Whittington Says Charges Near In Mail Theft

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Television evangelist Jim Whittington said this morning that he expects charges to be brought against a U.S. Postal Service worker in connection with his charges that money has been taken from mail sent to Whittington's Fountain of Life ministry.

"First of all," Whittington said, "we have released the name of a person (to postal inspectors) who two people have identified and will testify that has tampered with our mail."

And, Whittington said, "We found out some surprising things. ... This is bigger than what we thought it was. There are other government agencies looking into this."

But Whittington, in a telephone interview, declined to identify the individual he expects to be charged or to say where the person works. All Whittington would say was that "the person is a postal employee."

And the evangelist would not say what the "surprising things" were, or what other government agencies are involved in the investigation.

"I cannot comment on that due to the investigation," Whittington said.

Whittington charged late last week that between $300,000 and $400,000 had been pilfered from mail sent to his Fountain of Life ministry in the past 18 months.

He offered a $5,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons responsible.

Whittington said this morning that "the investigation is going on. We do have a person that it looks like is going to collect the $5,000 reward. She told me she wanted the money because she is helping. And she will be paid the money," Whittington said, if the person is arrested and convicted.

But Whittington, asked when charges might be brought in connection with his allegations, said, "I have no idea when."

The evangelist added, "I'd also like to say, by all means, that I do not feel the majority of the people who work for the post office would steal or are that type people.

"It only takes one bad preacher to make all preachers look crooked. It only takes one bad post office worker to make all post office employees look crooked. No way do I want to cast inuendoes about innocent people," Whittington emphasized.

"In the last six years," Whittington said, "the Fountain of Life has spent with the local post office in Greenville $1,707,801.57 just for postage.

That averages out to $483,645.10 a year.

"The reason I'm releasing this," Whittington said, "is it's been accused, in the past, that all I do is raise money, drive expensive cars, expensive power boats and never contribute anything back to this community. That money (spent on postage) would pay a lot of salaries per year.

U.S. Monitoring Soviets' Decaying Nuclear Satellite

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials said today they are monitoring a nuclear-powered Soviet satellite that the Tass news agency says will fall to earth this August or September.

Maj. Alex Mondragon, a spokesman for the U.S. Space Command, in Colorado Springs, Colo., said that the satellite, Kosmos 1900, "has been in a steadily decaying orbit for the last month. If nothing is done to correct its orbit, it will decay," and reenter earth atmosphere.

The official Soviet Tass news agency reported this morning that Kosmos 1900 has a nuclear power plant aboard, and would fall to earth in August or September, but that the radioactive material aboard would not present a danger.

Neither Tass nor the U.S. spokesman described the mission of Kosmos 1900, but it is believed to be one of two RORSAT satellites the Soviets have in orbit to monitor the movement of American warships. RORSAT is an American designation which stands for Radar Ocean Reconnaissance Satellite.

The Tass announcement, made available by the agency's office in Washington, said that "the artificial earth satellite Kosmos 1900, with a nuclear power plant aboard, was launched Dec. 12, 1987."

"According to competent Soviet organizations, radio contact with the satellite was lost in April 1988. The satellite is continuing in its oriented flight, and the main service systems are functioning according to the program.

"The satellite will fly in orbit until August-September 1988, after which it will cease to exist. The satellite Kosmos 1900 has systems insuring radiation safety on completion of the flight," Tass said.

The Tass announcement came as a top Soviet space official, Roald Sagdeyev, and private American scientists urged a ban on nuclear reactors in earth orbit, a measure designed to block the Reagan administration's Star Wars program. Such a ban also would end RORSAT.

Theater Site Rezoning Denied

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

An attempt to commercially rezone most of the former drive-in theater site on N.C. 11 could not muster enough support among Greenville City Council members at Thursday's regular monthly meeting at City Hall.

The council came in deadlocked 3-3 on a request by Gladys Tice to rezone 8.1 acres of the site just north of Pitt Community College from RA-20 (residential-agriculture) to CS (shopping center). Five council votes were legally necessary for passage because a valid protest petition had been filed on the matter.

Voting against the commercial rezoning were Council members Inez Fridley, Nancy Jenkins and Mildred Council.

Among those speaking in opposition to the request at the meeting was Clifton Everett, chairman of the board of trustees at PCC.

Everett said the board was unanimously opposed to the commercial zoning, believing a shopping center so closely located to the college would be detrimental to PCC's educational environment.

"We do seriously contend that our college ought not to be burdened with a shopping center. We have numbers of them up the road which serve the public adequately," he told the council. Six members of PCC's board of trustees attended the meeting.

J.C. Bowen, an adjacent resident of the Tice property who had filed the protest petition regarding the matter, also spoke in opposition to the CS rezoning, citing concerns of a probable traffic increase brought by further commercialization on N.C. 11.

"I'm very concerned that someone's going to put a shopping center right in my front yard," he said.

Gladys Tice, owner of the property, told the council she could not maintain the property as it should be and would like to sell. She said a potential buyer had expressed interest in the land contingent on zoning.

Ms. Tice said it is obvious any expansion of PCC would involve her property.

"If they are not interested in it, I wish they would let us zone it in such a way that we could sell it," she said.

Everett said the college is interested in the land but is presently unable to make the purchase.

The council did, however, agree to a second part of the request, to rezone a 100 foot strip of the tract, 1.8 acres located along SR 1147, from RA-20 to O&I (office and institutional).

Producer Costs Up In April

WASHINGTON (AP) — The steepest energy price gain in 15 months pushed wholesale costs up a moderate 0.4 percent in April, the government said today. Food prices were modestly higher.

If the April increase held for 12 straight months, inflation at the wholesale level would register an annual increase of 4.6 percent, more than double the 2.2 percent 1987 wholesale price rise.

The April increase, coming after a 0.6 percent gain in March, the sharpest rise in almost a year, seems certain to add to concerns that inflation is reheating.

In an effort to cool off the economy, the Federal Reserve has recently moved to make cash less readily available to the nation's banking system. That credit tightening prompted the nation's major banks on Wednesday to boost their prime lending rate from 8.5 percent to 9 percent as concern spread that inflation is now a greater threat than recession.

Energy prices, which had posted sharp declines from September through February, recorded a 3.1 percent surge, dramatically higher, even, than the 0.9 percent jump of March.

Such prices, which Labor Department analysts said accounted for half of the rise in the overall index, have not jumped so steeply since January 1987.

The energy price surge was widespread, with the cost of gasoline up 0.7 percent, the price of home heating oil up 5.2 percent and the cost of natural gas up 4.3 percent.

Analysts, noting that crude oil prices are on the upswing, say motorists can expect further rises in gasoline prices.

Negotiators Settle Final Snag On Arms Ban Treaty

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Hours after the superpowers resolved anti-cheating issues blocking Senate debate on ratifying a nuclear missile-ban treaty, another hitch emerged, U.S. officials said today.

The new dispute kept American and Soviet negotiators up through the night before it was settled shortly after dawn.

The disagreement was over the size of canisters that could leave a Soviet missile assembly plant without being subject to U.S. inspection.

"They are hard bargainers," Secretary of State George P. Shultz told a news conference at NATO headquarters. "They keep trying us on for size."

He did not accuse the Soviets of bad faith, but said the United States would remain on guard as the treaty to scrap intermediate-range missiles is implemented.

In Geneva on Thursday, Shultz wound up negotiations with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze and declared: "We feel all of the issues have been dealt with satisfactorily."

But a few hours later, the Soviets telephoned U.S. negotiator Maynard Glitman to demand a revision.

The argument raged through the night in Geneva and was settled with agreement that all canisters longer than 46.2 feet must be subject to inspection. The Soviets had wanted the figure to be 67.7 feet, a U.S. official said.

The official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the United States wanted to make sure parts for missiles banned by the treaty were not illegally shipped from the plant.

He said, however, such a Soviet violation was extremely unlikely.

The dispute was disclosed to reporters as Shultz flew to Brussels to brief North Atlantic Treaty Organization foreign ministers and other allied officials on the negotiations in Geneva.

After being briefed by Shultz, the ministers said they were pleased that the last-minute hitches had been resolved.

"We very much welcome what Secretary Shultz had to say today," David Mellor, a British minister of state, told reporters.

Hans-Dietrich Genscher, the West German foreign minister, said it was important that the treaty banning medium-range nuclear missiles be ratified by the U.S. Senate and implemented as soon as possible.

Genscher, in remarks to reporters, said the treaty was "a significant contribution to the unity, firmness and cohesion of the Western alliance."

Shevardnadze, meanwhile, flew to East Berlin to brief the six other Warsaw Pact foreign ministers on his two days with Shultz.

The verification document signed Thursday seeks to end disputes over where U.S. inspectors of Soviet missile sites will be able to go and what they can look at.

Chestnut Project Papers Opposed

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

An argument regarding the content of a proposed Community Block Grant Application erupted at Thursday's Greenville City Council meeting, sparking the allegations that the grant application does not take into consideration the best interests of the community it is designed to assist.

The grant application, known as the Chestnut Street Community Development Project, is proposing to rehabilitate 44 substandard housing units in the area of Dickenson Avenue, 14th Street, Myrtle Avenue, and Columbia Avenue.

Also included in the $570,240 grant request are provisions to rehabilitate six owner-occupied structures scattered in other areas of west Greenville.

At a public hearing on the request Thursday night, members of the West Greenville Community Development Corp. argued the grant application is aimed at helping inappropriate beneficiaries and does not address the proper structures.

After listening to details of the application, Mayor Ed Carter asked the city staff to re-examine the application in its present form to try to incorporate more of the West Greenville Development's concerns into the application. Those alternatives will be presented to the council at its May 18 budget session at City Hall. The public hearing on the matter is to be continued at that time.

Barbara Brockett-Fenner told the council that a greater percentage of homeowners should benefit from the grant rather than the owners of rental units.

"Even though there may be low income people renting these apartments, the major impact is provided to the owner," she said. "Elderly people that live right next door, because they own their homes, are entitled to nothing."

She also said the proposal concentrates on a small, concentrated area of structures, while others scattered throughout west Greenville are in greater need of grant assistance.

Sign Ban Leaves Inns Out Of View

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

Art Thompson, manager of the Hilton Inn and a member of the Pitt-Greenville Convention and Visitors Authority, is worried the recently approved ban on outdoor advertising signs along U.S. 264 will cause motorists to miss many of the hotels, restaurants and businesses in the area.

"My concern is now we are directing traffic around the north side of town and they are ending up in Washington before they find a hotel," Thompson said.

The new stretch of U.S. 264 brings motorists into Greenville past Pitt County Memorial Hospital, instead of along Greenville Boulevard where the Hilton is located, and Thompson said the hotel gets calls from travelers who cannot find the hotel. Thompson told the authority at their Thursday meeting that some type of signs need to be erected to direct travelers to local businesses.

Thompson is in the process of changing some billboards he has in Wilson that direct travelers to the Hilton on the 264 bypass. Now the new stretch of 264 is called the bypass and Greenville Boulevard is called 264-alternate.

Once the northwest portion of the bypass is completed, motorists will be able to loop around Greenville to the eastern bypass and never drive into the city, and Thompson said the problem will be worse by then unless some informational signs are erected.

Authority member John West discussed introducing a resolution to show that the authority supports informational signs on the highway and to let the county commissioners know the position of the authority, but no action was taken Thursday.

Thompson, who is working to develop sign ideas which will comply with the new ordinance, said the authority should move forward and create definite proposals to present to county planner Jeff Ulma.

The authority's executive director, Al Nichols, met with Ulma to find out if informational signs like the ones appearing on interstate highways might be allowed under the sign ordinance approved by the county commissioners. The authority is not asking for an exception to the ordinance, Nichols said.

"Basically, Jeff told me the new regulations parallel the state's divi-

Former Patients Discuss Mental Health Services

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Mark A. Davis of Pennsylvania and Roy Callis of Durham talked to those attending a Mental Health Association in Pitt County luncheon Thursday about the need for mental health service consumer self-help groups and services.

Both men are former mental patients who say that their recoveries came about largely through involvement in mental health consumer groups. Both spend much of their time now promoting consumer programs and educating the public about them.

Davis said he spent six years as a mental patient and was hospitalized in six different places before his recovery. He told of his misdiagnoses, wrong medications, homelessness, attempted suicides and having people reject him and mistreat him out of their own fear of mental illness.

He said his self-esteem plummeted during that period of his life. So even though he had done well academically and been a leader in the past — even Student Government Association president at Bowling Green University in Kentucky — it looked until 1984 as if his future would be as a dependent member of society.

But with a right diagnosis — manic depression — and right medication, including daily lithium, he was able to start functioning again. He got into a group home situation, did well in it, and even started a job being responsible for another program for mental health clients while he was still living in the group home himself. He now works for mental health system consumers' rights and programs in Pennsylvania and throughout the nation. He heads the "I CAN — Involved Consumer Action Network of Pennsylvania."

Callis said he was working for the telephone company, doing quite well he thought, when his battle with mental illness began in 1970. Over 15 years, he was hospitalized 29 times. He said his recovery began only when he got the support of people at Threshold House in Durham. He became editor of its newsletters for mental and former patients and now works in consumer causes in North Carolina and throughout the nation.

Both Davis and Callis said much more needs to be done to enable mental health consumers to help themselves. They said residential situations are needed, as well as support groups.

Both said they would be available to bolster self-help programs for consumers in Pitt County and assist those who would like to be supportive of consumers.

Greenville Industries OKs Building Grant

The Greenville Industries' board of directors voted to contribute $10,000 to the county's shell building fund following the organization's annual stockholders meeting Thursday.

The board also re-elected Charles Horne Jr. as president. Other officers re-elected include William H. Clark at vice president, Robert B. Wilkerson and secretary and James G. Sullivan as treasurer.

Greenville Industries, formed years ago to purchase land and make it available for development in the industrial park area north of Greenville, still owns some 285 acres of land in the industrial park, worth at least $5,000 an acre.

The Pitt County board of Commissioners, earlier this year, at the request of the county's development commission, agreed to match — dollar-for-dollar — up to $500,000 in private contributions for the shell building fund.

John Chaffee, the development commission's executive director, said the money will be used to build shell buildings for sale to industrial prospects.

He said commitments totaling $100,000 have been received so far.

Chaffee, who reviewed industrial activity over the past year for stockholders, reported that 700 new manufacturing jobs are to be created in the county as a result of decisions made during 1987 — 345 of which are jobs resulting from new industries establishing plants in Pitt.

Chaffee also discussed the development commission's expanded marketing program, including: the hiring of a public relations firm to generate news stories about Pitt County for national and international distribution; the direct mail program which sends information about the county to targeted company chief executive officers; and additional advertising designed to complement the direct mail effort.

NOTICE TO WINTERVILLE WATER SYSTEM CUSTOMERS

The United States Congress amended the Safe Drinking Water Act in 1986. One requirement of this Act is that all people using public water systems should be notified of the potential for exposure to lead through the water distribution system and the plumbing in individual homes. All public water systems are required to make this notification even if there is no evidence of lead contamination and the drinking water complies with the Standards established by EPA.

The State of North Carolina and the North Carolina Section of the American Water Works Association have developed this notice which may be used by public water suppliers in order to comply with the Safe Drinking Water Act. All public water suppliers who do not exceed the EPA established Maximum Contaminant Levels for lead may use this notice to inform their customers of the potential for lead contamination.

Lead accumulates in the body from three potential sources. The major source is food, followed by air and drinking water.

Lead has been a common component of the materials used in the construction of water distribution systems and household plumbing throughout the centuries. While water supply systems do not still use lead joints and services, some older parts of existing systems may contain lead.

Lead is also commonly found in the soldered joints and the plumbing fixtures of older as well as modern homes and buildings. All water, even that which has been treated to reduce corrosiveness, can cause traces of lead to dissolve in the drinking water.

The United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) sets drinking water standards and has determined that lead is a health concern at certain levels of exposure. There is currently a standard of 0.050 parts per million (ppm). Based on new health information, EPA is likely to lower this standard significantly.

Part of the purpose of this notice is to inform you of the potential adverse health effects of lead. This is being done even though your water may not be in violation of the current standard.

EPA and others are concerned about lead in drinking water. Too much lead in the human body can cause serious damage to the brain, kidneys, nervous system, and red blood cells. The greatest risk, even with short-term exposure, is to young children and pregnant women.

Lead levels in your drinking water are likely to be highest:

- if your home or water system has lead pipes, or
- if your home has copper pipes with lead solder, and
- if the home is less than five years old, or
- if you have soft or acidic water, or
- if water sits in the pipes for several hours.

The American Water Works Association recommends that the cold water tap run for a sufficient amount of time to clear standing water from the line prior to using it for consumption (approximately two to three minutes). This should be done in the morning or after the system has not been in use for several hours.

Since hot water dissolves lead more quickly than cold water, use water from the cold water tap for drinking and cooking purposes, and especially for making baby formula.

When making any repairs or additions to the drinking water lines always insist that "lead-free" solder be used.

All public water supplies in the United States are monitored for lead and other potential contaminants to insure that Maximum Contaminant Levels established by EPA are not exceeded. In addition, most water suppliers treat the water prior to distribution to reduce corrosiveness which might cause lead to dissolve. The North Carolina building code also now requires that "lead-free" solder be used in drinking water plumbing.

The Department of Human Resources and the public water systems in North Carolina are committed to providing the safest available water to the people of this State.

If you desire further information on your water supply please contact your water system office Winterville Water Dept., Elwood Nobles at 756-2221.

"Truth In Preference To Fiction"

Plan Has Merit

Hasty Rejection Not Good Business

The Pitt County Commissioners' hasty negative response to a base budget concept for county education funding was unfair to a proposal that, if administered correctly, has considerable strengths.

The commissioners did not even take adequate time to hear the proposal from the school board, nor did they allow the concept more than a cursory public examination. It would be a shame if this impatience blocked a program that could benefit both the commissioners and the school board.

The concept is a tidy, businesslike approach to funding that allows both the county and the schools to implement long-range planning. The packages deserves another hearing by county leaders.

The lack of understanding of the base budget concept was evident when the board described the idea as an "entitlement" program.

Had the commissioners devoted the proper examination to the proposal, they would have realized its structure simply obligates the commissioners to fund a specific amount for county education annually. That figure would reflect salary raises mandated by the N.C. General Assembly and revenue increases consistent with tax base growth. But the plan also has a protection clause for the county commission should Pitt County's economy falter.

Any requests exceeding the base budget would then be negotiated by the two boards through an expansion budget. This budgeting approach is the same one used successfully by the state of North Carolina, and can be suitably adapted to fit a local system's needs.

The package should, however, include appropriate safeguards that prevent a "stockpiling" effort that could drain county coffers. A formal review process is necessary to cull programs that aren't working and those no longer relevant. A process of this type would add integrity to the package funding agreement.

Besides being orderly, the package proposal could minimize the political maneuvering that has marked budgeting in the past. Conflict between the school board and the county commission at budget time has impeded the decision-making process for education funding.

The current procedure encourages the schools to ask for unreasonable sums just to secure what they need to operate and grow. The commissioners, irked by excessive requests, are in the discomforting position of denying funding. The package proposal would eliminate the friction this creates between the two boards and encourage progress, not squabbling.

The commissioners should give the proposal a closer review, then make a decision based on the facts, not assumptions. A base budget approach to education can benefit the entities involved and the taxpayers who pay the bill.

Another Vote

Right To Runoff Well Founded

Voters throughout North Carolina will return to the polls on May 31 for a runoff election involving candidates for the Court of Appeals.

In Pitt County voters in Consolidated District A will be choosing between two candidates who received the highest and second highest number of votes.

For the Court of Appeals judgeship voters will find the names of John B. "Jack" Lewis of Farmville and William Davis III.

In Consolidated District A, D. D. Garrett has called for a runoff against James Dupree. In Pitt and all counties of the state the polling places must be operated just as they were for the primary election. The difference is that there will be far fewer candidates from which to choose. In the home counties of the two candidates for Court of Appeals name recognition will be important. In most areas of the state, however, the candidates will be virtually unknown to the voters. Thus we can expect voter apathy and a low turnout — a tragedy for an elective position so important as this one.

The same will not be true for the county commissioner seat. Both candidates will be recognized by the voters of their district and however the election goes the candidates will have the satisfaction of knowing that those who voted for them knew their qualifications.

The right to call for a runoff election is well founded. The field of candidates can often be large and without the runoff provision a candidate could be nominated with only a small percentage of the popular vote.

The question keeps arising, however, isn't it time to consider appointment of judges who now run on a statewide basis? More often than not, voters simply don't know the qualifications of the judges and the candidates are limited in the campaigning they can do. Now the state has come to a situation in which only a judgeship is the object of a runoff election. It is a good bet that voters who don't know either candidate simply won't take the time to visit the polls. That is not democracy at its best.

Strikes Indicate Need For Change

GDANSK, Poland — As an uneasy calm settled on Poland Wednesday after 16 days of labor unrest, the government of Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski was left with the daunting task of picking up the pieces of its economic reform program and trying to rebuild its political credibility with a resentful, pessimistic nation.

When workers occupying the Lenin shipyard here walked out last night, the communist leadership could count as a victory its ability to end the nine-day strike, which had become the central focus of the larger protest wave, without either a direct police attack or major political concessions.

Government spokesmen can also point with satisfaction to the fact that while workers in six big enterprises struck and many others presented managers with pay demands, the nation as a whole did not rally behind either the workers' economic protests or the call for pluralism by the banned independent union Solidarity.

Still, in the aftermath of the strikes Wednesday it is Jaruzelski, more than Solidarity leader Lech Walesa, who faces the most difficult prospect for the future. In many ways, the general seems to be risking the fate of Edward Gierek, Poland's communist leader in the 1970s, who survived a rash of protests in 1976 but in doing so laid the seeds for his own downfall in a massive popular uprising four years later.

Like Gierek, Jaruzelski has quieted workers with a mixture of bribery and force. Changes in tax regulations have allowed managers around the country to meet huge pay demands even as riot police broke up a nine-day steel mill strike near Krakow and choked off the occupied shipyard here.

In the coming months, the government will have to cope with the consequences of that policy, which are almost sure to include soaring inflation, tougher treatment by the skeptical Western creditors holding Poland's $40 billion debt, and a revitalized, more militant opposition.

To avoid the fate of Gierek and the other communist leaders who preceded him, Jaruzelski must take strong steps both to stabilize the economy and persuade average Poles that real reform, and not just price hikes, is under way, government officials concede. Many of the workers striking in the last weeks, including Walesa, have said that they strongly favor official reform plans announced last year but don't believe Jaruzelski is implementing them.

Government officials say authorities are adopting just such a strong course by moving to grant "special powers" to the Council of Ministers. The new provisions will in effect make Deputy Prime Minister Zdzislaw Sadowski, the noncommunist economic reform chief who is supposed to exercise the new powers, into a virtual dictator over the economy.

If Sadowski were to use these powers aggressively to push through stalled reforms, moving to rid the country of wasteful heavy industrial investments, cut subsidies and expand private enterprise, he could gain momentum for the reforms and win the government more support.

But skeptics say that Sadowski, as a nonparty academic, is unlikely to win those battles against entrenched communist apparatchiks and that the new powers are more likely to be wielded as a weapon against oversized wage and price increases.

Here, too, the government may find that it is too weak to use its on-paper strength. Though stopping inflation and balancing Poland's shortage-starved market requires a decrease in real incomes, any attempt to force austerity on workers will only invite another outbreak of unrest. The last two weeks have already shown that Jaruzelski would rather grant pay increases than face down a strike.

Government officials acknowledge that they must find a way to win society's support for sacrifices. But Solidarity's plausible argument that only major political reforms, such as trade union pluralism, will convince Poles to rally behind the economic program continues to be rejected, largely because Jaruzelski deeply fears a return to what he calls the "chaos and anarchy" of Solidarity's legal existence in 1981.

The result is that with or without special powers, Jaruzelski's government will be hard pressed to avoid the paralysis that has steadily overtaken all of its previous grand announcements of "radical steps." The strikes have only made its longstanding political dilemma more acute, while radicalizing that part of society that joined in the protests.

Despite its nominal defeat in the shipyard, Solidarity's organization will likely be energized in the immediate aftermath of the unrest. The strikes and relatively vigorous accompanying protests in universities have served to consolidate under the union's wing a new generation of activist students and young workers.

Though it did not start the strikes, the protests have also served to make Solidarity's presence felt in the country more strongly than at any time in the last four years. As Walesa argued Wednesday, government officials can no longer so easily dismiss calls for talks with Solidarity by claiming it does not represent anyone.

Still, Walesa and the Solidarity leadership must contend with the now established fact that the majority of Poles, whatever their sympathies, remain unwilling to strike or confront police in support of political demands. Pursuing the union's goals will require different tactics based on an elite of activists, a problem that Solidarity, whose very identity is linked to peaceful mass action, has never been able to solve.

Meanwhile, because Jaruzelski seems firm in his refusal to initiate a dialogue with Solidarity, the union is likely to remain where it has been through the last several years: on the political sidelines, sometimes listened to in its policy critiques, mostly tolerated in its clandestine printing and cultural activities, but excluded from the reform process it wants to support. To the extent that the shipyard strike was an attempt by Solidarity to force its way back toward an active role in leading Polish workers, it failed.

In the end, the only clear winner in the strike wave was the Roman Catholic Church, which confirmed its role as an indispensable partner for both the government and Solidarity.

A Few Gold Pieces For Old ED

Can Meese-Loving Democrats Save The Attorney General?

Doubleday came to the door holding a donation can in his hand. "Would you like to give to the 'Save Ed Meese Foundation'?" he asked me.

"I'm not sure," I said. "Why are you collecting money for Ed Meese? I thought you were a Democrat."

"I am a Democrat," he said. "That's why I want to save Ed Meese. He is a fine person and should remain attorney general right through the elections."

"But what about the accusations and innuendoes that keep floating over Meese's head?"

"They are lies, all lies. The 'Save Ed Meese Foundation' has proof that he is innocent of all high crimes and misdemeanors. Any conflicts of interest he may have been involved in were caused by his ignorance of the law."

"If you will forgive me, Doubleday, I smell a rat. You and your Democratic friends are trying to save Ed Meese because you need him to kick around during the election campaign."

Doubleday raised his hand in protest. "You have never been farther from the truth. Our organization has only one purpose — to fight a miscarriage of justice. Ed Meese is a victim of the greatest injustice this country has ever seen. He must be saved at all costs."

"If the Democrats want to save

Ed Meese, who wants to get him?" I asked.

"The Republicans. They keep trying to push him out the window. They think Meese is a liability to the party and should walk the plank as soon as possible. We intend to fight them every step of the way. It's the least we can do for an attorney general who has brought so much respect and prestige to the judicial system."

"I didn't know there were that many Meese-loving Democrats in this land."

"It doesn't matter whether you're a Democrat or a Republican. What counts is how you feel about Wedtech, and whether Ed had a right to help them get defense contracts. The 'Save Ed Meese Foundation' believes if someone who works in the White House can't help his friends, then we'll never have a decent government."

"Does George Bush feel this way?"

"I don't think so. I went to his house the other day to ask for a donation and he turned me down. He said although he has no reason to see Ed Meese go, he has no reason for him to stay."

"It figures," I said. "I've never seen George give money to save a Republican attorney general in his life."

"Well, are you going to donate to the cause or aren't you?"

"I'd like to. What do you plan to do with the money?"

"We're going to have a big rally outside the Justice Department and call it 'Honor Ed Meese Day.' Then we're going to barrage the White House with signatures asking the President to keep Meese on no matter how damaging the special prosecutor's report is. And finally we're going to ask Reagan to pardon Ed."

"While he's attorney general?"

I said. "It would be the best time because it would show that Mr. Reagan has confidence in his people. Now how about coughing up a few gold pieces for good old Ed?"

"I'd like to, Doubleday, but I already gave in the grand jury room."

Reagan's Concern Should Be Protectionism, Not Plant Closings

President Reagan's promised veto of the omnibus trade bill is like too many policy decisions in recent years: the right choice for the wrong reasons.

The trade bill should be vetoed because it is protectionist, not because of relatively innocuous plant-closing notification requirements or restrictions on the exporting of Alaskan oil. By misfocusing the veto message, the president's advisers effectively are accepting the trade portion of the legislation, thus guaranteeing — sooner or later — that it becomes law.

And that, for an economy only beginning to recover its competitive edge, could be disastrous.

Admittedly, most of the headline-grabbing protectionism was stripped from the bill. The Gephardt amendment (which was aimed at reducing large bilateral trade imbalances), the Bryant amendment (which would have imposed onerous reporting requirements on foreign investors), a long list of industry giveaways (especially in agriculture) and other highly visible trade-restricting provisions were eliminated during months of conference-committee negotiations.

This was predictable: After the October stock-market crash, few in Congress were eager to follow the example of their predecessors whose blatantly protectionist legislation turned the crash of 1929 into the depression of the 1930s.

But the residue of their work, while less dramatic, is almost as bad and would result in a significant shift toward a less open, more protected trading regime. Through a host of provisions, the legislation would shift the balance of power over trade matters from the president to Congress and to the trade bureaucracy, both of which are usually more responsive to special interests. Perhaps more important, the bill would create a predisposition to retaliate against unfair trade practices rather than to negotiate. It would also provide greater opportunities for domestic industries to find relief from effective but fair foreign competition. The result would be more trade friction with our allies, more government intervention in commerce and, ultimately, higher costs to the American consumer.

All this has been called "process" protectionism because it would become easier for U.S. companies to exploit the trade law to avoid competition. Though this sounds more benign than "real" protectionism, it would likely have the same chilling effect on a much needed move toward freer, or even fairer, trade.

Unfortunately, the Reagan administration's record on trade — capped by the president's misfocusing veto pledge — belies much of its free-trade rhetoric. Since 1980 the proportion of U.S. imports of manufactured goods from other industrial countries that are covered by restrictions of one kind or another has risen by two-thirds, to 15 percent, at a time when the total value of such imports was exploding. These restrictions range from so-called "voluntary" arrangements that limit the number of imported Japanese cars or German machine tools to efforts to turn the semi-conductor industry into a cartel by negotiating market-share arrangements. Similarly, the United States has dramatically expanded agricultural protection through a sharp increase in export subsidies; one recent estimate put the cost of U.S. agricultural protection at $126 per capita in 1986, and indicated that U.S. farm prices were more than 50 percent above world prices.

Of course, most of our trading partners are worse: Japan and Europe are more protectionist and more willing to exploit the trading system to their own advantage. But growing U.S. preference for managed trade, as reflected both in the record and in this trade bill, has been a poor antidote to the global erosion of free trade.

The president probably understands instinctively that this trade bill should disappear on its merits. But his advisers seem to be preoccupied with near-term political maneuvering, with the apparent linkage between the trade bill and legislation implementing the U.S.-Canada free-trade agreement, and with the fear that the next president will face an even worse bill. None of these are compelling enough to justify moving in a decidedly protectionist direction now.

In the foreign-policy area, especially in arms control and the Arab-Israeli conflict, the President has recently been willing to pursue initiatives that are unlikely to come to fruition before the end of his term. These initiatives are important not only for their own sake but also because they establish a platform on which the next administration can build its own policies. In a similar spirit the president should base his veto of this avowedly bad trade bill on a rejection of its inherent protectionism. He should match his free-trade rhetoric with action and indicate that a new version of the bill that only eliminates the plant-closing and other superfluous provisions will be equally unacceptable.

Then, perhaps, the next administration could begin building a new U.S. trade strategy on firmer underpinnings.

From Panama To Poland, Both Superpowers Losing Power

WASHINGTON (AP) — It has been a long time since the two superpowers have been able to count on their allies for lock-step support of their policies and lately there is evidence that the breakdown in discipline is accelerating.

The signs of restiveness extend from Panama to Poland. The demise of the concept of a bipolar world order has left both Washington and Moscow with difficult adjustments to make.

If the United States finds its allies balkier than before, it can at least take comfort that the Kremlin seems to be in a similar fix.

May Day used to be cause for celebration in the Soviet bloc, the occasion when the intended beneficiaries of Marxism — the workers — showed their gratitude to their system and their rulers.

But this May Day, Polish authorities found themselves confronting the most serious industrial strikes since 1982. The government appears to have survived the challenge for the time being but the unrest once again raised doubts about stability in Poland and its reliability as a Soviet ally.

In Panama, the U.S. effort to force Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega to step down is beginning its 12th week. The administration had hoped to arrange a quick exit for Noriega and its failure to do so thus far has become a major embarrassment.

Recent negotiations indicate a willingness by Noriega to resign at some point but the evidence suggests that his departure may be based more on his terms than the Reagan administration's.

Underscoring Noriega's contemptuous attitude toward Washington are the gestures of friendship he has been making toward the two principal U.S. rivals in the hemisphere, Nicaragua and Cuba.

There are other signs of waning superpower clout:

—Denmark, over U.S. objections, may tighten loopholes in its existing — though widely ignored — ban on allowing nuclear armed ships to enter Danish ports. Final approval of the proposal could end NATO military cooperation with Denmark. New Zealand, because of its anti-nuclear policies, ceased to be a U.S. military ally two years ago.

—Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev has given up the nine-year Soviet effort to tame anti-communist rebels in Afghanistan and soon will begin a troop withdrawal without achieving most of his objectives.

—Spain has ordered the U.S. to remove 72 American F-16 fighters from its territory, another indication of that country's determination to limit military cooperation with Western allies.

—The Kremlin's closest ally in Africa, Angola, has been unable in almost 13 years to defeat a U.S.-backed rebel movement and a negotiated settlement may be a prospect. Pro-Soviet regimes in Ethiopia, Nicaragua and Cambodia also face internal insurrections.

While still firmly allied with Moscow, East Germany and Bulgaria have recently sent top officials to Washington as part of what appears to be an expanding dialogue. Previously, Washington had shown almost no interest in these countries, considering them to have no room to maneuver beyond narrow limits set by Moscow.

Deputy Secretary of State John Whitehead said recently the East Bloc countries are showing more flexibility toward the United States as a logical follow-up to Gorbachev's own reformist approach.

He predicted that by the end of the Reagan administration, the East Bloc "will be a little less dependent on the Soviet Union" and "a little more oriented toward the United States."

In Latin America, the United States has not only failed to dislodge Nicaragua's leftist government, it has been unable to rally the support of other hemispheric countries for its policies.

Contributing to Washington's inability to control events is a scarcity of resources, brought on by budget deficits, and a general tendency among many in Congress to support hands-off policies.

The splintering of ideological blocs also appears to reflect reduced nervousness among many countries identified with one or the other superpower about their own internal security.

Polls show that Gorbachev enjoys widespread sympathy among West Europeans and even Americans.

Reagan plans to spend Memorial Day weekend with Gorbachev in Moscow. It's a new day when Reagan can feel more comfortable passing a holiday weekend in Moscow with a communist chieftain than he can at home with someone who is far more ideologically congenial — someone like, say, Donald Regan.

A U.S.-Cuba Nuclear Exchange?

WASHINGTON — It is customary in the news business to focus on "blood and guts" stories, particularly in the world of television. In fact, there's a running gag in local television newscasts across the country that if a story "bleeds, it leads" a newscast.

Of course, horror stories have their rightful place, on a limited basis, because they're "splashy" and they also warn folks of impending doom. But not all disaster pieces make news like they should.

A case in point occurred last week. It was big news in Western Europe but not here that the European Bureau of Consumers Union, a pro-consumer group representing the 12 European Economic Community (EEC) countries, had forecast that there was a 70 percent chance of a major nuclear power accident taking place in Europe within the next five years.

It's a rare and gratifying treat, however, when one uncovers some good news, especially on the nuclear energy front.

It has been no secret in Washington that there has been growing concern among nuclear energy experts over two Soviet VVER-440 nuclear reactors currently under construction in Cienfuegos, Cuba, about 90 miles from the U.S. coast. Since the first unit is expected to be completed within the next two years, U.S. energy experts have had every reason to worry that this facility is built properly, particularly after a similarly constructed Russian facility at Chernobyl almost decimated Eastern Europe in 1986. In theory, a similar catastrophe could occur in this hemisphere, thereby jeopardizing the entire U.S. mainland.

But the possibility of such a disaster occurring in our own backyard, for the time being, seems to have been greatly reduced by a remarkable series of exchange visits to take place between Cuban and American nuclear energy officials.

Two top officials of Cuba's Atomic Energy Commission (CEAU) are scheduled to visit Duke Power's McGuire facility in North Carolina and Nuclear Regulatory Commission offices in Atlanta between May 18-20 to discuss reactor operations and safety. In return, U.S. representatives have been invited to visit the two Cuban reactors now under construction.

These informal reciprocal visits will be the first government-sanctioned bilateral contacts between our two countries since relations were severed in 1960. Nevertheless, for the record, NRC officials say they view the visits strictly in terms of a technical exchange on reactor safety, as opposed to any improvement of U.S./Cuban relations.

The historic visit was first made to Cuban representatives by Duke Power Board Chairman William Lee at a July, 1987 meeting of nuclear utility representatives in Paris. The Cubans responded earlier this spring and requested the visit.

At the moment, neither the NRC, nor the Cubans, are sure how our two nations might cooperate further after the Cuban visit. No date has been set yet for the U.S. team to visit Cuba.

While some nuclear energy experts may view this exchange as more of a move to bring Cuba into the IAEA (International Atomic Energy Association), the effort can only improve U.S./Cuban relations and increase security in the Western Hemisphere.

'No Hogs' Issue Once Threatened Their Union

Twin Cities Celebrate 75th Birthday

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Winston-Salem today will celebrate the 75th anniversary of a consolidation that came only after Winston agreed not to allow hog-raising on town lots.

Winston began as an offspring of prosperous Salem in 1849 and didn't have a name for two years until it was named for Col. Joseph Winston, a Revolutionary War hero.

But, fueled by the growth of the tobacco industry, Winston's population grew to be greater than its neighbor to the south within 20 years.

Thanks to the railroad and tobacco and then textiles, Winston continued to grow while Salem slowly turned into a quiet residential community.

Politicians who saw the merger of the two towns as inevitable first attempted to have them consolidated in 1879. In an election that year, voters in Salem supported the proposed unification 138-18. But in Winston, consolidation was defeated 329-128.

Thirty-four years later, another move for consolidation proved successful. But it wasn't without a controversy — over hogs.

Winston was divided on the question of whether residents could raise hogs in the town. Residents presented petitions both for and against hog-raising, and the aldermen realized that the vote on consolidation with Salem might depend on how they decided the question.

On the evening of March 7, 1913 — just 11 days before the residents were to vote on the merger — the aldermen cast their votes. The aldermen were evenly divided on the issue, and Mayor R.I. Dalton voted "No Hogs" to break the tie.

On March 18, 1913, voters in Winston-Salem approved the merger 764-260. Salem approved the consolidation by a tally of 385-224.

A marker at the corner of First and Main streets stands on what was once the dividing line between the two towns and says that they were consolidated on May 13, 1913.

However, historians mark May 12 — when the new mayor and Board of Aldermen took their oaths of office — as the anniversary of the newly named city.

Money Short

RALEIGH (AP) — Significant increases in the legal fees judges award court-appointed attorneys and the number of cases in which such lawyers are appointed have drained a $14.5 million fund for indigent defendants, a court official says.

"It's perplexing. I have no idea why there's been such an increase. I'd like to know," said Franklin Freeman, director of the Administrative Office of the Courts. The AOC projects a $2.4 million deficit by June 30.

The number of criminal cases in which lawyers were appointed to defend indigent defendants increased by 11 percent over last fiscal year, Freeman said. But the average fee judges award court-appointed lawyers also jumped by 16 percent, to $278.

Crash Report

RAEFORD, N.C. (AP) — Engine trouble likely caused the plane crash that injured six people, including five members of a Canadian parachute team, a Federal Aviation Administration investigator said.

"We definitely know we have a problem in the engine. We have two eyewitnesses to the fact that the engine was acting up before it quit completely," Chuck Holly, principal air worthiness inspector for the FAA field office in Raleigh, said Thursday.

The plane crashed Tuesday into a soybean field just after takeoff from Ræford Airport, officials said. Three of those injured remained hospitalized Thursday at Moore Regional Hospital in Pinehurst.

Store Shooting

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A man and a woman were critically wounded Thursday after a shooting in a supermarket ended in what sheriff's deputies said was an apparent murder-suicide attempt.

Harold Little, a spokesman for the Cumberland County Sheriff's Department, said witnesses told investigators that the man followed the woman into a Food Lion store about 10:30 a.m. The two argued, the man pulled out a .25-caliber automatic pistol and shot the woman three times before shooting himself in the head, Little said.

Convicted

JACKSON, N.C. (AP) — Roger Lee Smith of Ahoskie was convicted of first degree murder Thursday in Northampton County Superior Court in connection with the shooting and robbery of a grocery store employee last summer.

After deliberating only 35 minutes, the jury found Smith guilty of first-degree murder, committed during the course of a felony and based on malice and premeditation, in the death of Frank I. Kurczek, 41, who was the meat manager of Be and Dee Foodland in Ahoskie.

The jury also returned guilty verdicts against Smith on one count of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill Donnie Carr, the manager of the supermarket, who was shot during the robbery. Smith was found guilty of two counts of armed robbery.

Smith could receive the death penalty or a life sentence for the first-degree murder conviction.

Raleigh-Durham Has Top Family Incomes

RALEIGH (AP) — The caliber of employment in Research Triangle Park and surrounding areas was credited for recent figures showing Raleigh-Durham leads the state in median family income.

"We're the highest — we knew we would be," Pat White, data center manager for the Triangle J Council of Governments in Research Triangle Park, said Thursday. She pointed to "high tech employment in the Research Triangle Park and the good wages paid by the tobacco and chemical industries."

The median family income for the Raleigh-Durham metropolitan area for the 1988 fiscal year was estimated at $36,600, according to the report from the Greensboro office of U.S. Housing and Urban Development.

The national median — the figure at which half the families have incomes below and half above — was $32,400, or 13 percent lower, HUD said.

The figures were compiled in January by HUD and distributed this spring to help federal housing officials decide who should receive federal housing help in North Carolina, said Jerry Pifer, an economist with the Greensboro HUD office.

Ranked behind Raleigh-Durham in the report of income in nine North Carolina statistical areas was the Charlotte-Gastonia-Rock Hill, S.C., area, with $32,700.

Third-highest was the Greensboro-Winston-Salem-High Point area at $32,200, the report said.

A regional report released by the council this month noted that Durham County employers in 1986 paid the highest average wage in the six Piedmont counties covered by the council — $415 per week, Ms. White said.

The state average was $326, she said, citing figures provided by the Labor Market Information Division of the North Carolina Employment Security Commission.

The Triangle report also noted a 13.8 percent growth in median income in the Raleigh-Durham area during the 1980s.

By contrast, the surrounding area, including Chatham, Lee and Johnston counties, had little family income growth in the same period when adjusted for inflation, Ms. White said.

Other statistical areas of North Carolina, ranked by median family income, were: Burlington (Alamance County), $30,300; Hickory (Burke, Alexander and Catawba counties), $29,300; Wilmington (New Hanover County), $27,600; Asheville (Buncombe County), $27,400; Fayetteville (Cumberland County), $25,400; and Jacksonville (Onslow County), $20,600.

By MARTHA WAGGONER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — The public's desire to find leaders who will lead in a moral way could play into the hands of religious zealots unless people remain wary of the mingling of religion and American politics, panelists said.

John Buchanan, a congressman from Alabama for 16 years and now national chairman of People for the American Way, said Thursday religion and politics have always been mixed in American politics and always will be.

And while religious leaders may preach their beliefs in the political arena, "We should speak out against a Jimmy Swaggart, who calls Catholicism a 'false cult,' or a Louis Farrakhan, who calls Judaism a 'gutter religion' — or against anyone else who attacks the rights of any religious, racial or ethnic group," Buchanan said.

Buchanan started off a panel discussion on "Religion, Politics and the Media" sponsored by People for the American Way in North Carolina and several other groups. The discussion embraced Pat Robertson's presidential candidacy and the public's search for morality in government, but much of the time was spent on Buchanan's remark that

Two To Receive Gardner Award

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A biochemist from North Carolina State University and a pediatrician from the medical school of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill will receive the highest award granted by the state university system.

The UNC system Board of Governors will present O. Max Gardner Awards to Dr. Floyd W. Denny Jr. of UNC and Dr. Elizabeth C. Theil of N.C. State. The award, given annual since 1949, recognizes faculty members from the system deemed to have "made the greatest contribution to the welfare of the human race."

Ms. Theil was chosen for her studies of iron metabolism and related blood disorders while Denny was honored for research on rheumatic fever and his long-time advocacy of child health care.

The Gardner awards were established by the will of the former governor. They are the only award for which all faculty members of the 16-campus system are eligible.

Panelists Warn Against Mingling Of Religion And Political Process

Robertson "crosses the line" of acceptability when he asks the nation to believe God told him to run for president.

"And when he crosses the line, others have the right and the duty to say so. It does not limit Pat Robertson's religious freedom; it asserts religious freedom for all of us," Buchanan said.

The Rev. E.B. Turner, pastor of First Baptist Church in Lumberton, said he didn't "think much" of Robertson's saying his candidacy was the will of God.

"I think he should ask God about it and try to get his advice and counsel and if he gets it, hold it," Turner said.

Robertson, who dropped out of the race for the Republican nomination for president Wednesday, "resigned just because the American people did not believe God told him to run," he said.

Former Charlotte Mayor Harvey Gantt said "using deity to suggest that you are the person ordained for some particular position" was inappropriate.

Robertson did not get the support of all Christians "because he came from a specific theological base" that not all of them could support, Privette said.

"When they (Christians) find somebody they can stand behind, we're going to see a real political force here," Hadden said.

Motorcycle Wasn't In Deal

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago, I advised my (then) 15-year-old grandson that for every dollar he put into his savings account, I would match it toward his purchase of a car.

So far he has put very little into the account, but now he is asking if I will match his funds for the purchase of a motorcycle, as the price of a car is beyond his finances.

The boy is bright, intelligent and irresponsible. He could have worked and saved enough money (with my matching funds) to have purchased a good secondhand car by now, but he is primarily interested in sports, surfing and the female gender.

His father (my son) does not want him to have a motorcycle, and I am reluctant to go against my son's wishes. What shall I do? Alienate my son or my grandson? — GEORGE IN SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR GEORGE: Don't be concerned about alienating either one. Remind your grandson that the deal was on a "car" — not a motorcycle.

DEAR ABBY: I have the most unusual problem anyone can imagine. "Kenneth" and I have been married for 62 years — until now, very happily. When I was in my teens, it was a fad to keep a diary, so I kept one. My husband came across my diary and read it! I had a few dates with a boy when I was 18. I wrote about going to three dances with him — also a picnic. Then I stopped seeing him because I met Kenneth. We fell in love, and a year later we were married.

Now, 62 years later, Kenneth wants to know "everything" about this fellow, and, Abby, for the life of me I can't remember a thing about him — what he looked like, how I met him or anything else. I swear he didn't mean a thing to me.

Kenneth is making my life miserable. Can you suggest anything that may help me remember this fellow? Kenneth said for me to write to you. Thanks a million. — WOUNDED WIFE IN OHIO

DEAR WOUNDED: Go through your old snapshots — also try your high school annual. If you come up with something, dandy; if not, tell Kenneth that Abby said, "If you are having such a tough time trying to remember this fellow, your husband has nothing to be jealous of." (P.S. I think your hubby needs a hobby.)

DEAR ABBY: Just when I thought I had heard or seen most things in life, I now realize I had not.

My husband has to travel frequently on out-of-city and state business trips. He has a business associate I will refer to as "Flint" (as in "skinflint"). My husband asked Flint why he always carries two and sometimes three large suitcases on these trips of three or four days. Are you ready? Flint's wife packs all his dirty shirts and suits, and he has them laundered, cleaned, and billed on the hotel costs for which he is then reimbursed. Flint said he's even had the drapes and curtains done this way.

What do you think, Abby? — STAGGERED IN L.A.

DEAR STAGGERED: Shame on "Flint" for taking everything to the cleaners — including his boss.

Wedding bells? Wedding bills! Who pays for what and everything else you need to know if you're planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Twain biographer — Drury College professor Resa Willis, who has recently completed a biography of Olivia Langdon Clemens, said the woman married to a man best known as Mark Twain was as fascinating character in her own right.

Life Of Twain's Wife Fascinates Biographer

By DONNA BRYSON
Associated Press Writer
SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — The story of Olivia Langdon Clemens, wife of the man best known as Mark Twain, has been told for the first time in a biography written by a local Twain scholar.

"It amazes me that no one's done it before," said Resa Willis, a writer and Drury College literature professor. She completed "Livy: A Biography of Olivia Langdon Clemens, Mark Twain's Wife" early this year and she said her agent was negotiating with several publishing houses.

"I have never found any lack of interest in him or her. He really is America's best-known writer," said Mrs. Willis, who has published a novel and a number of short stories and poems.

Samuel Langhorne Clemens, whose pen name was a term of water depth that evoked his life on the Mississippi, and Olivia Langdon — his "Livy" — were married from 1870 until her death in 1904.

"I'd always been interested in him (Twain), read everything he wrote and everything about him," Mrs. Willis said.

But she hesitated to make Twain the subject of her doctoral research at the University of Tulsa because so much had already been written about him. Much less had been published on Twain's family, so an adviser encouraged her to write her dissertation on the women in Mark Twain's life — his mother, his three daughters and the frail, beautiful New York heiress he married.

After her dissertation was completed in 1984, Mrs. Willis decided to write a biography of Livy, which she said would be the first account detailing her life from birth to death. She had discovered that "Mrs. Mark Twain" was a fascinating character in her own right.

"Maybe in another time, she might have been a writer herself. She was a very talented editor," Mrs. Willis said. Livy edited much of her husband's work.

"They filled in gaps in each other," Mrs. Willis said. "He needed some stability and she needed some impetuosity."

As a young woman, Livy seemed to epitomize the fragile flower that was the Victorian feminine ideal. But she discovered a reservoir of strength during a marriage marked by the death of two of her young children and financial worries due to Twain's poor investments.

The family declared bankruptcy in 1894 after Twain squandered his fortune investing in a printing scheme. Mrs. Willis said it was Livy who insisted that the debts be paid in full, and kept careful records during an around-the-world speaking tour Twain arranged to raise the money.

"She saw it as a debt of honor," Mrs. Willis said.

"As difficult a man as I knew Mark Twain could be, I figured she'd have to be a pretty special woman for Mark Twain to feel so strongly about her," Mrs. Willis said. "I was amazed to find that she was so articulate and witty. It makes me wonder how many other women's stories need to be told."

Mrs. Willis' research took her to the Twain papers at the University of California at Berkeley, Twain's boyhood home at Hannibal, Mo., the Langdon family home at Elmira, N.Y., and the couple's home in Hartford, Conn.

She has read Livy's diaries and her correspondence with Twain — she would write him as often as five times a day when they were apart — as well as with other members of her family and friends. Mrs. Willis even pored over school records at the finishing school Livy attended.

Mrs. Willis, who has written and spoken extensively on Twain's life and writings, speaks of him in the present tense, as if of an old friend and colleague.

"I feel like I know her (Livy) even better. Probably just because I'm a woman," she said.

Twain first saw Livy in a picture her brother, Charles Langdon, carried as the young man traveled in the Middle East in the late 1860s. Twain met Livy after his return to the United States.

It must have been a heady time for him. His newspaper dispatches about the Middle Eastern voyage had made him something of a celebrity, he was in demand as a speaker, the travel book he was working on, "Innocents Abroad," was expected to be a success, and he was falling in love.

The editing of "Innocents Abroad" became part of Twain's courtship of Livy, who, 10 years his junior at 23 when they met, may already have resigned herself to spinsterhood in an age when women married young.

Livy had led a sheltered and privileged life. Her family had made a fortune in coal — she inherited $500,000 at her father's death, and his wedding gift to the couple was a substantial new home in Buffalo, N.Y.

After a fall on the ice at 16, Livy was unable to leave her bed for two years. A faith healer finally persuaded her to walk again, but she would always be considered sickly.

When Livy met Twain, he had piloted steamboats on the Mississippi, panned for gold in California and seemed on his way to a career as popular writer.

"There's only one instance when she said what attracted her to him — that was he was so different. He must have been unlike anyone she ever knew," Mrs. Willis said.

Personality Defects Are Advancement Obstacle

By COSMOPOLITAN
A Hearst Magazine

Personality flaws can be as bad as incompetence in keeping an employee from getting a promotion or even keeping her job.

Supervisors and personnel experts say personality defects are more often an obstacle to career advancement than lack of ability or unwillingness to work hard, according to an article in the current issue of Cosmopolitan, but these flaws can be overcome.

"More people lose jobs or promotions because of personality problems than from an inability to do the work," said psychologist Eric Riss, director of the Career Counseling Center in New York, adding that it is difficult for an employer to spot these problems in advance.

Among the more common flaws:
— Whining. Constant complainers about office conditions and overwork are not popular. Bosses don't want to hear constant complaints and if you've performed beyond the call of duty they will recognize the fact without being told.

— Dial E for Emergency. Some workers constantly miss work, come in late or leave early because of emergencies. It is not only lost time that employers of the emergency-prone dislike.

"Employers want people who can handle pressure and adapt to unexpected situations without letting their job performance suffer," said Arthur A. Witkin, chief psychologist at the Personnel Sciences Center and professor of industrial psychology at Queens College in New York.

— Fiscal folly. Employees who borrow money and ask for advances are seen as people who don't plan ahead. "A boss isn't too concerned when you borrow money from colleagues because it doesn't affect his business," said Lee Colby, a Minneapolis management consultant, "but it shapes his perception of you as someone lacking foresight and a sense of responsibility."

— Vamping. Women who don't understand that the office is not the place to come on to men are seen as disrupting the flow of work and hurting office morale.

— Sandpaper tongue. Many executives realize the importance of getting along with peers but don't realize that treating subordinates with courtesy also is crucial.

— Ms. Machisma. Machisma describes a woman who is sure of herself and able to compete with men in the business world. Some women take machisma too far, however, and nobody likes an overly aggressive person, male or female.

— Helpless waif. The opposite of machisma is the office waif who wants on-the-job parenting. "Someone who's always seeking help is perceived as less than competent even if she isn't," said career counselor Janice La Roche.

— Tattletale. Christopher Anderson, author of "Fast Forward: A Survival Manual for Corporate Politics," said "the higher you go in a company, the more important it is to show discretion and to prove yourself someone who can be trusted to keep confidences."

— The starlet. The starlet craves attention and talks too much about herself. Riss said they must learn "that the way to satisfy their need for recognition is to earn it through good work performance."

— The loner. "A supervisor will never be comfortable with someone who doesn't have a good relationship with other employees," said La Roche.

Wedding Vows Performed

FAYETTEVILLE — Jacquelyn Ann Mayhew became the bride of David Gary Hobgood Saturday at 4 p.m. in a ceremony in Northwood Temple Church. The Rev. Frank Upchurch officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Mayhew of Fayetteville, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. David Hobgood of Farmville. He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Oakley, also of Farmville.

Music was presented by organist Bryant Croom of Fayetteville and vocalist Tommy Bisette, cousin of the bride.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an ivory taffeta gown with a sweetheart neckline and basque waist. The front bodice and Elizabethan sleeves were hand-beaded over embroidered lace with iridescents. The gathered skirt extended into a chapel-length train and the front featured lace inserts with hand-beading. Cut-out appliques with embroidered scallops and medallions trimmed the back and train. She carried a bouquet of lilies and roses and wore miniature pearls, a gift of the bridegroom.

June Mayhew Wilkes, sister of the bride, was honor attendant and wore a china blue tea-length dress with long sleeves, dropped tulle with a flounce, and lace skirt. Mary Tart of Fayetteville was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Debbie Mayhew of Fayetteville, sister-in-law of the bride, Kelly Upchurch of Buies Creek, cousin of the bride, Wendy Martin of Greenville, Melanie Regner of Maryland, and Beth Hales of Linden. Their dresses were like that of the honor attendants. They carried white sweetheart roses with baby's breath.

Josh Tyson of Fayetteville was miniature bridegroom. He is cousin of the bride. Kerri Braswell of Farmville was miniature bride and was dressed like the bride. She carried a lace basket with flowers.

The bridegroom's father was best man. Ushers were Greg Mayhew, brother of the bride, Alex Wilkes, brother-in-law of the bride, Michael Owens and Greg Hardison, both of Greenville, Thomas G. Braswell of Farmville and Jim Cleveland of High Point.

Debbie Upchurch of Buies Creek directed the wedding.

The mother of the bride wore a mauve silk tea-length tiered dress and the mother of the bridegroom wore an aqua silk jacquard print dress. Both wore corsages of white roses.

The bride and bridegroom graduated from Campbell University. She is employed by Electronic Service Co. in Farmville and he is assistant golf professional at the Farmville Golf and Country Club. The couple will live in Farmville after a wedding trip.

A reception was held at Gates Four Country Club and was given by the bride's parents.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's parents at the Gates Four Country Club. Several showers and a pig picking also honored the couple.

School Service Matches Seniors For Prom Dates

By STEPHANIE NANO
Associated Press Writer

NORTH OLMSTED, Ohio (AP) — Need a date for the senior prom? If you're a student at North Olmsted High School, you can find one by taking advantage of an unusual "matchmaking" service run by school administrators.

Administrators again this spring are trying to match up students who fill out a secret list of their top five choices for a prom date. School officials at the suburban Cleveland school compare the ballots and try to get interested students together.

Some 60 students attended last year's prom because of the dating service, said principal Dianna Lindsay.

"Everything is done at the highest level of discretion because nobody wants anyone to be embarrassed; that's not the purpose of this," she said. "The purpose of it is to get as many seniors to the prom as we can get there because we really believe it's a fun evening."

Proms fell out of favor with high school students in the 1970s, but their popularity has increased in recent years, Ms. Lindsay said. But finding a date for the evening is still nerve-racking.

The school's dating service takes the fear out of finding a date because school officials serve as intermediaries, she said.

"I think it's a little less threatening because the girl knows she's going to be asked," said athletic director Tim Flannery.

The dating service was an outgrowth of a program first held three years ago to acquaint students with prom attire and etiquette. Ms. Lindsay said she had noticed how uncomfortable students seemed at the prom because of the formal setting and the mistakes they made in their attire and behavior.

"While they aren't major faux pas, kids would be more comfortable knowing the correct way," she said.

And Ms. Lindsay thinks that if students know what to expect, they'll be less likely to turn to alcohol or drugs to calm their prom jitters.

To give seniors a preview of the prom, the school holds a special assembly that includes a fashion show of prom dresses and tuxedos, tips on buying flowers, and guidelines on table manners and other points of etiquette.

At the assembly, the students are given a list to fill out if they want to use the school's dating service. Only classmates can be listed.

After comparing the lists, Ms. Lindsay or a faculty member meets with students and lets them know if a classmate is interested in being their date for the prom. After that, it's up to the boy to formally ask the girl.

"I know it's not very liberated of us. Nonetheless, we do make the guy ask simply because we think it's one of those graces that maybe he ought to get comfortable with at this point in his life," said Ms. Lindsay.

If there's no match from the lists, faculty members will discreetly check out other possibilities and make suggestions. Last year, school administrators were able to pair up two students the day before the prom.

"We're not trying to match them for life, just for that night," said Flannery.

"Everything's to get them there. You have too many people sitting back, bashful, embarrassed," said guidance counselor Bill DeLisio.

The senior prom is a couples-only affair, while students don't need a date to attend an all-night party at the school afterwards.

Senior class president Cindy Costanzo, 17, thinks the dating service is a good idea because she thinks most students want to attend the prom.

"I don't know about the guys, but I know the girls talk about it all year. And it takes a lot of the pressure off, because you know someone else is pulling for you, too," she said.

Cindy is one of those using the dating service this year, and she's not shy about admitting it. "I filled one out in a roomful of people. I had three names and I couldn't come up with another two," she said.

Akubras Are Fashion Accessory

By RICHARD BILL
Associated Press Writer

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — In outback Australia, where the climate is harsh and the sun unrelenting, the akubra hat is a must. Cattlemen, or stockmen, wear them for protection like cowboys in the old Wild West wore a Stetson.

Now, akubras have become a fashion accessory, but back at the ranch the men are complaining hats are in short supply.

"We can't make enough hats," said Stephen Keir, whose great-grandfather Benjamin started the akubra family business in 1911, the hats getting their name from the aboriginal word for head covering.

Keir, whose 140 employees turn out 8,000 akubras a week, said demand for the wide-brimmed felt hats showed no sign of falling off.

"Three years ago we were producing half that amount," Keir said in an interview. "Now the factory is planning to raise production to 10,000, and even that's not enough."

The akubra craze is big down south, particularly in New South Wales, the country's most populous state, and in Sydney, where 3.3 million people live.

The renaissance in outback clothing includes oilskin trench coats marketed under the brand name "Driza Bone" and boots produced by well-known "bush" personality R.M. Williams, a former camel driver.

The popularity of such attire seems tied up with ongoing bicentennial celebrations marking the pioneering beginnings of European settlers.

Akubras got a boost in the United States when Prime Minister Bob Hawke bet his for President Ronald Reagan's Stetson on the outcome of the America's Cup.

Hawke lost his hat.

Golfer Greg Norman, known as the "Great White Shark," reputedly earns $740,000 U.S. to don one when he plays and Paul Hogan wore one in his box office hit movie, "Crocodile Dundee," last year.

Akubras retail for about $45 U.S., the coats for $104 U.S. and boots for $33 U.S. — an inexpensive wardrobe by today's standards but better suited to the great outdoors than the city.

Keir also traces the surge of interest to a "new national pride" brought on by a "Buy Australia" campaign, funded by the federal government to get Australians to buy locally made products instead of imports.

He says 10 percent of his output is exported to the United States, from where a record 280,000 tourists are expected to visit this year amid continuing interest in "Down Under" that began with Hogan's tempting offer to "throw another shrimp on the barbie."

But outback cattlemen aren't laughing about their garb becoming city style.

"We wear hats all the time to protect us from sunstroke and skin cancer, so it's no joke when you can't get a decent lid to put on your head," said Tim Terry, who ropes cattle in the vast and desolate Gulf country near the northern territory.

Queensland state's Northern Development minister Jim Katter, himself an avid akubra fan, predicts the situation will worsen during the coming mustering season.

"We have the highest incidence of skin cancer in the world in North Queensland so naturally a hat shortage cannot be taken lightly," he said. "The akubra hat craze in the south has dried up supplies."

Cattlemen's union spokesman Jackie Shaw said few outlets still had stocks of akubras because of the urban cowboys down south. "The situation is getting pretty desperate," she said.

contact with those meeting planners," Nichols said.

The budget also includes $22,000 in a contingency fund, and $18,000 of that will be used to pay the salary of a third bureau staff member if the position is created.

Nichols will receive $40,000 in salary in fiscal 1989, plus $3,600 for automobile expenses. The bureau's executive secretary, Kim Henley, will receive $18,000.

As the bureau stands now, with two staff members, 25 percent of the budget will go to pay salaries. If the third staff member is added, it will rise to 30 percent.

Because the convention and visitors bureau is targeting state associations and other groups that may bring their meetings to Greenville, Nichols said there would be very little money spent on mass media advertising such as television and radio, but he budgeted $20,000 for printing.

Printing will involve brochures, leaflets, posters, stationery and other materials, and part of the money will be needed to cover printing costs incurred prior to the beginning of the fiscal year July 1.

State regulations allow advertising signs along interstate highways for gasoline, food, lodging and camping, Nichols said. "I think that on the sign we would recognize those things — gas, food and lodging," he said. "Something would have to be worked out as to how this would be done."

It is possible informational signs such as those on interstate roads would be allowed on U.S. 264, Nichols said, but the authority may have other options. "Jeff indicated to me there might be some more elaborate and effective signs than those logo-type signs you see on the interstate, but it would have to be done in a controlled way," Nichols said. REAL ESTATE FACTS
by: Rudy Schulte

YOUR NAME AT THE TONE!

Can you imagine buying a home from a recorded message? Listen to this imaginary conversation: "I'm sorry but we are not at home to sell you our home at this time. At the tone, please leave your name, the price you are willing to pay and a deposit of $1,000.00. Our answering machine will call you back with our acceptance as soon as we return."

Sound crazy, doesn't it? Yet, many home sellers attempt such a sale each year without utilizing the knowledge and expertise of a real estate professional. Oh, sure, they place an ad in the newspaper and a sign in the front yard, both of which are important steps to locating a buyer. But what happens next?

Serious home buyers are ready buyers, which means they want information about various homes, and lots of it. They want their questions answered accurately and quickly. In short, they are ready to act (to buy a home) and any delays are a definite "turn-off." As a result, a "no-answer" or "recorded message" gets no second chance.

A home which is listed with a professional real estate agent is sure to get wide exposure and will be made available to the public at all hours. Phones are answered by qualified, helpful agents, and at virtually all hours of the day, so there are no missed calls. Serious buyers are given immediate attention. Your home listed with a successful agent can yield "peace-of-mind" and a quick sale at top price.

Diamond A Home Away From Home

RICHMOND, Va. — For John Thomas and Gary Smith, coming back to The Diamond must feel good.

The two were the big heroes last year when East Carolina came from fourth seed to win the Colonial Athletic Association baseball tournament and earn an NCAA regional bid.

Smith, who appeared in four of the six games the Pirates played in, was named the most valuable player of the tournament a year ago.

Thursday, he went nine full innings in giving the Pirates a start on another title in a 9-1 win over William & Mary.

"(My performance today) was okay," Smith said. "But it was nothing out of the ordinary. In the last two innings, I thought I was terrible. They hit the ball real hard on me, but they got only one hit off them. I guess I was lucky."

The Indians hit four fly balls to the outfield in those two innings, but all were caught for outs. The lone hit he gave up after the third inning came in the ninth and was a grounder up the middle.

"My fastball worked well and I've got a new pitch, the split-fingered fastball, and it worked well too. But I just didn't pitch like I had a lead those last two innings."

Smith likes The Diamond, and he likes the tournament. "It's a second chance for us, a chance to get a little revenge," he said. "We don't get a lot of respect in the league."

And when do you think you can go again? one reporter asked. "I can go short relief tomorrow," he said.

And Coach Gary Overton smiled and nodded his head in agreement. Seems like old times.

For Adams, it was also a time of remembering. Last year in the tournament, he made a fine diving catch to rob a batter of a sure double. Thursday, he did it again against the Indians' Pat Ansoldi, robbing him of a sure two-bagger.

He also got on his horse and chased down several other long fly balls, giving him eight putouts on the day.

"I love this center field," he said. "You have all day to run."

He also loves the field as a hitter. Last year, he hit a grand-slam home run that pushed the Pirates into the championship game, which they won. He also hit safely in five of the six ECU games.

"I feel good here," he said after a two-for-five performance that drove in three runs, including two in the first that Overton called the key hit of the game.

Top-seeded James Madison had to come from behind to beat Richmond in the first game of the day Thursday, 5-4.

The Dukes trailed, 3-0, before Dwight Rowe drove in the tying run in the fifth inning. Rowe then scored the winning run on a fielder's choice by Rod Boddie in the seventh inning.

While the crowds were sparse on the opening day of the tournament, CAA officials feel that the event may be here to stay at The Diamond.

It's an outstanding facility; it's not really that far from all of the schools, with the possible exception of UNC-Wilmington; and it's a neutral field.

According to Tripp Sheppard, the league's media coordinator, there are enough gate receipts, along with corporate sponsorships, to meet expenses, making the tournament more or less a break-even affair.

And the league hopes that in the future, it might bring in a little profit.

"One thing that has hurt the gate is that in both year's Richmond has not played a night game," Sheppard said. "That keeps us from having a bigger gate at least on the first day of play."

Sheppard added that an independent cable company is going to telecast the two Saturday afternoon games, along with the championship game on Sunday, back to the Fairfax area. With a little luck, and some further sponsorship, maybe an expanded coverage could be hoped for in the future. — WOODY PEELE

Thomas, Smith Key ECU Win

By WOODY PEELE

RICHMOND, Va. — John Thomas and Gary Smith, two East Carolina heroes who have been there before, helped key the Pirates to a 9-1 victory over William & Mary Thursday in the first round of the Colonial Athletic Association baseball tournament.

The event, for the second straight year, is being played at The Diamond, Richmond's minor league baseball park.

Thomas, who hit safely in five of the six tournament games in 1987, including a grand-slam that put the Pirates into the championship game, keyed a three-run first inning with a two-run single, giving ECU a lead it never relinquished.

And Smith, who was last year's most valuable player in the tournament, hurled a five-hitter at the Indians, moving the Pirates along in the winners' bracket.

"It's good to get that first win in the tournament," ECU coach Gary Overton said. "I thought we did a good job of coming out to score and taking advantage of what we got."

"I also thought that we beat a good pitcher (Bill Prezioso, an all-conference selection). He may not have had his best stuff today."

That, Indian coach Chris Rankin said, was precisely the case.

"Billy really didn't have his good stuff today. (His pitches were) flat. But he's our ace and we felt we had to stick with him. I just kept hoping that he'd snap out of it."

Prior to the game, Overton had said that if one team got a lead on the other, he thought it would be difficult for the other to catch up. And again, Rankin fully agreed.

"Smith's tough and when Prez is on, he's tough, too. And I agree, the team that gets a lead against pitchers like these wins," Rankin said. "We hit some balls well in the game, but it always seemed like it was right at them."

The Indians did hit the ball hard, but from the third inning on, none fell for a hit until the ninth inning.

Meanwhile Smith had walked three in between, but never more than one in an inning. It wasn't until the ninth that he gave up his final hit, followed by another walk, before a double play ended it.

One of those five hits was a technicality, when, in the first, Adam Geyer led off with a single on the first pitch, but was then out when Shawn Hagerty's grounder hit him giving Hagerty an automatic base hit.

The Indians got two more hits in the third when they scored their only run. Keith Marino singled with one away and Geyer followed with a double to right. Hagerty walked to load them up and Bobby Knox grounded to short, forcing Hagerty. The double play relay was not quite in time, allowing Marino to score.

After that, only in the ninth did the Tribe put a runner as far as second base.

The Pirates took the lead for good in the first inning, scoring three times. David Ritchie led off with a walk, scoring all the way from first on a double to right by Steve Godin. Calvin Brown walked but Jay McGraw's attempted sacrifice bunt was fielded and thrown to third to force Godin. Then, with two away, Thomas singled into right, scoring both Brown and McGraw, who had moved up on a wild pitch.

"That hit was the key for us," Overton said. "It got us out to a good lead and enabled us to go on and take (the win)."

After the Indians cut it to 3-1, the Pirates countered in their half of the third. Ritchie doubled to center and scored on a hit by Godin.

East Carolina added another in the sixth. With two away, Tommy Yar-

Vincent's 31 Key Win Over Pistons

By The Associated Press

Maybe it wasn't so much the homecoming for Sam Vincent as it was: Three's the charm.

Vincent scored a career-high 31 points Thursday night, complimenting the 36 points of Michael Jordan and leading the Chicago Bulls to a 105-95 victory over the Detroit Pistons in their NBA Eastern Conference semifinal series at the Pontiac Silverdome.

The victory sent the best-of-seven series back to Chicago for Games 3 and 4 Saturday and Sunday, tied at one game apiece.

"At this point of the season, it's more mental than physical," said Vincent, a native of nearby Lansing, Mich. "You're tired. It's been a very long year for me — three teams."

Vincent started the season with the Boston Celtics, was traded to Seattle and finally Chicago.

Vincent scored all but two of his points in the first half, sitting out most of the second half in foul trouble. He hit 11 of 13 shots before picking up his fourth foul with 6:08 left in the third quarter.

"I always felt coming back home would help the shooting slump I was in," Vincent said.

Jordan, held to 29 points in the first game of the series, had 12 of his 36 in the third quarter to pick up the slack for Vincent.

The closest the Pistons got in the second half was 91-85 with 3:53 to play on a basket by James Edwards, but Jordan scored half of Chicago's next 12 points as the Bulls led 103-91 with 1:30 left.

Isiah Thomas had 25 points for the Pistons, who shot just 38 percent from the field.

Mavericks 112, Nuggets 108
Rolando Blackman, shooting just 38 percent from the field in five previous playoff games, scored 31 points on 13-of-23 shooting, helping Dallas hold off several late Denver comeback attempts. Blackman had 15 of his points in the final quarter.

"My teammates set up screens for me and gave me the ball in scoring situations tonight," Blackman said. "I think we're capable of putting this effort back-to-back."

Roy Tarpley, Dallas' sixth man, had 27.

Lafayette Lever and Alex English had 22 points apiece for Denver.

Tech, UNC Still Unbeaten At ACC Tourney

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) —

Georgia Tech coach Jim Morris credited good pitching with his team's victory over North Carolina State in the Atlantic Coast Conference baseball tournament.

"I know we came up with a few runs but, against that club, that's good pitching. Every time they got close, we got a big hit, particularly the home run that put us back up two, which made the lead a little more comfortable," Morris said after Thursday night's victory.

Georgia Tech takes on North Carolina tonight in the matchup between the tournament's only unbeaten.

In other games Thursday, Virginia beat Duke 7-1, Maryland topped Wake Forest 6-2 and North Carolina blanked Clemson 1-0. Duke and Wake Forest are now out of the tournament after two losses.

North Carolina State plays at 2:30 p.m. today, while Clemson plays Maryland at 11 a.m.

Georgia Tech second baseman Ty Griffin drove in three runs with a triple and a home run, enabling the third-seeded Yellow Jackets to defeat second-seeded North Carolina State.

In the first inning, Griffin singled, stole a base and scored the game's first run. He tripled with two out in the fifth, driving home Mike Reynolds from first, then topped off the night with a two-run homer in the seventh, his 13th of the season. Marty Durkins also homered for the Yellow Jackets.

Georgia Tech, 41-21, took advantage of four Wolfpack errors, two apiece by third baseman Bryn Kosco and shortstop Paul Spalt. Relief pitcher Joe Wise, 3-2, was the winner, while starter Brad Rhodes, 10-1, took the loss for the 44-13 Wolfpack.

North Carolina's junk-balling left-hander, Michael Hoog, led the Tar Heels to a 1-0 shutout of top-seeded Clemson.

Making use of a repertoire Clemson head coach Bill Wilhelm termed slow, slower and slowest, Hoog, 10-5, worked his way out of one jam after another.

The fifth-seeded Tar Heels, 33-25, scored the game's only run in the fourth inning. Third baseman Darin Campbell led off with a walk, moved to third on Dave Arendas' one-out double and scored on an error by Tiger shortstop Rusty Charpia. The Tigers, 48-11, committed five miscues during the game.

Clemson's most serious threat was in the sixth, when Jerry Brooks singled and moved to third on a single by Mike Milchin. After Mike Couture struck out, Henry Threadgill flied to shallow left field, but Tar Heel left fielder Tom Nevin threw out Brooks at the plate.

Losing pitcher Mike Pomerantz, 4-3, and reliever Phillip Lowery limited North Carolina to three hits. Pomerantz struck out six in 5 1-3 innings, while Lowery had three strikeouts in 2-3 innings of work.

It was the first time Clemson had been shut out in 134 games.

Maryland pitcher Thom Tryon stopped Wake Forest on seven hits as the Terrapins defeated the Demon Deacons 6-2.

Tryon, 6-5, allowed two runs, only one of which was earned, to go with three walks and three strikeouts. Chris Phillips, 4-3, the first of three Demon Deacon hurlers, took the loss.

Pete McHugh's two-out single in the seventh inning allowed Lou Holcomb to score what proved to be the game-winning run. With the score tied 2-2, Holcomb walked and moved to second on a passed ball. Phillips retired Scott Patterson and Preston Warner on fly balls but McHugh laced a single to right field, scoring Holcomb.

Wake Forest's defense broke down in the ninth, allowing three more Maryland runs to cross the plate. Deacon third basemen Paul Reinisch and Darren Weston each committed costly errors. The Maryland rally started with two outs and began with Patterson's double. McHugh had the only RBI, on a single. The other two runs scored on the errors.

Maryland improved to 20-25, while

Wake Forest concluded its season with a 32-26 record, the most wins in school history.

Virginia lefthanded pitcher Adam Syrek limited Duke to one unearned run in seven innings, lifting the Cavaliers past the Blue Devils 7-1.

The loss eliminated Duke, 10-35, from the tournament. Virginia improved to 31-18-1.

After losing pitcher Mike Trombley, 3-9, retired the Cavaliers' first nine batters, Virginia erupted for four runs off four hits and four Duke errors in the fourth inning. Center fielder David Guy hit his eighth home run, a two-run shot, during the inning.

All told, the Blue Devils committed six miscues, three by shortstop James Smith.

Duke scored its only run in the bottom of the fourth on catcher Rich Beviglia's two-out single. Syrek, 4-1, walked four and struck out seven before yielding to relievers Todd Vick and Mark McMillan.

Duke loaded the bases with walks in the seventh and ninth but failed to score. The Blue Devils were hitless in the final four innings.

Only one Virginia batter, first baseman Mike Lindner, collected as many as two hits. He doubled and singled in four at-bats. Rich Torgalski and Beviglia each had two hits for the Blue Devils.

Knight Is Still Mum

By The Associated Press

With Bobby Knight of Indiana University reportedly about to get the job, the naming of a new basketball coach at New Mexico was put off until next week.

"As a result of complexities that have developed during the negotiation process with the candidates for head basketball coach ... a decision has been made to continue discussion through the weekend," John Koenig, New Mexico's athletic director said today.

Koenig also said, "Our hope is a decision will be announced no later than next Wednesday."

After spending Tuesday talking with officials at the school in Albuquerque, N.M., Knight returned to Bloomington, Ind., on Wednesday. He met with his Indiana players and with IU athletic director Ralph Floyd upon his return, but nobody revealed what was said during those sessions.

Later Wednesday, in an interview with WTHR-TV of Indianapolis, Knight didn't reveal whether he'd made a decision.

"On several different occasions in the past, we talked to the people from New Mexico, and have talked to them about a variety of things in many different ways, both from their standpoint and from mine," Knight said.

"That's a part of the country that I enjoy very much. The people at New Mexico are awfully nice people. I think it's one of the really outstan-

Wiebe Knows Early Lead Means Little

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Mark Wiebe knows that leading a golf tournament after one round means about as much as leading an NBA game after one quarter.

"It's far from over," Wiebe said after shooting a 6-under-par 64 on Thursday to take a one-shot lead after the first round of the $750,000 Byron Nelson Golf Classic.

"It's nothing to get excited about until the last nine on Sunday. Out here, you just jockey around and try to get close on the final day."

Two years ago, Wiebe was where he needed to be but Andy Bean was better, making a birdie on the 72nd hole to win by a shot on the Tournament Players Course at Las Colinas.

Wiebe holds a one-shot lead over rookie Brandel Chamblee, a former University of Texas star who is a non-winner on the PGA Tour.

Chamblee, in the last group of the day, birdied the 18th hole for a 65. The former Southwest Conference champion qualified 29th for the tour in the 1987 school. He has missed the cut in six of eight tournaments.

"I've been playing good and missed the cut three times by one shot," he said.

"It's tough out here. Just look at the scoreboard here with all the players under par. Man, they can shoot zero. You shoot 72 and they go whizzing past you."

Nine other players shot 66 and eight were at 67.

Wiebe, a two-time PGA Tour winner whose best finish this year was 10th in the Greensboro Open, one-putted nine greens on Thursday.

"I'm surprised to be leading because I figured somebody would shoot 62," Wiebe said. "I wish I knew why I haven't been scoring. In fact, I'd be a millionaire if I knew."

The 31-year-old Wiebe, who lives in Denver, got his last victory in the 1986 Hardee's Golf Classic.

"It's been a long mental struggle for me," Wiebe said. "You get worn down out here on the mental side. I've been playing pretty well but nothing has been happening."

Payne Stewart, who has been in three playoffs but has never won a tournament in Texas, shot 66 on Thursday, along with Ben Crenshaw, Peter Jacobsen, Tommy Nakajima, Clarence Rose, David Frost, Bruce Lietzke, Dave Rummells, and Jeff Sluman.

Four-time Nelson winner Tom Watson, Ray Floyd, Bob Eastwood, Andy Magee, D.A. Weibring, Roy Biancalana, Corey Pavin, and Steve Elkington all had 67's.

Masters champion Sandy Lyle shot 68, while 58-year-old Arnold Palmer and defending champion Fred Couples equaled par with 70's.

Stewart lost the 1985 Nelson Classic in a playoff to Eastwood after double bogeying the last hole. Stewart also has lost two playoffs at the Colonial National Invitational.

"I'm staying with some old friends from SMU and I felt real comfortable today," Stewart said. "I've had to buy 30 tickets but it was nice having a big gallery pulling for you."

Thirty-nine players broke par under ideal scoring conditions on the 6,767-yard TPC course.

LPGA Players See More Parity On Tour

MIDDLETOWN, N.J. (AP) — There is a feeling among many LPGA players that tournaments are becoming more wide open and parity is becoming the name of the game on the tour.

"I think when any tournament starts, there are at least 25 people capable of winning," said Sherri Turner, a non-winner on the tour who has come very close to winning her first event in each of the past two weeks.

Two weeks ago, Turner lost in a playoff at the Sarah Lee Classic and last week was fifth in the Crestar Classic, one stroke behind the four players who went into a playoff that Juli Inkster won.

Turner could easily have won last weekend except for two double bogeys in the final round.

"The play has been getting better every year," said Turner who will join a field of 110 golfers in today's opening round of the $250,000 Chrysler Plymouth Classic. "I think you're going to see a lot more playoffs."

Playoffs have been the watchword on the tour for the last month. Each of the last four tournaments has been decided in extra holes.

"I think that just goes to prove how much depth there is on the tour and how many good players there are," said Colleen Walker, who finished second here a year ago and is currently the No. 3 money winner on this year's tour. "It used to be that one or two people would dominate. Now, with players coming out of junior colleges and college, the depth has gotten deeper and deeper."

Three more crossed in the seventh. Godin reached on catcher interference and with one away, he moved up on a wild pitch and scored on McGraw's single to left. John Adams walked and Thomas hit one just past the diving first baseman to drive in McGraw. Riggs followed with a single to score Adams, making it 8-1.

ding coaching situations that there is, particularly for a person that would enjoy the western part of the country.

"And I have conveyed my thoughts to the people in Albuquerque in that regard as we have discussed various things here."

As for Indiana, Knight said: "Regardless of what I ever do, I would always think some of the truly outstanding people in the world reside here in the state of Indiana, but there have been some things that have changed here."

Knight may have been referring to the change of leadership at Indiana that brought in Thomas Ehrlich as president.

Ehrlich recently reprimanded Knight for comments the coach made on television about rape and stress, saying he deplored Knight's reference to rape and that the "coarse language was in very poor taste."

On Wednesday, Ehrlich released a statement expressing hope that Knight would remain at Indiana, where he has nine years remaining on his contract.

"In my view, he is an outstanding coach and I certainly want him to stay at Indiana University," Ehrlich said. "He is an outstanding teacher. I don't think there's a conflict."

Asked whether Knight was leaving, Floyd said, "I'm not going to comment on that at this time. I can't answer. I hope the whole thing is cleared up by tomorrow night or Friday."

Bonds, Bonilla Packing Quite A Punch

PITTSBU/GH (AP) — Back when they were Class A teammates, Barry Bonds and Bobby Bonilla talked for hours about what it would be like when they got to the big leagues together.

The Los Angeles Dodgers found out Thursday night just how much damage Bonds and Bonilla can cause when they get it together on the same night.

Bonds hit two home runs, drove in three runs and scored three and Bonilla hit a three-run shot to tie for the National League lead in homers and runs batted in to power the Pittsburgh Pirates past the Dodgers 7-4.

Bonds, 23, and Bonilla, 25, have more in common than the same initials. Thoroughbred athletes with young, strong bodies and quick bats, Bonds and Bonilla are two of the biggest reasons why the Pirates have progressed from tailenders to contenders in two short seasons.

The Pirates, 22-11, are tied with the New York Yankees for the third-best record in baseball and their 12-3 home record is the best in the majors.

Bonilla is hitting like a player possessed, manufacturing the kind of numbers — .349, 10 homers, 29 RBI — that already would be generating Most Valuable Player talk in some cities.

one out in the 10th against Mark Davis, 1-1. After Andre Dawson fouled out, Rafael Palmeiro walked and Berryhill doubled. Berryhill got his first run batted in this season and second in the majors.

Bill Landrum won his first decision this season.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Knuckleball pitchers like Cleveland's Tom Candiotti have strange ways and shouldn't be judged by ordinary baseball numbers, says Indians manager Doc Edwards.

"Like Phil Niekro who is going to be in the Hall of Fame, knuckleball pitchers can be 20-18 one year and may be lucky to get to .500 the next," said Edwards. "That's the nature of the knuckleball pitcher."

Candiotti gave up 10 hits Thursday night but he still got his fifth victory and fifth complete game of the season as the Indians beat the Milwaukee Brewers 3-1.

The Indians broke a 1-1 tie in the top of the ninth as Ron Washington tripled in the go-ahead run and then scored on a double by Andy Allanson off Milwaukee reliever Chuck Crim.

Milwaukee starter Juan Nieves

Cardinals 13, Giants 12

Bob Horner hit a pair of two-run singles and St. Louis rallied from an 8-3 deficit in the sixth inning to beat San Francisco. The afternoon game in St. Louis came after the teams played 16 innings the previous night.

The Cardinals scored six times in the sixth inning, two on Terry Pendleton's homer. Jeffrey Leonard's two-run single helped the Giants take an 11-9 lead, but Horner's two-run single keyed a four-run seventh.

Cubs 2, Padres 1

Rookie Damon Berryhill hit an RBI double with two outs in the 10th inning, leading Chicago over San Diego at Wrigley Field.

The Padres lost for the fifth straight time and have dropped 11 of the last 12.

Rookie Mark Grace singled with went 7-2-3 innings for his longest stint of the season. He allowed only three hits, including Cory Snyder's sixth homer.

Rangers 2, Orioles 1

Jose Guzman and two relievers held off Baltimore as Texas won its sixth straight game.

The Rangers completed a three-game sweep at home. The Orioles, who stranded 14 runners, fell to 4-29.

Blue Jays 8, Mariners 2

'Gourmet' Plotting Comeback

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Television's former "Gallop Gourmet" has traded opulence for simplicity, possessions for charity and fame for spiritual healing as he plots a comeback.

"There comes a time in an individual's life, as in mine, when you just want to put a finger down your throat and say, 'I've had enough,'" said Graham Kerr, who has been out of the limelight for 14 years.

Kerr is building a new sort of television cooking series that stresses the consumption of more healthful, cheaper foods, and sharing what one has with the less fortunate.

Thirty-nine segments have been filmed and more are planned, says Kerr, who moved from Maryland to Tacoma after leaving the air in 1974.

When he quit television, Kerr gave up his Maryland mansion, several cars and three yachts, and used the money to finance projects for the world's needy, including Brazilian orphans.

He and his wife, Treena, and their three children moved into a 50-year-old frame house in a quiet Tacoma neighborhood.

The segments show Kerr in private homes, where he emphasizes the use of local foods and less salt, fat and meat than what he promoted in his "Gallop Gourmet" show of the late 1960s and early 1970s.

Natalie Cole 'Beats' Drugs

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Natalie Cole says she once was a "human garbage disposal" of drugs, but today the three-time Grammy winner says she has overcome her drug dependence and come to terms with her father's fame.

"My whole theme was, 'I'll never be as good as my father,'" Miss Cole said. But she says she now wants to do a whole album of Nat "King" Cole ballads.

"The time is right now," to record her father's songs, she said, "because I have confidence in my own talent."

Miss Cole successfully battled drug and alcohol dependence in the early 1980s with the help of a therapist and overcame her hostility toward her father, according to the May 30 issue of US magazine.

Miss Cole, who currently is enjoying a hit single with her version of Bruce Springsteen's "Pink Cadillac," was frank about her problems.

"I was a human garbage disposal," she said, speaking of her years on cocaine, methaqualone, downers and alcohol. Then after her rehabilitation, "people wanted to know if I could stay sober. Then they wanted to know if I could still sing. It was humiliating and scary and just plain hard work, but I proved that I could do both."

Sharkey Earns Big Screen Role

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Ray Sharkey, whose Sonny Steelgrave mob character on CBS-TV's "Wiseguy" was killed off, moves to the big screen in the upcoming movie "Wired," about the life of comedian John Belushi.

Sharkey is cast in the role of Velasquez, an angel who was an imaginary friend of the comedian, who died of a drug overdose in March 1982.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY May 14

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Don't hesitate to make any changes in your practical affairs if they can bring you greater security. Get plenty of rest this evening.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Try to clear up that misunderstanding between yourself and a good friend. Relieve the tension you have been under by going out with your pals.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Don't blow your own horn today, or you could alienate some good friends. Be sure you don't over-indulge in anything to-night.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): If you make any changes in your social situation, stop and consider the consequences before acting. Be sure to drive carefully.
LEO (July 22 to August 21): If you use some tact in presenting an idea to a superior, you can get the support you've been looking for. Be more active than usual tonight.
VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): An opportunity to increase your income will be present today, so stay alert. Try to listen more to the ideas of others this evening.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Confer with an expert in business who will understand your ideas, and get some good advice. Don't be overly demanding to your mate.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): If you continue to daydream all the time, you will miss out on some fine opportunities. A co-worker can help you to achieve a prized goal.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): A small change in your daily routine can improve your efficiency immensely. Don't let anyone get you involved in a silly argument.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): A good friend can give you some valuable advice concerning the state of your finances. Be extremely cautious while driving.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Clear up that dispute at home which has been causing a lot of discord lately. This can be done with some simple common sense.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20): This is a good time to catch up on neglected communication with old friends. Stick to the goals you have set for yourself without fail.

 Nowhere is the difference between a tyro and an expert more marked than when it comes to taking a finesse. The relative newcomer can't wait for the opportunity to try win a trick with a lesser card; the pro looks for ways to avoid taking a finesse, because he wants better than even money odds.

 Since North's jump to three no trump showed a hand of 16-18 points and a 4-3-3-3 distribution, South decided he would gamble on a club slam. That might seem risky considering his suit, but he knew his partner held at least three-card support, and it was odds-on that a top honor would be included.
 West led a spade, and the great duplication was unfortunate. At first glance it seemed the contract hinged on the heart finesse, since a diamond and a heart could be discarded on dummy's spades. However, declarer found an alternative line, that would work if hearts were 3-3, or if either defender held a singleton or doubleton king of hearts. Those combined chances were better than a finesse—54-to-50, if you're mathematically inclined.

 Declarer took the three top spades, discarding two hearts from hand. He came to hand with the ace of hearts and led a low trump to the eight. East returned a trump (no other suit would have been any better). Declarer won in dummy, ruffed a heart, entered dummy by drawing the last trump, and ruffed another heart. When the king came tumbling down on this trick, declarer could get back to the table with the king of diamonds to cash the jack of hearts for a diamond discard, and a well-played slam rolled home.

Taiwan Grants Hijackers' Asylum, Returns Jetliner

BELJING (AP) — China thanked the rival government on Taiwan for its quick action in returning a Chinese airliner today, nine hours after it was hijacked to a Taiwanese military base.

Two young men hijacked the Boeing 737 with 107 passengers and 11 crew aboard on Thursday evening and diverted it to Taiwan shortly after it left the coastal city of Xiamen for a scheduled flight to Canton.

The plane landed two hours later at an air force base in Taiwan. The hijackers, armed with two bombs and handguns, surrendered to authorities and were granted asylum. The plane was refueled and sent back to Xiamen.

No one was hurt. The passengers included several Japanese and Taiwanese and a French passenger, but no Americans.

"We are very grateful to you for your help to the hijacked No. 2510 airliner, ... which returned to Xiamen airport at about 5 this morning," Hu Yizhou, director-general of the national airline Civil Aviation Administration of China said in a message to the Civil Aeronautics Bureau in Taiwan.

China's official Xinhua News Agency quoted Hu as saying: "The 105 passengers and 11 crew members were all safe. On behalf of the CAAC and the Xiamen Aviation Co., I here express my thanks to you and your bureau for your help."

The message did not mention the two hijackers. In an earlier message, Hu had requested that they be returned to China.

It was the first hijacking of a commercial Chinese airliner to Taiwan. Six mainland air force pilots have defected by flying their planes to Taiwan since 1949, when the Communists seized power and the defeated Nationalists under Chiang Kai-shek set up a rival government on Taiwan.

A CAAC airliner was also hijacked to South Korea in May 1983 by six Chinese, who were flown to Taiwan for a hero's welcome after being imprisoned in South Korea for a little more than a year.

Xinhua said Hu also conveyed his sympathies today to the crew and passengers. He said Premier Li Peng showed great concern about the incident.

The plane belonged to the Xiamen Aviation, a subsidiary of CAAC. Xiamen is about 136 miles across the Taiwan Straits from Taiwan.

The Taiwan government identified the hijackers as Zhang Qingguo, 27, a worker at an arsenal in south China's Yunnan province, and Long Guiyun, 26, a steel mill worker from neighboring Guizhou province.

Taiwan said the plane was "allowed" to fly to Hong Kong, apparently trying to avoid any impression of co-operation with the mainland government. The plane actually went to Xiamen.

Taiwan still claims to be the legitimate government of all of China.

Xinhua did not disclose the hijacking until 3½ hours after it happened and two hours after officials on Taiwan announced it.

The news agency did not say how Hu sent his messages to Taiwan. Mainland China and Taiwan have no direct telephone, telegraph or mail connections.

Japanese Minister Resigning

TOKYO (AP) — A Cabinet minister who said Japan was not an aggressor in World War II resigned today, an official in his governing Liberal Democratic Party said.

Seisuke Okuno, director general of the National Land Agency, submitted his resignation to Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita, said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity. The Japan Broadcast Corp. also reported Okuno resigned.

A remark by Okuno three weeks ago that Japan was not an aggressor in World War II had drawn condemnation from China, South Korea and North Korea.

The veteran politician is widely regarded as the No. 3 man in government after Takeshita and Finance Minister Kiichi Miyazawa.

Earlier today, Okuno apologized to Japanese officials for the furor his comments had caused but continued to stand by them.

"I may withdraw my remarks if they disrupt the Diet (parliament), but what I said was not wrong," he told a group of parliamentarians.

To reporters, Okuno said: "My comments have incurred criticism outside Japan and aroused friction in the Diet. As a result, the Diet ... and other concerned bodies have suffered."

"From the bottom of my heart, I am sorry."

The report of his resignation followed press reports that Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita wanted Okuno to step down voluntarily. Kyodo News Service said Takeshita met with the 75-year-old Okuno today and brought up the option.

It was also a reversal of policy for Takeshita, who had avoided disputing Okuno's remarks or taking any action against him since Okuno said April 22 that Japan had no aggressive intent in World War II.

Okuno had said Japan "fought to protect itself at a time when the white race had turned Asia into a colony."

The comment drew condemnation from China, South Korea and North Korea and threatened to strain Asian relations at a time when Japan's ties with its main ally, the United States, are marred by trade tensions.

Opposition leaders today stepped up their calls for Okuno's resignation in meetings with Cabinet officials.

Mexican Building Collapse Kills 12

AGUASCALIENTES, MEXICO (AP) — Rescue teams tunneled through tons of concrete today searching for missing victims after four floors of a downtown building collapsed, killing at least 12 people and injuring 45.

The rubble buried the basement offices of a furniture factory. Authorities said it was not immediately known what caused the collapse of the building, which was under construction.

Juan Manuel Hinojo, a reporter for the Aguascalientes daily El Heraldillo, told The Associated Press that officials at the site said they had recovered 12 bodies and rescued 45 people. All the survivors were injured, he said.

He said at least five more people were believed missing, based on survivors' knowledge of who was in building when it collapsed at about 5 p.m. (7 p.m. EDT) on Thursday.

Esperanza Cardenas, a spokeswoman for the Mexican Red Cross in Aguascalientes, said early today that nine people had been confirmed dead but that it was not immediately known how many had been in the building when it collapsed.

"Exactly how many there are or how many more are inside the building isn't known," she said.

Actor's Adopted Son Is Charged

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — George Rose's adopted 18-year-old son and the youth's natural father were among four people charged with murdering the Tony award-winning actor, police said.

The natural father said Rose had sexually abused his son, Domingo Antonio Ralfe Vazquez, as well as other youths.

Police and doctors also said cocaine was found on the 68-year-old Rose and that laboratory tests performed in Miami showed traces of a cocaine derivative in his body at the time of his death.

In a sworn statement police gave reporters on Thursday, Juan Antonio Vazquez Padilla, the natural father of Ralfe Vazquez, said the British-Cardenas said Red Cross workers believed about 40 people had been rescued and all were taken to local hospitals because of injuries. Their conditions were not immediately known.

One of the dead was an unidentified boy about 10 years old, Cardenas said.

Rescue workers were using specially trained search dogs and tunnelling equipment to locate any missing people, said Commander Marco Cerilla, chief of the Aguascalientes police department.

He said personnel from the Mexican army, national Red Cross headquarters and federal Public Security department arrived to coordinate the search effort.

Cardenas said construction workers and employees of the Romo furniture factory, in the basement, were in the structure when it collapsed.

Aguascalientes, capital of Aguascalientes state, is about 320 miles northwest of Mexico City.

Jorge Alberto Castaneda Alvarado, head of the Aguascalientes Civil Engineers Association, said today that a committee of engineers and architects was being organized to investigate the collapse.

born performer was held for eight hours on May 4 before being clubbed to death.

Vazquez said the killers tried to make the death look like the result of a single-car accident, on which initial police reports blamed it.

A statement read by police spokesman Col. Aquiles Cruz Gomez at a news conference said Vazquez, Ralfe, and the youth's uncle, Maximo Padilla Vazquez, were arrested. A fourth suspect was at large.

The statement said the three had "confessed to police that they planned the crime when they noticed Mr. George Rose felt certain amorous weaknesses for another 14-year old minor."
