6 Detainees, Including Confessed Double Murderer, Flee Jail Unit

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Six detainees, including an ex-soldier facing a possible death sentence for killing two people while he dressed as a "Ninja" warrior, escaped from jail, and five remained at large today, authorities said.

Two of the escapees faced first-degree murder charges, but one of the two was quickly recaptured, authorities said.

The detainees used a hacksaw blade late Sunday to cut through "saw-proof" cell bars, knocked out a fourth-floor window at the Cumberland County Jail and lowered themselves on a rope made of bedsheets, authorities said.

The breakout occurred minutes minutes before the 11 p.m. lockdown, when the inmates are returned to their cells and locked in for the night, officials said.

The escape apparently was spotted by a Fayetteville police officer, who noticed someone drop from the center, Sheriff's Department spokesman Harold Little said.

Frederick Glenn Evans, 20, who was being held on charges of killing a woman, injured himself while falling from the fourth floor and was recaptured and taken to Cape Fear Valley Medical Center, authorities said.

The five others included Jeffrey Karl Meyer, who confessed to the stabbing deaths of Paul Kutz Sr., 68, and his wife, Janie Kutz, 62.

Meyer, a 21-year-old former soldier at Fort Bragg, pleaded guilty to the December 1986 murders, and was to appear in Superior Court today for a continuation of the sentencing phase of his trial. He faces the death penalty or life in prison.

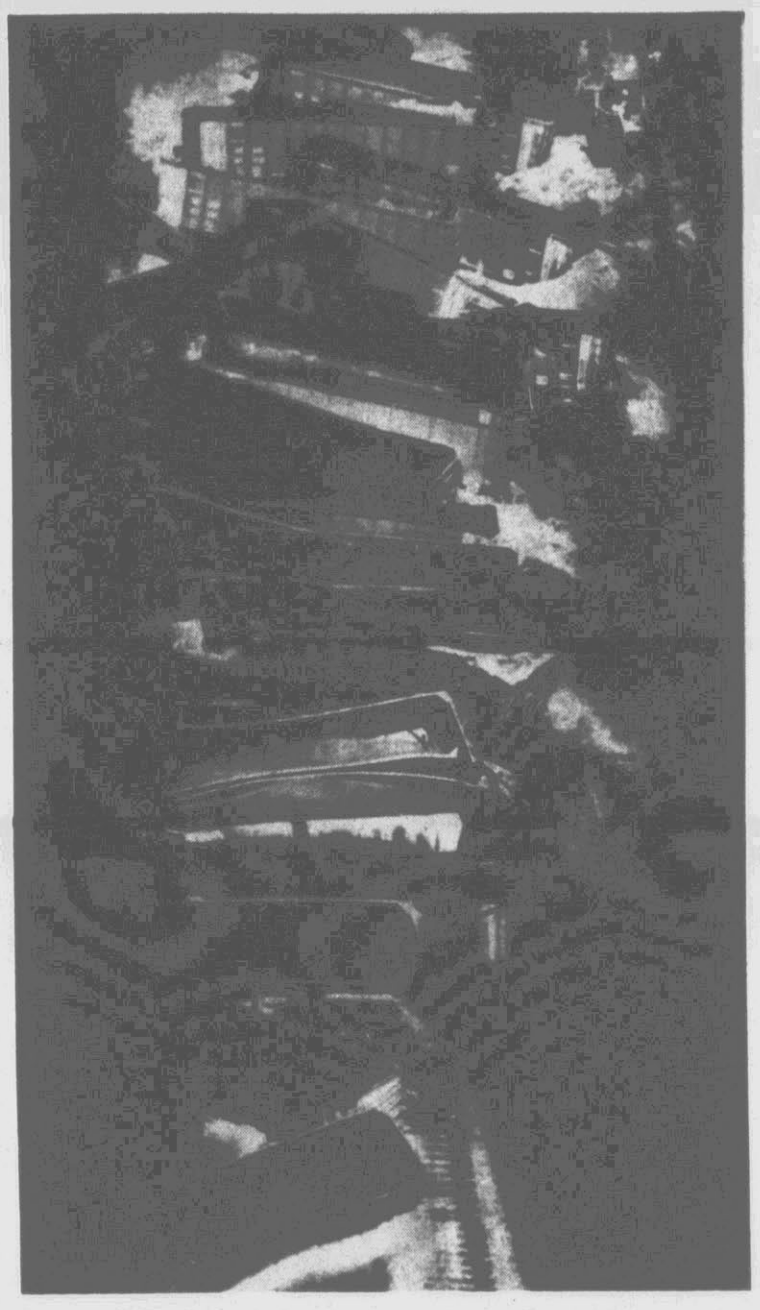
The slayings came to be known as the "Ninja" murders because Meyer and accused accomplice Mark E. Thompson, another former soldier at Fort Bragg, allegedly were dressed in black clothes resembling outfits worn by Japanese Ninja warriors.

The other escapees were: Jerry Ronald Pond Jr., 24, held in the Jan. 21 slaying of a pawn shop employee; Gregory Morris Lee, held on a charge of first-degree burglary; Jeffrey Charles Minnick, 22, held on charges of second-degree burglary, first-degree sex offense and common law robbery; and Rick A. Wilson, authorities said.

Little said he had no information on why Wilson was held, and did not have complete descriptions on the other escapees.

Little said escape by sawing through the bars is supposed to be impossible because the cells are designed with a bar within a bar. When someone trying to saw through the outer bar reaches the inner bar, it just spins, said Little.

He said the six were assigned to Cell Block F in the jail's top floor, where they are allowed into a common area during the day, but are locked in individual cells at night.



TRAIN DERAILS — Authorities in Leon County, Fla., worked Sunday to determine the cause of Saturday night's derailment of an eastbound CSX Transportation train near Tallahassee. An MCI cable running underground beside the track was severed in the accident, causing some service interruptions, but calls were rerouted temporarily until repairs were made Sunday afternoon. No injuries were reported. (AP Laserphoto)

French Socialists Look To Centrists For Coalition

By CHARLES CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — French voters have deprived Socialist President Francois Mitterrand of a legislative majority and created the prospect of an unstable governing coalition for the first time in 30 years.

Socialists, who had won only a plurality of National Assembly seats after Sunday's second round of voting, must seek to govern with the help of Communists or centrists. Just a few weeks ago, they were widely expected to gain an absolute majority.

Also, the extreme-right National Front all but vanished from the legislature, winning just one seat against 35 two years ago. Among the casualties was party leader Jean-Marie Le Pen.

Some commentators said the political landscape could remain unsettled for weeks or even months. Such uncertainty would be unusual in France, which has known only stable government majorities since Charles de Gaulle founded the Fifth Republic in 1958.

Share prices declined on the Paris Stock Exchange today in reaction to the prospect of instability, retreating an average of more than 2 percent.

Mitterrand's premier, Michel Rocard, tried to put the best face on the party's disappointment.

"You have chosen prudently," he told voters Sunday night in a television address. "It will take several days to draw the appropriate conclusions of all these choices."

However, others were more pessimistic.

"It will be the most subtle and complex situation you could imagine," said political commentator Alain Duhamel.

The Socialists could put together a majority in the 577-seat National Assembly either by joining with the Communist Party or by enticing some centrist members of the conservative coalition to change sides.

Neither path looked easy. It was also possible that the Socialists would set up a minority government with Rocard or someone new as premier. They would then try to win by seeking votes to the left or the right, depending on the issue.

The Communists said they would not consider forming a coalition with the Socialists unless Mitterrand reverses his movement toward the center and launches radical new economic policies to fight unemployment and poverty.

Centrist leaders said they would not abandon their conservative allies. But they also indicated the time has come for right and left to find a way to work together.

It takes 289 votes to form an absolute majority in the assembly. With nine seats still unsettled — including two in French Polynesia where second-round voting is June 26 — the Socialists had 272 seats.

Just barely behind, the conservative alliance had 269. The conservative Rally for the Republic won 126, the center-right Union for French Democracy took 129, and smaller rightist parties collected a total of 14.

The Communists had 26.

The National Front salvaged one seat. Its leaders said it fell victim to the replacement of a proportional electoral system by a system of majority vote in two rounds, which favors larger parties. The first round was June 5.

Sunday's runoffs were in the 453 districts where no candidate won a majority the first time, and voter turnout was estimated at 71 percent.

In 1986, the conservatives won control of the legislature and Mitterrand was forced into an uncomfortable "cohabitation" with the right.

But Following Mitterrand's solid re-election victory May 8 with 54 percent of the vote over then-Premier Jacques Chirac, it was widely expected that the Socialists would win a handy absolute majority in the assembly.

But the pre-election polls proved wrong.

Mitterrand met late Sunday night with Rocard but made no immediate public statement. The new National Assembly is to meet for the first time June 23.

After Mitterrand was first elected in May 1981, he called legislative elections and won a clear majority for his Socialists. He named four Communists Cabinet ministers, but they later quit when the government switched to an economic policy of austerity.

Recently, Mitterrand said the Socialists should pursue an "opening"

Kinston Is Named 'All-American City'

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

Residents from neighboring Kinston are celebrating today following the announcement this weekend that their community is one of 10 across the nation to receive the "All-American City" designation for 1988.

Approximately 100 cities, including Greenville, entered the contest sponsored by the National Civic League.

Both Kinston and New Bern were among 25 finalists represented at the awards ceremony Saturday at The Four Seasons Hotel in Houston. New Bern came away from the ceremony with an award of honorable mention but Kinston took home the gold.

"I suppose I am the happiest mayor in the world right now," Kinston Mayor O.A. "Buddy" Ritch said this morning.

"As they named the cities receiving the award, Kinston was the 10th and last city named. When they called Kinston, North Carolina, I almost jumped through the roof," Ritch said.

In a show of celebration, Ritch said approximately 250 Kinston residents, including a band, welcomed the delegation's return from Texas at the Kinston Airport Sunday.

"We had the finest reception I've ever seen. The committee was made to feel really welcome," Ritch said.

According to Randy Hemann, one of the Kinston delegates who traveled to Houston, one of the judging committee's major reasons for selecting Kinston was for the success of programs directed toward the city's elderly population.

He said such programs include an elderly housing program, an Inner Church Outreach program called ICOR, and a "meals on wheels" program, which serves an average of 50 hot meals each day to the elderly population at either no charge or on a pay-as-you-can basis.

Mayor Ritch said the application for the contest emphasized attempts made to assist Kinston's older citizens.

"This community has rallied behind the effort to take care of the elderly in this community," he said.

Besides winning national recognition, Ritch said the contest has been beneficial as Kinston leaders had an opportunity to listen to what other cities are doing to combat mutual problems such as drug abuse.

"It's really been an educational experience," he said.

Ritch also urges other area cities to enter the contest next year.

"We want eastern North Carolina to shine," he commented.

11-Year-Old College Grad Facing Decision

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (AP) — After graduating from college in three years, 11-year-old Adragon Eastwood De Mello faces a mind-boggling choice: Should he pursue the answer to cosmic riddles? Or should he go to junior high?

Like most boys his age, the freckle-faced lad with a Prince Valiant haircut would rather not go back to junior high. "I already know that stuff," he lamented Saturday as he received his bachelor's degree in mathematics from Cowell College at the University of California, Santa Cruz.

But, unless Adragon is admitted to a graduate program, he will be required by state law to go to junior high this fall. His father, Augustin De Mello, is prepared to send his son abroad to escape that fate.

"Our system is not equipped to deal with children like him," said the proud father, a single parent who started Adragon on a special learning program at an early age by hanging space mobiles over his crib.

The father said he introduced Adragon to sophisticated books before he was a year old and that Adragon uttered his first "Hello" at 6½ weeks. "When he was a little older than 1, he strapped on a guitar and started singing," the father said.

Adragon knew the alphabet at age 2, could read and write by 3, and received an associate degree with highest honors from a two-year junior college by 10, the father said. Adragon spent just one year at the university.

Adragon would like to continue his studies at the Santa Cruz campus, but has not yet heard whether he's been accepted in the graduate division for the fall.

"I want to start learning scientific programming next year," he said. "I want to go into astrophysics or particle physics, which hopefully will lead to the discovery of the creation of the universe, which is what I'm interested in."

New Student Option: A Yearbook On Video

By HENRY STERN
Associated Press Writer

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Still pictures and written words may capture graduates' best memories but a video yearbook is what's needed to really go beyond the sounds of silence, students and industry executives say.

"There are a number of pitches we use," said Bob Levitan, president of Durham, N.C.-based Yearbook Enterprises. "It brings those black and white photos to life by capturing the excitement and emotion that a print yearbook can't always do."

Levitan said his company, like others in the field, don't try to undercut sales of the traditional yearbook but offer the video as a supplement.

Videos cost between $20 and $40 depending on length, which can range from 30 minutes to 90 minutes.

A yearbook, which must go to print midway through the second half of the school year, cannot always include things like senior prom and graduation.

Yearbook Enterprises works with about 50 colleges and high schools in teaching students how to use video equipment and buying the rights to songs that young filmmakers want to use as background music.

"It's educational," said Levitan, who filmed Duke University's yearbook for two years before graduating in 1983. "Students grew up watching MTV. This is an opportunity to create with video. They're creating their own MTV."

One student attracted by the idea was John Zager, an 18-year-old senior at Lawrenceville Prep.

For the past two years, he has coordinated filming and sales of his school's video yearbook, which sells for $39.95. He said sales expanded this year because more students became aware of a video's knack to recapture the feeling of student plays and homecoming football games.

"There's something about sitting down and watching events in color," said Zager, of Wayne. "It gives you an honest sense of the school."

Princeton junior Caroline Havens, who worked on her school's 30-minute video, agreed.

"This is a more living type of yearbook," said the 20-year-old junior from New London, Conn. "We don't try to downplay (traditional) yearbooks but this is a lot more lively."

Steve Sullivan, the 30-year-old head of Dallas-based Video Yearbook Inc., said the job brings smiles in addition to profits.

"I've been doing some of the shooting myself," Sullivan said. "The excitement — you forget about it once you get out of high school. This is one way to keep it forever."

Neck and Neck

NEW YORK (AP) — A Harris poll released today indicated a closer presidential race than public opinion surveys last month, with Democrat Michael Dukakis holding a slim five-point lead over Republican George Bush.

Dukakis' lead was within the poll's margin of sampling error and was slightly down from his seven-point advantage in a Harris poll released last month. Dukakis had a double-digit lead in some other surveys in May.

The new Harris poll, conducted by telephone June 1-6, found 49 percent support for Dukakis, who has clinched the Democratic nomination, and 44 percent for Bush, the Republican nomination campaign winner. Seven percent were unsure.

Lou Harris & Associates contacted 1,258 likely voters, and the margin of sampling error in its survey was plus or minus three percentage points.

A USA Today-CNN poll conducted June 7-9 and released last week also showed a single-digit lead for Dukakis, 6 points.

Pollsters have said that Dukakis' recent strength in the polls was based in part on positive publicity from his string of Democratic primary victories that continued for months after the Republican race was settled.

Mylar Tape Sculpture

ASPEN, Colo. (AP) — Six miles of shimmering Mylar tape, described as a sculpture, has been removed from Aspen Mountain and wrapped around the entrance to the Aspen Art Museum, sponsor of the exhibit.

The tape exhibit, named "Beacon Interrogator," was completed last week for an art show entitled "Sculpture-Aspen 1988."

When construction began on Thursday, protests started coming in and one resident suggested in a letter to the editor of an Aspen newspaper that the town should "can the glitter or move it to Vail."

Included among items on the agenda is final consideration of the 1988-1989 budget and a discussion of goals and objectives for the commission.

Former Piedmont Executives Said Eyeing Braniff

DALLAS (AP) — Former Piedmont Airlines executives are orchestrating the buyout of Braniff Inc., according to a report published today

Dalfort Corp., the parent which owns 64 percent of Dallas-based Braniff's common stock, said Friday it agreed in principle to a $7-per-share offer from an investment group formed by PaineWebber Inc. of New York.

Sources involved with the deal told the Dallas Morning News that ex-Piedmont executives are leading the takeover effort.

Dalfort, the company created to operate Braniff after the original Braniff Airways went bankrupt in 1982, is owned by the Jay Pritzker family of Chicago. Investors' identities were not revealed in the Dalfort announcement Friday.

Piedmont, based in Winston-Salem, N.C., was bought last year by USAir Group Inc. for $1.6 billion.

Speculation has focused on former Piedmont head William R. Howard, who left the airline last August to lead an effort by pilots at United Airlines Inc. to buy their airline from its parent company, then known as Allegis Corp.

Howard joined Piedmont in 1978 as senior vice president. He was promoted in 1981 to president and chief operating officer and also named chief executive officer in 1983.

Piedmont, under Howard's leadership, grew into the ninth-largest U.S. airline and was consistently among the most profitable carriers.

In 1986, Piedmont's last full year as an independent company, Piedmont reported earnings of $72.4 million on revenues of $1.87 billion.

Sources told the newspaper the investment group wants to put more money into Braniff, which recently got favorable reviews from leading industry analysts, despite losing almost $32 million on operations in the past two years.

Also, sources said the buyers agreed to use Braniff's existing $53.5 million reserve of cash and securities to boost the airline's operations.

"Braniff will end up being even better capitalized than before," one source told the newspaper. "They (the Pritzkers) didn't want them to just strip the company."

Area tobacco producers have already reported the presence of the reddish form of the green peach aphid. The pest received notoriety last season as being extremely tolerant to several popular tobacco insecticides.

Until 1986, almost all green peach aphids seen on tobacco were yellow-green in color. In 1986, however, a red or pink form became common, and in 1987, these darker aphids made up almost all the population. This newer form apparently reproduces more quickly and is somewhat more tolerant of high temperatures than the form common before 1986.

It appears that the red form of the green peach aphid may be more difficult to control. In order to stay ahead of this problem, growers should scout fields and treat when threshold levels are reached. Do not wait until aphids reach high numbers or until sooty mold is evident.

Choose insecticides carefully. Using only one year's information, it appears that Orthene is more effective than other products available. If any particular product is used and control is poor, switch to another insecticide before treating again. Wait at least three days before determining whether a given treatment has provided adequate control.

After the pest has been controlled on the first incidence of detection, growers should watch fields closely for possible recurrence. Red peach aphids reproduce very rapidly and threshold levels may build up again.

The use of illegal pesticides will be a major theme again in 1988. With the addition of MH-30, tobacco warehouses will again be the sites of intensive sampling. Using labeled products according to directions will proclaim to the rest of the world the U.S. is serious about producing quality tobacco.

Webb Named Head Of ECU Physical Plant, Planning

Robert I. (Bob) Webb, an architect with experience in planning and design of university campus construction, has joined the staff of East Carolina University in the newly-expanded position of director of the university's physical plant and architectural planning.

Webb, whose appointment was effective June 1, comes to ECU after 10 years of experience as university architect at a sister institution, Western Carolina University in Cullowhee, N. C. He was associated for a number of years with a private architectural practice in Florida and Nevada.

"We are most pleased to have Mr. Webb as a member of the university community," said ECU Vice Chancellor for Business Affairs Clifton G. Moore. "We are sure that his extensive background and experience will facilitate our future planning and growth."

Webb, a native of Florida, was chosen for the ECU position in a national search. A search committee chaired by John S. Bell, assistant vice chancellor for business, conducted a review and evaluation of candidates for the job.

A recent campus beautification committee, also headed by Bell, and Dr. Richard R. Eakin, ECU chancellor, recommended that the post of physical plant director be combined with that of a qualified architect.

The position that Webb fills includes the duties of the university's physical plant director and the new responsibilities of architectural and facilities planning for the university, Moore said.

Since his arrival at ECU, Webb has been involved in ongoing campus construction projects including a sports medicine facility and expansion of the Mendenhall Student Center and in completing plans for capital improvements requests.

Moore and Bell said that Webb will be especially concerned with architectural design, pattern and conformity as well as aesthetics and utility. He will act as liaison with architects, designers and contractors providing services to the university, they said.

East Carolina University's physical plant which includes approximately 90 buildings is valued at $190 million. The university is preparing capital improvements budget requests for 1989-90 which include projects at an estimated cost of $60.5 million, Moore and Bell said.

In addition to other structures, physical plant planning at ECU includes parking facilities and enhancements at the medical school-Pitt County Memorial Hospital medical complex in west Greenville, they said.

RECYCLING SITE QUESTION

I have at least one point of confusion about separating my trash to take to the Bell's Fork Recycling Site. Does cardboard like cereal boxes and toilet paper rolls go in with the cardboard or in with the mixed paper?

I really encourage everybody to use this recycling service. Once you get the hang of it, it's fun and it's really good training in environmental responsibility for our children. I love flinging jars into the glass bin and hearing and seeing them break. I'm even buying more products in glass jars, rather than plastic, so I can enjoy it and know they're being recycled. I really think this is a worthwhile undertaking of Pitt County and I want everybody to support it. I want to know there are similar sites throughout the county, state and nation. L.T.

Lightweight cardboard like cereal boxes and toilet paper rolls goes in with the corrugated boxes, Phil Dickerson, county engineer, said. It won't be a tragedy, though, if an occasional piece of lightweight cardboard is put with the mixed paper.

He said the recycling site project is going well and he has submitted to the county commissioners plans for converting four more dumpster sites next year. He's had inquiries from throughout the state about the site since it's been written about in a county government publication. It seems to have become a model for many other counties. He thanks you for your enthusiasm and urges others to give using the site a try, including selling their aluminum cans and glass at the site any weekday if they wish. The more it's used, the more landfill space and money the county will save, he said.

PAIN IN NECK OR JAWS

If you've been suffering occasional pain in your neck, head or jaws, make an appointment with your dentist to find out if you have a craniomandibular disorder. These disorders affect about 50 million Americans. Symptoms range from ringing and buzzing in the ears, dizziness, headaches and earaches to neck and shoulder pain. When dentally-related, these disorders usually occur when the lower and upper jaws are out of alignment.

Often the problem begins with the loss of back teeth. This leads to a shifting of the remaining teeth and stress on the chewing muscles. Sometimes this creates painful spasms. One of the treatments involves altering the position and shape of the teeth to bring the chewing muscles into a proper working relationship with the jaw.

The patient is fitted with a temporary, removable plastic bridge until symptoms have disappeared and the teeth are properly aligned. He or she can then be fitted with permanent restorations.

Note:
We welcome new patients, both children and adults.

'Throw-Away Society' Needs To Change Ways, Officials Say

GREENSBORO (AP) — North Carolina buries almost all of the 6 million tons of trash it generates each year, but the reliance on landfills may become as old-fashioned as the uncovered dumps they replaced if state officials meet an ambitious goal laid out last year.

Proclaiming a "new era of waste management," the officials said they want to reduce the amount and toxicity of waste going to landfills by 90 percent in the next two decades.

They plan to encourage and coerce local governments to cut waste volume, begin recycling and build incinerators that could produce energy from the garbage they burn. Landfills then would be needed only for burying ash and other residue.

"We are the biggest throw-away society that's ever been," said William Meyer, director of the Solid and Hazardous Waste Branch of the N.C. Department of Human Resources.

At the rate the state is going, one-third of North Carolina's 119 public landfills will fill up in less than five years and 20 will run out of space in two years, The Greensboro News & Record reported.

"There are some very hard decisions that have to be made," Meyer said. "Most counties will have adequate time to plan, but others will have to hurry. It's a crisis. People are not willing to move that rapidly."

In North Carolina, the pioneer in waste-reduction is Mecklenburg County.

Recycling efforts began in 1977 with several trash bins at a Charlotte high school. Now, there is curb-side pickup in 12 Charlotte neighborhoods and the towns of Davidson, Cornelius and Huntersville for people who put their discarded glass, aluminum and newspapers in to separate containers.

In April, the voluntary program will be extended throughout Charlotte, and there has been talk of mandatory trash separation.

The effort is part of Mecklenburg's 1994 goal of recycling 15 percent of its garbage. Now, only about 2 percent is recycled.

"Even with our most conservative estimates, recycling looks like it's going to be the cheapest option," said Betsy Dorn, Mecklenburg's recycling manager.

Other communities also are taking steps. In Alamance County, where garbage is mounded atop a full landfill, the county commissioners initiated a recycling program to cut the volume of garbage and the cost of piling it at the landfill.

Jim Conner, who left a law practice to begin work as county recycling coordinator in April, is trying to encourage Alamance manufacturers to recycle corrugated cardboard, which makes up 30 percent of the trash going to the dump.

Conner said used corrugated cardboard can be sold to buyers in Burlington, Greensboro and Winston-Salem for $30 to $40 a ton.

Child's Body Found

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A Cumberland County man has been charged in the death of his 8-year-old stepdaughter, whose body was found after a three-hour search through a landfill.

James Bradley, 25, was charged early Saturday night with first-degree murder, Cumberland County Sheriff's Dept. spokesman Harold Little said Sunday.

Before he was jailed, Bradley was taken to a Fayetteville hospital to have his stomach pumped after he swallowed pills of an undetermined substance, authorities told The Fayetteville Times.

Ivy Gipson's body was found about 7:15 p.m. Saturday in a landfill on Ann Street. Workers went through 7½ tons of refuse before finding the girl, who was last seen Thursday when she left home for school.

Little said Bradley "indicated where we might find the body, and we did." He was being held in the Cumberland County Jail without bond.

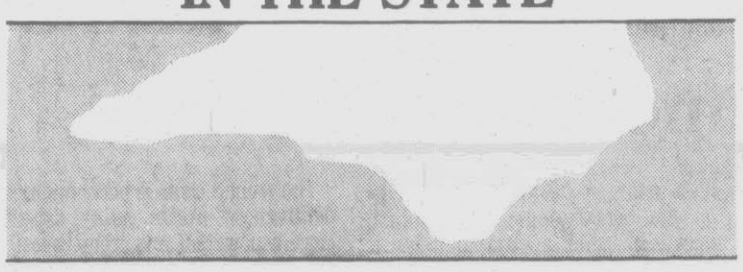
IN THE STATE



Admissions Study

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — An imbalance between the academic quality of in-state and out-of-state students — who face tougher admissions standards — at North Carolina's public universities may become more pronounced, officals say.

In a recent management study at the UNC-Chapel Hill, the study's authors warned that "two students bodies are developing: an elite, mainly from out of state, and a large group of 'common' students from in state."

The study attributed the imbalance to the Chapel Hill school's status as a "public ivy."

Anthony Strickland, associate director of undergraduate admissions at UNC-Chapel Hill, said last week the university received 10,212 out-of-state applications for admission to the freshman class this fall. The university accepted 585 of them.

By contrast, 2,700 in-state students were accepted for the fall class.

Hit-And-Run Fatal

MEDIA, Pa. (AP) — Delaware State Police were searching for the driver of a hit-and-run vehicle that struck and killed two members of a church group from North Carolina as they crossed a highway near a shopping mall here.

The two women, identified as Ruth Wright, 60, of Union Mills, N.C., and Hazel B. Fox, 52, of Tryon, N.C., were struck as they crossed an eastbound lane of U.S. Highway 1 near the Granit Run Mall about 10:30 p.m. Saturday, police said. Both women were pronounced dead at the scene.

The victims were members of a United Methodist church group, and were walking from the mall to their hotel when they were struck, police said.

Highway Deaths

RALEIGH (AP) - Eight people died on North Carolina roads during the weekend, the state Highway Patrol said today.

Jose Einares, 25, of Castalia, was killed at 5:10 p.m. Sunday when the car in which he was a passenger ran off a rural road 11 miles south of Louisburg in Franklin County and overturned several times, throwing him from the vehicle. Three others were injured in the accident, troopers said.

Also Sunday, Tammy Anderson, 28, of Mint Hill died when the car she was riding in ran off a road in her hometown, troopers said.

John Alexander Fahey, 27, of Camp Lejeune died Sunday when his motorcycle crossed the center line six miles west of Jacksonville in Onslow County and struck another vehicle head-on. Fahey was a member of the Marine 2nd Engineer's Battalion.

Katherine Creech, 21, of Whiteville died about 11:20 p.m. Saturday when she tried to pass another car on a rural road in Columbus County and her car ran off the road, troopers said.

Earlier Saturday, Bobby Donnell Whitted, 23, of Whitakers was killed about 3:15 p.m. when the car he was driving struck a tree off a rural road north of Rocky Mount in Edgecombe County.

Just after midnight Saturday, 34-year-old Robert Johnston of Burlington was killed when he lost control of his motorcycle in Alamance County, troopers said.

Two motorists died in Friday night accidents, according to the patrol.

Cashing In On Triangle Growth

The growth of the Triangle area is mind-boggling when compared with the Raleigh of a couple of decades ago.

Today Raleigh has 201,000 population and it is projected to explode to 422,000 by the year 2010. Durham, which has 125,000 population today, could be 250,000 by 2010. Even more impressive is the growth of communities which were villages a few of decades ago. Cary at 37,000 now is projected to 115,000 in 2010. Chapel Hill with 35,000 persons now will have 77,000 in 2010, according to the projections. Carrboro, with 11,000 today, could double by 2010 and Garner, with 14,000 population today, could have 30,000 by 2010.

The implications of such growth are immense for the Triangle area. It will mean more highways, and even more important, innovative ways of moving people about, perhaps including a subway system. The Raleigh-Durham Airport, already booming, could be overrun by that time and an alternative airport could be in the offing.

The Triangle cities of today have 423,580 residents and the projections call for 918,000 in 2010. Barring a radical turnaround, the growth of that area is assured over the next 20 years and that growth will have far-reaching impact on all of North Carolina.

What it will mean for the East to a large extent will depend on how the region capitalizes on it. Many observers believe the population explosion is now extending as far east as Zebulon. That town, in turn has been made the eastern anchor of Triangle East, a proposed growth area which follows the freeways of U.S. 64 and U.S. 264 to Rocky Mount and Wilson. But the growth should extend still further to Pitt County and Greenville, where a mini-boom is currently under way.

Everything is in place for Pitt county to share in the Triangle boom. The prospects are excellent that U.S. 264 will become a fully controlled freeway from west of Wilson to U.S. 13-N.C. 11 at Greenville. The area has the population, medical care, education, adequate water supply and the amenities for constructive growth.

What is needed most now is the leadership to seize the opportunity. The community must be aggressive in seeking the type of development which will complement that which is already here. It must ally itself with the explosive growth of the Triangle area. Pitt County can have the development which will continue to create career opportunities for its labor force. It can develop its economy, perhaps at the same time avoiding some of the problems that the Research Triangle is grappling with. The community will require shrewd and forceful leadership to continue improving economic development into the 21st century.

Perestroika, American Style

WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan's return from a successful summit, coming as Michael Dukakis joins George Bush as his party's sure choice for president, creates a swirl of new and sometimes contradictory currents in the American political debate.

Bush has detached himself from the more sanguine expectations Reagan voiced as the summit ended. But as the serving vice president he has asserted the royal "we" and latched on to the sense of progress and easing conveyed by Reagan's Moscow performance. Bush can and does offer to continue building peace on the Reagan formula of strength and negotiation. The summit hardly answers all questions about his leadership, but it could help offset the considerable tarnishing of his personal foreign-affairs credentials that has come about from the linking of his name to the Iran-Contra and Noriega affairs.

At the same time, Ronald Reagan has made the world seem safer for a Michael Dukakis. As one who is still working on earning the confidence of a full Democratic spectrum on national-security issues, the Massachusetts governor needs all the help he can get in diminishing the drag imposed by his relative inexperience. Reagan fills part of that need by making the world seem a less turbulent and menacing place, a place in which it's not so risky to entrust foreign affairs to someone whose sensibility on these matters has been cultivated in the relative ease of Massachusetts, not in the Washington pressure cooker.

Even before this summit, events appeared to be shrinking traditional high policy — dealing with Moscow on the big strategic and political questions — as a campaign issue. These questions are permanent and pressing and remain central to governing. But the late Reagan years have produced visible if not conclusive movement toward a political consensus on how to approach them.

In 1988 foreign policy is part of the business of a nation that wants to get off the global roller coaster and that has things beyond Soviet-American competition and proxy collision increasingly on its mind. The quest is real and purposeful in producing a focus on key domestic connections.

The first of these is drugs, which has somehow suddenly become an establishment foreign-policy priority.

The second issue is economic competitiveness in its many aspects. Here a powerful and ironic boost to Americans' own perceptions of their needs has come from Moscow. The challenge of America and Ronald Reagan brought Mikhail Gorbachev to power and gave him the argument and some of the method of his reform, and now the example of Russia and its new leader is helping spur the quest for an American-style perestroika. The common bond is the conviction that, after averting nuclear war, domestic restructuring is the critical national requirement and that the task of foreign policy is to ensure the international conditions in which it can best be pursued.

The Good News Is Only Half The Story

RALEIGH — Travel outside of this state and you'll quickly realize that other Americans have a favorable impression of North Carolina. The national publicity about the state's growth and good living conditions has been heard, and it is often cited by others when you tell them where you live.

But those of us who live here now know that the prosperity of the cities is not shared by rural areas, by Hyde and Robeson counties, by the coast and the mountains. North Carolina, economically, is two different states.

In a study released this month by the N.C. Association of Educators, a pair of Chapel Hill analysts, Jordan Sher and Craig Calhoun, focus on the disparities which mark the North Carolina economy. "During the 1980s," they write, "income disparities grew larger between rural and urban residents, as well as between the Piedmont dwellers and the people residing in either the eastern or western thirds of the state."

Despite incredible state economic development over the past two decades, the disparities are actually worsening. "The rising tide of North Carolina's wealth is not lifting all our boats equally. In fact, millions of North Carolinians appear to have been left at the dock," Sher writes.

North Carolina is seeing two trends. First, the cities are growing rapidly with the introduction of industries that require well-educated workforces. These areas provide ample career opportunities for native North Carolinians who have educated themselves, but they also draw other educated Americans to relocate here to fill the demand for professional employees. The wealth created by these jobs is moving North Carolina up in the national standings and giving the state its national reputation as a prosperous place.

The second trend is stagnation in many rural areas. (The state's poverty rate in many rural areas is twice as high as in urban areas.) North Carolina has lost 75,000 textile jobs in the last 15 years and the farm economy is hurting. Many of the jobs available in rural areas do not pay well, nowhere near the levels paid to workers in the cities. For example, Sher notes that the state is first in the percentage of workforce engaged in the usually high paying manufacturing sector, but second to last in average manufacturing wage.

A big part of the rural problem, then, is the problem of the working poor. Remember, North Carolina has one of the lowest unemployment rates in the country. Poor tarheels aren't goofing off someplace, most are working. They're just not getting paid much for their work. "North Carolina's hallmark is as a state with a huge number of people who remain in poverty despite having at least one family member who is employed."

This is an especially troubling development. America has always prided itself on the notion that one pulls himself up by the sweat of his brow, yet the authors find that "there is very little upward mobility taking place among people born into low-income families."

Low-income North Carolinians are not earning their way out of poverty, and their children are not learning their way out, either, the two say. Their children "tend to be relatively unsuccessful in our schools."

These trends are creating a "permanent underclass" in the state, Sher worries. That is, a class of people who have no hope of moving up.

So while we can celebrate the rise of North Carolina as we write this coloumn from the prosperous comfort of the Triangle, it is essential to remember that the state's good national press clippings are missing half of the story.

Are The Times Changing?

'What direction the nation takes next, as the Reagan years draw to a close, of course lies at the heart of the presidential-election debate between George Bush and Michael Dukakis.'

WASHINGTON — Among the biblical passages read by Robert F. Kennedy's children at Arlington Cemetery services commemorating the 20th anniversary of his death were two from Isaiah and James. Their themes dealt with comforting the poor and afflicted and warning against combining religious faith with "distinctions between classes of people."

Everyone present understood that selection of these and other passages represented more than religious symbolism. They carried a clear political connotation, stated explicitly during the services near his gravesite. It is time, they said, for the nation to turn away from selfishness and embark on a new era of social activism and concern, time to get involved.

From Isaiah:

The Lord has ... chosen me and sent me
To bring good news to the poor,
To heal the broken hearted,
To announce release to captives
And freedom to those in prison.

From James:

... Now suppose a man comes into your meeting, beautifully dressed and with a gold ring on, and at the same time a poor man comes in, in shabby clothes, and you take notice of the well-dressed man, and say,
"Come this way to the best seats"; then you tell the poor man, "Stand over there" or "You can sit on the floor by my foot rest." Can't you see that you have used two different standards in your mind and turned yourselves into judges, and corrupt judges at that?

What direction the nation takes next, as the Reagan years draw to a close, of course lies at the heart of the presidential-election debate between George Bush and Michael Dukakis. The two candidates engaged in an initial skirmish this week in California when they semantically danced around the question of which was more liberal and which more conservative.

Naturally, the result was inconclusive. It could hardly have been otherwise since neither they nor the country can agree on a definition of liberalism or conservatism. The terms have been debased beyond meaning, especially in the Reagan era.

Will history judge Ronald Reagan's slack reign, with its casual approach to ethics and accumulating debt, as a conservative period or a wildly permissive one, a time for building national resources or destroying them, for preserving or raiding? Was "supply-side" economics — forget that its philosophical premise was disastrously wrong — a conservative approach or a radical one?

And what about those who call themselves liberal? Jesse L. Jackson, for instance. Is it liberal for him to say that he is "entitled" to the vice presidency, that his campaign has "earned" him that and the right to impose on the majority his controversial, if not wrongheaded, positions on issues?

Similarly, in the fascinating and disturbing Tawana Brawley case, are her defenders being liberal when they argue it no longer matters whether the black teen-ager's claim of having being raped by white men turns out to be a hoax? The truth, these self-styled New York "liberal" advocates say, is not what counts. Rather, it's the larger "political issue" and the "civil rights" cause that matter. What issue? What cause?

The greater question facing the country has nothing to do with what ideologues of left or right think. It is whether Americans in general are motivated to heed the kinds of call sounded at the Kennedy service.

An article in the current Harper's Bazaar magazine says that's already happening:

"There is a movement afoot peopled by postgraduates entering the work force who are committed to a new brand of social activism. For the most part, it takes place behind the scenes, away from the headlines, in social-work schools and related fields, in teaching careers and even in a renewed enthusiasm for the Peace Corps. The infectious camaraderie of the earlier marches for civil rights and against the Vietnam War can now be felt when talking to the trend-setters who have left behind the 'Me' decade of the '70s and the materialism of the early '80s."

Despite statistics about rising enrollment in schools of social work nationwide, the evidence is unpersuasive. Nevertheless, a welcome shift in public attitudes apparently is under way. It's time to move away from the self-indulgent Yuppieism of the '80s.

Strength For Today

Magic can be defined as the attempt to gain control over spiritual forces and manipulate them into doing one's will. Christians abhor magic and believe God can never be manipulated. There is, however, a kind of religious piety which, while its adherents would vehemently deny, is magical nevertheless. Does God heal because someone with special powers lays hands on another, or because in the mystery of his will he simply chooses to do so? Does he intervene in our affairs because someone prays that he do so, or because in the act of prayer we open our heart, invite him in and become channels of his healing energy? When Jesus said, "Go, your faith has made you well," was he referring to the man's belief that Jesus could perform a trick, or the man's faithful, personal and deep response to Jesus? Is God's healing power dependent upon, and hostage to, our measure of faith, or is he not the sovereign of the universe, healing in unknown ways and for unknown reasons.

A Difficult And Testy Time For A Softball Vice President

Analysis

Ted Koppel's hour-long interview with George Bush Thursday night confirmed that the vice president should avoid such interviews in this election campaign. Such interviews focus on Bush's character, while Bush wants to focus on party and policy differences with Democrats. Unfortunately for Bush, interviews are hard for a presidential candidate to avoid.

For almost a decade now, interviews have become definitive rhetorical events in our nation's presidential campaigns. If you ask the average person what was the last speech he or she remembers in a presidential campaign, it might well be one by Ronald Reagan — his nationally broadcast speech supporting Barry Goldwater in 1964. But if you ask that same person to name a memorable interview in a presidential campaign, most would have no trouble recalling at least two in the last ten years: Roger Mudd's interview in 1979 with candidate Edward Kennedy and Dan Rather's interview in January with George Bush.

Interviews have become increasingly important because of our generation's Type-A impatience with speeches. There simply is no audience for Lincoln-Douglas-type encounters, which were not debates, but rather uninterrupted hour-and-a-half speeches. But also, audiences watch interviews for important information of two types: what the candidate's views on issues are and, more important, inferences as to the character of the candidate as revealed by the style and behavior of the candidate during the interview. Thus, Edward Kennedy's hemming and hawing and general discomfort throughout the Mudd interview, which focused on the senator's behavior at Chappaquiddick, communicated untrustworthiness even to those who could not follow the evidentiary questions concerning the events.

Thursday night's interview on ABC's "Nightline" had the potential to be almost as devastating to the image of George Bush.

The pairing of Bush and Koppel for an interview was a mismatch made in Massachusetts heaven.

Political life is filled with politicians who are good on the stump and terrible in interviews, especially interviews that include cross-examination: Ted Kennedy, Ronald Reagan, and now, indelibly, George Bush. Bush thought that the Rather interview was a debacle due to Rather's unfair aggressiveness, but in reality that only exacerbated the central problem: Bush genuinely dislikes being cross-examined on anything. He would be comfortable only with a Bud Wilkinson, who helped stage softball interviews with candidate Richard Nixon in his 1968 campaign.

Koppel is arguably the preeminent interviewer on national television. His forte is pinning down his subject, insisting on answers that are responsive to the questions and insisting on his subjects' reconciling their inconsistencies.

The combination of Koppel's interviewing talent, Bush's difficulty with interviews generally and the trauma to Bush of the Rather interview set the stage for a palpably embarrassing hour. And it was.

Bush repeatedly called Koppel "Dan," and ended his interview by apologizing profusely for doing so. He seriously reassured Koppel that he wasn't trying to be "smart." Nonetheless, Bush found himself getting irritated at Koppel, and seemed to be genuinely incredulous that a near-repeat of his reaction to Rather was recurring, despite his explicit acknowledgement at the beginning of the interview that unlike Rather, Koppel's reputation was that of a fair interviewer.

But a difficult and testy time for Bush should have been expected — and it was. Koppel opened by warning that journalists by profession go after "perceived weakness." What he didn't say was that Bush's "perceived weakness" is not policy, but how truthfully he represents his own actions. Thus, the focus of the interview, coupled with Bush's consistent evasiveness, guaranteed tension: the interview was practically a full hour of Koppel trying to pin Bush down on his accounts of what he knew and when he knew it throughout the Reagan administration.

Over and over Bush shifted ground, and just as often Koppel called him on it and insisted on answers responsive to questions, until further insistence would have seemed fruitless. Koppel asked Bush to reconcile his claim that he didn't know that arms were being offered for hostages with his claim that he may have erred in so dealing "out of concern for (hostage William) Buckley." At the end of the segment, fully fifteen minutes later, Koppel repeated the question with still no answer forthcoming. But when Bush continued to evade it, Koppel at last gave up, saying that Bush's answer was "inconsistent with the question."

Asked by Koppel how, in view of his CIA background and connections, he could not have known about Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega's drug dealings, Bush first claimed that sufficient evidence was unavailable. But then he pointed out — twice — the necessity of governments' dealing sometimes with "unsavory" elements, while simultaneously arguing that drug-dealing elements are too unsavory to warrant continued dealings. Precisely why Bush raised the defense of "unsavoriness" if it was irrelevant to the drug-dealing context was not pursued by Koppel.

Koppel then asked Bush how his aides could be telling journalists without Bush's approval that Attorney General Ed Meese should resign. First Bush indicated, implausibly, that he had no knowledge that his aides were saying such things to journalists, but then appeared to confuse the matter intentionally. While he insisted that he never ordered his aides to make such statements, he allowed that he would not stop them from doing so.

Through all of Bush's tortuous — and for Bush, clearly torturous — explanations, Koppel seemed skeptical. Few in the public could follow all of the twists and turns in the complicated details of Bush's explanations. What was clear to viewers was that Bush had not been — and was not now — clearly forthcoming in answering questions about his participation in unpopular administration policies: Iran-Contra, Noriega and the Meese situation.

The issue of Bush's role in these three matters consumed more than fifty minutes of the one-hour interview. Koppel tried in the last five minutes to question Bush on a few other issues such as the ERA and economic policy.

It is possible that Koppel's lack of breadth in topics reflects more than just how time-consuming it is to pin down an evasive candidate on matters of fact. It may also indicate, as some have already noted, that this is a campaign year lacking major issues that are important to the public. If so, the focus will continue to be on the issue of character and a crucial source of information on that key issue may well be interviews with journalists. That does not augur well for George Bush.

Fighting Drugs Takes Money, Men, Persistence

Drug abuse has reached epidemic proportions in our country, and there is the understandable desire for a quick fix. Yet we should remember that our problem with illegal drugs did not occur overnight. It has evolved over the past 20 years. Not more than a decade ago, medical experts were suggesting that cocaine was physically non-addictive and relatively harmless. They were dead wrong, as the death of basketball star Len Bias and others demonstrated. It has only been in the past few years that we have obtained legislation, at least on the federal level, to enforce drug trafficking laws seriously and that the film industry has stopped portraying drug use in a positive light. Despite election-year rhetoric, there are no instant solutions.

The strategy for success in the war against drugs is clear. It requires a continuing and upgraded law enforcement effort against drug traffickers and their organizations, and a curbing of the demand for drugs through education, treatment and attaching of legal consequences to the illegal use of drugs. This two-tiered strategy will work, but it requires an unwavering commitment, not just from law enforcement, but from all segments of society — public officials, the courts, businessmen, entertainment industry executives, labor leaders, teachers, students and parents. Realistically, it is going to take at least five years, and probably longer, to return to a relatively drug-free society.

The point is: It can be done.

None of this is to suggest that the road will be easy. Indeed, Los Angeles has become the principal distribution center for the nation's cocaine supply. Due to the effectiveness of interdiction efforts in South Florida, the Colombian cocaine cartel has linked up with Mexican drug trafficking organizations to smuggle huge quantities of cocaine across the Southwest border and transport it to Los Angeles where it is warehoused and distributed throughout the United States. Last year, local and federal law enforcement agencies in Los Angeles and Orange Counties seized over 30,000 pounds of cocaine — up from 4,000 pounds in 1985. Colombian cocaine organizations have earmarked much of the cocaine flowing into the Los Angeles area for distribution to cities on the West Coast, Midwest, and even as far east as New York.

The first level of distribution is performed by Colombians operating in and out of Southern California, who supervise and control 50-pound to 100-pound shipments to other areas of the country. Separate organizations of Colombians are engaged in laundering the money, principally into Panamanian banks controlled by the Medellin cartel. Operation Pisces, an undercover Drug Enforcement Administration money laundering operation that concluded this year with the convictions of 115 people, revealed that the Colombians were laundering $17 million in cash weekly (close to $1 billion annually) out of Los Angeles.

Equally alarming, in the past five years we have witnessed the growing involvement of Los Angeles street gangs in the processing and trafficking of rock cocaine, or "crack." Street gang alumni use sub-gangs, or "sets," of the Crips and Bloods, to make street sales and exert muscle. More ominously, these emerging Mafias have set up rock cocaine distribution outlets in many other cities across the country, including Seattle, Portland, Ore., Phoenix, Ariz., Kansas City, Oklahoma City and Minneapolis.

All this relates to the supply side of the equation. The fact is federal law enforcement, frequently with the assistance of local police and sheriffs, is becoming increasingly effective in identifying, investigating and prosecuting high-level drug organizations, including the Colombian organizations operating here. Many of these cases have been developed and prosecuted under the auspices of the multi-agency Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force, coordinated through my office. In addition, the tough sentences provided for by the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1986 are already producing some results — though the act has only been in effect for 18 months.

Under the act, those participating in the distribution of over 5 kilograms (10.4 pounds) of cocaine must be sentenced to at least 10 years imprisonment. No probation or parole is permitted. The maximum sentence is life. As word of these sentences filters back to Colombia, it will become increasingly difficult for the cartel to recruit Colombians to staff their U.S. distribution organizations. Just as important, because of the severity of these sentences, more defendants cooperate with the government so that cases can be made against the drug kingpins.

With these tough laws, and with the more effective use of federal forfeiture statutes, we are now dismantling entire drug organizations and confiscating their assets.

Even the heads of the Colombian cartel are no longer safe from prosecution. Two of the top five drug lords are being brought to justice in the United States: Carlos Lehder was recently convicted in Florida and faces 130 years imprisonment, and Matta Ballasteros is in U.S. custody and will be tried on drug charges in federal court in Los Angeles later this year.

Much of the enforcement effort against suppliers is being financed by the drug traffickers themselves — through confiscation of their profits. This year alone, my office has obtained, through judicial proceedings, over $50 million worth of drug-related money and assets. This is five times greater than the entire budget of my office. Moreover, through the federal equitable sharing program, we have given over $30 million to local law enforcement agencies in Los Angeles and Orange Counties for use in fighting the war on drugs.

While federal law enforcement has traditionally aimed at high-level interstate and international drug organizations, the Los Angeles street gang drug-trafficking phenomenon requires a commitment of federal resources to assist local law enforcement agencies. A twofold strategy is needed: first, increased use of federal prosecution, which provides for pretrial detention and mandatory minimum sentences, as opposed to state laws which do not, and second, the use of federal conspiracy, RICO (Racketeer-Influenced Corrupt Organizations Act), Career Criminal Enterprise and forfeiture statutes to decimate, one by one, these gangs and specifically their leadership. To have a significant impact on gang trafficking, an immediate increase in the number of federal drug agents and prosecutors assigned to Los Angeles is vital. Neither the DEA, nor my office has sufficient manpower to meaningfully assist local law enforcement.

In addition to legislation and continuing a strong enforcement effort on the supply side, we need to continue to expand efforts to reduce demand for illegal drugs. Such efforts are already having an impact. Public attitudes toward drug use is changing, and use of illegal drugs by high school students is declining. A national survey of high school seniors last year reported a dramatic reduction of those using cocaine, regular users dropping by one-third.

Your Social Security Disability Benefits

BENEFITS DENIED?

Have you been denied benefits under Social Security's disability benefits programs? Do not be discouraged. That happens to most people who apply the first time.

Have you asked for reconsideration of your disability claim and been turned down a second time? Again, don't be discouraged or give up. That's the way the disability system works today.

Appeal your case further to the Office of Hearings and Appeals for a hearing before an Administrative Law Judge and a review by a Member of the Appeals Council. The Judge will see you and hear your personal description of your physical or mental illness, and we will present your case as it applies to the complex rules of the Social Security Act.

Our win rate average is over 80%.

If you have been denied benefits, call now for an immediate conference. There is no fee for an initial conference to discuss your eligibility for disability.

Convention Sparring Facing Southern Baptists

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Southern Baptists mixed preaching and politicking as fundamentalists and moderates today approached a convention fight over control of the denomination's multimillion-dollar organizational empire.

A fundamentalist wing gradually has gained predominance among trustees of Southern Baptist Convention institutions through nine years of winning the influential presidency of the country's largest Protestant body.

But moderates think they can regain the office at the convention, which opens Tuesday. They cite numerous victories on the state level and various fundamentalist moves that have antagonized the grassroots.

Expected to be nominated for the presidency were the fundamentalist-backed Rev. Jerry Vines of Jacksonville, Fla., and the moderate-backed Rev. Richard Jackson of Phoenix, Ariz.

The president has appointive authority over trustees who run the 14.7-million-member denomination.

Harsh words have been traded in the spiraling campaign recently, with fundamentalists demanding literalistic beliefs about the Bible among denominational teachers and agency staffers.

Moderates defend a long-time Baptist concept of the "soul competency" of individuals to interpret the Bible as they understand it.

A respected patriarch of the denomination, the Rev. Herschel H. Hobbs, 80, of Oklahoma City, says the bitter struggle is hurting the Christian cause.

"In this controversy, we are our own worst enemies," Hobbs, the former convention president, said in a statement.

"What all outside forces of evil could not do, we are doing to ourselves. As Paul said in Galatians 5:15, we are like wild animals devouring one another. We deny the very oneness and peace for which Jesus prayed."

As a prelude to the convention, the thousands of "messengers" were offered a day of preaching, some of it from leading exponents of the two factions.

So divided was sentiment that there were separate preaching arenas — a Pastor's Conference of mainly fundamentalist speakers and the Forum for moderates.

The Forum announced its 1988 Denominational Statesman Award to the Rev. Randall Lolley, driven by demands of newly ruling fundamenalist trustees to resign as president of Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary.

"Trustees are no longer free to debate and decide issues," he said. "They have people breathing down their necks to accomplish the prearranged agendas."

He, along with four academic colleagues at the Wake Forest, N.C., seminary quit after trustees enacted measures requiring that faculty members profess that the Bible is free of error.

"The price which he has paid for his convictions is a witness to his faith, an act of judgment upon all those who surrender to the temptation to compromise their convictions," said the award citation.

Among preachers scheduled at the Pastors Conference were fundamentalist former presidents, the Revs. Charles Stanley and Bailey Smith, both of Atlanta, and Paige Patterson of Dallas, a key strategist for that wing.

Patterson denounces recent tactics of moderates accusing him of right-wing political ties, calling it "hurtful misrepresentation, apparently born out of a willingness to do almost anything to reverse the conservative resurgence."

Of moderate charges that he was involved in a rightist political group, the Council for National Policy, he says conservative Christians now simply are doing politically what liberals have done for a long time.

"It is no longer the left involved in isolation, but now the conservatives are involved," he said. "What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander."

The Rev. W. Winfred Moore of Amarillo, who sent out the brochure criticizing Patterson and others in the fundamentalist wing, said:

"There are some of our brethren who want to make all of us believe the same way they do. ... Our diversity has always been our greatest strength. Now they are telling us we cannot be different any more."

Rocket Fuel Maker OKs Safety Measures

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Kerr-McGee Corp. has agreed to new safety measures that will allow it to resume rocket fuel production, five weeks after explosions leveled a similar plant a mile away, authorities said.

Officials at the Kerr-McGee plant in nearby Henderson agreed to abide by a list of safety demands from the Clark County Fire Department, Fire Chief Roy Parrish said at a news conference Saturday. The company planned to start production today.

The agreement was announced by Parrish and Bill Curran, chief of the civil division of the county's district attorney's office.

However, public safety officials continued to disagree with Kerr-McGee executives over the safest way to store ammonium perchlorate, a highly explosive fuel oxidizer used in the space shuttle and military rockets.

Kerr-McGee officials didn't attend the news conference and telephone calls to the plant over the weekend were not answered.

Kerr-McGee agreed to temporarily halt its production of ammonium perchlorate after a series of thunderous explosions May 4 killed two people, injured 326 and caused an estimated $73 million in damage at the Pacific Engineering and Production Co. in Henderson.

Alarmed county officials had considered pursuing legal action to prohibit Kerr-McGee from resuming production, but an attorney said the county had no legal basis for such a move, county spokeswoman Lisa Godwin said.

"The county didn't want to shut Kerr-McGee down, but we wanted to ensure in one way or another that there is no potential danger for the people in the area," Ms. Godwin said.

Kerr-McGee agreed, among other things, to ship the chemical in containers less susceptible to heat and shock, and reduce by 50 percent its supply of unfinished ammonium perchlorate.

But the company declined to agree on an across-the-board limit on ammonium perchlorate storage and also refused department requests to increase the distance between stacks of the chemical ready for shipment.

Kerr-McGee will allow a six-member team of experts to visit the plant Thursday and both Kerr-McGee and the department have informally agreed to abide by whatever the experts decide, Ms. Godwin said.

"There is still a conflict," Parrish said. "There will be a meeting of the minds, and I expect a lengthy meeting. We will ask pointed questions and we expect them to give pointed answers."

The Kerr-McGee plant is now the only plant in the country still capable of making ammonium perchlorate. Henderson is about 10 miles southeast of Las Vegas.

The cause of the Pacific blast is still under investigation. Pacific Engineering officials have said the blast may have been caused by a leaking natural gas line.

Scientists Eye 'Greenhouse Effect' On Flooding, Crops

By DAVE GOELLER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of scientists is offering a sobering weather forecast for the year 2020: the planet's average temperature hitting a 10,000-year high, and the world's oceans surging an average of 83 feet inland.

"Things are going to change too fast," scientist Michael Oppenheimer said as the World Meteorological Organization, a United Nations Agency, released a report on the climate change that could be triggered by the "greenhouse effect."

The report painted a picture of a global civilization heating its atmosphere in a myriad of ways, from burning fossil fuel to destroying tropical forests.

Those actions could force the average temperature up by 2 degrees Fahrenheit in the next three decades, the report says. That might not sound like much, but the scientists say it would be enough to wreak havoc.

Such a temperature increase, for example, would cause the sea level to rise by 10 inches, bringing seawater an average of 83 feet inland, according to Oppenheimer.

"The potential for economic, political and social destruction is extraordinary," said biologist George Woodwell.

To illustrate the warming trend, he noted that four of the hottest years in the last century have been recorded in the 1980s.

The organization held four news conferences around the world, including one in Washington, to talk about the report.

Oppenheimer said even if mankind abruptly stopped adding excessive gases to the atmosphere, the delayed impact of already released gases would eventually raise the average temperature 1 to 2 degrees.

The scientists' estimates are tied to an assumption that the Earth's population, industrialization and emissions will continue to grow along the upward curve that has been followed for the last 130 years.

The report also gives a scenario tied to an assumption that worldwide growth and development could load the atmosphere with vastly increasing amounts of greenhouse gases like carbon dioxide, methane and chlorofluorocarbons.

In this case, the figures get two to three times worse: instead of a 10-inch increase in the sea level, the report estimates a 2-foot increase. Instead of a 2-degree increase in the average temperature, a 6-degree surge is called for. Oppenheimer says that temperature level last occurred 2 million years ago.

Whatever the increases, the report paints a dismal picture for coastal areas: erosion of beaches, loss of wetlands, more frequent and more severe flooding, damage to port facilities.

In its only cost estimate, the report said global expenditures of tens of billions of dollars will be needed over the next 50 years for dikes, walls and drainage systems to counter rising seas caused by already released gases.

It forecasts destruction of forests and agricultural lands for the mid-latitudes, the heavily populated band that encompasses the United States, China, Europe and the southern half of the Soviet Union.

Forest loss is a critical element, because this releases still more carbon into the atmosphere. The report says the mid-latitude nations probably will be able to maintain food production but in different growing areas.

Semi-arid tropical regions like northern Africa, Central America and India would lose already marginal agricultural areas and face scarcities of fresh water and wood for fuel. Humid tropics would be wetter and warmer.

In the high-latitudes like the northern Soviet Union, Scandinavia, Canada, the Arctic and the Antarctic, the scientists see melting ice packs and glaciers, more clouds and precipitation, the slow disappearance of permafrost and the possibility of large carbon releases from the soil.

The report says that limiting the amount of global warming "could be accomplished only with significant reductions" in the use of fossil fuels like coal and petroleum.

"If reasonable economic growth rates are to be maintained, these reductions can be achieved only with two major changes: large (energy) efficiency increases of the order of one-half in industrial nations and rapid deployment of alternative energy sources," it said.

The report also calls for reduced deforestation and increased forestation and implementation of last year's agreement among industrialized nations to decrease the production and use of chlorofluorocarbons.

It cited the need for an international agreement "on a law of the atmosphere" to limit emissions of greenhouse gases, possibly setting long-term environmental targets to control the rate of temperature and sea level increases.

Weapons Seized

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A Japanese teen-ager was arrested after he tried to sneak explosives, a dismantled rifle, a pellet gun and dummy hand grenades aboard an airplane, authorities said.

Sunday morning's discovery of the weapons in the youth's luggage led authorities to close and evacuate one of five terminals at Philadelphia International Airport for several hours.

Yoshino Kosugi, 18, of Yokohama, Japan, was charged with attempting to board an aircraft with firearms, explosives or incendiary devices, said FBI agent John Kundts.

Kosugi, a student at Drexel University, was scheduled to appear before a federal magistrate today, Kundts said. Upon conviction, the maximum sentence for the charge is five years in prison and a $25,000 fine.

Subdivision Residents Wonder Who Owns What

By DEAN GOLEMBESKI
Associated Press Writer

NEWINGTON, Conn. (AP) — Residents of a subdivision have mowed each other's lawns for years but they never knew it until a surveyor's error was recently discovered and showed that all 104 lots were improperly plotted.

Due to the surveyor's miscalculation more than a decade ago when the Little Brook subdivision was laid out, none of the lots in the subdivision of the Hartford suburb was correctly mapped out, officials said.

For example, while one homeowner may have built a fence on what appears to be his lot, it technically sits on his neighbor's property. Early indications are that some the boundaries are off as much as 3 feet, said Town Manager Frank B. Connolly.

The error was discovered during the construction of an adjacent condominium project.

"The acreage is right, it's just not where you think it is," Connolly said last week.

All the houses, which range in value from $200,000 to $300,000, and built-in swimming pools appear to be on their proper lots. But shrubs, fences and sidewalks aren't.

Town officials have intervened because of the number of homeowners involved and because the town's right-of-way, which includes the sidewalks, may have to be moved.

As a first step, the town appropriated $17,500 to resurvey the subdivision, and the results are expected in August.

"We're preparing a map showing all the trees and all the fences," Connolly said.

Once they have the map in hand, officials will try to sort out the problem. Officials say they might just leave everything as it is and file new deeds, or they might make everything conform to existing deeds.

Connolly said that because of legal obligations, such as mortgage agreements, things can't be left alone. Both solutions undoubtedly will prove difficult and involve banks, title insurance companies, attorneys and lots of paperwork.

"We don't know which is more practical, which is more economical. It can get ticklish if you move boundaries," Connolly said. "You're talking about a community effort."

So far, Little Brook residents have cooperated and have reacted calmly to the situtation.

"Obviously, people are nervous about it. I call it a sleeping-dog issue," said P. Joseph Harpie Jr., a Little Brook resident and town councilman. "No one wants to be the first to draw their gun. I'm hopeful that once the town determines its right-of-way, the neighbors will work something out."

One resident, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said some neighbors are willing to rewrite deeds, if necessary, to conform to what exists. But, two are fighting over the location of a fence that may have to come down.

Vinny Hayes, another subdivision resident, laughed about the situation.

"It's unfortunate," he said, "the city is going to spend a lot of money resurveying."

Hayes became serious only when talking about the possible expense of refiling his deed.

The surveyor, Walter E. Peters of W.E. Peters Land Surveyors, is dead. A developer of the subdivision said his company has no stake in the matter.

"The ironic part is that if there wasn't additional development going on (in Newington) it would never have been picked up," Connolly said.

Normal Flight, Scary Landing

SEATTLE (AP) — An Alaska Airlines jetliner skid off a runway after landing at Seattle-Tacoma International Airport, and four of the 82 people aboard sustained minor injuries, officials said.

The accident occurred late Sunday as Flight 187 from Tucson, Ariz., landed, and resulted in a 15-minute closure of the airport, authorities said.

The extent of damage to the Boeing 727 was not determined, although there was no fire and no damage to the fuselage was visible.

The passengers used emergency chutes to evacuate, said Port of Seattle Police spokeswoman Margo Spellman.

Afterward, two people complained of back pain and were taken away by ambulance, Ms. Spellman said. One person received a bruised knee and one a sprained ankle, she said.

The airplane veered off a runway and came to a rest on a grassy strip dividing Sea-Tac's two parallel runways, said police spokesman John Eliadis.

National Transportation Safety Board investigators were checking to determine if the plane blew a tire upon landing or had struck debris on the runway, officials said.

"It was a fairly normal flight until we landed," said Marlene Davies, 52, of Kent, one of 75 passengers.

"I saw the white line and we kept going over it. And then I saw smoke or dust or something," she said. "I couldn't tell if it was smoke or dust, but I wasn't waiting around to see.

"It was very scary."

FIRST MISS MOSCOW — Maria Kalinina, 16, displays her winning smile Sunday which helped her win the first ever Moscow Beauty Pageant after a three-day contest in Moscow. (AP Laserphoto)

First Beauty Queen Chosen In Moscow

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Royalty returned to Russia on Sunday as a 16-year-old student became the first Moscow beauty queen in a pageant that celebrated Soviet reforms. The prizes included a crown, two trips abroad and a suitcase full of cosmetics.

Maria Kalinina's warm smile and svelte figure won over the panel of 12 judges, who chose her from six finalists in a contest that emphasized bathing suit competition.

The "Moscow Beauty '88" contest, made possible by the more tolerant policies of Kremlin leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, was the first of its kind in the Soviet capital, although similar pageants have been staged in several other Soviet cities.

In a question-and-answer competition, practically the only event in which the finalists wore more than a tiny scrap of clothing, Ms. Kalinina was asked what made the Moscow contest different from beauty pageants in the West.

"Ours is different because we have 'perestroika,'" Ms. Kalinina replied, using the Russian word for Gorbachev's policy of economic and social reforms.

The third and final night of what was a gala event by normally austere Soviet went smoothly until the glittering crown was placed on Ms. Kalinina's head.

At that moment, long-stemmed red roses began to rain from the ceiling, knocking off the crown and causing the beauty queen to duck and dodge, although she never lost her smile. The next shower of roses was aimed a little in front of the beauty queen, and did not disrupt the ceremonies.

The crowd of about 11,000 in the Palace of Sport sighed in amazement as the master of ceremonies read out the list of prizes for Ms. Kalinina: a cruise on the Adriatic Sea, a trip to Austria, armfuls of roses, a television and mounds of cosmetics from the Western and Soviet sponsors of the event.

The other finalists, and some of the other contestants, received cosmetics and trips inside the Soviet Union for categories such as the "most photogenic" and "most athletic."

Trips abroad are rare for Soviet citizens, and Western cosmetics of the types distributed to the finalists are highly prized in this country.

Some of the loudest applause of the evening went to writer Mikhail Zadurnov, who performed comedy routines satirizing consumer shortages and the bureaucrats that are blocking Soviet reforms.

In a parting line that brought gasps of surprise from the crowd, then thunderous laughter and applause, Zadurnov said: "And we Muscovites would like to thank Ronald Reagan," alluding to the facelift Moscow received for the recent superpower summit.

At the end of an evening dominated by rock music by Soviet bands, the applause, glory, and heaps prizes belonged to Ms. Kalinina, the youngest contestant in a field of 36 that included an accountant, two librarians and two actresses. The oldest was Yelena Baranova, 26, a doctor who did not reach the final round Sunday night.

Vietnamese Brass Retiring

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam is retiring more than 70 army generals and about 3,600 colonels this month as part of its policy of reducing one of the world's largest armies, a Vietnamese newspaper editor said today.

Bui Tin, a deputy editor in chief of the official Communist Party newspaper Nhan Dan (The People), said younger officers will fill some vacated posts but other posts will be eliminated. Many of the officers have stayed on despite having passed retirement age, he said.

Some of the retiring officers, including the commander in chief of Vietnamese forces in Cambodia, will return home when Vietnam begins withdrawing troops from that country later this month, Tin told reporters in Bangkok. He declined to name the commander.

Vietnam has said it will withdraw 50,000 troops from Cambodia this year as part of its plan for a total withdrawal by 1990. It says the entire military command will be transferred to the pro-Vietnamese Cambodian government.

Vietnam invaded Cambodia in late 1978. By U.S. estimate, it maintains 120,000 troops there to combat guerrillas.

Condemned Blacks Face Gallows

By DAVID CRARY
Associated Press Writer

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — A judge today rejected a bid to reopen the trial of the Sharpeville Six, and the blacks convicted for a mob murder once again face hanging unless President P.W. Botha intervenes.

But the president has already turned down an appeal for clemency. In doing so, he spurned an international campaign to spare the six, who were found guilty in the mob killing of a black town councilor.

Pretoria Supreme Court Justice Willem Human, who presided over the original trial in 1985, turned down an application by defense lawyers to reopen the case to review allegations that police coerced two state witnesses.

The defendants — five men and a woman — were convicted of complicity in the 1984 death of Khuzwayo Dlamini, who was stoned to death and burned during riots provoked by a rent increase.

Human said despite allegations of coercion involving the witnesses, there was ample uncontested evidence to implicate all six defendants. He described the defense request as "frivolous and absurd."

He said the only remaining hope for saving the six lay in petitioning Botha again. Relatives and diplomats crowded the courtroom during the reading of the decision, but there was little reaction.

Defense attorney Prakesh Diar said he would try to win an extension of the stay of execution and attempt to petition the chief justice to reopen the trial. But he said the fate of the six was really in Botha's hands.

"I hope and I pray that the state president will reconsider his previous decision. This is a politically related case. (Botha's decision) may be based on political considerations."

Diar said he spoke to his clients last week and described them as "hopeful, but not confident."

Referring to the international campaign to save them, he said, "Although they are in their cells alone, they are not alone spiritually. They know the world is with them."

Prosecutors argued during a hearing last week that Human had no jurisdiction to reopen the case because an appeal has been rejected by the country's highest court, the Appeals Court.

Defense lawyers had said Human could reopen the case if he determined the trial court was defrauded by false evidence obtained through coercion. But Human said today that further questioning of a state witness who recanted part of his incriminating testimony would be "an exercise in futility."

The six were granted a stay of execution March 17, one day before they were to hang.

Their case has generated controversy in part because they were not convicted of contributing physically to Dlamini's death. They were convicted under the doctrine of common purpose, which held them responsible because they actively participated in the mob which killed the councilor.

The government has contended that the six have been unfairly portrayed abroad as innocent victims of an unjust law. Authorities say evidence at the trial showed that each played an active part in the killing, through such actions as making firebombs to burn Dlamini's house and slapping a woman who pleaded for the councilor's life.

The defendants are Mojalefa Sefatsa, Reid Mokoena, Oupa Diniso, Duma Khumalo, Francis Mokhesi and Theresa Ramashamola, the only woman on Death Row for what activists say is a politically related crime.

Through the policy of apartheid, the white minority government has established a racially segregated society and denies the country's 26 million blacks a vote in national affairs.

The 5 million whites control the economy and maintain separate districts, schools and health services. Black officials in the government's employ are thus often resented by other blacks.

The government has conducted an intensive publicity campaign aimed at countering criticism of the Sharpeville Six death sentences. Last month, the Bureau for Information issued a lengthy statement about Dlamini's family, saying the councilor's widow died this year following her release from a mental hospital.

22 Are Feared Dead As Jetliner Crashes

POSADAS, Argentina (AP) — Investigators will study flight data to find out why a DC-9 jetliner on a domestic flight crashed in heavy fog near a northeastern airport, apparently killing all 22 people aboard.

Austral Air Lines said 15 passengers and a crew of seven were aboard the private carrier's plane, which on Sunday crashed into a grove of eucalyptus trees about a half-mile short of the Posadas airport.

The plane had left Buenos Aires Sunday morning, stopping first in the river port city of Resistencia before heading north for Posadas, the capital of Misiones province, which is about 650 miles north of Buenos Aires.

The airline statement said Flight 046 crashed "for unknown reasons." It added, "Given the magnitude of the accident, it is presumed there are no survivors."

Intense heat at the crash site initially prevented recovery of all the bodies.

A Misiones radio station said the plane's black box was found in the wreckage and investigators hoped the device that records flight data will help them determine the cause of the crash.

Local news reports indicated the jetliner made an abrupt turn while approaching the airport runway three miles outside Posadas, stalled in the air and then crashed.

"We flew over the crashed plane a little after the accident and fire consumed everything in 10 minutes," said Federico Lujan, civil aviation director of Misiones province.

Witnesses and firefighters at the scene said the air was filled with the smell of burning eucalyptus and that wreckage from the charred DC-9 was strewn across a large area.

Austral released a list of the people on board that indicated most were Argentine, but one passenger identified only as Peterson was also listed in the flight manifest.

Austral is a private carrier purchased last year from the state. It competes with the government carrier Aerolineas Argentinas on domestic routes. Austral had been taken over by the state earlier this decade because of financial troubles.

Office Firebomb Target

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Attackers yelled anti-American slogans and hurled firebombs and tear-gas bombs at a U.S. government office in a southern city today, officials said.

The attack on the U.S. Information Service office in Taegu, 150 miles southeast of Seoul, caused no casualties and only minor damage.

The attackers tossed three firebombs and two tear-gas bombs at the office, U.S. officials and police said. Three attackers, believed to be students, were seized by police guards who stopped them with tear-gas guns.

Up to 10 radicals were involved in the attack, according to news reports.

Six windows were broken and the center's sign set on fire in the attack, officials said. The center, which promotes information about the United States and organizes cultural events, was briefly evacuated.

The attack followed a wave of violent anti-government and anti-U.S. protests during the past two weeks by radical students who have been demanding the overthrow of President Roh Tae-woo's government and an end to Seoul's alliance with Washington.

Anti-Americanism dominated the protests, with radical students claiming the United States enforces the partition of the divided Korean peninsula so it can rule the south. The radicals want immediate reunification with the communist north and removal of the 42,000 U.S. troops based in the south under a mutual defense pact.

BANKRUPTCY — A Ten Year Mistake
Bankruptcy does NOT wipe your Credit Slate clean and give you a "Fresh Start".

Bankruptcy stays on your credit report for 10 Years.

You'll have trouble getting credit. Creditors seldom grant credit to someone who has filed a Wage Earner Plan Chapter 13 or Chapter 7.

You'll have problems getting ANY type of consumer loan — car, home, credit cards, education, personal needs, etc. If you doubt this — contact a creditor.

Ten years of bad news, if you don't think so, ask those who have filed bankruptcy. Don't rely only on the advice of those who will make money off your bankruptcy and encourage you to go bankrupt.

There are options to bankruptcy: If you are having financial problems, contact your creditors first — remember, they want to see you solve your financial problems just as much as you do.

So before you make a Bankruptcy decision, THINK, consider the options and don't lock yourself into BANKRUPTCY — A Ten Year Mistake.

Founded Nurturing Network

By GEORGE JAHN
Associated Press Writer

OSTERVILLE, Mass. (AP) — Marjorie thought she had nowhere to go when she became pregnant a year ago.

Her boyfriend initially wasn't supportive. And while her family tried to understand, Marjorie felt being pregnant and single would hurt the reputation of her father, a Presbyterian minister in a big Minnesota city.

She was two courses short of her bachelor's degree in German and English literature.

Marjorie considered abortion. She also thought about moving to some place where she would not be known.

Then a friend told her about Mary E. Cunningham and her concept: a "nurturing network" for single college students and businesswomen who want to keep their babies as well as their careers.

Cunningham, whose spectacular rise and fall in the corporate world made headlines several years ago, founded The Nurturing Network on Nov. 1, 1986. It has expanded since to all 50 states.

"When I called Mary, she had within one hour set me up with classes with a Catholic college in Massachusetts. She just called the president and organized the whole thing, and I was registered right away," said Marjorie, 26. "She also set me up living with a family that was about a mile from college."

The network also was ready with medical referral services and emotional and financial help, says Marjorie, who agreed to a telephone interview on the condition that her last name not be used.

Although she opted to keep her baby, adoption counseling also would have been available.

Marjorie is one of about 100 women helped so far by the network founded on the idea that middle-class women who are pregnant and single have been largely ignored by society.

At 36, Cunningham's life today is much quieter than it was a few years ago when critics charged that her rapid promotion to vice president of strategic planning at Bendix Corp. was due to romantic links with Bendix chairman William Agee. She denied rumors of an affair but was forced out by the Bendix board of directors. Publicity was widespread.

The two divorced their spouses and married each other in 1982, but the controversy continued with Agee leaving Bendix in the wake of a messy takeover battle that ended with its absorption by Allied Corp.

Cunningham's response came in a book she co-wrote, "Powerplay — What Really Happened at Bendix."

Her only links with the past now are the contacts that have helped her raise money for The Nurturing Network, which has its headquarters in this tidy Cape Cod vacation village.

Her spacious, airy second-floor office on Main Street is done up in pastels and light woods. A homey bedroom is available for short-term stays, if temporary homes aren't immediately available.

Cunningham vigorously denies suggestions that her organization is elitist, asserting that two years of research revealed a surprise.

"The truth of the matter is that it's the working woman, the college woman who has by far the vast majority of crisis (unplanned) pregnancies," she says. "But because people think teen pregnancies represent the bulk of the problem, almost all the money, all the programs, all the orientation to support and help has gone to that population segment."

While there is also government money and support for the woman on welfare, the business or college woman "doesn't qualify for Medicaid or any other kind of assistance," Cunningham says.

"The overwhelming assumption is that her family will somehow be there to provide for her, but that, in fact is not always what happens. There still is a dominant reaction on the part of many families, which goes: 'Please don't come home because this isn't something I want the neighbors to know about.'"

Word of Cunningham's organization has been spread largely by word-of-mouth.

Cunningham says many middle-class women want to have their babies but get an abortion instead out of sheer desperation over the lack of emotional and financial support and because they don't want to stop working and studying.

"What in effect we're saying to these women is that you do not have to make a choice between preserving the life of your child and preserving your own life," she says. "It's no accident that when you look at the abortion statistics, the woman most likely to have an abortion is 20 to 24 years of age, white and middle-class.

"She goes to the crisis pregnancy center, somebody hands her a Medicaid form that tells her about the home for unwed mothers," Cunningham says. "That's not going to compute for somebody from a good college. She is going to say that's not the part of society that I'm supposed to be a part of."

Cunningham says all of the women she has placed opted to give birth instead of terminating their pregnancies. She says about 80 percent of the women had considered abortion.

There has been no lack of employer support for her program, with bosses willingly giving leaves of absence, Cunningham says.

Others offer temporary employment.

"What I present to them as a businesswoman is, 'Here is basically a source of employees who will be very motivated, who will be unbelievably loyal to you, who are not going to leave after three weeks, who are temporary, so you don't have to put them on a full benefit plan,'" she says. "As I put it to an employer, she's not there to make a killing, she's there to preserve her resume," says Cunningham.

More than 80 companies have pledged their support, she says.

Cunningham says participating doctors have also been cooperative, with some offering to deliver babies free of charge if necessary.

She and Agee, who runs a venture capital firm, have two children, 3½-year-old Mary Alana and 1½-year-old Will.

She said the fact her first pregnancy ended in miscarriage led to a decision to sell a vacation home for money to embark on helping pregnant women who want to complete their pregnancies, whether or not they keep the child.

"We spent a lot of time in the aftermath saying, 'How can we convert our own sadness and our own sense of loss into something positive?'" she says.

PCMH Patient Paints Scenes Holding Brush In His Teeth

By SALLIE WHELAN
PCMH Information and Publications

When John Champion picks up a paint brush, his technique is somewhat unorthodox. He clinches the brush between his teeth and glides the paint across the canvas creating a snow-covered mountain or a moonlit lake. Mountain ranges are his favorite.

His methods may be unusual, but they have come from necessity. Champion was paralyzed from the neck down in a motor vehicle accident in 1986. Admitted to the Regional Rehabilitation Center at Pitt County Memorial Hospital last summer, he met Therapeutic Recreation Specialist Sherri Odom, who began working with him to find a creative activity. She introduced him to Dorothy Nett, a hospital volunteer who has painted for more than 10 years.

When they first met, Nett told Champion about Joni Ericson, a quadriplegic who learned to paint using her mouth and has since become a well-know artist.

"I thought John might like to paint, too," Nett said. "Our first session was simply getting paint on the paper. Since then, John has continually improved."

At the beginning of each painting session, the two look through a book of paintings to get ideas. Nett mixes the paints they choose, places the brush in Champion's mouth and holds the paper. Champion creates the painting from his bed.

Champion paints once or twice a week and has completed 30 works. The 30-year-old says he paints to "pass the time" but his work is so good that his paintings were put on display in the hospital in May. They now decorate the walls of his hospital room.

A strong friendship has formed between Nett and Champion. Odom says Champion's entire outlook has changed.

"He's not the same reserved man he was when he first came to the hospital," Odom says. "I think John saw that Dorothy took the time to care about him. She doesn't have to do this and she is not getting paid to do it."

Champion hopes to continue painting after he leaves Pitt Memorial. He is now awaiting a spot in a nursing home in the Rocky Mount area to be near his family. Odom and Nett say that wherever he goes, they will try to make arrangements for someone to help him continue painting.

Sullivans Married In Greenville

MRS. SULLIVAN

Kathleen Mavourneen McCall and Daniel John Sullivan, both of Wilson, were married on June 4 at 2 p.m. in the Greenville Bible Church. The Rev. Daniel Naugle conducted the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of couple are Mr. and Mrs. Terry R. McCall of Greenville and Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Sullivan Jr., of Newton, N.J.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of mirror taffeta and silk floss Chantilly lace. The gown was desgined with an off-the-shoulder neckline accented with lace motifs beaded with pearls and sequins. Short puffed sleeves featured lace motifs and bows centered with rosettes. The elongated fitted bodice was of beaded lace and extended to a low back accented with bows centered with rosettes. The full circular skirt flowed into a chapel-length train. Her floor-length veil of illusion was monogrammed with seed pearls and held in place with a silk fioral spray accented with pearl filaments.

Erin J. McCall of New Jersey, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor. She wore a royal blue satin and lace gown designed with a sweetheart neckline enhanced at the shoulders with a circular ruffle centered with a satin bow. The princess bodice was of lace over satin and extended to an elongated torso with a mermaid flounce of satin flowing into a sweep train.

Michael Sullivan of Wilson attended his brother as best man. The bride's brothers, David McCall of New Jersey and Michael McCall of Greenville, were ushers.

The mother of the bride wore a tea-length gown of suede rose satin. The mother of the bridegroom wore an apricot silk suit.

Music was provided by Melody Relford on piano with a solo by Erin McCall.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. A rehearsal dinner was hosted by the parents of the bridegroom at Darryl's Restaurant. Various showers were given by friends.

The bride is a senior at North Carolina Wesleyan College in Rocky Mount and is employed by Brendle's of Greenville. The bridegroom is a senior at Atlantic Christian College in Wilson and is employed by Sherwin Williams Paints there.

Following a wedding trip to Florida, the couple reside in Wilson.

MRS. JACOBY

Jacoby Wedding Held

Kathryn Louise Rose Of Winterville and Henry Owen Jacoby were united in marriage Sunday at the Temple Oheb Shalom in Goldsboro in a 2 p.m. wedding ceremony. Cantor Michael Weisser officiated the ceremony.

The parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Rose of Grifton. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Jacoby of Lorain, Ohio.

Music for the ceremony was provided by classical guitarist Alan Berman.

Rheta Russell, sister of the bride, attended the bride as matron of honor. The bridegroom was assisted by his brother, Alan Jacoby, as best man. Ushers were Robert Rose Jr., brother of the bride; Peter Farese, Steve Foltin, and Arnold Milner.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal gown of white matte taffeta fashioned with a jewel neck, bodice, and puff top sleeves overlaid with re-embroidered lace, pearls and iridescents. Silk Venice lace outlined with pearls enhanced the yoke and sheer inserts in the sleeves. Beaded lace motifs were scattered over the full skirt and chapel train encircled with a row of scalloped re-embroidered lace. She wore a candle-light veil of illusion, bordered with pearl and iridescent appliques and joined to a Juliet cap of lace, pearls, silk flowers and iridescents. She carried a bouquet of rosebuds, daisies, and fuscia.

A reception was held immediately following the ceremony at the social hall of Temple Oheb Shalom. A rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the groom at the Terrace Room in Goldsboro. A bridal shower was given by co-workers of the bride at Abbotts Restaurant in Kinston.

The bride attended East Carolina University and is a special education teacher in the Lenoir County Schools. The groom attended Ohio State University and the University of Southern California at Los Angeles and is an assistant professor in the Department of Philosophy at East Carolina University.

After a wedding trip to California, the couple will reside in Greenville.

Annoyed By Co-worker's Detailing

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: "Had Enough" deserved much more sympathy from you. When she complained about a co-worker who bored everyone at work about what she had for dinner, what she saw on TV, detailing her kids' and husband's illnesses, you told her "one's co-workers are like a 'second family,' so it's not unusual for co-workers to share bits and pieces of their personal lives."

Abby, I don't think you realize the total frustration of having a co-worker who monopolizes every conversation with boring details about herself, her kids, her husband, etc. These rude, insensitive clods don't want to hear members of their "second family" share bits and pieces of their lives. They want only to interrupt, to yak incessantly about "me" and "mine."

Our resident boor marches into our offices each morning and begins blathering. When we try to change the subject, it only reminds her of something else she or her kid did last night. Fellow workers walk away from her, rolling their eyes, but she goes right on yakking. She is driving us crazy! We deserve the "act of kindness" -- not her.

We want to know how to make our telephones ring whenever she is in the vicinity. Please help us, Abby, before we go nuts! -- DESPERATELY SEEKING SILENCE

DEAR SEEKING: I'll repeat my final paragraph: "However, if you all agree that this woman is overdoing it, ask the person closest to her to tell her so as diplomatically as possible. It would be an act of kindness."

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened lower today as traders moved to cash in on the previous week's gains.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off 4.98 points at 2,096.73 in the first half hour of trading.

Volume on the Big Board came to 16.54 million shares. Gainers slightly outnumbered losers, with 496 up, 423 down and 491 unchanged.

Analysts attributed the decline to profit-taking as the Dow started the week eight points shy of its post-crash high.

"We've had a long run, and the market's backing off a little," said Hildegarde Zagorski, a second vice president at Prudential-Bache Securities Inc.

Many expect traders will be keeping a sharp eye on the merchandise trade report for April, due to be released on Tuesday. But Zagorski said traders are more interested in the trend than the actual deficit figure.

"And the trend seems to be in our favor," she said.

Among actively traded issues, Texaco was off 1⅛ at 50¾. Carl C. Icahn said he has held talks with Gulf Canada Ltd. and Husky Oil Ltd. about the possibility of forming a joint venture to take over Texaco.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks eased 0.08 to 152.81. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 0.48 at 308.85.

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average 8.36 to 2,101.71, finishing the week with a net gain of 30.41 points.

Advancing issues out-numbered declines by about 3 to 2 on the NYSE, with 868 up, 573 down and 509 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 155.71 million shares, against 235.16 million in the previous session.

Youth Faces Tough Decision

He says he wouldn't mind picking up a Nobel Prize along the way.

Cowell College Provost John Lynch said he had mixed feelings about Adragon's rapid progress. "It's quite an achievement, and he earned his degree. But I hope he will go on and be educated in life as broadly as he was in math," said Lynch.

Adragon's father is concerned his son made no friends at Santa Cruz.

"I kept questioning myself: Was this the right way to go? It gets harder and harder for him," said De Mello. "He isolated himself. ... His computers were his friends. It was very lonely for him."

Although he's confident about his abilities to grow intellectually, Adragon himself worries about his social life.

"It is strange having everyone so much higher than you," he says. "And in elementary school they have a recess. I once asked a student at Santa Cruz where the playground was and he laughed.

"I finally found the playground in my computer."

Coalition Sought

toward the center, although exactly what he means has been the most-debated question in recent French politics.

Georges Marchais, head of the Communist Party, said his forces would vote for any Socialist proposals "favorable to popular and national interests," but not commit them in advance to backing the government unless Mitterrand changes course.

Marchais called for "a policy of effective struggle against unemployment, poverty and social inequality, an increase in purchasing power, salaries, pensions and welfare payments, a policy of new growth in the economy, a policy of freedom preserving the rights of wage-earners and the independence of France, a policy of peace and disarmament."

Mitterrand's policies by now may be closer to those of the centrists. However, the centrists have longstanding ties to their conservative partners that will not be broken easily.

The Republican Party came into existence in 1854 at a convention in Jackson, Mich.

Our life has been so empty without you here to share it with us. Not only did we lose a son but a best friend and confidante, as well. Time still hasn't dried the tears or healed the wounds. Our heart still aches because we miss you so very much. Even though we still don't understand it, we take comfort in knowing that you are with God because we know the will of God will never lead you where the grace of God can not keep you. May you rest in peace.
We love you.

OPEC Ministers Talk Oil Production Quota

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — OPEC ministers today met informally to discuss whether to change their existing oil production quota, amid speculation that the talks have stalled.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries on Sunday adjourned its regular midyear conference to allow the 13-nation cartel's oil ministers to informaily discuss disagreements.

The conference began Saturday and will resume Tuesday.

The ministers have been considering whether to change an existing agreement among 12 of the members that limits their oil production to 15.06 million barrels a day.

That quota, which was extended in December and expires June 30, was aimed at supporting oil prices at $18 a barrel.

Iraq has refused to sign the agreement because it wants an output quota equal to that of Iran. Iraq, at war with Iran since September 1980, was granted a quota of 1.54 million barrels a day in a previous agreement. Iran's daily quota is 2.369 million barrels.

Some OPEC members want to cut production to push oil prices up, while others want to increase output or at least hold it steady to take advantage of an expected increase in demand later this year.

But analysts believe OPEC is so deeply divided it will extend the existing agreement for at least three months.

"We are working on compromise," Indonesian oil minister Ginandjar Kartasasmita said today. "There are agreements on most of the issues."

He said he strongly believed the cartel would make a decision either Tuesday or Wednesday.

"There will definitely be an agreement," added Saudi Arabian oil minister Hisham Nazer.

But ministerial sources from two countries also said Sunday that the cartel — expecting a stalemate — was most likely to extend the current production quota.

"There's a degree of disappointment and confusion," said Alan Sinclair, an oil analyst at the London investment firm Smith New Court Ltd.

Adding to the confusion was the departure of two Arab oil ministers, with one expected to return by Tuesday but the other saying he might not.

Mana Saeed Oteiba, the United Arab Emirates' oil minister, said Sunday he was returning to his country for consultations with his government and that he might or might not return. He gave no reason for his sudden departure.

Kuwaiti Oil Minister Ali Khalifa Sabah will leave today, but will return in time for the Tuesday session, members of his delegation said.

Former Sheriff Goes To Prison

PARKERSBURG, W.Va. (AP) — A former southern West Virginia sheriff who admitted buying the job for $100,000 was sentenced today to a maximum of 7 years in federal prison.

Former Mingo County Sheriff Charles "Eddie" Hilbert also was fined $10,000 by U.S. District Judge Charles Haden.

Hilbert, 45, pleaded guilty in April to one count of mail fraud, one count of tax evasion and one count of conspiracy to buy the sheriff's job from then-Sheriff Johnie Owens.

Owens, who says he gave some of the $100,000 to county commissioners to approve the arrangement, is serving a 14-year federal prison sentence.

Haden sentenced Hilbert to 2 years in prison on the mail fraud count, in which Hilbert admitted backdating a check for an insurance policy to cover an accident involving his son.

Hilbert was sentenced to 5 years on the conspiracy charge, which stemmed from the sale of the sheriff's office, and 3 years on the tax evasion charge, in which he admitted failing to report income from the sheriff's job.

The 2- and the 5-year terms are consecutive, while the 3-year term will be served at the same time.

Hilbert had faced a maximum of 13 years in prison and $351,000 in fines. As part of his plea agreement he resigned as sheriff, forfeited all pension and fringe benefits, and gave up all property obtained with the proceeds of his criminal activity, prosecutors said.

Also today, former Mingo County Democratic Chairman Donald Evans, 63, pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy to buy votes, which carries a maximum sentence of 5 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

He agreed to cooperate with federal prosecutors and is free on $10,000 bond pending his sentencing Aug. 8.

One former Mingo County commissioner is scheduled to report to federal prison later this month for his role in the scheme in which the sheriff's job was sold. Two other county commissioners at the time are under indictment.

Take 99-86 Win In Game Three

Lakers 'Break' Past Pistons

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers don't run as much as they once did. They still run too much as far as the Detroit Pistons are concerned.

The Lakers dusted off their fast break in the third quarter and raced to a 99-86 victory on Sunday. It gave them a 2-1 lead in the NBA finals and gave the Pistons an opponent that is starting to use more weapons.

"We got everybody involved in the break," said guard Magic Johnson, the Lakers' primary weapon, "Finally."

"We couldn't slow the game down. Their defense was that good," Detroit guard Isiah Thomas said. "They more or less controlled the game from start to finish."

Having lost the homecourt advantage by splitting the first two games in Los Angeles, the Lakers faced three consecutive games at the Pistons' Silverdome home.

"Today's win was as big a win as we've ever had because of the hole we were in," Los Angeles coach Pat Riley said. "And now it's 'their queeze game."

The Pistons will try to even the best-of-seven series Tuesday night. A fifth game is scheduled for Thursday night. Sunday's victory guarantees that the Lakers cannot lose the series on the road. If a sixth game is needed, it will be next Sunday in Los Angeles.

In a 105-93 opening loss, Los Angeles couldn't run much because Detroit hit 57.5 percent of its shots. In a 108-96 second-game victory, the Lakers ran a little more but settled for jump shots.

"We're not the running team we used to be," Riley said at practice Saturday. "We used to just run crazy, run so much (that) something good would happen."

They may have abandoned the Harold Stassen approach to offense — running all the time — but they still can sprint when the opportunity occurs. It did, repeatedly, in the third quarter when Detroit shot poorly and Los Angeles controlled the defensive boards and played tight defense.

Los Angeles held a slim 47-46 halftime lead but outscored Detroit 31-18 in the third quarter to go ahead 78-64. Ten of the Lakers' 11 baskets in the period came on fast breaks, layups or other short shots.

"We got all those points, basically, on transition plays and we were running," said Johnson, who had 18 points, 14 assists, six rebounds and three steals. "The defense made it happen."

So did Lakers' center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who, like the fast break, hadn't been as effective as he once was.

He had three defensive rebounds in the first 2½ minutes of the third quarter to help Los Angeles score the first eight points of the period and take a 55-46 lead. After getting a total of three rebounds in the first two contests, Abdul-Jabbar had four in the third quarter and seven in the game Sunday.

Detroit coach Chuck Daly said that in the Lakers' previous two series against Utah and Dallas, Abdul-Jabbar "has gotten better every game ... and that's been true in this particular series. He's improved dramatically."

Detroit, whose only leads were 25-23 and 46-45, never threatened seriously in the fourth quarter, trailing by at least nine points for the final 12 minutes.

Los Angeles, trying to become the first team to win consecutive titles since the Boston Celtics in 1969, was led by James Worthy with 24 points and A.C. Green with a career playoff high of 21. Thomas had 28 points and Adrian Dantley 14 for Detroit.

The crowd of 39,188 was the second biggest for an NBA finals game and the third biggest in playoff history. The biggest was 39,457 at Seattle's Kingdome on May 30, 1978.

"Being a veteran club, the crowd really doesn't bother us," Worthy said. "The best way to quiet them is to get ahead."

The Lakers, who had lost four consecutive road games, had no trouble coping with the vastness of the building and the daylight that came through the roof. They made their first six shots.

"I've been happier on the road than at home in the playoffs," Daly said. "We've come out flat."

"We were really focused on what we had to do," said Johnson, a Lansing, Mich., native who played before family and friends Sunday. "For the first time in this series, we played for 48 minutes."

Daly coached for about 43.

With 5:05 left in the game and Los Angeles leading 86-76, he picked up two technical fouls in two seconds and was ejected by referee Earl Strom. Byron Scott, who had 18 points, made both technical shots to build the lead to 12.

Daly said he was upset that the Lakers were not called for more fouls against Dantley and that no 3-second call was made right before the technicals. The Lakers held a 24-10 scoring edge at the foul line.

"It was our game today," Johnson said. The technicals "did not make a big difference."

The third quarter did.

Worthy made a layup, two free throws, a dunk off a fast break and two more foul shots to turn a one-point halftime edge into a 55-46 advantage with 9:10 left in the third period.

Detroit cut it to 61-56, but an 11-2 run gave the Lakers a 72-58 lead. They led 78-64 going into the final quarter.

The easy baskets resulting from fast breaks enabled the Lakers to hit 51.4 percent of their shots and break a 14-game streak in which Pistons' opponents shot under 50 percent.

The Pistons made just 16 of 47 shots in the second half after hitting 22 of 44 in the first half.

"We searched around for different combinations on offense and in the meantime we forgot about our defense," Detroit center Bill Laimbeer said.

The Lakers remembered their running game.

"We were really running and playing excellent defense," Johnson said. "That was the key."

Get Outta Here

Detroit Piston head coach Chuck Daly snarls as referee Earl Strom signals Daly's second technical four, resulting in automatic ejection from the game during fourth quarter action in Game Three of the NBA Championship Series. Scott Flirts With No-Hitter

By The Associated Press

Six pitchers this season have had eight innings of dreams and one of disappointment.

Houston's Mike Scott provided the latest no-hit saga on Sunday when Atlanta's Ken Oberkfell lined a single to right field with two outs in the top of the ninth to ruin the right-hander's shot at the second no-hitter of his career.

Scott then retired Gerald Perry to finish with the one-hitter and a 5-0 victory over the Braves at the Astrodome.

"It's always disappointing when you come so close and don't get it, but at least we got the win," Scott said. "I wanted to get in a lot of innings today because our bullpen needed it."

It was the sixth time this season a pitcher has carried a no-hitter into the ninth inning only to lose it.

Others to take a no-hitter into the ninth in 1988 are Scott's teammate Nolan Ryan, Ron Robinson of Cincinnati (also 8 2-3), Doug Drabek of Pittsburgh, Odell Jones of Milwaukee, and Tom Browning of Cincinnati.

Elsewhere in the NL on Sunday it was Montreal 4, New York Mets 3 in 11 innings; Chicago 4, St. Louis 3; Philadelphia 5, Pittsburgh 4; San Diego 5, Los Angeles 2; and Cincinnati 10, San Francisco 6.

Scott retired the first two batters in the ninth, but Oberkfell lined Scott's first pitch to him several feet to the left of right fielder Kevin Bass.

"I threw the pitch I thought I'd get him out with but he hit the ball well," Scott said. "I don't know if it was a good pitch or not but it doesn't really matter now. It was a nice clean hit."

Scott walked none, but the Astros had made two errors in the game spoiling his chances at a potential perfect game.

Scott pitched a no-hitter on Sept. 25, 1986 in a game that clinched the NL West Division title in a 2-0 victory over San Francisco. No NL pitcher has thrown a no-hitter since.

"I don't think that I had the stuff I had against the Giants," Scott said.

"It was one hit short of that magic," Astros catcher Alan Ashby said. "If you're comparing him to two years ago, he was great today. Two years ago, he was super human."

The last no-hitter in the majors was by Milwaukee's Juan Nieves, a 7-0 victory over Baltimore on April 15, 1987.

The Astros gave Scott the lead with three runs in the first inning off Rick Mahler, 7-6, on Bill Doran's RBI double and run-scoring singles by Bass and Craig Reynolds.

Expos 4, Mets 3

Andes Galarraga tied the score with a three-run homer in the bottom of the ninth and Hubie Brooks singled home Tim Raines in the 11th inning as Montreal sent visiting New York to its fifth straight loss.

Raines led off the 11th with a walk against Terry Leach, 1-1, stole second, was sacrificed to third and scored on Brooks' single.

Mets starter Sid Fernandez allowed one hit over the first eight innings. He was replaced by Randy Myers who yielded Galarraga's league-leading 16th homer.

Phillies 5, Pirates 4

Kevin Gross pitched 7 2-3 innings for his fifth victory in his last six decisions as Philadelphia defeated slumping Pittsburgh at Three Rivers Stadium.

Wallace Wins Final Riverside

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — A crowd estimated at more than 75,000 witnessed the end of an era as the NASCAR Winston Cup teams made their final assault on Riverside International Raceway.

But Sunday's final chapter of stock car racing was rather tedious and less than tidy at the 31-year-old track, scheduled for demolition later this summer to make way for a planned community and shopping mall.

Rusty Wallace won the Budweiser 400 in a race in which there was one red flag, seven yellows and some confusion that resulted in Dale Earnhardt drawing a penalty that cost him his chance at victory.

Wallace, driving a Pontiac Grand Prix, averaged 88.341 mph for the 95-lap race. Terry Labonte finished second in a Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS, 0.34 seconds behind.

Pole-sitter Ricky Rudd finished third, while defending NASCAR Winston Cup champion Earnhardt was fourth.

Earnhardt, contending for the lead with seven laps to go, was penalized three positions during the race when he passed the pace car on the 88th lap. Wallace and Rudd were running first and second at the end of the sixth caution period.

As racing resumed, the safety car mistakenly put its lights on and came onto the track on the back straightaway. Earnhardt moved past the safety car, but neither Wallace nor Rudd did so.

NASCAR officials then moved Earnhardt back to fourth place before racing resumed on lap 91.

"You're supposed to race back to the flag and if a gorilla or a pink elephant comes out, it doesn't matter," Earnhardt said after the race.

Wallace's victory also moved him ahead of Earnhardt in the Winston Cup points race. Wallace now has 1,790 points to 1,786 for Earnhardt. Labonte is third with 1,702.

"We were due for this win and it finally happened," Wallace said.

The victory was his third consecutive road course win and his fifth career Winston Cup win. He becomes the ninth different Winston Cup winner in 12 races.

The most serious incident in the race occurred on lap 29 when Ruben Garcia, the final starter, lost control of his Chevrolet Monte Carlo in turn nine and went over a guard rail, through the tire barrier and into a catch fence.

Garcia stopped his car just two feet short of a crowd of spectators near the timing and scoring stand. The yellow caution flag was displayed, but the damage to the fencing was so bad that the race was halted by a red flag.

"I was running good," Garcia said. "I was just hoping to keep it going. I think a tie-rod broke, because it felt like there was a flat tire.

"All I could do was close my eyes and pray. I don't know how close I came to the spectators, because I had my eyes closed that tight."

After a 25-minute delay, the race was resumed with one lap under caution before the green flag was displayed.

At that point, Rudd took the lead in his Buick, leading until a round of pit stops on lap 48.

With pit stops completed, Wallace took the lead and held it over Labonte's Chevrolet, but continued to battle with Neil Bonnett and Earnhardt until lap 82, when he took the lead and held it to the checkered flag.

Hagler Announces He Is Retiring

RAVENNA, Italy (AP) — Marvelous Marvin Hagler is leaving the ring for the screen.

The former middleweight champion announced Sunday that he is retiring from boxing to concentrate on his acting career.

"I think that I will leave boxing to my little brother," Hagler said after watching his brother Robbie Sims lose a unanimous decision to WBA middleweight champion Sambu Kalambay. "I have decided to dedicate myself to movies and television endorsements."

Hagler said he would have liked a rematch with Sugar Ray Leonard, but didn't want to wait for Leonard to make a decision.

"I think Ray is going to continue to play games, being the politician that he is," Hagler said. "It might take a year for anything to happen, and I don't want to wait."

Hagler, 34, hasn't fought since losing a split decision to Leonard on April 6, 1987. Leonard, who came out of retirement for the bout, retired again following his victory but recently indicated that he might fight again.

"I feel fortunate to get out of the ring with my faculties and my health. That's more important than money or anything," said Hagler, who earned more than $40 million in his boxing career.

Hagler, who appears in several television commercials and recently made a movie in the Philippines, said he decided to retire after talking with his wife, his mother and his longtime co-managers, Goody and Pat Petronelli.

"My heart says yes (to continue boxing), but my brain says no," he said.

Hagler's record was 62 wins, three losses and two draws.

Spanish Mackerel Limit Set At 10

RALEIGH (AP) — A limit of 10 fish per person per trip for Spanish mackerel caught by hook-and-line has been announced by William Hogarth, fisheries director of the North Carolind Division of Marine Fisheries.

The creel limit will become effective June 15. The limit is compatible with federal Spanish mackerel regulations that limit the recreational catch of Spanish mackerel to 10 fish per person per trip throughout the South Atlantic except in Florida, Hogarth said in a statement Friday.

U.S. landings of Spanish mackerel dropped from 11.5 million pounds in 1980 to 4.2 million pounds in 1984, Hogarth said. Much of the decline in Spanish mackerel stocks has been attributed to the uncontrolled use of purse gill nets in Florida waters.

Since 1985, the state of Florida has imposed stringent regulations on the Spanish mackerel fishery in state waters, including gear restrictions, a four-fish bag limit and commercial quotas.

Baldwin Named UNCC Women's Coach

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Ed Baldwin, a three-year assistant women's basketball coach at North Carolina State, has been women's head coach at N.C. Charlotte.

Baldwin, 34, replaces Cindy Connelly, who resigned in April after four seasons and a 56-51 record.

Baldwin helped Kay Yow's Wolfpack teams to a 52-35 mark and two NCAA appearances while at N.C. State.

"He has a strong background in recruiting, especially in North Carolina," said UNCC associate athletic director Judy Rose. "We feel he is very good at assessing talent, he has good contacts in the area."

UNCC slipped to a 10-17 record this season after three straight winning seasons under Connelly.

Before joining the Wolfpack, Baldwin built a six-season record of 124-26 at Broughton High in Raleigh, incuing state 4-A champions in 1983 and 1985. His last three teams were a combined 82-2.

"It will be a goal of ours to work toward getting into the Sun Belt's upper echelon," said Baldwin, a Fayetteville native who was a standout football player at N.C. Central.

Rogers, Brooks Capture Crosby Victory

BERMUDA RUN (AP) — Detroit Lions Coach Darryl Rogers and attorney Lovic Brooks won the $100,000 first prize at The Crosby celebrity charity golf tournament Sunday, finishing three rounds on the 6,511-yard Bermuda Run Country Club course at 32 under par.

Finishing four strokes back was the team of television producer Mitch Laurence and corporate executive Bob Preuitt.

There was a tie for third place six strokes back between the teams of Cincinnati Bengals wide receiver Chris Collingsworth and corporate executive Clyde Fitzgerald, and former National Hockey League star Stan Mikita and corporate executive Floyd Hall.

The teams of singer Pat Boone and corporate executive George Sands, and actor Chad Everett and baseball Hall-of-Famer Willie McCovey finished tied for fourth at 25-under.

Bob Hope hosted the award ceremony after Sunday's final round.

A guaranteed $1 million purse will go to charity, with most of that going for drug abuse and drug prevention programs.

Stanford Again NCAA Baseball Champ

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — When they're ready to make a movie about another team overcoming adversity to win a national title, producers should call Stanford coach Mark Marquess. His 1988 Cardinal squad already wrote the script.

Stanford became the first team since Southern Cal won five straight titles from 1970-1974 to win consecutive national championships at the College World Series with a 9-4 victory over top-ranked Arizona State on Saturday.

"I still can't figure this team out," Marquess said of his seventh-ranked team which was 19-10 at one point and finished 46-23. "There were many times we could look very good and then, the very next game, we'd look very bad."

"If you would have asked me in the middle of the season, I would have bet the ranch that we wouldn't get back here. We had so much adversity," All-American third baseman Ed Sprague said. "We had ups and downs, and we weren't playing real well. Finally, we put things together. That was the key."

Stanford wasted no time Saturday in jumping all over Arizona State, a team that had defeated the Cardinal five of six times during the regular season.

Five runs were scored in the first, thanks to Sprague's two-run homer off Rusty Kilgo, 12-3, and a two-run double from Brian Johnson off reliever Blas Minor. Another run scored on Paul Carey's sacrifice fly in the second, and Tim Griffin doubled in another in the third, then made it 8-0 when he scored one out later on a wild pitch.

"I've never seen them hit the ball like that before," Arizona State first baseman Steve Willis said. "They just came out smoking. It was incredible."

Stanford had 13 hits, while Arizona State, 60-13, was held to six and one unearned run through seven innings by freshman Stan Spencer, 7-2. Spencer was roughed up twice in regular-season outings against ASU, giving up eight runs in 6 2-3 innings.

"I think he knew the hitters better," Willis said. "The first couple of times I faced him today, he had me thinking, and when he got me thinking, I was beat."

Willis finally solved Spencer's pitching with a three-run homer in the eighth. That prompted Marquess to bring on relief ace Steve Chitren, who picked earned 11th save with two innings of one-hit relief. He didn't allow an earned run in 12 2-3 innings of post-season relief.

"This is indescribable," Sprague said. "After winning last year, I thought nothing could top that feeling. But this feels as good, if not better."

Errors Doom Pitt In Opener

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Sunday night, Pitt County's American Legion baseball team got together for its first practice session, a game against Kinston — and it showed.

Coming together without the benefit of a single day on the field together, Pitt committed nine errors and generally looked confused as Kinston rolled up a 9-3 victory.

The Kinston team put the game away in the eighth inning when Pitt committed six errors and gave up five runs.

"It looked like our first practice session," Pitt coach Toby Holliday said. "I guess you can't turn one switch off and then turn another one on." Holliday was referring to the quick turnaround made by several Rose High School players, who participated in the State 4-A Baseball Championships on Friday and Saturday in Charlotte. Six members of the Rose team played in the game and at least four others will join the team later this week.

"Coming from different schools is a big factor," Kinston coach Perry Lychak, whose team is now 1-3, said, "but what really hurt them was the errors. Our first three games went the same way."

Pitt had stayed right with Kinston until the eighth when nothing went right. The opening batter went out on a fly ball to center but Brian Lang then singled.

After that it was chaos.

Rick Killinger and John Dizon both reached on errors. Then, with two outs, David Hamm's fly ball was dropped, allowing both Lang and Killinger to score and moving Dizon to third. Hamm stole second and an error on the play allowed Dizon to score. Jeff McMahon then hit deep to third and third baseman John Bolen slipped, recovered, then threw late to first. His toss skipped past first baseman David Daniels, allowing Hamm to score from second. McMahon moved on to second on the play. Walks to John Hinson and Scotty Barnhill loaded the bases and chased starting pitcher Gary Hodges.

Boyd hit a grounder back to short, but that, too, was errored, allowing McMahon to score the final run.

That made it 9-3, the final margin.

The bad inning spoiled what was otherwise a pretty good opening effort by Hodges, who played his prep ball at Washington. Hodges, in seven and two-thirds innings, scattered six hits and allowed only three earned runs. He walked four and struck out six.

His opposite, Dizon, went eight innings, giving up five hits, three earned runs, three walks and seven strikeouts.

"Dizon did an outstanding job," Lychak said. "If you can throw strikes and keep the team in the game, something will happen for you and it did."

Hodges, who was working for the first time in three weeks, said that he had had very little practice over those three weeks. "I've been working with a new pitch and used it for the first time tonight, a change-up," Hodges said. "It really helped me a lot. I used it and got a lot of outs with it."

Kinston jumped into the early lead with three first inning runs. McMahon was hit by a pitch and Hinson singled. Boyd brought in the first run with a single and Killinger drove in the other two with another hit.

Pitt closed it to 3-1 on a homer by Franz Holscher in the bottom of the first.

Pitt then tied it up with two in the fifth. Ty Little singled and was sacrificed up. Jay Surles singled and an error on the play allowed Little to score and moved Surles to second. Tim Moore then singled in Surles for the 3-3 tie.

But Kinston came up with an unearned run in the top of the seventh to regain the lead 4-3. With two out, McMahon walked. Hinson then popped up to the infield, but the ball was dropped. McMahon had raced all the way to third on the play and then scooted home when the throw across the infield was off-target for a second error on the play.

That was followed by the fatal eighth inning fiasco.

Unfortunately for Pitt, the problems are probably not going to be ironed out easily, Holliday warned. The team has games scheduled tonight, Tuesday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday as it tries to get into the swing of things.

Pitcher Tom Moye will be sidelined at least until sometime next week and another hurler, Jamie Brewington, is out indefinitely with a sore arm. Four members of the team will be participating in the State Games, which run Thursday through Sunday, and the following week, four others will be attending a baseball camp in Florida.

"That really puts some pressure on us, especially in pitching. Not only are Moye and Brewington not available, Bronswell Patrick, whom we were counting on, signed a pro contract.

"But we're a better team than we showed tonight. We just have a long way to go," he said.

Pitt gets quickly back into action, playing host to Edenton tonight at 8 p.m. with a make-up game against Snow Hill set for Tuesday, also at 8 p.m.

Gross, 6-2, allowed 10 hits, walked one and struck out six before being relieved by Steve Bedrosian with two outs in the eighth. Bedrosian earned his seventh save.

Steve Jeltz tripled home a run in the Phillies' three-run second inning and doubled in another run in the sixth as the Philadelphia beat Pittsburgh for only the third time in their last 13 games. The Pirates lost for the eighth time in 12 games.

Cubs 4, Cardinals 3

Greg Maddux became the major league's first 11-game winner as Chicago defeated St. Louis and swept the three-game series at Busch Stadium.

The 22-year-old Maddux, 11-3, allowed eight hits, struck out eight and walked two to win his fifth straight. He also singled and scored twice.

Pat Perry bailed Maddux out of a bases-loaded, none-out jam in the ninth inning, allowing only a run. Perry's first save gave the Cubs a three-game sweep, their first in St. Louis since Aug. 2-4, 1983.

Padres 5, Dodgers 2

Ed Whitson won his third straight as San Diego defeated Los Angeles for a sweep of the three-game series at Jack Murphy Stadium.

Whitson, 6-5, allowed six hits in seven innings and Mark Davis pitched the final two innings for his ninth save. It was the Padres' first sweep of the Dodgers at home since April 14-16, 1986.

Carmelo Martinez and Benito Santiago each drove in two runs in the third inning.

Reds 10, Giants 6

Danny Jackson drove in three runs and pitched seven strong innings to lead Cincinnati past San Francisco at Candlestick Park.

Jackson, 6-3, limited the Giants to one hit until the sixth inning, retiring 15 straight batters following a first-inning single by Chris Speier. Tim Birtsas pitched the final two innings for the Reds, yielding a three-run homer to Rusty Tillman with two outs in the ninth.

Jackson, who struck out eight, had a run-scoring single in a five-run second and added a two-run double in the third while the Reds were building a 10-0 lead off starter Kelly Downs, 4-6, and reliever Randy Bockus.

Toure Claiborne tossed a one-hit shutout as Coca-Cola rolled up a 10-0 Babe Ruth League victory over Computerland Sunday.

Claiborne allowed only a second-inning single by Scott Byrd in the game, called after four and a half innings by the 10-run rule. He struck out nine and walked four.

Coke got all it needed in the first, scoring twice. Joe Norris walked and Jason Bizarro reached on an error. Both scored on Claiborne's single.

Coke added three in the second, three more in the third and two in the fourth.

Norris and Claiborne each had two hits for Coke.

Pepsi-Cola.....1

Nicky Phillips hit two home runs and drove in three runs to lead Jarman's Auto to a 14-1 victory over Pepsi-Cola in the Tar Heel Little League Sunday.

Jarman's got all it needed in the first, scoring four times. Russell Williamson reached on a fielder's choice and Phillips hit his first homer for a 2-0 edge. Adam Vincent kept it going with a walk and Luke Wendling also walked. Brandon Pierce singled in Vincent and Wendling stole home.

Jarman's added one in the third on Phillips' second homer, then got nine more in the fourth.

Pepsi's only run came on a homer by Damian Phillips in the second.

Williamston limited Pepsi to just three hits, striking out 10 and walking eight.

Williamson led the Pepsi hitting with three.

NOTICE TO WINTERVILLE WATER SYSTEM CUSTOMERS

The United States Congress amended the Safe Drinking Water Act in 1986. One requirement of this Act is that all people using public water systems should be notified of the potential for exposure to lead through the water distribution system and the plumbing in individual homes. All public water systems are required to make this notification even if there is no evidence of lead contamination and the drinking water complies with the Standards established by EPA.

The State of North Carolina and the North Carolina Section of the American Water Works Association have developed this notice which may be used by public water suppliers in order to comply with the Safe Drinking Water Act. All public water suppliers who do not exceed the EPA established Maximum Contaminant Levels for lead may use this notice to inform their customers of the potential for lead contamination.

Lead accumulates in the body from three potential sources. The major source is food, followed by air and drinking water.

Lead has been a common component of the materials used in the construction of water distribution systems and household plumbing throughout the centuries. While water supply systems do not still use lead joints and services, some older parts of existing systems may contain lead.

Lead is also commonly found in the soldered joints and the plumbing fixtures of older as well as modern homes and buildings. All water, even that which has been treated to reduce corrosiveness, can cause traces of lead to dissolve in the drinking water.

The United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) sets drinking water standards and has determined that lead is a health concern at certain levels of exposure. There is currently a standard of 0.050 parts per million (ppm). Based on new health information, EPA is likely to lower this standard significantly.

Part of the purpose of this notice is to inform you of the potential adverse health effects of lead. This is being done even though your water may not be in violation of the current standard.

EPA and others are concerned about lead in drinking water. Too much lead in the human body can cause serious damage to the brain, kidneys, nervous system, and red blood cells. The greatest risk, even with short-term exposure, is to young children and pregnant women.

Lead levels in your drinking water are likely to be highest:
—if your home or water system has lead pipes, or —if your home has copper pipes with lead solder, and —if the home is less than five years old, or —if you have soft or acidic water, or —if water sits in the pipes for several hours.

The American Water Works Association recommends that the cold water tap run for a sufficient amount of time to clear standing water from the line prior to using it for consumption (approximately two to three minutes). This should be done in the morning or after the system has not been in use for several hours.

Since hot water dissolves lead more quickly than cold water, use water from the cold water tap for drinking and cooking purposes, and especially for making baby formula.

When making any repairs or additions to the drinking water lines always insist that "lead-free" solder be used.

All public water supplies in the United States are monitored for lead and other potential contaminants to insure that Maximum Contaminant Levels established by EPA are not exceeded. In addition, most water suppliers treat the water prior to distribution to reduce corrosiveness which might cause lead to dissolve. The North Carolina building code also now requires that "lead-free" solder be used in drinking water plumbing.

The Department of Human Resources and the public water systems in North Carolina are committed to providing the safest available water to the people of this State.

If you desire further information on your water supply please contact your water system official Winterville Water Dept., Elwood Nobles at 756-2221.

Yount Thought About It, Then Hit For The Cycle

By HILLEL ITALIE
Associated Press Writer

With his team ahead 13-2, Milwaukee's Robin Yount could afford to think about himself.

Yount singled to center in the first, homered to right in the third and doubled to right in the sixth. He was the leadoff batter in the eighth.

"I was aware I needed a triple to hit for the cycle and in a game like that you can gamble," said Yount, who hit a deep drive to left center and made a headlong dive into third. There was no play on him and Yount became the third Brewer in history to hit for the cycle.

"The triple is the hardest hit to get because you have to hit it in the right place, you have to find an alley."

Dale Sveum homered twice and drove in five runs and Rob Deer added a two-run shot to lead a 16-hit attack Sunday as the Brewers pounded the Chicago White Sox 16-2.

Elsewhere, it was Boston 8, Toronto 2; Detroit 5, Cleveland 4; New York 6, Baltimore 5; Kansas City 6, California 4; Minnesota 6, Seattle 2 and Texas 3, Oakland 2.

The Brewers' 16 runs and nine extra-base hits were season highs. Don August, 2-1, allowed nine hits, walked two and struck out four for his first complete game. Joel Davis, 0-1, was the loser.

"We're just a feast or famine team," said Manager Tom Trebelhorn. "We got into their bullpen early and we hit some balls hard."

Sveum homered from both sides of the plate for the second time in his career. He hit a three-run homer batting left-handed in the fifth and a two-run shot batting right-handed in the eighth.

"We shouldn't have to wait 60 games to get a blowout, we're too good a hitting team" Sveum said.

The only other two Brewers to hit for the cycle were Mike Hegan in 1976 and Charlie Moore in 1980.

"It takes some luck to hit for the cycle," said Yount, "and you have to get the hits in the right places."

Tigers 5, Indians 4

Luis Salazar's two-run homer capped a five-run outburst in the first two innings and Detroit held on to complete a four-game sweep at Cleveland.

The Tigers moved past the Indians into sole possession of second place in the American League East with their fifth straight victory.

Frank Tanana, 9-4, gave up four runs on nine hits in 6 2-3 innings. Mike Henneman, the third Detroit pitcher, pitched two scoreless innings for his 13th save.

Scott Bailes, 6-5, lasted just 1 2-3 innings to break a string of 24 straight games in which Indians' starters had made it to the sixth inning.

The Tigers scored twice in the first and three times in the second to go up 5-0.

Yankees 6, Orioles 5

Claudell Washington's single over Baltimore's drawn-in outfield drove home the winning run with one out in the ninth inning as New York beat the Orioles for the second straight day.

Wayne Tolleson bunted for a one-out single against Tom Niedenfuer, 0-1, and took third when Jose Cruz followed with a single. Washington then hit a long fly ball over right fielder Fred Lynn.

Cecilio Guante, 4-2, got the win despite allowing Eddie Murray's game-tying, two-run homer in the eighth.

Charles Hudson, who bailed the Yankees out of a bases-loaded jam in the fourth, retired 11 straight batters before Billy Ripken opened the eighth with a double. Cal Ripken's RBI single chased Hudson and Murray greeted Guante with a line-drive home run to right field.

Red Sox 8, Blue Jays 2

Mike Greenwell's three-run homer highlighted a five-run first inning as Boston snapped an eight-game losing streak against Toronto.

Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, 6-5, allowed eight hits, walked two and struck out two in eight innings as Boston beat Toronto for the first time since Aug. 10, 1987. Bob Stanley pitched the ninth.

With one out in the first, Marty Barrett singled and Wade Boggs walked. Dwight Evans hit an RBI single and Greenwell followed by hitting his eighth homer off John Cerutti, 3-3.

Ellis Burks singled and after being picked off first, beat first baseman Fred McGriff's throw to second. Left fielder George Bell then dropped a routine fly ball by Kevin Romine, allowing Burks to go to third.

With the infield drawn in, Rich Gedman hit a grounder to shortstop Tony Fernandez, who threw wide of the plate trying to get Burks.

Royals 6, Angels 4

Ted Power allowed four hits in eight innings and Bill Buckner drove in three runs with a homer and a double as Kansas City won for the ninth time in 10 games by defeating California.

Power, 4-1, retired 20 consecutive batters following Jack Howell's leadoff double in the second. He struck out six and walked none in winning his third straight game. Gene Garber pitched the ninth and allowed Chili Davis' two-run homer, his seventh.

Power had pitched shutouts in his two previous starts, but his scoreless streak stopped at 18 innings when Wally Joyner hit his third homer of the season following Brian Downing's double in the first.

The Royals came back with three runs in the second against Willie Fraser, 4-6. Buckner hit his third homer in the fourth and drove in two more runs with a double in the eighth.

Twins 6, Mariners 2

Gary Gaetti's two-run homer sparked a five-run fifth inning and Charlie Lea allowed four hits in seven innings as Minnesota won at Seattle.

John Moses opened the fifth with a single and took second on Mark Davidson's groundout. Kent Hrbek walked and was caught stealing but Gaetti homered to left off Bill Swift, 5-3. Gaetti's 12th homer gave the Twins a 3-1 lead.

Swift then hit Randy Bush and allowed doubles to Gene Larkin, Brian Harper and Greg Gagne to drive in three more runs. Moses and Bush each had three hits.

Lea, 2-3, who entered the game with an earned run average of 6.65, struck out two and walked five. Juan Berenguer pitched two hitless innings.

Rangers 3, Athletics 2

Charlie Hough scattered six hits to beat Oakland for the seventh consecutive time as Texas beat the visiting Athletics.

Hough, 6-7, is 14-5 lifetime against Oakland. The knuckleballer struck out seven and walked three en route to his fifth complete game and third in a row.

Former Ranger Dave Stewart, 9-5, lost for the fifth time in his last six games. Stewart allowed five hits and struck out seven.

Ruben Sierra hit his 10th homer to give Texas a 3-1 lead in the third and Don Baylor homered leading off the ninth for Oakland.

Popular Western Novelist Louis L'Amour Dead At 80

By CAROLYN CALLISON
Associated Press Writer

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Louis L'Amour, one of America's most prolific storytellers whose frontier tales of gunfighters, lawmen and drifters enthralled millions of readers from waitresses to presidents, has died. He was 80.

The funeral for L'Amour, who died of lung cancer Friday at his Beverly Hills home, will be private, his daughter, Angelique L'Amour said Sunday night.

A few hours before his death L'Amour was proofreading the manuscript of his autobiography "Education of a Wandering Man," according to Bantam Books, his publisher of 33 years.

"For millions of readers around the world, Louis was the embodiment of the North American frontier," said Stuart Applebaum, his editor at Bantam.

"They were able to relive our American history and heritage," the editor added. "His books gave pleasure to truck drivers and truck stop waitresses, financiers and presidents of the United States. ... His work far transcends the Western novel genre."

L'Amour wrote 101 books, nearly all of them Westerns, including "Hondo," "The Iron Marshal," "The Quick and the Dead," "Sackett's Land," "Down the Long Hills" and "Ride the Dark Trail."

Nearly 200 million copies of the books are in print; his works were translated into 20 languages.

More than 45 of his novels and short stories were made into movies, including "Hondo," "Burning Hills," "Heller in Pink Tights" and "Stranger on Horseback." Stars cast in L'Amour Westerns included John Wayne, Natalie Wood and Alan Ladd.

Applebaum noted that perhaps his best-known novel, "How The West Was Won," was based on the movie screenplay.

L'Amour was a writer who paid scrupulous detail to accuracy.

"If he said that the cowboys went over a hill and to the right was Jones Hill, then there was Jones Hill. He researched it from heck to breakfast," retired newspaperman Jack Evans said Sunday.

"He would travel widely to check out the geography, the way people talked," Evans said from his farm in L'Amour's hometown of Jamestown, N.D. "If you start reading his books, you won't quit. It gets ahold of you and grabs you 'til the end. He was that good a writer."

"He always said he was just a storyteller, in the ancient folk tradition of people sitting around the fire, just telling stories," Joseph Wershba, a New York-based television news producer who knew L'Amour for more than a decade.

L'Amour dispelled myths about life in the Old West, such as townfolk fleeing the bad guys. Many of the actual settlers, he noted, were Civil War veterans not deterred by gunplay.

"I go to an area I'm interested in and I try to find a guy who knows it better than anyone else. Usually it's some broken-down cowboy," L'Amour once explained in an interview with The Associated Press.

"I'm actually writing history. It isn't what you'd call big history. I don't write about presidents and generals," L'Amour said. "I write about the man who was ranching, the man who was mining, the man who was opening up the country."

Although he was the first novelist to win the Medal of Honor, and received the Presidential Medal of Freedom, he never won a top literary award. But that didn't bother him.

"He never really paid critics and literati that much mind," Applebaum said. "He received thousands of fan mail every year. They were the critics that counted."

L'Amour left Jamestown when he was 15 for what he later called his "yondering" years, picking up such odd jobs as prize fighter, tugboat deckhand, longshoreman, lumberjack, prospector, miner, circus roustabout, fruit picker, elephant handler and amateur archaeologist.

As a result, he was largely self-educated. In later years, he lectured on such campuses as the University of Southern California, the University of Oklahoma and Baylor University.

He said that he "wanted to write almost from the time I could walk." He became a prolific contributor in the 1940s and 1950s to pulp magazines.

After World War II, he used the pen name Tex Burns because, he recalled, "no editor believed that the name L'Amour could ever appear on a Western story."

He used his real name after his first novel, the 1953 "Hondo," was made into a successful motion picture starring Wayne. "Hondo" was followed by 85 novels, 14 short story collections and one non-fiction book.

His readers included Presidents Dwight D. Eisenhower, Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan, who read "Jubal Sackett" while recovering from surgery in 1985.

L'Amour received the Medal of Honor in 1983 and the Medal of Freedom from Reagan the following year.

In addition to his daughter, L'Amour is survived by his wife of 32 years, Kathy, and son, Beau.

Two L'Amour books are scheduled for release this fall: "Lonigan," a short story collection, and "The Sackett Companion," a non-fiction account of his research for his 17 novels devoted to the fictional Sackett clan.

Charity Concert

FORT PAYNE, Ala. (AP) — The country-music band Alabama drew 35,000 people to its seventh annual charity concert, and lead singer Randy Owen says past problems won't stand in the way of future June Jams.

Saturday's crowd was far below the 61,000 who attended in 1986, when Alabama was at the peak of its popularity. But last year's June Jam was hit with heavy rain and paid attendance fell to 20,000, leaving no money for charity.

The first five June Jams raised $1.5 million.

Because of last year's problems, Owen and other band members fought rumors that this year's concert would not occur. Once plans became final, band members had to dispel rumors that this would be the last.

Entertainers joining Alabama for the daylong concert included the Charlie Daniels Band, Exile, K.T. Oslin, Carl Perkins, the Bellamy Brothers, Sweethearts of the Rodeo, Dan Seals, Gary Morris and Ricky Van Shelton.

Owen says he's making plans to mark the state's homecoming celebration, Alabama Reunion, at June Jam VIII. Festivities will include having the Alabama Symphony Orchestra join the band on stage to perform its hit "My Home's in Alabama."

'Similar Heart'

NEW YORK (AP) — Lily Tomlin, whose humor is as sly as Bette Midler's is raucous, says she and Midler, her co-star in the newly released comedy "Big Business," have a "similar heart" despite their differences.

The two comedians pointed out their contrasting acting styles in this week's People magazine. "I immerse myself totally in the character and prepare everything before hand," said Tomlin, 47.

"I don't like to think too much," said the 42-year-old Midler.

In "Big Business," the actresses play two sets of identical twins who were mixed up at birth by a short-sighted nurse.

Joel In Moscow Special Offers Backstage Glimpse

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The rock memorabilia display in New York's Hard Rock Cafe recently acquired a small, rather beat-up electric piano that bears the inscription "Trashed in the U.S.S.R."

The piano belonged to Billy Joel, and his tantrum is one of the highlights of the 90-minute documentary by Martin Bell, "A Matter of Trust: Billy Joel in the U.S.S.R," which can be seen Wednesday on ABC.

The film is, in fact, what prompted Joel's well-publicized attack on the innocent instrument. He explained later he thought the camera lights were intimidating the audience.

In order to pay for the tour, Joel commissioned two movies, a concert film for HBO, directed by Wayne Isham, and the documentary by Bell, an Englishman whose documentary on runaways, "Streetwise," was nominated for an Oscar in 1985.

The hey-look-they're-just-like-us impact of Bell's film is perhaps faded somewhat in the wash of publicity from the Moscow summit. But it is still a lovely travelogue and an interesting backstage portrait of a rock tour. There's also plenty of behind-the-scenes footage of Joel, his wife, Christie Brinkley, and their infant daughter, Alexa Ray, to satisfy the most avid fan.

"It's difficult making films about rock 'n' roll in general," Bell said in a telephone interview. "Because of films like 'Spinal Tap,' that form is so well-parodied. But the thing that was interesting to me was the Soviet Union and also Billy's music."

Surprisingly, he said, it was not that difficult to work in the Soviet Union, except for the difficulty of changing travel plans, since Aeroflot is demandingly prompt and always fully booked.

"The other problem is, it's difficult getting food after 10 o'clock at night. So you're limited to vodka and caviar and sturgeon. How difficult can it be?

"The interesting thing to me," Bell said, "was that it wasn't at all what I expected it to be. I mean I really did go with an idea of what the place would look like. I thought it would be dull and gray and uninteresting. It wasn't. It was the opposite — lively, full of color and the people incredibly warm."

One of the most profound moments in the film comes when Joel visits the grave of Russian folk singer Vladimir Visotsky, who died in 1980. People stand in line all day just to glimpse the grave. "That's popular," Joel says admiringly. Later, he meets Visotsky's mother, who is enormously impressed that an American rock star would visit her son's grave.

There is also some nice footage of Joel and his backup singers trading riffs with a Georgian men's singing group.

The piano-hurling came on the second night of the tour. During a song, Joel shouts, "Quit lighting the audience!" When there is no response from the lighting people, he throws the piano over, then attacks a microphone stand, breaking it in two.

"Thank goodness he did it, because it's very dramatic in the film," said Bell.

At another concert, Joel confounds his Soviet fans by going out into the audience and lying down on top of them. At first perplexed, they eventually get into the spirit and pass him, hand by hand, over the tops of their heads back to the stage. "I can't believe I did that!" cries Joel.

"The thing I am pleased about most in the film is that in a sense you're just seeing the people," said Bell. "You're seeing people respond directly to that music, and they look just like us. I don't know why that should be such a surprise, but in a sense we haven't seen the Soviets like that."

CBS President Says No. 1 Is His Priority

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — CBS President Laurence Tisch admits making mistakes that led to the network's slump to third place in the ratings, but vows to make changes to return it to the top spot.

"I have heard your concerns and disappointments loud and clear," Tisch said at Sunday's opening session of the three-day CBS affiliates conference.

CBS fell to third place in the A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings last season for the first time in its history.

"We share your disappointment with our prime-time ratings last season," he said. "We will not settle for third or even second place. Our highest priority is to restore CBS to No. 1. We will use every resource and we are committed to that goal."

Tisch said the network would improve programming and the promotion of that programming.

"We must be more aggressive in bringing our programming to the attention of the public through promotion," he said, adding that the network was putting new people in charge of on-the-air promotion.

Asked to identify an area where he had specifically made a mistake, Tisch said he felt he should not have encouraged the entertainment division to drop the Tuesday night movie and put in a block of four comedies.

"I think if we had not done that and I had not encouraged them to do that, we would not have ended up in third place," he said.

In addition to its ratings woes, CBS has been beset by programming delays resulting from the 14-week writers' strike, news budget cuts and buyout rumors.

"There is one thing I want to make clear," said Tisch, who is also chairman of Loews Corp. "Despite rumors, CBS and Loews stock is not for sale. The network is not for sale."

The estimated 800 people attending the luncheon burst into applause.

Tisch said he believed the price tag of $243 million for the 1992 Winter Olympics was a smart investment. He said he had been criticized for the bid but said it was the first time anyone had accused him of overspending.

"We have seen how two weeks of Olympic coverage can raise an entire network and boost the ratings of its schedule," he said.

Tisch said he didn't plan to put CBS into the cable business, as ABC and NBC are, saying he felt "the American public would be better served by strengthening over-the-air broadcasting."

Cronkite Memoirs

NEW YORK (AP) — Former CBS anchor Walter Cronkite has a major task looming — "the memoirs thing," as he calls it. He said he hopes to get to work this year or next.

"I'm not really intending to do another expose on CBS," he said. "That's not my intention."

There's a flurry of such recently, including "Prime Times, Bad Times" by former CBS News President Ed Joyce and "Who Killed CBS?" by New York Times reporter Peter Boyer. "I thought Joyce's book was very, very interesting," said Cronkite. "A great deal of it I thought was pretty accurate, but no question it was his own view of it and self-serving."

The Family Circus — By Bil Keane

"How did the pioneers ever cross the freeways in those wagons?"

Horoscope — From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY June 14

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Avoid tense encounter between out-of-towner and close friend. Also avoid others' arguments. Plan budget, don't overspend.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): It's an optimum time to gain better security. Potential for friction with others over money matters: pay bills.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Follow through on agreements left hanging before another makes it harder. Look among younger persons for assistance with project.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Devote time to both old business affairs and new, both are worthwhile. Avoid argument between mate and a co-worker.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): You are torn between creative ideas and more personal aims; follow what is most important now. Try to improve intimacies.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Stay calm, keep promises at work. Boss may hinder progress temporarily. New love interest awakens.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Out-of-town correspondence proves important, make this a priority. Today should move smoothly for you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Question the experts. Use your own ideas for finances today. A neglected matter needs tending at home. Retire early.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Help friends. Move on plan to help nervous friend. Be sure you know what you want before looking for friends' cooperation.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan.20): Clear your mind at work by dealing with neglected problems. Listen to complaints of mate, but do not do anything about them yet.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): An old mentor shows you how best to handle a personal problem. Rejoice and socialize with clever friends.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Solve personal matters before business. Demonstrate to kin how much they mean to you. Keep an open mind toward the young.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠9532 ♡7653 ◇AQ ♣AJ4
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	2 NT*	3 ♡	?

* unusual
What action do you take?
A.—You have a magic hand! Partner's unusual no trump overcall has promised at least 10 cards in the minor suits, so anything short of five clubs would be an underbid. It's not a question of whether you can make game, but whether you could be missing a slam!

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ53 ♡AJ62 ◇83 ♣953
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	2 NT*	3 ♡	?

* unusual
What action do you take?
A.—You have the same high cards and distribution as in the previous example, but this time your high cards are in the majors, where they are of minimal help to partner. Pass. Why should you go down when the opponents almost surely will?

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A6 ♡KJ109542 ◇A105 ♣4
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Because of your seventh heart, you have considerable extra trick-taking power even if you do not have much more than a minimum in the way of high cards. You can show this extra strength and virtually set the trump suit by jumping to three hearts.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J85 ♡Q4 ◇AQ5 ♣AQ972
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	2 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—To overcall at the two-level vulnerable, partner must have a good suit and about the values for an opening bid. Since a doubleton queen in these circumstances is excellent support, don't make partner do your bidding for you—jump to four hearts.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K873 ♡KJ1065 ◇K6 ♣93
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—This is a close decision between two no trump and pass. Since partner probably has a six-card suit, which rates to give you a source of tricks, and he could easily have extra values which he could not show, we lean toward the slightly aggressive two no trump.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ10952 ♡83 ◇Q105 ♣72
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	1 NT	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Partner's one no trump overcall is at least the equivalent of a one no trump opener, i.e, 16–19 points. So make the same bid you would have made had partner opened one no trump. Jump to four spades.

Truck Housed Family During Wait For A Liver Transplant

By PETER MATTIACE
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A weakening 26-year-old woman awaiting a life-saving liver transplant lived in a pickup truck with her parents for five days before authorities finally moved them into dormitory rooms Sunday.

Pollie Smolenski, who is suffering from a rare liver disorder called primary biliary cirrhosis, and her parents, Raymond and Ersley Eldridge, said they are down to their last $150, nearly half of which is needed for their drive home to Hallie, Ky.

"The truck was hot and, you know, there's not a lot of room in there," Mrs. Smolenski said as she rested on a dormitory bunk at the University of Pittsburgh. "When it gets hot ... I just get weaker and weaker."

The family lived in a camper atop their pickup in an empty parking lot on the Pitt campus. They said they bathed with wet sponges and used public toilets in nearby hospitals and dormitories.

They said they moved into the truck Tuesday after Mrs. Smolenski was discharged from Presbyterian-University Hospital, the world's leading transplant center.

Officials said the woman entered the hospital for evaluation May 17 and is awaiting a liver transplant.

"Her life's at stake here," said Mrs. Eldridge, 51. "We can't take her home again. It's too far. They don't want her more than 30 minutes away in case they get a liver for her. And we know no one in this town."

Raymond Eldridge, 54, a disabled equipment operator, carried a hospital beeper in his shirt pocket in case a donor is found.

Mrs. Smolenski's husband, Daniel, recently returned home to take care of their three young children. She said he is unemployed.

Campus policeman Jesse Long said he called university officials Sunday when temperatures rose to the mid-80s and the family said their daughter was growing weaker in the heat.

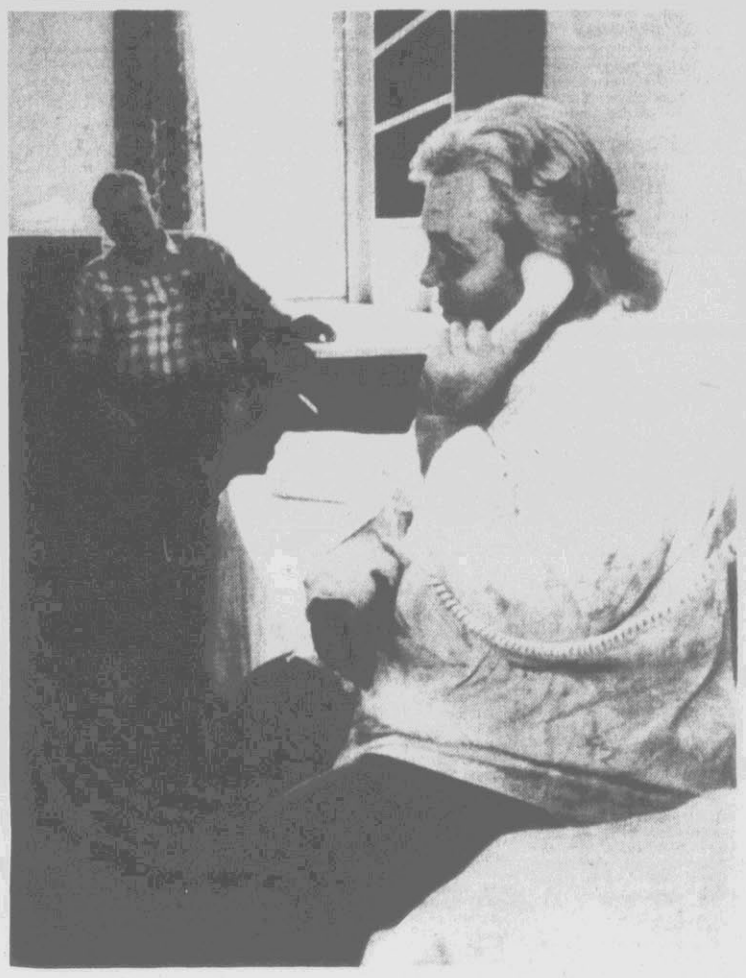
University officials put up the family, at least for one night, in adjacent rooms of a dormitory.

Mrs. Eldridge said social workers have been trying to find a temporary apartment for the family.

Liver transplant patients often wait months for donor organs to become available.

Hospital spokeswoman Jane Duffield said officials were unaware the family lacked adequate housing. "They had told us they had a camper and they did not tell us they needed housing. We would have done something," she said.

Miss Duffield said the hospital will find a free apartment for the family.



TRANSPLANT WAIT — Ersley Eldridge, front, and her husband, Raymond, wait in a University of Pittsburgh dormitory room Sunday night for a liver to become available for their daughter to undergo transplant surgery. They had been staying in a camper truck until the university offered them the dorm room. The family is from Hattie, Ky. (AP Laserphoto)

AIDS Test Developed

NEW YORK (AP) — A new test can distinguish infants infected by the AIDS virus from those who only appear infected because they carry blood proteins from their mothers, a study suggests.

The test works by detecting genetic material from the virus, rather than the standard method of detecting the proteins as evidence of possible infection, scientists said.

The proteins, called antibodies, form in reaction to exposure to the AIDS virus. A mother's antibodies can pass to the fetus and make the infant appear to have been exposed to the virus when standard testing is used.

The study, led by Steven Wolinsky at Northwestern University Medical School in Chicago, is to be reported this week in Sweden at the Fourth International Conference on AIDS.

It used a "polymerase chain reaction" technique, called PCR, to detect genetic material from the virus causing acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Part of the test focused on nine children, ages 6 months to 3 years, who had tested positive by standard tests.

INVITATION FOR BIDS GRINDLE CREEK CANAL

Sealed bids, in single copy, for work described herein and in the more detailed specifications, will be received until 11:00 o'clock A.M., E.D.T., June 16, 1988, at the law offices of Underwood & Leech; 201 Evans Street; Post Office Box 527; Greenville, North Carolina 27835; and at that time publicly opened. Prospective bidders may view the work site by obtaining directions at the store of J. P. Davenport & Sons; Pactolus, North Carolina at any time prior to the opening of bids. Representatives of the Drainage District will conduct a showing of the work to be done at the work site and be available to answer questions concerning the same on Tuesday, June 14, 1988, beginning at 9:00 o'clock A.M. at the Country Mart located on N.C. Highway No. 11 approximately one mile north of the crossing of said highway with the Grindle Creek bridge. A brief description of the work to be done is as follows:

The work to be done will consist of the removal of live and dead vegetation and travelway repairs on the Grindle Creek main canal. The area to be cleared extends from the intersection of Grindle Creek with State Road 1427 upstream to the intersection of Grindle Creek with Highway 11, a distance of approximately 2.5 miles. The work area is shown in heavy outline on a copy of the maintenance map of Grindle Creek Watershed which is attached to and made a part of the detailed specifications, copy of which can be obtained by application to the law offices of Underwood & Leech; Post Office Box 527; Greenville, North Carolina 27835, at any time.

The successful bidder will be required to execute a contract with Pitt County Drainage District No. 2 and to furnish a performance bond in the penal sum of 25% of the original amount of the contract.

The work shall be commenced within 30 calendar days after the bid opening and shall be completed within 180 calendar days after the award of the contract.

This the 31st day of May, 1988.

"Bids or proposals from contractors or suppliers that are submitted by: 1) a Japanese citizen or national, 2) a firm controlled directly or indirectly by Japanese citizens or nations, or 3) a supplier of any product if more than 50% of the total cost of the product is allocable to production or manufacturers in Japan will be deemed nonresponsive, and rejected."

Bidders are advised EPA General Conditions, Article 16, Arbitration, has been deleted by Special Conditions, Paragraph 4.

Plans and specifications are on file and may be examined at the office of the Town Manager, Belhaven, N.C.; at the office of the Engineer/Architect in Raleigh; at the AGC offices in Raleigh, Greensboro, and Charlotte; in the Dodge Plan Rooms in Raleigh, Greensboro, and Charlotte; and at SCAN in Atlanta. Specifications and construction drawings (24x36) may be obtained upon application to the Engineer/Architect, accompanied by a plan deposit check in the amount of $100.00 per set. Partial sets of Plans and specifications are not available. Full deposit for the first set of documents will be refunded to all bona fide bidders and others, provided plans and specifications are returned in good condition within ten (10) days after opening of bids. Persons obtaining two sets of documents will be eligible for a refund of $50.00 for the second set. No refund will be made for the third or subsequent sets.

The construction contract for the project will be awarded to the lowest responsive responsible bidder whose qualifications indicate the award will be in the best interest of the Owner and whose bid complies with the prescribed requirements and represents a least dollar cost for the project to the Owner. The right is reserved to hold any or all proposals for a period of sixty (60) days from the opening thereof. The Town of Belhaven reserves the right to reject, for good cause, any and all bids.

NOTICE TO BIDDERS AUXILIARY ELECTRICAL GENERATION EQUIPMENT WASTEWATER TREATMENT PLANT BELHAVEN, NORTH CAROLINA

Sealed proposals will be received by the Town of Belhaven in the Council Chambers until 2:00 p.m., July 20, 1988, and immediately thereafter publicly opened and read, for furnishing and delivering to the Town of Belhaven the specified generator equipment and appurtenances.

Bids must be submitted on the complete listing of items. Proposals must be enclosed in a sealed envelope, addressed to the Town of Belhaven, P. O. Box

001 Public Notices

220, Belhaven, North Carolina 27810. The outside of the envelope must be marked "Proposal for Portable Generator Equipment, EPA Project C-370503-02". All proposals must be made on blank forms provided and included in the bound document. The name and address of the bidder shall be plainly marked thereon.

Each proposal must be accompanied by cash or a certified check, drawn on a bank or trust company authorized to do business in North Carolina, payable to Town of Belhaven in an amount at least equal to five percent (5%) of the total amount of the bid, as a guarantee that a contract will be entered into and that a satisfactory performance bond will be executed. In lieu of cash or a certified check, the bidder may submit a bid bond in the form prescribed in G.S. 143-129 as amended by Chapter 1104 of the Public Laws of 1951.

Specifications are on file and may be examined at the office of the Town Manager, Belhaven, N.C.; at the office of the Engineer in Raleigh; at the AGC offices in Raleigh, Greensboro, and Charlotte; in the Dodge Plan Rooms in Raleigh, Greensboro, and Charlotte. They may be obtained upon application to the Engineer, accompanied by a non-refundable deposit check in the amount of $10.00.

The Town of Belhaven reserves the right to reject, for good cause, any and all bids. The right is reserved to hold any or all proposals for a period of sixty (60) days from the opening thereof.

Bidders are notified that any contract awarded under this Advertisement is expected to be funded in part by a grant from the United States Environmental Protection Agency. Neither the United States nor any of its departments, agencies, or employees is or will be a party to this Advertisement of any resulting contract. This procurement will be subject to regulations contained in 40 CFR 35.936, 35.938, and 35.939, and EPA policy "Buy American".

How about a nice boring investment that pays you plenty with no risk?

With so many economic uncertainties, go for a sure thing with your hard-earned savings. It's no time to take chances. Values of many non-insured investments can drop substantially—particularly in a time of severe market volatility.

Nobody knows what the future will bring. But with IRAs and other insured savings investments here, you'll sleep easy knowing your money is safe, sure and secure.

It will also be yielding an excellent return you can always count on right down to the last penny earned.

No other investment offers all these advantages . . .

- SAFETY. Deposits insured by a federal agency, backed by the full faith and credit of the United States.
- YOU KNOW WHAT YOUR INVESTMENT WILL BE WORTH.
- YOU CAN GET YOUR MONEY WHEN YOU WANT IT—even with an early withdrawal penalty.
- LOCAL CONVENIENCE. We're near where you live or work.
- WE QUOTE ACTUAL YIELDS—not "projections" based on past performance that may never be repeated.
- NO BIG FEES, LOADS, OR COMMISSIONS.
