Meese Fires Spokesman

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese III has fired the Justice Department's chief spokesman, Terry Eastland, saying he has done an inadequate job of defending the attorney general in a year-old criminal investigation, Eastland said today.

"Today's my last today; I don't have a job," Eastland told a reporter.

In a letter to Meese, Eastland noted that he had been relieved of his duties Friday. He wrote to Meese,

"You have expressed to me your desire to have as director of public affairs someone willing to aggressively defend you against, in effect, any and all criticism."

Eastland said that he had defended Meese "to the best of my ability," while "exercising good judgment and acting in a manner consistent with the obligations of this office."

"You have concluded that my efforts have not sufficed," Eastland's letter said.

Eastland's letter said that Meese had offered him 30 days in which to conclude his work and look for a job, but "I have decided that the most appropriate course of action is to end my responsibilities today."

Eastland, a political conservative who has written most of Meese's speeches, has been increasingly concerned in recent months by the effect on Justice Department operations of the ongoing probe of Meese by independent counsel James McKay, said department sources, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Soviets Begin Pullout As Afghan War Rages

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — A convoy of 1,300 Soviet soldiers today pulled out of the Afghan capital and headed for home. Gunfire rang out in the distance during a farewell ceremony, an ominous reminder that the civil war rages on.

President Najib spoke at the ceremony for the departing troops, the first contingent of Soviet forces to leave under an international accord to end the Soviet Union's eight-year involvement in the war.

The 300-vehicle convoy was the first of four from the northeastern city of Jalalabad near the Pakistan border. It set out early Sunday morning on the 88-mile trip to the capital, and has an additional 200 miles to go before reaching Soviet soil.

In a speech at the rally, Najib referred to the troops as "my dear friends" who had helped his country at a time of "life and death." Afghan forces now can defend the country on their own, he said.

The Afghan leader and his military commanders pinned medals on some of the 500 Soviet soldiers who stood for two hours during review. The medals are gold and are attached to a blue ribbon bearing the inscription, "From a grateful Afghan people."

"May your way be safe and your dishes tasty," Najib told the departing Soviets.

Military bands played and thousands of Afghan soldiers and civilians waved flags.

Gunshots could be heard in the distance, apparently from clashes between the U.S.-backed Moslem guerrillas and pro-government forces.

Meanwhile, the leader of a Moslem guerrilla faction vowed on Sunday to seize Jalalabad as soon as the rest of the estimated 6,000 Soviet troops that were stationed there withdraw.

"We'll continue our jihad (holy war). We are fighting against an idea," said Mahmood, a commander in the radical Hezb-I-Islami guerrilla faction, who spoke from his headquarters in Peshawar, Pakistan.

Soviet troops are expected to complete their retreat from Jalalabad in two weeks and be replaced by up to 12,000 Afghan army troops.

Mahmood said he had 10,000 men under his command but could not predict when Jalalabad, a strategic city 45 miles from the Pakistan border, would be in guerrilla hands.

"There will be a lot of army there. It will need a lot of pressure," Mahmood said.

Edmund McWilliams, deputy chief-of-mission at the U.S. Embassy in Kabul, said Sunday the insurgents have moved closer and stepped up their rocket attacks on the city, the capital of Nangarhar province.

"It does not appear, though, at this point that the attacks... will be affecting the pullout," he said.

In the past month, insurgents reportedly have overrun dozens of security posts in eastern Afghanistan as Soviet forces handed them over to Afghan army troops.

The Red Army convoy arrived in Kabul on Sunday at the end of its

Pitt Convention Bureau Gets Early Cool Shoulder

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

It's National Tourism Week in the United States, and the Pitt-Greenville Convention and Visitors Authority will hold a reception Thursday to formally announce the opening of its convention bureau.

"We'll have a display there to focus on National Tourism Week," said Al Nichols, who took over as director of the bureau in late February. "But the main thrust of the thing will be to announce our new bureau, and we tried to do it along with National Tourism Week."

The authority invited more than 1,200 people to the reception at the Greenville Hilton and budgeted $5,000 for the event. They expected about 500 people to attend, but Nichols said response has not been good.

Friday was the deadline for people to respond, and Nichols said 151 people have said they will attend and 96 have said they will not.

"We're kind of disappointed," Nichols said. "I don't know why there has been a lack of interest. It certainly shouldn't be because of a lack of publicity. Everybody should know who we are."

The authority decided to not allow spouses to attend because of initial concerns over space and because they wanted the reception to be a business function, not a social function, said Nichols, and that probably has hurt interest. The authority invited local government officials and members of organizations that may bring conventions to Pitt County.

Nichols said some people may go to the reception without notifying the bureau in advance, and he is hopeful more than 151 people will attend.

"Tourism is important to the economy of the nation as a whole and to all of us in Pitt County," Nichols said. More than 5 million people in the nation are employed in the travel and tourism industry, and travel generated more than $292 billion last year, according to statistics from the U.S. Travel Data Center and the U.S.

Prison Riot Ends

STRINGTOWN, Okla. (AP) — Inmates agreed today to release their last two hostage guards and peacefully end a three-day prison uprising that did $2.5 million in damage, after officials promised that the surrender would be televised.

Officials also agreed to a demand from the approximately 20 inmates that three state legislators the convicts met with Sunday would witness today's surrender, said Department of Corrections spokesman Jerry Massie.

The agreement was reached after a guard held with the others since the uprising began was released late Sunday, officials said.

One inmate and one guard sustained minor injuries during the takeover of the overcrowded, medium-security Mack Alford Correctional Center.

After the surrender, the inmates were taken to another state penitentiary, Massie said.

Under the agreement, they were to let the hostages go after a bus arrives to take them away, then come out of the dormitory where they have been holed up since late Friday, said prison spokeswoman Anita Trammell. Both hostages and inmates would be given medical examinations, she said.

In exchange for food and the earlier meeting with the three state lawmakers, the inmates late Sunday released prison Capt. Lewis McGee.

Authorities gave the convicts soft drinks, ice cream and cigarettes at their request, said corrections spokeswoman Joy Hadwiger. Temperatures in the area Sunday were in the low 90s.

Robertson Pulling Out Of '88 Race

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — Pat Robertson, the former television evangelist who failed to turn the fervent support of his "invisible army" into a significant share of Republican votes, was formally ending his presidential bid today.

At the outset of the 1988 presidential race, Robertson was a wild card.

The Republican establishment nervously eyed his evangelical followers and his hefty war chest and wondered what kind of a showing he might make. Since many Robertson supporters were new to the political process, his potential impact was difficult to gauge.

In the end, Robertson spent $22 million and gained only 46 delegates to the Republican National Convention.

Robertson set the stage for his departure last week by endorsing the

Court Says Trash Is Public Matter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled today that Americans have no right of privacy to their garbage once it's put out for collection.

By a 6-2 vote, the justices reinstated drug-dealing charges against two California residents. Police discovered evidence of narcotics in their garbage.

"The police cannot reasonably be expected to avert their eyes from evidence of criminal activity that could have been observed by any member of the public," said Justice Byron R. White for the court.

"It is common knowledge that plastic garbage bags left on or at the side of a public street are readily accessible to animals, children, scavengers, snoops and other members of the public," White said.

The Fourth Amendment to the Constitution generally requires police to obtain search warrants from a judge before conducting searches.

But White said the constitutional protection does not apply to discarded trash because people have no "expectation of privacy" for their garbage.

In a dissenting opinion, Justice William J. Brennan said, "Scrutiny of another's trash is contrary to commonly accepted notions of civilized behavior. I suspect, therefore, that members of our society will be shocked to learn that the court, the ultimate guarantor of liberty, deems unreasonable our expectation that the aspects of our private lives that are concealed safely in a trash bag will not become public."

He was joined by Justice Thurgood Marshall.

Joining White were Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justices

John Paul Stevens, Harry A. Blackmun, Sandra Day O'Connor and Antonin Scalia.

Justice Anthony M. Kennedy, the newest member of the court, did not take part in deciding the case.

Today's ruling overturned decisions by California courts that said police officers must obtain warrants before searching discarded garbage.

Police sifted through garbage collected from outside the home of Billy Greenwood in Laguna, Calif., on April 6 and May 4, 1984.

N.C. Militia Back In Uniform

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — After nearly 40 years of inactivity, the North Carolina Militia is back in uniform — not buckskin and beaver caps, but jungle fatigues and berets.

Brig. Gen. Henry "Bo" Thorpe of Rocky Mount was commissioned Feb. 22 by Gov. Jim Martin to resurrect what was once North Carolina's last line of civil defense.

And the ex-Army commander, now a band leader, is looking for only the finest men for what is essentially the creation of a new state armed force.

"We're literally starting an army from scratch," Thorpe said during a recent startup visit to the National Guard headquarters in Raleigh. "All we have are the people assets."

Those assets have been hand-picked by Thorpe and have a combined 200 years of military service among them. The militiamen will use a building at Fort Bragg as headquarters.

Thorpe started as a buck private in 1959 and served 16 years on active and inactive service.

After basic training at Fort Jackson, S.C., he took advanced training in intelligence at Fort Stockum, N.Y.

He trained for Airborne at Fort Benning, Ga., where he graduated from the elite Army Ranger School.

"It is a true all-volunteer force, which is the way it should be," Thorpe said. "I want the guys who can still run 15 miles. We're really hand-picking these guys."

The new commanding general said that the all-volunteer part of the militia is what makes it different from other military organizations. But it's also making it harder for the group to get started.

The militia is purely a state force which cannot be called into federal service or used outside the borders of the state.

Thorpe plans to have the basic cadre, about 10 percent of the full strength of militia, in place by February 1989.

The militia is now trying to assemble the equipment and supplies for regional headquarters.

Area Zoning Case Going Before Board

The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission will again consider the extension of the city's Extraterritorial Planning and Zoning Jurisdiction over approximately 270 acres south of the city at its regular monthly meeting Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Council Chambers of City Hall.

Approximately 25 residents of the area and several interested developers attended a public hearing at the commission's April meeting on the proposal to extend the ETJ south approximately one mile south of White Road, east of SR 1709, and west of N.C. 43.

The commission at that meeting voted 9-1 to continue the matter until the May meeting to provide time to gather detailed information regarding several potential non-conforming uses in the proposed area.

Approximately 70 acres of the southernmost section consisting of the Windsor Subdivision is proposed to enter the ETJ zoned R-15S (residential), while the majority of the area, 187.5 acres, would enter the ETJ zoned RA-20 (residential-agricultural). A 14.1-acre tract located adjacent to White Road halfway between SR 1709 and SR 1725 is proposed to enter as IU (unoffensive industry), while a 1.2-acre section located on the corner of N.C. 43 and SR 1725 is proposed to enter the ETJ zoned CS (shopping center).

In other matters Tuesday, the commission will consider a request by C.H. McCaskill to rezone a 30-acre tract located north of N.C. 33, south of the Procter and Gamble property and east of Country Squire Estates from RA-20 to R6-MH (residential-mobile home).

The commission will also consider a request by Greenville Surgeon's Properties to rezone a 11-acre tract located south of Johns Hopkins Drive and Bethesda Drive from the medical district zoning classification of MD-5 to MD-3.

Meanwhile, the commission will consider a request by Bill Dansey to change the street name of Lionsgate to Treybrooke Circle and a request by the Planning and Development Department to amend the Zoning Ordinance by creating a comprehensive "congregate care facility" ordinance.

The commission will also discuss a report by a subcommittee regarding permitted and special uses within the MD-2 zoning district, discuss the inclusion of accessory commercial areas within mobile home zones, and review the administrative procedures for processing zoning compliance applications.

Views On Dental Health

NEGLECTED BABY TEETH

You may think that your child's baby teeth are not important because they're going to fall out anyway, but nothing could be further from the truth. Much of your child's future dental health will depend on the care given to his or her baby teeth.

Most children have all of their primary teeth by age three. Between the ages of six and 12 these teeth are gradually lost as permanent replacements erupt through the gums. However, if they're lost too soon because of decay, injury, or some other reason, the child's neighboring teeth can drift into the vacant space. This can make it difficult or impossible for the permanent teeth to come in properly.

The result is often crooked or crowded teeth which cause other dental problems. That's one reason why space maintainers to temporarily fill gaps and regular dental checkups are recommended for children.

Note:
We welcome new patients, both children and adults.

Bennett Says White House Would Be His Choice

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
AP Education Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Outgoing Education Secretary William J. Bennett says "I know that I'm popular" and if there is a political race in his future, it will be for the White House. Such an effort may be years away, Bennett said in an interview, "but after watching some of the people in the stakes for the presidency, I could do that well."
"I won't mention anybody in particular," the outspoken educator said, but he added that he was referring to both Republicans and Democrats.
He brought up the White House himself when asked if he aspired to run for the Senate.

Bennett said he has had overtures about possible Senate races from his native state of New York, his adopted state of North Carolina and from Maryland, where he now lives.
But he said neither the Senate, nor the possibility of a college presidency, holds any interest for him.
"Right now, if I were going to run for anything in the future, I'd want to run for president," he volunteered.
Asked about the vice presidency, Bennett said, "I'm not sure I'd make a very good No. 2 man. I like to run things."
Vice President George Bush, who has locked up the GOP nomination, says he wants to be "the education president." But his campaign has kept its distance from Bennett, who has waded with teacher unions and pilloried college presidents.

Bennett did not mention Bush by name, but said, "We'll probably have a good Republican president in '88 who'll be there for a couple of terms. If I do this, this could be way in the future."
Bennett informed President Reagan last Monday he is quitting the Cabinet in mid-September to write and lecture. He then declared at a congressional hearing the next day that if the Education Department is saved, he will deserve most of the credit.
A lifelong Democrat, Bennett switched to the GOP in May 1986, 15 months after Reagan put him in the Cabinet. He has proven a big draw at Republican functions across the country.

Asked if he was now wedded to the GOP, the 44-year-old Bennett replied, "Probably."
Only probably?
"Well, sure. Look, I was a Democrat. I shifted to the Republican Party because the Democrats left the ranch and deserted their principles. I don't see that happening in the Republican Party. But I put country above party, always have," he said.
"This will no doubt shock by sheer chutzpah some of my critics, but we were principled. We were principled and a lot of our principles ... went to the heart of what Ronald Reagan stands for and what a lot of liberal Democrats stand against," he said.

"I know that I'm popular with audiences out there in the country, and it doesn't seem to make much difference whether they're Democrats or Republicans," he said.
He agreed his relations with the education establishment may be at their nadir, but "I would bet my relations with the American people are at an all-time high."
He said he "probably drove some people crazy" by speaking out at Cabinet meetings on issues other than education.
He decided early on that "I may never have a job like this again, so I'm going to do it all the way."
Sometimes, "people rolled their eyes and said, 'There he goes again,'" he related. "I talked about drugs a lot, use of the military, and Justice Ginsburg, AIDS and Nicaragua, but I decided I wasn't going to leave this job and say, 'Damn it! I should have said this! Boy, if I had it to do all over again ...'"
Bennett took it upon himself to call

Douglas Ginsburg to urge him to withdraw as a Supreme Court nominee after Ginsburg's admission that he smoked marijuana while a Harvard law professor.
But Bennett said he has not considered making such a call to his mentor, Edwin Meese III, the embattled attorney general who is the subject of a yearlong criminal investigation and whose department has been hit with a succession of protest resignations.

Ex-Trooper Sentenced To Death

ATMORE, Ala. (AP) — Joe Duncan, whose dark-blue state trooper uniform has been traded in for the prison whites of death row, says if all legal appeals fail, he will beg to be executed for the murder of his trooper girlfriend.
"If we develop the evidence we expect to in the next few weeks, I'll get a new trial," Duncan said last week during his first interview from death row at Holman Prison.
But if the appeals fail, the only choices are life without parole, or death. Duncan, 33, speaking amid clanging metal doors and inmates' yells, said he would prefer execution.
"If I had no chance of getting out of this institution ... I'd beg them to put me in the electric chair," he said.
Duncan was sentenced April 12 in the shooting death of Trooper Elizabeth Cobb, 31, whose body was found Oct. 12 in her parked patrol car behind a church where Duncan said they used to meet. She was shot three times in the head.
Prosecutors said Duncan killed Miss Cobb to collect $350,000 from a life insurance policy that went into effect 10 days before her death. They said the policy was taken out June 30, and that Duncan was named as beneficiary.
Duncan initially denied even knowing where the church was located. But he changed his story, saying he found Miss Cobb's still-warm body, and failed to tell anyone for fear of being implicated.
Jurors recommended life without parole for Duncan after prosecutors presented a case based mostly on circumstantial evidence stemming from Duncan's taped statements to investigators.
Circuit Judge J.C. Norton, however, overturned the recommendation and sentenced him to death.
On May 12, Duncan's attorneys formally asked Norton for a new trial. Among their reasons was an allegation that an unidentified juror may have known Duncan and Miss Cobb.
Officials believe Duncan is the state's first law officer to be sentenced to death.

Senate May Open Debate On Arms Treaty Tuesday

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate could begin debate as early as Tuesday on the U.S.-Soviet medium-range missile treaty, opening a race to ratify it before President Reagan's summit with Mikhail S. Gorbachev.
Just 13 days remain before the May 29 opening of the Moscow summit, and it is an open question whether the Senate can conclude debate on the landmark arms control pact in the time remaining.
The last pre-debate hurdle came today as the Senate's Foreign Relations, Intelligence and Armed Services committee held hearings to examine the anti-cheating arrangements agreed to in Geneva last week by Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.
Reagan wants to take a ratified treaty to the Kremlin to spur further arms control progress, especially on the Strategic Arms Reduction or START treaty aimed at cutting long-range nuclear arms by as much as 50 percent.
Many senators of both parties join the president in that hope.
But hope may not carry the day.
Most vote counts show that in the final tally the Senate will consent to the ratification of the pact by an overwhelming margin, far greater than the required 67 votes.
But opponents could slow the pace of debate to a crawl, demanding votes on amendment after amendment.
The leading treaty foe, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., says he has "something like a dozen" amendments ready for debate.

One would require the withdrawal of all U.S. military forces from Europe on grounds that the treaty's required elimination of U.S. medium-range Pershing II and ground-launched cruise missiles would leave them defenseless.
The amendment would have the effect of repudiating U.S. participation in the NATO alliance and it is unlikely to be adopted.
After a briefing on Friday by national security adviser Colin Powell, the chairmen and ranking Republican members of those committees told reporters their initial reaction was that Shultz had persuaded the Soviets to back away from unacceptable restrictions on on-site inspection on each of nine issues raised.
But Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia said he would schedule debate on the treaties only after the three committees met and agreed the verification arrangements are in U.S. national security interests.
Byrd has promised to open debate "immediately" once he gets clearance from the three committees. That could mean as early as Tuesday if no further snags develop.
Byrd has insisted throughout that the treaty is too important to tie its consideration to "an artificial, arbitrary, automatic calendar deadline" such as the date of the summit opening.
Reagan and Gorbachev signed the Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces, or INF, treaty at their Washington summit last December. It requires the total elimination of U.S. and Soviet missiles with a range of between 300 and 3,400 miles.

Air Pressure Changes May Have Triggered California Earthquakes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Deadly earthquakes that jolted Southern California in July 1986 and last October may have been triggered by abnormal air pressure patterns over the Pacific Ocean and Western United States, a researcher says.
Scripps Institution of Oceanography meteorologist Jerome Namias studied moderate and large quakes in the region since 1947 and found they tended to occur a month to six weeks after the onset of the unusual atmospheric pressure patterns and associated winds during the summer and fall.
"We know so little about why earthquakes occur when they do that we've got to keep an open mind, even on what seems like a far-out kind of idea," said geologist-geophysicist Clarence Allen of the California Institute of Technology.

Allen said that while he guesses the correlation will turn out to be coincidental, "it's too early to rule out these kinds of things. And Namias is certainly a very respected scientist."
The statistical correlation between earthquakes and air pressure is weak, difficult to explain in scientifically respectable terms and "definitely a far-out idea," said Namias, who spent 30 years as chief of the National Weather Service's extended forecast division in Washington.

But if atmospheric pressure patterns are related to quakes, it may be because winds associated with the patterns raise offshore sea levels slightly, putting more pressure on the earth, he speculated during a recent telephone interview from La Jolla.
Forces from unusual air pressure patterns and higher sea levels are smaller than the moon's tidal influence on Earth and its oceans.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Tourism Week

Pitt Has Cause To Celebrate

No community has more cause to celebrate National Tourism Week than Pitt County.

The industry brought $63 million into the county in 1987. Over 3,000 people are employed in travel-related jobs in Greenville. Pitt's tourism trade grew more in 1987 — 38 percent — than any other county in North Carolina.

Those are persuasive figures for those who correctly argue that the travel industry is one key to a thriving Pitt County economy. Clearly, the convention and meeting business has come of age and the community is a crossroads for regional business travel.

So as the nation recognizes Tourism Week today through Friday, Pitt has just cause for its chest to swell with pride.

But pride for past accomplishment shouldn't become a laurel on which to rest. During this week when attention is focused on tourism, Pitt's travel officials should be contemplating concrete ways to capitalize on past achievements.

The travel industry holds immense potential for growth. The county has the machinery in place, through a 3-cent occupancy tax, the Pitt Convention and Visitors Authority, good air and highway connections and an adequate number of motel rooms, to profit on meetings and convention trade.

The challenge facing the county is to maintain the momentum of progress and to direct it expeditiously. The community needs quality, travel-related growth and the goal of officials should be to seek only appropriate development.

Pitt should also continue to expand its travel facilities. The medical, educational, industrial and business meetings will likely increase in size and number. Consequently, more hotel and meeting space will be required. A proposed 14,000 seat convention center will play an important role in expanding Pitt's tourism trade.

In addition, developing more leisure time alternatives to attract convention-goers can help build the county's allure. Retail shopping areas could be marketed, for example, as could organized side trips to the nearby Pamlico River and Outer Banks.

In Pitt County, the focus for National Tourism Week should turn to the future. The potential for prosperity is limitless, but foresight and planning must direct this energy into reality.

Afghan Withdrawal Signals Change

KABUL, Afghanistan — The lines of Soviet tanks, trucks and artillery forming up here Friday for the start of the Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan dramatized one of the most important shifts in the Kremlin's foreign policy in decades.

For the first time since the Bolsheviks came to power in 1917 with a commitment to a worldwide socialist revolution, the Soviet Union appears to be retreating from the front line of that revolution and to be withdrawing from a country that proclaimed itself a Communist state and an ally.

Yet Soviet officials here and in Moscow insist that this is not an abandonment of principle, not a retreat, not a defeat — and not the ignominious end to what many in the West see as "the Soviet Union's Vietnam."

The withdrawal, Soviet officials say, is part of an overall reshaping of the nation's foreign policy and the result of what one Soviet foreign policy adviser called "new political thinking" under Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

For the Soviet Union, the withdrawal agreement signed by Afghanistan and Pakistan, with Moscow and Washington as guarantors, was a "moral victory," Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze said as he signed the accord in Geneva last month.

The settlement, he asserted, should become "a model of national reconciliation" for resolving other regional disputes, from Angola to Cambodia to Nicaragua, and thus a contribution to world peace.

"The Afghan nation will be able to build its life according to its own ideas, without outside interference, on the basis of general national reconciliation," Shevardnadze said.

Moscow hopes to maintain its

influence in Afghanistan, Soviet officials added, through the development of normal "good-neighborly relations" and economic cooperation — whether with President Najibullah and his Peoples Democratic Party of Afghanistan or a possible successor regime that might be dominated by the "moujahedeen" guerrillas that are fighting Soviet troops even as they withdraw.

But such declarations do not obscure the wide ramifications of such a fundamental shift of policy by one of the superpowers. Nor do they reduce the drama of 115,000 Soviet soldiers pulling out of Afghanistan after more than eight years of fighting here.

Afghanistan, in the Soviet rhetoric of the time, had become "the front line in the struggle of the peoples of the world against imperialism and counterrevolution" — a struggle in which the future of socialism was at stake not only here but in every socialist country, including the Soviet Union.

"For us, as Communists," a senior foreign policy adviser explained in Moscow this week, "it has always been an article of faith, a fundamental tenet of our whole view of the world, that we had an inescapable duty to bring others to socialism. ... From the earliest days of our own revolution, we have believed that we could not have communism in one country alone, that for us to have true communism, the revolution had to be spread."

That commitment may still exist — Soviet officials say it does — but the interpretation has changed under Gorbachev, who is committed to a radical political, economic and social transformation of the Soviet Union as the Communist Party's first priority there.

Consequently, diplomats here and in Moscow see far-reaching implications in the Soviet decision to pull out of Afghanistan.

"What Moscow is saying is that it won't intervene militarily to save socialism, or what passes for socialism, in another country," a senior Western diplomat here commented. "Translate that into the context of Poland or Hungary or Czechoslovakia, and you can see a development in dusty Afghanistan that potentially changes world politics."

Gorbachev had formally committed the Soviet Union to a policy of non-interference in the affairs of other socialist countries and other Communist parties in a visit to Yugoslavia two months ago, a move that was itself regarded as an important development.

"Gorbachev is undertaking foreign policy initiatives of considerable magnitude," a Western ambassador in Moscow said. "We may see them as correcting Soviet mistakes of the past — certainly Afghanistan is just that, getting out of a mess they should not have gotten into — but that does not reduce their importance."

The Soviet decision to pull out of Afghanistan was made more than a year ago, according to informed Soviet sources, after considerable rethinking of Soviet domestic and foreign policies under Gorbachev.

PARIS — The nine-year war to free Cambodia from Vietnamese occupation may soon come to an end. But the war's end could produce a nightmare — the return of the Khmer Rouge, one of the bloodiest, most vindictive regimes in Southeast Asia history.

Last winter, two of the sides in the Cambodian conflict met here in France and came up with the outline of a reasonable peace treaty which met with the approval of most of the major and minor powers involved — except China. The Vietnamese seemed to be searching for a face-saving exit, and the Cambodians were providing one.

Now, somewhere in western Cambodia, Pol Pot, the infamous head of the Khmer Rouge and commander of its powerful army, is overseeing preparations for a final offensive on the Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh. Pol Pot, a tyrant with more lives than a cat, is apparently betting that diplomacy will fail to come up with a real peace treaty. Indeed, the most likely outcomes are a deadlock, a flimsy face-saving compromise or a simple troop withdrawal, as in Afghanistan, all of which would leave the Khmer Rouge in a dominant position.

It is up to the United States, along with the other powers involved, to prove the Khmer Rouge wrong and finally rid Cambodia of the threat of Pol Pot.

This month in Moscow, Cambodia will be on the agenda when Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev meets President Reagan. To some extent, both superpowers are now party to the stalling going on in the peace process. The United States is a close partner with China against the Vietnamese occupation and it is China that is now smothering the peace initiative by withholding its approval. Vietnam is also balking and the Soviet Union, which got Hanoi to pledge to withdraw its troops by 1990, will go only so far in pushing its ally.

Still, the Soviet Union clearly feels the time is right to strike a deal. U.S.-Soviet relations are now propitious and Prince Norodom Sihanouk, the key to any Cambodian compromise, has health problems which add a true note of urgency. In an effort to move things forward, Igor Rogachev, a deputy Soviet foreign minister, recently proposed direct talks between China and Vietnam as the quickest solution. Yet given the strong improbability of Hanoi and Beijing patching up their differences, this proposal would only prolong the impasse.

A more realistic proposal would be direct talks between Washington and Hanoi. In 1979, the United States championed severe economic sanctions to punish Hanoi for the occupation, one of three strategies used in forcing the Vietnamese to leave. Vietnam has also been battered in the battlefield by a Chinese-financed armed resistance centered on the Khmer Rouge and the diplomatic isolation of its client regime in Phnom Penh.

Only the United States can single-handedly end Vietnam's pariah status and open the door to the foreign capital that is the only salvation for Vietnam's ruined economy. In return, the Vietnamese would have to agree to meet with Sihanouk and join the peace negotiations. Their offers to withdraw should be tested just as seriously as were Moscow's pledges to withdraw from Afghanistan. If the Vietnamese do withdraw, the United States could insure that a true government of national reunion replaces the Vietnamese army and not the Khmer Rouge.

The horrors perpetrated by the Khmer Rouge — the systematic torture of the Cambodian people and the destruction of their culture — are well known to the world. But largely through their own sophisticated propaganda, the Khmer Rouge have come to be portrayed as an exotic force that cannot be understood by civilized western minds.

In fact, the Khmer Rouge, many of them French-trained intellectuals, are heirs to modern totalitarian tradition, capable of setting up entire bureaucracies for the purposes of torture and murder. The only

Strength For Today

One of the doctrines most difficult to accept is that we are inheritors of "original" sin. This Christian teaching, or its Jewish counterpart sometimes called "universal" sin, states that all humans have, in addition to a deep desire for good, an equally perverse proclivity for evil. C.S. Lewis wondered why this doctrine was so difficult for people to mystery is why the legend of secrecy, violence and exotica persists and, more importantly, why they have escaped judgement and justice. So long as they are convenient to the powers fighting Vietnam, they will continue to be free and the myth of the inscrutable Khmer Rouge will protect them.

The Khmer Rouge provoked the war which led to their 1979 defeat by the Vietnamese. There were no human rights overtones to Vietnam's overthrow of the Khmer Rouge. Hanoi had long wanted Cambodia to be part of a communist bloc under its control. But the Vietnamese presumed the world would cheer when they went in to "save" Cambodia.

Instead, China, the United States and several Southeast Asian nations collaborated in rebuilding the Khmer Rouge army to resist the Vietnamese occupation. They pressured two non-communist Cambodian resistance armies to join a Khmer Rouge government coalition. Prince Sihanouk, Cambodia's near-legendary leader, was tapped to head the coalition and give it the respectability it needed to hold Cambodia's seat at the U.N. and nearly every other international organization.

After the Soviet Union pressured Vietnam to break the impasse, it was Prince Sihanouk who took advantage of the situation to meet with Hun Sen, the Cambodian communist who heads the Phnom Penh regime. The two men came up with a peace proposal but they could not get around the inevitable impasse: How to insure that if the Vietnamese withdraw, the Khmer Rouge would not take over.

Only the superpowers can find a way out of this trap. A solution could be the binding U.S.-Vietnamese agreement. Both China and the Khmer Rouge would be circumvented. An international police force could protect a new coalition government, if not actually disarm the Khmer Rouge.

It would be appropriate if a U.S.-Vietnamese agreement formed the cornerstone to peace in Cambodia. After all, these two nations share some responsibility for the tragedy there and each seems to be coming to grips with the bitterness left over from their own war.

Bring the charismatic Prince Sihanouk back to Phnom Penh, bring back traditional Cambodian life and see how long the Khmer Rouge last. Then the world might be ready to judge and punish them.

Jackson's N.C. Allies Seek Concessions

GREENSBORO (AP) — Jesse Jackson's campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination appears to have fallen short, but he and his North Carolina supporters are determined not to be treated as losers.

For months, "What does Jesse want?" has been a burning question in national politics. As the black civil rights activist won more caucuses, primaries and delegates than expected but not enough to become front-runner, speculation arose over what he would demand of the Democratic establishment for giving the party's nominee his blessing.

Jackson did not answer that question directly last week during a visit to North Carolina. But in a commencement speech at his alma mater and in remarks at a Greensboro fund-raiser, Jackson dropped some hints. In so doing, he introduced a phrase likely to be a familiar refrain in the year's political lexicon: "reasonable expectations."

Analysis

Nearly a quarter-century ago, when he was preparing to graduate from North Carolina A&T State University, blacks could not reasonably expect to be president or governor, Jackson said. They were preoccupied with winning the right to vote.

But now, blacks — and other racial minorities and women — have loftier goals. As the Democratic Party's most loyal constituency, they expect party leaders and elected officials to help them attain positions of power through the ballot box and appointments.

"Just talk reasonable expectations," Jackson told his supporters. "Nothing way out, nothing different, no amendments to the Constitution, no special breaks. We just want a reasonable return on our investment. ... We cannot allow our expectations to remain low."

What constitutes a "reasonable return" he didn't say. But he said North Carolina had not measured up.

"In North Carolina, no black congressmen out of 11 districts," Jackson said. "Democratic Party, be fair. Make room for us. In North Carolina, a state where black votes make governors and senators, no more all-white slates. That's an insult."

State Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, chairman of Jackson's campaign in the state, defines reasonable expectations as "full participation" in the political and governmental arena.

As blacks vote, become active in party affairs and work to elect Democrats, he said, it's only natural that a proportionate number will be elected and appointed.

Jackson and Blue distinguish between such rewards and preferential treatment, saying they don't want the latter. They depict victories at the polling booth and appointments to government posts as wages for honest labor in Democratic vineyards, not handouts.

White Democratic leaders generally agree blacks are entitled to more offices and power. But they say the top priority must be defeating Republicans so there will be power to share. These white Democrats often perceive, rightly or wrongly, a choice between supporting a black — and losing — and winning with a white moderate.

In endorsing Sen. Albert Gore Jr. for president, Sen. Terry Sanford and former Gov. Jim Hunt said Gore was the candidate best positioned to carry the South and win in November. But Jackson argued that he had earned their support. It's still a sore point.

"The fact is Sanford got only 42 percent of the white vote ... and yet he won" because of overwhelming black support, Jackson said. "It's reasonable to expect that Senator Sanford will endorse my campaign."

Military Photos From Russia

WASHINGTON — Photo-interpreters in the bowels of the CIA could scarcely believe what they were seeing: Soviet sea-based SSN-19 cruise missiles being flight tested from mobile ground launchers at the Nenoksa test site near Murmansk.

Precisely such flight testing is banned by the INF treaty that Mikhail Gorbachev and Ronald Reagan want the Senate to approve before their Moscow summit. On its face, the Soviets are violating international law by displaying intent to violate a treaty signed but not yet ratified.

Whether the Soviets have committed a provable violation or, falling short of that, engaged in a bit of chicanery is debated behind closed doors of the national security bureaucracy. But it surely dulls Secretary of State George Shultz's triumphant return from Geneva claiming a "completely satisfactory" resolution of INF verification problems that have stalled Senate ratification. His talks with Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze had nothing to do with the ominous events in Nenoksa.

The debate could be delayed further once the Senate learns of the photos from Russia. Even without the evidence produced from space by U.S. spy cameras and now under intelligence analysis, Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd and other key Democratic senators have been wary about the rush to ratification.

The still-secret photographs of Soviet missilemen test-firing the sea-based SSN-19 from mobile land launchers may be examined by the Senate Intelligence and Foreign Relations committees this week. That could detonate a political explosion blocking INF ratification until well after the summit beginning May 29. It takes only two senators to demand and obtain a closed-door session of the Senate to discuss classified information.

What is involved here is an apparent Soviet violation of the treaty prohibition against using mobile land-based launchers to test-fire new versions of the SSN-19 or other sea-based missiles. The ban has an important goal: to guard against secret conversion of sea-based missiles (with a range greater than 550 kilometers) to land-based mobile missiles.

Photographic evidence of what the Soviets appear to be doing is sharp and unmistakable, according to administration officials. The mobile launchers in the past were used to launch the land-based SSCX-4 cruise missile (now banned by the treaty). The evidence is sufficient to force the U.S. to post a formal complaint to the Soviets when the next treaty compliance report is due later this year.

Byrd's motives in delaying the start of the ratification debate are a matter of dispute in the Senate cloakrooms. His allies point to a lifetime record of suspicion about Soviet promises and a consistent hardline on U.S.-Soviet relations. But programs control Democrats and suspicious administration officials see presidential campaign politics at play.

But the burden of evidence is that Byrd has nothing against the INF accord but insists on clear signs of Soviet intent to comply with it. That is why he is unlikely to get in the way of two or more senators asking for secret session of the Senate to hear about the secret Soviet goings-on at Nenoksa.

Medical Schools Turn Up Decline In Applicants

By The Associated Press
The number of applicants to U.S. medical schools has declined by a third since 1974, and some officials say that might be a good sign.

"It's conceivable that a declining applicant pool may be a favorable phenomenon," said Dr. William Bakewell, an admissions dean at the University of North Carolina School of Medicine. "Suppose the people who have disappeared are those whose motives are mostly crass and commercial, who saw it as a way to make a lot of money."

Other officials speculate that the decline signals a trend toward the liberal arts and away from the scientific world of medicine.

"(It's) too cold, too scientific," said Dr. John Felts, a professor and former dean of admissions at Bowman Gray School of Medicine.

In 1974, 42,624 people applied for admission to U.S. medical schools. In 1987, there were 28,123 applications.

Bowman Gray had 2,974 applicants last year, compared with 4,342 in 1983.

East Carolina University School of Medicine filled its 72-member class this year from a field of 1,039 applicants — nearly 50 percent less than in 1980.

At the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, 2,072 applications were received in 1988 — down from 2,343 applications in 1984.

At Duke University School of Medicine, one of the most prestigious in the nation, applications have fallen off only slightly — from 3,942 in 1980 to 3,800 in 1988.

But school officials note that Duke recently changed to a centralized applications service that makes it easier to apply. Class size has shrunk from 114 seats in 1981 to 102 seats in 1988 at Duke.

Officials said they thought costly tuition, skyrocketing insurance premiums and speculation about a nationwide doctor glut were among the factors causing fewer students to apply to medical school.

The image of medicine as a lucrative profession has been altered by such things as falling federal reimbursements for medical care, Bakewell said. As a result, some prospective students may wonder whether it's worth the time and money to become a doctor.

As applications decline among young males with science backgrounds, more women, older adults and students with liberal-arts backgrounds are beginning to fill medical school seats.

"There should be more humanities — it's nice to have," said Dr. William Laupus, dean of the East Carolina medical school. But he said it was hard to know which sciences to drop to make room for the humanities.

"It's kind of a dilemma," he said. "The content has increased, but the time to present it has not."

In North Carolina, more than a third of medical students are women.

Teresa Anderson, 34, will finish UNC medical school in 1990 — 12 years after earning a master's degree in public policy.

"For me, the advantage is the life experience," Ms. Anderson said. "I've been ill myself. I've had surgery on more than one occasion. I've had a child. I know what it feels like to be in a hospital and to have general anesthesia and to deal with doctors and nurses."

In the meantime, some say a new study disputing the doctor-glut observation — published April 7 in The New England Journal of Medicine — may prove a good recruiting tool. The study hints that there may even be a physician shortage by the turn of the century.

"It just depends on whose crystal ball you have the greater faith in," Bakewell said.

Bodies Found

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon said Sunday the wreckage of a U.S. helicopter was recovered in the Persian Gulf along with the bodies of its two crewmen.

The aircraft was reported missing in the Persian Gulf after a battle last month in which U.S. forces sank or disabled six Iranian ships.

Lt. Col. Keith Schneider, a Pentagon spokesman, said the bodies of Capt. Kenneth Hill, 33, of Thomasville, N.C., and Capt. Stephen Leslie, 30, of New Bern, N.C., were recovered from the wreckage of the Marine Corps AH-1 Cobra.

They were the only American casualties in the fighting April 18, when U.S. naval forces destroyed two Iranian oil platforms and sank or disabled six naval craft. Iran said at the time that its forces shot down the helicopter.

IN THE STATE

Lake Accident

LAKE WYLIE, S.C. (AP) — A 13-year-old Charlotte, N.C., girl was in critical condition Sunday after being run over by a jet ski at Lake Wylie, authorities said.

Mendy Hirsch, 13, was unconscious at Charlotte Memorial Hospital, a nursing supervisor said. She was in the hospital's neurological intensive care unit with severe head injuries, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Dr. David DuPuy said he was pulling Mendy and Deena Smith, 14, on a 36-inch inner tube behind his motor boat Saturday. They were in calm waters 200 feet from his dock in a cove on Lake Wylie.

DuPuy, a Charlotte orthopedic surgeon, said he stopped the boat to let a rider on a jet ski pass.

He said the 13-year-old girl driving the jet ski later said she was looking for a water skier behind the boat. She didn't see the inner tube and collided with it.

Charged

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A 21-year-old department store worker has been arrested and charged with first-degree murder in connection with the death of a Winston-Salem woman who was beaten and cut around the neck in July 1987, authorities said.

Robert Dewitt Smart, 21, of Winston-Salem was charged with the first-degree murder of Brenda Charlins Howse, said Lt. L.A. Stokley of the Winston-Salem Police Department.

Ms. Howse, 45, an office worker for 10 years with RJR Tobacco who was divorced and lived alone, was found dead by her son on the morning of July 21, police said. Smart is being held without bond in the Forsyth County Jail and is scheduled to appear in Forsyth County District Court on June 1.

MathCounts

WASHINGTON (AP) — A team of four North Carolina middle-school mathematicians beat out more than 50 teams to place second in the final round of the national MathCounts competition in Washington.

A team from New York took home first prize — a week at Space Camp in Huntsville, Ala.

The Tar Heel team celebrated its second-place finish Friday with a White House visit, where members watched President Reagan and Mrs. Reagan board a helicopter bound for Camp David, said John W. Ogle Jr., mathematics coordinator with the N.C. Department of Public Instruction.

The victory was the state's second runner-up finish in the five-year-old contest, which tests students' ability with and knowledge of junior high school math, officials said.

Nixon Invited

RALEIGH (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon is being invited to this fall's Elephant Hunt, a Republican fund-raiser held every two years by the 3rd Congressional District Republican Party, officials say.

B. Tommy Pollard, the district chairman, said he would send Nixon an invitation Monday.

If Nixon turns down the invitation, Pollard said he would try to woo Howard Baker, President Reagan's chief of staff, or Senate Minority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan.

Study Says Updated Job Training Needed

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — As the state's community college system celebrates its 25th anniversary this week, a new report says the 58 two-year colleges must update their worker-training programs to fit increasingly sophisticated job requirements.

"A bridge that was once successfully designed to take the state into the manufacturing age ... now must be transformed to take it into the information age," the panel said in the report prepared for the Commission on the Future of the N.C. Community College system.

The study was coordinated by MDC Inc., a private, non-profit research organization in Chapel Hill.

"We have run smack into a new economy and into major problems," said George Autry, MDC president.

By 1990, the report said, an estimated three of every four jobs in North Carolina will require some education beyond high school. Yet more than 1.5 million adult North Carolinians lack high school diplomas, while 25,000 students drop out of high schools across the state each year.

"While this dilemma is confounding and the solutions are elusive, the severity of its consequences will multiply without the state's deliberate intervention," the report says.

North Carolina community colleges already suffer from an identity crisis created, in part, by the system's tremendous breadth of curricula, the report says. More than 1,200 courses are offered in areas ranging from commercial fishing on the coast to sawmill operation in the mountains.

To make matters worse, the system's emphasis seems to change from year to year, according to Jesse McDaniel, president of Lenoir Community College in Kinston.

"Are we going to concern ourselves with new industry next year, or illiterate adults?" McDaniel said. "We jump year to year to whatever is politically expedient at the time to get the support of the General Assembly."

Among other things, the report recommends that student recruitment and outreach be stepped up, while basic skills education should be woven into technical and vocational programs.

It also urges that the enrollment-driven funding system be revised. Community colleges now receive funding based on numbers of students.

That system ends up rewarding programs that are least expensive and most in demand, regardless of the state's economic needs, the panel said.

Whether or not the system is overhauled ultimately may depend on state financing.

North Carolina community colleges last year were found to be seriously underfunded, according to a report by the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation.

State spending per community college student decreased 25 percent from 1973 to 1983, that report said, while state funding levels remained constant for the University of North Carolina system and increased 20 percent for public elementary, middle and high schools, according to the findings.

Trial Over Letters To Reagan Begins

GREENSBORO (AP) — A $1 million libel lawsuit, filed seven years ago over letters written to President Reagan to block the appointment of a federal prosecutor, is expected to go to trial today in North Carolina.

At issue is whether a Virginia businessman libeled Burlington attorney David Smith when the businessman wrote letters to President Reagan criticizing Smith's bid for the U.S. Attorney's post for North Carolina's middle district.

Smith was not nominated to the post, and he contends that the letters contained false, slanderous and inflammatory statements about him.

The case is considered unusual because it concerns a clause of the First Amendment rarely involved in libel cases: the right to petition the government for a redress of grievances.

Several well-known witnesses are expected to be called to the stand in federal court in Greensboro.

WHAT TO DO IF YOU SMELL GAS.

Call Greenville Utilities immediately. Anytime day or night. We'll get a serviceman to your home or location to correct the problem. While you're waiting for him to get there, open a window, make sure you use no electrical switches. Extinguish any open flames and evacuate the area. If you don't know what natural gas smells like, stop by our office and pick up a scratch and sniff leaflet. Because even though natural gas contains no poisonous ingredients, a leak can become hazardous if combustible gas pockets are allowed to form, which makes it important for you to know what natural gas smells like.

*Note: If the leak is located in the customers piping or appliances, a service charge will be billed on the following monthly utility bill.

STAIN REPELLENT "GUARANTEES"

Lately, I've gotten a lot of questions about stain repellents being applied to new upholstery. "Are they worth the extra money?...Do they really work?...Is the guarantee any good?"

How well they work on upholstered furniture is the subject of another article covering the difference between fluorochemical-based and silicon-based stain repellents. Today, I'd like to discuss the question of stain repellent "guarantees" and whether they're worth the extra money.

First, understand what fabric protector "guarantees" cover. If you get a spot or stain on the fabric that can't be removed with the repellent manufacturer's spotting chemical, they'll send a professional cleaner to work on the spot. If the spot comes out—great! If not, the stain repellent company has fulfilled its obligation. In other words, don't expect new furniture just because the stain's permanent (you probably had that figured out already, but you'd be amazed what some people think the guarantee covers). Further, the product manufacturer is obligated to clean only the spot—not the entire piece. Not quite as impressive as you first thought, huh? You pay quite a bit extra for a "guarantee" that has little long-range value (one you'll probably never use anyway). It's much more important to insist on a quality stain repellent—without a fancy "guarantee"—than a lesser quality product that has the guarantee (along with a correspondingly high price).

Now, don't get the impression that I'm saying you shouldn't have a stain repellent applied to your new upholstery—quite the contrary. I think it's a great idea, whether applied by the retailer or by your local upholstery cleaner, but only if you do enough research to determine that you're getting a quality, fluorochemical-based product, applied and backed by a reputable company. And only if you really understand the "guarantee" and still feel it's worth the extra money.

BANKRUPTCY — A Ten Year Mistake

Bankruptcy does NOT wipe your Credit Slate clean and give you a "Fresh Start".

Bankruptcy stays on your credit report for 10 Years.

You'll have trouble getting credit. Creditors seldom grant credit to someone who has filed a Wage Earner Plan Chapter 13 or Chapter 7.

You'll have problems getting ANY type of consumer loan — car, home, credit cards, education, personal needs, etc. If you doubt this — contact a creditor.

Ten years of bad news, if you don't think so, ask those who have filed bankruptcy. Don't rely only on the advice of those who will make money off your bankruptcy and encourage you to go bankrupt.

There are options to bankruptcy. If you are having financial problems, contact your creditors first — remember, they want to see you solve your financial problems just as much as you do.

So before you make a Bankruptcy decision, THINK, consider the options and don't lock yourself into BANKRUPTCY — A Ten Year Mistake.

Beauty Pageants Are New Rage In Taiwan

By SHIRLEY LAI Associated Press Writer

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Banned for 23 years as an extravagance, beauty pageants are suddenly the rage in Taiwan despite protests from feminists and old-guard conservatives.

The government lifted the ban in October and the country's calendar already is crammed with two national and two international beauty contests, culminating with the glitzy 1988 Miss Universe Pageant on May 24 in Taipei.

Most Taiwanese appear to favor the government's decision to end the ban; one high school went so far as to hold its own pageant to select teenage students to compete in the 1988 Miss Republic of China competition April 16.

Others are less enthusiastic, however. A small group of retired soldiers, arguing that only one's mother can be considered the most beautiful woman, have threatened to set themselves ablaze at the Miss Universe contest unless authorities reimpose the ban.

"We know beauty pageants are controversial, but we also know most people enjoy a diversified life that includes such pageants," said Tsai Han-hsien, an Interior Ministry official who supervises the contests.

But Tseng Hsu-pai, a 93-year-old adviser to President Lee Teng-hui, wants the pageants banned once again on grounds that they are "luring women into abandoning work and study for the pursuit of fame and money."

Beauty contests were banned in 1964 by a government that found them an unneeded extravagance when Taiwan wasn't as wealthy as it is now.

Early pageants were derided as indulgences by top officials who were closely tied to the contestants. For example, the 1961 winner, Wang Liling, was married to the son of Taiwan's governor at the time, Chou Chi-jou.

Prudishness also may have been a factor in the ban. According to an Interior Ministry document, leading military officials thought the winner of an early Miss China pageant became a strip dancer in Las Vegas and urged then-President Chiang Kai-shek to ban further contests.

But with onset of prosperity, public opinion surveys indicate that most

Reader Hates Exhortations To Smile

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I could have written the letter from "Insulted," who was always being told to smile! All my life I've had people walk up to me and say, "Who are you mad at?" Abby, I'm not mad at anybody; I guess I just have one of those sad-looking faces.

You were right to say that most people have a serious look - or even a frown - on their faces when they're deep in thought. That's me, but I don't think I should go around grinning like a Cheshire cat for no reason at all.

Thanks for understanding that it hurts to be constantly reminded to smile. Maybe if you print this, people will think twice before they say it. - SAD FACE IN TWIN FALLS

DEAR SAD: I never realized until I ran that letter from "Insulted" how many people had the same problem. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: At last, I am no longer alone. I, too, am one of those people with a sad-looking face who is always being told to smile. Thanks for saying, "Folks who go around smiling all the time for no reason at all are often followed by a non-smiling person with a butterfly net."

I agree with you, Abby. Perpetual smilers look like idiots. Nobody can be that happy all the time. I'm basically a happy person, but it doesn't show on my face. Thanks for printing that letter. I feel better knowing that I'm not the only one with a grumpy face and a happy heart. - SACRAMENTO SOURPUSS

DEAR ABBY: Perhaps the person who is constantly told to smile should read what Dale Carnegie had to say in his book, "How to Win Friends and Influence People":

THE VALUE OF A SMILE
It costs nothing, but creates much; It enriches those who receive, without impoverishing those who give;

It happens in a flash, and the memory of it sometimes lasts forever;

None are so rich that can get along without it, and none so poor but are richer for its benefits.

It creates happiness in the home, fosters good will in a business, and is the countersign of friends.

It is rest to the weary, daylight to the discouraged, sunshine to the sad, and nature's best antidote for trouble.

Yet it cannot be bought, begged, borrowed or stolen, for it is of no earthly good to anybody until it is given away.

Nobody needs to smile so much as those who have none left to give.

- MARION T. PHILLIPS, SUN CITY, ARIZ.

Republican nominee-to-be, George Bush, who already has a mathematical lock on the nomination.

He was holding a news conference today at his home to make official what has been clear to observers for months — that Robertson is not in contention for the Republican presidential nomination.

The former television evangelist was expected to hang onto his delegates until the convention, then release them to Bush on the first ballot.

The high point of the Robertson campaign came early on — the Feb. 8 Iowa caucuses, where he beat out Bush for second place, behind Kansas Sen. Bob Dole.

But in the next big battle — the New Hampshire primary — Robertson finished behind not only Bush and Dole, but also behind New York Rep. Jack Kemp and former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont.

Even then, Robertson gave every indication that he expected to make a comeback in the South, with its March 8 mega-primary.

Robertson has said he will return to the television network he founded nearly 30 years ago to help shore up its financial position.

Court Upholds Judgment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today upheld a $1.8 million judgment against an insurance company ordered to pay the money to an injured Mississippi man whose $20,000 claim it wrongfully rejected.

But, in one of the most closely watched cases of the year, the justices declined to decide the constitutionality of such enormous punitive damage awards in personal injury cases.

The court, in a ruling based on procedural grounds, said the issue was not properly presented in the case.

The justices did decide a lesser issue raised in the dispute, upholding a Mississippi law that imposed a 15 percent penalty — $243,000 — against the insurance company for unsuccessfully appealing the case to the Mississippi Supreme Court.

The vote on that issue was 6-1, with Justice Harry A. Blackmun the lone dissenter. Justices John Paul Stevens and Anthony M. Kennedy did not take part in the case.

The court left for another day the overriding question of skyrocketing damage awards, a development that has touched off a wave of legislative activity.

Some states, reacting to soaring insurance rates, have imposed ceilings on how much money can be recovered in personal injury lawsuits.

"Any ultimate review of the question that we might undertake will gain the benefit of a well-developed record and a reasoned opinion on the merits," said Justice Thurgood Marshall for the court.

He said settling the issue now would "short-circuit a number of less intrusive and possibly more appropriate resolutions."

Marshall said those possibilities include further action by the Mississippi legislature or the courts of that state addressing the issue.

The case arose when Lloyd Crenshaw of Pascagoula, Miss., was repairing a car alternator in his garage in 1979 and part of the alternator fell on his right foot.

Less than two weeks later, surgeons amputated his leg below the knee after gangrene developed.

Crenshaw, 61 at the time, worked at the White Stores in Pascagoula. His employer had a group insurance policy with Bankers Life and Casualty Co.

A state jury ruled that Bankers

Life acted in bad faith in denying Crenshaw's claim, and awarded him $20,000 in actual damages and $1.6 million in punitive damages.

The insurance company said the punitive damage judgment violates the Constitution. But that issue was not raised or passed upon by the Mississippi courts.

Bankers Life also was ordered to pay an additional 15 percent — $243,000 — after it appealed unsuccessfully to the Mississippi Supreme Court.

Marshall said today that the 15 percent penalty is an appropriate deterrent to frivolous lawsuits.

Three other states, Virginia, Kentucky and Alabama, have similar penalty laws.

Beauty Pageants

Taiwanese welcome the return of beauty contests and hope the two international pageants to be held in Taipei — Miss Universe and Miss Wonderland on April 29 — will help the island win new friends.

Nearly 1,000 women overwhelmed two local pageants leading to the international contests, but not without controversy.

After a televised preliminary round to choose Taiwan's representative for the Miss Wonderland contest, several people telephoned to complain of contestants wearing swimsuits with plunging necklines.

About 25 feminists demonstrated outside the hotel where the finals were held April 1, and they hoisted signs that read: "Women are not commercial products." The group argued that pageants judge women by their figures and not by traditional standards of Chinese beauty, such as intelligence and elegance.

Four retired soldiers also showed up outside the hotel to distribute anti-pageant fliers.

"Beauty contests are insults to mothers," said one, Hsu Cheng-

Travel and Tourism Administration.

"We are all optimistic and excited about the impact our work can have on generating unprecedented economic development in our area's hospitality industry," Nichols said.

Travel and tourism generated $63 million last year in Pitt County, up from $29 million in 1981, according to statistics from the state Division of Travel and Tourism. The 38-percent increase in revenue in Pitt County from 1986 to 1987 was the largest jump of any major tourism county in the state.

Some people have shown concern that the convention and visitors bureau — which is funded by the motel tax the General Assembly approved last year — may cause the area to grow too quickly, Nichols said, but he sees the bureau as a help, not a hindrance.

"We're concerned with growth, yes, but not just with the quantity of growth, but also the quality of growth," Nichols said. "We would like to influence, as much as we can, the quality of growth."

Nichols presents monthly reports to the authority, including information about any ongoing advertising campaigns and a tabulation of sales calls.

Nichols' report for April included information about contacts with officials from the Pitt County Association of Insurance Women and the Eastern Area Health Education Center, but so far, the job of marketing Greenville and Pitt County has been overshadowed by efforts to open the office at 563 S. Evans St. and complete tasks such as ordering furniture and designing a business sign for the outside door, but Nichols said he is pleased with the progress.

"We're organizing a long-range, sophisticated program," he said. "In June, we're sending out our first direct mail promotional package to all of the key state association people in the state," Nichols said. "That will be our first really strong contact with those meeting planners."

Nichols is concentrating the bureau's efforts on luring state associations and other groups to Greenville for meetings and conventions, and local people who are members of key groups have been invited to the reception. "This is local celebration of our bureau," he said.

"It will be kind of a cross-section of county leadership," Nichols said of the reception. "In addition to elected officials, and other key government people, there will be corporate chief executive officers and other people who might be instrumental in determining where conventions are held."

Lakers Reverse Trend, Stop Jazz

By The Associated Press

The Utah Jazz caught a wave of emotion and rode it far enough to scare the Los Angeles Lakers.

On Sunday, the Lakers said, "Enough." They stormed back from a nine-point deficit in the third quarter and evened their Western Conference playoff series 2-2 with a 113-100 victory at Salt Lake City.

"We didn't allow them to get up by 10 or 15 points because once they get the lead they play on spirit and emotion," said James Worthy, who scored 21 of his 29 in the first half. "We ran the ball a lot more today and Jazz players who had to go 40 or 45 minutes had to be a little more affected by fatigue."

The Lakers, seeking to become the first team since 1968-69 to repeat as NBA champions, turned on the power after Utah's Bobby Hansen hit two 3-point shots early in the third period and helped put Utah ahead 65-56 with 9:05 left in the quarter.

"We knew that sooner or later if we kept the score close, we'd get our game going," the Lakers' Byron Scott said. "The Jazz were riding high on emotion, but I think the edge has turned. When we were down by nine, we didn't give up. We didn't get our heads down like we did in Game 3."

Atlanta won Game 3 of its Eastern series with the Celtics after losing twice in Boston. The Hawks won 110-92 as Dominique Wilkins had 25 points and Kevin Willis 23.

Detroit took a 3-1 lead over Chicago with its second straight road victory, a 96-77 decision, holding high-scoring Michael Jordan to 23 points.

Dallas tied its Western series with Denver at 2-2 with a 124-103 home win behind Mark Aguirre's 34 points.

Boston is at Atlanta tonight, while Utah is at the Lakers and Dallas goes to Denver on Tuesday night. The Bulls-Pistons series resumes Wednesday in Pontiac, Mich.

Lakers 113, Jazz 100

The Jazz, trying to advance past the second round for the first time, looked like they might grab a 3-1 lead in the series. But the Lakers, behind stars Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Magic Johnson, took control midway into the third period, outscoring the Jazz 28-11 for the remainder of the quarter. Johnson scored 10 points during the quarter and Abdul-Jabbar's patented sky hook was unstoppable.

Mark Eaton, who held Abdul-Jabbar to 16 combined points in Utah's two victories, got into foul trouble as Abdul-Jabbar finished with 20 points.

"Any time you get Eaton out, it's a factor," Scott said.

Eaton played only 21 minutes in the second half and was sidelined with Utah ahead 69-67 and the Lakers in the midst of their run.

"With Eaton in foul trouble, it gave us more options, but I don't think that was really a factor in this game," Scott said. "We came back like true champs. We are the champs and I think the last couple of games we forgot about that."

Karl Malone led Utah with 29 points.

Hawks 110, Celtics 92

The Hawks never trailed in disposing of the cold-shooting Celtics, who hit only 39 percent. While Larry Bird was making just five of 18 shots for 22 points, Willis and Spud Webb sparked Atlanta.

Willis made only eight of 20 shots at Boston Garden. But he hit his first four Sunday and 11 of 15 overall.

"If I can get my first two or three shots down, I'm OK," Willis said. "It was a nightmare shooting the ball those first two games. I came out 1 1/2-2 hours early today to work on it."

Webb, playing for Glenn Rivers, who sprained his toe in the first period, worked on the Boston defense with penetrating drives.

"That's my job, to come out and really get the team moving," said Webb, who scored 11 points and handed out 13 assists. "I feel like I have had a good series so far, we just need to keep the pressure on them."

Pistons 96, Bulls 77

Detroit, which couldn't win on the road against Washington in the opening round, swept a weekend set in Chicago. The Pistons' defense was airtight on Air Jordan, who got a playoff-low 23 points, and the rest of the Bulls. Chicago scored just 156 points in the two contests.

"Detroit does a great job on me — they won't let me penetrate and I kept giving up the ball," said Jordan, who came into the game averaging 39.4 points in the playoffs after leading the regular season with a 35-point-per-game average.

Adrian Dantley scored 24 points and Isiah Thomas 19 points, sparking a 15-1 spurt in the final quarter that put the game away.

Speed Happy

Indianapolis 500 pole winner Rick Mears and his wife Chris share a happy moment in the Penske garage Sunday after the race driver set new four and one lap records during qualifying Saturday. (AP Laserphoto)

Mears' Mark Proved To Be Untouchable For The Field

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Rick Mears began practice for the Indianapolis 500 a week ago fairly certain no one would touch his track speed records. Mears didn't give himself enough credit.

Even after the first few days of practice, Mears said he expected a speed of 214-215 mph would be enough to win the pole for the May 29 Indianapolis 500. After all, there had been a reduction in engine horsepower.

As usual, though, changes in rules for safety's sake proved only a minor inconvenience in the chase for speed.

Even with the decrease in carburetor boost pressure, speeds went up — in Mears' case, dramatically. The 36-year-old, two-time Indy winner blistered the Indianapolis Motor Speedway with four qualifying laps averaging 219.198 mph on Saturday to earn the pole for the fourth time, a feat equaled only by A.J. Foyt and the late Rex Mays.

Three of Mears' four qualifying laps exceeded his 1986 one-lap record of 217.581, and his four-lap average was over 2 mph faster than his 1986 qualifying record of 216.828.

"We didn't go out there with any numbers in our mind. We just wanted to get the best four laps we could do, then see what the numbers were," said Mears, who battled Mario Andretti during a week of practice before leading an unprecedented Penske Racing sweep of the front-row starting positions. Danny Sullivan, the 1985 race winner, won the middle spot on the first row with an average of 216.214 while defending 500 champion Al Unser posted a speed of 215.270.

Nineteen cars qualified on Saturday, but Sunday saw only two more added to the field as most drivers were willing to gamble that high midday temperatures and a gusty wind would moderate late in the day.

Finally, with less than a half-hour to go in Sunday's session, Scotland's Jim Crawford and 1986 winner Bobby Rahal joined the tentative lineup.

The only other driver who tried to qualify on Sunday was rookie John Andretti, Mario's nephew, who called off his attempt after three laps around 205 mph.

Mario Andretti, who had practiced at more than 220 mph before the start of qualifications, had his right front tire thrown out of balance when he drove over a patch of oil-dry, a substance used to soak up spills on the track. His handling compromised, Andretti had to settle for the fourth position, on the inside of the second row, with a four-lap average of 214.692.

Al Unser Jr., son of the four-time winner, qualified fifth at 214.186, and Arie Luyendyk, a flying Dutchman, was next at 213.611.

Through Sunday's round of qualifications, the second of the four days of time trials, the average speed for the 21 who earned tentative starting spots was 210.995. The fastest 33 cars after the final qualification sessions next Saturday and Sunday will start the race.

"Disappointed, frustrated ... the car hasn't been running very good," Rahal said of qualifying at 208.526 mph in his backup Lola, his second attempt in that race car.

"You get pretty mad, not at anybody in particular, but after a while you just say, 'It's not the first time it's happened and won't be the last,'" he said. "People said you should have taken yesterday's (first) run. If we had, it would have been slower than today's run."

Joyner's Hobby Became His Sport

By TOM MORRIS

Reflector Sports Writer

For Farmville Central's Tyrone Joyner, long jumping and triple jumping began as a simple way to pass some time and horse around in the backyard, but it quickly developed into a great deal more than that.

Joyner started long jumping and triple jumping with his cousin, Rufus Mayo, and his brother, Jeff Joyner, when he was eight years old. "It was fun, you just did it in the yard," Joyner said. "It was just something to do."

Nine years later, Joyner is considered one of the top triple jumpers in the country as well as one of the state's top long jumpers. He won the state 1A/2A triple jump championship as a junior last year and finished third in the long jump. His triple jump leap of 48-8 in the state finals was a foot better than any else in the state.

"We (had) moved down from the Bronx after my mother died and my grandmother brought us down here," Joyner said. "My cousin was a real good athlete. He taught my brother how to triple jump when we got down here. My brother was in the Junior Olympics and he got me interested and showed me how to do it."

While it may have begun as just a playful hobby, it has become a passion for Joyner. His talents have earned him a track and field scholarship to Auburn University as well as the chance to compete in some of the top national meets this summer.

"It's probably my life right now," Joyner said. "It's something I've always loved and always will. Basketball was my first love, but it changed at the end of my 10th-grade year after I placed second in the state meet. I realized I had more going for me in track."

"Basketball is every kid's first love, but if I ever had the opportunity to have to choose between basketball and track (again), I would stick to track. It's something I've come to love."

But that was no easy choice for Joyner because he was more than just an average basketball player.

A two-year starter for Farmville's basketball team, Joyner helped the Jaguars to the state championship final as a junior and an Eastern Plains Conference title his senior season. As a junior, he was the Most Valuable Player of the Eastern 2-A Regional.

"I always knew track would probably conquer all," he said. "It's individual. You can concentrate more on what you want to do. You have to push yourself. It's not like you have to push anyone else, because some guys are not going to listen when you want them to...regardless of what you say."

"In track, I can concentrate more on what I want to do. I just go out and do my best."

Athletics Continuing To Roll

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The Texas Rangers tried. Now, the Chicago White Sox are doing the same. But it's going to be awfully hard to catch the Oakland Athletics in the American League West.

The Rangers' team record-tying eight-game winning streak ended Sunday with a 5-4 loss to the Kansas City Royals. The White Sox won their third straight by beating Toronto 6-5 in 11 innings.

Meanwhile, Oakland continues to win. The Athletics beat Baltimore 7-4 and are 16-4 on the road. They are the best in baseball at 26-10 and are seven games ahead of Chicago and 7½ in front of Texas.

"We knew we weren't going to win 100 in a row," Texas' Larry Parrish said. "What we're looking for is consistency."

Texas trailed 5-0 before Ruben Sierra's RBI single in the fifth. Parrish hit a solo home run and Curtis Wilkerson singled home a run in the sixth that got the host Rangers within 5-3.

In the seventh, Royals reliever Bud Black balked home a run. Gene Garber then took over with the bases loaded and no outs, but made a great escape by getting Parrish to ground into a forceout at home and inducing Geno Petralli to bounce into a double play.

The Royals roughed up Charlie Hough, 4-5. Willie Wilson, who went 4-for-4, led off the game with his first home run of the season.

Athletics 7, Orioles 4

Mark McGwire and Jose Canseco hit their 10th home runs of the season and rookie Walt Weiss hit the first homer of his career, powering Oakland over Baltimore.

McGwire and Weiss, who each doubled, hit solo home runs against Mark Williamson, 1-2. Canseco hit a two-run shot off Dave Schmidt.

Curt Young, 3-1, gave up two runs on four hits in six innings. Dennis Eckersley got his 13th save, most in the majors.

Yankees 9, Angels 2

Dave Winfield and Claudell Washington homered and Charles Hudson pitched a four-hitter for New York.

Hudson, 4-1, made his third start while replacing injured Rick Rhoden. He walked none and struck out two.

The Yankees took advantage of a balk by Chuck Finley, 2-6, to score four times in the fourth inning. Gary Ward and Mike Pagliarulo hit RBI singles after Finley balked two runners into scoring position.

In the seventh, Washington had a three-run, pinch-homer and Winfield hit a two-run homer, his ninth. New York pinch hitters are 2-for-21 this season, both homers by Washington.

Twins 10, Tigers 2

Kent Hrbek hit two home runs and Kirby Puckett, Tom Herr and Randy Bush also homered as Frank Viola and Minnesota won in Detroit.

Viola, 6-1, won his fifth straight game. He gave up two runs on seven hits in six innings.

Hrbek took over the AL homer lead with 11. He hit a two-run shot in the third inning for a 3-1 lead and homered again in the fifth.

Jack Morris, 3-5, was tagged for eight runs on 11 hits in six innings. He is winless at Tiger Stadium since Sept. 16, a span of six starts, including four this season.

Bush led off the fourth with his fourth home run. Gene Larkin, the next batter, was hit in the helmet by Morris and was carried from the field on a stretcher. Larkin, who was conscious, was taken to Henry Ford Hospital for examination.

Mariners 11, Red Sox 7

Jim Presley's tie-breaking single sparked a two-out, four-run uprising in the ninth inning against Boston relief ace Lee Smith as Seattle ended its four-game losing streak.

Smith, 2-2, struck out the first two batters in the top of the ninth before Alvin Davis walked and Mickey Brantley singled. Presley's single made it 8-7. Dave Valle hit a two-run triple and Glenn Wilson singled him home.

Mike Jackson, 1-1, got the victory. He put down Boston after a three-run rally in the eighth made it 7-7. The Red Sox tied it when Ellis Burks hit an RBI single and two other runs scored on the play as Brantley let the ball get past him in left field.

Brewers 9, Indians 5

Joey Meyer and Robin Yount homered as Milwaukee stopped its five-game losing streak and ended Cleveland's five-game winning string.

Joe Carter hit two solo home runs and a triple for Cleveland.

Yount's solo homer in the first tied him with Cecil Cooper as the Brewers' all-time RBI leader with 944. Meyer's two-run shot capped a four-run fourth against Scott Bailes, 2-4.

Gibson Powers L.A. Past Philly

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

It had been more than a month between home runs for Pedro Guerrero. Kirk Gibson only had to wait another at-bat for his big hit.

Gibson knocked in three runs with a bases-loaded double and Guerrero followed with a two-run homer to power the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 9-2 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies Sunday.

Gibson, signed as a free agent by the Dodgers prior to this season, missed an earlier chance to knock in runs.

His bases-clearing hit in the fourth inning gave the Dodgers a 6-0 lead. Guerrero then boosted it to 8-0 on an 0-2 pitch off Philadelphia reliever Danny Clay.

Tim Belcher, 3-1, pitched the first complete game of his career, and came within one out of a shutout. He allowed six hits, walking four and striking out eight.

With the Dodgers leading 1-0, Los Angeles sent 14 batters to the plate in the fourth inning. Mike Marshall led off with a walk, and singles by John Shelby and Mike Scioscia loaded the bases. Alfredo Griffin then broke a personal 0-for-23 hitless streak with a single, scoring Marshall and Shelby and chasing starter David Palmer, 0-3.

Clay relieved and retired the next two batters before walking Mike Davis to again load the bases. Gibson followed with his double and Guerrero hit Clay's next pitch into the left-field stands.

"I'll take nine runs every game and not have to make any decisions out there," Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda said.

Cubs 2, Astros 1

Rick Sutcliffe's five-hitter led Chicago. Sutcliffe, 3-3, pitched his fourth complete game of the season, tying him for the league lead. He struck out five and walked four.

Danny Darwin, 2-3, took the loss.

Chicago scored both of its runs in the fourth on Rafael Palmiero's league-leading 15th double and the Cubs' first hit of the game, Jerry Mumphrey's double and Vance Law's single.

Padres 2, Expos 1

Shane Mack's RBI single in the seventh scored Benito Santiago with the winning run for the Padres' third straight victory and a sweep of their weekend series against the Expos.

The game-winner came against Jeff Parrett, 3-1, who came on in the seventh to relieve starter Bryn Smith. Santiago led off with a single, moved to second on a bunt and scored on Mack's second game-winning hit of the series.

Andy Hawkins, 4-3, got the victory.

Giants 5, Mets 1

Kevin Mitchell knocked in three runs with a two-run homer and an infield single as San Francisco completed a sweep of the three-game series. Mike LaCoss, 2-3, went seven innings for his first victory since April 8.

The Mets, losing three straight games for the first time this season, fell behind in the first inning when Will Clark hit a two-out double and Mitchell followed with his sixth home run of the season. The Giants added another run in the seventh on a single by pinch-hitter Joel Youngblood and a wind-blown triple by Robby Thompson.

Reds 7, Pirates 6, 12 innings

A sacrifice fly by pinch-hitter Bo Diaz in the 12th inning scored Eric Davis with the winning run as error-prone Cincinnati nipped Pittsburgh. Davis started the 12th with a double, the Reds' first hit since Chris Sabo's two-run single in the sixth. Barry Jones, 1-1, the Pirates' sixth pitcher, got Ron Roenicke to pop up, but Lloyd McClendon followed with an infield single, moving Davis to third.

Diaz then hit a sinking liner that Barry Bonds speared with a diving catch, but Davis scored easily.

John Franco, 1-3, pitched three innings of one-hit ball for the victory.

Cardinals 7, Braves 6

A two-out single by pinch-hitter Willie McGee in the bottom of the ninth boosted St. Louis. McGee's hit came off reliever Bruce Sutter, 1-1, capping a two-run rally.

The Braves had gone ahead 6-5 in the top of the ninth when Gerald Perry hit reliever Todd Worrell's first pitch for a two-run homer. Worrell, 2-2, who also gave up a double before ending the inning, got the victory.

Joyner Striving For Record

Joyner's success has followed through to his senior season. He has been the state's top-ranked triple jumper all season as well as maintaining a top three position in the state for the long jump.

In the preseason, Joyner was ranked first in the country in the triple jump off of his leap of 50-feet-six inches last summer.

His best triple jump this spring was 49-9, while his best long jump was 23-6. He won the triple jump at the Great Raleigh Relays and followed that up with wins in both the long and triple jump at the Colonial Classic in New Bern, earning most outstanding field performer honors.

Though he has done well this year, Joyner has been hampered by a nagging ankle that has affected his long jump more than anything else.

Farmville won the Eastern Plains Conference track title for the third year in a this season. Saturday, Joyner won both the long jump and the triple jump at the 1-A/2-A Eastern Sectionals at Fuquay-Varina, helping the Jaguars to a third-place finish. Next up are the Eastern Regionals Saturday and the state championships May 27.

Before he ends his high school career, though, Joyner has one goal left to attain—breaking the state triple jump record of 51-5, set by Greg Artis of Wilson Fike in 1977.

"My goal right now is to get the state record," he said. "It was set by Greg Artis in 1977. My jump last year is (lacking) about 10 inches."

State championships and national meets are a long way from the backyards of Western Pitt County, but Joyner has turned into a real diamond in the rough for Farmville Central track coach Dixon Sauls.

"By the time he reached us, we realized he had more than average ability....he is a tremendous competitor," said Farmville Central track coach Dixon Sauls. "In head to head competition, he has the capability to perform under pressure. That separates him (from others)."

"He is a very mature young man, ... blessed with poise. He has knowledge of what he needs to do to succeed in track. Many times I learn from Tyrone. Many times, you will ask them (top athletes) how they will feel and he gives me great insight not only how to help him, but (also) other athletes. He is an excellent leader. We have other fine athletes and a fine track team for a small school, but certainly, he has brought recognition to our school as well as himself."

Joyner's track abilities began to develop during his summer work with the state junior olympic program. Former Farmville track coach Clem Williams helped Joyner get involved in the program and he won his first state title in the triple jump in 1979.

After Williams left the area, Joyner didn't compete for two years in the Junior Olympics before rejoining the program last summer.

Last year, Bob Baxter, the coach of the East Coast Classics, set a goal of 48 feet in the triple jump in order for him to sponsor Joyner in the Junior Olympics and Joyner responded by jumping 48-8 at the state meet.

That set him off on a summer of track meets as he went all the way to the nationals in Utah and a third place with a jump of 49-10. Along the way, he developed a close friendship with Joe Woods, a former Richmond County standout who presently competes for Texas Blend Junior College. Woods jumped 50-0 to claim second at the nationals.

Joyner went on to meets in Philadelphia, where he jumped a career high 50-6, and then Maryland.

"It's real serious (competition) but we're also real good friends, probably the two closest on the team," Joyner said.

Joyner is very direct and confident when he discusses his future goals. Make no bones about it, he has Olympic gold on his mind.

"Everybody's dream is to go to the Olympics, everybody thinks about it," he said. "That motivates anyone to try and do their best. That's my ultimate goal."

"I want to go to the 1992 Olympics. I feel by that time I should be in the position of making the Olympics. If I don't, I know it's something I didn't do. Until then, I feel that I can make it. I feel I can win the Olympics one day. If I keep working hard, it will all come. Everything evolves as long as you work at it."

Joyner is presently mulling over invitations to two of the top amateur track meets in the nation this summer, the Golden West Invitational in Sacramento, California, which attracts the top eight performers in each event, and the Keebler Invitational in Illinois. But those will probably be his only two excursions away from Pitt County.

"This summer I am going to stay home," Joyner said. "I feel that (two meets) will be enough for the summer because I feel like I'm going so far away (to school) that I'd like to spend some time with my grandmother."

ECU Relay Team Gets New Mark

RALEIGH (AP) — Former NCAA champion Rosalind Council easily qualified for the U.S. Olympic Trials when she won the women's 100-meter hurdles in 13.21 seconds Saturday night at the Wolfpack Twilight Invitational track and field meet at North Carolina State.

Men's 400-meter relay teams from N.C. State and East Carolina and the women's 1,600-meter relay team from Howard also bettered NCAA Division I championship qualifying standards.

Council, a former Auburn star, won the race by more than five meters as she dipped under the qualifying standard of 13.68 seconds.

Two other athletes also qualified for the July 15-23 trials in Indianapolis that will determine the U.S. track and field team for the 1988 Olympics.

Joan Nesbit, a former NCAA All-America at North Carolina, won the women's 3,000-meter run in 9:08.72 and N.C. State's Terry Reese won the men's 110-meter hurdles in 13.78 seconds.

Several other athletes qualified for various NCAA championships. They included Appalachian State's Warren Posey, who bounded 53-5 in the triple jump, and N.C. State's Bob Henes, who ran the men's 5,000 meters in 13:54.49.

ECU finishers: 200—2, Eugene McNeill, ECU, 20.6

400 RELAY—2, East Carolina, 39.81 (Betterers NCAA Division I qualifying standard).

Lietzke Comes Through In A Playoff With Rose

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Don't mess with Bruce Lietzke in playoffs.

Clarence Rose did, and he discovered what Gene Littler, Ray Floyd, Tom Watson and Andy Bean already knew. Lietzke is poison when the heat is on.

By sinking a 20-foot birdie putt on the first extra hole of the Byron Nelson Golf Classic, Lietzke won for the fifth time in seven playoffs in his PGA Tour career. In beating Rose, a tour non-winner, Lietzke snapped a four-year winless drought and earned a check for $135,000.

Rose had the consolation of an $81,000 second-place check after shooting a final-round 69. Lietzke bogeyed the last hole for a par 70. They completed 72 holes at nine-under 271 over the Tournament Players Course at Las Colinas.

"It was nice to be in contention again, and to be able to work through all the problems and win again. It was a match-play tournament with Rose and I just tried to relax."

Lietzke was surprised when the winning putt fell, thinking he had hit it too hard.

"I wish I could say I had a magic feeling when I hit that putt but I really didn't," Lietzke said. "I had been on the left lips and right lips (of cups) all day but that one went straight into the hole. I thought it would be too hard and maybe just catch a part of the hole, but it didn't."

He said it was great to win again, a feeling he hadn't enjoyed since the 1984 Honda Classic.

"I felt good once I got into the playoff," he said. "I've got a pretty good record there. I've beaten some big names."

"It was the first time in four years I had a chance to win and I did it."

Rose said he wasn't nervous, although he did elect to walk to the 16th tee rather than ride in the luxury car provided by the tournament committee.

"Just give Lietzke credit, he made a great putt," Rose said. "Well, second place again for me. Bruce just let me in the playoff then he took it away. He's a competitor."

"I learned how to win a playoff now. You get into the playoff and birdie the first hole. That's how you do it."

Lietzke, who is moving his family to Plano, Texas, from Grove, Okla., said he may only play golf for two more years.

"My predictions don't hold a lot of water but I really want a change from the tour life and spend more time with my family," Lietzke said. "I've been saying 'only two more years' for six years."

"I could leave in two years but I have a concern about how I would earn an income. I was a security guard once and that wasn't a lot of fun."

Lietzke, who counts the 1981 Nelson among his 11 career victories, admitted he's "never ever wanted to be the best player in the world. I could leave the tour tomorrow but I couldn't quit playing golf."

He has won $2,542,686 but has never won a major.

"My longtime goal is to win a tournament by a large margin," he said. "I could have cruised and signed autographs and kissed babies along the way today but I didn't have a large enough margin to do it. Maybe someday."

GMU's Pitching Keys Win In Tourney Final

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — George Mason's pitching staff hurled the Patriots to the Colonial Athletic Association baseball championship, allowing Richmond only two runs in the final game of the tournament.

"Every pitch was important," said George Mason Coach Bill Brown after the Patriots held off the Spiders 4-2 on Sunday. "Our defensive play is what carried us through."

Frank Laviano, 5-1, took the win after giving up one run in six innings. Rob Larrick came in and picked up his first save, as well as catching a line drive off the bat of Greg Harding in the ninth inning.

The Patriots' John Styles, who shut out top-seeded James Madison 2-0 Saturday, was selected the tournament's Most Valuable Player.

"It was a total team," Styles said. "There was no one person that won this, no one person that came through all the time. We all did it, we all played together, and this is great."

In an afternoon game, the Spiders defeated George Mason 7-6 to force a second game. Richmond, seeded sixth, had surprised James Madison with a 6-3 victory Saturday to put the Spiders in the final round.

"I told our kids I'm real proud of you," said Richmond head coach Ronnie Atkins after Sunday's games. "It hadn't been the best of years but you gave me 100 percent and peaked when you had to."

"We got lucky," Brown said. "You have to remember that this was an all new infield from last year. Going into the season they had only played together for about 2 weeks. I'm really proud of them."

The Patriots, 34-25-1, scored twice in the first inning on a two-run single by Rod Billingsley.

Richmond scored in the second to cut the lead to 2-1. The Patriots added single runs in the fifth and sixth, and Kevin Kobylinski's sacrifice fly in the fifth and an RBI single by Chris Lawrence accounted for the Patriot's final runs.

The Spiders scored an unearned run in the eighth.

Richmond starter Chris Wagner, 3-5, went the first seven innings and took the loss.

Johnson Takes Fourth At Qualifying Meet

BOCA RATON, Fla. — James Johnson, a former D.H. Conley wrestling star, continued on in his quest to make the U.S. Olympic Wrestling team by placing fourth at the final Olympic Qualifying Meet in Greco-Roman Wrestling Saturday.

Johnson, competing in the 220-pound class, wrestled in four matches during the meet and the top six in each weight advance to the final Olympic team selection at Pensacola Fla. in June.

In the opening match he scored a technical pin, 16-0, over Mike Jones of Illinois. In the second round, Johnson fell to Phil Lanzatella, 4-2, of the U.S. Army team.

Johnson went on to take a win in the third round by default over Roger Meff of Pennsylvania. Johnson lost by default in the fourth round to Chris Tironi of New York. Johnson was coached at the event by Milt Sherman of D.H. Conley.

Farmville Girls Take 3rd At Sectionals

FUQUAY-VARINA — Farmville Central finished in third place at the 1-A/2A Eastern Track and Field Sectionals Saturday.

South Granville won the event with 93 points, followed by Ahsokie with 77 and the Lady Jaguars with 54.

Triple jump: 1) Cheryl Hopkins 35-5/4; Long jump: 3) Hopkins 16-5; High jump: 1) Kim Harrison 5-0; 100 meters: 5) Beverly Vines 12.96; 800 relay: 3) Farmville Central (1:48.34); 400 relay: 1) Farmville (Monica Hunter, Harrison, Hopkins, Vines) 51:23; 1,600 meter relay: 1) Farmville (Hunter, Harrison, Vines, Sheila Speight) 4:17.26.

Tech Tops UNC To Win ACC Baseball Crown

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Scott Erwin allowed six hits in 8 2/3 innings and relief pitcher Jim Poole struck out the final batter as Georgia Tech beat North Carolina 6-2 to win the Atlantic Coast Conference baseball tournament Sunday.

The third-seeded Yellow Jackets, 43-22, became the first team ever to win four ACC baseball tournaments in a row.

"Great pitching did it for us," Georgia Tech Coach Jim Morris said. "We lost 18 guys for one reason or another off last year's team, and there were a lot of obstacles in our way. The secret was getting hot at the right time."

A suicide squeeze bunt by Darren Villani gave the Tar Heels a 1-0 in the second inning. But Georgia Tech came back to take a 3-1 lead in the third inning on a two-run home run by tournament most valuable player Ty Griffin and Pat McGuire's RBI single.

K.G. White singled in two runs in the fourth, and Billy Parham's solo home run in the seventh gave the Yellow Jackets a 6-2 lead.

North Carolina's other run came in the sixth inning.

In the ninth, North Carolina loaded the bases with two outs but Poole, who notched his eighth save, struck out Chris DeFranco to end the game. Erwin's record went to 13-0.

North Carolina finished at 34-27.

Of Georgia Tech's four straight titles, only one, in 1987, came after the Yellow Jackets entered the tournament as the No. 1 seed.

"That's the reason you have to give them credit for what they do," said North Carolina coach Mike Roberts. "They do it when they're supposed to get it done. There are winners in that program, kids who know how to handle pressure. As a fellow coach, you have to admire that."

Crampton Eases To Senior's Win

MALVERN, Pa. (AP) — Bruce Crampton, who is all business on the golf course, made short work of his sudden-death playoff to win the United Hospitals Senior Classic.

Crampton played a fade from the extreme right side of the tee on the 15th hole at the Chester Valley Country Club Sunday, drilling his 5-iron tee shot to three feet from the cup.

Billy Casper, who lost a one-stroke advantage with a bogey 5 on the 18th hole, also teed off for the sudden-death playoff with a 5-iron, but his shot carried 25 feet beyond the pin.

Casper two-putted, while Crampton sank his three-foot putt for a birdie and the first prize of $33,750 from a purse of $225,000. It made him a millionaire on the Seniors circuit with a total of $1,001,441.

"It shows you there is more than one way to skin a kangaroo," said Crampton, a native Australian.

Casper shot a 2-under-par 68 in the third and final round and Crampton a 69. At the end of 54 holes at the Chester Valley Country Club, they were tied at 5-under 205.

"I had a fantastic day," Casper said, admitting that his next-to-last putt on 18 wasn't too fantastic.

"I didn't see it," he said. "I had my eyes closed."

Crampton shot a second-round 65 to put himself into position for Sunday's victory.

Casper lost a chance to win the tournament when he missed a two-foot putt on the 18th green for his first bogey in 41 holes of the tournament. He had bogeyed only twice, both on the first day of play.

The missed putt enabled Crampton to tie Casper for the lead.

It was Crampton's 14th Senior Tour title and his second of the year. He won the 1988 Legends of Golf with Orville Moody on May 1. It was his first individual victory since last Sept. 6, at Lexington, Ky.

Oakland Waking Up Memories

By Thomas Boswell
(c) 1988, The Washington Post

BALTIMORE — Remember the Oakland A's of 1972, 1973 and 1974, who won three straight World Series? Hold that thought. The Oakland A's of 1988 have the makings.

Of what? Almost anything. Including a World Series champion. Oakland's 14-game winning streak, the longest in baseball in 11 years, which ended last week, was an announcement to the rest of baseball. This team is flat loaded and knows it.

The word is out: Watch out. What the New York Mets have been to the National League in recent years, the Athletics could soon be to the American: the franchise you look at before all others when you discuss Maximum Potential.

The A's, under the hands of Manager Tony La Russa and General Manager Sandy Alderson, have come together from all available directions in the past three years — cheap free agents, grand-theft trades and farm system development. Now, all the chambers of the Oakland Gatling gun are loaded.

Dave Stewart, who won his first eight starts this spring, symbolizes the discount free agents by the Bay. Two years ago, Smoke couldn't even get a tryout from the Orioles after a pair of lousy years (7-20). But the A's took a look at him right in Memorial Stadium. Since then, he's added a forkball and won 21 games last season.

To the Athletics, "free agent" isn't synonymous with millions of dollars. It means spotting a veteran like Stewart or a Don Baylor, Ron Hassey, Dave Henderson or Glenn Hubbard-whose stock isn't at a peak, but who has past proven talent and a pro's attitude.

The A's also have the nastiest bullpen maestro of '88. Dennis Eckersley cashed 11 of his first 12 save chances. Thought to be a washed-up starter, the eccentric, colorful Eck was grabbed from the Cubs for three prime "What's My Line?" candidates.

You can't have a better trading year than Alderson had in 1987. Line 'em up: Eckersley, Storm Davis (3-1), Bob Welch (6-2), Rick Honeycutt and Dave Parker. Sometimes, Oakland gave equal value, like Alfredo Griffin and Jay Howell, but mostly the Athletics pruned their rich farm system so they could make the future become the present.

As if this weren't enough, Jose Canseco is on a pace to be the first man with 40 homers, 40 steals and, just for spice, 20 outfield assists. The man Parker calls "The Bionic Cuban," epitomizes the coming of age of the A's draft picks — at the rate of one a year.

First, it was Canseco, the rookie of the year in 1986. Then came Mark McGwire, the historic 49-homer rookie of the year in 1987. This year, watch out for fundamentally sound shortstop Walt Weiss, a first-round pick in '85 who's injured now, but should soon produce just as much as Griffin ever did.

When you've got the league's hottest starter, reliever and all-around star, you get noticed. But the harder you gaze at the Athletics, the more you see. Carney Lansford (.352) looks like his old batting champion self. McGwire (30 RBI) has already erased doubts that he was a fluke. And, last but far from least, Parker—"It appears that I'm the missing link here"—hasn't even started to produce with power yet.

No wonder Oakland fans find themselves reflecting back on their glorious past. The core of the old A's batting order was Reggie Jackson, Sal Bando and Joe Rudi, backed up by Gene Tenace. Now tell the truth. Wouldn't you rather have Canseco, McGwire and ex-Pirate Parker on your side? They had 106 homers and 328 RBI among them last year. Average height, almost 6 feet 5. Weight around 225. They're the shoulders, not the heart, of the order.

Toss in Lansford and Baylor, both 215-pounders. "Never been on a team with a bunch of guys this strong before. Everywhere you look are guys who could hit 25 homers or more," said Parker. In fact, the A's are on a pace to score 950 runs this year. That would be the most since the '53 Dodgers of Snider, Hodges, Campanella, Robinson, et al. Offense is the A's game. They make batting practice sound like the percussion part of a jazz score.

As Parker stands by the batting cage, he crouches, fists at shin level. "This is my linebacker stance," he tells Baylor. Football is the right analogy. This is where the Redskins should come to find their next H-back.

"When we're four runs behind and we tell our relief pitcher, 'Hold 'em,' he knows we're not kidding," said Parker. "We're comin' back."

Already in their remarkable 25-10 spring, the Athletics have pulled out a game in the late innings six times. At this rate, the AL West race could be dead by the Fourth of July. Oakland already leads by seven games and the dogs behind them don't look like they can hunt.

Hitting is definitely Oakland's calling card. On this team, solid professional bats like those of catcher Hassey (.304) and outfielders Henderson (.317) and Stan Javier (.315) are an afterthought. If it is easy to miss them, think how the A's pitchers get neglected. But don't sell them short. "Helluva staff," said Eck.

The old A's had a tall, mustachioed, right-handed reliever with charisma and three tough pitches; guy named Rollie Fingers. Now, it's Eckersley, the former 20-game winner. Tall, mustache, right-handed, three pitches and a vivid character. Now that he doesn't give up so many "ba-boombas," as he calls home runs, he's found a second career.

"It's worked out good for me," he said. "I'm aggressive. I have control. I'm tough on right-handers and, now, the lefties only see me once. I was facing stacked lefty lineups the last six or eight years."

Few teams have the luxury of set-up men as good as Honeycutt (2.04) and Eric Plunk (2.70). True, the old A's always had a Paul Lindblad or Darold Knowles. The old Athletics had three star starting pitchers — Catfish Hunter, Vida Blue and Ken Holtzman — and not much behind them except Blue Moon Odom. That hurt during the regular season when the A's won "only" 93, 94 and 90 games.

Stanley scored the first run of the game in the first inning as First Citizens broke out to a quick 2-0 lead.

After falling behind 3-2 after the top half of the third frame, First Citizens scored a trio of runs in the bottom of the inning to seize the lead for good in the game. Reggie Boyd, Todd Hillis and Chris Smith all scored in the inning for First Citizens.

'SUNSET' — Actor James Garner, left, plays Wyatt Earp and Bruce Willis plays Tom Mix in Blake Edwards' new comedy, "Sunset," a glimpse at what Hollywood in the 1920s might have been like. The film is based on a book by Rod Amateur, and involves the two characters joining forces to solve a Hollywood murder case. (AP Laserphoto)

'Wild' Actor Bruce Willis Doesn't Think He's So Bad

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Bruce Willis, a favorite whipping boy of the scandal tabloids, doesn't think he's that bad.

"When I've been talking to people about this film ('Sunset'), I find them so surprised to see that I'm this calm and that I'm not throwing chairs and swinging from the rafters," he said. "They're pretty surprised that I can be this relaxed."

Indeed, he was relaxed as he lounged beside the swimming pool on a sunswept morning at the beachfront home he shares with his wife, actress Demi Moore.

After three frantic years of doing TV's "Moonlighting" and three feature movies, Willis is unaccustomed to the leisure that has been enforced by the screenwriters' strike. Like most television series, "Moonlighting" has shut down for lack of scripts.

The actor wore only swim trunks and a cap marked Newark Rational Company — "a small firm that will some day package my films; the name is an homage to my beginnings in the Garden State (New Jersey)." He looked trim, healthy — and relaxed.

Willis has been doing interviews for "Sunset." Blake Edwards' Hollywood period piece in which Tom Mix (Willis) and Wyatt Earp (James Garner) pursue a murder scandal. Willis interviews have been rare in recent times.

"My wife has helped me in dealing with the matter of publicity," he said. "It just sells more magazines to say I'm the Bad Boy of Hollywood than to say that I'm not doing anything this week, or I'm not throwing any wild parties."

"By and large, the basic principle was that if you put my picture on the cover of a magazine, people were going to buy it. I sell magazines. I had to realize that if you took all those people out of that industry, next week a whole new crowd would come in. Because somebody's got to do that job."

Becoming a husband and future father appears to have had a salutary influence on Willis, also the stimulus of working with veterans Edwards and Garner in a top-flight production.

"The work I had done in television was basically a two-character show," he said. "The film 'Blind Date' was basically a two-character love story. I had wanted to work in an ensemble situation with a large cast. The feel on 'Sunset' was the closest I've come to working on stage since I've come out here."

"I came on the film three weeks late, because I was finishing up the season on 'Moonlighting.' When I arrived, everyone else had been working on their characters and were into that genre. Jim especially made it very comfortable for me. We hit it off right away, and I had never met him before."

There's further evidence of Willis' domestication: He is into gardening. "I'm having a lot of trouble with snails," he complained as he proudly displayed a tiny bed of marigolds and snapdragons. His interest in gardening, he explained, harks back to his New Jersey childhood.

"Everyone associates New Jersey with going on the turnpike through Elizabeth, Newark and that area," he said. "Where I grew up in south Jersey (Carneys Point) it's very beautiful."

"I really grew up out of doors. The majority of my first 16-17 years were outside, which I really didn't appreciate then. As a kid I always wanted to live in a larger city. Now that I'm older, those are the memories I have: climbing trees and being in the woods."

Willis, 33, spent a few years at Montclair State College, where he studied drama under Jerry Lockwood. In 1977, he moved to New York and began a life of hunting work as an actor and tending bar.

"I still remember when $20 was a lot of money," he reminisced. "I could eat for three or four days on $20. Of course my diet in those days was pretty much pizza and beer. In some some ways things were a lot simpler then. There was only one thing to do: get a job. Then I didn't have to think about anything else — as long as the show ran."

"Once I had a structured job for six months. I fell in love with a girl, and she needed more security in our relationship. I was anything but financially secure. So I took a job managing a health club and became the director. The relationship fell apart and I went back to hunting for acting jobs." His luck began to change when he starred in Sam Shepard's "Fool for Love." When he was passed over for a role in "Desperately Seeking Susan," Willis took a trip to Hollywood and soon was tapped for "Moonlighting."

The ABC series co-starring Cybill Shepherd and Willis as an odd couple of private eyes had a sensational two years.

TV Actress Rejects Opportunity To Meet Real-Life Role Model

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It would seem unlikely that a woman who allows her son to die could be a sympathetic character, but she is when Rosanna Arquette plays her in the CBS movie about obsessive religious belief, "Promised a Miracle."

So it was surprising to hear Ms. Arquette say with some vehemence that she was so repulsed by what Alice "Lucky" Parker and her husband, Larry, did that she didn't even want to meet them.

"Promised a Miracle" is based on Larry Parker's book, "We Let Our Son Die." The Parkers were so convinced that their diabetic son, Wesley, had been healed by God that they stood by while he lapsed into a coma and died. Even then, they thought he would rise from the dead, like Lazarus.

The movie, airing Thursday, is a simple, highly emotional story and therefore a real actors' vehicle. Judge Reinhold, best-known for such comedies as "Beverly Hills Cop" and "Ruthless People," takes a rare dramatic turn. He and Ms. Arquette turn in stunning performances as the fundamentalist couple clinging to their beliefs rather than facing the horror of what they have done.

Ms. Arquette played a real-life character before, in her critically acclaimed performance as convicted killer Gary Gilmore's girlfriend, Nicole, in the made-for-TV movie "Executioner's Song." For that role, Ms. Arquette met the real Nicole. This time she didn't meet the real-life characters until playing the role convinced her they weren't monsters.

"I had such strong reactions to the script and what they did, I didn't really want to meet them in the beginning," said Ms. Arquette. "I think this was a terrible tragedy and what they did was horrible thing. I ended up meeting them towards the very end, like, the last day of shooting."

"When I first read the script, my initial reaction was like shock, and I was so angry. How could people let this happen? Then I found out from the producers that it's happening all around the country. It happened yesterday. A 2-year-old girl had bowel obstruction, her parents prayed over her, and she died."

"In a situation like that, when you could save a child's life, especially with something like insulin for a diabetic, it's wrong. It really is. So I didn't have a sympathetic point of view at all until I started playing the character."

In a touching courtroom scene, Lucky is on the witness stand trying to explain why she believed so fervently in the "miracle." The family had fallen on hard times after Larry was laid off.

"This miracle, this wonderful thing came along, and it was gonna lift us up," Lucky says. "It was gonna put us back on our feet — if we believe it. We had to believe it or give up on life."

The Parkers had help believing, from their pastor (John Vickery), who finally, reluctantly suggested they should consult a doctor to "verify" the healing, and from Lucky's prayer group. They all believed that Wesley's worsening symptoms were the work of Satan, testing their faith.

The Parkers accept their son's death only after a wrenching revelatory scene that so mortifies Larry he bolts from the house and runs down the road, leaving Lucky screaming in the front yard.

"So it was very powerful," Ms. Arquette said. "Judge Reinhold and I had a very hard time. We shot it in 20 days, intense schedule. And also, as we were doing those scenes, I could not believe that this was happening, how could they have let this happen? And I got ill from it, really."

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠Q874 ♥85 ♦KJ102 ♣953
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♠ 2 ♥ ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Make the same bid you would have made had there been no interference—a raise to two spades. If you elect to pass, you might find that by the time the bidding gets back to you it is at an uncomfortably high level, and you won't know whether or not to compete.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠QJ74 ♥9 ♦A10762 ♣953
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♠ 2 ♥ ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—You have limited defensive capabilities but great offensive potential. Had East not interposed a bid, you would have jumped to four spades. Make the same bid now.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠985 ♥QJ762 ♦83 ♣A93
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
 2 NT Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—Although partner's jump to two no trump is not forcing, just high invitational, you should not pass unless you have a sub-minimum response. Here, you are full value for your bid. Since your hand is balanced, don't rebid your hearts. Simply raise to three no trump.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠KJ62 ♥Q103 ♦AJ983 ♣5
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♠ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
 1 ♠ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—In support of spades, your hand revalues to 14 points. Since the equivalent of an opening bid facing an opening should be enough for game, jump to four spades. Don't bid only three spades; that would be invitational, and partner might pass with a minimum.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠8 ♥A1076 ♦KJ854 ♣J93
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 NT Pass 2 ♣ Pass
 2 ♣ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Although partner has responded to your Stayman inquiry with the "wrong" major, he could hold a four-card heart suit as well. For the moment show partner that you have game-going values with a heart suit by jumping to three no trump. If partner does have hearts as well, he will correct to four hearts.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠KJ7 ♥J6 ♦K6 ♣AQJ873
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♠ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
 2 ♣ Pass 3 ♣ Pass

What action do you take?
 A.—We think you are worth one try, and we have a sneaky admiration for those who bark out three no trump without giving a thought to the heart situation or worrying about losing a partial when the no trump game fails. We would bid three spades, and hope that partner has the sort of heart holding that would permit him to convert to three no trump.

Koop Formally Declares Nicotine Is Addictive

By JERRY ESTILL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The surgeon general declared today that nicotine is addictive like heroin and cocaine, a finding that came as no surprise to researchers but which will provide new ammunition for anti-smoking forces.

The significance of the report by C. Everett Koop is not that it unveils new scientific evidence, but that he organized existing research into a systematic presentation lumping nicotine in with heroin and cocaine as physiologically addictive substances. "Careful examination of the data makes it clear that cigarettes and other forms of tobacco are addicting," Koop wrote in a preface. "An extensive body of research has shown that nicotine is the drug in tobacco that causes addiction."

"Moreover, the processes that determine tobacco addiction are similar to those that determine addiction to drugs such as heroin and cocaine." The report cites 171 separate studies, most of them conducted during the past decade, as references.

In a letter to Congress accompanying the report, Health and Human Services Secretary Otis R. Bowen said, "A warning label on the addicting nature of tobacco use should be rotated with other health warnings now required on cigarette and smokeless tobacco packages and advertisements."

Bowen said cigarette smoking is "the chief avoidable cause of premature death in this country," causing more than 300,000 such deaths each year.

"The disease impact of smoking justifies placing the problem of tobacco use at the top of the public health agenda," Bowen wrote. "The conclusions of this report provide another compelling reason for strengthening our efforts to reduce tobacco use in our society."

In his opening remarks, Koop also called for an addiction warning on cigarette labels and advertising and said, "Treatment of tobacco addiction should be more widely available and should be considered at least as favorably by third-party payers as treatment of alcoholism and illicit drug addiction."

Koop handled some other controversial ideas as questions: "With the evidence that tobacco is addicting, is it appropriate for tobacco products to be sold through vending machines, which are easily accessible to children?"

"Is it appropriate for free samples of tobacco products to be sent through the mail or distributed on public property, where verification of age is difficult if not impossible? Should the sale of tobacco be treated less seriously than the sale of alcoholic beverages, for which a specific license is required (and revoked for repeated sales to minors)?"

"In the face of overwhelming evidence that tobacco is addicting, policy-makers should address these questions without delay," Koop said.

Reaction was swift and predictable.

The American Academy of Family Physicians was ready with a prepared statement saying the Koop finding "confirms what many smokers and former smokers know very well — stopping smoking is a hard thing to do."

Although details of the report were not made public until today, one of the many federal health officials that helped prepare it disclosed the essential finding — that nicotine is addictive — in a television interview earlier this month.

A Tobacco Institute spokesman reacted to that disclosure by Ronald M. Davis, director of the federal Office of Smoking and Health, by saying it showed "anti-tobacco zeal has overtaken common sense and good judgment."

Walker Merryman, the tobacco industry official, added: "To imply that the 55 million American tobacco smokers are drug abusers is to subvert and divert attention from the nation's war on illicit drugs. It is a trivialization of the country's urgent concerns with hard drugs and verges on irresponsibility."

Koop's last smoking report concluded — again based on a compilation of existing studies — that nonsmokers' health was endangered by inhaling smoke from other people's cigarettes.

Issued just over a year ago, that report has reverberated quickly throughout society, providing impetus for a growing move toward smoke-free environments in the workplace, restaurants and public buildings. The latest example: the federal ban on smoking aboard commercial jetliners for flights of two hours or less that took effect April 23.

Just as it was impossible to predict the impact of Koop's last smoking report, experts are not sure where the newest one will lead. But anti-smoking forces are elated.

Ahron Leichtman, president of a group called Citizens Against Tobacco Smoke, said the report should spur new warnings on cigarettes, further restrictions on tobacco advertising and a ban on cigarette vending machines.

"The cigarette companies have thoroughly failed to warn consumers as to the addictive powers of tobacco," he said. "Smokers, unfortunately, are the victims of an industry whose product is highly addictive and dangerous."

Immunity Rule Alarms Lawmakers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of Congress fear a recent court ruling may have stripped away two centuries of legal protection for their official activities, exposing them to lawsuits for monetary damages.

The House has gone on record against the decision and an appeal by the House lawyer of the case involving Rep. Don Sundquist says a "Pandora's box" of lawsuits may have been opened.

Lawmakers are protected by the Constitution from suits over their activities on the floor and in committee. But legal experts say an appellate court ruling on the Sundquist case has left members of Congress without a wider immunity granted throughout the nation's history by federal courts.

Members believed these earlier rulings protected them against damage suits based on their actions at news conferences, in communications with government agencies and related activities.

This wider protection still extends to other federal employees from Cabinet members to custodians, according to House legal experts.

In the case of Sundquist, R-Tenn., the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia ruled 2-1 last November that lawmakers are not immune from civil suits arising from their attempts to influence the conduct of executive agencies.

In an appeal asking the Supreme Court to review the case, chief House counsel Steven R. Ross said, "The two-judge panel decision threatens to open a Pandora's box of tort suits by those who disagree with, or are offended by, members of Congress."
