U.S. Blasts Iranian Oil Platforms, Sinks Boat

By ALY MAHMOUD
Associated Press Writer
MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — The U.S. Navy today destroyed two offshore Iranian oil platforms, sank a defending Iranian patrol boat and bombed an Iranian navy frigate. Iran attacked oil facilities off Sharjah and fired on at least two U.S. vessels.

The American attack on the Persian Gulf oil platforms came in retaliation for a mine explosion that tore a hole in an American frigate last week, injuring 10 crewmen.

Also today, Iran said the United States had entered the Iran-Iraq war, charging that U.S. helicopters supported an Iraqi land offensive in the Faw Peninsula. There was no immediate response from Washington.

The White House said three U.S. warships ships blasted each Iranian platform. No American casualties were reported in the U.S. attacks, and the Iranians fled prior to the shelling, the White House said.

Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci said an American helicopter also was fired upon during the raid but was not hit.

One U.S. warship fired missiles at two approaching Iranian jet fighters, but the fighters reversed course and it was unclear whether they were hit, Carlucci said.

He said an Iranian patrol boat fired on the U.S. cruiser Wainwright, which took part in the attack on one of the platforms.

The Wainwright was not hit. He said the U.S. frigate Simpson returned fire and sank the patrol boat.

About seven hours after the oil platform attack, the 310-foot Iranian frigate Sahand "was noticed closing rapidly upon three U.S. warships," said Dan Howard, the Pentagon's chief spokesman.

The Iranian warship then fired upon three U.S. aircraft on patrol in the Strait of Hormuz, the entrance to the gulf.

The aircraft, A-6 Intruders, "returned fire with two Harpoon missiles and a number of laser-guided bombs. Shortly thereafter, the USS Strauss, a destroyer, engaged the Sahand with an additional Harpoon," Howard said.

He said the Sahand was on fire and "the smoke is so heavy that it's difficult to do a further assessment at this point."

Iran's official Islamic Republic

News Agency said the U.S. warships first struck the Sassan platform in the southern gulf at 9 a.m. (1:30 a.m. EDT). Twenty-three minutes later they attacked the Nasr platform at nearby Sirri Island, IRNA said.

An Iranian warship later shelled the Mubarak oilfield off Sharjah, an emirate in the southern gulf, shipping executives said.

Targeted in the attack were the Scanbay drilling rig, the 112,744-ton British tanker York Marine and a storage facility.

The executives, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the York

Marine was set afire and that its crew had abandoned the vessel. The Scanbay reported it was under attack by four gunboats, they said.

The Iranians also fired on the press helicopter of the NBC television network, but did not harm the aircraft or its passengers, executives said.

The London-based Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence Unit reported a U.S. tugboat and supply vessel, the Willi Tide, also was fired on off Sharjah but was not hit.

They said unidentified warplanes

Royal Family Member Urges Terrorists' Release

By CHARLES CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer
ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — A member of Kuwait's royal family, held hostage aboard a jumbo jet, said today he wants his government to give in to the hijackers' demand and free 17 terrorists imprisoned in Kuwait.

Speaking extremely slowly and in a tired voice, a man identified by the Arab hijackers as Fadel Khaled Al-Sabah said: "I hope Kuwait releases all the prisoners." He then mumbled something unintelligible, and added "Thanks to God."

The control tower at Algiers Houari Boumediene Airport asked in English that the statement be repeated. One of the hijackers then got on the radio and replied: "He doesn't want to talk."

Reports from a hostage freed earlier said that Al-Sabah was in very bad condition, apparently suffering from a nervous disorder. Two other members of the royal family, Al-Sabah's sisters, also are aboard Kuwait Airways Flight 422.

The Thailand-to-Kuwait flight was hijacked April 5 with 112 people aboard and forced to land in Mashhad, Iran, where 57 were released. On April 8, the jet flew to Cyprus, where two passengers were killed and 13 freed. Since landing in Algiers one passenger has been freed, leaving about 35 hostages, including the three members of Kuwait's extensive royal family.

The five to eight hijackers are demanding the release of the 17 men jailed for bombing the U.S. and French embassies in Kuwait in 1983.

Kuwait has refused the demand.

The Shiite Moslem hijackers are armed with grenades and guns and have threatened to blow up the plane.

Algerian officials privately expressed hope the gunmen might free one or more of their estimated 35 hostages early today as a gesture of goodwill to mark the beginning of the monthlong fast of Ramadan, traditionally a period of reconciliation for devout Moslems.

The hijackers demanded a special Ramadan meal before dawn, but no hostage had been released when the fast began at daybreak.

On Sunday, a passenger radioed a message to the control tower saying Ed Renfrow, a Democrat seeking a third four-year term as state auditor, spoke to about 30 supporters at a breakfast today at the Three Steers Restaurant in Greenville.

Renfrow, who describes his office as "the fiscal watchdog of state government," said the state auditor files a public financial statement for North Carolina and looks for opportunities for state government to save money.

"The audit function heads off what could turn into very corrupt practices if they were not checked regularly," said Renfrow, who served three terms in the state senate and worked 18 years in private accounting before becoming state auditor.

"We carry out those rules, those laws and those appropriations that are enacted by the General Assembly," Renfrow said. "I think that's a healthy atmosphere ... when

Parents, Students Look For Ways To Pay Rising Education Expenses

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer
It is no secret the cost of secondary education in North Carolina continues to increase each year, and yet students and parents are finding ways to pay the bills through student aid, work and some sacrifice as state universities and community colleges continue to thrive through increasing enrollment.

It is very difficult for students to "work their way through school" like their parents may have done as education costs increase while minimum wages remain stable, said Eleanor Morris, financial aid officer at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. "Some students are doing it, but at what price I don't know."

Also recognizing the seemingly

This is the second of a three-part series evaluating financial aid, education costs and enrollment at North Carolina's colleges.

ironic combination of increasing costs and enrollment, Dr. Nathan Sims, vice president of Student Services and Special Programs for the 16-campus University of North Carolina system, said "there are two strange things going on. There are more (students) attending college," but money for education has not significantly increased through student aid.

The University system's long-range planning document echoes Sims' observations of less funds for education. "There is ample evidence to suggest that a serious problem is once again arising in the ability of North Carolina's citizenry to afford the cost of a postsecondary education," it says. "Numerous studies show that the costs of paying for a college education over the last decade have risen faster than increases in personal income."

Tuition and fees in the system increased by at least 20 percent in about five years from the 1982-83 academic year to the 1987-88 year.

Fayetteville State University topped the list with a 46 percent increase from $602 to $882, followed by the University of North Carolina at Wilmington at 41 percent from $645 to $911 and North Carolina Central University at 38 percent from $650 to $894.

East Carolina University's tuition and fees increased by 26 percent from $668 to $842, while the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

A Labor Of Love

Kay Sherrod says she has promised herself to do whatever it takes to see that her children get college educations.

But keeping that promise hasn't been easy, so now Ms. Sherrod is working two jobs to keep her daughter, Kimberly, a freshman at St. Augustine College in Raleigh, in school. Five days a week from 6:45 a.m. to 2:45 p.m. she works as a nurse's assistant at Guardian Care Nursing Home in Farmville. This is a job she has held for the past 15 years. This past January, she added to her schedule a 15-hour a week part-time job — cleaning an office every weeknight from 5:30 p.m. until 8:30 p.m. for a Raleigh cleaning contractor.

The Sherrods are only one of many local families dealing with the cost of getting a college education. Paying for an education is, for them, a cooperative project and a full-time responsibility.

Ms. Sherrod says Kimberly, a 1987 graduate of Conley High School and a nursing major, also works to keep herself in school. This semester she is serving as a security guard on the St. Augustine campus as part of a work-study program. She'll take the summer off and come home and work to help foot next year's bills, her mother said.

Ms. Sherrod, who lives off U.S. 264 about three miles west of Greenville, shares home and living expenses with her mother, Hattie Sherrod, and her sister, Shirley Sherrod. She has one other daughter, Ashley, five, who she also hopes will go to college. "I hope I'll be able to work then just like I do now to get Ashley through college, too," she said. "If not, maybe Kimberly, once she's a nurse, will help."

SECOND JOB — Greenville area resident Kay Sherrod works at one full-time and one part-time job to enable her daughter, Kimberly, to attend St. Augustine College in Raleigh.

P&Z To Consider Extension Of City Zoning Jurisdiction

The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission will consider the extension of the city's extrajurisdictional planning and zoning jurisdiction south of the city when it meets for its regular monthly meeting Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Council Chambers of City Hall.

The area to be considered is located south of White Road (SR 1708) and east of SR 1725 to N.C. 43 (Bell's Fork).

This item was referred back to the Planning and Zoning Commission by the City Council at its March 7 meeting to allow proper notification to owners by certified mail.

According to Bobby Roberson, director of planning and development, an ETJ is a designated area set aside for physical planning and implemented through the zoning and subdivision regulations of the city. He said such designations prevent the negative consequences of "leap frog" development.

In other matters scheduled Tuesday, the commission will consider a request by James F. Arthur, Jr. and Louis C. Arthur to rezone a 3.87 acre tract located off the southwest intersection of 14th Street and Charles Boulevard and being lot 2, block 49-B of the South Evans Redevelopment Project Area from CN (neighborhood commercial) and CH (highway

Rescue School Completed

DURHAM — Fourteen Pitt County residents were among about 250 students from across the state that attended classes at the 27th annual North Carolina Rescue College at the Durham Fire Department Training Academy Saturday and Sunday.

Seven of them received certificates signifying their completion of the four-year course at the school's closing exercises Sunday afternoon.

The graduating emergency service workers included James Ormond, a member of the Greenville Fire-Rescue Department, and Eastern Pines Rescue Squad members Dale Bailey, Kathy Bailey, Donna Elks, Stuart Elks, Ervin Hardee and John Pollock.

Stuart Savage, a staff writer for The Daily Reflector, was recognized at the school's opening assembly Saturday as being the only instructor still active in the school who was an instructor at the first rescue college session in Greenville in 1961. Graham Johnson of Elkin and Max Wesson of Claremont were recognized as having attended the first school as students.

Johnson, an instructor with the N.C. Department of Insurance's fire and rescue services division, is a former director of the rescue college and still teaches at the school. Wesson, vice commander of the state rescue and emergency medical services association, is an area coordinator for the state's Office of Emergency Medical Services.

Greenville native Wilburn Small, of Wilson, is director of the rescue college and Joe Burris of Greenville is an instructor.

Small was training officer for the Greenville Fire-Rescue Department before joining the N.C. Department of Insurance's Fire and Rescue Service Division as an instructor in 1974. He is presently director of field services for the fire and rescue service division.

Burris, who joined the fire and rescue service division staff in 1984 after serving as training coordinator and shift captain for the Catawba County Emergency Medical Services system, is also a former Greenville Fire-Rescue Department employee.

Small, Burris and Savage were all members of the former volunteer Greenville Rescue Squad.

The first rescue college program, sponsored by the insurance department and the Greenville Rescue Squad, was held in Greenville in 1961. After four years, the program had grown so large it was moved to Raleigh, where more facilities were available for the one-weekend school.

Later the school was expanded to two weekends to accommodate the growing enrollment and in 1978 the college was moved to Durham's new public safety training academy to provide better facilities for the college.

Other Pitt County residents attending the school's first year class Saturday and Sunday were Eric Thomas, Sharon Thomas, Cindy Asby, Phyllis White, Gary White, Donna Garris and Tim Garris, all members of the Ayden Rescue Squad.

Graham In China

BEIJING (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham preached his first sermon in China, a fundamentalist teaching on the meaning of the cross, to more than 1,500 believers in a Beijing church Sunday morning.

"I would like to bring greetings to you from Christians all over the world," Graham said at the start of his hour-long sermon, which was immediately translated into Chinese.

"Christians all over the world know about the church in China. They think about you and they pray for you," he said.

The 69-year-old Baptist minister arrived five days ago for his first visit to China at the invitation of the China Christian Council and the Chinese People's Association for Friendship with Foreign Countries.

He will travel to Nanking, Shanghai and Canton before leaving for Hong Kong at the end of the month.

Church workers at the Chongwenmen church in central Beijing said Graham's appearance was not announced beforehand to the congregation and said Graham is known to very few Chinese Christians.

But the church's main and side sanctuaries were full, and latecomers had to stand at the back, in the aisles and in the foyer.

Some were Chinese who usually worship at other Beijing churches, but many were foreigners, including a group of 27 Taiwanese Presbyterians from Brazil.

The Chinese, many of whom nod off during the hour-and-a-half-long sermons by Chinese pastors, listened attentively to Graham's message.

CHILDREN AND TMJ SYNDROME

Many adults develop problems with their jaw joints which are primarily caused by a bad bite, stress, or a combination of the two. This condition is known as TMJ SYNDROME (temporomandibular joint syndrome). Symptoms are varied and include ache and pains in the joints (just in front of the ear), headache, stiff neck, popping and clicking in the jaw, and muscle spasms.

Although most TMJ patients are adults, it is possible for the condition to develop at an early age. Headaches, stuffy ear, earaches or ringing, and clenching or bruxing of the teeth can start as soon as there are teeth in the mouth.

Because of the great variety of symptoms associated with TMJ syndrome, it has been called "the great masquerader." Still, it is better to err on the side of caution. That is why it is recommended that you or your child visit our office. We are versed in treating TMJ syndrome as soon as symptoms develop.

We welcome new patients,

Agricultural Extension Agent
Often, cattle producers or horse owners in our area don't have a pasture to provide summer grazing. If the land is available, two summer annuals which will produce large amounts of forage are pearl millet and sorghum-sudangrass hybrids.

These two grasses can produce forage from May to mid October, but peak production months are June, July, and August. They are both summer annuals and die quickly after the first frost. Pearl millet is usually the best of the two species for grazing and sorghum-sudan would be the choice for hay. Horses should not be allowed to graze sorghum-sudan because of a fatal disorder reported in the southwestern United States when horses were grazing this grass. Cystitis, the name of the syndrome, only applies to horses and does not affect the hay of sorghum-sudangrass.

Both of these grasses can be planted from mid April to late June when the soil temperature has reached at least 60 degrees Fahrenheit. Plantings can be drilled or broadcast with satisfactory results. Many varieties are offered in the state. The dwarf varieties of pearl millet will produce leafy, high quality forage for grazing.

All summer annuals will perform best at a pH of 6.0 - 6.5. A soil test should be the basis for fertilizer applications. Usual requirements at seeding are 30-50 pounds per acre of nitrogen and phosphorus and 60-100 lbs. of potash. A nitrogen topdressing of about 50 pounds per acre should be made when plants are 6 to 8 inches high and after each cutting or grazing cycle except the last.

The quality of pearl millet and sorghum-sudangrass is best when used in a young, leafy stage (prior to heading). Cross fencing and rotational grazing or controlled grazing are the best ways to manage the pasture for quality forage throughout the summer.

All species of sorghum have some potential to produce prussic acid in ruminant animals. This poisoning occurs under pasture conditions and animals are most susceptible when grazing young seedlings, young regrowth shoots, stunted growth, and frosted plants. There is no danger of prussic acid poisoning when feeding hay or silage made from these plants. Pearl millet does not produce prussic acid under any conditions. Nitrate poisoning of animals grazing summer annuals is a possibility as with other plants. Nitrate poisoning is the result of animals consuming plants which have accumulated too much nitrate nitrogen. This usually only happens when excessive amounts of nitrogen fertilizer are applied and/or plants undergo stress, usually by drought conditions.

Slain Marine Remembered As A 'Peacemaker'

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — Cpl. Ricardo Villahermosa, a Camp Lejeune Marine killed in Panama last week, was eulogized as a "peacemaker" for his efforts on behalf of his country.

The corporal was saluted with a three-gun volley and taps. Villahermosa's 3-year-old daughter Victoria sat on her mother's lap throughout the service, playing with a strand of beads around her mother's neck.

A Marine Corps chaplain sprinkled the flag-draped coffin with holy water Sunday at a memorial service. "That young man chose — as we all do — to be a peacemaker," the chaplain said. "That is what we live for.

That is what we die for. "When he joined the Corps, he knew he may be called to defend that peace," said the chaplain, whose identity was not available. "He shared his love with his family, friends and even strangers, but he most assuredly shared it with his brothers in the Corps." The Rev. John Flood, minister of Whitakers Baptist Church and the grandfather of Villahermosa's wife, Titina, said the 25-year-old Marine was part of a "God-ordained force to protect. "Without that protection, we are loose for the enemy to destroy."

Villahermosa's brother, Hendrick, of California, was also at the service. Villahermosa's mother, Juanita, was ill and could not make the trip from Puerto Rico, friends said.

After the service, friends of the family remembered Rick as a happy, friendly man. "He was fun to be with. If you were down, you could go to him," said Diane Lamm of New Bern. "If you didn't have a brother, you had one in him. He most surely died a hero."

Cynthia Marker, who was a neighbor of Villahermosa at a mobile home park in Bridgeton, said she saw Villahermosa the night before he reported to Camp Lejeune. "He just didn't seem right. He told me he wasn't coming back. I thought he was kidding," she said.

Flood said he received a similar impression from talking to family members.

"I don't think he was looking to come back," Flood said.

Villahermosa, a weapons platoon squad leader, was shot in the abdomen Tuesday by fellow Marines. He was part of a 12-Marine security patrol at a tank petroleum storage area near a U.S. military base on Monday night and was killed after the patrol split up and a trip flare ignited, causing a crack that sounded like gunfire, said Air Force Col. Ron Sconyers of the U.S. Southern Command in Panama.

Villahermosa's family flew to North Carolina from Puerto Rico and California for the service at Johnson Funeral Home in Rocky Mount. Villahermosa was buried at a family cemetery near Sharpsburg.

A Marine later handed the corporal's folded flag to Victoria. A second flag went to Villahermosa's father, Augustine, of Puerto Rico, who flew to North Carolina for the service.

Continental Faces Heavy Fines

WASHINGTON (AP) — Continental Airlines faces possible fines of nearly $1 million for various safety violations dating to late 1986, government officials say, prompting a plane-by-plane inspection beginning today of the country's fourth largest air carrier.

Transportation Secretary James Burnley announced Sunday that the Federal Aviation Administration would expand its special safety probe of Eastern Airlines, announced last week, to Continental as well because of the alleged violations already found.

Both airlines are subsidiaries of Texas Air Corp., the nation's largest airline holding company which itself is facing a review by the Transportation Department to determine whether its management and finances meet federal standards.

Frank Lorenzo, chairman of Texas Air, said Continental would cooperate with the investigation, as has Eastern, and that he expects the findings will show the airlines are being operated safely. He blamed the two airlines' problems on union leaders who he said are "trying to bring the company down" by raising safety concerns.

Last week the FAA slapped Eastern, which is the sixth largest airline, with a $823,000 civil penalty because of safety violations found last year.

The agency also began ramp inspections of Eastern jets.

Burnley said about 200 of Eastern's 267 aircraft have been inspected and 19 were temporarily kept from flying until problems were corrected.

"We're going to extend the ramp inspections, intensive inspection, that we began on Eastern last Wednesday to Continental as well, beginning tomorrow," Burnley said on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press" on Sunday.

"We'll have people who'll be walking around the planes and through them and talking to the maintenance personnel and the folks in the cockpit and making sure that anything that can be readily identified is correct," he said.

Burnley said the action was taken because a review of FAA files showed that various FAA offices around the country have "almost a million dollars in proposed penalties against Continental."

Education Costs Rise

(Continued from A-1) the University of North Carolina at Charlotte and N.C. A&T State University tied for 20 percent increases from $702 to $845, $647 to $777 and $743 to $889, respectively.

Comparatively, in a six-year span the state and Pitt County's per capita income increased about 50 percent, said Dlores Porter of the Documents Branch of the state Department of Cultural Resources in presenting a reference for evaluating how quickly the state and the county's per capita income increases.

From 1979 to 1985, the per capita income in the state increased by about 55 percent from $6,132 to $9,517, while the county per capita income increased by about 50.9 percent from $5,577 to $8,417, Ms. Porter said.

The state per capita income in 1982 was $9,153, while Pitt County's per capita income was $8,404, she said.

In 1985, the latest per capita figures available, the state figure was $9,517 while the county figure was $8,417, representing increases of about 4 percent and less than one percent, respectively, in those three years.

North Carolina students entering college in the fall of 1975 could have expected to pay about $2,181 for one year of school at Elizabeth City State University; $2,178 for one year at ECU, and $2,398 for one year at UNC-CH. Those figures, supplied by Linda Balfour at the General Administration office at the UNC system, include a room on campus, board, tuition, fees, books and a nominal amount for personal expenses. Some dormitory rooms are more expensive, and the figures will fluctuate depending upon whether the student eats rib eyes or bologna sandwiches.

A state student entering ECSU in the fall of 1987 could have expected to pay about $3,800 each year, an increase of $1,619 from 1975 or 74 percent more. The figure was supplied by the admissions office at ECSU and includes $870 for personal expenses and textbooks.

A state student entering ECU in the fall of 1987 would have expected to pay about $4,030 each year, an increase of $1,852 from 1975 or 85 percent more.

The figure was supplied by the ECU Student Financial Aid Information Bulletin and includes $670 for personal expenses.

A state student entering UNC-CH in the fall of 1987 could have expected to pay about $4,900 each year, an increase of $2,502 from 1975 or 104 percent. The estimate was supplied by the UNC-CH Undergraduate Admissions Office and includes $700 for personal expenses.

Full-time community college students could expect to pay about $32 for tuition in 1980, $66 in 1986-87 and $75 in 1987-88.

(Continued from A-1) that the hostages faced certain death if the 17 pro-Iranian prisoners were not freed by Kuwait.

A man aboard the jet, who identified himself as Suleiman Farhan Doukhi, said in the message: "All the passengers are in good health. I hope the Kuwait government will act quickly to liberate the 17 young prisoners. Otherwise, we all face a black end."

Three other passengers have made similar statements since the plane landed in Algiers early Wednesday.

During the night, Algerian negotiators repeatedly went to the plane. Around 2 a.m. (9 p.m. Sunday EDT), three Algerian security vehicles shuttled across the tarmac, going separately two and from the aircraft.

Algerian television cameras caught one of the hijackers coming down off the plane during the night to negotiate with unidentified persons in a car near the jetliner.

The Algerian camera showed a hooded man coming to the bottom of the stairs and, after a few minutes, returning to the plane and coming down again with a second man. They stayed in the car about 15 minutes.

Contacts intensified Sunday between President Chadli Bendjedid of Algeria and other Arab heads of state. Saudi Arabian King Fahd, Kuwaiti ruler Shiek Jaber Al-Ahmed Al-Sabah and Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi all reportedly spoke by telephone with Bendjedid during the day.

Algerian authorities abruptly expelled hundreds of reporters Sunday from the section of the VIP lounge where they had been staying for nearly a week.

Bridge Vigil Ends

(Related story on A-6) OREGON INLET, N.C. (AP) — State Senate candidate Dan Lawrence gave up his vigil on the Herbert Bonner Bridge this morning and announced he was no longer a candidate for the seat.

At 11:15 a.m., Lawrence announced he was ending his protest over the failure of officials to protect the bridge against erosion. State Sen. Marc Basnight, D-Dare, was on the bridge at the time of the announcement, having arrived after Lawrence sent word through a reporter that he wanted Basnight there. Lawrence also announced that he was giving his support to Basnight.

"I don't want even one person to feel that this was done as a political stunt, detracting from the great need we have to save this bridge and save this island," Lawrence said late this morning.

Basnight and Lawrence walked side-by-side off the catwalk where Lawrence had staged his protest since Friday morning.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

What Of Issues?

Print Reporters Play Role, Too

Helen Thomas, the United Press International White House reporter who closes presidential news conferences, sees presidential candidates as relying mostly on video images in their campaigns.

Consequently the in-depth coverage of candidates' views that print reporters — newspaper and magazine — can give is being lost to the public, so says Ms. Thomas.

The famous reporter expressed her opinion in Greenville at the Phi Kappa Phi initiation and installation ceremony at East Carolina University.

"Television is everything," she said. "No longer do advance teams try to gather enormous crowds at airports or those big red, white and blue rallies." The candidates make quick appearances, take a few questions from reporters and they move on.

The modern campaign process puts no pressure on candidates to give detailed responses to issues, she said. Candidates are like moving targets. The press conference where myriad questions could be expected are avoided "like the plague."

She said it is the role of the press to pin down candidates, obtain specific answers and in that way inform the public.

Without doubt the method of campaigning has radically changed and a prime goal of many candidates is two minutes of exposure on the evening television news.

It thus is little wonder that the political parties go looking for photogenic candidates whose physical features will be favorable to as many voters as possible.

But what of issues and the character of the candidates? What of their resolve to remain cool and collected under pressure? The tests of their knowledge of national and international issues and of their toughness under fire simply isn't there without the lengthy questioning that goes with in-depth news articles.

There is little doubt that a large bloc of the voters read what the political reporters write, but without adequate time for reporters to "get at" issues it is impossible to offer the substance that the articles need to inform the electorate.

It should not be forgotten, however, that print reporters have the capability of uncovering facts about candidates' views beyond the press conference. There have been examples this year of enterprise reporting which changed the course of the campaign. While glamour candidates angle toward quick television appearances, the print reporters play their major role in coverage of the candidates. The opportunities for face-to-face questioning of candidates may be less now but there is still a wealth of information about the candidates which is uncovered by careful research.

And the nation is the beneficiary of all this. Lacking all the information possible about the presidential candidates the political process is left with the chance of producing a horrible mistake — if not this year, at some time in the future.

500 Congressmen And A Baby Bill

Recently, I took my children to see "Three Men and a Baby," the mega-movie-money-maker that requires little elucidation beyond its title. It is about three swinging New York roommates who must work outside their penthouse so that they can pay the mortgage and still have enough money left for throwing lavish parties, sleeping with dream girls, and heaven knows what else. This they manage with aplomb until a baby — sired unknowingly by one of the trio — is left at their doorstep, compliments of an ex-dream girl.

What follows is the predictable "dumbo dad" routine, only with three dumbos instead of one. And what a time they have of it! While the female apartment manager is on hand to help, the grandma and one true love have better things to do, leaving the dads dizzied by the competing demands of home and work. They've ceased socializing; they're too tuckered out, and anyway, they'd rather be with the baby.

Well, wouldn't you know this would happen? Just when the guys have gotten the hang of fathering and have fallen out of their post-party depression and into a workable routine — Mom shows up! Newly refreshed, she sweeps up the baby, thanks them and heads for home on another continent. The fellows are stupefied, and by the time they come to their senses and race to the airport, mother and child's airplane has taken off for London.

Glumly, they head for home, and from the looks of it are about to succumb to the syndrome of the empty nest, when they find the baby and the mother waiting at their doorstep. Too much to handle — an acting career and the baby all alone, sobs the mom. Nodding heads and empathy all round. Naturally, there is an answer to this quandary: They make room for mommy! There's always room for another pair of helping hands in the penthouse nursery.

Call me cynical, but it strikes me that members of Congress are finally responding to the ballooning problem of child care in this country because enough of them — men, that is — are having to take part in rearing their children. Unlike, say, nearly all of the industrialized countries of Europe, which have provided parental supports like paid leave and subsidized child care for longer than the lives of most U.S. representatives, our government has looked on birth and child-rearing as a kind of elective event, offering few sympathies and fewer subsidies.

But at long last a number of child-care measures are scheduled for congressional action, the most effective and expensive of which is the ABC bill, the Act for Better Child Care Services, sponsored by Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn. It is a $2.5 billion package that would be targeted primarily to help moderate- and low-income families pay for child care.

And in what must be the political squint of the season, Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, has introduced a child-care bill — more modest, mind you, than Dodd's — but a bill all the same. This from a lawmaker whose indifference to child care (until now) was oddly paired with an obsession to protect the child before it was born.

Not a moment too soon have these measures come down the congressional pike. Here are a few fun facts on the state of child care in America, land of the free and home of the Supermom, as of 1986:

- When the women who today are between 30 and 39 years old were between 20 and 30, only 58.3 percent had children. Today 78.2 percent of them do — a 40 percent increase, and many are trying to pursue professional careers.

- 70 percent of all moms with school-age children work outside the home.

- Female heads of household surged to 6 million in 1986 from 1.5 million in 1950.

- One in six kindergarteners was born to a teen-ager.

- There are at least 2 million latchkey children, but only 4 percent of all schools operate after classroom hours.

- Meanwhile fish gotta swim, birds gotta fly, moms gotta work and congressmen gotta ... baby-sit?

Jackson Evoking Cheers, Fears

NEW YORK — In the Democratic primaries held so far this year, Jesse L. Jackson has received an uneven white vote, but not an unpatterned one. He does best among whites in states with the fewest blacks, worst in states with the most.

ABC News exit polls show, for example, that Jackson drew 23 percent of the white vote in Wisconsin, where only 3 percent of the state's population is black, and 22 percent in Connecticut, where the black population is 6 percent. By contrast, he received just 6 percent of the white vote in Mississippi, where the black population is 32 percent (the highest in the nation), and just 8 percent in Illinois, where the black population is 13 percent (highest in the Midwest).

Does proximity make blacks and whites more antagonistic? History and sociology suggest it often does, and this past week in New York — still the biggest stewpot of racial, ethnic and religious tensions in the country — contemporary politics appeared to be seconding the notion.

Jackson's surprising strength in the primaries thus far has forced whites here and elsewhere to grapple with an unsettling and unexpected question: Are we really ready for this? Jesse Jackson? The presidency?

That this drama is being played out entirely among Democrats — the party that prides itself on its commitment to principles of inclusiveness, and that, in turn, has been rewarded with near monolithic political support from blacks — makes the moral and ethical dimensions of the question only more telling.

Until the campaign landed here for the April 19 primary, the racial component in Jackson's quest tended to batted about noisily in private — and gingerly (if at all) in public. But the Big Apple has a way of teasing everything to the surface. With Mayor Edward I. Koch stirring the pot, there has been plenty of blunt political chatter all week about voting hopes or fears; about voting positive or negative; about whether a vote for Sen. Albert Gore Jr. (Tenn.) is a vote for Jackson (because it is a vote taken from Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, the leading white candidate) or a vote for Gore.

It has also been a week in which Jackson ran into his first rash of heckling and epithets ("Jesse, Jesse, he's our man," shouted a few dozen students at Rockland County Community College, "if he can't do it, Farr-a-khan!"). It has been a week when white leaders, such as New Yorker Geraldine A. Ferraro, the party's 1984 vice presidential nominee, asserted that Jackson has gotten a free ride because he is black. And it has been a week when blacks are beginning to express fear that the enormous pride Jackson's campaign has infused in their communities will come to grief this summer at the convention in Atlanta because "whitey won't let Jesse near the ticket," in the words of Theodore Miller, a carpenter's assistant from the Bronx.

Jackson has tried all year to run his campaign above all this. The only race-based rhetoric he has used in his stump speeches has been consistently positive and uplifting.

But even the nimble Jackson could not stay completely out of the quagmire last week. When he responded to gibes from Koch and Ferraro with a blunt comment of his own — "Suffice it to say that some people are making hysteria while I'm making history" — the New York tabloids had a field day. "Racial 'hysteria' comes from our town, sez Jax," blared the front-page headline on the Daily News.

Increased Trade Vs. Human Rights

WASHINGTON — Despite its secrecy, the rush toward an explosive increase in U.S.-Soviet trade has now become inescapable following Moscow talks by Commerce Secretary William Verity and his elite corps of U.S. businessmen operating under new rules not formally approved by the National Security Council (NSC).

The formation of U.S.-Soviet "working groups" gives governmental sanction and encouragement to private sector joint-venture schemes. From energy to autos, these are being worked out by American corporations and Soviet state-controlled production sectors.

Yet, despite high-level leaks and hints of what may lie ahead from Mikhail Gorbachev himself — if not from Ronald Reagan — the secrecy that cloaks the campaign for expanded Soviet trade suggests political fear that Congress and the U.S. public want answers to hard questions before going along with what the Commerce Department clearly has in mind. The biggest unanswered question is whether the U.S. should underwrite Gorbachev's economic program without guarantees that the Kremlin will not turn its new economic power against the U.S. in the future and will end right now its expansionist global policy.

In a letter to the Washington Post March 13, Verity complained about a published report that he was "scheming to promote more trade with the Soviet Union."

Not at all, he said, adding that, instead, the U.S. may be able only "to expand it somewhat" at best. But less than a month later, on April 6, he told The New York Times that he hoped bilateral trade would quintuple from the present $2 billion-a-year level. That sounds like more than "somewhat."

In Moscow, the message from Gorbachev at a glamorous, rarefied banquet for Verity and 500 American corporate grandees was both candid and sweeping. He proposed "a new system of coordinates in the economic relationship between our socially and ideologically different countries."

In an announcement immediately following that call for American help in making the Soviet Union competitive, Occidental Petroleum said it would build a giant petrochemical plant in the Ukraine. Occidental is one of seven major corporations that have formed a consortium for joint ventures involving major new facilities like the petrochemical plant — all, of course, to be built in the Soviet Union. American technology and management know-how will do the building. The Soviet Union will retain a 51-percent controlling interest in each operation.

The National Security Council, with President Reagan presiding, has not formally approved a policy for giving U.S. government support to such clearly strategic goals as petrochemical plants. Five years ago, in fact, the Reagan administration maneuvered hard to kill the second strand of the Siberian gas pipeline to Western Europe. The sale of gas from that pipeline would have enriched the Soviets by an estimated $125 billion in hard currency during the first two decades of the 21st century.

Indeed, the fact that energy is one of the key targets for Verity's new U.S.-Soviet working groups stirs worries here that, in its understandably desperate quest for hard currency, the Soviets may be working up to another effort to arrange new European contracts for the purchase of more natural gas. Verity's fast-forward toward a new U.S.-Soviet trade era would not discourage these Europeans.

But these worries have yet to find their normal outlet inside the Reagan administration — the NSC. A careful, low-key memorandum asking hard questions was quietly delivered to the NSC recently from the Pentagon, according to one source with close NSC contacts. But Lt. Gen. Colin Powell, Reagan's national security adviser, has taken no action.

In the days before the president's dramatic policy switch into U.S.-Soviet detente, that would have been unthinkable. Even Commerce's decision to establish U.S.-Soviet working groups — a real signal of change in economic relations — would have required a formal NSC session and a National Security Decision Directive signed by the president.

On Capitol Hill, worries run deep. The human-rights lobby is beginning to wonder whether the president is trimming linkage between trade and rights. Concern will grow if, as now rumored, the administration reduces its demands for Soviet human-rights performance as a condition for entry into GATT — the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

But as of today, Verity has brilliantly captured the initiative and shows no sign of letting it go.

Strength For Today

When a person is sincere, it is necessarily a sign that he, or she, has good judgment or even possesses an admirable character. The characteristic of a sincere person is that he, or she, has an idea in which they wholeheartedly believe. But if this ideal is twisted, mistaken or misguided, even sincerity can not save it from doing much harm.

History shows us that the world has suffered a great deal throughout the ages because of the activities of misguided zealots. In fact, they probably cause more damage than cynical and disillusioned people who simply follow their own advantage at the expense of everyone else.

Many a sincere national leader has brought his people to grief. And equally, sincere but misguided parents can create even more havoc in the lives of children than political tyrants and mistaken teachers.

Muscle-Bound America Has Few Options Against Bad Guys

Our attempts to get rid of Gen. Manuel A. Noriega of Panama have — at least until now — proved so ineffectual that they resemble the short act sequences of a comic opera.

The curtain opens as our government reveals that this reliable anti-communist ally of ours has been a big wholesale drug dealer. The figurehead president attempts to fire the general and gets the ax instead. We continue to recognize him as the true leader of Panama. We set him up in a secret house where he mumbles his recitativo. We put economic pressure on the dictator, which enables him to rise and belt out the popular Latin American aria "Against Yankee Imperialism." We try to bribe him to levitate off to Spain with all his loot and our promise of an American Express Gold Card. But he prefers to stay where he is. We fly American troops into Panama, where they are milling around in their enclaves. The sixth act is yet to come, but after nearly two months of Uncle Sam's political and financial and economic and diplomatic and military acts, the grin on Noriega's pock-marked face is still wide.

We may laugh at this but the matter is serious. It shows that the United States is muscle-bound. We may shoot men to the moon, we may blow up half of the world, we have advanced from gunboat diplomacy to Cap'n Weinberger's bequest of a 600-ship Navy. Yet we cannot get rid of Noriega — as indeed we failed to get rid of Fidel Castro, the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, Moammar Gadhafi, Daniel Ortega or Ho Chi Minh. A blockade will not do it. Economic pressure will not do it. Air power will not do it. There is one way to do it. Invade Panama City — go to war. We chose not to invade Havana or Hanoi or Tehran. (We did invade ... Grenada.) We will not invade Panama, I think.

The last time the United States got rid of a Latin American government without an invasion was in Guatemala in 1954. That was an easy CIA operation, dependent on a group of Guatemalan Contras. What few people, including the CIA, understand is how that kind of a success was not the first but the last of its kind.

We are not alone in this. Forty years ago Josef Stalin wanted to get rid of Marshal Tito; he could not do it, short of an invasion of Yugoslavia for which he did not have the nerve. His successors — Leonid I. Brezhnev, Yuri V. Andropov, Mikhail S. Gorbachev — would, I think, enjoy getting rid of the Romanian dictator Nicolae Ceausescu (a man as unsavory as Noriega). Unless the Red Army marches into Romania, it is impossible.

This raises another question. Should the United States try to get rid of dictators at all?

Noriega's Panama (just as Ortega's Nicaragua, or Castro's Cuba, or Gadhafi's Libya or Khomeini's Iran) is an independent republic. The United States liberated Cuba from Spain; we supported the creation of an independent Libya; we helped Iran to free itself from British and Russian spheres of influence. In the case of Panama we actually invented an entire country. We made it up, including its national flag (which American Grace Bigelow and Mme. Bunau-Varilla of France, having bought the material at Macy's, designed and stitched together on a sunny October afternoon in 1903 at the Bigelow estate in New York).

In 1776 we were the first colonial people who declared their independence. We are no longer alone in this. We have had hordes of imitators. Of the nearly 200 sovereign states of the world, the vast majority are former colonial countries, all of which at one time or another produced their own declarations of independence. But there the parallel ends. The first of these countries that declared its independence after the United States was Haiti. The history of its political freedoms during the last 200 years is not inspiring. Nor is that of many other countries in Central or South America or Asia or Africa. It was Aristotle who first suggested that every people will have the government they deserve.

— Ricardo Arias Calderon —

Could Democracy Already Be Under Way?

The first condition for building a democracy in Panama is to be rid of Gen. Manuel Noriega as head of the Panamanian military. He has been able thus far to resist efforts to oust him because his power is a complex one, cunningly developed over a 20-year period. During this time he has managed to bring together three factors:

First, the repressive capacity of an armed institution, which is at the same time a police organization, a military force, a bureau of investigation and an intelligence apparatus, and which also exercises other key functions of public administration with security significance.

Second, the economic power that results not just from widespread corruption spawning a network of investments and controlling interests but also from deep involvement in drug traffic and money laundering, with their retinue of transnational underworld connections and resources.

Third, the capacity for dissembling and connivance, which has permitted Noriega to function at once as agent of the CIA and associate of Fidel Castro, as participant in Col. Oliver North's activities in favor of the Contras and as supporter of the Sandinistas, and to maintain the underhanded favor of the U.S. security establishment while benefiting overtly from the preconceptions of so-called "progressive" and leftist forces.

The efforts to overcome Noriega's power have represented for the Panamanian people a profound and unprecedented learning experience, one that constitutes the indispensable basis for honest-to-goodness democracy. Above all, it is an experience in people participation. Never before in our history have so many people of different social and economic backgrounds shared in common feelings, actions and objectives as during the past 10 months, during which they have engaged in all forms of civic resistance against the Noriega regime.

For the first time, the middle classes, which have emerged in Panama during the past 30 years and without whose support no representative democracy can last, have played a front-line role. But they have done so as catalysts in a pluralist, national and popular movement, not as mere instruments of the oligarchy. Their civic consciousness has come to express the self-awareness of a civilian society as a whole.

Moreover, this learning experience has also created a national resolve that has been expressed through personal and collective self-sacrifice. Thousands of people have been tear-gassed, persecuted, beaten and arrested. Hundreds have been wounded and dozens tortured and exiled. For months on end, media have been closed and human rights systematically violated. People have been killed. The economy has broken down, and the whole population, especially the 40 percent that lives at the level of poverty or below, has suffered great deprivation.

Getting rid of Noriega as "strong man" is necessary but insufficient in itself for the building of democracy. Two other conditions are indispensable. The first is reconciliation. A divided Panama, locked in unending confrontation with itself, on the verge of self-inflicted violence, cannot build democracy. The formal announcement made by heretofore antagonistic forces on March 6 that they will jointly constitute a Government of National Reconciliation once Noriega leaves is a first step in the right direction. Such reconciliation must widen in scope. It must be made clear that it cannot simply mean the absence of retaliation and vengeance. It must come to mean shared responsibility for a government with as broad a base as possible, in order to face the Herculean task of reconstructing Panama's economy and at the same time fostering an environment of freedom, justice and respect for the human rights of all Panamanians regardless of their ideological preferences.

The second additional condition is constitutionalist professionalism among the military. Panama cannot think of dismantling its military institution. In this respect, Costa Rica is not a viable model for us. Consequently, it is indispensable that constitutionalist professionalism emerge as the prevailing option for the military. This will mean the military's accepting civilian, democratic governance as well as recognizing the rule of law and the norms of public accountability. But it will also mean, for civilians, respecting institutional, hierarchical standards in decisions dealing with military assignments, promotions and retirements, as well as recognizing specialized military competence in matters dealing with public order, national defense and specific technological contributions to our overall development.

The recent unsuccessful military uprising against Noriega is a first sign that a very significant percentage of the officers has begun to undergo a positive change of attitude and behavior. It has also marked the beginning of new positive expectations on the part of democratic civilians with regard to the role of the military. For democracy to be ensured, this transformation on both parts must take hold.

Thus we have already begun to build democracy, in people participation and sacrifice, in growing awareness that reconstruction of our country requires national reconciliation and in the expectation of an eventual convergence between responsible democratic civilians and a professional constitutionalist military.

This beginning — this costly and most hopeful beginning — is not, however, assured of success.

Time in this respect is of the essence. All who really want to help must do so now.

Ricardo Arias Calderon is president of Panama's Christian Democratic Party; a leading opposition figure, he is currently in hiding.

It is not the Declaration of Independence that made the United States prosperous and free. It is its constitutional government and its observance of the lawful liberties that it had inherited from England. There is, God knows, plenty that is wrong with our party-ridden electoral practices. Still, what is good for America is good for America — and not necessarily for the rest of the world.

Seventy-five years ago, when Woodrow Wilson was itching to intervene in Mexico, a British envoy asked him what his purposes really were. "I want," said this professor-president, "to teach the South American republics to elect good men." It did not work then. To bribe Latin American bad men to take their loot and go away won't work either. It was not until World War I that an American president declared that the task of the United States was to make the world safe for democracy. That was a more revolutionary — and perhaps an even more disastrous — idea than the international workers' revolution declared by Wilson's contemporary, Lenin. It is odd how this Wilsonian idea has now been embraced by all of our so-called "conservatives," including Ronald Reagan whose middle name, perhaps by coincidence, happens to be Wilson.

John Lukacs' last two works are "Outgrowing Democracy: A History of the United States in the 20th Century" (Doubleday, 1984) and "Historical Consciousness" (Schocken, 1985).

Protester Reports Death Threat

OREGON INLET, N.C. (AP) — State Senate candidate Dan Lawrence, chained to the Herbert Bonner Bridge to try to save the structure, asked for police protection this morning after receiving a death threat and admitted that he went home for two hours Sunday night.

"I was afraid that something stupid was going to happen and I didn't want to be involved in that," Lawrence said this morning. "I have to consider my family. I have to consider my own health."

Lawrence admitted that the protest was tougher than he had envisioned. "It's easy to say you're going to do something. But I wasn't ready to face the elements," he said.

Lawrence told a reporter for radio station WOBR that two men drove up to his position on a catwalk and threatened his life, saying "If you're here tomorrow, we're going to kill you." He said he heard a car drive onto the bridge, then turn around and pass him again.

He said he thought he saw someone jump over the bridge railing onto the catwalk, and Lawrence said he went back to his car at the Hatteras Island Park on the south side of the bridge, then slept under some trees in the park.

Lawrence said because he feared for his life, he went home to spend time with his family. He said his wife had been harassed while at the trailer park where they live, and said his wife told him his son was suffering emotionally from his father's vigil.

"I need some people out here at night to protect me from the kook element. There are some kooks out here," Lawrence said, adding that he had been urged by a Manteo High School teacher to abandon his protest and return home.

Lawrence has requested police protection at the bridge, but said if law enforcement officer wouldn't protect him, "I'll ask the people of Dare County to help me."

Meanwhile, Lawrence, who said people have walked out to offer their support, has drawn praise even from the Democrat he's running against.

"I commend him for his effort to try to bring attention to an injustice," Sen. Marc Basnight, D-Dare, said Sunday. "Nothing else seems to work. Maybe something can happen here good."

Lawrence said Sunday he drank soft drinks and fruit drinks, coffee, tea and chicken broth since beginning his vigil Friday but refused solid food.

Lawrence, 42, chained himself to the bridge Friday morning after the structure was threatened by heavy erosion from a fierce storm Wednesday that also damaged 30 homes along the Outer Banks. Gov. Jim Martin flew to the Outer Banks Thursday to survey damage and to call for jetties to stabilize Oregon Inlet's shifting sands.

Martin and many local officials and fishermen say jetties are needed to stabilize the inlet. The project was authorized by Congress 17 years ago, but the jetties were never built, mostly due to opposition from environmentalists and the U.S. Department of the Interior, which say they would be environmentally hazardous.

Martin has not commented on Lawrence's action.

Hatteras Island, which has about 4,800 year-round residents, is about 50 miles long and never more than a few miles wide. There has also been controversy over how and whether to move the historic Cape Hatteras lighthouse, which has also been threatened by the ever-encroaching sea.

When asked if he thought Lawrence's protest would spur officials to stabilize the Oregon Inlet and the bridge, Basnight said, "Nobody can answer that, except for the federal officials. We'll just have to wait and see."

Hardin Eyes UNC Improvements

By The Associated Press

Paul Hardin, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill's next chancellor, says he has no qualms about delegating authority as he seeks to improve the campus.

"My leadership style starts with wanting people better and brighter than I am in every possible spot," said Hardin, who will succeed

Christopher Fordham when he steps down June 30. "I will give them a great deal of running room, but ask them always to keep me posted ..."

Hardin said in an interview with The News and Observer of Raleigh that academic quality is his first priority. While he said he was aware that a recent study had cited deficiencies in the schools of law, education and business, Hardin said he planned to form his own opinions about exactly what needs improvement.

Speaking from his campus home at Drew University in New Jersey, where he has been president since 1975, Hardin did not say where he would turn to find replacements for UNC-CH Provost Samuel Williamson Jr., who is leaving to assume the presidency of the University of the South; and Farris Womack, vice-chancellor for business and finance, who has resigned to take a similar job at the University of Michigan.

Hardin said he expects to play the lead role in the university's $200 million fund-raising campaign, which will be orchestrated around the university's bicentennial celebration.

Hardin said the key to boosting donations is effectively communicating the exciting work being done on campus.

"It's just a matter of the accurate interpretation of the university, the cultivation of friends, good careful research about where funds might be found, and finally asking," Hardin said. "That's the essential part. And I love to ask."

In addition to improving salaries, Hardin said he would work to make sure that the older buildings on campus are maintained.

"That's not a very popular cause," he said. "People are always more willing to give money for a new building than to fix an old one. But that campus is a treasure, and we have to make sure that it is preserved."

Hardin promised also to work to ensure that students have a broad extra-curricular activities, a variety of student organizations, good dormitories, and opportunities to participate in athletics and recreation.

Hardin, who was a member of Duke University's varsity golf team, opposes athletic scholarships, which he has labeled a contradiction in terms.

Asked if his view has changed on the eve of becoming chancellor of a university with a multi-million dollar sports program, Hardin said: "I think that's an idea worthy of conversation. But I certainly won't go in advocating unilateral disarmament. That's the kind of conversation one would have with fellow chancellors and presidents in talks about nationwide efforts to see if we can reform college athletics."

EPA Role In Waste Plant Is Questioned

GREENSBORO (AP) — A North Carolina law blocking the construction of a hazardous waste plant near Lumberton continues to draw concerns that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency may eliminate the state's authority to regulate waste.

"When they first told us that EPA was likely to withdraw state (Resource Conservation Recovery Act) authority, I called them back and said 'don't worry about it,'" said Velma Smith, a water expert at the Environmental Policy Institute who was advising Scotland County residents. "Boy, did we read that one wrong."

The controversy has spread beyond the state's borders. Issues growing out of the dispute are expected to be presented at a series of meetings between EPA officials and representatives of industry, the 50 states and environmental groups in Washington on April 27 and 28.

North Carolina officials have petitioned EPA to withdraw the action and have vowed to enforce and defend the state law until — and unless — EPA withdraws the state's regulatory authority.

The debate began with passage of the state law requiring that any new commercial hazardous waste treatment facility dilute — by a ratio of 1,000 to 1 — all liquid waste discharged into rivers upstream from drinking water supplies.

The immediate effect was to derail efforts by GSX Chemical Services to build a waste treatment facility on the Lumber River, the source of drinking water for 10,000 residents of Lumberton, 30 miles downstream.

The facility plan called for a daily discharge of up to 500,000 gallons of treated waste into the river — a volume too great for the river to dilute according to the new requirement.

Now, repercussions of the law have rippled into a circle of conflict centering on the following key issues:

— EPA officials maintain that North Carolina's law, and similar laws in other states, are inconsistent with federal regulations because they restrict the agency's ability to orchestrate safe, timely disposal of the nation's hazardous wastes.

— Representatives of hazardous waste treatment industry support EPA's position, alleging that over-protective laws are illegal restrictions of interstate commerce.

— State officials and environmental activists, bolstered by Congressional support, argue that local and state governments have the authority — and duty — to protect public health and protect the environment. They say if state laws more stringent than federal laws are necessary to do that, so be it.

However, GSX representatives say public and environmental protection are not what motivated the General Assembly when legislators blocked the GSX plans last year.

"There is a need for hazardous waste treatment in this country and it's going to get worse," said Steve Earp, a Greensboro attorney, who represents GSX.

"We say that what is happening here is not a legitimate attempt to impose a human health standard, it's an attempt to make sure GSX can't build there," he told the Greensboro News & Record.

Books By Wire

CHARLOTTE (AP) — If flowers can be delivered anywhere in the world with a simple phone call, why can't the same be done with a copy of Robert Ludlum's latest bestseller or any other book?

That idea came to Glenn Friedt while he was recuperating from major surgery. After Friedt sold the concept to his friend and associate, John Bodette, the two businessmen from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., approached the American Booksellers Association to see if it had been tried before.

"The first thing they said was 'Where have you been for the last 25 years,'" Friedt said.

Bodette, who had recently retired after a career that included 17 years as president of Florist Transworld Delivery, put together a marketing strategy. In March, Books by Wire opened its first test market in Charlotte. The nine bookstores participating in the market test have been equipped with computer terminals that tie into a computer in Chapel Hill. When a customer places an order, the computer routes it to a bookstore in the vicinity of the recipient.

The service works under the same premise as florist shops around the world. For a $5 service charge, a customer can either visit or phone any participating bookstore, order a book from a catalog of available titles, and have it delivered to a friend anywhere in the country.

Warren said many citizens are arming themselves for protection in Robeson County, where violence could explode.

"I don't know what can be done to prevent a massacre, but something has to be done," said Warren, who is representing Timothy Jacobs in connection with the Feb. 1 hostage-taking at The Robesonian newspaper in Lumberton. Jacobs and Eddie Hatcher say they seized the newspaper to bring attention to charges of racism and corruption in Robeson County.

Nuke Plant Tour

RALEIGH (AP) — Officials at Duke Power Co. have declined to comment on reports by a British news network that Cuban government officials will tour the McGuire nuclear plant near Charlotte next month.

The British Broadcasting Corp. reported Sunday that two Cuban officials would tour the plant May 18-20. The news agency said the upcoming visit reflected concern by U.S. officials over the safety of a Soviet-designed nuclear power station being built near the southern Cuban port of Cienfuegos — less than 300 miles from Florida.

Duke Power spokeswoman Mary Boyd said Sunday the visit and had not been confirmed.

"We are aware that Cuba has under construction two nuclear units," Ms. Boyd said in a telephone interview Sunday. "There is every interest in seeing that they are safe units."

She said details of the tour were being arranged with the help of the U.S. State Department and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Dogs For The Deaf

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Animals trainers are finding the best dogs for the increasingly common task of helping the deaf and hearing impaired often have been leading others for generations.

"Those dogs that work best seem to come from herding descent, like border collies," said Connie Drobac, administrator of Southeastern Assistance Dogs, during a demonstration in Asheville last week. "That's understandable as they really are herding their owner to the source of the sound. Labradors or retrievers of mixed breed work well as service dogs."

Ms. Drobac, whose group is part of the Speech, Hearing and Learning Center Inc. of Greenville, S.C., said the hearing ear dogs can respond to a variety of sounds, including the phone, a smoke alarm, a doorbell, a knock on the door or a baby crying.

Five Die On Roads

RALEIGH (AP) — Five people, including a Camp Lejeune marine, died in weekend accidents on North Carolina roads, the state Highway Patrol said today.

Marine Joseph Homer Garza, 22, was killed Saturday afternoon when the car he was driving hit a tree in Duplin County, troopers said.

Kim Darryl Danaho, 27, of Sumnerfield, died at 12:15 a.m. Saturday when his car hit a tree 10 miles north of Greensboro, troopers said.

Jeffrey Lee Bogad, 20, of Stoneville, died at 5:30 p.m. Saturday when the car in which he was a passenger sped off a rural road in Stokes County and overturned several times.

Scottie Mario Wilkerson, 19, of Roxboro, was killed at 9:45 p.m. Saturday when his motorcycle ran off a rural road seven miles north of Roxboro in Person County and hit an embankment.

James David Paige, 23, of Raleigh, died Saturday evening on a rural road northwest of Raleigh, when the car he was driving struck a driveway culvert, overturned and struck a wooden fence.

The deaths brought to 347 the number of highway fatalities in North Carolina since Jan. 1.

Robeson 'War Zone'

ASHEVILLE (AP) — The federal government must take a hand in investigating a cocaine-filled "war zone" in Robeson County, says an attorney for one of two Indians charged with taking hostages there.

A Congressional investigation "is really the only hope in the matter," Bobb Warren told a rally in Asheville Sunday. He's urging letters be sent to Rep. John Conyers — chairman of the House Subcommittee on Criminal Justice — asking for a Congressional probe.

STAIN-RESISTANT CARPET: Be Careful When Cleaning!

Time to get serious! Sooner or later everything gets soiled — stainless-steel sinks, porcelain bath fixtures, glass windows — everything! Even your new stain-resistant carpet...

Now it's decision time. You've got quite an investment; oh, not just in money, but in the time and attention you've put into selecting that "just-right" carpet for your home. So who's going to clean it?

Years ago you could, "let your fingers do the walking..." No more! Today, cleaners who aren't "Certified" in the proper chemistry and procedures for cleaning stain-resistant fibers, can instantly void the warranty that came with your carpet.

Consider some of the points Certified Technicians must observe:

- 1. Chemistry - Only authorized detergents can be used. Otherwise, stain-resistance, along with your warranty, are instantly voided!
- 2. pH - This term refers to the amount of alkalinity in a solution. Too much, and goodbye stain resistance!
- 3. Temperature - With today's more powerful, truck-mounted cleaning plants, cleaners can easily exceed this important limitation.
- 4. Cleaning Method - All manufacturers are specifying hot water extraction, or "Steam Cleaning." Systems employing dry-cleaning, dry powder or even rotary brush action are questionable.
- 5. Added Treatments - A few are OK. Most should be voided: softeners, defoamers, disinfectants, brighteners... watch out!

All the more reason to seek out and use technicians who have been Certified by the International Institute of Carpet and Upholstery Certification. That's the ultimate protection for you and your beautiful, stain-resistant carpet!

Chrysler, UAW Open Pact Talks

By JANET BRAUNSTEIN
AP Auto Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. and United Auto Workers negotiators representing 67,600 workers in nine states are taking their mutual concerns to the bargaining table in early contract talks.

Negotiations for a contract to replace one expiring Sept. 14 were scheduled to open today with an across-the-table handshake between UAW President Owen Bieber and a top Chrysler executive.

Bargainers led by UAW Vice President Marc Stepp were scheduled to present the union's demands and proposals today and Tuesday. Chrysler Vice President Anthony St.

John leads the company's negotiating team.

Both sides will work within a pattern contract, established last fall at Ford Motor Co. and adopted at General Motors Corp. The contract must be fitted to the smaller Chrysler Corp., the nation's third-largest automaker.

The UAW also is seeking a two-year duration for the contract so it will expire with the GM and Ford pacts in 1990. The talks, which normally would begin in mid-July, cover wages, benefits and working conditions.

The pattern contract forbids plant closings not announced before talks started and layoffs for any reason except production cuts caused by slow sales.

It also includes six-month studies in which managers and workers at each plant search together for ways to make their workplaces more efficient, including organizing workers into teams on the assembly line.

Harley Shaiken, a labor and technology expert at the University of California, San Diego, said Ford and GM are more interested in getting workers and managers to examine their plants together than in the actual results of the studies.

But at Chrysler, where local unions at six plants have agreed to so-called Modern Operating Agreements and the company is pushing for their adoption at all plants, the studies will have a different interpretation, Shaiken said Sunday.

"Chrysler is smaller and it is seeking to make the turn more rapidly in a direction Ford and GM also are headed in," he said. "For Chrysler, (the studies) would be viewed as directly paving the way for Modern Operating Agreements."

In an interview earlier this year, St. John pointed out the studies as a highlight of the GM and Ford contracts.

At plants with the agreements, managers and workers share decisions and design jobs so they can be performed by a team of workers. Each team member learns all tasks in the team's assignment.

Workers can increase the amount they earn by learning additional jobs. The cross-training cuts down absenteeism costs because fewer stand-by workers are needed. Teams inspect their own work, reducing the need for inspectors and workers who repair mistakes.

Chrysler agreed to early talks after its attempt to sell its Acustar Inc. parts subsidiary sparked a bitter companywide backlash that forced it to back down from the sale in early March.

Also damaging workers' trust in the company was Chrysler's decision to close a former American Motors Corp. assembly plant in Kenosha, Wis., by year's end, idling 5,500 workers instead of keeping them working at least five more years as originally planned.

Chrysler's contract covers 59,500 active and 8,000 laid-off workers in Alabama, Delaware, California, Indiana, Michigan, Missouri, New York, Ohio, and Wisconsin.

Group Says Overpopulation Would Injure Environment

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Earth faces environmental catastrophe unless developing nations stem rapid overpopulation, a population control group warned, but a critic dismissed the report as invalid speculation by humorless doomsayers.

"World population, now 5.1 billion, grew by an unprecedented 90 million people last year. Over the next 10 years, the world will add another billion people. Ninety-two percent of that growth is taking place in the poorer nations of the developing world," said the report released Sunday by the Population Institute.

"Unless we wake up to the serious damage population pressures are doing to this planet, we will see a 21st century that could offer unprecedented catastrophic consequences," said Werner Fornos, the group's president.

Fornos said the thinning of Earth's protective ozone shield; heating of the atmosphere by industrial pollutants; waste and pollution of water supplies; loss of soils and forests; extinction of species; and expansion of deserts "are all tied directly to rapid world population growth."

He said the United States and other industrialized nations should consider forgiving debts of developing nations that establish policies to halt environmental destruction and to expand educational and employment opportunities for women. Birth rates are lower where women have greater economic and social opportunities, Fornos said.

The report drew sharp criticism from Julian Simon, a University of Maryland economist, who said that while "more people mean more problems, the history of humanity is a history of surmounting problems. New solutions leave us better off than if the original problems had never arisen. If we had only 1 million people on Earth, we'd still be chasing rabbits and eating berries and roots."

"The Population Institute and other doomsayers have been wrong on every single prediction they have made for the past two decades," and people like Fornos "have no sense of humor" and "can manufacture scares faster than you can write stories about them" said Simon, a business administration professor.

"Contrary to their prophecies, every important human trend has improved," he said during a telephone interview. "Life is longer, health is better, all resources have become more available rather than less available and in the United States our environment has become cleaner."

Kingsley Davis, a demographer at Stanford University and the University of Southern California, defended the report, saying, "There's no question in my mind that virtually every environmental problem we have is made worse by the fact we have over 5 billion people on Earth."

200 Treated After Ill. Chemical Spill

SAUGET, Ill. (AP) — An overfilled railroad tank car dumped hundreds of gallons of a toxic chemical, forming a gaseous cloud that sent some 200 people to the hospital with eye irritations and breathing difficulties, officials say.

The spill at a Monsanto Co. plant about 12:15 p.m. Sunday forced the evacuation of hundreds of East St. Louis families as the chemical cloud drifted over the southern part of that city, just north of the plant, authorities said.

Monsanto officials said the spill occurred when a railroad tank car being loaded with phosphorous trichloride was overfilled, spilling 250 to 300 gallons of the chemical. The chemical turns to hydrochloric acid when it hits the air.

People suffering from eye or respiratory problems were treated at St. Mary's Hospital but none was admitted, said Rose Lusk, a nursing supervisor. Among those treated were seven firefighters.

Emergency crews sprayed the chemical cloud with water for about an hour before it dissipated. Residents were allowed to return to their homes about 3 p.m.

Phosphorous trichloride is used to produce agricultural and water-treatment chemicals, Monsanto spokesman Glynn Young said. Exposure to the chemical does not cause long-term health problems, Young said.

Dukakis, Jackson Battle To Wire In New York

By LAURA KING
Associated Press Writer
The Democratic contenders thundered into the home stretch of the New York primary campaign today, spurring on their supporters in a contest that could carry considerable weight in deciding which of them will win their party's presidential nomination.

"Too Close To Call," blared a New York Daily News headline. A poll published by the newspaper on Sunday, along with other surveys, indicated Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis was ahead of Jesse Jackson, with Sen. Albert Gore Jr. trailing.

But the polls suggest Dukakis' lead has narrowed, and New York Gov. Mario Cuomo said he "wouldn't be surprised" by a Jackson victory. Observers said turnout could be the crucial factor.

"The race is getting closer and turnout is the key," said New York pollster Lee Miringoff. He said a low turnout would favor Jackson, whose supporters are seen as generally being more fervent than those of the other candidates, and thus more likely to follow through and vote.

Cuomo said Sunday a high turnout "should make us all happy ... but I'm not sure there's going to be one."

Dukakis was staging a get-out-the-vote rally in lower Manhattan today with cousin Olympia Dukakis, who won an Academy Award last week for her role in the movie

"Moonstruck." Dukakis said then he hoped her triumph was a good omen for him in New York.

Gore was making a series of subway stops with a big-name backer, New York Mayor Edward Koch, who has made a splash with harsh attacks on Jackson. Koch took the offensive again Sunday, suggesting on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley" that Jackson, when under stress, was "not capable of telling the truth."

Jackson was holding final-day rallies in East Harlem, Harlem and Chinatown.

from the other camps that he'll have to pack it in soon.

"Al Gore is no more," said Jose Villareal, Dukakis' Arizona campaign director. Gore conceded over the weekend that his campaign, winless since Super Tuesday, is badly in need of a boost in New York.

"At a minimum we have to have a strong finish," he said as he campaigned Saturday in Buffalo's Polish community.

Meanwhile, Democrats in Delaware were holding caucuses tonight in state representative districts. They were choosing 189 delegates to the state convention on May 23, where 15 national convention delegates will be chosen.

Jet Fire Chases Passengers

CLEVELAND (AP) — A smoky electrical fire in an overhead luggage compartment of a Continental Airlines jet forced the 103 passengers to use emergency chutes to evacuate after it landed at Cleveland Hopkins International Airport.

Six of the 103 passengers aboard the Boeing 737 were treated at two hospitals for smoke inhalation.

Continental Airlines spokesman Bruce Hicks said Flight 159 was bound for Cleveland from Newark, N.J., when smoke was detected during the final minutes of Sunday night's flight.

"It was a safe landing. We just evacuated the cabin to make absolutely sure that everyone was safe," Hicks said.

The fire was extinguished by airport firefighters.

Mort Edelman, a spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration, said the fire was caused by a short in the wires powering lights above the seats. The wires are located behind a liner in the overhead storage bins.

Passenger Peter Munro of Boston said he did not see any flames but saw a lot of smoke.

"The smoke was waist high and higher in the front of the plane. In the back, it was completely black. It was pretty frantic," said Munro.

MILSTAR Costs Soaring

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — An ultra-secret multi-satellite program intended to help coordinate the nation's nuclear weapons appears to be facing serious problems, including budget overruns and technical obstacles, a newspaper reported.

The San Jose Mercury News said the 5-year-old MILSTAR program at Lockheed Missiles & Space Co. is supposed to be tough enough to survive an all-out war, smart enough to run itself for six months at a time and sophisticated enough to link just about every ship, plane and battlefield unit with a nuclear weapon.

But a congressional report prepared in December reported "pervasive problems" and cost overruns in MILSTAR, which is short for military strategic and tactical relay system, the newspaper said in its Sunday editions.

The report blamed the problems on "repeated changes in acquisition schedules, inadequate funding, poor contracting procedures and a lack of management attention at the senior levels of the Department of Defense and Air Force."

"Hundreds of millions of dollars, perhaps as much as a billion dollars, could be wasted over the next decade," it warned.

The newspaper quoted an unidentified congressional source as saying contracts weren't written to encourage Lockheed and its subcontractors enough to save money. Fluctuations in Air Force financing led to inefficiencies on the production lines, the source said.

"There were an awful lot of problems," said the source, who asked not to be identified. But, the source added, "that doesn't mean it's a dog of a program."

Congress recently authorized an additional $25 million above what has been allocated for the project this year. The project's budget is secret; the newspaper said the budget was "estimated at $10 billion or perhaps much more."

"The MILSTAR program, we think, is proceeding well," said Lt. Col. Rick Oborn, a spokesman for the Air Force. "We do realize there are some technical challenges, and there are some minor setbacks."

"But given the technical risks those setbacks are not insurmountable. It is a program designed as the highest national priority," he said.

Richard Buenneke, editor of the industry newsletter Military Space, was more skeptical.

"They're obviously using the security around the program to hide a lot of the problems with it," said Buenneke.

Wedding Vows Spoken Saturday

Deborah Denise Paxton of Ayden and Sammy Travis Pierce of Winterville were united in marriage Saturday at 2 p.m. in the Ayden Christian Church in Ayden.

Dr. James Daily performed the double-ring ceremony. Music was rendered by Charles Rountree, soloist, and Sue Branch, organist. The musical selections were "There is Love" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Peyton E. Paxton of Ayden and Mr. and Mrs. Sammy A. Pierce of Springfield, Va.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, selected a formal-length gown of white bridal satin designed with a high neckline encircled with a band of pearl roping and iridescent sequins. The fitted bodice featured a sheer yoke of English net adorned in an asymmetrical spray of silk venise lace flowers beaded in pearls and iridescent sequins. The beaded lace extended over the torso to the dropped basque waistline. Tucked satin studded with pearls complemented the off-centered lace bodice. The Renaissance-styled sleeves were fashioned in the satin fabric with open cutwork overlaid in the English net and bordered in the beaded silk venise lace. Calla points at the wrist covered the hand. The full skirt and attached cathedral-length train were bordered at the hemline with a scalloped patterned schiffli embroidered organza lace. Appliques of matching lace beaded in pearls accented the skirt. She wore a halo veil accented with pearls and iridescent sequins. She carried a bouquet of peach and white roses accented with greenery and baby's breath.

The maid of honor was Laura Aichinger of Greenville. She wore a peach-colored floor-length gown of satin featuring a sweetheart neckline and off-the-shoulder pouf sleeves. The fitted bodice was enhanced by a high waistband and a small sash.

The bridesmaids were Peach Davis of Ayden, Tina Venters of Ayden, Myra Morgan of Greenville, Angie Robinson of Belvedere, S.C., and Monica Lassiter of Ayden. They wore dresses like that of the maid of honor and carried bouquets of peach carnations and white daisies, accented with greenery and baby's breath. The flower girl was Ashley Paxton of Cartersville, Ga., cousin of the bride. She wore a white satin floor-length gown also with pouff sleeves. She carried a basket of assorted peach and white flowers.

The best man was the father of the bridegroom. The ushers were Eric Pierce of Winterville, brother of the bridegroom; Peyton Paxton of Ayden, brother of the bride; Derrell Moore of Greenville; Andy Swanson of Ayden; and Al Butts of Ayden, cousin of the groom. The ring bearer was J.R. Paxton, Jr. of Cartersville, Ga., cousin of the bride.

The guest register at the reception was attended by Jean Daily. Punch was served by Diana Mills and cake was served by Catherine Gaston.

A bridal shower was given by Denise Ramey, Sally Pollard, Joan Gray and Linda Little. A lingerie shower was given by Tina Venters. The rehearsal party was given by Sammy and Sara Pierce at the Sheraton in Greenville.

The bride is employed at Overton's Sports Center. The bridegroom attends East Carolina University and is employed at Athletic World.

After a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, the couple will reside in Winterville.

Taylor-Yelverton Vows Said

LA GRANGE — Angela Janet Yelverton and Curtis Martin Taylor, both of Greenville, were united in marriage in a 4 p.m. ceremony Saturday in St. Mary Free Will Baptist Church.

The Rev. Jerry Jones was the officiating clergyman in the double-ring ceremony. Music was provided by soloists Tammy Waters, LeVerne Wade, Kenneth Pridgen and Mickey Carmon. They performed "The Lord's Prayer," "Up Where We Belong," "A Love Like This," "You and I," and "We've Only Just Begun."

The bride is the daughter of James and Serail Yelverton of La Grange and the bridegroom is the son of Rose Taylor of Kinston and the late James P. Taylor.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a formal-length gown featuring a fitted drop waist bodice of sequined lace overlaid with satin. The upper bodice of sheer organza featured a standing collar of satin with sequined lace overlay. Pearl buttons with loop closures adorned the back of the bodice. A bouffant bow attached to the bottom of the bodice accented the back. The long lace sleeves came to a v on the top of the hand with pearl buttons and loops for closures. A full satin underskirt flowed into a train which was draped with a satin overskirt. Six satin roses accented the overskirt. She carried her grandmother's lace-covered Bible and a nosegay of white silk roses, pink stephanotis and baby's breath accented with white ribbon streamers tied in love knots. She chose to wear a hat trimmed in satin and sequins accented with a rose attached to the back. A fingertip veil extending from the hat was lined with sequined and embroidered roses.

Marketa Dawn Yelverton, of La Grange served as her sister's maid of honor. She wore a tea-length dress of pink taffeta overlaid with pink shimmering lace. The fitted bodice featured a dropped waist and princess seams. The long lace sleeves came to a v over the hand. The full skirt was made of contrasting gray taffeta and was detailed with scalloped edges and a sash accented with a bow and a fabric rose. The dress was accented with gray pearls. She carried crystal champagne glasses with long pink ribbon streamers and pink miniature roses accented with baby's breath and a pink votive candle inset.

Bridesmaids were Rebecca Jackson, cousin of the bride, of Goldsboro, Denise Suggs of Kinston, Veronica Best of La Grange, and junior bridesmaid, Kelly Teele of Greenville.

The bridesmaids wore dresses similar to that of the maid of honor in pink lace and taffeta. They carried bouquets identical to that of the maid of honor.

Tahnia L. Davis of La Grange was the flower girl. She wore a pink tea-length dress similar to that of the attendants, with a satin bow in the back. The junior bridesmaid wore a white evening-length dress featuring a V-shaped neckline. The white satin bodice was overlaid with white lace with a satin underskirt extending into a train trimmed with lace. She carried a miniature version of the bride's bouquet.

The mother of the bride wore a rose tea-length dress of lace and taffeta.

Ronny Keith Taylor of Kinston served as his brother's best man. Ushers were Wendell Yelverton, brother of the bride of Kinston, Anthony King, Anthony Stevens Jr., also of Kinston, and Hector Lewis of Greenville. Justin Grant of Kinston served as ring bearer.

A reception was hosted by Sarah Thompson, Sylvia Croom and Fannie Gray. Kathy Gray provided the wedding cake.

Wedding showers were given in honor of the couple by co-workers and friends.

The rehearsal dinner was given by Lucielle Pridgen, aunt of the bride.

The couple attended North Lenoir High and the bride attended East Carolina University. The bride is an employee of the Pitt County Child Development Center and the bridegroom is employed by Simpson Industries. They will reside in Greenville.

She's Having Second Thoughts

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I just finished reading the letter from the 19-year-old girl who signed herself "Second Thoughts in Moline, Ill." Abby, I could have written that letter myself. I'm also 19, have gone with a guy for nearly three years and we plan to be married soon, but I, too, have second thoughts for the same reasons. He's jealous, doesn't trust me, accuses me of going out with other guys, and we fight a lot about stupid things. I like people and enjoy having friends, but he always wants to be with me alone. Lately he has cursed me, accused me of going out on him and has hit me. Then he cries, begs me to give him another chance and swears he'll never do it again, but he does.

My friends tell me I'll be sorry if I marry him, but, Abby, I truly love him. Can you tell me why women go right on loving guys who treat them like dogs? — SECOND THOUGHTS IN TEXAS

DEAR SECOND THOUGHTS: First, what's to "love" about a guy who treats you like a dog? And what's to love about a guy who doesn't trust you? Many human emotions are involved in what we call "love." First, there's a strong sexual attraction, there's pity ("I hate to hurt him"), and security ("finding another guy may not be easy"). Also, there's the addiction factor. Being with someone exclusively can become a habit. My advice to you is to have second, third and fourth thoughts. Then say goodbye. It's a major mistake to marry a man who is physically abusive. He will only get worse.

DEAR ABBY: I have what is known as a "strawberry birthmark" on my face, but mine is purple. It's very noticeable, and people who have just met me ask me if it's some kind of rash or if it is permanent. I am 16 years old and I'm told I am a pretty girl, and this mark bothers me.

Someone told me that you recommended something several years ago to cover blemishes and birthmarks like mine. I would appreciate it very much if you could tell me the name of it, and where to buy it. Thank you. — MARCIE

DEAR MARCIE: It's Lydia O'Leary Cosmetics' "Covermark" — a cream that's waterproof, easy to apply and completely covers the most conspicuous birthmark or discoloration. It's available through your pharmacist or the cosmetic department in many department stores.

If you can't find it, the toll-free number is: (800) 524-1120. The address is: Lydia O'Leary Cosmetics, "Covermark," 201 Route 17 North, Rutherford, N.J. 07070.

What teen-agers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postage and handling are included.

U.S. Destroys Oil Platform

 swooped low over the attacking Iranian boats, chasing them away from the 283-ton vessel, operated by Tidewater Inc. of New Orleans.

Shipping executives later reported Iranian gunboats attacked and set fire to a Cypriot bulk carrier in the Strait of Hormuz.

The freighter, which was not immediately identified, reportedly was carrying fertilizer.

Iran and Iraq have been at war since 1980, and the war has produced repeated attacks on neutral shipping. Last July, the United States reflagged 11 Kuwaiti tankers and gave them U.S. Navy escorts to protect them against Iranian attack.

Tehran Radio, monitored in Cyprus, said U.S. helicopters attacked Iranian troops in southern Iraq "several times" on Sunday.

The Iranian report was issued after Iraq said its troops, led by the Presidential Guard, recaptured Faw. Iran, which seized the peninsula two years ago, denied Iraqi had retaken it.

The White House said today the oil platform attacks were "a measured response to Iran's unlawful use of force."

Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the United States raided the platforms because Iran was responsible for the "mine attack" on the USS Samuel B. Roberts.

Fitzwater said he did not know how many people were aboard the platforms, although they normally hold about 20 to 40 men. They are manned by Iranian Revolutionary Guards. He said they were given several minutes warning, and some were seen leaving.

The White House spokesman said the frigates Simpson and Bagley and the cruiser Wainwright attacked the Sirri platform.

Fitzwater said the destroyers Merrill and McCormick and the landing platform ship Trenton attacked the Sassan platform.

The shipping executives said their monitors picked up a radio message about 30 minutes before the attack in which a U.S. warship urged platform workers to evacuate.

The executives said the warning specified the facilities "will be shelled in five minutes."

The Iranians radioed back: "We have no instructions to leave the place."

the taxpayers feel like their money is being spent the best way possible."

The goal is accountability, he said, and "accountability is not being stingy. Accountability is getting the money into the funds you need to — legitimately."

There are few cases of fraud in North Carolina, and the cases uncovered are usually small, Renfrow said. "I think that is because people in the state government do a good job."

Accountants from the private sector or other state governments also audit Renfrow's office. "We've been through that process and our latest report from our external peer review gave us a clean opinion."

The state office meets the Generally Accepted Accounting Principles, an internationally-recognized standard, and that helps maintain North Carolina's credit rating, Renfrow said.

Republican Gov. Jim Martin has complained that the Democratically-controlled General Assembly is not cooperative, but Renfrow said he does not have any complaints about the legislature.

"That's not my style," he said. "The governor has complained about the legislator not working with him. I've never found the legislature to be that way, even though we have some very serious issues that affect the legislature too."

"I've always found that working with the chairmen of the committees and the individual members of the legislature in a conciliatory way is more effective than a confrontational way all of the time," Renfrow said. "If you start out bashing the legislature, you're not very smart politically."

Public officials can never enact every program they would like, and the system require compromises, he said.

Pirates Earn Sweep Of Spiders

By TIM CHANDLER
Reflector Sports Writer

East Carolina manufactured its third straight win over Colonial Athletic Association foe Richmond Sunday with a 9-8 win to further strengthen its lock on third place in the regular season league standings.

The Pirates, who saw a four-run lead disappear when the Spiders battled back from an 8-4 deficit in the eighth inning, reeled off three singles and walk in the bottom half of the ninth frame to pull out the win.

"We have really been playing good baseball for the past two weeks," ECU head coach Gary Overton said. "We know now what it takes to win. We can eliminate the negative things and go out and manufacture runs when we need them."

The win pushed the Pirates mark to 26-11 for the year and gave them a 8-6 CAA mark, while the Spiders dipped to 18-24 overall and 4-10 in the conference.

The Pirates used four pitchers in the victory with sophomore Johnathon Jenkins getting the win after he came in during the eighth inning and put a damper on the Spiders' rally.

With the game tied heading into the bottom of the ninth, David Ritchie opened up with a single and moved to second with a stolen base. Steve Godin, who was 3-4 for the day, then singled to put men at first and third. Calvin Brown, who finished with three RBIs for the day, was then issued a walk to load the bases.

Richmond chose to remove C.P. Richardson, who had pitched the entire game at that point and bring in reliever Chris Wagner. Wagner's first pitch was greeted by a Jay McGraw game-winning RBI single to leftfield.

"After they tied the game in the eighth, we knew what it would take to win it," Overton said. "And the guys went out there and did it."

The Spiders got the early lead in the contest when their designated hitter Steve Burton pelted a John White pitch over the rightfield fence for a 1-0 lead in the second inning. The Spiders tacked on another run in the inning when Daniel Paul scored following a Ritchie error at shortstop.

The Pirates closed to within 2-1 in the bottom half of the second. McGraw led off the inning with a single to center. After he stole second, John Thomas ripped a single to score the run.

The Pirates managed to move in front of the Spiders in the third frame with a pair of runs for a 3-2 lead. Freshman Kevin Riggs opened the inning with an infield single, followed by a base on balls to catcher Chris Cauble. Brown then ripped an RBI hit to center to score the two.

Richmond managed to get even in the top half of the fourth frame when Robert Reid delivered a run-scoring single to score Brian Jordan.

The Pirates took the lead back in the bottom half of the inning when Adams was walked, advanced to third on a pair of fielder's choices before scoring following a Greg Harding error at first base.

Both teams added runs in the fifth with the Pirates' score coming courtesy of a pair of singles by Ritchie and Godin and a sacrifice fly by Brown.

ECU moved out to a 6-4 lead in the sixth inning. Adams and John Thomas opened the inning with singles and Adams scored courtesy of a Riggs RBI.

The Pirates seemingly put the game out of reach in the seventh inning with a pair of runs to move out to an 8-4 lead. Godin reached on an error to start things off for the Pirates and Brown then singled to center and stole second to put the duo in scoring position. Adams racked up the runs for the Pirates in the inning with an RBI single to left.

That's when the bottom nearly fell out for the Pirates.

In the top half of the eighth, Jeff Hines opened the four-run Spider inning with a single to right. His hit was followed by a Ritchie error that put runners at first and third.

Following a strikeout, Harding ripped a single to left to bring home the first run of the inning. Burton added another RBI single and pinch-hitter Pete Engels closed out the inning with a single to center, which scored a pair of Spider runners.

The stage was then set for the Pirates ninth inning heroics.

The victory Sunday and the three-game weekend sweep by the Pirates over Richmond has Overton feeling confident about the remainder of the season for the Pirates.

"Generally the team that enters the (CAA) tournament playing hot is the team that wins," Overton said. "If we continue to get better game by game as we have the past two weeks,

Youth Provides Inspiration For Norman's Heritage Win

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Jamie Hutton did not tell Greg Norman what club to use or how he should play any hole on the Harbour Town Golf Links.

The 17-year-old youth who has leukemia was content to clap and smile while following Norman the last two rounds of the Heritage Classic. That was enough for Norman, who took home his first victory on the American tour in two years on Sunday.

"He's got the inspiration and courage that very, very few individuals in the world would have," Norman said after rallying from four strokes back on the final day to win. "He gave me plenty of pointers in different ways."

"Every time I played today and looked over, he gave me a nice smile," Norman said while the teen-ager sat at his feet in the interview room. "Every time I made a putt, I saw him clapping and very excited. That pumped me up pretty good."

Norman gave the Madison, Wis. native the trophy he received for the victory, saying he wanted him to put it in his hospital room "to remember this day."

"I just want to thank Jamie. He showed me inspiration and courage," said Norman, whose last victory on the American tour was the 1986 Kemper Open. "He told me he wanted me to shoot 64, and I had a 66. I guess that's good enough."

Norman had his admirer worried through most of the final round.

"I almost had heart failure with all those short (par) putts, but he made them," Hutton said after Norman had one-putted for par on the last two holes. "So I'm glad."

Hutton, wearing a photographer's armband and carrying a camera, walked the entire 18 holes inside the gallery ropes both Saturday and Sunday with Norman, who at times would tousle the teen-agers' hair after finishing a hole.

Norman also had Jamie on his mind as he stood over his 6-foot par putt on the final hole.

"When I was over the putt on the 18th," Norman said, "I said to myself, 'This is for Jamie.'"

Norman made the putt to put the final touch on a bogey-free, 5-under-par 66 for a 13-under-par 271 total that enabled him to claim a one-stroke victory over Gil Morgan and David Frost.

"Obviously, I'm very excited about winning again,"

Norman said. "But I think I'm probably more excited for Jamie."

Hutton, who has had Crohn's Disease, a chronic inflammation of the intestinal tract since he was 7, wrote Norman last year — before he knew he had leukemia — in hopes of getting to meet the Australian and spend the day with him.

Then he went into for a checkup last month and found out he had leukemia. From there, Thursday's Child, a charitable group that grants wishes for sick youngsters, helped get the two together.

They sat on Norman's bag and watched as Frost, the last man on the course and the only one with a chance to catch Norman on the final hole, missed a 20-foot birdie putt that would have forced a playoff.

"I thought the putt at 18 had a chance, but it broke a different way than I thought," Frost said. "That's just the way it goes."

After Frost missed, Hutton grinned broadly and shook hands with a smiling Norman.

The victory was worth $126,000 from the total purse of $700,000 and pushed Norman's earnings on the American tour to $353,100 for the year. He won three Australian titles earlier this season.

Frost, who has recorded six runner-up finishes without a victory in four seasons on the American tour, had a final-round 70, while Morgan, who hasn't finished lower than eighth this season after undergoing shoulder surgery last year, birdied the last hole for a 68.

Third-round leader Fred Couples simply couldn't get anything going in the final round. He had a closing 73 and finished fourth at 274.

Paul Azinger and David Ogrin, not really in the title chase over the last 18 holes, were another two shots back as Azinger had a closing 68, Ogrin 69.

Sandy Lyle of Scotland, the Masters champion who was seeking a rare third consecutive victory, could do no better than a final-round 70 and finished at 279, tied for 13th in his seventh straight U.S. tournament.

"I'll go back to Britain now for two weeks and not touch a club," Lyle said.

The tournament was sponsored by MCI.

Schools Are Still Adjusting To Rule

By TOM MORRIS

(Second of a two-part series)

The Pitt County school system, like other school systems across the country, is at the beginning of a new era of qualifying student-athletes for college admission.

The advent of NCAA bylaw 5-1-(j) three years ago, more commonly known as Proposition 48, has tightened the qualifications that prep athletes must meet in order to accept college scholarships as well as be eligible to play collegiate sports as freshmen.

Pam Penland

Students must now have a 2.0 minimum grade point average in specified core curriculum classes as well as score a minimum of either 700 on the SAT or 15 on the ACT.

"High schools are becoming more conscious of grades and guidance counselors are becoming more conscious of proposition 48, as well as the high school coaches," said East Carolina football coach Art Baker.

The bylaw has ushered in a whole new world regarding college recruiting. If a prospective high school athlete doesn't qualify under 5-1-(j), he or she may still accept a grant-in-aid to a school, but must then give up the first year of eligibility. The other option for a student-athlete who has failed to qualify is to attend either an NAIA school or a junior college.

It is a far cry from the days when all one needed was a 2.0 grade point average as certified by the high school.

Bob Dailey, athletic director for the Pitt County school system, said that his department is trying to disseminate the information about the bylaw to the schools in an effort to get a handle on the new legislation.

"What we've tried to do is give

Good Fortune, Bad Rubber Help Labonte To Victory

NORTH WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — Terry Labonte needed good fortune and a little bad rubber to pull away from Dale Earnhardt and win the First Union 400 Winston Cup NASCAR race.

Earnhardt, who led 265 of the 400 laps Sunday at the .626-mile North

Wilkesboro Speedway track, appeared to be in control with 15 miles remaining, leading Labonte by about four seconds following their final pit stops. But a rear tire on Earnhardt's Chevrolet began to go flat, and as he slowed to keep his car between the fences, Labonte gently passed him with 11 laps remaining.

Ricky Rudd, in a Buick, also caught and passed Earnhardt, and finished 1.5 seconds behind Labonte's Junion Johnson-owned Chevrolet. Rusty Wallace, in a Pontiac, was fourth, behind Earnhardt, and Kyle Petty was fifth in a Ford. Richard Petty was sixth, two laps behind his son.

Labonte's victory ended weeks of frustrations for the Johnson team, which had hinted it would be in the hunt when Labonte won the pole position on Friday.

"You try to win wherever you race," Labonte said, "but this is Junior's home track, and there's always a lot of friends, family, relatives here. I don't think Junior feels like he's under any pressure, but it's on me. I've got a reputation (Johnson's) to uphold."

Labonte said he realized Earnhardt was in trouble with about 20 laps remaining.

"We were about even," Labonte said. "I couldn't catch him and he couldn't pull on away from me. Then I started closing on him and when I got close I saw his right rear (tire) was going down."

Earnhardt could do little more than shrug, grin and try to cope with his misfortune.

"That's the way it goes," he said. "The boys in the pit did their job. It wasn't their fault. They did their job

Three other players also received awards, two of them each earning two.

Stanley Love, a freshman, won awards as the outstanding rebounder, and as the newcomer of the year. Kenny Murphy, a junior who walked onto the team and earned a scholarship and a starting role, was named the defensive player of the year and won the coach's award.

The final award, the offensive player of the year, based on all phases of the offensive game, was presented to sophomore Reid Lose.

William and Mary won the event, followed by Richmond, James Madison, George Mason, American, UNC-Wilmington and ECU in seventh.

ECU's best performance was turned in by Joey Millard who took fourth overall in the fifth flight but scored the most points for the Lady Pirates. She was the only ECU player to win a match in the championship round when she defeated Tricia Farrell of Wilmington, 7-5, 6-1. Holly Murray and Susan Matlocks won the consolation round of doubles.

Conley falls to 7-4 overall and 1-2 in the conference and returns to action Tuesday at home against Havelock.

Chi Chi Wins Another Seniors Event

HOUSTON (AP) — Chi Chi Rodriguez has speeded things up since he's joined the PGA Senior Tour.

The 52-year-old native of Puerto Rico became the fourth golfer to earn more than $1 million on the Senior Tour, something he joined in 1985, when he won the Doug Sanders Celebrity Classic on Sunday by two strokes.

It took Rodriguez 25 years to break the $1 million mark on the regular PGA Tour.

After an up-and-down final round through 15 holes, Rodriguez eagled the par-5 16th at Deerwood Country Club and then held on for the victory over former NFL quarterback John Brodie and Miller Barber, one of the other three senior millionaires.

Lopez Eases Guilt With Victory

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Nancy Lopez has something in common with millions of other working mothers who have to spend time away from their children.

But she discovered a unique way to deal with the guilt — win a golf tournament and $60,000.

"I called back home yesterday morning and talked to Erinn (her 2-year-old daughter) and she was really sad," Lopez said Sunday. "Last night I called again and all she did was cry. When I got off the phone, I felt really bad to be away from her."

"So I told myself I was going to try to win this tournament for her."

Lopez did win the LPGA's $400,000 Ai Star-Centinel Hospital tournament on Sunday, beating Marta Figueras-Dotti on the second playoff hole.

Road Gets Tough For Celts, Lakers

By JOHN KREISER
AP Sports Writer

The Los Angeles Lakers and Boston Celtics have been the only two NBA teams to hit the road with any success this season.

Lately, the road has been hitting back.

The Lakers, who've had their troubles away from The Forum for the last month, dropped their fifth straight road game by losing to Houston 127-119.

The Celtics, who along with the Lakers are the only two NBA teams over .500 away from home this season, lost their second road game in three days, falling to Washington 98-92.

In other NBA games Sunday, it was Chicago 105, Milwaukee 97; Denver 133, Dallas 122; and Portland 122, Sacramento 112.

Rockets 127, Lakers 119

Los Angeles may have caught the Rockets at a bad time. Two nights earlier, Houston blew a 20-point lead in a 132-125 loss to Denver.

"We showed everyone how well we could play in the first half against Denver and how bad in the second half," Rockets forward Rodney McCray said. "Today we wanted to show the fans how good we could play for an entire game."

The victory broke Houston's eight-game losing streak to the Lakers. The two clubs could meet in the second round of the playoffs.

Magic Johnson had 19 points, 10 rebounds and 12 assists for his 12th triple-double this season and the 95th of his career.

The Lakers have not won on the road since beating Golden State on March 20.

Bullets 98, Celtics 92

The Celtics, who were burned in Cleveland Friday night, overcame an 11-point deficit in the final period, only to be outscored 7-0 in the final 1:55.

Jim Paxson's jumper gave Boston a 92-91 lead. But Jeff Malone put the Bullets back in front and Darrell Walker then stole the ball from Robert Parish and drove for a layup and a 95-92 lead.

Walker, who has played little since a December ankle injury, has made key plays in two victories in the past week.

The victory, Washington's first in six meetings with the Celtics this season, moved the Bullets into a tie with New York for the final two Eastern Division playoff spots.

Moses Malone had 24 points for Washington and Jeff Malone 23. Larry Bird topped five Boston starters in double figures with 23 points as the Celtics' bench produced only 11 points.

Bulls 105, Bucks 97

Chicago rode a 44-point effort by Michael Jordan to its fifth straight victory while handing the slumping Bucks their fourth straight loss and ninth in 11 games.

Jordan scored 15 points in the final quarter as the Bulls rang up their 48th victory, their most since 1973-74, and pulled into a tie with Atlanta for second place in the Central Division, four games behind Detroit.

Nuggets 133, Mavericks 122

The Nuggets, the NBA's hottest team, got 31 points from Alex English and a triple-double by Fat Lever to win for the 14th time in their last 15 games.

Lever had 25 points, 19 rebounds and 13 assists for his 11th triple-double as seven Nuggets scored in double figures.

Jay Vincent had all 20 of his points in the second half as the first-place Nuggets moved 1½ games ahead of the Mavericks in the Midwest Division and tied a club record with their 52nd victory.

Rolando Blackman led the Mavericks with 31 points.

Trail Blazers 122, Kings 112

Portland reached the 50-win mark for only the second time in franchise history as Clyde Drexler scored 27 points and led a third-quarter rally.

Drexler snapped a 74-74 tie with a slam dunk and divided the scoring with Maurice Lucas in a 12-5 run over the final 4:38 of the third quarter.

Otis Thorpe led Sacramento with 25 points.

The only other time the Blazers have won 50 games since joining the NBA in 1970 was in 1977-78.

Schools Still Making Adjustments

the information to the schools," he said. "In the future, we'll probably have to send out a packet to everyone."

Presently, each high school in the system has received a memo from the athletic department with information regarding not only the law but with tips for students on how to manage time, improve study habits and score higher on standardized tests.

In addition, the memo also includes stories about high school kids that have gotten in academic trouble as well as articles from top collegiate coaches regarding the importance of academics.

Included in the memo is a section dealing with Proposition 48 as well as what constitutes a core curriculum class.

"In most of the schools, not just Pitt County, the information is disseminated," Dailey said. "I'm sure anytime there is anything new, it does take time with a transition."

"But I think it is a matter of monitoring and following through that everybody has the information so that it is not just one person's responsibility, but shared, almost as a double check system."

"It probably is a responsibility on my part, the principals, the guidance counselors, the coaches and the athletes themselves. I think it is shared."

The key to qualifying student-athletes under the bylaw is beginning work early, according to North Pitt guidance counselor Virginia MacMillian.

"We're just keeping up with what they need," she said. "What we're doing is working out four-year plans for these students when they get here. We ask a student then what their goals are."

"The reason is there are usually three different criteria, a minimum requirement for graduation, a minimum requirement to get into the college system and the other is the North Carolina Scholars program. We're trying to keep this from catching a kid in his senior year."

"They are being told from their freshman year (what they need). We tell them when we register them each year, that's why we do it individually. They can take that home (though) and have freedom of choice. They can choose not to take that (which is required for college admission)."

Baker, like most coaches, has had to learn how to cope under the new rule. It's a restriction that his two predecessors, the highly successful Pat Dye and then later Ed Emory, didn't have to worry about.

"I guess the biggest thing I've noticed in the three coaches is that the Art Baker era is one in which I have seen more concern in the academic preparedness of the athletes and academic concern with them once they get here," said Gene Owens, ECU associate director of admissions.

Pam Penland, assistant director of athletics for academic counseling at ECU, said that high schools could help students by pushing them to their highest level of achievement.

"One thing that would help universities is that in the leveling system (of classes), you would push the student to the highest level at which they can be successful," Penland said. "But don't let a kid hang back in a general class or a basic class if he can go into a cp (college preparatory) class and pass it and do well. That determines success in college, more so I think, than an SAT score."

The whole intent of the bylaw was to put more emphasis on the student in the term student-athlete. It was a bylaw born out of abuses of the system. Too many exceptions were being made for athletes that were not equipped to compete fairly in college. In more than a few cases, athletics had completely superceded academics at some schools.

"All along, what they (the NCAA) are trying to say, the message trying to be given, particularly in Division I institutions, is if you are going to survive in this environment, you need to be prepared academically," said Tom Yeager, commissioner of the Colonial Athletic Association and a former NCAA investigator.

Penland said she has noticed a definite change in student-athletes over the past few years, a change that in many ways is breaking some stereotypes.

"There is a tremendous difference here in how students are prepared," she said. "But you have to consider, when I came here, the upperclassmen were the kids who were not prepared."

"Athletes (now) are extremely representative of the student body. We have some honor students, and we have some average students and we also have some marginal students who are athletes. No longer can you say that the marginal students in the university cluster in athletics."

But the overriding theme that both educators and coaches agree on is that the large part of the responsibility falls with the athletes themselves.

But beyond that, academics are something to be stressed to all athletes, not just the ones lucky or talented enough to earn scholarships. And it is a lesson that needs to be reinforced long before high school, according to Owens.

"It's got to start on the junior high level," he said. "This holds true for all students. If they haven't had the proper backgrounds, they are not going to be able to handle (even) their high school classes."

And if they can't handle their high school classes, then college classes would be out of the question.

The Pirates will be back in action Tuesday night with a game on the road at Old Dominion. ECU will be back at Harrington Field on Thursday at 4 p.m. hosting North Carolina.

O's Lose Again, Run Streak To 12

By The Associated Press
Losing 12 in a row is one thing, Orioles Manager Frank Robinson says. Winning none is something else.

Baltimore moved within one loss of the major league record for season-opening failures Sunday, bowing 4-1 to the Cleveland Indians.

The Indians, meanwhile, have won five in a row and are off to their best start since 1966.

"A loss is a loss," said Robinson, who took over as manager for the fired Cal Ripken last week. "But what makes it doubly tough is that we haven't won a game. It's not just a 12- or 13-game streak. It's that we're 0-and-whatever."

When Atlanta beat Los Angeles 3-1 Sunday, the Orioles became the only team in the major leagues without a victory this season.

In the rest of the American League Sunday, Boston beat Texas 15-2, Milwaukee defeated New York 6-3, Detroit beat Kansas City 8-6, Toronto defeated Minnesota 2-0, Chicago beat Oakland 7-6 and California defeated Seattle 7-4.

Indians 4, Orioles 1
With one more loss, the Orioles would tie the major league record of 13 to start a season by the 1904 Washington Senators and 1920 Tigers. The start already is the worst in Orioles history, and the losing streak is only two short of the franchise record of 14.

Mel Hall and Brook Jacoby had three hits apiece for the Indians, and John Farrell allowed four hits in 8 1/3 innings before getting one-hit relief help from Dan Schatzeder.

The Orioles have scored just 17 runs in their 12 games. Baltimore hitters are hitless in their last 27 at-bats with runners in scoring position, and this was the sixth game they've had five hits or fewer.

Hall, who went 3-for-4 with two doubles and an RBI, has 14 hits in his last 30 at-bats.

"There's no way we realistically expected to be 11-2," Indians outfielder Joe Carter said. "Nobody would have expected this."

Red Sox 15, Rangers 2
Mike Greenwell had the most productive day of his career, driving in six runs with a homer, two singles and a groundout as the Red Sox broke out of a slump. Boston had 20 hits, the most in a game since last Aug. 18, and the Red Sox had not scored that many runs since last June 10 in Baltimore.

Bruce Hurst pitched a four-hitter, striking out eight in his first complete game of the season.

Brewers 6, Yankees 3
Joey Meyer came into the game without a major league hit and left it with a homer, double and single in Milwaukee's victory over the Yankees. Robin Yount and Rob Deer also homered for the Brewers, and Ted Higuera allowed three runs on seven hits over 8 1/3 innings.

Higuera held the Yankees to an unearned run in the third until Roberto Kelly got the Yankees' first extra-base hit, a one-out double in the ninth. Mike Pagliarulo followed with his third homer, and Dan Plesac came on to get the final two outs.

Tigers 8, Royals 6
Chet Lemon had two hits, extending his hitting streak to all 10 of the Tigers' games, drove in two runs and scored twice in Detroit's victory over Kansas City.

Jeff Robinson allowed three runs on four hits — three of them solo homers — in 6 2/3 innings. Jamie Quirk had one homer and George Brett two. Brett also had an eighth-inning RBI single.

Blue Jays 2, Twins 0
Mike Flanagan worked seven innings, giving up five hits and relying on Tom Henke to finish the shutout for Toronto. Kelly Gruber scored one of Toronto's runs and drove in the other.

Flanagan struck out two, walked two and did not allow a runner past second base. He came out after allowing a leadoff single to Tim Lardner in the eighth, and Henke earned his second save, giving up two hits in two innings.

White Sox 7, Athletics 6
Lance Johnson doubled home two runs in Chicago's decisive four-run fourth inning, leading the White Sox to a sweep of their three-game series with Oakland. The White Sox scored what turned out to be the winning run in the ninth on a single by Donnie Hill and three walks by Eric Plunk.

Jose Canseco drove in a run with a double in the ninth to cut the Angels' lead to one run.

Angels 7, Mariners 4
Chili Davis drove in three runs with a pair of hits, backing the strong seven innings of Kirk McCaskill as the Angels won in Seattle. McCaskill scattered seven hits and Ray Krawczyk pitched the final 1 1/3 innings for his first major league save.

East Victorious In All-Star Game

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — East Coach Bob Hurley had spent the week searching for the appropriate adjectives to describe the talent on his squad in this year's McDonald's All American high school basketball game.

After watching Georgetown-bound Alonzo Mourning and soon-to-be Syracuse Orangeman Billy Owens lead the East to a 105-99 victory Sunday over the West, Hurley developed a final analysis.

"You give me those two and (West player) Shawn Kemp and I can have an NBA franchise tomorrow, one that will be solid for 10-15 years," said Hurley.

Mourning scored 16 points and Owens had 10 points and 14 rebounds as the East took control late in the first half, then withstood a second-half West rally keyed by the inside play of the 6-foot-10 Kemp, a senior at Concord High School in Elkhart, Ind., who will play for Kentucky next season.

Mourning, the 6-10, 230-pound center from Chesapeake, Va., scored 12 of his points in the second half and combined with Owens to give the East a decisive 79-62 edge in rebounding. Mourning and Owens, a 6-8 forward from Carlisle, Pa., shared the game's most valuable player award.

Kemp, with 18 points and nine rebounds, sparked the second-half West surge that erased most of a 78-64 East lead.

A breakthrough slam dunk by Kemp cut the East lead to 83-81 with 6:22 left, but the East regrouped quickly. Guard Chris Jackson hit a leaping, off-balance 12-foot jumper, Mourning slammed home a bucket, center Robert Werdann connected on a jumper and two free throws, and Mourning capped it with his second slam in the run for a 93-81 lead. Jackson, the as-yet-unsigned point guard from Gulfport, Miss., added 13 points.

Todd Day, a 6-7 guard headed for Arkansas, scored 15 points for the West, while Chris Mills, the Kentucky signee from Los Angeles, scored 12.

Mills had been the center of controversy most of the week following reports that his father received an envelope containing $1,000 from a Kentucky assistant coach.

The West, with Mills hitting three quick buckets, scored the game's first 10 points. The East answered with nine straight as Owens and Mourning combined for six and Jackson hit a 3-pointer.

The East took the lead for good at 30-29 on a 12-foot jumper by Crawford Palmer of Arlington, Va., and used a 21-4 run to open up a 49-33 lead just before halftime.

Hurley said he wasn't concerned by the West's quick start, during which his team went scoreless for almost four minutes.

"If (the East) roster wouldn't have been so talented, you might worry. But it was going to be a game of segments," said Hurley, a probation officer by profession who coaches at St. Anthony High School in Jersey City, N.J.

The West hit only 2 of 13 shots from 3-point range and shot just 35 percent for the game while taking 99 shots from the field. Don MacLean, the standout forward from California's Simi Valley High School who is expected to sign with a major college this week, hit just one of seven shots and finished with four points.

Braves Get Win, End Loss Streak

By JIM DONAGHY
AP Sports Writer
After being rocked by losing 10 straight games, the Atlanta Braves are ready to roll.

Zane Smith pitched a four-hitter and Damaso Garcia broke a 1-for-37 slump with his first NL home run as Atlanta ended a record losing streak with a 3-1 victory over Los Angeles at Dodger Stadium on Sunday.

The Braves lost 7-4 to Los Angeles on Saturday to set an NL record with 10 straight losses at the start of a season. The major league record is 13 by Washington in 1904 and Detroit in 1920. The Baltimore Orioles are one away from that mark.

"If anything, it's a big relief," Smith said. "The pressure is off us now, and we can go about our business and play ball like we're capable of."

At the moment, the Braves are playing .091 ball.

Smith, 1-2, struck out five and walked one. The only run off the left-hander came in the third inning, when Rick Dempsey walked and later scored from second on a single by Steve Sax.

"The guy who had the most pressure on him was Zane Smith," Atlanta's ever-ebullient Manager Chuck Tanner said. "He can pitch with any pitcher in any league."

Astros 5, Reds 3
Nolan Ryan allowed seven hits in eight innings and broke a tie with a two-run single as Houston beat Cincinnati at the Astrodome. Ryan, who has not pitched a complete game since April 25, 1986, struck out nine.

Mets 3, Cardinals 2
Rookie Kevin Elster broke a 4-for-34 slump with a two-out single in the bottom of the ninth to score Mookie Wilson from third base as New York beat St. Louis for its sixth straight victory.

The Mets tied the score in the eighth on run-scoring singles by Darryl Strawberry and Kevin McReynolds and then went on to complete their first three-game sweep of St. Louis at Shea Stadium, since July 1984.

Expos 5, Phillies 2
Andres Galarraga snapped a fifth-inning tie with a two-run homer as Montreal sent visiting Philadelphia to its seventh straight loss.

With the score tied 2-2, Herm Winningham led off the fifth with a single against reliever Bill Dawley, and two outs later, Galarraga hit his second home run of the season.

Pirates 12, Cubs 7
Andy Van Slyke hit two homers, R.J. Reynolds had four hits and Bobby Bonilla drove in three runs as Pittsburgh outlasted Chicago on a windy day at Wrigley Field.

The victory was the sixth in seven games for the Pirates who held onto their share of first place with the Mets in the NL East.

Giants 9, Padres 4
San Francisco failed to execute a hit-and-run play but took the lead when San Diego rookie catcher Mark Parent made a throwing error allowing Candy Maldonado to score the go-ahead run in the eighth.

and we definitely had the car to beat."

Labonte ran at or near the front throughout the race. But until the concluding laps, he was never quite a match for Earnhardt, who was penalized almost a lap for jumping the gun at the start of the race. Earnhardt was banished to the rear of the field, but he took the lead when he went into the pits just as the second caution flag of the race was waved, then returned to the track before the rest of the field could circle the track behind the pace car.

Geoff Bodine roughed up Labonte's car on lap 159, allowing Earnhardt to wedge by the scrap and take the lead, but otherwise there was little drama in a race slowed five times by cautions for minor spins and scrapes.

All but three of the 32 starters finished, and Labonte averaged 99.075 mph to earn $48,050, bringing his total earnings for the season to $174,935. Earnhardt retained his lead in the race for the driving championship, and he now holds a 53-point edge over Wallace. Labonte is seventh in the Winston Cup chase, 127 points behind Earnhardt.

BANKRUPTCY — A Ten Year Mistake
Bankruptcy does NOT wipe your Credit Slate clean and give you a "Fresh Start".

Bankruptcy stays on your credit report for 10 Years.

You'll have trouble getting credit. Creditors seldom grant credit to someone who has filed a Wage Earner Plan Chapter 13 or Chapter 7.

You'll have problems getting ANY type of consumer loan — car, home, credit cards, education, personal needs, etc. If you doubt this — contact a creditor.

Ten years of bad news, if you don't think so, ask those who have filed bankruptcy. Don't rely only on the advice of those who will make money off your bankruptcy and encourage you to go bankrupt.

There are options to bankruptcy: If you are having financial problems, contact your creditors first — remember, they want to see you solve your financial problems just as much as you do.

So before you make a Bankruptcy decision, THINK, consider the options and don't lock yourself into BANKRUPTCY — A Ten Year Mistake.

'Wiseguy' Viewers Appeal To CBS On Behalf Of Show

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — CBS announces its fall schedule next month, and "Wiseguy" producer Stephen J. Cannell is asking viewers to write to the network to make sure the undercover agent drama isn't left off the list.

CBS is finishing last this season for the first time, so major changes are in store for next fall. Now is the time for viewers to speak out, says Cannell. Viewer campaigns have saved other shows, notably "Cagney & Lacey" and "Designing Women." "You've got a network under a certain amount of pressure right now to perform, and we're trying to convince them that some of the shows they have, this one included, can do the job for them," said Cannell in a telephone interview from his Los Angeles office, which he said was stacked with almost 2,000 pieces of mail.

"I've never had a show that drew mail like this one, and it isn't stuff written in Crayola," said Cannell, who has produced and written such hits as "The Rockford Files" and "The A-Team."

Cannell is sending the letters to CBS Entertainment President Kim LeMasters and appealing to viewers to write LeMasters directly.

"Kim and all the people at CBS really love the show, so it's not a matter of them saying, 'We don't see it,'" said Cannell. "They're sort of scratching their heads, too, and saying, 'How can we make this thing happen?' I just want to make sure 'Wiseguy' doesn't fall through the cracks as management screening starts."

"Wiseguy" is among the best dramas on network television and one of CBS' best shows. But in its premiere season it got low ratings, because of continuing plotlines but especially because of time slots.

It started out Thursday nights opposite NBC's top-rated comedy lineup, then moved to Monday nights where it was frequently up against miniseries and movies on the two other networks or pre-empted by miniseries on CBS.

The premise of the show is daring. Ken Wahl stars as Vinnie Terranova, a government agent who goes deep undercover into crime organizations. Such investigations take years in real life. On "Wiseguy" they take several weeks, an eternity on network television where viewers are likely to be put off by a continuing storyline, figuring if they missed the first few episodes, they won't be able to catch up.

Cannell would solve that problem next season by bringing viewers up to date before each episode.

This season, the first eight episodes featured Ray Sharkey as New Jersey crime boss Sonny Steelgrave, a villain so likable Vinnie flirted occasionally with crossing the line between cop and criminal.

After Sonny was vanquished in a two-part conclusion that would have made a respectable theatrical release, enter a new villain, alternately charming and lunatic Mel Proffitt, played by Kevin Spacey.

Cannell is hoping the show will rack up some Emmy Awards this summer the way NBC's "Hill Street Blues" did after almost getting canceled for low ratings its first season.

"Wiseguy" has a number of likely nominees for acting Emmys, including Sharkey and Spacey, plus William Russ, who in the Proffitt storyline played CIA operative Roger Lococco, hit man with a heart of gold.

Another likely candidate is series regular Jonathan Banks who has turned Frank McPike, Vinnie's irascible boss, into one of the most intriguing supporting characters on television.

CBS was set to start running repeats of the Sonny Steelgrave "arc," as the show's producers call each storyline, but pulled the episodes to await a decision on whether the show will be renewed.

If it is picked up, Cannell said, CBS will rerun the episodes this summer in the show's new time period to help it build an audience. "Wiseguy" fans will have their VCRs ready.

Tony Winner Puts All Of Her Energy Into Each Performance

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — A belter, says singer Nell Carter, is one who gives his or her all.

"You're afraid you might hyperventilate or crack, but you do it for the excitement of it," the Tony award-winning performer said. "Head singers have to hold everything tight to get the note. I like beltters, people who have that non-control but control."

Carter is also an Emmy winner who spent six seasons delighting TV audiences on the sitcom "Gimme a Break." She was interviewed while in New York for a nine-day engagement at the Village Gate.

"I have a Las Vegas show," she said. "One critic said on a scale of one to 10 we were 11. I'm not doing that show."

The dinner show in Las Vegas, she said, is easy. "They like anything as long as it's recognizable. You get a chance to really wail a song, do something with a great arrangement. The late show, you have a lot of drunks. You sing whatever they want to hear. Torch songs seem to go over."

She's choosing from among 60 songs in her New York show, which opened April 15. "I wanted to sing Harold Arlen this time and some country songs and I'm learning 'One of Us Was Wrong' from 1899 and some Sophie Tucker songs. If you were to put this show on canvas, it would be very abstract."

Carter won a Tony for best featured actress in a musical for her performance in "Ain't Misbehavin'," the revue of Fats Waller songs which opened on Broadway in 1978, and she will be in the revival this August. She sings Waller's "Keepin' Out of Mischief Now" in her show.

She left "Ain't Misbehavin'" after nine months to have her tonsils out, sang Gershwin at the King Cole Room of the St. Regis Hotel, was in "Black Broadway" at Town Hall and then returned to "Ain't Misbehavin'" in San Francisco and Los Angeles to fulfill her contract.

"They've always cast the part to look like me," she said. "People will say they saw me in St. Louis."

In those days, and until about four years ago, Carter said she did not appreciate her talent.

"I was hanging out with the wrong crowd, participating in things I wouldn't choose to do now," she said. "Now when I'm on stage I know why they're applauding. I know what I just said. I remember what I did last night."

"I'm not saying I was a loose woman. I did have my episode with drugs."

"I was able to have a good career while I was doing terrible things to myself. I don't see why I did not die. I think it must have been a death wish for me to even be involved in the things I was doing. Thank God I didn't die. Now I don't want to. It's a different world for me now."

Growing up in Birmingham, Ala., Carter listened to her mother's recordings of Dinah Washington and B.B. King, and her brother's Elvis Presley records. She liked Doris Day, the Andrews Sisters, Johnny Mathis, and mentions Cleo Laine and Barbra Streisand as singers she admires.

"If Liza Minnelli wants to sing with me, I won't turn her down — I'll give the poor kid a break," she said.

 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East

 2 NT Pass 3 ♣ Pass

 What do you bid now?
 A.—Partner's bid is a one-round force (no one can know that the hand will make exactly nine tricks at spades, but not eight at no trump), and usually promises at least a six-card suit. Your hand has become golden—prime controls in every suit, a ruffing value and three trumps to a high trump honor. Trumpet your slam interest with a four-club cue-bid.

 What action do you take?
 A.—It's simply a question of whether the opponents can make a small slam or a grand, and what you can do to prevent them from getting there. Certainly you should up the ante, and it's only a matter of whether you should bid four, five, or six spades. We have a slight preference for the latter.

Demjanjuk Carried Into Court For Trial Verdict

By MARY SEDOR
Associated Press Writer
JERUSALEM (AP) — John Demjanjuk was carried into court feet first by six police officers today to hear the verdict in his Nazi war crimes trial after he was unable to enter on his own, apparently due to a back injury.

The former Ohio autoworker, his legs flailing slightly and his head upright, was carried to a holding cell next to the courtroom, from where he listened to the opening of the critical session of his trial.

Demjanjuk's defense team and family said he was forced to lie flat on his back because of a back injury.

Presiding judge Dov Levine responded: "The medical opinion submitted to us clarifies that the accused is capable of sitting in the courtroom ... but we will comply with the request of the defense."

Opening the session, Levine told a courtroom packed with hundreds of observers and journalists the three-judge panel faced "the utmost responsibility" in rendering a judgment about "one of the darkest periods in humanity." The judge also said: "We have the responsibility of determining the fate of a human being."

Reading of the 450-page judgment was expected to take several hours, and could go into a second day. It is based on more than 15,000 pages of testimony from Holocaust survivors, documents experts and Demjanjuk.

The defendant has spent 11 years fighting charges he was the notorious Nazi death camp guard "Ivan the Terrible."

Holocaust mastermind Adolf Eichmann, the only other Nazi war criminal to be tried in Israel, was convicted and hanged in 1962. Unlike Eichmann, Demjanjuk has insisted he is an innocent victim of mistaken identity.

If convicted, Demjanjuk could receive the death penalty. He will be sentenced at a later hearing.

Demjanjuk's son-in-law, Ed Nishnic, visited the defendant in prison Sunday and said Demjanjuk was "optimistic, even though he's been let down before."

"John's biggest worry is the attitude of the judges. He believes our case is solid, but the judges could make an emotional decision against him. He's felt all along they didn't want to hear his side of the case," Nishnic said in an interview.

The Ukrainian-born Demjanjuk, 68, is charged with war crimes, crimes against the Jewish people and crimes against humanity for allegedly operating gas chambers that killed 850,000 Jews at the Treblinka death camp in Nazi-occupied Poland in 1942 and 1943.

Demjanjuk, who lived in a Cleveland suburb before being extradited to Israel in February 1986, claims he is a victim of mistaken identity. He says he was a Nazi prisoner-of-war during the period in question.

Nishnic, who raised more than $650,000 in defense funds, said he was so convinced Demjanjuk would be acquitted he was carrying the defendant's air ticket to Cleveland in his pocket.

The prosecution's case against Demjanjuk has rested largely on the memories of five Treblinka survivors who testified they recognized Demjanjuk as the brutal "Ivan" more than 40 years after the Holocaust.

A pivotal piece of prosecution evidence was Demjanjuk's alleged Nazi identity card, provided to Israel by the Soviet Union.

The document, issued at Trawniki, a training camp for death camp guards in Nazi-held Poland, does not mention Treblinka but states that Demjanjuk was posted at the nearby Sobibor death camp.

Six prosecution experts authenticated the card's paper, ink, photograph and signatures, and an equal number of defense witnesses said the document was forged. Demjanjuk claims the Trawniki card was fabricated by the Soviets to punish him for fighting in an anti-communist unit organized by the Nazis at the end of World War II.

A defense psychology expert raised doubts about the reliability of the Treblinka survivors' memories.

Demjanjuk's attorneys also presented 12 statements from Treblinka inmates who failed to identify Demjanjuk's picture as that of "Ivan."

Demjanjuk and his attorneys tangled frequently with the judges, who at one point accused the defendant of evading the truth after he repeatedly contradicted himself during a weeklong cross-examination.

Two of the defense team's 15 expert witnesses were discredited. One retracted her testimony and another tried to commit suicide after her credentials were called into question.

Still, Demjanjuk's attorneys contend they have cast enough doubt on the prosecution case to win an acquittal.

"We had to raise doubts in the case, not more than this. There is the necessary doubt," said Israeli attorney Yoram Sheftel.

Nishnic said Demjanjuk would appeal a guilty verdict.

Even if Demjanjuk wins an acquittal, he will not walk away a free man. Stripped of his U.S. citizenship, he could be deported to the Soviet Union, which provided evidence against him.

Attorney John Gill said if Demjanjuk is acquitted, the defense will ask the Israeli government for extra security and permission for him to remain in Israel until he regains his U.S. citizenship or is given asylum in another country.

Besides Nishnic, Demjanjuk's wife Vera, 62; son John Jr., 22; daughter Lydia Maday, 37; and her husband Andrij were to attend today's session.

Another daughter, Irene Nishnic, 27, and Demjanjuk's 2-year-old grandson, Eddie, remained in Cleveland.

Explosion Rocks Jewish Center

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Bombs exploded today at the Jewish Community Center and a Saudi Arabian airline office, and police suggested the blasts may have been staged by the same attackers. No injuries were reported.

Police said there were no immediate claims of responsibility for the two attacks, which caused extensive property damage.

"It would take less than 10 minutes to drive from the Jewish Center to the Saudi Airlines office at that time of night when there is so little traffic," police spokesman Karl-Heiz Wagner said.

The first bomb went off at the Jewish Community Center in the residential West Side just after midnight. At 12:18 a.m. (6:18 p.m. EDT Sunday), the second bomb exploded at the office of Saudia Airlines, about a mile away, police said.

The Jewish Community Center, a modern, marble-fronted building which houses conference rooms, a gymnasium, restaurant and other facilities, was opened in September 1986.

Security at the center is tight, with frequent police patrols. Investigators at the scene reported tens of thousands of dollars of damage.

A Volkswagen bus parked in front of the Jewish Community Center was destroyed, police said. Police said a caretaker was inside the community center at the time of the blast but was not injured.

No one was inside the airline office when the explosion occurred there, police said. Wagner said there was no immediate estimate of damage at the airline offices.

Bering Focus Of Fish Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. and Soviet negotiators are discussing the possibility of closing a section of the Bering Sea known as the "doughnut hole" to all foreign trawlers while scientists try to determine if it is being overfished.

"They are as concerned as much if not more than we are," Edward Wolfe, who heads the State Department negotiating team, said of Soviet concerns over the potential for overfishing in one of the world's richest fishing grounds.
