Edgecombe Groups Fight Board Proposal To Create Waste Site

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

TARBORO — The Citizens for Democracy and Safety have called for a public rally Monday night as a show of force against a proposal by the Edgecombe County Board of Commissioners to create a waste management park in the eastern part of the county.

And the Tarboro-Edgecombe Association of Manufacturers — TEAM — has adopted a resolution asking that commissioners not offer the county as a site for any hazardous waste facility "until and unless a favorable vote is obtained in a public referendum on the subject," according to Marvin Horton, president of the group.

The proposed park would include a low-level radioactive waste dump and a comprehensive hazardous waste treatment facility.

TEAM is an organization of 24 manufacturing firms which employ about 6,000 people in the county, Horton said.

Tarboro lawyer Jimmie Keel, co-treasurer of the citizens group, said the rally will be at 6 p.m. at Edgecombe Community College.

Edgecombe commissioners have scheduled a public hearing on the waste park plan for 7:30 p.m. Monday at the community college.

At an 11 a.m. press conference today at the Edgecombe County Courthouse, representatives of the Citizens for Democracy and Safety delivered a letter to commissioners charging that the process the board followed in proposing to locate the waste facilities in the county has been unfair, and questioning the board's "moral and legal authority to pursue it the way they are doing it," Keel said by telephone today.

Randy Davis of Tarboro, another spokesman for the Citizens for Democracy and Safety, said, "I question how many tourists would come to Edgecombe County, or even to Greenville or Rocky Mount, if there is this park."

Reagan Basks In London Tributes

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Hailed by trumpet fanfares and cheering crowds, President Reagan today savored London's pageantry-filled tribute to his performance at the Moscow summit and a toast from Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher as "one of the greatest U.S. presidents."

The president rode triumphantly through the streets of the British capital near the end of a two-day stopover en route home from Moscow. Londoners waved at his motorcade from along the River Thames, from the tops of double-decker buses and from boats in Hyde Park's Serpentine Lake.

Flanked by bewigged, scarlet-robed city fathers at Guildhall, the 12th century seat of London's lord mayor, Reagan was welcomed as a peacemaker and won a standing ovation for an emotional speech on East-West relations, laced with jibes at the anti-nuclear lobby and jokes about his age.

Lord Mayor Sir Greville Spratt invoked the names of Ulysses S. Grant and Woodrow Wilson, past U.S. presidents who have spoken at Guildhall, and reached to Milton and Shakespeare for words to describe his admiration for Reagan.

Not to be outdone, Mrs. Thatcher quoted Tennyson's line, "Strong in will, to strive, to seek, to find and not to yield." Turning to Reagan, she said:

"Thank you Mr. President, thank you for the summit, thank you for your presidency, thank you for your testament of belief and God bless America."

The only visible dissent came from actress Julie Christie and eight other British show business personalities who picketed Guildhall during Reagan's speech to protest U.S. involvement in Nicaragua. They waved placards reading, "U.S. Out of Central America" and distributed leaflets urging withdrawal of support for the Contra rebels.

"The president saw a more open society in Red Square than here in London," Miss Christie said, complaining that police kept the demonstrators out of sight of the president's motorcade.

Mrs. Thatcher hailed Reagan's summit talks as "a tremendous success."

Reagan returned the compliment, paying a special tribute to his close friend and ally. The president noted that Mrs. Thatcher had been among the first to suggest the West could "do business" with Gorbachev.

A Rousing Start

RALEIGH (AP) — Sparks flew on the legislative session's opening day as the Senate debated a bill to outlaw topless dancing by minors that a supporter said was needed to protect children from patrons of "scumbag bars."

"What we're talking about, they're pedophiles... the ones that enjoy sex with children," Sen. Bob Shaw, R-Guilford, said Thursday. "I can't believe that somebody wants to go along with that bunch of whoevers that sit in the joint someplace and have 14- and 15-year-old children up there on the stage performing topless."

But Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus, said there already were laws to prevent topless dancing by under-age girls. He denounced the "ludicrous... stupid" bill and said its critics had been targeted for unfair criticism in the recent primary campaign.

"It's those fundamentalists," Johnson said. "They used that against some good men in the campaign."

The argument livened up an otherwise routine opening day of the 1988 General Assembly, which consisted of brief floor sessions, speechmaking and politicking.

Hard Work Paid Off For Spelling Winner

By ALAN FRAM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — National Spelling Bee winner Rageshree Ramachandran says she's not sure what profession she'll pursue, but she already knows that hard work pays off.

"Study as much as you can, and don't stop after the eighth grade because it's what comes later that counts," is her advice to other would-be champions.

The 13-year-old from Fair Oaks, Calif., outlasted runner-up Victor C. Wang of Camarillo, Calif., in a grueling 45-minute, one-on-one finale Thursday.

Her winning word in the 61st annual contest, sponsored by Scripps Howard newspapers, was "elegiacal," an adjective used to describe the couplets, or pairs of lines, in some poems.

As the judges nodded their heads that she had won and the hundreds of spectators in the hotel ballroom applauded and cheered, she stepped back from the microphone and a smile spread across her face.

Senators, Martin Discuss Waste Site

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

Gov. Jim Martin told two state senators from Pitt County he understands why local residents are concerned about the possibility of a radioactive waste dump site in Edgecombe County, but not much can be done until Edgecombe County Commissioners formally propose a site.

At the request of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, state senators Thomas F. Taft, D-Pitt, and R.L. "Bob" Martin, D-Pitt, met with the governor Thursday afternoon to ask him to discuss the 3,000-acre waste management park Edgecombe Commissioners have proposed.

"He understood the concerns that we expressed, but he said it was not appropriate for regional input and consideration on any major basis until after the county volunteered," Taft said. "He feels Edgecombe would have to volunteer before we would have any input into the program."

The state is committed to hosting a low-level radioactive waste site to serve eight Southeastern states by 1992, and the Edgecombe Commissioners have proposed the waste

Joblessness Is Up Again

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's civilian unemployment rate rose to 5.6 percent in May — only its second increase in 20 months — as 518,000 fewer Americans were at work than in the previous month, the government said today.

The 0.2 percentage point increase from a 14-year-low jobless rate of 5.4 percent was accompanied by an increase of 173,000 in the number of people listed by the Labor Department as officially unemployed.

The department said the labor force, those either holding jobs or actively looking for them, shrunk by 363,000 to 122.7 million.

The figures are based on a monthly survey of the nation's households. The rate is seasonally adjusted to discount for periodic, predictable influences on the calculations.

A separate survey of employer payrolls showed the economy creating 210,000 jobs in May, but that was down from an average job growth over the last year of 250,000 a month.

The 0.2 percentage point drop in April's jobless rate — the first since October's small 0.1 percentage point rise and a match to the 0.2 percent gain recorded in September 1986 — had been propelled largely by assembly line hiring as manufacturers tried to keep with the surging foreign demand for American products.

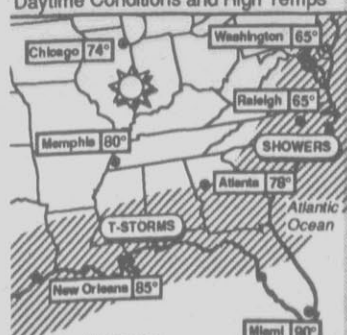

AWARD PRESENTED — The North Carolina Department of Labor presented 30 safety awards for outstanding on-the-job safety at its annual banquet Thursday night. The banquet was sponsored by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce and was held for Pitt and Beaufort counties. Receiving the plaque for 15 years of consecutive safety was Collins and Aikman of

Two Arrested In Kidnapping Case

Greenville police have arrested two people in connection with a kidnapping case reported to the department in late April — the alleged victim and the alleged kidnapper.

Detective John Nichols said Emmanuelle McLaughlin, 38, of Winterville, was charged with kidnapping, extortion and larceny in connection with the incident, while Ishmael Alvarado, 21, of Cherry Point, has been charged with breaking and entering and assault on a female charges.

Nichols said Alvarado reported to police on April 23, that a man identifying himself as a police officer threatened to arrest him after Alvarado entered a house through an open door near the intersection of Fifth and Ash streets, where a woman was asleep on a couch.

Rather than arrest him, Alvarado said, the man took his identification, a gold chain, and demanded $1,500 in cash, to be delivered at a meeting set for April 25.

Nichols said that following the meeting on April 25, McLaughlin was taken into custody on kidnapping, extortion and larceny charges.

Alvarado was later charged with breaking and entering the house near the intersection of Fifth and Ash streets and with assault on a female charges in connection with the incident.

Detective J.E. Harris said Alvarado was arrested on April 17 on two peeping tom charges.

Harris said one of the charges stemmed from an April 15 incident in the 1100 block of Charles Street, while the second peeping tom charge resulted from an April 16 incident in the 100 block of North Meade Street.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Quality Corridor

Wilson U.S. 264 Bypass Plan OK

A Wilson County Chamber of Commerce endorsement of a close-in corridor for a U.S. 264 bypass could mean a speeded-up schedule of construction for this essential eastern freeway.

The Wilson County Chamber was less than enthusiastic about a route which would place the new U.S. 264 about seven miles south of the city of Wilson. The chamber did a nine-month study of the routing and has now proposed a location closer to Wilson. It is most important, however, that the new construction, as endorsed, would be a fully controlled access route.

The chamber proposal calls for the new route to begin at the end of the present U.S. 264 freeway east of Wilson. There would be interchanges at the Old Black Creek Road (Hackney Industrial Park area), U.S. 301 near the Wilson County Fairgrounds and at N.C. 42 just west of Forest Hill Road.

From that point a connector would be built to the present U.S. 264. That four-lane section would take traffic across I-95 to the current freeway from Wilson to Raleigh.

But the Wilson County Chamber proposal calls for putting off the final segment of U.S. 264, which would cross I-95 at its own interchange, until traffic warrants. That hesitancy is puzzling since completing the entire bypass would be to Wilson's advantage. The type of interchange that would be required would mark Wilson as an important population center to travelers on I-95 and it would also offer another exit from I-95 at Wilson.

Nevertheless, anything that moves along the progress of U.S. 264 construction can be regarded as positive. Eastern North Carolina must remain true to its goals of a fully controlled U.S. 264 highway, with access only at interchanges, from Greenville to Raleigh. The proposal put forth by the Wilson County Chamber is faithful to that concept except for the few remaining miles west of Wilson. That, too, should be completed without any undue delay.

U.S. 264 freeway will serve the fastest growing area of eastern North Carolina and, as such, it offers hope for improved economic conditions for the entire region.

The Wilson County Chamber's proposal gives the opportunity to get this much-needed segment planned and under construction as rapidly as possible. That is what this entire section of eastern North Carolina so badly needs.

Groundwork

No Specific Progress, Just Talk

It would be a mistake to attempt to cite specific agreements which came out of the summit conference between President Reagan and Mikhail S. Gorbachev in Moscow.

Like most such meetings between the leaders of two great nations, commitments are not made. The leaders develop dialogue and that opens discussions between foreign ministers and others skilled in diplomacy, which can lead to understanding and eventual agreements.

Viewed in this perspective the Reagan-Gorbachev summit was a huge success. It was, in fact an extraordinary meeting between the leaders of the world's most powerful nations. It was interesting that President Reagan made his points about human rights in the Soviet Union without upsetting the later talks between himself and Gorbachev. The president met with dissidents and visited churches in the Soviet with full coverage by the American media.

It is well, too, to note that American television and print media covered the visit to Moscow much as they would an event on home soil. They talked to many Soviet citizens, probed Soviet problems from alcoholism to Afghanistan and generally seemed to have full run.

That is not to say the Soviets now have an open society. The United States is told that the coverage of the summit was far different on the state controlled Soviet television and in newspapers.

It is obvious, however, that changes have taken place under Gorbachev. The summit meet had irony in that it is likely Gorbachev will be negotiating with a new United States president in less than a year. That is probable because our system calls for the election of a new president in November. Gorbachev could be in power for many years — or he could be gone before Reagan.

In his final months President Reagan may have made his most important contribution to world understanding and peace. The old communist fighter has amicable discussions with the most important communist leader. With such a short time left in office, President Reagan could not engage in long-range projections. What he did contribute, however, was to lay the ground work for his successor to continue a dialogue with the Soviet leader.

Public Forum

To the editor:

The temptation to push through a hazardous and radioactive dump while the people of Edgecombe County are dazzled with promises of jobs, education, roads, and general prosperity is understandable. It is, of course, highly offensive to those in other counties who have no promises to dazzle them and who can see only too clearly their share in the expected evil effects through water and air pollution and through trucking of waste through their communities.

North Carolina has a good reputation for encouraging industries to reuse their toxics, recycle each other's wastes, and otherwise reduce the amount of hazardous waste to be disposed of (source reduction). The people have the right, even the duty, to demand:

1. Heroic source-reduction and pollution-prevention measures for N.C. hazardous waste. No invitations to or acceptance of new polluters above a low publicized level.
2. The same for the radioactive waste from all the Southeastern Compact states.
3. Careful evaluation of the geologic suitability of proposed sites before selection.
4. Regular publicized monitoring of dumps.
5. The right to close a dump that repeatedly violates the conditions agreed to.

To the editor:

This letter is in response to one published on May 17 written by Justin Sturz. I guess I'm one of the "peaceniks" he referred to in his closing paragraph.

I became involved in the peace movement five years ago and, while I admit I have much to learn about world politics, I know enough to feel strongly that the mindset demonstrated by Mr. Sturz only reinforces the hatred and distrust our children and young adults feel towards countries and governments we do not know nor understand.

I do not "trust" the communists totally, but I feel we have a moral obligation to future generations to begin somewhere.

The Soviets have broken treaties in the past, but the U.S. record is not blemish-free (i.e. violating the SALT II in November, 1986, when we launched our 131st cruise missile-carrying B-52 bomber.)

Mr. Sturz accused the Communists of consistent lying and cheating... I love my country and am very patriotic, but I would not be naive enough to think we do not hear our share of lying and cheating from our government.

One only has to read about the Iran-Contra Affair.

A Troubling Forecast Confirmed

WASHINGTON — A cause of seemingly inexplicable racism erupting on American college campuses became clearer than ever to Secretary of Education William J. Bennett when he read comments of one black June graduate who said he saw no racism at his school — the U.S. Military Academy at West Point.

"You're judged here totally on your merits," Cadet Michael K. Barsella told New York Times military correspondent Richard Halloran. "There's no affirmative action, no breaks, no slurs."

To Bennett, an integrationist who still follows Martin Luther King Jr.'s dream of a color-blind society, the key to West Point's racial harmony in contrast to racial turbulence at colleges across the continent is "no affirmative action." Intended by its sponsors as a "temporary" expedient to boost black enrollment, racially based admission has raised racial barriers and animosity.

That is the only plausible explanation for the blight on college campuses that began last autumn, continued through the school year and most likely will continue following the summer break. Twenty-five years after the civil rights revolution, white students on the nation's most prestigious campuses are accused of racism.

Groups of white and black students fought at Columbia University. A black freshman's complaint at Berkeley that white students damaged her bicycle set off an all-day sit-in at a college where students voluntarily segregate themselves by race everywhere from sporting events to dining halls. The president of Denison College in Granville, Ohio, ended the school year by resigning after being pressured to dismiss white students accused of yelling racial epithets at a black senior.

When five white students at the University of Massachusetts last winter were accused of beating two black students, 200 minority students occupied a building in protest and presented demands (including "ethnic" food at cafeterias). Chancellor Joseph D. Duffey not only agreed to much of the agenda but delivered a basket of fruit when the student trespassers complained of hunger.

That pattern has been repeated coast to coast and surely will resume in September: allegations of white racism, direct action by angry blacks, surrender by supine college administrators in ways that raise barriers between races. Stanford's change of academic content under pressure from protesters set the standard.

Tendency by students to play copy-cat may mean some white provocation is imaginary. But there is no doubt much of it is real. Racist stickers declaring "death to race mixers" appearing at Penn State University could not have been conceived of there in the 1960s.

What has happened was presciently forecast in 1979 by Bennett writing in collaboration with Terry Eastland, the former Justice Department spokesman in the Reagan administration. In their book "Counting by Race: Equality from the Founding Fathers to Bakke and Weber," they argued that an admissions policy based on race "resurrects the claim of the racial bigot."

Eastland and Bennett wrote that the "softening" bigot, noting a different admissions policy for blacks, "is invited once more to believe his earlier judgment, that black or brown are synonymous with incompetence or worse." So, they concluded, "counting by race... draws attention to differences, and though not intending to do so, exacerbates them in some minds."

But the agreement to black student demands only tightens the separation between races and prospects for racial friction. Bennett told us he deplores "focusing on race," asking, "Is this what we integrationists fought for?"

A few are still fighting. Boston University has just turned down demands for black (and Irish-American) dormitories. But Bennett has few allies in Washington. At the start of President Reagan's second term, Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan deftly strangled efforts, led by Attorney General Edwin Meese III, to back away from affirmative action. Nowhere has the Reagan Revolution been more Thermidor-like.

Bennett argues that breaking down these new racial barriers is the university's responsibility. But it is also an opportunity for George Bush. Unexciting to conservatives, unappealing to blue-collar voters and seemingly immobilized by the Reagan administration's lame-duck paralysis, the vice president would surprise if he proposed integration as the way to campus peace. It would be so out of character that Bush could breathe life into his dormant campaign by joining Cadet Barsella in saying "No affirmative action."

Computers Can Commit Human Error

Fear of computers — call it analogophobia — is a civil-libertarian neurosis so far unsubstantiated by fact. Only a decade ago, Americans were afraid of losing identity and privacy to machines that would make them numbers instead of names, reducing their persons to something as impersonal as a series of digits on a Social Security card or lumping all their heretofore separate credit codes into one big serial number.

Then we learned that machines, like people, make mistakes. Instead of prying into every cranny of a citizen's life, baring secrets withheld from loan officers or revealing political idiosyncrasies, the computers' outrages turned out to be bills sent to the wrong parties or failures to credit consumers with bills already paid.

Far from being omniscient, computers were error-prone because the people who operate them were — and are — error-prone.

Computers can't keep track of a human being with a real name, much less a number. The Jack Smiths and Jack Joneses of this world are no less confused with each other today than they were when mere people tried to recognize the dignity of the individual. The Arthur D. Seidenbaums of this world, people whose cumbersome identities must be spelled aloud for every reservation or receptionist, are more confused than they used to be.

On my office wall are computer-generated letters ostensibly aimed at me; in their varieties of address they hang as a rich mosaic of imprecise word-processing.

To the Easton Press of Norwalk, Conn., offering leather-bound books to "a privileged group of individuals," I am Art S. Edit. To Inc. Magazine, aimed at American enterprisers, I am Art S. Um. To the Jose Drudis-Biada Art Gallery of Mount St. Mary's College, my name is Eiden Baum Art.

The Los Angeles County Museum of Art, by contrast, knows me as Art S. Opnion. And so does Amnesty International. Among the thousands of mailing lists for sale in this great nation, one of them is busy merchandising me as Opnion, perhaps a misspelling of the Los Angeles Times' Opinion department where this wall full of misnomers is daily witness to the compounding of computer error.

The Constitutional Rights Foundation, bastion of civil liberty, addresses me as Art Seidman. The Foundation for America's Future calls me Art Seidenbaum. (Imagine the difficulty of generating an extra letter for an already run-on name.)

The most improbable and unpronounceable identity I have been forced to assume, however, is at home. US Sprint, the long-distance telephone service, addresses me as Art Seodembaum every month, with a bill. For two years I have paid those bills, using checks with my real name, hand-lettering a correction of the computer error and asking to be dunned properly. I have never received an answer, a correction or anything but a new bill for Seodembaum's telephone calls.

I wonder whether my widow, heirs or assigns will have to assume such a burden after I'm gone. Meanwhile, no one need worry about computers; so long as they are servants of human programmers, the machines will behave much like people — keeping some secrets, remembering a few faces but forgetting most names and generally refusing to admit mistakes.

Bobby's Death Left Disenchantment For A Young Generation

WASHINGTON — There are times when an entire culture takes the shape of a single event. A political assassination, after all, is a way station in our lives. Indeed, it must be for good or profound reason that virtually every tuned in person can remember exactly where they were when they heard the dreadful news of June 6, 1968, that Robert Francis Kennedy had died of gun shot wounds at the Good Samaritan Hospital in Los Angeles.

There is no underestimating the impact of Kennedy's death on the baby boom generation. The educated young of that generation, in particular, had felt Kennedy's call in 1968 and they projected their ideals onto him. His subsequent death symbolized the tragedy of innocence. With Bobby around, millions felt there was hope, and then there was nothing.

In rethinking the aftermath of June 1968, one can't help but feel a sense of betrayal. Young people who'd been drawn into the political process were on their own after Kennedy's death. And they felt a sense of stark loneliness and terror. There was also a rage at the incalculable odds and burden they felt they must carry to bring about change in America. Many in this crowd have never felt young again.

Waiting for another politician to duplicate the Kennedy magic has been the tall order that the Democratic Party has been waiting for to elicit millions of baby boomers back into the political fold. But they haven't come yet, as demonstrated by this generation's lukewarm participation in the 1988 presidential primaries. Without a politician like Kennedy around, or one of their own, this broad generation seems destined to remain unrepresented.

My personal memories of Robert Kennedy go back more than 20 years. I watched him in the Senate, on the campaign trail and at his home. In the fall of 1966, he campaigned vigorously in California on behalf of then Gov. Pat Brown against actor Ronald Reagan. Kennedy never took Reagan seriously and urged Californians that year to send "Ronald Reagan back to the movies." It's ironic that 20 years after Kennedy's death, it is Ronald Reagan, and not someone of Kennedy's spirit or generation, who is in Moscow negotiating with the Russians.

Back in the 1960's Kennedy's mark was everywhere. During the summer of 1967, when I served as a Senate intern, it was Robert Kennedy who volunteered the use of his office as a headquarters for Senate interns to organize against their bosses who supported the Vietnam war. In addition to loaning out his office, Kennedy regularly invited interns who worked for Democratic senators to swim and play tennis at his home on weekends.

What I remember most from traveling periodically on Kennedy's campaign plane in 1968 was how gutsy he was. In a way, Kennedy was like a prize fighter. On the campaign trail he'd jump into crowds of well-wishers who'd pull his hair, rip at his shirt and try to grab his cuff-links.

After each stop, this small, well-built candidate would bound up stairs into the aircraft, bloodied by campaign crowds, and change into a new shirt, while aides placed vasoline over his badly scratched arms.

But with Robert Kennedy's death, a younger generation was given reason to despise a system for failing them, that they so desperately wanted to work within. Twenty years later many of the best minds from this generation haven't been able to shake the sense of helplessness they felt on the morning of June 6, 1968.

Preaching Students Miss School After Suspension

ARION, N.C. (AP) — School officials breathed a sigh of relief when 5-year-old street preacher Matthew Strode and his sister failed to return to school after their latest 10-day suspension.

"It was good to have a nice quiet morning," David Ricketts, superintendent of McDowell County Schools, said Thursday. Matthew and his sister, Pepper, 6, have been suspended four times for defying school authorities and breaking school rules by preaching, or in Pepper's case standing, outside Eastfield Elementary School after being asked to enter the building.

The children's father, David Strode, said he saw no need to send his children to school because arrangements had been made for them to take their final tests today, the last day of school.

"My father in heaven will take care of us," Strode said.

When Strode brought his 11-year-old son Duffey back to school May 27, there were two altercations with protesting parents. The parents gave him with a petition of 474 signatures calling for him to stop his children preaching.

Duffey told reporters Thursday he expects to preach somewhere during the summer. His last suspension ran past the end of school.

"I just like preaching the daily word," he said.

"The children have had enough preaching in two months to fill their bellies for a lifetime," Strode said. "The people who have rejected it have sealed their doom to an everlasting fire."

School officials Thursday positioned sheriff's deputies at the top of the driveway and were instructing parents to drop their children off at the normal place and leave the campus immediately. Reporters also were restricted to certain areas of the campus.

David Strode and his wife, Robin, were scheduled to appear with school officials and protesting parents today at a taping of the Sally Jessy Raphael television talk show in the Marion Community Building Friday.

Strode, who has been a street preacher since 1981, told reporters Thursday that he planned to preach prior to the taping of the show, which will be broadcast June 7.

Gardner, Martin Ball Up Fists As Session Begins

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Confirming predictions that the summer legislative session would be rife with election-year politicking, Republicans wasted no time challenging Democrats to prove their commitment to a less secretive process.

Moments before the session got under way Thursday, the GOP nominee for lieutenant governor, Jim Gardner, endorsed a bill that would remove the General Assembly's exemption to the state open-meetings law. Gardner called on his Democratic opponent, Sen. Tony Rand, to do likewise.

Gardner planned to lead a march to the Legislative Building this morning in support of a constitutional amendment to allow the governor to veto legislation.

"Obviously the political season has kicked off earlier than we thought," Rand said.

He told reporters he had proposed a 10-point plan for a more open legislative process while campaigning for the Democratic nomination. His plan, however, would not take effect until 1989. Rand contended that Boyd and Gardner were seeking free publicity.

Meanwhile, Republican Gov. Jim Martin and his re-election opponent, Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, laid out rival agendas for a session in which political maneuvering could overshadow substantive action on the state budget and other business.

Martin, who has threatened political retaliation if his program is rejected, concluded a 10-page written message to lawmakers with an appeal to put aside partisanship and consider his ideas on their merits.

"There will be those who will play the role of the cynic and dismiss my proposals as 'election-year politics,'" Martin said. "The needs of the people do not cease in an election year, nor should leadership."

Aside from his $558.7 million budget, Martin emphasized a constitutional amendment that would give the governor authority to veto legislation. If approved by the Legislature, the measure would be submitted to a statewide referendum.

"Our democratic form of government is based upon the freely given consent of the governed," Martin said. "Only in North Carolina have the people repeatedly been denied the chance to express themselves on this issue."

The veto no longer should be considered a partisan matter since Jordan supports it as well, Martin said.

Jordan delivered his opening-day speech to a packed audience in the chamber of the state Senate, over which he presides. He mentioned neither the election nor Martin, praising the Legislature for last year's accomplishments such as the ban on most laundry detergents containing phosphorus and approval of a school construction financing package.

"This is a proud record," Jordan said. "Let us maintain that commitment during this session. Although our time and our agenda are limited, our belief in North Carolina's future has no limits."

He called on lawmakers to "pay special attention to the critical needs of the youngest and the oldest North Carolinians" by improving services for the elderly and launching a $4.2 million before- and after-school care program for "latchkey children."

Jordan also asked for statewide implementation of Drug Abuse Resistance Education (DARE), a program designed to help school children "say no to drugs, and alcohol."

Martin requested funding of his own program for the elderly and endorsed tougher penalties for drug trafficking, plus laws to further crack down on drunken drivers.

Gardner discussed the open-meetings law at a news conference with Rep. Bill Boyd, R-Randolph, whom Gardner defeated for the GOP nomination for lieutenant governor.

Death Sentence In Bladen Murder Is Upheld

By MARTHA WAGGONER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The state Supreme Court has upheld the death sentence and consecutive life sentences for an Elizabethtown man convicted of killing three members of a Bladen County family.

The court said Elton Ozell McLaughlin told an acquaintance, Eddie Carson Robinson, in 1984 that Sheila Denise Worley had offered to pay him between $3,000 and $5,000 to kill her husband. He offered to split the money with Robinson if he would drive for him, and Robinson agreed.

McLaughlin shot Worley twice in the chest in front of Mrs. Worley, the court said. The two men drove away with the body, poured gasoline over the car and ignited it.

Later, the two men believed Mrs. Worley was talking to police. They killed her and her daughter but left alive an infant.

"We hold that the defendant's violent history as well as his brutality and calculation in the killing and disfiguring of his victim's body as demonstrated by his further murders of James Worley's wife and her small child fully support the jury's recommendation of death in this case," the court said in an opinion written by Justice Louis Meyer.

McLaughlin had claimed 161 assignments of error, but the Supreme Court found none.

The high court Thursday also ruled in a split vote that in some workers' compensation cases, the employer must prove that an employee's death should not be compensated.

The decision reversed a decision by the state Industrial Commission that was upheld by the North Carolina Court of Appeals.

Clyde S. Pickrell was found dead Jan. 17, 1983, behind a van he had been inspecting, court records show. Pickrell worked for Motor Convoy Inc., a company in Walkertown that transported cars and vans. He inspected the vehicles before loading them onto his tractor-trailer.

He was required when checking the roofs of vans for damage to stand on the rear bumper and hold on to the door handles or top railing, the court said. No one witnessed Pickrell's death, but the van's rear bumper had a scuff mark on it.

Carnation S. Pickrell, the dead man's widow, asked the industrial commission for workers' compensation benefits. The commission refused, saying she had not proved that the death was compensable.

But the Supreme Court, in a 4-3 decision written by Chief Justice Jim Exum, disagreed, saying there was a presumption of compensability.

"Applying such a presumption of compensability is fair because the Workers' Compensation Act should be construed liberally in order to accomplish its purpose," Exum wrote.

In cases where such a presumption applies, he wrote, "the defendant must come forward with some evidence that death occurred as a result of a non-compensable cause; otherwise, the claimant prevails."

But a dissenting opinion written by

Meyer — with which John Webb and Willis Whichard agreed — said that neither a death certificate nor an autopsy report were presented.

The majority decision, he said, could allow some to perpetrate fraud by withholding evidence.

In an Avery County case, the court ruled that a sheriff's deputy needed a search warrant in order to climb on a second-story porch of an store building and look between quarter-inch cracks to see if marijuana was growing inside.

The court said that on Aug. 30, 1985, Deputy B.R. Baker Jr. received a tip that marijuana was growing in the building. He did not get a search warrant until after he climbed on the porch and shined his flashlight between the cracks.

The defendant, Joseph Mario Tarantino, moved that the evidence be suppressed because his 4th Amendment rights had been violated. The trial court agreed, and the Court of Appeals affirmed the decision.

But the U.S. Supreme Court then considered a case titled U.S. vs. Dunn, and the Supreme Court ordered the Court of Appeals to reconsider. The appeals court reaffirmed the trial court's decision, and the Supreme Court, in a 4-3 decision issued Thursday, agreed.

In the Dunn case, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that officers did not violate the 4th Amendment when they looked through a defendant's barn, which was covered by see-through netting.

"... the trial court correctly concluded defendant had a reasonable expectation of privacy in the building which Detective Baker inspected," Exum wrote. "The building's padlocked front door, nailed back doors and boarded windows indicate that defendant had a subjective expectation of privacy in his building's interior."

IN THE STATE

Sanford Probe
 RALEIGH (AP) — State Republican Chairman Jack Hawke says he has asked for a Senate Ethics Committee investigation of Democratic Sen. Terry Sanford's leasing of office space in North Carolina.

Hawke also Thursday called on Sanford, a freshman elected in 1986, to relinquish his membership on the ethics panel.

"I think there are some serious questions here that need to be looked into," Hawke said. "Who was profiting from the transaction? You lease a building from your son and then a few miles down the road you lease another one that you've just sold."

Neither Sanford nor any member of his staff could be reached for comment at their Washington office Thursday afternoon.

According to news reports in recent weeks, Sanford's staff rented space for offices in Durham and Chapel Hill. The Durham building was owned by Sanford's son and the Chapel Hill building was rented after Sanford and an aide sold it.

This week, Sanford said he had bought back the Chapel Hill building after failing to persuade the owner to let him cancel the lease. Hawke said that move did not clear up the problem, nor would curbing the activities of Sanford aide Paul Vick, who arranged the lease.

courses, bringing the total number of tests to 14.

The board will require that the tests be given in the final 10 days of school, during a single 110-minute period. The board also recommended that the tests be given during final exams and be used as part of students' final grades.

Gladys Graves, president of the N.C. Association of Educators, said teachers viewed the tests as restrictions on their authority.

"A lot of teachers feel offended that here is another standardized test that determines what students have done in the classroom and that supersedes whatever the teacher is doing," Ms. Graves said. "It seems the whole concept of testing has grown to be the end-all of how we are going to judge what is happening in the schools, and that is very frustrating."

The state now gives tests for Algebra I and II, U.S. history and biology, and is developing tests for geometry and chemistry to be given next year. The board's action will add tests in physics and freshman English in 1989-90, physical science and sophomore English in 1990-91, junior English and health and physical education in 1991-92, and foreign languages and government and economics in 1992-93.

Board member Barbara M. Tapscott of Burlington said tests were selected for courses that students are required to pass to graduate.

Body Discovered
 BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — The body of a state mental hospital patient has been found, one day after he disappeared from a picnic at an Alamance County rest stop, officials say.

State officials have launched two investigations into the death of a 59-year-old schizophrenic and stroke victim. One of the leaders involved in the search says Riddle might have been found alive if a search had begun immediately after he disappeared from John Umstead Hospital Wednesday.

Riddle was on a trip with 31 other patients to a picnic in Greensboro.

Bakker Eyes Home
 GATLINBURG, Tenn. (AP) — Fallen television evangelist Jim Bakker, just finished with a whirlwind visit to his old PTL ministry stomping grounds, may want to buy back the Smoky Mountains retreat he left last year, his attorney said.

Bakker and his wife, Tammy Faye, spent two days visiting the South Carolina ministry they left a year ago amid a sex scandal, then drove Wednesday to a house they used here.

"Probably the first thing they did was dust off the books. They've been gone nine months," said Ryan Hovis, an attorney with offices in Rock Hill and Columbia, S.C.

He said he did not know how long the Bakkers would stay or what exactly they would do. "There are some meetings we've got to have sometime soon in Charlotte (N.C.), so they'll be there for that," Hovis said Thursday.

TOWER FALLS — A television reporter for KTVO-TV, Kirksville, Mo., was on the scene after her station's 2,000-foot tower near Colony, Mo., collapsed Thursday in calm weather, knocking the station off the air. Two workers died and a third maintenance man was missing this morning beneath crumpled steel at the tower's base. (AP Laserphoto)

Workers Press Search For Third Body In Fallen Tower's Debris

COLONY, Mo. (AP) — Workers used cutting torches and bulldozers to search today for the body of a third maintenance man believed to be killed when a 2,000-foot television tower collapsed in a tangled pile of steel.

The three employees of Structural System Technology Inc. of McLean, Va., were attempting to strengthen the tower, described as one of the nation's tallest, when it collapsed in calm weather Thursday, authorities said.

The first body was found clear of the wreckage immediately after the accident and the second was pulled from the debris about 7½ hours later, said Knox County Sheriff Harold Foreman. The search for the third man centered in the same area where the second body was discovered.

"Some of the material is solid steel — five inches in diameter," said Foreman, who added that investigators had no indication why the structure fell. "It's quite heavy."

The tower, which belonged to KTVO-TV in Kirksville, was erected in September at a cost of $2.5 million. It was twice as tall as the famed Eiffel Tower, which is 984 feet high.

The names of the men, who were in a basket-type carrier at the 500-foot level when the tower collapsed, were being withheld until the missing worker is found, Foreman said.

A fourth worker, crew foreman Rick Walton, was on the ground when the structure collapsed.

"I saw the whole tower coming down," said Walton, who was not injured. "It sounded like the worst thunderstorm you ever heard only a hundred times worse."

Many of the 30 heavy cables that supported the tower snapped when it collapsed, witnesses said. The fall structure did not strike any homes in the mainly rural area of Colony, about 200 miles northwest of St. Louis.

Jerry Heilman, KTVO's general manager, said the workers were replacing more than 1,000 structural braces. He said the station hopes to be back on the air by Saturday or Sunday using its old transmission tower in Lancaster.

The tower's height, the maximum permitted under Federal Aviation Administration rules, was intended to expand KTVO's viewing area, said Kurt Sweeney, the station's news director. It increased the station's audience from 40,000 households to about 120,000, officials said.

A 1,909-foot television tower near Coweta, Okla., collapsed during a severe ice storm Dec. 26. No one was hurt in that collapse, which engineers said was caused by 500,000 pounds of ice on the tower.

57 Miners Are Killed

Relatives Identify Dead In Coal Mine Explosion

By NESHA STARCEVIC
Associated Press Writer
BORKEN, West Germany (AP) — Grief-stricken relatives today undertook the painful task of identifying loved ones among the 57 miners killed in a huge gas explosion deep inside a coal mine. An 18-year-old on his first day at work was among the dead.

Wives of dead miners burst into tears as they watched bodies being retrieved from the coal shaft grave and taken in metal coffins to a temporary mortuary.

"Many of these people were very active in our community. This catastrophe is an enormous loss for all of us," said Bernd Hessler, mayor of Borken, a town of 14,000 people 70 miles northeast of Frankfurt.

Flags flew at half-staff in front of Borken's city hall.

Rescue workers continued to remove the bodies from the mine today, and officials said the 23rd body was brought up by mid-morning. Officials said work was progressing slowly and could take several days.

Crowds of grieving relatives were gathered at the site.

"Stop, stop, my God," one woman shouted at news photographers taking pictures of the bodies being removed.

Investigators said today they were learning more about what killed the victims.

"Several of those found had such great injuries that they could have died from those causes anyway, even without the carbon monoxide," said Stefan Walscher, the local prosecutor leading the investigation.

Investigators also said many of the miners suffocated. Some apparently died after their emergency breathing masks ran out of oxygen deep underground.

Ernst Wilke, head of Hesse state's district of Kassel, told reporters: "The search is being continued in every corner (of the mine)."

Workers were drilling two new emergency shafts to let more air into the mine to aid rescuers retrieving bodies.

Fifty-seven miners were trapped

330 feet underground after Wednesday's explosion, and rescue workers say there is little hope any will be found alive.

Grieving families boarded buses at the mine site and were driven to a school auditorium where the bodies were also taken.

Among those killed in West Germany's worst mining accident in more than 26 years was an 18-year-old on his first day at work.

"He'd graduated from school last Friday and wanted to earn some money before continuing his education," Hessler told reporters.

The mayor declined repeatedly to give the youth's name, out of respect for his parents' wishes.

At least 14 of the men trapped were Turkish immigrant workers.

A group of Turkish women, their heads covered with white shawls in the Moslem sign of mourning, broke into piercing wails outside the mine gate to show their grief Thursday afternoon.

A local official from the Social Democratic Party and the chairman of the local Turkish-German friendship society, a Turk, were among the missing, Mayor Hessler said.

About 300 Turks live in Borken.

A Hesse state official said the cause of the blast had still not been determined, but he rejected any contention that safety measures at the facility were inadequate.

"This is one of the most modern and best-equipped lignite coal mines around," said Erwin Braun, head of the state mining board. "And it has been inspected many times, including recently."

ZDF television network said investigators were speculating that a short-circuit from a tool may have started a chain-reaction of explosions inside the gas- and dust-filled mine.

Braun said that possibility could not be discounted.

"Coal dust can become dangerous if it gets mixed with methane gas and there is suddenly a spark," he said.

Officials said that on a still-undetermined day next week there will be three religious services for the victims: Roman Catholic, Lutheran and Moslem.

Turkish consulate representatives also were at the disaster scene on Thursday.

The officials, asking not to be identified by name, said some of the Turks will be taken back to their native country for burial.

In an interview on Hesse state radio, Governor Wallman promised that family members of the 14 Turks killed in the accident will be allowed to stay in West Germany if they choose to do so.

Normally, when an immigrant worker in West Germany dies or loses his job, the family must return home, except in cases involving people from the European Economic Community.

About 170 people had been employed at the coal mine.

Labor Turmoil At Eastern Could Pose Safety Risks, Report Says

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Labor turmoil at Eastern Airlines must be defused before it creates risks to passengers, says a federal report that nonetheless concludes Eastern and sister carrier Continental Airlines are being run safely.

The report came after an unprecedented investigation of both Eastern and Continental as well as its holding company, Texas Air Corp., by the Transportation Department and the Federal Aviation Administration.

The department's report, released Thursday, said Eastern's bitter labor problems have divided the company, posing the risk of "an adverse impact on the public safety."

The Federal Aviation Administration plans to continue its special surveillance of Eastern and a special emissary is being dispatched to try to "de-escalate the tensions within the company," said Transportation Secretary Jim Burnley.

Burnley said former Labor Secretary William Brock has been enlisted to try to open new lines of communications between Eastern's labor unions and management over safety issues.

Brock's role is limited to "the safety related aspects of this problem," and Brock would not deal with bargaining issues.

Brock said he had talked with all the parties at Eastern and has found "a willingness to listen." But Burnley seemed less optimistic.

"Frankly, given the extraordinary nature of this matter, neither he (Brock) or I can predict a successful conclusion," Burnley told a news conference.

Texas Air chairman Frank Lorenzo welcomed Brock's participation.

Henry Duffy, the president of the Air Line Pilots Association, suggested the move reflects "the unprecedented problems that exist at Eastern."

In Miami, Charles Bryan, the head of Eastern's machinists union, gave no sign of wanting to be conciliatory. He accused the Transportation Department of "supporting and cooperating" with Lorenzo and called the department's report "the best possible report that money can buy" — a reference to Texas Air's recently expanded lobbying efforts in Washington.

The dispute has been a result of Texas Air's demand for wage concessions from the unions representing Eastern employees, and from its attempt to sell off assets in what the unions say is an attempt to dismantle the airline it acquired in November 1986.

DOT findings as confirming that Eastern and Continental "are absolutely safe and absolutely fit. Those airlines passed inspection with flying colors."

The DOT began its close scrutiny of Eastern, Continental and Texas Air in mid-April, including special inspections by the FAA that covered 630 Eastern and Continental aircraft over a 30-day period.

During the inspection period, 30 percent of Eastern's 280 planes had to be taken out of service at least once because of safety violations. At Continental, safety violations resulted in 14.3 percent of its 350 planes being taken out of service at least once.

About 7 percent of the 1,542 inspections at Eastern and 3 percent of the 2,689 inspections at Continental resulted in safety violations being discovered, according to the agency.

FAA officials have characterized many of the infractions as being minor with many of them involving fuel or hydraulic leaks or miscellaneous problems. "An unsafe condition does not currently exist" at either Eastern or Continental, said FAA Administrator Allan McArdor.

Burnley, meanwhile, said that the department's in-depth examination of Texas Air Corp., the holding company for both Eastern and Continental, found nothing to substantiate concerns about the company's management or finances.

The review by a special task force of DOT lawyers and auditors concluded that:

— Despite the company's $466 million in losses last year, it has "substantial assets and access to capital" and that both Continental and Eastern are considered financially viable in the near term.

Students Protest Classmate's Death

BEIJING (AP) — About 2,000 students from China's most prestigious university took to the streets today to protest the death of a fellow student in a brawl.

The students at Beijing University put up posters angrily demanding speedy punishment of local youths who killed the student and tighter security around campus.

Foreign sources said the illegal demonstration began spontaneously at about 11 p.m. Thursday after students read a poster on campus describing how Chai Qingfeng, a 22-year-old geophysics student, had been attacked and killed.

The official Xinhua News Agency said today that police had captured two of the assailants who "inflicted fatal wounds" on Chai. Police are pursuing others involved in the attack, it said.

The demonstration was the largest since massive pro-democracy rallies in December 1986 and January 1987. Those demonstrations led to shakeups in the government and a conservative backlash against "bourgeois liberalization."

The sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the students arrived at Tiananmen Square, the large plaza in central Beijing, shortly before dawn and passed through the square before stopping at the Ministry of Public Security where they presented a list of demands.

About 700 students completed the 10-mile walk from the campus in northwest Beijing to the square.

During the march they linked arms and shouted for "justice and human rights." One banner read "Pay back the blood debt."

Police monitored the march but did not interfere, said one 18-year-old marcher.

The group marched around Tiananmen and then went to the nearby Public Security Ministry, where "the officials said they understood us but that it is not a good idea to take to the streets," said the woman marcher, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The students presented eight demands, including the speedy arrest and punishment of the killers, then got on buses and returned quietly to campus.

Students said Chai was beaten to death by "hooligans" when he was buying liquor at a store outside the campus. Campus officials said the attack took place Wednesday night, and Chai died Thursday.

The Beijing Daily reported today that Chai, a graduate student, was among three students from the geophysics department who were attacked by thugs outside a small restaurant near the campus. It did not say whether the other two were injured.

Georgia Crops Thirsty

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia's drought is gripping farmers and city-dwellers alike, and officials compare it with some of the state's worst dry spells.

"All crops and pastures are in a stressful situation. If rain doesn't come soon, there's a chance we'll be losing the crops," Jerry Midden, agricultural statistician for the Georgia Crop Reporting Service, said Thursday.

Row crops, such as peanuts, soybeans and corn, are in serious trouble, Midden said. "They're sitting in the dry soil and withering away."

There was a chance of thundershowers today and early next week, but the rain was not expected to provide significant relief, the National Weather Service said.

For the fourth week in a row, the Georgia crop report showed more than half of the state's soil had less than adequate moisture. In the Atlanta area, local governments tightened water use restrictions already in place.

"This has got to be treated as a major drought, on a par with the '50s, the '30s" and three other major droughts dating back to the 1840s, said State Climatologist Gayther Plummer.

City Officials Weigh Waste Site Ramifications

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

In an effort to gain insight and to acquire additional information relating to the proposed Edgemore County waste site, city officials spent several hours Thursday morning discussing ramifications of the issue with legal and scientific specialists.

Approximately 20 people, including city staff members, members of the City Council and representatives of other Pitt County Municipal governments, listened at City Hall as East Carolina University professors and a Raleigh lawyer cleared up some misconceptions regarding the proposal.

"You can't just put one of these waste disposal sites anywhere," Charles Case, a legal expert from Raleigh explained.

"There are very explicit requirements in terms of the soil, the type of geological characteristics of the area, its proximity to population centers, the depth of the ground table, the proximity to surface water discharges, and a number of other factors that have to be taken into account to make sure the site is appropriate."

Case told his audience that each step of the process in determining where and how a waste site is located will inevitably require public participation and input.

"These hearings of course are going to be very loud and boisterous and well attended," he said.

Case described similar hearings held elsewhere as drawing thousands of people concerned about ecologic and economic effect, and quality of life.

Attempting to describe the nature of materials involved in low-level radioactive waste was Dr. Jim Joyce, an ECU professor of physics.

"I didn't know what constitutes low level waste and I'm not sure if I still do exactly," Joyce said.

Joyce said using the term "low-level" to describe the waste is a bit of a misnomer.

"Some of this waste could be quite hot (radioactive)," he said.

Also providing a perspective on the nature of the material was ECU radiation expert Dr. Dan Sprau, who discussed potential problems relating to transportation and storage of various forms of waste.

Concern was voiced at the session whether potential relocating businesses might develop negative perceptions of this community as a result of a waste site located in an adjacent county.

"If the public and governments can resolve this issue and handle it successfully, you will distinguish this area as being one that is more sophisticated," Case said. "If this process looks like it's been rammed down your throats, you may look like you are backwards and ignorant. That's the rap that was put on Warren County when they got the PCV landfill. They didn't want it, they didn't have the political power to fight it, they didn't volunteer for it, and they looked as though they got it anyway because they couldn't fight it," he said.

Mayor Ed Carter, who had arranged the session, described Thursday's informal discussion as a necessary step in the process of gathering information.

"Many of us are neophytes when it comes to what this waste site and radioactivity are all about," he said. "Some people have already formulated their opinions, and I think in formulating an opinion, you really do need some sort of technical knowledge to know essentially what you're dealing with," he said.

Carter indicated more informal sessions and exchanges of information relating to the proposal will likely be arranged for city officials in the future.

"Sometimes we have a tendency to be emotional and not take the time to gather information, but I think we need to be methodical in gathering information we need to address this situation," he said.

Edgemore Groups Lead Park Opposition

Davis, executive director of the Historic Preservation Fund of Edgemore County, suggested that officials selected speakers at the first public hearing last week to make it appear that opinion was equally divided on the proposal.

"That is simply not the case," Davis said. "You have five commissioners and a local representative (Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgemore) who are all for it. Most of the rest of the people are opposed to it."

Keel said the citizens group has raised about $1,500 so far to help support efforts opposing the waste park concept. "But lots of people say there's not a problem with money."

"We're trying to mobilize as many residents as we can," from Edgemore, Pitt and other area counties, Keel said.

"TEAM is just what it says," Horton said this morning in a telephone interview. "...an organization of the industrial community ... which seeks to cooperate with each other and local government on matters of mutual concern."

"It's a pretty diverse industrial group."

Horton, president of Moorecraft Wood Products, said, "the group felt the implications of locating such a park on the lives and property of the citizens — both private and corporate — of the county have far reaching concerns. Our group voted unanimously ... no abstentions, no no's ... to recommend to the county board of commissioners that Edgemore County not be offered as a site ... until and unless a favorable vote is obtained in a public referendum."

Horton said "the consensus was that the main natural resource that the county has to offer is the people. People are the only real natural resource. The group felt that the people have a right to vote on this issue because it affects the people."

TEAM membership includes such firms as Westinghouse Electric, Black & Decker, Cotton Belt Inc., Long Manufacturing Co., Long Trailer Co., Masonite Corp., Edgemore Manufacturing Co. United Refrigerated Services and Sara Lee Bakery.

Money Requests Heard By City Council

from $19,656,163 to $21,693,443. In addition, Knowles is calling for an additional $496,060 capital improvement program which if the council should accept, would raise the budget to 10.36 percent over last year and create a tax increase up to 57 cents.

During the past several budget sessions, members of the three community groups had made presentations to the council elaborating on their financial request.

At last night's meeting, council members recalled and discussed details of the presentations.

For its efforts to promote the city, council member Bill Hadden said the chamber should receive $30,000 of the $39,000 requested to assist in a proposed chamber $93,000 promotions endeavour.

"These are the leaders and the movers and the shakers of the town, when the chamber grows, and when the chamber adds to the value of this community, we profit," he said.

Mayor Pro-Tem Lorraine Shinn

suggested that $15,000 be budgeted to the chamber.

"This is a tough one for me because I don't agree with the concept of funding them at all, however if they are producing materials that we are using, I think we ought to be paying for them," she said.

The council also conducted an executive session relating to personnel matters.

Senators, Martin Discuss Site

park, which would include the waste dump and a hazardous waste treatment facility to be located in the eastern part of Edgemore county near the Pitt border.

"(The governor) felt the Board of Commissioners in Edgemore could volunteer their county in a relatively short period of time, but the process after they volunteer would have to be much more deliberate and encompass the concerns of broader groups," Taft said.

Once a site is selected, it could take up to 5 years to study the area to determine if it was suitable to host the facilities, Sen. Martin said.

The chance that Edgemore officials may volunteer their county worries opponents of the waste dump because no county in the state wants to host the facility, and the state will have a difficult time turning down a county that asks for it.

"Governor Martin said there was a lot of hope within the administration that someone would successfully volunteer their county and — if the technical criteria of the county could be met — they would be very interested in such a county," Taft said.

"He (Gov. Martin) did say, on one occasion, a volunteer should be considered, if it met the health criteria, but he also hastened to say there had been no volunteers at this point," Sen. Martin said.

Sen. Martin, who represents portions of Pitt County and Edgemore County, said he does not think Edgemore commissioners will formally volunteer their county. "That's been my gut feeling the whole time," he said.

"I just don't believe that Edgemore County will make a request to have a waste park," Sen. Martin said. "I believe that, in the end, they will decide this is not the answer to their problems. I just don't believe it's going to happen."

Sen. Martin said he is opposed to any type of waste facility in eastern North Carolina because the water table is too high.

"The governor was very attentive and heard our concerns, primarily the need for regional consideration of the issue on a more deliberate basis," Taft said, "and also our concern about the speed at which the Edgemore County Commissioners were moving."

Gov. Martin has included a $5 million incentive package in his budget proposal to encourage a county to volunteer for the site, but Taft has urged regional incentives because he feels the risks are regional.

"He said he had not contemplated that before, but it was something that bore substantial consideration," Taft said of Gov. Martin's reaction to his proposal for a regional incentive package.

The thought of splitting the incentives among neighboring counties may also make the Edgemore Commissioners less likely to volunteer, Taft said.

If Edgemore were to volunteer to host the waste dump, the governor would like residents throughout the region to have input, Sen. Martin said. "He thought it ought to be a local, cooperative effort," he said.

The General Assembly, which has convened in Raleigh for their short session to discuss budget items, may deal with developing an incentive plan this summer.

At a meeting Wednesday, Taft said the Joint Low-Level Radioactive Hazardous Waste Committee, with members from the House, Senate and the public, agreed to use the term "compensation package" instead of "incentive."

They agreed to offer a compensation package for the low-level waste dump and another for the hazardous waste facility, and they also agreed to offer regional incentives such as Taft suggested.

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the Book of Esther, intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times.

EVIL HAMAN

HAMAN, SEEKING REVENGE UPON MORDECAI, HAS TOLD THE KING THAT ALL THE JEWS IN THE KINGDOM DO NOT OBEY HIM! HE ADVISES THE KING TO PASS A LAW TO KILL ALL JEWS, NOW...

...HAMAN, DELIGHTEDLY, SUMMONS THE ROYAL SCRIBES INTO THE KING'S CHAMBER

A NEW LAW IS TO BE MADE—AND YOU SHALL INSCRIBE IT AS I TELL IT TO THEE!

...THE KING'S SCRIBES HURRIEDLY WRITE DOWN THE HARSH DECREE!

...IN ALL PROVINCES TO DESTROY, TO KILL, AND TO CAUSE TO PERISH...

NOW LET THIS DECREE BE PUBLISHED TO THE PEOPLE THROUGHOUT MY ENTIRE DOMAIN!

AND THE TERRIBLE MESSAGE SPEEDS TO ALL THE KING'S PROVINCES, LETTING THE PEOPLE KNOW THAT, ON THE THIRTEENTH DAY OF THE TWELFTH MONTH, ALL THE JEWS IN THE KINGDOM ARE TO BE KILLED, YOUNG AND OLD, WOMEN AND LITTLE CHILDREN—NONE WILL BE SPARED!

Lack Of Donors Is Frustrating To Eye Banks

Her lab is a simply furnished room: no microscopes or bubbling beakers or any of the exotic paraphernalia you might expect in a place where medical miracles are wrought.

It contains only a table, brightly lit, where the corneas are removed, and a single instrument called a split-light, a device like one an eye doctor uses for examinations, except less complicated.

Ms. Dahl's eyes (20-20, hazel) brighten with enthusiasm when she explains what goes on there.

"We have four people in the lab and four in the field collecting eyes from donors. As soon as we hear of a donor we dispatch someone to the hospital to collect the eyes. We cover 138 hospitals in an 11-county area. Unlike other organs, the eye can be taken six to eight hours after death. It's a simple job and leaves no disfigurement. Takes about 20 minutes.

"We receive the eyes in the lab and examine the cornea through the split-light. If it is acceptable, we remove it and send it right away to the next recipient on the list. If not, it is used in research. None is wasted. Our procedure takes about 20 minutes as well.

"We maintain the recipient list by computer. The corneas go out first come, first served, unless there's a priority, such as someone being in danger of losing the entire eye because of an accident.

"The doctor removes the damaged portion of the patient's eye with an instrument called a trephine, sort of a cookie cutter. He cuts out the donor cornea with the same instrument, so the replacement fits exactly. He works through a high-powered microscope and stitches it in with nylon thread finer than a human hair. He can do the operation in his office using local anesthesia if he chooses.

"Some patients can see when the bandages come off the next day. With others it's more gradual.

"What we do here is the easy part. The hard part is getting the donors."

Even many doctors, well aware of the need, are often reluctant to approach a family at the moment of their grief to ask permission to remove their loved one's organs.

The result is the loss in America each year of an estimated 18,000 to 20,000 potential kidneys, livers, hearts, lungs and other organs, but especially eyes. Since the eyes do not have to be removed as urgently, the brain-dead body does not have to be maintained artificially, and the cornea may wait four or five days before transplanting.

To prevent this loss, two years ago New York, California and Oregon enacted laws not simply encouraging but requiring that hospitals, where 80 percent of Americans die, make that painful request of the bereaved. Since then all except eight states (Idaho, Wyoming, South Dakota, Vermont, South Carolina, Iowa, Alabama and Utah) have passed similar "required request" laws.

New York, among other states, sends out counselors — including the energetic Ms. Dahl — to teach nurses and other hospital workers how to make the delicate request.

They have discovered that in many cases the request actually comforts a family since they can feel the relative lives on through someone else.

"There is one final act of love you can do for your beloved," one hospital chaplain tells sorrowing relatives. Others approach a relative with a gentle question: "Do you know whether the person was an eye donor?"

"Two-thirds of those asked say yes," says Ms. Dahl. "Since the law's enactment, donations to the New York eye bank increased 78 percent."

Still not enough.

A decade ago, only 7,000 corneal transplants were performed in the United States. But eyes judged beyond repair back then can now be restored. Last year 35,000 Americans received corneal transplants and another 5,000 who needed them lacked donors. Doctors say that technology continues to develop and today's demand could double in the next decade.

"I don't know whether we ever will have a cornea immediately for everybody who needs one, but that's the goal," Ms. Dahl says.

"Until it happens, we'll continue to be a bank in name only. No deposits here, only withdrawals."

He Gets Inspiration From People

By LIN C. PARKER
Chattanooga News-Free Press
DUNLAP, Tenn. (AP) — Dunlap is one of those timeless communities, where Saturday afternoon, for some folks, still means a corn dog at the local drive-in and a trip to the self-service car wash.

The bank's open and if a fellow should need to use the Xerox machine to copy a page or two of sheet music, he doesn't have to park and walk. He can merely hang an elbow out the car window and ask the favor of the local teller.

That's the kind of hometown cooperation bluegrass musician Ed Brown likes and maybe that is part of the reason he's stayed on in the valley.

Ed Brown earns his living in Dunlap by making house calls on out-of-tune pianos and by taking in "uprights" in dire need of repair.

In his backyard studio, he teaches private music lessons to local ivory ticklers and to an assortment of would-be string-and-bowmen — to sawyers, pickers, and pluckers. In his spare time, he weaves musical tales about Sequatchie Valley's rich coal mining history and performs "live and in person" on his banjo with the Homecoming Band at the town's Ole Time Jamboree.

For those few uninitiated souls who think bluegrass is what Kentucky horses eat, the Jamboree is a free pickin' and fiddlin' event held at 7 p.m. Central time the last Saturday of every month in the auditorium of the Sequatchie County High School.

Ed Brown comes right out and asks a visitor the difference between a violin and a fiddle. Paxton Shoulders, a freckle-faced red-headed kid and one of Ed's 45 or so students, had obviously heard the question before. He snickered and limbered up his bow arm waiting for the punch line.

"A violin has strings — but a fiddle has straaangs," drawled his teacher, motioning for Paxton to join him in a dueling duet. Jaws set in concentration, the two sawed and picked in rhythm until the room almost shook. When they finished, Ed allowed himself a small grin of satisfaction. He had been about Paxton's age when he got his first musical instrument. So had his daddy before him.

You could say talent runs in the family. Ray Brown, who joined his son in the Homecoming Band last year, modestly claims, "Ed has forgotten more than I ever knew about music in the first place."

But one would suspect he's exaggerating. The elder Brown latched onto his first guitar in the early '20s and has been pickin' ever since.

"I used to play in the valley for square dances. People didn't have dance halls back then," he remembered. "They just moved the furniture out of their living rooms."

Dinosaurs Help Reading Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — Millions of U.S. school children are expanding learning opportunities and improving reading skills that traditionally decline during the summer with the guidance of two mythological dinosaurs — of the "Readasaurus" species — that have the capacity to learn to read.

"The summer of the Readasaurus" is a program designed to encourage children in summer reading, building on their basic skills between school sessions, with the help of the Readasaurus twins, Rex and Rita.

The program is a partnership of educators, parents, librarians, reading advocates and the media. It is presented by Reading is Fundamental and ABC-PBS "Youth PLUS," and sponsored by IBM's Writing to Read.

During the summer, any child age 5-12 who lists three books he or she has read will be eligible to win one of thousands of prizes to be awarded at a mid-September national Readasaurus drawing.

Children should list the following on a post card or 3- by 5-inch card: Name, age, school and address, city and state; titles of three books read during May, June, July or August 1988; parent or guardian signature.

The card should be mailed to: Readasaurus, The National Zoo, Washington D.C. 20299-0001. Children may enter as often as they read three books.

Son Could Take Back Prodigal Father

DEAR ABBY: Yours was a great response when you advised the son to talk to his father who had disowned him for getting his girlfriend pregnant — then the father asked his son for $500 a month for "a while" when his business failed. The father had probably done much soul-searching and had to swallow his piety and pride in order to ask his son for help.

The Bible eulogizes the father who took back the prodigal son. In the same way, a son could take back a prodigal father. — VIRDEN SEYBOLD, BALTIMORE

DEAR ABBY: I love and hate my husband. He used to be a fine and gentle man, but lately he has turned into something entirely different. About six months ago, our neighbor invited my husband over to watch some dirty movies. I tolerated it at first, thinking it was harmless. Then, after a while, every time my husband came back from watching those dirty movies he would demand sex — not loving and tender, just rough, crude sex. Abby, our sex life has become a nightmare! It just makes me sick. I am hurt beyond words, and he knows it, too.

Dear Abby

What am I going to do? Divorce him? On what grounds? I know I can't live like this any longer.

Please answer in the newspaper because I have three children at home and they always get the mail. — NO NAME OR ADDRESS

DEAR NO NAME: You need to re-establish communication with your husband in order to understand why this formerly "fine and gentle man" has turned into a crude, sexually demanding person. You need to be counseled together. (Contact your local mental health facility — the people there can help you.) If he refuses to go with you, go alone. Your marriage depends upon it.

DEAR ABBY: While you've often written about this subject, I have never seen this question answered in your column and I am sure others have wondered about it, too.

When the organs of a deceased loved one are donated — be they corneas or internal organs such as kidneys, liver, heart — can the family have an open-casket funeral?

I know of cases where a family has agreed to donate organs, then they changed their minds because they weren't sure the body could be sufficiently restored for an open-casket funeral. — ANONYMOUS, PLEASE

DEAR ANONYMOUS: I am informed that there is absolutely no evidence of organ removal, so an open-casket funeral is possible if that is the family's choice.

DEAR ABBY: I attend church with a lady whose daughter is to be married in three months. She and her daughter do not know that the future groom has a long history of indecent exposure, and he was arrested for this again not more than six weeks ago. Doesn't this young girl have a right to know this before she marries him? And if so, should I phone her anonymously? Please do not mention my city or state. — CONCERNED FOR HER

DEAR CONCERNED: If he has been arrested, it should be public record. I would not "alert" anyone, unless I were 100 percent sure of my facts. But under no circumstances should you phone her anonymously. Guilty or innocent, the accused should have the right to face his (or her) accuser.

Author Chases Ghosts For 30 Years

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Nancy Roberts has been chasing ghosts for 30 years, but she still flinches when asked about her personal experiences with the supernatural.

Roberts, a nationally known ghost hunter and the author of 10 books on the subject, said her first encounter occurred several years ago when she

WOTM Names New Officers

Greenville Chapter 1308 of the Women of the Moose has new officers.

Edna Knox, senior regent, conducted a recent business meeting. Serving with her are Elizabeth Rhodes, junior graduate regent; Mary Beddard, junior regent; Shirley Daughtridge, chaplain; Leona Givens, treasurer, and Dorothy Anderson, recorder.

Plans for the coming year were discussed.

Doris Edmundson will host the next meeting.

and her husband were eating lunch at the Skene Manor in Whitehall, N.Y.

"All of a sudden the mood changed from cheerfulness and anticipation of a good meal to pervasive evil," she said. "I knew there was something very, very wrong."

Roberts recalled seeing a woman's hand come out of a rock fountain near her table. So she asked the owner if there was a ghost story connected to the restaurant.

"He said there was a very macabre story," she said.

It turned out that the fountain was situated on the spot where a young woman who died a mysterious death in the house had been laid to rest.

Roberts, a graduate of the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill, began her career as a ghost hunter in 1958 while completing a freelance assignment for a newspaper.

Carl Sandberg, who was living in western North Carolina, read her articles and encouraged her to write a book. In 1959, "An Illustrated Guide to Ghosts and Mysterious Occurrences in the Old North State" was published.

"I'm one of the few normal people who do this sort of thing," Roberts said in an interview in her Charlotte home, which is decorated with antiques. "I'm not a nut."

Roberts says the investigative skills she learned as a newspaper reporter come in handy when she checks out the dozens of leads she gets in the mail every week.

During her research for her latest book, "Haunted Houses: Tales From 30 American Homes," Roberts traveled to more than 15 states, where she interviewed the owners of the homes and pored over press clippings and other materials in local libraries.

The 181-page book gives the reader a guided tour of some famous and little-known haunts, including White Oaks in Charlotte, which was built by James Buchanan Duke; the Reed House in Asheville; and the Mordecai House and the Andrew Johnson Home in Raleigh.

The people in her books do not meet up with violent creatures who kidnap, maul and maim. "I don't do the blood stains on the floor that won't disappear or the rattling chains," she said.

Instead, she said, most of the stories are about "highly ordinary" people who go through unexplained supernatural experiences.

"It's usually the most unlikely people who experience it — the corporate executive, the accountant, the physician," she said. "It doesn't happen to the individual who's investigating the paranormal."

Most of the stories have a common thread.

"There's usually some strong emotion involved," she said. "But it doesn't have to be a place where somebody died."

Although Roberts maintains she researches her stories like an investigative reporter, she admits to having some premonitions.

"When I see a place I feel is haunted," she said, "I usually find there's a story connected to it."

REAL ESTATE FACTS

by: Rudy Schulte

PLEASE PAY ATTENTION!

Put your house on the market for sale today, and you'll find it competing for attention tomorrow.

Most buyers don't purchase the first home they see. They want to look at a variety of homes in different neighborhoods, with different styles, room arrangements and decors. Some want to see only three homes before making a decision, but others insist on seeing them all.

That means your home will be involved in an all-out competition for the attention of buyers. If it stands out from the crowd of other homes, it will probably sell quickly. If not... well, you get the picture.

Why not give your home "buyer appeal" to make it stand out from the competition? You can, and I'll be happy to show you how. Basically there are four steps involved which will lead your home to a faster sale at a better price.

The most costly step, in time and money, involves addressing major repairs. A rule of thumb often used is that you may expect to receive $2.00 less for your home for every $1.00 in repairs not completed.

The other three steps require more effort than money. They are: 1) clean and organize your home thoroughly, 2) add cosmetic touches to decor, and 3) set the stage for buyers by appealing to their emotions. To learn more about giving your home "buyer appeal", give me a call today!

Mavericks Upend Los Angeles

DALLAS (AP) — The defending NBA champion Los Angeles Lakers pray the Dallas Mavericks' "Forum fright" lasts one more game.

The Lakers were taken to a deciding seventh game in their no-place-like-home Western Conference final with the upstart Dallas Mavericks on Thursday night, fading to a 105-103 loss at Reunion Arena.

Dallas is 0-9 in playoff games at The Forum, including whippings of 113-98, 123-101, and 119-102 during this series.

"The home court means a lot in this league and we played hard all season to gain that advantage," Los Angeles coach Pat Riley said. "I'm not going to wallow in this defeat. Be ready for Saturday because there will be some fireworks. Saturday is all that's left. We worked hard for 82 games for the advantage."

But Riley held reporters out of the Lakers' locker room for 20 minutes after the game.

"I don't think we played well as a team and the team is a little angry," he said.

Los Angeles can qualify for its seventh trip to the NBA Final in nine seasons with a victory in the nationally televised game on Saturday.

The Lakers are seeking to become the first team since the Boston Celtics 19 years ago to win back-to-back NBA championships.

Dallas has never been this far before in the eight-year history of the franchise. The Lakers hold 10 NBA titles, five of them when they were in Minneapolis.

The winner meets the survivor of the Detroit-Boston Eastern Conference series.

"I've been told that in the seventh game of a championship final the home court doesn't mean a thing," Mavericks owner Donald Carter said. "I hope that holds true."

Mark Aguirre scored 13 of his 23 points in the second half as Dallas downed Los Angeles at Reunion

Arena for the third straight time.

Los Angeles had a chance to tie the game, but James Donaldson successfully defended a James Worthy shot that would have sent the game into overtime.

After a Donaldson free throw, Los Angeles' Magic Johnson tried some trickery that failed with a second left.

He made one free throw to narrow the deficit to two points. Then he intentionally missed the rim on his second free throw and Dallas got the ball and the game.

"It was a fourth quarter tug of war and they got the last point," Riley said. "We had our chances. Not many teams come in here and get a win."

Worthy and Byron Scott scored 27 points apiece for the Lakers.

Dallas guard Rolando Blackman, who had 22 points, said the Lakers seem to hold a spell over teams in The Forum.

"They don't have leprechauns like Boston, but they've got something that makes them play better out there," Blackman said. "We have to keep the game close and make it tough for them to do the things they want to do on offense. We have to stop their fast break."

"We wanted a one-game series and now we have it. This is the kind of situation you dream about."

Los Angeles' Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who was held to only eight points, said "I'm not making any predictions. But Saturday I can promise you we're going to play hard and aggressive. We haven't expected Dallas to hand us any victories. We know we'll have to earn it."

Dallas Coach John MacLeod said there will be no secrets.

"I think the Lakers will be playing just like they did in the first three games — they will be trying to blow us off the floor in the first quarter," he said. "If they don't ... then look out."

They Ain't 'Fraid A No Lakers

By Scott Ostler
(c) 1988, Los Angeles Times

DALLAS — Remember when the Lakers were the ghostbusters?

Suppose you had a funky old gymnasium where the home team just couldn't lose, where they always seemed to get the calls and the bounces and the breaks and the wins. Where invisible leprechauns and whatever local paranormal critters inhabited the place were always messing up the visitors? You knew who you were gonna call. Yeah, the Lakers.

They weren't afraid a no ghosts. They cleaned up Boston Garden, the Spectrum, the Kingdome....

But this is another day, another era maybe, when the road is not so kind to the Lakers, not in big games. Nowadays even normal, modern, ventilated basketball arenas with nothing spookier than noisy fans hold great peril to the Lakers.

They struggled in the modern Salt Palace against the Utah Jazz, and now the Lakers have been handed their hats and heads in the well-lighted, air-conditioned, sanitized-for-your-protection Dallas Reunion Arena. Not exactly a pit, although ugliness is in the eye of the beholder.

Thursday night the home team Mavericks won their third straight here over the Lakers to even the Western Conference finals at 3-3.

Once again the Mavericks did it with a clutch fourth quarter. This time it was close, not like the last two times. But once again the Mavericks made the big plays. With four seconds left and the Lakers down by two, James Worthy took a pass from Byron Scott and drove the left baseline, straight to the hoop.

James Donaldson was there, waiting. Nobody is sure exactly what happened, whether Donaldson got a piece of Worthy's shot, or a piece of Worthy, or Worthy simply missed the shot, but the ball did not go into the hoop, and that was the ballgame.

All it cost the Lakers is the ton of pride they would have gained from demystifying Reunion Arena, a few precious days rest before the Finals, and maybe some confidence in the infallibility of themselves in crunch time.

"We didn't get blown out, and that was a plus," said Michael Cooper. "It's sad that we lost, but we gotta feel good about going back home now."

They gotta, because they have no choice. Cooper was just being helpful, throwing out words to fill notebooks, but for a Laker to say it's a plus that they didn't get blown out is a plus for the rest of the basketball world. There is a light at the end of the tunnel that is the Laker dynasty.

Are the Lakers sinking, or is the competition rising?

"It's not like it used to be," said Magic Johnson, who proved that by throwing away six passes in the first half. "The competition is good. It's gonna make the NBA better, it's gonna be exciting, because everyone's got a chance."

Somehow Magic just didn't seem real excited about that prospect. You get the feeling he could have been just as happy if the league had waited another few years to catch up to the Lakers.

The Lakers really wanted to win this one in Dallas, to make a point, to deliver a message to whatever chump team wins the Eastern Conference finals. But they couldn't do it.

So they shrugged, and they nitpicked the final few minutes. Not that they blamed the officials. The Lakers haven't fallen that far, that they have to whine and grovel.

"It's a contact sport," Worthy said when asked if he thought he should have gone to the free-throw line on his last drive.

Cooper second-guessed himself.

"I'm kicking myself ... because I could've shot (a jumper on the crucial play). I probably had a shot, but I looked to pass to Byron, and he got it to Worthy. We got the shot we wanted. But I'll lose sleep on that one, believe me."

He'll also lose sleep on the play with 2:50 left, Lakers down one, and Cooper's man, Rolando Blackman slipped past Coop to get an offensive rebound, with led to a Mark Aguirre hoop.

"I take this loss on me," Cooper said.

That's high school stuff, of course, one guy taking the blame for a loss.

But maybe that's what the Lakers need now. Rather than a mature, rational look at the series, a feeling that they gave it their best but simply got outplayed, and didn't get the breaks, the Lakers need to respond in a less rational, more emotional manner.

They need to be hurt and angry and wounded. Just being the Lakers isn't always enough anymore.

"We played excellent defense," Johnson said. "We played as hard as we could. We didn't get (the key) rebounds, but it's not a lack of boxing out. They was comin' (bouncing) out long. We played great defense, man!"

Even Pat Riley couldn't fault his team's effort.

"Everyone's asking why (we lost)," Riley said. "There's no why to it. You just gotta give them credit. They did a good job of swarming."

The experts figure they know what will happen Saturday in Game 7. The Mavericks, psyched out of their skulls by the Forum mystique, will flutter and fold as they did in the last three games there.

But who knows how much this sweep on the Texas end of the series did for the Mavericks' confidence?

Maybe the Mavericks can do some ghostbusting of their own.

It was a situation the Lakers wanted to avoid, but this isn't the old days, when they packed their mystique with them on road trips. Now they're a team struggling to hold off the new guard, to stave off creeping NBA parity.

They'll return home and hope the ghosts of the Forum don't desert 'em in their time of need.

Rose, Raiders Meet For East

Rose and Richmond County have been postponed until 7:30 p.m. Saturday, it was learned late this morning.

The Rampants bring in a perfect 25-0 record into the game while Richmond County comes in with a 21-4 record.

For the first time in eight years, the Raiders failed to win the Southeastern Conference championship, finishing second in the league. But Richmond County won its opening playoff game against Cape Fear, then beat regular season champ Anson County, 7-6, to advance to the third round. In that, the Raiders slipped past strong Garner, 10-9, to make it to the eastern finals.

The Raider mound staff is led by junior righthander Brad Malone, 11-0, but he may not work Friday. He pitched four innings against Garner. That could send senior righthander Rob Ransom, 4-4, to the mound instead.

In contrast, Rose is still uncertain about its pitching selection. Tom Moye normally would have drawn the call after having pitched last Friday against Rocky Mount in a 7-0 victory. But Jamie Brewington, who was slated to go Tuesday against Athens Drive, came up with a sore shoulder and Moye was forced to go against the Jaguars instead.

Brewington, if healthy, should draw the call tonight.

Richmond County's hitting is led by catcher Jimmy Poplin, hitting .349. He's followed by Ricky Nantz, the shorstop, with a .325 average. Second baseman Chip Hodges is hitting .312, while leftfielder Tom Outen has a .313 average.

Ransom, who plays right field or is the designated hitter when he is not on the mound, is hitting .297.

Other members of the starting nine include Ronnie Watkins at first, Scott Clark at third, Graham Shepard in center and Mike Thomas in right, if Ransom not playing there.

The Raiders are coached by Bobby Rainey and are described as a scrappy team that has won a lot of its games in late inning rallies. They have a solid defense and turn a lot of double plays.

Extra Innings Good For Mets

By The Associated Press

Howard Johnson took his time. And the New York Mets won in extra innings for the fourth time.

New York, which had won its first three extra-inning games this year, had been held to seven hits and one run through 12 innings Thursday night by Chicago pitchers.

Frank DiPino was pitching in a groove. He had struck out Kevin McReynolds and Gary Carter in the 12th.

"DiPino's very effective throwing a low slider in the dirt," Johnson said. "He got McReynolds and Carter on that pitch the previous inning. I hit well against him last season, too. Tonight, I just made up my mind to be patient, stay back, and see the ball before committing myself. Once you commit yourself, it's hard to hold up on that pitch."

Johnson homered to center on the second pitch of the 13th inning from DiPino, 0-2, to give the Mets a 2-1 victory over the Cubs, the ninth time New York has won a game in its final at-bat.

"Wally Backman thought I was actually going to take the pitch," Johnson said. "That's how long I waited before swinging. If you don't commit yourself on DiPino's slider, he eventually makes a mistake. Tonight he did."

In other games, the Montreal Expos beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 7-3 and the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Philadelphia Phillies 3-2 in 14 innings.

Randy Myers, 4-0, who pitched 12-3 innings of hitless relief for the victory, said an inning-ending double play in the 12th was the key. Vance Law singled, Damon Berryhill doubled and Shawon Dunston was intentionally walked to load the bases.

After pinch-hitter Jody Davis struck out, Myers went to 3-0 on Manny Trillo, another pinch hitter.

Myers came back to a full count and the Cubs put on a bases-loaded hit-

Pirate Golfer Earns All-American Honor

Chris Riley, a senior on the East Carolina golf team, was named Thursday to the Golf Coaches Association of America Academic All-American Team. Riley, who helped lead ECU to consecutive Colonial Athletic Association golf championships, held a stroke average of 77.9 this past year. Riley also earned a 3.35 grade point average on a 4.0 scale in finance.

To be eligible for the team, a golfer must participate in 75 percent of his team's tournaments, shoot an average of less than 78 per round, and hold a GPA of more than 3.0.

ECU Tracksters To Compete In Finals Today

EUGENE, Ore. — East Carolina University sprinter Eugene McNeill will compete in the finals of the 200 meters at the NCAA Track and Field Championships today at 8:20 p.m. eastern time. Also, the ECU men's 4X100 meter relay team will be in action in the finals today.

Members of the 4X100 relay team include Lee and Eugene McNeill, Ike Robinson and Junior Robinson.

McNeill qualified for the finals in the 200 meters after obtaining a clocking of 20.45 in the preliminary competition. That time was good for fourth place.

Hornets' Harter Eager To Make Transition

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Dick Harter, the first head coach of the NBA expansion Charlotte Hornets, says he is eager to make the transition from assistant coach to the man in charge.

"It's a lot easier to sit there as an assistant," said Harter, who has been an assistant coach of the Indiana Pacers for two years and was an assistant for three years before that at Detroit. "When you're head coach, losses are going to be much tougher and maybe the wins will be a little better.

"I have seen both sides. I think I can take the losses, I know I can take the wins."

Harter, 57, was named the Hornets' coach Thursday, ending a 17-month search that began even before Charlotte was awarded a franchise.

"I'm very thankful to have the opportunity to have this job. I'm excited about the opportunity to help the organization build a strong program in Charlotte," Harter said. "I like the people, the area and the challenge of building. I'm more excited than at any other point of my career.

"In my heart and in my mind, I will want to coach basketball as long as there's a ball, a court and guys willing to play. I love to coach. I've never wanted to do anything else."

Before becoming an NBA assistant coach, Harter had 18 years of head coaching experience in college. He compiled a 314-195 record at Rider, Pennsylvania, Oregon and Penn State from 1965-83.

Harter was recommended to Hornets vice president Carl Scheer and owner George Shinn by Pacers general manager Donnie Walsh, a former guard at the University of North Carolina and later a Denver Nuggets head coach and assistant coach while Scheer was general manager there.

"For the past year we have considered more than 20 qualified coaches and have taken into consideration not only their ability as a coach and teacher, but their ability to grow with a new franchise," Shinn said. "It wasn't easy but we have found our man.

"This is our most significant appointment to date and it is one that we scrutinized very carefully. We wanted a coach who is young at heart, has displayed the willingness and ability to work with young people and would have the patience to deal with the trials and tribulations that are associated with leading an expansion franchise in the formative years."

Harter said he was looking forward to the challenge of building a basketball team from scratch and was prepared for an early struggle.

"I think I'm realistic enough to know that's probably the way it's going to be," he said. "I think it's very important that our players don't like that.

"It's also very important that they know it may take a year, it may take two years, it may take three years, but some day we're going to have some fun beating people."

Harter said he will apply the knowledge he learned as an NBA assistant coach the past five years to his new task.

"I've been with two wonderful people," Harter said. "Chuck Daly at Detroit is a master at handling players and tough situations and keeping his team optimistic. Jack Ramsay (head coach of Indiana), my other boss in the NBA for two years, there is no finer gentleman in basketball."

Mahler's New Delivery Is Paying Dividends

ATLANTA (AP) — Rick Mahler has changed his delivery and it's paying dividends for the Atlanta Braves right-hander.

"I worked with (pitching coach) Bruce Dal Canton this year on cutting down my motion a little bit," Mahler said after posting his seventh consecutive victory, matching his career best, in a 14-2 triumph over the Pittsburgh Pirates Wednesday night.

"I don't have the big over-the-head motion that I had had in the past and I have a better idea where I'm throwing the ball," he said. "Before I tried to get a big windup that would be a little deceiving, and maybe I'd get a little more velocity.

"Now I've gone back to a simple motion and I can see the plate the whole time and I can see where I'm throwing the ball and I don't lose sight of the plate."

Mahler said he wasn't even discouraged by his 0-4 start this year.

"I felt like my stuff was good and my control was good," he said. "I really felt like it was going to come around. Eventually it did. Right now I'm in a groove where I just feel good."

Mahler's seven victories came in a 24-day span, best ever by an Atlanta pitcher. His first string of seven consecutive victories came at the start of the 1985 season, covering 27 days.

"This one hopefully won't end at seven," said Mahler, slated to make his next start Tuesday night when the Braves open a three-game series in San Francisco.

Two of the triumphs in this streak came in relief, and perhaps the key reason he's been winning is his control.

Last year, Mahler struggled through an 8-13 campaign in which he allowed 24 home runs and walked 85 batters in 197 innings. So far this year, Mahler has walked only 10 and allowed only two homers in 75 2-3 innings.

"I think throwing strikes is always the key," Mahler said. "That's what I've done, and the defense has played well behind me for the most part. If I can just keep from beating myself with walks, then the guys are going to do the job behind me.

"As many hits as I give up, I better not walk anybody."

He has given up more hits — 91 — than innings pitched. He walked none against the Pirates Wednesday night, his fourth appearance in a row in which he has yielded no walks. One of those was a brief relief stint.

"He's really been a big shot in the arm for us," catcher Bruce Benedict said.

"He's throwing strikes," Manager Russ Nixon said. "That's something he didn't do last year. He sure stabilizes this staff to the hilt. He keeps rolling right along. He's only rolled seven in a row now."

ACC-Big East Hoops Series Is In The Works

SANFORD, N.C. (AP) — Atlantic Coast Conference assistant commissioner Marvin "Skeeter" Francis said Thursday that a season-opening basketball series with the Big East Conference is being discussed.

"We (ACC and Big East officials) have discussed it, although right now it is still in the speculative stages," Francis told the Sanford Herald.

It was indicated the series would involve all schools in both conferences. The possibility of having four ACC teams play opening round contests at Big East sites and four Big East teams traveling to ACC sites was being examined, officials said.

"We are purely in the discussion stages right now and a lot of details remain to be worked out before anything definite is set," Francis said.

Former JMU Coach Named At Wingate

HARRISONBURG, Va. (AP) — John Thurston, former basketball coach at James Madison, said Thursday he will become the new coach and athletic director at Wingate College in North Carolina.

Thurston, who quit the JMU job in January after being told his contract would not be renewed, told the Daily News-Record that outgoing Wingate athletic director Bill Connell offered him the job by telephone early Thursday afternoon.

He said he will be named to the job Friday.

Connell is expected to remain at Wingate in a development and fund-raising capacity.

and-run. Trillo struck out and Law was caught in a rundown between third and home for the double play.

"Trillo was told to take the pitch if it was a ball and swing if it was a strike," Cubs manager Don Zimmer said. "We were going for the hit-and-run to keep out of a double play. I was four-for-four on that play before tonight. I'm four-for-five now. This is the first time it didn't work."

Berryhill had led off the 10th with his first major-league home run, breaking David Cone's streak of 17 consecutive scoreless innings. Cone, who struck out 10 and gave up five hits in 10 innings, is 7-0, and earlier in the day was named the National League pitcher of the month for May.

New York tied it in the bottom of the inning when McReynolds singled, stole second and scored on a two-out single by pinch-hitter Lee Mazzilli.

Pirates 7, Expos 3

Montreal's Andres Galarraga drove in a career-high five runs, including a three-run homer, and scored the go-ahead run.

"The way he's going, I certainly wouldn't know how to pitch him," teammate Neal Heaton said. "Sliders, fastballs, it doesn't make any difference. He's hitting everything. If he's not the starting first baseman in the All-Star game, something's wrong."

Heaton, 2-3, allowed five hits in six innings for the victory. Joe Hesketh pitched the final three innings for his first save.

Bob Walk, 5-4, allowed three runs and two hits in seven innings in losing his second straight at Three Rivers Stadium after winning nine consecutive home decisions.

Rangers Roll Past Seattle, 10-2

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

On a double-or-nothing night in the American League, Texas got the doubles and Seattle got nothing. The Rangers rapped out a season-high 14 hits, including a record-tying seven doubles, three of them by Curtis Wilkerson, who drove in three runs in a 10-2 rout of the Chicago White Sox on Thursday night. Five of the doubles accounted for seven runs.

"I want to be out there (every day), but it's up to (Manager) Bobby (Valentine)," said Wilkerson, who has been mainly a utility infielder. "I go out and do the job, and the way I'm hitting I want to be in the lineup."

Meanwhile, Kansas City's Ted Power pitched a four-hitter for his first AL shutout and Danny Tartabull homered, leading the Royals to a 3-0 victory over the Mariners. Power needed only 92 pitches, 62 of which were strikes.

In other games on an abbreviated schedule, Toronto edged Boston 5-4 and Milwaukee beat California 9-4.

Geno Petralli hit his second home run of the season in the Texas second off Melido Perez and an error by third baseman Steve Lyons led to four Texas runs in the fifth, an inning that included RBI doubles by Wilkerson, Pete Incaviglia and Pete O'Brien.

The Rangers scored in the seventh on Incaviglia's second double and Petralli's single and got a run in the eighth on singles by Wilkerson, Ruben Sierra and Incaviglia. In the ninth, Wilkerson doubled two runs across and scored on Oddibe McDowell's double. Meanwhile, Charlie Hough scattered nine hits.

Wilkerson's career-high four hits raised his average to .382.

"He's playing great, he's worked real hard," Valentine said. "He's also doing the little things like stealing bases, making the double plays and the good defensive plays."

Royals 3, Mariners 0
Power walked one and struck out five in pitching his first complete game in four starts since coming to Kansas City. He pitched one shutout and three complete games in 56 starts with Los Angeles and Cincinnati in the National League. Loser Bill Swift gave up seven hits.

Jim Eisenreich, subbing in left field for the injured Bo Jackson, singled with one out in the third inning and scored on a double by Mike MacFarlane. With one out in the sixth, Tartabull was safe on third baseman Jim Presley's throwing error, went to third on Kevin Seitzer's single and scored on Bill Buckner's sacrifice fly. Tartabull hit his 11th home run in the eighth.

Power's performance was a far cry from his previous start when Texas pounded out seven hits and four runs and knocked him out in the third inning.

"I've been talking with (pitching coach) Frank Funk in between these last two starts and he told me to stay within myself and not try to overthrow the ball," Power said. "I did a few times tonight, but then I backed off and composed myself and threw strikes."

"I got both breaking balls over, my curve and my slider. Shoot, everything just worked and they made some great plays behind me. But that's what you've got to have to get a shutout."

Manager John Wathan said the most impressive thing was that Power "threw less than 100 pitches and walked only one batter."

Blue Jays 5, Red Sox 4
George Bell, Cecil Fielder and Pat Borders homered and Toronto withstood a four-run rally in the bottom of the ninth inning. Bruce Hurst struck out 11 in 8 1/3 innings but gave up the three homers and suffered his first loss in six home decisions.

Lloyd Moseby opened the Toronto sixth with a single and one out later Bell hit his eighth home run. That was all the scoring until the ninth when Fred McGriff walked, Kelly Gruber sacrificed and Fielder and Borders hit consecutive home runs. It was Fielder's third and Borders' fifth.

Starter Jose Nunez scattered five singles before leaving with a lower back strain with one out in the fifth. David Wells pitched out of a bases-loaded jam by retiring Wade Boggs on a fly ball and was credited with the victory, although he needed help in the ninth.

Jim Rice had a two-run single and Marty Barrett doubled two runs home in the Boston ninth before Mark Eichhorn retired Mike Greenwell on a pop fly with the bases loaded for his first save.

"I got two quick outs around a walk and really wanted to finish, and I wound up sweating it out with the other guys," Wells said. "It was a hairy game, but Mark Eichhorn came in to do the job for us. We got the win. It was a hairy one, but we got it."

Brewers 9, Angels 4
Glenn Braggs' two-run double capped a four-run seventh-inning rally and rookie Don August, who joined the Brewers earlier in the day, pitched two scoreless innings of relief in his major-league debut to earn the victory. Dan Plesac pitched the final two innings for his 12th save.

The Brewers trailed 4-3 entering the seventh, but B.J. Surhoff singled and Dale Sveum doubled off Angels starter Chuck Finley. Greg Minton gave up a game-tying single to Paul Molitor. Pinch hitter Jim Gantner walked to load the bases and, after Robin Yount forced Sveum at the plate, Minton hit Rob Deer with a pitch, forcing in the go-ahead run.

Braggs then greeted Bryan Harvey with a double for a 7-4 lead. The Brewers added two runs in the eighth on RBI singles by Gantner and Deer.

Trailing 2-0, the Angels scored their four runs in the fifth off Odell Jones, who came within two outs of a no-hitter against Cleveland in his previous start.

Martin Suspended Three Days After Throwing Dirt On Ump

NEW YORK (AP) — As usual, Billy Martin went out fighting. Martin blasted umpires Rich Garcia and Dale Scott Thursday after the American League fined and suspended the New York Yankees manager for three games for kicking and throwing dirt on Scott during a game on Monday night.

Although he declined to appeal the penalty, Martin, who was fined $1,000, accused the umpires of mishandling the incident, which occurred after he was ejected from the game against the Oakland Athletics.

"If they handled the matter correctly to begin with, the situation never would have happened," Martin said in a statement issued by the Yankees.

But AL President Bobby Brown said, "there is no excuse sufficient enough to warrant dirt being kicked and thrown on an umpire."

"I have warned Billy that this type of action must cease and that, if repeated, it could result in harsher penalties," Brown said.

Martin, fined $300 for a similar incident earlier this season, has a long history of suspensions and fines following disputes with umpires.

He will begin serving his latest suspension Friday night, when the Yankees open a three-game series against the Orioles in Baltimore.

The controversy started in the third inning when umpire Rick Reed ruled that second baseman Bobby Meacham trapped a low line drive by Oakland's Walt Weiss. Meacham thought he caught the ball, so he didn't try to throw out Weiss at first.

Martin appealed Reed's call to Scott, who ejected the 60-year-old manager for allegedly using profanity. Martin then kicked dirt on Scott's shoes and scooped up a pile of dirt and threw it at the first-base umpire.

On Thursday, Martin said Scott first told him that he didn't see the play, then changed his story after meeting with the other umpires. Martin also said Scott baited him after he had trouble kicking dirt off the wet ground.

"He told me, 'Throw some more dirt on me,' and I did," Martin said. "He also said that I kicked him, but the films clearly show that he told an untruth there too, and the films also will show that he said to me when I walked off the field, 'I got you now.'"

Martin also denied that he cursed at Scott and chided crew chief Garcia for refusing to allow Scott to talk about the incident.

"When he muzzles his umpires and doesn't allow them to talk to the media, you wonder what country he thinks he's in," Martin said.

Marty Springstead, supervisor of AL umpires, said Garcia and Scott did not want to comment on Martin's suspension.

Heintzelman's 66 In Kemper Marked Thrill Of His Lifetime

POTOMAC, Md. (AP) — For Webb Heintzelman, the first round of the $800,000 Kemper Open was nothing less than the thrill of a lifetime.

Heintzelman, competing in only his second PGA event, surprised himself and the rest of the field on Thursday with a 5-under-par 66 that enabled him to grab a share of the lead with Howard Twitty.

"I can't believe I didn't have any bogeys," Heintzelman said. "And it was almost like a dream to see my name on the leader board."

Tom Kite, the defending champion, Keith Clearwater, Ken Green and Bobby Clampett were one shot back entering today's scheduled second round and nine players had 68s on the 6,867-yard Tournament Players Club at Avenel course.

The group of 14 players at 69 included Curtis Strange, who won the Memorial Tournament last week, and two-time Kemper runner-up Larry Mize.

Heintzelman, an assistant pro at a suburban Maryland country club, performed miserably in the qualifying tournament last week. But he gained a berth in the 156-man field when his name was pulled from a hat, and he made the most of the opportunity with a round that included three consecutive birdies on the front nine and two more on Nos. 15 and 16.

"I never expected to be here today," he said.

He wouldn't have, but the 26-year-old former All-American from the University of South Carolina got a second chance to compete in the tournament when his name was drawn Monday ahead of two other local pros.

"I'd be giving lessons now if my name wasn't picked," said Heintzelman, whose only previous experience on the tour was in last year's Kemper, when he failed to make the cut.

Twitty, in search of his first victory since 1980, was three under after four holes and capped the round with birdies on two of the final four holes.

"Seems like I've taken up where I left off," said Twitty, referring to the 7-under-par 277 at last year's Kemper that enabled him to finish in a second-place tie with Chris Perry.

Kite, meanwhile, did not have a bogey and notched two birdies on each nine to stay in contention for the $144,000 top prize.

"It was a lot of fun. A good, consistent round," Kite said. "I hit 15 greens, and that's better than I've been doing lately."

An early morning shower and temperatures in the low-60s made for ideal conditions that helped 35 players break par.

"No wind, soft greens, cool weather," Kite said. "Who could ask for anything more?"

Certainly not Heintzelman, although he did have one little wish. "I hope to be here four days," he said.

Dover Downs Favors Tough NASCAR Drivers

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Geoff Bodine thinks the difficult driving conditions at Dover Downs International Speedway favor the toughest of the drivers competing on the NASCAR Winston Cup circuit.

"You look down through the garage area and you can name 15 or 20 guys who have that style of driving, that mental toughness and physical toughness that fits what we have to do at Dover," Bodine said in a recent interview.

Bodine and the rest of the NASCAR competitors will begin qualifying today for Sunday's Budweiser 500 Winston Cup race and Saturday's Budweiser 200 Grand National event.

"Nothing comes easy at Dover, and I'm sure the competition won't be easy, either," Bodine said.

Nicknamed the "Monster Mile," Dover Downs has swallowed up the defending champion in the last four Budweiser 500s. No driver has two victories over the one-mile oval since Bobby Allison won the Mason-Dixon 500 in 1980 and 1983.

"Dover is tough race track ... It takes its toll on cars. It takes its toll on drivers," Kyle Petty said Thursday. "... It's tough to physically come off the 600-mile race and then come here to Dover and run a 500-mile race."

Petty was referring to last week's Coca-Cola 600 at Charlotte, won by Darrell Waltrip, the eighth winner in 10 Winston Cup events this year.

Dale Earnhardt, this year's point leader going into the race, has yet to get the best of Dover Downs and is winless at the high-banked track in his Winston Cup career.

"I always run good there, we've just had a little bad luck a couple of times. But we'll get it down and win a race there yet," Earnhardt said recently. "It's just been one of them deals."

The defending champion in the Budweiser 500 will be Davey Allison. Bodine won the race in 1986 and Bill Elliott in 1985. Richard Petty, who won in 1984, is making his 37th consecutive appearance at Dover Downs. Petty, who won the inaugural race, and J.D. McDuffie have driven in every event at the track since it opened in 1969.

Jackson Put On The DL

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Outfielder Bo Jackson was put on the 21-day disabled list Thursday with a badly torn hamstring muscle, the Kansas City Royals announced.

"It's a significant injury. If he's back in two weeks it would be amazing," said Dr. Steve Joyce, an assistant to team physician Dr. Paul Meyer.

Joyce said there are three muscles in the hamstring "and there is a tear in two of them. It is more than just an average tear. There's a lot of bleeding."

Jackson, the 1985 Heisman Trophy winner from Auburn University who is trying to juggle baseball and an NFL career as a Los Angeles Raiders running back, said he doubted the injury would shelve him as long as doctors fear.

"I think I'll be running in the next two weeks or so," he said. "I don't think I'll be out of commission 21 days. I think in 14 days I'll be doing all the things I normally do."

Doctors, however, did not sound so optimistic.

"There will be a minimum of two to four weeks for healing," Joyce said.

Jackson, hitting .309 in his second full major-league season, suffered the injury to his left hamstring while running out a ground ball in the ninth inning at Cleveland on Tuesday night.

Meyer said it could be a week or more before he can tell how long Jackson could be sidelined.

NASCAR's Feud Is Calmed Down

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — NASCAR officials said their informal dinner meeting with Dale Earnhardt and Geoff Bodine helped cool the rivalry between the two stock car drivers.

"Something needed to be done," said Les Richter, NASCAR vice president of competition. "The meeting was very beneficial."

Bodine and Earnhardt were involved in two confrontations during races at Charlotte Motor Speedway last weekend.

In the 300-mile Grand National race Saturday, their cars came together on lap 118. Bodine spun out and losing a lap in the pits for repairs.

In the Coca-Cola 600 Sunday, the drivers tangled on lap 59, sending Bodine into the wall and destroying three other cars. Earnhardt was penalized five laps as a result of that encounter.

NASCAR President Bill France Jr. called the two drivers to Tuesday's meeting at a local restaurant.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): If a condition at home is upsetting you, work it out rationally instead of losing your temper. Be cautious about who you invite to your home.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): If you have to make some changes in your budget, you may need advice from an expert. Don't take any risks while driving.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Don't reveal any important financial matters to a person you don't know very well. Try to make your daily routine more efficient.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Be sure you don't do anything which could upset a superior and cause you big trouble. Go out for some fun with friends tonight.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Your intuition is not very good this morning, so don't rely on it when making important decisions. Put more trust in your mate's abilities.

 Once in a while you will see an expert declarer make the sort of play that would convince an ordinary mortal that he had to have peeked at the cards. Invariably, however, there is a good reason for his play.

Consider this hand.
 Since his king of diamonds was unlikely to be of any value offensively, it would have been wiser for North to double five diamonds rather than bid on. But then we would have been deprived of the opportunity of watching some spectacular declarer play.
 Declarer covered the nine of diamonds with the king and ruffed away East's ace. The king of trumps lost to the ace, and declarer ruffed the diamond return. The last trump was drawn, and that left only the club suit to handle.
 The normal way to play this particular club combination would be to hope that West holds the ace and to lead twice toward the king-queen. However, declarer had good reason to suppose that the ace was with East. Not only had that worthy opened the bidding, but he also had doubled five spades, an action he was unlikely to have taken with only two aces and no king. If the ace of clubs was backed by either the ten or the jack, there was no way the contract could succeed—two tricks in the suit would have to be lost. The only hope was to find both the jack and ten with West.

 Suiting the word to the deed, declarer led a club and, when West followed low, inserted the table's nine. When that fetched the ace, declarer claimed the balance. Note that, had West split his honors, declarer would have made the contract by returning to hand and repeating the finesse.

Tony Competition Strong After Banner Season On Broadway

By MICHAEL KUCHWARA
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Will the best musical be a big British blockbuster based on a variation of "Beauty and the Beast," or a dark fairy tale where happily ever after never comes?

Will the best play be a savage comedy about two movie moguls in the making, or a haunting tale about the children of slaves coming to terms with the past or a bizarre love story involving a French diplomat and a Chinese opera singer of indeterminate sex?

The competition for the 1988 Tony Awards reflects the fact that artistically this was Broadway's best season in several years. And more importantly for the New York theater industry, all the shows nominated for best play and best musical are still running.

The awards show, to be televised Sunday at 9 pm. EDT on CBS, should be a giant advertisement for Broadway.

There are a number of strong candidates in almost every category, particularly musical, with "The Phantom of the Opera," "Into the Woods" and a revival of Cole Porter's "Anything Goes" each getting 10 nominations.

The battle between "The Phantom of the Opera," the English extravaganza by Andrew Lloyd Webber, and "Into the Woods," an American challenger written by Stephen Sondheim and James Lapine, holds the most interest.

The best play competition is also spirited. The nominees are "M. Butterfly" by David Henry Hwang, "Speed-the-Plow" by David Mamet, "Joe Turner's Come and Gone" by August Wilson and "A Walk in the Woods" by Lee Blessing.

More than any other theater award, the Tony has always helped a show where it counts — at the box office. "Joe Turner" and "A Walk in the Woods" are doing marginal business and will need the prize to survive the summer. Only "Speed-the-Plow" has done exceptional business and much of that has been because of one of its co-stars, pop singer Madonna.

"Into the Woods" already has picked up best musical awards from the New York Drama Critics Circle and the Drama Desk, two other theater organizations. But don't count "Phantom" out. It is the biggest success of the season, at least in financial terms, and Tony voters usually go for the money. The other shows up for best musical are "Sarafina!," a South African musical, and "Romance Romance," a small evening of two one-act musicals.

If any award would appear to be a shoo-in, the prize for best actor in a musical would seem to be locked up by Michael Crawford who plays the title role in "The Phantom of the Opera." Even critics who panned the musical had high praise for Crawford's portrayal of the deformed composer who lurks in the shadows of the Paris Opera House. His competitors include Scott Bakula, "Romance Romance"; David Carroll of "Chess"; and Howard McGillin, "Anything Goes."

Patti LuPone, McGillin's co-star in "Anything Goes," is the favorite for the best actress in a musical award. Her biggest competition is Joanna Gleason who plays the baker's wife in "Into the Woods." The other nominees are Alison Fraser of "Romance Romance" and Judy Kuhn of "Chess."

The best actor category is the most competitive in several seasons. The category was so crowded that several promising candidates didn't even get nominated including John Malkovich who gave a bravura performance in Lanford Wilson's "Burn This."

The choices are Ron Silver, one of those would-be film producers in "Speed-the-Plow"; John Lithgow, the bewildered diplomat in "M. Butterfly"; Derek Jacobi, a tortured mathematical genius in "Breaking the Code"; and Robert Prosky, a Soviet arms negotiator in "A Walk in the Woods."

There weren't many good roles for women on Broadway this season. Joan Allen should win the best actress award for her portrait of a ballet dancer in "Burn This." Others nominated are Glenda Jackson, "Macbeth"; Blythe Danner, "A Streetcar Named Desire"; and Frances McDormand, "A Streetcar Named Desire."

"Joe Turner's Come and Gone" dominates the featured actress category. Three of its performers — Kimberleigh Aarn, L. Scott Caldwell and Kimberly Scott — were nominated in that category. Their competition is Kate Nelligan, who appeared in the short-lived British satire, "Serious Money." The winner is a toss-up.

Soviets To Hear McCartney Album

LONDON (AP) — Paul McCartney will become the first Western star to release a record album exclusively in the Soviet Union, his record company has announced.

EMI said Thursday the 13-song collection of rock'n'roll classics will be distributed in October under the Soviet Melodia label.

"Since the Beatles' days many of my most loyal fans have been in Russia," said McCartney, whose hits include "Back in the USSR."

"It has always concerned me that these people hear our music many years after its release or through illegal importing and home taping."

James McNeill Whistler, best known for the famous portrait of his mother, was born in 1834.

The new spirit of friendship has enabled me to make this gesture to my Russian fans," McCartney said.

The Soviet Union has been establishing new ties with the West under Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's policy of "glasnost," or openness, and his plans to restructure his country's economy.

Captain Bob

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Entertainer Bob Hope is exchanging his trademark golf club for a bat to serve as a team captain tonight in country singer Barbara Mandrell's annual celebrity softball classic.

The game will benefit the organ donor program at Vanderbilt University Medical Center in Nashville.

B.D. Wong as the exotic opera singer in "M. Butterfly" is the favorite to take the featured actor award. He goes against Michael Gough, "Breaking the Code"; Lou Liberatore, "Burn This"; and Delroy Lindo, "Joe Turner's Come and Gone."

"Phantom" is expected to dominate the technical awards for sets, costumes and lighting, if it does, Maria Bjornson could walk off with two Tonys, one for scenery and the other for costumes for the lavish musical.

Don Mischer, executive producer of the Tony Awards television show, has vowed to keep it at two hours in length. The program will feature scenes from all the productions nominated for best play and best musical. It will also include a musical and dance tribute to director and choreographer Michael Bennett who died last July.

Ruffin Gets Probation In Drug Case

DETROIT (AP) — Former Temptations lead singer David Ruffin was sentenced Thursday to two years probation and 50 days of community service after being convicted of using cocaine.

Ruffin also was ordered to remain drug free during his probation in the sentencing at Detroit Recorders Court, authorities said.

Ruffin was convicted May 19 of using cocaine after Judge John O'Brien ruled there was not enough evidence to convict him of a cocaine possession charge.

Ruffin, who sang with the Temptations from 1963 to 1968, was found in the basement of a Detroit house authorities raided for drugs. A bag containing cocaine residue was found with his personal papers in the raid July 28, 1987.

Ruffin said he went to the home to find a friend, not to buy drugs. A co-defendant in the trial, Marvin Hicks, testified Ruffin was among seven people who pitched in to buy 42 grams of crack cocaine.

Ruffin, who has been touring with former Temptations singer Eddie Kendricks, is in a hospital drug treatment program in Saline and will remain there until he is discharged, according to a court official.

Emmy Producer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lorne Michaels, executive producer of NBC's "Saturday Night Live" and a six-time Emmy winner, has been named producer of the 40th Annual Primetime Emmy Awards Presentations.

His appointment was announced Thursday by Doug Duitsman, president of the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences, which awards the Emmys, and Garth Ancier, Fox's president for programming.

The show, to be telecast Aug. 28 by the Fox Broadcasting Co., will originate from the Pasadena Civic Auditorium.

Hogan Says No More 'Crocodile'

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — In October 1986, the Paramount publicity department needed a hard sell to persuade journalists to interview an Australian pitchman-turned-actor named Paul Hogan. No problem now.

What made the difference was "Crocodile Dundee," a surprise blockbuster that grossed $175 million in the United States and Canada and did comparable business wherever it played. Now Hogan's back with "Crocodile Dundee II," which he swears will be the end of the outback adventurer.

"I've completed the circle," he said. "The new one is a good movie; it stands up all by itself. It's the end of 'Crocodile' Dundee.

"Yes, I'm sure I'll be asked the same questions in three years and five years. Like, 'What if 10 million people write you and say they want to see more?' That's getting a bit unfair.

"The challenge now is to come up with another character that surpasses 'Crocodile' Dundee. That doesn't mean I'll start playing 'The Hunchback of Czechoslovakia.' I won't stretch credibility too far."

His remarks will be filed for future reference. Remember when Sean Connery said no more James Bond? Remember "Never Say Never Again"?

If the success of "Crocodile Dundee" has changed Paul Hogan, it's not visible. He remains the same wry, laid-back observer of the passing scene.

Can he really be just plain Paul Hogan any more?

"Yes," he said. "In my home I can. I'm there as often as possible. When I work, I work seven days a week, however long it takes. When I finish the job, I disappear off the planet. Then I become bored with myself very quickly, and I go back."

About the only places where he can now travel freely, he admitted, are the Soviet Union and China: "Six months from now it may be different. But I don't really want to go to Russia anyway."

Hogan recently talked about the origins of "Crocodile II."

"I decided about the time I finished No. 1," he said. "In the back of my head I thought I'd like to see this go further. I'd like to see this character get in real trouble. The first one was mostly a small-brackets adventure, a comedy and a love story with a little adventure.

"I thought I'd like to do a high adventure — if I could make it better than the first one."
In the new film, Dundee's girlfriend (Linda Kozlowski) becomes the target of South American drug dealers. After escaping death attempts in New York, the pair flee to the Australian outback. The villains pursue them, and Dundee faces seemingly insuperable odds.

The script was written by Hogan and his oldest son, Brett. Hogan said they made a good combination: "We were like a team writing songs — one writing the lyrics and the other the music. He writes very much in story lines, and I write in scenes."

The Paul Hogan story is the kind that makes the film business ever so fascinating. Who could figure that an Australian TV comedian would become an international star with one movie? Hogan didn't even start out to be an entertainer. He was making $75 a week as a workman on Sydney's Harbour Bridge in 1972 when a buddy dared him to appear on the Down Under version of "The Gong Show."

The object of "New Faces" was to humiliate the contestants. Hogan "turned the tables and ripped them to pieces. People all over the country loved seeing me get revenge. I was an overnight sensation."

Soon he became partners with John Cornell (who directed "Dundee II") in "The Paul Hogan Show," which drew high ratings and was syndicated in the United States and 30 other countries.

Hogan became a familiar face here with his commercials for Australian beer and tourism. So many visitors came to Australia that facilities were overtaxed. Hogan is no longer pitching his native land: "We don't want tourists sleeping in tents," he said.

A visit to New York in 1984 planted the seed for "Crocodile Dundee." Fishing with friends in the Northern Territory, Hogan mused about what would happen if his fellow fishermen were transported to Manhattan — "they would really think they're on another planet."

Hogan and Cornell raised the $5.6 million to finance the movie. It became Australia's biggest grosser, and Paramount bought the U.S. rights and 20th Century Fox the rest of the world.

Before the American opening, Hogan suffered a cerebral hemorrhage while weightlifting. He quickly recovered and has had no recurrence.

BACK IN THE DOWN UNDER — Paul Hogan and Linda Kozlowski recreate their roles as "Crocodile" Dundee and Sue Charlton in Paramount Pictures' "Crocodile Dundee II," which says Hogan, will be the end of the outback adventurer. "I've completed the circle," he says. (AP Laserphoto)
