Ford Sets World Earnings Record

By JANET BRAUNSTEIN
AP Auto Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. earned $1.623 billion in the first quarter of 1988, setting a world auto industry record for earnings in a single quarter, the nation's second-largest automaker said today.

Ford's earnings of $3.31 a share on sales of $20.74 billion were up 8.8 percent over first-quarter 1987 earnings of $1.49 billion, or $2.87 a share, on sales of $18.14 billion.

The previous quarterly earnings record was set by General Motors Corp., the world's largest automaker, with $1.614 billion in profits in the first quarter of 1984.

Ford profits earned in the United States fell 10.2 percent in the first quarter to $1.04 billion from $1.16 billion in first-quarter 1987. But the drop was offset by record overseas earnings, which jumped nearly 76 percent to $580 million from $330 million in the first three months of 1987, Ford said.

"Our first-quarter earnings reflect the good balance of the overall Ford team effort," Chairman Donald E. Petersen and Vice Chairman Harold A. Poling said in a joint statement.

"With increasingly competitive worldwide automotive markets, Ford must continue to improve quality and operating efficiency, as well as offer customers good value in products," they said.

In 1987, Ford set a world industry earnings record for a single year with a profit of $4.63 billion, and was the top-earning U.S. automaker in 1986, earning $3.29 billion.

Ford blamed the drop in U.S. earnings on the costs of introducing new products and running buyer incentive campaigns, which helped increase sales. Ford's U.S. car market share grew from a year ago by 1.8 percentage points to 21.8 percent.

Ford's truck market share grew slightly to 29.7 percent in the first quarter.

Industry analysts predicted Ford would continue to lead the industry in earnings throughout 1988, partly because it has boosted production schedules for the second half of the year.

"Ford's gross profit per unit and manufacturing profit per unit are far and away better than General Motors," said Joe Phillippi, analyst with Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc. in New York.

Phillippi said Ford's sales include a healthy percentage of high-profit vehicles while it has the best control over costs in the industry.

Satanic Setting Tantalizes Grave Diggers

CONOVER, N.C. (AP) — Investigators seeking the remains of a 1986 slaying victim in this small town in the North Carolina foothills dug near a stone altar, fire pit and circle of stones used in satanic rituals, authorities said.

No body was found at the site Wednesday in what authorities say has become one of the state's most bizarre murder cases to date — and only the second since 1860 to result in a murder conviction without a body. But investigators seemed intrigued by the setting.

"This tends to lend a lot of corroboration to the witnesses we've talked to," State Bureau of Investigation agent Dave Campbell said Wednesday as he stood in the middle of a circle formed by 40 large stones placed on the floor of the woods. Five larger stones formed a pentagram around the circle.

Investigators have searched in vain for the body of 19-year-old Robert Daniel Mayse, found bludgeoned and strangled in his home in Alexander County in November 1986. All the same, two people have been convicted and sentenced in the slaying and two others — including his wife — await trial.

One of the men convicted in the murder, Estil Ward, is believed to have engaged in devil worship, said Ray Warren, chief deputy for the Alexander County Sheriff's Department.

"We had some information that Estil Ward had stayed here and engaged in devil worship," Warren said.

Despite the absence of the body, descriptions of the slaying have been vivid.

At Ward's trial in February, another suspect, Robert Adams, testified that he and Ward bludgeoned and strangled Robert Mayse, wrapped his body in a green blanket and deposited it in a trash dumpster.

The dumpster reportedly was emptied the next day into a county landfill, but authorities never found the body.

Also at the trial, testimony showed that Mayse's wife, Lori, offered Ward, who was her uncle, and Adams, her half-brother, $1,000 to kill her husband.

Adams last week pleaded guilty to second-degree murder in the slaying. Mrs. Mayse is imprisoned in Raleigh, awaiting trial on charges of first-

Pitt Men Indicted In Wilson Fire

Ronnie Lee Stocks of Black Jack and Edmund Wayne Hart, a former Pitt County resident now living in Methuen, Mass., were indicted by a federal grand jury in Raleigh Wednesday on arson and conspiracy charges in connection with a fire that destroyed the Liberty Warehouse in Wilson in October 1986.

Earl Arnold of the Clay Root area of Pitt County was named in the indictments as an unindicted co-conspirator.

The indictments identified Hart, 42, a construction worker, as the man who set the Liberty Warehouse fire.

According to the indictments,

Stocks was paid $8,000 by Harvey Bowen of Ayden, who died earlier this year, in connection with the fire. And the indictments said Stocks paid Hart $2,000 to burn the warehouse.

Kieran J. Shanahan, an assistant U.S. attorney handling the case, said that Bowen had been under investigation as a "middle man" in connection with the fire.

Bowen had been the warehouse's largest customer, the indictments said. And Shanahan said Bowen received part of about $2 million that an insurance company paid because of the destruction of the contents of the building.

According to the indictments, Stocks, Hart, Bowen "and others known and unknown to the grand jury" conspired over a seven-month period in 1986 to burn the warehouse.

The indictments said Stocks, Arnold and Bowen met at the warehouse in May 1986 to discuss the best way to set the fire. After Bowen left, the indictments alleged, Stocks and Arnold hung loose tobacco sheets in the rafters of the building and "otherwise prepared the warehouse to be burned, said fire to take place a few days thereafter."

But the indictment said that Bowen told Stocks a few days later to delay the burning because "the insurance was not right."

The indictments charge that Bowen later told Stocks to burn the warehouse on Oct. 3, 1986, and that on the night of Oct. 2, Stocks took Hart to the warehouse and Hart set the fire with charcoal lighter fluid.

The grand jury indicted Arthur King, 65, a Winterville farmer, last month on charges of soliciting Stocks to burn several businesses in Greenville and New Bern and making false statements to a federal grand jury investigating the Liberty Warehouse fire.

Shanahan said at that time that Stocks was a cooperating witness and would be held in protective custody.

Shanahan would not say Wednesday whether Hart was cooperating

Americans Paying More For Imports

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The price of imported goods, one of the main inflationary threats facing the U.S. economy, rose 1.2 percent in the first three months of the year, a slight improvement from the end of last year, the government reported today.

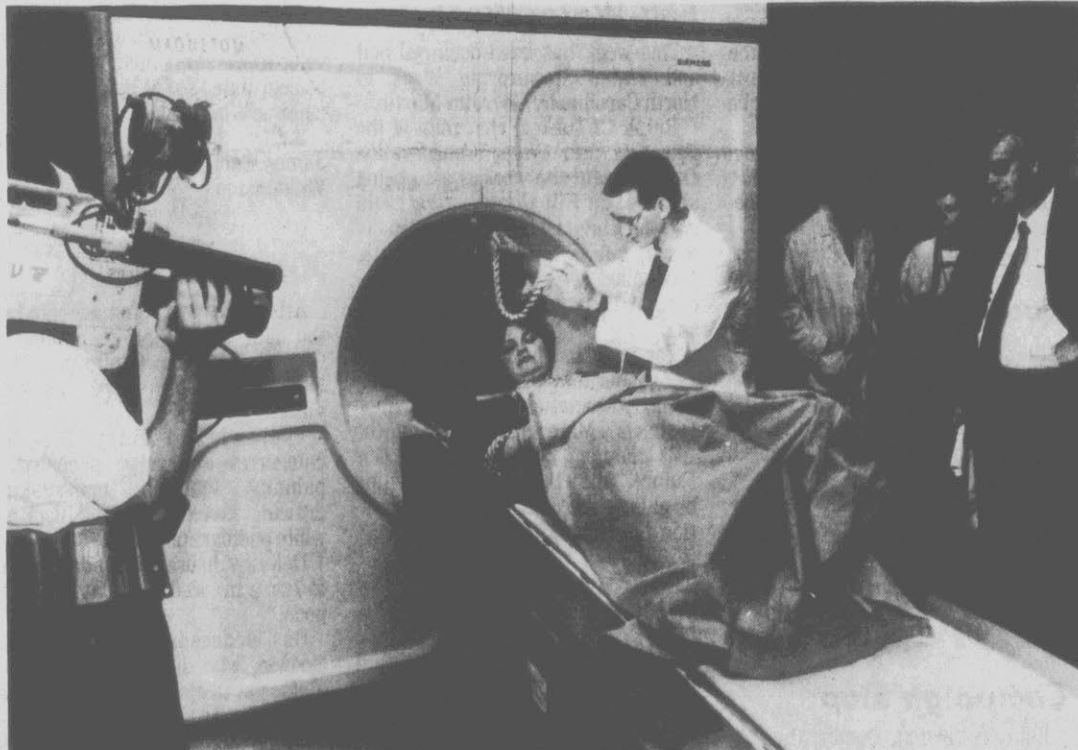

The Labor Department said the first quarter increase followed a 1.6 percent rise in import prices in the last three months of 1987 and credited the slowdown to continued declines in energy costs and a more stable dollar.

The price of oil and other imported energy products fell 8 percent during the first quarter. Without this decline, overall import prices would have risen by 2.3 percent, almost twice as fast as the actual overall increase.

At the same time, the cost of American products being sold overseas rose by 1.4 percent during the first quarter, a drop from a 2 percent price increase in the final three months of 1987. This change was credited to a big slowdown in the cost of exported food products, which rose only 0.6 percent in the first quarter after shooting up by 9.1 percent in the fourth quarter.

ECU Opens New Imaging Center

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The public got a look Wednesday at the new magnetic resonance imaging equipment at the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

A tour of the MRI Center built around the huge magnetic and its related equipment came after a short dedication ceremony keynoted by state Sen. Harold Hardison of Deep Run.

Also speaking during the ceremony were Dr. William E. Laupus, dean of the school of medicine; Jack W. Richardson, Pitt County Memorial Hospital president; Robert E. Harriton, chairman of the hospital board of trustees; Charles P. Gaskins, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, and Dr. Richard R. Eakin, chancellor of East Carolina University.

Hardison, along with state Reps. Ed Warren and Walter B. Jones Jr., were praised by Eakin and other speakers for their work in getting state funds appropriated to build the center. Hardison said he thought people were joking when they first started talking about what the MRI equipment could do, it sounded so "unbelievable."

Gaskins called it "unbelievable" that Pitt Countians would have such easy access to such sophisticated diagnostic procedure "right here in Greenville."

The MRI system is composed of a superconductive magnet (60 times the power of the magnetic field of the earth when it is electrified), a radio frequency generator-receiver and a computer that processes the data accumulated during a scan. The patient is positioned on a table in the center of the magnetic field and it interacts with hydrogen atoms in the patient's body to produce electrical changes which the computer records and converts into a two-dimensional image.

The images produced are not unlike ordinary photographs. They are much clearer than the images produced by X-ray. Therefore, they can be used for many diagnostic procedures that previously would have demanded surgery or other invasive procedures. At the present time, no dyes are used to enhance the imaging.

Dr. Michael Weaver is the director of the MRI Center.

Divided

The jury in the first-degree murder trial of Eurston Ivon Sneed was in its third day of deliberations today in the Pitt County Courthouse.

Judge Herbert O. Phillips III called the jury into the courtroom at 11:05 a.m., and asked the jury foreman if they had arrived at a verdict.

The foreman said they had not arrived at a verdict and the 12-member jury was divided 9 to 3. Phillips specifically asked the foreman not to reveal which direction the jury was leaning. The jury deliberated about 14 hours Tuesday and Wednesday.

Sneed, 35, of Washington, N.C., is charged with first-degree murder and attempted armed robbery in the 1983 New Year's Eve killing of Willie Hubert Tripp Sr., at Tripp's Bypass Service Center on Memorial Drive.

Signs Going Up As Voting Nears

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

Election campaigns are often characterized by a lot of handshaking, baby-kissing, and policy promises. But there's another product of political campaigns that Pitt County residents are seeing plenty of — campaign signs.

With the election less than a week away, candidate's faces are being plastered on practically anything which can hold a staple or glue. Many of the signs, such as the ones which appear on billboards or are placed in the yards of supporters, are in accordance with the various rules and regulations pertaining to the subject.

Many of those billboards, signs and handbills, however, are being put up illegally.

Throughout the county, election signs are being spotted on utility and light poles, on trees situated on public property and along state highways.

According to Sec. 12-1-5 of the Greenville City Code, it is unlawful for any person to post a handbill or political campaign sign on or over any property or right-of-way owned or controlled by the city except for controlled city bulletin boards intended for public use.

In addition, state law prohibits the placement of political signs along limited access, four-lane divided

ECU Holds To Player Suspensions

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

Team suspensions handed five East Carolina University football players who faced criminal charges earlier in the semester have not been lifted, ECU athletic director Dave Hart said.

Hart, in an interview Wednesday, said athletic officials will review each case individually before deciding whether the athletes may rejoin the team. A similar policy was used for three basketball players last fall, when two players were banished and the other only suspended.

"That status remains as it has since the incidents occurred," Hart said. "Their suspensions came because their conduct misrepresented the university and the department of athletics."

The players' education is the No. 1 priority, Hart said, and the athletes will be allowed to remain in school as long as they are in good academic standing.

The indefinite suspensions were not based on the likelihood of a conviction or acquittal in criminal court,

Hart said. The punishment came, he said, because "athletes have to realize they will be accountable for their mistakes."

Athletic officials are emphasizing they "can not and will not tolerate actions that bring negative publicity to East Carolina University. I think that's a very positive step for the university," Hart said.

Hart said athletics is not nearly the most important part of a university, but it is the most visible, and ECU athletic officials want athletes to know negative actions will bring unwanted and unfavorable publicity to the university.

More than 80 ECU athletes recently took part in the Special Olympics for the handicapped, said Hart, but that received less publicity than the court cases of the five football players. Athletes need to understand they live in such a spotlight, he said.

Two players, Lewis Wilson, 21, of Foley, Ala., and Ernest Singleton, 18, of Devon, Pa., were acquitted last week on charges stemming from a

Brendle's Store To Open Friday

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

Brendle's, a chain of catalog showroom-based department stores, will open Friday at 3700 S. Memorial Drive next to the Carolina East Mall.

Headquartered in Elkin, Brendle's features a wide array of consumer goods such as sporting goods, jewelry, housewares, electronics, toys and giftwares. According to manager Richard Washburn, the local store will employ between 50 and 60 people.

Washburn said a ribbon-cutting ceremony will be held Friday at 9:30 a.m. Regular store hours will be Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., and Sunday from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m.

According to David Brendle, company advertising director, the Greenville facility is the company's 42nd store in a five-state area. In addition to North Carolina, Brendle's are also located in Virginia, South Carolina, Tennessee and Georgia.

Other area Brendle's locations include a store in Wilson, which opened in September of 1982, and in Kinston, which opened in July of 1985.

Brendle said the Greenville store has been constructed according to a proto-type "race track" design.

"The store is built with a very visible layout which provides easier and more convenient shopping," he said.

He described the store as having approximately 50,000 square feet of display area with parking facilities capable of accommodating over 300 automobiles.

Brendles began in 1919 as SWY Supply Co., providing rural residents of the Elkin area with grain, feed and groceries. The operation assumed the role of food wholesaler in the '30s while taking on the name Brendles Cash Wholesale Inc. in the mid-'40s.

In the early '50s, the company began to sell an increasing number of non-food items, such as hair products and toothpaste.

The first Brendles catalogs appeared in 1957 and were an immediate success. Brendle's catalogs became so widely distributed, the company was forced to abandon its own printing operations and have printing done out-of-house by a Winston-Salem firm. By the mid-'60s the catalog had grown to 450 pages, approximately its current size.

In 1967, the company opened its first showroom store in Winston-Salem. The first out-of state Brendle's showroom store was opened in 1977.

Society Event

The First Goldsboro African Violet Society will hold a judged show/sale in Berkeley Mall, Goldsboro, on May 6 and May 7. There will be educational exhibits and demonstrations on the culture of African violets.

For more details call 778-2684.

Building Dedication

The new memorial administration building housing central offices of the Methodist Home for Children, 1041 Washington St., Raleigh, will be dedicated at 3 p.m. May 15.

Participants will include Lt. Gov. Robert Jordan and Bishop Carlton P. Minnick, Jr. The dedication ceremony is open to the public.

Quarterly Meeting

Quarterly meeting and pre-Mother's Day services will be held at Warren Chapel Free Will Baptist Church Saturday at 6 p.m. with Elder J.H. Vines and Calvary FWB Church as guests.

After regular 11 a.m. services Sunday, dinner will be served at 1:45 p.m. Elder E.L. Garner and Friendship FWB Church will conduct the 3 p.m. services.

Campaign Stop

Rufus Edmisten, Democratic candidate for secretary of state, will stop at the Pitt-Greenville Airport on Saturday at 10:45 a.m. as a part of a tour of the state.

Edmisten will make a brief statement concerning his candidacy and the upcoming May 3 primary election.

Permit Approved

The Greenville Police Department has issued a permit allowing St. Mary Missionary Baptist Church to raise funds Saturday at 515 W. 14th St. for the enlargement of the education department and the construction of restroom facilities for the handicapped.

Soil-Water Week

This week has been declared Soil and Water Stewardship Week in North Carolina by Gov. Jim Martin.

Ralph C. Tucker, chairman of the Pitt Soil and Water Conservation District, said the week is also being observed in Pitt County. "We could give our children all the money in the world, but it would do them little good unless we also give them a productive soil on which to live," he said.

The week has been observed since 1955, under the sponsorship of the National Association of Conservation Districts. Materials conveying the 1988 theme, "Stewardship Is Our Future," may be obtained by visiting or calling the district Soil Conservation office, 215 S. Evans St., (752-2720).

NCETA Workshop

Kathy K. Sprau of Greenville, a management supervision and personal development trainer, recently presented an all-day workshop on "Communicating Effectively and Assertively" for the North Carolina Employment and Training Association.

The NCETA held its annual state conference at North Topsail Shores.

Writing Competition

Sadie Sautler School students recently completed all-school writing competition titled "Spring Surprises." Winners read their stories in an assembly.

Students who participated in a reading sponsorship program were awarded medals of recognition and were thanked for their efforts in obtaining World Book Encyclopedias and Childcraft Books for use in the classrooms. Three sets of encyclopedias were obtained and will be placed in the third-grade classrooms. The 14 sets of Childcraft books will be placed in kindergarten through second-grade classes.

Frankie Jenkins' second-grade class recently visited Mayor Ed Carter's office to conclude a study on community affairs.

Group Will Meet

Dr. Ralph Hardee Rives, professor of English at East Carolina University, will be the featured speaker at the Greenville Area Preservation Association's monthly meeting on Monday.

The meeting will take place at 7:30 p.m. in the front parlor of the Robert Lee Humber House, 117 W. Fifth St.

Rives will present a slide show and lecture on Greenville's historic architecture. The association's publication committee will present a report on negotiations with the North Carolina State University School of Design for layout and design of Kate Ohno's architectural inventory of Greenville, which is being published by GAPA.

Scholarship Earned

Meredith Lane Page, an employee of Chick-fil-A at Carolina East Mall, is one of more than 4,600 Chick-fil-A employees to earn a $1,000 scholarship, according to S. Truett Cathy, the fast food chain's founder and chairman.

The scholarship program rewards students who have worked in a restaurant a minimum of 20 hours per week for two consecutive years. Each recipient is recommended by the store operator and has passed a three-month evaluation period.

Ms. Page is the daughter of Gene and Judy Page of Ayden and is a student at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Services Scheduled

The Church of Faith, Fifth Street, will have services today at 7:30 p.m. with Clintene Harrington and St. Luke Choir as guests.

Prayer Service

Family prayer is being held from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m. each day at the Overcoming Faith Church of Christ, 820 East Ave., Ayden.

(See IN, A-6)

Fund-Raiser Set

The Chocowinity Volunteer Fire Department will sponsor a fund-raising dinner beginning at 11 a.m. May 14. Barbecue pork plates will be served at the fire station.

Camp Participant

Chris Bailey, a senior at Bear Grass High School, has been selected by the East Carolina Farm Credit Service to participate in the 1988 Cooperative Leadership Camp, a youth program of the Cooperative Council of North Carolina.

The five-day resident camping program features speakers, workshops, recreation and small group sessions with emphasis on how cooperatives operate and how to develop leadership skills. Activities will be held June 13-17 at R.J. Peeler FFA camp at White Lake.

Bailey, the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Earl Bailey, is a resident of Williamston.

Art Exhibition

Art entries are being accepted for the 13th annual art exhibition at Coastal Carolina Community College, 444 Western Blvd., Jacksonville.

There is no entry fee. Six categories are being accepted — painting, sculpture, printmaking, drawing, mixed media and black and white photography.

Delivery hours are: today, 9 a.m. to 7:30 p.m., and Saturday, 9 a.m. to noon.

On Wednesday, sculptor Abbe Godwin, who did the N.C. Vietnam Memorial in Raleigh and the bronze statue for the Beirut Memorial in Jacksonville, will be at the college to give a mold demonstration, a slide lecture and a video.

Economic Voids

Not Just A Rosy N.C. Picture

In an election year, it no doubt gives the governor great pleasure to announce that North Carolina's economy improved more than the nation's for the fifth straight year in 1987.

Gov. Jim Martin said new and expanding businesses increased jobs by 40 percent over the previous year. The figures were part of the governor's annual economic development report. The report shows that manufacturing investment increased by 62 percent in 1987 over the previous year. And, even though manufacturing plant expansion was down, North Carolina still was leader of the United States in new manufacturing plant announcements. Martin also announced that rural sector development was the best of the decade in 1988.

Specifically he said that 70 percent of the expected manufacturing jobs are for communities of 10,000 or less people and 60 percent of new manufacturing investment was outside the Piedmont.

The governor's comments didn't draw rave reviews from Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan who is the front runner for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

So much for the political year sparring over the economic report. While the statistics are glowing in relation to the rest of the nation, the fact that North Carolina experienced a decrease from the previous year in 1987 in new and expanded manufacturing announcements should not be overlooked.

The governor's report anticipates some slowdown next year in the economy and some modest increase in unemployment. That means there is even harder work ahead if the state is to obtain the economic growth it must have to provide employment for our expanding population. Serious economic voids remain in the state.

North Carolina will have to do more to make the rural areas of our state attractive to new industry if it is to stem the tide of people flocking to the metropolitan areas in search of employment. These new jobs should bring good wages and good benefits to the people.

For rural eastern North Carolina communities, it is difficult to become excited about rosy economic figures when young people are leaving for jobs elsewhere and only an aging population may remain. And despite some success in the east, there are still major pockets that meet that description.

North Carolina still has its work cut out in economic development and policies which emphasize economic improvement in areas which currently are stagnating are needed most.

Demjanjuk's Fate

A Message About Intolerance

It is many decades since the end of World War II. Nevertheless, this week an Israeli court reached back in time, considered the conviction of John Demjanjuk and sentenced him to death for German war crimes.

The court had concluded that Demjanjuk was the "Ivan the Terrible", who as a young man served as a Nazi guard and operated the gas chamber in which Jews were killed. The picture painted of "Ivan the Terrible" during the 14 month trial was a stark one. He was described as a major criminal who committed the most heinous acts in his zest to exterminate the Jews at Treblinka concentration camp in Poland.

Demjanjuk and his family have maintained his innocence and said that it was a case of mistaken identity. The lengthy trial, however, convinced the court that Demjanjuk was truly "Ivan the Terrible" and, once his guilt was decided, the death penalty was virtually expected.

It is sobering that the cruel deaths of six million Jews at the hands of the Nazis still hangs over the world today. Of all the persecutions ever aimed at the Jews throughout history the holocaust must rank as the worst. It was Hitler's intention to exterminate the Jewish race and he could not have proceeded with his grisly plan without extensive help and support of others.

If Hitler had accomplished his plan of world domination no doubt there would be no Israel and likely no Jews left in the world today — and after the Jews it could have been any other race or nationality. The extermination of the Jews was a horrible plan which might not have ended with anything less than the pure Arian race that Hitler exulted.

The memories of the holocaust flood back with the conviction of Demjanjuk. The world can only assume the 14-month trial was a fair one and that justice was done. What should come from it all is an abiding faith that never again will a plan of exterminating a race be allowed to progress and that civilization will not tolerate hideous crimes against humanity.

Chernobyl's Lesson: Confront Challenges

Two years ago this week, the Lenin Atomic Power Plant near Chernobyl in the Ukraine exploded.

We now know that the reactor had an unstable design and was not protected by a containment building. When reactor operators violated important safety rules during the course of an experiment, those two basic flaws helped produce the largest accident in the history of nuclear energy.

Although the initial response to the accident was not fully coordinated, the Soviets soon recovered and managed the accident very well. While 31 workers ultimately died of thermal, chemical and radiation effects, many more might have died without the medical care of Dr. Angeline Guskova at Moscow's Hospital No. 6, who was helped by Dr. Robert Gale of the University of California, Los Angeles, and other foreign physicians.

To minimize radiation exposure to the general population, about 135,000 people were evacuated from the area around Chernobyl. This was accomplished under difficult logistical conditions: few roads (only two lanes at best), inadequate communications and no advance preparation. It appears that none of the evacuees received enough radiation to get radiation sickness.

Now, two years later, three of the four reactors at Chernobyl are in full-power operation and the fourth is safely entombed, emitting no radioactivity. Hundreds of square miles of slightly radioactive trees have been uprooted and buried, the radiation levels have fallen several thousandfold and the population is slowly returning to the evacuated area. The thousands of Soviet volunteers directly involved (many of whom I have met), are clearly proud of their recovery from the accident.

The success of any industrial society is its ability to adopt and use new technologies. This includes the vital functions of prevention, management and recovery from accidents. The statistical evidence shows that the United States has been foremost among nations in reducing the probability of accidents of all sorts, whether automobiles or dam failures. The Soviets have now demonstrated their ability to manage and recover from a serious industrial accident.

The Soviets have asked the United States and the rest of the world for help in understanding how to prevent nuclear accidents. Indeed, a team of Soviet officials is in the United States this week studying reactor safety and regulation. Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev has pointed to Chernobyl to illustrate why "glasnost" (openness) is necessary. A new Soviet institute on safe nuclear power operations has been formed and the first telex has been received by the U.S. Institute for Nuclear Power Operations, establishing a hot line between Soviet and American nuclear power plants.

It would be tragic if, for local political reasons, we learn the wrong lesson from the Soviet experience at Chernobyl. There is nothing to suggest that one should oppose new nuclear plants ostensibly because of the difficulty in evacuating people living near those plants. When I visited Chernobyl I saw the 20-foot-wide road along which 45,000 people were evacuated in two hours on April 27, 1986. The comparison is striking against the backdrop of the 90-foot-wide American roads and highways near the Seabrook plant in New Hampshire and the Shoreham facility on Long Island. Both for accident management and accident recovery, the United States has far greater resources than does the Soviet Union. Yet some people of influence still assert falsely there can be no recovery from a nuclear accident.

This is symptomatic of a broader dissatisfaction with and misunderstanding of modern technology. Economic progress requires that we move forward with industrial technologies, while pragmatically learning to master the important principles of accident prevention, management and recovery. The nation that applies these technological principles will lead the world. If the United States shrinks from the challenge in the false belief that we cannot control technologies such as nuclear power, Nikita Khrushchev's famous prediction — that the Soviets will bury us — may yet come to pass.

Richard Wilson, Mallinckrodt professor of physics at Harvard University, is an expert on nuclear reactor safety.

The FBI Goes To The Library

As children we all fantasized about working for the FBI. While it seemed like only a dream it's easier than you think.

The FBI recently asked American librarians to keep their eyes open for spies, and report any suspicious activity of library cardholders to local FBI bureaus. The operation is called the Library Awareness Program and the G-men are not kidding around.

According to reports, the FBI wants information on people who come to the libraries to withdraw scientific tomes, linger over maps and photocopy documents having to do with national defense.

The FBI is dead serious because they figure the public library is the main source of information for spies. But the Bureau ran into a major problem with its Library Awareness Program when America's librarians refused to play ball. The overwhelming majority felt it was not their role to act as counter-espionage agents.

The Library Awareness Program cannot work without the cooperation of librarians, and so another solution must be found to provide the G-men with the information they want. This is what is being considered:

There is no law saying library patrons could not volunteer to do the tasks that the librarians refuse to perform. Any American can be deputized to act as a stakeout in a book stack. Cardholders, unlike librarians, have tremendous amounts of time on their hands and are perfect candidates to keep their eyes on strangers.

If you're interested, this is how I suggest you operate. Get a seat near the door. Have a copy of Richard Nixon's book in front of you and bend over and pretend you're reading it. Out of the corner of your eye notice who comes in and what books he is returning. Also note whether his shoes were made behind the Iron Curtain, and whether his hat was made in Cuba.

Once he goes into the stacks, get up and follow him down the aisle. If he heads down the one with a sign reading "Laser Manuals," you may be on to Mr. KGB himself. Pretend you are looking for "Hans Brinker and the Silver Skates," but keep your eye on him. Remember, this person is not a spy just because he wants to read a book on lasers. If he tears the pages out of the book and stuffs them into his pants, then you should make a note to call the Bureau.

Many espionage organizations are using women to prowl America's libraries, and they are more difficult to spot as spies than men. This is how to keep on your toes. If an attractive lady sits next to you in a library and starts playing footsie under the table with your Nike sneakers, be alert. If she follows this up by nuzzling your ear, you know she's in the market for more than an old National Geographic. What she probably is after is everything the library has in microfilm on IBM's latest main-frame computer. She either wants it for the Polish Secret Service or the Apple computer company in California.

The beauty of helping the FBI in their library watch is that you don't have to do it alone. If you're married you can split shifts with your wife. You could keep watch in the morning and she could spy on suspects in the afternoon.

Nobody likes to keep tabs on everyone who comes to a library, but that's where foreign agents are getting their information these days, and since the librarians refuse to be on the lookout for the bad guys, someone has to do it.

One more thing. The way to check out a person as to whether he is a legit library user is to ask to see his library card. According to the FBI there are thousands of spooks walking around with forged cards manufactured in Budapest. The way to find out if a card is for real is to spit on it, and if the ink runs off, you can start searching him for his poison pill.

Strength For Today

One of the last prayers of Jesus was that we all might be one. Even before his death, he was aware of the fragmentary nature of the human race, perhaps even foreseeing the terrible divisions which would one day splinter his church. Worse yet, Christians have persecuted others, forgetting the common humanity we all share as children of God. How can I be understanding and accepting of others without compromising who I am and what I believe? How can I genuinely hold to the objective truth of my faith, and at the same time uphold the value and holiness of the faiths of others?

Public Forum

To the editor:

Senator Harold Hardison, Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, has been running a television advertisement alleging that a man named Wardell Smith had been charged with multiple traffic and drug violations; that Mr. Smith's attorney was Cumberland County Senator Tony Rand, also a candidate for lieutenant governor; that Mr. Smith has never served more than one year in prison for all his criminal violations.

As Clerk of Superior Court of Cumberland County and, therefore, the official custodian of the criminal records, I believe that it is my obligation to tell the people of North Carolina the truth. According to these records, Mr. Smith was represented by at least seven different attorneys on his criminal charges.

The only time our records indicate that Senator Rand represented Mr. Smith was in 1986 in one action which was dismissed by the district attorney simultaneously with Mr. Smith receiving an active 18-year prison sentence on other charges.

No person in the Hardison campaign has contacted my office about examining Mr. Smith's records. Mr. Hardison's assertions cannot be documented because they are not true.

Hospital Death Rates Up In Tightly Controlled Units

BOSTON (AP) — Hospital death rates in states with tight-fisted governmental controls are up to 10 percent higher, according to a study published today that prompted one doctor to comment, "You can't have a Cadillac for Chevy prices."

The study suggests, but doesn't prove, that patient care suffers because hospitals in more cost-regulated states may try to hold down costs by laying off staff, eliminating services or spurning expensive equipment.

"There is cause for some concern," said Stephen M. Shortell, the study's director. "There is no need to frighten the public, but there is something here that does need to be dealt with."

In efforts to lower medical costs, many states have set up review procedures for hospital rate increases.

Others have certificate of need programs. These require hospitals to get approval for expansions or major purchases, such as new diagnostic machines, that cost more than a specific amount, often $500,000 or $1 million.

The report did not provide state-by-state breakdowns. However, Shortell said that among the highly regulated states with the highest death rates were Washington, New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts.

Dr. Myron Peterson, head of pediatric intensive care at New England Medical Center in Boston, said Shortell's figures "are hard to dispute."

He said he believes the public does not understand the consequences of cutbacks in hospital spending.

"If people want to make the choice to cut costs and have less medical care, that's all right, but they ought to be told the truth," Peterson said. "You can't have a Cadillac for Chevy prices. It's common sense. If you pay less, you get less."

Shortell, a health services researcher at Northwestern University, published his findings in the New England Journal of Medicine. They were based on the records of 214,839 patients in 981 hospitals in 45 states.

Shortell and his co-author, Dr. Edward F.X. Hughes, compared the actual death rates and the rates that would be expected based on the patient's ages.

They found that the ratio of actual to predicted death rates in states with the most stringent rate reviews were 6 percent to 10 percent higher than in the least tightly controlled states.

Trophy Earned

Michael J. Harris, a sophomore at Ayden-Grifton High School, recently earned a first-place trophy at the state Eastern Algebra II run-off contest in Rocky Mount.

Students scoring in the top 5 percent at each of eight regional Algebra II contests participated in the event.

Harris competed in local and regional math contests earlier this year and received the first-place Algebra II award at the Pitt County Math Contest and at the East Carolina University Regional Math Contest.

Stones Found

degree murder and second-degree arson.

Wednesday's search was conducted on a tip and was at least the fifth since February 1987, Campbell said.

with investigators, but said it was "a fair inference from the evidence to date."

Both Shanahan and Ed Garrison, a spokesman for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms in Raleigh, said they expected the grand jury will return additional indictments in connection with the case in about 60 days.

The warehouse owners have filed suit over the insurer's failure to pay for the loss of the building. The insurance company has contended in court documents that the owners knew the fire was set deliberately.

"There's no question the boy (Robert Mayse) is dead," Campbell said. "But we dare not ignore any tip."

The victim disappeared in November 1986. In February 1987, Adams was arrested in Tennessee on unrelated burglary charges and confessed that he and Ward killed Mayse and burned the Mayses' trailer home in Bethlehem to destroy evidence.

Searching the trailer later, authorities found a blood-stained mattress Adams had described. The blood type matched that of Mayse.

And in an interview last week with The Charlotte Observer, Ward's brother, Asa, said his brother had once dug up the body of another brother, chopped off the skull with a hammer and chisel and used it for satanic rituals.

Also Wednesday, investigators dug up three abandoned wells near the ritual site. Witnesses have said the body may also have been placed in a well, said Warren.

"We've heard from the very beginning from everybody it was in a well," he said. "Except we've got an eyewitness that saw him (Mayse) go in the dumpster."

ECU Will Consider Players Individually

sexual assault on a female in Scott Residence Hall Feb. 21.

Lester Errol McCorvey, 19, of Pensacola, Fla., was found guilty of assault on a female in connection with the same incident, and he was sentenced to two years in prison. Attorney Milton Fitch, who also represented Pendleton, is appealing McCorvey's case to superior court.

"I think the university needs a public policy that deals with what is going to happen to an athlete when he is charged with a crime," said attorney Hugh Cox, who represented Wilson, who has one year of athletic eligibility remaining and should graduate next spring. "We don't know what his status will be," he said of Wilson.

Cox also represented former basketball player Tracy King at a sentencing hearing in a separate case last month.

Crimestoppers

If you have information on any crime committed in Pitt County, call Crimestoppers, 758-7777. You do not have to identify yourself and can be paid for the information you supply.

Cox said head football coach Art Baker, assistant coach Don Thompson and an academic official met with Wilson shortly after the charges were filed and told Wilson his scholarship would not be renewed. Hart said he had no knowledge of the meeting.

"I guess I would say that while there may be some general policies in place, it is important ... that each individual case be reviewed on its merits," Chancellor Richard R. Eakin said.

"The university can have a judicial process which is separate from any cases that may appear in the courts. Those are two distinct processes," Eakin said. "Moreover, in the case of athletes ... the athletic administration reserves the right to determine whether any athlete can participate on a team."

It is important to review each case individually, Hart said, because there are different circumstances and criteria to be considered in each case.

It is likely that no decision will be made concerning the status of the players while students are taking final exams this week, Hart said, and he said there is no deadline for officials to reach a decision.

Ernest Edward Logan II, 19, of Spring Lake was found guilty of assault inflicting serious injury in Pitt County District Court April 19. Logan's attorney, John Smith, said he does not plan to appeal the decision, and he has not heard a formal decision from the university regarding Logan's scholarship or his status with the team.

"As far as I'm aware, he is going to be allowed to continue in school," Smith said. Judge Randy Hunter sentenced Logan to 48 hours in the county jail, one year of probation and ordered him to pay $200 in damages in connection with an incident on the ECU campus Feb. 27.

Michael Shane Hubble, 18, of St. Petersburg, Fla., was sentenced to three years of probation and ordered to pay $700 in damages after being convicted of assault and damage to property in District Court March 31.

Hubble's attorney, Ernest Conner, appealed the decision and Hubble will receive a new trial in Superior Court. The arraignment is set for May 23. Conner said neither he nor Hubble have received any word from university officials, and he does not expect to hear anything while the case is pending.

King, 20, of Hampton, Va., charged in a series of break-ins in December of 1986, received a three-year suspended sentence in Pitt County Superior Court March 28, and he was placed on probation for five years — the same sentence given to basketball player Theodore "Blue" Edwards, who was also involved in the break-ins.

While the court treated King and Edwards alike, Cox said he was concerned that the university did not. Head basketball coach Mike Steele said King was dropped from the squad for academic reasons and not allowed to return to school. Edwards was suspended from playing in games, but he was allowed to remain in school and practice with the team and will complete his final year of eligibility next season.

Former ECU basketball player John Williams, 20, of Atlantic City, N.J., was also involved in the dormitory break-ins. Steele said Williams was also not allowed to return to school for academic reasons.

A fourth player, Howard Brown, 23, of Brooklyn, N.Y., involved in the break-ins was suspended from the team late in the 1986-87 season for disciplinary reasons and later withdrew from ECU.

Inlet Meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has agreed to meet with Gov. Jim Martin on Tuesday to discuss the problem of keeping Oregon Inlet open.

Shifting sands in the inlet, used by area fishermen to get to sea, are "threatening a major highway bridge, and it also has made the inlet virtually impossible to navigate," said Martin's spokesman, Jim Sughrue.

Sughrue said Martin wants the president's help in persuading the U.S. Interior Department to issue a permit for the construction of jetties. He also wants administration support for a congressional appropriation for the project. Sughrue estimated it would cost about $110 million.

State Relaxing Truck Time Rules

RALEIGH (AP) — The state commissioner of motor vehicles has decided to relax regulations that restrict the number of hours in-state truck drivers can work, a move that federal officials say could jeopardize $1.2 million in funding.

William Hiatt said Wednesday the state's modification of the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Regulations would become effective June 1.

The changes, which were sought by highway construction businesses, nurserymen and others, will allow drivers to work 70 hours in a seven-day period, instead of the current 60, or 80 hours in an eight-day period, instead of the current 70.

Any consecutive 24 hours off will allow workers to begin a new seven-or-eight-day period.

"We've made no changes in the number of hours a person can drive per day," Hiatt told the News and Observer of Raleigh. He referred to a 10-hour driving limit per day.

The new rules are aimed at benefiting seasonal industries which use drivers inside the state.

A federal official said Wednesday that Hiatt's office had been told softening the regulations could cost the state.

"To be eligible for funding, a state must adopt the Federal Motor Carrier Safety regulations or have compatible state laws," said David Martin, regional state programs coordinator for the Office of Motor Carrier Safety in Atlanta. "And by relaxing a regulation that is already in place, we have taken the stand that your funds will be in jeopardy."

Hiatt would not say if he would reinstate the old workweek standard if the federal grant is cut off.

Hiatt said the longer work hours for drivers who do not cross state lines would not jeopardize highway safety because the federal regulations were designed for long-haul interstate carriers.

"We have a study by the insurance folks that indicates intrastate carriers — local drivers — are less susceptible to accidents than the long-haul carriers," he said.

North Carolina adopted the federal regulations in 1983, applying them to in-state drivers.

But Hiatt said terminal audits helped lead to the change in regulations.

"We did them all along," Hiatt said, "but we didn't have the manpower sufficient to really do a good job until '87. And when we started doing terminal audits, we found there are an awful lot of people out there who didn't realize they were motor carriers. Once they found they were motor carriers, their argument was they probably shouldn't be."

Tobacco Associates Seeks Higher Fees

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — To meet increasing costs, a grower-financed organization is seeking permission to increase fees charged to tobacco growers to support projects promoting flue-cured tobacco worldwide.

Growers currently pay 10 cents per 100 pounds to support Tobacco Associates and its efforts to increase tobacco exports.

Tobacco Associates has been reducing its operations for about five years to reduce deficit spending, Kirk Wayne, president of the organization, said Wednesday at a meeting of the S.C. Tobacco Warehouse Association. Tobacco Associates' annual budget last year was almost $800,000, but revenues fell about $75,000 short.

In the five flue-cured producing states, Wayne said, efforts are underway to permit growers to authorize Tobacco Associates' board of directors to increase fees up to 50 cents per 100 pounds of tobacco. If the board is given the authority, Wayne said, it would probably make the increase gradually over several years. The money is collected at auction warehouses when the tobacco is sold.

Tobacco Associates received $1.3 million last year through the federal Targeted Export Assistance program. The money, matched by funds from the organization, must be spent within three years. Before the group qualifies for additional funds, Wayne said, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has said it must increase its contribution and hire additional managers.

Lunch Changed Sailor's Mind

By MEG REYNOLDS
Associated Press Writer

The mother of a North Carolina sailor killed in a submarine fire says her son originally intended to join the Air Force instead of the Navy.

But when Marshall Lindgren got to the recruiting station in Asheville, the Air Force recruiter was gone to lunch, so he enlisted in the Navy. It was a choice he never regretted, Joyce Lindgren said Wednesday.

"He was a super boy, a super son, and became a super man when he went into the Navy," she said. "He dearly loved it. And I've never heard anyone describe their job as gloriously as Marshall did."

Salvage crews entered the drifting USS Bonefish early Wednesday and found Lindgren, 21, and two other sailors left aboard when smokes and fumes filled the submarine Sunday. Navy officials told Mrs. Lindgren her son was found at in the control room.

"My son is a national hero," said

Mrs. Lindgren. "To God be the glory if that is what He chose for Marshall."

Mrs. Lindgren's minister said Marshall had mailed his Navy paychecks to his mother for most of the three years he was in the service.

"He's probably sent her more than he spent himself — his father died of a heart attack two years ago, and he worried about her," the Rev. Bill Hill said by telephone from the family home in Pisgah Forest.

"They said he (Lindgren) was in the control room when they found him," Hill said. "He was probably helping everyone — that's the type of young man he was — a laid-back, unassuming kind of fellow."

The Lindgren family received news of the sailor's death about 6 a.m. Wednesday, when a Navy chaplain, Lt. Michael Langston, and another Navy official from the Asheville Naval Reserve Center visited the Lindgren home.

Panel Says Lighthouse Should Be Moved

RALEIGH (AP) — Moving the 118-year-old Cape Hatteras Lighthouse inland will protect it from eroding surf for at least 100 years, and is better than building a seawall around the structure, a panel of scientists and engineers says.

A committee from the National Academy of Sciences estimated that moving the lighthouse 500 feet would cost $4.6 million and take one year. A second move of 500 feet would probably be necessary after about 25 years, according to the report, and would cost another $1.6 million.

The Army Corps of Engineers said in 1985 the seawall proposal would cost $5.6 million.

"Every taxpayer ... should be real happy money isn't being spent on a seawall," said David Fischetti, a Cary engineer and chairman of the Move the Lighthouse Committee.

"A seawall would have been a black hole as far as the taxpayer is concerned," Fischetti said.

The report released Wednesday said construction of a seawall eventually would lead to the lighthouse being encircled by a 23-foot high wall of steel and concrete, and erosion would eventually turn the plot into an island.

National Park Service officials in Manteo and Atlanta said their scientists were still studying the 136-page document and would decide within the next two weeks if they favor the committee's recommendation. The park service will make the final decision on how to preserve the structure, the oldest and tallest brick lighthouse in the nation.

"They have looked into ways to implement that moving-the-lighthouse idea, just to try to figure out what kind of money would be required and what kind of planning and so forth," said James M. Howard Jr., a public affairs officer in Atlanta. "If they rejected it ... it would be for fiscal reasons."

MADD To Mark Candidates Who Back Anti-Drunken Driving Efforts

RALEIGH (AP) — Mothers Against Drunk Driving will be marking incumbent legislators, judges and other officials with special lapel pins if the group thinks they have aided anti-drunken driving efforts.

Frances G. Wells, chairman of MADD's North Carolina chapter, said Wednesday the pins designate the favored officials as members of "Government Leaders Against Drunk Driving."

"Ask your local candidates this fall where their GLADD pin is," she said. "And if they cannot show one, then you cast your vote for those who will pledge their support to our campaign."

Incumbents viewed as obstacles to tougher laws and sentences for impaired drivers won't get the pins, Mrs. Wells, of Angier, said. Non-incumbent candidates will not receive pins because they have no voting record, she said.

Mrs. Wells acknowledged MADD's rating of judges would be more subjective since they also have no voting record. But she insisted it would be fair and based on extensive research. Some judges are "extremely lenient" on drunken drivers, she said.

Mrs. Wells spoke at a ceremony in the state Capitol where she gave Gov.

Jim Martin a pin and declared him the first member of GLADD. Also receiving pins were Secretary of Transportation Jim Harrington, Correction Secretary Aaron Johnson and Col. Jack F. Cardwell of the state Highway Patrol.

MADD has researched the voting records of legislators and has monitored courtrooms to see how judges and prosecutors handle impaired-driving cases, Mrs. Wells said.

One bill the group is interested in would ban open beer and wine containers anywhere in the passenger section of a car. Currently, open containers are permitted if not in the driver's possession.

The bill passed the House with 17 dissenting votes and is pending in a Senate committee, Mrs. Wells said. "We'd be very interested in knowing which legislators are those 17."

MADD is researching that question and will study the overall voting records of those lawmakers, she said. If the records show a pattern of opposing tougher DWI measures, the legislators won't get a pin.

IN THE STATE

Flag

RALEIGH (AP) — Confederate Memorial Day will be celebrated at the state Capitol without the Confederate battle flag, a controversial symbol frequently used by white supremacist groups.

"We're just trying to be sensitive because of the general atmosphere across the South right now," Jeff Stepp of Salisbury, who planned the May 15 ceremonies. "We don't want to be apologetic about displaying the Confederate battle flag. We just feel it should be appropriately displayed."

Stepp, the commander of the North Carolina Battalion, a coalition of Civil War reenactment groups, said he has asked all participating groups not to carry or use the battle flag.

Confederate Memorial Day is May 10, but ceremonies have been delayed until May 15 to coincide with a convention of the Sons of Confederate Veterans, one of the groups sponsoring the event.

Sentenced

LEXINGTON (AP) — A man who waited two years to be sentenced while he helped authorities prosecute a co-defendant in a double homicide case has been sentenced to two life terms after refusing to testify in a second trial.

In a plea arrangement, James Clay Hunt, 27, of High Point, pleaded guilty in November 1985 to two counts of second-degree murder in the killings of Ricky Lee Norman, 29, and Pamela Luck Norman, 21. As part of the plea bargain, Hunt agreed to testify against Charles R. Kimbrell, who was accused of hiring him and his sister to kill the Normans.

Monday, before Kimbrell's second trial was to begin, Hunt told prosecutors that he would not testify. Kimbrell's first second-degree murder conviction was overturned by the the N.C. Supreme Court.

Street Preachers

MARION (AP) — Two Marion elementary school students were suspended from school Wednesday for the second time for refusing to stop preaching before classes.

School officials say the children are disrupting the school by their preaching and suspended the two for five days. Six-year-old Pepper Strode and 5-year-old Matthew Strode had just returned to school after a three-day suspension last week for refusing to give up their preaching.

The two children and their 10-year-old brother, Duffy, were suspended from school last week for preaching in front of Eastfield Elementary School. Duffy Strode is scheduled to return to school Friday after a five-day suspension and his mother predicts that he, too, will be suspended again.

Their father, David Strode, a street-preacher since 1981, has said he may challenge the suspensions as unconstitutional.

Gag Rule

ZEBULON, N.C. (AP) — Zebulon's 3-week-old "gag rule" — a policy limiting public comment at town board meetings — died Tuesday after the commissioner who proposed it asked the town board rescind it.

Rom F. Moser asked the board to do away with the controversial rule "for the sake of harmony and to quell the furor stirred up in the news media."

The rule in the Wake County town of 2,900 banned "protests, demonstrations or expressions of any kind which express approval or disapproval of any issue being discussed by or before this board."

U.S.-Canadian Talks On Acid Rain Turn Out Barren

WASHINGTON (AP) — Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney came to Washington seeking more U.S. action to reduce the acid rain that he likens to "dumping garbage" on his country, but he got no promises from President Reagan.

During a one-hour meeting on Wednesday, Reagan held to the administration's 7-year-old position that more research is needed before targets are set for reducing the pollution blamed for acid rain.

Mulroney had used the meeting and a subsequent speech to Congress to renew Canadian pleas that the United States follow his country's lead by setting specific pollution-reduction targets and timetables.

Canada's program will cut pollution levels there to half the 1980 levels by 1994, Mulroney told Congress.

"But that is only half the solution, because the other half of our acid rain comes across the border, directly from the United States, falling upon our forests, killing our lakes, soiling our cities," Mulroney said.

The Reagan administration has rebuffed pleas from Northeastern states as well as Canada to set targets and timetables, calling instead for more scientific investigation to establish the most effective cleanup methods before spending money on acid rain reduction.

A senior U.S. official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said that Mulroney gave Reagan "some private ideas" on how they might narrow their differences on the issue.

The talks, however, did not alter the administration view that there is little possibility an acid rain accord sought by Mulroney will be reached before Reagan leaves office next January, the official said.

Kolb estimated the cleanup could cost Shell $4 million or more.

Unarmed Motorist Shot Dead

NEW YORK (AP) — A woman who ran a red light was shot to death 12 minutes later by police who mistakenly believed she had fired at them during a chaotic chase through Harlem.

Lydia Ferraro, 33, of Fairview, N.J., died in her car about 2 a.m. Wednesday surrounded by 18 to 20 officers. Five officers fired 13 times, wounding her three times. She was dead on arrival at a hospital, police said.

Assistant police chief Mario Selvaggi said no weapon was found in her car.

He said as many as 20 police officers answered a report of shots fired at police, but the shots were from Sgt. John O'Connor, who tried to shoot out her tires after she refused to stop her car.

O'Connor was suspended without pay for "failing to be forthright in interviews" with investigators after the shooting, Selvaggi said. Police later said he made "a false statement regarding the firing of three shots."

Selvaggi said O'Connor's use of the gun to try to stop the car appeared to violate police procedure, which calls for a weapon to be fired only when officers are endangered by a suspect.

The incident began at 1:40 a.m. when Mrs. Ferraro ran a red light and refused to stop for patrol car officers who used a siren, flashing lights and loudspeakers, he said.

Mrs. Ferraro, a former drug addict enrolled in a methadone program, slowly moved erratically up and down streets until, at one point, she ran up on a curb and stopped, he said.

An officer tried to open her door but she sped off, nearly pinning him against a wall, said police spokesman Peter O'Donnell.

After her car rolled over the sidewalk for about 60 feet and came off the curb, O'Connor fired three shots at her tires.

Rain, Tides Threaten Delay In Clearing Marshes Of Oil

MARTINEZ, Calif. (AP) — Wildlife biologists blasted gas-powered cannons to frighten birds from nesting marshes where a 175,000-gallon oil spill has killed at least 130 birds, as a frantic cleanup continued under threat of rain.

A Shell Oil official, meanwhile, said Wednesday that the spillage of thick crude in coastal wetlands about 40 miles northeast of San Francisco occurred Saturday after operators of an oil tank violated the company's written rules.

"The unanswered policy question is how and why the plant's practice came to deviate so drastically from company procedures," plant Manager Ron Banducci told reporters during a tour of the storage area at the Shell refinery.

Larry Kolb, principal engineer of the state Regional Water Quality Control Board, called the spill during the nesting season an "ecological disaster" in which damaged areas may take a year or more to recover.

Kolb and other officials said they fear rain and high tides will spread the oil now largely trapped in Peyton Slough and shorelines of Carquinez Strait to environmentally sensitive bird sanctuaries farther north and west.

Extra teams of the California Conservation Corps, totaling about 50 members, arrived Wednesday to help the 100 Shell workers already involved in the cleanup of the patchy 12-mile stretch of oil.

"We've got a long way to go, and we're trying to get there as fast as we can," Capt. Larry Broddrick of the state Fish and Game Department said Wednesday.

State wildlife biologists set up a dozen "zon" guns, propane gas-powered cannons, to scare birds away from Peyton Slough and marsh, where about 80,000 gallons of the oil have been trapped by man-made booms in the water.

By Wednesday night, about 400 oil-coated birds had been rescued from the marsh and about 130 of them had died, according to Capt. Dave Zawadzki of the U.S. Coast Guard. At least two dozen turtles, marsh mice and muskrats also were found dead.

Washington Honors Lady Bird For Efforts To Dress Up City

WASHINGTON (AP) — Washington is paying tribute this week to the first lady who helped dress the city in its spring finery of blooming tulips and blossoming dogwoods.

Lady Bird Johnson "deserves the national applause and appreciation for what she's done for the country," says David Northington, executive director of the National Wildflower Research Center in Austin, Texas.

Separate ceremonies were planned today in the House, Senate and White House Rose Garden to honor Mrs. Johnson, wife of former president Lyndon Johnson and founder of the wildflower center.

More events are planned Friday marking her 75th birthday, which she celebrated this past December.

"It think it's very fitting," Northington said Wednesday. "This celebration is about all she's done."

Mrs. Johnson said earlier this month she was inspired to beautify Washington as first lady after returning from trips abroad with her husband.

She said flowers light up a city the way lipstick does a woman, and her interests in beautifying the environment widened with the years: from the traffic circles and public buildings in Washington to the coasts and the heartlands in between.

With a donation of 60 acres east of Austin and $125,000, Mrs. Johnson in 1982 helped found the National Wildflower Research Center, an information clearinghouse where research is done on the role of native wildflowers in landscaping along the nation's roadways.

Proceeds from the Jubilee Celebration will benefit the center, Northington said. Activities include a black-tie dinner tonight, a luncheon Friday at the Watergate Hotel with leaders of the Washington community, a national concert and a reception by the Texas State Society and members of the Texas congressional delegation.

"The best way to honor her is to give a gift to something she started — it is a little bit of everything that she's done all her life," Northington said.

Proceeds will go to an endowment that supports research into the conservation and use of wildflowers and native plants, he said.

May 3rd Democratic Primary

Tom Taft knows the farmers in Pitt, Martin and Beaufort counties, and he knows how important farming is — and always will be — to our communities.

He has farming interests himself, and he is a member of the Farm Bureau.

As a State Senator, he has sponsored more than a dozen bills for the Farm Bureau and the N.C. Department of Agriculture. And when the Department of Agriculture needed a key legislator to master biotechnology, genetic engineering and other issues vital to the future of agriculture, it turned to Senator Taft.

For four years, he has been Vice Chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, in a key position to help farmers with important legislation.

He has been a leader in fighting for the interests of our tobacco economy.

Farmers need a Senator with a proven record of leadership and results fighting for them in Raleigh. A Senator like Tom Taft.

Orbiting Junk Threatens Station

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chunks of shrapnel from unexplained explosions are hurtling through space at 22,000 mph and forcing designers to add tons of shielding to protect the proposed U.S. space station and its crew.

Nearly 7,100 pieces of orbiting debris are being tracked by the U.S. Space Command and more than half came from satellites or spent rockets that "have blown up or broken up for unknown reasons," a NASA expert says.

More than 90 satellites to date have shattered unaccountably, but Don Kessler, project scientist for debris studies at the Johnson Space Center in Houston, said he doubts the cause is collisions with meteoroids or tests of secret anti-satellite weapons.

"They are like a time bomb waiting to explode," Kessler said in a telephone interview. "These explosions have occurred everywhere, from one day (after launch) to three years."

Space station planners, "faced with a considerable design problem," are adding 2,000 pounds to the shielding of each of the six modules occupied by astronauts.

"The debris gets most severe at 500-600 miles," Kessler said, "but usually unmanned spacecraft are at that altitude and don't require the same level of safety as a crew." The space shuttle generally operates at altitudes of 150 to 300 miles and so will the space station.

"When I first started working in this area, very few people knew how their spacecraft were breaking up, including the designers," Kessler said. "The Space Command knew they were breaking up, but never took the time to identify why."

He said officials have long believed that French-made Ariane rockets explode in space but their orbits are difficult to track with ground radar. Two years ago, however, an Ariane was launched into an easy-to-track orbit and, Kessler said, "it blew up after nine months." The fragments of that explosion — probably caused by over pressurization of gases — number 450.

Americans and Soviets contribute to the space junk, too. Six U.S. Delta rocket second stages exploded, the last in 1981 — three years after it was launched. The cause was leakage of fuels that burn when they combine and the problem was fixed in later models.

Star Wars Effort Reported On Track

WASHINGTON (AP) — The step-by-step search for a defense in space against Soviet ballistic missiles is on track and the first phase of the Star Wars program will be technically deployable between 1995 and 2000, a senior U.S. negotiator said today.

In a prepared speech to a major defense contractors group, Edward L. Rowny said research "is not only alive but healthy and thriving" in such areas as developing technology that can discriminate between Soviet decoys and nuclear warheads targeted on the United States.

Rowny, who advises President Reagan and Secretary of State George P. Shultz, disputed published reports that the administration was scaling back the program, known formally as the Strategic Defense Initiative.

Recently, he said, six key SDI technologies were approved by Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci for demonstration tests to validate they would help shield the country from Soviet ballistic missile attack.

He acknowledged that an unpublished report by Congress' Office of Technology Assessment last July identified some "gaps" in Star Wars technology. But Rowny, a former Army lieutenant general who has participated in negotiations for 20 years, said development has moved quickly in the nine months since the report was submitted to the Pentagon.

As an example, he cited an experiment known as Delta 181 that discriminated between decoys and warheads.

Rowny said a high-level panel directed by Robert Everett, chairman of the Pentagon's senior scientific advisory group, had recommended proceeding "step-by-step as technology is developed" for the Star Wars program.

Rowny, addressing a meeting of the American Defense Preparedness Association, urged the contractors "to get the truth out about SDI."

He criticized reports in The Washington Post that the Pentagon was sharply scaling back its efforts to fulfill President Reagan's dream of rendering ballistic missiles "impotent and obsolete" with a space-based defense against them.

Rowny said reports of SDI's demise were "dead wrong." But, he said, progress in key areas will be slowed or aborted if Congress continues to fund the program below required levels.

The first phase of the program would use kinetic energy and other futuristic technology to provide a partial defense against nuclear missiles.

Rowny said deployment would "greatly complicate" the ability of Soviet military planners to execute a successful first strike of ballistic nuclear missiles against the United States.

Critics contend the program is fanciful, extremely expensive and a major stumbling block in negotiations with the Soviet Union.

Bush, Dukakis Bone Up For November

By LAURA KING
Associated Press Writer

George Bush, the Republican presidential nominee in all but name, expressed eagerness to debate Michael Dukakis and challenged the Democratic front-runner to "fire away." Dukakis did just that, using the Iran-Contra affair as ammunition, and added that he'd be "delighted" to debate.

Jesse Jackson, meanwhile, said his big loss to Dukakis in Tuesday's Pennsylvania primary did not mean he was out of the Democratic contest.

"This is a tight race. ... It is closer now than ever before," Jackson said as he campaigned in Ohio, where 159 delegates are at stake in Tuesday's contest. He had a series of stops set around the state today.

Indiana and the District of Columbia also vote Tuesday, offering 79 and 16 Democratic delegates respectively.

"We know how to win," Jackson told a crowd of 5,000 at a rally in Cincinnati on Wednesday night. "We've come a long way."

In other developments:

— The Federal Election Commission earmarked $2 million in matching funds to current and former presidential candidates on Wednesday. The candidate who has received the most matching funds overall — $8.6 million — is Pat Robertson, who technically remains a Republican candidate although Bush has the delegates needed to nominate.

Robertson has congratulated Bush on wrapping up the nomination and pledged to help elect a Republican.

— A commission formed by the major political parties said four cities and dates have been tentatively chosen for presidential debates this fall. They are: Annapolis, Md., Sept. 14; Winston-Salem, N.C., Sept. 25; Omaha, Neb., Oct. 11 and Pittsburgh, Oct. 27. However, the commission said the candidates have not yet made commitments.

Bush now has more than enough delegates to assure him the GOP nomination. His boss, President Reagan, is holding off on a formal endorsement but the White House indicated that one is near.

Republican Party and administration sources said Reagan planned to play a low-key role at the GOP's convention in August to avoid upstaging Bush. The sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the president would address the convention on opening night — Monday, Aug. 15 — and then leave the next morning for California.

On the Democratic side, Dukakis remained reluctant to describe himself as the likely nominee despite a string of wins and a widening delegate lead. Any reference to a fall faceoff with Bush is cautiously qualified with an if.

But Dukakis was sounding increasingly relaxed and confident. He sent the Boston Bruins hockey team a telegram Wednesday following a win over the Montreal Canadiens that advanced them to the semifinals in the Stanley Cup series.

"Having enjoyed a few wins myself lately, I can well imagine how you feel," the governor wrote. "Maybe your winning formula will rub off on me as I enter some playoffs of my own."

The Massachusetts governor said there was "no question" that if nominated, he would debate the Republican nominee.

"I've already agreed to," he said. "I'd be delighted."

Bush said he, too, was ready. "I will have debates and I look forward to it," he told CNN.

The vice president has criticized Dukakis for lacking foreign policy experience.

'Alberto' Is Choice For Storm

MIAMI (AP) — Alberto will be the Atlantic's first named storm of 1988 and Aletta will be the Pacific's.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration announced the names Wednesday. The list alternates between male and female names, which are picked by international agreement.

The storms get names when they achieve tropical storm status, with winds of at least 38 mph. If they strengthen, with sustained winds at least 74 mph, they become hurricanes, which are sometimes called typhoons in the Pacific.

The Atlantic hurricane season begins June 1. The Pacific storm season starts May 15.

Here are the storm names for the East Coast, including the Atlantic Ocean, the Caribbean and the Gulf of Mexico: Alberto, Beryl, Chris, Debby, Ernesto, Florence, Gilbert, Helene, Isaac, Joan, Keith, Leslie, Michael, Nadine, Oscar, Patty, Rafael, Sandy, Tony, Valerie and William.

West Coast: Aletta, Bud, Carlotta, Daniel, Emilia, Fabio, Gilma, Hector, Iva, John, Kristy, Lane, Miriam, Norman, Olivia, Paul, Rosa, Sergio, Tara, Vicente, Willa, Xavier, Yolanda and Zeke.

Death Sought

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Prosecutors will "actively seek the death penalty" for an unemployed handyman convicted of strangling seven women while having sex with them, then leaving their bodies to rot in and near his apartment.

Harrison "Marty" Graham, 29, was convicted Wednesday of murder and abuse of corpse charges and was scheduled for sentencing today.

Graham lured the women to his apartment with the promise of drugs then strangled them during sex, according to his own confession to police.

The bodies were found last Aug. 9 and 10 after Graham was evicted from his apartment because of a putrid stench. He lived in a drug-infested north Philadelphia neighborhood where he was known as a handyman.

Police pried open a nailed door to find six rotting bodies in Graham's bedroom, leg and foot bones on the roof of his apartment house and a torso in the basement of a neighboring house.

Graham surrendered to police Aug. 16 at his mother's urging.

Close Race Ahead

NEW YORK (AP) — Polls are pointing to a potentially close general election race between George Bush and Michael Dukakis, with Jesse Jackson more hindrance than help as a Democratic vice presidential nominee.

The biggest spread between the likely nominees was in a poll conducted April 21-22 for Time magazine: Dukakis had an 11-point lead over Bush, 50 to 39. A Gallup poll April 21-23 showed a virtual tie, Bush 45, Dukakis 43, as did a USA Today-CNN poll April 20-21, Dukakis 45, Bush 43.

Voter opinions change in the course of a campaign, and the recent round of surveys testing Bush against Dukakis, with and without Jackson, may bear no resemblance to the outcome six months from now, pollsters said in interviews this week.

But the polls do establish a benchmark from which future movement can be judged, they said. And taken in context, the polls can highlight candidate strengths and weaknesses, providing clues to the campaign's likely course.

"We're not clairvoyant. This the way it is right now. It's April. It's not November. It's close in April," said ABC News poll chief Jeff Alderman. "If Dukakis was trailing Bush by 20 points, we could say something now."

That lack of a big lead for the better-known Bush is one important result of the recent polls.

Non-OPEC Producers Propose Cutbacks

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Now that rival oil producers have offered OPEC the help it sought for years, the cartel seems unsure how to use it.

Mexico, China and four smaller independent oil producers offered to cut their exports by 5 percent if the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries makes a proportionally similar sacrifice.

All the OPEC members say they're pleased the offer was made, but few said whether they like the idea.

Oil ministers from all 13 OPEC member countries arranged a meeting tonight to decide what to do about the proposal.

Some analysts say the plan, if accepted by OPEC and implemented by all 19 countries involved, probably would push oil prices up to OPEC's target of $18 a barrel. Most OPEC crude are selling in the open market for $16 a barrel or less.

The oil market in Europe was unsettled and slightly weaker today in early trading, London-based traders said.

The price of Brent crude from the North Sea was down 25 cents, at $17.25 a barrel, roughly matching declines in late New York trading on Wednesday.

Analysts said the market appeared to be viewing the OPEC talks as only a prelude to more crucial negotiations in June, when the cartel may face tough decisions about cutting production by larger amounts to avert a price slide.

"For now they're just firefighting," said Paul McDonald, a London-based oil consultant.

Prices fell Wednesday on the New York Mercantile Exchange. The June contract West Texas Intermediate, the most widely traded U.S. crude, fell 33 cents to $18.27 a barrel.

The six non-OPEC countries involved are Mexico, China, Malaysia, Egypt, Angola and Oman.

World Population Booming

WASHINGTON (AP) — The world population could double to more than 10 billion people within four decades, say researchers who contend previous predictions of a slowdown appear to be wrong.

"The overall world population is growing faster than had been projected in the late 1970s and early '80s," said Carl Haub of the private Population Reference Bureau.

The next billion could be added by 1998, said Haub, adding, "That's really fast."

The World Population Data Sheet, issued Wednesday by the bureau, said the doubling would occur if world population continues to grow at the current rate of 1.7 percent.

It took all of human history to raise the world's population to 1 billion, which occurred in the early 1800s — during the presidency of Thomas Jefferson.

More than a century was required to add the second billion, by about 1930, according to the United Nations Fund for Population Activities. Three billion were here by 1964, 4 billion in 1974 and 5 billion in 1987.

There is a perception that world population growth was a problem of the 1970s, Haub observed in a telephone interview, "so we thought it was time to point out that it's still growing faster than had been projected."

The 1.7 percent rate of annual growth given by the Bureau, an independent, non-profit research group, is slightly higher than the 1.6 percent projected by the United Nations.

"That doesn't sound like much," Haub pointed out. But in a world of 5 billion people, that difference represents 5 million more people per year.

Population growth hasn't followed the smooth trend downward that had been expected in many developing nations, Haub said. He noted in particular that China, India, Pakistan and Iran have high growth rates.

"Some of the larger countries have not followed a nice smooth path to the two-child family that we have been predicting," said Haub, noting in particular China and India, where previous reductions in births have not been maintained.

The doubling of the world population in 40 years depends on growth continuing at the 1.7 percent rate, Haub said, a rate that varies considerably from country-to-country and region-to-region.

The more developed nations, for example, are growing at 0.6 percent annually, for an anticipated doubling time of 120 years, the Population Data Sheet shows.

Massive Fire Destroys Over 1,000 Homes In Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A fire described as the city's biggest since World War II swept through a crowded shantytown near an oil storage area today and destroyed more than 1,000 homes, the fire chief said.

At least four people were reported injured and thousands were believed to be homeless. No deaths were reported.

Firefighters concentrated on preventing the flames from reaching the oil tanks rather than on saving houses, and angry residents responded by pelting the trucks with stones. They piled their belongings in the street and began fighting the blaze themselves with buckets of water.

The flames spread to within 24 feet of the state-owned petroleum company compound, said Col. Oscar Pascual, deputy fire chief. Fire Chief Brig. Gen. Ernesto Madriaga said a shift in the winds prevented the fire from reaching it. Madriaga estimated that more than 1,000 dwellings, mostly squatter shanties, were razed before the fire was brought under control after 4½ hours. The cause of the blaze had not been determined.

"During the early stage, fire threatened the depot because there was a strong wind blowing in that direction," he said. "However, wind direction changed and the fire near the depot was placed under control."

There was no immediate estimate of damage. But Madriaga said the blaze was "possibly the biggest in Manila since World War II."

He said flames destroyed a candy warehouse and virtually every building in a 25-acre area along the Pasig River, which runs through the heart of Manila.

Oil companies such as Shell, Caltex and the state-run Philippine National Oil Co. maintain storage tanks in the area. The presidential palace is about 1½ miles away on the other side of the river.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 48 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2½ to 3 pounds birds. Too few percent of the loads offered have been confirmed, so there is no final weighted average. The market is steady and the live supply is adequate, with instances barely adequate, for a good demand. Average weights mostly desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 2,110,000, compared to 2,119,000 last Thursday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn steady to 1 cent lower at mostly 2.15-2.24 in East and mostly 2.31-2.41 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans mostly 1 to 2 cents lower at mostly 6.71-6.86 in East and mostly 6.68-6.74 in the Piedmont; new crop wheat, 1 to 2 cents lower, 2.90-3.00; new crop corn 1.89-2.35; new crop soybeans 6.63-7.04. Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were steady to one-half of 1 percent lower and ranged from 98-100 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market pulled back a bit today in the face of rising interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks dropped 9.28 to 2,038.63 in the first half hour of trading.

Losers outnumbered gainers by more than 2 to 1 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 281 up, 674 down and 436 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 17.10 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Prices of long-term government bonds showed losses approaching $5 for each $1,000 in face value in early activity today, putting their yields in the neighborhood of 9.05 percent.

Losers among the blue chips included International Business Machines, down ½ at 113½, and General Electric, down ½ at 40¼.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks lost .54 to 148.40. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .73 at 300.43.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 3.15 to 2,047.91, posting its fifth consecutive gain.

Advancing issues slightly outnumbered declines on the NYSE, with 765 up, 696 down and 494 unchanged.

Signs Going Up

highways from the road to the outlying fence, or along secondary roads where the state cuts the grass.

"Signs which fall down and are hidden in the grass could damage our equipment, or if struck by the mower, could become flying projectiles, dangerous to both people and property," said state Board of Transportation member Randy D. Doub.

According to Doub, state transportation workers have the right, and have been, taking down election signs which were placed illegally during this election season.

"It's a lot of wasted effort for our workers to have to stop whatever they're doing to remove these signs," he said.

Doub said, although he's seen many signs illegally placed, he believes there are less violations during this election period than in previous years.

Greenville Public Works Director Mayo Allen said unless the city receives a complaint regarding a specific violation, illegally placed signs are usually left alone until after the election.

"Come Wednesday morning, we'll be taking them down. It's a standard procedure we go through to help beautify the city," he said.

Allen advised city residents who see signs that are illegally placed and are visually annoying, or which might create a dangerous visual obstruction at an intersection, to call public works and the sign will be removed.

Allen said his past experience dealing with the matter indicates it's usually the winning official who readily complies with the law and voluntarily removes the campaign signs, while the losing candidate lets the city handle the chore.

Magaret Hardee, supervisor of the Pitt County Board of Elections, said a copy of the law pertaining to sign placement and the removal ordinance adopted by the city has been given or mailed to each candidate who files for election. She said candidates are encouraged to have their workers keep problems with signs in mind when placing them.

"We hear from candidates and their workers frequently about the illegal placement of signs," she said. "Since this is beyond our jurisdiction, we usually refer them to the proper authorities such as the county attorney, city attorney or the Department of Transportation," she added.

Amendment Approved To AIDS Spending Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate today approved a ban on federal money for programs that distribute clean needles to drug addicts unless the surgeon general finds that such methods will curb the spread of AIDS.

The amendment to an AIDS research and information spending bill was a compromise reached after the Senate rejected two outright bans pushed by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C. The conditional ban was approved on a voice vote after a 70-27 vote to modify the outright ban.

The AIDS bill, sponsored by Sens. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, is attracting a plethora of controversial amendments ranging from the clean-needle ban to restrictions on federally funded AIDS education materials.

Public health authorities in some places are trying to stem the rapid spread of AIDS among drug addicts by allowing them to turn in dirty needles which may be contaminated and receive clean ones.

"It's far too early to make a final judgment on the needle-exchange program. The results are mixed. There hasn't been adequate research," said Kennedy, sponsor of the compromise amendment.

The amendment says money under the bill could not go for clean needles for individuals for the purpose of using illegal drugs, unless the surgeon general finds such programs help stop either drug addiction or the spread of AIDS.

Import Prices Up

American grain prices rose 3.1 percent following a 14.2 percent jump in the fourth quarter as a drop in wheat prices helped to offset continued increases in rice and corn prices.

The price of American meat products rose 5.1 percent following six months of declines while the index for fruits and vegetables fell for the fourth consecutive quarter.

On the import side, foreign cars and machinery, which account for nearly one-half of all U.S. imports, rose 1.7 percent in the first quarter after increasing 2.7 percent in the fourth quarter.

During the first quarter, the dollar declined in value against other currencies by 1.4 percent. This was a substantial slowdown from a 5.8 percent plunge in the dollar's value during the fourth quarter. It reflected the massive buying of dollars on foreign currency markets which the United States and other countries have been doing this year to brake the greenback's fall.

Overall consumer prices rose 4.4 percent last year, up from a 1.1 percent rise in 1986. A turnaround in the cost of imported energy and higher import prices generally were blamed for much of the worsening in inflation last year.

This year many economists are looking for a further rise in consumer inflation of between 4 percent and 5 percent as the weaker dollar continues to push up the cost of imports.

The Reagan administration, led by Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, launched an effort in September 1985 to drive the value of the dollar lower in an effort to shrink the country's huge foreign trade deficits. In February 1987, the major industrial countries switched course and started a coordinated effort to keep the dollar from falling further.

However, that effort failed last year as market forces continued to batter the dollar on the assumption that continued high monthly trade deficits pointed up a need for a still-lower dollar to reduce Americans' appetite for imports.

Baltimore Taking Aim On Philadelphia's Loss Mark

By JIM DONAGHY
AP Sports Writer

Winning and losing are part of baseball. Losing 23 in a row — that's part of a legacy.

In the summer of 1961, the Philadelphia Phillies lost 23 consecutive games to establish a modern record. It's something the participants don't like to be remembered for.

But it's there, like a rut in the outfield or a pebble in the infield.

Only a few teams in the history of professional baseball know the despair of going weeks without a victory or a handshake. The winless Baltimore Orioles have found out about life in the slow lane this year, matching the American League record with a 20 consecutive losses.

On Aug. 20, 1961, the Phillies played a doubleheader in Milwaukee having lost 22 straight.

Philadelphia dropped the first game 5-2 to the Braves and Warren Spahn to make it 23 straight. But the Phillies came back to win the second game 7-4 behind Johnny Buzhardt.

Buzhardt, 4-13 after the victory, broke the losing streak that began on July 28. He had been the last Philadelphia pitcher to win a game.

"I figured I was due. We all were due," Buzhardt said. "I was beginning to forget what it was like to win."

In the victory over the Braves, Buzhardt even had a run batted in.

Only two teams in the history of pro baseball had longer losing streaks than the 1961 Phillies.

In 1889, Louisville of the American Association lost 26 straight, and in 1899 Cleveland of the National League dropped 24 in a row. Louisville finished their season 27-111 and made 584 errors. Cleveland was 20-134.

"It was a good feeling in Milwaukee when we finally won," second baseman Tony Taylor said. "It was like we won the World Series."

And like a World Series victory, there was a crowd to welcome the Phillies when they got home.

Taylor, now a coach with the Phillies, said the team was told a crowd was waiting to greet them at the airport. But some of the Phillies were suspicious that one thousand violins would not begin to play when they landed.

"Frank Sullivan (a pitcher) said 'Their selling rocks for $1.50 a bushel so we better get out in single file,'" Taylor said.

There was a 300-piece band at the airport and more than 2,000 fans to welcome the victorious Phillies.

"We were hesitant to get off the plane," Taylor remembered. "But it was a good feeling. The band lifted (Manager) Gene Mauch on their shoulders."

Taylor says once the streak was over there was no problem forgetting it.

"Once we won in Milwaukee I forgot quickly," he said. "We were a young team. A lot of players — like Tony Gonzalez, Johnny Callison and Chris Short — were only in the league two or three years. We knew there were better days ahead."

But from July 28-Aug. 20 the days were long, hard and frustrating.

"It's tough to go to the park each day when all you're doing is losing, losing, losing," Taylor said. "We were looking for ways to lose the game.

"We knew we had to make the big play but we couldn't make it. Everything went wrong."

Mauch, only in his second year as a big league manager, had different ways to handle the losing and the pressures of losing 23 straight.

In a defeat to St. Louis, the Phillies had the tying run on second base with none out in the ninth and then made three straight outs without advancing the runner. When the game was over, Mauch kicked batting helmets all over the field.

Mauch also put his fist through an office door and broke the light bulbs in the dugout at Connie Mack Stadium. A protective device was placed over the bulbs but Mauch still broke them — with a bat.

During another loss, Gonzalez was tagged hard at home plate by St. Louis catcher Hal Smith and a brawl ensued. Mauch, 36 years old at the time, led the charge and ended up with a black eye.

"Gene Mauch was outstanding," Taylor said. "He never got down on us or made drastic changes. He was mad at losing but not mad at any individual. He knew we were trying."

The games were also trying for Mauch.

On Aug. 17, the Phillies seemed poised to stop the streak at 19. They had a 6-4 lead over Milwaukee in the eighth inning when Hank Aaron walked and Joe Adcock homered to tie the score. The Phillies lost in the bottom of the 11th when Al Spangler singled in the winning run.

Although Mauch maintained a serious tone throughout the streak, he also tried a few unorthodox moves.

During one road swing, Mauch told his players there would be a bed check at 2 a.m. and anyone found in bed would be fined.

For a game in Chicago, Mauch told the Phillies to arrive at Wrigley Field at game time and not before.

"You try not to think about the losing but you can't," Mauch said. "Everyone keeps asking you about it and the fans at home and on the road know it."

The Phillies' losing streak also had a strange twist for utility outfielder Elmer Valo. Valo was a member of the 1943 Philadelphia Athletics team that lost 20 in a row.

Taylor says although he didn't realize it as a 26-year-old in 1961, he knows now what went wrong.

"You have to play loose to play winning baseball. When you begin to play tight things go wrong."

And lots of things went wrong for the 1961 Phillies.

They finished the season 47-107 and were last in batting (.243) and earned run average (4.61). Their best pitcher was Art Mahaffey at 11-19.

"It wasn't fun," Taylor said.

Axel Smith Cracks Two, Daniels Adds One Homer As Rose Rolls Up 8-2 Win

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Alex Smith cracked two home runs and David Daniels added another as Rose High School romped to an 8-2 baseball victory over Wilson Beddingfield Wednesday night.

Paul Powers tossed the victory for Rose, going the first five innings and allowing four hits. Both of the runs scored off him were unearned. Jamie Brewington came on to go the final two innings, allowing only one walk.

"I'm glad to get the win," Coach Ronald Vincent said. "We really made some mistakes on the bases that took us out of some potential big innings," he added.

Those mistakes cost Rose three outs. First, Tim Moore was thrown out trying to steal second when he got a very slow start. Then, David Leisten was thrown out trying to go from first to third on a single by Smith in the first inning.

Finally, David Daniels was picked off second base in the second inning by the Bruin catcher.

"I don't think we were intense as we needed to be," Vincent said. "But Axel had a great night, and I thought Paul pitched well for us."

"I'm pleased to be undefeated at the turn of the conference race. We are starting to play better now," the coach said.

Beddingfield took an early lead in the game, scoring once in the top of the first. Michael Worley led off, beating out an infield grounder. He moved up on a wild pitch and a passed ball and scored on Sylvester Langston's infield hit.

The Rampants came back to score three times in the bottom of the inning. Moore led off with a hit but was thrown out stealing. Leisten reached on an error but was thrown out at third on Smith's single to left.

Daniels followed that up with a towering homer to left field, putting Rose ahead at 2-1. Tom Moyer beat out a slow roller to third and came all the way around on a double to center by Chris Christopher.

Rose added two more in the second on Smith's first homer. Leisten singled with two away and Smith blasted the ball out of the park in left, running the lead to 5-1.

Another run crossed in the third. Christopher reached on a fielder's choice and moved to third on Brewington's single. A balk brought Christopher home, making it 6-1.

Beddingfield picked up its other run in the top of the fourth. With two away, Scott Braswell singled and moved up when William Barnes reached on an error. Leonard Edwards also was safe on an error which allowed Braswell to score.

Smith then hit a solo homer in the bottom of the frame to counter the Bruin run, making it 7-2.

Rose got its final run in the sixth. Daniels walked and Moyer was hit by a pitch. Christopher reached on a fielder's choice, as did Brewington. Each of the grounders erased the runner at second, and the last allowed Daniels to score.

Smith led the Rose hitting with three, while Moore, Moyer, Christopher and Brewington each collected two.

No one had more than one for the Bruins.

Rose climbs to 15-0 with the win and to 7-0 in Big East play. Beddingfield drops to 3-11, 0-6.

Orioles Find Another Way To Lose; Twins Win, 7-6

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Baltimore Orioles found another way to lose and Manager Frank Robinson figured it was his fault.

"I'll take the blame tonight. Maybe I didn't give the team a chance to win," Robinson said after the winless Orioles tied the American League record with their 20th straight loss Wednesday night, 7-6 to the Minnesota Twins.

"I didn't do a good managing job in the eighth inning," Robinson said. "I just didn't put the right people out there at the right time."

The Orioles managed to put the right players at the plate in the ninth inning when RBI singles by Cal Ripken and Eddie Murray pulled Baltimore within a run. The rally ended when Fred Lynn grounded out sharply to second base.

The Orioles matched the league record for consecutive losses set by Boston in 1906 and tied by the Philadelphia Athletics in 1916 and 1943.

Baltimore could set the record this afternoon against the Twins. The longest losing streak in modern major league baseball is 23, set by the Philadelphia Phillies in 1961.

"We had a chance to make something happen tonight," Robinson said. The Orioles scored three runs in the first inning, but wound up making history.

If there was any second-guessing, it was started by Robinson, now 0-14 since replacing the fired Cal Ripken Sr. Robinson declined to specify what he thought he did poorly in the eighth, although there were a couple of choices.

With the score 4-4, Larry Sheets hit a one-out single in the top half of the inning. Sheets is a slow designated hitter who has stolen three bases in 288 big league games, and is 0-for-2 this season.

Robinson had Sheets going on a hit-and-run, but Keith Hughes struck out on the pitch and catcher Tim Lardner, who had thrown out only one of 10 basestealers this season, tossed out Sheets by 10 feet.

In the dugout, meanwhile, sat Ken Gerhart. He has stolen 128 bases during his last five seasons in the minors, and the Orioles have him in the majors because of his speed.

Robinson brought in left-hander Bill Scherrer, promoted from Class AAA Rochester on Tuesday, to pitch the bottom of the eighth. The first batter he faced was Kent Hrbek, who rarely hits well against lefties.

Hrbek sent Scherrer's third pitch over the right-field fence. One pitch later, Tim Lardner also homered to right.

Lacey Named

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Trudi Lacey, 29, has been hired as women's basketball coach at the University of South Florida, the school announced Wednesday.

She replaced Anne Strusz, who resigned in March as head coach of the Lady Bulls. Ms. Lacey comes to USF from Francis Marion College in Florence, S.C. where she compiled a 53-12 two-year record. She played at North Carolina State.

"The reports were he had been getting out left-handers and right-handers," Robinson said of Scherrer. "I didn't want a pitcher in there just to face one batter."

The Twins scored another run in the eighth when John Moses walked, advanced on a balk and came home as Al Newman got a bunt single and reliever Doug Sisk threw the ball away.

The Orioles' last chance at avoiding the record book came with two outs in the ninth when Joe Orsulak singled and Billy Ripken walked off Juan Berenguer. Cal Ripken and Murray hit run-scoring singles against Keith Atherton before Lynn made the final out.

"We figured the odds were in our favor," Robinson said. "We had the people up that you'd want to have up."

Instead, it became another disappointment.

"I've only been here two days, but I feel like I've been here for all 20," said Scherrer, holding back tears.

The World Series champion Twins were not celebrating, either. They are just 7-11 and concerned about their situation, not Baltimore's problems.

"You can't worry about what they're doing," Hrbek said. "They showed a lot of character out there tonight. They were swinging the bats, trying to make things happen. They're not sitting back."

Keith Hughes and Craig Worthington, each recalled from Rochester along with Scherrer, contributed to the worst offense in the majors. The Orioles began the game hitting .194 and just .110 with runners in scoring position, and have been outscored 125-42 this season.

Jeff Stone opened the game with a walk and Billy Ripken had a hit-and-run single. Cal Ripken got an RBI single and after Sheets drew a two-out walk that loaded the bases, Hughes hit a two-run single. Terry Kennedy then struck out, making him 0-for-16 with runners in scoring position this season.

Worthington opened the second with a 433-foot home run to center field, his first major league hit. It was the fifth homer allowed by Bert Blyleven in 21 2-3 innings.

Scott McGregor, however, could not protect the lead. McGregor, winless since last May 16, gave up leadoff singles to Dan Gladden, Tom Herr and Kirby Puckett and a sacrifice fly to Gary Gaetti in the first inning.

Herr, recently traded by St. Louis to Minnesota, had gone hitless in 12 at-bats before going 4-for-5 and scoring his 500th major league run.

Mark Davidson's RBI grounder brought Minnesota within 4-3 in the second and Newman's RBI single in the fourth tied the score and finished McGregor.

"Scotty just didn't look like he was going to be able to do the job tonight," Robinson said.

Blyleven left after six innings, giving up six hits and striking out nine. Berenguer, 3-2, pitched 2 2-3 innings for the victory and Atherton held on for his first save.

Same Old Story

Baltimore Oriole relief pitcher Bill Scherrer looks resigned as Minnesota Twins' Tim Lardner rounds the bases after hitting a homer in the eighth inning of Wednesday night's game. The homer helped the Twins to a 7-6 win, handing the O's their 20th consecutive loss, tying an American League record. (AP Laserphoto)

Vikings, Rams Post Victories

BEAUFORT — D.H. Conley's Vikings, after a couple of Coastal Conference losses, snapped back to rip East Carteret, 10-1, in baseball action Wednesday.

Bronswell Patrick went the distance on the mound for the Vikings, allowing only three hits. He struck out 12 and walked three.

Conley pushed over two runs in the first inning to take the lead for good. Patrick singled and Jim Faulkner hit a two-out two-run homer.

The Vikings added two more in the third, running their lead to 4-0. Gray Mills reached on an error and stole second. Scottie Barnhill also was safe on a miscue and both runners advanced on a passed ball. Faulkner walked and Kervin Vines singled, driving in both Mills and Barnhill.

Conley added single runs in the fourth and fifth, then scored three in the sixth. One final run came over in the seventh.

East Carteret scored its only run in the bottom of the third.

Patrick and Vines each had three hits while Barnhill, Faulkner and Robbie Nichols each had two for Conley. No one had more than one for East Carteret.

Conley is now 9-5 overall and 4-2 in the Coastal Conference. The Vikings step outside the conference on Friday to play at SouthWest Edgecombe.

Farmville falls to 5-11 overall and 2-4 in the conference and returns to action Tuesday at South Lenoir.

Aycock moves to 8-5 overall and 4-2 in the EPC.

Farmville C.....6

FARMVILLE — Danny Miller went 4-6 with two home runs and keyed a 25-hit attack as C.B. Aycock took a 24-6 win over Farmville Central in Eastern Plains 2-A Conference baseball action Wednesday.

Farmville took an early 4-2 lead before Aycock rallied with two runs in the top of the third to tie the game.

The Falcons then blew the game open in the fourth with seven runs and followed that by scoring six more in the fifth to make it 17-4.

C.B. Aycock had five hits in the fourth, keyed by a three-run single by Mark Casey.

Shea Terrell went 2-4 to lead Farmville.

Miller's homers came in the first and in the sixth. Marvin Ford went 3-5 with two homers, in the fifth and seventh innings. Bob Grant went 4-6 and had a homer in the fifth inning that drove in three runs.

Farmville falls to 5-11 overall and 2-4 in the conference and returns to action Tuesday at South Lenoir.

Aycock moves to 8-5 overall and 4-2 in the EPC.

SNOW HILL — Greene Central High School romped to a 14-0 baseball victory in a non-conference game against North Lenoir Wednesday night.

The 2-A Rams had little trouble against the 3-A Hawks, limiting North Lenoir to only five hits on the evening.

The Rams got all they needed in the first inning, scoring a single run. T.J. Johnson singled and stole second. He came around on a single by Shay Beaman.

Then, in the second, Greene Central scored seven times to put it out of reach. Tommy Eason had a two-run single in the frame while Cornelius Hill hit a two-run triple. The Rams also took advantage of three walks and an error by the Hawks.

The Rams added four more in the fourth and two in the sixth to account for the 14-run total.

Hill and Johnson each had two hits to lead the Ram attack, with Hill having four RBI. Shawn Heath had two of the five North Lenoir hits.

Now 12-1, the Rams return to Eastern Plains Conference action on Friday night, hosting Charles B. Aycock.

Knight's Remarks Draws New Fire

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Indiana University basketball Coach Bob Knight has a duty to the young people who idolize him to clarify his feelings about rape, an official in the school's women's affairs office says.

Knight has been the subject of criticism since a nationally televised interview Monday night in which he compared rape with handling stress.

"I think that if rape is inevitable, relax and enjoy it," the coach said when NBC correspondent Connie Chung asked him how he handled stress.

"That's just an old term that you're going to use. The plane's down, so you have no control over it," he added.

"I'm not talking about that, about the act of rape. Don't misinterpret me there. But what I'm talking about is, something happens to you, so you have to handle it — now."

The statement prompted several angry calls to the university Tuesday and Wednesday.

"We've gotten a lot of reaction to that as a very old and very dangerous stereotype about the crime of rape ... It's just really important that the university as a whole have a strong stand against assault ..." said Trisha Bracken, assistant to the dean for women's affairs.

"I personally don't believe Coach Knight believes that stereotype. I believe his heart is in the right place and he knows that rape is a life-shattering violent crime," she added.

Youth Baseball

Southern Pitt

Green. Marine.....14
Home Care Bears.....4

The Greenville Marine Cardinals rolled up a 14-4 victory over the Grif-ton Home Care Bears in the Southern Pitt Little League Wednesday night.

Moses Ward tossed the win for the Cardinals, pitching the entire game. Ward also helped his own cause with a three-run homer.

The Cardinals were also led by Randy Ward with three hits while Rico Hines had two and drove in three runs.

Little League

MacKenzie Security.....5

Pepsi-Cola scored five times in the first inning and went on to record a 12-5 victory over MacKenzie Security in the season opener for both teams in Tar Heel Little League play Wednesday.

MacKenzie took the initial lead with a pair of runs in the first inning but Pepsi came back to score five times in the bottom of the frame to take the lead. In the third, however, MacKenzie rallied for three to tie it up, 5-5.

In the bottom of the inning, however, Pepsi pushed over three to regain the lead, 8-5. Jason Howard doubled with two away and Jon Gavigan singled. An error on the play let Howard score and moved Gavigan to second. He took third on a wild pitch and Damian Phillips walked, then stole second. David Wilbourn reached on an error, scoring both Gavigan and Phillips.

Pepsi added four more in the fourth.

Gavigan led the Pepsi hitting with three while Howard added two. Alan Columbo had two hits to lead MacKenzie.

Goeff Stallings went the whole game to gain the win for Pepsi.

Eveready ..... 11
Clark Const.....7

Eveready scored four times in the bottom of the fifth inning to take an 11-7 victory over Clark Construction in their opening game of the North State Little League season Wednesday.

Clark scored one in the first and added another in the second before Eveready scored seven times in the bottom of the second. Clark scored four in the third to cut it to 7-6.

But in the bottom of the fifth, Eveready put it away, scoring four times. Neil Kataria walked and was safe on an error at second on Danny Via's grounder. Matt Magler then doubled to drive both runners over. Chris Grover singled and Scott Martin reached on an error that scored Hager and moved Grover to third. He scored from there on a wild pitch.

Clark tried to rally, scoring once in the top of the sixth.

Grover led the Eveready hitting with three while Hager had two. Nick Berkey and Brandon Moore each had two hits for Clark.

Via got the win with help from Scott Burrows, who came in in the fourth.

Indians Continue Warpath Run

By The Associated Press
Most of the current Indians weren't born or are too young to remember the last time Cleveland started a season with such impressive numbers.

Willie Upshaw hit a three-run homer and Greg Swindell won his fifth straight game as streaking Cleveland beat visiting Seattle 6-4 Wednesday night.

The Indians won for the 10th time in their last 12 games, and their 16-4 record matches the 1941 team for the best start in Cleveland history.

The victory tied Swindell with Oakland's Dave Stewart for the AL lead in wins, and his 5-0 start hasn't been equaled by a Cleveland starter since Jim "Mudcat" Grant won five to start the 1961 season.

Swindell, who was born in 1965, says his success should continue.

"I know I can throw, and if I stay healthy, hopefully my stats will speak for themselves," he said. "With this team's hitting, you just come out and throw fastballs. 'We feel we can score runs. My arm feels good, I'm throwing all my pitches. I've got confidence in my arm and the team.'"

Elsewhere in the American League, it was Minnesota 7, Baltimore 6; California 4, Detroit 3; Oakland 5, Toronto 3; Kansas City 3, New York 1 in 11 innings; and Milwaukee 4, Texas 3. A doubleheader between Boston and Chicago was rained out.

Cleveland scored five times in the sixth inning to overcome a 2-1 deficit. Mariners' starter Steve Trout, 2-2, started the inning by hitting Ron Kittle with a pitch and walking Mel Hall. Reliever Jerry Reed replaced Trout and walked Jay Bell to load the bases. Andy Allanson followed with a two-run bloop single to shallow left.

One out later, Upshaw lined a three-run homer to right for a 6-2 lead. Upshaw was celebrating his 31st birthday.

"I didn't really want anybody to know it was my birthday, but it's nice to have something good happen on a special day," Upshaw said.

Twins 7, Orioles 6

Baltimore tied an AL record with its 20th straight loss, falling to Minnesota at the Metrodome.

With the score tied 4-4 in the eighth inning, Kent Hrbek and Tim Lardner hit leadoff homers against reliever Bill Scherrer, 0-1. A walk, balk and throwing error by reliever Doug Sisk added another run.

The Orioles, who grabbed a 3-0 lead in the first, didn't quit, as they managed two runs off Juan Berenguer, 3-2, in the ninth.

Two-out, run-scoring singles by Cal Ripken and Eddie Murray brought Baltimore within 7-6, but reliever Keith Atherton got Fred Lynn to end the game on a grounder to second base with runners on first and third.

The Orioles matched the AL record for consecutive losses set by Boston in 1906 and the Philadelphia Athletics in 1916 and 1943.

The modern major-league record is 23 straight by the Philadelphia Phillies in 1961.

Royals 3, Yankees 1

Kevin Seitzer singled in Kurt Stillwell with the tie-breaking run with one out in the 11th inning as Kansas City beat New York for the Royals' first victory in Yankee Stadium since 1986.

Kansas City last won in New York on Aug. 10, 1986, a 13-3 victory.

Stillwell led off the 11th with a walk, moved to second on Willie Wilson's sacrifice, and scored on Seitzer's single to center. Reliever Charles Hudson also allowed an RBI double by Frank White in the 11th, scoring Seitzer.

Danny Tartabull tied the score 1-1 with two outs in the top of the ninth when he hit his fourth homer, off reliever Dave Righetti.

Tommy John, 44, shut out the Royals for 7 1-3 innings on two hits before being relieved.

Athletics 5, Blue Jays 3

Don Baylor's run-scoring single snapped a sixth-inning tie as visiting Oakland defeated Toronto.

With the score 2-2, Dave Henderson doubled down the right-field line with two outs against starter Mike Flanagan and Baylor singled to left to put the Athletics ahead.

Henderson's two-out homer in the eighth gave Oakland a 4-2 lead.

Angels 4, Tigers 3

Jack Howell drove in two runs with a triple and double as California beat Detroit at Tiger Stadium to snap a four-game losing streak.

Willie Fraser, 3-0, allowed three hits, and walked two batters in each of the first three innings. But he settled down and pitched 7 1-3 innings, allowing five hits overall.

Brewers 4, Rangers 3

Rob Deer broke a fifth-inning tie with a single as Milwaukee snapped a three-game losing streak at Arlington.

With the score tied 2-2, Robin Yount hit a one-out double in the fifth and scored one out later on Deer's single. In the sixth, Joey Meyer hit his second home run of the season to make it 4-2.

Beman's Play Is Questioned

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Some of golf's leading senior players question the propriety of Commissioner Deane Beman's participation in the Legends of Golf.

"I have some quiet reservations," Arnold Palmer said this week as he prepared for today's scheduled first round of the two-man best-ball competition for players 50 and older.

"I'm not jumping up and down and screaming about it, but I do have some reservations in my own mind," Palmer said.

"For example, what if he has to call for a ruling" from PGA Tour officials who are subject to Beman's authority. "What if he wins? And that's a very real possibility," Palmer said.

Bruce Devlin was more outspoken. "He shouldn't be playing," Devlin said. "He's taking the spot of some guy who's trying to make a living."

"My only problem with it is that he takes the strongest young senior player we have (Al Geiberger, as his partner)," Bob Goalby said.

"I guess one time is OK. But if he plays more than one, it's a conflict of interest," Dave Hill said.

Billy Casper, however, said he sees "nothing wrong with it. I think it just adds to the tournament."

Beman shrugged away the criticism.

"I think my performance over my career has earned me a place in the tournament," said Beman, who won two U.S. Amateur titles, the 1959 British Amateur and four PGA Tour titles before becoming commissioner in 1974.

"This is an independent event," Beman said. "It is not co-sponsored (by the PGA Tour). It is not official money."

To The Editor:

This is in response to a letter written by Robert J. Smith and printed in (The Caswell Messenger) March 31.

In that letter Mr. Smith called the Buc fans "obnoxious," and said our taunts and jeers had no place in the basketball arena. My reaction to this is, "Stop crying Mr. Smith." Last year when we suffered a 53-51 loss to D.H. Conley High School in the Eastern Regional finals, which I felt was due to poor officiating, we didn't blame everyone else for our loss. We just worked hard again this year for a chance to return to the Eastern Regional.

I think you are jealous of the large following (Bartlett Yancey). I feel that yelling and cheering is very much a part of basketball and belongs in the arena.

Some other points I think you should consider are the following. First, the yelling and hollering we did was only a small fraction of what some of your players will face if they attend a major college. Second, the majority of the cheers that we directed at your school were the same cheers that we had to endure last year in our losing effort. We had to swallow our pride along with these very same cheers. You should also consider that some of the Conley players were using foul language and directing their remarks toward the Buccaneer fans. Last, you should consider the money your school's athletic program made from the ball games. A great majority of this money was brought in by Buccaneer fans.

So in closing I ask you Mr. Smith, "Are you being a sore loser?" If not, then you concentrate on the positive. Your school has a very good athletic program and you should be proud of that. So please stop complaining and making excuses for their loss.

Robert K. Travis
Yanceyville

(Editor's Note: A copy of the Smith letter was enclosed. In it the writer praised the BYHS basketball team but criticized its fans, saying in part "Your obnoxious fans are better remembered by your opponents than your fine ball team. The taunts and jeers have no place in the basketball arena. The purpose of high school athletics is not to humiliate and belittle the opponents..." Smith asked that the fans learn to support their team in positive ways.)

Conley In 9-1 Victory

BEAUFORT — D.H. Conley used a strong first inning to roll to a 9-1 win over East Carteret in Coastal Conference softball action Wednesday.

Conley scored six runs in the first inning to take the early lead.

With one out, Rhonda Mills started things off in the first off an error. Tracy Summerell singled. Lori Powell also singled to score Mills. Charlene Davenport brought in Summerell with a single. Miriam Fulford's base hit scored Powell. Gail Cash hit the fifth single in a row for the Valkyries and scored Davenport. Beth McGhee closed out the scoring by knocking in Fulford and Cash later came home on an error on the throw in.

McGhee went 3-3 for the Valkyries, who move to 9-5 overall and 3-3 in the conference. Summerell added a 3-4 performance while Powell, Davenport, Fulford, Eileen Evans and Cash had two hits apiece.

Conley returns to action Friday at SouthWest Edgecombe.

Rose Girls Top Northeastern

Susan Hu won two events to help lead Rose High School's girls' track team to a 77-58 victory over defending Big East champion Elizabeth City Northeastern Wednesday.

Erika Hill met regional qualifying times in the 100-meter dash while Tiffany Williams met the standard in the 100-meter hurdles. Rose also qualified Katina Tyson in the 300-meter hurdles, and the 400-meter relay team of Cammie Smith, Tina Smith, Stefanie Hill and Donna Bivens.

Hu's two wins came in the 1,600- and 3,200-meter runs.

The meet closed out the regular season for Rose with a 9-1 record. Rose will take part in the Colonial Classics at New Bern Saturday, then will be in the Big East championship meet at Kinston on May 6.

Rose Tightens Grip In Soccer Lead

WILSON — Lisa Leisten scored both goals for Rose High School as the Ramettes nipped Wilson Fike, 2-1, to increase their lead in the Big East soccer race.

The Ramettes ran their record to 9-0 giving them a game and a half lead over Fike, 6-1-1, in the conference race. Fike is in second place.

The Lady Demons scored first, getting a goal from Molley Benson at the 17:25 mark of the first half.

Leisten came back to score with 38:15 gone in the half. That was after the Ramettes had failed to score on a penalty kick at about the 20 minute mark.

Leisten then hit what proved to be the winning goal in the second half, scoring at the 34:00 mark.

Rose outshot Fike, 24-6. Rose goalie Susan Grimsley recorded six saves while Fike's Sheri Parker had 15 saves.

Junior Netters Defeat Greenfield

Petty Fined $2,000 For Pannill Actions

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — A little extra driving has cost Kyle Petty $2,000. The stock car driver drew the fine Wednesday from NASCAR's Winston Cup director, Dick Beaty, for actions during the Pannill 500 at Martinsville, Va., last Sunday.

Kyle, in Talladega for next Sunday's Winston 500, met with Beaty on Wednesday before Beaty assessed two $1,000 fines under a rule that states that any "member who performs an act or participates in actions deemed by NASCAR officials as detrimental to the sport or NASCAR" can be fined or suspended.

Beaty said Petty drove through the crowded garage area and back toward the track after lengthy repairs during the Martinsville race. As he was trying to return, he found his way blocked by Neil Bonnett's idled car and tried to push Bonnett's car out of the way, sending spectators scrambling, officials said.

Beaty blackflagged Petty to the pits to discuss the incident and Petty stopped briefly, then roared off, swerving twice toward NASCAR inspectors standing on pit road. Beaty blackflagged Petty again and ordered him to the penalty box behind the pit wall for two minutes.

"I felt he had lost control of himself, so I parked him," Beaty said. "First, he came down behind pit road and ran into Neil Bonnett's car, and then backed up and ran into it again.

"And when a person has a mental attitude like that, he has no business being in a Winston Cup race."

Beaty said he fined Petty $1,000 for his behavior on pit road and $1,000 for his actions behind the pit wall.

Petty said in an interview earlier in the week that he "never got mad. I just got a little disgusted with NASCAR."

Morgan Overcomes Shoulder Problems

THE WOODLANDS, Texas (AP) — There was a time less than two years ago when pro golfer Gil Morgan wondered if he'd ever compete on the PGA Tour again. He'd just undergone a shoulder operation, the type that has ended the careers of some pro athletes.

But just look at him now.

Morgan has shot par or better in 27 of the 29 rounds he's played on the tour this year, entering today's first round of the $700,000 Independent Insurance Agent Open.

He hasn't finished lower than a tie for eighth in any of his seven tournament starts and his 68.47 average for scoring prior to the cut leads the tour.

"As competitive as people are out here, it's difficult to play well when you're healthy, much less when you're injured," Morgan said.

"I didn't know if I'd be able to compete on this level anymore and there was a chance that I would not be able to compete at all."

Yet Morgan is in the midst of one of his hottest streaks as a pro.

Morgan has only two over-par rounds this year.

He shot a 2-over 74 in the first round of the Andy Williams Open but returned in the second round with a course-tying 62.

That was Morgan's low round of the year, but he also had a course-tying 64 in the second round of the MCI Heritage Open.

Morgan's surgery was performed by Los Angeles surgeon Dr. Frank Jobe. But Morgan still is not at full strength.

"At this point, my scoring is back but I guess my longevity on the tour remains suspect," he said. "Dr. Jobe says it needs to be a little stronger for the long haul."

Morgan leads the tour's All-around statistical category, which is an average of 10 statistical categories.

Morgan is No. 1 on the tour with 133 par-breaking holes.

He ranks second in scoring, fifth in hitting greens in regulation, third in putting and sixth in driving.

Morgan's highest finish this year was a tie for second in the Heritage.

Ryan Just Misses In Bid For Sixth No-Hit Game

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Nolan Ryan hasn't pitched a complete game in two years but that doesn't mean he can't pitch another no-hitter.

The amazing 41-year-old fireballer came within two outs of what would have been the sixth no-hitter of his record-breaking career, then dejectedly settled for a no-decision as the Astros beat the Philadelphia Phillies 3-2 Wednesday night.

"I'm disappointed," Ryan said. "It would have been my first complete game and shutout in quite a while. I don't even remember when my last one was (his last complete game was April 25, 1986)."

"If I'd just lost a no-hitter and won the game I wouldn't have been disappointed. I let the lead get away, and I was one out away from winning the ballgame — a complete ballgame."

Ryan, who struck out nine, lost his no-hit bid when Mike Schmidt singled with one out in the ninth. With two out, Lance Parrish doubled home two unearned runs to tie the score. Ryan left for a pinch hitter in the bottom of the ninth.

In other National League games, it was St. Louis 2, San Diego 1; San Francisco 6, Pittsburgh 4; Montreal 1, Cincinnati 0; Los Angeles 4, Chicago 0, and New York 5, Atlanta 2.

In the Houston 10th, Glenn Davis singled with one out off reliever Kent Tekulve and went to third on Kevin Bass' hit-and-run single. Alan Ashby was intentionally walked to load the bases and Craig Reynolds batted for Chuck Jackson. He hit a grounder near second base which shortstop Steve Jeltz ran down but Davis easily beat his off-balance throw to the plate.

Ryan said he felt good about his no-hit bid in the eighth inning. "In fact," he said, "I felt better about it in the eighth than I do now. I was concerned about Schmidt in that situation. I had thrown him a curve earlier in that situation, so I didn't think he would be expecting it."

"I was more disappointed with the Parrish hit than I was with Schmidt. I got behind and I tried to give him a pitch he wouldn't hit."

Cardinals 2, Padres 1
Tom Brunansky hit his first National League home run and rookie Luis Alicea had a run-scoring single as St. Louis snapped San Diego's four-game winning streak.

Brunansky led off the fifth with a homer off Jimmy Jones, ending the Padres' shutout string at 37 innings. The Cardinals made it 2-0 in the seventh when Brunansky reached first on third baseman Randy Ready's throwing error, took second on a wild pitch and third on a groundout, then scored when Alicea bounced a single through a drawn-in infield.

"When you come to a new ballclub and you're a power hitter, they expect you to hit home runs," Brunansky said. "I had driven in a couple of runs and I felt comfortable with that. But getting that first home run takes a lot of pressure off me. Now I can feel comfortable at the plate."

Giants 6, Pirates 4
Kevin Mitchell drove in three runs and Dave Dravecky scattered nine hits over eight innings as San Francisco ended a four-game losing streak and cooled off the Pirates, who had won four straight games and 12 of their last 14.

A throwing error by loser Doug Drabek on Brett Butler's third-inning bunt helped the Giants score the run that broke a 2-2 tie. Butler reached third and scored when Mitchell grounded out.

The Giants broke a string of 19 scoreless innings with two runs in the bottom of the first. Mitchell snapped an 8-for-45 slump with a triple following Butler's leadoff walk and Will Clark brought Mitchell home with a sacrifice fly.

Mitchell got his third RBI in the fifth with a single following Butler's two-out double. Bob Melvin made the score 5-2 in the sixth with his third homer of the season and Candy Maldonado had an RBI single in the seventh. Bobby Bonilla and R.J. Reynolds homered for Pittsburgh.

Expos 1, Reds 0
Pascual Perez pitched a two-hitter with 10 strikeouts for his first shutout since July 6, 1984. The only Cincinnati hits were a second-inning bloop single by Bo Diaz and Chris Sabo's smash with two out in the ninth which third baseman Tim Wallach knocked down.

Montreal scored off Mario Soto in the third inning when Tim Lincecum tripled and Hubie Brooks singled.

Dodgers 4, Cubs 0
Don Sutton earned his 322nd career victory with six scoreless innings and drove in a run with a suicide squeeze bunt. Sutton, in his 23rd major-league season, allowed four singles, struck out three and walked three.

He was lifted in the seventh inning after yielding a walk and Jody Davis' single. Alejandro Pena pitched three innings of two-hit ball for his second save.

Sutton's run-scoring bunt capped a two-run third inning that padded the Dodgers' lead to 3-0 against Jamie Moyer. Mike Devereaux drove in the first run of the inning with a single. Steve Sax led off the Dodgers' first with a single, stole second and third with one out and scored on Kirk Gibson's grounder.

Mets 5, Braves 2
Keith Hernandez tied the game with a two-run homer, Lenny Dykstra walked with the bases loaded and Mookie Wilson added a two-run single in a five-run ninth inning.

The Braves led 2-0 as Zane Smith scattered four hits over seven innings and Bruce Sutter pitched a hitless eighth. But Sutter left for a pinch hitter and Paul Assenmacher walked leadoff batter Tim Teufel in the ninth. Hernandez followed with his third home run of the season, all in the last two games here. Assenmacher retired Darryl Strawberry, but Kevin McReynolds singled to deep short and went to third on a single by Gary Carter, who was thrown out trying for a double. Charlie Puleo took over and issued an intentional pass to Howard Johnson, then walked pinch hitters Dave Magadan and Dykstra to force in the go-ahead run. Wilson's single scored Johnson and Magadan.

The Braves took a 2-0 lead against Ron Darling in the fourth inning. Dale Murphy homered for the first run.

Twins Release Steve Carlton

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — If, as the Minnesota Twins say, Steve Carlton has reached the end of his career, how will he be remembered?

As a left-hander good enough to earn the nickname "Lefty" and four Cy Young Awards?

Or as a sullen star who stayed in the game too long and earned four pink slips in less than two years?

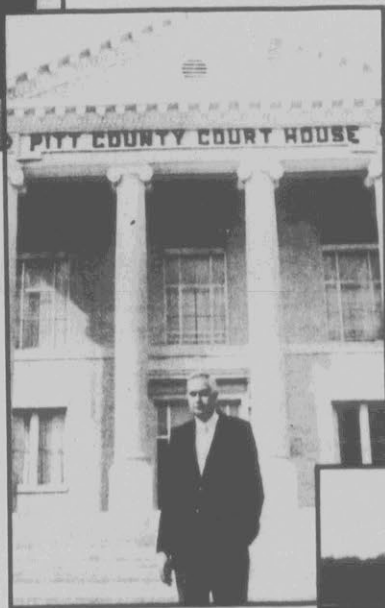

Carlton, 43, the winningest active pitcher in the major leagues, was released Wednesday by the Twins.

His earned run average was 16.76, bad enough to add three points to his 23-year career mark of 3.22. He was 0-1 this year, giving up nine runs in his only start, for a career record of 329-244.

Allison Crash Reduces Speeds

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — 200 mph had become commonplace.

There seemed to be no end in sight for escalating speeds at Alabama International Motor Speedway, where last May Bill Elliott broke his own all-time stock car qualifying record with a lap averaging 212.809 mph on the 2.66-mile, high-banked oval.

The raw speed here and at Daytona International Speedway — sizzling and exciting — put people in the seats and swelled interest in NASCAR racing.

Then, suddenly, Bobby Allison became part of a race-day tableau that forced the sanctioning body to rethink its position on speed.

A year ago, in the Winston 500, Allison's Buick, caught one lap earlier at 208 mph, became airborne, tore down about 75 feet of cable-reinforced steel fencing and scattered debris into a crowd of thousands in the main grandstand.

Allison walked away from the crash and none of the spectators hit by the shrapnel-like debris from the car and the fence was seriously injured.

"But it certainly made people think about what could have happened," Allison said Wednesday, the first day of practice for Sunday's Winston 500.

NASCAR had to do something before a similar incident turned into a disaster and threatened the very existence of the sport.

The sanctioning body slowed the 3,500-pound cars down for the July races here and at Daytona — the only 200-mph NASCAR tracks — by mandating a carburetor restrictor plate. That cut horsepower and slowed the cars by about 8 mph.

Still NASCAR felt that wasn't enough, going this year to a more restrictive carburetor plate — narrowing the openings through which air and fuel flow to the carburetor.

Depending on whom you listen to, engines are down anywhere from 100 to 200 horsepower, with the new plates, putting them in the 450-550 range.

At the Daytona 500 in February, top qualifying speeds were cut from the previous year by 16.5 mph — from 210.3 by Elliott in 1987 to 193.8 by Ken Schrader this year.

"The speeds are a little slower here now," said Allison, who won the Daytona race and became, at 50, the oldest driver to win a NASCAR stock car event.

"But speeds will be up some more (from Daytona)," he added. "You give these (mechanics and engine builders) a set of rules, a little time and time to run against each other, they'll figure out something no matter how difficult it is."

Asked if he thinks the sanctioning body is going about slowing down the cars in the right way, Allison said, "They make it a point not to ask me what I'm thinking or tell me what they're thinking."

"But, it's a step toward what they (NASCAR) are trying to do."

"I think it's their responsibility to keep things under control. It's expensive and difficult for our mechanics to keep making these changes, but maybe a different way might be difficult for them (NASCAR) to police or understand. I guess they do the best they can."

Elliott, driving a Ford Thunderbird, will try today for his seventh consecutive pole position at this track and fourth in a row for the Winston 500.

The top 20 positions for Sunday's race will be determined in the first round of time trials, with the rest of the 40-car field to be set in a qualifying session on Friday.

Jones Heads Up Marathon Field

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Would you believe Kim Jones — and not Joan Benoit Samuelson — voted the most likely runner to make the U.S. Olympic women's marathon team?

Jones, the former Kim Rosenquist before marrying Steve Jones last October, was picked to make the team in Sunday's Olympic Trials, ahead of Samuelson, the 1984 Olympic gold medalist.

The selection was made in a poll of Runner's World magazine readers. The voters chose Jones the most likely to make the team, but not to win the race.

Although Samuelson had 33 more first-place votes than Jones, the lesser-known Jones received more points, 510-492, on the basis of second- and third-place votes.

Third in the poll, with 306 points, was Nancy Ditz.

The first three finishers, in the expected field of more than 200, will earn places on the team — and $25,000 each from the total purse of $160,000.

Being rated ahead of Samuelson, the American record-holder at 2 hours, 21 minutes, 21 seconds, did not faze Jones, the first-place woman's finisher in the 1986 Twin Cities Marathon in 2:32:31, her career best.

"I'm surprised," she said, "but I don't read any of that stuff. It's hard to say what will happen Sunday."

Samuelson said Wednesday she would not run in the Trials because of a back injury which has slowed her training.

"I just don't think the Olympic Trials is a place to test my fitness, and that's what I think I'd be doing," she said. "If I had a few more weeks to train, I think I could do it. ... Time has just run out on me."

There is no question, however, about Jones being ready.

"I've been resting," she said. "I had not planned to race much until after the Trials. I want to go in rested."

"Even though I haven't been racing, I have been doing a lot of hard training (about 90 miles per week). It's easier to stay home (in Spokane, Wash.) and get the mileage in. I come out of it a lot stronger."

Jones' only tuneup races were a 10-kilometer race at Orlando, Fla., in February, in which she was fifth; a 15-kilometer race at Tampa, Fla., in February, in which she was eighth but broke her personal best by about 1½ minutes with a clocking of 50:09.

Attention Greenville Utilities' Customers!

Sorry for the Inconvenience -

We're Remodeling to Serve You Better!

Starting May 2, while our first floor is being renovated (including asbestos removal), all Cashiers and Customer Assistance Representatives will move temporarily to the Bowen Building, right next door. So, go to the Bowen Building (see diagram, below) if you need to....

- * Pay your utility bill
- * Apply for service

- * Disconnect service
- * Inquire about bills or service

The first floor will be closed to the public until renovations are complete, but you may enter the main building through the 5th Street entrance (across from City Hall) to get to the second and third floors where General Accounting, Personnel, Energy Services and the Administrative Offices are located.

If you have any questions, please call Customer Assistance, 752-7166.

White House Balks At Senate-Passed Trade Bill

By MIKE ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Trade Representative said today President Reagan will veto a massive trade bill passed by the Senate and called on congressional Democrats to revive it "very quickly" without a controversial plant-closings provision.

"We need a trade bill this year," Clayton K. Yeutter said on NBC-TV's "Today" program.

"There are a lot of good things in that legislation, so if a couple of necessary corrections are made and the bill comes back, I'm really quite confident the president would sign it," he said.

The Senate approved the bill 63-36 Wednesday. That left Democrats at least three votes short of the two-thirds majority needed to enact their version over Reagan's objections.

The bill would get Reagan's signature, said Yeutter, if it were not for the provision, strongly backed by Democrats and labor, requiring companies to give workers 60 days notice of intended plant closings.

"It is good in many, many respects," Yeutter said today of the bill on "CBS This Morning." "We hope that a responsible and constructive bill will come back through the process very quickly, and if so the president will sign it."

Democrats had fought for 14 Republican votes to assure them of a total of 66, which they calculated would be enough for a veto override, given that Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., is ill and did not take part in Wednesday's vote.

But only 11 Republicans voted in favor of the measure produced by a House-Senate conference committee after three years of congressional debate over soaring U.S. trade deficits. In addition, one Democrat voted against the measure — Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., who criticized a provision easing the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act.

The plant-closings provision, a furious White House lobbying effort and a snarl over Alaskan oil exports were all cited by senators as figuring in the outcome.

"I believe that this bill is dead," said Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo., a GOP sponsor. He and other supporters held out hope, however, that a revised version might pass later this year.

protect U.S. industries threatened by foreign-made goods.

Other provisions range from billions of dollars in agricultural subsidies to repeal of the windfall profits tax on oil companies.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending April 22.

By a vote of 213 for and 201 against, the House passed and sent to the Senate a bill (HR 422) extending from May 4 to Nov. 30 the deadline for illegal aliens to apply for temporary residency under the 1986 immigration reform law.

The legalization program is open to undocumented aliens who entered the United States before Jan. 1, 1982. It protects individuals while they seek permanent residency and citizenship available to them under the law's amnesty section.

About 1.2 million aliens have applied during the sign-up period that began last May 4, a turnout seen as disappointing by many lawmakers who supported the 1986 law aimed at enabling America to regain control of its own borders.

Members voting yes for a nearly seven month extension in the amnesty sign up period were Walter B. Jones, Jr., D-1; David Price, D-4; Stephen Neal, D-5; Charles Rose, D-7; W.G. Hefner, D-8; and James Clarke, D-11. Voting no were Tim Valentine, D-2; Martin Lancaster, D-3; Howard Coble, R-6; Alex McMillan, R-9; and Cass Ballenger, R-10.

The House adopted, 379 for and 22 against, an amendment making it illegal for telephone companies to allow use of their wires by firms selling taped, pornographic commentary to teenagers and other long-distance callers.

The amendment outlawing "dial-a-porn" was attached to a bill renewing federal education programs for five years, at a first-year cost of $7.5 billion. The bill (HR 5) was passed on a near-unanimous vote and was headed for expected approval by the Senate and President Reagan. Supporters said dial-a-porn is so offensive it should be denied First Amendment protections, while opponents denounced the amendment as an attempt by politicians to build popularity in an election year at the expense of free speech.

All members voted yes to ban "dial-a-porn" from the telephone wires.

By a vote of 167 for and 253 against, the House rejected an attempt to remove "plant closing" language from a trade bill conference report (HR 3) that later was passed and sent to the Senate.

This preserved the bill's requirement that employers of 100 or more workers give at least 60-days notice of plant closings or massive layoffs. Labor supported the provision as a matter of fairness while business groups and President Reagan opposed it as an anti-efficiency measure that would cost jobs.

The overall trade bill seeks to toughen America's world trading position while cushioning the impact of foreign competition on workers and employers. Its 1,000 pages contain numerous federal programs and expenditures to benefit labor, business and agriculture.

Members voting yes did not want to require 60-days notice of plant closings and large layoffs. They were Valentine, Lancaster, Coble, McMillan, Ballenger, and Clarke. Voting no were Jones, Price, Neal, Rose, and Hefner.

By a vote of 69 for and 27 against, the Senate passed a bill to make a national apology and $20,000 tax-free redress payment to each of about 60,000 surviving Japanese-Americans who were interned in government camps during World War II. The measure (HR 442) was returned to the House.

Opponent Jesse Helms, R-N.C., called the bill "an unfair fiscal burden" on generations of Americans not yet born during the internment.

Sen. Terry Sanford, D, voted yes, in favor of the bill and Sen. Jesse Helms, R, voted no.

By a vote of 67 for and 30 against, the Senate tabled an amendment to strip the World War II internment bill (above) of its authorization of $20,000 in reparations to each of some 60,000 living Japanese-Americans who were confined during the war.

Sen. Sanford voted yes, supporting $20,000 in reparations for Japanese-Americans interned during World War II. Sen. Helms voted no.

Couple Is Parenting From Wheelchairs

BY OVERALL STRAPS — Desmond Hotchkiss, 2, is lifted by his father, Ralph, who with his wife, Deborah Kaplan, shows that parents in wheelchairs can raise an active child. (Washington Post Photo by Dudley M. Brooks)

By JAY MATHEWS
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

OAKLAND, Calif. — Ralf Hotchkiss never let much interfere with his restless independence before or after his motorcycle accident, so it was not unusual for him to be hitchhiking, wheelchair and all, on Ashby Avenue that day in October 1975. Deborah Kaplan, a law student disabled after a shallow dive, gave him a lift in her green Dodge Dart.

They chatted. They went their separate ways. They found themselves working together in Ralph Nader's Washington office. They fell in love. They married. They moved back to the West Coast to a house on a hillside overlooking the Bay and hazy downtown Oakland.

Now the couple has a loud, wiry, lightning-quick 2-year-old son named Desmond who is proving to a skeptical world that two parents who use wheelchairs can raise an active child.

Friends speak of the couple in terms usually reserved for high-speed locomotives: You wouldn't want to get in their way. Kaplan and Hotchkiss dislike the legal restrictions that make it difficult for the disabled to become parents, and Kaplan is organizing a movement to encourage disabled Americans who want to raise families.

"They are excellent role models," said Ed Roberts, president of the World Institute on Disability. "They have both succeeded professionally and have now opened their lives up for a child."

While working with Nader, Kaplan founded the Disability Rights Center (she exposed manufacturers' failure to provide proper instructions on wheelchairs and home respirators) and Hotchkiss founded the Center for Concerned Engineering and was the co-author of "What To Do About Your Bad Car," usually called "The Lemon Book." An engineer and irrepressible tinkerer, he once accidentally set fire to the National Press Building while testing a defective electric blanket.

Now they spend much of their time attending to Desmond Kaplan Hotchkiss. Sitting in a wheelchair, Hotchkiss can hoist Desmond by the straps of his overalls onto his lap and, with the boy's head resting under one arm, swiftly change his diapers. Roberts says Kaplan, using only gentle persuasion, can coax the boy onto a couch or bed for the same purpose.

Hotchkiss has not been able to use his legs since his motorcycle missed a curve on an Illinois road in 1966, when he was 18, and he broke his back. He remembers swearing so violently as he lay on the pavement that the farm woman who had come to help him blushed in embarrassment.

Once it was clear he would survive, he said he worried about two things: Could he still enjoy making love, and could he be a father? A visit by a female friend shortly after the accident eased his mind on one count, and a year recuperating at home and playing with his baby sister, Sara, convinced him he could raise a child from a wheelchair.

He had been interested in designing devices to help the handicapped since, at age 12, he read about Helen Keller. He graduated from Oberlin, where he engaged the visiting Nader in a discussion of Corvair suspensions, and then went to work.

Kaplan was 21 when she dove into a shallow California stream in 1971 and broke her neck. She has since learned to walk, slowly and awkwardly, with the help of a cane. She has overruled the therapists who insisted that she walk everywhere and uses a wheelchair, for safety and mobility, whenever she is outdoors.

That determination to write their own rules also governs their handling of Desmond. "This might seem irresponsible," Hotchkiss said, "but when I drive him to day care, I let him get out of the car right on the sidewalk. He walks across the lawn and rings the doorbell. I don't get out of the car."

Between ages 1 and 2, his mother said, Desmond was like other children: "crazy, with no common sense whatever." Now, according to Hotchkiss, he seems "remarkably self-sufficient and responsible for his age." As able-bodied as they come, Desmond has nonetheless wheeled his father into making him his own small wheelchair for occasional play.

Desmond has discovered that he can evade his father if he hides under the workbench of Hotchkiss' hopelessly cluttered workshop in their Oakland home. Father and son then negotiate. "We usually work it out," Hotchkiss said.

Lowell Dodge, a friend from Nader's office who is now head of affirmative action plans for the General Accounting Office, noted that "when Desmond misbehaves, which he often does, Ralf is not put off by it, but seems to delight in it. It is that adventurousness which Ralf wants to encourage."

The couple adopted Desmond after Kaplan failed to become pregnant, the possible result of Hotchkiss' low sperm count from sitting for long periods. Social service agencies were reluctant to consider disabled couples as adoptive parents, so they arranged an adoption privately.

Desmond's biological mother was young enough to have been exposed to the recent integration of disabled children into regular schools. She knew that Kaplan and Hotchkiss used wheelchairs, "but she didn't think it was such a big deal," Kaplan said.

Desmond was born in October 1985, 10 years to the month after his new parents met. Kaplan discovered, as she compared notes with able-bodied parents, that her fears and apprehensions about handling an infant were no greater than theirs. "Desmond rolled off the bed at five months," Kaplan said. "But someone said, 'Oh, yeah, that happened to me too.'"

Now they are looking to spread the message of parenthood for the disabled. Kaplan, drawn into the struggle to help a disabled San Jose woman, Tiffany Callo, regain custody of her two infants, has begun to work with a private California-based group, Through the Looking Glass, in forming a national legal and legislative effort for disabled parents' rights.

Adoption agencies have been reluctant to work with such couples, and care-giving agencies for the disabled have discouraged them from bearing and raising children. Provision is rarely made for extra benefits if a disabled person becomes a parent.

Hotchkiss has continued to work on improved wheelchairs and other devices. He has traveled to Nicaragua and other Third World countries to develop techniques for producing more efficient aids for the disabled from simple materials. The Veterans Administration and a private group, Appropriate Technology International, have sponsored many of his projects. He also teaches engineering and design at San Francisco State University.

Kaplan has continued her legal work in disabled rights, including advising state Sen. Milton Marks on bills to guarantee rights and financial assistance for disabled parents. She said she thinks it may be time to start a national organization both to promote such rights and to provide parents information she and Hotchkiss had to gather by trial and error.

And then, noting Desmond's imperial attitude about his central role in the family, Kaplan mentioned the possibility of adopting a second child. "It's time to unseat the king," she said.

Diane Halverson Searches For Hog Heaven

WASHINGTON — If you meet Diane Halverson at some cocktail party at a grand Georgetown house you discover that all of a sudden the conversation is about pigs.

She is one of the few women of the capital who, if she called you a pig, would expect you to glow with the compliment, for she is far gone in the love of farm animals, and pigs in particular. She is determined they will be raised humanely, even if their fate is the frying pan.

Last summer, for example, when others were heading for the beaches, she ventured to Zurich to study a demonstration of family pens for raising the beasts, far more humane than the "factories" in which they are commonly housed.

A character in the novel "Crome Yellow" peers at a group of swine happily wallowing on a farm and says, "Just look at them, sir. Rightly is they called pigs." And no doubt millions of Americans think pigs are filthy beasts, though the truth is they are as intelligent as dogs, and if they like a bit of mud, well who does not? Besides, as a letter from an intelligent woman recently pointed out, when pigs wallow it is because they like a No. 20 sun screen. Given freedom to trot about a little, the pigs on a spring day are a paradigm of paradise, grunting among fallen branches, roots and (in favored places) truffles.

So it is little wonder that a farm girl like Halverson grew up loving them. Her energies now go to making life happy for them, or at least less hideous than the common circumstance of penning sows in steel cages and snatching off the piglets to a life of almost total frustration.

When she came here in the mid-'70s from her family's farm at Northfield, Minn., she discovered a different world, a rich and stimulating world, but it took some getting used to. She first stayed at a lodging for Christian young women on Capitol Hill, which was not such a jolt, but the first time she rode a city bus she was amazed.

"There were only three passengers, sitting about as far from each other as possible, and I couldn't get over it. Why hadn't they all sat together so they could talk?"

For a farm girl, as she tended the animals or worked getting the hay in, most of the day was spent alone. She couldn't imagine that if one had a chance to meet people, one would not leap to them but she soon learned the ways of towns when she crossed Wisconsin Avenue.

A nice-looking man — she thought maybe he was a senator as he had a dark suit and tie and good shoes — offered to catch her dog for her.

"Oh, that's not my dog," she said. This may be one way men introduce themselves in Georgetown. There is always a dog somewhere, and the woman is almost certain to say something. Having said it wasn't her dog, she was surprised the man started chatting in a friendly way and suggested they have some coffee, but the farm girl knew better than that and said she had to get home. What a nice man. He was going right by there and would drop her off.

"I don't think this is the way to Capitol Hill," she said as Hains Point came into view. The man said it was a short cut, and anyway why not stop by his place?

Is it possible his intentions were not honorable? She was abrupt and firm. He drove her home and that was the last she saw of him, and she has been suspicious of senatorial gentlemen ever since. Even ones that seem to like dogs. They are all likely to head for Hains Point.

Apart from a few experiences of that kind she settled in happily, and has even found some men a girl could love.

Her sister was already in Washington, a legislative aide to a senator. She kept an eye on Diane, very helpful, of course. Diane tried a job or two before the Animal Welfare Institute in 1976 where she still works. She writes, lectures on pigs and when she can she works with them. She eats meat and will let you eat a pork chop, and what drives her mad is not the killing of animals for food, but the barbarism of raising them from infancy to slaughter in unnatural ways that literally drive them insane.

One of the commonest behaviors of sows when they are put in iron crates (as most of them are, before they farrow) is gnawing endlessly on a bar. It has finally been discovered this compulsive and seemingly pointless activity releases endorphins in the brain, Halverson says. It is like banging your head on the wall but may make life more bearable.

Not that pigs are the only farm animal confined in crates that prevent turning around or in many cases even seeing other animals — a hardship for animals with strong herd instincts.

"I went to an auction years ago in Minnesota where cattle were being sold for shipment to a slaughterhouse. The thing that threw me was not that they would be killed, but what happened while they were still alive.

"A cow was brought in with a broken leg. They used a cattle prod to get her in, then they dragged her out by the legs. I peered in all the pens to find her, but never did. While looking for her I found a young heifer in a pen, badly hurt, in fact I thought she was dead. As I turned away she lifted her head looking back at me. I was moved, and I was angry, and went out to do something about it. I didn't manage to do anything at all."

People said, when she started her work for farm animals, that farmers had to raise them brutally to compete in the market. Most people don't want to think how their pork is raised, and besides there's nothing they can do about it.

"There's a lot they can do about it," Halverson says. "If only they knew how powerful their letters to state and national legislators are. And they can buy meat from animals they know were humanely raised. They can ask grocers."

"Many small farmers have been able to make profits by using low-investment hog housing systems that allow the pigs a reasonable amount of freedom."

"But other farmers have tried to compete with large-scale industrialized farms by building barren quarters, giving the animals no space, in an effort to avoid the labor of raising hogs on straw or outdoors. But such systems are very expensive to build. Tax incentives have paved the way for the big factory farms to the point it is sometimes called 'tax farming.' Often the money for factory farms comes from other sources than farming. It is investment money put into the factory farms for tax breaks. If the price of pork falls, they can sit it out, but the small farmer who is trying to imitate their methods cannot. A small farmer can easily become overextended, when he invests in expensive factory-farm methods, but has no reserves."

"Government research should be directed another way — not for the benefit of huge factory farms, but to explore animal housing systems the small farmer could adopt, make a profit while also giving a decent life to his animals."

People like Halverson believe you should first find out what is important to a pig, and take that into account when raising it.

Given full freedom, for example, a sow may travel three miles to collect nesting materials, and clearly that cannot be duplicated on a farm. But you can provide straw and brush for her to make a nest. Also, it turns out (in University of Edinburgh studies) the mother pig likes her nest to be backed by a large tree, and likes her enclosure open to the south. These preferences can be catered to on farms as easily as not, a post instead of a tree, for example.

Given their choice, pigs remain in family units. They all sleep together in a nest. They resent and resist the introduction of an outsider pig — it may take 90 days before the newcomer is accepted and allowed to sleep with the rest. But the common system now is for the piglets to be taken from their mother after the shortest weaning possible and raised away from her with unrelated piglets, and without the nest.

The small farmer, Halverson insists, can economically compete while adopting many of the measures that pigs like — piglets can remain in a family pen until the day they are taken to slaughter. Pigs have clear preferences in where they defecate, and it makes sense to give them their head. And perhaps there could be tax breaks for small farmers turning to a humane system.

Halverson is by now used to men who do not expect most women to be terribly interested in pigs, or to prefer working with animals to making money.

"When my mother was dying, we wanted her to go to a place for special treatment, but we couldn't afford it. It would have been nice then to have more money. And I'd like to buy my father a really good truck. But I know I never will be able to do things like that."

"And my father could certainly use me on the farm. He counted on me and now I'm not there. For several summers I went back to bring in the hay. Of course I have thought long and hard about the work I do and how to justify it."

"But I learned my love of animals and my anger at inhuman treatment of living things from my mother, and learned independence from my father."

"When my mother was dying, we wanted her to go to a place for special treatment, but we couldn't afford it. It would have been nice then to have more money. And I'd like to buy my father a really good truck. But I know I never will be able to do things like that."

Generation Is Breaking Men's Clothing Barrier

By PAUL GEITNER

Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Maturing baby boomers are changing the rules for menswear as they look for clothes somewhere between jeans and T-shirt and the pinstripe suit.

"Most of the younger guys who are working grew up on MTV and rock 'n' roll," said award-winning designer Bill Robinson, whose label is starting its third year.

This generation, he says, is "breaking down barriers of how and where you wear things."

The experimentation is evident in clothes now being shown for fall, soon to be sent to stores across the country.

The look includes round, softer shoulders on sportcoats; high-waisted sweaters meant to be tucked in; mock turtle necks to be worn under vests; buttery "antique leathers" and suedes. Browns, grays and blacks are popular, but some designers are throwing in reds, yellows and what one called "vegetable colors."

"I think men are ready to wear color," said Ronaldus Shamask, a relative newcomer to menswear whose minimalist designs in such shades as mustard, teal and wine have won acclaim. "Men are becoming much more comfortable with experimenting."

The classic Polo line by Ralph Lauren, who's been designing menswear for more than 20 years, is trying out American Indian styles, suede shirts and "antique ski and expedition clothing."

Even the business suit is "loosening up," said Tom Julian, associate fashion director of the Men's Fashion Association. "Men are more aware (of fashion) today."

Jack Herschlag, executive director of the National Association of Men's Sportswear Buyers, says suits are appearing in a variety of silhouettes this fall and even the double-breasted suit will attempt a comeback.

Men are moving away from the investment-dressing era and into a stage of experimentation, Herschlag says.

He and others in the field attribute the development partly to the influence of movies and TV shows like "thirtysomething" and "L.A. Law" that feature smartly dressed young professionals.

Business is helped when men see role models like Bill Cosby "looking groovy" on TV, says Robinson, who describes his clothes as souped-up versions of American classics.

"It's not silly; it's not meant to make a statement," insisted Shamask's sales director, Harlan Bratcher. "It's more for people who are tired of playing games. It's more: 'This is me.'"

That's not to say the new looks are for everyone.

Those who are sticking with jeans should know that this fall marks the beginning of the "post-acidwashed era," Herschlag said.

"The pendulum is swinging back to very, very dark colors," said Julian.

And the conservative business suit is not dead yet.

Membership Increase Recognized

The Student Section of the Pitt County Medical Society was honored recently at an American Medical Association Medical Student Section meeting in Chicago for having one of the largest increases in membership of any chapter in the nation.

Local members Suzanne Starling and Mark LaVigne were given special recognition at the Chicago meeting for their extensive recruitment efforts on behalf of the Pitt County chapter. The chapter now has 120 members, which is a 42-member increase over last year's membership, according to Dianne Pickett, executive director of the medical society. This includes between 60 and 70 percent of the incoming class.

In addition to a plaque given to Ms. Starling and LaVigne, the East Carolina University School of Medicine was presented a plaque recognizing the large increase in membership in its student group. This plaque was presented by Dr. Judith S. Yongue, president of the Pitt County Medical Society, on behalf of the AMA to Dr. William Laupus, dean of the school of medicine.

The Student Section participated in the generation of funds to enable 14 of its members to attend the American Medical Association Medical Student Section meeting in Chicago. Seven were voting delegates.

A local student, Rose Mary Stocks, has been named this year's editor of "Grand Rounds," a national publication for medical students. The Student Section has participated in a conference to teach college students and adolescents about AIDS and in a resuscitation to Pitt County high school students.

Bunting Has Pebble Texture

Just the thing to keep that special baby cozy warm — a snugly crocheted bunting to wear whenever the weather turns chilly. So quick and easy to make, you'll want to make several to have on hand for any new arrivals. A fascinating combination of chain and double crochet stitches creates a beautiful, pebble texture — a pattern stitch you'll enjoy using over and over again.

The bunting features a peaked hood with buttoned front opening for easy dressing and tasseled drawstring closings. Easy-care, machine washable acrylic yarn is used, and directions are written to fit babies from three to eight months.

To obtain directions for making the Baby Bunting, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-042488 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. C-042488 by sending a check or money order for $12.95 for yellow or blue or $14.95 for pastel ombre to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, instruction leaflet and acrylic yarn.

Dear Readers: Have you ever done

Pat's Pointers Pat Trexler

Bargello crochet? This is a fascinating and fairly simple pattern stitch that mimics the peaks and valleys of the famous Bargello needlepoint. It's a practical stitch to add to your pattern stitch file as it is ideal for such projects as decorator pillows, tote bags, afghans or garments.

Try it using odds and ends of yarn in four contrasting or blending shades. For your sample swatch, make a chain of 38 stitches with your main color (Color A).

For the foundation row, make a single crochet in the second chain from the hook and in each remaining chain for a total of 37 single crochets. Chain 1 and turn. Next, work 3 rows of single crochet, changing to Color B at the end of the final row. Chain 1 and turn.

To change colors at the end of a row, work the last single crochet to the point where there are 2 loops on the hook. Drop the color in use and pull through a loop of the new color. Chain 1 and turn to begin the next row with the new color.

In this pattern you will be told to work "long single crochets." To do this, do not insert the hook into the top of the next stitch; instead, insert it in a single crochet directly under the next stitch on the row specified. Pull the next loop through from this position. Be careful to avoid puckering caused by pulling the new stitch too tight.

Row 1 of Bargello pattern, using Color B: Step 1: Single crochet in first stitch. Step 2: Work a long single crochet in next stitch 2 rows below. Step 3: Work a long single crochet in next stitch 3 rows below. Step 4: Work a long single crochet in next stitch 4 rows below. Step 5: Work a long single crochet in next stitch 3 rows below. Step 6: Work a long single crochet in next stitch 2 rows below. Step 7: Work a long single crochet in next stitch. Repeat Steps 2 through 7 across to end of row. Chain 1 and turn.

Rows 2, 3 and 4: With same color, single crochet in each single crochet across, ending each row with chain 1. At the end of the 4th row, change to Color C.

To continue the pattern, repeat Rows 1 through 4 — first with Color C, then with Color D. After this, continue repeating the four pattern rows using Colors A, B, C and D in order throughout. Your final four rows should be worked in Color A.

This pattern is always started with a chain of any number of stitches equally divisible by 6 plus 2 extra chains at the end. Your first row should then have a multiple of 6 single crochets plus 1 additional single crochet.

BABY BUNTING — A peaked hood with buttoned front opening and drawstring closings are bunting features.

Island Keeps Crafts Alive

By CHARLES HILLINGER
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

NANTUCKET ISLAND, Mass. — A unique industry began more than 150 years ago when sailors started weaving baskets to pass the time while stationed aboard lightships anchored off treacherous shoals beyond Atlantic Island, 30 miles off Cape Cod.

Bright lights tended by the sailors warned mariners to stay clear of the shoals.

After months at sea, lightships sailed to Nantucket Island to refuel and take on supplies. There, the sailors would sell their baskets for extra income.

The sturdy baskets made of woven rattan with wooden bottoms soon became known as Nantucket Lightship Baskets.

Lightships were replaced by buoys and other markers about the time of World War I, but Nantucket Lightship Baskets continue to be made by islanders and are in hot demand.

"There are about 20 families still doing it, no more than 50 individuals, making the baskets in their island homes. It amounts to about a $1 million annual industry for Nantucket," explained Karl Ottison, 38, who handcrafts Nantucket Lightship Baskets with his wife, Susan Chase Ottison, 38, and a neighbor, Helene Bartlett, 43, in a workshop in the Ottison home.

Susan Ottison, who has been weaving the baskets for 20 years, calls them "status symbols of the island. Local women have baskets handed down through generations. Nantucket Lightship Baskets are prestigious island products purchased by prestigious people who come to the island."

In their workshop is a photograph of Nancy Reagan walking with the president. The first lady is carrying a Nantucket Lightship Basket purse made by the Ottisons.

The baskets are expensive. The Ottisons handcraft a wide variety of baskets from purses to picnic baskets, from hampers and egg baskets to the "Nest of Seven."

Selling for $2,750, the Nest of Seven consists of seven baskets ranging from 2 inches to 14 inches in diameter. The tiny egg baskets, only big enough to hold an egg, sell for $95 each. Handbags go for $430 to $935 and picnic baskets are $2,150.

"Each basket makes or family of basket makers have their own style, shape and type of weaving. Each basket is signed on the bottom and noted that it is a product of Nantucket Island," said Ottison. "We don't ship them off the island. We want to see them stay on the island, sold only here as a unique and historic item from Nantucket."

Susan and Karl Ottison were among 38 graduates of Nantucket High School class of 1968. They live in a comfortable home Ottison built on Nantucket bay from driftwood, beams and yards of old ships washed up on the beach. Their driveway is made of crushed island seashells. They are both descendants of early whalers.

About 5,000 people live year-round on the island, which is crescent-shaped, 13 miles long and 3 to 6 miles wide. They live a quiet, isolated life, often cut off from the outside world by fierce storms and high winds.

Nantucket Lightship Baskets are traditionally formed on wooden molds often more than a century old. Many baskets are topped with a hand-carved sea gull or whale made of ivory. The baskets are almost all sold out of the home shops by those who make them. Heaviest production is during winter when few outsiders visit the island.

She Has Words For Easy Credit

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Today, my daughter, who is substantially under 18 years old, unemployed but loves clothes, received a credit card from a major department store!

I telephoned the store's credit department and asked if there was an age requirement for those who applied for credit cards. I was told there was not. Then I asked if a person had to be employed in order to obtain a credit card. I was told no.

When I explained that my daughter was an unemployed student, I was told that if she were supported by a parent, that was the only "employment" necessary.

Abby, I am a single mother working full time to support myself and my daughter without financial aid, and I am struggling to stay afloat. I feel as though I have been stabbed in the back! I'd appreciate your comments. — CASH ONLY

DEAR CASH ONLY: Laws concerning credit extended to unemployed minors differ in the various states, but if there isn't a law stating a parent is not responsible for merchandise purchased by a minor child, there ought to be.

DEAR ABBY: Many years ago, on my first visit to the home of a new girlfriend in a neighboring city, as we were about to go out for a drive, her mother said, "Don't forget the garbage, Peggy."

"I won't," she said. She went to the kitchen and returned with a cardboard box of smelly trash, which she put in the backseat of my car.

"Don't you have a garbage service in this city?" I asked.

She replied, "Yes, but we can't afford it."

"All right, where's the nearest dump?"

"There isn't any, so we'll just drive around until we find a good place."

After driving around for a while, as we were going through a pleasant woody park, she said, "Pull over here." Then she got out and threw the garbage into a clump of bushes.

I've often pondered whether she ever wondered why I never asked for another date. — DISGUSTED IN SEATTLE

DEAR DISGUSTED: You don't say how many years ago this happened, but I would hope that "neighboring city" has since passed an ordinance or statute making dumping garbage just anywhere in violation of the law. I hope the girl who dumped the garbage in the bushes sees this in case she's wondering why you never called her again.

Abby, it would be a public service to tell people that if someone is always finishing their sentences, they are either talking too much, or too slow. Probably both. — GUILTY AS CHARGED

DEAR ABBY: Some years ago, you published the name and address of a company that manufactured (or supplied) "false fannies." Back then I didn't anticipate needing this kind of product, but alas, my derriere has shrunk, and now when I wear slacks, I look straight as a board between my lower back and the backs of my thighs. Also, the pants do not fit me properly.

If the company is still in business, please let me know how I can get in touch with it. I really need help back there. — FLAT IN THE BACK IN FLORIDA

DEAR FLAT: Frederick's of Hollywood carries a "rear-filler-outer" (false fanny), made of sponge rubber or some material that feels (to the pinch) like "the real thing." (They should be very popular in Italy.)

Write to: Frederick's of Hollywood, 6610 Hollywood Blvd., Hollywood, Calif. 90028, for more information.

Most teen-agers do not know the facts about drugs, AIDS, how to prevent unwanted pregnancy and how to handle the pain of growing up. It's all in Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST For FRIDAY April 29

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): You can get some great ideas, and also any assistance you might need, from friends or family, so don't hesitate to ask for a hand.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Make a smart deal in the business world, and gain the respect of your co-workers. If you go out for some fun, don't be extravagant.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): If you begin any new projects, be sure to follow them through to their completion. Take it easy at home and get plenty of rest tonight.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): A progressive business associate can help you to become more successful in the future. Do something special for your mate.
LEO (July 22 to August 21): Talk over your daily routines with someone in a similar line of work, and the person can help you to greatly increase your efficiency.
VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Use reason rather than force in a confrontation with a co-worker. Make a friend of this person, and all will work out much better.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Make an appointment for some enjoyable recreation with your family. You may come across a way to increase your income today.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): If you have some spare time today, use it to make your home more comfortable and attractive. Pay more attention to your mate.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Enjoy a hobby you haven't thought about for some time with a good friend. A short trip tonight could bring you many benefits.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): If you are a bit more careful and organized in your work, you can be much more efficient in the future. Be sure to drive very carefully.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Be a bit more aggressive, but not rude, and you can get much better results than usual. Plan out all your routines well in advance.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Get into a project with your mate which will help you work together more harmoniously. Be very careful about details this evening.

you might have a hard time convincing them to admit it. But you have to prove they were wrong by beating them.
Four no trump is an inelegant contract—four hearts or five clubs (even slam!) would have been unbeatable. Had North wanted to make a slam try, a bid of four diamonds would have been the pundit's choice.
West led the ten of spades, and continued with the nine when declarer played low both from dummy and his hand. East topped dummy's jack with the queen, and declarer held off one more time. The crucial point of the hand had been reached.
Had East routinely continued with a spade, declarer would have coasted home. He would have discarded a diamond from dummy and then conceded a heart to East to set up the suit, thereby emerging with 10 tricks.

But sitting East was our colleague and many-time national champion, Tom Smith. He found a defense that is not easy to spot even if you are looking at all four hands. At trick three he shifted to a low club!
If declarer wins the trick in dummy, he must concede two red suit losers—one heart and one diamond. But it is as futile to rise with the ace of clubs and force out the king, discarding a diamond from the table. Since there is no spade in dummy to provide an entry back to the closed hand, East simply exits with a red-suit card and collects a heart trick for the one-trick set.

Open Adoption Allows Direct Contact Between Children, Biological Parents

By LISA PERLMAN
Associated Press Writer
TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. (AP) — When Lynn Cowser gave her baby up for adoption 20 years ago, she was required to sign a document that said she was abandoning her son.

Signing that piece of paper devastated Cowser almost as much as the thought of never seeing her child again.

"I was not abandoning my son," Cowser, now 40, said from her home in Traverse City. "I was saying that I needed to give him a family that could provide him with the things that I could not at the time."

The wording of that release document was just one of the negative connotations that adoption carried with it at the time.

"Our society made him ashamed of me," Cowser says. "They were saying, 'Here's this woman who dumped you,' when I was really trying to make a positive statement by giving him up."

Knowing that her son will never know the details of his background — or his biological parents — weighs heavy on Cowser's mind.

"And it will always hurt that I will never have the chance to tell my son I love him and explain why I made the decision I did."

Cowser's painful experience with the traditional, closed adoption system has propelled her into the forefront of the open adoption movement.

She is now vice president of the

The concept of open adoption, which allows varying degrees of contact between adopted children and their biological parents, is a drastic departure from the traditional adoption practices. There are a growing number of parents, however, who don't believe that secrecy is the best policy. The Michigan Association for the Openness in Adoption is in the forefront of a movement to change the rules.

Michigan Association for Openness in Adoption, a new, non-profit organization formed to promote the acceptance, education and research of open adoption.

Open adoption can range from an anonymous exchange of information and letters between the birth parents and adoptive parents to pre-birth meetings between the two sides with a plan for a continuing relationship after the child is born.

While this method has been practiced for about 15 years in varying degrees in a few places, the program in this northwestern city on Michigan's Lower Peninsula is considered by many to be the most progressive in the United States.

Its founder, social worker James Gritter, has completed more than 150 open adoptions in eight years as child welfare coordinator at Community Family and Children's Services of Traverse City, the social services arm of the Catholic Diocese of Gaylord.

The organization is sponsoring the second National Conference on Open Adoption in Traverse City, which was scheduled April 14-17.

While most adoption agencies in the country are just beginning to offer open adoption, generally in the form of a single meeting between the birth mother and adoptive parents, very few will assist in setting up an adoption involving continuing contact, says Reuben Pannor, a former Los Angeles social worker who has written extensively about open adoption.

Pannor says the practice is most common in California, but that the Traverse City program is "as open" as any he has seen.

About 75 percent of all pregnant women who come to Gritter's agency wind up requesting a fully open adoption, including continuing personal contact with the child. Almost all want to choose the adoptive parents from profiles of couples in the agency's pool.

Some women even choose to select the adoptive parents early in the pregnancy and have them accompany her to doctor appointments and act as natural childbirth coaches in the delivery room. "In those cases, the adoptive parents can share that delicious anxiety that adoptive parents in a closed placement never experience," Gritter says. At the same time, the birth mother receives the emotional support that often is otherwise unavailable.

In most traditional adoptions, the birth and adoptive parents are never identified to one another and the only information exchanged involves the birth mother's medical history and racial heritage.

That was the way Mike Spry and his wife, Jean Rokos, always had thought of adoption. When they first heard about open adoption, "I thought it was an absolutely crazy idea," Spry says.

Four years later, the couple has two children adopted through the Traverse City program.

Now an enthusiastic supporter of open adoption, Spry founded and is president of the state advocacy group for openness in adoption. He and about 20 other adoptive parents in the association have contributed to a book on their experiences, which is due out in the fall.

The main reason the Sprys changed their minds was their hope that it would spare their children the emotional burden many adoptees face due to the secrecy surrounding their biological parents.

The Sprys have kept the doors literally open for both birth mothers.

"Part of the beauty of this program is that we were there when they said goodbye to the babies, so we can fully appreciate just what kind of sacrifice the birth mother has made," Spry says. "Now I want to give something back. I want that person to be a part of my life."

Amy Winn, 20, of East Lansing, the birth mother of the Sprys' 1-year-old son, says open adoption has been ideal for her.

"The reason I know that I'll never try to get him back is because I can always know how he's doing and how much he's being loved," she says.

The potential for interference by the birth parent is a criticism that Gritter hears often. He contends that the open environment discourages harassment.

"When a woman enters our program, her whole plan is for the child to do well in life and for her to know how the child is doing. For her to misbehave in any way really only serves to undercut her very own plan," Gritter says.

The open adoption agreement is legally non-binding and either party can pull out at any time.

One of the major benefits is that the adoptive parents can be licensed as foster parents so the baby can be placed with them immediately after birth. In closed adoptions, the child must go to a separate foster family for several weeks until the end of the legal period during which the birth mother can change her mind.

With the benefit of getting the baby early comes the risk that the adoptive parents will have to give the baby back if the birth mother changes her mind before signing the release papers.

Fifteen percent of the women who enter the Traverse City program decide to keep their babies before that legal period is over.

Gritter said that's a positive. "From the outset, our goal is to find a way to keep the baby with the birth parents," he says. "If the birth mother changes her mind, we're with her 100 percent."

Such situations are difficult for the adoptive parents.

The Sprys' second child was with them four days when they found out his biological father was preparing to sue for custody. They gave the baby back.

"The program prepared us for that possibility," Spry says. "We never lost faith in the program. And we jumped right back into it."

Critics say women who request open adoption often do so because they're psychologically unready to part with the child.

Gritter counters that it's perfectly natural for a woman to want to remain part of the child's life. In fact, he worries about birth mothers who seek a closed adoption.

"We worry that their motivation is a sort of denial and that they won't come out of it as healthy as the birth parent who has actively done what she could for their child," he says.

The Traverse City program grew out of Gritter's desire to see birth parents treated more humanely and to allow adoptees to have as much autobiographical information as possible.

He also believes that the principles on which confidential adoption was originally based — to avoid the stigma of illegitimacy — are obsolete.

SATURDAY PERFORMANCE — Members of the Sahomi Tachibana Dance Company, three of whom are shown here, will perform in a program honoring Japan at the North Carolina Museum of Art, 2110 Blue Ridge

Conley Has 'Music Man'

D.H. Conley High School students and the school's Fine Arts Department will present Meredith Willson's "The Music Man" at 7:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday and at 3:15 p.m. on May 1. Performances will be in the D.H. Conley auditorium.

Tickets may be purchased at the door.

Heading the Conley cast are Ed West as Harold Hill; Cathy Creech as Marian Paroo; Jason Howard as Winthrop; Tom Hall and Stefani Unverfurth as Mayor George Shinn and his wife, Eulalie; Catherine Beckwith as Marion's mother, and Julie Brew and Michael Adams in the roles of Ethel and Marcellus.

Among the musical's score are songs such as "Seventy-Six Trombones," "Trouble" and "Till There Was You."

Faculty members at Conley Elizabeth Sellers and Duffy Lincoln are the show's directors. Rae Bartlett is the set designer and stage director, and Terri Winchell is choreographer.

"The Music Man" is set in the small town of River City, Iowa, in 1912. A traveling salesman, "Professor" Harold Hicks, tricks the town into believing that he can direct a boys' band. His plan is to get the town to put up money to buy instruments and uniforms. He will collect the money and skip town.

Sir Thomas More, once King Henry VIII's chief minister, was executed in 1535.

"MUSIC MAN" REHEARSAL — Professor Harold Hill, portrayed by Ed West, is shown in rehearsal with other cast members at D.H. Conley High School for the forthcoming production of "Music Man" which will be staged Friday and Saturday at 7:30 p.m. and at 3:15 p.m. May 1. Tickets may be purchased at the door prior to curtain time.

No Concerts

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Entertainer Willie Nelson says no more FarmAid concerts are planned to raise money for financially strapped farmers.

"We're waiting to see if Washington does its share," the country music singer-actor said Tuesday night at The Nashville Network Viewers' Choice Awards show.

Three FarmAid concerts by country and rock 'n' roll stars have raised $10 million, Nelson said.

'Roots' Team Will Join Forces Again

LOS ANGELES (AP) — LeVar Burton and Louis Gossett Jr. will recreate their roles as Kunta Kinte and Fiddler in a television movie, "Roots Christmas," 12 years after work started on the original "Roots" production.

The ABC movie was scheduled to go into production here today.

Production started on "Roots," Alex Haley's epic of a black family's journey from Africa to slavery to freedom, on April 28, 1976, in Savannah, Ga.

"Roots Christmas" dramatizes "the inherent lust for freedom that motivated early mass escapes of slaves, which paved the way for the ... Underground Railroad," Haley said at a news conference at Burbank Studios.

The setting for the tale is Christmas 1770. The Underground Railroad was a system of safe houses set up by abolitionists to move slaves to freedom in the years before the Civil War.

"In the course of researching 'Roots,' there was such a breadth of things that I could only select some of them for the book," Haley said. "One of the things that intrigued me was the sporadic, undisciplined efforts of the slaves to run away. I had been reading about the Underground Railroad and felt this would work well with a Christmas setting."

Haley noted that such first generation slaves as Kunta Kinte were usually Moslem and strongly held on to their religious beliefs even though they were surrounded by Christians. He said Kunta Kinte, who came to be called Toby, married a Christian woman Belle, and that Fiddler also was a Christian influence on him.

Met Wants Change For 'Bopera House'

NEW YORK (AP) — The Metropolitan Opera filed a lawsuit seeking to ring down the curtain on a bebop, jazz band that calls itself the "Metropolitan Bopera House."

In its trademark infringement suit against the jazz quintet, the Met claimed the "virtually identical" name "is likely to cause confusion, deception, mistake."

But John Marshall, one of the founding members of the Metropolitan Bopera House, called the lawsuit "pretty silly, because we're no threat to them in any way. After all we're playing different kinds of music."

Bebop is a form of improvisational swing popularized by Charlie "Bird" Parker and Dizzy Gillespie, said Marshall.

Henry W. Lauterstein, general counsel for the Met, declined to

Storekeeper Lets Customers Keep Shop

By HUNTER KOME
Wilmington Morning Star
SHALLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — When Woodrow Russ turns back the clock, he leaves it back.

The slightly madcap 75-year-old, who sometimes lets his customers run the store and wears a bow tie to keep his neck warm, likes to think of his gasoline station as an old-time oasis in the bustle of modern life.

"I think, truly in my heart, that I lived through the best part of this beautiful world. It's just the pace of society now," Russ said. "People just can't catch up. You've got to keep a certain pace or you get run in-to or run over, one."

He first opened Woodrow Russ's Service Station and Dining Room in 1937, at the age of 25. He built the existing station in 1955, just off U.S. 17.

Russ hasn't cleaned the station often since then, judging by the cobwebs and accumulated jumble of old and new — a "Buttercup Quality Chekd Ice Cream" clock and "Vicks salve up there that's been there 20 years."

"I don't ever want to clean it up. That wouldn't be natural," Russ said. "My friends wouldn't ever know the place if I dolled it up."

He looked up at a shelf and laughed. "I believe that snuff's been there 10 years."

When Russ says "friends," he means customers, although he tries not to use the word.

"When I opened up I never had a determination to win customers," Russ said. "I had a determination to win friends."

"I don't even have a name on my service station. Did you notice that?" he asked. "I don't even need one. My friends know me."

He lifted his brown Shell Oil cap and ran a rough hand through his straight, dark hair.

the-good-old-days type, grumbling about this and that.

"I never entertain any negative conversation. That's no good for you," Russ said. "I have a lot of young people come talk to me about their problems. My first solution is 'Let's count your blessings,' and then they forget their problems."

"When I leave my house, that's my silent prayer, is to make someone happy," Russ said. "And I do, too."

Russ trusts his customers — remember they're his friends — to keep their own credit tabs or pay their own bills by popping open the circa-1938 cash register if he's ducked over to his house for a minute.

Russ lives next door with his wife, Ottilie. "We've been married more than 50 years, and our marriage couldn't be more beautiful," he said.

At any given time of the day at Russ's yellow and white service station, a friend will be sitting on the well-worn bench inside, trading bits of wisdom and off-color jokes with Russ. In the summer Russ flips on the wall fan. In the winter he fires the wood heater. His talk is laced with a stream of sayings, and Russ specializes in finding silver linings.

"Remember that faith is the foundation of hope," Russ said. "There's no sorrow on earth that heaven can't heal."
