Edgecombe Proposes Waste Disposal Park

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

TARBORO — Urging area residents to "listen (and) keep an open mind," Edgecombe County officials Tuesday night publicly proposed the creation of a 3,000-acre waste management park for low-level radioactive, chemical and solid wastes. They implied that millions of dollars in state incentives and in tax revenue for the county would follow.

As proposed, the waste park would be located in eastern Edgecombe County between Conetoe and Speed, near the Pitt County line a few miles from Bethel.

As part of a program designed to inform county residents of the benefits and risks of such a proposal, eight buses will carry an estimated 300 people to visit a low-level nuclear waste disposal site in Barnwell, S.C., on Monday.

But David Ebenback, vice president of Chem-Nuclear Systems Inc., the firm that operates the South Carolina facility, said regulations won't allow pregnant women or people under 18 years old to visit the site.

Between 475 and 500 people — treated to a free meal paid for by the county — crowded into the Tarboro Moose Lodge Wednesday night to learn more about the plan.

Tom Bardin Jr., chairman of the county's Board of Commissioners, presided at the session.

"Tonight, you will be hearing about an economic development plan that could give us a competitive advantage in industrial recruitment for years to come... a bold and most innovative approach to waste management," Bardin told the gathering.

Bardin said before the meeting that state "Rep. (Joe) Mavretic is the one who had the vision. He initially presented the idea to our board."

But Mavretic, who serves on a legislative panel developing a package of incentives for communities willing to host the waste sites and who has decried plans to put the regional low-level radioactive waste facility anywhere in the state, said it has been "a group effort."

Mavretic told the meeting that the proposal to locate the state's waste management park in eastern Edgecombe "is the best plan to come along for a century. It will establish the base for jobs and progress... for at least the next 30 years."

"There are some risks," he admitted, "but they are minimal and there are always some risks. Ask anybody in this room that farms."

Mavretic said the concept of a waste management park "is simple. There are four parts."

"First is a low-level radioactive waste disposal facility. It takes about 300 acres and in it is placed low-level radioactive waste."

"Second, there is a comprehensive hazardous waste treatment facility. This facility," Mavretic said, "has three main units: a detoxification unit which chemically reduces hazardous wastes to sludge which is packaged and sent out of the county; a de-watering unit which evaporates the non-hazardous liquid leaving another sludge which is packaged and sent out of the county, and an incinerator which burns hazardous wastes, traps the fly and fall ash and these ashes are packaged and sent out of the state."

"Third," Mavretic said, "there is a regional solid waste management facility which handles city and county garbage."

Board Cites 120 Pitt 'Scholars'

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Between somber moments of listening to difficult personal experiences and lighter moments of laughing at "punch-line" jokes, Pitt County scholars were told "maturity does not come with age; maturity comes with the acceptance of moral responsibility."

D. Michael Broome, president of Tomorrow's America Enterprises and founder and president of the Broyhill Leadership Conference, addressed the 120 Pitt County students being honored as North Carolina Scholars during a banquet at the Greenville Country Club Wednesday night.

Broome, who said he overcame stuttering, touched on fear, premarital sex and pregnancy, drugs and alcohol and peer pressure during his presentation that took his audience from sympathetic silence to laughter.

"Fear is nothing more than a thought," Broome said. "Only 8 percent of worries ever come true."

"The greatest fear of young people is they're afraid of being different," he said. "They allow their lives to be controlled by peer pressure. You have to be very careful about this" as peers will "try to pull you down."

About "1.1 million girls in America this year will become pregnant," Broome said, telling the girls they have more to lose than the boys if they become pregnant because they probably would not go to college or do other things they had planned.

"Love can wait, but lust is not going to wait... experimentation with sex destroys lives," he said.

Broome also cautioned students about the use of alcohol before he began warning them against drugs.

"My mother died because she was hooked on a drug... she was addicted to nicotine," Broome said. About 320,000 people will die with tobacco-related illnesses this year, he said. "Tobacco is popular in this part of the state, but that doesn't take away the reality of its harmful effects."

"She had cancer because she chose to smoke. If you choose to smoke, you've got that right," but know the effects, Broome said.

Broome also gave the students the "secrets of success" during the presentation. "The secrets of success are to have belief in yourself and willingness to assert yourselves toward a goal," he said.

Success does not depend on age, color, creed or sex, he said, citing those such as Walt Disney, Alex Haley and Babe Ruth who overcame obstacles to be successful.

For example, Babe Ruth had the record for striking out in addition to the record for hits, Broome said. "He

War Act Changes Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bipartisan group of senators, asserting that the War Powers Act doesn't work, introduced a measure today overhauling the 15-year-old law.

"There's an old saying that if something isn't broke, don't fix it," said Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Armed Services Committee. "Well, the War Powers Act is broken and it should be fixed."

The Vietnam-era law, enacted over the veto of President Nixon, restricts the power of a president to send U.S. military personnel to situations of "imminent hostilities."

The current law requires a report from the president when such troops are dispatched. Under some circumstances, those troops must be withdrawn after 60 days or 90 days, unless Congress specifically votes to authorize them to remain.

The new proposal would allow the troops to remain for an unspecified length of time unless Congress votes to remove them.

In addition, the proposal creates a group of 18 senior congressional leaders who would regularly meet with the president to discuss national security matters.

In situations of hostilities, the group of congressional leaders could trigger the war powers law by introducing a resolution to either authorize the troops to remain or to order them withdrawn.

Florida Jury Convicts Colombian Drug Dealer

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Carlos Lehder Rivas, the biggest foreign drug dealer ever brought to trial in this country, was found guilty today of running a smuggling operation that shipped tons of cocaine from Colombia to the United States.

The verdict against the reputed leader of Colombia's violent Medellin drug cartel came just after 11 a.m. following seven days of deliberation.

Lehder, 38, and co-defendant Jack Carlton Reed, 57, were convicted of conspiring to smuggle 3.3 tons of cocaine, using Norman's Cay in the Bahamas, from 1978 to 1980.

Lehder was found guilty on all counts: conspiracy, two counts of importation of cocaine, seven counts of possession of cocaine with intent to distribute and one charge of engaging in a continuing criminal enterprise.

He looked down, then stared straight ahead as the court clerk read the verdicts. Two jurors cried, with one sobbing and burying her face in her hands, as the seven-month trial came to an end.

Lehder now faces life plus 150 years in prison and up to $350,000 in fines and possible and possible forfeiture of millions of dollars in real estate.

Reed, of San Pedro, Calif., was convicted on a single conspiracy count and faces up to 15 years in prison and $25,000 in fines.

Prosecutors and government witnesses had described Lehder as a one-time New York street hood who put together a vast cocaine-smuggling empire after he was deported to his homeland.

Authorities said the Medellin Cartel, named for a city in Colombia, was believed to be responsible for 80 percent of the cocaine smuggled into the United States.

Prosecutors called Lehder the biggest foreign drug smuggler ever brought to trial in the United States.

U.S. Attorney Robert Merkle called him the Henry Ford of drug trafficking, pioneering mass shipments of cocaine by air from Colombia to the United States.

A forfeiture hearing was scheduled for later today, and attorneys refused to comment until after the proceedings.

Jurors' names have not been revealed for security reasons, and U.S. District Judge Howell W. Melton had the foreman sign the verdict form only with his number.

During the trial, witnesses told of Lehder's flamboyant personality, which included admiration for both Adolf Hitler and former Beatle John Lennon.

Chestnut Street Project Revised

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

The content of a Community Development block grant was revised by city staff members Wednesday, making it acceptable to members of a community organization which had originally opposed it.

Meanwhile, City Council member Lorraine Shinn announced that funds have become available for neighborhood improvement, and a citizens advisory council has been proposed to help prioritize those improvement activities.

Representatives of the West Greenville Community Development Corp. expressed dissatisfaction at the May 12 City Council meeting regarding a $570,240 grant application known as the Chestnut Street Community Development Project.

Opponents of the grant argued the original grant application placed too much emphasis on investor-owned properties rather than owner-occupied properties.

The council subsequently directed city staff members to re-examine the application in its previous form and attempt to incorporate more of the west Greenville group's concerns into the application.

Council Examines Proposals For Non-Departmental Items

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

A proposed non-departmental budget more than doubling that of this year's was one of the areas discussed by the Greenville City Council Wednesday at its third session covering the 1988-89 city budget proposed by City Manager Greg Knowles.

The proposed non-departmental budget is $257,233, more than doubling the $110,570 budgeted this year.

Included in that amount is $60,000 for Evergreen, $39,000 for the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, $8,000 for the Museum of Art, and $5,000 to the Jaycees for a 4th of July celebration on the Town Commons.

Also reviewed at Wednesday night's four-hour budget session were proposed budgets for the Pitt-Greenville Airport Authority and the Fire-Rescue and Public Works departments. Knowles has recommended $3,241,050 for public works, compared with the current year's budget of $3,089,133, and $2,070,744 for fire-rescue, which had $1,971,649 this year.

Taking into account the city's rapid growth and expansion into Brook Valley, Knowles has proposed an expansion of the city budget by 7.8 percent — a rise from $19,656,163 to $21,693,443. An additional proposal to initiate a capital improvements program would raise the budget by nearly half a million dollars, or 10.36 percent over this year's budget.

Representatives of various groups comprising the non-departmental budget were offered time before the council to explain their request. Representatives of the chamber of commerce are not scheduled to conduct a presentation until May 24.

James Turcotte, representing Pitt-Greenville Airport, said the airport is asking the city for $267,363, consisting of $201,813 for capital improvements and $65,550 for subsidizing current operations.

"The airport has had a very positive effect on the community and I hope you are as excited about the facility as we are," he told the council.

Jack Steelman of Evergreen told the council that several new buildings with a combined value of $14.8 million have a strong possibility of being built through continued efforts by the organization.

Reflector NIE Staff Wins Award

The Newspapers In Education staff of The Daily Reflector has been honored for its entry in the national Newspapers in Education Information Service's first NIE Week competition.

Diane Williams, Daily Reflector NIE coordinator, is accepting the award in Atlanta this week.

The Daily Reflector NIE Week project was called by the NIE winners' bulletin "a textbook case of involving all possible publics in a promotion effort." The entry was judged the best in the country in the 10,000-to-50,000 circulation category.

During the special week, the Reflector NIE staff composed of Mrs. Williams and her assistant, Gigi Walter, both former public school teachers, asked for and received a mayor's proclamation for the week, provided radio public service announcements focusing on family reading, sent schools public address announcements on newspaper-related topics, appeared on the early morning television program "Carolina Today" to talk about Newspapers in Education, and even provided poems and cupcakes reminding the Daily Reflector staff members that it was NIE Week.

They coordinated a Daily Reflector-sponsored "Design-An-Ad" contest involving 26 local businesses and more than 400 public school students. The winning ads were featured in a 16-page tabloid which also included general information about newspapers and other activities.

A workshop for teachers was held and each teacher whose classes participate in NIE was provided an interdisciplinary lesson plan guide developed by the two NIE staffers and a NIE-logoed coffee mug. To involve parents in the use of newspapers in their children's educations, the newspaper ran daily apple-shaped activity ads on its leisure pages.

The NIE staff has also been informed of an in-state award that will be presented in the fall.

ECU Study Will Compare Teachers In U.S., Japan

ECU News Bureau
A comparison of science teachers in Japan to those in the United States will be made in a two-year study by researchers at East Carolina University.

The study, supported by the National Science Foundation, is aimed at learning why children in Japan do better in science than youngsters in America.

Dr. Charles R. Coble, dean of the ECU School of Education and Dr. Floyd E. Mattheis of the Science-Math Education Center, will study the preparation and continuing education of American and Japanese science teachers. They say that while there are some known differences in the way the two countries prepare science teachers, no substantive study of these differences has been done.

A $34,850 grant from the National Science Foundation will support the project. Coble and Mattheis will present their findings at a major U.S.-Japan conference on science education meeting in Hawaii in 1990. In a related study completed almost two years ago the researchers from ECU and educators from Hiroshima University in Japan compared 3,300 middle grade students from North Carolina with 4,500 Japanese students. The Japanese youngsters scored "significantly higher with reasoning and integrated process skills" than their counterparts in the United States.

Differences in the type of instruction and priority given to elementary school science were believed to account for much of the variance, the researchers said. They recommended strengthening science education in elementary grades in the United States.

In the current research a comparative study of the pre-service and in-service education of teachers of science at the elementary, junior high and senior high levels in the U.S. and Japan will be made. The findings will be made available to educators and leaders in both nations.

Coble is a former professor of science education at ECU. Mattheis is a former professor and chairman of the department of science education. Both are authors of textbooks and articles about teaching.

Waste Disposal Park Proposed

"This facility sorts our glass for recycling, metals for recycling, organics for composting, plastics for recycling and incinerates what is left that will burn."

Mavretic said, "The fourth part of the waste management park are private industries that use the recycled materials, or that want to be close to the low-level facility or the treatment facility."

"North Carolina's waste management park," Mavretic said, "would, in fact, be the first of its kind in America, though they exist in several places in Europe."

By creating such a park in the county, Mavretic told the group, "We can work together to solve a major industrial problem for eight Southern states — where to dispose of low-level radioactive wastes. We can work together to solve a major industrial problem for North Carolina — hazardous wastes. We can work together to solve a major problem for northeastern North Carolina — how to handle municipal garbage."

An advanced copy of Mavretic's remarks included a comment he did not make at the meeting: "We can work together and take these three lemons and make lemonade with the revenue we get from North Carolina's waste management park," it said.

Edgecombe and state officials have apparently been eyeing the county for months as a possible site for the low level radioactive waste site that will serve eight states. Rumors have spread rapidly through the county in the last week.

"It seems to me that we've been exposed to a great deal of misinformation recently about just what was supposed to happen at this meeting and speculation about 'secret' deals that your board ... might have made," Bardin told the gathering. "Well, I can assure you that there are no 'secret' deals and that your commissioners fully realize that our citizens want properly managed industrial facilities that will pose no significant risks to our people or our environment."

"I can tell you," Bardin said, "that our board believes that the N.C. Waste Management Park would be just such a facility."

According to Bardin, when it became known that the state was seeking a site for a low level nuclear waste disposal facility as well as a hazardous waste disposal site, "our board agreed that it was necessary for us to become as well informed as possible with regard to both these facilities."

"We have done this over a period of time," through reading materials and visits to actual disposal facilities, Bardin said. "And the better educated we have become, the more we realize that the risks associated with industry of this type are often overblown and not in sync with reality."

In-depth investigations "have given us reason to wonder why we had always heard that these waste disposal facilities were bad or in some way undesirable," Bardin said, "particularly in view of the fact that these outfits serve as magnets in many cases, and actually help to attract other industry."

Bardin said the board "received word that there was a possibility that the state might offer incentives to a host county," then met with state officials to "discuss the types of incentives or inducements that might be made available."

"What we gained from that meeting, was an 'understanding' of sorts. Our 'understanding' with state officials basically is this ... that the entire process of evaluation be open and accessible to the public at all times. That we, as county leaders, embark on an extensive educational process so that our citizens will be well informed of the benefits as well as the risks of such a project."

And, Bardin said, "it was agreed that should Edgecombe County become the host for the N.C. Waste Management Park, we would retain substantial local control in terms of monitoring safety standards, restricting or limiting certain types of wastes, and maintaining permanent advisory boards to scrutinize every aspect of the parks' operation.

"As a matter of fact," Barden said, the Board of Commissioners "adopted a hazardous waste and low level nuclear waste ordinance" some months ago "because we were told that environmental experts thought it was the right thing to do."

"The keys to our 'understanding' are: local involvement, local control and suitability. Suitability means whether or not Edgecombe County can pass all of the scientific examinations that the siting commission will put her through. It's not enough to say that you want to be designated as a host county. You've got to pass the test."

The county, Bardin said, "cannot make a deal to become the host for the N.C. Waste Management Park without your input and without participation, because that's part of the deal."

Bardin suggested that the county is "currently positioned on an economic precipice and we could topple either way," because "our budget requirements are expanding faster than our tax base."

But, he said, "We ... 'understand' that the state will accelerate the four-laning of U.S. 64 all the way through Edgecombe County to Bethel" if the county is selected to host the waste sites.

"But ... what interests me most about the waste management park is the revenue which our county will derive from it," Bardin said. "We can reasonably expect to increase our total revenues by over 30 percent," he told the gathering.

"The Edgecombe County Board of Commissioners believes that hosting the N.C. Waste Management Park would be the smart thing for us to do," according to Bardin.

Bardin, and the county's other four commissioners — J.O. Thorne, Vines Cobb, T.L. Walker and John Williams — urged residents to "keep an open mind" about the proposed waste facilities.

And the other board members suggested income from the waste treatment sites could be used to improve the county schools, fire and rescue service and programs offered by the Department of Social Services, as well as fund a countywide water system.

Tarboro Mayor Moses A. Ray also voiced support for the waste park. And he, too, suggested, "maintain an open mind."

Ebenhack, Chem-Nuclear's vice president, told the meeting that the firm is the "largest processor, packager and disposer" of low-level nuclear waste in the country, handling about 50 percent of all low-level radioactive waste generated in the United States.

Even so, Ebenhack said only about 70 acres of the Barnwell site's 210 acres have been used since the site opened in 1971.

He also said, on the average, 10 trucks a day enter the site five days a week.

And Ebenhack said the firm's 220 employees' average salary is about $26,000 a year.

A handout distributed at the Tarboro meeting suggested that the proposed low-level radioactive waste facility, on a 300-acre site, would begin operations in 1993, while the proposed comprehensive hazardous waste treatment facility would begin operations by 1994. The handout projected that the proposed regional solid waste management site — on 300 acres — would be placed in service about 1995.

Congress, in 1980, encouraged states to form low-level nuclear waste disposal compacts and develop regional disposal facilities. As a result, the Southeast Compact decided two years ago to develop a site in North Carolina.

South Carolina plans to close the Barnwell site in 1992, although residents of the Barnwell area reportedly do not oppose its continued operation.

The first of two public hearings scheduled in connection with the proposal to locate the waste sites in the county has been scheduled for May 26 at 7:30 p.m. at Edgecombe Community College's Tarboro campus.

Planning and Development, unveiled the revised plan to the council at Wednesday night's budget session workshop.

The revised application is proposing to rehabilitate 52 substandard units in West Greenville, 18 of which are owner occupied — a total of 35 percent owner occupied units.

Of the 50 units proposed in the original application, 11 were homeowner units — representing 22 percent.

"The proposed housing rehabilitation assistance is nearly proportionate to the percentages of owner and rental units in West Greenville," Harris said.

He said 10 substandard units in the Riverdale area were added to the original application, 70 percent of which are owner occupied.

Barbara Brockett-Fenner, a representative of the West Greenville Community Development Corp., said she was somewhat surprised but very pleased to see that some of the modifications had been made.

"I'd like to say congratulations that the city and the staff finally decided that the community was serious and that the staff was able to go back and make some changes," she said.

Ms. Brockett-Fenner said she hopes this will be the beginning of the West Greenville community and the city working hand in hand.

"I just hope the modifications are being presented as stated. That is, those funds that are being recommended will be very much a part of the community development block grant," she said.

Members of the council questioned Harris as to whether the revised grant application would stand less of a chance of receiving funds. Harris replied the configuration of the concentrated area might be questioned by grant officials, but said he felt the application has a pretty good shot at approval.

Harris told the council approximately 115 applications would be submitted to the state and probably about a third of those applications will receive an award.

Following the public hearing on the matter, Mrs. Shinn announced the council has identified at least $100,000 in projected revenue from the proposed sale of city-owned lots in the South Evans Community Development Block Grant Project and the mayor and the council has agreed that those funds be used to provide assistance to low and moderate income families in the west Greenville neighborhoods and in East Meadowbrook.

She also announced the intention of forming a citizen's advisory council which will represent the needs of all low and moderate income neighborhoods.

"Members of that group working with city staff will be asked to develop a priority listing of activities to be funded with identified funds," Ms. Shinn said.

Such funds might include additional monies from the CDBG program income, future CDBG grants, and any other sources of funds which may be identified to help improve those identified areas.

Bank Director

RALEIGH (AP) — Charles W. McHan has been removed as a director of Citizens Bank in Murphy because of charges of drug violations brought against him in Texas and North Carolina, the state commissioner of banks said.

Federal officials in El Paso, Texas, charged McHan May 5 with conspiracy to possess with intent to distribute more than 50 kilograms of marijuana. On May 10, McHan was arrested in Murphy and charged again with conspiracy with intent to distribute marijuana.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

No Proof

Koop's Report Lacks Credibility

Cigarettes have had more than adequate criticism in recent years, but lumping them in the class with heroin and cocaine as an addictive drug doesn't seem plausible.

Yet that is the thrust of a report by U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop. The report by the top health official of the nation did not draw on any new evidence. Instead, it was based on existing research which placed nicotine in with heroin and cocaine as an addictive substance.

The comparison brought a storm of protest from the tobacco interests and rightfully so. Comparing nicotine with heroin, considering the way that heroin ravages the human body, raises questions. Illegal drugs have made killers out of their users. They have driven some to prostitution and others to robbery, all in an effort to obtain the funds to support their habits. The withdrawal stories have been related countless times. It is likely any health worker who has seen heroin victims through the detoxification process would recognize the difference between heroin addiction and nicotine.

The danger is that respected health authorities can cry wolf to the degree that their message will be lost. By heaping undocumented blame on tobacco the nation tends to ignore some other health and environmental problems which are causing us serious health problems.

The bottom line, however, is that attacks on tobacco are going to continue. That tells North Carolina as a tobacco producing state that the product will continue to be viewed negatively by health authorities. That means the state must search for alternatives to tobacco production if it keeps its farms profitable.

At this time tobacco production is enjoying its most stable period in a number of years. This is a good time to do what is possible to develop other farm products to replace tobacco income when more difficult times come, as they will, for tobacco.

A Barometer

GUC Grows As City Expands

A barometer of area growth is the annual projected Greenville Utilities budget — and the proposed budget for 1988-89 fiscal year totals $92 million.

While that reflects revenues from local electric, gas and water customers, Greenville won't see that much money stay in the local economy. GUC purchases all the electric power it distributes and the budget calls for $58.28 million for that item alone.

Most of the remainder of the revenues will be spent on plant and equipment upkeep and expansion, salaries and other operating costs. To the city of Greenville, which owns Greenville Utilities, an important part of the budget is the projected turnover to the city of $1.8 million, up from $1.7 million in the current fiscal year. The city receives the funds in lieu of property taxes a privately owned utilities might pay and as return on investment. It is budgeted by the city government for municipal government expenses.

Various capital improvements are planned including replacement of one water tank and increasing the height of two other tanks. It is important that a utility have adequate amounts of capital to enable it to feasibly accommodate growth of a city. Without it, expansion can be crippled.

The Utilities budget will be consolidated with the municipal budget and approved by the City Council. Likely major changes won't be required.

The utilities budget tells us something about the area growth. As the community grows so does the demand for electricity, water, gas and sewage disposal. And they are demands that must be met to maintain economic development.

The utilities budget is expanding as the area is growing.

Big Cost, Small Results

'Interdiction cannot directly limit the amount of cocaine that enters the United States. There are simply too many skilled smugglers and too large a supply of the raw materials in the various source countries.'

WASHINGTON — There is a great deal of talk these days about prevention and treatment as being the best and perhaps the only answer to the nation's drug problem — that is, getting people to just not use drugs, or helping them to stop using them. But as far as federal spending goes, the greater emphasis by far continues to be on enforcement, and particularly on interdiction — cutting the flow of drugs — to the extent that now Congress wants to get the armed forces heavily involved.

In Fiscal Year 1988, the government allocated $560 million to preventing the use of drugs but nearly twice as much — $1.1 billion — to keeping drugs from entering the country. Of all federal drug enforcement expenditures, interdiction accounted for some 40 percent.

Despite the increased interdiction efforts, however, cocaine imports continue to rise. Some critics have ascribed the upsurge to inadequate management of the interdiction program. Frequent public battles center on the allocation of responsibility between the primary interdiction agencies: the Coast Guard and the Customs Service. The General Accounting Office regularly finds "a lack of coordination" that limits the effectiveness of the interdiction agencies.

Now both houses of Congress have passed legislation that would bring the military services more centrally into the interdiction effort.

The assumption that a better-funded and-or better-run interdiction effort would decrease cocaine consumption in the United States underlies the current debate. A recent RAND Corp. study of the effect of more interdiction resources, however, seriously questions this assumption.

The problem stems from the smugglers' ability to find different ways of bringing cocaine into the country, including private airplanes, commercial cargo planes, small sailing vessels and transshipment through Mexico followed by importation by private automobile or plane. As interdiction agencies raise the risk associated with any particular method of importing cocaine, the smugglers simply shift to others.

Thus, when the United States intensified air interdiction in southern Florida in the early 1980s, thanks to better radar coverage and interception resources, many smugglers shifted to transshipment through Mexico, bringing in the drug in private planes that took off from strips just south of the border. These planes risk interdiction for such a short time that the interdiction rate remains relatively low. Though southern Florida became a less attractive place to land cocaine, the availability of the drug in the United States did not diminish.

Interdiction cannot directly limit the amount of cocaine that enters the United States. There are simply too many skilled smugglers and too large a supply of the raw materials in the various source countries. Interdiction can only raise the costs of smuggling. If a higher proportion of drugs are seized, importers will have to charge more to cover the replacement cost of the seized drugs. Similarly, if pilots and couriers are at higher risk of being arrested and imprisoned, smugglers will have to pay higher wages to have their agents incur that risk.

Unfortunately, the cost of replacing imported cocaine is very low and the cost of transportation is even lower. A kilogram of cocaine that costs less than $10,000 in Colombia will sell for $250,000 on the streets of U.S. cities. Even if interdiction agencies seized half of cocaine imports rather than the estimated one-fifth they currently seize, the retail price of cocaine in the United States would climb by less than 5 percent.

Raising transportation costs looks even less promising as a way of increasing the price of the drug. Consider pilots who fly private planes loaded with cocaine. The Customs Air Branch seizes about 250 kilograms per plane on average. Assume that we make the chance of a pilot's being intercepted and going to prison so high that the pilot demands an additional $1 million for the flight. That adds only $4,000 to the cost of a kilo of cocaine. The cost of replacing a seized plane is even less, perhaps $500 per kilo.

Thus smuggling costs currently account for a small share of the total price of delivering cocaine to customers. The United States cannot make smuggling costs much higher, given the variety of methods available to smugglers and the difficulty of raising the risks of all these methods simultaneously. Yet interdiction affects cocaine consumption only by raising its retail price.

Military resources can do little to solve a central problem of interdiction: distinguishing smuggler from innocent. The interdiction agencies currently maintain an extensive list of suspected smuggling boats and have a communication system that allows the Coast Guard or Customs to quickly check on a sighted vessel. Yet of the boats boarded by the Coast Guard with prior information that the boat was suspected of carrying drugs, only one in eight actually turned out to have drugs aboard.

The discouraging fact is that almost any boat or plane can be used for drug smuggling; there is no distinctive profile. Nor do smugglers have to use the same equipment repeatedly, given how little it costs to acquire an adequate boat or plane. Military involvement may enable the interdictors to see and search more planes and vessels in some areas, but it will only lead to adaptation and a slight increase in total delivery costs.

In considering the desirability of increasing the interdiction effort, we should also note one of the negative effects of cocaine interdiction seizures, namely, the increase they generate in the export incomes of the source countries. Given that the demand for cocaine is probably very insensitive to changes in smugglers' costs, the greater the quantity seized, the more has to be shipped from the source countries and the larger the incomes of source-country producers and refiners.

This is not to say that the United States should abandon interdiction as an element of drug control strategy. Smugglers should fear getting caught and imprisoned.

But pouring much larger sums into the effort, particularly the procurement of equipment, offers little promise. Its effect can too easily be thwarted, with little increase in smugglers' costs, by bringing smaller bundles through ports of entry. We must look inside our borders, rather than beyond them, if we are to solve the U.S. cocaine problem.

Fodder For Election Year Debate

RALEIGH — Jim Gardner's eyes must have lit up like a roman candle last week when he heard that a legislative panel was recommending an 111 percent pay raise for state lawmakers. What more could an opposition candidate ask for in an election year.

Gardner, the Republican nominee for lieutenant governor, quickly called a press conference and blasted the Democratic legislative leadership as arrogant. Gardner called the Democrats "power-crats" and then hung the nickname of "Boss Hogg" on House Speaker Liston Ramsey.

The legislature's study panel on executive and legislative branch salaries recommended the pay raise because it concluded that legislators are paid far too little for the amount of work they do. Gardner said he didn't necessarily disagree that the job requires long hours and a lot of work. But before salaries are raised so drastically, he said, the legislature should become more time efficient and thus cut the workload.

Democratic candidates spurned the panel's recommendations immediately. Both Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, the Democratic candidate for governor, and Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, the candidate for lieutenant governor, said that while some pay raise was in order, 111 percent was far too much.

But the two Democrats may have been trying to put the chick back in the egg shell after it had hatched. The word of the pay raise was out, and will remain out for the rest of the campaign even though there is no chance on earth that the pay raise will be passed by the assembly this year. It will be soundly rejected, and Gardner and his running mate, Gov. Jim Martin, will be able to claim partial credit.

The recommendation also helps Gardner and Martin in another way. It gives them a Main Street story to use in their campaign of good government issues.

Ever since he came to office in 1985, Martin has been complaining about the governor's lack of a veto, about pork-barrel spending, about closed budget meetings and legislative arrogance. He waged an off-year campaign on this issue in 1986 and the results were less than smashing. He's waging the same campaign this year and Democrats are delighted. As one Democrat said cynically in a recent conversation, "The people are really up in arms about the supersub (budget committee). It's all they talk about down at my barber shop." Democrats don't think these issues excite the voters and they've been happy to see Martin and Gardner wasting their time on them.

And Gardner has been spending his time, at least, on them. Gardner has spent much of May outlining positions on the budget writing process, the election of lieutenant governors and efficiency in legislature. It's not very exciting stuff.

But the Democrats may have given Martin and Gardner just the excitement they need to get the good government issues across. The man in the street may not understand the nuances of zero-based budgeting, but he sure understands a legislator's vote to double his own salary.

The Republicans are right when they claim that there is great arrogance in the Democratic legislative leadership. (There's a bit in their own leadership, too, of course.) But to this point, that arrogance was obvious mostly in arcane legislative process stories. It takes great arrogance to support such a tremendous increase in salaries only six months before an election. It's almost like daring the people to throw you out of office, thinking all the time that you're too important for that to happen.

Strength For Today

Anyone who has raised children knows the experience of absolute terror of thinking about the future and what it might hold. A parent looks at his child and shudders at what the future might bring. As Jesus was preparing to be crucified he prayed that we might be kept safe from the evil one ... that we might live in the world but not be tainted by the evil in it. Of course, nothing can be done to control the future, and no life is lived without tragedy. All we can do for ourselves and for our children is to live a life connected to God who alone provides the inner resources we summon in evil or anguished moments.

Good News Might Not Help

Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even good economic news doesn't seem to cheer people up these days, and that could prove to be bad news for Vice President George Bush.

The latest example came Tuesday when the stock market declined sharply — after receiving news of a substantial improvement in the latest trade figures.

That bearish response to good tidings was enough to make Bush wonder what it will take to get a favorable political bounce out of an expanding economy.

"We have an economic situation any incumbent ought to just dream about having," said Eddie Mahe, a Republican political consultant not involved in any presidential campaign.

But at the same time, he said, national polls are recording "a sense of unease, a sense that it's time for a change."

Consider the trade figures. The government reported that in March, the trade deficit dropped more than $4 billion as exports increased by 23 percent.

When trade figures a month earlier showed an increase in the deficit, the market dropped 101 points — demonstrating the readiness of investors to believe the worst. It was a disappointing deficit report that triggered the 500-point market drop last October.

Yet, the reaction on Wall Street to good news on the trade front was a drop of 21 points in the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks.

The same day the new trade figures came out, a CBS News-New York Times poll said Democrat Michael Dukakis was leading Bush by 10 points in a national survey of 1,056 registered voters. A poll two months earlier had the two candidates in a dead heat with Bush favored by 46 percent and Dukakis by 45 percent.

It certainly wasn't the economy that went sour for Bush in the period between those surveys.

Consider the recent statistics:

•The unemployment rate in April was 5.4 percent, the lowest since June 1974.

•Business sales climbed 1.9 percent in March and construction spending climbed 1.5 percent, the biggest increases in both areas in a year.

•Even with recent increases in energy prices, the inflation rate remains below 5 percent.

Bush tried to brush off the latest poll by comparing it to surveys that showed him running behind in New Hampshire just before last winter's Republican primary.

"I was 8 points back and I won by 10," he told reporters in California. "They were off by 18 points."

"I don't worry about it. The election is 5½ months away," he said.

But, of course, he worries about such statistics. Any politician would.

One theory common among Republican and Democratic political analysts is that the administration's economic story is being obscured by the attention received by the trials and tribulations of Attorney General Edwin Meese III and by public concern over whether Panamanian strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega will be let off the hook on drug charges.

When Bush was asked if he thought the Meese and Noriega affairs were contributing to his negative ratings in the polls, the vice president replied, "You may have put your finger on something there."

But before going too far with the poll figures, it must be said that such numbers six months before the election are not reliable indicators of how people will vote in November.

They are just a warning to Bush that things aren't going his way at this early stage of the contest.

They also reflect that because the race for the Republican presidential nomination ended early, Dukakis has been much more in the public eye for the past six weeks.

Week after week, the Massachusetts governor is portrayed as the victor over Jesse Jackson in yet another Democratic primary.

As one GOP analyst, speaking on condition of anonymity, put it, "Every time Dukakis wins another primary, he grows an inch."

At the same time, Bush is coasting unopposed through those same primaries, his victories getting only perfunctory notice from a public knowing the suspense went out of the GOP race on Super Tuesday.

Democratic pollster Peter Hart said Bush is suffering because on the Republican side "there wasn't enough of a campaign, so there wasn't enough of a dialogue." He said voters never reached the point of getting a clear view of Bush.

That problem should be dissipated when the battle is truly joined in the fall, when voters get a chance to compare Bush and Dukakis as the men between whom they must choose when they vote for president. Dissipated, that is, if Bush finally escapes Reagan's shadow and is able to convince voters that he is strong enough to lead.

As for the bearish attitude of the country, analysts in both major parties use the same terms.

Richard Wirthlin, Reagan's pollster, has said that his surveys show Bush is behind at this point and that they also show most Americans believe the country is headed in the wrong direction.

"There's a lot of apprehension," said Hart. A common attitude, he said, is: "Today's okay, but I'm worried about tomorrow."

Rushed Judgment Misdirected

When a future generation assembles to revise our Constitution, let it give special attention to the function of the Fifth Estate — the intelligence experts. It is this new class that, perhaps more than the press, shapes public opinion. It is they who issue the judgments that become binding truths for the executive and the legislators. Most important, it is the innocent analysts who can lead us into war.

Consider our most recent hostilities with Iran. Several days before the "measured retaliation" for the damage that was done to a U.S. frigate by an Iranian mine in the Persian Gulf, the press quoted "intelligence sources" who linked Iran to the Kuwaiti jet hijacking. The plane had picked up munitions and terrorists in Mashad, its first stop, they said. The reports received sustenance from the similar assertions of Yasser Arafat, a bitter foe of the Tehran regime, who was quoted approvingly by the American press for perhaps the first time in his career.

Overlooked were the facts: Tehran had been reluctant to allow the plane to land, had condemned the hijacking, had permitted a team from Kuwait (which is in a virtual state of war with Iran) to come in for negotiations and had hurried the aircraft out of the country. The context also was ignored. Why would Tehran want a hijacking? The now-more-pragmatic regime has worked for several years to cultivate a respectable reputation with an international community whose attitudes have been poisoned by real and imagined misdeeds in Iran. A better international reputation for Iran is essential to block an arms embargo and perhaps to win some support for an end to the Iraqi war on Iran's terms. Blame for engineering a hijacking would defeat those purposes.

Blaming Iran for a new act of terrorism would, however, serve the purpose of convincing the American public that no punishment can be too severe for the despicable, hated clerical regime. Here it is well to recall Adm. John M. Poindexter's disinformation plots against Libya and how we bombed that country on the basis of firm intelligence reports, since proved by German authorities to be incorrect, that attributed a Berlin cafe bombing to Libyan agents.

We collect intelligence on all countries on the globe. Curiously, the press can collect from official sources intelligence insights only about our enemies.

American policy in the war is not to be neutral. It is to help Iraq to prevail on its terms. Thus we ignore Iraqi violations of the rules of war and of human rights. We take advantage of every opportunity, whether real or contrived, to increase pressure on Iran. We give tangible assistance to Iraq and embargo Iran.

Is it a wise policy to back the autocratic regime in Baghdad, which we branded terrorist a few years ago? Will the gratitude won from Arab rulers outweigh and outlast the rising tide of Islamic politics in a region becoming inflamed by the Palestinian revolt? What loss of life, property and prestige do we risk by becoming directly involved in a regional conflict? Is it sensible to make more difficult the rebuilding of a relationship with a country as important as we once considered Iran? These are questions that we would expect "intelligence experts" to address were they not so fully engaged in public relations for policy-makers.

Pen Vs. The Sword

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — Stripped of all its frills, three simple letters of the alphabet are probably behind the apartheid government's latest onslaught against the alternative media in South Africa, by far the toughest attack in our recent history.

For many blacks in this country and for some whites, these letters spell a big name in South African politics. But to the National Party government of Pieter W. Botha and to many whites, these three letters constitute a "revolutionary onslaught." As far as the government is concerned, the alternative press is part of a conspiracy to legitimize the name of this group of revolutionary bandits. I speak, of course, of the ANC, the African National Congress.

It's not always easy to make sense of the political madness of this government. But it appears that Botha is convinced that the alternative press is a partner in a conspiracy with the democratic movement. Hence the government is hellbent on eliminating the alternative press and crushing the infrastructure of the democratic movement.

Last week South, a weekly newspaper, was banned for one month. It was the second publication to be banned under state-of-emergency regulations. Had it not been for the state of emergency due to expire on June 10, the banning of South would definitely have been for a longer period.

There is little doubt that the state of emergency will be reestablished after June 10. It appears that more stringent press restrictions will be promulgated to make it possible for the minister of home affairs and communications, Stoffel Botha, to act more swiftly against publications that offend the government—to streamline the present drawn-out "warning procedures." It is not inconceivable that the minister will make provisions in the new regulations to enable him to act against papers that have already been banned without going through formalities. Hence it is possible that New Nation and South may be summarily banned after June 10 for periods of three months or longer.

We have learned from bitter experience not to put anything beyond this government. In fact, we have come to expect the worst of it. Many people will undoubtedly disagree with this assessment; many believe that the situation in this country does not warrant criticism. This skepticism is actually symptomatic of a disease in our country that allows for some, even outsiders visiting this country, to say that "things are not really that bad." It is symptomatic of a serious illness in our society that few voices rise in protest when a newspaper is shut down.

When any government embarks on such a vicious onslaught to muzzle newspapers, something must be fundamentally wrong in that society. There must surely be something to hide. And if the apartheid government has nothing to be scared of, nothing to cover up, why is it so scared of the truth?

In Nazi Germany, when Hitler

wanted to cover up the horrors of the Holocaust, one of the first things that he did was to manipulate the media. Many of the newspapers and foreign correspondents were aware of the impending disaster, but they did not truthfully inform the world of what was happening. They chose survival ahead of telling the true story.

In our country today we have a similar situation. Mainstream commercial newspapers have been intimidated into toeing the line by the closure of smaller alternative newspapers. Trivia, sensation and sex have become the order of the day. Foreign correspondents fear losing their work permits. Alternative papers like New Nation and Weekly Mail should be complimented on their courageous stands of not compromising the truth in favor of survival.

All of the alternative papers that have either been shut down or warned stand accused of promoting the ANC. The government wants these three letters obliterated from our newspapers' columns. But the ANC is a force that has to be reckoned with. To those who are serious about a lasting peace in our country, the ANC cannot be excluded. Thus it is important that the ANC be heard and that we reflect what is happening within the minds of ANC leaders Oliver Tambo and Govan Mbeki, just as we try to analyze what goes on in the mind of P.W. Botha.

State Loan Program To Help Rural Industries

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Small and medium-sized companies struggling to create new jobs in 91 rural counties will have a new source of financing under a $100 million loan program backed by the state's Rural Economic Development Center.

"What we seek to do today is provide dollars to entrepreneurs with good ideas," William Friday, the chairman of the center, said Wednesday.

The North Carolina Enterprise Corp. will combine investments from banks, savings and loans, utilities and other businesses, plus funds from state government.

By pooling their resources and spreading risk, the investors will be able to provide seed capital for companies that could not obtain conventional financing, officials said.

"Until now, if a local bank could not meet all the financing needs of a sound business idea it had to say no," said Vincent Lowe Jr., president-elect of the North Carolina Bankers' Association and vice-chairman of the rural center. "Now, the bank has a place to turn."

He likened the new corporation to the North Carolina Reinsurance Facility, through which insurance companies provide auto liability coverage to high-risk drivers who cannot get one firm to insure them.

North Carolina's rural communities have suffered in recent years — in contrast to the boom experienced by the state's urban centers — largely because of a decline in traditional manufacturing employment and small farms.

The North Carolina Enterprise Corp. will target loans and investments toward the 91 counties without a city of 50,000 people or more, said Billy Ray Hall, president of the Rural Economic Development Center. Plans call for it to begin operating by the end of this year.

Most loans probably would be in the $100,000 to $200,000 range, but the corporation could make loans up to $1 million, Lowe said.

Friday, the former University of North Carolina president, said he hoped the new corporation would grow beyond its $100 million start-up size.

The $100 million will consist of $20 million in stock purchases by businesses, $20 million in state investments and $60 million established through lines of credit from participating financial institutions.

Under current state law, taxpayer dollars can be used only for investments with successful track records. State Treasurer Harlan Boyles said he would ask the Legislature next month for permission to invest in the new corporation. The investments could take the form of common stock, preferred stock or debentures, he said.

The Legislature will not make direct appropriations to the corporation, Friday said.

When news reports of the impending announcement surfaced last week, Gov. Jim Martin said he could not support the use of taxpayer money for the financing pool.

After details of the plan were made public Wednesday, gubernatorial spokesman Jim Sughrue issued a cautious statement saying the loan fund "might be acceptable to Governor Martin."

"It seems to be pretty consistent with the administration's ideas," Sughrue said. "The proposal would limit the state's involvement to a treasurer's investment. That's much better than using appropriated funds. The fact that the funds would operate as a private corporation is also a point in its favor."

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, who appointed the commission that conceived the idea of the Rural Economic Development Center, hailed the creation of the North Carolina Enterprise Corp., saying it would foster "growth from within" the state.

"This proposal is an outstanding example of how the public and private sector can work together to develop a cooperative program," Jordan said.

Agriculture Commissioner said he was "delighted" by the program and that it would have "real economic teeth" to assist the state's farmers.

Legislators Cut Pope Short At 'Non-Partisan' Hearing

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Legislative leaders say they cut short a presentation by Commerce Secretary Claude Pope because he injected politics into budget deliberations that are supposed to be non-partisan.

"This ain't no political rally," state Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, said Wednesday. Royall said he asked Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, co-chairman of the Joint Appropriations Committee, to cut off Pope's remarks after seeing from a prepared statement that he intended to speak at length about Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan's plan to eliminate the department and 1987's economic statistics.

Watkins said many of the committee members seemed uncomfortable when Pope spoke about the Jordan plan.

"I was calmly asking him to keep his presentation on the expansion budget," Watkins said. "I wasn't a bit upset with him. I just felt like it was improper and why get some people excited."

Pope was prepared to recite glowing statistics on North Carolina's economy in 1987, a performance Gov. Jim Martin frequently trumpets on the campaign trail. Martin, a Republican, is running for re-election against Jordan.

"We are not interested in last year's record," Watkins said, interrupting Pope as he tried to read from a prepared outline during the third day of committee hearings on Martin's proposed budget for 1988-89. Watkins told Pope to discuss only the budget increase sought by the Department of Commerce for the next fiscal year.

"The only reason I had planned to give a little history, and you can read it in the handout I have given you, is ..." Pope responded. Watkins interrupted again.

"Sir, most of the people know more about the history, about the General Assembly than you do," Watkins said. "And the Commerce Department." Finally, Pope proceeded with his spending requests.

His exchange with Watkins came after Pope opened his presentation with a jab at Jordan, who has made replacing the Department of Commerce with a public-private corporation a major plank in his campaign platform.

Jordan contends the department, while partly responsible for the state's strong growth in recent years, has outlived its usefulness. He warns of economic stagnation unless it is overhauled.

"I guess I have to be honest with you and say that the support that I have heard for that activity (Jordan's plan) comes from those economic developers and secretaries of commerce located in all of our competitor states," Pope said. "I think maybe they're responsible for drumming up this effort."

J. Ward Purrington, Martin's legislative liaison, said the Democratic leadership wanted to prevent the public from hearing about the Commerce Department's accomplishments. "It looks like he (Pope) didn't fit their script so they wouldn't let him talk."

Pope said in an interview he was "a little surprised" by Watkins' actions. "I guess it was too much to think that I could receive a little praise or a little honor for what we've accomplished."

He said he hoped Jordan's proposal would not harm prospects for approval of his budget request, and Watkins said it would not.

"You can't drag your feet for a year contemplating something that might never occur," Watkins said.

The proposed Commerce Department spending increase includes several items rejected by the Legislature in 1987, along with others developed since then.

Among them: $968,927 to expand the industrial development program, adding 14 positions to enhance field operations; $498,014 for travel and tourism operations; and $865,600 for five new positions to beef up the state's overseas marketing efforts including opening new offices in Hong Kong and South Korea.

Royall criticized a proposal to open a two-person state Sports Development Office to attract money-making sports events to North Carolina.

Broom-Wielding Driver Fired

RALEIGH (AP) — A bus driver for the Wake County school system was fired Wednesday after she struck unruly students on her bus with a broom, authorities said.

Annie Jordan, 31, was driving the bus about 4 p.m. when some of the 30 to 35 West Millbrook Middle School students on board became disruptive and loud, said Lynne Garrison, spokeswoman for the school system.

"She pulled off onto the side of the road, and the students began getting out of the seats into the aisle," Ms. Garrison said. "They opened the emergency door at the rear of the bus, and at that point she went down the aisle with a broom trying to contain and control the students and get them back into their seats."

Bakker's Former Secretary Goes Before Grand Jury

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The former executive assistant to Jim Bakker, who reportedly received a bonus in 1986 for more than twice her salary, is testifying before a federal grand jury investigating the finances of PTL.

Shirley Fulbright testified Wednesday and was expected to return to the witness stand today.

"Ms. Fulbright has been at the portals of power at PTL for over a decade," said her attorney, Kenneth Andresen. "She witnessed the dreams become realities. She has a deep affection for the organization and for those who have worked and who continue to work there."

"Obviously, she'll be questioned about things personal secretaries know about. But it's important to remember she was a secretary and not a decision maker."

Andresen declined to say whether his client had been given immunity to testify.

"Throughout this entire process, she has always told the truth and will continue to do so," he said.

The Charlotte Observer has reported that Ms. Fulbright received about $160,000 in 1986, including bonuses of about $110,000. During the first three months of 1987, she received about $50,000 in salary and bonuses.

Bakker, who resigned in March 1987 amid a sex-and-money scandal, got $1.1 million in bonuses during his last 15 months as the television ministry's president and chairman.

The grand jury is investigating Bakker and several of his associates at Fort Mill, S.C., based PTL to determine whether they engaged in wire, tax and mail fraud. Specifically, federal investigators are trying to determine whether the former PTL officials solicited donations for one purpose and used them for another. Official minutes of PTL's board don't document some bonuses paid to Jim and Tammy Bakker and Bakker's top deputy, Richard Dortch. Separate notes, attached to the minutes and signed by Ms. Fulbright, itemized the bonuses.

Three former board members have said they don't remember authorizing all the bonuses.

Federal prosecutors already have subpoenaed original notes and recordings of board of directors meetings.

Ms. Fulbright is the second witness to appear before the grand jury this week. The Rev. Aimee Cortese, a New York minister who reportedly paid Jessica Hahn $10,000 to silence her after her sexual liaison with Bakker, testified for two days beginning Monday.

Ms. Cortese is a former PTL board member.

Robeson Merger Certified

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — The vote merging the five school systems in Robeson County has been certified by the state Board of Elections, but the battle over the controversial proposal is not over because one group is seeking a federal injunction.

The state Board of Elections has directed the Robeson County Board of Elections to certify results of the March 8 referendum in which voters approved merger.

The county board is expected to certify the election this week.

But the 15-member interim school board designed to oversee the transition from five systems to a single system may be further delayed in starting its work.

The board was supposed to take office on April 1, but was delayed by the appeal. Now, the Lumberton City Board of Education, which has long opposed merger, is seeking a federal injunction to prevent the interim board from taking any action until the school board election plan set up in the merger gets preclearance from the U.S. Justice Department.

Man Freed After 56 Days In Jail

GREENSBORO (AP) — After 56 days in jail, Garrell McClung says he was beginning to wonder if his nightmarish brush with the South Carolina justice system would ever end.

"That's about as close to the devil as you can get," a shaken McClung said Wednesday, following prolonged hugs for his wife Vanessa and stepdaughter Jennifer at the regional airport. "I thought I was going to stay in there a very long time."

McClung, 31, of Greensboro was charged, despite strong evidence to the contrary, with the murder of a Horry County woman and jailed without bond while investigators ignored family protests of his innocence.

Horry County Solicitor Jim Dunn dropped the first-degree murder charge against McClung Wednesday morning, saying police had pinned the murder of Lucille Fowler of Socastee, S.C., on the wrong man.

"If the amount of investigation done since Garrell McClung's arrest had been done before his arrest, he would not have been arrested," Dunn said in a statement issued Wednesday. "The fact that a warrant was issued and Garrell McClung was arrested should not be held against him in any way whatsoever. Every person charged is conclusively presumed to be innocent until and unless proven guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. Based on the evidence before me, Garrell McClung is innocent."

For McClung, crying at times and clutching a Bible in his hand, the greeting from his family and about a dozen friends at Piedmont Triad International Airport proved they believed that all along.

"I've lost a lot of faith in the justice system," said Martha Long, a family friend. "But today restored some of it."

McClung, a general contractor, was arrested March 23 and charged with first-degree murder in Ms. Fowler's death. The 54-year-old grandmother was found buried in a shallow grave near her home Sept. 7, about 24 hours after her family reported her missing.

Police say she was beaten to death.

Whale Calf Goes To Florida

FORT FISHER, N.C. (AP) — Sophia, an orphan pygmy sperm whale that washed ashore with its mother in Long Beach, has been flown to a new home in Florida, where it should survive, marine experts say.

The calf, which was named Sophia before aquarium workers learned it was a male, spent Tuesday night tied to a stretcher and was released into a pond behind the North Carolina Aquarium Wednesday morning.

"It's stable now, considering it's out of the water, away from its mother, and had to ride in a truck and stay on a stretcher all night," said Paul Barrington, the curator of the aquarium at Fort Fisher. "We got his circulation going by running him through the water a little."

The calf and a 10-foot female whale beached about 2:15 p.m. Tuesday. The larger whale was dying of an unknown cause. Veterinarians killed the whale, which was sent to the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, where a necropsy will be performed.

Sophia ate small herring and small portions of squid Wednesday. He had eaten about three pounds of food by noon with aquarium employees helping his appetite by placing the food up to his mouth. Staffers were trying to keep the calf relaxed to allow the food to digest properly.

A veterinarian injected the whale, which was slightly injured in the beaching, with antibiotics and vitamins.

On Wednesday night, WRAL-TV hired an airplane to take Sophia to a new home at Sea World near Orlando, Fla. The mammal was expected to arrive in Florida early today.

Barrington said the calf showed no signs of disease or severe injury.

"It has some minor cuts and bruises. Barnacles and crusted pilings may have contributed to those lacerations," Barrington said.

Experts could only guess what may have caused the whales to beach. Pygmy sperm whales are not common in the area, and are usually found in temperate and tropical waters worldwide. More timid than most whales, pygmy sperm whales usually travel in pods of 10, Barrington said.

"The mother whale might have been hurt or disoriented," Frank Schwartz, a member of the Western Atlantic Whale Consortium, said in a telephone interview from Morehead City. "Of course the young one will always stay with the mother."

Bargain Hunters Seek Clothes Pile

PEACHLAND, N.C. (AP) — An acre-wide mountain of cast-off clothing, offered free in a pasture to bargain-hunters for a $5 parking fee, could become North Carolina's hottest tourist attraction this weekend, authorities say.

"We have been besieged with calls from all over the state wanting to know how people can get to the free clothing," said Sheriff Tommy Allen of Anson County. He said his office has received requests for directions to the clothing pile from North Carolina cities as far away as Durham, Burnsville, Raeford, Fayetteville and Albemarle.

Since last weekend, when news of the clothing spread throughout the state, a steady stream of bargain-hunters has appeared on the dusty road leading to this southern North Carolina pasture, authorities said.

The "shoppers" climb atop the mounds of clothes that have been piled in the pasture for about three weeks and sort through to see if there's anything they want. They park $5 to park to park, then haul off all the clothes they want for free, said Lee "Red" Wright, a used-car dealer who owns the farm where the clothes are stored.

Wright has refused to say where the garments came from. But the sheriff said the clothing cost Wright nothing and was hauled away from North Atlantic International Ltd. of Bronx, N.Y., a second-hand clothing exporter. The firm purchases discards from charitable organizations.

Allen said there is apparently nothing illegal about giving the clothing away or charging the $5 parking fee. And Anson County Health Department officials said the operation will be considered a flea market as long as no clothes are buried on the site.

But Carol Ann Gibson, Anson County environmental health coordinator, said the clothing would eventually have to be buried in a legally permitted landfill.

So far, heavy thunderstorms have bypassed the site, local officials said.

Canister

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — A radioactive canister discovered accidentally last week in a Watauga County school will be turned over to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers for disposal, state officials said.

"Corps of Engineers officials have indicated they will take it off our hands, and it will be in the state's best interests to let them do that," said Dayne Brown, chief of the radiation protection section of the state Department of Human Resources. But he said his department would keep the canister for a while to measure its radiation levels.

The container — about the size of a can of soup — was discovered May 10 in a storeroom at Watauga High School in Boone. An Appalachian State University professor was demonstrating for a science class an instrument for measuring radioactivity when the canister turned up, officials said.

The canister has been identified as a Corps of Engineers "metascope," used during World War II to help people see at night.

The document will be forwarded to the legislature, which requested it last year.

North Visit

RALEIGH (AP) — Former Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North, under criminal indictment for his role in the Iran-contra affair, is scheduled to come to Raleigh in June to campaign for Samuel A. Wilson III, the Republican nominee for attorney general.

William T. Powell Jr., Wilson's campaign manager, said North would appear at a fund-raiser for Wilson June 25.

North has been indicted on 13 counts — including obstructing Congress, obstructing justice, making false statements, accepting a gratuity and converting for personal use almost $4,300 in travelers' checks drawn on government funds — arising from the Iran-contra affair.

Judge Resigns

RALEIGH (AP) — Edwin Preston Jr. has resigned as Wake County's senior resident Superior Court Judge, citing a cancerous condition that he said had taken a "significant turn for the worst."

In a letter to Gov. Jim Martin this week, Preston said he was leaving reluctantly on the advice of doctors who have been treating him since he was first diagnosed as having cancer more than two years ago.

Preston, who was elected a resident Superior Court judge in 1974, became senior resident judge when James Pou Bailey retired in July 1985. Preston's term was scheduled to expire Dec. 31, 1990.

Chadbourn Rift

CHADBOURN, N.C. (AP) — A dispute between Chadbourn's white town manager and black police chief has led to the suspension of the chief, and Mayor Dick Tyler said he fears the action will divide the town again.

Willard Harris, who works part time as Chadbourn's town manager, suspended Police Chief Kelly Rogers on Tuesday for four days without pay after Rogers refused to comply with Harris' requests for changes in the 10-member police department, Tyler said.

"I guess you can sum it up in one word — it was classified to me as 'insubordination,'" Tyler said. "It all depends on what side you're sitting on as to whether it's insubordination or not."

Rogers' appointment in March 1987 as Chadbourn's first black police chief by then-Town Manager Steve Wyatt, who is white, touched off a racial controversy that led to Wyatt's firing by the white-dominated Town Council.

Suicide

WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — A man found dead in his cell at the Wilkes County Jail committed suicide, county coroner John Blackburn said.

Billy Dean Stewart, 39, of the Cricket community, was found Monday night hanging from the bars of his cell, said chief jailer Herb Wyatt. A rope had been improvised from strips of cloth torn from Stewart's shirt, Wyatt said.

College

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Board of Community Colleges has given Mitchell Community College 60 days to come up with a plan to address racial problems that have plagued the Statesville school for five years.

Board members on Wednesday also ordered the college to provide "relevant and pertinent" information about the racial troubles on campus.

If no progress is made, the board could consider cutting off the school's funds, said Robert W. Scott, president of the state's community college system, said Wednesday.

The problems involve a series of anonymous letters containing racial slurs written on school stationery that have been sent to at least five black faculty and staff members, officials said.

Dead Fish

TOPSAIL ISLAND, N.C. (AP) — An estimated 100,000 dead fish, apparently washed ashore by a storm, littered about 14 miles of beach Wednesday from Surf City to the New River Inlet.

The menhaden, an oily fish used for animal feed, were netted Monday near the Surf City Fishing Pier by a boat owned by Beaufort Fisheries, officials said.

"We think the nets were ripped by coral and that's why we lost the catch," Julie Wheatly, manager of Beaufort Fisheries, said Wednesday.

Wheatly said his company has hired a construction company to remove the dead fish from the beaches and hopes to have all the fish removed by Thursday.

Literacy

RALEIGH (AP) — Literacy classes at North Carolina's community colleges should be reduced to fewer than 10 students, and more full-time instructors should be hired to improve services, a new study says.

"Having 10 and 15 and 20 people in the class is not working very well," Yvonne Brannon, one of the study's authors, told the N.C. Board of Community Colleges on Wednesday.

The study was conducted by N.C. State University's Center for Urban Affairs and Community Services, which examined literacy services at eight North Carolina community col-

Almanac Rates 'Actuary' As Your Best Job Choice

By ELIZABETH SHOGREN
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — If you've got a big brain, a yen for the indoors and little love of glamour or rawboned rigor, then America has just the right job for you, according to the publishers of "The Jobs Rated Almanac."

Ranked as the best of 250 American jobs is a career few children are likely to have heard of, much less name: an actuary. Next are computer programmer, computer systems analyst, mathematician and statistician.

Typical, more glamorous children's career choices like being a dancer, doctor or astronaut also fared poorly in the almanac's overall listing because they rated at or near the bottom in at least one of the six ranking criteria.

According to the almanac, published this month by American References Inc. of Chicago, the worst job listed in the ranking was migrant worker, which rated near or at the bottom in all six of the criteria.

The second worst — commercial fishing — also was ranked low because of long hours, seasonal work, high government regulation and tough physical demands. That was followed by construction worker, roofer, seaman, dairy farmer, roustabout, lumberjack, cowboy and professional football player.

Almanac Editor and Publisher Les Krantz identified the criteria used to judge jobs as salary, stress, work environment, outlook, security and physical demands.

"Most of the best paying jobs are performed in highly competitive and physically confining environments for long hours," Krantz said. "Don't expect a cushy job if you want to earn more than $50,000 a year."

But ultimately, he added, "The job best for an individual is the one the person likes the best, and that depends a lot on someone's priorities."

Astronauts have the worst working environment, with surgeons second, the book concluded. Firefighters have the longest work weeks and their jobs are the most stressful and physically demanding, it said.

But actuaries — who interpret statistics to determine expected personal losses due to sickness or disability and material losses from disasters — did well in all six categories.

A 23-year old actuary in training, Mike Vaughan, said he agreed with the assessment.

"Once the (training) exams are over, I'd say the stress would be pretty much non-existent, and the job market is so open I could just walk out and find a new job in a day," he said.

Vaughan, who works for Allstate Insurance Co. in suburban Northbrook, said his $31,000 annual salary "was probably 20 to 25 percent higher than any other job I could have gotten, and it goes up faster."

William Hermes, a fisherman for 47 years, said he wasn't bothered by his job's low ranking and couldn't imagine making a living any other way.

"It's the only job I've ever wanted," said Hermes, 62, owner of Big Bay DeNoc Fisheries in Garden, Mich. "You're out in the open, you're your own boss and you don't have to answer to nobody."

Krantz said most of the information for the almanac comes from the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, the Department of Commerce and the Census Bureau, but tracking down some statistics, like a cowboy's wages, took some legwork.

"We literally called cattle ranches and they told us: 'Well, if you have a good horse you can make about $150 a week,'" he said.

Pay Hike Could Cost Jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House has entered the congressional fray over a proposed increase in the minimum wage, arguing that it could cost 850,000 jobs while adding to the budget deficit.

Beryl W. Sprinkel, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisors, says even the smallest increase under consideration, raising the minimum wage from $3.35 to $4.65 per hour by 1992, would cost 600,000 jobs.

Those losses "would be concentrated among younger, less skilled and minority workers," he said.

A chart supplied by Sprinkel indicates an increase in the minimum wage to $5.05 an hour over four years would eliminate 850,000 jobs by 1992.

Legislation to raise the minimum wage $4.65 by 1991 was introduced last year, but the House Education and Labor Committee raised the figure to $5.05 per hour over four years. The original bill proposed by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., is pending in the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, which Kennedy chairs.

"Increasing the minimum wage would have adverse effects on employment, unemployment, economic output and on the budget deficit," Sprinkel said in a letter to Rep. Thomas E. Petri, R-Wisc., a committee member.

"Increasing the federal minimum wage would do little to help the working poor; under 20 percent of minimum wage workers are poor and many would lose employment," Sprinkel wrote in the letter, released Wednesday. "The direct impact on the budget deficit would be about $2 billion, due to both increased budget outlays and reduced revenues."

He also said consumers would have to absorb roughly $13 billion more in higher costs for the products that minimum-wage workers help to produce.

Democrats have argued that a minimum wage would have a minimal effect on unemployment and the economy, and Kennedy denounced Sprinkel's findings in a statement released Wednesday night.

Senate by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, and in the House by Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., which would require banks to cash government checks of customers with no accounts once their identification has been verified.

August Zinsser III, representing the American Bankers Association, told the committee that the legislation would subject banks to large fraud losses and "is premature, inappropriate and unfair to depository institutions."

Proponents of the legislation, including Ms. Miller, denied that fraud would be a problem.

Group Backs Check-Cashing Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Banks should be required to cash government checks for the elderly and the poor even if they have no accounts with the financial institutions, an advocacy group told lawmakers.

Peggy Miller, representing the Consumer Federation of America, told a Senate subcommittee on Wednesday that people on Social Security and welfare would be willing to pay a fee of $2 for the check cashing service by banks, even though legislation does not call for it.

Ms. Miller provided the Senate Banking subcommittee on consumer affairs with statistics showing that check cashing outlets, including liquor stores, often charge exorbitant fees for the service because of the unwillingness of banks to provide it.

She said check cashing outlets and unlicensed community locations often charge as high as 20 percent to 30 percent for personal checks, 10 percent for money orders and 6 percent for government checks.

"They can do so because they are vendors of last resort," she said. "Many of their customers, including our elderly, have no where else to go."

Ms. Miller said her group supported legislation introduced in the Senate Rejects Helms' Bid To Hold Up Missile Treaty

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has overwhelmingly rejected the first conservative attack on the U.S.-Soviet medium-range missile treaty and backers say the chamber should now move quickly to ratify the pact.

In a key early test, the Senate voted 91-6 against a point of order raised by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who claimed that Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev wasn't authorized to sign the treaty and the Senate should therefore not ratify it.

After that tally late Wednesday, Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said, "I think the vote we've just had is an indication of the strong support we have for this treaty. Let's get on with it."

Dole said he hopes the treaty is ratified before next Wednesday morning, when President Reagan leaves for his Moscow summit meeting with Gorbachev.

Sen. James Exon, D-Neb., agreed with Dole. "Let's do our work. Let's not fool around, which I think we are doing to a large extent on the amendment that was just defeated. ... I don't know what benefit there is in waiting until after the summit begins to ratify this treaty."

"There is no cause for further, untimely delay," said Exon.

Sen. Robert Stafford, R-Vt., said "the American people want the president to have a ratified treaty in his briefcase when he meets" Gorbachev.

The Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces treaty, signed Dec. 8 by Reagan and Gorbachev, calls for the elimination of all missiles with a range of 300 miles to 3,400 miles.

Helms contended that because Gorbachev was signing as the general secretary of the Soviet Union's Communist Party, he represented a political party and not the Soviet state.

"This document now at the desk is not binding on the Soviet Union. It is only an agreement between the president of the United States and the head of a foreign political party," said Helms.

Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, agreed with Helms, noting that "if Gorbachev is removed from power someday, they could easily come back and say he was only the head of the Communist Party and therefore the treaty is invalid."

But Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., responded that "there is no substance whatsoever to the claim that the treaty was not legally signed. ... Treaty making is a matter of common sense and wise judgment."

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said there was no question that Gorbachev was representing his nation when he signed the pact.

"It is clear that Mr. Gorbachev and no one else in that delegation was the chief representative of the Soviet Union," Pell said.

Earlier, Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said the treaty can be approved before Reagan goes to Moscow only if members limit themselves to "serious, legitimate amendments."

But Byrd noted that Senate rules make it easy for a single senator to offer a string of amendments and use other tactics that could delay a final vote.

Helms rejected what he said he were insinuations that he was raising technical points simply for the sake of delay. "What is occurring is not dilatory, but is instead and, in fact, deliberative," he told his colleagues.

The Senate still faces an unresolved fight over the legal interpretation of treaties.

That dispute arises from Reagan's claim that he has the legal right to unilaterally change how a treaty is viewed by the United States.

Democrats who control the Senate have added an amendment to the INF pact which says no future president can reinterpret the pact without Senate approval. Republicans object to the addition.

Research Group Says Rules Needed For Poverty Programs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government needs to set higher standards for state poverty programs so that the assistance available to poor people won't vary so widely from state to state, a private research group says.

At the same time, states need to do more on their own to improve programs for the disadvantaged, said the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities.

The center, which analyzes government spending and its impact on the poor from a liberal perspective, reported Wednesday that most states fail to provide adequate "safety nets" for the poor.

The center's report, "Holes in the Safety Nets," found broad differences among the states in the quality of assistance provided to the poor. It concluded that shortcomings exist in all regions of the country and even in some states with sound economies and above-average personal income.

"The extent of variations in state poverty policies makes a strong case for an enhanced federal role, both in setting standards and providing funds," the researchers said. "Assistance to many poor families would not then depend so much on where in this nation they happen to live."

But center Director Robert Greenstein said that because budget constraints probably will prevent sweeping changes at the federal level, "we believe that the principal choices made in determining the quality of the state safety nets are likely to be those made in each state capital."

"To narrow some of these holes in the safety net, state action is crucial," he said.

The center studied government programs that provide cash, medical and other assistance to the poor, and found that none of the states nor the District of Columbia met all 10 standards in a "reasonable adequacy" test developed by the center.

Twenty-nine states meet three or fewer of the criteria, including Indiana and Texas, which meet none; just 14 states meet more than half the criteria, including Minnesota and Massachusetts, which did the best by meeting nine of the 10.

Candidates Hit Both Coasts

By The Associated Press
Democratic presidential contender Jesse Jackson suggested that racist comments by "irresponsible public leaders" helped create the climate for an alleged assassination plot against him. Republican George Bush, meanwhile, sought to put some distance between himself and President Reagan on Panama's Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

The presidential candidates were campaigning on both coasts — in California and New Jersey — as they headed into the final round of primary contests next month.

California's will be the biggest primary of the season, offering 314 Democratic delegates, with 109 at stake in New Jersey. Montana and New Mexico hold primaries the same day, with 43 Democratic delegates up for grabs between them.

Michael Dukakis, the Democratic front-runner, is working to lock up the Democratic nomination in the final four June 7 primaries. He expressed hopes Wednesday for a calm Democratic convention this summer, even as Jackson was renewing his objections to the party delegate-selection process.

Jackson, campaigning in Fresno, Calif., was asked about this week's arrest of a St. Louis couple accused of plotting to kill him. Londell Williams and his wife, Tammy, were also charged with threatening an informant and possessing an automatic rifle.

Papers filed in federal court indicated Londell Williams told an informer he was a member of The Order and other white supremacist groups, and that Jackson should be killed.

But lawyers for the couple said each denied belonging to a white supremacist group, and the FBI said no evidence had been found that the pair belonged to The Order.

Jackson initially downplayed word of the arrests, saying, "I cannot just focus on the two people arrested in St. Louis."

But later he told reporters: "The climate for this kind of antagonism and violence, of course, has been set by many irresponsible public leaders (whose) attacks based on race have set a divisive and dangerous climate, such as the one ... in New York in April, for example."

Jackson was apparently referring to comments by New York City Mayor Ed Koch during the New York primary campaign last month. Koch said, among other things, that Jews would be "crazy" to vote for Jackson.

Jackson met privately Wednesday with nearly three dozen rabbis and Jewish leaders in Los Angeles, in what he described as a "step toward healing the wounds." Many Jews were offended by Jackson's 1984 reference to New York as "Hymietown" and his association with Muslim leader Louis Farrakhan.

A dozen demonstrators outside the Hollywood hotel where the session was being held chanted "Lose, Jesse, lose" and "Jew hater."

Jackson was campaigning in California again today.

Bush, who wrapped up a seven-day West Coast campaign swing, made an anti-drug message his central theme Wednesday.

Norwegian Ship Hit By Iranians

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iranian speedboats attacked a Norwegian tanker twice in the Strait of Hormuz today, firing rocket-propelled grenades that set the vessel afire and injured one crewman, shipping executives said.

The 55,173-ton Berge Strand, an empty liquefied petroleum gas carrier sailing to Saudi Arabian ports, was the second vessel attacked by Iran in the Persian Gulf in the last two days.

Iranian speedboats raided the Japanese-owned Ace Chemi on Wednesday, following Iraqi attacks on Iranian terminals and tankers.

The shipping executives, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the Berge Strand was damaged slightly in the first attack by two speedboats, at 6:30 a.m. (10:30 p.m. EDT Wednesday). They did not know what weapons were used in the first strike but said no injuries were reported.

An hour later, one of the speedboats caught up with the Berge Strand and pumped five rocket-propelled grenades into its accommodation quarters, then veered away, the sources said.

A small fire broke out and flying shrapnel injured one of the 19 crew members in the face and forearm, the sources said. The crew, believed to be Norwegian, put out the fire.

An Omani warship on patrol rushed to help the vessel and took the injured sailor to a hospital in Oman, they said. His condition was not serious, they added.

The Berge Strand headed to the southern gulf port of Dubai, where the Ace Chemi is docked for repairs.

The U.S. Central Command, meanwhile, said the Navy's 32nd convoy of the year was sailing south through the gulf. It included one U.S. flagged Kuwaiti tanker, the 46,723-ton Gas Prince, escorted by the missile frigate Copeland.

U.S.-Syrian Talks Set On Hostages

JERUSALEM (AP) — Vernon Walters, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, said today he will talk with Syrian officials in Damascus to try to help secure the release of nine Americans held hostage in Lebanon.

Walters, who leaves Friday for the Syrian capital, would not give details of his plans. "When it comes to the hostages, the less you talk about what you plan to do the more you get done," he said.

Walters said his visit to Damascus was prompted by a concern for the safety of the hostages because fighting between rival Shiite Moslem factions has escalated in the southern suburbs of Beirut, where the captives are believed held.

"Of course we're concerned about the safety of the hostages," Walters said in an interview. "We're concerned about their safety all the time, we think about them all the time."

Fighting has been raging between the pro-Syrian Amal militia and the pro-Iranian Hezbollah since May 6 in the 16-square-mile slums of south Beirut.

Most of the 18 foreign hostages in Lebanon are believed to be held by Hezbollah-backed Shiite zealots.

More than 240 people have been killed and 762 wounded in the fighting between Hezbollah, or Party of God, and Amal, Arabic for hope.

Over the weekend, Syria massed 7,500 troops and 500 tanks and armored vehicles on the edges of south Beirut. Syrian officers have said the army is prepared to move in to stop the fighting.

Shiite Moslem sources quoted in the Jerusalem Post today said the Shiite kidnapers have threatened to kill the hostages if Syrian forces move into Beirut's southern suburbs.

Walters, who is in Israel for a three-day visit, also met for more than an hour today with Robert Hopkins, head of the U.N. Relief and Works Agency in the Israeli-occupied West Bank.

"We discussed the problems of the refugees in all the areas you might imagine," Walters said. "We discussed all the issues and the problems relating to the uprising."

There are 18 foreigners, including nine Americans, missing and presumed kidnapped in Lebanon.

Third World Has Most Large Cities

LONDON (AP) — Half the world's people will be city dwellers by the year 2000, and 11 of the world's 13 largest cities will be in the developing world, the 1988 State of World Population Report says.

Since 1950, the number of city dwellers has almost tripled worldwide, reaching nearly 2 billion in 1985, according to the annual report released Wednesday by the United Nations Population Fund.

It says the greatest increase has been in developing countries, where millions are flocking to urban areas in search of better education, health services and jobs.

By the end of the century, 75 percent of Latin America's population, 42 percent of Africa's and 37 percent of Asia's will be urban dwellers, the report adds.

The number of people living in cities of over 1 million also has grown rapidly.

In 1940, one in 100 cities topped a million. In 1980, one in 10 cities contained more than a million people and in highly urbanized Latin America, the present ratio is one in four, the report says.

Eleven of the world's 13 most populous cities will be in the developing world by the end of century, compared with eight now, it adds.

The 13 largest metropolitan areas in 1985 were: Tokyo (18.8 million), Mexico City (17.3), Sao Paulo, Brazil (15.9), New York (15.6), Shanghai, China (11.8), Calcutta, India (11.0), Buenos Aires, Argentina (10.9), Rio de Janeiro, Brazil (10.4), London (10.4), Seoul, South Korea (10.3), Bombay, India (10.1), Los Angeles (10.0) and Osaka, Japan (9.4).

In the year 2000, the report said, the 13 largest metropolitan areas will be Mexico City (25.8 million), Sao Paulo (24.0), Tokyo (20.2), Calcutta (16.5), Bombay (16.0), New York (15.8), Seoul (13.8), Teheran, Iran (13.6), Shanghai (13.3), Rio de Janeiro (13.3), Buenos Aires (13.2), Jakarta, Indonesia (13.2) and New Delhi, India (13.2).

Militant Sikhs Give Up Temple

AMRITSAR, India (AP) — The Sikh elders who manage the Golden Temple were called into session today to discuss reopening the golden-domed shrine where a 10-day police siege ended with the surrender of militant Sikh separatists.

The 400-year-old temple, Sikhism's holiest shrine, had become a base for extremists waging a guerrilla war since 1982 for an independent Sikh homeland in Punjab state.

Forty-five men and one woman walked out of the temple on Wednesday, their hands in the air or clasped on their heads, and surrendered to the 2,800 policemen, commandos and paramilitary troops surrounding it.

At least 42 people, mostly militant Sikhs, were killed during the siege. Four other militants committed suicide rather than surrender.

Bhan Singh, secretary of the Sikh elders' committee that runs the temple, told reporters late Wednesday night that it would today discuss how to restore daily religious rites at the shrine.

A curfew remained in effect today within 300 yards of the complex's walls and municipal workers began cleaning its dining hall, hostels and offices.

Despite the government's success in ending the siege, its authority is still challenged by continuing Sikh attacks elsewhere in Punjab state.

The United News of India said today that 13 more people were killed during the night around the northern state in attacks by Sikh extremists, who killed at least 99 people in Punjab while the siege was under way.

At least 40 people were killed Tuesday and Wednesday, including more than 30 migrant Hindu laborers shot to death as they slept at a camp near the state capital of Chandigarh. A note found near the laborers' bodies said the killings were to avenge the Golden Temple siege.

Funds For Holocaust Survivors Missing

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — The late head of West Germany's Jewish community may not have acted alone in the apparent embezzlement of millions of dollars of government funds earmarked for Holocaust survivors, prosecutors say.

The family attorney for Werner Nachmann, who died in January, said on Wednesday that he had been unable to determine where the missing money had gone and that Nachmann may have squandered much of it.

The family has filed for bankruptcy in Karlsruhe, where Nachmann lived and ran a wholesale textile business.

Nachmann, who headed the Central Jewish Council for 23 years until his death from a heart attack at age 62, may have had accomplices in the scheme, said Manfred Roething, a spokesman for the Karlsruhe prosecutor's office.

He said investigators would seek to determine "whether other parties may be liable for prosecution as accessories."

Government officials have vowed to bring the truth to light. A top aide to Chancellor Helmut Kohl is to meet Friday with Heinz Galinski, who succeeded Nachmann as council president.

Jewish leaders have expressed shock and outrage.

Soviets Will Man Shuttle

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet space official said today two cosmonauts probably will man the nation's first shuttle flight.

The Soviets earlier had indicated the inaugural flight of the space shuttle might be unmanned. No date has been announced.

Radio Moscow quoted Vladimir Shatalov, head of the Soviet cosmonaut training program, as telling reporters visiting the space center in Baikonur that two cosmonauts would be aboard.

"The test flight will be carried out after all the systems of the Energia booster rocket and of the shuttle have been thoroughly checked," the broadcast quoted Shatalov as saying.

Radio Moscow said the Soviet shuttle is "similar to the American model, but has a number of design peculiarities."

No other details were provided.

Sources in Washington familiar with the Soviet space program say the shuttle has been tested at Baikonur on a 15,000-foot landing strip and that cosmonaut Igor Volk is the program's chief pilot and likely to be part of the crew.

Soviet officials have been saying since January that the first launch of a reusable spacecraft was imminent and have varied in their reports about whether it would be manned or not.

Alexander Dunaev, head of the Soviet space agency Glavkosmos, told a news conference in March that scientists were working around the clock to prepare for the first shuttle flight, which he said would be unmanned.

"We pursue the fundamental objective: whether man is alive or dead after the flight," Dunaev said, in pointed reference to the January 1986 U.S. space shuttle disaster in which seven astronauts were killed.

The American shuttle program has been grounded since the Challenger tragedy.

Peace Talks To Resume

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist Sandinista government and the rebels have tentatively agreed to hold a third round of talks in hopes of securing a lasting peace, the government announced.

A communique issued Wednesday night said the U.S.-supported rebels, known as Contras, have agreed to a government proposal to hold the talks May 25-28 at an as yet undetermined location.

The agreement was reached at meetings Tuesday and Wednesday between deputy Foreign Minister Victor Hugo Tinoco and Azucena Ferrey, one of the five directors of the Nicaraguan Resistance.

The meeting was held in Miami, where the Contras are based.

According to the communique, the Sandinistas proposed that the third meeting be held in Managua, as the previous two had been, but the Contras appeared reluctant and delayed the decision on a site.

Rebel leaders had complained that the Sandinistas restricted their delegates to a hotel during the previous two meetings, refusing to allow them to meet with domestic opposition political leaders.

On March 23, the two sides signed a preliminary peace accord in the southern border post of Sapoa and a cease-fire that ends May 30 took effect.

During the truce, the belligerents were to meet in Managua and try to end the civil war that began in 1982 and has claimed more than 26,500 lives.

Since the Sapoa accords, the two sides have delineated seven cease-fire zones into which the rebels are to move. But they remain far apart on issues of democratic reforms and what role Contra leaders will be permitted to assume in Nicaragua's political future.

Until those issues are settled, the Contras say their fighters will not enter the cease-fire zones and lay down their weapons.

If peace talks do not resume by June 1, the Sandinistas have threatened to mount an all-out offensive to try to wipe out the rebels.

Pope Ends Tour With Unity Plea

ASUNCION, Paraguay (AP) — Pope John Paul II ended a 12-day South American tour on his 68th birthday and left for Rome, telling Paraguayans to reconcile their differences and build a better nation.

"The key to unity, reconciliation and brotherhood is in the Scriptures," the pontiff said at an airport farewell ceremony Wednesday attended by authoritarian President Gen. Alfredo Stroessner, 75, the Western Hemisphere's longest-ruling head of state.

"By building a Christian nation and being faithful to your genuine roots, you can build a Paraguay of tomorrow," said John Paul, who early in the visit preached respect for human rights and civil liberties to Stroessner, in power since a 1954 coup.

Stroessner, bidding the pope goodbye, said the visit had been a "source of joy and hope" for Paraguay, which he described as "a pluralistic and democratic society ... without terrorism ... and enjoying full freedom within a state of law."

Most outside observers regard the nation of 3.8 million people as a dictatorship.

The Asuncion daily newspaper Patria, run by the governing Colorado Party, lashed out on Wednesday at the pope's Tuesday night meeting with a church-selected group of civic and cultural leaders which included opposition activists. The church had called the group Builders of Society.

Labeling the group a "grab-bag of society's destroyers" Patria said in an editorial: "There is no doubt about the opposition's ideologizing, politicizing and manipulating everything concerned with the meeting."

John Paul's trip, his 37th since becoming pope in 1978 and the ninth to Latin America, took him from tiny Uruguay on the Atlantic coast to Bolivia, high in the Andes, Peru on the Pacific and landlocked, semi-tropical Paraguay.

Ethnic Koreans Call Corner Of China Home

By DAVID HOLLEY
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

YANJI, China — Pickled raw beef, spicy kimchi, soybean-paste soup and other traditional Korean dishes load the table when Gang Chul Lam's family sits down to a winter evening meal.

Traditional Korean cabinets line one wall of the room, which is heated in the Korean manner by a coal-fired stove sending hot air through pipes under the floor. The conversation is in Korean.

Gang, 35, a rice farmer in a village on the outskirts of this northeast China city, is the grandson of immigrants to China. But he speaks Chinese with only limited fluency and is surrounded by Korean culture. His son, Hong, 6, also is growing up speaking his ancestral tongue.

Gang's mother, Gim Ju, 68, said that her father was only 7 when he came to China with his parents. "Like most others, they came because life was so hard in Korea," she said.

From the North Korean border to the steppes of Inner Mongolia — in the provinces of Liaoning, Jilin and Heilongjiang — live 2 million ethnic Koreans, the descendants of people who from the 1860s to the 1940s fled famine, poverty or Japanese colonization to seek better lives, usually as rice farmers, in China's northeast. Under official Chinese policy, the languages and customs of its 55 formally recognized minorities, of which Koreans are one, should be respected, while at the same time allegiance to China is demanded of all citizens.

This policy aims to ensure national unity in a country where ethnic Chinese — the Han people — make up 93 percent of the population but minorities are concentrated in vast, generally underpopulated border regions. How well this formula has been implemented, however, has varied between localities and over time.

During the Cultural Revolution of 1966 to 1976, a combination of ethnic Chinese chauvinism, suppression of religious activity and suspicion of those with foreign connections created an especially difficult time for many minorities in China, including the Koreans.

While conditions have improved with the more relaxed policies in force since the late 1970s, there are still some places — especially Tibet, which was rocked by anti-Chinese rioting last year — where China's minority policy has failed to eliminate fundamental ethnic tensions.

The situation of the Koreans, however, seems to illustrate how the policy is supposed to work.

The greatest concentration of Korean Chinese is in Jilin province's Yanbian Korean autonomous prefecture, which abuts North Korea. About 800,000 Koreans live here, making up 40 percent of the population. Ethnic Chinese make up about 58 percent, while other minorities, primarily Moslems, Manchus and Mongolians, comprise about 2 percent.

Cui Shengchun, an ethnic Korean who is secretary general of Yanbian's External Culture Exchange Center said that 57 percent of government officials in Yanbian at the county level or above are ethnic Koreans, even though ethnic Chinese form a majority of the population.

The Korean officials do not just hold token positions, but share real power, Cui said. Korean and Chinese are both used in government offices, he said.

Five Korean-language newspapers and 13 Korean-language magazines are published in Yanbian. Kim Kye Seung, a Korean, is editor-in-chief of the prefecture's official Communist Party newspaper, the Yanbian Daily. Published in both Korean and Chinese, the newspaper treats its Korean version as the leading edition, Kim said.

Yanbian also has two Korean-language book publishers and Korean-language radio and television. China's daily nationwide news program is rebroadcast here the next day in Korean.

From elementary school through high school, Korean children are taught mostly in Korean, but they also study Chinese. The prefecture has four colleges or universities primarily for Korean students, where Chinese is the primary language of instruction.

About 40 percent of the elementary schools and half the junior high or high schools in Yanbian are for Korean students, with ethnic Chinese attending other schools with instruction in their language, Cui said.

While Korean children who live in cities and mix with Chinese children are likely to be fully bilingual, some of those who grow up in ethnically Korean villages in the countryside, people such as Gang, the rice farmer, never fully master Chinese.

Yet owing to a variety of factors, including a traditional Korean emphasis on education of children, a rule that allows Korean students to take college entrance examinations in their own language, and a slight admissions advantage given to Korean students, more than half the students from Yanbian who go on to college are Korean, Cui said.

In Yanbian's urban centers, such as Yanji, its biggest city, and Tumen, a city at the North Korean border, virtually all signs are written in both Chinese and Korean.

Chinese who move to Yanbian from other parts of the country, Cui commented, might feel they have come to a half-way foreign place.

Describing his own feelings, Cui outlined a viewpoint that fits with what the authorities in Beijing hope to accomplish through their minorities policy.

"First, I am a Chinese," Cui said. "I grew up here in Yanbian and I love this place. My mother country is China. But I also have a feeling as a Korean."

We have quite a lot of traditional things here still. Our food is from the VILLAGE OUTSKIRTS — A Korean man drives a horse cart past one of the thatched-roof houses that dot the countryside near Yanji. Food, language and tradition keep a strong ethnic Korean culture alive.

Dynasty fell into decline and its ability to restrict entry into the area weakened, there was still a large amount of open land that was not under cultivation. Koreans, suffering from misrule and periodic famine in their own country, began slipping across the Yalu and Tumen rivers into China.

While rice cultivation in China was largely restricted to the south, Koreans had learned to grow rice in a northern climate. They established rice-farming villages near rivers.

Japanese annexation of Korea in 1910 hastened this process by prompting large numbers of Koreans to flee colonial rule. Many pressed on past the already-settled border areas of Yanbian to interior parts of China's northeast, known at the time as Manchuria.

Contrasting sharply with the tense and heavily militarized border between North and South Korea, the Chinese-North Korean border is relaxed and almost sleepy. At the border crossing in Tumen, occasional trucks and buses carry trade items and passengers across a bridge over the Tumen River to the North Korean town of Namyang.

Markets in Yanji and Tumen sell frozen or dried seafood imported from North Korea, as well as a variety of hardware and light industrial products, such as burners for tabletop cooking and Korean-style metal chopsticks.

While the largest concentration of Koreans is in the border area, the total of Koreans living scattered throughout northeastern China is even larger.

Some live in cities, where they are gradually being assimilated, as some Korean children grow up speaking Chinese better than Korean. Many others live in predominantly Korean villages, a reflection of the history of the region.

The northeast was originally the home of the Manchu people, who conquered all of China in the mid-1600s and established the Qing Dynasty. This dynasty, which lasted until 1911, restricted immigration of ethnic Chinese to the underpopulated Manchu homeland, which with its long cold winters in any case held limited attraction for most Chinese.

Thus, in the mid-1800s, as the Qing

Subsequent Japanese conquest of Manchuria and establishment of the puppet state of Manchukuo in 1932 made movement from Korea still easier. With Japan's defeat in 1945, the region reverted to Chinese rule, and increased numbers of ethnic Chinese began to move in.

Charlotte Fedders:

They Say I've Done Just What I Had To Do

By DONNA CASSATA
Associated Press Writer
POTOMAC, Md. (AP) — Charlotte Fedders ushers a guest from the cluttered kitchen of her suburban Washington home to the sunny living room filled with photographs of her children. A cat snuggling on the couch is quickly shooed away and Mrs. Fedders begins to describe in even tones, the physical and mental abuse inflicted by her husband, the former top chief of enforcement at the Securities and Exchange Commission.

She speaks about the violence during her 18-year marriage, the legal battles with her ex-husband John Fedders, the resiliency of her five sons and her own inner strength. She pauses to deal with a question from son Peter, who has padded downstairs in bare feet to ask, "Do elephants have tails?"

Five years ago, a messy kitchen, cat hairs in the living room and a sudden display of precociousness would have been verboten. In her book, "Shattered Dreams," Charlotte Fedders described her husband's weekly white-glove inspections, in which he ran his fingers along tops of doors and windows, and how he liked to see the vacuum marks in the carpet all going the same way.

As the result of her experience, Charlotte Fedders has become one of the nation's best-known victims of spouse abuse. She speaks out on the issue around the country and in return receiving thousands of letters filled with words of encouragement and personal tales of domestic violence.

"I have folders of letters that I can't respond to," she says. "They pour their hearts out to me. There's enormous support."

"They say I've done just what I had to do. I had no other choice."

At one time, the Fedders family gave the appearance of an ideal existence — wealthy suburban home, exclusive country club membership, private schools, powerful Washington job.

But a dirty secret festered inside the six-bedroom, beige brick house in Potomac, Md.: John Fedders beat his wife.

"We had been talking for a while. All I remember is that this conversation seemed to be going well. That we were really conversing, sharing ideas. We were not fighting, we were not being sarcastic or nasty. I swear we were just talking," Charlotte Fedders wrote in her book, referring to the first time her husband struck her in 1968.

"But I think it was the first time I disagreed with him and was sticking to my guns. I was arguing my point calmly, but I was holding to it. ... It was one good sock to the left side of my ear. Then I heard this ringing sound. I found out later that he had broken my eardrum."

In court testimony during the February 1985 divorce trial, Charlotte Fedders described seven violent incidents that occurred during her marriage, including the time her husband struck her while she was four months pregnant with their first child.

"He loomed over me and hit me in the abdomen, three, maybe five times, hard. I bent over, trying to protect my tummy. They were powerful blows. It felt like taking a heavy fall. ... I tried to push him away, which only seemed to make him madder. He yelled that he didn't care if he killed me or the baby," she wrote in her book.

Among those present in the courtroom during the divorce proceedings was a reporter for The Wall Street Journal, whose article of Feb. 25 on John Fedders' problems touched off a furor that forced Fedders to resign his SEC post late the next day.

In his resignation letter to then SEC Chairman John Shad, Fedders said, "On seven occasions during more than 18 years of marriage, marital disputes between us resulted in violence for which I feel and have expressed great remorse."

"These isolated events do not, however, justify the extreme characterizations made in the press," he said.

Fedders did not respond to several telephone calls seeking his comments on his former wife's charges.

The ideal family was no more, but the legal battles continued. After John Fedders testified, he pleaded with the court to give him time to work out a reconciliation with his wife. Montgomery County Circuit Court Judge James S. McAuliffe suggested that the couple go out to dinner and try to talk things out.

"That was a devastating moment," Charlotte Fedders said in a recent interview, recalling the 5-year-old incident. "He thought it was the right thing for the kids-slash-me. John had promised never to do it again. The judge showed a total lack of understanding of domestic violence."

In 1987, a Circuit Court domestics relations official, John S. McInerney, reduced John Fedders' alimony payments from $750 a month to $500. McInerney also awarded Fedders a 25 percent share of the proceeds from his wife's book, saying she shared the blame for his violent outbursts because she withheld emotional support during his depression.

"He obviously ruled very poorly. ... He doesn't know what's going on," she said.

Judge McAuliffe in February of this year reversed McInerney's action, ruling that Fedders could not share in the profits from his wife's book, but his decision was based on the belief that no exact monetary value can be placed on a book. McAuliffe said it cannot be considered a marital asset.

The judge also reduced John Fedders' alimony payments to $400 a month. Fedders had asked the court to end the payments, saying the publicity had hurt his earning capacity by damaging his once successful legal career.

"This particular judge made the final ruling and I did as well as I could do," Charlotte Fedders said. "He didn't understand that John was manipulating the system, manipulating lives."

"There isn't a soul who doesn't think John Fedders couldn't be doing well — in a small way John won. The judge bought John's truth."

For Charlotte Fedders, the product of a strict Roman Catholic education and a family dominated by a strong father, her lone desire was the realization of an old-fashioned dream.

"All I ever wanted to be was a wife and mother," she wrote in her book. "To marry a man who could give me children and a comfortable life, filled with love and little strife. ... So finding that man was very important."

Moms Hope World Will Mend Ways

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of two small children, and like mothers all over the world, I am concerned about the possibility of a nuclear war. I'm just an ordinary person who doesn't know much about nuclear weapons, but I'm terrified when I look at my beautiful children and think what could happen to them in the event of a nuclear war. I owe it to my children to do what I can so they can grow up and have families.

What can one concerned mother do? I feel so helpless and alone. — A VERY CONCERNED MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: In 1985, Linda Smith, a young mother from La Jolla, Calif., visited the Vietnam Memorial in Washington, D.C., with her four daughters. She was so overwhelmed by the loss of life in that war — and the possibility of even greater losses in the event of a nuclear war — that she started an organization called MEND: Mothers Embracing Nuclear Disarmament.

MEND is a non-profit educational organization that produces and distributes educational material for concerned mothers just like you.

MEND has 1,900 members in the United States, Canada, West Germany and India. It has been endorsed and supported by some people whose names may be familiar to you: Norman Cousins, The Rev. Theodore Hesburgh, Jack Lemmon, Wallis Annenberg, Carl Sagan, Robin Williams, Joan Kroc, Jonas Salk and myself.

There is strength in numbers — and one ordinary person can make a difference by uniting with other "orinary" people.

For information about joining MEND, write to: MEND, P.O. Box 2309C, La Jolla, Calif. 92038.

DEAR ABBY: I have been amused at all of the letters in your column lately from women who have been complaining because their husbands would not have a vasectomy.

Two years ago I decided that four children was enough and I did not want any more. I was 37 at the time with four children — ages 12, 10, 6 and 3. With my age and the fact that I have hypoglycemia, I did not feel I could go through another pregnancy. My husband was scared and reluctant to go through surgery, but because he loves me, he had a vasectomy.

Imagine what a shock it was to find out a few weeks ago that I am going to have another baby in September! My doctor said I am the third patient he has known who got pregnant after her husband had surgery — the chances are 1 in 900! So, all the women who push to get their husbands to have surgery should remember that it is not always 100 percent effective. (By the way, my husband is really excited about the baby and so am I, now that I'm over the shock.) — SANDY SHAFER, ST. GEORGE, UTAH

Changes Proposed

Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, said the regular consultations between the congressional leaders and a president "will forge a stronger basis for bipartisan cooperation in national security matters."

"Meaningful and consistent consultation with the Congress would also help prevent the president from implementing a controversial policy that Congress could not responsibly change," said Mitchell.

All four presidents since the enactment of the war powers law have contended that it is an unconstitutional restriction on their authority.

"The War Powers Act, as presently constituted, is unworkable," said Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., a co-sponsor of the proposed change.

"Frankly, if I were president, I would thumb my nose at this legislation," said Byrd, speaking of the existing law. "No president can indicate to a potential enemy" plans such as the length of a proposed deployment of troops, he said.

Sen. John Warner of Virginia, ranking Republican on the Armed Services Committee, said he supports the change because the existing law "has never worked very well."

"Every president resents a diminution of his power," said Warner, explaining why the law has always been a focus of legislative-executive fights.

Byrd and Warner said the Reagan administration had not been consulted in advance about the proposed change in the law.

"I would hope the administration won't veto this," said Byrd. He said hearings will be held later by the Foreign Relations Committee.

Warner said, "It will be up to the administration to look at this and see if they can support it."

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, agreed that "the present law does not seem to be working."

The latest fight over the War Powers Act involves Reagan's Persian Gulf policy of reflagging 11 Kuwaiti-owned tankers and protecting them with Navy warships.

Reagan has refused to invoke the law, even though there have been four separate clashes between the Navy and Iran. Congress has debated trying to invoke the law, but has been unable to agree on whether that should be done.

Budget

"Some good stuff is about to happen if we can stay in business long enough to make sure that it does," he said.

Other amounts in the non-departmental budget are $3,000 to the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, 2,000 to the Mid-Atlantic Farm Show, and $600 to the National Guard.

"This list seems to get bigger and bigger each year I'm here," remarked Mayor Pro Tem Lorraine Shinn, who presided over the meeting due to the absence of Mayor Ed Carter.

City Finance Director Ron Kimble explained that the non-departmental budget contains requests for funding in 1988-89 from various groups within the community. These requests are merely presented in their original form, directly to the City Council for its decision regarding funding.

He said the city manager's role is to pass those requested amounts along to the council for consideration.

PCB Exposure

ULAH, N.C. (AP) — Volunteer firefighters from the Ulah Fire Department are waiting to find out if they were exposed to a cancer-causing chemical when they extinguished a blaze Tuesday at a Randolph County electric substation that caught fire when struck by lightning.

Dave Rowe, manager of member and public relations at Randolph Electric Membership Corp., said that when lightning struck a regulator at the Ulah substation, it blew up — throwing a non-hazardous oil in and around the substation.

But, Rowe said, a contained apparatus inside the regulator housed polychlorinated biphenyls, which are known cancer-causing agents.

"We don't know at this point if there was a leakage of PCBs or not — if there was, we think it was minimal, but we are following all the necessary precautions to be sure," he said.

Young Preachers Suspended Again

MARION, N.C. (AP) — A 6-year-old schoolyard preacher and his younger sister were suspended for a fourth time today as their older brother, sent home a week ago for disobeying school rules, stood outside the school gates and shouted Bible epithets.

"Now is the day of Salvation," 6-year-old Matthew Strode shouted at the crowd of reporters, schoolchildren and TV cameras as 5-year-old Pepper stood beside him holding a Bible. "Hell has enlarged herself and opened her mouth without measure."

The two younger children, returning today from their third suspension, arrived at Eastfield Elementary School in the North Carolina mountains about 7:30 a.m. in a car driven by their mother, Robin.

They stood on school grounds at a teachers' entrance and waited for a cue from their 10-year-old brother, Duffey, who was outside the school gates, to begin preaching.

Duffey, 10, was suspended for 10 days last Friday for refusing to stop his proselytizing and go to class.

"For God so loved the world..." Duffey called from the gate, setting off a stream of preaching from his younger brother.

"Fools make a mock at sin," Matthew shouted at Principal Jim Gorst, who asked him to come inside the school. The boy stood his ground as Gorst repeated his request several times.

Pepper does not preach because she doesn't want to, the children's father, David, has said. He also has said the Bible says women should not speak in church.

Later, Gorst complained that the children were being encouraged by publicity.

Hawks Take Lead In Gah-den

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

Now that the Hawks have put an end to their string of futility at the Boston Garden, the Celtics will have to win in Atlanta to avoid their earliest ouster from the NBA Playoffs in five years.

The Hawks beat the Celtics 112-104 Wednesday night to break a 13-game losing streak at the Garden, take a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinal and put themselves within a victory of meeting the Detroit Pistons for the right to advance to the league championship series. Detroit eliminated Chicago in five games with a 102-95 victory.

"It's a great feeling, but we have to keep everything in perspective," Atlanta's Dominique Wilkins said. "We have to play another game (or two)."

Game 6 is scheduled for Friday night at the Omni, where the Hawks have beaten the Celtics eight of the last nine times they've played.

A seventh game, if necessary, will be in Boston on Sunday.

Tonight at Salt Lake City, the Los Angeles Lakers, seeking to become the first team to win consecutive league championships since the Celtics in 1968-69, will try to oust the Utah Jazz. The Lakers, aiming to win their fifth title this decade, lead 3-2 in their Western Conference semifinal series.

The other Western semifinal also could end tonight if the Mavericks, leading Denver 3-2, beat the Nuggets at Dallas.

If seventh games in those series are necessary, they would be played Saturday at Inglewood, Calif., and at Denver.

"We felt going into the series we were a better team than Atlanta," Boston forward Larry Bird said. "Maybe that hurt us."

But it came as no great shock to Boston guard Danny Ainge.

"They are a great team," he said of the Hawks. "They have a lot of confidence now and it's going to be difficult in Atlanta."

The Celtics are hoping to avoid becoming the fifth team in league history—the first since 1977—to lose a seven-game series after winning the first two.

Boston, which reached the finals in each of the last four seasons and won twice, hadn't lost to the Hawks in Boston Garden since a 114-105 setback on March 1, 1985.

"We believed we could do it," Atlanta guard Glenn Rivers said.

Now Boston, seeking its 17th NBA championship, will have to beat a confident Atlanta team twice to continue that quest.

The Hawks rebounded from their two losses to win Games 3 and 4 at home.

"When you beat a great team ... it's got to help your confidence," Rivers added. "The Celtics gave us the open shots and we hit them. In the past, we haven't."

Two free throws by Wilkins' with 2:07 left gave Atlanta a 99-98 lead and launched a 10-0 run that lifted the Hawks to victory.

Two free throws by Dennis Johnson with 2:25 to go gave Boston its last lead, 98-97. But the parade to the foul line by Atlanta—which made 22 of 24 free throws in the final period—doomed Boston.

Atlanta was led by Kevin Willis with a playoff-career-high 27 points. Wilkins added 25 points and Rivers 21.

For Boston, Robert Parish had 24 points, Bird 22 and Johnson 20.

Pistons 102, Bulls 95
Detroit advanced to the Eastern final for the second straight year behind the play of Bill Laimbeer, who scored 13 of his 19 points in the fourth quarter.

"It just happened that my six, eight, 10 points in a row came at the end of the game," Laimbeer said. "That's where it became a point to get the shots to fall in and ours did. That got the crowd into it."

Laimbeer pulled down 13 rebounds and helped Joe Dumars lead a defensive effort that held Chicago's Michael Jordan in check.

Detroit's defense, which held Jordan to 23 and 24 points in the third and fourth games of the series, held Jordan to 25—just nine in the second half—in Game 5.

Isiah Thomas scored 25 points for Detroit, 15 in the first half, and Adrian Dantley scored 18 of his 22 points in the first half for the Pistons.

Horace Grant scored 20 points and Charles Oakley 19 for the Bulls.

Laimbeer had only two points at halftime, but broke the game open in the fourth quarter.

"It came down to their veteran experience," Chicago coach Doug Collins said. "It really hurt us."

"Dumars made some great plays for them. They're a great team and they beat us."

Detroit's Adrian Dantley (45) gets crushed by Chicago's Horace Grant (54) as he tries to go to the hoop between Grant and the Bulls' Michael Jordan (23) during the second half of Wednesday night's playoff game at the Pontiac Silverdome. Lobos Howl: Ain't It Bliss

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — If his opening act is any indication, Dave Bliss indeed is ready to take over the No. 1 show in town.

Bliss is leaving Southern Methodist University to become the head coach at New Mexico, a school where basketball is king regardless of the season.

Bliss inherits a program rich in fan support but hungering for national prominence. While New Mexico has ranked in the top 10 nationally in attendance for 22 consecutive years, the Lobos haven't been to the NCAA Tournament since 1978.

It was that shortcoming that paved Bliss' road from Dallas to Albuquerque as the successor to Gary Colson. Colson won more games than he lost in eight seasons at New Mexico — a 146-106 record — but his failure to get the Lobos to the NCAA Tournament eventually led to his forced resignation on April 26.

"It's clear we haven't been to an NCAA Tournament and our expectations are that we will win the WAC (Western Athletic Conference) and get involved in the national scene," New Mexico athletic director John Koenig said in announcing that Bliss had agreed to a five-year contract.

Bliss used Wednesday's press conference to show that a basketball coach can also have a sense of humor.

Noting he became New Mexico's top choice only after Indiana coach Bob Knight turned down the job last weekend, Bliss said, "I understand he turned it down because (UNM)

President (Gerald) May refused to give Bob an unlimited chair budget."

Knight, often the center of controversy for his actions on and off the court, is a longtime friend of Bliss, who assisted Knight-coached programs at Army and Indiana. In fact, Knight stopped at a payphone during a trip to Cincinnati on Wednesday to make a call to the news conference.

Before Knight's call came through, Greg Remington, New Mexico's sport's information director, informed the audience the Indiana coach would be calling. New Mexico athletic director John Koenig, who heard only a part of the announcement, turned to Remington and said, "Who?"

"Bobby Knight," Bliss said. "You remember him, don't you, John?"

"Dave will bring great organization to the job and I don't think there is a better man for the job at New Mexico than Dave," Knight said.

Bliss said he appreciated Knight's support, but more so his decision to remain at Indiana.

"He did what the drug ads say: just say no," Bliss said.

Bliss shared a conversation he had with Knight while both were on Koenig's list of candidates. They had become the top contenders when Purdue coach Gene Keady, the Lobos' initial interest, declined the job.

"He told me I shouldn't feel bad about being No. 2 because I really was No. 3," Bliss said. "He said he was No. 2."

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Perhaps Andy Moog should become a forward. Or even a defenseman.

Then he just might have a chance to beat Edmonton Oilers goaltending great Grant Fuhr.

Although he has moved to another city — another country, for goodness sake! — Moog isn't able to shake the belief that Fuhr is destined to beat him.

Moog made 20 saves in goal for Boston on Wednesday night and many of the stops were spectacular. But his Bruins were defeated 2-1 by Fuhr's defending champion Oilers in Game 1 of the Stanley Cup final. Keith Acton scored the winning goal on a deflection with 18:45 to play.

"Andy is a good goaltender, there's no doubt about that," said Fuhr, who shared Edmonton's goaltending duties with Moog from 1981-87 but who saw the lion's share of work in the Oilers' drive to three of the last four NHL championships. "I thought Andy played well and made some good saves. But the bottom line is we won."

Moog agreed, saying the fact that he played well enough in his first-ever game against Edmonton to be chosen No. 1 star was "very little consolation because we lost the game."

Moog broke into the NHL with the Oilers in 1980-81, one year before Fuhr. By the 1982-83 season, they formed the best young goaltending combination in the game.

In 1982-83, Moog played in all but one playoff game as the Oilers went to their first Stanley Cup final before being swept by the New York Islanders.

Even though they divided time in goal almost equally during the next four regular seasons, Fuhr played in 62 playoff games and Moog just nine.

Fuhr got the reputation of being a great "money" goalie. None other than Edmonton teammate Wayne Gretzky, perhaps the best hockey player ever, calls Fuhr the greatest goalie in NHL history.

Moog? He sat in the background and fumed. Last season, while his teammates were drinking from Lord Stanley's Cup in celebration of beating Philadelphia for the title, Moog said he would ask to be traded.

Oilers coach-general manager Glen Sather wasn't able to meet Moog's request before the season and the goalie refused to report. Instead, he played behind another rising star, Sean Burke, with the Canadian Olympic team.

Finally, on March 7, Sather traded Moog to Boston. Again, he has mostly watched, with red-hot Rejean Lemelin getting most of the work coming into this series.

Boston coach Terry O'Reilly started Moog against his former teammates Wednesday, figuring the added emotion couldn't hurt.

"I got most of the emotion out (Tuesday) because we came in a day early," Moog said. "Sitting in the (dressing) room and waiting to play was hard. I was a little jittery early on. But I got a save (on Gretzky) late in the first period that settled me down. Then it was just hockey."

Moog said he "eliminated all the personalities and faces. I tried to concentrate on the game and the puck and the plays."

Although Moog did a good job of that, O'Reilly hasn't named a starter for Friday night's Game 2 of this best-of-seven series.

Meanwhile, there's no question that Fuhr will be Edmonton's playoff goalie for the 34th straight time.

And if the Bruins only test him with 14 shots again, they will surely limp into Boston Garden trailing 2-0.

"We felt we played pretty good, but we weren't getting nearly the number of chances that we should," said Cam Neely, whose second-period goal on a slap shot through Fuhr's pads made it 1-1. "Grant Fuhr plays well game-in and game-out. Fourteen shots against him aren't nearly enough to win the game."

Gretzky's rebound goal off the post and Moog's arm had put Edmonton up 1-0. After Neely's goal, the little-used Acton became the surprise man of the hour, tipping in Steve Smith's pass from the point.

"I was just standing there and Steve Smith saw me," said Acton, who has scored game-winning goals in two of the three postseason games in which he has played. "He's a real heads-up player and good with the puck. He was shooting the puck for me to deflect it. I don't think he was shooting to score."

Moog, forced to play Smith for a shot, couldn't change his position fast enough to thwart Acton's quick tip.

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Perhaps Andy Moog should become a forward. Or even a defenseman.

Then he just might have a chance to beat Edmonton Oilers goaltending great Grant Fuhr.

Although he has moved to another city — another country, for goodness sake! — Moog isn't able to shake the belief that Fuhr is destined to beat him.

Moog made 20 saves in goal for Boston on Wednesday night and many of the stops were spectacular. But his Bruins were defeated 2-1 by Fuhr's defending champion Oilers in Game 1 of the Stanley Cup final. Keith Acton scored the winning goal on a deflection with 18:45 to play.

"Andy is a good goaltender, there's no doubt about that," said Fuhr, who shared Edmonton's goaltending duties with Moog from 1981-87 but who saw the lion's share of work in the Oilers' drive to three of the last four NHL championships. "I thought Andy played well and made some good saves. But the bottom line is we won."

Moog agreed, saying the fact that he played well enough in his first-ever game against Edmonton to be chosen No. 1 star was "very little consolation because we lost the game."

Moog broke into the NHL with the Oilers in 1980-81, one year before Fuhr. By the 1982-83 season, they formed the best young goaltending combination in the game.

In 1982-83, Moog played in all but one playoff game as the Oilers went to their first Stanley Cup final before being swept by the New York Islanders.

Even though they divided time in goal almost equally during the next four regular seasons, Fuhr played in 62 playoff games and Moog just nine.

Fuhr got the reputation of being a great "money" goalie. None other than Edmonton teammate Wayne Gretzky, perhaps the best hockey player ever, calls Fuhr the greatest goalie in NHL history.

Moog? He sat in the background and fumed. Last season, while his teammates were drinking from Lord Stanley's Cup in celebration of beating Philadelphia for the title, Moog said he would ask to be traded.

Oilers coach-general manager Glen Sather wasn't able to meet Moog's request before the season and the goalie refused to report. Instead, he played behind another rising star, Sean Burke, with the Canadian Olympic team.

Finally, on March 7, Sather traded Moog to Boston. Again, he has mostly watched, with red-hot Rejean Lemelin getting most of the work coming into this series.

Boston coach Terry O'Reilly started Moog against his former teammates Wednesday, figuring the added emotion couldn't hurt.

"I got most of the emotion out (Tuesday) because we came in a day early," Moog said. "Sitting in the (dressing) room and waiting to play was hard. I was a little jittery early on. But I got a save (on Gretzky) late in the first period that settled me down. Then it was just hockey."

Moog said he "eliminated all the personalities and faces. I tried to concentrate on the game and the puck and the plays."

Although Moog did a good job of that, O'Reilly hasn't named a starter for Friday night's Game 2 of this best-of-seven series.

Meanwhile, there's no question that Fuhr will be Edmonton's playoff goalie for the 34th straight time.

And if the Bruins only test him with 14 shots again, they will surely limp into Boston Garden trailing 2-0.

"We felt we played pretty good, but we weren't getting nearly the number of chances that we should," said Cam Neely, whose second-period goal on a slap shot through Fuhr's pads made it 1-1. "Grant Fuhr plays well game-in and game-out. Fourteen shots against him aren't nearly enough to win the game."

Gretzky's rebound goal off the post and Moog's arm had put Edmonton up 1-0. After Neely's goal, the little-used Acton became the surprise man of the hour, tipping in Steve Smith's pass from the point.

"I was just standing there and Steve Smith saw me," said Acton, who has scored game-winning goals in two of the three postseason games in which he has played. "He's a real heads-up player and good with the puck. He was shooting the puck for me to deflect it. I don't think he was shooting to score."

Moog, forced to play Smith for a shot, couldn't change his position fast enough to thwart Acton's quick tip.

Rams Secure EPC Crown

LITTLEFIELD — Who says the number 13 isn't lucky? Certainly not Greene Central pitcher Anthony Jones.

Jones, who sports jersey number 13, struck out 13 Ayden-Grifton batters Wednesday night to lead Greene Central to a 10-3 (13 again) victory in Eastern Plains 2-A Conference baseball action.

The win by the Rams boosted their season mark to 18-1 overall and to 11-0 in the conference. The win also insured the defending state 2-A champions of another conference championship. Ayden-Grifton, who will still make the playoffs, slipped to 10-10 overall and to 8-3 in league action.

For Jones the night did not start out all that well. Jones walked the bases full in the third inning with no one out before Ram head coach James Fulghum went out to the mound to settle down his junior ace. Jones had already given up a run to the Chargers in the first inning off a pair of base hits by Ronnell Peterson and Gary Eubanks.

The result after the meeting with Fulghum was a strikeout and a double play ball by the Chargers to allow Jones to escape the inning unscathed.

"He (Jones) hadn't pitched but four innings in the last three weeks with all the rain we've had," Fulghum said. "I was disappointed that he wasn't throwing the ball well early and I probably wanted to take him out (in the third inning), but I knew that he had to get in x number of innings in order for him to get sharp."

"We didn't get many big hits tonight when we really needed them," Ayden-Grifton coach Chris Ross said of the Chargers' inability to score in the inning with the bases loaded. "You have to give a lot of that credit to Jones though. He is a class pitcher."

The Rams, who struggled early at the plate, managed to knot the score at 1-1 in the third frame courtesy of a solo homer over the leftfield fence by Tommy Eason.

After Greene Central had stalled the Chargers efforts to score in the bottom half of the third, the Rams exploded with a six-run barrage in the fourth inning to all but close the door.

Cornelius Hill led off the big inning by receiving a walk from Ayden-Grifton starting pitcher Scott Chauncy. One out later, Hill tagged home on a run-scoring single by Ricky Freeman. Two more runs scored following Jeff Tyson's roundtripper over the fence in left.

A walk to Cedric Collins sent Chauncy packing for the showers, but didn't dampen the Rams rally. With Peterson taking over duties on the mound for Ayden-Grifton, leadoff batter T.J. Johnson was walked to put men at first and second. Jones then aided the cause by ripping a run-scoring double to left, which was followed by a fielder's choice RBI by Tommy Eason to round out the scoring in the inning.

"Greene Central is an excellent ball club that is solid at the plate (hitters) 1-9," Ross said. "You are not going to shut them down for an entire game, we were fortunate that we were able to shut them down for as long as we did."

The Chargers scored single runs in both the fourth and fifth innings to close to within 7-3. Darryl Moye scored the run in the fourth frame when he doubled and later scored off of a Jones passed ball, while Eubanks powered a home run over the fence in center for the run in the fifth.

Greene Central rounded out the scoring in the sixth inning when Eason grounded another fielder's choice RBI and Hill blasted a two-run shot to left.

"We swung the bat really good tonight and we have for the past two weeks," Fulghum said. "We've really been hitting the long ball. Sometimes that can hurt you, but tonight it was a boost."

The Rams will close out their regular season tonight at home against North Pitt, while the Chargers will be on the road for their regular season finale at South Lenoir. A win by the Chargers would let them finish in a tie with Charles B. Aycock, 9-3 in league play. Should a tie develop, a draw would be made to determine which team would be seeded second and which third in the upcoming state 2-A playoffs. A loss by the Chargers would put them third with Aycock finishing second. The second place team opens at home, while the third place team will have to play on the road.

"It (the Ayden-Grifton-South Lenoir game) is not a win, lose or draw game as far as getting into the playoffs," Ross said. "We're in. It's just a matter of trying to play that first game in the playoffs at home."

Sanderson Tops Rose Soccer, 2-0

The Rose High School girls' soccer team saw its season come to a close Wednesday in the opening round of the state 4-A playoffs as Raleigh Sanderson defeated the Rampettes 2-0.

The Lady Spartans scored single goals in both the first and second half to pull out the win. Erika Williams fired in the first goal at the 18-minute mark and Lisa Burrows was credited with the final goal at the 63-minute mark.

The Rampettes stayed close in the match throughout thanks to 18 saves by goalie Susan Grimsley and strong defensive play by Monica Bray, Tiffany Griffin and Taylor Evans.

Sanderson fired 24 shots on goal for the game, while Rose managed only six.

The loss gave Rose a record of 14-1 for the season. With the win, Sanderson, now 10-2-3 for the season, will advance to meet Raleigh Millbrook in the second round. Millbrook advanced by topping Wilson Fike 8-0 in first round action.

Olympic Entries Now Top 11,000

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Delayed entries have pushed the total number of athletes expected to compete in the largest Olympics ever to 11,555 from at least 136 nations, the Seoul Olympic Organizing Committee said today.

The committee said the 11 entries received Wednesday, one day after the deadline for preliminary entries, included 379 athletes from France, 259 from Spain and 128 from New Zealand.

The largest number of athletes in any previous Olympics was 7,830 at Munich in 1972. Four years ago in Los Angeles, when most of the East European nations boycotted the Games, a record 140 nations sent a total of 7,078 athletes.

The athletes will be competing for a total of 237 gold medals in 23 sports, compared with 223 golds in 21 sports in Los Angeles. New medal sports added for the Seoul Games are tennis and table tennis.

The committee had announced earlier that 161 of the 167 nations in the Olympic movement had accepted invitations to enter the Games in Seoul from Sept. 17 to Oct. 2. For the nations that missed the preliminary deadline to report the number of athletes and officials coming, the committee said there would be no problem if they submitted a final name list by Sept. 2.

In addition to the 11,555 athletes in preliminary entries so far, 4,718 officials are expected to come to Seoul in their countries' Olympic delegations. This is the first Summer Olympics since 1976 in which both the United States and the Soviet bloc countries have entered.

The biggest entries are 639 from the United States, 625 from the Soviet Union, 538 from West Germany, 536 from Canada, 471 from host South Korea, 431 from Britain, 392 from Italy, 379 from France, 370 from East Germany and 322 from China.

North Korea is boycotting the Games in Seoul because it was not allowed to become a co-host. Also staying away are Cuba, Ethiopia, Albania, Nicaragua and the Seychelles.

Cuba, however, has been given until next Wednesday 25 to file an application for a baseball berth in the Games.

The executive committee of the International Baseball Association on Wednesday granted a request from the Cubans to extend the deadline, an IBA official said.

The delay was granted after the Cubans submitted a petition for an extension of Wednesday's deadline, IBA Executive Director David Osinski said.

"In the spirit of international goodwill that the Olympic movement engenders, the IBA has decided to support Cuba's request to delay a decision on the baseball competition," IBA President Dr. Robert E. Smith said. "We are hopeful that this decision will serve the interests of baseball as well as world unity and peace."

Cuba, the reigning world baseball champion, did not compete in the 1984 Olympics, where Japan won the demonstration sport.

Baseball will become a medal sport at the 1992 Summer Olympics in Barcelona, Spain.

Tarpley Wins NBA Sixth Man Award

DALLAS (AP) — Winning the NBA Sixth Man award capped Dallas Mavericks center-forward Roy Tarpley's successful comeback from a battle last year with alcohol and chemical abuse.

"It's a great honor, and I really feel good about winning it," Tarpley said Wednesday as he became the first Dallas player ever to receive a major post-season honor.

Tarpley learned of his award Tuesday night, but not before Mavericks Coach John McLeod had a little fun, telling Tarpley that Utah's Thurl Bailey had walked off with the award.

"My heart about hit the floor," Tarpley said. "Then he told me I had won it."

"I've been sitting on this for a week," MacLeod said after the Mavericks edged Denver 110-106 in Game 5 of their NBA playoff series.

Rose Eases By Hunt, 3-0

WILSON — Rose High School pitchers Tom Moyer and Jamie Brewington combined for a three-hit shutout as the Rampants defeated Wilson Hunt, 3-0, Wednesday night to move their record to 21-0 on the season.

The Rampants, who have already sewn up the Big East Conference baseball championship, are now 13-0 in the league.

Moyer went the first six and two-thirds inning of the game, allowing all three hits. He struck out six and walked five, including two in the final inning, before Brewington came on with the bases loaded to strike out the final batter and end the attempted rally.

Before the seventh inning, Moyer had only allowed two batters to advance past first base, one reaching second and the other moving to third.

In the seventh, Moyer got the opening batter on a pop-up to the catcher, then walked the next two. He struck out the next batter, but walked the next to load the bases.

But Brewington fanned the last batter on four pitches to earn the save.

Rose scored all it needed in the first inning, getting a single run. Tim Moore led off with a walk and moved up on an infield out. He scored on David Daniels single to left.

After failing to threaten in the second and third, the Rampants pushed over one in the fourth. Daniels led off with another hit and advanced on an out. Chris Christopher walked as did Dallas McPherson, loading the bases. A walk to Heath Clark brought in Daniels.

The final run crossed in the fifth. With two away, Daniels again singled, scoring on a double by Moyer. Daniels led the Rose hitting with three and was the only player in the game with more than one.

The Rampants close out their 1988 regular season with a home game against Northeastern of Elizabeth City this afternoon at 4 p.m. at Guy Smith Stadium.

They will then enter the state 4-A playoffs next week against the number three team in the Mideastern Conference, as yet to be determined. The time and date of that game are yet to be set, but Rose will be the host team for the opening round.

PIKEVILLE — Charles B. Aycock kept its bid for second place in the Eastern Plains Conference alive with a 26-1 romp over Farmville Central in baseball action Wednesday.

Three Aycock pitchers held Farmville to only four hits on the day and their lone run came in the first inning. It did, however, stake the Jaguars to a temporary lead.

Mike Vandiford led off with a double and Howard Collins brought him in with a single for a 1-0 lead.

But the lead was shortlived as Aycock scored twice in the bottom of the inning to take the lead for good. Marvin Ford and Mike Odom both walked and advanced on a passed ball. They scored on a single by Paul Reece.

Aycock added seven in the second, seven in the fourth, three in the fifth and seven more in the sixth to wrap up its scoring.

Greg Dickerson hit a three-run homer in the second to spark that inning.

Reece, Greg Chase, Dickerson and Mark Casey each had three hits for Aycock, with Reece adding a triple and Chase a double. Bob Grant and Marvin Ford each had two hits.

No one had more than one hit for Farmville.

The Jaguars, now 5-15 overall and 2-8 in league play, will complete a suspended game with North Pitt this afternoon. The Panthers, following that game, will travel on to Greene Central to play a make-up game.

ROANOKE RAPIDS — Mark Oliver went the distance on the mound for Roanoke Rapids Tuesday afternoon giving up only six hits, while striking out seven, to lead the Yellow Jackets to a 5-2 victory over Williamston in Northeastern Conference baseball action.

Roanoke Rapids broke open a 2-2 contest in the bottom half of the third inning with a trio of runs to close out the scoring for the contest.

For Williamston, Guy Spruill also turned in a complete game on the mound. Spruill gave up only four hits and struck out 12 in the game in picking up the loss.

Spruill was also the only batter for either team to get more than one hit in the contest as he turned in a 2-3 performance at the plate.

The loss dropped the Tigers to 14-6 overall and to 8-4 in conference action.

Oilers...

Both teams left the Northlands Coliseum ice certain they would play better on Friday.

Boston is determined to attack Fuhr and the steady Edmonton defense. The Oilers are anxious to show the world that their high-flying offense is not a thing of the past.

"On the power-play, we have to get more people in front of Fuhr," said Neely, noting that the Bruins were 0-for-6 during manpower advantages. "Fuhr likes to come out far. We have to come out in front of him so he can't see the puck. If we just play the same defensive game and, at the same time, get our offense going, we'll be OK."

The problem is that it's not easy to play well both offensively and defensively against the Oilers. Open up too much offensively and they'll burn you every time.

"We can play a lot better," Edmonton's Kevin Lowe said. "Every day of the Detroit series (a 4-1 Oilers triumph), we got better. I think the same thing will happen in this series."

And, he added, it won't matter who plays goal for the Bruins.

Wellcome.....9
Moose.....2

Ryan Owens hit an inside-the-park grand-slam home run to climax the third inning and lead Wellcome to a 9-2 victory over the Moose in the Tar Heel Little League Wednesday.

Wellcome took the lead with a run in the second but Moose tied it up with one in the top of the fourth.

Then, in the bottom of the fourth, Wellcome struck for six big runs to put it away, 7-1. J.P. Devoe was hit by a pitch to start the frame and Jason Tetterton singled. Greg Hilton walked to load the bases and an error let Devoe score. Chris Seaburg walked to reload the bases and Owens followed with his home run to clear the bases. Later in the inning, Frank Alford reached on a fielder's choice and Jarrett Moore singled. An error allowed Alford to score.

Wellcome added two more in the fifth while the Moose got its other run in the sixth on a homer by Curtis McCray.

Tetterton led the Wellcome hitting with two while McCray had two for the Moose, the only two off the pitching of Devoe.

Optimists.....19
Kiwanis.....1

Kevin Kirkland, Sean Gordon and Aaron Dixon all collected three hits to help pace the Optimists to a 19-1 romp over the Kiwanis in the North State Little League Wednesday.

Byron Langley went the distance for the Optimists, scattering five hits and allowing the only run against his team in the third.

But by then, it was all over as the Optimists pushed over four in the second frame. Langley led off the frame with a double and moved up on a wild pitch. Kirkland walked and stole second. Gordon singled to drive in Langley and an error allowed Kirkland to score. Dixon singled and wild pitches scored Gordon and allowed Dixon to move to third. Trey Haddock walked as did Pat McNally, loading the bases. A hit by Jearl Powell brought Dixon over.

The Optimists added 10 more in the third and five more in the fourth.

Jearl Powell, Langley and Dearn Powell each added two hits for the Optimists while Tutu Moyer and Zeb Atkinson each had two hits for the Kiwanis.

Garris-Evans got two hits from Russell Oats as it outslugged First Citizens, 14-9, in the opening game of the Prep League season Wednesday night.

Garris-Evans took the lead with three runs in the top of the first, while First Citizens came back with one in the bottom of the frame, then scored four in the second for a 5-3 lead. Both scored once in the fourth to make it 6-4. Garris-Evans then tied it up with two in the fifth and regained the lead with one in the sixth, 7-6.

Then, in the top of the seventh, Garris-Evans scored seven times to take a 14-6 lead and wrap it up. Mark Clark led off with a walk and Brett Taylor was hit by a pitch. Buddy Foley walked to load the bases and Brian Fields hit a two-run double. Pedro Turnage walked to load the bases again. Oats hit a single to score two, and Alex Darden walked to reload them once more. Mike Morris, Clark and Taylor all walked once more, forcing in the final runs.

First Citizens rallied for three in the bottom of the inning, but fell short.

Shea Harper led First Citizens with two hits.

Hernandez Recovers To Pace Mets Win

By The Associated Press
Keith Hernandez went down for the count, then got up and knocked out the San Diego Padres.
Hernandez, the New York Mets' all-star first baseman, was kneed by a baserunner in the fifth inning Wednesday night. He was knocked dizzy, but remained in the game after being revived.
"I really don't know (if I was knocked out)," Hernandez said after the Mets beat San Diego 5-2 as Bob Ojeda pitched two-hit ball for 8 1/3 innings. "I was wondering if I was on the base. There was a guy on third. I tried to get up but when I heard (umpire) Lee Weyer say 'out,' I said to hell with this and laid down there a while.
"It was like Tyson's right hand. That's what it felt like. If he came back with a combination, I would have been knocked out."
Two innings later, Hernandez did some slugging of his own against pitcher Jimmy Jones, who had collided with him at first base. With the score 1-1, Ojeda singled, Len Dykstra was safe on catcher Benito Santiago's throwing error, and, after Ojeda was picked off and Wally Backman struck out, Hernandez homered.

"I was ahead of the count and he got the ball over the plate. I hit it," Hernandez explained.
"The homer by Mex really picked me up, a real shot in the arm for me," said Ojeda, who allowed only a fifth-inning single to Keith Moreland and Dickie Thon's ninth-inning leadoff triple. After Thon scored on John Kruk's sacrifice fly, Roger McDowell replaced Ojeda and finished off the Padres.
Elsewhere in the National, it was Montreal 3, Los Angeles 0; San Francisco 5, Philadelphia 1; Houston 4, Pittsburgh 2; St. Louis 4, Chicago 1; and Cincinnati 8, Atlanta 4.

Ojeda, who threw a complete game two-hitter on April 14 against Montreal, walked three and struck out five, allowing San Diego's other run in the sixth when Thon scored from second base on an error by second baseman Backman on a grounder by Kruk. It was Backman's second error of the game.
After Hernandez's homer, Howard Johnson added a bases-loaded double in the four-run seventh inning as the Mets opened a four-game lead on second-place Pittsburgh in the NL East.
New York has won three straight against San Diego since losing that many in San Francisco.
"What I really appreciated was the way we came back here after being shown in SF," Hernandez said. "We showed true character. It didn't surprise me."
Expos 3, Dodgers 0
Homers by Andres Galarraga and

Tim Wallach supported rookie John Dopson's first major league win. Dopson pitched six scoreless innings, allowing three hits.
"I'm glad it finally happened," said Dopson, who spent six years in the minors. "I'm glad it happened early, and that I got it over with. I've waited a long time for this moment and I'm real happy. Now I don't have that mental barrier anymore."
Dodgers starter Orel Hershiser, who has lost two in a row after opening the season 6-0, struck out eight, walked two and allowed five hits. But one of them was Galarraga's eighth homer of the season, leading off the second. That was all Montreal needed.
Giants 5, Phillies 1
At San Francisco, Mike Krukow gave up four hits, struck out six and walked three before being relieved by Scott Garrelts with two on in the ninth. Garrelts got Lance Parrish to hit into a double play to pick up his second save. Parrish had homered in the second inning.
Brett Butler, who had three hits, broke a 1-1 tie with a two-run single in the sixth off Bruce Ruffin, 3-4. Chris Speier also had three hits.

"I did everything a hitter shouldn't do. We got a break," Butler said of his blooped hit. "But we'll take those. We hit a lot of balls hard that were caught."
Astros 4, Pirates 2
Slumping Alan Ashby struck out three times. But he also had a two-run single in the sixth inning, rallying the Astros. Visiting Pittsburgh lost its fifth in a row.
Ashby had four hits in his previous 33 at-bats prior to his game-winner off Doug Drabek. Nolan Ryan, pitched six innings and got the victory, despite striking out only two: Dave Smith got his eighth save by pitching the ninth.
Billy Hatcher singled, Denny Walling reached base on a fielder's choice and Kevin Bass was intentionally walked before Ashby's hit scored Hatcher and Walling.
"That's the way to get one hit and drive in a couple of runs," Ashby said. "It was important to me. I had a rough night otherwise. I hope I can at least keep driving in runs."
Reds 8, Braves 4
At Cincinnati, Dave Collins' suicide squeeze bunt put the Reds ahead in the seventh inning and he added a two-run double in the eighth.

The Reds scored twice in the seventh to overcome a 4-3 deficit. Kal Daniels led off with a double and scored on a one-out single by Barry Larkin. A wild pitch with Paul O'Neill at bat sent Larkin to third, and Collins pinch-hit with a 2-1 count. He went to a full count before laying down the bunt for a run-scoring single.
Cincinnati added three runs in the eighth on four walks and Collins' bases-loaded double.
Jose Rijo, 5-1, pitched four innings of one-hit relief for the win.
Cardinals 4, Cubs 1
Tom Brunansky, whom St. Louis acquired for power, provided plenty at Wrigley Field with a pair of doubles. His second double was good for two runs in the eighth.
With the score 1-1 in the eighth, pinch hitter Terry Pendleton singled and Tom Lawless ran for him. Two outs later, with Lawless at third, Ozzie Smith walked. Willie McGee grounded to third baseman Vance Law, who fumbled the ball, allowing Lawless to score. Brunansky then doubled.
Todd Worrell worked the final 1 2/3 innings for his league-leading 12th save.

ACC Basketball Tournament Moving To Charlotte In 1990

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — The ACC basketball tournament is coming back to Charlotte, N.C.
Paul Buck, who was in Charlotte 20 years ago when the tournament was last held there, couldn't be happier, calling the ACC tournament "the greatest in the business."
"I always say you guys could hold this in the middle of the Pacific Ocean at 4 o'clock in the morning and fill it up," said Buck, director of municipal buildings in Charlotte. "You could. We'll do the job."
The league's NCAA faculty representatives, acting on a recommendation by the league's athletic directors, voted unanimously Wednesday to hold the ACC basketball tournament at the new 23,500-seat Charlotte Coliseum in the 1990 and 1991 seasons.
ACC officials also discussed a possible football tie-in with the Citrus Bowl, but no decision was reached during the league's annual spring meetings that concluded Wednesday.
The Charlotte Coliseum will officially open Aug. 11 but will have to wait until March 1990 for its first ACC tournament.
"We are delighted," ACC Commissioner Gene Corrigan said of the decision to hold the tournament in Charlotte. "We feel like we got a good deal and they got a good deal."
The tournament was last held in Charlotte in the 1969-1970 season at the old 11,666-seat Charlotte Coliseum, which hosted three ACC tournaments before losing its chance at landing the event when Greensboro (N.C.) Coliseum was enlarged in 1971.

Since then, only three sites — the 16,000-seat Greensboro Coliseum, the 16,541-seat Omni in Atlanta and 19,400-seat Capital Centre in Landover, Md., — have held the tournament.
The 1989 tournament will be in Atlanta, while Greensboro had it this past season.
Corrigan said the main reason for picking the Charlotte Coliseum was its seating capacity.
"The prospect of having ... 3,500 more tickets than we would have at Landover and at least 5,000 more than we would have at Atlanta or Greensboro was something the athletic directors just couldn't turn away from," Corrigan said.
The ACC considered putting the tournament in Charlotte for one, two and four years, Corrigan said. He said the conference shied away from a four-year commitment because that would have locked up the event for five years.
North Carolina Athletic Director John Swofford said there was "no compelling reason" to go more than two years.
The tournament has not been at the same site two years in a row since it was held in Greensboro from 1977-80.
Greensboro officials presented a proposal to the league Tuesday, saying they planned to expand seating capacity to 23,000 before the 1992 tournament. Swofford said the Greensboro presentation "had some effect" on the league's decision to restrict its commitment to Charlotte to two years instead of four.

But Swofford acknowledged it would be hard to go to a smaller arena after playing the tournament in Charlotte.
"One of the concerns we'll eventually have after having the number of seats that each school will have in Charlotte is, how do you go back to a smaller arena?" Swofford said. "That's not to say it couldn't happen. But I think that's one of the concerns that we certainly have."
Leading up to the ACC meetings, there were reports the conference was looking at working on a tie-in with the Citrus Bowl in Orlando, Fla.
Clemson defeated Penn State 35-10 in this year's Citrus Bowl. Corrigan said the experience at the bowl by ACC and Clemson officials led the league to look at a possible tie-in.
He said league officials did discuss the matter this week but that they were not looking to make a decision in the near future.
"There is not anything specific to discuss," Corrigan said. "We just discussed it in a general way, about getting together with them; what their aspirations are and whether there would be a fit or not."

Orioles' Home Run For Sixth Win Of Year

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer
Elrod Hendricks was sitting back enjoying his stint as interim manager of the Baltimore Orioles. Then the team acted like, well ... like the Baltimore Orioles.

"For a while, when we were up 8-2, I thought that was it," said Hendricks, filling in for manager Frank Robinson who is hospitalized with a ruptured disc. "I thought we had them right where we wanted them."

Before the Orioles sewed up their sixth victory in 37 games, Hendricks saw the California Angels rally for five runs in the final two innings and almost tie the game when Fred Lynn made a charging catch of a sinking liner by Johnny Ray for the final out. "I'm drained," Hendricks said after Baltimore's 8-7 victory Wednesday night. "And I thought I suffered in the bullpen."

In other American League games, it was Detroit 3, Milwaukee 1; Boston 4, Oakland 1; Cleveland 2, Chicago 1; Texas 4, Toronto 0; and Kansas City 8, Minnesota 2. The Seattle-New York game was postponed by rain.

Baltimore took advantage of eight walks and two wild pitches by loser Mike Witt, 1-5.
"We had some timely base hits, and I guess the walks helped, too," Hendricks said. "I don't know what was wrong with Witt. He usually pitches well against us."

The Orioles snapped a 2-2 tie in the sixth inning, scoring five runs on four walks, a single and a misjudged line drive that turned into a three-run double.

fourth homer of the season, increasing the Orioles' lead to 8-2. It proved to be the winning run.
"But the Angels just kept coming back," Hendricks said.
Rookie Jose Bautista, a 23-year-old right hander making his second career start, gave up five hits in seven innings and retired 11 straight batters in one stretch for his first major-league victory. But he began the California eighth by walking Dick Schofield and giving up a single to Brian Downing. Reliever Doug Sisk came on and walked Mark McLemore to load the bases.
Wally Joyner singled home two runs, and after Sisk walked Davis, Don Aase relieved. Johnny Ray singled in McLemore with California's fifth run before Aase halted the rally.
A walk to Lynn, an infield single by Cal Ripken and an intentional walk to Eddie Murray loaded the bases against Witt with none out in the Baltimore sixth. Larry Sheets drove in the first run with a groundout to second and Jim Dwyer was intentionally walked to load the bases again.
The second run was forced in when Witt walked Mickey Tettleton. One out later, Bill Ripken's line drive to right bounced past Chili Davis for a three-run double.
The five-run outburst matched the biggest inning of the season for the Orioles.

Robinson And Houston Happy To Be Playing

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — David Robinson and Kevin Houston are just glad to be on a basketball court with other players. The fact that it's the Olympic Trials just makes it better.
Robinson and Houston are two of the 92 players who began practice Wednesday under Coach John Thompson in hopes of making the 12-man team which will represent the United States in the Seoul Olympics.

Both players graduated from college in 1987 and each had a military obligation to fulfill. One was storied, the other almost a secret.
The 7-foot Robinson finished his career at the Naval Academy as the 10th-leading scorer in NCAA history and as the career and season record holder for blocked shots. He was the first player taken in the NBA draft after being named College Player of the Year, but he has to serve his obligation before joining the San Antonio Spurs.

Houston led the nation in scoring in 1986-87, averaging 32.9 points per game for Army. But being just 5-11, there weren't any NBA teams waiting with large contracts until his commitment ends.
Both worked out on their own while serving in the military and played on an AAU all-star team last month.

"I'm not playing the way I want to play but I haven't played with guys of this caliber since the Pan Am Games and that was a few months ago so I'm a little rusty," Robinson said. "The AAU competition wasn't bad. It allowed me to run up and down the court."
Running was about all that was available to Robinson in his personal workouts.
"Working out by yourself is unbelievably hard," Robinson said. "Running sprints and workouts by yourself are hard but now I have an opportunity to play with these guys. I'll be fine. I'll concentrate on the things I do well, like rebounding."
Houston agreed with Robinson that working out alone is difficult.
"Sometimes when you work out on your own you think you're working hard, but then someone else will see you and tell you that you're not," Houston said. "The team I played on with David was my first organized basketball in quite a while. It was 2-on-2 and 3-on-3 except for that."
"Luckyly, I've been able to work with Dad a lot on my shooting to prepare for here."
Robinson is the man who drew all the attention at the media day, and Houston says that's all right with him.

"You have to keep everything in perspective," Houston said. "You wouldn't be here if people didn't think you deserved to. I know there are a lot of great players here but I won't get caught up in that."
Thompson is more than aware of who is at the Trials.

Robinson scored the go-ahead run on a ninth-inning balk by Milwaukee's Teddy Higuera as Detroit defeated the Brewers. With the score 1-1, Salazar led off the ninth with a single and went to third on a single by Alan Trammell. On a 1-0 pitch to Chet Lemon, Higuera, 3-3, was called for his fifth balk of the season, sending Salazar home and Trammell to second. Trammell later scored on Larry Herndon's sacrifice fly.
Detroit's Doyle Alexander, 4-2, allowed eight hits, walked three and struck out seven.
Ray Knight had four hits for the Tigers.
Indians 2, White Sox 1
Joe Carter doubled home two runs and Tom Candiotti, 6-1, pitched his sixth complete game as Cleveland defeated Chicago. Carter's two-run double off Melido Perez, 3-1, gave the Indians their seventh victory in their last eight games.
Candiotti allowed seven hits, struck out seven and walked none as he lowered his ERA to 2.04. His sixth complete game tied Chris Bosio of Milwaukee for the major-league lead.

Stewart walked a career-high nine batters, allowed five hits and set a major league record with his 12th balk of the season.
In the seventh, Parker dropped Mike Greenwell's high fly for a two-base error and, after Sam Horn walked, Todd Benzing bunted in front of the plate. Stewart fielded the ball and threw wildly, allowing two runs to score. Ed Romero then singled home Boston's fourth run.
Oakland's Carney Lansford had a pair of singles for his 21st multi-hit game, tops in the majors. His 63 hits also leads the majors.
Rangers 4, Blue Jays 0
Geno Petralli's two-run double off the glove of Lloyd Moseby was the key hit and Ray Hayward, 3-0, pitched a six-hitter as Texas defeated Toronto.
Ruben Sierra and Steve Buechele hit consecutive solo homers in the seventh inning off Todd Stottlemyre, 1-5, to seal the victory.
The victory completed a two-game sweep for the Rangers. Texas had dropped nine straight games at Exhibition Stadium before winning in extra innings on Tuesday.
Royals 8, Twins 2
Home runs by Bo Jackson, Kurt Stillwell and Danny Tartabull backed Bret Saberhagen's eight-hitter as Kansas City downed Minnesota. Saberhagen, 5-4, struck out four and walked four as he threw the 35th complete game of his career. He has four of the Royals' six complete games this season.
Stillwell, the ninth batter in the order, broke a 1-1 tie in the fifth when he hit a two-run homer off Allan Anderson, 1-3. Stillwell, who singled in the third, is 7-for-15 in his last five games and has homered in his last two.

Stewart walked a career-high nine batters, allowed five hits and set a major league record with his 12th balk of the season.
In the seventh, Parker dropped Mike Greenwell's high fly for a two-base error and, after Sam Horn walked, Todd Benzing bunted in front of the plate. Stewart fielded the ball and threw wildly, allowing two runs to score. Ed Romero then singled home Boston's fourth run.

NBC Will Try To Convince Cosby To Stay On Show

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC is hoping that Bill Cosby will still be having such fun in his fifth year of "The Cosby Show" that the network can persuade its No. 1 star to stay on past next season.

Cosby had said he would only do five years of "The Cosby Show," which quickly became the top-rated network show four seasons ago and is credited with putting NBC into first place.

"This is our fifth season, and it's supposed to be our last, so I'm going to have my fun this year — not in messing up, but in doing things even better," Cosby told advertisers here Wednesday to get a peek at the network's fall lineup.

ABC and CBS are also scheduled to announce their fall schedules this month.

At a news conference, NBC Entertainment President Brandon Tartikoff said the network hoped to persuade Cosby to stay after next season.

"If he's having fun, and he's got stories to tell, we might convince him to come back," said Tartikoff, though he added that there had been no formal talks with Cosby.

At Wednesday's presentation, NBC unveiled some of its new series. Tartikoff insisted the network is not playing it safe with the fall schedule, having canceled some successful but aging series and adding stylish, new shows. Advertisers were shown clips from some of them.

"Midnight Caller" stars Gary Cole ("Fatal Vision") as a mouthy, troubled ex-cop who is persuaded by a radio station owner to take on a late-night radio call-in show and becomes a cult hero. The show is set in San Francisco. The clips from the pilot looked a little derivative — it was directed by Thomas Carter, the talented director of the "Miami Vice" pilot — but Cole is a charismatic actor, and the series shows promise.

"Baby Boom," based on and produced by the same people who did the movie of the same name, stars Kate

Jackson in the Diane Keaton role as a high-powered career woman suddenly saddled with an infant she inherits from a distant relative. The clips got laughs from advertisers, and the show looks to be a sophisticated winner.

Another tantalizing, sophisticated hour-long series, "Tattling's," comes from the producers of "St. Elsewhere" and shows the same smart dramatic and comic twists. It stars Stephen Collins, sure to be a new TV heartthrob, as a flamboyant, recently divorced restaurateur who battles rude cabbies, drug dealers and mobsters while courting his long-suffering ex-wife (Blythe Danner).

Another virtually certain hit is "Dear John," starring fine comic actor Judd Hirsch ("Taxi") as a newly divorced middle-aged man. It is based on a BBC series of the same name and will go into NBC's Thursday lineup of hit comedies.

Likewise "Empty Nest," from the makers of "Golden Girls," starring Richard Mulligan as a recently widowed pediatrician contending with life and kids. The show will follow "Golden Girls" on Saturday night, and there will be some crossover of characters between the two series.

NBC canceled "The Facts of Life," "Crime Story," "A Year in the Life," "Our House," "Beverly Hills Buntz," "The Bronx Zoo" and "Aaron's Way."

Jimmy Stewart Turns 80 Friday

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Asked how he felt about reaching his 80th birthday, Jimmy Stewart responded in characteristic Jimmy Stewart style: "Ah... well... uh, it seems rather high."

Reached at his office Wednesday, Stewart remarked that he hadn't given the milestone much thought. "Frankly, it sneaked up on me. After 75, I didn't pay much attention."

The birthday is Friday, but Jimmy doesn't plan any special observance. "Gloria has fixed up a party," he said. "I'll leave it all up to her."

The day is likely to be like any other. Every morning he leaves the Roxbury Drive house he has shared with wife, Gloria, for 39 years and drives to his office. He often has lunch at the Beverly Hills Hotel, then returns to the office to answer his mail.

'Best' New Shows To Return In Fall

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Television's two best new shows are off the air just now but both seem likely to return in the fall. Let us give thanks.

In a purely personal survey, "Frank's Place" on CBS and "The Wonder Years" on ABC tied for best new show. The runner-up was ABC's "China Beach."

With the season over, let's take a look back at the best and the worst. This is strictly one reporter's opinion, and there are no awards — or booty prizes.

"Frank's Place," which stars Tim Reid as a New England college professor who inherits his father's Creole restaurant in New Orleans, is well-written and has wonderfully defined characters. It's a so-called "dramedy" with few laughs, but the stories are grabbing and get into the characters. It's also the first TV show to capture the essence of New Orleans and appreciate the difference between Creole and Cajun.

"The Wonder Years," told from the perspective of an adult looking back on his youth, is like reliving adolescence, but in the safety, and sweet privacy, of your living room. It all rings true: the domineering older brother, the nerdy best friend, the confusing infatuation with girls, and the parents who want to help but don't quite understand.

"China Beach," which tells of the women in Vietnam, has wonderfully drawn characters. You really care about these people.

Here are other best shows of the year:

"L.A. Law," NBC — The writing is unbelievably good, at times bordering on tasteless and tacky, yet so right for these offbeat, well-defined, well-cast characters.

"St. Elsewhere," NBC — Another show with great writing that dared to take chances and push the limitations of taste and naughtiness.

"Newhart," CBS — An underrated show that is a perfect blending of concept, writing, characters and acting. It's always true to its characters, always funny.

"Beauty and the Beast," CBS — The show that took the year's corniest concept and made it work as the most romantic show of recent memory.

"Designing Women," CBS — The first show to find Southern women both intelligent and incredibly funny.

"Aaron's Way," NBC — Wonderful schmaltz, well-written, best family show of the year. That didn't do it any good, though. NBC canceled it.

"Golden Girls," NBC — You know exactly how each character will react, yet you can't wait for them to do it. Funny, funny, funny.

"Cheers," NBC — Best comeback of the year. The show seemed to be on its way out, but they gave it a fresh, new look.

"Night Court," NBC — Naughty, naughty, naughty. And incredibly funny.

"Tour of Duty," CBS — It isn't "Platoon," but it's not bad.

Other good shows: "Murder, She Wrote" on CBS, "Matlock" on NBC, and "Head of the Class" and "Perfect Strangers," both on ABC.

 Sometimes you are marked with a certain card, either by the bidding or the play. In that event, it often pays to play that card at the first opportunity. It could yield surprising results.

East-West were using weak two-bids. Once South heard that neither East nor West had an opening bid, he knew he was going to find some useful cards in his partner's hand, so his three-spade bid carried little risk. North was delighted at the turn of events, and raised to game.

West elected to lead his singleton club. East cashed the king-ace and continued with a third round. Had West ruffed low, it would have been the third and last trick for the defense, assuming declarer was a skilled card reader. Since East did not open the bidding and had only made a single raise of his partner's hearts, it was highly unlikely that he held the king of spades in addition to the ace-king of clubs he had already shown. Therefore, as soon as declarer gained the lead he would have banged out the ace of spades, and that would have ended matters. Fortunately, West was wise to the inferences declarer might draw from the auction. Instead of ruffing the third club with the ten, he ruffed with the king, the card he almost surely had to have! Now declarer had a choice of lines.

West exited with the king of hearts. Declarer won in dummy and, thinking that East held the remaining three trumps, he led a low trump from dummy and finessed the six when East followed with the ten for a one-trick set.
