Court Says Retailers Have Right To Drop Price-Cutters

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court said today a manufacturer does not always violate federal antitrust law when agreeing with one retailer to stop doing business with another who sells at discount prices.

The justices, by a 6-2 vote, said such a "vertical restraint" imposed by a manufacturer on a retailer becomes illegal only when "it includes some agreement on price or price levels."

The decision, a significant one for antitrust law, is a victory for Sharp Electronics Corp. and a setback for a former Houston retailer of Sharp calculators.

Business Electronics Corp., owned and operated by Kelton Ehrensberger, was the exclusive retailer of Sharp calculators in Houston from 1968 to 1972.

During that period, Sharp became dissatisfied with BEC's performance. Sharp contended that it was unhappy with BEC's failure to meet sales quotas but a federal jury found that Sharp was dissatisfied with BEC's policy of selling calculators at prices lower than those suggested by Sharp.

Sharp in 1972 appointed Hartwell's Office World as a second retailer of its calculators in Houston, and in 1973 terminated BEC's dealership. Hartwell had told Sharp that it would quit distributing its products unless Sharp ended its relationship with BEC.

BEC then sued Sharp, and a federal jury awarded BEC $600,000 in damages. Under federal antitrust law, that amount was tripled to $1.8 million.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, however, threw out the jury verdict and sent the case back for a new trial.

Today's Supreme Court decision upheld the appeals court ruling.

Writing for the high court, Justice Antonin Scalia said the trial judge erred in telling the jury it could rule against Sharp if it found that BEC was terminated to reduce price competition in the Houston retail market.

"There has been no showing here that an agreement between a manufacturer and a dealer to terminate a 'price cutter,' without a further agreement on the price or price levels to be charged by the remaining dealer, almost always tends to restrict competition and reduce output," Scalia said.

He added that juries must apply a "rule of reason" approach — rather than any automatic rule — in deciding whether such agreements between a manufacturer and retailer amount to illegal price-fixing.

"In the vast majority of cases, it will be extremely difficult for the manufacturer to convince a jury that its motivation was to ensure adequate services, since price cutting and some measure of service cutting go hand in hand," Scalia said.

"Accordingly, a manufacturer that agrees to give one dealer an exclusive territory and terminates another dealer pursuant to that

Jumbo Jet Lands Safely With Three Engines Out

TOKYO (AP) — A United Airlines Boeing 747 with 258 people aboard landed safely today at New Tokyo International Airport after three of its four engines failed, an airline official said.

None of the 239 passengers and 19 crew members aboard UAL Flight 97 from Los Angeles to Tokyo were injured, said the official, Katsuro Isa.

Isa said the Boeing 747-100 landed at 3:17 p.m. (2:17 a.m. EDT) with emergency vehicles standing by at the airport in Narita, 40 miles northeast of Tokyo.

He said the aircraft lost the use of one engine over the Pacific Ocean approximately one hour and 15 minutes before landing, a second engine about 30 minutes later and a third engine just prior to landing.

Isa said the captain requested and was granted an "expedited approach and emergency vehicles standing by."

The aircraft taxied under its own power to the terminal and the passengers left the plane in a "normal fashion," he said.

Isa said the cause of the engine failures was under investigation.

Kyodo News Service quoted passengers as saying they were frightened when told by the crew to put on life jackets and instructed in their use.

"We thought the plane would crash into the sea and we would be killed," Kyodo quoted Japanese passenger Tetsu Otani, 25, as saying at the airport. However, he said the passengers remained calm.

The agency quoted another passenger, Kazuko Kato, 25, as saying: "I expected death at any moment."

Pitt's Election System Set For Voting Tuesday

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County voters will cast their ballots Tuesday in a variety of state and local primary races, with polls open from 6:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. in all 26 Pitt County voting precincts.

"All preparations have been completed, instructional classes held, and all that remains is for equipment to be delivered to the voting places," said Margaret Hardee, supervisor at the Pitt County Board of Elections.

"We are all hoping that the voters will take advantage of the good weather predicted and go to the polls and vote," she said.

Tuesday's election marks the first time Pitt County Commissioners will be elected according to the new system with six electoral districts plus three consolidated districts, A, B, and C.

Districts 1, 2 and 4 will have one seat each up for election Tuesday, as will Consolidated Districts A, B, and C. Districts 3, 5, and 6 each have incumbent commissioners whose terms will not expire until 1990.

Consolidated District A is made up of Districts 1 and 2, Consolidated District B is made up of Districts 3 and 6, and Consolidated District C is made up of Districts 4 and 5.

Mrs. Hardee said District 1 has no contest in this primary because there are only two candidates, one Republican and one Democrat. As a result, voters in District 1 will only vote in the Consolidated District A race.

In other areas:
•District 2 Democratic voters will vote a combined ballot for District 2 and Consolidated District A.

•District 4 Democratic voters will vote a combined ballot for District 4 and Consolidated District C.

•District 5 Democratic voters will vote only a ballot for Consolidated District C.

•District 3 and 6 Democratic voters will vote only a single ballot for Consolidated District B.

Tuesday's primary also marks the first time that Republicans are allowing unaffiliated voters to vote in 1988 Republican primaries.

Another change regarding Tuesday's election involves different voting locations for three area precincts.

The Grifton voting place has been moved from the Rescue Building to the Fire-Police Building; the Bethel voting place has been moved from the town office to the Public Service Building, while the Greenville Precinct 4 voting place has been moved from Holy Unity Church to the new Agnes Fullilove School Gym on Watauga Avenue.

Mrs. Hardee said notices and registration cards have been mailed to voters in these precincts and signs will be placed at the old voting places directing voters in those precincts to the new locations.

Some Pitt County voters will recognize a change in the way their votes are cast.

Mrs. Hardee said the Winterville Precinct and Greenville Precinct 1 will be using new Shouptronic electronic voting equipment on Tuesday.

"Instead of shuffling a handful of ballots, the voters will just walk into a booth behind a curtain and press buttons. It's as easy as cooking with a microwave oven," Mrs. Hardee said.

She said besides the ease of voting, other advantages of the equipment are a savings for the taxpayers in the cost of ballots, and a reduction of time to obtain results.

"With these machines, candidates and the news media should have election results within 30 minutes after the polls close," Mrs. Hardee said.

She also said a poll worker will be stationed near the equipment during election day to answer any equipment-related questions.

As of the close of the registration books on April 4 for Tuesday's primary election, Pitt County had 9,191 Republican voters, 34,996 Democrats, and 1,510 who were unaffiliated.

Hardison Says Prepared For Runoff

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

State Sen. Harold Hardison, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor, stopped in Greenville today for some last-minute campaigning before Tuesday's primary election.

The Lenoir County legislator has been exchanging negative television advertisements with Tony Rand, a Fayetteville attorney also running for the Democratic nomination, but Hardison said he began running negative ads to defend himself.

"I don't like negativism, it's just not in my character. But they started it," Hardison said during a press conference at the Greenville Hilton.

"If what I have aired has been harmful, then what they have aired has been harmful," Hardison said.

Hardison has aired television commercials accusing Rand of accepting payments from drug dealers, but Hardison said he does not think the ads will hurt the Democratic Party.

Parks Helms, a Charlotte attorney and former N.C. legislator, is also running for the Democratic nomination, and Hardison did not rule out the possibility of a runoff. "When we started our campaign, we started with a plan that included a runoff. If it comes, then it comes. If it doesn't, then we're happy," Hardison said.

Hardison said he has no preference as to which candidate he would rather face if there is a runoff, but he is looking forward to running against a Republican in the general election.

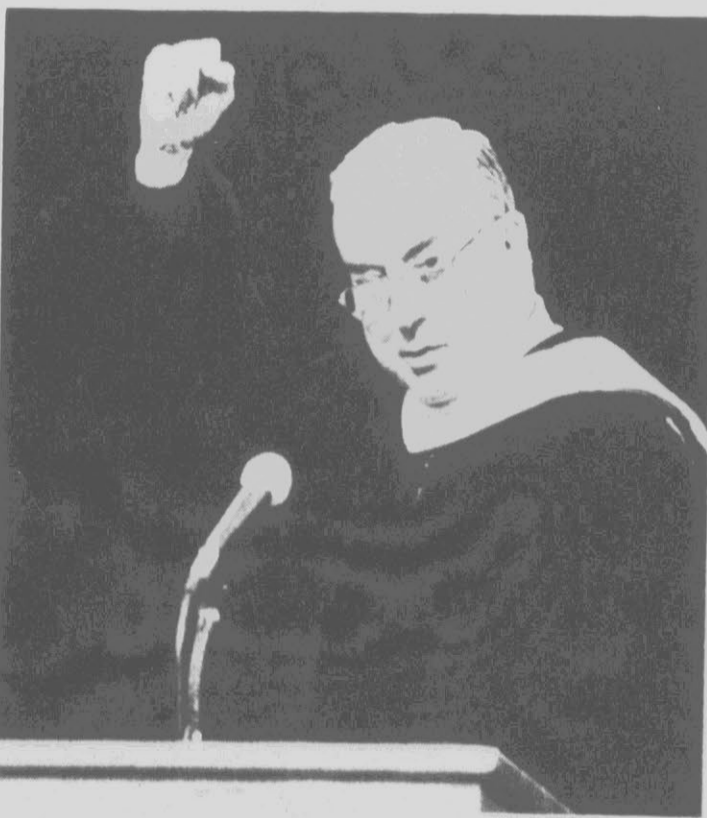

Hardison said voter turnout is expected to be light Tuesday, because North Carolina voters already participated in Super Tuesday — the 20-state presidential primary in March — and each party has a solid frontrunner in the gubernatorial contest. The key to avoiding a runoff in the lieutenant governor's race will be getting supporters to the polls, he said.

Even without a presidential primary or a hotly contested governor's race, Hardison said voters need to show more interest.

"The decisions that are to be made tomorrow ... they deserve more attention than that. The apathy we have in our elections today — I think it's bad," Hardison said.

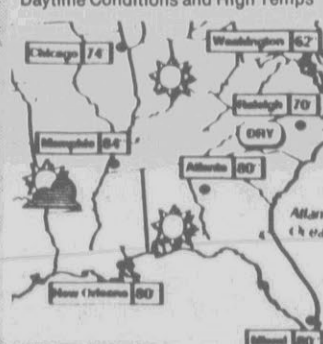

Hardison, who has received support from the business community, also said polls show about two-thirds of the people in North Carolina would support a state lottery if the revenue was earmarked for education.

Knowles Offers Budget Proposal

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

The preliminary budget proposal for the city covering the period from July 1 through June 30, 1989, becomes available to the public today in the office of the city clerk in City Hall.

The proposal is scheduled to be reviewed and discussed by members of the Greenville City Council at four special fiscal budget sessions scheduled throughout the month. The first budget session is slated for Thursday at 5:30 p.m. in the third floor conference room of City Hall. Other sessions are scheduled on May 9, May 18 and May 24 at the same time and location.

A public hearing on the budget proposal is scheduled for June 6 while the proposed date for budget adoption is June 20.

According to City Manager Greg Knowles, the budget proposal is a "philosophical document" in which he perceives the direction and the wishes of the council.

"This is the first time the council has had a chance to see my style of budgeting and the kind of philosophies coming out of my head," Knowles said.

"This is basically Greg Knowles talking — my reaction to what the council has set for the priorities, my reaction to how they've said they want to go. This is how I'm saying we should implement what they're saying," Knowles explained.

Knowles said this year's budget proposal is a highly specific document, prepared with an emphasis on detail.

He said city department heads were asked to formulate budget requests very carefully and with justification.

"They can't just say 'Well, I'd like $50,000 worth of something.' They have to say why," he said. "If you can't justify it to me as a department head, how can I justify it to council, and how can they defend it to the taxpayers because they're paying the freight."

"I try to give the council a budget they can defend to the public," Knowles said.

In The Area

Mental Health

Greenville Mayor Ed Carter has designated May as "Mental Health Month" in the city.

"Every six months, 10 million children, teens, and adults experience depression, the most common mental illness. There is treatment for people who suffer from depressive disorders and other mental illnesses, thanks to biomedical research. Almost 80 percent of all serious episodes of depression can be alleviated with appropriate drugs, psychotherapy or a combination of both. Being mentally healthy is as important as being physically fit," Carter said.

"I urge all citizens in Greenville, North Carolina, to hear this call for action to join the volunteers, staff and supporters of the Mental Health Association in 'Working for America's Mental Health' during May and throughout the year," he said.

Home Conference

Home care providers from Eastern Carolina Home Health Hospice recently joined 500 other in-home service providers from across the state at the annual Home Care Conference in Greensboro.

Local participants included Dorothy Morton, registered nurse; Sheri Smith, social worker; Merle Hood, registered nurse and Allison Shavitz, social worker.

The theme of this year's conference was "Making Choices That Count." Dr. Glenn Pickard, Professor of Medicine at UNC-Chapel Hill, opened the conference with an examination of the rationing of health care in America. Val Nambudaris, president of the National Association for Home Care in Washington, D.C., encouraged home care providers to keep fighting for adequate care for elderly and disabled citizens.

The annual conference is sponsored by the North Carolina Association for Home Care, which represents over 200 home care agencies across the state.

Scholarship

Kristen Lanier, a senior at East High School, is one of 12 North Carolina students to be awarded a Hamlet Harris Scholarship to attend in College, Raleigh for school year 1987-88.

The scholarship varies from $2,000 to $3,000 over a four-year period. A student must maintain a B average and full-time student status to renew it.

Miss Lanier is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Lanier, Jr. of Greenville.

Received Degrees

Two Greenville residents have received degrees from the University of South Carolina, Columbia.

These awarded degrees are to Nathan Avrom Baker, recipient of a master's degree in international business; and Vicki Lynn Howell, a doctor's degree in science.

WINNER — Laura Harris Peeples, a student at East Carolina University, won first prize for her entry in the 29th annual National Student Research Forum. In her study, directed by Dr. Hisham Barakat, right, professor of biochemistry in the ECU School of Medicine, Ms. Peeples identified characteristics of a fat particle in blood that may be associated with an increased risk for heart disease.

Student Earns First Place In National Research Forum

A graduate student in the East Carolina University Department of Biology has won first prize for her entry in the 29th annual National Student Research Forum, the country's foremost competition for student biomedical research projects.

In her study, Laura Harris Peeples, a Goldsboro resident, was able to identify distinct characteristics of a certain type of fat particle in blood which may be associated with an increased risk for heart disease. She is the daughter of retired Lt. Col. Paul L. Harris and Emily J. Harris of Columbia, S.C.

Ms. Peeples carried out her research under the direction of Dr. Hisham Barakat, professor of biochemistry in the East Carolina University School of Medicine. She will enroll as a medical student at ECU in August.

Barakat called Ms. Peeples' work "excellent research that produced novel findings" and described her award as "the highest honor a graduate student in biomedical sciences can receive."

The National Student Research Forum, held April 6-8 at the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston, each year brings together graduate students, medical students and medical residents involved in biomedical research at their respective institutions. This year 83 schools were represented at the meeting.

Participants are required to present the results of their studies in a scientific poster, a scholarly paper and in an oral presentation. As a master's degree candidate, Ms. Peeples competed in the same category as doctoral candidates at the country's most prestigious medical institutions.

She qualified for the competition by winning the East Regional student Research Forum last month in Miami. Her first-place awards in both forums included $300 cash prizes.

Ms. Peeples' research focused on fatty particles in the blood known as low density lipoproteins or LDLs. Her specific interest was in LDLs of men with a characteristic body shape — the well-know "pot belly" seen in early adulthood through middle age.

For the first time, according to Barakat, Ms. Peeples has been able to show that low-density lipoprotein particles in men who have pot bellies differ significantly from particles in men who don't. Her findings may help scientists eventually explain why men and women with an unruly waistline can be at risk for coronary artery disease even though they have normal cholesterol counts and are not otherwise obese.

Thefts Investigated

A dozen thefts, among them a car and a washing machine, were reported to Greenville police over the weekend.

Officer R.C. Allsbrook said a 1979 model Toyota Celica was taken from a parking lot at Skat's restaurant on North Memorial Drive in an incident reported at 10:45 p.m. Saturday, and said a license plate was taken from a car parked at 505 W. Fourth St. in an incident reported at 4:17 p.m., while Officer J.E. Fleming said a washing machine was taken from the guest laundry room at the Holiday Inn on South Memorial Drive in an incident reported at 10:45 a.m.

Officer E.E. Laughinghouse said a wedding ring was taken from a vehicle parked at Skat's on North Memorial Drive in an incident reported at 4:34 p.m., while Officer R.J. Brewington said an antenna was taken from a vehicle parked at Carolina East Mall in an incident reported at 10:45 p.m.

Officer W.S. Heath said a battery was taken from a truck parked at 201 Mumford Road in an incident reported at 2:57 a.m. Sunday, while Officer J.A. Felton said a sandwich was taken from the Fresh Way Food Store on East 10th Street in an incident reported at 4:05 a.m. and a quantity of candy and cigarettes were taken from Northside Seafood on Gum Road in a break-in reported at 6:54 a.m.

Officer R.L. Smith said money was taken from two coin operated drink machines at South Greenville School on Howell Street in a break-in reported at 5:47 p.m. and a bicycle was taken from 1574 Bridle Circle in an incident reported at 10:28 p.m., while Officer R.C. Allsbrook said $3.76 worth of goods were taken from Flowers Baking Co. at 1413 S. Evans St. in a break-in reported at 9:24 p.m.

According to Officer J.W. Corbett, a bicycle was taken from 5 Captain's Quarters in an incident reported at 11:23 p.m.

Building Activity Increases In State

Building activity in North Carolina's 45 largest cities and towns from February 1988 rose 4.8 percent from the activity recorded for February 1987, according to state Labor Commissioner John C. Brooks.

Permits for 3,226 units were recorded in February 1988 compared to 3,078 units in February 1987. The February 1988 figure was 88.7 percent above the 1,710 units recorded in January 1988.

Estimated value of the February activity was $203,291,429. The February 1988 figure was 28.8 percent above the $157,880,294 recorded in February 1987, and 68.3 percent above the $120,762,860 recorded in January 1988.

"The percentage increases in the residential sector from January to February 1988 appear to be exceedingly high. However, the rises follow a six-year low in building activity recorded in January," Brooks said.

"The activity in February 1988 is more of a return to the normal building activity trend that has been occurring in North Carolina during the past year, than the advent of a new building surge in the residential market," he added.

In Greenville, 127 construction units were authorized in February at a cost of $4,679,670. Of those units, 30 were non-residential valued at $795,819, while 97 were residential with a value of $3,883,851.

Pitt County recorded 179 total construction units authorized in February at a cost of $7,573,764. Of those 179 units, 49 were non-residential at a cost of $1,404,723, while 130 were residential at a cost of $6,169,041.

On a statewide basis, total residential units in February, 2,040, dipped 4.2 percent from February 1987, 2,129; but rose 109.4 percent from January's 974. Value, $7,549,657, increased 11.7 percent from $78,401,822 in February 1987, and 136.5 percent from $37,014,182 last January.

Total non-residential construction, 1,186 units, rose 25 percent from February 1987's 949 units and 61.1 percent from January 1988's 736 units. Value, at $115,741,772, was up 45.6 percent from February 1987's $79,478,472, and 38.2 percent from January 1988's $83,748,678.

The average construction cost of a single-family home in February 1988, $70,800, rose 12 percent from $63,218 in February 1987, and 8.3 percent from $65,347 in January 1988.

Raleigh led all cities in value of construction authorized in February with $44,678,624; followed by Charlotte, $27,188,314; Durham, $22,356,343; Winston-Salem, $17,717,695; Greensboro, $16,019,702; Wilmington, $8,585,352; High Point, $6,709,847, and Cary, $5,565,600.

HAIRLINE TOOTH FRACTURE

On occasion a seemingly healthy tooth has never been filled may sustain a hairline fracture through the pain-sensitive area. The fracture line may be so fine that it is such a position as to defy ready diagnosis by the dentist, especially since the fracture does not show on X-rays.

To be certain, the dentist may suggest that treatment be delayed for a few days or more. He is not being cruel, simply cautious. Then the patient must carefully note the features of the pain pattern, as well as time and circumstances. This pattern should ultimately identify the damaged tooth and dictate the proper course of treatment.

Farm Scene

By SAM UZZELL

Many people are concerned about fleas in and around the home. Eastern North Carolina is host to often alarmingly high populations of the cat flea and the dog flea. These are the most common species and although they prefer dogs or cats to humans, they will sometimes take a meal with a human host.

It is important to keep a few facts in mind about these fleas. Both male and female fleas can suck a blood meal from a host animal. After feeding, mating and egg laying occur on the animal. The eggs usually drop off the animal onto rugs, carpets, furniture or wherever the animal usually rests or sleeps. Females can lay several batches of eggs, but there must be a blood meal before eggs are laid.

Small, wormlike larvae hatch from the eggs in a range of time that can be as soon as two days or as long as several weeks. Temperature, relative humidity and other factors influence the length of time that it takes for this step.

There are three larval stages that the developing flea passes through. The larvae feed on organic material in floor cracks, kennel floors, rugs or other areas. Usually the larval stage lasts one to three weeks. The last larval stage develops into a pupa which is enclosed in a silk cocoon. This stage is completed in five to seven days. However, the adult may remain resting for a long time within the cocoon until it emerges in response to vibration or the carbon dioxide exhaled by a dog, cat or a person. This is the reason that large numbers of fleas often attack people who return from vacation or new occupants of apartments where the previous owners had pets.

Both dog and cat fleas breed throughout the year, a generation requiring a few weeks to a month, depending upon temperature and humidity.

Treatment of pets involves the use of commercially available pesticides. Many of these products contain carbaryl (Sevin) as one of the active ingredients.

If a spray or dust is used, start the application at the head and work to the tail. It is best to wear gloves and to rub the chemical into the fur. Thorough treatment around the ears and under the forelegs is important. Often the pet will act erratically after the application. This is in part due to the fleas becoming slightly more irritating to the pet as they begin to die. After the pet is free of fleas, a flea collar may be used to help reduce reinfestation.

Treatment of premises must include successful treatment of the pet as well as the household, kennel, or yard. Severe infestations may be best handled by professionals, but the homeowner can do an adequate job in many cases. Fleas are concentrated in those areas that are most used by pets. The pet's bedding should be frequently laundered in hot soapy water or thrown away. Rugs, carpets, and furniture inside the house where pets have rested will probably be infested.

Satisfactory flea control can be achieved by a thorough vacuuming of those areas and a subsequent treatment with a suitable pesticide. Where pesticides cannot be used, dry cleaning, laundering, shampooing of rugs or other physical means must be used.

Chemical control indoors involves the use of one of the following insecticides: chlorpyrifos (Rid-A-Bug, Dursban), resmethrin (SBP 1382), Malathion (premium grade), Methoprene (controls immature fleas only), Aerosols such as dichloros (Vapona), pyrethrin, or propoxur (Baygon) can give quick, temporary relief.

Chemical control outdoors or under buildings involves the use of one of the following: carbaryl (Sevin), chlorpyrifos (Dursban), diazinon (Spectracide), malathion.

Various formulations of the above listed insecticides are available and label instructions for proper use should be followed. Whenever insecticides are used, it is critical that a second repeat application be done seven to 10 days following the initial application. If two or three applications are not done, then the larval and pupal (immature) fleas will have a chance to develop.

Law Could Aid Movers

NAGS HEAD, N.C. (AP) — A law passed in February expanding the scope of federal flood insurance may help coastal residents pay for costly moves caused by beach erosion, officials say.

The new law was sponsored by Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., whose district includes the coastal counties from Carteret to Currituck. It says that flood insurance will pay up to 40 percent of the appraised value of a home toward relocation to prevent it from falling into the ocean. Or, if the home cannot be moved, flood insurance will help pay for whatever salvaging can be done, and for demolishing the rest.

To qualify, a beach home must be condemned by a state or local building inspector because of structural damage or safety hazards caused by erosion. Because of the fickle nature of the ocean, a home must be in imminent danger of collapse before a claim can be paid.

Only those structures that had flood insurance before June 1 of this year will be eligible for claims. After that, insurance must have been in force for two years before the condemnation.

The provision also applies to homes in floodplains of rivers or lakes.

The flood insurance program is designed to be self-sufficient, but federal tax money is used to support the program whenever losses exceed revenues, officials said.

In North Carolina, about 37,000 flood insurance policies are in force through about a dozen carriers, David Cobb, senior marketing officer for the Federal Insurance Administration in Washington, told The News and Observer of Raleigh. The state ranks 10th in the nation for the number of policies and amount of coverage held. It ranks 25th in the number of claims paid.

Funds Awarded

Funds amounting to $108,000 have been presented to North Carolina State University by two Reynolds agencies — $68,000 by the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Company and $40,000 by the RJR Nabisco Foundation.

The funds are for agricultural programs including the continuation of county agent awards in all areas of extension work; support for a mobile information center to promote agricultural awareness and student recruitment, and leadership development for rural minority women.

Since 1962, R.J. Reynolds has contributed more than $4.6 million to tobacco research, extension and education at NCSU. The company has also contributed more than $10.7 million to similar programs at land-grant universities in tobacco producing states.

Diet Food For Thought...

Dieting has become big business in our society. It is also very serious business. While it is important to lose weight, it is also important to go about it in a sensible manner...both in terms of health and economics.

HOW DOES YOUR DIET COMPARE?

Can you average a weight loss of 3 1/2 to 5 pounds each week?
Does it cost more than $35 per week...total cost...no hidden fees?
Are the counselors educationally trained to help you?

OR

Are you required to buy products on a regular basis? How much will this cost?

At DIET CENTER we do not feel that injections or special products are necessary. We feel it is more important to learn to control your weight with regular foods that you will continue to eat for the rest of your life.

We offer our exclusive DIET SUPPLEMENT. This supplement is GIVEN to you at NO additional charge.

If the diet is guaranteed, what does the guarantee say? How much money will you get back if you are not satisfied? At DIET CENTER we feel it is impossible to guarantee weight loss, but should you decide to pay in advance for our program we will refund any unused portion of your money if for any reason you decide not to continue our program.

Are you discouraged from exercising? If so, take another look at the program, common sense tells us a safe diet and exercise program is the only sensible approach to good health and weight loss.

Gimmicks don't work. If they did, we'd all be thin and stay thin. Weed out the gimmicks. Call DIET CENTER today. We will explain our program, answer your questions, but we will apply no pressure. The decision is yours. Our consultations are FREE.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Public Duty

Exercise The Right To Vote

On Tuesday Pitt County citizens hold the key to their own future in their own hands.

What they do with this power will determine the quality of government for the state and community. They can take advantage of the opportunity or ignore it. But if they don't flex the muscle, it won't do them any good.

The phrase is "use it or lose it," and that concept applies to voting. On Tuesday Pitt County voters have the chance to make their voice count by marking the ballot for the candidate of their choice. Each and every citizen should take full advantage of this right that ensures them input into the future.

Voting is the prerogative that sets democracy apart from tyranny; it is the privilege that guarantees the nation's power resides in the people, not petty leaders.

War was fought for that right, and lives were sacrificed to keep it. But Pitt County citizens don't have to endure such hardships and tragedy. They merely have to mark a ballot.

And in a community like Pitt County, voting is the thread of participation that keeps grassroots government going. Here, where citizens can keep tabs on what their vote produces, is where the impact of that power is strongest.

To keep that process vital, however, requires citizens to actively exercise their right to vote and make their perspective part of public policy.

Pitt voters are encouraged to vigorously practice that privilege on Tuesday, or be prepared to suffer the consequences of apathy.

A Reminder ...

The Daily Reflector endorses the following candidates for election to office in Tuesday's party primary:

•Democratic secretary of state: Dan Bell is the most qualified candidate to continue the tradition of leadership for North Carolina. His education in business and law and experience in the office of secretary of state make him the best candidate.

•Democratic state superintendent of public instruction: Bobby Etheridge has demonstrated his support of education in his decade in the N.C. General Assembly. In addition, his programs target higher student achievement and a lower dropout rate and are worthy of support.

•Democratic secretary of labor: Incumbent John Brooks grew up in Greenville and has effectively handled his position during his tenure. Voters should return him to office.

•Democratic state auditor: Incumbent Ed Renfrow has done a thorough job of ensuring accountability in state government and ferreting out fraud. In addition, his office has received a clean slate from all external reviews.

•Democratic governor and lieutenant governor: Bob Jordan's record of proven leadership in the General Assembly qualifies him for the Democratic nomination for governor based on his platform of economics, education and environment. The Basic Education Program, School Construction Fund and phosphate ban, all urged into reality through Jordan's guidance, demonstrate his progressive thinking. Jordan's experience as a businessman gives him a good understanding of the economic dilemmas facing the state. As the Democratic nominee for governor, he would have the expertise to address issues like agricultural decay and competition between rural and urban areas for funding.

In addition, Pitt County's Democrats should give their vote to Harold Hardison for lieutenant governor because of his firm record of support for eastern North Carolina. Hardison stood by East Carolina University during its fight for university status and its medical school. Furthermore, he has a strong grasp of the economic issues facing the region and a longstanding record of addressing these needs.

•Republican governor and lieutenant governor: Jim Martin, running unopposed, offers his party a strong opportunity for continued leadership in the governor's office. Jim Gardner, an experienced candidate from Rocky Mount, possesses an understanding of regional issues and concern for eastern North Carolina that makes him the clear choice as the Republican nominee for the office of lieutenant governor. In addition, Gardner's endorsement from key General Assembly Republicans means he can bring unity and cohesion to the party. He should be the GOP choice.

Public Forum

To the editor:

I urge you during the week of May 1-7, 1988 — Teacher Appreciation Week — to focus your attention on the vital and valuable contributions teachers make to society. To help you show your appreciation to a teacher — one from the past or one who's teaching your child right now, here are some terrific suggestions from the PTA:

1. Compile and present a memory album of photographs taken in the classroom over the school year.
2. Plant a tree on the school's grounds in the teacher's honor (if permitted).
3. Offer to monitor the cafeteria, if school policy permits, so the teacher can enjoy an uninterrupted lunch.
4. Send a flower or a card, or take her out for dinner.
5. Remember that the best way to show your appreciation is through your support and your respect.

To the editor:

The unfortunate experience of Mattie Fallowfield with Greenville Utilities does not imply that GUC is against senior citizens. They would cut off power to any customer regardless of age without a second thought.

Greenville Utilities is a monopoly. You cannot get service from anyone else. They make up the rules and are sole judge and jury.

There must be some changes made in the procedures with respect to termination of service furnished by GUC. I would advise all concerned citizens to contact their respective council person, Mayor Ed Carter and/or City Manager Greg Knowles for assistance in this matter.

In the meantime, if you are going into the hospital, leaving on a long vacation or planning on dying, please do not forget to pay your utility bill in advance.

Foreign Policy Central '88 Issue

WASHINGTON — The World Court's rebuke of the United States in the PLO case is more than another Mideast tug of war. It opens a window on a divide in American foreign policy that is central to the presidential campaign.

The court ruled that the United States must submit to international arbitration in its attempt, dictated by a new American "anti-terrorist" law, to close the PLO observer mission to the United Nations. The American government replied that it will be bound only by the final orders of the American court system. Since the World Court cannot enforce its own ruling, the American decision will govern events.

In fact, we are a nation divided on whether policy should be guided by international law and — by extension — such other international expressions as U.N. majorities and the perceived good opinion of mankind, or whether policy should flow from our own national will.

The issue enters the campaign on the wings of Gov. Michael Dukakis' regular embrace of the international school, in a general way and in this specific case. He accepted the closing of the PLO's Washington information office — showing, by the way, a cavalier indifference to free speech — but he would have left the PLO's U.N. mission to be treated according to the procedure now affirmed by the World Court.

George Bush, in this respect a pale but presumably faithful copy of Ronald Reagan, seems to fit comfortably in the national school.

Neither Dukakis nor Bush is in the grip of the deeper fantasies that spin out of this corner of our political culture. The stock conservative nightmare is to see American sovereign interests everywhere being trampled by communist and Third World manipulation of the rules and forums of international law. It is a stock liberal dream to imagine a universe run by internationally agreed rules.

When liberals accuse Reagan and Bush of flouting international law in the PLO case, in the mining of Nicaraguan harbors and so forth, they are not saying these violations on small matters of tactics are the most important thing. They are, however, attesting to the continuing validity of a distinguishing tradition of American idealism.

Similarly, the criticism of Dukakis for being a mushy internationalist reflects another strain of American tradition and policy — realism or Realpolitik. Behind it lies a conviction that American democracy or inherent American decency is a better guide to an effective and moral American foreign policy than are international rules drafted by crafty undemocratic foreign powers.

The conservative vision of the world as a jungle and the liberal vision of a world in potential concord play off against each other in rhetoric. Indeed, the symbolism, the political echo, is important to people, especially when they move beyond issues to the judgments of character and essence that underlie a choice for president. Still, the everyday truth is that there is considerable overlap and accommodation between the two schools.

The governor's instinct in respect to international institutions, Edley goes on, is to strengthen them. For instance, when the USS Stark was hit in the Persian Gulf, Dukakis expressed a preference for an international peacekeeping force under the United Nations, but when that didn't materialize, he moved to the support of the arrangement of national forces that did materialize.

The words are reasonable, but the overtones carry a cost. Edley grants that these views open Dukakis to "partisan caricature." They also open him to the challenge that he's a decent man who's not tough enough.

Intellectual Integrity And Politics

RALEIGH — Maybe North Carolinians shouldn't expect their politicians to behave in public. Maybe it's hopeless.

That's certainly the sense one gets after watching members of the two parties square off in a bizarre meeting with a visiting Soviet delegation at the state Capitol late last month.

The Soviets were here to exchange ideas with young American leaders. In the first meeting, at least, they saw mostly young Americans bickering.

After the forum opened with a civics lesson from Rep. Bill Alexander, D-Cabarrus, Alan Pugh, a senior deputy to Gov. Jim Martin, decided to give the Soviets a partisan politician's view of North Carolina history.

Looking back to the highly charged racial campaign of 1900, Pugh virtually called the Democrats the state's party of racism. But after reminding the visitors of the state's troubled past, he said nothing of the state's better points, namely its relatively smooth transition to integration in the 1960s. That might have been something of which to boast, and partisan Pugh, in an election year, did not want to say anything good about Democrats. So, instead, he gave a Soviet delegation enough anti-American quotes to fill a propaganda poop-sheet.

Chris Scott, president of the AFL-

CIO and a Democratic Party heavy, quickly countered with a simplistic denunciation of the Republican Party as the crowd that only cares about the rich.

Then Pugh stood up again and sought Soviet approval of George Bush's candidacy for president. How ridiculous! Pugh was virtually stumping for Bush before a crowd of commies. So Scott jumps up and says, No! You want Mike Dukakis as president.

It was clear, at this point, that the polls didn't care one lick about their Soviet guests. They were playing only to the state press assembled there in hopes of hearing some kind of international discussion.

Thomas Stith, Martin's minority affairs adviser, figured he needed to fan the racial fires a bit more. So, he blamed the Democratic Party for all the ills of the black community including high unemployment, teen pregnancy, and infant mortality rates.

Rep. Judy Hunt, D-Surry, had heard enough. She made a short speech for world peace. After applause from the audience for that speech, Pugh jumped up and gave his own world peace speech. Can't be outdone by the opposition.

Now things were on track. Scott pulled out a propaganda sheet from the U.S. Department of State that said there are 4 million internees in Soviet forced labor camps. He asked the Soviets if this was true.

Pugh, maybe suddenly afraid that the news media would quote a Democrat asking a harder question of the Soviet Bear than had a Republican had, jumped up again. (He got quite a workout this day.) He tried to cut off the question, saying it was inappropriate.

But then one of the Soviets, in very good English, said, "Why not? It's a good question." They then tried to answer it, and later tried to answer a question from Alexander about freedom of travel for Soviet citizens.

There are differences between the two major parties, and they are worth exploring even in front of our ideological adversaries. Too bad this discussion could not have been conducted with more intellectual integrity and less partisan gamesmanship, however. But then, it's probably naive to expect anything more of this crowd.

Strength For Today

With the arrival of Spring my thoughts begin to be diverted to my garden. For me it began with a small vegetable plot in Orlando, Fla. With love I would walk in that garden in the cool of the day. After moving to a shady lot in a salty beachside community I would have to learn to love something other than vegetables. Gardening for me is a laboratory of the soul. Just as I must adapt to the pros and cons of my gardening environment, I must also adapt to the many strengths and weaknesses of character that God and the vicissitudes of life have dealt me. Just as in gardening I am a "co-operator" with nature in producing fruit and flower, so also in my life what I become is not my doing, but the product of being a co-creator" with God.

Blind Justice, Tunnel Vision And Ronald Reagan

Analysis

WASHINGTON — Immediately after Warren G. Harding's landslide presidential victory in 1920, one of his political fixers boarded a train in their native Ohio and headed for Washington.

"You ought to be in a position to get pretty much anything through down there if it's right," a friend told the influence-peddler as he saw him off at the station. The fixer replied, with a wink: "Hell! If it's right, they won't need me."

It wasn't right, ethically speaking, and they did need him. His arrival, and that of others like him, ushered in the era of pervasive corruption that marked the rule of Washington by the "Ohio Gang." As historian Samuel Hopkins Adams described it years ago in "The Incredible Era," his book on the Harding scandals:

"The Ohio Gang traded in liquor-withdrawal permits, protection to bootleggers, appointments to office, illegal concessions, immunity from prosecution, pardons, paroles, privileges and general graft."

Nothing approaching that scale of corruption, the sheer massive venality of it, has been seen in Washington since. But as the Reagan administration begins to pass into history, it increasingly seems to resemble the Harding period in terms of the ethical climate it has set.

That unflattering portrait has become more sharply focused in recent weeks. It comprises many parts, all related. None will be easily dissipated. They are destined to form a major part of the political debates over who should be the next president: the Reagan heir, Vice President George Bush, or the new face as the representative of change, Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis.

First and foremost in the debate is the continuing embarrassment over the stewardship of the Justice Department by Attorney General Edwin Meese III.

This situation has been permitted to fester until the entire world knows that Meese's behavior has left the department riven with dissension and in a near-open state of revolt by its most senior, and respected, professional personnel. There is little in American history to match this episode.

Much more than Meese is at stake. The government's standards for administration of justice have been indicted.

Then there is the spectacle of the administration's selective approach to wrongdoing.

It publicly proclaims war against drugs but privately caters to the big international drug dealers such as Panama's Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega because he provides secret training grounds for U.S.-backed Contra mercenaries receiving illegal U.S. arms assistance.

It talks tough about crime but fights special prosecutors whose jobs were created to fulfill the essential public role of watching the watchmen in powerful places and guarding the guardians of law enforcement.

It erects "a stone wall," in the words of U.S. District Court Judge Gerhard A. Gesell, between the court and the trial of the Iran-Contra defendants. It also, the judge charges, intentionally withholds "necessary evidence to the defense" in the same judicial process. All of this comes nearly a year to the day after the Iran-Contra congressional committees began their celebrated but inconclusive hearings amid pledges of full administration support in determining the truth about that shameful and nationally damaging story.

Finally, there is the picture of the president himself.

Not once has Ronald Reagan spoken out against the ethical lapses of his subordinates. On the contrary, he defends them when they run afoul of the law or are accused of improprieties. He intrudes himself into the judicial process and publicly pre-judges them as not guilty despite overwhelming evidence to the contrary.

In his blindness or insensitivity to appearances of conflict of interest, Reagan begs comparison with Harding.

To quote Adams again: "There is something grimly ironic in the fact that Harding, himself free of the taint of corruption, should have served as guaranty for the most flagrant group of bandits known to Washington since the days of Ulysses S. Grant. There is no doubt that he was for a long time ignorant of those Ohio operations already becoming notorious among the cognoscente. So many things go on in Washington that the White House never hears or, if it does hear, only long after the fact."

He added: "Directly, Harding was blameless for what was going on. Indirectly, he cannot be wholly exculpated. A president is measured, weighed and catalogued by the character of his chosen intimates."

History will apply that standard when it assesses Reagan and the Reagan years.

Governor's Races Will Take Back Seat In Tuesday's N.C. Primaries

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin will not be on Tuesday's primary ballot because he faces no Republican opposition in his bid for a second term, and his likely Democratic challenger, Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, faces only token opposition.

With no hotly contested primary in the governor's race, most of the state attention has focused on the primaries for lieutenant governor. Sens. Harold Hardison, a Deep Run businessman, and Tony Rand, a Fayetteville attorney, are running against Parks Helms, who served 10 years in the House before returning to his Charlotte law practice after an unsuccessful Senate bid in 1984. They have staged the most spirited campaign, with charges, counter-charges and denials of negative campaigning flying among the three.

Two other Democrats, Frank Jordan of Rockingham and Robert Hannon of Greensboro, will be on the ballot.

The Republican contest is not considered close as former Rep. Jim Gardner of Rocky Mount the expected winner. Gardner and his two opponents, state Rep. Bill Boyd of Randolph County and former state Sen. Wendell Sawyer of Greensboro, differed little over the issues during the campaign.

Secretary of State Thad Eure, 88, is stepping down from the post he's held since 1936. Seeking the Democratic nomination to succeed him are Rufus Edmisten, former attorney general and unsuccessful 1984 gubernatorial nominee; Dan Bell, deputy secretary of state who oversees the department's securities division; Brad Miller, a Raleigh attorney and former Wake County Democratic Chairman; and Wayne Hardin, owner of a radio station in Forest City.

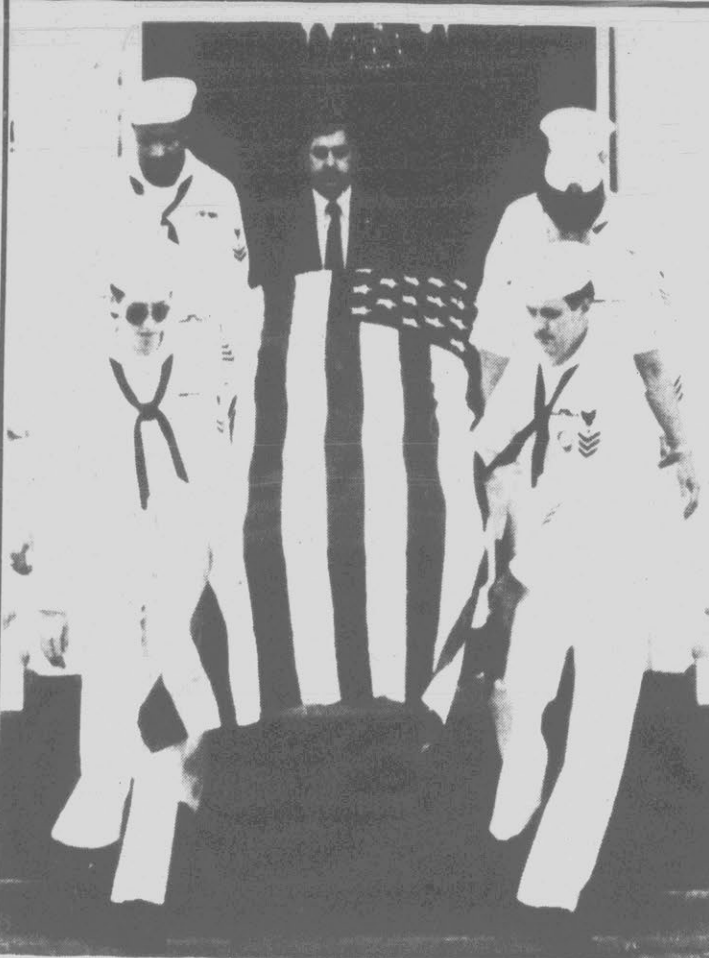

A two-way Republican primary pits state Rep. Ray Warren of Mecklenburg County against John Carrington, a Raleigh businessman and the unsuccessful 1984 nominee for lieutenant governor.

Also retiring is Superintendent of Public Instruction Craig Phillips. Running for the Democratic nomination are state Rep. Bob Etheridge of Harnett County and Henry McCarthy, an associate education professor at Appalachian State University.

Republican candidates are Tom Rogers of Cherryville and Thomas Paquin, superintendent of the St. Pauls school system.

Two-term state Auditor Ed Renfrow faces opposition for the Democratic nomination from John Reavill, a certified public accountant from Wilkesboro.

Another incumbent being challenged from within the Democratic ranks is Labor Commissioner John Brooks, who's running for a fourth term. His opponent is Bob Bingham, a Boone real estate broker and avid jogger who has vowed to run five miles in every county to demonstrate his enthusiasm for the job.

Sailor Who Died Helping Others Buried In Brevard

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer

BREVARD, N.C. (AP) — Hundreds of mourners gathered to remember Marshall Lindgren for the faith and loyalty that may have led to his death a week earlier aboard the submarine USS Bonfish.

"If the choice came between him staying so others could leave, I'm sure that's what he did," said Robert Crawford, former pastor of Bethany Baptist Church in Brevard, of which Lindgren was a member. "He would have stayed because that was Marshall."

Lindgren, 21, a petty officer third class, was one of three sailors killed April 24 by an explosion aboard the Bonfish, a submarine submerged off the Florida coast. Naval officers said the three may have died trying to help others evacuate the sub.

Also killed aboard the sub were Lt. Ray Everts, 30, of Naoma, W.V., and Petty Officer First Class Robert W. Bordelon Jr., 39, of Willis, Texas.

Sunday, about 500 mourners gathered in Brevard's First Baptist Church to remember Lindgren.

He was buried later at Pisgah Gardens Cemetery, next to his father Marvin.

Speakers recalled Marshall's quietness, courtesy and conviction to his church. The Rev. Bill Hill, current pastor of Bethany Baptist, lauded the Lindgrens for their devotion to Christianity — a devotion that has helped Joyce Lindgren endure the passing of her son, he said.

Sitting in a pew in front of her son's flag-draped casket, Mrs. Lindgren, her son Brent, 17, and Gail Ellison, 22, of Queensland, Australia, remained quiet. Ms. Ellison, Marshall Lindgren's girlfriend, flew to the United States this weekend through special arrangement with the Navy.

Sailors out of Charleston attended the service, as did Air Force recruits acquainted with Lindgren. In the balcony, politicians — including U.S. Congressman Jamie Clarke, state Sens. Tony Rand and R.P. "Bo" Thomas — came to pay their respects.

A picture of Marshall Lindgren, dressed in his sailor's uniform, sat atop a table behind his casket. The church was silent as speakers gave testimonials to the sailor's quiet, proud life and heroic death.

Bob Jones III, president of Bob Jones University in Greenville, S.C., told mourners that Lindgren should serve as an example to survivors of the Bonfish.

"Marshall is the (object) of envy because he is with the Lord," Jones said. "Death cannot touch him anymore, nor pain nor suffering nor debt nor sorrow. He is in the Lord's presence."

Mrs. Lindgren, calm and somber, closed the service with brief selections from the Bible. She nodded and smiled at her schoolchildren as she left the church.

ASU Breaks Ground For Business College

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — Officials broke ground for a new, $10 million business college building at Appalachian State University Saturday, and a congressman expressed hope that future graduates would represent the state in the nation's capitol.

"If we had just a few more of these graduates of the business school up in Washington, we'd be a hell of a lot better off," Rep. Cass Ballenger, R-N.C., said at the groundbreaking ceremony. "We need the people this school's going to produce."

The four-story, 130,000-square-foot building is scheduled for completion in late 1990. It will replace Walker Hall as home of the John A. Walker College of Business at Appalachian State.

Funds for the construction were appropriated by the General Assembly last year.

"The state of North Carolina has expressed its confidence in us by investing this $10 million in our program," said school Chancellor John Thomas.

The building that houses the original business school opened in 1976 at full capacity and has become overcrowded, said Paul Combs, dean of the business school.

Child Survives Fall Into Pond

FRANKLIN, N.C. (AP) — A 17-month old Franklin child, who apparently wandered away from his family, remained in critical condition today at Memorial Mission Hospital after a fall into a farm pond Sunday morning.

Landon Dale Kurti was submerged for 10 to 20 minutes before being pulled out by his father, Dr. Ralph S. Kurti, authorities say.

The child apparently wandered away from the family's residence on N.C. 28 north of Franklin while the parents were working near the pond, according to a Kurti family friend.

After the child was discovered missing, Kurti saw him in the pond and pulled him to shore. Kurti's wife, Carol, a registered nurse, began mouth-to-mouth resuscitation on the child, the unidentified friend said.

When Macon County Emergency Medical workers Bruce Wooten and Terry Bates arrived at the scene, the child was breathing on his own, but sporadically. The ambulance crew rushed the child to Angel Community hospital.

The child was stabilized at Angel and then flown by helicopter to Memorial Mission in Asheville, authorities said.

Medical personnel said the pond's cold water was a factor in the child's survival for such a long period under water.

'Every Day Out Here Is Critical'

Outer Banks Encounters New Force Of Change As Developers Move In

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer

For more than three centuries, life on North Carolina's Outer Banks has been governed mostly by isolation, storms, tides and fishing.

But in the last decade, a new force has entered the lives of the hardy inhabitants of these barrier islands — development — packing a wallop that could surpass even the most devastating hurricanes and winter storms.

From the village of Corolla down to Ocracoke, the sounds of breaking waves and the cries of the gulls and other birds are being drowned out by the roar of bulldozers, the screech of circular saws, and the rat-tat-tat of hammers.

"Every available spot has been taken," said Nellie Myrtle Pridgen, who was born in Nags Head in 1918. "A lot of Johnny-come-latelys came here with a purpose, to make themselves rich, and they turn into developers."

"I think the man upstairs will eventually take care of it all," she said, referring to the long list of killer storms that have blasted the fragile strip of sand in her 70 years.

Others, like Marc Basnight, say development also means better schools, roads, stores and other modern conveniences.

"Education is better, but we also have a drug problem for the first time, and a little more crime," said Basnight, a state senator from Dare County. "I think every day out here is critical."

The development of the Outer Banks has been kept in check by no small degree by North Carolina's Coastal Area Management Act, enacted in 1974, which has strict building guidelines on oceanfront and soundfront property.

"Because we developed so much later than other beaches on the East Coast we were able to build in some safeguards at the state and federal level," said Basnight.

Also, most of the shoreline property on the Outer Banks was purchased by the federal government for two national seashores and wildlife refuges. "This helps alleviate development pressures," he said.

Dave Owens, director of the N.C. Coastal Management Division, said the law has caused some resentment among local residents. But thanks to educational efforts, most support it now, he said.

"People used to fill in marshes to build trailer parks, and hotels were built right on the oceanfront," he said. "There haven't been 10 acres of regularly flooded marshlands filled in during the past decade."

Despite the restrictions, development has continued. There's no sign it is letting up.

A recent study on growth in Dare County predicted that under a worst-case scenario, the county could have nearly 100,000 permanent residents by the turn of the century with an average tourist population of 157,000 and more than 275,000 during peak months.

Life on the Outer Banks has been governed by tides and seas and storms for centuries. Now, there's a new element — development. This is the first article in a five-part series exploring the region's ability to cope with development that is being thrust on it as vacationers discover and rediscover the charms of the Outer Banks.

In addition, a recent forecast by the Center for Business and Economics at the University of North Carolina-Wilmington said Dare County's economy — fueled by a healthy tourist trade — could grow by 18.5 percent this year. During the past five years, said the center's director, W.W. Hall Jr., retail sales in the county have grown by an average annual rate of 19.1 percent.

But local officials warn the pressures of development will strain limited resources, including water, sewage, solid waste disposal, education, law enforcement, housing and transportation.

For example, the tremendous growth in retail sales could double the county's summer labor force in the next six years. A lack of affordable housing has made it difficult for some businesses to keep their workers.

"I've been on the phone all day trying to find accommodations for several sorority sisters who want to work here this summer," said Carol Dawson, who owns a motel and two businesses in Buxton. "If you're an employer and you find good help, you pay them (well) to keep them."

As chairman of the Dare County Board of Governors, Bobby Owens has had to deal with the stresses of development at the local level.

"It's like plugging up a leaking boat," he said. "We have a steady stream coming in from the north to buy half-acre lots for $200,000 or $300,000."

When Bobby Owens was first elected to the board in 1970, the county's school budget was about $200,000. This year it will be close to $9 million, he said.

To help pay for such things as a medical helicopter and a new jail, the county levies taxes on land transfers and hotel rooms. But some of the "newcomers" also want sidewalks, hospitals and garbage pickup.

"I'm not going to say it's a losing battle," Bobby Owens said. "But it's going to get worse."

The Outer Banks, with a permanent population of 21,000, hosts an estimated 1.5 million visitors each year. Most of the tourists don't come until summer warms up the 75-mile stretch of beaches and the motels and restaurants open for the season.

In the cool days of early spring, the main streets of Nags Head, Kill Devil Hills and Kitty Hawk are nearly deserted. By June, though, those same streets — even the five-lane Highway 158 bypass — will suffer from gridlock as thousands of tourists try to make their way to the beach.

As the number of tourists increase, so does the need to house, feed and entertain them. In the tiny villages with the quaint-sounding names — Duck, Waves, Buxton, Hatteras — cottages, hotels, restaurants and condominiums are rising at breakneck speed from what had been bald beach.

"In the early 1970s there weren't more than two or three restaurants open and one grocery store (in the Nags Head area)," said Dave Owens. "I remember when the only movie theater was over in Manteo. It would show the same picture for three weeks."

Nags Head now has a shopping mall, several shopping centers, high-rise hotels and condominiums and a full-time planning department.

One developer, Jud Ammons of Raleigh, is building a $200 million development on a 380-acre tract that spans the width of the island. Over the next seven years, Ammons will construct more than 1,000 residential units, two hotels and a shopping center.

"In Nags Head, we'll eventually make up half the tax base," Ammons said. "If I was living there and I heard someone coming in to do this, I'd be wary about it."

So far, nearly 30 of the units have been sold. Buyers are coming down from as far away as Massachusetts, New Jersey and Ohio.

North of Nags Head, the communities of Duck and Corolla were dots on the map a short 10 years ago. In Corolla, not far from the Virginia state line, Shirley Austin remembered coming to the Outer Banks nearly 30 years ago with her husband, Gene, a native, and their young daughter.

"She was 10 days old when we came here by boat," she said as she drove a visitor in her jeep along the beach north of town past a bevy of new cottages. "My three daughters got to see beached whales and turtles come onto the sand to lay their eggs."

Time caught up with Corolla around 1978, she said, when the paved road was extended north to the town line. Before that, residents could get off the island by driving the beach or by boat.

"One of the first things I learned was how to drive a boat," Mrs. Austin said. "We used to do all our shopping in Elizabeth City."

Like many Outer Bankers, she's struggling to accept the influx of "newcomers" who are moving into the new developments down the road with trendy names such as Gull's Flight, Sea Ridge, Osprey and Northpoint.

"I can live with the development as long as it's residential," she said. "This always has been a family community."

Carol Dillon, whose ancestors were shipwrecked near Buxton in "late 1600s or early 1700s," has seen the growth firsthand as the owner of the Outer Banks Motel.

"When he opened our motel in 1955 no one ever wanted to rent a room before June or after September," she said. "If that were the case now, we'd be very upset."

In Buxton, a lengthy dispute over the development of a 3,000-acre maritime forest apparently has been resolved with the county winning the right to set development standards from the state.

The main issue, Bobby Owens explained, was the minimum lot size for development of Buxton Woods. The county wanted it to be 40,000-square-foot. The state, citing environmental concerns, wanted the lots to be twice that size.

"I don't think there is one person in Dare County who could have afforded an 80,000-square-foot lot," Bobby Owens said.

In Hatteras, on the southern tip of the island, the possibility looms that a marina that has served as a base for commercial fishermen could be sold to developers.

GOP Meet Breaks Up In Fighting

LOUISBURG, N.C. (AP) — The fistfights that erupted at the 4th District Republican convention over the weekend could point to a showdown between supporters of presidential candidate Pat Robertson and other delegates, the state GOP chairman says.

"Who was right, I can't say, but certainly there needs to be more maturity and evenhandedness in handling the whole situation," Jack Hawke said. "Now I hope we can all become mature enough so we can all become part of the process and not try to exclude anyone."

The confrontation involved the selection of three delegates to the Republican National Convention in New Orleans in August. Robertson supporters, many of them conservative evangelicals new to politics, and moderate GOP party leaders supporting Vice President George Bush wanted to control the posts.

After the confrontation, Robertson supporters — more than half of the roughly 500 delegates — walked out and held their own convention to elect their own three delegates, while Bush supporters elected their three delegates inside.

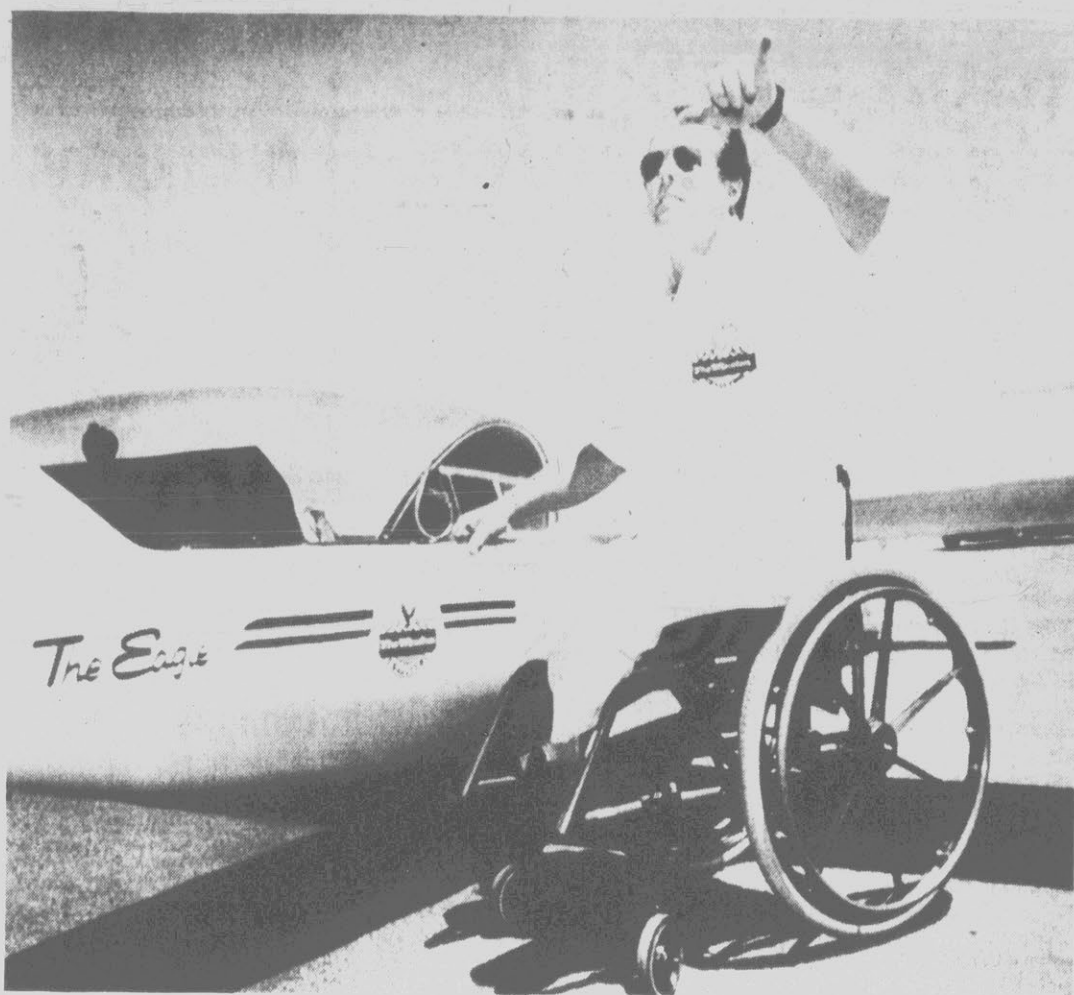

A group of Robertson supporters then stormed the podium, and pandemonium broke out with shouting, screams, flying bodies and oaths.

There were at least three fist fights on the podium as the Bush and Robertson forces battled for control. Calvin Vincent of Franklin County, the convention's sergeant of arms, was heaved off the podium and onto the floor.

No one was seriously injured, officials said.

Fourth District Chairman Larry Norman said he was "very, very, very disappointed" in the convention.

Several GOP leaders said Sunday that unless a compromise is reached at the state Republican convention in June between the party's conservative and moderates wings, disenchantment could taint the November election.

CROSS-COUNTRY FLIGHT — Vietnam veteran Terry Frazier of Charlotte prepares for a cross-country flight in his sailplane Sunday in Chula Vista, Calif. Frazier, legless after a mortar attack in Vietnam, expects to arrive home in North Carolina on May 19. (AP Laserphoto)

Legless Tar Heel Veteran Starts Sailplane Odyssey

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Terry Frazier, a North Carolina man who lost both legs in combat, began his quest Sunday to become the first person to glide a sailplane across the United States.

Frazier also hopes to raise nearly $50,000 in pledges during his three-week odyssey, money to help maintain the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington, D.C.

"I think the Vietnam Memorial is one of the most important monuments we have. It's an opportunity for people to heal about the war and come to grips with their feelings about Vietnam," Frazier said.

"It also removes the war and the veterans who died there from the political aspect. When you go there... you just relate to the men who died, and I think that's real healthy."

Frazier has planned his 2,500-mile trip along a less mountainous southern route that will end May 19 in Kitty Hawk, N.C., the birthplace of aviation.

He then will glide his 15-foot long sailplane, the "Eagle," back to the Charlotte Motor Speedway to deliver the starting flag for the May 22 Winston Cup NASCAR stock car race.

"I'm not real concerned with whether I accomplish being the first person to fly (a glider) the entire distance, I'm in it for the challenge of making the flight," said Frazier, 41, an English professor at the University of North Carolina-Charlotte.

"But it would be fun to fly all the way across the country then land at the spot where the first glider flew."

Others have tried similar flights, but each was forced to complete part of the trip by hauling their sailplanes on a trailer.

Frazier, a nationally ranked sailplane competitor, has conducted one soar-a-thon a year to benefit charity since taking up the sport six years ago. This is his first transcontinental attempt, however, and the purpose makes it even more special.

"Every veteran I know who is still alive feels he's part of that Vietnam Monument," said Frazier, who lost his legs in a 1967 mortar attack that took the lives six of his buddies and wounded 18 others.

Proceeds from flight pledges will be given to Friends of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, a nonprofit group which helps maintain the monument and assists in memorial activities for families of deceased veterans.

Frazier, who invented artificial legs that clamp onto his glider's foot controls, said he became hooked on gliding when he saw his first one in flight 10 years ago.

"I don't even like planes that have engines or gas because when I was in Vietnam I saw too many planes go down in flames," Frazier said. "I feel more secure in a plane with no fuel and no engine."

Frazier, who hopes to average about 200 miles a day, began his journey with help from a tow plane that lifted the "Eagle" off the runway of Brown Field.

Amnesty Plan Ending

L.A. Times-Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The federal government's once-in-a-lifetime offer of amnesty for many illegal immigrants ends Wednesday after lurking at least 1.3 million undocumented people out of the shadows and onto a privileged path that could lead to U.S. citizenship.

About 8,500 illegal aliens in North Carolina and South Carolina have applied for amnesty under the landmark 1986 immigration revision law, while officials said they had expected as many as 50,000.

Under the law, farmers will face penalties of up to $10,000 and six months in jail if they hire migrant workers without documentation. The penalties begin in 1989.

The unprecedented, year-long legalization program for aliens who entered the United States before Jan. 1, 1982, has earned generally high marks for Immigration and Naturalization Service administrators.

At the same time, however, the so-called window of opportunity for illegal immigrants is slamming shut, leaving millions of aliens on the outside who did not, because of fear or confusion — or could not, because of the requirements — take advantage of the program.

Unresolved is the fate of an estimated 3 million immigrants who did not qualify for amnesty.

Indian Advocates Say Their Problems Are Being Ignored

By The Associated Press
Indians are North Carolina's fastest-growing group, and the state has the fifth largest American Indian population in the United States, but advocates say their problems are not receiving enough attention.

"A lot of people think the problems of Indians were 200 years ago," said Lonnie Revels of Greensboro, chairman of the North Carolina Commission of Indian Affairs. "But we're fighting these battles daily."

While there are nearly 66,000 Indians in North Carolina distributed among six tribes — a 45 percent growth from 1970 to 1980 — it was only this year that the state Board of Elections and Division of Health Services listed Indians under a separate statistical category.

The absence of such tallies makes it hard for advocacy groups to win financial support for jobs and educational programs for Indians, says Ruth Revels, director of the Guilford Native American Association.

"If you don't have decent data, it looks like you don't have a need," she said in an interview. "Even when they use the word minority, it's interpreted to mean black."

Statistics that are kept on Indians show higher drop-out and illiteracy rates, lower incomes, shorter life expectancies and a greater chance of violent death, including suicide, according to advocacy groups.

The average Indian suicide victim is only 25, about 10 years younger than the average black person who commits suicide and 20 years younger than the average white person.

The plight of Indians in North Carolina has been underscored by violence lately in Robeson County, but the problems are not confined to the Lumberton area.

— In western North Carolina, on the Cherokee's Qualla Boundary reservation, half of students who begin high school never graduate. By comparison, the statewide dropout rate is about 29 percent.

— The Haliwa and Meherrin tribes in the northeast part of the state report the lowest per-capita income and highest unemployment in the state, Indian officials say.

— Nearly half of the 1,400 Indians in Guilford County in central North Carolina live in substandard housing, they say.

"We're trying to combat a lack of pride, a lack of self-esteem," said Bruce Jones, executive director of the Commission of Indian Affairs.

Official neglect of Indians in North Carolina may date as far back as the 19th century, when the General Assembly created separate schools for white and black children, but none for Indians. Widespread education of Indians did not begin until the 1960s, Indian leaders say.

"During that time, the system turned its back on us," said James Hardin, president of the United Tribes of North Carolina and executive director of the Lumbee Regional Development Association. "We fell way behind."

Even now, Indian advocates say, the Department of Public Instruction devotes few resources to special problems of Indians.

The Division of Indian Education, established in 1977, has one full-time employee and an annual budget of $7,500 — not including salaries — to deal with 17,314 Indian students in 113 school systems, they say.

Gov. Jim Martin has promised to try to include funds to expand the division in his state budget proposal this year.

Robeson Shooting

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — Three people have been arrested following a gunshot believed fired at the Robeson County jail from a motorboat on the nearby Lumber River, authorities said.

Michael Byrd, in his 20s, of Lumberton, and Eugene Frank Perry, 20, of Stockton, Calif., and Lumberton, were charged with discharging a firearm into an occupied dwelling, a sheriff's spokesman said.

A third person also was arrested in connection with the incident, but the name and the charge were not immediately available, officials said.

The shot penetrated a window on the west side of the jail where trustees are housed about 7 p.m. Saturday, the spokesman said.

Deputies and other area lawmen rushed to various landings along the riverbank, but those in the motorboat sped away and eluded arrest, the spokesman said. Byrd and Perry were arrested later on land.

Knights of the Ku Klux Klan marched Saturday in Alamance and Orange counties, and traded insults with teen-agers and University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill students.

Several hundred people watched as Dale McKinley, a UNC graduate student from Zimbabwe who has been prominent in anti-apartheid and anti-Central Intelligence Agency activity on the Chapel Hill campus, unfurled and burned a Confederate flag shortly after the parade began about 4:30 p.m.

Shooting

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A 9-month-old girl who was shot at a backyard birthday party was in serious but stable condition today at Baptist Hospital, a hospital spokeswoman said.

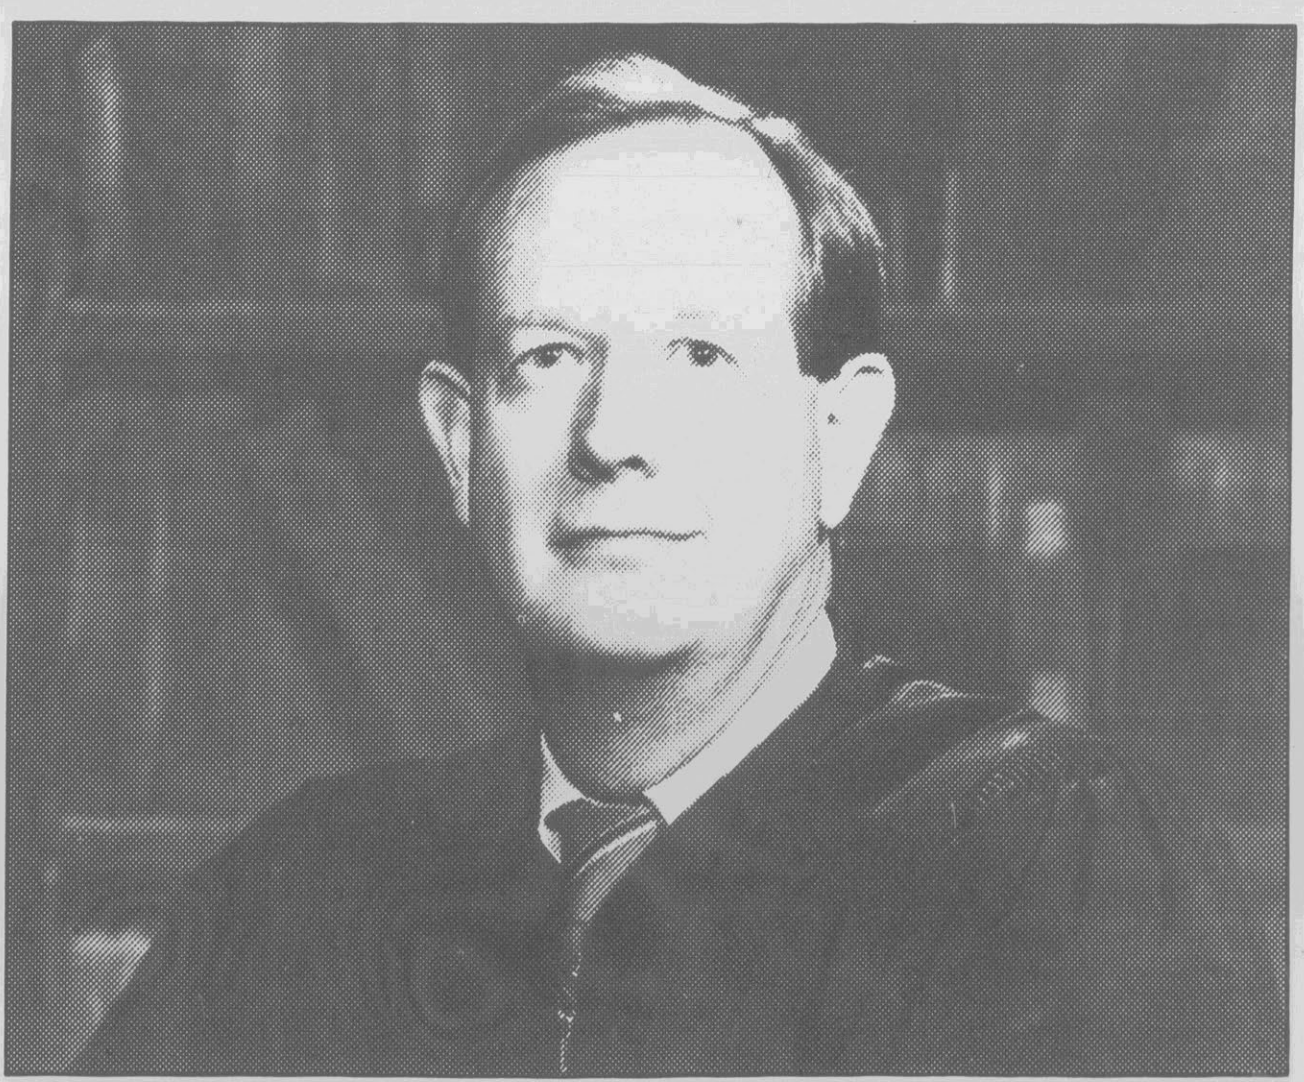

Tonya Ann Inman was attending the party with her parents, Billy Ray and Linda Grace Inman, about 5 p.m. Saturday when she was struck behind the right shoulder with a bullet that entered both her lungs, said her uncle, William Inman.

William Inman, who was holding the infant at the time, was shot in the left arm and was treated at Baptist Hospital.

Couple Marries Friday

SNOW HILL — Brenda Lou Carraway and Larry Carrington

Hawkins were united in marriage Friday at 7 p.m. in the First Baptist Church. William S. Brown conducted the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Clark Carraway of Snow Hill. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Carrington Hawkins of Greenville.

The matron of honor was Devere B. Carraway of Greenville, sister-in-law of the bride. Bridesmaids were Debra Padgett of Greenville, Tammy Frizzelle of Myrtle Beach, S.C., and Terry H. Holt of Asheville. Haley Hawkins of Snow Hill, niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Randy Hawkins of Snow Hill, brother of the bridegroom, Joseph Carraway, brother of the bride, and Jeff Camp, both of Greenville. Devin Hill of Snow Hill, cousin of the bride, was ring bearer.

A program of wedding music was presented by organist Elaine Butler and vocalists Ms. Butler and Chris Godwin.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose an ivory cathedral-length gown of satin, pearls and re-embroidered alencon lace. The neckline was a sweetheart design and the bodice was overlaid with alencon lace and teardrop pearls. The sleeves were satin puffed and extended into illusion. The A-line skirt was adorned with motifs and lace-trimmed flounce. She wore a wreath of silk flowers and pearl filaments extending into a two-layer illusion veil. The bride carried a cascade of misted ivory daisies with yellow rosebuds.

The attendants wore royal blue sheath taffeta gowns. The bodices featured matching bows on one shoulder with pearls and ruffles. The sheath skirts were accented by double peplums. Each carried a brandy snifter with a lighted candle encircled by a ring of daisies. It was accented by blue and white ribbon.

The flower girl wore a royal blue full-length gown tied with a ribbon at the waistline. The bodice was embroidered with bell sleeves. She carried a basket of white daisies.

The mother of the bride entertained at a reception in the fellowship hall of the church.

After a wedding trip to Virginia, the couple will live in Greenville.

The bride attended Pitt Community College and East Carolina University. She is employed in the radiology department of Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The bridegroom attended PCC and is employed by Star Electronics at Burroughs Welcome.

The bridegroom's parents entertained at a rehearsal dinner. Several showers were given for the couple before their marriage.

MRS. HAWKINS

At Age 96 Bank President Walks Slower

By PAUL DE LA GARZA Associated Press Writer

SANDOVAL, Ill. (AP) — There's a quote taped to her calendar that sums up the vigor of 96-year-old Stella Bellamy: "I am not afraid of tomorrow, for I have seen yesterday and I love today."

Today, she takes more naps than when she started working at First National Bank. Her hearing isn't the greatest; and when she walks, it's a slow gait.

But that hasn't kept her from her jobs as bank president, village treasurer and insurance agent in this Southern Illinois town of 1,700.

She keeps up the pace, "because I like it. I love my work."

"I can't figure life without working," she added.

Born in St. Louis in 1892, Mrs. Bellamy moved to Sandoval when she was 3 months old. She graduated from the local high school in 1910 — the year First National was chartered — and became a milliner.

"That's what I was gonna do," says the petite, white-haired, bespectacled woman. "Then women stopped wearing hats."

So in 1915 she joined the bank as a bookkeeper, and eventually held other jobs, including cashier and teller. She worked next to her husband, a cashier, from 1921 until he died in 1948.

When he died, she took over as town treasurer, a post still holds. In 1967, she became bank president.

But that's not all. She's also treasurer of the local women's club, and holds memberships on two village committees.

"I don't take any vacations," said Mrs. Bellamy, who has no children. "I don't have anyone here to take my place, and I think if you have a job you better take care of it."

Since she suffered a mild heart attack last year, she doesn't drive to work. A bank employee picks her up and drives her to the home she shares with a retired teacher.

"She's 10 years younger than I am, but I have to take care of her," said Mrs. Bellamy. "I do the cooking. I'm a gourmet cook."

During the interview, Mrs. Bellamy was interrupted by some of the bank regulars — one woman told her about a friend in the hospital and another talked about tulips.

A teen-ager asked for a piece of candy and Mrs. Bellamy obliged, but only after the girl repeated the request numerous times. "I don't hear very well," she explained.

Jealousy Upsets Plans

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My fifth high school reunion is coming up soon and I want very much to go, but here's the problem: I met "Bob" years ago while I was on vacation and we were married a year later.

We now live in a small town 600 miles from my hometown. Bob grew up here, where the boys and girls never mixed much, and he is outrageously jealous if I as much as smile at another man.

We have had incidents already where he had no reason to be jealous, but he has been. I know that if I were to hug a male classmate, or even touch him, Bob would make a scene. (He could not understand our graduation pictures — with boys and girls holding hands in a semicircle. "Touching" to him is off-limits.)

We have a good marriage, but I must be on my guard constantly so Bob won't get the wrong idea. He won't let me go to the reunion without him, but the first "Do you remember?" is sure to send him into a jealous rage that could even end in divorce! He is No. 1 in my life, but how can I make him understand that these schoolmates are only friends? — TORN IN TWO

DEAR TORN: You can't "make" Bob understand anything he doesn't want to understand. If touching an old schoolmate and the first "Do you remember?" will set him into a jealous rage that could end in divorce, I think you'd be wise to skip the reunion. With Bob's hangups, you'd have a miserable time if you went.

You say you have a good marriage. How good is a marriage in which you dare not be your friendly self for fear of making your husband jealous?

Bob needs counseling. If you value your marriage, you will persuade him to get it, unless you don't mind walking on eggshells the rest of your married life.

DEAR ABBY: I read with interest your response to "Good Citizen" in the Great Falls Tribune. The question concerned the power of law enforcement officers to arrest drunk drivers.

In your answer, you gave an example of a Los Angeles officer investigating a driver who is slumped over the steering wheel (presumably drunk and passed out) while the car is stationary. Apparently, in L.A., this person could be arrested only for being drunk in public, but not for drunken driving.

In Montana and some other states, such as Missouri, Indiana, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Utah, Ohio and Arizona, the drunk person slumped over the steering wheel of the car would be considered in actual physical control of the vehicle and would, therefore, be arrested for drunk driving. The law courts in the above states came to this conclusion because the person had not relinquished authority or control of the vehicle to another person. — ALBERT E. COKE, DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE, TRAFFIC HIGHWAY SAFETY, HELENA, MONT.

DEAR MR. COKE: I applaud the law courts for their wisdom.

DEAR ABBY: My hat is off to you for the response you gave that woman who asked for a tactful way to tell her two large sisters, whom she wanted to be her bridesmaids, to lose weight before the wedding (supposedly because of difficulties in finding dresses to fit them). You said there was no tactful way. You were right — and then you reminded her that beauty comes in all sizes. Of course, larger dresses could have been made without too much difficulty.

I was recently one of 10 bridesmaids, some of whom (myself included) weighed more than 300 pounds.

We all had beautiful matching gowns made either by the bridesmaid herself or a seamstress, and if I may say so, I think we all looked wonderful. Not only does beauty come in all sizes — so does love and romance. The bride weighed over 300 pounds, too! — A BIG FAN IN BUTLER, PA.

Oakley-Mishoe Vows Exchanged

MRS. OAKLEY

WASHINGTON, N.C. — The wedding ceremony of Cynthia A. Mishoe and Michael Lynn Oakley took place Saturday in the Washington Pentecostal Holiness Church. Parents of the bridal couple are Mr. and Mrs. John David Mishoe of Route 3, Washington, and Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Floyd Oakley of Route 2, Greenville.

The Rev. E.L. Trueblood conducted the double-ring ceremony. A program of music was presented by organist Joyce Moore and Bethea Moore, who sang "There is Love," "I Love You Most of All," "Our Sacred Vow" and "Wedding Prayer."

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a formal gown of white organza over taffeta. It was designed with a high collar of silk Venise lace beaded with seed pearls and a sheer yoke of illusion featuring clusters of seed pearls. The fitted bodice was overlaid with silk Venise lace trimmed with pearls and the long tapered sleeves of organza were enhanced with beaded lace and ended with a ruffle and satin bow at the wrists. The full skirt extended to a semi-cathedral train. A ruffled flounce picked up with lace motifs and satin bows encircled the hemline of the skirt and train. Her veil of illusion extended from a cap of lace and pearls with side sprays of silk flowers and a back pouf. She carried a cascade bouquet in white satin gardenias, white satin roses, lily of the valley, forget-me-nots and silk baby's breath with pearl sprays.

Wanda Gale Hollar of Mocksville, sister of the bride, was honor attendant. Bridesmaids included Lisa Mishoe of Elkin, sister-in-law of the bride, Sharon Oakley of Charlotte, sister of the bridegroom, Susan Jones of Columbia, S.C., and Kathy Hucks of Goldsboro, cousins of the bride, and Debbie Gladson of Greenville. Amy Mishoe of Elkin, niece of the bride, was flower girl.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included Floyd Oakley of Charlotte, brother of the bridegroom, Eddie Mishoe of Elkin, brother of the bride, Darrel Pressley, Scott Justice and Doug Evans, all of Charlotte. The bridegroom's nephew, Matthew Coleman, of Kinston was ring bearer.

Each of the attendants wore a teal-length ruby colored dress featuring lace over satin, with short sleeves and sabrina neckline. A satin cummerbund accented the waistline and tied in a back bow. Each carried a silk carnation arranged in baby's breath and greenery. The honor attendant carried two silk pink carnations, baby's breath and greenery.

A reception, sponsored by Rose Lewis, the Woman's Ministries of the Washington Pentecostal Holiness Church and other friends of the couple, followed the ceremony in the Ruritan Building in Chocowinity. Beverly Perry and Iris Mobley served the cake and Janice Hodges served the punch.

A rehearsal dinner was hosted by the bridegroom's parents in the Shelmadine Pentecostal Holiness Church fellowship hall. Joyce Boyd, Jennifer Smith and Lois Lewis served the guests.

The bride attended Emmanuel College in Franklin Springs, Ga., and is employed by Winn Dixie. The bridegroom attended Central Piedmont Community College in Charlotte and is employed by Bankhead Refrigeration.

After a wedding trip to Disney World in Florida, the couple will live in Matthews.

Nun Goes From Pray Room To Courtroom

By HOYT HARWELL
Associated Press Writer

CULLMAN, Ala. (AP) — When Lynn McKenzie took her final vows last Aug. 1 as a nun in the Benedictine Order, Cullman lawyer Jim Berry made sure he was at the ceremony.

"It's the only time I'm ever going to see a lawyer become a nun," he said.

Sister McKenzie's double life, as a nun and as an attorney, causes other people more problems than it does her, she said.

"Sometimes in court people don't know whether to address me as Sister, Lynn or Ms."

"Sister is part of who I am," she said, "but if people are uncomfortable with that, fine. Lynn or Ms. is fine with me."

In one case, she said, the prosecuting attorney "was careful to point out that my being a sister didn't have anything to do with the case," she said. "Some prefer Ms. because Sister might have an undue influence."

Some people, Sister McKenzie said, think there is some kind of moral conflict between her roles, but she does not.

"Law is a service," she said. "There is the Gospel imperative to visit people who are in prison. I see my work in line with that."

"It is important for people to know there are normal folks who enter the religious life. It is a viable alternative and I am glad for people to know there are such opportunities."

Other nuns at Sacred Heart Convent do such work as teaching and nursing, although the Benedictine Order, founded 1,500 years ago, stresses a monastic praying community.

"Any service we do that's compatible with that, we do," she said. "It depends on the individual talents of the sisters."

Sister McKenzie, a native of Mobile, moved to Gadsden with her parents and seven brothers and sisters when she was 10.

She began studying law at the University of Alabama in 1980 but early in 1981 she joined the Benedictine order and asked the university to give her an academic leave.

"They said they had never heard of a similar case but that they would consider my request if I wanted to come back."

After completing her postulate and novitiate years at Cullman, she returned to law school in 1983, got her degree and then passed the state bar examination — the only person in Alabama and one of a few in the country, she said, who is a nun practicing law.

She worked for awhile with Greater Birmingham Ministries but as the only lawyer there she felt she was not learning enough.

"I decided if I was going to help folks I needed to practice with people who had been there," she said.

Sister McKenzie accepted an offer from Jimmy Knight and Steve Griffith, whose law firm is in Cullman, to join them. She had clerked for them previously.

She said that although she does not specialize, she enjoys criminal work and juvenile work the most.

Sister McKenzie begins her day with morning prayers at 6:30, returns to the convent for noon prayers when she can, takes part in evening prayers at 5:00, and then night prayers after dinner.

"My first commitment is to the convent," she said. "It is the most important thing. I am trying to respond to what God is calling me to do. The prior said that if law was my interest, she didn't have any problem, though. There is the possibility for ministry and service in the law."

In her prayers, she said, "I pray for cases, not so much for success but for the people involved; not so much to get them off, but that they somehow can be touched by God's healing power."

Judges, she said, call her Sister outside the courtroom and Ms. McKenzie inside.

Her nun status, she said, "hasn't been a disadvantage but I'm not sure it's an advantage, either. It shouldn't make any difference, because I'm there defending people."

Are her ears too sensitive for the language that accompanies some criminal cases?

"I tell people I'm their lawyer, just tell me. I tell witnesses not to worry about it, that I get up in the morning just like they do," she said.

"The language in some sex abuse and sodomy cases bothers me, but I think it would bother anyone."

After almost three years with the law firm, she said, she still considers herself new and still has questions about her future.

"I might decide at some point it's not the best thing. I have thought about canon law, church law, but right now I'm real satisfied. I enjoy the work I'm doing here. I'm doing some good and it's good for me."

"I don't want to become complacent. I want to grow in religious life as well as what it means to my life as a lawyer."

Despite her success as a law student and at passing the bar, she said, "Taking my final vows as a nun was the happiest day of my life. There were a lot of lawyers there."

Connie Payton Is Ready For A New Life

By KAREN E. SMITH
Elgin Daily Courier-News

BARRINGTON, Ill. (AP) — When Connie Norwood was a senior in high school, she and her aunt took a weekend jaunt from their hometown of New Orleans to Jackson State University in Jackson, Miss.

She didn't know it at the time, but the trip would have a dramatic effect on her future.

Jackson State football coach Bob Hill, whom Connie's Aunt Betty had been dating, arranged for Connie to meet a promising young running back on his team, a polite, soft-spoken young man from Columbia, Miss., named Walter Payton.

In a few years, Connie Norwood would become Connie Payton and move from the deep South to Chicago, where Walter would suit up for the Chicago Bears. For 13 years, she would support, console and cheer her husband through one of the most phenomenal careers in professional football history.

She would work to create a normal environment amid the media spotlight for their two children. And she would work to establish her own identity, first through modeling and a Wheaties TV commercial and more recently, through her work as a spokeswoman and active member of several charitable groups.

A stylish, attractive, articulate woman of 33, Connie Payton is coping with her husband's retirement as a player the same way she learned to handle the ups and downs of a professional sports life — one day at a time.

"I think he's going to be so busy that I don't think he's really going to have time to think about it anyway," she said.

The Paytons' home in South Barrington is not what you would call the private fortress of a superstar. The home is easily visible from the road, as is a small banner along the drive proclaiming "Payton's Run" in the blue and orange colors of the Bears.

Yet an electronically controlled gate keeps gawkers and autograph hounds from driving up to the front door, as they did before the gate was installed.

Of course, the neighbors in the nearby estate-size homes were excited — even unbelieving — when they realized the Paytons were building a home in their area three years ago.

Now, the Payton children, Jarrett, 7, and Britney, 2½, are just another pair of kids who play in the neighborhood and Walter and Connie another couple on the block, albeit a rather affluent, famous one.

"The neighbors are just great," said Connie. "Once we got to know everybody, they'd say, 'You know you're just like everybody else,' and I'd say, 'That's right, we sure are.'"

Connie heads a division of the National Society to Prevent Blindness that promotes eye safety in sports. She's also on the board of trustees of the Chicago Leukemia Society and does community service work.

When she talks about the tremendous outpouring of respect, gratitude and genuine love Walter and the entire family received during his last year as a player, her voice quivers slightly.

Theft Charges
Greenville police arrested two people on theft charges over the weekend.

Officer K.M. Smeltzer said Eric Stephen Hayes, 19, of Winterville, was taken into custody about 2:02 a.m. Sunday at the intersection of Evans Street and Greenville Boulevard on charges of breaking, entering and larceny from a vehicle.

Smeltzer said the charges against Hayes stemmed from the theft of a radar detector from a vehicle parked at Domino's Pizza at 1201 Charles Blvd. that was reported on April 29.

In addition to the breaking, entering and larceny charges, Smeltzer said Hayes was charged with altering a serial number on the radar detector.

Officer T.A. Lee said a juvenile was taken into custody and turned over to the departments juvenile division in connection with the theft of a flashlight and knife from Nichols Discount City on Greenville Boulevard about 2:35 p.m. Saturday.

Cyclist Arrested
A bicycle rider was arrested on driving while impaired charges by Greenville police Saturday.

Officer R.J. Brewington said Terry

Lynn Cannon, 34, of 408 S. Pitt St., was taken into custody at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Millbrook Street about 6:30 p.m.

A.G. Cox PTO

The Parent Teacher Organization of A.G. Cox School will meet today at 7 p.m. in the school's multipurpose room. The program "A Year in Review" will feature reports from each school discipline, extracurricular activities and a slide presentation. The meeting is open to parents of Wintergreen's fifth graders.

Classroom Visitors

Renee Walden, nutritionist with the Pitt County schools, recently visited kindergarten students at Eastern Elementary School. After reviewing the four basic food groups, Ms. Walden supervised a tasting party which included snacks from each food group, and students learned to create nutritious snacks.

Bill Frazier, a local band instructor, introduced woodwind, brass and percussion to kindergarten students at the school recently, while second graders Linda Stapleton and Judy Bays celebrated North Carolina Heritage Week by visiting the Gov. Charles B. Aycock historic site in Fremont. Woodworking and basketweaving were demonstrated for the students.

PTO Meeting
W.H. Robinson School will have a

Parent Teacher Organization meeting today at 7:30 p.m. when first graders will present the play "Wack-a-Doo-Zoo." A Triad Enrichment Program open house will be held prior to the PTO meeting beginning at 7 p.m.

The N.C. Symphony Brass Quartet performed for third and fourth graders at the school recently, and the students recently participated in the "Jump Rope for Heart" program. They raised $3,650 for the American Heart Association.

All students participated in Activity Day where staff and parent volunteers assisted physical education teachers in rotating students through activities. Also a book fair was held, and first graders in Teresa McLawhorn's and Bridget Harbin's first grade classes concluded a unit on animals and their lifestyles by visiting th N.C. Zoo.

Your Social Security Disability Benefits

BENEFITS DENIED?

Have you been denied benefits under Social Security's disability benefits programs? Do not be discouraged. That happens to most people who apply the first time.

Have you asked for reconsideration of your disability claim and been turned down a second time? Again, don't be discouraged or give up. That's the way the disability system works today.

Appeal your case further to the Office of Hearings and Appeals for a hearing before an Administrative Law Judge and a review by a Member of the Appeals Council. The Judge will see you and hear your personal description of your physical or mental illness, and we will present your case as it applies to the complex rules of the Social Security Act.

Our win rate average is over 80%.

If you have been denied benefits, call now for an immediate conference. There is no fee for an initial conference to discuss your eligibility for disability.

Last minute plans aren't always more difficult. Sometimes, they're impossible.

Isn't it odd that most people never make prearrangement plans? After all most people wouldn't think of waiting until the worst possible time to make plans for anything else. But with funeral and burial prearrangement, all too often, people shirk their responsibility and force their family to make arrangements under great stress. When you think about it, you realize that can be quite unfair.

But there is a simple answer. In the time it takes to go to lunch, you can take care of all your prearrangement needs in a private consultation with us at S.G. Wilkerson and Sons. As funeral directors and cemeterians with over 50 years of experience, we can help you make things easier. Call us to arrange a consultation.

Fun Of Winning

NASCAR driver Phil Parsons gets out of his race car in victory lane Sunday after winning the Winston 500 at the Alabama International Motor Speedway for his first major NASCAR win. (AP Laserphoto)

Parsons Uses Luck For Win

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Phil Parsons has always been fast, but in 110 races he'd never been able to parlay speed into a victory. Then he discovered luck.

Parsons was nearly lapped early in Sunday's Winston 500 when his car ran out of gas. He would have lost that lap, too, had he and his crew not made a daring decision that ultimately paid off in his first victory in six seasons on the stock-car circuit.

"All the other guys pitted for gas on the (lap 14) caution flag and we didn't," said Parsons, a native of Detroit who lives at Denver, N.C. "We were leading the race and just got past the pit road (entrance) before we realized everybody was going in. We really were caught asleep."

On lap 48, Parsons suddenly slowed in turn one and had to coast nearly all the way around the 2.66-mile, high-banked oval.

"We really took a gamble at that point," Parsons said. "We only put in one can of fuel to try to minimize the amount of time we spent on the pit road. It worked out real well."

Parsons barely got back onto the track ahead of Ken Schrader, the leader at the time. With Parsons still accelerating, Schrader appeared poised to pass him on the backstretch.

But Schrader got too close before pulling out and tagged the rear of Parsons' Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme.

Schrader spun four times and

"nearly put me in the wall," Parsons said. "But we got a yellow (caution flag) and got to go in and fill up on fuel, and we didn't lose that lap."

Given that reprieve, Parsons resorted to speed to make up the deficit. He got past Geoff Bodine with 15 laps remaining to take the lead, then held off Bobby Allison by .21 seconds at the finish.

"I love this racetrack because I love to go fast, and this is the fastest of the fast," said the 30-year-old Parsons, younger brother of former Winston Cup driving champion Benny Parsons.

Much of the 188-lap, 500-mile race was a duel between Parsons, who led 59 laps, and Bodine, the leader for 99 laps.

The two hooked up in the last few green-flag periods to pull away from the rest of the 41-car field, building margins of nearly 11 seconds.

Caution flags kept them from turning it into a complete rout. In fact, it was the last of seven caution flags, this just nine laps from the end, that allowed Allison to get into the thick of the battle and eventually beat Bodine to the wire.

Referring to the last yellow flag, brought out by Ricky Rudd's blown engine, Parsons said, "I really hated it because I felt Geoff and I were the two best cars in the race and it should have been decided between us."

Bodine, who settled for third, said, "I couldn't do anything with Phil. He was awful strong."

Bodine, looking for his first victory since 1986, was just ahead of Parsons as the two flew down the long backstretch on lap 174.

Suddenly Parsons went low on the racetrack, moving up next to Bodine. The cars nearly touched before Parsons nosed ahead going into turn three.

"We were talking about waiting until about 10 laps to go to make our move," Parsons said. "I felt like I could pass him at any time, but I didn't want to wait too long and have something happen, like a caution flag."

"Then, with 15 laps to go, Geoff was shuffling around on the backstretch trying to break the draft. I figured that was the time to go."

Parsons, who averaged 156.547 mph, picked up $86,850 from the total purse of $657,895.

Terry Labonte was fourth, followed by Schrader, Sterling Marlin and Bill Elliott.

Two-time defending driving champion Dale Earnhardt finished ninth and now leads Marlin, 1,382 points to 1,322 in the season standings.

There was a seven-car crash on the 14th lap, but there were no injuries in the melee. There were no other serious incidents in the race.

A record Talladega crowd estimated at 135,000 turned out for the race, which saw the seventh different winner in nine Winston Cup events this season.

A.J. Foyt, the racing superstar from Houston, Texas, got into a bumping incident with Alan Kulwicki late in the race. Before it was over, Foyt was hit with a $5,000 fine and six-month suspension by NASCAR.

Officials of the sanctioning organization said Foyt "returned to the track in an unsafe manner" after being black-flagged along with Kulwicki after the two tangled on the track.

Foyt, 53, now a part-time NASCAR racer, nearly hit Kulwicki's parked car as he left the pits the first time. Black-flagged a second time, Foyt drove down the pit road at high speed, narrowly missing several NASCAR officials.

He was black-flagged yet again, came in fast, locked his brakes and spun to a stop near the exit to the garage area.

The furious Foyt refused comment.

Kentucky Recruits Asked For Freebies

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — University of Kentucky basketball recruit Shawn Kemp was more persistent when he visited Indiana University last fall than another UK recruit, Chris Mills, about asking whether IU players were paid, former IU player Rick Calloway says.

"Kemp didn't really say anything specifically about money or a car," Calloway said Sunday in a telephone interview with The Courier-Journal. "He just wanted stuff. He kept saying: 'You all don't get nothing? I know you're lying.' ... He was looking for a handout."

Calloway was Kemp's student host during the recruit's official visit to Indiana.

Neither Kemp nor his mother, Barbara Brown, could be reached for comment Sunday at their home in Elkhart, Ind. Brown has previously denied that anything improper was offered or requested during her son's recruitment.

During his visit to Indiana last fall, Mills indicated he would need money, a car and an apartment when he attended college, the Lexington Herald-Leader reported Sunday in a copyright story.

The newspaper quoted Indiana player-escort Mark Robinson as saying on Saturday that Mills said: "I have to have money; I have to have a car; I have to live in my own place."

Robinson said when Mills was asked how much he needed, he replied, "Thousands."

The NCAA is investigating allegations that a package sent by Kentucky assistant coach Dwane Casey to Mills' father, Claud, contained $1,000. The Emery Worldwide Air Freight package allegedly popped open while en route to Claud Mills in Los Angeles.

Casey and the Millses have said they had no knowledge of the money. Claud Mills denied on Saturday that his son had asked about improper gifts while visiting Indiana.

"I don't believe that; that's not true," the elder Mills said. "Chris is not that kind of person. And whoever said that, that's a lie because I think they're just angry because Chris didn't go" to Indiana.

"If you write it, I'm going to call (Indiana coach) Bobby Knight because I know damn well that Chris has not asked them people. He didn't do nothing."

Knight, after being told on Friday that the elder Mills had said Indiana was among schools "begging" for Chris Mills to sign, said:

"If he said that, then you can say that Mills asked our players what they were getting when he visited here."

"They couldn't believe Keith (Smart) didn't have one," Calloway said. "They said, 'Man, you hit the shot.'"

Smart hit the game-winning shot in Indiana's victory over Syracuse in the 1987 national championship game.

Robinson said Mills cited improper offers he had heard of while making official visits to other schools. But Robinson said he couldn't name the schools.

Mills visited Indiana, UCLA and Syracuse before visiting Kentucky and Nevada-Las Vegas.

Bucs' Depth Keys Win Over G-W

Baseball has often been described as a game of options. But Gardner-Webb coach Bryan Ferree had too few choices Sunday while his counterpart Gary Overton had the luxury of making a number of changes as East Carolina handed the Bulldogs a 9-4 defeat.

"I was kidding with (ECU coach) Gary (Overton) after the game," Ferree said of his NAIA squad. "When he gets in trouble out there, he can look in that bullpen and he has all those options. We don't have a lot of options."

The Pirates, who swept a double-header from the NAIA Bulldogs Saturday night, had the advantage of using three pitchers in Sunday's game and the three combined to hold the Bulldogs to four runs.

Freshman Mike Whitten opened the game for the Pirates and went five innings before exiting with a 5-2 lead. He was replaced by another freshman, John White, who pitched the sixth, seventh and eighth, before sophomore Brian Berckman came on in the final inning and recorded two strikeouts and a pop fly sandwiched around a walk to end the game.

"We think the depth of our pitching staff was one of our strengths this year," Overton said. "We planned on using more than one. (But) at the same time, the pitchers have to get their job done. Give Gardner-Webb some credit. They can score some runs."

Kin Nance opened for Gardner-Webb and got in trouble in the second inning. He gave up two hits and was also hurt by an error as ECU scored three runs to take the pressure of Whitten.

Jay McGraw opened the inning with a double and went to third on an error that allowed John Adams to reach. John Thomas then ripped a triple to deep right center to drive in two runs. Thomas later came home on a sacrifice fly by Kevin Riggs.

ECU added another run in the third as David Ritchie opened by drawing a walk and went to third off a single by Calvin Brown before scoring on a sacrifice by McGraw.

The Pirates pushed across one more apiece in both the fourth and the sixth. In the fourth, Chris Cauble walked, was replaced by courtesy runner Tommy Boswell who went to second on a fielder's choice and later scored on a wild pitch. In the sixth, Cauble hit a solo homer.

The Bulldogs did get close a couple of times. They trailed only

5-2 after four innings and had a chance to get closer, but Jeff Allred, who had driven in both of Gardner-Webb's runs earlier in the fourth and was 4-4 on the day,

Jordan's 55 Points Key Bulls By Cavs

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

The second game of the Cleveland-Chicago playoff series was supposed to determine the health of Michael Jordan's twisted knee and Ron Harper's sore ankle. Jordan's knee was a big winner.

Jordan, who twisted his right knee in the Bulls' first-game victory over the Cavaliers, followed his 50-point performance in the opener with 55 more Sunday, leading Chicago to a 106-101 win and a 2-0 lead in the best-of-5 series.

"It's still stiff and it felt a little weak in the first half, but I tried not to think about it," said Jordan, the first player to score 50 or more points in consecutive playoff games. "After the first half, I think I succeeded. I don't feel any pain."

Harper, who missed the first game with a sprained ankle, scored 10 points Sunday and was 4-for-15 from the field, including a crucial miss in the final minute after a jumper by Jordan put Chicago ahead 102-101.

"I don't think he played like he wanted to," Jordan said of Harper. "I think his ankle still was bothering him ... I was trying not to make it a 1-on-1 game with Ron Harper and me, and it wasn't."

"I missed too many shots and in the end, when we had a chance, I just didn't get the job done," Harper said. "Michael Jordan had nothing to do with it."

In other games Sunday, Boston beat New York 128-102; Seattle crushed Denver 111-91; Atlanta defeated Milwaukee 104-97; and the Los Angeles Lakers bombed San Antonio 130-112. The Celtics, Hawks and Lakers lead 2-0, while the SuperSonics and Nuggets are tied 1-1.

On Saturday, Houston tied its series with Dallas by beating the Mavericks 119-108. Utah also evened its series against Portland with a 114-105 victory and Detroit took a 2-0 lead over Washington by beating the Bullets 102-101 on Isiah Thomas' off-balance bank shot with nine seconds left.

In tonight's only game, Detroit can win its first-round series with a victory at Washington. On Tuesday, it's Chicago at Cleveland, Los Angeles at San Antonio, Dallas at Houston and Denver at Seattle.

Jordan also tied a playoff record — held by Wilt Chamberlain and John Havlicek — with 24 field goals in a game.

After Jordan's shot from the corner with exactly a minute left gave the Bulls the lead for good, he added two free throws with 14 seconds left to make it 104-101.

"I felt the key to this series would be No. 1, our ability to control their big guys around the basket, and No. 2, our rebounding," Chicago coach Doug Collins said.

For the series, the Bulls have outrebounded Cleveland 107-79.

Charles Oakley finished with 17 points and Horace Grant 13 points and 14 rebounds for the Bulls. Larry Nance led Cleveland with 27 points and Daugherty added 21 points and 13 rebounds.

Viola Shuts Out Bosox At Fenway

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer
Frank Viola's love for Fenway Park obviously does not extend to the Boston Red Sox.

Viola, who professes to have fallen madly in love with the cozy ballpark the first time he stepped into it, became the first visiting left-hander to throw a shutout against the Red Sox in nearly four years on Sunday.

Gary Gaetti hit his fifth homer of the season, and Viola allowed just five hits in the 2-0 victory, handing the Red Sox only their second loss in 10 games.

White Sox 7, Orioles 3
The Orioles, who broke a 21-game winless streak Friday night in Chicago, now have embarked on another losing streak, this one just two games long at present.

Ivan Calderon hit a three-run homer in the first, and Kenny Williams drove in two runs with a single in the third.

Athletics 8, Indians 4
Oakland scored six runs in the ninth inning, two on a bases-loaded single by Stan Javier, and rallied to beat Cleveland. The victory was Oakland's seventh in a row, while Cleveland has lost three straight.

Blue Jays 6, Angels 4
The Blue Jays held a team meeting before the game, and Lloyd Moseby came out afterward with a two-run homer that led Toronto over California. That snapped a six-game Toronto losing streak.

Rangers 5, Yankees 1
Mike Stanley hit his first homer of the season, backing the pitching of Paul Kilgus and Dale Mahorcic as the Rangers averted a three-game sweep by the Yankees.

Tigers 3, Mariners 2
Matt Nokes drove in three runs with two homers and Jeff Robinson allowed six hits and two runs over eight innings for Detroit. Robinson struck out a career-high 11 before he needed relief help from Willie Hernandez, who got his first save since last Sept. 9 at Baltimore.

Brewers 10, Royals 6
Rob Deer hit a grand slam in Milwaukee's five-run sixth inning, and the Brewers survived a three-run Kansas City ninth to beat the Royals.

Tudor's Strong Six Key St. Louis Win

By The Associated Press
The no-hit decision was no problem for John Tudor.

Tudor, who spent the first three weeks of the season on the disabled list, pitched six no-hit innings against Los Angeles Sunday but left in the top of the seventh for pinch-hitter Tom Pagnozzi.

The game was decided early when the Cardinals scored six runs in the first inning off Tim Leary and went on to a 9-0 victory.

"I asked him if he wanted to stay in, but he said his shoulder was stiffening," Manager Whitey Herzog said of his ace left-hander.

Mets 11, Reds 0
Dwight Gooden pitched a four-hitter for his sixth straight victory and New York hit three consecutive home runs in the fifth inning as the Mets completed a three-game sweep of Cincinnati at Riverfront Stadium.

Gooden, the National League's first six-game winner, has pitched four consecutive complete games en route to the first 6-0 start of his five-year career. It was Gooden's 18th career shutout and his 46th complete game in 130 starts.

Braves 9, Phillies 5
Ozzie Virgil hit a three-run homer and Tom Glavine pitched seven strong innings as visiting Atlanta beat Philadelphia and snapped its four-game losing streak.

Giants 7, Cubs 6
Rick Reuschel pitched seven innings allowing six hits and two runs and Kevin Mitchell and Candy Maldonado each drove in two runs as San Francisco beat Chicago at Candlestick Park.

Pirates 4, Padres 2
Al Pedrique drove in two runs as visiting Pittsburgh beat San Diego for its 15th victory in 19 games.

Expos 7, Astros 3
Tom Foley's run-scoring triple in the top of the 14th inning snapped a 3-3 tie and rookie Johnny Paredes added a three-run homer as Montreal beat Houston.

Peculiar Putter Keys Seniors Win

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — That peculiar putter has made Orville Moody whole again.

"I'm like a one-legged man who suddenly has two legs," Moody said of the 50-inch instrument that has given him a second life on the PGA Senior Tour.

Moody wields the putter like a broom, anchoring it with the left hand and pushing with the right.

It was in that fashion that he swept in the putts he and Bruce Crampton had to have Sunday as they successfully defended their title in the Legends of Golf, a better-ball event for players 50 and over.

But it wasn't easy.

Needing a birdie on the 72nd hole to tie Lou Graham and Tommy Aaron, Moody provided it, brushing in the 4-footer that sent them to a playoff.

On the fourth hole of the playoff, he made a birdie to halve the hole, scoring from the back fringe with a 15-foot downhill putt.

"You've got to give Orville credit," Graham said. "I never even considered the possibility he'd make that putt."

And Moody — long noted as one of golf's great ball strikers but a terrible putter — made the winner from about 12 feet on the sixth playoff hole, his third birdie in seven holes.

"It feels mighty good," Moody said. "I was such a bad putter, I was upset, discouraged about even staying in golf" until he went to the oversized stick a little more than a year ago.

"It's like firing a rifle," said the man who spent 14 years in the U.S. Army. "If you jerk that trigger, you're going to scatter shots all over the target."

"I had a jerk in my stroke and I scattered putts all over. This takes the jerk out of it."

Moody and Crampton combined for an 8-under-par 62 over the last 18 holes of regulation play, and tied Aaron and Graham at 254, 26 under par, on Moody's 72nd-hole birdie.

Graham and Aaron also had a 62, with Aaron contributing a 115-yard 9-iron pitch that found the cup for an eagle 2 on the 16th hole.

About an hour later, he was playing that hole again as the second in the playoff when he again hit the stick from 120 yards. This time, however, the ball spun away from the cup and left him with a 5-foot birdie putt to win it.

He missed.

"We had our chance and I missed it," Aaron said. "That let it go on, and when it keeps going on, anything can happen."

Crampton and Moody shared

$120,000, while Aaron and Graham split $65,000.

Bob Charles and Bruce Devlin, along with Peter Thomson and Harold Henning, missed the playoff by a single shot at 255.

Devlin and Charles combined for a final-round 64 and Thomson and Henning shot 66.

Arnold Palmer and partner Miller Barber waited too long to get started to be a factor. Both had putting problems on the front nine and got so far behind that their closing burst of five birdies on the last seven holes did not put them in title contention. Each scored three birdies in a round of 64 that left them at 256.

In the separate but simultaneous Legends of Golf competition, for players 60 and older, Roberto deVicenzo of Argentina and partner Charlie Sifford had a front-running 67 and won by three shots at 262. Each collected $20,000.

Los Angeles, unbeaten in its last 14 first-round games, overcame a sluggish start to beat San Antonio.

Mychal Thompson came off the bench for 29 points and 16 rebounds and Magic Johnson had 26 points and 15 assists for the Lakers, who trailed by 14 points in the first quarter.

Los Angeles took control by outscoring the Spurs 29-9 in the final six minutes of the third quarter and the first minute of the fourth period, turning a 74-71 deficit into a 100-83 advantage.

Thompson had 14 points in the fourth quarter as the Lakers continued to pull away.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar added 20 points for Los Angeles, while Alvin Robertson led the Spurs with 28 points and 12 assists.

Celtics 128, Knicks 102
Boston, which used a 32-9 second-half spurt to win Game 1 by 20, started the second quarter with a 12-1 run to take control against New York.

Larry Bird had 36 points and Kevin McHale added 24 points and 12 rebounds for the Celtics, who have won 18 straight games against the Knicks at Boston Garden.

"I don't know if we're 20 points better than them," McHale said. "But I always feel we will win big at home in every game, so the scores don't surprise me."

The Celtics led 29-25 after the first quarter and extended the margin to 41-26 with 7:55 left in the second period. The Knicks trailed by at least 12 the rest of the way.

New York was led by Gerald Wilkins with 24 points and Patrick Ewing with 18.

Sonics 111, Nuggets 91
Seattle, the seventh Western Conference seed, opened a 25-point halftime lead over second-seeded Denver and coasted to victory.

Dale Ellis scored 22 of his 24 points in the first half as the SuperSonics, who as the seventh seed last season upset Dallas in the first round, broke a seven-game losing streak at Denver.

The Nuggets shot only 32 percent from the field and midway through the second period had as many field goals — eight — as Ellis.

"Our offense was awful," Denver coach Doug Moe said. "Seattle was just terrific. They have played two great games, and we're fortunate to be even with them. Now we have to buckle down and win one up there."

The Sonics extended their 66-41 halftime advantage to 31 points in the third period before Denver rallied in the final quarter, cutting the deficit to 18. Alex English and Mike Evans led the Nuggets with 16 points.

Hawks 104, Bucks 97
Dominique Wilkins scored 43 points, powering Atlanta over Milwaukee for a 2-0 lead.

The Hawks went ahead for good, 78-76, on a basket by Antoine Carr at the buzzer ending the third period. Wilkins, who scored at least 10 points in every period, had 12 points in the final quarter to keep the Hawks in front.

U.S. forces landed in Iceland in 1941 to prevent a Nazi invasion.

Top Aide To Congressman Jumps To Death After Newspaper Expose

NEW YORK (AP) — A congressman's top aide left behind a poem before jumping to his death the day a newspaper said he made unorthodox demands on male staffers' personal time, including that one perform a strip tease, police said.

Tom Pappas, 46, chief assistant to Rep. Roy P. Dyson, D-Md., fell from his room on the 24th floor of the Helmsley Palace Hotel on Sunday afternoon after discussing the effect of The Washington Post story with friends, police said.

One friend said Pappas was worried Sunday morning that the article had irreparably damaged his career but didn't seem depressed.

Dyson, Pappas and another aide were in New York to meet with a lawyer and attend the Broadway musical "Phantom of the Opera," police said.

Pappas left a poem on hotel stationery, said a police spokesman, Lt. Stephen Davis, who would not reveal the contents. He said the death appeared to be suicide.

The Daily News and The (Baltimore) Sun said the note was in the form of a poem.

Dyson, and the aide, Todd Skipper, had checked out by this morning, said a hotel detective who spoke on condition he not be identified.

Pappas landed on an eighth-floor ledge, police said.

TOM PAPPAS

In Sunday's front-page story in the Post, Dyson staffers said Pappas had taken control of the office from the 39-year-old Democrat, and that Pappas pressured male staffers to socialize with Pappas.

One staffer quit and another was fired after they refused to attend a private party Dyson held at a Maryland hotel suite last November, the newspaper reported.

Staffers told the Post that Pappas, who was divorced, told one male staff-fer he would have to perform a strip tease in 1987 at an office retreat in Virginia. The staffer refused, the Post said.

The article came as the Federal Election Commission investigates allegations Dyson's campaign disclosure reports concealed $6,650 in payments to Pappas.

Pappas, who was paid $72,200 as Dyson's administrative assistant last year, also owns a company, Pappenbauer Associates, that received $119,642 in fees and expenses since 1980, a revised Dyson campaign report shows.

Pappas helped engineer Dyson's first election to the Maryland House of Delegates in 1974 and his successful 1980 bid to unseat Rep. Robert A. Bauman, after the conservative Republican was arrested for soliciting sex from a 16-year-old male prostitute.

The charge later was dropped but Bauman acknowledged he was homosexual and an alcoholic.

Political consultant Michael Ford said he talked by phone with Pappas about the Post article for 25 minutes Sunday morning. Pappas told Ford he was worried that the article had irreparably damaged his career and had hurt Dyson's re-election chances, the Post reported today.

"I told him, 'You've done nothing illegal, you've done nothing immoral and therefore I think you can deal with this,'" Ford said, adding he didn't believe Pappas was depressed.

Pappas, however, "felt in his own mind that it was a fait accompli — that nothing could be done about it," Ford said.

Those interviewed by the Post said they did not believe that the pressure to socialize with Pappas and others on the staff went beyond the dinners and events that Pappas organized.

One press secretary, Scott Ourth, told the Post he was hired for the requirement that he not date for a year. When Ourth began dating, "He called me the 'wayward son,'" Ourth recalled. "He told me, 'You've lost the focus.'" Ourth quit six months after taking the job.

Sunday's article quoted a memo from Pappas dated Nov. 14 as saying, "...it is important for everyone on this staff to remember that Tom Pappas is the chief of staff, responsible for everyone's paycheck. When he expresses a wish, however slight, it should be taken seriously."

A classified ad in the Hannibal (Mo.) Courier-Post placed by Pappenbauer Associates offered salaries up to $50,000. "Wanted A Young Man in A Hurry," it said, asking, "Are you single and willing to travel?" The ad asked for a writing sample and recent photograph.

Former aides were quoted as saying Pappas excluded female staffers from his social activities.

Lawyers for the Dyson campaign advised Pappas not to talk to the Post, according to Ford and Joe Trippi, a campaign spokesman.

Neighbors and former staff members told the Post that Dyson, who is single, frequently stayed at Pappas' large frame house in Accokeek, Md.

LaRouche Candidate Gets Win

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Democratic Party officials in suburban Philadelphia's 5th Congressional District are stuck with a candidate they don't want: a backer of political extremist Lyndon LaRouche.

One official said party leaders were focusing on other campaigns when LaRouche backer Donald Hadley defeated Robert W. Houchins, a little-known candidate endorsed by the party, in last week's congressional primary.

Hadley, a sales representative from Drexel Hill, will face Rep. Richard Schulze, a well-financed Republican, in November's election.

Houchins has blamed his loss on the Democratic organization in Montgomery, Chester and Delaware counties, which make up the district, and on voters, whom he accused of ignorance.

"Charles Manson could run for office and get elected," he said.

LaRouche, a perennial presidential candidate, has promoted a quarantine of AIDS victims and the colonization of Mars, and has charged that Queen Elizabeth II of England is a drug dealer.

He is on trial in Boston with six aides and five of his political groups on charges they conspired to obstruct a federal grand jury investigation.

Methodists Debate Homosexuals' Status

ST. LOUIS (AP) — United Methodists are tackling a keenly volatile issue over which they've struggled for 18 years — the status of homosexuals in the nation's second-largest Protestant denomination.

A special session was set today on the question, ranked by delegates as the No. 1 issue before their quadrennial governing conference.

An advance poll indicated three-fourths of the 996 delegates oppose any easing of present restrictions.

But powerful national agencies of the denomination have urged modifications in disciplines condemning homosexual practice and barring active homosexuals from the clergy.

The issue reached a decisive stage on the seventh day of the 11-day conference, which previously has been occupied in committee sessions, with floor action now beginning.

The 9.6-million-member denomination, larger than any Protestant body in the country except for Southern Baptists, first established standards against active homosexuality in 1972, following several years of debate.

Controversy about the issue has gone on ever since, including at the last three general conferences.

"The sides are too polarized to find any common ground," said the Rev. Elliott Wright of New York City.

At issue were three sections in the denomination's Book of Discipline, including:

A section on social principles terms homosexual persons of "sacred worth," entitled to church participation, care and other human and civil rights, but adds:

"We do not condone the practice of homosexuality and consider this practice incompatible with Christian teaching."

Another section on the ordained ministry says clergy must uphold "fidelity in marriage and celibacy in singleness," adding:

"Since the practice of homosexuality is incompatible with Christian teaching, self-avowed practicing homosexuals are not to be accepted" in the ordained ministry.

A section on administrative order bars use of any church funds for homosexual groups or "to promote acceptance of homosexuality."

Acre-Size Sinkhole Gobbles House

SEBRING, Fla. (AP) — When the house started groaning and the studs started popping, Bill Pivnick knew it was time to start running — a sinkhole was about to swallow his home.

"I knew what it was as soon as it occurred and I knew how dangerous it could be," he said Sunday. "I was afraid the walls were going to come tumbling down and ceiling was going to collapse."

Besides scaring Pivnick and his neighbors, the sinkhole that opened up in a quiet middle-class development near here Friday surprised geologists with its size and location.

"I call this a double freak sinkhole because it's so far south and it's so big," William Wilson, a geologist with the Florida Sinkhole Research Institute at the University of Central Florida, said Saturday after examining the depression.

The sinkhole, 20 feet deep and more than 200 feet wide, is one of Florida's largest, Wilson said. "At least one whole acre has been swallowed up in one big gulp," he said.

Neighbors rushed to Sebring Ridge on Friday evening to pack up the possessions of people evacuated from the two houses consumed by the sinkhole. During the weekend, as the water table began to transform the sinkhole into a pond, neighbors started talking of moving, Pivnick said.

"In a couple of weeks everybody's going to forget about the big sinkhole in Sebring except the neighbors. They'll still be living on the edge," said Pivnick, a psychologist for the Avon Park Correctional Institution.

Although police, fearing the house might plunge deeper, forbade Pivnick and a visiting friend from collecting any of their belongings, residents who were allowed to return have been generous and upbeat.

"I've had like eight people offer to give me a place to stay — gratis," Pivnick said. "I've talked to my adjusters and they seem to be very agreeable to helping me, but I had a friend visiting and none of her stuff was covered."

Pivnick, 40, said his insurance will cover almost all the contents of his $70,000 three-bedroom single-story home.

Notice Of Public Hearing

The City Council of the City of Greenville will hold a public hearing on Thursday, May 12, 1988 at 7:30 PM in the third floor Council Chambers of City Hall in order to receive citizens' views on the submission of a Community Development Block Grant application.

The grant application will be submitted in order to obtain funds to rehabilitate a portion of the Higgs neighborhood in West Greenville. The boundary of the proposed areas is Dickinson Avenue, Fourteenth Street, Myrtle Avenue and property on both sides of Columbia Avenue. Forty-four substandard housing units in the area are proposed for rehabilitation through a grant and loan program. Also included in the application to be submitted will be a request to rehabilitate several owner occupied substandard houses in other areas of the West Greenville neighborhood. The total request being submitted for funding through the North Carolina Department of Natural Resources and Community Development is $570,240. An additional $100,000 is being requested from the City.

Any questions may be addressed to the Planning and Development Department of the City of Greenville at 830-4501. The public is invited to attend the public hearing on Thursday, May 12 to provide input prior to the submission of the application.

Koop To Declare Nicotine Addictive

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top federal health official says he hopes the surgeon general's coming declaration that nicotine is addictive will prompt the public to give cigarette smoking the same attention as heroin and cocaine use.

"When we call this drug an addicting drug, we have to take it more seriously than we currently do," Ronald M. Davis, director of the federal Office of Smoking and Health, said Sunday on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation" program. "We have to at least give it the serious attention that we do for the illicit drugs such as heroin, cocaine, etc."

Davis said the report by Surgeon General C. Everett Koop will be issued in the next few weeks and will mark the first time a federal official with such a high rank will have declared nicotine addictive.

Attempts to reach tobacco industry officials Sunday were unsuccessful. A spokeswoman for the Tobacco Institute and a spokesman for the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. did not answer phone calls made to numbers listed for their homes.

Davis did not specify what steps should be taken once Koop issues his report, but he questioned the way cigarettes are distributed.

"Why ... do we sell tobacco products in vending machines?" he asked. "We don't allow other addicting drugs to be sold in vending machines. Why do we allow free samples of the product to be sent through the mail? Or to be passed out on public property where kids and others have free access to them?"

In the past, surgeon generals' reports on smoking have triggered both controversy and some strong actions, and Davis said he expected the same to occur this time.

"What we saw with the last surgeon general's report in 1986, which documented the health effects of passive smoking, that passive smoking can cause lung cancer, we saw that that accelerated the trend toward restricting or banning smoking in public places and in the work place," Davis said. "We would expect that this upcoming report would lead to serious consideration of what should be the appropriate public policies for this drug."

About 27 percent of the adult population smokes cigarettes, compared with 42 percent in 1964.

Condor Doing Well, Eating Lots

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The first California condor born to captive parents is doing about 30 minced mice a day and slowly gaining weight, say keepers who are watching the bald, fluffy chick for infection.

"So far so good," Martha Baker, spokeswoman for the San Diego Wild Animal Park, said Sunday. "We're not through the most critical period, which is 72 hours."

The chick, named Molloko, an Indian word condor, was hatched with human help Friday, boosting the endangered species' numbers to 28.

It ate 28 mice Saturday and 30 more by Sunday afternoon, Ms. Baker said.

"The appetite of the bird is very good," said Ms. Baker, adding that the chick had regained its birth rate of 6 1/2 ounces. As adults, the birds have a wingspan up to 10 feet.

The chick had very bright eyes and its bodily functions seemed to be operating correctly, she said.

The first-sized bird's attachment to its yolk sac, similar to a human infant's umbilical cord, was healing well.

Molloko hatched from an egg laid by the only pair of California condors known to be actively breeding.

Stripper Ordained

DALLAS (AP) — The last time Bobbie Lou Meserole stood under the spotlights before an applauding crowd she was taking off the cloth instead of putting it on.

"At one time, she was known as Shari Angel and she was the most popular exotic dancer in Dallas," the Rev. W.V. Grant Jr. said into the loudspeaker system of the Eagle's Nest Cathedral. "And from now on, she's going to be called the Reverend Bobbie Lou Meserole."

The former stripper for Jack Ruby's Carousel nightclub was ordained during a Sunday night service before the red-carpeted altar of the sprawling church.

"I'm finally delivered from everything. I'm really with the Lord," said Ms. Meserole, 54. "I'm not with other people anymore. I'm just a different person."

As a girl, Ms. Meserole said, she dreamed of becoming a nun named sister Louise. She attended a private Catholic school until her father made her quit when she was 13. She worked at a drug store, and then at a hospital before falling on hard times and moving into show business at 22.

She said she plans to preach, beginning with a downtown rally later this month. But most of her work as an ordained minister of Grant's charismatic International Deliverance Church will involve counseling others.

She now spends six days a week cleaning homes for a living, and said she didn't expect that to change much after the Sunday night service. It's a far cry from the late 1950s and early '60s at the Carousel, when she would dance along a runway, stripping to a G-string and pasties as the top act in town.

Base Crash Kills Six

GUANTANAMO, Cuba (AP) — Manslaughter charges have been filed against the driver of a car that smashed into a U.S. Navy van at the Navy base here, killing five sailors and their driver and injuring four people, officials say.

The car was speeding on the base's main road when the fiery wreck occurred Saturday evening, base spokesman Lt. Bob Hines said Sunday. All those killed were inside the van, which was more heavily damaged by fire than by the car, Hines said.

The names of those killed or injured were withheld pending notification of relatives, said Lt. Cmdr. Aaron Long, spokesman at Atlantic Fleet headquarters in Norfolk, Va.

Long said three injured sailors were evacuated in serious condition Sunday afternoon to the Brooke Army Burn Center in San Antonio, Texas.

The private car's driver, who is not a U.S. citizen, was charged with six counts of manslaughter and was under guard at the base hospital in Guantanamo, where he was listed in stable condition, Long said.

Long said the dead included five Navy personnel and the driver of the van, a civilian employee at the base.

A base security vehicle observed the car speeding about 1 1/2 miles before it crashed into the taxi van, which was operated by the base's retail exchange, Long said.

WHY SOME PITT COUNTY ATTORNEYS ENDORSE

ANNIE G. HOLDER

FOR THE OFFICE OF PITT COUNTY REGISTER OF DEEDS

Few persons outside the legal profession have the opportunity to know the importance of the Office of the Register of Deeds or the chaos which would result from inexperienced administration. In this Office are recorded all transactions affecting the title to land in Pitt County, birth, death, marriage records and other credit transactions involving millions of dollars each year. A simple error in recording or indexing could cost a single Pitt County citizen many thousands of dollars or cause a great deal of time and inconvenience.

The best guarantee against errors is knowledge and experience. That is why we are supporting Annie G. Holder for the Office. She has been employed with the Office of the Register of Deeds for 17 years and has served as Assistant Register of Deeds for the last 5 years. During that time she has rendered the people of Pitt County outstanding service and has acquired the knowledge and experience for which there is no substitute.

We, as attorneys, are only interested in seeing that Pitt County maintains the excellent registry which it has had for many years. We think Annie G. Holder is the most qualified for this important job. We sincerely hope that the people of Pitt County will vote for her in the primary on May 3, 1988.

RE-ADVERTISEMENT FOR PROPOSALS

Pursuant to General Statutes of North Carolina, Section 143-129, sealed proposals are invited and will be received by the Greenville Housing Authority until 11:00 a.m. on Thursday the 12th day of May, 1988, at which time at the Central Office, Greenville Housing Authority, 1103 Broad Street, Greenville, North Carolina, the sealed proposals will be publicly opened for the provision of the following:

(1) 60" cutting width diesel/gas powered mower with carrying trailer.

(2) 72" cutting width diesel/gas powered mower with carrying trailer.

From the date of this re-advertisement until the date of opening the proposals, specifications of the materials or equipment are and will continue to be on file in the office of the Greenville Housing Authority, 1103 Broad Street, Greenville, North Carolina, during regular business hours, and available to prospective bidders. Venders may demonstrate their offered items between May 4, 1988 and May 11, 1988 at 1103 Broad Street, Greenville, North Carolina. The mower(s) will be judged in the following functional areas: a) speed, slow and fast; b) evenness of cut at speeds; c) maneuverability; d) ease of operation; e) difficulty of belt or chain changes; and f) ease of servicing by operator. The carrying trailer is to be industry standard for the size and model proposed.

The Greenville Housing Authority reserves the right to accept or reject any and all proposals, waive formalities, and make the purchase which is in the best interest of the Authority.

The bidder to whom the contract may be awarded must comply fully with the requirements of the General Statutes Section 143-129, as amended. For further information and to set up time and date for demonstration, contact James E. Barnhill at 830-4000.

RE-ADVERTISEMENT FOR PROPOSALS

Pursuant to General Statutes of North Carolina, Section 143-129, sealed proposals are invited and will be received by the Greenville Housing Authority until 11:00 a.m. on Thursday the 12th day of May, 1988, at which time at the Central Office, Greenville Housing Authority, 1103 Broad Street, Greenville, North Carolina, the sealed proposals will be publicly opened for the provision of the following:

(1) 60" cutting width diesel/gas powered mower with carrying trailer.

(2) 72" cutting width diesel/gas powered mower with carrying trailer.

From the date of this re-advertisement until the date of opening the proposals, specifications of the materials or equipment are and will continue to be on file in the office of the Greenville Housing Authority, 1103 Broad Street, Greenville, North Carolina, during regular business hours, and available to prospective bidders. Venders may demonstrate their offered items between May 4, 1988 and May 11, 1988 at 1103 Broad Street, Greenville, North Carolina. The mower(s) will be judged in the following functional areas: a) speed, slow and fast; b) evenness of cut at speeds; c) maneuverability; d) ease of operation; e) difficulty of belt or chain changes; and f) ease of servicing by operator. The carrying trailer is to be industry standard for the size and model proposed.

The Greenville Housing Authority reserves the right to accept or reject any and all proposals, waive formalities, and make the purchase which is in the best interest of the Authority.

The bidder to whom the contract may be awarded must comply fully with the requirements of the General Statutes Section 143-129, as amended. For further information and to set up time and date for demonstration, contact James E. Barnhill at 830-4000.

Charles McLawhorn Speaks Out

NEWS CONFERENCE TO BE RELEASED 6:30 p.m., April 25, 1988

The fact that so many of you are here tonight indicates to me what this campaign is all about. This is a campaign of money against people.

My opponent has filled your television set with his slick campaign commercials. And now he is filling your mailbox with expensive color brochures that proclaim his effectiveness.

Let me ask you this: If he is so effective, why does he spend so much money to tell you he is. It seems to me that if he were effective, you would already know about it.

When my opponent called a news conference to brag about the fact that -after two terms- he's still 22nd in effectiveness, I could not believe it. There are 50 Senators in Raleigh. Our district is a major district. It has the third largest university in North Carolina. It has a regional airport. It has three of the finest community colleges in the state. And it has some of the hardest working people I've ever seen. But our senator is 22nd out of 50. If I could not rate any higher than that, I would not be proud of it. I'd be ashamed of it.

The point is this: I have lived and worked around you all of my life. I've been involved in farming and I stuck it out through the hard times, operating my farm like the business it is. I know what it's like to meet a payroll. I know what it's like to have a beautiful crop ruined by too much rain - or too little rain. And I believe, through the lessons I have learned, that I can represent your interests. And that is what I intend to do.

Do you know that this job I am campaigning for pays $10,000 per year? Do you know that my opponent has already contributed to his own campaign more than three times that amount? According to his own figures which were filed today with the North Carolina Board of Elections, my opponent has already spent $41,525.00, and he has already loaned the campaign $33,500.00.

My report, which we filed last week, indicates that we had spent less than half the amount my opponent has spent and that my contribution to my own campaign was less than 1/4 of my opponent's contributions to his campaign.

According to my opponent's own report, his campaign has received the sum of $54,220.00 in campaign funds, of this amount $33,500.00 represents loans from the candidate, $4,000.00 from his father and $7,085 from outside the district. That is a total of $44,585.00 from the Taft family and contributors outside the District. More than 82% of his money has come from these sources. Less than 18% has come from individual contributors living in the District. My question is this: Whose interests does he represent? Our interests or their interests?

Your presence here tonight will help us in two ways - it will help financially and to keep our commitment to run a first class campaign also to spread the word that Senate District No. Nine is not for sale.

CBS Anderson Movie May Be Best As Television Satire

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — With just a touch-up here and there, "Necessity" could be a fine satire on the made-for-TV movie genre.

"Necessity" stars Loni Anderson as a model named Lauren LaSalle who is living an idyllic life with husband and darling baby girl when, suddenly, after several years of marriage, she realizes that her husband is a cocaine dealer.

Apparently she has never asked why he has a helicopter and several hit men hanging around their fabulous upstate New York house.

While this woman is clearly no mental giant, she does figure out how to swipe $2 million of hubby's drug money, establish a new identity in California and launder the funds through stock market transactions.

But "Necessity" does intend to be taken seriously. Just to double check, CBS calls it a "drama of shattered illusions." Luckily for those involved, the movie airs Tuesday night, CBS' black hole of ratings, so no one, neither friends nor colleagues nor relatives, nor anyone else for that matter, need ever know.

Back to Lauren, who, once ensconced in Los Angeles, takes flying lessons. Is she going to forget the kid and start a new life as a commercial airline pilot? No way! She's going to go back to New York and swoop down and pluck her child from the evil influences of her husband, who is busy obsessing in artful double exposures about the wrong she has done him.

Which brings us to the subject of bizarre casting.

James Naughton, who plays the "dese-and-dose" drug dealing husband, most recently starred in Paul Newman's film of "The Glass Menagerie." No flies on him.

John Heard, who plays Charlie, the lovable flying instructor, can currently be seen in Robert Redford's film "The Milagro Beanfield War."

Both are fine stage actors. Are their agents telling them they better grab this turkey while they can, since they might never work again? A really dumb made-for-TV movie starring Loni Anderson? Sure, sign us up!

Well, maybe at least they thought it was a satire.

Anyway, Charlie must tell Lauren, who is quite good at high-speed car chases, that she's nevertheless just too darn dumb to operate an airplane.

Since Charlie has a kid of his own, and can use $50,000, he agrees to pilot the baby-napping plane himself.

The getaway goes awry, of course, so Lauren slaps baby in a car seat and takes off on a high-speed truck-helicopter chase through the hills and vales. Lauren apparently believes it is better to risk baby's neck stunt-driving over brushy cliffs and mowing down fences than leave her to grow up on daddy's drug money.

All this set-up is just so wonderfully kitsch, it's hard to believe the ending is even better. In fact, it's so good, it's worth taping, just for the slow-mo dialogue and 12 gunshots pumped into a victim who stands up and grabs his shoulder.

This is serious, isn't it?

Different Role

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fawn Hall, former secretary to Lt. Col. Oliver North and who was a smash hit at last year's Iran-Contra hearings, becomes a TV star of a different kind when she makes her debut as co-host of "M&W," an ABC special examining "our contemporary world." The special is set to air in June.

Music Hall Features Exhibition On Life Of Singer Johnny Cash

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Johnny Cash, the ebony-clad singer whose mournful and mirthful songs have been entertaining country music fans for 32 years, is being celebrated in a special exhibit at the Country Music Hall of Fame.

The $70,000 exhibit includes photographs, costumes, posters, films of his early TV appearances, one of his first guitars and such personal mementos as a Frederick Remington bronze.

A million people are expected to see the exhibit during the next two years on Nashville's Music Row — a section of the city that pioneers such as Cash helped to make.

"There's a lot of memories here," said the 56-year-old Cash, known as "the man in black" because of the color he wears to remind people of the downtrodden.

"It's a terrific display," he said. "I'm very proud of it."

Cash rose from the black dirt of an Arkansas farm to peaks that few in country music can match.

He has recorded nearly 1,500 songs, many of them focusing on the toil of achieving the American dream. His themes have made him a forerunner of such performers as Bruce Springsteen, John Cougar Mellencamp and Bob Seger.

His albums "Folsom Prison," "San Quentin" and "Greatest Hits" have sold more than 2 million copies each. He has won seven Grammy awards, including two he shared with wife June Carter, who's at his side as often as his guitar.

He has received 23 songwriting awards as the composer of hits such as "Folsom Prison Blues," "I Walk the Line," "Big River," "I Got Stripes," "A Boy Named Sue" and others. His compositions also include "Tennessee Flat Top Box," which was recently a No. 1 country hit by daughter Rosanne.

However, he may be in the twilight of his recording career. His recent records have not been hits on the country charts.

"I don't know if this will be my last album or not," he said about his forthcoming LP, which includes duets with several major stars. "But it's time I got all my old friends into the studio to sing with me. Just in case."

Over the years, Cash has entertained U.S. presidents, had a network TV show, starred in more than a dozen movies and sold more than 50 million records.

He also has developed a reputation for having some of the best informal music gatherings ever held. Those who have grabbed guitars and performed at his palatial lakeside home include Bob Dylan, Paul McCartney, Kris Kristofferson, Roger Miller, Larry Gatlin, Waylon Jennings, Graham Nash and Joan Baez. He's also fished with Mick Jagger.

Cash and Jennings are longtime close friends.

"He's been like a brother to me," Jennings said. "He's one of the greatest people in the world."

Among Cash's humanitarian ventures over the years have been dozens of benefit concerts at prisons. These concerts, and the songs he sings about prison, have fueled a popular misconception that he is an ex-convict. He did have an addiction problem in the 1960s which he overcame late in that decade.

His writing has not been restricted to songs. His 1975 autobiography, "Man in Black," sold 1.3 million copies. His more recent "Man in White" is about the conversion of the Apostle Paul.

He said in 1980 when elected to the Country Music Hall of Fame, "Many can sing country music, but not many ARE country music. It's the stylists that have made country music what it is today (and) given country music a shot in the arm. So do it your way. Don't let yourself get caught in a bag."

The Country Music Hall of Fame exhibit, following similar ones about Dolly Parton and Willie Nelson, drew from items Cash and his wife had collected.

Dean, Jerry Together Again

NEW YORK (AP) — After a 30-year rift, entertainers Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis will appear on the same stage later this month for a benefit performance, a newspaper reported.

Martin, who recently recovered from a kidney operation, and Lewis will perform at the sold-out May 14 Friars Club event for Barbara Sinatra's charities. The Daily News reported Sunday.

Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca will be the master of ceremonies of the benefit at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. Speakers will include Frank Sinatra and Sammy Davis Jr., two other members of the "Rat Pack."

Nancy, Celebrities Fete Hope At 85

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — First lady Nancy Reagan sang "Thanks for the Memories" to Bob Hope during taping of an NBC-TV special honoring the comedian's 85th birthday and his 50th year with the network.

Mrs. Reagan was among more than three dozen celebrities to salute Hope during the three-hour taping Sunday. The show is scheduled to air May 16.

"Eighty-five is getting up in the middle of the night as often as Burt Reynolds, but not for the same reason," quipped Hope, whose actual birthday is May 29.

Elizabeth Taylor, James Stewart, Lucille Ball, Danny Thomas and Dinah Shore, who appeared on Hope's first NBC television broadcast in 1950, toasted and roasted the English-born comedian in song and comedy.

About 40 other stars sent their greetings via videotape, including President Reagan, who introduced his wife to the audience at NBC Studios. She sang Hope's theme song, "Thanks for the Memories," to him before wishing the entertainer a happy birthday.

The taping was preceded by a black-tie cocktail party, said Hope's publicist, Ken Kanter.

Conductor Resigning

DETROIT (AP) — Gunther Herbig said he planned to resign as conductor of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra because of numerous violations of his contract, a newspaper reported today.

Herbig, the orchestra's conductor since 1984, told musicians about his plans during intermission of Saturday night's concert. On Sunday, he declined to discuss his resignation, effective when his contract expires in 1990, The Detroit News said.

Several musicians told newspaper that Herbig cited several complaints, many of them related to the orchestra's financial troubles.

CBN Dropping Swaggart Shows

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Rev. Jimmy Swaggart's refusal to stop appearing on two television shows produced by his ministry led the Christian Broadcasting Network to drop the programs, a CBN spokesman said.

"We had given Swaggart by mail a period of time to decide whether to comply with our request that he not appear in the shows," Earl Weirich, spokesman for the Virginia Beach, Va.-based cable TV network, said Sunday.

The decision deprives Swaggart of the largest network carrying his shows. CBN carries religious shows, children's shows, documentaries, reruns of old TV series and family entertainment to nearly 37 million homes, the spokesman said.

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY May 3

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Forget old, outdated techniques which will only hold you back in life, and try to use modern methods. Enjoy your home this evening.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Sit down with your mate and discuss how to improve your credit situation. Show more affection for this person, and be happy together.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): A light and enjoyable amusement could take the tension out of that business situation. Make the evening a very romantic one.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You can find a way to improve your efficiency today. This improvement will make your work seem much more enjoyable.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): You may have to do quite a bit of running around if you want to get your activities properly organized for the remainder of the week.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Financial and property matters are very important right now, so study them well, see where you stand, and set up a new budget if necessary.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Plan a surprise which will delight your mate quite a bit, and improve your relationship considerably. Be direct in stating your opinions.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Try to make your property more valuable and modern-looking, but be sure to stay within your budget. Have some friends in tonight.

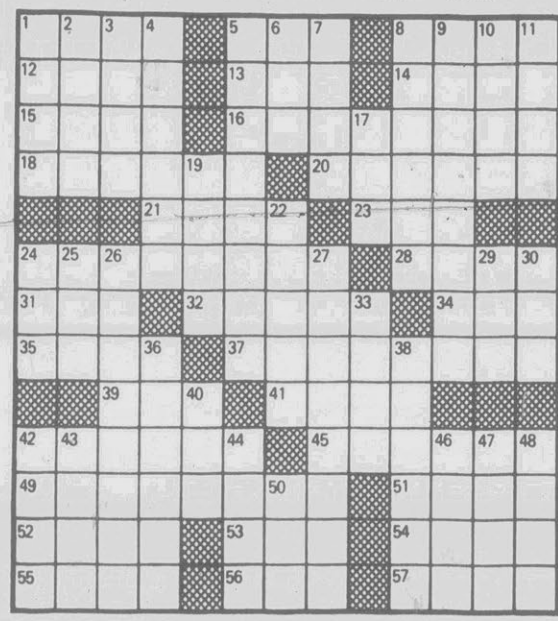

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Get rid of that feeling of inferiority, and realize that you have many valuable talents. This is a good time to do some shopping.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Your mate can proffer some ideas on how to handle a troubling financial matter, so listen to this person and show gratitude for the help.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Several good friends may have the feeling you've been ignoring them, so get together with these people. Listen more and talk less.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Get some expert advice on how to improve your position in credit and civic matters. Be very cautious in motion of any kind today.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠Q76 ♥93 ♦KQ10 ♣A10873
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1♥ 2♦ ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—One possibility is to bid two no trump, in the hope that partner has enough for game. However, since there is no guarantee of game, we suggest you double. You should take at least three, perhaps four, tricks on defense. So if partner has a sound opening bid you could collect a bundle.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠AK10762 ♥AJ93 ♦72 ♣6
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1♣ Pass 1NT Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—Don't feel it incumbent upon you to rebid your spades just to tell partner you have six of them. Bear in mind that partner's one no trump response could easily be concealing a four-card or longer heart suit. Bid two hearts.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠83 ♥QJ762 ♦Q106 ♣J73
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1♣ Pass 1♥ Pass
 2♠ Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—Partner's jump shift is unconditionally forcing, so don't even think of passing. With your weak hand and no particular fit, we wouldn't even take a preference to three clubs. Instead, the more discouraging bid of two no trump, which shows a diamond stopper, should dampen partner's ardor.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠AK2 ♥98 ♦J76 ♣QJ632

The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1♣ Pass 2♣ Pass
 2♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
 A.—You have already shown a decent hand with your two-over-one response, so now there is no need to do anything more than take a preference to two spades. The fact that you have the two top honors in partner's suit was already taken into account when you responded at the two-level.

Q.5—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠9 ♥AQ106 ♦AQJ6 ♣J985
 Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with three hearts. What action do you take?
 A.—You would love to punish RHO for his rash action, but there is nothing you can do—a double would be for takeout. Pass, and hope that partner can reopen the bidding with a double, which you would convert to penalties by passing, or by bidding three spades, in which case you could venture three no trump.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠9853 ♥762 ♦AK852 ♣3
 The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 1♣ 2♥ 2♠ ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—We like your hand. Partner surely has at most a singleton spade, so there is the probability of a double fit. We opt for four hearts, although we personally fancy the idea of a lead-directing three-diamond bid on the way to four hearts.

Polish Workers Strike Shipyards In Gdansk

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Workers went on strike today at the Lenin shipyard in Gdansk, birthplace of the Solidarity independent trade movement, government and opposition spokesmen said.

Government spokesman Zbigniew Augustynowicz said he did not know how many shipyard workers were taking part in the strike. It followed an appeal by Solidarity leader Lech Walesa on Sunday for a "day of action" to support striking steelworkers in southern Poland.

A banner at the shipyard gate said "Sit-In Strike," said Andrzej Gwiadza, a local Solidarity leader in Gdansk, speaking by telephone. He said the strike began between 1:30 p.m. and 2:30 p.m.

Also today about 700 workers rallied and interrupted work at the Dolmel electronic machinery plant in Wroclaw, in southwestern Poland, said Jozef Pinior, a Solidarity leader in that city. He said workers had not declared a strike, but were seeking pay raises of $50 a month.

A secretary at the plant managing director's office refused comment on whether there had been a work stoppage, but said, "at the moment, work goes on normally."

The woman, who spoke on condition of anonymity, confirmed talks had taken place between the management and members of the workforce but gave no details.

Sunday, thousands of people heeded Solidarity's call for a national day of protest and scores of demonstrators were arrested in clashes with police in at least 19 cities.

Government spokesman Jerzy Urban said 90 people were detained during the May Day protests. Solidarity spokesman Zbigniew Romaszewski said authorities detained at least 200 people.

There were scattered reports of injuries but figures were not available.

Meanwhile, steelworkers striking for a seventh day near Krakow in southern Poland awaited an answer to a request for negotiations with the deputy prime minister in charge of the economy.

A secretary to Deputy Prime Minister Zdzislaw Sadowski said Poland's economic and planning chief had not received a letter sent Sunday by striking steelworkers. The letter invited Sadowski to negotiate with them at the Lenin steelworks in Nowa Huta.

A strike committee at the plant says it represents 16,000 of the plant's 32,000 employees and is demanding recognition of their union rights and a 50 percent raise on the average salary of $105 a month.

Management said that fewer than 1,000 strikers were at the Nowa Huta plant Sunday. In Polish strikes, workers come to the plant during their scheduled shifts but do no work.

Urban said at least 12,000 people took part in illegal demonstrations Sunday. Reports from witnesses and opposition spokesmen put the number at more than 30,000.

The demonstrations followed a week of strikes and the worst labor unrest in Poland since the communist government suspended Solidarity in December 1981. It later outlawed the trade federation.

Israelis Shut Down Palestinian Weekly

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel closed a Palestinian weekly today, charging it was funded by terrorist groups, and a Palestinian teen-ager was electrocuted while climbing on a utility pole with an outlawed Palestinian flag.

The Interior Ministry shut down the Jerusalem-based Al Awdah, a weekly published in English and Arabic, determining it was "a tool for terror organizations," according to ministry spokeswoman Tova Elinson.

The closure order was delivered today to magazine editor Ibrahim Kareem, who also heads the Palestine Press Service.

The press service was a key source of information on the occupied territories before it was banned for six months beginning March 30. It has maintained contacts with foreign journalists.

Israeli officials have padlocked several Arab news organizations since unrest erupted in the occupied territories five months ago. They contend the organizations have helped fuel Arab riots.

Kareem denied Al Awdah received funding from terror groups. He said money to run the magazine came from subscribers.

"This was a political decision," Kareem said. "Maltreatment of journalists has become government policy."

Netherlands Says IRA Likely Gone

ROERMOND, Netherlands (AP) — Irish Republican Army guerrillas who killed three British soldiers and injured three in a car bombing and an ambush may have escaped from the Netherlands, police said today.

"It is easy to escape," police spokesman Louis Steens told reporters in Roermond, six miles from the West German border. He said it takes "a short time to get away" through relatively open borders with Germany and Belgium.

One British airman was killed and two injured in this southeastern city when their car was sprayed with automatic weapons fire early Sunday morning. An hour later, a car bomb in Nieuwbergen, 30 miles north of Roermond, exploded, killing two British airmen and severely injured a third.

Police said the two attacks on the six servicemen, who were visiting from their bases in West Germany, were closely coordinated.

There are no border controls for passenger cars crossing the Dutch-Belgian border 30 miles from Roermond. The West German border is more tightly controlled but also has some unmanned crossings at night.

The IRA attacks were the group's first in the Netherlands since the 1979 slaying of Britain's ambassador.

Japan's Trade Surplus Dropping

TOKYO (AP) — Japan registered a $94.28 billion surplus in its 1987 fiscal year, down more than $7 billion from the previous year because of surging imports, the Finance Ministry announced today.

The trade surplus for the fiscal year, which ended March 31, was 7.2 percent below the record $101.65 billion surplus set the previous year, and the first decline since Japan's foreign trade began registering a surplus in 1981, a ministry official said.

The country's current account surplus also plunged almost $10 billion during the fiscal year for its first decline in six years, the ministry said.

The current account includes capital transfers and trade in goods and services to measure a nation's commerce. The ministry said the current account surplus registered $84.54 billion in fiscal 1987, down from $94.14 billion the previous year.

A breakdown of trade figures by country was not immediately available.

"Although the higher value of the Japanese yen had an effect, the main cause of the fall in the trade surplus is the government's program to boost imports," a ministry official said, speaking on condition of anonymity.
