Tanker Splits In Half

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland (AP) — Rescue ships and planes searched the waters of the north Atlantic today for survivors of a tanker than broke in half and burst into flames.

Hopes that some of the crew escaped the flaming tanker were buoyed when rescue ships reported a life raft was missing from the ship, said U.S. Coast Guard Petty Officer Larry Lawrence.

Authorities do not know the origin of the tanker, what it was carrying or how many people were on board.

"They are scouring the area around both sections looking for survivors," said Petty Officer Brad Terrill of the Coast Guard in New York. "Apparently both sections, although they are in flames, appear to be floating."

The research ship Hudson spotted the burning tanker at about midnight, 370 miles southeast of Cape Race, Newfoundland, the Search and Rescue Co-ordination Center in Halifax, Nova Scotia, reported.

The Hudson joined by an Italian ship, the Italica, in looking for survivors, officials said.

Two Canadian Aurora patrol aircraft were joining the search, Canadian officials said. The U.S. Coast Guard also dispatched a plane and Terrill said the Canadian fisheries patrol vessel Cape Rober was steaming into the area.

An earlier report that an empty lifeboat was seen floating nearby was erroneous, according to the Hudson's commanding officer, Terrill said.

"We don't know the size, how many people on board, or even the name" of the tanker, said Lt. Norman Selley, also at the operations center in New York.

Terrill said the Hudson has not reported any pollution in the waters around the tanker.

In April 1987, the Hudson dropped scientific work to become involved in a dramatic rescue off the coast of Newfoundland. The ship's crew saved the 24-man crew of the sinking Skipper I, a Panamanian-registered freighter.

Vets Help Vets Find Jobs

By JERRY RAYNOR

Military veterans of any age — early 20s on into the 70s — who go to the Greenville office of the North Carolina Employment Security Commission seeking employment will find a veteran there to give a helping hand.

In fact, five of the six male employees at the Greenville office are veterans — four of them with service in Vietnam.

Jim Hannan, longtime manager of the local ESC office, is a retired Marine. Larry McMillin, a retired Army man, has been with the ESC office for over two years and is the outreach specialist, working only with veterans. He is being transferred April 30 to the Division of Veterans Affairs in Kinston.

A third employee, Don Anders, is the ESC veterans employee representative. Anders served in the Army for over three years.

All had tours of duty in Vietnam.

"Our record for placing veterans is higher than any other office in North Carolna, averaging over 40 percent of those who make applications," Hannan said. "The Greenville office has been the No. 1 office or has tied for top place for several years in

Morton Says 'No'

Blacks Complain Carter Slighted

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

A black business organization headquartered in Greenville has complained to the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce that Mayor Ed Carter was not invited to sit at the head table during an April 11 session of the Governor's Conference on Travel and Tourism.

But Hugh Morton Jr., director of the N.C. Department of Commerce's travel and tourism division, said the seating decision was his, and "I am happy that it worked out that way."

The chamber of commerce acted as host for the Governor's Travel and Tourism Conference here April 10-12.

In a letter to Phil Dixon, chairman of the chanber's board, dated April 15, Jo-Linda Sanders, president of the Eastern N.C. Business Network, said, "As a business organization, it has come to our attention that Mayor Ed Carter was dealt a breach of protocol when he was not invited to sit at the head table. ...

"An act such as this," Ms. Sanders said, "could be detrimental to the 'good relations' Al Nichols, executive director of the Pitt-Greenville Convention and Visitors Bureau spoke of, and also the 'great cooperation' that Ed Walker, president of the chamber, eluded to as the purpose and goals of the conference.

"If this truly is the chamber's goal, then I'm sure that you would agree that charity begins at home and an occurrence such as this should not be allowed to happen again under your leadership. We put strong faith in your reputation as a leader and businessman to make every effort to take whatever steps necessary to alleviate any tension this act may have caused in the community."

Area Historical Districts Urged

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville's tradition and heritage can be reflected upon in the significant architecture evident throughout the city. To help protect historic stuctures from the ravages of runaway development, the city authorized the formation of a Historic Properties Selection Committee to designate specific structures as "historic property."

One member of the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission would like to take that effort a step farther.

Steve Blades said he believes it isn't enough to protect just specific properties. He believes some neighborhoods should be considered historically significant.

"I think historical districting would be a positive step to preserve structures and probably more importantly, the neighborhoods," Blades told members of the Planning and Zoning Commission at this week's regular monthly meeting.

Blades said he is in favor of the formation of a Historical Properties and Historical Districting Commission which would report its activities directly to the Greenville City Council. Currently the task of designating historic sites in the city is performed by the Historical Properties Selection Comission, a group of volunteer citizens appointed by the Planning and Zoning Commision.

Blades said that particular group has a tendency to target only specific individual structures.

"While that's important, I've always been more in favor of a concept of neighborhood," he said.

Blades said there are several goals that historical districting would achieve.

He said it would protect architecturally significant buildings from demolition without some level of review.

"There currently is no review or concern for the architectural, historical, or cultural value of a property," he said.

In addition, Blades said designating neighborhoods as historical districts would ensure no major exterior changes could occur to a structure which would make it in conflict with that designated neighborhood.

He said neighborhood historical districting would also provide minimum housing standards within the district.

He said members of the designated districts could work with city government agencies to better enforce the set standards not only relating to housing but also to other issues such as noise, parking, and alcohol use."

Blades said his envisioned concept

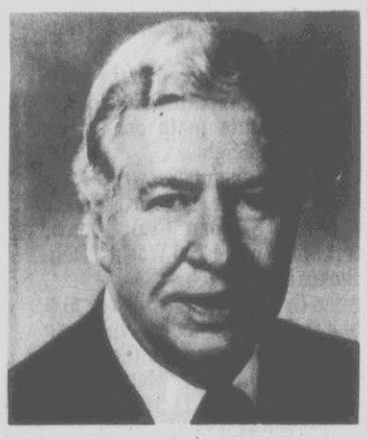
HARRISON TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — Sixth graders who fed an experimental rat a steady diet of junk food and watched him deteriorate into red-eyed lethargy say they're convinced: The road to good living isn't paved with tasty treats.

But there was one problem with the experiment. The junk food rat, Nut, outlived his companion, Honey, who was fed only health food. Honey died while choking on a cracker as the results were announced Thursday.

"He was extremely healthy," a distraught Kathie Dilks assured her class at Harrison Township Elementary School. The teacher announced that they would provide Honey with a proper burial.



DOUGLAS EDWARDS

Edwards To Speak

Douglas Edwards, who pioneered in network newscasting during the first half-century of the television age, will be the speaker at East Carolina University's 80th commencement on May 7.

Edwards was the nation's first nightly network news anchor, beginning in 1948. He retired April 1 after 46 years with the Columbia Broadcasting System.

The university's spring commencement will be staged in 35,000-seat Ficklen Stadium on the ECU campus. Up to 2,000 graduates are expected to receive undergraduate and graduate degrees.

The first fall commencement in ECU's history was held last December in Minges Coliseum at which time degrees were conferred on those who completed degree requirements in the summer or in the fall semester. Because the university is having two commencements each year, the number of graduates receiving degrees at either may be somewhat smaller than in the past.

Marking 'Time ...'

MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail Gorbachev suggested to Secretary of State George Shultz today that "we're marking time" in superpower relations as hope for a new arms control accord faded.

But Shultz disagreed. "From our point of view, we are far from marking time," he said. "We are keeping time in a very strong way."

Shultz differed with the Soviet Communist Party general secretary's appraisal at a news conference after a three-hour session. But Shultz did not list an arms reduction treaty as one of the "significant achievements" to be expected when President Reagan meets with Gorbachev in a Moscow summit May 29-June 2.

In fact, Shultz said, "the going is hard" to complete a pact to reduce strategic nuclear weapons in the five weeks remaining.

"It's pick and shovel work," he said.

Shultz's session with Gorbachev in the gilded Catherine's Hall followed nine hours of talks with Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze over two days.

When Shultz told the Soviet leader: "I'm here to make preparations for the president's visit,"

Gorbachev responded: "As for the substance, it seems that we are losing something. Maybe we're marking time."

Jailers Blamed In Death

RALEIGH (AP) — A state report faults Robeson County jail employees in part for the controversial death of a black inmate.

A promise from Gov. Jim Martin to investigate the death of Bobby McKellar of Lumberton — and other allegations of corruption made by two American Indians — ended a 10-hour standoff at the Robesonian newspaper in Lumberton on Feb. 1.

Phil Kirk, chairman of the governor's task force investigating allegations made by the two Indians, Eddie Hatcher and Timothy Jacobs, said Thursday that the jailers failed to repond properly to McKellar's asthma attack.

"The response time was initially slow after the jailer was notified of the problem — and was inexcusably slow after he verified the situation later," Kirk said.

"There was neglect, but we couldn't find any reason to suggest that it was intentional," he said. "We didn't see any criminal intent — just neglect of duty."

The report further concludes that a staffing shortage, a broken alarm system and McKellar's periodic refusal to take his medication all contributed to his death.

Martin appointed Kirk, his chief of staff, to head the task force, which is continuing its work as Hatcher and Jacobs await trial on federal charges of hostage-taking and manufacturing illegal weapons.

Copies of the task force's report were mailed Wednesday to several Robeson County officials, District Attorney Joe Freeman Britt and N.C. Attorney General Lacy Thornburg.

The report says a combination of problems contributed to McKellar's death on Jan. 12.

The jail was being run that evening by two employees instead of the usual three, forcing one man to cover both the front desk and the cell block for male inmates.

McKellar became sick near dinner time, according to the report, and several inmates began calling the

Defense Begins Evidence In Sneed's Murder Trial

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

Defense attorneys Calvin King and Benjamin Alford were expected to begin calling witnesses today in Pitt County Superior Court in the first-degree murder trial of Eurston Ivon Sneed.

Twelve witnesses had testified for the state this week when court recessed Thursday afternoon, and he said the state would probably finish presenting evidence today.

Sneed, 35, of Beaufort County, is charged with first-degree murder and armed robbery in connection with the 1983 New Year's Eve killing of Willie Hubert Tripp at Tripp's Bypass Service Center on Memorial Drive.

Two friends of Sneed's have testified that Sneed told them after the incident that he shot Tripp and killed him.

Roland Rhodes testified Thursday that he has known Sneed about 20 years and they have been close friends. Another friend, James "Dick" Sherman, drove Sneed to Rhodes' house near Grifton the morning after the murder to ask for a car and a place to stay, Rhodes testified.

"He (Sneed) told me he thought he had killed this man across from the Holiday Inn that runs a service station," Rhodes said to the court. "He said he went in there to get money from the man."

Sneed used a gun owned by Sherman in the murder, according to Rhodes' account of what Sneed told him.

Rhodes testified that State Bureau of Investigation agents and other investigators tried to contact him for about two years, but he never spoke with anyone or reported what he knew until August of 1986, one month after he pleaded guilty to trafficking heroin in Onslow County.

"The reason I didn't, is because, really, it just wasn't any of my business," Rhodes said.

A-G Math Team Wins For Third Year In Row

The Ayden-Grifton High School Math Team earned the first place 2-A School Award for the third consecutive year at a recent East Carolina University regional math contest.

More than 1,000 students from about 75 schools in eastern North Carolina participated in the event.

Mike Harris received the first place algebra II award and qualified for the algebra II runoff competition Tuesday in Rocky Mount. Algebra II team members Heather Garris, Carla Joyner and Mike Harris earned the second place algebra II team award.

Bob Rodebaugh scored in the top 6 percent of the competition and qualified for the state math contest on Thursday in Raleigh.

Other team members were Amy Gee, Jonathan Lee, Leonard Mallol, Joseph Moore, John Craig Quick, Robert Smith and Fred Woolds. Debbie Stokes is the coach.

Ayden-Grifton was also listed 21st among the top 50 schools in the state in a ranking of scores on the recent annual High School Mathematics Examination. About 11,000 state students took the examination.

Harris, the ninth highest-scoring sophomore in the state, was among 142 students listed on the National Honor Roll and qualified for the American Invitational Mathematics Examination. He also was one of 83 students to qualify for the Student Merit Roll.

Rodebaugh also earned listing on the National Honor Roll and qualified to take the American Invitational Mathematics Examination.

Council Of State Endorsements

When Democrats choose Council of State candidates May 3, they should give a vote of confidence to Dan Bell and Bobby Etheridge and incumbents John Brooks and Ed Renfrow.

Bell is the most qualified candidate to continue the tradition of leadership, integrity and efficiency in the office of secretary of state. His resume represents depth — a bachelor's in business from University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, a master's in business from East Carolina University and a law degree from Loyola University — all distinguished qualifications.

In addition, his six years of experience in the office of secretary of state give him an edge on his opponents. In these years he has produced results for the citizens of North Carolina by actively fighting fraud. He is the only candidate for the position who has written legislation and has national recognition in his field.

As an extra benefit, Bell is an eastern North Carolina native — Mount Olive — a fact which gives him a regional perspective welcome in the office of secretary of state.

Democrats should also give Bobby Etheridge a vote of confidence in his bid for the Democratic nomination for state superintendent of public instruction.

Etheridge, in his decade in the General Assembly, has accumulated a strong record of support for public education. As chairman of the House Appropriations Base Budget Committee, he demonstrated his advocacy of education by backing key funding efforts. His support of the Basic Education Program and School Construction Fund is public record.

Furthermore, Etheridge's platform is a strong one aimed at raising student achievement and the lowering the dropout rate. He advocates higher pay and better working conditions and correctly insists on strict accountability for the $3 billion in public resources spent on schools.

Voters should also return John Brooks to the position of labor commissioner and Ed Renfrow to the state auditor's office.

Brooks grew up in Greenville and has effectively handled the position of secretary of labor during his tenure. He has given voters no reason to consider a leadership change in that office.

Renfrow can also be voted back into the auditor's office with confidence. He has done a thorough job of ensuring accountability in state government and a successful job of ferreting out fraud. In addition, his office has received a clean slate each year from its external review.

Bell, Etheridge, Brooks and Renfrow represent the leadership the state requires to effectively administrate public business. They should receive firm support from Democrats May 3.

End Conflict

Afghans Need Peace, Not Arms

There will be no peace in Afghanistan because of the accord signed by the United States' George P. Shultz and foreign ministers of Kabul, Pakistan and the Soviet Union.

The accord will mean, however, that the 115,000 Soviet troops in the neighboring nation will be removed by Feb. 15, 1989. That is a major accomplishment for the Soviet Union and the United States.

Regrettably the Soviets are still left to send arms to the Afghan government who they back, and the United States can still supply weapons to the Afghan mujahadeen. That certainly means no peace for the war torn nation.

The accord is no small accomplishment, nevertheless, since the presence of Soviet troops in Afghanistan has been a major problem in U.S.-Soviet Union relations. Without an accord on Afghanistan, further progress between the two superpowers on reducing world tensions might have been difficult.

Reaching the accord might have been made easier because Soviet citizens are as weary of this winless war as Americans were of Vietnam. Their young people have been drafted and sent off to an endless conflict with some to die there.

It is easy to imagine that Afghanistan was an unpopular war on the Soviet home front where so many recall the suffering of World War II.

Whatever the impetus, the accord has been reached and the world can only sing its praises.

Now, rather than continuing to pump arms into war ravaged Afghanistan, the superpowers should place emphasis on finding ways to end the killing. When Soviet troops leave, the fighting and bombing can continue for a long time unless a truce can be reached between the two sides. Afghanistan now needs a time of peace and reconciliation, not still more internal fighting.

Meese Doesn't Meet Test Of Office

Increasingly there are demands that Attorney General Edwin Meese III step down, but the focus on his possible indictment on criminal charges is misplaced. The question that should determine his continued tenure is this: Does he understand the higher standard to which the attorney general must be held — and how does he measure against that standard?

It is a mistake to read the departures of Deputy Attorney General Arnold Burns and Assistant Attorney General William Weld, along with seven of their top aides, as simply an attack on the personal integrity of the attorney general, who is laboring under a cloud of ongoing criminal investigations. Rather, these resignations express a broader concern — maintaining respect for the Department of Justice itself.

Independent counsel James McKay has acted responsibly in announcing that while his investigation is continuing, the evidence presently available to his grand jury does not justify a criminal indictment of Meese. Reagan administration spokesmen have sought to treat that announcement as an endorsement for Meese to retain his office. But among lawmakers and legal experts, this will simply inflame the widespread and long-simmering frustration with the Administration's misunderstanding of the role of the attorney general.

In response to Watergate, two successive attorneys general — one Republican and one Democrat — made great efforts to restore public confidence in the department. Edward Levi, a distinguished legal scholar and law school dean, was chosen by President Ford as a model of integrity and nonpartisan professionalism.

In turn, President Carter appointed Griffin Bell, an eminent former federal appeals court judge. He continued the guideline work of Levi and established further principles for the department to prevent a return to what he termed the "broad appearance of improper influence."

Bell insisted that the Department of Justice should be a " 'neutral zone' in which neither favor, nor pressure, nor politics is not permitted to influence the administration of the law."

Bell also established an unprecedented set of rules to insulate the department from inappropriate political influences and to increase public scrutiny of the department's activities.

Under such an approach, it is inappropriate for the attorney general to act as a political adviser to the president. Robert Kennedy and John Mitchell may have exemplified a time-honored role model — the highly political attorney general — but the liabilities of that model were sadly taught by Watergate.

Coming from his White House role as a political counselor, Meese seems to see the office of attorney general as merely another outpost from which to carry out the president's political agenda. He has thus continued to serve President Reagan as a loyal lieutenant and as a tireless spokesman for the conservative wing of the Republican Party.

But in the process he has subverted the office of the attorney general and tarnished public respect for the Department of Justice.

Frederick D. Baron served as a special assistant to Attorney General Griffin Bell and subsequently as a federal prosecutor; Nelson G. Dong was a White House fellow under Bell and also served as a federal prosecutor; both now practice law in California.

The Changing Legislative League

RALEIGH — The General Assembly is much like a pro sports team that dominates its league. Year after year, the same corps of big names leads the team with maybe one or two new players becoming important each season.

With the 1988 primary a little more than a week away, it is clear that the 1989 General Assembly will break that pattern. Several important leaders are already gone, and there is the potential for a shocking upset in the primary.

In the Senate, three of the 10 most effective senators — using the effectiveness rankings of the N.C. Center for Public Policy Research — will not be back in 1989. Sen. J.J. "Monk" Harrington, D-Bertie, Senate president pro tem, is not running for reelection. Sens. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, and Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, are both running for lieutenant governor. So one is gone from the legislative scene for sure, and maybe both.

In the House, Rep. Bobby Etheridge, D-Harnett, the third most effective representative, is seeking the superintendency of the public instruction rather than running for another term. Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, the 10th most effective representative, is not running for reelection.

In addition to the planned retirements, there might be one or two that weren't planned. It certainly wouldn't appear likely that Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, will be knocked out of the legislature this year, but a scenario in which that happens is not unthinkable.

Watkins is the most powerful House member other than House Speaker Liston Ramsey and his reelection in past years has been virtually unchallenged. But there are three incumbents in his district and three challengers, all running for three seats.

Because the district is 42 percent black, the one black challenger, Dr. James P. Green of Henderson, is given a very good chance of winning a seat. Rep. Jim Crawford, D-Granville, led the ticket in 1986 and the other incumbent Rep. John Church, D-Vance, is a popular 9-term legislator. Thus, there's a real dog race in which few scenarios can be written off.

In the Senate, the Democrats' favorite Republican, Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus, is in a tough renomination fight with the Rev. James H. Camp, a fundamentalist preacher. Johnson ranks 30th in effectiveness in the survey, highest among all Republican senators.

In the House, several more incumbents are facing tough renomination fights. Rep. Ruth Easterling, D-Mecklenburg, maybe the House's leading advocate of programs for children, is being challenged by veteran Duke Power Company lobbyist John Hicks, who has now retired. Hicks says the legislature should have at least one voting member who understands the utilities' side of issues. It will be interesting to see if the voters of Mecklenburg share his concern for the power company.

Rep. Pete Hasty, D-Robeson, is also vulnerable. He is considered the least likely Democrat to survive if either of two Indian challengers, Adolph Dial or Garth Locklear, wins a nomination in a district dominated by racially charged Robeson County. Reps. Sidney Locks, D-Robeson, and Danny DeVane, D-Hoke, are generally considered to have better organizations than Hasty.

Even with all of these challenges, the leadership of the two houses is virtually assured for next year. Speaker Ramsey, D-Madison, does not have an opponent either for re-election to the House or to the speaker's chair. In the Senate, Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, reportedly has the votes locked up to be president pro tem next year, and he is also running unopposed.

747's Don't Need Four Engines

What's The Big Deal About Spending Four Hours On The Runway?

Soloway came into the office and said he wanted to take out a full-page advertisement in the paper declaring his airline is the safest in the business.

I was reluctant to help him, as Soloway's airline, A Wing and a Prayer, had lost my luggage a month before and still hadn't found it.

Soloway was almost in tears. "Don't talk to me about lost luggage now. The Department of Transportation is investigating us and they say Wing and a Prayer is the most unsafe airline in the business."

"Is it true?"

"Well, our food isn't very good. But any well-traveled person knows it isn't safe to eat airline food."

"People who fly do like safe food," I commented. "You should have thought about that when you founded Wing and a Prayer."

"I didn't found Wing and a Prayer. I merged it with Shake & Roll, a roller coaster ride I owned at the Seven Flags Amusement Park. Roller coasters and planes are practically the same business. Now the DOT is out to get us because we keep canceling flights."

"That's just part of it. I think they're also mad because you won't refuel your planes."

"I'm just trying to save some money. Do you know in order to buy the company I had to sell junk bonds? Now I'm in a bind. I either have to pay the interest on the junk bonds or buy new tires."

"The word on the tarmac is that you can't afford to buy new airplanes."

"No one can buy new airplanes. Our craft are good for another 10 years. Ask the pilots."

"The pilots say you're the worst manager in the airline business."

"That's because they're the worst pilots."

"If they're the worst pilots, why are they flying your planes?"

"I'm not going to buy uniforms for an entire new crew. How much do you think I owe on Wing and a Prayer?" !

"A billion?" I guessed.

"You're not far off. Do you believe I can pay it off by sending half-empty planes to Toledo?"

"Probably not. But you could worry a little about people's luggage."

"I plan to as soon as the FAA gives me permission to fly with one less engine."

"That's your game plan?"

"You don't need four engines on a 747. Our aviation experts have assured me three will do the job every time."

"I'm not certain you're going to get that one through the government inspectors."

"That's why I wish to buy an ad. I want to take my case to the public."

"Is it true you're doubling your price on airline tickets this spring?"

"We had to do it to pay for all the free rides we gave people for flying with us this winter. We gave away so many bonus miles that we haven't booked one paying passenger for the next six months."

"Maybe that's why you don't have any money for baggage handlers."

"Look, I welcome this investigation. It will bring out the facts once and for all on how O'Hare Airport is sticking it to the little guy. This country is going to be a sorry place when the government starts to tell us what food to serve on an airplane and permits passengers to make a big deal about spending two or three hours on the runway."

Reuniting Blacks, Jews

Analysis

The impressive victory of Michael Dukakis in the New York primary Tuesday has moved him past the halfway mark in the number of delegates required to win the Democratic nomination.

Barring some unforeseen event, he will accomplish that. But leaving behind the disputatious sectarian politics of New York and its shrill and divisive mayor, Edward I. Koch, does not mean that the tensions that surfaced in that state between two key elements of the Democratic constituency have been laid to rest.

Only a relationship deeply troubled before the New York primary could have degenerated so quickly and acrimoniously once the campaign got under way. The presumptive Democratic nominee may find that the ultimate test of his political skill and wisdom is healing the dangerous rift in the relationship between blacks and Jews.

Whatever form and structure the Democratic Party has enjoyed over the past half century has been provided by the New Deal coalition. These were the groups who rallied to the banner of Franklin D. Roosevelt and which, for a variety of reasons, remained associated with the party, voting more or less consistently Democratic in national elections.

To win the presidency, Democratic nominees had to run well among white Southerners, blue-collar Catholics, blacks and Jews. But over the course of years, the reliability of the first two elements in the coalition declined. White Southerners began to use ideology rather than partisanship as a yardstick by which to measure candidates. The most conservative nominee of whatever party increasingly claimed the loyalties of whites in Dixie. Catholic voters, as they prospered economically, drifted out of the Democratic ranks.

The void left by the defection of these two groups was filled partially by newly enfranchised black voters of the South and the continued loyalty of urban blacks. The upward mobility of Jews did not seem to affect their political fidelity to the Democrats. This trait they shared with the blacks. For both groups, voting Democratic was a sacrament that was celebrated both in adversity and prosperity.

But it is odd that the embittered relations between blacks and Jews should be lamented as a divorce between natural allies. Other than the common bond of being persecuted minorities, the natural affinity between blacks and Jews is a no more natural one than, for example, between blacks and Armenians or Jews and American Indians.

Discrimination fell differentially on blacks and Jews. Blacks suffered all of the indignities heaped on Jews. But there was an additional dimension of violence in the persecution visited on the blacks. Restricted in where they could live and in the employment to which they could aspire, Jews were often forced to become what the Marxists call a comprador class of ghetto merchants and landlords. At the street level, it was often not a very happy relationship. But at the leadership level, relations were almost benevolent.

The civil rights battle of the 1950s and 1960s strengthened the bond between blacks and Jews. Yet this tendency produced a paradoxical backlash as the civil rights movement evolved into the black power movement of the 1970s. Some black spokesmen came to see Jewish involvement in civil rights activities as a form of patronizing control.

While the personal agenda of Jesse Jackson will have much to do with the future course of black-Jewish relations in the Democratic Party, there is much that Michael Dukakis could do to reduce the antagonism between these two key constituencies. In modern politics, only the presidential nominee enjoys the prestige to broker differences among his followers, and it will be up to Dukakis to emphasize what is essential to both groups and limit the sources of irritation.

Strange bedfellows blacks and Jews may be. But unless they lie down together in tolerant repose in 1988, the Democratic household will endure strife and experience defeat.

Shultz' Israeli Stumble

WASHINGTON — Over protests from Ambassador Thomas Pickering in Israel and White House aides, Secretary of State George Shultz refused to delay yesterday's (Thursday) signing ceremony for a new U.S-Israeli "strategic" agreement, ignoring warnings that it would be seen as rewarding the foremost opponent of the U.S. Middle East peace plan.

Those warnings reflect concern that Shultz' sufferance of Israeli hostility to the peace plan is costing the U.S. its last vestige of credibility in the Middle East. "We did manage to low-key the ceremony," a White House source told us. But he added that even a low-key ceremony would be headlined throughout the world as a U.S. gift at a moment Israel is thumbing its nose at Ronald Reagan on both the peace plan and Palestinian rights.

Embroidering this appearance of Israel's monopoly over U.S. Middle East diplomacy was Shultz' surprising "no proof" response to questions about whether Israeli agents assassinated Abu Jihad. In fact, evidence that Israel plotted the surgically precise murder of the number-two PLO leader, partly to undermine Shultz' own peace plan, has now been sent by Tunisia to the United Nations.

The global costs of such diplomacy is not in doubt among one-time Arab allies of the U.S. Compounding it are disturbing signs that Gorbachev and Israeli Prime Minister Itzhak Shamir are seeking a rapprochement. It would be based on massive emigration of Soviet Jews to Israel and would mean a new Soviet hand in Arab-Israeli affairs. It is known here that Shamir would welcome a visit from Mikhail Gorbachev or Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

The latest indication of the Arabs' hardened posture against what until recently would have been routine acquiesence to American requests came on April 7. On his visit to Saudi Arabia, Shultz asked King Fahd to let the U.S. inspect medium-range Chinese missiles sold to the Saudi kingdom by Beijing after the U.S. reneged on a promised sale of its own to the Saudis.

The king replied with two questions: Has the "best friend and democratic ally" of the U.S. — Israel — allowed the U.S. to inspect Israeli nuclear facilities and atomic weapons in Dimona? Would the U.S. allow the Chinese communists to inspect joint U.S.-Saudi AWACS facilities in Saudi Arabia?

Shultz changed the subject. Israel has never allowed an American inspector anywhere near its nuclear plant in Dimona, and the U.S. would not permit China to inspect its AWACS technology. Perhaps reflecting that Saudi rebuff, the secretary characterized his chat with the king as merely "satisfactory" — a word that is low on the scale of diplomatic success in negotiations.

Woman Testifies That Two Men Assaulted Her In Dorm

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

A Rocky Mount woman testified in Pitt County District Court Wednesday that she willingly had sex with an East Carolina University football player in Scott Residence hall Feb. 21, but later two other people came in the room and had sex with her after she had fallen asleep.

Lester Errol McCorvey, 19, of Pensacola, Fla., and Ernest L. Pendleton, 18, of Devon, Pa., are charged with assaulting a female. Lewis A. Wilson, 21, of Foley, Ala., is charged with two counts of aiding and abetting an assault on a female. The trial was scheduled to continue today.

Michelle Battle, 22, told the court she spoke with Wilson on the telephone from her home in Rocky Mount Feb. 21, and later rode with friends to Greenville to see him.

About 11:30 p.m. she began drinking liquor with Wilson, Miss Battle testified, and later the two had sex. Wilson said he had to be somewhere at 1 a.m. and he told her not to answer the telephone or let anyone in the room while he was gone, according to her testimony.

Miss Battle said she was awakened later when she thought Wilson had returned. The male began to have sex with her, she testified, and shortly after that he quickly left the bed and ran out of the room.

"I was like in a dream, in a daze," Miss Battle said. She knew she was particpating in sex, she said, but she was not able to completely open her eyes to identify the male.

When a second male began to have sex with her, she said she realized it was not Wilson. When she questioned him, the male claimed to be Wilson, but Miss Battle said she recognized the man's voice as that of McCorvey, whom she met earlier in the evening. With the light coming into the dorm window, she also said she could see the body of the man and could tell it was not Wilson.

When the second male ran out of the room, Miss Battle said she heard several people laughing in the hallway and she found McCorvey's jeans at the foot of the bed.

Wilson's roommate, Tim Orr, then entered the room and asked Miss Battle why she was crying and she told him to go find Wilson.

Miss Battle spoke with McCorvey later that night. She said they began arguing and he admitted he had entered the room and had sex with her, she testified. "I said, 'You raped me, and you're going to pay for it,'" she said to the court.

Miss Battle reported the incident to a policeman that night and also went to Pitt County Memorial Hospital for an examination. Wilson drove her back to Rocky Mount and asked her not to press charges and said he would take care of it.

Wilson also visited her the next day, she testified, but after that she has had no contact with Wilson and neither of the other two have apologized to her or paid any medical bills.

ECU assistant football coach Don Thompson also visited Miss Battle the night following the incident, she testified.

Attorney Milton Fitch, counsel for McCorvey and Pendleton, questioned Miss Battle for about an hour on the events of the evening. She denied that she was so drunk that she is not sure whether the incident was a dream or reality, and she denied she filed charges because she was angry that her date, Wilson, had left her alone.

Under cross examination from Fitch, Miss Battle said she could not identfy the first male that entered the room, but she recognized the voice of the second male as McCorvey's.

DURHAM TOUR — Mayor Wib Gulley escorts a group of young Soviet political leaders to a Durham Bulls baseball game Thursday night. Earlier the Soviets had tasted North Carolina barbecue and attended a mock political debate in Raleigh. (AP Laserphoto)

Tar Heels Put On Political Show For Soviet Visitors

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — A group of visiting Soviet leaders got a glimpse of an American-style cold war as North Carolina Democrats and Republicans waged a war of words for their benefit in the state Capitol.

It began Thursday when Alan Pugh, a Republican and political adviser to Gov. Jim Martin, told of the turn-of-the-century election that brought Democratic Gov. Charles B. Aycock to power. The event resulted in disenfranchisement for blacks as well as Republicans, Pugh said.

But Chris Scott, a Democrat and president of the state AFL-CIO, quickly countered that despite Pugh's "revisionist history," black North Carolinians would vote overwhelmingly Democratic in November.

Pugh retorted: "If Chris would stop telling stories about the Republican philosophy I would stop telling the truth about North Carolina history."

It was good old American exercise of the First Amendment, and the visitors — young political leaders from a variety of Soviet agencies — loved it.

When it was suggested that the debate was getting a bit testy, Andrei Krutskih, first secretary of the U.S. and Canada Department in the Soviet foreign ministry, shouted "Let them continue."

"We have a lot of stereotypes in our minds," Vladimir S. Khonyakov, head of the Committee of Youth Organizations of the USSR, told reporters in Raleigh on Thursday, the first of five days the group will spend in North Carolina.

The visit by the Soviets is part of a tour of several U.S. states, including Washington, D.C. While in North Carolina, the group will study economy and political system. Today they toured several high-tech facilities at Research Triangle Park.

The Soviets questioned the North Carolinians about environmental protection issues and praised the Raleigh area's beauty. Rep. Bill Alexander, D-Cabarrus, said he was pleased the visitors saw the difference between Raleigh and New York City.

"It was very tough but I tried to," joked one Soviet.

But the discussion remained tinged with partisanship as Pugh plugged the presidential candidacy of Vice President George Bush, saying he believed that most Soviet leaders expected Bush to be elected.

"There is probably no candidate in recent memory with more experience in international affairs," Pugh said, adding that Democratic frontrunner Michael Dukakis had none.

"It's true that Vice President Bush has met more foreign leaders than any other leader in America, but most of them have been dead," Scott said, stealing a line from Democratic presidential candidate Jesse Jackson's reference to the number of foreign dignitary funerals Bush attends.

"It's easier for us Democrats to befriend our new friends from the Soviet Union than ... the Republicans," joked Alexander.

Duke Faculty Says More Blacks Needed

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A faculty decision to require more black professors at Duke University makes the school a leader on an issue that troubles nearly every college and university in the nation, a black professor says.

"I think this whole affair will reflect positively on Duke," Erdman Palmore said Thursday after a faculty council adopted a resolution to require each of the school's 56 departments and programs to add at least one black faculty member by fall of 1993.

"As far as I know, we are the first university establishing such a strong policy mandating the hiring of more black faculty."

The measure, passed 35-19, is subject to endorsement by the administration, but approval was expected because the resolution had the support of university President H. Keith H. Brodie.

More than 100 students wearing black-and-white checkered armbands cheered and waved signs at Thursday's crowded meeting as the council adopted the resolution after weeks of heated campus debate.

"It's a clear victory — we're ecstatic," said Christopher Foster, 20, chairman of the Black Student Alliance.

Troopers Return

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — A short speech and long-held hugs welcomed home some 250 paratroopers of the 82nd Airborne Division at Pope Air Force Base Thursday as they returned from a six-month peacekeeping mission in the Sinai Peninsula.

The paratroopers — members of the 2nd Battalion, 325th Airborne Infantry Regiment — arrived in two increments, landing in Air Force C-141 Starlifter transport jets.

The paratroopers were part of the Multi-National Force and Observers, an international peacekeeping force set up by the Camp David accords establishing peace between Egypt and Israel.

Brig. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza, assistant division commander, welcomed the troops home, telling the sixth group of division soldiers who served in the Sinai that they spent the last six months in one of the most troubled spots on Earth.

Cavezza told them they were successful in keeping the peace.

He dismissed them, and the formation of troops ran toward wives and family members.

Among those families were Linda Cacares and her sons Joseph, 2, Benjamine, 4, and Alberto, 8. The oldest told his dad, Staff Sgt. Guadalupe Cacares, he wanted to go fishing. Benjamine wants his dad to take him to a Fort Bragg playground.

"I just want to settle back in and get used to Fort Bragg again," Cacares said.

Robbery Foiled

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Jewelry store owner Dale Harkness says his anger at an armed robber propelled him into a "barroom fight" that ended when he wrestled the robber to the floor and held him at gunpoint until police arrived.

"Everything I own is right here," Harkness said Thursday. "It took me five years to get where I'm at, and a lot of time before that. I wasn't going to let some fool come in and take it away in five minutes."

Issac Brown, 55, who listed Orlando, Fla., and Indian Rock Beach, Fla., addresses, was arrested around 10:15 a.m. by Winston-Salem police. He was charged with armed robbery and was being held in the Forsyth County Jail on $150,000 bond.

Harkness, bruised and battered, said the incident started when a man wanted to look at some gold chains. "When he got up to the case, he pulled a gun on me, a little automatic .22 (caliber), and told me to get in the back room," Harkness said.

Harkness, 40, did as he was told. Store employee, Vandy Kim, 26, was in the back cleaning up.

The struggle, which Harkness said "felt like it lasted forever," started in the back room and gradually worked its way out to behind a display counter in the show room.

"He kicked me all the way out there," Harkness said. "We bit and kicked and rolled on the floor like a barroom fight in here. Finally we couldn't go any farther; I had him pinned up against the safe."

Beckoned by Harkness' calls for help, Kim emerged from the back and started beating on the suspect with an unloaded shotgun, breaking the stock.

When police arrived they found Brown face down on the floor.

Hawke Says Jordan Flips On Jones Bill

RALEIGH (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan has flip-flopped by endorsing a bill he once opposed that would offer public funds to political candidates limit their campaign spending, state GOP Chairman Jack Hawke said today.

"Someone needs to tell North Carolina's taxpayers that Bob Jordan and the Democrat leadership are trying to pull the wool over their eyes again on this issue," Hawke said.

He referred to a published report that Jordan had asked a Democratic leader in the Senate to try to get the bill passed during the summer legislative session. The House approved the measure in 1986

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Walter Jones Jr., D-Pitt, would create a campaign fund with voluntary contributions from checkoffs on state tax forms. A specified amount would be available to candidates who agree to keep spending below ceilings set forth in the bill.

Hawke said he opposed spending limits because they make it hard for challengers to unseat incumbents. But he said his primary objection to the Jones bill was its use of taxpayer funds for campaigns.

Jailers Blamed

jailer for help. The jailer didn't come until 6:43 p.m., when he passed through the cell block on his regular rounds.

At that time the jailer gave McKellar a pill. But McKellar's condition didn't improve, prompting the inmates to renew their calls for help, the report says.

The jailer called an ambulance for McKellar at 8:41. The vehicle arrived three minutes later, just as McKellar slumped over without breath or pulse, the report say.

State Chief Medical Examiner Dr. John Butts said an ambulance should have been called at 8:19 p.m.

"It's reasonable to assume that if the ambulance was called at 8:19 p.m., he would still be among us," said Butts, one of three officials appointed by Kirk to investigate McKellar's death for the task force.

The report says that, by not making sure that McKellar took his pills, the jailers violated the county's medical care plan for the jail — a plan required by state law.

"It is beyond the scope of state government to require implementation of these recommendations," the report says. "However, we strongly encourage officials in Robeson County to consider them."

If the officials don't, Kirk suggested that Robeson County voters elect officials who will.

"Ultimately, it is the people who decide who runs the jail," he said. "It is the voters who elect the sheriff, and the sheriff runs the jail."

Sheriff Hubert Stone, 58, accused the task force of slipshod work.

"There are enough generalities and loose ends in the narrative to make your report seem more an allegation than an investigation," Stone wrote.

Kirk dismissed Stone's criticisms.

"I think that's just political rhetoric — just defensive talk," Kirk said. "We're not out to get Stone. If we had been, we wouldn't have asked for his comments."

Rape Charge

WILMINGTON (AP) — A former Advent Christian minister has been accused of raping one teen-age girl and fondling two others who attended his church.

Clessie Wayne Worley, 39, is accused of raping and molesting one girl on six occasions since 1985, Detective Wilma Jones of the New Hanover County Sheriff's Department said. The girl was 13 when the rapes allegedly began.

The other two girls were 15 at the time of the alleged incidents, Ms. Jones said.

Bank Bandits Elude Police

LOS MOCHIS, Mexico (AP) — Gunmen eluded a huge manhunt early today after fleeing the bank in this northwestern coastal city where their botched robbery turned into a 24-hour hostage drama in which five people were killed.

Unconfirmed local press reports said the robbers took about $13,000 in bank money. Carlos Cano, a policeman participating in the hunt, confirmed some money was taken but declined to say how much.

About 500 police and army personnel backed by a helicopter searched for the seven young men Thursday night and police set up blockades on highways leading out of the city.

"The gunmen must have gone to the Sierra, where it will be difficult to locate them," said Cano. The Sierra Madre mountain range is nearby.

The gunmen had holed up inside the local National Bank of Mexico offices after an alarm foiled their robbery.

They let their 42 hostages go Thursday when they were permitted to flee in an armored car with three Red Cross workers.

Apparently as part of an agreement ending the standoff, most of the hundreds of police who had surrounded the bank withdrew and people massed in the street outside the building.

"This is incredible. These people are supporting the robbers," a woman standing nearby told a reporter.

Police said the robbers released the three Red Cross workers 15 minutes after leaving the bank, abandoning the armored car at a gas station and took off in a stolen pickup truck and station wagon.

One of the Red Cross workers, Rosario Angulo, said there were only five gunmen in the armored car, which he was forced to drive.

"I think the other two mixed in among the crowd at the moment of leaving the bank," he said.

Angulo said the robbers strapped sticks of dynamite to their bodies and toted sawed-off machine guns.

Gov. Francisco Labastida Ochoa of Sinaloa state told the Televisa TV network the release agreement allowed police to pursue the gunmen.

"We're not deceiving anyone," the governor said. "We simply reached an agreement in which we could safeguard lives."

Ignacio Lara, a spokesman for the governor, said the gunmen demanded earlier that they be allowed to leave by air. Police said the robbers were in their late teens or early 20s and had no political motives.

The standoff in Los Mochis, a town of 120,000 on the Gulf of California about 500 miles south of Tucson, Ariz., began at 12:45 p.m. Wednesday when the gunmen took hostages after an alarm alerted police there was a robbery in progress.

Red Cross spokesmen said five people were killed and at least 15 wounded during the attempted robbery and ensuing siege.

Spokesman Jesus Acosta of the local Red Cross said one of its rescue workers was among those killed in a gunfight Wednesday between police and the robbers.

He said the others slain were a customer, bank official and teller, and a policeman who was in the bank on business.

Hostages Greeted

KUWAIT (AP) — Thousands of people greeted with song and dance the 29 Kuwaitis released after a 16-day hijacking ordeal by Shiite Moslem gunmen, who obtained safe passage from Algiers and were said to be home in Lebanon.

Western diplomatic sources said the nine hijackers had reached Beirut.

The two other freed hostages, Saudi Arabian citizens, were flown home in a private executive jet.

Today's editions of The New York Times quoted unidentified Arab officials as saying the hijackers, who had killed two Kuwaiti hostages, were flown on a private Algerian jet to Damascus, Syria, and then were believed to have traveled by land to Beirut.

The officials also were quoted as saying that, with the exception of one Iranian, most of the hijackers were thought to be Lebanese citizens.

Western intelligence sources have said that the nine are believed to be members of Hezbollah, or Party of God, the pro-Iranian extremist group based in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley.

As they arrived in Kuwait Thursday night, women threw roses and confetti at the 22 passengers and seven crew members who had been prisoners in the seized Kuwait Airways Boeing 747.

Israel Shows Off Military Strength

RAMAT GAN, Israel (AP) — F-16 fighter jets swooshed across the sky and paratroopers performed precision jumps as Israel displayed its military might in a 40th Independence Day celebration marred by the Palestinian uprising.

Foreign Minister Shimon Peres visited troops in the occupied West Bank town of Bethlehem and called for restraint in quelling Arab protests in the occupied lands, saying excessive force would only radicalize Palestinians.

"If we act with restraint, they (the Arabs) will realize that violence leads them nowhere, and they will have to look for a solution, and we're ready to talk about a solution," said Peres, head of the center-left Labor Party.

But Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, Peres' political rival, took a hard stand, saying: "The Arab side is still not ready for peace."

Shamir, head of the right-wing Likud bloc, told Israel radio that peace talks "shouldn't take place under the (threat) of stone-throwing and violence."

The fundamentalist Moslem Brotherhood, which has growing support in the territories, issued an underground booklet calling for a stepped-up struggle against Israel.

"Our style of resistance is according to what God told us: Kill them wherever you find them. This is the solution for those who follow the Koran," the Moslem holy book, the booklet said.

Few clashes were reported Thursday in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, the lands Israel captured from Egypt and Jordan in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

General strikes paralyzed towns and cities Thursday in the occupied lands, where about 400,000 Arabs, nearly a third of the population there, remained under curfew for a fifth day.

For a second day, the army closed Israel to Arab residents of the occupied lands. The security measure for Independence Day was to remain in effect until after Moslem prayers today.

Journalists were barred from most parts of the West Bank and Gaza.

Facts About The BIBLE

BY JOHN LEHTI

Copyright© John A. Lehti, Distributor Linage-Plus, Middletown, N.Y. NATIONAL SALES REPRESENTATIVE: Dail Advertising Service, 2702 E. Ash St., Goldsboro, N.C. 27530

NOT ALL THE HERODS WERE VILLAINS!

PHILIP THE TETRARCH, ONE OF THE TWO SONS OF HEROD THE GREAT AND CLEOPATRA OF JERUSALEM, WAS BROUGHT UP AND EDUCATED AT ROME WITH HIS HALF BROTHERS ARCHELAUS AND ANTIPAS. (JOS. ANTIQ. XVII. 1,3) IN A.D.4 HE WAS APPOINTED BY THE EMPEROR AUGUSTUS TETRARCH OF LANDS EAST OF GALILEE, KNOWN THEN AS BATANAEA, TRACHONITIS AND AURANITIS. HIS MENTION IN THE BIBLE OCCURS IN THE BOOK OF LUKE CHAP. 3:1. HE MARRIED SALOME, THE DAUGHTER OF HEROD (MARIAMNE'S SON) AND HERODIAS. HIS CHARACTER WAS EXCELLENT AND HIS RULE WAS MILD AND JUST. HE ENLARGED THE TOWN PANEAS, AT THE SOURCE OF THE JORDAN, AND NAMED IT CAESAREA--IT WAS AFTERWARD OFTEN SPOKEN OF AS CAESAREA PHILIPPI (MATT. 16:13) TO DISTINGUISH IT FROM CAESAREA ON THE SEA. HE RULED FROM A.D. 4 TO A.D. 34, DYING IN THE 20TH YEAR OF THE REIGN OF TIBERIUS CAESAR!

Districts

of Greenville neighborhood historical districting would not be as restrictive as those in cities such as Savannah, Ga., or Charleston, S.C.

"We're not going to tell people what color to paint their house," he said.

He also said neighorhood historical districting is not an attempt to contain East Carolina University by regulated zoning.

"I think, instead, this is an effort to accent the good things that the university has done," Blades said. He mentioned the chancellor's residence, the alumni center and various sorority houses as examples of efforts to restore and preserve significant properties near ECU.

Blades presented a detailed slide show at the Planning and Zoning Commission meeting showing various structures comprising neighborhoods, including the Tar River Neighborhood, which could be targeted for historical designation. Blades also showed slides of several recently demolished structures which he said might have been saved should such a committee had been in existence.

After listening to Blades' presentation, the commission agreed to examine the concept and Blades agreed to provide more details of the plan at future meetings.

BIRTHDAY MESSAGE — A birthday message addressed to American hostage in Lebanon, Alann Steen, was published in Beirut's Independent An-Nahar newspaper Thursday. The message was sent by Steen's wife, Virginia Rose, on the occasion of her husband's 49th birthday. Steen, a native of Boston, lectured at Beirut University College and was abducted with two other American professors and an Indian educator Jan. 24, 1987. (AP Laserphoto)

Letter Closings Show Changes

MENLO PARK, Calif. (AP) — What's in a letter closing — the words used to sign off before the signature?

A lot, according to Walter Macauley, who heads a national temporary and permanent employment service that has placed thousands of secretaries who are involved in corporate correspondence.

"Few things tell us so much about a period in history in so few words," says Macauley, president and CEO of Adia Personnel Services, with headquarters here. "The way we signed off over the centuries is a window into societal values and etiquette of the times."

Long, flowery letter closures reflected an age when people took greater pleasure in writing and reading, often by candlelight, he notes.

In today's hurried world of cellular phones, fax transmissions and electronic mail, letter closures and letters themselves may soon be on the endangered species list, he suggests.

"Before time management became the buzzword of modern business, and keyboards replaced quills, the complimentary close really was complimentary," Macauley says. "Going as far back as the Bible, the Epistle of Paul the Apostle to the Colossians closed: 'This salutation by my own hand — Paul. Remember my chains. Grace be with you. Amen.'

"Closings that show elaborate respect obviously belong to an earlier era," Macauley says. "For example, Don Luis de Velasco, Viceroy of Spanish America, wrote Charles I, King of Spain in the 1500s:

'Your Sacred Catholic Caesarian Majesty's faithful servant who kisses your Majesty's imperial feet ...' "

If there were ever a best seller for closures that survived the centuries, Macauley says, it would have to be: "Your most obedient and most humble servant," as used by Thomas Jefferson to the newly elected president, George Washington. A slight variarion, appearing in a letter from the Duke of Buckingham to King George I, in the early 1600s said: "Your Majesty's Most Humble Slave and Dog ... Steenie."

Initials and abbreviations were common, too, even after a lengthy close. Sometimes, however, this caused confusion, Macauley points out.

"Take the British poet, Alexander Pope, who in the 1700s signed many of his letters and poems A. Pope. For years, during his time and later, people pondered, which Pope?"

Russian playwright Anton Chekhov obviously didn't believe that "less is more," as indicated by his closing to actress Olga Knipper in the 1880s:

"Well, I firmly clasp and kiss your hand. Keep well, cheerful, happy, work, leap, let yourself be carried away, sing and, if possible, don't forget a provincial writer, your zealous admirer ..."

Perhaps, suggests Adia's Macauley, Emily Post said it best in her book, "Etiquette, 1922":

"Ever since the 18th century, the English speaking have been busy pruning away all ornament of expression, even the last remaining graces, 'kindest regards' ... leaving us nothing but an abrupt 'Yours truly.' "

These days, using "Yours truly" would clearly be a mistake, "a platitude — trite and tired," New York handwriting expert and letter collector Charles Hamilton calls it.

Senior Citizen Admits Her Mistake

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I hate to admit this, but I got taken by a man who offered to fix the roof of my house, which was damaged by the wind. He said he had to have $400 in advance to buy the tiles. Like a fool, I took him to the bank with me, drew $400 out of my savings account, and gave it to him.

He was supposed to start the job the next morning, but I never saw him again. I am 72 years old and should have known better.

I realize what a foolish woman I was, and you can use this letter to warn others, but please don't use my name. — TAKEN IN PASADENA, CALIF.

DEAR TAKEN: Thank you for writing to warn others. That crook should not be free to cheat others, so if you have any clues to his identity or whereabouts, report him to the local police. And to others who are approached by strangers: Fly-by-night laborers who don't have the materials to work with are obviously not professional or responsible.

DEAR ABBY: You stated that the most surprising revelation in your fidelity survey was "the number of bisexual males that surfaced."

Yes, there are apparently a large number of males who practice bisexuality. In fact, a recent segment of Gary Collins' "Hour Magazine" TV show reported a figure of 20 percent to 60 percent. In this age of AIDS, the implications are frightening.

Bisexual men are not easily identified, and most are not honest about their sexuality with the women in their lives. Having unwittingly had a relationship with a bisexual man myself, I can vouch for that firsthand. While the bisexual man in my life appeared "straight" and acted very devoted and loving, he was actually hiding from me an ongoing involvement with men.

Please, Abby, try to educate women. The perpetuation of deceit by these men is distressing enough — but AIDS will kill us! — FRIGHTENED IN MADISON

DEAR FRIGHTENED: There is no way to "educate" women as to how to determine whether or not the men in their lives are bisexual. The responsibility to be honest rests with the men who practice bisexuality. Knowing that they are putting their mates at risk, they should admit their bisexual lifestyle. While no man or woman chooses his or her sexuality, they are all responsible for their sexual behavior.

DEAR ABBY: Recently you published a letter from "Soon to Wed," who was upset because her future husband refused to wear his wedding ring. She feared that no one would know that he was married.

Fear not, "Soon to Wed." While I was in basic training in Abilene, Texas, in 1944, I didn't want to wear my wedding ring, but my wife insisted on it. Sure enough, while I was helping to stack large cases in very high stacks, I caught my wedding ring on a nail, and nearly tore my finger off! I never wore my wedding ring again.

My wife and I will celebrate our 52nd wedding anniversary soon, so tell "Soon to Wed" she has nothing to worry about. — LARRY TAYLOR, NASHVILLE, GA.

DEAR LARRY: Congratulations. Your letter was one of many describing the hazards of wearing a ring on the job.

Network Offers Variety Of Services

By MELANIE L. BURNEY
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — For years Victoria Wilson balanced a successful career with raising a family, but it wasn't easy for her or thousands of other women who undertake the roles of career woman, mother and wife.

The answer was simple: a "Working Mothers Network" that offers services, products, publications and programs.

"We thought it was unfair for women to drop out of the workforce and lose their rank or tenure when men don't necessarily have to do that, because they have a wife at home," said Ms. Wilson, president of the 40,000-member national organization.

Ms. Wilson, a former investment banker and the mother of two children, and several professional women were at a 2 a.m. "brainstorming" about career management and raising a family.

"We were thinking how could we juggle having a young child and also the profession we were in was very demanding," she said. "We talked about a lot of the services that would be helpful for women that wanted to work and also have children."

The group developed a list of ideas and with the assistance of students from Wharton's School of Business, compiled services and developed a marketing strategy for the company.

Working Mothers Network was incorporated in 1983 and the organization was formally launched in January 1986.

The organization offers a variety of services including a referral service for housekeepers, childcare workers, discount buying and a quarterly magazine, "Working Mothers Exchange."

Working Mothers Network particularly caters to women who have recently moved to the Philadelphia area and are trying to establish both a career and a home.

"It can take weeks for a working mother to find a child care facility or a person to take care of their child," said Ms. Wilson. "Every day they're constantly working on that one issue — who am I going to get to take care of my child?"

Ms. Wilson said she was luckier than most professional women in that she had a strong support mechanism of family and friends who lived nearby. She returned to the workforce when her son was 3 months old and continued to work once she started college.

"I learned how to use the crockpot and I learned how to cook casseroles," she said. "I'd make an entire week's worth of dinners. Those are the kinds of things we tell members."

The network offers parenting workshops, stress management for working mothers, training in CPR for infants and mailings.

The network initially targeted professional women, but membership now includes blue-collar mothers, single mothers and about 60 men.

Ms. Wilson also holds seminars for "baby maybes," couples considering parenthood.

"I try to let them know what's out there," she said. "It can be done. You learn time-management skills — very quickly."

A Wharton graduate, Ms. Wilson was determined that the organization would be undertaken as a business, not a non-profit organization.

"The entity is a for-profit corporation on purpose," said Ms. Wilson. "I believe firmly that we can address the needs of working mothers and make a profit."

Corporations should be more flexible and responsible toward working mothers, she believes.

"It's important for corporations to be supportive — flex time and sharing of times," she said. That means "giving the woman the opportunity to come back to a job and not start over."

Ms. Wilson admits she had "absolutely no idea" what she was getting herself into. Instead of working 100 hours a week on a merger, she now spends 100 hours a week as president of the network.

The network has a nationwide membership. Most of the services it offers are pilot programs primarily in the Delaware Valley, but Ms. Wilson said she hoped to expand. She has an ambitious goal of 100,000 members by the end of 1988.

'Fun U' Offers A Variety Of Courses

By D.W. PAGE
Associated Press Writer

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — On a cold January night, a dentist, an engineer, a draftsman, a housewife, a real estate saleswoman and half a dozen others gathered around the stove in the kitchen of George Habeeb's downtown restaurant to learn the intricacies of soup making.

They all paid $25 for two hours of Habeeb's expertise. The highlight of the night was the final tasting of the beef soup, chicken soup and clam bisque. No one was disappointed.

But, then, no one expected to pick up all Habeeb's secrets in two hours. They were, in the words of one of the evening's organizers, "looking for an educational one-night stand."

"We're dealing with a large market of people between 20 and 40 who want to learn something new, but because of their busy careers and lifestyles, just don't have time for a long commitment," said Paula Blanchard, a cofounder of Fun-Da-Mental U, otherwise known as Fun U.

Fun U offers two- to three-hour courses on everything from cooking classes, to introduction to massage, to choosing a home computer, to learning how to use that 35mm camera you got for Christmas, to the "Fine Art of Flirting," to something called "Bluffer's Guide to the Opera."

"It's all just for fun," said Bev Sell, Fun U's other founder. "We attract a group of people who don't have much time in their lives and are looking for some planned activity."

Last year, Fun U's first, the school had 2,000 registrants. "That's what we call them because they don't like to be called students," Ms. Blanchard said. The year's favorite offerings were "Bluffer's Guide to Classical Music" and "Great Expectations in a Relationship."

Fun U is a small operation, employing four people who work out of a local hotel suite.

The Learning Annex, on the other hand, is big time, serving a quarter million adults last year in 18 cities in the United States and Canada.

The Annex, which does a million dollars a month in business, is the only publicly held education corporation in the world, according to its founder Bill Zanker.

"We're riding the boom of the '80s and '90s," said Zanker in a phone interview from his office in New York, "because we offer a safe and inexpensive way to meet people.

"And we give people a quick introduction into something they want to know. People don't want to know that much about things, what they want is a quick hit.

"Hey, the singles' bar scene is over. This is a way for people to interact and mingle in a safe atmosphere. Everybody knows how to interact in a classroom," Zanker said.

Ms. Blanchard and Ms. Sell said their typical registrant was a woman in her late 30s, divorced, with an income between $25,000 and $30,000. About 45 percent of the registrants are male — a description that mirrored Zanker's view of his typical student.

"These are folks who are interested in improving their personal lives and careers, and they are interested in meeting new people," Ms. Blanchard said.

"When men discovered that one of the best places to meet women was in our cooking classes, enrollment soared and we had to put a limit on class size," Zanker said with a chuckle.

The Annex has branches in Los Angeles, San Diego, San Francisco, Denver, Washington D.C., Atlanta, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, Houston, Seattle, and Toronto, and four locations in the New York City area.

Zanker's company offers at least seven courses on meeting people, ranging from "Win at the 'Meet' Market" to "How to Marry $ Money." Also in demand are the half dozen computer courses offered.

"Things are changing quickly, and people feel they have to keep up with these changes. We offer a weekend course that will make you literate in computer in that one weekend. It is one of our most popular offerings," Zanker said.

In addition to the regular course offerings, Zanker said his company was marketing video and audiotapes of some courses. "We have a whole new generation of couch potatoes that don't want to leave home for any reason — but still want new information."

Zanker's organization is tailored to react to changing trends and is quick to offer courses to coincide with the latest fad.

"Romance is real big right now. We had over 3,000 women take our 'How To Strip For Your Man' course last month, and we're getting ready to do another national tour. We've also sold about 1,500 videotapes of the course," Zanker said.

Zanker says his business is pretty well self-contained. The company does its own typesetting and printing of its 3 million brochures that are distributed to over 15,000 sites nationwide. The company even has its own delivery trucks to insure the prompt arrival of its latest catalog of courses.

While not in the same league as The Learning Annex, Fun U is looking to spread its wings. Ms. Blanchard and Ms. Sell said they were considering setting up other campuses in Virginia and North Carolina, where they believe there is a market.

MARINE AIR REUNION ... Lt. Col. Walter E. Gregory, USMC retired, chats with Elizabeth Savage and Ralph Heidenreich at a dinner Thursday that ended a reunion of Marine Scout Bombing Squadron 343 here this week. Gregory was commander of VMSB-343 when the squadrom moved to Pitt-Greenville Airport in 1943 to complete its training before being assigned to the Pacific. Heidenreich, of Greenville, was chairman of the reunion, while Mrs. Savage, known as "Mom" to many of the squadron members, was a hostess at the USO, housed in the Women's Club building then at the intersection of Third and Greene Streets. Over 30 percent of the squadron's 250 enlisted men and 50 officers attended the reunion. Brigadier General James M. Mead, Eastern area USMC commanding general from the Marine Corps Air Station at Cherry Point, was guest speaker for the banquet. "What is it that's different," about Marines, Gregory said. "Love ... that's what. They fight because of the Marine beside him ...the legacy of love." (Reflector Staff Photo)

Give Accurate Information

Homemaker's Haven
Evelyn Spangler

When it comes to giving information to your insurance agent, you'll do well to give the facts as accurately as you can. Your premium might be a little smaller if you cut a corner here or there — but misinformation might also invalidate your coverage.

If you have an insurance claim and some piece of information seems inaccurate, the question might come up — did you give the information knowing that it was incorrect, which is fraud, or did you give some incorrect information inadvertently, which is misrepresentation.

Quite often a policy will be declared void if you have willfully concealed or misrepresented any material, fact or circumstances.

So tell the truth, even if it means a higher premium.

FORMALDEHYDE

A couple of new indoor pollutants, namely radon and asbestos, have been getting a lot of attention lately. But an old familiar one is still causing problems for many of us — formaldehyde.

Formaldehyde can lurk in particle board and interior paneling, in permanent press fabrics, in the glue used for carpet backing and even in tobacco smoke. Some mobile home owners have complained of excessive formaldehyde fumes, which may be caused by the amount of wood paneling and particle board used in a relatively small space. However, since 1985, federal standards have regulated the level of formaldehyde emissions allowed in mobile homes.

Formaldehyde has a very pungent odor that can be detected at very small levels by most of us. But individuals do have different sensitivities to formaldehyde emissions, and what bothers one person may not affect another. If you are sensitive to formaldehyde, your reactions could include: burning eye, headache, upper respiratory tract irritation and coughing. Usually these reactions diminish when you leave the area of formaldehyde emissions.

The best way to reduce this pollutant in a home is to remove materials that contain formaldehyde. This usually isn't practical. Instead, various paints, lacquers, varnishes and vinyl papers may be applied to paneling and particle board. Increased ventilation by natural or mechanical means can help, too.

In some cases, lowering the humidity level may help, since formaldehyde emissions seem to increase with high temperatures and humidity. And you can buy monitors to measure formaldehyde emissions in your home for under $50.

For more information about indoor air pollutants, call Extension Teletip at 1 800-662-7301 and ask for Tape 4194. Tape 4191 deals with asbestos in the home.

Candy Gunn Is Chapter Speaker

Candy Gunn was keynote speaker at the meeting of Xi Gamma Xi chapter of Beta Sigma Phi held last week. Her program topic was skin cancer.

She told of interviewing a local author concerning his book skin problems and of potential dangers.

Libby Kinley, ways and means chairman, discussed plans for the Celebrating Spring benefit dance. Proceeds from the event will be used for Pitt County charities.

Founder's Day will be observed April 29 starting at 7 p.m. at the Three Steers by Eta Delta and Xi Gamma Xi chapters.

The meeting was held at the home of Kay Smith.

A roux is a mixture of fat and flour that is cooked before it is combined with a liquid. This allows the finished sauce to be stored and reheated and still keep its consistency.

meeting the criteria for placing military veterans."

According to these three ESC staffers, trends in the types and ages of veterans seeking work continue to change as the years pass by.

"For a long time, Vietnam-era veterans constituted the largest group of veterans we served," McMillin said. "Recently, however, young people who served in the military after Vietnam are probably the most representative of those seeking work. These include a number of veterans who served in Grenada, in Lebanon and in other hot spots worldwide in the past few years."

And it is not male veterans alone who come to ESC seeking employment. The number of females who served one or two tours in the military and are now looking for work in Pitt County continues to grow.

"Just a couple of days ago, I had a most unusual occurrence," McMillin said. "Two couples came in to apply for jobs. All four had served in the military, the older couple during the Vietnam era, the younger just recently separated from service."

In filling job vacancies filed with ESC, veterans get preference in employment. "This criteria is mandated by federal law," Hannan said. "In rare instances, for example, when we have two applicants equally qualified for a job, the veteran gets the first interview with an employee. However," he added, "this does not mean that the non-veteran applicant doesn't have his or her opportunity. The non-vet also gets an interview, and it's up to the employer to make his choice of the two."

Anders pointed out one interesting development applicable to job preferences of veterans. "Female veterans have a much better chance in getting jobs that are open for positions such as clerical and stenographic work, chances ahead of a male veteran with equally good qualifications," he said. "I suppose you could call this an inverse instance of prejudice.

"Another problem faced by some of the younger veterans is that they have been trained in the military as specialists in such fields as radar," Anders said. "With a rare exception, in some specialized areas there are no comparable jobs in civilian life for veterans with such specilizations. This can create a problem and, understandably, disappointment on the part of an applicant."

Older veterans, those who served during Korea and World War II, though not constituting a large percentage of veterans seeking jobs, still do seek ESC assistance from time to time.

"It wasn't long ago that we helped a 72-year-old World War II veteran get work," Hannan said. "But as time passes, veterans who served after Vietnam will become the dominant group we will be working with."

Employment records maintained by the Greenville ESC office show that in fiscal year 1986, a total of 423 veterans were placed in jobs. For the period July 1, 1986, through June 30, 1987, the number was higher — 446 individual veteran placements.

"It looks like at this time the number of placements of veterans for the current fiscal year will be equally high," McMillin said.

"A large proportion of veteran placements are in the fields of industrial work and construction," Anders said.

"A substantial number are placed in jobs in county and state agencies, too," McMillin added, "with some going into administrative positions."

And what about those instances where the type of job a veteran wants cannot be found locally? "That usually poses no problem, provided an applicant is willing to relocate outside the area," Hannan said. "That is true also for non-vets. We have a computer listing of jobs available throughout North Carolina and for that matter, nationally, that we can hook into to see what is available in other localities."

Seating Challenged

In a letter to Ms. Sanders dated April 20, Morton, the state travel and tourism director, said, "I was given a copy of your ... letter ... which actually should have been addressed to me.

"I assure you that I was deeply, deeply saddened to read it. You have said some very unkind things to and about people who had nothing to do with the subject of your letter.

"I — and I alone — made the decision as to who would sit at the head table at each of our three sit-down functions," Morton said.

"As you may have heard me say on televison or at two of those three functions, we owed a tremendous debt to four distinct groups (Piedmont and American Airlines, the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce and East Carolina University) plus 30 others who could not be seated at the head table on Monday night. I had to sit those four groups at the head table Monday night because collectively they have donated some $100,000-plus to our cause during this past calendar year.

"You will note," Morton continued, "that Carolina Telephone & Telegraph Co, which donated nearly $7,000 to the conference, was not represented at the head table, nor was the chairman of the Pitt County Commission, nor the editor of the newspaper, nor the managers of the three major contributing hotels.

"Space simply did not permit it, even though those people — and many, many others — deserved recognition.

Morton said that he had "reflected on your letter to Mr. Dixon ..." and "I have found a sense of joy in it, a sense of satisfaction that I really need to share with you and with the others who received your letter to Mr. Dixon. The actual fact is that it was not until Monday night, when I introduced him from the floor, that I realized that your mayor, Mr. Carter, is a black man. That in itself is a major victory, if you will, and something of which you should be very, very proud.

"You see, we spend hours and hours going over every detail of the conference with Ed Walker and the fine staff of the chamber. Not once did it occur to Ed Walker to tell us that Mr. Carter is a black man. The color of his skin is not what makes Ed Walker — or me — respect Mayor Carter. We respect him because he is a human being. In fact, and I hope you will take this in the positive light in which I say it, had I known before Monday night that Mayor Carter is a black man ... it wouldn't have made a bit of difference whatsoever in my decision."

Concluding, Morton said, "I am darn proud to say to you that Greenville and the state of North Carolina have reached a milestone. I honestly did not know until the banquet that your mayor is black, and that is all to the credit of the Greenville chamber. To Ed Walker, your able chamber executive, the color of the mayor's skin was not an important matter worth mentioning to the person who was designating seats at the head table."

COMPETING FOR ATTENTION!
When you decide to sell your home, is it possible to influence prospective buyers so your home will sell more quickly? Yes, it is.
Buyers, you see, make their decision to purchase based on having compared a variety of properties. They may inspect from three to twenty homes before deciding which property is most suitable for them. Thus, your home will actually be in competition with other similar homes, vying from the favorable attention of purchasers.
When comparing such similar homes, purchasers are most influenced by price/terms and conditions of the homes. If two homes are average in condition, and the third looks and smells like a model home, it will no doubt be the choice, provided it is not substantially higher in price. A home in eyecatching condition may, however justify a slightly higher price.
Next, take three similar homes, all in average condition. If one is priced five percent lower than the others, it could be the preferred choice. Price, in that situation might be the deciding factor.
More simply put, purchasers are influenced favorably by superior condition, lower price, or both. They are influenced negatively by higher prices and poor condition.
To gain maximum attention from buyers, pay close attention to the price and condition of your home.

Early Lead Keys Bucs' Win

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

East Carolina baseball coach Gary Overton felt getting an early lead against North Carolina was important because it played to both the Pirates' and starting pitcher Gary Smith's strengths.

And an early 2-0 lead was all Smith needed as he pitched his second complete game of the year and scattered five hits to lead the Pirates to a 3-1 victory over the Tar Heels in college baseball action Thursday afternoon.

"Gary Smith was masterful," Overton said. "He's been throwing well the last few weeks. He responded very well.

"I thought the key to this game was getting on top early. Then we could sit back and play defense and allow Gary Smith to do what he does best, pitch with a lead."

Smith put down the Tar Heels three in a row to open the game with a strikeout and two pop flies. Then his teammates went out and gave him the lead he needed.

David Ritchie and Steve Godin opened the bottom of the inning with consecutive singles. One out later, Jay McGraw brought both runners home with another single to make it 2-0.

The Pirates added another run in the fourth when McGraw doubled and moved up on a ground out by John Adams before scoring off an error by third baseman Darin Campbell to make it 3-0.

Smith retired nine consecutive batters to open the game before giving up his first hit to Tom Nevin to open the fourth. But Nevin was quickly thrown out trying to steal second by catcher Chris Cauble. With two outs, Ron Maurer followed with a base on balls but Chris Lauria grounded out to end the inning and the threat.

UNC came back to score its only run of the game in the fifth when Jesse Levis and designated hitter Brad Woodall each singled with one out. A walk to Chris Defranco loaded the bases before courtesy runner Paul Warzocha scored on Darren Villani's sacrifice fly.

"I felt if he got in any more trouble I would have taken him out," Overton said. "That's when I went to the mound. I told him not to worry about about the one run. I was more worried about not giving up the big inning."

And Smith came through for the Pirates as Nevin popped out to end any threat before he came back to retire the side three in a row in the sixth.

The Tar Heels missed a key chance in the seventh when they put runners at second and third with two outs only to have the inning end on another pop fly.

Then in the eighth, Campbell hit a hard liner to center where John Thomas came up with a tough catch for the out. That brought UNC coach Mike Roberts out on the field to argue the call and it eventually led to his ejection from the game in the bottom of the seventh. From there, Mark Halvorsen took over coaching duties.

It was the fifth straight loss for the Tar Heels, who drop to 24-20.

"We've been struggling the last few games," Halvorsen said. "We had a couple of balls that we hit real hard. Our third baseman had a couple that would have been out of here had it not been for the wind."

In the ninth, the Pirates got two quick outs as Lauria and Dave Arendas popped out to center. Levis then lined a shot into the gap between second and third but Ritchie made the play on the ball and threw to first for the put out to end the game.

"We made some sparkling defensive plays out there," Overton said. "David Ritchie made a superb play. They are an explosive offensive club. They were in the middle of the order and anytime they put runners on base, you are in jeapordy of having the game tied."

McGraw went 2-4 with a double and two RBI to lead the Pirates, who move to 27-11 and return to action today against UNC in Chapel Hill at 6 p.m.

Smith moves his record to 6-2 on the year.

"Although Gary normally gives up quite a few hits, he keeps run production down," Overton said. "He threw his best game of the year (today)."

Rose Remains Unbeaten After 11-4 Win Over Hunt

By TIM CHANDLER
Reflector Sports Writer

Rose High School overcame a sluggish start Thursday afternoon at Guy Smith Stadium to record an 11-4 victory over Wilson Hunt High High School in Big East Conference baseball action.

The victory kept the Rampants' winning streak alive with a 12-0 mark overall and a 4-0 league record. Hunt dipped to 6-5 overall and 1-4 in the Big East.

The game looked to be a pitcher's duel from the outset as both Tom Moye (4-0) for Rose and Chris Davis (2-2) for Hunt sat down the sides in order for the first two innings.

After Moye had sat down three more Warrior batters in a row, the Rampants finally broke onto the scoreboard in the bottom half of the third frame. Jamie Brewington and Chris Christopher started the inning off by receiving bases on balls.

A Timmie Moore sacrifice fly to center allowed Brewington to score, while David Leisten punched Christopher home with an infield fly.

"Neither team seemed to go at it very hard for the first couple of innings," Rose head coach Ronald Vincent said. "Their pitcher had a very good game, I think he just got tired by the end of the game."

The Warriors picked up their first hit of the game in the fourth inning when Marquis Spells lined a single to right on a check swing. The Rampants, however, stiffened to erase any scoring opportunities.

Rose came up with its patented big inning in the bottom of the fifth frame when it sent 10 men to the plate and scored a quintet of runs.

Brewington, Christopher and Heath Clark, the seven, eight and nine hitters in the Rampant batting order, loaded the bases with a pair of Davis walks and a Warrior error. Moore then drilled a double to left to score Brewington and Christopher.

David Leisten was next to produce runs for Rose as he pelted a single to left to score both Clark and Moore. The final run of the inning, which also sent Davis packing to the bench for Hunt, came courtesy of a David Daniels rip to the centerfield fence, which scored Leisten.

"I felt that Brewington, Christopher and Clark were really the offensive keys to the game," Vincent said. "They made things happen for us offensively in two seperate innings."

Hunt head coach Russell Williams agreed.

"You've got to hand it to Greenville," Williams said. "They are strong top to bottom. Today it was the seven, eight and nine hitters that got on base and got them rolling. They can just beat you in so many ways."

The Warriors battled back within striking distance in the top half of the sixth inning with a four-run explosion. The inning started off with a Jim Williamson bloop double down the rightfield line. Wayne Sullivan then reached base after being struck by a Moye pitch.

Spells pushed the first run of the inning across with an RBI single to left. From there, Richard Tucker took care of the rest of the work as he pounded a three-run homer over the leftfield fence to pull the Warriors within 7-4.

The Rampants spoiled any hopes for a Hunt comeback in the bottom of the inning with a four-run burst to ice the game.

The Rampants will be back in action in the Big East race on Saturday against Fike in Wilson. Hunt will be off until Tuesday night when they will travel to Northern Nash for a conference matchup.

Spring Game Is Set For Saturday

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

The end of spring drills comes Saturday afternoon and head coach Art Baker is still looking for answers to some of the problems that his Pirates entered this practice session with a month ago.

The Pirates hold their annual Purple-Gold scrimmage amid the hoopla and hubbub of the 5th annual Great Pirate Purple/Gold Pigskin Pig-out Party, which got underway Thursday and will continue through the spring game. Kickoff in the game is scheduled for 3:30 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium on Saturday.

The Pirates, for the first time in some time, have an experienced and talented quarterback to lead the team in Travis Hunter. And the offense, for the most part is experienced and fairly talented also.

But the Pirates are still looking for a quality backup for Hunter. Currently Brad Walsh, who saw limited duty last year, is in that role, but is several steps behind Hunter in his abilities.

The Pirates also have not found anyone to fill the shoes of kick Chuck Berleth, and that worries Baker, too.

Then, on defense, the Pirates must do a great deal of rebuilding. Only one member of the front seven returns, defensive tackle Mike Applewhite. The Pirates are switching to an eight-man front this year, but they have little experience to draw from. Three starters to return in the backfield, however, although all-South selection Ellis Dillahunt has completed his eligibility.

With two new coordinators, Baker is hopeful of reviving the Pirate team that nearly pulled out a winning season last season and getting over that hump for the first time since 1983.

Richard Bell has taken over as defensive coordinator and Baker thinks that he has brought a new confidence to the unit. "It features a lot of stunting and blitzing and it does a good job of disguising what we're going to do," Baker said. "The offense doesn't know whether we're coming in or dropping back." That confusion, Baker hopes, will help the Pirates make up for its lack of experience.

Still, the linebacker situation is unsettled, and Baker freely admits that three incoming freshmen could play prominent roles this fall. They are 6-3, 210-pounder Jerry Dillon, 6-2, 215-pound Ernie Lewis and 6-2, 210-pound Robert Jones.

On the offensive side of the ball, Kevin Gilbride, who joined the staff late last year, has moved up to coordinator and brings in a wealth of knowledge on the run-and-shoot offense of the Pirates. Gilbride's knowledge of the game, combined with Hunter's talents, have given the Pirates a strong offensive unit.

"Travis has had a good spring," Baker said. "Gilbride's knowledge of the offense has helped Travis improve a great deal."

One of the few losses the Pirates suffered on offense was fullback Anthony Simpson, a hard-runner who led the team in rushing last season. But Tim James, who moves in as his replacement, may give the Pirates even more. "He can take the ball up the middle, but he can also get outside, and he's a better pass receiver," Baker said.

The Pirates are also rich in running back talents with the like of Reggie McKinney and Jarrod

O's In A Baseball Nightmare

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Baltimore Orioles are caught in baseball's ultimate nightmare. And try as they may, they can't wake up.

In every game — 15 and counting — they've been turned away without a victory in a frustrating, improbable and record-setting start to a season that is not yet three weeks old.

"You can't believe it, nobody can," Orioles pitcher Scott McGregor said. "I don't care if you were trying to lose, you couldn't lose this many games, even if you went out there and didn't even give a damn."

McGregor is the latest Baltimore pitcher to fail in an attempt to stop the longest season-opening losing streak in major league history.

The Milwaukee Brewers raked him for six runs in the third inning Thursday on the way to beating Baltimore 7-1. It sent the Orioles packing for Kansas City in search of victory.

The Orioles broke the major league record with the 14th straight loss Wednesday night. No. 15 not only extended the start-of-season record but also set a franchise record for consecutive losses.

"I feel as much pressure as I've ever felt. I feel the kind of pressure I felt on clubs in pennant races," Orioles center fielder Fred Lynn said. "People say, 'How can there be pressure in last place?' There's tremendous pressure. It's not a monkey on our backs now. It's Godzilla."

McGregor, 0-3, became the third Baltimore starter to be pounded by the Brewers, who have won five straight. Orioles starters gave up 18 hits and 18 runs in nine innings in the series.

"We just have to keep plugging away and praying and smiling and going after them," McGregor said. "I went out there and had great intentions of throwing a shutout and stopping things, but before I could do anything about it they had six runs on board."

"The way things are going with this team right now, it's boom, five or six pitches, and all of a sudden the other team has six runs on the board and it just crushes the team morale."

Greg Brock's two-run double and Bill Schroeder's two-run homer capped the six-run outburst against McGregor, who hasn't won a game since last May.

"It's baseball, let's not turn it into a funeral parlor," McGregor said. "You've got to laugh. You've got to have fun. You can't afford to take it seriously or it'll give you ulcers."

Orioles manager Frank Robinson might be a candidate for some type of stomach treatment after the team's ninth straight loss since he replaced Cal Ripken Sr.

Sutton Leads USF & G Classic

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Hal Sutton has changed his way of looking at things. Or at least he's changed his way of looking at the golf ball.

"I'd been looking up, raising my head," Sutton said. "So last week, I started looking at the center of the ball, instead of the back of the ball, where I'd catch myself looking at the club going back.

"A couple of times, on putts, I'd even close my left eye. You're not going to look up with one eye closed.

"I think I have that problem licked. There'll be others that crop up, but I've got that one beat."

He also beat the rest of the field with a 7-under-par 65 on Thursday that gave him the first-round lead in the $750,000 USF&G Classic.

Barkley Gets Sixers Back In Race

By The Associated Press

With Charles Barkley leading the way, the Philadelphia 76ers have regained control of their NBA playoff destiny.

Barkley scored 38 points and grabbed 19 rebounds Thursday night to lead the 76ers over the New Jersey Nets 104-101. Barkley shot 14 for 19 and grabbed 11 rebounds off the offensive boards.

He also handed out four assists and blocked two shots.

If the Sixers win their final two games of the season, they can extend their playoff streak to 13 consecutive years.

The battle for the last two playoff spots in the Eastern Conference is going down to the last weekend of the regular season with the 76ers, New York Knicks, Washington Bullets and Indiana Pacers all in the race.

The Knicks and Pacers, who play each other Saturday, are tied with 37-43 with the Bullets a half-game back and the 76ers another half-game further behind.

The 76ers visit Cleveland Saturday night and Detroit on Sunday. New York plays at Milwaukee tonight before going to Indiana on Saturday. Washington has one game left, playing host to the Atlanta Hawks on Saturday.

"One game at a time, that's what we have to do," said Cliff Robinson, who scored 17 points and had eight rebounds against the Nets. "We're on the road and we've got to play well, real well."

Sixers coach Jim Lynam said he likes his team's position.

"We've been dodging the bullet for about a month," Lynam said. "I like that we now control our fate."

Barkley's two free throws snapped a 98-98 tie and 47 seconds later he tapped in a field goal to make the score 102-98.

The loss was the 15th straight for the Nets and their 12th consecutive defeat on the road as they approached the end of their worst season since entering the league in 1976-77.

Dennis Hopson led New Jersey with 23 points.

Pistons 99, Bullets 87

Adrian Dantley scored 18 of his 31 points in the second half to lead Detroit over Washington as the Pistons set a team-record 53 victories.

After Washington tied the game at 45 with the first basket of the second half, Detroit opened up a lead of as many as eight points before the Bullets trimmed it to 76-71 after three quarters. Dantley scored four points and Isiah Thomas added two to give the Pistons an 82-72 lead with 10:15 remaining, and Washington was never able to get closer than five points the rest of the way.

Moses Malone led the Bullets with 23 points and 11 rebounds.

Celtics 126, Bulls 119

Larry Bird scored 44 points and Boston held off several fourth-quarter Chicago surges to lead the Celtics over the Bulls. The loss snapped the Bulls' six-game winning streak and their seven-game road-victory string.

Bird's total left him 63 points short of John Havlicek's team record of 2,338 points in one season. However, Bird may not play in the Celtcis' final two regular-season games at Atlanta tonight and at Chicago on Sunday. He sprained his left ankle with 4:49 left in the game and said he would decide this morning whether to make the trip. Coach K.C. Jones and Dr. Arnold Scheller, the team physician, said he'd stay home.

Michael Jordan led Chicago with 39 points.

Spurs 117, Rockets 116

Mike Mitchell's jump shot at the buzzer boosted San Antonio over Houston, the Spurs' first victory in Houston since Jan. 25, 1985.

Frank Brickowski scored with 49 seconds left to give the Spurs a 115-113 lead. Houston's Allen Leavell's layup tied the score and he then hit a free throw to give the Rockets a 116-115 lead with 12 seconds left.

But Mitchell picked up a loose ball after Houston's Akeem Olajuwon blocked Rick Wilson's shot and hit the winning basket to give the Spurs their eighth road victory of the season.

San Antonio was led by Alvin Robertson with 24 points. Olajuwon equaled his season scoring high of 38 points, grabbed 10 rebounds and had a season-high 10 blocked shots.

Purple-Gold Game

Moody, who are listed as probable starters for the fall. They have outstanding receivers such as Walter Wilson, and the play of the backfield unit has prompted Baker to say that the passing game is very much improved over where it was a year ago.

The blocking of the line will be a key, no doubt, and nearly everyone will be back here. Billy Michel, one of the guards, missed the whole spring, recovering from a knee injury suffered last year against Virginia Tech, but he is still expected to gain a starting nod come the fall.

Otherwise, the Pirates have Grant Lowe and Todd Drugac back at the tackles, and Stewart Southall back at guard, although he will not play Saturday due to a broken ankle suffered during the spring.

Kyle Condrey returns to hold down the center spot.

"I'm not real happy that we haven't built a solid second unit," Baker said. "We just haven't been consistent with the second unit."

With Applewhite the only man back up front, the Pirates have a lot of rebuilding to do, along with the learning of a new system. Carl Carney is expected to handle the other tackle position, while Joe Bright, a red-shirted freshman and Ken Portis, a senior without major experience, move in at the ends.

Flint McCallum will move into one of the outside linebacker slots while Brian McPhatter will be at the other. Compton McCurry and James Singletary are leading candidates at the inside spots.

Ed Brodgen moves from the corner to free safety with Junior Robinson and Ricky Torain at the two corner spots.

The kicking game returns Craig Losito to punt, and he may also end up handling the placement duties. No one, however, has stepped forward to adequately replace Berleth.

Saturday, the Purple team will consist of the first and fourth offensive units, while the second and third units will be the Gold team.

The team breakdowns are as follows:

Raiders Trade Jones

HOUSTON (AP) — Change is nothing new for defensive end Sean Jones, the newest Houston Oiler.

He was born in Jamaica, raised in New Jersey and was a resident of California until Thursday when the Houston Oilers traded one of their first-round picks to the Los Angeles Raiders for the 6-foot-7, 285-pound Jones.

"I've lived in the heat and the cold, I've got a New Jersey accent and California grooviness," Jones said. "Life is a series of adjustments. I don't think I'll have any problems fitting in with the Oilers."

The Oilers, hoping to bolster their defense in Sunday's NFL draft, decided a trade would be in their best intetests.

"We liked Sean Jones better than anyone else we feel we could have gotten with the ninth selection in the first round," Oilers General Manager Ladd Herzeg said.

"We studied film of him and feel he will be an outstanding addition to our football team."

Jones, from Northeastern, was a second-round pick by the Raiders in 1984 and led the American Football Conference with 15½ sacks in 1986.

Interest Groups Rate N.C. Congressmen

WASHINGTON — Many of the capital's special interests have issued vote ratings for the 1987 session of Congress, giving constituents an important yardstick for measuring where individual lawmakers stood on the year's major House and Senate roll calls.

To the extent that lawmakers can be judged by the company they keep on key legislative issues, this summary may prove useful to voters weighing whether incumbents deserve their support in this year's congressional elections.

Interest groups already are getting mileage out of their ratings, using them not only to plan endorsements and direct the flow of campaign contributions, but also to provide their memberships with a listing of friends and foes on Capitol Hill.

"As union members and their families get ready to go the polls in 1988, this voting record gives them an accounting of how their lawmakers voted on critical issues in 1987," wrote AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland to his membership.

From the other side of the spectrum, the American Conservative Union recently told followers "our ratings have become the standard by which to measure the conservative-liberal trends of members of Congress and Congress as a whole."

Here are descriptions of lobbies represented in the following summary.

1. AFL-CIO: The collective, powerful voice of organized labor.

2. Americans for Democratic Action: A respected liberal lobby now in its fifth decade.

3. Consumer Federation of America: A left-of-center lobby that uses a broad difinition of consumerism in picking issues for its voting report card.

4. National Council of Senior Citizens: A labor-funded group that advocates federal programs for the aged.

5. American Security Council: A hawkish lobby whose National Security Voting Index authoritatively measures sentiment toward military spending.

6. American Conservative Union: A 24-year-old group that calls itself "the oldest and most influential conservative lobbying group in Washington."

7. Chamber of Commerce of the United States: A powerful and respected business lobby.

8. Christian Voice: A right-of-center group that rewards lawmakers who vote conservatively on international issues and "key moral issues such as abortion, drug abuse and AIDS."

These are the ratings given by eight interest groups to North Carolina congressmen on the percent of times or how frequently they cast votes for or against a particular interest group's policy goals.

Walter Jones, D-1, was given an 87 percent by the AFL/CIO, 56 percent by the Americans for Democratic Action, 57 percent by the Consumer Federation of America, 88 percent by the National Council of Senior Citizens, 0 percent by the American Security Council, 0 percent by the American Conservative Union, 21 percent by the Chamber of Commerce and 0 percent by the Christian Voice.

Jim Garner Recovering

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor James Garner was in satisfactory condition after undergoing quintuple bypass surgery to alleviate a heart problem he attributed to cigarettes.

"He had five hours of surgery in which the coronary arteries of his heart were bypassed. The surgery went very smoothly," Ron Wise, spokesman for Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, said Thursday.

Garner, 60, entered the medical center, sometimes called "hospital to the stars" for its celebrity patients, on Monday for tests. He has blamed his heart problem on cigarette smoking.

Doctors had planned to perform surgery for an aneurysm, or ballooning, of his aorta, the main artery carrying blood from the heart. But a series of tests conducted this week determined that Garner should have a quintuple bypass.

'Tour Of Duty' Is Hard Work, Star Says

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — When Terence Knox signed on to play Sgt. Zeke Anderson in CBS' Vietnam war series "Tour of Duty," it sounded like a dream job — a starring role in a network show shot on location in beautiful Hawaii.

"It's not what it's cracked up to be. It's work," said Knox on a recent visit to drizzly New York.

"I hasten to say that what we go through is nothing compared to what the veterans went through in real warfare, but I can at least appreciate it a little bit, at least a Peeping Tom's perspective on being away from home in a hot place where it rains a lot and where you don't really see civilians."

"Civilians" for Knox and the rest of the cast and crew are the tourists who stay at the same Honolulu hotel. There is no fraternizing.

"People come in waves of like two weeks in Hawaii, so there's no meaningful relationship to be struck up here," joked the young and single Knox.

A typical 14-hour shooting day is often spent crawling around in dusty tunnels or muddy swamps. Sometimes across the island, the CBS detective series "Magnum, P.I." would be filming, in a decidedly more genteel atmosphere where series stars don't have to worry about being killed off in the name of authenticity. Kevin Conroy was the first casualty among the regulars on "Tour."

"None of us is immune. I'm glibly sitting here munching french bread in a restaurant today, but we'll see," said Knox, whose job is presumably safe since he has top billing.

Knox is deeply dedicated to the series, and frustrated by the lack of audience. "Tour" premiered last fall with a sophisticated, film-quality style, good writing and fine performances. But it has not prospered in the ratings.

It spent most of the season opposite "The Cosby Show" on Thursday night at the unseemly early hour of 8 p.m. Eastern time. Its ratings improved somewhat in its new Saturday 9 p.m. time period. CBS executives, who will announce the network's fall schedule in May, say they remain confident in the show.

The way Knox plays him, Sgt. Anderson is a no-nonsense guy who has re-upped for the second time after finding a kind of success on the battlefield he couldn't find in civilian life. Anderson has no interest in politics, he just wants to get his men out alive.

Veterans groups praised CBS when it announced plans for "Tour of Duty" last year. The response from viewers who are veterans has been "overwhelmingly positive," Knox said. He said the show gets a lot of mail from veterans who say they were unable to talk about their experiences until they saw "Tour of Duty."

"CBS didn't undertake this show as therapy for anybody," Knox said.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Be sure you don't commit yourself to any large expenditures today. This is a good time to do some spring cleaning at home.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): If you plan your day carefully in the morning, you won't run into delays and other difficulties. Be sure to avoid any arguments today.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Some boring tasks have to be handled sooner or later, so take care of them and get them off your mind. Be tactful with your mate.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Don't be forceful in pursuing your personal goals, or you could offend a great many people. Get into business matters early today.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): You will get an idea this morning that should be put in motion quickly, since later on some problems will require your total attention.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Work on business matters this morning, then do something that will make your mate happy. Don't be frivolous this evening.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): An unkind word was not meant the way you interpreted it, so don't take offense. Take care of telephone calls you have been putting off.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Don't let someone with an inflated ego annoy you and cause you to lose your temper. Be sure you don't overexert yourself this evening.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Don't be extravagant tonight where recreation is concerned. Put together a creative plan which you can follow without much trouble.

There is nothing more exciting in bridge than the duel between a skilled declarer and expert defenders in a contract that is touch-and-go. Some years ago, four of the best players in the land locked horns on this deal.

South's third-hand opening bid was a classic vulnerable weak two-bid. West's double and North's raise were standard, and East elected to compete on the strength of his five-card suit and potentially working cards in partner's suits. South's bid of four spades was a two-way action—he did not think his side had much in the way of defense (as it happens, the 2-2 spade break would be just enough for a one-trick set), and four spades might even have proved makable.

Against most players, that would have been an accurate assessment. Unfortunately, he was up against stalwart defenders. East overtook his partner's king of hearts with the ace to shift to the jack of diamonds. That ran to dummy's queen. Since the only hope for the contract was to set up the clubs to take care of a second diamond loser, declarer came to hand with a trump and led a club. West continued with the fine work of the defenders by inserting the queen.

This trick was won by dummy's king, and when a club came back it was again East's turn to take center stage. He shot up with the jack of clubs and reverted to diamonds, and two tricks in that suit spelled finis to declarer's hopes.

Note that if West plays a low club or the ace on the first lead, the contract is home. Declarer can set up and run the clubs using trumps as entries, and East cannot gain the lead to push a second diamond through declarer's king.
