Hijackers Free Hostages, Leave Algiers

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — Shiite Moslem gunmen slipped out of a Kuwaiti jet at dawn today — reportedly with a promise of safe conduct — and their 31 hostages were freed, ending a 16-day hijacking ordeal.

The hijackers left Algiers for an unknown destination, according to sources in the Persian Gulf who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity. The Kuwait News Agency said no deal was made with the hijackers except safe passage to Iran or Lebanon.

The Algerian government had mediated with the hijackers, who the hostages said numbered about eight but the Kuwait News Agency said numbered nine. The government and the hijackers said they reached a solution but did not say what it was.

The gunmen had killed two passengers since seizing the Kuwait Airways Boeing 747 on April 5. But Kuwait refused to bow to the hijacker's demand that 17 pro-Iranian terrorists imprisoned in Kuwait be released.

Most of the 31 freed hostages were believed to be Kuwaiti, including three members of Kuwait's royal family. It was reported previously that about 35 hostages were aboard the plane.

An official source in Kuwait, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Algerian Foreign Minister Taleb Ibrahim promised the hijackers safe passage when he met with them aboard the plane on Tuesday.

A 31-year-old businessman, Tadar El-Kebl, said he saw the hijackers going through the plane trying to wipe off their fingerprints shortly after 4 a.m. today.

"This was the first indication I had that our release was imminent," El-Kebl said.

The hijackers were whisked out of the jet at about 5:40 a.m. (12:40 a.m. EDT) and taken in unmarked cars to an undisclosed location, said Algerian officials who spoke on condition of anonymity. The hostages were brought out about 20 minutes later.

Floodlights that had bathed the blue-and-white airliner nightly since it landed here a week ago were turned off at 9 p.m. Tuesday, allegedly for a technical reason. They never came back on and the area around the jet was dark, making it difficult for reporters to detect any movement.

Anware Al-Sabah and Ibtesam Al-Sabah, second cousins of Kuwait's emir and the only two women among the hostages, were the first to descend the gangway from the plane.

The women, wearing black veils, were escorted to a car and taken to a hospital with their brother, Fadel Khaled Al-Sabah, who rode in an ambulance, a doctor said. The brother was suffering from a nervous disorder.

The rest of the hostages boarded a white bus and cars and waved to reporters on the tarmac as they were driven to the airport VIP lounge. The seven crew members and 21 passengers carried hand luggage.

The men were unshaven, looked haggard and dazed and stared vacantly.

"We lived in fear. We were very frayed. We had lost hope that it would turn out this way," said Kuwaiti student Youssef al-Angeri, 24.

Passengers and crew said the hijackers always wore light blue hoodies in their presence.

"The worst moment was when they put a gun to a passenger's head," said the plane's purser, Abdel Mon'em Mahmoud, an Egyptian. "Their eyes were sharp and expressionless like a shark."

Gore May Be On Way Out

Dukakis Takes Major Victory

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Dukakis today celebrated a resounding New York victory that put him on a fast track toward the Democratic presidential nomination and a fall showdown with Republican George Bush. Jesse Jackson praised Dukakis for steering clear of attacks in the bitterly divisive primary, saying, "Good for him and good for America."

Sources said Sen. Albert Gore Jr. was ending his presidential bid after a poor third-place finish behind Dukakis and Jackson. One source, commenting on condition he not be named, said the only question was whether Gore would formally withdraw or merely suspend his campaign in order to retain his delegates.

The Tennessee senator scheduled an announcement for Thursday in Washington.

Jackson today singled out New York Mayor Edward Koch for blame in a campaign in which Jackson said "people were driven into hysteria" by negative campaigning against him. But he said on CBS-TV that Dukakis "resisted the temptation to take the campaign to the gutter."

Dukakis, in interviews on NBC-TV and ABC-TV, said, "I want to be a unifier. ... I think we can put it back together. I'm somebody who hates the politics of division."

Dukakis won 51 percent of the New York vote, Jackson 37 percent and Gore 10 percent.

"The Democratic Party's going to be unified and we're going to stop George Bush this November," Gore said, sounding a unity theme that must have been music to Dukakis' ears after two months of rough-and-tumble campaigning.

Gore was expected to halt his campaign on Thursday. He had staked everything in New York with an expensive television campaign and a sometimes barb-tongued effort to pose himself as an alternative to Dukakis and Jackson.

Dukakis ended up handily winning the ethnic white vote, both Jewish and Catholic.

Med Park Study Scheduled

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

Following an unexpected and detailed presentation by Mayor Ed Carter, the Planning and Zoning Commission agreed Tuesday to form a separate subcommittee to study special uses currently allowed in the MD-1 and MD-2 (medical) zoning districts.

"We intend to look at these (special uses) to see if they would be better served as permitted uses with very difficult performance standards, that is restricting what they can be and how they can be set up," said Wallace Wooles, commission chairman.

Wooles said the newly formed subcommittee will study the matter over the next 30 days. The subcommittee's findings will then be presented to the Planning and Zoning Commission at its next monthly meeting for acceptance or modification. Wooles said once a recommendation is agreed upon, it will then be forwarded to the council for consideration of approval.

Members of the subcommittee are commission members Willie Pate, Steve Blades, Ric Miller and Wooles.

Wooles said only special uses, not permitted uses, will be reviewed in the study.

The subcommittee's formation was prompted by the controversial March 7 decision by the City Council permitting floral shops as permitted uses in the restrictive MD-2 zoning district.

The 4-3 decision was followed by another equally controversial 4-3 decision to have the Planning and Zoning Commission review all special and permitted uses in the MD-1 and MD-2 districts and consider the elimination of all special uses in medical district zoning.

At the previous Planning and Zoning meeting on March 15, commission members agreed to study the permitted and special uses but several members expressed uncertainty over what exactly was expected from the commission's review.

"It's pretty obvious that some people were misled in what the concerns of the council actually were," Carter said today. "It was clear I needed to be there (at Tuesday night's meeting) to elaborate on the concerns of the majority of the council and to answer any questions the commission may have had regarding those concerns."

Accompanied by Mayor Pro-Tem Lorraine Shinn, Carter expressed to the commission his concerns over inequities which he says have occurred in the past as a result of the granting of special uses in the MD-1 and MD-2 medical district, and of his concerns regarding future land-use decisions regarding the medical park.

"There isn't much we can do about the mess that's been made on the south side of Stantonsburg Road, but I think it's imperative that we protect the integrity of the medical district between Stantonsburg Road and Highway 43 because I think that's critical to the future development of that hospital and the medical complex," Carter told the commission members.

'I'M FREE' — One of the 31 hostages aboard a Kuwait Airways 747 leaves the plane in Algiers today, holding a teddy bear and flashing a "V" for victory sign. Hijackers freed all of the hostages and left Algiers, apparently with a guarantee of safe passage. (AP Laserphoto)

Park: East Is 'Awakened Giant'

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

Roy H. Park, chairman and chief executive officer of Park Communications Inc., told about 200 industrialists gathered at the Hilton in Greenville Tuesday that eastern North Carolina has the greatest potential for growth of any similar area in the country.

"Eastern North Carolina — the region from the capital in Raleigh to the coast — was once considered a sleepy, non-aggressive area in terms of business," Park said at the spring rally of the Eastern North Carolina Industrial Conference. "But this mighty giant has awakened, with economic energy and a geographical expanse that has virtually unlimited possibilities."

Eastern North Carolina has followed the lead of the Research Triangle Park by forming Triangle East, Park said. "To me, the Research Triangle Park is the outstanding economic development project yet undertaken in this state, or any other state."

Just 500 people were employed in the Research Triangle Park in 1960; now there are 30,000 employees and the annual payroll is $1 billion, Park said. "Today eastern North Carolina now has a new formal relationship with this highly successful research park."

Triangle East, spearheaded by former North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt, makes its headquarters in Zebulon and reaches from the outskirts of Raleigh east to Wilson, Rocky Mount and Greenville, Park said.

"Triangle East is drawing manufacturers to this region where they can locate at sites that are close to the Research Triangle Park, yet offer markedly lower cost of operation," Park said.

The Eastern North Carolina Industrial Council also works to bring economic development to eastern North Carolina, said Chairman Edna K. Morris of Rocky Mount.

"Our staff is provided by the Eastern North Carolina Chamber of Commerce," Ms. Morris said. "One of our primary objectives is to promote acquaintanceships and cooperation among individuals in the 43 eastern North Carolina counties."

The spring rally is a chance for business leaders to socialize and the council uses the gathering to name its industrialist of the year, Ms. Morris said. Marshall E. Schneider of Roanoke Rapids was named eastern North Carolina's industrialist of the year at the rally Tuesday night.

Students Getting Taste Of Future

Guidance counselors in the Pitt County high schools say they are preparing students for the more stringent minimum course requirements needed to attend college in one of the 16 University of North Carolina institutions.

The main thrust of the effort to make students aware of needed courses is during spring registration, they said. The state Board of Education adopted a policy in January that requires all schools with grade 8 and above to attach a copy of the new admissions requirements to the registration materials given to students.

But, Pitt counselors are taking extra steps to make students aware of the requirements.

"We began about four weeks prior to registration," said Sue Nobles of Ayden-Grifton High School. Posters were hung in the guidance department around the school, and brochures and leaflets from the university system also were distributed to the students.

Students at Farnville Central discuss the requirements in English classes, and the information is printed in a curriculum guide handbook, said Allison Peadar. Posters

Grace Puts Blame On Congress

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pointing fingers and calling names, business magnate Peter Grace says Congress is responsible for the $2.4 trillion federal deficit and that most senators and representatives are more interested in re-election than they are in reducing the debt.

Grace is the top executive of W.R. Grace & Co. and the man who headed President Reagan's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control — the Grace Commission.

He spoke to area business and governmental leaders at the Greenville Golf and Country Club Tuesday and then led a seminar at East Carolina University Tuesday night. Both appearances were sponsored by the university's BB&T Center for Leadership Development.

"The single greatest problem facing America today is the massive federal budget deficit," Grace told the afternoon audience. Calling for immediate enactment of the Grace Commission's cost-saving recommendations, Grace said that, "by cutting waste and inefficiency in the federal government, the deficit can be significantly reduced."

A Democrat, Grace was chosen to head the federal study panel in March 1982. And when the commission's report was released in January 1984, it recommended 2,478 cost-cutting and revenue-enhancing measures that it said would save $424 billion over three years.

Recently, a White House management report credited implemented Grace Commission recommendations for having saved the government $110 billion over the last three years. And Grace said Tuesday that "$40.5 billion this year will be saved because of the Grace Commission."

But Grace said the $110 billion "is only 30 percent of what we recommended," because only about 600 of the commission's recommendations have been implemented.

"All government needs to do is use

Witness Says He Saw Sneed, Slain Service Station Operator Struggling

Reflector Staff Writer

A witness in the first-degree murder trial of Euston Ivon Sneed testified Monday in Pitt County Superior Court that he saw Sneed struggling with Willie Hubert Tripp Sr. on Dec. 31, 1983, the night Tripp was killed during an attempted robbery.

District Attorney Thomas Haigwood was scheduled to continue presenting evidence for the state today.

Douglas Randolph Adams testified he heard three or four gunshots as he stepped out of his truck in the parking lot of the Holiday Inn on Memorial Drive, which is across the street from where Tripp's Bypass Service Center was located.

Adams said he began to make his way across Memorial Drive as he saw Tripp and a black male come out of the service station and begin to scuffle. Tripp fell to his knees and the other man fled behind the building, Adams testified.

When Haigwood asked Adams if he could identify the man he saw that night, Adams identified Sneed, pointing to him from the witness stand.

Adams, now an engineer with Lockheed Airlines in West Virginia, was in Greenville on New Year's Eve 1983 for a party at the Holiday Inn.

Tripp had gone back into the service station and was lying face down on the floor by the time Adams had crossed the road and entered the building, he said. Adams said he called for assistance and a Greenville policeman arrived shortly.

The jury of nine women and three men also heard Greenville Police Officer John Fleming testify about what Tripp said to him before Tripp died. Defense attorneys Alford and Calvin King objected to the testimony because hearsay is inadmissible and because they claimed the defense had asked the state to supply them with any statements Tripp made after the shooting and the state had not complied.

Judge Herbert O. Phillips III

ordered the jury out of the courtroom to allow Fleming to testify, and he then ruled in favor of Haigwood's argument that the testimony was admissible under the exception to the hearsay rule which allows statements made by someone about to die.

"I think the matter should not be excluded," Phillips told the attorneys, but Phillips also ordered the state to provide Alford and King with the statements Tripp made from the time he was shot until he died about 45 minutes later.

Tripp told Fleming he had been shot several times after he was "jumped by a black male" who tried unsuccessfully to take money from his pockets, Fleming testified. Sneed is charged with armed robbery, in addition to first-degree murder.

There were nickels, dimes and quarters scattered in front of the station, Fleming said.

Tripp then said he was dying, according to Fleming's testimony, and he asked Fleming to call his wife and his son, Billy.

After Tripp was pronounced dead in the emergency room at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, Fleming said he and a nurse examined Tripp's belongings and found money in two shirt pockets and two pants pockets totaling about $1,600.

New Bern attorney Benjamin Alford, co-counsel for Sneed, questioned Adams about which law enforcement officers he had talked with about the case and which ones had taken statements from him.

When asked about specific answers he had given to police officers, Adams said he was in shock at the time because of the shooting, and he repeatedly told Alford he did not recall what statements he had given, but he said he was confident in his memory.

"I know what I saw that night," Adams said in testimony. "I will never forget it." Alford asked Adams if the events were sketchy, and Adams said his memory was as clear as it was in 1983.

During cross-examination, Adams said he had not ever been called to identify Sneed in a police line up or been shown photographs of Sneed for identification.

Adams said he had not seen Sneed since New Year's Eve 1983 until he arrived in Greenville last Tuesday for the beginning of the trial and he recognized Sneed in the courtroom.

Adams said he spoke with State Bureau of Investigation agent Jim Wilson that morning and told him he recognized Sneed. "I told him he was the man I saw December 31 ... and Mr. Wilson, he was trying to calm my nerves because they were pretty shot," Adams testified.

Alford specifically asked Adams if he had reread any of his statements taken at the time of the murder before testifying Monday, and Adams said he had not, but Fleming's testimony contradicted that statement.

Fleming, the first officer to reach the murder scene, corroborated Adams' testimony that Tripp had been shot and was lying face down on the station floor. But under cross-examination, Fleming testified that before the trial began Monday he allowed Adams to read the statement he gave in 1983.

Colleges To Mark 25th Anniversary

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

The state Department of Community Colleges will begin a yearlong celebration of 25 years of "Opening the Doors of Opportunity" to its students next month with a series of events in Raleigh May 15-18.

The theme for the anniversary celebration is "Education at Work," and events for the four-day kickoff were discussed during a teleconference for print and broadcast media, which was beamed from Piedmont Central Community College in Charlotte to the other 57 colleges Tuesday.

Pitt Community College President Charles Russell and public relations Director Susan Nobles also discussed PCC's plans for celebrating the anniversary.

Open house, receptions, exhibits and an address from Gov. Jim Martin are among the events in Raleigh May 15-16.

On May 17, the day when the General Assembly created the statewide system of community colleges 25 years ago, the colleges across the state, including PCC, will release balloons in celebration of the day.

Other activities PCC will have to celebrate the anniversary include hosting the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce Business After Hours in August, hosting a joint advisory council dinner and meeting in the fall, guest lecturers for classes, celebrating Black History Month and Vocational Education Week in February and hosting a legislative appreciation luncheon in conjunction with the PCC Board of Trustees meeting in May.

The creation of the Community Colleges Act in 1963 combined 20 Industrial Education Centers and three of six junior colleges into one system. PCC was one of the Industrial Education Centers and was chartered in March 1961.

Less than 10 years after its founding, the community college system had expanded from the original 23 schools to 54, and enrollment had increased from 52,000 to more than 358,000. Almost 20 years later, groundbreakings were clearing permanent sites for each system campus.

In 1979, the 58th institution, Brunswick Technical Institute in Supply (now Brunswick Community College) opened its doors. Also that year, the legislature established a separate Board of Community Colleges to govern the system beginning in Jan. 1, 1981.

Today, the 58-member network of community and technical colleges makes up the nation's third largest community college system and educates more than half a million students each year. Thirty-one of the institutions offer college transfer programs.

PCC became a technical institute in 1964 and was providing nine curriculum programs for 96 students. In 1979, it became a community college and added college transfer programs.

PCC currently offers 23 technical programs, 12 vocational programs, three certificate programs and three college transfer programs.

Clean-Up Campaign

The Greenville Community Appearance Commission will sponsor a citywide "Clean-Up Campaign" scheduled for Saturday.

According to Commission Chairman Tom Morgan, citizens are being encouraged to select an appropriate area in their community and collect all its litter. He said large plastic bags for collecting trash are available from the city's Public Works Department, and the department will then gather the collected refuse.

Morgan said those participating in Saturday's project also are being encouraged to separate litter into bags of aluminum, glass or paper for recycling purposes. Bags of recyclable trash are then to be properly marked according to their contents.

Morgan said volunteers also would be needed to clean the following areas:

N.C. 11 north of the Tar River Bridge; Memorial Drive between Farmville Boulevard and Third Street; 10th Street from Rock Spring Road to Wright Road; Evans Street from 14th Street to Arlington Boulevard; U.S. 264 west of Pitt Memorial Hospital, and city parks, playgrounds and schools.

Retired Navy Officers Donate Personal Papers To ECU

ECU News Bureau
Retired Navy officers who were members of the U. S. Naval Academy's Class of 1941 are giving the East Carolina Manuscript Collection their letters, diaries, photographs and other personal papers, comprising what the collection director terms "a significant array of documentation for modern naval history."
"The Class of '41 was the last to graduate from Annapolis before the outbreak of World War II," said

Donald Lennon, coordinator of special library collections at East Carolina University. "In many respects this group of officers marks the transition between the 'old Navy' and the 'modern Navy.'"
The East Carolina Manuscript Collection has acquired thousands of items — correspondence, journals, reports, memos, logbooks, citations, newsletters and scrapbooks from the officers. In addition, several members have contributed tape-recorded oral reminiscences that "supplement and complement the written record," according to Lennon.

"Our 'Class of '41 Project' is unique," he said. "This is the first time, anywhere, that an entire class of the Naval Academy has undertaken to bring together the personal documentation of all of its members."
Among the items already collected are anecdotes of service onboard the "USS Helm" during World War II, eyewitness accounts of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, recollections of war duty on the "USS West Virginia," naval engineering notes, records of an officer serving on the "USS South Dakota" at the battles of Santa Cruz and Guadalcanal, a description of the burning and sinking of the carrier "Lexington," an account of service in the submarine "Thresher" and mementoes from the "USS North Carolina."

The project began when the Manuscript Collection offered to be the official repository for the papers and files of the Academy's Class of '41, Lennon said. "A member of the class who had already deposited his own wartime diary, service record and correspondence with us suggested the idea. His fellow class members voted overwhelmingly for the project when it was proposed to them at a class reunion in Coronado, Calif., two years ago," Lennon explained.

Since the project's inception, documentation contributed by the Class of '41 officers or their widows have continued to accumulate. Updated news of the project has been mailed to some 370 class members, Lennon said. At a class reunion held in Florida in February, Manuscript Collection staff members accepted donations of written materials and taped 15 lengthy oral interviews during a "frantic two days."

The East Carolina Manuscript Collection, begun 22 years ago, is the fourth largest repository of historic documents in the state.

PCMH Preparing for Expansion

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
Pitt County Memorial Hospital trustees Tuesday night authorized its building committee to develop criteria for selection of an architect for the $58 million hospital addition and renovations approved last month.
The hospital is already receiving communications from architects indicating interest in being considered to build the addition. Administrators are also hearing from agencies like other hospitals in this region voicing either approval or concern about the proposed project.
Kathleen O'Connell of the Ernst and Whinny accounting firm told the board that it is expected that bonds for $58,190,000 will need to be issued around Oct. 1, 1989, and be outstanding over 32 years. The bond addition is expected to begin around Oct. 1, 1989, and cost about $40.6 million; the renovation about Oct. 1, 1992, and cost $7.5 million. Plans are to submit a certificate of need to the state in June of this year.

Dr. Michael Weaver, chief of staff, said the medical staff and the local private practice association have gone on record supporting the expansion of the hospital.
Equipment purchases totaling $1,847,485 were approved. Of that, $1,159,923 was for additional cardiac catheterization laboratory equipment and $302,575 was for equipment in the new addition to the hospital — $52,544 for admitting, $37,760 for a holding area, $51,485 for information systems, $25,000 for facilities services and $135,786 for a laboratory.

Other expenditures included $29,800 for a central processor for the pneumatic tube system for plant operations; $14,507 for draperies; $17,600 for imed pumps and poles; $85,000 for expansion of the telephone system; $22,800 for pulse oximeters for the neonatal intensive care unit; $52,000 for blood gas analyzers for pathology; $90,000 for a cell counter for pathology; $24,275 for a disk drive for pathology; $20,850 for a video arthroscope camera system for the operating room; and $28,155 for arthroscopy instrumentation for the operating room.
Medical staff privileges were granted to Dr. Claude M. Galphin in internal medicine and nephrology; to Dr. Henryk M. Kowalski in radiology and to Dr. Albert L. Wiley Jr. in radiation therapy.

Approved for special procedure privileges were Drs. Michael D. Weaver and Henryk M. Kowalski in magnetic resonance imaging performance and interpretation, and Dr. Kevin S. Good in myelography.
Limited health practitioner privileges were granted to Carol Lee Hass and Michael G. Clark, physician's assistants, and James C. Howell, nurse anesthetist. Reappointment of limited health practitioner privileges were made for Diane Meelheim, Judy Jones, Donna Finney and Pamela Hardy, family nurse practitioners, and Cindy Sash, Carol Smith and James Fennell, physician's assistants.
A denial was made to a request for the establishment of occupational therapy as a category of limited health practitioner.

Zoning Panel Votes To Continue Study Of Extending Jurisdiction

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer
In order to provide time to gather detailed information regarding several potential non-conforming uses, members of the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission voted 9-1 at Tuesday's regular monthly meeting to continue considerations regarding the extension of the Extraterritorial Planning and Zoning Jurisdiction south of the city.
Approximately 25 residents and several developers attended a public hearing, several of whom voiced displeasure of the proposal to extend the city's ETJ south approximately one mile and involving approximately 270 acres located south of White Road, east of SR 1709, and west of N.C. 43.
Several residents of the Windsor Subdivision, a part of the targeted area, aired concern that the city was extending the ETJ as a mere formality before city annexation of the area. Meanwhile, several developers said they were unhappy with the proposed zoning of the ETJ area.
Approximately 70 acres of the southernmost section consisting of the Windsor Subdivision is proposed to enter the ETJ zoned R-9S (residential) while the majority of the area, 187.5 acres, would enter the ETJ zoned RA-20 (residential/agricultural). A 14.1-acre tract located adjacent to White Road halfway between SR 1709 and SR 1725 is proposed to enter IU (unoffensive industry), while a small 1.2-acre section located on the corner of N.C. 43 and SR 1725 was proposed to enter zoned CS (shopping center).
Several developers have received building permits from the county for operations which are not permitted uses in the proposed zoning. Those developers at the hearing said they did not wish to enter the ETJ as non-conforming uses, but would instead desire to have the property zoned by the city to accommodate their building intentions as permitted uses.

Commission member Burney Warren said he could not make a decision regarding the ETJ without more information regarding the potential non-conforming uses.
But fellow commission member Ruth Leggett, the sole dissenting voter, argued that continuing the issue would allow time for more potential non-conforming building permits to be issued by the county, further exasperating the problem.
"If we do that (continue the matter), we're going to have some other people coming back the next time who've got property with building permits and proposals and we're going to have more non-conforming uses to worry about," she said.
According to Bobby Roberson, director of planning and development, such a possibility exists. Roberson said during the past month alone, two potential non-conforming use building permits were issued by the county in the proposed ETJ area, while another is expected soon.
According to Roberson, an ETJ is a designated area set aside for physical planning and implemented through the zoning and subdivision regulations of the city. He said such designations prevent the negative consequences of "leap frog" development.
In other matters Tuesday, the commission unanimously approved recommendation of a request by James F. Arthur Jr. and Louis C. Arthur to rezone a 3.87-acre tract located off the southwest intersection of 14th Street and Charles Boulevard and being lot 2, block 49-B of the South Evans Redevelopment Project Area from CN (neighborhood commercial) and CH (highway commercial) to CS (shopping center).

The commission also approved recommendation of a request by the Planning and Development Department to rezone a 1.54-acre tract located north of 14th Street, east of the Seaboard Coastline Railroad and consisting of lots 1 through 4, of block 42-1 of the South Evans Redevelopment Project Area from CDF (downtown fringe commercial) and R-6 (residential) to IU (unoffensive industry).
A rezoning request by Daphne L. Richardson to allow for the expansion of Cliff's Seafood Restaurant's parking lot was also approved for recommendation. The .344-acre tract, located on SR 1533 and adjacent to the restaurant, was recommended to be rezoned from RA-20 (residential-agricultural) to CN.
Meanwhile, the commission approved recommendation of a request by Bill Dansey to annex 25.58 acres of lots 4 and 5 of the Lionsgate subdivision, located north of N.C. 43 and west of SR 1202. The area is contiguous to the city limits.
The commission unanimously approved the preliminary plat of Dansey Property, located east of Courtney Square Phase IV and south of Mulberry Lane. The plat involves one office and institutional tract and 750 lineal feet of street on 4.8 acres.
In addition, the commission unanimously approved recommendation of a request by Planning and Development to amend Section 32-49 of the Zoning Ordinance to allow "Barber shops, beauty shops, and similar personal care services" by right in O&I (office and institutional) zoning districts.
In other matters, the commission heard a report from members of the Planning and Development staff regarding vague definitions in Section 9-5-143 of the Zoning Ordinance involving public sanitary sewage requirements; listened to a presentation by the Pitt County Mental Health, Mental Retardation, and Substance Abuse Center regarding options for a residential substance abuse shelter for adolescents; heard a presentation by commission member Steve Blades regarding the possibility of a historic properties and districts commission being formed in the city; listened to a report from Planning and Development Director Bobby Roberson regarding mobile home park standards and the administrative procedures for processing zoning compliance applications.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Out Of Reach?

College Must Remain Affordable

A college education is part of the American dream and should not be out of reach for anyone. If it is, that fact can damage the economic and social fabric of both the state and community.

If trends of rising education costs, static financial aid and increasing dependence on debt to pay for college continues, North Carolina may find itself faced with a crisis — a citizenry hard-pressed to afford the cost of postsecondary education.

The facts on increased cost illustrate this occurrence — one University of North Carolina system institution raised fees 46 percent from 1982 to 1987, while others, such as the state's second largest school, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, had increases of 20 percent.

Even Pitt County, a community where higher education is within the geographic reach of nearly every citizen, may find itself in a crunch where college is concerned. East Carolina University raised its fees 26 percent in five years. Convenience won't matter if those who want and need an education can't pay for one.

Add to these figures a stagnant pool of financial aid funds and wages that grow more slowly than costs, and a gap appears between the cost of education and the ability to pay.

For a state and county that pride themselves on commitment to education, having that asset economically unmanageable to a significant portion of the populace is a circumstance that gives pause. It's also a situation with alarming implications in an era where increasing emphasis is placed on technological literacy and advanced knowledge.

North Carolina — and Pitt County — has plotted its future with a highly-educated, highly skilled populace in mind. The state's blue-collar heyday is gone. Traditional textiles and tobacco jobs will continue to give way to service sector and high-tech industrial positions. That is the way the state's economy can remain diverse and stable in uncertain economic times.

But education for the people — college diplomas in most instances — is necessary for this transition to take place. It does no good to chart the course if the citizenry cannot obtain the skills necessary to successfully make the voyage.

For a large number of the class of 1988 a college degree will be a ticket to economic and personal success. For them, the cost of an education is the price paid for their future.

It is a cost by far worth the price, but it is a figure that could easily slip out of reach. Debt becomes, for a number of college hopefuls, the only way to secure their future. For some, it is inconvenient, but workable. For others, especially low income families, that avenue may not be open.

That disparity is an issue universities, lawmakers and communities must continue to address with diligence. College tuition should be kept as low as possible. The federal and state governments must rethink their participation in financial aid. Communities like Pitt must work to provide a pool of funds for students who desire an education.

A postsecondary degree should not be beyond the grasp of aspiring college students. A college education must remain, for the graduating classes of 1988 and the future, an option they are free to explore.

To the editor:

The creation of the Roanoke River Wildlife Refuge has unfortunately met with some local opposition. Preserving such an area of 30,000 acres as a national wildlife refuge is a high conservation priority, for areas of wildlife habitat and natural diversity are rapidly vanishing from our country as a result of timber harvesting and development.

The major opposition to the establishment of the Roanoke River Wildlife Refuge comes from private hunt clubs with exclusive hunting rights with the land owners. The Martin County Commissioners have expressed their opposition, as did the Pitt County Commissioners, the latter doing so, I suspect, at the request of Martin County officials and with little debate.

Georgia Pacific Co. owns 20,000 acres of this river bottom land and is willing to sell it for a refuge. The sources of funds for such a major land acquisition is the Migratory Bird Conservation Stamp. This money has already been set aside for this purpose.

Land would be acquired from land owners willing to sell. Martin and Bertie counties would be paid by the Fish & Wildlife Service a sum annually equally to three-fourths of 1 percent of the fair market value to make up for lost tax revenue.

Unless a refuge is created, it would appear unlikely that this area would remain in a natural state. Timber would be harvested or sold to others for a similar purpose and would no longer support a rich variety of plant and animal species. These bottom lands, so critical for wildlife, are a major component of the North American Waterfowl Management Plan for protecting water fowl habitat in the Atlantic Flyway.

Hasty resolutions from Pitt and Martin County commissioners may not represent the best interest of national resources and could divert funds elsewhere. That would be a true misfortune.

To the editor:

Know the latest program the Energy Department has dreamed up to squander our tax dollars? They want to build a $1 billion plant to purify plutonium.

A March 27 article in the New York Times quotes Energy Secretary Herrington as telling a Congressional committee that "we're awash in plutonium." The Assistant Secretary of Energy for Defense Programs said, "Our opponents argue that we do not need S.I.S. (Special Isotope Separation facility) in the near future. That is a fact and we do not dispute it."

Then what about the distant future? We all saw those pictures of President Reagan and Chairman Gorbachev signing a treaty to destroy all intermediate-range nuclear missiles (INF), and the Senate is expected to ratify it. In less dramatic ways we learned that only the missiles would be destroyed, not the warheads. That means plutonium to recycle. And we hear that the President is promoting his START proposal for reducing strategic weapons 50 percent. If successful, START would liberate more plutonium.

But so far the only use for weapons-grade plutonium is to make weapons. Discarding it could be difficult, since no one wants a plutonium waste disposal facility in their world, let alone their state or county.

Furthermore, a billion dollars is a pile of money to spend on a plant with an expected life of seven or eight years, even if we had the billion. The credit of the U.S. is still good, but a day of reckoning comes — to third-world countries and even to Texas millionaires like John Connally.

Congress may save us from this dangerous extravagance. The Bustmante Amendment to the Defense Authorization Act (House) would prevent construction of SIS in Fiscal 1989, though permitting research and development to continue. If it passes.

Homicide Not Solution To Abuse

RALEIGH — It's hard to argue with the decision of the N.C. Court of Appeals in the case of Judy Norman. She is the battered wife who killed her husband while he slept on the evening of June 12, 1985. The court said that she'd been beaten so severely, and over such a prolonged period, that she should be allowed to argue that the slaying was in self-defense.

A reading of the court transcript creates a great deal of sympathy for Mrs. Norman, and little for the dead man. He abused her to such a degree that it is very natural to say, "He got what he deserved." I said it myself.

Formulation of state policy on a single case is often dangerous, however. Judge Sarah Parker realized this, and wrote a very narrow legal opinion in State vs. Norman. Several lawyers interviewed for this column said that the expansion of the self-defense argument that accompanied the decision will pertain to few, if any, other murder cases.

The danger with the decision is that it will encourage others to settle their problems with the firing of a handgun rather than the filing of a criminal complaint. It is the message that the Norman case sends to those not familiar with the finer points of law.

The Norman case should also send a message to state officials. That is: The system does not adequately handle these family violence situations. Thus, the gun becomes too acceptable a remedy for women like Mrs. Norman.

In recent years, much has been done to try to help battered wives. The laws of assault on a female have been strengthened, and safehouses have been opened for women who seek to get away from abusive husbands.

Still, it was not enough for Mrs. Norman. The police knew that there were problems at the Norman house. They'd been called there numerous times. But Mrs. Norman refused to file a criminal complaint against her husband, so the police were left without any real prosecutorial options.

Mrs. Norman had also tried to run away, but her husband had always found her and dragged her back. The director of the state's domestic violence prevention project says that women's shelters are secure. Had Mrs. Norman found her way to one of them, Julia Reeves said, then she'd have been safe.

It's not known if Mrs. Norman sought refuge in such a shelter, but Ms. Reeves notes that even 10 years after the domestic violence program started, there are many North Carolinians who are not aware of it. There are also many women who will not ask for help.

"We've been educating people for 10 years," she said, "but we still have a lot to do. There are a lot of people in the mindset that this (abuse) is their just due" for making the mistake of marrying the wrong man.

If the state is to reduce the number of women who continue to live in a house despite repeated abuse, it will have to improve this educational process. Women must be made aware that the state can help keep a man from beating them every night. That help can come from the criminal justice system which either prosecutes the wife-beater, or from the safehouses which help the woman get away and start a new life.

These are the reasonable options to such abuse. Firing a gun at a man's head is the unreasonable option. It is the impermissible option. Society cannot accept homicide as a solution to one of its problems.

But women like Mrs. Norman are not able to take the step towards seeking state help on their own. They have been so battered that they fear for their lives if they do so. It becomes the job of state leaders to give police and safehouses the resources to help these women take that step.

Americans Should Put Foreign Investment Windfall To Work

To many observers, the current dramatic rise in foreign investment, along with the emergence of Japan as the world's foremost financial power, represents an ominous sign of America's fall from grace. A growing chorus, ranging from authors Susan and Martin Tolchin to investment banker Felix G. Rohatyn, have even suggested that the United States has become hostage to foreign capitalists.

It is not surprising that many in and around the U.S. financial community are uneasy about the fact that only one U.S.-based bank, Citicorp, ranks among the world's top 10. And the trade deficit, together with the large federal budget deficit, continues to be unsettling for the economy — witness last week's stock market plummet at news of a larger-than-expected monthly trade deficit. Yet rather than a sign of basic weakness, the current surge of foreign money — as much as $1.3 trillion since 1974 — also reflects some of the U.S. economy's long-term strengths.

In fact, even as Americans suffer angst over decline, key foreign powers have been showing an almost unseemly enthusiasm for the U.S. economy. A 1984 poll of European executives, taken before devaluation of the dollar made investments more attractive, found 45 percent preferred the United States as their first choice for expansion, five times both second-place West Germany and all of Asia. Japanese investors, likely soon to pass the United States as the world's leading owner of overseas assets, follow a similar pattern.

This interest is not irrational. It is based on fundamental long-term advantages much on the minds of foreign investors. Three of the most prominent involve the continuing waves of new immigration, the entrepreneurial quality of U.S. business culture and the nation's vast continental land mass.

Immigration helps in perhaps the most direct way. The open U.S. economic system, as well as traditions of political liberty, attract large numbers of well-to-do foreigners as immigrants — many of whom then invest in the national economy. Taiwan, for instance, enjoys both a huge trade surplus with the United States and the world's largest cash reserves, now estimated at more than $70 billion.

"The government (on Taiwan) might not like it, but the reality is all the money is coming to America," claims Anthony Chien, a 17-year Citicorp veteran and now president of Cal-Eastern Financial Services, an investment company set up for wealthy Taiwanese investors. "They come here for education. But the more they are exposed, they see the possibilities in business are almost limitless. You don't see that horizon in Taiwan."

Even more impressive to foreign investors, such as those working with Chien, is the vital U.S. entrepreneurial community. At a time when many U.S. banks, such as Continental Illinois, are ignoring smaller business and trying to turn into investment banks, foreign financial institutions have been moving away from Wall Street toward the "middle market" of smaller companies. This is particularly true in California, where Japanese banks account for five of the top 11 banks and roughly one-fifth of all commercial loans, with much of the focus on small and growing firms. Bank of Tokyo's recent purchase of Union Bank, the state's premier "middle market" financial institution, underscores this trend.

Another crucial, and often overlooked, lure for foreigners is the U.S. landmass. Prime economic competitors — Japan, the newly industrializing countries (NICs) of Asia and Western Europe — are fundamentally land- and resource-poor. Many of these nations, most notably Japan and West Germany, spent much of the first half of this century attempting to achieve what the Japanese call tairaku, or continental power, ultimately failing at a terrible cost.

America's tairiku status is particularly impressive to the Japanese. Within its borders, for instance, the United States possess 30 times Japan's arable land, 1,300 times its oil reserves and 327 times the coal deposits. Such differences in land and resources does much to explain the persistent Japanese perception that the United States is still the best long-term bet for investment.

Anxious to capitalize on America's relatively low energy and land costs, as well as the world's largest domestic market, Japanese have been particularly aggressive in rebuilding the U.S. industrial plant. Japanese corporations are spending millions on new automobile plants in Ohio, a textile mill in California and electronic assembly facilities in Oregon. Their purchases of large industrial companies, such as Firestone Tire Company, reflect a desire to take advantage of America's tairiku, something often overlooked by U.S. managers.

Indeed, so great is this tide of investment that some Japanese fear it could ultimately threaten their nation's own economic pre-eminence.

Starting in the early 19th century, European, largely British, capital played a major role in U.S. economic development. European capital financed much early U.S. economic growth — accounting for at least one-third of all U.S. rail securities by 1900. Even Andrew Carnegie's fortune owed much to his role as agent for U.S. firms placing bonds with British and German financiers. Significantly, the periods of heaviest foreign investment coincided with the periods of the U.S. economy's most rapid expansion, providing the financing that ultimately helped American industrial firms overcome all European competitors.

Today that process is repeating itself. After several decades of U.S. capital flight, virtually all of our most powerful trading partners have rediscovered the economic lures of the United States. Rather than discouraging this capital influx, Americans should instead start thinking how best to make this windfall work for the nation's long-term economic well-being.

Landslide Raises Prospect Of Unity That Seemed Improbable

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Dukakis' landslide in New York makes him the undisputed front-runner in the Democratic presidential race and raises the prospect of a unified, peaceful, broker-free nominating convention that seemed wildly improbable a few weeks ago.

Jesse Jackson will press on with his remarkable campaign, but his slim chance of derailing Dukakis now grows slimmer with each passing week, particularly if Sen. Albert Gore Jr. halts his campaign as expected on Thursday.

"The Democratic Party's going to be unified and we're going to stop George Bush this November," said Gore on what must have been the most disappointing night of his campaign. Jackson has said he wants to "enable our party to win" and is determined to "play a role in making that happen."

Pennsylvania votes next week, and Ohio and Indiana after that, and none of them offers the large core of black votes that gives Jackson a secure base from which to spring an upset.

Gore's campaign suspension after a distant third-place finish in New York would mean Dukakis no longer had to divide the white vote with another white candidate.

The District of Columbia will be Jackson's on May 3. But it could well be his last victory, barring a late-season protest vote against a cautious front-runner — always a California possibility for the Democrats.

But the other primaries ahead offer Dukakis a chance to pad the lead he has begun amassing in nominating delegates.

Analysis

Dukakis knows as much, too, even though he points out the nominating campaign will be contested until the last primary on June 7. Even as New York was according him his front-runner status he was making a sharp attack on Bush in the manner of a candidate who expects to be the nominee.

"This fall George Bush is going to be judged by a legacy of ... pink slips for our workers, golden parachutes for high rollers, and greenmail for sharp operators on Wall Street," he said in Philadelphia.

"I want to make that American dream come alive again, not only in Trump Towers, not only in fancy apartments all over this country, not only in a few privileged neighborhoods."

Dukakis has managed to achieve his supremacy in the race without relying on the traditional Democratic party power brokers. The AFL-CIO hasn't endorsed him or any other Democrat, and Dukakis managed to pull off his double-digit New York victory without the endorsement of Gov. Mario Cuomo.

Gore almost certainly will exit the campaign preaching party unity, as he did when he congratulated Dukakis in a New York concession speech. And he won't be the only one talking that way.

Neither Dukakis nor Jackson has shown much penchant for criticizing the other, and any campaign debate is likely to be long on Bush-bashing and short on Democratic bickering.

"We respect each other. We don't attack each other," Dukakis said. "You won't see either one of us attempting to hurt or cut up or otherwise cripple the opponent's campaign."

Still, Jackson has the most potential for creating mischief at the Democratic National Convention this year, and the question most likely to be asked from now to the opening of the convention on July 18 is "What does Jesse want?"

So far, his principal answer to that question has been to stress his determination to elect a Democrat the next president.

When a questioner at a New York breakfast asked Jackson what he would do if he didn't get the nomination, he replied that it was important to "put the nation first and party second and your role third."

And so far, not one word about wanting to be vice president, a prospect that sends terror through the Democratic party establishment.

That's the sort of behavior could make the Democratic convention very peaceful indeed.

Democrats are eager to put their nominating war behind them as soon as reasonably possible without offending Jackson and the millions of black voters who have joined his crusade.

Peter D. Kelly, chairman of the California Democratic Party, said many of the elected and party officials, designated as "super delegates" to the nominating convention, may be reluctant to jump too quickly onto the Dukakis bandwagon.

"They're going to want to be real careful about angering Jesse Jackson and his supporters," said Kelly. "I, for one, am very sensitive about offending that constituency."

Dukakis is unlikely to put any pressure on Jackson. Instead, he will turn his attention to the upcoming primary states and to the task of enlisting the uncommitted elected officials, party leaders and uncommitted delegates to his cause. That will enable him to arrive at the nominating convention in Atlanta with the delegates needed to be nominated.

Iran Reeling But Not Defeated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iran has suffered its two most serious defeats of the eight-year Iran-Iraq war, losing a one-sided engagement with the U.S. Navy and reportedly being knocked off the Faw Peninsula by the smaller Iraqi army.

Despite the setbacks, many U.S. analysts do not believe that Iran is in danger of defeat at the hands of Iraq.

But they are divided over why Iran risked battle with the world's mightiest navy, and why the United States apparently sought confrontation with Iran after a months-long lull in the land and tanker wars in gulf.

The naval battle in the Persian Gulf on Monday dealt a heavy blow to any possible improvement in relations between Iran and the United States, and it suggests that the Reagan administration may have badly miscalculated the Iranian reaction to what U.S. officials called a "measured, appropriate response" to a mining attack on an American warship last week.

President Reagan, defending the U.S. military action, said Tuesday that "we ... consider the matter closed."

Many analysts in and out of government believed it unlikely that Iran would let the issue die, and predicted more terrorist attacks in the gulf and elsewhere.

Given the renewed antagonism between Washington and Tehran, it appeared unlikely that Moscow would ease its objections to a United Nations embargo on arms sales to Iran and Iraq, a U.S. initiative designed to broaden international efforts to stop the fighting.

The Iranian decision to engage U.S. forces may have been calculated to inflict heavy casualties on the Americans and thereby induce Congress to invoke the War Powers Act, possibly forcing the withdrawal of American ships from the Persian Gulf.

Navy officers said that although Iran's navy is small, it has modern weapons that could sink an unwary or unlucky U.S. ship. Heavy U.S. casualties, said Cordesman, could have provoked loud cries on Capitol Hill for the War Powers Act, passed after the Vietnam War to give Congress 60, or at most 90, days to vote whether to leave U.S. forces in a war zone.

In ordering retaliatory strikes against two Iranian oil platforms,

U.S. war planners misjudged the mood in Iran, said James Bill, author of a new book on U.S.-Iranian relations, "The Eagle and the Lion."

"We are dealing with a country that is desperate and cornered," said Bill.

A year ago, administration analysts worried that Iraq could lose the war, opening the way to Iranian domination of the Arab states bordering the gulf.

Last July, U.S. naval vessels began to escort reflagged Kuwaiti tankers in and out of the gulf in what administration officials described as an effort to protect international shipping.

The regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini failed to mount its annual Kerbala offensive on the southern front with Iraq this winter, and there have been numerous reports of problems in recruiting "martyrs" for the war.

Iran has been on the losing end of an exchange of missiles, the "war of the cities," that has inflicted limited damage on the Iraqi capital of Baghdad but reportedly terrorized the Iranian capital of Tehran and holy city of Qom.

Iran was somewhat successful on the northern front, taking some towns in Kurdistan, but was shocked by an alleged Iraqi chemical attack in that region this winter.

Iranian media have reported that U.S. helicopters were flying air support for Iraqi ground forces involved in retaking the Faw Peninsula, allegations that were denied by U.S. officials.

"The Iranians think that the Faw and the U.S. naval attacks were worked out in advance," said Bill, a specialist in Iranian affairs and professor at William and Mary College in Williamsburg, Va.

"Strategically, this is going to set back U.S.-Iranian relations for 30 to 40 years," said Bill. "We need to take a long-range, strategic view, not a short-range tactical view."

Child Care

WASHINGTON — When George Bush visited the Labor Department's day care center last week, he was greeted by a dozen tikes chanting "Jesse Jackson, Jesse Jackson" — demonstrating the pitfalls faced by a Republican who trods on the enemy's turf.

The vice president's visit coincided with issuance of a Labor Department report on child care whose bland bureaucratic language disguises a philosophical debate boiling inside the Reagan administration. With Democrats in full cry flogging child care as a 1988 campaign issue, Republicans must decide whether to respond with a toned-down version — or shape a real alternative faithful to conservative doctrine.

The specific question: should the government subsidize the two-earner family by supporting day care centers, or should it seek parity for the mother who would rather stay home to raise her children? Typically, the lame duck administration has not come to grips with that issue. Nor has George Bush, apart from promising "a top priority" for child care if he is elected. But the preschoolers cheering for Jesse warn Bush that adopting liberal postures can be risky.

As usual, Democrats are ahead of the power curve. New York's Gov. Mario Cuomo has called for a "decade of the child." Michigan's Gov. James J. Blanchard, Democratic platform chairman, calls children "our highest priority" and threatened to veto any education bill without pre-school help for "at risk" 4-year-olds. Their answer: money, money and more money. The basic Democratic bill, sponsored by Sen. Christopher J. Dodd and Rep. Dale E. Kildee, would spend $2.5 billion for child care in the first year alone.

Normally, the administration's response would come from the Health and Human Services Department. But Secretary Otis R. Bowen, withered by a left-right crossfire on issues ranging from health care to teenage pregnancy, was more than happy to give way to the Cabinet's newest member. Secretary of Labor Ann Dore McLaughlin, competent and experienced in government, was eager to take on a major task.

Federal Judge Denies Bond To Tuscaroras

BOND DENIED — Timothy Jacobs, a Robeson County Indian, is led from the Federal Building in New Bern on Tuesday after being denied bond. Jacobs and Eddie Hatcher are charged with taking hostages at the Lumberton newspaper office on Feb. 1. (AP Laserphoto)

Associated Press Writer

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — Accused hostage-takers Eddie Hatcher and Timothy Jacobs have been denied bond for the third time, but their attorneys say they remain hopeful the two eventually will be released.

"This was a major victory," Horace Locklear, one of six defense attorneys, said Tuesday. "The judge left us a glimmer of hope where before we had none."

U.S. District Court Judge Terrence Boyle Tuesday agreed with federal Magistrate Wallace Dixon who denied bond for Hatcher and Jacobs twice because he believed they pose a threat if released.

But Boyle did not rule on defense attorneys' contentions that the two should be released on bond because they were not granted a detention hearing within five days after they were charged, as required by federal law. Boyle gave attorneys for both sides several days to prepare briefs on that point and said he would rule shortly after that.

"Stay cool and don't do nothing," Hatcher's mother, Thelma Clark, told her son after Boyle's ruling.

Hatcher and Jacobs, who describe themselves as members of the Tuscarora faction of the Lumbee tribe, were silent during the hearing. Minutes later, they were led in handcuffs out a side door of the federal courthouse, declining comment as they passed through a crowd of vocal supporters on their way to a sheriff deputy's patrol car.

"I was disappointed, but I'm hoping that we can correct this ruling as soon as possible," said Bob Warren, Jacobs' attorney.

"I find that ... clear and convincing evidence was before the magistrate, and that the defendants may present a danger and a risk of flight," Boyle told a courtroom packed with about 60 supporters of the two defendants. The supporters had driven about 3½ hours from Robeson County to Craven County to attend the hearing.

"On that basis, the court finds that the conditions of release would not be appropriate at this time," Boyle said.

"I'm disappointed. I thought he'd set a bond, maybe a high bond," Hatcher's mother said.

"I feel like I have a son to be proud of," she said, standing outside of the courthouse after the ruling, as two Indians wearing ceremonial headresses banged loudly on a drum.

"This took more than love on his part," Mrs. Clark said. "Do you know of anybody who would lay their life down for the love of other people?"

Hatcher and Jacobs, armed with sawed-off shotguns and a pistol, are charged with holding as many as 19 hostages in the office of the Robesonian newspaper in Lumberton on Feb. 1. They demanded investigations into what they said was racial discrimination in Robeson County and made allegations of corruption among county and state officials.

The two, both of Pembroke, were indicted about a week later on seven federal charges, including conspiracy to make and possess firearms, conspiracy to take hostages, hostage-taking and making a bomb threat. If convicted of all counts, they both could face life imprisonment and fines of up to $1.75 million.

Civil-rights attorney William Kunstler and Warren said their clients were disappointed, if not surprised, by the denial of bond.

"These men are resigned to the federal government not recognizing the rights of Indians," Warren said.

Court Dismisses Suit Filed By MIA Families

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A federal appeals court says a lawsuit seeking a ruling that American prisoners are still being held in Southeast Asia incorrectly seeks to use the courts to answer political questions.

In ordering the suit dismissed Tuesday, the 4th Circuit Court of Appeals said the plaintiffs were asking the court "to determine whether American service personnel remain in captivity in southeast Asia and to assess the adequacy of the executive's efforts to secure the release of any who do. Either course of action is fraught with peril for the judiciary."

To grant relief, the panel said, it would have to "intrude in the conduct of sensitive diplomatic negotiations." But the judiciary lacks the power to obtain information on the question and has neither the expertise to evaluate that information nor standards to guide its review, the panel said.

"Finally, as different courts address these issues, the judiciary may speak with multiple voices in an area where it is imperative that the nation speak as one," the panel said. "These difficulties lead us to conclude that this suit presents a nonjusticiable political question."

The suit was brought initially by a former Army prisoner of war in Vietnam and an active Army sergeant, both living in Fayetteville, N.C., who were later removed from the action. It was later joined by relatives of U.S. servicemen lost or missing in Southeast Asia.

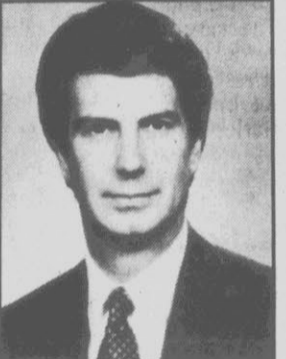

The suit sought a declaration that American prisoners of the Vietnam conflict were still held in captivity by the governments of Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia, and that such captives were under the protection of the U.S. Hostage Act.

The suit also sought an order to compel Reagan to comply with the Hostage Act, which requires the president to "use such means, not amounting to acts of war, as he may think necessary and proper" to obtain the release of Americans whose release is delayed or refused.

U.S. District Judge Terrence W. Boyle granted the order sought by the plaintiffs but denied the declaration.

N.C. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
RE-ELECT
WALTER B. JONES, JR.
Real Concern For Solid Representation
PAID FOR BY THE COMMITTEE TO ELECT WALTER B. JONES JR.

Court Upholds Separation Of Defendant, His Accuser

RALEIGH (AP) — The state appeals court has ruled that the rights of an accused child molester were not violated when he was barred from the courtroom while his 4-year-old victim testified in a pretrial hearing.

James William Jones, who was convicted of taking indecent liberties with his step-granddaughter, was not allowed to sit in the courtroom during a hearing to determine whether the victim was competent to testify.

The judge barred Jones after a psychologist testified the victim feared him so intensely that she could suffer emotional harm if forced to testify in his presence.

Jones was allowed to sit in the judge's chambers and watch the proceedings over closed-circuit television. Also, he and his lawyer were permitted to confer after the victim was questioned by prosecutors and before the defense attorney began cross-examination.

"We find the ... use of a closed-circuit television and ... providing defendant and his attorney adequate opportunity to communicate during the victim's testimony were sufficient to permit defendant to hear the evidence and to refute it," Judge Robert Orr wrote in Tuesday opinion.

The three-judge panel of the North Carolina Court of Appeals unanimously ruled that temporarily barring the defendant from the courtroom does not necessarily violate the U.S. Constitution's guarantee that the defendant may confront his accuser.

Nor does it run afoul of the North Carolina Constitution's requirement that the state's courts be open, the judges ruled.

The judge ruled that the victim was not competent to testify in the Alamance County case, but Jones was convicted on the strength of testimony by the child's parents and a social worker. He was sentenced to five years in prison.

In other cases, the court: — Upheld the 50-year sentences given Edward Earl Lloyd and Archie Gray May Jr., both of whom pleaded guilty to second-degree murder in Pitt County Dec. 15, 1986.

Court records said May killed Gray Lineberry, Lloyd's next-door neighbor, at Lloyd's urging. Both defendants had been drinking whiskey and smokin marijuana.

— Upheld the voluntary manslaughter conviction of Timothy Earl Sutton in Lenoir County. He was charged with a man in a scuffle at a Kinston nightclub March 11, 1987.

— Overturned the rape conviction of Charles Lee Scott, sentenced to 12 years in prison in Buncombe County. In a 2-1 ruling, the appeals court found there was insufficient evidence to sustain the verdict.

Scott was charged with raping a 16-year-old girl in the mobile home where she lived Sept. 18, 1986.

— Upheld the second-degree murder conviction of Carl Leonard Baker in Davidson County and his 15-year sentence. Baker was convicted of killing George Mayes after an argument Jan. 6, 1987.

IN THE STATE

Shipwreck Law

RALEIGH (AP) — A new law which is designed to protect historic shipwrecks could result in "a lot of pirating" by people who don't want to face a legal or bureaucratic battle to collect on their finds, a Beaufort attorney says.

Congress has approved legislation that would transfer jurisdiction for abandoned shipwrecks in coastal waters from federal to state officials. The legislation, which was approved by the U.S. Senate in December 1987, was passed by the U.S. House last week and now is awaiting the president's signature before taking effect.

The bill asserts federal title to shipwrecks within three miles of the coastline, but transfers the title to the states and directs the states to manage the wrecks in accordance with federal guidelines. Shipwrecks located in the ocean beyond the three-mile limit are not affected by the bill's provisions.

"They will basically pirate the wreck and destroy anything there, and it will never be known to the world," Stevenson Weeks, who represented a Carteret County treasure hunter in legal battles with the state, said Tuesday.

Child Dies

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A 3-year-old girl who was rescued Sunday night from a burning house has died from smoke inhalation, authorities said.

Firefighters found Mahogany McClean in a second-floor bedroom shortly after 10:05 p.m. She arrived at Baptist Hospital about 10:40 p.m., a spokesman for the hospital said Monday, and she was pronounced dead at 11 p.m.

The cause of the fire was still under investigation, said Deputy Chief F.E. Harless of the Winston-Salem Fire Department.

Harless estimated damage to the house at $45,000.

Pesticide Suit

HOPE MILLS, N.C. (AP) — Hope Mills has filed suit against a local pest control firm, charging the firm allowed pesticides to leak into the town's water supply.

The lawsuit charges that Kenneth Jordan, doing business as Economy Pest Control Co., allowed chlordane and heptachlor to get into the town's water.

The suit, filed in Cumberland County District Court, asks for $7,167 in damages, to pay the cost of flushing out and cleaning the water system and analyzing and testing the water.

Chief Of Staff

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — Brig. Gen. Walter B. Moore, 48, will become the XVIIIth Airborne Corps and Fort Bragg new chief of staff, replacing Brig. Gen. Daniel R. Schroeder, who will become commandant of the U.S. Army Engineer Center and School at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

Moore currently is commander of the 3rd Infantry Division, headquartered in Wurzburg, West Germany. Moore, however, is stationed in nearby Kitingen, West Germany. He is due to arrive at Fort Bragg in June, according to Fort Bragg officials.

Schroeder, 50, recently has been nominated for promotion to major general. As the current chief of staff, he is responsible for the coordination and supervision of both post and corps staff officers, said Lt. Col. Rick Kiernan, corps spokesman.

Weyerhaeuser

ATLANTIC BEACH, N.C. (AP) — Weyerhaeuser Co. has decided not to sell land to Atlantic Beach to be used as part of the town's sewage-disposal system.

The island town had proposed buying a 375-acre tree farm the paper company owns near Newport in Carteret County, and it had hoped to pipe treated wastewater 15 miles to the site and spray it on the land.

Some environmentalists have praised the plan, called land application, because it keeps treated wastewater out of coastal waters. Many coastal cities in North Carolina dump their treated water into rivers or streams, encouraging the growth of algae in the water and often damaging shellfish beds.

In turning down the town's request to buy Weyerhaeuser land, company spokesman Doug Hylton wrote in a letter to Atlantic Beach: "The company does not wish to willingly sell this portion of a much larger tract under the proposed conditions. The major concern is that the proposed use could negatively affect future values of the larger tract."

New Charges

LENOIR, N.C. (AP) — Four Lenoir men have been charged for the second time this year in the killing 20 years ago of Onley Nix of Granite Falls.

Last week, a Caldwell County Grand Jury handed down sealed first-degree murder indictments against Alton Jordan Jr., 41; Norman Baxter Banner, 39; James Leonard Sloan, 36; Anthony Bruce Ferguson, 38; and Jack Gene Colbert, 40.

Jordan, Banner, Sloan and Ferguson were arrested Monday. Colbert, formerly of Lenoir, is fighting extradition from New York.

At a bond hearing Tuesday in Lenoir, $40,000 bond was set for Jordan, Banner and Sloan. They are being held in the Caldwell County Jail.

Nix was last seen alive by his family June 30, 1968. Nix, who was 30 when he died, came home that Sunday afternoon from a Shuford Mills company softball game and told his wife and four children he was going to the store.

Authorities reopened the investigation of Nix's death last fall, reportedly because a witness to the killing had come forward.

Jordan, Banner, Sloan, Ferguson and Colbert were arrested on murder warrants Jan. 29. But prosecutors presented no evidence at their probable cause hearing Feb. 19 and all charges were dropped.

Thomasville Marine Missing In Gulf

THOMASVILLE, N.C. (AP) — An inner ear infection in 1981 almost kept Capt. Kenneth W. Hill out of the Marine Corps and a U.S. helicopter gunship lost during fighting with Iran in the Persian Gulf, his father says.

But Hill, 33, persisted, persuading recruiters to help him avoid an honorable discharge for medical reasons. The following year he was appointed to Marine officer's training school and realized his dream of being a pilot.

"He's just a good Marine," his father, Robert Hill, said Tuesday. "I know because he told me so. He was proud. He's over there because that's his job. He said they were well-manned, well-trained, and he was confident they could handle what they were doing."

Iran says it shot down the Marine Cobra attack gunship, part of a squadron from New River Air Station, flown by Hill and Capt. Stephen C. Leslie, 30, of New Bern during heavy fighting Monday.

But the Pentagon said Hill and Leslie had been sent out on a "standard patrol sweep" and that there was no evidence to suggest the gunship had ever come under fire.

Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci refused to speculate about the aircraft's fate, but the Pentagon did change the status of the helicopter's two crewmen to missing.

Leslie's younger sister, Kris Leslie, said the family received word around midnight Monday that her brother was listed as missing. She said the family had received no details since.

"We're very numb right now," Ms. Leslie said.

Leslie and his wife, Lisa, live in Jacksonville, where Leslie is stationed at New River Air Station. He has been in the Persian Gulf area since the end of January, Ms. Leslie said.

On Tuesday, Robert Hill and his wife, Mary, waited with family and friends for word of their son as U.S. Navy ships and planes continued to search for the helicopter over the central gulf.

They clung to hope.

"They said he was on the American side," Robert Hill said, recalling what the Pentagon had told him. "They said they don't think there's a possibility of the Iranians picking him up. They don't believe they were shot down. The water is warm and it's shallow — as compared to the ocean, I guess."

"I like to think that it being shallow is significant in that it's easier to find something. I think we had sort of given up. But this does give us a ray. We hope for the best. But there have been times when we go into depression."

Since Marine officials at New River telephoned the Hills about 9:30 p.m. Monday, the family hasn't slept.

"I laid down sometime last night," Robert Hill said, "but I've known every hour of the day. My wife never went to bed. I know she didn't sleep because I heard her in here wiping down the walls last night."

Robert Hill said the Marines sent a support group to his son's home in Jacksonville near Camp Lejeune to stay with his wife, Lora, and 4-year-old son, Andy.

In Thomasville, the family's television has remained tuned to a 24-hour news station. When a segment about the Persian Gulf clash came on, Hill stopped talking and moved to the other side of the dining room table to get a better view. He watched the broadcast in silence with everyone else in the room.

"I've never had any qualms with the (administration) policy," Robert Hill, an Air Force veteran who fought in Korea, said after watching the newscast. "It's hard for me to sit here and make those direct statements. I wish my son wasn't over there at all. I wish this wasn't going on, but that's like living in a bubble."

Kenneth Hill graduated from Thomasville High School in 1972, but spent the next nine years trying to earn a degree from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Robert Hill said.

He changed majors from music to anthropology. He even dropped out for a few years. Then as he was nearing completion of his degree in 1981, he began to think about going into the military.

"I don't know what caused him to look at the military," Robert Hill said. "But it seemed like it was no time before he was talking about the Marines."

Darrell Leonard, 30, a boyhood friend, said Hill was desperate to get the Marines to reconsider his inner ear problem and allow him to become a helicopter pilot.

"He was a fanatic when it came to flying," Leonard said. "We would talk for hours. He liked the idea of flying low and flying fast."

Wayward 727 Hits Helicopter At RDU

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A parked Boeing 727 jetliner rolled backward down a runway at the Raleigh-Durham Airport, and did about $1.5 million damage when it hit an AH-64 Apache helicopter belonging to the North Carolina Army National Guard.

RDU officials said the three-engine jetliner, owned by CF Air Freight, rolled because chocks had not been placed on its wheels. "It shows a lack of conscientiousness," said Airport Director John C. Brantley III. "It begs for greater attention."

A CF Air Freight official, who refused to identify himself, refused to comment on the matter.

The 727 was parked on an old military runway that gently slopes away from the airport complex. At the other end of the runway, the new National Guard helicopter facility is being built. Several Apaches, costing $7.2 million apiece, were parked nearby.

No one witnessed the accident, said Teresa A. Damiano, the Raleigh-Durham Airport public affairs manager. But sometime between 10 a.m. and 12:26 p.m. Sunday, the 727, which is 34 feet high and weighs 87,600 pounds empty, rolled backward for 302 feet before hitting the Apache in the tail assembly and knocking the helicopter about four feet, according to the RDU police report.

The plane had only minor damage to its right wing, Ms. Damiano said.

Guard officers said privately that the full extent of the damage to the helicopter wouldn't be known until it was disassembled, because the damaged tail section contains sensitive transmission equipment from the copter's two jet turbines.

BUS WRECKS—Rescue workers help a small girl who was injured when a chartered tour bus ran off I-77 near Rock Hill, S.C., Tuesday afternoon. More than 40 of the 48 adults and children on the bus required medical attention, and 11 remained hospitalized today. The bus was one of three carrying students from Greenwood, S.C., back home from a tour in Charlotte. (AP Laserphoto)

Charter Bus Carrying Students On Tour Overturms At Rock Hill

ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP) — Five people remained in a Charlotte, N.C., hospital and six others were in a Rock Hill hospital early today after a charter bus carrying 48 students and adults from a Greenwood elementary school crashed.

One of the students, a girl, was in critical condition with a head injury at Charlotte Memorial Hospital, said hospital spokeswoman Amy Farugia. Three other students were in good condition with cuts and bruises, and one adult was in serious condition with head injuries and a broken leg, she said.

The bus fishtailed and rolled over twice on Interstate 77 south of Rock Hill, authorities said. Most of the Pinecrest Elementary School students suffered head injuries, broken ribs or minor bruises.

The highway patrol has charged the driver, Howard D. Boles, 31, of Greenwood with driving too fast for conditions, said department spokesman Frank Braddock.

The bus is owned by Boles Bus Service of Greenwood, troopers said. Boles was cut on the head but was not hospitalized.

State Trooper Jerry Farrell said Boles was traveling 65 mph in a 65 mph zone on I-77 when the wreck happened. Farrell said Boles' "attention was distracted" when he reach-

A caravan of three buses — the school's entire fourth grade — was returning from Discovery Place in Charlotte to Greenwood. The students were among about 2,000 school children visiting Discovery Place, said Executive Director Freda Nicholson.

Carolyn Carpenter, a spokeswoman at Piedmont Medical Center in Rock Hill, said 40 people were taken to that hospital while three were taken directly to Charlotte Memorial. Two people were later transferred to the Charlotte hospital from Piedmont Medical Center, she said.

Four children were taken to Chester County Hospital when Piedmont Medical Center ran out of room, Ms. Carpenter said.

Six people were admitted to Piedmont for treatment of injuries, Ms. Carpenter said. Thirty-two people were treated for minor injuries and released, she said.

Of the six admitted, two required surgery, one for abdominal injuries and the other for lacerations, Ms. Carpenter said. The other four were in satisfactory condition.

The children sent to the Chester hospital suffered mostly cuts and bruises and were treated and released, said a hospital spokesman.

Jordan, Martin Trade Barbs Over Commerce Department

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan says the state Department of Commerce has become "bloated" and overly interested in promoting Republican Gov. Jim Martin, but Martin says the criticism is just campaign rhetoric.

The Department of Commerce, which former Gov. Jim Hunt designated as the state's chief economic development agency in 1977, was one of the most professional of its kind before Martin took office, Jordan said at a news conference Tuesday.

"In the three years since then, it has been politicized, polarized and demoralized," he said. "It has been badly managed. ... It has built unnecessary layers of bureaucratic fat around the secretary — political appointees who are interested only in what is politically expedient. The secretary's office is slow, bloated and too political."

"Morale in the department has been devastated. Turnover is high. Since 1985, the department has lost half of its industrial recruiters."

"They're not going to win unless they can find some way to tear me down, and so that's what they're doing," Martin said.

Earlier, Martin told a group of local economic development officials he would ask the General Assembly for $2.8 million this summer to expand the Commerce Department's economic growth programs, defying Jordan's plan to abolish the department if elected governor.

Jordan, meanwhile, provided more details of his blueprint for overhauling the state's economic development bureaucracy. Martin called the centerpiece, doing away with the Commerce Department, "absurd."

Martin, basking in the glow of what even Jordan acknowledges is a healthy economy, says things are going well and there is no need to change the state's development strategy.

Jordan says the current success story is a product of initiatives launched during former Gov. Jim Hunt's administration and will fade unless changes are made.

"It's just a lot of cliches," Commerce Secretary Claude Pope said of Jordan's statement. "I guess he doesn't know what's going on."

Jordan said his charges were based on things told him by economic development officials in local governments. He would not identify them.

John Crumpler, Jordan's campaign manager, said the criticisms had come from local officials and from people within the Commerce Department itself who feared losing their jobs if they spoke publicly.

"I think what he (Jordan) is telling you is he can't think of anything else to say so he throws out a general statement about it being politicized and demoralized," Martin said. "But there's no evidence of that."

Jordan said he would move all regulatory agencies under the Commerce Department to the Department of Administration and transfer the Commerce Department's economic development agencies to the new Economic Development Corp (EDC).

The Board of Economic Development would become the board of directors of the EDC and the governor would serve as chairman. Under the governor would be a president of the EDC, to whom division directors would report. "There will no longer be an unnecessary level of middle management," Jordan said.

Martin wisecracked that Jordan appeared to want to be commerce secretary.

The EDC would be given jurisdiction over all government programs dealing with economic development, as well as a new "21st Century Fund" to provide venture capital for new and expanding businesses and a new Finance Center to perform tax research, computations and comparisons.

Regional offices would be expanded and a modern reception center for business prospects would be opened in Raleigh. EDC staffers would be insulated from political pressures and would be paid enough to keep them from defecting to the private sector, Jordan said.

Martin and Pope said they had proposed many items in Jordan's plan, such as beefing up regional offices and grouping all economic development programs in state government under one agency.

In his speech to the North Carolina Industrial Developers Association, Martin asked for help in lobbying the Legislature for his Commerce Department budget increase — some of which lawmakers rejected in 1987.

He said he would request funding to expand the regional office network, do more business development advertising and help North Carolina businesses develop overseas markets — including opening trade offices in Hong Kong and Korea.

Frank Carter, an emergency medical technician with the Fort Mill rescue squad, took several victims to the Charlotte hospital.

"It looked just like (a) junkyard, it was just disintegrated," Carter said of the bus.

David Tipps, a construction worker from McAllister, Okla., was driving behind the bus on his way to Columbia when he saw the bus swerve off the road and flip over.

"There was nothing to make him crash. He just went over," Tipps said.

He said the first drivers on the scene felt helpless because of the magnitude of the accident.

"We just helped who we could," Tipps said. "We grabbed them and started pulling them out of the bus."

Southbound traffic on I-77 was backed up 2½ miles for an hour and 45 minutes.

"I don't remember anything like this in Rock Hill in the 10 years I've been here," said Piedmont Medical Center Dr. James Maynard, who rushed to the accident and helped stabilize a girl loaded onto a helicopter bound for Charlotte Memorial.

"The response was excellent. Half of these people out here are health care workers who are off work. You can't ask for anything more."

Indictments

BOLIVIA, N.C. (AP) — Thirty-five of the 48 people indicted on 270 counts of drug trafficking turned themselves in to the Brunswick County Sheriff's Department Tuesday.

Brunswick County Sheriff John Carr Davis said he expected all of the local suspects to turn themselves in at the county jail. Davis said law officers were arresting a dozen or so out-of-state indictees.

Only the people who could not make bail will have to stay in jail, Davis said, and he expected only a handful.

ABA Chief Expects Banking Changes

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Congress may allow banks to underwrite and sell securities, but it's less likely they'll be allowed to offer other services like insurance and real estate, the president-elect of the American Bankers Association says.

"We think the odds are 50-50 or even 60-40 that we'll get a decent bill out of Congress," Thomas Rideout, senior vice president of First Union National Bank, said Tuesday. "It appears in the next two or three weeks the (House) Banking Committee will come forward with a bill."

Last month, the Senate passed a bill on a 94-2 vote that would allow banks to create subsidiaries that will be able to underwrite municipal revenue bonds, mortgage-backed securities and commercial paper. After six months, they could sell mutual funds and corporate bonds.

Under the Senate version, the Senate and House would be required to vote by April 1, 1991, on whether banks could deal in stocks.

"We're enormously encouraged by the vote March 30 in the Senate," said Rideout. "It gives a lot of momentum to the process by sending a message to the House that their colleagues in the other chamber feel strongly about repealing the Glass-Steagall Act."

The 55-year-old law, which separates commercial banking from investment banking, was passed during the Great Depression.

While the bill passed easily in the Senate, passage in the House could be more difficult. The chairman of the House Banking Committee, Rep. Fernand St. Germain, D-R.I., has offered a more restrictive proposal with Rep. Chalmers Wylie, R-Ohio.

A version almost identical to the Senate bill is being supported by three North Carolina congressmen and a South Carolina congresswoman on the House banking panel.

They include Reps. Stephen Neal, D-N.C., of Winston-Salem; Alex McMillan, R-N.C., of Charlotte; David Price, D-N.C., of Chapel Hill; and Liz Patterson, D-S.C., of Spartanburg.

"They are all solidly in favor of broadening competition," said Rideout, who has said previously the securities industry has been monopolized by 10 New York firms who control 90 percent of the securities underwriting.

"What Glass-Steagall really has done is to allow a handful of big investment houses to build a virtual monopoly over most of the nation's securities trading and underwriting," he wrote in a recent column in the Winston-Salem Journal. "People who buy stocks and bonds, invest in mutual funds and so forth wind up paying too much for these services. The small investor has been lost in the shuffle."

Police Destroyed 2,410 Photos In Kennedy Death

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer
SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A scholar who pushed for release of the Robert Kennedy assassination files says the newly disclosed destruction of 2,410 evidence photographs is "deeply suspicious" and should be investigated.

Greg Stone, a University of Wisconsin political scientist who has devoted years to studying the assassination, said he was shocked that Tuesday's opening of the files also brought word of destroyed evidence.

"Far and away, the blinding central fact in this event is the unbelievable destruction of these photographs," said Stone. "That is an outrage and an insult to the American public. ... This performance (by the Los Angeles police) would be a disgrace in a routine auto accident."

"This is deeply suspicious," he added.

Stone's comments came after California Secretary of State March Fong Eu opened the long-secret files to the public and displayed significant items of evidence for reporters. She held aloft a boxed .22-caliber gun used by convicted assassin Sirhan Sirhan to kill the U.S. senator on June 5, 1968, after his victory in the California Democratic presidential primary.

Among the documents displayed was a certificate showing that 2,410 police photographs in the assassination case were burned on Aug. 21, 1968.

The state's chief archivist, John Burns, who cataloged the massive file for release, speculated that the destroyed photos could have been duplicates, but said the files contain no such statement.

Less surprising, said Stone, was confirmation that police also destroyed door jams and ceiling tiles from the kitchen of the Los Angeles Ambassador Hotel where Kennedy was gunned down. Stone and other experts maintain those items might have shed light on how many bullets were fired and on a theory there was a second gunman.

"The Los Angeles Police Commission should investigate this," he said, referring to a civilian oversight board appointed by the mayor.

"Mayor (Tom) Bradley should demand it."

Asked why he thought the material was destroyed, Stone said, "The most charitable interpretation is total ineptitude. ... But you can't rule out suspicious and sinister possibilities."

Stone once worked for Rep. Allard Lowenstein, D-N.Y., who raised questions about the case before he, too, was slain by a gunman in 1980.

William Booth, a Los Angeles Police Department spokesman, said he didn't know why the photographs and other materials were destroyed.

"It was 20 years ago and I certainly don't have any independent recollection," Booth said. "I don't know whether what was done here is routine or not because I don't know what was done here."

Sirhan, a Jordanian immigrant who scribbled in his diary, "RFK must die," is serving a life term at Soledad prison. Sirhan says he was the lone assassin but can't remember shooting Kennedy. He blames his amnesia on alcohol.

The material released on microfilm Tuesday details interviews with 4,000 witnesses, including dozens of eyewitnesses, and comprises 50,000 pages.

Eu also released a police composite videotape of the assassination scene. Kennedy is seen entering the kitchen surrounded by a large crowd. Screams are heard. The badly jostled camera then shows Kennedy lying in a pool of blood while other victims stagger about dazed and witnesses are seen weeping.

The assassination occurred before presidential candidates were provided with Secret Service protection.

Also released was a tape of police calls on the night of the assassination, showing there was a delay in sending police cars and an ambulance to the scene because the officer on duty didn't grasp the importance of what had happened.

One doctor who attended Kennedy in the kitchen complained about Kennedy being taken to Good Samaritan Hospital, a central receiving hospital, rather than a private facility with specialists in brain injuries. But another doctor said it was wise to choose Good Samaritan.

Three More Of Meese's Top Deputies Resigning

WASHINGTON (AP) — More Justice Department deputies are leaving their posts in an exodus sparked by Attorney General Edwin Meese's legal problems, virtually emptying the department's No. 2 office.

The resignations and transfers make it increasingly difficult for Meese to recover from the protest resignations of Deputy Attorney General Arnold Burns and criminal division chief William Weld, who began the wave of departures.

The three top aides to Burns are quitting the government or transferring to new jobs. Department sources said Tuesday that all three rejected overtures by Meese aides to remain at the Justice Department after Burns and Weld abruptly quit March 29.

Meanwhile, the question of Burns' successor is still unresolved, with Meese saying he expects to hear shortly from St. Louis attorney John Shepherd on whether the former American Bar Association president will withdraw from consideration.

However, Shepherd has already told Meese aides to find someone else for the job, according to department sources who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Shepherd, 62, had told Meese last Friday that he was giving serious consideration to pulling out because of stress on his family stemming from his selection.

A former bookkeeper from Shepherd's law firm testified shortly before Meese recommended him for the post that she had an affair with Shepherd. The bookkeeper, who was convicted of embezzlement, claimed Shepherd had told her to write checks to herself. Shepherd denied that he had an affair with her or that he had authorized her to write checks.

The Washington Post reported today that Shepherd was recommended for a Justice Department position in late 1984 or early 1985 by E. Robert Wallach, a longtime Meese associate now under indictment in connection with the Wedtech scandal in New York. The Post, quoting Justice Department sources, said Shepherd's ties to Wallach came up in the FBI's background checks of Shepherd and "caused some concern."

The latest departures from Burns' office will virtually empty the No. 2 office in the Justice Department of top aides.

It is customary for the deputy attorney general to pick his own assistants. But the sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Meese's staff tried to keep top deputies' posts filled following the resignations of Burns and Weld.

Iacocca Got $18 Million

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (AP) — Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca earned nearly $18 million last year, part of $85.2 million in compensation given to executives of the No. 3 automaker, the company reported.

The figures, released when Chrysler Corp. mailed its proxy statement to shareholders Tuesday, brought an angry response from the United Auto Workers, which opened national contract talks with Chrysler on Monday.

UAW Vice President Marc Stepp, the union's chief negotiator with Chrysler, called the payments "an incredible rip-off."

The company proxy showed that Iacocca topped auto company executives in earnings for the second straight year. His $17.9 million in compensation included nearly $13.5 million earned by exercising stock options granted earlier in the decade, when Chrysler's stock was worth a fraction of its present value.

He also received $765,890 in salary, $725,000 in cash bonuses, $249,000 in stock bonuses and a stock grant worth nearly $2.7 million when it was issued Dec. 8 as part of a payoff for remaining with the company.

In 1986, Iacocca earned $20.6 million, including $9.3 million on exercised stock options, making him the year's top-earning U.S. executive. It was not yet known where he will rank among all U.S. executives for 1987.

The auto industry's No. 2 earner for 1987 was Ford Motor Co. Vice Chairman Harold Poling, who received nearly $11 million in salary, bonuses and stock options exercised.

Jackson Turns His Hopes To Pennsylvania Primary

By DAVID MORRIS
Associated Press Writer
HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Democratic presidential contender Michael Dukakis, fresh from a solid win in New York's big primary, was looking to consolidate his strength with a repeat performance here next week. But rival Jesse Jackson warned not to count him out.

A prize of 178 delegates, the fourth-largest of any state race, is at stake in next Tuesday's primary here.

"Tomorrow, we take our message ... to Pennsylvania and Ohio and Indiana," Dukakis said in a victory speech in New York. "And after that, we will take our message — the Democratic message — to every part of the country."

The Jackson camp offered congratulations, but said the New York primary didn't settle things.

"We continue to win. We have won," Jackson told supporters in New York. "Our campaign continues to grow."

"We think we're still in this race," said Jackson's campaign manager, Gerald Austin. Jackson was heading to Pennsylvania tonight.

Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr., who finished a distant third in New York, was considering abandoning his presidential bid.

On the Republican side, Vice President George Bush, who is virtually assured his party's nomination, campaigned Tuesday in the state.

A poll in today's editions of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette and Philadelphia Daily News indicated Dukakis led Jesse Jackson among likely Democratic voters primary by a 59-20 margin. The poll of 647 likely Democratic voters, conducted Tuesday through Sunday, had a margin of error of plus or minus five percentage points.

"The most likely scenario is that Dukakis uses Pennsylvania to solidify his front-runnership, his hold on the nomination," said Lt. Gov. Mark Singel, a Democrat who is neutral in the race.

Jackson supporters complained that Pennsylvania's delegate-selection system stacks the cards against their candidate. The state's popular vote is merely a beauty contest and the real winner in the primary must succeed in elections in the state's 23 congressional districts.

"We could win the state and lose 80 percent of the delegates," said Steve Cobble, Jackson's delegate coordinator, calling the process "one of the last vestiges of Republican-type politics in the Democratic Party."

"It ought to be done away with," Cobble said.

Jackson's strength is largely in three of the 23 districts, in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, where most of the state's blacks live. Blacks make up about 11 percent of state's voting-age population.

AND THE WINNER IS — Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis and wife Kitty wave to the crowd Tuesday night as they celebrate his victory in the New York Democratic presidential primary. The Rev. Jesse Jackson finished with a strong second place while Tennessee Sen. Al Gore was a distant third. (AP Laserphoto)

Advisers Tell Gore: 'Gracefully Get Out'

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Albert Gore Jr. was reassessing his presidential campaign today after a weak third-place showing in the watershed New York Democratic primary. The word from back home was that he should "gracefully get out."

Gore, without a win to his name since Super Tuesday six weeks ago, scheduled an announcement for Thursday in Washington.

He told supporters in New York that he would be consulting with advisers over the next few days ... and we're going to decide among ourselves how best we can carry on the cause that we have been advancing."

Campaign manager Fred Martin said Gore had not decided whether to drop out.

As the New York votes were tallied and the scope of Gore's loss became clear, he congratulated Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, calling it "somebody else's super Tuesday."

"I want to congratulate Mike Dukakis for a really impressive victory. New York is a real marathon and he beat us by a mile," he said.

Gore talked about the prospects of Democrats in the fall, rather than his own uncertain future.

"I believe that together we are going to teach the Republicans a lesson they won't soon forget in November," the Tennessee senator told supporters gathered at a mid-town hotel.

Meanwhile, Tennessee Gov. Ned McWherter, a key Gore adviser, said the senator was considering quitting the race.

"I told him he should gracefully get out and let this one conclude," McWherter said from Nashville, Tenn. He said Gore had called him from New York while awaiting primary results.

"The options are to continue campaigning and affect the dialogue with the party, to suspend the candidacy but remain a candidate or to withdraw," Martin said.

Gore congratulated the second-place finisher in New York, Jesse Jackson, praising his "tremendous showing."

Early today, Gore paid a "courtesy call" on Jackson to tell him of his plans for the next several days, said Gerald Austin, Jackson's national campaign manager.

Gore said his wife, Tipper, had gone on to Texas for a fund-raiser set for tonight "because we need the money." Gore said he planned to meet her there.

Gore's campaign is reported to be $1.6 million in debt, and he had needed to win 20 percent of the vote in New York to be eligible for federal matching funds.

Martin discounted reports Tuesday that Gore had begun recalling campaign workers from Pennsylvania, the next primary state. He blamed Gore's poor showing in New York on lack of money and name recognition and the perception by some that it was a two-person race.

Gore, at 40 the youngest candidate, joined the race June 29 at the urging of a group of wealthy Democrats convinced that only a Southerner could win in 1988.

He made some early forays into Iowa, but when the waters proved chilly, he declared Iowans had too much influence on the process and said he would risk skipping the crucial caucus state.

Jackson Overcomes Attacks By Koch

NEW YORK (AP) — At times, it almost seemed that New York's Democratic presidential primary had been reduced to a race between two men: Jesse Jackson and Mayor Edward I. Koch.

If so, Koch was clearly the loser.

"Mayor Koch made hysteria," said Jackson, after a strong second-place showing Tuesday night. "I made history."

Although Jackson lost the statewide race to Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis he won narrowly in New York City despite bitter attacks by Koch against Jackson. And the man the mayor endorsed, Sen. Al Gore Jr., fared miserably.

Koch, a man hardly given to humility, conceded Tuesday night that his attacks on Jackson were apparently a mistake, given Gore's defeat.

"I did my best and I failed, but the world ain't over," he said.

The world isn't over, but it may become a more difficult place for Koch, who reiterated his intention to run for re-election next year. Exit polls indicated that his hardball tactics may cost him in 1989.

Fifty-six percent of the voters surveyed in a CBS-New York Times exit poll said they disagreed with Koch's criticism of Jackson. And six of 10 voters polled by NBC said they don't want Koch to run for re-election.

The negative poll results also could have come from such factors as a corruption scandal that has hung over Koch's third term and racial tensions in the city.

"Ed Koch was certainly not a winner in this and he looks like a big loser," said Doug Muzzio, an ABC pollster.

Koch not only endorsed Gore, he campaigned alongside the senator from Tennessee tirelessly. And it was Koch who captured headlines with his strident attacks on Jackson.

But Gore captured only 10 percent of the popular vote statewide and nine percent in the city.

Koch criticized Jackson's positions on Israel, saying Jews would "have to be crazy" to vote for him. The mayor then called Jackson arrogant for failing to march in a Salute to Israel parade. The day of the parade, he said Jackson "can't stand stress, and then he lies under stress."

Jackson refused to comment on the attacks except to note New York's touchy state of race relations and compare Koch's comments to yelling fire in a crowded theater.

Asked Tuesday night whether he would make the same remarks if he could turn back the clock, Koch replied, "Obviously, I would not make them the way I did because, apparently, they were not helpful to Al Gore."

Later, appearing on ABC-TV's "Nightline," he added: "Apparently the word 'crazy' is not acceptable and I promise never to use it again."

Although Gore thanked Koch for his help, he also seemed to distance himself from the mayor's tactics. After congratulating Jackson for his showing, Gore said, "I didn't want to stop Jesse Jackson. I just wanted to start Al Gore."

clear, he congratulated Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, calling it "somebody else's super Tuesday."

Pear-Shaped Stone Brings $9 Million

NEW YORK (AP) — It took all of two minutes to complete the $9.13 million sale of the largest diamond ever to go on the block, setting a world record for any gem sold at auction.

The anonymous buyer bid by telephone Tuesday night for the 85.91-carat, pear-shaped diamond, described as a "drop of frozen light."

"It represents the very essence of this planet in its simplest and purest form," said Neil Letson, gemologist and jewelry historian.

The sale of the diamond was part of an overall jewelry auction that included gems belonging to the late Clare Boothe Luce. The auction brought a total of $36 million, setting another record: for a jewelry sale in the United States.

"The sale was a great success," said John D. Block, director of Sotheby's jewelry division.

The nameless diamond — whose owner was not identified — has been graded D color, the highest possible rating, meaning it is perfectly cut and flawless.

Bidding opened at $6 million. Someone in the room bid $7 million, then bids increased in increments of $100,000, according to Diana Levitt, director of corporate affairs for Sotheby's.

The gem sold for $8.3 million, plus a 10 percent commission.

The sale exceeded the 1980 record at a Sotheby's auction in Geneva where $6.6 million was bid for a pair of ear pendants with four pear-shaped diamonds totaling 131.86 carats.

Letson placed the diamond historically at slightly below the Cullinan III, now in the British Crown Jewels collection, and slightly above the Spoonmaker Diamond, now in Istanbul's Topkapi Museum.

Also on the block Tuesday night were jewels and other possessions of Mrs. Luce, the former congresswoman and ambassador to Italy.

Tornado Damage Set In Millions

By ED BIRK

Associated Press Writer

MADISON, Fla. (AP) — Residents began rebuilding their lives and town today after Florida's worst tornado in two decades killed four people and left millions of dollars in damage. A college was ruined but its 2,000 students were spared.

"Thankfully, it happened when it did and not four or five hours later because the death toll would probably have been in the hundreds," said William H. McCoy, president of North Florida Community College.

The tornado struck at 4:30 a.m. Tuesday, tossing families out of bed while windows exploded and their homes collapsed on them. It left 18 people injured and a 12-mile-long, half-mile-wide path of destruction in which 17 homes were destroyed, authorities said.

Gov. Bob Martinez, after assessing the damage in a helicopter, declared a state of emergency, paving the way for state agencies to assist Madison County in cleanup efforts.

"I haven't seen one of these since one came through my hometown (Tampa) back in 1966 or 1967," the governor said. The tornado was Florida's worst since one crossed the state from Clearwater to Cape Kennedy in 1966, killing 11 and injuring 400 people.

Gordon Guthrie, director of the state's Division of Emergency Management, said his agency would complete a detailed damage assessment today, possibly leading to federal aid.

The tornado was one of four that struck Florida in stormy weather Tuesday, destroying several homes elsewhere and heavily damaging others. Twisters also struck Colorado, North Carolina and California, although no major damage was reported.

In Madison, only rubble was left in some neighborhoods and the mobile home of two of those killed vanished from its lot, leaving only foundation blocks, authorities said.

"I woke up with a roaring sound and as soon as I woke up, the windows blew out on both sides of my bed, and the roof came down on top of me," said Mitchell May, who was pinned in the debris for three hours.

Twelve of the junior college's 14 major buildings were heavily damaged and at least three were destroyed, said McCoy, who estimated damage to the campus at between $20 million and $25 million.

Among the buildings destroyed was a new regional library, which had not yet opened, that was to serve the college and county public schools, and the campus chapel and a fine arts building.

State Insurance Commissioner Bill Gunter, who toured the area, said the campus buildings would be covered by a state insurance pool as well as with federal funds.

The four county residents killed included Lavelle and Robert McCullough, both in their 60s, whose bodies were found 100 yards from their vanished mobile home several miles northeast of town. McCullough was scheduled to retire next January from his maintenance job at the college.

"I think people of course are sad about the destruction of buildings. They are sadder about the death of Bob McCullough, a very valuable employee," McCoy said. He hoped classes would resume Monday.

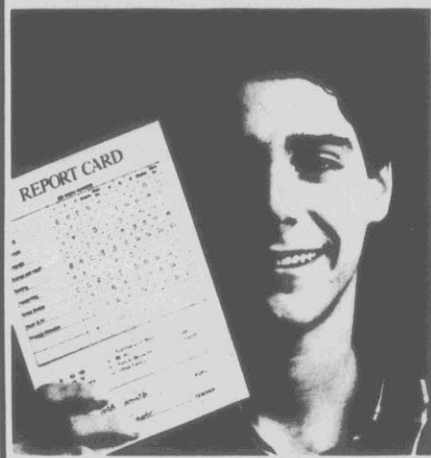

Also killed were Walter Oliver Jr., 39, and Dearniste Pinesett, 41, said sheriff's spokesman Juan Botino.

Eighteen people were injured and two of the more seriously hurt were flown 50 miles to Tallahassee, said Jeannie Baker, administrator of Madison County Memorial Hospital. Only two remained in the hospital and were in good condition, she said.

At Tallahassee Memorial Regional Medical Center, Brad Williams, 14, was in serious condition after surgery for a punctured kidney and Mary Kay Smith was in fair condition with a chest injury, said hospital spokesman Ron Brafford.

The Red Cross surveyed residential damage and found 30 homes damaged and 17 destroyed, said Chris Floyd, damage assessment coordinator.

Helms' Effort To Outlaw Dial-A-Porn Facing Test

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sweeping education bill expanding services to the nation's students was headed for certain Senate approval, but a section outlawing pornographic telephone messages seemed sure to wind up in court.

The House passed the multibillion-dollar education measure on a 397-1 vote Tuesday, but only after a series of complicated maneuvers to attach a total ban on dial-a-porn phone services. Rep. Philip Crane, R-Ill., was the lone member voting no.

"No court has ever upheld a complete ban on non-obscene, so-called 'indecent' speech," said Barry Lynn, legislative counsel to the American Civil Liberties Union. He said the ban, born of concern for children, intrudes on the privacy and free-speech rights of American adults.

The Hawkins-Stafford School Improvement Act authorizes up to $8.3 billion in spending next year on elementary and secondary school programs, with more than half the money going to disadvantaged children at risk of failing.

It contains new programs to prevent dropouts and help high school students with weak skills, and greatly expands drug abuse education and magnet schools. New money also was earmarked for math, science and foreign-language programs.

"This is one of the most important bills that we will ever pass, one that we want to pass if we want to be competitive," said Rep. William Goodling, R-Pa., a former school superintendent.

The bill, a compromise between the versions passed by the House and Senate, was named for Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee, and retiring Sen. Robert Stafford, R-Vt., former chairman of the Senate education subcommittee.

Passed with only one dissenting vote in each chamber, the bill would have glided through House-Senate negotiations and through the House except for the telephone pornography ban grafted onto the Senate measure by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

Negotiators had agreed on a compromise under which telephone customers in most of the country would not have access to the lewd messages unless an adult called the phone company to request a hook-up. The compromise ultimately was killed and the Helms ban restored.

The largest single program in the school improvement act is Chapter 1, which pays for tutoring and other services to disadvantaged children at risk of academic failure. School districts could receive basic grants totaling up to $4.7 billion in fiscal year 1989, a $400 million increase over current spending.

Fiscal 1989 initiatives in the bill include $50 million for "Even Start," to jointly educate poor preschool children and their illiterate parents; $50 million for dropout prevention demonstration projects; and $200 million to improve basic skills of high school students.

"In my estimation, Sen. Harold Hardison is more than qualified to occupy this office, and I am sure, after considering all aspects, you will come to the same conclusion.

"Just as I am going to do, if you will use your influence in his behalf until May 3, you will be doing the citizens of North Carolina a great favor," Jones' letter concluded.

Concerning Job Performance

Managers Want Feedback

By MITCH WEISS
Associated Press Writer
TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Pity the poor executive. After clawing his or her way to the top of the corporate ladder, the average high-ranking executive may get a six-figure salary and a key to the executive washroom. With power in hand, some executives, especially in the era of bottom-line managers, hire and fire at will in an attempt to increase profit margins. And when profits fall and directors decide a change is needed at the top, the executive is usually given a golden parachute to help ease his fall. While being a high-level executive has its rewards, it is also frustrating, nerve-wracking, and filled with high hopes and little feedback, according to a study by two professors at the University of Toledo and Pennsylvania State University. Clinton Longenecker, UT's assistant professor of management, said executives want to be told how they are doing on the job and given formal performance evaluations. Longenecker and Dennis Gioia, associate professor of organization study at Penn State, interviewed 60 upper-level executives for the study, which was published recently in

"Sloan Management Review." Longenecker said executives who were interviewed complained that job reviews are rare and that managers want to know how well they are doing, despite the risk of criticism. "Every executive in this study said that he or she wanted periodic, thorough and formal feedback on performance," Longenecker said. "They wanted ways to improve their own performance and their department's performance and wanted to talk about long-term, big-picture issues." "Despite their willingness to hear both compliments and complaints from the boss, all agreed that the higher one rose in the organization, the more superficial and infrequent were the performance appraisals," he said. He said one manager told him that a lot of people at the top don't think they have the responsibility to provide direction and supervision once people are past a certain level in the organization. "You just let people go until they screw up and then you get out the big stick or the ax, depending on how big the screwup, and you get them back on track rather violently," one manager in the study said.

The annual review that is mandatory in most corporations for salary increases is usually done in such a rushed and informal way that it is generally useless to the one being reviewed, Longenecker said. "Many executives felt their bosses were uncomfortable giving the review and wanted to get it over as fast as possible without creating any conflict or confrontation," he said. The prospect of being formally reviewed makes even high-powered executives nervous, he said. But the level of anxiety is tied to a number of factors, including the amount of trust between two executives, how clearly defined were the subordinate manager's job responsibilities, and how much specific feedback he or she received on a continuing basis. Still, a cursory appraisal is better than none, Longenecker said. Negative feelings, anxiety and frustration are common symptoms when no one's talking, he said. "Executives need appraisals," he said. "They want it, they need it and the organization benefits if they get it. The stickier question is not whether to do executive appraisals but how to do them more effectively." The researchers suggest that corporations conduct appraisals regularly, at least once a year, and be supportive and as forthright, honest and specific as possible. The appraisal should be formal and provide structured information about the job performance. Longenecker said the review should avoid ambiguous and nebulous language and state exactly how the person is doing and what will improve his or her performance.

Wedding Vows Said In Ceremony Friday

Bridesmaids included Glenda Daniels of Hudson's Crossroads, and Sabrina Little of Simpson, godchild of the bride. Jimmy Joyner of Farmville was best man. The bridesmaids wore beige tea-length dresses and carried arrangements of lavender carnations. A reception was held in the fellowship hall. Hostesses were Brenda G. Hawkins of Simpson and Mrs. Waverly Daniels of Greenville. Guests were received by Yvonne Moye of Simpson. Music was provided by Gregory Simpkins of Farmville and Danny Dupree of Greenville. A miscellaneous shower was given for the bride prior to the wedding. The bride is a graduate of G.R. Whitfield High School in Grimesland and the bridegroom is a graduate of H.B. Suggs High School of Farmville and the University of Maryland. Both are employed by Burroughs Wellcome. After a trip to the coast the couple will live in Farmville.

Summer Pullover Is Favorite

Pat's Pointers
Pat Trexler

Everyone's favorite year-round yarn — cool, breathable, 100 percent cotton — is used to knit a short-sleeved pullover with a buttoned placket at the front neckline. The Granite Rib stitch used on the body of the sweater creates a textured look for this handsome sweater, giving a raised rib effect without the snug fit of standard ribbing. Worked to a stitch gauge of 4 1/2 stitches to the inch on the medium-weight yarn, this is a delightfully easy-to-make top that's so enjoyable to knit you'll want to make one in every color.

Easy-to-follow directions are given for small, medium and large sizes with finished bust measurements of 35, 39 and 42 inches respectively.

To obtain directions for making the Cool and Easy Pullover, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-041788 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. K-041788 by sending a check or money order for $22.95 for small and medium, or $25.95 for large to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, instructions and cotton yarn in your choice of jade, dusty rose or off-white.

Dear Readers: The Granite Rib pattern stitch used for today's featured sweater creates a lovely texture. To make a sample swatch, select a soft yarn and needles large enough to give a relaxed look to the knit fabric. I suggest a size 7 needle with sports-weight yarn or size 9 with worsted-weight yarn.

Cast on 28 stitches. As an edging, work 4 rows garter stitch or a standard knit 1, purl 1 ribbing. Then work in Granite Rib as follows: Row 1 (right side): Knit 1, (knit 1, purl 1, knit 1, yarnover, knit 2 together through the back loop of both stitches, yarnover, knit 2 together through the back loops). Repeat the steps between parentheses twice more. On the remaining 4 stitches, knit 1, purl 1, knit 1, knit 2.

Row 2 (wrong side): Knit 1, (knit 1, purl 1, knit 1, yarnover, purl 2 together, yarnover, purl 2 together). Repeat the steps between parentheses twice more. On the remaining 4 stitches, knit 1, purl 1, knit 1, knit 2.

Repeat these two rows for pattern. About 4 inches of the pattern stitch should be enough to give you an idea of the effect, and most knitters will find that after working a few rows, they will be able to see what comes next without having to refer constantly to the written directions.

To work a yarnover before a stitch to be knitted, simply bring the yarn forward and knit (or knit 2 together) with the yarn in this position. To work one before purl stitches, bring the yarn forward, take it over the top of the needle and bring it back to the front. In either case this lays a strand of yarn over the needle that is treated as a stitch on the next row.

Dear Pat: I was happy to find the enclosed pattern stitch in your column, but I think there is something wrong. I'm not adding any stitches while I am purling 2 together in every pattern repeat, so the piece is getting smaller and smaller. I'd like to make a scarf with it, but cannot work it. — Julia P., Johnstown, Pa.

Dear Julia: Fortunately, you enclosed the clipping from my column so I could see that there was no typographical error in the pattern stitch. Evidently you are misunderstanding or overlooking the instructions to make a yarnover after each purl-2-together decrease. The yarnover automatically adds a stitch to make up for the one decreased.

This pattern is a perennial favorite. It has a stitch multiple of 4 plus 2 — meaning that you cast on any number of stitches evenly divisible by 4 and then add 2 more.

For every row, work as follows: Step 1: Knit the first 2 stitches. Step 2: Purl 1, purl 2 together, yarnover, knit 1. Repeat Step 2 over and over to the end of the row. Continue repeating this single row for the desired length of the scarf. Finish it off with fringe if you wish.

Farm Bureau Day Observance Held

National Farm Bureau Day was observed by the Pitt County Farm Bureau Women's Committee last week. Janice Bliss of Raleigh was guest speaker.

Ms. Bliss is director of special programs, N.C. Farm Bureau Federation. "Farm Bureau women's committees are not auxiliary groups, but a very active part of the total Farm Bureau services. Approximately 1/4 of the delegates adopting Farm Bureau policies for 1988 were women. Three of the county presidents who provide day-to-day leadership to county Farm Bureaus are women. Many serve on county boards of directors and three are on the NCFB Board of Directors," she said.

"Other key programs insure that the non-farming public clearly realizes that we enjoy an endless variety of quality foods at cheap prices only because of the skill of the American farmer. Farm Bureau women are an integral factor, too, in the success of Ag in the Class," said Ms. Bliss.

make a difference for agriculture," she said.

Alma Worthington recognized special guests including Ruth Cherry, a former chairman of the state women's committee, and Margaret Quincy, both of Edgecombe County, Annie Holder and Irma Adams.

Helen Wooten, chairman of the Pitt County women's committee, gave the welcome. Entertainment was provided by Cindy Moye, soloist.

Mrs. Worthington said a course on self-protection was planned. Sgt. Rhonda Gurley, associated with the East Carolina University crime prevention, will conduct the course.

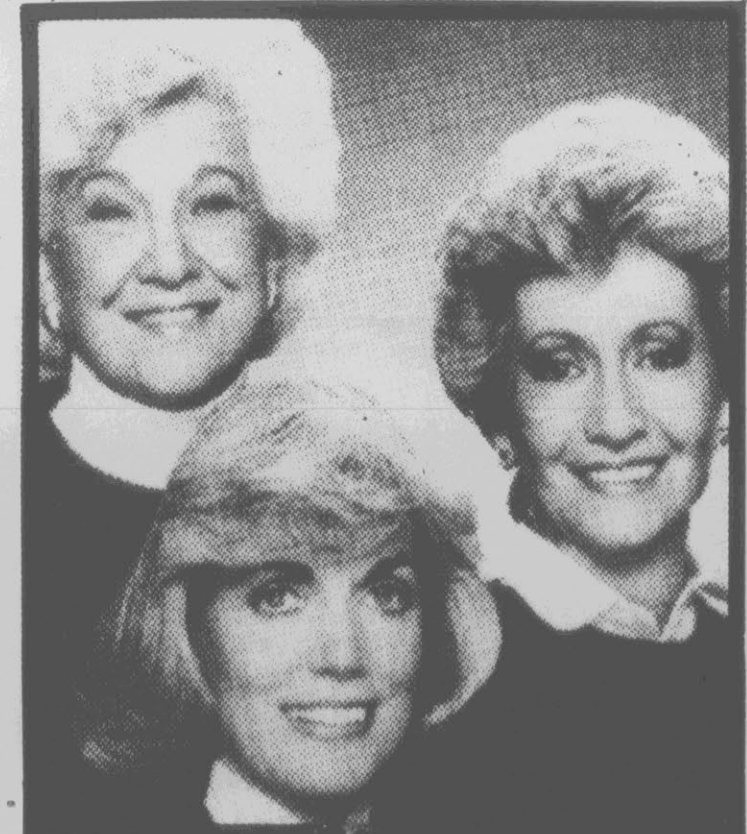

Mrs. Wooten has been reelected women's chairman and will be assisted by Rebecca Davenport, co-chairperson.

The next meeting will be held April 26 starting at 7:30 p.m.

The women's committee is planning a May reception in five schools throughout the county who participate in Ag in the Classroom and a tour for teachers will be held in June to promote the program. The women are also making articles for the state scholarship auction planned for November.

"Agriculture has been confronted with exceptional challenges over the past few years. Those challenges have served to spotlight the determination of Farm Bureau women to

Drugs Require Informed Use, Proper Care

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: Yesterday I published a letter from a reader who requested a rerun of information about the interaction of certain foods with prescription drugs. She was wisely concerned that she might be "eating some foods that would be harmful to her medication."

Today I will deal with what you should tell your physician before he or she prescribes any medication:

1. If you have ever had any allergic reactions or side effects to certain drugs in the past.
2. If you are taking any medication on a regular basis, such as contraceptives or insulin, or if you use a non-prescription drug on a regular basis.
3. If you are being treated for a different condition by another doctor.
4. If you are pregnant, or a heavy smoker, or a heavy drinker.
5. If you are on a special diet or are taking vitamins and mineral supplements.

Some tips to help you use prescription drugs safely and effectively:

1. If a drug is not doing what it is supposed to do for you, check with your physician. You may need a different dosage or a different drug.
2. If you have an unexpected symptom - rash, nausea, dizziness, headache - report it to your physician immediately.
3. Don't stop taking your medicine just because you're feeling better. You may prevent the drug from doing its work completely.
4. Check drug labels for specific instructions or warnings such as, "Do not take on an empty stomach" or, "Do not take with milk."
5. Check the label, or ask your pharmacist, for storing instructions. Some drugs should be refrigerated; others must be protected from light.
6. Always keep medicines out of the reach of children.
7. Never let another person use your medicine, and never take medicine prescribed for anyone else.

(This includes birth control pills.)

8. Never take medicine at night without turning on the light.

9. Do not transfer medication from the original container to another. The original container is designed to protect the drug. Also the instructions for taking the medication are on the original container.

Readers, for further information about prescription drugs, send for the free booklet published by the Food and Drug Administration in cooperation with the National Council on Patient Information and Education. To obtain this booklet, write to: RX Drugs, Consumer Information Center, Department DA, Pueblo, Colo. 81009. No stamped, self-addressed envelope is necessary, but please allow 30 days for delivery. When this hits print, the center will be deluged.

CONFIDENTIAL TO MY READERS: I saw this wonderful quote framed and hanging in my dentist's office: "You don't have to floss all your teeth - only those you want to keep." (L. Andary, D.D.S., Roseville, Mich.)

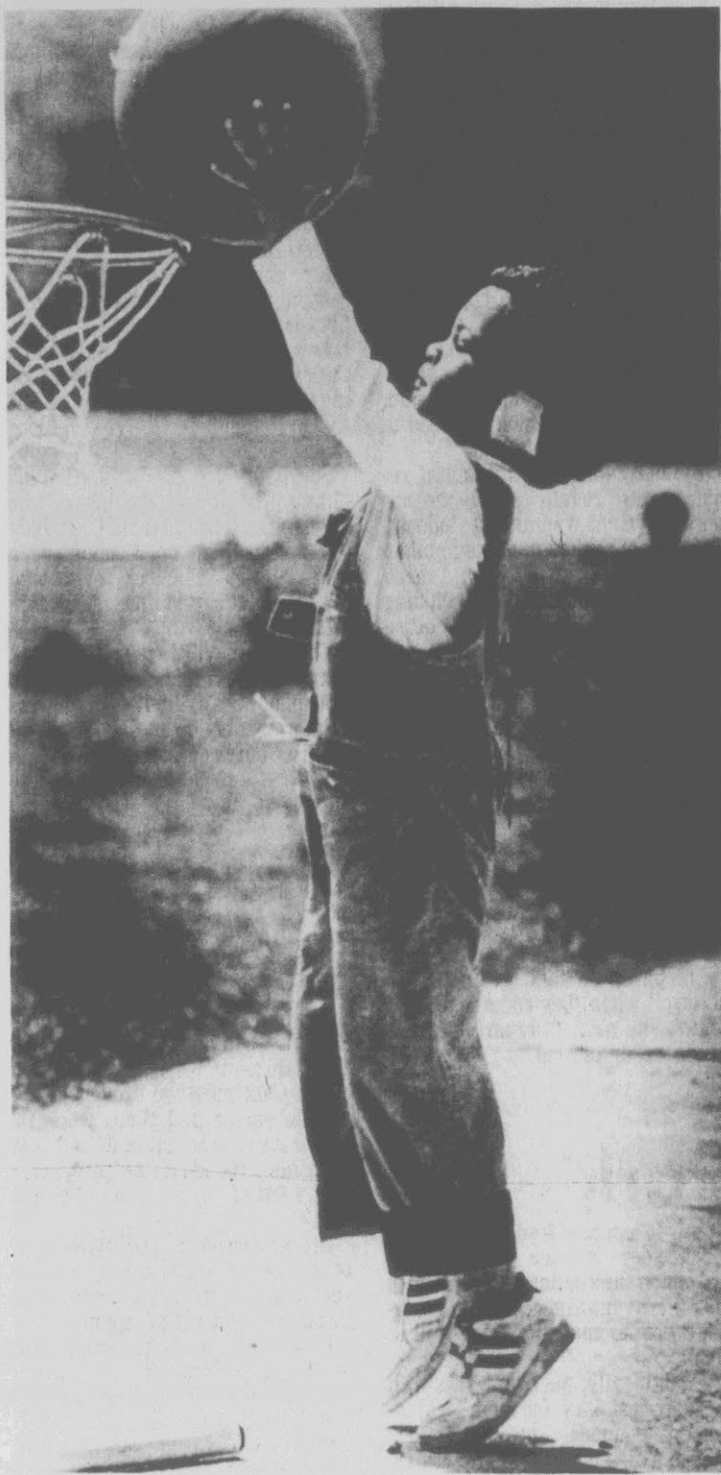

DEAR ABBY: The results of your recently published fidelity survey have left many of us with the proverbial egg on our face. However, your response from "Unfulfilled Wife," who reported liaisons with a real estate agent, an accountant, a jeweler, a commercial airline pilot, a construction worker and a magazine editor - and had the gall to declare "the editor was the worst" - put our entire editorial office in an uproar.

Collectively, the Cahner editorial force represents the largest editorial complement in the specialized business press, and we all consider ourselves more than adequate in the bedroom. In fact, we feel we are "outdone" only by a few publishers (and only because they have more time on their hands).

Could it be that "Unfulfilled Wife" hitched up with an editor who was on deadline? - PHIL SCHREINER, EDITORIAL DIRECTOR, DES PLAINES, ILL.

DEAR PHIL: Possibly.

Chris Graham Has Willpower

DELCO — (AP) — Chris Graham leads the life of a normal 2-year-old just five weeks after his left ear was bitten off during a dog attack at his Delco home.

"He's got willpower," said Pauline Graham, Chris' grandmother. "He's not going to give up and sit around and lay down like a sick child. He's got more energy than before. It's hard for me to keep up with Chris."

Three family dogs, two of them pit bulls, attacked Chris March 8 at his home, where he lives with Mrs. Graham, 54. After rescuers could not find his severed ear, it was suggested that the dogs be killed and the contents of their stomachs examined.

The ear was found in the stomach of one of the pit bulls and reattached during surgery at New Hanover Memorial Hospital.

Chris will have reconstructive surgery on the ear in about two years.

Mrs. Graham said Chris is not afraid of dogs, unless they growl at him, and he will play in the same area where he was attacked.

If someone asks how he was hurt, Chris just says that it was a dog.

"He never got down," Mrs. Graham said. "Even when they operated on Chris, the only thing that bothered him was being hooked up to the IV. As soon as they took the IV off, he was all over the hospital."

The average American made 15 fewer trips to the supermarket in 1986 than in each of the four previous years.

Car Wash Holds Opening Ceremony

Adam's Auto Wash, located at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Red Banks Road, held its opening ceremonies Tuesday.

Adam's Auto Wash is open Monday through Saturday from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m., and Sunday from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m.

Approximately 80 people, including Mayor Ed Carter, were on hand for the operation's official opening ceremony.

New Probe

DURHAM (AP) — Authorities in Randolph County have renewed an investigation into the 1978 shooting death of the first husband of a woman who has been indicted on charges of killing her second husband.

Barbara T. Stager, 39, of Durham was charged Monday with first-degree murder in connection with the shooting death Feb. 1 of her second husband, Allison Russell Stager III, a baseball coach at Durham High School.

Mrs. Stager's first husband, James Larry Ford, 29, died of gunshot wounds at the couple's home in Trinity in March 1978. That death initially was ruled a suicide, but it later was changed to a homicide, said Capt. Charles R. Hughes of the Randolph County Sheriff's Department. No one was charged in Ford's death.

Randolph sheriff's officials said Tuesday they had renewed the investigation of Ford's death as a direct result of the charges against Mrs. Stager.

Steve Keen, owner, said Adam's Auto Wash employs 38 people and functions as four operations at one site. In addition to a state-of-the-art car wash, the business has an automobile reconditioning shop, gasoline pumps and a retail goods outlet.

Keen said the car wash facility offers modern equipment manufactured by Hanna, combined with recently developed soft cloths. Each wash also includes a high-pressure undercarriage wash.

A retail store at the site will sell convenience items such as milk, soda, and beer, he said.

For Keen, 35, the opening of the Greenville facility marks his second venture into the car wash business. He opened a similar operation in his hometown of Goldsboro approximately three years ago.

Schools

In addition to some of the mentioned activities, high school guidance counselors are alerting counselors in the junior high and middle schools that will provide students to their particular high school about the requirements, said Jean Creech of J.H. Rose and Virginia MacMillan of North Pitt.

Also, "we have advisory groups, and each student has a copy of the requirements in the advise program starting in the 10th grade," Ms. Creech said. Parents also are advised of the requirements, she said. "We've done everything we need to do except stand on our hands."

By 1990, when the minimum requirements are fully used by the university system in admitting students, high school seniors must have taken four courses of English, three courses of mathematics including algebra and geometry (or a course with an algebra II prerequisite), two courses of social studies including U.S. History, three courses of science including a lab course, and two courses of foreign language are recommended but are not required at all schools. Electives fill in course hours that are left.

A key to having high school seniors prepared for college requirements is having new high school students prepared to take the needed courses, Ms. Nobles said. "Students have to be prepared to take geometry or algebra" when they come into high school, she said. "Preparing is not just in the high school."

Park

"Additionally, the club works with local groups to try and form local industrial councils, and we've done that in a few counties," Ms. Morris said.

One of the projects the council sponsors is the annual Eastern North Carolina Buyers-Suppliers Conference, which matches goods and services to the local needs of communities.

Instead of suppliers seeking out buyers, the conference brings a group of suppliers together, and buyers get to approach them. Local businesses need goods and services, Ms. Morris said, "so why not buy them in North Carolina instead of going out of the state."

A North Carolina native, Park oversees a group of newspapers, television and radio stations, including WNCT-TV and WNCT-radio in Greenville.

With his company's stock valued at about $400 million, Park Communications ranks 904 on Business Week's 1988 list of the 1,000 most valuable companies in the nation.

While the council works to generate development within eastern North Carolina, the state has also become a favorite spot for big business, Park said.

"A survey of corporate executives conducted earlier this year by Business Week magazine found that more businessmen consider North Carolina the most likely location for a new plant site than any other state in the nation," he said. "More than 22 percent of the respondents named North Carolina first, and California ranked second with 20 percent," Park said.

Park praised North Carolina governors from Luther Hodges to Jim Martin for making the state so appealing to businesses. "I have ... seen quite a contrast in gubernatorial styles and achievements, and I can tell you that without the vision and the hard work of these men agriculture would not be as strong as it is today, education would not be as vital, transportation would not be as advanced and we would not be moving into hi-tech industries in eastern North Carolina," Park said.

Grace Cites Waste

"I had never met President Reagan when he phoned me in New York. He said, 'When I was governor out in California, we brought in the private sector and there were 100 businessmen who came in and they gave me 2,000 ideas. As governor, I took 1,600 of them, saved $222 million."

Grace, who heads a firm which had $4 billion in worldwide sales last year, said $2 trillion a year moves through the federal government.

In Washington, Grace said, "You don't call it a trillion, you call it a trill, see. And I'm telling you, it is quite a thrill to get into these trills."

"We have 2-cent screws being bought for $91. And of course ... toilet seat covers for $675. We rushed over and said, 'what's going on with these toilet seat covers?' They said, 'Secretary Weinberger hasn't taken a position on them yet.' They have 17,500 computers and 12,000 of them are obsolete.

"Actually the government is spending $200 billion more than it takes in," Grace said, and the government has "absolutely Mickey Mouse book-keeping. They have 332 incompatible accounting systems. They've got 319 payroll systems. It's impossible to get the information that you need.

"We found $850 billion was owed to the government ... $39 billion in default. Some of it is $2.5 billion in student loans.

"It's really a terrible situation. And keep in mind that when you spend $200 billion more than you take in every year — and the real figure is $400 billion because of the unfunded past service liabilities and the off-budget items; on a real accounting basis it's about $400 billion a year — you imagine what we're doing to future generations. We're just putting it off.

"When we gave our report to the president, one dollar becomes $71 by the year 2000. So we came up with $130 billion in savings per year and that's $9.2 trillion by the year 2000 cumulative.

"One generation is about 40 years," Grace said. "We're building up $6 trillion to $8 trillion per generation, in debt. 'There's no way in the world future generations can pay this off. It can't go on unless we're going to ruin our younger generations' future.

"In fact, what we're doing is causing taxation without representation — putting it on the kids' tabs. It's intergenerational rape. It's robbing piggybanks.

"Senators and congressmen," Grace said, "will do anything to get elected and re-elected." And he suggested that much of the waste in government is not being controlled because "Congress controls things. There are 4,000 military bases. We need 326.

"We have a dishonest Congress," Grace charged. "Get them out. Let 'em know that you know they are a crook. In Washington, you have to have more on the other guy than they have on you.

"If you love your children and grandchildren," Grace suggested, call 1-800-UAS-DEBT — the Council for Citizens Against Government Waste. "Get in this fight. Join us."

And Grace said, "get rid of all this dishonesty."

During a question and answer session, Grace, whose firm was founded in Peru more than 130 years ago, suggested that if the United States doesn't do more to help the Contras, "we're going to have another communist nation in our midst." He also suggested that because of the problems facing Mexico, that country could be a communist nation in 20 years.

Clemens Wins His Third; Brewers Top Baltimore As Birds Tie American Record

By The Associated Press Roger Clemens couldn't find his good fastball until Lou Whitaker lost a ball in the seats. Clemens allowed seven hits and struck out 11 in eight innings as Boston beat Detroit and Jack Morris at Tiger Stadium.

Clemens, 3-0, struck out at least 10 for the third time in four starts and leads the AL with 44 strikeouts. It was the 24th time he has struck out 10 or more in a game in 108 career starts.

Whitaker hit a long two-run homer off Clemens in the first inning to give the Tigers a 2-1 lead.

Marty Barrett, who went 3-for-5, broke a 2-2 tie with a two-run single in the fourth inning.

Spike Owen led off the Boston fourth with an infield single and moved to third on Ellis Burks' one-out double. Owen and Burks scored on Barrett's single past the outstretched glove of third baseman Tom Brookens.

The Red Sox added two runs in the sixth on a sacrifice fly by Wade Boggs and a run-scoring single by Dwight Evans.

Brewers 9, Orioles 5

Baltimore tied a major league record with its 13th straight loss from the start of the season as Paul Molitor hit a three-run homer to help Milwaukee beat the woeful Orioles at County Stadium.

The Orioles equaled the losing streaks of the Washington Senators in 1904 and the Detroit Tigers in 1920. Baltimore will go for the record tonight when Mike Boddicker opposes the Brewers' Bill Wegman at County Stadium.

Baltimore, struggling to score runs this season, took a 3-0 lead in the first inning but then collapsed in the field en route to its seventh straight loss under Manager Frank Robinson. Robinson took over for Cal Ripken Sr., who was fired last week.

"There is nothing I can say," Robinson said. "We went out and scored three runs and came back and gave them two. We didn't play well and didn't pitch well and we missed some signs. It was just not a well-played game."

Cal Ripken Jr. broke an 0-for-29 slump with his first homer of the season in the third to cut the Brewer lead to 5-4.

But Rob Deer walked and Greg Brock singled to begin the Brewers' fifth and the Orioles' fielding fell apart.

"It's going to come together. It's got to end," Cal Ripken Jr. said.

Rangers 3, Indians 0

Jose Guzman, who was sick with the flu, pitched six shutout innings and Larry Parrish drove in two runs with a bases-loaded single as visiting Texas beat Cleveland, ending the Indians' five-game winning streak.

The loss was only the second in the last 13 games for the Indians, who at 11-3 are off to their best start since 1966.

Guzman, 2-1, struck out three and walked one and allowed only four singles in six innings. Rookie Jose Cecena pitched 2 1/3 innings and Mitch Williams got the last two outs for his fifth save.

MILWAUKEE — The team of Brooks and Frank, of September pennant races and October celebrations, has hit rock bottom.

The Baltimore Orioles, major league baseball's winningest franchise the last 31 years, continued an incredible run through darkness Tuesday night by tying an 84-year-old major league record for losses at the beginning of a season.

The Orioles did it by dropping their 13th straight game, losing to the Milwaukee Brewers, 9-5, before 7,414 on a 47-degree night at County Stadium. The 1904 Washington Senators and 1920 Detroit Tigers also opened their seasons with 0-13 records, and the Orioles will try to avoid gaining sole possession of the record Wednesday night when they play the Brewers again.

Their 13th loss came with a touch of style, perfect for a team that once established a different kind of standard for style.

They began the game with their biggest inning of the season, with three runs, and their biggest lead of the season, 3-0. In that one rally, getting an RBI double from Eddie Murray and a two-run double from Rick Schu, they scored as many runs in one inning as they had in their previous 32 innings combined.

It would have taken a monumental effort for the Orioles to fail, and they got several Tuesday night. Their starting pitcher, Mark Thurmond, lasted 1 2/3 innings, but on a night when the Brewers collected 14 hits, he was only one of several culprits.

Before the Orioles were finished, they would make four Kingdome for its fifth straight victory. The White Sox are in sole possession of first place in the AL West for the first time since June 20, 1985.

Starting in the fifth inning with the score tied 2-2, Kenny Williams, Ivan Calderon, Fisk and Harold Baines hit solo home runs in consecutive innings off starter Mark Langston, 0-2.

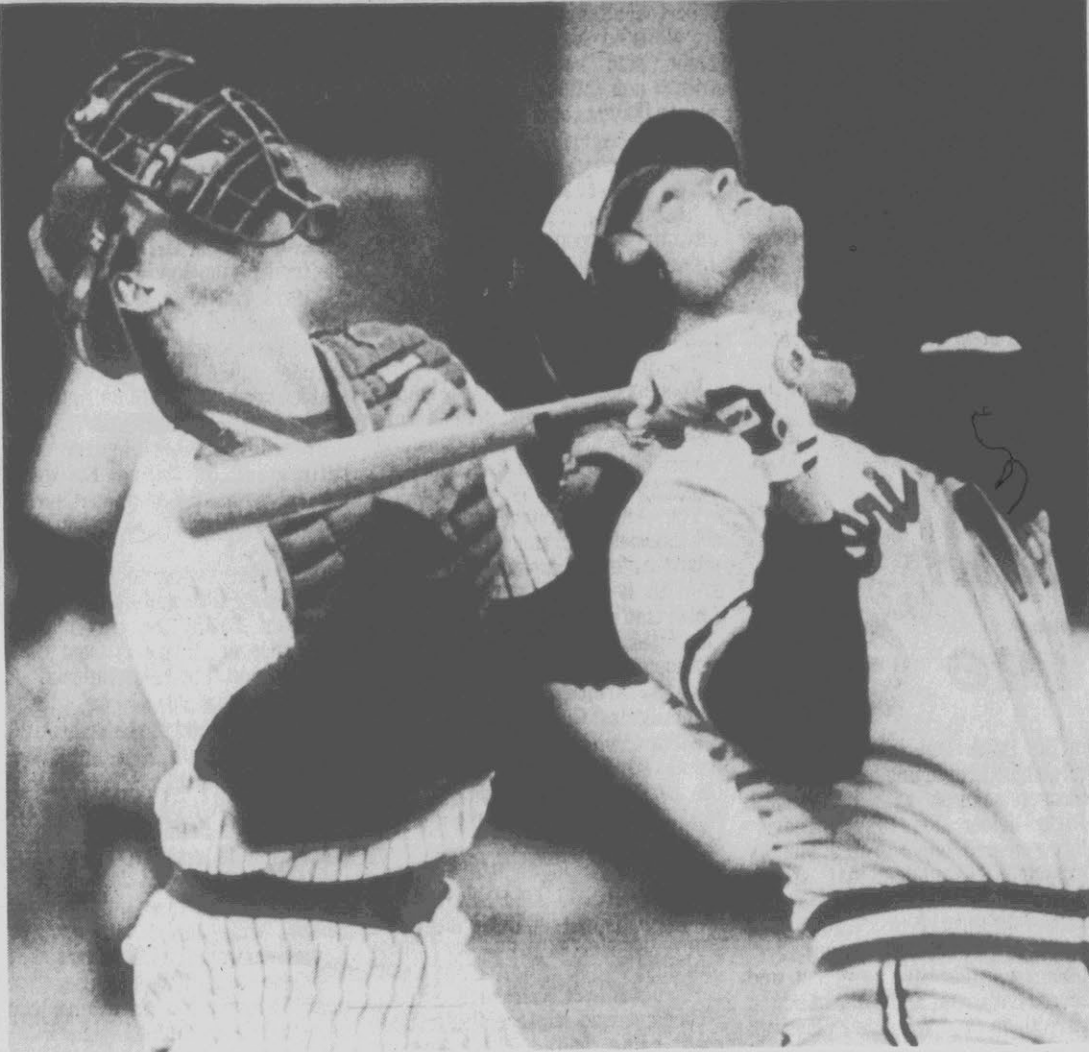

Fisk homered in the seventh and eighth and has 306 homers lifetime, tied for 55th place on the all-time list. It was the 21st time he has hit two homers in a game.

Athletics 8, Angels 3

Oakland's Dave Stewart survived three balks and seven California hits in seven innings and Terry Steinbach drove in three runs.

Reliever Rick Honeycutt got the first out in the eighth, and Dennis Eckersley finished up for his sixth save in six save opportunities. He has saved all four of Stewart's victories this year.

Stewart, 4-0, increased his season balk total to a major league-leading eight, three short of Steve Carlton's major league record for a full season. Stewart, a 20-game winner last season, was hurt by only one of the balks against the Angels.

Blount, Daniels, Sheppard Picked For All-Star Game

From Staff And Wire Reports

GREENSBORO — North Carolina signee Eric Blount leads a list of four area high school football players selected for the 40th annual East-West All-Star football game, the North Carolina Coaches Association announced Tuesday.

The contest, the annual meeting of the state's top senior high school football players, is scheduled for July 28 at Grimsley's Jamieson Stadium in Greensboro.

Two of North Carolina's top three high school players will also participate in the game.

Carl Pickens, a 6-foot-4, 190-pound All-America wide receiver from Murphy, headlines the 30-man West roster announced by the NCCA. Whiteville's Chester McGlockton, a 6-6, 275-pound defensive end also with All-America credentials, will play for the 30-man East squad.

Garner running back Anthony Barbour, the state's 1987 prep player of the year, declined an invitation, citing summer school commitments.

Selected from this area are Blount, a 5-11, 170-pound running back from Ayden-Grifton; David Daniels, a 5-10, 200-pound running back from Greenville Rose; Franz Holscher, a 5-11, 182-pound quarterback from Washington; and Ashley Sheppard, a 6-4, 215-pound linebacker from North Pitt.

Blount, who signed to attend the University of North Carolina, was overlooked in the Shrine Bowl selections, drawing criticism from eastern circles. Daniels has signed with East Carolina while Sheppard, the only player from the Northeastern area to play in the Shrine Bowl, has signed with Clemson.

According to East coach Bobby Poss of Fayetteville Seventy-First and West coach Bruce Hardin of West Charlotte, McGlockton's presence at outside linebacker along with Ashley Sheppard of North Pitt could give the East an edge on defense. Pickens' quick feet, towering vertical jump and sure hands may give the West an advantage on offense.

"We look good on defense in the sense that we have a lot of top players on the defensive side of the ball," said Poss. "We'll need that to play against the West."

"We feel like we complement ourselves well on offense," said Hardin. "We've got a couple of good quarterbacks — Therome George of Shelby and Kelly Holder of North Surry — who can run the option. And with the good receivers we have, hopefully we can put pressure on their defense."

Dugout Dejection

Baltimore manager Frank Robinson looks at the dugout floor as his team goes down to a 9-5 defeat at Milwaukee County Stadium Tuesday night. The loss was the 13th straight for the Orioles and the string tied a major league record. (AP Laserphoto)

Once-Proud Orioles Have Fallen To Rock Bottom

that led to four unearned runs. Rookie catcher Carl Nichols would be charged for two passed balls, which would lead to another. Rookie outfielder Wade Rowdon would misplay a Rob Deer fly into a run-scoring double.

And with the Orioles trailing by three runs in the seventh inning, outfielder Jeff Stone attempted to go from first to third on an infield grounder and was easily thrown out.

The game was played in front of two of the greatest names in Orioles history, one of them in the dugout (Manager Frank Robinson), another in the broadcast booth (third baseman Brooks Robinson). Both appear to have accepted the demise of their favorite teams with a mixture of sadness and disbelief.

"This has got to be the epic event for this franchise the last 30 years," Brooks Robinson said. "When we won pennants or the World Series, we were doing what we were supposed to do. Who would have expected this. Maybe this is a payback. Other teams have gone through hard, but until now, the Orioles never had. They're getting a payback, aren't they?"

Meanwhile, Frank Robinson's record since taking over for Cal Ripken Sr. last week ran to 0-7. He spoke in short, tight sentences and appeared to be fighting his emotions as reporters gathered around him in a steamy clubhouse.

"I'm not going to tell the players anything," he said. "I'm going to let 'em sleep on it. There were some positive things to come out of this. We got some offense going, but we missed signs and made too many mistakes. But when we played tonight, I wasn't worried about the other 12 games, and when we come out tomorrow, I won't be thinking about tonight."

Celtics Gain Homecourt Advantage

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

The Detroit Pistons are keeping a stiff upper lip after losing their season-long battle to earn a homecourt advantage in a potential playoff meeting against the Boston Celtics.

"I can't explain it, but eventually it's going to end," Isiah Thomas said after Boston clinched the top spot in the NBA's Eastern Conference playoffs by beating the Pistons 121-110 Tuesday night. It was the Celtics' 21st consecutive victory over Detroit at Boston Garden.

The winning streak includes four straight in last year's Eastern Conference finals, during which the Pistons easily won their three home games. If the teams meet in a seventh game this year, Boston again would be at home.

"We play harder here and they play harder there," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said.

"We had our problems this year and still finished with the best record in the East," said Kevin McHale, who matched his season high with 33 points. "Now we have to go out and see if anyone can beat us."

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Atlanta 119, New Jersey 109 in overtime; Chicago 121, New York 118; Philadelphia 115, Milwaukee 102; Dallas 104, Houston 96; Los Angeles Lakers 133, San Antonio 126; Denver

134, Seattle 114, Phoenix 122, Golden State 107; Sacramento 120, Los Angeles Clippers 105; and Utah 129, Portland 122.

Robert Parish scored 25 points and Larry Bird 22 for Boston, which improved its record to 56-23. Detroit fell to 52-27 with three regular-season games left.

A 12-2 run put the Celtics ahead 18-10, and they led 31-24 after one quarter.

Leading 52-43, Boston got nine of the next 11 points, all on free throws, to take a 61-45 advantage. The lead was 61-47 at intermission and ranged from 11 to 26 points the rest of the way.

The Celtics hit 63.5 percent of their field-goal attempts.

"We tried something different tonight," said Thomas, who led Detroit with 21 points. "We tried to let every player play his own man and double-teamed less than we usually do. It didn't work."

Lakers 133, Spurs 126
Los Angeles clinched a homecourt advantage throughout the playoffs as James Worthy scored 28 points and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Byron Scott added 25 each against San Antonio.

The Spurs, who need one victory or a Phoenix loss in the last three games to make the playoffs, trailed only 125-124 with 1:03 left, but a dunk and a pair of free throws by Abdul-Jabbar put the game away.

The Lakers' effort nullified a season-best performance by Spurs guard Alvin Robertson, who scored 27 of his 40 points in the second half. Robertson also had 10 assists.

Suns 122, Warriors 107
Phoenix kept its slim playoff hopes alive as Armon Gilliam scored 19 points against Golden State.

Gilliam, who had nine first-quarter points, keyed a 16-4 run to close out the period, giving the Suns a 32-22 lead. The Suns increased the margin to 64-51 at halftime.

The Warriors, down 97-78 entering the fourth quarter, got no closer than 12 and lost their 10th straight road game despite 25 points by Chris Mullin.

Bulls 121, Knicks 118
Chicago won its seventh straight road game and Michael Jordan scored 15 of his 47 points in the fourth quarter, helping the Bulls withstand a 43-point New York barrage.

Scottie Pippen keyed a 21-10 spurt with nine points in the last 4:42 of the third quarter, giving Chicago the lead for good at 86-75. The Knicks got as close as one point in the final minutes.

The Knicks, who got 26 points each from Gerald Wilkins and Patrick Ewing, dropped into eighth place in the Eastern Conference, one-half game behind Washington and one-half game ahead of Indiana.

Nuggets 134, SuperSonics 114
Denver won for the 15th time in 16 games, defeating Seattle as Lafayette Lever had 31 points and 12 rebounds.

The win was the Nuggets' 53rd of the season, an NBA club record, and kept them 1½ games ahead of Dallas in the battle for first place in the Midwest Division.

The Nuggets also got 27 points from Alex English, and Michael Adams hit a 3-point basket in his record 41st straight game. Seattle was led by Tom Chambers' 29 points and 21 by Xavier McDaniel.

Mavericks 104, Rockets 96
Dallas held off Houston's fourth-quarter rally and kept pace with Denver as Rolando Blackman scored 27 points.

Trailing 81-70, the Rockets outscored Dallas 12-2 at the start of the final period to close the gap to 83-82 with 7:33 to go. But the Mavericks responded with their own rally, including a steal and layup by Roy Tarpley and a steal by Blackman that led to a basket by Mark Aguirre.

76ers 115, Bucks 102
Philadelphia celebrated the retirement of Julius Erving's number with a victory as Charles Barkley scored 28 points against Milwaukee.

The 76ers, trying to catch New York, Washington and Indiana in the four-team battle for two playoff spots, also got 22 points from Cliff Robinson and 21 by Mike Gminski.

Jazz 129, Blazers 122
Karl Malone had 38 points, his fifth straight game with 36 or more, pacing Utah over Portland.

Thurl Bailey came off the bench for 29 points, and John Stockton had 25 points and 18 assists for the Jazz. Clyde Drexler scored 35 points for Portland, 15 of them in the third period, while Jerome Kersey and Kevin Duckworth had 24 each.

Malone scored five consecutive points to give the Jazz a 118-105 lead with 3:37 remaining.

Hawks 119, Nets 109
Atlanta outscored New Jersey 12-2 in overtime and got 32 points from Dominique Wilkins to hand New Jersey its 14th consecutive loss.

The Hawks scored the next eight points of overtime to pull away from a two-point lead.

New Jersey's Roy Hinson sent the game into overtime when he hit two free throws with 18 seconds to play, and Buck Williams finished with 21 points and 14 rebounds for the Nets.

Kings 120, Clippers 105
Reggie Theus scored 33 points and Sacramento broke a four-game losing streak by beating Los Angeles. Otis Thorpe added 21 points and 12 rebounds for the Kings.

At this time, the North Carolina High School Athletic Association is beginning to ponder the next great realignment of the 328 member schools. The new realignment is scheduled to begin starting with the 1989-90 season, making this coming year the final under the present setting.

Ideally, the schools would align themselves with the largest 25 percent in the 4-A ranks, the next 25 percent as 3-A, and so on. But it doesn't always work that way. Some schools want to play "up" against some traditional rivals. Others want to play "down" where, while they may suffer some restrictions, they feel they can better compete.

For that reason, one could expect to see some changes in the five area conferences that The Daily Reflector covers, once the final nails are in place for the next four-year period.

The wheels are already in motion. Each school has received a list of the 328 NCHSAA members, with their average daily membership listed. They are divided into 82-team groups for each classification.

Each school has also been asked to state whether it wished to play up — with full privileges; play in the classification in which they are listed; play down — with certain restrictions; or to play as an independent, which would eliminate them from any team championship consideration. It is doubtful if any school will ask for the latter.

There will be some, however, who will play down in classification. If they do, they will not be eligible for the state playoffs in the year after they qualified for the same playoffs. For example, a team playing down might qualify for the state football playoffs. The following year, regardless of its record, it would be ineligible.

Individual athletes, in such sports as tennis, golf, and track, would still be eligible, even if the team as a whole were not.

The realignment plan will be set up in May and distributed in June. Notice of appeals will be accepted in July with appeals heard in August. Second appeals, if any, will be accepted until Sept. 1, with a final decision in early December.

The final plan is to be in place on Dec. 6.

The five area conferences are almost certain to see some changes. They include the 4-A Big East, the 3-A Coastal, the 2-A Northeastern and Eastern Plains, and the 1-A Tobacco Belt. The Big East has eight current members, the TBC has 10 and the others each have seven.

No decisions have been made as to the makeup of individual conferences, according to Rick Strunk of the NCHSAA, although there have been some rumors of movement.

Washington High School, it has been said, will be shifted to the Tar Roanoke Conference, which will lose Southern Nash to the Triangle. Pender County, which was originally proposed as a Coastal Conference member, will move "up" from 2-A to its true 3-A status and join the Coastal.

Of the eight Big East members, five of them are true 4-A teams. They include Northern Nash (17th largest of its group), Rocky Mount (37th), Rose (49th), Northeastern (60th) and Kinston (76th). The other three members, the Wilson County schools of Fike, Hunt and Beddingfield are all 3-A size. Fike (14th among 3-A school in size) and Hunt (17th) are both planning to remain in the 4-A ranks, however.

Beddingfield, only 47th among the 3-A's, will drop out of the 4-A ranks and is expected to be assigned to the Triangle Conference according to reports.

The Coastal Conference has five of its seven members remaining 3-A schools. They are Washington (33rd), North Lenoir (35th), D.H. Conley (36th), Havelock (38th) and West Craven (82nd).

The other two members, West Carteret and East Carteret, are listed in other groups. West Carteret is the 81st 4-A size school. There has been speculation that West will accept 4-A status, although some observers in the area say they understand they will seek to continue as a 3-A school. East Carteret, however, is only 30th among 2-A sized schools, and is expected to move down to that level.

Of the seven 2-A Eastern Plains schools, six will continue in that division. They include C.B. Aycock (39th among 2-A's), Greene Central (40th), South Lenoir (46th), North Pitt (57th), Farmville Central (65th) and Pamlico (79th). The other member, Ayden-Grifton, is ninth among the 1-A schools, but has requested to remain in the 2-A ranks.

The seven Northeastern teams has five schools still listed as 2-A's. They include Roanoke Rapids (10th), Northampton East (42nd), Plymouth (44th), Edenton (54th) and Williamston (81st).

One current member, Ahoskie, will be merging with Murfreesboro to form Hertford County High School, which will be a 3-A sized school.

The other member, Roanoke, seventh among 1-A schools, has asked to play on the 1-A level.

The Tobacco Belt will be losing at least two of its schools. Belhaven and Bath will merge into East Beaufort, which will be 2-A sized. The other members include North Edgecombe (26th), Chocowinity (52nd), Matamuskeet (62nd), Aurora (68th), Columbia (69th), Jamesville (70th), Bear Grass (73rd) and Creswell (74th). Bear Grass does not play football, and Aurora did not field a team this past year. It is, however, expected to resume football by the start of realignment, if not before.

Most schools, as seen, will remain in their current classification. What remains to be decided is the fate of those asking to play up or down, or those who will be moving to new conferences.

That won't be known for sure for another eight months.

Problems Still Plaguing The O's

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Anyone seen Brooks Robinson lately? Wasn't it just yesterday he was diving in the dirt at third base for the Baltimore Orioles and magnificently coming up with the ball in time to throw the runner out at first?

Brooks is in the Hall of Fame and the broadcast booth now, and the Baltimore Orioles of a bygone era are nowhere to be found.

Sure Frank Robinson, another Hall of Famer, is managing. But there are few other traces of the proud franchise that once had baseball's best minor league system, one that emphasized the fundamentals from the lowest levels up to the majors.

These are the Orioles of 1988 — just five years removed from a World Series championship — and they have lost 13 straight baseball games in a horrid start that has tied the major league record for futility.

For 12 games the Orioles couldn't hit. Then, in the 13th, they couldn't hit or pitch and they lost Tuesday night to the Milwaukee Brewers 9-5.

"One man can't do it all by himself. The pitchers have to do their job, fielders have to do their job and hitters have to do their job. That's the way you win ball games," Frank Robinson said after the Orioles lost for the seventh time since he replaced Cal Ripken Sr. as manager.

The Orioles joined company with the 1904 Washington Senators and the 1920 Detroit Tigers, who also lost 13 straight to open the season. A 14th straight loss tonight in Milwaukee would also tie a franchise record set in 1954 in Baltimore and twice when the team was in St. Louis.

"It's going to come together. It's got to end," said shortstop Cal Ripken Jr., who ended an 0-for-29 streak with a homer and single.

"The key is to win some games and have some fun. It's got to end because baseball is baseball."

"There is no other way to play baseball, and that's to be a winner." Entering the game with a team batting average of .186, the Orioles' bats came alive Tuesday night as doubles by Eddie Murray and Rich Schu produced a 3-0 lead in the first inning off Juan Nieves, 1-2.

But four errors led to four unearned runs and Paul Molitor's three-run homer in the second off Mark Thurmond, 0-3, put the Orioles back in a 5-3 hole and they didn't recover.

"We made some mistakes out on the field which I think I can correct and have to correct if we're going to play good baseball," said Robinson.

"Sure, a win will stop the streak, but if you go out and lose 10 more in a row that doesn't do much good."

Schu's error on Robin Yount's grounder led to a pair of Milwaukee hits in the first, and then Molitor hit his first homer of the season, a 430-foot shot to left, in the second after singles by Dale Sveum and Jim Gantner.

Ripken made it 5-4 with his homer in the third. But then the Orioles turned the fifth inning into a baseball bloopers segment with three errors. Right fielder Joe Orsulak's over-throw scored one run and Murray missed a grounder that scored another. Orsulak later overran a fly ball for the third error.

"There is nothing I can say," Robinson said. "We went out and scored three runs and came back and gave them two. We didn't play well and didn't pitch well and we missed some signs. It was just not a well-played game."

Molitor's third hit of the game in the seventh drove in Milwaukee's ninth run as the Brewers won their third straight game after a seven-game losing streak. Milwaukee, ironically, had a 13-game winning streak to open last season.

"Thank goodness their line drives were at people," Milwaukee manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "We can't worry about their situation. We have enough to worry about."

And Robinson says his team can't worry about streaks, either. The Orioles need to concentrate on the fundamentals, learn to relax, forget about the previous 13 games and hope that Murray and Ripken, two of the stars from the 1983 World Series winner, keep on hitting.

"We have to go out there and do what we're capable of doing, no more, no less," said Robinson.

"We have to get some wins under our belts, period."

Oliver Decides To Sign With Cavs

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Anthony Oliver, a 6-foot-3 guard from Calypso, N.C., signed a basketball letter-of-intent Tuesday to play at Virginia, his high school coach said. Oliver, one of five members of the North Carolina Associated Press all-state team, played at North Duplin High School, which competes in the state's smallest classification, for schools of less than 500 students. North Duplin Coach Frank Hollowell said the school's small size shouldn't prevent Oliver from succeeding in the Atlantic Coast Conference. "I know that's been debated, batted around. Only time will tell," Hollowell said. "There has been guys who came into the league with a big reputation who didn't have great careers. And there have been guys without a big reputation who came in and did. I think he can do it, and the University of Virginia thinks he can do it." Oliver, a four-year starter, finished with 2,157 points at North Duplin. As a senior, he averaged 22.7 points, nine rebounds and six assists a game. Oliver said Virginia Coach Terry Holland and his staff "said that I'll be the back-up to Richard Morgan and John Crotty." Oliver becomes Virginia's second recruit. Bryant Stith, a 6-foot-6 forward from Brunswick County who was the Virginia AP's Group AA player of the year, committed during the November signing period.

Curry Talking About Retirement

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga. (AP) — Atlanta Falcons linebacker Buddy Curry said he may retire before the 1988 NFL season. "I'm seriously thinking about it," Curry said after addressing the Baldwin High School football team Monday. "I think the Falcons are going to work out something for me." Curry, a veteran of eight NFL seasons out of North Carolina, said an accumulation of injuries will influence his decision. He also said, "It's come down to a situation where they want some younger people in there."

Budd Has Strong Ally In Margaret Thatcher

LONDON (AP) — Zola Budd has found a powerful ally in British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. Thatcher, in her first public comment on the affair, said Tuesday that international track officials should leave the South African-born Budd alone. The distance runner has been threatened with banishment from international track events because of her continuing ties with South Africa. Budd became a British subject four years ago and competed for England in the 1984 Olympics. "A number of us find it rather repugnant that so much effort is now concerned with stopping a young woman competing in international athletics," Thatcher said. As she spoke, 100 of the prime minister's fellow Conservatives urged British track authorities to ignore a mandate to ban Budd for at least a year. The same number of members of the Labor Party signed a motion urging them to punish her. On Sunday, the British Amateur Athletics Board will decide whether to suspend Budd for a minimum of 12 months for links to South Africa — barred from the sport for its racial apartheid policies — or risk the entire British track and field squad missing the Seoul Olympics. In London last Saturday, the IAAF ruled that unless the BAAB agreed to ban Budd, it would have to consider "exercising its suspensive powers." The British Board was given 30 days to respond and in the meantime, Budd would be ineligible to compete anywhere in the world. Budd claims she only was a spectator at a domestic South African meet last June.

Braves Wins Second Straight

By The Associated Press

The Atlanta Braves are still a long way from .500, but they're getting closer to respectability.

The Braves, who lost their first 10 games this season, beat the Houston Astros 5-4 Tuesday night for their second straight victory.

"I thought the sky was falling," said Ted Simmons, whose three-run homer in the eighth inning carried the Braves. "I've been through 12-game losing streaks before in my career, but nothing like this to start the season."

Bruce Sutter ended a personal year-long streak with his first victory since 1986. He missed the entire 1987 season after his third shoulder operation.

Sutter was not particularly effective, giving up one run on three hits in 1 1/3 innings. Still, he got credit for winning his first decision.

"I'm happy because we won. I gave up some hits and a run, but we won and that's all that matters. How I feel about the way I pitched is for me to deal with and not for the newspapers," Sutter said.

In other National League games, pair of former American League pitchers threw shutouts. Pittsburgh's Brian Fisher pitched a seven-hitter in a 3-0 victory over St. Louis and Cincinnati's Dennis Rasmussen blanked San Francisco 8-0.

Also, it was Philadelphia 10, New York 2, and Montreal 9, Chicago 1. The Padres-Dodgers game at Los Angeles was rained out.

Simmons homered off Jim Deshaies after Gary Roenicke reached on an error by shortstop Rafael Ramirez and Dale Murphy singled.

"He got into a 3-and-2 situation with me and he didn't want to walk me, so he threw me something I could hit," Simmons said. "It was a fastball a little bit inside."

Paul Assenmacher relieved Sutter in the eighth and got his first save. Assenmacher entered with runners on first and third and got Alan Ashby to ground into a double play. Assenmacher struck out three of the five men he retired.

Deshaies, 1-1, hurt himself with seven walks, including four during a two-run second. Simmons drew a bases-loaded walk and Hall had an RBI single.

Glenn Davis hit his sixth home run in the Houston fourth and Alan Ashby's two-run single in the sixth put the Astros ahead 3-2.

Safe At Home

After Simmons' homer made it 5-3, the Astros scored in the bottom of the eighth when Billy Hatcher tripled and Davis singled.

Pirates 3, Cardinals 0
Fisher continued his hot hurling with his seventh straight win, while Barry Bonds kept up his torrid hitting with a double and single. Pittsburgh, in first place in the National League East for the first time since September 1983, won for the seventh time in the last eight games.

The Pirates took a 2-0 lead in the first against Danny Cox, 1-2, after Bonds doubled — his 13th consecutive extra-base hit — and scored on Jose Lind's double. Bobby Bonilla's hard-hit grounder went off first baseman Bob Horner's right arm for a single, scoring Lind. Horner was removed from the game and taken to a nearby hospital for X-rays that were negative.

The Pirates made it 3-0 in the second on Bonds' RBI single, which ended his extra-base hit streak and was his first run batted in without homering.

Fisher is 3-0 and unscored on in his last two starts. He won his last four starts last season and is 13-3 dating back to the 1987 All-Star break.

"Last year he'd get in trouble and he'd just try to throw the ball harder because he's a big, strong kid and he's always pitched that way," pitching coach Ray Miller said. "What made the difference for him is learning how to change speeds. He picked up a changeup faster than any pitcher I've ever had."

Reds 8, Giants 0

Rasmussen, like Fisher a former Yankee, pitched a four-hitter and Nick Esasky drove in four runs with a single and a homer.

Rasmussen, 1-1, struck out four in his second shutout in 107 career starts. His other was for the Yankees in 1986.

"They're few and far between," Rasmussen said. "I went 8 2-3 innings four or five times the last couple of years. I've gotten all but the last out."

"I wasn't wild and I was keeping the ball down. I felt strong."

Esasky drove in three runs with a bases-loaded single and also had a solo homer, as did Barry Larkin leading off the game for the Reds.

Phillies 10, Mets 2

The Phillies won their second straight game at New York after a seven-game losing streak as Mike Schmidt and Lance Parrish each hit a pair of run-scoring singles, Von Hayes doubled twice and drove in two runs and Don Carman pitched a seven-hitter. Philadelphia has won four of five meetings with the Mets this season, led by Parrish, who is 8-for-18 against them. Eleven of his 13 RBI have come versus New York.

Schmidt, who entered the game batting just .191, went 3-for-4 in a 15-hit attack. He started a four-run fourth inning with an RBI single and his run-scoring hit in the fifth made it 6-1.

"We feel we can score runs against anybody," Hayes said. "It's just a matter of how many."

Expos 9, Cubs 1

Dennis Martinez pitched a six-hitter and Tim Wallach homered as Montreal took its fourth straight victory.

Gwynn Looking To Break Out

LOS ANGELES (AP) — San Diego outfielder Tony Gwynn, one of baseball's best hitters since he became a full-time major leaguer in 1983, is off to a slow start this season, but he figures that will change soon.

"I don't feel comfortable in the box right now," Gwynn said. "I'm shuffling my feet, I'm moving my hands, trying different things. But basically, I'm sticking with the same swing because I know, sooner or later, it's going to turn around."

How can it not? Gwynn, who turns 27 next month, won his second National League batting title last year with a .370 average, highest in the league since Stan Musial hit .376 in 1948. Gwynn also had 56 stolen bases to finish second in the NL.

Gwynn has played four full major-league seasons after hitting .309 in 86 games in 1983. He won his first batting title with a .351 average in 1984 and followed that with .317 and .329 campaigns before his big 1987 season.

His 218 hits last year were a career high and topped the majors. His 213 hits in 1984 and 211 in 1986 were both NL bests.

But so far this year, in his team's 13 games, Gwynn has collected just 11 hits in 45 at-bats for a .245 average. The Padres' game at Los Angeles Tuesday night was postponed because of rain.

"You don't want to panic and start changing bats and cleats and wristbands and going into all of that," he said. "You just want to try to stay the same. And right now, I just can't get comfortable up there."

"It's like I'm moving too much, or my approach is wrong. But sooner or later, it's going to turn around. And when it turns around, hopefully everybody'll turn around, because a lot of us aren't hitting right now."

Indeed, they aren't. The Padres are 4-9. As a team, they're hitting just .216.

Gwynn has an excuse, but he refuses to use it. He had a tendon injury on his left hand which prevented him from straightening his left index finger, and surgery was performed on March 11.

He was expected to be sidelined anywhere from three to six weeks, but returned to play in an exhibition game exactly two weeks after the operation.

"I missed two weeks, but still I came back and hit the ball well when I started playing again," he said.

"But since the season started, I just haven't been hitting."

"I'm not going to blame it on my finger (injury), because my finger feels fine. I'm not going to blame it on missing two weeks, because I feel in good shape. But my mechanics are all wrong right now."

Padres Manager Larry Bowa admits he doesn't know exactly what to do to get his team hitting.

"I told them to just relax, go out there and swing the bat," Bowa said. "You go in streaks. Right now, I'm trying to score some runs. I'm trying to get some offense in the lineup, and right now we don't have any."

"I'm satisfied with the effort, but I'm not satisfied with the adjustments. For example, Rick Reuschel stuck it to us in San Francisco. I mean, literally."

"We were ready to play them, and the first thing I told everybody, you got to move up in the box because his ball has great movement on it. And what happens? Nobody moves up in the box, and he did the same thing to us again. So I don't know what else you can do."

The most recent Padres' game was a 6-0 loss to the Dodgers on Monday night. Los Angeles right-hander Tim Learly limited San Diego to three hits and struck out 11. Gwynn had one of the hits and drew a walk.

Afterwards, Bowa was shaking his head.

"He pitched a great game," Bowa said. "And it doesn't get any easier. Who's next? (Fernando) Valenzuela? (Orel) Hershiser?"

The answer is both. Weather permitting, the Padres face Valenzuela tonight and Hershiser Thursday night. Certainly, that's no way to end a team batting slump.

Graham Hoping To Improve Game To Its Previous Level

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — It's an old goal but a new attitude for David Graham.

"I don't need the money. And I certainly don't need the trophies. I'd just like to start playing good again for David Graham," said the 41-year-old Australian native.

Graham, who has made his home in the United States for more than a decade, is attempting to regain the form and touch that once made him one of the world's leading professional golfers.

"I just stopped to smell the roses for a while," Graham said before a practice round for the $750,000 USF&G Classic, which begins Thursday.

"My priorities have changed," said Graham, who turned pro as a teen-ager and has scored victories on four continents, including the 1979 PGA championship and the 1981 U.S. Open.

"For 20 years, I told my wife not to force me to choose between golf and her, because she'd lose, she'd be gone.

"That's changed," Graham said. "It's different now. She'd win. My family comes first. I want to be with them, be home at Christmas and Thanksgiving, things I haven't done for years."

"But it's hard to walk away from something you've dedicated 25 years of your life to. I still like to play golf. I want to see if I can still compete with the young players."

So Graham, who won money in only 10 tournaments last year and has made only four appearances in the United States this season, now is in a string of seven consecutive tournaments.

"After that, maybe I'll sit back and re-evaluate what I'm doing and where I am. I've been working pretty hard for a while, and it paid off with a couple of pretty good rounds last week (in the Heritage Classic)," Graham said.

While his current string of seven consecutive tournaments may give him an idea of his position, Graham said he wanted to provide himself with a longer test.

"I want to give myself about 18 months. Why 18 months? I don't know. It just seems like an adequate test," he said. "After that, we'll have to see what I've done, what I think I can do, where I'm going."

"It's not that easy to walk away from something you've done so long."

Graham faces a field of 153 in the chase for a $135,000 first prize over the Lakewood Country Club course.

The major contenders include defending champion Ben Crenshaw, Lanny Wadkins and Tom Watson a two-time winner of this event.

Some other leading figures include John Mahaffey, Calvin Peete, Hal Sutton, Bob Tway, Larry Mize and 1988 PGA Tour title-winners Mark McCumber and Jay Haas.

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by NBC.

British Syndicate Set For Challenge

LONDON (AP) — The Royal Burnham Yacht Club will participate in an elimination series against New Zealand to challenge for the America's Cup if the Sail America syndicate agrees.

"We shall be racing an elimination series in August against (Michael) Fay's boat," David Redfern, a spokesman for the Blue Arrow group, a multi-million dollar British business conglomerate, said Tuesday. "The winner of that race will face San Diego for the Cup."

"I don't know at this point whether anything has been cast in stone," said Becky Heyl, spokeswoman for Sail America, the San Diego Yacht Club's defense manager.

Heyl said Sail America officials have been discussing the British syndicate's entry as a challenger since receiving a letter from Royal Burnham during the weekend.

Heyl said all interested parties to the possible elimination series, including the San Diego club, would have to agree to race conditions for it to be held.

Fay's Mercury Bay Boating Club apparently has already agreed to meet the British challenger. Heyl said Sail America's position would depend on "how the discussions go. We are discussing it with the Blue Arrow Challenge."

The San Diego group was forced by a court order to agree to a head-to-head contest with Fay's boat off southern California later this year.

The $18.8 million British challenge is being partially funded by British financier Peter de Savary.

De Savary was behind Britain's bid for the 1983 America's Cup when his entry, Victory '83, was beaten in the semifinals by the eventual winner, Australia II.

Two weeks ago, a New York judge ruled that the British would be barred from taking part.

State Supreme Court Justice Carmen B. Ciparick said San Diego and the Mercury Bay Boating Club of Auckland will sail one-on-one since they appeared unable to agree on terms that would allow the English group to compete.

Royal Burnham had asked the court to stop the race and remove San Diego as a trustee of the Cup unless the British yacht was allowed to compete in an elimination series. They also asked for adequate time to prepare.

Ciparick said nothing prevented San Diego and New Zealand, however, from agreeing, up to race time, on terms that permit a multinational regatta, and said they were encouraged to do so "in the interests of sportsmanship and for the good of the America's Cup."

San Diego's Stars & Stripes, skippered by Dennis Conner, won the Cup from the Royal Perth Yacht Club in Australia in February 1987. Royal Perth had won the Cup in 1983 from the New York Yacht Club, which had held it for 131 years.

Becker Is Upset At Monte Carlo

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) — Boris Becker is gone and Ivan Lendl and Mats Wilander are not hoping to follow him.

Becker was eliminated Tuesday from the $492,500 Monte Carlo Open tennis tournament in his first match for the second consecutive year.

Seeded third, Becker was beaten 6-3, 5-7, 6-1 by 23-year-old Marian Vajda of Czechoslovakia. Vajda is ranked 42nd in the world, Becker sixth.

Last year, the top three seeds of the tournament — Becker, Stefan Edberg and Yannick Noah — all went out in the second round after first-round byes.

This year's top two seeds, Lendl and defending champion Wilander, were to play their second-round matches today.

Lendl is playing his first tournament in two months after a stress fracture forced him to withdraw from three tournaments.

The season's first major clay court tournament usually is a fine opportunity for lesser-known players to beat the stars making their debut on the slow, red surface.

Becker's lack of preparation on the surface showed as he made unforced errors and wasn't patient while being outplayed by Vajda.

"The longer the rallies were, the worse I played. I had bad ground-strokes out there," Becker said.

Vajda broke Becker in the sixth game of the first set for a 4-2 lead.

"Boris didn't play good tactics today. I was more patient in the rallies so I felt better," Vajda said. "I felt I could have played the ball 100 times over the net and not miss."

It was the first tournament match on clay for Becker since he lost in the French Open semifinals last June to Wilander.

Becker likes fast surfaces, such as grass at Wimbledon, where he won in 1985 and 1986.

"It's much more difficult for me to get ready on clay. You have to be well-prepared and you have to do different things," Becker said.

"When I have my couple of weeks, I can play as good tennis as I can on any surface. But my natural game is serve and volley and to finish it in two points and here you have to wait longer."

The 20-year-old West German got back in the match in the second set.

Shultz Says American Policy In Gulf 'Non-Confrontational'

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz said the United States does not intend to be drawn into the Persian Gulf war but is determined to defend its ships against Iranian attack.

"We are there in a non-confrontational way," he said Tuesday. "We and others have a right to unimpeded access to the international waterways, and we protect that right."

Shultz spoke to reporters on his flight from Washington. He was to rest in Helsinki and prepare for three days of talks in Moscow beginning on Thursday.

Shultz is holding monthly meetings with Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze to prepare for the summit meeting in Moscow May 29-June 2.

He said the two sides had made "some modest progress" toward a treaty to reduce their strategic nuclear weapons arsenals by 30 to 50 percent.

"But it's tough going," Shultz said. President Reagan and General Secretary Mikhail S. Gorbachev are to sign the treaty at their fourth and probably final summit.

However, an official said Monday that 1,200 items of disagreement were in U.S. and Soviet drafts of the treaty. The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, acknowledged that the treaty may not be ready.

Recognizing this, Shultz said the Moscow summit may be mostly a "very businesslike discussion of substantive issues across the board."

Shultz said he found it difficult to analyze Iran's motives in attacking ships in the Persian Gulf and firing on U.S. vessels and aircraft on Monday, given vastly superior U.S. firepower.

He said the Iranian mine that damaged the U.S. frigate Samuel B. Roberts in the central gulf last week, prompting the Navy's retaliatory raid on two Iranian oil platforms in the gulf on Monday, may have been laid "carelessly."

But while "it may be a mistake to attribute too much coherency of strategy to Iran," Shultz said, the mine was bound to hit almost any shallow draft ship that came along.

"From our standpoint, we're not wanting to be engaged in a confrontation with Iran," Shultz said. "We're not taking sides in the war" with Iraq.

"What we are doing," he said, "is asserting our right to self-defense when a country violates that right by putting mines in a place where it's known that our ships will go."

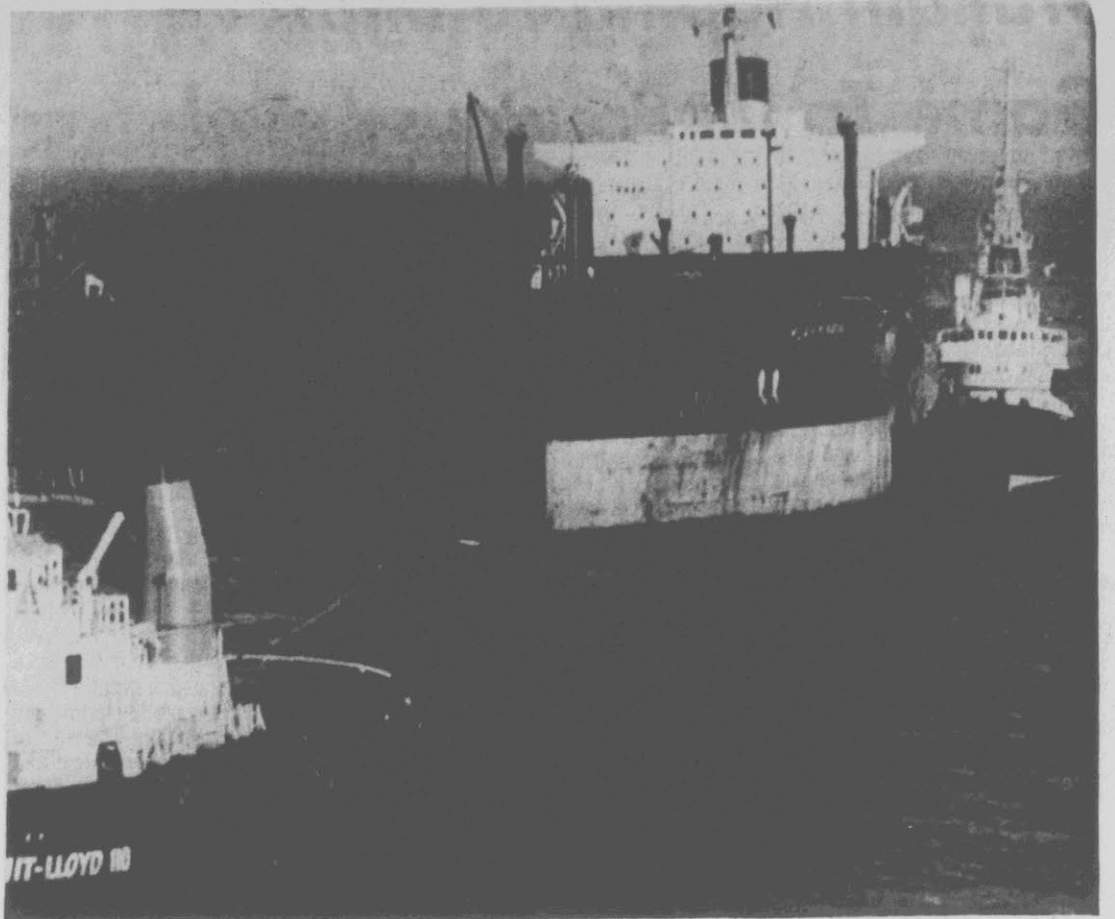

The navy sank or damaged six Iranian warships in Monday's warfare.

On another matter, Shultz said he had no information to link Israel to the "political assassination" of Khalil al-Wazir, a top official of the Palestine Liberation Organization and close associate of PLO chairman Yassir Arafat.

Nor did the slaying of al-Wazir, also known as Abu Jihad (Father of the Holy War), appear to be an act of terrorism, he said.

Shultz said terrorism has "a random characteristic" to it, with the attackers striking at innocent civilians. "This was a different kind of action, which doesn't mean we don't condemn it."

Al-Wazir, military commander of the PLO, was killed in his home in Tunisia by masked commandos Saturday.

Slain Engineer's Family Files Lawsuit

By RICHARD COLE
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — The family of engineer Benjamin Linder, killed by U.S.-backed Contra rebels last year in Nicaragua, today filed a $50 million suit against top rebel leaders and accused the U.S. State Department of covering up details of the slaying.

In a news conference here today, the family accused the Contras of having "brutally executed" Linder on April 28, 1987 in northern Nicaragua, where he was helping to build a hydroelectric plant.

The suit filed in federal court here accused Contra directors Adolfo Calero and Aristides Sanchez and rebel military leaders Enrique Bermudez and Indalecia Rodriguez with "wrecking death, battery, and cruel and inhuman treatment" of Linder, as well as the Contra organizations themselves.

Documents, including some obtained through the Freedom of Information Act, show the 27-year-old Linder was executed as he lay injured on the ground, the family said.

"We know that Ben was murdered," Dr. David Linder, father of the victim, said today. "Although our lawsuit cannot bring Ben back, we want to make those responsible pay for their crimes, by forcing them to pay substantial damages, and by exposing their guilt to the world."

"I would like to know more about the complicity of the (Reagan) administration," Linder said. "I don't see why they are so secretive if they don't know anything about it."

Jorge Rosales, spokesman for the Nicaraguan Resistance, as the Contras are formally called, said today he had no comment yet on the suit.

The Linders, who are from Portland, Ore., said their investigation shows that despite Contra claims to the contrary, volunteers helping the Sandinista government were deliberately sought out by the rebels.

"Ben's death was no accident," said the father. "He and his co-workers were targeted by the Contras because they were bringing electricity to poor Nicaraguans."

Said David Linder, "the orders came from top Contra leaders, who must be brought to justice."

Michael Ratner, attorney for the Linders, said the U.S. State Department had refused to cooperate in the family's investigation of Benjamin Linder's death.

Ratner said he believes the State Department coached the Contra troops in their subsequent statements about the killing. He said it was possible the U.S. government would be sued separately at a later time.

In an autopsy released last June by the family, Dr. Michael Baden said Linder had been shot in the head from "less than one inch" after suffering non-fatal wounds in an ambush on the project.

The family today produced a State Department memo that indicated a physician retained by the department to review the case believed there was no doubt enjamin Linder was shot at point-blank range.

The Contras publicly have said Linder was armed, and was killed in a firefight between rebels and government troops.

Panel Backs Pact Approval

MOSCOW (AP) — A special commission of the Supreme Soviet has called for ratification of the U.S.-Soviet treaty banning intermediate-range nuclear missiles, a senior Soviet official announced today.

Commission chairman Georgy M. Kornienko said it had advised in a report to the national parliament's Foreign Relations Commission that "a positive conclusion on the issue of ratifying the treaty" be reached.

President Reagan and Soviet Communist Party General Secretary Mikhail S. Gorbachev signed the treaty at the Washington summit in December. Ratification of the treaty, which bans U.S. and Soviet missiles with ranges between 300 and 3,400 miles, is pending in the U.S. Senate.

"The Soviet parliament's special commission scrutinizing the ... treaty has concluded that its fulfillment will definitely enhance rather than reduce the security of both the two signatory nations and international security in general," Kornienko said.

The Presidium of the Supreme Soviet performs the actual ratification function, although Kornienko's committee has held lengthy sessions to discuss the accord. The political decisions on the weapons concessions were taken last year by the ruling Communist Party Politburo.

The party's endorsement of the treaty was considered the ultimate judgment of the treaty, and the ratification process is a formality.

It was not known when the Presidium would make the formal ratification decision.

U.S. Suspends Escorts For Tankers As Commercial Ships Avoid Gulf

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Commercial vessels avoided the Persian Gulf and the United States temporarily suspended its escorts of Kuwaiti oil tankers, shipping executives said. Iran's warships were reported staying in port.

U.S. Navy officers said the gulf was tense on Tuesday, but reported no combat a day after they sank or damaged six Iranian vessels. Also, a French warship spotted three more mines in the waterway and Iranian speedboats attacked two tankers.

The search continued for a U.S. Marine attack helicopter and its two-man crew, missing since going out on a night mission Monday.

Iran repeated its claim that the U.S. attacks on its oil platforms that touched off Monday's skirmishes were planned in concert with Iraq.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz, denying that assertion, insisted the United States is neutral in the 7½-year-old Iran-Iraq war and said the American presence in the gulf is "non-confrontational."

In Washington, President Reagan said there was no doubt Iran planted the mines that prompted Monday's strikes. He said it was quieter in the gulf Tuesday and "we hope it continues that way."

One gulf-based marine salvage executive said the gulf appeared "ghostly" from lack of shipping. He and others, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said commercial vessels were avoiding the waterway.

Sources close to the Kuwait Oil Tanker Co. said the Navy was halting until further notice escorts of the 11 tankers it reflagged nine months ago. They said the mine hit by the U.S. frigate Samuel B. Roberts last week was in a main channel that must be swept before convoys resume.

Defense Department spokesman Dan Howard denied those reports. Iran claimed that its speedboats sank an "American naval logistical ship," killing its crew, an hour after Navy ships destroyed the two Iranian oil platforms Monday.

The official Islamic Republic News Agency headlined the dispatch "Yankees Go Down To Watery Grave As Revolutionary Guards Sink U.S. Ship." It contained no further details.

Lt. Cmdr. Mark Van Dyke told reporters in the gulf that there were no U.S. casualties in Monday's clashes. He also said there was no evidence the missing AH-1 helicopter had been shot down, as Iran claimed to have done.

IRNA also said an American attack Monday on the patrol boat Joshan killed 15 crew members and injured 29.

In Monday's operations, U.S. Navy forces destroyed the two Iranian oil platforms in the southern gulf, then sank the Joshan, disabled two frigates and sank or damaged three attack boats.

Five Iranian missiles were fired from shore at a three-ship U.S. Navy "surface action group." The American warships fired chaff into the air, confusing the missiles' guidance systems and made them miss.

Navy officers identified the missiles as Chinese-made Silkworms. The Pentagon said it had not confirmed the missile type.

Howard, speaking in Washington, said one of the crippled Iranian frigates returned to the port of Bandar Abbas. The second has "disappeared and you can reach your own logical conclusion on that one, I suppose."

There was no estimate of Iranian casualties in the fighting, but Navy officers told Associated Press reporter Richard Pyle in the Pentagon media pool that they presumed them to be heavy.

Grenade injures Two Americans

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Two American women and four Costa Ricans were wounded by a fragmentation grenade that exploded near the American-Costa Rican Cultural Center, officials said.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for Tuesday's attack, which Public Security Minister Hernan Garron called "a terrorist act."

He said officials had no suspects. The Intelligence and Security Directorate said the blast apparently was caused by an M-67 fragmentation grenade tossed onto a sidewalk near the Cultural Center. Three cars were damaged, its report said.

The blast occurred shortly after 8 a.m. (6 a.m. EDT) about 50 yards south of the Cultural Center building in the eastern Los Yoses district, said U.S. Embassy spokesman Mark Krichick. The building was not damaged, he said.

He said Tuesday night that U.S. officials had been unable to verify that the explosion was caused by a grenade. However, he noted that Costa Rican officials "were collecting evidence all day."

"We haven't had the opportunity to review the evidence," Krichick said. Earlier Tuesday, Krichick had said the explosion was believed caused by a malfunctioning power line transformer.

Red Cross officials identified the wounded Americans as Alice Feister, a professor at the Cultural Center from the Washington, D.C. area, and Shelly Bartain, a student from California.

Hometowns and ages were not immediately available. Feister underwent surgery for several hours at Calderon Guardia Hospital after suffering a severe artery wound.

Israel Bars Arabs From Services

JERUSALEM (AP) — Soldiers blocked Palestinians in the occupied lands from entering Israel today as hundreds of thousands of Israelis gathered in cemeteries to remember the 16,450 troops who died fighting for the nation.

An army spokesman said Israel would be shut to Arab residents of the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip through the weekend in an effort to prevent terror attacks during Memorial and Independence Day commemorations, which started Tuesday evening.

Israeli troops also maintained a curfew for a fourth day on 17 refugee camps and towns in the West Bank and six camps and towns in Gaza to prevent further riots over the assassination of PLO military commander Khalil al-Wazir.

Since Al-Wazir was killed early Saturday, 20 Palestinians have died in clashes with Israeli troops.

In a Memorial Day speech, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir today told American Jewish fund-raisers in Jerusalem that what they were seeing in the 4½-month Arab uprising was "not demonstrations or sit-ins. It is war."

He also insisted that a public controversy over soldiers' duties in the West Bank and Gaza would not affect their resolve.

"I can tell that they know that what they are doing now is just as important for the country's future as anything they have done in the past and we're just as proud of them now as we were then," Shamir said.

Shortly after the speech, sirens sounded throughout the country for two minutes marking the start of ceremonies at military cemeteries to honor the 40-year-old nation's war dead.

Memorials also were held at thousands of elementary and high schools around Israel, where teachers held special classes and pupils laid wreaths and recited poems in honor of those who fell in battle and training accidents.

At Denmark High School, one of Jerusalem's largest Jewish secondary schools, bereaved parents and teachers urged pupils to learn from the patriotism of peers who gave their lives for their country.

"Everyone has to defend our homeland," Russian-born Moses Cyrus Weiler, 81, who lost two sons in Israeli wars, told 11th graders in one classroom. "If you continue in this path, there will be value to your life."

The Memorial Day observance ends tonight with a torch-lighting ceremony at Mount Herzl that starts the Independence Day celebration.

Security was intense, with military barricades blocking roads in the occupied lands. Officials said only Arabs with special permits would be allowed into Israel until the Independence Day celebrations end Thursday night.

Places of entertainment, including movie theaters and restaurants, were ordered closed for the day.

Authorities feared a renewal of Palestinian riots in the uprising that began Dec. 8 and has claimed 168 Arab lives. One Israeli soldier and an Israeli teen-age girl have been killed in the clashes.

Palestinians were calling for demonstrations involving two other elements not involving Israeli Independence Day:

—The burial in Damascus, Syria, today of al-Wazir, the No. 2 man of the Palestine Liberation Organization, who was assassinated at his home in Tunis Saturday by at least seven commandos. The killing has been blamed on Israeli secret service agents.

—Deportations Tuesday of eight more Palestinians from the occupied lands to Lebanon, including six accused of the April 6 stoning attack on Jewish hikers in the West Bank village of Beita in which the 15-year-old Israeli girl, Tirza Porat, was killed.

The United States condemned the expulsions, saying they would exacerbate tensions in the territories Israel seized in the 1967 Middle East war.

Police Commissioner David Krauss said extra police were posted throughout the country and about 1,000 officers would patrol Jerusalem until the Moslem sabbath ends Friday.

"There is information that terror organizations will try to carry out attacks," he told Israel radio.

The eight deported Palestinians arrived in Rashaya, Lebanon, aboard an Israeli army helicopter on Tuesday. They requested they be handed over to the International Red Cross, Lebanese police said.

The deportations brought to 16 the number of Palestinians expelled from Israel this month.

The Israeli army on Tuesday claimed some of the Beita deportees had planned the attack on the Israeli hikers, hoping to hold some of the teen-agers hostage. It was the first time the army had suggested the attack was premeditated. Two Palestinians also were killed in the clash.

A police report said investigators could not determine if the bullet that killed Miss Porat had been fired from the gun of one of the Israeli guards accompanying the group or another weapon.

An army spokesman said Tuesday that separate investigations by the army and Israel's Shin Bet security service had not been completed.

North and South Vietnam were officially united in 1976 after 20 years of war.

AMERICAN "LEASEPURCHASE"

The AMERICAN "LEASEPURCHASE" Plan allows you to drive a Luxury Automobile with an affordable monthly payment and with no downpayment. After the Expiration of the Lease Term you may purchase the automobile for the pre-established Residual amount. This Residual amount, which you know from day one, is your purchase price. Historically this residual amount has been lower than the actual value of the automobile. Of course, all automobile values are governed by market conditions. That is why it is wise to choose an automobile that has proven to depreciate less. If you wish, American Leasing will finance 100% percent of the residual amount. What better way can you find to purchase a Luxury automobile than American's "LEASEPURCHASE" Plan. For further information contact one of our representatives.

Virginians Look Askew At Buyer Of Natural Bridge

By JERRY KNIGHT
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

NATURAL BRIDGE, Va. — The first two questions that people in Rockbridge County have for a visitor from Washington are: Who is Angelo Puglisi? And what's he going to do with our bridge?

Puglisi is the man who recently bought THE BRIDGE, the bridge in Rockbridge County, the Natural Bridge bridge, one of the "Seven Natural Wonders of the New World." And he bought it for $6.5 million.

He's the seventh owner of the bridge since Thomas Jefferson bought it from England's King George III for 20 shillings, then worth slightly more than the $4 it costs today to walk beneath the 215-foot-high limestone arch.

When he closed the deal earlier this month, Puglisi became more conspicuous in Rockbridge County than he is in Washington. A career in Washington real estate has put him in a league to make multimillion-dollar investments and taught him how to do it without attracting attention.

Except for a home near American University and a town house project in central Washington, there are no signs of Puglisi's real estate empire in District of Columbia property records.

Puglisi's holdings are sheltered from public exposure in partnerships, real estate industry sources say. Most frequently he is a partner with Dominic F. Antonelli Jr., whose real estate interests include the giant PMI parking chain and scores of downtown properties.

"Where ever you see Antonelli, you'll find Puglisi," one real estate source said. Angelo is the third "A" in the 3 A's Limited Partnership, with Antonelli and Ulysses "Blackie" Auger, the restaurant and real estate millionaire.

Along with Antonelli and Auger, Puglisi is on the board of James Madison Ltd., the holding company that owns Madison National Bank. He became chairman of what is now Madison Bank of Maryland after the holding company acquired what was then First Continental Bank of Maryland in 1986.

"Every industry has its characters, and Angelo is one of ours," said a real estate man who has known him long enough to appreciate his fondness for collecting records of old radio comedy shows. "Everybody in this business loves him," he added, "because when he says he's going to do something, he does it."

Self-effacing to the point of secrecy, Puglisi says little about his real estate successes. "I've been very fortunate," he said. "I've had a lot of good friends and I've learned from them."

"I'm not interesting," he says. "Write about the bridge, that's interesting."

What may be most interesting about the bridge is what Puglisi plans to do with it. He says he doesn't know yet. "We'll run it for a while and then we'll see," he said.

Along with the 65 million-year-old bridge — old even by Old Dominion standards — Puglisi bought himself a cave of about the same vintage and a somewhat newer set of facilities that includes a hotel, a motel, a gas station, a couple of eateries, a village of houses, a gift shop, a wax museum and 1,600 acres of Virginia mountain-side.

If it were a little tackier, Natural Bridge might qualify as a tourist trap. It has the tour buses, the elevator music wafting through the glade beneath the bridge, the mechanized wax figure of an adventurous boy swinging from a chandelier on a porch and a $200,000 inventory of knickknacks, but somehow it all comes out quaint.

Last week, when the redbuds were tumescent and trillium dappled the forest floor, there were young tourists from Australia and elderly ones from Germany, but not a D.C. license plate to be seen.

The new owners are going to have to do something about that, accord-

Teacher Hopes Hollywood Spotlight Will Inspire More Students To Excel

By BARBARA METZLER
Associated Press Writer

EAST LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jaime Escalante focuses on the blackboard with absorbed frustration. Reporters and photographers have invaded his classroom, and he's concerned his students are losing their concentration.

Although his life and unorthodox teaching methods are the subject of the critically acclaimed film "Stand and Deliver," Escalante has more important things on his mind — like mathematics and helping his James Garfield High School students to learn as much as they can.

"We have so many people working at Jack in the Box (fast-food restaurants) and pumping gas," he said. Like the movie teacher portrayed by actor Edward James Olmos, Escalante wants more for his students, and pushes them to excel in math and use it as their ticket out of menial jobs.

"It's like a sport," he said. "You have to practice every day to be in shape." His scrapbooks chronicle the victories of his mathematical athletes. Photos show beaming students holding banners heralding their achievements.

Each year the number of Escalante students passing the Advanced Placement calculus test, given by the Educational Testing Service for college credit, has grown tremendously.

In 1979, five students took the test and all had a passing mark of 3 or better. By last year, 87 Garfield students passed the test, higher than any other school in Southern California.

The movie concerns an incident in 1982, when 18 students took the exam and all passed. Surprised that the predominantly Hispanic class had performed so well in a school that was about to lose its academic accreditation, the ETS accused the students of cheating.

Twelve took the retest and passed with either perfect scores of 5 or near perfect scores of 4.

Last year, scores made by Garfield students taking the Advanced Placement calculus test placed Garfield second in the nation out of the 4,197 schools with students taking the tough exam, said Janice Gams with the Educational Testing Service.

Just 2 percent of American students even attempt the test.

This year, a record 160 Garfield students are expected to take the test, and Escalante has set his sights on attracting even more students to calculus classes in the 10 more years he plans to continue teaching.

"He's your friend, he's your mentor and he's your father," said former student Josie Richkarday, who was one of the 18 students suspected of cheating.

"He just didn't teach," said Richkarday, 23, who is studying to be a math teacher herself. "He brought something out of me. If you're willing to go 50 yards, he'll go 100."

Escalante has seen "Stand and Deliver" four times and likes it, although he says 90 percent is true and 10 percent is hype because the Warner Bros. release depicts more gang activity than really exists and portrays the families and neighborhoods as more destitute than they really are.

His students have become doctors and engineers. They work at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, which does work for NASA, and for TRW Inc., and Atlantic Richfield Co.

Dr. Armando Islas, a 1976 Garfield graduate and an oral surgeon with two offices in the Los Angeles area, credits Escalante with challenging him to be more than a C student with athletic talent.

"He was a fantastic instructor," Islas said. "He kept you motivated, and his method of teaching was kind of unorthodox but I think in that particular environment that's what you needed."

In the 14 years Escalante has been at Garfield, he has watched the gang influence dissipate, due mostly to a tough line by school administrators and teachers. The graffiti is more or less gone. And, thanks in part to the reputation of Escalante's math achievers, the school is respected within the mostly Hispanic barrio, where neatly kept stucco homes reflect community pride.

The days when students didn't want to go to Garfield are over, said Principal Maria Tostado, who grew up in the area.

"There's no longer the defeatist attitude that no matter what you do you're not going to get ahead," she said. Today, the school is well-known for academic prowess.

Escalante, a 57-year-old father of two sons, was a respected teacher in Bolivia for 11 years before coming to the United States at his wife's urging in 1964. Once here, he tried a career in computers but the work lacked the spirit of teaching.

"I got real tired," he said in an interview. "I didn't want to deal anymore with the printouts or schematics."

Now he spends his days in a stage-like arena before as many as 52 students who sit on tiered rows, and demands that late comers get "The Chair," a tot's seat meant to embarrass tardy students into promptness.

His classroom is plastered with posters designed to motivate. A foot-high banner curls around the room's corners, greeting students with: "Calculus need not be made easy; it is easy already."

Another poster tells students what they can expect to feel if they master math: "Feel ready to attend any college or university. Feel prepared to go into real estate, business, engineering. Feel really good about myself."

The students do feel good about themselves. Boredom is replaced with laughter, smiles and friendly jests, as Escalante tries to reach them through cheers, swats them with a battered and faded pillow, practices an imaginary ski swish and does practically anything to promote learning.

He was given the nickname "Kimo Sabe" by four gang toughs in his class.

British Invader Rick Astley Finds A Spot In The States

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Rick Astley is attracting more attention with his first album than he probably expected to have in a lifetime.

It has been 20 years since England sent America anything like Astley — when Joe Cocker arrived sounding a lot like Ray Charles.

Astley's RCA album, "Whenever You Need Somebody," and the first rhythm and blues sounding single from it, "Never Gonna Give You Up," have shot up the best-selling charts in Europe and then followed the same pattern in the United States where the LP went gold.

Besides getting a superhit with a first record, Astley excites interest because he's quite a surprise. His voice is super-soulful, deeply resonating, mature-sounding — and he's a 21-year-old English lad with a diffident air, chestnut hair and freckles.

"There's so much that gets crammed in," Astley said during an interview at RCA headquarters.

"Private life is one thing I don't get, basically, any more. Today we're a little rushed and that seems to be the norm these days. I don't see my family any more. I don't mean to moan about it. I knew I was letting myself in for this. I realize little things in life become suddenly important and you miss them.

"It's very nice traveling to all these countries. All the same, at the end of the day, all the RCA offices look the same."

Astley was born in Newton-le-Willows, Lancashire, England — not far from Liverpool. Like many performers, he started as a teen-ager.

"I took up drums around 15," he said. "I actually liked drums. With friends, a guitarist and bass player, we got a band together. One has gone to college now, studying computers. One is married.

"It was a fun thing. The bassist was doing most of the writing. We played anything that had three chords. We disbanded out of a mutual agreement sort of thing."

Then Astley at 17 was asked by a band named FBI to be its drummer. "It was in the same little town," he said. "Anybody who can play an instrument; everybody seems to know about them. It was an all-guitar band. Nobody could afford keyboards.

"I started to write most of the material about six months after joining," he said, "so I progressed on to be the singer as well."

The band's managers — one of whom still manages Astley — invited Peter Waterman, who owns production and publishing companies, to a performance. "The band was still very young; I was one of the oldest and I was 19," Astley said. "He offered me a solo deal which I ended up taking." FBI continues and Astley says they're still friendly.

"I went to work for Pete for eight months or so. I was a tape operator in a studio. It's computerized these days. I made tea a few weeks until I saw how a studio works. Then I started recording in December 1986, three songs. One was 'Never Gonna Give You Up,' the first single. I was writing like mad, doing demos weekends and nights, learning whatever I could, getting to know everybody."

BEST SELLER — Rick Astley, born in Newton-le-Willows, Lancashire, England, poses in New York. Astley's RCA album "Whenever You Need Somebody" and the first single from it, "Never Gonna Give You Up," have shot up to the best-selling charts, first in Europe and now in the United States. (AP Laserphoto)

Later, Astley played guitar on one track of the album, "No More Looking for Love."

"We did that at 2 or 3 in the morning," he said. "Nobody was around. The guy producing said, 'You do it.' I always play on my own demos. I said, 'Fine. I can get by on this.'

"I'm not stupid enough not to know there are better musicians than me. I'm not going to get into an ego trip when I play; time is money in a studio. I'd like to do it when I get older.

On "Never Gonna Give You Up," Astley said a few notes are high. "It sounds as if it is low. I'm not saying that to be hip and cool. I prefer to sing lower; it feels better and suits better.

"I think I've always had this sort of tone to my voice. A lot of my favorite singers are black guys. In Britain, music by people like Luther Vandross, James Ingram and Michael McDonald becomes part of the Top 40. I like a white artist's voice with a soulful approach."

PWL, which Waterman runs with Mike Stock and Matt Aitken, is mainly known in the United States as the power behind Bananarama and Samantha Fox.

"It is almost like a mini-Motown," Astley said. "They produce, write and arrange for so many people, some not big in America but massive in England. They may have five singles they've written and produced in the Top 20 on the British charts in one week.

"They tend to have a very controlling role. Everybody says they have a sound. I wondered what style they were going to use for me. It was a little more musical than some of the stuff they'd done, a return almost to the '70s, with string arrangements. I don't sound like most of what they do.

"We've recorded 'Ain't Too Proud to Beg' by the Temptations. I sang it live in a few clubs in London. Everybody seems to think it's the strongest thing I've done and that's my direction. It's like rhythm, and me singing. It seems to show my vocal ability to its best. I did it slower than the Temptations did it. My voice suits slow; I think you can express yourself a little more.

"We were going to put it on the first album but didn't want to put all the eggs in one basket," he said, "and a lot of people lately have released old Motown songs. I've got all these thoughts buzzing around in my head. You've got only 10 songs to bring to people."

The album includes five songs by Stock, Aitken and Waterman, four by Astley and "When I Fall in Love," the Nat "King" Cole hit.

"I'm only 21," Astley said. "As years go on, hopefully I'll get into writing all of an album and producing some of it. It's still early days for me."

'Suspicion' Remake Is 'Pointless Replica'

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The idea of remaking Alfred Hitchcock's psychological thriller "Suspicion" might one day prove interesting, but the makers of the new version airing on PBS tonight produced only a pointless replica.

The new "Suspicion," part of the PBS series "American Playhouse," stars Jane Curtin and Anthony Andrews in the Joan Fontaine-Cary Grant roles.

Except for a 1980s veneer, nothing is changed, including the studio ending that Hitchcock said he deplored. So why didn't these filmmakers do something daring like give the film the ending Hitchcock said he wanted?

"Suspicion" is the story of a dowdy young woman facing spinsterhood who is swept off her feet by a handsome, ne'er-do-well bachelor. She marries him, then begins to suspect he's a murderer and that she's his next victim.

Hitchcock masterfully kept audiences off balance, one minute suggesting that charming Johnnie Aysgarth was indeed a killer, the next revealing him as nothing more than an irresponsible spendthrift, his crimes a figment of his wife's imagination. Whether they were or not was the bone of contention between Hitch and the studio.

It's hard to evaluate Curtin's and Andrews' performances, since they speak the same lines as Grant and Fontaine.

For instance, when Johnnie crashes a party, causing his unwilling host to sputter, "I don't know what to say," he responds coolly, "I suggest you say something, old boy, before you embarrass this man (indicating a butler) to death." No matter how good Andrews is, it's Cary Grant's line.

Curtin's Lina never seems to connect convincingly with Johnnie. Fontaine won an Oscar for the role in which she alternately feared and adored her handsome husband.

Curtin's husband, Patrick Lynch, co-produced the movie with Barry Levinson (a British filmmaker, not the American director of "Tin Men"). Andrew Grieve, another Briton, directed by taking no chances.

Levinson and screenwriter Jonathan Lynn ("The Internecine Project") adapted the 1941 script by Samuel Raphaelson, Joan Harrison and Alma Reville. But almost nothing is changed from the Hitchcock version save minor details, such as Sarah, a secretary, in lieu of Emily, the maid.

Even Lynn's performance as Beaky, Johnnie's good-time friend, seems an impersonation of Nigel Bruce in the original.

The movie was based on a novel, "Before the Fact," written by Anthony Berkeley Cox under the pseudonym Francis Iles.

TV Opens World To Remote Villagers In Peru

By BRADLEY GRAHAM
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

OCOBAMBA, Peru — Each day as the sun goes down, the Quechua Indians in this remote Andean village file into the sparsely furnished living room of the Rev. John Jeremias Pashby for an electronic glimpse of the outside world.

Huddled on wooden benches, they stare at a small television wired to a parabolic antenna that Pashby, a Catholic priest from Boston, has installed among the town's squat adobe houses.

A local army captain calls Pashby a "magician" and "messiah" for introducing television to this all-but-forgotten corner of Peru. Word of the priest's feat has spread through nearby mountain valleys, prompting appeals from other peasants to be tuned in, too.

Television is finally arriving in the backwaters of Latin America, reaching distant villages like Ocobamba often before running water, telephones, regular mail service and — thanks to battery-powered sets — even before electricity. In many of the poorest homes, a TV set now ranks as the treasured next addition after a kerosene stove.

"Before phones, people in this part of the world want television," said Carlos Romero, director of Peru's National Institute for Research and Training in Telecommunications.

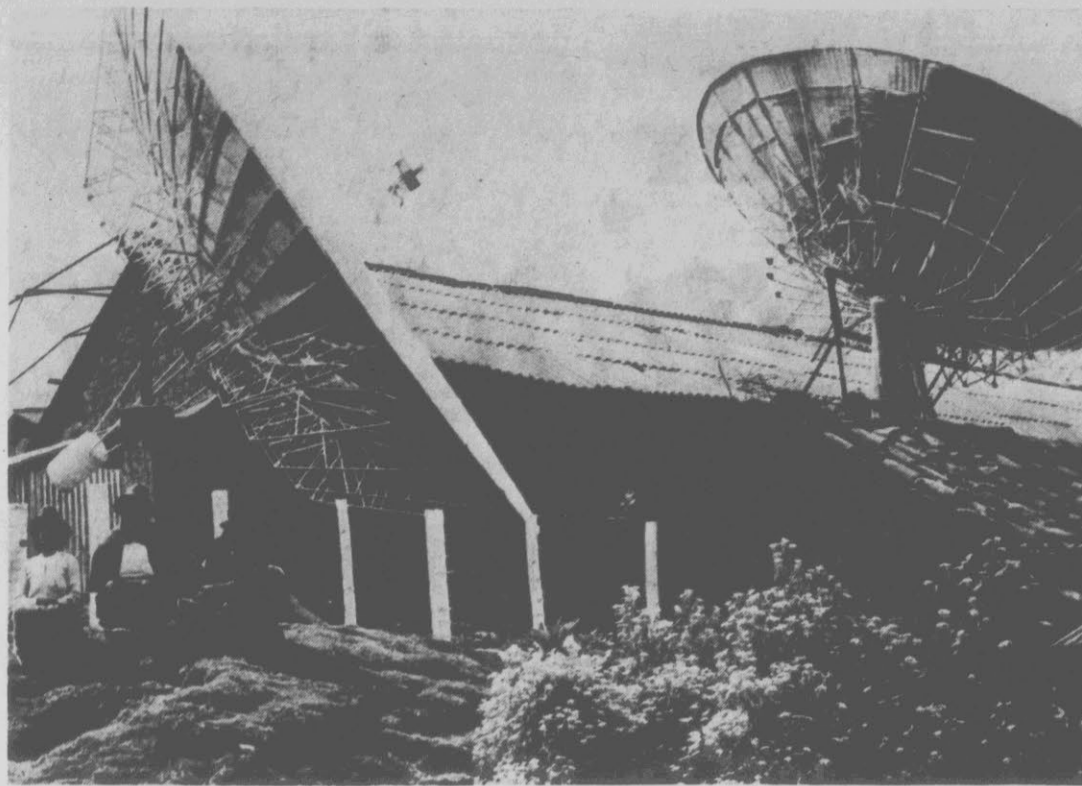

For thousands of peasants, television is providing the first images of places beyond the primitiveness and isolation of their own rugged existence. Experts see both positive and negative influences in this exposure to the airwaves.

Advocates of TV's proliferation stress the medium's educational potential. But others worry that current programming — particularly its heavy reliance on U.S.-made series dubbed into Spanish — is suffocating folk cultures and stunting the growth of national identities.

Moreover, some specialists contend that TV is contributing to a swelling migration of villagers to urban shantytowns. Lured by pictures of city life, peasants have been abandoning their impoverished communities in growing numbers.

Pashby's project is one of the most dramatic examples of TV's penetration. He built his first giant antenna with the help of local youths, who hammered and shaped sheets of corrugated tin from a discarded schoolhouse roof. Aiming the homemade metal dish skyward, the priest spent weeks trying to locate one of the many TV satellites that circle the Equator. At last he picked up a signal: a Mickey Mouse cartoon in Spanish from Argentina.

Since then, Pashby has learned to beam in programs from Lima to London. As his living room fills every evening, the soft-spoken, amiable 54-year-old cleric known here as "Padre Jeremias" is besieged with requests for such favorites as "Miami Vice," "Knight Rider" and "Diff'rent Strokes."

"These people have literally been walled in by the mountains for generations," said Pashby, who was sent to South America 25 years ago by the Society of St. James in Boston. "Little of the outside world gets here. No newspapers, no magazines. Now with TV, people want to watch all they can get."

A Canadian entrepreneur did something similar in Iquitos, a jungle city in northeastern Peru. He installed a parabolic antenna a few years ago and linked viewers there with cable connections. More often, though, to receive TV broadcasts Peru's isolated communities end up collecting funds on their own for the purchase of a microwave tower.

The multiplication of TV sets has been phenomenal. Gladys Otero, director of programming at Peru's state-run Channel 7, estimates that the number of sets nationwide has doubled since 1984, to roughly 4 million. Assuming an average of four viewers per set, Otero figures that 16 million of the country's 22 million people can now tune in.

Unfortunately, what they see on most channels tends to have little to do with Peruvian reality. "Latin America is the region of the world with the highest level of imported TV programs," said Rafael Roncagliolo, director of the Lima-based Center of Studies about Transnational Culture. "About 60 percent of the programs are imported, and about 80 percent of those come from the United States."

Some networks in Brazil, Mexico, Colombia and Venezuela produce sophisticated and popular telenovelas, or soap operas, that compete with U.S.-made series. But most Latin American stations lack the money to make high-quality programs.

"Although laws exist mandating a certain percentage of national programming — 60 percent in Peru, 50 percent in Venezuela and Colombia, 30 percent in Ecuador and Bolivia — they are not realized," a recent study by Roncagliolo's organization concluded.

Preoccupied with problems of terrorism, inflation and poverty, Latin American governments have little time to think about improving television. But thanks to increasingly cheap and compact forms of TV-related technology, people like Pashby have begun to take matters into their own hands.

The American priest is convinced that TV can become an important teaching tool. Using a video camera and enlisting local teen-agers as actors, he has put together a series of short video spots on dishwashing, bathing, lavatory habits, breast feeding and the proper treatment of children with diarrhea (a principal cause of infant mortality). With a small transmitting antenna on top of his house, Pashby hopes to broadcast the blurbs — in Quechua, the language of the Peruvian Andes — during commercial breaks in the programs he intercepts.

Ocobamba's population is only about 400, but Pashby's parish spans the upper part of Apurimac Province and includes thousands of Peru's poorest and most isolated citizens. Pashby dreams of eventually rigging

A modest recovery in gross domestic investment began in Latin America in 1984 and continued in 1985, reaching nearly $130 billion that year. The rise, however, failed to continue in 1986, says the Inter-American Development Bank. Increases recorded in 1986 in Argentina, Chile, Peru and Venezuela were offset by a significant decline in Mexico, a smaller drop in Colombia, and virtually no change in Brazil.

TV sets, video cameras and minitransmitters into a regional two-way communication system.

Impressed with the results so far, a government development agency has funded parabolic antennas for two other tiny villages — Uripa and Huaccana — at a cost of about $1,200 each. Pashby, meanwhile, has put up a second dish here to give viewers a choice of stations.

The people of Ocobamba are sold on TV. "My kids are more alert now as a result of television," said Jorge Palacios, a child care instructor who lives beside the giant saucers and recently bought a TV. "Television is helping to educate us. It has advanced us more than anything."

Yet not everyone is enthusiastic. "Sooner or later, television was bound to arrive, but why rush it?" asked Pierre de Paep, a Belgian doctor in nearby Andahuaylas. "The aim should be to try to fortify local culture, but most TV programming has little to do with Indian culture."

Some Indian customs do survive here, but as Pashby and others note, Ocobamba is hardly a preserve of Inca civilization. One out of three people born here die in infancy, and most of the rest do not live past age 40.

Pashby acknowledges that the consequences of bringing TV here are not entirely predictable, but he argues that its advantages are already evident. He says television has awakened villagers to the size and diversity of the rest of the world, made them more curious about how things are done elsewhere and caused them to be more attentive to caring for their own health, houses and work.

"I know," said the priest, "that some people ask why bring television here, as if TV is impure and will ruin some kind of natural state. But the notion that a Shangri-La exists in this place and needs protecting just isn't true. Besides, don't these people have a right to expand their horizons like everyone else?"

Waterway Splits South Carolina County In Two

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — Until about 50 years ago it didn't exist.

Then men, who envisioned commercial ships and barges traveling inland throughout the East Coast, plotted a route across Horry County and dug out 23 miles of dirt to connect Little River with the Waccamaw River in 1936.

By the time it was finished, trucking had begun to replace shipping as the nation's primary transportation. So the winding, tree-lined waterway was left to pleasure craft, but it had already done something else.

The Intracoastal Waterway split the county in two parts, separating the people on one side from the other. The significance of the division has been debated, exaggerated and downplayed, but it has served as a reference point for those who live in Horry County ever since its inception.

From that date on, people in the west could cross the beach in just three places throughout the almost 50-mile wide county — in Socastee, along U.S. 501 and in Little River.

Now, it still hems development in on the eastern side, except in those areas where bridges exist. And, in the past, there have been calls to split the area into two counties along the waterway.

"It's made for a geographic barrier," said former Horry County librarian Catherine Lewis. "There are differences in income and lifestyles. For almost any term you can speak of, it is a line of demarcation."

The lay of the land has created most differences. The Atlantic Ocean has made tourism profitable in the east and the fertile rural land made farming possible in the west.

Those geographical and occupational differences have led to more distinctions. Particularly in the east, that has meant change.

Newcomers have brought Republicans into a solidly Democratic county. They have also brought Catholic, Lutheran and Presbyterian churches into a primarily Baptist and Methodist population.

And on the other side of the Intracoastal Waterway, the western side, people had to react to the changes. They had to learn how to balance their new-found advantages — a greater tax base, new stores, recreational activities — without losing their heritage.

Russell Holliday's family started their Galivants Ferry business in 1869, 67 years before the waterway was built. By 1974, when Ms. Holliday left to make her own way in New York, the family, through its involvements in business and politics, was known to most people in Horry County.

But when Ms. Holliday came back in 1985, after working as the marketing director at Redbook magazine and cosmetic marketing director at Town and Country, things had changed.

"I was surprised when I'd run into people and they had never heard of Galivants Ferry or Hollidays," said Ms. Holliday, who now lives in Myrtle Beach and commutes to work at the family business on the other side of the county.

Ms. Holliday, who was pleased by the new metropolitan atmosphere that grew up in the Myrtle Beach area while she was gone, chose to live on the east side of the waterway, because she knew there was more to do and more people her age — in their 30s.

Living in a cosmopolitan area offers more than a wide variety of activities. It also provides an education that people don't get in small towns, said Robert Wilkes, pastor of First Presbyterian Church in Myrtle Beach.

Wilkes, who grew up in the relatively small town of Orangeburg in the '50s and '60s, contrasted his childhood to what his three children have in Myrtle Beach.

"Then everybody was pretty much like me," Wilkes said. "The boys have been exposed to people of Indian origins, Jewish origins, Asian origins, much more so than I was. It gives them a broader view of things. It breaks down barriers."

Those nationalities bring with them parts of their culture, which includes things like a variety of restaurants, said Bill Nagel, who retired to North Myrtle Beach eight years ago from Philadelphia.

"It makes for a richer community, it seems to me," he said, adding, "The differences in lifestyle may where the most to parents about when they still raise their children."

Anne Collins, who raised her children in Conway, said she recently discussed this issue with a friend who moved to the beach area.

"I said it would be easier to bring a child up in Conway — not so close to the temptations," Collins said. "She maintains that since they're so close, they could just hop in a car anyway."

Values differ on people and not where they live, Mrs. Collins added. "The friends I have on that side are deeply committed to family and church."

Development causes a "rising spiral effect," historian Lewis said. The eagerness to develop more land throughout the county leads to higher populations and that brings water and sewer and other improvements. "Myrtle Beach to Horry County,"

Natural Bridge's Fate Up In Air

ing to Winston Brownlee Tolley, who managed the place for the old owners and is staying on for the new ones. Tolley grew up in the village of Natural Bridge of miles to the east, and recalls the days when two railroads brought visitors to the geologic curiosity.

Though Jefferson speculated that his wonder was the result of some cataclysm, geologists today theorize that the 90-foot wide bridge is all that is left of a deep tunnel that was created when a prehistoric stream meandered into a crack in the soft limestone, and gradually created an underground river. The roof of the tunnel eventually collapsed except for one 40-foot thick slab that is so strong it carries Virginia Rte. 11 across its top.

Like many of the old Virginia mountain inns and resorts, Natural Bridge lost a lot of traffic once air conditioning was invented and summer in the cities became more tolerable. When the kids can choose between living history at Williamsburg and death-defying rides at Busch Gardens, it is hard to drag them four hours out Interstate 66 and down I-81 to stroll beneath a chunk of eroded calcite, even if there is a wax museum and a cave thrown in.

But people have been coming here for centuries. Jefferson put up a log cabin to shelter the visitors, and every guide to the New World listed it as a must-see. About 250,000 people went through the turnstiles last year, producing almost $1 million in admissions, plus whatever the gift shops, dining rooms and hotels brought in.

The attraction is profitable, Tolley says, but as a business it never was a major source of income for its most recent owners, shareholders of a closely held corporation that bought the place back in the 1940s. Much of the corporation's stock was in the hands of heirs who were more interested in cash than in owning a piece of the rock that gave Rockbridge its name.

Tolley says the first changes will be to improve the marketing plan to let people know Natural Bridge is still there and to spruce up the facilities. He dreams of a golf course there isn't one in Rockbridge County now — and of 1,400 unused acres that could be transformed into vacation homes, even condominiums.

Local residents say the idea of condos is a lot less frightening in Rockbridge County than unemployment, a definite threat what with the Lees carpet plant over in Glasgow cutting back. Nor do they express concern about the county's namesake being sold to Yankees.

The state of Virginia has looked at buying Natural Bridge now and again, but the legislature didn't want to get into the hotel business and the owners weren't about to sell the bridge by itself. The bridge has been on the market for a couple of years, but rather than try to get the state to buy it, Rockbridge politicians used their clout to get the legislature to put a new $10 million state horse center in their county.

"I don't think anybody cares who owns it as long as they do something with it," said Melinda Newcomb, who works at Glasgow Video and Outdoors, a satellite dish, fishing tackle and gun store a couple of miles down the road.

Nobody who knows Angelo Puglisi thinks he bought the bridge just to balance his Ocean City investments with some mountain property or because he wanted his name to turn up on a real estate title search as a successor to Thomas Jefferson.

That's probably not going to happen, anyway, because of the way Puglisi structured the deal. He didn't actually buy the bridge or the land; he bought the corporation that owns them. Savvy Washington real estate investors have been putting together deals like this for some time now. Because the real estate still belongs to the same corporation, no real estate transfer taxes have to be paid on the sale. And because there is no new deed to record, no one knows for sure who owns the property.

I Was Sent Back In Time

By Sarah Rose

My name is Sarah. I'm a famous scientist. I think my best friend is the President of the United States. That's probably why President Reagan chose me to go back in time in a newly invented time machine that would go back to the time of the dinosaur! All the scientists had been puzzling over the mystery of dinosaurs for years, and now I had been chosen to go back in time to play an important role for earth. At first I was scared, but then I realized that if I did it right, I really would be famous. So I decided to tell the President that I would go. "Good!" President Reagan said. "You will go tomorrow."

"TOMORROW!" I yelled. "That's not enough time!" President Reagan said,

"Then I will choose someone else." He looked in the direction of a scientist with a pleading look on his face. I didn't have a chance or any time to think, so I said, "O.K. Force Me!" Then I went home to pack.

The next morning I told my husband and two children what I had to do and I left because I had to do some shopping first. My first stop was the grocery store. Then I got a movable tent. I went to the pound to get a good guard dog. I needed the tent to sleep in and the dog to guard me at night. All I needed was a dinosaur stepping on me.

At last I was ready to get into the time machine. I stepped in and pressed all the buttons I needed. Then I turned the knob to the picture that said dinosaur time, and I was off! I was really excited!

But when I got there, I felt sick! I had landed in the water, and standing beside me was a Brontosaurus. I laid back in the time machine and thought about what to do. I decided to fake him out! I was an expert in volleyball, and in volleyball, you do a lot of faking out! I went up to the top of the time machine and dove off. I was also an expert in swimming and could swim very fast. I quickly swam to land.

I started out to try and find a good place to set up my tent to sleep in because it had taken a while to travel all the way back to dinosaur time. Before it got dark, I found some old skin and a dry bone. Then I tied my dog to a stake of my tent and went to sleep. That night I was awakened at about 12:30 to a loud thundering sound. It was a Triceratops who had awakened hungrily and was looking for something to eat. But that was the only time I was awakened that night.

In the morning after I had my breakfast of Raisin Bran with sugar, I found an old skeleton head. I thought that was all I could fit into the time machine, plus me and all my stuff.

When I reached home, there was a big parade for ME! After that, I retired. That was enough science adventure for me.

Sarah Rose, 9, a student at Falkland Elementary School wins this week's writing contest.

The Mouse On Roller Skates

By Kenny Windham

One day I was riding my bike on Wilson Street when all of a sudden I saw a mouse on roller skates. I couldn't believe my eyes! So, I looked again to make sure, sure enough it was true! This mouse was different. He had big, big feet. He was brown and black and white. I rolled my bike in front of the mouse and I picked him up. I asked, "Why are you on roller skates?" He told me it was because a cat was after him. The he saw some roller skates and knew it would be quicker. I asked him if he would be my pet. He said O.K.

Kenny Windham, 10, a student at Sam D. Bundy School receives special mention.

Heroines

By Maria Hoffman

Once I looked in the paper and saw a picture about a robbery. I said to myself, only heroines can solve this mystery! I went zooming out the door. My mother asked, "Where are you going?" I said, "I'm going to find a robber." When I got close to the bank, I ran right into the robber. He was still running from a second robbery. I didn't know it was the robber. The police gave me the bag of gold and I was a heroine.

Maria Hoffman, 7, a student at Third Street School receives special mention.

Today is a rainy day.
There is no time to play.
Rain thumping on the roof.
Thunder crashing.
The sky turning gray.
The grass getting a drink.
Trees swaying side to side.

As the rain falls,
It puts me to sleep.

I'd Like To Be An Astronaut

By Phil Dixon, Jr.

When I grow up I want to be an astronaut. I wonder what is 20,000 light years away. Being an astronaut would be fun if it would happen in exactly the year 2000. I will be 20 years old. I might find another life force. I'd like to be an astronaut. Who knows what I might find.

Phil Dixon, Jr., 7, a student at W.H. Robinson School receives special mention.

The bidding:
South West North East
1♥ Pass 4♥ Pass
Pass Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♣ How often have you heard someone remark: "If only I knew the distribution!" On this hand, the exact lie of the cards was revealed at the third trick, and declarer put that information to maximum use to land an "impossible" contract.

North's jump to four hearts was preemptive. While East was tempted to act on his distributional hand, the vulnerability was against him—when you are vulnerable and the opponents are not, discretion is almost always the better part of valor.

West led his ace of spades and, despite East's encouraging ten, shifted to the ace of diamonds and another. To South's surprise, East discarded a spade on this trick.

It took declarer only a few moments to work out the whole hand. Since West did not continue with a spade but, instead, shifted to an unsupported ace in another suit, he had obviously started with a bare ace of spades. East's discard on the second diamond and his failure to ruff marked him with no trumps and only one diamond. Therefore, West's distribution was 1-3-5-4.

That was all declarer needed to make one of West's trump tricks go up in smoke.

He cashed the ace-king of clubs for two spade sluffs from dummy. Then he ruffed a club, discarded a spade on the king of diamonds and ruffed a diamond. Another club ruff was followed by another diamond ruff in the closed hand, which reduced declarer, dummy and West each to nothing but three trumps.

Declarer simply exited with his lowest trump. West won, but he was then forced to lead away from his king of trumps into declarer's tenace, so the only losers were one trick in each suit except clubs.

Versatile Pancakes Not Just A Breakfast Meal

By Tom Sietema
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Granted, there exist a lot of single-subject cookbooks on the market — bagels, garlic and morels have been among the exclusive topics explored by devotees of those foods in recent years.

Still, a book devoted solely to pancakes sounds like a pretty slim volume. After all, how many different recipes can you create from a simple batter of flour, water, eggs and butter?

Plenty, discovered caterer Dorian Leigh Parker of Fete Accomplie in Washington.

In fact, Parker, the author of the forthcoming cookbook "Pancakes" (Clarkson N. Potter, $10.95), says she could probably write a second book using the recipes she couldn't fit into her recent compilation of more than 60 recipes.

Those who associate pancakes with breakfast will be surprised to see that about a third of the collection is devoted to such savories as Persian spinach pancakes, red pepper pancakes and pancakes made with zucchini, paprika and plantains.

And while pancakes are easy to whip up, the book underscores their versatility in dishes as deliciously simple as pumpkin pancakes with cinnamon syrup, or as dressy as herbed crepes plumped with roquefort cheese.

Ironically, it was an interest in fashion rather than food that launched Parker's culinary career, which was preceded by years spent modeling for Harper's Bazaar, Vogue and other high-fashion publications. While she passed evenings dressed in haute couture, Parker reminisced recently, her days were spent pursuing haute cuisine, at the Cordon Bleu cooking school.

Later, as the owner of a modeling agency, she was known for catering her own parties for the fashion press. Yet while her resume includes teaching stints at the Paris American Academy and La Varenne cooking school and heading a restaurant, Chez Dorian, outside Paris, Parker is perhaps best known as Revlon's famous "Fire and Ice" girl.

"Pancakes" is her focus these days, however, and having tested scores of recipes for the book, Parker offers some expert advice on successful pancake-making:

—Start with the proper equipment. Parker prefers a black cast-iron griddle over an aluminum model,

COLORFUL, DELICIOUS — Party-perfect Pita Pizzas look like classic health spa specialties and are just 263 calories per serving. The colorful topping of garlic-seasoned vegetables gets its rich, buttery flavor from all natural butter flavor sprinkles. At only 4 calories per half teaspoon, this dieters' essential adds real-butter flavor without the calories of butter or margarine.

Slice Calories From Favorite Foods With Savvy Substitution

Gone are the days when a calorie-controlled meal meant bouillon, cottage cheese and all the celery you could eat. Today, dieters know it's savvy, not sacrifice, that leads to successful slimming.

To make dieting more interesting, rely on savvy substitution to create slimmed-down versions of favorite foods. Select cooking methods which add no fat, such as baking, broiling and steaming, and restrict the use of cheese, cream, butter, margarine and other fats, which can have as many as 100 tablespoons per tablespoon.

Pita Pizzas are a classic example of calorie-cutting substitution. As picture-perfect as any health spa specialty, these appealing pizzas use low calorie pita bread in place of a classic crust, and a colorful mélange of garlic-seasoned vegetables in place of fatty cheese and sausage toppings. The rich, buttery flavor that makes the pizzas taste like pure indulgence is provided by All Natural Butter Flavor Sprinkles. Virtually fat free, it adds fabulous real-butter flavor at only 4 calories per half-teaspoon serving.

For a slimming appetizer before your pizza entree, Savory Stuffed Mushrooms are ideal. Filled with a mixture of chopped mushroom stems, shallots, herbs, a sprinkling of grated parmesan cheese and butter flavor sprinkles, the mushroom caps bake to buttery flavor perfection in just 15 minutes. With a super-low 35 calories per serving, they're a perfect party starter even for the most calorie-conscious guest.

For additional slim-line recipes, send for a free copy of "Pure Indulgence — Eating Light and Lean with Molly McButter." This information packed brochure is filled with recipes, serving suggestions and tips for cutting calories while keeping the flavor. For a complimentary copy, send name and address to: Molly McButter Pure Indulgence, 2525 Armitage Avenue, Dept. N3B, Melrose Park, Ill., 60160.

Sugar-Free Desserts Are Healthy Choices

Even though bikini season is just around the corner you can still welcome Spring with a tempting dessert; just make it sugar free! Savvy slimmers, and those who know avoiding sugar is smart, opt for delightful delicacies that aren't loaded with empty, waist expanding sugar calories.

That doesn't mean finishing every meal with a slice of melon or half a grapefruit. Now thanks to sugar substitutes, like SugarTwin, once wickedly rich desserts taste as sweet but don't have the sugar penalty. SugarTwin is a spoon-for-spoon replacement product for sugar and can be heated for long periods and used in baking. Therefore, it is possible to convert your old favorites.

Why not surprise family or friends with a special sugar-free, guilt free dessert that is a symphony of textures and looks as good as it tastes. Spring Eggs in Vanilla Sauce is a sensible sugar-free update of Floating Island. The essential taste and integrity of this classic are captured yet yogurt replaces heavy cream, SugarTwin replaces sugar, and orange zests replace the spun sugar garnish.

It just makes sense — good food, no sugar, healthy living and a slim figure go hand-in-hand.

SPRING EGGS

- 3 egg whites, reserve yolks
- 1 tablespoon SugarTwin
- 6 toasted almonds cut into slivers for garnish
- 1 orange cut skin into 12 orange zests

- Vanilla Sauce
- 1 cup skimmed milk
- 1 tsp. vanilla
- 3 egg yolks

- 2 tablespoons SugarTwin
- 5 ounces low-fat natural yogurt

To make Spring Eggs: beat egg whites until soft peaks form. Continue beating adding a little SugarTwin at a time. Beat until stiff peaks form.

Heat milk in large shallow pan. Spoon or pipe (with a pastry bag and tube) 12 Spring Eggs into the milk. Simmer gently for about 4 minutes or until Spring Eggs look set. Remove Spring Eggs carefully with a slotted spoon and set aside. Drain remaining milk into a bowl thru a clean cloth towel or cheese-cloth.

Poultry Products Ease Menu Woes

By Beverly Barham
N.C. Poultry Federation

are filled with occasions for entertaining, graduations, bridal parties, recitals, showers, debutante parties,

May Day, Mother's Day, Father's Day, the Fourth of July, Labor Day and so on and so on. Poultry food products are a great menu-choice for all these entertaining occasions so it seems fitting that April, the month when warm weather entertaining seems to really get under way, be declared Poultry and Egg Month in the state by the Governor of North Carolina, James G. Martin.

Not only is poultry food a great tasting and nutritious choice for entertaining, but it is also easy on the budget. Poultry meat products are also now widely available in many further processed forms. Both chicken and turkey is marketed in the form of coldcuts. Turkey meat can be purchased smoked and in the form of cured, fully-cooked ham. Chicken is readily available in supermarkets in North Carolina as chicken hotdogs, chicken bologna, etc.

Kathy Kolasa

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

Dear Readers: "KNOW YOUR CHOLESTEROL. What you don't know can hurt you," says Drs. Kirk Ways and William Wheeler of the Department of Medicine. They, along with nutritionist, Sue Daughtry, invite you to participate in a Cholesterol Screening and Special Cholesterol Information Program sponsored by the ECU School of Medicine, in cooperation with the Pitt County Health Department.

Both events are in the Brody Auditorium of the ECU School of Medicine on Tuesday. Screenings run from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. Dr. Ways, Dr. Wheeler and Ms. Daughtry will speak from 7:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m.

Q: We moved here a few months ago. It seems we see so many overweight people here, old and young. We cannot believe the amount of soda consumed here and sweetened tea. At restaurants everything is fried! We were unhappy to learn that broiled shrimp cost extra in a restaurant we dined in. I think ECU should be putting on programs to help people understand calories and cholesterol. A Concerned Citizen.

A: It is not a surprise to many of us health professionals who have chosen to work in this region, that the public's concern about weight control, diet and exercise seen in other parts of the country, have not caught on as rapidly in the entire South. Most national statistics show health trends and fats begin in the west and northeast. But, good and positive changes in food habits are being made here in the Southeast. Pat and I have noticed more choices on restaurant menus that are health promoting in the five years we've been here. There are many good things about the diets here. For example, in Michigan, parents complained to me about children refusing vegetables and fruits. That is a rare complaint here. Also, people in this area have not tended to overeat foods from the meat food group like folks in the Southwest. But, the high incidence of heart disease, hypertension, diabetes, and obesity in eastern North Carolina prove that changes in food habits are needed. For months, I've been writing about the amount of fat used to season and cook foods here. I do share your concern about the amount of sweetened beverages that folks drink — juice, soda, and tea. Juice can be a big contributor of many extra calories, making weight control difficult. And, that goes for soda or sweetened tea, too. And, sweetened drinks in baby bottles can contribute to tooth decay.

The cholesterol program I wrote about today is one program ECU has planned to help people understand the role diet plays in their health. Take heart, I am impressed by the growing interest our citizens, the grocery stores, and restaurants that serve them, have in health promoting food habits.

Dr. Kolasa can be contacted at the Dept. Family Medicine or c/o The Daily Reflector.

TEMPTING TREAT — Orange laced Spring Eggs in Vanilla Sauce is a tempting sugar-free dessert and is pretty enough to be served on a sweets buffet or alone as an after-theater treat.

A Touch Of Spice Is Nice Change Of Pace For Spring

By Bernadette Wheeler
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Think spring, and thoughts of early vegetables — young carrots, sweet peas, new asparagus and sprightly spinach — may come to mind.

For the first satisfying tastes, or indeed, for most times, all these babies need are a brief time in the cooking pot and a touch of butter to make happy eating.

But when there's a hankering for change of pace and seasoning, zap them with a touch of India — spicily aromatic or just a spark of fire.

The rice pilaf is from Julie Sahni's "Classic Indian Vegetarian and Grain Cooking," and the carrot salad from Madhur Jaffrey's "Indian Cooking." The spinach was adapted from "The Bombay Palace Cookbook" by Stendhal, while the treatment of asparagus, which is not much known in India, was adapted from a recipe in "Royal Indian Cookery" by Manju Shivraj Singh.

SPICY SWEET-PEA PILAF

- 2 cups basmati (or long-grain) rice
- 4 tablespoons light vegetable oil
- 1 1/2 teaspoons cumin seed
- 1/2 cup minced onion
- 1 teaspoon minced garlic
- 1 teaspoon grated or crushed fresh ginger
- 2 bay leaves
- 1/4 teaspoon ground cloves
- 1/3 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1/4 teaspoon black peppers
- 2 to 4 hot green chiles, minced
- 2 cups shelled sweet peas (or 10-ounce package frozen)

1 1/2 teaspoons coarse salt
1. Wash the basmati rice in several changes of water and put it in a bowl with water to cover the rice by an inch. Soak for a half-hour and drain.

2. While the rice is soaking, bring 3 1/2 to 4 quarts of water to a boil.

3. In a large skillet, heat the oil over medium-high heat. Add the cumin seeds. When the cumin turns dark brown (about 12 seconds), add the onion. Fry the onion, stirring constantly, until golden brown (6 to 8 minutes). Add the garlic, ginger and bay leaves; continue cooking for another 2 minutes.

4. Add the cloves, cinnamon, pepper and chile; let sizzle for 15 to 30 seconds, then immediately add the peas and salt. Stir well to mix. Reduce the heat to very low and let the peas steam, covered, while you cook the rice.

5. Add the rice to the boiling water. Stir to make sure rice does not settle at the bottom of the pan. Bring to a boil and cook rapidly, uncovered, for 4 minutes. Immediately drain the rice in a large sieve or colander, shaking it thoroughly to remove all excess moisture.

6. Immediately add the rice to the steaming pea mixture. Gently mix, turning and folding the rice to blend it. Cover and let the rice steam over low heat for 10 minutes. Turn off heat. Let the rice rest, covered and undisturbed for 15 minutes. Uncover, fluff the rice with a fork and serve. Makes 8 servings.

CARROT AND ONION SALAD

- 3 carrots, about 1/2 pound
- 1 medium onion, peeled
- 3/4 teaspoon salt
- Freshly ground black pepper
- 4 teaspoons lemon juice
- 1/8 to 1/4 teaspoon cayenne pepper
- 1/2 teaspoon peeled and finely grated fresh ginger

1. Peel carrots and cut them crosswise and at a diagonal into 1/8-inch-thick oval slices. Cut the slices lengthwise into 1/8-inch-wide strips.

2. Halve the onion lengthwise and then cut it crosswise into 1/8-inch-thick slices.

3. Bring 10 cups of water to a rolling boil. Put in the carrots. Bring to a boil again. Boil rapidly for 2 seconds only. Drain the carrots immediately and rinse them under cold, running water. Drain again.

4. Combine the carrots, onion, salt, black pepper, lemon juice, cayenne pepper and ginger. Stir to mix. May be served immediately or several hours later, cold or at room temperature. Makes 6 servings.

SPICED SPINACH

- 2 pounds fresh spinach
 - 1 teaspoon salt
 - 4 tablespoons butter
 - 2 medium onions, sliced paper-thin and separated into rings
 - 1 walnut-size piece fresh ginger, minced
 - 1/2 to 1 green chile (or to taste), seeded and chopped fine
 - 1 teaspoon turmeric
1. Wash spinach thoroughly and place it with the salt in a wok or large saucepan, with only the water that clings to the leaves. Cook over high heat, stirring constantly, for 1 minute. Reduce heat to medium and cook for 3 minutes, stirring occasionally. Drain the spinach and chop it coarsely.

2. In a wok or heavy skillet, heat the butter and add onions, ginger and chiles. Stir-fry until onions are golden. Add the turmeric, stir and cook for about 1 minute. Add the spinach, raise heat to medium and stir until most of the moisture has evaporated,

2 to 3 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

ASPARAGUS IN YOGURT

- 1 1/2 pounds asparagus
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 1/4 teaspoon ground coriander
- 1/4 teaspoon ground cumin
- 2 cups plain yogurt
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- Salt and white or black pepper to taste
- 1 teaspoon roasted cumin seed (see note)

1. Clean asparagus and cut on the diagonal into 1 1/2-inch pieces. Heat butter in saucepan or skillet, add coriander and cumin and cook for 1 minute, stirring; add asparagus and stir to coat with spices; stir-fry for 4 to 5 minutes or until crisp-tender. Remove from heat; let come to room temperature, or refrigerate until 1/2 hour before serving.

2. Lightly beat the yogurt and add the sugar, salt, pepper. Mix well. Add the asparagus and mix or spoon yogurt on top. Sprinkle with roasted cumin seeds. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Dining Club Thrives On Pleasures Of The Table

By CATALINA ORTIZ
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The lighting is soft, the food and wine exquisite, the conversation witty and sophisticated — ingredients for a perfect evening.

But the men and women at the elegant restaurant are more interested in salmon mousse than sizzling amour. Dalliance, though welcome, is not the goal of The Single Gourmet — a less romantic but frequently more satisfying pleasure lies behind the organization with about 10,000 members in North America.

"It's probably the best way to meet people," said Art Fischer, who began the club in New York in 1982. "It's not a dating agency. It's not a matrimonial agency. It's a dining club. We try to bring people together for good food and congenial conversation."

The organization's recipe, stirred by changes in courtship and fascination with the arts of the kitchen, has been successful. The New York branch has grown to 2,600 members, and 14 independent chapters have opened in the United States and Canada, Fischer said in a telephone interview.

Members pay up to $75 a year to join The Single Gourmet and $25-50, not including wine, for meals at restaurants or on other outings. Most are upper-middle-class professionals — lawyers, business executives, stockbrokers and doctors, Fischer said.

In keeping with the classy, low-key approach, members are not afflicted with name tags, but are identified discreetly at tables of six to 10 with placecards bearing only first names.

In San Francisco, about 35 members of The Single Gourmet recently enjoyed salmon tellurini, pear and parsnip soup, lamb with couscous and other specialties of California cuisine at Cafe Majestic, a popular restaurant in a restored Victorian hotel.

"I've wanted to come to this restaurant ever since it opened, but I never dared come by myself," said Jenny, 49, a medical secretary. "So this is a real option for me."

The chapter, about 18 months old, has about 270 members in the Bay area. One member travels from Nevada to attend its dinners, winery tours and other functions, which occur about twice a month.

Some regulars simply find The Single Gourmet a way to fit a social life into their busy schedules.

"It forces you to go out. For instance, I would not on a Tuesday night go out to Cafe Majestic or someplace like it," said Louis Scalfani, a designer in his 30s.

"It gives you a nice experience trying different restaurants and lets you experiment without, as a single man, having to go out on a date," he said.

Others, like Gary Sternitzke, first used the club as a way to learn about good restaurants and find friends in a new city. He was hooked when he ended up belly dancing at a Moroccan restaurant at the first Single Gourmet dinner he attended a year and a half ago.

Sternitzke, 35, credits the club for introducing him — a native of the Midwest raised on "meat-and-potatoes stuff" — to culinary adventure.

"I've tasted food I can't even say," he said. "And I've tried food when I've asked them not to tell me what it is until I've eaten it."

But all the diners agreed they hadn't joined The Single Gourmet as a singles club or dating service.

"I just enjoy meeting people. If it was single and married people, I'd probably join then, too," said Jeanne Swift, who began attending dinners six months ago.

Jenny, who declined to give her last name, said sex wasn't a factor in the civilized pleasure of enjoying food with others.

"When you're eating lovely food, you want to look across the table and say, 'This is wonderful; you must have a taste,'" she said. "I don't care if it's with men or women."

But changing sexual behavior has definitely helped The Single Gourmet, members and coordinators said.

"It just seemed like an idea that came at the right time," Fischer said.

Pancakes

and soapstone over either. (Soapstone, while more expensive, distributes heat most evenly.)

—Don't forget to season the griddle. Simply dab a paper towel with vegetable oil (any kind but olive oil, which leaves a flavor), add more oil to a depth of about 1/8 inch, then place the pan over medium heat for 15 minutes. Allow the pan to cool, pour out the excess, and wipe the skillet clean with a paper towel. Thereafter, brush the griddle with oil (or butter or bacon fat for more flavor) before each use.

—To lift rough spots and prevent sticking, scour the pan with coarse salt. Never use powder or metal abrasives.

—Lastly, to keep pancakes warm while cooking the remaining batter, place them in an oven-proof dish in a 200-degree oven — stacking them atop one another makes for flabby pancakes.

Parker discovered while researching her subject that pancakes are an easy way to pack extra nutrition in a meal. Here's one way the author got her grandchildren to eat carrots:

Express-lane list: carrots, eggs, milk, mace (optional), oranges, apple, honey.

PETER RABBIT PANCAKES

(Makes 8 to 10 pancakes to serve about 4)

2 cups grated carrots, loosely packed (about 3 medium carrots)
1/2 cup unbleached, all-purpose flour

2 eggs, well beaten
1/4 cup milk
1/4 teaspoon mace (optional)
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
For The Orange Hash:
2 seedless navel oranges
1 small eating apple
2 tablespoons honey

In a large bowl, mix the carrots and flour with a fork. Stir in the eggs and milk. Flavor with mace, if desired. Mix thoroughly.

Heat a griddle over moderate heat until a drop of water hisses on contact. Stir the oil into the batter, and using a full 1/4-cup measure, drop the batter onto the griddle. Spread with the back of the measuring cup into 3- to 3 1/2-inch rounds. When they are brown on the bottom, about 2 minutes, turn them to brown the other side. The cakes will be pleasingly shaggy in appearance. Keep them warm in a 200-degree oven until the remaining cakes are made.

Serve two pancakes to each person, with a scoop of Orange Hash on the side.

To make the Orange Hash: Cut the peel and pith off the oranges with a sharp knife. Remove the central pith and separate the fruit into sections. Drop into the food processor. Peel and core the apple, cut in chunks, and add to the orange sections. Pulse the food processor on and off until the apple is in tiny pieces and all the orange membrane has been chopped small. Do not puree the fruit.

Pour the mixture into a strainer placed over a bowl, reserving the liquid for another use. Place the hash in a small bowl and stir in the honey. Mix thoroughly. (This makes about 1 cup.)

SAVORY STUFFED MUSHROOMS

1/2 pound large mushrooms, washed stems removed and reserved
3 teaspoons butter flavor sprinkles
1 tablespoon minced shallots
1/2 teaspoon sherry extract or water

1 tablespoon dried bread crumbs
1 tablespoon grated Parmesan or Romano cheese
1 tablespoon minced parsley
1/4 teaspoon minced fresh tarragon or 1/8 teaspoon dried Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Lightly sprinkle mushroom caps with 1 teaspoon Molly McButter; place hollow side up in baking dish. Chop reserved stems; cook, with shallots, in non-stick skillet, stirring frequently until mushrooms begin to brown. Remove from heat. Add remaining 2 teaspoons butter flavor sprinkles, sherry extract, bread crumbs, cheese, parsley and tarragon; mix well. Fill mushroom caps; bake for 15 minutes or until tender. Serve hot. Makes 4 servings.

Scientific Report Offers A Few Nutritional Surprises

By Carole Sugarman
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

A scientific committee has urged the federal government to revise outdated regulations that encourage the production of fatty meat and dairy products.

But aside from being a call to improve the food supply, the report by the National Research Council committee is largely a documentation of American eating habits, food trends and consumer behavior.

"Designing Foods" is chock full of facts and figures that can be analyzed and extrapolated into some pretty surprising conclusions. Among them:

1. Most people don't know which grade of beef is the leanest.

According to a Farm Journal survey conducted in 1986, when asked what grade of beef had the least fat, 56 percent of the national sample of consumers said Prime, the grade with the most fat. Only 3 percent of consumers were able to identify "Good" as the leanest grade of beef (11 percent identified Standard, which is leaner than Good, but which is not sold as a retail cut).

According to Barbara Luke, project director for the NRC study, the Agriculture Department (USDA) grading system was designed more than 40 years ago, when fat was considered a positive attribute.

Nowadays consumers "have misused those grades to mean better meat," Luke said. From a nutritional standpoint, however, "better meat" means leaner meat.

At the same time, even though consumers don't know what the grades mean or the differences among them, they use them. Almost 60 percent of those surveyed by Farm Journal stated that grades were helpful in making purchase decisions.

"It's ridiculous," said Luke. If Americans are to choose leaner beef, the committee believes that they need to be educated as to what those designations mean, she said.

They are, from fattest to leanest: Prime, Choice, Select (the name of the Good grade was changed in 1987), Standard.

2. Just because fat gets trimmed from meat doesn't mean we don't eat it.

The amount of tallow produced in this country increased by almost 500 percent from 1979 to 1985, according to USDA data. Some of that fat is used to fry fast-food french fries.

3. People fool themselves into thinking they're not eating fat.

While per capita consumption of animal-based fats including butter and lard decreased by 22 percent from 1965 to 1985, consumption of vegetable fats in the U.S. food supply increased by 64 percent. And per capita consumption of cheese more than doubled from 1965 to 1985.

Supermarket sales seem to support the "work-out, pig-out" paradox in which people eat healthful foods and then reward themselves with high-fat extravaganzas. At the same time that sales of poultry, fish, fresh fruits and vegetables and yogurt have increased, so have sales of snack foods, premium ice cream, candy and baked goods — all sources of fat.

The "grazing" trend, in which people eat frequent smaller meals instead of three traditional meals, has perpetuated the appeal of some of the high-fat, ready-to-eat items. (In 1977, according to USDA data, half of the population ate more than three meals a day; in 1985 two-thirds reported eating four or more times a day.)

But consumers may not realize the quality of nutrition they are trading for convenience, suggests the report, noting that croissants alone accounted for $700 million in sales in 1986.

4. Only 10 percent of women meet the target level for saturated fat. Various health groups have recommended that Americans get 30 percent or less of their total calories from fat, of which a third or less may come from saturated fats, a third or less from polyunsaturated fats and the remainder from monounsaturated fats.

Data analyzed specifically for the report show that 90 percent of women aged 19 to 50 exceed the level for saturated fats. Adherence to target levels for the other fats is somewhat better, with 65 percent meeting the recommended intake for monounsaturates and 86 percent meeting the level for polyunsaturates. Similar breakdown of fats for men is not yet available.

As for dietary cholesterol intake, it seems that women are starting to get the message. USDA figures in the report show that about 60 percent of women do not exceed the recommended maximum per day of dietary cholesterol. Women's mean intake, 304 milligrams, is almost exactly at the target level of 300 milligrams or less per day.

Men are in worse shape, with a mean intake of 435 milligrams of dietary cholesterol per day, according to USDA figures published in the report. And in addition to consuming more calories than women, men also consume slightly more milligrams of cholesterol per calorie.

5. Calcium intakes for children are "shocking," according to project director Luke.

Less than half of children ages 1-8 meet the recommended dietary allowance for calcium, even though milk has traditionally been an important beverage for the young and even though the RDA is not particularly high, said Luke. What is encouraging, Luke added, is that total calcium intake for these children did increase from 1977 to 1985.

6. Don't eliminate animal products from your diet, but learn how to eat modified versions. Some of those modifications make more difference than you may think — and some make less.

—Removal of skin from poultry (chicken, turkey and duck) results in dramatic reductions of calories, fat and saturated fat. For example, roasted duck without the skin is 40 percent lower in calories, 61 percent lower in total fat and 57 percent lower in saturated fat than roasted duck with the skin.

—Tuna canned in oil has more than three times as much total fat as tuna canned in water.

—Many consumers assume that part-skim cheeses are low-fat, which they are not, states the report, suggesting that people use these products sparingly rather than eliminate them completely.

—Although regular ground beef has more fat than extra-lean ground beef, ground beef is a high-fat meat product. Extra-lean ground beef gets more than 53 percent of its calories from fat. Good-Select top round, by comparison, derives 26 percent of its calories from fat.

7. If you think that everything made with chicken is better for you than beef, think again.

A batter-dipped fried chicken leg — the "most guilty" fried poultry item — has more calories, total fat, saturated fat and cholesterol than equal amounts of some of the leanest cuts of beef that have been either broiled or roasted, according to a comparison of statistics in the report.

About 3½ ounces of batter-fried chicken-leg meat has 273 calories, 16.2 grams of total fat, 4.3 grams of saturated fat and 90 milligrams of cholesterol. The same amount of any grade of roasted top round, broiled top round, roasted eye of round or the Choice and Good-Select grade of broiled tenderloin has less in all categories.

If there's one cooking lesson that emerges from data in the report, project director Luke said, it's "Don't fry."

Institute Takes A Look At Risks, Benefits In Food

RALEIGH — Do you sometimes wonder whether harmful chemicals lurk in that delectable morsel you're about to put in your mouth?

Or whether our food is healthy — or not?

If you wonder about it, be assured that thousands of food industry, academic and government scientists ponder the same question professionally.

As for the healthfulness of your foods, their response might be: "Compared to what?"

Now the Institute of Food Technologists (IFT), the professional society of food scientists, has examined the general issue of risks and benefits in foods.

The IFT Expert Panel on Food Safety and Nutrition has just published its findings in an updated scientific status summary on "The Risk/Benefit Concept as Applied to Food," which appears in the March issue of "Food Technology."

"What this shows is that if people make appropriate comparisons of risks, they can enjoy their foods without undue concern," said Dr. Thomas of North Carolina State's department of food science Regional Communicator for North Carolina.

"Risk/benefit" refers to the concept that it's possible to measure, in some way, the balance between "risk" (or chances of something causing harm) and "benefit" (chances of enhancing quality).

Statisticians, actuarial mathematicians, and public health data specialists develop tables of numbers which give the probability of harm (or percentage of risk) from various activities. These range, for example, from the chances of dying while hang-gliding (relatively high) to those of being by a meteorite (relatively low).

When it comes to foods, however, such estimates take on great uncertainty.

"The concept of risk/benefit in foods has raised dilemmas for food scientists, regulatory officials, and the average consumer," the IFT document points out.

"Scientists would like to employ every conceivable technological advance to ensure the availability of food in safer, more attractive, more nutritious and less expensive forms," it says.

"In order to accomplish this, new technologies — and in particular, new additives — have been studied in great detail.

"As for public safety, we know more about food additives than about many natural foodstuffs," the IFT scientists note.

To determine relative risks, scientists conduct tests on rats and mice in their labs and use massive doses of substances to learn at what levels each becomes harmful. The IFT scientists point out that in such tests, nearly every substance consumed — including sugar, starch, salt, some vitamins and even water — can be shown to be harmful when consumed in large enough quantities.

But problems and questions arise when their findings are extended to human. "Unfortunately, there are many uncertainties and difficulties in extrapolation of test results from animals to humans," is the way the U.S. Congress' Office of Technology Assessment put it recently.

There are differences between species, metabolism, diets, environment, the dosing procedure, and number and size of the test groups. In addition, high level doses change the way in which the test animal's digestive systems handle the substances.

The IFT document points out that until science is better able to understand differences between laboratory animals and man, "regulations will usually (be based on) the most conservative, worst-case assumptions."

Main Dish Can Be An Appetizer

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Food Editor

Common ingredients make this uncommonly good entree. Start with frozen spinach, canned tuna and Parmesan cheese — staples in most kitchens. Make a note to pick up cottage cheese, refrigerated crescent rolls and provolone cheese at the supermarket, and you're set.

The braid makes four good-sized main-dish servings, or cut into eight thinner slices and serve as a hot appetizer.

TUNA SPINACH BRAID
1 10-ounce package frozen chopped spinach, thawed and well drained
1 6 1/2-ounce can tuna, drained and flaked
1 cup cream-style cottage cheese, drained
1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 teaspoon bottled minced garlic
1 package (8) refrigerated crescent rolls
3 thick slices provolone cheese (3 ounces)

For filling, in a large mixing bowl combine spinach, tuna, cottage cheese, Parmesan and garlic.

Unroll and separate crescent dough into 4 rectangles. On an ungreased baking sheet or jellyroll pan, place rectangles together, overlapping edges slightly, to form a 14- by 10-inch rectangle. Firmly press edges and perforations together to seal. Spread filling in a 3 1/2-inch-wide strip lengthwise down center of dough. Top with provolone cheese. Makes cuts in dough at 1-inch intervals on both long sides of rectangle just to edge of filling. Fold dough strips diagonally over filling, overlapping strips and alternating from side to side to give a braided appearance. Bake in a 375-degree oven for 18 to 20 minutes or until golden. Serve warm. Makes 4 servings.

Nutrition information per serving: 523 cal., 36 g pro., 38 g carbo., 25 g fat, 72 mg chol., 1,383 mg sodium. U.S. RDA: 101 percent vit. A, 21 percent thiamine, 31 percent riboflavin, 41 percent niacin, 59 percent calcium, 25 percent iron.

TUNA SPINACH BRAID — Versatile Tuna Spinach Braid can be served as a main dish or as an appetizer. Most cooks already have the necessary ingredients in their refrigerator or cupboard.

BANANA-ORANGE FROZEN PUSH-UPS

1 (6-ounce) can frozen orange juice, thawed
1/2 cup instant non-fat dry milk powder
1/2 cup water
1 cup plain low-fat yogurt
Peel bananas and slice into blender or food processor. Add orange juice, milk, water and yogurt, cover and blend until foamy. Pour into small paper cups and freeze. To eat, squeeze bottom of cup. Makes 6 servings.

To make the Vanilla Sauce: whisk egg yolks and SugarTwin together. Pour the hot milk over the mixture. Place this mixture in a double-boiler or heat proof bowl over a pan of simmering water and cook until the mixture thickens sufficiently to coat the back of a wooden spoon. Cool slightly.

Stir in the yogurt until smooth. If mixture is a bit lumpy, force it through a strainer.

To serve: pour the Vanilla Sauce into individual soup plates or shallow bowls. Float two Spring Eggs on each dish. Top with orange zest and float almonds in sauce. Serve immediately.
