Israel Will Execute Demjanjuk As War Criminal

By MARY SEDOR
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — An Israeli court today sentenced John Demjanjuk to be executed for war crimes committed as "Ivan the Terrible," a Nazi guard who ran gas chambers where about 800,000 Jews died.

"He was a chief hangman who with his own hands killed tens of thousands with cruelty ... We sentence him to death," said Judge Zvi Tal. Onlookers clapped and shouted as the sentence was announced. Some chanted "Bravo." Others shouted: "Death, death."

Last week, the court convicted the 68-year-old retired Ohio autoworker of Nazi war crimes. It said he was responsible for the deaths of thousands of Jews at the Treblinka concentration camp in occupied Poland. About 800,000 Jews died in 1942 and 1943, when "Ivan" worked at the camp.

Only one man has ever been executed in Israel's 40-year history. Adolf Eichmann, architect of the Holocaust, was hanged in 1962.

Demjanjuk attended today's sentences in a wheelchair, complaining of back problems. He entered the courtroom moments before the verdict was read, shouting in Hebrew: "I am innocent."

A Christian, he was seen making the sign of the cross and whispering to himself, apparently praying, during arguments from prosecutors who demanded the death penalty.

After the verdict he was wheeled away, expressionless and ringed by riot police.

Demjanjuk's lawyers have said they will appeal his conviction to the Supreme Court. The verdict followed a trial that lasted 14 months.

Tal's statement after three hours of judicial deliberation drew applause and whistling from hundreds of Israelis in the audience, including survivors of the World War II Nazi Holocaust.

Several hundred onlookers had crowded into the converted movie theater to hear the verdict. Earlier, longtime observers said they expected the death penalty because of the sweeping guilty verdict which discounted each defense argument.

"There is no forgiveness in the law or the heart ... (Holocaust) victims are still crying out to us," said Tal, who was born in Poland. "Even a thousand deaths cannot compensate."

Demjanjuk's son, 22-year-old John Jr., said his family had expected a death sentence.

"It amounts to nothing less than the judicial murder of an innocent man," he said. "It will bring shame to the state of Israel, the Israeli Justice Department, the U.S. Justice Department, and most unfortunately

'A Nation At Risk'

Bennett Says Schools Still 'Cavalier' About Change

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
AP Education Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Education Secretary William J. Bennett says American schools "have begun the long climb back," but the nation is "still at risk" from an academic system rife with mediocrity and resistant to change.

Bennett's assessment is contained in a follow-up report requested by President Reagan for the fifth anniversary of a biting critique of U.S. education that was called "A Nation At Risk."

He says American teen-agers are taking more math, science and advanced placement courses, and scoring somewhat higher on college-entrance and other tests.

But "curricular foolishness has not been eliminated from American high schools," he said, and the schools "are still much too cavalier about homework."

In his evaluation of the impact of school reform, called "American Education: Making It Work," Bennett said:

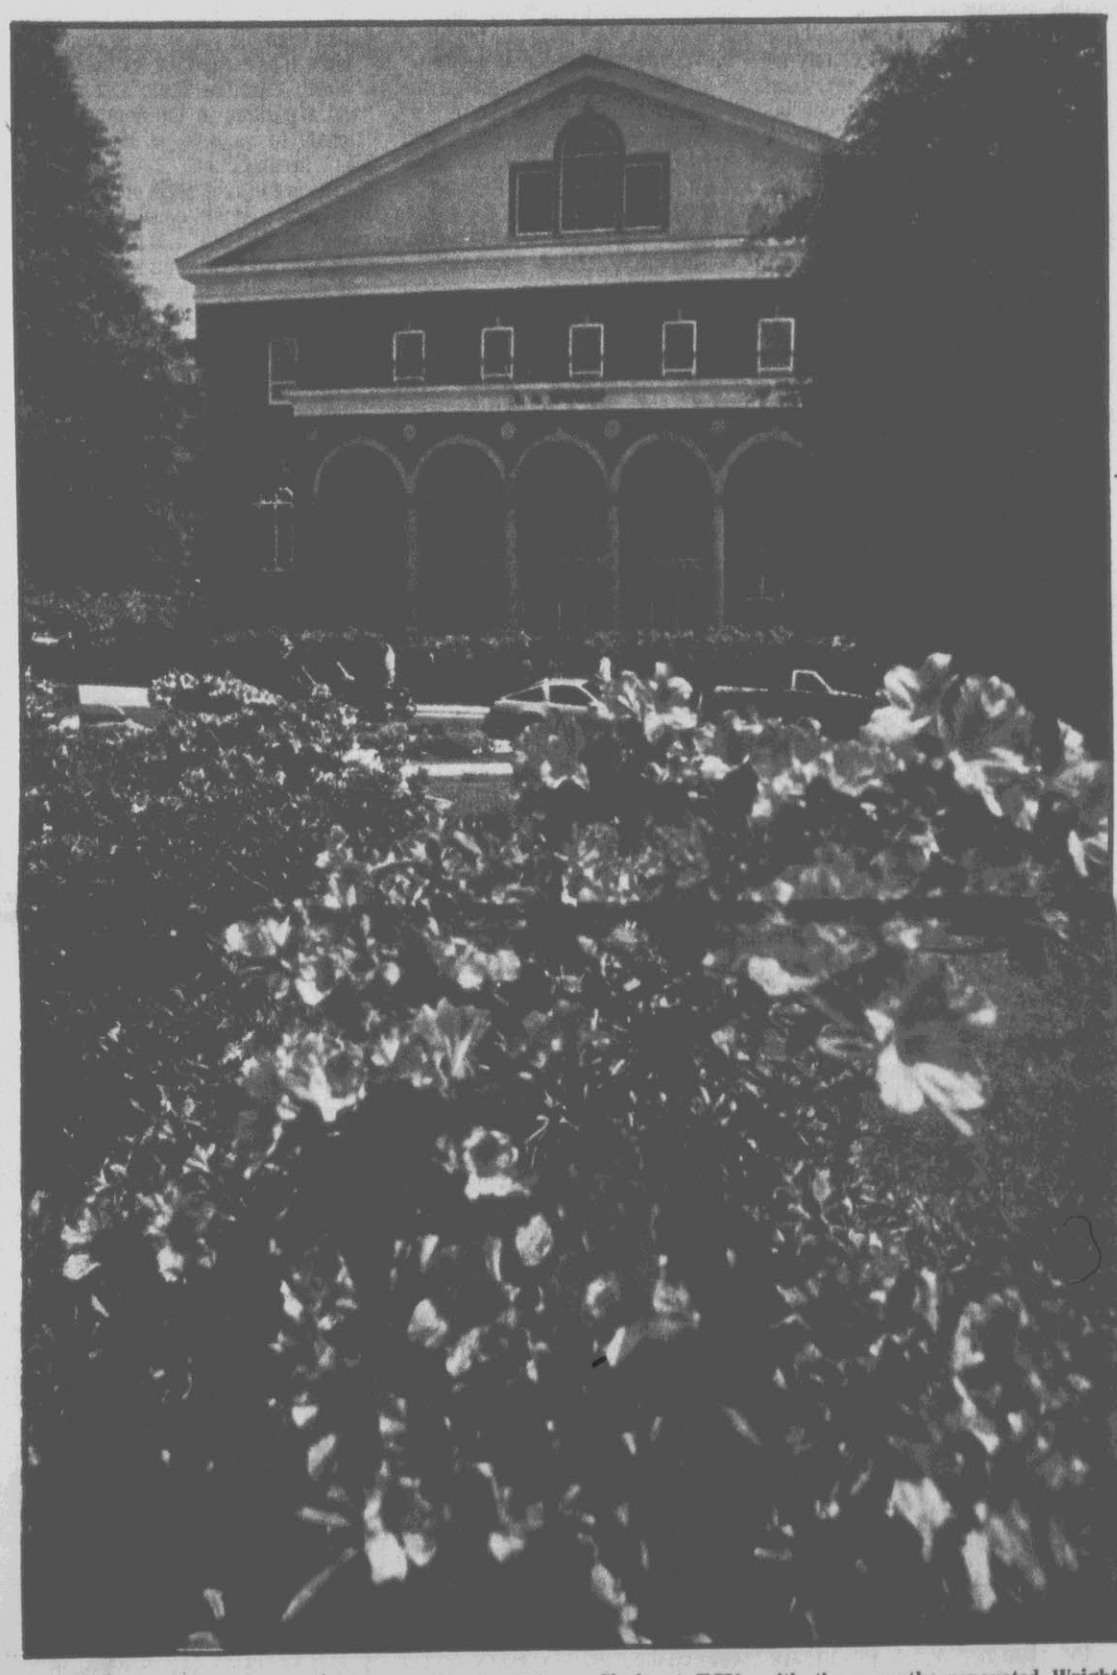

"American education has made some undeniable progress in the last few years. The precipitous downward slide of previous decades has been arrested, and we have begun the long climb back to reasonable standards. ...

"We are doing better than we were in 1983. But we are certainly not doing well enough. ... We are still at risk."

Bennett will deliver his report to Reagan in a White House ceremony Tuesday, the fifth anniversary of the provocative report by the National Commission on Excellence in Education that warned of "a rising tide of mediocrity" in U.S. schools.

The National Education Association, which is frequently at odds with Bennett, planned to mark the anniversary Tuesday with a protest in Lafayette Park across from the White House.

Court To Re-Examine Ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court said today it will consider overturning a key civil rights precedent, prompting four dissenting justices to accuse the court of undermining the trust minority groups have in it.

The court, in an extraordinary move, said it will use a North Carolina case involving charges of on-the-job racial harassment to consider throwing out a 12-year-old decision that allows people to sue private citizens accused of racial discrimination.

In a strongly worded dissent, Justice John Paul Stevens said minority groups may feel betrayed by the court's order calling for re-examination of the 1976 case.

"In addition to the impact of today's decision on the faith of victims of racial discrimination in a stable construction of the civil rights laws, the order must also have a detrimental and enduring impact on the public's perception of the court as an impartial adjudicator," Stevens said.

He also accused the five justices in the majority of indulging in unwise activism by agreeing to review an issue that was not raised by either side in the North Carolina case.

"If the court decides to cast itself adrift from the constraints imposed by the adversary process and to fashion its own agenda, the consequences for the nation — and for the future of this court as an institution — will be even more serious than any temporary encouragement of previously rejected forms of racial discrimina-

Smoking Ban Has Little Impact On Local Flights

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

The ban on all smoking on domestic airline flights of two hours or less has created few problems locally, according to commuter airline officials at Pitt-Greenville Airport.

"I haven't run into any passengers that really objected to it. They are all pretty happy about it for the most part," said Ed Moore, general manager of American Eagle commuter service in Greenville.

"Our customers don't really mind because most of our flights to the American hub in Raleigh-Durham are only around 25 minutes in length," he added. "Practically all the flights coming in and out of Greenville were already non-smoking because of the smallness of the airaft," he said. "Our business hasn't really been affected."

Moore also said he has found the flying public in Greenville to be well informed of the recently enacted regulations.

"They seem to have read the newspapers and know all of the changes and the dates of those changes," he said.

Jerry Stone, station manager at Piedmont's commuter service in Greenville, said five daily Piedmont flights carrying up to 36 people previously had four rows designated for smoking. Stone said that so far he has not received any complaints regarding the cigarette ban.

"Most people for the most part are pretty happy about it," he commented.

Stone reported that the vast majority of Piedmont flights out of Greenville last no longer than one hour and 15 minutes in length.

The federal ban on smoking on domestic flights of less than two hours went into effect at 12:01 a.m. Saturday, affecting some 13,600 flights a day or approximately 80 percent of all domestic flights.

Violations of the law can bring a fine of up to $1,000 for smoking ond $2,000 for tampering with smoke alarms.

The new regulation comes at a time when the majority of Americans over 16 say they believe second-hand cigarette smoke to be harmful to the non-smoking population.

According to a 1986 federal government survey, 88 percent said they considered smoke from the cigarettes of others to be generally harmful to health. The same survey also found that 79 percent of respondents said they were annoyed by the cigarette smoke of others.

Grape Popper Goes To Jail

MIAMI (AP) — A shopper landed in jail after an off-duty policeman spotted him popping grapes in his mouth as he walked through a supermarket produce section.

"They're taking me for eating grapes!" Arthur Culberth yelled as he was taken in handcuffs from a Winn-Dixie grocery store in the predominantly black and impoverished Liberty City section of Miami.

Culberth, 55, was charged Saturday with petty theft and resisting arrest without violence. After spending the night in jail, he was released with a promise to appear for a court date.

Culberth, a plumber, said he broke open a $1.65 package of grapes and plucked a couple into his mouth as he shopped with his wife and stepson.

Off-duty Miami policeman Roger Smith, who moonlights as a security guard at the store, saw Culberth and told him he would have to pay at once.

"He was given a chance to pay for the grapes and refused," Smith said. "I had no other alternative."

But Culberth's wife, Linda, said the couple planned to pay for the fruit when their $30 order was rung up.

"How in the world is it petty theft if we're shopping? It's wrong, real wrong," she said of the arrest. "We always pay our bills."

Pravda: Problems At Chernobyl

MOSCOW (AP) — Two years after the Chernobyl power station was the scene of the world's worst nuclear accident, nepotism, sloppy repairs and drunkenness are rampant at the facility, Pravda charged.

The problems cited by the Communist Party daily were similar to those the government blamed for an explosion and fire at the plant on April 26, 1986.

Last July, three officials in charge of the plant during the accident were convicted of gross negligence and sentenced to 10 years in a labor camp.

Pravda said on Sunday that during the last two years engineering jobs at the plant have been handed out to medics, teachers, veterinarians and people without any higher education.

It also accused Chernobyl's managers of trying to "resolve at any cost" obstacles to full electricity production at the plant "to the detriment of the quality of repair and maintenance of extremely intricate equipment."

"Judging from all this, the leadership ... has not learned a lesson from the past," Pravda said. "It's as though there hasn't been an accident."

The explosion at the plant 80 miles north of the Ukrainian capital of Kiev killed 31 people, spewed radiation around the world and forced the evacuation of 135,000 Soviets living nearby.

The scathing attack in Pravda was a departure from the numerous articles appearing in the Soviet press before Tuesday's anniversary.

Previous stories have stressed the extensive safety equipment installed at Chernobyl, improved worker training, the decrease to safe levels of radiation and the return of people to surrounding areas.

Pravda began by reporting safe radiation levels at the plant and the production of 21 billion kilowatt-hours of electricity there since the accident.

Farm Scene

By Mitch Smith

Once the tobacco transplanting operation has been completed, the destruction of the plant bed sight remains an important task for tobacco producers.

If allowed to continue growing throughout the season, plant beds can serve as a reservoir for various insects and diseases which are known to affect tobacco. Of the two most threatening problems associated with prolonged growth of the plant bed area, flea beetles and Blue Mold offer the most potential.

Blue Mold is the most explosive disease that the tobacco farmer faces. Due to the fact that it is spread by wind currents, the ability of pathologists to predict its occurrence is limited. In 1979, 18 percent of the tobacco crop in North Carolina was destroyed by this disease.

Old plant bed sights which have been permitted to continue growing pose added risks to the tobacco farmer. Since plants growing on the bed are closer together than transplanted seedlings, humidity levels are higher and thus more likely to attract the Blue Mold fungus. Growers who have neglected to use the standard one quart rate of Ridomil in the field face even higher risks when beds are not destroyed.

In terms of insect pressure, the risk of flea beetle damage is also increased with the prolonged growth of plant beds.

Studies have shown that flea beetles can live over winter in dry, decayed plant matter and in some cases these insects have been observed moving from the bed site to the field. Plant beds left unattended are food sources for other insects like aphids and budworms and further enforce the need to exercise proper cultural practices.

PERIODONTAL COMPLICATIONS

Periodontal disease (gum disease) is bad enough in its dental effects - it is the leading cause of tooth loss in adults - but there is also evidence that it leads to complications in other areas of the body.

Pyorrhea is the more common name for advanced periodontal disease. Its literal meaning - a continuous discharge of plus - describes the condition perfectly. This purulent material along with its disease-producing by-products, can enter the system by two routes from the periodontal pocket. One is through the digestive tract and the other route is direct entry to the bloodstream by way of veins and lymph vessels that drain the periodontal tissues.

It has been claimed that many diseases result from infection around the teeth. Among them are disease of the eyes, ears, joints, cardiovascular system, digestive system, other internal organs and the skin. So not only do you risk tooth-loss by neglecting infected gums, but other diseases as well.

Call our office today for an appointment. Let us evaluate your gums and recommend the best treatment possible for you.

Note:
We welcome new patients, both children and adults.

Prepared as a public service to promote better dental health. From the office of Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D. S., P.A., Evans St., Family and General Dentistry.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

After New York

How Strong Is Dukakis' Hand?

Suddenly the Democratic presidential nomination picture comes into focus.

Massachusetts governor Michael Dukakis took the New York primary in style. While nothing is sure in politics, his win in New York was crucial to his eventual nomination at the Democratic National convention this summer.

Dukakis' real competition in New York was Jesse Jackson, who, until New York, was running Dukakis a close race in the delegate count. A previous slur about New York and a posture considered too close to the Arab world made Jackson unacceptable to the Jewish voters.

Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr. ran a poor third and losing with him was New York Mayor Edward Koch who strongly opposed Jackson but gave his support to Gore, the third place finisher who has now suspended his campaign.

It all translated into a smashing victory for Dukakis, who received 51 percent of the vote in New York. Jackson received a respectable 36 percent of the vote. Gore did worse than expected with only 10 percent of the total vote.

Dukakis is now well ahead in the delegate count and heavily favored to win more delegates in some upcoming primaries. It appears now that he will go to the convention with a strong hand.

The question is, how strong? Will he need to make a deal with Gore for his delegates and thus risk accusations that the two collaborated to shut out a strong black candidate? Or will Dukakis have to deal with Jackson, perhaps to the point of considering him for his vice presidential candidate? Those are questions which will be decided in the remaining primaries.

Political observers agree that Republican George Bush probably won't have to make deals with anybody. The nomination is already virtually his. Dukakis must obtain the nomination with an image of not having made deals if he is to win in November. He must appear, at least, to choose his own vice presidential candidates and to be fully in charge of his own campaign.

For Dukakis the delegate log jam is broken. Now it is only a question of how rapidly the delegates come to his side, and how vigorously he utilizes this advantage.

ROTC Necessary

Program Offers Careers For Many

The East Carolina University Air Force Reserve Officer Training Corps program, which seemed to be coming to an imminent end, is still alive.

It was announced that the program at ECU, and 36 other Air Force ROTC programs throughout the nation, will not be closed out in 18 months. The program is expected to remain here at least until the summer of 1991.

University officials are elated, and should be. The news is necessary information for high school seniors as they plan their college careers.

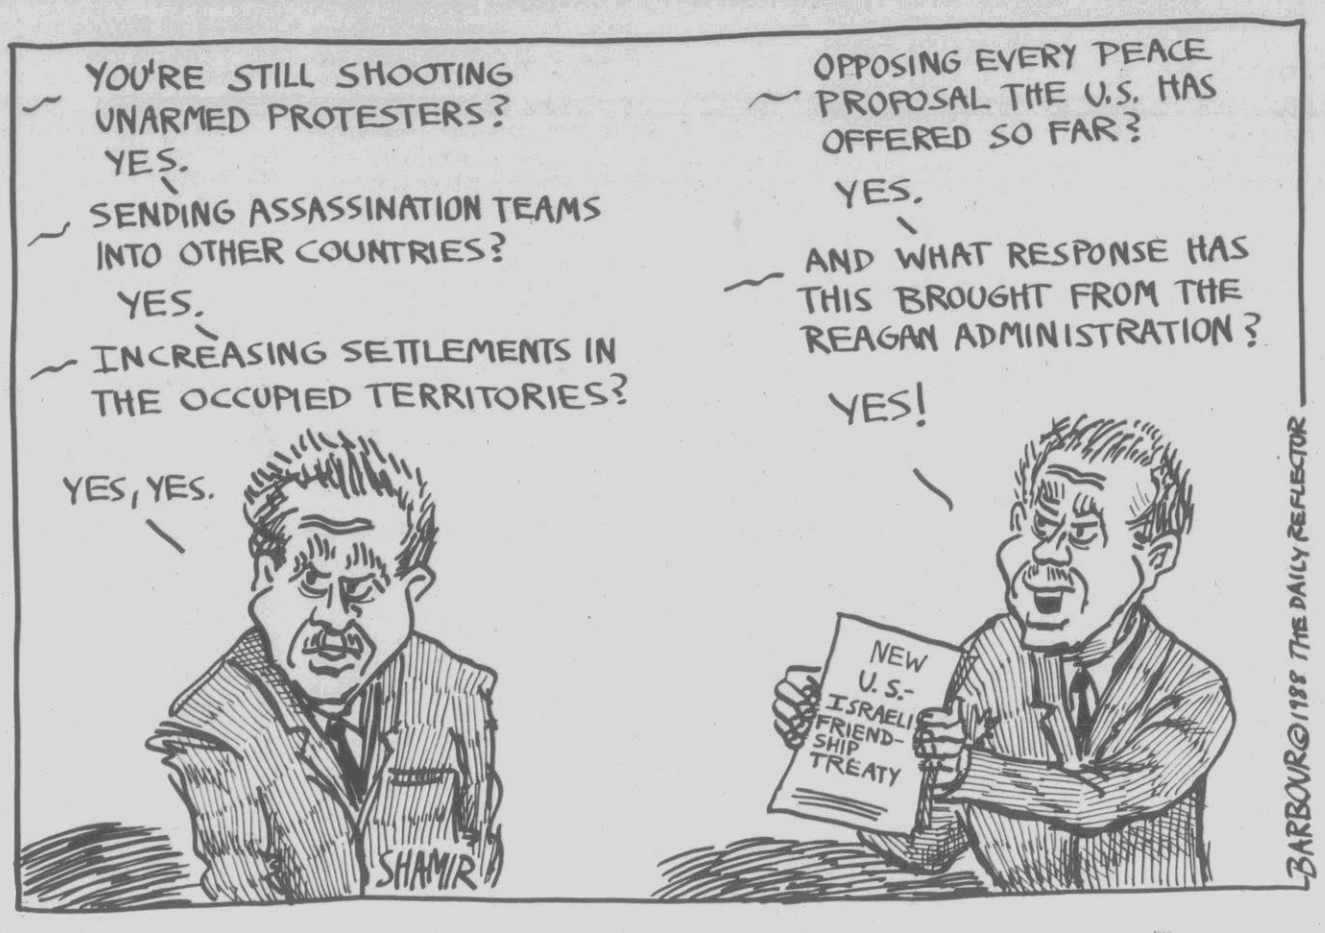

The extension of the Air ROTC program here is indeed a positive development for the university and its students who are interested in Air Force careers.

The ROTC has long been a part of ECU's curriculum and many of its graduates have had productive careers as Air Force administrative officers or pilots.

Even though the campus programs will not be eliminated, the numbers of officers they produce is to be reduced. That likely will have some effect at East Carolina University. Nevertheless the underclassmen in the ROTC can now complete the program and future students will be able to at least begin it. If they are fewer in number, it will mean only the brightest and most motivated will be among those who participate.

There are few campus organizations which have been more active in civic work than the Air ROTC. The unit has sponsored blood drives and provided volunteers for other public events. Clearly, the program is an asset for the community. But its largest value is in the opportunity for career-building and leadership it offers students.

Higher education is many things, but certainly the most important aspect is preparing students for a gainful and satisfying career. ECU offers a variety of programs leading to professional careers. One is to become an officer in the United States Air Force. That option was threatened but now has a new life. It will continue to be of benefit to a significant group of students.

To the editor:

I suppose all the Greenville senior citizens and customers of Greenville Utilities read the Reflector the week before last about the wonderful thing the Greenville Utilities are doing for the senior citizens of our town — Well, I must warn you about them.

If by any chance (and I pray this doesn't happen to you) you are alone and have to call the Rescue Squad, do tell them to wait for a half-hour while you call Greenville Utilities to tell them what happened to you and to please not turn off your utilities while you are away. This wasn't exactly what happened to me, but very nearly. It cost me a lot of money — $900.

I had an operation and was in the hospital nine days. My daughters came to look after me for two weeks, then one of them took me home with her when the doctor said I could travel. I thought all my bills were paid and the post office notified to forward my mail to Florida. When I got to Florida, I realized my utility bill had not been paid and I didn't remember seeing it. My daughter told me not to worry, that I would hear from them. To cut a long story short, the reminder that I had not paid my bill arrived nine days after it had left Greenville. I wrote a check that day and mailed it myself. When I arrived home six weeks later — what a mess! The electricity had been turned off for six weeks. You can imagine the condition of the food in the freezer.

As it turns out, my check arrived the day after they had turned off the current. As a customer for 25 years (business and home), and I had never failed to pay my bill on time, I was quite upset. I had to get a new refrigerator, plus all the expense of cleaning up and food wasted. Mr. (Malcolm) Green (utilities director) says they are not responsible, as dates on bills say when they will cut the utilities off.

So beware! They aren't as good to senior citizens as they pretend to be.

To the editor:

I am a teacher and parent in the Pitt County school system. I share a concern with many other teachers in our system — reverse discrimination. In our system and state, minorities are paid to go to school to become teacher. In our state, up-front monies are paid to minorities just to teach in certain systems. To further disgrace "reverse minority" teachers, a minority does not even have to student teach. I find it hard to understand that a person can be awarded a teacher's certificate for this type of performance. As a parent, I would prefer my child not have a teacher — minority or not — who doesn't even have to fulfill teaching requirements. It is doubtful that teaching can be upgraded and salaries raised with these types of actions. My question is: What can we as parents or "reverse minority" teachers do about this situation?

Was Retaliation A Mistake?

WASHINGTON — The administration may have played into the wrong hands in the Persian Gulf. There is some reason to suspect the mines that prompted Monday's retaliation were not laid by the Tehran authorities but by some Iranian malcontents looking to start a fight. In that case, our military action wasn't the right course.

Ever since the Persian Gulf operations began, I have personally supported each instance of retaliation. In fact, when the administration shot up two nonproducing oil platforms last year, I suggested it might have acted too mildly. This time, however, I'm just not sure that retaliation was the correct course.

Last January, the regime in Tehran went through a public reassessment of its policy of confrontation in the Gulf. It finally adopted what I would call the Persian Corollary to the Aiken Doctrine. In the late 1960s, Sen. George Aiken of Vermont proposed a way out of the Vietnam quagmire: "Just declare victory and get out." The Persian Corollary for the Gulf quagmire holds: "Just declare victory and shut up."

It surfaced in January when news reports began circulating that Washington was thinking of bringing home a couple of ships. President Ali Khamenei laid out the new policy in his sermon at Friday prayers Jan. 22. This is the usual platform for enunciating policy. Khamenei said: "The United States has now decided to withdraw. This is something we predicted. Today, too, we are witnessing how those Western countries who supported the United States and entered the Persian Gulf with such hue and cry are now leaving the Persian Gulf, one after another, quietly."

The following Friday, the speaker of the Iranian parliament, Ali Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani, added his imprimatur to the new "victory" policy. In a great flight of rhetoric, he said: "The failure that befell the United States and its satellites in the Persian Gulf, as well as the abjectness inflicted on the Western powers, who are today getting out of this great waterway in craven disgrace, ... are products of the might of the Iranian people."

There was dissent. Many revolutionaries knew full well that none of the six Western countries with ships in the Gulf was talking about withdrawing anything but a handful of vessels. The daily newspaper Kayhan ran an editorial — which began on page one — the day after the president's sermon. Without mentioning the president, it clearly took issue with his policy of verbally declaring victory and then ignoring the remaining American presence. "The whole idea of an American presence in the Persian Gulf, which is Iran's backyard, is highly dangerous," Kayhan said. "We must understand that the Americans have not come to attend a party, so they will not leave easily. The United States will not go except under growing political and psychological pressure."

By mid-February, the debate was over. When the ships were sent home, the Iranians pointed with glee at this Iranian "victory." The regime then stopped talking about the remaining American presence and the continuing escort policy, ending more than six months of daily rhetorical assaults on our Gulf operations. For all the Iranian public knew, the U.S. Navy was cowering in Pearl Harbor.

The non-confrontation policy was rational — and while Iran's leaders can be unreasonable, they are not irrational. They probably calculated that they could not win a confrontation with us in the Gulf because we hold the aces. If pushed too far, we could mine the only two sites from which Iran can export oil. And that would cut Iran's foreign exchange earnings by 90 percent overnight. Iran was not, let me emphasize, calling a halt to its challenge to us; it was simply calling it quits in the waters of the Gulf, where the odds were not good.

Then in the last couple of weeks, somebody plunked some mines down in the Gulf and the USS Samuel B. Roberts hit one of them. We determined they were Iranian mines. But we did not determine who ordered them put there. Was it the authorities in Tehran, reversing a policy settled on in January? Or was it someone like the Revolutionary Guards, who never did approve of January's policy change? There is no proof either way.

While another policy change is clearly possible, I don't find it likely. First, it was only three months ago that the regime reasoned that a confrontation in the Gulf was not a profitable endeavor. Nothing has changed since then to warrant a return to confrontation. Second, Iran was riding high on its propaganda campaign over the Iraqi use of poison gas. Why undermine that effort?

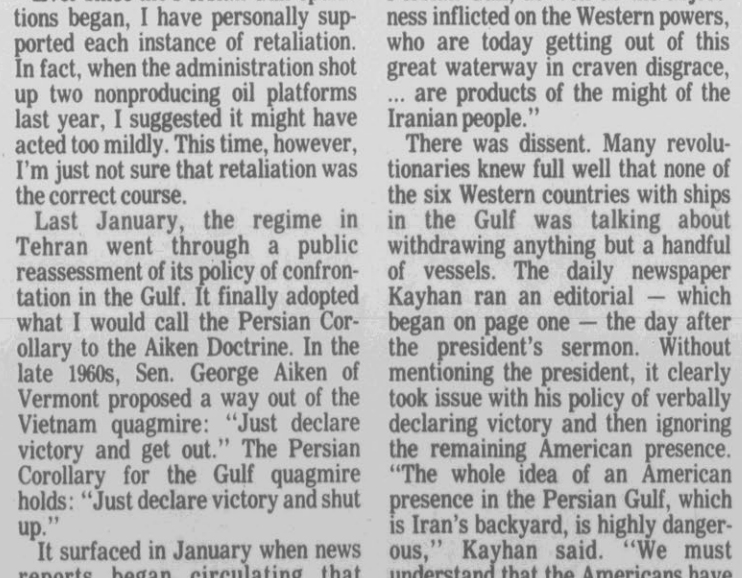

Iran launched a major propaganda offensive. Western reporters were shown gas victims lying in the streets and a hospital hit by an Iraqi missile. For the first time, Iran had the Iraqis in a corner. The threat of a U.N. arms embargo receded as Tehran shifted the black hat to Baghdad's head. Why then change the subject by mining the Gulf?

The administration took a more traditional interpretation: the mines were made by the Iranian government, so they must have been laid by the Iranian government. Perhaps. And if that is true, then the firm response made by the administration was the correct response.

But what if the administration's interpretation was in error? That would mean Tehran did not want a confrontation in the Gulf. And we do not want a confrontation in the Gulf. But our retaliation means Iran can no longer abide by the Persian Corollary to the Aiken Doctrine. Both literally and figuratively, we blew it out of the water.

In sum, it is quite possible the administration overreacted this time. At this time no one can prove either theory of Iranian conduct. But I am concerned that the weight of logical analysis holds that the authorities in Tehran did not order those mines dropped in the Gulf. It would be the ultimate irony if we started a shooting match in the Gulf because we overreacted to the very Iranian zealots we wish to restrain from starting a shooting match in the Gulf.

Strength For Today

Jewish and Christian scriptures make much use of the image of the shepherd. The shepherd tending the sheep is a metaphor for the love and concern of God for his people. It is also used for the role of the individual in caring for others. If God is the great shepherd, we are little shepherds. But metaphors only go so far. What does it mean to be a shepherd for others? Does it not mean to place the needs of others before my own wants and desires? Is it not to go out of my want to help another? If so, then why do I find myself refusing to care for others? Why, when others need so much, do I strive to satiate my silliest whims? We can criticize the poor shepherding of the T.V. evangelists, but if I am honest, am I all that wonderful of a shepherd for others?

Negative Ads Latest Twist In Unusual N.C. Campaign

RALEIGH (AP) — A sudden burst of negative advertising, bitter charges and counter-charges in the Democratic race for lieutenant governor is the latest twist in one of the strangest primary campaigns in memory.

For weeks, the three major candidates and their supporters have resembled hostile armies facing each other across a demilitarized zone — alert, jittery, guns loaded, occasionally exchanging sniper fire but avoiding all-out combat.

The uneasy peace gave way to open warfare last week.

•State Sen. Harold Hardison, of Lenoir County, began running a television commercial blasting "slick" defense lawyers who represent drug dealers. The ad was directed at rival Sen. Tony Rand, a Fayetteville attorney, though it didn't mention him.

Two other Hardison ads, scheduled to begin running over the weekend, are more direct. Not only do they mention Rand and include his picture, they identify two of his clients: an admitted marijuana smuggler and a habitual drunken driver.

Rand "spends much of his time leading drunk drivers and big-time drug dealers out of the reach of the arms of the law," one ad claims.

An angry Rand accused Hardison of slinging mud and threatened to hit back with anti-Hardison ads.

•Environmentalists friendly to Rand began running radio commercials accusing Hardison of championing the legislative agenda of industrial polluters and fighting efforts to protect the air, water and soil.

"Hardison is definitely hazardous to your health," one commercial says. Jerry Mobley, spokesman for Hardison, said the spots are slanderous.

•A group of former legislators endorsed former Rep. Parks Helms, of Charlotte, as "the candidate who is not for sale." While not mentioning Hardison and Rand by name, former Rep. Ed Holmes of Pittsboro implied they had "promised the world" to special-interest groups to win their support.

Earlier, Helms criticized Rand's 10-point plan for opening the legislative process, calling him a johnny-come-lately who had been a willing participant in the closed-door system until open government became good politics.

The crossfire became so intense that state Democratic Chairman Jim Van Hecke sent the candidates a letter Friday afternoon urging restraint. He said he might convene a meeting of the combatants this week if the situation worsens.

Analysis

Some Democratic insiders voiced concerns that the bitterness might linger into the fall, when Republicans are expected to mount their strongest campaign of the century for the state's second-ranking office.

In a sense, the negativism is hardly a surprise, especially where Hardison and Rand are concerned. Their relationship has been strained for years.

Both sides privately have accused each other of dirty tricks and whispering campaigns in recent weeks. Publicly, however, they generally confined themselves to debating the issues, raising funds and lining up endorsements.

The timing of the outbreak of open hostilities probably results from the race's surprising uncertainty. The May 3 primary is little more than a week away and the outcome is anybody's guess.

Polls suggest an extraordinarily high number of voters — 50 percent or more — don't know who the candidates are, much less whom they'll support. Campaign strategists say turnout may hit rock bottom. And when turnout is low, the unexpected can happen.

"Our pollster ... who has polled all over the country, says he's never seen this high degree of undecideds in any race this close to election day," Hardison campaign manager Mike Mann said.

Two unusual circumstances are the biggest culprits behind the apathy epidemic: Super Tuesday and the absence of a hotly contested race for the gubernatorial nomination.

Turnout is never as high for primaries as for general elections, but the presidential and gubernatorial races are good drawing cards. This year, however, North Carolina held a separate presidential primary March 8.

Also, the unprecedented task of unseating a Republican governor discouraged Democrats with the best chance of defeating Jordan for the nomination from entering the race. He faces only token opposition next week.

That makes the contest for lieutenant governor the biggest game in town — and it just doesn't excite John Q. Public.

"Most people don't understand how influential the lieutenant governor is in North Carolina," Mann said.

Other races — for secretary of state, superintendent of public instruction, labor commissioner, legislative seats, judgeships and other posts — are important but have stirred barely a ripple.

All this makes the candidates and their strategists nervous — and tempts them to look for ways to tip the scales at the eleventh hour. Thus, the final week of the campaign may be as interesting as the preceding eight months have been dull.

From Governor To Front-Runner

On the day after Michael S. Dukakis was overwhelmingly re-elected governor of Massachusetts in 1986, wiping out the last stain of the defeat he had suffered eight years earlier, his chief aide and political strategist John Sasso handed him a lengthy memo on the possibility of his running for president in 1988.

The memo outlined the challenges facing any little-known national figure, but it made three points that have proved to be fundamental as Dukakis has moved from a self-described "longshot" to the odds-on favorite for the Democratic nomination. They also help explain why Vice President Bush's managers think Dukakis could be a tough opponent in November.

First, Sasso said, Dukakis had access to the financial and political resources it would take to wage a successful campaign.

Second, in a year when voters would be forced to find a new president, he alone of the people running had a record of governmental achievements, relevant to national concerns, that would lend credibility to his promises, the memo continued.

Third, but most important, Sasso — who had worked in Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's 1980 presidential campaign and managed Geraldine A. Ferraro's 1984 run for vice president — told Dukakis that he had exactly the right temperament: a blend of discipline, optimism, energy, self-confidence and equanimity, which would help him survive the physical, emotional and political pressures of a presidential race.

Sasso's memo proved remarkably prescient. In a nomination fight that saw hot candidates rise and fall in almost regular cycles, the bland but consistent Dukakis moved forward in steady if unspectacular fashion. Even in difficult times, he was not tempted to change his course or his style.

Dukakis was his usual cautious self in committing to the contest. Having been defeated for renomination at the end of his first term in 1978, he wanted the vindication of winning re-election on his own record. So he ruled out any discussion of the topic until after the 1986 returns were in.

Paul Brountas, his law school classmate and close friend who would become chairman of the presidential effort, was asked his advice for the first time at a dinner on the Friday before Thanksgiving in 1986. Sasso got his first clear signal that the governor wanted a full exploration of its practicality in a conversation after Christmas of that year. By January, the exploration was public: Dukakis met with former candidates and campaign managers, with key Democrats in Congress, several of his fellow governors, and took exploratory trips to Iowa, New Hampshire, North Carolina and Louisiana to get the feel of the campaign trail.

One key checkpoint was Robert Farmer, the Massachusetts businessman who was Dukakis' fund-raiser. Farmer said, "I've never raised money for a guy who is at 1 percent in the polls, and I don't know how it translates." But he told the governor he thought he could raise $6.5 million, including federal matching funds, by the time of the first contest in Iowa. As he now ruefully concedes, he underestimated by only $10.5 million.

The 110 members of Dukakis' re-election campaign finance committee each pledged to raise $10,000, and their numbers later grew to 350 — a tribute not only to Dukakis' home-state appeal but to his clout as governor. Greek-Americans across the country responded "with passion and pride," Farmer says, and ultimately accounted for one-fifth of all the funds raised.

Farmer's success virtually guaranteed that Sasso would have the freedom to implement the political plan he had developed by the time Dukakis made his formal announcement last April 29. The key passage in his Boston Common speech was the governor's urging voters, "as you look each of us over, ask more than what we are going to do. Ask what we have already done... . Ask whether we have already made new ideas work."

That was his way of saying he was different from a field of rivals dominated by Washington legislators and especially by former senator Gary Hart, then far in front. Sasso and the team he had assembled believed Hart would win the Iowa caucuses, but they thought that whatever the "culture gap" he faced in Iowa, Dukakis' experience in one-on-one campaigning with Democratic activists at Massachusetts Democratic endorsing conventions would assure he would not be routed in the first test.

Polls taken during the 1986 New Hampshire gubernatorial race showed Dukakis had a good chance of beating Hart in that state's primary. Charlie Baker, the operative Sasso picked to run New Hampshire, said, "We can handle a third-place in Iowa" and still win eight days later. Dukakis' leadership in the successful fight against the Seabrook nuclear power plant had won him a strong following and would underline his basic theme that he had a record of accomplishment while others had only their words. But a New Hampshire victory was absolutely essential to establish the candidacy, and at least once a week, month after month, Dukakis crossed the border to nurture his campaign there.

Beyond New Hampshire, the next big test would be Super Tuesday and the southern-dominated, 20-state extravaganza no candidates had ever faced before. The Dukakis design was nothing if not systematic: Tad Devine, the field director, and others analyzed each of the 171 voting districts on a "top-bottom" basis, deciding where Dukakis had the best chance to win and where he could "make threshold" and gain at least one delegate.

What emerged was a "four-corner" strategy, focused on Washington, Maryland, Florida and Texas, where Dukakis could add enough delegates to those he was assured in Massachusetts and Rhode Island, to claim victory that day. Operatives were dispatched to Florida and Texas last summer and John Dukakis, the candidate's son, moved to Atlanta to symbolize the commitment to the South. "We had the resources to make long-term investments in the key states and never withdraw them," said communications director Leslie Dach. And that proved not to be true for competitors like Rep. Richard A. Gephardt of Missouri.

The result was that Dukakis reached his vote and turned it out in a way no other candidate but Jesse L. Jackson was able to do. In south Texas, he exploited his Spanish-speaking ability; in south Florida, his wife Kitty's appeal to fellow-Jews.

"The Dukakis campaign knows how to look at numbers and to find his voters," said Joanne Symons, a consultant to Gephardt. "In my county (Mecklenburg), the largest in North Carolina," marveled Democratic National Committee member Linda Ashendorf, another Gephardt supporter, "there were only 15 people who had committed to vote for Dukakis who did not get to the polls."

And now, with a huge victory in New York in hand and another one in Pennsylvania apparently in prospect for Tuesday, he has the Democratic presidential nomination clearly in his sights.

The money and organization have been there. The Massachusetts record has served to distinguish him from the field. But most of all, Dukakis' temperament has allowed him to survive and prevail in this daffy, demanding process. Kiley, a latecomer to the campaign, says, "His strongest asset is his unflappability, his ability to stay on course, and not be distracted by momentary setbacks and triumphs. This is a man who knows himself."

Chapel Hill Faces Competition For Faculty

By DONALD W. PATTERSON and TAFT WIREBACK
Greensboro News & Record

This is the second article in a series exploring the winds of change in Chapel Hill amid criticism that the nation's oldest state-operated university is only subsisting on its past glory.

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Bill Chamberlin was proud to be a Tar Heel.

"A year ago I had no intention whatsoever of leaving UNC-Chapel Hill," says Chamberlin, a journalism professor who taught at the university for 11 years. "I was very proud to be a part of the faculty. I still have a lot of Tar Heel in my blood."

But the University of Florida targeted Chamberlin as a key to beefing up its journalism program. It offered him a 40 percent salary increase, and — in no time at all — he was a Tar Heel no more.

Officials at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill say that happens with increasing frequency because of its stagnant salaries, poor benefits and increasing competition.

In the effort to keep existing faculty members and recruit new ones, UNC-Chapel Hill faces stiff competition from traditional peers such as Duke University, the University of Virginia and the University of California at Berkeley. But it's also being challenged by schools that only recently became major players, such as the universities of Florida, Maryland and Texas.

"They can blow us out of the water," says David D. Dill, UNC-Chapel Hill's assistant to the chancellor for planning. "Looking for faculty members in the 1980s is like looking for basketball superstars."

And evidence abounds that UNC-Chapel Hill has been losing the recruitment wars:

UNC-Chapel Hill's graduate school of business administration lost an assistant professor of finance who was making $50,000 and left for $75,000 at Virginia, and another assistant who went to Dartmouth for a $13,000 raise.

Its history department went on four hiring searches last year to replace departing faculty.

"We failed to land a single one of the people we were trying to get," says Richard A. Soloway, who has taught in the department for 20 years.

Its statistics department has lost three faculty members, all of whom left for salaries between 30 percent and 40 percent higher.

"We will try hard next year to replace them, but with the same money we will not get as senior people as we lost," says Stamatis Cambanis, chairman of the department.

The sociology department recently lost a key faculty member who left for another school that offered a 20 percent raise, a housing allowance, a secretary and substantial research funds.

The school of journalism recently failed in an effort to recruit a new faculty member who had been teaching at the University of Wisconsin. He went to the University of Texas at Austin for a $40,000 salary, $10,000 more than UNC-Chapel Hill was able to offer.

UNC-Chapel Hill has succeeded during the last three years in recruiting faculty from a variety of major schools, including the universities of Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin-Madison and Cornell.

But often, the newcomers don't have the credentials of those who left.

"We have trouble recruiting what we need, star scholars, full professors of nationally known reputations," says English professor Doris Betts.

Salary isn't the only sticking point. A thin benefits package also has proved troubling.

For instance, the university offers the standard state-employee retirement and health plans, which require substantial monthly payments by employees.

UNC-Chapel Hill also has no provision for sabbaticals, the periodic paid leaves during which faculty members do the research and writing that establish their reputations.

For Chamberlin, now teaching in Gainesville, Fla., guaranteed research time was a key factor in his decision to leave Chapel Hill.

"Had they had a sabbatical program, I would not have felt as compelled to go," he said.

Outgoing Superintendent Steps Up His Traveling

RALEIGH (AP) — Craig Phillips, soon to step down as North Carolina's superintendent of public instruction, says he "resents very strongly" any implication of impropriety in his recent increase in state-funded travel.

"I'm working harder today than I did a year or two years ago, and I'm enjoying every minute of it. One of the things I wanted to be sure of was that I'm not a lame duck," Phillips said in an interview.

Reports published during the weekend indicated that, in the 75 weeks since he announced he would not seek a sixth term, Phillips has traveled 117 days out of state. That is an 83 percent increase over the 64 days Phillips was out of state in the preceding 75 weeks, records in the controller's office of the Department of Public Education show.

But Phillips, 65, said his travel varies from year to year according to his involvement in national organizations.

Records show Phillips traveled out of the state 50 days in the 1984-85 fiscal year, 39 days in 1985-86, 70 days in 1986-87, and 69 days so far in 1987-88.

He also spends many of his days on the road within the state. In the last 18 months, he has traveled 83 days across North Carolina.

In all, Phillips has been away from his desk in Raleigh 200 days in the past 18 months. Many of those, however, were weekend days. Phillips has been absent 146 weekdays, or about 38 percent of his time.

State records show Phillips spent $6,220 for out-of-state travel in 1984-85, $4,845 in 1985-86, $9,863 in 1986-87 and $5,637 so far in 1987-88.

Phillips said his travel had benefited education in North Carolina.

"I have no apologies whatsoever for the way I use my time," Phillips said. "In fact I'm proud that I have given my full measure."

Phillips said he considered his travel "work" that helps improve education and educational leadership in North Carolina.

Hardison Ads Upset Lawyers

RALEIGH (AP) — Sen. Harold Hardison's campaign ads portraying his lieutenant governor's opponent as a slick lawyer defending drunks and drug dealers has raised some hackles on both sides of the political aisle.

"They attack the legal profession and the integrity of our system of justice," said Michael Easley, district attorney for Bladen, Brunswick and Columbus counties, in defense of Sen. Tony Rand.

"They are despicable and malicious, conceived by a mind devoid of social conscience," Easley, president of the N.C. District Attorneys Association, said. "What (Hardison) attacks is basically what a lawyer is sworn to do, and that is to represent his client zealously. He makes it appear to be some sort of moral violation."

"It's an attack not only on Mr. Rand, but on attorneys in general," said Orange County District Attorney Carl Fox. "I'm concerned that the campaign has gotten to that level. It is absolutely ludicrous to suggest that any attorney, be it Tony Rand or F. Lee Bailey, could single-handedly keep any person from getting their just punishment."

Several prosecutors have called on Hardison, D-Lenoir, to cancel the three commercials. But Michael Mann, Hardison's campaign director, said the outcry was just the grumbling of Rand supporters seeing their "fair-haired boy getting pinched."

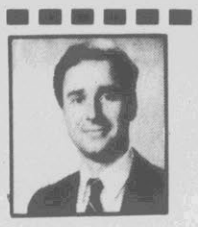

"It sounds to me like the sanctimonious howling of a pack of guilty dogs," Mann said. "We have never said that criminals do not deserve fair representation. But drug dealers ... should not be allowed to use huge illegal profits to stay out of jail by hiring politically connected lawyers."

The ads accuse Rand, a Fayetteville lawyer opposing Hardison for lieutenant governor, of spending much of his time "leading drunk drivers and big-time drug dealers out of the reach of the arms of justice." Two ads name Rand and include his picture and the names of some of his clients.

SELECTING STAIN-RESISTANT CARPET

You've seen the commercials; you've read the ads; you've talked to the sales people. Now you're convinced: the new, stain-resistant carpet is just the ticket for your busy household.

Problem is there are so many types and brands from which to choose. So what are some of the major considerations to be taken in your selection decision? Well, I don't have all the answers, but consider a few.

First, start with some basics. Who are the reputable carpet retailers in the community; you know, the ones who will help you select not only the carpet, but also the proper pad, followed by professional installation as well. They'll be around long after the sale to support you when and if the need for warranty coordination arises.

Second, consider major brand names. There's a vast difference in the quality of components that go into products such as DuPont STAINMASTER and Monsanto Gold Label. Read the literature. Look for the best fiber system, identified by terms such as nylon 6,6. Consider the stain repellent which tops off a quality, stain-resistant carpet. Look for field-tested product names, such as DuPont Teflon and 3M Scotchgard.

Third, check warranties—in writing! The better stain-resistant carpet manufacturers provide a five-year residential-use warranty. And be sure the warranty comes from a company that can back it up!

Finally, remember, "There's no such thing as a free lunch," and, "The bitter taste of poor quality lingers long after the sweet taste of cheap price has disappeared." Get the message?... Quality plus price equals value— not the cheapest.. the best! That's what produces long-range satisfaction.

Your new-carpet investment will be around for years to come. Make sure it's one that lasts. You and your family deserve that much!

IF CAREMASTER IS CERTIFIED TO CLEAN STAIN-RESISTANT CARPET ...THINK WHAT WE COULD DO FOR THE REST OF YOUR CARPETING...

Sanford Sold Office He Rented

RALEIGH (AP) — One of Sen. Terry Sanford's offices in North Carolina is partly owned by his son, and another was leased at taxpayers' expense one day after Sanford and his top aide sold it, records show.

Sanford and Paul Vick, his Senate administrative assistant and business partner, bought a Chapel Hill office condominium in 1983 for about $83,000 and sold it on Jan. 15 for about $110,000, Orange County records indicate.

The next day, Sanford signed a five-year lease requiring the Senate to pay the new owner $18,200 a year for 1,400 square feet of space, including a basement that is not being used.

Rent on the condominium — $13 a square foot — is higher than the state of North Carolina pays for any of its 29 offices in Chapel Hill. The state pays an average of $10.76 per square foot.

Another of Sanford's Senate offices, in Durham's Brightleaf Square, is partly owned by his son, Terry Sanford Jr. That three-year lease costs the Senate $13,847 a year for 1,028 square feet, or $13.47 per square foot.

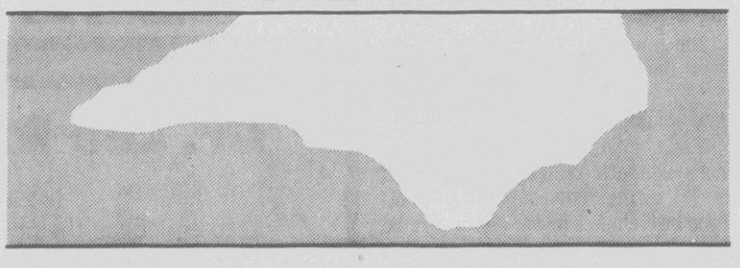

Sanford and Vick say they realized that both office rentals might lead to questions of possible conflicts of interest. They said they had cleared the transactions in advance with the Senate Ethics Committee's staff.

Sanford has six Senate offices in North Carolina that cost $63,330 a year in rents, according to government records. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., rents two offices in the state, both in federally owned buildings, at a cost of $36,028 a year.

Sanford, a freshman Democrat from Durham, said his son could have made more money by renting the Durham office to someone else. And Sanford said neither he nor Vick profited by having the Senate rent the Chapel Hill office condo immediately after the Sanford-Vick partnership, called J.P. Partners, sold it to a Durham couple.

Vick said the buyer, Joseph McBroom and his wife, Katherine, had agreed to buy the office at the asking price before there was any discussion of leasing the office for Sanford's staff.

IN THE STATE

Papers Taken

DURHAM (AP) — A full-time volunteer for Sen. Harold Hardison's campaign for lieutenant governor admitted taking copies of a biweekly newspaper carrying an anti-Hardison endorsement from racks throughout Raleigh.

"My main reason for acting the way I did is basically because I'm pretty committed to what I'm doing and I'm a full-time volunteer for Senator Hardison," said James F. Jones, 24, of Raleigh. "My level of tolerance was breached when The Independent said what they did — when they said they wanted to stop this man. That wasn't fair."

Jones, a political science major at North Carolina State University, told Independent officials Sunday he had taken at least 5,000 newspaper from about 30 locations and put them in trash bins throughout the city. Jones said no one with the campaign had asked him to destroy the papers.

Plane Search

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Henderson County officials searched today for the wreckage of a plane after residents reported a possible crash on Jeeter Mountain, but the search was suspended when nothing was found.

Julius Petchenik, a Jeeter Mountain resident, said Sunday night he saw an airplane that appeared to be having engine trouble. He said he thought the plane had crashed.

"It didn't sound right, it was sputtering and coughing," Petchenik said. He said the aircraft was a "small plane, four or six passenger. It looked a little bit bigger than a two passenger plane."

A sheriff's department spokesman said the search was suspended at about 4:30 a.m.

Body Found

LINDEN, N.C. (AP) — The body of a young woman was found lying in a ditch off a rural dirt road in Linden Sunday morning.

Detectives were awaiting the results of an autopsy from the state Medical Examiner's Office in Chapel Hill to pinpoint the cause of death, said Lt. Harry Parham, chief of detectives for the Cumberland County Sheriff's Department.

The clothed body of the young black woman was found by a passerby a few miles east of Linden, authorities said. The victim was described as about 25 to 30 years old.

Sub Fire Leaves 3 Missing

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — An explosion and fire struck the submarine USS Bonefish off Florida, injuring 18 sailors and leaving three of the 92-member crew missing today, the Navy said.

Crews from two frigates and a helicopter were "looking and listening for any kind of sound or indication" of the missing in the Atlantic, said Lt. Cmdr. Bill Sonntag of the Norfolk-based Atlantic Fleet.

"We're doing everything we can to find them out there," Sonntag said.

The Bonefish, one of the Navy's last diesel submarines, surfaced Sunday afternoon 160 miles east of Cape Canaveral, Fla., said Cmdr. Fred Leeder, a fleet spokesman.

The fire was believed caused by an explosion in the 30-year-old submarine's battery compartment, Sontag said. Because of fire and toxic fumes, the commanding officer ordered the vessel evacuated.

Rapist-Mutilator Goes Free

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The rapist who savagely mutilated a teen-age girl nine years ago is free from parole today, but friends of Larry Singleton worry about his safety wherever he tries to settle.

When Larry Singleton was paroled from prison a year ago, furious protests followed him from town to town as state officials tried to find a place for him to live.

Protesters were outraged that the 60-year-old former merchant marine served only eight years for his crime, a six-year reduction because of good behavior and work credits.

After Gov. George Deukmejian intervened, Singleton wound up in a mobile home on the grounds of San Quentin prison.

As of midnight Sunday, Singleton was free to go wherever he liked and was under no obligation to tell prison officias his whereabouts. Parole officials last week gave no indication of when Singleton would actually be released.

Singleton will be free to go wherever he likes and is under no obligation to tell officials his whereabouts. He has told Thomas Clyde Smith Jr., leader of the Bridge of Christ Church in Azalea, Ore., he would like to live there after first visiting his sister in Florida.

But his safety is uncertain, say some of Singleton's supporters.

After news reports Singleton might live at the Oregon church farm, several shots were fired at its buildings, said Bob Plath, an attorney and member of Teachers Network Foundation, a religious group that befriended Singleton during his parole.

Coast Guard Ships May Go To Gulf

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is weighing the possibility of adding Coast Guard ships to assist its Navy fleet in the Persian Gulf where an Iranian gunboat attack on a neutral vessel drew a muted reaction from U.S. officials.

Adm. William Crowe, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said the attack on a Saudi-owned tanker early Sunday reflected a "level of violence ... much less" than in the mining incident that touched off last week's U.S. retaliatory strike against two Iranian offshore platforms.

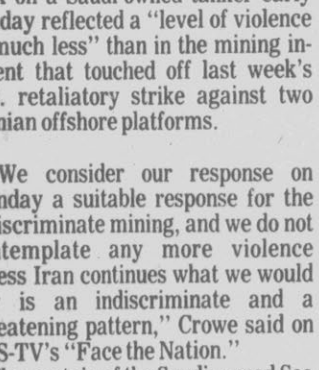

"We consider our response on Monday a suitable response for the indiscriminate mining, and we do not contemplate any more violence unless Iran continues what we would say is an indiscriminate and a threatening pattern," Crowe said on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation."

The captain of the Saudi-owned Sea Trader said there were no casualties but the ship suffered slight damage in the grenade and machine gun attack at 7:30 a.m. Sunday (11:30 p.m. EDT Saturday).

On the option of adding Coast Guard vessels, Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci said the use of the crafts would provide more flexibility in the gulf, but no decision has been made.

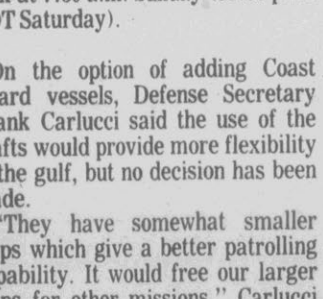

"They have somewhat smaller ships which give a better patrolling capability. It would free our larger ships for other missions," Carlucci said on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley."

Milwaukee Paint Fire Injures 12

MILWAUKEE (AP) — An explosion and fire ripped through a paint store and spread to four other buildings, forcing residents to leap through windows to safety as a building collapsed, authorities said today. Twelve people, including five firefighters, were injured.

At least 150 firefighters battled the blaze, which reached seven alarms, and all off-duty firefighters were called in to provide backup help at fire stations.

"There was an explosion and I was watching TV at the time. I looked out the window and there was glass and debris scattered all over the street, but no fire yet," said David Bedwell, 24, who lived in a second-story apartment over the paint store.

"I opened the window and some people were shouting to me. I just jumped and they caught me," said Bedwell, who was clad only in his underwear.

Caroline Boatman, who was at a bar a block and a half from the explosion, said several patrons left and began shouting outside the windows to awaken people in the neighborhood. She said several people joined to catch residents who jumped when the building began collapsing.

"People that were in the building, some of them on the third floor, they said they felt the building drop," said Deputy Fire Chief William Walker. "The north wall dropped out and they jumped to their safety."

One woman was in fair condition with a spinal injury suffered when she jumped from a second-story window, according to St. Mary's Hospital spokesman Steve Pinzer.

Eleven others, including five firefighters and one police officer, were treated for minor injuries and released, Pinzer said.

"It was very fortunate. They must have had a friend upstairs," said Walker.

Ten people were evacuated from the building that collapsed and numerous others were evacuated from their dwellings in the neighborhood, said Police Lt. Donald Domagaleski said.

The fire was still smoldering early today, and authorities said it would be some time before investigators determined the cause. Walker said a crane would be used to pull the wreckage apart Tuesday.

Jerry Frank, a fire battalion chief, said at least 150 firefighters were called to fight the blaze, which began after 11 p.m. Sunday and was brought under control about 2 a.m. today.

Schools Hesitant

Bennett said too many students drop out, "and too many of those who do graduate have been poorly educated. Our students know too little, and their command of essential skills is too slight.

"Good schools for disadvantaged and minority children are much too rare. ... An ethos of success is missing from too many American schools," he said. "Our teachers and principals are too often hired and promoted in ways that make excellence a matter of chance, not design."

Bennett called anew for merit pay for teachers; wider choice in public education for parents; stronger curricula at all levels, and stricter accountability for educators, including freedom for local schools to hire the best and fire the worst teachers and principals.

He said a forthcoming National Assessment of Educational Progress report indicates 9- and 17-year-olds improved their performance in math between 1982 and 1986, while 13-year-olds held steady.

Another National Assessment will show that in those same years, "17-year-old science students made up nearly all the ground lost since the 1977 assessment," he said.

A new federal study indicated that 12.7 percent of last year's high school seniors completed all the courses recommended in "A Nation At Risk:" four years of English; three years each of math, science and social studies; a half-year of computer science and, for the college-bound, two years of foreign language.

By comparison, fewer than 2 percent of graduates in the Class of 1982 took such a regimen. Researchers reviewed the transcripts of 15,000 graduates from each year.

The same study indicated fewer students are drifting into less rigorous "general tracks" in high school. Only 17 percent were on a "general track" in 1987, down from 35 percent in 1982.

But American students still are humbled by international comparisons, including a recent science assessment that found American 10-year-olds were average, "but our 14-year-olds are far behind their peers around the world, placing 14th out of 17 countries," Bennett said.

He took a slap at what he called the Chicken Littles who believe that "some children can't learn because their color, class or family background gets in th way."

Bennett said minorities already comprise 28 percent of America's school-age population. "Apocalyptic analyses and Chicken Little stories about an onrushing wave of 'unteachable' students should be rejected," he said.

"Above all, sound education reforms are threatened by the determined opposition they elicit," Bennett said, pointing to "what might be called opposition by extortion, the false claim that to fix our schools will first require a fortune in new funding."

Bennett's predecessor, T.H. Bell, who commissioned "A Nation At Risk," has accused the president of failing to provide strong leadership for school reform.

Bell and such groups as the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching and the Committee for Economic Development have warned in recent months that school reform is not working in America's largely minority inner-city school systems.

Bennett, however, said "achievement can be torpedoed by the idea that it is mostly a matter of luck, wealth or native ability — an idea altogether too prevalent in American education today."

Bennett said average teacher salaries, after inflation, have risen from $23,451 in 1982-83 to an estimated $28,300 today, nearly a 21 percent rise, and more college students are expressing interest in the profession. But "until good teachers are paid more than bad ones, our efforts to improve teaching and learning will be frustrated."

Problems Persist

But then the focus turned to criticism by the Kiev region's Communist Party committee of "Kombinat," the organization supervising the plant and cleanup around it.

Plant equipment was repaired without technical supervisors and was not tested before being put into service despite serious defects, the newspaper said.

Some safety measures planned on the reactor No. 4 at the plant were not carried out because of Kombinat's negligence, Pravda said. That reactor, in which the explosion occurred, has been sealed in concrete laden with radiation sensors. Other official reports have stressed the danger from the No. 4 reactor has been neutralized.

"Leadership posts were given to people who had criminal records, who had been excluded from the party or had received strict party penalties," Pravda said.

"Units were headed by people not able to cope with the business they were entrusted with: medics, teachers, veterinarians and people not having any higher education were working in engineering posts," Pravda said.

Discipline was slack, the newspaper said.

"In the 'Kombinat' amalgamation, drunkenness, thievery and violations of labor discipline have not been reduced," it said.

Pravda did not say whether any corrective action had been taken, other than to report that Kiev party leaders reprimanded Kombinat's head, and indicated he had been fired.

"E. Ignatenko displayed liberalism and political immaturity in the evaluation of the lack of discipline: multiple violations of organizational and financial discipline, protectionism, nepotism, moral breakdown of leaders," the paper said.

The article indicated that plant managers tolerated the shortcomings because of a widespread problem in Soviet industry: pressure to fulfill a production plan.

The government has said it must increase the production of nuclear power plants to meet the country's electricity needs. The Chernobyl plant, with two of its four reactors now operating, has been ordered to generate 19.9 billion kilowatt-hours this year.

Hints of problems at the plant first came in December. V. Lukyanenko, the Communist Party head in Slavutich, a new town for plant workers near Chernobyl, told a newspaper that sloppy work, poor discipline and safety violations at the plant contributed to 36 accidents over a 10-month period, three of them fatal.

Yuri K. Semyonov, deputy head of the Chernobyl clean-up commission, denied at a Moscow news conference on Wednesday that any major accident or deaths occurred at the plant since the 1986 explosion.

'Ivan' Faces Death In Israel

the six million victims of the Nazi Holocaust."

Earlier in the day, his father told the three-judge panel it was making a "very, very, very big mistake."

The Ukrainian-born Demjanjuk has consistently alleged he is a victim of mistaken identity, although he admitted lying on his American emigration papers about his past. He contends he was held in a Nazi prisoner of war camp during the critical period in question.

"I am not Ivan the Terrible, and to that God is the most just witness. He knows I am innocent," Demjanjuk told the court today. He spoke in Ukrainian.

The court adjourned briefly after Demjanjuk spoke to allow the judges time to consider the arguments.

The defense also had pleaded against a death sentence.

"There is also a question of an individual's holocaust," said defense attorney John Gill of Cleveland. "The taking of any innocent human life is a holocaust."

Opening the proceedings today, prosecutor Yona Blattman told the three judges that Demjanjuk "was not a small cog in the Nazi machine, he was a major criminal, an archhenchman. He committed the most heinous acts with his very own hands, killing tens of thousands with unspeakable brutality."

"We maintain the only punishment that can be imposed on the accused is the death penalty," Blattman argued. Demjanjuk pointed to his chest, shaking his head no, as Blattman alleged that Demjanjuk had "distinguished himself by the sheer brutality of his behavior ... beating Jews mercilessly with a sword or whip."

Gill said the conviction could be shown at a later date to have been incorrect and he cited previous wrongful convictions. The problem with the death penalty, he said, is that it "is in fact irrevocable."

Gill told the court Demjanjuk was suffering from back pains and had been given a shot. When the verdict was read April 18, Demjanjuk remained in a holding cell, saying he could not sit in the courtroom because of a bad back.

In its conviction last week, the tribunal convicted Demjanjuk "without hesitation or doubt" of being the brutal guard at Treblinka.

The three judges said Demjanjuk "killed masses of human beings with his own hands," frequently exceeding the brutality ordered by Nazi commanders.

Nazi war crimes and terrorism are the only offenses punishable by death in the Jewish state.

During the trial, five Holocaust survivors identified Demjanjuk, of suburban Cleveland, as the Nazi guard who operated Treblinka's gas chambers.

John Demjanjuk Jr., who visited his father in prison on Friday, said Demjanjuk was calm and told him "although they've made a tragic mistake, the final judge is God and God knows I'm innocent."

"My dad believes because he's not guilty nothing can really happen to him," he said.

Justice Minister Avraham Sharir has urged the death penalty for Demjanjuk, saying "a man convicted of such terrible crimes deserves no other sentence."

Isley-Tyson Vows Exchanged Sunday

The wedding of Mildred Ann Tyson and Malcolm Ward Isley, both of Goldsboro, took place Sunday at the Farmville United Methodist Church in Farmville at 2 p.m.

Organ Donor Needs Consent

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This year, April 24-30 has been designated as National Organ Donor Awareness Week. Many people will sign donor cards stating their intentions to donate. However, many do not realize that just by signing the card, they do not automatically become a donor — they must get consent from next of kin.

Last November, due to the critical need for organs for transplant, required request became federal law — meaning that any time a death occurs, the next of kin must be asked for consent to remove organs suitable for transplant.

Organ donation is a very personal decision and should be discussed by all family members now — not later.

When we ask the nearest of kin for permission, we present that beautiful piece clipped from the Dear Abby column, and permission is promptly given.

Thank you for all the good you do. — PAM MAYES, ADMINISTRATIVE SECRETARY, ALABAMA REGIONAL ORGAN AND TISSUE CENTER, BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

DEAR PAM MAYES: What better time to again publish "that beautiful piece":

"At a certain moment a doctor will determine that my brain has ceased to function and that, for all intents and purposes, my life has stopped.

"When that happens, do not attempt to instill artificial life into my body by the use of a machine. And don't call this my 'deathbed.' Call it my 'bed of life,' and let my body be taken from it to help others lead fuller lives.

"Give my sight to a man who has never seen a sunrise, a baby's face or love in the eyes of a woman.

"Give my heart to a person whose own heart has caused nothing but endless days of pain.

"Give my blood to the teen-ager who has been pulled from the wreckage of his car, so that he might live to see his grandchildren play.

"Give my kidneys to one who depends on a machine to exist from week to week.

"Take my bones, every muscle, every fiber and nerve in my body and find a way to make a crippled child walk.

"Explore every corner of my brain. Take my cells, if necessary, and let them grow so that someday a speechless boy will shout at the crack of a bat and a deaf girl will hear the sound of rain against her windows.

"Burn what is left of me and scatter the ashes to the winds to help the flowers grow.

"If you must bury something, let it be my faults, my weaknesses, and all prejudice against my fellowman.

"Give my soul to God.

"If by chance you wish to remember me, do it with a kind deed or word to someone who needs you. If you do all I have asked, I will live forever." — ROBERT N. TEST

Donor cards are available by writing to: The Living Bank, P.O. Box 6725, Houston, Texas 77265. I have carried such a card for more than 15 years and feel there is nothing I can leave after my death that will be of greater value.

"The court has inflicted a serious — and unwise — wound upon itself today," he said.

He was joined by Justices William J. Brennan, Harry A. Blackmun and Thurgood Marshall.

The court took the unusual step of calling for reargument of the racial harassment case in a one-paragraph, unsigned order.

The case, argued on Feb. 29, now will be held over until the court's 1988-89 term beginning in October.

Voting to rehear the case and expand its scope were Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justice Byron R. White, Sandra Day O'Connor, Antonin Scalia and Anthony M. Kennedy.

The case stems from an appeal by Brenda Patterson, a black woman, who wants to use a post-Civil War law to force her employer, McClean Credit Union, to pay actual and punitive damages for alleged harassment.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in 1986 upheld a ruling by a federal judge in Winston-Salem, N.C., throwing out her suit.

The appeals court said Ms. Patterson could not use the Civil War-era law to charge racial harrasment. The appeals court said the law is designed only to ban racial discrimination in hiring, firing and promotion.

Ms. Patterson still could charge racial harassment under a 1964 civil rights law. But the more recent statute provides that those who win their cases in court only may collect back pay, not potentially heavy damages awarded as compensation for emotional and mental suffering.

Civil rights groups say the more limited 1964 law may not be a sufficient deterrent to harassment.

Ms. Patterson, who worked as a teller and file coordinator at McLean Credit Union for 10 years until she was laid off in 1982, charged her boss repeatedly harassed her because she is black.

Festival Successful

FARMVILLE — Barbara Owens, coordinator of the Farmville Community Arts Council's "Farmville Festival: Dogwood and the Arts" held Friday evening and all day Saturday, counts the festival "a huge success."

She estimated the crowds attending at between 2,500 and 3,000 Friday afternoon, about the same number at the Supergrit Cowboy Band concert Friday night, and about 10,000 Saturday, including the Embers concert Saturday night.

"My head is whirling," Mrs. Owens said, "with things I hope we can do differently next year, but there are also many things that I think we did absolutely right." One of the major successes, she said, was the Academic Parade held Friday afternoon with about 1,000 participants from the five area schools.

Appeal Denied

WASHINGTON (AP) — North Carolina death row inmate John Wesley Oliver, convicted of killing two men during a 1978 robbery in Fairmont, lost a Supreme Court appeal today.

The justices let stand a ruling that upheld Oliver's death sentence for one of the killings.

He was convicted in the Dec. 12, 1978 shooting deaths of Allen Watts and Dayton Hodge.

Police said Watts owned a Fairmont convenience store and that Hodge was purchasing gasoline at the store's gas pumps when the robbery robbery.

The case is Oliver vs. North Carolina, 87-6554.

NFL Teams Drafted To Fill Holes

NFL Draftees

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Irvin and Keith Jackson, two game-breaking receivers, lasted until the 11th and 13th picks. A kicker was chosen before the first quarterback, who was really a punter.

The first day of the 1988 NFL draft on Sunday was definitely one in which teams went for needs rather than sheer athletic skill.

With few exceptions in the five rounds, which took 9 hours, 28 minutes, teams examined their holes, then went after players to fill them. That was particularly true of the stronger teams — the Cleveland Browns, Denver Broncos San Francisco 49ers, New Orleans Saints, New York Giants and even the Super Bowl champion Washington Redskins.

Typical was Miami's choice of Ohio State's Eric Kumerow with the 16th pick in the draft. Kumerow, a 257-pound defensive end-linebacker, was generally rated a second-rounder or lower but he fit one of the Dolphins' desperate needs.

"We had 17 sacks last year and the Bears had 70 so we had to do something," said Chuck Studley, Miami's linebacker coach. "I think he's going to be great pass-rusher."

While a record six wide receivers and five runnning backs went in the first round, no quarterbacks were chosen and the first quarterback went lower than ever before. In all, one pure quarterback was taken in Sunday's 137 picks even though six teams desperately need players at that position.

In fact the first quarterback taken was actually a punter, Tom Tupa of Ohio State by Phoenix. He was chosen with the 69th pick primarily to kick — he was the NFL scouting combine's 11th-rated quarterback and would probably be used as an emergency backup.

When Indianpolis took Washington's Chris Chandler seven picks later, the quarterback drought was finally over and a new record had been set. The lowest the first quarterback was taken previously was in 1974, when the Cowboys used the 53rd pick on Danny White, who is still their quarterback.

The first round was typical of the search for needs.

The first eight picks, starting with Auburn linebacker Aundray Bruce, already signed by the Atlanta Falcons, was predictable.

But then the Los Angeles Raiders, who had already taken Heisman Trophy winner Tim Brown of Notre Dame with the sixth choice, used the ninth on Terry McDaniel, a cornerback from Tennessee, who was projected as a late-first, early second-rounder. He will be used as a successor to the keystones of the Raiders' aging secondary, cornerbacks Mike Haynes and Lester Hayes.

Then the Giants took 290-pound offensive tackle Eric Moore of Indiana, following it up with 306-pounder John Elliott of Michigan on the second round as they chose to rebuild the offensive line that was in part responsible for their slip to 6-9 from a Super Bowl title in 1986.

"We thought we had to get big guys in the first round because if we wait until next year, hopefully we'll be drafting lower," Giants general manager George Young said.

That left Irvin, the Miami wide receiver and one of the top athletes available, to slip through to Dallas, which needed just about everything, particularly outside speed.

"He should accelerate our return to the living," said Tex Schramm, Dallas' president.

Jackson slipped by the Cardinals, who in their usual enigmatic style, took California linebacker Ken Harvey, claiming they needed an outside rushing linebacker. If he works out, Harvey would compensate for two previous draft disappointments at outside linebacker — Freddie Joe Nunn, the Cardinals' first pick in 1985, and Anthony Bell, their first choice in 1986.

That left the Eagles to take Jackson.

"I think the guy's as fine an athlete is in the draft," said Joe Wooley, the Philadelphia personnel director. "And he's graduated. We didn't get a dummy out of Oklahoma."

But most of the better teams went for needs.

Hawkins' 1-Hitter Keys A 3-0 Victory

By RICK WARNER
AP Sports Writer

Andy Hawkins was an unlikely hero for the San Diego Padres.

Hawkins, who hadn't pitched a shutout in almost two years and entered the game with a 6.75 earned run average, pitched a one-hitter Sunday as the Padres beat the Houston Astros 3-0 and completed a sweep of their three-game series in San Diego.

Bill Doran spoiled the no-hitter with a leadoff single in the seventh, but was quickly erased on a double play.

"I really wasn't expecting (a no-hitter)," said Hawkins, 2-1, who struck out five and walked three. "Maybe if it had gotten into the eighth or ninth it might have been different."

It was the 12th one-hitter in Padres' history and the first since Jimmy Jones beat the Astros 5-0 on Sept. 21, 1986. No San Diego pitcher has ever thrown a no-hitter.

Hawkins, 28, was plagued by shoulder problems last season and finished with a 3-10 record and 5.05 ERA. But he was in complete control Sunday, not allowing a Houston runner past second base.

"I had the rocking effect on the hitter," Hawkins said. "I was going in and out so they couldn't sit on one location."

Elsewhere in the National League, Pittsburgh beat Chicago 4-2, St. Louis edged New York 5-4, Atlanta downed Cincinnati 4-1, Montreal beat Philadelphia 3-1 and Los Angeles blanked San Francisco 4-0.

The Astros, who have lost 10 in a row at Jack Murphy Stadium, scored only one run against the Padres in the three-game series.

"When you score one run in a series and have one hit in a day, you have to give their pitching credit," Houston Manager Hal Lanier said. "We were hitting good coming in here, but that's what good pitching does to good hitting."

The Padres took a 1-0 lead in the fifth on rookie Roberto Alomar's RBI-single off starter Jim Deshaies, 1-2. San Diego made it 3-0 in the eighth on an RBI-triple by Marvell Wynne and a run-scoring bunt single by Benito Santiago.

Pirates 4, Cubs 2

Darnell Coles hit a tie-breaking single and Rafael Belliard followed with a run-scoring triple in the fourth inning as streaking Pittsburgh completed a three-game sweep at Three Rivers Stadium.

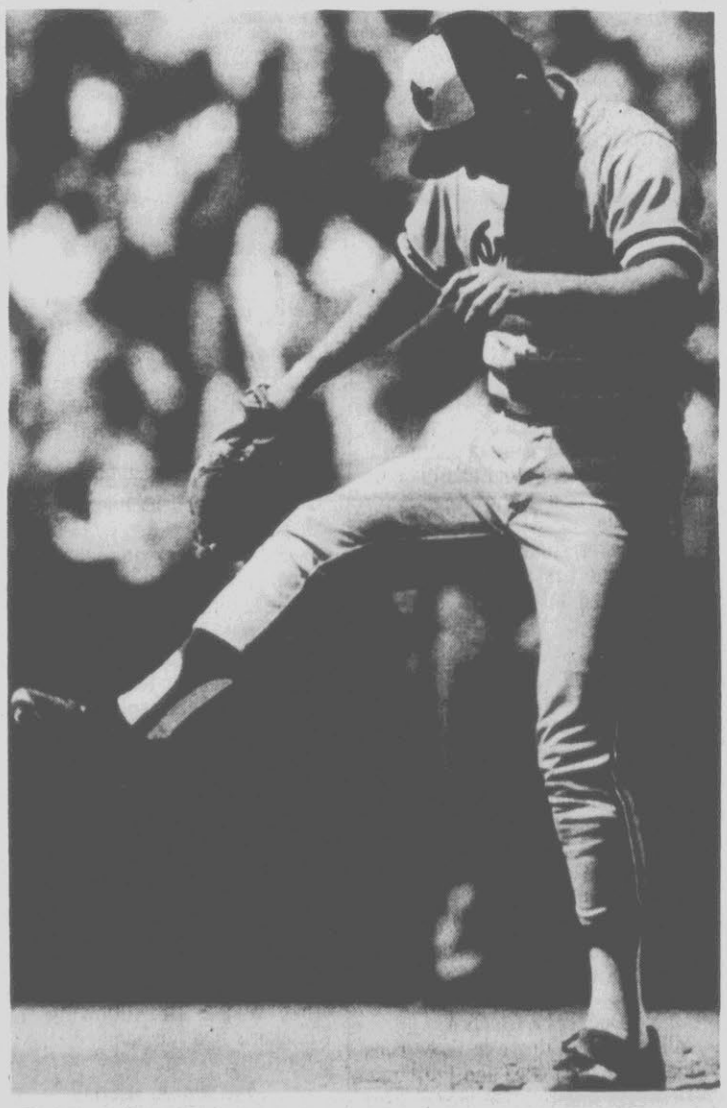

Bob Walk, 3-1, held the Cubs to two runs on six hits over 6 2-3 innings as the Pirates won for the 11th time in 13 games, including five of six against the Cubs. The Pirates, who are leading the NL East by two games, are 8-1 at home this season.

Cardinals 5, Mets 4

Willie McGee singled through a drawn-in infield to snap a tie in the seventh inning as St. Louis beat visiting New York for the first time in six games this season.

Bob Horner's sacrifice fly and Tom Brunansky's RBI-single capped a three-run rally that gave St. Louis a 5-2 lead in the seventh.

A Kick In The Air

Baltimore Oriole pitcher Mark Thurmond kicks the air after allowing a home run to Kansas City shortstop Kurt Stillwell in the fifth inning Sunday. Stillwell's homer put the Royals ahead 1-0 en route to a 3-1 victory over the still-winless Orioles. (AP Laserphoto)

3-1 Loss Continues Orioles' Nightmare

By The Associated Press

Bret Saberhagen's dreams turned sweet as the Baltimore Orioles continued to go sour.

Saberhagen didn't want to be the first pitcher to lose to the Orioles this season and he wasn't. The Orioles dropped to 0-18 Sunday and stumbled closer to the worst losing streak in baseball history as Saberhagen pitched a six-hitter and Kansas City won 3-1.

"I didn't want to be the first one to lose to these guys," Saberhagen said. "I dreamt about that last night."

Elsewhere in the AL it was Boston 4, Milwaukee 0; Minnesota 13, Cleveland 7; Oakland 5, Chicago 3; Texas 4, Detroit 2; and Seattle 4, California 2.

The Orioles were blown out by the Royals 13-1 Friday and lost 4-3 on Saturday.

"We can't hit, we can't pitch and we can't field," Manager Frank Robinson said, summing it up neatly.

The Orioles have been shut out or scored only one run 10 times. Saberhagen had a shutout until slump-ridded Cal Ripken homered in the ninth.

"Baseball is a funny game," Ripken said. "A lot of things can happen to you over the course of a season. They all seem to be happening to us at the start of the season."

Mark Thurmond, 0-4, winless in the majors since Aug. 26, 1986, kept the Orioles in a scoreless game until Kurt Stillwell hit a solo home run in the fifth inning. Stillwell, the ninth-place batter, singled home the winning run in the ninth inning Saturday.

"They're going to win sooner or later," Kansas City Manager John Wathan said. "They've got too good a ballclub."

The Orioles' losing streak is the longest in the majors since the Detroit Tigers dropped 19 straight in 1975 and tied the fifth-longest in American League history. The Philadelphia Athletics in 1920 and the Washington Senators in 1948 and '59 also lost 18 straight.

Red Sox 4, Brewers 0

Roger Clemens pitched a three-hitter and shut out Milwaukee for the third straight time as visiting Boston won its fifth straight game.

Clemens, 4-0, beat the Brewers 2-0 April 14 at Boston and 4-0 on the last day of the 1987 season. He struck out five and walked none en route to his 13th career shutout.

Twins 13, Indians 7

Tim Laudner, a career .218 hitter, had a pair of three-run homers as Minnesota cooled off Cleveland to snap a six-game losing streak. Laudner is 13-for-37 (.351) so far in 1988.

The victory also broke a five-game losing streak at home for the Twins, the major's winningest club at home in 1987 at 56-25.

Athletics 5, White Sox 3

Jose Canseco hit a three-run homer and Oakland beat Chicago for its sixth victory in seven games.

Oakland scored four runs in the third off starter Rick Horton, 2-3. With two outs, Mike Gallego singled, moved to second on a walk and scored on Carney Lansford's single. Canseco followed with his major

Bulls Top Celtics, Gain No. 3 Seed

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

The Chicago Bulls wanted 50 victories and the No. 3 seed in the Eastern Conference playoffs, and the Boston Celtics had four regulars who saw little or no playing time.

Still, it wasn't easy.

"I have the flu and I have lost my voice. I begged my guys before the game and again at halftime, not to take Boston for granted, but I guess I must have been talking to the wall," Bulls coach Doug Collins said after Chicago defeated the Celtics 115-108 on the final day of the NBA regular season.

"But, when you think we got 10 more wins this year, I can't really complain, because I think we're not just the Michael Jordan show."

Jordan scored 46 points and won his second straight NBA scoring title.

Charles Oakley had 24 points and 21 rebounds, but Michael Cage of the Los Angeles Clippers had a career-high 30 later Sunday to win the rebounding championship. Cage finished with a 13.028 average to 13.0 for Oakley, who had 35 rebounds, high in the 1980s, on Friday night.

With the victory, Chicago finished 50-32, its first 50-win season since 1974, and tied Atlanta for the third-best record in the Eastern Conference. But the Bulls got the No. 3 seed and a first-round playoff matchup with No. 6 Cleveland because they beat the Hawks three times in five games.

In other season-ending games, it was Los Angeles Lakers 136, Golden State 100; Dallas 119, San Antonio 109; Detroit 128, Philadelphia 118; Houston 127, Phoenix 119; and Seattle 109, Los Angeles Clippers 100.

Larry Bird stayed in Boston to nurse a sore ankle, Kevin McHale rested on the bench and veterans Dennis Johnson and Robert Parish played seven minutes apiece against the Bulls.

But Boston reserves Artis Gilmore and Fred Roberts combined for 15 fourth-quarter points, helping the Celtics cut a 94-82 Chicago lead to 106-103 with 2:39 remaining.

A three-point play by Vincent and two baskets by Jordan enabled the Bulls to rebuild the margin to 113-106 with 53 seconds remaining.

Mavericks 119, Spurs 109

Dallas grabbed third seed in the West, defeating San Antonio behind 27 points and 13 rebounds from Roy Tarpley and 25 points by Mark Aguirre.

The Mavericks and Portland tied for the third-best record at 53-29, but the Mavericks got the higher seed by winning three of five games with the Trail Blazers.

The Mavericks open the playoffs Thursday night in Dallas against the sixth-seeded Houston Rockets. The Spurs are the No. 8 seed and will play the top-seeded Los Angeles Lakers in the first round.

Greg Anderson scored 26 points and Mike Mitchell finished with 24 to lead the Spurs.

Lakers 136, Warriors 100

Los Angeles, with the homecourt advantage throughout the playoffs, buried Golden State early as Byron Scott scored 15 points while the Lakers opened a 20-3 lead.

The Lakers increased the margin to 72-44 by halftime as reserve Tony Campbell, who led the Lakers with 28 points, had 11 in the second period. Scott, who played little in the second half, finished with 20 points.

Pistons 128, 76ers 118

Detroit, the Central Division champions, tripped Philadelphia as Isiah Thomas had 25 points and 14 assists and Joe Dumars added 24 points.

The Pistons will play the Washington Bullets in the first round of the playoffs beginning Thursday night at the Pontiac Silverdome. The 76ers failed to qualify for the playoffs for the first time in 13 years.

Charles Barkley had 36 points and 18 rebounds to lead the 76ers.

Rockets 127, Suns 119

Houston snapped a three-game losing streak behind Akeem Olajuwon's 26 points and 18 rebounds and Rodney McCray's 12 points in the decisive third quarter against Phoenix.

Houston turned a 70-70 tie into an 87-73 lead in the third period with a 17-3 spurt.

The Suns, out of the playoffs, finished with seven players in double figures, led by Walter Davis with 21 points.

SuperSonics 109, Clippers 100

Los Angeles finished the season with a seven-game losing streak and the worst record in the NBA for the third straight season.

Cage, who needed 28 rebounds to tie Oakley with an average of exactly 13 rebounds per game, got his 29th when he pulled down a missed 18-footer by Sedale Threatt with 1:52 left.

Russ Schoene and Tom Chambers had 20 points each for Seattle, which meets Denver in the first round of the playoffs.

Eric White scored 20 points for the Clippers.

Beck Earns Win At USF & G Classic

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Chip Beck was looking to take on Lanny Wadkins or Tom Watson in the final round of the USF&G Classic. Instead, it was Lee Trevino and Ben Hogan who were his competition.

"I was hoping and praying Lanny or Watson would get hot and then see how I'd perform," said Beck, who shot a final-round 8-under-par 64 Sunday for a 72-hole total of 262, 26 under par.

"I was hoping for a real contest, and see how I'd perform, see if I could handle it," Beck said.

Jones Hopes LPGA Win Will Help Her

GULFPORT, Fla. (AP) — Rosie Jones says she feels sorry for her amateur partners in the pro-am portion of the LPGA Sara Lee Classic this week at Nashville, Tenn.

Jones, who won the USX Golf Classic on Sunday in a playoff with Kathy Postlewait, ruefully recalls what happened the last time she played in a pro-am the week after a victory — last year at Portland, Ore., after winning the Rail Charity Classic at Springfield, Ill.

"That was a disaster," Jones said. "I played awful. I had to keep telling my pro-am partners, 'I'm really better than this.' They probably didn't believe me that I had actually won a tournament the previous week."

One thing about Sunday's victory pleased Jones.

Earnhardt Uses New Method For Victory

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — Everyone knew Dale Earnhardt could slash and crash his way to victory.

Now the two-time defending Winston Cup driving champion apparently has learned how to finesse his way to victory circle, a frightening prospect for the rest of the NASCAR stock car competitors.

Earnhardt used his head as well as his heavy right foot Sunday in winning the Pannill Sweatshirts 500 at Martinsville Speedway for the second straight year.

At the end of the 500-lap, 263-mile race on the .525-mile oval, he had easily outdistanced second-place Sterling Marlin by 1.99 seconds.

But it was nowhere near that simple.

"We just ran a good, consistent race and tried to keep everything under control until we could get just the kind of breaks we got," Earnhardt said. "When we got our chance, we were in the right position to take it."

Hunniecutt Places Fourth At Meet

CHARLOTTE — Susu Hunniecutt of the Greenville Gymnastics Club placed fourth in floor exercises at the Class III-O State Gymnastics Meet Saturday.

Hunniecutt, competing in the 9-11 year old age group, had an 8.30 in the floor exercise competition.

D.H. Conley JVs Win Game 15-2

D.H. Conley's JV baseball team defeated West Craven 15-2 Saturday night in a Coastal Conference matchup.

Joey Godley was the winning pitcher, allowing only one hit. Hollis Gunn, Scott Seymour and Andy Fasset all had two hits apiece for the Vikings.

People Prompted Brown To Stay

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Just why did Larry Brown change his mind and stay at Kansas instead of going to UCLA?

In the end, Brown recalls, it came down to one thing: "I cared for the people and the program."

In an interview with The Kansas City Star, Brown said his decision to turn down the UCLA job less than a day after he accepted it was not reached easily. Although he admitted he wanted to go to UCLA, he said the happiness of other people was a factor.

"I don't think I sat down and decided what I wanted and what was best for me," he said. "I don't want people here to feel slighted by me saying that. It's not as cut-and-dry as it sounds.

"But I think so many times I've made decisions that haven't always been what I've wanted, and that's got me into a lot of trouble. It's been what's best for other people. Fortunately, sometimes when I've done things that way, it's turned out great for me."

Pitt County Wrestling Club Place Eight

NEW BERN — The Pitt County Wrestling had eight gold medalists at the New Bern Free Style Wrestling Tournament Saturday.

Parker Ellison (189 pounds), Kevin Daniels (165 pounds), Danny Osborne (243 pounds), Binky Moore (123 pounds), Stephen Daugherty (177 pounds), Jason Osborne (123 pounds) Bill Stocks (125 pounds) and John Smith (103 pounds).

That is the final in-state meet before the national tournament to be held in July in Cedar Falls, Iowa.

Scandal May Cause New Choice For Mills

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The controversy surrounding Chris Mills' recruitment to play basketball for the University of Kentucky has prompted his father to say he does not know if his son will enroll at the school.

Claud Mills said he was tired of the controversy and said he was being harassed by journalists.

"I don't care anymore. I'm sick of it," he said. "I've got a hundred reporters calling me every day. I'm sick and tired of you accusing my son of something."

Because of the furor, Claud Mills said he does not want his son, considered one of the nation's top high school players, to go to Kentucky.

"I really don't," he said in a weekend interview with the Lexington, Ky., Herald-Leader. "I really don't know if he's coming to Kentucky or not. I really don't know. It's up to the NCAA."

The outcome of an NCAA investigation of Chris Mills' recruitment could affect where he is eligible to play.

The NCAA and university are investigating allegations that $1,000 in cash was found when an Emery overnight mail envelope addressed to Claud Mills popped open at a Los Angeles sorting center. The sender was listed as Kentucky assistant coach Dwane Casey.

Harry Gant, trying to end a 69-race winless string, ran away from the field in the early stages, leaving Earnhardt and everyone else in his dust.

But, just as it has virtually ever race since he last won in April 1985, bad luck found Gant. This time, it was in the form of an engine failure on lap 209.

"Harry Gant had us beat," Earnhardt said. "If he'd have run all day, I don't think there's any way we could have beat him. It's unfortunate he had trouble, but it put us right back in the thick of things."

NFL Draft Completes 1st Day

The Redskins, whose first pick was the last of the second round and 55th overall, took Chip Lohmiller, a kicker from Minnesota, in hopes of ending the erratic kicking game that has plagued them the last two years.

Then they traded away three later picks to move up in the third round to take another specialist, kick-returner Mike Oliphant of Puget Sound, and set up a brother-on-brother confrontation when they used their fourth-rounder to take Jamie Morris of Michigan, brother of Joe Morris, a running back for their main NFC East rival, the Giants.

Cleveland, deperately needing pass rushers, went for Clifford Charlton, a blitzing Florida linebacker on the first round, then took defensive lineman Michael Dean Perry of Clemson, the brother of Chicago's William Perry. They decided on Charlton over Lorenzo White of Michigan State, who would have augmented an already strong running back corps.

Denver, seeking to bulk up after being overwhelmed in two straight Super Bowls, picked 270-pound nose tackle Ted Gregory of Syracuse with their first choice despite his history of knee troubles. With their second, the Broncos took Gerald Perry, a 311-pound tackle from Southern University.

New Orleans, worried about the condition of star running back Rueben Mayes' knee, took the mammoth Craig "Ironhead" Heyward of Pittsburgh on the first round, then went for the receiving speed they need on the second round with Brent Perriman of Miami, Fla.

San Francisco, needing pass rushers, traded down and got two on the second round — Danny Stubbs of Miami and Pierce Holt of Angelo State. They also satisfied a need for a receiver in the trade, which brought them Dokie Williams from the Raiders.

And Buffalo, with no first-round pick, took a calculated gamble that could pay off when it chose on the second round Oklahoma State running back Thurman Thomas to fill a hole at running back. Thomas would have been a first-rounder if not for knee problems.

Of the have-nots, the Detroit Lions, a team that could use everything, seemed to do well, picking up Miami safety Bennie Blades on the first round, then getting Ohio State linebacker Chris Spielman and Florida State tight end Pat Carter with two early second-rounders.

Like the Lions, the needy teams tended to be less picky about position than the better ones.

After Atlanta selected Bruce and Kansas City and Detroit made their expected choices of Nebraska defensive end Neil Smith and Blades, Tampa Bay came through with the first surprise. Needing everything, but expected to take a wide receiver, the Bucs took the best offensive lineman, Wisconsin tackle Paul Gruber, even though coach-general manager Ray Perkins has always maintained that offensive linemen can be taken lower.

Gruber was followed by defensive back Rickey Dixon of Oklahoma, who went to the Cincinnati Bengals and Brown.

The Raiders ended up with three picks on the round — the first team since Cincinnati in 1984 to have three first-rounders. They made room for Brown by trading Williams and filled two needs with McDaniel and defensive end Scott Davis of Illinois, a talented but temperamental player.

Following Brown, the first round went this way:

Wide receiver Sterling Sharpe of South Carolina to Green Bay; offensive tackle Dave Cadigan of Southern California to the New York Jets; McDaniel to the Raiders; Moore to the Giants; Irvin to the Cowboys; Harvey to the Cardinals and Jackson to the Eagles.

Then the Los Angeles Rams, who used four of their five picks in the first two rounds for Pac-10 players, went for UCLA running back Gaston Green, who was joined on the second round by his college teammate, Willie "Flipper" Anderson, a wide receiver. They were also need picks — Los Angeles took another receiver, Aaron Cox of Arizona State with its second first-round pick.

Green was followed by wide receiver Anthony Miller of Tennessee to San Diego; Kumerow; running back John Stephens of Northwestern Louisiana to New England; defensive end Aaron Jones of Eastern Kentucky to Cleveland, and guard Randall McDaniel of Arizona State to Minnesota.

NL Games

Braves 4, Reds 1

Dale Murphy broke out of a slump with three hits as Atlanta snapped a 28-inning scoring drought and won its first home game of the season after nine defeats.

The Braves ended their scoreless streak in the first inning when Ron Gant doubled and scored on Murphy's single.

Expos 3, Phillies 1

Mike Fitzgerald's RBI-single in the eighth inning broke a 1-1 tie, and Dennis Martinez allowed five hits over 7 1-3 innings as visiting Montreal downed Philadelphia.

After Tim Wallach opened the eighth with a double, Kent Tekulve relieved Phillies starter Don Carman, 2-2. Wallach went to third on Andres Galarraga's groundout and scored on Fitzgerald's single to right.

Dodgers 4, Giants 0

Mike Scioscia drove in three runs with a pair of singles and Fernando Valenzuela allowed five hits in 7 2-3 innings as the Dodgers beat the Giants in San Francisco.

Valenzuela, 2-2, struck out three and walked three before getting relief from Jay Howell with two outs and the bases loaded in the eighth. Howell struck out pinch-hitter Will Clark to end the inning and finished the game to pick up his first save.

AL Games

league-leading seventh homer, a shot into the upper deck in left field at Comiskey Park.

Yankees 5, Blue Jays 3

Reliever Mark Eichhorn threw a wild pitch to allow Rickey Henderson to score and break an eighth-inning tie as New York beat Toronto at Yankee Stadium.

With the score 3-3, Henderson opened the eighth with a single and Willie Randolph followed with a walk. One out later, on Eichhorn's 1-2 pitch to Jack Clark, Henderson and Randolph attempted a double steal and Henderson scored when the pitch bounced away from catcher Ernie Whitt.

Rangers 4, Tigers 2

Steve Buechele hit a home run and Charlie Hough scattered seven hits in seven innings as Texas beat visiting Detroit and Jack Morris.

Buechele's homer to right-center broke a 2-2 tie following Lou Whitaker's two-run homer in the top of the fifth.

Mariners 4, Angels 2

Mark Langston pitched a complete game allowing eight hits and struck out 10 as Seattle beat California at Anaheim.

Trailing 2-1 in the fifth, Glenn Wilson singled and Jim Presley walked against starter Chuck Finley. Both runners advanced on a sacrifice, and scored on Harold Reynolds' single.

Good News On The Home Front.
Clients benefit from RE/MAX Referral System
There's good news for RE/MAX home sellers who are moving out of town and planning to buy a new home.
Now, when clients list their property with a RE/MAX Sales Associate, they can begin the search for their home right away, without having to commute back and forth between cities.
The RE/MAX Referral System lets RE/MAX Affiliates in one area locate and select appropriate RE/MAX Agents in other areas to take on the home-finding tasks of relocating clients.
A free service of RE/MAX International, the RE/MAX Referral System utilizes state-of-the-art technology to match each real estate client with the RE/MAX specialist most suited to his or her individual needs.
Armed with a client's specifications - price range, desired size and style of home, proximity of workplace, churches and schools - a RE/MAX Associate can put together a menu of suitable homes for the client to view upon his or her arrival in the destination city.
That's the kind of "Above the Crowd!" service that's made the RE/MAX Referral System the most effective referral program in real estate today. And that's a fact.

Gless Checks Into Center

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Sharon Gless, whose cop character on TV's "Cagney & Lacey" sunk into alcoholism last season, checked into a drug and alcohol rehabilitation center two weeks ago, according to People magazine.

Gless' publicist would not confirm the report that the two-time Emmy winner entered the Hazelden Foundation in Center City, Minn., the magazine said in its current edition.

The publicist, whom People did not identify, confined comment to a statement from Gless:

"Everything from my personal life to my metaphysical beliefs have been speculated on and made cheap. I continue to maintain the position I've held for some time — I'll not comment on my personal life for the press," said the statement.

A spokesman for the series refused to comment, People said. CBS has yet to renew the show.

'China Beach' Reflects On Women Serving At The Doorstep Of War

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Even forward-thinking "M-A-S-H" couldn't develop more than one regular female character, a problem for war stories on TV.

But ABC has an impressive, ambitious new series, "China Beach," about women — not those back at the home front, but the ones at war's doorstep, behind the lines at a military base in Da Nang: a nurse, a USO entertainer, a Red Cross worker.

The two-hour premiere Tuesday is admittedly sluggish, and John Sacret Young's script is at times maudlin. But "China Beach" has such fine moments that the occasional lapses are forgivable, and director Rod Holcomb, a TV veteran who is also supervising producer, has a sophisticated touch that adds a needed cynical edge.

Dana Delaney is especially good as Colleen McMurphy, a burned-out nurse soon to go home who hides her bitterness behind a just-one-of-the-boys facade.

On one of her last nights, she sits alone in the base bar. In comes Dr. Dick Richard (Robert Picardo), the "China Beach" equivalent of Hawkeye Pierce, to deride McMurphy for feeling sorry for herself. He thinks she should re-up. She turns on him:

"You'll cut off their hand, but you don't have to hold it. You don't stick around to see their eyes when they realize what's happened to them. You're not the last person they see before they die. The helicopters never stop coming. I'm going home."

Of course, eventually she'll decide to stay, after Richard urges her to "help save some teen-agers."

Michael Boatman is also impressive as Sam Beckett, the camp mortician. None of the other enlisted men associate with him for obvious reasons.

Beckett thinks the formaldehyde he uses every day is bleaching his skin. He complains that it's just his luck, to be turning white just as black has become beautiful.

The series has a solid pedigree. It was co-created by William Broyles Jr., a Vietnam veteran who is former editor in chief of Newsweek magazine, founding editor of Texas Monthly and author of "Brothers in Arms: A Journey From War to Peace," a book about his return to Vietnam in 1984.

Young, the other co-creator, is also executive producer. He previously wrote such fine films as "Testament" and "A Rumor of War."

Although it contains familiar scenes of choppers arriving with wounded from the front lines, "China Beach" is no "M-A-S-H," a mostly comedy show set in Korea but carrying the mood of Vietnam. "China Beach" is set in Vietnam but at times seems to have almost a World War II sensibility. An example is Chloe Webb's Laurette, a USO singer who is a thinly veiled variation on the standard hooker-with-a-heart-of-gold character.

Laurette befriends McMurphy, not knowing what it is exactly McMurphy does, and talks McMurphy into donning minidress and wig and filling in as a backup singer at a USO show. In return, McMurphy extracts Laurette's flip promise to help McMurphy in her job — whatever that is.

Laurette, whose lusty refrain has been "Men everywhere!" is appalled by the carnage that confronts her after a new wave of choppers arrive. But she manages somehow, and when a dying man asks her to sing to him, she softly croons "This Is Dedicated to the One I Love," holding his badly burned hand and then another bloody one that reaches out to her.

Cherry — no kidding — a 19-year-old Red Cross worker, or "doughnut dolly," is played by Nan Woods. Her first day on the base she meets a filthy, war-weary Marine who stares at her blond hair and fresh face with dumb awe. She nervously asks him, doesn't he talk?

"I used to talk. When I was young," he finally says.

"How old are you?" she asks.

"Nineteen."

Koppel Takes 'Nightline' To Israel

By JAY SHARBUTT
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — ABC's Ted Koppel, still negotiating a new contract but refusing to talk about it, Monday night starts a week of live, longer-than-usual "Nightline" broadcasts from Israel.

The Israel visit by "Nightline" is its fourth overseas trip since the program began in March 1980 during the Iranian hostage crisis.

Why this expedition?

"The question answers itself," said Koppel, who previously went with the program to South Africa and Vietnam in 1985, and to Manila the next year during the overthrow of Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos.

"The Middle East is always one of the most volatile places in the world, a place of crucial strategic interest and high emotional interest to people, be they Christians, Moslems or Jews," the anchorman declared.

And considering the recent turmoil there, he said, "this just seems an appropriate time to go over and take a longer and more thoughtful look at what's going on."

Barring unforeseen developments, he will start Monday night with separate interviews of Israeli Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin and an official of the Palestinian Liberation Organization, ABC says.

Tuesday, he will moderate a marathon "Town Meeting" of about 600 Palestinians and Jews in Jerusalem, with ordinary citizens and officials from each side taking part. It is expected to last almost three hours and will cover a wide range of issues that for years have caused conflict in Israel and in the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip and West Bank, where violent unrest has caused the deaths of 152 Palestinians and two Israelis since early December.

This week's broadcasts involve 30 ABC News staffers, ranging from media critic Jeff Greenfield to ABC News President Roone Arledge, who will be in Israel but said he would not appear on the programs.

Koppel & Co. will be working morning-show hours. Because of the time difference between here and Jerusalem, American late-night viewers actually will be watching live broadcasts that start at 6:30 a.m. in Israel. (Portions of the "Nightline" programs will be taped by Israeli TV for same-day broadcast, probably in prime time, ABC says.)

Koppel was asked about the criticism from many Jews in Israel and the United States that the American TV networks' coverage of the violence in the occupied territories often tells only one side of a complex story.

"Well, I respond by saying this kind of trip ought to satisfy a lot of that criticism," Koppel said in a phone interview from Washington a few days before leaving for Israel.

"The criticism, as I understand it, suggests not — at least among the more thoughtful people — that there should not be coverage, but that the coverage does not have proper context and perspective.

"And what we can do in the course of seven or eight or even nine hours of live programming is to provide a lot more context and perspective than people would normally get on a television news program."

Now 48, Koppel has been with ABC News for 25 years, in journalistic capacities ranging from Vietnam reporter to chief diplomatic correspondent for nearly nine years.

He is the holder of two Peabody Awards, two George Polk Awards and 10 Emmy Awards and has been acclaimed for his crisp, authoritative interviews on "Nightline."

FORECAST For TUESDAY April 26

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Work on finding a way to improve your efficiency this morning, and don't let a minor delay keep you from handling more important matters.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Some plans you have made for fun with your friends may be disrupted by a monetary problem. Avoid a greedy associate tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): If you decide to get involved in a new recreation, make sure it isn't too expensive. Make time for a chat with a favorite family member.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Take care of important telephone calls and correspondence early today. Don't do anything to upset your mate this evening.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): If you let a silly acquaintance get under your skin, you could miss out on a great opportunity. Don't be forceful in trying to achieve your goals.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): This is not a good day to ask any favors of your superiors. Your mood will improve if you seek out the company of your good friends.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Before you start on a new project, make sure you won't become bored halfway through it. It is important that you drive with care.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): If a good friend of yours is feeling somewhat disparaged, encourage this person to rely more on his or her own fine abilities.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Don't dispute the directives of a person in a position of power. Pay particular attention to credit and other financial matters.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Don't allow a self-serving coworker to annoy you or break your concentration. A trip may be coming up soon, so be ready for this.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): You have made several promises to friends, so be sure you are filled in on the details. Make sure you don't spend too much money tonight.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): You should be particularly gentle with your family and friends this evening, or you could find yourself involved in a big argument.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠7 ♡AQ6 ◇AQJ983 ♣AQ7
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with three spades. What action do you take?
A.—An awkward hand. You are too strong for four diamonds; five diamonds might not be the right contract; and you have a heart too few for a takeout double. However, we would opt for the latter action despite that flaw. If partner does bid four hearts, at least your side will be taking spade ruffs in the short trump hand; and he could easily have a five-card or longer suit.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AQ ♡J762 ◇AK83 ♣K95
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
3 ♠	Pass	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—While you have the strength and shape for a takeout double, the last thing you want is an opening lead through your ace-queen of spades. With your balanced shape and spade stoppers, we would prefer a stab at three no trump—with due apologies to partner if that results in a disaster.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠7 ♡Q953 ◇AJ72 ♣KJ63
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with three spades. What action do you take?
A.—You have the perfect shape for a takeout double, but not the strength—especially at this vulnerability. Your left-hand opponent could have a very good hand, and if you act you might be stepping into a buzz-saw. Pass.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠7 ♡Q953 ◇AJ72 ♣KJ63
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
3 ♠	Pass	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—The same hand, and almost the same situation. This time, however, you are afforded a certain amount of reassurance by the fact that East did not have enough to raise to game. Double. It is unlikely to prove expensive, and your side could have game. The potential rewards are far greater than the risks.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KQ7 ♡K3 ◇KQ93 ♣AQJ6
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ◇	Dbl	Pass	1 ♡
Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—An immediate overcall of one no trump shows a hand of 16–19 points. Since your hand is slightly better than that, you need a bid to show your extra values. That's easy! All you have to do is bid one no trump now. After a takeout double, that promises 19 plus to 21 points.

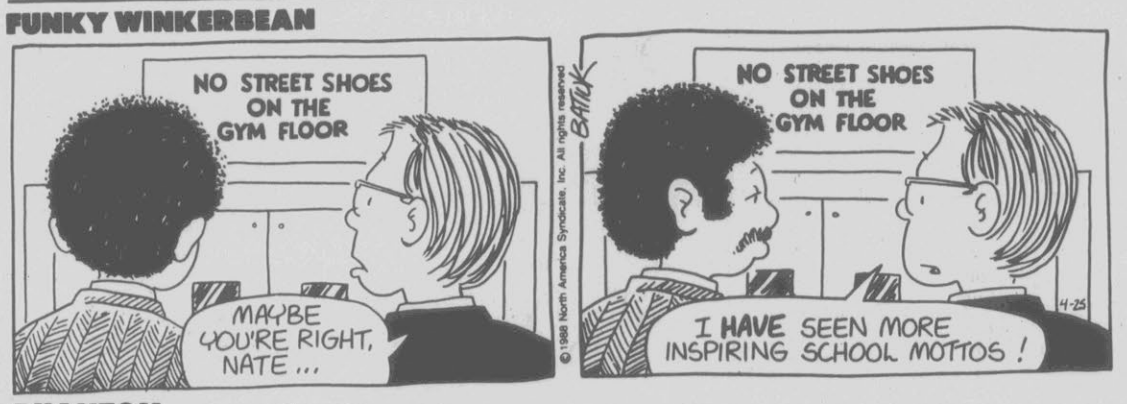

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KQ72 ♡A763 ◇5 ♣Q1062
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ◇	Dbl	Pass	1 ♠

What action do you take?
A.—Despite your excellent trump support, you have a minimum takeout double. Partner's simple response limits his hand to a maximum of 9 points. Since you have already shown what you have, you must pass.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending April 15.

By a vote of 340 for and 64 against, the House passed and sent to the White House a bill (S 858) to protect valuable shipwrecks from random encroachment by sport divers, commercial salvagers and archeologists.

The bill assigns states title to historic shipwrecks submerged within three miles of shore or embedded in coral reefs, giving them power to control access and determine allocation of any discovered treasure. Federal courts could no longer assert jurisdiction under admiralty law.

Between five and ten percent of the estimated 50,000 abandoned shipwrecks off U.S. shores are thought to be of significant historic or commercial value.

Supporter Walter B. Jones, Jr., D-N.C., said "only states can balance the legitimate interests of all groups interested in shipwrecks...."

Opponent Jack Fields, R-Texas, said "the real goal of this legislation is to severely restrict, if not prohibit, access to these vessels."

Members voting yes wanting states, rather than admiralty law, to determine access to certain historic shipwrecks were Walter B. Jones, D-1; Tim Valentine, D-2; Martin Lancaster, D-3; David Price, D-4; Stephen Neal, D-5; Charles Rose, D-7; W.G. Hefner, D-8; Alex McMillan, R-9; Cass Ballenger, R-10; and James Clarke, D-11. Voting no was Howard Coble, R-6.

By a vote of 134 for and 268 against, the House rejected an amendment to S 858 (above) requiring states to allow sport divers and commercial salvagers access to shipwrecks under state ownership. Sponsor Norman Shumway, R-Calif., said that without his amendment states would "throw a wet blanket on the private sector incentive to go out and discover shipwrecks."

Opponent Jack Brooks, D-Texas, called the amendment redundant because the legislation already assured states would provide "reasonable access" to their shipwrecks.

Members voting yes wanting the bill to contain strict guarantees of private access to state-owned shipwrecks were Coble and Ballenger. Voting no were Jones, Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Rose, Hefner, McMillan, and Clarke.

By a vote of 63 for and 27 against, the Senate approved and sent to the House a resolution (SJ Res 268) ordering a cut in U.S. foreign aid and other economic benefits to Mexico on the grounds that Mexico is lagging in support of American anti-drug efforts.

The vote nullifies a recent Administration certification that Mexico is "fully cooperating" with the war on drugs and thus eligible for full American aid.

Sponsor Pete Wilson, R-Cal., called the State Department's certification "a travesty ... that should get a Pulitzer Prize for euphemism."

Opponent Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., said the resolution "would impair our relations with Mexico, further hampering the ability of the Drug Enforcement Administration to operate efficiently in Mexico."

Voting yes in favor of penalizing Mexico for its reported failings in the war against drugs was Jesse Helms, R. Terry Sanford did not vote.

By a vote of 69 for and 26 against, the Senate approved a fiscal 1989 budget calling for $1.1 trillion in total federal spending, no new taxes, an annual deficit of $136 billion, defense spending of $294 billion and non-entitlement domestic spending of $185 billion.

Senators put the fiscal blueprint in violation of the 1987 "budget summit" accord between Capitol Hill and the White House, by adding $2.6 billion to anti-drug programs. The two branches must revise their agreement if the money is to be appropriated.

Another controversial feature of the budget plan (S Con Res 113) is its use of Administration economic projections that are much more optimistic than those of Congress's own budget office. The Senate's $136 billion deficit would be $172 billion using congressional projections.

Supporter James Sasser, D-Tenn., called the budget "a substantial improvement" over the one submitted to Congress by President Reagan.

Opponent David Durenberger, R-Minn., said "through the use of creative economic forecasting we call a $172 billion deficit $136 billion."

Sanford voted yes in favor of the budget blueprint and Helms voted no.

AMERICAN "LEASEPURCHASE"

The AMERICAN "LEASEPURCHASE" Plan allows you to drive a Luxury Automobile with an affordable monthly payment and with no downpayment. After the Expiration of the Lease Term you may purchase the automobile for the pre-established Residual amount. This Residual amount, which you know from day one, is your purchase price. Historically this residual amount has been lower than the actual value of the automobile. Of course, all automobile values are governed by market conditions. That is why it is wise to choose an automobile that has proven to depreciate less. If you wish, American Leasing will finance 100% percent of the residual amount. What better way can you find to purchase a Luxury automobile than American's "LEASEPURCHASE" Plan. For further information contact one of our representatives.

Jackson Says He'll Meet Anyone To Free Hostages

By EVANS WITT
AP Political Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Democrat Jesse Jackson is breaking ranks with a key tenet of American policy, saying he would "meet with anyone" — including terrorists — to free hostages.

The gentle battling between the surviving Democratic candidates got more direct as the candidates closed in on Tuesday's delegate-rich Pennsylvania primary, with Jackson calling on front-runner Michael Dukakis to put a price tag on his programs and Dukakis calling a Jackson budget idea absurd.

But it was Jackson who stirred big controversy Sunday with his call for negotiation with anyone to free hostages.

"In this world, in this ambiguous world, you must not set up preconditions that stop effectiveness," Jackson said at a rally in Washington. "I would meet with anyone I could meet with to get the hostages out of Beirut."

Eight Americans are currently held hostage by Moslem extremists in Beirut.

Jackson's stance put him in direct conflict with U.S. policy and Dukakis's tough statements against negotiating with terrorists. Jackson suggested that tough statements are not enough.

"I've raised the point in several debates thisyear. Every time a question comes up about terrorism, Mr. Dukakis says, 'I'm against terrorism. ... We should not negotiate with terrorists. ... In the Middle East, never negotiate with terrorists.'

"I disagree with that; If I could get the hostages out, I'd do it."

On Sunday, Dukakis did a whistle-stop tour of Pennsylvania, but he was switching to the air today, hitting six cities to make an impression in every media market in the state before the voters go to the polls Tuesday.

Jackson raised money in Washington before returning late Sunday for a final push in the Keystone State.

Dukakis has a big lead in the polls in Pennsylvania, where 178 delegates are at stake. The complicated process — with delegates elected individually — offers a challenge to voters who may have to pull the lever up to 12 times. But it also offers Dukakis, if he does well, a chance to win as many as 100 more delegates than Jackson.

"You've got to vote more than once. This is the one time you can do so legally," he told students at Penn State University in State College. "Vote early and often — vote for me and vote for my delegates."

Dukakis is more than half the way to a delegate majority, holding 1,075.15 national convention votes. Jackson has 836.1 while 599.75 were uncommitted. A tally of 2,081 or more is needed to win the nomination at the July convention in Atlanta.

Guam's three convention votes entered the uncommitted column Sunday evening following caucuses on the Pacific island.

On the Republican side, Vice President George Bush is virtually unchallenged on Tuesday in Pennsylvania, when he may win enough of the 78 delegates at stake to go over the magic majority mark — 1,139 — needed to win the GOP nomination in New Orleans in August.

A new poll by Time magazine indicates that a Dukakis-Jackson ticket would get 47 percent of the vote nationwide to 42 percent for a Republican ticket headed by Bush.

A Dukakis-Sen. Al Gore ticket would defeat Bush 49 percent to 39 percent, but Bush would defeat Jackson by 52 percent to 34 percent, according to the poll released Sunday.

On the Democratic side, Dukakis and Jackson have been unusually cordial recently, but the best-friends atmosphere thinned when Jackson urged Dukakis to release a proposed budget.

"I'm not just for Head Start, I'm willing to pay for Head Start," Jackson said during the debate Saturday night in Pittsburgh. "I have put numbers together to pay for my dreams."

Dukakis strongly disagreed.

"You can't prepare a budget now for next year — that's absurd," he told reporters Sunday on his chartered Amtrak train, nicknamed the "Pennsylvania Presidential Unlimited."

"I'll lay out where I'm going to make the cuts — I've done that in great detail," Dukakis said as he toured western Pennsylvania. "I'll lay out where I think we ought to do some investing — I've done that in great detail."

Dukakis also took a couple of swipes at George Bush, saying that the Republican nominee-to-be seems more interested in building aircraft carriers than in rebuilding the nation's railroads and highways.

"Mr. Bush was critical of me ... because I oppose spending $36 billion on two supercarrier task forces that we don't need and we can't afford," Dukakis said. "If he thinks that's where we ought to put our scarce resources, then so be it."
