. Don't you have any respect for human life at all?"

The captain turned to Tony, "Would it bother you to give up your last cigarette?"

"It certainly would. This is a free country and when it comes to puffing, I know my rights." The captain rifled through a book. "He's right," he said to the inspector. "It says here no one can be shot unless he is offered a last cigarette of his choice."

"But we're only doing this for his health. If Tony sucks on that fag he's going to develop a terrible cough."

"I'll worry about that," Tony protested. "It's too late to quit smoking. I should have done it years ago when it had some meaning. Now, let's knock off the sweet talk and give me a light."

The inspector said, "That's the trouble with people who face capital punishment. They think of nobody but themselves. We are never going to have clean air if smokers ignore the rights of others. Well, I'm warning you. If the captain lights up your cigarette I'm going to arrest you for violating the law and it's going to cost you."

Tony asked, "What will I get?"

"Thirty days and a $50 fine."

"I'll take it. That's better than what they are going to give me now," Tony declared.

The captain barked at the inspector, "I won't hear of it. This man has been sentenced to die by the firing squad and you are interfering in the outcome. Get out of here."

"I'm giving you notice," the inspector admonished, "that you can be locked up for aiding and abetting a smoker, which is a capital crime. I suggest you dispense with the cigarette and get on with the execution."

Tony said, "I protest. There is nothing to prove that smoking is hazardous to your health. I will fight to my dying breath to enjoy my last cigarette because I have only one puff to give for my country. I say, 'Give me liberty or give me a Marlboro.'"

The captain said to the inspector, "Now you've done it. We're not going to be able to shoot him until he goes to Smoke Enders."

Inside Downfall

Dumping dictators is tough.

In a recent study commissioned by the Central Intelligence Agency, the authors found that practically no authoritarian leaders since 1945 have taken early retirement. Most have been ousted from power by coups and revolutions, or they died in office. And in nearly every case study by the CIA, political instability usually preceded and almost always followed attempts to dislodge the dictator.

It is surprising, therefore, that United States officials today express frustration at how hard it appears to be to oust Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega or dismay over the domestic, political and economic instability in Panama that results every time pressure is increased.

Noriega has been under growing pressure from the United States to resign as commander of the Panama Defense Forces, a position he has held since 1983. His military power base coupled with the dossiers he has been able to compile on would-be rivals during his 10 years as chief of Panama's intelligence service have made him the de facto ruler of the country.

The campaign to oust Noriega started in June 1987, following revelations by a close associate that the general had been involved in the assassination of political opponents, electoral fraud and drug trafficking.

The United States has employed a broad spectrum of tactics, including State Department pronouncements and congressional resolutions asking the general to step down, suspension of economic and military aid, economic sanctions, military threats, diplomatic ostracism and covert political action.

None have worked. And while they may yet result in Noriega's ouster, in the short run they have also stiffened his and the army's resolve to resist U.S. intervention, caused numerous Latin American leaders to express concern about the real motives behind U.S. actions, discredited Panama's nominal political leaders who are now seen as powerless American lackeys, provided Cuba with an opportunity to send aid and military advisers into a region of real strategic importance to the United States, and made the lives of most Panamanians miserable.

Short of invading Panama, Washington may have no other options left — and a good deal more political instability ahead about which to be concerned.

This state of affairs leads me to wonder whether it was wise for the Reagan Administration to use the tactics it has to try to oust Noriega.

There is no question that the general's actions, politics and ethics are repugnant. But it was bad business for the CIA to become involved with him in the 1970s, as Seymour Hersh has reported. And it was a poor decision on the part of President Jimmy Carter, who badly needed the cooperation of Panama's leaders in providing sanctuary for the ailing and deposed Shah of Iran, to restrain the Justice Department from presenting the evidence that would have probably led to Noriega's indictment in 1980 for illegal arms dealing.

It is incomprehensible, however, that, based on Pentagon and CIA advice, the Reagan administration waited until just 10 months ago — despite evidence that for most of this decade Noriega was not only profiting substantially from the drug trade but also apparently selling U.S. secrets to Fidel Castro — to take the actions it has.

What would have worked better?

In February of this year, Noriega was indicted by grand juries in Florida for drug trafficking and racketeering. He is the first leader of a country allied with the United States to be charged with such criminal acts. Noriega should have been indicted much earlier. Perhaps letting justice take its course will prove to be the most potent — and least counter-productive — weapon of all, for even the Panamanian military must eventually conclude that its honor is increasingly tarnished by supporting someone who, if ever brought to this country to face trial, stood a good chance of being convicted as a criminal.

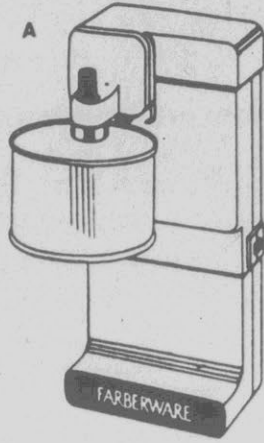

Indeed, if past experience is any guide, dictators are usually only ousted by pressure from within. Consequently, American interests may be best served both by avoiding dependence on dictators in the first place and the temptation to think that we alone can engineer the ouster of those whom we no longer wish to tolerate.

Allen E. Goodman, an associate dean at Georgetown University's School of Foreign Service, served with the CIA during the Carter Administration.

Four Democrats In Race To Succeed Thad Eure

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — It's a situation the state Democratic Party has not faced since 1936: a campaign for secretary of state with no Thad Eure.

The aging political warhorse is calling it quits after 52 years in office — a tenure that led President Reagan to declare Eure the nation's longest serving public official.

Four Democrats hope to inherit Eure's mantle: Rufus Edmisten, himself a veteran of numerous political wars; Dan Bell, a former deputy secretary of state; Brad Miller, a Wake County attorney; and Wayne Hardin, owner of a radio station in Forest City.

Hardin is not well-known in Democratic circles and has not waged a visible campaign. The race has boiled down to an effort by Bell and Miller to overcome Edmisten's statewide name recognition — no easy task when campaigns for other offices are attracting nearly all the attention.

Bell has resorted to such tactics as publicly challenging Edmisten to promise not to use the office of secretary of state as a stepping stone to higher office and not to replace the office's employees with political cronies.

Edmisten has sidestepped questions posed by the challenges, dismissing them as gimmicks. He also has declined Bell's invitation to debate — a refusal Bell publicized with a news conference at which he stood beside an empty lectern.

BRAD MILLER

DAN BELL

Miller, who also has accused Edmisten of ducking the issues, has highlighted endorsements from Democratic activists.

The secretary of state is North Carolina government's official record keeper. His department registers newly enacted laws, legislative lobbyists and trademarks. It also licenses stockbrokers and administrators securities laws designed to protect investors from fraud.

He's also a member of the Council of State, the 10-member group of elected executive-branch officers who oversee state property transactions and approve emergency state expenditures.

For Edmisten, Eure's impending retirement offers an opportunity to return to politics after a four-year absence following his loss to Republican Gov. Jim Martin. "Politics is comparable to what

P.T. Barnum said about the entertainment business: it gets in your blood," said Edmisten, 46, who served 10 years as attorney general before winning the 1984 Democratic nomination after a bruising primary campaign.

The Boone native has opened a law practice in Raleigh since then and says the experience — as well as his defeat — have taught him lessons, including that "it's okay to lose because there is always another day."

In stark contrast to 1984, when he raised and spent millions in his gubernatorial bid, Edmisten is running a low-budget campaign with no television commercials. He is relying on the network of supporters and contacts he built during his tenure as attorney general.

Edmisten's campaign platform has been short on specifics, but he says he would use the Department of the Secretary of State to make North Carolina more attractive for new industry by cutting red tape. The Legislature has designated the office to host a new one-stop licensing office for new business.

Bell, 33, a native of Mount Olive in Wayne County, was a Eure deputy from 1981 until January, when he resigned to enter the race. He oversaw the department's securities division.

His resume is thick with accomplishments and honors: presidency of the American Securities Administrators Association; membership on numerous boards and committees relating to securities regulation; testimony before Congress on insider trading and shareholder rights.

Two Hopefuls Mount GOP Race

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — "The Republican Party is in danger," the letter ominously began.

The writer was state Rep. Ray Warren, a candidate for the party's nomination for secretary of state, and his alarm was mailed to GOP activists across North Carolina. It appeared for a while that he would be the only Republican candidate.

But the day before the filing period ended, John Carrington, the 1984 GOP nominee for lieutenant governor, jumped into the race for secretary of state — setting up a two-way primary.

The race comes in a year when the GOP has a rare window of opportunity to capture the office. Thad Eure, the beloved elder statesman, is retiring from the job he's held since 1936.

Warren is telling Republicans their dream of winning another Council of State office could be doomed if Carrington is nominated. His presence on the ticket might also prove harmful to Gov. Jim Martin, who is seeking re-election, Warren says.

Most party activists "wouldn't know John Carrington if he ran over them with a car," grumbled Warren, an attorney from Mint Hill in Mecklenburg County.

A wealthy Raleigh businessman who never has held public office, Carrington spent nearly half a million dollars of his own money in 1984 — mostly for television commercials. He defeated four rivals for the GOP nomination but lost to Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, 55 percent to 45 percent.

He flirted with running for lieutenant governor again but changed his mind, saying he did not want to run against the other "strong conservatives" in that race.

Undaunted, Carrington already has hit the airwaves this year with 30-second spots in Raleigh and Charlotte that bear the message: "North Carolina needs a successful businessman as secretary of state."

Carrington prides himself on not being a politician. He has no platform other than calling himself "a capable administrator and decision-maker" who would apply "time-proven business practices" in running the Department of Secretary of State.

Warren criticizes Carrington, a New Jersey native, for failing to register or vote in North Carolina until deciding to seek public office. Warren (See GOP, A-8)

Study Pinpoints Literacy Problem

North Carolina and Pitt County's need for literacy training is even greater than originally suspected because a significant number of the state and county's population above age 15 has not graduated from high school, community college officials say.

In reviewing the 1980 census data for a progress report ordered by the General Assembly, community college officials found that in addition to the 835,620 people over age 25 without an eighth-grade education, 700,000 adults over 24 dropped out without graduating. Still another 201,000 people ages 16 to 24 have no diploma, the Associated Press reported.

In Pitt County, the 1980 census showed that about 12,000 adults age 25 and older had less than an eighth-grade education, Mary C. Outerbridge, director of Adult Basic Education at Pitt Community College, said in a telephone interview this morning.

About 8,300 adults in the county 25 and older have less than a high school education and dropped out from ninth to 12th grade, she said. Further county studies show that about 2,000 people aged 16 to 24, those PCC are specifically trying to address, have less than an eighth grade education and were in an age bracket the census did not address.

"When these young people do drop out ... and enter the work force and find doors closing to them because they lack a high school credential, it falls to the community colleges to help get them back on the right track," former Gov. Bob Scott, now president of the state community college system, said Wednesday in Raleigh.

Scott said the system will launch a public-relations effort to persuade people without diplomas to improve their skills at a community college.

PCC is doing a variety of activities to persuade county residents without diplomas to reach for that goal, Ms. Outerbridge said. "We go to agencies, clubs, organizations, churches and make speeches to these groups. They make referrals to us," and the students are placed into an appropriate program.

There are three programs at PCC to meet residents' needs — Adult Basic Education (ABE), General Equivalency Diploma (GED) and Compensatory Education for mentally retarded adults, she said.

"We have worked very hard to intensify retention, recruitment, assessment and evaluation" of students in these programs so that their goals will be met, Ms. Outerbridge said. "We're doing a lot of follow-up on our dropouts" and have hired recruiters to intensify recruitment.

PCC averages from 900 to 1,000 students per quarter in the illiteracy programs, she said.

"The sheer magnitude of the problem is staggering," Scott said. "North Carolina can ill afford so large a percentage of its work force with less than a high school education."

"Let's be honest about the literacy problem in North Carolina and recognize that it's probably greater than what we thought," he said.

Victim Wins $15 Million Award, But May Not Collect

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Anita Byrd, "imprisoned to a wheelchair" by a 1984 auto wreck involving a drunken driver, has been awarded $15 million in damages, but her attorneys say it is unlikely she will ever collect the money.

The driver of the other car, Marvin Jewel Davis, has not returned to court since appealing his May 1984 conviction on drunken driving charges. The lawsuit was tried without Davis or his wife present after Miss Byrd's attorneys provided affidavits showing that the Davises had been properly notified of the suit and court date.

"It's certainly not a joyous occasion because chances are very, very remote that we will collect any of it," Joe McLeod, a Fayetteville attorney who represented Miss Byrd, said Wednesday. "This is the saddest feeling I have ever had after winning a lawsuit."

Miss Byrd, 26, cried in the courtroom after the verdict was announced while her mother, Lena Byrd, periodically wiped tears from her cheeks.

Miss Byrd is a quadriplegic, paralyzed from the neck down except for some shoulder movement.

Willis Brown, another of her attorneys, said Davis "may not have insurance or assets" to cover the judgment, which court officials said is probably the largest ever awarded in Cumberland County.

Brown said that Davis had minimum liability insurance with coverage limited to $25,000. Miss Byrd's medical bills which are being paid by Medicaid already total more than $317,000, Brown said.

McLeod said he has a Miami, Fla., address for Davis and will take steps to try to enforce the judgment.

Davis, 30, a soldier stationed at Fort Bragg at the time, had a blood alcohol content of .21 percent and was convicted on May 2, 1984, of driving while impaired and driving left of center, according to court records.

The jury awarded Miss Byrd $12 million for actual damages to cover medical expenses, pain and suffering, lost wages and special equipment necessary because of her condition. They awarded an additional $3 million as punitive or punishment damages against Davis.

Schools Holding Job Fair

By The Associated Press

Nineteen school systems in northwestern North Carolina want to get a look at more prospective teachers and want those teachers to get a better look at them.

So the school systems Friday will hold the first regionwide job fair to try to attract teachers to the area.

The fair, which will be held from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Lenoir-Rhyne College in Hickory, will benefit both the teachers and the school systems, said Pat Washam, regional teacher recruiter in Region 7.

Other single school systems have held job fairs, but no other region has held one, Mrs. Washam said. Candidates for teacher and other certified school positions will be able to talk face-to-face, ask questions and be part of informal interviews with personnel administrators from the various school systems.

The basic reason for the job fair is "to have a lot of teachers in one place," Mrs. Washam said. But another reason is to try to prevent a problem before it gets serious — teacher shortages.

"With the Basic Education Program, we're trying to look down the road to have a fix for a problem that may not be quite as serious now," she said.

The Basic Education Program, when fully implemented in 1991-92, will require an additional 11,000 teachers statewide, officials said.

Region 7 has had some problems filling teacher vacancies in particular fields, such as foreign language, Mrs. Washam said. But those problems could worsen once the BEP is fully implemented, and Region 7 hopes to prevent a shortage before it starts, she said.

Second Lejeune Marine Is Killed

By The Associated Press

A 23-year-old Camp Lejeune Marine was accidentally killed in Puerto Rico, marking the second death of a Marine from that base in two days, officials said.

Sgt. Ralph L. Gunnels Jr. of B Company, 2nd Tank Battalion, 2nd Marine Division, suffered severe internal injuries when he was pinned between an off-loading M-60 tank and the well of the ship, the SS Sgt. Matej Koccek, said the spokesman, Maj. Stuart Wagner.

Gunnels was taken to the Navy hospital at Roosevelt Roads, Puerto Rico, and later was flown to the Veterans Administration Hospital in San Juan, Puerto Rico, where he was placed on the critical list. He died of his injuries at about 10 a.m. local time on Tuesday, Wagner said.

The cause of the accident is under investigation.

Another Marine from Camp Lejeune, Ricardo Villahermosa, died of a gunshot wound Panama Monday night.

Villahermosa was part of a 12-Marine security patrol at the tank farm on Monday night and was killed after the patrol split up and a trip flare ignited, causing a crack that sounded like gunfire, said Air Force Col. Ron Sconyers of the U.S. Southern Command in Panama.

"Marines opened fire and the corporal apparently was hit in the stomach by a bullet fired by another Marine. So, it was an accidental shooting," Sconyers said.

The embalmed body of Sultan Suleyman, ruler of the Ottoman Empire for 46 years during the 1500s, was kept sitting behind drawn curtains for three weeks to keep his death a secret until a successor ascended the throne, says National Geographic.

 ren also blasted his rival for contributing money to Democratic gubernatorial nominee Rufus Edmisten in 1984.

A two-term House member and the minority whip, Warren, 30, has campaigned for months and developed solid contacts among party activists but cannot hope to match Carrington's expenditures.

He has lined up support among his fellow GOP legislators and other activists, promising to faithfully support Martin and build the party if elected.

Warren says he would push for stricter regulation of legislative lobbyists, whom the secretary of state registers.

"Lobbyists are paid hundreds of thousands of dollars to influence the state legislature and they don't have to report in any great detail — where the money comes from or how they spend it," he said.

As a young lawyer with experience in corporate and securities law, he says he's in touch with rapid changes in the financial world.

Both candidates say they're better able to defeat Edmisten, whom they view as the likely Democratic nominee although he has three rivals for the nomination.

Carrington says voters will be swayed by his contention that a businessman, "not another politician," would make the best replacement for Eure.

"I firmly believe that Rufus needs more experience in the private sector and I plan on helping him get that experience by defeating him," Carrington said.

Says Warren: "As an advocate of reform with a proven track record, I can present Democrats and independents with a credible alternative to Rufus." He defeated a two-term Democrat for his House seat in 1984 and won again in 1986 despite being outspent three to one.

A potential problem for Warren is that he has clashed with hard-line GOP conservatives. Last year, he drew criticism from some Republican lawmakers for co-sponsoring the bill to make Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday a state holiday. Warren says he's taken strong conservative stands on many issues but could help the GOP by attracting blacks.

 required" to run the office," he said. "You know Mr. Edmisten's name, but you know my record."

Bell has released a set of position papers on topics ranging from economic development to investment advisors. He says state government should take a more active role in regulating capital formation but says legitimate business shouldn't be hampered.

Miller, 34, is a former chairman of the Wake County Democratic Party and was a law clerk to a federal appeals court judge before entering private practice.

He has echoed Bell's criticism of Edmisten but says Bell is devoting more energy to "childish" attacks on Edmisten than to proposing ways to combat hostile takeovers.

"I have discussed this issue from one end of the state to the other," Miller said. "We cannot allow the secretary of state's race to come down to political gamesmanship."

The 1987 Shareholder Protection Act, which helps stockholders block hostile takeovers, won't work unless maintained and enforced by a secretary of state who makes it his top priority, Miller said. Burlington Industries warded off an unwanted buyout last year but paid heavily in debt and layoffs of more than 1,000 workers, he said.

He also says he would be an active party builder, especially among young people who increasingly are registering and voting Republican.

"The Democratic Party needs new blood, new faces and new energy," Miller said. "We will not bring new people into our party ... by offering the same candidates year after year, first for one office, then for another."

In 1982, a Washington jury found John Hinckley Jr. innocent by reason of insanity of charges of shooting President Reagan and three others the previous year.

Hepatitis

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Three more cases of hepatitis-A have been confirmed at a Davidson County elementary school since 121 students and 31 adults received gamma-globulin vaccines two weeks ago, county health officials said Tuesday.

Diane Crouse, supervisor of Davidson County public health nurses, said the new cases — including one confirmed this week — bring to seven the number of Southwood Elementary School pupils who have contracted the virus.

Officials say they will know within two weeks whether the virus has run its course. The first symptoms of the first case appeared March 14, Crouse said, and the virus usually has a 30-day incubation period.

Recount

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — A recount of the March 8 referendum in which voters approved consolidation of Robeson County's five school systems showed few discrepancies from the original vote count, county officials said Wednesday.

There was a discrepancy of about 20 votes, Ray Revels, the county's elections supervisor, said Wednesday night. The recount will not affect the outcome of the election, but it does not necessarily resolve all the disputes, Revels said.

Dumpster Injury

RALEIGH (AP) — A street person sleeping in a large downtown garbage container was injured Wednesday when a Raleigh city sanitation crew emptied it into their truck, officials said.

Rubin Lopez got caught in the upraised arms of the garbage truck and fell to the ground after the waste bin had been emptied, authorities said. The driver of the truck said he had not noticed Lopez and was alerted by employees in a nearby building.

Watkins said Lopez complained of an injured leg after the fall. Lopez was taken to Wake Medical Center for treatment, and was later released, said Raleigh police officer E.H. Mizelle.

Bible Poll

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Blacks, low-income North Carolinians and those with relatively little education are more likely to believe in the accuracy of the Bible than others, according to a poll by journalism students at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

When 768 respondents were asked, "Do you think that everything in the Bible is literally true, or that it contains some human errors," almost 56 percent said the Bible is literally true. Thirty-five percent said it contains errors, while 1 percent said it was just a book and 8 percent expressed no opinion.

Seventy-five percent of blacks polled said they believe the Bible is literally true, compared with 51 percent of white respondents. Seventy percent of those who had not gone to college said the Bible is accurate, compared with 35 percent of the college-educated respondents.

In addition, as the household income level increased, the tendency to believe the Bible decreased. Sixty-five percent of those with incomes of less than $20,000 a year believe in the Bible's accuracy. The percentage declined until it reached 27 percent for incomes above $60,000.

Developer Who Pays Salary Of Meese's Wife Granted $50 Million Lease Renewal

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN and JOAN MOWER
Associated Press Writers

WASHINGTON (AP) — A real estate developer whose family pays for the salary of Attorney General Edwin Meese's wife, Ursula, was granted a $50 million lease renewal on a building the government said risked the health and safety of Justice Department workers.

Thirteen days after obtaining the new lease, the developer and his partners sold the building for $22.6 million more than they had paid for it two years earlier — a 60 percent profit, according to District of Columbia land records.

The developer, Howard S. Bender, was the principal owner of the building in late 1985 when the Bender Foundation, his family's tax-exempt philanthropy, donated $120,000 to the Multiple Sclerosis Society to hire Ursula Meese at $40,000-a-year for three years, the society's lawyer said.

The lease — a renewal at more than three times the previous rent — was signed even though the landlord had not cleaned up an air system environmental inspectors said was a health hazard that could explain above-average sickness there, according to government documents.

And the lease was signed even though the easy public access required by another tenant "jeopardizes (Justice's) ability to provide adequate security ... and increases the opportunity for sabotage and other covert activities," a government document said.

An attorney for the Meeses denies any wrongdoing on their part in the transactions, but acknowledges that the Benders and Meeses know each other. The Benders refuse to discuss the matter. A key government official said Meese played no role in the real estate decision.

But the MS society's records on Mrs. Meese's job have been subpoenaed by independent counsel James McKay as part of his investigation into whether Meese committed federal crimes, according to James Bierbower, attorney for the MS Society.

Federal law makes it a felony for a federal official to take any governmental action that would affect the financial status of his spouse. Further, a presidential order forbids federal officials from conduct that might give the appearance of a conflict of interest, even where one does not exist.

The seven-story Chester Arthur Building on the rundown fringe of downtown Washington houses the headquarters of the Justice Department's Immigration and Naturalization Service.

In March 1985, Bender, vice president of the Bender Foundation, and other investors acquired the building at an apparently inauspicious moment in its history.

Public records show that Bender and his associates paid $37.5 million — nearly twice the assessed value — for the building.

At the time, the building's most valuable asset was the federal lease, which was due to expire within a year and would be put up for bids by other landlords.

In fact, the federal government had already taken steps to move out.

On Aug. 8, 1984, Congress had approved a Reagan administration plan, pushed by then-Attorney General William French Smith, to begin moving some federal offices out of the building. The plan called for a new lease there in 1986 for only 63 percent of the space the government had before.

However, three months after the Bender partnership bought the building, the administration told Congress that its plans had changed dramatically.

In June 1985, the General Services Administration — the government's housekeeping agency — notified Congress it wanted to keep the immigration service in the full 264,000 square feet at Chester Arthur.

That same month, immigration officials complained of illnesses among INS employees apparently caused by the building's air system.

On Sept. 26, 1985, assistant immigration commissioner James Kennedy formally requested an environmental inspection from the General Services Administration.

Against this background, in the fall of 1985, the Benders made two separate efforts to get Mrs. Meese on a payroll.

First, they tried to interest Mrs. Meese in a public affairs job at their radio station, WWDC, which has a rock-and-roll format, but Mrs. Meese declined, MS attorney Bierbower said.

Then, in October 1985, the Bender Foundation indicated it would contribute $120,000 to the MS society for a development director, Bierbower said.

"There was no question that MS had in mind that Ursula would become the development director" at the time the Bender Foundation put up the money for the position, Bierbower said. "We were after Ursula Meese." She had previously worked there as a volunteer.

Howard Bender's wife, Sondra, is president of the family foundation and a member of the MS Society board.

Mrs. Meese, 56, a former probation officer in Oakland, Calif., has done mostly volunteer work since coming to Washington with her husband in 1981. She also has worked as the paid executive director of the William Moss Institute, a foundation to study the future.

Meanwhile, the Chester Arthur lease negotiations dragged on during 1986. Finally, on May 14, 1987, after the Bender partnership promised to clean up the air system, the government signed a new lease for 259,000 square feet.

The 10-year lease was worth $50 million. On May 27, the Bender partnership sold the building for $60.1 million cash, public records show.

One of the new owners, asking not to be identified by name, said the new lease "was clearly one of the most desirable things from our standpoint."

Bender family members referred all questions to attorney Seymour Glazer, who said, "I'm not going to answer your questions. I have no comment."

James Rocap, an attorney for the Meeses, denied the attorney general played any role in the decision to renew the lease. "He was aware that the lease was up and so on, but that's it. He had no involvement in the lease matter in any substantive way. There is no indication that the Meeses had anything to do with his (Bender's) making $22 million."

Texas Air Faces Federal Investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Transportation Department says concerns about the economic health of Texas Air Corp. prompted its investigation into the management and finances of the country's largest airline company.

Transportation Secretary Jim Burnley announced the investigation Wednesday as the Federal Aviation Administration also disclosed a proposed $823,000 fine against a Texas Air subsidiary, Eastern Airlines, and a separate safety probe of the Miami-based carrier.

Texas Air called both investigations unwarranted and blamed them on pressure from union leaders who "have mounted a continuing campaign of distortion and lies" about safety at both Eastern and another subsidiary, Continental Airlines.

Continental is the country's fourth largest airline, while Eastern is the sixth largest. Together they carry nearly 20 percent of the nation's air traffic.

Eastern has for months been embroiled in a bitter confrontation with its labor unions, which are resisting management's call for significant contract concessions and which accused Texas Air of syphoning off the most profitable parts of the airline.

In announcing the two-pronged action against Texas Air and its airline subsidiaries, Burnley cited evidence in recent company filings to the Securities and Exchange Commission that both Eastern and Continental "are under substantial, increasing financial pressure."

The department wants to determine if Texas Air and its management are "fit, willing and able" to carry commercial air traffic, Burnley said at a news conference also attended by FAA Administrator Allan McArdor.

McArdor said the new FAA safety review of Eastern was being conducted because of concern about the "continuing pattern of fines, safety violations and apparent insensitivity of some of Eastern's officials" to FAA safety regulations.

The FAA inspection would include examination of each of Eastern's 267 aircraft over the next 30 days.

The $823,000 civil penalty against Eastern comes 14 months after Eastern agreed to pay $9.5 million in penalties because of earlier safety infractions. FAA officials said the latest fine stems from record keeping and maintenance infractions similar to those found in the earlier action.

EPA Rules Out New Standard

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency today declined to establish a new clean air standard to protect asthmatics from peak exposures to sulfur dioxide that might last only a few minutes.

Those exposures might occur around sources that meet all current standards based on longer measurement times, sources like coal-burning power plants, smelters and factory boilers.

A burst of emissions from a plant, or even rare wind patterns, might cause people living nearby to face high concentrations briefly.

Environmentalists denounced the decision embodied in a draft affirmation of current standards.

"There is a whole slew of evidence" accumulated since 1980 that many asthmatics are not being protected by current standards, said David Doniger of the Natural Resources Defense Council, claiming that "for this administration the wishes of the utility industry always come first."

Bob Yuhnke of the Environmental Defense Fund said his organization would try to get a court to order a short-term standard established.

The Edison Electric Institute, the principal trade association for utilities, had closed for the day when EPA made today's announcement made available late Wednesday. The institute has said a stringent short-term standard could be every bit as costly as an acid rain control program, perhaps $5 billion a year.

Reagan Weary Of 'Kiss And Tell' Books

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan insists that he was never aware his spokesman concocted quotes for him and says he is getting tired of "kiss-and-tell books" written by his former aides.

Reagan, answering questions at a meeting of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, also said Jesse Jackson's policies have not been scrutinized adequately in the Democratic presidential race because it might be "misinterpreted into some kind of racial attack."

In a wide-ranging question-and-answer session on Wednesday, the president commented for the first time on two issues — the sensitive topic of race in the 1988 presidential race and the controversy over the new book by his former spokesman, Larry Speakes.

Speakes, in his book "Speaking Out," reveals that he twice gave quotes to the press corps claiming the words were Reagan's when in fact they were not. One incident occurred after the downing of a Korean Air Lines jet in 1983, and the other came during the 1985 Geneva summit between Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

When the story surfaced earlier this week, Reagan aides described the president as angry to learn of the deception. Speakes, however, said in subsequent interviews that Reagan knew at the time of the practice and did not object.

On Wednesday, Reagan said, "I was not aware of that and just learned it recently, as all the rest of you did, and I can tell you right now that I have no affection for these kiss-and-tell books that are being written, and I find it entirely fiction."

Reagan did not directly answer the question of whether he approved of the practice or would allow it to continue. His current spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, has condemned the practice.

Reagan's reference to "kiss-and-tell" books evidently refers not only to Speakes' book, but to "Behind the Scenes," written by his former deputy chief of staff, Michael K. Deaver, and a forthcoming volume by former chief of staff Donald T. Regan.

The president also was asked about Speakes' contention that he "does not read many newspapers thoroughly."

"Well, I begin with the comics," Reagan said, confirming part of Speakes' account and drawing a laugh from his audience in the process.

The president said that was "a lifetime habit," and that he then turns to the editorial pages. He said he also looks through news clippings prepared by his staff because of the volume of papers published outside of Washington.

"But he's wrong when he implies that I don't read the papers. Yes, I do," Reagan said.

General Says Army Tank Armor Inadequate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army's new tank plating which uses depleted uranium may not curb the large Soviet advantage in the race to develop the best armor and the deadliest way of attacking those defenses, according to an Army armor specialist.

"It's too early to tell how effective it is," retired Army Gen. Donn Starry told reporters.

Starry specialized in armor systems before he retired last year as commander of the Army's Training and Doctrine Command, where he was responsible for helping develop tank warfare doctrine.

The new U.S. armor was unveiled last month by Army officials, who said it would be "a significant enhancement" of U.S. capabilities for the M-1A1 Abrams, the main U.S. battle tank. A statement by the service said the new armor would "allow the Abrams to meet the anticipated threat well into the 1990s."

Speaking to a Senate Armed Services subcommittee Wednesday, Starry offered an extremely negative assessment of the U.S.-Soviet balance in armor and anti-armor weapons.

None of the top U.S. anti-tank weapons is likely to work against front-line Soviet tanks because the Soviets have developed innovative armor, Starry told the conventional forces subcommittee.

The Soviets have a roughly 3-1 advantage in tanks stationed in western Europe, but Pentagon officials have argued that many of the Soviet weapons are far older and thus likely to be less effective than Western tanks.

In addition, the Army and other NATO nations have stockpiled thousands of anti-tank missiles, such as the Dragon, several types of TOWs and the Hellfire.

None of them would work, Starry said, because the Soviets have developed reactive armor that uses both a ceramic cover and a series of "applique boxes." The latter, developed by the Israelis a decade ago, are specially designed boxes containing explosives which blow up when hit by an incoming explosive. The explosion of the box dissipates and dilutes the force of the incoming weapon.

"The unhappy fact is that tanks with reactive armor on top of built-in glass composite or ceramic laminate armor will quite likely defeat the warheads of all deployed" weapons used by Western forces, he said.

FmHA Cuts Farm Debt

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some $8.8 billion in lingering debt owed by agricultural producers will be wiped from the books of the Farmers Home Administration under a measure approved by lawmakers last year, the agency's administrator says.

"It is true that we are probably writing off upwards of $8 billion to $9 billion over the next couple of years and the agricultural credit act is responsible for a substantial portion of that," FmHA Administrator Vance Clark told a Senate Appropriations panel Wednesday.

Under provisions of the Farm Credit Act approved last year, FmHA will "write down," or defer payments, on $2.1 billion in debt owed by farmers who will be restored to profitability as a result, the agency said.

Eventually, it said, the government may still be able to recover some of that money.

But it said would simply write off $6.7 billion in non-performing loans to farmers who even with such help will not be able to turn a profit.

Last year's legislation required the government to take such actions if they would be less expensive for the taxpayers than foreclosure.

Clark's disclosure followed an unconfirmed report last month that the government most likely would write off $7 billion in FmHA loans.

Democrats Seek Hollywood Glitter For '88 Convention

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hollywood will add its touch to the ready-made theater of the Democratic National Convention this summer, but producers say the professional flourishes will be tasteful and relevant.

The Democratic National Convention Committee hired the entertainment production company of Smith-Hemion to produce and stage the Atlanta convention — believed to be the first time the Democrats have brought in theatrical producers to stage their convention.

Smith-Hemion has a history of staging "events" and has earned 20 Emmy awards over the years for its television extravaganzas, said partner Gary Smith.

Festivities like the Liberty Weekend celebration in Washington, D.C., television's "We the People 200" featuring Walter Cronkite, and Disneyland's 25th anniversary party were produced by the company.

Smith-Hemion will work with the media, create "the look" of the arena, design the podium, oversee the sound and use big screens to provide visual elements that have been pre-taped in support of the speeches, Smith explained.

"Even in a convention there is room for relevant entertainment — tasteful and relevant," he said, adding that in his opinion a convention should be more than a series of speeches.

The agenda of the convention is up to the Democrats, he emphasized, but the producers will supply "things that are emotionally effective or emotionally motivated and good information that is visually enhanced."

Smith said it was too early to identify entertainers or special effects to be used during the convention. Those things will be part of the it, he said, "but the Democrats have not gone into show business. The most important priority is the need to maintain their agenda."

Smith-Hemion's team of about 100 people started working six weeks ago and will continue working until the convention is staged July 18-21 in The Omni.

Billionaire, Wife Face Tax Charges

NEW YORK (AP) — Billionaire developer Harry Helmsley and his wife, Leona, the self-styled hotel queen, surrendered today at the office of New York's state attorney general to face tax evasion charges.

The Helmsleys would be taken to police headquarters for booking, then arraigned at Manhattan Criminal Court, said Lanie Accles, a spokeswoman for Attorney General Robert Abrams.

The couple has denied the charges, with their lawyer, Stephen Kaufman, saying they actually pay more taxes than nearly anyone in the nation.

A law enforcement source said Wednesday that the Helmsleys were indicted "several days ago" on federal and state income tax evasion charges.

Helmsley, 80, and his 68-year-old wife are one of the world's wealthiest couples. Their holdings, including the Empire State Building and the Helmsley Palace Hotel, are worth an estimated $5 billion.

Any such charge against the Helmsleys is "unfounded, unfair and unjust," Kaufman said in a two-page statement Wednesday.

"The Helmsleys have paid more taxes to the government over the years than practically any other individual in this city or country," Kaufman said. "In the last five years alone they have paid more than $250 million in taxes."

The Helmsleys are accused of disguising millions of dollars in renovation costs on their Greenwich, Conn., mansion as business expenses, the law enforcement source told The Associated Press, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The renovation bills on the vast estate allegedly were written off as tax deductions; the expected charges were income tax evasion and falsifying business records, the source said.

The offices of the state attorney general and U.S. attorney refused comment on the report.

The Daily News, quoting unidentified sources close to the defense, reported Wednesday that Frank Turco, Mrs. Helmsley's former top aide, and Joseph Licari, the couple's former financial manager, were expected to be indicted today.

U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani and state Attorney General Robert Abrams mounted a joint investigation into the Helmsleys' taxes 18 months ago.

WONDER WORM — Robyn Holmes of Korumburra, Australia, is draped by three giant Gippsland earthworms. The worms make a gurgling sound, similar to that of a bathtub draining, when they burrow. They grow up to 12 feet long, have 16 hearts and are both male and female. (AP Laserphoto)

Town Gets Help In Saving Worms

By RICHARD BILL
Associated Press Writer

KORUMBURRA, Australia (AP) — The federal government has chipped in $11,000 to help save the 12-foot, gurgling earthworms that transformed Korumburra from a near ghost town to a bustling tourist attraction.

Several years ago, Korumburra decided to promote the invertebrate, which has 16 hearts and is a hermaphrodite, meaning it is both male and female.

The great Gippsland gurgling earthworm is so named because of the sucking and gurgling noises it makes when it burrows, sounding like a bathtub draining water. Townfolk credit the earthworm, whose scientific name is Megascolides australis, for helping turn their fortunes around.

An annual worm festival called Karmai, after the aboriginal word for giant earthworm, is held each March. It celebrates the worm with parades, carnivals and even an earthworm queen.

Recently, however, intensive farming in the worm's small habitat has raised fears the worms' days are numbered.

Korumburra is in Gippsland, an area of the southeast state of Victoria that once was covered by a rain forest where the worms thrived. Today, that habitat has been reduced to an area of 100 square miles around the Bass River.

Settlers, who thought the worms were snakes, cleared Gippsland's rain forest with its 300-foot trees in the 1880s to make room for dairy farming and cattle raising.

Although not officially protected, the earthworm is now listed as endangered, according to worm expert Georgina Hickey of the Australian Museum.

Federal Environment Minister Graham Richardson announced an $11,000 save-the-worm grant last week as part of a $383,000 package to study other threatened species in Victoria, such as the koala bear and the fairy penguin. Korumburra began exploiting the earthworm as a tourist attraction in 1977 after the local coal mine went bust, a butter plant shut down and young people began heading to Melbourne, 75 miles away, in search of jobs.

"The worm saved the town," said Mark Holmes, on whose property most of the worms are found. "The worms helped people have an identity. I don't know if they're proud of what they've got but we've got something unique. We've got a thing that is dropping off the face of the earth."

Promoting the giant worms wasn't easy, local tourist official Judith Nicholl admits. "Of all things in the world, how do you promote a worm?" she told a recent visitor. "It started out as a fun thing but now it's very serious. Now when visitors arrive the first thing they ask is 'Where is the worm?'"

Israel Marks Holocaust Day

JERUSALEM (AP) — Rush hour traffic came to a two-minute standstill today as the wail of air raid sirens opened Israel's annual memorial day for the 6 million European Jews slain by the Nazis in World War II.

The nation's radio stations played melancholy tunes throughout the day. Restaurants and houses of entertainment were shut by law for 24 hours ending at sundown today.

More than 100 memorial ceremonies were scheduled throughout the country.

Holocaust Day, officially called Martyrs and Heroes Remembrance Day, is commemorated on the anniversary of the start of the Warsaw Ghetto uprising of 1943, when Polish Jews used pistols to fight Nazis in tanks.

This year, the commemoration comes amidst a four-month spate of anti-Israeli violence in the occupied territories that has claimed the lives of 144 Palestinians and two Israelis.

The conflict played a prominent role in an emotional speech given by Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir at a memorial ceremony at Jerusalem's Yad Vashem monument Wednesday night.

"We again face the phenomenon of eternal hatred for the eternal people ... When will the nations learn that they can never overcome us and decide to leave us alone," Shamir said.

"Even today when we dwell in our own land, evil-hearted and unfeeling people shoot poison arrows at our youngsters and they wander the countryside, turning it into a valley of death," he added.

His statement was seen as an allusion to the killing of a teen-aged Jewish settler during a clash in the West Bank village of Beita last week as well as other attacks against Israelis in the occupied areas.

A Foreign Ministry official said Israel would seek clarifications from Poland today about reports a government spokesman in Warsaw criticized Israel's tactics in the occupied territories and linked it to the Holocaust.

China's Premier Conducts Rare TV News Conference

By DAVID HOLLEY
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Conference

BEIJING — Newly confirmed Premier Li Peng submitted himself to pointed questioning from foreign and Chinese reporters Wednesday in a televised news conference, providing Chinese viewers with a rare look at how top political leaders in the West often are grilled.

Li's answers, even to a string of potentially embarrassing queries, generally were cautious and broke little new ground. Maintaining his composure and frequently displaying a pleasant smile, Li denied allegations that he had deep policy disagreements with General Secretary Zhao Ziyang, that he was pro-Soviet and that he got his new job because of his close ties to the late Premier Chou En-lai.

In one of his most spirited answers, Li insisted that although Chou and his wife, Deng Yingchao, helped him when he was a child, it was inaccurate to consider him their adopted son. His links to Chou, who died in 1976, had nothing to do with his winning the premiership, he added.

Li, who had been acting premier since November, was confirmed as premier during the 20-day annual session of the National People's Congress that concluded a few hours before the news conference.

In response to the question about alleged disagreements with Zhao, who heads the Chinese Communist Party, Li declared that they had no policy differences.

He added, "Some foreign press expressed the view that Zhao Ziyang favors reform and the open policy, while I favor stabilizing the economy. In so doing, they try to set the two things against each other. As a matter of fact, this is a misunderstanding. The two constitute an entirety and are inseparable."

Largely because Li studied in the Soviet Union, some observers also have labeled him pro-Soviet.

But Li denied that studying in a country necessarily influences a person to lean toward that country politically.

"If you follow that kind of logic, you may think that China will have a pro-United States government in 20 or 30 years, because it now has some 20,000 students in the United States," he said. "The people who cherish that type of hope will find their hopes dashed, because Chinese students studying abroad, first and foremost, are patriots."

About one third of Li's Cabinet members also have studied in the Soviet Union or Eastern Europe.

Li declined to answer a few questions, including one about his experiences during the ultraleftist Cultural Revolution of 1966-76. Li, who was protected by Chou and was in charge of ensuring Beijing's electric power supply, was never attacked and removed from his position in the way that most of China's current leaders were in this period. He said that discussing the subject would take too much time and urged his questioner to read biographical materials about him.

U.S. Firms Hold Up Tariffs To Panama

L.A. Times-Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Major U.S. corporations doing business in Panama have stopped paying taxes and fees to the government of Panamanian military leader Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, a senior administration official confirmed Wednesday. But, at the same time, they have stepped up their pressure on the administration to make exceptions to tough new economic sanctions ordered by President Reagan last week.

"Every company tells a different hard-luck story," said one Department of the Treasury official, who noted that all the major companies had been in touch with the government to voice concerns. "We have had hundreds of calls per day, it seems."

But despite the urgency with which the sanctions were announced last week, the administration will not issue new regulations governing their implementation this week, prompting several companies to question privately whether the administration is purposely dragging its feet.

"Once there are regulations, there will be lawyers looking for loopholes," said an executive for one major U.S. corporation with sales offices in Panama. "As long as it's just the executive order, our hands are tied. We can't pay anything."

There are some indications, however, that the administration may yield ground on restrictions against paying for services from the state-owned utilities or postal service. "These are marginal amounts we are talking about," said one official, who asked to remain anonymous and acknowledged that no service had been cut off to date by Noriega because of non-payment.

Ex-Attorney General Represents Libyan Raid Victims

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Attorney General Ramsey Clark is representing the survivors of 15 Libyans killed during the U.S. bombing raid of Libya two years ago in a civil suit for damages against the Reagan administration.

Clark, who has been criticized in the past for dealing with nations hostile to the United States, filed the lawsuit Wednesday to collect unspecified damages for the deaths, property damage and injuries to 40 other Libyans.

The suit, filed in U.S. District Court, charged that the April 14, 1986 bombing violated "settled principles of international law" in the United Nations Charter and numerous treaties and declarations.

It charged the Reagan administration purposely hid the real purpose of the bombing — which the suit said was to kill Libyan leader Moammar Ghaddafi and to "terrorize Libyans by inflicting injury upon the civilian population in order to undermine support" for his leader.

President Reagan said the raid was in retaliation for the anti-American attacks authorized by Ghaddafi, including the bombing of a West Berlin discotheque frequented by U.S. servicemen that killed two and injured 150 others.

The lawsuit charged that top government officials, including President Reagan, "are guilty of conduct constituting clear violations of settled principles of international law prohibiting the use of force by a state against the territorial integrity of political independence of another state."

Among the victims of the bombing raid was a 3-month-old girl who died when hit by shrapnel while asleep in her home in Benghazi. The child's 38-year-old father was also killed by shrapnel, according to the complaint.

The suit, filed under the Alien Tort Statute and the Federal Tort Claims Act, said claims for compensation by the victims or their survivors were rejected last October by the Air Force.

The suit named Reagan individually and in his capacity as commander in chief of U.S. armed forces.

Hijackers, Algerians Break Off Negotiations To Free Hostages

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — Negotiations to free 36 hostages aboard a hijacked Kuwaiti jumbo jet broke off today, officials said.

The Kuwaiti Airways Boeing 747 was commandeered April 5 on a Bangkok-Kuwait flight with 112 people aboard. It was first diverted to Mashhad, Iran, where 57 people were freed. It went on to Cyprus, where the two hostages were killed and 13 released, and flew to Algiers on Tuesday.

The Arab hijackers, thought to number about eight, are armed with grenades and guns and have threatened to blow up the plane and kill their hostages.

The hijackers are demanding the release of 17 pro-Iranian extremists imprisoned on terrorism convictions in Kuwait. Kuwaiti officials refuse to free them.

A Cypriot official said that the jet was refueled and allowed to leave Cyprus only after Algeria gave assurances that the remaining passengers would be freed on arrival there.

"Our objective all along was the safe release of the hostages. We believed we had succeeded in this when the hijackers released ... hostages here, with the rest to be freed in Algiers, according to the Algerian assurance," government spokesman Akis Fantis said.

The 32 passengers and four crew members held aboard the plane are believed to be all Arabs.

The Algerian news agency said today that talks between the hijackers and Kuwaiti officials had reached an impasse.

This morning, the blue-and-white plane was moved to the end of a runway at Houari Boumediene airport to permit the safe landing of a plane carrying Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda, who arrived on a state visit.

Algerian President Chadli Bendjedid, before greeting Kaunda, met briefly with Mohammed Al-Osaimi, deputy foreign minister of Kuwait.

The president was given a message from Kuwaiti Emir Shiek Jabar Al-Ahmad Al-Sabah, according to the British Broadcasting Corp. in London. No details were provided.

A newspaper in Abu Dhabi said today that an agreement had been reached for the release of the Kuwaiti hostages.

Al-Ittihad, quoting unidentified diplomatic sources in Larnaca, said "an agreement was signed by hijackers, Kuwaiti, Palestinian and Algerian officials, for releasing passengers and hijackers in Algeria in exchange for reducing sentences against the 17 persons in Kuwait jails."

Three members of Kuwait's large royal family are among the hostages inside the plane.

Al-Ittihad quoted Samir Abu Ghazala, a PLO representative in Cyprus, as saying he believed the hijackers would keep the royal family members as "a winning card."

It was not clear exactly why the talks had been suspended or when they would resume. A ranking Algerian official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Kuwait's "intransigence" had created the standstill.

Gorbachev Says Trade Available

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet Communist Party General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev told American businessmen his ambitious program of economic and social reform gives the superpowers an opportunity to develop a "new system" of mutual trade ties.

Gorbachev played host at the Kremlin Wednesday night to about 400 visiting American business leaders attending the 10th annual meeting of the U.S.-U.S.S.R. Trade and Economic Council. His remarks were reported by the official Tass news agency.

At the meeting, seven major U.S. companies said Wednesday they've joined forces with the Soviets to produce everything from crackers to computer disks in a consortium that will market capitalist products in a socialist economy.

In addition, U.S. industrialist Armand Hammer announced a joint venture under which he will build two plastics factories in the Ukraine.

Gorbachev told his American guests, including Commerce Secretary C. William Verity, that the United States and Soviet Union "can become mutually supplementary components of the world economy in the 21st century."

He contended, however, that some Americans still want to use economic relations as a lever to interfere in Soviet domestic affairs.

"There are and will be serious differences between our countries," Gorbachev said. "But the times demand that these differences not be a source of enmity and begin being used, insofar as this is possible, as a stimulus to mutually advantageous competition."

Verity and a group of about 400 American business leaders are in Moscow this week for meetings with Gorbachev and other officials about the possibility of expanding trade between the superpowers.

Several agreements have been announced already, and the businessmen say the climate for broader cooperation has warmed considerably in recent months.

James H. Giffen, president of the new American Trade Consortium involving the seven companies, said this week's activity could lead to an unprecedented volume of U.S.-Soviet trade.

Giffen, who also is president of The Mercator Corp., attributed the trade successes to "the improved political atmosphere" following Gorbachev's visit to the United States in December.

Training Long For Special Olympics

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

All over Pitt County for many months Special Olympics athletes have been in training for tomorrow's Special Olympics Spring Games.

Special Olympics are athletic events held each year in many communities throughout the world especially for mentally and/or physically handicapped people. Pitt County's approximately 500 participants range from three-year-olds to adult age.

The students in Bonnie Robbins' special education class at Aycock Junior High School are a few of the many who have long practiced for and looked forward to the Pitt County games. They have had practice sessions every Monday and Wednesday for the past three months with an eye toward tomorrow's track and field events to be held on the playing field of their school — if it doesn't rain drastically. If it does, the games will be rescheduled for April 22 at Aycock School.

Last fall, these same students practiced, getting ready for the Run, Dribble and Shoot portion of the Special Olympics held in late autumn.

Along with their teacher and her teaching assistants, Gail Smith and Charles Parker, the students have been assisted in their practice by three Special Olympics-trained volunteer coaches from East Carolina University, Mark Bordeaux, Cindy Carden, and Sarah Taylor.

Most of the Special Olympics volunteer coaches are physical education and leisure systems majors at East Carolina University. They were trained in a special workshop conducted by the Greenville Parks and Recreation Department which sponsors the events.

Every student in Ms. Robbins' class will participate in at least one track (running or walking) event and one field (broad jump, softball throw, or the like) event. Some of the relayers will take part in three. There will be some special developmental events for multi-handicapped participants.

There are winners in Special Olympics, but every participant is heartily recognized and honored for his participation in these games. Approximately the same number of volunteers as participants take part and every participant is given lots of attention and praise, Connie Sappenfield, the area coordinator, said.

Some of the first-, second- and third-place winners will be selected to go on to the State Special Olympics to be held May 13-15 in Chapel Hill. An international competition is held only every four years — the next in 1991.

Tomorrow's games start at 9:30 a.m. with a carrying and lighting of the torch and a march of the athletes. Competition lasts from 10 a.m. to about 2 p.m.

RELAY — Relayers Gabriel Carrasco, Michael Karachun and Angela Wilson prepare for tomorrow's competition. Coach Cindy Carden assists them.

Man Longs For Good Old Days

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I saw you on the Phil Donahue show and ended up in a big fight. You read from a book you had written in 1962. In it you said that wives should manage to live on what their husbands earn, because a career woman is a potentially good candidate for divorce. You also said that when a woman becomes financially independent, she neglects her husband and children, and her marriage falls apart — or words to that effect.

Then you said, "Oh, isn't that awful? I can't believe I wrote that!"

I told my wife that you were right on in 1962, Abby. She said I was full of it.

I know it's not possible to turn back the clock, but here's one man who wishes we could. Marriages were much healthier when women stayed home and took care of their husbands and raised their own kids. — ONE MAN'S OPINION

DEAR ONE: Judging from my mail after the Donahue show, a surprising number of men — and women, too — agree with you.

I maintain, however, that the days when men controlled women by keeping them poor, pregnant and barefoot are gone forever — thank the good Lord.

If a woman chooses to stay home and live on what her husband can provide, fine. But today, because more women can support themselves, they have a choice. I stand my ground, and rest my case.

DEAR ABBY: Since when is it against the law to cook fish? Fish is highly recommended by health experts. Eating large amounts of fish that are rich in specific polyunsaturated oils appears to reduce the chances of blood platelet cells sticking together, thereby reducing the chance of heart attack.

Are people who live in "affluent condos" not supposed to cook strong-smelling foods? How about cabbage, mustard and turnip greens, and brussels sprouts?

I hope you hear from plenty of other fish lovers. — FISH LOVER IN TACOMA

Children Want Peaceful World

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

There are about 2 million children in this country under the age of 12, and do you know what worries them most? They're worried a nuclear war may keep them from turning into teen-agers.

They don't talk about it a lot, but an unsettling 44 percent of them list it as their No. 1 concern. It's ironic how we dedicate our lives to preparing our children for their future. We educate them, give them values to live by, have them brush after every meal, and yet we haven't told them if they HAVE a future.

When did they lose their innocence and begin to feel vulnerable? Probably the first time they saw the 6 o'clock news flash on the TV screen. When they saw children in Belfast hiding in doorways from gunfire ... children in Beirut launching stones at their enemy ... children of Johannesburg mourning their dead ... and children in Afghanistan numbed by the violence going on around them. This wasn't a miniseries. This was reality. And if it was reality, where did they fit in all of this? Would they be like these children who cried in terror but were never heard? Had these children on television at some time in their lives sat in comfortable living rooms and watched helplessly as their country geared up for war?

Adults bring experience to worldwide crises. Many, at one time or another, have been through the threats, the talks, the declarations that never materialize. They've seen the dance of diplomacy, the arguments over the size of the peace table, the political muscle flex, the lead story on the news of skirmishes in a country the size of a coffee table. They are able to put it in perspective.

But children have no perspective. It hasn't developed yet. All they know is that every Miss America for the last 15 years has set world peace as her goal, and it hasn't happened yet. And that every Christmas every leader in the world appears on television and says, "I want peace," but obviously someone is lying because it hasn't happened.

I was 14 years old on the day Pearl Harbor was bombed. I sat in the gym at school and listened to President Roosevelt announce that we were at war. I fully expected him to add that everyone should clean out his or her locker and go home and stay there. I expected the streets would be empty, and eventually there would be a dull roar in the sky and planes would be dropping bombs. I'll bet I felt the same as every other child in the world.

The poll also found that 75 percent of the children thought that the United States and the Soviet Union would be friends by the year 2006, and there would be peace. We have 18 years either to mean it ... or explain it.

Two Incomes May Cause Problems

Homemaker's Haven
Evelyn Spangler

Having two incomes in one family sounds positively wonderful. All that money. Just think of the things you can do with all that money. And yet, let's face it. Money management problems can arise when both spouses are employed.

For it seems those spending and saving decisions aren't automatic. Who pays for what? Should there be separate checking and saving accounts? What about savings?

Marriage is a partnership, and that means money management decisions should be satisfactory to both partners.

Two-income couples may choose to pool their financial resources. Or they might put part of each paycheck into a joint checking account earmarked for routine household expenses. Part of both paychecks may also go into a joint savings account. This account might be used for building an emergency reserve, a down payment for a house or car, or an education "nest egg."

In addition, each spouse may wish to have a separate account for personal and work-related expenses. Some people like the independence of having some money — if only a few dollars — that they can spend without answering to another person.

If one spouse leaves the work force, money management adjustments will have to be made. Some couples prepare for this by choosing to live on one salary and earmarking the other for special purposes.

Which money management technique a couple chooses is of secondary importance. What's most important is to select a method that's mutually agreeable. Then review your financial situation regularly, set financial goals jointly and make changes as needed.

Stop by the Agricultural Extension Service for a copy of the home study course "The Two Paycheck Family."

It's hard to say "no" when a friend or relative asks you to loan him some money. But these transactions may have their pitfalls.

The borrower may have other credit obligations with higher interest rates and the possibility of a debt collector at the door. So he'll have to pay those first.

If he can't pay the loan back, he may become so guilt-ridden that the relationship may become strained. Then he's likely to not pay you at all.

ule and have it in writing. Then if the person defaults, you'll have the documentation you need to claim a nonbusiness bad debt as an income tax deduction.

An alternative: treat the loan as a gift.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market took a sharp drop today, fanned with the surprise news of an increase in the nation's trade deficit.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks tumbled 37.30 points to 2,069.79 in the first half hour of trading.

Losers swamped gainers by more than 12 to 1 in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 91 up, 1,160 down and 203 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 32.71 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Before the market opened the Commerce Department reported that the nation's trade deficit widened to $13.83 billion in February from $12.44 billion the month before.

The dollar dropped sharply in foreign exchange markets on the news, and U.S. credit markets also took the news badly.

Prices of long-term Treasury bonds fell about $15 for each $1,000 in face value, putting their yields in the 8.85-8.9 percent range. Just a few weeks ago government bond yields got as low as about 8.3 percent.

Trade Gap Broadens

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. trade deficit widened dramatically in February to $13.8 billion, its biggest shortfall since October and the second straight jump, the government said today.

Prices of stocks and the value of the dollar fell almost immediately in reaction to the announcement that the gap between imports and exports rose $1.4 billion from January's $12.4 billion imbalance.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks fell nearly 45 points in the first few minutes of market activity but regained about 8 points of that loss through the first 90 minutes of trading.

The Federal Reserve Bank and central banks in Europe intervened in the foreign exchange markets, buying dollars in large volumes after the currency lost 2 percent of its value against the Japanese yen and the German mark almost immediately after the announcement.

Analysts had largely predicted beforehand that the February deficit would shrink slightly.

"We've stumbled here a little bit," said Jay Goldinger, an analyst for Capital Insight, an economic consulting firm based in Los Angeles. "It reminds us that we have a major, major problem."

For the first two months of 1988, the deficit is running at an annual rate of $157.6 billion, below the record $171.2 billion of last year but still worse than second highest imbalance of $156.2 billion in 1986, the Commerce Department said.

Imports of foreign manufactured goods, oil and farm products increased by $2.3 billion in February. Leading the surge were imports of electrical equipment from abroad, up $323 million, and auto and truck parts, up $298 million.

Commerce Secretary C. William Verity, who is in Moscow, said in a statement released by his office here that the February figures were disappointing despite what he called an "underlying favorable trend."

Stars Shine Brightly For Teams In NBA Victories

By The Associated Press
It was a bright night for some of the NBA's shining lights. Charles Barkley, Patrick Ewing, Adrian Dantley and Larry Bird played major roles in their teams' victories Wednesday night. Barkley did so dramatically, Ewing economically, Dantley in spurts and Bird with another virtuoso overall performance.

Barkley banked in a 29-foot 3-pointer at the buzzer, giving Philadelphia a 98-97 overtime victory against Washington. Ewing scored 41 points in just 26 minutes, making 18 of 24 shots from the field, as New York beat Indiana 127-107. Dantley, who had only two points in the first half, scored 14 of his 28 points down the stretch to lead Detroit past Cleveland 115-98.

And Bird was his normal versatile self with 26 points, 10 rebounds and 10 assists as Boston increased its season-high winning streak to eight games with a 123-104 win over Milwaukee. Bird also made all eight of his free throws to extend his string to 48 straight.

Elsewhere, it was Denver 120, the Los Angeles Lakers 106; Seattle 113, the Los Angeles Clippers 92; Phoenix 123, San Antonio 116; and Golden State 112, Dallas 110.

76ers 98, Bullets 97
Barkley's overtime heroics made up for a first half, when Barkley scored just three points as Washington went on top 47-30. But the power forward was overpowering in the second half and extra period with 35 points. "I was so embarrassed by the way I played in the first half, I had to do something in the second half," said Barkley, who added 20 rebounds. "I just couldn't buy a basket in the first half."

Mike Gminski's tip-in with 28 seconds left tied the game at 87, forcing overtime. Moses Malone's three-point play gave Washington a 97-95 lead and set the stage for Barkley's bomb.

"It was just a lucky shot," he claimed. "When I shot it, I thought it was too strong."

"We really deserved to win because we came back and played with a lot of heart. You give it everything you've got and you're going to get some breaks."

The Sixers are 10th in the Eastern Conference but only one game out of the eighth and final playoff spot.

"If we had lost tonight, it would have been almost impossible to get into the playoffs," Barkley said. "We deserved a break and we got one tonight."

Knicks 127, Pacers 107
Ewing's six consecutive points early in the second quarter gave him 20 in a 12-minute span and gave New York a 44-25 lead. Ewing has 36 or more points in four of his last six games.

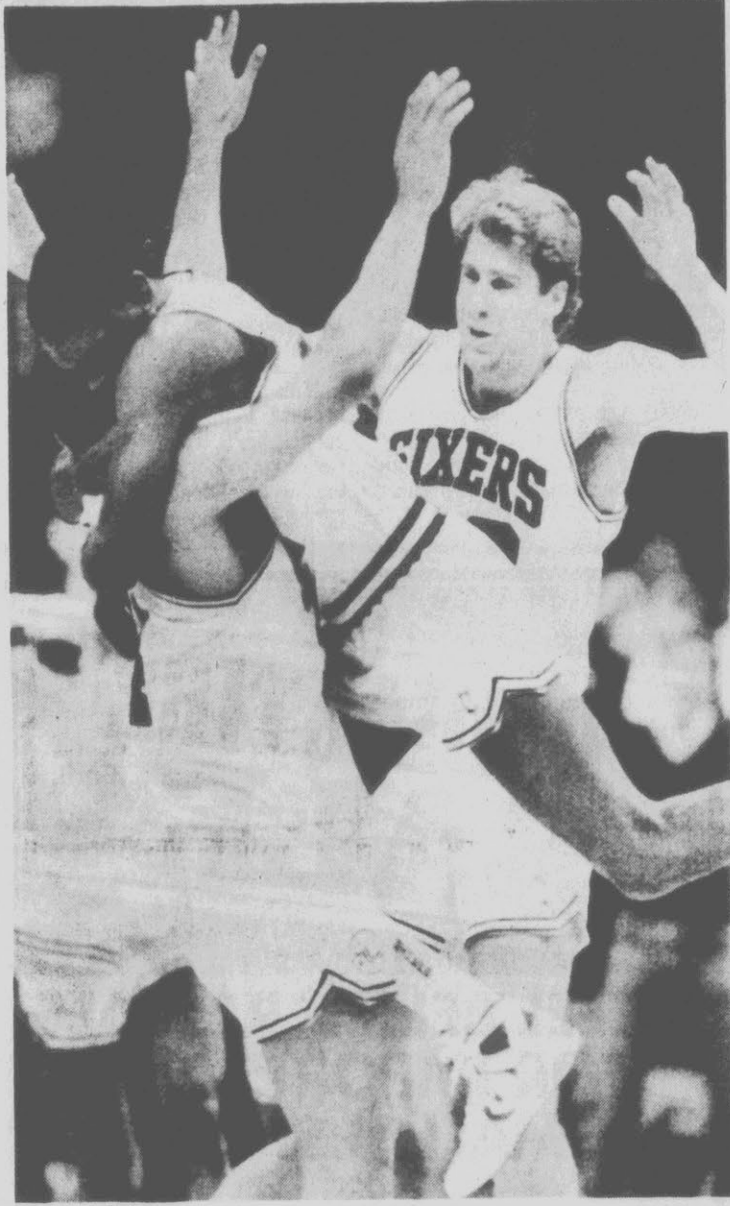

The Knicks moved past the Pacers into seventh place in the East and have won six of their last seven games. Indiana, which was led by Ron Anderson's 25 points, fell into eighth place, a half-game ahead of Washington.

"This is the way I've wanted to feel the whole time I've been in New York," said Ewing, now in his third NBA season. "It's the way I felt for four years at Georgetown."

Pistons 115, Cavaliers 98
Dantley keyed the Pistons' second half as they broke open a tight game and snapped Cleveland's four-game winning streak. The win gave Detroit a three-game lead over idle Atlanta in the Central Division and a 50-26 record, the Pistons' second consecutive 50-win season.

East Carolina Signs Six To Basketball Grants On First Day; Four Are Fresh

East Carolina University basketball coach Mike Steele and his staff signed six incoming players for the 1988-89 season Wednesday, the first day allowed by the NCAA.

The six include four freshman and two junior college prospects.

The list includes Jay Scherer, a 6-2, 185-pound incoming freshman from Huntsville, Ala.; Brooks Bryant, a 6-9, 230-pound incoming freshman also from Huntsville, Ala.; Jeff Perlich, a 6-2, 175-pound incoming freshman from Fort Wayne, Ind.; Casey Mote, a 6-7, 185-pound incoming freshman from Demorest, Ga.; Kevin Staples, a 6-5, 205-pound incoming junior from Southern Junior College in Birmingham, Ala.; and Jerome Obey, a 6-6, 225-pound incoming junior from Calhoun Community College in Decatur, Ala.

Scherer helped lead Gus Grissom High School in Huntsville, to the 6-A Alabama state championship this year and was named the state's player of the year in that, the top high school division in the state. He was also selected to the first team all-State and was named the most valuable player in the city of Huntsville. He averaged 20.6 points a game, hit on 82 percent of his free throws and 55 percent of his 3-point basket attempts.

Bryant, a teammate of Scherer, played center on the state championship team, averaging 19 points and 9.3 rebounds a game. He shot 81 percent from the line his senior season. During the state tournament's three games, he averaged 29 points, 8 rebounds and 3 blocked shots and was named the tournament's most valuable player.

Perlich was the second leading scorer in the state of Indiana this past season, averaged 32 points a game for Churubusco High School. He was named the Fort Wayne Player of the Year and has been chosen to play in several post-season all-star games.

Mote was the all-time leading scorer at Haverham Central High School in Demorest, averaging 20.3 points a game. He also pulled 10.5 rebounds and hit 63 percent from the field. He was named to the all-area team and was an all-star at two different B.C. all-star camps in Georgia and Alabama.

Staples was named to the first team all-state junior college team in Alabama, and was also tabbed for all-regional honors for the states of Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana. ECU assistant Dan Bell calls him an outstanding athlete. He averaged 20.7 points a game, 9 rebounds and 3.2 assists this past year. As a high school player at Logan, W. Va., he won two different slam dunk contests at B.C. all-star camps in Georgia and Alabama and helped lead his high school team to back-to-back West Virginia state championships.

Obey, who is another West Virginia product, was highly recruited at Calhoun, averaging 17 points and 8.2 rebounds a game. He blocked 98 shots this past season. As a prep player, he led Williamston (W.Va.) to the state championship his senior year.

Steele said he was quite pleased with the group of young men who will be joining the Pirate program. "Dan and Chris (Bell and Benetti, assistant coaches) did a good job. They got the kids interested in East Carolina and when they visited — even the ones we didn't get — had good visits. We made it difficult for them to go someplace else. So I have to give credit to our coaches for getting them on campus and to our kids for showing them a good time when they were here."

"I think we improved our team, which is what we were trying to do. And I feel good about the caliber of person these kids are too."

Steele also said that the addition of Lefty Driesell to the Colonial Athletic Conference will be a boost for the league. Driesell was recently named as the new head coach at James Madison. "After Richmond did so well in the (NCAA) tournament, that just adds credibility and enthusiasm for the conference. I can't imagine an empty seat when James Madison comes here next year."

Of course, Steele is hopeful that the play of the Pirates by then will have already made seats in Mingos Coliseum a premium.

Jennings Paces A's Win

By BEN WALKER

Just what the Oakland Athletics need — another hitter.

Rookie Doug Jennings went 4-for-4 with a home run and double and scored four times Wednesday night as Oakland crushed the Seattle Mariners 12-7.

"He was outstanding today," Athletics manager Tony LaRussa said. "That kind of hitting will get him more at-bats."

Jennings, a left fielder, played for California's Class AA Midland team last season. He was drafted by Oakland last December and saw limited action early this season. Jennings hit a two-run homer in the fifth inning.

"It's always nice to do well in your first major-league start," Jennings said. "Seattle will always hold good memories for me."

Jose Canseco hit his fourth homer for the Athletics, whose lineup with Mark McGwire and Dave Parker has scored 51 runs in eight games. Canseco's homer hit the second-deck facade, only the fourth ball to reach that mark in the Kingdome's 12-year history.

"I've hit a couple home runs farther than that, but it sure looked good. I usually can't tell how much power I have, but when I hit that ball I knew right away I smoked it," Canseco said.

In other American League games, Kansas City downed Baltimore 9-3, New York beat Toronto 5-1, Cleveland defeated Minnesota 6-3, Boston stopped Milwaukee 6-3 and California beat Chicago 5-2.

Oakland combined 14 hits and five Seattle errors to win. Canseco's two-run homer sparked a five-run third inning against Mike Campbell, 0-1.

"Campbell pitched well in the first inning, but he had control problems after that," Seattle manager Dick Williams said. "Canseco's home run really seemed to bother him."

Two outs later, McGwire, Jennings and Tony Phillips singled, loading the bases. Campbell threw a wild pitch and Stan Javier's two-run double made it 6-1.

Steve Ontiveros, 1-0, gave up five hits in five innings, including Mickey Brantley's two-run homer.

Rick Honeycutt pitched the final four innings for his first save, although he tied an AL record with four balks. He matched the mark set by Vic Raschi in 1950 and equaled by Texas' Bobby Witt on Tuesday.

Ontiveros also was called for a balk, and LaRussa and coach Dave Duncan were ejected for arguing about Honeycutt's last balk.

Orioles 9, Royals 3
Danny Tartabull drove in four runs and Floyd Bannister and Steve Farr combined on a three-hitter as Kansas City extended Baltimore's season-opening losing streak to eight games. Tartabull went 4-for-5 with two doubles. Kevin Seitzer had three hits and drove home two runs, Frank White doubled and singled with two RBI and Steve Balboni homered in the Royals' 18-hit attack.

Bannister, 2-0, gave up two hits in six innings as visiting Kansas City won its third straight game.

The Orioles, off to their worst start ever, have been outscored 58-11 this season.

Yankees 5, Blue Jays 1
Richard Dotson pitched a four-hitter for eight-plus innings and New York scored five runs in the first inning and won in Toronto.

The Yankees, whose 7-1 record is the best in baseball, have yielded just 16 earned runs this season.

Dotson, 2-0, allowed only two hits until leadoff singles by Nelson Liriano and Lloyd Moseby in the ninth. Reliever Dave Righetti closed, giving up Pat Borders pinch-RBI single.

Rickey Henderson opened the game with a single, stole second and Willie Randolph had a bunt single. Mike Pagliarulo hit an RBI double and Claudell Washington then beat out a squeeze bunt for another run.

Dave Winfield, Don Slaught and Bobby Meacham hit run-scoring singles against Dave Stieb, 0-2. Winfield is 15-for-29 this season and has hit in all eight games, including six straight multi-hit games.

Indians 6, Twins 3
Ron Kittle, playing for the first time this season, hit a two-run homer and had a key RBI single as Cleveland beat visiting Minnesota.

The Indians trailed 3-2 entering the eighth, but Kittle's two-out single tied the score. Mel Hall followed with an RBI single and Brook Jacoby hit a two-run double.

Kittle, signed as a free agent in the off-season, homered in the first inning against Bert Blyleven. That gave Kittle eight homers in his last 20 at-bats against Blyleven.

Jeff Dedmon pitched 2 2/3 scoreless innings for the victory in his first Cleveland appearance. Juan Berenguer, 0-2, who relieved Blyleven to start the eighth, took the loss.

Minnesota's Kirby Puckett, who began the game in a 2-for-24 slump, had three hits. Greg Gagne also had three hits for the Twins.

Angels 5, White Sox 2
Jack Howell and Chili Davis hit two-run homers and Chuck Finley pitched five-hit ball for eight-plus innings, leading California over Chicago.

Finley, 1-1, won his fifth major-league start. He struck out seven and walked three.

Howell's homer off Dave LaPoint, 1-1, broke a scoreless tie. Davis homered during a three-run eighth.

Fred Manrique homered for the visiting White Sox.

Red Sox 6, Brewers 3
Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd pitched five-hit ball for 6 2/3 innings and Ellis Burks hit a two-run homer as Boston beat visiting Milwaukee.

Boyd, who won just one game last year during an injury-plagued season, improved to 2-0. Lee Smith struck out the side in the ninth inning for his fourth save.

Marty Barrett and Dwight Evans hit RBI singles as the Red Sox scored four times in the fifth inning. Burks also had an infield single and a stolen base.

Rob Deer homered for Milwaukee. Juan Nieves, 0-2, took the loss.

Rains Delay Wednesday Sports Events

Rain and poor playing conditions again forced the delay in several area athletic events scheduled for Wednesday.

Rose High School's girls' track meet with Wilson Fike has been rescheduled for today while a softball game and a soccer match with Wilson Beddingfield in Greenville, have been reset for today. A tennis match and a baseball game, also with Wilson Beddingfield in Greenville, have been rescheduled for Monday.

The Ayden-Grifton at North Pitt baseball game has been rescheduled for April 21.

D.H. Conley's baseball and softball games at Washington have been reset for tonight.

Budd Added To U.N. Black List

LONDON (AP) — Zola Budd has been added to a United Nations' blacklist of sports and entertainment personalities with links to South Africa, the Times of London reported Thursday.

The newspaper said the name of the middle-distance runner, a South African native who became a British citizen four years ago, would appear on the updated list to be released in New York later in the day.

The list, issued by the UN's Special Committee Against Apartheid, contains athletes and entertainers considered to have given credibility to South Africa by appearing there.

Budd's inclusion is based on a cross-country meet in Brakpan, South Africa, last June, the Times said. It is the same meet being reviewed by the International Amateur Athletic Federation, which is to decide Friday whether to suspend her from competition.

"The South African athlete, Zola Budd, who now uses a British passport for convenience, continues to train in her native South Africa," the Times quoted the UN committee's report as saying.

"In fact, she only returns to the United Kingdom during the athletics competitive season.... In June, Budd even had the audacity to run a couple of laps just prior to the commencement of a cross-country league meeting in Brakpan, South Africa," the panel was quoted as saying.

Budd has said she was at the meet only as a spectator. She has pledged to spend most of her time in Britain, where she has purchased a house and is planning to begin university courses.

Thirteen Lucky For Spirit Pitcher

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — No one will ever convince Bill Kazmierczak of the Winston-Salem Spirits that 13 is an unlucky number.

Kazmierczak, who wears uniform No. 13, hurled the first no-hitter in Carolina League play since May 1985 Wednesday night, April 13, to beat Salem 1-0 in eight innings. The victory snapped Winston-Salem's season-opening skid at four losses.

Kazmierczak, the fifth Spirits' starter was making his first appearance of the season.

"I was ready. I was tired of waiting. I felt like I had command from the first inning on," he said.

The two teams played scoreless through the regulation seven innings of a double-header game. Kazmierczak, 9-5 last year at Winston-Salem, allowed only four base runners, none of which advanced past first.

Even so, the Spirits squandered scoring opportunities in the fourth, fifth and seventh before finally breaking the game open in the eighth. Steve Hill led off with an infield single, raced all the way to third on shortstop Terry Crowley's error, and scored on Francisco Tenacen's line single to left over Salem's pulled-in outfield.

It was the first no-hitter in Carolina League play since Jose Bautista of Lynchburg blanked Prince William 6-0 in seven innings May 26, 1985, and the first by a Winston-Salem pitcher since Rob Parkins no-hit Durham 3-0 in seven innings on June 7, 1984.

"The team was really excited after the game," Spirits manager Jay Loviglio said. "Maybe they'll relax a little now and realize that we can get some breaks, too. But it was the first break we've gotten this year really."

The closest calls to ruining the no-hitter may have come in the seventh. Oscar Escobar grounded to the right of shortstop Luis Cruz but was thrown out, and the next hitter, Kevin Burdick drove a long fly that was hauled in by Derrick May on the warning track in left.

Of Salem's four base runners, one reached on Cruz's error, two were hit by Kazmierczak pitches and one, Crowley, walked to lead off the fourth. Kazmierczak threw 99 pitches, 65 strikes and 34 balls.

"I was able to get my fastball and my slider over the plate from the start," Kazmierczak said. "Then when it got a little darker, I started throwing my change-up more and mixing that in. Most of all I was able to get ahead of the hitters and make them hit my pitch."

Kazmierczak's mother, Renetta, was visiting from suburban Chicago over the weekend and extended her stay through Tuesday to see her son pitch. When Tuesday's game was rained out, however, she flew home and missed Wednesday's game. Nevertheless, she called Ernie Shore Field and had a person at the ballpark hold the phone receiver up to the radio broadcast of the no-hitter.

In the nightcap, Jeff Schwarz completed a doubleheader sweep by striking out 12 Salem batters in a 4-1 victory.

No Charges Against Payton In Shooting

SCHAUMBURG, Ill. (AP) — No charges will be filed against former Chicago Bears running back Walter Payton in the accidental shooting of a manager at Payton's suburban Chicago restaurant, police say.

The shooting occurred Wednesday when an employee handed Payton an automatic pistol that no one knew was loaded, Police Chief Kenneth R. Alley said.

"I can say at this time without hesitation that it was an accidental discharge," Alley said.

Elmer Hutson, 28, of Hoffman Estates, was in fair condition after undergoing surgery on his left leg at Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights, nursing supervisor Gail Hillary said.

"Walter is extremely upset over the accident," Alley said. "He was extremely cooperative with us, and so was his wife, Connie."

Payton's home telephone is unlisted, and he could not be reached for comment.

But Mrs. Payton told reporters: "Walter's fine. He's just disturbed about his employee."

Payton's agent, Bud Holmes, called the accident "a most unfortunate, freak kind of mishap."

Holmes said Payton is "so extremely cautious and careful. He's a fanatic about being careful with weapons. Walter wouldn't hurt a flea."

Mrs. Payton was in the office of the restaurant, Studebaker's, when the gun went off as were several of Payton's employees, the chief said.

Alley said Payton had left the recently purchased pistol on his desk and was using a telephone when an employee, whom police would not identify, handed him the gun.

"It appears that they were just about ready to go home," said Alley, who declined to identify the employee who handed Payton the gun.

"Walter was on the telephone sitting beside the desk," Alley said, "and placed the telephone back on the receiver and turned back, and the gun went off striking Mr. Hutson in the left leg just below the knee."

The gun, a French-made, 9mm automatic pistol, was registered to Payton, a gun collector who had the proper registration, Alley said.

Police didn't know why the gun was loaded, but Alley said it held eight rounds and had five left after the single shot was fired.

Payton told police he normally didn't keep a gun at the restaurant but had brought it from his Barrington home several days ago.

"It was in the restaurant on a temporary basis and was on its way back to his residence," Alley said.

At a news conference, Alley the gun was of a type which can easily go off accidentally.

Braves Drop 8th In Row

By JIM DONAGHY
AP Sports Writer

If you want to know how the west was won, just ask Houston's Jim Deshaies.

Deshaies, who had shoulder surgery last October, pitched a two-hitter to beat Atlanta 4-0 Wednesday and send the Braves to their eighth straight loss.

The victory improved Deshaies' record against the National League West to 17-3 lifetime, including 6-1 against the Braves. He's 7-8 against the NL East.

It was Deshaies' first start since undergoing arthroscopic surgery for a slight tear in his left rotator cuff on Oct. 9.

"It sure is nice to be able to snap the slider, and the velocity on my fastball was pretty good, too," Deshaies said.

The eight consecutive losses represents an all-time worst for Atlanta, which dropped its first seven in 1980. The Braves are only one loss shy of the NL mark of nine shared by four teams.

"We'll try to get it started on the road," Atlanta manager Chuck Tanner said. The Braves start a three-game series in Los Angeles on Friday night.

Elsewhere, it was San Francisco 5, Cincinnati 4; St. Louis 4, Chicago 3; Pittsburgh 7, Philadelphia 0; and Los Angeles 4, San Diego 3.

Deshaies' last start was April 7 in the Florida State League with the Astros' extended spring training squad. He threw six innings against Osceola, giving up nine runs and nine hits.

"Those guys in Osceola have got to be shaking their heads," Deshaies said. "They're not going to believe their newspaper in the morning. They're going to think it's all fixed. They're going to think that league up there's a fix. They're going to be shaking their heads in wonderment in Osceola."

Deshaies struck out five and walked two. He also was called for two balks, the second resulting in the ejection of Houston manager Hal Lanier by first base umpire Bob Davidson when Lanier argued the call.

What has the surgery done for Deshaies?

"To throw pain-free, to throw a lot of sliders, to throw nine innings and not fight it the whole way," he said.

The Astros scored three runs in the first on Bill Doran's RBI single and a two-run triple by Denny Walling. Alan Ashby homered in the fourth.

Giants 5, Reds 1
Will Clark homered with two outs in the bottom of the 11th inning to beat Cincinnati and halt San Francisco's three-game losing streak.

Clark's second homer of the season was a drive to right-center field off Pat Perry, 1-1, the Reds' fifth pitcher. Of Clark's 35 home runs last season, nine came off Cincinnati pitching.

Don Robinson, 1-0, got the victory with two innings of relief. He allowed one hit and struck out four.

The Reds took a 4-3 lead in the eighth on Paul O'Neill's run-scoring single and a sacrifice fly by Buddy Bell. San Francisco came back to tie it in the bottom of the inning, when Mike Aldrete singled and scored from first on Robby Thompson's double to left-center.

Cardinals 4, Cubs 3
Bob Horner hit a bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the seventh inning to lift St. Louis over visiting Chicago.

Reliever Les Lancaster, 0-1, walked Tommy Herr intentionally to face Horner, who had reached base in his last nine plate appearances.

Horner, who was 4-for-4 in the Cardinals' 7-5 victory over Chicago on Tuesday night, is hitting .407.

Danny Cox, 1-1, scattered eight hits over eight innings for the victory. Todd Worrell got the final two outs for his third save.

Pirates 7, Phillies 0
Brian Fisher and Jim Gott combined on a five-hitter and Pittsburgh turned four Philadelphia errors in the first three innings into four runs.

The Pirates have beaten the Phillies nine times in their last 10 games dating back to last season, including three of four this season.

Fisher, 2-0, had a three-hitter entering the eighth but allowed two singles and was replaced by Gott.

Jose Lind, batting .133 before the game, went 3-for-4 with an RBI and scored three times.

Dodgers 4, Padres 3
Pedro Guerrero hit a two-run homer in the eighth inning to beat San Diego and give Los Angeles its sixth victory in eight games.

With the score tied 2-2 and two outs in the eighth Eric Show, 0-2, hit Kirk Gibson with a pitch and Guerrero hit a 3-0 pitch over the center-field fence.

Jay Howell pitched two innings in relief for his first Dodger victory and Jesse Orosco got the final three outs for his third save.

The Padres loaded the bases on a single and two walks in the bottom of the ninth with one out. Benito Santiago hit a sacrifice fly to make it 4-3, but Orosco struck out pinch-hitter Mark Parent to end the game.

Walker Has Been Most Consistent

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Colleen Walker appears on the verge of becoming one of the best players on the women's golf tour. But she has certainly been lingering there.

Walker, who'll be competing in the $400,000 Ai Star-Centinel Hospital Classic that begins Friday, has been a model of consistency this year, finishing in the top 10 in six of the eight LPGA tournaments.

But that consistency hasn't included a victory.

She almost broke through in the prestigious Dinah Shore tournament two weeks ago, but came up just short in her final-round charge at leader Amy Alcott.

Alcott, who saw Walker close to within one shot of the lead midway through the final day, wound up winning the tournament by two shots over Walker.

Last weekend in the San Diego In-Amori Classic, Walker led Ayako Okamoto of Japan by one stroke heading into the final three holes on Sunday.

Walker proceeded to three-putt No. 16 for a bogey and three-putt No. 17 for a par, while Okamoto parred the 16th and birdied the 17th. Both golfers then closed with a par on the last hole, thus Okamoto beat Walker by one shot.

Walker, who had seemed pleased with her runner-up finish in the Dinah Shore, found the second-place spot at San Diego less satisfying.

"This is a little more disappointing because I three-putted two holes coming in," Walker said. "(But) you've got to look at the positive side, too. My confidence is good. I feel very good over every shot."

Stars Shine...

SuperSonics 113, Clippers 92
Detroit. Larry Nance led Cleveland with 20.

Dantley, who hit 14 of 15 free throws, said he felt sluggish in the first half.

"I had trouble. I was playing bad," Dantley said. "But I've been around long enough to know what I can do. I had to pick it up."

Celtics 123, Bucks 104
Bird had 11 points in the third quarter, when Boston made 15 of 19 shots. Milwaukee sank just seven of 22 in the period for 31.8 percent and was outscored 39-23, deciding the game right there.

Robert Parish and Kevin McHale added 21 points each as the Celtics never trailed. The Bucks, losers of seven of nine, were led by Terry Cummings with 21 points.

Boston moved within two games of the Lakers for the best overall record.

"We really don't follow it that much at this point," Bird said. "We are just trying to play our game right now."

Nuggets 120, Lakers 106
Alex English scored 29 points, Fat Lever added 28 and Michael Adams 22 as Denver won for the 12th time in 13 games. It was Denver's 50th win of the season, only the second time since the Nuggets joined the NBA in 1976 that they have reached that figure. The Nuggets also won their season series with the Lakers 3-2 and beat Boston 2-0, making them the first team since 1978-1979 to win a season series from both Lakers and Celtics. The Nuggets did it then, too.

The loss was the fourth straight on the road for the Lakers — the last time that happened came in the first four games of the 1984-1985 season.

Adams hit two 3-pointers, extending his own league record to 38 straight games.

The Lakers, who played without injured guard Byron Scott, were led by 16 points from Tony Campbell.

Suns 123, Spurs 116
Phoenix staged a Johnson and Johnson show as Eddie Johnson scored 37 points and started a decisive 12-0 run in the final three minutes, while rookie guard Kevin Johnson had a triple-double for Phoenix with 11 points, 11 assists and a game-high 13 rebounds.

The victory moved Phoenix within three games of the Spurs for the eighth and final Western Conference playoff berth. Each team has six games left.

Walter Berry paced San Antonio with 31 points. Alvin Robertson had 27 for the Spurs, who lost for the third time in their last four games.

Warriors 112, Mavericks 110
Rookie Tellis Frank hit a pair of free throws with two seconds left to win it for Golden State. With the score tied at 110 and six seconds remaining, Golden State's Dave Feitl missed a pair of free throws. Dallas grabbed the rebound and called a timeout with five seconds to go. But Frank stole Sam Perkins' inbound pass and was fouled by Derek Harper.

Frank scored seven of his 20 points in the final eight minutes to help snap Dallas' four-game winning streak and its nine-game victory string over the Warriors that dated back to April 8, 1986.

Chris Mullin led the Warriors with 24 points. The Mavericks were led by Harper's 25 points.

Hayes Named As Top Girls' Coach

By DAVID DROSCAK
Associated Press Writer

Renee Hayes is ending her three-year head coaching career at Trinity High School as the 1988 Associated Press women's coach of the year in North Carolina.

Hayes, who has led Trinity to two straight 3-A high school basketball championships, announced her retirement from coaching several weeks ago. She received seven of a possible 18 votes from a statewide panel of prep sportswriters.

"I'm not very comfortable with these kind of things (awards)," Hayes said this week in a telephone interview. "... I don't know that I've got a tremendous amount of coaching ability ... some of it's just luck. I feel honored to be recognized."

East Henderson's David Hawkins received three votes, while Mike Matheson of Bandys — last year's winner — Marsha Crump of Morganton Freedom, Donna Eason of Havelock and Dottie Cobb of Henderson Vance each got two votes.

Hayes, who led Trinity to records of 17-7, 23-4 and 27-2 in her three seasons as head coach, said family life forced her into retirement.

"I have an 18-month-old that has kept me out of the classroom the better part of two years," she said. "It makes for an awfully long day going to practice."

Hayes said she will miss the women she's coached, but said leaving this season was a lot easier than expected.

"I've always enjoyed coaching," she said. "Getting married and starting a family has cramped that a little bit. I've been with this group of seniors since seventh grade — it was a good time to get out."

Hayes came up through the ranks, coaching five years at Archdale Middle School in Trinity, before becoming Trinity's junior varsity coach in 1984-85.

After an impressive 17-7 mark in her first season as head coach of the varsity, Hayes has been at the top of the 3-A basketball class in North Carolina the past two seasons.

"Last year was very enjoyable — we came out of nowhere. We made a name for ourselves," Hayes said. "This year was much more mental, both on me and the girls. This year he had the expectations."

"Once we started the playoffs the girls were real excited. They were up for each game emotionally. They knew I was retiring."

Hayes Named As Top Girls' Coach

Sharing a "team concept" goal with a group has been Hayes' career bright spot, though.

"I think the highlight has been the continuity I've had with this group of young ladies," she said. "That's something that is rare these days. ... Hopefully all five of my starters will be playing collegiately next year. I feel a sense of accomplishment for that."

Her husband, David, who kept statistics for Hayes, never missed a game. But Hayes said the time has come to step aside.

Some Boycotts Are Still Possible

LONDON (AP) — Olympic officials remain confident that there will be no mass boycott of next summer's games at Seoul, but they aren't holding all the cards.

Some of them are in the hands of the international track and field's governing body, while others have been dealt to organizers of a proposed all-star rugby tour.

If track and field's governing body allows South African native Zola Budd to continue to run for Britain, or if enough of the world's top rugby stars agree to play in a tour of South Africa this summer, there could be problems for the Olympics.

"These are very emotive issues for the Africans," said Sam Ramsamy, head of the South African Non-Racial Olympic Committee, a London-based organization that uses sports to apply pressure to the government of the racially segregated land.

A New Zealand rugby tour of South Africa led to an Olympic boycott 12 years ago, and several African nations threatened to boycott the World Cross-Country Championship last month before Budd withdrew.

International Olympic Committee president Juan Antonio Samaranch, who defused boycott threats in the socialist bloc through two years of globe-hopping talks, is confident there will be no repeat of the African boycott that hit Montreal in 1976.

The IOC has excellent relations with Africa and expects to maintain friendly cooperation, Samaranch says. The IOC expelled South Africa in 1970 for its apartheid policies.

Ramsamy said this week that he was much more optimistic than when the issues surfaced about a month ago that anti-Olympic action could be avoided.

"With rugby, we are getting very favorable signs," he said. "It seems that the tour that is being set up is becoming a Mickey Mouse tour."

Governments or sports leaders in most of the world's leading rugby nations had come out strongly against the tour, Ramsamy said.

"And we believe that particular attitude also will prevail in New Zealand and Australia," he said. "Basically, I think that the provocation from rugby is diminishing. I wouldn't say the situation has evaporated. But the provocation has been watered down."

The International Amateur Athletic Federation is expected to impose a lengthy suspension on Budd when its council meets in London on Friday, Ramsamy said.

The IAAF is investigating allegations that Budd, who moved to Britain four years ago, participated in a meet late last year during one of her frequent returns to South Africa. As did officials reacting to the rugby tour, the IAAF said it was concerned about the possible impact of the Budd case on the Olympics.

"I can't see Budd participating in the Games in Seoul," Ramsamy said. He noted that the IAAF had barred Budd from competing while it reviewed the charges "and I can't see them reversing that ban."

If the ban is lifted, Ramsamy said, a boycott call would not be the first priority for the anti-apartheid forces.

He said African nations probably would call for an emergency meeting of the full IAAF Congress, which could overturn the council's decision. Under recently revised voting rules, Ramsamy said, those opposed to Budd hold a majority on the congress.

"It's a hypothetical question, so I must give a hypothetical answer," he said. "Even then I don't see problems for Seoul, although we should not rule that out."

Another Black Robinson Looking To Be Manager

By JIM DONAGHY
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Sometimes Bill Robinson thinks about managing a baseball team, mostly he just thinks about baseball.

Whenever the subject of black managers is brought up, Robinson's name is near the top of the list of candidates. And for him, that's the important thing.

"Everytime a manager is fired I don't expect a minority to get the job. That would be unrealistic," said Robinson, the New York Mets' first base coach and batting instructor.

"What I hope is happening is that a greater pool of minority candidates will be developed and be considered. Sure, I'd like to be one of them."

On the final weekend of last season, Mets general manager Frank Cashen announced that Davey Johnson would not manage the team after the 1988 season and Robinson was mentioned as a replacement.

That situation changed, however, at the start of spring training when Johnson and Cashen patched up their differences and Johnson was allowed to stay beyond this season.

"I never really thought Davey would leave after this season," Robinson said.

To prepare himself for a managerial position, Robinson managed for the first time in his professional career this past winter for the Caracas Lions of the Venezuelan League.

"I have been in the game a long time. I always imagined a manager had to make a lot of hard decisions in a hurry. But until you go through everything first hand you can't comprehend the complexities," he said.

"I will tell you this, my four months with Caracas were most pleasant, but it also gave me a deeper appreciation and understanding of the job that Davey has done with the Mets these last four years."

His time in Venezuela also left Robinson with a case of malaria.

"I wanted to lose some weight but I don't recommend it as a diet," Robinson joked. "I was really still very sick at the start of spring training and I'm just beginning to feel better."

Robinson's greatest joy in baseball is teaching hitting.

A 14-year veteran with the Phillies, Braves, Yankees and Pirates, Robinson had a .258 career average and 161 home runs.

"I try to tell the players (hitters) not to take anything for granted when you're at the plate and to always be thinking," Robinson said.

This year, Robinson's intentions as the Mets' batting coach has turned to the change in the strike zone.

"I don't want them to worry about different strike zones," Robinson said. "I didn't think in spring training it would come into play as much as it has come into play."

"I didn't think the umpires would change their strike zone calls. If you're a low ball umpire that's the way you're going to stay. But they have changed just a little bit."

"The guys have to start making adjustments. It might be easy for me to say 'Hey, they're going to start calling some high strikes you better swing at them.' Although I will say that, it's the actual hitter who has to go up and make the initial change if he sees a pattern developing."

"I've always been the kind — even when I played — that if the pitch is close to the plate and it's hittable I'm going to swing."

Robinson says working with players like Mookie Wilson, Keith Hernandez, Darryl Strawberry and Kevin McReynolds makes life easy for a hitting coach.

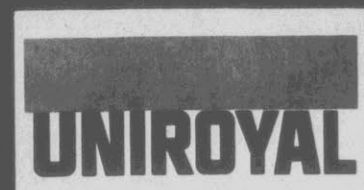

"I think the key to our attack is its diversification," Robinson said. "We can win games with the homer, the hit-and-run single or a steal. The guys make it a pleasure for me to come to the park everyday."

On Tuesday, Frank Robinson became baseball's first black manager in four years when he was named to replace Baltimore's Cal Ripken.

Frank Robinson, the first black to manage at the major league level, was also the last black to manage in the big leagues. He was fired by the San Francisco Giants in 1984.

"Frank has experience in just about every area of baseball. He was the right man for the Baltimore job," Bill Robinson said. "I think I'm ready to manage too."

Money Reportedly Sent Signee

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The University of Kentucky is investigating a published report that a package sent by an assistant coach to the father of a Los Angeles high school basketball star accidentally opened, revealing $1,000 in cash.

The Daily News of Los Angeles, in a copyright story in today's editions, said it learned of the package and its contents from employees of a delivery service.

The player, Chris Mills of Fairfax High School, signed a letter of intent Nov. 11 to accept a basketball scholarship to Kentucky, which was reprimanded last month by the NCAA for minor violations after a lengthy investigation of charges that substantial payments were made to players.

Mills, his father and university officials denied knowledge of the money, the newspaper reported.

But university President David P. Roselle issued the following statement Wednesday night:

"There is going to be a morning story in the L.A. Daily News about possible new violations of NCAA rules in our basketball program. We first heard about the matter on last Friday evening as a result of a telephone inquiry by a reporter from the newspaper.

"He gave us only enough information to indicate the possibility of a serious rule infraction. We immediately began an investigation and in very short order informed the NCAA enforcement staff.

"Within a day, we confirmed enough of the information given to us by the reporter to be seriously concerned. At that point, we requested the NCAA staff to join us in a further investigation ... It is our intention to find out what happened, to report everything we find to the NCAA, to take full responsibility for whatever is proved to have occurred."

A shipment record obtained by the newspaper showed the package was sent March 30 via Emery Worldwide air freight, from Kentucky assistant basketball coach Dwane Casey to Mills' father, Claud.

Casey, interviewed in Pittsburgh at a national high school all-star game last Friday, denied he put money in the package.

"We don't recruit that way," he said. "But I have never, ever put any money in a package. That accusation is ridiculous."

Said head coach Eddie Sutton: "I can promise you it didn't occur. I feel very confident in my assistant coaches. I don't believe it."

NCAA officials said serious penalties could be imposed if the allegation is substantiated.

"It's called improper inducement," David Berst, NCAA director of enforcement, said in a telephone interview from NCAA headquarters in Mission, Kan. "Cash inducement isn't the sort of thing you need a handbook to figure out if it's a violation."

An investigator for the NCAA, which regulates college athletic and recruitment programs, was in Los Angeles this week to determine whether a violation had occurred. The official, Charles Smrt, declined comment.

On March 4, the NCAA said it failed to uncover any proof of wrongdoing after investigating charges that Kentucky had violated several NCAA rules, including cash payments to players.

The 6-foot-7 Mills, who averaged 28.3 points per game as a senior, was intensely recruited by some of the nation's powerhouse programs. They included Indiana, UCLA, Syracuse and UNLV, Mills said last November when he announced his decision to attend Kentucky.

In a series of interviews during the last week, employees of Emery told the newspaper they noticed cash when a package broke open during handling March 31 at their Los Angeles shipment center.

Casey said the package he sent contained Claud Mills' videotape of his son playing basketball. Schools routinely obtain videotapes to review athletes' progress and determine whether to recruit them.

Eric Osborn, the Emery employee who found an opened package when it arrived, said he looked inside and saw money sticking out of a videocassette box.

His supervisor, Paul Perry, said he called over several employees as witnesses and counted out the $1,000 in $50 bills and had the package sealed for delivery.

Perry said he counted the money in front of other employees because it is against company policy to accept currency, precious stones or guns for shipment.

"I'm just the one who happened to see it because it popped open," Perry said.

Claud Mills, who said he was interviewed by the NCAA, acknowledged that he received a videotape from Casey. He said he talked by telephone March 31 with a man who identified himself as an Emery employee and was told there was a package containing $1,000 addressed to him.

Claud Mills said Chris Mills signed for the package and that when he got home he found the videotape, but no cash.

"I didn't receive no money from Dwane Casey," Claud Mills said. "Nobody from Kentucky gave me no money. They sent me a tape, but I don't know nothing about no money."

Chris Mills said after the all-star game in Pittsburgh that he knew nothing about any money from the university.

Pat Bertrand, public relations manager at Emery's corporate headquarters in Wilton, Conn., said last week that company policy requires a report be filled out every time a package opens during shipment.

Perry said that Emery security men arrived and filled out a report on the opened package and the money.

"We called security, they came downstairs, took it, did a report on it. ... I counted it again, I put the money back in the slot, I took some brown tape, sealed it good, gave it to the (driver), and told him to deliver it," Perry said.

However, Chuck Bullerman, a manager of the security firm contracted by Emery, denied that he or anyone from his department had filled out a report.

"As far as we're concerned ... the package was delivered to the consignee without problems," Bullerman said.

When told that Perry had said Bullerman had filed a report, Bullerman referred further questions to Perry and declined to account for the contradiction.

Claud Mills said his son, a two-time Parade All-American, picked Kentucky because of Sutton and the team's style of play.

"Every school that came around to talk to Chris, we talked to them," he added. "Nobody offered Chris a thing. I'll take a lie-detector test. All we talked about was tuition, loans, and the money he'd receive from month-to-month legally."

Claud Mills said an NCAA investigator had questioned him earlier about a car he bought for his son. He said he paid $6,800 for the car, a 1984 Datsun 300ZX, with the proceeds of a lawsuit.

Love Looking For Good Luck

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Davis Love III is going through a bad patch.

"I've had a streak of bad luck — and it's lasted a month," Love said Wednesday, the day before he was to tee off as defending champion in the $700,000 Heritage Classic.

"I'm having a hard time trying to stay positive. If it keeps up, I may have to take a couple of weeks off and go do something else," Love said.

"I need a good week. I feel I'm playing well. If I can concentrate for four days, instead of one day, I should be OK," said the powerful young man who celebrated his 24th birthday on Wednesday.

And this island resort could be just the place for it, he said.

"Last year, coming in here (where he earned his first professional victory) I was coming off a bad stretch, just like this year. All I was trying to do then, and all I'm trying to do now, is to start playing good again," he said.

But the bad stretch last year didn't compare with his problems this season.

He had the third-round lead in the Phoenix Open early this season, played a poor last round — "blew the tournament," he said — and hasn't been the same since.

"I've talked about it with my father. I don't know. Maybe it's mental. Maybe it's something else," he said.

"I feel I'm playing well. But I just have that one bad day, a bad couple of holes, something bad happens, and that ruins it."

His last four starts serve as an example.

In the final round at the Honda Classic, he was under par for the tournament until he scored an 11 on a par-3 hole — "I kind of got in a daze," he said — shot 78 and plummeted to 51st place.

The following week at Bay Hill, he made 9 on a par-5 hole and shot 82 in the first round. He came back with a 68, but failed to qualify for the final two rounds.

He was even par through two rounds of the Players Championship, but was disqualified after playing with a putter he had bent by tapping it on the ground.

He missed the cut by one shot at the Masters, "missing a lot of short putts I should have made," he said.

So, in consecutive starts, he had an 11, a 9, a disqualification and a missed cut.

"I know I'm playing well, I'm just not getting anything out of it," he said.

Rodgers No Longer Top Entrant

BOSTON (AP) — Not long ago, Bill Rodgers always was among the favorites to win any marathon he entered. Now, he isn't even considered the top entrant in the Masters Division of Monday's Boston Marathon.

Certainly, Rodgers, four-time winner of the Boston Marathon, will be a strong contender to finish first among the over-40 field. But he will have to beat a strong contingent that includes Mick Hurd of Britain, Ryszard Marczak of Poland, Kjell-Erik Stahl of Sweden and Murray Hunt of New Zealand.

"It's not going to be easy," said Rodgers, who turned 40 last Dec. 23 and has run in one marathon since then, finishing 21st overall and second in the Masters Division in the Los Angeles Marathon.

"But to some degree, being older is easier," he said. "I don't have to win. You have your goals and aspirations, but being older, you cut back your training."

This being an Olympic year, Rodgers normally would be running in the U.S. Olympic Trials April 24 at Jersey City, N.J. But he realizes he no longer can keep up with the younger, faster marathoners, and so he chose to skip the Trials and compete in the marathon that has become synonymous with his nickname, "Boston Billy."

He said he had planned to run the Trials, but in December, two days before his 40th birthday, he injured an Achilles' tendon.

"I lost too much from the injury," he explained. "If I had recovered quickly, I would have run the Trials. The injury kept me out for three weeks."

"If I felt I could have finished in the top 10, I would have run. But I'm not up to it now. I wish I was fitter. I will miss running in the Trials."

In addition to the injury, Rodgers' training was slowed by financial problems.

His Bill Rodgers and Co., which marketed a line of running apparel carrying his name, was seized by the Bank of Boston, the firm's major creditor, last April. The move almost put the company out of business, shutting it down until two months ago.

"I didn't get paid for two years from the company," Rodgers said. "The bank bought my house (in Sherburne, Mass.). That way I was able to pay off the loan I owed. Now, I'm living in Dover (Mass.)."

Now, the name of the company has been changed to High Tech Running Apparel and has moved its base of operations from Weymouth, Mass. to Laconia, N.H., and Rodgers is the only remaining stockholder of the original group of five, owning about 16 percent of the stock.

"My financial situation is fine now," Rodgers said. "I'm not broke. I'm out of debt."

"The company is doing well. We have good management and have tightened things up. We weren't a tough enough competitor before. We got squashed. Now, we should be right in there with the little companies again."

"And I'm in a great frame of mind. But that did take a toll on me."

"Physically, though, I feel tired. I've been doing a lot of promotional work and traveling."

Despite his age, Rodgers is one of the most active marathoners in the sport. Monday's race will be his sixth marathon in 18 months, the 52nd of his career and his 13th Boston Marathon.

He scored his first major marathon victory in Boston in 1975, and won again in 1978, 1979 and 1980. In 1975, he set an American record of two hours, 9 minutes, 55 seconds, and he broke it in 1979, clocking 2:09:27.

He also has won the New York City Marathon four times, from 1976-79.

Jockey Keeping Penalty Time

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Sports Writer

Fifths of a second separate a successful day from being just another afternoon for a jockey, but it's minutes that Sandy Hawley is concerned with at night.

When the Los Angeles Kings play at the Forum, most of the time Hawley, one of eight jockeys to ride more than 5,000 winners, is there as keeper of the visiting team's penalty box.

He keeps track of the minutes a player must spend in the penalty box. Usually it is two minutes — which can seem an eternity to hockey player whose team is in a close game.

"A lot of time they come in and are upset," Hawley said. "They say, 'I can't believe I got that penalty.' I agree with them 100 percent."

One night, Hawley asked John McLean of New Jersey Devils if he was a Canadian.

When McLean said he was from Oshawa, Hawley said he was, too.

McLean looked at him and said, "Are you a jockey?"

Told yes, McLean said, "Are you retired? When I was a kid, I saw you ride at Woodbine."

Hawley, who will be 39 Monday, is anything but retired, despite two operations for cancer and ongoing treatment.

"My health is good right now," Hawley said. "I get a booster shot once a month now at USC."

He's had a good meeting at Santa Anita and an enjoyable season with the Kings for whom he has been working in the penalty box for almost two years. "I've made about 80 percent of the games," he said.

The pay: $300 a season, plus tickets and all he can eat. How much arena-plastic food can a jockey eat? A jockey's cut of a $50,000 purse would be $5,000, and Hawley has won more than a few big races in his career.

The hockey job is a labor of love, a form of release from the tensions of big-time racing and health problems.

"I idolize these guys as NHL players," said Hawley, who competes and kibbitzes on a daily basis with Bill Shoemaker and Laffit Pincay Jr., a couple of Gordie Howes in jockey silks. He was a hockey goalie at age 9-10-11 and then played scrimmage hockey.

"I had season tickets for the Kings for eight years," Hawley said. "Bill Muris (the Kings' timekeeper) comes to the race track quite often, and we're golfing buddies."

"He knew where I sit, and one night he came up to my seats and asked me to fill in for a missing man. I told him, 'I don't know what to do.'"

Hawley did it, and became boss in the box for visiting offenders.

Besides the timing of penalties and listening to the mumbblings of unhappy hockey players, Hawley also makes sure a plastic squeeze bottle is filled with water for thirsty bad guys and when a puck is hit into the stands, he tosses a replacement to an official, who usually is in motion.

He keeps the pucks in a bucket filled with ice cubes because a warm puck will stick to the playing surface instead of sliding.

Hawley knows about ice. Successful jockeys have it in their veins.

PTL Says It Might Ax Swaggart Show

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — The PTL Network will drop Jimmy Swaggart's daily television shows if he tries to return to church and television pulpits May 22, a spokesman said Wednesday.

The network is currently broadcasting Swaggart's show with substitute ministers. "There's no doubt it is one of our better accounts. It's not a decision that we would make lightly," David West of the PTL Network in Charlotte, N.C., said in a telephone interview.

However, West said, PTL has a waiting list of other people who want time on the cable network, which he said reaches an estimated 12 million homes.

Last week, the Assemblies of God defrocked Swaggart because he refused to accept a one-year suspension from preaching because of his involvement with a prostitute.

Swaggart said Friday that the finances of his church and the Jimmy Swaggart Bible College couldn't stand up under a one-year suspension. He said he was returning to both his church and television ministries on May 22.

Earl Weirich, with the Christian Broadcasting Network in Virginia Beach, Va., said officials there will decide Tuesday whether to continue televising Swaggart's programs.

ABC Focuses On White House Tales

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The children wanted to know about the ghost in the Lincoln Room, and President Reagan was pleased to tell them that his dog Rex may have had an encounter.

"The president said his dog would go by the Lincoln Room, look in, growl and back out," said A.C. Lyles, producer of "Conversations With the Presidents," a one-hour show to be shown on ABC on Saturday.

"Mr. Reagan told them, 'Rex must see something I don't see.' Mrs. Roosevelt used to talk about how Lincoln would come and visit with her."

Lyles, who has known Ronald Reagan since their early days in Hollywood, persuaded Reagan — and former Presidents Ford and Carter — to talk with groups of children.

Reagan talked to the children at the White House. Carter was at the Presidential Center at Atlanta, and Ford at Rancho Mirage, Calif.

Former President Nixon withdrew from the show after ABC announced a miniseries based on the book "Final Days," which told of his last days as president before he resigned.

"Ronald Reagan and I came to Hollywood about the same time," said Lyles, who has been with Paramount Studios for 50 years. "I saw a side I liked, the human side. Most people don't see that. I thought what a wonderful thing it would be if children talked to the presidents."

"I remember when I was just a kid working on the newspaper in Jacksonville, Fla., and I interviewed President Roosevelt when he came to town. I took the idea to ABC, got an OK. I mentioned it to the president when I was on Air Force One, and he loved the idea. Then I got in touch with the former presidents."

Lyles said he wanted children because they ask questions adults would never think to ask. One child asked Reagan what he was thinking about when he was sworn in as president. Another asked him how he met the first lady and did they kiss on their first date.

Carter told of being the first person in his family to go to college, adding that he went to the Naval Academy because it was free.

"Carter told them his house had no running water and there was no electricity in the town," Lyles said. "He said their only source of entertainment was the radio. Every night they took the battery out of the car and rigged it up to run the radio. Carter was asked who he would like to play him in a movie, and he said Robert Redford. Ford told them of being the only president who was adopted as a child."

Lyles said he thought the children would be intimidated at going to the White House to meet Reagan. "But they went right in and I think the president put them right at ease," he said. "I don't know who had more fun, the kids or the president."

The children, who were selected by the schools in each area, ranged in age from 9 to 14.

"One girl told me her grandfather was going to tape the show," said Lyles. "She said she could hardly wait to show it to her kids."

Lyles talked about the show at Paramount studios, where he is practically an institution. His office walls are covered with dozens of pictures of himself with stars and other famous people. On a tripod in his office is an old hand-cranked Mitchell camera used to film "Wings," the first movie to win an Academy Award.

Audrey Hepburn Joins Fight Against Hunger

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Audrey Hepburn, who visited drought-stricken Ethiopia recently, joined UNICEF officials in calling for help in the battle against world hunger.

"To save a single child is a blessing... to save millions of children is a God-given opportunity presented to us by UNICEF," the 58-year-old actress said Wednesday at a news conference.

Lawrence Bruce, the international children's fund president and chief executive, announced UNICEF's latest drive to raise $22 million for medicine, vaccines and other non-food relief.

"We have the means of cutting by half the present global death rate of 38,000 children each day... and I find it unconscionable that these children should die of preventable causes," Bruce said.

Hepburn's eyes glistened with tears as she described the poor, starving children she saw in Ethiopia while accompanying Bruce for five days in mid-March.

She noted that as an adolescent in Holland after World War II, she was the recipient of food from a United Nations relief agency.

"Without that nutrition, my health might well have been impaired for life," she said.

Enough Is Enough

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former network executive Fred Silverman says he figures that since he's become an independent producer he's committed about 100 murders.

Silverman is the executive producer of NBC's "Matlock" and "In the Heat of the Night" and CBS' "Jake and the Fatman." He also produces the "Perry Mason" series and is planning two more series, including a revival of "Burke's Law" with Gene Barry.

"But no more mysteries for me," said Silverman, formerly head of programming at CBS, former president of ABC Entertainment and former president of NBC.

"I feel like I've earned a law degree with all these lawyers," he said Wednesday. "I think Dean Hargrove, my co-executive producer, and I have committed about 100 murders so far."

Opening lead: Two of ♠
 This hand comes from rubber bridge—nothing other than 150 honor could explain South's determination to rebid his five-card heart suit with his balanced hand. Not that we are enamored with North's decision to respond two spades on his four-card suit either—a value bid of three no trump is more to our liking. East's double was lead-directing, requesting his partner to lead dummy's first-bid suit. Except that his partner had mentioned the denomination first, North could have saved the day by converting to six no trump, a contract that could not be defeated from his side of the table.

West duly led the two of spades, and it was obvious to all and sundry that it was a singleton. Declarer did not fancy his chances, but he was not prepared to surrender without a fight. He decided to try to put the fact that West held only one spade to good use. He rose with dummy's ace of spades, then drew trumps

Declarer cashed the ace-king of clubs and ace of diamonds, then overtook the jack of diamonds with the table's queen. Now he led the jack of clubs and discarded the king of diamonds from hand!

West was helpless. Down to nothing but minor-suit cards, he had no option but to win the queen and then put declarer back in dummy with a minor-suit card. Declarer discarded his two losing spades on the tens of diamonds and clubs, and brought home the slam for the loss of only one club trick.

We don't know who played this hand. If nobody claims it, perhaps we'll pass it off as our own in years to come.

TULIP FESTIVAL 1988

1988 Tulip Festival Features Charles Kuralt, Elizabeth II

WASHINGTON — The Downtown Washington Association is presenting the second annual revival of the Tulip Festival in downtown Washington April 15-17. The festival began in 1937 to honor the Dutch community of Beaufort County and ran until the beginning of World War II.

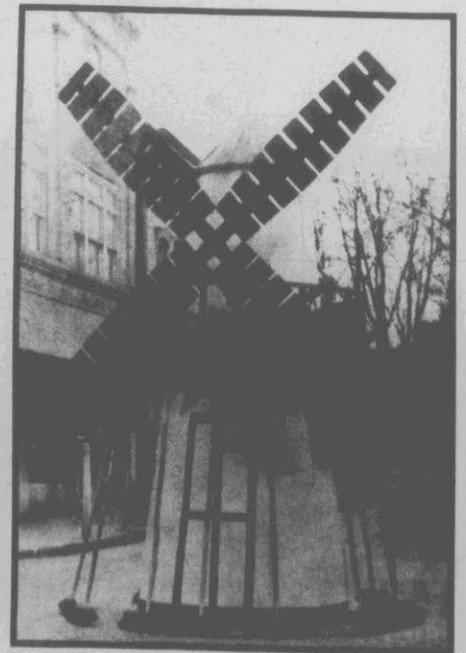

This year's festival will open with the farewell performance of "North Carolina Is My Home," a musical narrative celebration of North Carolina composed and performed by Charles Kuralt and Loonis McGlohon, both eastern North Carolina natives. The performance will be held Friday, April 15 at 8 p.m. in the Washington High School Auditorium.

Also making an appearance at the Tulip Festival is the Elizabeth II. The ship will arrive on Wednesday, April 13 at noon, escorted by a flotilla of boats and will dock at the downtown waterfront during the festival. There will be an admission fee for those who tour the boat.

April 16 events open with sculling races and a 5K run at 8 a.m. followed by a parade at 10 a.m. Other events include the crowning of the Tulip Queen and Little Miss Tulip, student oratory contests, parachute jumps by the 82nd Airborne, concerts by the U.S. Marine Corps Band and choral group, folk musicians, magicians, clowns, Dutch food prepared by the Terra Ceia community and tulip sales. There will also be horse rides, carriage rides, a children's petting zoo, food booths and other vendors. Downtown merchants plan sidewalk sales and special Tulip Festival prices.

The Washington Civic Center is the site of the Tulip Ball the night of April 16 and features the Tommy Campbell Band's big band sound. The weekend will end with the April 17 afternoon performance of Malarme, a chamber music ensemble from Duke University, at the Civic Center.

Tickets to the "North Carolina Is My Home" performance and the Tulip Ball may be obtained by sending $10 for each ticket to P.O. Box 1422, Washington, N.C. 27889 or by calling the Beaufort County Arts Council at 946-2504.

Dutch Foods At The Tulip Festival

The Terra Ceia Christian School Ladies Auxiliary will serve a variety of Dutch foods at the Tulip Festival Saturday April 16. Some of the delicacies will be available for on-the-spot consumption all day and others will be packaged to take home.

Start the day with coffee and hot fried oliebollen, which are similar to doughnuts without the hole. Then for lunch sample a traditional Dutch soup. Pea soup, made from dried split peas and hambone, also called snert, is best known for its thick consistency and green color. Groentesoep or vegetable soup incorporates a variety of vegetables and small meat balls in a beef stock. These soups will be served with homemade rolls and a choice of imported Dutch cheese or pork sausage made by the Terra Ceia Christian School Society. Gouda cheese is a mild creamy yellow cheese and Leyden cheese is similar but spiced with cumin seed.

Other Dutch baked items will be sold to take home. Various cookies, apple bread, peppermints and licorise, chocolate, almond paste and soup mixes will be available.

Another booth will display Delft blue pottery for sale as well as Terra Ceia Christian School cookbooks. The recipes for many of the foods served at the booths are printed in the cookbooks.

The fifth and sixth graders from TCCS will sing a number of songs at the festival. The Auxiliary invites all of you to participate in the activities and enjoy some international cuisine at the same time.

It is a Dutch custom to give Barket or almond letters to friends and relatives on Saint Nickolas Day, December 5. The pastry is baked in the shape of the first letter of the last name of the person to whom it is given. For children it is baked in the shape of the first letter of their first name.

Barket is also baked at Christmas in round shapes and decorated to resemble wreaths. Since most people in the Netherlands do not have ovens, these pastries are ordered from a bakery. Bread and other baked goods are delivered to a customer's home.

The recipe for barket follows:

Filling

Grate 7 cups of almond paste
Work in 4 egg whites
1 tbsp lemon extract and almond extract to taste
½ cup sugar
Let stand overnight.

Pastry

1½ cup real butter
½ cup shortening

3 cup flour
½ cup cornstarch
1 cup ice water

Mince chilled butter and shortening. Sift flour and cornstarch together, work into butter mixture. Add ice water, stir with a fork until just blended.

Divide into four portions. Roll out each portion into a rectangular shape on a floured surface. Cut into strips about 3½ inches wide and lay a roll of almond paste down the center. Lap pastry over paste and dampen edge with ice water. Seal the edges and lay seam side down on a greased cookie sheet. Brush each roll with beaten egg yolk and slit at intervals to let steam escape and prevent bursting.

Bake approximately eight minutes at 425°, then reduce heat to 375° and bake for approximately ten more minutes. Remove from baking sheet and cool on wire racks. These freeze very well.
