Study Recommends New International Money Plan

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Global economic upheavals such as the October stock market collapse show that the world urgently needs a new monetary system, according to a study released today.

The study, sponsored by the Institute for International Economics, concludes that the international agreements by which the Reagan administration has tried to manage the dollar over the past three years have proven "agonizingly fragile."

The agreements did not go far enough because of political obstacles in the United States, Japan and West Germany, the study says.

IS IT ART? — These two graduating art majors were among the approximately 1,500 graduating East Carolina University seniors who turned the tassel Saturday. Students have seized on the opportunity to decorate

Poles Reject Compromise

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Striking shipyard workers today rejected a compromise that would have forced them to end their weeklong strike and drop their demand for legalization of Solidarity in exchange for a pay raise.

Piotr Konopka, an aide to Solidarity founder Lech Walesa, said the 400 to 500 workers at the shipyard repeatedly screamed "no" when told of the offer.

The tentative deal had taken shape in talks revived at the initiative of a Politburo member on Sunday, strike leaders said. Interior Minister Czeslaw Kiszczak, a ranking communist party Politburo member, twice telephoned a lawyer acting as a mediator to revive the talks after they broke down late Sunday after-

Elections Board Backs Change Of Voting Machines

By GREG LAUDICK

"They can put a man on the moon but they can't figure out the results of a county election three hours after the polls close," said the angered woman who called The Daily Reflector for election results on May 3.

Elections Supervisor Margaret Hardee. "The County Board of Elections would like to sell the old system and apply the proceeds to the purchase of cost-effective and time-saving voting equipment," she said.

and May 3. She said it's also being used in Bladen and Moore counties in North Carolina.

In addition to the substantial increase in speed by which ballots can be tabulated with the Shouptronc equipment, Mrs. Hardee said poll workers appreciated the elimination of counting and carrying thousands of ballots to and from the precincts.

part of the board's 1988-89 budget request to be submitted to the Pitt County Commissioners. It will be up to the commissioners to make the final decision on whether to buy the new system.

Cost of the machines is approximately $4,500 apiece. Mrs. Hardee said the board would like to have one machine for every 400 registered voters to take care of projected growth from concentrated registration drives by both parties before November. However Mrs. Hardee said the elections board would "settle

Airport Awaiting OK

Jim Turcotte, director of the Pitt-Greenville Airport, says he is hoping to receive a tentative allocation for the airport expansion project from the Federal Aviation Administration sometime this week.

FAA officials in Atlanta and Washington, D.C., must approve the expenditure.

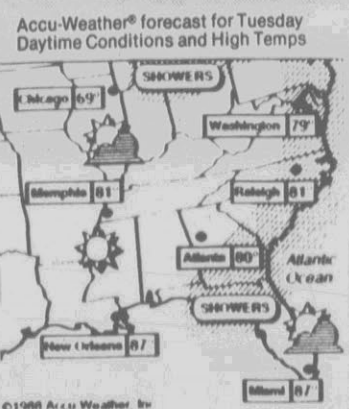

the architects are waiting along with everyone else to make sure the project is approved, Turcotte said.

While some envelopes are opened and money apparently taken out, Whittington said, "Some is opened and the money not removed."

Whittington said, "They saw them before they left the post office. We furnished them everything that they've asked for so far. Why wouldn't we? We're the ones suffering. It's to our advantage to cooperate."

According to Whittington, "The postal system in this region which, I'm told, has 240-some post offices, only has two inspectors. It's not that we're trying to do the post office's job. But we felt like we had to do something because the ministry suffers so much in every area. We can't sit around and see what happens."

EARLY WISDOM EXTRACTION

Most of your teeth have been designed by nature to last as long as you do. Wisdom teeth are the exception, however, when they become impacted or cause other dental problems. If your dentist recommends one of your wisdom teeth be extracted, don't put it off.

Extraction is much easier and less discomforting when the roots are not fully formed. You may also be avoiding a lot of other dental problems, such as destruction of adjoining teeth, their roots, and even the jawbone. Also, a partially erupted wisdom tooth can be highly vulnerable to decay as well as gum disease. Neglect may also lead to the formation of cysts or fluid filled sacs or tumors if the tooth remains untreated.

Waiting for a wisdom tooth to start hurting before you consider extraction may be asking for trouble and may also be more costly. Talk this problem over with your dentist.

If you are in need of a dentist, we welcome you to our office. Call today for an appointment.

Note:
We welcome new patients, both children and adults.

Prepared as a public service to promote better dental health. From the office of Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S., P.A., Evans St., Family and General Dentistry.

ECU Administrator Retiring June 30

ECU News Bureau

Herman D. Phelps, director of East Carolina University's Division of Continuing Education, plans to retire June 30 and close a career of 42 years of teaching and adult extension education.

Phelps has directed one of the state's largest higher education extension programs, including instructional, vocational and degree programs at on-campus and off-campus centers, since 1982.

"I have especially enjoyed the administrative role," Phelps said. "We have been instrumental in providing educational opportunities for as many people as possible in eastern North Carolina."

He said also that matching learning needs with faculty and working with students at military bases has been a rewarding part of the continuing education program. Phelps retired from the Air Force Reserve as a colonel in 1977.

He has been associated with East Carolina for 32 years. "I won't really be leaving," he said. "I plan to continue to be involved with the university and the university community in retirement."

A native of Greenville and an East Carolina graduate, Phelps served as associate dean of the Division of Continuing Education for nearly 20 years

City Wants Right To Own Cable TV

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — Attorneys for the City of Morganton are gearing up to argue for the city's right to own a cable system before the N.C. Supreme Court.

The city won the first round of the $35 million lawsuit on July 6 when Burke County Superior Court Judge Robert Gaines upheld the city's contention that it has the constitutional right to operate a cable system and it has not violated anti-trust laws by impeding competition.

The city was able to bypass the next level of litigation, which would have been the N.C. Court of Appeals, through a series of motions and the case went directly to the N.C. Supreme Court.

The Morganton City Council decided on Sept. 9, 1985, not to renew Madison's 20-year franchise to provide cable service to Morganton. Instead, the city took steps to assume control of the local cable television system.

Madison Cablevision filed a claim on Sept. 12 stating the city's proposed takeover would violate the "exclusive emoluments and privileges" provision in the state constitution and unfair trade practice sections of the N.C. General Statutes.

The "exclusive emoluments and privileges" provision prohibits a legislative body, such as city council, from allowing itself certain special privileges and excluding everyone else.

A lawsuit was filed Jan. 6, 1986, by the cable company against city councilmembers Robert Choate and Alfred Hamer. The initial lawsuit also included former councilmembers Danny Lingerfelt and Molly Darwin, along with Mayor Mel Cohen and former City Manager Doug Beam.

An $800,000 countersuit was filed against Madison Cablevision by the city on Feb. 14, 1986 in federal district court.

Madison Cablevision has agreed to provide cable service to the Morganton area until the matter has been decided.

If successful, Morganton would be the first city in North Carolina to own and operate a cable system.

Farm Scene

By PHILLIP ROWAN

Swine producers are now strongly feeling the effects of USDA's program to rid swine of sulfa residues.

USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service has now begun to trace swine carcasses with sulfa residues back to the producer. Producers found guilty of selling hogs for slaughter with violative sulfa residues cannot sell more hogs until they "clean-up" their animals. This procedure can be timely and expensive so all swine producers should be keenly aware of steps to avoid sulfa residues in their hogs.

Management of sulfa use is critical in preventing a residue problem. When sulfa drugs are used in swine feeds, they should always be used according to label regulations, and feed withdrawal times should be followed closely. Proper management of feed mixing and handling systems to prevent accidental sulfa contamination is a necessity. Carryover of drugs in feeders, auger systems and manure systems are possible. Producers concerned about carryover may choose to not use sulfa at all.

Swine producers should also understand that not only market (top) hogs are tested for sulfa residues. Sows, boars and barbecue hogs that are going to slaughter are also tested, so feed withdrawal times must be followed on all animals going to slaughter.

The sulfa problem came about as a result of studies showing that certain levels of sulfamethazine fed to rats were carcinogenic. Now, standards have been set for violative residues in swine carcasses. FSIS has stepped up testing procedures in slaughter plants, and now randomly tests swine carcasses. If a carcass is found to have sulfa residues above the violative level, FSIS will trace the ownership of the hog back to the owner. The owner then must test a group of five hogs "clean" before he can sell more hogs.

Cattle producers are reminded to vote on the Beef Checkoff program May 10. The Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office in the Pitt County Office Building will be the only poll in the county. Producers should voice their opinion on the $1 per head checkoff.

Funds from this program go to research, promotion, advertising and consumer education of beef and beef products. A beef board, composed of beef cattle producers, determines how the funds are spent. Anyone who owned cattle between Oct. 1, 1986, and March 31, 1988, is eligible to vote.

Cattle producers can vote from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday. Contact Phillip Rowan at the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office, 830-6373, for more details.

WCU Coordinating Seed-Storing Project

CULLOWHEE, N.C. (AP) — A program at Western Carolina University is helping West African farmers learn to store seeds — a skill agricultural experts say could help increase the food supply in developing countries there.

With a $250,000 grant from the Winrock International Institute for Agricultural Development of Arkansas, Western is coordinating the work of agricultural scientists from Mississippi State University and several relief groups.

African farmers usually plant crops using their own seed, said Nancy Blanks of WCU. However, because of storage problems, they lose more than half to rodents and mold, she said.

By teaching them better seed production and storage techniques, project workers hope to help farmers in Senegal and Gambia upgrade their nutrition and raise their incomes, she said.

Overseeing the WCU project and other world relief projects is Winrock, which has received a five-year, $1.85 million matching grant from the U.S. Agency for International Development.

The project will take the seed technology techniques directly to community groups and farmers in the African countries, using workers from the Catholic Relief Services, Lutheran World Relief, Save the Children Federation and the Peace Corps.

The project participants belong to the Joint Private Voluntary Organization — University Rural Development Center, a world-relief group with headquarters at WCU. It comprises 30 universities and voluntary organizations.

Drowning

RALEIGH (AP) — A body of a man who apparently drowned was found at the Sandling Beach swimming area at Falls Lake Sunday, officials say.

The man, 23-year-old Willie Jackson Hopkins Jr. of Durham, was thought to have been under water up to 45 minutes, according to Capt. D.B. Perry of the Wake County Sheriff's Department.

The victim, who had gone to the state recreation area with two friends, was found about 100 feet from shore in about five feet of water, said Jane E. Rolston, an assistant park ranger who was off-duty at the time of the incident but helped in the search efforts.

As a mental health consumer who spent six years in the mental health system, Mark was a victim of shock treatments, homelessness, misdiagnosis, experimental drug treatment, amnesia and six psychiatric hospitalizations prior to being correctly diagnosed a manic-depressive in 1984. During this time, he had to struggle with loss of dignity and self-confidence because he was deemed incapable of making his own choices even though he had already achieved a Master of Arts in College Student Personnel. Yet, Mark's story is not one of bitterness but instead, is one of recovery, success and realistic hope!

Sign Ban Needed To Safeguard 264

Pitt Sets Precedent For Area

Kudos to the Pitt County Commissioners for prohibiting, through strong wording in an amendment to its sign ordinance, outdoor advertising signs on U.S. 264 from Farmville to Greenville.

The commissioners' action clarified the board's intent to safeguard that road, known as the John P. East Freeway. It is a strong statement saying the board wishes to protect the county's key transportation arteries from inappropriate development.

The board clearly understands the importance of keeping U.S. 264 free from clutter that could encroach upon its effectiveness. The road is the community's primary link to Raleigh and to Interstate 95. To maintain its integrity as a thoroughfare, it must remain a first-class roadway.

The commissioners' strong stance against billboards on freeways sets a precedent of preservation for other throughways in the county. The same protection should be afforded to the proposed Farmville and northwest Greenville 264 bypasses, once they are constructed.

In addition, Pitt's leaders should use their influence with county commissions in neighboring counties along the 264 corridor to convince those officials to adopt similar regulations. It does no good to implement ordinances restricting clutter if Greene and Wilson counties, for example, allow such development to occur. Decorum could be established along the road's entire route to Raleigh, and it would benefit the communities involved to work toward this goal.

Pitt County has set an example, however, with its strongly worded ordinance, and now should continue its quest for protection of U.S. 264 by persuading other counties to follow this example.

The no-nonsense wording in the ordinance is a first step toward a progressive planning effort in the county. For signs to be adequately controlled, measures must be clear and effective. The commissioners were correct to recognize the sign ordinance needed stronger language to protect 264 and deserve praise for adding it without hesitation.

Detox Unit Needed

Step Toward Rehabilitation

The Detoxification Unit of the Pitt County Mental Health Center will meet a major need of the community in handling alcohol and other drug abuse cases.

The center was dedicated in ceremonies recently.

The unit is already in use and its 10 beds are generally filled. Prior to the opening of the center individuals were referred out-of-town or shunted off to the Walter B. Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center, Cherry Hospital or Pitt County Memorial Hospital. None of these were properly staffed to handle cases such as now will be referred to the Detox Unit.

The unit is programmed for stays of five to 10 days and from there the client can go to rehabilitation programs designed to resolve the basic problems. Rehabilitation starts while the patient is at the Detox Center with clients attending at least one meeting of Alcoholics Anonymous or Narcotics Anonymous per day.

Goal setting is a part of the program and sometimes families of clients are made a part of the program. Fees are based on ability to pay and clients may enter at any time.

Abuse of alcohol has long been a community problem. Abuse of other drugs is a more recent but equally vexing problem.

For many years there were few facilities available for handling alcohol-related problems but now the community has made progress in providing treatment facilities for both alcohol and other drug abuse. The Detox Unit of the Pitt County Mental Health Center will fill an important role in the rehabilitation of clients. It will mean much to the families of abusers of alcohol and other drugs and it certainly will mean that some of these individuals will be restored to productive lives.

Tar Heel Democrats Detecting A Shift

RALEIGH (AP) — State Republican Chairman Jack Hawke gloatingly calls it "the complete McGovernization" of the Democratic Party.

Citing state Sen. Harold Hardison's loss to Sen. Tony Rand in last week's primary for lieutenant governor, Hawke says the North Carolina Democratic Party has drifted so far leftward that the rural, pro-business conservatives who dominated it for years have become a minority within the majority party.

"The Democratic Party has been taken over by an assembly of special interest groups and ultra-liberal activists," Hawke said. "That coalition will not be broken again in the foreseeable future."

Merle Black, political scientist with the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, said the defeat of Hardison "may be part of the last gasp for the conservative Democrats."

"This shows how hard it is to win the Democratic nomination for a statewide race if you're an out-and-out conservative ... with no liberal appeal," Black said. Hardison, 64, an 18-year legislator from Lenoir County, long has been a pillar of eastern North Carolina conservatism.

But Ken Eudy, executive director of the state Democratic Party, disagrees. Former Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, a conservative in the Hardison mold, was nominated as recently as 1980 and held off a challenge from the more moderate Carl Stewart in doing so, Eudy said.

Rufus Edmisten, the 1984 gubernatorial nominee, was generally regarded as more conservative than Eddie Knox, whom Edmisten narrowly defeated in a runoff primary, Eudy says. And he says Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, who hopes to unseat Republican Gov. Jim Martin, is no liberal.

"Bob Jordan is a lot more pro-business than I'd like him to be," Eudy said.

Green failed miserably in his 1984 gubernatorial bid, however. And while labeling politicians is at best subjective and inexact, Edmisten and Jordan generally are viewed as representatives of their party's moderate, mainstream wing — as is Rand, 48, a Fayetteville attorney.

To best assess the degree of strength traditional conservatives retain within the Democratic Party requires looking beyond the results of one or two elections, though they cannot be ignored.

As Eudy pointed out, ideology often is not the deciding factor in an election. As lieutenant governor, Green was logically positioned to be the front-runner for the 1984 gubernatorial nomination until he was indicted on bribery-related charges. He was acquitted before the primary but the political damage was permanent.

Polls showed Hardison, Rand and former Rep. Parks Helms running neck-and-neck until the final week of the primary campaign. Rand's 17-point victory surprised most observers and probably arose from several factors aside from the fact that Rand was more moderate than Hardison.

Eudy says tactical errors were Hardison's undoing — especially the decision to air negative television commercials against Rand. Then there was a campaign volunteer's heist of thousands of copies of a newspaper calling for Hardison's defeat and reports that the campaign had leased a car for a state representative who supported him.

These incidents generated bad publicity for Hardison in the crucial stretch period when undecided voters were making up their minds.

"Campaigns tend to turn on the darndest issues," Eudy said. "So often it boils down to something that nobody could have foreseen."

Even so, Hardison campaign strategist Mike Mann says Hardison's brand of conservatism is less prevalent in the Democratic Party than it was even a decade ago. But he says the change has as much to do with demographic factors as pure ideology.

As the state's population becomes increasingly urban and the World War II generation gives way to the baby boomers, different values and issues are influencing the party's direction, Mann said.

"It's not so much that there are not still conservatives within the Democratic Party ... but I think it's more of an urban message (and) constituency that's emerging in North Carolina," he said.

For example, many young professionals are economic conservatives but also feel strongly about environmental protection. A vigorous campaign by environmental groups who sponsored radio commercials chastising "Hazardous Hardison" because of his record on pollution issues might have been particularly effective with those voters.

Another factor is that the GOP now offers conservatives a genuine alternative. The state's first Republican governor and senator were elected in 1972. But it took many disenchanted Democratic conservatives until the 1980s to become convinced they could switch their registration and continue to be players in the state political game.

The Democratic Party retains many conservatives and has its share of conservative officeholders — particularly members of the General Assembly and Congress who represent primarily rural districts.

But winning the party's nomination for governor, lieutenant governor or other high-profile statewide posts likely will become harder for candidates whose views are insufficiently moderate to appeal to increasingly powerful constituencies as blacks, women and environmentalists.

If Only You Believed In Astrology ...

WASHINGTON — Following the disclosure last week that President and Mrs. Reagan are avid astrology buffs — and reports that first lady has altered her husband's work schedule to accommodate his horoscope — thoughtful citizens are left asking three questions:

— Was the date for the upcoming Moscow summit cunningly contrived to favor President Reagan's astrological chart?

— Should Americans be painfully humiliated to learn that their chief executive lets his timetable be determined by the dictates of a pagan superstition?

— Hasn't astrology been completely discredited by the scientific community? And if so, why is the nation's commander-in-chief fooling around with a belief system shared by benighted savages and tabloid junkies?

As to the first, we cannot be certain. But look: If you believed in astrology and were empowered to schedule the summit, you couldn't pick a more propitious time for the leader of the free world. This shocking and ominous revelation is based on horoscopes cast for Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev by a leading commercial computer astrology program using the most accurate birth data available without incurring cab fare.

Those projections confirm that Reagan, an Aquarius, is going to be in celestial Fat City between May 28 and June 2. His Mercury is in Gemini in the first House in conjunct aspect with his natal Pluto, which is also in Gemini in the first House. In addition, his Venus is in Pisces, his Mars is in Capricorn and his brown suit is at the cleaners. The zodiacal bottom line here is that Reagan's abilities to think and communicate (governed by Mercury) will rarely be stronger, and his personal charisma should be at its peak.

Whereas during the same interval, Mikhail Gorbachev, a Pisces, will be facing an astro-bummer of gruesome proportions. His Mars (emotions, aggression, will) is going to be in Pisces in the first House, in opposition aspect to his natal Neptune in Virgo in the seventh House (but first mortgage). Those and other leading planetoidal indicators, according to the Gorbachart, forecast a period of irritation, frustration and stress.

Clearly, we are left with only two possible outcomes: Either the United States is gonna blow their babushkas off in Moscow, or astrology is just a bag of moonbeams.

Which brings us to the second question. How embarrassed should we be? The intellectually squeamish may be dismayed. According to UPI, Mrs. Reagan's press secretary, Elaine Crispin, had been handling calls from all over the nation asking what type of crystals the first lady uses and "whether she wears a turban." No doubt it was felt that the reaction did not enhance the dignity of the office.

And yet, the Reagans are merely following in the toga-tracks of Julius Caesar and a long line of distinguished world leaders throughout history, from Queen Elizabeth I and Napoleon Bonaparte to Adolf Hitler and Indira Gandhi. (Scientists, too: The celebrated astronomer Johannes Kepler kept himself in strudel by casting horoscopes for the Holy Roman Emperor Rudolf II.)

Just so persistent is the human desire to impose an orderly meaning on the fickle mess of existence. And astrology is particularly attractive, writes Wisconsin psychologist Peter Glick, because "people tend to test theories by looking for information that will confirm them." Moreover, it accords with our primordial need to align our destinies — and particularly those of our rulers — with the influence of the heavens. Thus was astrology born in ancient Babylon as a state-sponsored study. By the 16th century, the belief in "correspondences" between human hierarchies and celestial patterns was still strong enough to be a major theme in Shakespeare's plays.

These immemorial beliefs still resonate in the modern era.

In 1941, says Oxford historian Martin Gilbert, "a convention of astrologers in the United States dominated by pro-German groups had predicted the victory of Hitler." Winston Churchill, anxious for America to join the fight against Germany, dispatched to the States a British astrologer "who proved from the same constellations of stars and moons," says Gilbert, "that Hitler would, in fact, lose." The ploy flopped, but Pearl Harbor came only a few months later.

Another case in point: China, whose New Year has traditionally been defined as the day of the first new moon after the sun enters Aquarius. As long as 2,200 years ago, says David Kertzer, a political anthropologist at Bowdoin College, emperors routinely appointed official "grand astrologers." Two millennia later, the People's Republic was thoroughly communist, presumptively purged of antique misbeliefs. Yet in 1953, when a solar eclipse took place on New Year's Day of the old calendar — popularly believed to be an omen portending the anger of the heavens against the governing power — the communist regime was forced to engage in a major propaganda campaign to counter the ancient superstition.

No wonder, then, that a 1986 study by the National Science Foundation found that two-thirds of Americans read astrology reports periodically, and nearly 40 percent of them think horoscopes have some scientific credibility.

(No wonder either that George "Both Sides Now" Bush, queried about the Reagan's horoscopic proclivities last week, averred: "I don't know about that. But I'll tell you one thing — there are two edges to this sword. There are a helluva lot of people across this country that read these columns. Otherwise, they wouldn't be in the papers.")

Whence arises our third question: How can this be, when the whole pan-galactic megillah has been repeatedly debunked in the cruel eye of science? The answer is that many things can be largely discredited and still flourish — what else explains Ed Meese?

Still, scientists have been worried for years about the burgeoning belief in astrology, its effects on the gullible young and its debilitating effect on teachers' abilities to convey real science. As early as 1975, 186 leading scientists — including 18 Nobel Prize winners — issued a statement warning the public against "charlatans" promulgating a doctrine for which "there is no scientific foundation."

"We're sending a terrible message to youth," says astronomer Andrew Fraknoi, executive director of the Astronomical Society of the Pacific, since astrology fails even "common-sense analysis. You might ask, what are the forces exerted by the planets at birth? How large are they? Well, it turns out that the gravitational pull exerted by the obstetrician standing by the delivery table is six times greater than that of all the planets combined. So if you're looking for a sign to be born under at the hospital, I suggest "No Parking." Astrologers claim that their system has worked for thousands of years. Pluto and Neptune weren't discovered until the 20th century. Wouldn't all the horoscopes then be wrong?"

Jackson Takes Jab At Bush, While Trudeau Takes Reagan To Comics

By The Associated Press
The Rev. Jesse Jackson provided the drama and cartoonist Garry Trudeau added the comic relief as thousands of North Carolina college students received their degrees.

Jackson, who gave the commencement address at North Carolina A&T State University as his two sons received degrees, blasted Republican presidential rival Vice President George Bush for characterizing him as "a Chicago hustler" — a name the Bush campaign says referred to Jackson's hard work.

"Why would anyone resort to name-calling?" Jackson said. "A combination of constipation of the brain, deafness of ideas and diarrhea of the mouth..."

"Vice President Bush has begun to panic and has begun to call me names. ... He's panicking with indecision. He's panicking with selective memory."

In Durham, Trudeau reminded about 2,400 graduates at Duke University's Wallace Wade Stadium that President Reagan is an avid comic strip reader.

"If you read every (comic) strip published in The Washington Post, as Larry Speakes now claims the president does, it takes roughly eight minutes a day, which means by tally the leader of the free world has spent a total of 14 days, 16 hours and 48 minutes of his presidency reading comics," Trudeau said. "Which explains a lot. Of course that information is downright reassuring when compared with the news that he has spent a comparable amount of time reading his horoscope."

Trudeau, creator of the popular political cartoon strip "Doodles" for which he won a Pulitzer Prize in 1975, said the pursuit of goals is too strong in most students. He told them not to be afraid to slow down and take risks.

"Indeed, as you look around you may see very little to distract you from the narrow path of self-absorption, and yet that is exactly what your liberal arts education — with its emphasis on ideas, on inquiry, on humanist values — was designed to do."

U.S. Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., the former governor of Arkansas, challenged students at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill never to lose sight of their duties as American citizens.

"As you watch the evening news you see students your age in the streets of Korea ... and the Phillipines, fighting and facing bullets for the most precious right — the right to vote."

Bumpers said his generation may be the first to hand down to the next generation a deficit larger than the one they faced.

"The threat is ominous. With a $2.4 trillion dollar debt. But we are handing you a free republic — a democracy and its up to you to keep it," Bumpers told the graduates.

Bumpers, in his third Senate term, also told the students to make life a learning experience.

IN THE STATE

Higher Costs

DURHAM (AP) — Duke University hospital charges will rise an average of 13.6 percent during the fiscal year beginning July 1, according to the Board of Trustees, who voted in the increase Saturday.

The daily room rate for patients receiving routine care will go up from $248 to $284.

Fitzgerald Hudson, a 1946 Duke engineering graduate, was elected chairman of the Board of Trustees.

Suspect Arrested

WILMINGTON (AP) — A man sought in the killing of a Wilmington video store clerk during a robbery has been arrested in New Jersey, police say.

Fredrick Wayne McPhail, 25, was arrested last week in Mount Holly, N.J., on a fugitive warrant from New York, said Wilmington police Sgt. Bill Prescott. Wilmington police drew warrants Saturday charging McPhail with armed robbery and murder, he said.

Jon Matthew Mason, 19, of Wilmington was shot in the back during a robbery April 27, Prescott said.

Poisoning

WASHINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Health officials are looking for the cause of a minor outbreak of chemical poisoning at a city grade school Friday morning.

Six sixth-grade students at John Small School were treated at Beaufort County Hospital and released Friday afternoon after complaining of stomach pains and burning throats.

The emergency room physician who treated the children said their ailments apparently had been caused by a faulty mixture in an orange drink sold in the school cafeteria.

Festival Cake

CHADBOURN, N.C. (AP) — Everyone was so busy marching and judging and eating strawberries that hardly anyone noticed the homemade shortcake had taken a big splat and had to be replaced with the store-bought variety.

Beauty queens and high school bands marched through this town of 2,000 and judges tasted every variety of strawberry recipe as North Carolinians celebrated their 56th Strawberry Festival.

The weekend fair, billed as the state's oldest agricultural festival, drew hundreds of entries and thousands of spectators.

"I don't think anybody has noticed that the cakes were store-bought," said Jack Yates.

He was supposed to deliver 15 large sheet cakes baked by the women of his fraternal society, based in another town a few miles away. But the cakes fell out of the back of the pickup.

Computer Helping Grads Find Jobs

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — A new computerized job hotline at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is being lauded for the speed and efficiency it brings to the quest for career opportunities.

"It's been working beautifully," said Marcia Harris, director of the Career Planning and Placement Office. "We've had some real success stories and we've gotten good feedback from employers."

After providing the school with information such as experience, major and career interests, graduates can plug into a computer containing hundreds of job opportunities simply by dialing a telephone number.

"The computer will search about 800 jobs in the data base and provide them with a list of jobs that best match student and employer," she said. "They can call in from anywhere in the country, 24 hours a day."

To find out about job openings in a particular field, the caller punches in a special number. Using a synthesized voice, the computer reads out the top 10 prospects.

The hotline, which was developed for UNC-CH, has been a huge success since it went on line last June. The class of 1988 is the first one to have it available at the time of graduation, Ms. Harris said.

ASU Upgrading Its Program In Music

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — Appalachian State University's music department will become a school of music this week, a move expected to allow the university to compete for top students and better funding from private sources.

The University of North Carolina Board of Governors is slated to vote on the issue Friday.

The name change was approved last May by ASU's vice chancellor for academic affairs Harvey Durham, because he found that many universities' music schools nationwide operate within liberal arts colleges.

Under UNC rules, a "school" must be independent instead of part of the college, although this is not the case in other states. This means the music school must have permission from the Board of Governors to hire its own dean and must sever its organizational ties to other arts departments — theater, dance and visual arts.

Critics of the music school's independent status — faculty and students in the other arts — argue that it will hurt students by cutting cooperative programs and by siphoning off funds to pay the new dean.

Regan Writes That President Waited While Nancy Consulted Her Astrologer

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Former White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan says President Reagan "laid down no rules and articulated no missions" while his wife, Nancy, presided over a "shadowy distaff presidency" influenced by astrological advice.

DONALD T. REGAN

Regan's book, "For the Record: from Wall Street to Washington," scheduled to be in bookstores today, details his allegations that Mrs. Reagan consulted an astrologer about scheduling of presidential events.

The book pictures Reagan as a reluctant decision-maker, saying, "Never did he issue a direct order, although I, at least, sometimes devoutly wished that he would."

"He listened, acquiesced, played his role, and waited for the next act to be written," Regan wrote of the president who dumped him in favor of former Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. at the height of the furor over the Iran-Contra affair. Mrs. Reagan was widely reported at the time to have played a major role in influencing the president to replace Regan.

The White House issued a statement Sunday saying: "Vindictiveness and revenge are not admirable qualities, and are not worthy of comment. Donald Regan's attempts to defame the first lady, on Mother's Day no less, are certainly in that category."

In an interview Sunday, Regan said, "I don't think this is an attack on his wife. ... There are no adjectives, no deprecation of the first lady. I merely told the story of what she did or didn't do during my period as chief of staff."

The former chief of staff said he regarded Mrs. Reagan's interest in astrology as a harmless eccentricity at first and "it wasn't until it began to impinge and in my judgment harm the presidency in the latter part of him as a man, in light of my final experience as his chief of staff, underwent a certain change."

Over and over, however, he described the president as a leader who holds the reins lightly.

"Theodore Roosevelt believed that the president could conduct his office in any way that was not specifically prohibited by the Constitution," he wrote. "Reagan, who laid down no rules and articulated no missions, conferred a Rooseveltian latitude on his subordinates."

Regan, who was secretary of the treasury before moving to the White House, said that in his four years at the Treasury Department, "I never saw President Reagan alone and never discussed economic philosophy or fiscal and monetary policy with him man to man."

"From first day to last at Treasury, I was flying by the seat of my pants. The president never told me what he believed or what he wanted to accomplish in the field of economics. I had to figure these things out like any other American, by studying his speeches and reading the newspapers."

As for the first lady, he said, "Mrs. Reagan regarded herself as the president's alter ego not only in the conjugal but also in the political and official dimensions, as if the office that had been bestowed upon her husband by the people somehow fell into the category of worldly goods covered by the marriage vows."

He said of Mike Deaver, who served as deputy chief of staff before Regan came to the White House, that "his function in the White House had as much to do with the mysterious process of managing this shadowy distaff presidency as with his visible role as the custodian of the presidential image."

Regan says that "virtually every major move and decision the Reagans made during my time as White House chief of staff was cleared in advance with a woman in 1986 and early 1987 that I began to protest."

Asked why he did not wait until the president was out of office to make the disclosures in the book, he replied, "I didn't set the time of my leaving this administration and I don't know why I should hold up the book for this administration. This administration certainly didn't hold up my job."

When asked about Reagan's conduct at the time of Regan's enforced departure from the White House, Regan said, "I was disappointed. I thought that he was a generous, considerate person with loyalty down as well as expecting loyalty up. I still am puzzled by it. It's not characteristic, and that's the disappointment."

Regan said he was donating all of his proceeds from the book, published by Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, to charity.

In his book, the former chief of staff wrote "that my admiration for Reagan as president remains very great" although "my judgment of San Francisco who drew up horoscopes to make certain that the planets were in a favorable alignment for the enterprise."

He said he did not know the woman's identity. However, Time magazine, which published excerpts from the book, identified her as Joan Quigley of San Francisco, and Ms. Quigley confirmed in a telephone interview that she had been giving Mrs. Reagan astrological advice since shortly after the assassination attempt on the president in 1981.

Wrote Regan: "At one point, I kept a color-coded calendar on my desk (numerals highlighted in green ink for 'good' days, red for 'bad' days, yellow for 'iffy' days) as an aid to remember when it was propitious to move the president."

Astrologer Objects To 'Circus'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The San Francisco woman who gave stargazing advice to first lady Nancy Reagan says she is "a serious, scientific astrologer and ... I really don't like this circus atmosphere."

Joan Quigley confirmed in a telephone interview from her Nob Hill home Sunday that Mrs. Reagan had consulted her since 1981, as reported by former White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan.

Regan, in his book, "For the Record," scheduled to go on sale today, said that "virtually every major move and decision the Reagans made ... was cleared in advance with a woman in San Francisco who drew up horoscopes."

Regan said he did not know her identity.

Ms. Quigley, however, said, "I can't deny that she has consulted me. I am very uncomfortable, however, with the situation because normally I never discuss the identity of my clients, and I never discuss their affairs."

"I am a serious, scientific astrologer and I am really not one of these clowns, and I really don't like this circus atmosphere," said Ms. Quigley, who has been practicing astrology since 1960 and has written three books on the subject.

Jay Jacobs, a member of the board of directors of the Association for Astrological Networking, said Ms. Quigley is "a specialist in political consulting" who lectures on "geopolitical" astrology.

"She's viewed as a competent professional, and a specialist," Jacobs said.

Ms. Quigley, a San Francisco heiress and Republican political activist, said she did astrological work for Reagan's 1980 presidential campaign. She declined to give the details.

"After the assassination attempt, Mrs. Reagan asked me if she could consult me because she was worried about the president's safety, as well

"I certainly never controlled the president's actions," she said. "Mrs. Reagan would want to know if something was a safe time and I certainly advised her on that." Ms. Quigley said her advice is based on the exact time and place of a person's birth.

In a separate interview with television station KRON in San Francisco, the astrologer said she advised the first lady "when it was unsafe to fly." She added, "I never had any contact with the president."

Arab-American Wins Temporary Stay of Israeli Deportation Order

JERUSALEM (AP) — An Arab-American accused of inciting violence in the Israeli-occupied lands today asked a court to free him from jail while he fights to remain in the country.

The Supreme Court on Sunday temporarily stayed a deportation order for Mubarak Awad, 44, and gave the government three days to explain why the Jerusalem native should be expelled.

The court began hearing arguments today on whether Awad could be released from jail pending a final ruling on the deportation order.

Israeli officials allege Awad has helped incite the 5-month-old Arab uprising in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. At least 185 Arabs and two Israelis have been killed there since Dec. 8.

Awad, the founder of the Palestinian Center for the Study of Non-Violence, blew kisses to supporters as he entered the courthouse for today's hearing. During a recess, he told reporters he was in the fourth day of a hunger strike.

MUBARAK AWAD.

"I feel good. I'm still fasting, but I started to drink water. I still believe in Israeli law and Israeli justice and I hope I won't be disappointed," he said.

At the Deheishe refugee camp near Bethlehem in the occupied West, meanwhile, a man was fatally shot in the head when soldiers opened fire on rock-throwing Palestinians, hospital officials and Arab witnesses said. The victim was identified as Ibrahim Mohammed Haniyah, 34.

Troops fired tear gas, rubber bullets and live ammunition at dozens of Arabs who hurled rocks at soldiers and Israeli cars, said Deheishe resident Saed Rasi. Israel radio said three Arabs were wounded. The army said it was checking the reports.

In Arab east Jerusalem and the occupied territories, business activity was virtually shut down by the latest of dozens of general strikes called by Palestinian uprising's organizers.

In the Gaza Strip, announcements were broadcast from mosque loudspeakers ordering Palestinians to stay off their jobs in Israel. "Every man who goes to work will be punished," an Arab reporter quoted one announcement as saying.

On Sunday, Palestinian leaders called on Arabs in the Gaza Strip to defy an order by the Israeli government requiring more than 300,000 residents to exchange their Israeli-issued identity cards for new documents.

Palestinians alleged the order was intended to break an Arab tax boycott because only those who paid all taxes would be eligible for new cards. Israeli military sources denied this.

Also Sunday, a masked assailant fatally shot a Palestinian woman in front of her children in the West Bank refugee camp of Jenin, the Israeli news agency Itim reported. Arab sources said Amne Ahmed Ali, 45, was suspected of collaborating with Israeli authorities.

Israel on Sunday extended its shutdown of schools in the West Bank for another month because of the unrest, Israel television said.

Luxury Yacht Seized

L.A. Times-Washington Post

A $2.5 million luxury yacht was seized by the Coast Guard after one-tenth of an ounce of marijuana was found on board, and the vessel will be sold under the government's tough new policy aimed at even the most casual drug users.

The 133-foot Ark Royal, registered in Delaware with its home port in Philadelphia, was seized Saturday in international waters between Mexico and Cuba after Coast Guard officers found a butt of a marijuana cigarette in a trash can and a small amount of marijuana in a stateroom, Coast Guard officials in Miami said.

The Coast Guard can legally board U.S.-flagged vessels in international waters.

None of the six people on board was arrested, Coast

Guard spokesman Lou Parris said. He declined to identify them, but said the boat is registered to a Delaware business, the Tomima Corp. The boat, under a Coast Guard escort, was headed for Key West. Parris said the six on board would be released there.

The seizure reflects the administration's "zero tolerance" policy, and came at a time when the Coast Guard has been forced to cut its drug patrols by 50 percent because of budget reductions.

"This new policy should be taken as fair warning to anyone who is using or transporting any detectable amount of drugs on our waterways," Transportation Secretary James H. Burnley IV said in a speech in Miami April 23. "We are dead serious about slamming the door on the drug threat in this country."

John Paul Says Spread The Wealth

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) — Pope John Paul II, taking on one of the thorniest issues in Latin America, is seeking to spread the wealth tilled by a few.

The pope today was to visit the orange-growing city of Salto on the northwestern border with Argentina before flying to La Paz, Bolivia's 2½-mile-high capital, on the second leg of his four-nation pilgrimage.

Aides say the pope has been buoyed by the official reception he has received in this small country, which is considered the most secular in South America.

In a stop Sunday in Uruguay's gaucho (cowboy) country, John Paul came up against the contrasts that have bedeviled governments for generations throughout much of Latin America.

Herds of cattle grazed peacefully on large estates outside Melo, a northeastern city of 40,000 near the Brazilian frontier that church officials say is one of the poorest regions in Uruguay.

Speaking to a crowd of 50,000 gathered on a dirt field, John Paul said he was directing an appeal to "all Catholic faithful and all Uruguayans of good will."

"Those who own land and other categories of wealth must take into account that there is a social mortgage on all private property," John Paul said in Spanish, explaining that this meant the property must be used for the good of the entire community.

He cited church documents that wealth should be used to create jobs and that farmworkers should be paid enough to prevent the swelling of migrations to the cities. Nearly half of Uruguay's 3 million residents live in this capital beside the River Plate.

Drought Threatens Water Supplies In Western Areas

By ROGER PETERSON
Associated Press Writer

Drought has threatened water supplies in the West and Southeast, forced some Texas and California ranchers to sell starving cattle and allowed topsoil and crop seeds to blow away in the northern Plains.

In San Francisco, residents were ordered to reduce water consumption by 25 percent. Atlanta residents were asked to cut usage by 10 percent. Los Angeles also has imposed water conservation rules. In northern Montana's Liberty County, 70 people attended a 24-hour vigil last week to pray for rain.

"It's almost like you saw in the typical 1930s scenes where clouds of dust are moving across the fields," says Fred Kollman, district conservationist in Norman County, Minn. "You see drifts of dirt almost like snowdrifts in the road ditches. There is lots of dirt in the air and lots of dirt in the houses."

In the West, two straight winters of poor rainfall and scanty snowfall in California's Sierra Nevada led to drought. In the Southeast, parts of the Tennessee Valley have been receiving below-normal rain since 1984. In Texas, the drought began last fall. Parts of the northern Plains enjoyed above-normal rain last summer, but less than expected snow last winter.

"I'm not sure how much longer (the area) can take it. It's scary," said extension agent Judee Wargo in Montana's Liberty County, where rainfall since October has measured 0.73 inch, compared with an average 3.17 inches for the period.

Last week, Texas Gov. William P. Clements said Starr and McMullen counties needed federal disaster assistance because of drought.

Starr County has had just over 5 inches of rain since Sept. 1, a period in which it normally would receive most of its average annual rainfall of 20 inches. Ranchers have had to sell cattle for lack of hay and forage.

In Jim Wells County west of Corpus Christi, extension agent Billy Paul said ranchers have started burning thorns off prickly pear cactuses so cattle can eat them. But even the cactus is drying up in some areas, said Starr County emergency official Alfonso Perez.

Despite above-normal rain in Nevada in April, "the drought is still on with a passion," said state climatologist John James.

Northern California is having its worst water shortage in 11 years, officials said.

Winter precipitation was normal or above normal until the end of January.

"But February and March of this year were dismal, drought-producing months," said Gary Barbato, a hydrologist with the National Weather Service at San Francisco.

Statewide, snow-melt runoff in rivers through mid-summer is expected to be an third of normal, said Don Heath, chief of the state's newly activated drought center in Sacramento.

As in Texas, some ranchers in California's central valley are selling cattle and appealing for federal grain subsidies.

Portions of southern Oregon have been classified as in a severe drought and sections of eastern Oregon are in an extreme drought, said Stan Fox, snow survey superintendent for the U.S. Soil Conservation Service.

Ambassador's Plane Diverted In Panama

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — A plane carrying U.S. Ambassador Arthur Davis flew to an American air base because armed Panamanian agents harassed his security detail at a commercial airport, a U.S. Embassy official claimed.

The private plane carrying Davis and members of his family landed briefly at the commercial airport, then departed after the confrontation was reported by the security detail awaiting his arrival, the official said.

Davis did not leave the aircraft while it was at the airport. The embassy spokesman, Terrence Kneebone, did not say precisely what the Panamanian agents did, and there was no immediate comment from Panamanian government officials.

Panama's banks, meanwhile, were to allow customers to make limited withdrawals from their accounts today for the first time in more than nine weeks. Bankers and government officials agreed to the move after negotiations.

A government order shut down banks on March 3 following a run on savings by panicky depositors and the imposition of U.S. economic sanctions in an effort to force Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega to resign as chief of the Defense Forces.

Noriega, the power behind the government, was indicted in the United States in February on drug trafficking charges. The general has denied the charges and said they are politically motivated.

'We Are Here To Do Good'

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This question may be a little out of your line, but I am going to ask it anyway: What do you think we were put here on earth for?

— DALLAS PHILOSOPHER

DEAR PHILOSOPHER: I'll go along with W.H. Auden, who said: "We are here on earth to do good to others. What the others are here for, I do not know."

DEAR ABBY: This is in regard to the pregnant woman who complained because her right to privacy had been violated by an office nurse who crassly commented on her previous abortion: "Oh, I see you've decided to keep this one!"

It's not only in doctors' offices that the right to privacy is violated. The last several months, my husband and I spent several hundreds of dollars in pharmaceutical bills, which we charged at our neighborhood drugstore.

One day, to my horror, a friend called my husband to ask if he was "OK." When my husband expressed surprise at the question, the friend told him that the bookkeeper at our pharmacy had told him about recent prescriptions for penicillin my husband had had filled. When we expressed our outrage at this breach of confidence, the friend told us that this bookkeeper had revealed information about prescriptions of other customers whose privacy was being violated in the same manner.

Needless to say, we changed pharmacies immediately. We did not tell our first pharmacist about the "yenta" who had been blabbing about his customers' private business — but now we think we will! — PRIVATE PEOPLE IN GREAT NECK

DEAR PRIVATE PEOPLE: It would be an act of generosity to advise the owner of any business that he or she has an indiscreet, loose-lipped gossip on the payroll. This includes office personnel, salespeople, employees of hospitals, hotels, motels, etc. The list is endless.

One cannot rid himself of rats unless he knows where the rats are.

DEAR ABBY: It never ceases to amaze me how quick people are to argue or debate an issue that has absolutely no relevance. This point is illustrated by the recent flurry of letters you've run regarding whether baseball managers should wear a three-piece suit or the team's uniform. Let's face it, if a manager has such a big potbelly that he looks "ridiculous" in a uniform, would he really look much better in a suit or a bikini? Who cares?

Of far greater importance is the fact that it's impossible to watch a professional baseball game without seeing at least one (and usually several) players with a huge wad of chewing tobacco in their mouths. Not only do they look ridiculous with their faces distorted by the sheer volume of the stuff, the act of chewing and spitting is revolting to watch, and it sets an extremely poor example for youngsters. — DISGUSTED IN COLORADO SPRINGS

DEAR DISGUSTED: I'm told that baseball players need to keep their mouths moist while on that dusty field — but there has to be a better way. (Are you listening, Peter Ueberroth?)

Strike

strike and postpone its long-term goal of reinstating Solidarity under the following conditions:

—Guarantee of safe passage from the shipyard for strikers and the people who have assisted them.
 —Promises of no disciplinary action against strikers, including fines, dismissals or prosecutions.

—A wage increase of $38 dollars on the average monthly wage of the last three months, or about $105.

—Formation of a joint committee from members of the strike committee and the shipyard workers' council to oversee implementation of the agreement.

Management ultimately agreed to a raise of $39 monthly based on the average wage in the third quarter of 1987, when wages were somewhat lower, strike sources said. The average pay for that quarter was not immediately available.

In addition, strike sources said, there was a promise that fired Solidarity activists would be rehired, but only if the shipyard was short of manpower, and an oral promise that some unspecified political prisoners would be freed.

The number of strikers was only about half the 800-1,000 reported inside the yard Friday, according to Western reporters there Sunday. Walesa has remained among the workers at the plant. The strike began May 2.

A settlement would have ended a two-week wave of labor unrest which the government has said is threatening Poland's reputation abroad and its economic reform plans at home. It has been Poland's worst labor upheaval since the 1981 military crackdown which preceded the outlawing of Solidarity.

The union, born in the Gdansk shipyard in August 1980, was the first independent trade union in the East bloc.

Meanwhile, Poland's Roman Catholic primate, Cardinal Jozef Glemp, spoke out Sunday for the right of all people to participate in society's decisions. His sermon followed a statement Saturday by Polish-born Pope John Paul II that strikes can be justified and Poland lacked "true democracy."

And 55 intellectuals and oppositionists charged in an open letter that the government's policy of national reconciliation is a "game of appearances."

On Sunday, management told workers inside the shipyard they could face discipline or arrest if they did not leave by 6 p.m., said John Kopka. The workers ignored the ultimatum.

The government has never ruled out the use of force to end the strike. A pre-dawn raid by a police anti-terrorist unit and riot police crushed a 10-day strike by steelworkers in Nowa Huta in southern Poland on Thursday.

On Sunday morning, at least 7,000 slogan-chanting people attended a church service to support the workers on strike for a seventh day.

Thousands of police reappeared on the streets of this Baltic port city to maintain order around St. Brygida's Church.

Money Plan Suggested

upward surge, abruptly reversed course after James A. Baker III took over as treasury secretary from Donald T. Regan.

Baker believed a weaker dollar was needed to fight growing protectionist sentiment in a Congress alarmed by the soaring trade deficit.

A weaker dollar makes American products more competitive on overseas markets while making imports more expensive in the United States.

The United States and its allies switched course again in February 1987 with the Louvre agreement which said that the dollar had declined far enough. The nations pledged to intervene in currency markets to defend the dollar against continued downward pressure.

Despite that pledge, the U.S. currency has come under repeated selling pressure because of the stubbornly high U.S. trade deficit, which last year hit a record $171.2 billion. The downward pressure on the dollar and efforts by the Federal Reserve to prop up its value by raising U.S. interest rates last fall were two of the factors cited in the Oct. 19 stock market crash.

Financial markets remain convinced that the dollar will have to fall farther to correct the trade deficits.

The United States has become the world's largest debtor nation as Americans have transferred billions of dollars into the hands of foreigners to pay for Japanese cars, Korean television sets and French wines.

America's new status as a net debtor makes it imperative for the new administration to intensify efforts at international cooperation, the study said.

The study recommended building on the approach established by the Louvre agreement, by which each nation's currency is placed in a so-called target zone and any time the currency moves outside the agreed-upon zone, nations launch actions including intervention to bring it back into line.

The study said the United States bargaining position would be strengthened if the administration made a greater effort to include Congress in the economic decision-making process since such needed changes as reducing the federal budget deficit can only be accomplished through congressional action.

The study, based on interviews with many of the officials involved, reveals some key details of the secret negotiations over the past three years.

The administration's changed position from a hands-off approach to the dollar to actively trying to push it lower was engineered by then-Deputy Treasury Secretary Richard Darman, a key Baker aide who has been behind many of the administration's most successful economic initiatives. Darman detailed the proposed change in a secret memo to Baker in the spring of 1985, soon after Baker, the White House chief of staff in Reagan's first term, swapped jobs with Regan.

Funabashi says the original goal of the Plaza accord was to drive down the dollar's value by between 10 percent and 12 percent through an intensive six-week intervention effort with a price tag of $18 billion. This goal was realized.

The Louvre accord, signed in Paris in February 1987, sought to stabilize exchange rates, keeping the dollar from falling by more than 5 percent from a base of 153.5 yen to the dollar.

The dollar has continued to fall, however, and now stands around 125 yen, down almost 50 percent from its peak of 263.7 yen in February 1985.

Airport Awaits Expansion OK

Passengers now must claim their baggage outside the airport terminal, but after the expansion is completed there will be a new baggage claim area with a conveyor belt system. Turcotte said, and the project will also provide the airlines with more office space and ticket counter space.

"It's just going to make the flow much smoother," Turcotte said. Airport officials expected no more than 10,000 people a year to use the facility when it was first built, he said, but about 100,000 passengers passed through the airport last year.

Once the terminal is expanded, the apron will also need to be expanded to provide adequate space for aircraft to park, Turcotte said.

"We're trying to get that done because we want to separate private aircraft from air carriers," Turcotte said. "There is no regulation that says we have to, we just feel it makes for a smoother operation."

"But since there is no regulation, the FAA does not prioritize it as high as we would like them to," Turcotte said. "When we open the terminal, we are going to need that space."

Turcotte is also planning to begin accepting bids on an Instrument Landing System within 30 to 45 days. The FAA has funded all other Instrument Landing Systems in North Carolina airports, Turcotte said, but the Pitt-Greenville facility began to grow after the FAA changed its policy on funding such projects.

The airport authority hoped to convince the FAA to pay for the ILS with entitlement money, but got no positive response, Turcotte said.

"Basically, what the board decided to do is say enough is enough, and they decided not to even deal with the FAA on that particular issue," he said.

Turcotte said the airport is moving ahead to purchase an ILS — which uses radio signals to guide the pilot to the runway during landings in poor visibility — and the state will pay half of the costs and the city and county will pay half.

"We recognize it needs to be done, and we're going to do it ourselves," Turcotte said.

The authority has budgeted $400,000 for the purchase and installation of a glide slope, one of the components of an ILS, and Turcotte said competition between companies that sell the equipment is driving the price down and there is a strong possibility the authority can also purchase a localizer, the second component needed, without budgeting additional money.

The airport already has a localizer, Turcotte said, but will eventually need a new one and can get a better price if the equipment is bought as part of a package.

Obtaining the ILS is also a key to beginning another project: expanding the runway. The airport's clear zone will double in size once the ILS is installed, and that should make the FAA more willing to help the airport acquire land needed to expand the runway, Turcotte said.

The authority has examined options for runway expansion, but Turcotte said the project is not expected to begin before 1989.

There are currently around 46,000 registered voters in Pitt County.

Pitt County Commissioner Kenneth Dews said he spent considerable time at precincts where the electronic equipment was in use and interviewed people for their comments.

"Most people had very good comments, calling it an excellent piece of equipment. Most said they didn't have any difficulty with it," Dews said.

He also said the Pitt County Commissioners will look very carefully at the possibility of obtaining the new equipment during the upcoming budget sessions.

"We are going to have to take a hard look and see if monies will be available to purchase this equipment," he said.

Homecourt Keys Three Teams

Out Of My Way

The Detroit Pistons, Chicago Bulls and Atlanta Hawks worked all season to get a homecourt advantage in the first round of the NBA playoffs, and that's exactly what they got.

Those three teams won all of their home games and lost all their road games in their best-of-five first-round series, and as a result they advanced to the Eastern Conference semifinals with victories Sunday. In the East, the home team won 18 of 19 first-round games, with Boston's series-clinching victory at New York on Friday the only road triumph.

"This is what you play for all season, the fifth game at home," Detroit's Dennis Rodman said after the Pistons' 99-78 victory over Washington. "It was great to see the old Pistons come back. We were whoopin' and hollering."

Chicago advanced to a second-round series against the Pistons, beginning Tuesday at Detroit, by defeating Cleveland 107-101. Atlanta beat Milwaukee 121-111 and will begin second-round play at Boston on Wednesday.

In Sunday's other game, the Los Angeles Lakers crushed Utah 110-91 in Game 1 of a Western Conference semifinal. Denver eliminated Seattle 115-96 in Game 5 Saturday, and the Nuggets will face Dallas in the other West semifinal.

Rodman, who was 5-for-5 from the field, came off the bench to score 12 of his 13 points in the fourth quarter, when the Pistons scored 10 consecutive points to take control against the cold-shooting Bulls.

"They had been getting blasted in the media for letting it get this far," Washington coach Wes Unseld said of the Pistons. "There were a lot of intimidating factors today."

Detroit held the Bulls to 31 percent shooting and limited Jeff Malone, who averaged 27 points in the series, to just four points. He was 1-for-12 from the field, while Moses Malone was 2-for-10 and scored 15 points.

"Jeff played four of the five best games you will ever see in this league," Unseld said. "He tried, and that's all I ask. Give me your best and you'll never have a problem with me."

Detroit had five players in double figures, led by Joe Dumars with 20 and Adrian Dantley with 17. Bernard King had 18 points to lead the Bulls.

Bulls 107, Cavaliers 101
Michael Jordan set a scoring record for a five-game series with 39 in Game 5, but he needed support from his Chicago teammates, especially rookie Scottie Pippen, to beat Cleveland.

Pippen, who wasn't told until just before the game that he would start, scored 24 points, including two key baskets late in the third quarter that put the Bulls in control of the game.

"I told Pippen walking onto the floor that this would be his first start, because I didn't want him to be nervous," Bulls coach Doug Collins said. "Plus, I wanted to take some pressure off Brad Sellers."

Jordan, whose 226 points for the series broke King's 1984 mark of 213, said Pippen's performance gives other teams something to think about.

"I really helps our confidence," he said, "and it helps his confidence. It makes us look like a lot better team."

The Cavaliers, who got 25 points from Mark Price, led 12-2 and had a 35-23 advantage at the end of the first quarter, but the Bulls took their first lead, 78-77, on a steal and layup by Pippen with 27 seconds left in the third quarter. The rookie from Central Arkansas scored again on a rebound at the five-second mark, and the Bulls led the rest of the way for their first trip to the second round since 1981.

"Michael carried us the first two games," Collins said. "But today, the Chicago Bulls team showed up."

Hawks 121, Bucks 111

Dominique Wilkins, the NBA's second-leading scorer behind Jordan, also got some unexpected scoring help from teammate Randy Wittman against Milwaukee.

Wilkins had 33 points and 10 rebounds, while Wittman added a season-high 29 points, including 17 in the second half when he was 7-for-7 from the field.

"I got it going early, then some of the other guys took over when I got tired," said Wilkins, who scored 24 points in the first half. "We knew there was no way we were going to lose this game. Wittman made some shots and everybody contributed. If we play with this kind of intensity, we'll win a game in Boston."

Atlanta broke the game open in the third quarter, outscoring the Bucks 31-23 to take an 89-70 lead into the final period. The Bucks made a couple of fourth-period runs, but could get no closer than 10 points.

Kevin Willis added 20 points for the Hawks, while Glenn Rivers had 14

Edmonton Must Overcome Loss

DETROIT (AP) — The Edmonton Oilers are still up one game but down one key player in their Stanley Cup semifinal series with the Detroit Red Wings.

As the Oilers prepared to face the Red Wings tonight in Game 4 of the Campbell Conference finals, they learned that defenseman Charlie Huddy would be lost for the series and probably the rest of the playoffs.

"There's no question we'll miss a player of Charlie's caliber, but we've been able to adjust for the loss of other players," said Coach Glen Sather, whose team holds a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven series.

Huddy had been playing some of the best playoff hockey of his career before he was injured in Saturday night's 5-2 loss to the Red Wings. Prior to Game 3, he had been leading the club's defensemen in playoff goals with four and his eight points matched Steve Smith for the lead among defensemen.

The Edmonton defenseman was helped off the ice but later returned to play in the second period before retiring for the night.

Overnight the injury worsened to the extent that Huddy had to be rushed to a hospital for emergency surgery for internal bleeding in the thigh.

"If they had let it go a couple of more days, it would have killed off the muscle," an Oilers spokesman said.

"Surgical decompression" was the medical term used for the procedure on Huddy.

The Oilers said he would be lost at least for this series and that it was "improbable" that he would return at all for the rest of the playoffs.

"Anytime a team loses a player of Charlie Huddy's character, it's going to be a negative factor," Smith said. "But I think we have some depth on defense and whoever steps in will do a good job."

In this case, it will be Marty McSorley, who is coming back from a three-game suspension for spearing Mike Bullard in the Calgary series. McSorley has been used by the Oilers both at right wing and on defense.

Tonight, it will be defense.

Asked who would help to clear out Detroit's big players from in front of the net, Sather said: "Marty McSorley will take care of that. He will move people. He moved them in Calgary."

After sweeping the Flames in four straight in the Smythe Division finals, the Oilers have had a little more trouble with the Norris Division champion Red Wings following a 4-1 victory in the first game of the series.

The Oilers were generally outplayed in Game 2 before a five-minute burst early in the third period put them ahead to stay in a 5-3 victory.

On Saturday night, they played well. But the Red Wings, with Steve Yzerman returning from an injury, played just a little bit better and came out with a 5-2 victory.

"We played bad in one, we blew one and we won one," Detroit's Lee Norwood said. "I look at it like we're back in the series. We could be going back to Edmonton 2-2."

For the second straight game, Glen Hanlon will start in goal for the Red Wings in place of Greg Stefan, who was injured in Game 2 in Edmonton.

Peete Showing Another Side

By Maryann Hudson
(c) 1988, Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Mention the name, Rodney Peete, and one thinks of touchdowns, not home runs. But playing third base for the University of Southern California isn't merely a springtime hobby for the Trojan quarterback. Although his .340 batting average won't help him in football, it could land him a job as a professional baseball player.

"I don't think people realize Rodney is a legitimate major league prospect," USC baseball coach Mike Gillespie said. "People lose track of that fact, because of football. We expect to see him get drafted this year (in the June baseball draft), yet because he has a year left in football, he'll get drafted low. But next year, he could be faced with two very attractive options."

A year from now Peete could be a high draft pick in professional football and baseball — a choice that he says he would love to have, although it will be a difficult decision.

"I hope I am in the position to make a choice next year," Peete said. "I'm glad I don't have to make a decision this year, because it would drive me crazy."

"When I play football and I walk down the tunnel, step on the (Los Angeles) Coliseum floor and see all the people in the stands, I say, 'This is it — I want to play football,' because there is nothing like that feeling."

"Then, when I hit a home run or get a couple of good hits, I say the same thing, 'This is it — I want to play baseball,' because there is nothing like that feeling either."

"But I know this — I won't be another Bo Jackson — I will choose. I don't think I could (be a) quarterback and play baseball, too. There is too much outside study and mental work at a quarterback position on the pro level."

Peete has been putting this decision off for years. In high school, at Sahuaro High in Tucson, Ariz., and later at South High in Shawnee Mission, Kan., for his senior year, Peete played both sports, plus basketball. When it came time for college, he was willing to give up basketball, but not the other two.

"Even before I would talk to a recruiter, I stated up front I wanted to play both baseball and football and that I wanted to play quarterback," Peete said.

"Most of the schools recruited me for football, and they would say, in a round-about way, that they had never had anyone play both sports. But I could tell they weren't going to go for it, so that would eliminate them."

Peete said that some Pacific 10 Conference coaches were more open to him playing both sports — among them former USC coach Ted Tollner, who recruited Peete, and present USC Coach Larry Smith, who also recruited Peete for Arizona. Smith agreed then, as now, that Peete could play baseball, even though it meant not having him at spring football practice.

"From a selfish standpoint, I want him at practice every day, but he is an exceptional athlete and an accomplished starter," Smith said.

"The biggest thing is that his family is behind him and academically he is able to keep up with the load. If he were not a starter in baseball, I would ask him to be at spring practice. But, if he is participating and competing in baseball, he can pick up in the fall."

"Rodney will have to work hard to get himself into football shape, but he'll be ready. With Rodney when baseball is over, it's over."

And when football is over, Peete says that all his attention turns to baseball.

"Coach (Smith) asked me to come out to spring practice if I had a day off, but this year I didn't have a day off so I never made it," Peete said. "But there is no pressure from him. The guys tease me a little — like when I go in the locker room, they will say, 'This locker room is for football players, not baseball players.' But I stay in touch with everybody, so it's fine."

Peete joined the baseball team in January, immediately following the Rose Bowl game, and had a two-week practice period before the season began. The rest of the team had been playing together since September.

His former position at shortstop had been given to Bret Barberie, a star community college transfer, and Gillespie asked Peete to play third base. Peete had always played second base or shortstop.

"Coach thought it would be best for the team if I moved to third, plus I was growing too big to be a shortstop," Peete said. "Playing third is different, it's all reaction, and there's no time to move to get your feet set. But I'm used to those quick shots coming at me on the football field. I think baseball helps me with football, because it helps my eye-hand coordination and keeps me sharp."

Peete did not have a chance to settle in at third. On the first pitch of his first at-bat of the season, he broke a bone in his hand and didn't start again until March 12.

But when he returned, it was more of an explosion. In his first eight games, Peete hit five home runs, three doubles and got 13 RBI. It wasn't a fluke. Currently, he's hitting .340 with 28 RBI and eight home runs. He has hit in 24 of 26 games, including a 19-game conference streak. His play at third base, though a little rocky at first, improved quickly.

"We were all astounded at what Rodney did when he returned, and he has continued to do well," Gillespie said. "Where he could have used some time to prepare for the season was at his new position at third base because it would have given him a chance to get a new look at hitters. But Rodney is an exceptional athlete."

Burke The Key In Devils' Win

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — With all that was bizarre in Game 4 of the Wales Conference finals, the ordinary prevailed.

Sean Burke was very good in goal and the New Jersey Devils won.

Burke turned aside 33 shots and the Devils got first-period goals from Dave Maley and Pat Verbeek in a 45-second span en route to a 3-1 victory over the Boston Bruins that evened the best-of-seven Patrick Division series at two games apiece.

However, this wasn't any ordinary playoff game. It was extraordinary because of things that happened off the ice before the game and because of the presence of three men on the ice during the game.

The craziness all started less than 12 hours before the game when the NHL suspended Devils coach Jim Schoenfeld for a run-in with referee Don Koharski on Friday. New Jersey felt the league did not act properly because it failed to meet with Schoenfeld and it got a court order from Superior Court Judge James Madden, giving Schoenfeld the okay to coach.

When Schoenfeld went behind the bench, referee Dave Newell, linesman Gord Broseker and Ray Scapinelo and alternate referee Denis Morel all refused to work the game, which ended up being delayed 67 minutes.

When the game did start, the officials were Paul McInnis, Vin Godleski and Jim Sullivan, three amateurs who had worked as NHL off-ice officials most of the season.

They could have made a big difference. They didn't, and one reason was because Burke never let the Bruins get in the game.

"We knew that the team that was able to mentally focus better after the delay would be the team that did better," Burke said. "We seemed to be able to do that."

The big difference, according to Burke, was that the Devils got going early, thanks mostly to Maley and Verbeek.

Maley gave the Devils the lead for good at 10:47 of the opening period by beating Boston goalie Reggie Lemelin with a 15-foot shot on a 3-on-1 breakin with Claude Loiselle and Doug Sulliman.

Shortly after Ken Linseman of Boston hit the goalpost with a shot, Verbeek stole the puck from Keith Crowder near the Boston blue line, skated in alone on Lemelin and beat him with a backhand after faking him out of position.

ECU Relay Team Takes Fourth Place

KINGSTON, Jamaica — East Carolina's 4X100 meter relay team took fourth place this weekend at the Jamaican Relays, while Lee Vernon McNeill took third place in the 100 meters.

The team, which consists of brothers Lee Vernon and Eugene McNeill, Kelvin Wrighton and Junior Robinson, turned in a time of 39:59. The four had previously qualified for the NCAA Outdoor Championships in Eugene, Ore., June 1.

Lee Vernon McNeill also took third in the 100 meters with a time of 10.27. Eugene McNeill, who had not been able to practice the last two weeks due to injury, just missed qualifying for the NCAA Championships in the 200 meters. He turned in a time of 20.69, good for fourth place. He needs a 20.64 to qualify.

McNeill will have another chance to qualify at the Twilight Meet at N.C. State Thursday night.

Koch Takes 1-Stroke Win At Vegas

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Gary Koch was candid about it: there were no major injuries to blame for his miserable season in 1987.

"It was burnout," he said. "All I could think about was going home." As a result, he dropped to a career-low 175th on the PGA Tour's money-winning list, and "my status was in limbo."

"At the start of the year, I didn't know whether I'd get in 10 tournaments this year," said Koch, who collected five titles and more than $1 million in career earnings.

One he did know about was the Las Vegas Invitational. He had been selected on that tournament's four-man team in the season-long Nabisco charity competition, and he was assured of a place in the field.

And Koch, his interest and enthusiasm rekindled, made the most of the opportunity, taking a one-stroke victory Sunday in the $1,388,889 tournament. Koch won $250,000 — more than he had collected in 11 of his previous 12 seasons on the tour. But that, he said, was not the point.

"Of course, we play for money. But there is no feeling quite like winning. It's the best feeling ever," Koch said.

Inkster Uses 2nd Chance To Gain Victory

SUFFOLK, Va. (AP) — Given a second chance on the 18th hole at the Crestar Classic, Juli Inkster made the most of her opportunity, and it paid off with a victory.

"This is great, just great," Inkster said after she won Sunday's LPGA tournament by nearly making a double-eagle at No. 18, the first hole of a playoff with Betsy King, Rosie Jones and Nancy Lopez.

Inkster, who made an eagle putt of almost four feet and broke a 1½-year winless drought, had a chance to avoid the playoff if she made an eagle when she played the 18th hole the first time around.

On the final hole of regulation, Inkster used a club she calls a "4½ wood" to go for the green in two on the 451-yard, par-5 hole, but pulled the shot left of the green beside some bleachers. She was given a free drop away from the stands, chipped up and one-putted from 12 feet for a birdie that left her at 209, seven under par for three trips around the 6,215-yard Sleepy Hole Golf Course.

King, Jones and Lopez all had chances to win outright on the 18th hole as well, but they ended up joining Inkster back on the 18th tee to start the fourth playoff in as many weeks on the LPGA Tour.

Once again, Inkster found herself in a position to go for the green on her second shot, and again she pulled out her "4½ wood" for the 220-yard shot. But this time, she tried to draw on past experience in placing the shot.

"I knew I wasn't going left with it this time, that's for sure," Inkster said. The ball landed in the center of the green and rolled within inches of the hole before stopping just past it.

Lopez, who had laid up in two, left her third shot about 30 feet away and in the first cut of fringe. She missed a birdie putt.

King put her second shot about 15 feet from the cup but missed an eagle putt. She tapped in for a birdie.

Jones, whose second shot landed in a weeded, marshy area short of the green, chipped to within 12 feet but missed the birdie putt.

Improved Putting Keys Casper's Win

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Putting has been Billy Casper's focus of improvement throughout the year and over the weekend it became his main weapon.

Casper, who won the $250,000 Vantage at the Dominion Senior Tournament by one stroke Sunday over defending champion Chi Chi Rodriguez, came from behind in the final nine holes using his putter to record three birdies.

"Earlier in the year I was playing terribly. But here I started putting better and it changed my whole game. It was just a matter of time before I started making some putts," Casper said after shooting a final-round 5-under-par 67.

However, Casper bogeyed the par-3 15th hole when his chip shot carried over the green to cut his lead to one stroke.

"I thought it would take a 66 or 67 today to win," Casper said. "So I had it about right. But I'll say this, I feel very fortunate that I won the tournament playing the last four holes one over par. That doesn't happen too often."

The victory was the eighth on the Senior Tour for Casper, who received $37,500 for the victory over the 6,649-yard Dominion Country Club course, and puts his combined career earnings at $2,635,842.

Despite the loss, Rodriguez still gave the gallery a show.

Needing only a six-inch putt to win the tournament, Casper had Rodriguez right by his side, helping him line it up.

Casper studied the putt. So did Rodriguez. Casper lifted his putter to read the break. Right on cue, so did Rodriguez. The spectators loved it. So did the cameras.

"Billy Casper is a great, great man. He never has gotten the credit he was due after winning 51 times on the PGA Tour," Rodriguez said. "Billy Casper is the king to me. I'm glad he won."

The competition between Rodriguez and Casper — who started the round tied for the lead with Dale Douglass — couldn't have been much closer and it came down to an errant second shot on the final hole by Rodriguez.

"I think Rodriguez and I put on a pretty good show over there today," said Casper, who finished the 54 holes at 205, 11 under par. "Fortunately he weakened on a few holes and I was able to win it."

On the par-5 18th hole, Rodriguez attempted to reach the green in two from 200 yards out, but his wood hit the green on the fly and skipped into a pond behind the green. After a stroke penalty, he made a 20-foot par putt, but it wasn't enough as Casper also parred the hole.

Blind Equestrian Takes Fourth Place

RALEIGH (AP) — Kristen Knouse, a blind Rutgers University student who battled organizers to be allowed to compete in a national college equestrian competition, got an ovation from onlookers and a fourth-place ribbon.

Miss Knouse, blind since birth and riding horses since she was 10, said she was surprised when she was at first disqualified from the national show despite winning a spot by taking a regional contest in Horsham, Pa.

"You see, I've never been kept out of anything before — not even when I was a kid," she said.

Miss Knouse convinced organizers she would not pose a danger to other riders, showing them her ability to track her progress by listening.

"It's easy. I can hear the horse's feet echo off the rail," Miss Knouse, 19, said in a telephone interview Sunday from her hotel room in Laurinburg, site of Sunday's 15th Intercollegiate National Championship Horse Show.

Miss Knouse competes in a type of riding called "hunt seat," in which riders in traditional English-style attire demonstrate various gaits as they go around the show ring and are judged on their form. She said she's tried her hand at jumping, but only in practice sessions.

Miss Knouse, from Medford, N.J., said she usually competes with "spotters," people posted around the horse show ring to warn her of corners and obstacles.

Drabek Just Misses No-Hitter

By The Associated Press
The list of no-hitters pitched in Pittsburgh isn't very long, and Doug Drabek will have to wait for another day to add his name to it.

Drabek pitched eight hitless innings before San Diego pinch-hitter Randy Ready led off the ninth with an infield single as the Pirates beat the Padres 6-2 on Sunday.

"You know what's going on but you try not to think about it," Drabek said. "I talked on the bench between innings because I didn't want to get by myself and start thinking about it."

Ready, who was pinch hitting for reliever Greg Booker, hit a grounder up the middle that shortstop Al Pedrique knocked down. Pedrique made a throw to first but it was way too late to beat the speedy Ready.

"It was a letdown when he (Ready) got the hit, but I thought, 'Let's get a double play so I can at least get the shutout,'" Drabek said.

He didn't get the shutout either. One out later, Marvell Wynne homered and Drabek finished with a two-hitter. Drabek, 4-2, struck out four and walked two for his 13th victory in 17 decisions.

"A few guys on our bench said, 'Let's break it up,'" Ready said. "I was just trying to get on base. I thought if he lost the no-hitter he might lose his concentration and we could get something going."

John Candelaria pitched a no-hitter against Los Angeles on Aug. 9, 1976 at Three Rivers Stadium and Bob Gibson of St. Louis no hit the Pirates in Pittsburgh on Aug. 14, 1971.

From 1909 until July 1979 the Pirates played at Forbes Field, and a no-hitter was never pitched there.

The only other major league no-hitter in Pittsburgh was by the Pirates' Nick Maddux against Brooklyn on Sept. 20, 1907 at Exhibition Park.

Elsewhere in the National League Sunday it was New York 5, Cincinnati 1; Houston 7, Montreal 2; Philadelphia 5, Atlanta 1; Los Angeles 12, St. Louis 6; and Chicago 13, San Francisco 7.

The game was scoreless until the Pirates got two runs off starter Jimmy Jones, 2-4, in the sixth.

Barry Bonds led off the sixth and reached on a two-base error by second baseman Roberto Alomar, and moved to third on catcher Benito Santiago's throwing error. One out later, Bobby Bonilla doubled to make it 1-0 and Sid Bream followed with an RBI double.

Jose Lind doubled in two more runs in the seventh. In the eighth, R.J.

Reynolds had a one-out RBI double and Junior Ortiz a run-scoring single to close out the Pirates' scoring.

Mets 5, Reds 1
Ron Darling pitched a three-hitter as New York beat visiting Cincinnati for its fifth straight victory and 10th in 11 games.

The Mets took a 1-0 lead in the first inning off Mario Soto on a double by Tim Lincecum, an infield out, and a single by Darryl Strawberry.

The Mets added four runs in the seventh, three on run-scoring singles by Howard Johnson, Kevin Elster and Keith Hernandez.

The Mets are 6-0 against the Reds this year.

Phillies 5, Braves 1
Bruce Ruffin pitched a three-hitter and retired the last 19 batters as Philadelphia beat the Braves at Atlanta.

Ruffin, 3-2, walked one and struck out four.

With the score tied 1-1 in the sixth, Von Hayes singled with two outs and Chris James followed with his third home run.

Astros 7, Expos 2
Bob Knepper allowed seven hits in seven-plus innings and Denny Walling knocked in a run with a double, leading Houston over Montreal at Olympic Stadium.

Knepper, 4-0, who walked only six coming in to the game, struggled with his control against the Expos. He walked five and had a wild pitch, all in the first four innings.

Knepper leads the NL with an 0.77 earned run average.

Dodgers 12, Cardinals 6
Mike Marshall's two-run double keyed a three-run fifth inning rally and Mike Davis had four hits and drove in three runs as visiting Los Angeles routed St. Louis.

The Dodgers then hammered Jose DeLeon and reliever Steve Peters for five hits and seven runs in the seventh, including Davis' two-run triple.

Don Sutton, 2-2, allowed six hits and five runs in seven innings en route to his 323rd career victory.

Cubs 13, Giants 7
Vance Law drove in six runs with a bases-loaded double and a three-run homer as Chicago beat San Francisco in 30-mph winds at Wrigley Field.

Leading 7-6, the Cubs pulled away with six runs in the seventh capped by Law's three-run homer.

Ryne Sandberg had four hits for the Cubs — including two triples — and is 15-for-37 since moving into the leadoff spot.

Bob Brenly hit two homers for the Giants.

A's Stewart Outduels Swindell

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

It's too early for a showdown, Dave Stewart said. But he's got the Oakland Athletics headed toward showdown territory.

Stewart remained undefeated Sunday, beating the Cleveland Indians 6-1 and sending the Oakland Athletics to a club-record 13th straight victory against another previously unbeaten pitcher, Greg Swindell.

"You get showdowns when you get to the playoffs and World Series. This is just another game," Stewart said, and already with an eight-game lead over Chicago in the American League West, the A's are headed in that direction.

In the rest of the AL, it was Texas 10, New York 8; Detroit 9, Seattle 3; Milwaukee 6, Kansas City 2 in 10 innings; Boston 10, Minnesota 6; and Baltimore 6, Chicago 5 in 10 innings.

Stewart, 8-0, pitched a four-hitter as the A's matched the longest winning streak in the majors since the 1987 Milwaukee Brewers started 13-0. Stewart walked two and struck out four in beating Swindell, 6-1, who carried a 1-0 lead into the fifth, when the A's scored four runs.

Tony Phillips started the A's fifth with a double. He scored when Carney Lansford's pop to short right-center glanced off the glove of right fielder Carmen Castillo in a three-way collision with center fielder Joe Carter and second baseman Julio Franco. The play was ruled a two-base error on Castillo.

Jose Canseco followed with an RBI single, then stole second and scored on Mark McGwire's double. One out later, Don Baylor's single scored McGwire.

"I lost a little confidence after that pop fly," Swindell said, "and that was the difference in the game. Stewart was lucky, and I wasn't."

Orlando Mercado, playing in place of injured catcher Terry Steinbach, led off the Oakland sixth with a homer.

Rangers 10, Yankees 8
The Yankees, who were swept for the first time ever by Texas in a three-game series, saw their lead in the AL East cut to a game over Detroit and 1½ over Milwaukee.

Curtis Wilkerson had three hits for the Rangers, including a two-run triple in the second inning, and rookie James Steels drove in three runs.

Jeff Russell pitched the fifth and sixth innings for the victory and got relief help from Dale Mohorcic, who pitched the final three innings for his third save.

Tigers 9, Mariners 3
Frank Tanana earned his sixth victory in seven decisions, allowing eight hits and three runs in 7 2-3 innings. Tanana gave up just two extra-base hits, but they both cost him: Mickey Brantley doubled and scored in the sixth, and Alvin Davis homered in his fourth straight game for two more in the ninth.

Luis Salazar hit a three-run homer for Detroit off rookie Mike Campbell, who allowed seven runs on eight hits in three innings for his second straight loss.

Guillermo Hernandez relieved Tanana and earned his second save.

Brewers 6, Royals 2
The Brewers won their ninth straight, getting four runs off Dan Quisenberry in the 10th inning to beat Kansas City. Dave Sveum knocked in the tie-breaker, and Mike Felder had a two-run single.

The Brewers have not lost since April 29 when they dropped a 7-2 decision to the Royals. Kansas City has lost five in a row, all at home.

The winner was Dan Plesac, who came on in the eighth for Ted Higuera and yielded an unearned run that tied the score 2-2 in the ninth. Higuera left with back spasms and may miss a start. He was due to fly home to Milwaukee on Monday for treatment.

Paul Molitor homered off Charlie Leibrandt, giving the Brewers a 2-1 lead in the sixth.

Red Sox 10, Twins 6
Dwight Evans and Ellis Burks both homered, leading Boston's 13-hit attack as the Red Sox defeated Minnesota. Evans drove in four runs and Burks three as the Red Sox erased a 4-2 Minnesota lead with three runs in the fourth, one in the fifth and four more in the sixth.

Minnesota got homers from Randy Bush, Kirby Puckett and Kent Hrbek.

Burks hit a two-run homer, his third, off losing pitcher Mike Mason to start Boston's four-run sixth.

Orioles 6, White Sox 5
Joe Orsulak hit a bases-loaded single in the 10th inning to lead Baltimore over the White Sox. The Orioles loaded the bases with a single, a balk and two walks, one intentional, for only their fourth victory of the season.

Doug Sisk got the victory in relief. Sisk came on in the eighth for Dave Schmidt, who had gone 3-1-3 scoreless in the ninth to send the game to extra innings.

Cal Ripken homered for Baltimore.

NFL Management Gets Court Chance

WASHINGTON (AP) — The NFL Management Council's day in court could turn into months or years as it responds to complaints by the league's union stemming from last year's 24-day players' strike.

Hearings on several grievances filed by the NFL Players Association, including a bid for back pay totalling up to $25 million, were to begin today before an administrative law judge of the National Labor Relations Board.

The NLRB general counsel already ruled against the NFL in the complaints, but the management council appealed the decisions and now has the opportunity to present its side.

"The general counsel usually rules on behalf of the union, so it came as no surprise when it happened in these cases," said Sarge Karch, legal counsel for the management council.

"This time (before the NLRB law judge), we have a chance for a hearing, with cross-examinations and witnesses. . . overall, I think our cases are very good and I would expect we would prevail."

Doug Allen, assistant executive director of the NFLPA, claimed the cases are "clear cut" in favor of the union.

Because there are a variety of topics to be presented before the law judge, and because of the vast amount of paperwork involved, it could take months, maybe years, before a final decision is reached. Even then it wouldn't necessarily be over because the loser would have the opportunity to appeal any ruling to the NLRB's full board.

The most important topic, at least in terms of the amount of money involved, concerns the NFLPA's demand that its members be paid for games played on Oct. 18-19 last season, three days after the conclusion of the 24-day players' strike.

Martin Says Bar Incident Will Keep Him Cautious

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — New York Yankees manager Billy Martin says that an incident in a nightclub in which he received a 40-stitch cut on his ear has convinced him to stay away from bars unless friends are with him at all times.

"It's embarrassing more than anything else," Martin said Sunday of Friday's altercation. "I'm going to be very selective where I go and make sure two or three coaches go with me at all times."

Martin said he had only two drinks at the nightclub, a statement verified by a waitress who served him at the club, Lacey.

"My drinking habits have come down to nil," Martin said. "I just don't feel like it. You drink when you're depressed. I'm happy."

Martin, 59, was married Jan. 25. But as Martin tried to put the incident behind him, media in both the Dallas-Fort Worth area and New York focused on discrepancies in Martin's story.

The Dallas Times Herald, in today's editions, quoted a Lacey employee as saying Martin threw the first punch, disputing all his previous statements.

"The remark that Billy Martin made about not getting a punch in was in error," the employee said. "The first punch was thrown by Martin. It was the only punch thrown. He was not struck by anybody. He was given that shove."

Another unidentified Lacey employee said Martin and two men were engaged in "name calling" in the bar.

The (unidentified) attendant on duty said name-calling continued in restroom, but there was no fight. As he was on his way out the door, Martin hit and cut the shorter of the two men with a punch, employees said.

Employees said Martin was shoved out an emergency exit, then hit his head on the wall, leaving a bloody streak down to the sidewalk.

"It was all one movement," an employee said. "There was no fighting, no punching. It was one swift movement."

Martin used strong language to dispute the comments made by Lacey employees. "Why do people insist on making up stories?" Martin said.

The Dallas Morning News says Martin told reporters he was assaulted by three men, while the police report has Martin claiming he was attacked by two men.

Martin told reporters that the assailants were waiting for him in the restroom and he did not see them before the assault, but the newspaper said he told police the men followed him into the restroom and he was able to describe them.

He also told reporters that no one else was present, but the police version was that the attack was witnessed.

The Dallas newspaper and the New York Times said a restroom attendant, Eric Counts, denies having seen the attack, but Arlington police spokesman James Hawthorne says a manager at Lacey confirmed Counts did see the scuffle.

"We haven't spoken to him yet, but if he was in there he would have seen the whole thing," Hawthorne said.

Martin speculated that the attendant had been instructed not to say anything.

"The manager doesn't want him to say that anything happened inside," Martin told the Hartford Courant. "They probably think I'll sue them."

Martin told police he, Hall of Famer Mickey Mantle and Yankees coach Mike Ferraro went to Lacey, a topless bar about a half-mile from Arlington Stadium after Friday's 7-6 loss to the Texas Rangers.

The Dallas Morning News reported that Mantle's son, Mickey Mantle Jr., also was with Martin.

Martin said he went to the restroom alone and three men jumped him. He said two men pinned back his arms while another hit him with a blunt object. Martin suffered head injuries and a cut on his left ear that required 40 stitches.

But an assistant manager of the nightclub said Saturday that the incident began with an argument in the club and moved outside before any punches were thrown.

Hawthorne said police are investigating that claim.

"We have heard reports that it did happen outside, but right now that is unconfirmed," Hawthorne said. "Right now we're still investigating the incident as if it occurred inside the club. But if during the course of our investigation we find it happened outside, we will address that."

Hawthorne said police have little to go on in their investigation.

"We don't have any suspects yet," he said. "The description he gave us could fit just about anyone who comes in and out of that club on any given Friday or Saturday night."

Hawthorne said police don't think Martin is fabricating the story.

"Obviously he's got the injuries to prove he was assaulted," Hawthorne said. "As far as we can tell, we're pretty sure that Mr. Martin didn't do anything to start the fight."

But he said the club where the incident allegedly occurred is not one where there are frequent fights.

While at the bar, Martin said he joked with some Rangers fans.

When they were ready to leave, Martin's party called for two cabs for the ride back to the team's hotel. Before leaving the bar, Martin went to the men's room, according to reports.

The Morning News quoted unidentified sources as saying that Mantle and Ferraro took the first cab and that Mantle Jr. waited behind for Martin.

When Martin, who will turn 60 on May 16, went into the bathroom, he said he was attacked.

"One guy grabbed me and pinned my arms from behind and another guy hit me on top of the head. The doctor said it had to be with a blunt instrument. Finally, some people came in and got me out," he said.

NBA Playoffs Continue

points and 15 assists. Terry Cummings led Milwaukee with 28 points, and John Lucas had 15.

Lakers 110, Jazz 91
Los Angeles opened the second round with outstanding defense, holding Utah to a playoff record eight points in the first period.

"Our offense has always been our forte, with our transition game, but our defense dictated the outcome of the ballgame for us," said Lakers' forward James Worthy, who scored 23 points.

The Lakers led 55-31 at halftime and scored as many points in the second quarter as the Jazz did in the first half.

"I think that the three days we had to prepare and the fact that they came off an emotional game meant that we had a great advantage," Lakers coach Pat Riley said.

The previous lowest first quarter in the playoffs was 12 points, by seven teams. It was the fourth time in playoff history that a team has been held to single digits in a quarter.

The all-time playoff low was six points by Atlanta in a 1986 playoff game against Boston.

Byron Scott finished with 18 points and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar 16 for the Lakers. Karl Malone, averaging 31.5 in the playoffs for Utah, was held to three points in the first half, but finished with 29. Thurl Bailey had 23 points and John Stockton 16 assists for the Jazz, who just completed their first-round series against Portland on Friday.

"This was the worst we can expect to be," Utah coach Frank Layden said. "We haven't had the advantage Pat had in getting his team ready."

"They're a far superior team to us. I hope we can make the series more competitive than it was today, but I'm not sure we can. I don't think we can beat the Lakers."

Lakers' reserve Michael Cooper was taken to a hospital for X-rays on his left foot, which he injured in the second quarter. The X-rays showed no fracture.

The fast beginning by the Lakers undid the Jazz.

"Before we blinked, the game was over," Utah Coach Frank Layden said.

"They worked as hard as any team we've seen all year," said Utah's brilliant point guard, John Stockton. "They packed it in, forced us to go to our second and third option."

"They went after every board. They tipped it and tipped it and tipped it."

The referees, according to Layden, cooperated by calling a loose game, looking the other way when elbows, hips and teeth were flying.

"I'm not complaining about the officials," stressed Layden, who has already been fined $10,000 for that offense this season. "The Lakers would have beaten us if I officiated."

'Tonight Show' Producer Tells About Johnny In Book

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fred de Cordova says anyone familiar with his 18 years as executive producer of NBC's "Tonight Show" would know his autobiography would not be a "Johnny Dearest."

"Johnny Came Lately" is a tell-all book about "Tonight Show" host Johnny Carson — except, as De Cordova tells it, Carson is a nice guy and he's enjoyed every minute of their association.

"I believe that when you've known someone as long as I've known Johnny," he said, "and your reactions are almost identical as to what's acceptable, there's no fear this would be a 'Johnny Dearest.' Some people say I go lightly on Johnny. But I've never harbored any differences."

The book "Mommie Dearest" was a scathing account of life with actress Joan Crawford by her adopted daughter, Christina Crawford.

"I'm a great fan," De Cordova said. "So it wasn't likely that I would say Johnny is a star but not a nice guy. ... We've had our differences, as anyone would over 18 years. But we've never carried anything over to the next day."

De Cordova twice booked himself as a guest on the show to talk about his new book. And twice bumped himself before the writer's strike shut down the show.

"The Tonight Show" returns Wednesday night, with Carson writing his own monologues and introductions. De Cordova said one of the first things he will do is re-schedule himself as a guest.

The title to the book was picked by De Cordova's wife, Janet, because the association with Johnny Carson came late in De Cordova's career, when he was already 60.

Carson has been host of the late-night show 25 years. "I can't imagine when Johnny will say he's had enough, and I don't think it's in the near future," De Cordova said, "but I can't think of anything else that would be as interesting and as much fun as this. It's the best job in television."

He said he and Carson work closely on the show, discussing guests and what they will do each night. "He cares," he said. "He does not phone it in. He works very hard and he wants everyone else to work as hard as he does."

De Cordova does speak out on other personalities:

Jack Paar, Carson's predecessor — "He came back against 'The Tonight Show' and he thought the audience might love him again. I don't say this rudely, but that was not the case. He was the same Jack Paar he was 10 years ago, but the audience's tastes had moved on."

Pat Sajak, host of the "Wheel of Fortune" game show — "He had a letter hand-delivered to Johnny telling him he was going to CBS to do a late-night talk show (scheduled to premier sometime in the new season). Johnny, in his fashion, wished him luck — but not too much."

Comedian Joan Rivers, one-time regular stand-in for Carson who briefly had her own late-night show on the Fox Broadcasting Co. network — "To my practiced eye it was apparent quite quickly she wasn't going to be strong competition to 'Tonight.' When she was Johnny's sub she was a good change of pace. She did well in the ratings, but there was heavy mail against her. Also — and this is self-serving — when she worked on our show she was under strict control. We really fought her on jokes. She said they went over in her night club act, but we'd tell her she was playing to Johnny's audience."

The book, published by Simon & Schuster at $17.95, also looks at De Cordova's long career on the stage, in movies and in television.

DeCordova, fresh out of Harvard Law School, got a job as a "gofer" in the theatrical offices of Lee and J.J. Shubert in New York in 1933. He became a stage manager, then a director. The last show he did was "Ziegfeld Follies" in 1943 with Milton Berle, Arthur Treacher and Ilona Massey.

After that, he signed with Warner Bros. One of the pictures he directed there was "Bedtime for Bonzo," which starred Ronald Reagan and a chimpanzee. He directed about 50 pictures in all before going into television.

He was the producer or director for "Burns and Allen," "The Jack Benny Show," "My Three Sons," and numerous specials for Bing Crosby, Claudette Colbert, Noel Coward, Lauren Bacall and many others.

"I have managed to involve myself with people who are extremely pleasant to work with and who are extremely talented, and that includes Johnny Carson," De Cordova said. "Carson makes me happy to go to work and my wife makes me happy to go home."

Berlin's Patience Growing Thin With Conductor's Ills

By KEVIN COSTELLOE
Associated Press Writer

BERLIN (AP) — For Berlin Philharmonic fans, legendary conductor Herbert von Karajan may have called in sick once too often.

The orchestra's "conductor for life" said he had an intestinal flu and couldn't conduct a heavily advertised Berlin concert on April 24.

A day later, he flew off to Japan for a 10-day tour with the orchestra, raising cries of protest, sparking letters to the editor and infuriating West Berlin officials who help bankroll the famed musicians.

Leading the charge against the 80-year-old maestro was city culture affairs chief Volker Hassemer, who vowed to probe the incident.

Gerhard Heldt, orchestra spokesman, declined comment on the dispute, adding that there would be nothing to say until after the orchestra returns from Japan.

As for obtaining comment from Karajan, Heldt said in a telephone interview, "You can say it is impossible to reach him now."

Starting in the fall of 1986, a severe viral infection kept Karajan off the Berlin Philharmonic podium for four months, and also forced him to stay home when the orchestra toured the United States and Japan.

Karajan has suffered many medical problems in recent years, including severe back pains that have forced him to cancel conducting appearances.

However, Michael Dieterici, a spokesman for the city's culture affairs chief, said Karajan also had called off appearances with the Berlin Philharmonic two or three times in the past under questionable circumstances.

He noted, for example, that during a tour of West Germany last November Karajan announced he couldn't mount the podium in Duesseldorf because he said he had food poisoning from eating tainted fish. Karajan later changed his mind and performed, but called off his appearance in Stuttgart during the same tour.

$25 million a year in subsidies for its various activities. However, Dieterici said he didn't know how much goes directly to Karajan.

Both Der Spiegel magazine of Hamburg and Berlin's Tagespiegel newspaper recently have carried lengthy reports about enormous sums of money Karajan's agents allegedly demanded last year for a concert tour to Taiwan. The Taiwanese later withdrew the idea, reportedly because of the money involved.

Berlin's leftist-leaning TAZ newspaper said recently: "Karajan loves the Japanese. They gladly buy his CDs (compact discs) and his music videos. 'But the Berliners also love Herbert. They don't always want to drive to Salzburg for him,' the newspaper added. Karajan is also renowned for the annual summer musical festival he leads in Salzburg, Austria.

The April 24 concert opened the city's turn at being the European Culture City of the year.

Keillor Makes 'Opry' Debut

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Garrison Keillor, known for "A Prairie Home Companion" radio show, made his Grand Ole Opry debut with help from country music greats Chet Atkins and Roy Acuff.

Keillor, who appeared Saturday on Acuff's segment of the 63-year-old show, was accompanied by Atkins on guitar.

"There's a tradition of dog songs in country music, such as 'Old Shep' and 'Old Blue,'" Keillor said, "but I'll bet this is the first time a song about a cat has been sung on the Opry."

Vacation

NEW YORK (AP) — Oscar-winning actor William Hurt is taking an extended vacation, according to this week's People magazine.

"This is my 20th year as an actor," said Hurt, who recently completed filming Anne Tyler's "The Accidental Tourist" with Kathleen Turner, and starred in "Broadcast News" and "Children of a Lesser God."

"I'm taking about a year off. I'm going to read, and I'm going to listen to what I'm supposed to be doing next," said Hurt, who won his Oscar as best actor for "Kiss of the Spider Woman."

Better World

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — Actress Susan Saint James told graduating University of Bridgeport students to volunteer their time and talents to help make a better world.

Ms. Saint James, co-star of CBS-TV's "Kate and Allie," said Sunday that America's "underground of greatness" are the millions of people who do volunteer work."

PBS Series To Focus On Schools

L.A. Times-Washington Post
WASHINGTON — PBS has a five-part, $3.9 million series on "The State of American Education" in the works for next spring — just when a new Congress and a new administration could be expected to start figuring out how to live up to all those campaign promises about the problem.

Roger Mudd will anchor the five hours, which will be a co-production of MacNeil-Lehrer Productions and Channel 26 here. Mudd's been doing commentaries on "The MacNeil-Lehrer NewsHour."

The $3.9 million grant represents the Chrysler Corp.'s first major underwriting effort for public TV. Education is reportedly a major interest of Chrysler chairman Lee Iacocca.

With a sharp national debate developing over the nation's educational problems, the documentaries will focus on how America's schools should be reshaped to meet the challenges of the 21st century.

Current plans call for a large portion of the five hours to be shot on location in Japan, where a stringent pre-university educational system is credited with much of that nation's postwar success....

The documentaries will consist of a "blend" of interviews and discussions among education leaders and thinkers from both sides of the Pacific on the complex, troublesome subject.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠KQ983 85 A73 ♣K102
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♣ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
 3 ♣ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Your fit for partner's club suit improves your hand dramatically, and you could easily have a slam if you don't have two fast heart losers. Blackwood is not the key to that information, so start a cue-bidding sequence. Bid four diamonds.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠KQ983 85 A73 ♣K102
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♣ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
 3 ♣ Pass 4 ♣ Pass
 4 ♣ Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—Partner has denied first-round heart control, but he could still have second-round control that he was unable to show. You should be safe at the five-level, so proceed with five clubs to announce second-round control of that suit. If partner still denies a heart control, bow out at five spades.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠KQ983 85 A73 ♣K102
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♣ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
 3 ♣ Pass 4 ♣ Pass
 4 ♣ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—You are surely going to contract for slam, but you could easily have a grand slam if partner has a reasonable club suit. Again, it's time to cue-bid your second-round club control—five clubs is the call.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠A1073 ♣K6 ♦K8 ♣AQ943
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♣ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
 3 ♣ Pass 4 ♣ Pass
 4 ♣ Pass 5 ♣ Pass
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Despite the fact that you have denied first-round heart control, partner is still looking for slam. It's time to tell him about your second-round heart control. Had it been a singleton, you would cue-bid five hearts; since it is the king, your correct call is five no trump, so that your monarch will be protected from a lead through.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠KQ983 83 A75 ♣K102
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♣ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
 3 ♣ Pass 4 ♣ Pass
 4 ♣ Pass 5 ♣ Pass
 5 NT Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—You are certainly going to bid a slam, it's simply a question of which strain. If you choose to play in spades, a heart lead through your partner's king could mean that the defenders take two tricks in the suit to beat you before you even get started. Protect his king by bidding six no trump or six clubs.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠KQ983 ♣K3 ♦KQ6 ♣K102
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♣ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
 3 ♣ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Don't even look for a cue-bid on this one. Since you have second-round control of every suit, the level of your contract will be determined solely by the number of aces partner holds. The way to elicit this information is by bidding four no trump—good old Blackwood.

Cartoon Exchange Breaking Down Traditional U.S.-Soviet Barriers

By TODD RICHISSIN
Associated Press Writer
SEATTLE (AP) — U.S. and Soviet artists are trying to draw the cultural gap between the two countries to a close, and the idea has people laughing.

The traveling "USSR-USA Cartoon Exchange" features cartoons from both countries that sponsors hope will erase walls of misunderstanding. Is it working?

"Da!" exclaimed the show's curator, Eric Swenson of San Francisco. "Big yes!"

"Cartoons communicate the universal, wordless art that can make people laugh," he said during the show's debut here this weekend. "I'm overwhelmed by the instant rapport the artists from the two countries develop. Listen to the sound in this building."

The sound Saturday in the gallery was laughter. Through a live "videophone" hook-up, about 10 U.S. artists serenaded a group of Soviet artists in Moscow. They requested "a typical American song" and got "Take Me Out to the Ball Park." The Americans got a long-distance ovation.

"I'm literally blown away by the quality and the humor," said Brian Bassett, editorial cartoonist for the Seattle Times who draws the syndicated comic strip "Adam."

"I guess that's an indication of how little our two cultures have touched," he said.

Iuri Ivanov, a 41-year-old cartoonist from Moscow on hand for the opening, picked his favorite American exhibit of the 40 being shown and sent it electronically to his colleagues in Moscow.

"I like it because it's stupid," Ivanov said, not being critical. "It describes the stupidity of the situation perfectly."

The cartoon by Wiley of San Francisco showed a complacent Soviet Bear and casual Uncle Sam standing in front of two television cameras, one camera Soviet, the other American.

The lens in the American camera shows the bear trying to devour Uncle Sam. Conversely, the lens in the Soviet camera shows Uncle Sam with a gun to the bear's head.

"Very definitely the perceptions are changing," Ivanov said. "The more of these type of exchanges, the more this picture won't be true."

Not even the most optimistic of the 50 or so people at the opening saw rosy Soviet-U.S. relations being painted with one stroke of the brush. Ivanov, however, hailed increased cultural exchanges made possible by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's policy of glasnost, which has opened doors for Soviet artists.

The few political jabs in the cartoons shown by the Soviet artists were light, and any political satire tended to generalize. Bureaucracy was lampooned, not the bureaucrats.

In one of Ivanov's watercolors, a man tied to a noose serves as the clapper in a bell. A smiling man in a uniform swings from the hapless clapper's feet.

"The common man suffers so others can enjoy," Ivanov explained. But he quickly pointed out the picture isn't representative of capitalism or communism.

"It's like that everywhere," he said.

Some Americans are slow to accept glasnost as anything more than a concept, he said.

For instance, he pointed to a picture by Milt Prigee, editorial cartoonist for the Spokane Spokesman Review.
