Scouts, Friends Honor 'Booger' Scales

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

W.M. "Booger" Scales of Greenville, — with a combination of roast and tribute from several close friends, including U.S. Sen. Terry Sanford — was honored Tuesday night as the winner of the Pitt District Boy Scouts of America's 1988 Distinguished Citizen Award at a dinner at the Greenville Country Club.

Scales, over the past 30 years, has chaired drives that have raised over $5 million for various community projects.

But even as he was being honored, Scales told the audience that, "I'd be the hypocrite of the century if I took credit for all of this," and praised a number of other individuals who he said were the real money raisers.

"This is the most humble moment of my life," Scales said. "I will forever be indebted to the Boy Scouts for this honor ...

"Modesty is not one of my long suits," Scales said, but "I'm not a good money raiser ... I'm a chauffeur. I take good men ... the right men with me ..."

"For every taker in Greenville, there are 100 givers," Scales said. "If any compliment is paid me, these are the ones you owe it to."

And Scales said, "When you come to honor me, you come to honor Virginia," his wife. "I'd be a drunken bump in prison if not for her."

"My family and I can never repay you people for what you've done," Scales said.

Scales was named the Man of the Year by the Greenville Jaycees in 1956 and in 1957 was the last single winner of the North Carolina State Jaycees Community Man of the Year award. Since that time, the award has been given to five men each year. In 1967, he received the Exchange Club's Golden Deeds Award, and in 1976 received the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce's Man of the Year honor.

Scales became the first president of the ECU Pirates Club in 1960. That same year he chaired a committee to raise $278,000 for construction of Ficklen Stadium, then in 1963 he headed a committee to raise $165,000 for construction of the First Christian Church.

Scales also chaired a committee in 1967 that raised money to build the field house at Ficklen Stadium, and in 1975 was co-chairman — with Dr. Ray Minges — of a drive to raise $1 million to increase the seating capacity of the stadium.

In 1980 Scales was co-chairman of a committee that raised $250,000 in two days to build the Pitt-Greenville Boys Club. The following year, Scales served on a committee that raised $250,000 for the restoration of the Fleming House — the home of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

Most recently, in 1987, Scales chaired a four-man committee that raised $525,000 for the Minges-Farley athletic complex and this year helped raise money for scholarships for Pitt Community College.

Lawton Nisbet, chairman of the Pitt District

Boy Scouts who presided at the testimonial dinner, said the 355 people attending was the largest gathering ever seated at the country club. The "old record," Nisbet said, was 338. "This is a living testimony to the man we honor tonight."

U.S. "Sonny" Randle, four-time National Football League all pro end and former ECU football coach, was one of four Scales friends to speak at the dinner.

"The thing that's so extraordinary about this is if they listed all the things that he's done that nobody knows about, you'd need a whole lot bigger sheet than this," Randle said, holding up a letter-size page which listed civic awards Scales has received over the years and fund raising projects Scales has participated in. "It's unbelievable the things that have happened ... the things he did that nobody knows about."

"His heart is as big as this podium. He's a family man. He's a man's man," Randle said.

Gaylord Perry, the only major league pitcher to win the coveted Cy Young Award in both the American and National leagues, said he met Scales in 1964. "I've seen this man stand tall ... seen him on his knees. He's the only guy, dressed up in a Giant's uniform in Shea Stadium, I've seen throwing balls to the fans. Each one he threw cost me $5."

And in Philadelphia, Perry said, again in a Giant's uniform, Scales was "showing Willie Mays how to hit. We've had a lot of fun together. He's a great guy."

Mother Of Assault Victim Says Coach Visited Home

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

The mother of a Rocky Mount woman who filed sexual assault charges against three East Carolina University football players says ECU assistant football coach Don Thompson visited her and her daughter at their home the day after the incident.

Michelle Battle, 22, testified in Pitt County District Court last week that Thompson and football player Kenny Portis visited her home in Rocky Mount Feb. 21, but she did not elaborate on the visit.

Miss Battle testified she had been on the ECU campus on the night of Feb. 20 to visit football player Lewis Wilson, and that two people came into the room after she had fallen asleep and had sex with her without her consent. Thompson was subpoenaed as a witness, but he was never called to the stand during the two-day trial.

Ernest L. Pendleton, 18, of Devon, Pa., and Lester Errol McCorvey, 19, of Pensacola, Fla., were charged with assault on a female and Wilson,

DON THOMPSON

21, of Foley, Ala., was charged with two counts of aiding and abetting as assault on a female. Charges against Pendleton were dismissed, Wilson was found not guilty and McCorvey was convicted and sentenced to two years in prison.

McCorvey is appealing the decision.

In a telephone interview, Miss Battle declined to comment on what Thompson discussed during his visit. Assistant District Attorney Betsy Warren, who prosecuted the case, also declined to comment.

Miss Battle's mother, Florine Battle, said in an interview this week she was not aware of what Thompson discussed with her daughter, but she said Thompson spoke with her about Wilson. "I got the impression Lewis had done something he didn't like, and he wanted him off the team," Mrs. Battle said of her conversation with Thompson.

Mrs. Battle said she was not aware of what had happened to her daughter when Thompson visited, and he told her of the assault and conspiracy charges.

Thompson said Wilson "would pay" for what he did and he said he wanted Wilson dropped from the team, Mrs. Battle said.

ElectriCities Chief Praises GUC Plans

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

"Things are not so bleak as they might seem to be on the power picture," Jim Bobo, general manager of ElectriCities, told members of the Greenville Utilities Commission and the Greenville City Council Tuesday night.

The joint meeting, at which Mayor Ed Carter and council members Mildred Council and Rufus Huggins represented the city, was basically an update by Bobo to provide information that may be helpful to the commission and council as budget preparation time nears.

"Greenville Utilities is undoubtedly in better shape than any other of the cities belonging to the agency," Bobo said. (The agency Bobo referred to is the North Carolina Eastern Municipal Power Agency, a 31-city unit of which Greenville is a member). "Because of the foresight of the commission here in load management and other cost-saving actions, you are better prepared to face what might be some rough spots down the road. Some cities have been making their living off electric operations, which fortunately for you is not the case."

Referring to some suggestions for possible changes of the contracts signed in 1982, Bobo said that whatever decisions might be made in the future, "the attorney general has ruled that these contracts are legal and binding. The bottom line is that you have to pay for what you've done."

Jurors Still Out

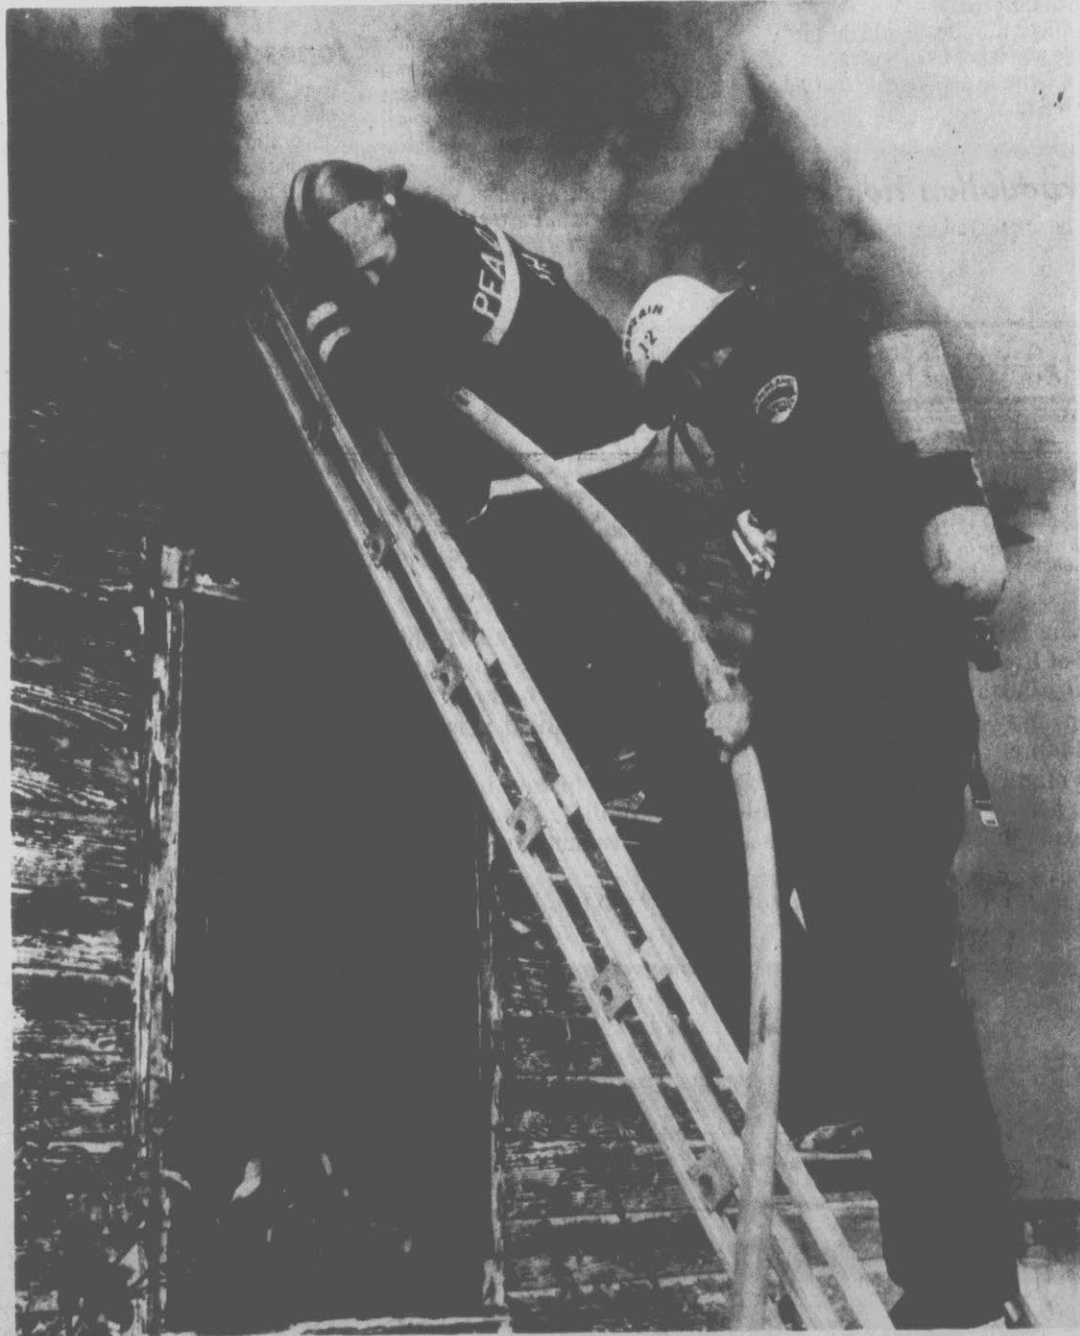

The jury in the first degree murder trial of Eurston Ivon Sneed was in its second day of deliberations today.

The jury of nine women and three men began deliberating in the Pitt County Courthouse at 10:35 a.m. Tuesday and had not reached a verdict when Judge Herbert O. Phillips III ordered a recess shortly after 5 p.m.

Sneed is charged with first degree murder and attempted armed robbery in connection with the 1983 New Year's Eve killing of Willie Hubert Tripp Sr. at Tripp's Bypass Service Center on Memorial Drive.

Phillips instructed jurors on the elements of the law Tuesday, and said the jury could find Sneed guilty of first degree murder, guilty of second degree murder or not guilty.

If the jury finds Sneed guilty of first degree murder, jurors then will participate in the sentencing hearing to determine whether Sneed receives the death penalty or life in prison.

HOUSE FIRE — Pitt County firemen catch their breath as they battle a blaze that destroyed a Route 4, Greenville, house this morning. Firemen at the scene said the house was occupied by Katie Strickland, who escaped the blaze. The cause of the fire was not immediately known. Departments from Belvoir, Falkland and Staton House responded to the call. (Reflector Photo by Thomas Forrest)

Bush Is In, Dukakis Nearer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — George Bush challenged Michael Dukakis to "fire away" at him on the Iran-Contra affair today and Dukakis did just that after impressive Pennsylvania victories clinched the GOP presidential nomination for Bush and gave Democrat Dukakis another big boost.

Jesse Jackson, a distant second to Dukakis in Tuesday's Pennsylvania primary, said today, "I keep struggling against the odds and I've always struggled against the odds and succeeded. ... This campaign will remain alive and will go right down to the wire."

In television interviews, the vice president and the Massachusetts governor set a combative tone for the summer campaign.

Downtown Residential Uses Proposed

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

Relaxing development standards to promote residential construction in the downtown area was one of the zoning proposals discussed by members of Greenville's Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday at a special call meeting at City Hall.

Officials of the Greenville Planning Department, along with a representative of a planning consultant, presented to the commission proposed additions to the Zoning Ordinance which might promote an economic upswing in the downtown district.

"We're going to have to amend our regulations such that we will be encouraging, or at least not prohibiting development in our downtown area," said City Planner Jack Simoneau.

Simoneau said one of the suggestions put forth by the planning department to enhance downtown development is combining several downtown zoning classifications into one primary category, which he said would promote consistency by creating only one set of permitted uses as well as a uniform development standard.

Another suggestion is to change downtown residential development standards by increasing the maximum number of units permitted per acre from 18 as currently exists, to 29 and by offering development "bonuses" regarding density requirements.

Those "bonuses" would be offered to builders who construct desirable "amenities" in the downtown area. Such amenities include cultural-entertainment facilities, ground-level retail areas, and day care facilities. In return, the city would agree to reduce minimum lot size requirements by varying amounts up to 750 square feet.

"The thought here is we're trying to encourage residential use of the downtown area. Part of the city's

Transitional Housing Unit Proposed

A request to operate a transitional housing program for the homeless in the city will be among the items brought before the Greenville Board of Adjustment for consideration Thursday at its regular monthly meeting at 7 p.m. in Council Chambers of City Hall.

The petitioner, Greenville Community Life Center Inc., wants to amend a special use permit originally granted Dec. 19. The amendment would allow the center to operate the program in the Old Agnes Fullolove School on the corner of Manhattan Avenue and Chestnut Street. The property is zoned O&I (office and institutional).

In other matters, the board will consider a request by Carolina Mini-Storage of Greenville Inc. to obtain a special use permit to allow a resident manager's quarters in the mini-warehouse project being constructed at 3275 Landmark St. The property is zoned CH (highway commercial).

The board will also consider a request by Fred Webb to obtain a special use permit to continue operating a temporary grain storage facility for nine months on a lot zoned RA-20 (residential-agricultural), and located east of River Park North, 240 feet south of Mumford Road on Azalea Street.

A rehearing is scheduled on a request by Bobby Dixon denied by the board on March 24. Requested is a special use permit to construct two multifamily projects under land-use intensity development standards.

The properties involved are located on Shenandoah Circle between Tobacco Road and Rollingwood Cluster Homes and are zoned R-6 (high-density residential).

Also Thursday, the board will consider whether to issue a variance to Charles L. McLawhorn to use a detached garage as a dwelling unit at 310 E. 13th St. The property is zoned CDF (commercial downtown fringe.)

Public hearings will be conducted on all matters before the board.

Bus Wreck

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Seven Cumberland County high school students were injured Tuesday morning when a car collided with their school bus.

Authorities said the bus, which was carrying eight students to Cedar Creek High School, had stopped to pick up a student when it was hit by a car driven by 17-year-old Tony Jones of Fayetteville. The car came to rest four feet under the rear of the bus.

Budget Ready

The preliminary budget proposal for the city covering the period from July 1 through June 30, 1989, is scheduled to be delivered to members of the Greenville City Council on Friday, according to City Manager Greg Knowles.

The council will discuss details of the next fiscal budget at meetings on May 5, May 9, May 18 and May 24 in the third floor conference room of City Hall. All meetings are scheduled to begin at 5:30 p.m.

A public hearing on the budget proposal is scheduled for June 6 while the proposed date for budget adoption is June 20.

"This budget proposal was prepared keeping in mind the priorities established by the council in December and January in the retreats and council workshop sessions. Many of those priorities can be visibly seen in the reflection of the requests," Knowles said.

He indicated the most obvious response to the council's priorities will be the budget proposals relating to the city's annexation of the Brook Valley area.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

No Compromise

Leave Medical Zoning Intact

Any review of Greenville's medical district plan should be aimed at preventing commercial endeavors in the MD-1 and MD-2 zones, not encouraging them to locate there.

If the Planning and Zoning Commission wants to eliminate the practice of special use permits in the zones, that's applaudable and consistent with the intent of the medical district plan. But if it wants to permit commercial establishments in these critical medical areas, even with strict regulations, that represents an adulteration of the plan's purpose.

There are striking differences between office/professional and commercial property uses. The amount and type of traffic generated by the two uses is one distinct difference, and is the primary objection to having commercial endeavors in the MD-1 and MD-2 zones.

Traffic is already a problem in the medical district, as an early-morning or late-afternoon drive down Stantonsburg Road will prove. Commercialization in the zones around the hospital and medical school will further this congestion. More cars come and go from commercial establishments, as well as disruptive large delivery trucks. Even strict aesthetic restrictions won't sidestep this problem.

This congestion is the reason the medical district plan excluded commercial endeavors from crucial MD-1 and MD-2 zones. These two zones need quiet, and disruption should be minimized. Commercial interests are allowed in other medical zones, still convenient to the hospital, but distant enough not to be intrusive.

Considering this fact, P&Z should hold fast to the current MD-1 and MD-2 zoning. This area has a strong potential to be developed with distinguished and prosperous medical-related endeavors. That may take time, but the medical park was established with the future in mind.

Public officials must have a perspective that stretches into the next century, not merely the next year. Anticipated growth will come, if leaders have the vision to allow it to happen.

Adhering to sound, well thought-out regulations that prohibit commercial interference and stringently protect the area earmarked for crucial medical development will encourage the type of medical district that will be a social and economic asset.

Any perspective other than this long-term view is incorrect. P&Z must handle the latest request to adjust medical district zoning in a manner in keeping with that responsibility. The community fought hard for the Eastern Carolina Medical Park. The project should be given an opportunity to succeed.

What Did I Say?

Advice To Well-Meaning Whites From A Well-Meaning Black

Several months ago, after Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder had lost his job at CBS Sports for publicly examining the origins of the thick thighs on black athletes, I called an editor at a local newspaper to pitch a column I had written delineating the many qualifications of racism. Howard Cosell had started the ball rolling by referring to a black football player as a monkey, Al Campanis had followed Cosell by openly doubting the ability of black Americans to float, let alone run a baseball team, and now Snyder had seen fit to say that a giant buck and big-boned woman perched somewhere among the branches of American blacks' family tree were responsible for the ease with which black running backs trample white linebackers each Sunday in the fall.

I was crestfallen when the editor declined to use my column, but I found some encouragement in the suggestion that I keep it nearby, just in case. "Because Snyder won't be the last to make the same mistake, I'm sure," the editor predicted.

And right on cue, enter A.B. "Happy" Chandler, former U.S. senator, governor of Kentucky and commissioner of baseball.

Chandler is the octogenarian who several weeks ago referred to Zimbabwe as "all nigger now" during a meeting of the University of Kentucky's investments committee, and who has since suffered some minor abuse as a result. Amazingly, like Cosell, Campanis, and Snyder before him, Chandler can't understand what all the fuss is about. After all, he explains, back in Henderson County, Kentucky, where Chandler grew up, "We called them niggers and they didn't mind. We never had any trouble."

He neglects to mention, of course, that had there been any trouble, a short coil of rope and a strong tree would have no doubt cleared it right up, as they so often did at the time.

Admittedly, Chandler is just an old man living in the pitch-black closet of the past, but his confusion with the sensitivity of today's black Americans to certain terminology and trains of thought is shared by many who do not have the same excuse. People half Chandler's age and light years more sophisticated are making similar verbal blunders daily, succeeding in alienating black viewers, clients, co-workers, et al., by the score, and presumably all but a handful do so because they don't know any better. These people can be helped.

I offer the following advice, then, so that these unenlightened individuals might once and for all have a full and complete understanding of what social misplays black Americans find most offensive and intolerable:

- First, the "n" word is out, in any context, at any time. Don't say it, write it, or sing it in any key, including B-flat. Don't use it as a "sounds like" clue in charades or a six-letter word in Scrabble, and if the opportunity ever presents itself, don't sign it for the deaf.

- Unless the subject is Alex Haley's "Roots," pass on any long-winded and colorful dissertations on slavery and its practices.

- Refrain from making any comparisons between black people and anything that may now or in the future reside in San Diego Zoo.

- Avoid asking any question that begins, "Is it true what they say about you..."

- If you feel a need to talk about breeding, tell it to thoroughbreds at Hollywood Park.

- When describing successful black people, use the terms "hard work," "diligent," and "self-sacrificing" whenever possible. In other words, pretend you're talking about Larry Bird.

- Attribute nothing merely to "soul," and keep "rhythm" out of the conversation altogether.

- If you must greet someone upon their introduction with the comment, "I didn't know you were black," fake ecstatic surprise as best you can.

- Do not attempt to impress anyone with liberal use of the expression "right on."

As rules of conduct go, these are rather simple, yet in one form or another, they have given white Americans fits for generations. The underlying theme — that blacks have grown weary of regularly hearing about slavery as well as the narrow, twisted limitations some have always attached to us — is nothing new. I provide this tongue-in-cheek variation in the hope that it will succeed in making the point where other, less frivolous versions have failed.

Otherwise, it's a good bet that Happy Chandler will soon enough be passing the torch of racial insensitivity on to a new master of the multi-media faux pas. One who will almost certainly, like his loose-lipped brothers before him, emerge from the din of protest wondering what on earth he said or did to tick off so many black people.

Opinion

Public Forum

To the editor:

An editorial in The Daily Reflector by Washington Post staffer Michael Barone that appeared on Sunday, April 17, produced an ambivalent response in me. It was insightful and right on target. But its ethnocentric perspective was disturbing to me. Barone's evaluation of candidate appeal in these days of TV — "a medium for cool performances," as he calls it, is accurate. The American public, for the most part, doesn't trust the impassioned voices which in the days of the "hot" medium, radio, were eagerly welcomed and applauded. Today's public, Barone suggests, prefers the even-keeled, smooth-tempered candidates with glass faces. I think he is right.

However, I was alarmed by one seemingly innocuous remark. Barone says, "We are living in times of mostly peace and mostly prosperity." What?! I recoil in terror at such a blatantly stupid statement. Even granting that Barone was referring to the times as they are experienced at home in our carpeted, air-conditioned duplexes, how is it possible to be so myopic, so tunnel-visioned, as to fail to see the violence and brutality that engulfs the world today, particularly in Third World countries?

What Barone's comment unwittingly reveals to us all is our contemptuous narrow-mindedness and complacency. We Americans are living in relative prosperity (though the homeless are growing in number and more people are falling into poverty daily). We are living in "times of mostly peace." Sure. But the threats of nuclear exchange, of biological warfare or of ecological destruction loom over our consciences. We cannot let the kind of blindness and ignorance of the facts that Barone's statement depicts continue. We cannot remain complacent in our material wealth.

To the editor:

Regarding your editorial of April 22 — so you think Greenville native John Brooks, North Carolina Commissioner of Labor, merits return to the Council of State. Not so. In my opinion, he should be sent packing. I worked for the North Carolina Department of Labor 14 years, seven under the leadership (?) of Mr. Brooks, before retiring last year in disgust. During 45 years of working for others, I've never seen such a mis-managed bureaucracy and waste of tax dollars. Mr. Brooks has virtually destroyed the morale and efficiency of many conscientious and capable career employees. The turnover of employees probably sets a new record.

If you are interested enough to get the facts for yourself, then conduct a confidential opinion survey of the department's career employees. After suggesting such a survey to highlight employee feelings, I was told by one of his senior deputies that Mr. Brooks would not permit one because it was not his idea originally. He is totally negative to any comment or suggestion that is critical of his administration. Although Mr. Brooks is an intelligent and industrious man and an impressive speaker, he is totally inept as a leader of people. North Carolinians deserve better.

Days Of High Drama At The Kremlin

Once again, rumors about a conflict between Mikhail S. Gorbachev and Yegor K. Ligachev are sweeping through Moscow.

The occasion this time was prompted by a large article in a normally liberal Soviet newspaper, Sovetskaya Rossiya, which sharply criticized excesses in efforts to repudiate the past. Three weeks later, the Sovetskaya Rossiya article, supposedly a Ligachev manifesto, was criticized by Pravda and Gorbachev supposedly achieved a victory — at least temporarily — over the much-more conservative No. 2 man in the Kremlin.

To hear Soviet intellectuals tell it, the air is filled with tension and the outcome is hanging in the balance. Gorbachev is leading a heroic struggle against overwhelming conservative opposition; only the intellectuals are supporting him.

It is all very high drama. But this is the problem: Much of it is drama, not reality.

No doubt, Yegor Ligachev is more conservative than Gorbachev. He is 68, and no one expects him to hold on as second secretary until the next Communist Party congress in 1991. The best bet has always been that he would become chairman of the party's control committee. Probably something like this is now under way.

But if so, it is not because Ligachev has almost defeated Gorbachev. Ligachev's power has been grossly exaggerated. As new men were brought into the Politburo in 1987, Ligachev's independent power steadily shrunk. The election in February of Georgy P. Razumovsky, a very close Gorbachev associate, to the Politburo meant that Ligachev had lost any control over personnel selection.

What is going on with the rumors? First, the liberal intellectuals are extremely anxious because of past changes in Soviet policy. They are looking for any sign of reversal of policy and then reacting to it.

Indeed, the intellectuals are handling many issues — especially historical ones about the Stalin era — in such a one-sided manner as to produce the criticism they fear.

Not long ago a leading Soviet intellectual was asked privately whether he didn't think that the Stalin issue was being overplayed (the purges, after all, did take place 50 years ago) and whether Nikita Khrushchev was not being whitewashed (after all, Khrushchev did forbid the publication of such works as "Doctor Zhivago").

The intellectual's answer was direct, and representative of those who desire reform: "I don't care about history. These men are all symbols. Stalin is a symbol of repression, Lenin is a symbol of what the revolution could have been, and Khrushchev is a symbol of the loosening of repression." And although he didn't say it directly, Gorbachev is seen by the reformers as a symbol of hope, Ligachev as a symbol of conservatism.

Gorbachev also is quite capable of using a "power struggle" with Ligachev as a way of keeping the Soviet people distracted as the Red Army begins its retreat from Afghanistan. We know how a skilled president such as Ronald Reagan can control the domestic agenda by putting his own spin on news stories. But we somehow never think of Gorbachev in the same way. We have seen his public-relations skill abroad, however, and should not think it lacking at home.

The problem for us is not to be misled. Gorbachev is not the embodiment of all the intellectuals' hopes. He wants a mild dictatorship like Franco's Spain. But he faces a society that has become largely educated and middle class. It wants more.

If we accept the intellectuals' version that every sign of authoritarianism is a defeat for Gorbachev, we will underestimate his strength as an adversary. It has been a costly foreign-policy mistake in the past, and will continue to be so.

Strength For Today

The greatest scandal of Christianity is its division. To skeptics, the competing claims among the many religions of the world prove the silliness of most religious doctrine. Could not the opposite, however, be argued? Might it be the case that the messy and often fiery differences among the faiths of humanity constitute instead proof that God exists? Is it possible that human spirit's hopes, dreams, and connections with the divine transcend every culture and differences? Jesus prayed that there may be one flock and one shepherd. How do we work towards that goal of unity, while preserving what is unique and precious? How can I strive to understand others unless I am firm in my own beliefs?

March To Self-Determination Permanent

At no point in modern Middle Eastern history has a mass uprising been so vast and protracted in scale, so radical in its results, so profoundly meaningful as the current one in the Israeli-occupied territories.

For one thing, this uprising has totally discredited the notion that the Palestinian issue — the Palestinian people themselves — can be finessed or ignored, or that, given the proper mixture of benign neglect and intimidation, the Palestinians will simply go away as a "problem." For another, the Palestinians as a whole have now gone into direct mass confrontation with the Israeli military in the occupied territories, and politically they have successfully defied and stalemated what is in effect one of the most redoubtable armies in the world. More important, in showing no fear but acting with great resourcefulness, the Palestinians have reduced the Israeli presence and its schemes on the West Bank and Gaza to reactive measures — cruel, stupid, politically bankrupt.

The entire Palestinian nation is now unified; the distinctions between classes, communities and interests have been scrubbed; all are together. Internationally, there is little sympathy for Israel now as, unconditionally armed and supported politically by the United States, it lurches from refusal and negation to killing and bombing, pretending that the issue is simply one of law and order. Whose law and order?

The uprising is an eruption of history compressed into the daily energies of a long-suffering, often forgotten and routinely abused people. Slowly the great disparity diminishes between Western praise and admiration for Israel as a democracy and pioneering state, on the one hand, and, on the other, the ignorant opprobrium Palestinians have had heaped on them since their world was shattered in 1948. Yet if there can be no return to the past for us, the same is at least as true for Israel and the United States. Here a new set of problems has emerged.

It is surprisingly difficult to shift from having hardly any status to a position of relative and acknowledged centrality, but this is what has happened to the Palestinian people. By sheer force of will, this has been our achievement, symbolized by the uprising. No one, I think, doubts that our march to self-determination is now irreversible. But the course is still for us to map; our leaders and representatives remain ours to choose. Even the United States tacitly accepts these realities.

We still require more clarity in our discourse and engageable positions to be articulated. Yasser Arafat's recent interviews with Anthony Lewis and Youssef Ibrahim of The New York Times are good cases in point, but here we also need some abatement in the unremitting propaganda war against us in the United States, where Israel commands so much power. It is not enough for well-intentioned people to talk about the need for peace. Peace has to be made with us, not with a "demographic problem" — and the occupation must end. Respond to what Palestinians, as the aggrieved party, propose; argue with it, modify it, suggest alternatives. But do not throw it out, any more than you would advocate throwing Palestinians off their land.

Similarly, the terms of discussion (and the existence of discussion itself, not blind polemic) should be re-examined. Consider first how unyielding those terms are. The main arena of Palestinian struggle is in Palestine-Israel, but the United States is only slightly less important as a site. With their unparalleled resources, Israel's U.S. supporters have historically either ignored the Palestinians or blanketed us with a dense mass of unanswerable objections. The U.S. media, for all their fidelity to the uprising's more sensational scenes, still repeat clichés about recognition and terrorism, even as our people are simultaneously unrecognized as having sovereign rights and are terrorized by Israel.

Public discourse during the election campaign has finally registered some of the new realities, although only one candidate remains unfailingly responsible to the "sovereign Palestinian people." Yet even our friends seem unaware of our writers and scholars, our reporting and research. Instead they rely almost exclusively on evidence from Israel, as if the "agony of the occupation" were somehow orse for the kids with guns than for those with stones, as if the pre-eminent issue were Israeli psychology and not the right of people to be free of endless harassment, discrimination and insecurity in their own homes.

So the challenge is to change the perspective, the language, the frameworks, even as the uprising continues. Palestinians are now recognized as principal parties to the conflict (the Jordanian presence seems increasingly faded and pointless), and we will continue to act politically as central parties. Yet nothing is unilateral. We are now in a position to say yes to direct negotiations, yes to recognition of Israel, to peace, to secure borders, so long as these yeses are entirely mutual, with Israel doing the same for us.

Palestinians are a nation in exile, and certainly every one of us feels the right of return and citizenship to be inalienable, albeit in the context of reciprocal arrangements with Israel. But we cannot do this by ourselves. What Zionism was historically incapable of doing now lies before it as a challenge. Let those who sincerely believe in self-determination for Palestinians and Israelis come forward, each demanding from his own community not just a list of grievances but a forward step toward the other community.

Palestinians are uniquely placed now to lead the debate about peace — first because they are the people with the most to gain, second because they are the people doing something new and powerful. But they must be heard, not rhetorically ostracized, vilified or drowned out. What is at issue now for Israelis and Palestinians is coexistence, not extermination.

Today's challenge is therefore nothing less than a newly resurgent, yet vulnerable, Palestinian nationalism at a particularly important moment in its long and fateful encounter with Zionism. In the United States we — Zionists and Palestinians — can at least try to represent and develop that encounter more humanely and reasonably than has been done elsewhere. And perhaps with better, more livable results.

Congressional Unit Looking At Robeson Troubles

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A congressional subcommittee has begun "a quiet investigation" of corruption, drug trafficking and civil rights violations in Robeson County, Rep. Charlie Rose says.

Rose, whose 7th District includes Robeson County, told The Fayetteville Times he contacted Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., chairman of the House Judiciary Subcommittee on Criminal Justice, after talking with constituents who requested outside help.

"They have told me that at this point they don't think that a public hearing would be helpful, but they are gathering information about prob-blems that Robeson County citizens have had," Rose said Tuesday.

"The people who have things that they want investigated are not willing to talk in public, and they are going to talk to people like Rep. Conyers' staff if they come to trust them, and I'm not going to be involved in that," Rose said.

A subcommittee staff member, who spoke to the newspaper on the condition that he not be named, said he had been told the death of Indian activist Julian Pierce may have been politically motivated.

"I'm trying to find out what happened to Julian Pierce," the staff member said. "We have been talking to a wide range of people about what is being done by local, state and federal law enforcement authorities about what is going on down there to try to determine what our subcommittee can or should do. I've talked to people on the governor's staff, the U.S. attorney's office, people in the state attorney general's office, and I'm not through talking to people yet."

The March 26 shotgun slaying of Pierce, a candidate for Superior Court judge, touched off a storm of controversy in the county, with minorities calling for outside investigations.

Investigators initially called the slaying an "assassination," but later said Pierce's death was apparently the result of a domestic dispute unrelated to his political campaign.

Sandy Jordan Chavis, 24, of Pembroke, has been charged with first-degree murder in the slaying. Warrants also were issued for John Anderson Goins, 23, of Pembroke, but he was found dead in a closet of his father's home March 29. Authorities have said he apparently committed suicide. Both Chavis and Goins are Lumbee Indians.

The subcommittee source said the investigation also covers possible civil rights violations in the deaths of Joyce Sinclair, a Robeson County black woman who was found stabbed to death in October 1985; and Jimmy Earl Cummings, a Robeson County Indian who was shot to death in November 1986 by Deputy Sheriff Kevin Stone, the son of Sheriff Hubert Stone. A coroner's jury later ruled Cummings' death as either self defense or an accidental shooting.

The staff member said he has not drawn a conclusion on most of the allegations and is trying to decide how to handle the information he is gathering.

He said if the allegations are substantiated, the subcommittee will determine whether to hold public hearings or turn the information over to the U.S. Justice Department for possible indictments.

"It's clear to me that Robeson County has a drug trafficking problem and that the law enforcement authorities have attempted to deal with that but by no means have ended drug trafficking in Robeson County," he said. "But that's an obvious problem. The allegations about public corruption relative to drug trafficking and other matters, that's a matter of inquiry to me."

"What people are alleging in Robeson County is not unbelievable," he said.

But trying to prove the allegations is not as easy as people in the community may think, he said.

"It's a real delicate situation that requires some thoughtful handling," he said. "People's lives are at stake. I understand that, and I don't want to put people's lives at risk and not accomplish what we want to accomplish."

Hardison-Rand Campaigns Feuding Over Political Ads

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — A reprinted issue of a free Durham newspaper is back on the racks in Raleigh with a revised front page containing the message: "STEAL THIS ISSUE ... before somebody else does."

A full-time campaign volunteer for Sen. Harold Hardison has admitted taking 5,000 issues of The Independent from racks and dumping them in trash containers last week. The edition contained a review of Hardison's tenure in the state Senate and an endorsement for one of his opponents in the Democratic primary for lieutenant governor, Sen. Tony Rand. The Hardison campaign has refused to pay for reprinting the 5,000 copies, saying the volunteer acted on his own. But the newspaper's president says he will sue to recover losses stemming from the incident.

Hardison and Rand have become embroiled in a bitter exchange over television ads that depict Rand as a "slick lawyer" who represents accused drunken drivers and drug pushers.

Complaining that the campaign has become a "schoolboy fight," Parks Helms Tuesday urged both his Democratic opponents to quit attacking each other or risk a Republican victory this fall.

But Helms, a former state representative, continued his own criticism of Hardison and Rand, charging that both are so beholden to "special interests" they have lost sight of issues such as education and the environment.

"I abhor their win-at-any-cost strategy and that mentality and I will not run that type of campaign," Helms said at a news conference.

Rand's camp, however, kept the issue alive by unveiling a new commercial calling for "honest politics." The ad quotes from a newspaper editorial critical of Hardison's tactics.

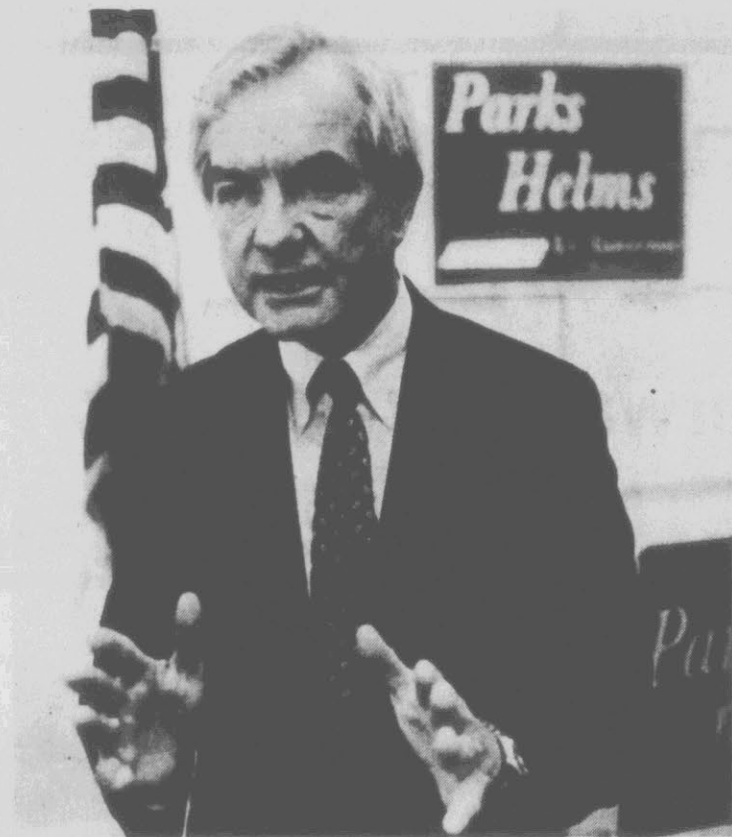

Helms also began running a new commercial that says his opponents have only politics to offer "but I have plans for North Carolina."

All three candidates were advertising heavily as the race entered its final week before the May 3 primary. Hardison campaigned personally in northeastern counties while Rand stumped in Salisbury.

Financial documents submitted to the state Campaign Reporting Office showed all three have borrowed money for the home stretch. Hardison loaned his campaign $350,000; Rand loaned his $100,000; and Helms gave his campaign $50,000.

Helms told reporters he had taken out another $50,000 in loans this week to bankroll his final series of commercials but said that money would be repaid before the election.

His report showed he had raised $73,266 in contributions this year and spent $158,848.54 — far less than Rand and Hardison. Rand has gotten $327,991 in contributions and spent $409,733 this year while Hardison has gotten $289,196.37 in donations and spent $604,045.

But Helms insisted he was running slightly ahead of both his major competitors and chided suggestions that his failure to raise as much money meant he was behind.

"My opponents ... have become so mired in a schoolboy fight that it has become almost impossible to discuss the issues in a substantive manner," Helms said.

When Democrats become embroiled in divisive primary campaigns, the Republicans benefit, he warned.

"Yet this is the kind of campaign that occurs when candidates become so beholden to special interests that they lose sight of the real issues of the race."

Helms acknowledged he had interviewed with some of the same groups that have endorsed Rand, such as the state AFL-CIO and the North Carolina Association of Educators. But Helms said he told the groups he would not change any of his views to secure their backing.

Both Hardison and Rand are responsible for giving the impression that the primary has taken on a negative tone, Helms said.

Rand was justified in taking offense at the Hardison ad, said Helms, also an attorney. But he said Rand should have brushed it aside and discussed positive themes instead of responding with angry words.

Rand picked up the endorsement of black leadership caucuses in the 3rd, 7th and 8th congressional districts Tuesday.

In Salisbury, he said he would introduce a bill during this summer's legislative session to close a loophole in the assault law. The effect would be to broaden the criteria for classifying an assault as a felony, Rand said.

The change was sought by an assistant district attorney in Rowan County, who said several assault charges in the local Superior Court had been reduced to misdemeanors because use of a deadly weapon could not be proven.

The Greensboro Citizens Political Action Committee says it will mail letters this week urging blacks to vote for Hardison.

The committee voted to endorse Hardison at a closed meeting last week after Rep. Herman Gist of Greensboro spoke in his favor.

The Greensboro committee's endorsement is the most substantial Hardison has received from a black political group.

At the same time, a western North Carolina environmental group is opposing Hardison's bid.

UNC-CH, Or Should It Be UNC?

By TAFT WIREBACK
Greensboro News & Record
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Some supporters of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill say it's time to give UNC its old name back and give a new name to the University of North Carolina System.

Since 1972, "University of North Carolina" has identified the 16-campus system scattered across the state.

But from 1789 until 1963, the University of North Carolina was the university at Chapel Hill.

"We are the University of North Carolina, and we have been for 200 years," said Robert C. Eubanks Jr., chairman of UNC-Chapel Hill's Board of Trustees.

The General Assembly first tacked "at Chapel Hill" onto the end of UNC

This is the last article in a series exploring the winds of change in Chapel Hill amid criticism that the nation's oldest state-operated university is only subsisting on its past glory.

in 1963 as a forerunner of the 1971 reorganization. Officials at the university say that when the name change first occurred, few protested. But Eubanks and others at UNC-Chapel Hill say it's become a prescription for confusion.

"It misleads our own citizens, and it will continue to do so until it's fixed," Chancellor Christopher C. Fordham III says. "We should eliminate the ambiguity."

Thomas Lambeth of Winston-Salem, former chairman of UNC-Chapel Hill's Board of Trustees, noted that "at Chapel Hill" isn't displayed on the outside of the Dean E. Smith Center, where UNC-Chapel Hill's basketball team plays.

And, in keeping with that, the words "Chapel Hill" aren't found on the university's basketball uniforms.

How would a name change be accomplished?

Eubanks says the UNC Board of Governors, which supervises the 16-campus system, could initiate it. But Philip G. Carson, Board of Governors' chairman, isn't enthusiastic.

"I think there are a lot more important questions facing the university," Carson says.

The name-change idea is reminiscent of the bitter 1960s battle over N.C. State University's name. Until its alumni and supporters won the existing title, the Raleigh school was variously called N.C. College of Agriculture and Engineering of the University of North Carolina, and N.C. State University of the University of North Carolina at Raleigh.

Recalling the furor over N.C. State's name, William C. Friday, former president of the UNC system, is leery of the Chapel Hill initiative.

"I don't think there's much appetite for another round of that," Friday says. "I would think that those immediately involved would not want to raise a controversial issue at this time. However, it really is none of my responsibility."

If the name were changed, Eubanks says UNC-G and the other universities in the system could keep their names. In addition to UNC-G, the system includes three other schools that have "University of North Carolina at" in their names — UNC-Asheville, UNC-Charlotte and UNC-Wilmington.

What would happen to what's now called the University of North Carolina if the Chapel Hill campus re-adopts that name?

Fordham suggests it might be called the Consolidated University of North Carolina System or some other name that more accurately depicts its supervisory role.

Two Hurt

FOUR OAKS, N.C. (A) — Two elementary school students were hurt when a transformer fell on a bus near Four Oaks in Johnston County on Tuesday, authorities said.

The accident occurred on a rural road about five miles west of Four Oaks after a pickup truck struck a utility pole, and the pole and a transformer fell on the bus, which had stopped to let off two children.

The driver of the truck, 16-year-old Theodore Randy Johnson of Clayton, was charged with careless and reckless driving, authorities said.

Mistaken Identity

FOUNTAIN TOWN, N.C. (AP) — The biggest talk these days in Fountain town, an unincorporated Duplin County community of about 200 farmers, concerns an identity crisis.

For as long as people can remember, they have called the place Fountain town, but the N.C. Department of Transportation put up a sign at the crossroads that reads "Fountain." That is also how it is listed on the official state road map.

But that is likely to change. Reba Fountain, one of the community's authorities on the branches of all the family trees, led a small delegation to the Duplin County Commissioners last week, and they agreed to pass on the request to the DOT to change the name to Fountain town.

"Some of them say there was a sign there one time that said 'Fountain town,' but I don't remember it," Mrs. Fountain said.

There is an incorporated town called Fountain in Pitt County.

"You would not believe the number of truck drivers that come by here looking for the bank, the police department or the town hall," said Barry Fountain, who runs the general store with his father, Worlie. "They're usually aggravated that they're about 90 miles off course."

Somehow, he's even gotten mail intended for the town of Fountain, even though Fountain town has no post office and has a Chinquapin mailing address.

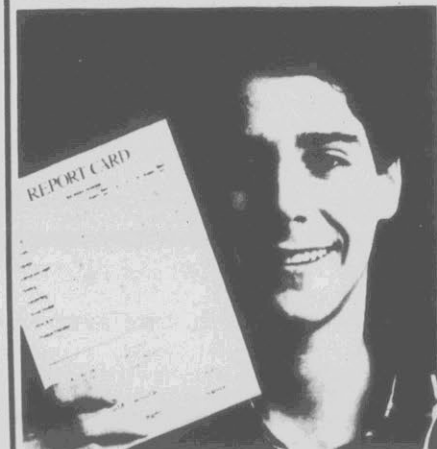

The history of the place dates back to 1773, when Joab Fountain Sr. obtained several hundred acres under a land grant from the colonial government. The Fountains are all descendants of either Joab Fountain Sr. or his nephew, John R. Fountain, who lived nearby in Onslow County.

Growth Board Eyes Bank Changes

By SUSAN PRICE WILSON
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Large regional banks have fared well in the five years since interstate banking began, but little is known about the impact of interstate banking in rural areas, says a researcher for the Southern Growth Policies Board.

"There was concern that rural areas might suffer (as a result of deregulation), but nobody has clear evidence as to what has been going on," said Susan Levy, a staff associate for research and development at the board.

"There's evidence in research, and it's obvious, that regional (banks) are doing very well in the wake of deregulation. But in terms of actual economic development, not much is known. We need to look more closely, especially in rural areas," she said.

Ms. Levy said the General Assembly's interstate banking study commission may find answers for some of those questions.

"(The commission) is just now beginning to hold hearings and look at the effects of deregulation in North Carolina," she said.

The Southern Growth Policies Board will monitor that study and others like it and may later begin its own assessment of where underserved markets now exist, she said.

"The clear evidence is that the banking industry in the South has done well," Ms. Levy said.

But there are concerns, such as how customers have been affected.

Ms. Levy said there's anecdotal evidence that it's more difficult to get smaller loans because banks get a bigger return on larger loans.

But she said there were questions about whether small business loans are as available in the past.

"Some have said that small banks tend to be very conservative and didn't make many loans locally anyway, so rural areas weren't hurt but may not have been helped as much in that area," Ms. Levy said. "But I don't think there's been a lot of real concrete work that's been done."

The board reviewed the first five years of interstate banking during a conference in December. Participants recommended that commercial banks work with state and local governments to create new and innovative partnerships to serve the economic development credit needs of high risk markets, including small and minority businesses, slow-growing rural areas and distressed urban areas.

Virginia Gov. Gerald Baliles, chairman of the board, told the group that "capital is the life's blood of the South's fast-growing urban-suburban centers and a source of renewal for depressed, slow-growing rural economies."

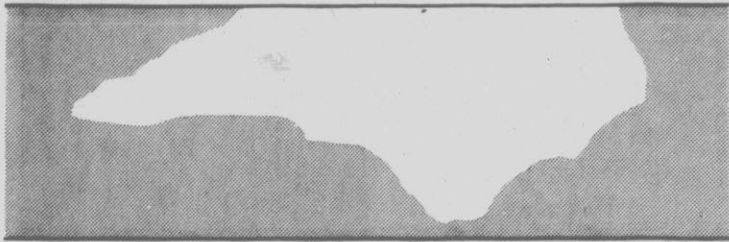

PUBLIC NOTICE

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners will conduct a public hearing on May 16, 1988 at 9:00 a.m. in the Commissioners' Board Room at the Pitt County Office Building, 1717 West Fifth Street, Greenville, NC. Island Phones

BALD HEAD ISLAND, N.C. (AP) — Bald Head Island, which has remained consciously isolated from the rest of the world for years, will finally be linked with the mainland — at least by telephone.

"Bald Head Island is actually one of the few places in the United States that didn't have phone service," said Royce Angel, the district manager for Southern Bell. "We saw it as a challenge."

The island at the mouth of the Cape Fear River is accessible only by boat, and no cars are allowed on the island.

A new 80-foot microwave tower was hidden in the heavy coastal forest that covers much of the island. Crews installed telephone-switching equipment and ran underground lines to all of the houses, and Whitaker began hooking up phones.

"We had some people tell us they didn't want phones at first," he said. "But they're coming around now. We've installed close to 200 phones (there are 280 houses and condos on the island) and I'll bet the rest of them will get them."

Recycling

RALEIGH (AP) — A legislative committee has recommended that $10 million be put into a loan fund for local recycling, incineration and landfill projects.

The legislators acknowledged that the amount was minuscule, compared to the rapidly rising cost of trash disposal.

"We're trying to get something started," said Rep. George W. Brannan, D-Johnston, the committee's co-chairman. "It may be small ... but at least we're telling the counties,

'We're with you,'" Brannan said.

William L. Meyer, the head of the state's Solid Waste Management Section, said Monday that it would cost $500 million to $600 million for every county to build the kind of lined landfill that the new regulations require.

An additional $800 million to $1 billion would be needed to build enough incinerators to serve every region of the state, he said.

Body Found

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — The body of a Lumberton man who had been stabbed repeatedly was found inside his home Tuesday, authorities said.

It was the second such slaying in Robeson County reported this week. Lumberton Police Chief Albert L. Carroll said there appeared to be no connection between the slayings.

A neighbor found the body of Randolph Scott, 48, about 2 p.m. Tuesday after she became worried about him and went to see if he were sick.

Drug Arrests

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Davidson County, Thomasville, High Point and state authorities drew 204 warrants Tuesday charging 41 people with taking part in the illegal drug trade in Davidson and southwest Guilford counties.

Charges ranged from possession of marijuana to sell and delivery of heroin to trafficking cocaine.

Arrests began at dawn, capping a 10-month undercover operation authorities dubbed Code 88. By 5:30 p.m., all but five of 33 people sought in Davidson County had been arrested. One of eight charged by High Point police had been served with warrants.

Brooks Turns Over Reports To Auditor

RALEIGH (AP) — Labor Commissioner John Brooks has released management studies of two divisions in his department after being told by the state Attorney General's Office that the studies were public documents.

In a letter hand-delivered to Brooks on Tuesday, Chief Deputy Attorney General Andy Vanore said the General Assembly had never said that reports by the Office of Administrative Analysis should be private.

"That being the case, if the management study report is considered a public record, it would be available to any member of the public upon request," Vanore wrote.

State Auditor Ed Renfrow said Monday Brooks had refused to release copies of the management analyses and had not made Labor Department employees accessible to his auditors for a routine financial review. Renfrow threatened to seek subpoenas if Brooks did not relent.

Brooks said the disputed documents were confidential and requested a ruling by the attorney general's office. He denied telling any employees not to talk with the auditors.

Bakkers Say IRS Can't Set Salaries

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Jim and Tammy Bakker say salary figures used by the IRS to revoke the tax-exempt status of PTL were exaggerated, and it is not up to the government to set salaries for ministers.

"Grossly inflated figures have been given for our personal income and then used by the PTL trustee to continue to discredit us," Bakker said in a news release sent from his home in Palm Springs, Calif. "I could not believe when I heard the trustee say on a recent PTL telecast that my income alone for 1987 was $2,977,018, when in fact, Tammy and I together took home $200,554 from PTL that year. In the last three years, he said we made over $8,000,000, when, according to our accountant, together we took home an average of $531,000 per year for those three years — 1985, 1986 and 1987."

The IRS revoked PTL's tax-exempt status Friday and said contributions to the financially troubled television ministry are no longer tax deductible.

An IRS report in December concluded that the Bakkers and their aides profited excessively from donations made to the ministry.

"Whether you agree on how much we should or should not have been paid, never before in history has the federal government set the salary of a minister of the gospel," Bakker said. "Just as never to my knowledge has the United States government appointed the head of a church ministry, as it has now done at PTL."

The Bakkers apparently were referring to David Clark, the court-appointed bankruptcy trustee for PTL.

Bakker also disputed the Internal Revenue Service's conclusion that much of PTL's Heritage USA theme park operations were commercial, rather than ministerial.

"I was saddened that the IRS is getting by with saying Heritage USA was not built for religious purposes, when in fact, everything I built was built on historic camp meeting and church retreat center foundations," Bakker said. "The Heritage Grand Partner Center is the 21st century lodging replacing the old cabins and rag tents of the past. Are we to be penalized for bigness? I believe this is so."

The Bakkers also said they wanted to return to save the ministry they founded.

"I made many mistakes building Heritage USA," Bakker said.

Tar Heels Check In

By The Associated Press
Two North Carolina families breathed a sigh of relief after being notified that their sons had survived an explosion aboard the submarine USS Bonefish off the Florida coast.

Frances Rice of Gastonia says she received a call from her son, Christopher, about 12:30 p.m. Monday. Rice called his mother again Monday night.

"I was just so excited to hear his voice, that he was OK," Mrs. Rice said Tuesday. "I just wanted to know if he was OK. He had just gotten to Charleston. He didn't talk very much."

Dr. Lloyd Swift of Franklin said he received word that his son, Lt. 1.g. William Swift, was all right through his son's mother-in-law.

A third North Carolina sailor on board the submarine, Petty Officer 3rd Class Marshall T. Lindgren of Pisgah Forest, is still listed as missing.

There were 92 crew members aboard the ship when the blast occurred. Twenty-two crew members were injured and three remain missing.

Meese Wants Drug Tests During Arrests

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese III says everyone who is arrested should be tested for drugs and then should be subject to follow-up tests before trial. "I would like to see the day where every person arrested is subjected to a urine test" to determine suitability for pre-trial release, Meese told mayors and police chiefs Tuesday at the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

He said once defendants are back on the street, they should be subject to random drug testing to dissuade them from committing crimes while awaiting trial. Meese added he would like to see mandatory drug testing results taken into account in sentencing by judges.

Meese later told a reporter a proposal embracing such an approach is "a part of our user accountability strategy that is being developed at the present time" by the National Drug Policy Board, a Cabinet-level panel which Meese chairs.

If the proposal is adopted, it would take legislation to implement the plan, said Justice Department spokesman Patrick Korten.

Meese also said mandatory drug tests ought to be administered to users in drug treatment programs "to make them accountable."

Meese said such approaches are part of the Reagan administration's philosophy of "recognizing that the user is not a victim as some would suggest but rather that the user is a vital participant in drug trafficking."

Meese claimed that the proposals don't present constitutional problems, but didn't elaborate.

Amnesty Program Draws Long Lines

By The Associated Press

Thousands of aliens are jamming U.S. immigration centers as the amnesty program's deadline loomed a week from today, and officials warned immigrants not to count on an extension of the cutoff date.

Immigration officials likened the filing frenzy by aliens seeking legal status to the mad rush by last-minute tax filers on April 15.

"These applicants are just like anyone else when it comes to procrastinating, just like you and I on tax day," said John Roark, an INS spokesman in Dallas.

Nationwide, officials originally projected up to 4 million undocumented aliens would apply. That estimate fell to 2 million. So far, the INS has received 1.2 million general amnesty applications and 400,000 applications under the more liberal seasonal agricultural worker program.

Compromise Set On Guns

WASHINGTON (AP) — After negotiations that excluded the National Rifle Association and rival gun-control groups, the Reagan administration and police organizations have agreed to a compromise boosting chances for a ban on undetectable plastic guns.

Although differences over plastic gun legislation have triggered a new and ferocious gun-control fight in Congress, sponsors of rival bills said Tuesday's breakthrough could be a unifying force for lawmakers on all sides.

Police organizations and gun-control advocates have insisted that a minimum amount of metal be required in a gun to ensure detection by the magnetometers used in airport and building security systems.

The NRA has insisted that there should be no government-established metal standard, only a general requirement that any gun be detectable by existing equipment.

The compromise takes the law enforcement approach, and sets a minimum metallic standard.

The differences in the rival bills have never been insurmountable, but they became magnified once the plastic gun issue became the vehicle for the latest debate over whether the government should control handguns.

The gun control and police groups have argued that the NRA approach would cause long delays in airports.

Korea's Opposition Wins Control For First Time

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Opposition candidates stunned the governing party in a national election by stripping it of a parliamentary majority for the first time in South Korea's 40-year history.

President Roh Tae-woo said the outcome of Tuesday's balloting "has left many things for us to think deeply about but I would humbly accept the outcome and do my best to fulfill my promise to the people."

The voting for National Assembly was marred by violent protests by demonstrators alleging vote fraud. But the strong opposition showing prompted dissidents and students to call off planned demonstrations.

Roh said his Democratic Justice Party's failure to win a majority in the assembly would make it difficult for him to govern.

He defeated two rival opposition leaders in the presidential election in December, despite receiving just 36 percent of the vote. The two, Kim Dae-jung and Kim Young-sam, both won National Assembly seats.

Kim Dae-jung, whose party emerged as the strongest opposition force in the legislature, said lawmakers should consider releasing all political prisoners and demand a probe into the bloody suppression of the 1980 Kwangju protest.

Final official returns released today indicated that 166 candidates from three opposition parties were assured of seats in the 299-member assembly. Independents won 10 seats, and Roh's party won 123 seats.

The outgoing National Assembly had 276 seats, 160 held by the governing party against 87 by the three main opposition parties.

Officials of the governing party said it was considering ways to absorb or align with "some independent members or moderate opposition members."

"Rough sailing is expected in the National Assembly with the emergence of a strong opposition," said Park Sung-bum of the KBS state television network.

Under the nation's new constitution, the assembly has an expanded role in governing. It is now empowered to investigate state affairs and the president can no longer dissolve it.

After the election results were announced, the composite stock price index on the South Korean market fell a record 24.58 points to 620.1. The previous record drop was 21.69 points on Feb. 26.

Kim Dae-jung's Party for Peace and Democracy won the most seats among opposition parties. He said the results showed people perceive his party as the best qualified to challenge Roh's administration. Kim, 62, was often imprisoned by past regimes for his political activity.

Gulf Convoy Resumes Trip

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A convoy of U.S.-flagged Kuwaiti tankers sailed north in the Persian Gulf today and resumed a journey postponed for a day because bad weather hampered mine-hunting operations, shipping sources said.

Three Kuwaiti tankers and a fourth U.S.-flagged ship were sighted off the United Arab Emirates coast at mid-morning after passing through the Strait of Hormuz during the night. They were escorted by four U.S. Navy warships.

There were no reports of activity by Iran's navy or nearby missile batteries during the convoy's passage through the narrow entry at the gulf's southern end.

A U.S. Central Command spokesman declined to give any information on the convoy, the 26th this year and the 48th since the operations began last July to provide Navy escort to Kuwaiti tankers flying the U.S. flag.

U.S. officials do not confirm the movements of the Kuwaiti tankers until they have passed certain danger points in the gulf.

Shipping executives, who reported the sighting on condition their names not be used, said the convoy included four U.S. warships: the destroyers O'Brien and Merrill, the guided missile destroyer Joseph Strauss and the guided missile cruiser Wainwright.

All four warships took part in the Navy's April 18 strikes against Iranian oil platforms and ships in the gulf, in retaliation for the sowing of mines by Iran, one of which damaged a U.S. missile frigate April 14 and injured 10 American sailors.

The tankers in the convoy included the 46,723-ton Gas Queen, a liquefied gas carrier; the oil products tankers Chesapeake City and Ocean City, each 79,999 tons; and the Golden Monarch, a 92,854-ton tanker.

An unidentified tanker flying the British flag was sailing alongside the single-file convoy.

Ships of other nations often "hitchhike" with the American units through the strait and southern gulf, where Iran's gunboats and armed speedboats regularly attack merchant vessels.

World Court Says U.S. Must Arbitrate PLO Office-Closing

By EDWARD CODY
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

THE HAGUE, Netherlands — The International Court of Justice ruled unanimously Tuesday that the Reagan administration must submit to arbitration over controversial legislation ordering the Palestine Liberation Organization to close its U.N. mission in New York. The advisory opinion, while not binding, put the weight of the world court, as it is also known, behind U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar's insistence that a three-man tribunal should be named to settle swiftly a conflict created by the U.S. legislation signed by President Reagan last December.

This is the procedure outlined in a 1947 U.S.-U.N. agreement governing the U.N. presence in the United States. But the Reagan administration has refused to comply, arguing that there is no real dispute with the United Nations until the U.S. law is carried out and the PLO mission actually is forced to close. The United States has also argued that the legislation overrides U.S. international obligations.

(U.N. press secretary Francois Giuliani said the ruling confirmed that the United Nations' legal analysis was correct, Reuter reported from New York. Nadia Younes, press officer for the General Assembly, said members would decide what further measures, if any, they might take to preserve the PLO presence.)

(State Department spokesman Charles Redman repeated the U.S. contention that action by the world court was "premature.")

To dramatize its contention, the Reagan administration snubbed the proceedings that led to Tuesday's decision. As the president of the court read out the ruling in the ornate Great Hall of Justice of the Peace Palace, a long table draped in green reserved for U.S. representatives sat empty.

The decision to stay away marked the second time in two years that the Reagan administration has refused to cooperate with the world court in a major case concerning the U.S. government.

In the first, the United States declared the court incompetent to deal with a Nicaraguan complaint about the Central Intelligence Agency's mining of Nicaraguan harbors and other attacks. The justices, in a majority decision, ruled on June 27, 1986, that the United States is obliged to make reparations to Nicaragua for violating international law.

The Nicaraguan government returned here last November to ask the court to set the amount of damages. The United States, rejecting the 1986 decision, has refused to pay anything.

The PLO dispute arose from the Antiterrorism Act that Congress made part of last year's State Department authorization bill. The act, sponsored by supporters of Israel, declared the PLO a "terrorist organization and a threat to the interest of the United States."

Iran Says U.S. Pressured Saudis To Cut Diplomatic Ties To Tehran

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Iran said today the United States pressured Saudi Arabia into breaking diplomatic ties with Tehran. Saudi Arabia said Tuesday it decided to break relations with Iran because of a riot by Iranians in Mecca, a raid on the Saudi Embassy in Tehran and Iranian attacks on commercial shipping in the Persian Gulf. In a statement broadcast by state-run television and distributed by the official Saudi Press Agency, the government ordered all Iranian diplomats to leave the kingdom within a week. A memorandum about the decision was handed to the Iranian charge d'affaires in Riyadh, the news agency reported. Tehran Radio, quoting a foreign ministry spokesman, said Saudi Arabia's "cooperation with America's conspiracies in the Persian Gulf and its help for the Zionist regime of Iraq" was a reason for cutting ties with Iran. Earlier this month, the U.S. Navy attacked Iranian oil platforms and vessel in retaliation for the planting of a mine that damaged an American frigate. The radio said the decision also was designed to divert the attention of Moslems from Saudi "crimes" during last year's pilgrimage to Mecca and its decision to limit the number of Iranian pilgrims permitted to attend the pilgrimage this July. The report was monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus. In Vienna, Iran's oil minister also blamed the United States. "This (Saudi) decision, in my personal view, was made under the pressure of the United States," Kazempour Ardebili told The Associated Press. He was in Vienna for a meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. The Saudi statement, translated by The Associated Press, said King Fahd's government had exercised "self-restraint and prudence" and had sought to normalize relations, despite Iranian "terrorism and subversion." "But the ... Iranian side ... persisted in perpetrating hostile practices," it said. "Therefore, the government of Saudi Arabia decided to break its ties with the Islamic Republic of Iran and asked all personnel of the Iranian Embassy in Riyadh and consulate general in Jiddah to leave the kingdom within a week," the statement said. Saudi Arabia and most other Arab countries support Iraq in its war with Iran. Iran is a Moslem nation but its people are Persian, not Arab.

Greenville Native Waits Wedding Vows Said Saturday For New Liver, New Life

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville resident Blanche Forbes has good reason for her enthusiasm for this week's activities of Organ Donor Awareness Week — her daughter, Josie, needs a new liver.

Josie Forbes, 31, and her mother, a Greenville real estate agent, will take up temporary residence in Pittsburgh next week to wait for her transplant surgery. They have no way of knowing how long the wait will be, but they do know that, based on her grave condition, Miss Forbes is near the top of the list for a liver transplant at Presbyterian Hospital, which is affiliated with the University of Pittsburgh.

"This hospital," Mrs. Forbes said, "is considered the foremost liver transplant center in the world. That's why Josie went there when we learned of her condition."

Miss Forbes was in Greenville for the 10th reunion of her St. Mary's Junior College class in May 1986 when she went to a doctor to find out about an itchiness of her skin. Within a day, she had been told that she probably had three-to-five years to live.

The diagnosis, made at the East Carolina University School of Medicine, was primary biliary cirrhosis of the liver. She was told that this is a rare condition that occurs in 14 out of every 100,000 women. It is only seen in women and gives little pain or discomfort, but has no known cure and creates a gradual debilitation that ends in death if the liver is not replaced.

"It was a shock," Blanche Forbes said of the news given Miss Forbes and her family two years ago. "Josie is my youngest daughter. She was born a strapping eight-and-a-half-pound baby and had never been sick. She started showing horses when she was four years old and has always been a wonderful horsewoman."

Miss Forbes earns her living dealing with horses — she's a horse broker in Kentucky, but is in Greenville often, serving as a consultant in her father's women's apparel business, C. Heber Forbes. Her father is Charles Alfred Forbes, a longtime Greenville area resident. She is a 1974 graduate of Rose High School and a graduate of St. Mary's Junior College in Raleigh and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Within a week after Miss Forbes's liver problem was diagnosed, her family had made contact with Jan Farmer, a Zebulon girl who underwent a transplant in Pittsburgh three years ago and is still doing fine. They listened to what she had to say about the expertise in liver treatment at Pittsburgh and made an appointment there. Since that time, Miss Forbes has been an outpatient at Pittsburgh, with the intervals between her visits there gradually shortening.

She was told at the time of her diagnosis that she would be considered a transplant candidate, but that no one is ever given a transplant until their conditions worsen to the point that the shutdown of liver function seems imminent. Mrs. Forbes explained that the reason is twofold: donor livers are at such a premium that they must be offered to those in the worst condition and, considering the risk of an unsuccessful transplant, it is considered wise not to remove a liver until function is minimal.

Mrs. Forbes says she plans to stay in Pittsburgh with her daughter at least until the transplant is done. Then she'll decide when she'll come home and let some other members of the family spend some time with her. Some member of the family will be with her as long as she needs to be there, her mother said.

The wedding of Deborah Jean Williford and Steven Edward Hill took place Saturday in Grace Episcopal Church. The Rev. Fred Fordham conducted the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are H.L. Williford of Plymouth and the late Jean B. Williford and Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Hill of Raleigh.

Jane Basnight was matron of honor for her sister, Jill McAllister Gordon of Pinnacle, Nancy Williford of Fuquay Varina, sister-in-law of the bride, Charlotte Edwards of Raleigh, and Nancy Tatro of Stamford, Conn., both sisters of the bridegroom, were bridesmaids.

The flower girls were Alison Basnight of Cary and Emily Williford of Carrboro, nieces of the bride.

The best man was the bridegroom's father, Gary Williford of Fuquay Varina, and Roy Williford of Carrboro, brothers of the bride, Reggie Edwards of Raleigh, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, and Nelson Moody of Greenville were ushers.

A program of wedding music was presented by organist Lawrence Goering, Nyal Watson sang "To Me" and "Wedding Prayer."

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of crystalline organza over satin. The bodice was designed with a jewel neckline enhanced with bridal seed pearls drops around the neckline. The sleeves were made of fluted ruffles and the bodice featured an elongated waistline with shirring on the bodice. Sposabella lace, seed pearls and iridescents trimmed the bodice. The skirt extended into a cathedral train accented with ruffles and lace. Her headpiece was a modified train of Venise lace accented by crystals and seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of white and pink carnations with cascading white roses.

The bridesmaids wore full-length gowns of sapphire blue satin lace. The lace bodices had short puffed satin sleeves. The full skirts were enhanced with satin bows and lace sweep trains. They carried lace fans adorned with royal blue and pink silk flowers.

The flower girls wore tea-length dresses of cream-colored polished cotton accented with royal blue and pink. The dresses had pink satin ribbons on the sleeves and around the waists. Each carried a white basket filled with spring flowers.

Both the bride and bridegroom attended East Carolina University. The bridegroom is employed by Cameron and Barkley Industrial Equipment Company.

After a wedding trip to Kiawah and Charleston, S.C., the couple will live in Greenville.

Most Bisexuals Remain In Closet

DEAR ABBY: I saw you on the Phil Donahue show recently and was delighted when you said, "There is far more bisexuality around than anyone suspects."

I am a male, 64, and have been married for more than 40 years. I was a pilot in World War II, had a few flings with women, married shortly after the war and fathered several fine children.

When I was 27, my employer sent me and another male employee, whom I admired, to a one-week training program in another city. We shared a motel room with twin beds. This man had also been in the Air Corps and had a lovely wife and one child, as did I at the time. On the third night, we had no homework, so we went to a topless bar, had a few drinks and went back to our motel. Amid a little horseplay and rib-poking, we kind of fell on one of the beds together. That was the beginning of a very long bisexual relationship. He died two years ago and I have grieved ever since.

Not once in all those years was there any indication that there was anything between us either at work or in the presence of our families.

I loved that man and he loved me. Our relationship lasted for 40 years, and neither of us took anything away from our families. It was far more than a sexual attraction — we were best friends, closer than brothers.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

His children called me "Uncle."

I know that bisexuality is frowned upon by others. But I have no regrets. — IN THE CLOSET IN CLEVELAND

DEAR IN: Yours is a very large closet. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I am surprised that you were surprised by the number of bisexuals who surfaced in your survey. I am a male bisexual. The mental health professionals probably include us in the 10 percent labeled

"gays." True, the majority of bisexuals use the gays for same-sex relations.

You are correct to question percentages, Abby. We bisexuals are so closeted we don't even know each other. We are in your heterosexual world — usually "happily" married, helping to rear our children with the same moral, ethical, caring values as you. We may be pillars of the community and part of that lovely family down the street. We cross all ethnic and financial lines. Most of you know one of us and consider us your close heterosexual friend, working buddy or acquaintance. Although this letter has little chance of reaching your readers, in order to protect my job, wife, children, heterosexual and bisexual friends, I must sign myself ... NO NAME, NO TOWN

DEAR NO NAME: After my survey, I read an illuminating book titled "The Bisexual Spouse." It contains interviews with bisexual couples, married and divorced. It also includes enlightening comments by Dr. Judd Marmor, past president of the American Psychiatric Association, and past president of the American Academy of Psychoanalysis. The book is edited by Ivan Hill, published by Barlina Books Inc., P.O. Box 7425, McLean, Va. 22106, and sells for $16.95. It is especially timely in this age of AIDS.

Prison Visit

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — The Geese Theater Co. is visiting the Fountain Correctional Center for Women near Rocky Mount through Saturday.

The New Hampshire-based troupe, which tours correctional facilities around the world, is conducting a series of theater workshops at the center. The group also is preparing, with the help of the residents, a special weekend performance for the children of residents.

Keith Hester, superintendent of the facility, said about 40 residents will learn about set construction, writing and videotaping during the visit, which began Tuesday.

you'll get some comment. Good day," he said.

ECU Athletic Director Dave Hart said he had no knowledge of Thompson's visit and could make no comment.

Wilson's attorney, Hugh Cox, said Thompson, head coach Art Baker and academic officials met with Wilson shortly after charges were filed and told him his scholarship would not be renewed. Hart said he had no knowledge of the meeting. Athletic scholarships are renewed each year at the discretion of university and athletic officials.

Cox also said he did not know Thompson visited Miss Battle until it was mentioned in court. "That came as a surprise to me. I was not aware that had happened," he said.

ECU Chancellor Richard R. Eakin said in a telephone interview Monday that he had no knowledge of any contact between Thompson and Miss Battle and he could not comment until he knew more about the situation.

University officials suspended all three athletes from the team while their case was pending and they said they would review each case individually after they were resolved. There has been no announcement on the status of Wilson, Pendleton or McCorvey.

GUC

Citing studies that project rate increases over a 10-year period ending in 1993 that will amount to a 60 percent increase, Bobo said "there is no way out of having to pay more for power. Fortunately, any rate increase will be only to pay the power agency obligations. Since the agency is a tax-exempt entity, there are no dividends to pay."

Bobo warned, however, that a "frightening move is afoot to do away with tax-exempt financing. The Supreme Court has the power to do this, and the House Ways and Means Committee has stated that such a ruling would raise billions in revenue to offset the huge deficit. If that happens, it would mean that Greenville and other cities would be competing with the big boys such as AT&T and IBM."

"The loss of tax-exempt financing would indeed be a tough nut to crack. It is something we must all fight to make sure it doesn't happen."

Bobo praised the sense of cooperation between the Greenville Utilities Commission and the Greenville City Council.

In an interview after the joint meeting, Greenville Utilities Director Malcom Green said "one factor that has put us in a stronger position is that our turnover of funds to the city has been modest. Some cities have operated on as much as 50 to 60 percent of their needs from electric turnovers."

"This has meant that the Utilities Commission has been able to absorb without passing on the customer two recent rate increases. One saved customers about $1 million dollars, the other about $2 million."

"Our customers have been paying about the same rate for the past three or four years. However, the (wholesale) rate increase coming up in August may require a rate hike for our customers. It's too early to know the details yet, but it's something we are studying in full, something that we have to be ready for."

Jetties Backed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., urged President Reagan Tuesday to clear the way for the Oregon Inlet jetties, which he said were needed to stabilize the inlet and protect the Herbert C. Bonner Bridge.

Changes Considered

comprehensive plan calls for residential development in the downtown area. What is proposed would break down the barriers that currently exist which prevent re-use of existing buildings for residential development," he said.

Commission member Ruth Leggett expressed interest in the proposals, saying successful downtown areas become viable as a result of a proper mix between residential and commercial uses.

"I think we're at the point that we need to try whatever we can to try to inject some life downtown and I think it's an interesting idea and I'm in favor of hearing more of it and further examining it," she said.

Jack Steelman, executive director of Evergreen, contributed input into the creation of the department's zoning proposals.

Steelman said multifamily development downtown at this point is not economically feasible due to current downtown development standards.

"The fact that as we speak tonight there is no interest in downtown development because the current standards at which these things can be built just won't make money," he said.

Marsha Hutchinson, a consultant from the firm of Robinson & Cole, said similar zoning proposals have been implemented in other cities, including Seattle and Freeport, Maine, but said she did not know if those policies had been successful at their intended effect.

Tuesday's meeting was part of an effort to thoroughly review and update the Greenville Zoning Ordinance in its entirety. The last comprehensive update of the ordinance occurred in 1969.

The discussion of downtown development was one of the items of Topic 5 of a five-part review of the Zoning Ordinance. The other four topics were discussed earlier this year. Topic 5 dealt with provisions not previously addressed by the current ordinance.

Other issues discussed Tuesday night were zoning regulations regarding bypass interchanges and establishing a mechanism whereby site designs of key non-residential developments can be reviewed for conformance with the long-range plans of the city.

With all five topics of the ordinance update addressed, Simoneau said the planning department will meet again with the commission in May to consider final drafts of the various proposals, including those relating to downtown development.

As Twins Rally For 4-2 Win

O's Once Again Fall Short

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — It's a pretty safe bet that the Baltimore Orioles won't win the American League pennant, or the AL East for that matter.

"But they ain't gonna lose all 162," Minnesota's Kirby Puckett said Tuesday night after the Orioles extended their record season-opening losing streak to 19 games with a 4-2 loss to the Twins.

The 0-for-1988 O's are only one loss short of the AL record for overall futility, last reached by the 1943 Philadelphia A's. The major-league mark is 23 by the 1961 Philadelphia Phillies.

The Orioles came close to their first victory Tuesday night. They took a 1-0 advantage when Fred Lynn led off the game with a home run and made it 2-0 on Cal Ripken's RBI double in the third inning. They protected the lead with solid defense, including a homer-robbing catch by Lynn over the center-field fence.

"We're playing hard," Larry Sheets said. "If we just came out there and quit, it might be easier to take."

The Orioles didn't quit. But neither did the Twins.

Minnesota took the lead in the sixth against Mike Morgan, 0-4, on a two-run homer by Kent Hrbek and a solo shot by Randy Bush. Hrbek's second homer of the game — in the eighth — and a failed ninth-inning rally by Baltimore brought the Birds within one of the books.

"We might not win the pennant, but things could be a lot worse," Morgan said. "There's a war going on (in the Honduras) and I've got a brother-in-law over there. People are getting killed and we're getting all the headlines. You have to keep things in perspective."

The defending World Series champion Twins, 6-11 after only their second victory in eight games, also are trying to keep this three game-series in perspective.

"I'm not saying they're going to win the East, but they're too good to lose them all," said Puckett, whose single started Minnesota's sixth-inning rally. "What's going to happen is going to happen. It's past the point of panic for them. The odds are with them to win soon."

Not soon enough for Orioles manager Frank Robinson, who took over for the fired Cal Ripken Sr. when the team was 0-6.

"We can't stand here and think, 'What if we'd done this or done that,'" he said. "It's like we're not doing enough to win a ballgame."

Sheets, for one, remains optimistic.

"Tomorrow's another day," he said. "You still look at it like this: There's 143 left and we can still lose 43 more and win 100 games."

The Orioles will try tonight to avoid equaling the futile performances of the 1943 A's, 1916 A's and 1906 Boston Red Sox when they send Scott McGregor to the mound against Bert Blyleven.

And the Twins will try to avoid being the streak-breakers.

"We have no pressure," Hrbek said. "If they beat us, we still have a lot of games to play. This team isn't going to cause us to lose the pennant."

The Orioles' streak has seen a unique combination of terrible pitching (5.93 ERA), uncommonly bad hitting (.194, including .111 with runners in scoring position) and the dreaded lack of "breaks."

But there was no lack of effort, especially on the part of Lynn, who robbed Gary Gaetti of a homer in the fourth after taking away an extra-base hit by Dan Gladden with a leaping catch in the third.

Twins starter Frank Viola, 2-1, allowed only three hits in seven innings — none after Ripken's double — but grew tired. He yielded to Jeff Reardon to start the eighth.

In the ninth, Reardon walked the first two batters and faced pinch-hitter Joe Orsulak, who was in a 1-for-20 slump. Orsulak lined the ball up the middle, but shortstop Greg Gagne was playing him there. Gagne snagged the liner and converted what might have been an RBI single into a double play.

Reardon then retired Lynn on a popout for his fifth save in five chances.

"That just shows you how they're going," Hrbek said. "You've gotta have the breaks to win ballgames."

Said Sheets: "We haven't gotten the breaks. It's beyond me why they're playing their shortstop up the middle with Orsulak hitting and Jeff Reardon pitching. But that's how things have been going for us."

New Raceway Director Anxious For First Run

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — The new general manager of the Alabama International Motor Speedway isn't wishing his life away, but he is eager for Sunday night to arrive.

Mike Helton succeeded Don Naman last Dec. 1 in the job of running the 2.67-mile super speedway and has been working since then getting ready for the first race under his direction, Sunday's $657,895 Winston 500 stock car race.

"I'm looking forward to Sunday being over, and getting the first one under my belt," Helton said. "I'm going to bed about 8 o'clock and celebrate by sleeping."

He doesn't plan on over-sleeping before then. "All the plans are falling into place and we're in high gear," he said, "and if something's not ready now, we'll just work through till it gets done."

So far, Helton said, "nothing's sneaked up that I didn't expect, except that selling out the reserved seats Monday before last was a surprise."

The transition has been smooth, he said, because Naman, now the director of the Alabama Motor Sports Museum and Hall of Fame, has his office right down the hall.

"Having Don so close is the biggest asset," Helton said. "It has made my job easier than most people's when they take over this type of responsibility."

He said he was not aware of how big the track facility is until he started working at Talladega.

"Empty, it's massive," he said. "Then, when you have 130,000 to 135,000 people here, it doesn't look as big."

Sunday's race, he said, "has everybody in a mad rush right now, and that's expected."

One of the favorites in the race, Darrell Waltrip, said he plans to rush to victory, even going so far as to call a news conference in the track press box after the race — when the winner meets with reporters.

The Winston 500 will be Waltrip's 300th race on a super speedway.

"I feel like I've got a bona fide shot at sitting on the pole and I feel like I will win the race," he said. "I have more confidence than ever at Talladega."

The pole position will be decided in qualifying Thursday when drivers go through time trials for both the Winston 500 and Saturday's ARCA 500k. Qualifying runs will end Friday.

Waltrip, Phil Parsons and Mickey Gibbs said they believe a speed in the 194-198 range will win the pole spot.

"The weather will dictate the pole speed," Gibbs said. "The cars go faster in cooler weather."

"Seventy degrees is a good temperature," Waltrip said. "What's comfortable to the body is also comfortable to the cars."

Parsons, looking for his first NASCAR victory, said the Talladega track is the easiest one to win on. "It doesn't take a good deal of finesse," he said, "just guts and running fast."

Gibbs, another young driver, is the first one in several years to run in both the Saturday and Sunday races.

"The Winston will be a learning experience, but my car is driving well," he said.

Davey Allison, the defending champion, predicted that he will be among the front-runners along with his father, Bobby Allison, and Waltrip.

Hornets Set Up
Preseason Play

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Eight games against four NBA teams comprise the preseason schedule of the Charlotte Hornets, team vice president Carl Scheer announced Tuesday.

After opening against the New York Knicks in Madison Square Garden on Oct. 14 and in Columbia, S.C., on Oct. 16, the Hornets will make their North Carolina debut against the Chicago Bulls on Oct. 22 in Chapel Hill.

The Hornets and the Bulls will travel to Richmond, Va., on Oct. 23 for another exhibition game.

"As the first Hornets team nears its final form for the opening of the season, it will be interesting to see how we do against a sensational talent like Michael Jordan," Scheer said in a prepared statement Tuesday. "He's just one of the many former ACC stars who will be coming back for preseason and regular season games."

Charlotte will play Dallas in New Castle, Ind., on Oct. 25, and will meet the Mavericks for the first professional game in the new Charlotte coliseum on Oct. 29.

The Hornets exhibition schedule concludes with two games against the Cleveland Cavaliers, in Winston-Salem on Oct. 30 and in Fayetteville on Oct. 31.

"We want to give fans in the Carolinas a first-hand look at the kind of action that will be taking place in the Charlotte coliseum 41 times during the regular season," Scheer said. "These fans are very important to us and we want to bring games to them when we can."

The eight-game schedule of preseason games announced Tuesday by the Charlotte Hornets. Exact times will be announced at a later date.

Chargers Rip Jags, 13-2

FARMVILLE — For Ayden-Grifton coach Chris Ross, getting an early lead against Farmville Central was the catalyst for a 13-2 Eastern Plains Conference baseball win Tuesday.

"The early lead was the key to the ballgame," Ross said. "A couple of our conference ballgames, we played well, but we didn't start playing well until the fourth or fifth innings."

"We were looking for that ballgame where we got an early lead and then let good pitching and good defense take over."

And the Chargers got both Tuesday.

They committed only one error for the ballgame and combined that with a solid pitching performance from Ty Little, who went six innings and gave up only two hits while striking out six and walking three. Scott Chauncy pitched the seventh for the Chargers, who move to 7-8 overall and 5-1 in the conference.

"They got the early lead and then we couldn't catch up," Farmville coach Bill Davis said as he watched his team fall to 5-10 overall and 2-3 in the conference. "I thought we weren't mentally prepared at all. We never got into it. We weren't ready to play when we got out there."

The Chargers took little time taking advantage of that listlessness by scoring four runs in the first inning.

Darryl Moye opened the game with a base on balls off Jaguar starter Alexander Daniels and then stole second. Ronnell Peterson followed with a home run blast over the left field fence for a 2-0 lead.

Little kept things going for the Chargers by drawing a walk. Stephen Tucker was hit by a pitch to put runners at first and second and both moved up on a sacrifice by Gary Eubanks. Gene Stancil walked to load the bases before Little was forced home when Billy Miller walked.

John Tyndall lined out to rightfield to score Tucker but Stancil was caught off base at second for the final out of the inning.

Farmville countered with a run in the bottom of the inning as Shea Terrell nailed a solo homer, but Gary Eubanks equaled that for the Chargers with a solo shot of his own in the third to make it 5-1.

Ayden-Grifton then added two more runs in the top of the fourth to make it 7-1.

With one out, Scott Cannon was hit by a pitch and replaced by courtesy runner Darin Lister who then went out on a fielder's choice by Moye. A single from Peterson put men at first and second before Little drove home Moye with a base hit. Tucker then scored Peterson with another base hit to finish off the scoring for the inning.

"That probably sealed it," Ross said of the two runs in the fourth. "All along we felt that five runs was not going to be enough to win the ballgame."

But in the end it was. Little gave up only two more runs the rest of the way, one coming on a solo homer by Kevin Wade in the bottom of the fourth and the other coming in the fifth when Alexander Daniels singled and eventually scored on a wild pitch.

"Ty Little did a good job with a four-run lead," Ross said. "I think some junior colleges really need to give this guy a good hard look. He's a college infielder who can also pitch."

Ayden-Grifton added two more runs in the seventh, one scoring on an error and the other off an RBI single by Eubanks to complete the scoring.

Rose Romps Past Eagles, 18-2

ELIZABETH CITY — Rose High School continued its run through the Big East Conference with an 18-2 rout of Elizabeth City Northeastern in baseball action Tuesday, scoring 12 times in the fourth inning of the game.

The Rampants got a two-hit pitching performance from Dallas McPherson, who earned the win by going the first nine innings. Tom Moye came on in the sixth to finish up the game, allowing three more hits. Both of the Eagle runs came off McPherson in the fifth inning as Jason Pipkin hit a bases-loaded double to drive both in.

By then, however, it was academic as Rose has rushed out to a 13-0 lead.

The Rampants got their first run in the opening inning. David Leisten doubled, but got only to third on a double by Axel Smith. David Daniels reached on a fielder's choice that got Leisten coming home. Moye then singled to drive in courtesy runner John Bolen.

Then, in the fourth, the Rampants exploded for 12 big runs, putting the game on ice. McPherson singled and moved up on an error on the play. Jamie Brewington singled him in, then stole second. Chris Christopher then singled to score Brewington. Heath Clark reached on catcher's interference and Tim Moore tripled to drive in both runners.

Leisten singled in Moore and moved up on a passed ball. Daniels then doubled to drive in Leisten. Moye cleared the bases with a homer to left, scoring Leisten also.

McPherson walked and Brewington was hit by a pitch. Christopher was also hit by a pitch, loading the bases. Clark followed with a double, driving in two. Moore closed it out with another hit, driving in the final two.

Rose added five more in the sixth. Jeff Mahoney walked and Joe Deloach singled. Paul Powers walked, loading the bases. Wes Jackson doubled in two and Jeff Likosar singled to score Powers. Likosar advanced on a passed ball and Jay Surles singled to drive in Jackson. Chris Fuqua reached on an error, which allowed Likosar to score.

Leisten and Moye each had three hits to lead Rose, while Moore and Clark each added two.

No one had more than one hit for the Eagles.

Rose advances its record to 14-0 overall and to 6-0 in the conference.

No Decision Yet On Hornet Coach

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Charlotte Hornets vice president Carl Scheer says he has interviewed potential coaches for the NBA expansion franchise, but has not made any decision on the team's first coach.

The latest prospect to meet with Scheer was Denver Nuggets assistant coach Allan Bristow.

"We did meet and had a good exchange of ideas and thoughts," Scheer said of Monday's 2½-hour meeting with Bristow. "I told him if we decide it's serious enough, obviously he'll need to come back and meet George (Shinn). But that decision hasn't been made."

Team spokesman Andy Warfield said Scheer had not spoken with any potential candidates on Tuesday.

Bristow and Scheer talked at the Hornets' offices and visited the new Charlotte coliseum, where the team will play its home games beginning next fall. Bristow then caught a flight back to Denver.

"We'll just have to wait and see what happens," Bristow told The Charlotte Observer in a telephone interview from Denver.

Bristow, 36, has been an assistant to Doug Moe for the past four seasons, after one season as an assistant at San Antonio. He is a Richmond, Va., native who played college basketball at Virginia Tech and played in the NBA at Philadelphia, San Antonio, Utah and Dallas.

The Hornets are expected to interview several more candidates before making a decision, which Scheer said he hoped would come by the end of May.

Meanwhile, a published report says Philadelphia 76ers Coach Jim Lynam is the leading candidate to become head coach of the Hornets.

A source close to the team said Scheer asked the 76ers for permission to talk to Lynam last week. The Philadelphia Inquirer reported in Tuesday editions.

Lynam is also being considered as a candidate to coach the Miami Heat, the other expansion team scheduled to begin play this fall, the Inquirer said.

Pettis, Viola Use Different Approaches

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Frank Viola called it just another game. Gary Pettis said it wasn't.

Viola and Pettis were talking about different games but they both came away winners Tuesday night.

Quizzed whether the prospect of becoming the first pitcher to lose to the Orioles caused Viola a restless evening, he said: "I slept 17 hours last night."

Then the well-rested Viola pitched the Minnesota Twins to a 4-2 triumph over winless Baltimore, extending the Orioles' losing streak to 19 games, one short of the American League record. The major-league mark is 23.

"I think the seventh game of the World Series was more important than playing Baltimore at 0-18," the World Series MVP said. "I don't care if Baltimore's 0-18 or 0-150. They always play us tough."

Pettis, meanwhile, couldn't wait to face his former California teammates.

"When I woke up it was already on my mind that we were playing the Angels," Pettis said after driving in three runs in Detroit's 6-0 victory. "I had to tell myself not to think about it. But myself talked back."

"I'd find myself thinking about the game and it was only 2 p.m. so I had to keep telling myself to forget about it. It was a day-long battle."

In other AL games, it was Cleveland 12, Seattle 6; Oakland 6, Toronto 1; New York 5, Kansas City 4, and Texas 3, Milwaukee 1. The Boston-Chicago game was rained out.

Pettis, traded to Detroit last winter for pitcher Dan Petry, drove in two runs with a single in the third inning and singled home another in the Tigers' four-run fifth.

"We were talking about this on the bench," California manager Cookie Rojas said. "A lot of times after you trade a guy he comes back to hurt you."

Meanwhile, Jeff Robinson pitched a six-hitter, walked five and struck out three for his second major-league shutout. Loser Mike Witt gave up seven hits and all the Detroit runs in five innings.

"The first hit by Pettis was where I wanted it," Witt said. "He doesn't hit with authority, but he hit that one good enough to get it through."

Indians 12, Mariners 6

Joe Carter continued his torrid hitting with two homers and five RBI and Jay Bell and Brook Jacoby drove in three runs apiece. Carter has hit five of his seven home runs in the last four games and is 11-for-17 with 15 runs batted in and nine runs scored in that span.

"The pitchers are getting behind and then throwing the pitches I'm looking for," Carter said. "I'm not getting myself in a hole swinging at bad pitches. And once the count is in my favor I can be more aggressive."

Tom Candiotti, 4-0, yielded all six Seattle runs in the first three innings but settled down and pitched his fourth complete game. He allowed 12 hits and struck out 10.

Cleveland trailed 6-2 when Cory Snyder walked in the fourth against loser Mike Moore. Bell then hit his first home run of the season before a single by Andy Allanson and a walk to Upshaw preceded Carter's second home run of the game, a three-run shot that gave the Indians a 7-6 lead.

Athletics 6, Blue Jays 1

Mark McGwire, who hadn't homered in 10 games, hit a pinch-hit, three-run shot in the eighth inning that broke a 1-1 tie. Loser Dave Stieb left with one out in the eighth after allowing consecutive singles to Dave Parker and Dave Henderson. David Wells relieved and McGwire, batting for Ron Hassey, hit his fifth home run of the year.

It was the Yankees' 22nd triumph in the last 25 games against the Royals at Yankee Stadium. Ceciliano Guante, the second of three New York pitchers, was the winner, allowing one hit in two innings. Charles Hudson pitched a hitless ninth for his first save as Manager Billy Martin bypassed relief ace Dave Righetti, who has been struggling.

Kansas City scored all its runs against Al Leiter, including Danny Tartabull's homer and Kevin Seitzer's two-run double.

Rangers 3, Brewers 1

Jose Guzman pitched a three-hitter and Pete Incaviglia homered. Guzman struck out eight and lowered his ERA to 1.41 in 32 innings. It was the ninth time in 18 games this season that Texas pitchers have allowed two or fewer runs.

McGwire stayed in the game and singled a run across in Oakland's two-run ninth against Mark Eichhorn.

Winner Storm Davis allowed four hits in seven innings and Dennis Eckersley pitched the final two for his major league-leading ninth save.

Yankees 5, Royals 4

Don Slaught opened the eighth inning with an opposite-field home run that snapped a 4-4 tie. Slaught's fourth homer of the season came on the first pitch from Charlie Leibrandt, who allowed only four hits. Three of them, however, were home runs, including a solo shot by Dave Winfield and a two-run homer by Jack Clark.

Incaviglia's single triggered a two-run second inning against Chris Bosio that included Steve Kemp's sacrifice fly and Mike Stanley's RBI double. Incaviglia homered in the fourth.

Guzman had a career ERA of 8.28 and an 0-3 record against Milwaukee.

Parrott Leads Rose To Victory

ELIZABETH CITY — Gina Parrott went 4-4 with three RBI and hit an inside the park home run to key a three-run second inning as Rose defeated Northeastern, 8-5, in a Big East Conference softball game Tuesday.

Parrott singled to open the game but went out on a fielder's choice by Jenny Stoneham. Cammy Smith walked. Joanne Brown loaded the bases with a single. A double by Andrea Rogers drove in all three runs.

In the second, Rose added three more runs. Turonda Gilbert to open the inning and went to second on an overthrow. Tiki Hair reached on a fielder's choice. Kristin Shea reached but put out Hair on a fielder's choice. Gina Parrott followed with a drive down the first baseline to score two runs and then scored herself on the play for an inside the park home run to make it 6-0.

Brown and Amy Barr had three hits apiece for the Rampettes, who move to 8-5 overall and 4-3 in the conference and return to action Thursday at Northern Nash.

Chocowinity.....7,6
Jamesville.....2,5

CHOCOWINITY — Chocowinity High School swept a pair of softball games from Jamesville Tuesday in Tobacco Belt Conference action.

Chocowinity won the opening game 7-2 and then came back with a 6-5 win in the second.

In the first game, Chocowinity got all the runs it needed in the first inning, scoring six times. Chrylene Myers cracked a two-run homer and Paszt added another with no one on, accounting for half the total for the frame.

Jamesville scored once in the second but Chocowinity added one in the third. Jamesville got its other run in the fourth.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Driver Kyle Petty is facing a possible fine, suspension or loss of Winston Cup points after an incident during Sunday's race at Martinsville, Va., in which Petty allegedly swerved his car toward NASCAR inspectors.

NASCAR enforce Dick Beatty scheduled a meeting with Petty today to discuss a possible penalty.

"After that discussion, I assume there will be some kind of announcement made," Les Richter, NASCAR vice president for competition, said Tuesday.

"It could be loss of points (in the Winston Cup points race), suspension, a fine, all of the above," Richter said. "It could be many different things."

According to Beatty, Petty drove through the crowded garage area and back toward the track after lengthy repairs at last weekend's Pannill 500 at Martinsville. As he was attempting to return, he found his way blocked by Neil Bonnett's idled car. Petty tried to push Bonnett's car out of the way, sending spectators scrambling, according to officials.

After Beatty blackflagged Petty to the pits to discuss the incident, Petty stopped briefly, then roared away, swerving twice toward NASCAR inspectors standing on pit road. Beatty immediately blackflagged Petty again, ordering him to the penalty box behind the pit wall for a couple of minutes, he said.

"I felt he had lost control of himself, so I parked him," Beatty said. "First, he came down behind pit road and ran into Neil Bonnett's car, and then backed up and ran into it again."

"And when a person has a mental attitude like that, he has no business being in a Winston Cup race. He will be fined," Beatty said.

Richter said the incident last Sunday is not new to NASCAR, nor can it be considered serious enough to warrant a suspension from competition.

"I don't think this is any more a problem than events on the race track when you're able to carry out your penalty during the racing situation," he said.

Northampton East.....10
Williamston.....2

LEGGETT — Northampton East topped Williamston High School for the second straight day Tuesday, gaining a 10-2 softball victory in the Northeastern Conference.

The loss was the third in a row for the Lady Tigers, who had been unbeaten until last week, winning their first seven.

Williamston took the lead in the first inning with a run, then added another in the third. But that was to be all the Tigers would get.

C. Bradley led Chocowinity with two hits while Val Clark had two, one of them a triple for Jamesville.

In the second game, Chocowinity and Jamesville both scored three times in the first inning. Jamesville then scored one in the third but Chocowinity again tied it up with one in the fourth. Jamesville went back out, 5-4, with one in the bottom of the fourth.

In the fifth, however, Chocowinity pushed over two to wrap up the win. Dixon reached on an error and Bradley followed with a home run.

Bradley had three hits to lead Chocowinity's attack. Rochelle Rogers and Sheila Bowen each had two hits with one of Rodgers' a triple. Clark also had a triple in the game.

Jamesville falls to 5-5 in TBC play, 5-6 overall. The Lady Bullets return to action on Thursday at Matamuskeet.

Northampton came up with five big runs in the bottom of the third to take the lead for good. The Lady Rams added three more in the fourth, all on a home run by Ande Long. Two more scored in the fifth for the 10-run total.

Stephanie Harris and Long each had three hits to lead Northampton while Michelle Allen, Katrina Allen and Cathy Hall each had two.

NBA Playoffs Set For Openers

By The Associated Press
Utah Jazz Coach Frank Layden says his team's first-round playoff series with the Portland Trail Blazers will determine who becomes the sacrificial lamb in the second against the defending NBA champion Los Angeles Lakers.

"We don't have a chance," Layden said Tuesday of the Blazers and the Jazz, who open their best-of-five Western Conference series Thursday night at Portland.

"The Lakers are going to have momentum by the time they play the winner of our series — y'know, they're going to have their little tuneup the first week with San Antonio — and then they'll come into the next series loaded for bear," he said.

"And let's not forget, they'll have the home-court advantage."

Elsewhere on Friday night, it will be New York at Boston and Milwaukee at Atlanta in the East and Seattle at Denver in the West.

Rockets-Mavericks
Houston's Robert Reid says the opening game with Dallas as crucial. "It all comes down to Game One," the Rockets' guard said. "If you can win that one, you've got the other team on the run."

The two teams have met six times during the regular season with the Mavericks holding a 4-2 advantage. Dallas even broke a seven-game losing streak at Houston's Summit, where it now has won two consecutive games.

The Mavericks have a distinct advantage because they hold the home-court advantage, meaning if the series is extended to five games, three of them will be at Reunion Arena, where they were 33-8 this season. One of those losses, however, was a 108-92 loss to Houston on Jan. 30.

Reid said the series is special because it matches two Texas teams. "It's going to be heated because now you're playing for (Texas) bragging rights," said Reid, who also predicted the winner would meet the Lakers for the conference championship.

"That's automatic," he said.

Cavaliers-Bulls
If Cleveland guard Ron Harper is unable to play, much of the task of guarding Chicago's Michael Jordan will fall on the shoulders of unheralded Craig Ehlo.

Coach Lenny Wilkens said Tuesday that the 6-foot-6 Harper, who sprained his right ankle late in the first half of Cleveland's 107-103 victory at Chicago last Friday night, is questionable for the opener.

The Cavaliers are hopeful that Harper will be ready to play Sunday in the second game.

Ehlo, a 6-foot-7 forward-guard, will replace Harper in the starting lineup if Harper can't play, Wilkens said.

"It doesn't seem possible that Ron will be able to play in the first game, but we'll keep evaluating the situation on a day-to-day basis," Wilkens said. "He's having treatments and his ankle is still sore, but he's walking around more. We'll play it by ear."

Harper would be assigned to cover Jordan, the NBA's leading scorer, who averaged 35 points this season.

Ehlo, a five-year veteran from Washington State, admits that guarding Jordan can be a terrifying experience.

"What's really scary," Ehlo explained, "is when he starts palming that sucker (the ball) and shaking his head. You know a shot is going up, but you don't know when or from where."

Bullets-Pistons
Detroit forward Rick Mahorn, who sat out the final week of the season with a lower back strain, wasn't well enough to resume practicing Tuesday and is questionable for the opener against Washington.

"Well, he's back," Coach Chuck Daly said. "That's the first time I've seen him in a while. He wasn't able to practice today, so we'll have to see what happens tomorrow. I would say right now he'll get limited minutes."

Mahorn, who is needed to help guard high-scoring Washington center Moses Malone, admitted he is not ready to play much.

"I don't have any kind of conditioning," he said. "I've been limited to laying in a certain position (on a training table,) and working from there."

"If I'm not 100 percent, I'm only messing up a lot of things," Mahorn said. "If I'm giving my all at 80 percent, I'm cheating myself and cheating the team."

If Mahorn can't go, he'll be replaced by either John Salley or James Edwards. Neither has had much luck guarding Malone or staying out of foul trouble.

Collins Reportedly Has Drug Relapse

BOSTON (AP) — Former East Carolina running back and present New England Patriots' star Tony Collins reportedly may have had more drug problems and could face penalties from Coach Raymond Berry and the NFL.

If the report is true, it would be the third time in his career with the Patriots that the eight-year veteran has had drug problems.

The Boston Globe today said unnamed "reliable sources" said Collins reportedly was found wandering in a dormitory at Northeastern University last month and was taken to Boston City Hospital where a blood test revealed alcohol and cocaine in his system.

ECU Softballers Earn A Split

East Carolina and Virginia battled to a split in a softball double header Tuesday afternoon with ECU winning the first game, 5-3, and the Lady Calaliers coming out on top, 2-0, in the latter contest.

ECU overcame a 2-0 Virginia lead by scoring three runs in the third, ECU then added to its advantage with two more runs in the fourth.

Tracy Key opened the fourth with a single. Jeannie Murray also singled. Kim Adams sacrificed both runners over. Mickey Ford tripled in both runners to make it 5-2.

ECU was led by Murray who went 2-3.

In the second game, Virginia broke a 0-0 tie by scoring two runs in the seventh inning to take the win.

ECU was led by Key with two hits.

The split closed out the season for the Lady Pirates, 25-16-1, and the win in the first game broke an eight-game losing streak.

Pitchers Benefit From Advice

By The Associated Press

Both the veteran and the kid listened to advice. Their reward was immediately apparent.

Eric Show, now in his seventh season with the San Diego Padres, listened to a friend and benefitted to the tune of a 1-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals on Tuesday night.

John Smiley, in his second season with the Pirates, threw a four-hitter for 8 2-3 innings as streaking Pittsburgh blanked San Francisco 2-0. His adviser was pitching coach Ray Miller.

Also pitching well Tuesday were Chicago's Greg Maddux, who beat Los Angeles 7-3, and Houston's Mike Scott, who three-hit Philadelphia for eight innings in a 3-1 victory.

Elsewhere, New York routed Atlanta 13-4 and Cincinnati beat Montreal 5-2.

Padres 1, Cardinals 0

Show allowed 10 hits but spaced them well and Carmelo Martinez homered for the first time this year as the Padres won their fourth straight, the last three shutouts. Show came into the game 0-3 with an 8.36 ERA and said he had talked earlier with a friend who told him he might subconsciously be looking to lose after his frustrating start.

"It kind of shocked me to think it could be a possibility in my case," he said. "So whenever I felt anything creeping into my mind today that I thought was counter-productive, I just immediately said, 'Oh forget it.' I shook my head and said 'Here, give me the ball. Let's throw the next pitch.'"

Martinez, subbing for a sore-shouldered John Kruk at first base, homered with one out in the seventh.

"We've been having trouble getting two-out hits and hitting with runners on," manager Whitey Herzog said.

Pirates 2, Giants 0

Like the Cardinals, San Francisco is in a batting slump. Smiley extended it by allowing only four hits before needing last-out relief from Jim Gott, who got his second save.

The 23-year-old left-hander, who drove in Pittsburgh's first run with his second major league hit, became a starter two weeks ago. He made 63 relief appearances last season.

"Ray Miller has helped me tremendously," Smiley said. "He helped me throw the curve and straight change, getting me to throw the slider more. It was confusing at the beginning, with all those pitches."

"I just told myself to go after one batter at a time. My concentration was a lot better tonight."

Astros 3, Phillies 1

Scott was not real satisfied with his 12-strikeout performance.

"I didn't throw the ball well," he said after taking the National League lead with 43 strikeouts. "I got in a situation that all pitchers have been in where you are not throwing strikes."

Scott allowed five walks and hit a batter.

Two of Houston's runs were the result of fielding errors by the Phillies' 10-time Gold Glove-winner at third base, Mike Schmidt. Both errors were on hard grounders by Glenn Davis that went right through Schmidt's legs.

"I hit them about as hard as I can hit a ball," Davis said. "They were right at him. I wouldn't have wanted to be in front of either one of them. I thought the first one was a hit and the second one was questionable."

Cubs 7, Dodgers 3

Maddux pitched an eight-hitter for eight innings and the Cubs capitalized on four infield errors. Maddux is 4-1 after a 6-14 record last season.

The errors by the Los Angeles infield and the first balk called at home against the Dodgers all season led to five runs off Tim Lary, who has lost all five career decisions against the Cubs. Lary allowed two earned runs and five hits in six innings. One of them was Jody Davis' third homer, leading off the sixth.

Second baseman Steve Sax, whose third-inning fielding error helped the Cubs score two unearned runs, made a costly throwing miscue that led to three more runs in the fourth. Both plays were on grounders by Shawon Dunston.

"I made a lot of hittable pitches that they didn't hit, or seemed to foul off," Maddux said. "We were pretty fortunate to get the breaks we got, and I had good support tonight. You have a good chance of winning when you get seven runs."

Mets 13, Braves 4

Keith Hernandez, off to the worst start of his career, had the best RBI night of his life. He knocked in seven runs, hitting two homers, one a grand slam. That gave him 1,000 RBIs for his career and his big game helped manager Davey Johnson to his 400th career victory.

"It's been a struggle so far this year, and it's nice to contribute," Hernandez said.

Rookie Kevin Elster had four hits in support of Dwight Gooden, who wasn't at his best but won his fifth straight decision. The unbeaten Gooden is the league's only five-game winner.

"Tonight I didn't have my good stuff, but the team saved me," Gooden said. "The way I was pitching tonight, I wanted us to get as many runs as possible."

Reds 5, Expos 2

Solo homers by Nick Esasky and Eric Davis backed Ron Robinson's win.

Robinson, who had led off the fifth inning with a single, then Davis accounted for the Reds' fourth run in the seventh with his second homer of the season.

Andres Galarraga hit his fifth homer in the eighth for Montreal.

IU's Knight Puts Foot Firmly In Mouth

NEW YORK (AP) — Indiana basketball coach Bob Knight's comment comparing rape and the handling of stress have caused more tension for school officials.

"Coach Knight was not speaking for the university," IU president Thomas Ehrlich said Tuesday after Knight's nationally televised remark. "His reference to rape and his coarse language were in very poor taste. Period. That's all I really want to say."

During an interview with NBC Monday night, correspondent Connie Chung asked Knight how he handled stress.

"I think that if rape is inevitable, relax and enjoy it," Knight responded.

He added: "That's just an old term that you're going to use. The plane's down, so you have no control over it."

NBA, Players Union Make Peace

NEW YORK (AP) — Labor peace is being declared in the NBA.

"It's better to make peace than to make war," Commissioner David Stern said Tuesday after a six-year collective bargaining was signed between the NBA and its players. "This deal was made because it's good for the league, good for the players and good for the fans."

In addition to bringing an end to NBA antitrust litigation, the agreement grants many players unrestricted free agency between now and 1994, continues the salary cap system and reduces the college draft to two rounds after this year.

Both sides had expressed confidence in winning the brewing court battles that now will not occur, but Stern said, "Whatever side's legal position was right, it's better that we settled this now."

The union had asked for unrestricted free agency and the abolition of the salary cap and the college draft. It got partial, but not complete, satisfaction on all three.

"Both sides made compromises from their original positions in order to reach agreement," Stern said. "The NBA owners and players once again demonstrated their willingness to work together."

Before next season, seven-year NBA veterans with expired contracts will have complete freedom to sign with any team, and his original team will no longer have the right to match an offer and keep him, as it does under the current right-of-first-refusal system.

Among the veterans who could benefit immediately from this provision will be Moses Malone of Washington, Sidney Moncrief of Milwaukee and Tom Chambers of Seattle.

"This is the first time in professional basketball that a player will be able to play with any team he chooses," said Larry Fleisher, executive director of the players association.

After the 1988-89 season, the free-agency provision will apply to five-year veterans, and in the last year of the agreement, 1993-94, a four-year veteran will have unrestricted free agency provided he is not in his first NBA contract.

In order to retain the right-of-first refusal for players who do not have enough years of service or who have just completed their first contract, a team must offer a player a new contract that is worth 125 percent of his previous yearly salary. Teams also are not allowed to match an offer and then trade a player.

In addition, right-of-first-refusal applies only to players who are offered $250,000 or more by their old team.

The agreement, which is subject to court approval, was reached after a seven-hour negotiating session Monday and was approved by the league's owners and the executive board of the players union.

The agreement provides for a reduction in the June 28 college draft from seven to three rounds. Subsequent drafts will be two rounds, making free agents of all but 54 college players each season.

The minimum amount offered to first-round draft picks also will be raised from $75,000 to $150,000 this year, with additional escalations next year.

The league also retained the salary cap system that is based on the players' receiving 53 percent of gross revenues. That percentage will be retained, but the players will receive a guaranteed increase from $6.1 million per team this year to approximately $11 million by 1992-93.

That salary cap amount would mean that the average NBA salary would increase from more than $500,000 per player now to more than $900,000 by 1993.

"This is a breakthrough agreement," Fleisher said, "because at some early point in each professional basketball player's career, he will now have the ability to be totally free to determine the team for which he wishes to play. The settlement will lead to a marketplace that will continue the NBA players as the highest-paid athletes in professional team sports."

Fleisher, who said he will retire from the union in a few weeks, led the challenge to the draft, salary cap and right-of-first-refusal in federal court. He said previously that he would accept nothing less than the abolition of those three provisions.

"It's true that I absolutely wanted to be rid of those three, but this is a good compromise agreement for the players," he said.

The union leadership had voted on Feb. 5 to withdraw as the exclusive bargaining agent of the players, a move designed to strengthen its arguments in court that the previous agreement with the league should no longer be in effect.

"The last thing we wanted to do was withdraw as bargaining agent," Fleisher said. "If we weren't able to reach a reasonable agreement, we were prepared to take that step. But we reached a reasonable agreement."

"The key to ironing this out was the joint realization by the league and the players that this was the right time to make a deal," Stern said. "The meetings were marked by good will and the intense desire to come to an agreement."

Other benefits in the agreement include pension, per diem and insurance increases and a pension for pre-1965 players not covered by existing pension plans.

Former Philadelphia star Julius Erving, at a dinner honoring him, Walter Payton and Tom Seaver for their work combating multiple sclerosis, said Tuesday night the agreement will benefit the NBA.

"If you have a player who you want to be a part of your organization and future, you will have to make a mutual commitment to one another and you will have to do so before D-Day, the day the contract expires," Erving said. "A team is not going to let contracts expire. You are not going to let (players like) Moses Malone and Tom Chambers become free agents."

UNM Looking For A Coach

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — New Mexico Athletic Director John Koenig wasted little time initiating the search for a basketball coach to take over a program blessed with unshakable fan support but still starving for national recognition.

Within an hour of Gary Colson's resignation announcement Tuesday, Koenig told reporters he had a list of 23 candidates from around the country for the vacant coaching job.

"I made my first two phone calls this afternoon," Koenig said. "I hope it won't take long."

Koenig said there would be no search committee to find a successor to Colson. Instead, Koenig will do most of the looking.

"Because of the nature of the position, and the timing, I will be searching initially myself," he said.

The "position" that Koenig referred to is easily one of the most visible in New Mexico, where sports fans view basketball with the same degree of mania that Texans and Oklahomans follow football.

For the past 22 years, New Mexico has ranked among the top 10 nationally in attendance and the program generates well over $1 million in annual revenues.

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST For THURSDAY April 28

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Since you are not really thinking very clearly at this time, it would not be wise to try to handle a difficult credit matter today.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): If you have the feeling that a new business associate is not to be trusted, you're probably right. Be very careful in motion of any kind.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): If you begin a new project at work today, get some assistance before you get in over your head. This evening should be a very romantic one.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Be cautious of a casual acquaintance who is trying to make you look like a fool. Invite some friends into your home tonight.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Check over your records of a financial nature, since it is likely you have made a mistake recently. Stay at home and relax tonight.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): You may have some trouble arranging recreation plans, so forget about them before you waste a whole day. Don't argue with your mate.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): If you need a change of scenery this morning, step out for a while and you will come back refreshed. Avoid a boring acquaintance.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): If you receive a message you don't understand, don't spend all day trying to figure it out. Put this aside until you have time to study it.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): A lack of funds shouldn't keep you from having a good time with your mate tonight. Remember the fun in simple pleasures.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Your thinking will not be very clear this morning, so put off making any important decisions until later. Have fun with friends tonight.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Don't worry yourself sick over conditions you can do nothing about. Stay around cheerful friends who will improve your mood tonight.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Be careful about what you say today, or you could cause a lot of resentment. Try to get your business affairs in better order.

Zia Mahmood, voted the 1987 Bridge Player of the Year by the International Bridge Press Association, at one of his favorite New York eating places, Abe's Steak House on Third Avenue. Not even the excellent fare could keep the conversation off bridge, and we soon had a collection to share with you.

On this one from a high-stake rubber bridge game, Zia held the West cards and took advantage of the vulnerability and his honors to open three clubs. With the boost of some excellent judgment by North, North-South still reached a sound slam contract.

Zia led the top of his club sequence. Declarer won the ace and cashed the ace of trumps, on which Zia smoothly furnished the jack. Suddenly declarer had a choice of lines. He was understandably reluctant to lead another trump in case

East could win and play a third round, leaving declarer dependent on a 3-3 diamond break. Since West, who was marked with club length, rated to be short in diamonds, declarer saw no harm in abandoning trumps and first playing on diamonds.

Declarer was devastated when West ruffed the third diamond with the deuce of trumps. South still had to concede a trick to the king of hearts for down one.

Note that had West routinely followed with a low trump on the ace, declarer would have had no option but to lead a second heart. The slam would then have rolled home.

MANCHESTER

Hello, I'm The Manchester, a home in Devonshire Square on Lot #7. I'm in need of occupants, someone to purchase me to call their own and take care of me.

I'm not necessarily lonely since I have visitors each day, but I need an individual or family to say that I'm uniquely theirs.

You'll enjoy my special features such as a dishwasher, an electric range and hood, a fireplace, a skylight and custom European cabinets. I'm also in the Winterville school district.

Come and see me! I'm open daily from noon until 7:00 p.m., Monday through Saturday and 1 until 7:00 p.m. on Sunday. I also have a brother on Lot #9.

Maybe...just maybe...you can call me your own today!

By CHARLES HILLINGER
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

MIDNIGHT, Miss. — The population may be small but the name of this town looms large in the minds of postmark collectors.

In fact, postmaster Mary Robertson said, she receives several requests each week for the Midnight postmark.

To prove her point, she whips out a recent request and rattles off the names of several businesses that have adopted the popular Midnight name.

There's the Midnight Cemetery, Midnight Snack Bar, Midnight Laundry and Midnight Church. There used to be a Midnight School, but it no longer exists, added Robertson, 61, whose mother was postmaster from 1950-70; her father from 1917 to 1950.

Midnight Church is non-denominational, the postmaster added: "Whatever preacher comes to town on Sunday, from whatever faith, is welcome to use the church."

She said that almost everyone who wanders into town hears the popular saying: "Do you realize that on a clear day the sun shines at Midnight in Mississippi?"

The town got its name as a result of a poker game between local cotton growers, she noted. It was the turn of the century and the stakes were high. One player went broke, wagered his farm and lost that, too.

"The winner looked at his watch," recounted Robertson. "It was midnight. The story goes that the victorious farmer announced: 'That's what I'm going to call my new place — Midnight.'"

The town grew around the Midnight farm and adopted its name. Today, 200 people live here.

Midnight is not alone. Mississippi is rife with quaint names. Several counties in the state have Indian names, tongue-twisters, like: Issaquena, Itawamba, Neshoba, Noxubee, Oktibbeha, Pontoloc, Tallahatchie, Tippah, Tishomingo and Yalobusha.

At D'Lo, population 482, Gary Hudspeth, 43, owner of the D'Lo Restaurant and Truck Stop, explained the derivation of the town's name:

"D'Lo is in a gully. And everyone has always called the area that damn low spot in the road. When a post office was located here in the 1930s, townspeople wanted it to be called That Damn Low Spot in the Road.

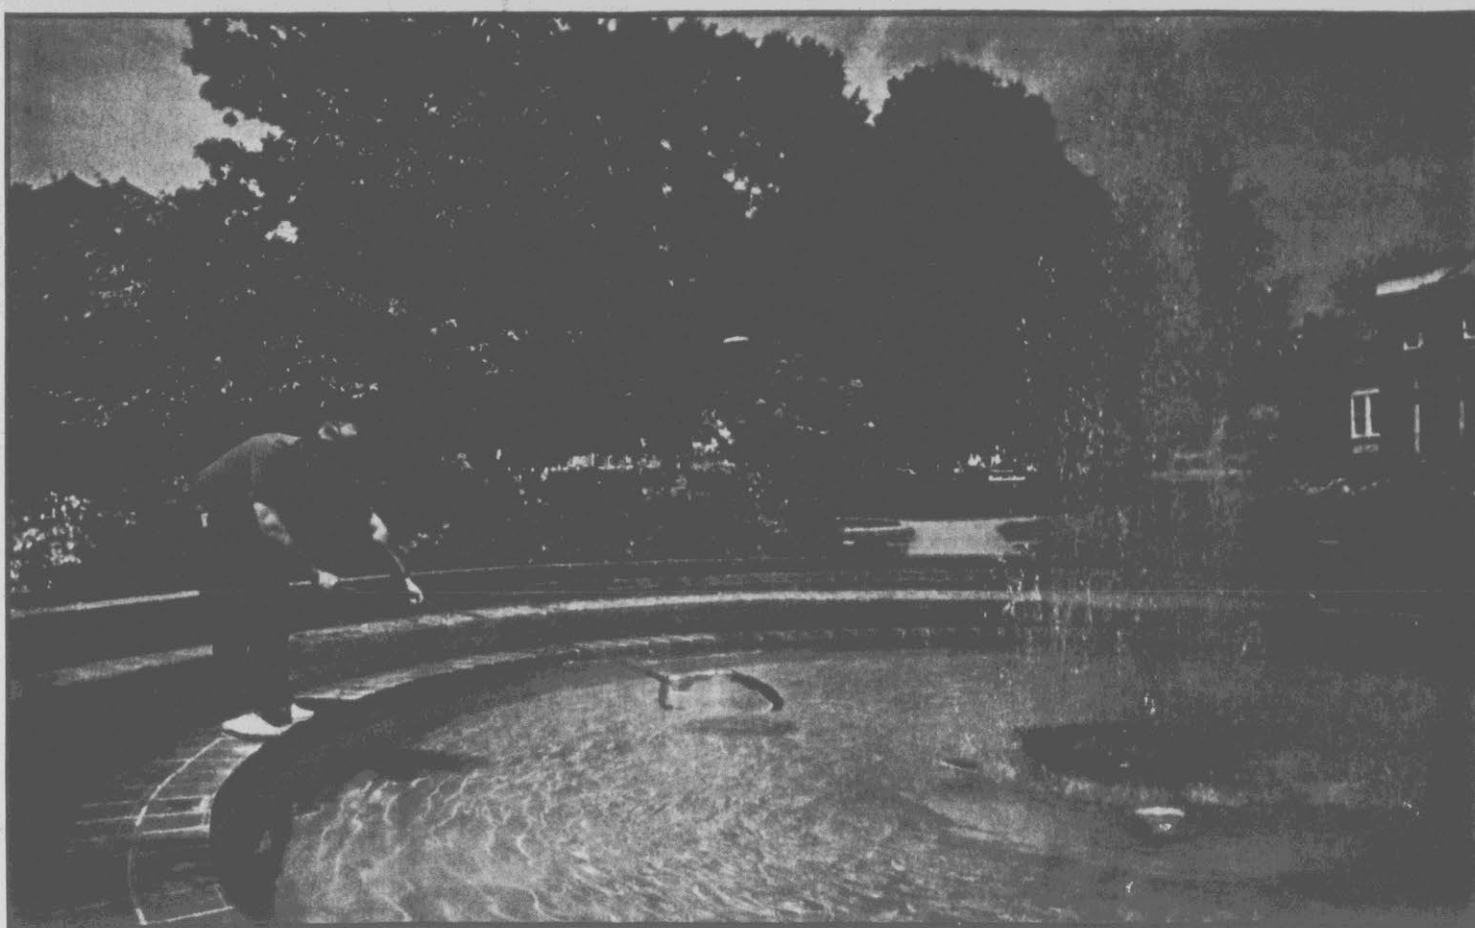

"But the government said it could not use profanity in the name of a post office," he said. "So, it was decided to use the community's nickname, D'Lo."

Paul Holifield, 44, mayor of Soso, Miss., population 525, told how his town got its name.

"Before the turn of the century an old man was the only resident living along a trail that led through this part of the country. He would sit on his front porch and people going through on horseback or horse-drawn carriages would stop and visit him.

"They would always ask how the old fella was doing. His stock answer was 'So so.' When the first settlers moved into the area and time came to name the local post office and town, they decided to call it Soso after that old fella," said Holifield.

Working Inside Pipe Is Just A Snap For 4-foot Tall Construction Worker

By KAREN McCOWAN
The Arizona Republic
TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Clarence Hughes has carved himself a giant market niche with his midget stature.

At 60, he is a construction worker who goes where few others can: inside small water, drainage and irrigation pipes, sealing joints and trouble-shooting.

"I have worked in pipe as small as 16 inches," Hughes said. "That was when they flew me in for a job in North Carolina — they needed a leak fixed."

The 4-foot-tall Tempe resident grins as he acknowledges that his unique services always seem to be in demand.

"Me, I don't have to worry about work," he said. "Word of mouth's always been the best advertising for me."

He has been called in as a trouble-shooter on construction projects in four states but prefers to work close to home.

"I love it," Hughes said. "With construction, every day is different. You get to work in different surroundings all the time. It's not the same old grind every day, so it keeps everything interesting."

When he goes into a pipe, Hughes wears a headlamp similar to those worn by miners. He carries a trowel and wet cement to band the seam where the spigot of one pipe fits into the bell end of another.

Most pipe banders have to stoop to work inside a 60-inch pipe, but Hughes has to strain to reach the entire seam.

"The 60-inch pipe is as big as I can go," he said, adding that he can almost stand up inside a 42-inch pipe but has to stoop to work in a 36-inch.

His specialty, though, is small pipes.

At a road-improvement project in Chandler, he was called on to crawl into an 18-inch irrigation line to repair a leak deep below an intersection of streets.

"It really rumbles in there when the cars go by over you," he said, "but the sound doesn't bother me."

Neither, obviously, do cramped quarters.

"I can turn over in 18-inch pipe," he said.

Comic Cheech Takes His Film 'Born In East L.A.' To Mexico

By SOLL SUSSMAN
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The irreverent Cheech Marin, whose comic "Born in East L.A." movie is about to open here, isn't worried that Mexicans might not get the joke.

"It feels real good," he said. "I think this is the place where it will be the biggest hit of all the Latin American countries, including Los Angeles."

"I expect people will see it and identify with it. I expect they will laugh a lot, and be moved a lot."

The idea started as a song parody of Bruce Springsteen's "Born in the U.S.A." monster hit, then grew into a popular video before becoming the movie written by, directed by and starring Marin.

"I couldn't afford to pay anyone else," he joked.

The story is of a third-generation Mexican-American caught up in an immigration dragnet and deported to Mexico where, Marin says, he is "a fish out of water" who must sneak back across the border. Much of the movie was filmed in Tijuana, Mexico's northwestern city on the border with California.

"Born in East L.A." earned generally good reviews and decent box office results in its release last year in the United States.

Perhaps more important as far as Marin is concerned, it established his reputation for working alone, without longtime partner Tommy Chong in the Cheech and Chong comic duo.

Asked if the split is definite, Marin replied: "Only for the next 150 years."

The movie will be released in Mexican theaters in the second half of May, under the Spanish title "Un Picaro de Los Angeles," or "A Rascal From Los Angeles." The subtitle is "The Craziest of Them All."

Just as the character in his movie, Marin is a third-generation Mexican-American. He has learned Spanish in the past few years in his travels but still has an interpreter standing by for his appearances here.

"At least I don't say, 'I used to want a beer right now,'" he said of his progress. "I like it; it's a beautiful language."

He said there is nothing derogatory at all about Mexico or about the immigration problem in the movie.

"You realize the sadness within the situation," he said in an interview. "I didn't come to Tijuana to make fun of people.

"It's more learning about the people who cross the border. I wanted to humanize the whole story — so they're not just numbers. The United States needs the labor, but they persecute the people. It's unjust."

Mexicans have a notoriously thin-skinned view of foreign humor about them, and that easily could be true for jokes coming from Mexican-Americans as well.

Marin said the only screening so far in Mexico was at a Guadalajara festival, and it went over well.

He also said the movie was a hit at the Latin American film festival in Havana late last year and has been shown as well in Venezuela, the Dominican Republic and parts of Central America.

"So if it's not a big hit in Mexico, there's something wrong with Mexico," he said with a big laugh.

The movie was released at about the same time as the huge success of Luis Valdez's "La Bamba" brought attention to the Hispanic market in the United States.

ABC's 'Onassis' Turns Into Pulp

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — At one point in ABC's "The Richest Man in the World: The Story of Aristotle Onassis," Winston Churchill asks Ari how he thinks history will remember him.

Onassis demurs, but he could have predicted that he would be immortalized in lame, exploitative made-for-TV movies to run in sweeps months on American networks. This latest airs Sunday and Monday.

What starts as inconsequential pulp basically stays that way, although, when Raul Julia takes over the title role late in the first half, it threatens to become an interesting character study of a powerful man who knew exactly what he wanted and just couldn't quite get it.

This is a sympathetic portrait of Onassis, as well as Maria Callas, played by Jane Seymour. Jackie (Francesca Annis) and the rest of the Kennedy clan come off as a bunch of money-grubbing ugly Americans.

The movie, based on the best-selling biography "Ari," by Peter Evans, isn't the first TV treatment of the Greek shipping magnate's life.

Anthony Quinn portrayed a character obviously based on Onassis in the TV movie "The Greek Tycoon" several years ago. This time, he plays Onassis' father, a thankless role that has him alternately fuming and spouting fortune-cookie proverbs. Quinn's son, Lorenzo, incidentally, plays Onassis' son, Alexander.

Elias Koteas is adequate as the young Ari, though his role lasts too long, and he doesn't in the least resemble Julia, whose droopy eyelids and languid sensuality are perfect for playing Onassis, who in real life wasn't exactly a matinee idol.

The movie begins with Onassis as a youth in Turkey where his father was a tobacco dealer. When the Turks begin rounding up Greeks, attractive young Aristo avoids being sent to a labor camp by having an affair with a Turkish colonel, no doubt with the words of his father — "A wise man does what is necessary" — ringing in his ears.

Circus Lover Builds His Own Big Top

By PHYLLIS GUTH
The Allentown Morning Call
ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — "I always loved the circus when I was growing up," David Davies said.
 If not for the Depression and the fact he was needed at home, the Allentown resident said he would have run away as a youngster to join the big top.
 For the past 50 years, Davies, an American Telephone & Telegraph retiree, has channeled his enthusiasm for the circus into building scale models of the greatest show on earth.
 He has a 5-by-15-foot layout in a room on the third floor of his home. In his basement, another model occupies a platform measuring 6 by 26 feet.
 Davies also has a "circus-iana room" filled with circus lithographs and photographs, including one of him astride an elephant and another in clown costume. Standing in one corner is a scale model of a circus baggage wagon Davies built on a coaster wagon base.

 A cabinet holds circus-related items such as music boxes with carousel animals on them, statues of elephants, a figurine based on a Norman Rockwell print of an elephant with two youngsters riding on its back, miniature circus wagons and a commemorative plate and mug.
 Some photographs and lithographs are from the Great Circus Parade held annually in Milwaukee, which Davies has attended for the past 14 years.
 Davies said it is not uncommon for him to travel 100 miles to see a performance. He said he cherishes the many friends he's made over the years through his hobby.

 Another room holds more displays and a collection of circus programs. The circus-theme wallpaper is almost covered over with circus lithographs, posters and photographs.
 "I am Mr. Circus on the East Coast," Davies said.
 Davies is a member of the James A. Bailey Ring No. 35, the Lehigh Valley branch of Circus Model Builders International. His wife, Grace, while not a model builder, accompanies him to meetings and, at one time, played the calliope for the group's gatherings.
 Davies said he completed the quarter-inch scale model 25 years ago. Over a 12-year period, he made everything on it except the figures of people and animals.

 Many wagons were built from kits that required him to cut the wood, fit the parts and drill dozens of tiny holes for the needle-thin bars on the cages. Each wagon took about two to four weeks to complete.
 The circus includes 65 wagons, blacksmith and wheel shops, a big top with three rings of performers, a side show, animal pens, a circus parade, a midway and dressing and dining tents.
 The first thing one sees upon entering the Davies basement is a clown alley containing costumes, baggage trunk, folding chair, pedestal and, next to it, a mechanical seal balancing a ball on its nose.
 Beyond that is a 1-inch-scale circus that is complete down to the chains anchoring the 22 elephants to stakes and two giraffe wagons whose open doors reveal the protective padding on the inside.

 All 20 wagons — replicas of old-time ones in the Baraboo, Wis., Circus World Museum — were built from scratch. Each took Davies six to eight months to complete, he said as he lifted up a wagon to show the intricate structure of the undercarriage.
 The miniature layout even has feed bags, brooms, buckets and mops standing outside several cages, refreshment and program stands and a ticket seller.
 "It's just like the real thing, in miniature," he said.
 The craftsman chose not to cover the poles and rigging with canvas so viewers can see it better.

who calls himself the "so-so mayor of Soso."
 Like Mississippi counties, many small towns in the state have Indian names, such as Eastabuchie, Pelahatchie, Pascagoula, Shubuta, Shuqualak, Toccoola, Toomsoba and Tougaloo.
 "Ever since country singer Ray Stevens popularized the song about the day the squirrel got loose in the first self-righteous church and went berserk in the sleepy little town of Pascagoula, people have been coming here," said Pascagoula Police Lt. Wayne McCarthy.
 "We do have a lot of squirrels," he added, "and it seems like there's a church on almost every corner in Pascagoula."
 Itta Bena, the Chickasaw term for home in the woods, is another town with a catchy Indian name. "You should hear how people mispronounce it," laughed Itta Bena Assistant Police Chief William Lacy, 47. Locals call themselves Itty Beany's, he said.
 Television programs like "Alice" and "Mama's Family" have picked up on Yazoo City, which is named after a fierce warlike Indian tribe that mysteriously vanished in the 1600s. Some theorize that Yazoo derives from the flute-like sound of wind passing through scalps which were kept on poles in Yazoo Indian villages.
 Kenneth Bediako Poku Fofie of Esaase Nia Dunkwa On-Offin in Ghana, West Africa, wrote to say he'd named his farm after Yazoo.
 Coming from such a town can really get a conversation rolling, said Katy Clower, 17, Yazoo City High School junior and daughter of Grand Ole Opry humorist Jerry Clower. Upon learning where she's from, people invariably ask: "Is there really such a place or did you make that up?"

Reasoner Will Receive Award

LOS ANGELES (AP)— Harry Reasoner, a founding editor on CBS' "60 Minutes" is this year's recipient of Marist College's Lowell Thomas Award.
 The award was instituted in 1983 to honor life-time achievements by leaders in broadcast journalism. Thomas, a pioneer broadcaster, is an honorary alumnus of the Poughkeepsie, N.Y., college. Previous recipients include Reasoner's colleagues Walter Cronkite, Douglas Edwards, Howard K. Smith and David Brinkley.
 Reasoner will receive the award at a luncheon Thursday presided over by Kathleen Sullivan, co-host of "CBS This Morning." The award is to be presented by former CBS President Frank Stanton and Marist President Dennis J. Murray. "60 Minutes" is in its 20th season.

DEADLY WAVES
WASHINGTON (AP) — Heat waves do far more damage than people realize.
 The National Weather Service estimates that heat waves kill between 200 and 400 people in an average year. By contrast, tornadoes and hurricanes kill fewer than 150 combined. What's more, the actual number of deaths caused by sudden hot spells is probably even higher than figures show, since the weather service only counts people who died from heat exhaustion and heat stroke — not the heart attacks and other fatalities that rise with the heat.
 In many ways, heat waves are also harder to deal with than other forms of nature's fury. Even if weather experts could predict heat waves, they'd have little to tell the public, except to hunker down, stay cool and wait.

N.C. Symphony

By Faith Jacobs

Monday I went to the symphony orchestra. The director showed us some of the instruments. He was nice. My favorite instrument was the flute. The orchestra played the songs, "Joy to the World" and "The Ballad of Tom Dooley". Everyone sang these songs. At the orchestra, I learned a lot about instruments. I wish I could get out of school and see the orchestra again.

My Goldfish

By Amanda Wynne

When I got my goldfish, I was happy. I feed my fish everyday. My fish are little. My sister likes them, too. When my mother went to the hospital in Rocky Mount, my dad came back with a bag with my fish in it. I have an orange and gray fish. My fish live in a glass jar. They have to swim a lot to get to the top of the jar. My fish eat fish food. I have a boy and a girl fish. Fish are nice to have.

N.C. Symphony

By Jennifer Waguespack

My class went to the symphony orchestra. We sang "Joy To The World" and "The Ballad of Tom Dooley".

The director showed us some of the instruments. There are four kinds of instrument groups. Some of them are

My Trip To City Hall

By Dewayne Forbes

We visited our city hall recently. A lady named Mrs. Worthington is our city clerk. She talked to us about the history of Greenville. We found out that Greenville was named after a General Greene. It had two railroads and no cars. Greenville is 214 years old. Our city seal has two pictures which are to stand for our good schools and tobacco. We learned that our city has the largest tobacco warehouses of anywhere in the world. We are very proud of our city. We appreciate the people like Mrs. Worthington who help us learn about our great city.

Rain Is Falling

By Angela Gillikin

On a rainy day...
I hear rain drops,
And the splashing of puddles,
The crackling of thunder,
Wind howling.
I feel oh, so gloomy,

And tired,
Oh, how the rain can do such things to me,
For it to make me feel this way,
I might be like this every day.

What Is Spring Fever?

By Michael Sermons

During the spring lots of things happen. The baby animals are born. The flowers bloom and trees start to bud. The grass starts to turn green. People start to

Tar Heel Trivia

Penelope Barker

Penelope Barker helped to lead 50 other ladies in one of the earliest protests against royal colonial rule by England. On October 25, 1774, a group of 51 women met at the home of Elizabeth King in Edenton to vow not to purchase tea or to wear English made clothing. Penelope Barker was one of the leaders of this astonishing event.

A native of Edenton, Penelope Barker had been widowed the first time by the age of 19 and was the caretaker of five children—two of her own and three of her dead sister. She married a second time and within four years she was again a widow. In 1757 she married a lawyer Thomas Barker who later went to England to serve as a colonial agent for North Carolina. Because of the revolution against the mother country, Barker was forced to remain in England for seventeen years before he returned to Edenton.

ALWAYS DELICIOUS — Vegetable Bean Barley Soup, an old-time favorite that always pleases the family, gets a time-saving boost with pork and beans and condensed chicken broth.

Nothing Beats Home For Old-Time Cooking

Some say the return of home cooking doesn't have as much to do with the food itself as it does with the memories of bygone days — a time when meals were enjoyed with the entire family and not with the six o'clock news.

Another theory is that Americans are tired of nouvelle cuisine and experimenting with exotic foodstuffs, but instead seek traditional hearty nourishing meals.

Still others believe the comeback has to do with the ambiance created while the meals are actually cooking: warm rooms filled with conversation and that wonderful aroma. Ahh the aroma! Remember stepping through the front door, taking one whiff, and knowing exactly what was for dinner? Funny, it always seemed to be just what you were in the mood for.

Vegetable soup is one of those classics that seems to have been around since the beginning of time, and it seems as if everyone can relate to it.

Here's a recipe for Vegetable Bean Barley Soup that gets a time-saving boost from quality convenience foods like pork and beans and condensed chicken broth. The addition of carrots, barley and zucchini makes this soup so chock-full of fiber, even mother would be proud. Try this delicious and satisfying soup on a cold, hectic day when you need a little homespun comfort.

VEGETABLE BEAN BARLEY SOUP

1/2 cup chopped onion
1 medium clove garlic, minced
1/2 teaspoon dried basil leaves, crushed
2 cans (10 3/4 ounces each) condensed chicken broth
1 soup can water
1 can (about 16 ounces) tomatoes, undrained, chopped
1/2 cup barley
1 can (16 ounces) pork and beans

in tomato sauce
2 small zucchini, sliced
1 cup chopped carrots
1 teaspoon cider vinegar

In 3-quart saucepan over medium heat, in hot oil, cook onion with garlic and basil until onion is tender. Add chicken broth, water, tomatoes and barley. Reduce heat to low; cover; simmer 25 minutes. Stir in beans, zucchini and carrots. Cover; simmer 15 minutes more, stirring occasionally. Stir in vinegar. Makes 8 cups or 6 servings. There are 244 calories per serving and 6 grams per dietary fiber per serving.

Spring's Glamor Vegetable Takes The Center Stage

By Nina Killham
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

It is said that God created asparagus because he couldn't bear to watch us stew any more winter vegetables. Stew these bright young things, and you'll end up with a side dish that tastes more like wet tissue paper. In fact, stew these tender morsels and He just might take them back.

A member of the aristocratic lily family, asparagus is native to Europe, where it still grows wild in certain fields in France. Were they not harvested, those little green buds would grow into fernlike sprays with bright red berries.

Here in the United States, however, California is our main producer, yielding more than 50 percent of the 235 million pounds of asparagus grown last year. Washington state and Michigan are Nos. 2 and 3 respectively.

In this country, asparagus for the most part is grown from tissue culture, a process by which a plant is raised from a single cell. The wild asparagus adorning fancy restaurant menus is either imported from France or grew from wayward seeds that blew over the fence from cultured-asparagus territory.

White asparagus, usually found in France, is planted in trenches and covered with mulch as the shoots emerge, thus protecting them from the green-tinting sunlight.

Asparagus is so pampered it rarely shares the limelight. It is often bestowed instead with a whole course to itself. So if you're ransacking cookbooks for ideas aside from the usual hollandaise or mousseline sauce, you might try 1 pound of asparagus a la:

Maltaise — Substitute orange juice for water and lemon juice in hollandaise sauce.

Polonaise — Chop 2 hard-cooked eggs, combine with 2 tablespoons chopped parsley and sprinkle over asparagus. Melt 6 tablespoons butter and saute 1/4 cup bread crumbs until browned, pour over warm asparagus.

Flemish — Mash 2 hard-cooked egg yolks and mix into 1/2 cup melted butter with 2 teaspoons lemon juice, salt and pepper. Pour over warm asparagus and top with finely chopped egg whites.

Oriental — Crush together 1 clove garlic, 1 nickel-size piece of fresh ginger and a pinch of salt. Combine with 1/2 teaspoon sugar, 2 tablespoons soy sauce, 1/2 teaspoon sesame oil, 1 tablespoon white wine vinegar, freshly ground pepper and 1 tablespoon chopped scallions.

Retired Chef Remembers Favorite Foods Of White House Residents

By Irene Kraft
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The thought of having the first family to dinner would be enough to send most folks into a frenzy. Just what do you serve the president of the United States?

Few people would know better than Henry Haller. Prior to his retirement last year, he prepared not just dinners for presidents, but breakfasts, lunches and snacks. For nearly 21 years he was executive chef at the White House.

A talented but unpretentious man, Haller is quick to admit that he, too, asked himself the same question when Lady Bird Johnson appointed him to his new position back in January 1966.

"When I arrived at the White House, I had no idea how meals should look or how they should be presented," Haller said. He had never seen a White House menu and the previous chef, Rene Verdon, had left him no guidelines.

But, he obviously found the magic formula. He maintained his prestigious role through four additional administrations, serving five successive presidents and their families.

Now that he is retired, there is little doubt that Haller will miss some of the pomp and circumstance to which he could not help but grow accustomed. During those 21 years, he served more than 250 state dinners, entertaining celebrities and dignitaries from around the world.

But, the bright and personable chef says, his most treasured memories are not of the White House guests but, instead, of the residents — those five special families he saw through birthdays, weddings, holidays and even tragedies.

"While state dinners and banquets required a great deal of my time, attention and professional expertise, it was the happiness of the first family which mattered the most to me personally," Haller told members of the press at a recent food conference in Kansas City. His appearance was one stop on a tour to promote his recently published book, "The White House Family Cookbook" (Random House; $19.95).

Over the years, Haller collected countless memories of life behind the scenes in the presidential mansion, not to mention hundreds of recipes. His new book, a collection of recipes as well as accounts of numerous events in the lives of the five first families he served, is the first White House cookbook to be published since 1887.

People like to think each meal served in the White House is elaborate, but nothing could be farther from the truth, Haller said. The first families he served ate very much the same foods as other American families and each had its own down-to-earth favorites.

Applesauce Is In Style For Spring

It's remarkable how seasons affect our clothing, our moods, and, yes, even the foods we eat. Spring is the time to say goodbye to hearty stews, red sauces and hot soups. Both the spring palette and palate are lighter and more delicate. And, as the weather warms, thoughts turn toward reducing calories, too. It's a good season for fresh sauces, and applesauce is one of those old standbys that is being rediscovered because of its convenience, taste and wholesomeness.

Applesauce can be as elegant as any mousse in glass or crystalware, garnished with a parsley sprig, cinnamon, or even a budding spring flower. Serve applesauce either at room temperature or chilled this time of year. Applesauce makes a wonderful dipping sauce for crisp asparagus or petite carrots. And, this versatile sauce also serves as a delicious substitute for butter or mayonnaise when used on grilled cheese or turkey sandwiches.

Just as herbed and flavored butters are fashionable these days, so too is applesauce, flavored with strawberry or raspberry puree, blueberries, raisins or brown sugar.

According to the International Apple Institute, there are parts of the country where pancakes are traditionally doused with a mixture of applesauce and maple syrup. And places where applesauce is commonly used as the base for chicken barbecue sauce (just add lemon juice and tomato sauce and brush on).

Spring is also a time for fitness and health, and applesauce has qualities we should all live by. With only 80 calories (no sugar added) to the cup, applesauce packs a nutritional punch as a good source of vitamins, minerals and pectin, a dietary fiber which may actually reduce cholesterol levels. In fact, applesauce has no fat or cholesterol and is a food that is naturally low in sodium.

Recently, medical researchers have also been citing applesauce as an excellent source of Boron, an essential nutrient that may play a role in helping the body better use

What a breath of fresh air, to find such a versatile and good-tasting food that is also so good for you.

Dear Readers: As you read "In the Area" in the Reflector, you'll notice many support groups that meet monthly. These groups help folks with heart disease, diabetes, Alzheimers or other diseases. People gather to share their experiences living with a disease or answer questions. Often the meetings have a short informational program. From time to time, I and other local nutritionists are asked to share practical information about food, shopping and labeling, eating out or other aspects of nutrition. Several nutritionists from the School of Medicine will join the local diabetes support group Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Gaskins Leslie Center behind the hospital. Sue Daughtry (medicine), Nancy Gray (pediatrics) and myself will talk about food shopping, menu planning and eating out for diabetics and their families. Everyone with an interest in diabetes is welcome to attend. Call 1-800-682-9692 for more information. The program is sponsored by the Pitt County American Diabetes Association.

Earlier this spring, I wrote about the diabetes alert day. Several of you have asked me to run the test. The purpose was to help identify the millions of Americans who are at risk for diabetes and don't know it. Here is the test for you to take.

1) I have experienced: excessive thirst, frequent urination, unexplained weight loss and blurry vision. Add 20 for each yes answer. Add 10 for a yes answer to experiencing extreme fatigue.

2) I am over 40. Add 10 for a yes answer.

3) I am overweight. Add 20 for a yes answer.

4) I had a baby over 9 pounds. Add 20 for a yes answer.

5) I am Native American, Hispanic or black. Add 10 for a yes answer.

6) I have a parent with diabetes. Add 10 for a yes answer.

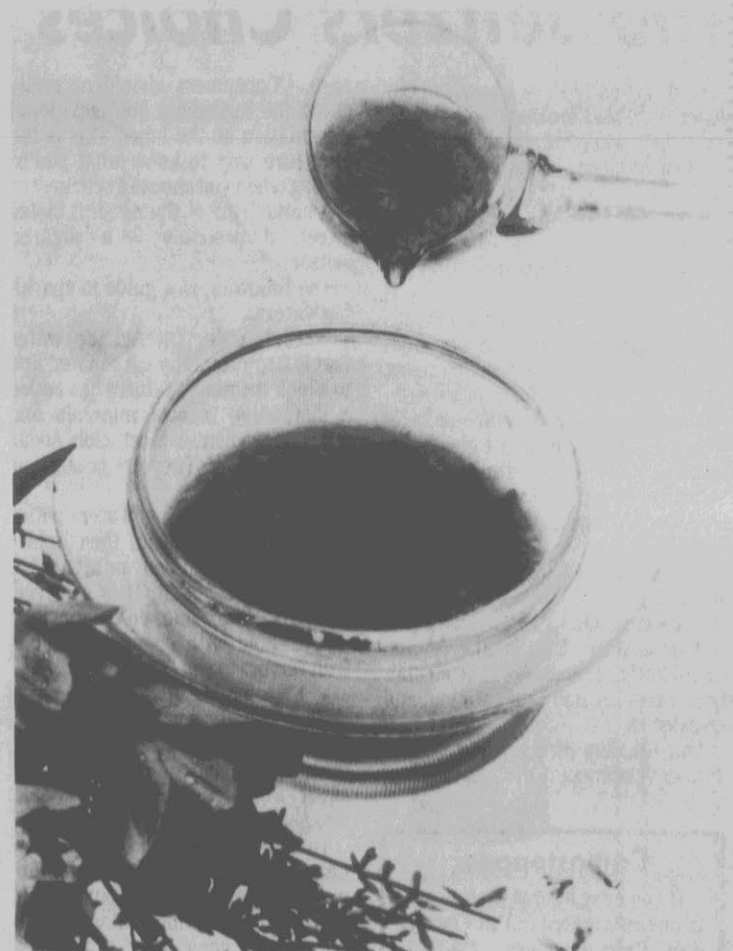

7) I have an identical twin with diabetes. Add 30 for a yes answer.

8) I have a brother or sister with diabetes. Add 20 for a yes answer.

If your score is more than 50 points, you may be at high risk for diabetes and should talk to your doctor. If your score is below 50, you are probably at low risk for diabetes.

Everyone needs to know about diabetes. We have a high incidence of diabetes in eastern North Carolina. Many people don't know they are at risk. If you are diabetic and get prompt and proper treatment, you can avoid complications of kidney disease, heart disease and blindness.

Chef Recalls Favorite Dishes Of Some White House Residents

For the Carters, it was a number of Southern dishes, particularly fried chicken. When her family arrived at the White House, Mrs. Carter was determined that their lives would remain as unchanged as possible, Haller said. To ensure that her family would continue enjoying their favorites when they moved into the White House, she went into the kitchen and personally gave Haller and his staff a lesson on preparing Southern fried chicken the way her husband liked it.

Mrs. Carter insisted on a simple lifestyle and kept a firm grip on the family food budget, setting a national example of limiting household expenses and trimming unnecessary costs. Although the State Department picks up the tab for food expenditures for official dinners, the first family is responsible for its own meals and snacks, Haller explained.

To cut expenses and give the staff some time off, the Carters prepared their own dinners on Sunday nights — usually sandwiches or leftovers.

Even the Nixons, who were associated with "haute cuisine," preferred less sophisticated meals on a day-to-day basis.

When they first arrived at the White House, Haller said he consistently prepared very elaborate menus. But after a few weeks, President Nixon went into the kitchen and told him, "Chef, cut the first course. We're getting too much good food." A few days later, he was asked to cut the dessert. From then on, first and last courses were served only when guests were present.

And, although French cuisine prevailed at state dinners, the Nixons, too, preferred simple family meals. In fact, the president's favorite was his wife's meat loaf, which was served at least once a month.

"The food I served to the first families at the White House was not very different from what most people eat for dinner," Haller said. Pizza, for example, is enjoyed on occasion by the Reagans. And, like many of his fellow Americans, the president prefers his with "no anchovies, please," Haller said.

Maintaining his job through five administrations undoubtedly required a certain amount of flexibility. The menus from one first family to the next were as different as the presidents themselves. From a Texas rancher to a Hollywood star, Haller met the challenge of pleasing them all.

There is little doubt that Haller has left an imprint of his own. As President Nixon told him before breakfast on his final day in office, "Chef, I have dined all over the world, but your food is the best."

One does not have to live in the White House to dine like a first family, Haller said. Here is a sampling of some first family favorites.

JOHNSON'S TEXAS-STYLE BARBECUED RIBS

6 to 10 pounds lean pork ribs
3 tablespoons dry mustard
1 cup white wine
3/4 cups barbecue sauce
Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Boil ribs in a large pot of salted water for 5 minutes; drain well. Arrange in a large baking pan. Mix mustard with wine and coat ribs with the mixture, using a pastry brush. Brush ribs with barbecue sauce. Bake on middle oven shelf, turning often and brushing with additional sauce for 45 minutes to 1 hour. Pork is done when meat pulls easily from ribs. Serve with hot beans and cold beer.

BARBECUE SAUCE

2 teaspoons butter
1 large onion, chopped
1 green bell pepper, chopped
2 garlic cloves, chopped
1 cup cider vinegar

The Seltzers Choices

NEW YORK (AP) — If you find tap water dull, and ordinary soft drinks too sweet, you're probably among a growing number of consumers opting for seltzer or sparkling water.

However, not all seltzers and sparkling waters are the same. There are a lot of choices. How do you decide?

John Fayard, senior brand manager of Canada Dry, says, "Most people choose to drink seltzer sparkling waters as a healthy form of refreshment and because they are calorie-free. People tend to equate clear with healthy. But even among clear seltzers, there are important differences in ingredients and caloric content."

To begin, just exactly what is seltzer?

According to Fayard, regular seltzer is water that is filtered and then lightly carbonated. It is virtually salt-free, contains no caffeine, and no calories.

Ann Rikleen, director of research and development for Canada Dry,

1/4 cup brown sugar
1 cup chili sauce
2 cups ketchup
1/4 cup Worcestershire sauce
1 bay leaf
12 black peppercorns
Fresh parsley sprig
In a sauce pan, melt butter; saute chopped vegetables until slightly browned. Transfer to a large saucepan and mix in remaining ingredients. Bring to a boil and simmer for 1 hour. Strain. Makes 1 quart.

NIXONS' FAMILY-STYLE MEAT LOAF

2 tablespoons butter
1 cup finely chopped onions
2 garlic cloves, minced
3 slices white bread
1 cup milk
2 pounds lean ground beef
2 eggs, lightly beaten
1 tablespoon salt
4 twists freshly ground black pepper

1 tablespoon chopped fresh parsley
1/2 teaspoon dried thyme
1/2 teaspoon dried marjoram
2 tablespoons tomato puree
2 tablespoons bread crumbs
Grease a 13- by 9-inch baking pan. Melt butter in a saute pan, add onions and garlic and saute until just golden (Do not brown). Let cool. Dice bread and soak in milk. In a large mixing bowl, mix beef with sauteed vegetables and bread pieces. Add eggs, salt, pepper, parsley, thyme and marjoram, and mix by hand in a circular motion. Turn into the prepared pan and pat into a loaf shape, leaving at least 1 inch of space around the edges to allow fat to run off. Brush top with tomato puree and sprinkle with bread crumbs. Refrigerate for 1 hour to allow the flavors to penetrate and to firm up the loaf.

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Bake on lower shelf of preheated oven for 1 hour, or until meat is cooked through. Pour off the accumulated fat several times while baking and after meat is full cooked. Let stand on wire rack for 5 minutes before slicing.

MRS. FORD'S HOMEMADE TOASTING BREAD

1/2 cup white stone-ground cornmeal
2 teaspoons salt
1 tablespoon sugar
1/4 cup shortening
1 package active dry yeast
1/4 cup warm water
6 to 6 1/2 cups sifted bread flour, preferably a high-protein, high-gluten variety

Heat 1 cup milk. Combine with cornmeal in a large mixing bowl. Cover the bowl and let rest overnight in a warm place. In a small saucepan, heat remaining 1 cup milk over medium heat until hot. Add to the cornmeal mixture with salt, sugar and shortening. Mix yeast with warm water; stir into cornmeal mixture, using a wire whisk. Add flour 1 cup at a time, working first with a spoon, then by hand to achieve a smooth, elastic dough (This will take about 5 minutes). Turn out onto a lightly floured board. Knead dough by hand, working outside edges in, for 5 minutes, in order to incorporate air into the dough. Return to the bowl. Cover the bowl with a hot damp cloth and place in a warm spot for about 2 hours, or until doubled in bulk.

Turn out onto floured board; knead again, adding enough flour to make a smooth dough that does not stick to the board. Use a sharp knife to divide dough into 2 equal loaves, and place each in a greased 9- by 5-inch loaf pan. Cover with a hot damp cloth and let rise for 45 minutes, or until dough rises to a level even with the rims of the pans.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Brush tops of loaves lightly with water. Use a long thin knife to slit tops down the middle; make each slit 1/4-inch deep. Bake on lower shelf of preheated oven for 40 minutes, or until golden brown and firm to the touch. Turn loaves out onto wire racks; let cool completely before slicing. This bread tastes best toasted, and freezes well when wrapped tightly in plastic. Makes 2 loaves.

JIMMY CARTER'S SOUTHERN FRIED CHICKEN

3 1/2-pound frying chickens
2 cups flour
2 tablespoons white cornmeal
2 tablespoons salt
2 teaspoons freshly ground white pepper
In a large, well-seasoned cast-iron skillet, heat shortening to 375 degrees. Wash chickens and dry well, using a kitchen towel. Cut each into 8 serving pieces. In a large bowl, combine flour with cornmeal, salt and pepper; dredge chicken and set on paper towels. Fry chicken in hot oil, turning to brown evenly on all sides (This will take from 10-12 minutes; white meat will cook faster than dark meat). As each piece becomes golden brown and tender, transfer to paper towels to drain. Keep chicken hot until serving in a preheated 350 degree oven: Set well-drained pieces on an ovenproof serving platter on middle shelf of oven, with the door slightly ajar. For cold fried chicken, allow to cool, then wrap tightly and refrigerate overnight. Serves 6 to 8.

MRS. REAGAN'S COLD CURRY SOUP

4 tablespoons butter
1 cup chopped onions
4 garlic cloves, chopped
1/2 cup chopped celery
1/2 cup chopped carrots
4 tablespoons curry powder
4 tablespoons flour
6 cups hot chicken stock
2 tablespoons chutney
3/4 cup heavy cream
3/4 cup milk
1 cup peeled, finely diced tart green apples

In a 3-quart saucepan, melt butter over medium heat, add onions and saute for 3 minutes. Do not brown. Add garlic, celery and carrots; saute for 3 minutes more. Stir in curry powder and flour. Slowly pour in hot stock, stirring constantly with a wooden spoon. Bring soup to a boil, stirring constantly. Add chopped chutney. Reduce heat. Set cover slightly ajar and let soup simmer over medium heat for 30 minutes, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat and let cool. Transfer soup to a blender or food processor; puree for 2 minutes, until very smooth. Transfer soup to a clean saucepan and bring to a boil over medium-high heat. Stir in cream and milk. Thin to desired consistency with additional milk, if necessary. Transfer soup to a tureen. Refrigerate for at least 4 hours, until very cold. Just before serving, add diced apples. Makes 2 quarts.

says, "Consumers should carefully check the ingredient and nutritional information on the label. This is the only sure way to know what you're buying when you choose a seltzer."

The following is a guide to sparkling waters:

— Club Soda: filtered tap water that is commercially carbonated and to which the manufacturer has added a distinctive mix of minerals and other ingredients. Most club sodas contain sodium. They are popular as a mixer.

— Seltzer-Sparkling Water: water that has been filtered, then lightly carbonated, with no minerals or mineral salts added. It is salt-free, contains no caffeine, no calories and is available with or without added fruit flavor.

— Sweetened Seltzer: carbonated water, usually clear in color, artificially sweetened with fructose, a fruit sugar, instead of cane or beet sugar. Contains the same 70-90 calories per 6-ounce serving as colas.

To help sort through the confusion, Canada Dry has developed an informative brochure: "To Your Health: A Guide to Sparkling Water." To obtain a free copy, send a stamped, self-addressed business-size envelope to: Canada Dry Sparkling Waters Brochure, 1600 Broadway-Suite 501, New York, NY 10019.

Asparagus, Spring's Glamor Vegetable, Takes Center Stage

Garlic Mayonnaise with Pine Nuts
— Boil 2 large unpeeled garlic cloves for 10 minutes. Peel and mash. Whisk together 1 large egg yolk, 1 teaspoon mustard, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon white-wine vinegar and pepper to taste and heat mixture over boiling water for 2 to 3 minutes or until it thickens. Add 1/4 cup olive oil, drop by drop, whisking constantly and 2 teaspoons white-wine vinegar and another 1/4 cup olive oil in a stream. Whisk in garlic and 1 to 2 tablespoons warm water to thin the mayonnaise to desired consistency. Spoon mayonnaise over asparagus and sprinkle with pine nuts.

When buying asparagus, it goes without saying that it's best to eat it right away. But life isn't always predictable, so when the unexpected barges in, just snip off the bottom ends of the asparagus and store them upright in water — just like flowers — and place them in the refrigerator. Also when selecting asparagus, avoid those with wet tips — a sign that they are too old.

Unless the asparagus is harvested quite young, you probably will want to peel the tough skin before cooking. To prepare for cooking, snap off tough stem ends, wash well, remove scales, and if skins seem coarse, peel with a sharp knife.

You can steam or poach asparagus. In fact, you can even microwave it. But be sure to position the larger ends toward the outside of the dish, as they take slightly longer to cook. One pound peeled asparagus placed in a covered dish with 1/4 cup water takes 8 minutes to cook until tender.

For those who like numbers, remember that 1 pound of medium asparagus equals about 14 spears — 9 to 10 inches long; 1 pound equals about 3 cups cut up; and serving 1/2 to 3/4 pound per person will make your guests very happy.

PASTA WITH ASPARAGUS AND HAM
(4 to 6 servings)
1 pound asparagus
6 tablespoons butter
1/2 cup finely sliced ham
1/2 cup finely sliced mushrooms
1 pound fettuccine or linguini
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 clove garlic, minced
2 cups light cream
3/4 cup freshly grated parmesan cheese
2 egg yolks, beaten
Salt and freshly ground pepper
Chopped chives

Peel and roll-cut asparagus into 1- to 1 1/2-inch pieces. Melt 2 tablespoons butter in a saute pan and lightly saute the ham and mushrooms; set aside. Boil a large pot of salted water and blanch the asparagus until just cooked through, 4 to 5 minutes or less. Scoop out the asparagus and save the water. Add more water, if necessary, and cook the pasta until al dente; drain.

In a large saute pan, heat 4 tablespoons butter and the olive oil. Add garlic, cook of 1 minute, and add the pasta; toss to coat with butter and oil. Stir in the cream and cheese, and cook for 1 to 2 minutes until slightly thickened. If you like, lower heat, stir in the eggs, and toss together for 1 minute to set egg and thicken the sauce. Add asparagus, ham, and mushrooms; cook for a moment to heat through. Season to taste with salt and pepper; garnish with chives.

— "The Victory Garden Cookbook," by Marian Morash (Alfred A. Knopf, 1982)

ASPARAGUS GUACAMOLE
(Makes 1 1/2 cups)
1 pound medium-thick fresh asparagus, peeled
2 tablespoons fresh lemon or lime juice
2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
2 tablespoons chopped sweet red pepper

1 tablespoon minced fresh green chili to taste
1 tablespoon minced fresh coriander leaves
Cayenne pepper and salt to taste
Wash asparagus, snap off the ends, and simmer in water until very tender, about 20 minutes. Drain and allow to cool. Cut off the tips and reserve them.

Cut the spears into half-inch pieces and process to a smooth puree in a blender or food processor. Fold in remaining ingredients. Either fold in the tips or use them to garnish the dip.

ASPARAGUS AND MORELS IN MUSHROOM BEURRE BLANC
(4 servings)
1 ounce dried morels
1 cup boiling water
1 1/2 pounds pencil-slim asparagus
10 tablespoons sweet butter, in small pats
Salt to taste
1 tablespoon white-wine vinegar
2 tablespoons dry white wine
Freshly ground black pepper
1 tablespoon chopped fresh chervil

Place morels in a dish, cover with the water, and set aside to soak for 1 hour. Drain, pat dry, and spread on paper towels. Boil the soaking liquid in a small saucepan until it is reduced to about 2 tablespoons and set aside.

Snap off the ends of the asparagus where they naturally break. Slant-cut the asparagus in 1 1/2-inch lengths.

Heat 2 tablespoons of the butter in a large skillet or a wok. Add the asparagus, sprinkle with salt, and stir-fry for about 4 minutes. Add the morels and stir-fry until the asparagus are fairly tender, another 4 to 5 minutes. Divide the asparagus and morels among four salad-size plates and keep warm.

Add vinegar and wine to the mushroom liquid and cook briefly to reduce to 2 tablespoons. Begin to whisk in the remaining 8 tablespoons butter, about a tablespoon at a time, over very low heat, until the sauce has thickened and is creamy. Season with pepper, pour over the asparagus and morels, and dust with chervil. Serve at once.

— "Florence Fabricant's Pleasures of the Table," (Harry N. Abrams, Inc. 1986)

CRAB AND ASPARAGUS DIJON-NAISE
(Makes about 24 appetizer-size bites)
2 1/4 teaspoons vegetable oil
2 1/4 teaspoons fresh lemon juice
1 teaspoon fresh minced tarragon or 1/4 teaspoon dried tarragon
1 1/4 teaspoons minced shallots
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 pound fresh crab meat, cooked and shredded

For the Dijon Sauce:
2 egg yolks, room temperature
1 tablespoon rice-wine vinegar
2 teaspoons fresh lemon juice
5 teaspoons Dijon mustard
1/2 teaspoon sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
Dash of white pepper
1/2 cup vegetable oil
1/2 cup creme fraiche
TO FINISH:

steamed, chilled and split lengthwise 2 to 3 heads Belgian endive, carefully separated, rinsed and chilled

Combine the oil, lemon juice, tarragon, shallots and salt. Toss with the crab. Place in a covered container and refrigerate for several hours to let flavors blend.

For the sauce: Place the egg yolks, vinegar, lemon juice, mustard, sugar, salt and pepper in a blender. Blend for a few seconds. With the motor still running, add the oil in a slow steady stream until well incorporated. Remove the sauce to a bowl and whisk in the creme fraiche. Cover and refrigerate. This can be made several days in advance and kept in the refrigerator.

To serve, place an asparagus spear-half on each leaf of endive. Top with approximately 2 to 3 teaspoons of Dijon Sauce and sprinkle with crab.
