Shultz Discusses Middle East Relations With Assad

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer
DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz met today with President Hafez Assad of Syria and said if the United States and the Soviet Union can improve relations the countries in the Middle East should be able to do the same. Shultz told Arab reporters in Damascus that Washington and Moscow "have both agreed to address ourselves to the Middle East issues" and said there would be more talks. In a news conference shortly before his two-hour meeting with Assad, Shultz noted that the superpowers have resolved many of their own disputes. "If we can solve some of our problems, why can't the people in the (Middle East) area come to grips with their own?" he asked. The superpower summit pointed the United States and Soviet Union in a more cooperative direction in dealing with regional disputes, and Shultz hopes Syria will take a cue from Moscow. Syria, which has been critical of the Shultz mission, is the Soviet Union's principal ally in the Arab world and has the only missile arsenal that can approach Israel's in capability. Israeli officials say Syria has put chemical warheads on some of its missiles and that they can reach Israeli cities and military targets. Speaking to the Arab journalists, Shultz repeated his contention that the Palestinian state on the West Bank and Gaza Strip demanded by Arabs "just doesn't make any sense." He said "a confederation or an attachment to another state or states" was "a more workable way of looking at it." He suggested American states or

Swiss cantons as possible models for a future Palestinian entity. A day earlier, Shultz told Israel that its occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip and "frustration" of Palestinian civil rights were a "dead-end street." Shultz is reporting to Assad that the U.S. plan for Middle East peace talks ran into a dead-end in Israel and Jordan. The secretary of state found neither King Hussein of Jordan nor Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir prepared to negotiate under terms set by Washington. The plight of American hostages and the Syrian military deployment in Lebanon were also on the agenda. Since there is virtually no U.S. contact with Iran, the Syrian government remains the main U.S. channel for information from Tehran. Syria is Iran's main Arab ally. While the U.S. State Department routinely affirms its support for Lebanon's independence, Syrian influence in the war-battered country is considered preferable to the rise of Iranian-sponsored Islamic fundamentalists believed to hold U.S. and other foreign hostages there. Shultz flew to Damascus from Cairo, where he had spent the night after flying from Jerusalem where he spoke with Shamir. After seeing Assad, Shultz left Damascus for Egypt, where he was scheduled to hold a final meeting Tuesday with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak. Assad's spokesman, Jibril Kourieh, said Shultz and Assad covered "the Middle East situation, the American ideas about peace in the area" and the international situation, apparently referring in part to the superpower summit. Shultz, on his fourth trip to the

$1.35 Billion Spent To Close 2 Calif. S&Ls

By DAVE SKIDMOR
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Home Loan Bank Board today announced a record $1.35 billion cash payout to shut down two insolvent savings institutions in Costa Mesa, Calif. The bank board, which regulates 3,150 S&Ls, said it will begin on Tuesday to pay off deposits up to the insurance limit of $100,000 in the North America Savings and Loan Association and the American Diversified Savings Bank.

man, said it was the largest cash payout ever for the agency. It is paying $1.14 billion from the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. to American Diversified depositors and $209 million to North America depositors. After recovering some of its costs by selling the institutions' assets, the bank board expects ultimately to spend $931 million — $798 million for American Diversified and $133 million for North America. Depositors who had funds above the insurance limit will share in the liquidation proceeds.

Senator Offering Bill Compromise

RALEIGH (AP) — A state senator who has blocked Senate consideration of a bill requiring pregnant teen-age girls to get parental approval for abortions wants to require parents who refuse consent to assume responsibility for the baby until its mother is 21 years old.

sonable reactions by parents and child abuse, they say. "I am still willing to consider bringing up the bill for a vote if these suggestions are incorporated into a committee substitute," Martin, D-Guilford, said in a memo he wrote on the issue. Martin said a key goal is to enable teenage parents, who often grow up in poverty, to have a greater chance to stay in school. He said poor teenagers who have children often drop out of school and then their children are stuck in poverty as well. "Some mechanism is needed to alleviate this problem of cyclical poverty arising from teenage births," Martin said.

State Sen. Bill Martin says he will not let the parental-consent bill out of the subcommittee he chairs unless his suggestions are agreed to by supporters of the bill. The Greensboro News and Record reported today. Details of Martin's compromise are scheduled to be announced today at a news conference in Raleigh.

Some provisions Martin wants included in the bill include: —Requiring those who refuse permission for a teenager's abortion to provide for the baby to the same extent as if they were the actual parents, until the mother is 21 years old. They would be considered legal guardians during that time. The father would become primarily responsible for providing for the child when he becomes 21.

A bill to require girls 17 years old and younger to receive parental consent before they could receive abortions passed the state House of Representatives last year. A similar bill passed the House in 1985, but died for lack of action in the Senate. Because the latest bill passed the House last year, it is eligible for consideration by the Senate during the 1988 short session of the General Assembly.

—Requiring those who refuse permission for an abortion to continue to provide for the mother until she is 21 years old, including encouraging and providing for college. —Requiring those who refuse permission for an abortion, along with the mother, to participate in family counseling with appropriately licensed professionals.

Abortion opponents have pushed for the parental consent bill for several years in an effort to reduce the number of abortions. Supporters of the bill say a teenager's parents should be involved in making such decisions.

Bus, Rail Lines Hit In S. Africa As Protest Starts

By LAURINDA KEYS

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Bomb attacks hit a bus and commuter railroads today as hundreds of thousands of black workers and students began a general strike.

deliveries, since most truck drivers are black; hospital supervisors in a plush clinic had to wash floors and clean toilets; and white managers manned the cash registers at shops, barren of the usual crowds of black customers.

The protest, set to last three days, defies new government bans on political activity by major anti-apartheid groups and by the black union federations that helped organize the protest.

The national black chamber of commerce supported the protest and agreed to close businesses through Wednesday. But in some townships near Cape Town, blacks were seen walking to adjacent mixed-race communities to do their shopping and catch taxis to work.

Mangosuthu Buthelezi, who heads the black homeland of KwaZulu and who opposes the strike, said four people were killed in KwaZulu when a hand grenade was thrown onto a commuter bus. However, police denied this, saying five people on the bus were injured by a fire bomb.

Some cities reported higher black worker turnout as the day progressed. However, the government railroad service and private bus companies that carry black workers from townships into city centers in Transvaal and Natal provinces termed the general strike "highly ineffective."

Several bombings also occurred on railway services near Johannesburg and Pretoria and on a station near a black township outside Durban. No injuries were reported in those attacks.

The Johannesburg Stock Exchange reported most of its black workers were absent, and the South African Motor Corp., formerly Ford, said it would shut its Pretoria plant for three days because its employees

The Federated Chamber of Industries said the Johannesburg area was the hardest hit by the strike, with a 90 percent absentee rate among the black work force.

Civil Rights Commissioner Dies

By SHARON L. JONES

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Clarence M. Pendleton Jr., who rose from the slums of the nation's capital to help lead President Reagan's battle against racial quotas as the first black chairman of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission, has died. He was 57.

women receiving the same salary as men with similar jobs, "the looniest idea since 'Looney Tunes.'" He called affirmative action "divisive, unpopular and immoral," and opposed busing.

Pendleton was the lone dissenter when the commission voted 5-1 in 1982 to state that there had been retreat in all areas of civil rights enforcement during the administration.

Pendleton, one of the Reagan administration's highest-ranking blacks, died Sunday after apparently suffering a heart attack while exercising, deputy coroner David Lodge said. Pendleton drew wrath by calling liberal black leaders "the new racists" whose support for the Democratic Party "led blacks into a political Jonestown."

In 1981, Reagan appointed Pendleton to replace the fired Arthur S. Flemming, who had criticized the administration's civil rights policies as "in conflict with the Constitution."

Last year, the commission rejected a Pendleton-promoted staff report assailing the Supreme Court for upholding job preferences for women in affirmative action plans. "He was a great human being," commission member Robert A. Destro said. "We had our disagreements and our agreements. He was a very dynamic person. He will be missed."

Public Hearing

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners will hold a public hearing on the proposed 1988-89 county budget June 14, 1988 in the second floor auditorium of the Pitt County Office Building.

The date of the hearing was previously announced incorrectly by the clerk of the board of commissioners. To speak, persons should sign up prior to the meeting.

Fatality

A Pitt County man was killed Sunday in a one-car accident just east of N.C. 43 South on rural raved road 1753.

Trooper J.R. Letchworth said Kincy Scott Reel, 22, of Route 2, Box 383-A, Ayden, died en route to Pitt County Memorial Hospital minutes after the 8:15 p.m. accident. He was being transported by the Ayden Rescue Squad.

He said Reel, alone in a car, was traveling east at approximately 100 miles per hour when he lost control of the vehicle in a curve. Letchworth said the car overturned several times and was airborne when it struck a corner of the home of Leroy Boyd approximately seven feet high.

Letchworth said Reel had been drinking and was not wearing a seat belt. Reel was thrown out the back window of the car.

The house was occupied when the car struck, Letchworth said, but no one was injured. He said some damage was reported to the exterior of the house and plaster was knocked off interior walls.

Committee Meeting

The criminal justice committee of the Pitt County Council on Substance Abuse will hold its meeting on Wednesday at 7:30 a.m. at the Three Steers Restaurant on Memorial Drive.

For more information, call Dottie Schmuck Blades, Council Coordinator, at 752-6847.

Ushers Union

The City Ushers Union will meet today at 7:30 at Selvia Chapel Free Will Baptist Church.

Better Breathers

The Better Breathers Club will meet at Beaufort County Hospital Tuesday from 3-4 p.m. in the education building.

The meeting is open to persons with respiratory problems and their relatives.

For more information call Dell Hagwood, 975-4381.

Housing Authority

The Greenville Housing Authority will hold its monthly meeting Tuesday at 11:30 a.m. at the Three Steers Restaurant on Memorial Drive.

Following the meeting and lunch, a tour of Housing Authority residential sites will be conducted.

Airport Budget

The proposed budget of the Pitt-Greenville Airport Authority for fiscal year 1988-89 has been filed with the Airport Authority and is available for public inspection in the airport administrative offices during normal working hours.

A public hearing on the proposed budget will be held at noon June 16 in the conference room of the terminal building at the Pitt-Greenville Airport.

Drug Charges

Rufus Junior Cooper, 30, of Route 4, Greenville, was arrested by Greenville police on drug law violation charges Saturday.

Sgt. J.R. Teel said Cooper was charged with possession with intent to sell and deliver heroin and marijuana in connection with a 6:37 p.m. incident on Fleming Street.

Conley Banquet

The cooperative education students at D.H. Conley High School recently honored their employers at the 16th annual Employer-Employee Banquet. The students in the marketing and home economics programs held their banquet at Three Steers Restaurant where Dr. Julia Mobley, director of Vocational Education for Pitt County schools, was the speaker.

Jerode Fox, manager of Winn Dixie, was honored as Marketing Employer of the Year, while Linda Brantley of Hardees was the Home Economics Employer of the Year.

Jane Lloyd and Harold Cutler were named Marketing Students of the Year, and Mary Jo Mitchell and Theresa Farrow were named Home Economics Students of the Year.

Falkland Visitor

Pitt County Sheriff Deputy Tim Copeland recently visited second and third graders at Falkland Elementary School and discussed the duties of law enforcement officers and reasons for law enforcement and laws.

He also explained how taxes contribute to law enforcement, and he showed the students the equipment he uses. He talked about using seatbelts and made the students "Seat Belt Deputies," and they received stickers, transfers and comic books about crime prevention and wearing seat belts.

Dean's List

Two Pitt County students have been named to the dean's list for the spring semester at Mt. Olive College. They are Edward Alan Daughtry of Ayden and Marion K. Gurkin of Greenville.

To qualify for the dean's list, students must attend school full time and have a grade point average of 3.2 or higher with no grade lower than a C.

AWARDS — Members of the Eastern Carolina Christian Awareness Organization held their annual awards banquet Saturday night. Milton Sutton, left, president of the organization, presented awards to Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt, who received a civic award, and Willie Mae

Carney and Bennie Rountree, who both received humanitarian awards. Greenville Mayor Ed Carter received the distinguished service award, but was not at the meeting. About 135 members were on hand for activities. (Reflector Photo by Thomas Forrest)

Volunteers Honored

Pactolus Elementary School volunteers recently were honored with a reception in the media center. They were given a special "Pactolus Pride" favor. Parent volunteer, Betty Mize, was recognized as the volunteer who had contributed the most hours of service.

A commencement assembly for students will be held in the school auditorium June 15 where honor students will be recognized. Fourth grade students with the highest grade point averages will serve as marshals.

Professor Retires

The faculty of the department of management of the School of Business at East Carolina University recently honored professor John D. Longhill with a retirement dinner.

In recognition of his service to the department, he was presented a silver serving tray engraved with his new rank of professor emeritus. Longhill joined the department in 1978 after teaching in New Jersey, Pennsylvania and N.C. A&T State University in Greensboro. Prior to teaching he served in the Air Force, retiring as a colonel.

State Unemployment

North Carolina's unemployment rate (seasonally adjusted) for the month of May was 3.5 percent, down from the April rate of 3.7 percent.

The rate was the state's lowest since January, 1974.

For the month of May, North Carolina's unemployment rate was the second lowest among the 11 states with the largest population, behind Massachusetts which had 2.8 percent. Texas, at 7.2 percent, had the nation's highest unemployment rate for May. The national rate is 5.6 percent.

Harmful Publicity?

MARION, N.C. (AP) — Street preacher David Strode and his Bible-quoting children have attracted national attention to McDowell County, but it's not the kind of attention that industry recruiters in the county are looking for.

"It's had no effect," said Jack Harmon, executive director of the McDowell County Committee of 100. Harmon is the main industrial recruiter for the county.

Harmon said there has been no drop in visits by industry executives. But visitors have mentioned the Strode incidents, he told The Asheville Citizen-Times.

But a local businessman who asked not to be identified gave a different account.

"Everyone who stops here from Chicago to California knows about it," the businessman said. "And everyone who comes in is either negative or makes fun of the county."

Before the first of four suspensions of the Strode children in April, McDowell County had been basking in the positive publicity of a major furniture plant locating in Marion.

Atrophic Rhinitis, one of the most common and costly swine diseases in the United States, is one that is often forgotten in terms of prevention. Atrophic rhinitis is a disease that "pecks away" at a producer's profits by causing losses in swine feed efficiency and gain. While seldom killing pigs, studies show rhinitis causes as much as a 20 percent reduction in daily gain.

Signs of atrophic rhinitis in swine are stunting, turning of the nose to one side, erosion of turbinates in the snout, sneezing, watery eyes and black tear stains, nosebleeds, and crusting in the nostrils. Cultures of the nasal fluid will reveal the presence of the disease causing agents, but not how bad the disease is. The best test for atrophic rhinitis severity is to have a veterinarian do a slaughter check and check a number of snouts for turbinate atrophy. Most swine have a moderate degree of rhinitis and the snout twisting or nosebleeds are never observed. However, daily gains are greatly affected at this "moderate" level.

The bacterium, Bordetella bronchiseptica, is the most common cause of rhinitis. The presence of other bacteria such as Pasteurella and haemophilus can aggravate the condition. The most common means of transmission of atrophic rhinitis in swine is animal-to-animal infection, although the rhinitis agents have been isolated from cats, rats, dogs, raccoons, and rabbits, which can pass on the disease. Pigs are generally affected during the first few weeks of life by exposure to their infected dam.

Swine producers should try to prevent rhinitis by selecting proven clean breeding stock to avoid introduction of the disease to the herd. Keeping human visitors to a minimum may help in prevention as well as a strict rodent control program. An all-in, all-out animal flow in the nursery, proper sanitation, and adequate ventilation all help in rhinitis prevention.

Vaccination is the primary tool used today in prevention and treatment of atrophic rhinitis. The recommended vaccine contains Bordetella bronchiseptica plus type D Pasteurella. Type D Pasteurella has recently been found to be a primary causative agent so should be included in the vaccination program. The vaccine should be administered according to label recommendations. Antibiotics at low levels in the feed can help maintain growth at low levels of the disease.

Diet Food For Thought...

DiETING has become big business in our society. It is also very serious business. While it is important to lose weight, it is also important to go about it in a sensible manner...both in terms of health and economics.

HOW DOES YOUR DIET COMPARE?

Can you average a weight loss of 3 1/2 to 5 pounds each week?
Does it cost more than $35 per week...total cost...no hidden fees?
Are the counselors educationally trained to help you?

OR

Are you required to buy products on a regular basis? How much will this cost?

At DIET CENTER we do not feel that injections or special products are necessary. We feel it is more important to learn to control your weight with regular foods that you will continue to eat for the rest of your life.

We offer our exclusive DIET SUPPLEMENT. This supplement is GIVEN to you at NO additional charge.

If the diet is guaranteed, what does the guarantee say? How much money will you get back if you are not satisfied? At DIET CENTER we feel it is impossible to guarantee weight loss, but should you decide to pay in advance for our program we will refund any unused portion of your money if for any reason you decide not to continue our program.

Are you discouraged from exercising? If so, take another look at the program, common sense tells us a safe diet and exercise program is the only sensible approach to good health and weight loss.

Gimmicks don't work. If they did, we'd all be thin and stay thin. Weed out the gimmicks. Call DIET CENTER today. We will explain our program, answer your questions, but we will apply no pressure. The decision is yours. Our consultations are FREE.

British Balloonist Sets New Altitude Record

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — A British balloonist broke the world altitude record for a hot-air balloon today, floating about 11 miles above the Earth's surface, his spokeswoman said.

"He definitely broke the record, but by how much, we can't confirm," spokeswoman Karen Bankle said.

She said officials confirmed at 7:02 a.m. that Per Lindstrand had topped the 55,124-foot record set in 1980 by Julian Nott. Last year, Lindstrand and Richard Brandon became the first people to cross the Atlantic in a hot-air balloon.

Houston Air Traffic Control officials who were tracking Lindstrand's balloon on radar reported eight minutes later that the Swedish-born engineer topped 58,700 feet, and Ms. Bankle said Lindstrand "later radioed us that he had reached 60,000 feet."

Lindstrand then began descending. Lindstrand rode in a pressurized 5-foot-by-5-foot aluminum capsule with instruments, oxygen and room for one person.

"It is not a basket at all — that would never make it," David Hammer, a spokesman for chemical company ICI Film's Stratoquest Project. "You have to figure, the Concorde flies at 30,000 feet and he's going up twice that high. This capsule resembles one of the early Apollo spacecrafts."

A problem at liftoff from the Callaghan Ranch, about 27 miles north of Laredo, left two of four 100-pound sandbag weights attached to the balloon, threatening the mission, said project coordinator Pete Mason. But Lindstrand climbed out of his capsule to cut away the sandbags.

"It's obviously very risky, but if you recall when he took off for his Atlantic flight, he lost a fuel tank and also had 500 pounds of sand bags still attached," Mason said. "He climbed out at 8,000 feet and cut them free and still managed to cross the Atlantic."

Last year, Lindstrand and Brandon, a British millionaire, became the first people to cross the Atlantic in a hot air balloon. But explosive charges that were to release their capsule failed and the two ended up in the Irish Sea for 2½ hours.

The trans-Atlantic flight set hot air balloon records for speed at 100 mph, duration at 31 hours and 41 minutes, and distance at 3,075 miles.

Lindstrand's assault on the world altitude record, first scheduled for June 1, was repeatedly delayed by storms or high wind.

On Sunday, launch master Paul Dickenson aborted the flight for the fifth time when ground wind proved too strong only 10 minutes from the proposed liftoff time.

Hammer said Lindstrand, 39, has been working for nine months with the Wilmington, Del.-based ICI Films, the maker of Melinex, the polyester balloon material. Britain's Thunder and Colt, headed by Lindstrand, constructed the balloon.

Lindstrand, he said, selected the Laredo site because weather patterns have been consistently good during early June.

Civil Rights Commissioner Dead At 57

— should form the basis for federal civil rights policies.

He criticized the Civil Rights Restoration Act, passed earlier this year over Reagan's veto, as "an unwarranted invasion... by Big Brother."

He also opposed federal set-aside contracts for minority-owned businesses.

Pendleton gave so-called "Uncivil Rights" awards to those whose actions furthered discrimination as he defined it. The most recent went last month to Chicago Mayor Eugene Sawyer for delaying the firing of an aide who made anti-Semitic remarks.

Pendleton's views made him a lightning rod for criticism of the Reagan's administration's approach to civil rights enforcement.

In July 1986, congressional critics of the commission made an unsus-cessful attempt to replace it with a new Office of Civil Rights Assessment, accusing the commission under Pendleton of becoming a "political instrument of the executive branch."

Pendleton dismissed the move and said it "simply reflects the political differences" between some members of Congress and the commission majority.

"He was a man of rare courage and conviction," said Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif. "There is no question he stepped on toes, but we are poorer for his loss."

Lingley, director of the hotel's tennis club. Pendleton was a new member of the club.

He died an hour later after efforts failed to revive him, coroner's officials said.

He had battled high blood pressure for years, Police Chief Bill Kolender said.

Pendleton's wife, Margrit, was out of town with their daughter when he died. Kolender described Mrs. Pendleton as "distracted, upset, obviously."

Pendleton, an avid jogger and swimmer, once taught physical education in college and worked as a government recreation director in Washington, D.C., and Baltimore before being named director of the Model Cities Department in San Diego in 1972. He was president of the Urban League in San Diego from 1975 until 1982.

Pendleton graduated from Howard University in 1954 and after serving in the Army he returned to earn a masters' degree in education.

Telethon Raises Record Amount

The 21-hour Children's Miracle Network Telethon held Saturday and Sunday raised a record $132,157 to benefit the Children's Hospital of Eastern North Carolina.

Based on tabulations under way today, the money pledged easily exceeded last year's total of $107,000, according to Dr. Jon Tinglestad, medical director of the Children's Hospital division of Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

The telethon was aired on WITN-TV with local programming from the East Carolina University School of Medicine. All funds raised support the work of the Children's Hospital, the pediatric regional referral center serving 34 eastern N.C. counties.

"The support we received from individuals and businesses throughout the region truly reflects our role as a resource for all the children of eastern North Carolina," Tinglestad said.

Male Dancer Says Money Is Reason He Goes On Stage

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Like Richard Geer, the star in the hit movie "An Officer and A Gentleman," Joel Beeson captures the eyes and hearts of women when he sports his uniform, but his dance moves also make them scream.

out the application at Chippendales for the host position, which involved greeting guests and keeping them orderly during the show.

Being a dancer for Chippendales has led to other modeling opportunities, Beeson said.

He will be shooting a Jordache commercial beginning June 20, he said. A commercial agent "came to Chippendales one night and she approached me" about joining the agency. "They have other jobs for me, but I'm in a contract with Chippendales" that limits time spent on shooting commercials.

Local women will test their vocal chords Tuesday night as Beeson begins a routine with his 200-pound, 6-foot-3-inch body dressed in an officer's uniform — only to strip to his boxer shorts. He and other lead dancers for Chippendales, the women-only nightclub chain, will perform two shows at the Greenville Sheraton with the theme "Welcome To Your Fantasy."

A native of Pilot Mountain and a former East Carolina University student, Beeson, 21, said the key to the performance is in the audiences' response, and sometimes, putting on clothes can bring just as much excitement as taking them off.

In addition to Los Angeles, Chippendales has a nightclub in New York, and it has several touring groups. Its performers rehearse everyday, "sometimes twice day," Beeson said. "Everyone lifts as much as possible and (lays on) tanning beds" to maintain their bronze physiques.

Touring groups go on the road for about 10 to 12 weeks and then take 10 days off, he said. But, his vacation days have included three shoots for the next Chippendale calendar. "So it's not much of a break."

The shows last about an hour and a half and will begin at 7:30 p.m. and 9:45 p.m. at the Sheraton. In the opening number, "everyone comes out," Beeson said. There are six lead dancers and three backups, who perform acrobatics.

The lead dancers will perform individual numbers. "Some have backups and some are just solo," he said. Beeson usually performs the first individual number.

So, what do the folks back home think about his whole episode? "The first couple of weeks I moved down here, the papers close to Pilot Mountain started calling me" for interviews, Beeson said. "All my friends were skeptical about me moving to California (until) some girls come walking in the store with my shirt on." Beeson and other Chippendales dancers were models for a T-shirt featuring Hawaii, he said. "I've done a shoot that took me on the front and back of Nighties (a tabloid) for K-Mart."

Beeson said dancing may become a family occupation for a while. Chippendales also is considering using his twin brother, Paul, in the routine and recently flew him to Los Angeles for rehearsals. "They even talked to my little brother," but he's probably bound for college, Beeson said.

Enjoying his career, Beeson said, "I'll be with (Chippendales) for a couple years. I do enjoy it."

Beeson said he left ECU in 1984 after two years and attended Surry Community College near his home for a year before deciding to move to California in March 1987.

Why California? Because along with New York, it is the hub for models and movie stars, of course.

Plus, "I just wanted to do something that would just shock everybody," Beeson said. "I drove 3,000 miles by myself. It took me six days (to get there) because I broke down in Dallas" and had to repair the truck.

"After the first month's rent and a security deposit, I was broke," he said. But, Beeson said his first interview was successful, and he became a bouncer for a nightclub.

ALTERNATIVE TO SILVER

You may have had silver amalgam fillings in the past to protect teeth damaged by cavities, but you have other alternatives now. This can be especially important in treating teeth that show when you open your mouth to talk or smile. One alternative is resin bonded ceramic, which has several advantages in addition to appearance.

Only the decayed area of the tooth need be removed. It is not necessary to go further to provide an area large enough to anchor a silver amalgam filling. The ceramic can be colored to match your natural teeth. It is also strong enough to withstand pressures that sometimes reach 12,000 pounds per square inch.

A silver amalgam filling may still be recommended for teeth that usually remain out of sight. However, to maintain the good appearance of your teeth when they do show, ask your dentist if he would recommend a resin bonded ceramic filling.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Poor Example

Participation Essential For Success

How was last Tuesday's runoff primary election turnout? It was pitiful.

Measured by any standards there was virtually no interest in the statewide race for N.C. Court of Appeals which matched John B. "Jack" Lewis of Farmville and William L. Davis III of Lumberton. There was only an 8.2 percent turnout of the Democratic registered voters who were eligible to participate. Cost of the election is estimated at $375,000 which means the election cost the taxpayers about $2.11 per vote cast.

Lewis won with 104,785 votes or 59 percent. Davis, a Lumberton attorney, received 72,577 votes or 41 percent.

It is not difficult to find reasons for the poor turnout. It was the day after a holiday, the weather called for doing other things, farmers are busy with their crops. Mostly, however, the apathy can be attributed to the voters' lack of knowledge of the two candidates who were seeking the nomination. Further, many voters didn't understand the importance of the N.C. Court of Appeals, a judiciary level where legal decisions will be made that will affect all our lives in the future.

Pitt County also had a county commissioner district runoff which had D.D. Garrett of Greenville running against James H. Dupree of Bethel. The vote was low here, too and resulted in only a two vote difference with Garrett receiving 1,171 votes to Dupree's 1,169. A recount is the result. Would a better turnout of voters have avoided a recount situation?

The message is clear that the government belongs to all of us and it is a civic duty to vote at every opportunity. As citizens we should learn all we can about the candidates to enable us to make intelligent decisions. That we must do even when there are no "glamour" races at stake. If we want democracy to work we must participate.

Just What Is A Progressive?

RALEIGH — More evidence that political labels don't make any sense.

After North Carolina Republicans did such a good job of making "liberal" a dirty word in state politics, moderate and liberal Democrats started calling themselves "progressives."

The Jim Hunt - Terry Sanford - Bob Jordan crowd is now known as the Progressive Wing of the party. They consider themselves different from "liberals," more mainstream, more defense-minded.

These folks aren't splitting hairs, here. There is some historical basis for distinguishing between "liberals" and "progressives." But these Democrats probably aren't going to be pleased to learn what that historical difference is. Former student activist Todd Gitlin, in his new book, "The Sixties: Years of Hope, Days of Rage," writes of the split in the old American Left during the late 1940s and throughout the 1950s.

One wing of the left was stridently anti-communist. These people organized themselves around the Americans for Democratic Action, the ADA. Some leaders of this wing actually applauded Sen. Joe McCarthy's red-baiting, Gitlin says.

'There is some historical basis for distinguishing between "liberals" and "progressives." But these Democrats probably aren't going to be pleased to learn what that historical difference is.'

The other wing included leftists who still maintained sympathies with the communists. They organized around groups called The Popular Front and the Progressive Citizens of America. And, you guessed it, they called themselves "progressives."

This tidbit ought to make for a good chuckle the next time you hear some Democrat trying to explain that he isn't a liberal, he's a progressive. But, in fairness, it doesn't mean they're communists.

Heman Clark, a freelance lobbyist, told an entertaining story of lobbying misfortune over lunch, recently.

Clark lobbied in 1987 for a group that wanted to change the state law on tinted windshields. He drafted a bill, ran it past the Highway Patrol and the Division of Motor vehicles, then guided it through the transportation committees of both the House and Senate, and saw it become law.

"But then the attorney general sent it to Washington" for review by the U.S. Department of transportation, Clark said. "It turned out that the whole thing was pre-empted by federal law."

"Well, all that work for nothing. Boy, was I embarrassed," he said. That prompted another person at the lunch table to ask if Clark had returned the substantial lobbying fees he'd charged to his clients.

"I wasn't that embarrassed," Clark replied.

Tony Rand's victory in the Democratic primary for lieutenant governor has spawned some gallows humor among utilities lobbyists. Most backed Harold Hardison in the contest and are a bit concerned that their rivals, the environmental lobby, is getting much of the credit for Rand's victory.

The utility lobbyists were exchanging gags in the legislative hallways recently. Hap Chalmers of North Carolina Power told his colleagues that his company was trying to find a high-paying job for Bill Holman, an environmental lobbyist. "But it's going to be someplace near Denver," Chalmers said.

Then Roy Wall, lobbyist for Duke Power, saw fellow Hardison supporter Sen. A.D. Guy, D-Onslow. "Senator, save that suit. You'll look really nice when Ollie Harris (a senator and funeral director) lays you out in it."

U.S.-Soviet Competition Must Yield To 21st Century Realities

Ronald Reagan has pronounced the Soviet Union a former evil empire and has called Mikhail S. Gorbachev his friend.

But the political relationships between the superpowers and the global military deployments undergirding the Cold War remain essentially undisturbed. Gorbachev called the summit a "missed opportunity." In fact, the meetings accomplished about what most people expected. The tragedy is that expectations were so low.

The Cold War is over, but American leaders lack the imagination to turn this new reality into policies that serve our national interest. They seem unable to envisage a post-Cold War world.

The principal conditions that more than 40 years ago precipitated the deadly contest have fundamentally changed. The Soviet Union is not the secretive, paranoid and totalitarian state that it was in Stalin's time. Europe is politically stable; in 1992, when the last tariff barriers in the European Market come down, it will become an economic superpower.

The declining Communist Party of Italy has not been a Soviet asset for years, and the French Communist Party has shriveled into insignificance.

Nor is the Third World vulnerable to communist ideology that George F. Kennan once called the fig leaf of Russian expansionism. Nikita S. Khrushchev's boasts about the triumph of communism in the Third World have been replaced by a more sober assessment of Soviet interests. Ethiopian generals and Afghan intellectuals who read Marx and seek Soviet aid proved to be expensive and unreliable clients. In Afghanistan the Soviets learned some of the sobering lessons of Vietnam. For the superpowers there are political constraints on making war — even against very poor countries.

The economic burden of the arms race and the crisis of leadership in Soviet society have led to what appears to be a major reassessment of the Soviet Union's national interest. An equally searching reassessment of the American national interest is overdue.

The historic changes in the Soviet Union by themselves would dictate a major shift in American foreign-policy assumptions and strategies, most of which are now 40 years old. On the threshold of the 21st century, even more important changes are taking place that have little to do with the Soviet Union.

These changes threaten the security of the coming generation of Americans more than anything that the Soviets can do short of their committing nuclear suicide: America's increasing dependence on a world economy over which it exercises less and less control, chronic stagnation of world trade, and the prospects for catastrophic environmental damage compounded by economic disaster in Africa and Latin America.

Those new security threats to the United States are rooted in far-reaching economic and environmental changes and in the fact that great powers no longer find it so easy to translate military power into political advantage. Without a radical shift of focus, priorities and resources — financial and intellectual — the United States will remain mired in the Cold War and will suffer the usual fate of generals who prepare for battles of bygone days.

The United States desperately needs a new vision of the real world around us, what we can realistically hope to achieve in foreign policy in the pursuit of American values. It needs a strategy for dealing with the strange new century that is almost here. Only in this context can we decide what sort of a relationship with the Soviet Union is desirable or possible. In short, we need a clear sense of the terms on which we would end the Cold War.

But for almost half a century the vague, shifting and unremitting struggle with the Soviet Union has been the organizing principle of our national life. We have used the Soviet Union as the great simplifier around which we have defined virtually every foreign-policy issue that we consider important, from Central America to South Africa. We have used this enemy to solve or to ignore our domestic problems. We have built interstate highways, appropriated money for science teaching, built islands of prosperity with defense contracts and sent men to the moon — all in furtherance of our struggle with the Soviets.

We are still so paralyzed by our long competition with the evil empire that we are now unable to put forward our own proposals on such matters as substantial conventional disarmament, a new security arrangement in Europe, regional settlements in the Persian Gulf and Southern Africa and the revitalization of the United Nations, even though we face the likelihood of dramatic Soviet initiatives in these areas.

President Reagan once told the Soviet leader that the Cold War would end when the two superpowers joined forces against Martian invaders. What if the Martians have a different agenda? Can we face the next century without the comforting familiarity of the ever-present Soviet enemy?

Meese's Firing Of Spokesman Blow To Conservative Agenda

Legal doctrines endure in the United States only if they are believed by the majority of lawyers, legislators and the electorate to reflect fairness, common sense and enlightened public policy.

The implementation of any legal agenda requires a sustained public attack on conventional legal wisdom through sound, articulate and morally fetching advocacy. If the majority of lawyers and the people come to believe in the desirability of legal change, their viewpoints will ultimately prevail in courts through interpretations of the Constitution and statutes. This phenomenon was evident when President Franklin D. Roosevelt and his attorney general, Robert Jackson, pushed the Supreme Court to discard a host of anti-New Deal decisions in 1937 by convincing the public that the rulings were intellectually flawed and disharmonious with American political traditions. The high court altered its constitutional vision before Roosevelt had appointed any new justices.

Public advocacy by the Department of Justice is pivotal to gaining acceptance by courts and lawyers of conservative legal doctrines championed by President Reagan and Attorney General Edwin Meese III. The tools of advocacy include speeches, legal briefs, law-review articles, legislative testimony and media appearances and interviews. To be successful, the advocacy must be intellectually rigorous, skillfully marketed and riveting to the media and its audiences.

Terry Eastland was the Department of Justice's tribune in sparking debate that tried to displace a phalanx of time-worn liberal dogmas with more conservative legal principles. In the areas of affirmative action, abortion rights, church-state relations, presidential prerogatives and criminal justice, Eastland was instrumental in obtaining a reasonable public airing of the conservative perspective. The efforts of Eastland, working through Meese, moved the intellectual debate to the center and center right of the political spectrum.

Because of such efforts by spokesmen like Eastland, there is growing public sympathy for a broad range of conservative legal objectives: the death penalty, parental participation in the abortion decisions of minors, a more balanced school presentation of religion in American history, discarding inflexible court-ordered rules that hamstring shrewd police interrogations or search-and-seizure practices, curbs on obscenity or child pornography, eschewing racial or sexual preferences in the workplace when proof of illegal discrimination is absent, and halting sweeping court busing or prison edicts.

Eastland also engineered speeches and remarks of the attorney general urging that the intent of the constitutional framers should be the touchstone of constitutional interpretation. That interpretive doctrine is imperative to restrain activist jurists from fastening their idiosyncratic views of wise policy on the nation under the banner of judging cases. The attorney general's remarks regarding original intent stimulated debate among Supreme Court justices and federal circuit judges. For the first time in decades, judges were displaying skepticism of several liberal Supreme Court precedents bequeathed in the heady days of the 1960s.

In April the Supreme Court, on its own initiative, voted 5-4 in Patterson vs. McLean Credit Union to consider overruling a 12-year precedent addressing racial discrimination in contracting. That signaled the court's receptivity to the re-examining of other precedents and legal principles that conservative legal scholars believe are faulty. The time thus is ripe for an aggressive litigating strategy by the Department of Justice before President Reagan leaves office.

Unfortunately, the problems surrounding Meese ensure that this won't happen. Incidents like Meese's recent and unceremonious ouster of Eastland found any effort to expostulate to the courts, the media, the law schools against liberal rulings bereft of constitutional moorings and injurious to sound public policy. It speaks volumes that Eastland, unlike others who have left the Department of Justice, never deviated a millimeter from the intellectual foundations of the conservative legal agenda. The conclusion thus seems irresistible that Meese permitted his personal legal problems to trump the long-time benefits of conservative legal principles in ousting Eastland.

That ouster ensures that convincing and effective presentation of the conservative philosophy will be impossible during the remainder of Meese's term. Political calls for Meese's resignation and the forthcoming independent counsel report on allegations of ethical or legal wrongdoing will dominate the discussions of the Department of Justice in the media, among lawyers and within the electorate.

This fallout from Meese's problems will make it almost inevitable that the conservative legal agenda will receive no boost from the Department of Justice for many years. That is a tragedy for the law, a tragedy for legal policy and a tragedy for the long-term political goals of Ed Meese and Ronald Reagan.

Bruce Fein served as an associate deputy attorney general from 1981 to 1982.

Human Rights Issue Demonstrates Differences In Leaders

MOSCOW — Mikhail Gorbachev welcomed President Reagan to the Kremlin this week amid criticism that he is steering the Soviet Union away from the path of pure socialism. But the Soviet leader adeptly used sometimes testy public exchanges with the U.S. president — regarded here as the world's leading capitalist — to combat the charges.

Even though the main purpose of the meeting was to display the fruits of three years of improving U.S.-Soviet relations, Gorbachev seemed determined throughout the talks to demonstrate to home audiences the differences between the Soviet and American systems and to express his view that Soviet socialism is preferable.

During the course of the summit, for instance, a public dispute between Gorbachev and Reagan on human rights became increasingly heated over whose system is better. The Soviet leader gradually hardened his public objections to Reagan's criticism of Moscow's human rights record, a move that some observers said may have been prompted by reproaches from the Communist Party leadership over his handling of the issue during the summit. It also appeared designed to stave off criticism from conservatives that he is casting in to the West on the issue.

The current stage of Gorbachev's program of economic and political reforms, which is based on a loosening of state control and heavy criticism of former Kremlin leader Joseph Stalin, has come under attack from party conservatives as a deviation from the norms of socialism.

By the time the four-day summit was over, western diplomats and some Soviet officials assessed Gorbachev's performance positively, saying that the Kremlin leader seemed firmly in control of Soviet policy toward the United States without compromising his socialist principles or yielding to any western criticism.

In spite of the differences over human rights and Gorbachev's remarks that his fourth summit with Reagan was one of "missed chances," Kremlin officials in post-summit interviews gave the meetings a high rating. Even the arms control discussions, which made little progress, were considered constructive. "We did not really anticipate any response to the (nuclear) arms proposals as made during the summit," one leading party official said, adding that some reply would be expected before the next round of U.S.-Soviet negotiations open in Geneva next month.

With Soviet-American relations now on a firmer footing than they have been in more than a decade, in part due to Gorbachev's initiatives and compromises, the Soviet leader seemed guided by a sense of caution and control at the summit.

Under the scrutiny of party officials, many of whom still regard Reagan with skepticism, Gorbachev was careful to keep his political distance from the president, according to western diplomats in Moscow. With his entire reform program up for review at a major party conference scheduled to open June 28, "Gorbachev seemed eager not to make or do anything that could be interpreted as a concession to Reagan," one diplomat said.

While Reagan grew warmer and more emotional toward Gorbachev during summit social occasions, the Soviet leader maintained a diplomatically cool, if amiable, posture toward the president. When Reagan suggested in closing remarks that he considered Gorbachev a friend, the Soviet leader smiled faintly. When Reagan asked the Soviet leader to sign the Time magazine "Man of the Year" cover about him, Gorbachev agreed. But in neither case did he return the compliment.

Gone were the emotional outbursts that made Nikita Khrushchev famous in his 1959 trip to the United States; gone were the Leonid Brezhnev's hugs for Richard Nixon during their summit meetings in the early 1970s. Gone, too, was the free-wheeling negotiating style Gorbachev showed at his second summit with Reagan in October 1986 at Reykjavik, Iceland. "This time, Gorbachev's every move seemed programmed and controlled," one American Kremlinologist said.

Keenly aware of complaints that his favoritism toward cooperative business enterprises and other liberal economic reforms are introducing a touch of capitalism to the Soviet Union, Gorbachev coupled praise for socialism with advocacy of his reforms in nearly all of his public remarks.

"We see ourselves even more convinced that our socialist choice was correct and we cannot conceive of our country developing without socialism, based on any other fundamental values," Gorbachev said at a Kremlin dinner speech Monday night. "Our program is more democracy, more glasnost (openness), more social justice with high moral values."

"I hope those present here as well have been able to see for themselves the sweeping scope of change in our country," he said at a dinner speech in the American ambassador's residence the next evening. "It is based on comprehensive democratization and radical economic reform."

During his closing press conference, Gorbachev also tried to give the impression that his leadership is dynamic and forward-looking, while seeking to portray the American leadership as blocking further progress in U.S.-Soviet relations. He listed several areas where the Kremlin wanted to move ahead but where he said the White House did not, including arms control and trade.

No issue brought out the differences between the two leaders and their systems more clearly than the topic of human rights, however.

While conceding the improvements Gorbachev had made in that, Reagan seemed intent on publicly criticizing the Soviets' human rights record at every possible chance.

In a pre-arrival speech in Helsinki, a meeting with Gorbachev last Sunday, Monday meetings with Soviet dissidents and religious activists, and a Tuesday call for Soviet publication of exiled writer Alexander Solzhenitsyn, Reagan drove home his view that Moscow could go much further in bettering conditions for Soviet citizens. In his closing press conference, however, he blamed human rights shortcomings on the Soviet bureaucracy rather than on Gorbachev personally.

Though clearly piqued by the criticism, Gorbachev at first muted his public response. In a Monday dinner speech, he said Moscow wanted to build contacts, but added, "This must be done without interfering in domestic affairs, without sermonizing or imposing one's views and ways, without turning family or personal problems into a pretext for confrontation between states."

Gorbachev later, however, gave the impression that in closed-door sessions with Reagan, he had been much more combative. "We had, for our part, decided to overcome our shyness and tact we had always shown when it came to human rights," the Soviet leader said in a speech to international peace activists the day Reagan left Moscow. "We decided so because we had seen that it was harmful, that it did not only harm us, but had also caused confusion in the minds of people everywhere."

According to Gorbachev's own account, he proceeded to upbraid Reagan over the human rights situation in the United States, to which Reagan objected. In the end, Gorbachev proposed that a lower-level working commission pursue the issue.

Still, Gorbachev's hardline approach to human rights contrasted with the willingness to discuss the subject that he and other leading Soviet officials have shown behind the scenes in recent months.

There was speculation that the Soviet leader's sudden outbursts on human rights after Reagan left Moscow were prompted by the party leadership's summit review in which Gorbachev was criticized for not dealing more bluntly with Reagan on the issue. Thus, according to the theory, once Reagan left Moscow, the Soviet leader vented his wrath.

Despite Gorbachev's controlled manner during the summit, the dispute over human rights and Soviet criticism of American positions during negotiations, the Soviet leader and other Kremlin officials seemed pleased at the outcome and eager to continue the improvement in U.S.-Soviet relations.

Indeed, the pledge to move ahead with contacts and dialogue with Washington was the most significant message Gorbachev sent at the Moscow summit, according to western diplomats here.

An Old Man's Young Idea

LONDON — Despite fatigue and the halting speech of old age, the freshness of President Reagan's rejection of "peaceful coexistence" as the way to deal with the Soviet Union demonstrates his belief that history is running democracy's way.

Mikhail Gorbachev's private pledge that about 100 long-term refuseniks could emigrate in the next six weeks, together with the promised release of a fair number of "political" and "religious" prisoners, counted heavily. They carried more importance for Reagan as political reform than the importance of many aspects of arms control.

Thus the fourth summit established a change in the way the U.S. will deal with the Soviet Union. The goal has shifted from its old, often miscredited, arms control base to what Reagan described in his Guildhall speech here Friday as "the strategy of hope in the eventual triumph of freedom." That tightens Reagan's aversion to arms control concessions and probably dooms a strategic arms treaty this year.

Reagan's commitment to what he calls "the worldwide movement toward democracy" is a long distance from peaceful coexistence. That doctrine was first proclaimed as a Soviet goal by Lenin to soften the anti-Communist West. It was restored in the 1970s by Richard Nixon and Leonid Brezhnev.

Instead of peaceful coexistence, Reagan is endorsing a policy of unprecedented rhetorical activism in U.S. conduct toward Soviets. He sketched it in his speech here as the absolute obligation of the democracies never to "cease telling the truth about — and to" — their Communist adversaries.

The snicker about Reagan blaming the "bureaucracy" for Soviet human rights outrages is unworthy and does not stand up. "The old man has lost touch with his own roots," one Western European newsman told us. The facts are different. What led Reagan to make such an inexcusably stupid remark was not ignorance, a presidential aide told us, but "the product of his innate decency and his considerateness for Gorbachev" — a trait of character, not political ignorance.

Reagan had made his case against Soviet human rights abuses so unsparringly and publicly that, as he confided to one advisor toward the end of his visit, he did not want to club Gorbachev in public once again. Stupid as it was, it was vintage Reagan.

Back in 1982, in his speech here at Westminster, when the president challenged the democracies to strike into the heartland of Communism with their political principles of freedom and liberty, Gorbachev was an obscure member of the Politburo. His coming to power three years later with the most revolutionary reforms in Soviet history is supplying the grist for Reagan's mill selling democratization.

So Reagan believes he is making progress. He will not fall back into the sterility of "peaceful coexistence" or policy driven by arms control in the remaining months of his administration.

Peaceful coexistence deals with relations between states. Reagan is after something more fundamental: relations between a Communist state and its own citizens. That may seem romantic and unattainable for the oldest chief executive in history, but it is a goal worthy of any president.

UNC Officials Want To Land Educational Reform Center

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Officials at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill are hoping to bring to the Chapel Hill campus a national center for development of educational reforms advocated by philosopher Mortimer Adler.

If negotiations with officials at Adler's Chicago-based Institute for Philosophical Research are successful, the National Center for the Paideia Program would be established at the university, officials say.

UNC-Chapel Hill Chancellor Christopher Fordham III told the Durham Morning Herald that negotiations are not complete.

"But if it does come about, it would be consistent with our basic commitment to education from K (kindergarten) through graduate school, our commitment to assist the public schools where we can ... to help us become a more educated society," Fordham said. "That's what this is all about."

The center's proposed name comes from a set of reforms outlined by Adler and 21 prominent educators in their educational manifesto, The Paideia Proposal. The term "paideia" comes from a Greek word that refers to the upbringing of a child.

The Paideia Group — the panel of educators chaired by Adler that developed The Paideia Proposal — operates under the auspices of the institute, founded and directed by Adler.

The proposal advocates that all U.S. children should be given the same education from kindergarten through high school. It recommends eliminating all specialized courses, such as vocational training and electives, with the exception of foreign languages.

It proposes that all students be exposed to identical curriculums, with each being taught to his or her fullest potential.

The proposal advocates training teachers with liberal arts rather than education courses, and favors choosing principals from among master teachers.

Initial plans call for the center, which would be the only one of its kind in the nation, to evaluate the Paideia method of teaching, offer technical assistance to schools and educators seeking to use the method, and teach educators to train others in the Paideia approach, said Patricia Weiss, an investigator and assistant professor at UNC-Chapel Hill's Frank Porter Graham Child Development Center.

Felix Joyner, UNC system vice president of finance, said he did not know how much the center would cost. He said the money would probably come from private donations, the UNC-Chapel Hill budget and the resources of the UNC president.

The proposed center at UNC-Chapel Hill would involve the Frank Porter Graham Child Development Center, the school of education and the UNC system's Principal's Executive Program, with which Adler has been frequently involved, Ms. Weiss said.

The center would probably assume the responsibilities the Institute for Philosophical Research has with regard to the Paideia program, administer grant money and coordinate Paideia activities around the country, Ms. Weiss said.

Adler, 85, could not be reached for comment.

Adler's ties with UNC-Chapel Hill and the UNC system date back to the early 1980s, when he met then-UNC President William Friday, who later helped bring Adler, Encyclopedia Britannica and the UNC Center for Public Television together to produce five one-hour videotapes designed to help public school teachers do a better job.

Burning Of Medical Waste Concerns Environmentalists

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Burning medical waste such as syringes, blood and amputated limbs should be no more harmful to the public than burning garbage, say health officials, but some environmental groups aren't so sure.

"The thing that concerns us is that emissions are not adequately controlled," says Byard Bost, a member of the Clean Living Environmental Association of North Mecklenburg.

Tons of garbage are produced daily by hospitals, clinics and laboratories throughout North Carolina, including needles, bacteria cultures, diseased organs and tumors tested for cancer, officials said.

Because of a 1985 state law that forbids such garbage to be buried in landfills, many hospitals burn the waste in their own incinerators. Others pay to have it incinerated by one of three companies holding commercial licenses to burn medical wastes in North Carolina.

Yet there are no federal or state laws to monitor the incinerators, a fact some consumer groups and state residents warn could create environmental havoc as commercial incinerators expand their operations.

Already the state's commercial medical-waste incinerating companies are growing, according to a report published in Sunday's editions of The Charlotte Observer:

•Bio-Ecological Services, which opened two incinerators in Mecklenburg County in 1986, will move its plant to a nine-acre site north of Huntersville and install a new incinerator that will double its burning capacity to 3,250 pounds per hour.

•Bio-Medical Services has obtained permits to add two incinerators burning 1,100 and 1,500 pounds per hour to its two existing incinerators in Charlotte. The larger of the two new incinerators will be installed this year, a company official said.

•Charlotte Memorial Hospital, which generates 3,500 pounds of waste daily, will start two new incinerators this month and increase its burning capacity from 240 to 2,100 pounds per hour.

Recently, residents of Huntersville, near where a Bio-Ecological plant is to be installed, staged a demonstration protesting the new plant site. Others delivered speeches opposing the incinerators to the Mecklenburg County Environmental Health Commission.

A major concern with the incinerators is plastics, which make up 20 percent to 30 percent of medical waste, compared with 3 percent to 7 percent of regular trash, environmentalists say.

Burning polyvinyl chloride may produce hydrochloric acid, which can corrode metals and irritate eyes, nose and throat. There is also the potential for release of toxic gases or compounds such as carbon monoxide and dioxins, which can result from incomplete combustion at insufficient temperatures, officials say.

"No one really knows what the long-term health effects are," Bost said. "It's just another unknown."

Yet the risks appear to be a matter of debate for some officials. John Barry, director of the Mecklenburg County Department of Environmental Protection, said if incinerators work properly, burning medical trash should be no more harmful than burning other garbage.

"If it's incinerated at the proper temperature and if there is complete combustion, those (toxic) products are destroyed," he said.

And Bob Lewis, vice president of Bio-Ecological, said critics have exaggerated the dangers of medical-waste incineration.

"These (incinerators) aren't big enough to do any damage to the environment," Lewis said. "It's not a Chernobyl plant."

Most new infectious-waste incinerators have two burning chambers. At Bio-Ecological, for example, cardboard boxes full of waste are fed into the lower chamber and burned at 1,600 to 1,800 degrees Fahrenheit. The waste is reduced to sterile ash, which is then buried in a landfill.

Problems can occur, however, when combustion conditions change through mechanical failures, overloading of the incinerator or after the explosion of an unspent aerosol or oxygen container, officials said. When that happens, smoke and toxic gases come out of the stack.

Martin Used Copter For Weekend Trips

RALEIGH (AP) — Although state policy stipulates that all flights on state aircraft must be for official business, Gov. Jim Martin says he and other governors have used the aircraft to go home for the weekend.

"We were just told that that was standard, and we accepted it," Martin told The News and Observer of Raleigh. The Department of Commerce policy states, "All flights scheduled must be for official state business." Martin was asked how flying home to Lake Norman squared with that policy.

"I would say that if I looked at it just on the face of it, it would be hard to see how it does square," he said.

"You could say I take homework home with me even when I go home to the lake, and that's true," he said. "But I don't try to justify it on that basis. We just did it on the basis of we were told that that was standard practice, and very often that's the only way we can get home."

Martin, a Republican, said he would ask State Auditor Edward Renfrow, a Democrat, for an interpretation of the policy.

State flight logs and trip reports show at least two dozen flights during the past two years, usually carrying Martin from Raleigh to Statesville, located near Lake Norman, or back, that apparently were made for pleasure rather than state business, the newspaper reported.

For those trips the governor's office paid the Department of Commerce about $10,000, but the cost to the state would have been much greater, according to a 1984 review by the State Auditor's Office of the cost of operating state-owned aircraft.

The Commerce Department charges various state agencies $250 to $400 an hour for the aircraft, although its cost in 1983-84 ranged up to $1,435 an hour for the state's $1.3 million Bell 222 helicopter.

Renfrow told the newspaper that the governor must make the decision on when it is appropriate to fly.

"It's the policy of the Department of Commerce that aircraft be used for official state business only," Renfrow said. "Now, the question becomes what is official state business?"

"The question of where he may go within the state of North Carolina, whether he may go to Lake Norman or the coast or to the mountains, I think, is a decision that each governor or must make within his own conscience as to whether or not the trip is justified and fair to the taxpayers," Renfrow said.

Martin is not the first governor to use the aircraft to go home.

IN THE STATE

Ketch Missing

PORTSMOUTH (AP) — The Coast Guard said it has not determined whether an oar and a life jacket it recovered belonged to a 47-foot ketch missing since late Friday.

The Coast Guard called off its search for the boat Sunday night, and said the status of the vessel's pilot, Ralph Shartzler, 30, of Annandale, was unknown.

"There were no markings on the items to indicate they belonged to the vessel," said Lt. David Kranking. "They were in the area. Where they were located corresponded to the drift that was calculated."

Kranking said personnel aboard three Coast Guard vessels, a helicopter and a C130 aircraft covered approximately 1,200 square miles off the North Carolina coast searching for Shartzler.

Weekend Fatalities

RALEIGH (AP) — Three people, including a South Carolina man, were killed in traffic accidents on North Carolina roads this weekend, the state Highway Patrol said today.

Charles Lester Simonds, 41, of Clover, S.C., died about 1 a.m. Sunday when he drove his car off a rural road south of Gastonia, troopers said. The car overturned, injuring two other drivers.

On Saturday, Kenny Dale Jermaine, 32, of New London was killed when his car ran off a rural road in Montgomery County and overturned, troopers said. One person was injured in the accident, which happened about 18 miles north of Troy.

About 9:30 p.m. Saturday, Nancy Whitehair Lookadoo of Shelby drove her car into the median on U.S. 70 in Cleveland County, troopers said. The vehicle overturned several times, killing her and injuring another person.

The deaths bring to 556 the number of people killed on North Carolina roads so far this year, compared with 596 at the same time last year, troopers said.

Help For Homeless

GREENSBORO (AP) — Homeless North Carolinians are showing up in increasing numbers in small towns, but several communities are responding to the need by building or planning shelters, officials say.

"There are homeless people in small towns — that's a fact," said Bill Scarlett, director of the Davidson County Department of Social Services, who saw Lexington's winter shelter turn people back out on the streets April 30.

"Now two people are sleeping in a pool room at night, three are staying in an abandoned house," Scarlett told the Greensboro News & Record. "Some are frequenting all-night Laundromats."

But that scenario is changing in Lexington and elsewhere.

Scarlett is chairman of a group that has raised $65,000 since February of last year to build a permanent shelter in Lexington, a Piedmont town of about 15,000.

Jackson's Half Brother Arrested On Accessory To Felony Charge

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Jesse Jackson's half brother was freed on $500,000 bond after being charged with hiring someone to attack a witness to a slaying, police said.

Noah Robinson, 45, was released Sunday night, a day after being arrested and charged with being an accessory to a felony, police said.

"We think he was responsible for the solicitation of the act and took part in the arranging," said Detective Keith Morton.

The original bond of $100,000 was raised to $500,000 Sunday when charges of obstruction of justice, intimidating a witness and criminal conspiracy were added against Robinson, Police Capt. W.L. Johnson said.

Robinson denied the charges when asked by reporters to comment while he was walking to his cell Sunday. "They're absolutely false," he said.

Robinson is accused of hiring the person who in December 1987 slashed and stabbed a woman witness to the slaying of a man who had worked for Robinson, Morton said.

"I don't know anything about the case," Jackson said Sunday while campaigning in California for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Jackson, who has spoken frequently on the campaign trail of his beginnings, was born out of wedlock to a woman who had an affair with the candidate's father, who was married at the time.

Robinson, who is the owner of a small business in Greenville and has worked in Chicago, has the same father as Jackson.

Jackson had Robinson take control of the federally funded Breadbasket Commercial Association Inc., an arm of Jackson's civil rights group, Operation PUSH, that helped minority firms bid for public contracts.

But Jackson was quoted as saying in 1987, when Robinson was reportedly being investigated for allegedly violating federal bankruptcy laws, "I have no connection with him."

The warrant filed late Saturday charges that Robinson "did advise, counsel, urge encourage or otherwise aid a co-defendant in the commission of a felony, assault and battery with intent to kill ... and later rendered assistance to the co-defendant in absconding the jurisdiction."

A man charged with assault and battery with intent to kill in the attack surrendered in January, according to the Greenville News.

Morton said Robinson was arrested after statements from co-defendants, and that more arrests are expected.

According to Morton, Janice Denise Rosemond was stabbed repeatedly in December 1987, after she had testified before a grand jury in Chicago about the slaying of Leroy Barber.

Barber was shot to death in January 1986 outside a plaza in Greenville that Robinson owns.

The grand jury was investigating the El Rukn gang in Chicago and looked into the Barber slaying because an informant had testified that the gang had Barber killed for harassing Robinson, according to the Chicago Tribune. Robinson denied any connection to Barber's death.

"From what we understand, there had been several altercations over the years between Barber and Robinson. He had been working for Robinson in Chicago and come back to Greenville," said Morton. "They'd gotten into a fight a couple of weeks before" Barber was shot.

Morton said Barber was shot once in the head by an unidentified assailant and "Rosemond, unfortunately, was a witness to that."

No one has been charged with the slaying, but the investigation was continuing, Johnson said.

Alligator Shot After It Kills Child

By MICHAEL WARREN
Associated Press Writer

ENGLEWOOD, Fla. (AP) — A boy who watched a 10-foot alligator leap from a pond and kill his 4-year-old playmate said it seemed like a dream until she disappeared underwater screaming.

Game officers fired five shots to kill the bull alligator about five hours later, after spotting the reptile on the bank of Hidden Lake with the limp, 31-pound body of Erin Lynn Glover in its jaws.

Erin, who was nicknamed "Giz-mo," was splashing through ankle-deep water along the residential lake with her 8-year-old brother, Justin, their Labrador puppy, and neighbor Jason Kershanick, 9, on Saturday evening when the gator leaped out and snapped up the girl in its teeth.

"While she was kicking, she must have kicked the alligator," Jason said Sunday. "Right when she stopped kicking, the alligator jumped up out of the water and started biting her two-times in the stomach. Then he dropped her and she crawled away, and then he got out of the water more and grabbed her from the back and went in the water."

"It was pretty quick," Jason said. "It seemed like a nightmare, a dream. But then the way she screamed, when I saw the blood after he went in, then I realized it was real."

Alligators tend to pull their prey underwater, drowning them and stashing the body for later feeding, wildlife officials said.

"She's just a precious looking girl. She's going to be missed," said Charlotte Kershanick, Jason's mother.

"People will be a lot more cautious," Mrs. Kershanick added. "A lot of them are aggravated because they've complained about the alligators being here, but nobody does anything. They ought to have the ponds fenced in."

Richard LaTarski, a 64-year-old retiree, said he telephoned the state game commission two years ago and asked them to get rid of the alligator that killed Erin. It had killed ducks and turtles in the neighborhood for at least five years, he said.

The commission, LaTarski said, rejected his complaint and told him the alligator wasn't "causing any menace to anyone."

Commission spokesman Lt. Jim Farris said Sunday that he had no record of LaTarski's complaint.

Erin's death was the sixth fatality and the 46th unprovoked alligator attack in Florida since 1948, Farris said.

Alligators have been a protected species in Florida since the mid-1960s, when their population dwindled after years of vigorous hunting. But in recent years it has become clear that the species is in no danger of extinction, Farris said.

State wildlife experts estimate there are 1 million alligators on 6.7 million acres of land.

On Sept. 1, for the first time since 1962, the state will hold a one-month gator hunt in which up to 3,000 will be taken.

"They occupy pretty much any body of water that would look like an alligator lives there, and lots that don't," Farris said.

The small man-made lake was a popular spot for children, even though it was full of alligators, residents said.

"All the kids around here played around all these lakes," said Erin's stepfather, Ty Bowns, outside the family's home. "I don't think anybody took the alligators all that seriously."

"It was a shock. It will be a while getting over it," Bowns said.

The area is about 25 miles south of Sarasota on Florida's west coast.

ERIN GLOVER

Who Are The Lotto Winners?

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Mystery replaced mania as attention focused on two unidentified winners who today were eligible to claim their share of the largest lottery jackpot in North American history — $52,236,232.

The ticketholders, one who purchased a ticket in the state-run Lotto 6-49 at a market near Sacramento, the other at a liquor store in Fairfield, each will get about $1 million a year for the next two decades.

"The winners are probably hiding out, not telling anybody what they've got," said Jeanne Robinson, of Fairfield, 45 miles northeast of San Francisco. "There's a lot of people who'd like to get hold of those little slips of paper with those magic numbers on it."

Although the winning numbers were announced Saturday night, holders of the winning tickets cannot claim their share of the prize, $25,618,116, until the start of business today. The winners were to be announced when they present their tickets at lottery offices for verification.

The odds of picking all six numbers out of 49 were about one in 14 million, said lottery officials. The winning numbers were 48, 42, 9, 14, 19, 31. Tickets cost $1 each.

A man claiming to have purchased the winning ticket from Travis Liquor and Deli, located in a remote shopping center outside Travis Air Force Base, called store owner Michael Thomas on Sunday to check the winning numbers.

He did not identify or otherwise describe himself, but Thomas' wife, Joann, said local residents assume the winner came from the base, since there are few other residences or businesses nearby.

At the Bel Air Market in the Sacramento suburb of Carmichael, about 90 miles northeast of San Francisco, reporters, store employees and state officials gathered Sunday in hopes the ticketholder would arrive to announce the win. No one did.

"They usually show up at the retail outlet," said Lottery spokeswoman Susan Kossack, who was at the store. "We've had big, big winners never surface ... but with jackpots this size, I don't think that will happen."

Both tickets had numbers that were picked automatically by the Lotto computer terminal, rather than by the player, said Lottery official Kay Krocke in Fairfield.

Three days of frenzied Lotto playing preceded the drawing. At the peak, sales reached $4 million an hour.

Marines Killed

TOKYO (AP) — Two U.S. Marines based in Okinawa died today when an M-60 machine gun went off accidentally, the U.S. military reported.

The accident took place at Camp Hansen, a Marine base on the southern Japanese island, said Master Gunnery Sgt. Dale Hunter, media liaison chief for U.S. Forces Japan.

One of the Marines was pronounced dead on arrival at a hospital and the other died during surgery, Evans said.

He said he did not know whether the accident occurred during a training exercise. The victims' names were being withheld pending notification of next of kin, he said.

The Marine Corps was investigating the shootings, Hunter said.

About 55,000 U.S. military personnel are stationed in Japan, about 25,000 of them Marines.

Socialists Given Edge In French Runoff Balloting

By CHARLES CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer
PARIS (AP) — A coalition of conservatives showed surprising strength in first-round voting for the National Assembly, but computer projections said the Socialists are still likely to win a majority in the 577-member legislature. The Socialist Party and the outgoing center-right majority coalition were running almost even in Sunday's popular vote, leaving President Francois Mitterrand's party with a narrow advantage heading into next week's runoff.

Mitterrand won re-election last month, resoundingly beating center-right candidate Jacques Chirac.

The extreme-right National Front of Jean-Marie Le Pen appeared likely to win no seats in Parliament despite drawing nearly 10 percent of the vote.

A key question was whether Le Pen's party would throw its support to traditional conservatives in contested districts.

Interior Minister Pierre Joxe said it was "reasonable to think that (Socialist Premier) Michel Rocard's government may be able to count on a parliamentary majority."

But conservative leaders were heartened by a showing much better than had been predicted in pre-election polls and called on their forces to campaign hard in the final week.

"Today, anything is possible," said Alain Juppe, former budget minister in Chirac's center-right government. Chirac resigned as premier after losing to Mitterrand in the May 8 presidential election.

"Nobody can claim to know exactly what the results of the second round will be," Juppe said. "Therefore, we must mount an extremely active campaign this week to reach those who didn't vote."

The estimated turnout of 65.5 percent was the lowest in a legislative election in France since the Fifth Republic was established 30 years ago, and well below the 78.5 percent of the 1986 election.

With 97.4 percent of the vote in and counting suspended for the night, the Socialists had 37.5 percent, the conservative coalition 37.8 percent, the Communists 11.3 percent and the National Front 9.7 percent.

Any candidate who received more than 50 percent of the vote Sunday was elected. In districts where none received 50 percent, all candidates with at least 12.5 percent had the right to compete in next Sunday's runoff — but there was heavy pressure on candidates with no chance of winning to withdraw.

Computer projections by polling firms working for French television networks said the Socialists should emerge with 290 to 330 seats in the National Assembly. At least 289 are needed for a majority.

With results in for 565 of 577 districts, Socialists and their close allies were elected outright in 39 seats and leading in 185 others headed into next week's runoff. The conservative Rally for the Republic and the center-right Union for French Democracy, which ran a joint slate, won 75 seats and were leading in 137.

The Communists won one seat and were favored to win 22 more.

The National Front was projected to win none, largely because the voting system was changed by Chirac's government from a proportional system to a winner-take-all system in each district, which favors larger parties at the expense of smaller ones.

The remaining seats were either too close to call, or going to minor parties.

From 1986 until last month's presidential election, Chirac and Mitterrand shared power in an often contentious system the French called "cohabitation."

During his re-election campaign, Mitterrand said he wanted a new Socialist-led government to work with the rightist-dominated National Assembly in a break from the harshly polarized tradition of French politics.

But four days after Mitterrand beat Chirac with 54 percent of the vote, the Rocard government was appointed, loaded with hard-line Socialists.

Two days later, Mitterrand called legislative elections, saying the government needed a solid majority before it could bring about a promised "opening" to the political center.

The legislative campaign, coming when the public seemed exhausted by the presidential election, aroused little interest. Few issues were debated.

The Socialists said they would re-establish a wealth tax abolished by the right in 1986, and use the money to pay a guaranteed income to the poor.

Rightists argued during the campaign that a Socialist majority would go back to unpopular radical programs the Socialists enacted after being elected in 1981, but largely abandoned over the next five years.

Mine Rescue Effort Drawing Criticism

By GEORGE BOEHMER
Associated Press Writer

BORKEN, West Germany (AP) — The owners of a coal mine where an explosion killed dozens of miners have acknowledged that radio contact was made with missing miners hours after the blast, but broken off to search for more miners.

Family members of some of the dead miners and a newspaper alleged that rescue workers had bungled the search operation.

Meanwhile, diggers today found two more bodies, bringing the total of confirmed dead to 47. High concentrations of carbon monoxide were delaying efforts to bring them to the surface.

Search teams continued to hunt for the last four missing workers, but officials said there was little hope they would be found alive.

For more than two days after the blast, which trapped 57 miners, rescue authorities insisted there were no signs of life inside the mine. But six miners were found alive in an air pocket on Saturday and one of them said the six had made radio contact with rescuers a few hours after the explosion.

Owners of the mine in Borken acknowledged that a radio operator had contacted a group of missing miners but that officials believed at the time that the operator may have been speaking with a rescue team.

News of the radio contact sparked intense criticism in the news media of how the rescue operation has been run.

"It is a scandal, that already on Wednesday radio contact had been made with those who were finally rescued ... but that this wasn't taken seriously," the Saarbruecker Zeitung newspaper said in an editorial.

Some miners' families contended rescue workers should have been more concerned with searching for survivors than bringing up dead bodies.

The six were discovered early Saturday after their sounds were picked up by a television crew's microphone lowered into a shaft 500 feet beneath the earth.

On Sunday, several hundred residents turned out for religious services to remember the victims.

At a news conference afterwards, Hermann Kraemer, board president of Preussen Elektra, the company that owns the mine, said radio contact was lost Wednesday after a radio operator told the men to stop transmitting.

Kraemer said the operator told the men to break contact because he wanted to try and reach other possible survivors.

Kraemer said that after the contact with the miners was lost, radio operators tried unsuccessfully for 10 hours to re-establish communication with them.

"The failure to regain contact led us to wonder whether there had been an actual contact with the miners or with a search team," Kraemer said.

But he said feverish efforts were already being made to locate survivors in the area of the mine where the miners were eventually found.

4 Die In Rebel Raid

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Communist rebels in stolen passenger jeeps raided a police station today in southeastern Luzon in an attack that left four people dead and two wounded, the military reported.

The raid took place about 7 a.m. in the coastal town of Prieto Diaz, 250 miles southeast of Manila. A military report said three guerrillas and a civilian were killed and two of the seven police defenders were wounded.

President Corazon Aquino said, meanwhile, that she was considering a new amnesty for Communist rebels. In a radio interview Sunday, she said a government panel would meet soon to discuss extending the amnesty, which expired Feb. 29.

In a related development, Mrs. Aquino's foreign secretary charged that unspecified European groups were providing financial support for the Communist Party of the Philippines.

About 100 guerrillas of the party's armed wing, the New Peoples Army, took part in today's attack, which began shortly before a shift change at the police station, a military report said.

Defenders fled into foxholes outside the station house and opened fire on the attackers. They were able to radio for reinforcements before fleeing the building.

The rebels fled about an hour later with six firearms and the station radio, the military said.

The raid took place a day after rebels killed at least 13 government troops in Negros island in one of the bloodiest ambushes this year. Eight government militiamen were also missing after the clash, the military said.

Panel: Evidence Is Insufficient To Convict Waldheim

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — An international panel of former judges has ruled that testimony given at a televised commission of inquiry would be too weak to convict Austrian President Kurt Waldheim of Nazi war crimes.

After sitting for nine days and hearing 35 witnesses, including former German soldiers, the judges ruled Sunday night: "We conclude unanimously that the evidence which has been put before us is not enough to make probable that Lt. Waldheim committed any of the war crimes alleged against him in this inquiry."

However, the inquiry did find that Waldheim "must have appreciated that many more" captured Italian officers and hostages taken in Yugoslavia in 1942 would be shot after he learned that a large number had been executed.

"But he had no authority over them and on his own authority he could do nothing to stop the shootings," the panel said.

"Lapses and aberrations of memory such as Dr. Waldheim seems to have had about his service in Greece and the Balkans are not in themselves evidence of guilt," the judges said.

Waldheim, 69, who served as an intelligence officer with the German army in Greece and the Balkans during the war, did not come to London for the inquiry. It failed to uncover any vital new witnesses or evidence against him.

The inquiry was paid for by America's Home Box Office and Britain's Thames Television.

Toward the end of the studio filming, prosecuting lawyer Allan A. Ryan acknowledged he had been unable to produce new evidence. No investigation so far had concluded that Waldheim was a war criminal, he said.

Nuke Ban Bill Gains Approval

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The senate gave final approval today to a bill banning nuclear weapons and nuclear-equipped warships from the country in a move aimed at U.S. military bases in the Philippines.

Similar legislation is pending in the House of Representatives.

Nineteen senators gave their approval to the bill on the third and final reading. Three voted against the measure and one abstained.

The bill, which received preliminary approval last month, sets prison terms of up to 30 years for bringing nuclear weapons into the country and up to 12 years imprisonment for importing nuclear components.

Supporters said the measure was aimed at the six American military installations in the Philippines. As part of its defense policy, the United States refuses to confirm or deny whether it has deployed nuclear weapons in the Philippines.

Senate President Jovito Salonga, a co-sponsor, hailed the measure as a contribution to world disarmament.

"The Philippines should not be a promoter of the deadly arms race," Salonga said. "We should never be part of the problem. We should be part of the solution."

Ryan, a former director of the Nazi-hunting U.S. Office of Special Investigations, argued however that the totality of evidence showed "Waldheim was not there making coffee for these criminals ... his acts facilitated their crimes."

Waldheim has vigorously denied the allegations since they surfaced in 1986, four years after he stepped down as United Nations secretary-general and 41 years after the end of World War II.

He was alleged to have been involved in massacres of Yugoslav and Greek civilians and partisans, deportation of Greek Jews to death camps and the delivery for execution of captured British commandos and Greek resistance fighters.

He was also accused of involvement in the burning of villages in Yugoslavia and a notorious massacre there of about 70,000 men, women and children at Kozara in 1942.

The judges' decision was delivered by Sir Frederick Lawton at the end of a 3 1/2-hour TV film of the testimony titled "Waldheim: A Commission of Inquiry."

"We have not been asked to decide whether Dr. Waldheim is or is not guilty of a crime, still less has it been our function to pass a moral judgement upon him," said the 76-year-old former Lord Justice of Britain's Appeal Court.

"A person does not commit a war crime merely because he knows others have committed such crimes, nor because he worked with or alongside those who committed them," Lawton said.

His colleagues were Shirley Huftedler, a former circuit judge for the U.S. Court of Appeals and education secretary, and West German Walter Hubner, Swede Gustav Petren and Canadian Gordon Cooper.

Ryan noted that an inquiry by a commission of historians concluded last February that Waldheim was not a war criminal.

"The World Jewish Congress, for all their outrage, has refrained very properly from saying that he was. But you have these other concerns: is he a liar, is he a dishonorable person, is he a shifty arrogant social climber?" Ryan asked.

On Sunday, Waldheim met with King Fahd in Saudi Arabia and received Saudi Arabia's highest decoration.

Fahd gave the Austrian president a red carpet welcome when Waldheim arrived for a three-day state visit on Saturday. The king later hosted a banquet at which he decorated Waldheim with the Cordon of King Abdel-Aziz, the nation's highest decoration.

Teacher Gets Degree

POTSDAM, N.Y. (AP) — Lillian Cassel, an 85-year-old retired school teacher, walked across the stage at the recent graduation exercises of Potsdam College of the State University of New York to receive her bachelor's degree in art history — 65 years after she earned her teaching credentials at the same institution in 1923.

Mrs. Cassel, who was born on Christmas day in 1902, decided to become a schoolteacher, just as many women of her generation did. The Potsdam Normal School, predecessor of today's Potsdam College, was nearby, so she enrolled there to earn her teaching certificate.

"Our campus experience back then relates very little to campus life nowadays," she says. The Normal has grown into a full-fledged liberal arts college enrolling about 4,000 students.

Her greatest accomplishment in a long, productive life: "Educating children in a way that has made many of them solid, socially active members of their communities." She retired from teaching in 1969.

Mrs. Cassel, whose husband, Fred, died in 1977, has two sons, one an electronics technician for the U.S. government and one a jet pilot, and a daughter, who is vice president of a media firm.

Reflecting on why she undertook the demanding task of earning a college degree, Mrs. Cassel recalls that she had read a magazine article that encouraged older people to use their golden years constructively, to take up something new perhaps, such as college courses.

"I thought, wouldn't that be fun to do? So I spoke to some people I knew at Potsdam College and they told me how I could do it."

One of those contacts was Dr. John C. Riordan, a Potsdam art professor who lives about a mile down the road from Mrs. Cassel's home in Colton in the Adirondack foothills. He knew of her travels to Europe and her interest in fine arts, so together they decided she should major in art history.

"I couldn't see just sitting in a chair somewhere, rocking my life away," she said. But her reasons for pursuing a degree were not entirely personal. "I wanted to show everyone that old people can do things to improve themselves. Learning is not something restricted to the young."

Mrs. Cassel says that many of the courses she completed were very challenging; for example, public speaking, biology and photography.

"Nobody thought of me as a relic," she said. "The younger students called me by my first name, and they were so helpful and kind. Some of them write to me. In fact, one of my correspondents is a Malaysian girl who studied at Potsdam."

There are many aspects of life in late 20th-century America that disturb the Colton town historian, whose social activities extend far beyond archives and classrooms. Crime, "political laxness," the popular culture in general, are subjects of concern to her.

"All this emphasis on money bothers me," she said, noting that there are many other causes worth working for besides earning money. "Money can't do very much good for the preservation of humanity."

As someone who was born during the presidency of William McKinley and for whom the New Deal is more than just a historical footnote, she has her opinions about politics.

"For one thing," she says, "the 'democracy' we have now is a far cry from the republicanism this country was founded on."

The oldest member of Potsdam College's Class of 1988 will end her formal education with this degree. She has some research about her town to finish, a town that is safer because she helped coordinate a new Neighborhood Crime Watch effort. Such projects will keep her busy, she says. And there are always new books to read and places to see.

"It just seems that God has had his hand on me over the years," she said. "Good things have happened that I just can't explain."

Wedding Vows Said Sunday

AYDEN — Julie Malene Hall, of Route 2, Ayden, and Timothy Page Moseley, of Raleigh, were united in marriage Sunday in a 3 p.m. ceremony at the First Baptist Church of Ayden. The Rev. Linwood Walters of faciated during the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred G. Hall Jr. of Ayden. The parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. B. P. Moseley, also of Ayden.

Linda K. Hall of Grifton, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Patti Loftin, sister of the bride; Cindy Venters, sister of the bridegroom, Sheila Perkins of Charlotte; and Sherry Worthington of Greenville. The attendants wore formal-length satin gowns in royal blue featuring sweetheart necklines, elbow-length shirred sleeves and fitted bodices flowing down to basque waistlines. Satin bows extended across the back of the gown. The full gathered skirts were floor-length. They carried cascade bouquets of mixed spring flowers accented with royal blue iris and slender blue bows and streamers tucked to the side.

The flower girl, Melissa Venters, wore a formal-length gown of royal blue satin and carried a white basket of spring flowers.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, wore a formal-length gown of white satin over peu de soie designed with a portrait neckline bordered in Brussels lace, pearls and irridescent. The fitted bodice was embellished with matching lace encrusted with pearls and extended over the torso to the basque waistline. The full circular skirt and attached chapel length train were applied with the matching lace beaded with pearls. Scalloped Brussels lace finished the skirt and train. Her veil was a schiffli camelot cap beaded with pearls with two tiers of scalloped waltz illusion. The walking-length veil had appliques of schiffli lace and was banded with pearl edging. She carried a cascade bouquet of white sweetheart roses and freesia accented with royal blue iris and sprigs of ivy.

B. P. Moseley served his son as best man. Ushers were Charles Venters, brother-in-law of the bridegroom; Bennie Benson, Steve Whaley, and Chris Carman, nephew of the bride. Cody Loftin, nephew of the bride, was the ring bearer.

Organist, Glen Swanson and soloists Dick and Pam Martin provided wedding music. Selections included "The Wedding Song", "Two Candles", and "The Wedding Prayer".

A reception hosted by the parents of the bride was held in the church fellowship hall. A rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's parents. Immediately following the dinner, entertainment was provided at the home of Patti Loftin.

The bride graduated from Ayden-Grifton High School and will be employed by the Wachovia Bank in Raleigh. The bridegroom graduated from Ayden-Grifton High School and attended Pitt Community College. He is employed by the Raleigh Police Department.

After a wedding trip to Emerald Isle, the couple will reside in Raleigh.

Miss Leggett, Mr. Pace Marry

MRS. PACE

HOBGOOD — The wedding ceremony of Betty L. Leggett and Kevin B. Pace took place at 3 p.m. Sunday in the Hobgood United Methodist Church. The Rev. Jim Perry presided over the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Lois B. Leggett of Greenville and the late H.S. Leggett Sr. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Pace Sr. of Greenville.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, H.S. Leggett, Jr. of Tarboro, chose a formal gown of white taffeta fashioned with a Queen Anne neckline with a ruffled stand-up collar and fitted lace sleeves which came to a calla points over the hands. The fitted bodice was adorned with pearls and had a dropped waist in front and back trimmed in lace. An illusion skirt flowed to a cathedral-length train encircled with multiple ruffles of illusion. She wore a scallop-edged veil attached to a halo adorned with a spray of flowers and pearls. Her bouquet was a nosegay consisting of white and peach-colored silk roses and a spray of pearls.

Rebecca Hardy, sister of the bride, attended as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Beverly Adcock of Hampton, Va., Jennifer Pogoda of Greenville, Dena Wilkerson of Oak City, Michele Dudley of Charlotte, and Tricia Smith, niece of the bride, of Greenville. Flower girls were Kathy Leggett of Tarboro, niece of the bride, and Linda Davis of Hobgood, niece of the bride. The attendants wore tea-length peach satinnet dresses with ruffled sleeves and low V backs. The flower girls wore tea-length peach and white dotted swiss dresses accented with bows in back. Their bouquets were of peach and white roses, carnations, and baby's breath tied with peach and white ribbons.

James T. Pace Sr. served his son as best man. Ushers were James T. Pace Jr., brother of the bridegroom, Ronnie Roberson of Winterville, Vincent Nelson, Mike Smith of Hobgood, brother-in-law of the bride; and Wayne Hand of Greenville.

A reception hosted by the mother of the bride was held in the church reception hall. A rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's parents.

The bride and bridegroom graduated from J.H. Rose High School. The bride is employed at Quadrangle Internal Medicine. The bridegroom is employed by Farm Fresh of Greenville.

Following a wedding trip to the Bahamas, the couple will make their home in Hobgood.

Engagement Announced

DONNA JEAN WHITE — is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald V. White of Rural Hall, who announce her engagement to William Douglas Roberson, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Roberson of Route 13, Greenville. An Aug. 20 wedding is planned.

Repairman Goes Through Roof

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I read about the Pasadena lady who got ripped off by a man she hired to repair her roof. He wanted $400 in advance to buy the tiles. She gave it to him, and that was the last she saw of him.

Speaking as a self-employed mason and repair specialist, I resented your saying, "Fly-by-night laborers who don't have the materials to work with are obviously not professional." There are times when I ask for money in advance to buy materials because I can't afford to have a large inventory sitting around.

Of course, people who buy services should always check out the craftsman first. (I always have five or six references.) But please don't label all laborers who ask for money for materials in advance as "unprofessional." I am a pro, and I've never ripped off anyone in my entire career. — JOHN E. DENISON, DALLAS

DEAR MR. DENISON: You aren't the only repair specialist who complained about my answer. But be fair, John, the man who ripped off the lady in Pasadena was a stranger who rang her doorbell and offered to repair her roof. He offered no references, and she asked for none. (Big mistake.) I said that he was an irresponsible, fly-by-night crook — which he was — but I didn't mean to tar all roofers with the same brush.

In some instances, the craftsman who ripped off by a little old lady who does not come up with the money after the work has been done, so I recommend that a contract (or agreement) be drawn up in advance to protect both parties.

DEAR ABBY: A couple of months ago, I received a letter from a man I had never heard of. He says he was laid off work and flat broke in September 1983. His car was repossessed and bill collectors were hounding him. But in January of '84, he and his family took a 10-day cruise, he was able to buy a brand-new Cadillac for cash, and all he had to do was write some letters and send a few dollars to people whose names he got from a mailing list. It sounds so easy, and he says it is 100 percent legitimate.

He has written to me three times. There is no return address on his envelopes, so I can't write and tell him what I think of this, but I know there has got to be a catch in it somewhere, so I am not following his instructions and sending a dollar to the five names listed.

I am enclosing his letter and all the instructions so you can see for yourself. What do you think of this? I can't believe a person can make $50,000 in four months doing nothing. He says it's a legitimate business opportunity. — BERTHA C., SHELBY, OHIO

DEAR BERTHA: This get-rich scheme is a scam. There is no Santa Claus, tooth fairy or free lunch. Chain letters requesting money are illegal. I am sending this "business opportunity" offer to the postmaster, which is what every person should do when a letter of this kind shows up in the mail.

DEAR ABBY: My parents divorced when I was 9. In the years that followed, I lived with my mother for the most part, but the time I spent with my father was wonderful. My mother had a lot of ill feelings toward my father. She put him down constantly and told me some very personal things about their love life. I didn't want to hear these intimate details, but more important, I didn't want to hear negative things about my father.

All this time, he never said a negative word about my mother. He never failed to pay child support, and was far more generous to me and Mother than he had to be.

As a father, he did not fall short. Aside from meeting his financial obligations, he was kind, gentle, supportive and just strict enough for my own good. He still is. My mother continues to bad-mouth him, which leaves me feeling angry and sad.

Why am I writing you all this, Abby? Because I want you to tell other divorced parents that if a parent has faults, the kids will notice them — they do not need to be pointed out.

Thanks for letting me get this off my chest. — A DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: I'm glad you wrote. Perhaps those who need to be reminded of your message will read it, and heed it.

Make sure the mesh netting on a playpen is smaller than the tiny buttons on your child's clothing.

Tobacco Trial

tra time to prepare. The judge gave him until today.

Edell cited the difficulty of summarizing complex and technical medical evidence about the nature of Mrs. Cipollone's cancer.

The tobacco company lawyers objected to any delay, saying a gap between the beginning of the jury's deliberations and their closing statements would prejudice jurors against them.

Sarokin, in what he called an "extraordinary remedy," gave the defendants' lawyers an extra 90 minutes in rebuttal time to counteract the delay. But he granted Edell the final word — an additional half-hour to come before the judge charges the jury, which was expected to be Tuesday.

Edell has introduced numerous confidential documents gathered for the first time in a tobacco liability case.

The documents come from files of the defendants, their public relations firms and advertising companies.

He also called to the stand an addiction expert who said Mrs. Cipollone was hooked on cigarettes, medical experts who said smoking

Greatest Privilege

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said today his greatest victory at the Moscow summit came not in superpower negotiations but in the "words of faith, words of freedom, words of truth" that he gave to the Soviet people.

"It made me feel humble, that's the only way you could feel, it made me think that visiting Moscow on behalf of the American people was one of the highest privileges of my life," Reagan said a speech summing up his talks last week with Soviet Communist Party General Secretary Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Noting "how much things have changed" because of the friendly outcome of the five-day summit, Reagan began by greeting the Soviet delegation attending his address before the World Gas Conference.

The president said he left Moscow with an "impression of change, an impression of new possibilities, of new hope" stemming from Gorbachev's economic and social reforms.

BANKRUPTCY — A Ten Year Mistake
Bankruptcy does NOT wipe your Credit Slate clean and give you a "Fresh Start".

Bankruptcy stays on your credit report for 10 Years.

You'll have trouble getting credit. Creditors seldom grant credit to someone who has filed a Wage Earner Plan Chapter 13 or Chapter 7.

You'll have problems getting ANY type of consumer loan — car, home, credit cards, education, personal needs, etc. If you doubt this — contact a creditor.

Ten years of bad news, if you don't think so, ask those who have filed bankruptcy. Don't rely only on the advice of those who will make money off your bankruptcy and encourage you to go bankrupt.

There are options to bankruptcy: If you are having financial problems, contact your creditors first — remember, they want to see you solve your financial problems just as much as you do.

So before you make a Bankruptcy decision, THINK, consider the options and don't lock yourself into BANKRUPTCY — A Ten Year Mistake.

Shultz Holds Discussions With Assad

region this year to promote his peace plan, held two meetings with Shamir in Jerusalem on Sunday in an effort to persuade him to agree to make a commitment to Jordan that Israel will exchange part of the occupied territories for Arab recognition.

In a public statement, Shultz told Israel, "the continued occupation of the West Bank and Gaza and the frustration of Palestinian rights is a dead-end street." He added: "The belief that this can continue is an illusion."

He also spoke darkly of the prospect of another war in this region where long-range missiles and chemical weapons have proliferated.

King Hussein, in talks Saturday with Shultz in Amman, insisted on an Israeli commitment to withdraw as a precondition for accepting the U.S. proposal for peace talks.

Jordan controlled the West Bank from 1948 until 1967.

The occupied lands were virtually shut down on Sunday for the third day of a strike called by leaders of the Arab uprising to protest Shultz's visit.

Two Israelis and more than 200 Palestinians have died since December as a result of violence in the West Bank and in the Gaza Strip, which Israel captured from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 war.

The Shultz peace proposal calls for an international peace conference in which the United States, the Soviet Union, China, Britain and France, as the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council, would serve as hosts.

The negotiations would be aimed at self-rule for 1.5 million Palestinian Arabs in the West Bank and Gaza, but not a separate state. In a second stage, Israel and the Arabs would try to find an overall settlement to their conflict.

Protest Starts In South Africa

were not going to work. The auto company is the largest private employer in Pretoria.

Absentee rates for black workers ranged from 50 percent in Pretoria to 80-90 percent in Durban and Cape Town. Port Elizabeth, known as a center of political unrest, had a near normal work turnout.

Mining companies reported absentees at some coal mines. Gold and diamond mines, accounting for more than 60 percent of the country's foreign currency earnings, operated normally.

The Congress of South African Trade Unions and a rival union, the National Council of Trade Unions, joined forces in organizing the protest, which ostensibly was called because of a labor bill pending in Parliament, where blacks have no vote.

The bill would criminalize sympathy strikes and boycotts and make workers liable to employers for damages suffered in illegal strikes.

Black union leaders said they had hoped to pressure big business into demanding that the government ease its crackdown on anti-apartheid opposition.

Employers who normally institute a policy of "no work — no pay" during such illegal general strikes have reacted more strongly this time, obtaining court orders against the mineworkers union to prevent stoppages at the largest gold mines, threatening dismissals of absentees and cancellation of union contracts.

Wilander's Win Keeps Dream Alive

Wilander In Action

PARIS (AP) — Mats Wilander reached the halfway mark Sunday in his quest for the Grand Slam of tennis, a goal he says is in his sights if not yet in focus.

"It's still possible, but it's still a dream," Wilander said after firing near-perfect serves and pinpoint passing shots to beat Henri Leconte 7-5, 6-2, 6-1.

It was the Swede's third French Open singles title and made him the first man since Bjorn Borg in 1980 to win the opening two legs of the Grand Slam.

The last man to complete the sweep of Wimbledon and the French, U.S. and Australian Opens was Rod Laver in 1969.

Wilander is a classic clay-court player, with patience as unbreakable as his groundstrokes.

"On clay, he's No. 1," said Leconte.

That made him unbeatable at the French Open. Whether he can carry through the third leg on the fast grass courts of Wimbledon in two weeks remains to be seen.

"Right now, he's the best player on different surfaces," Leconte said.

Wilander won the Australian Open and the two-week International Players Championship on hardcourts before taking the French Open on clay.

"Wimbledon is different," Leconte said. "We'll see."

Wilander said he was pleased with his accomplishment, never mind what will come in Britain.

"What's important to me is that I've won two Grand Slams in a row," he said. "I've never done that before. Now I have to win Wimbledon and the U.S. Open. It's still a dream."

Wilander relied on a steady baseline game and kept the Open's first French finalist in five years from attaining the serve-and-volley rhythm he had used in earlier rounds to get the fans behind him.

"He was really like a bulldozer," said Leconte, who blew a 5-4 lead on his serve in the first set and was booed by part of the Parisian crowd as he claimed the runner-up trophy.

This Swedish bulldozer was a perfectly tuned machine, and the performance raised again the question of whether Wilander, ranked third, or top-ranked Ivan Lendl is the best player in the world.

Wilander hit on 97 percent of his first serves and didn't miss a single first serve in the third set. Whenever Leconte tried to come to the net, Wilander would find a way to blunt the attack, usually with a knifelike backhand cross-court shot at which the Frenchman could only blink.

"This was one of the most important matches in which I didn't make any unforced errors, and my backhand started working," said Wilander, a winner here in 1982 and '85, and a finalist two other times. "I passed really well. I think that was the key to the match."

The match took 1 hour, 52 minutes, and Leconte won eight games. But in a way it was as one-sided as Saturday's women's championship, when Steffi Graf retained her title with a 6-0, 6-0 victory over Natalia Zvereva of the Soviet Union. That match lasted just over a half hour and kept Graf on track, too, for the Grand Slam.

"Steffi Graf said she was sorry it was so short. I'm not sorry at all," Wilander, a six-time Grand Slam tournament winner, said.

Leconte, a Grand Slam tournament finalist for the first time, said he was sad he had been unable to give the home crowd a better show.

"It is a very difficult crowd, but it's my crowd. I'm French," he said. "All the time, when I was coming to the net, he was passing me. He made it look like a bad match."

Wilander said he wanted to make sure Leconte did not get any quick points. In winning his third championship of the year — all in two-week tournaments with best-of-five-set matches — he followed his plan perfectly.

The serve never has been Wilander's prime weapon; steadiness and stamina took care of that. But the serve, a skidding, deep shot on clay, is accurate. Against Leconte, it was deadly accurate.

"He was playing deeper and deeper, and giving me very few second serves," Leconte said. "He served very well."

Wilander served 74 times in the match; only twice did he have to go to a second serve. When the figures were read to Wilander, his eyes got wide and his mouth dropped open.

"I didn't want any quick points," he said. "I wanted to hit my first serves and keep him on the baseline."

For years, Leconte has had a reputation as an inconsistent player prone to lapses in concentration and streaks of brilliant — and horrible — play. Ranked 14th in the world and seeded 11th, he was proud of his steadiness as he battled through three five-set matches to reach the final, where no Frenchman had trod since Yannick Noah beat Wilander in 1983.

But on Sunday, the old Leconte returned.

Hitting winners from the baseline and coming to the net often enough to keep Wilander confused, Leconte broke for a 2-1 lead with a beautiful forehand volley, then held for 3-1 on a forehand down the line.

Then the roller coaster ride started. Leconte won only three points in three games as Wilander went ahead 4-3. The Frenchman came back to tie it and broke at love for a 5-4 lead on a backhand down the line and a backhand winner.

That was as far as he got.

With rain spitting onto the red clay and thunder rolling across the Bois de Boulogne, Wilander broke for 5-5 with help from a double-fault and a backhand that sailed through an open court and landed well past the baseline.

The Swede broke for the set on a forehand passing shot and completed a run of six straight games as he took a quick 3-0 lead in the second set, with Leconte errors dotting the court like raindrops.

"That's what happens with Leconte," Wilander said. "He plays three games good. I wasn't as worried about the first set as he was. Over five sets, he has to produce so many good shots to win, and I just have to hang in there."

But Wilander added that winning the first set probably made his last two sets easier.

"If he had been able to win the first set, he would have had the crowd on his side," Wilander said.

Elliott Wins Budweiser Title With A Little Help

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Call him borrowin' Bill Elliott.

Thanks to a little loan, the veteran NASCAR driver got his second victory of 1988 in Sunday's Budweiser 500 at Dover Downs International Speedway.

Elliott, forced to switch tires midway through the 500-mile race, went to a borrowed set of used Hoosier tires on his Ford and posted the 26th Winston Cup victory of his 13-year career. He's not worried about returning the tires.

"They were used when I started using them," he said. "I just used them a little more. They won the race. They're worth more now."

Elliott, who prevailed because he won two crucial runs against the leaders going into caution flags, said changing the tires was the key to winning.

"I'm not downgrading Goodyear, they've been very good to me over the years," Elliott said. "But if we had not changed tires, we could not have won the race. It's as simple as that."

Elliott said he used Hoosiers for the first time last week at the Coca Cola 600 in Charlotte, N.C. That decision came after he ran fourth in The Winston two weeks ago.

"When you get outrun, what do you do? When you're running real good and everything that passes you has Hoosier tires on, what does that tell you?" Elliott asked rhetorically. "It don't take a smart man to figure that out."

The 32-year-old native of Dawsonville, Ga., said he brought one set of used Hoosiers with him to Dover Downs and bought another set Friday. He wound up needing a third set midway through Sunday's race and just borrowed what he needed.

Elliott, who was in front for 202 of the 500 laps, led almost exclusively the final 150 miles of the 500-mile race over the high-banked, one-mile oval.

The $53,000 he earned for the 26th Winston Cup victory over his 13-year career was his biggest payday of 1988 and put him over the $7 million mark in career earnings. He won the Valleydale 500 in Bristol, Tenn., on April 10.

After starting 17th, Elliott dominated the early going, leading on three separate occasions for a total of 77 laps.

However, a pit stop on lap 224 left Elliott more than a lap behind the leaders.

"You're always worried about making up a lap up because there are so many circumstances involved," Elliott said.

He made up the lap he needed after the sixth caution flag on lap 309, beating the leader Davey Allison to the line.

"We were almost two laps behind and we were able to beat Morgan (Shepherd) back to the flag," Elliott said. "Then we were able to beat Davey (Allison) 20-25 laps later and we were able to get a lap back. ... I felt once we got that lap back from Davey that we could win it."

Shepherd wound up second 18.08 seconds behind the winner with Rusty Wallace third nearly a lap behind the winner.

Crossing The Finish

Bill Elliott speeds across the finish line at Dover Downs International Speedway Sunday to win the Budweiser 500 and a purse of $53,000. It was the second Winston Cup victory of the season for Elliott, who averaged 118.726 miles an hour in his Coors Motorcraft Thunderbird. (AP Laserphoto)

Hatalsky Gains Win In Sudden-Death

POTOMAC, Md. (AP) — Morris Hatalsky is headed to China for a vacation, and he certainly could use one after his exhaustive effort at the Kemper Open.

Hatalsky made a 4-foot putt for par on the second hole of sudden death Sunday to beat defending champion Tom Kite and win a PGA event for the first time since 1983. It was anything but easy, as Hatalsky blew a four-shot lead in regulation and then salvaged the victory with an excellent wedge on the 74th hole.

"I was totally exhausted after those last holes, but I was thankful I was in a playoff," Hatalsky said.

It would have never gotten that far if Hatalsky hadn't fallen apart on the back nine. After an eagle on No. 6, a 40-foot chip for par on No. 7 and a birdie on No. 8, Hatalsky had four bogeys after the turn.

"It was a gut-wrencher from No. 7 on in," Hatalsky said. "I had my doubts whether I could last out here."

Kite trailed by six shots after six holes. But while Hatalsky was hitting bogeys, Kite had birdies on Nos. 11, 13 and 14 to close the deficit. Both players bogeyed No. 18, Hatalsky missing a 9-footer for par, to force the playoff.

Battling swirling winds that gusted up to 25 mph, Hatalsky had a 72 and Kite a 69 at the par-71 Tournament Players Club at Avenel. Both finished at 10-under-par 274.

Each parred the first extra hole, the 195-yard 17th. Then, on the par-4 444-yard 18th hole, Hatalsky hit his approach far left and over the gallery.

But Kite hit his approach behind the right rough. Incredibly, both players worked out of the jam, setting themselves up with close putts for par.

After Kite missed his 8-footer by inches, Hatalsky tapped his in for the $144,000 top prize from the $800,000 pot.

"It was an absolute miracle that I got up and down on No. 18," Hatalsky said. "I couldn't have put it in a worse place."

All week long, Hatalsky talked about how much fun he was having at the tournament. He said he had achieved "inner peace," and had finally learned to enjoy himself playing golf.

All that went out the window Sunday.

"I didn't enjoy today at all. I was trying to, but my stomach was turning and my nerves were shaking," he said. "There was that pressure that goes with winning a golf tournament. ... I had fun for three days, anyway."

Hatalsky, a 13-year veteran who missed the cut in each of his last three tournaments, considered skipping the Kemper to prepare for his vacation. But he said his wife told him to "get out of the house," and he ended up earning enough money to pay for the trip — and then some.

Kite, bidding to become the first golfer to win a tournament in each of the last eight years, earned $86,400 as the runner-up.

"You can't bogey the last hole and expect to win a tournament and I did it twice," Kite said. "If either one of us had done what we were supposed to, it would have never gone to a playoff."

Wayne County Defeats Snow Hill, 9-2

GOLDSBORO — Michael Odom and Corey Dickerson each went 2-4 as Wayne County defeated Snow Hill, 9-2, in the opening game of the American Legion baseball season Sunday.

Snow Hill's only two runs came in the sixth when Tommy Eason and Cornelius Hill singled. Chris West then drove in Eason and an error brought in Hill.

George Burnette went 2-5 to lead Snow Hill.

Moody Avoids Tree, Claims Senior Crown

DALLAS (AP) — Orville Moody refused to let a tree stand in the way of winning the Senior Players ReUnion Pro-Am.

Moody, who hit a tree on the 10th hole three times in as many tries during regulation play, ignored the temptation to play it safe when the tournament went to a four-way sudden-death playoff Sunday.

Moody hit a perfect drive and later used his 50-inch putter to roll in a 16-footer and win the top prize in the $285,000 event.

"In a playoff, I think you've got to go for broke. There's no sense playing it safe," Moody said.

Moody, the Senior Tour money leader, said his putting made the difference at the par-72 Bent Tree Country Club course.

"Every time I got over a putt I thought I could make it," Moody said. "The whole week I putted as well as I ever have. It was definitely the putter that won it for me."

Moody made nine putts of 10 or more feet during the final round while shooting a 66 to join second-round leader Bob Charles, Don Massengale and Bobby Nichols in the playoff at 10-under-par 206.

Massengale carded a 67 but missed a four-foot putt on 18 that would have won the tournament. Nichols shot a final-round 68.

Moody, ignoring the tree, hit a 280-yard drive on the par-4 10th hole, the first used for the playoff, placed a 90-yard sand wedge just 16 feet from the pin, then holed the putt for his eighth victory since joining the Senior Tour in 1984. He earned $37,000 for the win.

He said his drive to the right of the fairway was his best tee shot of the tournament.

Holieway Should Be Ready For UNC Game

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — University of Oklahoma football officials say quarterback Jamelle Holieway should be ready to play by the time the Sooners open their season Sept. 10 at North Carolina.

"From the reports I have, Jamelle's rehabilitation is going very well," says Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer. "He'll be coming back here three times to be tested by our medical staff."

Holieway suffered a season-ending knee injury last November while the Sooners were playing Oklahoma State. The injury required surgery and Holieway is continuing rehabilitation this summer at home in Los Angeles.

"Jamelle has progressed very satisfactorily while he was here, so coach Switzer felt comfortable in allowing him to go out there to California," said Dan Pickett, the Oklahoma head trainer. "He's undergoing rehabilitation diligently. I've talked to his mom four times in the last week and a half and she says he's tending his rehabilitation regularly and working his tail off."

"I personally don't expect Jamelle to have any problems. I think his knee will be as strong as ever, and his agility should be, too, because generally once you get the strength back, everything else falls into line."

Cocaine Addiction Ruined Haywood's Life

NEW YORK (AP) — Ex-basketball star Spencer Haywood says his cocaine addiction ruined his career and marriage, and led him to hire a mobster to kill coach Paul Westhead after Westhead suspended Haywood during the 1979-80 NBA finals.

"I left the (Los Angeles) Forum and drove off in my Rolls that night thinking one thought — that Westhead must die," Haywood says in a first-person article about his cocaine addiction in this week's People magazine. "I drove through the streets plotting the man's murder."

"In the heat of anger and the haze of coke, I phoned an old friend of mine in Detroit ... a genuine certified gangster. ... We sat down and figured it out. Westhead lived in Palos Verdes, and we got his street address. We would sabotage his car, mess with his brake lining."

But the mother of the former Olympic basketball star persuaded him not to go through with the plot against Westhead, then coach of the Los Angeles Lakers.

During the finals against the Philadelphia 76ers, Haywood passed out at a practice after a night of smoking cocaine; that was followed by an argument with teammates Jim Chones and Brad Holland. Westhead responded with the suspension following Game 3.

The Lakers went on to win the NBA title under Westhead, who now coaches basketball at Loyola-Marymount University in Los Angeles.

When informed of Haywood's story, Westhead told the Los Angeles Times, "At the time, I did what I felt I had to do (suspend Haywood) to save the team. And I would do it again."

Hearns Puts Title On The Line Tonight

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Thomas Hearns puts his share of the world middleweight title on the line tonight in this oasis of gambling, where he suffered the only two defeats of his 12-year, 47-bout career.

He was a 4-1 favorite to defend the World Boxing Council championship at the Las Vegas Hilton against aggressive, hard-hitting Iran Barkley, who feels he is primed for an upset.

"I came here to do what I got to do, that's to win the title — and that's it," the 28-year-old challenger from New York said.

The 29-year-old champion is well aware of the challenge Barkley presents.

"When you're No. 1 in the world, when you're world champion, there's always somebody out there trying to beat you," Hearns said. "You've got to take the chance. You're the champion."

Hearns wants to unify the 160-pound title. The other middleweight champions are Sumbu Kalambay, who won the vacant World Boxing Association title on a 15-round decision over Barkley last Oct. 23, and Frank Tate, who is recognized by the International Boxing Federation.

Hearns made history when he knocked out Juan Domingo Roldan in the fourth round last Oct. 29 at Las Vegas to win the vacant WBC middleweight title and become the first man to win four championships.

However, Hearns has never been an undisputed champion. He was stopped by Sugar Ray Leonard in the 14th round of their fight for the undisputed welterweight title in 1981. In 1985, he challenged Marvelous Marvin Hagler for the undisputed middleweight title and was knocked out in the third round.

Of Hearns' 45 victories, 38 have been by knockout. Barkley has a 24-4 record, with 15 knockouts.

The fight will begin about 8 p.m. PDT and will be the feature bout of a championship tripleheader, which will shown on closed-circuit and pay-per-view TV.

Virgil Hill, a 1984 Olympic silver medalist, will defend the WBA light heavyweight title against Ramzi Hassan, and Roger Mayweather will defend the WBC super lightweight championship against Harold Brazier. All three fights are scheduled for 12 rounds.

Hill, of Las Vegas, has a 21-0 record, with 14 knockouts. Hassan, who was born in Jerusalem, raised in Jordan and now lives at San Diego, has a 25-3 record, with four knockouts.

Yankees Blow By Baltimore

By HILLEL ITALIE
Associated Press Writer

After playing for nearly six hours the night before, the New York Yankees were in no mood for any excitement.

Less than 14 hours after losing 7-6 on a three-run throwing error in the bottom of the 14th inning, the Yankees took all the drama out of Sunday's game, scoring nine runs in the first inning to defeat the Baltimore Orioles 9-2.

"Believe me, I'm tired," said center fielder Claudell Washington, who had three hits. "We were on a mission after that letdown. To lose the game the way we did, it was great to come out and get ahead early."

Richard Dotson, 6-1, allowed six hits, walked four and struck out four in earning his 100th career victory. It was his third complete game of the season.

"When you get a lead like that, it makes things so much easier," Dotson said. "After that, you just have to stay away from the big inning."

In other American League games, it was Detroit 6, Cleveland 2; Toronto 12, Boston 4; Minnesota 4, Oakland 3; Chicago 5, Texas 4; Kansas City 7, Seattle 3, and California 6, Milwaukee 5 in 11 innings.

Rickey Henderson and Willie Randolph opened the first for the Yankees with walks against Jay Tibbs, 2-3. Washington singled home Henderson and Jack Clark walked to load the bases. Mark Williamson replaced Tibbs and got Jose Cruz to force Randolph at home but Mike Pagliarulo followed with a two-run single.

After Gary Ward struck out, Rafael Santana walked to re-load the bases. Joel Skinner hit a grounder to shortstop Cal Ripken, who bobbled the ball for an error as Cruz scored.

Henderson then singled home two runs and Randolph's double scored two more.

Washington's single drove in the final run.

"He (Tibbs) had no idea what he was doing. When you walk three of the first four hitters and give up a hit to the other, you have no idea," Orioles manager Frank Robinson said. "I had to use Williamson. He was really the only one I had left."

The Yankees finished 8-4 on their 12-game road trip. They start a three-game series in New York tonight against the Boston Red Sox.

"We had a great trip," Washington said. "But I'm glad we're going home."

Tigers 6, Indians 2

Jeff Robinson pitched a five-hitter and Luis Salazar led a 17-hit attack with three singles and a two-run double as Detroit prevented Cleveland's Greg Swindell from becoming the major league's first 11-game winner.

Robinson, 6-2, allowed just three hits after giving up a pair of solo home runs in the first inning. He struck out 10 and walked one in pitching his second complete game of the season.

Swindell, 10-2, had a four-game winning streak snapped. The 17 hits he allowed were the most he had ever given up in a single game.

Salazar's double was the only extra-base hit for Detroit. Gary Pettis had three hits and two RBI. Every Tiger except Chet Lemon had at least one hit.

Blue Jays 12, Red Sox 4

Kelly Gruber, Fred McGriff and Rance Mulliniks had three hits apiece and Lloyd Moseby drove in three runs with a homer and a bases-loaded walk as Toronto completed a sweep of its four-game series in Boston.

With their sixth consecutive victory, the Blue Jays equaled their longest winning streak of the season. The Blue Jays swept a series in Boston for the first time in their 12-year history. Toronto had 19 hits, at least one by every starter.

Duane Ward, 2-0, the fourth Toronto pitcher, worked two innings and was credited with the victory.

Toronto went ahead to stay in the fourth on McGriff's RBI double and a run-scoring single by Gruber against Mike Smithson, 1-2, the second of five Boston pitchers.

Twins 4, Athletics 3

Kirby Puckett's single in the bottom of the sixth inning scored John Moses from second and reliever Keith Atherton pitched three scoreless innings to lead Minnesota past Oakland.

The Athletics lost for only the second time in 11 games and still have the best record in the major leagues, 38-16.

Atherton, 4-1, the second of three Minnesota pitchers, allowed two hits, walked one and struck out two. Jeff Reardon pitched 1 1-3 innings for his 14th save.

Oakland starter Bob Welch, 8-3, allowed 11 hits in 5 2-3 innings and had his personal seven-game winning streak snapped.

White Sox 5, Rangers 4

Greg Walker's RBI double capped a three-run first inning and Jerry Reuss allowed four hits in six innings as Chicago defeated Texas.

Reuss, 4-2, walked one and struck out three for his 202nd career victory.

Bobby Thigpen, the third Chicago pitcher, worked 1 2-3 innings to earn his ninth save despite allowing pinch-hitter Cecil Espy's RBI single in the top of the ninth. Thigpen got Ruben Sierra to ground out to second with the bases loaded to end the game.

Dave Gallagher drew a walk against Paul Kilgus, 6-4, to open the first and went to third on a single by Steve Lyons. Gary Redus forced Lyons as Gallagher scored. Redus stole second and scored on a single by Ivan Calderon, who stole second and scored on Walker's double.

Royals 7, Mariners 3

George Brett hit two home runs and a single as Kansas City swept its four-game series against Seattle.

It was second time this year and the 12th time in his career Brett homered twice in a game. His first homer scored Kurt Stillwell, who opened the game with a double. With two out in the bottom of the third, Brett hit a pitch from Edwin Nunez, 1-3, over the center-field fence for his 10th home run of the season.

Mark Gubicza, 7-5, allowed eight hits, struck out six and walked three in seven innings. Gene Garber finished up.

Seattle's No. 9 hitter, second baseman Harold Reynolds, set a club record with his eighth straight hit when he singled in the eighth inning. After tying the record held by Bruce Bochte and Phil Bradley in the fifth, Reynolds walked in the sixth.

Angels 6, Brewers 5

Johnny Ray's suicide squeeze bunt scored Darrell Miller in the 11th inning as California snapped a six-game losing streak.

Miller led off the top of the 11th by hitting a tapper to Chuck Crim, 0-3, who threw the ball into right field for a two-base error.

Dick Schofield sacrificed Miller to third, and after Crim hit Brian Downing with an 0-2 pitch, Ray laid down a bunt to the first-base side of the mound to score Miller.

DeWayne Buice, 2-3, the third California pitcher, allowed pitched 2 2-3 hitless innings for the win.

Has Martin Learned Any Lesson?

By RONALD BLUM
Associated Press Writer

Bobby Brown can keep Billy Martin out of the ballpark. But can Richie Phillips and his American League umpires keep Billy in the dugout when he returns tonight?

Martin raised a fuss when he attempted to dust an umpire's trousers with topsoil and tossed some more earth at his chest last Monday night in Oakland. Dr. Brown, the AL president, banished Billy for three games and fined him $1,000.

Martin sat out the Yankees' three-game weekend series in Baltimore, but will be back tonight when New York hosts Boston.

Phillips and his crew chiefs have decided the three-game hiatus was insufficient deterrent and have announced that henceforth Martin would be a second-class citizen, confined to his bench and muted. The umpires say they will eject Billy on their own if he dares to defy them.

Billy's managerial brethren are split on the desirability of this action.

"If Billy got dumped the first time he stepped out of the dugout and the next time he stepped out, I think he'd get the message," Milwaukee manager Tom Trebelhorn said.

"I don't think they really meant that," California manager Cookie Rojas said. "There is no way that they can treat any manager any different from another manager."

That is what the umpires, tired of Martin's temper tantrums, promise. After delivering the lineup card, Martin is to return to the dugout, keep his posterior planted to the bench and his feet firmly on the floor. He is to behave like a child — seen but not heard.

"I don't think the umpires feel that way," Chicago White Sox manager Jim Fregosi said. "I don't think it's right to kick dirt, but I think there has been a little overreaction by Mr. Phillips."

Colleagues tend to defend each other. Some major league managers, though, appear to regard Martin as a pariah. They seem to think that any manager who loses control should be put in a managerial hoosegow.

"The umpires should crack down on anybody, not just Billy," Atlanta manager Russ Nixon said. "They are out there to control the game, and we all accept that. If we get out of hand, we expect it."

Even those tending to support Martin don't back his actions.

Graf's Next Task Figures To Be A Much Tougher Test

PARIS (AP) — Steffi Graf had an easy time winning the French Open women's title. But her path to the Grand Slam runs through Wimbledon, and Martina Navratilova says she'll be ready.

"Once out there on center court, it doesn't matter who I am playing," Navratilova said. "I will be fired up and ready to go."

Navratilova is anxious for another crack at Graf, who overwhelmed Soviet Natalia Zvereva for her second straight French Open title. Graf, who won the Australian Open in January, routed the 17-year-old Soviet 6-0, 6-0, in 32 minutes Saturday in the most lopsided match in French Open history.

But Wimbledon, where Navratilova is seeking a record ninth title, is another matter.

Navratilova, ousted by Zvereva in the fourth round, ended her French Open on a winning note Sunday by combining with Pam Shriver to win the women's doubles title. It was her 50th Grand Slam title overall.

After losing to Graf in the singles final at the French Open in 1987, Navratilova came back with a vengeance, beating Graf to win her sixth consecutive singles crown at Wimbledon and again in the U.S. Open finals — although Graf eventually took over the No. 1 ranking.

Navratilova is looking to come up with a good performance on the grass courts of Wimbledon to atone for her loss to Zvereva on the clay courts of Paris.

"I don't need extra incentive for Wimbledon. I have enough as it is," Navratilova said. "I am worried about winning, not about anything else."

She first started winning Wimbledon in 1978.

But Graf is on a Grand Slam roll. She added the French Open to her Australian Open title and has made the last five Grand Slam finals.

Zvereva but was overwhelmed by Graf in the final — one that Navratilova was tough to watch.

"It was a disaster. Steffi played a great match but she didn't get much opposition," Navratilova said. "I said, 'How could I lose to this girl?'"

Navratilova said she's not planning on watching a taped replay of her match with Zvereva anytime soon.

"Not right now," Navratilova said.

"That would not tell me how to play on grass. I will look at it later to see how I reacted to the event. What went on in my head and what I have to rectify."

As good as Zvereva looked against Navratilova, she was totally the opposite against Graf, winning just 13 points.

Graf blitzed her with a powerful serve and devastating forehands that put the Soviet teen in tears at the end of the post-match press conference.

Zvereva, the world junior champion in 1987 and the 13th seed in the tournament, was no match for the tall West German, who turns 19 on June 14.

However, Navratilova said a showdown with Graf in the Wimbledon final is not automatic.

"There are lots of good players, not just Steffi or I. It was Zvereva who got me out of here," Navratilova said.

Gooden Misses No-Hit Bid In 11-3 Win

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Sports Writer

Dwight Gooden usually likes to talk about his hitting more than his pitching.

But by hitting a two-run homer Sunday, the New York Mets' 23-year-old right-hander may have turned the anniversary of his return from drug rehabilitation from something special into a day he called "mediocre."

Gooden, who has come close to no-hitters several times in his four-plus big-league seasons, held Chicago hitless for the first seven innings.

But Damon Berryhill led off the eighth with a single to center and the Cubs went on to score three runs on five hits in the last two innings in an 11-3 New York victory.

Berryhill's hit followed the second homer of Gooden's career, a 400-foot drive to left-center in a four-run seventh inning.

Gooden said the homer seemed to affect his pitching.

"I was nervous going out to pitch the eighth," he said. "It was weird. I had a strange feeling walking out there. You come so far. It could have been the most unbelievable day of my life and it turned mediocre."

"He may have lost his concentration after the home run," agreed Berryhill.

The victory gave the Mets a 6 1/2-game lead in the National League East over Pittsburgh, which lost to Montreal, 3-2.

In other NL games, it was Philadelphia 6, St. Louis 3; San Francisco 9, Houston 3; Los Angeles 5, Cincinnati 4, and Atlanta 3, San Diego 1.

The Mets' win was marked by an offensive breakout in the finale of a 13-game homestand.

They hit .203 as a team while splitting the first 12 games, but had 18 hits off four Cubs pitchers and took just four innings to knock out Jeff Pico, who last Tuesday had become the first Cubs pitcher in 54 years to pitch a shutout in his first major-league start.

Kevin McReynolds drove in three runs and Gooden, Kevin Elster and Keith Hernandez had two RBI apiece.

But it seemed a so-so day to Gooden, who improved to 9-1 this year and 82-27 for his career in pitching his sixth complete game this season and 48th in 137 career starts.

"I've come close to a no-hitter in the minors, in high school, the majors," said Gooden, who beat the Pittsburgh Pirates on June 5, 1987, after two months of treatment for a cocaine problem. "I don't think I'll ever pitch one."

Expos 3, Pirates 2

Andres Gallaraga hit his major league-leading 15th homer in the sixth for the deciding run as Montreal edged Pittsburgh.

It was his fourth homer in five games and gave him nine RBI in five days this month.

Hubie Brooks also had a two-run homer for the Expos and Andy Van Slyke accounted for both Pittsburgh runs with a two-run shot, his eighth, in the first.

"Right now I just feel real strong, real good at the plate," said Gallaraga, who is hitting .341 with 34 RBI.

"Gallaraga is one of the two or three premier young players in the league," said Pirates Manager Jim Leyland. "He doesn't give many at-bats away, and he's a pretty mature young hitter."

Bryn Smith, 4-4, got the win by going six innings with Jeff Parrett getting the final two outs for his third save. Mike Dunne, 2-3, was the loser.

Giants, 9, Astros 3

Matt Williams and Candy Maldonado each drove in three runs and Will Clark had a two-run homer, his 14th, to lead the Giants.

Rick Reuschel, 8-3, allowed one run on four hits over six innings before leaving with a sore shoulder.

Jim Deshaies, 4-3, allowed two runs in the second on Maldonado's RBI ground ball and Jeffrey Leonard's sacrifice fly and two more in the fourth on Clark's homer. Williams, who had a grand slam Saturday, had a bases-loaded double in the seventh and Maldonado singled home two more runs in the eighth.

Phillies 6, Cardinals 3

David Palmer pitched and hit his way to his first win since last September, ending St. Louis' five-game winning streak.

Palmer, 1-5, had a homer and a double and limited the Cards to one unearned run over 7 2/3 innings.

"I like to work on my hitting," Palmer said. "It can help you win games. I like to hit and I take it very seriously."

Luis Aguayo and Palmer had consecutive homers in a three-run fifth that broke a 1-1 tie. Lance Parrish had his 10th homer in the sixth.

The Cards ended a 10-game road trip 7-3, but remain third in the NL East, 7 1/2 games behind the Mets, whom they face in a three-game series starting tonight at Busch Stadium.

"You know it's a tough race when you have a 7-3 road trip and don't pick up any ground," manager Whitey Herzog said.

Dodgers 5, Reds 4

Three throwing errors by Cincinnati shortstop Barry Larkin produced three unearned runs for the NL West-leading Dodgers.

Larkin left after the sixth inning with a bruised finger on his throwing hand.

"We should have won," said Larkin, who said he injured the finger last week in Chicago and reinjured it driving in the Reds' first run in the third inning. "I feel terrible about it."

John Shelby had two singles to extend his NL-high hitting streak to 20 games and Kirk Gibson had an RBI double that broke a run of 41 singles by the Dodgers.

Tim Leary, 5-4, went 7 2/3 innings, allowing 10 hits, and Jay Howell pitched the final 1 1/3 innings for his fifth save as the Dodgers extended their lead over Houston to 2 1/2 games. Mario Soto, 3-5, took the loss.

Braves 3, Padres 1

Ken Oberkell's two-out, eighth-inning RBI double broke a 1-1 tie and Tom Glavine and Bruce Sutter combined on a four-hitter in a meeting between the NL's two worst teams.

Glavine, 3-6, gave up four hits and walked just one while Sutter, continuing his comeback from rotator cuff problems, retired all six batters he faced for his eighth save.

The Padres took a 1-0 lead into the seventh when the Braves tied it on singles by Gerald Perry and Dale Murphy and two groundouts.

After Andy Hawkins, 5-5, retired the first two batters in the eighth, Albert Hall singled and stole second. Oberkell doubled him home and Perry greeted reliever Mark Davis with an RBI single.

CFA Meeting Brings Up Two Key Issues

DALLAS (AP) — Bar NFL scouts from the college campus? Let football players sell tickets back to the schools they play for?

These were two controversial items discussed by the College Football Association on Sunday.

The CFA expressed concern about the lack of cooperation from the NFL in matters related to the draft, release of confidential information by scouting combines, and evaluation camps.

The CFA formed a committee to discuss the matters with the NFL's Competition Committee.

"All we get from the NFL is lip service," Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne said. "We might have to take some stringent action the way things are going. We aren't getting much cooperation and we are in effect farm teams of the NFL."

Osborne cited agents as a big evil. He said recent cases of players passing up eligibility to get into supplemental NFL drafts was bad precedent.

"The NFL could work harder on this problem but apparently is afraid of lawsuits," he said.

Osborne said the problem has reached the point that players who don't want to participate in their senior season have only to say they have an agent to get their wish.

"If it gets down to it, the NFL is not going to attack hardships. They know they can't win in court. We need to change some other things and make it more enticing for kids to stay in school and get their degrees. Right now we don't have very good relations with the NFL," said Texas A&M Athletic Director Jackie Sherill.

Baylor Coach Grant Teaff said the trouble started when the NFL "gave credence to agents. The kids are learning to play the game."

The CFA also said it was tired of NFL scouts constantly being on campus asking for individual workouts.

"We have guys tested almost daily and it has to stop," Osborne said.

LSU Gets Surprise Win In NCAA Track And Field

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — The women's track coach at Louisiana State, Loren Seagrave, says there's a Cajun word that perfectly describes his team's performance at the NCAA Track and Field Championships.

"Lagniappe," he said. "It means something unexpected, something over and above and a little bit extra."

LSU got a little bit extra from just about everyone Saturday to edge UCLA and win the women's championship for the second straight year. The UCLA men also defended their title, piling up 82 points to double the total of runnerup Texas.

"It was totally unexpected," Seagrave said. "We graduated seven All-Americans last year, with probably a cumulative point total of over 40."

"We qualified 17 people, and I think 12 of them performed at or above their expectations and their previous best," he said.

The LSU women had only one individual winner, Schowonda Williams in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles on Friday. But they placed in enough other events to accumulate 61 points. UCLA finished with 58.

Seagrave tried to explain how his team, which was given little chance to defend its title, was able to come through.

"It's a real complicated mix and chemistry that happens," he said, with the team "working together, psychologically motivating themselves and having the focus on the big meet."

LSU already had competed on the new Hayward Field track at the University of Oregon in April, and arrived in Eugene a week before the NCAA meet began.

"Although we didn't plan it, I think we were adopted by the fans here," he said.

Williams was the biggest producer for the LSU women. In addition to her 400 hurdle victory, she was a member of the runnerup 1,600-meter relay team and was fifth in the 100-meter hurdles.

The Tigers were the beneficiaries of an uncharacteristic stumble in an otherwise outstanding performance by UCLA's Gail Devers. She had a hand in 42 points, including a first-place finish in the 100 meters Saturday in a wind-aided 10.86 seconds.

But in the 100-meter hurdles, the race she was most expected to win, she hit two hurdles, was knocked off balance and finished third behind Lynda Tolbert of Arizona State (12.82) and LaVonna Martin of Tennessee (12.85). Devers' time was 12.90, well off the American record of 12.61 she shares with Jackie Joyner-Kersey.

Had she won the race, the Bruins would have beaten LSU by one point. "Gail is an awesome athlete," Seagrave said, "and if things had clicked for her, they would have been awfully tough to beat."

"I made some mistakes in the hurdles," Devers said, "but they are correctable."

In addition to her victory in the 100 and third-place finish in the 100 hurdles, Devers was second in the long jump and was a member of the second-place 400-meter relay team and the winning 1,600-meter relay squad.

"I think one of the problems now in the hurdles and the long jump is that Gail is getting faster, and anytime she gets faster, she has to adjust," her coach, Bob Kersee, said.

He said Devers hasn't decided whether to enter the 100, the 100 hurdles or both at the U.S. Olympic Trials. Kersee is giving Devers the week off before resuming training.

"The pressure's off now," he said. "She can just concentrate on herself going into the Trials. We have time to work on her mechanics and figure out what our decision will be."

Host Oregon got top performances from Annette Hand, who won the 3,000 meters in a meet-record 15:38.47, and Jill Smith, who captured the javelin title with a personal-best 180-8. The Ducks finished third in the team race with 45 points.

Sheila Hudson of California had the longest triple jump ever by an American woman, 45-8, but the mark was wind-aided.

While the women's team battle went down to the last event, the men's competition was a foregone conclusion.

UCLA, which scored 81 in winning the title last year, had just as easy a time of it this year.

"We weren't thinking that way," Coach Bob Larsen said, "We were thinking more in the 60s or low 70s."

A record-breaking 1,600-meter relay victory and a 1-2 finish in the 400 meters were the highlights of UCLA's Saturday performance.

The quartet of Steve Lewis, Kevin Young, Danny Everett and Henry Thomas became the first collegiate relay team to break the 3:00 barrier in the event, finishing in 2:59.91.

"This team is as good as the one that competed at the (1987) world championships," UCLA sprint coach John Smith said.

Earlier, Everett and Lewis easily finished 1-2 in the 400 meters, but both were dissatisfied with their respective times of 44.52 and 44.83.

"I knew when I woke up this morning I was a little off," Everett said. "I think we both were a little off today."

'Phantom Of The Opera' Top Tony Winner With 7

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "The Phantom of the Opera" captured seven Tony Awards, including best musical, but the fairy tale "Into the Woods" deprived it of the prizes for musical score and book.

"Into the Woods" won three Tonys at Sunday night's nationally televised awards presentations for the 1987-88 Broadway season. Also winning three were the exotic love story "M. Butterfly," and the revival of Cole Porter's "Anything Goes."

"Phantom," which is the season's biggest hit and is sold out well into next year, is the second straight British import to win for musical. Last year, "Les Miserables" won that award and seven others.

In addition to musical, "Phantom," the story of a disfigured ghoul who abducts a beautiful singer at the Paris Opera, won the musical categories for best actor, Michael Crawford; director, Harold Prince; featured actress, Judy Kaye; and all three technical awards: Maria Bjornson for sets and costumes and Andrew Bridge for lighting.

"I'm honored," said its composer, Andrew Lloyd Webber. "This was rather unexpected."

"There are so many ups and downs in this business. Well, the time I have had here in New York," said a choked-up Crawford, who portrays the phantom. "I know by the law of averages I must be due to be knocked down by a truck."

Stephen Sondheim and James Lapine, won for composer and author, respectively, of "Into the Woods."

"I'm so glad that Stephen won, so I don't have to share this with him," said Lapine in accepting the book award.

Joanna Gleason won the best actress in the musical, in which she plays the baker's wife who wants a child and turns to a witch for help.

"For the past two years, people have thought I was the baker's wife, but I felt more like Cinderella at the ball," Miss Gleason said after winning her prize.

"M. Butterfly" author David Henry Hwang thanked "the real-life French diplomat who carried on an affair for 20 years with a Chinese actress without realizing she was a man..."

"I like improbable plots but I'm not sure I could have made that one up," Hwang said.

In addition to best play, it won for director John Dexter and actor B.D. Wong, who plays the singer and grasped his tailcoat and curtsied after his award was announced.

Ron Silver was named best actor for his portrayal of a cut-rate Hollywood mogul in David Mamet's "Speed-the-Plow," while Joan Allen won best actress for her portrait of a bereaved dancer in Lanford Wilson's "Burn This."

Bill McCutcheon, a comic gangster on the lam in "Anything Goes," received the featured actor in a musical award.

"Thank God for letting me live this long to be here," said McCutcheon. The 1934 Cole Porter musical also was named best revival and received the choreography award, which went to Michael Smuin.

L. Scott Caldwell received the featured actress in a play prize for her portrayal of the boarding house owner's wife in "Joe Turner's Come and Gone" by August Wilson.

The singer Madonna, who is in "Speed-the-Plow," presented a special Tony to the South Coast Repertory Company of Costa Mesa, Calif.

In presenting the award to David Emmes and Martin Benson, who founded it in 1964, she started by saying the microphone wasn't high enough, but was told it was all right. She tried to stand in a bent position, finally said, "This isn't good for my posture," and added, "I'm being punished for not coming to rehearsal today."

The 42nd annual Tony Awards show, televised live from the Minskoff Theater, was produced by Don Mischer, who picked up an Emmy for his first try at producing the Tony show last year.

The nominees were chosen by a 12-member panel of theater professionals. The contenders were announced May 9, and then ballots were sent to 730 journalists and members of the theatrical profession.

The Tonys are named for the late Antoinette Perry, a major figure in the American Theater Wing, which held the first Tony Awards show in 1947.

The season, which ended May 29, was one of Broadway's best in years despite a drop in the number of plays and musicals. Ticket sales climbed to a record of more than $253 million, and attendance jumped to 8.1 million from nearly 7 million the previous season.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY June 7

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): If you make any important plans, be sure to write them down, lest you forget. Although you may feel a bit frustrated, don't lose your temper. TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Don't try to pressure anyone into going along with your ideas. State your aims to a good friend, and this person will be happy to help you. GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Don't take any risks where your credit or reputation are concerned. If a superior is in a tight spot, offer your assistance to this person. MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): If you want that new idea to work to your benefit, get moving on it right away. Take it easy tonight, and get plenty of rest. LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Handle as many obligations as you can this morning, as you probably won't have time later in the day. Go along with your mate's wishes tonight. VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): You can come to an understanding with a difficult partner early today. Stay at home this evening, and get plenty of rest after a tiring day. LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Work on making your home surroundings more charming and functional. Your work should be handled more slowly and carefully than usual. SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Don't take any unnecessary risks today, or you could lose out on a fine opportunity. Be very serious when dealing with close friends. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Get your home in fine order early today, as you may want to entertain some friends there later. Show your devotion to your mate. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Let anyone who is involved know what your plans for the future are. Be sure to use great caution while out driving today or tonight. AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Get any practical chores out of the way early today, as an important business situation will require your full attention later in the day. PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Your intuition is working fine today, so don't be afraid to rely on it if you become a bit confused. Think of your mate's needs before your own. ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold: ♠9532 ♥AQ93 ♦Q82 ♣73 The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 ♣ Dbl ? What do you bid now? A.—Although your chances of a 4-4 major fit are slight in view of East's double, we still think one heart is the right bid. If West declares, your bid will help partner get off to the right lead; if East declares, partner will be advised of your concentration of strength.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold: ♠A532 ♥Q932 ♦Q82 ♣73 The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 ♣ Dbl ? What do you bid now? A.—The odds of wanting to play a major-suit contract are poor, and this time you have no clear preference for a lead—partner's best suit should be right. Therefore, there is no point to bidding one of your majors. Our choice would be one no trump.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold: ♠83 ♥AQJ6 ♦954 ♣KJ63 The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ 1 ♣ 1 NT Pass ? What do you bid now?

A.—Had there been no overcall, you would have raised to two no trump, to cater to the possibility that North might have a dead minimum opening bid. But when he bids freely over the interference, he must be better than minimum. Under the circumstances, you should jump to three no trump.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold: ♠Q984 ♥4 ♦K762 ♣Q843 The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 ♦ 1 ♥ 2 ♦ Pass

2 ♣ Pass ? What action do you take? A.—What a pity you weren't playing negative doubles—that would have been the ideal action over one heart. Despite the fact that you haven't promised all that much, partner has elected to move toward game. The double fit improves your hand enormously. We like an aggressive leap to four spades.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold: ♠873 ♥AJ1032 ♦A6 ♣K54 The bidding has proceeded: South West North East 1 ♥ Pass 1 ♣ Pass 1 NT Pass 2 ♥ Pass ? What action do you take?

A.—North has a better than minimum raise to two hearts—since he must have three hearts on this auction, he would have raised directly with a dead minimum. However, you have nothing to spare for your opening, so unless partner has grossly underbid, you are high enough. Pass.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold: ♠873 ♥AJ1032 ♦A2 ♣K54 The bidding has proceeded: South West North East 1 ♥ Pass 2 ♦ Pass 2 ♥ Pass 3 ♥ Pass ? What action do you take?

A.—This is a matter of style. If you play that a two-over-one response creates a game force, do your duty by simply going on to four hearts. If you play more old-fashioned methods, when partner's bid is only invitational, you should pass. You have a rock-bottom minimum and partner is promising only 11-12 points.

Arab-American Ordered Deported From Israel

By SERGEI SHARGORODSKY
Associated Press Writer
JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's Supreme Court on Sunday upheld a government order to deport Arab-American Mubarak Awad, an advocate of civil disobedience against Israeli rule in the occupied territories.

The court turned down Awad's appeal and said the Jerusalem-born, U.S. citizen "harms the security and public order" in Israel, does not have a legal residence permit and is in Israel under an expired visa in his American passport.

The ruling came a few hours before the arrival of Secretary of State George P. Shultz, who had protested the deportation order.

The occupied lands and Arab east Jerusalem were virtually shut down for the third day of a strike called by leaders of the six-month Palestinian uprising to protest Shultz's visit.

Two Israelis and 201 Palestinians have perished since December as a result of the uprisings in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Sporadic violence was reported in the territories, but an army spokeswoman said there were no major incidents.

Shultz told reporters he mentioned the Awad case in his meeting with Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir on the American Middle East peace initiative. But an aide to Shamir said the order would not be reversed.

While Shultz and Shamir dined at the prime minister's residence, about 30 Israelis outside protested the deportation order by burning copies of Israel's Declaration of Independence and five cut up their identity cards.

The 44-year-old Awad appeared in court in a gray suit and carried an olive branch given to him by a supporter as he was escorted back to jail by four policemen.

"I am not disappointed. I will continue to fight for a Palestinian state wherever I am," he said.

His American-born wife, Nancy Nye, read a statement from Awad.

It said: "As a Palestinian I never hated you. I don't hate you now. And I will never hate you. But as a Jerusalemite, I am telling you I'll be back."

Awad has said he would convert to Judaism if deported in order to be able to return to Israel, which under its Law of Return automatically grants citizenship to any Jew who asks for it.

"Uprooting me from my family, land, friends and culture is a disgrace," Awad said in the statement. "You (the government) have the power, the law and the gun pointing in my face. I am armed with hope, truth and non-violence."

In the 16-page ruling, Justice Aharon Barak backed the government's allegation that Awad is a threat to Israel's security "because he openly and intensely acts against Israeli control" in the West Bank and Gaza strip.

Shamir ordered the deportation May 6, a day after Awad was arrested. Awad was accused of helping compile leaflets urging Palestinian violence as part of the uprising.

Ms. Nye denied her husband wrote any leaflets, but his ideas for such civil disobedience tactics as non-payment of taxes have been adopted by the uprising.

Ms. Nye said her husband received no response to a request to meet Shultz. A U.S. official requesting anonymity said the secretary did not have free time during his seven-hour visit.

Awad's Palestinian lawyer, Jonathan Kuttub, said failure to sway Israel on the deportation would not help persuade Palestinians to support Shultz's peace initiative.

In Washington, the American-Arab Anti-Discrimination Committee said the ruling against Awad suggests "Israel has no interest in establishing a dialogue with Palestinians" and the order "will provide him with the international forum that he deserves."

The National Association of Arab Americans, also based in Washington, said Israel has failed to learn "that reconciliation with the Palestinians and recognition of their rights is the way to peace."

Awad's attorneys maintained he did not need a visa and should be allowed permanent residence since he was born in Jerusalem before Israel captured and annexed the city's Arab sector in the 1967 Middle East War. He spent 13 years in the United States and has a home in Wapakoneta, Ohio.

The court delayed the deportation until June 12, apparently to give Awad time to pursue a libel suit. He has filed a $100,000 suit against the daily Maariv for alleging last month that he dealt in drugs and channeled the proceeds to the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Some of Awad's supporters sang "We Shall Overcome" outside court. A group of Israeli militants stood nearby holding placards that read, "All Terrorists Should Be Deported."

Awad's wife shook hands with one of them, Brooklyn-born Ira Rappaport, who recently completed a jail term for rigging a bomb in which then-Nablus Mayor Bassam Shaka lost both legs in 1980.

"This is nothing personal, Mrs. Awad," Rappaport told her. "I have made no personal comments. As far as I'm concerned, your husband is perfectly free to ask for a visa to return here."

DEPORTEE LEAVES COURT — Mubarak Awad, an Arab-American advocate of civil disobedience against Israeli occupation of Arab lands, leaves Israel's Supreme Court Sunday after the court upheld a government order to deport him. He holds an olive branch given to him by a supporter. (AP Laser-photo)

Explosion Killed At Least 68

Pravda Says Soviets Thought Train Blast Was Sound Of War

By MASHA HAMILTON
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Pravda said today that residents thought war had broken out when a freight train packed with 120 tons of explosives blew up at a rail crossing in a city near Gorky, killing at least 68 people and injuring 230.

"First I saw a high column of flames shoot up. Then I heard a rumbling, and then a great mushroom cloud rose," the official Communist Party daily quoted a witness, V. Dormidontov, as saying.

Soviet news reports said Saturday's blast in Arzamas, an industrial city about 240 miles east of Moscow, flattened several city blocks and tossed railroad cars and other vehicles like feathers.

Dozens of doctors were rushed to the city and rescue workers continued today to pour through the debris and Pravda said the true death toll may never be known. In some areas, all that was left from the blast were car wheels or rubble from multi-storied apartment buildings, today's paper added.

Soviet media said the blast involved three boxcars packed with industrial explosives and destroyed the homes of 600 people. At least eight children were among those killed.

The official media's reporting of the disaster was among its most detailed and rapid ever about such an accident — an apparent sign of Mikhail S. Gorbachev's policy of "glasnost," or greater openness.

What shocked Arzamas residents, Pravda said "was not the damaged houses or destroyed cars, but the crippled people calling for help."

The newspaper quoted one unidentified, weeping woman as saying: "The first thing that came to my mind was, has it started?" an apparent reference to war.

Witnesses said the explosion was so powerful that windows were shattered about 1 1/2 miles away and sections of track were discovered a mile from the accident site, the news reports said.

Pravda described the scene as being one of "brief panic," but said those who were not injured quickly rushed to help victims.

More than 80 doctors were flown to Arzamas, a city of more than 90,000 people. Nearby residents rushed to offer blood and food for the survivors, the media said.

Pravda said the death toll would probably mount: "How is it possible to determine how many people were killed in cars parked nearby?"

It noted that, in some cases, only wheels were left at the site. The story appeared on the back page of today's paper. There were no photographs.

A government commission was appointed to investigate the accident.

The three boxcars carried industrial explosives intended for geologists, miners and builders, Tass said Sunday. The diesel locomotive pulling the cars flipped over in the blast, the daily Izvestia noted in its Sunday editions.

Navy Plane Crashes

SUBIC NAVAL BASE, Philippines (AP) — A U.S. Navy anti-submarine plane from the carrier USS Enterprise crashed in the South China Sea, killing at least two crewmen, the U.S. Navy said today.

Navy spokesman Lt. Robert Anderson said one of the four crew members was rescued and another was missing after Sunday's crash.

In Hong Kong, U.S. Consulate spokesman Daniel Sreebny said the missing crewman was "lost at sea and presumed dead" after an extensive search. He said the surviving member of the crew, which was based in San Diego, was in "stable" condition.

The S-3 Viking anti-submarine aircraft crashed about 1 p.m. during routine operations about 200 miles southeast of Hong Kong, the consulate said. The cause of the accident was under investigation.
