Reagan: Summit Sowed 'Seeds Of Trust'

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said Saturday his Moscow summit visit sowed "seeds of freedom and greater trust" that he hopes will lead to increased liberty for the Soviet people.

"I just have to believe that, in ways we may not even be able to guess, those seeds will take root and grow," the president said in his weekly radio address from the Oval Office.

Wearing a jogging outfit, the president appeared relaxed and rested after his first night in the White House since he left May 25 on his pilgrimage to Helsinki, Finland; Moscow; and London.

Reagan also said that he and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev had "moved ahead on ... negotiations that would lead to a dramatic reduction in both sides' arsenals of strategic nuclear arms."

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, in the Democratic response to the president's speech, warned against rushing such a treaty through — something Reagan has said he will not do.

"With arms control agreements, the devil is always in the details," Byrd said. "That's why it would be unwise to rush negotiations."

"Headline-grabbing summits are one thing," he said. "But rushing to meet a deadline on a treaty ... would be irresponsible."

Furthermore, Byrd said, "I do not believe it would be wise to lock the next president into a hasty agreement, be he a Republican or a Democrat."

Reagan, in his address, said that "the event that held perhaps the most immediate historic importance" during the summit was when he and the Soviet leader signed the legal instruments putting into effect their earlier treaty banning land-based intermediate- and shorter-range nuclear missiles.

"These missiles will not simply have been shuffled around on the map or placed in storage; they will have been destroyed," he said.

He also said that he and Gorbachev agreed that the Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan "could serve as a model for settling other regional conflicts."

Turning to one of the most contentious issues of the summit, the president said, "Recently the Soviets have begun to show somewhat more respect for human rights."

"It is my hope that what took place in my Moscow visit will lead to still greater individual freedom for the peoples of the Soviet Union," he said.

"If anyone had suggested even as recently as 10 years ago that an American president would one day be able to meet with Soviet dissidents inside Moscow itself, or be able to speak to Soviet students in their own university about human freedom, well, I think you'll agree that a prediction like that would have been dismissed," Reagan said.

"But this past week, it happened," he added. "Seeds of freedom and greater trust were sown, and I just have to believe that, in ways we may not even be able to guess, those seeds will take root and grow."

Reagan also discussed the forthcoming economic summit of the leaders of seven industrial nations, which he will attend June 19-21 in Toronto, and said,

Law Allows Recount To Settle County Race

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County election officials will conduct a recount Wednesday in the county commissioners' race between D.D. Garrett of Greenville and James H. Dupree of Bethel — a recount that would probably not have occurred two years ago.

Prior to 1987, a candidate requesting a recount would have had to cite irregularities in the election process.

Since then, the N.C. General Assembly enacted a law stating any losing candidate is entitled to a recount if the winning margin is less than 1 percent of the total number of votes cast for the office.

Elections Supervisor Margaret Hardee, who has held the post five years, said she does not remember the last time there was a recount in Pitt County.

The official results from Tuesday's primary runoff election for a seat in Consolidated District A have Garrett a two-vote winner — 1,171 to 1,169 — and Dupree has requested the recount, which will begin at the county election office Wednesday at 9 a.m.

There are a number of possible scenarios:

•If Garrett is still ahead after the recount, the race is over and Garrett, who is black, will be assured a of a seat on the board of commissioners. There is no Republican oppostion in Consolidated District A, which is a combination of the regular county commissioner districts 1 and 2.

No black has ever been elected to the county commissioners, and the consolidated districts were created to give minorities a better chance at winning a seat.

A Garrett victory would mean two blacks would take office after the November election; both the Democratic and Republican candidate running from District 1 are black.

•If Dupree is ahead after the recount, he would win the election, and that possibiltiy is one reason Garrett has hired an election specialist, Raleigh attorney David F. Kirby, to represent him.

City Council Wants Equipment Funded

It's been said that the devil finds work for idle hands.

For many young children in the community, idle time could be spent on constructive and healthy play — or it might involve a disastrous, early entanglement with the cruel realities of life on the street.

Members of the Greenville City Council are trying to make sure that those young children get an opportunity to participate in clean, recreational activities - like skimming down a slippery slide, flying through the air on a swing, and climbing through a jungle gym.

Members of the council have voiced concern over the lack of available

Paper Says Hostages Being Held At Former School In South Beirut

LONDON (AP) — A Sunday newspaper reported the 18 foreign hostages kidnapped in Lebanon are being held in a former school in south Beirut and it carried a front-page photograph of a building it said was the school.

The Mail on Sunday said the hostages, including nine Americans and three Britons, were taken there during recent fighting in the area between gunmen of the pro-Iranian Hezbollah organization and Shiite Amal militiamen.

Hezbollah, or Party of God, is believed holding the captives.

The Mail on Sunday attributed its report to Amal officers it did not identify.

In other developments:

— London's Guardian newspaper said the United States is holding talks with Hezbollah leaders in Lebanon and directly with Iranian representatives in Geneva in another effort to gain the release of the hostages. It based its report on information from unidentified political sources in Beirut.

— The British Foreign Office said Saturday it has proposed paying Iran the equivalent of more than $3.2 million as compensation in a settlement over damages to British diplomatic buildings in Iran and Iran's Embassy in London.

A Foreign Office spokesman, who was not identified in line with government practice, said the proposal is to be discussed at a meeting in London starting Wednesday but the talks will not cover the question of the British hostages in Lebanon.

Of the nine American captives, Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, has been held the longest. He was kidnapped March 16, 1985.

Many previous published reports on where the hostages were being held and about talks to gain their release turned out to be unfounded.

The Mail on Sunday said the captives are being guarded at the school by high ranking Hezbollah officers supervised by Iranian Revolutionary Guards.

Mexican Aliens Found In Desert

By ARTHUR H. ROTSTEIN
Associated Press Writer

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Thirty-six undocumented Mexican aliens were found Saturday wandering without food or water in the searing Sonora desert north of Tucson after two of them came to a ranch seeking help, authorities said.

The 35 men and one woman, whom officials said had been walking four days since crossing the border onto the Tohono O'odham Indian Reservation, were brought to Northwest Hospital by Border Patrol bus.

"As far as we know, everybody's accounted for," said Border Patrol Supervisory Agent Clyde J. Benzenhoefer.

The 36 were in generally good condition, said nursing supervisor Cheryl Lanier. But three men were taken to the emergency room because of dehydration, and one case was classified as significant, emergency room services director Ardis Waite said.

The rest were taken to the hospital's cafeteria for drinks and to cool off, before returning to the custody of Border Patrol agents, Ms. Waite said.

Benzenhoefer said those in good physical condition who wanted to return to Mexico would be allowed to do so voluntarily.

The Mexicans, ranging in age from 18 to about 50, all came from the state of Oaxaca and crossed probably from the town of San Miguel, Sonora, south of Sells, Ariz., Benzenhoefer said.

He said they had told officials they were en route to look for farm work, probably near Phoenix, had been traveling mostly at night and had run out of water Friday afternoon or Saturday morning.

Benzenhoefer said the group was found about 3 p.m. He said the group had located runoff water near the Silverbell branch mine operated by the Asarco Co., about 60 miles north of the Mexican border and about 20 miles northwest of Tucson, where the temperature reached 108 degrees Saturday.

Boat Ramp Will Be Closed

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

Those boating enthusiasts planning to launch their craft from the Town Commons this weekend during the Sunday in the Park celebration may be using that particular ramp for the last time for awhile.

According to City Manager Greg Knowles, the launching facility at the Town Commons will soon be closed due to its poor condition.

Knowles said an estimate of $28,000 has been made to repair the sloping grade into the Tar River.

"In the meantime, we will be evaluating alternatives on how to provide that service in the future. It won't be closed forever," he said.

Knowles said he advises people who routinely use the launching area to use other river entrance points such as the Port Terminal, which is located approximately 2.5 miles east of town.

"I think they have been having problems with that boat ramp (Town Common) for quite awhile and have done repeated patch work and it has reached the point where continued patch work won't help," said City Council member Lorraine Shinn.

"There's a terrible problem with the washout," said Boyd Lee, director of city's recreation and parks department.

Lee said past attempts to stabilize the launching area by adding rock and gravel have been futile — rain simply washes it into the river.

He said to resolve that problem, the city would likely have to install a curb and gutter-type system on the slope which would provide appropriate draining.

"Now it's kind of at the point of closing it or fixing it," he said.

The launching ramp into the river at the Town Common has been in existence since the transformation of that area into the park.

Each year area residents find the site a convenient and nearby access into the shallow river waters to canoe, fish, or simply enjoy the sun along the river banks. Lee said during the summer months, the launching area experiences a great deal of activity.

Lee said that although no major accidents or injuries have arisen because of its condition, several people reported that their automobiles became stuck at the bottom of the ramp.

Recount Will Settle Race For Commissioner

At a meeting with election officials Thursday, Garrett asked if he could request another recount if Dupree's margin of victory was less than 1 percent of the total number of votes cast. Mrs. Hardee and other election officials said they did not know.

"That would be setting a precedent. It could go on forever that way," Mrs. Hardee said.

"The law is sort of silent on that particular point," Kirby said. "I think as a practical matter ... that would become the final vote that would be presented to the board of elections.

"He (Garrett) would still have some remedies if the procedure followed in the recount showed some discrepancy in the totals," Kirby said. If Garrett cites irregularities in the recount, he may appeal the decision to the State Board of Elections, and then to Superior Court.

•Another possibility is both candidates could finish in a dead heat.

The odds of a tie are remote, but Mrs. Hardee said bizarre things have happened before. "Pitt County is such a diverse county, and it's made up of people from every walk of life.

"If it's going to happen, it's going to happen in Pitt County," she said.

The law states there can be no third primary, and the executive committee of the party involved must decide the winner in the event of a tie.

J.B. Spilman, chairman of the Pitt County Democratic Party, said the executive committee is made up of the officers of the party, the chairmen and first vice chairmen of each precinct, all Pitt County elected Democrats and the presidents of auxillary organizations such as the Young Democrats.

Each precicnt would receive a weighted vote, in proportion to the number of voters in the precinct, but there are really no particular rules on how the committee is to pick a winner, Spilman said.

"We have to determine the procedure we'll follow when we get into the meeting," Spilman said. "I hope it doesn't happen. I'd rather the voters decide it. We always prefer that."

One possible glitch in the whole process is the manner in which the recount will be conducted. Garrett has requested a machine count, but Dupree has requested the votes be counted by hand.

Tabulating the votes manually is the most unreliable method because of the high likelihood of human error, Mrs. Hardee said, and officials may arrive at two different totals if they use two methods of counting.

"The chances are very good it will be different because counting by hand is very inaccurate," she said.

Mrs. Hardee said she has never faced that problem before, and she does not know what would happen if they arrived at two different totals.

Election officials will meet Monday at 2 p.m. to discuss such problems with Garrett and Dupree, and to decide ahead of time what procedures will be used, she said.

Kirby said it is possible to count the ballots both ways, but it is up to the county elections board to decide.

The law allows the county board to supervise the recount, Kirby said, and as long as they remain within the general statutes, they may choose to conduct the recount any way they like.

Seven of the 10 precincts in Consolidated District A used AIRMAC voting machines in the primary runoff.

With the machines, voters mark their ballots by hand and the machines count the ballots electronically. But if a ballot is flawed or marked incorrectly, the machine automatically places them in an "outstack," and precinct officials must count them.

It is common for each precinct using AIRMAC machines to have several ballots in the outstack, and if the recount produces changes in the election result, the changes will likely come from these ballots, Mrs. Hardee said.

There can be judgment involved; if the ballot is marked incorrectly, but precinct officials can determine the "intent of the voter," then it is counted. If they cannot determine the intent of the voter the ballot is not counted, she said.

Kirby said election officials, Garrett and Dupree will need to decide at their meeting Monday how to deal with ballots marked incorrectly.

Greenville precincts No. 1, 3 and 7 used new electronic voting machines in the primary runoff, and they will take very little time to count and there is virtually no chance of a discrepancy from the previous totals, Mrs. Hardee said.

The Board of Elections has requested funds from the county commissioners to purchase enough electronic machines to serve the entire county, Mrs. Hardee said.

Consolidated District A includes the Belvoir, Bethel and Carolina precincts, and portions of Greenville precincts No. 1, 3, 4, 6, 7 and 8.

Registrars from each of the precincts will participate in the day-long recount, Mrs. Hardee said, and they will retally all ballots.

'Seeds Of Trust'

"It is my belief that liberty should be as important a concern in Toronto as it was in Moscow."

"Liberty in the economic sphere means low taxes, it means paring away needless regulations and reducing counterproductive government planning and interference, and it means keeping down barriers to international trade here and around the world," he said.

Reagan said the leaders at the economic summit will "celebrate the success of free markets."

Council Eyes Funds

playground equipment in the community, and are directing City Manager Greg Knowles to appropriate $8,000 this year and for each of the next two years to help fill that gap.

"Historically, the playgrounds have been ignored almost every budget I have seen and the ones that exist are in a state of disrepair," said council member Lorraine Shinn.

This year was an example of that trend. Although the department of parks and recreation had requested a $5,000 capital outlay in this year's budget for the equipment, the city manager had scratched the request from this year's budget.

Council members Mildred Council and Rufus Huggins both expressed opposition to his penciling out the capital outlay.

"Young kids need a place to go," Huggins said. "Those places are used so consistently that they are in a constant state of needed repair ... the kids use them ... they are used heavily all over Greenville," he said.

Mrs. Shinn said the recreation department has in the past felt pressure from residents to add and maintain adult recreational facilities such as tennis courts, whereas the children in the neighborhood parks and their parents have not been as strong a lobbying force.

"We've got dedicated park space in this city that doesn't even have equipment in it," Mrs. Shinn complained.

According to Boyd Lee, director of the city parks and recreation department, the last pieces of playground equipment in the city were purchased several years ago.

"People just don't realize the cost of this equipment," Lee said, noting that a mere swingset constructed of the high-grade material needed for playground-type use can cost upwards of $700.

Lee said that should the department receive the $8,000 capital outlay, the first step would be to replace the equipment currently in disrepair.

"We'll start looking at equipment and find out where the worst is and at some point, start adding more. $8,000 will just get us started, but it is a start." he said.

Members of the council are scheduled to hear and consider comments regarding the 1988-89 budget proposal at a public hearing Monday at 6 p.m. in the third floor conference room of City Hall.

Police Investigate Friday Incidents

Greenville police said several incidents were reported in the area Friday.

Officer S.A. Person said the right rear light of a car at 1410 S. Evans St. was broken out in an incident reported at 8:30 a.m.

Person said the theft of a .38-caliber handgun from a car was reported at 3:11 p.m.

Officer W.R. Wyrick said a breaking and entering at Margaux's restaurant was reported at 8:53 a.m. Two windows were broken and the restaurant was ransacked but nothing was taken, Wyrick said.

Officer E.M. Haddock said a brick fence surrounding a residence at 517 Longmeadow Road was damaged in an incident reported at 10:14 a.m.

A mailbox was hit and hid in the bushes of a residence at 1111 Ragsdale Road in an incident reported at 12:48 p.m. according to Officer S.C. Locke.

Officer J.E. Fleming said a vehicle was scratched along its door in the Pitt County Memorial Hospital parking Lot, causing $200 damage, in an incident reported at 1:42 p.m.

Police said the theft of a drill worth $134.89 from Garris Evans Lumber Co. was reported at 12:52 p.m.

Officer T.E. Nevelle said a shoplifting incident at the Piggly Wiggly supermarket was reported at 4:36 p.m.

Officer R.L. Vandiford said someone threw a bag of ice on the top of a car parked on East Seventh Street near Ringold Towers, causing $400 damage, in an incident reported at 7:30 p.m.

Officer W.E. Davis said the theft of an automobile from Davis Street was reported at 10:40 p.m.

Friday Arrests

Johnny Ray Cannon of 301 Ash St. was arrested at 2006 Chestnut St. for larceny Friday at 4:23 p.m., according to Greenville police.

Officer T.E. Nevelle said Cannon was later charged with simple possession of marijuana and resisting, delaying and obstructing justice.

Also on Friday, Detective G.W. Williams said Charles Henry Harris of 1016 Colonial Ave. was arrested at 10:40 a.m. and charged with two counts of obtaining property by false pretenses at the Branch Bank at 212 S. Greene St.

Optimist Club

The Optimist Club of Greenville will have a dinner meeting Monday at 6:30 p.m. at the Three Steers Restaurant on Memorial Drive. Lester Craft, past International Fresident of Optimist Clubs, will be the guest speaker.

Benefit Project

The Sidney Volunteer Fire Department, located one-half mile south of Sydney Crossroads, will sell chicken dinners in a benefit project Saturday from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Takeouts will also be available.

Break-In Charges

Errick Roshawn Griffin of 519 Evergreen St., Winterville, was arrested at 2 a.m. Saturday for breaking, entering and larceny from a vehicle, according to Greenville Police Officer C.G. Alphin.

Alphin said Shelton Jerome Battle of 1812-A Norcott Circle was arrested at the same time for the breaking and entering of a vehicle at Fourth and Cotanche streets and for resisting, delaying and obstructing arrest.

Melvin Thomas Phillips of 508 Cooper St., Winterville, and Robert Lee Henry of A-1 Medical Oaks were arrested on one count each of breaking and entering of a vehicle in related incidents, Alphin said.

Officer L.E. White said Donald Williams of 1105 Melody Lane was arrested for trespassing at 402 B Darden Drive at 10:07 a.m. Saturday.

Computer Rally

Second-grade students at W.H. Robinson Elementary School recently participated in a computer rally where the students visited various stations dealing with computer literacy.

Each child rotated through different stations, including computers and people, keyboarding, computer terminology, computer bingo, hardware-software and licensing.

The activity ends a yearlong unit on computers and grants computer operator licenses to those who pass the countywide computer test.

Director Elected

The North Carolina Medical Record Association recently elected Becky Brown to the office of director II.

Ms. Brown earned her ART accreditation through the AMRA Independent Study Course. She is now working on her progression to RRA through Stephens College.

Ms. Brown, who is employed as record manager for Caswell Center in Kinston, has served the NCMRA previously as vice president and director I.

She resides in Greenville with her son Lee and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Mobley of Greenville.

Authority Meeting

The Pitt-Greenville Convention and Visitors Authority will hold its monthly meeting Thursday at 7 p.m. in the commissioners' board room on the first floor of the Pitt County Office Building, 1717 W. Fifth St.

Educators Cited

The Pitt County Unit of the North Carolina Association of Educators held its annual spring banquet Friday, honoring association members who are retiring or who have been in the teaching profession for at least 25 years.

Following the presentation to the retirees, new officers for the 1988-89 year were installed. The slate includes: Ruby Jackson, president; Sam White, vice president, president-elect; Joy Riddick, secretary, LeVeta Worthington, treasurer, and Sarah Rogerson, assistant treasurer.

Retiring members honored, and the school in which they taught, included Mary Brooks, H.B. Suggs; Jeppy Calhoun and Barbara Tyson, Elmhurst; Glenn Cox, Wellcome Middle; Billie Edwards, Pactolus; Hilda Faison, Farmville Middle; Lois Haddock, Ayden Middle; Roderick Harrell, D.H. Conley; Zenora Hopkins, Third Street; Blanche Marsh, G.R. Whitfield; Sudie Moore, Grifton Elementary; Beatrice Simmons, North Pitt; Ethel Thomas, Wahl-Coates, and Marjorie Ward, Ayden-Grifton.

Those noted for 25 years of service included Faye Adams, Elmhurst; Barbara Brown, Eastern Elementary; Mary Gorham, Grifton Elementary; Ernest McNair, North Pitt; Joyce Weatherington, Wintergreen, and Betsy West, Elmhurst.

Squad Applications

The Pactolus Emergency Medical Services, covering the Pactolus, Stokes, and Clarks Neck areas, is accepting applications for volunteer emergency medical technicians and ambulance attendants to join the rescue squad.

Persons who have certification or are interested in the necessary classes to receive their certification should call 758-3885 for more information.

NCSA Graduates

Two of the four are college graduates. They are Mitchell Riggs, Ayden, degree in drama, and John Paul Haggard, Greenville, degree in music.

Two Greenville students, Lillian Gordley and James Hillis, graduated from NCSA's high school program in the field of visual arts.

Trustees Appointed

Five people were appointed to the board of trustees of the Greenville Museum of Art at the group's recent meeting.

The new board members are Ginger Minges, corresponding secretary; Barbara Hall, recording secretary, and trustees Joseph O. Clark, David McDowell and Joan Warren.

Nelson Britt, GMA director, discussed the educational roles that museums must provide and the importance of family participation in the growth and development of the museum.

An engraved silver tray was presented to Mrs. Jim Young for her work as interim director. Certificates were given to outgoing officers and trustees Mrs. R. Wally Howard, Mrs. Steven White, Mrs. Charles Stevens and Dr. A. Dan Warren III.

Award Winners

Students in Williamston schools again this year were multiple award winners in the statewide annual Tar Heel Junior Historians competition held recently at Peace College in Raleigh.

More than 600 young historians from North Carolina entered the annual event, presenting more than 100 individual and group projects.

Williamston schools and awards received in group and individual categories were:

• E. J. Hayes Elementary School — Group media, The Moratoc MarConians, first place for "Horseless Carriages in Martin County: 1911-1988;" individual arts, honorable mention for Anita Sadler for "Lake Mattamuskeet;" group arts, The Moratoc MarConians, first place for "Telephones in Martin County: Past to Present."

• Williamston Junior High School — Individual literacy, honorable mention, Michael Bond for "Professor W.C. Chance: A Voice of Destiny," which also won the Afro-American History Award; group literary, honorable mention, The Skewarkians for "Tuck-A Hoe" Volume III; individual media, first place, Gabe Hardison for "History of the Conoho Gun Club," and Youth Preservation Award, The Skewarkians.

Lunch Menus

Lunch menus for the Pitt County schools this week, as announced, are:

Thursday — pizza, french fries, tossed salad and milk.

Correction

An article in Thursday's edition should have identified Rose Marie Cox as the Outstanding Career EMT of the Year. Ms. Cox is a member of the Greenville Fire-Rescue Department.

NATIONAL WINNERS — The Art IV class at J.H. Rose High School recently won third place in the national Nutrition Music Video Contest, sponsored by the Florida Department of Citrus. The video was produced under the direction of Rose art teacher, Billy Stinson, center, with animation and original music. Stinson was pictured with students Eric Manning, left, and Mat Kraczon. Council Sets Budget Hearing Monday

A public hearing on the 1988-89 Greenville city budget proposal will be held Monday at 6 p.m. in the third floor conference room of City Hall.

City Manager Greg Knowles has proposed for the upcoming fiscal year an expansion of the city operational budget by 7.8 percent — a rise from $19,656 to $21,693,443.

In addition, he is proposing that the council consider an additional capital improvement program which, if passed, would create a tax increase from an adjusted revaluation rate of 53 cents to 57 cents.

Also Monday, the council will consider leasing the Gardner Fire Station to the local chapter of the Vietnam Veterans of America.

The council will consider a proposal by County Manager Kramer Jackson on the establishment of an East Carolina Medical Park Commission, consider a resolution regarding the Medical District from the Pitt County Medical Society, and listen to a presentation on the establishment of a city greenways program.

Also scheduled for Monday is a discussion of items on the agenda for the council's monthly action meeting on Thursday.

Included on the agenda is a request to extend the city's extraterritorial planning and zoning jurisdiciction south of White Road, east of State Road 1709 and west of N.C. 43.; a request by Greenville Surgeon's Properties to rezone 11 acres located south of Johns Hopkins Drive and Bethesda Drive from MD-5 (medical) to MD-3; a request by the Planning and Development Department to rezone a 1.54-acre tract located off the northern right-of-way of 14th Street, east of Seaboard Caostline Railroad and being lots 1, 2, 3, and 4 of Block 42-I of the South Evans Redevelopment Project Area from CDF (commercial downtown fringe) and R-6 (residential) to IU (unoffensive industry).

Other items include two proposed amendments to the Zoning Ordinance, creating a comprehensive "congregate care facility" ordinance, and allowing "barber shops, beauty shops, and similiar personal care services" as permitted uses in the O&I (office and institutional) zoning districts; a resolution authorizing the sale of Disposal Parcels 42-I-1, 2, 3, 3A, 4 and 4A of the South Evans Community Development Project; a resolution authorizing the sale of Disposal Parcel 42-M-4 in the South Evans Community Development Project; consideration of a bid relating to an air conditioning unit for the city's computer room, and consideration of a bid for 1988 street and downtown parking lot resurfacing.

Other items include an agreement with NCDOT and authorizing resolution for Section 18 transit grant assistance and an application for the Governor's Highway Safety Program funding for accessing the Merge System for Traffic Analysis.

Optimists Honor Officers Of Year

The Optimist Club of Greenville, as part of Respect for Law Week, has honored three law enforcement officers — Highway Patrol Trooper R.H. Wright, Greenville Police Department Sgt. T.V. Woolard and Pitt County Deputy Sheriff Ronald Wayne Smith — as Officers of the Year.

Willis Talton, an Optimist Club spokesman, said the officers were selected by their departments for the honor.

Wright was selected for his efforts in assisting a heart attack victim at a Martin County restaurant in July 1987.

R.H. WRIGHT

RONALD WAYNE SMITH

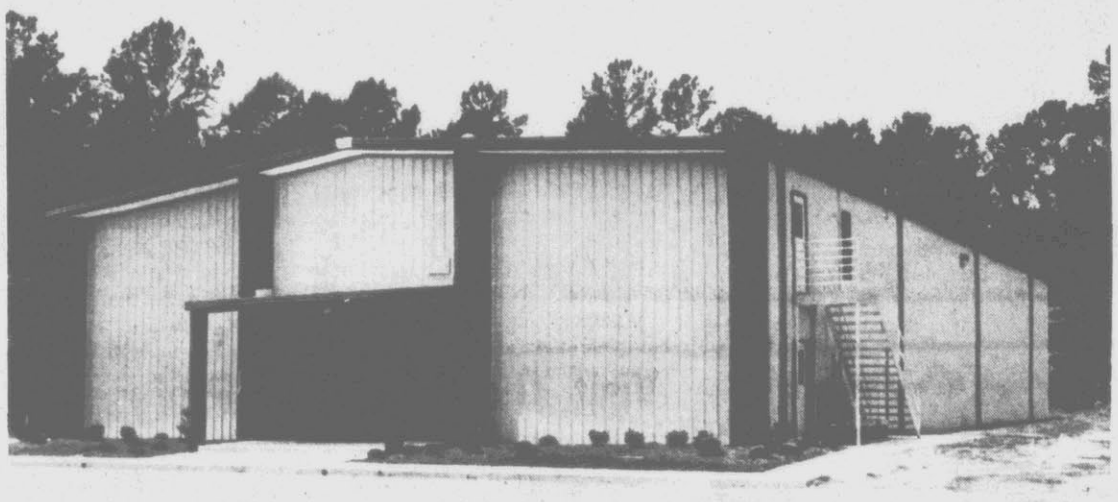

The trooper administered cardiopulmonary resusitation until the rescue squad arrived, then continued CPR while the man was taken to Martin General Hospital, where physicians credited Wright with saving the man's life.

Woolard was honored for his work in the field of auto larceny investigations. Since Woolard has been assigned to follow up vehicle theft cases, the department's clearance rate has increased from 21 percent to 35 percent.

Smith was designated as the Sheriff's Department recepient for his work in investigating a break-in at Stokes and Congleton Store in Stokes in December 1986.

Smith discovered the break-in and began a search for the intruder. While behind a residence in the area, the robber attacked Smith with a large knife taken from the store, but because Smith was wearing a bullet resistant vest, he was not injured and the alleged robber was arrested.

Lawmakers Debate Full-Time Legislature Issue

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — A proposed increase in state legislative salaries has rekindled debate on a deeper question: Will the rising complexity of government turn North Carolina's citizens' legislature into a full-time operation?

State lawmakers are proud of the General Assembly's legacy, of the a part-time status that allows farmers, lawyers, doctors, businessmen and insurance salesmen to share the reins of power. But many grumble about demands on their time, increasingly technical issues they must address and the decay of the "good ol' boy network."

Rep. Jack Hunt, a Cleveland County Democrat and one-time dentist, says he was "a typical citizen legislator" when he first ran for office 15 years ago.

"I lived on a farm, still farmed, had a business connection with my stores and had a profession. And I'd lived in a farm and in a mill community," he said. "That's what my territory is made up of.

That mixture, leavened with "a fair amount of independence," helped North Carolina keep the per capita cost of government the lowest in the nation at $1.17, Hunt said. In 1985 figures, Alaska led the nation in spending at $46.75 per resident. Among neighboring states, South Carolina spent $5.55 per resident, Tennessee spent $1.83 and Virginia $2.37.

Asked what would happen if North Carolina joined the nine states with full-time legislatures, Hunt said, "I think it would be ruined. I can't think of a scenario, personally, that would hurt this state ... any more than that."

Others, however, say the change is overdue.

"We're in a different age now," said Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus. "It's going to take more educated, more qualified people to do the job. And the days of the good ol' boy politician are gone.

"The world has become more complicated and sophisticated, and with that you have to have the kind of personnel to deal with the problems," he said. "It's a matter of evolution but it's coming fast."

Lawmakers no long have time to examine each issue in detail and draw their own conclusions, Johnson said, and they are further pressured because the lobbyists who sometimes supply the information also can furnish campaign funds.

"More and more candidates are relying more and more on outside financial assistance," he said. "On top of that, the legislators are more and more relying on the lobbyists to give them a synopsis of what ... legislation does. That kind of pressure is going to require the legislature to be here in the next 10 years on a full-time basis."

Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gaston, said North Carolina's part-time lawmakers are as "professional" as they can be under the circumstances. But she added, "I think we're kidding ourselves if we say we don't need a full-time legislature."

It is increasingly difficult to be "experts or semi-experts in a multiplicity of highly technical areas," Ms. Marvin said.

Ms. Marvin and Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Gravniell, said the job is almost full-time now.

"When I first came to the General Assembly it was somewhat burdensome to read my mail," said Watkins. "Now it's burdensome to open it."

Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood, looks at it from a geographic perspective — his own six-hour drive to Raleigh.

"The ones within driving distance are full-time legislators," he said. "People who are more in the hinterlands are not. We try to avoid being on the study commissions and whatever because it's just too far to drive for the honor."

Some lawmakers point out North Carolina is the 10th most populous state, yet its base legislative salary of $10,140 is roughly 28th in the nation, according to the National Conference of State Legislatures. Of the nine states with more people, seven have full-time legislatures — California, Illinois, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania, said Beth Bazar, a conference researcher. Pennslyvania will briefly pay the highest salary when it goes to $47,000 in December, but New York will recapture first place when its lawmakers go from $43,000 a year to $57,500, Ms. Bazar said.

Texas and Florida are the other part-time holdouts among larger states, while two smaller states, Massachusetts and Wisconsin, have gone full-time. Other states with salaries comparable to North Carolina are South Carolina and Mississippi at about $10,060 each and Oregon at $11,028.

On the first day of the short session of the General Assembly, bills were filed to increase lawmakers' salaries by 111 percent. Few legislators publicly backed the proposals, although most said they were underpaid.

"It ain't a question of the money," said Hunt. "We've got people here that are a bargain at $100,000 a year. ... If you get that kind of person to help operate the state that person needs to have the dedication that he's going to serve and he's going to take a financial loss or whatever to serve."

Johnson said political realities have rewritten the concept of sacrifice.

"Politics has become so competitive and really so rough and tumble and mean, the sacrifice comes to get people to run for public office at all," he said. "They've gotten to the point now that they attack people's personal lives, their religion. There seems to be no end to innuendoes, half-truths.

"So the sacrifice that has traditionally been financial is a sacrifice of getting good qualified people who will run and take the heat of running for political office."

Hunt said a full-time legislature might become filled with people who planned careers in politics while in college, spurning the grassroots experience many lawmakers now have. But Johnson said that was missing the point.

"The complexity and the volume of running the largest business, political, economic and social organization in the state deserves better than part-time help," he said. "Do they want a part-time doctor? Do they want a part-time lawyer?"

Johnson said it's time to get away from "the idea that we have to preserve for preservation's sake" the way government operates.

Ms. Marvin also disputed claims that full-time legislators might be less qualified, saying the decision will remain in the hands of the voters.

"If they are concerned about the quality, then they need to be concerned enough to assure, number one, that good people run for office; number two, that they get out and vote so they can nominate good people and come back and elect good people in the general election."

"I am concerned that now, because of the pressures and demands, that we are just getting people like myself who are retired or who can afford to take time away from their businesses to come down here," Ms. Marvin said. "I think that we need to have representation from all ages and both sexes and ethnics groups and occupations and professions."

"We're ending up ... with a kind of an elitist group of the very rich and the very retired," said Hipps. "We've got too many Lincoln and Cadillac people. We need some more Chevrolet or Ford people. We need people of more modest incomes, people who are raising kids."

While some legislators say the federal government's declining role in local issues will inevitably force a full-time legislature, Hunt said he's seen little movement in that direction in his 15 years. But he added, "I think we work a lot harder now."

Sam Johnson, a former legislator who lobbies on behalf of dozens of interests, said the people aren't ready for such a step.

"I've heard quite a few legislators say that they thought the time had come for them to be more full-time. But I haven't heard it from the private sector," he said. "I think they still think of it as a volunteer part-time service, not career service. I don't think they appreciate the role model of Congress."

The lobbyist said a full-time legislature would also eliminate study commissions that now meet between sessions. "That gets rid of your outside citizen input," he said.

The political realities may be driven home to legislators by the 1990 U.S. Census, Jim Johnson said.

"Then this state will go through a real political revolution," he said. "The population will show that the greater Piedmont and corridor along our interstates is where the political base of power of this state is. No longer in rural North Carolina. No longer in the far western reaches."

Hunt said lawmakers showed no signs of backing legislation to change their part-time status. He said only about 40 of 120 House members would prefer staying in Raleigh year-round, a number he said has been "pretty constant" over 15 years.

But Hipps remains certain something will happen. "We either do it in a big leap or we're just going to do it by acquiescence. That's what we're doing now."

Plant Will Close

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Apparel manufacturer London Fog will close its plant in the Powell area of Knox County by the end of October, officials announced.

Company spokesman James Haneschlager said the two types of jackets made at the plant no longer sell, and it would be too expensive to adapt the plant to make something else. The plant employs 140 people.

Garry Ferraris, southern director of the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers union, blamed the closing on President Reagan.

"If President Reagan had not vetoed the apparel and textile trade bill that was passed two years ago, this plant would not be closing today," he said.

Barbs Traded By Martin, Jordan

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin Saturday launched a new attack on Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, accusing him of having a "hidden agenda" and making frequent references to Jordan's remark about "rednecks" in eastern North Carolina.

Jordan said Martin was panicking and resorting to personal attacks in the wake of a new poll indicating a dead heat in the gubernatorial race.

The survey, taken May 18-26 and published by the Charlotte Observer, showed Jordan supported by 47 percent of the 543 registered voters interviewed and Martin by 46 percent. The margin of error was 4.2 percentage points.

An Observer poll taken in February showed Martin ahead, 54 percent to 38 percent, suggesting that Jordan has made huge gains this spring.

In a speech to the state Republican convention, Martin — who hopes to become North Carolina's first Republican governor to win re-election — made a passing reference to the poll and bore down on Jordan, the Democratic gubernatorial nominee.

Martin repeatedly brought up Jordan's characterization of eastern North Carolina conservatives as "rednecks" in a meeting with black leaders in March and scorned Jordan's proposal to abolish the state Department of Commerce.

But some of the governor's strongest remarks were inserted into the speech Friday night after the original text had been printed.

Many Democrats, Martin said, are "very nervous about the Democratic candidate, who will go to any group and confess that there are things they are for that he is for — but won't specify in an election because it might cost him what he calls the 'redneck vote.'

PUBLIC HEARING ON HAZARDOUS WASTE

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE CITIZENS OF EASTERN NC

Within the next week or two, the five Edgecombe County Commissioners (Vines Cobb, John Williams, Thomas Walker, J.O. Thorne and Chairman Tom Bardin) and state representative Joe Mavretic plan to drastically alter the future of Eastern North Carolina by "volunteering" a site in Edgecombe County between Tarboro and Greenville for: 1) a low level radioactive waste dump which will receive the wastes from eight southeastern states for 20 years, 2) a toxic and hazardous waste incineration and treatment facility, and 3) a solid waste landfill.

While political planning has been in progress for several months and a deal has apparently been struck with Governor James Martin for $5 million in local projects, the public was informed of the decision only about two weeks ago.

The day before the opening of the General Assembly short session on June 1, Rep. Mavretic introduced the "incentive" package in committee that would give a volunteer community financial rewards but no local power or control. Once the Edgecombe commissioners officially vote to "volunteer" this region, the deal will sail through the general assembly as other legislators will quickly vote to site these facilities somewhere - anywhere - other than in their districts.

Wouldn't it make more sense to carefully study multiple possible sites and select the area where there is the least risk to the fewest people? Economic, social, and environmental consequences deserve serious study.

The Hazardous Waste Treatment Commission and the Low Level Radioactive Waste Management Authority were created by the legislature to undertake such studies and decide on sites for these two facilities. This process is about to be short-circuited by six people acting very rapidly in secret with no regard for meaningful public involvement in the decision-making process.

This is politics at its worst.

If you agree with this process and the decision it will inevitably produce, you need do nothing.

If you do not agree, let your opinion be known. The speakers at the first public hearing on May 26 were selected by the commissioners from those who registered to speak. Many did not get a chance to voice their opinions.

Another public hearing will be held on Monday evening June 6 at 7:30 at Edgecombe Community College in Tarboro. A gathering of those who disagree with the process by which the decision is about to be made will be held at the same location beginning at 6:00 p.m.

Party Wounds Still Open As GOP Leaders Gather

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Republican leaders preached unity and bashed Democrats at the state GOP convention Saturday, but signs of bitterness lingered from the clash between the party's mainstream and arch-conservative wings over presidential politics.

Gov. Jim Martin and lieutenant gubernatorial nominee Jim Gardner set the tone with speeches excoriating their Democratic opponents and the leadership of the General Assembly.

Martin made no direct reference to the clash between mainstream GOP activists and Pat Robertson supporters but called on Republicans to "overcome our own internal rivalries" and focus their energies on defeating the Democrats.

He was interrupted frequently by applause from the 1,420 delegates at the Raleigh Civic Center, who gave the governor a prolonged ovation as he ended his speech and red, white and blue balloons tumbled from overhead nets.

Some of the Robertson backers who attended despite a boycott called by the ex-religious broadcaster's state leadership also endorsed reconciliation.

"Conservatives must work with all their hearts to be a part of the solution rather than a part of the problem," said Tom Vestal, a Raleigh minister who supported Robertson for the GOP presidential nomination. "And that involves self-denial, setting aside your own personal interests."

But when delegates returned to the convention center after lunch, they were handed copies of a tabloid newsletter called "Common Sense" published by the members of the party's arch-conservative wing.

On the front page were photographs from what the publication called "the Battle of Louisburg" — the 4th District GOP convention at which a fistfight broke out between Robertson supporters and other Republicans over delegate slots to the state and national party conventions.

"Hawke & Company: Rule or Ruin," read the front-page headline. The 16-page tabloid contained lengthy acoounts of the 4th District brouhaha and accused state GOP Chairman Jack Hawke and mainstream "mossbacks" of trying to chase conservatives from the party.

Hawke angrily described the paper as "full of lies," saying he had done his best to work out a compromise betwen the Robertson camp and supporters of Vice President George Bush and Sen. Robert Dole.

Hawke charged that the National Congressional Club was behind the publication. The club supports Sen. Jesse Helms and has clashed with the party's mainstream wing.

Much of its leadership supported Rep. Jack Kemp for president but has sided with the Robertson camp in its fight with the party establishment.

"The Congressional Club is a PAC, it's not a political party," Hawke said. "Political party operates from the grass roots up ... a political action committee appoints themselves leaders, becomes dictators and don't have to answer to anyone."

Tom Langhorne, editor of the publication who was among the people handing out copies, said he stood by its statements but referred other questions to Carter Wrenn, executive director of the Congressional Club.

Wrenn, however, told The Associated Press the club did not publish Common Sense and disavowed knowledge of the distribution at the convention.

He said he could not understand why, when Martin is seeking the support of party conservatives, "Jack Hawke is attacking them and calling them names in the newspapers."

Hawke insisted that most Republicans, regardless of how they stood in the presidential primary, would unite behind the party's ticket for the November election.

"My intention is to try to build unity and strength," Martin added in an interview, responding to some Robertson supporters' complaints that he had done too little to work out a compromise.

In his speech, Martin accused Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan of having a "hidden agenda," reminding the crowd that Jordan said earlier this year he could not talk publicly about his stands on all the issues because he needed the support of "rednecks" in eastern North Carolina.

"Doesn't that raise some serious questions in everybody's mind regardless of the color of your neck," Martin said. "Just what is he for and why can't he tell us? What is Bob Jordan's hidden agenda?"

Gardner repeated the attacks he levied on the Democrat-dominated General Assembly Friday as he led 200 Republicans on a march to the Legislative Building in support of a gubernatorial veto, only to find that the Legislature had adjourned for the weekend.

The House and Senate met only briefly Thursday and Friday as the summer session got under way. Gardner noted that costs $66,000 per day for the assembly to operate.

"How many of you work 10 minutes a day? Raise your hands," Gardner said. "How many of you work 20 minutes a day? ... Jim Gardner wants to change the Legislature? You bet your life I want to change it. I want to put it to work."

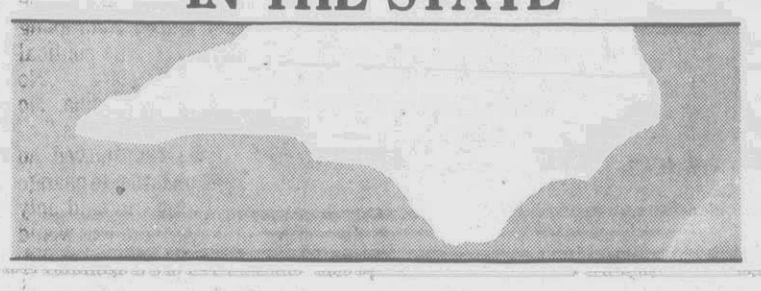

The Legislature customarily convenes Friday mornings to allow lawmakers to get an early start for home.

Several Republican legislators said in interviews they didn't resent Gardner's remarks but were quick to point out that they put in full days of work last week despite the brief floor sessions.

The convention concluded after electing the final 21 of its 54 delegates to the national GOP convention in August. Among the group were Helms, Hawke, Gardner and other party leaders — all Bush supporters, according to GOP sokesman Robert Jones.

The squabble that marred many local conventions involved the allocation of delegates to the New Orleans convention, as Robertson backers — despite his 9 percent showing in the state's presidential primary — tried to earn a bigger proportion of delegate slots.

IN THE STATE

Arraignment Set

DURHAM (AP) — Barbara T. Stager is scheduled for arraignment Monday on a charge of first-murder in the death of her husband.

The arraignment, at which Mrs. Stager will formally enter an innocent plea, will occur in Durham County Superior Court before Judge J. Milton Read Jr.

Mrs. Stager, 39, is charged with first-degree murder in the Feb. 1 shooting death of Allison Russell Stager III, who was the baseball coach at Durham High School. Stager's death originally was listed as accidental, but authorities continued their investigation and arrested Mrs. Stager on April 18.

Stager, 40, died from a single .25-caliber gunshot wound to the head.

Teacher Shot

MAIDEN, N.C. (AP) — A teacher at C.H. Tuttle Middle School in Maiden was shot in a school parking lot Friday afternoon.

Walter Witherspoon, 51, of Newton was shot four times in the stomach and once in the leg with a .25-caliber pistol outside the school shortly after 3 p.m. Friday, Catawba County Sheriff's Deputy Maj. Richard Cannon said.

Research Trip

DURHAM (AP) — Duke University's recently acquired 222-foot, $7 million ship, the Probe Researcher, will depart from Halifax, Nova Scotia, this weekend on its first expedition, which will last a year.

The Probe Researcher is the yearlong expedition will begin with a trip to the Red Sea. The ship is one facet of a program known as Project PROBE. Found by Duke geology professor Bruce Rosendahl in 1982, the PROBE project has previously focused its research on the African rift lakes to study continental rifts, or how continents divide.

Pollution Concern

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Unhealthful ozone pollution levels readings on three days in the past week have caused concern for Mecklenburg County officials, who say the high readings came a month and a half earlier than usual.

On a scale in which 100 is considered unhealthful, ozone readings reached 101 Monday, dipped to 93 Tuesday, but then soared to 112 Wednesday. Thursday's reading was 100, but dropped to 46 Friday.

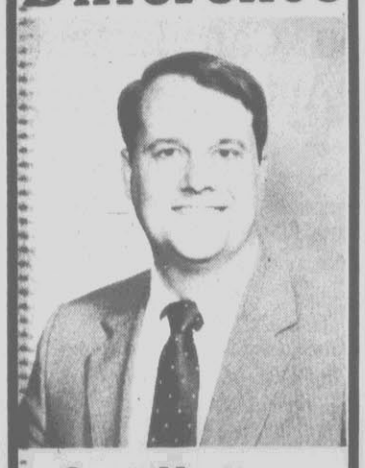

Because the federal government rounds readings off, only Wednesday's reading was formal violation of federeal pollution rules. But the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency allows a locality to have only one violation a year.

Judge Removes Ban On Tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Navy officials say they will begin testing a high-powered electrical generator off the coast of North Carolina Monday, now that a federal judge has cleared the way for the tests.

Navy spokeswoman Lt. Janet Mescus said U.S. District Judge John Garrett Penn on Friday refused to extend a temporary restraining order he had issued on Tuesday, a day before testing originally had been set to begin 15 miles off Currituck County in North Carolina.

Although the Pentagon had scaled down electro-magnetic pulse, or EMP, research facilities and conducted an environmental assessment to settle a suit brought by the Foundation on Economic Trends, the environmental group argued in court that a second study was necessary.

The Navy's Empress II barge is equipped with two diesel generators and a huge antenna system, capable of sending "pulses" of electrical power into the atmosphere at power levels up to 7 million volts to test the EMP phenomenon.

Each pulse lasts only a billionth of a second, and the Navy maintains the testing will have no effect on human or marine life. The barge will emit pulses at 4 million to 7 million volts.

Electro-magnetic pulse is a powerful wave, or surge, of electrical energy that is released by a nuclear explosion and which can travel long distances through the atmosphere or water.

The Navy had intended to conduct the EMP tests in Chesapeake Bay, but relocated after intense opposition in Maryland and Virginia. Congress passed a measure prohibiting tests in Chesapeake Bay unless the Navy could show it was essential to national defense.

The Navy then decided to move the tests to international waters off North Carolina.

"If it's too dangerous potentially for the Chesapeake Bay area and Maryland and Virginia, why isn't it just as potentially dangerous off the coast of Carolina?" Jeremy Rifkin, president of the Foundation on Economic Trends, told The News and Observer of Raleigh.

Partners Against Bakker Return

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — Jim Bakker's whirlwind tour of PTL this past week may have revived the hopes of his supporters that he might return, but most partners touring Heritage USA don't seem to want Bakker back.

Bakker returned Tuesday to the ministry he founded as a witness for builder Roe Messner, who was meeting with PTL attorneys to discuss his $14 million claim against the financially troubled television ministry.

"We feel he doesn't deserve to come back and would like to know where our money went," Joe Losardo of Long Island, N.Y., said. "Bakker left us with a bad feeling.

"We're working people, and that money was hard-earned," Losardo said.

Joseph Stark, also from Long Island, said he forgives Bakker for his mistakes but did not think Bakker should be allowed to come back. Harry Skiles, a partner from Old Lyme, Conn., agreed.

"If he is guilty of the charges people have accused him of, he should not be allowed to come back," Skiles said.

Skiles and his wife, Jan, said they hoped to be able to get the facts on what, if any, wrongdoings Bakker actually did.

Mrs. Skiles said whether he is guilty made a big difference. She said if Bakker was innocent, his fund-raising skills should be used to help the ministry.

"If he is innocent ... I think he should be allowed to come back," she said. "If he's guilty, he shouldn't come back."

Others thought that while Bakker should not be allowed to return as PTL's leader, his fund-raising skills could benefit the ministry.

"I think he probably violated his calling as a pastor, and I don't think he ought to be a pastor," said Gene Hart, a partner from Florida. "I wouldn't have any problem if he came back in a non-ministry role."

Hart said Bakker could help PTL by raising money to help the ministry out of bankruptcy.

A partner from Alabama who did not want his name used said Bakker could be allowed to come back as long as he did not handle any money.

"I think Jim Bakker should let the accounting firm be responsible for the money and he could work here like everyone else," the partner said. "He could raise the money. He's the one God gave the vision to and it hasn't been right since he left."

PTL's present administration has said it would be willing to accept money raised by Bakker, but does not want Bakker to interfere in their efforts to reorganize the ministry.

An Even Chance

RALEIGH (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, drawing on increased name recognition and popularity among fellow Democrats, would have an even chance against incumbent Gov. Jim Martin if the election for governor were held today, according to The Charlotte Observer's Carolinas Poll.

Jordan, a Democrat, was the choice of 47 percent of voters and Republican Martin 46 percent in the poll, which surveyed 543 registered North Carolina voters May 18-26.

The survey indicates Jordan has overcome a name recognition problem that gave the more visible Martin a 54 percent to 38 percent edge in The Observer's last survey of gubernatorial preferences, conducted in February.

A year ago, nearly one-fourth of North Carolina adults said they didn't know who Bob Jordan was. In the latest survey, he was recognized by all but 10 percent. Nine percent of adults said they hadn't heard of Martin.

The biggest difference between Jordan's figures now and in February is that voters in his own party support him by a much wider margin. Sixty-six percent of Democrats now say they would vote for Jordan, up from 52 percent in February. Democrats outnumber Republicans $2\frac{1}{2}$-to-1.

The survey, conducted by the marketing research division of The Observer, interviewed 769 adults, of whom 543 were registered voters. With a margin of error of 4.2 percentage points, the figures for registered voters' responses could vary up or down by that amount.

Seven percent of voters expressed no preference in the latest poll.

Both Jordan and Martin said Friday they were surprised at the results showing the race so close. The governor said his campaign polls still show him comfortably ahead. "But who's to say what's right?" Martin asked Friday.

"This is surprising. But, you know, maybe it'll help us to get our people more intense and ... keep us from complacency."

Martin raised questions about the poll at a news conference during the state Republican convention Saturday, though he stopped short of saying its findings were wrong.

When the newspaper contacted him for comment the previous day, he said, he was told that when the results of all 769 interviews were tabulated the survey showed him with a 46 percent to 44 percent lead. The Observer later called again and said that when the opinions of non-registered voters were subtracted, the result was Jordan 47 percent and Martin 46 percent.

"To call us later in the evening and say they're going to have to throw out a third of their sample, our view was you ought to do it again," Martin said. "How valid does that leave the rest of the sample? ... I'm not saying their wrong. They may be right."

Joe Denney, the Observer's research manager, issued a statement defending the poll's conclusion that the race was a dead heat.

"Initial results, which were given to candidates but not published, were based on all adults responding to the survey," Denney said. "When we excluded the responses of adults who say they were not registered voters — which is standard practice in political polling — Jordan had a narrow edge over Martin.

"But either way — all adults or just registered voters — the results are clearly within our margin of error, suggesting an election which is too close to call."

Martin pollster Brad Hays said his latest poll, conducted in early May, showed Martin ahead of Jordan, 53 percent to 38 percent. About The Observer poll, he said, "If you publish that, it'll be the hoot of the year."

Jordan said the results were "better than we expected," but added that they were consistent with reports the campaign had picked up from some supporters around the state.

Jetties Battle Over Oregon Inlet Continues To Rage

By JACK HORAN
The Charlotte Observer
An AP Member Exchange Feature

NAGS HEAD, N.C. (AP) — From the air, Oregon Inlet is a blue-green gash that cleaves the northern Outer Banks in two.

From the shore, heaving waves and whitecaps give a clue to currents that tug at the sand below.

And as the tides rush to and from Pamlico Sound, the turbulent outlet to the Atlantic changes form — and place. It creeps southward, swallowing dunes and asphalt.

Perhaps this year, perhaps in five years, breakers from the Atlantic could pound the approach to the Herbert C. Bonner Bridge and the adjacent U.S. Coast Guard Station.

In the 26 years since Bonner bridge opened, the inlet has shifted more than one-third of a mile southward. Now the waves break on a flat spit of land just 150 yards from the bridge abutment.

"When all of that is gone," said Tommy Brite, the district's highway engineer, the surf booming at his back, "there's going to be nothing between us and the ocean."

Oregon Inlet has drawn increased attention from Brite and others since an April storm took 300 feet of southern shore. The last of the natural dune barriers vanished.

After the storm, the N.C. Department of Transportation began armoring the shore at the bridge abutment with rocks, at a cost of $428,000. It began drawing plans to extend the bridge 1,200 feet in case the sea damages the abutment or southern approach on N.C. 12. And it also drew up an emergency plan to ferry cars across the inlet.

The 2.4-mile-long bridge is the only road link between tourist-oriented Hatteras Island and the mainland.

Also, the Coast Guard stepped up preparations to evacuate the 30-person station it has staffed since 1897.

Still, Lt. Jim Tunstall, executive officer of the Cape Hatteras Group, said the Coast Guard will pull out of the picturesque, wooden-shingle buildings only when the sea moves in. "We're not ready to abandon ship yet," Tunstall said. A possible new location is the National Park Service ranger station north of the inlet.

Gov. Jim Martin seized on the damage to make a personal appeal to President Reagan on May 3, urging him to get behind a stalled, 18-year-old project to build protective jetties.

Although Congress authorized the jetties in 1970, it hasn't provided the $100 million to build them. Opponents call the project an environmental boondoggle, and the U.S. Interior Department won't turn over land to anchor the jetties. It says parkland shouldn't be disturbed and the jetties would damage nearby shorelines.

Oregon Inlet was born in violence. A passing hurricane opened the cut on Sept. 7, 1846. It was named for the first ship to pass through, the side-wheeler Oregon.

Today, 144 years later, nature's power prevails.

The Atlantic's waves and currents sweep several million cubic yards of sand into the inlet each year. The shoaling fills the channels and causes them to shift around like whipping fire hoses.

Only dredging keeps the inlet passable. The Army Corps of Engineers keeps a 14-foot-deep channel open about half the year at an annual cost of $5 million. The channel is not deep enough to let large fishing boats — or heavily loaded smaller ones — pass to and from offshore fishing grounds. Groundings are commonplace.

Most fishermen moved away because they had to go 150 miles to Virginia or Morehead City to get into the Atlantic. They say dredging didn't adequately keep the channel open.

Charter fishing boats remain, and support for the jetty project is strong. "We really need it," said charter captain Ken Pekrun, 28, whose crew recently unloaded big-eye and yellow-fin tuna at the Oregon Inlet Fishing Center. "To keep the inlet open. To save this industry right here."

North Carolina officials cite both economic and safety grounds for the project. They say the jetties would reduce shoaling, benefiting the fishing industry based at nearby Wanchese, and improve inlet safety. In April, a French sailor drowned when his sailboat capsized 400 yards out in the Atlantic.

And they contend the jetties would protect Bonner bridge from being undermined.

The jetties, which would take three to four years to build, consist of two parallel rock walls jutting about 3,000 feet into the ocean.

The twin jetties would act as a breakwater, calming unruly currents and waves. The north jetty would block the natural north-to-south migration of sand, preventing it from filling the inlet.

But some think attempts to engineer the ocean will only create a worse problem farther south.

The most outspoken opponent is Orrin Pilkey, a Duke University geologist and coastal erosion expert. He believes the jetties will speed up erosion already taking place south of the inlet.

While the ocean will continue to gnaw at the shore, Pilkey said, the waves will no longer carry sand to partly replenish the beaches. He predicted intensified erosion would cut into N.C. 12. "That's going to be putting a lot of people in danger," he said. "Within a decade you can kiss the highway goodbye."

Anyway, he said, Bonner Bridge is doomed. "The bridge will go down, jetties or no jetties, in a coming big storm," Pilkey said. Storms push more water than usual through the inlet, and the rushing currents could wash out sand from under the bridge's supporting pilings.

But state highway administrator George Wells disagreed. "No one can predict exactly what will happen, but we don't have any concern about losing the bridge completely," Wells said.

Wells said the bridge has a vulnerable spot. The southern end has pilings only 30 feet deep. Engineers assumed the jetties would be built and would stabilize the inlet.

Wells said Bonner bridge, named for a former member of Congress from the coast, would be replaced in 10 to 15 years. He acknowledged a replacement bridge, even though relocated farther south, faces the same risks. Unless, Wells said, the jetties are built. The jetties were designed by the Corps of Engineers. A corps official in Wilmington, Tom Jarrett, said the project includes a measure to compensate for stopping the migration of sand.

And the corps says expanded dredging will be more expensive than the jetties, $15 million a year compared with $12 million.

Costs are central to the jetty fight. The corps predicts benefits of $1.25 to $1.40 for every $1 of cost. Jarrett said most of that would come from increased fish catches.

But a consultant to the U.S. Office of Management and Budget calculated the project wouldn't be cost-effective, saying it would produce a benefit of 96 cents for every $1 spent.

After the meeting with Reagan, Martin said the president made no commitment but agreed to let North Carolina submit its own cost-benefit study.

Martin spokesman Jim Sughrue said Reagan, who leaves office in January, has promised to make a decision on whether to support the project.

To sweeten the deal, the state has agreed to pay part of the costs. A 40 percent share was mentioned at the Washington meeting. Sughrue said the figure was put out to test the state's commitment, and he said he doesn't think the share would be that high.

The April storm has given jetty proponents new ammunition.

At the forefront is Rep. Walter Jones, D-N.C., whose district covers Oregon Inlet. Jones's administrative assistant Floyd Lupton said N.C. members of congress plan to either introduce a bill or amend an existing one to force the Interior Department to turn over the land for the jetties.

Lupton said he's optimistic about the jetties' chances now. "I think we have better than a 50-50 chance," he said.

Radioactive Vials Found

GREENSBORO (AP) — Small bottles of radioactive Iodine 125 that were found in dumpster at N.C. A&T State University may pose little danger, but the incident is still under investigation by state and school officials.

Five laboratories on the N.C. A&T campus are licensed to use the radioactive material, but the dumpster is nowhere near one of those.

"Which lab it came from and how it wound up at (the dormitory) is under investigation," said Lennie Beamon, director of the physical plant at the school, who is handling the internal investigation.

"We're assuming it came out of one of the labs," said Jeffrey Knight, toxic health specialist for the Guilford County Department of Environmental Health. "This is a rare occurence anywhere. It's probably just a communication problem at the school."

Late Thursday night, a student found plastic bags holding small plastic bottles of Iodine 125 in a dumpster behind a student dormitory that is unoccupied for the summer. The bottles were labeled as radioactive materials.

The radioactive material was in the dumpster with other trash including a dead rat, gloves and laboratory equipment, Beamon said.

Officials said they did not know how many bottles were in the dumpster because they did not try to retrieve the material. The dumpster has been padlocked, covered and isolated until a waste firm can pick up the material.

The Greensboro Fire Department's Hazardous Material Team determined that the iodine was giving off beta rays of .7 milliroentgen. Compared to that, a normal chest X-ray gives off 50 milliroentgens.

There are three types of radiation: alpha, beta and gamma.

"Alpha is the least strong, beta is medium and gamma is the strongest," said Assistant Chief Clarence Hilliard, who supervises the hazardous materials team. "A piece of paper can protect you from short-term alpha rays, a fire uniform can protect you from short-term beta rays and concrete or steel a foot thick can protect you from short-term gamma rays."

Knight said a person could eat all of the radioactive materials in the dumpster with little effect.

"It decays very rapidly and poses very little environmental threat," he said.

Beamon said the school contracts with Radiation Services Organization in Laurel, Md. The labs that use radioactive materials are required to keep them on site until the service hauls them away.

Discharge Studied

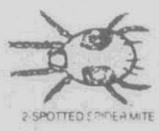

SANFORD, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Hazardous Waste Treatment Commission, which is considering a Lee County site for a treatment facility, is trying to find ways to limit the incinerator's discharge into the Deep River.

Legislation passed by the General Assembly in 1987, known as Senate Bill 114, requires every gallon of treated wastewater discharged into a river to be diluted by 1,000 gallons of water.

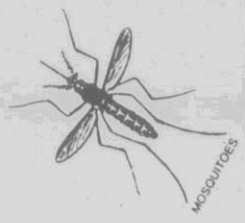

The legislation was aimed at preventing a company called GSX from placing a treatment facility on the Lumber River in Scotland County, but also has affected the commission's search for a state treatment plant.

Armed Youths Terrorize N.Y. Neighborhoods

By RONALD POWERS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Three suspects arrested for selling drugs in an apartment building were each carrying crack. Each was carrying a loaded pistol.

None was older than 15.

"They were hardnosed," police Inspector Philip Sheridan recalled. "They were actually berating us for arresting them."

Surrounded by the drug trade and the violence it breeds, some of New York City's children tote guns as casually as others carry school books or baseball gloves.

In Brooklyn's Crown Heights, a poor neighborhood a half-hour subway ride from midtown Manhattan, kids act "like they have a license to carry guns," said the Rev. Hardy Smallwood Jr., a community leader.

He said parents are increasingly afraid of their own children, and the cause is clear. "It's all crack, that's what it's all about," he said. "It's a never-ending battle."

Before the rise of crack, a potent, inexpensive form of cocaine, "we never had this amount of violence," said Sheridan, who has arrested boys as young as 12 in Crown Heights carrying .25-caliber automatic pistols.

The city's schools have been focal points of the new juvenile violence. Following a recent rash of attacks on teachers, the president of the city's teachers union demanded better schoolhouse security.

During the 1986-87 school year, 1,495 weapons — ranging from crossbows and martial arts weapons to zip guns and pistols — were taken from students.

This year, the number of weapons taken from students is up about 10 percent — 1,579 from the start of the school year to April 30 — and in the last six months there have been at least a dozen incidents in which students were injured by gunfire.

The problem is forcing educators to suggest remedies that once seemed extreme. Under sweeping new security procedures announced Tuesday by Mayor Edward I. Koch and schools Chancellor Richard R. Green, students who attack school workers would be expelled — despite the state's compulsory education law.

Metal detectors are going up at the doors of some schools, and additional police patrols will guard the most crime-ridden schools.

"Putting in a metal detector alters the image of the school," said Bruce Irushalmi, director of the Board of Education's Office of School Safety. But, he added, "So do weapons."

Irushalmi and Ed Muir, head of the United Federation of Teachers' safety committee, link the increase in weapons to an increase in student drug trafficking.

Children, largely immune to harsh court punishment, have been used by drug gangs for years to steer customers, watch for the police or work as couriers.

In inner-city neighborhoods with few good jobs, teen-agers can easily earn in a day or two what many adults make in a week.

Police say drug rings increasingly are hiring children, mostly boys in their early teens.

No Radiation Leak

CATONSVILLE, Md. (AP) — A report of a possible explosion and radiation leak at a Martin-Marietta research facility near Catonsville resulted from a false alarm, authorities said.

"It was an apparent malfunction of the alarm system," said James Friedline, a supervisor at the Baltimore County Fire Department. Twenty firefighting units, with some 60 firefighters rushed to the scene after the initial report late Friday night, Friedline said.

Cpl. Kevin Novak, a supervising dispatcher at the Baltimore County Police Department said initial radio reports from the scene indicated a possible radiation leak inside the building. But emergency crews reported finding no leak and no sign of an explosion.

No one was evacuated. Interstate 95, which runs near the plant, was not closed to traffic.

The research facility is located in southeast Baltimore County, about 5 miles south of the Baltimore city limits. It conducts wide-ranging research in areas ranging from artificial intelligence to chemistry and metallurgy.

Great Timing

HOUSTON (AP) — A school bus driver en route to an awards ceremony to get a safe-driving award, turned a corner too sharply and overturned the bus carrying 29 other school bus drivers.

Lillie Baltrip and 16 of her passengers went to the hospital after the accident, but no one was seriously injured, said Larry Yawn, a spokesman for the Houston Independent School District.

Pipeline Spill Pours Oil Into River

WAUWATOSA, Wis. (AP) — An interstate fuel pipeline ruptured early Saturday, spilling thousands of gallons of heating oil into the Menomonee River in this suburban Milwaukee community, authorities said.

The spill presented no immediate danger to the water supply, and no residents were evacuated, authorities said. Booms were set up in the river about five miles from the site of the spill to prevent the oil from spreading further, authorities said.

The spill "is one of the bigger ones we've had in the area for some time, if not the biggest," said Doug Hoskins, a conservation warden with the state Department of Natural Resources.

But he said that while some small fish might have been killed, he had found no injured or dead waterfowl, adding, "I think we got off lucky."

The steel pipeline, 4 to 6 feet underground, runs between Hammond, Ind., and a large oil distribution terminal in northwestern Milwaukee, the pipeline company said. The broken portion of the pipeline was laid in 1961.

Fire Chief Donald Bleidorn said workers at West Shore Pipeline Co., which is based in Lemont, Ill., noticed a drop in pressure about midnight Friday. They shut off the passage of oil through the 16-inch-diameter pipe about 15 minutes later.

After seeping into Underwood Creek, the oil traveled an estimated five miles into the Menomonee River before it was contained, authorities said. There was apparently no seepage into the Milwaukee River or Lake Michigan.

Firefighters joined with workers from the Department of Natural Resources workers and West Shore Pipeline to help siphon the fuel off the surface of the Menomonee.

"We are still pumping fuel oil from the scene where it was spilled in barrels and then hauling them away to storage," Police Sgt. Henry Bacich said shortly before noon Saturday. The cause of the rupture was under investigation, he said.

"As far as we know, it's not a threat to the water supply, although there has been reports from citizens of damage being done to the environment with fish in the creek apparently dying from it," Bacich said.

Bacich said he had no official estimate on the size of the spill, but The Milwaukee Journal reported that as much as 128,000 gallons of fuel may have been involved.

By 8 a.m. Saturday, workers had recovered about 8,500 gallons of fuel, according to the Wauwatosa Fire Department.

Workers began digging up the pipe Saturday to see what caused the break, company officials said.

Underwood Creek is lined with concrete, which should prevent contamination to drinking water, ground water or private wells and protect wildlife from substantial damage, Hoskins said.

ACCIDENT SCENE — Bystanders gather at the site where four school children from Rosa Parks Middle School in Detroit were run down on their way home Friday afternoon, authorities said. The man driving the vehicle, Johnnie Person, is being held by Detroit police as one of the four children died and the other three were listed in fair condition over the weekend. (AP Laserphoto)

Huge Lottery Jackpot Lures Crowds To Ticket Sites

By BARBARA METZLER
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lottery players swamped ticket outlets across California on Saturday, hoping to win a jackpot worth an estimated $45 million, the state's biggest ever and just $1 million short of the nation's record.

A player beating the 1-in-14 million odds of winning the jackpot, which began growing when there were no winners in several previous drawings of the Lotto 6-49 game, would receive $1.8 million annually, after federal taxes, for 20 years.

"I cannot handle it. Too many people," said Paul Lee, owner of the New Lun Wah grocery store in San Francisco's Chinatown, where 50 people lined up for tickets Saturday morning.

"It's been crazy," said Alex Lichine, manager of Lichine's Liquor, Deli and Catering store in Sacramento. "It's going to get worse. Everybody's playing today. Everybody's playing four or five times more than normal."

Many stores brought in extra help to keep up with ticket sales. The lottery system's 8,680 terminals were expected to spew out $1-a-chance tickets right up to the 7:45 p.m. sales cutoff.

The six winning numbers were to be picked in a 7:56 p.m. drawing in Sacramento. As usual, lottery computers will not determine whether anyone has won the jackpot until Sunday. A winner would not be verified until Monday.

The actual size of the jackpot depended on how many tickets were sold, but a record was in reach as ticket buyers forked over dollars at the rate of $2 million per hour statewide, said lottery spokesman John Schade.

The biggest previous jackpot in California, $25.4 million, was split by two players in October. The nation's richest lottery prize, $46 million, was awarded in Pennsylvania in October.

"I tell you the sky's the limit today. We had almost $5 million (in ticket sales) at 10 o'clock today," said Bob Taylor. "Last Saturday at this time we had $904,000. These figures are just mind boggling."

As the game heated up, a Los Angeles psychologist cautioned players not to fall victim to what he called "lottery fantasy syndrome."

"People purchase a ticket, ignore the odds and start thinking of the impossible: quitting their jobs, buying items that they have always wanted, going places that they have never been, and some even think of divorcing their spouses and starting their lives completely over," said Robert Butterworth.

The jackpot lured players across state and national borders.

Leo Gronich, owner of Garlan's Inc., a Calexico department store with a currency exchange, said Mexicans trading pesos for tickets. Oregon residents drove south to Yreka, Calif., for tickets, said clerk Dan Jerden at Sports and Spirits.

At Tahoe Tom's in South Lake Tahoe, the fat pot drew Nevada residents across the border, three blocks away.

"We were joking yesterday that it would be funny to have the (ticket) line up to the state line and have the casino executives wonder what's going on," said owner Tom Erickson.

What to do with the enormous sum?

"Party forever," said Leslie Beagle, 43, of Riverside, as she plunked down $10 for her shot at the jackpot.

"You'd probably have to take six months off to think about it," said Bill Masterson, 46, of South Lake Tahoe, who planned to buy five tickets.

Witnesses Begin Telling Of Navy Recruit's Death

By BILL KACZOR
Associated Press Writer

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — A Navy rescue instructor yelled "Get him!" before a panic-stricken recruit was forced back into the swimming pool where he died, a classmate testified Saturday.

The classmate, Airman Apprentice Gregory William Boos, was unable to identify which instructors were among the four or five who pulled Airman Recruit William Mirecki, 19, of Appleton, Wis., into the pool March 2 at the Pensacola Naval Air Station.

Boos was the lead witness in an investigative hearing to determine whether six sailors should face court-martial in the death of Mirecki.

Prior to the testimony, Lt. Steven H. Cohen, the lawyer for one of the accused, Petty Officer 1st Class Richard E. Blevins, complained that information from an investigation by the Judge Advocate General's office was being withheld on orders of the Secretary of the Navy.

Cohen and lawyers for other defendants made a motion that the proceedings be suspended until that information is released. Presiding Cmdr. Daniel J. D'Alesio rejected the request, saying administrative proceedings are separate from the criminal case and that he lacked authority to release the information.

Lt. Cmdr. Larry D. Wynne, the prosecutor, assured defense lawyers the information would be made available before the conclusion of the hearing, which is expected to last several days.

Boos testified that Mirecki panicked during a drill known as "sharks and daisies." The exercise pits instructors, playing the role of panicky drowning victims, against trainees, who then are supposed to drag them underwater to break their hold and rescue them.

Mirecki was having difficulty and swam to the side of the pool. He was pulled off the poolside, swam back to the side, climbed out and held on to an equipment rack, Boos said.

"He was panicked," Boos said. "He was scared.... He was yelling.... It was obvious he didn't want to be back in the pool."

Boos said he couldn't understand what Mirecki was screaming.

The next time he saw Mirecki, Boos said, the recruit was pulled to the side of the pool by one of the defendants, Petty Officer 2nd Class Michael Combe.

A second class member, Petty Officer 3rd Class John T. Breeden, said at one point he saw Combe trying to calm Mirecki down and run through the drill with him. Mirecki then successfully accomplished the escape and towed Combe, he said.

But after that exercise, Breeden testified, he saw both Mirecki and Combe go under and then Combe surface towing Mirecki. Breeden said he didn't actually see Mirecki being forced back in, but felt Mirecki was clearly panicked and would not possibly have returned voluntarily.

When the hearing ends, D'Alesio will make a non-binding recommendation to Rear Adm. David R. Morris, chief of naval air training in Corpus Christi, Texas. The admiral can drop the charges, court-martial the defendants or impose a non-judicial punishment.

If convicted at court-martial each of the six could be dismissed from the service. The five instructors also face maximum penalties of three years in prison on the manslaughter counts and six months for conspiracy. Torchia could be sentenced to a maximum of three months in jail.

Paul Newman Opens Camp In Conn. For Sick Children

By LINDA STOWELL
Associated Press Writer

ASHFORD, Conn. (AP) — Actor Paul Newman reflected on his new camp for seriously ill children Saturday, saying the charitable venture has helped him regain the enthusiasm of his youth.

"I'm pretty cool," Newman said during a 35-minute interview with The Associated Press at the camp. "I've seen a lot. I've been through a lot. I lost my cool today ... I recaptured the enthusiasm of my youth. This is awesome."

The Hole in the Wall Gang Camp, a $17 million project including the camp facilities and an endowment, was initiated by Newman in 1986 and is scheduled to open for children this month.

Newman's food company, Newman's Own Inc., donated $7 million to the camp. He raised another $7 million from donations. A.E. Hotchner, a business partner and close friend, said Saturday that another $3 million is needed to complete the endowment for the camp.

While the fund-raising continues, Newman is defending against a lawsuit by a Westport delicatessan owner who claims he was promised 8 percent of the stock from the food company. The plaintiff's lawyer accused Newman in court in Bridgeport Friday of misrepresenting a profitmkaing food company as a charity. Newman dismissed the allegations as being without merit.

"And the money going to the lawyers could have been used for a more productive purpose, like giving an ambulance to a hospital," he said.

Newman, an Academy Award-winning actor and race car driver, was at times quiet, at times exuberant as he talked about the camp before private dedication ceremonies.

"This (camp) may ultimately be the champ," he said of his achievements. "I don't know ... it just depends on how it goes."

The camp, nestled in the woods of northeastern Connecticut, is free for children with life-threatening diseases, ages 7 to 17. Newman said there is still room for more kids.

Located on about 300 acres, the camp is modeled after a frontier logging town of the old Wild West.

It will have horseback riding, boating, a baseball field, tennis courts, a gymnasium, dining hall and spacious cabins with sitting rooms and front porches. Golf carts are available for transportation around the camp.

Yes.
A Time To Dance.

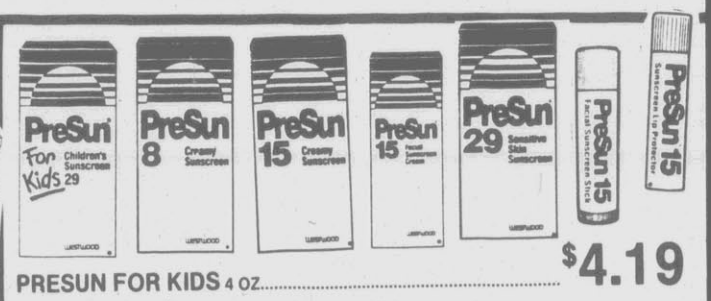

"To everything there is a season," saith the Preacher: "A time to weep, and a time to laugh; a time to mourn, and a time to dance". And there is a time to plan. To plan against the time of mourning. To plan so that the spirit of those who mourn your leaving need not be further crushed by the burdensome details of "the arrangements". The time to make that kind of plan is now. And we can help you with it. At no obligation. Just call, if you will.

HAPPY NEWS — Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis smiles as he listens to doctors speaking at a news conference Friday at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston following successful surgery on his wife, Kitty. The surgery was performed to remove two herniated discs, and Dukakis canceled appearances on his Democratic presidential campaign to be with his wife. (AP Laserphoto)

Administration's Noriega Effort Ripped By Dukakis

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

CHERRY HILL, N.J. (AP) — Democratic presidential front-runner Michael Dukakis suggested Saturday that the Reagan administration had fumbled an effort to remove Panama's Gen. Manuel Noriega from office by failing to work with allies in the region.

Dukakis, resuming his campaign schedule after his wife's spinal surgery, charged there was "great anger" among leaders of Latin America democracies over the administration's failure to consult them.

"Three respected former presidents of Venezuela, Costa Rica and Colombia had been working hard together with Spain to arrange for Noriega's departure," Dukakis said at a news conference. "To the best of my knowledge their efforts were either unnoticed or unremarked by the current administration.

"Their efforts to provide for Noriega's departure did not succeed as a result," Dukakis said.

In the final weekend of the 1988 presidential primary campaign, Dukakis edged slowly closer to the magic 2,081 delegates needed to clinch the Democratic nomination. The Associated Press count gave him 1,803 to Jesse Jackson's 985. The Dukakis campaign is confident the four final primaries on Tuesday, with 466 delegates up for grabs, will put him over the top.

Jackson, Dukakis' only remaining rival, campaigned in McFarland, Calif., a largely Hispanic city of 6,500 that has lost six children to cancer. Jackson called for increased state and federal involvement in determining the cause of the mysterious cancers. Jackson also planned a Hollywood fund-raising gala Saturday night.

Republican Vice President George Bush spent the day at home in Washington before heading to California for a three-day countdown to the primary season end.

The Massachusetts governor, a major advocate of the regional peace plan proposed by Costa Rican President Oscar Arias, called it "inconceivable" for a U.S. administration to fail to talk with leaders of those nations if it is serious about promoting democracy in the region.

He said their plan involved getting Noriega to leave Panama and go to Spain.

He said he did not know details of what went on within the administration, but said, "I know from my own consultations with Latin American leaders that there was no consultation of any significance between the administration and the democratically elected chiefs of state on this issue."

"To the best of my knowledge there has been little or no consultation and there is great anger, I might add, among democratically elected chiefs of state in Central and South America at the failure of our government to consult with them," he told reporters.

The State Department announced two weeks ago that negotiations with Noriega, including the dismissal of drug trafficking charges against him, had collapsed.

In his first events since his wife Kitty's operation to repair herniated discs in her back, Dukakis spoke to a rally in a park in the shadow of nearby Philadelphia by the Cooper River, where pollution has been cleaned up.

Dukakis stressed themes of family, the environment and of combatting drugs — all issues the Dukakis campaign hopes will appeal to suburban swing voters, not just in New Jersey's primary next Tuesday but in the fall against Republican George Bush as well.

"I spent a little time with Kitty," Dukakis told the crowd of about 400 people. "She appears to be OK and the operation appears to be a success. I'm married to a very strong woman, and I'm proud of her. ... She's going to be up and around in the next six to eight weeks."

Mrs. Dukakis walked for the first time Saturday morning, and Dukakis said her hip, where doctors removed bone grafts to place in her back, was "very painful" and would be that way for four or five days.

Mrs. Dukakis' surgery on Friday was to replace two herniated discs which doctors said, if uncorrected, could have led to paralysis.

The Massachusetts governor cited his wife's medical problem in his appeal for family values, saying crises such as these make a person "think even more about things that are very precious to us. ... One of those things is family."

He cited the Cooper River clean-up in stressing that the environment would be a budget priority in his administration.

"Is it going to be Star Wars or a clean ocean?" he said, referring to President Reagan's nuclear defense initiative.

Jackson Wants Tougher Reins On Pesticides

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer

McFARLAND, Calif. (AP) — Jesse Jackson, campaigning in an agricultural community with an unusually high rate of child cancer cases, called Saturday for tighter federal restrictions on pesticides that may be carcinogenic.

"We should not use any untested pesticides," he said, adding that people who work in sprayed fields are being "used as guinea pigs."

The Democratic presidential candidate, joined by several celebrities from Los Angeles and United Farm Workers leader Cesar Chavez, led a march by more than 1,500 people through the modest McFarland residential area where a "cancer cluster" has been identified.

"Today in McFarland we focus on the right to breathe, the right to drink water, the right to a clean environment," Jackson said at a rally.

Jackson, campaigning in the final days before California's Tuesday primary, called for federal financing to find the cause of the cancers, set up a free clinic for treatment and education, and "close the data gap" on pesticides about which little is known.

A state study identified 12 cases of child cancer including six deaths between 1975 and this year in McFarland, a town of 6,500 people in California's central agricultural valley.

Many of the children came from the same heavily Hispanic neighborhoods, and 80 percent of their fathers worked in the fields as compared to 45 percent of the fathers in a control group, the study said.

Some community residents say there are more cancer cases, and that the government was too conservative in assessing the size of the cluster.

The cause of the cancer has not been determined. The state found no evidence to link the problem to water, but there is an ongoing investigation into field pesticides that were heavily sprayed on the fields in 1980-1982, said the state Department of Health Services.

Chavez told the rally: "The use of the pesticides is the cause of all the problems in McFarland and there is no other cause."

Chavez has not endorsed a presidential candidate but many of those who joined Jackson's march were from the UFW and their red flags dominated the scene.

Chavez said Jackson is "a good friend" and "the only candidate that will not fudge on issues."

Also marching were a handful of Los Angeles gang members who met with Jackson earlier in the week, and celebrities including Bonnie Raitt, Ned Beatty, Margot Kidder, Buffy Sainte-Marie, Kim Fields, and Carl Weathers, whose movie title "Action Jackson" has become one of the candidate's slogans.

Jackson said he came to McFarland because its plight reflects environmental problems in other areas.

"Why are we here? ... We are not finger-pointing, we are embracing, we are reaching out. The whole nation must be concerned," he said. Residents interviewed along the march seemed pleased Jackson was calling attention to their situation.

"We want him to help the cancer victims," said bystander Zenaida Murguia who speaks no English and came out with her husband and two small children. She said they know the families of the children who died.

Jackson is "the only candidate that has taken an interest in this thing," said Fernando Gil, a postal clerk from nearby Delano, who said he was undecided whether to vote for Jackson or front-runner Michael Dukakis on Tuesday.

Presbyterians Will Discuss Nuke Threat

By JOHN A. BOLT
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Presbyterians should become more active in politics and should even consider civil disobedience to fight the spread of nuclear weapons, a proposed statement of doctrine for the nation's largest Presbyterian denomination says.

The paper, "Christian Obedience in a Nuclear Age," is expected to be the main topic of discussion this week as the 3 million-member Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) starts a yearlong bicentennial celebration with its 200th General Assembly in St. Louis.

In addition to the peace paper, the 630 commissioners, or delegates, will elect denominational officers and discuss a variety of other social and church issues. The meeting opens Tuesday with initial committee reports and an evening communion service, and runs through June 15.

"Christian Obedience in a Nuclear Age," written last year by a task force of 17 theologians, pastors and lay people, is an attempt to answer conservatives' criticism of an earlier study paper that took a stronger stand in favor of disobedience, said the Rev. Albert C. Winn, who co-chaired the task force.

"This was our response to the charge that the first paper was producing warfare in the church and was going to divide the church," Winn said.

"We were leaning over backwards to make clear that there is room in the church" for disagreement, he said.

The paper paints a picture of a world where children die of hunger while money goes to build "more devastating, more accurate, more invulnerable, 'smarter' and 'cleaner' weapons."

Dissenters must think carefully before refusing to cooperate with government authority in such things as paying taxes to support the military, the paper says. But "because of the extraordinary and unprecedented nature of the current situation, cooperation with and obedience to duly constituted human authority should not be a matter of course."

"The decision to cooperate should be as agonizing and as carefully undertaken as the decision to resist," the paper says. It called on Presbyterians who opt not to resist authority to support those who do.

During the General Assembly, a committee will discuss the paper and report back to the full group. The committee's recommendation are tentatively scheduled to be presented June 14, the next-to-last day of the meeting.

Conservatives within the denomination had complained the earlier study paper, titled "Presbyterians and Peacemaking: Are We Now Called To Resistance?" advocated tax resistance and civil disobedience to the exclusion of other methods of expression. And some say the second report is not much better.

Inmates Moved By Mother Teresa's Visit

By DANA KENNEDY
Associated Press Writer

CONCORD, Mass. (AP) — Hundreds of prison inmates cheered, whistled and clapped Saturday as Nobel laureate Mother Teresa told them, "You are precious to me."

"It's very important for you to share that joy of loving — that little smile, some compassion," the founder of the Missionaries of Charity religious order told inmates at the medium-security state prison here. "It will help you stay together and stay beautiful."

Her more than two-hour visit to the prison included a brief stop with inmates in protective custody, among them Rod Matthews, the 16-year-old Canton youth convicted of killing a classmate.

Mother Teresa, 77, won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1979 for her work with the poor. Her missionary order runs 360 shelters around the world staffed by 3,500 nuns, but she brushed aside reporters' questions about her achievements.

"It's not my work," she said. "I'm just a little instrument in (God's) hands."

She was invited to the state by an inmate at the Walpole maximum-security prison who has been corresponding with her for two years. She was to have a private talk with him later in the day and also visit a women's prison.

Many of the inmates who attended the Mass at Concord joined in singing hymns and appeared genuinely moved by the service.

"I haven't seen this much compassion and love in 20 years of corrections work," said state Correction Commissioner Michael V. Fair. "It's very exciting. This is a great healing day for our department."

The prisoners were most emotional after Mother Teresa's 15-minute address, which she ended by telling them: "I will not forget you. I have you in the palm of my hand. You are precious to me. I love you."

"I've got goose bumps all over my body," said inmate Bobby Cowan, 25. "I never felt anything like it. I could do another 10 years and it wouldn't bother me because of this."

Another inmate, Albert Fortin, 25, said: "I was so touched when she walked through the room. I almost cried, but I didn't want to in front of a room full of men."

At a news conference with Cardinal Bernard Law before the Mass, Mother Teresa said the crimes committed by the prisoners do not make them unworthy of love, adding "we are all sinners."

"We must accept people who are here and we must help them be at peace while they're here," she said.

Mother Teresa's visit to the three prisons was prompted by a 47-year-old inmate at the maximum-security prison in Walpole who began corresponding with her two years ago and invited her to visit last fall.

The inmate, Donald Ouimet, is serving an 18- to 20-year sentence for assault and battery. He told reporters that he is a former lay brother in a Capuchin Franciscan monastery.

According to Springfield newspapers, Ouimet and his former wife lured minors to their West Springfield home and sexually assaulted them.

In response to questions about the victims of some of the inmates in the prisons, Mother Teresa said she would "pray for them."

"It is hard for the famiiies (of the victims)," she said. "I think it's very hard."

'Squeaky' Moved To Another Unit

By STEVEN L. HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme, the Charles Manson follower serving a life term for trying to kill then-President Gerald Ford, has been transferred from a prison where she escaped last year to one in Kentucky with better security, officials said.

Fromme, 39, was moved to the Lexington Federal Correctional Institution, said Ron Burkhart, warden of the Alderson Federal Correctional Institution in West Virginia.

She was sentenced May 25 to an additional 15 months in prison for escaping from the all-female Alderson prison for two days last December.

The Lexington prison is "basically a level 1 (minimum) security installation, but within that institution we operate a high-security unit," Burkhart said Saturday. "She'll be housed in the high-security unit."

Alderson, a medium-security prison in the mountains of southern West Virginia, has no separate unit to house dangerous inmates or those considered escape risks.

Fromme was the first person sentenced under a special federal law covering assaults on presidents, a statute enacted after the 1963 assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

She was arrested after she aimed a semiautomatic pistol at Ford on Sept. 5, 1975, in Sacramento, Calif. A Secret Service agent grabbed her, and Ford was unhurt.

During her sentencing on the escape charge, Fromme told U.S. District Court Judge Elizabeth V. Hallanan that she couldn't promise that she would not try to escape again.

Fromme had said she left the prison on Dec. 23 in order to be closer to Manson. She was recaptured near the prison on Christmas Day.

Manson is serving a life term in San Quentin in California for the 1969 murders of actress Sharon Tate and eight others. Fromme, one of his "family" of followers, was not implicated in those attacks.

Fromme had been eiigible for parole since 1985 but had elected not to go before a parole board. Her conviction on escape charges means she will not be eligible for parole again for at least one year, officials said.

Seventeen days after Fromme's attempt on Ford's life, Sara Jane Moore, a 45-year-old political activist, was arrested in San Francisco after she fired a gun at the president. Again, Ford was unhurt.

Moore also escaped from the Alderson prison, in 1979. She was recaptured less than a day later and is now at a federal prison in California.

Lucky Candidate

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Republican gubernatorial candidate state Rep. Bob Williams and his pilot escaped injury when their single-engine private plane crash-landed on a highway near the Olympia Airport.

State Rep. Bob Williams, 46, and pilot Dan Pryor, 38, were on their way to Olympia from Long Beach when the accident occurred Friday evening, Pryor said.

The pilot said he had cut power while approaching the airport, then tried to abort his landing but was unable to get enough power to go around for another landing attempt.

The 30-year-old Cessna 175 gradually lost altitude until it clipped a row of 3-foot-tall trees on a tree farm, and slid sideways about 40 feet before coming to rest on the highway.

Pryor estimated the plane was traveling 30 mph when it hit the ground.

Pryor, of Olympia, said the plane "simply choked out" and he could offer no further explanation for the engine trouble.

Williams, of Longview, said one car passed at the time of the accident and the driver checked to see if anyone was injured before leaving to notify authorities.

FREE AIDS BOOK — Sasha Alyson, 36, poses with a display box of a 126-page AIDS book titled "You Can Do Something About AIDS," scheduled to be offered free in bookstores around the country this month. Publisher Leads Effort To Offer Free AIDS Book

By DANA KENNEDY
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — A book about AIDS from a small, gay publishing house is being offered free to the public this month at bookstores around the country in what one promoter hailed as a unique joint effort by the publishing industry.

The 126-page volume titled "You Can Do Something About AIDS" contains 35 short chapters written by such celebrities as Elizabeth Taylor, Whoopi Goldberg and Abigail Van Buren, who writes "Dear Abby."

It was published as a "pro bono" book with the help of publishing houses and companies like the Book-of-the-Month Club, Random House, Bantam Books, Simon and Schuster and Waldenbooks.

"It's absolutely unprecedented," said Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Mass., who helped the book along by contacting some publishing companies. "Nobody's been able to pull together the publishing industry like this before — much less for a free book."

One group of authors concentrated on ways to "get started" in the effort to stop AIDS. Other sections deal with ways to fight acquired immune deficiency syndrome and help victims of the disease, a deadly crippling of the body's immune system.

One of the most moving contributions is from Olympic diving champion Greg Louganis, who since 1984 has been a friend of 17-year-old AIDS victim Ryan White of Cicero, Ind., who caught the disease from infected blood products he took for hemophilia. Louganis' chapter is titled "Be a Buddy" and encourages people to make contact with AIDS victims and build friendships.

"The thing I respect most about Ryan is that someone in his position could be very angry or bitter. But he isn't," writes Louganis. "In spite of his own difficulties, he's trying to help others. ... There's no reason to delay making contact and letting someone know you care."

"You Can Do Something About AIDS" is the brainchild of 36-year-old Sasha Alyson, the owner of Alyson Publications in Boston. He started his company 11 years ago.

Inspiration for the project came from the grief of losing 35 friends to AIDS, he said.

"I started making a list once about (who had died) and I just didn't want to finish it," Alyson said last week. "At first you think it's going to go away or get better and it doesn't. It gets worse."

During an interview at Alyson Publications in Boston's South End, Alyson said he was naive when first planning the book last year.

"I started out with all this confidence," he said. "I thought people would think it was a great idea and would agree. But I quickly found out that people quickly found ways to say no."

Alyson said he initially encountered difficulty when contacting publishing companies and celebrities. He made four attempts to reach Elizabeth Taylor before one of her assistants got word to her and she agreed to write an introduction to the book. Miss Van Buren first declined to contribute but then agreed, he said.

"I went from being very confident to rock bottom very quickly," he said. "At one point I wanted to cancel the project."

Even Studds said he was skeptical about the project.

"I was really touched by the idea but I had my doubts too that it would succeed," he said.

Alyson said he was consumed by the book all year. Now that it has become reality, he hopes it will inspire the general public to join the effort to fight the AIDS epidemic.

"The book will be most useful to those who didn't think AIDS would affect them but suddenly they realize it's closer to home than they thought," said Alyson.

Kathy Weinkle, who runs the Buddenbrooks bookstore in Boston with her brother, Martin, said the response to "You Can Do Something About AIDS" has been better than expected.

"It's doing phenomenally well," she said. "We have to continuously refill the display. Almost everyone takes one. People are making very positive comments."

Bill Would Mandate Random Testing Of Railroad Workers

By ALAN FRAM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The sponsor of a bill that would require railroads to randomly test their employees for drug and alcohol abuse says he believes the measure protects workers against erroneous readings and harassment.

But Rep. Thomas A. Luken, D-Ohio, who introduced the legislation, said at a news conference that even if railroad unions decide not to support the bill, "We'll continue to forge ahead."

Congress has been focusing on drug and alcohol abuse by transportation workers ever since the Jan. 4, 1987, collision between an Amtrak passenger train and linked Conrail locomotives in Chase, Md. Sixteen people were killed and 175 hurt in the accident, in which Conrail crewmen have admitted they were smoking marijuana shortly before the wreck.

But bills that would require random drug testing have been bogged down, with labor and other opponents arguing that such procedures violate the right of privacy and leave employees vulnerable to harassment and incorrect test results that could threaten their careers.

Luken, chairman of the House Energy and Commerce transportation subcommittee, has been among those arguing that laboratory tests are so unreliable that large numbers of workers should not be subjected to tests.

He pointed Friday, however, to evidence of accidents caused by drug and alcohol abuse and said, "We do have a great demand for this kind of thing."

On April 25, Dr. Roger Horn of Hunt Valley, Md., whose daughter Ceres, 16, was killed in the Chase accident, visited television and radio stations and newspapers in Luken's Cincinnati district and argued that a random testing bill was needed. Horn is a member of Safe Travel America, a group of relatives and friends of the crash's victims who have lobbied for such legislation on Capitol Hill.

Many railroad union officials have also dropped their outright opposition to random testing and now say they are willing to try to help craft Luken's legislation.

Lawrence L. Mann, attorney for the Railway Labor Executives' Association, which represents rail unions, said labor officials like the protections Luken put in his bill, but are still concerned that the testing would be an invasion of privacy.

"We're not going to push this bill," he said after Luken's news conference. "We're going to try to improve it."

The legislation would give the Department of Transportation 90 days to set up procedures for administering the tests.

Workers testing positive would be suspended and required to undergo rehabilitation programs. They would be given their jobs back after successfully completing the treatment.

The bill establishes a series of requirements designed to protect workers against inaccurate test results and to protect them from harassment. It also sets penalties for falsifying results and avoiding testing by leaving accident scenes.

"This strikes a fair balance between protecting the public from the lethal threat of drug use by railroad personnel and affording the drug abuser human treatment that allows him a real opportunity to put his life in order again," said the subcommittee's ranking Republican, Rep. Bob Whittaker of Kansas, who appeared with Luken.

The measure would also require testing after accidents, before hiring, for reasonable cause and as part of annual physical examinations.

Drugs Found On Jet

By A.J. DICKERSON
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — An Avianca Airlines cargo jet was seized Saturday and the carrier fined nearly $8 million after Customs agents found 490 pounds of cocaine stashed in a shipment of red roses.

"This is the 14th time since January 1986" that drugs were found aboard an Avianca flight, said Customs spokesman Michael Sheehan. "Avianca is a source of great concern for the Customs Service."

Avianca is the national airline of Colombia.

The cocaine was found on Flight 768 from Bogota, which carried 2,000 boxes of assorted flowers, 30 of them listed as containing red roses, Sheehan said.

Eight of the rose boxes were packed with cocaine, he said.

"All 2,000 boxes were checked. Each of the eight boxes weighed about twice as much as a normal box, which should weigh about 30 pounds," Sheehan said. No arrests were made.

The carrier's Boeing 747 was seized at Miami International Airport to ensure payment of fines levied for Saturday's cache. Avianca must pay $16,000 for each pound of cocaine or its plane could be auctioned off, said Sheehan, adding that the airline has paid its past fines and received its planes back.

A fine for 490 pounds would total $7.8 million.

Including Saturday's find, Customs agents have turned up a total of about 5,000 pounds of cocaine on Avianca flights, often hidden in such perishable shipments as flowers or food.

Other recent smuggling discoveries here on Avianca jets include 132 pounds of cocaine hidden in a Valentine's Day shipment of roses, and a March 27 find of 35.8 pounds.

Avianca offices in Miami were closed, and its airport agents said company officials were not available for comment.

Besides seizing the jet, Sheehan said that Customs agents also confiscated the 22 real boxes of red roses and sent them to Baptist Hospital in Miami.

"We hope that some of the patients in the hospital are able to enjoy them," he said.

Authorities Looking For Clues To Identity Of Deaf-Mute Boy

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Exactly what an unidentified deaf-mute boy has gone through remains a mystery, in spite of his repeated drawings showing a crashed plane with bodies that may be his parents, an FBI agent said Saturday.

"We have no clues at all," said agent Terry Kincaid.

Of the boy's drawings, he said, "We have no idea how much of his sketches are his own idea or his imagination or maybe re-creations of popular television shows."

The boy has been in a child protective service center since November in Juarez, Mexico, where he was found on the streets, but investigators suspect he might be from the United States because of his preferences in food and games.

The boy is believed to be 7 or 8 years old and is called Sabat by welfare workers because he was found on a Saturday.

Investigators have discovered that the boy has been in the United States at least once, Kincaid said Saturday.

Before taking him to the center, Guadalupe de la Vega, the Juarez woman who found him wandering about, took him to see an ear specialist in New York and then brought him back to Mexico, Kincaid said.

The woman's first encounter with the boy was surprising.

"He was on the streets in Juarez and this woman thought he was begging. She gave him a thousand pesos and he handed it back to her," Kincaid said.

"From the way he keeps drawing the same pictures, and has his clothes packed, I think he is desperate to find his way back home," said Leticia Cota, a social worker in Juarez.

"We are continuing efforts to develop leads as to this little guy's identity through whatever means possible. It's going to be an uphill struggle," said Kincaid.

Kincaid said that during the trip to New York, the boy became excited when he saw a soldier. "We're exploring the possibility that his father may have been a policeman or soldier, or someone associated with a uniform," he said.

Kincaid said Mexican social workers initially thought the boy was Mexican, until he showed a preference for hamburgers over Mexican food.

He draws a house with a pitched roof, not common in Mexico, and indicates it was his home. He excels at video games with which few Mexican children are familiar, and is familiar with U.S. currency.

Mexican social workers contacted their El Paso counterparts last month, and the Center for Missing and Exploited Children in Washington sought the help of the FBI in El Paso last week to find the boy's identity.

At least two leads are being pursued, said Luis Torre, a caseworker for the Texas Department of Human Services in El Paso.

"Law officials think he resembles a boy from Illinois who was reported missing about three years ago, or a boy from a military family who lived in Alaska," Torre said.

Kincaid said officials expected to receive by Monday copies of footprints of a child who was kidnapped from Decatur, Ill., in October 1985. The description of the kidnapped child was forwarded from the Center for Missing and Exploited Children.

Kincaid said the boy is in good health. "He seems to have a good attitude notwithstanding everything he has apparently gone through," Kincaid said.

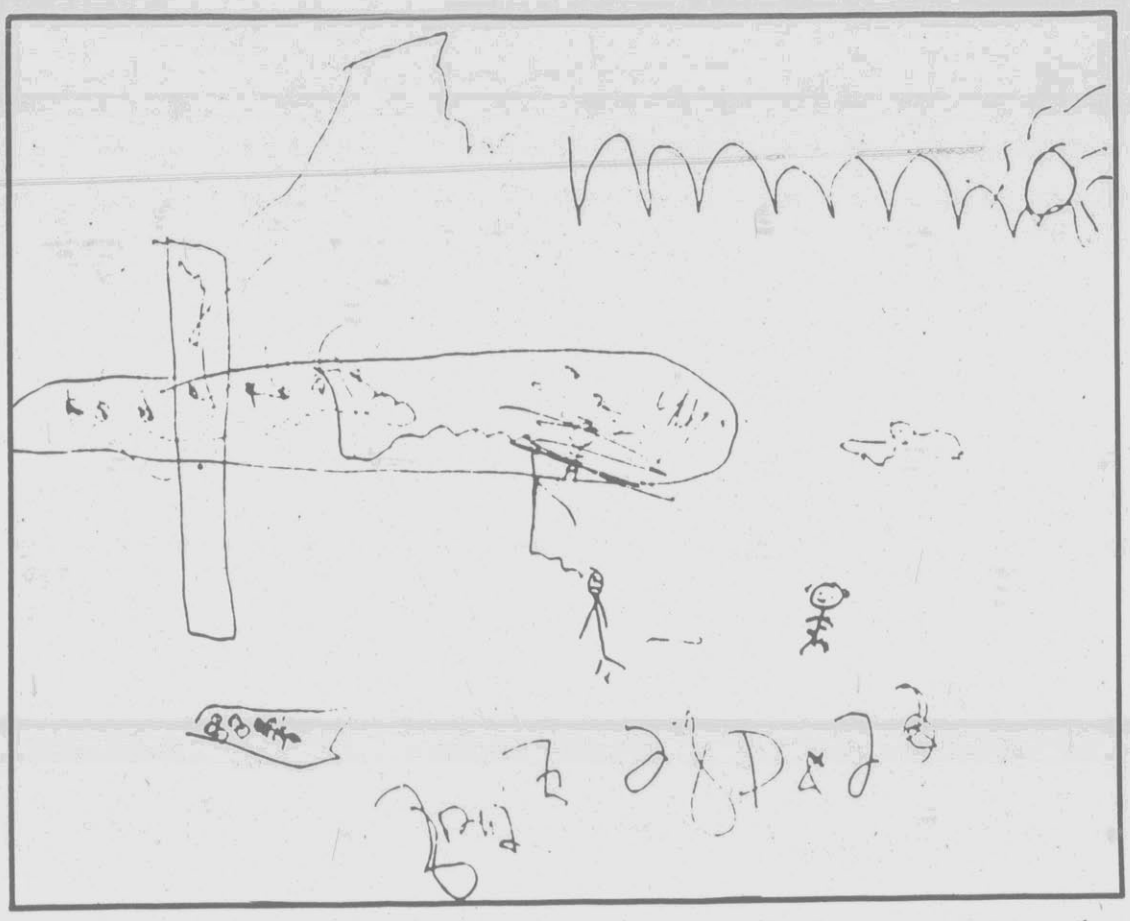

His pictures of a crashed airplane include people that he describes as his father, mother, younger sister and himself and have the numbers "28D, 23" written under the airplane.

During an interview Friday, the boy pointed to scars on his left knee, stomach and back, and back to the crash drawing. He pointed to a drawing of himself walking away from the crash while the figures believed to be his parents and sister lay dead.

The age of the boy's scars led doctors to believe that if they had been caused by a crash, it would have been two to three years ago.

Social workers said that through drawings and other communication, the boy has revealed background details that indicate his father was missing four fingers on his right hand and had a mustache and that the family lived in a place that had knee-deep snow, heavy rainfall, mountains and trees.

The boy is 4 feet 6, has dark blond to light brown hair and a slightly freckled white complexion.

CLUE TO MYSTERY BOY — This sketch made by a deaf-mute 8-year-old boy found wandering in Mexico last November indicates he might be the survivor of a plane crash that could have occurred as much as two or three years ago. (AP Laserphoto)

BOY IN SEARCH OF HIS IDENTITY — This 8-year-old deaf-mute boy was found wandering in Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, last November, his identity unknown. Sketches he has made indicate he may have survivied a plane crash which could have killed his family two or three years ago. Mexican and Texas authorities believe the boy may be an American because of his fondness for hamburgers and video games. (AP Laserphoto)

Smoking Ruled Child Abuse

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A Circuit Court judge has ruled that a woman smoker may not light up in confined areas around her 4-year-old child, but the angry woman says she'll appeal the order.

"Exposing a child whose lungs are still growing to passive smoke is another form of child abuse," Judge Bill Swann said Friday after issuing the order to Priscilla Bullock.

Ms. Bullock said she was in court to respond to a petition filed by her ex-husband, Christopher Reeves, to lower his child-support payment and to modify visitation privileges. His petition was denied two months ago and he was appealing to Swann.

The petition was denied again, but Ms. Bullock said that "from out of the blue," Swann granted a request by her ex-husband's lawyer to prohibit the mother from smoking around the child in a confined environment, such as a home or a car.

"I am 30 years old. This is a violation of my civil rights," she said. "My (former) husband drinks beer and I didn't say he couldn't drink around the child. ...

"It's time for me to move out of Tennessee if a judge can keep me from having a cigarette in my own home."

Ms. Bullock also must not allow others to smoke in her home if the child is present.

Ms. Bullock said she would appeal Swann's ruling.

Ecuador Air Force Chief Dies In Crash

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — Rescue teams worked Saturday to recover the bodies of 11 passengers killed in the flaming crash of a military jet carrying Ecuador's air force chief, two other officers and an Israeli military attache.

The aircraft was on fire before it slammed into a mountainside on the outskirts of this highland capital while preparing to land in heavy rain and an electrical storm Friday night, witnesses said.

All 11 on board were killed, including air force chief Gen. Angel Augusto Flores, two other members of Ecuador's air command, Gen. Raul Cousin and Gen. Galo Coronel, and Col. Shabtai Ben-Shua, Israel's military attache in Ecuador. The other dead included six Ecuadoran air force officers and one corporal.

Witnesses said the plane split apart after the crash and slid 200 yards down a slope. Part of the wreckage slipped into the flood-swollen Machangara River, according to witnesses.

A spokesman for the air force's Air Accident Investigative Board said investigators suspect the plane may have been struck by a lightning bolt because the pilot of a plane following the military jet saw a flash just before the accident.

The plane was four miles from Quito's international airport when it hit the mountain on the sparsely populated outskirts of the capital. It had taken off from the Taura air force base on the Pacific coast 160 miles southwest of Quito.

The air force did not provide official information on the exact model of the aircraft or its manufacturer.

Six Coal Miners Saved In 'Miracle' Rescue

By GEORGE BOEHMER
Associated Press Writer

BORKEN, West Germany (AP) — Workers intensified the search Saturday for survivors of a powerful mine blast after rescuing six men who were led to safety by their supervisor and survived 65 hours in an underground air pocket.

TOO MUCH TO BEAR — A relative of one of the rescued miners at the brown coal mine in Borken, West Germany, is helped to a stretcher by an ambulance man and another relative Saturday at the mine. Rescue teams were able to save six miners Saturday morning. The tension from waiting to hear the fate of the miners was too much for this relative. (AP Laserphoto)

"It's a miracle," said Peter-Carl Ruehland, a spokesman for Preussen Elektra, the company that owns the coal mine.

All 57 men trapped by the blast Wednesday had been given up for dead. Late Saturday, a 37th body was recovered. Another 14 miners were still missing.

The rescue came with the help of a television crew's microphone, which was lowered 230 feet into a shaft and picked up tapping sounds.

Officials said the miners were trapped 500 feet underground, in an air pocket away from carbon monoxide estimated at 50 times the level fatal to humans.

Heinz Cramer, a spokesman for the mine owner, said the men were in an area "which was about to run out of oxygen, and time was running out when they were found."

As mine supervisor Thomas Gepperth emerged from a lift that hauled him to the surface Saturday morning, he first inquired about Ahmet Batkan, a Turkish immigrant who was among the survivors.

"Where is my Ahmet, where is my little Ahmet?" Gepperth cried.

Batkan was lifted from the shaft before Gepperth.

"Everybody was making their last wills and testaments," Gepperth said. "I told them they didn't have to."

Gepperth, who saved the men by leading them away from deadly carbon monoxide gas, was interviewed by Hesse state television. His brief remarks, taped early Saturday, were broadcast later in the day.

Another survivor, also interviewed on state television but not identified by name, described hearing drilling on Friday, followed by silence.

"That was really agonizing, because nothing more was going on up there. "You start thinking, 'Have they forgotten us or something? Maybe they're figuring it's not worth it,'" he said.

Searchers, some with tears in their eyes, broke into applause as the exhausted but otherwise unhurt survivors reached the surface.

The dramatic rescue sparked hopes for finding more survivors inside the Stolzenbach mine.

"It's a faint hope, but a supervisor said there were tracks of two people who may also be in an area where they may have survived," said Cramer, a board member of Preussen Elektra. "We're stepping up the search."

"You can certainly call Gepperth's actions something special. He reacted in exactly the right way," Cramer added.

He said about 200 workers were involved in the search in Borken, a town of 15,000 people 70 miles northeast of Frankfurt.

Family members who rushed to the scene embraced the five West Germans and one Turk. Fourteen Turkish immigrant workers were among the 57 trapped miners.

The six survivors later paused for photographers but told reporters not to ask them any questions.

They were examined at nearby hospitals, then allowed to go home.

Cramer told reporters the six were found in a dead-end tunnel about 10 feet wide and eight feet high.

The rescue came after crews drilled an air shaft in the east field of the mine. Officials said that carbon monoxide levels registered lower there than in the north field, where they were 50 times higher than the amount lethal for humans.

Rescuers had believed that all 13 miles of underground shafts were filled with such high levels of carbon monoxide that no one could be found alive.

A nearby television crew then suggested lowering a microphone into the narrow shaft. The microphone picked up the tapping sounds.

After more than three hours of digging, the rescue workers broke into the air pocket and found the men.

Some victims' relatives criticized the rescue efforts, saying they believed the retrieval of bodies had been given priority over the search for survivors. They also said they could not understand why workers didn't think to use a microphone earlier.

When the group felt the shock wave of the blast Wednesday, Cramer said, they ran toward an exit. But Gepperth, 36, a veteran miner and trained rescuer, realized they were running into high concentrations of deadly carbon monoxide when he saw another man staggerering.

Gepperth turned the group in the other direction and instructed them to be as calm as possible to conserve oxygen, Cramer said.

Many of the confirmed fatalities died of carbon monoxide poisoning.

In addition to Gepperth and Batkan, company officials identified the survivors as Egon Dehn, Helmut Gesner, Heinz Roese and Wilfried Doench. They range in age from 21 to 36.

Veteran Miner Led Group To Safety

By JOAN FISCHER
Associated Press Writer

BORKEN, West Germany (AP) — In the frantic minutes after an explosion rocked the Borken mine, veteran miner Thomas Gepperth led his tiny group from the deadly carbon monoxide to survival in what West Germans have dubbed "The Miracle of Borken."

Before Gepperth and his five colleagues were found, officials repeatedly had said none of the 57 men trapped could have survived. Thirty-seven were confirmed dead and 14 were missing.

The six men, their faces blackened, were pulled to the surface on stretchers over a 45-minute period beginning at 5:30 a.m. Saturday. The group had spent 65 hours about 500 feet underground after the explosion that blasted the Stolzenbach mine with earthquake-like force.

The tall, blond Gepperth, 36, stood calmly with the others — four West Germans and one Turk — as they posed for photographers after washing up. The five were identified as Helmut Gesner, Heinz Roese, Egon Dehn and Wilfried Doench and Ahmet Batkan.

"Everybody was making their last wills and testaments," Gepperth said as he appeared after the dramatic rescue. "I told them they didn't have to." His brief remarks were made in an interview with state television.

"I never gave up. I always said, 'They'll make it and get us out of here,'" Gepperth said.

Another survivor, also interviewed on state television but not identified by name, said the survivors heard drilling on Friday, but then the noises temporarily stopped.

"That was really agonizing, because nothing more was going on up there. "You start thinking, 'Have they forgotten us or something? Maybe they're figuring it's not worth it.'"

The man said that in the hours of waiting, he began to "see lights that aren't really there."

Heinz Cramer, a board member of the company that owns the mine, gave an account of the survival.

He said the group tried to flee toward the exit after the explosion.

Cramer said Gepperth ordered his men to turn away from the direction of the exit, from where the poison was coming, and walk toward an air pocket.

"So they turned around and found shelter in one of the side areas," Cramer said. "(Gepperth) told them to remain quiet and calm so they would preserve the oxygen."

"You can certainly call Gepperth's actions something special. He reacted in exactly the right way," he said.

A man who identified himself as Egon Dehn's brother-in-law said the six kept their spirits up by recalling a 1963 mining accident in the Lower Saxony region in which 11 men were rescued after two weeks.

The 1963 accident has become known as the "Miracle of Lengede," after the mining town where it occurred — and West Germans quickly dubbed the Saturday rescue "The Miracle of Borken."

Cramer said search efforts were being stepped up following unconfirmed reports that two more survivors may be in a nearby area.

"It's a faint hope, but a superviser said there were tracks of two people who may also be in an area where they may have survived," Cramer said.

Peter-Carl Ruehland, a spokesman for the mine owner Preussen Elektra, declined to speculate on how much longer the six men could have survived in the mine.

"To the right and to the left of where they were, the levels of carbon monoxide were rising," Ruehland said.

Bodies Recovered

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Rescuers found the bodies of four miners Saturday, bringing the death toll from a rock-burst in the world's deepest gold mine to seven.

The bursting of the rock, which is caused by underground earthquakes or tremendous pressures at great depths, occurred Friday night 6,600 feet beneath the surface at Western Deep Levels Gold Mine.

Diet Pills Sweeping U.S.

Doctors Invent 'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight

New 'Fat-Magnet' Diet Pill Gives You Steady Fat Loss

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)— An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" to help you steadily lose fat by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

You Can "Eat Normally"

Best of all, "you can continue to eat all of your favorite foods as long as you don't increase your normal eating habits. You can start losing fat from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight you desire."

Flushes Fat Out of Body

The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in undigested fat particles from food that you have just eaten. Then, the trapped fat is naturally "flushed" right out of your body.

Within 2 days you should notice a change in the color of your stool, caused by the fat particles being eliminated.

"Pills Go To Work"

The fat-magnet pills alone, "automatically" help reduce calories by eliminating dietary fat, with no exercising. You simply take the pills with a glass of water before meals. However, you can lose weight "faster" if you choose to follow the fat-magnet diet plan along with the pills.

The fat-magnet pills are already sweeping the country with record sales and glowing reports of weight loss. It's a "lazy way" to lose weight for people who enjoy eating.

Now Available to Public

If you need to lose a large or small amount of weight, you can order your supply of these new highly successful fat-magnet pills and diet plan (now available from the doctor's exclusive manufacturer by mail or phone order only) by sending $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$2 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling), cash, check or money order to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. W634, Beverly Hills, CA 90211. (Unconditional money-back guarantee if not 100% satisfied.) Visa, MasterCard and American Express OK. (Send card number, expire date, and signature.) Richer Japan Eyes World Power, Peacemaker Role

By Fred Hiatt and Margaret Shapiro
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

TOKYO — Japan, after four decades of timidly following the United States while protecting its own economic interests, is attempting to fashion a bolder foreign policy as peacemaker and world power in keeping with its new financial might.

Japan's search for a new global identity has been sparked by its sudden wealth and its perception of U.S. retrenchment and relative decline.

As described by Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita in a series of speeches in foreign capitals this spring, Japan wants to take a leading role in aid to the Third World, mediation of regional conflicts and reconstruction and refugee assistance after conflicts end.

And in a major departure, the country will send personnel as well as more money, offering, as one senior official said, "Japanese sweat" as well as yen.

"There is a change in the mentality of the Japanese people about the role Japan has to play in the world," said Shintaro Yamashita, who heads the Foreign Ministry's research and planning bureau. "Economic power means, at the same time, responsibility."

Takeshita is expected to detail Japan's willingness to assume more responsibility, especially in aid to developing nations, when he meets with other Western leaders in Toronto at the seven-nation economic summit from June 19 to 21.

The changes so far in Japan's foreign policy, long criticized by some outsiders for placing self-interest before principle, are by no means revolutionary. Many voters in this insular country remain leery of foreigners and foreign entanglements.

In addition, the nation's "no war" constitution will still be interpreted to bar the dispatch of troops, even for peace-keeping missions. Few nations in history have been able to wield power without military might to back them.

"I don't think we can have any decisive influence without military power," Yamashita said. "But at least Japan can lend a hand."

— Japan, which has shunned U.N. peacekeeping missions in the past, will send a Foreign Ministry official to help monitor the pullout of Soviet troops from Afghanistan.

Viewing that small step — a first — as a beginning, the government is preparing legislation to allow the dispatch to other trouble spots of Japanese experts in communications, logistics, transportation, medicine, election supervision and other fields.

"There is a rising recognition that it is not enough to give money," said Koichi Haraguchi, a high-level Foreign Ministry official. "Then what else can we do? The conclusion is, maybe we can offer Japanese sweat — not blood, but sweat for the maintenance of international peace."

— At Asian Development Bank headquarters in Manila, Japan is jockeying with U.S. representatives for more power to match Tokyo's sizable investment. Normally deferential in multinational institutions, Japan is showing at the bank, one Japanese financial official said, that the burden-sharing demanded by Washington must be accompanied by power-sharing.

— In seven months as prime minister, Takeshita has visited Europe twice, stressing that Japan-Europe relations must be as strong as the alliance between Japan and the United States, or Europe and the United States. This comes as many opinion makers here have begun to talk openly about America's decline.

Japan's prestigious Asahi Shimbun newspaper, for example, welcomed Takeshita's European forays with an editorial entitled, "Let Go of America's Apron Strings," in which it noted that the "big tree called America" has begun to "decay."

Thus, the newspaper said, "it is about time Japan started walking its own path of diplomacy. ... And actually, Japan should go even one step further and be prepared to act as a 'prop' for the United States."

— Japan has surpassed the United States in budgeted overseas development aid, with $10 billion approved for fiscal 1988, and will soon become the world's leading donor in actual spending.

At the Toronto summit, Takeshita is expected to promise that Japan will gradually increase its foreign-aid budget until it exceeds the developed nations' average of .35 percent of annual gross national product. Japan currently lags behind the average at .29 percent, while the United States gives .23 percent of its GNP.

As in other areas, officials here see their increased generosity compensating for expected declines in U.S. aid as Washington wrestles with its budget deficit.

"The U.S. and Europe have come to a peak," one official said. "Realistically, it is only Japan which can reasonably be expected to expand its overseas development aid."

— For the first time, Japan will send a member of its Cabinet, Foreign Minister Sosuke Uno, to Israel. Ministry officials portray Uno's planned June trip to Israel and three Arab nations as evidence of Japan's desire to become more active in diplomacy around the world.

The trip also could allay criticism from the United States of Japan's pro-Arab leanings, often portrayed as symbolic of Japan as an "economic animal" in world affairs.

Government officials said Japan also is considering diplomatic efforts in areas where it has no major economic interests, such as Namibia and Cambodia. Japan last year made a small financial contribution to allied military operations in the Persian Gulf, and Tokyo continues to increase modestly its financial contributions to U.N. peace-keeping efforts.

The government also has steadily raised its domestic military spending, financial support for U.S. troops here and cooperation and technology sharing with U.S. armed forces.

Officials acknowledged that these developments can be seen as responses to pressure from overseas. With its already thriving economy boosted by the doubling in the value of the yen in the past three years, Japan has become an economic giant, attacked for its success and beseeched by all sides to share its wealth.

Japan's contribution to the Persian Gulf effort, for example, came after members of the U.S. Congress asked why American troops should risk their lives to protect oil vital to the Japanese economy. Its promise to increase overseas aid is, in part, a deflection of demands that it spend more on its own defense to allow the United States to curtail its military obligations and spending.

But officials here said that Japan is responding to its own historical evolution as well as to outside demands. For decades after the war, they said, the nation was preoccupied with rebuilding its shattered economy, but Japanese now have the self-confidence as well as the wealth to look outward.

Former Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone embodied that confidence for many Japanese by standing on an equal footing with other world leaders at summits, by building Japan's military and by declaring it was time for a postwar "settling of accounts."

Takeshita, although personally less imposing than his predecessor, is determined to promote further internationalization, officials said.

"I'm quite aware that in some quarters there's criticism that Japan doesn't do anything unless it's under pressure from outside," Haraguchi said. "I think that's changing. Japan is increasingly aware that we have to find some area, some way to make a contribution to the world."

The Japanese remain inward-looking in many ways. They have accepted few Vietnamese refugees, allow few foreign workers and often view with suspicion even Japanese returning from abroad.

Typhoon Toll Rises To 7

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A landslide smashed a shanty in a Manila suburb, killing five people and bringing to seven the official death toll in the wake of tropical typhoon Susan, officials said Saturday.

The landslide occurred Friday in the Guadalupe district of suburban Makati, where earth and rock loosened by heavy rain cascaded onto a shanty at the foot of a hill, according to Crispina Abat of the Office of Civil Defense.

The other fatalities were a 9-year-old boy who drowned in floods in the Manila suburb of San Juan and a 5-year-old boy crushed by a landslide in Zambales province, 50 miles northwest of Manila, Mrs. Abat said.

In the central Philippine city of Cebu, the coast guard said 13 crewmen were missing after a 700-ton cargo ship carrying 40,000 cases of beer sank in rough seas Thursday. Four people, including a 10-year old boy, were rescued.

The ship was en route from Cebu City to Legazpi when it sank off Leyte island about 300 miles southeast of Manila, shipping officials said. They said the ship went down between two small islands and some of the missing crewmen may have been able to swim to safety.

Susan battered the northern Philippines as a tropical depression earlier in the week and returned late Wednesday as a typhoon with winds of up to 87 mph. Its accompanying heavy rains flooded wide areas of Manila and Luzon island.

Meanwhile, weathermen today were closely watching a tropical depression brewing some 320 miles east of northern Luzon's eastern coast. A weather bulletin said the depression had winds of about 35 mph.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING ON TO AMEND THE ZONING ORDINANCE OF THE CITY OF GREENVILLE, NORTH CAROLINA

Pursuant to Article 19, Chapter 160A of the General Statutes of North Carolina, notice is hereby given that the City Council of the City of Greenville, NC, will conduct a public hearing in the City Council Chambers of the Municipal Building in the City of Greenville, NC, on Thursday, June 9, 1988 at 7:30 p.m. on the question of the adoption of an ordinance amending the Zoning Ordinance as follows:

To delete "family care facilities" and "care homes" from the table of permitted uses and replace said use catagories with a comprehensive "Congregate Care Facilities" Ordinance.

SECTION 32-97D CONGREGATE CARE FACILITIES

Congregate Care Facilities are defined as residential facilities with support and supervisory personnel that provide room and board, personal care, habilitation services, guidance, counseling and therapy to resident persons. Such facilities are classified and regulated in accordance with the following and other requirements:

1. Family Care Home. Congregate Care Facilities which provide service to handicapped persons which have a temporary or permanent physical, emotional, or mental disability including but not limited to mental retardation, cerebral palsy, epilepsy, autisum, hearing and sight impairments, emotional disturbances and orthodpedic impairments but not including mentally ill persons who are dangerous to others as defined in G.S. 122C-3(11)b.
   (a) Locational standards
      1. Shall be allowed in all residential and office and institutional zoning districts.
      2. Are not located within one half (½) mile of an existing family care home as measured to the closest point of the subject lots.
   (b) Performance standards
      1. Serve not more than six (6) persons as defined above.
      2. Shall provide not less than two hundred (200) square feet of habitable floor area per occupant including support personnel.
      3. Shall provide two (2) off street parking spaces.
      4. Shall be located on a lot which conforms to the subdivision regulations and applicable zoning requirements.
      5. Principal and accessory structures or uses shall be construed to constitute a single family land use.
      6. Conforms to applicable North Carolina licensing requirements.
      7. Conforms to the North Carolina State Building Code.
2. Group Care Home. Congregate Care Facilities which provide service to handicapped persons regulated pursuant to (1.) Family Care Home of this section and persons who have developed a pattern of compulsive drug and/or alcohol use resulting in impairment of social and family functioning and/or physical impairment. Individuals requiring specialized foster care, secure group care homes, long-term inpatient care and those persons who are considered dangerous to others as defined in G.S. 122C-3 (11)b shall not be considered under this definition.
   (a) Locational Standards.
      1. Shall be allowed in the R-6 (high density residential), CDF (comercial downtown fringe) and all office and institutional zoning districts subject to special use permit approval of the Board of Adjustment.
      2. Are not located within one-half (½) mile of an existing Family Care Home, Group Care Home or Institutional Care Home as measured to the closest point of the subject lots.
   (b) Performance Standards.
      1. Serve not more than twelve (12) persons as defined above.
      2. Shall provide not less than two-hundred (200) square feet of habitable floor area per occupant including support personnel.
      3. Shall provide one (1) off street parking space per each support personnel and every three (3) persons or fraction thereof served.
      4. Minimum lot size shall be not less than fifteen thousand (15,000) square feet in area.
      5. Minimum lot width shall be not less than seventy-five (75) feet.
      6. In addition to the minimum lot size listed above the total required lot area shall be increased one thousand (1,000) square feet for each person served over nine (9) including support personnel.
      7. Shall be located on a lot which conforms to the subdivision regulations and applicable zoning requirements.
      8. Principal and accessory structures or uses shall be construed to constitute a multi-family land use.
      9. Conforms to applicable North Carolina licensing requirements.
      10. Conforms to the North Carolina State Building Code.
3. Institutional Care Home. Congregate Care Facilities which provide service to those persons included under (1) Family Care Home and (2) Group Care Home of this section. Individuals requiring long-term inpatient care shall be considered under this definition.
   (a) Locational Standards.
      1. Shall be allowed in the MD-1, MD-2, MD-3 (Medical) and all offices and institutional zoning districts subject to special use permit approval of the Board of Adjustment.
      2. Are not located within one-half (½) mile of an existing Family Care Home or Group Care Home or within one (1) mile of an existing Institutional Care Home.
   (b) Performance Standards.
      1. Shall provide not less than two-hundred (200) square feet of habitable floor area per occupant including support personnel.
      2. Shall provide one (1) off street parking space per each support personnel and every four (4) persons or fraction thereof served.
      3. Minimum lot size shall be not less than twenty-thousand (20,000) square feet in area.
      4. Minimum lot width shall be not less than seventy-five (75) feet.
      5. In addition to the minimum lot size listed above the total required lot area shall be increased one-thousand (1,000) square feet for each person served over twelve (12) including support personnel.
      6. Shall be located on a lot which conforms to the subdivision regulations and applicable zoning requirements.
      7. Principal and accessory structures or uses shall be construed to constitute an institutional land use.
      8. Conforms to the North Carolina licensing requirements.
      9. Conforms to the North Carolina State Building Code.

During this public hearing, objections or suggestions will be duly considered by City Council. All interested persons are requested to be present at the hearing, and they will be afforded an opportunity to be heard.

A copy of the proposed ordinance is on file at the City Clerk's office located at 201 W. 5th Street, and is available for public inspection during normal working hours Monday through Friday.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Squeak, People

Public Outcry Can Stop Dump

Maybe you want industrial toxins and corrosives and nuclear debris from eight states trucked to neighboring Edgecombe County, then processed, burned or buried.

Maybe you want to take the chance that the by-products of this process will pollute the region's resources. Maybe you want to live with the stigma of having a hazardous/low level nuclear waste dump on the doorstep.

If not, be in the auditorium at Edgecombe Community College in Tarboro at 7:30 p.m. Monday and calmly but firmly make your views known.

Maybe Monday is a bad night for you. Maybe your yard needs mowing. It might even be raining or just too lovely to spend the night inside. These are excuses for not going. There are not very many valid reasons, because the future of the region is at stake.

Go and tell the Edgecombe County Commission what the region thinks about its foolhardy offer to host a hazardous and low level nuclear waste site. The citizens of Pitt, Edgecombe, Nash and Martin counties have too much to lose if such a facility is built nearby. This is the last public hearing on the issue, and citizens can neither afford to waste time nor fail to make their voices heard.

Edgecombe's leaders are determined to put the thing here. Most of North Carolina's legislators, a good number of which are breathing a sigh of relief the dump isn't on their turf, want it here. Even though the environmental risks are steep. Even though serious questions about technology remain unanswered.

Why? For money. They see state dollars flowing into Edgecombe, paying it to be the waste mecca of the Southeast. What they don't see is the decline that type of thinking will produce. They don't see that the benefits aren't worth the risks, especially if the economic pie is sliced to fairly compensate the geographic region placed at risk by a waste facility.

So let the commissioners know how you feel, citizens of Pitt, Edgecombe, Martin and Nash counties. Let them know Monday in no uncertain terms a waste dump is not welcome in an area where progressive thinking is expected of leadership.

Stick To It

Council's Financial Move Correct

It was too much and it wasn't needed.

The City Council was correct to steer clear of funding a $39,000 request from the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce to market Greenville. Instead, the board opted for a more modest — and appropriate — $11,500 expenditure.

The council clearly recognizes that personnel and capital needs of the city far outweigh the significance of a marketing project that duplicates efforts already under way and paid for by public money.

In a year when state-mandated changes in taxation have pinched the tax base and frugality is important, a $39,000 request was out of line. It simply wouldn't have been sound business to fund it at what surely would have been the expense of vital city programs.

The Pitt County Development Commission, funded from a city and county tax levied for industrial development, has expanded its budget from $108,730 in 1985 to $257,007 in 1988. This growth is appropriate and essential to pay for an aggressive marketing approach to recruiting industry to the area. The Development Commission's program is a sound and comprehensive one.

So to what use would the chamber's additional request be applied? For more billboards espousing Greenville's virtues, more advertising, more public relations gigs, more publications? These needs are being served by present programs. No extraordinary further need has been demonstrated. There's no reason to burden Greenville citizens with expensive repetition.

Granted, advertising and marketing dollars are well-spent when it comes to economic development. And there's no doubt the city needs to more actively participate in funding marketing efforts.

But not $39,000 worth. That request was too steep.

Any chamber marketing effort should be primarily paid for with private money, not public money. Spare tax dollars, if there is such an item in 1988, must be applied to essential services — police, fire, rescue, public works, planning, engineering, etc. — not more ads telling how Greenville has it all.

The City Council should stick to its new-found financial tenacity.

Heat, Summer School & Ambition

Alvin Taylor

Sunday Morning Notes

Over 5,000 students, a new record, are on campus at East Carolina University this first session of the summer, to begin or continue their college educations. Another record is expected the second summer session.

The vision of such numbers of students on campus for a summer session sent your columnist's memory back to the one such session which I attended. It was a disaster. I was totally geared to a September through May school year, never having attended summer school in elementary or high schools. After receiving a dismal crop of grades for that summer session, I resolved never to do it again — and I didn't.

Of course the 5,000 students now on the ECU campus for the summer were more than we had for the fall session then. There were summer sessions but they were heavily used by teachers who returned for courses to renew their certificates.

Something else that has changed is that virtually no classrooms were air conditioned and the heat didn't lend itself to learning.

Most classrooms on campus now are air conditioned. Nevertheless, many students who attend the summer sessions live in non-air conditioned dorms. They endure the heat to continue their educations.

Why do it? Well many of the students are still teachers who return for additional credit or to work on graduate degrees. There are still some who have fallen behind by taking light loads and want to pick up the summer credits to graduate on schedule.

So often, however, today's summer student will tell you he or she is looking to complete college ahead of schedule. By attending some summer sessions at least one semester can be knocked off the normal four years.

In my college days, there was something called the draft awaiting the young men when they completed college. Since that meant serving army time, there was little incentive to finish early.

That is no threat today and the impetus for attending summer sessions must in part be attributed to ambition. Many summer students want to complete their undergraduate degrees and perhaps move quickly into graduate work. Since that requires additional time prior to beginning their careers, compressing the summer work means getting it all done sooner.

The debate rages eternally as to whether today's students work more or less than those of the past, and whether they have more or less ambition. Judging by the record summer enrollment, there must be quite a few who are willing to work hard, indeed, to get their educations behind them and take on their careers.

To the editor:

The editorial referring to the recently opened drug and alcohol detoxification center showed an optimistic but limited point of view. The author suggests that the new center will supplant previously "ineffective" treatment centers such as Walter B. Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center, Cherry Hospital and Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The author states directly that "none of these were properly staffed to handle cases such as now will be referred to the Detox Unit." We write to broaden your editorial viewpoint.

Treating psychoactive substance dependence (alcoholism included) requires sensitive diagnosticians and several types of treatment facilities. Psychoactive substance dependence is a primary disorder characterized by behavior, thoughts, and symptoms strongly suggesting compulsive use, and loss of control despite adverse physical, psychological, and social consequences. Drug abuse is also a feature of other primary psychiatric disorder such as anxiety, depression and others. Further, drug intoxication or withdrawal can minimize many psychiatric disorders. Psychoactive substances can directly or indirectly cause subsequent physical sequelae.

The detox center will function well in treating the voluntary patient who is compliant, truthful and without life-threatening physical or psychiatric problems. Patients often do not fit these categories and the existing facilities are still necessary. The detox center can help by performing triage and referral as well as detoxification.

The author suggests the Detox Unit was created because of a community movement. This ignores the realities of cost-efficiency analysis and political influence which led to its development. Because of deinstitutionalization, the community mental health system has assumed primacy in the care of the chronically mentally ill including the chemically addicted. Political forces may benefit a community and the community needs to be aware of this phenomenon.

In conclusion, we feel the Detox Center will provide a meaningful service and supplement (not supplant) existing facilities in the Greenville area.

To the editor:

In regard to the proposed hazardous waste dump in Conetoe, let's not be fooled, any sort of radioactive (or other hazardous) leakage or accident that affects Conetoe will affect Bethel, Greenville, Winterville, Ayden and potentially every town for miles.

The final decision regarding this dump should not be entirely in the hands of a few money-bedazzled citizens of Edgecombe County. The negative impact of this dump will be felt by several counties.

Locating the waste dump anywhere for money would be the equivalent of selling souls to the devil. The decision as to where to locate this deadly material must be based purely on facts. Nuclear power and waste are still being studied and there are many unknowns. What definitely is known is that nuclear waste is life-threatening and remains deadly for a long time. Containers for this material considered safe in the past have now been proven unsafe.

I am a parent and I must consider the future. I located in Pitt County because, comparatively, this area presented a very positive environment for raising a family; however, with the introduction of this toxic waste dump comes a very serious threat and an extremely negative mark against this area. Families and businesses will very likely stay away in droves.

This is a monumental decision and every citizen must be thoroughly informed and allowed to vote. This must not be rushed.

This dump doesn't have to be located near a major water supply nor a populated area for that matter. These hazardous materials should not be forced upon us. We must oppose this dump at the proposed site and otherwise demand a voice in this matter.

Dukakis: Promise, Not Just Promises

Larry Gelbart

Barring a miracle, Michael S. Dukakis will go forth from the California primary to Atlanta as the Democratic nominee, despite an exciting and valiant campaign by Jesse Jackson. It is a measure of their intelligence and integrity that after 46 hard-fought primary and caucus battles Dukakis and Jackson are not only still talking to each other — about the issues — but that they are doing so in a civilized, constructive manner. Compare this to the Dole-dumping and Bush-bashing that the Republican contestants engaged in.

We are, finally, in the last reel of the Reagan presidency. Only a few more months of government by horoscope, of U.S. dependence on Star Words, and then the first couple will saddle up and head for the sunset and, mercifully, it will be bedtime for Ronzo.

But the torch has been passed. The emperor who wore no clothes is handing them down to his err-apparent.

Do we really want the understudy to take center stage? Do we want George Bush to step into the president's shoes, soggy as they are from spending so much time in the previous owner's mouth?

We are given daily reminders of Bush's ineptitude within the innermost circles of incompetence in the White House.

Take Panama. Please. Bush has been given permission to have his own opinion on the matter, to sing bass in the eunuchs' choir. The president finds no fault with the vice president's disagreement on how to get a lock on Panama. This, mind you, is the same president who finds no fault in the continuing presence in office of his attorney general, who can generally be found in the office of his own attorney.

While it's tempting to review the parade of horrors of the past eight years with Bush sitting in the co-pilot seat, let us deal with the present, and let future history and comic books make what they will of a president whose career went from Max Factor to the sleaze factor.

Bush wants to be the "education president." He is an arsonist hoping to become a fire chief. As the No. 2 man, he watched the administration cut aid to education by 16 percent, slash funds for vital programs in bilingual education, education for children with special needs and college loans. Or perhaps he was out of the room that day.

Recognizing the key role of education in creating opportunity, Dukakis and the Massachusetts Legislature quadrupled scholarship assistance and increased resources for public higher education faster than any state in the Union.

I prefer promise to promises. A Dukakis administration offers the promise that this man from the East can do for the West, the North and the South what he did for his own state. He can bring care and compassion, experience and expertise to a nation longing for a sense of order and decency and for a president who will not take direction but one who will give it. If Mike Dukakis is short on charisma, just remember that George Bush is a man who lights up a room after he leaves it.

Edgecombe's 'Buffalo Hunt' Promises Disappointing Results

Carmine Scavo

Local Perspective

Dr. Carmine Scavo is an assistant professor of political science at East Carolina University. He holds a bachelor's degree in American government from the University of Virginia and a doctorate in political science from the University of Michigan. He is completing a research project focusing on economic development, problems and politics in seven eastern North Carolina cities. Local Perspective is a continuing feature on The Daily Reflector's Commentary page.

The Edgecombe County Commissioners and Representative Joe Mavretic may willingly be leading Edgecombe County into an economic development trap in which a good part of the rural south has already unwittingly become ensnared. I am talking about the promise of short term, "quick fix" economic development which has attracted jobs to poorer, rural, southern counties at the cost of long term problems when the jobs evaporated.

As somebody who has been researching economic development in the South and particularly in eastern North Carolina for the last two years, I recommend that the County Commission take a good, hard look at the incentives that are being offered to Edgecombe County in exchange for a low level nuclear and hazardous waste facility.

Leaving aside the environmental issues which such a facility raises, let us look only at the promises of economic development which make the project seem attractive. I call these promises a trap; allow me to state my reasons for saying this.

The path to development which has been taken by a good portion of the rural South is to exploit the traditional advantages which the South has had over other portions of the country — cheap labor and low land costs. This has led to what William Winter, former governor of Mississippi and present chairman of the Commission on the Future of the South of the Southern Growth Policies Board, calls a "Buffalo Hunt" for industry.

Industry is recruited to the rural South from other areas of the country using the low costs of doing business here as a "hook." Like the overly-dedicated fisherman whose hopes to catch the "big one" lead him to neglect his job, rural Southern public administrators have pursued the one big industry that will satisfy all their economic development dreams. The over-concentration on this quest leads to a neglect of "home-grown" industry which may provide some of the same advantages of the "big one" at far less risk.

The trap of industrial recruitment is twofold. First, the advantage of job creation has been more than offset by a relative decline (in comparison with other regions) of salaries. The rate of job creation in North Carolina in the 1970s was the third highest in the nation (exceeded ony by California and Texas), something of which we all should be proud. However, in the same time period, average manufacturing wages in North Carolina fell from $1.05 per hour below the national average to $1.90 per hour below the national average.

Second, industry which is attacted by the lure of low labor and land costs will, more than likely, leave when those costs rise, or if they find even lower costs somewhere else — perhaps South Korea, Brazil, or Haiti. The strong dollar contributed to this trend; with the weakening of the dollar, the movement of jobs offshore has slowed only partially. The rural South has thus done a good job of attracting low wage, temporary jobs from other sections of the country. Are these the types of jobs Edgecombe County wants or needs?

The Edgecmobe County Commission is making the same mistake — linking the county's wagon to a highly variable star in the expectation that the star is a constant. The hazardous waste facility discussed in the proposal that has been put together has a life span of some twenty years. When the facility closes, Edgecombe County will be left with a site which will need care for some 300 years.

In exchange for this, the county will receive a certain amount of state assistance to complete long delayed projects like the four-laning of U.S. 64. The lure of the waste facility will also attract industry to the Conetoe portion of the county — apparently the Container Corporation of America, headquartered in Wilmington, has already said they would construct a manufacturing and/or processing plant in the neighborhood of the waste facility.

This all sounds good, but one main point is being ignored. The lure of the waste facility is a temporary lure — in 20 years the attraction will be gone. Absent the waste facility, what will happen to industries which have been located in Edgecombe County? It would seem logical that an industry attracted to locate in one area by access to a waste facility would be attracted to relocate somewhere else when the waste facility closed.

So the private sector incentives the commissioners are putting such heavy emphasis on are temporary, lasting not quite one generation. The site itself, however, will require attention, monitoring, and quarding for some 10 generations.

Additionally, the public sector incentives discussed may not turn out to be all that they appear on the surface. A good deal of public money has been discussed as incentives for this project. Some $5 million in additional state aid per year until the waste facility comes on line is one figure often cited. After the facility opens, interest on the clean-up fund established by the site licensee (which may be as much as $4.5 million per year) is projected to replace the state incentives.

Although these seem to be significant ammounts of money, the projects for which the money will be earmarked have not been discussed in public. One necessary use of the money will be upgrading and maintaining roads (and not only U.S. 64) in Edgecombe County, since these roads will be used by trucks heavily loaded with hazardous and radioactive waste. Running fully-laden trucks over roads puts much more wear on those roads than does their use by automobiles, so not only will the roads need to be upgraded (a one-time expense), they will require additional maintenance (an ongoing expense).

How much of the incentive money and/or the interest on the clean-up fund will the state set aside for road construction and maintenance (and perhaps other projects) associated with the waste facility, and how much of this money will be left for other projects Edgecombe County residents envision that money as being used for?

The Edgecombe County Commission has argued that the future of the county is a bleak one if the waste facility is not built. I grant that this is a possibility but some rural southern counties have addressed similar problems as Edgecombe's without selling out for temporary economic gain. There are two distinct possibilities which do present themselves as potential futures for Edgecombe County:

First, Edgecombe County might easily become a "bedroom" community for the two rapidly growing eastern cities of Rocky Mount and Greenville. Although this is not the path to economic health that many would like to see, it is one path others have taken. As Rocky Mount and Greenville attract new development and new employees, a proportion of those people will want to take advantage of the rural lifestyle which Edgecombe County offers.

Attracting affluent commuters, again, may not be the most desirable development path, but it does represent one way to raise tax revenues to the point where the county's bills get paid. Counties surrounding Raleigh have had similar types of development and have thrived on it, although such development is bought at the price of traffic congestion, changing lifestyles and school construction.

This is a natural trend, one which will occur if Rocky Mount and Greenville continue to grow. Ironically, the only way that I can think for Edgecombe County to forestall this type of development is to build a hazardous waste facility, which will make it less attractive for people moving in from outside the region to want to live in the county.

A second future scenario for Edgecombe County is hazier, but equally valid. Many observers of rural economic development in the South have begun to stress home-grown industry as an alternative to the "Buffalo Hunt." MDC, a consulting firm in Chapel Hill, has recently published a report entitled "Shadows in the Sunbelt" that addresses many of the problems which Edgecombe County now has. Examples of home-grown industry given in the report are the marketing of hardwoods grown in eastern Kentucky, or the attraction of tourism to north Georgia.

The conclusion of the report states: "The South needs to broaden its definition of economic development. Over time, the term economic development has become virtually synonymous with industrial recruitment. Today, however, economic trends are decreasing the value of recruitment — especially for rural communities. At the same time, promising alternative strategies for economic development are not being widely utilized." Permanent, long-term economic progress as a result of the development of home-grown industries may not be as quick a fix as the attraction of industry from somewhere else, but it is much more solid in the long run, and that is what finally counts.

The problem of economic development in Edgecombe County will not be solved by the attraction of a hazardous waste facility to the county. Leaving environmental issues (and there are many) aside, the incentives offered are both temporary in nature and not extensive enough to set the county on the road to economic health. Examining the historic record of counties (like Edgecombe) which are near cities experiencing high growth rates, a hazardous waste facility might even make the county unattractive to potential middle class taxpayers who would work in Rocky Mount or Greenville, but who would want to live in rural towns like Conetoe.

Grasping at straws will not solve Edgecombe County's economic development problems. Imaginative thinking which emphasizes the strengths the county already has and which do not make it unattractive for future development will go a long way toward putting Edgecombe County on the proper path. The county has been lucky in the past in recruiting industry from the outside; the new Sara Lee plant is a good example.

This luck will not hold out forever. A path emphasizing home-grown industry is not an easy path. Imaginative thinking to solve economic problems is much harder than taking the quick road to short term gain, but that is the burden of true leadership. The payoffs of home-grown industry are, however, much more permanent — a positive legacy which the County Commissioners could bequeath to the future generations of Edgecombe County residents instead of the negative legacy of caring for an abandoned hazardous waste facility without the economic resources to do so.

Another Draft?

Cody Shearer

WASHINGTON — The American movie and music industry and the United States military all face a similar problem in the coming years. By the early 1990's, the American youth population, ages 18-24, will decrease almost 10 percent. Since the film and music industry will be losing its largest and most lucrative market, it will have to set its sights on an older, statistically larger age group. Uncle Sam, however, won't have it so easy, which is why the coming demographic shift has already led some policymakers to consider calling for a reinstitution of the draft to keep our military strong.

Twenty years ago, American college students chanted "Hell, no, we won't go," when the draft was a life-threatening issue in America. Today, however, fear of the draft is not being talked about because few high school students realize the growing likelihood of the draft's potential return.

It's no secret why the military keeps the possibility of resuming the draft quiet. Who wants trouble? And, in many ways, the military deserves to be congratulated for keeping up a good face.

Indeed, recruiters for the U.S. voluntary force are right when they claim it is performing quite well, meeting or exceeding all goals set by the Department of Defense. In many ways this success comes from the benefits of President Reagan's top-heavy military expenditures and the 11-14 percent military wage increases he instituted when he entered office. But the Defense Department realizes that the recruiting picture for the next 10 years won't be as rosy as the past eight. To keep up with the private sector, the military wage scale will have to increase, and the defense budget will have to do likewise. More troublesome, is that many Pentagon planners realize this will be very unlikely, no matter which candidate wins in November.

In March, the U.S. General Accounting Office culminated a two-year study on the effects of a possible reinstatement of the draft and issued a report claiming among other things that conscription could save the government $7.8 billion dollars a year. The GAO argued that a draft would free the military from having to compete with the private sector. First year military pay could then be cut 50 percent from its current, competitive level, and the savings from that salary cut, alone would amount to over $6.6 billion a year.

The demographic problem facing the military is clear. The Census Bureau projections over the next 20 years indicate that the number of 18- to 24-years-olds will bottom out in 1995, at just over 24 million. Martin Binken, a senior fellow at the Brookings Institution, has concluded on the basis of these statistics that the armed forces will have to recruit a whopping 55 percent of the total qualified and available male pool in 1995 to maintain its current standing. This manpower crunch would also result in a loss of manpower quality as the military significantly lowers its standards to increase the supply of recruits.

Another problem portended by the change in demographics is a worsening of an already increasingly disproportionate share of military duty for minorities. Today minorities comprise 37.6 percent of the U.S. Army active enlisted force. While the Census Bureau projects a 10 percent decrease in the number of 18- to 24-year-old white males by 1995, it expects a slight increase among non-whites. The minority burden of military service will only increase from its already high levels if these population trends persist.

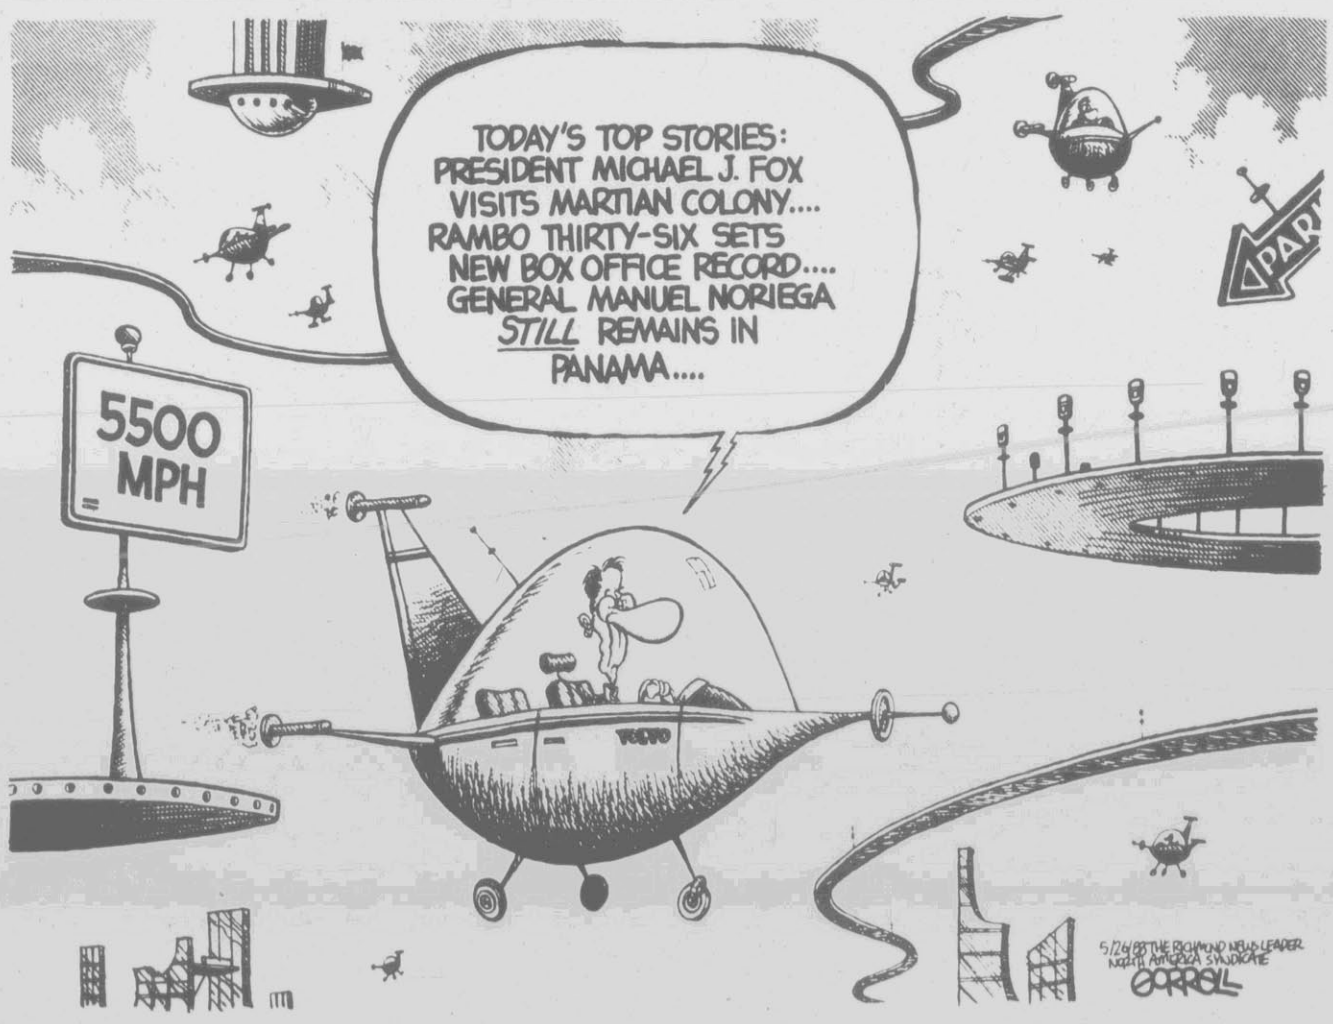

A reinstitution of the draft will not be sold successfully to the American public solely on the basis of these economic and demographic arguments. Recent polling data indicates that only 24 percent of the American public favors a peacetime draft and memories of Vietnam are quite strong. Surely the Pentagon realizes that it can't advocate a position that only 24 percent of Americans support. For that reason, among others, the Defense Department disputes many of the arguments in the GAO report and chooses to stand by the strength of its volunteer force.

Perhaps the strongest argument against reinstituting a peacetime draft is that young people themselves won't stand for it. All one has to do is talk to a college student, whether he is a conservative or a liberal, and ask him if he'd like to interrupt his studies with a stint in the Army. Rarely, is the answer to such a question a big "yes."

During the Vietnam war over 200,000 young Americans were accused of draft offenses, more than 25,000 were indicted, of whom 8,750 were convicted and 4,000 were sentenced to prison. Another 10,000 went underground. An additional quarter of a million never registered in the first place and 172,000 became conscience objectors.

When one considers that there are hundreds of thousands of young men who haven't, in recent years bothered to register with the Selective Service System, as required by law, one can only conclude that a resumption of a peacetime draft would trigger massive unrest. So it just might be that the Pentagon will have to sit down with some of those do-gooder liberals on Capitol Hill and come up with a new form of mandatory national service to solve its recruitment problems in the future.

Day Care Crisis Deserves Attention

Anne Lewis

Just using the word crisis in referring to children or education these days is often taken as a sign of hype, as if such words can be used only to gain attention. We have grown so accustomed to dealing with the dysfunctional in schooling that serious problems no longer seem extraordinary.

But some problems deserve to be seen as crises. They are so severe and have such long-range implications that they stand out from the rest. One such problem is day care, which, until a few months ago, most educators did not view as a school-related issue.

After all, kindergarten only recently has become a universal part of public education. Publicly supported programs for 4-year-olds exist, but only for poor children, and 3-year-olds (with the exception of handicapped children) usually have limited contact with public schools.

How can we justify leaping to the conclusion that day care is to become a responsibility of the public schools? Because the situation has reached crisis proportions, and in many places public schools will become the primary locales for day-care programs because they are accessible to all families.

The Children's Defense Fund and other groups estimate that by 1995 the mothers of two-thirds of all preschoolers will be in the work force. Even Edward Zigler, director of the Center in Child Development and Social Policy at Yale University, who has been reluctant in the past to recommend that young children be put in institutional settings, now proposes a comprehensive day-care program in the public schools. Zigler estimates that 80 percent of mothers of young children will be in the work force in the 21st century.

In a recent report titled "Children In Need," the Committee for Economic Development points out that the U.S. spent $264 billion in 1986 on education for children over age 6. But in that same year only $1 billion was spent on the education of younger children.

The scarcity of resources particularly affects day care. Even middle-class parents have difficulty finding high-quality day-care programs that they can afford. Only about one-fourth of children under age 3 whose parents work outside the home are being cared for in family day care.

The rest of those children whose parents work are cared for by relatives — often older siblings who are still young enough to need watching themselves — or are in some sort of private-home setting. The Committee for Economic Development report, while it is not specific about sources of funding, nonetheless says that expanded day-care and preschool programs should be a public responsibility.

On Capitol Hill, nearly 15 years after President Nixon zapped as "anti-family" proposals to create a system of broad support for families, which would have included day-care and preschool programs, the proposals are back. This time, however, they are billed as "pro-family."

The most ambitious bill is the Act for Better Child Care Services, introduced with bipartisan sponsorship in November. States would distribute the funds, and schools would certainly be potential child-care providers. In addition, the bill sets aside 10 percent of its funds to make Head Start and Chapter 1 programs in elementary schools into full-day, full-year programs.

What is unique about this bill is its whopping price tag of $2.5 billion annually. In view of the federal deficit and other priorities in Congress, asking for so much new money seems more than presumptuous — it seems to be folly. But as Helen Blank, an expert on child care with the Children's Defense Fund, said, "We have to have a large federal role in child care because we have a disaster on our hands."

The various interest groups that are pushing for day care still have their differences. For example, the Committee for Economic Development report says that child care "should provide intellectual stimulation and opportunities to learn and reinforce language and socialization skills."

If public school educators accept a central role in providing day care, then it will be to their benefit — and to the benefit of millions of children — that they fight for a level of federal and state funding that will provide for high-quality programs. A public that believes that all it needs is baby-sitting will be willing to pay only as much as it pays for baby-sitting.

U.S. Worried About Fate Of Salvador Relationship

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even before Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte learned he was suffering from cancer, the Reagan administration was concerned that the special relationship it had forged with El Savador under Duarte's leadership could begin to wane.

Duarte has been a favorite of Republicans and Democrats alike in the Congress, and since his election four years ago, El Salvador has received $1.5 billion in U.S. economic aid and $455 million in military aid, levels unmatched elsewhere in Latin America.

But Duarte's Christian Democratic Party is deeply split, raising the clear possibility that victory in the 1989 presidential elections may go to the rightist ARENA party, which made a strong showing in legislative elections last March.

Many in Congress are wary of ARENA because of the party's reputed links to death squad activities, and there is some doubt among State Department officials about whether the lawmakers will be as generous with an ARENA-run government as they have with Duarte at the helm.

Duarte was already a lame duck president when, according to U.S. officials, he learned that the cancer which has affected his liver and stomach is terminal.

"The only question is how long he will live," said one official, adding that his survival may only be a matter of months. Spokesmen at Walter Reed Army Hospital, where Duarte has been confined since Wednesday, have discussed Duarte's condition only in general terms.

According to a State Department official, Duarte's illness has prompted discussions among Salvadoran officials about the possibility of Duarte's resigning.

ARENA soon will begin laying the groundwork for an effort to portray the party as a moderate force in Salvadoran politics that contrasts with the unsavory image it has among many in Congress.

The party's nominee for president is Alfredo Cristiani, a U.S.-educated businessmen who is widely admired by U.S. diplomats. He will visit Washington June 20-24, partly in hopes of convincing members of Congress that ARENA, much like the major U.S. parties, believes in democracy, free enterprise and anti-communism.

But the close ties the United States currently has with El Salvador could suffer a setback if, in the event of an ARENA victory, Cristiani emerges merely as a front man for another party chieftain, Roberto D'Aubuisson.

D'Aubuisson, a former military officer and a founder of ARENA, was once characterized by former U.S. Ambassador Robert White as a "pathological killer."

But Cristiani should be able to win backing from the U.S. Congress if he is perceived to be in control of the government, according to officials.

Continued U.S. support for El Salvador is considered crucial if the fledgling democratic system there is to survive the challenge of a determined leftist insurgency.

Much of the U.S. strategy in Central America is based on the importance of preventing a guerrilla victory in El Salvador. And it was only with Duarte's 1984 victory that Congress was able to embrace the administration strategy.

He is seen here not only as a man with impeccable democratic credentials but also as perhaps the most pro-American president in Latin America. Once, during a White House welcoming ceremony, he kissed an American flag.

Duarte's tenure has been marked by both great achievement as well as tragedy and disappointment. He has worked hard to create a democratic climate in El Salvador and has shown himself to be willing to make and carry out decisions that are unpopular with the military.

Although there has been an increase recently in politically motivated killings, the figures are only a fraction of what they were when the civil war started eight years ago.

Italy Will Take U.S. Jets Ordered To Leave Spain

By VICTOR L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) — The Italian government on Saturday agreed to a NATO request to accept 72 U.S. fighter planes being evicted from Spain.

Defense Minister Valerio Zanone said the government deemed it important that the planes remain in Europe to protect the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's southern flank. He said moving them to Italy was the "only suitable solution" to keeping the wing in service and avoiding an act of "unilateral disarmament."

The United States, under an accord reached in January with Spain, must remove the F-16s from the Torrejon air base near Madrid by 1991. The planes make up the U.S. Air Force's 401st Tactical Fighter Wing. The Pentagon has said it would have to disband the unit unless a final decision on moving them to another European base was made by August.

Zanone said there was no reason for the concern over the transfer expressed by the Warsaw Pact, since NATO was only establishing a new "peacetime base." The F-16s can carry nuclear weapons, but Zanone emphasized they will be armed only with conventional weapons.

Warsaw Pact countries are concerned that their territorial airspace could come within range of the aircraft when the planes are moved from Spain to Italy.

The Italian government has reportedly been considering several sites in southern Italy as possible bases for the F-16s, but Zanone said no decision has been reached yet.

Zanone said NATO will meet the entire cost of relocating the planes, estimated at about $500 million.

Italy's decision, made at a Cabinet meeting presided over by Christian Democrat Premier Ciriaco De Mita, had been expected following the formal request to Italy by NATO defense ministers in Brussels on May 26.

At that time, Lord Carrington, the alliance secretary-general, said the planes represent "a considerable portion of our strength in the southern region."

Italian government officials have said the transfer of the F-16s would be examined by Parliament later this month but that a vote would likely not be needed.

The Communists, Italy's second-largest party, immediately criticized the decision. Aldo Tortorella, a party leader, denounced what he called the government's haste in deciding and its lack of "national dignity."

But Deputy Premier Gianni De Michelis, whose Socialist Party had previously expressed some doubts about the transfer, told reporters that the decision was taken with the support of all coalition partners.

Rain Offers Relief

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Rainstorms Saturday broke a heat wave that killed at least 450 people in New Delhi and the northern states of Rajasthan, Punjab and Haryana in the past week.

The weather service said the temperature in the capital dropped from 100 to 82 degrees after the rain began.

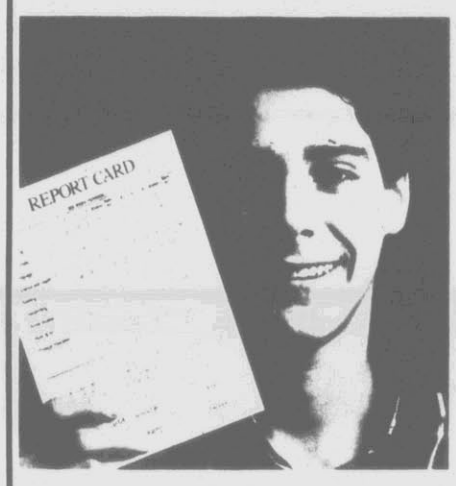

Light showers and a 7-degree drop in temperature were reported in Rajasthan, which had been hardest hit by the unrelenting sun.

Heavy rains were reported in neighboring Punjab and Haryana states, where high winds took down trees and power lines near the joint state capital of Chandigarh, the United News of India said.

The death toll in Rajasthan from a week of intense heat rose to 393 Saturday with 11 more deaths reported, the news agency said.

At least 60 other deaths from sunstroke and other heat-related illnesses were reported through the week in other northern states.

Rampants Capture Eastern Title

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

For Rose coach Ronald Vincent, two plays keyed his team's 5-2 win over Richmond County in the Eastern 4A baseball championship game Saturday night.

Rose led 2-1 early on but overcame a bases-loaded situation in the fourth thanks to an alert double play on a squeeze attempt by catcher Axel Smith. Then in the bottom of the fourth, Rose came back to score three more runs, keyed by a two-run single by David Leisten.

"Two big plays, the squeeze attempt and the hit by Leisten," Vincent said. "(The double play) was the turning point. In addition to that, we come back in the bottom of the inning and score three runs."

Jimmy Poplin had reached on a passed ball third strike. Scott Clark reached off an error and Graham Shepard walked to load the bases. After a pop out, Ronnie Watkins came up and tried to lay down a bunt to squeeze Poplin home, but Smith picked up the ball, tagged Poplin out and threw to third to get Clark and end the inning.

"We were on the road and we were playing for the tie," said Richmond County coach Bobby Rainey. "It was a gamble and it didn't work. It's the first time in 25 years of coaching that I've seen a double play on a squeeze attempt."

Smith said he had a pretty good idea the Red Raiders would put the squeeze on.

"I told Jamie to look out for the squeeze if he (the batter) squared up," he said. "When he did, I got the guy coming down the baseline and then threw to third."

Brewington and Dallas McPherson both walked to open the bottom of the fourth and moved up on a sacrifice by Heath Clark.

After one out, Leisten singled straight up the middle to score two runs. He went to second on the throw home and stole third. Poplin tried to throw him out but overthrew the third baseman to allow Leisten to score Rose's final run.

"That put us up by four runs at the time and that's a long way to go with Tom throwing," Vincent said. "We bunted a little bit more than we usually do. We tried to do things we normally don't do, fake buts and other things. We wanted to make something happen."

Brewington got the start for Rose and only gave up one hit, but shoulder problems chased him after four innings.

"The inning before, he said he didn't feel too good," Vincent said. "He came off the field before the fifth and said he couldn't go."

Brewington was scheduled to start for Rose last Tuesday in the semifinals against Raleigh Athens Drive, but was shelved because of soreness in his shoulder.

Moye, though, was ready to go for Rose. He gave up two hits over three innings but struck out four batters, including two in a row to open the seventh.

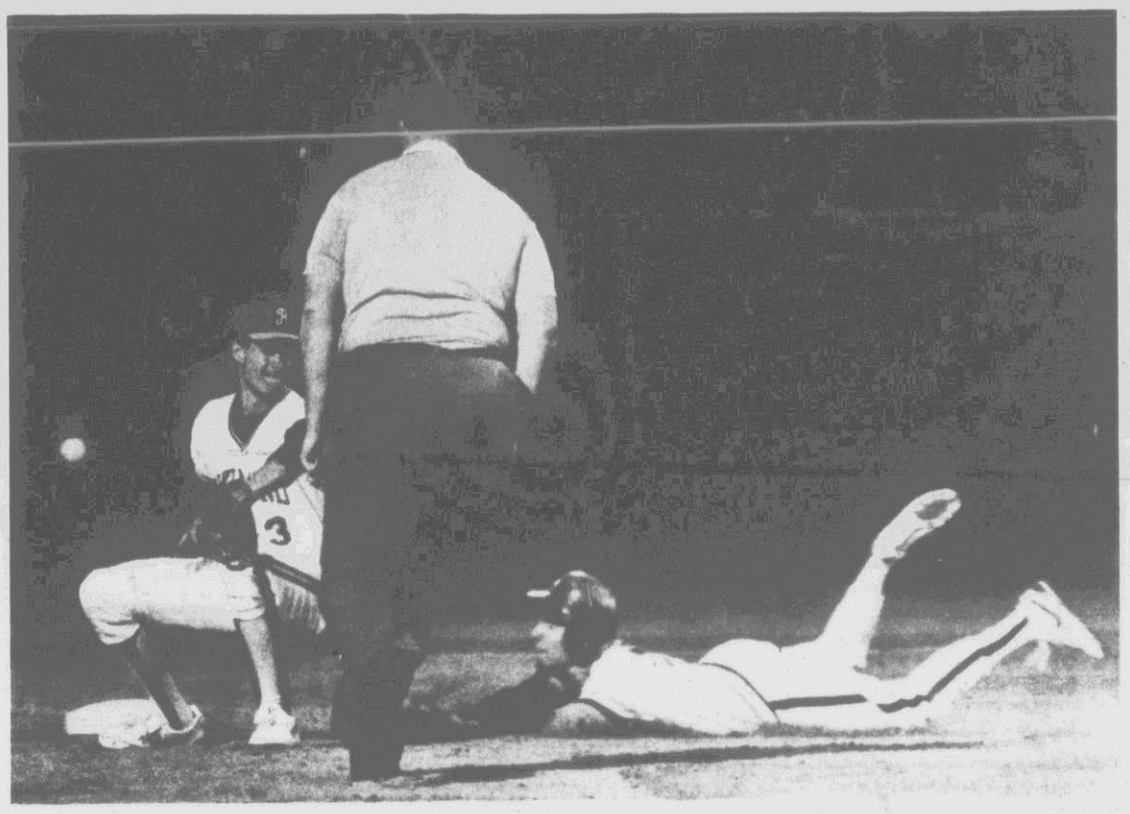

"I was really hoping Jamie could go the whole way," Moye said. "But he's been having shoulder problems. The crowd (estimated at 2,500) helped me a lot. They got me through the last inning."

Richmond County got its only lead of the game in the first when Mike Thomas, who had two of the Red Raiders' three hits, doubled in Ricky Nantz, who had reached on an error.

The Red Raiders scored their second run in the fifth the exact same way as Thomas singled in Nantz to make it 5-2. The Red Raiders put one man on with two out in the seventh but failed to advance him as Nantz grounded out to end the game.

Rose came back to score two runs in the third. With one out, Tim Moore singled and Leisten was hit by a pitch

Worthy Sparks Lakers Past Dallas

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — For the second time in the playoffs, the Los Angeles Lakers had to win a particular game or their dream of becoming the first NBA team in 19 years to repeat as champion would become a nightmare.

For the second time, they came through.

James Worthy scored 14 of his 28 points in the third period Saturday as the Lakers beat the Dallas Mavericks 117-102 in the seventh and deciding game of the Western Conference finals.

"Winning championships doesn't mean anything to anyone anymore, especially if you're the Lakers or the (Boston) Celtics," Worthy said. "You've got to do something extraordinary. And this is an opportunity for us to do something like that."

The Celtics are the last NBA team to win back-to-back championships, accomplishing the feat in 1968 and 1969. The Lakers put the Mavericks away by outscoring them 15-2 to turn a precarious 100-94 lead midway through the fourth quarter into an insurmountable 115-96 advantage.

Dallas became the second straight team to extend the Lakers to the limit in the 1988 playoffs. Los Angeles had to go seven games to eliminate Utah in the Western Conference semifinals, winning the final game 109-98.

"I think we have to be strengthened by having to compete down to the wire," Lakers coach Pat Riley said. "We have a legitimate chance to repeat for the first time in the nine years this team has been whole. We have the opportunity, now it's up to us to do it."

The Lakers have won four championships since Magic Johnson joined them in 1979. But Riley said something has gone wrong in their first three attempts to repeat.

Last June, Riley guaranteed the Lakers would repeat. Now, it's the Pistons who stand in their way.

"The one thing we have to gear up for is their defense, which is just awesome," Riley said. "They are primarily a running team which can be as explosive as anyone."

Johnson had 24 points, 11 assists and nine rebounds Saturday. Byron Scott had 21 points and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar contributed 17 for the Lakers.

"Earvin (Johnson) just came today focused and wanting to move on," Riley said. "He's the best."

"Basically, I was just ready to play," Johnson said. "I knew it was up to me to get us going. I didn't want to wait until the second half to get involved in the offense."

Johnson had 16 of his points in the first half.

"It was our game all the way," he said. "We were playing our game throughout the game. The key was getting the boards. We were scoring the whole time. What was keeping them in was the offensive boards."

Mark Aguirre led the Mavericks with 24 points. Roy Tarpley had 18 and James Donaldson and Derek Harper added 15 each for Dallas. Donaldson pulled down a game-high 14 rebounds and Harper had 11 assists.

The Mavericks, in the conference finals for the first time, gave the Lakers all they could handle most of the way Saturday. But the defending champions had enough to maintain their perfect playoff record at home against Dallas, winning for the 10th time in as many post-season games between the teams at the Forum.

"They showed whey they are the defending champion," Dallas coach John MacLeod said. "Their players showed today how you rise to the occasion. They made the big plays.

"We gave them a good run. With about six minutes left, we were still in a very decent position. Then they just took over.

"They're the best team in the league. In the last four or five years, they're the most dominant team I've seen since I've been in basketball. They've been just awesome."

Form prevailed in the Lakers' seventh game against Dallas as the home team won each and every game. Los Angeles had won the first three games at the Forum by margins of 15, 22 and 17 points. The Mavericks rode fourth-quarter surges to their three wins at Reunion Arena.

Worthy made seven of his nine field goal attempts in the third quarter as the Lakers took the lead for good.

The Lakers held a one-point lead at halftime. The teams played on even terms until five straight points midway through the period — on a

McNeill, Holec Top Athletes

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

Both Lee McNeill and Chris Holec have managed to rise from obscurity to the athletic limelight in recent years, and for their efforts have been named the Daily Reflector's Collegiate Athletes of the Year for 1987-88.

For the past four years, McNeill has been an All-American in the 100 meters for the Pirates and has also helped their 4X100 meter relay team maintain one of the top rankings in the county.

Holec, a former three-sport star at Rose High School, has gone from being a walk-on at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro women's basketball team to becoming the starting center and one of the Lady Spartans' top players in less than one year.

.Holec was the second-leading scorer and rebounder on the team, averaging 11.8 points and 7.6 rebounds a game as UNC-G finished third in the NCAA Division III National Tournament.

"Lee is in his fourth NCAA Championship meet and has been All-American all four years," said East Carolina track coach Bill Carson said. "That is a hard thing for a sprinter to do, to stay on a level that keeps you with the best. He has avoided injury to a great degree. He has had the mental capacity to stay (competitive) like that and it is hard to do.

"He has allowed us to remain (competitive nationally). We've had our relay team to the nationals each year. We've been able to stay consistent."

Those accomplishments are even more unique when you consider McNeill's background.

McNeill is a native of St. Pauls, a small rural community below Fayetteville. When he first arrived on the ECU campus, he was painfully shy, but he has used his prowess on the track to travel all across the world.

"(Initially) he was very shy and wouldn't look you in the eye," Carson said. But he started getting into the limelight and all of sudden he was in places like Tokyo and Australia as a freshman and that was really something."

Pretty heady stuff for a guy who had rarely ventured out of North Carolina before he began his collegiate career. So it's understandable if McNeill seemed a little bit dazed and confused by his new surroundings.

More than anything else, it was a matter of adjusting to a new world.

"I didn't know many people at first," McNeill said. "Mostly I kept to myself until I got to know people. But, then I started to get to know more people during my freshman year and that made it easier."

The transformation, according to Carson, was clearly evident.

"Now he's outgoing and very friendly," Carson said. "What brings that out is the other athletes. He has great relationships with the other athletes. They genuinely enjoy his company."

McNeill is in his final year of collegiate competition but Carson hopes that his involvement with the ECU track program is just beginning.

"My hopes are that Lee gets his situation hooked up and stays in Greenville and becomes like a graduate assistant type thing," he said. "I wouldn't be afraid to turn a group of kids over to him.

"He's very helpful to me. Often we'll be riding down the road just talking and he'll come up with something that is good for the program. Like, on our way out here (to the NCAA Track and Field Championships in Eugene, Ore.), we had to bring a substitute along. Lee said to put him in with him and he'd take him under his wing."

Last summer, McNeill participated on three gold-medal winning teams. He was a part of winning teams at the United States Sports Festival in Durham, the Pan American Games in Indianapolis and the World University Games in in Rome.

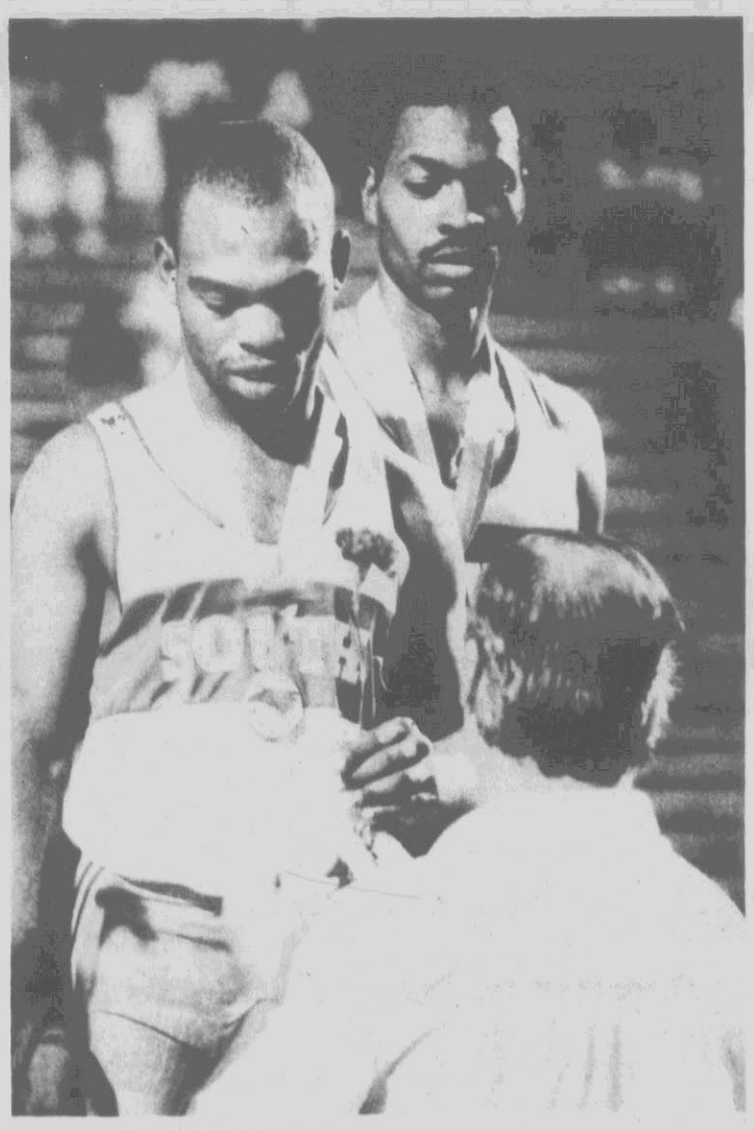

"He really got a lot out of that, (but) a lot of it was pure luck. He was the second alternate for any of them (the relay teams). When he was finished with the TAC (Track Athletic Council) meet, he was sixth. So the fact that he was going to be the second alternate meant that we had to do some thinking.

"I said to Lee that I would go ahead and do it (go as the second alternate). From what I could tell, Calvin Smith was not going to come back and Mark Witherspoon was hurt."

The U.S. Track Coaches had decreed that in order to participate in the World University games, sprinters must take part in the Pan Am games, which effectively knocked out Smith, who had contractual obligations elsewhere. Witherspoon's injury moved McNeill into the fourth spot.

"I had a little insight into that and I

South Brunswick Nips Rams, 7-6

SOUTHPORT — South Brunswick scored the go-ahead run in the second inning and held off a late charge by Greene Central to take a 7-6 win in the Eastern 2A baseball championship Saturday night.

The game was originally suspended Friday night in the top of the second with the score tied 2-2.

South Brunswick came back Saturday night and pushed across a run in the bottom of the second as Jamie Brown singled and Scott Barfield walked. After one out, Bian Semmens singled to load the bases. Wynn Beck then followed by drawing a walk to force in the go-ahead run.

In the final inning, the Rams went down three in a row to end the game and their season at 23-2.

Scott Gales went 2-4 to lead South Brunswick.

The Rams led once, after scoring two runs in the opening inning. T.J. Johnson singled. Anthony Jones walked. Tommy Eason also walked. Shay Beaman hit into a fielder's choice which put out Eason but allowed Johnson to score. Jones also scored on the play due to an error.

Semmens got the win with a three hitter, striking out 11 and walking 10.

Hillin Wins Bud 200 Race

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Bobby Hillin took the lead with five laps remaining Saturday and won the Budweiser 200 NASCAR Grand National race under a caution flag at Dover Downs International Speedway.

Hillin, of Midland, Tex., was racing second behind Brad Teague coming to a caution flag but passed the leader just before reaching the flag. Teague ran out of gas a few laps later and wound up fifth.

Nineteen of the 36 starters finished running in the race that had five caution flags that totaled 27 laps.

The final caution flag with six laps remaining came after Larry Pollard crashed into the wall on turn four. Pollard was taken by ambulance to a nearby hospital. He was listed in serious condition in intensive care Saturday evening, said Al Robinson, public relations director at the speedway.

The victory was Hillin's first in a Grand National race and it was worth $9,375.

Hillin, who raced on Hoosier tires, finished the 200-lap event in one hour, 46 minutes, 55 seconds, averaging 112.237 miles per hour, and became the 12th different winner in 12 Grand National races this year.

to put men at first and second. Smith then singled in Moore, but Leisten was picked off at second. Pinch runner Jay Surles later scored off a single by Dave Daniels to make it 2-1.

"We didn't swing the bats and that makes (mistakes) a lot more paramount," Rainey said.

Rose moves to 26-0 on the year while the Red Raiders fall to 21-5.

"I can't say it's sunk in yet," Vincent said. "It's been our goal since last June to get here. We feel fortunate to be there. This is what we've been playing for."

Rose advances to play Charlotte Harding in a three-game championship series next week at a day and time to be decided.

Eugene McNeill Finishes Sixth

EUGENE, Ore. — East Carolina's Eugene McNeill finished sixth in the NCAA Track and Field Championship's 200-meter dash Friday night here and was the only Pirate to score in this year's meet.

His brother, Lee Vernon McNeill failed to qualify for the finals for the first time in his career, while the ECU 4X100-meter relay team also failed to advance past the preliminaries.

Eugene McNeill completed his 200-meter run in 20.61 seconds. First place was won by Lorenze Daniels of Mississippi State, who set a new collegiate, NCAA meet and field record of 19.87 seconds.

Lee Vernon McNeill, who was attempting to move to the finals of the 100-meter dash again, finished third in his qualifying heat in 10.38. The three heat winners, along with the five other fastest times advanced to the finals. McNeill's time was only 10th best among the field.

The 4X100 team of the McNeill brothers, Ike Robinson and Junior Robinson, also failed to qualify for the finals. They finished sixth and last in their qualifying heat in a time of 39.98 seconds.

Coca-Cola.....16
Eveready.....0

Jacob Zonn tossed a one-hit shutout as Coca-Cola ripped Eveready, 16-0, in the North State Little League Saturday.

Zonn struck out 10 and walked none in getting the shutout.

Coke got all the runs it needed in the third, scoring three times. With one away, Steven Salargo singled and moved up on a wild pitch. Jeffrey Smith singled and stole second. Robert Barnes reached on an error, allowing both Salargo and Smith to score. Barnes moved all the way to third on the play, scoring on a hit by James Ebron.

Coke added eight more runs in the fourth and five in the fifth.

Lions.....9
Clark Construction.....8

The Lions pushed over an unearned run in the bottom of the sixth inning to squeeze out a 9-8 victory over Bill Clark Construction in the North State Little League Saturday.

The Lions scored first, getting two in the first but Clark came back with three in the second. The Lions tied it up with one in the bottom of the second, 3-3. Clark went back out with two in the third and added another in the fourth for a 6-3 edge.

But the Lions rallied for four in the fourth to regain the lead, 7-6, adding an eighth run in the fifth. Clark rallied for two in the sixth to tie it up once more.

Then, in the bottom of the sixth, Charles Colson reached on a fielder's choice. Grainger Hill singled and both moved up an extra base on an error. Bryan Fagundus reached on an error, scoring Colson with the winning run.

Sportsworld.....8
Optimists.....4

Sportworld broke a deadlock atop the North State Little League with an 8-4 victory over the Optimists Saturday. The two teams went into the game tied for first place in the league standings at 9-2 each.

The Optimists struck first, pushing over two runs in the second. But Sportworld tied it up with two in the third, then took the lead for good with four in the fourth.

Mike Worthington led off with fourth with a single and Richard Ray also got a hit. Garry Haddock singled to load the bases and an error allowed Worthington score. Clyde Little doubled in Ray and Wade Fickling got a hit, scoring Haddock. Little scored on a sacrifice fly by Kevin Smith.

Sportsworld added two more in the fifth. The other two Optimist runs came over in the fourth.

Little and Ray each had two hits for Sportsworld while Dearl Powell had two to pace the Optimists.

Exchange.....15
Pepsi-Cola.....2

D.J. Miles hit a three-run homer to spark Exchange to a 15-2 victory over Pepsi-Cola in the Tar Heel Little League Saturday.

Pepsi drew first blood, scoring twice in the top of the first, but after that, Miles allowed only one more hit the rest of the way.

Exchange got a run in the first, then pushed over nine in the second to wrap it up. With one out, Miles walked and Jason Lipscomb singled. Chris Joyner also got a hit and an error let Miles score. Derrin Miles walked and Neil Boardman singled in Lipscomb. Ben Hahn grounded out, scoring Joyner. Greg Pearsall walked and Derek Hopkins also drew a walk, forcing over Derrin Miles. Powell Havens singled in two runs and D.J. Miles then finished it off with his home run.

Exchange added three in the third, one in the fourth and one in the fifth.

MacKenzie Security...10
1st Federal.....2

Craig Brannon tossed a no-hitter as MacKenzie Security gained a 10-2 win over First Federal in the Tar Heel Little League Saturday.

MacKenzie scored a run in the top of the first but First Federal matched it in its half of the frame. MacKenzie then went back on top with one in the second.

Another run in the third proved to be the clincher. Monte Roundtree reached on an error and stole second. He took third on a passed ball and scored on Williams' single.

MacKenzie then added seven more in the sixth. First Federal got its other run in the bottom of the sixth.

Jarman's Auto.....10
Wellcome.....3

Brandon Pierce hit a solo home run as Jarman's Auto rolled up a 10-3 victory over Wellcome in the Tar Heel Little League Saturday.

Jarman's took the lead with a pair of runs in the first and added another in the second.

Brannon's homer, in the third, proved to be the clincher, making it 4-0.

Jarman's added three more in the fourth and three in the sixth. Wellcome scored twice in the fourth and once in the fifth.

Nicky Phillips tossed a three-hitter for the win and also had three hits to lead the Jarman's attack. Cotton Williamson added two hits. No one had more than one for Wellcome.

With a short list of exceptions.

With "Total Care," we'll take care of all covered parts and repairs–and even most of your regular maintenance service for 3 years or 60,000 miles, whichever comes first.

You take care of insurance, gas and tires. We'll take care of practically everything else. (Ask to see the plan certificate at your Dealer.) "Total Care" combines the benefits of the Ford ESP TOTAL Plan and the Maintenance and Wear Option. And it's the perfect complement for a pair of worldclass cars.

XR4Ti. A single minute in the driver's seat will say more than all the magazine articles praising it. The supple but firm seat, the way every gauge meets your eye, the way every control is at your fingertips, and the way the multi-port, electronically fuel-injected turbocharged 175-horsepower 4-cylinder engine propels you from 0-to-60 in 7.8 seconds. This is what they mean when they say "driver's car."

Scorpio. The rear seat has nearly eight inches more legroom than the Mercedes 190E and a very rare feature...power reclining seatbacks. A flick of the wrist adjusts what Automobile magazine suggests may be "the most comfortable seats in the industry." Add to that a silken multi-port fuel-injected V-6, 4-wheel-disc Anti-lock Brake System (ABS) and a fully independent suspension and you have a car that makes driving an absolute pleasure.

Scorpio also comes with some impressive support programs. Like the Guaranteed Resale Value program, and the RoadCare Plan that includes benefits like emergency road and tow reimbursements, a 24-hour toll-free phone service and much more.*

THE LEASE

More and more motorists are discovering the benefits of leasing. Your Lincoln-Mercury Dealer can show you how a Ford Credit Red Carpet Lease may be the best plan for you. Leasing frees your cash. You can use your available bank line of credit for other purposes. Ford Credit's monthly lease payments are so attractive, you can concentrate on what you're getting instead of what you're paying. See your Lincoln-Mercury Dealer for a Red Carpet Lease that will put you behind the wheel of a Scorpio for much less than you'd expect.

Rich Past Didn't Help '88 Celtics

The 16 green-and-white championship banners hanging above the old, splintered court will not be shifted to make room for a 17th. Not this year.

The NBA's most successful franchise, worn down by age, injuries and unproductive bench, failed. There will be no seventh game at the Boston Garden Sunday.

Neither the luck of the Irish, the legacy of Bob Cousy, Bill Russell and John Havlicek nor the lure of winning one for K.C. Jones worked. Basketball is played on the court, not in the memory. A rich past may inspire a player but it won't make his jump shot go in.

The Boston Celtics, who once won eight consecutive NBA titles and reached the final in each of the last four seasons, were finished off Friday night by Detroit in Pontiac, Mich. The Pistons' 95-90 victory gave them a 4-2 triumph in the Eastern Conference final.

"Detroit was the better team this year," Celtics guard Dennis Johnson said, "but we've been on top a long time and we'll be back."

In the six-game series, Boston made only 41.1 percent of its shots after leading the league with a 52.1 regular-season mark.

Old reliable Larry Bird made 52.7 percent of his shots and averaged 29.9 points per game in the regular season. In the six games against Detroit, his shooting percentage was 37.6 and his scoring average was 19.8. In the last game, he made only 4 of 17 shots, missing many open jumpers, and scored just 16 points.

The Pistons — and other teams — have caught up to Boston. When a season starts, the Celtics no longer are a near-certainty to be playing when it ends.

"I've been here in the league for a while now and all of a sudden you realize that these chances and opportunities aren't going to come along the rest of your life," forward Kevin McHale said.

"It's a very disappointing and empty feeling. You know you've got to grab it while it's there."

K.C. Jones did. He reached the final in his first four years as coach and won twice. But on May 3, he announced that this would be his last season in that job. On June 3, he coached his last game.

"I was really bound and determined to try not to let K.C. lose his last game in the Silverdome," McHale said. "He's had such a great career as a player, a coach, been successful. I didn't want it to end like this."

Jones won 12 titles in the past 24 seasons as a player, assistant coach and coach in the NBA. His quarter-century ended on a sour note.

He said the Celtics, starting before his tenure as coach and continuing through it, "have met the challenge of all these teams coming in with their best effort and have managed to stay on top on the highest level of basketball through all these years, except for a couple.

"I had the pleasure of riding that kind of success these past five years."

Now it's up to Jimmy Rodgers to recreate it. He takes over after five years as Jones' assistant.

He appears ready to depart from his successor's reluctance to bring young blood into a tradition-laden team.

The limited playing time of rookies Reggie Lewis, Brad Lohaus and Mark Acres received proved insufficient preparation when they were needed in the sixth game because of injuries to starters Robert Parish, Danny Ainge and Johnson.

"We have a great system here. We have one of the great starting fives that's ever played the game and we intend to build on that," Rodgers said.

"I don't foresee a great number of things changing. I think that's why our transition is going to be smooth here. I think we've got a solid group of veterans to work with."

Most, if not all, of those veterans have passed the midpoint of their careers. Some — like Johnson and Parish — may have just a year or two left. Four starters are at least 30 years old — Parish, Johnson, Bird and McHale.

"We've got some youth ... that we have to blend in and that's a good starting point," Rodgers said.

The Celtics' domination of the East had been slipping for some time.

In this year's conference semifinal, Boston trailed Atlanta 3-2 before winning the last two games by just two points each.

Fumbling Bosox Fall To Jays

BOSTON (AP) — Toronto Manager Jimy Williams says "your starting pitcher sets the tone of the game." Boston Manager John McNamara might disagree, particularly a quality start by ace Roger Clemens was wasted.

The Blue Jays capitalized on Boston fielding lapses for three runs, two unearned, off Clemens in seven innings and then hammered two relievers in a seven-run ninth Saturday for a 10-2 victory over the Red Sox.

"The score doesn't show it, but that was a close ballgame," Williams said. "Jim Clancy did a nice job."

Clancy, 3-6, blanked Boston until two-out homers by Ellis Burks, his fourth, and Dwight Evans, also his fourth, in the eighth inning.

Then he retired and breathed a sigh of relief as Kelly Gruber hit a three-run homer off Lee Smith and Sil Campusano lined a three-run double off Zach Crouch in the ninth.

"You don't expect to win a game 10-2 against Clemens, but he really had nothing to do with it," Clancy said after beating Boston for the first time since 1984. "Everything happened after he left."

"That was an ugly game all around," McNamara said. "We've been playing ugly baseball.

"It just blew up in our faces in the ninth after we moved into good position in the eighth. Lee just wasn't effective today."

Clemens, who became a father for the second time last Wednesday, returned to Boston from Houston late Friday night. He threw only 107 pitches, but was excused by McNamara after allowing just one unearned run, four hits and striking out nine.

His league-leading ERA dropped to 1.78 and he increased his strikeout total to a major-league leading 125.

"He's been through a lot the last few days and after the sixth I asked him for one more inning," McNamara said. "Bob Stanley did his job in the eighth, but Smith and Crouch couldn't get them out in the ninth."

Nelson Liriano, who began the game with a .188 average, raised it 24 points with four singles, his first four-hit game in the major leagues. He had two hits off Clemens, a bunt single off Stanley and and RBI single off Smith.

The victory extended Toronto's winning streak to five games, improving the team record to 26-29. Boston dropped its third in a row and back to .500 for the first time since April 10.

They made it 3-0 with two unearned runs in the sixth.

Jesse Barfield opened the inning with a fly ball to center that was dropped by Burks, who appeared to be pulling up to avoid a collision with Evans.

Liriano singled Barfield to third, Tony Fernandez doubled home one run and Bell's sacrifice fly scored the other.

Former Champ Moore Killed

HOLMDEL, N.J. (AP) — Former WBA junior middleweight champion Davey Moore was killed Friday when an unoccupied vehicle rolled down his driveway and ran over him as he tried to stop it, his trainer and police said Saturday. Moore was 28.

Able Abel, Moore's trainer for the past few years, said Moore slipped on the wet ground while trying to stop the runaway vehicle after it broke loose. Moore was then dragged downhill under the vehicle, Abel said.

Holmdel police said Moore's wife, Quadria, summoned them to the couple's home at 7:45 p.m. Officers and emergency medical technicians found Moore pinned with no vital signs under the midsection of a Dodge Raider, dispatcher Careon Fry said.

A tow truck was called to the Moore's home and lifted the vehicle off him, Fry said. Moore was taken to Bayshore Community Hospital where he was pronounced dead at 9:20 p.m., Fry said.

An autopsy performed Saturday showed Moore died of asphyxiation caused by a compressed chest, Fry said.

Born in the Bronx, N.Y., Moore won five Golden Gloves titles in New York and made the 1980 U.S. Olympic team that never competed in Moscow because of a boycott, Abel said in a telephone interview.

Moore turned pro after the Olympics and won the WBA junior middleweight title in just his ninth fight by stopping Tadashi Mihara of Japan in the sixth round of a 1982 fight in Tokyo. Moore retained his title three times before losing it to Roberto Duran on June 16, 1983 when he was stopped in the eighth round.

Moore had one other title shot, losing an IBF junior middleweight championship bout to Buster Drayton last year. He continued to fight and won his final fight on April 30 by stopping Gary Coates in the sixth round of a fight in Staten Island, N.Y., Abel said.

"Davey's training was erratic and he had a lot of discipline problems," Abel said. "He had turned the corner though and was pointed straight."

Reds Snap Six-Game Skid

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Reds officially welcomed back Pete Rose Saturday. But the Cincinnati manager never thought he was gone.

Cincinnati had lost twice since Rose returned from a 30-day suspension on June 1 before defeating the Los Angeles Dodgers 5-2. It was the first time they had won with Rose in the dugout since April 26.

"I don't look at it as my first victory in 38 days," said Rose, whose team also snapped a six-game losing streak. "To me, it's the first win in seven days. I'd like to think that the guys felt I was still a part of the team during the suspension."

Barry Larkin opened the ninth against Orel Hershiser with a single. One out later, Kal Daniels grounded out to Dodger first baseman Mike Marshall, who stepped on first but threw late to second base in an effort to double up Larkin. After Eric Davis was hit by a Hershiser pitch, Paul O'Neill sent a 3-1 curveball into the right-field bullpen for his third homer.

"Even though he (Hershiser) had given up 10 hits at that point, he deserved to be out there," O'Neill said. "You don't see a pitcher like that hang a pitch like that very often."

Hershiser would have been satisfied to walk O'Neill.

"I was trying to pitch around him," Hershiser said. "I knew that the next hitter, Dave Concepcion, was about 1-20 against me. It was just a good piece of hitting by O'Neill."

Cincinnati starter Ron Robinson allowed seven hits, all singles, in six innings and retired 13 of 14 hitters during one stretch. Frank Williams and Jose Rijo, 6-1, combined to allow one hit in three innings.

"Rijo just loves the ball," said Rose. "He wants it every day and his arm is beginning to remind me of (former Cincinnati reliever Pedro) Borbon."

Rose was pleased with his team's overall performance.

"We did all the right things today," Rose said, "Our starters and relievers came through and we certainly didn't lack any hustle."

Cincinnati took a 1-0 lead in the second when O'Neill and Nick Esasky opened the inning with singles and advanced on Bo Diaz's groundout. After Jeff Treadway was walked intentionally, Robinson's chopped grounder to Hershiser scored O'Neill.

The Dodgers took a 2-1 lead in the second on Steve Sax' two-run single but Cincinnati tied the game in the seventh. Treadway doubled, took third when Los Angeles right fielder Mike Davis bobbled the ball and scored on Chris Sabo's double.

The Dodgers have 32 consecutive singles over a three-game span. The last Los Angeles extra-base hit was Sax's seventh-inning double against the New York Mets on Wednesday.

The Dodgers have 38 hits during the month of June, 37 of them singles.

San Francisco.....8
Houston.....2

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Matt Williams returned to the San Francisco Giants with a lot of catching up to do against major league pitchers.

He hit a grand slam Saturday against one of the best, Nolan Ryan, as the Giants beat the Houston Astros 8-2.

"I know he's a great pitcher and has been around for a long time. But it's not really more gratifying to get my first grand slam off him than anyone else," said the 22-year-old Williams, who was called up from the minors Friday.

He got his first taste of the majors last year, mostly filling in at shortstop when Jose Uribe was injured, and batted .188. He was 0-for-4 against Ryan and struck out three times against baseball's all-time strikeout leader.

"I'm here to fill in for Jose again, and it's a shame that it has to be like this," Williams said, alluding to the reason for Uribe's absence.

The regular shortstop's wife died Wednesday of a heart attack; Uribe will be absent for about two weeks.

Mike Aldrete hit a two-run homer off Ryan, 5-3, in the fourth inning, and Williams' homer capped a six-run fifth. Williams was 0-for-2, striking out both times, before hitting the homer in his second game this season with the Giants.

"I had good stuff but I wasn't real consistent with it. I threw some good pitches and hung some," said Ryan, who struck out 10 batters for the 177th time in his career. "I made mistakes on both home runs. I gave both guys pitches to hit and in situations where they were looking to hit the ball out of the park."

"I hit a changeup — about an 89 mile-an-hour changeup," said Williams, who had a four-homer game May 25 with Phoenix of the Pacific Coast League. "That pitch is probably the toughest to hit against a pitcher like that."

Mike LaCoss, 4-4, left in the sixth after allowing Alan Ashby's two-out, two-run single, the Astros' fifth hit. LaCoss walked three and struck out three. Joe Price allowed two hits over 3 1-3 innings for his third save.

It was the first homer of the season for both Aldrete and Williams. Aldrete broke a scoreless tie in the fourth by connecting after Candy Maldonado drew a leadoff walk.

LaCoss opened the fifth with a single and Brett Butler followed with his third hit of the game, beating out a bunt. Robby Thompson's sacrifice moved the runners up and Jeffrey Leonard gave the Giants a 3-0 lead with an RBI single.

After walking Aldrete intentionally to load the bases, Ryan forced in a run by walking Chris Speier and then allowed Williams' home run.

Ryan won his 99th game in a Houston uniform last weekend. His next victory will make him the seventh picher in history to win 100 games for two different clubs.

New York.....6
Chicago.....5

NEW YORK (AP) — Kevin McReynolds homered leading off the bottom of the 13th inning to lift the New York Mets over the Chicago Cubs 6-5 Saturday.

McReynolds hit rookie reliever Mike Capel's first pitch of the inning over the left-field fence for his sixth homer. The Mets are 5-0 in extra inning games this season and it was their 10th victory in their last at-bat. On Thursday night, Howard Johnson also homered in the 13th inning to beat the Cubs.

Jeff Innis, 1-1, pitched two innings for his first major-league victory.

The Cubs took the lead 5-4 in the top of the 11th with an unearned run but the Mets came right back in the bottom of the inning with an unearned run of their own.

With one out, Barry Lyons reached on third baseman Vance Law's throwing error. Mookie Wilson hit into a force play, and then advanced to third on Gary Carter's single. With Len Dykstra batting, Capel, 1-1, threw a wild pitch allowing Wislon to score.

Law led off the top of the 11th with a single off reliever Terry Leach and moved to second on a sacrifice and third on a groundout. Pinch-hitter Jim Sundberg then hit a slow grounder on the wet turf that shortstop Johnson bobbled allowing Law to score. For Johnson, who is the Mets' regular third baseman, it was his first error in 10 games at short this season.

The Cubs scored two runs in the top of the ninth to take a 4-3 lead but the Mets came back to tie it in the bottom of the inning off reliever Rich Gossage.

Johnson led off with a single and was sacrificed to second. Pinch-hitter Lee Mazzilli then singled to send Johnson to third and Carter's pinch single tied the score.

Pinch-hitter Manny Trillo's two-run, bases-loaded single in the top of the ninth had put the Cubs ahead.

Mark Grace led off the Chicago ninth with a single, and one out later, Law and Shawon Dunston singled to load the bases. Reliever Roger McDowell got Darrin Jackson to pop to first for the second out, but Trillo then lined a hard single to right center.

The first hit off Darling was Jody Davis' single to left with one out in the fifth. The right-hander did not allow another hit until Davis, Law and Dunston led off the eighth with singles to load the bases.

Randy Myers replaced Darling and walked pinch-hitter Jackson to force in a run. After pinch-hitter Damon Berryhill popped to third, Rafael Palmeiro grounded to second to score Law. McDowell relieved Myers and got Ryne Sandberg on a slow grounder to short.

Darryl Strawberry opened the Mets' second with a double off starter Les Lancaster and McReynolds followed with an infield single. One out later, Barry Lyons hit a sacrifice fly.

The Mets made it 3-0 in the sixth on a one-out single by Dave Magadan, Strawberry's misplayed triple to center and Johnson's two-out single.

McNeill, Holec Are Honored...

told Lee he would (probably get to) run the relay and that is exactly the way it worked out," Carson said.

He ended up teaming with Lee MacRae, Harvey Glance and Carl Lewis both in Indianapolis and in Rome.

"It (last summer) meant a lot to me to prove that I can do what I want to do," McNeill said. "I thought I'd never do something like that in my life.

"When I first started running when I was a younger, I wondered why we had to run so much, but now I can see why."

So far this season, McNeill has been hampered by some hamstring problems as well as inclement weather that has limited practice time. But as the weather improves, Carson said he is hopeful that McNeill can get his times down low enough to compete for a spot on the Olympic team. The trials aren't until July 16-23 in Indianapolis and McNeill is a better warm weather runner. The extra time should serve him well.

"There are three of four spots set," Carson said. "There are two or three (other) spots open. I would say it is 50-50."

But McNeill knows the challenge he is facing in his attempt to make the Olympic team.

"I'm going to begin to train harder. It's going to have to come from my heart, how much I want it," he said. "My training is going well. I also run better when it is hotter like it is now. In hot weather, I run great, usually a 10.14 or a 10.16. In cold weather, its up around 10.20 and 10.30.

"I hope I can start running better. I ran better four years ago than I do now. I think I'm getting too comfortable. Once you get relaxed, it seems like it takes away your competitive edge. I'm hoping to get it back after this meet.

"(Making the Olympic team) is very important to me (though). Right now I never thought I would try out for the Olympic team and now I have a good chance to try out and a good chance to make it."

Interestingly, Holec, who earned All-Big East Conference honors in basketball her senior year at Rose, decided to go to UNC-G for academic reasons.

"I kept getting letters in the mail from other schools in and out of North Carolina," she said. "But I pretty much wanted to concentrate on my studies because I knew it was going to be a big change. I wanted to go into business. I just figured it would be hard enough just to go to school."

But for any athlete, especially someone like Chris Holec, it was tough to just walk away from athletics.

"I started playing intramurals and I just missed the competition," she said. "I take my sports pretty seriously and there really wasn't a lot of competition."

She averaged 5.9 points and 5.1 rebounds a game her first season as the team posted a 27-3 mark, and at one time was ranked as high as number five nationally. UNC-G finished third in the regional that year.

"Two years ago, Chris was a pleasant surprise," said UNC-G womens' basketball coach Lynne Agee. "Possibly her biggest strength is just that, her physical strength and her size. In the past two years, she has accomplished a lot."

The adjustment from high school to college play, though, was considerable.

"It was a very big change," she said. "I was on the (high school) team my tenth grade year under Coach (Dennis) Gibson. That was my first year of organized basketball.

"I didn't know any of the concepts of offense and defense and didn't know what to do so I didn't play much at all. My junior year, under Bill Kuykendall, I started. Then my senior year, I made All-Conference.

"Before Christmas of my first year (at UNC-G), I really wasn't used to collegiate play. I felt like I did pretty well (though). Then, after Christmas, I played a lot more. I'd go in (right) after the starters."

Holec knew she would have to improve her physical conditioning if she ever wanted to earn a starting position and she dedicated the summer before her sophomore year towards getting in the best shape of her life.

"It was (the adjustment) mental and definitely physical," she said. "They are about equal. But physically, I couldn't keep up with the people on the floor."

"I worked really hard this past summer to get in shape because I wanted to start. I ran a lot, about one to two miles a night. I ate better and I worked almost every day with weights at the Greenville Aquatics Center. I was much more prepared.

"I had to dig deep inside to stick with it because a lot of times you are pushed to the limit where you just don't feel like you can take another step. In preseason, you just feel like you can't do it, but you have to. It's a lot tougher."

"She came back stronger after her freshman year and it definitely paid off for her," Agee said. "I think that mentally, she also improved herself. Chris was rather tentative and was not used to the work ethic we demand here (as a freshman) and I think she needed a year to review that. She came back much more determined and persistent."

Holec earned a starting position her sophomore year, but not until she overcame a freak injury suffered in an intramural soccer game just prior to the season.

"It started out pretty bad because I was injured," Holec said. "I was playing intramural soccer and I broke my finger and split it open. That was right during the beginning of the season so I had to play with it. The entire season I had to play with something on my hand."

But Holec ended up starting the last 22 games of the year. In addition to being the number two scorer and rebounder, she also had the fourth-best shooting percentage nationally at 62.9 percent.

UNC-G's third place national finish that year was as far as any other women's college team in North Carolina placed in post-season competition.

But while Holec has learned her lesson about physical conditioning, she said she is still learning about the mental aspects of the game.

"I had to learn the different defenses," she said. "I did them in high school, but I wasn't sure why I was doing them. I didn't know what anybody else was doing. I just concentrated on myself. Our concept is a team concept so I had to learn what everybody did and why they did it."

UNC-G is leaving Division III with an eventual move to Division I down the road. Next year, the school will play as an independent.

"That will be a big change," Holec said. "We're not playing any division III schools. We're playing all scholarship teams. The girls are a lot bigger and we had a pretty small team."

Agee feels that Holec has shown the ability to adapt to a situation and that she will be ready as the Lady Spartans move up the competition ladder.

"I know she wasn't the star in high school, but she's developed into an all-around player," Agee said. "Of all the people in terms of her position, her size and strength will offer her the opportunity to be successful.

"I think Chris can compete physically as we move up. I still feel good about Chris and if she continues to be open to improvement, she can still develop over the next few years. We are excited about her potential."

jumper by Worthy and a three-point play by Abdul-Jabbar — put Los Angeles on top 70-65. It was 76-74 late in the third period when the Lakers outscored the Mavericks 11-3 over a 207 span to go on top 87-77. The final three points came on a 3-point shot by Michael Cooper.

It was 87-79 entering the final 12 minutes. Dallas drew to within four points before the Lakers scored seven in a row, three on another bomb by Cooper, to make it 94-83 with 8:50 remaining.

The Mavericks weren't through — closing to within six points twice midway through the period. But a dunk by Worthy with five minutes to play and a tip-in by Abdul-Jabbar 40 seconds later made it 104-94 and triggered a 15-2 outburst which wrapped it up.

With the capacity crowd of 17,505 at the Forum roaring its approval, the Lakers jumped out to a 9-1 lead in the first 3:20 of play.

But Aguirre scored the next seven Dallas points as the Mavericks closed to within 11-8.

Graf Magnificent In French Win

Lashing out her always powerful forehand, Graf retained the women's championship at the French Open in a blowout of historic proportions and unusual quickness, beating Natalia Zvereva 6-0, 6-0.

"I'm very sorry it was so fast," Graf told the center court crowd, who cheered Zvereva on, trying to help her avoid the worst final defeat in the tournament's history.

"I saw her in the lockerrom and I said, 'I'm sorry about it and I hope you get better,'" Graf said.

If Graf deprived the fans of a classic match, such as the tense three-setter in which she beat Martina Navratilova for her first Grand Slam title a year ago, she gave them one that will take its own place in tennis history.

Only once before, in 1911, had a women's Grand Slam final ended without the loser taking a single game. Never had it happened in Paris, where the worst previous drubbing was the 6-1, 6-0 defeat administered by the legendary Suzanne Lenglen to American Mary K. Browne in 1926.

The match lasted 32 minutes, just over half as long as the one-hour rain storm that interrupted play halfway through the first set. Officially, shorter Grand Slam finals have been played, but single points have taken almost as long. The time on court might have been the quickest ever.

"Last year was my first win for a Grand Slam championship. I was tired and exhausted and it took me longer to realize it," Graf said. "But this one wasn't routine. It's a Grand Slam final. OK, it's 6-0, 6-0, and it's a different dimension from last year, but it still means a lot to me."

After her victory in the Australian Open last January, the second consecutive French Open triumph kept Graf on course to be the first woman since Margaret Court Smith in 1970 to win all four Grand Slam tournaments in one year.

On Sunday, Mats Wilander tries to keep his own hopes of sweeping the Grand Slam alive. The men's winner in Australia, he plays for his third French championship against France's Henri Leconte.

Zvereva, just turned 17, came out after the rain break wearing a new shirt but facing the same old problem. Graf was on the other side of the net, and the West German's forehand was as blistering as it had been throughout the tournament.

When the final point — fittingly on a forehand cross-court winner — fell in, Graf jumped for joy, then ran over to the stands and hugged her father, Peter Graf.

The quickness and completness of the defeat left Zvereva numb. Last year's junior women's champion in Paris and in only the third regular tournament final of her career, she declined the traditional chance to address the crowd and turned down requests for television intrviews.

"I knew what to say, but I couldn't say anything," she said.

The architect of one of the biggest upsets of a tournament filled with surprises, a fourth-round victory over Navratilova, Zvereva finished her news confrence in tears.

Graf said she never expected it to be so easy.

"On clay courts, you always lose a couple of games," said Graf, who lost only 20 games in the tournament. She did not drop a set for her second consecutive Grand Slam tournament, having won the Australian Open crown last January while losing just 29 games.

With her own game in such good form and Zvereva 14 spots below her in the women's rankings, friends told Graf she had nothing to worry about. She tried her best not to believe them, and that may have been the final factor in the Soviet teen-ager's undoing.

"Everybody was telling me, 'It's so easy.' They were saying, 'You can't lose,'" Graf said. "So I told myself, 'You better watch out.' She beat Martina and she's a good player."

Playing in her fifth consecutive Grand Slam final, the West German lost just 13 points, only four on her serve. She allowed Zvereva to reach game point just once, at 40-30 in the second game, and she promptly broke with a forehand winner down the line and two Zvereva errors.

That forehand has become Graf's trademark, and it was as dominant as ever Saturday. The final point was her 21st winner off the forehand, not counting a pair of forehand putaways off short lobs into the open court.

And all this on a day when Graf's serve was not particularly potent. She hit on only 54 percent of her first serves, had three aces and double-faulted twice. It was a small flaw in an otherwise overwhelming performance against an opponent who looked intimidated by the occasion.

"I always try to play my best. I'm in good shape at the moment, and that's very important on clay courts," Graf said. "I try to put pressure on my opponent. Those are the two things I try to do. No one else seems to be able to do it."

Only fourth-seeded Gabriela Sabatini was able to extend Graf to a tiebreaker, with the West German winning it 7-3 to clinch a semifinal victory. She won at least one set at love in four of her five earlier victories and dropped as many as four games in a set only while experimenting with some shots in an opening-round 6-0, 6-4 defeat of France's Natalie Guerree.

"I thought she was going to be good like that," Zvereva said. "I thought she was good — the best."

At least the best on clay at the moment, and a player whose domination of this championship match places her among the all-time greats.

The only other 6-0, 6-0 victory in a Grand Slam women's final was recorded by Dorthea Lambert Chambers over Dora Penelope Boothby at Wimbledon 77 years ago.

Lenglen, whose name is on the main gate at the Roland Garros complex, defeated Molla Mallory for the French women's championship in 1922 6-2, 6-0 in 26 minutes, the shortest Grand Slam final ever.

Graf and Zvereva may have been on court a shorter time, however; 66 years ago players did not sit down to rest on changeovers. If five changeovers, totaling a minimum of $7\frac{1}{2}$ minutes, are deducted from the total time, Graf's victory took just 24 minutes, 30 seconds.

Last year at the French Open, Ivan Lendl an Joakim Nystrom took 28 minites to play one game. In a women's satellite tournament in 1984, Jean Hepner and Vicki Nelson-Dunbar took 29 minutes to play a single point.

In other championships decided Saturday, Lori McNeil of Houston and Jorge Lozano of Mexico defeated Brenda Schultz and Michiel Schapers of the Netherlands 7-5, 6-2 for the mixed doubles title, and Andres Gomez of Ecuador and Emilio Sanchez of Spain captured the men's doubles, defeating John Fitzgerald of Australia and Anders Jarryd of Sweden 6-3, 6-7, 6-4, 6-3.

Hatalsky, Up By Two, Must Only Battle Himself

POTOMAC, Md. (AP) — Morris Hatlasky isn't concerned about the nine players who are within four strokes of the lead after three rounds of the $800,000 Kemper Open.

Hatalsky, bidding for his first PGA victory since 1983, is much more worried about himself.

"The battle is really me, not the rest of the guys," Hatalsky said Saturday after shooting a 3-under-par 68 to take a two-stroke lead. "If I play well, everything will take care of itself."

Hatalsky, who missed the cut in each of his last three tournaments, was at 11-under-par 204 after 54 holes at the Tournament Players Club at Avenel. He birdied four holes on the front nine and closed with eight straight pars after a bad tee shot led to a bogey on No. 10.

Craig Stadler, who shot a course-record 64, Mike Reid and John Mahaffey were two strokes off the pace.

Defending champion Tom Kite, second-round leader Jim Hallet and Mark Brooks were at 205 and Tom Armour, Bill Glasson and Jay Haas finished the third round at 206.

"If there's anything different about me this week, it's my attitude," said Hatalsky, a 13-year pro who is using former major league shortstop Tim Foli as his caddy this week. "I'm just going out there to have some fun and I'm making sure not to be hard on myself if I happen to have a bad shot." With only two career victories to his credit, it may have shocked a few of his peers to see his name atop the leader board. Hatalsky, however, almost expected it.

"If you'd have asked me at the start of the week if I'd be in the lead I'd have been surprised, but after the first two rounds I played I'm not," he said. "My short game is real sharp right now."

The same can be said for Stadler, who is searching for his first victory on the Tour since 1984. Stadler had seven birdies, including three in a row on Nos. 13 through 15, in a bogey-free round.

After opening the tournament with consecutive 70s, the two-time Kemper champion said improved putting and a bit of luck contributed to the record-tying effort that kept him in contention for the $144,000 top prize.

"I got some good bounces and everything kind of went right," Stadler said. "I had a lot of birdie putts and made most of them."

Despite the impressive round, Stadler said he was hardly satisfied with his position.

"Considering the amount of golf tournaments I've won over the last four years, I'd love to be leading by 10 strokes," he said.

Reid shot a 67 to move into position for his second-ever victory on the tour. Playing into the wind, he started the round by parring the opening five holes, then followed an eagle on No. 6 with a birdie on No. 7. He then had three birdies and two bogeys in an erratic back nine.

"I set a goal today to try to shoot under par," Reid said. "The fast start was the key to the round. I thought from the beginning, considering the wind, my whole round hinged on the first six holes."

Scores after the third round Saturday from the $800,000 Kemper Open, played on the par-71, 6,867-yard Tournament Players Club at Avenel course:

Lopez Holds One Shot Lead

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Nancy Lopez still considers herself one of the longer hitters on the LPGA Tour. But she said there's no one currently on the Tour who hits as far as England's Laura Davies.

Lopez shot a 3-under-par 69 Saturday for a one-stroke lead over Davies and a two-stroke edge over Betsy King after 54 holes of the LPGA Jamie Farr Toledo Classic.

The 24-year-old Davies fell as many as four strokes off the lead midway through the third round before rallying for three birdies on the back nine.

"I've never seen anybody on the women's tour whose ball takes off like a rocket," Lopez said, referring to Davies' powerful long game. "I don't think anybody compares to Laura. That's how they hit it on the men's tour."

The stoutly built, 5-foot-10 Davies has impressed her colleagues with her long driving since she caught their attention with a victory in the U.S. Women's Open last year. She won the Tucson Open earlier this season.

"Playing with Nancy and Betsy will be fun," Davies said. "Somebody is going to have to win it. None of us is going to give it away. Someone's going to have to shoot a great round and take it."

Lopez leads at 9-under-par 207, and Davies, who matched Lopez's 69 Saturday, is at 8-under-par 208.

Lopez maintained her lead by making par on the opening hole for the first time in three days, then making birdies on three of the next five holes.

Trio Serves Notice Of Challenge

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Three of the brightest stars in America's track and field future never have shone as brightly as they did at this year's NCAA championships.

Lorenzo Daniel of Mississippi State, Vicky Huber of Vilianova and Kevin Young of UCLA served notice with impressive performances Friday that they could be ready to challenge the veteran U.S. runners who have dominated their events.

Daniel erased three years of NCAA meet disappointments and broke his own collegiate record with a 19.87-second clocking in the 200 meters.

Only four runners have ever ran the distance faster.

"It meant a whole lot," Daniel said. "The last three years were a disappointment because each year I came in with about the fastest time."

But he never won until this year.

"I think it will come with time," he said. "The world record is within my reach."

Daniel set the collegiate mark of 19.93 earlier this season.

For Huber, a junior, her second straight NCAA title at 3,000 meters is not enough, even though she eclipsed the collegiate record with a clocking of eight minutes, 47.35 seconds.

"I'm happy with the time, but I can't rest on anything," she said. "This could be the best year of my life and I've got a lot more races to run."

She said she's convinced she can run with America's best, including Mary Slaney.

"I don't know if Mary Slaney knows who I am," she said. "But hopefully I'll be there on the line (at the U.S. Olympic Trials) in July and we'll see what happens."

Huber stayed on the shoulder of Oregon's Annette Hand early in Friday's race, then bolted ahead after about one mile and never was threatened. She bettered the old mark of 8:49.64 set by Cathy Branta of Wisconsin three years ago.

Young, the lanky UCLA runner, led from start to finish without any serious challenge as he won the 400-meter hurdles in 47.85, by far his personal best. Only five other runners have gone faster in the event.

"I was just concentrating on getting through the first 200," Young said. "I figured if I got through the first 200 at a fast pace, they were going to have to come out and get me."

The Bruins' senior, who also won the event last year, said the victory sent a message to the big three in the intermediate hurdles in this country — Edwin Moses, Andre Phillips and Danny Harris.

"They better look out," Young said. "Now it's kind of like I'm on my own terms."

Young's easy victory was just one of several good things that happened for UCLA, which still appeared headed for a possible sweep of the men's and women's team competition.

The defending champion UCLA men picked up an unexpected 14 points when the Bruins' Pete Thompson and Brian Blutreich finished second and third, respectively, in the discus.

"We feel very good at this point," UCLA Coach Bob Larsen said. "We've been hitting in every event what we really wanted to do all along. We're ahead of schedule because of the discus."

UCLA led the men's competition with one day remaining with 38 points. Texas was second with 30 and Northeast Louisiana third at 21.

The UCLA women suffered minor setbacks when Gail Devers was beaten by unheralded Nena Gage of George Mason in the long jump. Gage won in a wind-aided 21 feet 8¾ inches. Devers was second at 21-6.

The Bruins also finished second to Arizona State in the 400-meter relay, with Devers unable to make up for lost ground on the anchor leg.

"We would have liked to have done better, but you can't cry over spilled milk," Devers said. "It's over. The best thing I can do is put that behind me and just go out there tomorrow and do the best I can."

A total of three collegiate and six meet records have fallen in the first three days of competition on the University of Oregon's Hayward Field.

Young and Huber were two of three defending champions to repeat Friday. The other was Laura Lavine of Washington State in the discus, who won at 188-1.

Two freshmen were winners Friday. Kelly Riley of Arkansas State at 18-3¼ in the pole vault and Paul Ereng, a 20-year-old Kenyan who competes for Virgina, at 1:46.76 in the men's 800 meters.

Schowonda Williams of Louisiana State won the women's 400-meter hurdles in 55.53, the fastest time by an American this year. But she complained that runnerup Linetta Wilson of Nebraska had stepped in her lane late in the race.

"She was in my lane beating on my elbow," Williams said. "It bothered me mentally when she stepped in my lane."

Arizona State, Wichita Post Opening CWS Wins

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Linty Ingram of Arizona State leads college pitchers pitchers with a 17-4 record. But he didn't get to open the College World Series for the Sun Devils.

Instead, Arizona State coach Jim Brock started left-hander Rusty Kilgo for the first time this season and Kilgo led the Sun Devils to a 4-2 victory over California on Friday night.

Arizona State, 57-11, plays No. 4 Wichita State, a 5-4 winner Friday over No. 5 Florida, on Sunday. Eighth-ranked California, 40-24, plays Florida, 47-18-1, in Sunday's elimination game.

In Saturday night's games, No. 2 Frensno State played No. 7 Stanford, the defending champion, and No. 3 Miami, Fla., played No. 6 Fullerton State.

Brock said he went with Kilgo for several reasons.

"We've had two pitchers in the last month who have thrown extremely well and consistentiy under pressure," Brock said. "Linty has not had much luck against Cal this year as he has had against the rest of the world. We figured a left-hander would turn around their switch hitters and hold runners on more effectively."

Kilgo, 11-2, allowed nine hits, struck out six and walked one in eight innings. Ingram relieved in the ninth for his second save after John Kuehl hit his ninth homer to lead off.

"Anytime you've got an All-American who leads the nation in wins and you don't start him in the opening game of the College World Series, the guy you start better pitch awfully well," Brock said. "Kilgo was brilliant."

"I was told that they were going to throw a right-handed pitcher and he changed it to a left-handed pitcher when we were taking batting practice," California coach Bob Milano said. "I don't think we adjusted."

Mike Burrola's RBI groundout in the third gave Arizona State a 1-0 lead but Darren Lewis' run-scoring double in the bottom of the inning tied it.

Martin Peralta broke the tie in the seventh with a leadoff homer off Travis Willis, 9-8. It was Peralta's 11th homer of the season.

In the second game, Wichita State, 55-14-1, rallied from a 2-1 deficit with three runs in the sixth, two on Eric Wedge's double. Wedge scored on Mike McDonald's double to make it 4-2.

"Getting the first one under your belt is a big boost," Wedge said. "I was trying to drive the ball. I knew he had to throw a strike. It was right down the chute."

Pat Meares' RBI single in the eighth gave Wichita State a 5-2 lead.

David Haas, 14-5, tired in the ninth and Florida pulled to 5-4 on Julio Mendez's RBI double and Tommy Edwards' run-scoring single.

"I know David was getting tired," Wichita State coach Gene Stephenson said. "I felt we had no problem after we got two out. I stayed with him too long."

Jim Newlin came on and got Brian Reimsnyder to ground into a game-ending forceout for Newlin's seventh save.

"We didn't impress anybody tonight in any one area except we won," Stephenson said. "Florida is a good club."

"We tried to get back in it late," Florida coach Joe Arnold said. "I'm real proud of the ballclub. Coming back will help us Sunday."

Florida, making its first trip to the College World Series, took a 2-1 lead in the fifth on consecutive doubles by Jose Fernandez, Mendez and Edwards.

Dorsett Traded To The Broncos

DENVER (AP) — Tony Dorsett, who wanted out of Dallas after losing his starting job to Herschel Walker, is reunited with his former offensive coordinator — Denver head coach Dan Reeves — following a trade to the Broncos.

Dorsett, the fourth-leading rusher in NFL history, was traded by the Cowboys to the Broncos on Friday for a conditional fifth-round draft choice in 1989. The Broncos could wind up paying as high as a first-round choice, depending on Dorsett's playing time and performance for Denver this fall.

"He's going to help us tremendously," Broncos quarterback John Elway said. "We're going to try to feature him and give him the football and let him run with it. We need a big-play back."

Reeves said he was "excited" about the deal. "I think Tony can help us," said Reeves, who served as offensive coordinator with the Cowboys from 1977-80. "If I didn't think so, we wouldn't have gone after him. I think he'll fit in very well with what we do on offense."

Reeves said if the 34-year-old Dorsett can stay healthy, he would have a good chance to start for Denver, but said the Broncos won't change their offense to accommodate him.

He wouldn't speculate on how many carries Dorsett might have per game, but said, "Every time he touches the ball, the defense is going to hold their breath. Speed is something that scares people. It's going to make a difference."

Reeves said Dorsett "hasn't lost a lot," but he admitted if Dorsett plays more than two years for Denver, "it will be a plus."

Dorsett was due to arrive in Denver on Sunday night. The Broncos scheduled a press conference for him Monday morning.

Although Dorsett was unavailable for comment Friday, he had said earlier as negotiations progressed that he was anxious to make a "fresh start" and that going to Denver would be "just a new chapter in Tony Dorsett's football career."

Witt Stewart, Dorsett's agent, said his client was ecstatic upon being informed that the deal was consummated.

"I just talked to him and he said he's got so much nervous energy he was going to lift weights, to throw some iron around," Stewart said.

The trade had been expected for nearly a week. Last weekend, Dorsett helped facilitate the deal by agreeing to forfeit about $2.4 million in deferred payments.

Dorsett had sought a trade since Walker was made a full-time starter late last season. Walker was signed in 1986, and the two shared the tailback spot for most of 1986 and into last season.

Pistons Look To Finals

We Did It!

Detroit's Vinnie Johnson hugs teammate Isiah Thomas in the closing seconds of Friday night's playoff game with Boston. The Pistons beat the Celtics, 95-90, to win the Eastern Conference, advancing to the NBA finals. (AP Laserphoto)

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The Detroit Pistons, the new champions of the NBA's Eastern Conference, now want to become destiny's darlings.

The Pistons, behind Vinnie Johnson's 24 points and a bruising defense, beat the Boston Celtics 95-90 for the title before a Silverdome crowd of 38,912 Friday night to win the series in six games.

Now the Pistons advance to the NBA championship series for the first time since since moving to Detroit 31 years ago. The last time the team was in the finals was 1956 when it played in Fort Wayne, Ind.

"All the hard minutes and hours of training for the last seven years, now all the hard work has paid off," said Detroit's Isiah Thomas. "The Celtics took us to the limit. They gave us everything that we could have asked for."

Adrian Dantley scored 22 points for Detroit and James Edwards, another sub, added 15. Thomas finished with 10 points.

Getting past the Celtics was a major hurdle for the Pistons. The Celtics eliminated Detroit in seven games a year ago.

Boston has played in the finals the past four years and has won 16 titles, the latest in 1984 and 1986. The Fort Wayne Pistons played Syracuse in 1955 and Philadelphia in the 1956 finals and lost both times.

This Pistons team is determined to ride its momentum to victory this time.

"We learned how to win last year," Detroit's Bill Laimbeer said. "We learned what it takes when you get in the later rounds to win the big series. And we came in this year more determined than ever and we accomplished it.

"We'll have on-the-job training (against the Western Conference champions). We don't care whether it's Dallas or Los Angeles. We're going in there playing the same tenacious defense, playing nine guys and we're going to give it our best shot."

The loss in Game 6 of the best-of-seven series marked the final game as Boston coach for K.C. Jones, who guided the club to its last two titles. Jones is retiring to take a front office job after five seasons on the bench.

"We had ups and downs, but most of them were ups," Jones said. "I have an admiration for these guys, for what they've done for me the last five years."

Detroit coach Chuck Daly, who saw his young and inexperienced club lose to the Celtics in seven games last year, had high praise for Jones and the entire Boston organization.

"They're a great operation from the top on down," Daly said. "I think Isiah made the best statement: 'They bring out the best in you.'"

The key to the victory in Game 6 was the red-hot shooting of Johnson, who leads Detroit's talented bench, and the pressure, bump and grind defense.

The Pistons' defense had held the opposition to less than 100 points in 10 of the last 12 games.

Kevin McHale scored 33 points for Boston and Dennis Johnson had 17. Larry Bird, frustrated the entire series by the Pistons' defense, was held to 16 points.

A telling moment came with 6:55 remaining in the game when Bird stepped to the line and missed two free throws, something which is almost unthinkable for the great Boston star.

"We just wore out," Bird said. "They beat us. We definitely had our chance. We went back to Boston even (for Game 5) and they won that game.

"When my shot doesn't go in, we find it rubs off on everybody else. I think I was frustrated because I missed some shots I usually make."

Finally, the younger Pistons were just too strong, too quick and too deep on the bench for the Celtics.

"I think they knew we had a weakness," Bird said. "We were a good half-court team during the season. But you have to move the ball around.

"We found ourselves standing around. Detroit was kicking the ball out the way we used to do it."

The Celtics, with Bird hitting nine points, led 25-21 after one quarter but the Pistons, with Vinnie Johnson hitting for four points, scored the first eight points of the second quarter and led the rest of the way.

Detroit led by as many as 17 points in the fourth quarter, but the Celtics refused to fold.

"It feels great," Vinnie Johnson said. "They're a great team. What can you say? I'm more excited about beating them than winning the Eastern Conference championship. They hung in there and fought back."

Hearns Declining, Foe's Manager Says

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Thomas Hearns says Iran Barkley has ability and his manager has a big mouth.

On Monday night, Barkley will try to back up manager John Reetz's words with his fists when he challenges Hearns for the World Boxing Council middleweight championship at the Las Vegas Hilton.

Reetz also has called the 29-year-old Hearns a declinging fighter.

Hearns, the only man to win four world titles, was a 3½-1 favorite Friday to win the scheduled 12-round bout, which will be the feature match on a championship tripleheader.

While calling the 28-year-old Barkley a good fighter, Hearns said, "He hasn't been in there with me yet."

Hearns has scored 38 knockouts in winning 45 pro fights. His two losses came when he was stopped by Sugar Ray Leonard in the 14th round of a fight for the undisputed welterweight title in September 1981, and when he was knocked out in the third round by Marvelous Marvin Hagler in a bid for the undisputed middleweight title in 1985.

"The two good fighters he fought he didn't beat," Barkley said. "I'm the third."

Barkley, who has a 24-4 record, with four knockouts, is an aggressive fighter.

"He's going to try to put pressure on, but he's going to have to pay to get inside," said Emanuel Steward, who manages and trains Hearns.

One of Barkley's defeats was on a 15-round decision to Sumbu Kalambay last Oct. 23 in Italy for the World Boxing Association middleweight title that had become vacant when Hagler was stripped before he fought Leonard last year.

Hearns won the WBC title, which became vacant when Leonard retired after outpointing Haler, by knocking out Juan Domingo Roldan in the fourth round last Oct. 29 at Las Vegas.

In the other two-round title bouts, Roger Mayweather of Las Vegas will defend the WBC super lightweight title against Harold Brazier of South Bend, Ind., and Virgil Hill of Las Vegas will defend the WBA light heavyweight title against Ramzi Hassan of San Diego.

Brazier, who did take up boxing until he was 24 and didn't pro until he was 26 six years ago, has a 55-7-1 record, with 40 knockouts. Mayweather, a former WBA junior lightweight champion, has a 31-5 record, with 22 knockouts.

Hassam became a pro fighter after moving to the United States from Jordan in 1982.

Clayton Nips Lady Rams, 8-7

CLAYTON — Clayton High School rallied for three runs in the bottom of the seventh to send the game into extra innings and eventually recorded an 8-7 win over Greene Central Friday in the Eastern finals of the State 2A Softball Playoffs.

Clayton grabbed the lead in the first inning, scoring twice, but Greene Central pushed over four in the second to move ahead. Clayton tied it up with two ore in the third.

Greene Central then scored singled runs in the fifth, sixth and seventh innings to take a 7-4 lead in the game.

But in the bottom of the seventh, Clayton rallied to tie it up. Sabrina Beasley and Tonya Parrish both singled and after a force out, Laura Sutton drove in the first run with a single. After a walk, two more runs scored on an error, tying it at 7-7.

It remained that way until the ninth, when the Lady Comets pushed over the game-winning run. Parrish singled and came around to score on Karen Massengill's two-out single that got through the outfield.

Laticia Warren and Christina Warren each had three hits to lead Greene Central, which outhit Clayton, 17-11. Laticia Warren hit a homer in the game, as did Audra Thomas. Tomeka Grant, Shanna Dunn and Sabrina Becton each added two hits for the Lady Rams.

Greene Central ends its season with a 21-7 record. Clayton, now 19-7, advances to the state finals, where it will host Madison-Mayodan in a best-of-three series for the championship.

Public Hearing Set On Spanish Mackerel Limits

A public meeting will be held at the Willis Building, at the corner of First and Reid, Monday at 7 p.m. to discuss a proposed Spanish mackerel limit for recreational fishing in North Carolina coastal waters.

The North Carolina Division of Marine Fisheries has proposed a 10-fish limit for the coastal waters — which run from shore to three miles out in the ocean — and has proposed that it take effect on June 13. Federal rules already limit Spanish catches to 10.

The 10-fish limit is in accordance with recommendations by the South Atlantic Management Council, which two years ago imposed the federal limit in federal waters off North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia, and a four-fish limit in Florida waters. The federal limit is in effect from three to 200 miles offshore.

According to Jim Tyler, information coordinator of Marine Fisheries, a series of public meetings is being held to receive input from the public before the commission acts on imposing the rule. At a meeting held in Wilmington, reaction was generally in favor of the new limits, while a meeting in Morehead City received negative comments. Both meetings, Tyler said, were poorly attended with only about 15 people at each.

Tough Week For Fishermen

Outdoor News

By The Associated Press

A combination of storms and unusually hot weather made it tough on fishermen this week, but those who withstood the elements got a few rewards, pier operators say.

"We've been doing right fair," said Jim Ratcliffe of the Long Beach Pier in Southport. "We got a few kings, plenty of bluefish and an average catch of whiting and spots."

Hatteras

"We're catching cobia, small blues and Spanish mackerel off Cape Point in Buxton. We've had cobia from seven to 52 pounds," he said. "They're catching small trout off Frisco pier and in the sound they're catching cobia and a few flounder.

"Inshore trawlers are catching Spanish mackerel. About 10 miles off shore they're catching king mackerel and the gulf stream fishermen are having super good catches of yellowfin and bluefin tuna, wahoo, dolphin and billfish."

Southport

Besides the king mackerel, blues, whiting and spots, Ratcliffe reported the arrival of the flounder and said Spanish mackerel were erratic.

"The flounder is beginning to move in," he said. "The Spanish has been kind of spotty. One day you do real good and next day you don't see one."

Topsail Island

At the Jolly Roger Pier, Hollis Whitley said fishing was good despite a wave of seaweed brought in by a nor'easter.

"A lot of seaweed came in here in that northeast wind and it's still around but all in all, the fishing, especially on blues and Spanish, has been real good," Whitley said. "They're still catching a few mullet and croakers at night.

Wrightsville Beach

Fishermen were having more luck early in the morning and late in the afternoon, George Fokakis of the Crystal Pier said.

"We got quite a few blues and Spanish mackerel early in the morning and late in the evening, but not much during the day," he said. "They're not catching any bottom fish at all."

Fokakis also said he had no reports of king mackerel being caught lately.

Nags Head

At the Nags Head Fishing Pier, Andy McCann reported one of the best runs of the season on trout over the weekend as well as the first sign of the cobia.

"This past weekend was very good," he said. "We had bluefish and trout. They ran all day long (Saturday), probably the best trout day we have had.

"We did get the first cobia (Tuesday). The water temperature has just hit 70 degrees and that will start getting the warm-water fish in — king mackerel and cobia.

"A few Spanish mackerel have shown up. The first time we got them was this weekend. Offshore boats are doing real well on tuna, wahoo, and there is a lot of dolphin and king mackerel."

Swansboro

John Dudley of Dudley's Marina reported a successful Memorial Day Blue Water Tournament, but said fishing slacked up early in the week.

"The Spanish are still holding up good and I assume as soon as the water clears up, the kings will go back to biting good. We've also had a lot of nice cobia and the big blues are still here."

Offshore, Dudley reported catches of marlin, dolphin and tuna.

Hunting and Fishing License Deadline Approaching

North Carolina residents who own a lifetime fishing or hunting license have until June 30 to upgrade that license to a comprehensive plan that includes more privileges than basic hunting and fishing.

Last year, when lifetime hunting and fishing license fees were increased from $150 to $250, additional privileges were added to make the licenses comprehensive. For example, by a paying $100 more, lifetime fishing license holders are allowed to fish for trout and fish on game lands in addition to the basic fishing privileges. The comprehensive lifetime hunting license includes basic hunting, big game, game lands and primitive weapons.

License holders who want to upgrade their licenses may send $100, their old licenses and a note explaining their wishes to the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission, License Section, 512 N. Salisbury St., Raleigh, N.C. 27611. They may also call the license section at 1-800-662-7350 and ask for a form requesting a license upgrade. License holders should include their correct address.

When the request and payment are received in the Raleigh office, the comprehensive license will be issued. The request and payment must be in the Raleigh office by June 30.

All annual hunting, fishing and trapping licenses will be available from license agents around North Carolina and from the Raleigh office beginning the last week of June. The 1988-89 licenses are effective July 1.

Sportsmen who hunt waterfowl in North Carolina must purchase a $5 waterfowl hunting license in addition to the mandatory waterfowl stamp. The lifetime sportsman license includes the waterfowl hunting license.

The license, made mandatory last year by the N.C. General Assembly, will include a pictorial stamp. A painting of a pair of green-winged teal dropping into a coastal marsh is featured on the license and conservation art print. The painting was created by nationally-known wildlife artist Ronald Louque (pronounced "Luke"). Limited edition art prints of this stamp will be available through art dealers.

"Revenues from the stamp and print sales are placed in the North Carolina Waterfowl Fund and are used for waterfowl conservation here in North Carolina," said Sid Baynes, chief of the Division of Conservation Education and contract administrator for stamp and print programs for the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission.

"Buying a duck stamp or art print not only provides a beautiful addition to your home or office, but also helps build a better future for waterfowl in our state," he said.

Several Fisheries Bills Introduced

Congressman Walter B. Jones of Farmville, chairman of the U.S. House of Representatives Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, recently introduced several new bills that would help the merchant marine and fisheries-related industries.

Because the nation's oceans agency requires more and modern ships to perform its fisheries, oceanographic, mapping, surveying and meteorological research into the next century, Jones introduced a bill to authorize the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) to undertake a 10-year fleet modernization and expansion plan. The bill provides for a total of $613 million over the 10-year life of the program.

"Without a modernization plan by the 1990's, block obsolescence of the entire NOAA fleet will be irreversible and essential ocean programs would be imperiled," Jones said.

In other legislation, a ban on the use of toxic marine paints was cleared by the House and sent to the President for signature. This bill severely restricts the use of paints containing tin-based biocides known as organotins, the most common of which is tributyltin (TBT).

The additive, used to prevent the growth of encrusting organisms such as algae and barnacles on boat hulls, has been proven to have toxic effects on marine life, especially shellfish. The bill permanently outlaws the use of these paints on all boats under 82 feet, which are generally operated on and are moored in the shallow estuarine waters inhabited by species most susceptible to TBT.

"The bill ... represents a rational effort to place controls on a very toxic chemical before it causes more severe environmental damage," Jones said.

Another bill, introduced under the strong leadership of Jones, would reauthorize the National Aquaculture Act of 1980. He called for a revision of the auquaculture plan, enabling the government and the aquaculture community to better develop this industry.

Also approved by the committee is legislation that reauthorizes the Atlantic Striped Bass Conservation Act, intended to help restore and manage depleted stocks of the fish. The bill extends the Emergency Striped Bass Study to continue research on the fish.

Local Man Wins Rock Tournament

E.K. (Clutch) Fisher of Greenville recently won the True Value Sporting Goods Store's rock fishing tournament in Washington, N.C. He received first place for a striped bass that weighed in at 20 pounds-8 ounces.

Summertime Hazards

By BILL SCHULZ
Associated Press Writer

It's summertime, on the thermometer if not on the calendar, and the woods, mountains and beaches beckon.

In addition to the balmy breezes, bright sunshine and wildlife to watch, there are hazards in the outdoors.

While the average person out for a weekend doesn't need to pack as heavily or carefully as the man headed to the high Rockies to hunt mountain sheep, a little planning and a simple first-aid kit will make the weekend's memories a pleasure, not a horror movie rerun.

A recent survey found the most common problems which can ruin a visit to the outdoors are insect bites, sunburn, serious cuts, insect stings and blisters. Other encounters of the painful kind included embedded fishooks, sprained ankles and burns, particularly from carelessness with a campfire.

Start your first-aid kit with any prescription medications you are supposed to take.

Next add a couple of items to avoid trouble. A good insect repellent is essential. From the black flies of the North woods to the sand gnats of the Deep South, there are all kinds of critters out there a good repellant will keep off your back.

Stick in a good sunscreen. Most brands now are rated by number. The higher the number the more sun protection. The upper 30s is about tops, but anything above 15 provides good protection.

Then add some things to ease the pain if you forget to use your sunscreen or insect repellant.

Add a pain reliever such as aspirin. Then a pain-killing skin lotion for sunburn or minor burns. To help with stings or a rare snakebite an Extractor pump will remove much of the venom from the wound.

Even if you don't plan to be out overnight, take a flashlight. A small one that fits in your pocket will do, but make sure the batteries are fresh and the bulb works.

If you are going on a long day hike, or an overnight trip, the list gets longer.

Add some cortisone cream for poison ivy or insect bites, a few adhesive bandages, gauze and tape for cuts, a triangular bandage for a sling or a wrap and an elastic bandage to bind a sprained ankle. Carry a scissors and a sharp knife to cut bandages or for many other uses.

Your feet are going to get you back so plan to take care of them. There are an assortment of blister preventatives and treatments.

Kulwicki's Tinkering Puts Him On Budweiser Pole

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Alan Kulwicki did enough tinkering with his Ford to earn a pole position. He doesn't want to think about more changes.

Kulwicki said he made at least six adjustments in the chassis of his white-and-red Ford before he set a Dover Downs International Speedway qualifying record to earn the pole position for Sunday's Budweiser 500 NASCAR race.

"I thought I knew what we needed and fortunately we hit it right," Kulwicki said after his record-setting lap. "I don't think it was luck. We were off (the fastest cars) by maybe a tenth of a second in practice. There were probably only four or five cars faster."

Kulwicki reached an average speed of 146.681 mph during his one-lap run that ended in 24.543 seconds. He eclipsed the previous record of 24.623 seconds set by Geoff Bodine in 1986.

Kulwicki set the record on Goodyear tires, which are being challenged on the Winston Cup circuit by another tire company, Hoosier tires, for the first time in more than a decade.

The top 11 qualifiers Friday ran on Goodyears. Hoosier, a tire that heats up more slowly, reportedly improves its performance over longer distances.

"Life was a lot simpler when there was only one tire," Kulwicki said. "It was a variable you didn't have to deal with. It's still not sure which tire is better in qualifying and which will be better in the race."

Twenty drivers qualified for Sunday's 500-mile endurance test. The second 20 will decided today during a morning qualifying session.

"I don't think anybody has done any extended runs so they'll know which will be better after 10-20 laps," Kulwicki said. "The Goodyears felt awful good during qualifying. I wish I knew the answer."

The top qualifier driving on Hoosier tires was 12th-place finisher Morgan Shepherd, who averaged 143.489 mph.

"Hoosier has got the tire," said Shepherd, who is subbing for injured Harry Gant as driver in the No. 33 Skoal Bandit Chevrolet. "It's a little bit off in qualifying, but they do have the tire."

Drivers will be allowed to change brands of tires as many times as they want to during the race as long as they change all four tires. Teams usually may change brands of tires only once during a race.

"It's not the same car we sat on the pole here the last race with," Kulwicki said afterwards. "We crashed that one at Bristol (in the Valleydale 500).

"We've been so close to winning poles and now we got it out of the way."

Kulwicki, 33, has not won in 67 NASCAR races. His best finish was a second in this year's TranSouth 500 at Darlington, S.C., in March. He is the ninth different pole sitter in 11 NASCAR events this year.

Dale Earnhardt, the NASCAR Winston Cup point leader, qualified ninth with a lap time of 25.067 and an average speed of 143.615 mph. "We ran better in practice," Earnhardt said.

Darryl Waltrip, last week's winner in the Coca Cola 600 at Charlotte, N.C., failed to qualify, momentarily losing control of his Chevrolet coming out of turn one.

"I think the sun came out and sucked oil out of the track," Waltrip said. "... I got down there (in turn one), the car got sideway, went uphill and I almost spun it out."

Top 20 qualifiers after Friday's qualifying session for the Budweiser 500 NASCAR race to be run Sunday at Dover Downs International Speedway with name, hometown, car and average speed in mph. (The 40-car field was completed during a qualifying session Saturday):

1. Alan Kulwicki, Greenfield, Wis., Ford, 24.543 seconds lap, 146.681. (Breaks track's qualifying record of 24.623, set by Geoff Bodine on Sept. 13, 1986).
2. Mark Martin, Batesville, Ark., Ford, 146.610.
3. Rick Wilson, Bartow, Fla., Oldsmobile, 146.211.
4. Geoff Bodine, Chemung, N.Y., Chevrolet, 145.167.
5. Brett Bodine, Chemung, N.Y., Ford, 145.074.
6. Neil Bonnett, Hueytown, Ala., Pontiac, 144.098.
7. Phil Parsons, Denver, N.C., Oldsmobile, 144.023.

Raiders Drop Mark Wilson

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP) — The Los Angeles Raiders might avoid future quarterback controversies simply because they no longer have their most controversial quarterback.

Marc Wilson, who was mercilessly booed by fans at the Memorial Coliseum during recent seasons, was released by the club and is a free agent, a team spokesman said Friday night.

"We have not renewed our option on Marc Wilson," said spokesman Mike Ornstein, reading a statement from Al Davis, the Raiders' managing general partner.

"He is a free agent and able to negotiate with anyone he wants. We did not put him on waivers. We just did not renew his option. He's an automatic free agent."

Wilson, who earned $4 million during the last five years as the team's sometimes starter, was aware of developments, yet surprised by the team's decision.

"It's a bittersweet feeling," Wilson said from his home near Seattle. "I was looking forward to playing with the new coaching staff and the new offense. But this also opens up new opportunities."

Wilson's salary was $1 million last year, when the Raiders stumbled to 5-10.

He said the Raiders made a qualifying contract offer by the spring deadline, but did not follow up when it was necessary to renew contracts on June 1.

"As I understand it, they have to send you a letter on June 1 saying you can have the last written contract offer, or renew your contract for 110 percent of last year," Wilson said. "The Raiders did neither."

Wilson, 31, began the 1987 season as the backup to Rusty Hilger, but became the Raiders' starter for the final seven games. He had shared starting duties with Jim Plunkett for most of the previous four seasons.

He became the highest-paid Raider in 1983 when he signed a $4-million, five-year deal to end bidding with the now defunct USFL. Wilson and a number of other NFL clients of agent Howard Slusher had been wooed by Donald Trump, owner of the USFL's New Jersey Generals.

The Raiders elevated Wilson to the starting role despite a 5-2 record under Plunkett, then signed him to the richest NFL contract to that date before a game at Dallas.

Wilson's tenure as starter lasted only three games before he suffered a broken shoulder. Plunkett returned and led the Raiders to victory over the Washington Redskins in Super Bowl XVIII.

Wilson started 10 games in 1984.

In 1985, he led the Raiders to the AFC Western Division title after taking over for the injured Plunkett in the third game. Los Angeles went 11-2 from that point, winning its final six games, but was upset by New England in the playoffs.

Wilson opened the first eight games of 1986, when the Raiders finished 8-8 to start their current demise.

The job was given to Hilger in training camp last year, before Wilson replaced Hilger for the second half of the season.

Ironically, 1987 was Wilson's best statistical season. He finished fifth among AFC passers, completing 155 of 266 passes (57.1 percent) for 2,070 yards, with 12 touchdowns and 8 interceptions.

However, he became a target of the fans during the previous three years, when he threw more interceptions than touchdowns. His career interceptions outnumber his TD passes, 86 to 77.

Sports Notes

Rose Physicals Set For Tuesday

Rose High School and E.B. Aycock Junior High School will hold physicals for all prospective athletes on Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. in the Rose High School gymnasium.

All athletes who plan to participate in any sport at the two schools during the 1988-89 academic year should attend the physicals. No students will be allowed to participate in any sport without either one of these physicals, or one done by their own personal physician prior to the start of their sports' practice.

Pittsburgh Schedules Tryout Camp

The Pittsburgh Pirates will conduct a tryout camp at Harrington Field on the East Carolina University campus on June 13 at 9 a.m.

The tryouts are open to players 16 to 22 years old. All players must bring their complete uniform, including shoes, glove and personal gear. They are also responsible for their own expenses, although anyone signed will be reimbursed.

American Legion players must have and bring with them written permission from their coach or the Legion post commander in order to participate.

Greek Nationals Defeat Duke, 89-88

PIRAEUS, Greece (AP) — Greece's national team beat Duke University 89-88 Friday and Yugoslavia defeated Italy 83-82 in the opening round of the three-day Acropolis Cup basketball tournament.

Playing without its star guard, Greek-American Nikos Gallis, Greece led for most of the game, pulling ahead 52-32 with less than two minutes left in the first half.

But Danny Ferry, who had 39 points, led a second-half rally that came up just short.

Panayiotis Yannakis led the Greek squad with 18 points and Nikos Filippou had 17.

Robert Brickey scored 18 and Gregg Koubek added 16 for Duke.

Yugoslavia's Zarko Paspalij scored with 15 seconds to play in the game to give Yugoslavia its victory over Italy. Paspalij led all scorers with 26 points.

Hornets Turn To Player Studies

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Fresh from naming their first head coach, the NBA expansion Charlotte Hornets are beginning to consider what players it will acquire to fill its first roster.

Gene Littles, director of player personnel, told The Charlotte Observer the team is looking at Utah's Kelly Tripucka and Seattle's Tom Chambers as possible members of the inaugural team.

Littles said Thursday that Tripucka might be easier to acquire, having been hurt and seeing little playing time at Utah. But Littles said the Hornets would probably have to assume most of a salary reportedly as high as $900,000 per season.

Chambers is available through the new free-agency stipulations of the collective bargaining agreement, but he has said in recent weeks that he would rather stay with the SuperSonics, a contender, than go to a lesser team for slightly more money.

Hornets coach Dick Harter said he may be more interested in the expansion draft than with an eighth or ninth pick in the rookie draft. The Hornets and the Miami Heat will flip a coin in two weeks, with the winner deciding whether to take the first pick between the two teams in the expansion draft or the higher pick in the rookie draft.

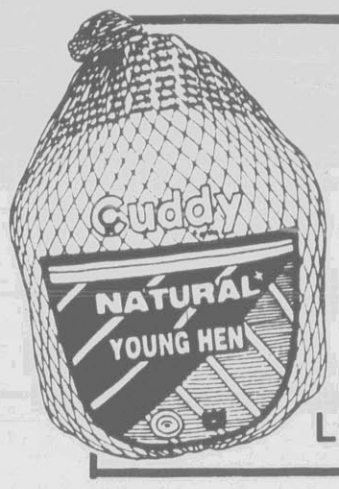

Carl Scheer, Hornets' vice president, said he'd rather have three of the top five players available in the expansion draft than the eighth and 33rd picks overall in the college draft.

While few details of Harter's contract were available at the announcement Thursday, The Charlotte Observer in its Friday editions quoted unidentified sources as saying it stipulates a two-year deal and some compensation if he doesn't continue with the club after two years.

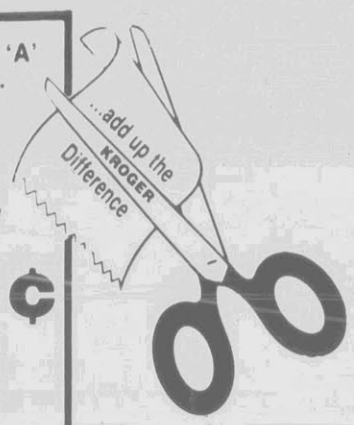

The pact also reportedly contains retirement benefits, a morality clause establishing standards of behavior and character and a stipulation that Harter be available for civic appearances. In addition to a salary, Harter reportedly will be provided with a car and will be given the opportunity to appear on a radio or television talk show.

Harter's salary was not revealed but NBA sources told the newspaper a first-time head coach currently makes about $200,000 a season.

Canseco's Blast Gets A's Going

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

A home run counts the same no matter how far it's hit. But when it comes down 456 from home plate there may be an aftershock.

That's what happened Friday night when Oakland's Jose Canseco hit a tape-measure home run with the bases empty in the third inning and Minnesota ahead 4-0. An inning later the Athletics had a 7-4 lead and went on to beat the Twins 8-5.

"They are like sharks," Minnesota third baseman Gary Gaetti said. "They smelled blood and they went into a frenzy."

In other American League games, it was New York 4, Baltimore 0; Cleveland 6, Detroit 3; Milwaukee 8, California 2; Texas 9, Chicago 3; Toronto 6, Boston 3; and Kansas City 3, Seattle 1.

The Athletics' eighth victory in their last nine contests — but first since Aug. 3, 1986, at the Metrodome, where they lost all seven games a year ago — gave them a 10-game lead over the defending world champion Twins and Texas in the AL West.

After Canseco's major-league-leading 14th homer, Dave Parker walked, Mark McGwire singled and Dave Henderson's double made it 4-3.

"A lot of players told me it woke them up, seeing me hit the ball that far," Canseco said. "When I'm playing in the outfield and see a guy hit the ball 200 feet over my head, it's got to intimidate a guy."

Glenn Hubbard walked to start the fourth and took third on Walt Weiss' single. Carney Lansford's grounder tied the score and Stan Javier's single chased loser Les Straker.

Mark Portugal loaded the bases by hitting Canseco with a pitch and Parker doubled for a 6-4 lead. McGwire followed with a sacrifice fly and Weiss hit his second home run in the eighth for Oakland's final run.

Oakland's Dave Stewart, 9-3, snapped a personal three-game losing streak. He survived Greg Gagne's second-inning grand slam that gave the Twins a 4-0 lead and went eight innings. Minnesota's Tim Laudner homered off Eric Plunk in the ninth.

Yankees 4, Orioles 0

Tommy John, New York's 45-year-old sinkerballer, scattered six singles in 7 2-3 innings and Claudell Washington hit a two-run homer. Rickey Henderson stole three bases, giving him 39 for the season and setting up New York's first two runs against rookie Jose Bautista.

Henderson walked to lead off the game, stole second and third and scored on a groundout by Washington. In the third, Henderson singled to deep short, stole second despite a pitchout and scored on a single by Willie Randolph. Washington hit his fourth home run of the season in the eighth following Willie Randolph's one-out single.

Indians 6, Tigers 3

Joe Carter became the first player in Cleveland history to hit 100 home runs and steal 100 bases. Carter's two-out homer started a four-run first inning that chased Walt Terrell. Carter doubled and scored one of two second-inning runs and also stole a base.

Cleveland got seven hits and four runs in the first inning, ending Terrell's 11-game winning streak at Tiger Stadium, where he hadn't lost since May 11, 1987.

Cleveland's Julio Franco singled on the game's first pitch, extending his hitting streak to 21 games, the longest in the major leagues this season. Willie Upshaw lined into a double play but the Indians followed with six consecutive hits — Carter's 11th homer and five singles, including a two-run hit by Dave Clark.

Eric King relieved and was touched for two runs in the second inning on Cory Snyder's bases-loaded single. Cleveland's Rich Yett allowed five hits and three runs in 6 1-3 innings.

Brewers 8, Angels 2

Tom Filer won his third straight game since being promoted from the minors, extending his seven-year unbeaten streak to 11 games, and B.J. Surhoff and Glenn Braggs homered.

Filer gave up two unearned runs in the first inning and yielded eight hits before being replaced by Chuck Crim with two out in the seventh. The 31-year-old right-hander, who didn't pitch in the majors during injury-filled seasons in 1986 and 1987, is 10-0 lifetime in the American League, including a 7-0 mark with Toronto in 1985. He was 2-1 with the Chicago Cubs in 1982.

"He's given up two earned runs, and that exceeds expectations for anyone — Teddy Higuera or Roger Clemens. It's just been some remarkable pitching," Milwaukee manager Tom Trebelhorn said of Filer, who lowered his ERA to 0.73.

The Brewers tagged Mike Witt for 13 hits and all their runs in 5 2-3 innings. Witt is 2-7 this season and 3-13 in his last 21 starts.

Rangers 9, White Sox 3

Ruben Sierra hit a three-run double, another double and a single and rookie Ray Hayward gave up two runs and two hits in six innings. In the third inning, the rookie left-hander walked four batters in a row, gave up a double, committed a balk and threw a wild pitch but escaped with only two runs.

The Rangers started the scoring in the first inning on Pete O'Brien's RBI single. Loser Dave LaPoint walked Steve Buechele, Mike Stanley and Jerry Browne to start the second and the White Sox appeared out of the inning when Bob Brower grounded into a double play via the plate. But Scott Fletcher walked to reload the bases and Sierra's double cleared them.

Fletcher singled two runs across in the seventh. Ivan Calderon homered in the eighth for Chicago.

Blue Jays 6, Red Sox 3

Fred McGriff had a single, double and a triple, scoring three runs and driving in one, as Toronto won its fourth straight game. Kelly Gruber hit a pair of RBI doubles and Ernie Whitt drove in two runs with a sacrifice fly and a single as the Blue Jays extended Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd's pitching slump.

Despite a 5-4 record, Boyd has allowed 36 runs, one unearned, in seven starts since May 3. Pitching just 33 1-3 innings in that span, he has allowed 49 hits and 17 walks with a 9.45 ERA.

Todd Stottlemyre earned the victory after relieving injured starter John Cerutti with runners at first and third and no one out in the fourth inning. After Toronto scored three runs in the fourth for a 4-2 lead, Cerutti was struck just below the right kneecap by Rick Cerone's line drive. X-rays disclosed no fracture,

Royals 3, Mariners 1

Bret Saberhagen pitched a six-hitter and Kurt Stillwell hit his sixth home run. Loser Mike Campbell went seven innings, allowing nine hits and all the Kansas City runs.

Kevin Seitzer doubled in the second inning, took third on Bill Buckner's hit and scored on Mike Macfarlane's double. Buckner scored on Jim Eisenreich's sacrifice fly.

Rey Quinones doubled leading off the Seattle third, went to third on a grounder and scored on Henry Cotto's sacrifice fly. Stillwell's homer in the fifth restored the Royals' two-run lead.

Leconte In French Final

PARIS (AP) — Henri Leconte can count on the Parisian fans when he goes into the French Open finals, but two-time champion Mats Wilander should feel right at home on the red clay at Roland Garros stadium.

"I know I have the public behind me," the 11th-seeded Leconte said Friday after beating Jonas Svensson of Sweden 7-6, 6-2, 6-3 to become the first Frenchmen in the finals here since Yannick Noah won the title five years ago.

Wilander has nearly an annual lease on center court for the first Sunday in June. This is the fifth year in the last seven that the 23-year-old Swede has made the French Open finals.

Leconte should hope the match on Sunday does not go the full five sets. Wilander improved his record to 11-1 in Grand Slam five-set matches by wearing down 18-year-old Andre Agassi of the United States 4-6, 6-2, 7-5, 5-7, 6-0 in the other men's semifinal.

Leconte, 24, said he hoped the French fans would be out rooting for him Sunday, but in the meantime he was not letting the excitement over his success go to his head.

"I'm concentrating completely on the tournament and not thinking about things outside," he said. "I'm not even paying much attention to what's written about me in the press."

Svensson, who had upset top-ranked Ivan Lendl in straight sets, said Leconte didn't let him play his serve-and-volley style.

"It's very difficult to play him," Svensson said. "He goes for everything. He makes a lot of unbelievable shots. I couldn't play my game."

Wilander, 23, won the French Open in 1982 and '85 and the Australian Open in '83, '84 and again this year. A clay court master who is not as strong on faster surfaces, he says he doesn't think he has a serious chance at winning all four Grand Slam events this year.

"I've never won two Grand Slam tournaments in the same year, and that's a big step," he said.

Wilander said he was surprised by how tough his match against Agassi was.

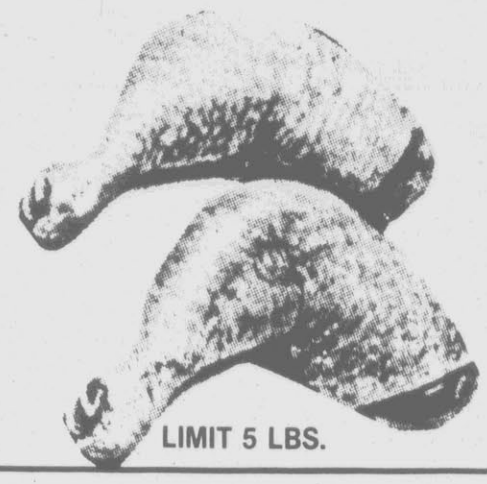

"I didn't think he'd be this good," said Wilander, who was just 17 when he first won the French Open. "I've never played against a player who hits the ball so hard on his forehand."

Agassi mixed his hard baseline shots with some on-court clowning, grabbing an umbrella from a fan when a rain shower passed and pointing his racket handle at Wilander as if to shoot him after the Swede made a series of amazing recoveries to win a point.

When the first set started, Agassi got to break point twice, but Wilander rallied to hold serve. After that, Agassi looked tired and beaten, unable to run down Wilander's shots.

Luxury Apartment Would Fit Bradford Novel

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

"The office was more like a drawing room...than a place of business. Emma Harte...had used valuable Georgian antiques...classic chintz fabrics...against the pine paneled walls, while antique porcelain lamps lent their own touches of elegance."

No, the Emma Harte who created this room is not a new name on the decorating horizon. Millions of readers and television viewers know her as the founder of Harte's of Knightsbridge, the fictional London department store created by novelist Barbara Taylor Bradford.

Bradford is a former decorating writer whose 1979 first novel, "A Woman of Substance," introduced Emma to the waiting world and sold 11 million copies. Recently, just before publication of the third volume in the series, "To Be The Best," (Doubleday), she invited a reporter to view the environment in which she writes about (in the dust jacket's words) "the glittering arena of immense wealth, glamour and power...from Yorkshire to London to Paris to New York."

From every beautifully decorated room, there's a stunning view of the city and the East River. Fine English antiques, contemporary French paintings and collectibles such as cranberry glass, Staffordshire pottery, Chinese porcelain, antique perfume bottles and pill boxes are set out in rooms whose walls are lined with costly linen and silk.

A Coromandel screen and brilliant crystal chandelier distinguish the formal dining room, whose mirrored ceiling reflects the burgundy-red raw silk walls, the glint of crystal and porcelain. Deep inviting sofas dot the large living room with its spectacular views.

Besides the magnificent dining room and living room, the apartment boasts three Italian-tiled baths and 2 powder rooms, a sunny white kitchen, a pastel-soft master bedroom suite, Bradford's writing room, her husband's study and a guest room.

Although the elegance may be traditional, each room has its 20th century marvels — large screen television, (the bedroom's set hidden within a cabinet and rising on a silent hydraulic lift at the touch of a bedside button), videocassette recorders in almost every room so her television producer husband, Robert, can keep in touch with and both can watch the now-inevitable serializations of her novels.

Open the closets and you'll see neatly arrayed a large and exquisite wardrobe of a woman who reportedly recently signed a $9 million contract with Random House for three upcoming novels.

A similar sense of order prevails in her writing room. The view from the room is great and there are comfortable sofas for lounging. But at its business end — the desk where the lion's share of the oeuvre is created — stands an electric typewriter and several no-nonsense desk lamps.

To a visitor, the extreme orderliness of the writing area and closets offer a clue to the attention to detail and single-mindedness that have led to success for the informal, unassuming and pleasant woman behind the legend.

She could easily afford to employ secretaries to take dictation or could work at a state-of-the-art computer. But, she said, "I sit here with a yellow pad and write by hand. I start typing only after I've gotten started."

Once she does switch to the typewriter, she keeps at it for eight to nine hours at a clip. She says her invariable routine when working on a novel is to be at her desk every day but Saturday by 7:30 a.m. "I try to leave something to be corrected and start on that."

Around noon, she takes a brief lunch break then gets back to work. "When I am writing, that is all I do. I come out between books for a short while, make the scene and then I disappear again."

Bradford, who was born in Leeds, England, began her writing career as a reporter on the Yorkshire Evening Post. She was fashion editor of "Woman's Own," a magazine in London, by the time she was 20 and later held other newspaper and magazine writing posts in London before meeting and marrying Robert Bradford and moving to New York in 1963.

In the United States, she edited a decorating magazine, wrote decorating books and for 12 years she wrote a syndicated decorating column called "Designing Woman."

She had five unfinished novels in her files when she began writing "A Woman of Substance" which was an immediate best-seller.

On The House

What's new on the market?

THE PRODUCT — A portable cordless motor tool for polishing, cutting, sanding, grinding and drilling.

Manufacturer's claim — That this motor tool accomplishes everything the corded model does but permits outdoor repairs where no AC power source is available...that its many applications include remote repairs on boats and other recreational vehicles...that it can be used for automotive repairs, for out-of-the-way repairs on rooftops, in tight places or anywhere corded power tools are cumbersome...that it handles all accessories and attachments...that it uses a 6-volt high-torque motor powered by five Ni-Cad batteries...that it has operating speeds of 15,000 and 20,000 RPMs...and that it is available in kit or tool-only forms.

Manufacturer's claim — That this phone comes in 10 attractive colors to match any decor...that it is a Swiss-designed product...that its advanced robotized manufacture and surface-mounted device circuitry is tough and durable and comes with a five-year warranty...that it has virtually no wires...that it actually is a fashion accessory for the home...that, besides its 10 colors and graphic designs, it can be purchased with five accessories in five different colors.

Manufacturer's claim — That this semi-gloss sheen is for do-it-yourselfers who want to get a hand-rubbed "European" finish...that the liquid plastic finish per se is the original film-building polyurethane coating...that it is available in gallon, quart, pint and half-pint sizes, as well as the convenient 11.25-ounce aerosol spray...and that it is easy to apply, dries fast and is extremely durable.

THE PRODUCT — A paint roller with a built-in handle that holds enough paint to coer about 70 square feet.

Manufacturer's claim — That this roller provides a fast and easy way to handle all types of latex painting without a messy roller tray...that the built-in 22-inch handle loads like a syringe...that it has a snap-in-place paint shield...and that it provides fast and easy, splatter-free rolling.

(The cordless motor tool is manufactured by Dremel, 4915 Twenty-First St., Racine, Wis., 53406; the telephone by Swisstel, Inc., 300-1(c) Route 17, Lodi, N.J., 07644; the semi-gloss finish by The Flecto Co., 1000 45th St., Oakland, Calif., 94608; and the paint roller by Wagner Spray Tech Corp., P. O. Box 9362, Minneapolis, Minn., 55440.)

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much helpful information on a variety of subjects in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $2 to this paper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J., 07666.)

Here's The Answer

AP Newsfeatures

Q. — We have an old brick house one of its previous owners painted white. We recently saw a photo of the house before the brick was painted. To us, it seems the house was much prettier then. Is there an easy way to remove the paint and strip it down to the original color of the brick?

A. — No. Removing paint from brick is a tough job, especially when you are talking about a whole house. The only way to get the kind of result you apparently are looking for is to hire a contractor to sandblast. Get two or three estimates from a company that does such work.

Q. — My brother and I painted the outside of our house about a year ago. It seemed like a good job at the time but the surface now has become what we have found is alligatoring. I have had differing opinions on the cause of this. Can you enlighten us so we do not make the same mistake in the future?

A. — Generally, alligatoring results from a second coat of paint being applied over the first before the first has dried completely. There are several other causes, but this is by far the most common. Most of the time, the defect does not go through to the siding itself. When it does, the paint film takes on a scaly appearance rather than a resemblance to the skin of an alligator.

Q. — The walkway in front of our house is made of large slabs of concrete with a tiny space between the slabs. One of the slabs has started to sink. I know I can break up the concrete, take up the pieces and put down some new concrete, but I hate to do this since the slab is in good condition except for the big tilt in it where it has sunken. Is it possible for me to lift the slab in some way so that it can be made level, perhaps by putting some dirt or gravel underneath it?

A. — It is possible, but it involves a lot of work, technical knowledge and the right equipment. Also, it is something of a gamble, simply because it may not come out right. Your best bet is to hire a concrete contractor who has the proper equipment for leveling such slabs. In such a procedure, soft dirt or mud is pumped under the slab.

Q. — I have to remove varnish from some furniture that has a lot of curves, carvings and moldings in it. I know I can't scrape the wood after applying a bleach and I suspect some kind of brush may do the trick. But, I don't want to spoil the furniture. Any ideas?

A. — Yes. An excellent tool for this purpose is an old, clean toothbrush. But almost any kind of small brush with fairly stiff bristles will do.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, bleach, remover, stain, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 75 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y., 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Garden Clinic

Q. How long should tomato plants be protected from the hot sun after being transplanted into the garden?

A. Protect the young plants for two to four days after transplanting them into the garden. Protection from the sun and wind can be provided by newspaper, a board, a pot or the branch of a tree shrub that needed some pruning. Water the plants thouroughly when you plant them and keep an eye on them so they do not dry up during the critical days following transplanting. Transplanting soon after a rain or when cloudy in the late afternoon will also reduce transplant shock.

Q. What is the difference between BT and milky spore disease?

A. Bacillus thuringensis, commonly called BT, is a bacterial disease of caterpillars. It affects gypsy moth, cabbage looper, armyworms, imported cabbageworms, corn earworm, and certain other caterpillars. Milky spore disease is the common name for a disease caused by the bacterium Bacillus popilliae. The disease affects Japanese beetle grubs and certain other grubs. Products containing both of these biological controls can be purchased from various sources. Products containing milky spore disease need to be used over a wide area to be most affective.

Q. What should be done in the vegetable garden during June?

A. Continue to make successive plantings of warm seasonable vegetables. Control insect pests and diseases as they develop. Harvest vegetables early in the morning for their best quality. Destroy early spring vegetables after harvest is completed. Plant fall tomatoes from the last part of the month through the middle of July. Sidedress vegetables to promote growth. Use mulches to conserve moisture and control weeds. Irrigate garden with one inch of water per week as needed.

Q. Will New Guinea impatiens grow in full sun?

A. New Guinea impatiens will grow in full sun but prefer partial shade. New Guinea impatiens will have sparse blooms and poor flower color when grown in full shade. This is unlike regular impatiens which thrive in the shade.

Former NYSE Chief: Market Could Crash Again

By MARCY GORDON
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Any shred of innocence Wall Street may have retained was lost in last October's crash, leaving stock exchanges of the future to grapple with challenges their leaders could barely imagine a few years ago.

Robert J. Birnbaum, who left the New York Stock Exchange this past week after serving as its president and chief operating officer since 1985, warns that "anything that happened once can happen again."

Birnbaum, 60, is an amiable, self-effacing lawyer and elder statesman among stock exchange managers. He came to the NYSE after 18 years at the smaller American Stock Exchange, including eight as its president, giving him an excellent vantage point on the stock market's recent rocky past and daunting future.

He will become special counsel in the New York office of Dechert Price & Rhoads, a large law firm.

As the "inside" manager in charge of day-to-day operations at the NYSE, Birnbaum lacked the high public profile of John J. Phelan Jr., the exchange's chairman. In the panicky days of the October collapse, while Phelan presided over packed news conferences in an effort to calm the jittery investing public, Birnbaum quietly worked behind the scenes to restore order to a market that had veered out of control.

In an interview Thursday, his final day at the exchange, Birnbaum took an inventory of what he had seen and the challenges that lie ahead for the securities industry.

One of the stock exchange's most imposing tasks is technological. To help cope with another potential cataclysm, the NYSE has to gear up to handle billions of daily trades, Birnbaum said. The exchange was strained to the breaking point on Oct. 19 by the plunge in stock prices and an unprecedented volume of trading — about 600 million shares.

Birnbaum's successor, 41-year-old Richard A. Grasso, is known for his expertise with the exchange's computers and communications systems. He is responsible for upgrades of the systems that recently gave the Big Board the capacity to manage volume of 600 million shares a day as efficiently as it once handled 200 million.

But Birnbaum doesn't believe the technological revolution will eventually create a trading floor populated only by machines, without the push-and-pull of human interaction.

"You don't allow technology alone to decide the type of marketplace that is best for the United States," he insisted. "You need the interface on the floor."

Another huge change that Birnbaum underscored is the growing involvement of government with the stock exchanges — especially after the crash and the recent insider trading scandals. The Reagan administration appointed a special panel to study the October debacle and make recommendations, while Congress, the Securities and Exchange Commission and others have also gotten involved.

"It's light-years different from what it used to be; there's a much more intensive involvement with the government," Birnbaum said. "You have to touch the bases. (The government) turns slowly ... you have to deal with it delicately and slowly."

Birnbaum understands the government perspective on regulation of the financial markets. He worked as an attorney at the SEC in Washington from 1961 to 1966 before going to the American Stock Exchange.

As NYSE president, Birnbaum tried to persuade brokerage firms that they must regulate themselves, or Washington would step in and do it for them. He was instrumental in fashioning a package of new rules for exchange members early last year in response to the insider trading scandals.

Birnbaum is a staunch defender, on the other hand, of the NYSE's "specialist" system — which has come under criticism for not doing more to smoothe out the market during the crash. Specialists are appointed by exchanges to make markets in individual stocks. They are charged with ensuring the market is orderly, even if that means buying and selling equities from their own accounts.

Reports this past week, first published by The New York Times, indicated that the specialists enjoyed their most profitable year ever in 1987 despite the crash and yet failed to bolster their capital reserves to protect themselves against another disaster.

"The specialist system was outstanding" during the crash, Birnbaum maintained. "I haven't seen, in my own time in the business, a system that works better."

In other business and economic news this past week:

—The government said the nation's civilian unemployment rate rose to 5.6 percent in May, only its second increase in 20 months. Other reports showed the government's economic forecasting gauge rose modestly, orders to U.S. factories surged, construction spending increased and sales of new homes climbed during April. Farm reports showed exports up in March and prices to farmers up in May.

—The nation's largest general retailers reported disappointing sales again in May as a long buying slump continued. Consumers were said to be bothered by high installment debts and cool weather and bored with current fashions.

—A private survey found contracting for new construction projects declined 6 percent in April from the previous month, extending a downward slide that began last fall.

—The government said foreign purchases of U.S. businesses dropped 22 percent to $30.5 billion in 1987, the first dip since 1983.

—The standard of living of workers in other major countries has risen four times as fast as the U.S. standard of living in the past 15 years, a study on American competitiveness said.

—The government has concluded that both Eastern Airlines and its sister carrier, Continental Airlines, are safe to fly, but a bitter labor-management war at Eastern raises possible safety risks if allowed to continue.

—A proposed mandatory drug-testing program for airline workers prompted sharp criticism from airline labor unions, which argued there is no evidence of a problem in the industry to warrant it.

—Financier Carl C. Icahn sought to turn up the heat in his fight with Texaco Inc., calling together securities analysts to try to convince them he has the financing to follow through on his takeover bid. Many analysts remained skeptical about his $60-per-share offer.

—Burlington Northern Inc., owner of the nation's largest railroad, announced a major restructuring that includes separating non-transportation operations into a subsidiary that eventually will be spun off as a separate company.

—Publishing giant Macmillan Inc. announced a major restructuring that it valued at more than $1.66 billion, seeking to counter a hostile takeover bid by Texas investor Robert M. Bass.

—An investment group including Asher B. Edelman offered to buy the telecommunications company Centel Corp. for $2.8 billion in cash.

—The Federal Trade Commission approved American Stores Co.'s plans to acquire Lucky Stores Inc., provided American divests itself of stores in California and its interest in a Midwestern grocery chain.

—Pittsburgh-based Koppers Co., one of the largest U.S. road repair companies, dropped its resistance to a $1.7 billion takeover bid from British industrialist Brian C. Beazer. But city officials in Pittsburgh refused to give up the fight, asking a federal judge to delay the takeover.

—Billionaire computer pioneer H. Ross Perot launched a new consulting business with a contract to study cost-cutting for the U.S. Postal Service. But there was concern on Wall Street that Perot had lured away talent from the company he once served as chairman, General Motors Corp.'s Electronic Data Systems unit.

—The Supreme Court, in a victory for bargain hunters and discount dealers, upheld federal regulations that allow a multibillion-dollar "gray market" in which costly imported goods are sold at reduced prices.

—Aspirin sales shot up 41 percent in early February after the release of a widely publicized study on aspirin and heart attacks, but volume quickly returned to previous levels, statistics from a market research firm indicated.

—The publisher of Consumer Reports said the Suzuki Samurai is so unstable it "literally trips over its own feet" and rolls over. The magazine gave the popular sport vehicle its first "not acceptable" rating in 10 years.

PHOTOGRAPHY MADE SIMPLE — A Minolta Corp. technician inserts a "Creative Expansion Card" — a special computer chip — into the company's new Maxxum 7000i at its Ramsey, N.J., plant. Consumers See Stable Milk Prices

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The price of milk has fallen 8 cents a gallon since January, but only dairy farmers have noticed.

North Carolina dairy farmers got $15.90 per hundred pounds of milk in January. Now they're getting $14.98. South Carolina dairy farmers were getting $15.80 in January. Now they're getting $15.08.

But many retailers aren't passing along to consumers the drop that results from a lower federal price support, too much milk on the market and a summer swing to soft drinks.

"The price has been dropping consistently since the first of the year," said Ralph Clark, auditor for the S.C. Department of Agriculture. "With the summer months now coming on, I would expect additional surpluses."

At the same time, milk prices have stayed $1.99 a gallon at one large grocery chain.

Prices to farmers are falling despite a federal buyout that cut yearly national milk production 12.3 billion pounds by buying whole herds for slaughter or export between February 1986 and August 1987.

"I don't whether they actually thought it would kill the problem," Neil Sinclair of the N.C. Milk Commission told The Charlotte Observer. "It did take a lot of milk out.

"The thing is the producers that stayed in have increased production. In North Carolina, they have not caught up with it yet. It's kind of a wash. Our production has been creeping up."

N.C. monthly production was down as much as 13 percent compared with previous years after the buyout and Grade A production for 1987 was 9.6 percent behind 1986. Monthly totals now are down about 1 percent. The state had 905 producers in March.

Southern farmers participated heavily in the buyout — about 21,000 cows in the Carolinas — while Wisconsin and Minnesota sold less.

Since then, low feed costs have made dairying more profitable. Florida, Texas and California producers have expanded rapidly, worsening the surplus the buyout was supposed to end.

The same law that called for the buyout also forced a 50-cent drop in the federal price support in January, when the expected milk surplus was more than 5 billion pounds.

N.C. State University Economist Jeff Benson said farm prices would have fallen about 30 cents because of seasonal changes and surpluses.

"Congress has not been very adept about setting a price nationally," Benson said. "They've tended to overshoot, as is usually the case with Congress, I guess."

N.C. Jobless Rate Fell

RALEIGH (AP) — Propelled by rapidly growing exports from North Carolina factories, North Carolina's jobless rate fell to 3.5 percent in May, the lowest rate since state officials began tracking employment in January 1974.

The state's unemployment rate declined from a seasonally adjusted 3.7 percent in April and beat February's record rate of 3.6 percent, the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics reported. The rate was also the lowest among the nation's 10 largest states.

The U.S. jobless rate grew slightly, to 5.6 percent from 5.4 percent in April, a 14-year low.

Analysts attributed the decline in North Carolina's jobless rate to the weakness of the U.S. dollar, which makes U.S. goods less expensive — and easier to export — than foreign-made goods. The impact of the dollar's value is especially acute in North Carolina, where 30 percent of the labor force is employed in factory jobs, compared with 18 percent nationwide.

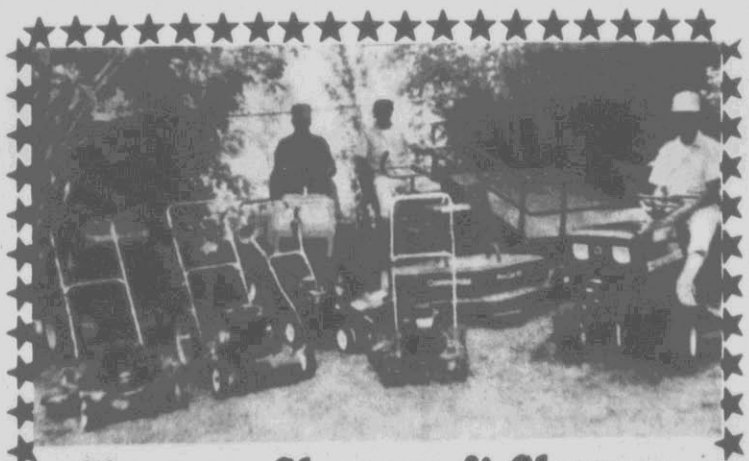

"With the recovery in manufacturing and the export boom, you would find North Carolina's performance is above average," said Pat Neilson, an information officer in Atlanta with the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics.

"North Carolina also has found a levelling-off in textile employment and even a slight increase in jobs there," Neilson told The News and Observer of Raleigh. "I understand that some of your textile mills are running seven days a week."

North Carolina's mills employed 4,400 more textiles workers in the first quarter this year, compared with the same period last year. They earned an average $7 an hour.

The state's labor force totaled 3.2 million people in April, the latest month for which figures are available. In April 109,400 people were without jobs, compared with 129,100 a year earlier, according to the state Employment Security Commission.

The health of the U.S. economy also helped North Caroliona, said G. Donald Jud, professor of finance at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. With companies nationwide increasing spending for equipment while consumers keep retail sales at a brisk pace, he said, the North Carolina is expected to continue its health growth.

Gary and Pam Cooke announced that Data Service, G.P., has moved to 417 Evans St. in Greenville (752-4565).

Managers Named

Belk of Greenville announced that Mary Anne Saieed and Craig Bounds have been appointed division merchandise managers.

Belk said that Ms. Saieed will have responsibility for the buying, merchandising and sales supervision of the ladies dresses, coats and suit departments.

Bounds will be responsible for the buying, merchandising, and sales supervision of the men's, women's and children's shoe division, Belk said.

A Greenville native, Ms. Saieed attended Greenville schools and graduated from East Carolina University with a degree in fashion merchandising. She was named to the Belk Management Training Program in 1986 and was assigned to Belk in Washington for training. She graduated from the Belk Junior Executive Training Program and has attended the Belk Merchandising Seminar and Training programs.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Saieed of Greenville.

Bounds, a native of Halifax County, graduated from Weldon High School and attended East Carolina University.

He joined Belk in Greenville as a sales associate in September 1987 following eight years of experience with another retailer.

Bounds is married to the former Denna Howell of Greenville.

Lease Is Signed

Whites Stores Ltd., headquartered in Greenville, announced that it has signed a lease for space in the Jordan Shopping Center in Clinton.

In its announcement, Whites management announced plans for its new prototype store.

Whites said the opening planned for Aug. 1 will be the ninth company store serving towns and communities in eastern North Carolina.

Merger Announced

Connally Branch of Clark-Branch, Realtors, in Greenville announced that University Realty has merged with the firm.

Branch said that Jean W. Hopper, former owner of University Realty, will specialize in residential and income producing properties with Clark-Branch.

She is married to Bill Hopper and they reside in Holly Ridge in Pitt County.

Ms. Hopper has over 15 years experience as a licensed broker in North Carolina and Alabama. She has received several honors, including state director of the Board of Realtors 1987, president of the Board of Realtors 1986, Realtor of the Year 1985, president of the Women's Council of Realtors 1984 and 1985, and life member of the Million Dollar Sales Club.

Department Addition

Fountain Power Boats of Whichard's Beach Road, Washington, N.C., announced the addition of Lofton's Hauling Express to the company's transportation and delivery department.

Fountain said that J. Donald Lofton, owner and supervisor, is a Greenville native and a graduate of C.M. Eppes High School and South Central Community College, New Haven, Conn.

He is a member of Phillipi Church of Christ in Greenville. Lofton, the son of Ida Holloway Lofton, is married to the former Nora Ellen Hawkins of Grimesland.

Classes Scheduled

The Small Business Center at Pitt Community College announced that it will offer three classes this week on the PCC campus.

"Childcare Training" begins Wednesday from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. and meets once a week for four weeks in Room 202, Whichard Building.

"Notary Public Education" will be taught Tuesday from 6 p.m. to 10 p.m. for one night only in Room 213, Whichard Building.

Murphy Sales Post

Pat Murphy, vice president of the Thomas D. Murphy Co. of Red Oak, Iowa, announced that Martin Zimmerman has been named sales representative for the company covering the southeastern section of North Carolina.

Zimmerman, a 1988 Presidents Club member, has been associated with the company since 1979 as agent for the northeastern section of North Carolina. He will direct the sales efforts for most of the area from I-95 to the coast and will maintain his office in Rocky Mount.

Employees Honored

Ormond N. Windham, a PBX installer repairer in the company's CBS department, and William B. Harris, a business service technician in the department, received safe driver awards for 20 and 19 years of safe driving with the company, respectively.

Norris W. "Chips" Smith, an OSP engineer in the distribution department, received an emblem in recognition of 10 years of service with the company.

A Pitt County native, Windham and his wife, Katherine, reside in Greenville with their two children. The family attends Reedy Branch Baptist Church.

Harris, a Wilson County native, and his wife, Brenda, have two children and reside on Route 1, Fountain. The family attends Dilda's Grove Baptist Church.

BB&T Appointment

Dorson White has been named business services officer for Branch Banking & Trust Co. in Greenville, the bank announced.

BB&T said White joined the bank this year and brings 10 years of banking experience to the Wilson-based company.

A Swansboro native, White is a graduate of Elon College with a degree in history. A member of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church, he is married to the former Leslie Kelley of Concord and they have two children.

Sales Achievement

Jim Taunton, a sales representative with Kentucky Central Life Insurance Co. in Greenville, was honored for "superior sales" by being named a delegate to the company's recent Hawaii convention.

The company said Taunton and his wife, June, joined Kentucky Central Life's other top salespeople for a week at Hawaii's Westin Kauai resort. Company sales leaders from all over the nation attended the activities.

Kentucky Central Life has over $34 billion of life insurance in force, the company said.

Wellness Session

Dr. Evelyn Knight, assistant professor for community health at East Carolina University, attended the national meeting for executive directors of Wellness Councils of America recently in Omaha, Neb.

Wellness Council of America is the parent organization that supports work of local wellness organizations.

Dr. Knight spearheaded the organization of the Pitt-Greenville Wellness Council which is an arm of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

The Pitt-Greenville organization exists to promote and facilitate wellness programs at the worksite. Wellness concepts foster lifestyles and activities which optimize personal and organizational health and productivity.

Positions Filled

Ken Stallings, vice president of COECO Office Systems Inc., announced the appointment two people to positions with the company.

Stallings said Ann Barnes, account representative, will be responsible for the sale of typewriters, word processing systems and personal typing systems in Pitt, Greene, Martin, Beaufort and Washington counties.

A graduate of Hollins College with a degree in business administration, she was the former sales manager for the Sheraton Greenville. She is married to Mitch Barnes.

Mary Strange, account representative, is responsible for typewriters, word processing systems and personal typing systems for Pamlico, Lenoir, Carteret and Craven counties, Stallings said.

She is a 1987 graduate of East Carolina University with a degree in computer science and business.

Recognition Program

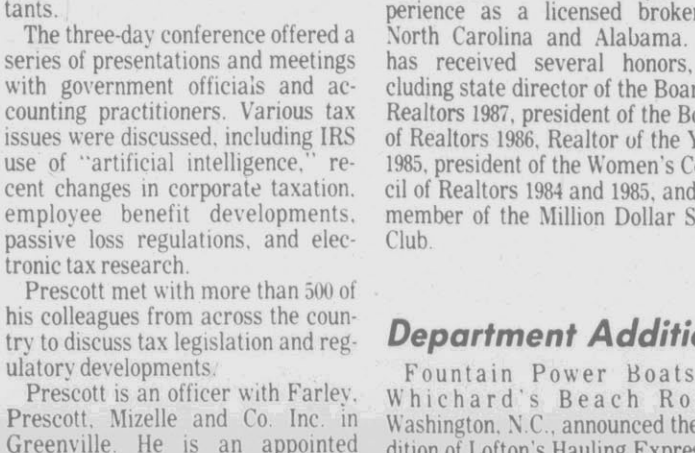

Grady-White Boats of Greenville announced that the company began a new "Employee of the Month" recognition program in May.

The firm said Willie Green of the small parts department of the plant's lamination area was chosen for the initial May award.

Grady-White said that while Green's main job is small parts grinder, he is cross-trained in other areas such as gel coating the boat molds. Green has been associated with the company for nine years.

Superfast Trains Touted As Congestion Solutions

By GENE KRAMER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Organizers of a gathering on high-speed train travel touted a half-dozen versions of superfast trains as potential solutions to growing airport and road congestion in the United States. But none of the prototypes was made in America.

The trains, some now operating and some in the experimental stage, can reach speeds of 130 to 300 miles an hour. Four had trains with wheels and two had wheel-less vehicles that use a magnetic levitation system. That system uses electromagnetic force for guidance and propulsion, with the train maintaining minimum contact with a guideway.

In a speech during the High Speed Rail Association's meeting, John H. Riley, the U.S. government's rail administrator, predicted high-speed rail would be a reality "in our lifetime," and said he could not imagine that the United States would be the only advanced country "left behind when the high-speed train leaves the station."

A dozen projects using high-speed trains are being considered in the United States, which was built up by railroads a century ago. But the U.S. proposals are all in the early stages, delegates the meeting were told this past week.

The prototypes, which come from Europe, Japan and Canada, are:

—West Germany's Intercontinental Express train, which on a May 1 trial run with passengers set a new speed record for wheeled trains of 252 mph.

—The French TGV, the world's fastest in regular operation, which has reached a speed of 236 mph and operates regularly at a maximum of 168 mph between Paris and Lyon.

—Japan's "Shinkansen," known abroad as the Bullet Train, the world's first superfast train system. It has carried more than 2 billion passengers without a single casualty since it started 24 years ago running at speeds up to 130 mph.

—Japan's experimental magnetic levitation rail car, which has reached an unmanned speed of 321 mph.

—The European Transrapid International magnetic levitation vehicle, which reached 252 mph with passengers on its test track at Emsland, West Germany, last Dec. 11, the same speed as the wheeled Intercontinental Express train this year.

The proposed U.S. systems under study:

—Empire Corridor. The New York-Albany-Montreal (Canada) route.

—Florida. Miami-Orlando-Tampa. Authorities are considering proposals by a U.S.-Swedish-Swiss-Japanese consortium and by a French-U.S. company.

—Georgia. Atlanta-Macon-Savannah. Possible French participation.

—Ohio. Cleveland-Columbus-Cincinnati. Task force report due June 30.

—Colorado. Pueblo-Denver-Fort Collins corridor under study.

—New Mexico. Los Alamos-Santa Fe-Abuquerque-Las Cruces corridor under study.

—Los Angeles. Routes to Las Vegas and San Francisco under study. Los Angeles-San Diego project abandoned for financial and environmental reasons.

Car Builders Say Domestic Sales Up, Imports Down

By JANET BRAUNSTEIN
AP Auto Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Sales of domestic cars and trucks picked up late last month, helping produce a 15.8 percent increase for the month against a year ago, while import sales declined 3.1 percent, auto companies reported.

The eight companies that build cars and trucks in the United States sold 437,233 vehicles in the eight selling days from May 21-31, up 14.8 percent from 380,732 in the identical period a year ago.

Together, domestic automakers sold 12.5 percent more North American-made cars and 19.2 percent more domestic trucks than in late May 1987.

Overall sales of cars and light trucks, imported and domestic, were up 10.8 during the month compared with May 1987.

"With less generous (sales) incentives ... we've still got some momentum underneath this market, some good underlying strength," said Joseph Phillippi, an analyst with Shearson Lehman Hutton in New York.

Domestic car sales by General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. rose 13.4 percent in late May from a year ago, while Big Three domestic light truck sales jumped 17.9 percent, the makers reported.

In late May, GM and Ford increased their shares of the domestic car market while Chrysler's share slipped slightly despite a 6.5 percent increase in sales. Together, the Big Three held 89 percent of the domestic market.

GM's late May domestic car sales rose 14.3 percent from a year ago; Ford's rose 15.2 percent.

Ford's domestic truck sales slipped 1.7 percent in late May, along with its share of the market, while GM's truck sales rose 44.3 percent and its share grew to 42.9 percent from 35.4 percent in late May a year ago.

Chrysler's domestic truck sales, which include Jeep products, were up 10.6 percent, but its share of the market fell slightly. The Big Three control 97 percent of the domestic truck market.

During all of May, foreign and domestic makers together sold 1,433,365 cars and light trucks. Domestic car sales rose 12.8 percent while domestic truck sales jumped 21.4 percent from May 1987.

But while import car sales rose 3.6 percent from May 1987, import truck sales fell 25.5 percent.

During May, imported Japanese cars and light trucks made up 17.1 percent of all vehicles sold, a decline from 19.7 percent in May 1987. European car sales remained 23 percent lower than in May a year ago.

IRS-Defaulters

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Education William J. Bennett has asked Congress to move quickly to keep alive a program that allows the Internal Revenue Service to withhold tax refunds from student loan defaulters.

The government in the past three years has recovered $532 million from loan defaulters, but its authority to dock the tax refunds expires June 30.

"It is critical that the Congress act quickly if this program is to be kept alive," Bennett said in letters to the chairmen of the House and Senate tax committees.

He said his department and other agencies need to know by mid-June if the authority will be extended in order to continue carrying out offsets on 1987 tax returns and to gear up for the next tax year.

Bennett said that $213 million has been recovered so far this fiscal year, $50 million more than it had anticipated. Collections averaged $10 million a week during March, April and May. During the second week of May, $16 million in refunds was withheld from 32,000 defaulters.

The $532 million figure includes some money that defaulters paid back voluntarily.

Pegasus Launch

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — A small Virginia aerospace firm says it has signed a Pentagon contract to launch an unspecified cargo next year with a new rocket strapped under the wing of a bomber until released and fired.

Orbital Sciences Corp. said the first launch of its Pegasus rocket is scheduled for mid-1989. The customer is the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency.

Business Notes

Figures Improved

Richard E. Heckert, chairman of Du Pont and Co., announced that net income of $590 million for the first quarter was 51 percent above the $391 million earned in the first quarter of 1987.

Heckert said earnings per share were $2.45 compared with $1.62 in the same period a year earlier.

The spokesman said the effect on first quarter earnings from nonrecurring items was a benefit of $40 million or 16 cents per share.

Total company sales for the quarter were $8 billion, 12 percent above sales of $7.1 billion in the same period a year ago.

Record Revenues

Western Steer-Mom 'n' Pops Inc. reported record revenues of $82,948,000 for the year ending Feb. 27, up 32 percent from $62,853,000 reported in the prior year.

The company said net income declined to $1,353,000 in the current year compared to $1,650,000 last year, a decrease of 18 percent.

Earnings per share were 56 cents compared to 73 cents last year, based on 2,506,326 and 2,348,281 weighted average shares outstanding in 1988 and 1987.

The company, which operates 50 restaurants in seven southeastern states, has a restaurant in Greenville.

Sales Increased

L.H. Harvin III, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Rose's Stores Inc., announced that total sales for the first quarter of 1988 increased 3.9 percent to a record $308,350,000 as identical store sales decreased 2.9 percent.

Harvin said net earnings decreased 16 percent from last year, but if 1987 earnings were adjusted for the extraordinary gain from the sale of real estate, 1988 earnings would have increased 2.7 percent.

Rose's has two stores in Greenville.

Workshop Attended

Cindy Hoblitzell and Richard Lane of Ball & Lane in Greenville attended a one-day workshop recently in Rocky Mount sponsored by the Rocky Mount Board of Realtors.

Workshop topics included: determining values for different property features; FHA, VA and conventional loan requirements related to real estate appraisals, and typical house repairs required by appraisers.

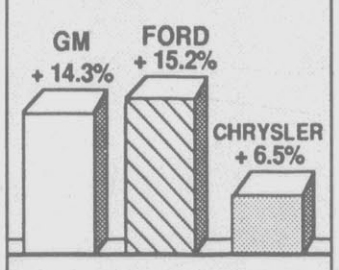

Stamps Missing

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — About $1.4 million in old postage stamps destined for collectors in Britain has disappeared from an airport warehouse in Liberia, the government said.

The Ministry of Post and Telecommunications confirmed that the stamps were missing after two daily newspapers broke the story.

ORIGINAL COVER — A new cover, no doubt touting the author as an Edgar winner, is being designed for "Bimbos of the Death Sun," the mystery novel which won Sharyn McCrumb one of the highest awards in mystery writing for the past year.

PROUD OWNER — Sharyn Arwood McCrumb, whose father lives in Greenville, is the recent recipient of an internationally coveted award for excellence in mystery writing, the Edgar Allen Poe Award — better known as the Edgar. She poses with the statuette of Poe presented her in New York recently for having written the book judged the best paperback original mystery novel of 1987.

Former Area Resident Is Edgar Winner

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Sharyn Arwood McCrumb remembers fondly wher first writing award when she was in the 10th grade at Rose High School, soon after her family moved to Greenville in 1963.

But recently the increasingly well-known fiction writer has garnered an honor that thrilled her more. She accepted an Edgar Award — the Oscar of mystery-writing — during a week-long International Crime Writers Congress in New York City. Having this award to her credit has catapulted her to the top of the mystery writing field and substantially enhanced the monetary value of everything she writes in the future.

Having published her first novel, "Sick of Shadows" in 1984, Mrs. McCrumb has published one each year since, including "Lovely in Her Bones" in 1985 and "Highland Laddie Gone" in 1986. Her 1987 Edgar-winning novel is titled, "Bimbos of the Death Sun" and is an account of the unraveling of a murder which takes place at a science fiction writers' convention. Her next novel, "Paying The Piper," is slated to come out later this year, but the cover design has gone back to the drawing board to have the words "Edgar Winner" placed on it. This distinction, no doubt, will be noted on every book she produces in the future. She is one of only 10 women who have received an Edgar during its 42-year history.

What was her 1963 or thereabouts prize-winning short story about? She says her memory of it is a little vague, but she knows it was about a boy going off the college. It won the Robert Orville Moye short story award given by the Greenville Woman's Club.

Mrs. McCrumb is the daughter of retired East Carolina University elementary education department chairman Dr. Frank Arwood. Her parents retired here and her father, a widower since 1985, still lives here.

She, her husband, David McCrumb, their daughter, Betsy, 11, and son, Spencer, 13 months, live on Route 1, New Castle, Va., on a farm where they raise sheep. The family is expecting another baby in about a month.

The McCrumbs commute 27 miles each way to teach at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University in Blacksburg. David is a biochemistry professor engaged in research on colon cancer and pursuing a Ph.D. degree in biochemistry. Mrs. McCrumb is a member of the Communications Department faculty, teaching journalism and other communications courses. Having graduated from the University of North Carolina in 1970 with a communications major, she completed her master's degree in English at VPI in 1985 — after her first novel was pub ned.

H r college-level teaching career has been brief, just since she completed her master's. Previously she worked in the film library of the school. But she sees good hope of its soon being a thing of the past. "I like teaching," she said, "but it's beginning to make more sense to spend more of my time writing. If I were not spending all those hours at school, I could produce more books per year and do a better job promoting them."

Writing full-time is the realization of a long-held dream for her. 'I've wanted since I was a child to be a writer," she said. "But when Blue Cross costs as much as it does for a family likes ours, you don't give up a job until you're very sure you can create the same or more income another way. This Edgar gives me fairly good assurance I can realize my dream and stay home and write."

Well, she won't stay home all the time. she admits. She already spends much of her time traveling, both to conduct research and to promote herself as a writer. She says she's fortunate that her husband understands and respects what she's doing and is capable of carrying on the home front while she's gone. One of her recent trips included three weeks in Scotland and England, doing research for "Paying The Piper."

Mrs. McCrumb enjoyed attending the Crime Writers Congress in New York — the first since one held eight years ago in Stockholm, Sweden. She reveled in spending a whole week with crime writers from all over the world — including such personages as Phyllis Whitley, Robert Barnard, Reginald Hill, Peter Lovesey, Charlotte MacLeod, and actress Helen Hayes, who is the co-author of a murder mystery.

Besides rubbing elbows with authors she admires for a full week, Mrs. McCrumb enjoyed the awards ceremony. She knew she had been nominated for an Edgar in the "Best Paperback Original" category by a fellow author who writes under the pen names Barbara Michaels and Elizabeth Peters, but there were four other nominees and the winner is not announced ahead of time.

She only knew she was the winner when the presenter of the award began to joke about her "Bimbos" title. This title, she said, has been a joke from the start when she and some science fiction writer friends coined it until now, when she gets to have it forever remembered as the title of her Edgar-winning book.

She said she felt some fear when she learned that Harlan Ellison, a science fiction writer mentioned by name in "Bimbos" was present at the convention. Fate would have it that he would sit at the next table in the banquet room holding a thousand people. She wasn't too surprised when she heard her name boomed from behind her when the awards ceremonies were over. Ellison told her he had enjoyed her book and had not taken offense at her spoofing of him and other sci-fi writers.

Mrs. McCrumb seldom turns down an invitation to speak at any writer's conference of consequence. She has learned that addressing whatever subject is requested of her is a good way to promote her books and to meet others who follow her craft. She also works with an intern provided her by VPI doing varied promotion of her books on her own, even though her publishers are doing more and more for her as she becomes better known.

"Unless you're lucky from Day 1," she said, "you have to make your own luck by promoting yourself. I make my own luck with very hard work. The promotional work is just part of the game. I don't mind it. It's all been worth it. How else could I have all the experiences I do?"

She's not a writer of mysteries only. A collection of her short stories will be published this month by Rowan Mountain Press in Blacksburg. These are mostly Appalachian mountain stories. Her father originates in Appalachia and she says she has enjoyed living in western Virginia becoming reacquainted with her family heritage.

Mysteries Are Gems Set In Navajo Culture

TONY HILLERMAN

By LYNN SIMROSS
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

LOS ANGELES — It was his first trip to Los Angeles' Southwest Museum and mystery writer Tony Hillerman was taking notes in his mind, squirreling away details from every inch of the tour.

"This would be a great place to hide a body," Hillerman said with delight as he surveyed movable racks lined with woven baskets in a storage room. "Or to find one."

Hillerman had come from his home in Albuquerque, N.M., to speak to a sellout museum crowd about his unique novels, which combine the realities of modern-day life on the Navajo Indian Reservation of Arizona, New Mexico and Utah with the mysticism of the ages-old Navajo culture. His murder-solving heroes are two Navajo Tribal policemen, Lt. Joe Leaphorn and Officer Jim Chee.

Since his first Navajo-based book, "The Blessing Way," in 1970, Hillerman has been steadily developing a large following in the Southwest and West, but only recently has national recognition seemed within reach.

Harper & Row, which has published all seven of Hillerman's mystery novels, has increased the first printing of his 1988 book, "A Thief of Time," to 75,000, and is sending him on a national book tour in June for the second straight year.

And actor-director Robert Redford has expressed interest in making a series of movies based on Hillerman's mysteries. Northfork Productions, a venture combining Redford's Wildwood film company and Toronto's Cineplex-Odeon Inc., recently acquired the option on all of Hillerman's early crime novels, with their Navajo police protagonists.

"I've seen some scripts based on my books and they were incredibly bad," said Hillerman. 'In fact, I wrote one. But having a guy like Redford, who has demonstrated a respect for the (Navajo) people, that's different."

The author said that he first saw Navajo people in 1945, when he was driving a truckload of pipe to the reservation from Oklahoma City. He had just come back from Germany where he served in World War II, receiving Silver and Bronze stars.

On his delivery route, Hillerman came across about 20 Navajos on horseback, engaged in a curing ceremony. He remembers watching with captivation.

"I was fascinated," he said. "Forty years later, I am still fascinated."

He intersperses a few words from the Navajo language in his novels — his detectives always begin dialogue with another Navajo, with the polite and respectful greeting, "Ya-tah-hey."

Since the mid-1940s, Hillerman has done countless hours of researching Navajo culture and religion, and made friends with many who live on the reservation, interviewing them continuously about customs and traditions.

The Navajo, in turn, seem just as intrigued by Hillerman, a former newsman and journalism professor who is of German descent. A reporter for United Press International in New Mexico and later editor of the New Mexican in Santa Fe, Hillerman moved with his wife, Marie, and their six children to Albuquerque in 1963. He retired as a journalism professor at the University of New Mexico in 1985 to write full time.

"I've run into Navajos who thought I was Navajo (because of his writing)," Hillerman said. "I have in-laws and relatives who are part-Indian, but I don't think I have any Indian blood in me."

At the 1986 Navajo tribal fair in Window Rock, Ariz., Hillerman was given a plaque by the Navajo Tribal Council and acclaimed "a special friend of the Dineh" for his "accurate and sensitive portrayal of the strength and dignity of traditional Navajo culture."

Hillerman, whose novels have been published in 10 countries, is extraordinarily proud of the award and of the fact that his books are required reading in Navajo schools.

"I talked with one boy about reading my books and he said, 'We got to either read your books or drop out of school,' " Hillerman said. "Navajos are great at put-down humor, either on themselves or others."

Navajo teachers and parents have told Hillerman that his books also have piqued an interest among Navajo youth in the Indian nation's old customs and culture.

"His books are another way of bridging the gap of what's happening in today's world and the teaching of our culture," said Jennie Joe, a Navajo anthropologist who serves as director of the University of Arizona's Native American Research and Training Center in Tucson, Ariz., and is on leave from her position as a professor at the University of California, Los Angeles.

"They are something students can identify with," Joe said. "And an important vehicle to get students to read material they can relate to. They have an application outside normal leisure reading."

The tribute the Navajo council presented to Hillerman, Joe said, is "like getting the Academy Award" from the tribe. "Hillerman gets involved in social causes and raises concerns about human rights issues. He's more than someone just out there using the scenery and the people for a story."

Mr. Talbert Says Vows At Fort Bragg

MRS. TALBERT

FORT BRAGG — The wedding ceremony of Carolyn Carmontry Bates and Larry Carlton Talbert Jr. took place Saturday at 4 p.m. in the Main Post Chapel. Chaplain Col. David P. Peterson presided over the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the bride are Col. and Mrs. Jared Lewis Bates of Fort Bragg. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Carlton Talbert Sr. of Greenville.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal-length gown of ivory satin in an A-line silhouette with a cathedral train edged in silk Venise lace. The sheer English netting yoke rose to a lace mandarin collar decorated with strands of small pearls. Seed pearls and opalescent sequins studded the fitted bodice with basque waist and the lace leg-o-mutton sleeves ending in bridal points. A special feature was a large satin bow at the lower back, accenting a long line of covered buttons. She wore an ivory two-tiered rolled fingertip veil of illusion with a pouf at the crown. It was attached to a pearl wreath with organza petal flowers, sequins and pearl sprays on one side. The veil belonged to the bride's friend, the late Kathryn Ray Ashford of Fayetteville. She carried a cascade bouquet of gardenias, stephanotis, and Lady Diana blush roses.

Christel Ann Barrett of Fairfield, Calif., attended the bride as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Pamela Talbert Thompson of Kaneohe, Hawaii, sister of the bridegroom; Linda Renee Mathias of Baltimore, cousin of the bride; Elizabeth Ann Forsythe of Greensboro; and Marie Clayton DiFrancesco of Burlington. The attendants wore floor-length gowns of jade satin styled with sweetheart necklines and basque waists. The short sleeves were shirred and gathered. Bows accented the back necklines. They carried cascading bouquets of peach lilies, blue delphinium and white genestra accented by beargrass and foliage.

Larry Carlton Talbert Sr. attended his son as best man. Ushers were Matthew David Bates and Justin Trevor Bates, brothers of the bride, Charles Allan Styer Keeley III of Greensboro, Thomas Benjamin Brown of Greenville and John James Warwick of Raleigh.

Organist Beverly Moylan and soloist Joan Miller provided wedding music. Music selections included "My Tribute", "Household of Faith", and "The Lord's Prayer".

A reception was held at the Lafayette Room, Fort Bragg Officers' Club. Several showers and luncheons were given for the couple by family and friends.

The bride attended Wuerzburg American High School, Wuerzburg, West Germany, and North Carolina State University. She is employed by B. S. Industrial Engineering. The bridegroom attended Rose High School and North Carolina State University and is employed by the Trane Company of Columbia, S.C.

Miss Butler Is Wed In Evening Ceremony

The wedding ceremony of Alva Rhonda Butler and Corydon Dwight Garrett, Jr., both of Greenville, took place Saturday at 6:30 p.m. in Memorial Baptist Church in Greenville. The Rev. E.T. Vinson, assisted by the Rev. John Price, officiated at the ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sloan Butler Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. Corydon Dwight Garrett, Sr., all of Greenville.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown with a chapel-length train of versailles taffeta with re-embroidered Alencon lace. The fitted bodice featured a V neckline with a V back outlined with scalloped Alencon lace, Juliet pouf sleeves, and a basque waist. Alencon lace motifs etched with seed pearls and sequins were appliqued on the bodice and sleeves. She chose a chapel-length veil of illusion with a hand-rolled edge accented with scattered pearls flowing from an Alencon lace cap encrusted with seed pearls and sequins. She carried a cascading bouquet of white gardenias, stephanotis, freesia and white sweetheart roses interspersed with greenery and white ribbons.

Layne Hawley King was maid of honor and Catherine Garrett Young, sister of the bridegroom, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Martha Elizabeth Garrett of Raleigh, sister of the bridegroom; Nancy Garrett Early of Wilmington, sister of the bridegroom; Becky Webb Butler of Rocky Mount, sister-in-law of the bride; Kim Shelton of Charlotte; Bernice Rouse Riley of Kinston; Laurie Smith, Pamela Price Baker, and Leigh Messner Albea, all of Greenville. The attendants wore floor-length gowns of cerise taffeta featuring dropped waists, shirred bodices, and off-the-shoulder flounce sleeves. They carried hand-tied bouquets of white calla lilies, freesia, snaps, white and pink roses, lavender statice and baby's breath, accented with greenery and white lace ribbons.

The bridegroom was attended by his father as best man. Ushers were Herbert Noel Hardy Garrett, brother of the bridegroom; Robert Michael Butler of Rocky Mount, brother of the bride; John Charles Young, brother-in-law of the bridegroom; Nelson Sasser Baker, cousin of the bride; Richard William Riley of Kinston; Rom Watson Jenkins of Kinston; Elbert Hardy Dixon of Maury; Robert Freeman Grady of Kinston; and Edward Spencer Mayo of Virginia Beach, Va.

Joe Goodwin and Susie Pair provided the music program. Music selections were "The Wedding Song", "Household of Faith", and "A Wedding Prayer".

A reception, given by the parents of the bride, was held at the Pitt County Shrine Club. A rehearsal dinner, hosted by the bridegroom's parents, was held at the Sheraton Inn in Greenville. The dinner was followed by a dance given by family and friends of the bridal couple. Various parties and showers were also given.

The bride attended Pitt Community College and is employed by the North Carolina Office of Emergency Medical Services in Greenville. The bridegroom attended Louisburg College and East Carolina University. He is the farm manager for Dixie Green Farms in Maury.

After a wedding trip to Seabrook Island, S.C. the couple will reside in Maury.

Miss Farrior Married In Saturday Wedding

FARMVILLE — The candlelight wedding ceremony of Julia Maxine Farrior and Bobby L. Evans, both of Farmville, took place Saturday at 7 p.m. in the Farmville Presbyterian Church. The Rev. William N. Gordon and Dr. Ronald Davis officiated during the double- ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. William Haywood Farrior and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lynn Evans, all of Farmville.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a floor-length gown with a chapel-length train of silk faced taffeta with Schliffli embroidery. The fitted bodice featured a Victorian neckline with an illusion yoke, crown collar, and leg-o-mutton sleeves. Raised Venise lace motifs embellished with seed pearls and sequins outlined the illusion yoke, and appliqued the bodice, the deep V back, and sleeves. Bridal buttons fastened the back of the gown and the sleeves. Scalloped schliffli embroidery edged the bustle back accented with a bow at the waist. Embroidered schlifli cut-out motifs adorned the train and bordered the hemline. For her headpiece, the bride chose a bouffant shoulder-length veil of illusion with a hand-rolled edge and pouf accented with scattered pearls flowing from a pearl wreath accented with lace motifs and rosettes. A free-flowing bouquet of cymbidium orchids, pink tea roses, stephenotis, and ivy was carried by the bride.

MRS. EVANS

Mrs. David Wayne Chappell of Greenville, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Christie Denise Evans, sister of the bridegroom; Mary Susan Farrior, cousin of the bride; Susan Ervin of Trenton; Jennifer Elaine Kreisher of Greenville; Jennifer Kaye Lail of Dunn; and Julia Grace Richardson of Henderson. The attendants wore floor-length gowns of pink satin. The bodices featured sweetheart necklines, pouf short sleeves, and a V waist design. The sheath skirts were accented with peplums which met the V front and dipped down the back. Their bouquets were of pink alstroemeria lilies, white freesia, baby's breath, pale yellow mini-carnations, and ivy with centers of cymbidium orchids.

Robert Lynn Evans attended his son as best man. Ushers were William Haywood Farrior Jr., brother of the bride; David Wayne Chappell of Greenville, brother-in-law of the bride; Craig Michael Cripe of Carrollton, Ga.; Arthur Kennedy Evans III; Marshall McKeldon Heizer; Thomas Scott Lewis; Hector Neal Ray of Fayetteville; and Brian Neal Windham.

Music was provided by organist David Kirk, pianist Kathy Howell, and violinist Mary Elizabeth Beckman. Soloists were Terri Cundiff, cousin of the bride, and Ann Warren.

A reception was held on the lawn of the bride's parents' home following the ceremony. A wedding day picnic was hosted by friends of the bridal couple at the home of Dr. and Mrs. M.D. Heizer. A rehearsal dinner was held at the Colonial Inn hosted by the bridegroom's parents. Various parties and showers were given by family and friends.

The bride is a senior at East Carolina University. The bridegroom is a graduate of Pitt Community College and is employed by Farrior and Sons, Inc.

Miss Caudill, Mr. Dennis Wed

MRS. DENNIS

BATH — April Lee Caudill and Neal Dennis, both of Kinston, were united in marriage Saturday at St. Thomas Episcopal Church in Bath in a 4 p.m. ceremony. The Rev. John Bonner presided over the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie G. Caudill of North Wilkesboro and Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Dennis of Ayden.

Melissa Dawn Caudill of North Wilksboro, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. Curtis Dennis served his son as best man.

The bride chose an original floor-length gown of satin adorned with Venise lace encrusted with sequins and pearls. The dress featured a sweetheart neckline and puffed sleeves. She wore an upturned picture hat with a chapel- length veil. Her bouquet was a trailing cascade of white roses and daisies.

The maid of honor was dressed in a floor-length lavender, off-the-shouder gown with puffed sleeves and a sweetheart neckline. Her bouquet a nosegay of purple daisies.

A reception will be hosted by the bride's parents in North Wilksboro June 11. Miscellaneous showers and parties were given for the couple by family and friends.

Both the bride and bridegroom are graduates of Pitt Community College. The bride is employed by Tands, Inc. of Kinston and the bridegroom is employed by Kel-Way of Kinston.

After a wedding trip to the Carolina coast and Gatlinburg, Tenn., the couple will reside in Kinston.

Miss Branch, Is Married

WINTERVILLE — Brenda Mae Branch of Greenville and Thomas Wayne Wilson of Winterville were united in marriage Saturday at 2 p.m. in the Winterville Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. Don Ribeiro officiated during the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Ethel Burroughs of Greenville. The parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. William H. Wilson of Winterville.

Pianist Debby Gray and soloist Jack Weathersby provided the music program. Music selections were "We've Only Just Begun", "Time In a Bottle", and "The Wedding Song".

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Ray Burroughs of Greenville, wore a white cathedral-length gown of taffeta trimmed in Venise lace around the Victorian neckline. The pouf sleeves of illusion extended to a point with applique accents. The bodice was overlaid with Venise lace and the basque waist flowed to an A-line skirt with a cathedral-length train with a ruffled hemline. Her headpiece was a halo of silk flowers and pearls with a two-tiered fingertip-length veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink sweetheart roses, mini carnations, and daisies, accented with baby's breath.

The bride was attended by her sister, Valerie Burroughs of Greenville, as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were JoAnn Braddy of Dunn, sister of the bridegroom, Debbie Allen of Greenville and Sharon Lennox of Greenville. Junior bridesmaids were Nicole Armaos of Winterville and Angela Braddy of Dunn, both nieces of the bridegroom. The maid of honor wore a pink taffeta gown with a sweetheart neckline and small pouf sleeves. The bodice was gathered to the waist forming a sheath design with a fan sweep to the side. The bridesmaids wore dresses similar to that of the maid of honor in a lighter shade of pink. The attendants carried arm bouquets of white carnations accented with baby's breath and pink and white streamers.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Troy Robinson, Tim Kelly of Grimesland, brother of the bridegroom, and Billy Price of Greenville, brother of the bridegroom. Jason Wilson, nephew of the bridegroom, was the ring bearer.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall. A shower was given by the Winterville Free Will Baptist Church.

The couple will make their home in Greenville.

MRS. SMELTZER

Smeltzers Said Vows Saturday

Carmen Starr Edwards and Kevin Michael Smeltzer, both of Greenville, were united in marriage Saturday in a 2 p.m. ceremony at Saint James United Methodist Church in Greenville. The Rev. Caswell E. Shaw officiated during the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Franklin R. Edwards of Roxboro. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee K. Smeltzer of Mars Hill.

Music was provided by organist Frances Cain and soloist Heidi Macias. Music selections were "The Lord's Prayer" and "The Wedding Song".

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal-length gown of chantilly lace with appliques of Alencon lace beaded with pearls and irridescent sequins. The gown featured a sabrina neckline with bonnet sleeves and a chapel-length train. She wore a veil with a Juliette cap accented with beaded pearls and irridescent sequins. She carried a white lace Bible given her by her godmother with a spray of cascading Sonya roses, stephanotis, daisies and freesia, accented with baby's breath tied with pearls amd Sonya satin ribbons and streamers.

The matron of honor was Karen Kfoury of Falls Church, Va. Bridesmaids were Sherry Dowdy of Durham; Carole Jones of Roxboro, and Tammy Jenkins, Dora Phelps and Kate Phillips, all of Greenville. The attendants wore tea-length gowns of royal blue satin with a deep V backs and short ruffled sleeves. Each carried an arm bouquet of white Fuji mums, royal blue iris, white snapdragons, freesia, and Sonya roses, accented with baby's breath and tied with Sonya ribbons and streamers.

Lee K. Smeltzer of Mars Hill, father of the bridegroom, served as best man. Ushers were Richard Allsbrook of Greenville; Timothy Edwards of Durham, brother of the bride; Jeff King of Libertyville, Ill; David Macias of South Euclid, Ohio, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, and Randy Wilson of Black Mountain.

The bride's parents hosted a reception in the church fellowship hall.

The bride attends East Carolina University and is an administrative assistant for Larry Harrison, accountant. The bridegroom graduated from Applachian State University and is a law enforcement officer for the City of Greenville.

The couple will reside in Greenville.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Miss Shea Married In Greenville Wedding

Lark Alane Shea and Maurice Douglas James Jr., both of Raleigh, were united in marriage Saturday at 2 p.m. in the Oakmont Baptist Church in Greenville. The Rev. Gregory P. Rogers performed the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Drs. Philip and Jannis Shea of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Maurice Douglas James of Rockingham.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white bridal taffeta designed with a Sabrina neckline and short pouf sleeves. The fitted basque bodice and the sleeves were embellished with appliques of Alencon lace. She wore a two-tiered waltz-length veil of illusion edged with lace trim, flowing from a wreath of silk flowers and pearls and trimmed with picot ribbon streamers. She carried a cascading bouquet of white silk roses, freesia, stephanotis, English ivy and baby's breath, tied with white satin streamers.

The bride was attended by her sister, Kristen Terrence Shea, as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Linda Porter Pouzar of Hewitt,Texas; Sharon Breeden Hastings of Baton Rouge, La., cousin of the bride; Pandora Jane Passin of Lexington; and Lindsay Alexis Grissom of Kingwood, Texas, cousin of the bride. The attendants wore formal gowns of dusty rose moire taffeta fashioned with princess style bodices, pouf sleeves, softly gathered skirts, and scoop necklines. Self-fabric bows accented the shoulders and the backs of the waists. Each carried a cascading bouquet of freesia, dusty rose alstromeria lilies, white miniature carnations, ivy, and baby's breath accented by white streamers.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers were Anthony Wayne James of Rockingham, brother of the bridegroom; Joe Clay Jones Jr. of Burgaw; George Jeffrey Geddes of Wilmington; and Jonathan Richard Taylor, cousin of the bridegroom.

The bride is a graduate of Wake Forest University and is an audit senior with Arthur Andersen and Co. in Raleigh. The bridegroom is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and is employed with Leith Management Co. in Raleigh as an accountant.

After a wedding trip to Charleston, S.C. and St. Croix, the couple will reside in Raleigh.

Two-Year-Olds Are Awesome In Their Power

At Wits End

Erma Bombeck

People throughout the world have heard a lot about weaponry in the last few weeks as leaders of two nations discussed disarmament.

It reminded me that a few weeks ago as I was walking through an airport terminal, I saw an exhausted mother dragging the dead weight of a screaming 2-year-old behind her. As our eyes met, she brightened and shouted, "You understand, don't you?"

I nodded and said, "Courage, sister."

There is not a mother reading this column who does not relate to the awesome force of a 2-year-old. Weight: around 25 pounds. When land-based, has an operational range of three to 10 miles. Requires minimum fuel. Is stockpiled globally and deploys whenever the mood strikes.

This sounds dramatic, but I have seen one small 2-year-old bring 130 people on an airplane to the edge of Valium just by crying non-stop for five hours.

I have witnessed firsthand what happens to a carful of madcap funseekers off on a giddy holiday when a 2-year-old kicks the seat for 450 miles and whines, "I wanta sit by the window."

From the age of 2 to 3, youngsters are endowed with an extraordinary strength. They can move a piano to get to a penny that was dropped behind it. They can lift a dog twice their own weight and dump him into the bathtub. They can scale a wall to get to the cupboard with the bananas. They can bend a television aerial in half on a roof with their bare hands.

The strength is short-lived. In another couple of years they will be incapable of picking up towels off the floor and putting them on the rack or holding their own heads up at the table as they eat, but during this year there is nothing they cannot do if they set their minds to it.

They are also equipped with maneuvers that wouldn't work for anyone else in the world. These are graphic displays that leave nothing to the imagination. The primal-scream-squeezing-in-and-out-of-the-fists combo sends every mother in the world scrambling to give them whatever it is they want.

The sit-in tactic is used by a 2-year-old who wants to be carried or go in the opposite direction. He will simply plop down in the middle of wherever and refuse to move. Anyone younger would be left at home. Anyone older would be arrested. But it works for a 2-year-old.

The most effective attack is the waterworks number. They simply open up the tear ducts and let them flow for as long as tears are effective. This is accompanied by a sound of unbelievable decibels. If this sound belonged to an airliner, it would not be allowed to land or fly over any airport in the country.

Two-year-olds: the ultimate weapon. And Reagan and Gorbachev never even mentioned them.

Will Share Memories With Son's Birth Mom

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Our 18-year-old son was killed in an accident this year. We feel fortunate to have had this fine boy to love for 18 years, and because we have so many wonderful memories, we are better able to adjust to our loss.

Since his death, I have been thinking about a moral issue. We adopted "Charles" as an infant, and perhaps his biological mother has been hoping that one day she will find him. Should we contact the agency that placed Charles for adoption and let them know that he is gone so they can advise his birth mother? Or would it be kinder to let her keep hoping that one day she will find him? If she desired it, we would gladly meet with her and share our memories of this lovely boy. We know she gave him up only out of love. She knew she couldn't take care of him, and wanted him to have a better life.

If our positions were reversed, I think I'd rather know that he was gone than to keep looking for him for the rest of my life. Perhaps his biological mother never thinks about him, and all this wondering is totally unnecessary.

Please guide me, Abby. I would like to resolve this, one way or the other. — CHARLES' MOM

DEAR MOM: My mail tells me that most mothers who have given up their infants for adoption never stop "wondering" how they are, where they are, and what they look like. They also pray for the day they will see "their" child again.

Yes, do advise the agency of Charles' death -- so it may inform his biological mother. And bless you for your generosity in offering to meet with her to share your memories.

DEAR ABBY: I am 25 years old, single and eight and a half months pregnant. I never considered abortion from the word "go," but I have been seriously considering giving this child up for adoption. I have many personal reasons for my decision -- all of which I believe are in the child's best interest.

My distress lies in having to defend my decision. I am college-educated, make over $30,000 a year, and love children, so my friends and colleagues feel I'm an ideal candidate for single parenthood.

No matter in which condition I return to work, parent or not, I have no intention of discussing this topic with these nosy, tactless people. On the other hand, I do have to maintain a friendly and professional relationship with them.

Abby, how does one politely say, "Mind your own business"? — SEALED LIPS

DEAR SEALED: Try this: "I appreciate your interest, but it's a personal matter that I choose not to discuss." Good luck.

What teen-agers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. BETSY DRAKE LEWIS' DECORATING TIPS
HAVE YOU CONSIDERED FURNITURE IN DIFFERENT SHAPES?

Take a look at the average living room. Very often much of the furniture in the room has the same shape, and while you don't want a reckless hodge podge of furniture, it's still generally a good idea to have some furniture in different shapes to increase the interest in a room.

For instance, the pieces in a given room may be either mostly rectangular or mostly curved. In that case, why not consider, for example;, something like a curved table in front of a rectangular sofa or a rectangular table in front of a curved sofa--or a chair in a different shape, or some piece of furniture somewhere in the room that offers a good contrast if your room has too many of the same shapes.

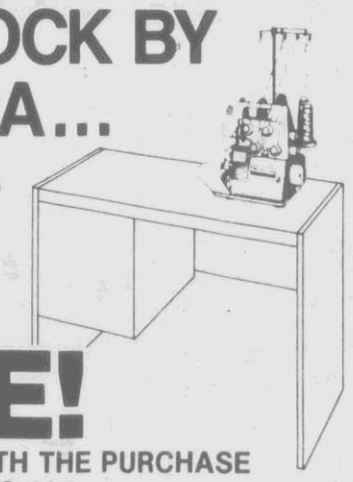

A new mirror or picture that's in a different shape and proportion than the furniture in a room may bring some new excitement, and that goes for any accessory that can give you needed shapes that your rooms don't now have.

The best bet is to come in and browse around with an eye towards how the shape of a piece can really help one of your rooms.

Stamps In The News

By SYD KRONISH
AP Newsfeatures

Today's stories about stamps take us around the world for our latest news — from the British Isles to the Western Pacific; from the West Indies to the United States via a new stamp yearbook.

The Isle of Man, a 227-square-mile British dependency in the Irish Sea, has released its 1988 Europa stamps featuring its technical prowess in the field of modern telecommunications. Highlighting this effort are two pairs of stamps showing stations of Manx Telecom.

Each of the stamps bears the Queen Elizabeth profile vignette in the upper corner and the inscription indicating the communications link plus the Europa emblem.

Also on the same Europa theme of communications, the British Channel Island of Guernsey has issued a pair of setenant (attached) stamps. The 16-pence pair depicts a Guernsey Post Office mail van, a British Air Ferries plane and a rowboat to Lihou Island. The 22-pence pair shows methods of transportation to the island of Sark, a dependency of Guernsey. Mail there is delivered by bicycles, which are illustrated on the new adhesives.

The Federated States of Micronesia, a U.S. administered Trust Territory in the Western Pacific, has issued its first stamps of 1988. The new set of four 44-cent stamps features the flags of the quartet of states — Kosrae, Truk, Yap and Pohnpei — that make up the federation.

The Federated States of Micronesia, along with the Republics of the Marshall Islands and Palau, have been part of a unified Trust Territory administered by the United States since World War II. The islands were previously held by Japan.

Topical stamp collectors who specialize in sea shells and ocean life on stamps will welcome a new set of five stamps from Nevis, an island in the Leeward chain of the West Indies.

The 15-cent stamp shows the hawking conch, a beautiful shell with a brown and white exterior and various shades of pink on the inside. The 40-cent depicts the roostertail conch, a rare shell that grows to 7 inches in length. The 60-cent illustrates the emperor helmet, a heavy shell much in demand by shell collectors. The $2 features the queen conch, one of the most spectacular shells found in the Caribbean. The highest value, $3, pictures the king helmet, a major food source in the Caribbean. It is used to make the famous conch soup.

The yearbook provides hard-to-find information on commemorative, definitive and booklet stamps, as well as first-day covers, souvenir cards, duck stamps and postal stationery.

The yearbook is available for $25 in hard-cover or $14.95 for soft-cover from Linn's Stamp News, Box 29, Sidney, OH 45365.

One of the tidbits in the yearbook concerns the 1987 22-cent commemorative stamp honoring the 75th anniversary of the founding of the Girl Scouts. According to the Postal Service's own stamp selection criteria, the stamp never should have been issued.

Greenville Persons Visited Mexico In Mission Work Team

Eight people from Pitt County were among 16 volunteers in Mission Team work who recently returned from a May mission trip to Puebla, Mexico.

Their task in Puebla was to tear down an old church so that a replacement church, Iglesia de Elvidino Redentor, can be constructed. While carrying out the work, the group lived with host families.

Those from Greenville in the group were: Rev. Daniel Earnhardt, Methodist campus minister at East Carolina University; Rev. Emmanuel Vargas, a pastor from Mexico was a graduate student at ECU; Rev. Michelle Burcher, Presbyterian campus minister at ECU; Carolyn Means, Rebecca Ives, Patricia Earnhardt and Ellen Moore. One team member, Joel McLawhorn, is from Ayden.

Non-Pitt County people traveling with the Greenville group were: Chuck Owens, Goldsboro; Chuck Martin, Charlotte; Cindy Solomon, Raleigh; Michael Carey, New York; Kristie Reynolds, Charleston, W. Va.; Bill Stanley, Kinston; Rhonda Wooten, Statesville and Stephanie Folsom, Midland.

One of the world's largest mammals, a rhino can reach speeds of more than 40 mph when charging. Often, however, the beast seems to forget its purpose and stops a charge to continue grazing.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY June 5

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Don't get involved in a risky financial venture today, or you are sure to lose a bundle. If a friend is not able to do a favor for you, don't get angry.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): If you try to force your ideas on others, they will only become more obstinate. This should be a good evening for socializing.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Avoid any arguments which could upset the plans you have made for today. A contact you make today could be very valuable later.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Don't allow a pushy acquaintance to interrupt your routine today. Retire early this evening, and get plenty of rest.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): You may encounter some minor setbacks this morning, but these are easily overcome. Be more willing to go along with the ideas of your associates.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Don't get involved in a get-rich-quick scheme today, or you will only lose money and get in trouble. Avoid strangers this evening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Don't let a greedy person draw you into a discussion which will bring you trouble. Enjoy a fine social affair with your mate this evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): A new acquaintance could cause considerable consternation to your family, so avoid this person. Make any needed property repairs.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Postpone any dull duties which are not immediately important, and enjoy some recreation with friends. Be sure to drive with great care.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan.20): Set up a better budget, and be sure you don't spend too much for pleasure. If you have the time, catch up on your correspondence.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Get an early start today, and take care of the errands you have been putting off for quite a while. Listen carefully to your mate's opinions.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Instead of running around aimlessly today, decide early on some constructive pursuits. Don't take any crazy risks while driving.

(c)1988, The McNaught Syndicate Inc.

FORECAST FOR Monday June 6

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Others will be more than willing to assist you if you present your plans in a logical manner. With little effort, you can make big headway.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Avoid a superior who is in an ill frame of mind, and is looking for a scapegoat. Be tactful in pursuing a personal goal and all will go well.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Follow through with any plans you made during the weekend. Be careful what you say to a friend, or you could hurt this person's feelings.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Don't hesitate to state your intentions to good friends, and they can be very helpful to you. Be more willing to listen to others.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Be sure to keep any promises you have made recently. Show more devotion to your mate than usual, and create more harmony in your abode.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Contact an associate early today, and come to a fine agreement on a project you have been discussing. Keep out of the public eye if possible.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Instead of going off on some crazy tangent, stick to your work today. If you are scheduling a trip, pay special attention to details.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Get started on that new project you thought about during the weekend. You would be wise to stay at home with your mate this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Don't try to force your opinions on anyone, or a big argument will follow. Entertain some gentle and tactful friends in your home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan.20): Although you are tempted to make some quick and radical changes in business, you would regret doing so. Be sure to drive carefully.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): If a superior gives you some advice, you would be wise to follow it. Concentrate on improving your efficiency, so you will have more free time.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Your mate has some great ideas which can improve the quality of life for you both, so listen to this person. Keep all secrets confidential.

Opening lead: Ace of ♠

One might think that, if you intend cashing the top cards in a suit, in makes no difference which card you lead toward your honors. But once in a while your choice of card might catch someone napping, as was the case on this hand.

South had only one story to tell, and he kept repeating it. However, when North confirmed that he had a heart fit as well as a powerful hand, South felt that his seven-card suit headed by the two top honors merited one move toward slam. He chose to bid five hearts to pinpoint his two spade losers, and with a spade control in a hand rich with prime values, North cheerfully bid on.

West led the ace of spades and continued the suit, taken in dummy. Now it might seem irrelevant which heart declarer leads from the table—with 10 cards in the two hands, he is obviously going to bang out a top honor, hoping for a normal 2-1 split. So if he leads a low card to the king, East will defeat the contract simply by following with his lowest trump, because he will then have a sure trump trick.

But South was a veteran of years at the rubber bridge table. He called for the jack of trumps from the board. Either as a reflex action or because he remembered the adage: "Cover an honor with an honor," East put up his queen—why he should have thought that declarer intended running the jack when he knew declarer did not hold the ten is a mystery to us. When West showed out on this trick, it was a simple matter for declarer to cross back to dummy with a minor-suit winner to take the marked finesse of the nine of trumps.

TEST-DRIVE A BMW WIDE OPEN.

Presenting a BMW you're encouraged to open up in even the quietest neighborhoods. The 325i Convertible.

Joys which here include a 6-cylinder, 168-horsepower engine "of almost miraculous smoothness" (Motor Magazine). And an all-leather interior offering ample room for four.

Those wishing to see a car deemed "alone in the automotive landscape" (Auto Motor und Sport) should proceed to our showroom. Where we invite you to examine the 325i Convertible by starting it up. And then opening it up.

House Hunting?

Now You Can Receive A Loan Commitment Before You Shop For Your Home

Introducing the Fleet EXPEDITER

Today's solution to the complexity of the home mortgage process.

Looking for a home should be an exciting, enjoyable experience, and it could be, if there weren't so many problems with financing. You've heard the horror stories: the loan commitment that came too late; the dream home that was lost to someone with faster financing. The EXPEDITER solves those old-fashioned financing problems. The EXPEDITER is the home mortgage plan that gives you an earlier closing once you've found it.

The Fleet EXPEDITER

- makes house hunting easier
- gives you Fleet's valuable rate option
- lets you negotiate for your new home with confidence
- reduces paperwork delays

SAVE $150
Contact a participating Realtor to find out more about the Fleet EXPEDITER. He'll also give you a $150 coupon to reduce your closing costs.

TREETOPS

PRIVACY for $45,500. A private wooded location at this price is almost unheard of! Plus it's a popular Treetops Villa-2 bedrooms, 2 full baths-and it's been perfectly maintained. Janet Frutiger will be glad to show it to you by appointment.

HERITAGE VILLAGE

Special Financing Available For First Time Buyers!

FROM the start, our Patio Homes in Heritage Village have been one of the best selling floorplans in Greenville. Each remarkably spacious two bedroom home offers a cathedral ceiling greatroom with fireplace, fully equipped kitchen, outside storage, private patio and your own yard with no monthly maintenance fee. The time to own is now. The place to start is Heritage Village. It's a great place to call home. $47,200.

WINDY RIDGE

CUSTOM WOODWORK makes this 3 bedroom Windy Ridge townhome stand out. Modern track lighting, new range and dishwasher and an expanded patio add to the value. Only $52,500.

FARMVILLE

GO BACK IN TIME when wrap around porches and famiy size rooms were standard features. If you appreciate the earlier days, then you'll appreciate this well-cared for home in a pleasant Farmville neighborhood. Just minutes from Greenville and only $65,900. Call Cindy Hoblitzell for details.

TREETOPS VILLAS

Special Financing Available For First Time Buyers

CHAMPAGNE TASTE WITHOUT A CHAMPAGNE BUDGET. In other words, Treetops Villas are homes with charm and personality at a price well under $50,000. Treetops Villas offer you the excellent tax benefits of home ownership along with a maintenance free lifestyle. The swimming pool, tennis court and natural wooded setting are enhanced by year-round professional maintenance services. Treetops Villas give you a luxury look at a price you can afford. $46,500.

Only 2 left...you better hurry!

DEVONSHIRE

SKYLIGHT accents the cathedral ceiling greatroom with fireplace and paddle fan. And you can enjoy the 3 spacious bedrooms, formal dining room and garage. Hard to find for $67,500.

TREETOPS

HAVE YOU EVER wanted a skylit master bath? Well here's your chance and for a lot less than you'd think. Quality construction, 3 bedroom design. Enjoy the pool, tennis court, exterior maintenance service and the trees. Where else but Treetops? $76,900.

TREETOPS

TREETOPS

FOUR BEDROOMS FOR THE PRICE OF THREE! And you'll find a greatroom with fireplace, kitchen with custom cabinets and a breakfast nook. Small fee covers exterior maintenance, swimming pool and tennis court. $77,950.

TREETOPS

SOMETHING EXTRA is included in this floorplan. It's easy to find 3 bedroom homes, but this manicured home also has a den/study which opens to the private patio. So if you're looking for something extra in a prestigious neighborhood, give Janet Frutiger a call about this one. $78,900.

TREETOPS

BELVEDERE

THIS CHOICE traditional house is located on a wooded cul-de-sac for your family's privacy and your children's safety at play. It's immaculate and features 3 bedrooms, 2 ceramic tile baths, parquet foyer, spacious greatroom with fireplace, two-level deck with decorative trellis and garage. $83,900.

BRITTANY RIDGE

LARGE master bedrooms aren't always a thing of the past. This traditional 2 story design delivers the most room for the money...including a spacious master bedroom with separate vanity area, greatroom, family size kitchen and formal dining room. Need space and comfort? Call Cindy Hoblitzell for details on this fine home. $89,500.

EASTWOOD

BRAND NEW with custom touches you'll appreciate. Built-in bookcases, chairrail, crown mouldings, study or den, country size porch and deck overlooking the wooded yard. $91,000.

NEW LISTING

NEW LISTING

CLASSIC DESIGN is surrounded by a manicured yard. And if you need separate living and family rooms, breakfast nook, dining room, 3 bedroms, 2 tile baths, a practical 2 car garage and impressive patio, it's all here at 206 Club Pines Drive. $92,500. Cindy Hoblitzell. Listing Agent.

NEW LISTING

WILLIAMSBURG STYLE and Club Pines make a great combination. This roomy home on Hearthside Drive is no exception! Three bedroom floor plan plus formal areas and mature landscaping make this a "must see." $111,500. Listing by David Heniford.

FEATURES

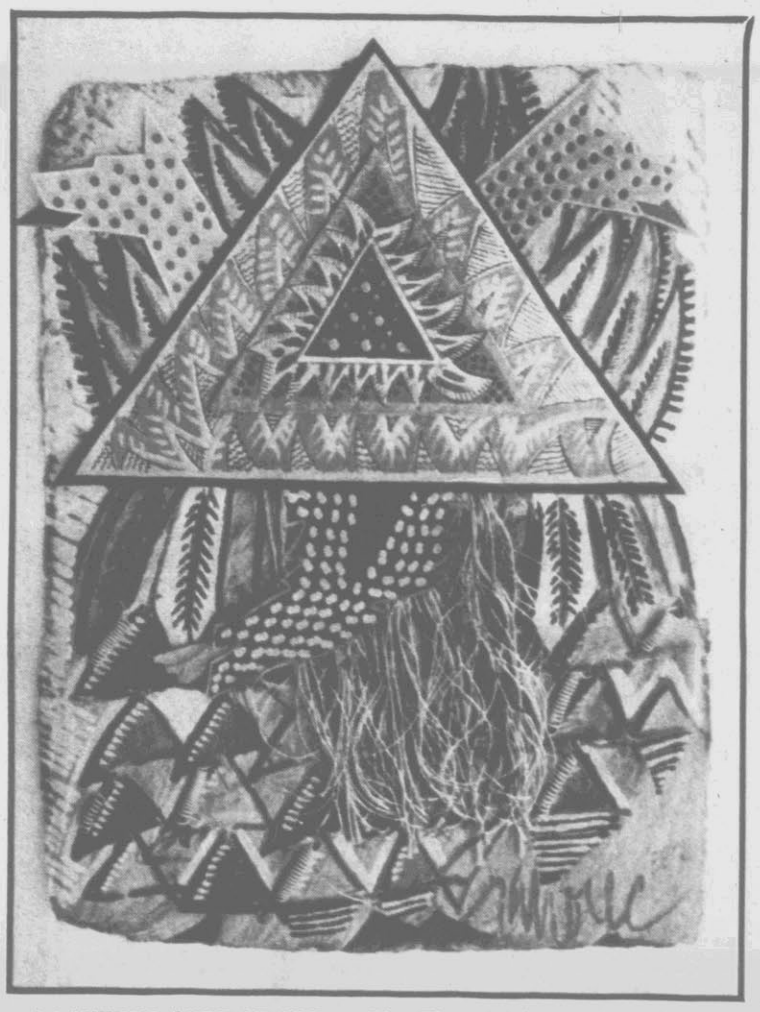

TEXTILE ART — A small quilt by Charlotte Purrington is a convenient-sized piece easy to show students. The design of birds across space is typical of the technique Mrs. Purrington employs in her fabric art in which birds, flowers and animals often predominate, whether in small pieces like this or large wall hangings or quilts.

PAINTING WITH A MESSAGE — This colorful, abstracted painting by R.E. Daniel is an example of an artist directing his imagination in conjunction with an attempt to express attitudes on an issue through art. In this case, it is the environment, with Daniels titling the work multidetailed work "Environmental Two."

New Acquisitions For GMA's Art In the Schools Program

The Arts in the Schools Program sponsored and presented in Pitt County schools by the Greenville Museum of Art has now been enriched with the addition of several new examples of various forms of art.

A LAYERED WORK OF ART — "Blue Flannel Triangle" by artist Ellen Zahorec is a delicate layered collage work in shades of blue created in intricate details. This work gives school students a chance to see what can be done by applying care, time and patience in creating small artwork of excellence and beauty.

Purchase of additional works for the schools collection was funded by Grassroots funds supplied by the North Carolina Arts Council.

"These works of art add strength to the schools program," said museum director Nelson Britt. "They allow the children to see a broader aspect of the visual arts, and give further new definition to different styles."

Britt added that he is "impressed with the quality of the material used in these traveling programs to the schools"

Greenville Museum of Art's "Arts in the Schools Program," developed by the museum's Guild of Docents through suggestions from the docents under the guidance of former museum director Mary Anne Pennington, has proven to be a successful addition to art studies and exposure to contemporary art for one segment of children in Pitt County schools.

At the initiation of the program three years ago, the decision was made to specifically reach out to fifth grade students.

By selecting this age group, it was agreed that young people at an impressionable age can be introduced to visual art that viably supplements the art instruction they receive in each school's art curriculum. In addition, they become more aware of opportunities to view art at the museum and in other showplaces of art.

All through the school year, volunteers who have received extensive docent training at the museum take turns in taking the program to fifth graders in various county schools. They show the art and discuss the styles, techniques and media used in creating each work.

Newly purchased art, plus a gift donation being added to the art in the schools collection are:

- Two Papago Indian baskets from Kitt Peak, Arizona, woven by Jennie Miles. These two pieces in natural undyed material are the gift of Dr. William Logan of Simpson.
- "Environmental Two," a non-figurative painting by R.E. Daniel.
- "Flowers In Ice," an abstract painting of flowers by Mary Ellen Golden.
- "Strata," a narrow horizontal serigraph by Tran Gordley.
- "Borrowed Page" a collage by Susan Durfee.
- A small multidyed quilt by Charlotte Purrington.
- "Blue Flannel Triangle," a constructed collage by Ellen Zahorec.

Britt feels the Arts In The School Program is "a very strong asset of the museum. It's part of our mission as a museum to reach out to the community. I definitely think this program enhances art education in the schools, that it's an excellent way for the museum to contribute to the art curriculum in the school system."

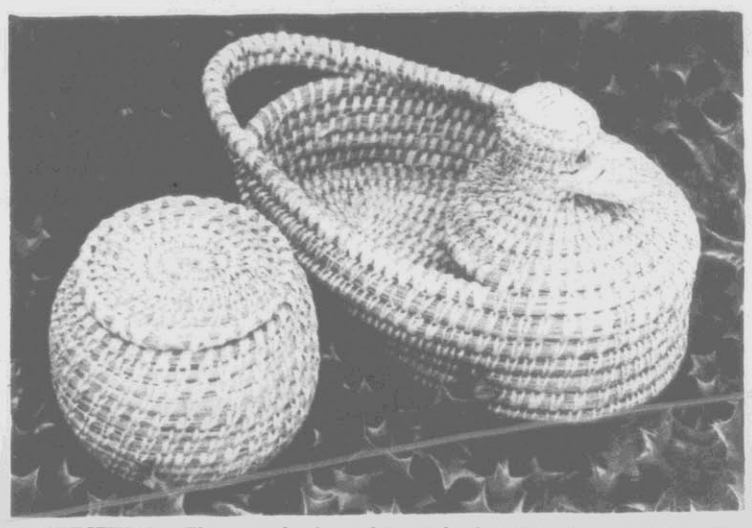

Summer hours at the Greenville Museum of Art, effective June 1, have been announced. These are:

- Tuesdays through Fridays, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.
- Saturdays, 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.
- Sundays, 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

The museum, which will be celebrating the 50th anniversary of its founding in 1989, has continually expanded the services it offers to the community, and increasingly, to eastern North Carolina.

Changing exhibitions take place several times each calendar year, with a wide range of styles and media in art. Works from the permanent collection are displayed on a rotating basis, and new art is periodically added to that collection.

GIFT ITEMS — These two baskets of natural color materials are a gift from Dr. William Logan of Simpson. The two were woven by Jennie Miles of the Papago Indian tribe at Kitt Peak, Ariz. Such pieces serve several purposes in teaching children, including the allure of native American handicraft.

Shannon Tyndall, Winner Of Numerous Entertainment Awards

Text And Photograph By Jerry Raynor

At the rate she's accumulating awards, it will not be long before nine-year-old Shannon Tyndall will have to find a larger display space for her trophies.

The daughter of William and Sharon Tyndall, Shannon keeps her trophy collection on the piano at the home of her grandparents, Earl and Naomi Stancil, "because I can see them when I play the piano," she said. A favorite stuffed animal and one or two small figurines are displayed among the awards.

"I was young, just three years old when I got my first trophy," Shannon said in a serious manner. "That was for clogging at Seven Spring, with granddaddy playing the music."

Grandaddy is Earl Stancil, who for a period of 40 years has been appearing with his country band in playing listening and dance music all across eastern North Carolina. Shannon frequently makes reference to granddaddy's music.

When asked to talk about the trophies she has received over the years, she grinned and said "I think I can remember, but I might forget one or two.

Most of the awards have been for dancing, particularly clog dancing.

These have included two won recently at Ayden's Collard Festival, in 1986 and 1987. In the same years, she came home from the Lenoir County Fair with a top trophy from dancing competitions.

At Greenville's Tobacco Festival, Shannon has entered talent contests for children since 1982, winning a trophy each year. "At first I got like second place and less," Shannon said, "but last year I was first place."

Her grandmother said "all of us encourage her, but we don't push her. She wants to do all these things, and believe me, she has the energy to try anything."

When she was seven, back in 1986, she entered the Shamrock Beauty Pageant at the Moose Lodge — and as with her entertainment, she brought home an award.

This year, at the Mid-East Hemisphere Pageant, Shannon took the first place award in talent and was second place winner in the beauty contest.

"I was on Carolina Today two times," Shannon said. "I like being on TV, so I can tell my friends at school to watch."

School is South Greenville, where she is a fourth grade student. At school she has branched out into entertainments other than dancing. "I love playing the piano, and for three years I have taken lessons at ECU," she said. "I want to play the violin and I'm taking lessons at school this year. But," she laughed, "I'm not very good at it, not yet."

Last year Shannon had a role in the Smiles and Frowns Playhose production of "The Wizard of Oz," and she is also involved in a gymnastic team at ECU. "It's fun being in a stage play," she said.

Now that she's growing up, "it won't be long until I'm ten," Shannon said "I'm finding lots of new things to do. I take tap and jazz classes at the N.C. Acadmey of Dance Arts, and I'm learning about modeling at the Touch of Class.

"When I grow up, I want to be a specialist in body medicine, or maybe I'll be a swimmer or an entertainer, or maybe a gymnast," she listed her principal ambitions.

YOUNG TROPHY COLLECTOR — Nine-year-old Shannon Tyndall of Greenville, a student at South Greenville School, has won numerous awards in various areas of entertainment since she was 3. She keeps the awards and trophies on the piano at the home of her grandparents, Earl and Naomi Stancil. Some of the larger awards on top of the piano are out of camera range.

Rustling Of Rare Cactus On The Increase In America

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — It stood like a crowned monarch, 19 feet tall, arms upraised in regal benediction. Its realm was an acre and a half of tame desert flora at a suburban plant nursery in Nevada.

The nursery workers saluted it each time they passed: "Buenas dias, senor."

They did not discover until later that their splendid saguaro cactus was a victim of a lucrative form of crime which authorities say is on a rapid increase in the American Southwest — cactus rustling.

This monarch's true realm was the isolated splendor of Arizona's Sonora Desert.

"The trouble is," said John Keeler of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, "it's almost impossible to prove that a particular cactus was uprooted illegally. They don't have brands on them, you know. The crooks are aware of this, and that's why it's big business. This time we got lucky."

Big business, yes, though not in comparison with the traffic in drugs or even illegal birds smuggled through the American Southwest. But these states are facing dwindling water supplies and are encouraging developers, resort operators and homeowners to turn to desert plants for their landscaping. As a result, the legal trade in cactus in Arizona, just one state, has grown to about $2 million a year. The illegal trade, according to state experts, is probably half again as much. The cactus in the nursery had a sticker price, as it were, of $15,000.

Moreover, the sleuths who pursue cactus rustlers seem every bit as determined as yesterday's cattle-rustler posses and today's narcotics detectives, and the crime just as pernicious.

They view the illegal ripping of a fragile plant out of a fragile desert as a desecration, a ruthless violation of a cathedral of nature. All they have to do is look south across the Mexican border to see the unholy bleakness of the very same desert practically laid bare by cactus rustlers and smugglers.

Such was their dedication that luck played only a minor role in catching the thieves who stole the great cactus that wound up in the Las Vegas nursery.

That capture came about because of an observant nature-lover from Oregon whose outrage set on the thief's trail wildlife agents from three states and the federal government. Their hunt took eight months. It led to the nation's first and only felony conviction to date for the crime of cactus rustling.

Of all the 5,000 varieties of cactuses, the one that comes to mind with the very word is the saguaro, Cereus giganteus, the giant of the desert, pronounced suh-WAH-row.

If you see saguaros growing in the wild you are looking at southern Arizona, their only natural home on this planet. If you see them at sunset, the needles covering their giant torsos and uplifted arms reflect an aura of gold; in moonlight, silver. They seem to possess a mystical quality.

The Papago Indians, who harvest cactus fruit to make wine and jelly, call saguaros "the old men." The residents of Quartzsite, Ariz., had a special name for the one tracked to that Nevada nursery: "Old Granddad."

A saguaro grows only an inch or less a year in the arid desert. That would make Old Granddad 200 years old. Saguaros don't even develop their characteristic arms until they are at least 70.

Old Granddad stood in utter remoteness 20 miles east of Quartzsite, an old stagecoach stop on what is now I-10. But Old Granddad, which stood there before the first stagecoach arrived, wasn't visible from any paved road.

Roy and Rosslee Crockett, from Baker, Ore., heard about the majestic saguaro when they first wintered near Quartzsite back in 1977.

"It was not like any other saguaro we had ever seen," Mrs. Crockett said. She and Roy of course took snapshots of each other standing next to Old Granddad. Each winter thereafter the Crocketts drove their camper to southwestern Arizona, and each year made a trip out to visit Old Granddad and make snapshots.

And indeed it was like no other saguaro they had seen or were likely to see.

It was a crested saguaro, the rarest of the rare. According to Victor Gass, curator of the Desert Botanical Gardens in Phoenix, maybe one saguaro in 200,000 develops a crest, and Old Granddad had the most developed crest Gass or any of his colleagues had ever seen.

A crest is a fan-shaped growth on the top of the plant's main stem. It is actually a deformity, a botanical aberration called "fasciation." Nobody knows what causes it. It occurs only in the wild and can't be reproduced in a nursery. On this particular saguaro the crest measured more than 6 feet across and 4 feet tall.

On Roy and Rosslee Crockett's ninth winter in Quartzsite, Old Granddad was gone.

"We didn't know what to do or what to think," Rosslee Crockett said. "The more I thought about it the madder I got. Finally I called the sheriff."

The following day Mrs. Crockett's report reached Alex Leivas, an agent of the Arizona Agricultural and Horticultural Commission whose district encompasses Quartzsite and whose duties include that of cactus cop, as they are known in the state.

She led him to the hole in the ground where the old cactus had stood. Leivas found some tire tracks and took some pictures. She showed him her own pictures of Old Granddad.

"I had figured it was just another saguaro," Leivas said. "When I saw her pictures, I thought, wow. I had never seen such a crested saguaro."

Leivas returned to the site with survey maps and confirmed his suspicion that it was on land controlled by the Bureau of Land Management, federal land, and phoned Keeler, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife agent.

Then he recalled a "transit notice" he had received earlier from a border agent in California, information the two states exchange when native plants are transported across state lines. To uproot a protected plant legally requires a permit from the state and a metal tag affixed to the plant.

The notice said that a load of cactuses, duly tagged, had passed through Vidal Junction, Calif., on a flatbed truck Feb. 3. It mentioned no crested saguaro, but, as Leivas discovered later, the saguaro had been hidden beneath other varieties of especially prickly plants, concealed as if by barbed wire. The notice said the load was bound for Las Vegas, the carrier listed as Rattlesnake Ranch near Wenden, Ariz.

Leivas decided to check it out. Meanwhile, he had Mrs. Crockett's pictures made into a sort of wanted poster, like a missing-child bulletin in a supermarket, and mailed a copy to every border checkpoint in Arizona, California, Nevada and New Mexico.

He also sent a poster to John Jones of the Nevada Division of Forestry in Las Vegas, and told him about the load of cactuses. Jones immediately recognized the picture of the crested saguaro as one that recently arrived at Cactus King, a leading Nevada nursery.

But a picture is not, as the cops say, a positive I.D., so Keeler and Leivas arranged to drive the 300 miles to Las Vegas with Mr. and Mrs. Crockett and have them take a look.

"There it is!" Roy Crockett cried, even before they pulled into the nursery.

Said Linda Akers, the assistant U.S. attorney who prepared the case for trial, "It was the only plant lineup I've ever heard of. I mean, 'Mr. and Mrs. Crockett, do you recognize any plant among that bunch?' You have to admit it's bizarre."

It turned out the deal had been made through a middleman, a broker, and the the nursery owner was unaware that it was illegal. The thief sold it for $1,300 to the broker, who resold it to the nursery for $1,500. That would be about the markup for any saguaro this size, but this crested beauty was special.

"After it was here a week I was offered $7,500," said the nursery owner, Jeff Meckley. "Obviously I wasn't going to let it go for the first offer, but the truth is I didn't want to sell it at all. That's why I marked it up to $15,000. It was so magnificent I wanted to keep it myself."

Meckley, disappointed, bundled up Old Granddad with loving care and proper equipment. He hauled it to where Keeler had arranged for its keeping, the Desert Botanical Gardens in Phoenix.

It is no easy job to move a giant saguaro without damage, internal or external. They are deceptively heavy, storing enough water within to last as long as four years without a refill. This one weighed two tons. Transporting one safely involves hydraulic hoists and slings and padded cradles. The thief had used none.

The cactus was tagged with a legitimate tag, No. 10108. It was issued to Glen and Karen Clontz of the Rattlesnake Ranch on Jan. 10, 1986. It authorized them to dig cactuses along a 100-foot-wide right-of-way for an oil pipeline across the Arizona desert.

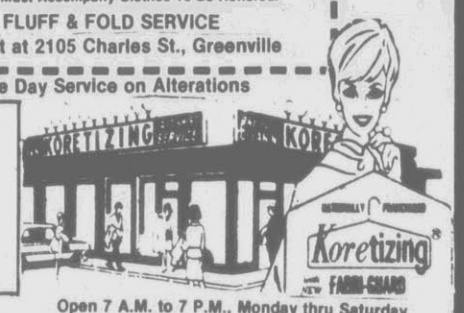

The only time permission is given to uproot any of Arizona's 212 species of protected plants from state or federal land — which constitutes 87 percent of Arizona soil — is when they are in certain danger of being destroyed by such a project.

Keeler found Rattlesnake Ranch "out in the middle of nowhere" in a place known as Butler Valley. The "ranch" turned out to be a trailer and a few other beat-up vehicles. No electricity. No running water.

Performs Surgery On Sacred Figures

By JOE CLARK
The Philadelphia Daily News

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Jim Appleman fixes wings. Angels' wings. Chipped, clipped, wilted, tilted ... it doesn't matter. Appleman fixes them.

If — heaven forbid — an angel loses its wings, Appleman makes a new set.

Wings aren't the only things Appleman mends. With the patience of Job and the precision of Michelangelo, Appleman also fixes hands, legs, fingers, faces, even camel backs.

The price is right, too. Except for materials, Appleman donates his services "as an act of charity." All he gets is a warm heart and a cold stare.

Ever since he was chin-high to the holy water font in Philadelphia's St. Michael's Roman Catholic Church, Appleman has been repairing and restoring sacred statues and items: returning fingers to the Christ Child, hands to the Virgin Mary, hair to St. Joseph ... and wings to angels.

Last Christmas, after several years of deterioration in a closet, the 28 figures in St. Michael's Nativity scene were restored by Appleman. He worked on the damaged 70-year-old figures — sheep without legs, camels without backs, kings without gifts — for almost three months before finishing them up on Christmas Eve.

"When he was finished, they looked like they just came out of the crate," said the Rev. John M. Harkins, pastor of St. Michael's. "I couldn't believe it."

He was a "model" child.

"I was always making models. Cars, ships, airplanes," Appleman said. "I liked putting things together."

One day, an elderly neighbor asked Appleman if he could put together a small, badly chipped statue of the Virgin Mary that had been in the woman's family for years.

"I took the challenge," Appleman said. "It came out beautiful."

So beautiful that Appleman started shopping for misfit statues. "I began going to flea markets," he said. "I'd buy broken and chipped statues, fix them up, then give them away to hospitals for patients."

Soon, word of Appleman's work started to spread. As his reputation grew, so did his projects. He started repairing full-size church statues.

One was a vandalized statue of the Virgin Mary in Holy Name Church.

"Someone went into the church and hit it with a hammer," Appleman said. "The face was damaged, the hands were knocked off. I ran all over town trying to get a new pair of hands."

Appleman paused for a moment, lowered his voice, then added proudly: "You know what I finally did? I bought a mannequin of a child, took off its hands and put them on the Virgin."

Appleman, who makes a living as a repairman and refinisher for a furniture company, does his charitable works in his spare time, sometimes working in churches well into the night and on weekends.

"I feel I'm doing God's work," Appleman said. "I also get enjoyment out of working with statues."

He's currently giving a new set of wings to a couple of angels at St. Michael's. It's a job that normally would cost the church a lot of money.

"We are a poor parish," said Harkins. "This kind of work is beyond our means. We could never pay for what Jim does.

"He's a godsend," Harkins added. "Thanks be to God."

Mary Virginia Langston Drawings In D.C. Show

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Foundry Gallery, 9 Hilyer Court, N.W. is currently exhibiting 13 new drawings by Mary Virginia Langston. The show, which opened Friday, is to be on view to June 19.

A native of Winterville, she is the daughter of C.D. Langston and the late Mary Ida Langston. She and her husband, Proctor Jones, live in Alexandria, Va. and are the parents of two daughters.

Ms. Langston was educated at St. Mary's College and at UNC-Chapel Hill. She has studied art in Alexandria and at the Corcoran School of Art, Washington, D.C.

She has exhibited her work in several group shows in Virginia, Washington, D.C. and Maryland and is the recipient of several awards, including first place in the Corcoran School of Art fine arts award in 1987.

She also has at this time two drawings in the Coastal Exchange Show at the Richmond Covention Center in Richmond, Va., a traveling exhibition to be seen in Alexandria in August.

Speaking of her art, Ms. Langston says, "My work is based on childhood memories of images and rhythms, visions and voices, motions and emotions seen or felt while growing up in rural eastern North Carolina."

Of the pastel drawing, "Pine Tree," (see photograph), Ms. Langston says: it "is part of my childhood landscape. I often saw it alone in a field. A frequent target for lightning, it remained seemingly forever dying, never quite dead."

Italians Examine Their Past Through A Phoenician Show

FLYING PIGS ARRIVE — George Lisk removes a strap from one of the four bronze flying pigs that were unveiled Wednesday afternoon in Cincinnati. Designed by artist Andrew Leicester, they are part of a sculpture commissioned for Cincinnati's bicentennial celebration. (AP Laserphoto by Al Behnar)

Associated Press Writer

VENICE, Italy (AP) — Italians have launched into a wide-scale introspection of their past with the largest exhibit ever assembled on the Phoenicians, the ancient traders who colonized the Mediterranean and created the basis of the modern alphabet.

New books, public debates, magazines articles, TV documentaries, T-shirts, imitation jewelry and greeting cards help celebrate a $6.5 million exhibit which has attracted record crowds and started to correct some of the fallacies spread against the Phoenicians.

"Because history is always written by the conquerors and never by those vanquished, the Phoenicians went down as the bad guys, the most hated people in the ancient times," said Sabatineo Moscati, the archaeologist who assembled the exhibit at Venice's 18th century Palazzo Grassi.

"For centuries they were believed to be infant-killers, sharp and dishonest traders, pirates and kidnappers," he said. "The commercial and military power of Carthage (Phoenician for the New Town) turned them into the rivals of the Romans, who systematically destroyed them in 146 B.C. after trouncing Hannibal and his elephants."

Moscati's exhibit brings together archeological discoveries unearthed since 1960 in the first attempt at a definitive public study of the Phoenicians and their world. It stretched from Lebanon to Spain, and included forays as far as England and even around the tip of Africa.

Model galleys float their way across a large indoor pool, while a huge plaster wave looms in the background. At the entrance, tablets, graves and sarcophagi poke out of large sand dunes with their lids open, as if to invite visitors to raise a civilization from the dead.

One room displays piles of almonds, nuts, spices, flower petals and dyes, emulating a Phoenician market place. And on the walls overlooking more than 1,200 objects on display from museums and collections in 11 countries, there are painted quotations from ancient sources, including the Old Testament, and recent authors.

The Phoenicians emerged as a historically recognizable society around 1200 B.C. in what is now Lebanon. Their history encompasses the pre-Christian millenium from the Old Testament's Canaan to the Punic Wars between Rome and Carthage.

The Phoenicians are generally credited with the invention of the alphabet, changing symbols to phonetic signs. "Alph," originally in the shape of an ox's head, meant ox, while "beth" was a schematic square floor plan and meant house. Phoenician letters that turned into present-day usage included: "M," a wavy line representing water; "N," a slithering snake; and "H," a man with his arms raised in jubilation.

Phoenician cities spread over the Mediterranean from Tyre and Sidon, to Carthage, Sardinia, Sicily, Spain and Portugal. They were the only people capable of making a highly prized purple dye called phoinix — which gave them their name — from a murex shell, which was reserved only to Byzantine emperors and their families.

According to the ancient historian Herodotus, Phoenician navigators are believed to have sailed around Africa over 2,000 years before the Portuguese explorers because they reported the midday sun stood in the North instead of the South.

"The Phoenicians were the real inventors of private enterprise, foreign trade and door-to-door sales," economist Mario Salvatorelli said. "They would drop off their salesmen in various ports, let them fan out toward the interior and pick them up on the way back with what they had bartered. They also acted as the wholesale movers for other parties and created the ancestor of today's container — enormous pitchers in which they moved dyes and other liquids."

Phoenician craftsmen sent by King Hyram of Tyre were said to have built Solomon's temple in Jerusalem.

While modern discoveries showed that Egyptians and not Phoenicians had discovered glass, the traders developed an entire industry based on glass. Incense burners, perfume bottles and delicate blue and white necklaces and bracelets grace the exhibit cases.

"The talents of the Phoenicians are much closer to what Italians are like today than is commonly believed," Salvatorelli said.

Although Saint Augustine reported that Punic books contained "many wise things," the only existing Phoenician writing today is a treatise on agriculture translated into Latin. And since they left so few records of themselves, the little that is known about them recently was written by other nations.

One of the mysteries Moscati claims to have solved regards charges by ancient writers that Phoenicians threw newborn babies into the flames as a sacrifice to the gods. However, new finds and scientific analysis show that the babies' "sanctuaries" were places for sacred cremation of already dead babies or fetuses.

The exhibit closes Nov. 6.

GMA Children's Art Program

A number of openings are still available for area children in the "Clay Camp" program being offered by the Greenville Museum of Art during the month of June.

One of the museum's First Look programs for young people, the three-week program will encompass creating pieces in stoneware clay to include glaze decoration and assemblage techniques.

Due to the nature of creating clay art, the schedule of necessity includes two days in each of the three weeks.

Dates for the clay classes are June 16 and 17, June 21 and 23, and June 28 and 30. Class hours for different age-grade levels on those dates are scheduled as follows:

- First and second grades — 9 a.m. to 10:30 a.m.
- Third and fourth grades — 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.
- Fifth and sixth grades — 1 p.m. to 2:30 p.m.

Tuition for the clay camp is $20 for children whose families are members of GMA and $24 for non-members. The fee covers instruction, all materials and supplies.

To register, or for more complete details, call the museum at 758-1946.

Maritime Museum Calendar

BEAUFORT — Several early summer activities are scheduled during the coming week at the North Carolina Maritime Museum, 315 Front Street, Beaufort. Unless otherwise noted, the listed events will be free and will be held at the museum.

In some instances, reservations are required, and in others both reservations and payment of a fee are required. For these, call 728-7317.

June Celebration Set At The Carolina Zoo

ASHEBORO — A national celebration focusing on the role of zoos and aquariums in wildlife education and conservation will be the springboard for a June program filled with special events at the North Carolina Zoological Park near Asheboro.

The N. C. Zoo is involved in several national conservation and research programs including a behavioral study of captive chimpanzees conducted by primatologist Dr. Jane Goodall.

The zoo's troop of 10 chimpanzees will be the subject of habitat talks during Zoo and Aquarium Month. Chimpanzee keepers will be at the chimp habitat overlook at 11 a.m. each Saturday in June to discuss the social structure of the troop and the characteristics of individual chimps.

The keepers also will answer visitor questions about the chimps and their outdoor habitat.

In addition to talks on chimps, June programs will include a rhinoceros crate exhibit, a musical performance about animals, a display of winners in a statewide zoo education competition and a plant sale by the zoo's horticulture division.

A 6,000-pound, wood-and-metal shipping crate used in the transport of rhinoceroses will be the center of an exhibit in the zoo plaza June 1-15. Visitors will be able to walk through the crate and learn how zoos move rhinos.

Information also will be provided on the N. C. Zoo's role in AAZPA's Species Survival Plan for Southern white rhinos.

Throughout June, the lobby of the African Pavillion will house a display of regional and state winners in a student education competition sponsored by the zoo and Hardee's Food Systems Inc.

The competition, held in April and May, asked kindergarten through eighth-grade students across the state to create artwork or write essays on the importance of tropical rain forests or the importance of animals. Hardee's provided scholarships and education grants for the winners and their schools.

The plant sale by the zoo's horticulture division will be held June 25. This annual event will feature a variety of unusual and exotic plants including Banyan Ficus Trees Sago palms, coffee trees and Cattelya orchids. The sale will begin at 10 a.m. in the zoo parking lot. Proceeds realized will go to the zoo for future plant purchases.

The North Carolina Zoo is located on N. C. 159 six miles southeast of Asheboro off U.S. 64 and U.S. 220.

Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. weekends and holidays. Admission is $3 for adults and $1 for children ages 2-15 and senior citizens. For more information, call 879-5606.

Trail Specialists Named

RALEIGH — The N.C. Division of Parks and Recreation has appointed four persons as Regional Trails Specialists.

Megan Harden of Cary, a former park superintendent at Raven Rock State Park in Harnett County from 1984-87, will serve as the Central Region Trails Specialist and will be stationed in Raleigh.

John Shaffner of Raleigh, a communications specialist with the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development Office of Public Affairs since 1985, will serve as the Western Piedmont Region Trails Specialist stationed in Winston-Salem.

Thomas Potter of Grantsboro, a Pamlico County forest ranger with the N.C. Division of Forest Resources since 1977, will serve as the Eastern Region Trails Specialist stationed in Goldsboro.

Stephen Stutzman of Boone, a trails program coordinatior with the state of Oklahoma's Tourism and Recreation Department for four years, will serve as mountain region trails specialist stationed in Asheville.

The four regional trails positions were added in the 1987 session of the N.C. General Assembly.

Strange Seafood Tickets On Sale

BEAUFORT — Advance tickets are now available for the annual Strange Seafood Exhibition to be held at the North Carolina Maritime Museum, 315 Front Street, Beaufort, on August 18.

Due to the large influx of visitors to the annual event, it is necessary to limit attendance to the first 1,000 purchasers of tickets. Tickets are priced at $5 per person and are available from the museum bookstore or can be ordered from: N.C. Martime Museum, 315 Front Street, Beaufort, N.C., 28516.

From 2 to 4 p.m. on the grounds of the Beaufort Restoration lot, nearly 50 dishes will be offered in tasting portions by the cooks who prepare them, along with helpful hints on each choice.

Additionally, demonstrators will show how to fillet fish, clean crabs, skin eels and various other skills needed to prepare seafood for cooking.

Free Open House In Historic Bath

BATH — The annual Spring Open House at Historic Bath will take place from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. June 12. For this event, admission is free.

Activities will include tours of the 1734 St. Thomas Church, the 1744 Palmer-Marsh House, the 1790 Van der Veer House and the 1830 Bonner House.

Living history demonstrations will be given in areas throughout the town in blacksmithing, hearth cooking, spinning, weaving, basketry and lace making.

A Reflector Review

Jean Toomer — 'To Curl Forever In A Barnyard Flower'

THE COLLECTED POEMS OF JEAM TOOMER. Edited by Robert B. Jones and Margery Toomer Latimer. Chapel Hill & London. The University Of North Carolina Press. Hard cover, 112 pages, $16.95.

Until the publication of this book, the poems of Afro-American poet Jean Toomer could only be discovered in scattered, difficult to locate publications. For finally having access to Toomer's poetry without the heartbreak task of searching, gratitude is due to editor Robert B. Jones, an associate professor of English at Rice University, and Toomer's daughter, Margery Toomer Latimer, who collaborated with Jones in forming this collection.

Like any collection of poetry, the poems themselves are the heart of enjoyment. But to an exceptional degree, Jones' introduction is a highly readable, insightful and informative history and interpretation liberally laced with admiration for the poet and his poems. In itself, the introduction is a work of art.

Following a long-established personal reading habit, I first read the poems, then the introduction. It pleases me that many of the responses to the poetry expressed by Jones parallel mine. At the same time, I was doubly rewarded by instances of illumination that I could not articulate so well.

The poems are presented in four sections — The Aesthetic Period, 1919-1921; The Ancestral Consciousness Period, 1921-1923; The Objective Consciousness Period, 1924-1939, and The Christian Existential Period, 1940-1955.

The major poem, and the only long poem (26 pages) in the collection, is "The Blue Merdian." A Whitmanesque style work, its opens with an introductory summation — "It is a new America,/ To be spiritualized by each new American," and concludes with a phrase repeated several times throughout the poem — "And above our waking limbs unfurl/ Spirit-torsos of exquisite strength!"

In this wide-ranging encapsulation of America, Toomer encompasses "The old peoples—/ The great European races sent wave after wave. . .", and "The great African races sent a single wave/ And singing riplets to sorrow in red fields" and "the great red race was here./ In a land of flaming earth and torrent-rains,/ Of red sea-plains and majestic mesas/ At sunset from a purple hill."

Of the American emblem, the soaring eagle, he writes "A living dynamo/ Capable of spiritualizing and sensualizing/ One or the other predominantly."

Toomer's humanity dream is an old one (revived and revitalized) in each innocent new generation — "We are waiting for a new people,/ For the joining of men to men/ And man to God."

The greatest strength in Toomer's poetry lies in its simplicity, its naturalness, its imagery of beauty that often calls to mind the early poetry of Wallace Stevens.

He penned his poems as if always having in mind the thought — this is what my heart tells me, so this is the way I will speak my words. And he does so without pretension.

The result is images from the landscapes of nature, dreamscapes of the mind, visions of the truest realities that most of us perceive but merely dimly through a veil. But in the hands of a gifted weaver of words such as Jean Toomer, we discover the finest of all literary music, poetry.

Toomer's black heritage affords a perspective that enriches what I find are the most expressive and beautifully crafted of all his poems — those from "The Ancestral Consciousness Period." Though universal in many respects, they are songs with a particular regional and racial resonance.

Love and empathy, not anger, threads these poems. In "Song of the Son," he writes: ". . . for though the sun is setting on/ A song-lit race of slaves, it has not set;/ Though late, O soil, it is not too late yet/ To catch thy plaintive soul, leaving, soon gone,/ Leaving, to catch thy plaintive soul soon gone."

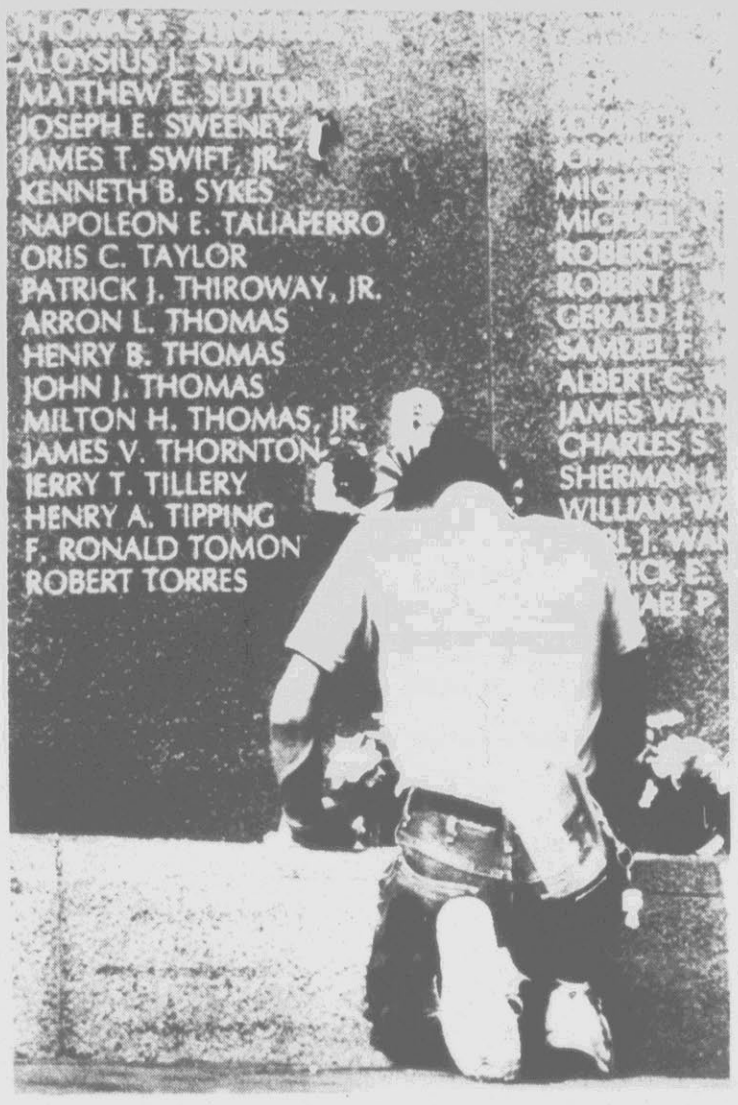

Word-canvases painted in other ancestral period poems have a ring of operatic pageantry drawn from black lives, the rural landscape of the South — ". . . the men, with vestiges of pomp,/ Race memories of king and caravan,/ High-priests, an ostrich, and a juju-man,/ Go singing through the footpaths of the swamp. . . . "Their voices rise . . the pine trees are guitars,/ Strumming, pine-needles fall like sheets of rain . ./ Is caroling a vesper to the stars . ."

And exquisite fragments, cast like lace upon the page — "A spray of pine-needles,/ Dipped in western horizon gold,/ Fell onto a path. . ." or another, "Getting drunk with silver honey,/ Wish that I might fly out past the moon/ And curl forever in some far-off farmyard flower."

As Jones reminds us in his introduction, "Toomer viewed poetry not merely as sheer aesthetic pleasures, but as a means of enlarging one's heart and consciousness. In his own words, 'Poems are Offerings. Gifts to me I give to you.'"

And what a gift of lasting treasures these poems are. It's one of those volumes you will find yourself reading at bedtime, during morning work breaks, on weekend jaunts. One you want friends to know about, but hesitate to loan them your copy, lest you regret not having it constantly within reach.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By WILLIE NELMS

"At A Tender Age" by Rita Kramer, is an eye-opening, disturbing report on youth violence and juvenile justice. A journalist specializing in child development and child welfare subjects, Kramer was granted unprecedented access to every aspect of New York City's juvenile justice system in order to prepare this book.

She uncovers a system of gross and brutal violence committed by ever younger offenders who are repeatedly recycled back into the community to kill and maim again. Slipping through the meager resources of the educational and welfare agencies, these youngsters enter an obsolete juvenile justice system that was originally set up to deal with truants and kids who steal hubcaps. The young criminals of today, however, are involved in murder, rape, stealing, and terrorizing the very old and very young.

The author contends that the current system deals only with the youth of the criminal, not the brutality of the crime. In so doing, it makes the courts a sanctuary for the most vicious even as it fails to reach those children who might be helped.

The conditions described by Kramer produce a topsy-turvey world in which concern to protect the young results in a failure to protect the community. As a result, the youthful offender is entitled to all the due-process rights found in the adult system with none of its restraints and remedies. It is this failure to restrain or to retrain the violent young that is the main theme of "At A Tender Age."

This book is sure to interest anyone concerned with the welfare of children and the well-being of society as a whole.

Autograph Party For LaRue Evans

WASHINGTON, N.C. — An autograph party for LaRue Evans' book, "Berkeley Through Bifocals," will be held from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday at Small's Bookstore, Washington Square Mall.

'The Lost Colony' To Open June 10

By DAWSON CORLEY
The Lost Colony

MANTEO — "The Lost Colony," America's longest running outdoor drama, will open its 48th season on June 10 at 8:30 p.m. in the Waterside Theatre, Ft. Raleigh National Historic Site on Roanoke Island.

Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright Paul Green's symphonic drama, which has been seen by more than two and a half million people since premiering in 1937, will run to 68 performances, playing nightly except Sundays through August 27.

The play is performed on the actual site where a band of Elizabethan pioneers settled in 1587 representing England's first attempt at permanent settlement in the New World. The lives, times and curious disappearance of the colony are explored in dialogue, song and dance.

Established under the charter of Sir Walter Raleigh during the Roanoke Voyages of England's New World explorations (1584-1587), the Roanoke Island settlement's founding, the birth of Virginia Dare, the first English child born in the New World, and the colony's still-unsolved disappearance remain key events in this nation's early history.

"The Lost Colony" was first presented on July 4, 1937, to commemorate the 350th anniversary of Virginia Dare's birth. The drama was initially intended to run for just one season, however, enthusiastic response and national attention created demand for additional performances. It has now been presented more than 2,600 times and is a consistent favorite with visitors to the Outer Banks.

New for 1988 is the introduction of backstage tours. A chance to see the theatre facility from an actor's perspective will be an opportunity for visitors to explore dressing rooms, rehearsal hall, scenery and costume shops and the main stage.

Demonstrations will include explanations of stagecraft, combat choreography, stunts and special effects used in the show.

The tours will run from June 20 through August 27, beginning from the theatre box office at 1, 2, 3, and 4 p.m., except Sundays. Tour tickets, available only at the theatre box office, are $3 for adults, $1.50 for children under 12 with group rates available.

Designers Michael Stauffer and William Ivey Long III will add a new look to this season's production with the introduction of new scenery and costumes. Their efforts represent the start of ongoing design projects that will result in a complete reworking of the production's sets and costumes

Stauffer, a scenic and lighting designer with the Alabama Shakespeare Festival, has completed a new layout for the stage's main playing areas and created a new set for the Plymouth scene.

Long, a New York costume designer, has designed and executed new costumes for Queen Elizabeth, Sir Walter Raleigh, Eleanor Dare and members of the court for the Queen's garden party scene. A former member of "The Lost Colony" cast and crew, Long is a Tony Award-winner for his costumes in the Broadway Show "Nine".

Tickets to performances of "The Lost Colony" are $10 for adults, $4 for children under 12 and $9 for senior citizens, active military personnel and the handicapped. Group rates are available. Tickets may be purchased at various ticket outlets in the Outer Banks area and through the theatre box office. All seats are reserved. Visa and MasterCard are accepted. Call 473-3414 for information between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m.

To economize attendance by large families, children under 12 will be admitted free on Monday nights when accompanied by adults.

A New Look For Chinese Films

By KATHY WILHELM
Associated Press Writer

XIAN, China (AP) — Blunt criticisms of art censors have come to be expected from China's most famous movie director, Wu Tianming, even more than the evocative and provocative films produced by his studio.

It takes no prompting to set him off.

"Those people (censors) were used to making hypocritical propaganda," Wu grumbled in a recent interview. "People who have feudal and ultra-left ideas and bureaucrats ... get in the way of our work."

Even the censors, however, have been unable to stop the cascade of domestic and international honors awarded in the past four years to Wu's movies and those of young directors who work under him at the Xian Film Studio in China's ancient capital.

Since Wu became its director in 1983, the debt-ridden studio in arid northwestern China has become a prolific producer of hauntingly beautiful, technically innovative movies that have raised China's standing in the international film community. Many in one way or another also have been seen as affronts to socialism.

For example, Wu's own "Old Well," about a poor village's efforts to dig a well, won top honors last year at the Tokyo International Film Festival and a special prize at the Hawaii International Film festival and received critical acclaim in New York.

But its release to prudish Chinese audiences was delayed for months because of the movie's depiction of a love triangle, including several kissing scenes of unusual passion.

"The Black Cannon," directed by Huang Jianxing, one of Wu's stable of young directors, aroused heated debate because it attacked mindless bureaucracy. It eventually was named best movie of 1985 by China's Ministry of Broadcast, Film and Television.

Another Xian studio release, "The Horse Thief," directed by Tian Zhuangzhuang, never was shown to general Chinese audiences because of its depiction of poverty among Tibetan horsemen.

From his brick office compound with peeling paint and leaking pipes, the 48-year-old Wu said he wants to expand the limits of what is acceptable in Chinese filmmaking, largely restricted since 1949 to socialist morality tales.

Wu said the studio does not seek to create controversy, but it often results because he and his fellow directors are trying to depict the often harsh realities of life in China.

This frightens conservative bureaucrats accustomed to propaganda movies, he said: "They lived illusions. They cannot accept any movie that reflects the dark side of life."

It's a side of life Wu knows well. He was born in the mountains of Shaanxi province, north of Xian, where perpetual drought keeps many peasants in poverty. During the 1966-76 far-leftist Cultural Revolution, he was denounced as a rightist and paraded through Xian's streets wearing a signboard proclaiming his political sins.

Afterward, he said, he went home and "shut my door and studied" for the rest of the tumultuous decade, during which China made almost no movies.

Wu is willing to take risks not only for his own movies but those of other directors at the Xian studio — one reason it has attracted talented young directors and cinematographers.

On his movie, "The Black Cannon," Huang said: "The moment we saw the film for the first time we knew it would be controversial.

"But we had a common idea," he said pointing to Wu, "that this film should reflect life. We felt some pressure when the film was not (immediately) approved. But Mr. Wu said at one meeting if problems occurred he would be held responsible."

Asked if he gives advice to the less experienced, 34-year-old Huang, Wu laughed and said, "He does fine on his own. If I were to help him ... I might stifle him.

"There would be great prosperity in China's literature and arts if all artistic leaders followed my example: to let artists do what they like."

Wu is harsh in his criticism of standard Chinese movie fare. "Sixty percent of Chinese movies are seriously lacking," he said. But he is no kinder to foreign movies.

He disliked Steven Spielberg's "Empire of the Sun," partly filmed in Shanghai, about the Japanese invasion of China in World War II. Wu also said he does not seek to copy Western movies.

He says his studio's movies are the best being made in China now, and was confident his own "Old Well" will sweep the Chinese critics' and government awards for best movie of 1987.

Several upcoming Xian movies appear ripe to arouse debate: one is about army chief Peng Dehuai, purged in 1958 for daring to criticize Mao Tse-tung; another concerns three youths whose lives are failures despite their efforts to get ahead.

"Maybe some people will think it's too gray," Huang said of the latter movie, which he is directing, to be called "Floating Out of the Sea."

His own output is relatively slim. In addition to co-directing two movies, he has directed just three: "Old Well," "Life" (1984) and "River Without a Buoy" (1983). All three have received prizes at home or abroad.

The demands of running a studio that employs 1,450 and is perpetually in debt will keep him from starting his next movie before next year, he said.

Will it be controversial?

Summer Theatre Tickets On Sale

Two musicals and two dramas are on the summer 1988 entertainment calendar of the East Carolina Summer Theatre. The four productions will be staged at McGinnis Theater on the ECU campus.

This year marks the 25th anniversary of the Summer Theatre, with the four selections to be presented beginning July 4 and ending July 30.

The four, and the dates they will be on stage are:

• July 4-9 — The musical "Jerry's Girls," is a revue with songs drawn from such hit musicals as "Dolly," "Mame," "La Cage Aux Folles" and others.

• July 11-16 — One of the classic plays by Tennessee Williams, "Cat On A Hot Tin Roof," is the first of two non-musical offerings for the summer season.

• July 18-23 — The second musical chosen is "Diamond Studs," a saloon brawling spree musical based on the life of Jesse James.

• July 25-30 — "Steel Magnolias," a newer addition to the list of dramas about Southern ladies is the final offering of the season.

Each of the four productions will open on Monday night and run through Saturday nights. Curtain time each evening is 8:15 p.m.

Season tickets for a single ticket to each of the four shows are now on sale. Season tickets for Monday night performances are priced at $30, and for Tuesday through Saturday evenings, tickets are $36.

Checks or money orders are to be made payable to Summer Theater. Tickets can be purchased at the box office at McGinnis Theater between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Mondays through Fridays, or ordered by mail.

The address for mail orders is: Box Office, McGinnis Theatre, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C., 27858-4353.

Beginning Monday, tickets to individual shows will be available for purchase as long as the supply of individual tickets lasts. Individual tickets for musicals are $15, and for the dramas, $12.

Sunday In The Park Opens Today

The Tar River Community Band, a group of amateur musicians from the Greenville-Pitt County area, will kick off the Sunday in the Park series tonight with a 7 p.m. concert at the Eugene West Amphitheatre on the Greenville Town Common.

A wide variety of music has been planned by the all-volunteer group, including John Cacavas' arrangement of "America," Glenn Osser's "Beguine for Band," and Hugh M. Stuart's "Three Ayres From Gloucester."

Such familiar tunes as "Everything's Coming Up Roses," "People," "With a Little Bit Of Luck" and "On A Clear Day (You Can See Forever)" are featured in Warren Barker's arrangement of "Broadway Show-Stoppers Overture."

Viewers familiar with "The Music Man" will also recognize "The Wells Fargo Wagon," "Till There Was You," and "Seventy Six Trombones" in Meredith Willson's "Highlights From The Music Man."

Bill Frazier of Greenville, band director of E. B. Aycock Junior High and Greenville Middle School, will be the featured soloist in Leroy Anderson's "A Trumpeter's Lullaby."

Harold Jones, acting chairman of the instrumental department of the School of Music, East Carolina University and acting director of the ECU Symphonic Wind Ensemble, has served as director of the 50-plus member organization since its formation last October.

Occupations of the members, who range in age from 19 to 70, are as varied as the instruments they play.

The Sunday in the Parks concerts are funded by the City of Greenville under the auspices of the Greenville Department of Recreation and Parks. No admission is charged.

Those attending are encouraged to bring folding chairs, blankets, etc. for greater listening ease.

In event of inclement weather, the rain date for this concert will be at 7 p.m. Monday.

IN REHEARSAL — Harold Jones rehearses the Tar River Community Band in preparation for its performance in the opening concert of the Sunday in the Park concert series this summer. The band will perform at 7 p.m. today on the Town Common. Admission is free. (Photograph by Karen Simmons)

Liberace Film

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A two-hour movie based on the life of Liberace is planned for CBS. The script was written by Gavin Lambert, who also wrote "Second Serve," the story of transsexual tennis star Renee Richards.

The movie is scheduled to go into production next month.

Activities Scheduled For Summer Festival At WCU, Cullowhee

CULLOWHEE — Details on the 14th annual Cullowhee Music Festival at Western Carolina University and nearby sites have been announced. The festival features guest artists, a chamber music competition, opera, musical and orchestral concerts.

Emphasis this year is on chamber music, with guest artists pianists Alexander Peskanov, cellist Dmitry Yablonsky and the Boewoin Trio. The conductor is Robert Hart Baker, the Asheville Symphony Orchestra conductor.

Festival dates and entertainmets scheduled, with all performances on the WCU campus and all performance at 8 p.m. unless otherwise noted, are:

The High Voltage Excitement Of Actress Sonia Braga

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — She never went to acting school, but Sonia Braga has managed to convey high-voltage excitement in such films as "Dona Flora and Her Two Husbands" and "Kiss of the Spider Woman." Now she's doing the same in Robert Redford's "The Milagro Beanfield War."

Braga plays Ruby, a tenacious garage owner who organizes a civic revolt against the land marauders of a New Mexico village. It's another remarkable performance for the actress who began her career in Brazilian soap operas.

Here for the opening of "The Milagro Beanfield War," Braga recently talked about her career in an interview that covered a wide range of subjects, usually in brief bursts of conversation. Her English is amazingly good, considering her recent acquaintance with the language.

"I started learning English about four years ago," she said. "I went to visit a friend in New York, and since I wasn't doing anything at the time, ... I decided to stay and learn the language. I'm glad that I did that. Language can be a big barrier between people. If you want to know a people, you have to learn the language."

The actress first heard about "Milagro" while she was serving on the jury of the Cannes Film Festival three years ago. Her agent told her that Robert Redford wanted to talk with her about a role in the film. On her way home to Brazil she stopped in New York.

"I read the script and I really, really loved it," she said. "Then I met Robert, and we talked. I was too excited about the character to be nervous. I was very, very touched that someone would want to make a movie about 'Milagro.'

"Then I made a screen test three times. I had three or four more interviews with the producers and the director. Then I went to New Mexico."

In the movie, a New Mexico hamlet is being squeezed to death by a resort developer with the help of the state governor and his venal staff. The officials even send a hatchet man to terrorize the residents, mostly Hispanic, when they grow restive under the rape of their land.

The reluctant leader of the revolt is a small landowner who inadvertently diverts the land baron's water into his beanfield. He becomes defiant, and others strive to make it a crusade, especially Braga.

What's it like to be directed by Robert Redford?

"He's very sensitive," Braga said. "I think that's not only because he's an actor and he understands the problems of actors. That's the quality that some people have. He is very into certain important things, like the environment.

"He is totally open to suggestion. If you're doing well, he'll just let you go. For instance, Ruben Blades (who plays Sheriff Montoya) is a natural actor. He was so much the character that Robert just watched him do it. But when he sees that you are going the wrong way, he leads you back to the right way for the movie. If you have any suggestions about the character, he will listen to you and make some changes."

The dark-haired beauty has been working since she was 14. After playing children, she did a production of "Hair" for two years.

"Then I started doing soap operas," she said. "One of the soap operas, 'Gabriella,' was written by Jorge Amada, who also wrote 'Dona Flor.'"

The film brought her international acclaim, as did "Kiss of the Spider Woman," her first film in English.

She welcomes more opportunities abroad since the Brazilian film industry has been ailing.

ADF Sets Workshops

DURHAM — The American Dance Festival is offering a series of three workshops designed to meet the needs of professionals in dance and dance related fields.

The workshops will be offered during the ADF season from June 10 to July 22. Attendance at any two workshops will reduce tuition by 10 percent, with a 15 percent reduction offered for those attending all three. Academic credit is available for the workshops to be directed by Martha Myers, ADF dean and the Henry B. Plant professor of dance at Connecticut College in New London, Conn.

Workshops and dates are: Body therapy workshop, June 16-19; dance update, June 19-26; and choreography/improvisation, June 26-July 1.

Other programs and workships are scheduled in a number of fields. For full details on the three workships and other programs, write to: Donna Faye Burchfield, School Administrator, American Dance Festival, P.O. Box 6097M, College Station, Durham, N.C., 27708-6097 or phone 684-6402.

Symphony Tickets

RALEIGH — Season ticket orders for the North Carolina Symphony's 1988-89 performance season in Raleigh are now available. The season encompasses three series — classical, pops and young people.

The classical series covers eight Friday night concerts featuring artists such as Andre Watts, Pinchas Zukerman and Aprile Millo. The pops series will have artists such as Doc Severinsen, Marvin Hamlisch and Ferrante & Teicher; and the young people's concerts will include a new Halloween event.

Ticket prices are: classical series, reserved seats, all ages, $80 and $90; general admission adults, $60, and senior citizens and students, $55. Tickets for the pop series for reserved seats, all ages, are $65 and $75; general adults, $55, and senior citizens and students, $50. Tickets for the young people's series are $16 for all ages.

For a brochure detailing the series, or to place ticket orders, call the symphony box office at 733-9536 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays through Fridays.

Musical Honor Recipient

KANSAS CITY, MO. — Willie L. Morris III of Greenville, who is completing studies toward a doctor of musical arts degree in saxophone performance at the University of Missouri-Kansas City Conservatory of Music, has been cited for a musical honor.

Morris was one of six students in the conservatory to win a 1988 Concerto-Aria Competition, the highest honor bestowed on performance majors.

School Of Music Summer Calendar

Six events are scheduled by the School of Music, East Carolina University, during the months of June and July. These are:

- June 19-25 — Keyboard camp.
- June 19-25 — Choral camp.
- June 20-July 1 — Orff-Schulwerk Level I Training Course.
- June 20-23 — Marching Band Clininc in drill design for high school band directors.
- June 26 — July 8 — Band camp.
- July 10-15 — Skuzuki Institute.

Concert In Wilson

WILSON — A concert by the Florida Boyschoir will be presented at 8 p.m. June 14 at the First Christian Church, 207 N. Tarboro St., Wilson.

The Wilson appearance is part of the national concert tour by the 16-member choir. The music of Mozart, Britten, Bach, Bernstein, Brahms and Strauss will be featured in the concert, which is free and open to the public.

Cooper and Neal in Bright Leaf (1950), before her ordeal

Q. Did Patricia Neal, the actress who won an Oscar for her performance in "Hud," ever have an illegitimate son by the late Gary Cooper? My roommate says she heard the news on the radio. If the remark is true, what happened to the child? Did Neal or Cooper adopt him?—M.R., Saratoga Springs, N.Y.

A. Gary Cooper (1901-61), Hollywood's version of the all-American hero, never played a mean or malicious man on screen but was indeed a Romeo off. He romanced Ingrid Bergman, Marlene Dietrich, Clara Bow and many others—including Patricia Neal, who starred opposite him in "The Fountainhead" and "Bright Leaf." In the course of their love affair, Cooper got Neal with child but refused to divorce his wife to marry the actress. Against her better instincts, Neal had the pregnancy aborted. She later married the writer Roald Dahl, from whom she was divorced five years ago.

Q. Is Bryant Gumbel, the host of NBC's "Today" show for years and years, leaving to join the morning news show on CBS?—B.B., Lafayette, Ind.

A. Bryant Gumbel has been with NBC for 16 years. His contract expires on Dec. 2. He will cover the Olympic Games in Seoul, South Korea, in September. The rumors that have him moving to CBS after the Olympics are, at this writing, only rumors. Veteran observers of the TV scene are inclined to believe that Gumbel will re-sign with NBC, if he hasn't already.

Q. Secretary of State George Shultz is always flying off to some foreign country and is probably more frequently outside the U.S. than in. Most of the time, his wife is seen on TV accompanying him. Besides taking care that he gets his meals, rest and clean clothes, what does the poor lady do with her time while her husband is conferring? Does she visit museums, go sight-seeing, do needlepoint or what? I'm sure it's no easy life for her. Right? —C.G.M., Mount Clemens, Mich.

A. Helena "O'Bie" Shultz—the former Army nurse who has been married to George Shultz for 42 years and is the mother of five—finds her life with the Secretary of State fascinating. She frequently has a plethora of official and semi-official duties to perform when overseas with her husband. She visits hospitals, confers with nurses and physicians, inspects various medical facilities, socializes with her opposite number, and tries to keep her husband in good shape physically and mentally. Mrs. Shultz is not a woman who permits time to hang heavily. She already has seen most of the tourist attractions in the countries she and the Secretary of State have visited.

George Shultz and the former Helena O'Brien between trips

Q. Who owns the world's largest uncut diamond—Queen Beatrix of the Netherlands or Queen Elizabeth of Britain?—Gabriel Slocum, Covina, Calif.

A. At this writing, the world's largest uncut diamond is owned by the De Beers company of Kimberley, South Africa. Discovered in July 1986 by a worker in the Premier Mine, near Pretoria, it weighs 599 carats and is a perfect blue-white, egg-shaped diamond. Its existence was kept secret until March 11, 1988, when Julian Ogilvie Thompson, chairman of De Beers, named it the Centenary Diamond, in honor of the company's 100th anniversary. In cut form, the diamond, now known as "The Big Rock," will weigh approximately 350 carats, have an estimated worth of $30 million.

Q. I say Jane Seymour, the actress with the British-sounding name, is a descendant of Jane Seymour, third wife of King Henry VIII of England. A friend says I'm wrong and that the actress is really named Joyce Frankenberg. A free dinner is riding on your reply.—Betty Schultz, Arlington, Va.

Kredensen/Shooting Star

Jane: Regal but not royal

A. You are wrong. Jane Seymour's real name is Joyce Penelope Wilhelmina Frankenberg. She is of Dutch extraction, was born in Middlesex, England, on Feb. 15, 1951, and changed her name to Jane Seymour while still in ballet school.

Q. What's the status of Boris Becker's affair with Benedicte Courtain, daughter of Monte Carlo's police chief?—L. Buckley, Fort Worth, Tex.

A. As of this writing, Boris Becker, 20-year-old German tennis ace, and Benedicte Courtain, 24-year-old law student, have called it quits. They met in 1986, when Boris won his second Wimbledon championship and "Bennie" won his heart. This year, however, Boris reportedly has suffered from "the wandering eye," and Bennie the beautiful has taken umbrage.

Woodland Repose

This sensitive and realistic portrayal of a wolf and her pup is the work of Nicholas Wilson, one of America's most gifted wildlife portraitists. His paintings and sculptures have been exhibited in many of the world's most distinguished museums–including the Smithsonian Institution and the London Museum of Natural Sciences.

Living and working in the great Sonora Desert, Wilson is uncommonly close to the wild animals he loves. And his artistry is remarkable for its richness of detail and faithfulness to nature. Woodland Repose is no exception, for this original work is commissioned–and completely authenticated–by the National Wildlife Federation itself.

The rich texture and subtle shadings of the mother wolf's fur...the perked ears of her pup, alert to any sound–here are touches true to nature in the tiniest detail. And the superb crafting captures every nuance of Wilson's art. For Woodland Repose has been painstakingly sculptured from the artist's own design, then cast in fine, imported porcelain and painted by hand with colors that are warm, vibrant and entirely true-to-life.

Modestly priced at $69, Woodland Repose will be accompanied by a Certificate of Authenticity attesting to its status as an original, hand-painted sculpture commissioned and issued by the National Wildlife Federation.

To acquire it, you need send no payment at this time. Simply sign and return your application by July 5, 1988.

CHAMPION'S CHAMPION

BY JOSÉ TORRES

"Moore is down again! He's hurt! Durelle goes to a neutral corner as Moore struggles to get up...Moore is up now, and Durelle charges, throwing bombs from every angle, and Moore seems unable to defend himself. Moore goes down again —for the third time! This fight could be over in the very first round. Moore is badly hurt! Well...Father Time has finally caught up with 'The Old Mongoose.'"

—Announcer Jack Dreese
Montreal, Dec. 10, 1958

I'LL NEVER FORGET THE NIGHT of the Archie Moore-Yvon Durelle fight. For me, it was probably the most exciting night boxing has ever had. I was young, beginning my own career in the ring. From that night on—with its astonishing finish—I admired Moore as one of the most intelligent prizefighters ever to enter the ring. Now, with the hindsight of nearly three decades, I realize that he was much more than savvy. He had a greatness that hardship, prejudice and a 30-year career could not destroy.

To me, Moore exemplified the little-known pugilistic theory that a boxing match at the highest level is a contest of character, not just physical ability; one decided by will, desire, courage and intelligence, not merely muscle and power. Having that insight, even if subconsciously, gave Moore an edge not easy to overcome. That realization mortifies me some. For I believe that, with such a psychological tool well in hand, Archie was the only light heavyweight likely to beat me on my best night.

Let me tell you about this exceptional man, the former light-heavyweight champion of the world, born Archibald Lee Wright but known to the world as Archie Moore, "The Old Mongoose."

He is around 74 years old now—no one knows his age for sure. To this day, boxing historians differ as to when Archie was born (accounts range from 1913 to 1916), so they aren't clear as to his true age the last time he exchanged punches for a living. When the topic of this discrepancy, which always amuses Moore, arose one recent afternoon in New York, he quipped, "I have given this a lot of thought and have decided that I must have been 3 when I was born."

Whatever his age, the record book tells us that Archie Moore started his boxing career by knocking out Piano Mover Jones in two rounds in 1935—a year before I was born—and ended it with a third-round KO over Nap Mitchell in 1965 (when he was perhaps 51). That was five months after I had won the same crown he wore from 1952 through 1962.

We even fought some of the same opponents. In 1955, he disposed of Carl "Bobo" Olson in three rounds; I did it in one in 1964. He fought an exhibition match in 1959 against Eddie Cotton, whom I beat defending my title in 1966. And the man from whom I snatched the light-heavyweight belt with a ninth-round knockout in 1965, Willie Pastrano, fought The Old Mongoose to a draw in 1962.

Boxing experts talk about Moore with a mixture of affection and amazement. And even those in the American Medical Association who periodically take shots at the hazards of boxing would be astonished by contact with this man. His physical and mental condition refute every argument made by this small segment of the AMA. Listen to him talk, watch him walk, probe his brain, ask him about anything—and be ready for a treat. Even the editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association would be challenged by the charm and intellect of The Old Mongoose.

Still, Moore's journey from poverty and obscurity to fame and the adulation of millions was nothing to be envied. While the current heavyweight king, Mike Tyson, took all of two years as a pro to reach the pinnacle of his profession—by defeating Trevor Berbick for a $1.5 million purse—Archie Moore reached the heights only after 17 years, with a 15-round decision over Joey Maxim in 1952 for the grand sum of $800. These were years of shameful battles against the indifference of those running the boxing business at the time, the barriers that his black skin produced, the humiliation of using back doors and staying in inferior hotels. He was also subject to the maladies—the result of early malnutrition and hard labor—that struck so many poor athletes of the 1930s, '40s and '50s. In Moore's case, these involved a severed tendon in his wrist, acute appendicitis, a perforated ulcer and an organic heart disorder.

Eddie Adams

Isaac Iglesias

Moore's journey from obscurity to fame was nothing to be envied. There were years of battles against the indifference of boxing higher-ups.

Archie was born (whatever the year) in Benoit, Miss., to Lorena and Thomas Wright, a farm laborer. His parents separated while he was still a baby, and Archie was sent, with his older sister, to live with an uncle and aunt (the Moores) in St. Louis, where he spent his youth.

Long before he reached puberty, Archie was scrapping with the adult rednecks who guarded the St. Louis train yard against "ride robbers." But when he himself was arrested by the St. Louis police in his early teens, the charge was not "stealing rides."

This misdemeanor (by today's standards) landed Moore in a reform school for 22 months. During this enforced absence from the wild streets of St. Louis, Moore's education as a fighter began.

"I had to fight in prison," he says, "because there were guys looking to make girls out of boys, and I had promised myself never to allow that to happen to me."

Fortunately, the success that eluded Moore for so long when young came his way when he was, for an athlete, "old." Aging—the doom of most athletes—mysteriously became Moore's most successful companion. As a youngster, he had learned a boxing style that concealed a significant part of his extraordinary talent. He jabbed and moved with great speed, waiting to sneak over occasional left hooks and right crosses. This was a subtle style that many boxing technicians enjoyed, but the paying customers considered it "a stinker." To be fair to the fans, styles of this sort can produce dull bouts. Moore continued doing it his way.

But when age slowed his legs, and he was unable to employ the protective tactics of his youth, Moore devised new and original schemes to prolong his career. He started to bob and weave and cross his arms just below the chin (a defensive stance) and punched from that position with exceptional power and confidence. Father Time had forced Moore to become a more dramatic, exciting fighter. He put more emphasis on the timing of his punches rather than the amount, so that he could select and strike specific targets with more accuracy. And in that transition, "The Old Mongoose" was created—a human version of that little weasel-like tropical animal that attacks and kills poisonous snakes in a variety of peculiar ways.

In his attitude toward the sport, Moore remains a traditionalist. One afternoon, we talked about some of the myths and misconceptions besieging boxing—among others, sex and fear. His ears perked up when I said that these two boxing taboos could be the fighter's best friends, if kept under control. Sex, obviously, can remove frustration and tension from body and mind. And fear, handled properly, can alert your sense of anticipation and sensitize you to danger. Moore listened intently, his eyes frowning. Then he said:

"Sex and boxers are not really compatible so far as physical condition is concerned. It robs a man of the strength he needs in a bout. Sex takes your stamina and drive away. You feel it when you are in action and need to step up the pace —when you are in a rugged, tugged situation. In fact, sex a day or so before a fight weakens males for the next 10 or 12 days."

Fear was a subject The Old Mongoose touched on only superficially: "When I fought Bobo Olson in 1955, I scared him off by staring at him. And I got on his nerves—he thought I was going to kill him. But I almost killed myself," he added, dodging the point, "making the weight! This was one of my last fights as a light heavyweight, because I was lined up to fight Marciano for the heavyweight title. I had just taken off 20 pounds for the Olson fight. I had weighed 191 for my previous fight with Nino Valdes, and eight weeks later I was 174 for Olson."

To account for his ups and downs in weight, Archie claimed he had discovered a magic diet. It consisted of grapefruit, sauerkraut juice and beef. He would chew the beef, suck its juice and spit out the remains. Some thought this regimen, if factual, could prove to be a health hazard.

But factual or not, Moore outlived eight managers and had a total of 234 bouts: 199 won (145 KOs—a record), 26 lost, eight draws and one no-contest. And he himself probably received the largest share of knockdowns of any fighter.

Considered by some as short for a heavyweight and tall for a middleweight, Moore surely had the right dimensions to star in the 1960 film The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn (as Jim, the black slave—"a performance of great dignity," said one critic) and the right height, at 5 feet 11, to become probably the greatest light heavyweight the game has produced.

One night recently in New York, in the company of his 30-year-old daughter, Reena, and dressed in a tuxedo, The Old Mongoose displayed a crisp walk that made him look young, fresh and vigorous. His round, golden face, adorned with a sincere broad smile, illuminated the night—especially this night, as he prepared himself to receive the Boxing Legend Award from the World Boxing Association at the Waldorf-Astoria.

We spoke about every imaginable subject (see box). His children are at the top of his priority list. He spoke about his four boys and two girls, ranging in age from 24 to 38, with the love and sensitivity of a father concerned about their future, age notwithstanding.

Isaac Iglesias

Moore with his daughter, Reena, at the World Boxing Association awards dinner in New York earlier this year, when the former champ received the association's Boxing Legend Award.

"Their mere mention brings to mind the phenomenon of unconditional love," he told me, "the worries of what I would like them to become and the things I hope they stay away from, like drugs."

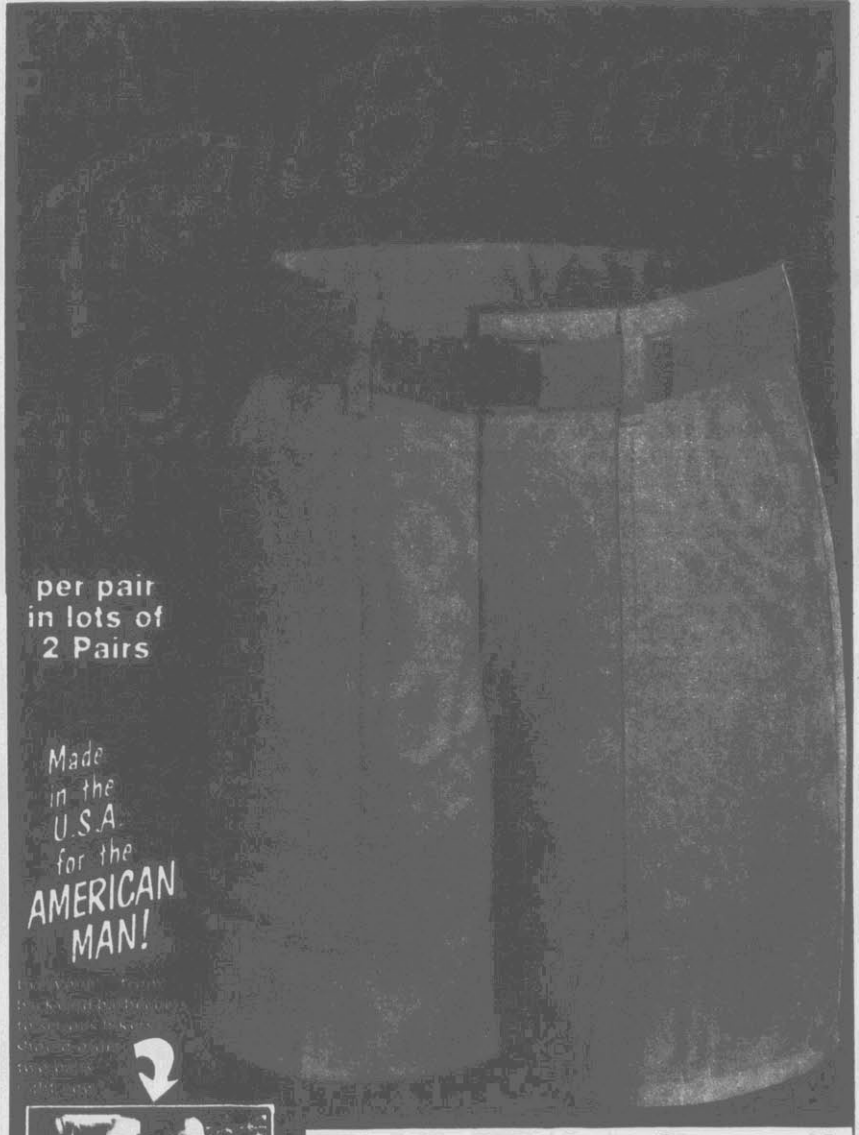

After a while, he seemed anxious to get back home to Joan, his wife of 32 years, in San Diego. As we said goodbye, a sweet and special moment came to mind once again—Jack Dreese's 11th-round description of that Moore-Durelle extravaganza in 1958:

"This is an exhausting and most exciting fight. Moore has gone down three times in the first round, once in the third and once in the fifth. Durelle has visited the canvas once each in rounds seven and 10. And now Moore is in command, pressing Durelle unceasingly. A left and a right cross land on Yvon's chin! Durelle is down! He is not going to get up…8…9…10! The fight is over! The fight is over! This undoubtedly is Moore's finest hour!"

THE WISDOM OF AN OLD MASTER

During our conversations in New York, Moore—who is given to making terse observations on a wide variety of subjects—offered the following:

- On Muhammad Ali: "He could have learned much more if he had listened to me."
- On Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.: "He has become a folk hero."
- On music: "Only the sky is higher than music."
- On politics: "It's a profession."
- On baseball: "It reached a mountainous peak with Satchel Paige, and peaked even higher when Jackie Robinson kicked the doors of segregation down and black players poured in."
- On the U.S.A.: "She can be—she must be—the land of opportunity for all nations and all races."
- On women's lib: "I believe everybody should be free."
- On Rocky Marciano: "A great fighter."
- On Joe Louis: "A super great fighter."
- On Ray Leonard: "He's almost a duplicate of the real 'Sugar' [Ray Robinson]."
- On winter: "It's not for me."
- On football: "Douglas Williams [black quarterback who led the Washington Redskins to victory in the '88 Super Bowl] captured my heart."
- On Brazil: "It is color-unconscious."

Five years ago, Mathilde Krim gave up a prestigious career in science to pioneer in the fight against AIDS

WHEN NO ONE DARED

AN ACQUAINTANCE HAD WARNED ME beforehand: "When you meet Mathilde Krim, you'll have your first crush on an older woman." As soon as I met Dr. Krim, I saw what she meant.

A butler opened the double doors to her palazzo off New York's Park Avenue and led me up a winding stone staircase to the library where Dr. Krim conducts her business. Krim was on the phone to Elizabeth Taylor's office. I looked around at the leather chairs and the paneled walls, with their rows of books. On a middle shelf, an Oscar statuette was displayed among other memorabilia, a reminder that Krim's husband, Arthur, is chairman of Orion Pictures. Comfortable in her surroundings, Mathilde Krim, 61, did not look like what she is: a woman who risked social ostracism and gave up one of the most prestigious positions in American science for something she believed in. Instead of living a life of opulent detachment, she has thrown herself, body and soul, into a cause many Americans were once afraid even to talk about—the fight against AIDS.

Dr. Krim—she has a Ph.D. in biology from the University of Geneva—is a warm woman with a Middle European accent and expansive charm to match. She welcomed me with a wide smile, and even when she was talking about deadly serious subjects, she never lost her good cheer.

"I became aware that something was going on very, very early," she recalled. "It was in 1980, before we knew we were dealing with a lethal disease. One of my friends was an infectious-disease specialist in Greenwich Village. One day he said, 'You know, Mathilde, something very bizarre is going on.'"

Many of the specialist's patients had developed Kaposi's sarcoma, an odd skin cancer normally found in elderly Mediterranean men. These patients were young men, and few were Mediterranean. When Krim and her friend tested their blood, samples showed high levels of interferon, a natural substance produced by the body to fight viruses. "I became very frightened of the social consequences of this disease," Krim told me. "It was obvious very early on that this was something infectious."

For almost 25 years, Krim had been a scientist at New York's Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center. By the early 1980s, she was director of its interferon laboratory, at the forefront of research that many thought might lead to the most potent anticancer drug ever. But as she saw healthy young people dying in growing numbers, she took on an even larger role. "I thought it was my responsibility to help society deal with this in a responsible way," she said. "I started in early 1983 raising money for AIDS research. The only good souls who would listen to me were my personal friends. They thought, 'Mathilde's a little cuckoo. She's got mixed up in something bizarre. But we're going to be nice to her.' They didn't do it for the cause."

That same year, Krim founded the AIDS Medical Foundation. Not everybody thought it was a good idea. Many thought that AIDS was a disease only of gay people. "I knew it had to travel," Krim said. "I've never known a virus that discriminates." Viruses don't discriminate, but people do. "There were some friends who didn't want to associate with me after I became identified with AIDS," Krim said without noticeable emotion. "But then, they weren't friends, were they? And when we asked for money, a lot of foundations thought this was a bizarre little problem that was none of their concern."

The problem struck home two years ago, when Krim and Memorial Sloan-Kettering parted ways after a quarter century. "They really were not pleased with my interest in AIDS," she said. "They didn't like the fact that I had created a foundation and was speaking to the press. They thought I was giving the wrong image of the institute."

But Krim is no stranger to upheaval. Press her, and she'll tell you, in that same matter-of-fact voice, how she was born in Italy to a Swiss father and Czech mother, was sheltered in Geneva through World War II, then went to the newborn state of Israel to work at the Weizmann Institute. She met and married Arthur Krim in 1958 and, with her daughter from a prior marriage, came to New York, to the third new country of her life. Challenges do not daunt her.

"Some friends wouldn't associate with me after I became involved with AIDS. But then, they weren't friends, were they?"

Thousands of AIDS patients today are receiving AZT, the first drug that can help slow the progress of the disease. If the U.S. government had had its way, AZT would have been tested for many more months: Some patients would have been given the drug; others would have received placebos, for comparison. Then Krim had her say. For weeks, it seemed that she was on every talk show and in every newspaper in the country, speaking about speeding up the tests. Although a scientist, she was arguing against normal scientific procedures. "It was a matter of ethical principle," she explained. For the first time, I could hear the emotion in her voice. "[The government's] argument was that the test would only last six months. Many of these people are not expected to live for six months."

For more than a year, Dr. Krim has had no laboratory—but she has had more work than ever. She merged her foundation with a similar one on the West Coast to form the American Foundation for AIDS Research. It has raised—and dispensed—millions of dollars, most of it given to researchers whose grant applications are languishing in the Byzantine processes of the federal government. One major university laboratory stayed open last year because of a grant from her foundation: The government had agreed to finance its research, but the money took more than a year to come through. Krim's group put up the money just before the lab was to begin laying off workers. Although the government has good intentions, the American Foundation is the only source of immediate funding for much important AIDS work. It takes in $10 million a year and dispenses 80 percent of that to dozens of researchers. "We could easily give $4 million or $5 million each time to deserving projects," Krim said.

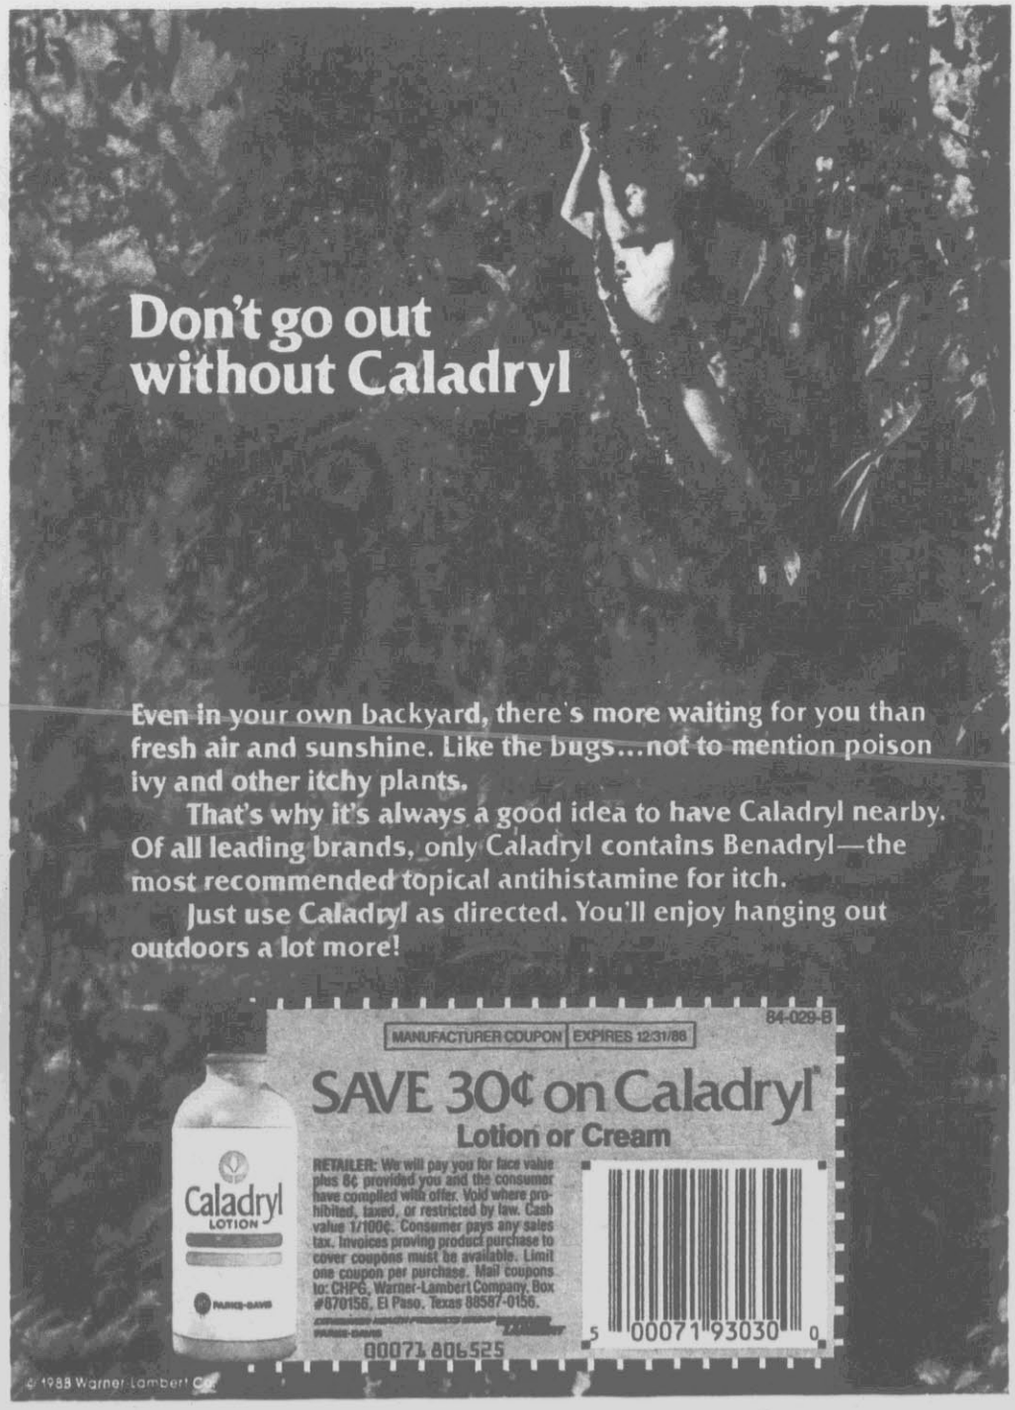

New York's St. Luke's-Roosevelt Hospital recently appointed Krim an associate scientist at its new research lab, though she has no idea when she'll be able to return to science. "I always seem to be putting out fires," she said. But Krim is optimistic about our growing understanding of the structure of the AIDS virus and how it operates. "There is great hope that we will ultimately have medical control of the disease," she said. She emphasized, however, that this will take much more work—and much more money.

"The issue of AIDS," Krim added, "is going to touch everybody, either directly or indirectly, through the health of a family member or a friend or through the pocketbook—all of us are going to have to pay for it." She urges everybody to donate money if possible, to volunteer time to organizations that fight AIDS and, most of all, to learn the facts about AIDS. "The first duty is to acquire accurate information about this epidemic, to protect ourselves and others," she said. "We're all going to know people who are sick."

The American Foundation—with Elizabeth Taylor as its honorary chairman—is finding it a little easier to raise that money nowadays, although donations still are desperately needed. Even so, things have changed from the days when Mathilde Krim was just a lonely voice in the wilderness.

"Now we can have theater benefits, cocktail parties, dinners, and people will come," Krim said with pleasure. "They're not as afraid anymore. It's as if, all of a sudden, it's chic to behave decently." ■

Last month, the federal government began mailing a pamphlet on AIDS to each U.S. household. If you have not received yours, call toll-free: 1-800-342-AIDS.

MIDLER AND TOMLIN IN TWIN ACT

Laurel Moore

Not really sisters: Bette (l) and Lily

Ever feel you were born into the wrong family? In Big Business, Bette Midler has a dual role as rich twins mismatched at birth with poor twins, played by Lily Tomlin. "Sisters" Midler and Tomlin run a New York conglomerate while, unknown to them, their real identical twins struggle in rural West Virginia—a perfect setup for a very funny and fast-paced modern-day Comedy of Errors. In the movie, each Midler character is, coincidentally, named Sadie; their "sisters" are both named Rose. As it happens, there are a real Sadie and Rose—twins in their 70s who are the mother and aunt, respectively, of Marc Rubel and Dori Pierson, a couple of savvy screenwriters with the zany imagination to put one and one together and get four.

CHILDREN

Answering Questions

Children's questions about birth, death, divorce, abuse, handicaps, drugs, separation, sex, sibling rivalry and other subjects can be difficult to answer honestly and comfortably. To help parents, Sara Wilford, director of the Early Childhood Center at Sarah Lawrence College, has put together Tough Topics, an extremely useful guide that lists books under each subject for children of different ages to read or have read to them, or for parents themselves to study. If Serenity® Guards look too small to give you the bladder control protection you need...

Look again.

The fact is, women prefer Serenity® Guards over the leading diaperlike undergarment. That's because Serenity has a unique superabsorbent system that absorbs more where you need it most. It's remarkable!

Prove it for yourself. Pour a half cup of water into a Serenity Regular Guard. Wait a few seconds. Turn it over. Nothing leaks out! That's because the superabsorbent system locks liquid into a gel that can't leak.

BRIGHT IDEAS®

BY JANE CIABATTARI

Free Small-Business Resource

IF YOU'RE THINKING OF starting your own business, consider first if you have an entrepreneurial personality. Ask yourself these questions:

- Am I prepared to work hard and make sacrifices?
- Do I have good communications skills?
- Do I have management ability?
- Am I experienced enough in this field?
- What do I want out of life?
- Are my goals realistic and attainable?
- Am I willing to work 60 hours a week?

Knowing yourself is the first step to becoming your own boss. If you decide to move to step two, a useful resource is the 1988 edition of Small Business Success, which is the source of the above questions. The guide is available free from Pacific Bell Directory, One Rincon Center, Communications Dept. P, Room 429, 101 Spear St., San Francisco, Calif. 94105.

Telephone Tips For Latchkey Children

MILLIONS OF YOUNGSTERS between the ages of 5 and 12 regularly stay home alone after school; in summer they may spend even more time without adult supervision.

To help these children, who also may take care of younger siblings or babysit, the Corporation for Public Broadcasting has published a guide called What If I'm Home Alone? It includes these tips for calling for help in emergencies:

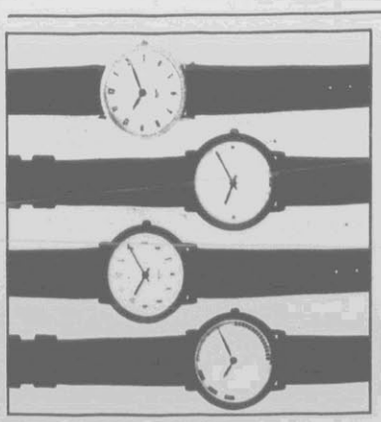

- Dial 0 for Operator, or dial 911.
- State the problem briefly. Example: "My brother's badly cut, and I can't stop the bleeding."
- Give your full name, complete address with the nearest cross streets, home telephone number or the one from which you are calling.
- Wait for questions or instructions.
- Do not hang up until you are told to do so.

For a copy of the booklet, send a $1 check to "What If I'm Home Alone?", Corporation for Public Broadcasting, Dept. P, P.O. Box 33039-LK, Washington, D.C. 20033.

We'd like to hear from you. Send your suggestions to "Bright Ideas," PARADE, 750 Third Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017.

Great ideas that are long on imagination and short on costs

VACATIONS YOU CAN AFFORD

WANT TO HAVE A WONDERFUL SUMMER without cashing in your CDs? There are many ways to make a great escape on a shoestring or thereabouts if you're adventurous, flexible and willing to do without some of the usual frills. Here are 10 options:

1. Last-minute travel clubs. These agencies act as clearinghouses for unsold space on package tours, cruises, hotel vacations and other trips, and—at the last minute—sell them to you at discount prices. If you are willing to set forth with only a few days' or a couple of weeks' notice, you can get some excellent buys. After joining a club for a modest fee, you get a hotline number to phone for the latest offerings. Two of the largest clubs are Vacations To Go (call 800-624-7338; in Texas, 800-833-8040) and Stand-Buys (800-255-0200).

2. Weekend packages. Some of the best hotels reduce their rates by up to 50 percent because they want to fill their rooms over the weekends when their regular business travelers are scarce. You can get rooms at remarkable prices for one night or, even better, for the weekend, sometimes with tickets for cultural events thrown in. Check the travel section of your newspaper, or call the specific hotel that interests you.

3. No-frills motels. You say you don't need antique furniture, impressive lobbies, room service or chocolates on your pillow at night? Check into one of the hundreds of "economy" motels across the country. You get few frills but cheap rates, averaging about $20 per night for a single. Among the least-expensive chains are Motel 6, Super 8 and Comfort Inns.

4. Campus bargains. Hundreds of colleges and universities in the U.S. and Europe open their dormitories to travelers during summer school vacations. They offer Spartan but adequate rooms at an average of $15 a night—plus, in most cases, use of all campus facilities, from swimming pools to cafeterias. Some include breakfast or, for not much more, three meals a day. Check with the college that interests you, or get a copy of U.S. and Worldwide Travel Accommodations Guide, listing over 600 schools in the U.S., Canada and Europe; $9.95 postpaid from Campus Travel Service, Dept. P, P.O. Box 5007, Laguna Beach, Calif. 92652. To stay at a university in England, Wales or Scotland for an average cost of $30 a night, call Campus Holidays U.S.A. (800-526-2919; in New Jersey, 201-744-8724).

5. House-swapping. The thriftiest way to vacation here and abroad, especially if you have a big family, is to exchange homes. You live in another family's house while they live in yours. This means you pay nothing for lodging, save money by cooking meals and, if you swap cars too, you save car-rental costs. You can join an organization that lists your home in its directory and lets you make your own exchange by phone or mail: Contact the Vacation Exchange Club, Dept. P, 12006 111th Ave., Unit 12, Youngtown, Ariz. 85363 (602-972-2186). Or choose an organization that matches you up and handles all the arrangements for you: Home Exchange International, Dept. P, 185 Park Row, P.O. Box 878, New York, N.Y. 10038-0272 (212-349-5340).

6. Home-sharing. If you'd enjoy visiting the homes of friendly people in faraway places, you can do it for little or nothing. One way is through Servas, a nonprofit organization promoting peace, understanding and the sharing of cultures and ideas. Pay $45 per adult annually; after that, no money changes hands, but you are encouraged to take other "thoughtful" travelers into your home at no charge. For information, send a stamped, self-addressed #10 envelope to Servas, Dept. P, 11 John St., New York, N.Y. 10038. Another way to share other people's homes and lives is to join INNter Lodging Co-op, Dept. P, P.O. Box 7044, Tacoma, Wash. 98407-0044 (206-756-0343).

Tums® Liquid. The first Liquid Antacid without that liquid antacid taste.

As a member, you may stay in a private home in the U.S., Canada or Europe for $5 per adult per night (children with their own sleeping bags cost an additional 50 cents). You reciprocate when other club members visit your part of the world. Both organizations provide a list of participating homes; you make your own arrangements.

7. Hostels. Young or old, you're welcome at the 5000 hostels worldwide, including about 250 in the U.S., for $4 to $10 per night. You'll find hostels in rural areas as well as big cities such as Seattle, San Francisco, New Orleans and Washington, D.C. Rooms are dorm-style but clean and comfortable, accommodating four to 12 people (who must be members of American Youth Hostels). Sometimes you can book a single room for your entire family group. For information, contact American Youth Hostels, Dept. P, P.O. Box 37613, Washington, D.C. 20013-7613 (202-783-6161).

8. Bed and breakfasts. These can be cheap, especially if you choose a private home where you stay with the owners. The commercial inns or guest houses that list themselves as B&Bs tend to cost more while giving you more luxury and privacy. B&B accommodations average $54 a night across the country and obviously include breakfast. For information, send a stamped, self-addressed #10 envelope to the American Bed and Breakfast Association, Dept. P, 16 Village Green, Suite 203-P, Crofton, Md. 21114.

9. Bike trips. You can map out your own trip or go with a group. For starters, join an organized tour for a weekend or more. Prices range from about $45 a day to $150, usually including meals, guide and lodging (at camps, inns, motels, hotels, bed and breakfasts, hostels). A support vehicle usually goes along to carry gear—and you, if necessary. The average trip covers 20 to 50 miles a day and, in most cases, you may ride at your own speed. For information: League of American Wheelmen, Dept. P, 6707 Whitestone Road, Baltimore, Md. 21207 (301-944-3399). Send for "TourFinder" ($4 postpaid), a comprehensive list of operators that offer bike trips here and abroad.

10. Educational travel. Ranging from archaeological digs to courses in blacksmithing, the choice of learning vacations is enormous. Many are designed for people over 60. About 500 programs are detailed in Learning Vacations ($11.70 postpaid), and hundreds of academic programs can be found in Vacation Study Abroad ($22.70 postpaid). Both paperbacks may be ordered from Peterson's Guides (800-225-0261; in New Jersey, 609-924-5338).

Lashes look longer. Darker. Sculpted. Curled. Defined. Conditioned. Lashes stay set and look natural all day. Lashes feel clean, light and flexible—not heavy, sticky or stiff.

No Color Mascara is perfect for you if you wear contact lenses. Perfect for sensitive eyes (it's hypo-allergenic). And really perfect if you want lashes that look longer, darker, more naturally beautiful.

Blends away gray in 5 minutes

...without changing your natural color

After years of testing, the world leader in men's haircoloring has perfected a unique product created especially for the needs of men. That's why it's called JUST FOR MEN.™

Here, at last, is a man's haircoloring that replaces gray faster and easier than was ever before possible. The results are so subtle, so natural, even men who hadn't thought of coloring their hair are changing their minds.

5-minute formula works faster

JUST FOR MEN is incredibly simple. Just apply it, and in 5 minutes, wash it out. That's right, in the time it takes to shave or shower—the gray is blended away. Just 5 minutes, not 40 like women's hair dyes.

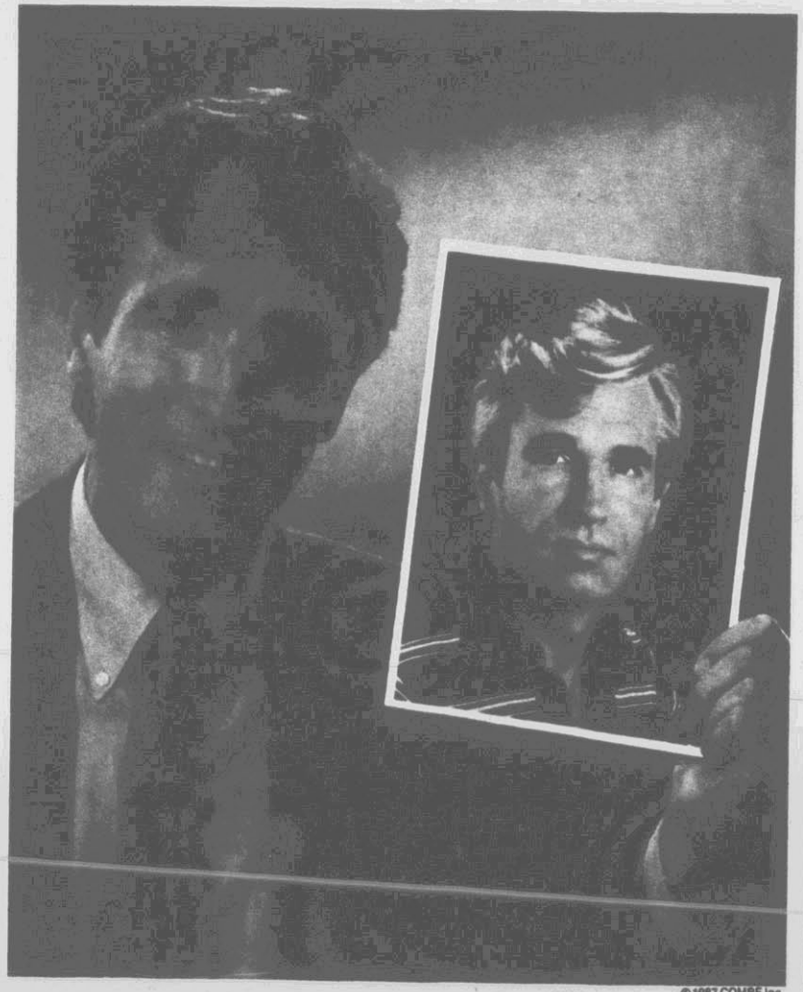

And just one application is all you need—for up to six full weeks. With JUST FOR MEN, the color doesn't fade or wash out—shampoo after shampoo.

Hair regains its natural look

JUST FOR MEN works so subtly, it colors only the gray—without altering the rest of your hair's color. So gray is gone, blended away, and your natural-looking color is back.

Men all over the country are reporting their hair looks natural, healthier and even fuller—the way it used to.

JUST FOR MEN is changing the way men think about coloring their gray hair. How about you?

Fred Downs brings help, and hope, to amputee children

To Share A Triumph

BY AL SANTOLI

GUADELUPE DE JESUS MUÑOZ, 13, and Fred Downs, 44, cannot speak each other's language. Her family's musty one-room shack in a village in El Salvador offers a stark contrast to the modern brick house in a Washington, D.C., suburb where Downs lives with his wife and 3-year-old daughter. Yet they share a common triumph, for both have suffered the loss of a limb and have overcome their disability.

Sent to a rehabilitation hospital in Denver, Downs resisted wearing the artificial arm he was given. "For months I was depressed," he recalls. Finally, he tried the arm while visiting his parents. "I became determined to reclaim my self-reliance," he says. "As I mastered using my new arm, I gained confidence. I no longer felt disabled."

Downs married, finished college and became the owner of a successful small business. And he wrote two widely praised books about Vietnam and his recovery, The Killing Zone and Aftermath.

In 1974, he took a job with the Veterans Administration. For the last seven years, he has been the director of the VA's Prosthetic and Sensory Aids Service, which helps amputees as well as blind, deaf and paralyzed veterans. Under his aggressive direction, the VA's prosthetic service attained international leadership. Downs has received requests for advice from rehabilitation programs abroad—including El Salvador, where guerrillas are waging war against the government of José Napoleón Duarte.

I first met Guadelupe in 1986 while I was investigating El Salvador's rural medical system. I was deeply touched by this little girl in a simple pink dress, struggling to walk the mile to and from school, aided only by a pair of thin wooden crutches hand-carved by a neighbor. Her father asked me: "Can you help my daughter to walk again?"

There didn't seem to be much hope for Guadelupe and hundreds of other similarly disabled children. I found most of the country's hospitals and clinics to be pitifully understaffed and without most basic medicines. An artificial limb averaged $1000.

Back in the U.S., I met Fred Downs at a veterans' conference and told him about Guadelupe and other injured children I had seen. Coincidentally, the U.S. Embassy in El Salvador invited him to join a team of American rehabilitation experts to study the amputee problem.

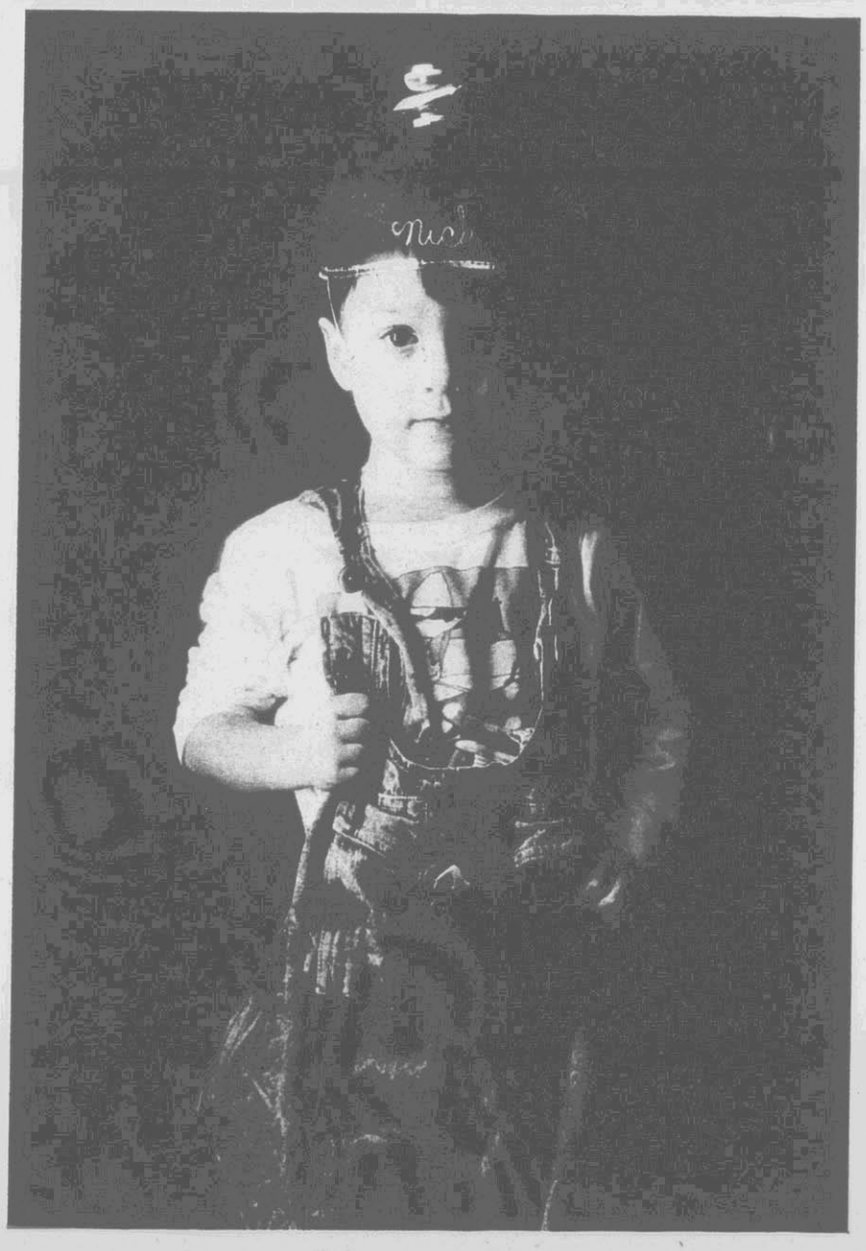

The team suggested that low-cost treatment centers be created, and Downs began to organize an El Salvador program on his own time. His idea was to fit amputees with artificial limbs through government and private agencies. He coalesced a grant from the U.S. Agency for International Development, political support from Reps. Bill McCollum Jr., Dan Coats and Frank Wolf, and the assistance of the Salvadoran government's Ministry of Health and Commission on Human Rights. A private organization, the Knights of Malta, volunteered to administer the program. To fit the artificial limbs, the Knights contracted Orthomedics Inc., a California company whose president, Roy Snelson, created the so-called "Third World Leg," which can be used after one clinical visit.

An experimental program was begun in April 1987. Within one week, 30 land-mine victims had received prosthetic limbs. Ten were children, Guadelupe among them. "When Guadelupe began walking, she burst into a big smile," Downs recalls. "But when we called her back to craft a cosmetic foot for her new leg, she began crying. She was embarrassed to tell us that she didn't own any shoes. So I told her, 'Don't worry.' I bought her first pair of shoes and socks."

Thus far, in several short visits to El Salvador, American technicians have provided new legs free of charge for almost 400 amputees. And they are training Salvadoran apprentice technicians for a permanent clinic, which has extended its services to disabled senior citizens and children who've lost limbs.

Recently, after a visit to El Salvador, Downs reflected: "The best reward for me is seeing children regain their mobility. They're learning to have hope."

Some women think they need to take an occasional rest from the Pill. So they switch to a less effective form of birth control, and increase their chances of getting pregnant. Just how restful this can be is highly questionable. What is certain, however, is that there's no medical evidence that supports this notion of taking a break. None.

SHOULD YOU TAKE A BREAK FROM THE PILL?

There are other myths, misconceptions and questions about the Pill. What about the Pill and breast cancer? Although there are conflicting reports concerning this issue, the Centers for Disease Control reported that women who took the Pill—even for 15 years—ran no higher risk of breast cancer than the women who didn't. They also reported that ovarian and uterine cancer are substantially less common among women on the Pill. What's more, Pill users are less likely to develop pelvic inflammatory disease (tubal infections), benign breast disease, and iron deficiency anemia—not to mention menstrual cramps.

And the rumor that the Pill makes you less fertile is just that. Rumor. Studies indicate that if you were fertile before you took the Pill, taking it should not affect your ability to have children later. Some women may experience a short period of readjustment after discontinuing the Pill. But even so, they usually become pregnant soon.

So does the Pill have any real risks? Yes. And you should know what those risks are. For example, if you are taking the Pill, you should not smoke. Especially if you're over 35. Cigarette smoking is known to increase the risk of serious and possibly life-threatening adverse effects on the heart and blood vessels from Pill use. What's more, women with certain conditions or medical histories should not use the Pill. Even if you're already on the Pill, you should see your doctor at least once a year. And be sure to read the patient information that's included in every Pill package.

When it comes to birth control, the best advice is to seek out the best advice. Go to reliable sources. Ask a lot of questions. Discuss all the options with your doctor.

Because only then will you know where the myth ends. And the truth begins.

Dottie Spatcher cares for the children of the desperate

'I Am An Emergency Mother'

FORGET THE NUMBERS. Remember the children. Long after you have lost track of the last depressing statistic about our greatest national problem, think of Dottie Spatcher, a woman in her 50s, walking down a hallway with children everywhere around her. Two of them are nestled in those great, encompassing arms of hers. One is clinging to her skirt. Most of all, notice the little boy sidling up the corridor, his back to the wall for security. His eyes are wide and wary. Only when he looks at Dottie Spatcher do his eyes relax. And only a little.

"I am an emergency mother," Spatcher says. She is one of 10 women in New York City's Emergency Foster Boarding Home Program, set up in 1976 to take care of children who enter the foster-care system after 5 p.m. and on weekends. The children have been molested, abused, abandoned or left alone by parents who are hospitalized. In New York alone, there are more than 20,000 such children; at any one time, 25 of them may be in the emergency foster program. They land on the city's doorstep at inconvenient times and places—and the city turns to Dottie Spatcher.

"I feel I'm needed," Spatcher says with a wide, crooked grin and a warm, optimist's voice. "I'm there to take the child when there isn't time to go through the normal procedures. What can I say, except that I enjoy it very much? I love children."

"Imagine what the life of an emergency parent is like," says Eulala King of The Children's Aid Society, the private group that runs the program under a city contract. "It's the middle of the night. A baby is brought to you. The kids come with just the clothes on their backs. Very young children often come wrapped in blankets. That foster mother must keep beds and wardrobes in her house. She has to bring the child down to our office for medical exams and put up with social workers in her home. Her whole household must be geared toward children."

In return, New York City pays for each child's room and board, plus a separate clothing allowance. Emergency parents donate their love—and their incredible energy.

"These two boys came in the other night," Spatcher says about the two children who are living in the back bedroom of her East Harlem apartment the day we visit. "My husband bathed one of them. The other wouldn't be bathed the first night. He wanted to sleep in his clothes. He didn't want anyone to touch him. I understand that he had been found in a welfare hotel that day. His mother was a crack addict. I wanted to bathe him, but I understand. Finally, he had a good breakfast. He'll come around."

"How do you keep..."

"From falling in love?" Spatcher says, finishing the question before I can. "You can't let yourself do it. It's like a doctor. If a doctor feels terrible every time he does an operation, he can no longer function as a doctor. He has to take care of one patient until that patient can go on. You give what you've got, and then you go on. Don't think I don't feel something inside when that happens, but you can't let it get you down. If you do, you're finished.

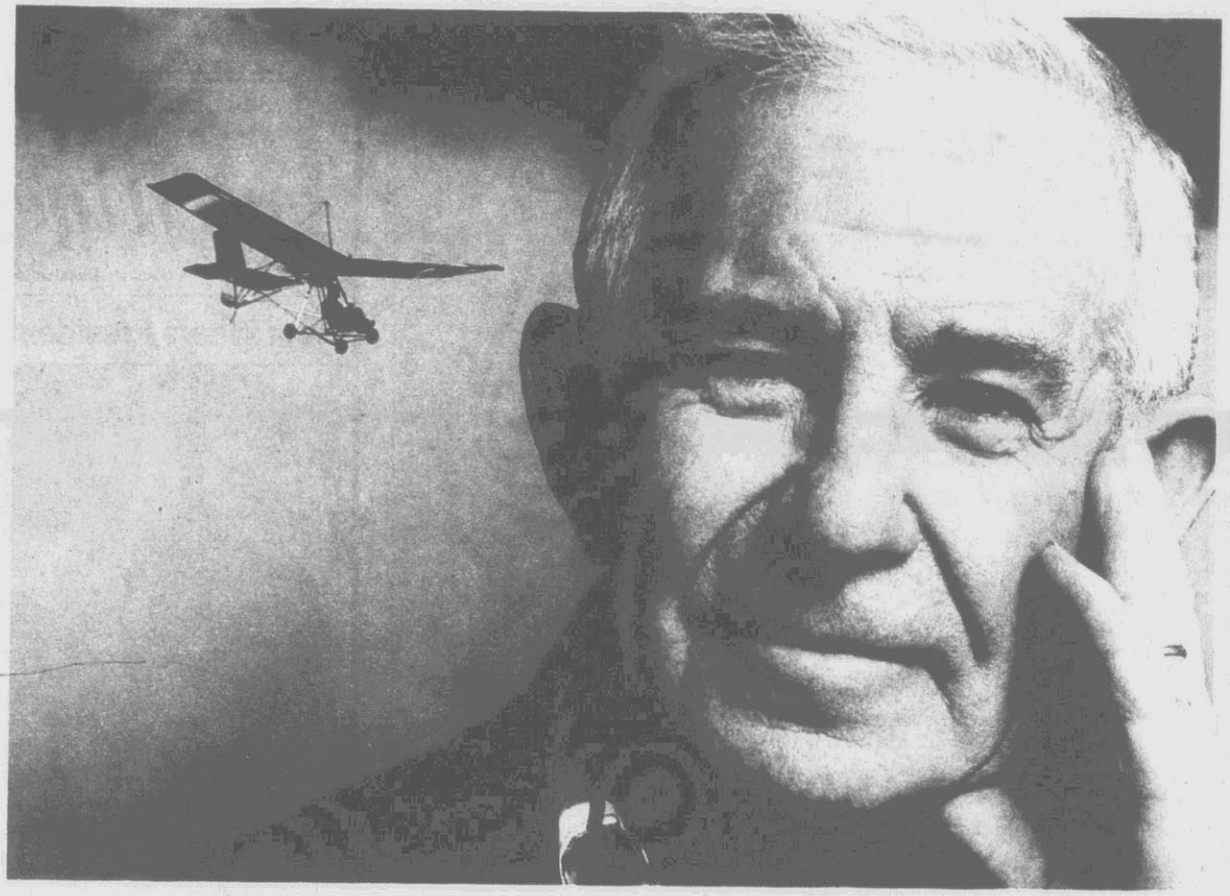

"Children love you, but they can leave you. They love me for what I'm doing now. When they go to another mother, they fall in love again. They cry, and they're sorry, but I've seen so many a few weeks after they leave me, and they're happy."

For 11 years, this has been Spatcher's life. She started just a few weeks before her younger daughter's wedding. After raising four kids of her own, she wasn't ready to stop being a mother. "I've been in the children business since I was 20," she says. "That's when I had my first baby, so I had experience to give." One of her friends was in the emergency foster-care program. Spatcher applied, was accepted and couldn't wait to get started: "I kept calling the social worker," she recalls. "I didn't want her to think I was rushing her, but I just wanted to tell her I was ready." It was a Saturday afternoon when the first two foster children finally came. Spatcher remembers that she and her husband and daughter fussed over the children all weekend. "Everybody was so excited," she chuckles.

That was more than 300 children ago. Dottie and her husband, Diamond, a maintenance worker, are still eager for every child, still unruffled by the constant disruptions in their lives, as children arrive at inhuman hours. "He always liked to get up for some ice cream or Kool Aid in the middle of the night," Spatcher says with a laugh.

If Dottie Spatcher were to enroll in the Emergency Foster Boarding Home Program today, she would not have to wait weeks for her first child. "If we have four vacancies on a given night," says Susan Kyle of The Children's Aid Society, "we fill four vacancies. If we had more, we could fill them all." As Eulala King puts it: "We need more like Mrs. Spatcher. We need lots more."

From Where President Kennedy Was Shot

AP/Wide World

In Dallas 25 years ago this Nov. 22, Lee Harvey Oswald assassinated President John F. Kennedy by rifle from the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository, now known as the Dallas County Administration Building.

Aware that the site, 411 Elm St., has become one of the most historic in Texas, the Dallas Landmark Commission, the Dallas County Commissioners and other agencies, both private and public, have joined forces to okay the construction of a 76-foot-tall exterior elevator tower which will provide access for an estimated 500,000 visitors annually to an educational exhibit called "The Sixth Floor." It will detail the history of the Kennedy murder and, with luck, will be open to the public (adults $4, children $2) by Nov. 22.

Lindalyn Adams, president of the Dallas County Historical Foundation, which is financing "The Sixth Floor," explains that the assassination project was a sensitive, controversial issue for years. "Originally," she says, "many of the people who lived here when Kennedy was shot were in favor of razing the Texas School Book Depository, which is understandable. Who wants to be reminded of a tragedy day after day? Out of sight is out of mind. But gradually people came to realize that Dallas could not escape its history any more than Washington, D.C., could ignore the assassination of Abraham Lincoln in Ford's Theatre."

In 1977, Dallas County bought the Texas School Book Depository from the Col. D. Harold Byrd family of Dallas, and the county commissioners ordered the renovation of the structure into a new seat of county government. After consulting experts in U.S. history, site preservation and museum management, however, they wisely recommended that the building's sixth floor be declared off-limits to the public until the construction of "an objective, educational display dealing with the history and meaning of the Kennedy assassination" could be decided upon.

It has taken 10 years of discussion and $3.5 million to finance the Dallas-Kennedy project, but the end of the beginning is now in sight.

For Shutterbugs

Come the end of this month or early July, the Nikon Corp. of Japan will put on sale its newest single-lens reflex camera with what it claims is the world's fastest shutter speed: 1/8000th of a second. Known in the U.S. as the N-8008, the camera body alone will sell for around $850. (Add a basic 50mm Nikkor lens, and the package will cost about $950.) With its super-fast shutter and a lens that focuses automatically, the N-8008 can freeze a fastball in flight "with every seam razor-sharp," boasts Nikon.

Sexual Harassment

The growing incidence of sexual harassment has become a problem not only here but abroad as well. In the Federal Republic of Germany, for example, one-fourth of all women have been subject to sexual harassment on the job. That's the estimate in a study recently released by the Federation of German Trade Unions.

Schumacher/"Time" magazine

Mechelle Vinson's harassment case was first to reach U.S. Supreme Court

Titled "Sexual Harassment in the Workplace—Women Defend Themselves," the study acknowledges that a major difference exists between "flirting," which is acceptable to both sexes, and "overtures," which are unwelcome to members of the opposite sex and constitute harassment.

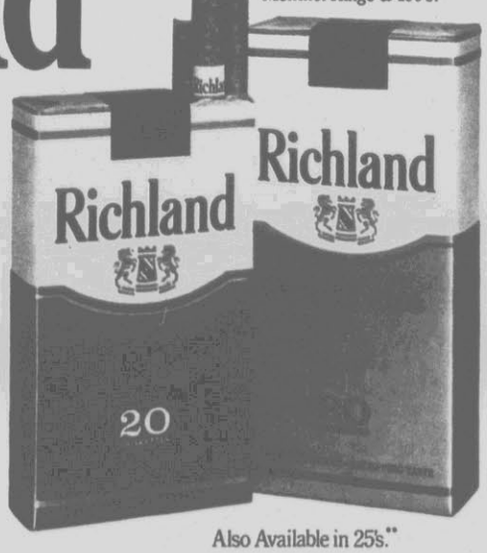

Sibylle Plogstedt and Klaus Bertelsman, who authored the study, declare that when a woman says "no" to a man on the job, that's just what she means. They advise men to rid themselves of the traditional but erroneous belief which holds that when a woman behaves politely, she is "asking for it." They also suggest that employers set up a department in their companies to which victims of sexual harassment can turn for help. They explain that for the person who has been pestered, badgered and annoyed on the job day after day, sexual harassment is much more than a "petty offense."

BY JAMES BRADY

William Hurt

WHEN THAT eccentrically wonderful actress Geraldine Page died a year ago, her actor friends took over a Broadway theater for a little tribute. I was there, out on the sidewalk, covering it for television—talking to actors, asking questions about Miss Page. Some of them seemed to enjoy the spotlight. Others, like William Hurt, hurried inside without saying a word—there for Miss Page and not for us.

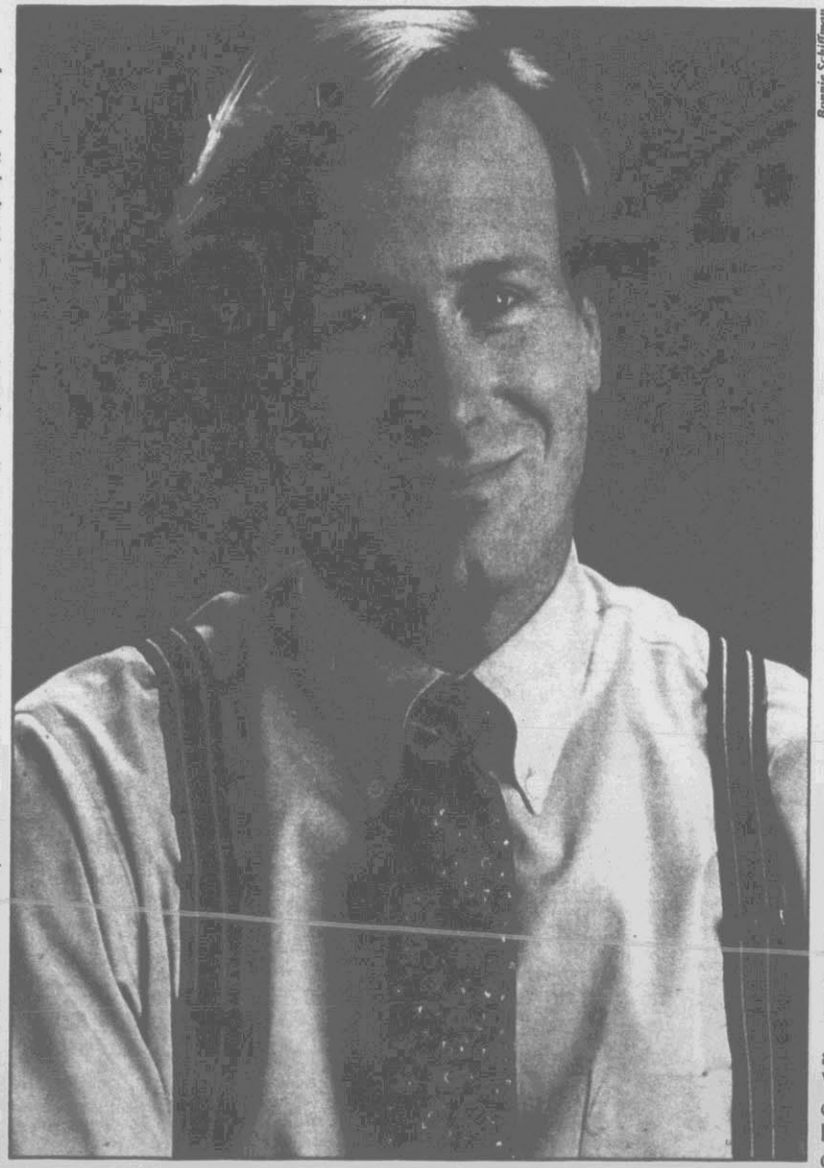

BRADY'S BITS

It isn't often you meet someone at the very start of what's going to be an extraordinary career. And when you do, you probably don't realize it. Bill Hurt was doing Shakespeare in New York—unheralded and unknown—and they sent him to an obscure cable-TV studio to hype the show. I was there doing a talk show. Hurt was out in a dingy corridor, waiting for his turn and looking—and perhaps feeling—a bit silly in a costume of Elizabethan tights. We talked for a while. Nice guy. Interesting man. I wish I could say I sensed greatness. I didn't. Just, well, a nice guy.

Bill Hurt is a big, rangy guy with lank, blond hair, and he didn't look as if he'd changed very much since I had first met him back in 1976, when he was performing Shakespeare in New York. But he had, of course. All of us had. He'd won the Oscar, developed a drinking problem and rehabilitated himself out of it, fallen in and out of love, had a son, Alexander, and become, while still in his 30s, arguably the strongest leading man in American film.

Yet I read recently that he had just gone back to acting classes—the beginners' course.

The man can be counted upon to do the unexpected. Consider his choice of movie roles: in Broadcast News, he was a sexy, charming, empty-headed anchorman; in Body Heat, he was suckered into committing murder; in Altered States, he was a Jekyll-and-Hyde scientist; in Kiss of the Spider Woman, a gay window dresser; in Eyewitness, a janitor. You want professional self-confidence? Meet William Hurt.

Bonnie Schiffman

"Broadcast News" is only William Hurt's latest hit. His next role will be in "The Accidental Tourist." Hurt is, as they say in the biz, "hot!"

His personal life has been something else. When he was making Gorky Park in Russia in 1983, there was trouble with the other cast members. As the story goes, when one of them slugged Hurt, the late Lee Marvin chortled, "You saved me the trouble." Maybe Hurt was drinking then.

He was born in Washington and grew up on Guam, where his father was a State Department officer. When he was 6, his parents divorced—his mother to marry Henry Luce III, son of the founder of Time. He went from the demi-paradise of the South Pacific to a rich man's home in Manhattan. He attended prep school and graduated magna cum laude from Tufts University, where he studied religion and married the actress Mary Beth Hurt in his junior year.

Hurt saw a link between theology and theater and entered an acting class. When his marriage fell apart, he motorcycled across the country. In Oregon, he won a stage role, realized that he had developed a craft and returned to New York and a series of fine stage performances. His buddies were Robin Williams and Kevin Kline.

Then the big movies came along—and the women. A dancer named Sandra Jennings is the mother of his son. Marlee Matlin gave him moral support when he checked into the Betty Ford Clinic to confront his alcohol problem. He and Marlee were still lovers when, in one of those show-biz flukes, he presented her with her own Academy Award. That relationship is now over as well. I don't think Bill Hurt is sitting home alone. A survey of the audience for Broadcast News reported that the segment of viewers Hurt attracted were women from 18 to 24.

THEATER: Includes productions with the Circle Repertory Company in New York City, 1977-82; Hurlyburly, 1984.
FILMS: Include Altered States, 1980; Eyewitness, 1981; Body Heat, 1981; The Big Chill, 1983; Gorky Park, 1983; Kiss of the Spider Woman, 1985 (Academy Award); Children of a Lesser God, 1986; Broadcast News, 1987.

'The 42nd Annual Tony Awards'

Angela Lansbury hosts CBS's "The 42nd Annual Tony Awards," which will be broadcast live from the Minskoff Theatre in New York City. It airs Sunday, June 5.

Angela Lansbury started off in the movies, and her most recent success has been on TV as Jessica Fletcher in CBS's "Murder, She Wrote." But it was on the Broadway stage that she became a major star. She'll be returning to the scene of her most memorable triumphs on Sunday, June 5, when she hosts "The 42nd Annual Tony Awards" (airing on CBS). As a four-time Tony winner herself, she's a natural for the position.

The London-born Lansbury, 62, whose mother was also an actress, never had any trouble deciding what she wanted to be. "I knew about the age of, let's say 13, that I was destined to follow in my mother's footsteps," she says. "I just was very comfortable being somebody else."

In 1940, her mother moved the family to the United States to escape the London blitz. In 1943, Lansbury was signed by MGM. Her first role was the Cockney maid in "Gaslight" (1944), which garnered her an Oscar nomination for Best Supporting Actress. A year later she was nominated again, for "The Picture of Dorian Gray" (1945). "It all happened so fast," she says. "It was like a fairy story. I started very young with no money and no position in the industry, and suddenly I was under contract to MGM."

Then, for no discernible reason, her career seemed to stall. She worked regularly, but tended to be cast as heavies who were several years older than she was. "If I ever fought, or tried to fight, for roles, it was during those years at MGM where I was shunted aside into those rather heavy character roles," she says.

In 1957, she began to make forays to Broadway. She starred in two plays, then in 1964 tried a musical, "Anyone Can Whistle." Meanwhile, she continued to play domineering mothers in the movies, most notably in "The Manchurian Candidate" (1962), which got her a third Oscar nomination.

It wasn't until she began to approach the age that she had been playing all along that she finally broke out of the mold. And it was a 1966 Broadway show that did it.

"One glorious day Jerry Herman sent me the script for 'Mame,' " she recalls. "When I read that," I said to my husband, This is it. If any show is going to make it for me on Broadway, 'Mame' is the show." And it worked. It was one of the most fabulous opening nights in Broadway history.

There is one moment that she recalls most vividly. "I remember the moment I walked into the Rainbow Room with my children and my husband. It was one of the most stunning moments. It was like being hit by lightning — the response, the excitement, the feeling going through the room, the knowledge that here was a tremendous opening night for a new Broadway star. That's why I love the theater. How could I not, having experienced all that? Other great opening nights for me were 'Gypsy,' and 'Dear World' and then, of course, the last one, which was 'Sweeney Todd.'"

Theater lovers will be happy to hear that she is keeping an eye out for another musical. "You bet your life I am," she says. "Broadway is like a chocolate ice cream soda. It's always sitting there: Shall I, will I, won't I? It's an addictive part of life."

Michele Will Tell

By Michele Marks

Dear Michele: Could you please list the top 10 TV shows from this season? — JILL TRAUMULLER, DURHAM, N.C.

The official ratings season is over, and the big winner again is NBC. Of the Top 10 shows, NBC had five. Here is the complete Top 10: 1. "The Cosby Show" (NBC); 2. "A Different World" (NBC); 3. "Cheers" (NBC); 4."The Golden Girls" (NBC); 5. "Growing Pains" (ABC); 6. "Who's the Boss?" (ABC); 7. "Night Court" (NBC); 8. "60 Minutes" (CBS); 9."Murder, She Wrote" (CBS); 10. "The Wonder Years" (ABC). The ratings information was provided by the A.C. Nielsen Co. and AGB Television Research.

Dear Michele: Does actor Cliff Robertson use his real name, or is it a stage name? — LYNN DEVEREAUX, KNOXVILLE, TENN.

The 62-year-old actor was born Clifford Parker Robertson III in La Jolla, Calif. Educated at Antioch College, Robertson was originally a journalist. He then became a stage actor and made his motion picture debut in "Picnic" (1955). John F. Kennedy hand-picked Robertson to portray him as a young World War II Navy lieutenant in the 1963 movie "PT 109."

Dear Michele: Please answer a few questions about Kelly LeBrock, the star of "The Woman in Red." What country is she from, and how old is she? — FRED WIGGINS, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

LeBrock was born in New York City, but remains unwilling to diviluge her year of birth. It has been reported she is 28 years old. The former model says she was "about a year old" when she moved to London with her family, and considers herself "definitely more English than American." Educated in elite English boarding schools, she left school at age 16 to head for Africa and a swimsuit modeling assignment. LeBrock never returned to school because she found modeling to be much more rewarding. The sultry actress credits photographer Richard Avedon for pointing her toward an acting career. In 1984, LeBrock made her motion picture debut as Gene Hackman's fantasy woman in "The Woman in Red."

Dear Michele: I'm involved in a dispute with a friend concerning the miniseries, "Elvis and Me." Did Ronnie McDowell do all the singing for that production? — MARY ANNE CORROW, PLATTSBURGH, N.Y.

Priscilla Presley's memories of Elvis were her own, but the King's songs were sung by country singer Ronnie McDowell in this ABC miniseries. McDowell also dubbed Presley's music in the 1979 feature film "Elvis," starring Kurt Russell.

Dear Michele: I'd like to know a little about syndicated talk-show host Morton Downey Jr.'s parents. I was told that Joan Bennett, the 1940s movie star, is his mother. Wasn't his father a singer? The name sounds familiar, but I can't place it. — DIANE GUILLAME, PARK FORREST, ILL.

Controversial talk-show host Morton Downey Jr., 55, is the son of Barbara Bennett and Morton Downey Sr. Barbara, a dancer, was the sister of thespians Constance and Joan Bennett. Morton Sr., a popular radio personality of the 1930s and '40s, crooned such hits as "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling" and "Wabash Moon." In 1941, Downey's mother, Barbara, relinquished custody of her children, Morton Junior, Kevin, Anthony, Lorelle Ann, and an adopted son, Michael, in order to gain her freedom to marry actor Addison Randall. The scandal made headlines at the time. Bennett died in 1958,an alcoholic who had been consistently and permanently denied visitation rights to her children by the courts. Morton Downey Sr., who had become estranged from his children, reconciled with them prior to his death in 1985.

Dear Michele: I've read that Tom Selleck was on "The Young and the Restless" as Brad Eliot. I have also read that Tom Hallick portrayed Brad Eliot, Leslie Brooks' husband. Did both actors portray this character at different times? — HELEN G. RAY, CANTON, OHIO

From 1974-75, Tom Selleck (sans moustache) appeared on "The Young and the Restless" as Jed Andrews, love interest of Laurie Brooks (played by Jamie Lyn Bauer). Tom Hallick portrayed Brad Eliot on this CBS soap from 1973 to 1978.

Erratum

According to film expert Leonard Maltin, author of "Leonard Maltin's TV Movies and Video Guide," "McLintock!" is available on videocassette. Sources at MGM/UA, however, say the film is not available on videocassette. The explanation appears to be that "McLintock!" could have been on video at one time, and has since been pulled off the shelves.

FRIDAY

Hugh Downs and Barbara Walters help ABC's "20/20" celebrate its 10th anniversary when the show airs Friday, June 10.

Hope for More

Donald Trump and George Steinbrenner are two contributors to the Bob Hope Comedy Fund, a $1 million grant to encourage student works at the Yale Repertory Theater in New Haven, Conn. The two millionaires, who truly are made for each other, are both members of the All-American Collegiate Golf Foundation, which has sponsored the grant.

TV Chatter

By Frank Sanello

Don't expect any major surprises when Pat Sajak's late-night talk show debuts next January on CBS. "You can't fiddle too much with the format," says the "Wheel of Fortune" host. "There's a danger in trying to be too different. And I don't want to make changes just to be different, like saying there won't be a desk because Johnny uses one. You can't do the show kneeling."

But the new show will run 90 minutes, a half-hour longer than NBC's "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson." Sajak isn't worried about filling time, though. "After you subtract all the commercials, it's only about 75 minutes. The extra time will let me spend more time with the guests. Until 1981 Carson had to sit through 90 minutes every night, too."

Sajak will drop his hosting duties on NBC's daytime version of "Wheel of Fortune," but he will stick with the syndicated nighttime show until the remaining two years on his contract run out. "I'll be on TV more than any human ought to be," he says.

"Angels '88," the Fox Network's new version of the 1970s jiggle classic, won't be exploitative, says Aaron Spelling, creator of both shows. In fact, Spelling says the new show will please feminists. "There's no Charlie or Bosley telling the Angels what to do," he says. "They're not going to do the wet T-shirt stuff. So what if they're all gorgeous? Why is that exploitative? It's OK for hunks to do it. Tom Selleck bares his chest all the time. We won't be doing that. There's no male domination. They're on their own."

Another difference: "Angels '88" features a quartet of heavenly bodies. They're played by Claire Yarlett ("The Colbys"), Karen Kopins ("Dallas"), Sandra Canning and Tea Leoni (who was discovered through Fox's talent search for the new Angels). "Unlike the original trio who worked for Charlie, these women will be out-of-work actresses who open a detective agency after their detective series is canceled," explains Spelling. "The original Angels were all dedicated crimebusters who graduated from the Police Academy. Our new Angels are actresses who don't know what they're doing. And they're not so dedicated. If they're in the middle of a case, and they get a call from their agent to go on an audition, they'll drop the case."

Delta Burke, who plays the lusty Suzanne Sugarbaker on "Designing Women," dismisses suggestions that her character might become more prudish in light of the current sexual climate. "Oh, please, don't make me throw up!" she asserts. "You've got women on cop shows who don't even say, 'Hi, good morning!' before they're saying, 'Let's go to bed.' I know. I've been one of those broads on those shows.

"Guys do that stuff on TV all the time," she continues. "I guess some people think it's not feminine to carry on the same way we see guys carrying on, but it's a human trait."

SOAP OPERA WEEK

'Y&R' character is still on, but doesn't have much to do

By Kimberly Redmond

Several weeks ago you mentioned that Roberta Leighton is a member of the cast of "The Young and the Restless," but my husband and I can't place her. What character does she play? – M.H., Greenville, N.C.

Roberta Leighton

Leighton created the character of Dr. Casey Reed on "Y&R" in 1978 and continued playing her until 1981, when she left to look for other acting jobs. Leighton returned in 1984. She is still portraying the character; however, she isn't on very often and she hasn't had a major story line of her own.

In December 1987, I heard a hymn on "Guiding Light" that was sung by a woman with the most beautiful voice I've ever heard. Can you tell me the name of the hymn and the singer? – K.A., Harpers Ferry, W.Va.

The hymn was "Softly and Tenderly" from the soundtrack to the film "The Trip to Bountiful." "GH" had permission to use the song directly from a videocassette since the soundtrack is unpublished, but unfortunately, there was no credit given to the singer.

I'm positive that I've seen the actor who plays Alan Brand on "Days of Our Lives" in the Broadway play "Big River." Am I right? Can you give me his name? I'd also like his address. – K.D., Trenton, N.J.

Brian L. Green

Brian L. Green plays Alan Brand on "DOOL," and he did indeed star as Huck Finn in the Broadway musical "Big River." You can write to him c/o "DOOL," NBC-TV, 3000 West Alameda Ave., Burbank, CA 91523.

(Have a question about soap operas? Write Kimberly Redmond at 200 Park Ave., Room 602, New York, NY 10166. Questions cannot be answered personally but those of general interest will be answered in future columns.)

Sports Roundup

SUNDAY, JUNE 5

Men's Tennis (NBC)

French Open, finals live from Stade Roland Garros, Paris. Ivan Lendl proved once again that he is the foremost clay court player in the world at last year's French Open. With great patience, Lendl baselined Mats Wilander into the ground in the final. Lendl plays this surface with the care and skill of a great surgeon.

Sports Festival (NBC)

Las Vegas Sports Festival, live from Las Vegas. A pre-Olympic multinational competition in gymnastics, swimming, boxing and cycling.

PGA Golf (CBS)

Kemper Open, final round from TPC at Avenel, Potomac, Md. When Tom Kite won this event last year, he kept intact a streak of seven consecutive years in which he has won a PGA event. Admittedly, that is a long way from the Tour record of 17, held by Jack Nicklaus, but it is the longest current skein.

Auto Racing (ABC)

Milwaukee 200, live from Wisconsin State Park, West Allis, Wis. Speaking of streaks, Michael Andretti has won this event the last two years.

NBA Basketball (CBS)

Baseball (ABC)

Teams to be announced. No baseball season is complete without some kind of controversy. This year it's the reinterpretation of the balk rule. But the Philadelphia Phillies were not victimized during the first month of the season: Phillie hurlers registered only 11 balks in their first 30 games.

Phils' pitching coach Claude Osteen welcomes the rule change. "It's something that I've been trying to get for a long time," he says. "I think the whole thing is going to help the pitchers, as far as holding runners on base. Everyone got so carried away with quick releases and getting rid of the ball that they literally ignored the base runner. Instead of making him come to a completestop, he's been getting a running jump on the pitchers. Sure, they get rid of the ball quickly, but the base runner's got two or three steps.

"We spent an awful lot of time on it in spring training," he adds. "It's a very simple rule; all the umpires want is a legitimate stop. We still give our pitchers reminders every day when they go out there."

TUESDAY, JUNE 7

NBA Basketball (CBS)

Finals, Game 1.

THURSDAY, JUNE 9

Finals, Game 2.

SATURDAY, JUNE 11

Baseball (NBC)

Kansas City Royals at California Angels or Baltimore Orioles at New York Yankees. A non-fan asked us the other day why the once-mighty O's have fallen on such hard times. Unfortunately, organizations, like people, can become enfeebled with age. The Orioles scouts and front-office people lost the knack for turning up the winning players that made their farm system such a lucrative source. In recent years the club has turned to aging, high-priced free agents like Lee Lacy and Fred Lynn. You can't build a team around guys in their mid-30s.

Horse Racing (ABC)

The Belmont Stakes, live from Belmont Park, Elmont, N.Y. The final (and longest) leg of the Triple Crown is, in some ways, the toughest. "By the time the Belmont comes," says racing great Bill Shoemaker, "there's even fewer horses than for the Preakness. The ones that survive until this race are usually ones that are well-balanced and sound."

Roots Christmas

Levar Burton and Lou Gossett Jr. will reprise their roles from the 1977 miniseries "Roots" in "Roots Christmas," a two-hour holiday movie conceived by Alex Haley. Burton and Gossett will once again play the slaves Kunta Kinte and Fiddler, with Avery Brooks ("Spenser: For Hire"), Sean Cassidy and Kate Mulgrew also playing key roles. The project reportably was conceived after Haley realized that few holiday movies have featured black characters.

Baseball Players Try The Old Name Switch

By Marty Linehan

One of baseball's main claims to popularity is the fact it rarely changes. The biggest recent change — back in the 1970s — was the designated hitter rule in the American League. But now ballplayers are making a few changes of their own.

They're changing their names!

Montreal slugger Tim Raines wants to be called "Rock" from now on. New York Mets' ace hurler Dwight Gooden, who has been called "The Doctor" since his high-school days, now wants to be knownas "Doc" Gooden.

Detroit Tiger reliever Willy Hernandez substituted the Spanish name for William and is now called Guillermo. Guillermo got three quick wins after the name change. Maybe it helped.

The season before last, Jeffrey Leonard of the San Francisco Giants was Jeff, but now it's Jeffrey. The Giants' shortstop, Jose Uribe, did the name-change bit a few years ago. When he got into professional baseball, he was Jose Gonzales. He figured there were too many Jose Gonzalezes, however, so when he was traded from the St. Louis Cardinals to the Giants, he changed his last name to Uribe, his mother's maiden name.

We don't know how many Robinsons have played in the bigs, but if Jose had looked, he would have seen there are four Robinsons — Brooks, Frank, Jackie and Wilbert — in baseball's Hall of Fame.

Three of the four Robinsons — Brooks, Frank and Wilbert — were associated with the Baltimore Orioles (Wilbert with an earlier incarnation of the team). But the Baltimore organization, once the best in major-league baseball, has fallen on hard times. On Saturday, June 11, NBC offers the now-hapless Baltimore Orioles (with Frank Robinson managing) at the New York Yankees or the California Angels hosting the Kansas City Royals.

SATURDAY
227

On "227" Hal Williams plays Lester Jenkins and Marla Gibbs plays his wife Mary, who is never afraid to get involved — in anything. The popular NBC sitcom airs airs Saturday, June 11. (Rebroadcast)

Sara

"Sara," a recent addition to NBC's late-spring lineup, isn't a new series, or an old one, really. The series, about an attorney who sides with the underdog, aired briefly in 1985, receiving disappointing ratings. Why the comeback? Because its one-time cast of unknowns is now a cast of stars: Bronson Pinchot ("Perfect Strangers"), Geena Davis ("Beetlejuice") and Alfre Woodard ("Unnatural Causes").

NEW! Rest-A-Matic . . .Adjustable Bed. . .

Copyright, 1979, Rest-A-Matic® Adjustable Beds

Rest-A-Matic —so versatile, so advanced it makes ordinary chairs, sofas, and beds practically obsolete for leisure activities, relaxation, and sleep!

Here's an amazing discovery that enriches the hours you spend at home...making the most of healthful relaxation. REST-A-MATIC®... An engineering marvel that makes (what looks like) a conventional bed... into an ADJUSTABLE BED... that changes to literally hundreds of restful positions. Quiet electric motors concealed in the understructure of the REST-A-MATIC® do your bidding at the touch of a button.

The Rest-A-Matic® Adjustable Bed provides the ultimate in comfort and relaxation in your home...where you can enjoy extra leisure hours the most.

Now your bedroom is not just for sleeping! With Rest-A-Matic® ...it becomes a center for your most rewarding leisure-time activities... reading, studying, sewing...watching TV... or even breakfast in bed!

People of all ages...in all walks of life are now finding new ways to enrich their lives with healthful, vigorous activities...for a renewed spirit of enjoyment, physically and mentally. And equally important to this renewed activity...is the enjoyment of total relaxation!

Rest-A-Matic® lets your mind work while your body rests. You may actually be able to add extra hours every day to your active life because you'll be more comfortable... more relaxed, yet wide-awake. you will soon find that muscle tension will be relieved in every part of your body.... because your body weight is more evenly distributed and supported than in any chair or ordinary bed.

Couples can now enjoy these extra pleasant hours spent together... each enjoying a preference of relaxed activities. With the new Dual-King model, for example, you can sit up watching television, perhaps, while your spouse can lie back even further for relaxed conversation... or just a pleasant rest.

How does Rest-A-Matic do all this for you?

Programmed to raise or lower different sections of the bed, the Rest-A-Matic® is the product of extensive engineering design and testing... All toward the ultimate aim of providing you with a "free-floating" kind of support you could never experience in chair lounges, sofas or conventional beds. Since the Rest-A-Matic® adapts to literally hundreds of restful positions, you can actually distribute body weight more evenly to help relieve muscle tension, back fatigue, tired legs. Comfort is yours to command whether you just want to relax or adjust to a position for increased circulatory action.

Inside the Rest-A-Matic® frame and mattress is where the engineering magic has been concealed. Simply plug the cord into a regular electric outlet and the Rest-A-Matic, with its silent electric motors and scientifically structured framework ...is ready to do your bidding at the touch of a button.

When made up, your Rest-A-Matic® bed looks like any other elegant conventional bed. Can be used with your present headboards and comes in the usual sizes; Twin, Full-Sized, Queen and King, and Dual-King (two twin beds that accommodate king-size bedspreads).

Refreshing relaxation and increased circulation offer many obvious benefits to health and well-being.

Since the Rest-A-Matic® Bed adjusts to many positions, you can now choose exactly the right amount of lift or support for healthful relaxation. For example, you can lower the head support and raise your legs... for a healthful surge of circulatory action. With legs elevated, back completely relaxed... and your head slightly lower than the rest of your body... you can almost feel the pressures and tensions of the day slip away!

Enjoy "cradle-comfort" even in the sitting-up position, since only about one fifth of your body weight rests on the hips. Just one of thousands of restful positions you can command.

A miracle answer for the bed-ridden...

Rest-A-Matic® can automatically be controlled by the patient to change positions to relieve the monotony, aches, nervous tension and soreness from remaining in one position too long. In addition, by adjusting the bed to "activity" positions the patient can keep self-entertained or engaged in other activities such as reading, writing, with virtually no assistance from others.

"Digi-Matic Massage"

"Thermo-Matic Heat"

Another optional feature is the Thermo-Matic Warmth Control, a heating unit for your Rest-A-Matic® that is imperceptible to sight or touch. With its own control that lets you select the level of heat you prefer, "Thermo-Matic" is far more efficient than an electric blanket since the heat rises from the mattress and is retained by the lightest of blankets above.

- NAME GAME! The name of a colorful U.S. President, born October 27, 1858, is concealed in this pictorial anagram. To find it, rearrange the 17 letters of the four words shown.

His name: Theodore Roosevelt.

BEWARE OF S-CURVES!

Take S from a five-letter word for a rascal, get a four-letter word for a cluster of tents. Answer: Scamp, camp.

Now try these:

1. Take S from 20, get part of an apple.
2. Take S from an odor, get a U.S. coin.
5. Take S from a country, get an ache.
6. Take S from a diver, get a country.
7. Take S from a girl's name, get a friend.

1. Score, core. 2. Scent, cent. 3. Slime, lime. 4. Stack, tack. 5. Spain, pain. 6. Scuba, Cuba. 7. Sally, ally.

- WORD PLAY! I'm a three-letter word meaning to spoil. Reversed I'm a male animal. Transposed I'm a human limb. What word am I?
