City Ponders Fate Of Old Neighborhood Landmark

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

For over 100 years it has battled the elements. Raging storms, frigid cold and scorching heat have tested its foundation. Today it is situated on the corner of one of Greenville's busiest intersections, largely hidden behind trees and brush.

Many new residents of the city are not even aware of its existence. Still, the Patrick-Arthur House, at 14th Street and Charles Boulevard, to many is a community landmark; its mere existence, a testimony to architectural endurance and strength of a day gone by.

That existence is threatened by what many refer to as progress.

On Thursday the Greenville City Council will consider a rezoning request regarding the property on which the house currently sits.

The owners, James F. Arthur Jr.

and Louis C. Arthur, are requesting the property be rezoned from CN (neighborhood commercial) and CH (highway commercial) to CS (shopping center).

If approved by the council, that zoning would allow as a permitted use on the property such developments as a dry-cleaning establishment, a bank, a liquor store or a restaurant.

According to City Manager Greg

Knowles, the owners of the home have expressed willingness to donate the home to the city. Such a donation might prevent the historic property from meeting a possible engagement with the wrecking ball.

But moving a house to another location cannot be done for free.

Knowles said a preliminary cost estimate to move the house is approximately $24,000, not including the additional $100,000 he estimates is needed to renovate the aging structure.

The issue which lies before the council is whether the house is worth saving, and if the community taxpayers should bear the brunt of the cost.

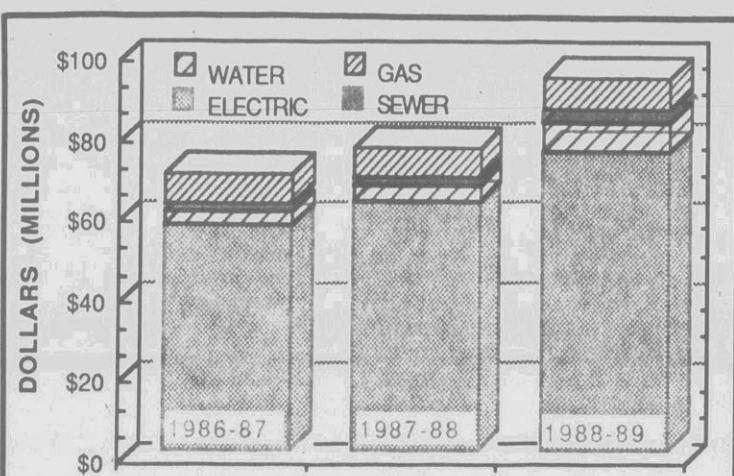

"There's different philosophies on this," Knowles said. "Some people might say that's a lot of money to spend on an old house."

Knowles said a memorandum has been sent to the council on the matter and a meeting has been arranged on May 23 to discuss the possibility of the city paying to move the structure. The next day the council again discusses city spending at a 1988-89 budget session.

Knowles said if the council should decide to pay to move the home, renovation money could be raised GUC BUDGET — This chart compares the proposed $92.01 million 1988-89 budget, to be presented at a public hearing June 6, for the Greenville Utilities Commission with the actual budget for the 1986-87 fiscal year and the projected yearend expenditures for the present fiscal year.

GUC OKs $92 Million Budget

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Utilities Commission gave approval Tuesday night to a proposed $92.01 million budget for the coming fiscal year.

Although the budget won't receive final approval until after a June 6 public hearing — a joint hearing on the GUC and Greenville city budgets — no major changes are expected.

The proposed $92 million for the 1988-1989 fiscal year compares to projected expenditures in the current fiscal year, which ends June 30, of $74.24 million. The proposed 1988-1989 budget includes $73.68 million for the electric fund, compared to a yearend projection for the current year amounting to $61.24 million.

The proposed water budget amounts to $7.25 million, up from $3.94 million this year, while the proposed sewer fund budget is proposed at $3.51 million, up from a projected $2.39 million from 1987-1988.

The proposed gas fund budget of $7.55 million is up from projected expenditures of $6.66 million this year.

The major increase in the electric fund — and the major item in the total budget — is a proposed $58.28 million for purchased power. That compares to a projected $48 million by the end of the current fiscal year. And revenues from rates and charges in the coming year are budgeted at $69.68 million, compared with a projected yearend figure this year of $59.89 million.

The proposed electric fund budget also includes some $1.8 million for turnover to the city in the coming year, as compared to a turnover of some $1.7 million this year.

The proposed water fund budget includes revenue of some $4.16 million from rates and charges, compared to a projected $4.08 million by yearend this year.

The largest change in the water budget is a total of $3.99 million proposed for capital outlay, compared to a projected total of $940,000 by the end of the current year.

Some $3 million of the proposed water capital outlay will go for implementation of recommendations contained in a hydraulic gradient analysis completed earlier this year.

Designed to improve and equalize water pressure throughout the GUC water system, the improvements recommended by the study — and proposed in the 1988-1989 budget — include, in part, replacing a half-million gallon water tank, built in 1963, on Greenville Boulevard, near the 14th Street intersection, with a new 1.5 million gallon tank, and raising two half-million gallon tanks (one in the industrial park, built in 1965, and the other on Greenville Boule-

Dukakis Gets Two More

By The Associated Press

Democrat Michael Dukakis hailed his lopsided presidential primary victories in West Virginia and Nebraska, declaring: "I'm working hard...to wrap it up." Jesse Jackson, his hopes of derailing Dukakis fading fast, nonetheless vowed, "We will take it all the way to the end."

On the Republican side, Vice President Bush, poised to pick up President Reagan's formal endorsement today, cruised to uncontested wins in Tuesday's contests in Nebraska and West Virginia. The vice president already has a mathematical lock on the Republican nomination.

But Bush's showing in Nebraska pointed to possible weakness in the fight to come this fall. Sen. Bob Dole of neighboring Kansas, who dropped out of the Republican race almost two months ago, still siphoned off nearly a fourth of the vote.

Even though he has mowed down all his rivals, Bush has made weak showings in some farm states.

Bush still has token opposition from former television evangelist Pat Robertson, who technically remains a candidate. But Robertson concedes he has no hope of getting the nomination now — Bush went over the top in delegates two weeks ago, in the Pennsylvania primary.

Reagan, who had pledged to remain neutral until the nomination fight was settled, was expected to finally bestow his formal blessing today at the White House. Reagan and Bush are also scheduled to appear together tonight at a Republican Party function in Washington.

With two more wins in his column,

Dukakis moved within striking distance of the 2,081 delegates needed to nail the Democratic nomination. According to the latest AP delegate count, Dukakis had 1,581 to Jackson's 942.

In West Virginia, Dukakis captured 239,159 votes, or 79 percent, to Jackson's 42,942 or 14 percent, with 95 percent of the precincts reporting. In Nebraska, Dukakis received 104,996 votes, or 63 percent to Jackson's 44,275 or 26 percent, with 99 percent of the precincts in.

Dukakis was winning all 37 of the delegates in West Virginia and 18 of the 25 in Nebraska.

Exit polls suggested Dukakis was beginning to make some inroads into Jackson's black support, which has been all but monolithic in contests to date. Only about 4 percent of West Virginia's voters are black, but about a third of them voted for the Massachusetts governor, ABC voter polls on Tuesday indicated.

But Jackson won 24 percent of the white vote in Nebraska, one of his best showings of the primary season among white voters, according to ABC. Dukakis, for his part, did well among Democrats in both states who voted for Reagan in 1984, which would bode well for him in a fall confrontation with Bush. And he was winning support across the ideological spectrum.

"Voters of different ideologies look at Dukakis and are seeing what they want to see," said ABC News poll analyst Doug Muzzio. "In a sense he's all ideologies to all voters."

Bush won 71,606 votes or 89 percent in West Virginia, with 69 percent of the precincts reporting. In Nebraska, he had 135,737 or 71 percent to Dole's 44,649 or 23 percent; Robertson had 10,188, or 5 percent, with 98 percent of the precincts in.

Commander Appointed

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Col. Glenn N. Sloan of Mount Olive has been named commander of Troop Command, North Carolina National Guard. The appointment will carry with it a promotion to brigadier general.

Sloan's selection was announced jointly by Maj. Gen. Charles E. Scott, the state adjutant general, and Gov. Jim Martin.

Troop Command is a brigade size element of over 4,000 soldiers assigned to geographic locations from Washington to Boone. It includes medical, maintenance, field artillery, quartermaster and combat aviation units.

A Duplin County native, Sloan joined the National Guard as a private in 1953 and received his commission as a second lieutenant in 1959.

He served as commander of the 691st Maintenance Company at Mount Olive with the rank of captain.

TORCH RUN — Law enforcement officers from throughout eastern North Carolina are taking part in a run that started today to support the statewide Special Olympics competition for mentally and physically disabled athletes beginning in Chapel Hill Friday. In Greenville, Capt. Nelson Staton, left, of the Greenville Police Department handed off the torch to Officer John Rouse of East Carolina University Public Safety to start the run. Officers from Greenville, ECU and Ayden carried the torch to Farmville, where it was to be taken on to Wilson by Farmville Police Department officers and then on to Chapel Hill by other officers from eastern North Carolina. A similar run started in Charlotte this morning by officers in the western part of the state. (Reflector Photo By Thomas Forrest)

Nancy Keeping In Touch

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nancy Reagan has not been in touch with her astrologer in "a couple of months" and it's uncertain when — or if — she will contact her again, White House officials say.

The astrologer, however, said she had spoken with the first lady this week.

"Will she again? I really don't know," said Mrs. Reagan's spokeswoman, Elaine Crispin. Previously, Mrs. Crispin had said Mrs. Reagan would continue to consult the astrologer, Joan Quigley of San Francisco.

Changing her answer, Mrs. Crispin said Tuesday, "How do I know when and if again?" White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater and Mrs. Crispin both said it had been "a couple of months" since Mrs. Reagan had been in touch with the astrologer.

But Quigley, in a telephone interview Tuesday, said she had spoken with Mrs. Reagan this week.

STORAGE FOR TRICYCLES — Putting an assembled framework on a concrete foundation are construction management students at East Carolina University who completed the new playground facilities project for ECU's School of Home Economics. The student builders designed the playground structures and built them at no cost for their labor. (ECU News Bureau Photo).

ECU Students Design, Build School's Playground Areas

By FRANCEINE PERRY
ECU News Bureau

Two classes of construction management students at East Carolina University got abundant "hands on" experience this spring when they designed, planned and built two playground areas for the preschool program operated by the ECU School of Home Economics.

The playgrounds, located behind the Home Economics Building on the main campus, feature two groups of swings, a horizontal ladder net climber, two platform slides (one incorporating a covered space to park tricycles), child-sized picnic tables and a teeter-totter or seesaw.

Each playground structure was assembled by a team of student builders, working under the direction of ECU graduate student Kurt Yanchenko of Burke, Va.

The work was done at the request of the ECU Preschool, Yanchenko said, and designed according to ideas suggested by teachers. Since the students' labor was available at no charge, the only cost to the preschool was the purchase of materials — salt-treated lumber, metal sheets for the slides, galvanized steel pipe and a custom-made net of nylon rope ordered from a local hammock factory.

Yanchenko estimates that the availability of free labor saved the preschool half of what the playgrounds would normally have cost. "The rule of thumb in building projects of this type is that labor is going to cost you about the same as you pay for materials," he said.

Safety for the young children who would use the equipment was a major consideration throughout the project. A notable safety feature of the seesaw makes use of discarded automobile tires — a tire partially buried in the ground near each end of the board prevents hard jolts.

The student builders — most of whom are concentrating in the construction management program offered by the ECU School of Industry and Technology — were required to estimate costs and develop a construction schedule.

"The work schedule was on a network diagram like those used in actual building projects," said Yanchenko. Working within the confines of class time during the spring semester, the students had first hand

Sixth- through eighth-graders participated in the countywide math contest at D.H. Conley High School. School winners were Rod Gorham, Ivey MacKenzie and James Boyd.

She also contacted the maker of her child's car seat when the buckle was difficult to operate and was sent a new buckle free. A.C.

Corps Considers Anti-Flood Dikes

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is studying the possibility of building concrete and earthen dikes to hold back the sea in flood-prone northeastern North Carolina, the Winston-Salem Journal reported today.

At least seven times in this century the Pungo River has risen up to flood Belhaven, the small Beaufort County town that lies in the river's flood plain. The worst of it came when a 1913 hurricane pushed the river seven feet above sea level, which is just one foot lower than the highest point in town.

Today, it is estimated such a storm would cause $10 million in damage. Farther north, the Pasquotank River has spared Elizabeth City the same fate that has plagued Belhaven, but not by much. The river has washed into the streets at least five times since Hurricane Hazel hit the town and left it flooded.

At the request of the state, Corps studied 5,800 square miles in 17 coastal counties for flood-control projects, said John C. Meshaw, a planner with the Corps' regional office in Wilmington. It determined that, along with Belhaven and Elizabeth City, the dikes could be beneficial and economically feasible for Windsor, in Bertie County, and five small communities in Hyde County.

Council To Study Zoning On N.C. 11

The Greenville City Council will consider the rezoning of the former drive-in theater site on N.C. 11 just north of Pitt Community College when it meets for its regular monthly action meeting Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in Council Chambers of City Hall.

The request by Gladys P. Tice to rezone two tracts on the 9.92 acre lot is one of several items to be considered Thursday.

Tract 1, a 1.8 acres strip of land located along SR 1147 is requested to be rezoned from RA-20 (residential-agriculture) to O&I (office and institutional), while Tract 2, 8.1 acres, has been requested to be rezoned from RA-20 to CS (shopping center).

A valid protest petition has been filed by J.C. Bowen regarding the matter, subsequently requiring a three-fourths favorable vote among the council for passage of the ordinance. The request was unanimously recommended for approval by the Planning and Zoning Commission.

The council will also consider a request by James F. Arthur Jr. and Louis C. Arthur to rezone 3.87 acres located on the southwest corner of 14th Street and Charles Boulevard from CN (neighborhood commercial) and CH (highway commercial) to CS (shopping center). The Planning and Zoning Commission recommended approval of the request.

In another rezoning matter, council will consider a request by Daphne L. Richardson to rezone a .344 acre tract located on Port Terminal Road adjacent to Cliff's Seafood Restaurant from RA-20 to CN. The Planning and Zoning Commission recommended approval of this request.

In addition, council will consider a request by Bill Dansey to annex 25.58 acres of lots 4 and 5 of Lionsgate Subdivision, located north of N.C. 43 and west of SR 1202. The area is contiguous to the primary city limits. The Planning and Zoning Commission recommended approval of this request.

Also to be considered are various amendments to the Budget Ordinance which would appropriate $12,340 for the purchase of an automobile for the police chief's use, along with additional office equipment; appropriate $1,302 for the purchase of two desks and two chairs for both the personnel and planning departments; appropriate $9,800 for payment of services regarding the recently completed police evidence and drug operations audit, and appropriate program income for community development eligible activities in the same neighborhoods from which those revolving monies originated.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Correct Choice

For Democrats, Unity Most Important

State Sen. Harold Hardison drew some criticism for his advertising attacking Sen. Tony Rand in their recent race for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor. But Hardison did the right thing for his party in announcing Friday that he would not call for a runoff election.

Hardison ran a surprisingly poor second to Rand in the primary election. Rand received 218,952 votes, or 43 percent, to Hardison's 132,696 votes or 26 percent. Parks Helms got 94,776 or 18 percent.

No doubt there were some swiftly moving events in the days following the election. To have had any hope of overtaking Rand, Hardison would have needed Helms support. He didn't get that Friday when Helms announced that he would support neither candidate in a runoff, feeling an endorsement could be detrimental to party unity.

Whether Hardison received any assurances from Rand that his supporters would receive some consideration probably won't be known. Nevertheless a runoff under the circumstances would have resulted in a likely Rand victory, and it could have meant considerable party disharmony. Thus with Hardison's decision to recognize Rand as the party's nominee for lieutenant governor, the Democrats are able to go in to what will be a spirited campaign with a semblance of unity.

From the Democratic standpoint never has unity been so important. The gubernatorial candidate Bob Jordan faces a popular and articulate Republican governor in Jim Martin. And now Democrat Tony Rand will face Republican Jim Gardner in the lieutenant governor's race. While the governor's and lieutenant governor's races are separate, the Martin-Gardner Republican ticket is an effective one.

Is it any wonder that Democratic leaders were pleading for no bloodshed in a runoff? Even though Democratic registered voters far outnumber Republican, Democrats easily stray when they become disgruntled.

Sen. Hardison could have justified calling for a runoff election. If he had it could have been a mean campaign. The Democratic party owes him some thanks for avoiding bruised feelings by declining to exercise his right to a runoff election.

To the editor:

This is response to your April 18 editorial, "From High-Risk To Accomplishment."

Identifying problems before they arise is finding problems that do not exist. Couple this with not attending to related problems that do exist and add the further likelihood of child abuse in the process. What do you have: agencies up to their usual?

Consider this scenario: A governmental agency makes a sweep of the city, identifying and listing pre-school children who meet certain socio-economic criteria, criteria that the society has concluded are 'future-bad' for a problem that the society does have, namely the high student dropout rate. Then the agency, along with others, establishes programs into which the identified children are enrolled. The list is well known and may follow the student into and throughout his school career. It is likely that inclusion of the child on the list would be detrimental to his or her self concept, as the child, being perceptive and hearing the talk, sees himself or herself in a low group already. The attempt by the society to 'jump-start' the child may even ruin a good battery, by placing the negative input onto a positive post.

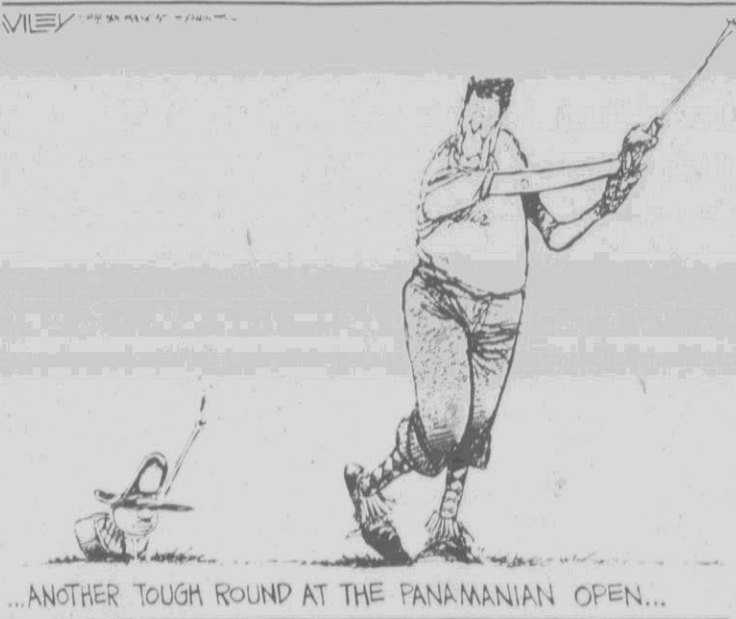

In the meantime, back at the school, the real problem persists: the early-grade teachers tend to have low expectations for some students, probably the same ones who are on the list. In addition, the same teachers lack the subject-matter competency that would enable them to provide appropriate learning environments for every student, especially for those on the list.

Society is blaming the child/parents for a problem that does not exist, while holding blameless a group of "professionals" who are the real problem. This process puts the child in double jeopardy, which, in a psychological sense, may be viewed as child abuse.

Write a happy ending to this play.

Bush's Defense: Lack of Knowledge

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Bush's defense on his two biggest campaign liabilities, the Iran-Contra affair and alleged drug dealing by Panamanian leader Manuel Antonio Noriega, is the same: a plea of ignorance.

On both counts, the Republican presidential candidate sounds alike:

•Although he once headed the Central Intelligence Agency and a presidential task force on drugs, he says he didn't know Noriega was involved in alleged drug trafficking until this past February, when a U.S. indictment was handed down in Florida.

•Even though a member of the National Security Council, he says he had no hint that U.S. arms were being sold to Iran in an effort to free hostages, or that proceeds were funneled illegally to the Contras in Nicaragua.

The vice president's continued denial of advance knowledge in both instances has hung over his campaign like a two-edged sword.

Either he knew more than he's admitting, in which case he's not telling the truth; or the candidate who claims vast experience in foreign policy was kept in the dark on two matters of crucial international importance.

Either way, it's a no-win political situation for Bush.

The vice president has stock ways of dealing with the twin issues.

Of Iran-Contra, he says he fully expects Democrats to exploit it as a major campaign issue, but claims that's only because they have little else to talk about.

And the political fallout so far has been minimal, he claims.

"It's been tried. It was used against me in the (GOP) primaries," he told reporters during a campaign stop last week in Idaho. "It doesn't show up — unless they (Democrats) have got data that I haven't seen — as a great vulnerability."

"I certainly can't say it's a plus,"

Bush conceded. "But, fortunately neither of them (Democratic candidates Michael Dukakis and Jesse Jackson) has any experience at all in international affairs. So I can offset the criticism by talking about the rest of the world. That's what I've tried to do."

On Noriega, Bush maintains he lacked clear knowledge that the Panamanian general was involved in alleged drug dealings before the indictment three months ago. Campaign spokesman Peter Teeley said Monday that Bush was aware of rumors of such activity but viewed them as unsubstantiated.

"We heard all sorts of accusations about the government in the Bahamas, Columbia, Bolivia, Peru, Mexico and Panama," Teeley said. "But the question is, when do you get concrete evidence that something of this nature is indeed true?"

As recently as last Thursday in Los Angeles, Bush reiterated his denial of any advance knowledge of Noriega's alleged drug dealings.

Asked whether he ever had been told of reports of ties between Noriega and drugs, Bush said, "Not that I was ever aware of."

Seeking to deflect criticism, Bush says the Reagan administration sought to bring Noriega to justice "once we found out he had gone bad."

He also has made an anti-drug theme a major thrust of his race, calling for a Western Hemisphere drug "summit" and for an international anti-drug force under the auspices of the United Nations. And he has challenged Dukakis and Jackson to show they're as serious as he is by joining him in supporting the death penalty for "drug kingpins."

Thus far, the Democrats have not gone for the bait.

Democratic front-runner Dukakis accuses the Reagan-Bush administration of "dealing with drug-running Panamanian dictators." And Jackson asserts: "The reason Mr. Bush has not led the charge to fight drugs is because he knew of the administration's dealings with the drug dealers."

The question of exactly when Bush learned of Noriega's alleged role in drug-dealing was first raised in the Republican primaries by Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas. Bush has been hit with the question by reporters at nearly every campaign stop since.

The accusations go to the core of Bush's campaign, since he trumpets repeatedly his experience in international affairs — with a resume that includes serving as CIA director, ambassador to the United Nations, envoy to the People's Republic of China and heading the South Florida Task Force, a federal drug-interdiction effort in the early 1980s.

Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., chairman of a Senate subcommittee on Latin American affairs, has said he would be surprised if Bush didn't have advance knowledge of Noriega's alleged drug trafficking, given his extensive credentials. "If he didn't know, that's almost as disturbing," Dodd says.

But Teeley said Monday: "The Democrats have nothing to attack Bush on: They can't attack him on unemployment, inflation, interest rates; they're all down. Personal income is up. Real wages are up. Taxes are down. There is a new arms-control treaty. So they are going to be looking for issues like this (Noriega and Iran-Contras) to attack him on."

Union Feuding, Disputes, Hit GM

'Even though GM's action against the two local officers seems warranted, the severe penalty imposed by the company may not have been wise and could cause serious repercussions for both the company and the union.'

more ammunition to foes of labor-management cooperation who contend that GM is a ruthless company concerned only with profit, not workers' welfare, and that the company, not union members, is getting help from top UAW leaders.

Beltran and Velasquez fought strenuously, but vainly, to prevent the introduction at the Van Nuys plant of the team concept of work that has already been a great success in several GM facilities. Not only is the Van Nuys local still torn by the bitter internal fight over the issue, but the two men have joined other foes of the team concept at GM to fight it nationwide.

Under the team concept, auto company employees work in small groups on entire parts of the car instead of individuals performing single, repetitive tasks. And, most importantly, they are given a voice in many decisions normally reserved for management.

Those opposed to the concept and to labor-management cooperation generally denounce it as a plot to weaken unions and allow companies to force employees to work faster than ever.

But almost all the officers of the international union, most local leaders and an apparent majority of members disagree with the dissidents.

They agree more with those GM executives who have realized at last that the jobs of GM workers and the future of the giant company itself depend in part on ending the traditional adversarial relations between the company and the union and giving workers a meaningful voice in company management.

Unfortunately, executives of GM and other auto companies help the dissidents' cause by rewarding themselves with enormous salaries and bonuses, thereby perpetuating the idea that the companies are unfair to workers.

UAW President Owen Bieber and Vice President Donald Ephlin said in a recent joint statement that the millions of dollars paid to GM executives "can't be justified rationally and constitutes an insult to common sense and fairness."

They pointed out the ridiculous contrast between the huge income the GM executives gave themselves in 1987 and the omission of any profit-sharing checks to workers because of "inadequate" company profits.

Bieber and other UAW leaders who believe in labor-management cooperation are incensed by the amounts paid to the auto industry executives. But those unionists are also aware that the contrast between the income of workers and executives is a strong talking point for the dissidents.

The dissidents' attack on their own union gets more attention than the massive job losses and other serious economic problems that are frustrating both them and the UAW leaders in today's hostile political climate created, at least in part, by the anti-union attitude and actions of President Reagan.

UAW President Bieber and others correctly argue that now, more than ever, there is an urgent need for labor unity if workable solutions to the problems are to be found.

Even when the dissidents seem clearly in the wrong, proponents of labor-management cooperation are not always helped when action is taken against the rebels, as in the case of the firings of Beltran and Velasquez.

GM might ease this latest imbroglio by temporarily suspending the two men as punishment for their apparent misconduct rather than permanently firing them. The same result could come out of the company-union grievance procedure initiated when they protested their dismissals.

Nationally, top union leaders have not done enough to stop the internal feuding. And they often respond in kind to the ugly attacks on them.

But the dissidents must offer more than calls for war with management and furious denunciations of UAW leaders who believe in cooperation with GM. Such conduct is hardly a meaningful contribution to the search for solutions to problems facing workers today.

Strength For Today

A song of several years ago, recorded by rock group "Fleetwood Mac," contains the line, "Down there, in the Sea of Love, where everyone would like to drown." I believe that every human being is longing to be immersed, to be lost, and to be reborn in an ocean of love. We go through life seeking intimacy, love and friendship. So often we are frustrated in our seeking. Even the best of marriages can never satisfy all the needs we have for love. Could it be that this built-in drive for love points to an ultimate source of love, in which we can indeed be immersed, only to find ourselves made whole?

No-Worry Attitude On Senate Treaty Inaction

Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is adopting a "What, me worry?" attitude on whether Senate inaction on the Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces treaty will cloud the Moscow summit due to start May 29.

And according to several private experts, the stance may be justified.

Not more than two weeks ago, summit planners were confident that President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev would be able to crown three years of summity by exchanging the final, fully ratified documents of the INF treaty the superpowers had been negotiating off and on since 1981.

After all, the pact had run the gantlet of hearings, past senators eager to hack away at the treaty, and it emerged with only a few dents. Head counters expected that only a dozen or so senators would vote no on final ratification and that the vote could occur before the summit.

To complete the INF process in time for the Moscow meetings seemed doubly important because it had become clear that Reagan and Gorbachev were still far from reaching their goal of a 30 percent to 50 percent cut in long-range missiles and bombers — the so-called START agreement.

The leaders would be saying, in essence, "Well, we've stumbled a bit on START, but let's not dwell on it; signing this final, ratified, INF pact will give us a chance to remind the world we can make progress on arms control."

In the past two weeks, however, glitches have emerged in the INF treaty, mostly over the meaning of verification provisions, and the Senate has decided to postpone ratification work indefinitely. The administration is optimistic it will clear away the differences in time for the summit, but that is unlikely to leave the Senate time to act.

Is the administration worried the failure will hurt the summit?

"Of course not," State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman said on Tuesday.

Like other U.S. officials who spoke on condition of anonymity, Redman said the differences between the United States and the Soviets are merely technical and will be resolved. If the Senate fails to act in time for the summit, it can do the work afterward and the ratification documents can be exchanged later in the year.

The treaty will eliminate ground-launched missiles with ranges between 315 miles and 3,125 miles.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz was in Geneva today to meet Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A.

Shevardnadze to try to resolve the INF differences and the administration officials predicted that if Shultz and his negotiators are willing to shake hands on a settlement, the Senate will go along.

Janusz Bugajski, an expert on Eastern Europe who works at the Center for Strategic and International Studies, believes that with the failure of the superpowers to reach agreement on long-range systems, the spotlight at the summit will be on human rights and regional issues rather than on arms control.

Theoretically, Gorbachev could try to win propaganda points by raising the Senate's ratification delay as an alleged example of U.S. hesitancy to end the arms race, Bugajski said.

"But that's not likely, because Gorbachev wants the summit to be a success for domestic and international reasons," Bugajski said.

"We don't need an INF treaty ratified in time for the summit, we just need it not to be scuttled and that's not going to happen," said Andrew C. Goldberg, a RAND Corp. consultant and expert on Soviet military affairs.

"Remember, the vast majority of people in the Senate want to ratify the INF treaty eventually," Goldberg said.

James T. Hackett, a foreign policy analyst at the conservative Heritage Foundation, asserted that the Senate's inaction on the INF treaty reflected members' unease with the treaty despite overwhelming constituent support for approval. The last-minute disagreements over verification "give them a chance to keep nit-picking so they don't have to ratify it."

Hackett added: "Gorbachev wants the summit to show his nation he is a commanding figure on the world stage. Reagan wants to put on a show to keep his approval rating high for as long as he can.

"If they can't sign an INF treaty they'll find something else to do with some pizzazz."

Martin, Royall Tangle Over Role Of ABC Panel In Setting Budgets

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin has raised the ire of the Advisory Budget Commission by introducing a supplementary budget without the ABC's advice and calling the panel's previous assistance "the equivalent of a blank stare."

Martin said in a letter to Sen. Ken Royall, D-Durham, chairman of the commission, that he "did not insult or reject or undermine the Advisory Budget Commission" in crafting a budget seeking an additional $588 million for the biennium.

"I simply opened up the meetings, and the ABC atrophied," Martin wrote. "Because I tried mightily last year to work with the commission and develop a constructive relationship, and because I tried repeatedly to get your help and advice, without response, my conscience is clear."

"Last year, after I presented my budget first to the Advisory Budget Commission, the only response was the adoption of a resolution of acknowledgement, which carefully avoided endorsing or opposing my budget or anything in it. It was the equivalent of a blank stare."

Royall blasted Martin for not revealing his recommendations to the commission before making them public.

"Last week the legislature received your recommendations for budgetary change for next fiscal year," Royall said in a letter to Martin. "But the people of North Carolina received much more — an insult to our history of cooperative budget-making."

While the Supreme Court has held that the governor is not required to submit his budget to the commission, Royall said Martin had violated a long-standing tradition. He said the governor's action will create more work for the Legislature and lengthen its stay in Raleigh during the short session that begins June 2.

"When the Advisory Budget Commission was created 63 years ago, the idea was to have the governor, while exercising the constitutional prerogative as director of the budget, begin the budgetary process in a spirit of cooperation with the legislative body that would review the budget requests and act on them in the appropriations process," Royall said in his letter.

"A great deal has changed with the judicial interpretation of the role of the Advisory Budget Commission and with the political climate of our state," he said. "But the idea for cooperation has stood the test of time.

"You have placed the General Assembly in the position of having to undertake a great deal of preliminary analysis and work that otherwise would have been handled by the Advisory Budget Commission. In a time when the legislature wants to finish its work without wasting time, you have endangered this intent."

The Advisory Budget Commission is comprised of legislators and private citizens appointed to advise the governor in preparing the state budget.

Martin said Royall's letter "shows that you are as disappointed as I am that the Advisory Budget Commission has lost its usefulness. From the tone and language of your letter, you appear to want to place the blame for that on me. That won't stand up."

Some Say It's Too Much

Study Panel Says Solons Need 111 Percent Pay Hike

RALEIGH (AP) — A legislative study panel's recommendation that the salaries of state lawmakers be increased 111 percent drew mixed reviews from legislators, candidates and administration officials.

Phil Kirk, chief of staff for Republican Gov. Jim Martin, said some salary increase was justified for legislators, but he said doubling salaries from $10,140 to $21,375 "would not be politically popular or advisable."

Sen. Ken Royall, D-Durham, co-chairman of the study committee making the recommendation, and House Speaker Liston Ramsey said the increases would help attract the best qualified candidates for public office.

"I hope it goes through because I think it is for the betterment of the state," Royall said. "You can't expect people to serve over here and not have a living wage. There is no way. To really do your job you need to be fairly compensated."

"One hundred and eleven percent of nothing is still nothing," Ramsey said. "The base (salary) is so low. We are either going to pay these members or we are going to continue to lose them. I don't believe the people of this state expect these people to work for nothing."

But House Minority Leader Betsy Cochrane, R-Davie, said the proposed raise was too high.

"Serving in the General Assembly is a public service and it calls for some sacrifice," Ms. Cochrane said. "This is going to take some serious deliberations to jump this much."

State Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, the Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, said he would not support the proposal.

"I do think that some increase is certainly justifiable," Rand said. "We may be able to do some things in a minor way, but I don't think we'll do anything like this."

The 14-member panel also recommended that the speaker of the House receive a full-time salary; that members of the Council of State get 15 percent increases; and that the salaries of Cabinet officials, who are appointed by the governor, be set by the N.C. Personnel Commission, but not exceed those of Council of State members.

The salaries of Council of State members would rise from $64,092 a year to $73,800.

The House speaker's salary would increase from about $28,000 a year to $66,204, but he would no longer receive living expenses. Ramsey, D-Madison, said he received about $24,000 a year in living expenses.

The panel did not consider changes in the governor's salary, which is $105,000 a year — the highest in the nation.

The state Constitution prohibits legislators from raising their own salaries, so the proposal would not take effect until next year, when a new legislature takes office. Even if the panel's proposal is not approved, salaries would increase 5 percent, to $10,644 under a pay raise approved last year.

Former state Rep. Al Adams, a Raleigh lawyer who served on the study committee, said the raise was based on the average daily salary for professional employees of the General Assembly's Fiscal Research Division and the N.C. Budget Office. He said the average was $171 a day and that lawmakers worked an average of 125 days a year.

North Carolina ranks 28th nationally in legislative salaries. If the proposed increase is approved, the salary of a rank-and-file lawmaker would be 11th highest in the nation.

Legislative salaries vary in neighboring states. In Virginia, lawmakers are paid $18,000 a year, while in South Carolina they receive $10,000 a year.

Ex-Workers Want Tests

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — Former employees of a Schlage Lock Co. Inc. plant in Rocky Mount have organized health screenings to help determine whether they have illnesses related to their work.

The Schlage plant is scheduled to close by June.

Phillip White, a spokesman for the Committee Against Schlage Lock Plant Closing, said former workers have complained of respiratory problems and at least 12 people have died of cancer in the last four or five years. He said the screenings would help determine if there were similarities in the illnesses and working conditions.

Joe Momeyer, a Schlage spokesman in San Francisco, said in a telephone interview Tuesday that the company had conducted safety programs that would protect employees from health problems. He said the company never had been charged with violation of safety regulations by state or federal agencies.

White's group has charged that the company had not given employees adequate warning of possible hazards from toxic chemicals while working and had not provided adequate benefits. The group has called for state investigations of drinking water in residential areas near the plant.

Stephen Reid, public information officer for the Solid Waste Management Section, said Tuesday trace amounts of chloroform and 111-trichloroethane had been found in well water near the plant property but did not pose a health threat.

Storms Spawn 4 Funnel Clouds

By The Associated Press

While four funnel clouds were reported, most of the severe weather predicted for North Carolina was limited to squalls and hail that resulted in no injuries and little damage, officials said.

"Luckily, we did not get as much severe weather as we anticipated," said Benjamin Woods, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service at Raleigh-Durham Airport, as a trough of low pressure leading a cold front sparked the storms.

An amateur radio operator reported a funnel cloud at 3:17 p.m. Tuesday near the intersection of U.S. 17 and N.C. 258 outside of Jacksonville, according to Ron Castle, a weather service spokesman in Wilmington Castle also said quarter-size hail was reported in the area.

Donald Decker, assistant Onslow County emergency management coordinator, said Onslow County Sheriff's deputies surveyed the area where the funnel cloud was reported, but found no damage.

At 4:14 p.m., the Craven County Sheriff's Department reported a funnel cloud just north of New Bern, near Bridgeton.

Assistant Craven County Emergency Management Coordinator Stanley Kite said officials from his office and from the Craven County Sheriff's Department found no damage. He said golf ball-sized hail caused minor damage in Bridgeton, but the worse damage reported was broken tree limbs.

In Gaston County, a pilot reported a funnel cloud about 20 miles northwest of Charlotte about 6:15 p.m. Randy Bryant of the Gaston County Sheriff's Department said there were several traffic accidents around that time, possibly due to heavy rain and hail. But he said there were no indications the funnel cloud caused any damage.

Mecklenburg County police reported a funnel cloud near the Interstate 85 in southern Mecklenburg County about 6:50 p.m.

In Duplin County, power lines were knocked down by high winds and residents were without power for about an hour Tuesday night.

"We've had marble-sized hail that have completely covered the ground in parts of the county," said Jo Outlaw, dispatcher at the Duplin County Sheriff's office. "There's been thunder and lightning, the wind has been up and some trees have blown away."

In Winston-Salem, about 5,100 homes lost power due to the storm, but it was restored by 9:15 p.m., a Duke Power Co. spokesman said.

A storm moving through the Piedmont area caused a tree to fall on a vacant home in Burlington about 8 p.m., smashing the roof, said officer Mary Owen of the Burlington Police Department.

At about 7 p.m. in northwest Bladen County, the National Weather Service reported about an inch of hail covered the ground.

Parachutists Injured As Private Plane Crashes Into Plowed Field

RAEFORD, N.C. (AP) — Six people, including five Canadian parachutists, were injured when a plane crashed into a plowed field after taking off from a private airport near Raeford, officials said.

Federal Aviation Administration officials and Hoke County Sheriff's Deputies said the Cessna 182, modified to carry parachutists, crashed Tuesday morning after its engine reportedly sputtered and the aircraft banked left into a soybean field and a stand of trees.

The plane's pilot, Anthony Thacker, 26, of Raeford, was in serious condition Tuesday evening in the intensive care unit of Moore Regional Hospital. He is being treated for head and facial injuries and a broken leg, hospital spokesman Gary Greene said.

Also listed in serious condition was Steve Adams of Kettleby, Ontario. Adams, a parachutist, was being treated in the hospital's intensive care unit for neck injuries, Greene said.

Others hospitalized were parachutists Terry

Irving, 26, of Ottawa, with a hip injury and Martin Cahais, 27, of Scarborough, Ontario, with a back injury.

Two other parachutists were treated and released after the crash, Greene said. They were identified as Robert Stanley, 23, of Waterloo, Ontario and his brother John Stanley, 26, of Waterloo.

An FAA official speculated that overloading the plane by putting too many parachutists aboard could have caused the crash. Investigators were expected to search the wreckage today to look for the cause.

"It appeared, from the information we were able to gather, that the plane reached an altitude of about 100 feet before there was engine trouble and the pilot tried to turn it around and come back," Hoke County Sheriff's Detective Ed Harris said. "They were lucky that field was soft ground because it cushioned their fall somewhat."

Gene Paul Thacker, the pilot's father, said he was preparing to film the Canadians jumping when the accident occurred.

"I was setting up the video equipment to film the jump and I heard Tony run up his engine before taking off and it sounded strong," Thacker said. "I wasn't watching but I heard him go and then I heard the engine sputter like it wasn't getting enough fuel and I thought 'oh, no.'"

Thacker was one of the first rescuers on the scene of the crash.

"The plane was all torn up," he said. "When it hit, it hit at an angle and the impact ripped the engine right off and then tipped it on its (landing) gear and bent the wing. If it hadn't have hit like it did, that engine might have gone right into the cockpit. They were lucky."

The Canadians were training at the airport for Canada's national competition later this summer. Teams from Great Britain, Oman, and two Canadian teams are at the airport for three to six weeks of training, most to prepare for national competitions, Thacker said. Some of the teams may compete in exhibition competition at the Summer Olympic Games in Seoul, Korea, he said.

THANK YOU D.D. GARRETT

Qualified • Experienced • Leadership

Your votes and support for me in the recent primary election for County Commissioner representing consolidated District "A" of Pitt County was an expression of confidence of which I am extremely grateful.

As you know the margin between the two leading candidates was a mere 139 votes, and no other candidate received a majority of votes. I am therefore asking for your vote and support in the run-off on May 31, 1988.

If elected, I will do all within my power to represent you and your concerns in matters dealt with by the Board of County Commissioners.

As for your support in the May 3rd balloting, words can hardly reveal my heartfelt and sincere appreciation.

Murder-Suicide

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Onslow County authorities say three people found in a mobile home were shot to death in what appeared to be a murder-suicide.

A woman and a small child were found shot to death in a bedroom Tuesday, and the body of a 27-year-old man was in the living room of the trailer at Big Pines Mobile Home Park, said Onslow County Sheriff B.G. Woodward. He said the victims had been dead for approximately 48 hours.

The names of victims have not been released.

Woodward said all three apparently were shot to death with a 9-millimeter automatic handgun found near the man's body.

The bodies were found when a neighbor stopped by to check on the family at the Pine Top Trailer Park on N.C. 24. "She saw the body of the man in the living room, and she called for help," Woodward said.

Tax Problem

STONEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — In this Rockingham County town, there's a new twist to the old saying, only two things in life are certain — death and taxes.

If the town's largest taxpayer doesn't pay its taxes, the town of approximately 1,000 residents could die, officials say.

Stoneville Furniture Co. owes Stoneville $71,200 in back taxes. The company, the largest in the 1-mile-square town, has a $93,000 tax bill, 42 percent of the town's entire property tax revenues of $221,000.

Stoneville Furniture paid the town $20,000 in February, but some of that was used to pay the interest on the debt because the bill was then five months overdue. Taxes were due last September.

The town is already feeling the effects of its interrupted tax income. The town's annual Fourth of July celebration has been canceled, a savings of about $7,200 for the day-long festival, officials said.

Durham Faces Loss Of 2,400 GTE Jobs

DURHAM (AP) — Nearly 2,400 Durham jobs may be in jeopardy as GTE Corp. considers moving its Southern base to Tampa, Fla., or Atlanta as part of the consolidation of seven regional headquarters, industry analysts say.

"Because of the proliferation of computers and high technology, geography might not play a tremendous role in the decision," said analyst Geoff Johnson, of Argus Research Corp. in New York. "But Atlanta is a more major business center and maybe they have some executives (who) would want to live there."

Other analysts said Tampa could be favored because GTE's operations there are so large compared with its operations in Durham. In addition to housing a regional headquarters that generates nearly twice as much revenue as operations in Durham, Tampa also is home to GTE Data Services Inc., another telephone division.

However, Durham might have the upper hand because its workers are more experienced in working in several states, a key ingredient in making a regional headquarters work smoothly, said GTE South spokesman Stephens Toler.

GTE already has warned Durham workers to expect "significant" layoffs regardless of the company's decision.

GTE won't say how many of its 101,000 telephone workers nationwide will be laid off as a result of the restructuring, but managers are expected to be hardest hit, followed by their support staff. Eventually, hourly workers could feel the pinch as the restructured staff cuts more costs, analysts said.

When GTE recently restructured its Midwest telephone operations, 5,000 people lost their jobs, but many of them left via attrition and early retirement programs. Such programs are expected to be offered again in this newest effort.

Merger Suit

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — The Lumberton City Board of Education has filed a motion in U.S. District Court to stop the merger of Robeson County's five school systems as approved by voters March 8 until federal officials approve the merger.

Under the merger's terms an interim school board for the composite school system would have taken office April 1. But merger opponents, by appealing to the State Board of Elections for a recount, have prevented the board from meeting.

The merger passed 11,153 to 10,888, and state officials said Tuesday merger opponents dropped their appeal Monday and certification is expected soon. But the motion filed May 6 seeks a preliminary injunction on any merger action because neither the merger nor the election vote and results were precleared by the U.S. Attorney General or the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia as required by law.

Judgeship

GREENSBORO (AP) — Greensboro lawyer N. Carlton Tilley has been nominated by President Reagan for a federal judgeship in North Carolina's Middle District.

Reagan, acting on the recommendation of U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., nominated Tilley April 26 for the judgeship being vacated by U.S. District Judge Hiram Ward, 65, of Denton, who is planning to take senior status. Senior judges can continue holding court, but normally reduce their caseload.

Tilley must now be confirmed by the U.S. Senate. Andy Hartsfield, Helms' legislative assistant, has said he expects the Senate to confirm Tilley before November.

In addition to Ward, Tilley, 44, a former U.S. attorney, would join Middle District judges Richard Erwin, Frank W. Bullock and Eugene Gordon, who is on senior status.

Witness Says Gunman Wore 'Horrid Grin' While Shooting

By BILL SIMMONS
Associated Press Writer
OZARK, Ark. (AP) — A gunman wore a "horrid grin" as he aimed his revolver at office workers during a Christmas rampage in which he allegedly killed 16 people, including 14 of his relatives, a witness testified.
R. Gene Simmons, 47, stepped over the body of one of his victims, "took a stance and pointed the gun at me," Juli Money testified Tuesday in Simmons' murder trial, holding her arms out with hands clasped to show how he held the gun.
"I screamed, 'No!' and dived behind some boxes," she said. "He was grinning. He had a horrid grin that looked like false teeth and his eyes were wide open."
Ms. Money, 35, said she grabbed her head thinking she had been shot "because I felt the heat from the bullet" that whizzed past her head.
Simmons, a retired Air Force master sergeant, is on trial in the Dec. 28 deaths of former co-worker Kathy C. Kendrick, 24, and James D. Chaffin, 33, in Russellville. Four people were wounded during the shootings. The state is seeking the death penalty.
Simmons is to be tried July 18 for murder charges in the deaths of 14 relatives, including his wife, his children and his grandchildren. The bodies were found at his home near Dover after the shootings in nearby Russellville. Police said the 14 were killed during the Christmas holidays.

According to police, Simmons used two .22-caliber revolvers to kill Miss Kendrick, who friends say rejected Simmons' amorous attention, and Chaffin, who apparently was a chance victim. Police said Simmons had a grudge against most of the people he is accused of shooting.
Chaffin was shot in the right eye at point-blank range as he opened a door at Taylor Oil Co. after he and Ms. Money heard two shots fired in the office area, Ms. Money said. The gunman had already wounded the company president, Rusty Taylor.
It was Chaffin's body, Ms. Money testified, that Simmons stepped over before aiming at her.
David Salyer, who was shot in the forehead, also said Simmons fired with a grin on his face.
Simmons, who had worked for Taylor and Salyer, then went to a nearby law office where Miss Kendrick worked and stood in front of her desk, according to another witness, Brenda Jones. Miss Kendrick returned to her desk a short time later and said, "Can I help you?"

Simmons had his hands in his pockets but jerked his right arm up and started firing a pistol, Miss Jones said. "He missed her at first," she said. "She just stood there. He kept shooting. Finally, he hit her."
Prosecutor John Bynum said in his opening statement Tuesday that Miss Kendrick, a legal secretary, was shot at least four times in the head as she sat at her desk.
About 60 spectators were present in Franklin County Circuit Court, including relatives of some of Simmons' family members.
Pat McNulty, 36, of Bryant, whose brother was among the dead family members, said, "We've got our grief to deal with and Gene Simmons has got God to deal with."
Judge John Patterson replaced one juror with an alternate during a closed hearing. The judge said someone reported that Smith said something derogatory about Simmons.
The trial was moved here because of extensive pretrial publicity.

Voodoo Practitioner Wins Execution Stay

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A voodoo-practicing death-row inmate who wanted to die was denied a last meal of sacred earth, and gritted his teeth and mumbled when his execution was stayed less than six hours before it was to take place.
James Smith won a reprieve from the U.S. Supreme Court on Tuesday evening, after his mother filed an appeal claiming he was mentally incompetent. No vote among the justices was released.
Alexzene Hamilton of Indianapolis also contended that mitigating evidence in his case was not allowed to be considered by jurors who sentenced Smith to death.
"I'm praising God right now," Mrs. Hamilton said after hearing of the stay. "That's all I can say, I just thank God."
Smith, waiting in a holding cell next to the death chamber, gritted his teeth and said something inaudible upon hearing the news, said Texas Department of Corrections spokesman Charles Brown.
He was later transferred back to his death-row cell at the prison's Ellis I unit. Smith, 37, was convicted of the 1983 robbery-slaying of Houston insurance office manager Larry Rohus.
Testimony at his trial showed he was tackled by witnesses while fleeing the shooting scene and that a gun he was carrying was linked to the slaying.
Smith has no attorney and resisted attempts for legal help from capital punishment opponents.
"I don't understand all this clinging to life," Smith said in a recent interview. "Life is a temporary situation. The spirit moves on. Death is like eating a prune in the morning. It's a natural function."
Tuesday morning, he requested

"Rhaekunda dirt" for his final meal later in the day, a request prison officials did not honor. Texas A&M University soil experts said the dirt is believed to be eaten in voodoo rituals.
Smith, a former tarot-card dealer in New Orleans, has said he believes in and has practiced voodoo.
"I'm very disappointed," said Raymond Rohus, the victim's brother. "He was caught red-handed. I don't know what else they can do besides go ahead and take care of their obligation to get rid of the guy."
"Hopefully the judges will reconsider," Rohus said.

Postal Cuts Could End By Fall

WASHINGTON (AP) — Post office window service and collections could be back to normal by the end of summer, but that won't mean the end of the agency's financial struggles, according to Postmaster General Anthony Frank.
Frank said Tuesday that he is committed to restoring service that was cut earlier this year in the face of congressionally imposed budget restrictions.
But reopening counters and restoring Sunday sorting and collection means finding $9 million a month in savings somewhere else, he said.
With luck, he said, that can be accomplished by late summer. But he added that services will be restored only when he is sure that they can be kept open.

Hundreds of construction projects for new postal facilities also were canceled or delayed to save money.
"Long after people forget about the windows being closed," building projects will still be delayed, land will have been sold to someone else and construction costs will be even higher, Frank said.
Frank, who took over as postmaster on March 1, said that explaining the need for service cuts at the same time rates are rising has been difficult.
The rate increases imposed on April 3 don't help, he said, because the accounting system mandated by Congress results in the increased income being counted as a reduction in the national debt, not as extra money for the agency.

On other topics, Frank said:
—A system may be considered in which notices would automatically be sent out for people filing change or address forms.
—The agency should help serve as a go-between for other federal agencies and the public, such as by making catalogs of Government Printing Office booklets available in lobbies. The current program to deliver an AIDS booklet to every home is a good example, he said.
—It is "amazing" how many suggestions for new stamps he receives. He said he doesn't see anything wrong with issuing a stamp to honor singer Elvis Presley, although so far the independent committee that makes the final choices has turned down that idea.

Move To Limit Computer Trading Backed By Critics

By RICK GLADSTONE
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A broad move by five big brokerages to limit computerized stock dealing has won enthusiastic endorsement from critics who say program trading caused unwarranted price convulsions and alienated investors.

But some question the effectiveness of the halt on index arbitrage program trading because four of the firms will continue using the strategy for their clients' investments.

Kidder Peabody & Co., Morgan Stanley & Co., PaineWebber Inc. and Salomon Brothers Inc. on Tuesday announced limitations on program trading for their own accounts only. Bear Stearns & Co. said it had imposed a total suspension.

The moves marked the most aggressive voluntary steps yet to calm an outcry over the strategy that's blamed for destructive volatility in the stock market before and since the October crash.

"It is necessary for all to work toward the goal of restoring confidence in and guaranteeing the vibrancy of the marketplace," John Gutfreund, chairman and chief executive of Salomon, said in a statement that reflected the other firms' views.

"Any action taken by member firms to tone volatility and increase investor confidence should be applauded," said Richard Torrenzano, spokesman for the New York Stock Exchange, which also has taken steps to limit program trading. "I think it's meaningful and a step in the right direction."

The firms reportedly have been under enormous pressure from stock exchanges, customers, lawmakers, and even their own salespeople to coordinate action to control the practice, which involves the massive purchase and sale of stock index futures and the underlying stocks on which they are based.

Although the action won't mean an end to program trading, some traders said it should help limit the volatility because the brokerages had used the technique much more frequently than their customers did.

"We think it's a right (action) for the capital markets in the long run, and will encourage individuals to come back to the market," said Anthony A. LaCroix, chairman, president and chief executive of Advest Inc., a Hartford, Conn.-based securities firm that has urged tough restrictions on program trading.

Nevertheless, experts say proprietary program trading by these brokerages has accounted for only about 20 percent of the total volume of trades attributed to the strategy. Some critics said this leaves much uncertainty.

"Liquidity in our financial markets has dried up, and this may be the first sight of rain we've seen in a long time," said Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., chairman of the finance subcommittee of the House Energy and Commerce Committee in reaction to the suspensions. "However, with customers still in the index arbitrage business, the question remains if intra-day volatility will increase or decrease."

Capital Guardian Trust Co. Chairman Robert G. Kirby, a member of the presidential panel that investigated the stock-market crash, said the big brokerages probably had determined that bad publicity about the technique didn't outweigh the profits they derived from it.

"These guys decided that life's too short," Kirby said. "I think they get the blame for all the volatility in the marketplace, but all the volatility is going to go on, because of their customers."

Pilots' Union Says Crash Report Wrong

WASHINGTON (AP) — The airline pilots union disputes the National Transportation Safety Board's finding that pilot error caused the Northwest Airlines crash in Detroit that killed 156 people last August.

The NTSB in a report on the accident Tuesday faulted the captain and co-pilot of Northwest Flight 255 for failing to follow the proper checklist before takeoff and forgetting to extend the plane's flaps and slats, devices that help provide lift.

The McDonnell Douglas MD-80 crashed shortly after taking off from the Detroit airport Aug. 16, 1987, killing 154 people on board and two on the ground. The only survivor was a 4-year-old passenger, Cecelia Cichan.

The two pilots that were killed were members of the Air Line Pilots Association, which represents 40,000 commercial pilots. The union said it will continue its own investigation into the accident and hinted it may petition the NTSB to reconsider the government findings.

"The facts will eventually show that there's a gremlin running around in the MD-80," said Steven Cramer, the ALPA representative at Northwest.

Cramer was alluding to the contention by the pilots union all along that a mechanical failure could have prevented the flaps from being set properly. Even if the pilots forgot to set the flaps a warning device was the real culprit because it didn't warn the pilots of their error as it was designed to, the union says.

Mexican Women Earn Livelihoods In Border Plants

By CAM ROSSIE
Associated Press Writer
CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Friday is the best, and worst, day of the week for Socorro Chavez, a maquiladora mother.

She is one of the thousands of Mexican women now able to earn their own livelihoods working in the foreign-owned assembly plants in northern Mexico known as maquiladoras.

Maquiladoras have made life better for most of them, but for others it is still difficult to shake off all of the hard times the left behind.

It is that way for Socorro Chavez, just as Friday is her best day and her worst day.

When the whirl of the plant's sewing machines stops at 5:30 p.m. on Fridays, Ms. Chavez catches a bus for downtown, then another that takes her to a children's home.

It's a two-hour journey across town for a weekly reunion with her two children, Marco Antonio, 14, and Guadalupe, 10, who stay at the home while she works.

That is the best part of Friday, taking the children to her own small apartment for the weekend.

The worst part is seeing how the children are outgrowing their clothes and dodging the landlady who is asking her to vacate the apartment.

Then, there's shopping for wholesome food.

"The week I have to pay the rent, we don't buy food," the 34-year-old mother says.

Ms. Chavez's husband went to work "temporarily" as an illegal alien in the United States 10 years ago.

He wrote and sent money home the first year. The frequency of the letters dropped off and finally stopped.

He never returned.

Ms. Chavez, who has just a fifth grade education, moved her family from the small Chihuahua state town of Namiquipa to the state capital, the city of Chihuahua, and worked five years there as a seamstress.

But, she said, "I just couldn't make it on what I earned. Sometimes I would put the children to bed without dinner."

"We didn't have heat so I would borrow the neighbor's iron, and iron the bed to get it warm," she said.

In that way, life has improved for Ms. Chavez and her children since they stepped off the bus two years ago in Ciudad Juarez, a city of 1.1 million people just across the border from El Paso, Texas.

Ms. Chavez got a job the day after she arrived as a seamstress in a maquiladora, which makes goods for export, mostly across the border to the United States.

For maquiladora owners, the advantage is Mexico's low wages; for Mexico, it is jobs for its people and increased export income for its coffers.

Ms. Chavez makes about 80,000 pesos a week, nearly $35 at an average exchange rate of 2,300 pesos to the dollar.

Her job is stitching sections of leather work gloves at Wellmax, a subsidiary of the Chicago-based glove manufacturer Wells Lamont.

Her pay is double the minimum wage in Juarez and more than triple what she had earned for similar work in Chihuahua.

Instead of the one-room apartment she and her children had in Chihuahua, they now have two rooms, two beds and some used furniture she bought with money she saved from her earnings.

By staying at the home, the children don't have to spend their after-school hours in an employee cafeteria waiting for her to finish work as they did before.

"My boss worked hard to help me find a place so the children could be together during the week," she said.

But, she added, "Sometimes I get so lonely for them that I go there and sleep."

Wellmax is one of about 200 foreign-owned maquiladoras in Juarez. More than 330,000 people, the majority of them women, work in the maquiladora industry that now vies with tourism as the country's No. 2 source of foreign exchange for Mexico after petroleum.

Another maquiladora mother at Wellmax is Ana Maria Lemus, second-born in a family of 17 children.

Things now are much better for her and much less difficult than they are for Ms. Chavez.

In Ms. Lemus' past life is her father working 30 years as a cook in a Juarez restaurant while her mother stayed home to care for the children in a two-room adobe hut.

"My mother would cry because we didn't have money for food," said Ms. Lemus, now 33.

At age 15 she dropped out of junior high school in El Paso to work at cleaning a curios shop. She earned $5 a week.

"I had to stop studying to help my parents pay for the other kids," she said.

A Family Love Is Right

DEAR ABBY: This concerns the letter from the man who wrote to say that when he was 19, his parents disowned him and threw him out of the house when he told them that his 20-year-old girlfriend was pregnant. (He married her, and became very successful.)

After not speaking to him for six years, the father wrote his son saying his business had gone bankrupt and he asked if the son could let him have $500 a month "for a while." You were on the side of forgiveness and advised the son to meet with his father and work out some way to help him.

Your readers clobbered you. The score: Readers, 289; Abby, 1.

Well, when I was 28, unmarried and pregnant, my father gave me a blank check and told me to have an abortion. I refused.

Although my parents lived less than a mile from me, both chose to ignore me and my child for two years. Then out of the blue, they called to ask if I would meet them at a nearby park so they could see their grandchild.

My husband forbade me to go, but I went anyway. Now I am grateful that I learned early in life that it is far better to love and be loved than it is to be right.

Abby, change that score to: Readers, 289; Abby and Joy, 2.

DEAR JOY: Since I published the score showing how badly I was "clobbered," I received enormous support for "my" side. Add more than 5,000 for Abby — and still counting!

DEAR ABBY: Apropos the letter from Mary Jane who married Jack McCartney when he was 61 and she was 14, and now, two years later, she writes to say that they are very happily married and the parents of two beautiful children:

Perhaps your readers would be interested in some other marriages with similar age differences:

Justice William O. Douglas was 64; his bride was 29.

Melvin Belli, 64; his bride, 29.

Henry Miller, 79; his bride, 29.

Edgar Allan Poe, 26; his bride, 13.

President Grover Cleveland, 49; his bride, 21.

Bing Crosby, 53; his bride, 23.

Luther Burbank, 67; his bride, 28.

Leopold Stokowski, 63; his bride, Gloria Vanderbilt, 21.

Darwin would probably say that such marriages were eugenically good. But I know a women's libber who says a girl has to marry a much older man to find maturity similar to her own. — GILBERT VAN VRANKEN, CLAREMONT, CALIF.

DEAR MR. VAN VRANKEN: Forgive the old cliché, but just because there's snow on the roof doesn't mean there's no fire in the furnace.

March Of Dimes Has 50th Anniversary

March of Dimes volunteers from throughout the state, including Greenville, recently attended a reception at the North Carolina Governor's Mansion.

The reception celebrated the 50th anniversary of the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation.

The guest speaker was Jane Massey, area director for the March of Dimes. She stressed the need for prenatal care so that North Carolina's high infant mortality rate can be reduced. She told about ways N.C. March of Dimes chapters are working with medical professionals to reduce the number of pre-term babies.

Tony Voyles, March of Dimes national ambassador, read a proclamation from Gov. Jim Martin urging citizens to support the March of Dimes.

Jennifer Howell, ambassador for Greenville and the Eastern Carolina chapter of the March of Dimes, was recognized. She and her mother, Vonda Howell, said they were supportive of the Greenville WalkAmerica event held Saturday to raise money for the March of Dimes.

Fern Lace Panels Highlight Sweater

Pat's Pointers
Pat Trexler

There's nothing more delightfully feminine than this airy, cotton sweater with its wide, softly rolled collar. Pair it with all your summer separates.

Romantic panels of fern lace, and two different cables adorn the front of this cap-sleeved warm-weather top while the back is done in fascinating double seed stitch. It's an irresistible summer look you can knit at a fantastic price.

Double strands of sport-weight "thick and thin" cotton yarn knit to a gauge of four stitches to the inch. Easy-to-follow directions are given for small, medium and large sizes to fit body bust measurements of 34, 36 and 38 inches respectively.

To obtain directions for making the Summer Sophistication Sweater, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-050188 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. K-050188 by sending a check or money order for $15.95 for small or $19.95 for medium and large to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, instruction leaflet and cotton yarn in your choice of peach, Ming blue or off-white.

Dear Readers: Here's a variation on making a one-row, horizontal buttonhole that was sent to me several years ago by Edna F. of South Windsor, Conn. You'll find it very smooth and firm.

Work the desired number of stitches before starting the buttonhole. Step 1: Bring yarn to front of work; slip one stitch from left needle to right needle; pass yarn to back of work and drop it there. (Yarn is left hanging and will not be used during the next two steps.

Step 2: Slip another stitch from left to right needle and pass the first stitch over it, thus binding off one stitch. Step 2 is repeated until the desired number of stitches for buttonhole have been bound off.

Step 3: Slip the last bound-off stitch back to the left needle and turn work to wrong side.

and pass it between the needles to the back. Cast on the same number of stitches that were bound off plus one more, using the cast-on method described below. Before placing the last loop onto the left needle, bring yarn through to the front to form a dividing strand between the last and next-to-last stitches. Transfer last loop to left needle and turn work so the right side is again facing you.

Make a two-needle cast-on by starting a knit stitch in the first stitch on the left needle. Do not push the new stitch off, but pull the right needle forward and slip the new loop back onto the left needle to create a new stitch. Repeat until desired number of stitches have been cast on.

Many readers have responded to the letter from the woman who developed bursitis in one arm when knitting for long periods of time. The almost universal solution offered was for her to use circular rather than straight needles for all her knitting. This makes a great deal of sense as circular needles are more supple and put less strain on the arms and shoulders.

Some people think to use circulars only when knitting in rounds, but you can just as easily knit back and forth with them. And you have the added bonus of never losing one of a pair.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market started off sharply lower in active trading today, as share prices were hit by growing anxiety about the prospect of higher interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was down 19.07 points at 1,984.58 at 10 a.m. EDT. The broader market also showed deep losses. Declining stocks surpassed advanced by 6-to-1 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 643 issues losing, only 151 gaining and 334 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board in the first half-hour of trading was 38.68 million shares.

The nervousness about higher interest rates was fueled today by comments by British Chancellor of the Exchequer Nigel Lawson that there could be an internationally coordinated boost in rates.

Lawson, who made the comments in an interview with the Wall Street Journal's overseas editions that was published today, noted that a coordinated effort by West Germany, Japan and other leading nations to hike interest rates "is certainly possible" following the Federal Reserve's increase in short-term rates to curb U.S. inflation.

Separately, White House economist Beryl Sprinkel confirmed that the Federal Reserve has nudged up short-term rates in recent weeks. He defended the move as making sense in the face of a strong economy and recent growth in the money supply.

The statements sent stock prices tumbling in Tokyo early today, as the key 225-share Nikkei Index fell 251.20 points, or 0.92 percent, to close at 27,161.05.

Share prices also headed lower in London and Frankfurt, West Germany, before Wall Street opened for trading.

The NYSE's composite index was down 1.48 at 144.27.

through various government grants. He also said funds could possibly be raised by private sources.

One member of the community who would like to see the house saved is Steve Blades, a member of the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission.

Blades said the Patrick-Arthur House is an example and one representation of Greenville's heritage and tradition. He said it is one of the oldest farm-house type structures in the community, probably built in the 1870s.

Blades said if the city could move the house, it could be weatherized to halt deterioration until funds could be raised to restore it. He said it could possibly be returned to a state similar to the Fleming House, currently home of the chamber of commerce.

Blades currently is supporting the formation of a zoning concept called historic districting, which would protect architecturally significant buildings from demolition without some level of review.

"Currently there is nothing on the books which could prevent the demolition of that structure," he said.

Blades said historic districting would provide a determined period of time, such as 180 days, for community representatives and city officials to fully consider historical and cultural implications regarding a structure's significance, and to allow time for private groups, or individuals to gather enough funds to possibly save all or part of it.

As for the Patrick-Arthur house, Blades said if the structure is elected to be brought down, he hopes parts of the structure such as mantels and flooring can be saved. He also hopes the city will visually preserve the house through video documentation.

"It appears the ball is in the city's court now," Blades said.

Meanwhile, Nancy Jenkins, a member of the council, says she is very interested in historic properties.

"I think its definitely worth consideration," she said of the $24,000 proposal.

ECU Set To Defend CAA Title

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

On one corner of his desk, East Carolina baseball coach Gary Overton has a picture of the scoreboard at The Diamond in Richmond, Va., site of the Colonial Athletic Association's annual tournament.

The picture shows the linescore of last year's championship game, and "Congratulations, East Carolina," on the message board under it. East Carolina defeated James Madison in the championship game to win the CAA title.

Now, with the tournament set to get underway again on Thursday, Overton would love to have another picture for the other corner of the desk — this one of the championship game for 1988.

The Pirates go into the six-team tournament as the number three seed, having tied for second place in the final CAA standings. They drew number three since they lost two of three to George Mason, with which they tied.

James Madison, which lost only once this year, in the final CAA game to William & Mary, is the top seed and is favored to win. However, tradition may be against the Dukes as the favored team has seldom won the tournament. Last year, ECU went into the field as the number four seed, battling through to win.

The Pirates will face William & Mary, the fourth seed, in the opening round at 3 p.m. Thursday at The Diamond. Sixth-seeded Richmond takes on Madison at 11 a.m. while number five UNC-Wilmington meets Mason at 7:30 p.m.

The double-elimination event is scheduled to continue through Sunday. The winner receives the league's automatic berth in the NCAA regionals.

"I think we're in a good bracket, since we won't have to meet the number one team until at least the third round," Overton said. "We wanted to finish number one, but more important was how we finished the regular season, and I think we finished strong. We scrambled back to tie for second place and should carry a little momentum into the tournament. We played well the second half of the season."

While Overton believes that Madison will be hard to beat in the tournament, he feels that the rest of the league shows a great deal of parity. "There's no weak sister when the team picked to finish first finishes last," he said in reference to Richmond's Spiders.

In William & Mary, the Pirates will be meeting the only club to stop the Dukes during the regular season. And Overton is certain that the Pirates will be facing the Indians' ace, Bill Prezioso, second in the league in earned run average this year.

Prezioso was 7-4 on the year, with a 1.97 era in 82.2 innings. Only JMU's Dana Allison, at 1.64, had a better era.

The Pirates, beat the Indians in a 5-0 shutout against Prezioso, in their league meeting, but Overton warns that such a feat will be difficult to repeat. He will send Gary Smith to the mound in the opening game.

"Jake Jacobs beat Prezioso the first time and maybe he should go again in this one. But Smitty can go and then come back later on to help us out. Jake is less likely to be able to come back as quickly. That's why we're going with Smitty in the opener. Jake will probably go in the second game."

"William & Mary is much improved over last year and we were fortunate to beat them all three games," Overton said.

As to the game strategy, he feels that William & Mary will expect to have trouble scoring runs. "If they score a couple of runs early, I think we'll have trouble against them. But if we get our bats going and score early and take a lead, that will put a lot of pressure on them."

A victory by the Pirates would send them into the 7:30 p.m. game on Friday against the UNCW-GMU winner. A loss would pit them against the Richmond-JMU loser at 11 a.m. The loser of that game goes home.

The Pirates go into the tournament led by third baseman Kevin Riggs, hitting .361. Steve Godin, the right fielder, has a .344 average, followed by second baseman John Adams at .326. First baseman Jay McGraw, who leads the team in homers with eight, and back-up catcher Dom DiGirolamo, both are hitting .300.

The Pirates will go with their usual lineup of Chris Cauble behind the plate, McGraw at first, Adams at second, David Ritchie at short, Riggs at third, Tommy Yarbrough in left, John Thomas in center and Godin in right.

And, if all goes right, Overton will be clearing space on his desk for another picture — of the 1988 championship scoreboard.

Citrus Bowl, Charlotte Move May Be In Future

RALEIGH (AP) — Atlantic Coast Conference officials are still discussing a possible tie-in agreement between the league and the Florida Citrus Bowl, but they have apparently agreed on the Charlotte Coliseum to host the 1990 basketball tournament.

The News and Observer reported today league officials are having informal discussions about a tie-in with the New Year's Day postseason football game in Orlando, Fla.

"From our standpoint, it's something that we see as a possibility down the road," said Florida Citrus Bowl chairman Chuck Rohe in a telephone interview Tuesday. "If our game goes to a tie-in arrangement, the ACC is the logical place for us to look."

"Right now, it's nothing more than casual conversation. The ACC is a good league that is going to get better. It's no secret that N.C. State and North Carolina are going to turn some heads," Rohe said.

ACC Commissioner Gene Corrigan said Tuesday a binding bowl contract is "very likely" in the future.

"I'm not saying that it would be the Citrus Bowl. But yes, I think the league will go to a tie-in situation at some point in the future, maybe the near future," Corrigan said.

A high-ranking ACC official said that a host agreement between the ACC champion and the Citrus Bowl could depend upon what kind of television contract the game is granted after the conclusion of its current deal with ABC.

Meanwhile, officials told the newspaper an agreement with the Charlotte Coliseum's management had been worked out for the ACC tournament. The official announcement is scheduled for today at the conclusion of the ACC's spring meetings in Myrtle Beach, S.C.

Vikings Find Some Punch, Dump North Lenoir, 9-1

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley's baseball team has suffered through some weak hitting during the course of this season, but the Vikings didn't lack for any offensive punch Tuesday night against North Lenoir.

Conley avenged an earlier 4-3 loss to the Hawks by pounding out 14 hits en route to a 9-1 win in a game played almost entirely in a moderate to heavy rainfall. The Vikings' win left them a half game behind the Hawks for first place in the Coastal Conference standings.

"Tonight we sat back and didn't lunge at the ball," said Conley coach Allan Wilson. "Sherwood Wilder (3-4, 3 RBI) hit the ball well. Bronswell (Patrick, 3-4, 1 RBI) hit the ball well. We probably should have scored some more runs."

The improved offense, along with a five-hit pitching performance by freshman Hal Conger, moved Conley to 13-5 overall and 7-2 in the conference. North Lenoir falls to 14-6 and 8-2.

"We couldn't get the breaking ball over," said North Lenoir coach Wayne Barwick. "We throw three pitches, a fastball, a breaking ball and a changeup. Against this team, we wanted to use breaking balls and changeups."

"They hit the ball. When you hit the ball like that, you're going to win."

Conley took the early lead by scoring three runs in the bottom of the first. Patrick started things off with a single and scored on a base hit by Wilder. Wilder stole second, went to third on a groundout and scored on Kervin Vines' single. Vines scored the final run of the inning when Brian Bullock knocked him in with a single.

Hawk starter Shawn Heath got in more trouble in the second inning when he gave up three consecutive singles to the top of the Viking order — Barnhill, Patrick and Wilder — with two outs. Wilder's single scored Barnhill. Steve Stroud replaced Heath after Wilder's single and got Jim Faulkner to pop out for the final out of the inning.

But Stroud got in trouble in the third and was replaced by James Sutton. Sutton loaded the bases in the inning, but got only one run out of it as Vines, who had walked to open the fourth, scored off Gray Mills' single.

Conger gave up only two hits through four innings, both singles to Eddy Dawson. The Hawks' only run came on a solo home run by Dave Hinson in the sixth. North Lenoir put two other runners on in the sixth, as James Copeland singled and Sutton reached off an error, but North Lenoir failed to take advantage of the chance.

"I thought we should have hit him

(Conger) better," Barwick said. "(But) we couldn't get consecutive hits, so I guess he was effective."

Conley added four runs in the bottom of the sixth to spoil any comeback hopes by the Hawks. Patrick and Wilder had RBI singles and Vines added an run-scoring triple to key the spurt.

For Wilson, the game accomplished two goals. It avenged the earlier loss to North Lenoir and it also kept the Vikings in contention for a playoff spot.

"We felt like we have a better team," Wilson said. "When they beat us down there, we felt it was a fluke."

"This is the kind of team where we've probably lost more games in the conference this season than we have in the past few years combined. We're just playing for a playoff spot."

And improved hitting could be just what the Vikings need to attain that goal. While Wilder and Patrick had good nights at the plate, Scotty Barnhill, Vines and Gray Mills also came through with two hits apiece.

Greene Central Bombs Jags, 24-8, Moves Closer To Title

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

FARMVILLE — Greene Central's Rams moved another step closer to the Eastern Plains Conference baseball championship with a 24-hit attack on Farmville Central Tuesday, burying the Jaguars in a 24-8 contest.

And it really wasn't that close.

The Rams banged out four home runs, six doubles and a triple along the way, moving out to a 17-1 lead at one time before a pitching change broke the spell for the Jaguars and they scored seven times in the last three frames.

Anthony Jones started the game for Greene Central and appeared shaky at first, giving up an opening batter home run and a walk before retiring the last 11 batters in faced in going the first four innings of the game. The home run was the only hit he allowed as he struck out nine and walked just that one batter.

After that, Coach Jim Fulghum went to his bullpen and the performances from there were not that stellar.

"None of our pitchers have worked (for a while)," Fulghum said. "They needed it and our plan was to let them work if we got ahead."

And that's exactly what the Rams did — provide that big lead that let them do about what they wanted.

"We got a lot of hits up and down the lineup," Fulghum said. In fact, only one starter failed to get a hit in the game and two, T.J. Johnson and Walt McKeel, picked up four each.

"They helped us a lot too," Fulghum said in reference to six errors by the Jaguars. "The played us a close game the first time. (Mike) Vandiford pitched well against us both last year and in the first game this year."

But it wasn't Vandiford's day to be on the mound this time and the Rams battered starter Monty King and reliever Alexander Daneis throughout the game, scoring in every inning.

"They have a good ball team," Farmville's Billy Davis said. "It's the best in our conference by far. Joyner threw the ball well and we just didn't swing the bats. He had good velocity."

It was the Rams' game from the start. Greene Central pushed over two run sin the top of the first. Johnson led off with a double to center that just failed to clear the fence. Had it, in terms of what followed, Johnson would have hit for the cycle as he added another double, a single and a triple.

Tommy Eason reached on an error that moved Johnson to third and a wild pitch on a third strike to Cornelius Hill with two away, let Johnson score. Eason's courtesy runner, Chris Hooker, scored on a double steal to make it 2-0.

Farmville struck back in the bottom of the inning as Mike Vandiford hit a solo homer to open the frame for the Jaguars. But after a runner reached on catcher's interference and another on a walk, Joyner sat the side down in order without further damage.

The Rams then added four more in the second to up the lead to 6-1. Jeff Tyson was hit by a pitch and with one

Jackson Tabbed As NBA's Top Rookie

NEW YORK (AP) — Mark Jackson proved the experts wrong. Despite his record-setting career at St. John's, many pro basketball scouts didn't think Jackson would make it in the NBA. He didn't just make it. He made it big. On Tuesday, the New York Knicks guard was named the NBA's Rookie of the Year.

"A lot of people said I was too slow, I couldn't play defense, I couldn't stick the jumper," Jackson said after receiving the Eddie Gottlieb Trophy. "There were a lot of questions about me, and I think I answered them all."

Jackson, who set an NBA assist record and helped the Knicks make the playoffs for the first time since 1984, was a landslide winner of the award.

In balloting by a national panel of sports writers and broadcasters, he received 77 of 80 votes. Greg Anderson of San Antonio, Winston Garland of Golden State and Kenny Smith of Sacramento each received one vote.

Jackson, the only unanimous selection to the NBA Rookie Team, said winning the award was "a dream come true."

"If you had to make a book about my first year in the NBA, it would end this way," he said.

Jackson had 868 assists during the regular season, breaking the rookie record of 690 set by Oscar Robertson in 1961. He ranked third in the league with 10.6 assists a game, averaged 13.6 points and was sixth in the league with 2.5 steals a game.

The New York native was the Knicks' No. 1 pick in the 1987 NBA draft, the 18th player selected overall. He is the lowest choice to win the rookie award since eighth-round pick Woody Sauldsberry of Philadelphia won it in 1958.

After becoming a starter in the third game of the season, Jackson helped the Knicks finish in a second-place tie in the Atlantic Division with a 38-44 record — 14 more victories than they had the previous year.

In the playoffs, where the Knicks' lost to Boston in the opening round in four games, Jackson averaged 14.3 points and 9.8 assists per game.

"Mark Jackson is a great player now and he's only going to get better," Knicks coach Rick Pitino said. "I wouldn't be surprised if he's the MVP some day."

Jackson's scoring ability surprised many fans, but his slick passing got the most attention.

"I don't really get much enjoyment out of scoring," he said. "If I score, I'm happy. But if I pass off to a teammate and he scores, then the whole team is happy."

The Knicks' resurgence has Jackson looking forward to next season. "If it was up to me, we'd start today," he said. "We have some great talent, and the playoff experience we gained this season will help us a lot."

Jackson is the third Knick to win the rookie award, joining Patrick Ewing (1986) and Willis Reed (1965).

Rose Soccer Team Blanks ENCSD

WILSON — Rose High School's girls' soccer team limited Eastern N.C. School for the Deaf to only one shot on goal as the Rampettes took a 4-0 win Tuesday.

The lone shot came off a penalty kick in the second half and was blocked by back-up goalie Amy Tomlinson.

Rose, meanwhile took 38 shots on goal, with ENCSD goalie Susan Bryant recording 20 saves.

Kathy Park started the scoring for Rose 10 minutes into the first half. Jenny Jones added the second goal at the 16:30 mark, while Lisa Leisten closed out the first half with a goal at the 27-minute mark.

Camilla Brown had the only goal of the second half, that at 12:00.

Rose is now 13-0 and has clinched the Big East Conference championship. The Rampettes have one game left in the regular season, as they host Wilson Fike on Thursday.

They will then move into the State 4-A playoffs, hosting the number two team in the Cap Nine Conference. That team, however, will not be known until Saturday night.

Rock Hill Native Wins North and South

PINEHURST (AP) — Defending champion Carol Semple Thompson defeated Lucille Ray of Rock Hill, S.C., 5 and 4 to advance to the third round of the 86th annual North and South women's golf tournament at Pinehurst Country Club Tuesday.

Thompson, from Sewickley, Pa., will play Toni Weisner, who defeated Reggie Hawes 1-up in 22 holes, in the third round Wednesday.

Robin Burke of Houston, Texas, who led qualifying, nipped Leslie Shannon of Miami, Fla. 2 and 1.

Nancy Macagnone of Clearwater, Fla., who finished tied for second in qualifying, narrowly averted an upset. She defeated Paula Brzostowski of Pinehurst, N.C., 1-up on the 19th hole.

The third and fourth rounds will be played Wednesday. The tournament is being played at Pinehurst's No. 2 course.

State's Zaun Leads All ACC Baseball Team

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Record-setting first baseman Turtle Zaun of North Carolina State leads the 1988 all-Atlantic Coast Conference baseball team announced by the league Tuesday.

Zaun, a two-time all-ACC selection, was named the ACC player of the year by the league's coaches. He hit 24 home runs, drove in 85 runs and batted .412 this season. Zaun set Wolfpack school records with 53 career home runs, and 193 RBI, and is just four home runs short of setting the ACC career mark for home runs.

Zaun was one of four Wolfpack players selected to the first team. He was joined by third baseman Bryn Kosco, outfielder Brian Bark and designated hitter Dell Ahalt.

Regular season champion Clemson and Georgia Tech each placed three players on the 11-man first team. Clemson's choices were catcher Bert Hefner, shortstop Rusty Charpia and starting pitcher Brian Barnes. Georgia Tech's honorees are second baseman Ty Griffin, outfielder K.G. White and relief pitcher Jim Poole.

Moye Leads Chargers To Win

BAYBORO — Darryl Moye went 3-4 to lead a 13-hit Ayden-Grifton attack as the Chargers defeated Pamlico County, 9-7, in a rain-shortened Eastern Plains Conference baseball game Tuesday.

In addition to Moye's three hits, Ty Little, Gary Eubanks, John Tyndall and James Woodard added two hits apiece.

Ayden-Grifton erased an early 1-0 deficit with six runs in the top of the second.

Eubanks and Tyndall started things out with two consecutive singles. James Woodard reached off an infield single to load the bases. A single by Gene Stancil drove in Eubanks. Tyndall came home on a a wild pitch that advanced courtesy runner Daren Lister to third. Billy Miller's sacrifice bunt brought Lister home. Darryl Moye followed with a double to score Stancil. Ty Little also singled to score Moye and make it 5-1. Stephen Tucker closed out the scoring for the inning by driving in Little with a base hit.

Pamlico pulled within 6-5 late in the game but the Chargers scored three more runs in the top of the fifth to extend their advantage. Little keyed the inning with a two-out, two run single.

The Chargers move to 9-9 overall and 7-2 in the Eastern Plains Conference and returns to action tonight against Farmville Central at home.

Mears, Andretti Stage Battle During Indy 500 Practice Runs

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — It was an eye-opening exhibition as Rick Mears and Mario Andretti played a high-speed game of one-upsmanship on the tight 2½-mile oval at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

The two former Indianapolis 500 winners went faster than anyone had ever gone before on the historic track, with Mears coming out slightly on top with a lap at 220.048 mph during Tuesday's practice battle.

Andretti, whose crew thought he actually went faster than Mears — over 221 — was caught by the Speedway's electric eye at 219.995 on his final hot lap of the wild day.

Andretti, the 1969 Indy winner, started the two-man game early in the afternoon with a lap at 219.031 mph in a Chevrolet-powered Lola. That eclipsed the unofficial Speedway mark of 218.234 that Andretti set last May. Lap speeds in practice are considered unofficial; only those run during qualification or the race are official.

Mears holds the official four-lap qualifying record of 216.828, with a fast lap of 217.581, set in 1986.

Mears, a two-time Indy winner, had gotten up to 217.181 in the Penske team's backup PC17-Chevrolet, which he was simply setting up in case of trouble with the team's primary cars. Once he got into his own Penske-Chevrolet, Mears answered Andretti's challenge with the 220 lap.

Andretti tried to regain the edge in the final half-hour of practice, and nearly did it, but fell just short after two laps over 219.

Mears visibly enjoyed outdoing Andretti.

"We won't go out there for that reason, just to try to beat him. But if we weren't competitive, we wouldn't be doing this. If the No. 1 slot is available, you try to get it."

"You leapfrog each other in a situation like that by constantly making changes and making the car better."

On his fast lap, Mears nearly got into trouble in the third turn.

"I touched the paint in turn three," he said, referring to the painted yellow line at the inside edge of the racing surface. "The car started to get loose and that got my heart started on me. At that speed, though, you have to hang on and be ready for anything."

"You've got to be very precise here because, if you make a mistake, you can be in big trouble in a real hurry."

On Tuesday, conditions were just about perfect for speed, with overcast skies and temperatures in the 60s — cool enough to keep the asphalt track from becoming slick. The wind that had blown relentlessly across the 2.5-mile Speedway oval on Sunday and Monday slowed to a breeze.

Andretti shrugged off the loss to Mears, saying, "We're both trying to get our cars working as well as they can. It would be nice to be fastest every day, but we're making progress and that's what we're trying to do."

Asked if either driver can go faster this week, Andretti said, "It's something I can never answer. You just don't know. But it's something we strive for."

The first of four days of qualifications is Saturday and neither of the fastest drivers was ready to assure a new official record.

Mears said, "I think the record could be in jeopardy; how badly depends on the weather. I think the cars are pretty well refined now and I don't think we're going to see any more really big gains."

Andretti, who had a top lap of 212.665 through the first three days of practice for the May 29 Indy 500, said, "The track I don't think is going to be like this (for qualifications). There was just enough rubber down (for good traction), and with the overcast conditions, that made the difference. Last year it was a battle just to maintain the speed we set (early in the week) because of the (hot) weather."

Defending champion Al Unser, Mears' teammate along with Danny Sullivan, was third quickest on Tuesday at 216.867, followed by 1987 race runner-up Roberto Guerrero, whose Cosworth-powered Lola turned a 215.930 mph lap before spinning and tagging the wall in turn one late in the practice session.

Guerrero, who spent 17 days in a coma after suffering serious head injuries here last September in a crash during tire testing, escaped injury on Tuesday and did only minimal damage to his car, knocking off the rear wing.

It was the first accident in four days of practice since the track opened.

Others practicing above 210 for the first time on Tuesday included Emerson Fittipaldi, Derek Daly, Jim Crawford, Kevin Cogan, Pancho Carter and Scott Brayton.

Former winners A.J. Foyt and Tom Sneva got up over 200 for the first time this week, although they did not approach the fastest cars.

Poles' Strike May Speed Up Reforms

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Labor leaders said they ended an eight-day strike at the Gdansk shipyard to avoid a police raid, but communist authorities said the strike failed for lack of widespread support.

Still, the government said two weeks of strikes that ended Tuesday when Lech Walesa and about 1,000 haggard strikers marched from the Lenin shipyard will compel it to speed up efforts to revive Poland's crippled economy.

Heads held high, the shipyard workers filed out of the yard without a settlement but also without having backed down from demands whose centerpiece was reinstatement of the yard's Solidarity chapter.

Police had surrounded the shipyard since Thursday and the strikers had rejected government offers of wage increases, so quitting was the "best solution possible," said strike committee chairman Alojzy Szablewski.

The strike evoked memories of 1980, when a younger, leaner Walesa cosigned an accord at the same shipyard during a nationwide wave of strikes over price increases that toppled a government. A time of unmatched freedom followed.

The rest of the country did not follow suit this time, leaving the shipyard workers in the Baltic port city largely isolated.

Government spokesman Jerzy Urban said on Tuesday that "the strikes and protests have not won the support of the working class and society" but had taught the government important lessons.

"The May events will compel the government to more consistently develop reform, which should be more strongly felt by society," he said.

The government planned today to introduce a bill that would allow it to take over money-losing enterprises and fire managers who resist economic change. Its reform program has increased prices by 42 percent this year.

And an official PAP news agency statement on Tuesday's meeting of the ruling Politburo spoke of the "indispensable" need to quicken democratization — a process it has so far only vaguely described.

Five major strikes since April 25 added up to Poland's worst wave of labor unrest since the 1981 military crackdown on Solidarity. The Soviet bloc's only independent labor federation ever was banned in 1982.

Editors Support Gorbachev Plan

By CAROL J. WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — A meeting between Mikhail S. Gorbachev and prominent editors has made clear that a major gathering of Communist Party members next month is expected to fall solidly in line behind his reform campaign.

Gorbachev told the media and ideology leaders at a meeting at the party Central Committee that old methods of choosing delegates to party conferences would be scrapped for the meeting planned June 28, the first such gathering since 1941. The 5,000 people to take part should be chosen solely on the basis of their support for the reforms, Gorbachev said.

"There must be no more quotas, as were the case in the past, specifying how many factory workers and farmers and how many women are to be elected, among others," Gorbachev said. "The principal political directive is to elect active supporters of perestroika to go to the conference."

Others who spoke at the meeting appeared to endorse that approach and declared "perestroika," Gorbachev's effort to rebuild Soviet society, a path from which no one should stray.

The 57-year-old party chief met with the media and ideology leaders on Saturday, but full reports on the exchange were released by the official Tass news agency only Tuesday night and early today.

Gorbachev complained that conservatism continues to pose the biggest threat to his reforms and that the doubters have raised questions about whether the nation is turning away from socialism.

"Some people have indeed lost their bearings amid all these processes under way," Gorbachev said.

"Some people have failed to keep their heads and panicked. And the panic — and this is very serious — has taken the form of asking: 'Isn't perestroika coming to mean the wrecking and rejection of the values of socialism, isn't it giving rise to alien phenomena, isn't it destabilizing society?'"

Yet the 57-year-old leader said not everyone who fears his reforms or has resisted them should be branded "an opponent of perestroika."

"We found veritable confusion in the minds of many people — workers, intellectuals and administrators alike," Gorbachev said. "And let us be blunt, not only on the ground level, but also on the top."

He did not make clear whether misunderstandings about his plans to bring about a more democratic society and stronger economy reached as high as the 13-man Politburo over which he presides.

The Kremlin's No. 2 man, ideologist Yegor K. Ligachev, is reputed to advocate a more conservative approach to resolving the nation's problems than Gorbachev, although the extent of their differences is known to few outside the ruling Politburo.

The June 28 party conference is expected to change the face of the party leadership and replace conservatives with more active supporters of perestroika.

"It is necessary to rid socialism of everything pseudosocialist, distorted and deformed in the period of the personality cult," Gorbachev said, referring to the influences of late dictator Josef V. Stalin, who ruled the country for 29 years before his death in 1953.

Gorbachev's call for electing reformists to the party conference drew support from the editors and cultural leaders, according to the Tass report.

"I would very much wish that the people who with their life and deeds have proved their commitment to perestroika by all means would get to the party conference and, on the contrary, that people who oppose it, who hamper its progress would not be present at the conference," said Kirill Lavrov, head of the Soviet Theatrical Union.

Denmark's Minister Resigns After Vote

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Prime Minister Poul Schluter resigned today in a bid to form a new center-right coalition after an inconclusive parliamentary election called over Denmark's nuclear-arms policy and its allegiance to NATO.

Danish radio said Schluter submitted his resignation to Queen Margrethe II at Amalienborg Palace and told her negotiations would begin this afternoon.

Tuesday's balloting ended in a stalemate in which neither major bloc could form a majority government.

Schluter's outgoing minority, four-party coalition retained its 70 seats in the Folketing, the 179-member parliament. The socialist opposition dropped two seats for a total of 79.

The opposition Social Democrats, Denmark's largest party, touched off the election by pushing through parliament a new anti-nuclear resolution the government refused to implement because of strong objections from the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The resolution, designed to bolster Denmark's 1957 peacetime ban on nuclear arms, calls for notifying visiting warships that such weapons were not allowed in port. Unless the resolution is overturned by the new parliament, the government will have to carry it out, after the wording has been determined.

Despite the vote, the overnment and the opposition both claimed the outcome vindicated their position on the NATO issue.

U.S., Soviets Prepare For Summit

GENEVA (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze played down the issue, but a key point in his final pre-summit talks with Secretary of State George P. Shultz was expected to be differences over verifying the intermediate-range nuclear forces treaty.

The differences have prompted the U.S. Senate to postpone indefinitely ratification of the treaty to scrap 683 Soviet missiles and 364 U.S. rockets.

Shevardnadze and Shultz were to begin talks this afternoon at the U.S. diplomatic mission. Their full agenda includes human rights and regional problems as well as arms control.

With the Moscow summit less than three weeks away, the trouble over the treaty is a severe setback to the arms control process.

Already, there is virtually no hope of completing a second accord to sharply reduce long-range U.S. and Soviet nuclear weapons before the summit.

A senior U.S. official traveling with Shultz from Washington voiced confidence on Tuesday that the differences would be overcome in Geneva.

"These are very, very technical issues and we've had the problem of pursuing at long distance, through diplomatic exchange in formal translations, things of that sort," the official told reporters at the State Department.

"There may, in fact, be differences, but I am quite confident that if you get all of the right people in the city, at the expert level, with ministers watching over the process, that we'll be able to nail these things down," said the official.

Shultz, whose plane made a refueling stop in Shannon, Ireland this morning, scheduled four meetings with Shevardnadze over two days.

MIA Hunt Ends Futilely In Southern Laos

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — American and Laotian soldiers today completed an excavation of a U.S. warplane crash site in southern Laos without finding any remains of two crewmen missing in action for 22 years, an official said.

The soldiers worked together searching a remote bamboo- and brush-covered hillside in Savannakhet province where the OV-1A Mohawk reconnaissance aircraft was downed by heavy ground fire on March 15, 1966.

It was the third joint excavation in communist-ruled Laos, where Washington is trying to resolve the fates of 555 Americans who never returned from the Indochina war.

"There was an exhaustive search of the crash area from May 2 to 11 ... (but) no remains of the two crewmen aboard the aircraft ... were found," said Ross Petzing, spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Bangkok.

He said the team toiled in very hot and dusty conditions, "and there was some danger posed by unexploded ordnance left over from the Indochina war period. Three cluster bombs and several live shells were exploded at the excavation site by U.S. Air Force emergency ordnance disposal experts."

"We very much appreciate the Laotian cooperation in the excavation effort and look forward to additional cooperative efforts of this nature," Petzing said.

He said that as an expression of America's concern with Laos' own humanitarian problems, the U.S. team donated $13,000 worth of medicine and equipment to the Sepone district hospital for use by inhabitants of the crash area.

Maj. Tim Pfister, a spokesman for the U.S. Pacific Command, said the remains of 11 missing Americans were found in the first joint excavation in 1985 and eight others in the second dig in 1986.

Car Bomb Kills 2 On Cyprus

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — A car packed with explosives blew up on a bridge today, killing two people and injuring several, witnesses and police said.

The blast occurred 200 yards from the Israeli Embassy, but police said the car was traveling away from that area when it exploded.

Police on the scene said the car was destroyed and must have been carrying a sizable quantity of explosives. Windows were shattered throughout the area.

Witnesses and reporters saw the badly burned bodies of the dead. Several people were rushed to hospital with injuries. Police, who spoke on condition of anonymity, could not say how many had been injured. Andreas Georgiou, a middle-aged driving instructor, said his car was on the bridge with two students aboard when the car blew up 50 yards in front.

"Suddenly everything went flash," Georgiou said, blood dripping onto his white shirt from a cut on his forehead. "We were lucky to come out alive."

He said the two women were slightly wounded and taken to a hospital. A fire brigade official on the scene, speaking on condition of anonymity, said: "The explosion was inside the car, which disintegrated completely, and the hole in the bridge was clearly caused by an explosion from above the surface of the road."

The bridge is on Grivas Avenue and connects the main road from the capital of this Mediterranean island to western and northwestern Cyprus.

Israel radio, monitored in Jerusalem, said several windows of the Israeli Embassy building were broken by the shock wave from the blast, but that country's ambassador to Cyprus said no one at the embassy was hurt.

"We heard a powerful explosion about 100 to 150 meters (yards) from the embassy building," the ambassador, Aharon Lopez, said in a telephone interview broadcast in Israel by that nation's army radio.

"We still have no information about the victims' identity," Lopez said.

"We do not know yet who is responsible. But it is certainly possible that the embassy was the terrorists' target and that the car (bomb) exploded prematurely for some reason," he said.

The Palestine Liberation Organization has accused Israel of killing Khalil Wazir, a top PLO leader, in Tunis last month as well as killing two PLO officials in Cyprus last year.

Israel was blamed for an underwater blast that damaged the Sol Phryne and ruined the PLO's plans to bring 130 Palestinian deportees from Cyprus to Israel aboard the ship to protest Israel's policy of expelling Palestinian activists.

Minister Says Sino-Japanese War Began Accidentally In '37

By DAVID THURBER
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — A Cabinet minister whose claim that Japan was not the aggressor in World War II provoked strong protests from China and other Asian nations told Parliament today the 1937-45 Sino-Japanese War began accidentally.

The minister, Seisuke Okuno, told Japanese reporters on Tuesday that he doesn't like to use the word "invasion" when discussing the Sino-Japanese War because both countries lost millions of people in the conflict.

Japanese troops overran much of eastern China in the war.

Opposition parties have demanded the dismissal of Okuno, director of the National Land Agency, and called on the administration of Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita to take responsibility for his remarks.

Okuno has angered China and other Asian nations over the past month by saying — most recently on Monday — that Japan had no aggressive intent during World War II and had "fought to protect itself at a time when the white race had turned Asia into a colony."

China's Foreign Ministry said Okuno's views had caused alarm worldwide.

"The repeated occurrence of such expressions ... in Japan ... shows there are indeed some people in Japan, even some people who are cabinet ministers, who have no intention at all for introspection of the past war of aggression," ministry spokesman Li Zhaoxing said at a weekly briefing in Beijing. "This cannot but alarm all the peace-loving peoples and countries in the world."

Asked in Parliament today about Okuno's comments, Takeshita said: "Our country feels deep responsibility for the grave damage Japan inflicted on the Chinese people during the past war. We believe the government should fully recognize that our country's actions during the war have been criticized severely as aggression." But he stopped short of saying he agreed that Japan's actions had been aggressive.

During a Diet (parliament) session today, Okuno said he thought the 1937 Marco Polo Bridge incident, generally believed to have caused the Sino-Japanese War, had occurred by accident.

In comments last month that he reiterated Monday, Okuno also said Japan should not let the views of Asian neighbors stop Cabinet members from visiting a controversial Shinto shrine that honors Japan's war dead.

Last month, China's Foreign Ministry called Okuno's statements "astonishing and very regrettable." During a visit to China last week, Japanese Foreign Minister Sosuke Uno reportedly sought to smooth Chinese irritations over the remarks.

Meanwhile, the Japan Socialist Party and Komeito (Clean Government Party) began preparing a resolution calling for Okuno's dismissal. Another opposition party, the Japan Communist Party, decided on Tuesday it would demand Okuno's dismissal, news reports said.

Laotians' Ties To Drug Profits Cited

NEW YORK (AP) — Two men extradited from Hong Kong to face drug smuggling charges here said Laotian officials supervise heroin production there and take a cut of the proceeds, according to court documents.

The allegations, which name no specific officials but referred to a "big official" who was in charge of the "upcountry province," were contained in affidavits requesting the extradition of Cheng Ah-Kai, 60, of Hong Kong, and Wichai Chaivisan, 55, of Thailand.

The defendants are charged with shipping 70 pounds of heroin to an undercover agent in New York. They were arrested in Hong Kong in March and waived extradition.

They arrived here Tuesday night and were to be arraigned today.

U.S. Attorney Andrew J. Maloney said Tuesday the two claimed they needed permission from the communist ruled Laotian government to manufacture heroin and that officials received payments of approximately $2,000 for every 700 grams of heroin produced.

In a secretly recorded conversation with an informant, the two said that Laotian officials also supervised the production to ensure they were not cheated, according to the affidavits.

"This is the first prosecutable case in the United States which actively discusses the possible involvement of Laotian government officials" in drug trade, said Robert Stutman, head of the Drug Enforcement Administration's New York office.

An official with the permanent United Nations Mission for the Laos People's Democratic Republic disputed the allegations.

Appellate Court Upholds Achille Lauro Convictions

ROME (AP) — Italy's highest court upheld the convictions and prison sentences of seven Palestinians who conceived and carried out the 1985 hijacking of the Achille Lauro cruise ship.

After a three-hour hearing, the Court of Cassation on Tuesday rejected appeals by defendants, including fugitive Palestinian leader Mohammed Abbas. The court thus let stand the May 23, 1987, convictions and sentences decided by an appeals court in Genoa, the port city where the ill-fated Mediterranean cruise began.

An elderly, wheelchair-bound New Yorker, Leon Klinghoffer, was shot to death and his body was thrown into the sea during the ordeal.

Tuesday's ruling cleared the way for a separate civil action by relatives of Klinghoffer to seek damages. Earlier rulings said the two daughters of Klinghoffer were entitled to compensation.

In addition to Abbas, head of the Palestine Liberation Front, the Court of Cassation upheld life sentences for two other fugitive group leaders: Oz-zuddin Badrakkam, described as military chief; and Ziad El Omar, another organizational official. The 7-year term of Abdulrahim Khaled, a colonel in the front, was also upheld.

They were accused of helping to organize the hijacking.

Three hijackers covered by the Cassation ruling are in Italian custody. They include Magied Molqi, leader of the hijackers and described as the man who shot Klinghoffer, sentenced to 30 years; and two other hijackers, Ibrahim Fatayer Abdelatif and Ahmad Marrouf Assadi, sentenced to nearly 25 years and nearly 16 years.

Assadi had cooperated with investigators.

A fourth hijacker, Bassam Asker, was convicted in separate trials in juvenile court because he was a minor at the time of the crime.

The commandeered Achille Lauro eventually docked at an Egyptian port, where passengers and hijackers got off after officials negotiated with the pirates.

Italian police took custody of the four hijackers after U.S. warplanes intercepted the Egyptian plane that was taking them to Tunisia and forced the aircraft to land in Sicily.

Inventor Finds His Dream On National TV

By BILL VOGGIN
Associated Press Writer
TOULON, Ill. (AP) — A retired blacksmith labored in obscurity for more than 40 years to promote his orange-peeling invention. But after only a few moments of national exposure on CBS-TV's "60 Minutes," orders for it are pouring in.

"Last week, we sent out about 500 or 600 orders," Wilbur Blank says. "We're getting more every day."

Andy Rooney, the CBS program's commentator, displayed the Quik Orange Peel a couple weeks ago during a commentary on gadgets he gets in the mail.

"This is one of the best things I ever got," Rooney said. "It's changed my life."

He showed how easily the tool skins citrus fruit. "It really is magic," Rooney said. "You can amaze your friends with this."

Rooney certainly amazed Blank, 69, and his wife, Jane.

"This has been mind-boggling," Mrs. Blank said last week. "We had no idea he was going to say anything about the Orange Peel. You can't believe the reaction."

In two weeks, Blank and his Wil-Le Products Co. have received dozens of letters and calls from people interested in buying the device, which he sells in groups of five for $6.

"We got flooded with calls and letters" from viewers, Rooney said. "We always get a lot of mail, but we got more than usual on this. Letters are still coming in."

Rooney said the benefits of prime-time exposure will be temporary, although a planned "60 Minutes" follow-up could help. "He'd have to sell millions, and I think that's dreaming," Rooney said.

Blank had nearly given up ever selling the public on his idea, which he developed in California while working as a welder before World War II.

"I was fresh off the farm, and I got out to California and found I loved oranges but hated to peel them," he said. "That's when I came up with my orange peeler."

The original model, made of stainless steel wire, looked more like a bottle opener than an orange peeler. Blank was turned down for a patent. And for four decades, he tried in vain to market the device.

About eight years ago, he showed his peeler to Fred Wadley at the I.V. Die Co. in Peoria. Wadley fashioned one from bright orange plastic and has since produced about 30,000 peelers. But he said sales must soar before the product can be declared a winner.

Rooney isn't sure why he still had the peeler in his desk drawer three years after Blank sent it to him.

"I just saw it in the drawer one day when I was looking for something, and I decided to give it a try," Rooney said by telephone last week. "I really liked it."

Blank sold his blacksmith and welding shop two years ago, but still has a mobile home park and other business interests in this west-central Illinois community.

"I don't want to be a millionaire. I'd have too many people on my back, then," he said. "I'd be happy with about $90,000. I could live real comfortably in Toulon on $90,000. Of course, if it goes above that, I'm not going to turn it down."

House Approves Ban On Plastic Firearms, Senate To Follow Suit

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation to ban undetectable plastic firearms could clear the Senate Judiciary Committee this Thursday, just two days after the House approved a similar bill with a calm that rarely accompanies gun control measures.

A smooth ride for the legislation was virtually assured two weeks ago, after Attorney General Edwin Meese III and law enforcement groups agreed to a compromise version — and the National Rifle Association went along.

The NRA agreed to avoid a bruising gun control battle in Congress when it became clear that no existing handguns would be prohibited under the agreement.

Plastic guns are not yet a reality, but chief House sponsor William J. Hughes said Tuesday the firearms could be a weapon of choice for terrorists in the future. His colleagues agreed, passing the bill 413-4.

The Senate Judiciary subcommittee on the Constitution, meanwhile cleared a similar bill by Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum for action by the full committee. The full panel meets again on Thursday, and the gun bill is on the agenda.

The Hughes bill would make it illegal to manufacture, import, sell, transfer or possess a plastic firearm, defined as a weapon with less than 3.7 ounces of metal.

Maximum penalties would be five years in prison, and fines of $250,000 for individuals and $1 million for organizations.

The bill contains a "sunset" provision that would repeal the criminal provisions after five years, enabling the law to keep pace with any advances that may occur in firearms detection technology.

Voting against the House measure were Republican Reps. Dick Cheney of Wyoming; Philip Crane of Illinois; Norman Shumway of California; and Barbara Vucanovich of Nevada.

Hughes' bill was introduced before the administration-police compromise, but embodies the same concept.

The more precise language is in the Senate version, which would establish a detectability standard that would permit detection of the same weapons as the Hughes bill. However, it does not provide for a minimum content of metal in the gun.

Both measures would detect all existing handguns, thus keeping them legal for law-abiding owners. But plastic weapons that failed to meet the same metallic standard would be prohibited.

Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, called the House vote "a major step in the right direction. I look forward to working with Congressman Hughes to make sure the Congress sends the president the strongest bill possible," he said Tuesday.

Hughes said he saw no problem in working out a compromise between the House and Senate language.

A Winter Park, Fla., company that claims to be the leader in plastic firearms technology says it has no plans to produce plastic handguns.

Dwight C. Brunoehler, vice president of Red Eye Arms Inc., said the company was working on a plastic machine gun grenade launcher that it hopes to sell to the Marines.

"We see the military business as where we want to be," he said, adding the company will be working on that project for at least the next two years. He said the company also has pledged never to make an undetectable plastic weapon.

Plea Rejected

LENOIR, N.C. (AP) — A Caldwell County Superior Court judge has rejected a plea bargain in a rape case after the victim protested the arrangement in open court.

The 22-year-old Lenoir woman told Superior Court Judge Charles C. Lamm Jr. Monday that the plea bargain had been reached between defense attorneys and prosecutors without any input from her.

The case involves an incident in which Charles Edward Ball, 33, of Newton was charged with breaking into the woman's home Nov. 1 and raping her. The Lenoir Police Department arrested Ball near the woman's residence after she had shot at his car several times, which prevented him from leaving.

He was charged with first-degree burglary, second-degree rape and first-degree sexual offense.

Irving Berlin Turns 100 As Fans Sing 'Always'

By MICHAEL KUCHWARA
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Shortly before midnight on Tuesday, a small group of carolers gathered in front of a five-story brick mansion facing the East River on New York's posh Beekman Place.

When the clock struck 12, an impromptu glee club, led by composer and cabaret performer John Wallowitch, sang "Happy Birthday," followed by a chorus of "Always."

They celebrated at the doorstep of the man who wrote that haunting love song, Irving Berlin, America's best-known — yet most private — songwriter who turns 100 today.

Just mention the melodies Berlin wrote, and you'll start to sing: "White Christmas," "Easter Parade," "God Bless America," "There's No Business Like Show Business," "Alexander's Ragtime Band," "A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody," "Puttin' on the Ritz," "Blue Skies," "How Deep is the Ocean?" "Cheek to Cheek," to name a few.

Wallowitch's Berlin salute, an annual celebration he began more than 20 years ago and which he usually holds at 6 p.m. on Christmas Eve, may be the most personal tribute to Berlin this year.

"They have been devastatingly emotional experiences," says Wallowitch, an unabashed Berlin fan who lives down the street and around the corner from the composer.

But the only festivity officially recognized by the songwriter will be a Carnegie Hall salute today held in connection with ASCAP, the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. Berlin is a charter member of the organization — founded in 1914 — that licenses music for public performance. It will be taped by CBS for a television special later in the month.

Don't expect an appearance by the master. Berlin is passionate about his privacy. Except for short walks around Beekman Place when the weather is warm, Berlin never is seen in public. On his infrequent strolls through the tranquil, tree-lined neighborhood, he usually is accompanied by a young woman or a doorman from a nearby building.

Call the Irving Berlin Music Corp. and ask for an interview with the boss. You'll get Hilda Schneider, Berlin's longtime secretary. She is polite and friendly but adamant in declining interviews for her employer.

"I'm sorry I can't be more encouraging," the woman says. "If we do one, we'd have to do them all. It's all in the record. You can look it up."

And the record is pretty impressive: Some 1,500 songs that span the worlds of theater, movies and popular music. No other composer can match that record.

For the stage, Berlin wrote "Annie Get Your Gun" and more than a dozen other Broadway shows. His movies include several Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers classics such as "Top Hat" and "Follow the Fleet." His pop hits, those songs not written for any particular stage show or film, include such standards as "Remember" and "All Alone."

What makes his music so great? "His songs have the sophistication of simplicity," says Morton Gould, president of ASCAP. "You know precisely what he's saying and singing. He's been able to distill everything down to its essence."

"He also expresses universal truths," Gould adds. "If you look at his song titles and listen to his music, he expresses emotions that human beings would like to experience. Most people want blue skies. They want the equivalent of white Christmases or the whole idea of what 'Easter Parade' evokes. And most of us don't want to be all alone by the telephone. He says it directly and you feel it."

Ironically, the telephone is how Berlin communicates with the outside world today. When he wants to talk, he calls. The songwriter has a small circle of telephone friends, people he dials when he has something on his mind. Gould is one such listener.

"He will just call," Gould says. "His liaison will say 'Mr. Berlin would like to talk to you.' When that happens, you drop everything and pick up the phone. It's a wonderful thing. He has a keen mind, and he's right on top of everything."

Another member of this select telephone circle is Stanley Green, a musical comedy historian and author of several books about the Broadway musical. Green last spoke to Berlin when Fred Astaire died last year. Berlin called Green to express his regret about the passing of a man he admired very much.

Most of Berlin's contemporaries are dead. He's the last of the great musical comedy composers, a pantheon that once included George Gershwin, Jerome Kern, Cole Porter and Richard Rodgers. Of his theater contemporaries, only director George Abbott, who turns 101 in June, survives.

Berlin, born Israel Baline in Russia, came to the United States at the age of 2. His family settled on New York's Lower East Side where, as a young boy, Berlin got jobs singing on the Bowery. He worked as song plugger and a singing waiter at a Chinatown cafe. It was there that he learned to play the piano, laboriously picking out tunes with one finger. This self-taught musician writes the same way.

"It's an incredible catalog this man

SONGWRITER TURNS 100 — Songwriter Irving Berlin, who shuns the public eye and does most of his day-to-day business by telephone, is shown at the piano in New York in 1968. He was 100 today. Berlin composed such hits as "White Christmas," "Easter Parade," "Alexander's Ragtime Band," and "God Bless America." (AP Laserphoto)

has achieved with no formal education as well as no musical education," Green says. "And to be able to write music AND lyrics."

For all his success, Berlin is a loner, a man very much aware of his humble origins. His first wife, Dorothy, died from typhoid fever less than a year after they were married.

In 1926, Berlin married his second wife, Ellin Mackay, the daughter of a wealthy and socially prominent businessman, Clarence Mackay, the president of a commercial telegraph company. She eloped with Berlin over her Catholic father's objections and the marriage was front-page news all over the country.

In the more than 60 years they have been married, Berlin has kept his wife and his three daughters out of the public eye.

"I think a reason he is so very private is that he is wildly in love with his wife," Wallowitch says. "I think it is one of the greatest romantic love affairs in history."

Berlin is the only major songwriter who never had a film biography like Cole Porter's "Night and Day," George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue," Sigmund Romberg's "Deep in My Heart" or Rodgers and Hart's "Words and Music."

TV Hit's Best Features May Be In The Show Title

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — So you're a television producer and you want to get a show on the air. And once you get that show on the air, you want it to stay on the air.

What do you do? Hire the best talent in Hollywood? Butter up network executives who can put you on after "Cosby"? Hire a detective agency to locate Nielsen families?

Nope. Throw out all those theories about Nielsen samples and demographics and time periods and counter-programming.

In the prime-time game, it's all in the name.

The right kind of punctuation will sell a show. Just look at CBS. Put an ampersand in the title, and it's a go: "Kate & Allie," "Eisenhower & Lutz," "Cagney & Lacey," & of course, "Simon & Simon." "The Law and Harry McGraw" was canceled precisely because it had no ampersand.

This, of course, does not explain "Beauty and the Beast," but, hey, a prediction: by the third season, they'll open a private detective agency and call it "Beauty & Beast," or maybe just "B&B."

CBS is also partial to commas. They make shows sound more intelligent: "Murder (comma) She Wrote," "Magnum (comma) P.I." You know these people didn't just drop off a dangling participle or something.

Those daring ABC executives eschew such mundane punctuation as commas and periods and go more for such exotic symbols as question marks, colons, quotations within quotations, e.e. cummings-style lower-case and even exclamation points: "Who's the Boss?" "thirtysomething," "Spenser: For Hire,"

"The 'Slap' Maxwell Story," "Sledge Hammer!" "Dolly!"

To get a news show into prime time, it must have a number in the title, which explains why "Our World" didn't make it, though a fictional show called "A Different World" did. (That may have something to do with one being opposite "Cosby" and the other following it.)

Note "60 Minutes," "48 Hours," "West 57th" and "20/20," which also has the distinction of being the only network slash show. Numbers did not help "1986," but that was because it was doomed to be out of date within the year.

NBC doesn't care for oddball punctuation, despite having once had one of the pioneers in oddball punctuation, "The A-Team," and settling for one all-caps show this season, "ALF," which stands for "Alien Life Form." NBC also has one all-numbers show, "227," a street address. NBC goes in more for mainstream catch-phrases: "Facts of Life," "Family Ties," "Amen," "Cheers," "A Year in the Life," "Day by Day."

NBC also likes short titles, which may explain some executive consternation about "The Days and Nights of Molly Dodd." Many words, yes, but at least there's no punctuation.

Another way to help your show with any network: give it a one-word title — "MacGyver," "Newhart," "ALF," "Moonlighting," "thirtysomething," "Wiseguy," "Matlock," "Hunter," "Hooperman," "Dynasty," "The Equalizer" (the "the" doesn't count), "Cheers," "Ohara," "Hunter" and "Amen."

Talk show hosts have long since learned this lesson: "Donahue," "Oprah," "Geraldo." Even "The Tonight Show" and "Late Night" are more often referred to simply as "Carson" and "Letterman."

Who can say that "Once a Hero," the first show canceled last fall, wouldn't have been a smash hit if it was called simply "Hero"? How about "The Oldest Rookie" as "Rookie" — Top 10 show, no doubt about it. Who's to say "Tour of Duty" wouldn't have beaten "The Cosby Show" (always trimmed to the more familiar "Cosby") if it had been called simply, say, "War"?

Of course, there are exceptions: "Valerie" became "Valerie's Family" and still did OK. "Downtown," "Wizard" and "Starman" didn't make it despite catchy, one-word titles.

Surely CBS' "Leg Work" would have been a hit without the space. Two-word titles are acceptable, but only for cop shows: "Miami Vice," "Crime Story," "Houston Knights." Not private eye shows, which must have one- or three-word titles: "Hunter," "The Equalizer" (the "the" doesn't count), "Beverly Hills Buntz," "Spenser: For Hire."

NBC would never have had ratings problems with "J.J. Starbuck" if they dropped the darn initials. All right, all right, so there's "L.A. Law."

Some shows will be hits no matter what they're called. "A Different World" could have been called "The Show After Cosby," or, in keeping with short, simple titles, "Show," and it would still be No. 2.

It's just a theory.

Larry King Staying With CNN Lineup

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Cable TV talk show host Larry King says he'll be busy helping with prime time coverage of the presidential conventions instead of following Ted Koppel's "Nightline" on ABC-TV.

King, 54, said recently that he turned down the network to stick with Cable News Network, thanks to a hefty raise and a guaranteed five-year contract offered by CNN owner Ted Turner.

Since ABC's offer late last year, King has undergone heart surgery, returned to his TV and radio shows, and has a book out titled, "Tell It to the King."

"I'm gonna sit in the booth with the regular CNN anchors during the normal time period of 'Larry King Live' (6-7 p.m. PDT)," King said of the summer conventions. "And I'll do quickie interviews with delegates — or anything to keep the presence going."

Museum Has Exhibit Of Asian Import Art

SALEM, Mass. (AP) — When the Peabody Museum was established in 1799, thousands of artisans in Canton and other ports in the Orient were crafting elaborate objects from porcelain, silks, ivory, silver and rare woods for export to the West.

But the goods made by Easterners for Western commercial consumption never have been treated as a separate, scholarly discipline or gathered in one place.

Enter the Peabody, which calls itself the nation's oldest continuously operating museum. The museum will dedicate an $8.1 million new wing to house the first permanent collection of Asian export art in the world on May 14.

"We consider the Asian influence on our decorative arts second only to the classical influence of Greece and Rome," said Crosby Forbes, curator of the Asian export collection. "Our debt to Asian culture and our awareness of these influences needs to be more emphasized."

Forbes and other scholars in the field spent over 20 years promoting the concept of a field devoted to the disparate objects, materials, styles and destinations of Asian decorative art.

The collection is a combination of 2,000 pieces from the Peabody, established by the East India Marine Society in 1799, and 8,000 from the China Trade Museum of Milton, Mass., located in a home built by a sea captain in 1833.

The two merged in 1984 and the new museum is the first to treat products exported from the Orient as one body of art. The Victoria and Albert Museum in London contains a small gallery with about 120 items of Chinese export art, and other museums display random pieces of Asian made items.

About 1,000 objects are displayed in the Peabody Museum's three-story new wing, a well-lighted and spacious area that features central displays explaining the key components of Asian trade.

Forbes said exports from China began as early as 1498 and flourished after 1557, when the Portuguese settled Macao, giving Westerners a formal presence in Asia.

Democrats May Hear Some Hissing In Atlanta

By DICK PETTYS
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — One of the top entertainment attractions at the Democratic National Convention here this summer may be a hissing, whistling, smoke-belching steam locomotive that is bringing the romance of the rails back to life in this transportation hub.

The engine No. 750, built in 1911, regularly hauls trainloads of kids, tourists and rail fans on an 18-mile trip around the city with occasional excursions to Stone Mountain State Park to the east. For the convention, however, the train is booked for several rolling parties, including one for party leaders.

Former Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson has tentatively booked the train for the weekend before the convention opens and Mrs. Sam Nunn, wife of Georgia's senior senator, is considering an excursion to entertain the wives of other Democratic senators.

The train will be regular daytime runs for convention delegates but, taking no chances, the Missouri delegation has booked a special excursion of its own.

The train is run by a state agency which calls its growing collection of rolling stock the "New Georgia Railroad" and operates over track owned primarily by CSX Transportation Inc.

Volunteers from the local chapter of the National Railway Historical Society provide passenger assistance on each trip. Wallace Haywood, a retired railroad supervisor, is at the throttle.

Over 150,000 passengers have ridden the "New Georgia" since operations began.

The railroad is the brainchild of Georgia Building Authority Director Steve Polk, whose usual duties are to maintain and provide security for immobile state structures.

Following discussions with the railway society's active local chapter, Polk persuaded the Legislature in 1985 to authorize him to run tourist trains.

The railroad isn't making money for the state, but it isn't losing money, either, Polk said.

"It's carrying its own weight ... (but) I tell you what: I don't believe you can ever put a dollar value on good that train does. ... That's not another city in the United States of America that's got a regularly scheduled steam-operating train on a Class 1 railroad track — a mainline."

Members of the Democratic National Committee's site selection committee were treated to a train trip when they came here to consider Atlanta's convention bid against competing offers.

Polk said one member of the panel later told him the train tipped the scales in Atlanta's favor when it came time for him to vote for a site.

As the convention nears, Polk's crew at the New Georgia are trying to complete several major projects.

One of them is the construction of a track that would allow the train to enter state-owned Stone Mountain Park and circle the mountain on track previously laid for an amusement train. Now, the New Georgia's trains must stop some distance from the park and, because they cannot turn around, must return to Atlanta in reverse.

The second project is the renovation of still another steam engine — No. 290, an ex-Atlanta and West Point Railroad engine saved from the scrap heap by rail fans.

Both steam engines are Pacific-style locomotives, meaning they have four pilot wheels, six drivers and two trailing wheels under the cab. No. 290, a "heavy" Pacific, was designed to haul heavier loads than the engine now being used.

Treasure Hunters Find Work Starts When Loot Is In Hand

By A.J. DICKERSON
Associated Press Writer
KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — It took Mel Fisher 16 years and $16 million to find his sunken Spanish treasure. Now the hard part is under way — painstakingly scraping centuries of marine crust off archaeological riches, and cataloging the bounty.

In July 1985, Fisher's crew found the vast motherlode of the Nuestra Señora de Atocha, the richest of five Spanish galleons dashed to the ocean floor by a 1622 hurricane off the Florida Keys.

So far, the galleon has surrendered more than 4,000 emeralds, 150,000 gold and silver coins, fine jewelry and thousands of ceramic pieces, including dishes that look like tableware sold today. Also dredged up were thousands of pieces of salt-soaked wood, rusty navigational devices, muskets, tools, pots and pans and other artifacts.

All are tagged, drawn to scale, tediously picked clean of calcium and seashell deposits, catalogued, again drawn to scale and photographed, and the disbursed to investors. Computer records have been created for each of more than 300,000 salvaged pieces of the ship or its cargo. Molds are made of some objects.

"1985 was just the beginning. We're going to be working for years and years. The stuff takes forever," says John McGarry, executive director of the museum operated by the Mel Fisher Maritime Heritage Society Inc.

It costs about $11 to process each $1 in bounty, estimates museum conservator James Sinclair, a marine archaeologist.

"There's been a tremendous amount of paperwork," said Fisher, 65, who now spends most his time behind a desk instead of deep-sea diving.

Since selling Atocha salvage rights for $7 million last year to an Atlanta group, he oversees his non-profit Heritage Society, housed here in a former Navy warehouse.

The museum's $10 million displays, gleaned from the Atocha, its sister ship Santa Margarita and from a British slaving vessel found during the quest for Spanish treasure, range from dishes to gold bars to a $1.13 million gold necklace studded with diamonds, rubies and pearls.

Artifacts handed over to investors may be cashed in by such means as the Christie's auction scheduled June 14 in New York.

Among items headed for that auction block are a $200,000, 5½-foot gold chain, a $150,000-to-$200,000 silver-gilt wine cup and jewelry salvaged from the Atocha and Margarita.

The former California dive-shop owner now dreams of building Treasure Island, a $140 million resort and research center in the Caribbean.

Forest Service To Protect 18th Century Gravesite

By JANE M. ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer
SENECA ROCKS, W.Va. (AP) — An 18th-century graveyard on the grounds of a new U.S. Forest Service campground will be left intact through a trial policy adopted this year to recognize the religious views of American Indians.

The gravesite, which forest service archaeologist G. Brashler believes is at least 1791, contains the remains of any tribal members.

But the policy, put into effect Jan. 29 by the forest service, encompasses all human burial grounds, regardless of race.

"It comes down to First Amendment freedom of religion rights," Brashler said.

The gravesite policy was developed in conjunction with American Indian and archaeology groups, she said. It is in effect in the Eastern and Southern regions of the forest service, which include land east of the Mississippi River, and will be put into effect nationwide if successful.

Pre-historic American-Indian sites, as well as homesteads dating from the 17th, 18th, 19th and early 20th centuries, are scattered throughout Appalachia, archaeologists believe.

"We've had lots of problems, both at the federal and state and graverobber levels, where desecration was taking place with increasing frequency," said Suzan Harjo, executive director of the Washington, D.C.-based National Congress of American Indians.

"Any place where there are Indian remains, it takes place."

Although the plan specifies that the graves should be left undisturbed if possible, it does make provisions for scientific study, Brashler said.

"We need to be able to study and obtain samples of material — that's going to be a bone of contention," Brashler said.

The policy would allow some human remains to be exhumed, but only after the forest service consults with the tribes involved, Brashler said. Any human remains exhumed must be returned to the ground, she said.

"The issue is a pan-tribal concern," Brashler said. "It actually represents two conflicting world views — archaeology as a science and what we know about descent and cultural practices, and religious views.

"The Western European view of death relating to one's ancestors is so different than Native Americans' view of death and ancestry," Brashler said. "It's a deeply personal and spiritual thing for some of them."

Tribal groups, especially in the Great Lakes area and in the West, were concerned that their ancestors were being unearthed from public lands with little concern for the tribes' religious beliefs.

Brashler said the new policy was sparked by complaints from American Indians about national forests in Wisconsin, Minnesota and Michigan, which are rich in tribal artifacts. California has also developed a tough policy to protect gravesites, Brashler said.

The forest service policy requires that agency workers in each state deal directly with tribes to work out a plan to handle each specific gravesite, regardless of whether it belongs to those tribes.

"They feel that the tribal affiliation is not important," Brashler said. "Desecration of one is desecration of all."

ministering the policy would be slightly different, she said.

"It will involve making good faith efforts to research who the people are in those graves," Brashler said.

The tiny graveyard at Seneca Rocks is nearly hidden by brush. The graves, some marked by worn rocks that once were headstones, resemble shallow trenches. Brashler said the indentations could indicate the people were buried in coffins.

The forest service archaeologist said she believed the graveyard was in use for 50 to 60 years. One headstone contains a barely decipherable inscription including the year 1791.

The hill, overlooking Seneca

Rocks, was a popular homesite for settlers in the 18th and 19th centuries, Brashler said. Walking through the future campground, she identified several signs indicating people had lived there.

Chips and flakes of stone, unearthed when workers leveled the ground for the campsite, show the site also was inhabited by American Indians, Brashler said.

"There must be some great spiritual significance the site held, but we'll never know," she said.

The graveyard will be preserved in place, and Brashler said the forest service may clean it up and post some explanatory signs.

Archaeologists say hundreds of historical homesites are located throughout the region, although many are hard to identify.

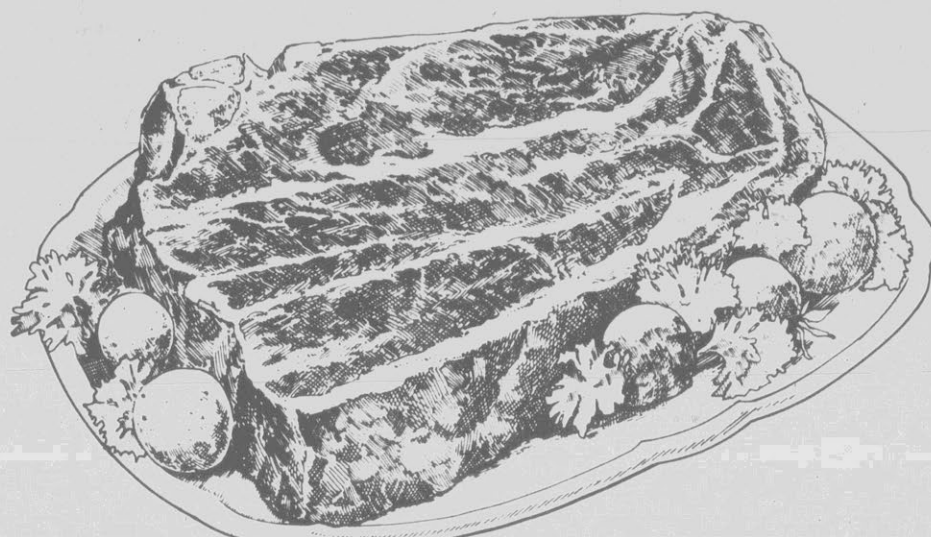

"One difficulty of managing historic sites in the eastern United States is you can't see them." Except for such artifacts as stone chips, Brashler said, "there's nothing there — it's not like the big stone pyramids in Mexico and Egypt."

Many of the sites were occupied in the post-Civil War period, the Depression, but prehistoric American Indian camps also are scattered throughout the area, Brashler said.

"They give a really nice indication that even the mountains were occupied for thousands of years," she said.

Treasure

The government of Antigua has agreed to a 99-year lease on 659 acres on its island of Barbuda, where Fisher says he'll build a 400-unit hotel "plus a treasure museum, preservation facilities for historic artifacts, an underwater restaurant. We intend to build jetties, and a huge dock for cruise ships and freighters and three highways."

After a year of exploring in the area, his dive crews recently found the remains of an unidentified shipwreck and of a British vessel.

"We found our first coins last week. They're dated 1804, George the Third," Fisher said in a recent interview. He hopes to start building soon, opening the new treasure museum within two years, and the hotel two years later. Activities for guests will include looking for sunken ships.

"We'll let them help us find treasure. They'll get to keep 5 or 10 percent of what they find," said Fisher.

A long battle with the state of Florida over the Atocha's treasure ended up at the U.S. Supreme Court in 1982.

Fisher won rights to all the ship's riches, with the state losing its bid for a quarter of the haul. But his legal woes didn't end there.

After he found the motherlode, the state launched a two-year inquiry into his unorthodox business practices — such as writing investment agreements on cocktail napkins. The inquiry ended in early April with no charges brought.

Meanwhile, the salvage of the Atocha continues, based here and with Fisher's people working for the Atlanta partnership that now owns the rights. The ship yielded up at least $100 million before the sale, and Fisher believes it contains that much more.

"It'll never end," said Fisher's son Kim, a treasure hunter since age 9. "I'm going to go out tomorrow and find more stuff for them to clean up."

Cocaine Habit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Adam Rich, the pudgy "Eight is Enough" moppet whose antics captivated family TV audiences in the 1970s, is addicted to cocaine and is trying to kick the habit, his manager says.

The 19-year-old actor is at the Betty Ford Center in Rancho Mirage and should be released early next month, said his manager Jeff Ballard, adding Rich had checked into other drug rehabilitation centers twice during the past year.

The cast of "Eight is Enough" was reunited last year for a hit NBC-TV movie. Ballard said Rich will join the cast again this year for another "Eight is Enough" get-together around Christmas.

Opening lead: King of ♦ Quite often, the ability to count to nine or 10 is all you will need to tell you whether to adopt an active or passive defense. That knowledge, learned in kindergarten, can point you in the right direction.

It is a tossup whether North should respond one no trump or raise his partner's opening bid to two spades. He let his flat distribution and honors in every suit sway him toward one no trump. We would have raised, even playing four-card majors. (With full values for a minimum response, raising partner's suit is more encouraging than a response of one no trump.) The final contract would have been the same.

West led the king of diamonds and partner followed with the five—the lowest outstanding card. That marked him with an odd number of cards in the suit, so West paused to study prospects for the defense. Declarer surely was marked with at least a six-card trump suit and the two missing side-suit aces for his jump. Since he could set up a diamond trick with just one more lead, that meant that he had 10 tricks available—six spades, one heart, one diamond and two clubs.

If the defenders were to prevail, they had to collect their four tricks in a hurry. Two were there in diamonds; the other two would have to come from hearts. A glance at dummy's jack of hearts was enough to convince West that he could not achieve his goal by leading a heart honor. The only chance was to hope that East held the 10 of hearts and declarer the nine.

I therefore, West shifted to his low heart at trick two. Not surprisingly, declarer elected to play for split honors and ducked in dummy, hoping that West's holding included the 10. The defenders were now assured of two tricks in each red suit.

Tornadoes

By Tricia Morgan

Thunderous raging
Over us a dark cloud arose.
Roaring wind,
Never ending funnel,
Angry, gusting wind,

Doors breaking and houses
collapsing,
Objects flying up and down,
Everything is still,
Still as the night, once again.

New Life

By Denise Mangum

Mother Nature tiptoes in on the cold earth,
And with a warm and tender touch,
She calls new life to birth.

She takes her springtime
And with strokes so sure and true,
She colors brown grass green
once more,
And paints the heavens blue.

Join the endless cycle to renew life again.

As she calls new life to birth,
As only nature can,
She reminds us of the promise of God's holy plan.

With a kiss of sunlight,
She coaxes sap to flow,
And roses to push their blossoms through slowly melting snow.

Songbirds welcome her springtime call
To fly back home, and then

The Wish

By Laura Barwick

Once upon a time there lived a beautiful little girl, she was a maid for a living. Her name was Elizabeth. She had long black hair, rosy red cheeks, snowy white skin and a beautiful crystal pink dress. She also had one wish that she would marry a handsome young prince.

One day she went out to scrub the porch. There was a wishing well on the porch. She stared at the well for a while and then she thought about all her wishes, then she dropped her pail and mop and rushed indoors and she crept into her master's bedroom and got a penny. She rushed back outside and onto the porch, she dropped the penny in the well and said, "I wish I had a prince on this very porch now." And with that, she had a prince on that very porch. He asked Elizabeth, "Will

Oh, yes, yes, yes, I will," said Elizabeth. And with that, they had their wedding day, and lived happily ever after.

Laura Barwick, 7, a student at Falkland Elementary School receives special mention.

Nature

By Shane Styles

Nature is a fighting man,
At times he is very fierce and strong.
The storms forever blowing wild
Can cause him to go wrong.

Nature is a gentleman,
Gentle and caring when called upon;
To take a child's small hand
And lead him through the danger zones.

Nature changes and so does man,
Like a blowing wind and rain.
And sometimes not as we have planned
But as our fate demands.

Shane Styles, 15, a student at J.H. Rose High School receives special mention.

QUICK AND TASTY — As colorful as a serape and sizzling with lively Tex-Mex taste, Panhandle Pork Chops are a one-dish skillet supper ideal for days when time is short. The savory stuffing of cilantro, green onions and picante sauce flavors the chops from within as they simmer to perfection in a spicy blend of rice and bright vegetables.

1-Dish Dinners, Tex-Mex Style, Are Quick, Easy

One-dish dinners are some of the best busy-day mainstays. When these single-skillet suppers and fast-to-fix casseroles boast the spicy flavors favored by Tex-Mex food fans, they make mealtime a fiesta.

The following one-dish dinner recipes, created by Pace Foods' home economists, streamline the way to Tex-Mex taste by teaming fresh fare with quality convenience foods. Both recipes pair popular pork with vegetables and the garden-fresh flavor and jalapeno pepper "punch" of picante sauce. In the cook's choice of mild, medium or hot, it's a sure-fire way to add lively Tex-Mex taste appeal without time-consuming chile preparation.

Panhandle Pork Chops boast serape-bright colors and a rich blend of lively flavors. The savory stuffing of cilantro, picante sauce, green onions and cumin flavors the chops from the inside as they simmer to perfection in a spicy rice and vegetable mixture.

A quick-to-fix casserole that's oven-ready in about 20 minutes, Ranch Style Supper Bake teams pork, potatoes and picante sauce with cheese and vegetables for a true taste of Texas. Serve it with a selection of taco-style toppings — shredded lettuce, tomato, avocado, sour cream and additional picante sauce — and let everyone garnish their own.

If you've already discovered the secret of using picante sauce to add Tex-Mex taste to favorite recipes, you could win up to $3,000 cash for your creativity. The PACE Picante Sauce "Pick Up The Pace" Recipe Contest is accepting entries now through May 31, 1988. With over $6,500 in prizes, the time to enter is now.

Submit your original recipe using at least 1/3 cup PACE picante sauce in one of the three contest categories: A) Appetizers and Snacks, B) Main Dishes or C) Soups and Stews. Recipes will be judged on the basis of great taste, ease of preparation, originality, appearance and appropriate use of picante sauce.

For contest rules write to: RULES; PACE Picante Sauce Recipe Contest, P.O. Box 1333, Houston, Texas, 77251-9904.

Hotel Pastry Chef Jim Dodge Shares A Few Baking Secrets

By CAROL DEEGAN

AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim Dodge is the pastry chef for the Stanford Court hotel in San Francisco. A native of New Hampshire, he comes from a family of hotel owners who spans four generations.

He started young — as a pot washer at his parents' New Hampshire resort when he was 11 years old. He moved through the ranks and, by age 19, was an apprentice sous chef.

Dodge was an apprentice to Swiss pastry chef Fritz Albecker at Albecker's pastry shop in Portsmouth, and worked in Florida and Michigan before joining the Stanford Court in 1978, at age 24.

His new cookbook, "The American Baker: Exquisite Desserts From the Pastry Chef of the Stanford Court" (Simon and Schuster) is a collection of Dodge's recipes, all translated into easy-to-follow instructions for the home cook. The book is beautifully illustrated with 16 full-color photos.

Dodge has taught for years in and around San Francisco. He is a member of the San Francisco Professional Food Society and the International Association of Cooking Schools.

"The American Baker," filled with many of Dodge's professional tips, will most certainly appeal to the experienced baker, but, Dodge says the cookbook is designed for the beginner — to "demystify baking and also to make it more comfortable....There are recipes, like the crisps and the cobblers, that you can really just throw together and it's done."

"People, when they bake, they're used to time and temperature, but those are only guidelines," Dodge said in an interview here. "I try to explain things to look for; for instance, when a cake is done, it shrinks away from the pan, it springs back. I give a lot of guidance on how to approach a recipe."

He says it is important to teach people good basic food knowledge, and that's something else he's tried to do in his cookbook.

"I try to make people aware," he says. "Use your common sense about buying ingredients, about equipment; certainly something as personal as buying equipment. When it comes to equipment, I can give them advice about what works best, but when it comes to buying it, it's what is comfortable to you to work with."

It's clear that Dodge is very proud of the cookbook's layout and design.

"Everything about the book, the design, I wanted to make it very comfortable. I like the size, it opens up wide, it's simple. And the illustrations, there's nothing in here that's ornamental. Everything has a purpose. And I think the illustrations are beautiful."

Dodge described each recipe as he looked through the illustrations. Referring to the first photo, of his Rhubarb Tart with Fresh Strawberries, he explains, "I hate cooked strawberries. I think they become little sponges. And also it wrecks the flavor."

"So what I've done here is take a traditional flavor combination, strawberry and rhubarb, and bake this rhubarb in a crust, let it cool and put fresh strawberries on top, so you have both the fruits at their peak; at their best stages. I do the same thing with apricots and strawberries; bake the apricots and then put the strawberries."

Strawberries — A Springtime Treat

By BARBARA A. MINTER
Tarheel Kitchen

Earliest of the berries to hit the market, strawberries are one of nature's sweeter pleasures. Their vibrant red color is just the beginning of what's in store for those who choose to indulge in this fabulously flavored fruit. Fresh from the field, North Carolina strawberries can be enjoyed now as the season begins the last of April in coastal regions and ends the middle of June in the western part of the state.

Whether you enjoy picking your own berries, or purchasing them in the picked form, look for berries that are firm, yet fully ripe. For once a strawberry has been picked, it will not develop anymore in flavor. That's why local berries are so flavorful compared to those berries which are shipped to us from across country.

Once home, storage plays an important part in retaining the quality of your berries. Store, unwashed and uncapped berries in the refrigerator until you are ready to use them. This will keep your berries from losing their moisture and receiving unwanted bruises.

For those who pick their own berries, now's the time to write for a free North Carolina Berry Guide. This guide will aid you in finding not only strawberry, but blueberry, blackberry, raspberry and grape grower operations across the state. To receive this guide, send a legal size self-addressed stamped envelope to: Berry Guide, N.C. Dept. of Agriculture, P.O. Box 27647, Raleigh, NC 27611.

Creative Chefs Give Quesadillas A Special Taste

By Joan Drake
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Even a simple recipe like quesadillas can reach new heights when placed in the hands of creative chefs. That is precisely what is happening in restaurants around Los Angeles.

Purists might argue that Rebecca's deep-fried Spinach and Roasted Garlic Quesadillas are actually empanaditas. So be it. These hot, crispy turnovers are filled with sautéed spinach, roasted garlic, pasilla chile and Jack cheese. Frying browns the masa and melts the cheese inside. They are served with salsa.

Sabroso uses the same basic techniques to prepare their Blue Corn Harinilla Quesadillas, filled with refried black beans and Cheddar cheese. Harinilla is a fine grind of blue cornmeal, practically the texture of flour. If unavailable at markets, the restaurant sells it at $3 a pound. We created a similar product by grinding coarser blue cornmeal in a food processor.

After watching Rebecca's chef Bill Huffer prepare their specialty, we referred to detailed written instructions from Janine Coyle of Sabroso and, with a little practice, were able to duplicate the procedure of forming and filling the tortillas. A deep-fat fryer was used to control the temperature of the lard and oil during frying.

Dear Readers: Congratulations Greenville, I heard the cholesterol screenings sponsored by the Pitt County Health Department and the East Carolina University School of Medicine were a great success. Sue Daughtry, nutritionist in medicine, told me the Brody Auditorium was packed with folks eager to learn more about diet and heart disease. It's great to hear that our community is taking interest in lowering the number of people hit by premature heart disease.

If you've got June 3 free, you may want to attend an all-day program in Raleigh called, "Diet and Heart Disease — Encouraging North Carolinians to Follow the National Cholesterol Education Program." For a registration fee of $20 you'll get a heart healthy lunch and hear from outstanding national speakers. This program is sponsored by the N.C. Agricultural Extension Service and will be held at N.C. State University's McKimmon Center. Dr. John LaRosa, director of Lipid Research Clinic, George Washington University, will describe how diet affects your blood lipids. I'll have the privilege of comparing the typical North Carolina eating patterns to the national guidelines. Mary Jo Feeny of the Carolina Beef Council will describe how red meat, poultry and fish fit into a heart healthy diet. Dr. David Hurt of Quaker Oats will talk about dietary fiber and other changes the food industry is making. Dr. Julie Jones of St. Catherine's, Minn., will be the luncheon speaker on "lite foods," and Bonnie Friedman of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill School of Nursing will give hints on how to keep from falling back into old habits. I've heard most of the speakers before and can recommend you attend with confidence. It's quite a bargain too. If you want more information, call the local agricultural extension service at 830-6370. This meeting is open to all North Carolinians. I hope to see easterners there.

Dear Readers: Need a quick and easy menu idea or spice information? McCormick Spice Co. has a series of prerecorded messages you can call for ideas on beef, poultry, seafood, vegetables and desserts. The messages change twice a month. Call toll free: 1-800-MEAL-TIPS.

Dear Readers: Attention older adults! The Pitt County Elder Fair will be Thursday from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Cypress Glen Retirement Center. You can choose to attend a talk in the morning on communication, leisure, nutrition or health care financing. In the late morning, you can choose a talk on arthritis, wills/estate planning or medications. State Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr. will be the keynote speaker. Call Freda Cross, patient and family services, Pitt County Memorial Hospital at 551-4331 for more information.

Pastry Chef Jim Dodge Shares Several Of His Baking Secrets

The third photograph: Coconut Cream Pie.

"It's hard to get a flavor out of coconut; the best way is to toast it. But I don't like toasted coconut on top, so I decided to put it in the crust, surrounded by butter, and it becomes toasted and the flavor really comes out and it caramelizes, so it goes very well with the filling," Dodge says.

Dodge is planning his next cookbook, which he says will include a chapter "just on apple pies."

1-Dish Meals Please

1 1/2 teaspoons ground cumin
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1 medium onion, chopped
1 can (14 1/2 or 16 oz.) tomatoes, undrained and coarsely chopped

1 cup long grain rice, uncooked
1/2 cup chicken broth
1/2 cup chopped green pepper

Cut deep pocket in meaty portion of chops parallel to flat surface. Combine 1/3 cup of the picante sauce, green onions, 1/4 cup of the cilantro and 1/2 teaspoon of the cumin. Stuff each chop with about 1/4 of the vegetable mixture; secure with wooden picks. Sprinkle both sides of chops with 1/2 teaspoon of the cumin and 1/2 teaspoon of the salt; rub seasonings into meat. Heat oil in 10-inch skillet over medium-high heat; brown chops about 3 minutes on each side. Remove chops; reserve. Pour off all but about 1 tablespoon of the drippings. Saute onion in drippings until tender. Add tomatoes, rice, broth, remaining 2/3 cup picante sauce and remaining 1/2 teaspoon cumin and salt; mix well. Place chops over rice mixture; bring to a boil. Reduce heat; cover and simmer 20 minutes. Add green pepper; cover and simmer until most of liquid is absorbed, about 5 minutes. Sprinkle with remaining cilantro and serve with additional picante sauce. Makes 4 servings.

RANCH STYLE SUPPER BAKE

1 large onion, chopped
1 clove garlic, minced
1 can (14 1/2 or 16 oz.) tomatoes, undrained and coarsely chopped
3/4 cup picante sauce
1 large green pepper, chopped
1 teaspoon ground cumin
1 teaspoon salt
8 oz. frozen diced hash browned potatoes, thawed
1 1/2 cups (6 oz.) shredded cheddar cheese
Optional garnishes: shredded lettuce, chopped tomato, sliced avocado, dairy sour cream

Brown meat with onion and garlic in 10-inch skillet; drain. Stir in tomatoes, picante sauce, green pepper, cumin and salt. Simmer uncovered 15 minutes or until most of liquid is absorbed. Stir in potatoes and 1 cup of the cheese; pour into 11 x 7-inch baking dish (at this point, casserole may be covered and refrigerated until baking time). Bake at 350 degrees F for 30 minutes or until heated through. Sprinkle with remaining cheese. Let stand 5 minutes before serving. Garnish as desired; cut into squares to serve. Serve with additional picante sauce. Makes 6 servings.

Challenge Produces Secret Cheesecake Recipe

By JUSTIN CATANOSO
Greensboro News & Record
WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — It all started as a challenge, the kind only a serious student of the culinary arts could appreciate: the quest for the perfect cheesecake.

John Hudson, a chef from Granite Quarry, a small town just outside Salisbury, subconsciously accepted that challenge when he stumbled upon a recipe in a cooking magazine about seven years ago.

"It was praline cheesecake with a caramel topping and nuts," said Hudson, a burly man with a soft voice. "I made it exactly like the recipe called for. But it didn't turn out as it should have. So I remodified the recipe for about 2½ years until I got it exactly the way I wanted it."

Hudson wasn't aware the direction his quest would take him. He couldn't foresee the 70-hour weeks making cheesecakes after his regular work was done. He couldn't foresee starting his own small baking operation in Winston-Salem that ships his "creamy creations" to restaurants throughout the Triad and as far east as Chapel Hill and as far west as Jonesborough, Tenn.

At the time, all he knew was "when I made one, a lot of times my brother-in-law would eat the whole thing and talk about how good it was. I rarely ate a piece of it."

Hudson took to cooking at an early age. Born and raised in Ridgeway, S.C., near Columbia, he used to stay home and prepare Sunday dinners while the family was at church. With guests including cousins, aunts and uncles, sometimes the teen-ager was cooking for 20 people.

"I just enjoyed cooking," he said. "My favorite meal was chicken and rice and greens. I did a lot of cakes, too. Just things I made off the top of my head. I just whipped them up and they came out great. I surprised myself."

Hudson later attended Johnson Business College in Washington, D.C., studied cooking and graduated to work as a chef in restaurants in and around the capital for about 10 years.

He moved his family to North Carolina in 1980 because he wanted his children to grow up in a more tranquil environment than suburban Washington. And in 1984, at a Greek restaurant named McCabe's in Kannapolis, Hudson tried his yet unveiled, but nearly perfected, cheesecake recipe on some unsuspecting customers.

One day the man he was working for bought some cream cheese to make no-bake cheesecakes, Hudson recalled.

"But the party he bought it for cancelled out and he didn't know what to do with the cream cheese. So I took it and made my cheesecake in a sheet cake pan. Some of his customers got a piece and liked it."

ing and slow baking time.

"A New York style cheesecake is too heavy," Hudson said. "When you bite down in it, it sticks to the roof of your mouth. Philadelphia style is lighter, but not as light as I like it. Mine is smooth and creamy. It's different from anything you've ever eaten. It's like eating ice cream. The quality is there."

But in the spring of 1984, the customers weren't. So on the advice of the Greek restaurant owner and a friend in Washington, Hudson undertook the challenge of testing his cheesecake in the marketplace.

For nearly five months, he drove to Washington on Friday nights, baked for 20 hours, produced 350 cheesecakes, then drove back to North Carolina to be at work Monday morning.

When that got to be a grind, Hudson moved his fledgling company into the kitchen of his Granite Quarry home. There he spent all his free time baking cheesecakes in the family oven.

"At the house, I didn't have a commercial oven," Hudson said.

"Couldn't bake but six at a time. If I baked 'round the clock, I could bake 50 a day."

By this time, Hudson was the full-time, head chef at the Salisbury Country Club. When his cheesecake sales to restaurants in Charlotte, Salisbury and Concord began to equal his chef's salary, he figured it was time to transfer his kitchen operation into a legitimate business.

In August 1986, the Hudson Baking Co. opened at the Winston-Salem Business & Technology Center, a small business incubator. Though he now has a large commercial oven and industrial-size mixer, Hudson still does all the baking. Two assistants help with packaging and delivering.

Use Leftovers For Next Meal

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens Food Editor

TASTY IDEAS FOR YESTERDAY'S LEFTOVERS

A Louisiana cook told me, "There are no leftovers in my cooking, just ingredients for the next meal." What a great way to think about the meat, rice, pasta and other foods you cooked a bit too much of. Here are ideas for using some of those foods as ingredients.

COOKED MEAT

— Stews: Add cubed beef, chicken, pork, ham, or lamb to your recipe at the end of cooking time and heat through.

— More ideas: Beef stroganoff, turkey divan, meat-and-rice-stuffed vegetables, chopped salad mixtures for sandwiches.

COOKED PASTA

— Pasta salad: Toss pasta with mixed vegetables and bottled Italian salad dressing. Chill a few hours to blend the flavors.

— Omelets: Stir noodles or spaghetti into beaten eggs just before cooking.

COOKED RICE

— Rice and beans: Combine long grain rice with a can of spicy chili beans; heat through. Sprinkle each serving with shredded cheddar cheese.

— Soup: Stir wild rice or brown rice and leftover cooked or canned vegetables into chicken broth; heat through.

— Breakfast: Warm long grain rice and a little milk in the microwave or in a saucepan on top of the range; top with raisins and sprinkle with cinnamon-sugar. Serve immediately.

— More ideas: Fried rice, rice pudding, rice dumplings, or sushi.

COOKED VEGETABLES

— Stir-frying: Toss leftover vegetables such as broccoli cuts, cauliflower, carrots or peas into a stir-fry recipe and heat through.

— Chili: Stir corn, peas, hominy or any type of beans into your favorite chili recipe just before serving.

Chefs Perform Magic

1 medium pasilla chile
1/2 large bunch spinach leaves
1 tablespoon olive oil
1/2 teaspoon salt
5 ounces grated Jack cheese
6 ounces fresh prepared masa
Melted lard or shortening for deep frying

Tomatillo Cilantro Salsa
Roast garlic at 350 degrees 5 to 10 minutes or until soft. Peel, mince coarsely and set aside.

Roast chile over gas flame or hot coals until skin turns black and bubbles. Place in plastic bag and set aside 2 to 3 minutes. Rinse off blackened skin under running water. Remove seeds and core, then finely dice chile and set aside.

Clean and coarsely chop spinach leaves. Sauté briefly in olive oil in large skillet or sauté pan. Add salt, garlic and chile. Continue to cook over medium heat until spinach is fully wilted. Cool, then fold cheese in to spinach mixture and set aside.

Knead masa dough with hands several minutes until smooth. Divide into 6 (1-ounce) balls. Place 1 portion between 2 plastic circles in tortilla press and press to 4-inch diameter. Peel off top plastic circle.

Scoop 1 rounded tablespoon filling and compress into oval in palm of hand. Place in center of masa round. Fold masa in half around filling and pinch edges through plastic to seal quesadilla in half moon shape.

Peel off plastic and place quesadilla on baking pan and cover with damp towel to protect moisture. Quesadillas are very delicate and should not be overlapped or stacked. Repeat procedure for remaining 5 quesadillas.

Meanwhile heat melted lard to 375 degrees over medium high heat. Fry quesadillas, few at a time, 2 minutes or until golden brown on both sides, turning once. Drain on paper towels. Serve with Tomatillo-Cilantro Salsa. Makes 6 quesadillas.

Note: Fresh tortilla masa dough is available at Latin markets and in some supermarkets.

Tomatillo-Cilantro Salsa

1/4 small white onion, chopped
1/2 serrano chile, seeded and chopped

1 cup water, about
1/2 bunch cilantro
Salt

Peel and wash tomatillos. Combine in saucepan with onion, chile and 1 cup water. Simmer until dull in color and tomatillos are tender, about 10 minutes. Chill.

Wash cilantro, remove stems and dry. Combine with tomatillo mixture in food processor or blender and puree. Thin with water, if necessary, to desired consistency. Season to taste with salt. Refrigerate overnight to blend flavors. Makes about 2 cups.

AUTHENTIC CAFE QUESADILLA WITH PAPAYA AND BRIE

Margarine
4 (10-inch) flour tortillas
12 ounces brie cheese
1/4 to 1/2 cup coarsely chopped roasted pasilla chile

1 cup finely diced papaya
Guacamole
Salsa
Sour cream

Place 1 to 2 teaspoons margarine on warm grill or in 12-inch skillet or sauté pan over low heat. Add 1 tortilla and top with 3 ounces brie cheese, 1 to 2 tablespoons chopped chile and 1/4 cup papaya. Allow cheese to melt about 3 to 5 minutes, then fold tortilla in half.

Remove from grill and cut into 5 pieces. Repeat procedure for remaining 3 quesadillas. Serve with guacamole, salsa and sour cream. Makes 4 servings.

SONORA CAFE LEEK AND GOAT CHEESE QUESADILLAS

1 cup sliced leeks
1/4 pound fresh shiitake mushrooms, sliced
1/4 cup butter
1/2 teaspoon ground cumin
1/2 teaspoon ground Mexican oregano

10 ounces goat cheese
12 (6-inch) flour tortillas
Finely diced red (or yellow) and green peppers

Cilantro leaves
Sliced avocado, optional
Fresh Fruit Relish
Guajillo Chile Sauce

Sauté leeks and mushrooms in butter until tender. Stir in cumin and oregano. Cream goat cheese, then fold leek mixture into cheese.

Spread each tortilla with about 1/2 ounces goat cheese mixture. Fold in half and place on baking sheet. Bake at 350 degrees 5 minutes. Sprinkle quesadillas with confetti of finely diced red and green peppers. Garnish with cilantro and sliced avocados and serve with Fresh Fruit Relish and Guajillo Chile Sauce. Makes 12 servings.

Fresh Fruit Relish

1 small papaya, peeled and coarsely diced
1/4 cup diced mango (if in season)
Juice of 2 limes
6 large strawberries, coarsely diced

2 tablespoons sugar or to taste
2 tablespoons chopped mint
Combine papaya, mango, lime juice, strawberries, sugar and chopped mint in bowl. Mix lightly to blend flavors. Makes 12 servings.

Guajillo Chile Sauce

1/2 cup chopped onion
1 1/2 teaspoons minced garlic

2 tablespoons olive oil
1/2 teaspoon dried oregano
1/2 teaspoon ground cumin
1/2 teaspoon ground black pepper
1/2 teaspoon guajillo or ancho chile paste

1 1/2 teaspoons pasilla chile paste
2 cups tomato puree
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup chicken stock
Sauté onion and garlic in olive oil until tender. Add oregano, cumin, pepper and chile pastes. Cook 3 minutes.

Add tomato puree, salt and chicken stock. Simmer 15 minutes. Makes 12 servings.

Note: Chile pastes may be made by adding water to ground chile power, pureeing canned chiles with small amount of liquid or soaking dried chiles in hot water, then drain off almost all water, peel, seed and puree pulp in food processor or blender.

TUMBLEWEED QUESADILLA FILLED

WITH BRISKET OF BEEF AND QUESO ANEJO

1 pound shredded brisket, slow smoked with hickory wood
1/4 cup finely chopped red onions
1/4 cup ancho chili paste

Salt

Water or beef broth

16 (5-inch) homemade corn tortillas, lightly cooked
1/4 cup crumbled anejo cheese
2 tablespoons unsalted butter

Combine brisket, onions, chili paste and salt to taste. Add water or beef broth if mixture is dry. Divide meat mixture between 8 tortillas. Top each with equal amount cheese and second tortilla. Melt butter on griddle or in skillet. Cook tortillas until browned on both sides, turning once. Makes 8 servings.

Note: If anejo cheese is not available, substitute queso fresco. To approximate brisket served at restaurant, prepare by following recipe or add liquid smoke to roasted brisket.

Hickory Smoked Brisket

1 (3- to 3 1/2-pound) beef brisket
2 to 3 cups low-sodium beef stock

Trim any excess fat from brisket. Place in foil pan large enough to hold easily. Place pan in center of double sheet heavy foil large enough to wrap around brisket and pan and seal well. Add 1 1/2 cups beef stock to pan, then bring foil up over meat and wrap, sealing well so no steam or liquid can escape.

Place pan in covered grill with coals placed for indirect heat (on sides of grill and not directly under meat). Cover and open top and bottom grill vents just enough to maintain 250- to 300-degree (low to medium) heat.

Cook brisket 4 to 5 hours or until meat shreds when flaked with fork, replacing charcoal as needed during cooking to maintain heat. Open package after about 3 hours to check if more beef broth is needed. Reseal package well.

When meat can be shredded, open package and fold foil back. Add drained water-soaked hickory chips to coals. Add additional beef broth to pan if needed. Close cover and cook 45 minutes to 1 hour longer, adding hickory chips once or twice, if desired. Makes 1 to 2 pounds shredded meat.

SABROSO BLUE CORN

Dash salt
1 cup boiling water
Frijoles Refritos (Refried Beans)
1 cup shredded sharp Cheddar cheese
Peanut oil for deep fat frying

Combine harinilla and salt in mixing bowl. Slowly add boiling water and blend thoroughly (Dough should be damp enough to mold into balls).

Form dough into 1 1/2-inch balls. Place 1 portion between 2 plastic circles in tortilla press and press to 4-inch diameter. Peel off top plastic circle.

Place 1/2 teaspoon bean mixture and 1/2 teaspoon cheese on tortilla. Fold in half around filling and pinch edges through plastic to seal quesadilla in half moon shape. Peel off plastic. Repeat procedure for remaining 5 quesadillas.

Meanwhile heat oil to 400 degrees over medium high heat. Fry quesadillas, few at a time, 2 minutes or until golden brown on both sides, turning once. Drain on paper towels. Makes 10 to 12 quesadillas.

Note: Blue corn harinilla is very finely ground blue corn meal, with a texture similar to flour.

Frijoles Refritos (Refried Beans)

1 tablespoon rendered pork fat or olive oil
2 tablespoons chopped onion
1 cup cooked black beans
1 teaspoon chile or hot pepper sauce

Salt
Heat fat in sauté pan or skillet. Add onion and sauté until well browned. Add beans and onion, stirring constantly, until mixture forms paste. Add chile sauce and salt to taste. Makes about 3/4 cup.

Note: 1 (15-ounce) can black beans may be substituted for cooked beans.
