Garrett Retains Lead, But New Vote Likely

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Democrats in Consolidated District A will probably get another chance to vote in the county commissioner primary between D.D. Garrett of Greenville and James H. Dupree of Bethel, according to elections Supervisor Margaret Hardee.

Garrett won a runoff by two votes — 1,171 to 1,169 — and after the canvass and a recount he still has a two-vote lead, but Dupree has filed a complaint citing an irregularity in the election process.

Two voters in Greenville precinct No. 7 that were eligible to vote in the race were not instructed properly by precinct workers at the Elm Street Gymnasium voting site, and they were not allowed to vote in the Garrett-Dupree contest, election officials said.

The Pitt County Board of Elections scheduled a meeting at 5 p.m. today to set a date for a hearing to consider Dupree's complaint, and Mrs. Hardee said she expects the county to call another election.

"I expect we will have a new, second primary, and it looks like the voters will have a chance to go to the polls again," Mrs. Hardee said.

"I don't see what else (election officials) can do. The law speaks against a third primary. And if you open the voting books again, that's a third primary," Garrett said.

"I've won," Garrett said, citing the results of the runoff, the canvass and the reount Wednesday. "This makes the third time in the same situation. All I need now is for the Board of Elections, the community and Mr. Dupree to recognize that.

"How many times do I have to win? That's three times winning for the same seat," he said. "It's a small margin, but I'll accept victory."

Garrett said Dupree's complaint is not accurate because the two voters in No. 7 were not actually denied the right to vote, they simply did not vote in the county commissioner race. A contest for a spot on the N.C. Court of Appeals was also on the ballot in the May 31 runoff.

"No one has been denied the right to vote," Garrett said. "Those same people voted in the judgeship race ... Those voters just didn't elect to vote for us.

"No official at the polls is supposed to volunteer help, unless it's requested," Garrett said. "And if these folks did not request help, they weren't denied help."

Dupree declined to comment until the elections board makes a decision.

Mrs. Hardee said a precinct worker, Elizabeth Deal, failed to check the names of voters Carolyn F. James and William T. James to see if they were eligible to vote in Consolidated District A. Only a portion of the voters in precinct No. 7 are in Consolidated District A, which is a combination of regular commissioner districts 1 and 2.

Mrs. Deal did not realize the Jameses — both Dupree supporters — were eligible to vote in the county commissioner race and did not give them qualified-to-vote forms that would have signaled pollworkers to instruct the Jameses to vote in the race.

Crash Kills 3

KRUMBACH, West Germany (AP) — A U.S. Army helicopter on a routine training mission struck a power line today and crashed in a field along a busy highway, killing all three Americans on board, Bavarian police said.

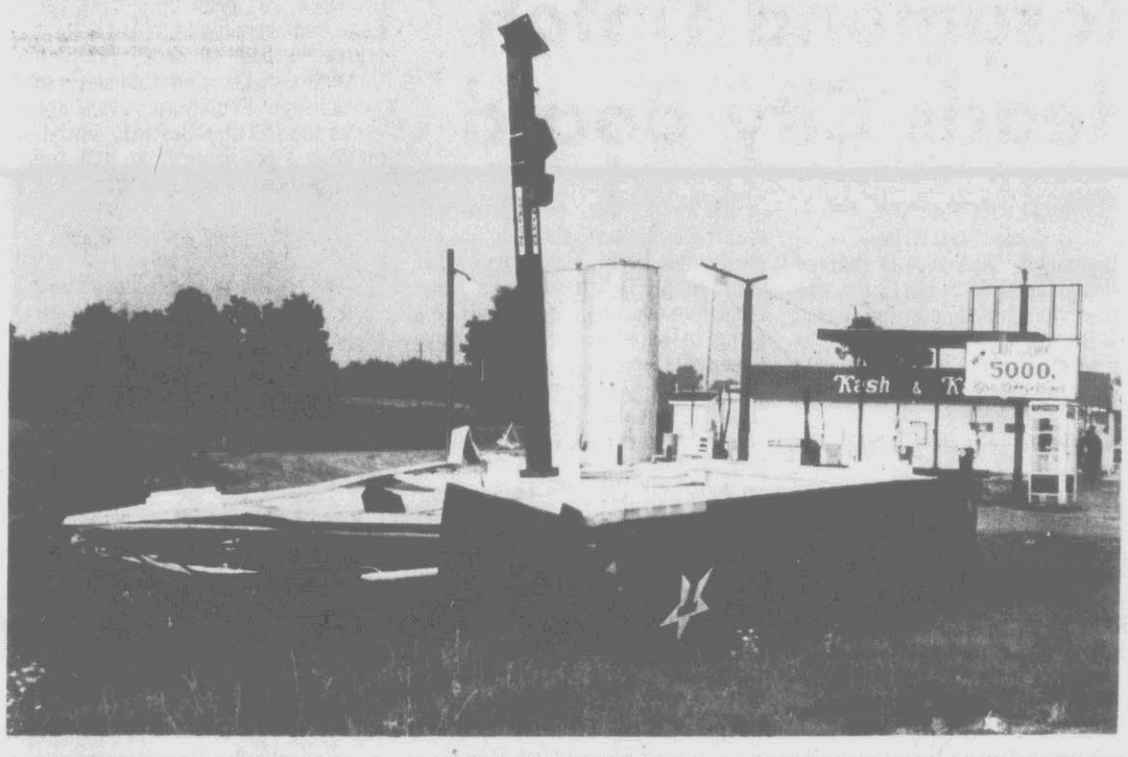

Sgt. 1st Class John D'Amato of the 56th Field Artillery Brigade in Schwaebish Gmuend confirmed the three crew members aboard — all American servicemen — were killed.

D'Amato said the crash occurred near the village of Hittistetten in the district of Krumbach, about 50 miles west of Munich.

The model UH1H helicopter was on a routine training mission and was returing to its home base at Goettingen, nine miles west of Schwaebisch Gmuend, when it crashed, said D'Amato. Schwaebisch Gmuend is about 25 miles east of Stuttgart.

"Names of the dead are being withheld until next of kin are notified," he added.

The aircraft belonged to the 193rd Aviation Company, a support unit of the 56th Field Artillery Brigade.

SHELTER DAMAGED — Wind sheers created by hot weather and a front moving through the area caused some damage in areas south of Greenville Wednesday, according to Bobby Joyner, Pitt County's emergency services coordinator. Joyner said winds damaged a shelter over gas pumps at the Kash and Karry store on N.C. 11 just north of Grifton, shown above. He said minor damage occurred to a house that was apparently hit by lightning and some shelters were also damaged. A house near Calico was damaged when part of a tree fell on the dwelling. Joyner said no injuries were reported. (Reflector Photo by Thomas Forrest)

Koreans Battle In Fiery Set-To

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Thousands of radical students armed with clubs, rocks and firebombs and screaming "Yankee go home" stormed into the streets today and battled riot police, who blasted them with tear gas.

The vicious street fighting occurred around Yonsei University, where roughly 20,000 students had gathered for a march Friday to Communist North Korea to press for unification.

Students clashed with riot police in at least eight provincial cities when authorities tried to block marches in support of Friday's march or tried to stop radicals going to Seoul.

In Seoul, police armored vans fired hundreds of tear gas bombs into the charging students as special martial arts squads tried to hold the protesters off. At least a dozen riot policemen were engulfed in orange flames after being hit by firebombs.

Scores of police and protesters were injured in the fighting.

The students had surged out the school's main gates to attack police after they heard the sound of fighting in nearby streets, where cordons of riot police were trying to turn away students attempting to reach the campus.

"Down with the military dictatorship!" and "March to North Korea!" students yelled as they pelted the lines of riot police with rocks and bricks.

FAA Allocates Airport Money

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

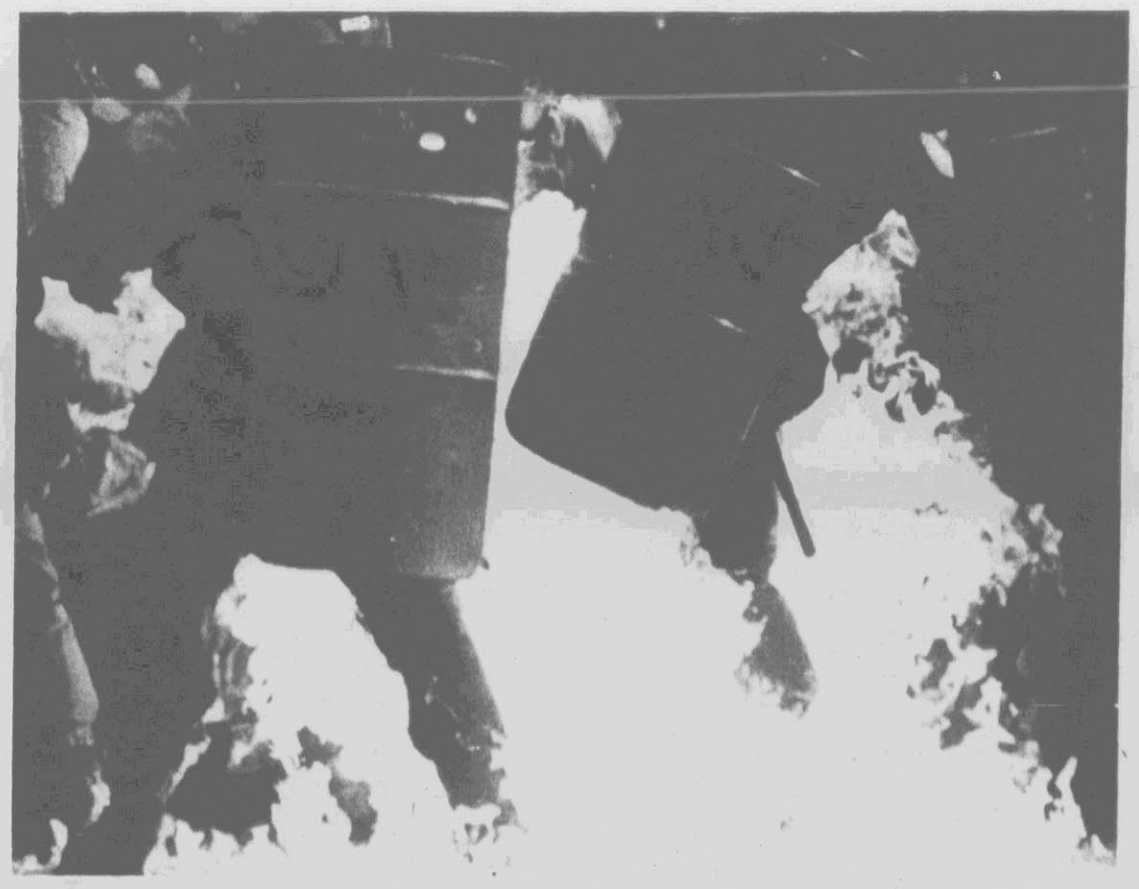

The Pitt-Greenville Airport has received a tentative allocation from the Federal Aviation Administration for an expansion project, and airport officials will now move to secure local funding.

Airport Director Jim Turcotte said the LPA Group Inc., a South Carolina-based architectural firm with an office in Raleigh, will begin work on preparing specific plans for the expansion, which is expected to cost between $900,000 and $1 million.

The project will increase the size of the aiport terminal from 5,000 square feet to 13,000 square feet — adding space for airline offices, a conveyer-belt baggage claim area and space for rental car companies.

The FAA has allocated $588,736 for the project, said Turcotte, who received notice Wednesday. "That's

Pitt GOP Chief Out

The chairman of the Pitt County Republican Party has resigned, and the organization's executive committee will meet within the next few weeks to select a new chairman.

Carlton Smith confirmed today that he has resigned his position, but he would not comment on his reasons and he referred all questions to vice chairwoman Mary Lou Sugg.

Mrs. Sugg said Smith cited personal reasons when he announced his resignation at a county GOP meeting Tuesday. The executive committee has not set a date to elect a new chairman, she said.

Smith is also a candidate for a seat in the state House, running for one of the two seats in the 9th District held by Democratic Reps. Walter Jones Jr. and Ed Warren. County and state election officials said they have received no word as to whether Smith plans to drop out of the race.

Another county Republican, Michael Karachun, withdrew from the House race on May 24. In a hand-written letter to Pitt County elections Supervisor Margaret Hardee, Karachun stated he left the race for health reasons.

Whittington Says One Mystery Over

The Rev. Jim Whittington has expressed "appreciation for the investigation carried out by postal authorities in Philadelphia and the successful resolution of the matter in the issue of determining why some people in that city were claiming they were not getting mail we sent to them."

"What happened in Philadelphia is that we received numerous complaints from people there, so consequently we asked postal authorities to look into the matter. We've had this same problem in a number of cities, including Greenville, of postal people making their own decision on

Greenville Shelter Expands Services To Seek Causes For Homelessness

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Community Shelter has hired a program director to promote its goal of easing the plight of the area's homeless, according to a shelter official.

The Rev. Samuel W. Loy, shelter president, said the half-time director, Nancy Pierson, will work with grant applications and conduct grant award management. She also will work with other community agencies to develop interaction between agencies and referrals.

The program director is the second paid staff position filled by the shelter. A half-time shelter manager, Tommy Tucker, was hired last month to be responsible for nightly operations, help supervise and train the night captains who stay with the residents, and to assist in daytime cleaning duties.

"We are going a step beyond what we initially started out to do," Loy said. "We are beginning to not just provide basic services, but to begin to address some of the root causes for homelessness."

"The support that we've got from the community shows an awful lot of interest and concern and I think that by hiring these two staff people, we are simply reflecting that concern," he added.

Located at Myrtle Street and Manhattan Avenue, the shelter ocupies the multipurpose building of the formerly vacant Agnes Fullilove School property.

The shelter opened its doors to the homeless of the community on Jan. 11 and, according to Loy, has provided safe, nightly lodging to about 18 people per night.

The shelter opens at 9 p.m. and guests are required to leave at 7 a.m. the next morning. Since its opening, approximately 350 volunteers have contributed their time to supervise procedures at the shelter.

Upon arrival, shelter residents follow a checking-in procedure, including a shower. Shelter doors are closed at 10 p.m. and lights are turned off at 11 p.m.

A state award of about $7,000 was granted to the shelter earlier this month. That money came in addition to a $24,567 grant received last year. Eligible activities for grant use include operation of the shelter, rent payment, maintenance costs, utilities, insurance and the purchase of furnishings and appliances. Loy said grant money cannot be used for salaries but he said it does free up some money that has been contributed and can be used for saleries.

Loy said the shelter has reached a point of "normal growth" where attempts are made not just to shelter the homeless but to help remedy their situation through the assistance of various community agencies.

"We're trying to do what we can to be a part of an interagency network and trying to refer people who come to the shelter to other agencies in the community that can help, such as the Department of Social Services or the

Larceny Arrests

Three people were arrested by Greenville police Wednesday on theft charges.

Officer S.D. Hilliard said Juan Hill, 32, of 33 Matthews Trailer Park and Robert Dwayne Joyner, 20, of 1500 Dickinson Ave. were arrested on larceny by employee charges in connection with the theft of $96 worth of curl and wave kits and $61 worth of baby powder and other items from Garner Wholesale on Memorial Drive.

Hilliard said the two were taken into custody about 1:20 a.m.

Detective S.B. Pass said Ponderus Omego Streeter, 31, of 1211 Battle St. was arrested on breaking, entering and larceny charges about 9:30 a.m.

Pass said Streeter was charged in connection with a May 27 incident at Perkins Oil Co. on 14th Street, where a stereo and two speakers were taken.

Rosamond Tipton Heads City Board

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Rosamond Tipton was named chairman and Ella Tyson Harris was elected vice chairman of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Commission at the board's annual banquet Wednesday night at River Park North.

Both were elected to one-year terms.

Three members of the commission, immediate past chairman Dr. Carl Wille, Dr. Robert Deyton and Dr. Al King, are completing six years' service and are leaving the board. The City Council is expected to name three new commission members at it's meeting tonight.

All three received recreation T-shirts and Wille, as past chairman, received the traditional mounted gavel presented by the department to outgoing chairmen.

Noting that he will soon relocate to Atlanta, Wille praised the work carried out by the Recreation and Parks Department. "Greenville is where things get done, where the system of the department takes an idea for the public good, follows through on it, takes it to the City Council.

"Somehow, within six months, results materialize. For me, serving on the commission, being a part of the Greenville community in this capacity, has been an experience that quite simply is more fun than anything I've ever done in the past. It's going to be hard for me to leave Greenville."

A plaque was presented also to Rose High senior Julie Song for her one-year service as the representative of Rose's Youth Council in an ex-officio capacity on the commission.

City Council members Mildred Council, Rev. William Hadden, Nancy Jenkins and Lorraine Shinn were guests at the annual banquet.

Boyd Lee, executive director of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, recognized about two dozen department workers attending the affair, including personnel from both major areas — recreation and parks.

JAYCEE APPEAL

The Greenville Jaycees have sponsored the Greenville Fourth of July festival for the past 16 years. But this year, faced with increased cost of liability insurance and entertainment, the club is asking the community to participate in the cost. Anyone who is willing to help is asked to call Ricky Langley, 752-6004, or Fred Keith, 752-6761.

Donations may be sent to 16th Annual Fourth of July Festival Fund, Greenville Jaycees, P.O. Box 258, Greenville, N.C., 27835-0258.

Langley said that in fiscal year 1987-88, the Greenville Jaycees raised and donated $40,000 to local and state charities. Now, he said, the club is asking for some back — for the good of the community.

Western North Carolina Fries In Record Drought

By HARRY AMANA
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Crops are withering and water supplies are dwindling as a record drought maintains its grip on western North Carolina, and experts say rainfall in the next few weeks will be critical for this year's crops.

"Oh, the (fields are) dry," said Bobby Peek, agricultural extension agent in Buncombe County. "I've been here since 1960 and have never seen things this bad this time of the year."

The major concern among farmers is for the grain crops — the area's chief commodity — including corn, soybean, and sorghum. Greenhouse vegetables — irrigation crops — are doing well for now. But the drain on irrigation ponds is lowering the available water supply.

Farmers also are worried about the third largest crop, tobacco.

"Corn is just lying there. Not enough moisture to germinate it. Some early corn is barely surviving," Peek said. "Transplants of tobacco are dying. They stood there for a few days, and now they're starting to die. I never have known a spring like this and nobody you talk to has, either."

Peek said the county's water arteries are low and many of its wells have gone dry.

"They usually come back in winter," he said. "But many didn't come back this winter. The few wells we have are now going deeper. Five to six years ago, 150 feet was considered pretty deep for a well, now we go twice that depth."

Grant Goodge, a climatologist with the National Climatic Data Center in Asheville, said the problem is compounded because it is not only a surface phenomenon. Underground water supplies also are approaching record lows, he said.

"If we get lucky (with rains) and things turn around and relieve the surface-drought condition, there could still be very little replenishing of deep-water storage during the summer," Goodge said. "We could still be in a bad situation because very little rain will sink through to replenish the underground supply."

Goodge describes the drought as the worst part of a general pattern that goes back to 1980, and compares it with one of the state's worse drought periods in the 1950s.

"This particular episode is equal to, or greater than the 1950s," he said.

Goodge said the problem is not that the region has been in a particularly dry weather pattern. But the major storm systems that traversed the state during the winter and spring went dry when they hit the mountains.

"We've had at least four significant (climatic) episodes that could have given us up to two to three, and in some cases, four inches of rain," Goodge said. "But the systems produced only a maximum of about one-half inch of rain, and only up to one-tenth of an inch in many places."

The result has been a drastic change in the region's water supply when compared with last year.

Carl Cross, an agricultural statistician with the division of agricultural statistics at the North Carolina Department of Agriculture, said that last year 4 percent of the region was "very short" of water, 15 percent was "short," and 81 percent was adequate or had a surplus.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Wrong Message

Part-Time Lawmakers More Efficient

The writing may be on the wall for North Carolina's legislature, but its message might not be in the best interest of the state.

Given a choice, a general assembly made up of part-time members is the most efficient means of governing the state. That is what North Carolina has had since it was founded and the system has worked well. The cost of state government had been kept the lowest in the nation at $1.17 per capita.

It is becoming obvious, however, that North Carolina is inexorably moving toward legislators who receive full-time salaries and remain in Raleigh most of the year.

The signs are there in this year's short session. Such a session didn't exist some years back. The legislature met every other year, approved a biennial budget and then went home. Only an emergency would bring the legislature back in an off year for a special session.

This year the short session itself is producing evidence of the march toward full-time legislators. The base salary for legislators is now $10,140. A bill is pending which would increase that pay by 110 percent. That is not likely to pass — not in an election year — but there will be some increase in legislators' salaries and very likely it will continue to increase in future years. How high? Well the highest in the nation will soon be Pennsylvania with a salary of $47,000. Soon, however, New York will go to $57,500 for its legislators.

In North Carolina, whether individual legislators are for or against full time status, they are spending more time in Raleigh. Not only are there annual sessions, but there are more committee meetings to attend and more official and unofficial duties.

As the state's population shifts to urban, the politicians will tend to be professionals, as opposed to the large landowner or small town businessman who has gone to Raleigh for limited service.

No doubt North Carolina can afford the salaries which will be required to pay full-time legislators. That, however, will be only the tip of the iceberg. As lawmakers spend more time in Raleigh more support staff will be necessary, not only in the form of committee staff but also in personal staff for each legislator. The state only has to look at the U.S. Congress for a model.

The debate is already under way on the question of full time legislators. The points favorable to full time are that all those elected can't serve on a part time basis. Thus the state must rely on those wealthy enough to provide their basic incomes. The negatives, however, still override. A full-time Legislature is cost-oppressive. Once it happens the growth in support bureaucracy will be unending. And then there is that golden rule of politics: the government which governs least governs best.

Stopping the drift toward a full-time general assembly may be impossible. But it should be delayed as long as possible. Once North Carolina reaches that state there will be no backing off. The cost of the General Assembly will simply grow and grow.

Public Forum

To the editor:

The Charlotte Observer, which helped spotlight the PTL excesses, has tried to enlighten the public about comparable political excesses. The Observer has called attention to the role of Political Action Committees in gaining the undivided attention of the North Carolina General Assembly on such issues as "comparative fault" regarding liability relative to accidents. According to the Observer, the Academy of Trial Lawyers passed around campaign money to friendly legislators. Predictably, the bill the lawyers wanted was passed. The power of money in politics is well-known, all the way from county offices to the national level. The only likely way to limit the ability of powerful interest groups to "buy" public offices or legislative favors is to limit spending.

Before our General Assembly is House Bill No. 1124 "Campaign Expense Limits." Beginning in 1990, candidates for state office could voluntarily limit campaign expenses and, in return, receive financial assistance from a "Candidates' Fund" derived from voluntary taxpayer donations of all or part of their state tax refunds.

Representative Walter Jones Jr. of Farmville has conceived and promoted this bill, which passed in the House in 1987. May it be well-received this year during the short session of the State Senate.

To the editor:

As a lifelong resident of Pitt County and a graduate of the Pitt County school system some 21 years ago, I would like to say thank you to the Pitt County school system and some of the finest teachers our county has been blessed to have.

Due to a big part on our teachers in Pitt County, I now have the honor of attending my son's graduation from D.H. Conley High School.

If we as parents would support and stand behind our teachers, as my wife and I have throughout our son's school life, I know they would have a better chance to make it in life. Our teachers play a very important part in our county and the development of our young people.

Come on, parents, when you see a teacher today, take time to tell them thank you!

Cars, Jobs, Clothes Or School?

RALEIGH — Teachers, principals, school boards, legislators and governors can only do so much in the effort to improve academic performance. At some point, the onus for improving the educational performance of North Carolina students will fall on none other than the little darlings themselves. That time may be fast approaching, at least in the battle to cut the high school dropout rate.

After the education subcommittee of the Joint Governmental Operations Committee heard an exhaustive report on dropouts, several key legislators said it is time to tighten up on students themselves. All the political effort in the world won't work, they said, if students are more interested in cars, jobs and clothes than in educating themselves.

Barry Kibel, an education consultant who authored the dropout study, said that he'd found, through interviews with students and administrators, that high school students are often working long and late hours during the school year. Most are not working to help their families survive, Kibel said, but are working to earn the money to buy a car, go out on dates and have nice clothes. A few are saving for college, he said.

After the meeting, Rep. Bobby Etheridge, D-Harnett, said that the legislature should begin studying the question of work hours for those under 18. Many states regulate the hours that can be worked by these teens on school nights. State and federal law already limit the hours which teens aged 14 and 15 can work.

Etheridge's comments came after Margaret Hayden of the Department of Public Instruction had told the committee that studies show that working more than 15 hours a week is very harmful to the educational performance of teens.

Rep Billy Watkins, D-Granville, said he'd like to take a look at driver's licenses. He said the legislature ought to consider the idea of limiting the driving hours, during the school year, of those aged 16 and 17. The state might want to restrict driving to daylight hours, he said.

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, who was not at the meeting, has already proposed that when students drop out of school, they lose their licenses.

Sen. Ken Royall, D-Durham, said he'd like the legislature to reconsider a proposal he made as a House member in 1969. He wants the state's mandatory attendance age raised from 16 to 17. Testimony during the committee indicated that states with the 17 legal age have lower dropout rates than does North Carolina.

Royall also blasted congressional efforts to raise the minimum wage to $5.50 an hour. "You give them $5.50 an hour, and they can't wait to quit at 16," he said.

The Kibel study said that students are often working 40 hours a week in addition to attending school. Many are working until midnight on school nights on the late shifts at fast food restaurants, he said. The students are usually exhausted at school the next day.

These issues aren't likely to come before the current legislative session, but with legislators like Watkins and Royall pushing these ideas, it's almost certain that they'll be on the agenda in 1989.

Money Helped Win Democratic 'War Of Attrition'

WASHINGTON — If life were a grade B movie, Michael S. Dukakis would be the nice boy who got the girl at the end.

Fourteen months after entering the presidential race as a self-described long shot, the serious, sober and slightly stuffy Massachusetts governor is the Democratic nominee in all but title. Some of his opponents were flashier and some, for a while, were hotter, but slow and steady passed them all sooner or later.

Victories Tuesday in the final primary states of California, New Jersey, Montana and New Mexico gave Dukakis more than enough Democratic national convention delegates to top the 2,081 he needs to win on the first ballot. An Associated Press count gave Dukakis 2,251 delegates as of Wednesday.

A year ago Dukakis was merely one of a group of Democratic hopefuls called the Seven Dwarfs. Actually, the Democratic field all-told numbered eight: Bruce Babbitt, Joseph Biden, Michael Dukakis, Richard Gephardt, Albert Gore, Gary Hart, Jesse Jackson and Paul Simon.

In the end, the two candidates who really mattered were Dukakis and Jackson, the one who won and the other who made history (and finished a respectable second with more than 1,600 delegates.) Dukakis took 30 state contests, far more than any rival.

He earned them one by one, competing hard in virtually every primary state, fielding a staff of hundreds of paid workers and thousands of volunteers, raising and spending more money than any rival and wooing uncommitted "superdelegates" in an elaborate, months-long courtship.

He did it with a message that struck many as boring: a promise of "good jobs at good wages, and I mean good jobs at good wages." Running on his record as a three-term governor of a state that had enjoyed a remarkable economic recovery, he eschewed flamboyance and rarely attacked his rivals. He was optimistic about America where some of his rivals — notably Missouri Rep. Gephardt and former Colorado Sen. Hart — were depicting a gloomy future.

Despite criticism from rivals and pundits that Dukakis' message was too general and too bland, the candidate stuck to the theme that he outlined in his April 29, 1987, announcement speech: "vibrant and sustained economic growth that provides genuine opportunity for all Americans," to be delivered by a chief executive officer with a track record of competence.

The missteps of others helped Dukakis. His most formidable rival, Hart, dropped from the race last May amid reports of extramarital affairs. Another rival, Delaware Sen. Biden, was also forced out early on, after reports that he had plagiarized a speech by British politician Neil Kinnock and elaborated on his past.

Democratic pollster Peter Hart says Dukakis was the beneficiary of "the fact that somebody else was always in the spotlight." Critical media attention was focused first on Hart and Biden, later on Gephardt and Jackson, rarely on Dukakis.

But Dukakis had his own share of tough knocks, and, unlike his rivals, he weathered them well. Most damaging was the disclosure in early October that Dukakis campaign manager John Sasso had secretly provided reporters with the videotapes of Biden and Kinnock that showed Biden a copycat and set into motion his ruin. Dukakis fired Sasso, whom he called "the closest thing to a brother I have," and publicly apologized to Biden supporters.

In July, Kitty Dukakis, the candidate's wife, confessed that she had been for 26 years dependent on amphetamines, a disclosure that cut at her husband's image as an anti-drug crusader.

Later, Dukakis was surprised to be beaten by Illinois Sen. Simon in that state's primary and by Jackson in the Michigan caucuses.

But Dukakis, sustained by his own determination, a powerful political machine and a big bank account, "put his head down and kept on going," in the words of Democratic consultant Greg Schneiders. That kind of even forward pace impressed voters that Dukakis was "a very solid and steady person and, on the presidential level, steadiness is critical," he said.

Those who fought Dukakis agree. "A good deal of his success is, in fact, attributable to his personal qualities, to his steadiness and his discipline," said Fred Martin, former campaign manager for defeated rival Gore.

The Dukakis campaign was, as Dukakis likes to say, a marathon. "They thought through the whole campaign. It wasn't based on a single idea, a single event, a single day," said pollster Hart.

The key to such an ambitious effort was money. The Dukakis campaign, fueled by Massachusetts contributors and Greek-Americans, raised far more than any of its primary opponents: $11.4 million by the day of the first contest, the Feb. 8 Iowa caucuses, almost $24 million by the end of May.

The money gave the campaign the power to organize all over the country.

"In every state we went into, they (Dukakis staffers) were there ahead of time," recalled a top Jackson field director Wednesday. "You'd get into town and find they had already taken the best office space, booked all the cars at the best car rental agency, tied up the local union phone banks."

But the Dukakis campaign also husbanded its resources, perhaps reflecting the candidate's well-known personal frugality. The campaign for the March 8 Super Tuesday primaries is a good example.

Realizing that Dukakis could not beat Gore or Jackson in most southern states, the campaign focused on states that it could win: Maryland, Massachusetts, Washington, Texas and Florida. When, at the last minute, $2 million was made available, campaign manager Susan Estrich decided to save the money. Dukakis won the states he targeted and went north to the next round of primaries with $2 million to spend.

The money and the "war of attrition" approach enabled Dukakis to sustain setbacks and that, many political experts say, was probably a key factor in his victory.

Campaign communications director Leslie Dach: "Running in every state meant that every Tuesday (primary day) we were at risk. But it also meant that if there was a Tuesday where we didn't do as well as we hoped, everyone knew that we were already looking forward to the next Tuesday. So we didn't rise or fall on every Tuesday's news. And other campaigns did."

Methodists Expecting Light Agenda

LAKE JUNALUSKA, N.C. (AP) — Fifty-four petitions, which range from church salaries to resolutions on South Africa, will be discussed by 2,200 delegates from the Piedmont and Western North Carolina at the annual conference of the United Methodist Church.

The agenda was considered so light that one delegate suggested in Wednesday's opening session that all issues be brought directly to the conference floor, bypassing the 15 legislative committees assigned to review petitions and make recommendations.

The motion failed in a vote of delegates assembled in Stuart Auditorium.

One delegate, John Borchert of the Charlotte District, said several years of light business "could spell the end of legislative committees for this conference."

"We really don't have much to jump up and down about," said Borchert, who works in the conference office in Charlotte.

Vigorous debate split the World Peace Committee as its 80-plus members discussed the proposed resolution in opposition to Israel's abuse of Palestinians.

Committee members voted overwhelmingly for the petition after scrapping a motion to dismiss it. Frank Gordon of the Gastonia District — one of 14 in the conference — said the church had no business judging the Israelis' actions.

"The attempt of the Israelis is to restore peace to the area," he said.

Connie Hicks of the Waynesville District disagreed, asking "What could be more Christian" than bringing both sides to the bargaining table.

The petition calls on Israel to end its "current iron-fist policy" and "stop the beatings, end the killings, stop deportations of Palestinians, and enter into negotiations with Palestinian civilians and-or the Palestine Liberation Organization."

Prof Says TV Curbs Reading

ASHEVILLE (AP) — At a critical point in their development, children around the age of 10 succumb to television and begin to lose one of life's greatest pleasures — the joy of reading, a professor at the University of North Carolina at Asheville says.

Teacher-education professor Arthea "Charlie" Reed said families should agree on a schedule of television viewing each week, just as they might make out a grocery list or a schedule of vacation activities.

Reed said that turning on the television at other times, especially for reasons of boredom, should be forbidden.

Reed, author of a forthcoming book titled "Comics to Classics: A Parent's Guide to Books for Teens and Pre-Teens," suggests that parents use a child's interest in specific television programs as a springboard for getting them to read books on similar topics.

Reed said that during the early grades, schools and parents focus on teaching children to read.

But by the fourth or fifth grade, Reed said, children are expected to read on their own and the curriculum shifts to more academic textbooks.

Meanwhile, parents assume the job of teaching children to read is finished. "There's very little pleasure reading in the school curriculum from the fifth grade on," Reed said. "It's now work. But a child doesn't become a reader by reading textbooks."

Edgecombe May Keep Up Effort

TARBORO, N.C. (AP) — Edgecombe County Commission Chairman Tom Bardin said Wednesday that although plans for a solid waste incinerator have not publicly been discussed, he hopes that commissioners can still pursue the idea.

His statement was made during a meeting of the Edgecombe County Economic Development Corp.'s Board of Directors and comes two days after commissioners decided not to volunteer the county for a waste management park.

The proposed park was to include a hazardous waste treatment facility and low-level radioactive waste facility, as well as a regional solid waste incinerator. While commissioners decided to abandon the possibility of volunteering for hazardous and low-level radioactive waste facilities, they have not mentioned abandoning the idea of a solid waste incinerator.

Bardin said he felt the public opposition to the park was more against hazardous waste management than low-level radioactive waste. The majority of people who went to Barnwell County, S.C., to tour its low-level radioactive waste facility were satisfied, he said.

Legislators File Proposals To Make Waste Site Attractive To Counties

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Bills filed in the House and Senate would levy a special tax on a low-level radioactive waste facility, and could generate more than $500,000 a year for the county hosting the facility, state officials say.

George Givens, staff researcher for a joint legislative committee developing an incentives package, says a 2½ percent tax on gross receipts would generate $500,000 a year from a hazardous waste facility and probably more from a low-level radioactive waste facility.

"It's likely that a gross receipts tax of the same amount would generate some more than that for low-level," Givens said Wednesday.

The measures filed Wednesday also would require companies vying to operate the facility to pay a $100,000 application fee.

Both proposed assessments would be part of a package of incentives that legislators hope will persuade at least one county to volunteer to host the facility, which the state is required to begin operating by 1993.

"We are feeling our way along," said Rep. George Miller, co-chairman of the joint select committee developing the incentives package. "This is a beginning."

The panel might come forward with additional ideas for incentives before the Legislature adjourns and will continue work afterward, Givens said.

Lawmakers have been wrestling with how to compensate the host county — whether it volunteers or is forced to host the facility — since last year, when a law was passed establishing a commission to find a location.

That law contained a clause stating it was the Legislature's intent eventually to establish a $90 million trust fund for the host county — which Miller, D-Durham, called a long-range goal.

Of more immediate concern, he said, is finding ways to raise funds that the host county could use to improve its schools, roads and other services.

An eight-state compact has designated North Carolina to operate a regional waste facility for 20 years, starting in 1993.

Legislative Report '88

By MARTHA WAGGONER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — A Democrat-dominated committee gave swift approval to a resolution that would allow the House to consider whether the General Assembly should abide by the state's open meetings law, but Republicans remained dubious of their support.

"I guess I'm a little skeptical, but we welcome them aboard on this issue," said House Minority Leader Betsy Cochrane, R-Davie.

The House Rules Committee approved the resolution from Rep. Bill Boyd, R-Randolph, on Wednesday with few questions. But Boyd said he was sure "somebody instructed for that (the swift approval) to be the case."

But Speaker Pro Tem Jack Hunt, D-Cleveland explained the committee's decision: "We're just trying to be real easy to get along with," he said. "We're a bunch of lambs."

The resolution now can go before the House, where a two-thirds vote is required for the bill to be considered.

The proposed bill adds a section that says a public body means any three members of the Generaly Assembly. It also deletes a section that says a committee or subcommittee of the Legislature "has the inherent right to hold an executive session when it determines that it is absolutely necessary to have such a session in order to prevent personal embarrassment or when it is in the best interest of the state."

The proposal has been stuck in charges of political maneuvering since the opening day of the Legislature last Thursday, when Jim Gardner, the Republican candidate for lieutenant governor, appeared at a news conference with Boyd to voice his support for the bill.

"This sort of takes the issue momentarily away from Gardner," Mrs. Cochrane said.

The resolution was presented to the committee and passed after only one question. But charges that the bill was politically motivated surfaced again after the meeting.

"We're interested in open meetings and we try to have them," Hunt said. "We'll give it due consideration."

But he said: "I think it's obviously political."

Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, said he was concerned about the bill's wording: that a public body includes any three members of the General Assembly.

For example, he said, he rooms with Rep. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, and Rep. Bobby Etheridge, D-Harnett. He asked if the bill would require that they "give public notice that we planned together every night to sleep."

And he warned that "the open meetings law is more than opening a door." It also involves such actions as giving notice of meetings, he said.

Nesbitt said he hoped Boyd was "being sincere," but then said he believed the bill was politically motivated. "There's not going to be much around this town this summer that's not political," he said.

Boyd said he was surprised at the ease with which the resolution passed the committee but said he wasn't interested in making it a battle between Republicans and Democrats.

"I was not trying to make a partisan issue of it, but certainly it will be partisan in the fall if it doesn't pass," he said.

He said he had expected it to take a week or two for the bill to come before the committee but now thought it could go before the House as early as Thursday.

Quick Adjournment Talk Makes Rounds

RALEIGH (AP) — After nearly a week of seeming inactivity, legislative leaders say the process of assembling the state budget is shifting into high gear — and may move so quickly that lawmakers could head home later this month.

"When you haven't got money to put in new programs like has been recommended by the governor, there's no reason that we should stay here," said Sen. Aaron Plyler, D-Union, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

The Legislative Building was abuzz with talk of a quick adjournment Wednesday. But skeptics noted that the General Assembly often stays in session days or even weeks beyond the leadership's adjournment target dates.

That didn't stop high-ranking lawmakers from making rosy departure forecasts.

"Not later than the 24th," said Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee.

"I think about two weeks," Plyler said.

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, the Senate's presiding officer, made several guesses last year and was wrong every time. This year, he laughingly refuses to speculate about when the session will end.

But he added: "It takes two to tango and ... the Senate's ready to dance."

The Joint Appropriations Committee was to meet this morning, and key budget leaders from both chambers planned separate meetings this afternoon.

Similar gatherings will continue for a couple of weeks as two bills are developed — one for ongoing programs and one for capital projects, Jordan said. Spending may be cut in some areas to allow bigger increases in others.

Fiscal analyst David Crotts informed lawmakers Monday they could add $421.5 million to the 1988-89 budget, a surplus to be generated by unspent appropriations and tax collections.

Gov. Jim Martin last month submitted a surplus budget plan that seeks $558.7 in new spending, including $37 million in business tax cuts.

IN THE STATE

Indicted

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A Laurinburg man has been indicted on a manslaughter charge in connection with a cocaine-overdose death, and officials say it may be the state's first case of a suspected drug dealer being held responsible for a customer's death.

Christopher Chavis was arrested Wednesday in Anson County Superior Court on manslaughter charges in the death Nov. 24 of Jeffrey Dean Usrey of Lilesville.

Anson County Sheriff Tommy Allen said Chavis is the first person to be charged in connection with a death from a drug overdose in Anson County. A spokesman for the North Carolina attorney general's office said officials were unaware of other manslaughter charges in a drug-related death in the state.

Syphilis Increase

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Reported syphilis cases are up 35 percent so far this year over 1987, with a growing number of women diagnosed as having the disease, health officials say.

The changing ratio may mean that gay men are adopting safer sexual habits whereas heterosexual groups are not, Nick Engel, of the Division of Health Services in the state Department of Human Resources, said in an interview.

Infected women bear children with congenital syphilis, which can cause stillbirths or missing limbs or other abnormalities, said Engel, a regional supervisor of sexually transmitted disease control,

Five cases congenital syphilis have been reported in North Carolina so far this year, according to James R. Fowler Jr., the head of the sexually transmitted diseases program in the Division of Health Services. Last year, there were only two cases reported, and no cases were reported in 1986.

Boat Fire

HAVELOCK, N.C. (AP) — An early morning fire Wednesday damaged a boat and motor outside the residence of a man who was sentenced for voluntary manslaughter a day earlier, authorities said.

The boat fire was reported at the residence of Johnny Edwin Kesler, 28, of Havelock, said Havelock Fire Chief Mike Green. The owner of the 17-foot fiberglass boat is Robert Roat, the father of Kesler's wife, and the boat was registered to Janet Roat.

An estimate of damage to the outboard motor and the body of the 1978 light commercial fishing boat was unavailable, Green said.

Body Found

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — The skeletal remains of a Havelock man — killed Jan. 14 after an apparent fight with a roommate over rent money — were located after the roommate led law enforcement officials to where he had left the body, authorities said.

In an abrupt turn of events, Johnny Edwin Kesler, 28, of Havelock, decided during the lunch recess of Craven County Superior Court on Tuesday to change his plea of innocent to guilty. He accepted a plea bargain from the state rather than face trial on first-degree murder and larceny charges that carried a maximum life sentence with conviction.

Judge Herbert O. Phillips III of Morehead City sentenced Kesler to the maximum 12 years allowable under the plea arrangement.

Kesler pleaded guilty to the Jan. 14 voluntary manslaughter of Albert Eugene Mike Simpson III, 23. The charge carries a 20-year maximum sentence. Charges of larceny and first-degree murder were dismissed.

Citations

CHARLOTTE (AP) — N.C. Division of Alcohol Law Enforcement agents issued 28 citations for liquor law violations at a Lake Wylie restaurant over the weekend.

"We had no idea it was as bad as it was until we got down there," Ron Parrish, ALE district supervisor, said about Sunday's violations at Docksiders.

Parrish said citations were issued for serving alcoholic beverages to underage customers and for selling alcoholic beverages to intoxicated people.

The legal drinking age in North Carolina is 21.

Long Hearing

RALEIGH (AP) — The state's longest running N.C. Utilities Commission hearing — consideration of a 13.9 percent rate-increase request by Carolina Power & Light Co. — entered its eighth week Wednesday.

The length of the CP&L hearing is due mainly to the question of whether CP&L should be allowed to recover its full $3.9 billion investment in the Shearon Harris Nuclear Power Plant. Consumer advocates question the prudence of that investment; they say the cost of the 900-megawatt plant was driven up by what they contend was mismanagement.

State Losing HMO Health Insurance

RALEIGH (AP) — Thousands of state workers in eastern and western sections of North Carolina will be forced to return to a standard medical insurance plan since Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina is dropping its health maintenance plan with the state, state officials say.

The Blue Cross Personal Care Plan — which now provides coverage to 77,369 state employees, teachers, retirees and their families — was not among three companies that submitted bids for new HMO contracts that take effect Oct. 1.

The three companies that submitted bids by a Monday deadline were Kaiser Permanente of Raleigh and PruCare of Charlotte, both of which now provide HMO service to state employees, and Maxicare North Carolina.

"The big issue is — will Maxicare be accepted?" Paul G. Sebo, program services specialist for the state health plan, told the News and Observer of Raleigh.

"If it is, the state employees in the greater metropolitan areas will have an HMO choice," Sebo said. "But if isn't, and the other two companies are approved, the only state employees left with (HMO) options will be in the Charlotte and Triangle areas."

Currently, 340,725 people are enrolled in the state's traditional health plan. There are 77,369 people enrolled in the Blue Cross HMO, 14,426 with Kaiser and 4,668 with PruCare.

Sebo said that Kaiser is licensed to serve state employees in a 30-mile radius of the Charlotte and Triangle areas. He said PruCare is licensed to serve only the Charlotte area.

Maxicare serves more than 52,000 people in 48 counties in the state, said Michael L. Close, marketing director for Maxicare North Carolina. Its subscribers include Carolina Power & Light Co. and Burroughs Wellcome employees in the Triangle, as well as people in Charlotte, Winston-Salem, Greensboro, Greenville and Goldsboro. Close said Maxicare currently could handle an extra 10,000 to 20,000 subscribers, based on its existing staff.

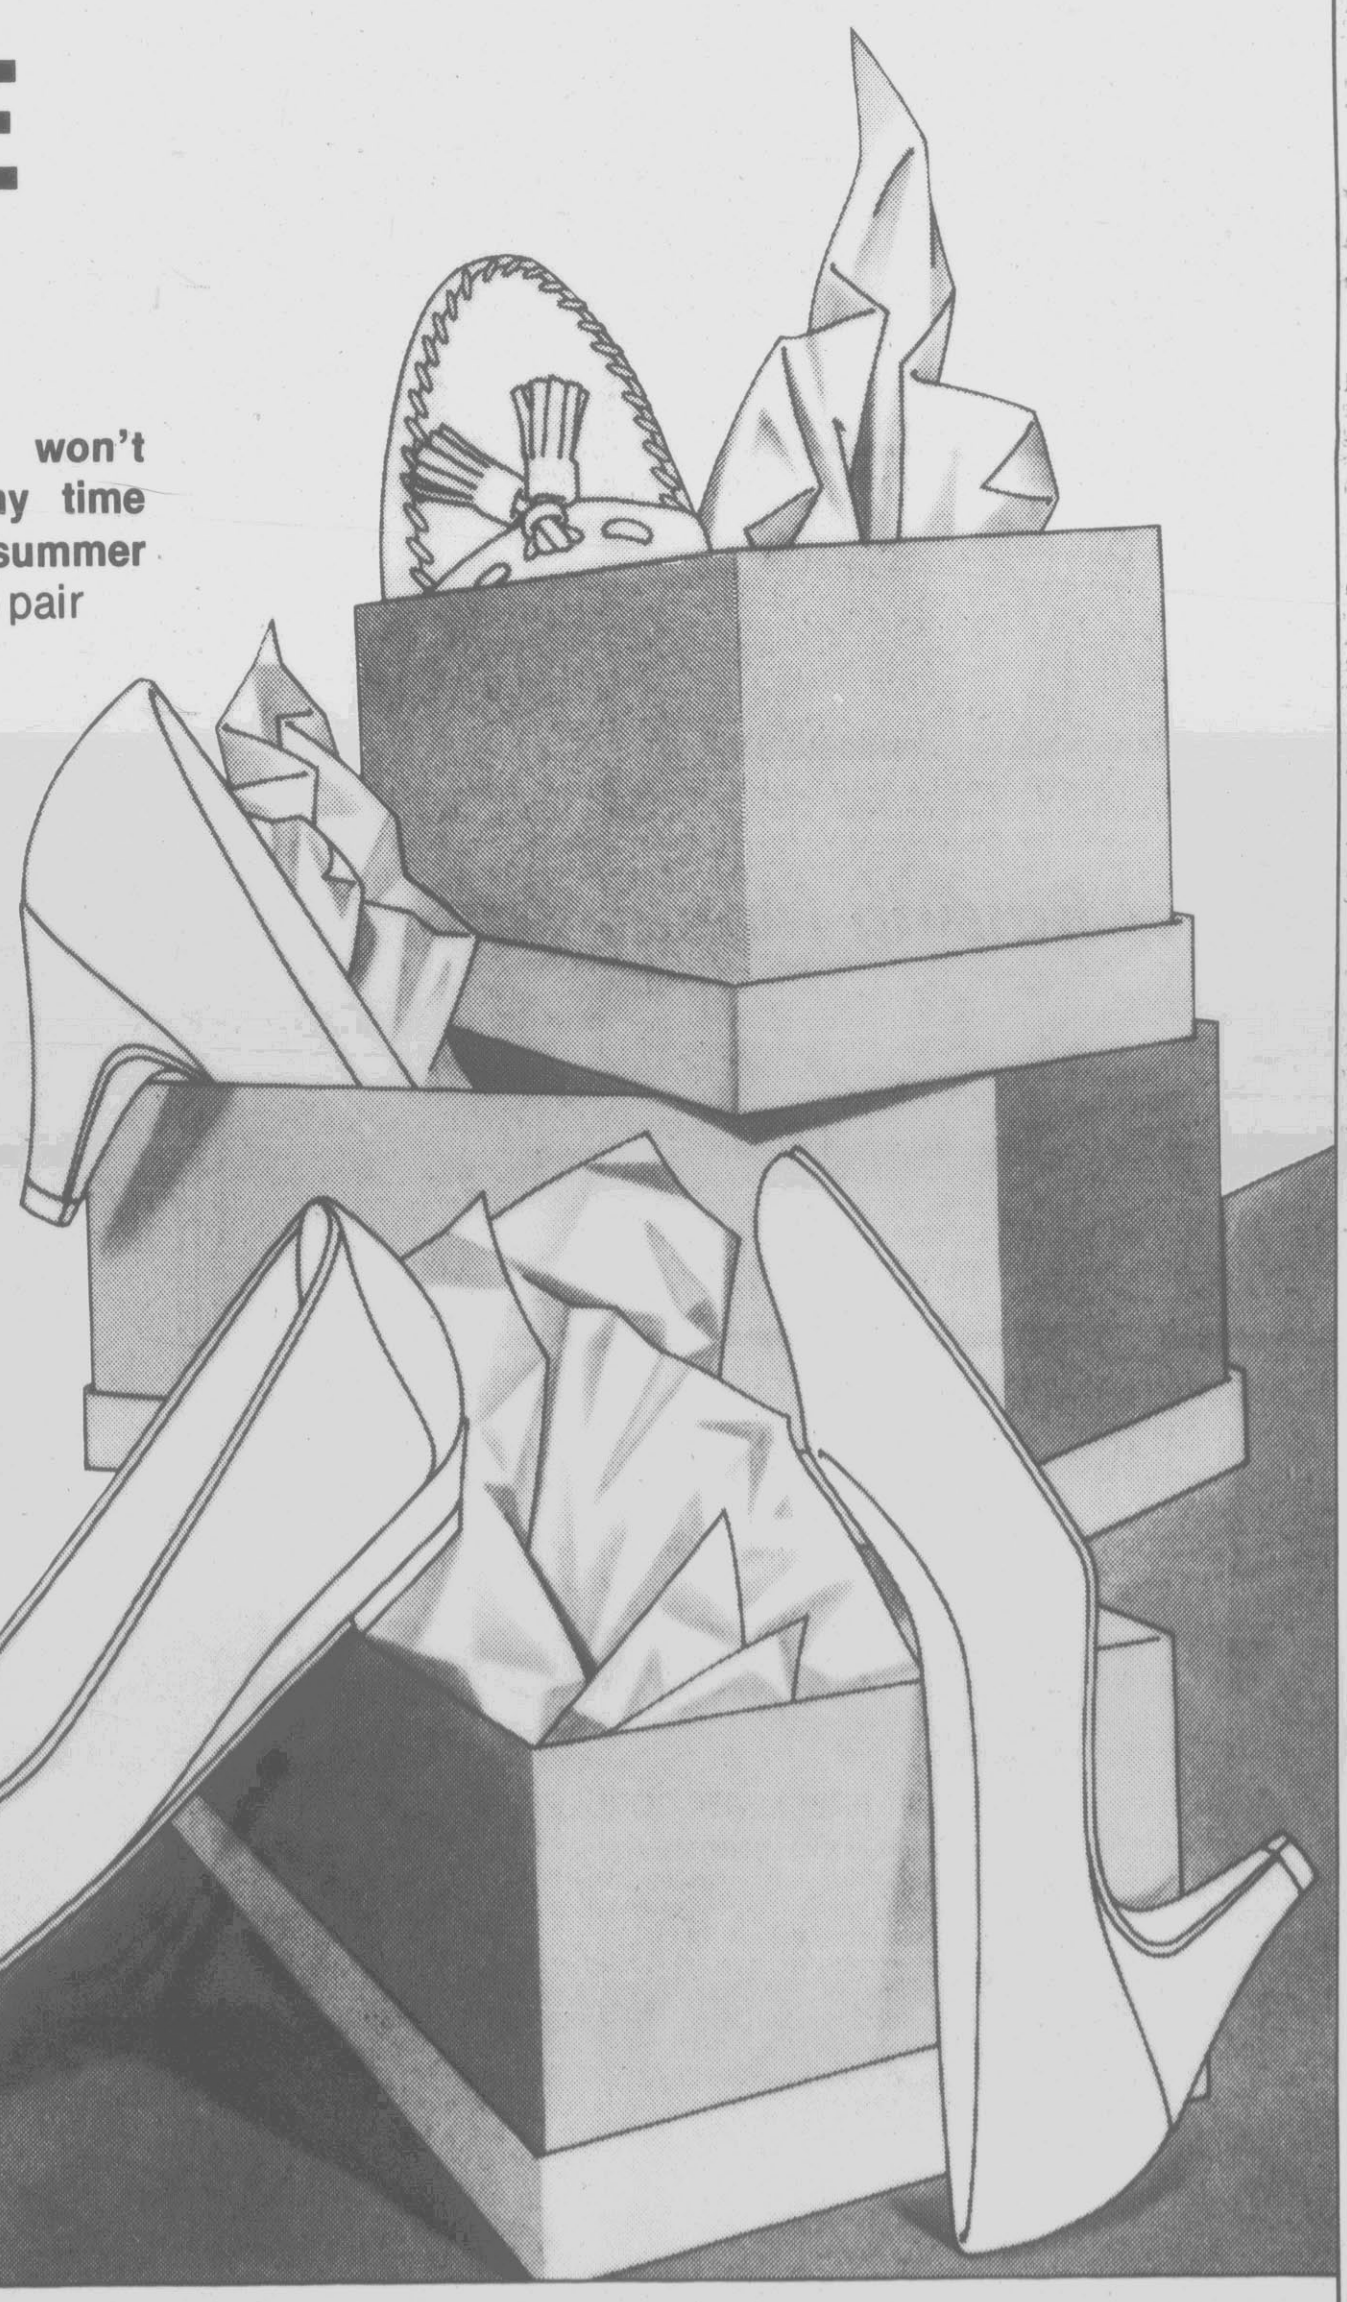

In a health maintenance plan, a subscriber pays a fixed monthly amount for medical services, goes to certain physicians and specialists for treatment and usually pays a small amount for minor services.

Blue Cross spokesmen said they did not bid because they were dissatisfied with the terms set by the state health plan for the new contracts.

Sebo said the state contract calls for the HMOs not to restrict the number of subscribers.

Graduates Meet Long College Waiting Lists

By The Associated Press

Increased competition for available openings in colleges has meant more students put on waiting lists and few of those wait-listed students being admitted, college officials say.

At Duke University, only about 20 students from a list that has 300 to 500 names have been offered admission for fall 1988. Last year, 246 Duke hopefuls were plucked from the school's waiting list.

Most colleges and universities use waiting lists to fine-tune their admissions process. That way, a school can dip into its list of standbys if it finds students who have been accepted have decided to enroll somewhere else.

At more selective schools — such as Duke and N.C. State University — students often get wait-listed when their credentials are good but perhaps not good enough to win them a spot at first glance, officials said.

N.C. State's admissions director George Dixon said a typical wait-listed student there has a solid B to B-minus average, Scholastic Aptitude Test scores of 900 to 1000 out of a possible 1600, and has been "reasonably involved in school."

Of the 350 students who have been wait-listed at N.C. State — where applications this year have increased about 15 percent — about 50 students have been offered admission to the freshman class. Last year, the waiting list was about 200, and a similarly small percentage was accepted.

N.C. State said the remaining 300 students had been encouraged in a letter dated May 20 to consider other schools.

"One of the difficulties of having more qualified youngsters apply than you have space for is you have to say 'no' to some very good kids," Dixon said in an interview.

At the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, about 50 students from an in-state waiting list that exceeds 800 will be admitted — about 6 percent. In previous years, as many as 30 percent of wait-listed students have been admitted, according to Anthony Strickland, associate director of admissions.

"We are placing people on waiting lists this year who three years ago we would not have thought twice about before accepting," Strickland said.

East Carolina University officials have abandoned their waiting list altogether because they have been able in recent years to fill the freshman class with qualified students early in the year.

Other schools — such as Appalachian State University and UNC-Wilmington — fill their waiting lists with late-comers, rather than borderline students.

At UNC-W, the freshman class was full by mid-February. Qualified students who applied later were placed on a waiting list regardless of their credentials.

According to Diane Zeeman, director of admissions at UNC-W, no one on the 424-student waiting list would be accepted this year. She said there was no room.

"If schools are processing applications on a first come, first serve basis," Ms. Zeeman said, "then the earlier bird gets the worm."

At Appalachian last year, all of the roughly 150 wait-listed students eventually were admitted. But this year, only a few of the 300 students on the list are likely to be admitted, said admissions director T. Joseph Watts.

Watts said Appalachian had received applications from 1,200 students who met admissions criteria after the 1,850 spots in the freshman class had been filled.

At Wake Forest, none of the roughly 300 wait-listed students has been admitted to the 830-member freshman class.

William Starling, Wake Forest's director of admission and financial aid, said that the probability of wait-listed students being admitted has "dimmed a bit" because more already admitted students have said they would enroll than anticipated.

"It's an anxious time, because I think (the students) want to settle in their own minds where they're going to be," said Watts. "They literally call us on a daily basis to ask if there any news."

For others, getting wait-listed breeds creativity.

Starling said he recalls receiving a papier-mache foot from an aspiring student who had been wait-listed a few years back.

"It arrived with a note," Starling said, "that said: 'Now that I've got my foot in the door, I hope my body will follow.'"

UNC Official Says State's Colleges, Schools Need Stronger Cooperation

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — The state's high schools, community colleges and four-year colleges and universities must work together to provide continuity in education, a University of North Carolina administrator told a study panel.

Dr. Roy Carroll, University of North Carolina vice president for planning and general administration, said the UNC Board of Governors and the state Board of Community Colleges have different missions because they pursue different programs.

But he said a point of tension between the two sectors is a refusal of some four-year institutions including UNC to accept transfer credits from community colleges.

A committee from the Commission on the Future of the N.C. Community College System held its first of four regional hearings Wednesday as it examines the 25-year-old community college system and assesses its future. Other hearings will be held in Durham, Jamestown and Asheville.

Findings will be drafted into a report and presented to the leadership of the community college system, which will use the information to try to influence the General Assembly, said Dr. E.K. Fretwell, chancellor of the University of North Carolina at Charlotte who chaired the committee on governance, leadership and institutional relationships meeting.

Carroll suggested computerizing requirements of the higher institutions so students in high schools and community colleges can walk into a library and "push a button" to find out if courses they want to take are transferrable.

Dr. Gayle Simmons, executive vice president of Central Piedmont Community College in Charlotte, argued that stopping points in the educational process are not in the best interests of students.

He described how CPCC has developed relationships with both UNC-Charlotte and the Charlotte-Mecklenburg schools to provide continuity.

He said UNCC so readily accepts CPCC transfers that sometimes UNCC's juniors outnumber freshmen. Simmons also described CPCC efforts to contact high school drop-outs to urge them back, either to the school they left or to an alternative community college program for which the board of education pays tuition, transportation of students and their textbooks.

Richmond Technical College President Joseph Grimsley described a "Tech Prep" program developed jointly by that county's high schools and the community college.

The program is a course of study designed to give high school students a blending of academic and technically-oriented courses to prepare them for advanced study at the community college level.

BAKKER WAVE — Former PTL leader Jim Bakker waves after a news conference Wednesday outside the new office he has set up about a mile from Heritage USA in Fort Mill, S.C. Bakker, shown with attorney Jim Toma, said he is trying to regain control of the ministry he built. (AP Laserphoto)

Plants Found

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — A farm in Robeson County was raided Tuesday night and four people were arrested after authorities said they confiscated 650 marijuana plants with a street value of $1.2 million dollars.

Another 300 or so plants were seized from other parts of the county, officials said.

Charged with conspiracy to traffic in marijuana were Leroy Locklear, 46; Jeffrey Locklear Jr., 19; James Lewis and Michael Hunt. No ages were given for Lewis and Hunt, according to the Robeson County Sheriff's Department.

All face a minimum five-year prison term, authorities said.

Bakker Raising Money Again

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — PTL founder Jim Bakker says he has met with businessmen to try to raise money for the crumbling television ministry, but he says his immediate objective is to meet with PTL leadership "to formulate a plan to save Heritage (USA) and not to sell it."

Bakker said at a news conference in front of his newly established offices on Wednesday he has started raising money to buy back the $160 million evangelical empire. He declined to say how much money has been raised for the ministry he built over 14 years and lost 15 months ago after a sex and money scandal.

"We're just getting the finances started," he said. Asked if he had the resources to buy PTL, he said, "God does."

"God has given us a plan how to pay for it and how to restore it," he told The Associated Press. "The same God that has given me the vision to build it has given me a vision to maintain it."

Bakker's office is next door to the headquarters of the Bring Bakkers Back Club. He discussed the Bible and his experiences since his scandalous departure from PTL with supporters at the club's headquarters before his news conference on Wednesday.

Prosecutors Face Four Iran-Contra Trial Dates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legal experts say Iran-Contra prosecutors were handed a "worst case scenario" when a judge ruled that Oliver L. North and three co-defendants must each be tried separately.

"It's like kissing a rattlesnake," said former federal prosecutor E. Lawrence Barcella Jr. of Washington, describing the ordeal of conducting what is essentially the same case over and over again. "It's not fun and usually injurious to your health."

The ruling Wednesday means Independent Counsel Lawrence E. Walsh must conduct four consecutive trials, tipping his hand on prosecution strategy in the initial case.

U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell — granting defense motions — ordered four trials so the defendants could use each other's immunized congressional testimony to defend against the charges, including a broad conspiracy count.

The immunized testimony would likely be inadmissible in a single trial, thus denying defendants their normal right to cross-examine each other on their prior statements.

The defendants have said the immunized testimony of the other defendants before the congressional Iran-Contra committees would show their innocence. Prosecutors cannot introduce the immunized testimony of the specific defendant on trial as part of their case against that defendant.

North, former national security adviser John M. Poindexter, and businessmen Richard V. Secord and Albert Hakim are charged with conspiring to illegally divert profits from U.S. arms sales to Iran to the Nicaraguan Contras when such assistance was banned.

Gesell said either North, a former National Security staffer, or Poindexter must be tried first. North is charged in 16 counts of the 23-count indictment, while Poindexter is named in seven. The judge gave the prosecutor until Friday to decide the order.

The independent prosecutor declined to say whether he would try North or Poindexter first.

The judge also said he had not made final decisions on whether the congressional immunity, given to all defendants except Secord, posed such a serious problem as to preclude trying the cases at all.

The judge said he would decide that and other major pre-trial issues by July 1 so he could set a date for a prompt trial.

Senate Falls Short On Veto Of Trade Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Powerless to override President Reagan's trade veto, the Senate is promising to push on in the frustrating, three-year quest for a bill to sharpen America's edge in the global marketplace.

The Senate fell five votes short Wednesday of the two-thirds majority required to make the measure law despite Reagan's objections.

Finance Committee Chairman Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said he is willing to draft a new trade measure that Reagan might be willing to sign, but he acknowledged that "it's a little late in the day to be talking about a second bill."

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., took another tack. Although he strongly supported the trade bill, at the last minute he voted against it — a parliamentary maneuver that could later allow him to ask for reconsideration of the 1,000-page bill.

"This is insurance that the American people can still have a trade bill this year," said Byrd, who argued that efforts to draft a new measure could become hopelessly bogged down in debate over complex amendments.

The centerpiece provisions of the bill Reagan vetoed would revamp the government's system for imposing import curbs to aid U.S. industries and retaliate against trade violations.

Others range from sizable farm export subsidies to repeal of the 1980 windfall profits tax on oil-industry earnings.

But those were overshadowed in recent weeks by Reagan's objections to a provision to require companies with 100 employees or more to provide 60-day notice of plant closings and large-scale layoffs.

Republican critics objected to what they called special-interest provisions and lingering protectionism in the bill, while supporters in both parties claimed it was vital to farmers and heavy industries suffering from trade upheavals.

The House voted overwhelmingly to override the veto last month, and some of the administration's supporters have said they would feel more comfortable if they could get a second crack at the issue before having to face the voters in the fall elections.

Talk Getting Serious About No. 2 Spot

By EVANS WITT
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrat Michael Dukakis is finally making up a list of potential running mates — and Jesse Jackson is claiming the right to the top spot on Dukakis' chart.

Republican George Bush, poring over a long, long list of possibilities for the No. 2 job on the GOP ticket, is wrestling with whether he needs to pick a woman to shore up his sagging popularity among the nation's female voters.

Dukakis, the Democratic presidential nomination finally his, lifted a self-imposed moratorium on looking for a running mate.

"It's the 8th of June. The process of selecting a running mate will begin," Dukakis told reporters Wednesday.

He was immediately peppered with questions about the process and the names on his first list.

"There's no list at present," he insisted.

But Jackson made clear Wednesday that when there is a list, he wants to be the No. 1 choice for the No. 2 position.

"Consideration does mean an offer; it does not mean just in passing," Jackson said.

"I don't think anyone is due an offer. But there are a great many people that are going to be considered and he'll be one of them," the Massachusetts governor said.

Jackson got a little rhetorical support from New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, who compared Jackson to the other losing Democratic hopefuls.

"Certainly, he could be good for the ticket," said Cuomo. "How could you say no? All those millions of people who voted for him thought he was better than Gore, better than Babbitt, better than Biden, better than Simon. How could you say he wouldn't be good for the ticket?"

But there is also substantial resistance in the party to Jackson.

"Jesse on the ticket would destroy it," said veteran New York activist and labor lawyer Charles Torche. "There are still a lot of black haters out there."

For both Dukakis and Bush, picking a vice presidential nominee is the next step in building what each hopes will be an Electoral College majority in November.

Bush, who wrapped up the GOP nomination in April, has been meeting with advisers in recent weeks and talking about potential running mates. Trailing in the polls, he has made it clear he is happy to let Dukakis go first, an option granted him by the calendar.

Dukakis must make his choice in time for it to be ratified by the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta in July. The No. 2 spot on the GOP ticket does not have to be filled until almost a month later, when the Republicans gather in New Orleans.

While Dukakis wrestles with the Jackson problem, Bush faces a big deficit in the polls, particularly among the nation's women.

And that may suggest that Bush could pick a woman for the Republican ticket — breaking down a historic barrier in the party.

"I wouldn't want to use the word 'desperation,' but that is the high-risk, high-roll scenario," said New York pollster Lee Miringoff.

Among female candidates most frequently mentioned by Bush advisers are Sen. Nancy Kassebaum of Kansas, former Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole, Nebraska Gov. Kay Orr, Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor and Rep. Lynn Martin of Illinois.

"You don't buy off women with tricks," said Martin, the national co-chair of the Bush campaign. "I think he should have a very good vice president and that may very well be a woman."

Both Bush and Dukakis are hearing geographic arguments about their choices.

California Gov. George Deukmejian is the most often mentioned Westerner, but such a selection could cost the GOP control of the governorship. Bush aides also have mentioned Sens. Alan Simpson of Wyoming, William L. Armstrong of Colorado and James McClure of Idaho, as well as Rep. Richard Cheney of Wyoming.

Southerners mentioned at times include White House Chief of Staff Howard Baker and Lamar Alexander, both from Tennessee. Also named as potential nominees are Govs. Thomas Kean of New Jersey, Jim Thompson of Illinois and John Sununu of New Hampshire.

From the Midwest — a longtime GOP stronghold now moving to the Democrats — Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas is prominently discussed.

Helms Rules Out A Challenge, But ...

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., says he does not plan to run a token campaign against Vice President George Bush at the Republican National Convention, but might not refuse to let himself be nominated.

"I don't know how to answer that question," Helms said Wednesday when asked if he would refuse to allow supporters to nominate him for president at the convention. "It hasn't occurred to me."

Helms said there might be unforeseen circumstances that could change his mind.

"I'm not seeking it," Helms said Wednesday of a possible draft-Helms movement. "I've never sought it."

A political columnist for the Baltimore Sun wrote Wednesday, "Now it appears Jesse Helms may make a token run against (Bush) at the New Orleans convention." The column did not give a source.

An item in the June 13 issue of Newsweek magazine said "conservatives may run a symbolic candidate" against Bush and Helms was "a likely candidate."

Helms laughed when shown the two articles Wednesday. He said the authors "sit down at their little hot typewriters" and turn out political speculation.

Later in the interview, Helms added, "I shall never abandon the conservative cause, and I'll do anything I can to help it."

Former Opponents Rushing To Vow Support To Dukakis

By LAURA KING
Associated Press Writer

Democrat Michael Dukakis was prevented from clinching his party's presidential nomination at the Reagan convention by Democrats vowing: "We can do it for Dukakis." Democrats, meeting to do "everything I can" to help Dukakis get elected.

Dukakis, whose victories in the final four primaries on Tuesday gave him the delegates needs for a first-ballot victory at the Democratic National Convention, received a round of support from his former time opponents.

Rep. Richard Gephardt, Paul Simon and former Sen. Gary Hart, Bruce Babbitt all issued statements of endorsements. Wednesday, former New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, who had speculated about a presidential bid earlier in the year, finally joined the chorus, though it wasn't without the usual tribute traditionally paid on such occasions.

"I endorse him. I endorse him"

Cuomo said after persistent questioning by reporters. "There, three times I've endorsed him."

Even though the nomination is mathematically his, Dukakis is still locked in a duel of sorts with Jesse Jackson, the second-place finisher in the primary sweepstakes.

Jackson says he'll continue his campaign up until the convention. And he has put Dukakis on notice that he wants to be offered the No. 2 spot on the ticket.

The Massachusetts governor has said he'll consider Jackson as a possible running mate. But Jackson says consideration alone won't do it.

"Consideration means an offer. It does not mean just in passing," he said Wednesday. "The vice presidency is not the top but it is a long way from where I started."

Dukakis kept to what has become his stock line on the subject — that Jackson himself has said it's the nominee's decision to make.

"I'm going to cast my net far and wide," he said, adding that he hoped to have "a very good idea" prior to next month's convention of whom he wants for a running mate.

The Massachusetts governor was back home in Boston today, ready to take his wife Kitty home from the hospital. Mrs. Dukakis, who had spinal surgery last week, watched on television Tuesday night as her husband won primaries in California, New Jersey, New Mexico and Montana.

Jackson was spending a few days at a California resort, resting and talking to advisers. He waged a grueling primary campaign, seldom missing a day of stumping.

Bush, on the other hand, was heading back out on the trail today. He was traveling to Houston, where he was to address the Texas state GOP convention.

Like Dukakis, Bush was seeing former rivals line up behind him. Three of them — Bob Dole, Rep. Jack Kemp and television evangelist Pat Robertson — were joining him on Friday at a "Unity '88" conference in Denver.

HOME FROM THE HOSPITAL — Hospital workers in Ottawa, Canada, help a mother duck take her brood home from Riverside Hospital, braving traffic to reach the Rideau River across the street. The duck had nested in a planter on the hospital property until the ducklings were hatched. She decided this week it was time for their big plunge in the river. (AP Laserphoto)

Super Mom Shows Kids How

Former Welfare Recipient Earns Her Medical Degree

CHICAGO (AP) — It wasn't an easy climb for Carmen Hudson-White, who grew up in a public housing project and struggled on welfare as a single parent. But climb she did. On Sunday, she'll receive her medical degree.

And in July, the 41-year-old Ms. Hudson-White will enter the residency program at the University of Illinois Medical School's hospital.

"I've been very busy the last few years," said Ms. Hudson-White, who is getting her degree obstetrics and gynecology from the university.

And she's watching proudly as her children follow her through college, inspired by her. Her son, Joseph, 20, is a criminal justice student at Chicago State, and her daughter, Charisse, 22, graduates this month from the University of Illinois in Champaign and will enroll at the University of Illinois College of Medicine in the fall.

"My mother has been an inspiration," says Charisse. "Even though she was going to school, she was always there when I needed her."

Ms. Hudson-White said she was separated and living with her children in 1974 when she decided to resume her studies.

"Being a doctor has always been a goal," she said Wednesday. "But I also wanted a family and decided to work on that first."

The family had to survive on welfare payments that gave them enough for food and used furniture. Ms. Hudson-White got a fellowship to cover her tuition.

In 1979, she earned a bachelor's degree, and in 1981 a master's degree in biology from Chicago State University. Then she began applying to medical schools in Illinois and surrounding states — only to be rejected again and again because of low test scores.

"At first I thought I was too old," she said. "But my Medical College Admissions Test scores weren't as good as they could have been."

She took the test again in 1982, improving her scores, and re-applied to the 20 schools. This time, most accepted her.

"I chose University of Illinois because it was home and cost less than the others," she said. "Besides, I had two children still in high school and to start things anew whould have been a real hardship both emotionally and economically."

Her medical school costs were covered by a scholarship from the Illinois Department of Public Health. She also received a stipend to cover living expenses.

Although her children were used to her as a student, the adjustments of medical school weren't easy for them, Ms. Hudson-White acknowledged.

"My son was really used to having me do things mothers do," she said. "He didn't make the adjustment as well as my daughter. He would leave notes such as 'A good mother would make dinner for her children.' But we worked it out."

Karen Pike, a class coordinator at the school, says Ms. Hudson-White has handled a difficult task well.

"In her junior year, she usually had to be in the hospital from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily and was on call three or four nights a week," Ms. Pike said.

Ms. Hudson-White says her goal is to have her own practice. But first, she is committed to working three years in impoverished areas, including the Altgeld Gardens housing project where she grew up.

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled in 1976 that the death penalty was not inherently cruel or unusual.

Congress Sends Medicare Expansion To President

By JERRY ESTILL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first major expansion of Medicare in 23 years is headed to the White House for the expected signature of the conservative president who started the ball rolling last year with his call to protect America's elderly from the financial ruin of serious illness.

Although the catastrophic illness bill given final legislative approval Wednesday by the Senate is more ambitious than the proposal laid out by President Reagan, the administration's No. 1 health official has said he will ask the president to sign it.

There was no reaction from the White House to the Senate's 86-11 approval of the measure, which came a week after the House voted in similarly overwhelming fashion for the compromise worked out in months of negotiations among House and Senate conferees and administration observers.

"This gives additional peace of mind to millions of Americans," Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, the Finance Committee chairman who guided the measure in the Senate, said just before final approval.

Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., a member of the conference committee that worked out the final compromise last month, said the legislation "is not perfect, but it will vastly improve the lives of millions of elderly Americans who have high health care bills."

"This can truly be called landmark legislation," said Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., another conference committee member.

But Sen. Bill Armstrong, R-Colo., one of the 11 who voted against the measure, complained that it "is going to cost everybody and help very few."

Indeed, proponents never argued that the bill will have an automatic benefit for each of the nation's 32 million Medicare beneficiaries, 29 million of them past age 65. The other 3 million qualify for the federal health program because they are medically disabled.

Senate action on the catastrophic health bill came shortly after the House killed a separate measure that would have provided extensive home benefits for people not sick enough to require hospitalization or nursing home care.

Even though it was not intended primarily as a vehicle for improving long-term care benefits, the new Medicare legislation does make some improvements in that area as well.

For example, it extends the coverage available for people who need skilled nursing care in nursing homes from 100 days a year to 150. It also will enable an elderly person left at home to keep more money when his or her spouse has to go into a nursing home for an indefinite stay paid for by Medicaid, the government health program for the poor.

Leaders in both the House and Senate have said long-term care will head the domestic agenda in the next Congress.

In essence, the new legislation provides a safety net for Medicare beneficiaries faced with extraordinary expenses from acute illnesses such as cancer.

Beyond that, it introduces a general prescription drug benefit into the Medicare program for the first time — albeit only for those who run up more than $600 a year in drug bills.

The bill is drawn with the idea that potential beneficiaries will foot the entire cost of the expanded benefits, which are estimated to cost $32.6 billion over the next five years.

Home Health Care Bill Dies In House

WASHINGTON (AP) — House rejection of a home health care plan buried any chance of action on the proposal this year, but lawmakers and lobbyists say the next Congress is likely to pass an even broader program.

"It is safe to say that 1989 will be the year that Congress considers seriously a comprehensive long-term care program," said Ron Pollack, executive director of Villers Advocacy Associates, a lobbying group for the low-income elderly.

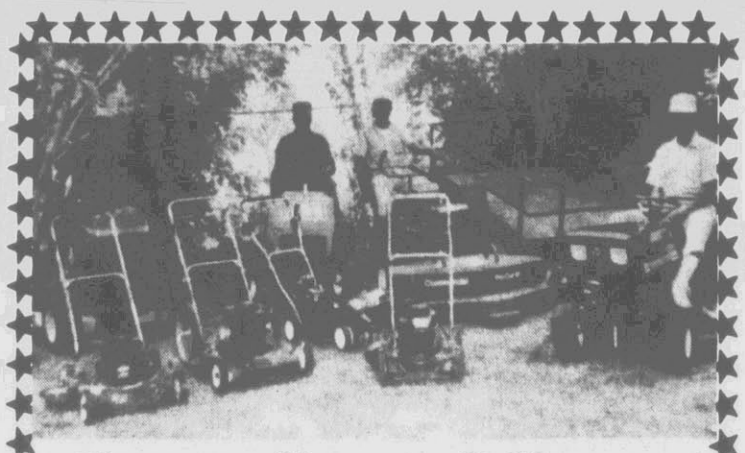

The House on Wednesday voted 243-169 not to consider a long-term home health care bill proposed by Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., 87, known and revered by senior citizens across the country as a champion of their concerns.

Pepper won lavish praise from his colleagues and a standing ovation after making a tearful appeal for his five-year, $28 billion Medicare expansion plan. But in the end he was defeated by a coalition of Democrats and Republicans who objected not only to parts of the bill itself but also to the fact that it never underwent committee scrutiny.

The vote "was not a vote against the elderly, or others in need of long-term care," said Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, which has jurisdiction over Medicare.

Rostenkowski said a commission on long-term care needs — both at home and in nursing homes — is scheduled to report to Congress in six months.

Monsanto Settling Poison Suit

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — A 7-year-old chemical poisoning lawsuit ended with Monsanto Co. agreeing to pay $1.2 million to six of the 173 former workers who sued, but one who will share the award said the money doesn't make up for his cancer.

As part of the agreement announced Wednesday, Monsanto will pay $200,000 each to the six retired employees who said their exposure to a rubber additive at the company's Nitro plant gave them bladder cancer.

As part of the settlement, 127 dioxin-related claims and 34 other chemical poisoning claims will be dropped.

In addition, the St. Louis-based corporation agreed to drop its $300,000 court-costs claim against six other retired workers who unsucessfully claimed the company recklessly exposed them to highly toxic dioxin at the plant. Monsanto had attached liens to their homes to guarantee payment.

The federal jury hearing the dioxin claims found that the chemical, a byproduct in Agent Orange production, was dangerous to Monsanto employees' health. Dioxin has been linked to cancer. The workers said they were exposed when the plant made the herbicide in the 1950s and '60s.

The jury ruled that the dioxin claimants failed to prove Monsanto knowingly risked their safety. Monsanto then sought the court costs.

Mother Keeps Vigil In Church

NEW YORK (AP) — A black woman was holed up in a church a second day today after being sentenced to jail for not testifying about her daughter's alleged rape by whites, and a family adviser insisted, "We will never back down."

Glenda Brawley probably will not be arrested as long as she remains in the Queens church, state Attorney General Robert Abrams said Wednesday.

"That decision is in the hands of the sheriff," said Abrams, the special prosecutor in the investigation.

"But I think he and I agree that if we charge that church today, that would be precisely what the advisers for the Brawley family would want in terms of their agenda and another chapter of the media circus they have performed."

Mrs. Brawley, 33, spent Wednesday in the Ebenezer Baptist Church, where more than 400 supporters gathered in the evening for a prayer service, giving her a standing ovation.

Tawana Brawley, 16, disappeared for four days in November and was found wrapped in a plastic bag about 10 miles from her Wappingers Falls home.

Some of her hair had been chopped off, animal excrement was smeared and racial epithets were scrawled on her body.

In sketchy interviews with authorities, she said she had been abducted and sexually abused by six white men, one of whom had a police-style badge. A hospital found no evidence of rape.

Decision Near On Navy Death

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — A Navy investigator has begun deliberating on whether five swimming instructors and a commanding officer should be court-martialed for a recruit's death during a training program.

A Navy prosecutor contended Wednesday in his closing arguments that the use of force to stop Airman Recruit Lee Mirecki from quitting the elite rescue swimmer training program was a crime.

"These men were not malicious, they were hardened," said Lt. Cmdr Larry D. Wynne in his closing arguments. "They were not vicious; they were indifferent. They saw, saw but did not perceive."

Five of Mirecki's instructors at the Pensacola Naval Air Station rescue swimmer school and its commanding officer should be court-martialed, Wynne contended as attorneys concluded their cases in the four-day investigative hearing.

Cmdr. Daniel J. D'Alesio Jr., the investigator, will make a recommendation on the court-martial charges to Rear Adm. David Morris, chief of naval air training, at a later date.

Morris, based in Corpus Christi, Texas, has 120 days after the May 10 filing of the charges to begin court-martial proceedings, if that is his choice. Other options are non-judicial punishment or dismissal of the charges.

The 19-year-old recruit from Appleton, Wis., died March 2 after allegedly being forced back into a pool when he tried to quit during a drill.

A pathologist testified that Mirecki, who suffered heart failure before he drowned, had a phobia about being pulled under water and literally was scared to death. Classmates were ordered to turn their backs on the pool and sing the national anthem before Mirecki collapsed, witnesses said.

Lt. Thomas A. Torchia, the officer in charge of the school, is accused of dereliction of duty.

Mirecki had a right to quit, and the Uniform Code of Military Justice prohibited the use of force against him, Wynne said.

Defense lawyers argued that pushing scared, exhausted or malingering trainees into the pool or pulling them off its walls was an accepted practice. "This is the Navy," said Lt. Julie L. Hoving, Deaton's lawyer. "The students must be forced to their limits."

She and other defense counsel contended that failure to use force to simulate the stress of an actual rescue in bad weather or combat situation would not adequately prepare students and could endanger them and those they are trying to save.

Wynne said Torchia was in his office overlooking the pool 100 feet away when Mirecki was being pushed in. He contended the officer could see and hear what was happening but did nothing.

Torchia's lawyers introduced a report on a lie detector test indicating he was telling the truth when he said he was taking a telephone call from headquarters in Washington, and neither saw nor heard what was going on.

Witnesses testified Mirecki had tried to quit training a month before he died and subsequently was classified by a flight surgeon as unfit to continue because he had a phobia about being dragged under water.

A clinical psychologist disagreed with the finding, and Mirecki was returned to training through a series of errors without obtaining a required physical examination and a flight surgeon's approval, witnesses said.

'Peace' Caravan Stopped At Border

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — A "peace convoy" was stalled at the Mexican border by trade restrictions, but organizers say the 41 vehicles carrying food and medical supplies for Nicaragua won't budge until they are allowed to cross the Rio Grande.

"Right now, we're prepared to stay here until we are allowed to leave our own country," said Gerry Condon, one of the nearly 100 participants in the Veterans Peace Convoy to Nicaragua.

"We feel like we are being held hostage with this humanitarian aid."

The group held a closed meeting Wednesday night at its Laredo campground base to plan actions "that would be dramatic, that would up the ante," said Condon, a Vietnam veteran from Santa Cruz, Calif.

They marched Wednesday through Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, just across the river, carrying signs and chanting slogans, then briefly blocked one of the international bridges with Mexican supporters.

New York lawyer Stephen Somerstein, traveling with the convoy, said attorneys with the New York-based Center for Constitutional Rights are representing the convoy in its negotiations with the Treasury Department.

Somerstein said he expected demonstrations of support around the country, including a protest planned today at the federal building in San Francisco.

Convoy organizers, who oppose the U.S government's trade restrictions against Nicaragua and aid to the Contras who have fought to overthrow the leftist government, had planned to cross the Mexican border Wednesday morning.

They had hoped to reach Nicaragua on June 18.

But on Tuesday night, federal officials advised them that although the food, clothing and medical supplies would be allowed to be taken to Nicaragua, the vehicles they planned to leave in the Central American nation for distribution of the aid would violate a trade embargo.

The Nicaraguan Trade Control Regulations of the Treasury Department's Office of Foreign Assets Control prohibit the unlicensed export of goods to Nicaragua, except for "donated articles such as food, clothing and medicine, intended to be used to relieve human suffering."

Mom Wants Her Organized

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

My mornings have always been rather predictable. I roll out of bed, climb into a robe and walk the length of the house to the kitchen. Realizing I can't make coffee without my glasses, I walk the length of the house back to the bedroom and get my glasses off the nightstand.

Back in the kitchen, I measure out the coffee and water and stand there and watch it drip down into the pot. When my glasses steam up and visibility is zero, the coffee is done.

My mother says I waste a lot of valuable time. She says that at the stage of my life when I should be buying gas a gallon at a time and answering the phone on the first ring, I should remember that time is precious.

My mother is a real upper. The other day she clipped an article and gave it to me. "Look at this. You are doing everything wrong. The first thing you should do every morning when you get up is to get dressed in the clothes you have laid out the night before."

"How do I know I'll still fit in them after I eat?" I said.

"The second thing is to make your bed," she continued.

"But I may want to climb back into it, and that seems counterproductive."

"Don't interrupt," she said. "Do everything you have to do in this end of the house before you go to the kitchen. Now, what do you think you do next?"

"I walk back to the bedroom and get my glasses?" I said.

"No, no," she said. "You have two pairs of glasses – one for the bedroom and one for the kitchen. You just pick up the extra pair in the kitchen, and instead of piddling around with a little toast here and a little juice there, you throw your breakfast of fruit into a blender to save time. And while your coffee is dripping down, you plan your next meal."

Where was this woman when I had 11-month pregnancies?

My original intention was to forget the conversation, but then, she had been right about Linda Evans not being Dale Evans' baby sister. Was it possible that just by a few adjustments, my life could be a little more organized?

The next morning I rolled out of bed, showered and put on my clothes for the day. I made my bed and turned out all the lights.

In the kitchen, I picked up my kitchen glasses and measured the coffee. Throwing the fruit into the blender, I pushed down the button. Without the lid, fruit flew everywhere, including down the front of my dress. I needed coffee in a hurry and did the old coffee cup/pot exchange in mid-air while the coffee was still dribbling. Most of it ran down the side of the cabinet and into my shoe. I cleaned it up and went back to the bedroom to change my dress.

With my bedroom glasses I checked the clock. I was so late for work I decided to go back to bed. I had to unmake it.

DJ's Career Is Saved By Friend's Handiwork

By SALLIE WHELAN
PCMH Information and Publications

Eddie Davenport says assistance from his new friends at Pitt County Memorial Hospital and its Regional Rehabilitation Center have saved his career as a disc jockey.

A Kinston resident, Davenport, 42, was born with phocomelia, a condition in which limbs are not fully developed. His arms are much shorter than most people's. This disability has not stopped him from walking unassisted, driving nor establishing a 23-year career as a disc jockey at radio stations in Kinston and throughout North Carolina.

Several years ago, all that changed when his curved spine began causing partial paralysis. Three back operations straighted his spine, but left him totally paralyzed and confined to a wheelchair.

But Davenport's enthusiasm has not been dampened. His says support from his wife Faye, other family members, fellow patients and the staff of Pitt Memorial have helped him keep a confident eye to the future. "It didn't take but a couple of times riding up and down the halls of the hospital to see that I wasn't alone," he said.

Things started looking brighter for Davenport when, after four months of paralysis, feeling gradually began to return to his limbs. He could then seriously make plans to return to the job he loves and misses. He knows that the limited space inside most broadcast studios will not allow a wheelchair. So a team of professionals at the Regional Rehabilitation Center began working with him to strengthen his muscles so he could walk with the aid of a walker.

This presented another obstacle. Standard walkers are waist high, but Davenport needs a taller one to accommodate his short arms. Gary Strickland, general maintenance supervisor of the hospital, was asked to help solve the problem. Two days later, Strickland delivered a customized walker tall enough for Davenport to use. He had lengthened the legs of a standard walker and attached two small wheels on the front to improve movement.

Davenport says he is thrilled with the new walker. "I want to say a special thank you to Gary for caring that I get around like other folks get around," he said. "He and the others at the rehabilitation center really saved my professional life."

Davenport has left the rehab center and is continuing therapy at his home. He hasn't returned to work yet, but don't be surprised if some time soon you hear his voice coming across the airwaves.

Fears Ex Is Abusing Daughters

DEAR ABBY: Please help me! I had a boyfriend who has a teen-age daughter and a 5-year-old daughter. I have reason to believe he is sexually abusing them. The very thought of it turns my stomach and sickens me so much I just had to get away from him.

When we first started going together I liked him a lot -- we had so much in common -- but since I've had these suspicions about him, I don't want anything to do with him.

He keeps calling and asking to see me, but I keep making excuses. The last time he called, he wanted to know if I was mad at him. I told him no, I wasn't -- which is true. I am just sick at heart and confused.

Should I confront him and clear the air, or just forget about him and look for a man who doesn't have daughters? — CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: Confronting him will not necessarily clear the air. What if he denies your accusations?

If your suspicions are based on strong evidence, this man should be reported to your local child protective agency. The people there will know how to approach and question him -- and his daughters. Your first concern should be the girls. If your suspicions are correct, they and their sick father will require therapy. Please send me your name and address, and I will gladly intervene for you.

DEAR ABBY: I am planning my wedding and have engaged a photographer to take pictures. My problem is that I am blind in my right eye. I have no control over the movement -- the eye "floats."

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR BRIDE: Tell the photographer about your problem. It's possible for him to shoot the picture at an angle that will not show your "floating eye."

DEAR ABBY: As information desk receptionists in a large medical center, our hearts go out daily to people who arrive here only to learn that their friends and loved ones are not in this hospital but in another one -- sometimes miles away. (Even in smaller cities where there are only two hospitals, this happens.)

People are understandably upset when they learn that someone has been hospitalized, but they could save themselves a lot of time if they would carefully listen to the name of the hospital and if possible write it down. Then before they go there to visit, they should phone to confirm that the person is still a patient. (In many cases, the patient has already been released.)

We told our boss that there should be some way to let folks know that a simple phone call could save a lot of time and hassle, and she said, "Good idea. Write to Dear Abby." So here's our letter. We hope you'll think it's worth sharing. — BIDDY STOUGH, FOR ALL RECEPTIONISTS, BAYSHORE MEDICAL CENTER, PASADENA, TEXAS

DEAR BIDDY: It is. Readers, before you head for the hospital, pick up a phone.

IRS Backs Off Tax On Sick Pay

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service is backing away from a ruling that could have required immediate taxation of accumulated vacation, sick leave and other benefits paid to employees of state and local governments and tax-exempt organizations.

Although the IRS now says it never had any intention of taxing such benefits, union leaders say the agency's clarification on Wednesday could benefit more than 14 million workers.

O. Donaldson Chapoton, assistant secretary of the treasury for tax policy, said Wednesday that pending IRS regulations will spell out that "bona fide vacation leave, sick leave, compensatory time, severance pay, disability pay and death benefits are not deferred compensation subject to" tax under Section 457 of the tax code.

Chapoton outlined the government's position in a letter to Rep. Ray McGrath, R-N.Y. McGrath, a member of the House Ways and Means Committee, has been fighting an earlier IRS interpretation that left open the door to taxation of certain employee benefits at the time they were accrued, rather than when they were used.

"It was never the intention of Congress to allow the taxation of bona fide employee benefits," McGrath told reporters in releasing Chapoton's letter.

The change, he said, "signifies the fact that the IRS will not be picking the pockets of these kinds of taxpaying employees."

The debate centers on a 1978 law that allowed employees of state and local governments to take part in deferred-compensation retirement plans. In 1986, Congress brought employees of universities, non-profit hospitals and other tax-exempt organizations under that law.

The IRS traditionally considered immediately taxable only "elective" forms of deferred compensation, such as salary that a worker voluntarily postponed receiving. "Non-elective" compensation, where there is no option to receive it immediately, was taxed when received, rather than when it was earned.

In 1987 the IRS issued a notice that was widely interpreted as requiring immediate taxation of "non-elective" compensation and extending that definition to such basic benefits as vacation and sick pay. That set off an outcry by unions representing affected workers and by several members of Congress.

"Under the IRS interpretation, many state and local governments and tax-exempt employers wuld have to substantially restructure their compensation and retirement arrangements to bring them into compliance with the restrictions," said Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., author of a bill to overturn the initial IRS position.

He said the 1987 interpretation would have placed such employers at a competitive disadvantage with private industry in keeping employees.

McGrath said he had enlisted the help of Vice President George Bush in fighting the IRS interpretation.

"I called the vice president to explain the concerns of millions of union members and elected officials from New York and other states," McGrath said. "He contacted Treasury Secretary James Baker, who had the IRS reconsider its position."

Johnell Hunter, a spokesman for IRS, acknowledged the agency's 1987 ruling had caused confusion but said, "We never intended to tax that compensation in the first place."

The 1987 ruling, Ms. Hunter said, was "to counter any abuse that might take place with individuals who get deferred compensation that is way out of synch with what it should be. ... It was never intended to touch the ordinary worker."

Merchandise Trade Deficit Goes Higher

WASHINGTON (AP) — The merchandise trade deficit for March was $11.9 billion on a seasonally adjusted basis, 22 percent higher than previously reported, the government said today.

The Commerce Department released new trade figures which for the first time in two years adjusted the monthly numbers for normal seasonal changes in shipping patterns.

A month ago, the government had reported that the trade deficit was at $9.7 billion, its best showing in three years. However, analysts cautioned at the time that trade figures often improve in March because it is a good month for U.S. export sales.

A February deficit, which had originally been reported at $13.8 billion, was raised to $14.4 billion.

The January deficit, originally reported as $12.4 billion, was lowered by the seasonal adjustment to $11.3 billion.

The April trade deficit is scheduled to be reported next Tuesday and it will be reported on a seasonally adjusted basis although the government will continue to release the unadjusted figures as well.

Government statisticians hope that by seasonally adjusting the trade figures they will be able to smooth out some of the volatility which has often roiled financial markets around the world.

The U.S. trade deficit has become the most closely watched government statistic, especially on foreign exchange markets.

Nevada Town Loses Bid For Federal Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the House space committee is criticizing the Reagan administration for refusing federal aid for the explosion-damaged Nevada town which makes a vital component of the fuel that powers the nation's rockets and the space shuttle booster.

Rep. Robert Roe, D-N.J., asks how the townspeople of Henderson, Nev., can be expected to drop their opposition to making the volatile chemical ammonium perchlorate there at the same time the federal goverment turns down a request for disaster assistance.

One of the town's two ammonium perchlorate plants, operated by Pacific Engineering and Production Company, exploded on May 4, killing two people, injuring hundreds and causing $73 million in damage. The second plant, operated by Kerr-McGee Corporation, was shut down after the explosion, reopened briefly and closed again after Gov. Richard Bryan threatened to sue on grounds that the facility was a safety hazard.

A few hours after a hearing by Roe's investigations subcommittee of the House Science and Technology Committee ended Wednesday, Kerr-McGee announced in Henderson that differences with the Clark County Fire Department had been ironed out and that the company plans to resume production of ammonium perchlorate next week. The fire department had found some safety violations and threatened action.

Together, the two plants were the only U.S. source of the chemical, which is also used in dozens of rockets such as the Trident, Peacekeeper, Minuteman, Titan and Delta.

On Wednesday, the Federal Emergency Management Agency rejected a request from Bryan for disaster relief for Henderson.

"Why in God's name would we not give them aid?" Roe asked. "It's extraordinary to me that here we are looking for the cooperation that we need desperately now with the good authorities in Nevada and we are coming back and saying 'Too bad, you can rebuild your own libraries, rebuild your own schools, we want to get the most production out of this facility, but we're not going to do anything to help you.'"

Ex-Editor Dies

RALEIGH (AP) — James L. Whitfield, 72, state editor of The News and Observer of Raleigh for 22 years, died at Durham County General Hospital after suffering a stroke.

Whitfield, who died Wednesday, joined the News and Observer staff in 1946 and was state editor from 1948 to 1970, when he was named business editor. From 1972 until his retirement in 1979, he was special projects editor.

He had been living at the Methodist Retirement Home in Durham and had been under a doctor's care for three years for cerebral arterial sclerosis.

A native of Greenville and graduate of East Carolina University, Whitfield had served on the ECU Board of Trustees, as North Carolina's representative on the Education Commission of the States and as president of the N.C. Associated Press News Council.

A funeral service will be held at 10 a.m. Friday at Brown-Wynne Funeral Home in Raleigh, with burial at Raleigh Memorial Park. The family will be at the funeral home from 7 to 9 p.m. Thursday.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market pushed ahead today, extending the rally that has carried it close to its highest levels of the year.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 3.91 to 2,106.86 in the first half hour of trading.

Gainers slightly outnumbered losers in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 528 up, 479 down and 470 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 50.15 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

About 40 percent of that activity was concentrated in a single issue — Detroit Edison, which was unchanged at 14 amid a flurry of large blocks keyed to the company's impending quarterly dividend.

Among actively traded blue chips, Ford Motor rose ⅝ to 52; International Business Machines was unchanged at 116⅝; General Electric slipped ⅛ to 43½, and Coca-Cola was down ⅛ at 38¾.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained .28 to 153.15. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .55 at 306.78.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average 48.36 to 2,102.95, coming up just short of its April 12 close of 2,110.08, which marked a high since the market crash last October.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by more than 4 to 1 on the NYSE, with 1,289 up, 295 down and 393 unchanged. Big Board volume came to 310.03 million shares, against 168.71 million Tuesday.

Obituaries

Barnhill

Mr. Freddie Barnhill of Bethel died Wednesday in Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Arrangements will be announced by Flanagan Funeral Home of Greenville.

Griggs

A funeral for Mr. John Thomas Griggs, 63, will be conducted at 3 p.m. Saturday in the Bethel Chapel Free Will Baptist Church in Bethel by the Rev. J.W. Randolph. Burial will be in the Pinelawn Cemetery in Bethel.

Mr. Griggs was born and reared in the Bethel area and attended the area schools. He was employed at Bethel Manufacturing Co. and Gray Funeral Home, both of Bethel.

Surviving are his wife, Mary Thigpen Griggs of the home; three sons, Johnny Ray Griggs and Alton Earl Griggs, both of Norwalk, Conn., and Edward Presley of Washington, D.C.; a daughter, Mary Ethel Lynch of Norwalk, Conn.; six sisters, Annie Best, Hattie Dixon and Gladys Worsley, all of Bethel, Lillie M. Purvis of New Haven, Conn., Ethel Diggs of Hackensack, N.J., and Lyntyne Brown of Washington, D.C., and four grandchildren.

The family will receive friends from 8 p.m. to 9 p.m. Friday in Bethel Chapel FWB Church and at other times at the home, 644 Crawford St., Bethel.

Arrangements are being handled by Flanagan Funeral Home of Greenville.

Hill

A funeral for Mr. Edgar Haskill Hill will be conducted at 2 p.m. Friday in Norfolk, Va.

Mr. Hill, 56, was a native of Pitt County who had made his home in Norfolk since 1973. He attended the Greenville schools and served in the U.S. Navy from 1948 until 1973, retiring with the rank of master chief petty officer. He was a member of the First Free Will Baptist Church of Greenville.

Surviving are his wife, Vivian Mates Hill; a son, Edgar Haskill Hill Jr. of Fort Bragg; a stepson, James Tangires of Norfolk; his mother, Mavis Tripp Hill of Greenville; two brothers, William E. (Gene) Hill of Greenville and Billy B. Hill of Rural Hall; a sister, Barbara Perry of Greenville; one grandson, and one step-granddaughter.

In lieu of flowers, memorials may be made to the Disabled American Veterans Chapter 21, 1018 W. Little Creek Road, Norfolk, Va.

Arrangements are being handled by Smith-Williams Funeral Home of Norfolk.

Murphy

WILSON — Mrs. Ethel Hines Murphy, 81, of 1803-B Fountain Drive, Wilson, died Tuesday in Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Her funeral will be conducted at 1 p.m. Saturday in the Trinity AME Zion Church on East Nash Street in Wilson. Burial will be in Rest Haven Cemetery in Wilson.

Mrs. Murphy was a member of the stewardess board of Trinity AME Zion Church.

Surviving are five sons, Robert Murphy of Wilson, Raymond Murphy of San Antonio, Texas, Ralph Murphy of Vaux Hall, N.J., James Murphy of Tacoma, Wash., and Linwood E. Murphy of Oklahoma City; five daughters, Jennie Hampton of Greenville, Grace Porter of Greensboro, Jean Wood of San Jose, Calif., Martha Stanley of New Jersey and Esther Dixon of Wilson; two brothers, Thomas Hines of Allentown, Pa., and Macio Hines of Canada; six sisters, Martha Reid of Wilson, Ora Covington of Raeford, Annie Signest of Pinehurst, and Florence Freeman, Ruby Hines and Mary Hines, all of Greensboro; 46 grandchildren, and 35 great-grandchildren.

Viewing will be from 3 p.m. to 9 p.m. Friday at the Hamilton Funeral Chapel in Wilson. The family will receive friends at the funeral home from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. Friday and at other times at the residence.

Norman

NEW BERN — Mr. John Armstead Norman, 54, died Wednesday at his home, 310 Wildlife Road.

His funeral will be conducted Friday at 4 p.m. in Antioch Free Will Baptist Church by the Rev. Jerry English. Burial will be Greenlee Memorial Park.

Surviving are his wife, Alice J. Norman; four daughters, Terry Norman Fulcher, Anita Norman Harris and Sandra Darlene Norman, all of New Bern, and Cynthia Norman Carraway of Goldsboro; a brother, Gerald L. Norman of Washington, N.C.; a sister, Melba Norman Andrews of Greenville, and his mother, Isabelle C. Norman of Washington, N.C.

The family will receive friends at Pollock-Wells and Best Funeral Home in New Bern today from 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. and at other times will be at the home.

In lieu of flowers memorials may be made to the Craven County Home Help Hospice, P.O. Box 1390, New Bern, 28560.

Wilson

BALTIMORE — Mr. Harold Lee Wilson, 49, of 818 McCabe Ave., formerly of Ayden, N.C., died Wednesday in Johns Hopkins Hospital. Arrangements will be announced by Norcott and Company Funeral Home in Ayden, N.C.

Community Action Agency," he said.

Loy said he has noticed a core group of residents who stay for long periods of time at the shelter while others come and stay a night or two and are never seen again.

Loy said shelter officials are concerned and are determined to assist the core group who stays night after night.

"We're concerned that we just don't help people to be dependent," he said.

"There are people in our community who come and stay and never do anything for themselves and we are aware of that and that's one reason for hiring some staff people to help us address that issue.

"Rather than set up a time limit for how long people can stay, what we are attempting to do is to address each person's needs as an individual and their situation and if we feel like somebody can do better for themselves than what they are, we want our volunteers and our staff people to begin to motivate that person to do that," he said.

Loy said staff personnel might assist those people by helping them set some goals for themselves, and make it more convenient for them to find and take advantage of community resources.

"If that's not being done, we feel it is our responsibility to begin to put some pressure as a means of motivation and make it less convenient for them to stay at the shelter," he said.

Loy said future goals of shelter officials include making improvements in nutrition relating to the food the shelter offers.

"We provide soup each night and try to supplement that with sandwiches and different things." he said. "We have a few organizations that come in and bring food on a regular basis but that's hard to coordinate."

Loy also indicated a desire to expand on the use of the current building. He said such uses might include a medical clinic which might be jointly arranged with the East Carolina University Medical School, or a day care center for children from low income families.

New Vote Likely

votes, Mrs. Hardee said the error is significant enough to affect the outcome of the election. If the board chooses to hold a new election, Garrett may appeal to the State Board of Elections, but that agency will likely uphold the county's decision, she said.

Dupree may also file a complaint in connection with a problem in the Bethel precinct, Mrs. Hardee said. During the recount, election officials realized they had four more ballots than they had names of people who voted in the runoff.

Precinct workers probably did not record all of the names of the voters, or recorded them incorrectly, Mrs. Hardee said, and the elections board will continue to check records in an effort to find the error.

Garrett said he also feels Dupree's complaint should not be considered because it was not filed as soon as the error was known Monday.

"I don't think that it's timely," Garrett said. "That is a legal question and I'll let our attorneys resolve that, but from a layman's point of view, I don't think it's timely."

No black has ever been elected to the Board of Commissioners, and the consolidated districts were created to give minorities a better chance at winning a seat.

"I think this really puts the matter of racial representation behind us," Garrett said. "I think we need to get on to the main business of the county commissioners.

"This is a victory for the community at large, and more specifically for blacks. This is not my victory ... it's the community that is moving forward."

Students from dozens of colleges had gathered at Yonsei for an overnight vigil before trying to march Friday to the North Korean border in efforts to force unification of the divided peninsula.

North Korea's official news agency, monitored in Tokyo, said a North Korean student delegation already had left the capital of Pyongyang for the border to meet the South Korean students and seek a breakthrough for peaceful unification.

Mystery Solved

what mail to deliver, and what was not to be delivered."

Whittington stressed that the volume of mail handled by the post office for his ministry "is not mail that we have initiated. Rather, it is people who write to us after listening to us on television. We have half a million people on our mailing list, so naturally we have a big volume of mail, both incoming and outgoing, with TV listeners or from those who have attended our crusades."

Whittington said he received the letter report Wednesday on the resolution of the postal investigation in Philadelphia.

Jane Maull, consumer affairs representative for the Philadelphia branch of the postal service, reported to Whittington that mail intended for delivery in Philadelphia between May and October 1986 but not delivered had been located in the residence of a postal employee in Philadelphia's Raymond Rosa Housing project.

Ms. Maull's letter stated that the person responsible for the delay had been charged with a violation of federal law and had been prosecuted in the U.S. District Court in Philadephia.

The non-delivered mail, no longer needed as evidence in the prosecution, was returned to Whittington.

"Basically," Whittington said, "we are asking postal authorities to look into the situation in other cities where we have received complaints of discrepancies in delivery of our mail.

"In Greenville," he added, "since I have posted a $5,000 reward for my claim on non-delivery of mail here, I have received word from no less than 10 people naming the same two people as being responsible.

"The Philadelphia investigation took two years, and maybe it will take two years for the investigation in Greenville, but I'm confident it will eventually be resolved."

A post office spokesman said today the postal service would have no comment on Whittington's statement.

Airport Funds OK'd

exactly what we had requested," he said. "The next step is to secure local money."

Turcotte has asked the city and county to appropriate $120,312 each, and he said city officials have included the funds in their budget for fiscal 1989, which begins July 1.

"The city has had their public hearing, the money is included in the budget and there is no opposition so far," Turcotte said.

Turcotte was to meet with the Pitt County Board of Commissioners today to present his requests.

The FAA will fund 75 percent of the cost of all public-use space, and the airport may receive additional federal funding if it is needed. The money is allocated from entitlement funds, which the airport receives after meeting federal regulations. Turcotte said there is more money available.

Architects have presented three options for expansion, but Turcotte said the expansion plans and cost estimates have not been finalized because everything was on hold until the tentative allocation arrived.

Now that the airport is guaranteed the money, Turcotte said he will meet with FAA officials and the architects later this month to determine a timetable for completing the plans.

Things such as airline offices and rental car areas are considered private space, Turcotte said, and he will work with the architects to maximize the amount of space the FAA will classify as public use.

The project will allow airport officials to accommodate growth. Airport officials expected no more than 10,000 passengers a year to use the facility when it was first built, but about 100,000 passengers passed through the airport last year, Turcotte said.

It's All In The Stars

Lakers Will Win Tonight

By Scott Ostler
(c) 1988, Los Angeles Times

According to my astrologer ...

That's right, I've got an astrologer. Nancy Reagan has one, why shouldn't I? Nancy has a country to run, I have a column to write. Two tough jobs. We both need all the help we can get.

Actually, I didn't have an astrologer until last week, when it occurred to me that the secrets of the National Basketball Association finals might be hidden in the stars. Because Mrs. Reagan seems to know her star-charters, I figured I'd seek out one of hers.

I couldn't get the current White House zodiac consultant, Joan Quigley. She has an unlisted solar system. But I did find Joyce Jillson, who writes a syndicated astrology column and who has actually spent time in the White House during this administration. Her charts recommended George Bush as Reagan's 1980 running mate. Jillson tells me she was hired by "a top White House official." She is also a best-selling author — "Joyce Jillson's Lifesigns," "Real Women Don't Pump Gas."

Sports credentials? Joyce is not a fan, but she foresaw the Knicks winning Patrick Ewing in the lottery, and when she forecast Dodger games one recent season for a radio show, she hit a solid 89 percent.

In other words, this girl can gaze.

So what's in the stars for the Lakers? The lowdown from high up and far out, as foreseen last Tuesday afternoon, went like this:

Pat Riley. "Jupiter is very favorably sextile to Pat Riley's chart," Jillson said. "It's expansionism, optimism, reaping what you've sown. Risk-taking is positive.

Magic Johnson. "He will not be the pivotal player the first two games. It will be his anger at himself that will work to his advantage. He needs to feel down in order to get his dander up. After the 9th (Thursday), he shows the astrological class he has. He'll have a very good game on the 14th (Game 4), and the 19th (Game 6) is sensational."

I think I follow you, Joyce. To get a reading on the Lakers, we need to take a gander at the dander of the sleight-of-hander court commander.

Byron Scott. "The third game, he may overestimate what he can do. He may try to seize the limelight, or the other team will do something illegal. They are going to target this man all along. The third game will be particularly difficult. He may get very aggressive.... But his whole cycle is in a marvelous turnaround."

So is James Edwards' jump shot.

Michael Cooper. "He may challenge the other team. He should be very moderate about what he says he can do to Detroit. His words are very forceful right now, but he could be quoted, or misquoted, and he shouldn't talk to the press until the series comes back to L.A."

Tuesday night, Cooper's policy was to speak softly and carry a big brick.

General Outlook and Comments:

—"There are a tremendous amount of fire signs on this team."

But weren't the Pistons born under the sign of Smokey the Bear?

—"The Lakers need motivation to get their energies and aggression going. They need a tremendous challenge. If they're not down, they're not at their best. It's hard for them to have people on their side. In Detroit, the crowd will be so negative it will affect them positively. It will get them moving, hit their astrological sweet spot."

—"This team is not much for perseverance. They can be swayed by little things, fouls, illegal moves."

—"Someone on the Lakers is going to have to eat their words. They'll put out a challenge they can't live up to. It will hurt them in Detroit.... Speaking of eating, on the 9th (Thursday), both teams should watch what they eat. There's a tendency to food poisoning. This is not the time to eat anything with mayonnaise. When in doubt, wait for the good stuff. No junk food."

Does that include humble pie?

Thursday night's game:

"The Lakers will win.... Both teams will play fast and loose with the rules. At the beginning, the Lakers may be disappointing, but they'll be better in the second half. At halftime, a pep talk is not particularly helpful. It might be subconsciously taken as a belief that they really can't do it."

Got all that, Lakers? Keep the halftime bluster down. Set reasonable goals, such as, "Next time Adrian Dantley throws a head fake, let's not all leave the building at once." Hold your tongues, hold your ground and hold the mayo.

Similarities In '75, '88 Series

By TIM CHANDLER
Reflector Sports Writer

The year was 1975. The scene was the state high school 4A baseball championship series. The two teams competing were Greenville Rose and Charlotte Harding.

Sound familiar?

Rose High's 26-0 baseball team, which begins action in the state championship tonight at Harding, hopes the similarities between the two series don't end there.

The Rampants defeated the Rams in the best-of-three '75 series after also getting past Richmond County en route to the title game, just as this year's squad did last week.

Also, playing first base for Rose in 1975 was Mike Brewington, whose brother Jamie currently pitches and plays third base for the Rampants.

The similarities between the 1988 championship series and the 1975 event don't even end there, according to Vincent.

"The attitude with these two teams is very similar and so are the work habits of the players," Vincent said. "They (the '75 club) and this team both grew up playing baseball together. Both teams won state titles in Little League ball (the '75 team with the Tar Heel League and the current team with the North State League).

"Both teams also really liked each other," Vincent said. "Both teams were not jealous over who got the recognition, they just knew that they had to come through when the game was being played."

According to players from the 1975 state championship, the reason they knew how to come through on the field was because of Vincent's style of coaching.

"Ronald pushes you to play hard, but he is also always there to pat you on the back when you do something good," said Griff Garner, a member of the 1975 team who is president of Garner Wholesale Merchandisers Inc. in Greenville. "He believes that baseball should be fun, but that you should always play your best."

"The philosophy he (Vincent) had during that time (1975) was that we had been together as a team for such a long time so just go out there and do your best and get the win," said Brewington, who is a sales manager for Circuit City in Atlanta.

Entering the opening game of the '75 championship series Rose sported a 21-3 record, while Harding came in with a 14-6 mark.

"In '75 we weren't very well regarded going into the playoffs," Vincent said. "We had gotten in because Rocky Mount had been beaten in the next to the last game of the year. Then we had to play 14 innings to win at Northeastern."

The Rams sent Dickie Noles, who later pitched in the major leagues, to the mound for the opening game, while the Rampants went with pitching ace Kelly Heath, who already had two playoffs wins. Heath went on to a career in baseball and is currently with the Toronto Blue Jays' AAA team in Syracuse.

The Rampants managed to pull out a 2-0 victory in the opening game with run-scoring singles in the fourth inning by shortstop Keith Jones and catcher Eddy Connolly.

Heath went the distance on the mound in the game for the Rampants, giving up only two hits, while Noles picked up the loss even though he allowed only four hits.

"We very luckily beat them the first night," said Garner. "When you get to the finals though it takes both good talent and good fortune to win."

The second game pitted Rampant pitcher Wesley Deal against Bobby Shank.

Rose managed to claim the title with another 2-0 win thanks to an eighth inning double by Macon Moye, which scored Garner and Heath.

Deal gave up only three hits in the contest, while Shank scattered five.

"Back when I played we seemed to do whatever it took to win," Brewington said. "Whether it meant scoring a lot of runs or coming up with the big defensive plays, we always seemed to do the right thing at the right time.

"It (winning the state championship) was something we (the players) always wanted and we got the opportunity to do it and we made the most of that opportunity. We went into the finals with the thinking that we had a great team and that we were going to win and that is the attitude that I think this year's team should take also."

Perhaps the final similarity of the two series is yet to come. That similarity being the victorious thoughts shared by champions.

"As I look back, probably the fondest memory I have of high school was winning the state championship," Garner said.

"Winning it was something that I will always cherish for as long as I live," said Brewington.

Women Cagers Go Against Men

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — The U.S. Olympic women's basketball team wound up three days of scrimmaging men with a 108-101 victory over a men's team that included three former North Carolina State players.

"We can't play against a women's team that has the same amount of quickness, and sometimes, speed ... I think we will meet so many women's teams that are so well-conditioned that they will have a lot of speed throughout the entire game," Coach Kay Yow said Wednesday.

"Guys give a certain type of quickness and scoring range that all women players don't have," said Yow, who trained the women's team at North Carolina State. "(But) the eastern European countries have that kind of range on their shot and inside players have to go out and defend in that area. So I think it's really good that we played this team, that can shoot from there."

The men's team, comprised primarily of players from the Raleigh YMCA, included former North Carolina State players Mike Warren, Terry Gannon and Quentin Jackson. There was even football wide receiver Naz Worthen and YMCA director Skip Long.

Yow said the men played hard, but near the end, fatigue overcame them and played a key role in their last attempt at a comeback.

"I think that they played well, but yet we're going to meet really well conditioned teams that are going to move baseline to baseline for 40 minutes strong," Yow said. "If they had been in enough competition to know that, I'm hoping (the women) will have enough perspective to know that we did some things well, but we can be a much better team."

Yow played all 17 of the candidates in camp, but said it was difficult to establish a good rhythm with the constant substitutions. She was without Clarissa Davis of Texas and Vickie Orr of Auburn, both suffering from knee injuries.

Sue Wicks, the national collegiate player of the year from Rutgers, left camp for personal reasons on Sunday. Medina Dixon, who played at Old Dominion, had a case of chicken pox and could not play in camp.

"Sometimes I felt really good. It's just that we hit on a combination that seemed to really play better together than the next combination that went in," Yow said. "It was sort of up and down for me."

The men held up their end of the scrimmage for the first 13 minutes of the 24-minute half. Hitting from both underneath and on the perimeter, the men took a 21-14 edge on Long's layup with 11:54 left in the period. From that point, however, the U.S. women gained control.

Anne Donovan, trying for her third Olympic women's team, started a rally that put the U.S. club in the lead. She scored eight of the points in a 12-2 run that gave the women a 26-23 lead with 8:07 left.

Donovan started the contest, and under Yow's system of substitutions, was making her second appearance for a five-minute shift.

Working Her Way Back

Miller Fighting Back To Play

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

With her right knee encased in a heavy brace after a career-threatening injury, Cheryl Miller says there's something she would like to prove at the U.S. Olympic women's basketball tryouts.

Miller was one of the catalysts in the gold medal march in Los Angeles in 1984. She was working toward capturing a gold medal at the Pan American Games last year when she tore her anterior cruciate ligament, the knee ligament that holds the career of an athlete in the balance.

She is playing again, buoyed by the chance to represent the U.S. once more, and sparked by the desire to come back.

"Cheryl Miller gets the satisfaction of going the distance," Miller said prior to Wednesday night's exhibition game featuring the women's candidates and a local group of men. "The knee injury was probably the most devastating event in my life at the particular time.

"I just wanted to prove to myself more than anyone else that you can come back from an injury, but you have to be mentally tough," she says. "To win a gold medal would probably be more satisfying than the first time around."

Miller says she was working out with some men when she was driving to the basket. She was undercut and heard the familiar "pop" that signals a knee injury.

"Being the optimist I am, I figured 'OK, three weeks in the hospital, I'll get (arthroscopic surgery) ... No problem," she said.

When Miller awoke from the anesthesia of surgery, she was wearing a full-length leg cast. The doctors told her she probably wouldn't be able to return to basketball.

"When he said that, rehab had started right there and I was ready to come back," she said.

Had she followed doctors' orders, Miller would have ended, at age 23, one of the great careers in U.S. women's basketball history. She was a star on the team that won two NCAA national championships at Southern California in 1983 and 1984, earning most valuable player honors both times.

Miller was a four-time All-American, and when her collegiate career ended, she followed with an international career that brought gold medals at the Goodwill Games and the World Championships. Off the court, Miller is now developing a career as a commentator for ABC Sports.

But the doctors had indicated that television might be her only work after the injury and resulting surgery. No more basketball.

"It was the fact that my doctor said 'You couldn't.' I have a problem with the word 'can't,'" she said. "It was something, I guess, in the back of my mind that I wanted to do.

"There are a few times in your life when you're really, really challenged, and I think that it's a crime and an injustice to yourself if you don't give it your best shot," she says.

Her best shot this time will be with what she thinks is the best collection of talent that women's basketball has seen, better than the gold medalists of 1984.

"This team will probably have a more devastating fast break than the Lakers. Teresa Edwards (Georgia) is probably the fastest woman guard in the world," Miller said. "She is a great ballplayer, she's strong, she's smart, she can shoot, she can do it all."

Rocky Mount Eases Past Snow Hill

SNOW HILL — Rocky Mount pushed across three runs in the fourth to take the early lead and held off Snow Hiil the rest of the way en route to a 4-2 American Legion baseball win Wednesday.

Gary Miller opened the fourth for Rocky Mount with a double. Mark Worsley followed with another base hit before Paul Strickland drove in Miller with a double. Dean English brought Worsley home with another base hit and Ernie Jones singled in Strickland with the final run of the spurt.

Snow Hill's two runs came in the fourth when Richie Britt and George Burnette both singled with one away. An error moved both up before T.J. Johnson drove both runners home with a single.

Shay Beaman had three hits to lead Snow Hill while Johnson, Britt and Walt McKeel had two apiece.

Snow Hill falls to 1-2 and returns to action tonight against Wayne County.

Rose Games Will Be On The Radio

Rose High School's games in the 4-A State Baseball Tournament finals will be broadcast locally over WGHB-AM (1250).

The Rampants will be at Charlotte Harding for the best-of-three series that will decide the state championships.

Tonight's game begins at 7:30 p.m. and Friday's game will also begin at 7:30 p.m. Saturday's game, if needed, will begin at 1 p.m.

Rasmussen Traded To San Diego For Sierra

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds traded struggling left-handed starter Dennis Rasmussen to San Diego just hours before he was supposed to start Wednesday against the Padres.

The Reds acquired right-handed reliever Candy Sierra, who will go into the Cincinnati bullpen. Reliever Jose Rijo was moved to the rotation and was scheduled to start Wednesday against the Padres.

Rasmussen, 29, was 2-6 in 11 starts with a 5.75 earned run average. The Reds acquired him last August 26 from the New York Yankees for right-hander Bill Gullickson.

Rasmussen pitched for San Diego in 1983, then was traded to the Yankees for Graig Nettles in March 1984.

Sierra, 21, made 15 relief appearances this season for the Padres, going 0-1 with a 5.70 ERA. The rookie pitched two scoreless innings Monday in a 12-0 victory by the Reds. He has spent five seasons in the Padres' farm system.

Rijo is 6-1 with a 2.25 ERA in 29 relief appearnces, the most on the Reds' staff.

Bullets Trade Bol For Feitl

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The Washington Bullets traded 7-foot-7 center Manute Bol Wednesday to the Golden State Warriors, where he will join 7-4 Ralph Sampson to create the tallest front-line duo in NBA history.

"Now these are real twin towers," said Warriors Coach Don Nelson. Sampson and 7-footer Akeem Olajuwon were known as the "Twin Towers" in Houston before Sampson joined the Warriors last December.

Winterville Ruritans Take 3-2 Win

WINTERVILLE — Winterville Ruritans Jr. Babe Ruth team defeated Ayden Northrop King, 3-2, in a 10-inning baseball game Wednesday.

Bryan Smith went the distance to pick up the win and limited Ayden to three hits while striking out 10 and walking two.

With the score tied 2-2, Smith hit a triple. Hal Conger walked. Tucker Moore then singled in Smith for the win.

Smith had three hits to lead Winterville while Conger and Moore had two apiece.

Giants Send Leonard To Brewers

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco Giants traded veteran outfielder Jeffrey Leonard to the Milwaukee Brewers Wednesday in exchange for infielder Ernest Riles.

Riles, 27, was in Seattle with the Brewers and planned to join the Giants on Thursday. Leonard, 32, will join the Brewers in time for their Friday night game in Chicago.

Leonard, a member of the Giants since 1981, was the Most Valuable Player of the National League Championship Series last fall. He was hitting .256 in 44 games this season with two homers and 20 RBI.

Riles, a left-handed hitter who plays third base, shortstop and second base, was batting .252 in 41 games with one homer and nine RBI. He was in his fourth major-league season with Milwaukee.

Harry Dalton, Brewers' general manager, said the club was not unhappy with Riles but felt the trade could help bolster Milwaukee's struggling offense.

"We're pleased to be getting Jeff Leonard. We think he's an established major league hitter. We think he can help us score some runs," Dalton said.

Jordan Tops All-NBA Team

NEW YORK (AP) — Chicago guard Michael Jordan, the NBA's most valuable player and defensive player of the year, gained another major honor Wednesday, being named the only unanimous choice on the All-League team.

Boston forward Larry Bird, the three-time MVP, missed by one vote of being a unanimous choice.

Jordan, the league leader in scoring and steals, was named to the first team on all 80 ballots for a total of 160 points in voting by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters — three from each of the league's 23 cities and 11 members of the national media.

Bird, named to the squad for the ninth straight year — every season he's been in the league — received 79 first-team votes and one second-team vote for a total of 159 points. Two points were awarded for a first-team vote and one point for a second-team vote.

Joining Jordan and Bird on the All-NBA first team were forward Charles Barkley of Philadelphia, center Akeem Olajuwon of Houston and guard Magic Johnson of the Los Angeles Lakers.

The second team was comprised of forwards Karl Malone of Utah and Dominique Wilkins of Atlanta, center Patrick Ewing of New York, and guards Clyde Drexler of Portland and John Stockton of Utah.

Jordan, also a first-team choice last year, was named to the first team on all 80 ballots for a maximum 160 points. Bird received 159 points.

Bird's ninth selection leaves him one short of the record of 10, shared by Kareen Abdul-Jabbar, Elgin Baylor, Bob Cousy and Jerry West.

Of the other top vote-getters, Olajuwon collected 77 first-team votes and 157 points, Johnson, the only unanimous first-team selection last year, got 55 first-team votes and 155 points, and Barkley had 40 first-team votes and 113 points.

All the first-team members except Barkley were named on all 80 ballots. And all except Barkley were named to the first team last year.

This is the first time Malone, Ewing, Drexler and Stockton made either All-NBA team.

Tyson Keeps Life Private

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Mike Tyson's business is boxing. His personal life, he says, is is nobody's business.

"I've been reading a lot of negative press," Tyson said Wednesday at a news conference at Trump Plaza, which also was attended by Michael Spinks, who will challenge the heavyweight champion June 27.

Tyson was upset about reports and rumors concerning a tug-of-war over his career by his wife, actress Robin Givens; her mother, Ruth Roper; manager Bill Cayton, and promoter Don King.

It also has been written than King has attempted to take Tyson away from Cayton.

"I never tried to steal Mike Tyson from Bill," King said. "I categorically deny that."

When asked about it, Cayton, seated next to King on the dais, said, "No comment at all."

"I will have something to say after the fight," King added. "I support Mike Tyson 1,000 percent."

"That's none of your business," Tyson said when asked if his relationship with Cayton might change. "I'll take care of it after the fight."

While obviously annoyed, Tyson said outside distractions are not affecting his preparation for the fight.

Asked about his physicai condition, he said, "You'll just have to wait until the night of the fight and see."

Tyson is a 4-1 favorite, and someone noted that Thomas Hearns, also a 4-1 choice, lost a share of the middleweight title when he was knocked out by Iran Barkley on Monday night.

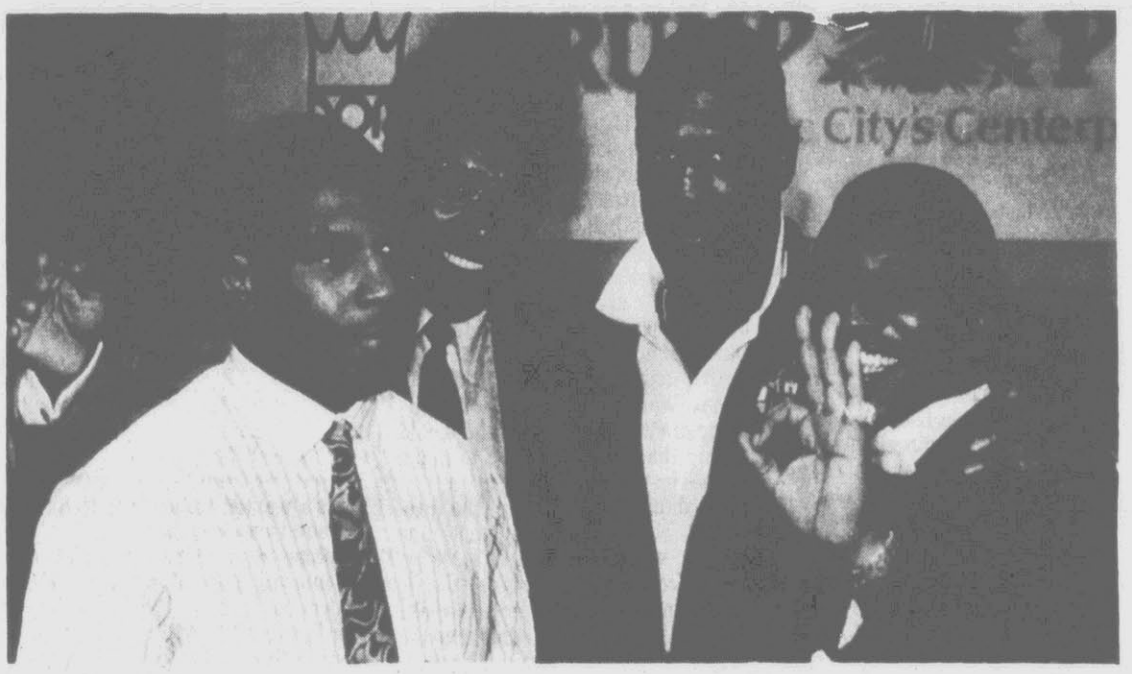

"I'm not Thomas Hearns," Tyson said. "I'm the best fighter in the world and I'm not going to lose."

Spinks was asked if he felt like a champion, although he was stripped of the International Boxing Federation's share of the title after leaving the HBO-television heavyweight unification series to fight Gerry Cooney last year.

"I feel like a champion," said Spinks, who, like Tyson, is unbeaten. "History says I'm a champion."

Tyson countered that Spinks gave up the title so he wouldn't have to fight him at the time.

"I'll die or give up anything before I'll give up my title," Tyson said, adding that he never recognized Spinks' championship credentials.

There's A Fight In Their Future

Walk Foils Cubs Strategy

By The Associated Press

Cubs manager Don Zimmer ordered Pittsburgh shortstop Rafael Belliard, a .227 hitter, intentionally walked to load the bases in the sixth inning. Up stepped pitcher Bob Walk and his .045 batting average.

"I didn't want that little shortstop up there with runners on second and third," Zimmer said. "I thought he would get the pitcher out. So the pitcher winds up hitting a double with the bases loaded."

Walk, naturally, was most interested in talking about his offensive prowess Wednesday night as the Pirates beat the Cubs 5-2.

"I've never been a good hitter," said Walk, whose career average is .151. "I don't try to hit the ball anywhere in particular. I just try to battle you and put the ball in play."

The 31-year-old right-hander knows he will never be paid for his hitting. But he is earning his way with some solid pitching, going 14-6 over the last two seasons since Manager Jim Leyland made him a starter. His 2.84 earned run average is the lowest among Pittsburgh's five starters.

"He's as good a competitor as there is in the league, and I'll admit even I have underestimated his stuff," Leyland said. "I'm not trying to get a controversy going with our pitchers, but he's got as good a stuff as any of them."

Elsewhere, it was Los Angeles 11, Houston 1; Atlanta 5, San Francisco 4; Cincinnati 7, San Diego 1; St. Louis 5, New York 2; and Montreal 5, Philadelphia 4 in 10 innings.

Walk allowed five hits in eight innings, but it was his hit off Calvin Schiraldi that made the difference.

"I expect him to pitch well, but I don't expect the hits from him," Leyland said. "He's a likely candidate to go out there and throw a game like that, but you don't ask him to go out there and win the game for you with his bat."

"He beat me with my fourth best pitch, and that's a cardinal sin for a pitcher," said Schiraldi, who had won three straight decisions.

Dodgers 11, Astros 1

Fernando Valenzuela broke a personal five-game slide with a six-hitter for his first win at home after four losses. Mike Marshall had a homer, two doubles and a single in a 14-hit attack at Los Angeles.

"My arm feels fine," said Valenzuela, whose health has been questioned during his slump. "I felt the same as the last five games. The difference is that we won."

John Shelby drove in three runs and extended his hitting streak to 23 games. Marshall and Kirk Gibson homered on consecutive pitches against Houston ace Mike Scott in the third inning.

"I think we caught him on an off-night," Marshall said of Scott. "We laid off some pitches tonight, and Kirk and I just jumped on a couple of them. He was wild in the beginning, and I think he wanted to throw some strikes, and we got some good pitches to hit."

Braves 5, Giants 4

At San Francisco, Albert Hall's two-out run-scoring single in the ninth inning won it for the Braves. With one out, Ron Gant singled off Craig Lefferts, 1-3, and moved to second on a sacrifice bunt by winning pitcher Jose Alvarez. Hall singled through the legs of Lefferts and into center field to score Gant.

Alvarez, 2-1, allowed one hit in two innings. Bruce Sutter pitched the ninth for his ninth save. The 35-year-old Sutter, who missed the last two seasons because of arm trouble, has six saves in his last seven appearances. In that stretch, he has allowed no runs and only five hits in 9 2-3 innings.

Earlier in the day, the Giants traded outfielder Jeffrey Leonard to Milwaukee for infielder Ernest Riles.

Reds 7, Padres 1

Paul O'Neill had five hits and drove in four runs for the visiting Reds. It was the first five-hit and four-RBI game of O'Neill's career, and the first five-hit game by a Reds player this year. In his last five games, O'Neill is hitting .550 with 11 hits and nine runs batted in. H's batting .276 for the season.

Jose Rijo, 7-1, made his first National League start after 29 relief appearances and held the Padres to just two hits, walked two and struck out eight in six innings. Rijo was moved into the starting rotation when the Reds traded left-hander Dennis Rasmussen to the Padres for reliever Candy Sierra earlier in the day.

Cardinals 5, Mets 2

At St. Louis, the Cardinals took two of three games from the National League East leader. The Cardinals' 10th win in their last 14 games left them 6½ games behind the Mets and in third place.

A three-run seventh against New York relief ace Roger McDowell was decisive. Jose Oquendo singled, Tony Pena also singled and Luis Alicea walked to load the bases. Oquendo scored, but Pena was trapped retreating to third on Curt Ford's single to right. Both Alicea and Ford, who had moved up on the Pena rundown, scored on Ozzie Smith's infield single to shortstop on a slow roller.

Expos 5, Phillies 4

At Montreal, Herm Winningham tripled home Wallace Johnson with two outs in the 10th. Johnson led off with a pinch-hit single against Steve Bedrosian, 0-2, and scored when Winningham lined his hit into the right field corner.

Jeff Parrett, 5-1, pitched three innings of one-hit relief for the victory.

Philadelphia had tied the game in the ninth. Milt Thompson got a bunt single, went to third when first baseman Andres Galarraga made a throwing error on Steve Jeltz' sacrifice attempt, and scored on a sacrifice fly by Greg Gross.

Blue Jays Said In Barroom Brawl

TORONTO (AP) — American League MVP George Bell, rookie pitcher Todd Stottlemyre and other Toronto Blue Jays were involved in a brawl at a St. John's, New Brunswick, restaurant last April, the Toronto Star reported in Thursday's editions.

"They were pigs, really pigs," Clayton Cole, a bartender at Grannan's Seafood Restaurant and Oyster Bar, told the paper Wednesday of the 2:30 a.m. fight last April 25.

Witnesses said Bell, 28, punched a bartender; women patrons were manhandled; and tables were overturned, the newspaper reported. The witnesses said the fight lasted about 25 minutes before it was broken up by Toronto manager Jimy Williams, according to the newspaper.

Police were not informed of the incident, deputy police chief Barry Thompson told the paper.

"No, I'm not," Toronto general manager Pat Gillick said early today when asked if he was aware of the brawl.

Neither Williams nor any of the players could be reached for immediate comment.

The Blue Jays arrived in St. John from a weekend series at New York late on Sunday, April 24. They were scheduled to play an exhibition game the next day against Canada's national team, but a snowstorm forced the game's cancellation. After the team arrived from New York, most of the players dined at Grannan's, a well-known restaurant in the Market Square Mall.

"Usually, we close at midnight on a Sunday, but it was a big deal to have the Blue Jays here and so we stayed open until last call at two in the morning," restaurant owner Paul Grannan told the Star. "I guess that was a mistake."

When they finished eating, most of the players moved into the restaurant's tavern area and continued drinking, the paper said. As snow continued falling, it became obvious the game would be cancelled and "a lot of the players were starting to get pretty drunk," according to Cole.

"There were about twenty of them and only three of us (staff) when the trouble started," he said. "They acted like a bunch of spoiled 18-year-old drunks."

Stottlemyre, 23, a bachelor, "tried to pick up" a young women who was with a local man, but she wasn't interested, said Cole and off-duty bartender Billy Vaughan.

The pitcher, son of New York Mets pitching coach Mel Stottlemyre — a former New York Yankees star — persisted and was told to stop.

Stottlemyre then "gave me a shot," Vaughan said.

Several other Blue Jays started to push and shove and the fight began, Vaughn said.

"It wasn't very nice," Vaughan's girlfriend, Helen Richardson, told the paper. She said she was slammed up against a wall by one of the Toronto players.

Both Cole and Vaughan said they were held down by four or five Blue Jays and roughed up, according to the Star.

"And so did Bell — until he gave me a shot in the cheek," Vaughan said.

Cerone Finds New Life By Catching On With Sox

NEW YORK (AP) — Rick Cerone expected to be selling insurance this summer instead of providing it for the Boston Red Sox.

Cerone, 34, was released by the New York Yankees in spring training and figured 11-plus years in the major leagues would be nice to tell his grandchildren about some day.

"For the first time in 11½ years, since 1976, (when Cleveland sent him back to the minor leagues) somebody told me I couldn't play this game anymore," Cerone said of his release by the Yankees. "I just want to show those people they were wrong."

After his release, Cerone left the spring warmth of Florida for his home in Cresskill, N.J., and the cold reality that he might have to make pitches instead of catching them.

He didn't exactly face the prospects of an unemployment line though, with a guaranteed $300,000 salary from the Yankees.

"I didn't touch a bat for two weeks after I was released. I didn't have the opportunity," Cerone said. "I was so concerned about everything else."

Cerone said if he did not get back in baseball he probably would have gone into the insurance business.

"I was coming to the reality that my baseball career was over," Cerone said. "But I knew I could still do the job and just needed a chance."

That chance came on April 14.

Boston's regular catcher Rich Gedman suffered a broken foot on April 10 and general manager Lou Gorman was well aware that Cerone was available.

"Catcher is the hardest position to fill and I knew Cerone still had the skills," Gorman said.

"In my first game with the Red Sox I went four for five, and that took some of the pressure off," Cerone said.

While a member of the Yankees, Boston was New York's chief rival and memories of Fenway Park's "Green Monster" weren't easy for Cerone to erase.

"I felt kind of strange the first time I put on a Red Sox uniform," Cerone said Wednesday prior to his first start against New York this season at Yankee Stadium. "For all those years I wanted to beat the Red Sox and now I was with them."

Cerone came to the Yankees from Toronto in 1980 along with Tom Underwood and Ted Wilborn for popular first baseman Chris Chambliss, Damaso Garcia and Paul Mirabella.

Cerone had the unenviable task of replacing Thurman Munson, who was killed when the airplane he was piloting crashed on Aug. 2, 1979.

In two full seasons in the majors prior to 1980, Cerone had hit only .228. In 1980, he batted .277 with 14 homers and 85 runs batted in.

"In the beginning, the first couple of weeks, the pressure made it really hard," Cerone said of his trade to the Yankees. "But I adjusted."

Cerone not only had to adjust to replacing an institution, but often had family and friends watching at Yankee Stadium.

At Essex Catholic High School in Newark, Cerone starred in baseball, football and fencing.

He attended Seton Hall University in South Orange, N.J., played in the College World Series in 1974 and 1975, and was selected the NCAA All-America catcher each year.

"Playing near home kind of made it better for me," Cerone said. "It's an incentive. I say, 'Hey, all my friends are watching either here or on TV. I don't want to let them down.'"

Cerone never matched his numbers of 1980 because of injuries and was traded to Atlanta in 1985. He went on to Milwaukee in 1986 and came back to the Yankees in 1987 as a free agent.

Sheridan's Big Night Lifts Detroit

By The Associated Press

In one night, Pat Sheridan hit almost half as many homers and drove in almost half as many runs as he did in the first third of the season.

Sheridan gave Detroit the lead with a two-run homer on the seventh pitch of the game. He added a grand slam in the sixth inning Wednesday night to give him a career-high six runs batted in and lead the Tigers to a 12-4 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

"The first one I didn't think was high enough to get out and the second one I thought I hit it better, but the wind blew it back and it landed in the first row," Sheridan said.

Sheridan started the game with five home runs and 13 RBI in 89 at-bats. His home-run high was eight in 1984 with Kansas City, when he drove in 53 runs. The grand slam was his second this year and the third of his career.

"It was the best game I've ever had production-wise, no doubt about it," Sheridan said. "It was a case of feeling good at the plate, getting some good pitches to hit and having some men on base."

Sheridan gave the Tigers a 2-0 lead in the first when he homered off Jose Bautista, 2-5. He hit his grand slam off Don Aase.

Sheridan's other grand slam this season was off Julio Solano on May 6 in Seattle. His first career slam was against Charlie Hough of the Texas Rangers in 1984.

In other games, Milwaukee beat Seattle 8-7, Kansas City beat Oakland 5-4, California beat Texas 5-2, Minnesota beat Chicago 5-2, Cleveland beat Toronto 4-2 and Boston beat New York 4-3.

Detroit scored a season-high eight runs in the sixth inning, all with two outs. Darrell Evans, who had hit a two-run homer in the fourth, was hit by a pitch to start things.

Brewers 8, Mariners 7

Glenn Braggs hit a two-out, two-run homer in the ninth inning.

Milwaukee, which earlier trailed 5-2 and 6-5, was behind 7-6 in the ninth. Mike Jackson, 2-2, walked Robin Yount with one out and, after Rob Deer struck out, Braggs hit his 10th home run on a 1-2 pitch.

Royals 5, Athletics 4

Frank White drove in three runs, including a go-ahead two-run single in the sixth inning, as Kansas City completed a three-game home sweep.

Matt Sinatro, whose last major-league hit an RBI was on Oct. 2, 1983, against San Diego for Atlanta, drove in all of Oakland's runs with a pair of two-run doubles. The Athletics have lost four straight for the first time this season.

Bret Saberhagen, 8-5, gave up 11 hits in 7 1-3 innings and outdueled Dave Stewart, 9-4. Jeff Montgomery pitched 1 2-3 innings for his first major-league save.

Angels 5, Rangers 2

Mike Witt won for the fourth time in his last 22 starts and Chili Davis hit a two-run double as Texas lost for the fourth time in five games. Witt is 9-4 lifetime against Texas and 5-2 at Arlington, the site of his 1984 perfect game.

Witt, 3-7, struck out eight, walked three and gave up six hits in eight innings. Bryan Harvey pitched the ninth for his fifth save. Ray Hayward, 4-3, was the loser.

Twins 5, White Sox 2

Indians 4, Blue Jays 2

Cory Snyder homered and Domingo Ramos hit a two-run single as the Indians swept the three-game series. They have won five of their last six home games.

Rich Yett, 5-3, gave up two runs and three hits in 6 2-3 innings, walking six and striking out two. Doug Jones got the last two outs for his 14th save.

Red Sox 4, Yankees 3

Roger Clemens struck out 10 and improved his road record to 7-0. Clemens, 9-3, allowed eight hits in 7 2-3 innings and walked one. He has struck out 10 or more in half of his 14 starts and leads the majors with 139 strikeouts. Clemens has won 10 straight road games since Sept. 20.

Emery Employees Stand By Story

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Seven employees in Emery Worldwide Air Freight's Los Angeles office stood by their stories during depositions regarding a package sent to a University of Kentucky basketball recruit's father that allegedly contained $1,000, an attorney said Tuesday.

"There was no recanting," Burl McCoy, a Lexington attorney representing Emery, said in an interview with the Lexington Herald-Leader. "They all testified that the package came open during the sort, it was looked into and that there was a cassette and money in it."

The Los Angeles Daily News reported in a copyright story in April that an Emery package sent by Kentucky assistant basketball coach Dwane Casey to Claud Mills, the father of recruit Chris Mills, popped open in transit March 31. When the package was examined in Emery's Los Angeles station, a videocassette and 50 $20 bills were found inside.

Casey has said he did not put $1,000 in the package and Claud Mills has said the package did not contain the money when it was delivered to his Los Angeles home.

The NCAA and the university are investigating the incident. A payment to the Millses would violate NCAA rules.

The depositions were given Monday and Tuesday in Los Angeles.

One of the questions the employees were asked regarded whether they knew Casey or the Milsses or whether they were UCLA fans. The question concerned the possibility of a conspiracy by boosters of the school to embarrass UK.

"None of them knew Casey," McCoy said. "None of them knew the Millses. None were UCLA basketball fans.

"I don't think there's any evidence there was any conspiracy," he said. The seven Emery employees "all were very regretful it happened. ... Private detectives have been to their homes, asked questions, got unlisted phone numbers and been around the Emery docks asking questions.

Casey, who attended the sessions; his attorney, Joe B. Campbell of Bowling Green; and James Park Jr., who is heading UK's investigation, could not be reached for comment.

McCoy said the seven Emery employees who gave depositions were:

—Chuck Bullerman, a security agent who says he counted the money when the opened package was brought to him by Osburn, Perry and Nelson.

"They said it was common for the adhesive to come loose on larger packages when they were not meant to carry videotapes," McCoy said.

The testimony indicated it was routine procedure for opened packages to be examined and then resealed, McCoy said.

After Osburn found $1,000 in the opened package and it was examined by two supervisors, it was taken to Bullerman, McCoy said.

"He counted the money," McCoy said. "He verified there was $1,000 in $20 bills. It was put back into the sleeve of the cassette, and it was sealed with brown plastic tape. Tightly."

With the contents verified and the package resealed, Flanders and Nelson had "several conversations" with Mills to tell him what happened, McCoy said.

When asked what the employees testified about Mills' reaction, McCoy said: "It was mixed (between annoyance and surprise), but basically agitation — that they had no right to open the package."

McCoy said he advised the Emery employees to give no testimony on how the Daily News learned of the package. He did say that about 60 drivers had access to Flanders' side of the conversation when the Emery dispatcher called Mills to tell him of the package.

Brown, Spurs Talking Contract?

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — University of Kansas basketball coach Larry Brown has agreed in principle to become the next coach of the San Antonio Spurs of the National Basketball Association, the San Antonio Light reported today.

The newspaper quoted a source close to Brown as saying he is "100 percent sure" that Brown has agreed to take the job.

The source told the newspaper that Brown, who coached the Jayhawks to the national championship last season, and the Spurs have agreed to a multi-year, $3 million deal.

"This deal is done, unless Brown changes his mind, which he has been known to do," the source said Wednesday night.

Brown, contacted at his Lawrence, Kan., home early Thursday morning, denied that the deal has been finalized.

"I think your sources are wrong. I haven't signed anything or seen anything. That's the bottom line," he said.

Earlier Wednesday, several friends of Brown indicated the Jayhawks coach feels "very positive" about San Antonio and the coaching situation with the Spurs.

Spurs owner Red McCombs declined to comment on Brown's status or on the coaching situation Wednesday.

"There won't be anything to report until there is a resolution to (the coaching vacancy)," McCombs said. "As I indicated, there won't be anything in regards to any candidate."

McCombs has said he wants to fill the coaching vacancy by early next week, and the source said he expected Brown to finalize his decision "by this weekend."

The source confirmed that Brown met with McCombs and Spurs administrative assistant Bob Bass Tuesday in Lawrence to discuss the Spurs opening. He said they talked about the type of organization McCombs wanted for the Spurs but never mentioned specific contract details.

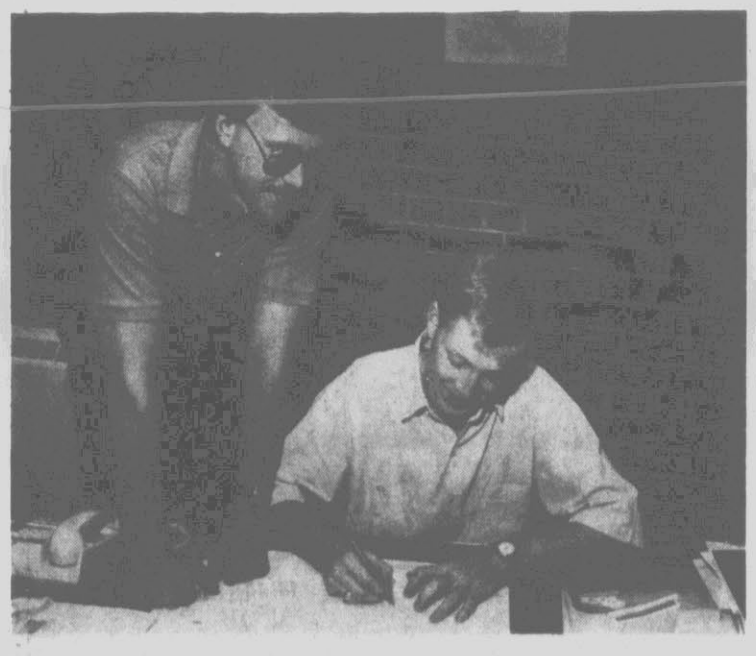

Brown, who just finished his fifth year at Kansas, has had earlier pro head coaching stints with the Carolina Cougars and Denver Nuggets in the ABA and the New Jersey Nets in the NBA.

Brown also spent two seasons at UCLA and recently turned down an offer to return to the Bruins basketball program.

Former Spurs coach Stan Albeck and Brown were being mentioned Wednesday as candidates for the San Antonio coaching job.

The vacancy was created Tuesday with the firing of Bob Weiss, who coached the Spurs to a 59-105 record during his two seasons.

B.J. "Red" McCombs, who gained control of the NBA team last mnth, said that Albeck, now the coach at Bradley, was being considered for the job.

Connors Is On Comeback Trail

LONDON (AP) — If there was ever a separate tennis ranking list based purely on the bravest comeback experts, Jimmy Connors would surely be No. 1, even at 35 years old.

Connors, the second-oldest player on the men's tour, seems to thrive on coming from behind to win no matter how long it takes.

At last year's Wimbledon championships, Connors staged one of the most memorable comebacks in tennis history, rallying from 1-6, 1-6, 1-4 to beat Mikael Pernfors of Sweden in the round of 16, a performance which, even by his own standards, was remarkable.

Playing Wednesday in the second round of the $385,000 Stella Artois championships at Queen's Club, Wimbledon's main grass-court warmup tournament, Connors trailed Seguso 2-4 in the final set.

He pulled back to 4-4 but found himself, two games later, facing two match points.

A problem? Not for Connors.

With a cross-court forehand pass and an ace down the middle straight into his opponent's body, Connors saved them both.

He went on to win the match 6-3, 6-7, 10-8, drawing a huge cheer at the end of a three-hour struggle.

"I've spent my whole life going for it," said Connors, explaining his never-say-die attitude. "Why do anything different now?"

He knew, however, he should have won the match in straight sets.

"I was 4-0 up in the tiebreaker and that should have been it," said Connors, who lost to Seguso at Wimbledon two years ago. "I don't think you ever want a match like that but maybe it was good for me in the way I had to stay in there and grind it out. That was two or three matches rolled into one."

Connors said his legs ached but his mind was still fresh. "I'm tired from the waist down," he said.

The match hinged on the last three games when Seguso, not normally one of the sport's most volatile players, lost his temper with the umpire over a line call and threw his chance away.

In the 16th game of the final set, Seguso thought he had played a backhand winner that would have put him up 15-40, with his serve to follow.

But the shot was called out and he lost both the game and his concentration. Then he dropped serve to trail 8-9.

With a 15-0 lead as he served for the match, Connors made no mistake although he did need three match points to nail down his place in the last 16.

Cash, the reigning Wimbledon champion, trounced Argentina's Javier Frana, 6-1, 6-1 in an hour while Becker, who won the men's title in 1985 and 1986, had problems beating stylish American Scott Davis 4-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Lyle Is In Awe Of His Season

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — There seemed to be a sense of wonder, almost awe, as Sandy Lyle reviewed his season.

"I can't really explain it," said Lyle, the low-key Scot who won the Masters and two other early-season American golf tournaments.

"It just seems I'm having a year like Woosie (Ian Woosnam of Wales) had last year" when he collected 10 international titles and more than $1 million in earnings, Lyle said. "Everything he did was golden. It seemed he could do no wrong."

And the same sort of thing has been happening to Lyle this season. He won Greensboro in a playoff, when Ken Green missed a short putt. He won a playoff at Phoenix when Fred Couples made double bogey on the last extra hole.

"Golf is like that," Lyle said. "You have to have the breaks to win. And sometimes you win on the mistakes of others," Lyle said after practicing for the $700,000 Westchester Classic, which was to get under way today.

Lyle, a former British Open champion, added to his credentials with a victory in the British Masters in his last start. It was his first European triumph in three years.

He returned to the United States this week as the leading money-winner on the American tour with $608,478 and the only three-time winner of the season.

And he has European company, Bernhard Langer of West Germany, current British Open champion Nick Faldo of England and Seve Ballesteros of Spain. Woosnam remained in Europe for another week before his planned trip to the U.S. Open.

"All the lads are eager for the American Open," Lyle said, then added the diplomatic disclaimer "of course, we're all looking at Westchester first.

"It should be good preparation," he said. "I haven't played in Brookline (Mass., the site of next week's Open) but everything I've read and heard of it is that it's much like this golf course, small greens and tree-lined fairways."

Arizona State Rallies To Stay Alive

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Jim Brock has seen many a startling comeback in his 17 years as baseball coach at Arizona State, but none any sweeter than a ninth-inning rally that helped his Sun Devils stay alive in the College World Series.

Trailing Wichita State 3-1 in its final at-bat Wednesday night, top-ranked Arizona State was one strike away from elimination when Ricky Candelari came through with a single. The Sun Devils went on to score two runs, sending the game into extra innings.

Martin Peralta singled home Kevin Higgins in the top of the 10th for a 4-3 victory that forces a rematch between the two teams in a game Friday that will determine which advances to Saturday's championship game against Fullerton State or defending champion Stanford.

"I certainly can't remember a comeback better than this one ... particularly in a game of this importance when we got down to the last strike twice," said Brock, coaching in his 11th College World Series.

"... We hadn't done anything offensively all night. It was amazing," he said.

Wichita State Coach Gene Stephenson, whose team beat ASU in the Series opener, 7-4, said he was not surprised by the late rally.

"You all had them picked No. 1 in the country, so they're entitled to have some ninth-inning rallies," he said.

"I respect them a great deal. They've got great talent ... We should have won the ballgame. But, it's not the end of the world. But don't think Arizona State is going to have an easy time of it Friday night," he said.

A stellar relief job by Brian Dodd allowed the Sun Devils to get back in the game after leadoff hitter Mike Lansing ignited a three-run first for the Shockers. That rally knocked ASU pitcher Linty Ingram out of the game before he was able to get an out.

But Dodd faced the next 17 hitters without allowing a hit and logged 7 1-3 innings, giving up just two hits. He has not allowed an earned run in 11 1-3 innings in the World Series.

"I just came in hoping to keep the team in the game. Luckily, that's what I've been able to do," Dodd said.

Mark Standiford had an RBI and three hits, including his NCAA-leading 94th career double, for the Shockers, 56-15-1.

Candelari hit an 0-2 pitch to right field in the ninth to score John Rumsey, who had doubled to open the inning. Candelari moved to second on Mike Burrola's third single of the game, then scored the tying run on a base hit by Pat Listach.

The comeback denied Wichita State pitcher David Haas his 50th career victory. Haas, who allowed 10 hits and three runs in 8 2-3 innings, is third on the NCAA's all-time win list, two behind Wichita State's Don Heinkel, who pitched from 1979 to 1982. Gary Farmer, 7-0, pitched the final 2 2-3 innings for ASU, 59-12, to earn the victory. He allowed one hit and struck out three.

Lansing opened WSU's first with a single, stole his 51st base of the year, moved to third on a wild pitch and scored on Dan Raley's single. Standiford knocked in P.J. Forbes with a single and Raley scored when Eric Wedge grounded into a double play to make it 3-0.

ASU cut the margin to 3-1 in the fifth when John Finn's bloop single to center scored Tim Spehr, who had singled to open the inning and moved to second on Mike Burrola's base hit.

The Shockers loaded the bases with one out in the sixth, but Dodd got Mike McDonald to ground into a double play. Reliever Jim Newlin, 0-1, took the loss for the Shockers.

Fullerton State can secure a spot in Saturday's championship with a victory tonight over Stanford. If Stanford wins, the teams play again Friday.

Little League

MacKenzie 16
Moose 4

Monte Roundtree went 3-3 and drove in five runs to lead MacKenzie Security past Moose, 16-4, in a Tar Heel Little League baseball game Wednesday.

MacKenzie then broke the game open with three runs in the fourth, keyed by a two-run triple by Roundtree, to make it 10-3.

Clark Construction.....5
Kiwanis 3

Seth Holloman broke open a tight game with a two-run single in the bottom of the fourth to help Bill Clark Construction take a 5-3 win over Kiwanis in a North State Little League baseball game Wednesday.

James Richardson drove in Michael Rouse with a base hit in the top of the fourth to tie pull Kiwanis within one run at 3-2, but Clark Construction came back to score two runs in the bottom of the inning, keyed by Holloman's hit, to make it 5-2.

Brandon Moore had two hits apiece to lead Clark while Rouse had three hits to lead Kiwanis.

Prep League

First Citizen's.....18
Legal Eagles.....4

Sam Jennings and Shea Harper combined on a three-hitter to lead First Citizen's past the Legal Eagles, 18-4, in a Prep League baseball game Wednesday.

First Citizen's scored all the runs it would need in the first, pushing across five runs to take a 5-0 lead.

First Citizen's added three runs in the second and 10 more in the fourth to break the game wide open.

Wachovia Bank.....17
Computerland 13

Wachovia Bank outhit Computerland, 17-13, in Babe Ruth League play Wednesday night.

Wachovia took the lead with three in the first while Computerland came back with two. Wachovia added four more in the second but Computerland rallied for four, cutting the lead back to 7-6. In the fourth, Wachovia added four more while Computerland added one, opening an 11-7 lead.

Then, in the fifth, Wachovia came up with six, putting the game away. Ashley Branch walked and Nathan Ellis singled. Jeff Barwick got a hit and Mark Taylor singled in Branch. Matt Aldridge grounded out, scoring Ellis and L.J. Johnson reached on a double, driving in Barwick. Taylor then scored on a balk. Rocky Thurston was hit by a pitch and Jay Calfee singled to score Johnson. Thurston scored on a passed ball.

Computerland rallied for one in the sixth and two in the seventh, but fell short.

Barwick, Taylor, Aldridge, Johnson, Thurston and Calfee each had two hits for Wachovia. Kelvin Yarrell had three to pace Wachovia.

Pepsi-Home Builders

The contest will be completed Sunday at 4 p.m.

Southern Pitt

Bethel Mets.....20
Bethel Phillies.....8

Bethel broke open a tight game by scoring 18 runs in the third en route to a 20-8 win over the Bethel Phillies in a Southern Pitt Little League baseball game Wednesday.

William Perkins got the win with relief help from Rob Young as the Mets closed the regular season at 13-1. Perkins finished the regular season with a 8-0 record.

Perkins had three hits, two triples and a double, and drove in six runs in the key third inning. Brad Bright had a triple and a single in the third while Ricky Peele also had two hits in the third.

House OKs Limit On Ads For Kiddies' TV Programs

WASHINGTON (AP) — House-passed legislation would restore limits to the amount of advertising during children's television programs, a measure opposed by the Reagan administration as "inimical" to free speech rights.

Lawmakers voted 328-78 on Wednesday for the bipartisan measure, which would limit commercials in children's programs to 10½ minutes per hour on weekends and 12 minutes per hour on weekdays.

In a related action Wednesday, the Senate voted approval of a bill designed to curb violence on television.

That measure, sponsored by Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., exempts members of the television industry from federal antitrust laws for three years to allow them to work together to develop voluntary standards on TV violence.

The bill, approved on a voice vote, moves to the House, where the Judiciary Committee plans to hold hearings shortly.

The House-passed bill would give TV stations until Jan. 1, 1990, to comply with new ad limits, and it would allow the FCC to modify the time standards after Jan. 1, 1993.

During debate on the bill, Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., said, "For far too long, we have allowed children's television to be driven solely by commercial considerations."

Rep. Matthew J. Rinaldo, R-N.J., ranking Republican on the subcommittee, said the measure "strikes a balance between financial support for children's programming and the desire to shield children from overexposure to commercial messages."

Opponents say the measure is misdirected and raises constitutional questions.

An administration statement said: "Attempts such as this one, to inject the federal government into programming and advertising decisions that are properly those of television broadcast licensees, are inappropriate, ill-advised and inimical to the spirit of the First Amendment."

The House compromise was stripped of earlier proposals to prohibit programs that feature toy manufacturers' products, referred to by critics as "program-length commercials."

Legislation pending in the Senate would ban such programs. No hearings have been scheduled on the Senate bill, which is sponsored by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio.

'Rap' Music Turns Corner, Finds Home

By J.D. CONSIDINE
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

When the Sugarhill Gang's single "Rapper's Delight" first introduced rap music to the Top 40 charts back in January 1980, the consensus in the music industry was that the style was little more than a flash in the pan, a novelty that would wear itself out within a few months.

Eight years later, however, popular tastes have changed to such an extent that the Fresh Prince, of the rap duo D.J. Jazzy Jeff & the Fresh Prince, can state without exaggeration that his audience is "anyone who can understand English."

Once the music of a minority, rap has become a growing part of the pop music mainstream. When it first emerged from the black dance halls of Harlem and the South Bronx, rapping — a rhyming, heavily rhythmic chant, usually performed to the accompaniment of records and drum machines — appealed almost exclusively to urban black teens. Although the music developed considerably in the early '80s, even critically acclaimed records such as "The Message" by Grandmaster Flash & the Furious Five were unable to crack the pop charts.

In the last year, though, there has been a steady string of rap records in the Top-40, from the Beastie Boys' chart-topping "Fight for Your Right" to Salt-N-Pepa's Top 10 hit, "Push It." The initial order for "Tougher Than Leather," the latest Run-D.M.C. album, topped 1.37 million copies, guaranteeing that it will go platinum, as have albums by Salt-N-Pepa, Whodini, L.L. Cool J and the Beastie Boys.

Moreover, "Best Rap Performance" was recently added as a category in the Grammy Awards. Rap, as National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences President Mike Greene said in Billboard, has "matured into several kinds of music, with several kinds of artists doing it."

But that's only part of the story. Perhaps the most important factor in the current rap boom is that the music is no longer seen as simply a subset of the black music market.

"It's like the old Motown motto, 'The Sound of Young America,' " says Bill Adler of Rush Artist Management, which handles some of rap's biggest acts. "Rap isn't the sound of young black America; it's the sound of young America."

Just look at the Beastie Boys, a trio of Manhattan teens who went from playing hard-core punk, a typically white, upper-middle-class musical pursuit, to rapping. "When we were in high school, (listening to rap records) seemed like a perfectly natural thing," says Beastie Mike D. He and his friends had been going to downtown clubs where they would play punk records, he said. "Then we started requesting rap music, and they integrated that into what they were playing.

"To us, it was just this really cool new form of music. It wasn't like, 'That's rap, that's for black people.' "

Attitude is obviously a major factor in the Beasties' success, as is the group's command of street slang and musical credibility (black rap stations had been playing the band's records long before MTV discovered "Fight for Your Right").

As much as a brash, youthful attitude might have done for the Beasties, it hasn't been the only means for rap to attract a larger audience.

Cronkite: At Large?

L.A. Times-Washington Post

For CBS, the term "Walter Cronkite at Large" really has a double meaning these days.

CBS News faces the possibility of Walter Cronkite at large — working for someone else, that is — if current negotiations between the venerable newsman and the network do not pan out.

"We're still negotiating," Cronkite, 71, said in a telephone interview from CBS News in New York. "I just don't want to characterize the negotiations."

Cronkite has been with CBS since 1950 and anchored "The CBS Evening News" for 19 years before stepping down in 1981. "At the moment both sides are very hopeful of coming to a happy agreement," he said.

For the past seven years Cronkite has been paid a reported $1 million a year as a consultant and special correspondent. A new 10-year contract, which would take effect later this year, calls for Cronkite to continue his work as a consultant for CBS but does not make provisions for him to continue as a special correspondent for CBS News.

Studio Lets Fans Join In Action On 'Star Trek' Tour

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Trekkies who've been following the galactic adventures of Captain Kirk and Mr. Spock for 22 years can now join the action in the new "Star Trek Adventure" at the Universal Studios Tour.

The attraction, which allows fans to play the parts of the Starship Enterprise crew, Klingons and other aliens, opens today.

Gene Roddenberry, creator of "Star Trek," was an early visitor to the attraction two weeks ago. The revolving parts of the stage were working, but workers were scurrying to complete the 2,000-seat theater.

On the stage, a Klingon stood on the bridge of his Bird of Prey spaceship and petted his Puppy Lizzard. The stage turns to bring forward the bridge of the Enterprise, the engineering section, transporter room and the surface of the planet Akumal 7.

Roddenberry, William Shatner and other actors from the television and movie series are scheduled to be on hand for the opening. About 1,500 Trekkies were invited to the premiere performance after they were the first to respond to a mailing of 26,000 invitations sent to "Star Trek" fan clubs.

"Star Trek" first ran on NBC from 1966-69, then became one of the hottest shows in reruns. Paramount Studios has so far made four hit "Star Trek" movies and the current "Star Trek: The Next Generation" has become a hit in syndication.

"It still amazes me that 'Star Trek' has become a popular myth," said Roddenberry. "I constantly tell myself that I'm the same guy I was when I was trying to get a script assignment. You can't believe the press clippings. I think I do good work. Every once in a while I do something that's very good. But I'd hate myself if I believed all the stuff written about me."

Roddenberry said that when Paramount asked him to create a television series, he asked, "Who'll be my censor if we don't go network?"

He said, "When they told me I'd be my own censor, my ears perked up. I never thought I would ever say anything good about a studio, but I don't get any calls about stories. Of course, the other side is that you don't want to blow it. So you end up working even harder.

"I think if I've done anything well it's that I picked good people, gave them their head and didn't subject them to any criticism I wouldn't want myself."

He said when he created the new TV show he wanted new characters. "The actors I was working with were too good for 'hand-me-down' characters," he said.

Stallone Guard Foils Bank Robber

GARDENA, Calif. (AP) — A part-time bodyguard for actor Sylvester Stallone foiled a bank robbery after he spotted a suspicious customer while driving by the bank.

Skystone-Eagle Lambert, 34, was off duty Monday from his regular job as a patrolman for the Santa Monica Police Department when he noticed a bicyclist wearing a heavy black jacket, despite temperatures in the high 60s.

Lambert watched the man park his mountain bike in an alley behind the First Interstate Bank of California in Gardena, 12 miles south of downtown Los Angeles.

The teller handed the robber an undisclosed amount of cash, then shouted "We've been robbed!" as the bicyclist ran out the front door.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY June 10

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): This is a good time to revise your budget and cut down on expenses. Accept the support of a prominent person who understands your needs.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Check out the cost of a recreation you are planning before committing yourself. Speak calmly with a stubborn co-worker, and avoid arguing.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Find out what can be done to turn a limiting situation to your advantage, but be practical. Show your mate you will back a new project.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Look to good friends for assistance in putting your ideas across. Avoid a jealous person who may try to harm you in some way.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): This is a fine day to reorganize your financial matters and see exactly where you stand. Enjoy the company of your family at home tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Your intuition is working very accurately today, so be sure to use it. Stick with business today, and don't waste any time daydreaming.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): A clever business associate can show you how to improve your personal finances and become more prosperous, so listen to this person.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): You have some original and worthwhile ideas which could be quite profitable, so don't hesitate to act. Be very cautious while driving.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Sit down with a co-worker and discuss how to increase efficiency by working more harmoniously. Stay at home and be happy tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan.20): Study the cost of a recreation you are planning to enjoy during the weekend, and make sure it fits your budget. Keep busy and feel happy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): If you want to entertain some guests in your home tonight, keep it simple and inexpensive so that you won't wear yourself out.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Any dealings you have with others today, whether close friends or just acquaintances, will make relationships much more valuable.

How you play some card combinations is purely a matter of guesswork. At other times, learning as much as possible about the hand can help you arrive at the winning solution.

East-West were using weak no trump opening bids. Even so, West's decision to try to buy the contract in three hearts via a two no trump relay rather than jump to game in hearts as a preemptive action does not meet with this department's approval. Since North's double of two no trump promised spade support, South elected to try for game in spades instead of defending.

East won the first trick with the ace of diamonds and returned the suit. Since declarer had to lose a trick to the ace of trumps, the fate of the hand rested on whether declarer could limit his club losers to one.

Did East or West hold the king of clubs? Declarer decided he needed to find out more about the holdings before committing himself. At trick three, declarer led the queen of hearts, and West did well not to cover. Declarer called for dummy's ace and ruffed a heart. A spade to the jack lost to East's ace, and declarer ruffed the diamond continuation high. He crossed to the king of trumps and ruffed another heart, and East's discard was a revelation. Now East had to hold the king of clubs for his opening bid.

The rest was easy. Declarer drew the last trump, cashed the ace of clubs and, with a heart full of hope, led a club to the ten. When that fetched the king, all was well.

AIDS' 'Family Tree' Shows It's New Item

NEW YORK (AP) — A genetic study of the "family tree" of the AIDS virus suggests it may have appeared only about 40 years ago, scientists reported today.

At most, the results suggest it probably evolved from its West African cousin within the last 100 years, said researcher Temple Smith.

AIDS viruses are found in humans and monkeys, but the study could not determine whether an ancestral virus jumped from monkeys to humans, or vice versa, said Smith, director of the Molecular Biology Computer Research Resource at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute of Harvard Medical School.

The work follows a study published last week that suggested an ancestral AIDS virus infected the primitive ancestors of humans and monkeys more than 20 million years ago. Smith said he doubts that conclusion.

The new work, which used a different method of analysis, appears in the British journal Nature. Smith wrote it with colleagues at the U.S. Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta and the Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico.

It concerns the AIDS virus, called HIV-1, a West African relative called HIV-2, and a monkey AIDS virus called SIV.

Researchers focused on genes, which act as inherited blueprints, for proteins from the coating of the viruses. They compared genes from a total of seven samples of HIV-1 and HIV-2, plus two samples of SIV.

After defining similarities and differences that resulted from the evolutionary history of each virus sample, they constructed a family tree that would account for the similarities and differences they found.

Results suggest that HIV-1 and HIV-2 split into separate evolutionary paths at least 40 years ago, Smith said in a telephone interview. And "unless there is something very unusual going on," he said, the split must have occurred no more than 80 to 100 years ago.

Russell Doolittle, biology professor at the University of California, San Diego, said the estimate made sense to him.

Other researchers also have concluded the split in the human virus occurred relatively recently, said Doolittle, who has studied the evolution of the family of viruses that includes the one causing acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Smith said the monkey virus also have split from the human viruses 40 years to 100 years ago. But that assumes that the monkey virus has evolved at about the same rate as the human viruses, and no information is available on that, Smith said.

Oregon Will Pass Out Needles To Drug Users In State's Gamble To Aid Addicts

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's first test of distributing hypodermic needles to drug users for curbing AIDS will begin next month in Portland, Ore., and the prosecutor says it's worth a try.

"I'm saddened we have a population that warrants such a program, but I see there are valid public health and public policy reasons for such a program, or at least putting it in place," said Multnomah County district attorney Michael Schrunk.

"To me, the AIDS prevention and the drug treatment counseling for each participant is really the key to it," he said in a telephone interview.

Such counseling may reach people who would not otherwise get it, so it "may well benefit the community," he said. "I'm willing to gamble the counseling will be good."

But Schrunk, who said he believed in a firm drug enforcement policy, declined to say whether the program would break laws. "Those are things we'll have to work through," he said.

Legal opposition has been holding up a similar program in New York City. In Massachusetts, state lawmakers on Wednesday debated a needle distribution program in Boston.

The Oregon project will be conducted by Outside-In, a social service agency, under a $67,000 grant from the American Foundation for AIDS Research, said Kathy Oliver, Outside-In's executive director.

The yearlong program, in which 125 drug abusers will get counseling and exchange used needles for new ones, is designed to study whether such programs can reduce the spread of the AIDS virus among drug abusers, said project consultant Don Des Jarlais of Narcotic and Drug Research Inc., a non-profit New York foundation.

A needle used by an infected person can infect the next person who uses it. Besides providing sterile needles, exchange programs provide opportunity for counseling about drugs and AIDS, said Des Jarlais, who is also coordinator of AIDS research for the New York State Division of Substance Abuse Services.

He and other health officials said they knew of no other such program in the nation.

No starting time has been set for New York City's planned program, which must wait at least until a state regulation allowing it takes effect next month, said city health department spokesman Sam Friedman.

In addition, officials must complete "delicate conversations with law enforcement and prosecutorial people in New York City," he said.

The city's special drug prosecutor in February declared that dispensing the needles would be a misdemeanor punishable by up to a year in prison.

In Boston, the Legislature's Health Care Committee conducted a hearing on a bill that would allow the city to set up a pilot needle exchange for six months.

Such programs have begun in Europe, but the idea has sparked controversy in the United States

"It does carry an implied message that government is condoning the drug use, which we think is an inappropriate message for youth," said Allan Randall of the National Federation of Parents for Drug-Free Youth, based in Silver Spring, Md.

Report Links Leukemia, Nuclear Complex

LONDON (AP) — The rate of leukemia among young people living near a nuclear complex in a barren area of northern Scotland is nearly twice Britain's national rate, a report published today says.

The report by the government-sponsored Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment says six known cases of leukemia were diagnosed among young people under 24 who lived within 15 miles of the plant in Dounreay between 1968 and 1984.

"This is twice the number expected on the basis of the national rate," the report says, adding that the likelihood of such a high rate occurring by chance is about one in 12.

Five of the victims lived within 7.8 miles of the nuclear complex, the center for Britain's fast-breeder reactor research program, the study says.

The report says the reason for the number of leukemia cases is not known, though the findings echo a 1986 government investigation showing the childhood leukemia rate near the Sellafield nuclear reprocessing plant in Cumbria, northwest England, to be four times the national average.

"It is hard to imagine that you could see an excess around Dounreay and an excess around Sellafield, and it is just bad luck," said commission chairman Martin Bobrow.

The committee said it was "conceivable that minute amounts of radioactive material carried home may accumulate and lead to exposure of infants in some unforeseen way."

But it said the level of leukemia might also be due to exposure to chemicals, viruses or even chance.

Scottish Health Minister Michael Forsyth said the government had accepted the committee's recommendation to hold an investigation into the high rates, despite the "small number of cases involved."

However, union spokesman Bryan Durrans of the Institute of Professional Civil Servants called the report "inconclusive."

Astronomers Find Einstein's 'Ring'

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — The first apparent example of an Einstein ring, a celestial illusion predicted by the famed physicist more than 50 years ago, has been discovered by astronomers.

They found an elliptical ring they believe occurs because radio waves are bent by the gravity of a distant cosmic object. The discovery, reported today in the British journal Nature, was made by Jacqueline N. Hewitt of Massachusetts Institute of Technology and other radio astronomers.

During the past decade, several other celestial mirages have been spotted. A galaxy relatively close to Earth acts as a lens, bending the light emitted by a more distant object. In most of the other examples, the result has been the appearance of two objects where only one actually exists.

Albert Einstein speculated in 1936 that such things exist but are too small to see. That was before the development of radio astronomy.

Hewitt's discovery was made with the National Radio Astronomy Observatory's VLA, or very large array, telescope near Socorro, N.M. It was based on observations in 1986 and 1987.

Antarctica May Face Mining For Minerals

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — Countries overseeing Antarctica have overruled environmentalist objections and recommended mineral exploitation of the frozen continent, thought to be rich in gold, oil, coal and other resources.

Delegates agreed at the monthlong conference that ended last week to lift a ban on development of Antarctica. The 100-page document, called the Antarctic Minerals Convention, also expressed concern for the Antarctic environment and contained provisions for its protection.

Chris Beeby, New Zealand's deputy secretary of foreign affairs and chairman of the 20-nation group which approved the document Thursday, said it offered the strongest protection possible for the unspoiled Antarctic environment.

However, Greenpeace and other non-governmental groups included in the discussions claimed they were inadequate.

The convention's provisions include creating an Antarctic minerals resource commission to oversee the region's development.

The convention also contains provisions for clean-up operations where necessary, must now be ratified by a minimum of 16 of the Antarctic Treaty's 20 members, including the seven which have land claims in Antarctica.

Beeby predicted the convention "will go down in Antarctic history as the most important political development regarding the regulation of Antarctica since the Antarctic treaty itself was adopted in 1959."

Conservationists, who pushed to have the region protected as a "world park," disagreed.

Wilson said the convention looked good on paper but would not protect the environment in practice.

Beeby said he did not think exploitation of resources will begin soon.

A moratorium on mineral development has existed since 1977 and will remain until the convention is ratified, delegates said.

Antarctica is double the size of the United States. Countries with land claims are Australia, Britain, New Zealand, Chile, Norway, Argentina and France.

INVITATION TO BID
HOUSING AUTHORITY OF THE CITY OF GREENVILLE
1103 BROAD STREET
P. O. BOX 1426
GREENVILLE, NORTH CAROLINA 27835

will receive bids for furnishing all labor, materials, equipment, and services required for modernization of:

CIAP PROJECT NUMBER N.C. 22-903: Greenville, N.C.

Sealed bids shall be received until 2:00 PM Local Current Standard Time, on July 8, 1988 at the offices of the Owner. At that time all bids received will be publicly opened and read aloud. Proposals submitted by mail should be addressed to the Owner at the address set out above and plainly marked as indicated in the "Instructions to Bidders", Section 00100. All proposals submitted by mail will be collected at the above mentioned mailing address at 1:00 PM Local Current Standard Time, on the day mentioned above and taken to the office of the Owner. There they will be opened.

The work includes modernization of 226 dwelling units in 130 buildings located on two (2) contiguous sites in Greenville, North Carolina as well as an addition to the Owner's present maintenance facility. The work includes demolition, site work, site utilities, doors, screen doors, new partitions, gypsum board, painting, electrical, mechanical, and plumbing. The work includes renovation of kitchens and baths including fixtures, cabinetry, accessories, and ceramic tile. The work also includes patch and repair of existing surfaces, shelving, and resilient flooring.

001 Public Notices

Proposed forms of Bidding Documents, including Plans and Project Manual, are on file at the office of the Architect, Bradfield Associates Incorporated, 3025 Piedmont Road, N.E., 30305 (MAIL ADDRESS: P. O. Box 52426, zip 30355), Atlanta, Georgia: and the Owner.

Copies of the documents may be obtained by prime contractors, subcontractors, or material suppliers, from the Architect. Set of documents are obtainable for $75.00 per set, the cost of reproduction. No documents will be issued by the Architect until the cost of reproduction has been received. Requests for documents should be accompanied by a street address and telephone number.

Prime contractors who return the documents within ten (10) days after the bid opening will be refunded cost of reproduction, for the first two (2) sets of documents issued. No refund will be made on additional sets ordered whether returned or not.

Prime contractors who order documents and do not submit a bid, or do not notify the Architect seventy-two (72) hours prior to bid opening of their intent not to submit a bid, forfeit the entire cost of reproduction regardless of whether documents are returned or not.

Subcontractors or material suppliers may purchase sets of documents for the cost of reproduction. No portion of the cost of reproduction is refundable.

A certified check drawn on a bank or trust company insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation or the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, payable to the Owner, or satisfactory bond executed by an acceptable surety on the Bid Bond form contained in the Project Manual and in amount equal to five percent (5%) of the bid shall be submitted with each bid. The successful bidder will be required to furnish and pay for satisfactory 100% Performance and Payment Bond(s).

Attention is called to the fact that not less than the minimum salaries and wages as set forth in Section 00830, "Wage Determination", the "General Conditions", and the "Supplementary General Conditions" must be paid on this Project. All contractors shall provide Equal Opportunity Employment.

No bids may be withdrawn for a period of forty-five (45) days subsequent to the opening of bids without the consent of the Owner.

Soviets Go One Up, Invite U.N. To View Missile Bash

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Soviet Union has stolen the disarmament show with a dramatic invitation to U.N. leaders to witness the destruction of intermediate-range nuclear missiles on its soil next month.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze, speaking Wednesday at a U.N. disarmament session, asked Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, members of the Security Council and representatives of the 102-nation non-aligned movement to come to the nuclear bonfire in July.

It will be "not the Bolshoi Theater, but a major premiere nonetheless, a momentuous historic event," he declared.

"When the first public execution of weapons in human history takes place, no one is likely to cry or weep. It will herald an end to a lot of tears," he said. "But having dug a grave for weapons of mass destruction, mankind must now build the foundation of a nuclear-free and nonviolent world."

Diplomats said Shevardnadze's speech was a tour de force that put the United States on the diplomatic defensive.

Even U.S. Ambassador Vernon A. Walters praised the speech as "hopeful, useful and good."

"It was an extremely interesting new speech, it broke a lot of new ground and it is deserving of study," he said.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz plans to deliver a U.S. statement before the 40-nation conference next week.

But diplomats speculated that Vice President George Bush, or even President Reagan, might make a last-minute decision to offset the Soviet first-strike advantage and deliver a weighty American rejoinder.

"The Soviet Union got on the stage first and kept up the momentum of its view from the Moscow summit. They showed they are in the forefront of the disarmament effort," said one U.N. official who spoke on condition of anonymity. "They have made the U.N. their forum."

The missiles will be among the first scrapped under the now-ratified Intermediate Nuclear Forces Treaty.

In a news conference Wednesday, Soviet arms negotiator Viktor Karpov said the destruction of the missiles would begin soon after July 1. Under the treaty, all 2,700 land-based intermediate-range missiles the superpowers have deployed in Europe are to be destroyed by 1991.

In his speech, Shevardnadze also invited the United States to join the Soviet Union in banning all nuclear tests as the first move toward "a step-by-step elimination of nuclear weapons by the year 2000."

And, for the first time, he said the Soviet Union would announce the presence or absence of nuclear weapons on naval ships on foreign port calls if the United States and Western allies do the same.

The United States has consistently refused to confirm or deny whether its ships are nuclear-powered or carry nuclear weapons.

Shevardnadze also called for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the Warsaw Pact each to reduce their forces by 500,000 troops.

In August 1985, the Soviet Union commenced a unilateral nuclear test moratorium, but the United States continued testing. The Soviets ended their moratorium 1½ years later.

"On the basis of reciprocity with the United States, we are ready to reintroduce and to observe it, this time not for a year and a half, but for all times," Shevardnadze said.

On conventional disarmament, the area in which NATO says the Soviets hold a clear advantage in Europe, Shevardnadze proposed an exchange of official data on troop strength, followed by on-site inspections.

This session, the third in 10 years, is debating disarmament issues and will draw up a declaration of objectives and an international action plan.

Those attending include Prime Minister Noburo Takeshita of Japan, Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi of India, President and Nobel Prize winner Oscar Arias of Costa Rica, British Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe and Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir of Israel.

—Establishment of a U.N. agency that would coordinate and monitor arms reduction agreements, verify compliance and monitor the military situation in conflict areas.

—Including naval forces in disarmament negotiations.

—Creation of U.N. naval forces of permanent Security Council members. He proposed a joint trial in which the member fleets would practice maintaining freedom of navigation by U.N. forces.

The United States and many Western countries, which have naval forces in the Middle East, have opposed a U.N. force as unworkable.

U.S. Missile Base All Set For Inspection By Soviets

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

GREENHAM COMMON, England (AP) — The cumbersome launchers and the cruise missiles are lined up inside this U.S. Air Force base, the anti-nuclear protesters remain outside — and everybody is waiting for the Soviet inspectors.

"They could do it today, I'm ready to go," said Col. William E. Jones, an ebullient Tennessean who is the commander at Greenham Common, 50 miles west of London.

"I have 29 launchers, I have 101 missiles. Everything I have is for display," he said Wednesday.

In the background, photographers milled round a 55-foot missile launcher — on show for the first time.

U.S. military authorities lifted the veil at Greenham Common and two other intermediate-range nuclear missile bases, at Florennes, Belgium, and Mutlangen, a Pershing II missile base in West Germany, ahead of the Soviet visits.

The teams of up to 10 inspectors are due to arrive at 16 hours notice sometime in July or August, implementing the first step of the superpower accord to eliminate by 1991 the 2,700 land-based intermediate range missiles both sides have deployed in Europe.

While Soviet inspectors visit 12 bases in five West European countries and 14 in the United States, American teams have a reciprocal right to check 133 sites in Eastern Europe.

During the Greenham display, the launchers, which are scheduled for destruction along with their missiles, trundled out of giant bunkers ringed by four layers of rolled barbed wire — then roared through muddy lanes, showing off their paces.

On the perimeter fence, a favorite target of protesters, hung a banner with the slogan, "Bread Not Bombs." A solitary woman protester tried to climb the fence, but jumped back and disappeared.

On Wednesday, they said that they, or others, will still be living in the tent and plastic camps here long after the missiles have gone — ever-suspicious that cruise missiles will simply be replaced by something just as deadly.

"The Americans have a history of reneging on agreements," said a young woman in her 20s, a former clerk who identified herself as Xak Aroo.

Inside the base, preparations have included fullscale rehearsals — mock inspections with Pentagon officials playing the part of Soviet inspectors.

"The first group played very belligerent — out of sorts Soviets — and we had to deal with that," said Lt. Col. Michael McCarney.

Guardsmen Killed

GREENVILLE, Miss. (AP) — A military transport plane was practicing touch-and-go landings before it crashed and burned in a fireball, killing the six Air National Guardsmen aboard, authorities and witnesses said.

Four bodies had been recovered from the wreckage of the C-130 turboprop as of late Wednesday, said Col. Dennis Wood, a spokesman for the Air Force Base in Little Rock, Ark., where the plane was based.

The plane was about a mile short of the Greenville Municipal Airport runway when it crashed Wednesday afternoon. Workers were using lights to search through the night for the bodies of the two others.

In touch-and-go drills, a pilot allows the plane's wheels to briefly touch the runway before taking off again. The drills often simulate a ground drop in combat conditions, in which cargo would be dumped out of the moving plane.
