Bush, Dukakis Get The Nod

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Republican George Bush and Democrat Michael Dukakis today celebrated victorious conclusions to the long primary season, with Dukakis declaring, "The marathon is over and now the race to the finish line begins." Jesse Jackson renewed his claim on the Democrats' No. 2 spot but Dukakis said no one "is due an offer."

Both Bush and Dukakis, assured of their parties' presidential nominations, pledged a tough but clean election fight offering voters a clear choice.

"I feel terrific. Here I am as the Democratic nominee," Dukakis exulted in an interview broadcast today on CBS-TV.

Jackson, his last remaining opponent, promised in interviews broadcast today that he would continue the nomination fight all the way to the convention in Atlanta. But Jackson, implicitly conceding the fight was really over, said repeatedly he had earned a Dukakis offer of the vice presidential spot.

"I've earned an option to accept it or turn it down," he said on CBS in an interview taped earlier. On ABC-TV he said, "Consideration does mean an offer; it does not mean just in passing. We have earned consideration." He did not say whether he would accept such an offer.

Dukakis, making no promises, said on ABC, "I don't think anyone is due an offer." He added, "There are a great many people that are going to be considered and he'll be one of them and I'm not going to rule anybody in or out at this point."

In Washington today, former candidate Paul Simon said he would support Dukakis for president, and he urged his 150 or so remaining delegates to do the same.

Sen. Simon, D-Ill., who had put his fading campaign on hold two months ago, said at a news conference, "The primaries and caucuses are now history. The verdict is in. I will vote for Michael Dukakis at the convention and will do everything I can to advance his candidacy after the convention."

Dukakis was also picking up formal support today from former rivals Richard Gephardt of Missouri and Bruce Babbitt of Arizona.

"The race to the finish line begins," proclaimed a jubilant Dukakis after returns from a four-state primary sweep guaranteed him a delegate majority. He won races in California, New Jersey, Montana and New Mexico.

"Now we'll be going into the major-league ballgame and I am ready on the issues," declared Bush, who locked up the GOP nomination more than a month ago and cruised to uncontested wins in the states voting Tuesday.

Dukakis' season-ending sweep gave the Massachusetts governor victories in 30 states. The marathon primary contest began with seven contenders, but over the last two months came down to a head-to-head battle between Dukakis and Jackson.

The magic number for a convention majority was 2,081 and Dukakis easily surpassed that with his landslide finale. His delegate total after Tuesday's sweep stood at 2,251, according to the latest Associated Press count.

Confronted by polls saying Dukakis was the current choice of a majority of voters, Bush said, "I'm fighting back. I'm the underdog now."

While Dukakis could enter the race with an edge in polls showing Americans wanting a change after nearly eight years of Ronald Reagan's presidency, Bush could find strength in the Republican hold on the electoral votes of Southern and Western states.

The vice president was meeting this morning in Washington with Reagan.

Dukakis said voters were not interested in "slashing attacks" and he warned the Republicans not to engage in "mudslinging and name-calling."

"I don't think you have to run a negative, nasty campaign," said Bush. "What I think you have to do though is be sure the American people perceive what you really want for this country."

Party unity and the search for running mates were top priorities for both Bush and Dukakis as they looked ahead to their party conventions — the Democrats in July, the Republicans in August — and beyond.

Martin Says 'No Offer' Made

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

State Sen. R.L. "Bob" Martin of Bethel said today "nobody made anybody an offer" to have Pitt County share in Edgecombe County's now abandoned proposal to host a waste park.

Martin take he takes "strong exception" to a comment by Charles Gaskins, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, on Tuesday that such an offer was made. Gaskins, in an interview published in The Daily Reflector, said Martin "called me and made an offer of a joint venture" to locate the waste park in the two counties.

"To say that is untrue," Martin said by telephone this morning from Raleigh. "Nobody made anybody an offer. Nobody offered anything through me."

But when asked about the call again this morning, Gaskins said, "I understood it as an offer ... and it was related to the board. They understood it as an offer. The call was returned to Martin and he was told that we would not accept the offer."

Youths To Attend Seminar

By GREG LAUDICK

Five youths currently residing in Greenville Housing Authority units will be spending several days this summer at a self-improvement and crime education seminar as a result of Housing Authority action at Tuesday's monthly meeting.

Authority commissioners unanimously approved action to send five youths and an adult supervisor to the "Addressing Basic Challenges in Development Institute" to be held at North Carolina Central University in Durham from July 17-21.

Sponsored by the N.C. Crime Prevention Division, the five-day curricula is designed to help youths from housing authorities across the state.

Participants will learn skills in public speaking, decision making, job skills, self-esteem building exercises and instructions on how to form youth organizations. Crime prevention topics and social events are also planned.

"We hope this will provide the attendees with information to assist them in recognizing crime and give them ideas on how to help reduce the crime problem in the community," said Kenneth Noland, authority executive director.

Noland said the Greenville Housing Authority will provide transportation for the participants to and from Durham, and will be paying the $210 registration fee for all six participants.

He said the authority's director of resident affairs will decide who will

week in their runoff election for the Pitt County Board of Commissioners. Dupree requested the runoff after Garrett finished with an apparent two-vote edge. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis)

Vote Count Under Way

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

For the fourth time in three months the Pitt County Board of Elections was counting ballots today.

After tallying votes from the March 8 Super Tuesday primary, the May 3 state primary and the May 31 primary runoff, election officials today were working on a recount for the county commissioner race between D.D. Garrett of Greenville and James H. Dupree of Bethel.

Garrett defeated Dupree by two votes in the runoff for a seat on the Board of Commissioners from Consolidated District A, and Dupree was able to ask for a recount because he lost by less than 1 percent of the total number of votes cast in the election.

Registrars from the 10 precincts involved in the recount were tabulating the ballots by hand, one precinct at a time. "It's going smoothly and according to schedule," elections Supervisor Margaret Hardee said this morning.

The Board of Elections was supervising the recount process, and were set to make a judgment on any ballots that were marked incorrectly and therefore not counted electronically.

Canadian Heroin Cache Seized

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Police seized 45 pounds of heroin hidden in hollowed-out rocks coated to resemble jade and arrested at least three people in the third-biggest drug haul in Canadian history, authorities said.

The street value of the haul was variously estimated by police at $120 million and $154 million.

Terry Langley, director of intelligence for Canada Customs, said Tuesday that 20.5 kilograms — more than 45 pounds — of 87 percent pure heroin was seized in Vancouver. Three people were arrested in Windsor, Ontario, on Monday.

"It represents a tremendous amount of heroin in any man's language, anywhere in the world," said Royal Canadian Mounted Police Staff Sgt. Smokey Stovern.

By comparison, the French Connection ring smuggled about 70 pounds of heroin into the United States from 1968 to 1971.

Langley said customs agents in Vancouver became suspicious about paperwork for a shipment listed as jade from Bangkok, Thailand, to Montreal. The shipment, packed in wooden crates, was intercepted by Canadian Customs in Vancouver May 9 after being trucked across the border from Seattle, police said.

The rocks turned out to be granite, not jade, and X-rays showed a cavity in one. "When they broke one of the rocks, they discovered the heroin," Langley said.

Langley said the smugglers had drilled out the rocks, stuffed them with heroin, sealed the holes and then coated the rocks with a green-tinted dirt and sand mixture to make them look like jade. "It was a very good job," he said.

Mounties removed most of the heroin and replaced it with a lookalike powder. The Mounties followed the shipment to Montreal and waited for someone to claim the rocks. The path eventually led to the Windsor area.

John Laudicina, 42, of Sandwich South Township near Windsor; Joseph Guaragna, 23, and Antonio Zambito, 46, both of Montreal, were arrested Monday in a raid on a home about 12 miles east of Windsor, authorities said.

They were charged with possession of narcotics and face a maximum sentence of life in prison.

The largest heroin haul in Canadian history was 60 kilos, or 132 pounds, in 1972, and 70 pounds were confiscated in 1986.

School Retirees Honored

Pitt County schools honored more than 1,100 years of service to the school system as it recognized 40 employees who are retiring this year.

The retirees and their families and co-workers met Tuesday for the annual retirement reception at Wintergreen Elementary School.

Leck Keeter, associate superintendent of personnel services, welcomed the group and encouraged the retirees to think of the school system in their spare time. "We have the best volunteer program in the state of North Carolina so think about that when you're looking for something to do," he said.

Keeter also thanked the employees on behalf of the generations of students they taught and nurtured over the years.

Donovan Phillips, vice chairman of the Pitt County Board of Education, thanked the retirees for making the school system "one of the best educational systems in the country."

Superintendent Eddie West presented each retiree a carnation, certificate and a lapel pin in the shape of Pitt County with blue sapphire in the center.

Three principals were among those retiring this year.

Stuart Tripp of Ayden Elementary School is bringing 42 years of service to the school system to an end to go fishing, he said.

Looking forward to seeing more of the fishing pier, Tripp said, "the mileage has come hard" as he has seen the school system go through various changes including integration and merger.

Gaston Monk of Ayden Middle School said he will spend time with his family and will "get some traveling in" after the last school bell chimes for him. Monk served the school system for 39 years.

W.H. Robinson's principal, Blanie Moye, said playing golf and working in the yard and garden are on his agenda after retiring. But, the school system is not losing him completely after 33 years of service, he said. "I'm planning to substitute teach."

Council To Take Up Zoning Petitions

The Greenville City Council will consider a request to extend the city's extraterritorial planning and zoning jurisdiction 273 acres south of White Road when it meets for its regular monthly action meeting Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in City Hall.

The request, if approved, would extend the ETJ east of SR 1709 and west of N.C. 43. This action was presented to the council on March 10 and was referred back to the Planning and Zoning Commission for further consideration.

Approximately 70 acres of the Windsor Subdivision are requested to be brought into the ETJ zoned R-15S (residential), 14.1 acres situated along White Road are requested to be brought in as IU (unoffensive industry), while a 1.2-acre lot on the corner of SR 1725 and N.C. 43 is requested to be brought into the ETJ zoned CS (shopping center). The remaining 187 acres are requested to be brought into the ETJ zoned RA-20 (residential-agricultural).

According to Bobby Roberson, director of planning and development, an ETJ is a designated area set aside for physical planning and implemented through the zoning and subdivision regulations of the city. He said such designations prevent the negative consequences of "leap frog" development.

At its May 17 meeting, the Planning and Zoning Commission voted 6-2 to recommend to the council that approximately 35 acres of undeveloped land located north of the Windsor Subdivision be left out of the ETJ extension.

Several developers at that meeting said bringing the undeveloped land into the city's ETJ would create a significant cost increase to develop the area to city development standards rather than county standards.

According to the General Statutes of North Carolina, a city is permitted to extend its ETJ beyond its corporate limits for a distance of one mile.

In other matters Thursday, the council will also consider a request by Greenville Surgeon's Properties to rezone 11 acres located south of John Hopkins Drive and Bethesda Drive from MD-5 (medical) to MD-3; a request by the Planning and Development Department to rezone a 1.54-acre tract located off the northern right-of-way of 14th Street, east of Seaboard Coastline Railroad and being lots 1, 2, 3, and 4 of Block 42-I of the South Evans Redevelopment Project Area from CDF (commercial downtown fringe) and R-6 (residential) to IU (unoffensive industry).

Other items for consideration include two proposed amendments to the Zoning Ordinance. The first amendment would create a comprehensive "congregate care facility" ordinance.

Such a facility is defined as a residential facility with support and supervisory personnel that provide room and board, personal care, habilitation services, and counseling and therapy to residents.

The second proposed amendment to the Zoning Ordinance would allow "barber shops, beauty shops, and similar personal care services" as permitted uses in O&I (office and institutional) zoning districts.

Council will also consider a resolution authorizing the sale of Disposal Parcels 42-1-1, 2, 3, 3A, 4 and 4A of the South Evans Community Development Project; a resolution authorizing the sale of Disposal Parcel 42-M-4 in the South Evans Community Development Project; consideration of three valid bid proposals relating to equipment, labor, and installation costs of an air conditioning unit for the city's computer room, and consideration of a $127,758.46 bid for 1988 street and downtown parking lot resurfacing.

Other items include an agreement with NCDOT for Section 18 transit grant assistance, and an application for the Governor's Highway Safety Program funding for accessing the Merge System for Traffic Analysis. The program would allow the city to access N.C. Department of Motor Vehicle's files for accident analysis.

The council will also consider appointments to various boards and commissions.

Items on the Consent Agenda for consideration Thursday include a right-of-way encroachment agreement in the southeast alley between 3rd and 4th Streets; a right-of-way encroachment agreement at 316 Evans Mall; a request to establish a 25-mph-speed limit on Barnes and Scott Streets; an ordinance establishing a 30 minute parking zone on the west side of Washington Street and south of W. 5th Street; an ordinance establishing a two-hour parking zone on the west side of Washington Street north of 6th Street; an ordinance amending the City Code increasing membership to the Community Appearance Commission from nine to 15 members, and consideration of tax refunds.

Board Says Tree Will Have To Go

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — Ending several weeks of discussion, the Farmville commissioners voted Tuesday night to remove an oak tree at the corner of Home Avenue and Walnut Street and to plant two trees on the municipal building grounds.

The town tree board had recommended that the tree be saved, but the commissioners decided it needed to go to allow construction of drainage tile for the municipal building parking lot and sidewalks. Commissioner Joe Kue questioned why the architects who designed the building and its drainage and parking would have placed the tile right where the large tree is located.

If an alternate plan developed by McDavid Associates engineers had been followed, it would have cost an additional $1,470 to bypass the tree. The two trees to be planted would be those of a garden club's choice, the commissioners said.

A budget amendment was adopted acknowledging several state grants to the Farmville Public Library. One grant is $506 more than the $4,800 that was expected. The amendment also notes acceptance of an additional legislative grant of $750 for books and repairs for the library; $583 for large print books and $368 for general books. All of this is to be spent for new books.

Approval was given for the purchase of five 15 KVA and five 25 KVA pole mount residential transformers. These are to be kept for transformer replacement during storms. Also approved was the purchase of a digitizer to be used in conjunction with other computerized equipment for drawing and map-making in the utilities department.

The low bid of Cecil Wainwright to build a storage building under the town water tower on S. Main Street was approved. Wainwright's bid was $1,350.

The time and place for an auction of surplus town equipment were set — July 9 at 10 a.m. on the town recreation field. Carson Auction Company will conduct the auction.

The sale of fire alarm boxes to town employees for $25 each was approved. These boxes have already been offered for sale at the same price to volunteer and retired volunteer firemen. Any of the 15 left that are not sold to the town employees will be put into the July 9 auction of surplus town equipment.

The commissioners adopted a new mutual aid agreement for emergency services throughout Pitt County. The request to approve this agreement was made by the Pitt County Emergency Services Office in February, but the town has delayed this long getting questions about its insurance liability answered.

An alphabetized list of Farmville's 37 volunteer firemen was approved to be submitted at the North Carolina Firemen's Pension Fund. This is an annual certification required by the Pension Fund.

Town Administrator Frank Bradham was designed by resolution as the agent for the town who can sign and execute documents necessary for the town's participation in the State Funding Mosquito Control Program. This program is carried out each summer by the town and the North Carolina Division of Health Services.

Mayor Edna Earle Baker's appointment of Vance Taylor as an alternate member of the board of adjustment was approved.

Wrong Priority

Closing Cheats Students, Taxpayers

J.H. Rose High School students are cheating on exams. But it's not their fault.

Early school closings during the week before exams are disturbing to those who care about quality preparation for Pitt County's students.

Because J.H. Rose lacks air conditioning and temperatures reach unbearable levels in classrooms when the thermometer soars into the 80s and 90s, officials chose to shut down early this week. So the week prior to final exams — the time when high school students especially need classroom time and a good learning environment — the school's charges are getting only a half day of instruction.

The predicament raises questions about cheating — hoodwinking students out of the education they are entitled to and swindling taxpayers out of the public education they pay for.

Early school closings in hot weather is a trend repeated across North Carolina in June, as schools strain to complete an academic year under the often-scorching temperatures of late spring.

Many would use that fact as ammunition to argue for air conditioning every classroom in the state. How can the state expect students and teachers to go to school longer and longer and not provide for basic comfort, critics validly ask.

But isn't the more pertinent question why the students go to school that long? Why has the school year become a marathon, the school calendar a means of conveniencing every cause and accommodating everyone's needs except the students'?

The calendar is carefully politically molded to fit teachers' needs, parents' desires and to provide flexibility. Very little attention is given to devising a schedule conducive to quality learning. That's wrong.

The students deserve the required 180 days of instruction each year. Any classroom teacher will insist that amount of teaching time is a bare minimum. It's not long enough, they say.

So why is this time interrupted and stolen at every opportunity? Why, in school planning, is instruction time not sacred? It should be. The schools are there to provide education.

Pitt County is luckier than most counties in North Carolina. All schools but J.H. Rose are air conditioned. But school officials should not use this convenience as an excuse to make the school year longer and longer. Calendar planning that prioritizes the student and the education process should be the goal.

Any other approach is cheating.

Get The Facts

AIDS Awareness Campaign Essential

You may not like getting mail about AIDS, but it is necessary.

Some 34,000 Pitt County homes are receiving brochures from the U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop which contains explicit language about sex and AIDS.

While this information and approach may make some people uncomfortable, it is necessary and correct to dramatically foster awareness about a disease with such potential impact. The facts contained in these brochures should be read and respected.

Millions of the brochures are going out all over the nation and it is unprecedented. The brochure, in fact, contains information that wouldn't have been acceptable in polite society only a generation ago — and this from a conservative surgeon general who is part of a conservative administration.

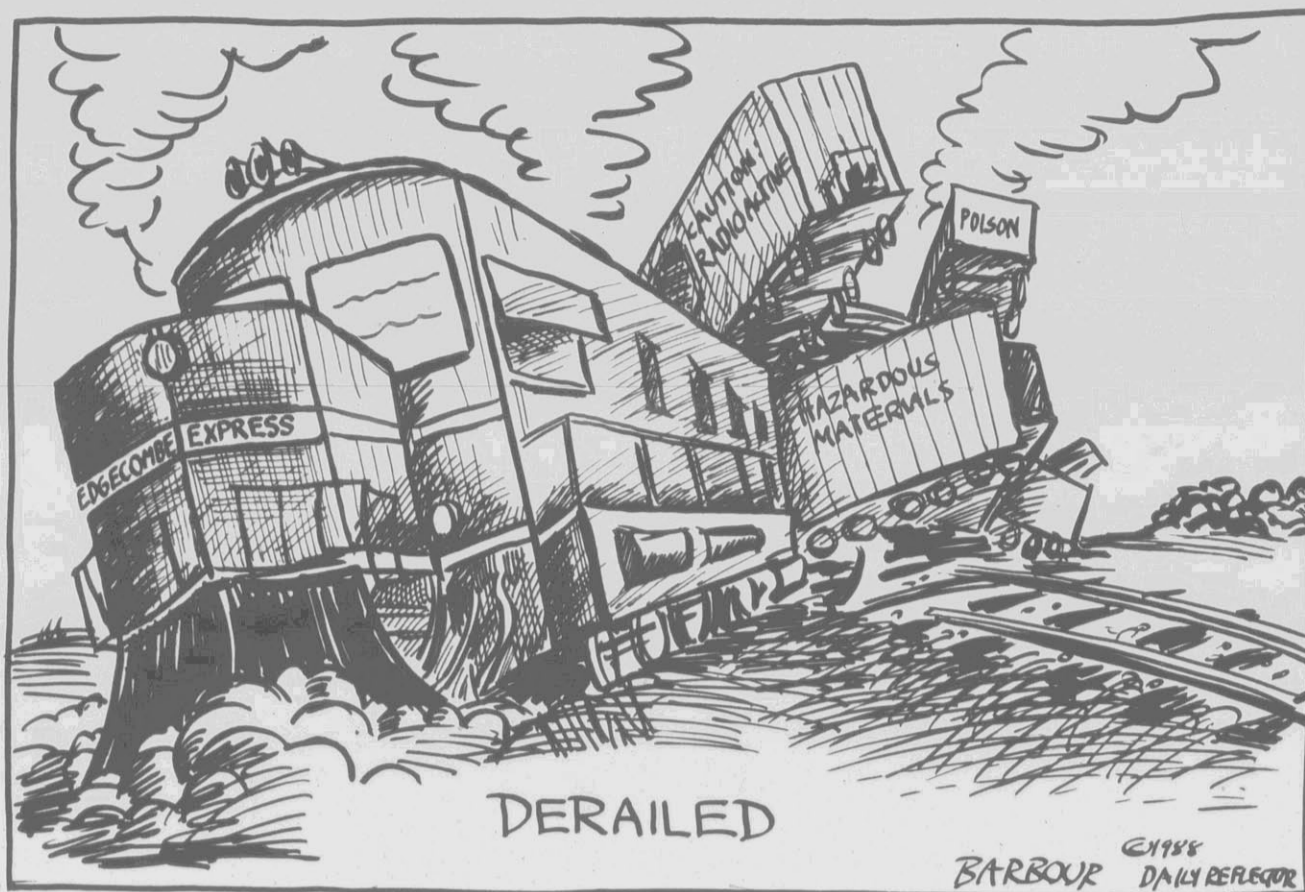

It is unfortunate that the Reagan administration waited this long to make public awareness a priority.

The fact is, however, that it is time for frank talk about AIDS. Under some circumstances it is an exceedingly dangerous threat to society. Under other circumstances it is no threat at all.

Surgeon General Koop's brochure says people must adjust lifestyles to avoid this killing disease. A monogamous relationship in which neither party has AIDS at the beginning offers the best opportunity to remain AIDS free. Increasing the number of sexual partners increases the chances for contracting the disease. Sharing needles, as drug addicts do, offers great opportunity for contracting AIDS as well as other diseases.

Toilet seats and mosquitoes are not spreaders of AIDS, nor is handshaking and other casual contact. At this point, one has to ignore public health advice to contract the disease.

The mailing of million of brochures by the surgeon general is a startling method to galvanize the public's attention. It has never been done this way before. The nation has, however, a public health situation which calls for it. For once, the nation has a government public relations program which is realistic.

Public Forum

To the editor:

Liberals and "peace"-niks claim that the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI, popularly known as "Star Wars") a defensive space shield that destroys missiles, not people, is "immoral," "dangerous," and "impossible anyway." What unadulterated nonsense! How can something that saves millions of lives be "immoral and dangerous"!

"But it won't work," libs and niks counter. They're wrong. Fellow Americans, let's forget the anti-SDI propaganda the left preaches (under the guiding hand of the Kremlin Disinformation Team) and listen to a little commonsense.

One simple fact negates every argument against SDI and proves that, once again, conservatives are right and liberals are wrong about an issue important to our national security.

The fact is this: The Soviets are moving forward as rapidly as possible to test, build and deploy their own SDI. In fact, they have spent near $150 billion (15 times our expenditures) on strategic defense since 1969.

Now, if SDI won't work, why are the Soviets working feverishly on their own SDI? If SDI is dangerous, why do the Soviets so desperately want it? If SDI is a big waste of money, why have the Soviets, not stupid by any means, spent billions on it already? If SDI is just foolishness, why has Gorbachev on several occasions insisted that we drop it or there would be no arms treaties? If SDI won't work, why would he mention it at all?

If SDI really is foolish and a dangerous waste of money, the Soviets wouldn't care if we had one. IF SDI is so detrimental, they would be taking every opportunity to encourage us to build it.

The truth: SDI will work, and if we have it, the Soviets won't be able to use nuclear blackmail on us later — thus thwarting their plan to rule the world.

To the editor:

There has been a lot of recent publicity about the Jim Bakker and the Jimmy Swaggart families. Wouldn't it amaze us if we discovered that these families paid the ultimate sacrifice by staging these events, which may never have happened at all, as a teaching tool for the rest of us? It is food for thought, anyway, not matter what may or may not have happened, to look at our reactions to anything published, to look at how the press feeds it to us, and to realize that any of us could fall at any time in our own lives. This should cause all of us to search ourselves and be very careful of our judgments and cause us to want the same forgiveness for others that we desire for ourselves. Looking into the church helps us see all of us, in and out.

Bush Needs Down-Home Points — Fast

'Budgetary reality being what it is, neither Bush nor anyone else can responsibly promise cures that involve big spending increases. But a lot could be done without spending money.'

Recent polls indicate that voters now trust the Democrats more than they do the Republicans to handle the most important problems facing the country. And the problems attracting the most concern are not national defense or U.S.-Soviet relations, but drugs, AIDS, the cost of health care and, very importantly, the economy.

As an incumbent vice president, Bush is more inclined to point with pride than to view with alarm. But to a significant minority of voters, including many who voted Republican last time, Bush's boasts of a strong economy ring hollow.

American families on the average are a little better off now than a few years ago — but only because more wives have gone to work. People have to run harder to keep from falling behind.

The low jobless figures mask the fact that many workers have been displaced by plant closings, frequently by companies moving production overseas, and are now working at lower pay.

Even among those who are doing well there is growing worry that the country is losing control over its economic future.

About 10 percent of U.S. manufacturing already is owned by foreign interests, and the proportion is growing. Of the world's 16 largest banks, none is American.

The shift in global economic power has real-life significance.

Most European or Japanese owners of U.S. plants prefer to bring in components from their own countries.

Our own Federal Reserve system now has limited control over the interest rates that we pay on home loans. The cost and availability of credit for U.S. business is increasingly determined by foreign financial institutions whose first loyalties may be to companies at home that compete with the American loan applicant.

The administration's reaction has been mostly ideological prattle about the sanctity of free markets and the evils of government interference.

Reagan, who never worried about the "golden parachutes" awarded to executives displaced by mergers or cutbacks, vetoed the trade bill because of a provision requiring that workers be given advance notice when a plant is to be closed.

Bush has done little to distance himself from the administration posture on this or other economic issues.

Budgetary reality being what it is, neither Bush nor anyone else can responsibly promise cures that involve big spending increases. But a lot could be done without spending money. For example:

—Bush could score points with working Americans by applauding their remarkable wage restraint of recent years — and demanding, in the name of shared sacrifice, that corporate executives stop giving themselves huge pay raises that are patently unjustified by performance.

—He could support proposals requiring full disclosure of foreign holdings to make sure that U.S. interests are being served.

—The vice president could applaud firms that invest more at home and less abroad, and could criticize those that raise prices and enhance profits instead of trying to recapture markets lost to overseas competitors.

—He could do more to telegraph compassion for the millions of Americans who have no health insurance with which to pay skyhigh medical bills.

So far Bush is not doing such things — at least not audibly.

But if he continues to come through as a rich guy who thinks that everything is hunky-dory, the next president will likely be a fellow named Dukakis.

School Commitment Fights Dropouts

RALEIGH — Barry Kibel says that there's nothing about the outside of a school that will indicate its dropout rate. "It's what's going on inside the school," he says, that determines how many teens are leaving school early.

Kibel, an education consultant who is completing an exhaustive study of the state's anti-dropout programs, made that statement to a group of influential legislators recently. Kibel had reported that North Carolina schools defy national dropout trends. In North Carolina, factors like urbanization, race, poverty and school size, appear to have little bearing on a school's dropout rate. More important, he says, is the presence in a school of a dynamic educator who is obsessed with running the anti-dropout program.

After reviewing statistics on 90 percent of the state's high schools, Kibel selected eight high schools, and broke them into pairs according to demographics. For example, one pair was comprised of small high schools that were mostly rural and white. Another pair was mostly urban and black. In each pair, there was a school with a dropout rate amongst the highest in the state, and one with a dropout rate amongst the lowest.

Kibel says that being able to compare schools in this way allowed him to draw some conclusions as to what works in the fight against dropouts.

The first observation he made was that a school cannot rely on a single strategy. "Successful programs adopt a broad-stroked approach," he said. No matter how good a school's in-school suspension program, or counselling program, or home-visit program, it will not do the job alone. Schools need to operate many different approaches, he said.

Schools must also keep a close watch on the progress students are making. "We had some schools say things like 'Johnny just disappeared,'" he said.

Successful schools keep a close eye on the grades and attendance of teens thought to be in danger of dropping out. If grades dip in a two-week period, or if the teen misses one day of school, someone acts. Maybe the teen is called in for a talk about his grades. Or, when the teen misses school, a parent is called immediately. This allows early intervention.

A school which thinks it has done all it can to prevent dropouts probably has not done enough, he said. Kibel said he often heard from administrators at unsuccessful schools that their program was doing about as well as could be expected. Administrators at successful schools, he said, repeatedly said they were looking for new ideas to further reduce the dropout rate.

One of the major weapons in the dropout war is in-school suspension. Unruly students are not sent home, they're sent to special disciplinary class and kept segregated from other students. Kibel said that successful schools used in-school suspension for both teaching and discipline, and that they included counselling and screening of teens who were under suspension.

Kibel also praised vocational education as a way to keep teens in school, and said that the help of counsellors and parents was essential.

Finally, he said, there is the need for one tireless school official — it doesn't need to be the principal — who will take charge of the anti-dropout program and get everyone in the entire school involved. The most successful schools, he said, displayed a schoolwide commitment to fighting dropouts. Teachers and administrators constantly had in mind the need to watch students for early warning signals of trouble.

With one such individual inside a school, odds are that it will have a low dropout rate, no matter what the school looks like from the outside.

Faster Environmental Movement

WASHINGTON — By the end of the 1990s there will be a billion more people in the world than there are today. It took 130 years for the world's population to grow from 1 billion to 2 billion. It will take 12 years to go from today's 5 billion to 6 billion. More than 90 percent of this added billion will live in the developing world, with the result that the developed countries will house only about 20 percent of world population, down by almost half since the end of World War II. Sheer numbers do not translate into power, but a demographic change of such speed and scope cannot fail to affect North-South relations.

Meanwhile, global environmental changes will be gathering force. While we cannot yet regulate acid rain, which may travel hundreds of miles from its source, new and newly discovered forms of air pollution that can travel thousands of miles, or circle the globe, are becoming more important.

If it seems hard to reconcile the interests of Ohio and Vermont, consider the problems in Western and Central Europe, where more than a dozen nations share a thriving exchange, in all directions, of various forms of air pollution. And consider the challenge to international relations of coping with the global changes of stratospheric ozone depletion and greenhouse-induced warming. The latter will make the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade look like child's play.

These impending changes share two salient characteristics: solutions demand the cooperation of all nations, and no country can protect itself from the acts of others. Add to this the high degree of scientific uncertainty (we do not know enough about the planet to predict the outcome of what we are doing to it), and the fact that whatever the consequences are they are likely to be irreversible, and you have a solid basis for joint action.

Analysis

However, the barriers to agreement are also very high. Natural systems are often unfair. Ozone depletion is a good example. Because ultraviolet radiation is strongest near the equator, the effects of depletion may well be worst in the tropics, in countries that have contributed not at all to its causation.

Mexico was the first country to ratify the recent ozone treaty, and there are encouraging signs from China and a few other developing countries. But there are worrisome signs as well. Representatives of the Indian government have said, in so many words, that since the developed countries caused the problem, they are the ones that should solve it. The echoes of India's position on the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty ("we will not consider it until the nuclear nations control their arms") are loud and clear. In that case, India ended up facing a covert nuclear weapons program in Pakistan and the prospect of a South Asian nuclear weapons race. Perhaps this time a clearer view of self-interest will prevail. If not, and if other newly industrializing nations follow India's lead, a highly promising precedent for a new era in multilateral cooperation could turn into a setback.

A boost from the ozone treaty is badly needed. Greenhouse climate change will be much more difficult to solve, and we do not know what other thresholds may be approaching. The oceans remain an almost total mystery, and there is much about the basic functioning of the biosphere, as well as the atmosphere, we do not understand. We do know that world economic activity is growing at an unprecedented rate — having quadrupled since 1950 — and must continue to do so, if only to meet basic human needs. Economic growth means more energy use, more emissions and wastes, more land converted from its natural state and more need for the products of natural systems. At some point these systems may become saturated or exhausted, or quietly cross an important chemical or biological threshold. We hardly know where to expect trouble first, or when. We lack early warning systems.

The present modes of international cooperation are unequal to the monumental task ahead. For one thing, they are much too slow for the pace of change we must expect. It typically takes 10 to 15 years to negotiate a global treaty and years more before significant change actually occurs. New ideas and new institutions will be needed — maybe quite soon.

Eventually nations may even have to learn to deal with each other as partners in a joint business venture on whose success they all depend.

IN THE STATE

Preachers

RALEIGH (AP) — David Strode's three children were suspended a total of 10 times in connection with their preaching in front of a McDowell County school, but it apparently did not prevent them from being promoted.

Strode says he was notified Tuesday that his children did well enough on their final exams to move to the next grade. Duffey, Matthew and Pepper were suspended numerous because they refused to abide by school rules which required them to proceed into the Eastfield Elementary School building when they arrived on school property each morning.

Each of the children began preaching on school property, drawing three suspensions each for Matthew and Pepper and four suspensions for Duffey, the eldest of the three. But when school begins next fall, Matthew will be in the first grade, Pepper moves to the second grade and Duffey will go to the sixth grade.

Credit Cards

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's three largest banks are moving some of their credit card operations to other states that don't limit the rates banks can charge their customers.

Though the banks say they won't necessarily increase their charges as a result of the moves, they say they want the flexibility to do so. North Carolina sets a limit of 18 percent on the interest rates that banks may charge.

First Union Corp., with headquarters in Charlotte, is moving its credit-card base to Georgia by July 1. First Wachovia Corp. in Winston-Salem is shifting to Delaware. NCB Corp. in Charlotte already has moved its credit card operation to South Carolina.

All three states have passed legislation that eliminates caps on credit-card interest rates, actions intended to attract credit-card operations — and banking jobs — to their states.

Panel Backing Map For N.C. Waterways

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — The state's effort to chart tourist and environmental spots along the North Carolina coast is sailing along, despite resistance from some marina owners who do not want specific listings of the services they offer.

The Coastal Initiative Blue Ribbon Commission voted unanimously Tuesday to go ahead with plans to complete a coastal waterway map by Sept. 30 after hearing what could and could not be realistically included on it.

"There is resistance from many of the marina owners," Keith Rodney of the Alexandria Drafting Co. told the commission. He said his company ran into similar problems with an extensive map of the Chesapeake Bay area.

More than 500 marinas dot the coast, but not all want to be listed as offering specific services.

"That's not surprising, actually," said Charles Parrish, special assistant to DOT Secretary James Harrington. "If I'm just a small marina owner, I may not want to commit myself to always being there on a certain day at a certain time."

But Harrington said there were similar reservations about information put on state highway maps.

Election Plan

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Forsyth County's method of electing commissioners will be restructured under a last-minute agreement reached by county officials and the local NAACP.

The agreement, which sets up five nominating districts for county commissioner, settles a lawsuit filed against the county in 1986 by the local chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The NAACP claimed that the county's at-large election method diluted black voting strength and made it more difficult for blacks to be elected to the Board of Commissioners.

No Contest

RALEIGH (AP) — An administrator with the N.C. Department of Transportation has pleaded no contest to a charge of soliciting an undercover police officer.

Willis E. "Billy" Henderson, 60, of Cary, a general services manager with DOT, entered the plea in Wake County District Court May 12. Judgment was suspended indefinitely, and Judge George R. Greene ordered Henderson to pay $40 in court costs.

Betsy Harrison, a DOT spokeswoman, said Henderson had been on sick leave from DOT since April 4, three days following his arrest on the misdemeanor charge.

Suspension

CHERRY POINT, N.C. (AP) — The commandant of the Marine Corps has canceled the suspension of a Cherry Point employee over published charges of discrimination at the base.

Allegations of discrimination against blacks within the base's civilian workforce were reported in an April article in The Sun Journal of New Bern.

The commandant's action entitles Kenneth L. Boyette to receive back pay not covered by an earlier federal order to stay the suspension. But officials said the investigation of the case is continuing.

"And I can assure you, anybody that gets left off the state highway map will let you know about it before the next spring," he said.

"There is a tremendous demand for this product," Rodney said. "With this, someone can say, 'I'm out here and I'm low on gas and where do I get gas?'"

The panel tentatively agreed to put 50 to 100 of the estimated 500 marinas in the guide, adding more as information became available. Members then spent much of the morning session deciding what to do for an encore.

The Coastal Initiative program is described as an effort to "make our coastal havens more attractive to economic opportunities while establishing stronger environmental safeguards in our most sensitive and productive waters." Among the program goals is promotion of marine waterways and stimulation of waterfront investment.

As part of the waterway improvement program, the commission received results from a survey of boaters. Their top complaints were about the lack of sufficient navigational aids, inadequate channel marking, inadequate boater education and difficulty getting charts for tributaries and remote areas.

Council OKs Collider Funds

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — The state will spend another $90,000 to pursue the superconducting super collider, although some members of the Council of State resisted the move, calling the effort futile.

"We might as well be realistic. We've got about the same chance of getting this project as the snowball in the proverbial bad place," Attorney General Lacy Thornburg said Tuesday.

The 10-member council voted 7-3 to approve Gov. Jim Martin's request for the emergency funds after a lively debate that reflected growing skepticism in some circles about the wisdom of North Carolina's quest for the collider project.

"A lot of people think you're pouring money down a rat hole here and I'm one of them," said Thornburg, who led the opposition.

He and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan said politics likely would be the decisive factor in the federal government's selection of a host state. Jordan noted that Texas, represented by powerful House Speaker Jim Wright, was one of seven states in the running for the $4.4 billion scientific project.

Wright "may decide it needs to go to Texas," Jordan said.

Jordan, a Democrat running against Republican Martin in the gubernatorial race, voted for the allocation despite expressing reservations about tapping the state's contingency and emergency fund for the purpose.

First Land Purchased For Dam

GREENSBORO (AP) — After 20 years of planning and controversy, the first three parcels of land have been purchased for the Randleman Dam project.

"I'm not sure it's history," Thomas Osborne, chairman of the Piedmont Triad Regional Water Authority, said Tuesday. "But it's a nice feeling to get our first parcel of property."

The three parcels purchased Tuesday include 90 acres in Level Cross Township and about an acre in Guilford County. All three landowners have agreed to the purchase and the price.

The Randleman Lake and Dam project will turn 6,000 acres of land in Randolph and Guilford counties into a 21st century drinking water source for the Triad, project supporters say.

But the federal government withdrew from the project last year, after 20 years of studies, saying flood control and recreation would not justify the federal money the lake would take.

When the federal government withdrew, local governments formed the water authority to handle the project.

Bill Dunn, director of the state's super collider project, said the $90,000 was needed to cover unforeseen expenses this month — a crucial time as the federal government evaluates seven states' proposals for hosting the $4.4 billion scientific operation.

The U.S. Department of Energy had planned to announce its decision next month but delayed it until November or December, Dunn said. It also has requested additional information from the states.

Department officials are scheduled to make their last visit to the North Carolina site this month, and the state doesn't have enough money to hire experts to make presentations to them, Dunn said. "It would be a very severe blow ... at an unfortunate time" if the $90,000 were disallowed, he said.

Also, Martin said, a commission has been established to study possible alignments of the 53-mile underground tunnel in which subatomic particles would be smashed together for experiments into the fundamental nature of matter.

The proposal to locate the collider in Durham, Person and Granville counties has drawn bitter opposition from some local residents worried they might lose their homes. The commission is searching for the alignment that would minimize the number of affected households, Martin said.

Jordan and Secretary of State Thad Eure questioned whether the proposed expenditure qualified as an emergency. Eure said a request for a quick appropriation could be forwarded to the Legislature, currently in session.

But Eure later had a change of heart, acknowledging that rejection of the proposed allocation could be interpreted as an indication North Carolina's enthusiasm for the project had waned.

"Everything that we do and say here today will be known by that site selection agency," Eure said. "If we turn this request down now it will be some indication to them there's division in North Carolina."

North Carolina already has spent more than $1.5 million recruiting the collider, and Martin has requested another $340,000 for fiscal 1988-89. He also has proposed issuing $15 million in bonds to purchase land for the project if North Carolina is selected.

State Treasurer Harlan Boyles endorsed the emergency expenditure as "protecting our investment," while Superintendent of Public Instruction Craig Phillips said approval would be a vote of confidence for the state's recruitment team.

Voting for the $90,000 were Martin,

Jordan, Boyles, Phillips, Eure, Insurance Commissioner Jim Long and State Auditor Ed Renfrow. Joining Thornburg in opposition were Labor Commissioner John Brooks and Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham.

Advocates Say Arts Paying Way

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer

Money spent on the arts is a solid investment that generates both economic activity and jobs, an advocate for increased spending on cultural activities says.

"It's important for the business community as well as political leaders to recognize the contribution art is making to the state's economy," said Majorie Salzman, executive director of Arts Advocates of North Carolina. "The arts are holding their own as a viable investment."

Arts Advocates is updating a 1984 study that showed cultural activities pumped nearly $300 million a year into the state's economy.

The 1984 N.C. Arts Economic Impact Study, sponsored by the Arts Advocates, revealed that some 11,400-arts related jobs were created and arts event attendance that year topped 10.7 million. It also found the state's cultural attractions drew more tourists that year than outdoor activities or sports.

Ms. Salzman said information already collected on 1987 figures indicates the impact should be significantly higher.

"Since 1984, the number of non-profit arts organizations has increased by 300 from 952," she said in a recent interview from her Raleigh office. "Also, the amount of state funds is larger and that always has been a catalyst for support from the private sector."

In 1984, state funding for the arts was about $3 million. Last year it was about $4.5 million and Ms. Salzman's group is trying to get that increased again this year.

In 1984, the bulk of the art groups' revenues, or 42 percent, came from individuals, while government support was 28 percent. A quarter of the support came from foundations, sales of goods, investments and other sources, while corporate contributions accounted for five percent, according to the study.

The study was funded by the Governor's Business Council on the Arts and Humanities. The data was collected by the N.C. Arts Council and the final results were compiled and analyzed by an independent marketing research firm hired by the Arts Advocates group.

The study revealed that for every dollar the state invests in the arts, the local community contributes $8. Each arts dollar generates $2.31 in economic activity.

State lawmakers realized that when they appropriated $20 million last year for the construction and renovation of performing arts centers in the state's five largest metropolitan areas, Ms. Salzman said.

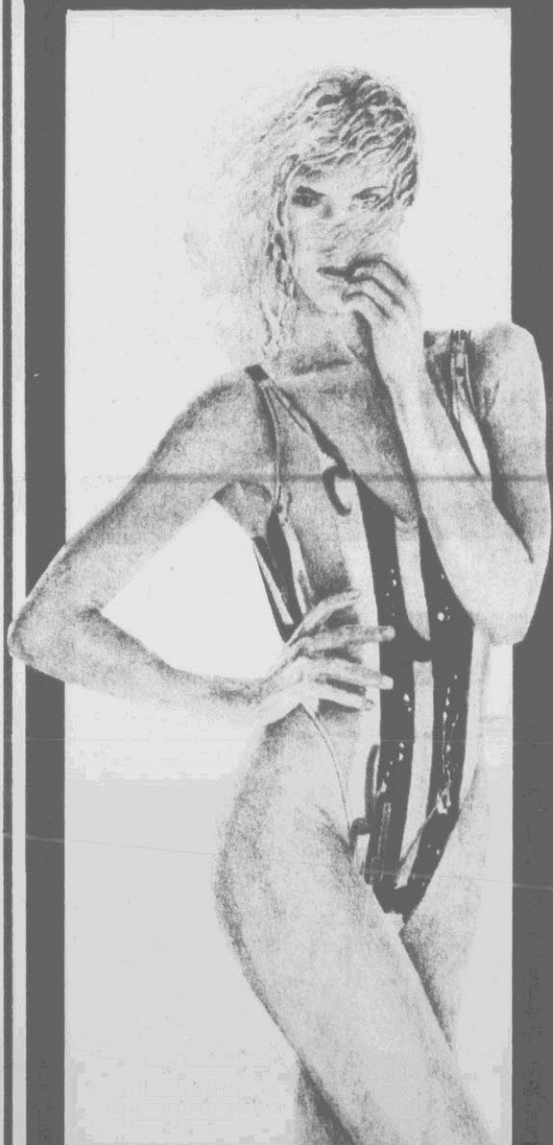

Cultural events and institutions play a major role when a company from another state or country is considering relocating or expanding to an area, she said.

"Chambers of Commerce and industrial recruiters realize that North Carolina has a good quality of life," she said.

Ms. Salzman said the N.C. General Assembly has traditionally been a supporter of the arts.

"In the 1940s, we were the first state in the country to finance a symphony that travels around the state," she said. North Carolina also was a forerunner in the concept of distributing some state funding for arts-related activities on a per-capita basis, she added.

GOP Pushing Umbrella Plan For Environmental Units

By MARTHA WAGGONER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Legislative leaders say politics is behind a bill to implement Gov. Jim Martin's consolidation of environmental agencies, but the bill's sponsors say the proposal could lose steam if delayed until 1989.

The bill should not be held until next year because a coalition of business, environmentalists and state officials who support it may fall apart, Sen Don Kincaid, R-Caldwell, said at a news conference Tuesday.

"If we wait another six months, a lot of that support is going to drift away," he said.

The bill was considered in 1980 and put off, he said. "In 1988 we're in the same position we were in 1980. ... Experience has taught us not to put things off."

Rep. Vernon Abernethy, R-Gaston, said at the news conference he had decided not to introduce a joint resolution to make his bill eligible for consideration this year, which would take a two-thirds vote for approval.

Instead, he said he hoped the bill would be approved by the Senate, where it has been referred to the Appropriations Committee, and sent to the House.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey, D-Madison, said Monday the bill did not concern an appropriation and therefore could not be considered in the short session without an enabling resolution.

"If it's so important, they should have had an enabling resolution," Ramsey said in an interview Tuesday. "... It's a political maneuver."

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan said he was "a little suspicious of their (the Martin administration's) motives when they spent three years opposing" consolidation and now want it passed in the short session.

The 277-page bill would place most of the environmental agencies — now scattered among eight departments, divisions and agencies — into a new Department of Environment and Health. It also would dismantle the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

"People in the state are concerned today," Kincaid said. "It's a major issue ... I believe we have the time in this General Assembly to do it."

Neither Abernethy nor Kincaid said they believed reaction to the bill in the Legislature was politically motivated. Kincaid had asked that the bill be sent first to the Human Resources Committee.

But Jordan refused, saying there was not enough time to consider the bill there and in the Appropriations Committee, Kincaid said.

"My bill's been introduced and going through the regular channels," Kincaid said. "Right now I have faith in the Senate ..."

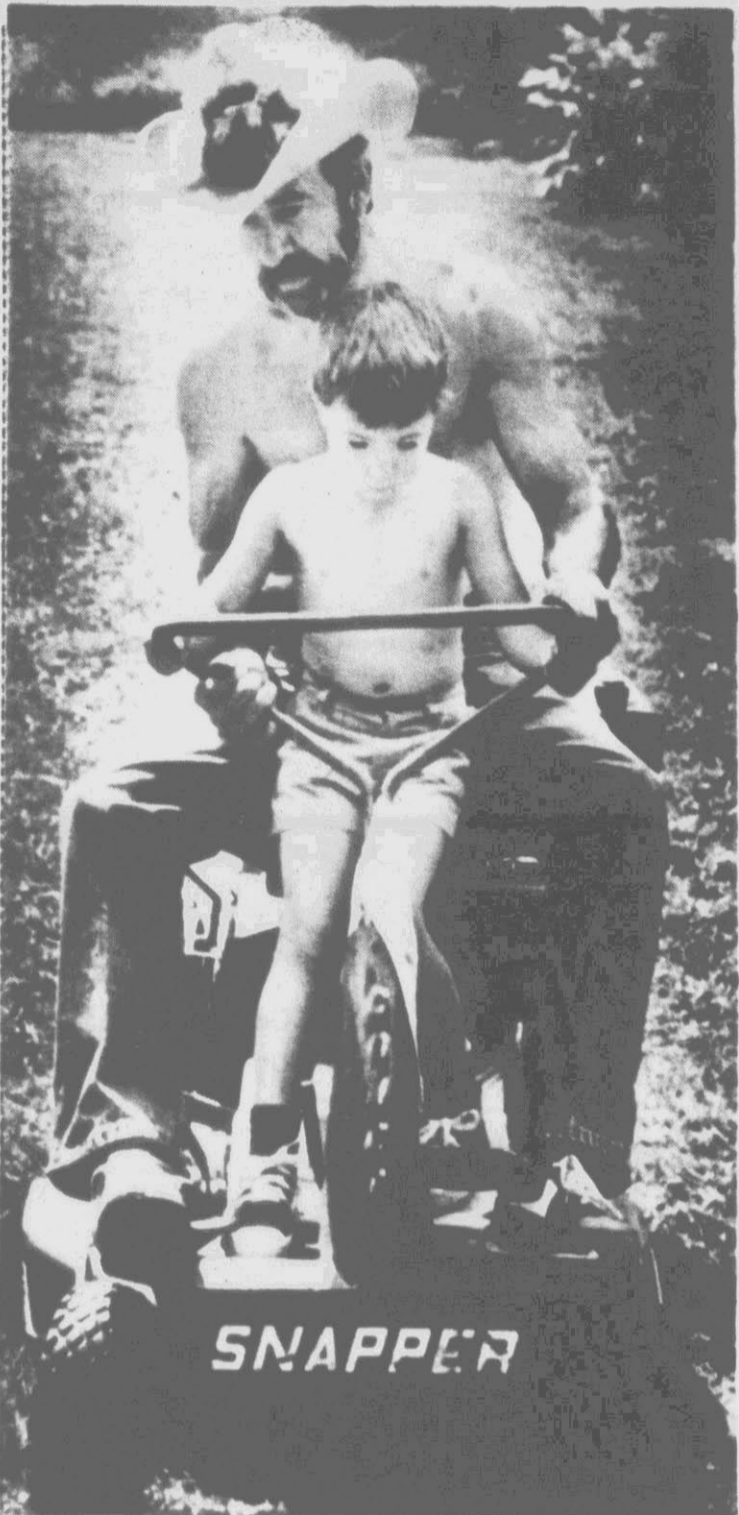

But he said he may change his mind if the bill remains bottled up in committee.

And Abernethy said he hoped the House would consider the bill if it came out of the Senate, perhaps with an appropriations amendment attached to it. The appropriations amendment would make the bill eligible for consideration this year without a two-thirds vote of the House.

Martin Says He'll Cut Budget Plan

RALEIGH (AP) — After insisting for weeks his proposed budget was balanced, Gov. Jim Martin now says he'll recommend cuts of up to $60 million in the $239.9 million worth of building projects he requested for fiscal 1988-89.

But the Republican governor and legislative leaders remained at odds Tuesday over the extent to which Martin's budget must be scaled back in the wake of unexpectedly low tax collections in May.

The disagreement likely will surface on the campaign trail as Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, a Democrat challenging Martin's re-election, accuses him of "Washington-style deficit spending."

Martin said his blueprint for adding $558.7 million to the budget next year, released May 5, was based on the best revenue estimates then available. Democrats who said he had requested too much money could not have known about the impending drop in collections, he said.

"I know they're preening and happy that it turned out this way because they can claim that they ... knew what was going to happen before it happened, but that's just gamesmanship, one-upmanship," Martin said.

Both sides agree the 1987-88 fiscal year will end June 30 with a revenue surplus that can be added to next year's budget, but disagree over the amount.

Their differences are rooted in the way they view the tax collection slump in May, which will make the year's surplus $44 million to $60 million less than anticipated, according to Revenue Secretary Helen Powers.

Martin described the May shortfall as an aberration unlikely to repeat itself next year.

Thus, he said, there is no reason to cut proposed spending on "recurring" items such as salaries, which are permanent fixtures in the budget. The only money that should be cut is for capital projects such as state building construction and renovation, which require one-year appropriations, he said.

Legislators sharply disagreed, saying tax collection shortfalls in one year likely will occur the next. They repeated their contention that Martin's budget will be $137 million in the red without major reductions in his proposed spending for ongoing government programs.

"He's too optimistic, absolutely," said Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Aaron Plyler, D-Union.

Court Allows Suit Over Vehicle Titles

By MARTHA WAGGONER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The state Court of Appeals has reinstated a lawsuit filed by a Kenly car dealership that claims the state Department of Transportation negligently issued title certificates for stolen cars.

A panel of the Appeals Court ruled Tuesday that Aycock Auto Auction may pursue its suit against DOT for reimbursement of funds Aycock has to pay to another dealer which bought vehicles from Aycock.

The ruling reversed a decision by Superior Court Judge Donald Stephens, who had thrown out Aycock's complaint against DOT.

Aycock's suit made DOT a third-party defendant in a suit that Columbus County Auto Auction Inc. brought against Aycock. The appeals court said the state can be a third-party defendant, even though most claims against the state normally go to the Industrial Commission.

Aycock also had sued the Division of Motor Vehicles, but the appeals court said that claim could be pursued only through the Industrial Commission. The court also upheld Stephens' dismissal of a related claim Aycock filed against DMV Commissioner Bill Hiatt.

Columbus County Auto Auction sued Aycock on Sept. 26, 1986, seeking $180,000 plus interest for 11 automobiles alleged to have been purchased by Columbus from Aycock in 1985.

Columbus alleged that the cars were sold like this:

— Silk Hope Automotive Inc. purchased wrecked and salvaged vehicles from out of state, removed vehicle identification plates and placed them on a stolen vehicle of the same make and model.

— The cars and out-of-state salvage titles were then presented to the state DMV inspector as a repaired vehicle. The inspector then authorized a North Carolina certificate of title for each vehicle.

— The vehicles were then sold by Silk Hope to Hood's Used Cars, which sold them through Aycock at various times in 1985.

— Columbus bought the cars at auction sales and sold some of them to Columbus to Thompson Cadillac-Oldsmobile Inc. of Raleigh. The vehicles were later discovered to be stolen and seized from Thompson.

Thompson, in a separate suit, won a judgement of $175,450 against Columbus. But the judgement was not paid and Thompson subsequently joined Columbus in its suit against Aycock.

Aycock says in its suit that the state should have to compensate it for any amount it is forced to pay Columbus. Aycock said the state would be liable based on negligence for issuing title certificates for stolen cars.

Legislator Says Baking Firm Objected To Edgecombe Park

TARBORO, N.C. (AP) — A national baking company that is building a multimillion-dollar plant in Edgecombe County helped doom the county's proposal for a waste management park, county officials say.

Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, who helped develop the plan to handle low-level radioactive and hazardous wastes at a 3,200-acre site, said he thought opposition by Kitchens of Sara Lee was a key reason the commissioners voted Monday to drop the proposal.

"It's my opinion that it was a critical piece of information," Mavretic said.

Mavretic said he did not think the proposed facilities would have threatened Sara Lee's new bakery near Tarboro, which is scheduled to begin production next year.

"I do not believe that any single industry in a county should have veto power over that county's industrial recruitment," he said.

"We were certainly aware that the issue was controversial and our concern was how consumers would perceive it, would they understand it, would consumers across America be informed about safety precautions or would they be alarmed about the association between the Sara Lee brand name and the particular dump site," Peg Ransom, manager of public relations for Sara Lee, said in an interview.

She said she could not say what company officials would have done if the county had gone ahead with its proposal. "We just hoped it wouldn't get that far," she said.

The county commissioners dropped the proposal just three weeks after unveiling it as a safe way to boost county revenues. County officials said the proposal to host a disposal place for low-level radioactive waste and a hazardous-waste treatment plant had failed to gain adequate support from the public or from the business community.

Tom P. Bardin Jr., chairman of the Edgecombe commissioners, said

Sara Lee officials expressed concern about the waste project during a meeting Friday. "They never said they would move from the county, not to me," he said.

Bardin said he thought the Sara Lee position was one of many reasons the commissioners decided to terminate consideration of the project. He said the business community as a whole may not have opposed the project, but many did not support it.

Edgecombe officials had first sought the bakery company's position on hazardous waste facilities last year when state officials were considering Edgecombe with other counties as possible spots for a disposal facility for low-level radioactive waste or hazardous waste. The county was dropped from a list of potential state sites before Mavretic and the commissioners developed the proposal to volunteer as a host county.

Ralph Mallory, a Sara Lee engineer, said in a letter to the director of the Edgecombe County Development Corp. last August that the county did not want the facilities "near our property or even in the same county."

Wright Critic Says He Also Used Aide To Help Write His Own Book

By DAVID PACE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the most vocal critics of House Speaker Jim Wright's ethics has acknowledged that, like Wright, he once had a congressional aide work on a book published under his name.

But Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., said Tuesday that the work his aide did on his book, "Window of Opportunity," before its publication in 1984 was much different from the work Wright's aide did on the speaker's book, "Reflections of a Public Man."

Gingrich, who asked the House ethics committee last month to investigate Wright's personal financial dealings, said he's "fairly confident" he asked Frank Gregorsky, his administrative assistant in 1984, to review the manuscript of his book because "he's a first class writer."

"That is totally appropriate and to the extent that (a staff member) filled that role, it would not be inappropriate," Gingrich said in a telephone interview Tuesday.

Matthew Cossolotto, a former aide to Wright, said in interviews this week that he spent 150 to 200 hours while on Wright's congressional staff working on the speaker's book.

House records show that Cossolotto also was paid $2,078 from official congressional accounts to cover his expenses during a 1984 trip to Texas when he oversaw the final editing of the book.

Wright has refused to comment on the matter since Sunday, when he defended Cossolotto's assignment during a telephone interview with the Washington Post. He canceled his regular daily news briefing Tuesday and denied an Associated Press request for an interview on the subject.

Gingrich's request for a House ethics committee investigation of Wright came several weeks before Cossolotto's role in the production of Wright's book became known publicly.

But Gingrich said Tuesday he thinks the ethics panel also should examine whether Wright violated House rules by assigning Cossolotto to work on the book.

"The idea of using 200 hours of having it be your only job assignment, of charging over $2,000 for a trip which a staffer says was only for the purpose of going to Fort Worth in order to write the book, it seems to me that's clearly wrong," he said.

Gingrich said Gregorsky's only role in his own book was reviewing the manuscript before it was published. He said he wrote the first draft himself and the final draft was done with help from his wife and a professional writer who was paid by the publisher.

Because of questions about such use of congressional staffers, Gingrich said he is preparing a letter to his colleagues suggesting the creation of a bipartisan panel of retired congressmen to re-examine the basic ethics rules of the House.

In a related development, The Washington Times reported today that Wright transferred $97,700 in contributions to his 1976 campaign to repay personal debts but failed to report it in annual House financial disclosure statements.

Shuttle Launch Rehearsal Passes With Flying Colors

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A successful launch rehearsal that ended with a mock emergency landing will make it easier to conduct the real thing when space shuttle flights resume, NASA officials say.

The launch team here, flight controllers in Houston and rescue, weather, safety and other support crews on Tuesday practiced the final three hours of a countdown, followed by a shuttle "liftoff" on a flight cut short minutes later when computers simulated the failure of two main engines.

Three astronauts, "flying" the mission in a Houston simulator, reacted swiftly to the planned failure and guided themselves through a tricky set of maneuvers to a safe "landing" on a runway just 3 miles from the Kennedy Space Center launch pad.

The exercise evaluated hundreds of management, procedural, hardware and software changes that are the result of the explosion that destroyed Challenger and its seven-member crew on Jan. 28, 1986. Most of the changes are aimed at improved safety.

It was the most comprehensive rehearsal yet for the first post-Challenger flight, scheduled for late August.

Under the new management structure, astronaut Bob Crippen, deputy director of shuttle launch operations, will make the final decision on whether to launch a shuttle.

He and his main adviser, launch director Bob Sieck, had ample opportunity to exercise their judgments Tuesday as intentional electrical, communications and other problems were built into the countdown to give controllers experience in resolving them.

Crippen, who flew on four shuttle missions, said the test showed some areas of problem-solving that needed to be improved, but "all in all, it was an excellent exercise."

In Houston, Lee Briscoe, a flight director who helped coordinate the simulation, said it "increased the confidence" of the management team.

"We exercised the whole team," he said. "Communications were good, the data flow was good. I was pleased with the way it went."

Many milestones still must be passed before the shuttle Discovery makes the next flight. The spaceship is undergoing final checks here after an extensive overhaul of several systems and is scheduled to be mated next week with its two solid fuel booster rockets and external fuel tank.

Transfer to the launch pad is planned June 27, with a test-firing of the three main engines scheduled there on July 19.

Art Wins Out

WAREHAM, Mass. (AP) — A sculptor's plan to perch a statue of a bare-breasted Indian woman on a bluff sparked a debate over art, sexism and whether bronze can be voluptuous.

Art won. Though four members of the Board of Selectmen approved the placement of the statue high atop the hills overlooking Onset Bay, the fifth opposed it last week.

Selectman Joseph Grassia said he had concerns about the statue because it will be in a public place and visible to children who will see that "she is fairly large-breasted."

"Some say art, others will say nudity," said Grassia. "I wanted to see if it's an attack on the female."

The sculptor, A. Clayton E. Fuller, said the statue represents the traditional Wampanoag Indian maiden in what would have been her traditional summer costume — a triangular loincloth that drapes over one thigh.

Wampanoags once called the Onset area near Wareham their summer home, Fuller told selectmen. Their numbers eventually dwindled because of famine, he said.

"I believe the piece is sufficiently discreet," said Fuller. "She does have on her necklace, incidentally."

Most other town officials agreed.

"If someone refers to that as sex, something is wrong," said Selectman Donald L. Carlson of Fuller's creation. "There are more explicit photos to be found in National Geographic."

Selectwoman Sarah D. Woods said that although she received a letter from a woman who was opposed to the statue's bare breasts, she likes the sculpture and found it "more handsomely beautiful than pretty."

N.Y. Witness Takes Sanctuary In Church

NEW YORK (AP) — A black woman who has refused to testify about her daughter's alleged abduction and rape by six whites took sanctuary in a church this morning to avoid arrest for contempt for court, an adviser said.

Glenda Brawley, her two attorneys and two bodyguards entered the Ebenezer Baptist Church in Queens about 6 a.m., according to the Rev. Al Sharpton, who also was with Mrs. Brawley.

In taking sanctuary, the 33-year-old Mrs. Brawley was seeking "relief from a higher authority," one of her lawyers, Alton Maddox Jr., said Tuesday.

Authorities issued a statewide warrant for Mrs. Brawley, saying she was "fair game" for arrest.

The group, Sharpton said, intended to remain in the church "till we're arrested or until the warrant is vacated." He said that they were prepared to stay for days and that supporters would bring in food and supplies.

Mrs. Brawley's daughter, Tawana, was found Nov. 28, four days after she had disappeared.

The 16-year-old was lying dazed in a plastic bag in a road in Wappingers Falls, about 10 miles south of Poughkeepsie. Her hair had been shorn, animal excrement had been smeared on her body and racial epithets had been scrawled on her torso.

She said she'd been attacked by six white men and alleged that one flashed a police-like badge.

Neither she nor her family has cooperated with investigators or made public more details.

Court Orders Philadelphia To Free Inmates

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A federal court ordered the city to release hundreds of inmates from its overcrowded prisons today, a move that a prosecutor says will embolden criminals with the knowledge they face little chance of going to jail.

The 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Ap peals on Tuesday ordered the city to comply with a ruling restricting the prison population to 3,750 inmates, 300 less than the number held as of Saturday.

The order forces authorities to release the additional inmates on bail the city must provide. As long as a threat to exceed the cap exists, authorities will be allowed to imprison only the most serious criminals.

"You are going to have whole classes of people who can't be put in prison," said Sarah Vandenbraak, who represented the district attorney's office in opposing the cap.

"Ninety-nine percent of the drug dealers we prosecute won't get in prison — not even the major drug dealers. If you deal a ton of marijuana today, you will be on the streets tomorrow; it's not enough to put you in prison."

Teens List Top Worries As College Costs, AIDS, Future

By EILEEN PUTMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's teen-agers worry most about paying for college, contracting AIDS and making the wrong decisions about their future, according to a survey released today.

High school juniors and seniors generally think their lives are more complex than their parents' lives, the data showed.

They are keenly aware that drugs, alcohol, AIDS and sexual abuse are issues that affect them and their friends, although they are less likely to admit that they are personally in-involved with those problems, according to the study by the American Home Economics Association.

Many teens tend to be pessimistic about social problems and the country's future. For example, 58 percent do not think there will be an end to racial discrimination in the United States in their lifetimes; 42 percent think there will be nuclear war in their lifetimes; and 62 percent think their lives will be harder than those of their parents.

The study, funded by Chesebrough-Pond's Inc. and Lever Brothers Co., surveyed 510 high school juniors and seniors nationwide between March 25 and April 5. Quotas were established so that a sample of 300 teens selected at random reflected Census Bureau breakdowns of student population by sex, race and ethnicity. A supplemental group of 210 included only blacks and Hispanics.

The average age of the respondents was 17, and the survey had a margin of error of plus or minus 5 percentage points.

The teen-agers were asked how concerned they were about 32 issues. Topics that drew responses of "extremely" or "very" were considered top concerns. They tended to be questions of money, the future or AIDS.

Being able to pay for college was a top concern for 39 percent of the teens surveyed, as was the fear of contracting AIDS. Thirty-four percent listed making the wrong decisions about the future and not being able to change them as a top concern.

Fear that the United States "is steadily going down hill" greatly concerned 33 percent; and the prospects of a nationwide depression worried 30 percent. Not earning enough money to enjoy the better things in life was a top concern for 29 percent.

While few teens — 11 percent — actually know someone who has contracted acquired immune deficiency syndrome, 30 percent say they have changed their sex lives because of the fear of getting the deadly disease.

Fifty-eight percent of those surveyed have a friend who has thought of or committed suicide, and 53 percent said some of their friends were ruining their lives because of drugs. Forty-six percent report alcohol abuse among their friends, and 32 percent claim to have a friend who has been sexually abused.

But there was a reluctance to relate those problems to themselves. Only 8 percent or less admitted that help teen-agers prepare for family and adult responsibilities. The American Home Economics Association represents more than 27,000 home economists, including educators, dietitians and others.

Pepper Backs Long-Term Home Health Care Package

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A costly new long-term home health care plan arrives on the House floor against the backdrop of a coming election and a series of polls indicating public desire for such a program.

The home care bill is championed by Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., who said Tuesday he had been trying for 50 years to help fill "a total vacuum" in the area of long-term care.

But two spurned committee chairmen whose panels never got a chance to review the bill spearheaded an effort to block its consideration on the House floor today.

"We should not allow the rules of the House to be manipulated to satisfy the popular issue of the moment," Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., said Tuesday in a letter to his colleagues.

Pepper's plan would expand Medicare to include long-term home care benefits for anyone of any age who is chronically ill or can't perform tasks of daily living.

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., the Senate sponsor of the Pepper bill, said 30 percent of the people in nursing homes would not have to be there if home services were available.

"We're going to have an explosion in the demand for long-term care and we ought to face up to it now," he said at a news conference Tuesday with Pepper and others.

The Congressional Budget Office estimates the home care program would cost nearly $28 billion over five years. Backers say it would be paid for by imposing the Medicare payroll tax on income above $45,000, which is currently exempt, but opponents are skeptical, saying the cost could balloon out of control.

Ordinarily, the House Ways and Means Committee and the Energy and Commerce Committee would have worked on the Pepper bill before it reached the floor.

But under a special arrangement between Pepper and House Speaker Jim Wright, Pepper agreed not to offer his home care plan as an amendment to an already controversial catastrophic health bill dealing with the cost of acute illness. In return, Wright agreed to let him have a floor vote on his bill.

The move allowed the bill to bypass Rostenkowski's committee and the Energy and Commerce panel led by Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich.

Republican and Democratic opponents, though lauding the intent of Pepper's bill, said they had problems with the way it got to the House floor, its cost, its lack of a nursing home component, and the absence of agencies capable of administering the plan.

"History has demonstrated that such a big program cannot be put in place quickly without encouraging inept or fraudulent management," Rostenkowski said. He also said CBO estimates show the program would face an annual deficit within five years.

Eagle Scout Award

Ron Sessoms Jr., 18, of Greenville received the Eagle Scout Award from the Boy Scouts of America during a recent ceremony at First Presbyterian Church.

A member of St. Peter's Troop No. 826, Sessoms developed a nature observation trail at River Park North for his Eagle service project.

A past Leadership Corp member, Sessoms is a graduating senior at J.H. Rose High School and will attend East Carolina University in the fall.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Sessoms Sr. of Greenville.

RON SESSOMS JR.

also serving on the Pinecrest staff for two years. She has been a worship leader in the Washington area for five years.

The meeting will be preceded by a 9 a.m. coffee and doughnuts time. A nursery is available.

REAL Receives Funds

REAL Crisis Intervention Inc. of Greenville has received a $500 award from the Procter and Gamble Paper Products Co.

The award was made possible through the company's volunteer support program which encourages community service by its employees. The company often assists agencies and organizations in which its employees are voluntarily involved, a spokesman said.

Mary Smith, REAL Crisis Intervention executive director, said the grant will be used in the Dial-A-Teen program which has recently expanded to include a 24-hour teen hotline, in addition to its teen employment service.

Australia Studies

Stephanie Gardner of Greenville will spend her junior year of high school in Australia.

The daughter of Charles and Ellen Gardner of 306 Old London Road, Miss Gardner will leave June 28 for Geelong, Victoria, Australia, where she will join her classmates at an all-girls' Catholic school in beginning the second semester of the school year. She will then have summer vacation and another semester there during her 10-month stay with the family of Hugh and Doris Campbell, a couple she has met only on the telephone.

Miss Gardner was matched with her host family and community through the Educational Foundation for Foreign Study. She will begin her senior year at Farmville Central High School when she returns.

Society Board Post

Mrs. William Holston Taft Jr. of Greenville has been elected one of the 13 new members of the board of trustees of the North Carolina Symphony Society.

The seven men and six women will begin their three-year terms July 1. They were elected at the annual meeting of the North Carolina Symphony Society on May 24.

The board is the policy-making and major fund-raising body responsible for the well-being of the 68-member professional orchestra that performs all across North Carolina. The board is responsible for a budget of $4.8 million in 1987-88 and a projected $5.2 million budget for 1988-89.

Fellowship Speaker

Laura Wilson Nicholls of Washington, N.C., will speak to the Women's Aglow Fellowship Saturday at 9:30 a.m. at Evangelistic Tabernacle, U.S. 264 bypass.

Mrs. Nicholls has been the pianist and leader of the Fruits of the Spirit singing ministry group and has directed Fishers of Men, a group from the First Baptist Church of Chocowinity. She has studied at Oral Roberts University and at Pinecrest Bible Training Center in New York.

be selected to participate in the institute.

In other action Tuesday, authority commissioners unanimously approved the appropriation of $1,415 per month to lease for five years a new computer system.

According to Noland, leasing the system rather than purchasing offers several advantages including using modernization funds to install and properly train employees, spreading the cost over a five-year period, and allowing the authority to upgrade the system should problems with the system arise.

Noland said the selected Wang system and DDI software leasing package will provide the housing authority with an up-to-date system in the most expedient manner.

"This system will totally replace the current system," Noland said. He estimates the new system should be in place in approximately six to eight weeks.

Also approved Tuesday was a pay adjustment to several grades of housing authority employees. Noland said the positions needed pay adjustment to permit flexibility in new hiring and to bring those positions in line with the city pay scale adopted recently.

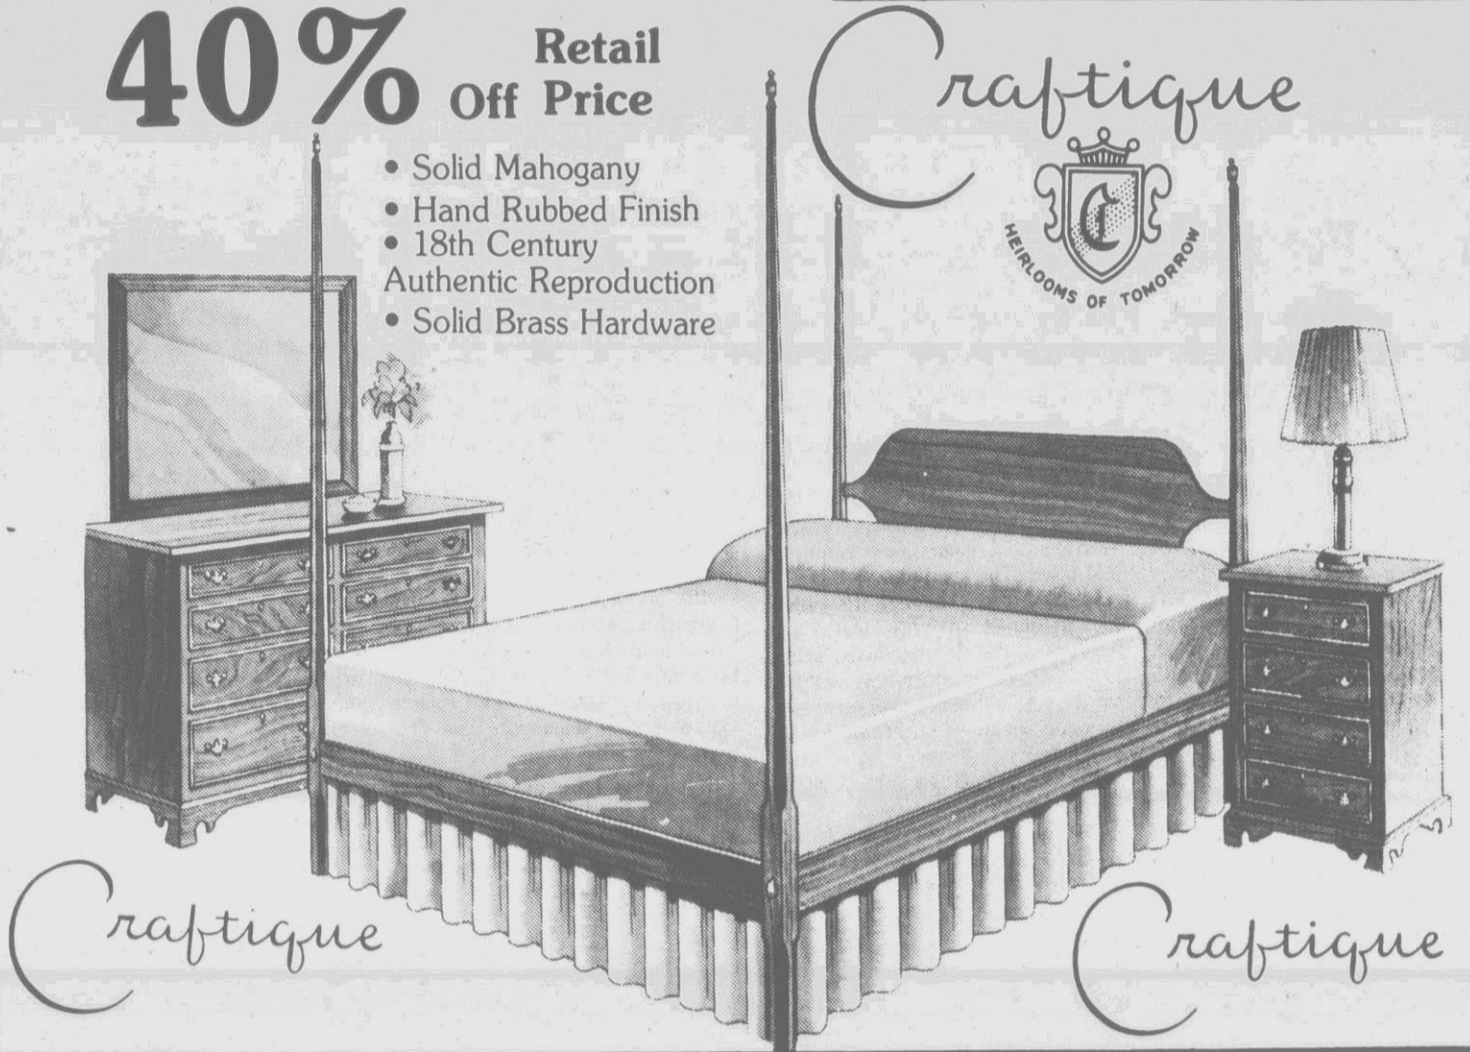

Positions being raised one-half step were laborers with six months' service and occupancy worker, while positions being raised a full step were laborers with four years' experience, resident affairs aid, Section-8 assistant, and housing inspector.

Meanwhile, the authority commissioners Tuesday approved the sale of a Hustler lawnmower to the Kinston Housing Authority for $1,284, and unanimously approved a revision to the budget appropriating $2,500 for the purchase of a copier, $16,500 for 66 refrigerators and $22,620 for 78 stoves to be used in the Newtown project.

Salmonellosis Often Is Unreported

Last year there were 125 to 140 confirmed cases of Salmonellosis reported to the North Carolina Department of Health each month. Specialists feel that there are probably 10 times that number of cases of Salmonellosis since most people assume that they have the flu and don't visit the doctor. Half of the reported cases were the result of eating contaminated food at home. Dr. Nadine Tope, Extension foods and nutrition specialist at North Carolina State University, answers questions about this common disease:

What is this I hear about salmonella in eggs? I thought that food poisoning caused by salmonella was a problem with chickens?

There has been a lot in the news recently about salmonella and chicken, but any food can contain salmonella. Over the past 15 years major outbreaks of salmonellosis have been traced back to smoked fish, powdered milk, poultry, chocolate, hamburger, eggs, cheddar cheese, roast beef, unpasteurized milk and pasteurized milk. Under normal circumstances, salmonella bacteria most frequently contaminated foods of animal origin: beef, pork, poultry, eggs, raw milk, fish and seafood.

There have been outbreaks of salmonella food poisoning in the Northeast caused when Grade A raw and undercooked eggs were eaten. Is there a new strain of salmonella bacteria infecting eggs?

The bacteria that has caused the problem, salmonella enteritidis, isn't new, but it may have found a new way to infect the eggs. Research is being done to see if the strain has infected the hens' ovaries and was transmitted to the egg yolks. I think this is very unlikely, but researchers are checking out every possibility. Past outbreaks have been caused by improper procedures used by the producer, the food processor or at home. I think we will find that the problem is being caused at one of these levels.

What are the symptoms of food poisoning caused by salmonella (Salmonellosis)?

Salmonellosis develops 12 to 48 hours after a food contaminated with live salmonella organisms are eaten. The person generally develops abdominal pain or cramps, nausea, diarrhea and sometimes vomiting and fever. The symptoms generally last 1 to 7 days. Although it's called food poisoning, very few deaths are associated with salmonellosis. Salmonellosis can be extremely serious for the very old or very young people or those people with chronic health problems.

Are the eggs being sold in North Carolina safe?

One of the eggs sold at supermarkets in North Carolina come from producers or processors in the northeast, where the problem has occurred.

I've heard that the U.S. Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta have issued new guidelines on eggs. What are they?

They are recommending that people avoid eating raw eggs completely and that they cook other eggs thoroughly. If any of the bacteria is present, it is possible to kill it by cooking. Some scientists suggest cooking hard-boiled eggs for at least 7 minutes and cooking fried eggs on both sides at least 3 minutes. This is a bit extreme. I've test-cooked eggs and found that the yolk of an over-easy egg reaches a temperature of 130 degrees, which would not be high enough to kill the bacteria if present. My soft scrambled eggs, which were tender by not runny, were a safe 160 degrees. Hard-cooked eggs should be perfectly safe.

Is it safe to give my family eggs?

Although it's probably not necessary, you may want to avoid giving soft-boiled eggs to a baby, a very old person or a person with serious health problems. You should also avoid eating uncooked eggs in dishes like homemade ice cream, steak tartar and Caesar salad dressing. There is no problem with thoroughly cooked eggs as long as you handle them properly.

If you have more questions about food and nutrition, call my co-worker, Addie R. Gore, at 830-6364. You may also request a free copy of preventing salmonellosis.

Loaning Money To Children Doesn't Promote Self-Reliance

By Mary Jo Kochakian
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

When kids want a bike, a new doll or some change because their allowance has run out, they come to their parents. And more than a few come back when they want to buy a house, a new car, or need a few dollars to tide them over until the next paycheck.

"Failure to launch" is the cause of many such requests, says Bernard Poduska of the Family Financial Counseling Clinic at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah.

The failure occurs when parents don't teach their children self-reliance, he says. "It's more predominant than in the past," he says. "We have a lot of divorcees occurring, and single parents with children returning home. Parents are asked to sign for utility deposits. Children rack up hundreds of dollars in bills parents are held responsible for. Parents are continuing to bear the financial burden of children who are adults. And parents' finances usually are not prepared to sustain more than one household."

But in the view of Cheryl Merser, author of "Grown-Ups," a book subtitled "A Generation in Search of Adulthood" (G.P. Putnam's Sons, $17.95), it is not an anomaly when young adults turn to their parents for financial help.

In the past, parents have parceled out parts of their land for children to live on and work, she notes, and of course there are inheritances. In the past, people didn't live as long, she says, and many did not see their children reach adolescence. A loan from parents today, she says, "might on some level be a part of a legacy."

The parents of baby boomers themselves had a helping hand in many cases, she says. Many got loans for their education and their first homes through the G.I. Bill.

Many parents choose to make gifts of money to their children, and this can make sense, Poduska says. For example, aging parents may want to transfer resources to children, rather than have them wait for an inheritance.

But financial sense clearly becomes confused with emotion when parents consider loaning money to their children.

Often, young people assume privileges relating to parents' money "that are not warranted by interpersonal relationships," says Poduska, a professor of family science at Brigham Young. In his work at the financial counseling clinic, of which he soon will become director, he's witnessed the misery that money mismanagement can bring to families. He's also given workshops for family therapists on family money management.

A child may assume entitlement "merely by birthright, rather than a meaningful, caring relationship." If a loan is made, the young person may expect that failure to live up to the agreement will simply be overlooked. If parents enter into loans with such children, they can expect to be exploited, Poduska says.

Parents need to use judgment when approached by children for loans and not rely on emotion in making decisions, he says.

All loans should be conducted "on a financial basis, with contracts and agreements signed," he says. "They should never be by word of mouth." Assessments should be made regarding the child's circumstances and character and the amount of risk involved.

Interest should be charged, even if it is nominal, he says. It may all sound very harsh, but "part of this is to aid the parents in the launching process," he says.

Adhering to a payment schedule can give the young person a sense of confidence and enhance self-reliance, he says, which should lead to less dependence in the future.

For those who think restricting money is tantamount to restricting love for their children, Poduska advises: "Loving is not just giving. Loving is judicious giving and withholding."

Wave Crochet Stitch Makes Versatile Purse

A clever tab closing adds a unique touch to this versatile, chic purse you can make with the amazingly easy wave crochet stitch - a simple combination of double and single crochet. Worked with polyester craft cord and a size J crochet hook, it measures approximately 12 by 10 inches.

The back section and flap are one piece while the front, section, closure and handles (in your choice of standard or shoulder length) are worked separately. If you are hooked on crochet, you will love this quick and easy project.

To obtain directions for making the Wave Crochet Purse, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-060588 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, the Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. C-060588 by sending a check or money order for $12.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, instruction leaflet and craft cord in off-white.

The wave stitch is truly a beginner-easy crochet stitch, particularly when worked in straight pieces, as is the case in today's featured project. With craft cord, the wave stitch creates a firm fabric, but with sports- or worsted-weight yarns, the fabric can be soft, ideal for afghans, pillows or garments.

Try a sample swatch, starting with a chain of stitches on any multiple of 10 plus 6. I suggest that you start by chaining 36 so you will have a swatch large enough to show the pattern well.

For Row 1, which is the right side, single crochet in second chain from hook and in each of the next 4 chains. Then work as follows: Step 1, make 1 double crochet in each of the next 5 chains; Step 2, make 1 single crochet in each of the next 5 chains. Repeat Steps 1 and 2 across row. You will end with 5 single crochets in the last 5 chains. Chain 1 and turn.

It is important that from now on you work all stitches through the BACK LOOP ONLY of each stitch. The top of every crochet stitch consists of two loops or strands. Normally you pass the hook under both, but when instructed to work in back loop, you skip over the front loop and pass the hook only under the one behind it.

Row 2: Step 1, single crochet over

Pat's Pointers Pat Trexler

each of the next 5 single crochets; Step 2, double crochet over each of the next 5 double crochets. Repeat Steps 1 and 2 across to last 5 stitches and repeat Step 1 once more. Chain 2 and turn. (The chain-2 counts as the first double crochet of the next row.)

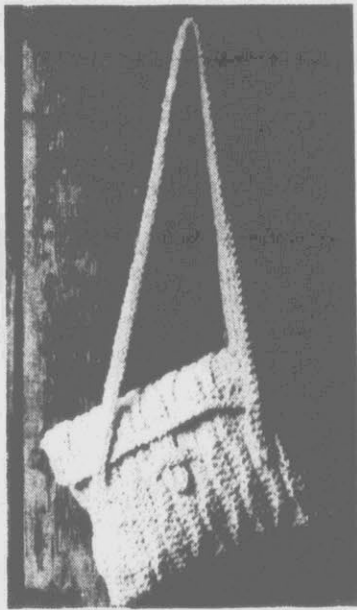

Row 3: Step 1, work 1 double crochet over each double crochet. Step 2, work 1 single crochet over each single crochet. Repeat Steps 1 and 2 across to last 5 stitches and repeat Step 1 once more. Chain 1 and turn.

Row 5: Step 1, work 1 single crochet over double crochet; Step 2, work 1 double crochet over a single crochet. Repeat Steps 1 and 2 across to last 5 stitches and repeat Step 1 once more. Chain 1 and turn.

Row 6: Work same as for Row 2. Repeat Rows 3 through 6 for desired length for pattern stitch.

Interesting effects can be had by alternating the colors as you crochet, making a striped wave. This would best be done by changing colors at each repeat of Row 6.

Have fun experimenting with this stitch. You're sure to find many uses for it.

Masseys Married In Elizabeth City

MRS. MASSEY

ELIZABETH CITY — Dawn Eaves Gaither and Shawn West Massey, both of Greenville, were united in marriage Sunday at 3 p.m. in the First Baptist Church. Dr. Brightie White officiated during the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mary Alice Eaves of Shelby and Roddey P. Eaves of Raleigh. The parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Wayne W. Massey Jr. of Greenville.

The bride was escorted by her father. She wore a ballet-length gown of candlelight organza over matte taffeta. The fitted bodice featured a scoop neckline embellished by a flowing scalloped flounce of schiffli lace. Her grandmother's antique cameo adorned the neckline. The ballet-length skirt fell from a natural waistline and a scalloped border of schiffli embroidery encircled the hemline of the skirt. The bride chose a candlelight picture brimmed hat accented with an organza bow. She also wore a pair of antique candlelight tatted gloves.

The bride was attended by Lesa Broadhead of Kent, Ohio. Honorary bridesmaids were Lisa Ballance of Greenville and Sandy Rudzinske of Washington.

The bridegroom's father was his best man. Ushers were Wright Massey of Atlanta, brother of the bridegroom, and Bill Henry Weatherly and Ralph Griffin, both of Elizabeth City.

Music was provided by organist Rodney Trueblood and soloist Lisa Batts. A special music selection was "The Lord's Prayer".

A reception was held at the River Wind III Health and Racquet Club. A rehearsal dinner, given by the parents of the bridegroom and Dr. and Mrs. William M. Spence, was held at the Vickie Villa Restaurant.

The bride and bridegroom are both employed by Belk-Tyler of Greenville. After a wedding cruise to the Bahamas, the couple will make their home in Greenville.

She's Black And Blue From Tony's Affection

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: "Tony" and I have been married for nine years. We are both in our early 50s, and it's the second marriage for both of us.

We get along great, but Tony is too affectionate. I'm affectionate, too, but when he shows affection, he gets so rough he leaves black and blue marks all over me.

He starts hugging and squeezing me as soon as he gets home from work, and doesn't let up until bedtime. He wants me near him all the time, so he can playfully pinch or punch me.

He weighs twice as much as me, and I can't defend myself. I have begged him to be more gentle, but he says he loves me so much he can't help himself. He says he was never this way with his first wife. — BLACK AND BLUE IN PITTSBURGH

DEAR BLACK AND BLUE: A pinch is a pinch and a punch is still a punch, and both are physical abuse. Buy yourself some protective padding — the kind worn by football and hockey players (I'm serious). Greet Tony at the door in full uniform and don't remove it — even at bedtime — until he agrees to get some professional counseling and learns how to show his love less sadistically.

DEAR ABBY: When our son was diagnosed as being "in an acute stage of schizophrenia" and was admitted into the special-care unit of a psychiatric hospital, many friends and relatives asked me how he was doing, what they could do to help, etc. I thanked them for asking, gave them a brief but honest answer concerning his condition, and added, "You could send him a get-well card."

When our insurance coverage ended at the private hospital, he took those get-well cards to the state psychiatric hospital with him; when he was released from there, he carried that little bundle of cards home to keep near him.

He is functioning normally now, and he's never forgotten the thoughtfulness of those people who sent him cards when he was ill. — CLEVELAND COMMUNICATOR

DEAR COMMUNICATOR: You communicated a valuable message to pass along to my readers: Those who are hospitalized for any kind of illness desperately need to know that friends and relatives wish them well. It takes so little effort to send a card or a note, and the joy it can bring is incalculable.

DEAR ABBY: I am a talented knitter who has knitted many beautiful sweaters for myself and others — as gifts. I spend a great deal of time creating these original pieces of "art" — which is what they are. (No two are alike.) Therefore, I find it extremely irritating when someone compliments me on my sweaters saying, "It looks just as nice as anything you could buy in a store!" Or, worse yet, "It doesn't look homemade."

I know these people mean well, but please set them straight, Abby. — OAK PARK KNITTER

DEAR KNITTER: Although machine-made sweaters may be flawless, one that is hand-knit is far more valuable. One cannot place a price tag on an original piece of art. When an artist gives his or her time and talent, the recipient receives the ultimate compliment.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened higher today as investors drew encouragement from a firmer bond market.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 8.35 points to 2,062.94 in the first half hour of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 2 to 1 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 627 up, 296 down and 478 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 59.07 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Analysts said firming bond prices were the overriding factor that supported stocks on the opening. Recent pressure on bonds, stemming largely from inflation worries that have increased with a recent rise in commodity prices, has taken its toll on stock prices.

Among actively traded blue chip issues, Exxon was up 1/4 at 44 1/2; Union Carbide was unchanged at 19 3/8; BankAmerica rose 1/4 to 10 7/8; and General Electric was up 1/4 at 42 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .44 to 150.12. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .54 at 303.15.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 20.62 points to 2,054.59.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 4 to 3 in nationwide trading, with 657 up, 877 down and 464 unchanged. Big Board volume came to 168.71 million, against 152.46 million in the previous session.

Martin Denies He Made Park Offer To Pitt

"That's the way we understood it ... it was put to us as an offer," Gaskins said.

Martin, however, said "I had given a final answer" to Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, who asked Martin about a joint Pitt-Edgecombe venture. "I just wanted to tell them (the Pitt board) what my answer was ... just wanted to apprise the board of what I had said and wanted to know if my assumption was right."

Edgecombe County commissioners three weeks ago publicly proposed that a 3,000-acre waste management park be created in Edgecombe, to include the state's low-level radioactive waste disposal site and a comprehensive hazardous waste treatment plant.

Edgecombe officials said millions of dollars in state incentives would come to the county if the radioactive and hazardous waste facilities were located there.

On Monday the Edgecombe board voted to withdraw the proposal, citing negative public reaction to the plan. But first, Gaskins said, the county sought Pitt's support as co-hosts of the project.

Talking about Martin's call Monday, Gaskins said the senator "told me he was requested by the Edgecombe folks to see if the board had any interest in something like that (a joint venture)." And Pitt's commissioners, Gaskins said, "of course ... refused to even listen to any such thing."

Martin said this morning that Mavretic had approached him to see if Pitt's major opposition to the Edgecombe proposal was based on "money ... whether or not Pitt County would share in any state incentives."

"I told him (Mavretic) emphatically that 98 or 99 percent of the people I had discussed it (the waste park plan) with knew it would be dangerous to the health, environment and economy and that we would become a wasteland. Their only interest was to not have any facility such as these placed in eastern North Carolina because of what it would do to the environment."

And, Martin said, "I told the Representative (Mavretic) that there was no interest in any money, that they did not want it. I told him emphatically that 98 to 99 percent want no part of it."

"I had already spoken for Pitt County" and called Gaskins, Martin said, "to tell him what I had told the representative. I asked him (Gaskins), 'Is that the right assumption?'" He said, "You are absolutely right. I will discuss it with the board and let you know whether or not it's correct."

Martin said Gaskins called back "and said, 'We have discussed it. You are absolutely right. We don't want any part of it. I'm glad you told him (Mavretic) so. I think it's an insult for him to suggest it."

According to Martin, "I just called him (Gaskins) to keep him apprised of what I knew of ... wanted me and the Pitt County Board of Commissioners to be on the same side. I had given him (Mavretic) my answer and was just apprising the board of what I had said. And (Gaskins) said, 'You are absolutely right. We don't want any part of any agreement with them.'"

"I stated that two or three times," Martin said.

"I think this has been blown all out of proportion," Martin suggested. "Nobody's offered anything through me. Nobody made anybody any offer. I had given a final answer and wanted them to be apprised of it and in agreement with it. There were no offers made. They were just wondering out loud," he said.

Toll Rises

MOSCOW (AP) — Tass said today that 80 people were killed in last weekend's train explosion in the Soviet Union's Volga Valley. The news agency said initial results of a probe showed human error was not to blame for the blast.

Three boxcars packed with industrial explosives blew up Saturday, injuring 229 people. The accident occurred in Arzamas, an industrial city about 240 miles east of Moscow.

Earlier media reports said 73 people had died but warned more deaths could be expected.

A government commission is investigating the accident, and Tass said preliminary results indicated the blast was caused by recent high temperatures.

"The cargo was handled and carried in keeping with instructions and the diesel locomotive was in good repair," the official Soviet news agency said.

It did not elaborate about the cause. Soviet media has reported the explosives were intended for geologists and miners.

Tass also reported repair work was being carried out by 2,000 construction workers sent to the site and that housing was being provided for the 600 Soviets left homeless by the accident.

The explosion flattened houses several city blocks around the blast site and shattered windows as far as two miles away.

Indicted

ASHEVILLE (AP) — The mother of a 5-year-old Asheville girl killed in a house fire May 22 has been indicted on a manslaughter charge.

The Buncombe County grand jury charged Tausha Luciatia Swepson with being responsible for the death of Christie Swepson, who died when fire raced through the Swepson home. The grand jury also charged Phillip Demond Groce with manslaughter in connection with the girl's death.

Swepson's other daughter, 7-year-old Monique Lordman, was treated for burns on her feet, legs and back. She has been placed in the temporary custody of Buncombe County Department of Social Services.

Investigators said the children were alone in the home when the fire was reported.

House Fire

RAMSEUR, N.C. (AP) — A 22-year-old woman died in a boarding-house fire Tuesday that was so hot it melted telephone lines 30 feet from the structure, knocking out service to 2,500 customers, authorities said.

Ramseur Police Chief Gurney Moore said the woman, who had moved to Ramseur from Florida about seven months ago, was coaxed, but would not jump from a second-floor of the building. He would not release the name of the victim until her relatives had been notified.

"The heat was great enough that it literally melted one span of cable in front of the house," said George Gusler, district manager for Central Telephone Company.

Simpson Hearing Set

The village of Simpson will have a public hearing June 20 in the Phillip Education Building to conclude its 1986 Community Development Block Grant Program. Citizens may attend and make comments on the project's performance.

Town Board Meeting

The town of Grimesland will have its regular board meeting Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Town Hall on Pitt Street.

Pitt Vote Recount Under Way

precinct No. 8 produced no changes from the original tally, but Garrett lost one vote in the recount of Greenville precinct No. 5, which he originally won 131 to 72.

On the ballot in question, a voter had drawn a mark through the box next to Dupree's name and filled in the box beside Garrett's name. "The precinct officials originally counted it as a vote for Garrett, but the Board of Elections judged it to be an over-vote," said Mrs. Hardee.

Counting the outcasts — the ballots the machine could not count electronically — will require judgment from the board, Mrs. Hardee said, and if there is a change in the outcome of the election, it will likely come from these ballots.

The elections board also has evidence that two voters in Greenville precinct No. 7 that were eligible to vote in the Garrett-Dupree runoff were not allowed to vote because of a mistake by precinct workers. If those two votes will affect the outcome of the race after the recount, either candidate may file a complaint.

The board met with Garrett and Dupree Monday to discuss procedures for the recount, and they all agreed to conduct the recount one precinct at a time, even though it could take more than one day.

The board also granted Dupree's request to have the ballots hand-counted. Mrs. Hardee said hand-counting is the most unreliable method because of the high likelihood of human error, but the board members said they thought it would be accurate because just 2,340 votes were cast in the contest, a relatively small number.

Garrett's attorney, election law specialist David F. Kirby, also expressed concern that officials may arrive at different totals with each count today.

"The machines have had their chance," said board member Henry

H. "Andy" Andrews. "We're going to hand-count because we feel it's more accurate."

In eight of the precincts, voters used paper ballots and machines tallied the voted electronically.

In Greenville precincts No. 1 and 7, experimental electronic machines were used, which require to voters press buttons beside candidates' names.

Inside Move

Pistons Ease Past Lakers

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The Detroit Pistons handled the playoff pressure like some lightweight nuisance they could simply flick off their shoulders. They handled the defending NBA champions the same way.

Finalists for the first time in their 31 seasons in Detroit, the Pistons were remarkably poised Tuesday night. They shot well, stifled Los Angeles' shooters and upset the Lakers 105-93 in the opener of the best-of-seven title battle.

Now, perhaps, the team that eliminated Michael Jordan and the Chicago Bulls 4-1 and Larry Bird and the Boston Celtics 4-2 will get the respect it feels it deserves.

"A lot of guys are upset that most of the media has us going down in four or five," said Detroit's Adrian Dantley. "We're fired up."

If the Pistons win Thursday night's second game, they'll become the first team in NBA finals history to win the first two games on the road. The three games after that will be in Pontiac, Mich., starting Sunday.

If the Lakers come back and win the series, they will become the first repeat champions since Boston in 1969.

Detroit's underdog status against the Lakers, who are in the finals for the seventh time in nine seasons, kept the Pistons loose.

"As far as we knew, we were supposed to get swept, so there was no pressure," Detroit guard Vinnie Johnson said.

"We're very relaxed," Dantley said. "I talked to a lot of guys. Everybody's sleeping better. When we played Boston, we couldn't sleep."

"The Lakers are favorites anyway so what have we got to lose?"

Detroit wasn't going to lose Tuesday night, not the way Dantley and Johnson were shooting and the way they and their teammates were keeping the Lakers from scoring.

Dantley made 14 of 16 shots and led all scorers with 34 points. Johnson came off the bench to make seven of 11 shots and score 16 points. The Pistons sank 57.5 percent of their field goal attempts, which helped them prevent Los Angeles from using its running game.

Johnson's 17-foot jumper with 10:56 left in the second quarter gave the Pistons a 24-23 lead. They never trailed after that, led 57-40 at halftime and stayed on top by at least seven points the rest of the way.

The Lakers were led by Magic Johnson with 28 points and Byron Scott with 25. But Kareem Abdul-Jabbar made just four of 13 shots and Michael Cooper missed all seven of his. The team's shooting percentage was 39.8.

"I wouldn't like to think so," Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley said when asked if his team was emotionally down for the game. "We are playing for the world championship at home. We came ready."

"The shots wouldn't drop and that got the guys frustrated after 10 or 12 minutes," he added. "It probably was one of the worst games we've ever played in the playoffs here."

The Lakers, who lost a home playoff opener for the first time in 20 series, made just eight of 22 shots in the first quarter and seven of 22 in the second. They were open for many of the misses.

"I think we had guys flying at them" on those apparently open shots, Vinnie Johnson said. "We were taking away their first and second options and they had to settle for their third option."

The Pistons have been doing that throughout the playoffs.

For the ninth time in their last 10 games, they held an opponent below 100 points. They also stopped at 20 playoff games the Lakers' streak of scoring at least 100 points. That tied an NBA record the Lakers set from 1959 through 1965.

"They played good defense," Scott said. "We have to be more patient and take the shots that are there and not force the issue."

"We made mistakes that I've never seen us make," Magic Johnson said, "not in a championship game."

One came in the final second of the first half.

Bill Laimbeer had hit a 3-pointer with three seconds to go. Isiah Thomas then stole Abdul-Jabbar's inbounds pass and hit a 3-pointer one second before intermission.

That was "the big key to the whole game," Magic Johnson said.

"Bill's shot was one of our options going downcourt," said Thomas, who had 19 points. "When he made it, I knew there were only two or three seconds left and Kareem would look to make the long pass."

"I just stayed as close as I could to Byron and was lucky to be there when the ball was inbounded."

A layup by Dantley, who had 12 points in the fourth quarter, gave Detroit its biggest lead, 94-75 with 5:31 to play. But the Lakers went on a 16-4 run to cut it to 98-91 with 1:23 remaining. Magic Johnson led the surge with eight points, including two 3-pointers.

Then the Lakers were forced to foul and could come no closer.

They couldn't handle Dantley, who repeatedly beat defenders on drives to the basket. They didn't double team him as much as the Celtics did in the Eastern Conference semifinal.

Chain Reaction

Martin Makes Peace With The Umpires

NEW YORK (AP) — Billy Martin made an apology, an appearance on the field and a promise. There is a truce in his battle with the umpires.

After Monday night's game, the New York Yankees manager said he was going to sue the umpires and planned to argue again even if they ejected him. He said this was war.

On Tuesday, Commissioner Peter Ueberroth stepped forward as a peace negotiator and ordered a cease fire.

Ueberroth said he told the parties to "stop it and stop it now," and asked both sides to apologize.

In a statement released by the Yankees prior to their 4-3 victory over Boston on Tuesday night, Martin said he was sorry for an incident in Oakland on May 30 in which he kicked and threw dirt on umpire Dale Scott. He received a three-game suspension and a $1,000 fine.

"I want to apologize for the incident that took place in Oakland," Martin said. "The old Billy is going to be the old Billy, with one exception," Martin said. "I will never kick dirt again."

Shortly after, the umpires' association released a statement saying, "... due to Billy Martin's apology and his promise of good behavior, Billy will be permitted to go on the playing field to question umpires."

"Very significant in this decision was the commitment of the Commissioner and (AL President) Bobby Brown to closely monitor the situation during the remainder of the season."

It didn't take long for Billy to get back in action at Yankee Stadium.

Martin made four uneventful trips Tuesday night. He took out the lineup card and then went to the mound in the top of the first to talk with pitcher Charles Hudson, getting a standing ovation.

The Other Side Of The Spotlight

Rose High School owes a great deal of its baseball success this season to a pair of unsung heroes.

You've heard all about the big names that have produced the towering home runs and dazzling defensive plays for the Rampants this season. Those names were seen and heard all season as Rose rolled to a 26-0 record and a berth in the state 4A championship, which begins Thursday in Charlotte against Harding High School.

But have you heard about reserve Wes Jackson and part-time third baseman Jeff Mahoney?

According to Rose head coach Ronald Vincent, the two have contributed just as much to the squad as any player on the team this season.

"Their leadership has been crucial," Vincent said. "They never get down and they always keep the guys up — they are always positive."

Both Jackson and Mahoney agree they'd rather be a part of the Rose team and not play as much, than be on an average team where they could play more.

"It's a lot more fun winning," Mahoney said. "I definitely had rather be on a team like this that is winning."

"If it takes the players that are out on the field to win, then I don't want to be out there," Jackson said. "Sure, everyone would like to start, but on a team like this where guys are out there who can make a career out of the game it isn't always possible. I'm just out here to have fun — and win. Even though I don't play a lot, after the game is over and we've won I feel like I played and contributed."

Jackson and Mahoney have adjusted to their roles as reserves and have developed their own theories about how they are supposed to carry out their duties.

"I think if you can get somebody psyched up to play well when they are down it always helps out," Jackson said. "What you may lack in talent can easily be made up if your heart is in the game."

"There is a lot more to winning games than just the fielding of ground balls," Mahoney said. "I feel that my job is to work hard and not let the players get slack in practice or in games."

By being an inspirational reserve, Jackson has filled in some during the season as the designated first base coach in the Rampants' time of need. The coaching duties began about four or five games ago, according to Jackson, who said he takes over the duties only when the team is behind or in a close game.

"If we need some runs, I'll go out there and coach at first," Jackson said. "I try to guarantee at least two runs every time I do it. I figure if I can get us two runs in the championship every time I coach at first we'll be all right."

"He seems to be our good luck charm," Vincent said of Jackson. "When he goes out there he seems to make things happen."

Mahoney feels that being a part of the Rose team means being a part of a winning team, and as long as the victories continue piling up he doesn't mind splitting time at third base in the state championship series.

"All we want to do is win the state championship," Mahoney said. "Our goal all season was to be undefeated and win the championship and if that doesn't happen we are going to be disappointed. RV (Vincent) said all year that we

4-A State Finals To Highlight Styles

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

Rose High and Charlotte Harding will showcase two distinct styles of play in the State 4A Championship baseball series which begins Thursday in Charlotte.

The two teams offer a contrast, both in pitching and in hitting.

Rose, 26-0 on the year, is an aggressive offensive club that swings free at the plate. The top five hitters are all hitting over .400 and Tim Moore, Dave Daniels, Axel Smith and Tom Moye are capable of consistently hitting the long ball. Smith has 11 homers to lead the team while Daniels has nine.

But despite Rose's impressive numbers, Rampant coach Ronald Vincent isn't looking for an offensive show.

"In this kind of game (though), it is going to be low scoring," he said. "We are going to have to make things happen."

"It's down to who is playing well for two or three days. We're concerned basically about executing our game, playing defense like we can and doing things with the bats like we're supposed to. We can't control what Harding does, but we can control what we do."

Harding, 17-10, is on the opposite side of the baseball spectrum from the Rampants. The Rams' leading hitter is sophomore designated hitter Ray Durham (.390 3 home runs).

"In the four years I've been here, we haven't had anybody power it out of there," said Harding coach Buddy Rego. "We just put the ball in play and hope people make a mistake. We play a lot of finesse ball. We can't slug it out with people. We just have to hope we get a good pitching performance and they have an off night."

In reality, though, the Rams are not to be taken lightly. Batting averages and records are of little importance now and both Rego and Vincent know that.

"We're just going to go up there with the attitude that we are going to swing the bat," Rego said. "The main thing is to play between the lines."

For Vincent and the Rampants, getting to the finals was the culmination of a season-long objective.

"The goal at the beginning of the year is to be where we are now and the record was secondary," Vincent said. "From what I've heard of Harding, they are playing as good as anybody in the state."

The Rams rely primarily on two pitchers. Their ace is senior Scott Tate, (10-2, 1.87 era) and their second starter is junior Tracy Helms (7-4, 3.26 era).

Harding peaked late in the season, a pattern Rego has tried to establish in his four years at Harding.

"We don't try to peak early," he said. "We spend a lot of time with the kids working on fundamentals," Rego said. "We have to take the kids we have and do a lot of teaching."

"We always try to play our best baseball by the conference tournament. Our regular season is our practice for the tournament."

Rego said if word of mouth is any indication, his team could be in a lot of trouble against the undefeated 26-0 Rampants.

"I've heard about all this power they've got," Rego said. "I'll just

Bailes Gained Experience In Indians' Win

Flying Leap

Chicago White Sox shortstop Mike Woodard makes an acrobatic leap over Minnesota's Tom Herr and quickly relays the ball to first base to complete a fifth-inning double play. The White Sox went on to win. (AP Laserphoto)

By HILLEL ITALIE
Associated Press Writer
After the seventh inning, Cleveland's Scott Bailes had lost a no-hitter and gained some experience.

The left-hander had held the Toronto Blue Jays hitless through six innings Tuesday night and was ahead 3-0. He retired the first two batters in the seventh but second baseman Julio Franco dropped George Bell's bloop to shallow right for a two-base error. Bailes hit Fred McGriff with a pitch and gave up an RBI single to Kelly Gruber. A two-run single by Cecil Fielder tied the game.

"I feel I've improved a lot this year," said Bailes, who ended up with a three-hitter as the Indians came back to win 5-3 on Cory Snyder's ninth-inning homer. "Last year, if that would've happened in the seventh inning, I might not have lasted the inning, let alone the game. I've settled down emotionally."

Elsewhere in the American League, it was New York 4, Boston 3; Baltimore 4, Detroit 3; Chicago 10, Minnesota 8; Kansas City 6, Oakland 0; California 1, Texas 0, and Seattle 5, Milwaukee 4.

Bailes, 6-4, walked one and struck out two.

"I was throwing three or four different pitches and throwing them on any count," Bailes said. "(Catcher) Andy Allanson just kept putting down numbers and I just kept throwing strikes."

Pinch-hitter Carmen Castillo led off the ninth with an infield single against David Wells, 3-3, and Snyder followed with his 12th home run to left.

"I was happy to be able to do it for Scotty," Snyder said. "When our pitchers go out there and try that hard, I want to do whatever it takes to win, whether it's hitting homers, making a diving catch or running hard to first."

Gruber, however, saw nothing dramatic about spoiling Bailes' no-hitter.

"I didn't know I broke it up, as hard as it was to believe," Gruber said. "I don't think he had the greatest stuff."

Yankees 4, Red Sox 3

Rickey Henderson hit a run-scoring single and started a sensational double play in the eighth inning as New York beat Boston, hours after baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth ended the feud between Yankees manager Billy Martin and umpires.

Martin, who stayed off the field Monday night under threat of instant ejection, left the dugout four times without incident.

Charles Hudson, 5-2, overcame a three-run inning in the top of the first and Cecilio Guante finished for his sixth save.

Henderson's infield single capped a four-run second inning against Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, 5-5. Jack Clark and Mike Pagliarulo singled and Jose Cruz's one-out forceout scored a run. After Rafael Santana singled, Joel Skinner hit a two-run double, Boyd balked and Henderson beat out a single.

In the Boston eighth, Mike Greenwell hit a soft liner to left field, and Henderson came charging on an angle toward left-center. He backpedaled the ball at his shoetops, regained his balance and unleashed a strong throw on the fly to Skinner, who tagged out Ellis Burks, who had opened with a triple.

Orioles 4, Tigers 3

Eddie Murray, who had a tie-breaking double in the eighth inning, drove in three runs, as Baltimore and won its first series against an East Division opponent since April 10-12, 1987.

With one out in the eighth, Billy Ripken doubled against Frank Tanana, 8-4, and Cal Ripken walked. Murray then doubled down the left-field line. Doug Sisk, 3-2, pitched two scoreless innings.

Murray had tied the score with a homer in the bottom of the sixth, his fifth of the year and his first as a right-handed hitter since Sept. 12 of last season.

Murray's RBI single in the first gave the Orioles a 1-0 lead. Alan Trammell, who had two singles and a home run, scored in the second on the first of Chet Lemon's three singles.

Mickey Tettleton's third homer gave Baltimore a 2-1 lead in the fourth but Trammell put Detroit ahead in the sixth with a two-run homer, his eighth.

White Sox 10, Twins 8

Harold Baines' homer and Mike Woodard's two-run triple highlighted a seven-run seventh inning as Chicago defeated Minnesota.

Baines hit the first pitch off reliever Keith Atherton, 4-3, for his seventh homer of the year. Dan Pasqua, who had homered earlier, hit an RBI single to put Chicago ahead 5-4. Ozzie Guillen had a two-run single, Woodard tripled in two more and Gary Redus hit a sacrifice fly as the White Sox enjoyed their biggest inning of the season.

Ricky Horton, 4-6, the second of three Chicago pitchers, worked 1 2/3 innings. Bobby Thigpen relieved after Tommy Herr's RBI double with one out in the top of the ninth. Thigpen allowed a two-run single to Kirby Puckett but finished up for his 10th save.

Royals 6, Athletics 0

Ted Power scattered nine hits and George Brett and Danny Tartabull homered on consecutive pitches as Kansas City shut out Oakland for the second consecutive game.

The Royals won their sixth straight game while Oakland lost its third straight, matching its longest losing streak of the season. It was the first time since June 28-29, 1980 that the Athletics had been shut out consecutively. It was the first time since Aug. 6-7, 1983 that the Royals pitched

Power, 3-1, walked five and struck out four in pitching his second consecutive shutout. He blanked Seattle on four hits in his previous start.

After Willie Wilson singled, Brett hit his 11th homer off Curt Young, 4-3, in the bottom of the first inning. On Young's next delivery, Tartabull connected for his 12th homer.

Angels 1, Rangers 0

Chuck Finley and Bryan Harvey combined on a five-hitter and Brian Downing homered in the sixth inning as California shut out Texas.

Finley, 4-7, allowed five hits, struck out seven and walked none before being relieved by Harvey with two outs in the top of the ninth and runners on first and third. Harvey struck out pinch-hitter Pete O'Brien to earn his fourth save.

Charlie Hough, 5-7, allowed five hits, walked three and struck out nine but gave up Downing's ninth homer of the season. Downing entered the game with only two hits in his last 22 at-bats.

Finley allowed no hits until Mike Stanley's two-out single in the fifth. Geno Petralli followed with a ground rule double, but Finley retired Jerry Browne on a groundout to end the inning.

Mariners 5, Brewers 4

Mickey Brantley drew a walk with the bases loaded and two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning as Seattle defeated Milwaukee for its second consecutive victory under Manager Jim Snyder.

Snyder replaced Dick Williams, who was fired Monday.

Pinch-hitter Dave Valle led off the ninth against Paul Mirabella, 0-1, with a single. After Harold Reynolds walked, Mark Clear relieved and walked Henry Cotto to load the bases. Brantley then walked on four pitches.

Reliever Mike Moore, 3-6, was the winner despite allowing a two-run homer to Joey Meyer, his fourth, in the top of the ninth.

Maddux Finally Wins Over Pirates

By The Associated Press
Greg Maddux' luck, and pitching, are getting better all the time.

Maddux became the National League's first 10-game winner as the Chicago Cubs defeated Pittsburgh 8-5 Tuesday night at Three Rivers Stadium.

Maddux, 10-3, allowed eight hits in 7 1/3 innings to beat the Pirates for the first time in his career after five defeats. Maddux and New York's Dwight Gooden had been tied for the NL lead in victories with nine.

Maddux, who was 6-14 with a 5.61 earned run average last season, tied Greg Swindell of Cleveland for the major league lead in victories.

"They hit me has hard as they always have, but some of the balls they hit tonight were caught," said the 22-year-old Maddux. "I was lucky. After last year, I just wanted to be a .500 pitcher this year."

He's been a lot better than that and has more than a third of the Cubs' 28 victories.

"He wasn't as sharp tonight as he has been, but when you look up the kid is 10-3," Cubs manager Don Zimmer said. "I don't know where we'd be without him. He got out of some tough jams early and hung in there."

Elsewhere, it was Philadelphia 10, Montreal 5; St. Louis 4, New York 1; San Diego 6, Cincinnati 2; Houston 5, Los Angeles 2, and San Francisco 5, Atlanta 0.

The Cubs took a 2-0 lead in the second inning against Brian Fisher, 4-3, on run-scoring doubles by Jody Davis and Shawon Dunston. Fisher had a 4-0 career record against the Cubs with two shutouts.

Dave Martinez singled in the fifth before Andre Dawson hit his 12th homer of the season. Vance Law's solo shot in the sixth, his fifth, made it 5-0.

The slumping Pirates have lost six of their last seven games.

The Pirates stranded eight runners in the first four innings and 10 for the game as Maddux pitched out of jams in the first, third and fourth innings.

"A hit here, a hit there, who knows?" Pirates manager Jim Leyland said. "Right now, this team just needs to be picked up and I'm not going to desert this ship. We have a heckuva good young ballclub. A lot of the people who jumped on our bandwagon early are jumping off ... but we're going to win our share of games."

Phillies 10, Expos 5

Juan Samuel drove in four runs with a homer and single as Philadelphia beat Montreal at Olympic Stadium.

Samuel hit a two-run homer in the second inning and added a two-run single in the third.

Greg Harris, 2-2, pitched three innings in relief of starter Don Carman for the victory and Kent Tekulve got his third save.

Tim Raines homered in the first for the Expos.

Cardinals 4, Mets 1

Willie McGee had three hits, three RBI, and two stolen bases as St. Louis defeated visiting New York and previously unbeaten David Cone. McGee had a two-run single in the third inning and an RBI single in the fifth.

St. Louis made the most of six hits in five innings off Cone, 7-1, whose earned-run average in six previous starts was 0.76.

John Tudor, 2-1, allowed eight hits in 6 1/3 innings and Ken Dayley pitched 2 2/3 hitless innings for his third save.

Padres 6, Reds 2

Ed Whitson hit a two-run double and allowed six hits in seven innings to lead San Diego past Cincinnati at Jack Murphy Stadium.

Trailing 2-1, the Padres scored five runs in the fourth inning off Danny Jackson, 5-3. San Diego got two-run doubles from Whitson and Keith Moreland, and a run-scoring single by Carmelo Martinez.

Whitson improved to 5-5 and Lance McCullers finished for his fifth save.

Giants 5, Braves 0

Kelly Downs pitched a two-hitter, facing the minimum of 27 batters, and Robby Thompson drove in three runs as San Francisco beat Atlanta at Candlestick Park.

Ken Oberkfell got a one-out single in the fourth inning and was out stealing. Ozzie Virgil grounded into a double play after Dion James singled in the fifth.

Downs, 4-5, struck out six and walked none in the first complete-game shutout of the season for the Giants. The Braves were shut out for the seventh time.

Astros 5, Dodgers 2

Danny Darwin pitched a seven hitter and ended a personal four-game losing streak as Houston took advantage of sloppy fielding to beat Los Angeles at Dodger Stadium.

The victory moved the Astros to within a half-game of the first-place Dodgers in the NL West.

Washburn Faces Misdemeanor Charges

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A felony charge of possession of a dangerous weapon against Atlanta Hawks reserve forward Chris Washburn was dropped Tuesday, but he still faces two weapon-possession misdemeanor charges following his arrest Sunday night.

The felony charge was dropped against Washburn, 22, the Golden State Warriors' first-round draft pick in 1986, during an Oakland city court session Tuesday. A Friday court date was set for the remaining charges of possession of a concealed firearm and possession of a loaded firearm.

The 6-foot-11 Washburn, who lived in Oakland until the Warriors traded him to Atlanta last December, was arrested Sunday night after neighbors reported that shots had been fired, police said.

"We asked him if he had a gun, and he said he did and pointed toward his coat," Sgt. Mike Foster said.

Officers pat-searched Washburn and found a .38-caliber revolver, Foster said. The gun was loaded with three rounds but had not been recently fired, police said.

Washburn told police he lives in Woodstock, Ga. He was apparently in the area visiting a girlfriend, Foster said.

Officers found a friend of Washburn's and a billy club inside Washburn's late-model Porsche.

Washburn was arrested on suspicion of possessing a dangerous weapon, possessing a concealed firearm and possessing a loaded firearm in public. His friend, Derrick Lamar Turner, 27, was arrested for investigation of possessing a dangerous weapon.

A Hawks spokesman said the club would have no comment on Washburn's arrest.

Washburn, a former North Carolina State star who turned pro after his sophomore year, was the No. 3 selection overall in the NBA draft two years ago.

After signing a four-year, $3 million contract, Washburn began as a starter but soon ended up on the bench.

In January 1987, Washburn sought help under the NBA drug program for a cocaine dependency and spent a month undergoing treatment.

Washburn returned to action in March 1987, but the Warriors traded him nine months later.

Campbell Chosen To U.S. Select Team

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Clemson center Elden Campbell has been named to the United States Olympic Select team that will tour Europe later this month, Clemson officials said Tuesday.

The native of Inglewood, Calif., is one of 13 players who will take part in a six-game trip to Finland, France, Austria and Spain June 14-26. The team, coached by Georgetown coach John Thompson, will play teams from Holland, Great Britain, Finland, France, Australia and Spain.

From the team of 13 players, four to six will be invited to join 16 other players at a final month of practice and exhibition games before the final Olympic team of 12 players is chosen in early September.

Jorgensen Chosen Hornets' Head Scout

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Tom Jorgensen was named head scout for the Charlotte Hornets Tuesday by vice president and general manager Carl Scheer.

Jorgensen, 53, will work directly under Gene Littles, director of player personnel, in assessing talent for the upcoming expansion and college drafts.

Jorgensen has worked part-time as a scout for the Hornets for the past year. Jorgensen, who will maintain his residence in Denver, Colo., covered the western portion of the country.

Jorgensen assisted Littles in conducting the Hornets' recent CBA-Free Agent camp in Charlotte.

Jorgensen played collegiately for Michigan from 1953-56 and was a team captain for two seasons. He was an assistant coach at Michigan from 1960-66 and was the head coach at Northern Illinois from 1966-73.

He has also done television commentary for college and the Denver Nuggets.

Injured Ingram Still Wants To Race

DENVER, N.C. (AP) — Stock car driver Jack Ingram suffered two broken bones in his left foot after an accident at the Budweiser 200, but says he still plans to drive in a race on Saturday.

Ingram, 51, of Asheville, N.C., said he did not know the bones were broken until he visited an orthopedic specialist in Asheville Monday. The injury would not normally require a cast, but since Ingram plans to continue driving, he will wear a cast up to his knee for six weeks.

Ingram said the accident at the NASCAR Busch Grand National race at Dover Downs International Speedway last Saturday happened when the right front brake on his car failed, causing the car to spin around and hit the wall. The impact knocked Ingram's foot off the brake into a bolt that secures the oil tank to the firewall.

"I don't plan to rely on a relief driver," said Ingram, who drives for the Skoal Racing Team. "The partition wall in the driver's compartment of my car has been moved to the left so I can operate the clutch. Since our next several races are on short tracks where the races are short and we don't pit a lot, I won't be using the clutch much. So I think I'll be all right."

Williams Heads List Of Preps Honored

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Kenny Williams of Northeastern was among 16 high school athletes who were honored by the North Carolina High School Athletic Association as athletes of the year.

Williams, who has signed to attend North Carolina in the fall, received the boys' 4-A basketball award. Darryl Cheeley of Burlington Williams was named the 3-A winner, and Fred Campbell of Salisbury was the 2-A winner. Chris King of Hobbs was the winner in the 1-A division.

Girls' basketball awards went to Janice Rhynehard of Winston-Salem Glenn in the 4-A division. LeAnn Kennedy of Trinity received the 3-A honors, Tisha England of Newton-Conover was the 2-A winner and Charlene Penland of state 1-A champion Hayesville took the honors in that classification.

Ed Duncan of state champion Mitchell was the 1-A-2-A wrestler of the year, and Duane Wilson of Burlington Cummings won the 3-A honor after winning 140 victories in his prep career. David Cauffman of state champion Cary was the 4-A winner.

David Fox of Raleigh Sanderson was the boys' swimmer of the year, with Chapel Hill's Joe Johnson taking the diving honor. Raleigh Broughton's Emily Cowling won the girls' swimming award, while Raleigh Athens Drive's Heidi Candler took the diving honor.

Vince Howard of Greensboro Page was the boys' indoor track recipient, while Tomi Ogumba of East Mecklenburg took the girls' award.

Jordan To Have Road With His Namesake

WILMINGTON (AP) — New Hanover County commissioners are recommending that part of Interstate 40 be named the Michael Jordan Parkway — a fitting tribute to the basketball star who gets most of his points by driving the lane.

The commissioners voted Monday to recommend that the state Department of Transportation rename part of I-40 in the Wilmington native's honor. The action came after several owners of property on Gordon Road objected to changing the name of the rural, two-lane road where Jordan grew up.

"Everyone around the world knows Michael Jordan," said Joe Augustine, executive vice president of the Chamber of Commerce. He agreed that New Hanover County had turned out other fine athletes, including the Football Hall of Fame's Sonny Jurgensen, former Harlem Globetrotter Meadowlark Lemon and quarterback Roman Gabriel. But he said those athletes hadn't drawn as much attention to the area as Jordan, recently named most valuable player in the National Basketball Association.

Spurs Fire Weiss After 2-Year Stint

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Saying it was time for a change, the new owner of the San Antonio Spurs fired two-year head coach Bob Weiss and said a former Spurs mentor was in line for the job.

B.J. "Red" McCombs, who gained control of the team on May 27 for $47 million, fired Weiss on Tuesday, but said Weiss might be reassigned to another position within the organization.

McCombs also said that former Spurs coach Stan Albeck, who is now at Bradley University, was among a group of candidates for the job. Albeck compiled a 153-93 record from 1980 to 1983. A decision is expected by next Tuesday, McCombs said.

Weiss, a former assistant coach with the Dallas Mavericks, compiled a 59-105 record in his two seasons with the Spurs.

"I feel it was best at this time to make a change," McCombs said, declining to elaborate on his judgment of Weiss' abilities.

"I do appreciate the contribution that he made to this team. I recognized that he came in at a time when we were playing a lot of new faces and I think he made a contribution to that," McCombs told a news conference.

"I just feel we are at a stage now that I would like to see a change," he said.

couldn't do it (go undefeated) so we have been out to prove him wrong." Jackson, though happy with his role as a reserve, still carries with him the dream of being the big star for the Rampants in the championship series.

"I've dreamed a lot this week about pinch hitting and getting the winning run for us," Jackson said. "But even if that doesn't happen I will try to do something to help us win — even if it is just keeping the team excited."

After all, that's the job of the unsung hero.

Pistons Send Fans Out Of Forum Early

By Scott Oster
(c) 1988, Los Angeles Times
INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Vinnie Johnson and James Edwards were sitting on the Detroit Pistons bench early in Tuesday night's game, ticking like time bombs.

The Pistons, the latest in a long line of wannabes from the hinterlands, come to challenge the Lakers, had a three-point lead at the time, 20-17.

Edwards leaned over to Johnson and said, "It's time for us to go, Vinnie."

Several thousand Forum fans overheard Edwards, misunderstood, and headed for the exits. Laker fans have too much pride to let out-of-towners beat them to the parking lot.

Those who left early missed a great show by the Pistons, who differ from the other recent invaders in at least one important aspect — they have a bench.

Vinnie Johnson, for instance. People around the league call him Microwave, because he heats up so fast. That name might be all right for Detroit, but this is Hollywood, baby.

What heats up faster than a Microwave? How about The Electric Chair?

Vinnie hit 7 or 11 shots, the Piston bench outscored the Laker bench 32-4 and the Pistons won the NBA Finals opener, 105-93.

"We're a lot hungrier than they are," Electric Chair said, "and maybe a little fresher."

Maybe even looser. Showing no respect, fear, awe or inhibition, the Pistons pulled a stunning upset. So much for stage fright.

They outscored the Lakers, 11-2, just before the half to take a 17-point lead. "That was a little bit of a crusher," Laker Coach Pat Riley conceded in a halftime TV interview.

The last crusher this big was when someone told the Lakers the truth about Santa Claus. This was the worst finishing kick since Mary Decker in the '84 Olympics. To see a more tragic finish on anything, Riley would have to drive his new Chrysler through a sandstorm.

Hey, the Pistons were loose. Monday night, John Salley, another Piston super-sub, cruised the town's comedy clubs, meeting L.A.'s funniest.

"I met Sam Kinnison, Billy Crystal, Arsenio Hall, went to a couple clubs," Salley said. "We've got one club in Detroit. Who the (heck) wants to come to Michigan to make people laugh? You can't make car people laugh. I love this town."

"Billy Crystal was sitting two seats from our bench tonight, with Gary Shandling. I said, 'Hey, what's up, Gary Shandling? A white guy with big lips!'"

Obviously this is a team crumbling under the pressure of meeting the mighty Lakers in the Fabulous Forum in the Big One.

"You're definitely on stage here," Salley said. "Isiah (Thomas) told us before the game, 'Dallas (Mavericks) got caught up in all the stars.' All the stars came to watch us, they paid big money to watch us, why we want to watch them hem? Tonight we're the stars."

A cast of thousands, it must have seemed to the Lakers. The Pistons, to steal a Yogi Berra line, have deep depth.

You bring Vinnie Johnson off the bench and it's Who Time. Perhaps I should explain.

When Vinnie played for the Seattle SuperSonics, guard Gus Williams would yell "Eeee-who!" when his jumper was falling.

Vinnie brought the quaint little expression to Detroit.

"We call him The Who," explained Salley. "When he's hitting, we yell, 'It's Who Time,' and we all just move out of the way, let him do his spins and things. We just take a deep breath."

"He'll do it in practice, we'll be running plays and he'll say, 'AD (Adrian Dantley), get the (heck) out of the way. Isiah, get the (heck) out of the way. Bill (Laimbeer), get the (heck) out of the way. It's Who Time.'"

I guess the odds-makers didn't know how loose these guys were going to be. I guess they didn't know about Microwave Electric Chair Eeee-Who VJ. Did anyone?

Not according to the Pistons, who, to a man, say they were inspired by the trashing they were given in the media going into the series.

Several of them watched Channel 9's sportscast Monday night, and the guy on camera talked the Pistons way down. It made a real impact.

"Is the guy from Channel 9 in here?" Laimbeer shouted across the Pistons' locker-room after the game. "He said we had no business in this series. We were walking around (before the game), shaking our heads. We got a lot of pride."

Salley says Laimbeer is the only Piston who reads the papers, and Bill gives the other players a daily news synopsis. Laimbeer told them Tuesday that the media was taking the Pistons lightly.

"It's a million to one against us," said Dennis Rodman, who may have exaggerated the Las Vegas odds. "We read the papers, look at the news, nobody's giving us any credit."

For cripes sake, will somebody give these guys credit? Acme Finance, or Dr. Beauchamp? So we can get on with this series?

And will somebody please tell Dantley this is not a lay-up drill, but an actual game? And will someone tell the Lakers it's OK to challenge a Piston driving to the hoop, even if it's only to ask for his driver's license?

Key stat: the Pistons blocked six shots Tuesday night. The only Lakers block was a mental one.

And will someone tell the Lakers it is a mortal sin to let pint-sized Isiah Thomas grab a rebound off a missed Piston free throw, as he did in the fourth quarter, putting it back in for a 13-point lead that killed the Lakers?

At least none was hurt. For a supposed war, this was a remarkably polite game on both sides.

"They (the Lakers) didn't have (Celtic Kevin) McHale inside making us highly upset," Salley mentioned.

Were the Lakers less physical than the Celtics?

"I'm not saying anything," Salley said, saying plenty.

Not that anybody is conceding this series yet. The Pistons, while confident, almost cocky, are cockily respectful of the Lakers. There were no predictions of a sweep in the Piston locker-room, no real crowing and boasting.

This was one win and they were clearly enjoying the hell out of it, and attaching no particular significance to it.

They really would like to meet that Channel 9 guy though, but I'm not sure if they want to strangle him or vote him a playoff share.

Predictions for Game 2 Thursday night, John Salley?

"Same people," Salley said. "Same Bat time, same Bat channel." But the new kids in town have already written a new Bat script.

Manny Mota, a highly-rated batting coach for the Los Angeles Dodgers, once made two hits in one inning as a pinch-hitter.

have to hope that most of those guys get the flu. Somebody is doing a great job coaching up there. He's taken a lot of talent and made it go further."

During the regular season, the Rampants often chewed opponents up and spit them out en route to a 14-0 mark in Big East Conference play. But as the competition has increased through the playoffs, things have begun to level off. But Vincent said he isn't that concerned.

"Most of them have hit sometime during the playoffs," he said. "Daniels has had two good games, Axel has had two good games."

Series Notes:

Ironically, the last time these two teams met was in 1975 for the State Championship.

Rose defeated Harding 2-0 in a best-of-three series, winning the first game, 1-0, and the second game, 2-0.

Rose was led by Mike Brewington, Kelly Heath and Macon Moyer. Moyer later went on to play baseball for ECU while Brewington played football for the Pirates. His younger brother, Jamie, is the No. 2 pitcher and third baseman on this Rose team.

Heath went to Louisburg and is now playing for the AAA Syracuse Blue Jays. Former major-leaguer Dickie Noles was the ace of that Harding team.

For Rose coach Ronald Vincent, who coached the 1975 team, it's like an extreme case of deja vu.

"All the way down the line, it's nice," he said. "It really is crazy that we are playing Harding again. It is really unusual."

Pitcher Brewington (shoulder) and centerfielder Moore (knee) are both probable for Thursday's opener.

Both Rose and Harding have a number of players who will move on to the college ranks next season.

The Rams do possess a number of talented players. Shortstop Darren Hart has been drafted by the San Diego Padres and a number of the other seniors will continue their careers in college.

Tate will probably sign with an NAIA team, possibly Methodist or Western Carolina. Second baseman Ed Lawing is considering Davidson or Western Carolina, while centerfielder Charles Bolden will be playing for UNC-Charlotte next season.

Rose, too, has a number of players who will play college ball next year. Moyer and Daniels will both play for East Carolina next season. Moyer signed a baseball grant with the Pirates, while Daniels signed a football grant with the understanding that he will also be able to play baseball.

Pitcher-left fielder Dallas McPherson and Axel Smith may sign with North Carolina Wesleyan.

The first game will be Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at Knights Park in Charlotte, followed by a 7:30 p.m. Friday game. Game three, if necessary, will be played Saturday at 1 p.m.

Knight's Park is located at 400 Magnolia Avenue.

Arab Leaders Debate Plans To Back Uprising In Israeli-Held Territories

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH
Associated Press Writer

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — Arab leaders began secret talks today on stepping up their material, financial and political support for the 6-month-old Palestinian uprising in the Israeli-occupied territories.

On the second day of their emergency summit meeting on the "intefadeh," or uprising, the 21 members of the Arab League met in different groups behind closed doors. Nearly all were represented by their chiefs of state.

The summit's opening session Tuesday was marked by the walkout of the Iranian ambassador to Algeria and by emotional expressions of support for the Palestinian uprising from President Chadli Bendjedid of Algeria and King Hussein of Jordan. The Iranian ambassador and other diplomats based here were invited to the opening ceremony.

In Jerusalem today, Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres mocked the Arab leaders for supporting the Palestinian uprising. "There is nothing more fractious for the Arab people than their show of unity," he said.

"Are they really united around the intefadeh?" Peres asked in parliament, using the Arabic word for uprising. "Do they mean to say Iran and Iraq are fighting a war over the intefadeh and that in Lebanon all the factions are also fighting over the intefadeh? What kind of show is this?"

Hussein, who has been lukewarm in his support for the PLO, astonished the leaders with an impassioned endorsement of the intefadeh, which he described as the Palestinians' "path to liberation and dignity."

But despite a lengthy meeting Hussein had earlier with PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat, his speech did not contain a single reference to the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Bendjedid, on the other hand, said universal recognition and acceptance of the PLO was "the key to any settlement of the Middle East problem."

Arafat, wearing his usual "kefiyeh" headscarf and battle fatigues, told the Arab leaders on Tuesday that "our people swear before you to continue the struggle and the intefadeh until victory."

He reiterated the PLO's determination to create a sovereign Palestinian state "with Jerusalem as its capital." Israel has proclaimed Jerusalem as the capital of the Jewish state and pledged never to give up any part of it.

Among the numerous meetings held late Tuesday and early today in the closely guarded hilltop Aurassi Hotel was one bringing together Bendjedid with Libya's Moammar Gadhafi and Syria's Hafez Assad, who have not always seen eye-to-eye on Middle East problems.

No details of the meetings emerged.

Gadhafi also met separately with Arafat and with President Zine el Abidine Ben Ali of Tunisia.

All Algerian newspapers carried many pages of detailed coverage of the summit, but there was no mention of the Iranian ambassador's walkout, which ruffled diplomatic feathers on the opening day.

The ambassador, Zargar Yaghoubi, abruptly rose from his seat in the diplomats' section and walked out of the hall during an address by Chedli Klibi, Tunisian Secretary General of the Arab League.

"While speaking on the intefadeh for which we meet we cannot ignore the victory of brother Iraq, which has recovered its territories, notably the Faw peninsula," Klibi said.

"Iraq has always been prepared to cooperate with international peace efforts, while Iran's leaders are determined to pursue the war" which increasingly threatens neighboring Saudi Arabia and Kuwait, Klibi declared.

A spokesman for the Iranian Embassy confirmed that Yaghoubi walked out of the opening session "in protest against incorrect statements" on the 7-year-old Persian Gulf war.

President Saddam Hussein of Iraq is one of the few top Arab leaders not present at the summit. He sent a high-level delegation, but said he was too busy with the war to come to Algiers.

The three-day Arab League meeting was convened to support the Palestinian insurrection.

Navy Awaits First Test Of Gulf Plan To Aid Other Ships

ABOARD USS JOHN HANCOCK IN THE PERSIAN GULF (AP) — The U.S. Navy has yet to test its expanded policy of defending non-U.S. flag vessels in the Persian Gulf more than a month after it went into effect.

But the prospect of facing that test is not lost on the officers and men of ships like the John Hancock as they arrive to take up the Navy's main mission of escorting U.S.-flagged Kuwaiti tankers plying the gulf.

The John Hancock was beginning its first such assignment on Tuesday, charged with shepherding the Gas Princess, a 46,723-ton liquefied petroleum gas carrier, down the gulf and out through the Strait of Hormuz.

Cmdr. Robert B. O'Donnell, skipper of the John Hancock, said that when the destroyer passed through the so-called Silk Worm envelope to enter the gulf for the first time Saturday, "our adrenalin level went up."

But he said that his crew of 330 felt they were well prepared and "ready for any eventuality that we might face here in the Persian Gulf."

The convoy was the 34th of this year and the 56th since the Reagan administration agreed last year to re-register 11 of Kuwait's state-owned oil tankers under the Stars and Stripes and provide them with protection from attack in the gulf, where Iran and Iraq have been at war for nearly eight years.

The John Hancock, a destroyer based in Mayport, Fla., is one of five warships that arrived in the gulf in the past few days as part of regular rotation.

In an interview with members of a Pentagon news media pool on the John Hancock's bridge, O'Donnell described its mission as not only protecting vessels under the U.S. flag but serving as a symbol of the American presence.

"We're here to let the petty tyrants and despots of the world know that they shouldn't fool with the United States of America, and specifically the United States Navy."

But he steered away from discussion of the recent expansion of the U.S. rules of engagement that permit American commanders to go to the aid of non-U.S. flag ships that are under attack and appeal for assistance.

Since the change went into effect May 3, Iranian gunboats have carried out four known attacks on neutral merchant vessels in the southern gulf and the Strait of Hormuz, gateway to the gulf. But all were too far away for patrolling U.S. warships to intervene.

In the nearest thing to a direct U.S.-Iran encounter, the Aegis-type missile cruiser Vincennes found itself in the role of a curious and frustrated observer last Thursday when an Iranian frigate stopped, boarded and then escorted away a Cypriot flag freighter apparently suspected of carrying war-connected cargo.

U.S. Navy sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the Vincennes received no distress appeal from the freighter but followed the two vessels for some time as they headed toward the Iranian port of Bandar Abbas.

One source said the Vincennes' skipper, Capt. Will C. Rogers III "wanted to help him real bad."

"They were doing everything that they could to give that guy an opportunity," said the source, speaking on condition of anonymity. "They were even looking for signal lights for something."

But he said the Vincennes heard and saw nothing that would indicate the master of the 10,000-ton Vevey wanted the American ship to come to his aid.

Greek owners of the Vevey said the ship, whose cargo was listed as marble chips from Italy, was released by the Iranians a day after it was detained and continued on its voyage to Saudi Arabia and Kuwait.

Israel Offers To Protect Officials

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli authorities today offered protection to Arab officials in the occupied West Bank after an Israeli-appointed Arab mayor was stabbed in the heart, apparently by Palestinian militants.

The army maintained a curfew on El Bireh and some areas in the neighboring town of Ramallah as it continued to search for suspects in the Tuesday stabbing of Hassan Tawil, 74, the El Bireh mayor. Tawil was in stable condition, said a doctor at Ramallah hospital who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The Israelis are trying to stop other Arab officials from quitting under pressure from militants.

The Israeli newspaper Maariv said the military government would step up protection for the Arab officials, but it did not specify what steps would be taken. An army spokesman refused comment.

A 19-year-old man from the Gaza Strip refugee camp of Jebalya died overnight from wounds he suffered when beaten by Israel soldiers, Dr. Ahmed Yassih of Gaza City's Shifa Hospital said. The army confirmed Hussein Jam'a Abu-Jallah died but said the circumstances and cause of death were not clear.

The death would raise the number of Arabs killed in the six-month old Palestinian uprising to 202. Two Israelis have also died in the unrest in lands Israel seized in the 1967 Middle East war.

Israel radio today reported the army would prosecute an officer and two soldiers for excessive use of force in Arura, a village near Ramallah where two residents said they were buried under a pile of rocks last month.

Duarte's Condition Is Terminal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte will probably undergo chemotherapy to treat the cancer that has spread from his stomach to his liver, but Duarte's personal physician says the malignancy is terminal.

Duarte underwent three hours of cancer surgery Tuesday at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in which doctors removed a portion of his stomach but left his diseased liver alone.

"There was metastatic disease present in both lobes of the liver, and that was not removed," a hospital statement said.

"That is going to end the life of President Duarte," said Dr. Benjamin Interiano, Duarte's personal physician. He said the average life expectancy for someone in Duarte's condition is six months, but some patients live longer, others shorter.

Following Duarte's recuperation from surgery, "this disease will probably be treated with chemotherapy," the hospital statement said.

Duarte, 62, "tolerated the surgery well," it said, describing the operation as "uneventful."

The Salvadoran leader, who was hospitalized here May 31, will remain in intensive care for a few days before returning to his regular hospital room for convalescence. Duarte's family members were at the hospital.

Duarte, one of the United States' staunchest allies in Latin America, is in the final year of a five-year presidential term.

Vice President Rodolfo Castillo Claramount is serving as acting president of El Salvador in Duarte's absence.

Students Threaten March To N. Korea

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The government began deploying 60,000 riot police today to stop radical students marching to communist North Korea. In Seoul, troopers firing tear gas broke up a rally.

National Police Headquarters said tens of thousands of riot police would block roads to the North Korean border to prevent the march Friday. Riot police began surrounding colleges today in Seoul as security forces went on top alert.

Riot police in green combat fatigues and black, visored helmets fired volleys of tear gas when several hundred students at Yonsei University tried to march into the street after a rally for the march.

A few students hurled rocks and a handful of firebombs, but the marchers were quickly driven back into the campus by the 4,000 riot police surrounding the school.

Students yelling anti-American slogans staged a rally at nearby Mongji University to prepare for the march. Speakers denounced the United States, claiming it enforces partition of the peninsula.

"Drive out Yankees who enforce the partition of our land," students shouted as they shot clenched fists into the air.

OUT OF THE PAST — Fish are brought from boats at the Don riverfront in Rostov, in the center of the Soviet Union's heartland. The city thrives on recalling its past and is skeptical of any reforms, including Mikhail Gorbachev's "glasnost" policies. The aversion to reform even carries into the language, as the Russian word for "to change" also means "to fail." (L.A. Times-Washington Post Photo)

City In Soviet Heartland Clings To The Past, Wary Of Reforms

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

ROSTOV-ON-DON, U.S.S.R. — Stepping off a rickety bus into the middle of Russia, a western visitor is thrown three decades into the past. Cars resemble Edsels, black fishnet stockings are all the rage and Friday means an evening at a 3-D picture show. Dinner features buttermilk and Wonder-style, spongy white bread.

Even a whiff of political paranoia harkens back to the 1950s. Wading into a crowd of locals, a stranger is repelled with the kind of fury that Sen. Joseph McCarthy once inspired. "Spy!" yells one elderly woman. "Grab his camera!" says another. "He just wants to show how badly we live."

Mental snapshots linger: A theater building designed to resemble an oversized tractor. A long line of weary people in worn-out clothing clutching ration cards for meat and butter. A three-room apartment, divided by a clothesline, shared by two families. Four teen-agers bearing rifles solemnly guarding a World War II memorial.

This is Rostov, the core of the Russian heartland. This is the society that Joseph Stalin built and Mikhail Gorbachev is trying to modernize, a human landscape where the harsh discipline and brutal fear imposed by the Georgian dictator now collide with the entrepreneurial spirit and political openness advocated by a vigorous new Kremlin leader.

Rostov's heavy atmosphere of a bygone era is thickened by a sense of isolation. Surrounded by wheat fields, this city of nearly 1 million is 600 miles by train from Moscow, a trip that the average resident makes no more than once every three years. Its chief links to the capital and the outside world are the state-controlled television and radio. Reports from abroad are highly selective, at best.

In one recent five-minute radio news bulletin, an announcer read extensive dispatches about Communist Party meetings in three West European countries and concluded with a report about a surge in American pre-election polls by the U.S. vice president, erroneously identified as George Shultz.

The dearth of foreign news whets a strong curiosity about life abroad. When a U.S. technological exhibition opened here last winter, Rostov residents stood in line for hours to pepper young American guides with questions: What's your monthly salary? Do you wear Fruit-of-the-Loom undershirts? Will Shultz beat Ronald Reagan in the presidential elections? While quaint and endearing in some ways, the isolation and antipathy toward change in the Soviet provinces have proven tough obstacles in Gorbachev's drive to enhance the quality of Soviet factory work, farming, democratic politics and cultural life.

Far from the Soviet capital and its lively coterie of intellectuals, dissidents and other advocates of reform, Rostov and other provincial cities have emerged as crucial test sites in Gorbachev's bid to drag this vast country into the 21st century.

For its part, Rostov is kicking and screaming.

The city's mood suggests a strong attachment to the past. In all its stores, such staples as bread, eggs and meat go for close to the same rock-bottom rates as in 1961. A movie ticket costs about 40 kopecks (about 60 cents); a lunch of stew, bread and buttermilk about 90 kopecks; a ride on any public bus or tram, 5 kopecks.

With food prices fixed and meat and some other basics rationed, the state has seen little reason to raise wages. The average Rostov laborer earns about the same as he did 25 years ago: 140 rubles a month, or about $200 at the current official exchange rate.

In his bid to invigorate the Soviet economy, Gorbachev is taking a bold gamble in altering the terms of the social contract — a quid pro quo involving fixed prices and fixed wages — that governs the Soviet worker's life. The Kremlin leader wants to reward quality and productivity and even threatens to close some factories deemed inefficient.

In Rostov, some of Gorbachev's innovations, such as cooperative, profit-making stores, trendy new theater productions and work brigade systems designed to modernize provincial life, have already encountered public grousing and resistance.

Even Rostov's Communist Party leaders have rebuffed Moscow's reform efforts. When the Kremlin attacked a local party boss for foot-dragging and corruption, city officials staged a mass public rally to honor him.

Still, economic reform has made some inroads here, the most visible being the proliferation of privately run cooperative shops and cafes. Following a new law passed in Moscow just six months ago, 212 have opened across the city, offering a lively alternative to the drab predictability of state-run stores and restaurants. Yet cooperatives, too, are facing opposition from conservative residents, according to Verchernaya Rostov editor Beloiov and others. The reasons vary: high prices, confusion about the cooperative concept, a doctrinaire sense that they violate the norms of socialism laid down by Stalin.

Glasnost, which has led to the publication of long-banned books such as Boris Pasternak's "Doctor Zhivago," has failed so far to have much effect in this farming region.

Rostov is paying dearly for its old-fashioned ways.

By most accounts, the local economy is a shambles. Wheat production, the region's economic foundation, is declining. The housing shortage is severe and growing worse; construction authorities were criticized this year for failing to keep up with the elaborate goals for new apartments and other buildings outlined in the government's 1986-90 five-year plan.

Market shelves remain bare except for the most rudimentary foods, such as bread, juice and macaroni. Butter, sausage, meat and sugar are so rare that they are only made available through a state-controlled rationing plan. Chickens are so scarce that they sell for 15 rubles ($22) each at the central market.

"People don't live very well here," said Sergei Sotnik, "but they don't live badly either. Mostly they are content. They don't want to rock any boats."

Behind Rostov's strict adherence to standards and routines established decades ago is a Russian culture in which change is often regarded with fear and suspicion.

Most Rostov citizens seem deeply committed to maintaining things as they are, a preference for the status quo that pervades much of Soviet culture, including literature, morals and the economy. Even the language reflects this aversion: The Russian word "to change" also means "to fail."

Video Creations Combine Electronic Art, Technology

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Avant-garde artists armed with video cameras rather than paint brushes are creating electronic works of art designed to draw the viewer into the picture.

"People are captivated by this art form," said video artist Mary Lucier. "It screens out distractions. It draws you into a completely new and different world. In that sense, it's kind of like going to the movies."

A new exhibit, "American Landscape Video: The Electronic Grove," features work done in the past decade by seven leading video artists, including Lucier.

The show, on display through July 10 at Pittsburgh's Carnegie Museum of Art, features bright moving images that appear on video monitors illuminating darkened rooms.

The videotapes show waves crashing against icebergs as birds call, a green palm rustling in the wind and a forest fire raging amid crackles and pops. Eerie music plays as the camera peers up the face of a gray cliff and then focuses on rippling water.

The artists placed rocks, trees and other objects around the video monitors, which have screens up to 25 inches wide. In one work, viewers can turn away from the screens and see their own images in the still water of a reflecting pool. In another, a coil periodically emits a deafening electrical charge that prompts adults to cover their ears and schoolchildren to scream.

"Each space creates its own environment," Lucier says. "The impact, I think, is greater than sculpture. There is the sound as well as moving images and three dimensional objects."

Many people resist the concept of video art, assuming viewing it would be like watching television, but they usually like the works once they see them, said Bill Judson, film curator at the Carnegie.

"People come in and they see this and they say, 'My God, I love that,'" he said. "They're astonished in themselves."

Video art began in the mid-1960s, when advances in technology made black and white film equipment more affordable. In the early '70s, museums began showing elaborate video displays, and some artists used color computer-generated images in their work.

In New York, the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Whitney Museum of American Art have

'China Beach' Gets New TV Lease But Some Say It Demeans Women

AP Special Correspondent
BOSTON (AP) — As a 22-year-old Army nurse, Jacque Navarra Rhoads tended the casualties of war amid the monsoons, mud and gunfire of Vietnam, seeing both death and the enemy face-to-face.

Though she defied the odds to save the wounded and held the hands of the dying who clung to her, alone and frightened, no trumpets sounded for her or the 10,000 other women who served in Vietnam, eight of whom gave their lives.

"I just don't think people really understand what we did there," said Mrs. Rhoads, 39.

Of the dozens of Vietnam movies and television shows, none was about women until this spring, when ABC launched "China Beach," a Vietnam War series centered on combat nurse Colleen McMurphy, played by Dana Delany, and four other women with representative roles in the war.

The final episode of the season airs tonight. The show has been renewed for the fall after a seven-week run that brought good ratings and critical praise.

Mrs. Rhoads, who co-edited the book, "Nurses in Vietnam: The Forgotten Veterans," believes the show is realistic.

PEGGY PERRI

CHERIE RANKIN

hooch is blown up and she has to care for a Viet Cong woman who killed an American soldier with a grenade bring back all too familiar memories.

"I feel what that nurse was doing was what I was doing. That was me," she said.

But some female veterans complain the show stereotypes women in Vietnam as prostitutes, bimbos and manhunters, among other things. At the same time, they do agree it has redeeming value in making mass audiences aware that women served in Vietnam.

Peggy Perri, 42, a Vietnam combat nurse who now works for the William Joiner Center for the Study of War and Social Consequences at the University of Massachusetts-Boston, finds the show demeaning.

Ms. Perri was one of 75 women who signed a recent petition protesting the way China Beach portrays women. The petition, circulated at the second National Conference on Women and the Military held at the Joiner Center, was sent to ABC.

"I feel insulted," Ms. Perri said, objecting in particular to a scene in which McMurphy dons a sequined miniskirt and joins singer Laurette Barber, played by Chloe Webb, onstage at a USO club. Another sore spot for Ms. Perri and other veterans is the character of K.C., a prostitute.

Ms. Perri was unable to talk about her experiences in Vietnam until three years ago, even though she had left 20 years ago.

"I was unable to deal with the stereotypes that people had about women who were in Vietnam," she said. "This show validates those stereotypes. The thing that is unrealistic is all this emphasis, these women characters as sexual beings."

Cherie Rankin, a 41-year-old Norwood, Mass., social worker who was with the American Red Cross in Vietnam, says her counterpart in "China Beach" is so naive she never seems able to understand what is going on.

"I remember," Ms. Rankin said, "being overwhelmed by the numbers of men and what was happening to them, the deaths and injuries, the thousand-yard stares, the guys who after a short period of time looked like there was nobody at home when you looked into their eyes. They were very old men in young bodies."

Tired of having to smile and be friendly on the job, tired of being gawked at, she isolated herself in her hooch in the few off-duty hours she had.

"It's not a documentary, so we will from time to time bend things to fit dramatic purpose," said William Broyles Jr., co-creator of the show and himself a Vietnam veteran. Broyles said female vets serve as consultants on the show and the producers have gone to great pains to make the characters, costumes and stories realistic.

But was the Vietnam War itself real, given the contradictions and the contrasts? Where else could you have a front row seat to the drama of war, sitting on rooftop terraces, sipping scotch and water, watching flares light up the night skies and listening to the rumble of bombs and the rat-a-tat of machine-gun fire?

"I never had a sexual relationship over there," Rhoads writes in her book. "Dating, well, you'd walk around bunkers and talk about home. ... You'd bring a bottle of wine and he'd bring the glasses. ... You'd sit and watch the B52s bomb across the DMZ. ... The sky would light up in different colors and you'd sit and watch the fireworks. ... It sounds strange, watching somebody's village get blown up. We didn't want to think about the lives being lost."

Sellers Daughter Enters Guilty Plea

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Victoria Sellers, daughter of the late actor Peter Sellers and actress Britt Ekland, has pleaded guilty to violating her parole by using cocaine.

Ms. Sellers, 23, had been ordered to undergo periodic testing for drugs as a condition of her three-year probation in a New Jersey drug conspiracy case. She pleaded guilty in that case in March 1987 to concealing a crime.

In a federal court hearing in Los Angeles on Monday, Ms. Sellers admitted diluting urine samples by drinking a lot of fluids, failing to appear for tests and leaving the district without probation approval, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Gary Lincenberg. She will be sentenced June 27.

"Right now she is being tested every day, according to the probation officer," Lincenberg said.

The U.S. Probation Office has indicated it will recommend that the former Playboy model and actress be treated at a drug rehabilitation program.

Miss Sellers, a British citizen who lives in Los Angeles, already has spent time in a rehabilitation program at St. John's Hospital in Santa Monica, Lincenberg said.

College Town Recalls Churchill

By CHARLES HILLINGER
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

FULTON, Mo. — This tiny mid-American town in the green rolling hills of Missouri is a leading center of British culture and history all because of a speech Winston Churchill delivered here six months after the end of World War II.

It was March 5, 1946, in an address at Westminster College, that the wartime prime minister of Great Britain warned of Soviet expansion in Eastern Europe and coined the term Iron Curtain to describe the political and ideological barrier emerging between the Soviet Bloc and the West.

"From Stettin (now Szczecin, Poland) on the Baltic to Trieste in the Adriatic, an iron curtain has descended upon the Continent," declared Churchill alerting the world to the imminent cold war. "Behind that line lie all the capitals of the ancient states of Central and Eastern Europe. ... All subject not only to Soviet influence but to a very high and in many cases increasing measure of control from Moscow."

It was Churchill's most famous postwar public address. But what was he doing in this obscure town of 10,000 people, delivering a major speech at a little liberal-arts school?

Franc L. McCluer then president of Westminster College, a private, non-sectarian school founded in 1851, had invited Churchill to be part of the John Findley Green Foundation lecture series. An annual program designed to promote understanding of economic and social problems of international concern, it was established as a memorial to a St. Louis attorney who graduated from Westminster in 1884.

Harry Vaughan, a Westminster graduate then serving on Harry Truman's White House staff, asked the president if he would like to add a postscript to the invitation, eliciting the following note: "This is a wonderful school in my home state. Hope you can do it. I'll introduce you."

Indeed, Churchill, who had lost leadership of Parliament a few months earlier, came and Truman introduced him. It was the biggest day in Fulton's history. A plaque was erected in the auditorium where Churchill spoke.

Fifteen years later Westchester's then-president Robert Davidson was reading a Life magazine story about several bombed out churches in London left over from World War II that were slated for demolition when he, too, had a seemingly far-fetched idea: Wouldn't it be nice to reconstruct one of the churches in Fulton as a memorial to Winston Churchill's visit?

Importing a church proved easier than Davidson expected. The Diocese of London offered to give the Missouri college the Church of St. Mary, Aldermanbury, a 15th Century structure destroyed by the great fire of London in 1666 and redesigned and rebuilt by Christopher Wren in 1677.

All that remained of the church after the World War II London blitz by the Nazis were the exterior walls, the bell tower and 12 stone columns. The remnants were razed stone by stone, each marked for reassembling, and transported 4,500 miles by ship and train, 700 tons to Fulton. Donors paid the $3 million restoration cost.

Today the gleaming limestone church is the campus chapel and centerpiece for the Winston Churchill Memorial and Library, the only center in the United States devoted to the study of Churchill's life. The museum and library in the basement is filled with an array of exhibits, including original oil paintings, Churchill's letters and manuscripts and photographs, published works and memorabilia pertaining to the British leader.

Stitcher Enjoys Each Day Creating Miniature Rugs

By MARY THERESA BIEBEL
The Wilkes-Barre Times Leader
WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (AP) — Sharon Garmize loves her job so much she works almost constantly.

"I start at 7 in the morning and work until 1 or 2 the next morning," the 37-year-old Mountaintop resident said. "I enjoy what I'm doing enough to do it all the time."

The work that keeps her so happily occupied is the art of making extremely detailed miniature Oriental rugs.

While her handiwork may be small, her talent isn't. Samples of her work were selected for a National Geographic exhibit in Washington, D.C. last winter. She also has been commissioned to make a $6,000 miniature rug from Versailles for a Kansas City museum.

Ms. Garmize's work keeps her on the road 100 days a year, traveling to shows across the country. She demonstrates her craft to interested bystanders, takes orders for rugs and sells do-it-yourself kits.

The majority of her customers want to display the rugs in dollhouses. Some hang them on the wall as a piece of artwork, Ms. Garmize said.

Her miniature rugs range from 44 square inches to fingernail-size pieces. Some of them contain more than 7,000 stitches per square inch. Each square inch requires about five hours of work with silk thread in as many as 50 colors.

"When I work I do nothing but daydream," she said. "I just think and think."

Although her friends say she's patient to do such delicate work over so many hours, Ms. Garmize admits that she's actually restless.

"I can't work on one piece at a time. I have to work at five at one time or I get bored," she said.

Ms. Garmize got an early start in needlework. As a child she knitted, crocheted and made her own clothes. Her interest reached a smaller scale when she decided to make some tiny rugs to furnish a dollhouse given to her as a gift.

That first venture got her hooked — now Ms. Garmize is in the miniature rug business full time.

The stitcher and her work were recently featured in "Masters in Miniature." The book by Anne Day Smith includes stories about 12 people across the country who make everything from miniature cats to miniature fans.

"Just about everything in real life can be done in miniature," Ms. Garmize said.

The book relates how Ms. Garmize met Princess Grace of Monaco in 1982 when she entered her first competition, an international contest sponsored by the American Needlepoint Guild.

There were about 25 competitors and Ms. Garmize made a clean sweep of the awards. She never entered another competition because she had decided to become a professional and didn't think it was fair to compete against amateurs.

Her work keeps her so busy most days, she said, she takes breaks only to fix meals and to watch an afternoon soap opera.

For her business, Ms. Garmize does everything from painstaking stitching to designing rug-making kits to packaging and mailing.

The work doesn't hurt her fingers or her eyes.

"I have very, very good vision, and I do it all without magnification," she said.

Ms. Garmize has hopes of starting a Miniature Textile Guild and producing a newsletter. She says she enjoys living quietly and collecting antiques. Her time-consuming work doesn't leave time for much else.

Joint Concert Causes Concern

MOSCOW (AP) — Zubin Mehta, music director of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, confessed to some "trepidation" before a joint performance by his musicians and those from a Soviet orchestra.

The Philharmonic and the Symphony Orchestra of the U.S.S.R. Ministry of Culture, led by Gennady Rozhdestvensky, will play together works by Berlioz and Shostakovich on Wednesday night in Gorky Park.

The Philharmonic performed last week in Leningrad, and will give three performances, including the one by the combined group of more than 250 musicians, in Moscow.

Mascot Returns To USS North Carolina

Charlie the Alligator, resident mascot of the USS North Carolina Battleship Memorial, has returned from winter hibernation. His first official appearance at the ship's permanent mooring on the Cape Fear River was spotted by Bobby Johnson, a student at Dillon, D.C., High School who was visiting the ship on a tour with his classmates.

American Pizza King Turns Estate Into Rare Hotel

By COTTEN TIMBERLAKE
Associated Press Writer
STAPLEFORD PARK, England (AP) — Strapping, exuberant Bob Payton, Britain's most famous American entrepreneur, has one very prominent British characteristic: eccentricity.

It's evident all over Stapleford Park, the 500-year-old country house the man who became London's pizza king is turning into a hotel-like-nother in his latest venture.

For example, he'll have a fire in the fireplace every day of the year, not for the heat but for the smell.

Then there's the trompe l'oeil in the grand tea room. Peering over the painted banister is a likeness of Gunther, Mrs. Payton's giant schnauzer, wearing a red-white-and-blue bandanna. The dog was added to the decor to celebrate his release from the six-month quarantine required of every immigrating pet.

"I wanted things to be 5 degrees off," Payton said, explaining his desire to have things a bit off-kilter.

Gunther now trots happily around the 55-acre estate in Leicestershire hunt country, where Payton and his wife, Wendy, are striving to create the American dream of an English country house. More specifically, it's a Victorian gentleman's hunting lodge, which opened its doors to guests in April.

"It's sort of Disney World for real," said Payton, who is 6 feet 4 inches tall and weighs 250 pounds and on this misty day was wearing a bold argyle sweater with matching socks.

Payton bought the home, 110 miles north of London, from Lord John Gretton of the Bass brewing family more than two years ago. He used $1.4 million of his own money and since has spent millions more of investors' money renovating it.

Payton, who became famous and wealthy by bringing Chicago-style, deep-dish pizza to London, is deliberate in his details and panders to American notions of what is English.

The 23 rooms and suites, which cost

$160 to $611 a night, have been decorated not only by the usual interior designers but also by well-known English companies, chosen for their recognizable brand names.

For the Wedgwood Room, the china-makers chose hand-printed wallpaper in its blue-with-white-cameos Jasper design.

Shirtmakers Turnbull and Asser hung framed bow ties and curtains made of forest green velvet, of the smoking-jacket variety, lined with silk paisley.

The Liberty Room is cheered with the fabric designer's renowned small-flower prints.

The 125-room house, with a grand, sweeping staircase, is long on marble, mahogany paneling, 16-foot ceilings, leather sofas and framed pictures of British royalty.

Peek into the "loo," the men's room, and heads of wildebeests stare down at you from high on the walls.

Not wanting the hotel to look too new, he ordered reproductions of Victorian spigots.

From the stone mullion windows are stunning views of gently undulating, green countryside featuring sheep, frolicking horses in a grazing paddock and a still lake.

Payton has worked under the close scrutiny of British preservation officials who have allowed him some distinctly American flourishes, too, like the miniature golf course and a basketball net and backboard. Homemade chocolate-chip cookies are left on bedside tables in the rooms.

Payton, who went to the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and still gulps diet soda from an oversized school mug, is treating the hotel like an informal house party.

The Land Rover that picks up guests at the train station, half an hour away in Grantham, arrives with a cooler stocked with Chicago beer.

"It's not going to be a health farm," said Payton.

He has lived in Britain for 15 years and first saw the house in 1980 while he was "riding to hounds," or fox hunting.

"I walked through the front door of the place and I knew it had to be preserved for what it was," Payton said. "This is quite a staggering edifice."

At the time, he added, "I was looking for something new to invent. I thought, 'What am I going to do with my life once I've created my business?'"

Payton launched that business with a pizza restaurant in 1977, when he quit the J. Walter Thompson advertising agency, which had hired him in Chicago and transferred him to London.

Payton had worked his way through college playing drums in a rock band, and went on to Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill., to earn a master's degree in advertising.

The son of a traveling salesman, Payton was born in Troy, N.Y., and reared in Miami.

Although he had trouble raising the initial $66,000 for his first pizza restaurant, his company became hugely successful and will be operating 14 restaurants with names like Chicago

Pizza Pie Factory and Chicago Rib Shack in London and on the European continent by the end of the year.

The company is called My Kinda Town Ltd. — Payton says that refers both to Chicago and London — and had an after-tax profit of $1.88 million on revenue of $21 million in 1987.

Payton managed to raise $8.5 million for Stapleford Park by privately selling stock in My Kinda Town, in which he retains a majority interest.

What makes this hotel a bold experiment is that it's in a part of the country that has traditionally attracted few tourists.

It is a two-hour drive from Heathrow Airport in London, or a 90-minute train ride from London's King's Cross station, before you get into the Rover and take a beer from the cooler.

Monument For Japan Planned

BRY-SUR-MARNE, France (AP) — The French are so pleased to have given Americans the Statue of Liberty that they're at it again.

Only this time, instead of a statue, it's a high-tech monument celebrating the communications revolution and those who have fueled it, and it's going to Japan.

"I came up with the idea for the France-Japan monument two years ago during 100th anniversary celebrations of the Statue of Liberty," project head Philippe Queau said in his office at the National Audiovisual Institute in this quiet suburb east of Paris.

"I asked myself what monuments my grandchildren would be celebrating in 100 years. Instead of a monument to the past, like the Statue of Liberty, I thought of something that would anticipate the future, and I thought of the 21st century in terms of information, a century where the concept of communication replaces liberty," he said.

Today, many of the millions of immigrants who sailed into New York Harbor remember their emotions as they saw for the first time the proud, torch-bearing lady rising out of the water.

In 100 years, Queau hopes, Japanese commuters may have similar feelings about two giant, shimmering mirrors wide enough for ships to pass between, or a quarter-mile-long slab of bronze-coated granite floating in Osaka Bay — two of the seven projects still being considered.

Queau, a mild-mannered 35-year-old computer graphics engineer with a degree from the prestigious Polytechnique Institute, said he had nothing specific in mind when he threw open the contest to sculptors, architects and engineers working in France. Some 335 responded.

A 10-person French-Japanese jury quickly eliminated the most "classical" and far-fetched projects such as a floating wheat field, a heavy cube and a structure too reminiscent of the Sydney, Australia, opera house.

"We want something that is both highly symbolic and that, at the same time, interacts with the environment, that is subject to constant motion or change," Queau said. "The watchword is metamorphosis."

Imagine then "Pixel Island," the brainchild of Piotr Kowalski, 10,000 identical spheroids forming a "non-polluting vessel" that changes form and color depending on the amount of ballast water allowed in by a hydraulic electric pump.

Or Olivier Auber's "Poetic Generator," a vast video game involving millions of teletext and personal computer users who communicate with each other through verbal or visual telematic messages. Each call would be recorded on the outside of a giant floating dome with a light pulse so that when viewed from afar it would look like a huge, shining, ever-changing ring of water and light.

"It sounds complicated but it's based on very simple principles that we use in our daily life," Queau said.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY June 9

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): You can easily get others to go along with your ideas or plans today. Try to find more modern methods for your daily activities.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Don't let others become aware of important decisions you have made, or you will greatly regret it. Build up your financial security.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Contact your closest friends today, and reaffirm your relationships. You can reap many benefits from a social affair this evening.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): This is a good time to gain the support of persons of influence. Take your mate out for a wonderful time on the town tonight.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Something very worthwhile could come from a trip with a couple of close friends. The evening will be a good one if you stay at home.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): If you need some financial advice, listen only to a qualified expert. A social affair with your mate will get you out of that rut you've been in.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): You can get into a profitable new venture with the help of a good friend, but be sure you know all of the details before risking anything.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Approach your work from a new angle, and you will find a way to increase your efficiency. A co-worker can help you greatly with this.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): A special skill you possess can be used much more efficiently and profitably. Set aside time for some recreation this evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Work on making your home more charming and comfortable, then invite some fascinating and cheerful guests in for a fine evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): You can have a wonderful day and evening enjoying the recreational activities you like the most. Be cautious in all communications.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): More modern methods can help you to benefit more from your daily routines. If you need some advice in business, consult an expert.

Opening lead: Jack of ♣

When we were young, we enjoyed experimenting with different bidding styles. This hand, from the finals of the North American Collegiate Bridge Championship held in conjunction with the American Contract Bridge League's Spring North American Championships in Buffalo, show that that is still the case.

The event was won by the University of Illinois. On this deal, Dennis Carney and Justin Graver of UI sat North-South. They used the Precision System to get to an ambitious diamond slam. North's one club opening bid was artificial, indicating 17 points or more, and East's double showed the major suits. South's one diamond response promised at least a five-card suit and 5-8 points. North asked for suit quality, and South showed a suit headed by the jack. Both three clubs and four hearts were asking bids in those suits, and South's replies revealed second-round control in each case.

West led the jack of spades, and East's double came back to haunt him. With nothing to guide him, declarer would probably have taken every finesse in sight, with dire consequences. Since the location of most of the cards was marked, South instead elected to rise with the ace of spades. Next came a finesse of the jack of hearts, and when that held, declarer cashed the king, spurned the trump finesse in favor of crossing to the ace and discarded a spade on the ace of hearts. After conceding a trick to the king of diamonds, he later took a winning club finesse to land his slam.

The Fairies

By Daniel Rouse

Up the airy mountain,
Down the rushy glen,
We daren't go hunting,
For fear of little men,
Wee folk, good folk,
Trooping all together,
Green jacket, red cap,
And white owl's feather!

Down along the rocky shore,
Some make their home,
They live on crispy pancakes,
Of yellow tide foam,
Some in the reeds
Of the black mountain lake,
With frogs for their watchdogs,

All night awake.

Daniel Rouse, 10, a student at G. R. Whitfield School wins this week's writing contest.

Teachers

By Belvoir Elementary Third Grade

Charlotte Gupton's third grade class at Belvoir Elementary School wrote stories about teachers. The following are several of those received.

The teachers are very nice. Teachers like to do different things. I like teachers very much. Teachers are there to help you. Some teachers are short and some are tall. Some teachers do like being teachers. I like my teachers.

Kristy Meeks, 9, receives special mention.

I like teachers very much. They are nice. They teach us a whole lot. What I like best of teachers is they give us homework. They even check our work. Teachers have lots of money. Teachers work very hard at school.

Misha Fetherston, 8, receives special mention.

In the morning teachers pass out our work. Teachers would be nice if they give us work. Teachers put people's names on the board a lot. Teachers eat too much at lunch. Teachers almost never take us outside. Instead, they give us work. I wish we didn't have school. I'll be glad when it's summer.

Michael Hines, 8, receives special mention.

Teachers are very pretty. They have a lot of sense. They teach us how to do stuff. They are nice to children. All teachers have lots of money.

The Mouse That Never Talked

By Keyonda Harper

One day I saw a mouse walking down the street. I asked him to come to my house. When he did, he didn't say a word. I gave him some cheese and tea. I asked him his name. He didn't tell me.

He took a pencil and paper and wrote, my name is J.J. Then I knew that he couldn't talk. I tried to open his mouth. I used a screwdriver and wrench. Finally, I knew that somebody had put lots of tape in his mouth. I took a knife and tried to open his mouth. I tried to cut the tape open.

It took us a long time. Then the tape was all chopped up. He could talk again! We ate breakfast. We went on a picnic. We had a good time. He was happy that I helped him.

Bubbles

By Bianca Murchison

It is easy to describe how bubbles look. Bubbles are round. You can see rainbows in every bubble. The only time you can see rainbows is when they are in the air.

It is fun blowing bubbles. It is fun because we got to go outside. We got to talk to our friends and we got some fresh air.

Bubbles do many things.

They float in the air. Some burst on people. One of the bubbles floated right over the school.

Bianca Murchison, 10, a student at Belvoir Elementary School receives special mention.

Tar Heel Trivia

North Carolina Flag

No changes have been made in North Carolina's red and blue state flag since 1885. The date at the top, May 20, 1775, represents The Mecklenburg Declaration in which the people of that western area declared themselves to be free and independent of the mother country of England.

The date of April 12, 1776, located in the bottom scroll refers to the Halifax Resolution which was the first formally sanctioned declaration of colony officials for independence from England.

Pickles: Good Any Way You Prepare Them

BY CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

On a hot spring day, few things are more refreshing than a cone of ice cream, a tall glass of ice tea or a crisp, fresh pickle.

Pickles are made from the cucumber, the long juicy fruit of a creeping plant, cultivated as a vegetable. Cucumbers assume a pickled nature after being preserved with a concoction of vinegar, salt, water and other ingredients. Try some of the accompanying pickle recipes.

FROZEN CUCUMBER PICKLES

2 quarts cucumber, sliced, unpeeled
1 large onion, sliced
2 tablespoons salt
1 1/2 cups sugar
1/2 cup brown sugar

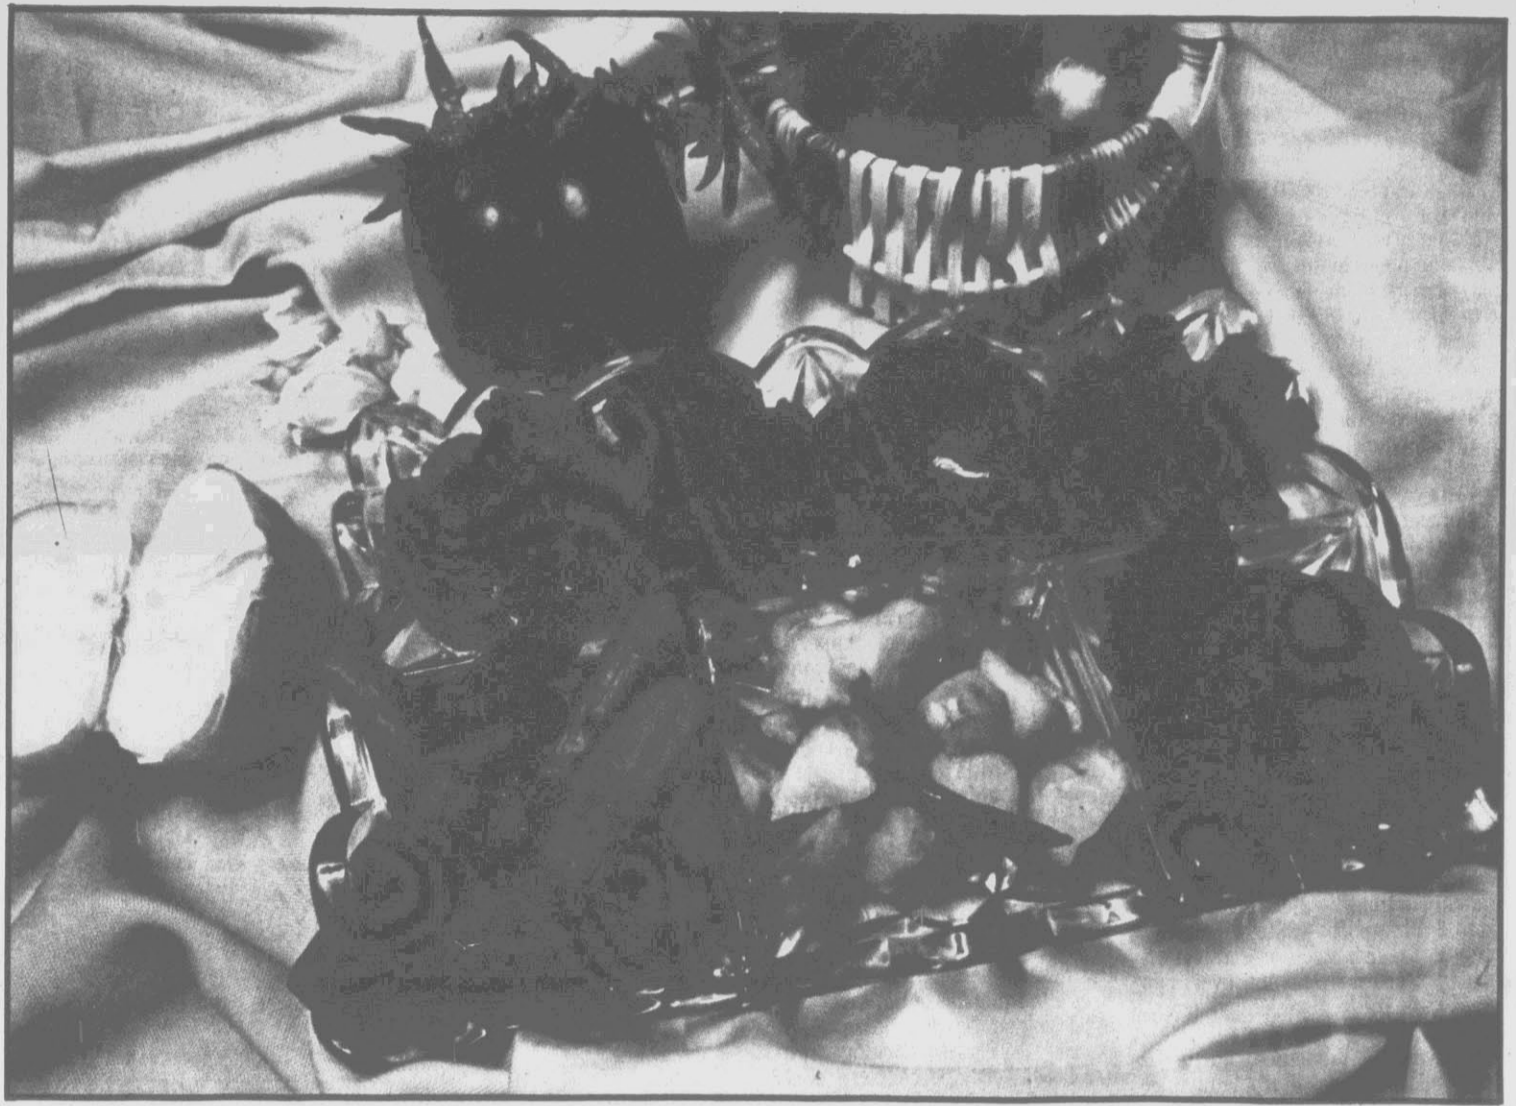

Mix cucumber and onion. Sprinkle salt over mixture and let stand for 2 hours. Drain. Pour sugar over pickles. Do not boil or heat. Let stand 10 minutes, stirring a few times. Put in freezer cups, allow 1/8-inch at the top. Divide liquid in containers and freeze. After 2 days, pickles are ready to eat. Thaw at room temperature. Makes 3 pints.

DILL PICKLES

Pickling cucumbers
1 tablespoon salt per quart of pickles
2 teaspoons dill seed per quart
1/2 teaspoon powdered alum per quart
1/2 jar vinegar
1/2 jar water

Wash cucumbers, cut and pack in quart jars. To each quart, add all the ingredients. Put lids on the jars and place in 250-degree oven for 50 minutes. Garlic cloves and small hot pepper may be added if kosher is desired.

Clams' Ugly Appearance Hides Tasty Interior

By Jean Thompson
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

BALTIMORE — The soft-shell is the "Cyrano de Bergerac" of Chesapeake Bay clams. These long-nosed bivalves will win no beauty contests, but they are in the spotlight this summer. Once a threatened resource, they are experiencing a comeback in Maryland waters.

The plentiful mannosae (pronounced manos), also called squirt clam or long neck, is so ugly and thin-shelled that demand is low. Many shoppers don't realize what a tasty and versatile seafood lies beneath that unattractive exterior, said Noreen Eberly, a home economist in the Office of Seafood Marketing at the Maryland Department of Agriculture.

Strips cut from the soft-shell's "neck," or siphon, can be deep-fried to a golden brown. The juice forms a base for chowder. Minced and mixed with bread crumbs and spices, the meat makes a fine stuffing. The meat can also be used in soups and cioppino, San Francisco's famous fish stew. How about ravioli stuffed with clams? Clam cakes or clam pie? The soft-shell can be substituted for other shellfish in some recipes once you learn to cook with it.

"Traditionally, they are steamed, and they are very, very delicious," Ms. Eberly said. "I've also heard of people cooking them with beer or white wine, making fritters, or making clam sauce for linguine."

That's all good news for shellfish lovers. For as long as the Chesapeake's bounty exceeds the demand, the soft-shell will be a great value, she said. Last week, retail prices for soft-shell clams ran $1.50 to $2 cheaper than hard-shells at Baltimore area markets and seafood stores.

Soft-shells have a great following among watermen and seaside residents, said Diane Lewis, sales representative for Baltimore's Larkin Seafood Co.

"They're a delicacy most people are just afraid to try," she said. "You can drink the juice like tea, it's so wonderful. They kind of remind you of calamary (squid). They're very unattractive but they're very good in soup or fried. I've had them wrapped in bacon and topped with cheese and that's really good, too."

The clams may be hard to find in much of the country: Nearly 95 percent of the Chesapeake Bay's soft-shells are shipped to New England, industry spokesmen said.

"We go through about 30 to 40 gallons a week," said Paul Barber, manager at Cove's Fish Market, a popular eatery and store in scenic Mystic, Conn., near the Long Island Sound. "We get those for frying," he said. "People can order a big plate of them here and at a lot of the fast-food places."

Soft-shells have won a following at family-owned Cantlers restaurant in St. Margaret's near Annapolis, Md. Customers can order them raw, steamed with seafood seasoning, or breaded and fried, says general manager Jim Washington. "They work well in chowder," he added, "but there is a little labor to making it."

Work? Well, let's face it. Cooking fresh clams is not a typical weeknight venture. Advance planning is necessary. Cleaning and shucking clams can consume an hour of your time. The job may take more time if you are fixing a meal for a large family or a back yard full of friends. Soft-shell clams are best handled with a sense of humor, patience, a couple hours of leisure time and some friends in the kitchen to help out.

Here are some suggestions for getting soft-shells from the store to the dinner table:

At the market, look for soft-shells that are alive and have a fresh, ocean-breeze kind of scent. They need oxygen and hold up best rinsed and on ice; submerging them in water for too long can kill them. The shells will be clamped nearly shut. You may detect some motion with fresh ones, which can still squirt water through their distinctive dark necks when you pick them up. Handle with care. Rough treatment of any kind, including moving and washing them, can crack their brittle shells into sharp-edged pieces. Store them in the refrigerator when you get them home. Before cooking, sort them and throw away those with broken shells, uncharacteristic odors, or unusual discharges from the neck.

There are few things worse than grit in your meal, so clean the clams carefully. Wipe shells clean, but don't scrub too hard or they'll break. Place them in a shallow pan in a solution of 1-3 cup salt to one gallon fresh water. An alternative solution calls for 1/4 cup of cornmeal to 1 gallon fresh water. Use enough water to cover the clams and let them sit for 15 to 20 minutes. They'll drink in the water and expel some sand and grit. Rinse and repeat once or twice or more if they seem really dirty.

Soft-shells can be opened with a strong knife, but you can accomplish this without wrestling. "The Joy of Cooking" suggests boiling them in water for about 4 minutes to loosen them up before cutting. "The Essential Book of Shellfish" recommends freezing them, then prying them open carefully with a knife after they have thawed. Steaming them for a few minutes works. Two minutes in a microwave, or 3 to 5 minutes in a conventional oven set at 450 degrees, will also help open the shells.

Remove the clam from the bottom shell. Slit the outer skin covering the neck. Remove the skin and any transparent sheath tissue. The remaining neck meat can be chopped or ground and added to the clam meat for chowders, stuffings, etc. Finally, if you are preparing a white

Kathy Kolasa

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

Q. What can we feed our teens? Concerned Greenville moms.

A. Lots of you ask that question, often with a note of frustration in your voice. I asked Jo Bartlett, who works with us in family medicine and with Nancy Bray in pediatrics, to outline tips for good eating for teens.

Here are some basic guidelines to good eating from Jo Bartlett.

- 1) Eat good sources of calcium — like skim milk, lowfat cheese and yogurt — three to four glasses a day. Calcium is essential for proper bone growth and function of your nervous system.
- 2) Eat fresh fruits and vegetables to give you vitamins and minerals to help you think, grow and go — at least three servings a day.
- 3) Eat whole grains and complex carbohydrates like potatoes (not fries), rice whole grain breads and cereals for fiber to keep you right and energy to keep you going (carbohydrates — this good group provides a lot of energy).
- 4) Eat lean meats for the protein needed for growing muscles and bodies. Choose chicken, fish, turkey and lean pork more often, and try to get away from greasy meats like salami, bologna, hot dogs and southern fried anything. Protein is essential for muscle development but the extra fat is not!
- 5) Don't overeat — being overweight as a teen-ager (which is becoming more common) can cause a lot of difficulties emotionally and physically as you get older. Watch those extra servings and between meal munchies.
- 6) Try to drink water every day — six to eight glasses, if possible. Water helps keep you going.
- 7) Try to limit "goodies" — most types of goodies are empty calories — meaning they have no nutritive value to you, just a lot of calories. Goodies can lead to extra weight and cavities.
- 8) Experiment with new foods — don't zip your lip to anything just because it's different! Be creative, you just may find you enjoy new and exciting foods.
- 9) Be very careful with alcohol consumption — it is not only illegal for most teens but is also high in empty calories. Booze, wine and beer do cause physical damage and can have long-term social punishments if you abuse it.

If you have any questions as to how much you should be eating, ask your physician or local nutritionist. With busy schedules and lots of fast foods around, most teens find it easier to get snack foods or "junk" foods than to sit and eat a real "meal." Not all snack foods are bad, and can even be used in a healthy eating plan. But, you need to make smart choices to maintain good weight, keep your complexion clear and have enough energy to study, play and work. Go with broiled meats, "lite" choices off the menu, baked potatoes instead of fries and a trip to the salad bar for some fresh vegetables. The important thing to remember is not to add all the extras that can add up the calories and create health problems down the line — like high fat salad dressings by the ladle full, tons of margarine and sour cream with bacon bits on your baked potatoes, or the ever favorite extra mayonnaise and cheese on your bacon and cheeseburger! All these extras give you a heaping dose of fat — something not needed by any of us.

All foods have essential vitamins, minerals and components in them that help us grow: carbohydrates (bread, cereal, potatoes and grains) give us energy to go; meats, cheeses and milk give us protein for growth of muscle and organs; and fat also plays an essential role in your growth and metabolism — but is needed in smaller quantities than most people eat, especially in eastern North Carolina.

Good health is a gift — use it to your best advantage. By eating right and exercising regularly, you give yourself the opportunity of a long, healthy life! Bon Appetit!

Authentic Cajun Recipes Featured In New Marie Manuel Cookbook

By JANET McCONNAUGHEY

Associated Press Writer
YOUNGVILLE, La. (AP) — Creating a truly Cajun cookbook means interpreting measurements as well as language, says Marie Louise Comeaux Manuel.

"In writing these recipes, you have to get them from the natives down here. And when they tell you 'a tablespoon,' you have to sit down with them and say, 'Will you show what you mean by a tablespoon?'"

"They may come out with a stirring spoon, or it may be a heaping teaspoon," said Manuel, a retired home economist who grew up speaking Cajun French and cooking totally Cajun.

As well as being director emeritus of the University of Southwestern Louisiana's school of home economics, Manuel, 83, is a consultant for a book that bills itself as the most authentic Cajun cookbook on the market.

"Cajun Cuisine" doesn't list anybody as author; the man most responsible for it is W. Thomas Angers, who formed Beau Bayou Publishing Co. in Lafayette, La., to put out the book.

It does list 14 contributors — cooks well known in their own neck of the bayou, though most probably not known outside Cajun country. One, M.A. "Mac" Greig, has appeared on national television and has been interviewed in several national publications.

The book came out in October 1985 and is now in its sixth printing with about 65,000 copies sold, said Angers' brother and marketing director, Matt Angers.

None of the 235 recipes between its brightly illustrated caseboard covers is a chef's creation like the blackened redfish and Cajun popcorn made famous by Paul Prudhomme.

Rather, the recipes were handed down in the contributors' families.

It's a cook's book rather than a chef's book — its recipes are less detailed and sometimes include fewer spices than other Louisiana cookbooks.

For instance, its turtle soup in-

Biologist Says Spring Is Perfect Time To Get Edible Wild Plants

By PAUL NOWELL

Associated Press Writer
DAVIDSON, N.C. (AP) — Most people look at a field of thick weeds and call it a day's work. To Tom Daggy, it's a salad.

The Davidson College biologist says mid-spring is a great time in central North Carolina to harvest edible wild plants, especially greens.

"You can eat most anything that is green in this part of the country," said Daggy, hand spade and clippers in hand, as he pointed out more than two dozen wild edible plants growing wild on the college campus north of Charlotte. "Some greens aren't very good; some are poisonous, but practically nothing you can die from."

"The only thing I'd suggest staying away from is the mushrooms," he said.

Daggy, a professor emeritus of biology, recalled how he began teaching a class on edible wild plants back in 1973.

"One of my students planned to go out into the wilds of the West and live off the country," he said. "He asked me if I knew about edible wild plants. I told him I didn't know much, but we could learn together."

After a crash course, the student went off to the woods of Idaho, where he ate wild plants as well as rattlesnake and trout. Daggy stayed in North Carolina and began teaching "Biology 104: Edible Wild Plants."

The class proved to be popular. At the end of the term, the students produced a cookbook of their favorite recipes.

"They came up with all sorts of things to put in their soups, salads and quiches," Daggy said.

The spring dinner from his 1987 class featured wild onion soup, sassafras tea, a quiche made up of several wild plants and cookies made of wild ginger and red bud blossoms.

The class isn't meeting this year but will be brought back next year by Bill Lammers, an associate biology professor who helped Daggy.

During a recent hour-long walk around the campus, Daggy said the number of edible plants a person passes each day is surprising.

He pointed out more than two dozen, including chickweed, wild lettuce, violets, clover, duck potato, mint, wild ginger, cattails, wild garlic, hackberry, acorns, wild strawberry, dandelion, mulberries, hen bit, plantain, sassafras and day lilies.

Daggy admits it would be difficult to make a solid diet of only wild edible plants.

"You could do it, but you'd probably go hungry a lot of the time," he said. "The early colonists almost subsisted on a plant called arum. It's found in the swamps of North Carolina."

CLAM RAVIOLI WITH TOMATOES AND BASIL

(Makes 20 to 24 ravioli; serves four)
 8 tablespoons butter
 1/4 cup each finely diced carrots, shallots and leeks
 1 cup good-quality white wine
 2 3/4 cups fish stock, or the same amount of half water and half bottled clam juice 18 to 24 clams, boiled or steamed, shucked and well-cleaned.
 4 egg yolks
 salt and white pepper pasta dough salted water
 2 shallots finely diced
 1/4 cup good-quality dry vermouth
 4 large tomatoes, diced
 4 teaspoons coarsely chopped basil
 4 teaspoons whipping cream
 Cut off siphons of cooked clams. Chop siphons into small pieces with a knife or in a food processor. Chop remainder of clam meat coarsely. (They will be mushy.) Combine and set aside.

Heat 3 tablespoons butter and quickly soften the diced vegetables. Add 6 tablespoons white wine and 1 cup of the fish stock or clam juice-water. Reduce by boiling over high heat until the vegetables are moist, about 15 minutes.

Reduce heat to medium, stir in the egg yolks, and cook until the mixture thickens. Add the clams and season to taste. (Note: Bottled clam juice is very salty; if you used it, you should not add more salt now.) The filling may be removed from heat, covered with plastic wrap and refrigerated for later use, if desired.

When making ravioli, fill each with equal amounts of clam-vegetable mixture. They may be refrigerated covered, if used within an hour, or frozen on trays or waxed paper and then stored in airtight plastic bags. Cook in fast-boiling salted water for 5 minutes if fresh, 6 to 8 minutes if frozen.

To make sauce, heat 1/2 tablespoon butter in a frying pan and soften the diced shallots. Add the vermouth, 10 tablespoons white wine and 1 3/4 cup stock or clam juice-water. Reduce by boiling to about one-quarter of original amount. Strain and return to medium heat. Thicken sauce by adding remaining 4 1/2 tablespoons butter a tablespoon at a time. Fold in the diced tomatoes, basil and cream, heat through and season to taste. Serve over the ravioli.

Estimated cooking time: 1 1/2 to 2 hours.

STEAMED CLAMS

Serves four
 2 1/4 pounds clams in shells
 2 tablespoons oil
 1/4 cup diced onion
 1/2 cup sliced carrot
 1/2 cup sliced leek sprig of thyme
 1 bay leaf
 6 tablespoons water

6 tablespoons white wine
 Wash clams thoroughly several times in cold water. Drain in a sieve. Pour oil into a pan and add clams. Sprinkle with vegetables. Add thyme and crumbled bay leaf. Pour on water and white wine. Cover pan and steam 8-10 minutes, until all clams have opened. Present in stock with bread and butter. Estimated cooking time 30 minutes.

DEVILED CLAMS

(Serves six)
 2 dozen soft-shell clams, steamed and cleaned
 1/2 cup minced onion
 1/3 cup minced green pepper
 1/3 cup chopped celery
 1 1/2 cups French bread crumbs
 1 cup heavy cream
 2 tablespoon melted butter
 2 teaspoons prepared mustard
 1 teaspoon salt
 1/2 teaspoon pepper
 4 strips of bacon, fried and chopped finely
 Parmesan cheese
 Parsley sprigs for garnish
 Clean, steam and shuck clams, being careful to preserve as many shells as possible. Wash the shells and set aside. Place clam meat and necks, onion, green pepper, celery, bread crumbs in a food grinder and blend (or mince all and mash together in a bowl.) Slowly add cream, butter, mustard, salt and pepper, stirring to make a creamy mixture. Spoon mixture back into shells. Bake 12 to 15 minutes at 350. Remove from heat and sprinkle with Parmesan cheese and bacon bits. Broil 2 to 5 minutes or until tops are a light golden brown. Garnish with parsley. Estimated cooking time 1 1/2 hours. (Recipe courtesy of Antoinette Scopinich).

The following recipe is adapted from the Maryland Seafood Cookbook II, put together by the state's seafood marketing office.

FRIED SOFT-SHELL CLAMS

(Makes 6 servings, about 12 clams each)
 About 4 cups fine cracker meal
 4 tablespoons seafood seasoning
 1 quart fresh shucked soft-shell clams, cleaned and drained
 Fat or oil for frying
 Mix cracker meal and seafood seasoning in large shallow bowl. Add clams a few at a time and toss lightly until well-coated. Shake off excess breading in wire basket. Fry a few at a time in deep fat at 375 degrees until golden brown, 1 1/2 to 2 minutes. Repeat until all are done. Drain on paper towel and serve with cocktail or tartar sauce. Estimated cooking time 1 1/2 hours, including time to clean clams.

The following recipe is adapted from one in a free brochure available from the state. To obtain a copy, mail a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Maryland Seafood Marketing, 50 Harry S. Truman Parkway, Annapolis, Md., 21401.

HERBED CLAM FRITTERS

(Serves six)
 2 1/2 cups flour
 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
 1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
 1/4 cup butter
 3 eggs, separated
 1 cup beer
 2 dozen shucked soft-shell

clams with liquor
 1 tablespoon parsley
 1/8 teaspoon onion powder
 1/8 teaspoon pepper
 Oil for deep frying

Put flour, salt, baking powder in large bowl. Melt butter and add to dry ingredients. Lightly beat egg yolks and pour in; mix well. Gradually add beer and allow to stand in a warm place for 1 hour. Add clams, clam liquor and remaining seasonings. (You can add more flour or beer to correct consistency if necessary.) Beat egg whites until stiff and fold in.

Drop batter by tablespoonfuls into hot oil (375 degrees). Cook until golden brown. Makes about 24 2-inch fritters. Estimated cooking time 2 1/2 hours.

Pickles Hit The Spot

CUCUMBER LIME PICKLES

7 pounds cucumbers sliced crosswise
 2 cups of pickling lime
 1 gallon water
 Mix 2 cups of lime to 1 gallon water. Soak cucumbers in lime water for 24 hours. Soak in crockery or enamel ware. (Do not use aluminum ware). Remove from lime water and rinse well three times in cool water. Soak 3 additional hours in ice and water. Drain.

Syrup

 8 cups sugar
 1 tablespoon salt
 1/2 ounce pickling spice tied in cheesecloth

Mix and stir ingredients until dissolved. A few drops of green food coloring may be added, if desired. Pour over cucumbers. Let set overnight. Simmer 2 hours. Do not boil. Put in jars and cover with vinegar mixture and seal.

BREAD AND BUTTER PICKLES

25 to 30 medium cucumbers
 8 large white onions
 2 large sweet peppers
 1/2 cup salt
 5 cups cider vinegar
 5 cups sugar
 2 tablespoons mustard seed
 1 teaspoon tumeric
 1/2 teaspoon cloves
 Wash cucumbers and slice as thin as possible. Chop onions and pepper; combine with cucumber and salt, and let stand 3 hours. Drain. Combine vinegar, sugar and spices in large kettle; bring to a boil. Add drained cucumbers; heat thoroughly but do not boil. Pack in sterilized jars and seal.

CINNAMON PICKLE RINGS

2 gallons large cucumbers
 2 cups pickling lime
 1/3 bottle red coloring
 1 cup vinegar
 1 tablespoon alum
 2 cups vinegar
 2 cups water
 10 cups sugar
 8 sticks cinnamon
 1 cup rd cinnamon hearts
 Peel and remove centers from large cucumbers; slice 1/4 inches. Add lime enough water to cover and soak 24 hours. Wash pickles thoroughly and soak in ice water 3 hours. Combine red coloring, 1 cup vinegar, 1 tablespoon alum and water to cover. Bring to boil and simmer 2 hours. Drain and discard this solution.

Make syrup of remaining ingredients. Bring to boil. Dissolve red hearts and pour over pickles. For 2 days, heat syrup and pour over pickles. Next day, simmer 2 hours. Remove cinnamon sticks while simmering. Pack in jars and seal.

Cajun Recipes Are Featured In New Cookbook By Marie Manuel

cludes a half-dozen spices, including salt and pepper to taste, while Prudhomme's turtle soup includes 11, including measured amounts of white, black and cayenne pepper. Prudhomme's soup requires turtle or beef stock where the recipe in "Cajun Cuisine" uses boiling water. "Cajun Cuisine" has four sentences of directions, Prudhomme 19.

"It's a homemaker's cookbook. What the average housewife would want to use, this is it," said Manuel. The dishes are unlikely to fry your tastebuds, though they do use noticeable amounts of pepper and hot peppers. And they may leave some cooks itching to play with the recipes and see whether one more spice or a half-cup of wine might add a bit more zip.

"One of the things that I do want to stress, is that the Acadian cookery — you use your spices and your seasonings to bring out the flavor of the food and not to destroy it," Manuel said. "And that's the difference between that and your Creole cooking. They do it to the point of destroying the flavor... They don't intend to, I do not think."

Yankee homemakers might blanch at some of the features of Cajun cooking exemplified in the book. There are long cooking times — vegetables sometimes simmer until they disintegrate into an ugly but delicious sludge to be mixed into and flavor other ingredients. And there is the insistence, heretical to those raised on classical French cookery, that a real roux is made with oil or shortening.

Cajun cooks stir up their roux at a much higher temperature than French cooks do, and Manuel could not believe that any cook would make a roux with butter. "You cannot use butter. I know from my experience as a home economist that you cannot use the butter, and the natives would never have done it," she said.

"Because of the protein in the butter, it would burn immediately. You have to use the oil of any kind or Crisco or something of that type."

Here are some sample "Cajun Cuisine" recipes:

BAYOU SAUCE PIQUANTE
 1/2 cup cooking oil
 2 tablespoons flour
 1/2 cup onion, chopped
 1/2 cup celery, chopped
 1/2 cup parsley, chopped
 One 16-ounce can tomato sauce
 One 8-ounce can tomato juice
 1 pound crab meat
 1 pound catfish fillets
 2 pounds shrimp, peeled and deveined
 Make a roux with oil and flour; add onion, celery and parsley and cook until wilted. Add tomato sauce and tomato juice; cook about 1 hour. Add crab meat and catfish and cook another hour, stirring frequently; add shrimp and cook 10 minutes longer.

Serve over cooked rice in soup bowls.
 Yield: 8 servings.

GARLIC GRITS

2 cups grits

1 tablespoon salt
 2 quarts of water
 6 ounces cheddar cheese, grated
 3 cloves garlic, minced
 1/4 pound butter
 3 eggs, beaten
 2 cups milk
 Grated Parmesan cheese
 Add grits to boiling salted water and cook, covered, until grits are tender but mixture can still be poured, about 20 minutes. Remove from heat and add cheese, garlic and butter. Stir until cheese and butter are melted.

Remove from oven, sprinkle with Parmesan cheese and return to oven for 10 minutes.

Yield: 8 servings.

Note: To prepare ahead of time, mix and pour into casserole and refrigerate. Bake just before serving.

CORN PUDDING

3 tablespoons butter
 1/4 cup chopped onion
 1/4 bell pepper, chopped
 2 cups fresh corn (or 2 cups drained canned corn)
 2 tablespoons sugar
 1 teaspoon salt

Black pepper, to taste
 1/2 cup grated cheddar cheese
 3 eggs, beaten

Melt butter in skillet. Saute onion and bell pepper in butter until onions are transparent. Add corn, sugar, salt and black pepper and cook 15-20 minutes on medium-low heat; cool slightly and add cheese and eggs.

Place in a casserole dish and bake at 350 degrees F for 35 minutes.

Edible

Daggy, who's not afraid to bite into just about anything that's green, said he tried arum.

"If you bite into the root, it's so hot you can barely get to a glass of water," he said. "Supposedly, if you dry the root it loses that spicy hot property, but it never worked for me."

Another wild plant used extensively by the early colonists is the Yaupon holly, which also grows near the North Carolina coast.

"They used it as a substitute for tea," he said.

Wild plants often have more vitamins and minerals than cultivated plants, he said. But many tend to be bitter unless they are picked when they are young.

Daggy advises the uninitiated to purchase a book on wild edible plants before venturing out into the back yard to pick dinner. While there are few plants that are deadly, there are a few that could make someone sick — including all types of buttercups.

After 15 years of eating wild plants, Daggy still practices what he preaches.

"Chickweed is very good at this time of year," he said before biting off a two-inch length. "I've already served it several times for dinner."

RASPBERRY YOGURT MOUSSE
 1 1/2 cups unsweetened, frozen raspberries, thawed
 1/4 cup apricot nectar
 1 envelope unflavored gelatin
 1 1/2 cups vanilla lowfat yogurt
 1/2 cup fresh raspberries, optional (or use strawberries, blueberries or peaches)
 4 sprigs mint, optional

Puree raspberries in blender. Place in medium-sized bowl and set aside. Pour nectar in small saucepan. Sprinkle gelatin mixture on top. Let stand for 1 to 2 minutes until softened. Over low heat, warm gelatin mixture just until dissolved. Using small whisk, gradually beat gelatin mixture into puree. Refrigerate for 10 to 15 minutes, or until consistency is like lightly beaten egg whites. Using a hand-held electric mixer at low speed, beat mixture for about 30 seconds until fluffy. Transfer mousse to 3-cup mold or 4 individual serving dishes. Chill several hours until firm. Remove mousse from mold. Garnish with fresh fruit and mint.

Independent Researcher Designs Frozen Dishes

By John O'Dell

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

FULLERTON, Calif. — Mimi Tattoli doesn't look like a person who eats her way through most of every day.

But the 5-foot, 100-pound Tattoli is a self-described "foodie" who spends much of her time eating. Food is both her pleasure and her profession.

It is a combination of genes and the four miles she runs each day that keeps her from ballooning the same way her 7-year-old business has, she said with a laugh while recently showing a guest around the kitchen of her Piccolo Enterprises in Fullerton, near Los Angeles.

"We eat all day long around here," said Diana Bogan, who has been with Tattoli ever since she began designing new frozen foods for clients in 1981.

So far, Tattoli's expertise has been put to work by Lawry's, which retained her company to develop a line of seasonings; by Amfac, the hotel, restaurant, and food products conglomerate, which hired Piccolo to find ways to use freshwater prawns in its foods; by Van de Kamp's Frozen Foods, for which she developed a line of Chinese foods, and by All-American Gourmet.

For All-American, Tattoli's largest client, Piccolo developed the original line of Budget Gourmet frozen entrees and about three dozen additional products, including diet entrees, complete dinners and side dishes.

Tattoli is an accomplished chef, a certified expert taster and a firm believer in the use of fresh, wholesome ingredients in her food. She said her business philosophy is the same as her personal philosophy about cooking: Use fresh ingredients to prepare healthful products that look good and taste good.

"Our goal is to link the artistry of food preparation with the need to serve large-scale amounts. If we in the profession can do that, then we reach the point where you don't have to be able to cook well in order to eat well."

So why does she use her talents to design frozen food for the masses?

Well, frozen dinners today bear little relation to the starch-and-gravy TV dinners of the 1950s, she said. And with so many two-worker families, frozen foods enable busy people to eat well without spending all their time and energy preparing meals — or all their money eating out.

"The swing these days is to premium-quality entrees, with top-grade ingredients," said an editor for Frozen Food Age, a New York-based trade magazine.

It is a $5 billion "cut-throat" market that rewards quality products with hard-to-find space in grocers' frozen food sections, said Pam Bell, products manager for Tyson Foods in Springdale, Ark.

Most of the major players in that market — Stouffer's, Campbell Soup (Swanson), Tyson and Conagra (Banquet and Morton's) — use in-house research and development staffs to design their products.

But Ernest Townsend, founding president of All-American Gourmet, decided to go outside the company to develop Budget Gourmet because he wanted the job done quickly. Today he unabashedly credits Tattoli with laying the foundation for success.

Townsend, recently named president of the frozen foods group of Kraft Inc., which purchased All-American from General Host last year for $296 million, said Tattoli and her crew not only developed the Budget Gourmet line with the speed he had hoped for, but gave it quality and taste.

"That's where Mimi is special," Townsend said. "She's a chef and she understands food. With Budget Gourmet, rather than just creating a product, she really helped create a company."

For Tattoli, Budget Gourmet has provided a long-term relationship that has pumped considerable cash into her company and helped give her the independence she demands. She said that her business is "very profitable" and that she turns down about 80 percent of the jobs she is offered.

Tattoli, says Townsend, is a tough businesswoman, but she "doesn't like watching expense accounts and three-year plans and all the corporate stuff. In fact, she's got so much business stacked up, she doesn't even make business plans for her own company. She doesn't need to."

She also doesn't advertise and there's no sign on the door of her test kitchen located in a small commercial complex in Fullerton.

"We believe in total privacy here," she said. "When we are cooking, that's all we want to do. We probably only have people besides us in here maybe three or four times a year."

Tattoli has a few other rules that her prospective clients must agree to follow if they want her services.

For one thing, she only develops products that use prime, fresh ingredients not only because she believes that they taste better, but because she believes that they help the manufacturer maintain a high level of quality.

"People in the plants where they make the product can tell if there is anything wrong with something that goes in fresh," she said. "If the milk is curdled, or the cheese is too old, they can see it and smell it. You can't do that when you use only parts of the real food, like dried sour cream."

Tattoli and her staff also create a bit differently from the researchers at companies such as Tyson and Stouffer's. She never makes up more than a quart or two of any recipe in their test kitchen. The larger test batches that lead up to the first production run are all done at the client's production site. That, she said, ensures quality control and enables her staff to make adjustments to the recipes so that the final product tastes as close as possible to the initial one-quart "home made" batch.

In designing a product, Tattoli usually receives a set of ground rules from the client — what the product should be, any special ingredients it should contain and how much it should cost at the retail level. Then she, Bogan and Valerie Wong go to work, assisted by Dave Moore, Piccolo's shopper and food preparation specialist, and Lori McCarty, who sets up the final production specifications.

Bogan said that scores of versions of a recipe are prepared before a final version is picked. Among the things that have to be considered in the preparation are how the ingredients will interact after being frozen and then cooked by the consumer. Some of the ingredients, therefore, are merely blanched; others are cooked to varying degrees so that everything will come out properly when prepared at home.

After the final recipe is selected, Piccolo takes it to the client's manufacturing plant, where an initial run of about 300 gallons is prepared, tasted, adjusted and tasted again. That process is repeated for weeks, until a first production run of 10,000 cases — or 120,000 individual dinners — is ready.

The entire process, in the case of a new product line, can take more than a year and cost $5 million to $10 million, exclusive of the retail marketing and advertising costs, Tattoli said.

Tattoli said she had always been interested in food, although she majored in English for her first two years in college. She grew up in New York and Washington, the daughter of a Chinese diplomat who brought his family to the United States in 1948 when he came to work at the United Nations and who stayed after the Communist Party took power in China in 1949. She graduated from New York University with a degree in food science.

Her first job was in Indiana as a food technologist with the Fleishmann Co. She said her specialty was "fats and oils, but I loved it because I got to bake a lot to see how the various products interacted with flour and other baking products."

In 1969, Tattoli came to California with her husband and went to work for Hunt Wesson in Fullerton, where she worked in frozen foods, dry foods, oils and fruit products before being singled out as having an exceptional palate.

"They gave tests to all the employees and on the basis of my results, they trained me to be an expert taster," she said. The job involved more than being able to tell the difference between sweet and sour.

Why Are Our Chicken And Shrimp So Much Better?

That's the way we do things at Golden Corral. Maybe that's why everything tastes better at Golden Corral.
