Baker Resigns As Chief For White House Staff

WASHINGTON (AP) — Howard Baker will resign as White House chief of staff and be replaced by his deputy, Kenneth Duberstein, on July 1, it was announced today.

In addition, White House communications director Thomas C. Griscom intends to leave his post, but has not said when he will leave, said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

Although Baker had promised Reagan to stay until the end of the administration next January, he asked the president to be excused from that commitment, citing the ill health of his wife and stepmother, who are both hospitalized, Fitzwater said.

Baker joined the White House staff on Feb. 27, 1987, in the aftermath of the Iran-Contra scandal. In a statement read by Fitzwater, Reagan said he accepted Baker's resignation with deep regret.

"Sen. Baker has been a close friend and adviser who has guided my staff deftly and effectively for the last 16 months," Reagan said. "He held a steady hand in the operation of the White House while the Iran-Contra investigations were being conducted and his wise counsel fostered the spirit of cooperation in which those issues were presented to the American people."

Praise for Baker's job came quickly on Capitol Hill.

"He's done a superb job as chief of staff for the president," said Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas.

Dole said he has talked with Baker and "I do know his wife, Joy, has not been well and that's another reason he's indicated."

Dole, speaking on the Senate floor, wished Baker, "God speed, best wishes and good luck."

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said Baker had encountered "rough seas" at the White House.

"I think he did much to help to calm and quiet and make things more serene there," Byrd said on the floor of the chamber.

"He has performed a great service not only for the president but also for his country," Byrd said of Baker.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., said Baker "restored stability ... in a moment of genuine crisis. It is sufficiently settled, restored, that he feels able to leave."

"It should be taken as a good sign," Moynihan said. "His sense of duty ... is such that he would never leave were it not possible to continue without him."

Reagan, in his statement, also called Baker "a steady force for peace" to promote negotiations leading to an intermediate-range nuclear missile treaty with the Soviet Union and two summit meetings with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Fitzwater said Baker will return to his law practice, Baker Worthington Crossley Stansberry and Woolf, in Knoxville.

Duberstein became Baker's deputy on March 23, 1987. Baker recommended that Duberstein succeed him.

Reagan said that "Ken will be my principal aide and will lead the White House staff as we head into the home stretch."

"He is an outstanding manager and skilled strategist who has been fundamental to the significant accomplishments, foreign and domestic, we have achieved since Ken returned as deputy chief of staff in March 1987," Reagan said.

Eskimos Break Siberian Barrier

PROVIDENIYA, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Alaskan and Soviet Eskimos holding their first major reunion since the Cold War imposed a forced separation 40 years ago sang and talked animatedly today about current events — like walrus hunting.

The meeting at the Palace of Culture in this remote Siberian port was one of the highlights of the 225-mile "friendship flight" from the western Alaska town of Nome by an 82-member U.S. delegation.

Timothy Gologergen, 68, of Nome shared a traditional song with a Siberian Eskimo who identified himself as Kaygigun, 41, from the nearby village of New Chaplino.

"They got three walrus last night," Gologergen said later. "They were hauling them back and forth by dog team, and he heard that we were coming. He dropped everything and came over."

"He said this way is really good — just to speak our own (Yupik) dialect and not listen to the war stories or think about war, or plan about war — just be doing our thing, speaking our Yupik language and hunting and being relaxed," Gologergen said.

The Soviets earlier this month approved the charter flight by Eskimos, Alaskan business leaders, peace activists and politicians, the product of two years' work by Alaskans.

Eskimos once freely crossed the icy Bering Strait in motorboats and walrus-skin umiaks to trade and visit with relatives. The Cold War ended all that in 1948, when the border was closed.

Trade Deficit Lowest Since December '84

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. trade deficit shrank to $9.89 billion in April, the lowest level since December 1984, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said that a steep drop in imports helped push the deficit down by 15.5 percent from the revised March figure of $11.7 billion.

Economists had expected the deficit to worsen, not improve, in April.

The government said that Americans' appetite for imports declined by 6.4 percent to $36.1 billion in April. Exports were also down, but by a smaller 2.5 percent to $26.2 billion. The trade deficit is the difference between imports and exports.

The improvement gave the country its first single-digit trade deficit since a $9.90 billion imbalance in August 1985.

County Schools Choose Spanish As 2nd Language

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Spanish will be the foreign language integrated within the curriculum of Pitt County's schools beginning in the 1989-90 school year with kindergarten through third graders, the Pitt County Board of Education decided Monday night.

In approving recommendations by a foreign language task force, the board agreed that fourth and fifth graders will begin study of the language in 1990-91 while sixth through eighth graders will begin in 1991-92.

Inclusion of a foreign language as a required course in the curriculum is in accordance with the state Basic Education Plan that requires a foreign language program to be in place for grades kindergarten through 12 by the 1992-93 school year.

All kindergarten through fifth graders will be required to have a second language as part of their regular curriculum, while it will be offered as an elective in grades six through eight.

The BEP also says one language will be offered as a sequential program in grades kindergarten through 12, and individual school systems are to identify the language which will be offered and the model for teaching.

Ola Perry, the kindergarten through third grade coordinator for the school system, said a foreign language task force chose Spanish for several reasons. Ms. Perry served on the task force along with Sue Branch, the language arts and social studies coordinator for the school system who served as chairman, several foreign language teachers, and foreign language educators from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and East Carolina University.

The United States is the fifth largest Spanish speaking nation in the world, she said. Also, more high

Europe Set For Biggest Rocket Yet

PARIS (AP) — Europe this week will launch its biggest, most versatile rocket ever, which could give it an edge over the United States and other countries in the race to commercialize space.

Ariane-4, which is to blast off Wednesday from the European Space Agency's space center in Kourou, French Guiana, was declared ready for service on Saturday. Fueling of the rocket began Sunday.

The new generation rocket is designed to serve as Europe's "workhorse on the world launch services market until the end of this century," according to officials at Arianespace, the commercial arm of the 13-nation European Space Agency consortium.

The rocket will on its inaugural launch carry an international payload of three satellites into orbit, demonstrating the vehicle's space readiness to potential customers.

Capable of carrying heavier payloads than previous Arianes, the rocket is the most sophisticated the Europeans have ever produced.

Deputy's Car Flips, Hits Two Other Cars

A Pitt County sheriff's deputy responding to a call between Ayden and Grifton was injured and an estimated $16,000 property damage resulted when the car he was driving overturned in the 3000 block of South Memorial Drive Monday night.

Greenville police, who identified the deputy as Frederick Tyrone Alston, said Alston was driving south on Memorial Drive about 10:40 p.m., with blue lights and siren when he came up behind another vehicle. When the officer's car "swerved" into the right-hand lane to pass the vehicle, it overturned and struck two used cars parked at Quality Used Cars at 3006 S. Memorial Drive, police said.

Damage to the deputy's car was estimated at $8,000, while damage to the parked cars was estimated at about $4,000 each, investigators said.

Greenville police, who said Alston was taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital for treatment of minor injuries and then released, said their investigation was incomplete this morning.

But Sheriff Ralph Tyson said Alston was "on a call ... responding as a back-up car" to an incident "on N.C. 11 between Ayden and Grifton, where a woman was stabbed."

Smoker's Widower Wins Award

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A jury awarded a smoker's widower $400,000, the first damages ordered for disease caused by cigarettes, but cleared tobacco companies of conspiring to mislead the public about smoking's dangers.

The widower's lawyer said today the verdict boded well for future cases against cigarette makers.

However, the attorney for the company ordered to pay damages said he regarded the award as "sympathy" for the bereaved husband of Rose Cipollone, who died of lung cancer after smoking 1 1/2 packs a day for 40 years.

The U.S. District Court jury Monday exonerated the cigarette makers Liggett Group Inc., Lorillard Inc. and Philip Morris Inc. of conspiring to mislead the public about smoking's dangers, and rejected punitive damages.

Instead, it decided Liggett failed to warn about the dangers of cigarettes and violated its promise, or "express warranty," to produce a safe product.

It awarded Antonio Cipollone, a 64-year-old retired cable splicer, damages on the warranty claim but not for failure to warn the public because his wife was 80 percent responsible for contracting the disease that killed her in 1984 at age 58.

Liggett faced additional claims

Ayden Board Proposes Lower Tax Rate

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

AYDEN — The Ayden Town Board of Commissioners has recommended lowering residents' taxes by two cents and raising the fee for trash pick-up from $2 a month to $4 a month — instead of $5 as originally proposed.

At a budget workshop meeting Monday night, the board also recommended hiring a contractor to pick up commercial garbage and trash and to mow city lots.

Commissioner Robert Harris proposed lowering taxes from 46 cents per $100 valuation to 44 cents, and he also asked the board to raise the trash pick-up to fee to just $4 a month.

If the plan is adopted, the town would have to transfer about $47,900 into the general fund from a back-up account to balance the budget.

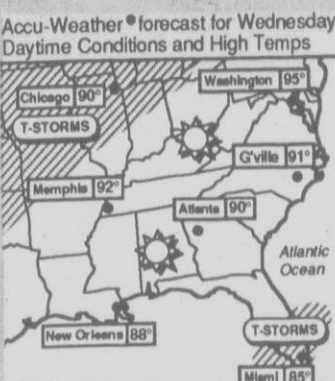

Because it was a workshop no motion was made and no vote was taken, but all board members agreed with Harris' request.

Ayden Town Manager Don Russell recommended that the board hire East Coast Waste Disposal to gather commercial garbage and trash.

The company would use the town's existing containers and maintain the same schedule now used by the town, except trash would be picked up once a week instead of once every two weeks. The town would continue to

County Board Tentatively Adds Funds For Expansion

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County commissioners, trying to produce a workable budget for the coming year while limiting any increase in money raised through property taxes, on Monday tentatively proposed adding some $2.07 million in expansion items to a $39.45 million list of expenditures proposed by County Manager Kramer Jackson in late May.

Jackson had proposed $34.62 million to maintain county operations at the existing level and $4.82 million in expansion items.

Jackson, who said his proposals were based on a tax rate of about 60 cents per $100 valuation — which would raise about the same amount of money as this year's 64 cents per $100 tax rate — told the board that some $8.51 million in expansion requests by the various departments and agencies were not included in his proposal. He said it would require a tax rate of about 90 cents per $100 valuation to fund the $34.62 million continuation budget and all the $13.34 million in expansion items that had been asked for.

After hearing from department and agency heads over the past three weeks, the commissioners Monday reviewed a list of "high priority" items and selected some $2.07 million worth of them for consideration.

The tentatively approved list includes such things as: $77,639 to meet a 38 percent increase in health insurance costs; $476,617 to provide pay raises and increased retirement benefits for county employees; $184,643 in new money (a 2 percent increase over current appropriations) for public schools; just over $67,000 for salaries, hospitalization insurance and maintenance at Pitt Community College; $256,363 in new mandated public assistance money for the Department of Social Services; and $26,286 to start a county employee wellness program in the Health Department.

Other items tentatively approved for inclusion in the expansion budget were: $18,600 to continue a victim advocate program in the Sheriff's Department for one year; $21,000 for doctors' fees, medicine and equipment for the jail; $20,703 for a new planning department position; $250,000 for a shell building fund for the Development Commission; $159,312 for capital improvements at Pitt-Greenville Airport (including terminal building expansion); and $447,400 for solid waste and landfill program expansion.

The expansion money tentatively approved for the solid waste and landfill programs would expand a pilot recycling program started at the Bell's Fork solid waste container site earlier this year to four other sites during the 1988-1989 fiscal year. And some $165,000 would be used to buy a new compactor for the landfill.

"The best we can figure," Jackson told commissioners, the $2.07 million in items they suggested for inclusion in the expansion budget Monday "would increase the tax rate to 62 cents."

Jackson said that, with the budget additions suggested by the board at Monday's workshop, 54 cents of the tax rate would go to fund general county operations and four cents would go for industrial development (including the proposed $250,000 for the shell building fund and $630,000 for water and sewer lines to serve the new Weyerhaeuser plant between Ayden and Grifton). The other four cents would be used for solid waste and landfill operations.

Among expansion budget items included in Jackson's proposal in May were: $3 million for school capital outlay; the $630,000 for the Weyerhaeuser water and sewer lines; $520,575 for a new mainframe computer; $208,031 for implementation of the 911 emergency telephone system; and $105,000 for a county facilities long range plan.

At the close of Monday's meeting the board suggested that work continue on the proposed budget items in an effort to minimize any increase in the amount of local revenue needed.

Commissioners were to honor the Rose High School baseball team, which finished second in the state championships last week, with a dinner at 6 p.m. today and hold a public hearing on the proposed 1988-1989 budget at 7 p.m. at the county office building at 1717 W. Fifth St.

pick up all residential garbage.

The town considers all materials picked up from dumpsters and roll-out containers garbage; rubbish such as limbs, discarded swing sets and other odd-sized items are considered trash.

East Coast has submitted a bid for a five-year deal. The plan would cost the town $44,974 annually, and East Coast would be allowed to raise the fee in the third year of the contract. The increase could be up to 80 percent of the rate of inflation, but no more than a 10 percent increase overall.

Russell said the town is in the process of writing a contract for mowing services, which would cost about $22,000 a year.

The contractor would be responsible for mowing the town's two cemeteries, two parks, areas around the recreation center, the town hall and the lift station. The contractors would do the work for less money than it now costs the city, Russell said.

Hiring contractors would allow the town to move three workers, who have been mowing, to the street department in an effort to improve service and efficiency, Russell said.

"We're not satisfied with the level of productivity we're getting out of our crews," Russell said to the board. "We're not satisfied with the way they're operating."

Under the plan, two street department employees would leave to work with East Coast. One employee has already announced he will be retiring and a second is leaving for another job.

Workers from the street department often substitute for workers mowing or gathering trash, and Russell said hiring contractors to do the work would give the street department more stability and allow workers to concentrate more on their jobs.

The board will hold another budget workshop Monday at 7:30 p.m. and there will be a public hearing on the proposed budget June 29.

Cox Department Honored By ECU

A.G. Cox Middle School in Winterville has become the first school in Pitt County to be honored by the East Carolina University Department of Health, Physical Education, Recreation & Safety, according to the department's coordinator of health education student teaching.

"Every few years, the department expresses appreciation to certain schools and physical education teachers who show an exemplary health education program," said Tom Johnson.

The schools are also commended for being "diligent in providing excellent supervision with our student teachers," he said.

Cox is the recipient of the third award presented to schools since the health education degree program began in the 1970s, Johnson said. Other recipients were schools in Washington, N.C., and Martin County.

In addition to school Principal Johnny Pinner, physical education and health teachers recognized by the department were Debbie Keel, Jerome Patterson, Joey Baggett, Sherry Sealey and Ben Moore.

Pitt Schools To Offer Spanish

school students in the county chose Spanish to study before other languages, and all the high schools have a Spanish program in place.

The FLES model will be used to teach Spanish, Ms. Perry said.

From 1987 to 1992, the state will provide the money for 35 teacher positions that will include foreign language teachers, Ms. Perry said. But, she said, finding qualified foreign language teachers "will become a problem for us."

UNC-CH graduated only 13 foreign language majors with teacher certification this year, while ECU graduated two with the same qualifications. The University of North Carolina at Greensboro graduated eight, Ms. Perry said. The school system will face enormous competition for these graduates and will need some innovative approaches to filling teacher positions, she said.

In other matters, the board did not approve the annual application for vocational education state-federal funding, part III, for fiscal year 1989 because it was concerned that a new council created as part of the application will serve both vocational education and drop-out prevention.

Dr. Julia Mobley, vocational education director for the school system, said the council was chosen to serve both programs because certain community representatives, such as those from industry and labor, are necessary for both councils.

Board members said they were concerned with the stigma dropout prevention may put on the vocational education tasks of the council.

The application will be amended and submitted to the board again during the July meeting.

The board approved a resolution to support the amendment to House Bill H970, which would allow local boards of education to contract directly with a general contractor for building projects. Currently, North Carolina, New York and Ohio are the only states which require separate contracts for public work.

A contract to audit each individual school and the administrative office of the school system was approved as required by the state. Joyner and Hatcher of Greenville will audit the school systems' accounts.

Several people approached the board during its meeting Monday with various concerns. William

Deeper Needs

Shelter Is Flexible Resource

Greenville has learned something during the six months its homeless shelter has operated.

It has learned the scope of housing needs in the community goes far beyond a safe place where the homeless can take shelter during bitter cold and scorching heat.

And as Greenville's shelter approaches its sixth month of operation, the facility is correctly utilizing resources to address these deeper needs. This type of expansion, nourished by a recent state grant, should be encouraged within the limits of the shelter's volunteer commitment and the community's ability to financially support the endeavor.

Although the harsh weather of winter has given way to less threatening temperatures, the number of people using the shelter has remained constant — and high. The shelter has housed an average of 18 people each night, regardless of weather.

This fact makes it clear the facility operates not only as an emergency shelter, as it was designed, but also as a semi-permanent home to those who can't secure permanent housing. Many of these nightly visitors are repeats and their needs can be better served by efforts to secure them affordable housing. Simply providing them a place to stay does not address their predicament.

Shelter leaders recognize this lack, and are correctly addressing it. Rather than implementing a maximum stay rule and kicking out these homeless citizens out after an arbitrary amount of time, the shelter's directors instead want to help them seek permanent housing. This effort should include pinpointing the problems which cause chronic homelessness — specifically unemployment.

There is no doubt the service provided by an emergency shelter is necessary. Greenville has never had a place the homeless could go for protection from life-threatening cold and heat.

But seeking the sources of a community problem like homelessness and working to ameliorate the suffering it causes is a broader, deeper goal which the shelter should pursue — again, within the framework of a low-cost, volunteer approach.

Just as there are limits to human suffering, which the shelter is designed to ease, there are limits to a community's ability to pay. The shelter's persistent dedication to self-help should continue; the facility should not become dependent on city and county coffers.

But the shelter is a valuable resource to a community whose problems are multiplying as quickly as its assets. It should also be a flexible resource. In its next six months, its leadership should continue to examine the human needs that appear in the facility's doorway.

Pitt Graduates Meet The Future

Tassels will turn, hands shake, applause thunder and pieces of paper switch hands.

Lives will change.

For approximately 1,000 high school seniors in Pitt County who are expected to graduate Wednesday, the future will begin to unfold its promise and challenge. These young adults will face the task of making livings, beginning families and furthering knowledge in ways as diverse as the individuals that compose this class of 1988.

Some of the graduates will go to college; others will go to work. And, although they pursue different means, their goal is similar — to earn a living and seek fulfillment from the paths they choose.

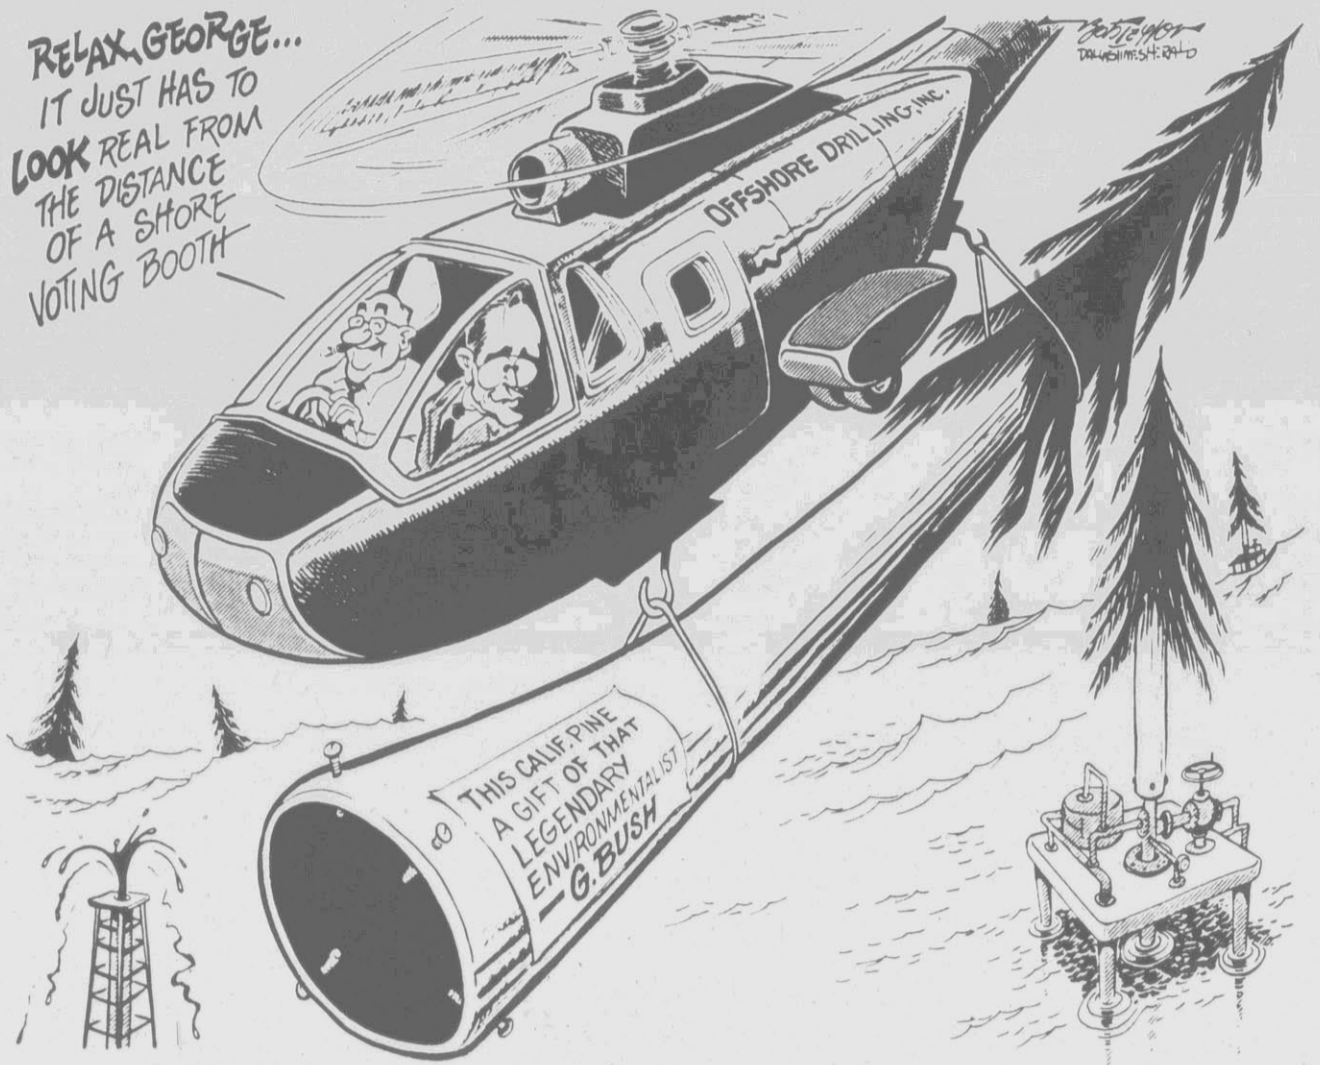

There are, in this class of 1988, teachers, doctors, mechanics, mathematicians, entrepreneurs, farmers, writers, cashiers, inventors, bus drivers, managers, cooks and coaches. These graduates will experience poverty and wealth and the wide spectrum of conditions between these two extremes.

All will find excitement and disappointment as their lives unfold. The high school diploma they receive Wednesday is the beginning of that process. It is the most basic tool each needs to successfully meet the challenges of life and work.

These challenges are sharp. Job competition is fierce. But social challenges are equally cunning. The world of 1988 is one where roles are changing and economic pressures often overwhelm personal desires.

And the world of 1988 is also one where the division between the haves and the have-nots grows increasingly evident and exerts more and more impact on society. Perhaps the most important challenge facing the class of 1988 is to recognize this gap and ease it; to care about the human condition and work to better it — whether through medicine, math or agriculture.

So tassels will turn, lives change and the future will subtly shift to the shoulders of the class of 1988 as its members reach to grasp their high school diplomas Wednesday.

Stroking The Greens For Glasnost

A small item of news from the Moscow summit was overlooked by the Western press. Armand Hammer announced through Soviet officials that he was going to build a golf course just outside Moscow. For the first time the Russians will be able to play the sport that has made capitalism what it is today. So revolutionary is the idea that Soviet experts refer to Hammer's proposed golf course as "The 18 Holes That Shook the World."

I hate to think what will happen to the Communist system once golf makes its inroads.

Decisions now made at Politburo headquarters will be resolved on the people's putting greens. High-ranking members of the party will not be judged by their weaknesses as Soviet administrators, but rather by their handicap at the Moscow Country Club.

Brian Nessim, the top Kremlin sports watcher at Columbia University, predicts that golf could change the entire Communist order. "I am surprised that the Soviets would permit it," Nessim told me. "The Russians haven't played golf since the 1917 revolution."

"I didn't know they had ever played it."

"Oh, yes. The czar even had a driving range in St. Petersburg, and he made the serfs catch the balls with their teeth. Things were very bad and caddies were beaten with 7-irons by the royal family whenever Rasputin hit into the rough. Finally, the caddies couldn't take it any more and decided to go out on strike. The czar was furious and ordered his mounted Cossacks to run them down on the fairways. When word leaked out about what the czar had done, the greenskeepers mutinied and that was the beginning of the revolution. No one has swung a golf club in the Soviet Union since."

"So bringing back golf is a giant step for glasnost," I said.

"Gorbachev knows what he is doing. He cannot improve the economy of the country if his managers do not play golf. Everyone is aware that all the deals in an advanced industrial society are made on the golf course. In a consumer-oriented economy it is impossible to have top-flight leaders unless they are able to plot five-year plans in a locker room."

"I knew that golf was essential to a high standard of living, but I didn't know it was that important."

"The sport is what made the U.S. No. 1. Never forget it was America that invented the golf cart, the greatest advance in transportation in the 20th century. The game, as the Soviets now realize, is more than just a sport. It's a way of life which gives a human being an opportunity to sell and another a chance to buy. It's obvious that if the Soviets want to catch up with us, they are going to have to construct many golf links around their major cities. This is what the Armand Hammer course is all about."

"Better late than never," I said.

"There are problems. For example, who will get membership in the club and what will it all mean? Whereas the Soviet hierarchy now stands atop Lenin's tomb for all the world to see, in the future we will have to watch how they line up to tee off on the first hole. The nearer they stand to the golf pro, the more important they will rate in the Politburo."

"Could you see the day when the American and Soviet presidents meet on a Moscow golf course instead of Red Square?"

"Why not? When people drive down a Soviet fairway together, they can't help but want to make a better world. That's why Lenin said, 'A person who chokes in golf chokes in life.'"

"I didn't know Lenin said that." "Well, maybe it was Marx. Soviet experts can never keep them straight."

"Do you believe that they will allow wives of world leaders to play on the Moscow course?" "I doubt it. I don't think you could ever put Nancy Reagan and Raisa Gorbachev in the same sand trap together."

Bush To Satan: No Deals

Maybe it's that weird red mark on Mikhail Gorbachev's forehead. Maybe it's conservative disappointment that Ronald Reagan has gone to Moscow. But for whatever reason, there is a small but vocal group of fundamentalist Christians who are prepared to argue that the Soviet general secretary is the Antichrist, the Devil's agent on Earth. They don't simply mean that Gorbachev is an evil man, or that he represents an evil system. No. They mean that he is the tool of the Devil. The Antichrist. Mr. 666 himself.

"The evidence is overwhelming that Gorbachev is the Antichrist," says Robert W. Faid, a 59-year-old former engineering supervisor who holds a master's degree in theology from Coatesville Bible College and is author of "A Scientific Approach to Christianity." He argues in a new book, "Gorbachev! Has the Real Antichrist Come?," that the Soviet leader fulfills virtually all the biblical prophecies about the Antichrist.

To Faid, last week's summit meeting in Moscow was a tragedy: "I'm sure that President Reagan has no idea that who he's talking to is, as the evidence indicates, the Antichrist."

Take the matter of that birthmark on Gorbachev's forehead. To Faid and those who share his views, that's not just an ordinary birthmark. It's The Mark of Satan.

"When I look at the top of Gorbachev's head, I see a red dragon and over the right eye, there's a tail that hangs, representing stars," says Faid. He explains that St. John, in Revelations: 12:3-4, portrays Satan in similar terms, as a "great red dragon ... and his tail drew the third part of the stars of heaven, and did cast them to the earth ..." Thus, says Faid, "If Gorbachev is truly the Antichrist, Satan branded him in his mother's womb."

The Antichrist, in New Testament lore, is the Satanic dictator who will plunge the world into misery and war before Jesus Christ returns to save the faithful. There have been previous candidates nominated for this post by fundamentalist Christians — mostly notably Henry Kissinger (personally, I think he's too short for the job). But none, in the view of Faid and some fellow believers, has so perfectly matched the clues outlined in Revelations and elsewhere. Among the signs: the numerical value of his name which is a multiple of the dread 666, if you use "theomatic" theory and his dominion over what Revelations calls the "ten crowns," which Faid says are actually the Soviet bloc nations, the Baltic states and Afghanistan.

Naturally, this news will be rather disappointing to those who have placed their hopes on summitry and detente. Even the ratifying of intermediate-range nuclear forces (INF) treaty and the prospect of a strategic arms reduction (START) treaty won't allow us to avoid the dark fate that awaits us when Gorbachev and his atheistic henchmen conquer the world, Faid notes. As he points out in his book, the Russian word for peace — pronounced "mir" — also means "world."

"How much clearer must it be?"

Faid writes. "When Gorbachev says, 'I want peace,' he is really saying, 'I want the world.'"

If Gorbachev is indeed the Antichrist, of course, it could change the landscape of American politics. For one thing it will make it very hard for Reagan and any future president to sell to the Senate any arms agreements with him. Democrats, nervous about seeming to be weak on defense, might back away from any type of agreement with the Devil's chief representative on earth.

Even the traditionally liberal residents of Washington, D.C. might vote against the Democrats if the party sought to make too many concessions to the Antichrist. It could even become the sort of election-year issue that might offer George Bush yet another opportunity to take a position independent of the president. The headlines would read: BUSH TO SATAN: NO DEALS.

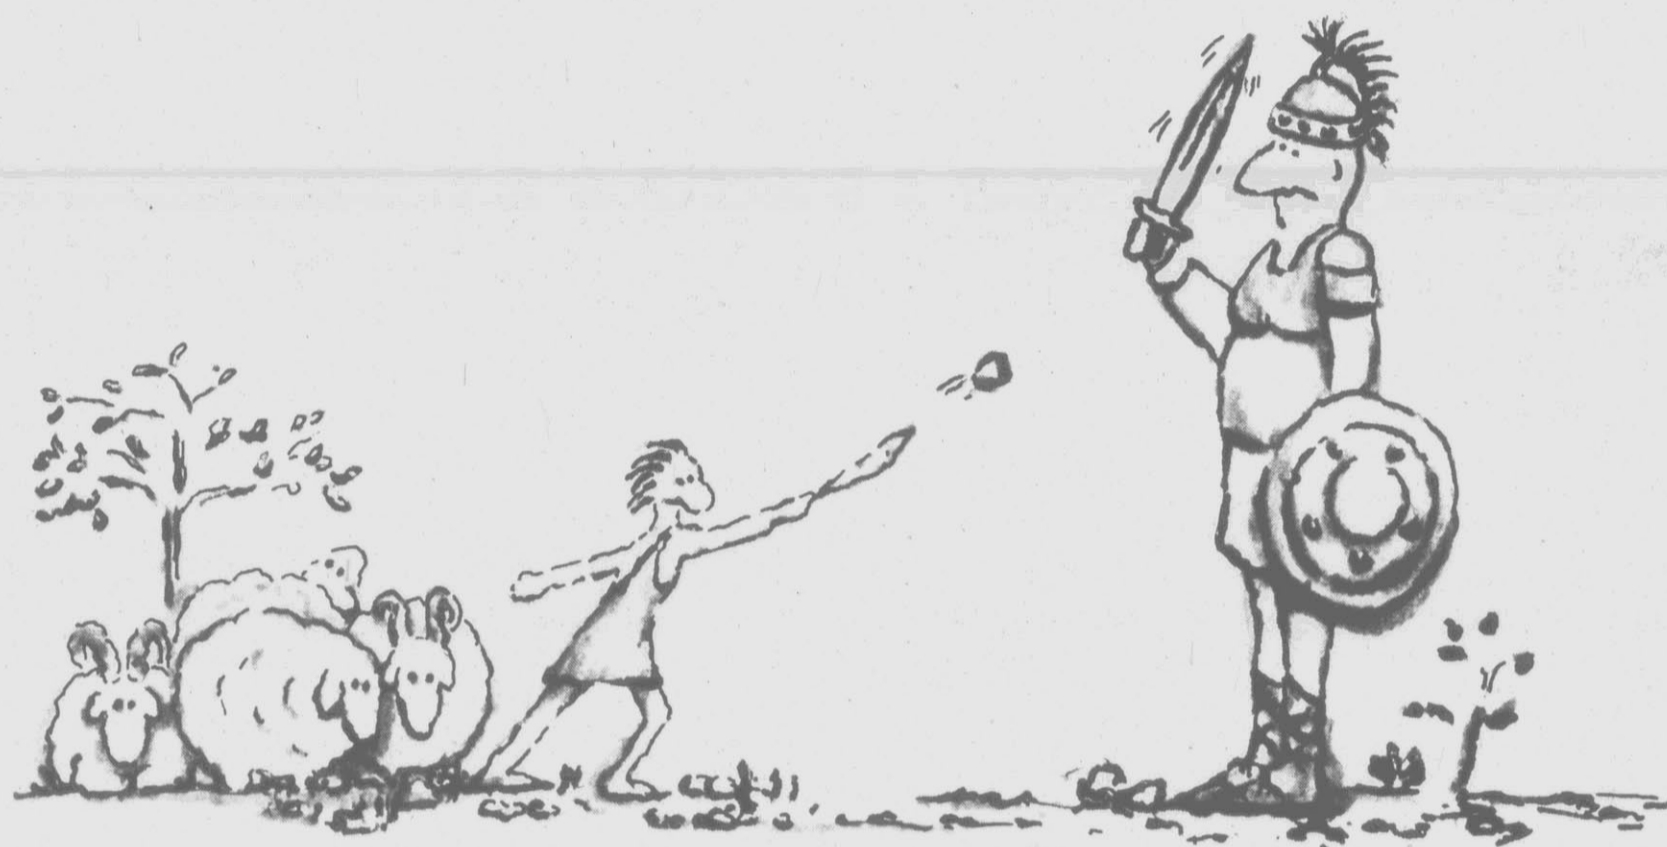

The Gorbachev-as-Antichrist thesis is the latest example of a centuries-old search among some Christians for the Antichrist. Martin Marty, a theology professor at the University of Chicago, argues that the long-standing effort to identify the Antichrist is akin to "Christian astrology... you can make anything come our right." He says that the fundamentalists' concern over Gorbachev actually stems from another cause: "Fundamentalists who counted on Reagan to be absolutely unbending in his opposition to Communism are confused. They feel there's a Satanic conspiracy behind the Administration's relative friendliness to the Soviets."

Here's how Faid explains Gorbachev's swift rise in the Communist Party hierarchy: "Who is responsible for all this? There can be only one answer! Satan was responsible." All the cumulative evidence, Faid calculates, means that the odds that Gorbachev is actually the Antichrist are more than "seven hundred and ten quadrillion" to one (to be exact: 710,609,175,188,282,100 to 1) — a figure he arrived at by calculating the probability of one man meeting all of the Biblical requirements for the Antichrist.

Chief Of Waste Site Panel Thinks Volunteer Host For Dump Unlikely

By MARTHA WAGGONER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Hazardous Waste Treatment Commission would welcome a volunteer county to host a hazardous waste treatment facility, but that is highly unlikely, the chairwoman of the commission says.

"You and I both know that it is unlikely that we will find a volunteer host county," Deborah Parker said Monday in a letter to Bill Holman, a lobbyist for the Conservation Council of North Carolina and the state chapter of the Sierra Club.

"We have had no response to our letters suggesting this possibility, and as we have seen with Edgecombe County, even the possibility of serving as a host met with strong opposition," she wrote. "The commission would, of course, welcome a volunteer county."

Edgecombe County last week dropped a proposal to host a hazardous waste treatment facility, low-level radioactive waste disposal site and regional landfill at a 3,200-acre waste management park. County officials blamed local opposition, especially by the business community, for their withdrawal.

Holman said in a letter to Ms. Parker last week that he believed the commission's decision on May 26 to consider Lee County for the hazardous waste treatment facility "violated the spirit if not the letter of the law." In a separate letter to legislators, Holman called for the disbanding of the current commission members, saying it no longer has the trust of the public and environmentalists.

A site of more than 2,400 acres near West Pocket in Lee County is being considered by the commission for the treatment facility. The state has not bought the land, although it is negotiating with the two owners.

Mrs. Parker said the commission — after sites in Rowan and Davidson counties were eliminated — "made a conscious decision to discuss ... any additional sites in executive session."

The Attorney General's Office agreed this was legal, she said.

The decision was made for two reasons, she said. The first was "to keep from alarming unduly the citizens in counties where we had been given information about a site that would not be appropriate for a facility," she said.

And the second was to learn as much about one site as possible before announcing it, she said.

"We have heard you say publicly you support appropriate treatment for hazardous waste and that North Carolina needs a comprehensive hazardous waste treatment facility, yet we have seen no real evidence of that support," she said. "Let me challenge you to join us in solving this difficult problem. Help us by providing solutions, not undue criticism."

Holman said in an interview Monday that environmentalists had not provided a lot of help to the commission. He said that was because "long ago, the treatment commission ignored the recommendations of environmentalists."

"The treatment commission needs to build a consensus among conservation and industry groups to move forward," he said. "Instead, they've invented their own process and left environmental and industry groups behind."

Five Escapees Remain At Large Despite Manhunt In Cumberland

By HARRY AMANA
Associated Press Writer

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The chief jailer of the Cumberland County Law Enforcement Center says it was "not a happy feeling" when he discovered that six prisoners, including three accused of murder, had used a hacksaw blade and homemade rope to regain their freedom.

Five of the six men were still on the loose early today.

Chief Jailer Capt. James Bowser said Monday he was on his way to check the cell blocks on the fourth floor about 11 p.m. Sunday when a guard met him in the hall.

"I think we've got a problem," the guard reported, according to Bowser, who has been chief jailer since March.

"I went into the cell block and saw the window busted out with the rope tied to the bar and out the window,"

Bowser said. "It was not a happy feeling."

Just moments before Bowser made his discovery, a Fayetteville Police Department clerk reporting for work saw the rope and broken window.

"I was just sitting in here and (the clerk) said, 'You guys have got some guys crawling down the side of the jail,'" Desk Sergeant Michael Reih said. "I ran out the door. The three guys I saw were just coming off the rope. I hollered at them to stop. They took off."

Reihe chased the three men for several blocks before getting "hung up in a fence" and losing them.

More than 75 officers searched Monday for the fugitives, concentrating on areas where break-ins had been reported. The men fled in T-shirts and undershorts, leaving their orange, county-issued jumpsuits and sandals behind.

Frederick Glenn Evans, 20, who was being held on murder charges, was recaptured shortly after the escape and was treated for a broken leg or hip he suffered in a fall, said Harold Little, a spokesman for the sheriff's department.

"We have no excuses," Sheriff Morris Bedsole said Monday. "We will work 24 hours a day until we catch these men. We will find out how the hacksaw blade they used got into the jail. We will find out why the metal bars did not withstand the saw."

Fayetteville architect Dan MacMillan, who designed the 13-year-old jail, said he was baffled at how the men sawed through a heavy-gauge horizontal bar to escape from a holding area and reach the outside window.

"An ordinary hacksaw would not cut this material," he said. "I've seen demonstrations of it where they (try to cut) it with an electric hacksaw, but the thing just goes back and forth and it does not make any impression in the material. ... I'm really not aware that there was a hacksaw blade available that would saw the material."

The prisoners used the hacksaw blade to cut the horizontal bar on both sides of a vertical bar. They then worked the vertical bar back and forth until it broke off. The missing bar left an opening about 10 inches by 14 inches under a table in the cellblock dayroom.

Once outside the cellblock, the prisoners crossed a walkway and used the cell bar to break an unbarred outside window. Using a rope made of bedsheets, they slid about 50 feet to the ground.

Still at large Monday afternoon was Jeffrey Karl Meyer of Raleigh, a 21-year-old former soldier at Fort Bragg who confessed to the stabbing deaths of Paul Kutz Sr., 68, and his wife, Janie Kutz, 62. Meyer was scheduled to appear in Superior Court Monday for the sentencing phase of his trial, in which he may face the death penalty.

The slayings came to be known as the "ninja" murders because Meyer and accused accomplice Mark E. Thompson, another former soldier at Fort Bragg, allegedly wore black clothes resembling outfits worn by Japanese assassins.

Superior Court Judge Lynn Johnson said he would decide today how to proceed with the sentencing hearing for Meyer. Johnson said state law requires that in a capital case a defendant must be present for all stages of the trial.

The other escapees were: Jerry Ronald Pond Jr., 24, of Fayetteville, held in the Jan. 21 slaying of a pawn shop employee; Gregory Morris Lee, 30, of Fayetteville, held on a charge of first-degree burglary, assault on a female and larceny; Jeffrey Charles Minnick, 22, of Hope Mills, held on charges of second-degree burglary, first-degree sex offense and common law robbery; and Rick A. Wilson, 30, of Hope Mills, held on charges of felony breaking and entering.

Co-Pilot Uncertified For Takeoffs In Fog

RALEIGH (AP) — A Federal Aviation Administration official says the co-pilot believed to have been flying an American Eagle plane that crashed Feb. 19 killing all 12 people aboard was not certified to make a takeoff in poor weather.

David Kress, manager of the FAA's commuter air taxi branch, said Monday that Kathy Digan did not meet FAA requirements for takeoffs in fog or other weather conditions with minimum visibility.

"In our opinion, the pilot must meet the requirement — whoever is flying it must be trained and tested with 100 hours as pilot in command and trained and tested to be able to execute a takeoff under those weather conditions," Kress said.

"I know she (Miss Digan) was not trained and tested to be able accept that responsibility," Kress said.

Kress first made the allegation in a sworn deposition before a National Transportation Safety Board panel in May. Copies of the depositions were obtained by The News and Observer and The Raleigh Times.

Kress testified that in conditions of minimum visibility pilots must have 100 hours flying as "pilot in command" to be legally allowed to execute a takeoff under FAA regulations.

Moments after takeoff in the fog, the Richmond-bound plane crashed onto the shore of Brier Creek reservoir.

WHY ARRANGE A FUNERAL IN ADVANCE?

Pre-arrangement is done for peace of mind, economy, and the grief-relief that pre-arrangement provides.

Peace of mind.
Knowing that the task is done is a blessing to many. Your family won't have to do it for you. You'll be secure in the knowledge that both you and your family are assured that all is under control.

Economy.
No extra, unwanted frills, if you so designate. Or, if you prefer, an elaborate, full-service funeral, with all the special touches you'd like - at today's agreed-in-advance price. The amount, held in a trust for your funeral expenses, can even earn interest until needed, if you so arrange it.

Grief-relief.
Making funeral arrangements under the stress of bereavement, in the midst of emotional chaos, can be devastating to a widow. By pre-arranging a funeral, you can relieve her of some of the grief, letting her concentrate on family matters of equal importance. Deported Arab-American May Become Jew

NEW YORK (AP) — Mubarak Awad, an Arab-American advocate of non-violent resistance to Israel, said today he would try to rally public opinion to pressure Israel into allowing him to return to his birthplace of Jerusalem.

Israel deported Awad, a U.S. citizen, in defiance of the United States. Awad arrived here Monday night but did not meet waiting reporters at Kennedy International Airport.

"My immediate plan is to try to have a Palestinian peace movement and try to bring the Palestinian issue to the American public," he said on CBS' "This Morning" program. He said he planned to give lectures and meet with government officials.

On ABC's "Good Morning America," he said his message would be: "There is something wrong there and there is injustice over there."

The deportation made Awad the 21st Arab to be expelled by Israel since the Dec. 8 start of the Palestinian uprising in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Awad, a Christian, also said he may as a last resort convert to Judaism to take advantage of Israel's Law of Return, which states that anyone who is a Jew can come to Israel.

"If it takes for me to be a Jew to go back there, I'm willing to do it," he said. "But in the beginning I have to try other means."

Charles Kimball, a spokesman for Awad, told reporters Monday, "He wanted me to express his deep appreciation" to U.S. officials who protested his deportation.

Kimball, director of the Middle East office of the National Council of Churches, named Secretary of State George Shultz, Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy, U.S. Ambassador to Israel Thomas Pickering and consuls general in Israel Morris Draper and Bill Wilcox.

"They have worked consistently, ardently and enormously helpfully on his behalf from the beginning of this whole process, and he's deeply grateful," Kimball said, his words at times drowned out by the chanting of anti-Awad protesters.

The United States condemned Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's order that Awad, a U.S. citizen, be deported. Shamir alleged that Awad played a key role in the Arab uprising in the occupied territories.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Monday, "We think it is unjustifiable to deny Mr. Awad the right to stay and live in Jerusalem where he was born. If he acted illegally, he should have been charged and tried in court with full due process of law."

Israel has regularly carried out deportations to quell unrest or subdue Palestinian nationalist activity, notably expelling nine West Bank mayors between 1980 and 1982. But the number of deportations has greatly increased since the Arab uprising began.

Awad, whom supporters call the "Palestinian Gandhi," denied inciting violence against Israel but has supported the uprising in the territories Israel captured in the 1967 Middle East war. Although he has little influence in the Palestinian community, some tactics he advocates, such as tax boycotts and commercial strikes, were adopted by leaders of the uprising.

Awad, who was incarcerated 40 days in Israel, was kept away from reporters in Jerusalem before he left, but his letters to supporters from prison were distributed.

"Even after my departure, my efforts will continue," Awad wrote. "We have no choice but to continue with the uprising for our liberation."

He vowed in the letters to return soon.

His deportation was protested by about a dozen Israelis at the Jerusalem airport and 25 supporters in downtown Jerusalem. Dozens of angry Israelis staged an impromptu counterdemonstration, calling the Awad supporters traitors.

Awad was deported on the grounds that his three-month tourist visa, issued when he entered Israel last August, had expired. The Israelis refused to extend the visa, and the Israeli Supreme Court last week rejected Awad's appeal to remain.

Some 50 demonstrators — about evenly split for and against Awad — gathered at Kennedy Airport.

New York State Assemblyman Dov Hikind, a Brooklyn Democrat, led a group of protesters who shouted "Awad is a terrorist." Separated from the Hikind group by a line of police officers was a pro-Arab group shouting "Down, down with Israel!" and "Long live Mubarak."

Awad, who lived in the United States for 13 years before returning to Jerusalem in 1983, is the founder of the Palestinian Center for the Study of Non-Violence. He has lectured on civil disobedience, counseled teachers against corporal punishment and planted olive trees in West Bank villages to underscore the Arabs' claim to the land.

He lived in Wapakoneta, Ohio, where he still owns a home. His wife, Nancy Nye, flew to New York on Sunday.

Survey Says South Now 'Test Happy'

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Public schools, especially in the South, have gone "test happy" as a result of school reform, according to a new survey which finds U.S. students taking at least 100 million standardized tests each year.

Twenty-four states required students to pass a standardized test to graduate from high school rose in 1987, compared with 15 in 1985, according to the 50-state survey published Monday by FairTest, a non-profit advocacy group in Cambridge, Mass.

During the same period, the number of states using tests as part of statewide assessment programs rose from 37 to 42, according to the 46-page report, "Fallout from the Testing Explosion: How 100 Million Standardized Exams Undermine Equity and Excellence in America's Public Schools."

The survey repeated FairTest's arguments made in previous reports that such testing is excessive and is biased against women and minority groups.

"In this country now, pupils are being tested far too often with far too simplistic a measure. School reform has led many schools to become too test happy. The fallout hits those least able to defend themselves," said D. Monty Neill, managing director of FairTest and co-author of the survey.

The group compiled its statistics in a telephone survey last spring of education departments in all 50 states. It also surveyed 56 school districts, including those with enrollments of at least 100,000 pupils.

The report estimated that U.S. students took 17.5 million standardized achievement, competency and basic skills tests to fulfill state mandates in the 42 states requiring them, and in the District of Columbia in 1986-87.

Students took an additional 38.9 million standardized tests to fulfill local school district testing mandates, according to the group.

Between 30 million and 40 million standardized tests, including I.Q. tests, were administered to compensatory and special education students, and schools administered between 1.5 million and 1.75 million screening tests for kindergarten and pre-kindergarten students, the report said.

College and secondary school admissions tests including the SAT, ACT, high school achievement tests, and the National Assessment of Educational Progress tests, accounted for another 6 million to 7 million.

New York City, the nation's largest school district, required its students to take 1.23 standardized tests on average. The District of Columbia mandated an average of 1.39 such tests per pupil.

Southern states had the most state-mandated tests, according to FairTest. The nation's 39.8 million public school students took 17,545,159 such state-mandated tests in 1986-87, an average of 0.44 per student. But southern states often had testing rates more than double that national average.

Virginia required its 975,135 public school students to take 1,069,000 tests during the 1986-87 school year, meaning 1.10 such state-mandated tests per pupil. Kentucky students took an average of 1.01 state-mandated exams, North Carolina 1.0, Alabama 0.98, Georgia 0.93, Arizona 0.90, and Missouri 0.83.

"Historically the South has been viewed as having weak school systems. There is a belief that you can test your way to better schools, and the South jumped on it," said Neill in a telephone interview.

EDWARD BRYNE JR.

'Jailhouse Poet' Dies In Chair

ANGOLA, La. (AP) — A man who romanced a cashier, robbed her and beat her to death with a hammer was electrocuted today, becoming the nation's 100th person executed since capital punishment resumed in 1977.

Edward R. Byrne Jr., 28, had argued that he did not intend to kill the woman during the 1984 gas station robbery. But he said Monday he had dated her with the intent of robbing her, knowing she handled large sums of money. And he said when he tried to knock her unconscious, "It didn't work. She didn't become unconscious. I just kept hitting her until she did."

Eighteen of the 100 executions since the U.S. Supreme Court reinstated the death penalty have been in Louisiana, which is tied with Florida for the second-highest number nationally. Texas has put 27 people to death.

Thirty-seven states enacted capital punishment laws after the 1976 Supreme Court ruling.

A coroner pronounced Byrne dead at 12:12 a.m., said Jim Morris, deputy secretary of the Louisiana Department of Public Safety and Corrections.

Three state and federal courts Monday refused requests by Byrne's lawyers to block the execution. Louisiana's Pardon Board also refused to recommend a commutation of his sentence to life imprisonment.

Six pro-capital punishment demonstrators waited outside the prison for confirmation of Byrne's death.

Dukakis Backs Conventional Strength As SDI Substitute

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Michael Dukakis, saying "the time has come to make tough choices on defense," said today he would replace the Reagan administration's Strategic Defense Initiative with a "conventional defense initiative" to help defend Europe against Soviet attack.

But the certain Democratic presidential nominee also put the European allies on notice they must bear a greater share of the common defense burden.

Dukakis, in a speech prepared for delivery to the Atlantic Council, said he's committed to "a NATO so strong and so united that no nation will be tempted to begin a war against us."

"NATO has worked for 40 years. It can work for 40 more — if our allies do their share, and if we stop trying to go it alone as we have done too often during the past seven years," he said.

He discounted fears that the American commitment to NATO will waver now that the United States and the Soviet Union have ratified the Intermediate-range Nuclear Missile Treaty to remove some short and medium-range missiles from Europe.

"I don't buy that at all. Our commitment to Europe goes far beyond a few hundred missiles," said the Massachusetts governor.

"Europe's security is vital to our security. That's why we have stationed more than 300,000 of our servicemen and women on European soil; that's why we continue to support the NATO doctrine of flexible response," he said.

The setting for the speech was a State Department auditorium. The Atlantic Council is a private, pro-NATO foreign policy group.

While Dukakis has spoken repeatedly against the Strategic Defense Initiative, the MX missile and other new weapons systems, he also has been promising to beef up conventional U.S. defenses.

He has also signaled before — as have both Democrats in Congress and Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci — that U.S. allies must bear a greater share of the burden of defending the West.

"The time has come, after 40 years, to discuss with our allies, quite honestly and frankly, what we all know, that the world has changed," said Dukakis.

"The American people expect, and they have a right to expect, our allies in Europe to bear a fair share of both the economic and the military burdens of defending freedom around the world," he said.

Supplier Shipping Concrete By Mail

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — An Anchorage building-materials supplier is taking advantage of a loophole in postal regulations to mail 6,000 concrete blocks to a remote village 700 miles away.

The shipments across Alaska could end up costing the U.S. Postal Service $500,000, and even the air carrier that stands to profit thinks the mail system is being abused.

Sam Krogstad of Bush Consolidators, which specializes in sending construction materials via the mail, says the Postal Service's losses are partly self-inflicted because the postal system pays 10 times as much to send the building materials by air freight as it charges Krogstad to mail them.

Each individually addressed concrete block costs Krogstad $4.33 in postage. The same block costs the post office $50.94 to deliver to Wainwright, an Arctic Ocean Eskimo community about 90 miles southwest of Barrow. That's a subsidy of $46.61 per block.

Krogstad also is mailing 4,600 bags of cement to Wainwright.

The blocks each weigh 67 pounds and the bags of cement about 65 pounds, so they fall just under the parcel-post limit of 70 pounds to qualify as mail. His postage costs will total about $45,000.

States Provide Stars For Flag

PITTSBURGH (AP) — An American flag bearing stars given by each of the nation's 50 governors was hoisted at dawn today to celebrate Flag Day.

Each governor or their representative cut out a cloth white star and sent it to the National Flag Foundation for the 10-by-19-foot flag, which was raised at Flag Plaza near Pittsburgh's Civic Arena.

"This U.S. Flag is the most representative of the 50 states of the union," said George Cahill, executive director of the non-profit group that promotes the flag and American patriotism.

About 100 people, including about 50 Boy Scouts, attended the brief ceremony at 5:49 a.m.

A flag-raising ceremony at the plaza is held at dawn on each Flag Day, which commemorates the anniversary of the adoption of the U.S. flag in 1777.

Armenians Win Official Backing, Break Off Strike Over Annexation

MOSCOW (AP) — Many Armenians who joined a strike to demand annexation of a disputed region of neighboring Azerbaijan returned to work today after being assured that their republic's government would press their demand.

But the Azerbaijani government voted to reject ceding control of the Nagorno-Karabakh region, which is predominantly Armenian.

Moses Gorgisyan, an Armenian jailed in April and May for staging nationalist demonstrations, said a general strike shut down most businesses in Armenia on Monday, but that today "some people are working, maybe half."

He said students agitating for annexation had for three weeks staged a sit-in outside the Opera Theater in Yerevan, capital of the southern republic.

Nagorno-Karabakh was assigned to Azerbaijan in 1923. Most Azerbaijanis are Moslems and most Armenians are Christians.

Azerbaijan's official Baku Radio reported today that the executive committee of that republic's legislature met Monday in the Azerbaijani capital, Baku, and turned down a request by Nagorno-Karabakh officials that their territory be transferred to Armenia.

The report, monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp. in London, said the Presidium of the republic's Supreme Soviet found the demand "unacceptable" because it would be "contrary to the interests of the Azerbaijani and Armenian population of the republic and would be incompatible with the tasks of consolidating the friendship between all the peoples of our country, as well as with the task of reconstruction."

It said the annexation request came from the Nagorno-Karabakh Autonomous Region's Soviet of People's Deputies, one of two chambers of the region's legislature. A request from the same body in February touched off massive street demonstrations and strikes in Nagorno-Karabakh and Yerevan.

Armenia's legislature is to meet

Wednesday to discuss the annexation demand.

Armenia's new Communist Party leader, Suren Arutyunyan, told more than 500,000 demonstrators in Yerevan on Monday that the Armenian Supreme Soviet would "decide positively" on their claim, according to Gorgisyan and Sergei Grigoryants, a dissident journalist in Moscow.

Gorgisyan quoted Arutyunyan as saying a majority of Supreme Soviet deputies indicated they support annexation. He said the speech was relayed three times on Armenian television, apparently in an effort to persuade people to return to their jobs.

Since the Azerbaijani legislature has rejected the annexation demand, if the Armenian Supreme Soviet calls for transfer of Nagorno-Karabakh, the issue would have to be decided by the central government in Moscow.

Moscow officials have rejected the demand once.

Gorgisyan said Armenians believe the next move is up to Moscow: "We are interested in Moscow's answer. Moscow has been silent so far."

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev got involved in the issue in February, appealing to Armenians and Azerbaijanis to be calm and promising the dispute would be reviewed.

The Kremlin later rejected the annexation demand and the central government instead approved a package of social and cultural improvements for Nagorno-Karabakh.

According to Gorgisyan, three Armenians have been lying on the square outside the Opera Theater on a hunger strike since June 4. He estimated that 2,000 to 5,000 people were gathered on the square, where the latest round of demonstrations began May 25.

Japan's Generosity Will Make It Largest Donor Of Foreign Aid

TOKYO (AP) — Japan will double its foreign development aid to about $50 billion in the next five years, surpassing the United States as the world's biggest donor of such aid, the Foreign Ministry announced today.

A Foreign Ministry official said the new five-year program, approved at a Cabinet session today, will more than double the $25 billion Japan gave in the past five years.

Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita will explain the aid plan at the Toronto summit of seven major industrial countries June 19-21, said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The aid, called Official Development Assistance, totaled $7.45 billion in 1987, up 32.3 percent in dollar terms from the previous year and 13.5 percent higher on a yen basis, the official said.

According to latest U.S. figures, the United States gave $9.56 billion a year.

She found women in Bombay to be "the poorest of the poor, unskilled and uneducated."

But she also found them motivated to keep their families going.

"Being a woman, I empathized with their situation and wanted to do something about this," she said.

So in 1980, Ms. Freitas founded a patchwork cooperative with three women in Bombay's Golibar slum district who made quilts, cushion covers and garments.

Now, the patchwork center provides work for 35 women who pick up materials and instructions and work at home on a piece-work basis.

There also are three other workshops employing 30 poor women and handicapped men. Those workshops are a sewing shop, a hand-block fabric printing shop and a silk screen shop, where workers are trained to make stationery and ornamental paper.

In 1985, Ms. Freitas helped launch a non-profit coalition of cottage industries called SHARE, or Support the Handicapped Rehabilitation Effort. It now works with about 25 cooperatives around India, helping them with professional advice on sales and marketing.

"All these things are important, otherwise these programs are like charity under a different name," Ms. Freitas said. "It's teaching a man to fish rather than providing the fish."

The cooperatives produce goods like flowing caftan dresses, needlepoint belts, embroidered blouses and stationery sets for export.

Many shirts and skirts go for $16, and the most expensive items are huge quilts that cost $200 to $250.

Ms. Freitas plans to introduce a mail order catalog by next year. She acknowledges that it's been hard to interest major retailers who are looking for bulk orders and uniform designs, but she believes in her project.

"I am convinced that the products can really take off here in the United States ... and make some significant changes ... in India," she said.

Malaysian Says TV Show's Cast 'Insulted' In Headhunters' Roles

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — A regional official accused a Japanese television crew of insulting natives of a remote jungle area of Borneo Island by having them act like headhunters and crawl and howl like dogs.

The national news agency Bernama said today that the reported incident in Sabah state angered Muruts, the indigenous population, and prompted a government investigation.

Kadon Agundong, Sabah state's culture, youth and sports minister, strongly criticized the incident and said it was aimed at degrading the Muruts, the agency said.

Kadon said the TV quiz show crew should not have asked the Muruts to act as headhunters because they had long abandoned the practice of headhunting. He said foreigners would be scared to visit Sabah if the show were screened.

Bernama quoted Johnny Tanakinjal, Tenom assistant district officer, as saying he saw the television crew on May 27 coax a Murut to crawl to a jar of rice wine, take a sip and howl and bark like a dog.

Tanakinjal said the crew ignored his protests and chased him away.

Tenom district is 1,090 miles east of the capital, Kuala Lumpur.

Kadon told a news conference in Kota Kinabalu, capital of Sabah state, that he had ordered his ministry to investigate the incident. He said if the matter was true he would have the government lodge an official protest with the Japanese Foreign Ministry.

The quiz show, called "Naruhodo The World" (Naruhodo meaning indeed), is a weekly hourlong program that usually spotlights one country. Questions are posed to contestants after short video clips of the country are shown.

Policeman Wounded

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Communist gunmen critically wounded a city policeman bathing outside his home today and scattered leaflets claiming responsibility for the attack, authorities and witnesses said.

It was the second rebel attack on policemen in two days in the capital area.

Police and witnesses said patrolman Gilbert dela Cruz was taking a bath outside his house in a slum district when four armed men arrived. One acted as a lookout while the others fired at dela Cruz, police said.

They said the anti-narcotics officer was in critical condition in a hospital with four gunshot wounds in the head and body.

Educators See High Tech

CHICAGO (AP) — A child born today will be 11 years old at the start of the year 2000. How will his educational experience differ from that of today's sixth-grader?

A new study on the future of technology in education, sponsored by the Chicago-based Society For Visual Education Inc. (SVE), predicts that computer literacy will be important at an earlier age than at present.

Ninety percent of the education experts who responded to the study said students would need to have mastered basic computer skills by the sixth grade. Seventy percent of the study participants felt that at least one half of all teachers would be actively using computers in the classroom by the mid-1990s.

Classrooms will be filled with computers, they foresee. Advanced computer software and interactive videos will provide simulations of real-life situations and drills designed to strengthen critical thinking abilities.

With the increasing availability of VCRs, laser discs and CDs, special interest courses and advanced work in a subject will be made easily accessible to smaller groups of students.

While stressing the importance of computers for the future of education, the study raised the concern that some schools cannot afford computer and video hardware and software, and that this problem may contribute to a new illiteracy — a subclass of technological "have-nots."

A lack of training in the use of new technology, according to the study, may lead to serious, negative impact on career opportunities for high school graduates.

The results of the study also indicate changes in the classroom curriculum. According to the study, by the year 2000, the three R's could be replaced by the four C's: communication, comprehension, coping and critical thinking.

Although reading, writing and arithmetic will remain important school subjects, the study predicts that the emphasis on learning will shift from subject-specific to skill-specific as classrooms across the country reflect the impact of new technology.

"The study concluded that finding, understanding and using information productively will require much more than just learning to read, write or do simple math," said SVE president Suzanne T. Isaacs. "The four C's are going to be vital to survival and success in a more sophisticated future."

Added one respondent, a school library media specialist from Nebraska, "Teachers must help students acquire skills, values and knowledge to deal with the community of the future. Society will become increasingly dependent on all types of technology, and students must be prepared to manage and control it."

The study, "Preparing Schools for the Year 2000," was sponsored by SVE, a major producer of audiovisual and software materials for schools, in cooperation with the Association for Childhood Education International.

The 78 educators who participated included classroom teachers, school media specialists, college faculty members, state-level school administrators and representatives of national education associations.

The yearlong study consisted of three rounds of questionnaires, the second and third of which were built on information derived in the previous rounds.

"The response we received did not indicate a radical change in the education system," Isaacs said. "Teachers and books will not become obsolete in the decade ahead, but the impact of new technology, as envisioned by the study participants, will challenge the assumption of everyone concerned with educational planning."

Readers Sound Off About Check

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This concerns the grandmother who has always sent her adult grandchildren a $50 check for their birthdays. It seems that she made a mistake and sent Todd a check for $16 made out to the telephone company. Todd returned the errant check, but Grandma never replaced it, so Todd's father (Grandma's son) reminded her that Todd missed his usual $50 birthday check, but Grandma ignored the reminder. Then Todd's mother asked you if she and her husband should reimburse Todd for the $50 and let Grandma know about it.

You told them that if they chose to reimburse Todd for the botched birthday gift, to do it quietly, but to make no mention of it to Grandma, because if she decided to forget it — so be it.

Abby, you missed the entire point. I think Todd's father should write to his mother and politely ask her to correct her mistake. Whatever happens after that is trivial. The important thing is that Todd will know that his father will go to bat for him in such matters. — JOHN MERKLE, KNOXVILLE, TENN.

DEAR MR. MERKLE: That letter drew this surprising tirade from a reader who focused on an angle I had not considered:

DEAR ABBY: That letter about Todd and the $50 birthday check he failed to receive from his grandmother is the most disgusting example of greed you have ever printed! It really struck a raw nerve with me because it demonstrates a common phenomenon which is all around us: the greed of adult children and grandchildren vis-a-vis their grandparents and parents.

Todd's mother should die of shame before writing to an advice columnist for help in how to twist Grandmother's arm to extort a $50 birthday check for a presumably able-bodied adult son who should be out there earning his own money. Todd's mother doesn't mention that she or her adult children ever sent $50 birthday checks to Grandma. Want to bet they don't? Yet, they feel that for as long as Grandma lives, she should send her grandchildren money for their birthdays — and probably all the other gift-giving occasions as well. And what do they give Grandma? Doilies? A scarf? A box of cheap bath powder?

And what if Grandma decides that now that the grandchildren are adults, she'll send them cards for their birthdays? Would they sue her in small claims court for their $50 checks? Or would they punish her by not visiting her anymore?

Couple Exchanges Vows On Saturday

Celeste Harris Pickett of Greenville and Ken Franklin Hayes of Route 1, Morven, were united in marriage Saturday at 2 p.m. in St. James United Methodist Church. The Rev. M. Dewey Tyson performed the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. J. Daniel Pickett of Greenville, and Mr. and Mrs. David F. Hayes of Route 1, Seagrove.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, chose a formal gown of white taffeta. The bodice, with Venise lace appliques, seed pearls, and scattered iridescent sequins, featured a sweetheart neckline scalloped with Venise lace and leg o'mutton sleeves. The basque waist fell to a full circular skirt and chapel train bordered with Venise lace. Her fingertip-length veil had a wreath headpiece with matching iridescent sequins and seed pearls attached to the cap. The bride's flowers included a cascade of rubrum lilies, white roses, and freesia.

Amy Dohm attended the bride as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Allison Hayes of Seagrove and Anita Hayes of Charleston, both sisters of the bridegroom; Roslyn Pickett of Greenville, sister of the bride; Marcy Beaman of Wendell, and Kimber Smith of Greenville. The attendants wore raspberry floor-length taffeta gowns with floral stitched bodices, scalloped necklines, and princess short sleeves. NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened sharply higher today as equities got a solid boost from a better-than-expected trade report.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials soared 33.79 points to 2,133.18, its highest level since the October market crash, in the first half hour of trading.

Volume on the Big Board came to 53.54 million shares. Gainers overpowered losers by about 9 to 1 with 959 up, 159 down and 301 unchanged as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

A long-awaited Commerce Department report showed the nation's seasonally adjusted trade deficit narrowed to $9.89 billion in April, far below the $12-plus billion market watchers had been anticipating.

The report sparked a rally in the bond market, where the bellwether 30-year Treasury issue jumped about $15 per $1,000 in face value, and the dollar also moved sharply higher against the major currencies.

Among actively traded issues, IBM jumped 2 1/4 to 119 1/4, Ford Motor was up 1 1/2 at 53, General Electric was up 1 at 44 3/4, and Merck was up 1 1/2 at 56 3/4.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose 2.10 to 155.12. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.43 at 309.57.

On Monday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 2.31 points to 2,099.40. Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 10 to 9 on the NYSE, with 769 up, 696 down and 481 unchanged.

Tobacco Officials Skeptical Of Impact

RALEIGH (AP) — The Liggett Group isn't likely to suffer financially from a federal jury's ruling that it was partly liable for the death of smoker Rose Cipollone, some analysts say, but North Carolina tobacco leaders are worried about the effects on the state's premier cash crop.

Liggett, by far the smallest of the six largest U.S. tobacco companies, controls 3.6 percent of the U.S. cigarette market, with sales of $1.2 billion last year.

The company is among Durham's largest employers, with 1,100 workers.

The ruling drew skeptical reactions from tobacco leaders in North Carolina, which produces more than one-third of the leaf grown in the United States and employs 24,500 people in manufacturing cigarettes. Tobacco is the state's leading cash crop, generating $710 million in 1987.

"Naturally it bodes badly for the tobacco industry," said Carl W. Sofley, tobacco administrator for the marketing division of the N.C. Department of Agriculture. But he added, "This does not affect the overall picture as much as the restrictions on smoking."

"I don't anticipate we'll have a lot of concerned growers just yet," Sofley said. "I doubt there will be an immediate reaction."

Sofley said he expects the decision to be appealed and to spur similar suits.

"Obviously, yes, there will be an increase in the number of lawsuits," he said. "But I believe after the appeals it will be years before there is a final decision in this case."

"I'm shocked. I have followed this case, and it did not appear to me the plaintiff had made an adequate case. The lady knew there were hazards," said Carlton Blalock, executive vice president of the Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina.

U.S. Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., chairman of the House subcommittee on tobacco and peanuts, said he did not think the verdict would substantially harm the tobacco industry.

"I don't think it will make much difference one way or another," said Rose.

Noting that the jury found Mrs. Cipollone to be 80 percent at fault, Rose said: "Eighty percent in most people's minds would be pretty close to 100 percent."

But State Rep. Vernon G. James, D-Pasquotank County, chairman of the N.C. House Agriculture Committee said the decision could hasten the decline of cigarette use.

because it manufactured the Chesterfields and L&M's that Mrs. Cipollone smoked before 1966, when Congress ordered health warnings on cigarette packs. Mrs. Cipollone later used brands by Lorillard and Philip Morris, smoking even after having part of her lung removed in 1981.

Liggett attorneys promised an appeal. Cipollone's lawyers said they would ask the judge to overturn the decision not to award posthumous damages to Mrs. Cipollone.

The $35 billion tobacco industry mounted an elaborate defense — one analyst put the cost at $50 million — to avoid a judgment that might unleash a flood of multimillion-dollar lawsuits. Reaction to the verdict, which followed five days of deliberations, focused on its potential impact on hundreds of such cases pending around the nation.

Cipollone's attorneys said the decision showed the tobacco industry is not invincible.

"Any time a jury awards a $400,000 verdict, I don't think you can take it too lightly, particularly in a situation where five years ago people thought we were crazy and when for the past 30 years people have failed," said Marc Z. Edell, Cipollone's lawyer.

Speaking today on CBS-TV's "This Morning" program, Edell said: "This is the first case to be won by the plaintiff. We'll get it better the next time ... a better verdict, a bigger verdict. We'll recover on other claims."

Padres Climbing Up Under McKeon

By The Associated Press
The San Diego Padres can't explain the difference since Jack McKeon took over as manager in words, so they're doing it in deeds. When Larry Bowa was fired as manager on May 28, the Padres were 16-30 and 11½ games behind first-place Los Angeles in the National League West. McKeon, who also is the team's general manager, has won 10 of 16 since taking over and has moved the Padres within eight games of first.

The Padres followed their three-game sweep of the Dodgers over the weekend with a 7-3 victory over the San Francisco Giants on Monday night at Jack Murphy Stadium.

Mark Davis preserved Eric Show's victory with his 10th save in 10 opportunities and also hit a two-run homer. "I haven't changed my style and the club hasn't changed since Jack took over," Davis said. "Larry used me and Jack's using me. Essentially that's all I ask. We're just doing the little things better."

Elsewhere in the NL, it was Pittsburgh 8, Chicago 0; Philadelphia 5, Montreal 2; Houston 6, Atlanta 5; and New York 2, St. Louis 1 in 12 innings. Los Angeles and Cincinnati were not scheduled.

The Padres beat Mike Krukow despite the right-hander's fifth career homer, a one-out shot off Show in the third. Show, 5-6, pitched 7 2-3 innings and allowed four hits before giving way to Davis.

Leading 5-3 in the eighth, Tim Flannery walked and two outs later Davis hit his first major-league homer.

"I didn't even have a bat out there," Davis said. "So I borrowed one from Eric. I hope he lets me keep it. I haven't asked him yet. I have to enjoy this one. You never know when you'll hit another."

With the score tied 2-2, Roberto Alomar led off the bottom of the third with his fifth homer. The Padres added two more in the fifth on Carmelo Martinez's two-run double.

The Giants took a 1-0 lead in the first on Will Clark's 16th homer, but the Padres came back to take a 2-1 advantage in the second.

Keith Moreland, Martinez and Flannery hit consecutive singles for one run, and Martinez scored the second run of the inning when shortstop Matt Williams bobbled Dickie Thon's grounder.

Pirates 8, Cubs 0
Bob Walk continued his pitching mastery over Chicago and Bobby Bonilla and Barry Bonds each hit their 14th home run as Pittsburgh defeated the Cubs at Wrigley Field.

Walk, 7-4, pitched his first complete game and shutout of the season despite a 15-mph wind blowing out. He allowed eight hits, struck out five and walked four to improve his lifetime record against the Cubs to 9-1, including three victories this season.

Phillies 5, Expos 2
Chris James, Luis Aguayo and Mike Young each hit solo home runs as Philadelphia beat Montreal at Veterans Stadium and snappd the Expos' four-game winning streak.

Shane Rawley, 5-6, pitched a seven-hitter and struck out seven en route to his third complete game. Hubie Brooks had three hits for the Expos, including the 1,000th of his career.

Astros 6, Braves 5
Denny Walling's eighth-inning single scored Kevin Bass from second base to break a 5-5 tie as Houston beat Atlanta at the Astrodome.

The victory moved Houston into a virtual first-place tie in the NL West with Los Angeles. The Astros trail the Dodgers by two percentage points.

Juan Agosto, 3-0, got the victory with one inning of relief. Nolan Ryan started for the Astros and struck out eight in seven innings to regain the NL lead from teammate Mike Scott. Ryan has 97 and Scott is second with 96.

Mets 2, Cardinals 1
Switch-hitter Lee Mazzilli broke an 0-for-13 slump as a right-handed hitter when he singled home the winning run in the 12th inning to lift New York over visiting St. Louis and snap the Mets' five-game losing streak.

Flipped Out

St. Louis Cardinal second baseman Luis Alicea flips over New York Met Howard Johnson after forcing him out at second base in the fifth inning at Shea Stadium Monday night. Alicea's throw to first was too late to turn the double play. The Mets won in the 12th inning, 2-1. (AP Laserphoto)

Brown Takes Spurs Post

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Larry Brown will be returning to the city where he was booed frequently in his days as a coach in the old American Basketball Association. He relishes the reunion.

Brown, 47, who led the Kansas Jayhawks to the NCAA title last season, resigned Monday to accept a five-year pact that is expected to pay him $3.5 million, perhaps the highest salary ever paid an NBA coach.

Brown, whose ABA teams played the San Antonio Spurs in the mid-1970s, said he will do everything he can to make the Spurs exciting.

"I think the important thing is the fans supported the team before and hopefully we'll put the type of team out there that they'll want to come back. That's my goal," Brown said.

Brown coached the Carolina Cougars and Denver Nuggets of the ABA and recalls the games against San Antonio were tough.

"It was always a lot of fun to come down to San Antonio and be involved in that atmosphere," Brown said. "When I was with Denver, I know we had one of the greatest rivalries ever."

The Spurs fans were sensational then. I'm just excited that maybe now they will be cheering for me."

Brown also coached the Nuggets after the franchise joined the NBA and made stops at UCLA and with the New Jersey Nets of the NBA before spending the past five years at Kansas.

After the Jayhawks won the NCAA title, Brown accepted and then rejected an offer to return to UCLA, and said he would have been content to stay at Kansas.

However, he said he began to have second thoughts last week after speaking with the Spurs new owner, B.J. "Red" McCombs, and administrative assistant Bob Bass.

"I thought after our season and not going to UCLA that I'd be in Kansas a long time. Never in my wildest dreams did I think I would have an opportunity to come down here and coach," Brown said.

"After talking with Bob about 15 minutes, I knew this was kind of a special situation and that it was one that I would have a difficult time not being a part of."

Brown replaces second-year coach Bob Weiss, who compiled a 59-105 record. Weiss was fired last week by McCombs, who said he wanted a new direction for the team and wants to increase gate revenue, which last year was a league-low $78,000 a game.

Brown said he hopes to give McCombs and the fans what they want.

"I've been fortunate following Bobby," Brown said, referring to Weiss. "I think Bobby set the tone here, got some real quality kids. I know they were well coached, and I'll try to continue what he was wanting to do."

"My main concern is that every night we step out on the court that we play well, that we play unselfishly. And that's what we'll do," he said.

Weiss' firing and Brown's hiring is the fifth NBA coaching change in the Western Conference this year.

Fired earlier were John Wetzel of Phoenix, George Karl of Golden State, Bill Russell of Sacramento and Bill Fitch of Houston.

Brown, who had been mentioned as a possible successor to Weiss, said he declined to talk last week about the rumors because he was concerned about his players at Kansas.

"I'm hopeful that our program (at Kansas) is sound and that they hire somebody else and that it won't be like starting over," he said.

McCombs said he talked to Brown on the day he fired Weiss, but didn't pressure Brown into making a quick decision.

"We initially discussed what my feelings were for San Antonio ... and the significance of this franchise for San Antonio," McCombs said. "We spent a lot of time talking about basketball. We spent a lot of time talking about Larry and his concerns and his feelings for the people in Kansas, the kids he recruited."

Brown will bring with him to San Antonio his three assistant coaches from Kansas — Ed Manning, Alvin Gentry and R.C. Buford. Manning and Gentry came with Brown to San Antonio on Monday. Buford stayed behind to run the summer basketball camp.

"People in Kansas hate to see him go, but are happy for him," Manning said. "He's such a great coach and people really care a lot about him. They understand that this type of opportunity doesn't come around often."

Pitt Bounces Back, Rips Edenton By 12-3 Score

By TIM CHANDLER
Reflector Sports Writer

Pitt County bounced back from a season-opening loss on Sunday to record a 12-3 blowout over Edenton in American Legion baseball action Monday night at Harrington Field.

After falling to Kinston 9-3 Sunday, Post 39 knocked out three first-inning runs Monday to gain control of the game from the start.

The win evened Pitt County's record at 1-1 for the year, while Edenton slipped to 1-3.

Pitt County lashed out 15 hits for the game as pitchers Robbie McDonald, who picked up the win, and Ty Little limited Post 40 to only seven.

Erie Downing suffered the loss on the mound for Post 40. Downing went four innings, giving up seven runs off of eight hits to watch his record fall to 1-1 for the season.

Timmy Moore, who went 2-5, led off the bottom of the first inning with a single to right. After David Leisten was walked, Franz Holscher hit into a fielder's choice scoring Moore.

David Daniels was then walked setting up RBI singles by Little and Jay Surlles to round out the scoring in the inning.

Pitt County struck again for two more runs in the second inning.

McDonald led off with a double to left and scored after Leisten's one-out triple to the centerfield. Leisten, who went 2-4 for the game and scored three runs, then came home when Daniels' hit was mishandled by Post 40 shortstop Nash Long.

Post 39 stretched its lead to 7-0 with two more runs in the third frame.

Chris Christopher scored the first run of the inning. After he had reached on a fielder's choice, he was knocked in by McDonald's second double of the game. Heath Clark, who had singled earlier in the inning, then scored following an infield RBI single by Moore.

Edenton managed to get one run off of McDonald in the fourth inning. Kevin Raynor reached base on a fielder's choice with one out in the inning and managed to score on a fielder's choice shot by Erie Downing.

Post 39 tacked on another run in the bottom half of the seventh inning as Christopher lined a one-out single to right, stole second and scored of a single by Clark.

Post 40 finally chased McDonald from the in the eighth inning with a pair of runs.

With one out, Stan White, Brent Askew and Derrick Rogers loaded the bases with a trio of singles. Downing then beat out an infield single to score the first run, while McDonald issued a base on balls to Todd Hunter bringing in the second run.

Little then moved in from third base to shut down Edenton's rally.

Pitt County added a little insurance in the bottom half of the eighth inning with four more runs. Singles by Holscher, Daniels, Little and Billy Carr, along with a pair of Edenton errors gave Post 39 the break it needed in the inning.

Pitt County will be back in action tonight at 8 p.m. at Harrington Field hosting Snow Hill.

Hornets Win Flip, Get Eighth Pick In Draft

NEW YORK (AP) — The Charlotte Hornets selected the eighth pick in the regular NBA draft June 28 by winning a coin toss at the commissioner's office Monday.

The Miami Heat, losers in the coin flip, will pick first in the expansion draft and ninth in the regular draft.

As the winner of the toss, Charlotte had the option of the eighth pick in the college draft or the No. 1 choice in the expansion draft.

Hornet vice president and general manager Carl Scheer said the decision was influenced by their philosophy to "build a young team through the college draft."

The ceremony, which took under two minutes, was decidedly downscale in comparison to the NBA draft and draft lottery, which are broadcast live on television. Miami Heat managing partner Lewis Schaffel explained the lack of hype by comparing the coin toss to the lotteries which determined the rights to Patrick Ewing and David Robinson.

"We're not talking about Danny Manning and the rest of the field here. No one here can tell you the next eight picks; no one's done more work than us, and we're not sure," Schaffel said.

To The Sports Editor:

Before I had even had a chance to read the Sunday paper, I was asked by several people, "Did you see the picture on the front page of the sports section?" What I heard and what I saw when I read the paper shocked me! I could not believe our newspaper had selected that picture. Of all the good things and accomplishments achieved by the Rose High baseball team, certainly something positive and praiseworthy could have been published. We have the finest baseball team in the state and, as parents and citizens of this city, we are very proud. I desire a special apology for this insult from the Daily Reflector first to Brian Wille who played terrific ball the entire playoff and to his parents who have so faithfully supported this team.

Rose High Ramps, we are very proud of you, coaches and players.

Mrs. Dan P. Powers

To The Sports Editor:

On Sunday morning, my family and I excitedly found the sports section of The Daily Reflector. We are extremely proud of the Rose High School baseball team and coaches, who are probably the best team in the state. They had unfortunately lost in the final game of the championship, but are, nonetheless, champions.

My heart sank when I saw the picture chosen for the front page article—an error. I understand that pictures are used to tell a story, but there's a much better story to tell about this fine team.

These boys have played their hearts out. They sported a 26-0 record going into the championship tournament and we use a photograph of an error for these young men? I was disappointed.

Rose High School baseball team and coaches, you've been great fun to watch; you've played superb baseball. We're very proud of you!!

Sue Aldridge
Greenville

(Editor's note: The picture in question was supplied by the Associated Press through the Charlotte Observer and was the only one supplied, leaving the sports staff with little choice. Errors are as much a part of the game as home runs, and using such a picture, we feel, is better than no picture at all. And we do not feel that it detracts from the team's success.)

Kansas Fans Finally Relieved

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — So, finally, a Larry Brown rumor comes true.

Among their various emotions, many Kansans found a large measure of relief.

"If he had turned this job down, another team would have camped out here with another incredible offer," said Milt Newton, a junior forward and key member of the Kansas basketball team that Brown coached to the 1988 NCAA championship. "It's been going on the whole time he's been here."

Brown's announcement Monday that San Antonio had made him a "once-in-a-lifetime" offer surprised no one. His five eventful years had made Jayhawks fans both happy and insecure, with five NCAA appearances, two Final Fours, Danny Manning, a national championship and what seemed like thousands of "will-he-stay-or-go" crises.

Almost from the day he set foot on Kansas soil, Brown had been the subject of speculation and rumor. And this was not a comfortable thing for a proud school whose basketball tradition was ripening into maturity before John Wooden ever won a game at UCLA.

Month after month, Brown's name was linked at various times to pro and college jobs from New York to Los Angeles, from the Pacific Northwest to the Gulf of Mexico.

Less than a week after his Danny Manning-led Jayhawks beat Oklahoma in the NCAA title game in April, Brown accepted an offer from UCLA for what turned out to be his shortest tenure yet — a few hours. Changing his mind later that day, he remarked, "There's no place like home," and confounded even the most savvy Brown insiders.

"I'm glad it's over," Scooter Barry, a reserve guard, said Monday. "I'm sick of listening to all the rumors and wondering whether they're true or not."

Given Brown's job-changing history, it's not surprising that Kansas athletic director Bob Frederick has been planning for this eventuality more than a year.

"I didn't want to think too much about it until he finally said what his decision was this morning," Frederick said Monday. "Over the last year, I've been thinking about people."

Frederick said he had not contacted anyone on his mental list and chose not to divulge their names. But he and the school administration leave no doubt that Brown's replacement will already be recognized as an outstanding head coach.

"Our head basketball position is one of the most attractive collegiate jobs in America," Chancellor Gene Budig said. "We are in a place to attract another exceptional coach, and that is exactly what we'll do."

Frederick also said he was "98 percent" sure after visiting with Brown last Thursday that he would accept San Antonio's reported $3.5 million offer. Frederick, who became athletic director last year after Brown publicly campaigned for him, said Brown originally declined to talk to Spurs owner B.J. "Red" McCombs.

"But they were persistent and they kept after him," Frederick said. "And I think one of Larry's friends in coaching intervened a little bit and asked Larry just to listen to them. After Mr. McCombs got here, he told Larry he was going to make him an offer he couldn't refuse."

Pistons Forget The Loss, Prepare For 2nd Chance

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The gloom is gone. The Detroit Pistons say they're ready to fight back and are determined not to be doomed in the Dome.

Home was not sweet to the first-time NBA finalists on Sunday. Their shoddy play was there for all 39,188 spectators to see. The Silverdome crowd, the second-largest in championship series history, watched the Los Angeles Lakers humble the Pistons 99-86 and go up 2-1 in the best-of-seven series.

Detroit must win tonight or face the prospect of losing its third consecutive home game, not to mention the series, in Thursday night's fifth game. The Pistons have a good chance if they raise their performances as quickly as they did their spirits.

They also hope guard Isiah Thomas can make a speedy recovery from a lower back bruise sustained late in Sunday's game. He didn't attend practice Monday but said, "This is the BA finals. I'll play with a broken arm if I have to."

That was encouraging to a team that didn't need another setback on top of the loss. "I don't think there's any question our morale was down" after the third game, Detroit coach Chuck Daly said.

Some of them are mad like they were before their 105-93 victory in the series opener. "We read the paper before Game 1 and we watched television before Game 1 and we went into Game 1 with a mission to prove to all the media that we belong here," Detroit forward John Salley said.

That's probably one of the problems now, "Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley said. "We know we have an opportunity to go back to L.A. It could soften you a little bit."

"Hopefully, we won't let up," Lakers guard Magic Johnson said. "That can be a big problem, especially having two more games in the Silverdome. They're a great home team."

"We could go back home down 2-3," Riley said. "That's scary, even if you're going home. ... Detroit is a long ways away from being out of this thing."

Unless Thomas is out of tonight's game. He led Detroit with 28 points, nine assists and four steals Sunday and stayed in the game after falling flat on his back. But he had trouble getting out of bed Monday morning.

"I do know he has an incredible tolerance for pain," Detroit trainer Mike Abdenour said. "I also know he was in great pain."

But Thomas rarely misses practice and his playing status was to be based on his response to treatment with ice, heat and medication.

"I'm pretty sure he'll play," Daly said. "We'd have a hard time playing without him."

"If he can walk, I think he'll play," Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar said. "Isiah's got a lot of heart and courage."

He also handles the ball to set up the Pistons' offense, which has been struggling. While Detroit held an opponent under 100 points for the 10th time in its last 12 playoff games, it failed to score more than 100 for the fifth time in seven games.

The Pistons also were outscored 24-10 from the foul line Sunday and have taken 40 fewer free throws than the Lakers in the series.

"I'm not as concerned about our defense as I was" Sunday night, Daly said. "We need to be a little more efficient on the offensive end. We just have to work on little things."

"We have to go to the basket and get more fouls," he added. "But he admitted that the Lakers' combination of size and quickness clogs the lane and prevents penetration."

That particularly affected forward Adrian Dantley, who was forced to pass rather than drive and scored just 14 points, only two in the second half.

Frequently, his teammates missed open shots. Dantley said the referees also missed some fouls that he said the Lakers committed against him.

"My game is to go to the foul line and they didn't call it," he said. "You just have to live with that. Maybe the next game I'll go to the line 12 times."

Since the Lakers figure to continue double-teaming Dantley, a key to the Pistons' success tonight will be their ability to hit shots off his passes.

Daly said guards Joe Dumars and Vinnie Johnson "have been hesitant to put the ball up. They've got to be more aggressive."

Yanks Pound Clemens In Fenway

By HILLEL ITALIE
Associated Press Writer

The New York Yankees beat Roger Clemens on the ground and in the air. Clemens, a two-time Cy Young Award winner, gave up 15 hits and nine runs, both career highs, as the Yankees defeated the Boston Red Sox 12-6 Monday night. Nine of the 15 hits were groundball singles. Clemens also gave up Jack Clark's three-run homer. "We got bloops, choppers and the blast," said Dave Winfield, who doubled, singled twice and had three RBI. "Maybe he was missing one mile-an-hour on his fastball. Those things happen, but he's still the best pitcher in the league."

Richard Dotson, 7-1, allowed five runs on six hits in six innings. Ceciliano Guante worked three innings to earn his seventh save as the Yankees improved their record to 39-21, the team's best start since 1980.

Jim Rice ended the longest home run drought of his 14-year career with a two-run homer into the bleachers in center in the second inning. Rice, who had last homered Sept. 9 of last season against the Yankees in Boston, hit another two-run shot in the fourth.

The Red Sox were behind 6-5 through five innings, but the Yankees scored three more runs against Clemens in the sixth on a two-run double by Winfield and an RBI single by Santana.

"It wasn't one of his better nights, but they hit a lot of groundballs off him," Boston manager John McNamara said.

Orioles 6, Tigers 4
Mickey Tettleton hit a three-run homer in the ninth inning after a solo shot in the seventh as Baltimore snapped Detroit's five-game winning streak.

Fred Lynn started the decisive Baltimore rally in the ninth with a one-out single and Pete Stanicek ran for him. Guillermo Hernandez, 3-2, who had relieved Walt Terrell after Lynn's single, walked Jim Traber. Tettleton then hit a 1-2 pitch into the lower deck in left field for his fifth homer.

Tom Niedenfuer, 1-1, the fourth Baltimore pitcher, pitched the final 2-3 innings.

The Tigers had taken a 4-3 lead in the eighth when Alan Trammell singled home Gary Pettis.

Indians 8, Blue Jays 6
Cory Snyder's two-run homer and Mel Hall's two-run double highlighted a four-run fourth inning as Cleveland defeated Toronto and snapped its four-game losing streak. With one out in the fourth, Ron Kittle was hit by a pitch from Jim Clancy, 3-8, and Brook Jacoby singled. Hall then drove in both runners with a double to right and Snyder followed with his 14th homer to give the Indians a 6-1 lead.

Bud Black, 3-1, replaced Rich Yett to start the second after Yett complained of a sore rib cage. Black pitched 5 2-3 innings, allowing five runs on five hits. Doug Jones pitched 2 1-3 scoreless innings for his 15th save and 11th in his last 11 appearances.

Rance Mulliniks gave the Blue Jays a 1-0 lead in the bottom of the first with his sixth homer. Kelly Gruber hit a two-run homer off Black in the bottom of the fourth. It was Gruber's eighth homer of the year.

White Sox 4, Twins 1
Melido Perez combined with two relievers on a seven-hitter and Ivan Calderon went 3-for-3 with a home run to lead Chicago past Minnesota.

Perez, 6-2, became the first six-game winner on Chicago's staff. The 22-year-old rookie struck out five, walked two and allowed six hits before being replaced by Rick Horton after Kirby Puckett's leadoff single in the top of the ninth. Horton allowed Gary Gaetti's one-out single and was relieved by Bobby Thigpen, who struck out the next two batters to earn his 12th save in 14 opportunities.

Gary Redus also homered as the White Sox won for the sixth time in nine games. The Twins lost for only the sixth time in their last 22 games.

Les Straker, 2-4, was the loser.

Brewers 3, Mariners 1
Bill Wegman combined with Dan Plesac on an eight-hitter for his first career victory against Seattle and Robin Yount drove in three runs to lead Milwaukee.

Wegman, in his second start since coming off the disabled list June 6 after a bout with elbow tendinitis, beat the Mariners for the first time after five losses. Wegman, 5-5, allowed five singles in eight innings, walked none, struck out two and allowed only one runner to reach third.

Plesac gave up Mickey Brantley's RBI double in the top of the ninth but earned his 14th save in 16 opportunities.

Yount hit a sacrifice fly in the first and a two-run double in the fourth.

Royals 5, Angels 3
George Brett went 3-for-4 to drive in two runs, and Floyd Bannister snapped a personal three-game losing streak as Kansas City won at California for the Royals' 10th victory in their last 11 games.

Bannister, 7-5, allowed five hits, walked none and struck out three in five innings. Steve Farr, the third Kansas City pitcher, worked two hitless innings and struck out three for his fourth save.

Brett's first-inning single off Chuck Finley, 4-8, scored Gary Thurman, who had singled and advanced to second on a groundout.

Following Wally Joyner's single in the second, Bob Boone gave the Angels a 2-1 lead with his first homer of the season and the 100th of his career.

With former major-league infielder Ray Boone's 151 homers, the Boones became the only father-and-son combination aside from Gus and Buddy Bell to have 100 homers each.

UNC Recruit Short On Credits

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Kenny Williams, this year's top basketball recruit at North Carolina, did not graduate last week with his high school class.

Williams, a 6-9 forward from Elizabeth City, did not have the 20 credits required for graduation by the North Carolina Board of Education and is considered to still be a senior at Northeastern High School.

Carl Harris, basketball coach at Northeastern, said, "Kenny did not meet the criteria for graduation. He came close, but he just didn't have enough credits."

Harris said he could not say how much work Williams needs to earn a diploma. The Williams family has asked that no other information be released, Harris said.

Harris said published reports that Williams failed the state competency test required for graduation were not true.

 Do you reason logically at the bridge table? If so, you should come up with the winning line on this hand.

When the ten wins, repeat the finesse and cash the ace of hearts for a club discard.
 Is it time to lead a trump? Not yet! If you do, and the cards lie as in the diagram, West will win the jack, cash the ace of clubs and lead his last heart. East will ruff with the king and you will lose three trumps and the ace of clubs.
 How do you avoid this catastrophe? Simple. First lead the table's last heart and discard your king of clubs!
 Therefore, you cannot afford to draw trumps before tackling hearts. It is quite likely that East holds a high trump, and his club return will defeat you before you even get started. So after winning the first trick in hand lead the ten of hearts. Since it is immaterial whether or not West covers, let's presume he does not.

clubs! No matter who wins the trick, when you regain the lead you will be able to lead trumps, and limit your losers to two trumps and a heart.

Doctor Says California Man Has Become AIDS 'Super Spreader'

Experts Say Side Effects Are Rare In Most Vaccines

By MALCOLM RITTER AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A U.S. Supreme Court ruling on vaccine liability focused on the only common vaccine that can cause the disease it is intended to prevent, experts say.

The court ruled Monday that the federal government may be forced to pay damages for polio resulting from the oral vaccine for that disease.

But in general, side effects from vaccines are rare, and "it's far better to be vaccinated than to get the disease," said G. Scott Giebink, professor of pediatrics at the University of Minnesota Medical School.

Here are common vaccines and their side effects:

— Oral polio vaccine, which is given twice in the first year of life with boosters in the second year and just before entering school. It has no side effects other than rare cases of polio paralysis, which occurs in about one out of every 3.2 million doses of vaccine, Giebink said.

The paralytic reaction is most common in people with hampered immune systems, either the vaccinated child or a family member of a vaccinated child, he said. The weakened virus used in the vaccine can pass to a family member, possibly causing trouble if that person's immune system is weakened, he said.

— Diphtheria-Tetanus-Pertussis vaccine, given at ages two months, four months, six months, 15 months and at entry to school. Pertussis is whooping cough.

About one in 110,000 children who get the DTP vaccine develop a brain dysfunction that can include seizures. It is usually temporary. But about one in 310,000 vaccinated children get permanent damage that includes mental retardation or movement difficulties, according to the Centers for Disease Control.

Whether those problems are caused by the vaccine is controversial, said Samuel Katz, chairman of the pediatrics department at the Duke University Medical Center.

Giebink said they appear to be linked to the vaccine because its more mild side effects may lead to a doctor's examination, which uncovers the serious problem that may go unnoticed before the inoculation.

The mild side effects include muscle soreness and swelling at the injection site, which occur in about half the injections, and fever, in about one-fifth of immunizations, he said. About one in 2,000 children develops a fever and convulsions, without lasting effects, he said.

— Haemophilus influenzae type b vaccine, given at age 18 months. The disease being prevented is a potentially fatal infection that can cause brain damage, pneumonia and other effects.

The vaccine has no serious side effects, Giebink said. Fewer than 1 percent of recipients get a fever, and one in five have arm soreness or tenderness.

— Measles-Mumps-Rubella vaccine, given at age 15 months. No serious side effects are known, although in very rare cases a spell of fever and convulsions can follow the shot, Giebink said.

Some children get a rash or slight fever lasting a few days. About one in 50 teen-age or adult women experience a short-lived aching or swelling of joints, he said.

— Influenza vaccine, given mostly to people in high-risk groups, such as those with chronic lung or heart disease, and the elderly. Despite publicity about a paralysis called Guillain-Barre syndrome associated with swine flu vaccines in 1976, flu vaccines in general cause no serious side effects, Giebink and Katz said.

By DANIEL Q. HANEY AP Science Writer

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — A southern California man doctors call the "super spreader" has infected at least four women with AIDS and is still having sexual encounters, a new report says.

"He has infected four out of five of his partners that we have seen, but we don't know all of his partners," Dr. Nancy Padian of the University of California at Berkeley said at the Fourth International Conference on AIDS.

She said the "super spreader" — a hemophilic infected through contaminated blood products — is in his 20s, lives in southern California and is still healthy with no signs of acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Ms. Padian outlined the case as part of a study of infection rates among women who engage in risky sex.

"He is now using condoms," she said. "We asked him to tell" women about his AIDS infection, "but we can't guarantee he is doing that."

The AIDS virus attacks the body's immune system and renders victims prone to a wide variety of infections and cancers. It most often transmitted through sexual contact.

It can also be spread by transfusions of tainted blood products, through the sharing of contaminated hypodermic needles or syringes by drug abusers, and from mother to child at or before birth.

Among other studies presented Monday:

— Dr. Anthony Adams of the U.S. Centers for Disease Control said that between 20 and 25 health care workers around the world have become infected with AIDS as a result of on-the-job exposure to the virus.

"We are now almost a decade since the transmission of the virus became reasonably common," he said. "We are still looking at a very small number of people who get infected in the health-care setting."

— Dr. Samuel Broder of the U.S. National Cancer Institute said that the experimental anti-AIDS drug CD4 "still looks very promising," despite concerns that it may not protect against the spread of AIDS to the brain.

— Dr. Jay Levy of the University of California at San Francisco said it appears that some of the body's own antibodies actually help the AIDS virus get into blood cells. He said vaccine developers should be careful not to accidentally aid the virus by prompting the body to make antibodies that the microbe needs.

— Researchers from three countries presented six cases in which babies caught the AIDS virus while breast feeding. They said the risk appears to be especially high if the mother becomes infected with the virus after she gives birth.

— Dr. James Goedert of the National Cancer Institute said the approximately 1 million Americans already carrying the virus are growing more infectious, so they are more likely to spread the disease to uninfected people.

— Dr. Timothy Dondero reported the first results of the CDC's efforts to learn how many Americans are infected with the AIDS virus by testing blood from hospital patients. In testing in six hospitals, three of every 1,000 people were infected, but the rate does not appear to be increasing.

— Dr. Bosenge N'Galy of the Zaire Department of Public Health said the infection rate also seems to have stabilized in Kinshasa, the nation's capital. It has remained at about 7 percent among pregnant women since 1985.

— Dr. Hiroaki Mitsuya of the National Cancer Institute said that dextran sulfate, a drug used to lower cholesterol, may block AIDS infection.

In the California study, Ms. Padian said the "super spreader" was somehow more infectious than most carriers of the virus, perhaps because he was infected with a more contagious variety of the AIDS virus.

Dr. George Seague III of Boston's Department of Health and Hospitals said, "It's very feasible that this phenomenon might occur. Some strains of the virus might be more readily spread."

Ms. Padian said one of the infected women had sex with the man 704 times, one 300 times and one 15 times. The fourth did not know how many contacts she'd had.

She said her research on other women shows a tremendous variation in infectivity from person to person.

Seven women studied got the virus after less than 100 sexual encounters with infected men, while 19 others remained free of the virus after more than 1,000 exposures.

U.S. Tests Show Drug May Help Block AIDS

By PAUL RAEBURN AP Science Editor

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — A drug used for 20 years to lower cholesterol and prevent blood clotting may help block AIDS infection, according to preliminary tests in a U.S. government laboratory.

The drug, called dextran sulfate, protected immune system cells from AIDS infection for more than two weeks in the laboratory, said Hiroaki Mitsuya of the U.S. National Institutes of Health. He reported his findings Monday at the Fourth International Conference on AIDS.

The first phase of human trials of the drug has just been completed at San Francisco General Hospital, where doctors say it is too soon to know whether it will perform as well in patients as it does in the laboratory.

"For the most part, the drug was well tolerated" by the experimental subjects, said Dr. Donald Abrams, director of the study.

Some of the 30 patients who received varying doses of the drug for up to eight weeks showed signs of liver abnormalities, a lowering of white blood cell count and hyperexcitability — but there were no major side effects, he said.

The study was designed only to determine whether the drug was safe to give to AIDS patients, Abrams said. It is not approved for use in the United States, but it has been used in Japan and elsewhere as an anticoagulant and cholesterol-lowering agent, Abrams said.

The researchers did notice, however, that the drug produced slight elevation in the number of T4 cells in the subjects, Abrams said. These cells are controllers of the body's immune system and they are a principal target of the AIDS virus, which kills them.

Many AIDS victims are obtaining dextran sulfate through illicit channels and taking it on their own, which could be risky, Abrams said.

Many of these patients are also taking AZT, which can extend life. The problem is that AZT is broken down in the liver and dextran sulfate might disrupt liver function, Abrams said, thus aggravating potentially serious side effects associated with AZT.

Mitsuya, who works in the laboratory of Dr. Samuel Broder, one of the leaders in the search for anti-AIDS drugs, said the laboratory studies suggest dextran sulfate blocks the first step in AIDS infection — the attachment of the AIDS virus to the outside of the T4 cells.

Combinations of dextran sulfate and AZT suppress AIDS infection in the laboratory even better than either drug does alone, Mitsuya said.

The virus of acquired immune deficiency syndrome attacks the body's immune system and leaves victims susceptible to a wide variety of infections and cancers.

AIDS is most often transmitted through sexual contact. Other means of transmission include transfusions of tainted blood or blood products and the sharing of contaminated hypodermic needles or syringes by drug abusers. AIDS can also be passed from mother to child at or before birth.

Stronger Aspirin Warning Issued

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration said Monday it has published a final regulation requiring a permanent and stronger warning label against giving aspirin to children and teen-agers with chicken pox or flu because of the danger of Reye syndrome.

The new warning, a modification of one already required on aspirin and aspirin-containing drugs, says: "WARNING: Children and teen-agers should not use this medicine for chicken pox or flu symptoms before a doctor is consulted about Reye syndrome, a rare but serious illness reported to be associated with aspirin."

The new part of the warning is the last phrase: "reported to be associated with aspirin."

The stronger warning is based on a Public Health Service study that found a significant association between Reye syndrome and taking aspirin during chicken pox or flu, the FDA said.

House OKs Tighter Controls On PCBs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation to close a loophole in the regulation of polychlorinated biphenyls, the highly toxic chemicals whose manufacture was banned in 1976, was approved Monday by the House.

The bill, sent to the Senate by voice vote, would require brokers, the middlemen who arrange for the transportation and destruction of PCBs, to be registered, keep records and demonstrate financial responsibility.

Rep. Thomas Luken, D-Ohio, said the legislation is a response to reports that unregulated PCB brokers have handled the chemicals improperly and in some instances have gone bankrupt, leaving power companies and communities to clean up PCB storage sites.

Nell Carter Gets Star Billing Again

By J. WYNN ROUSUCK
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

BALTIMORE — Nell Carter is getting the star treatment. After rehearsals of the revival of "Ain't Misbehavin'" in New York, she traveled to Baltimore via chauffeur-driven limousine, accompanied by a hairdresser and a press agent.

One morning she has her hair done in one of the two bedrooms of her Baltimore hotel suite while being interviewed before a TV appearance and a news conference.

All this fuss is part of the promotion for the 10th anniversary production of "Ain't Misbehavin'," the musical tribute to Fats Waller that opens a two-week run at the Mechanic Theater here Wednesday. After Baltimore, the show goes to the National Theatre in Washington for six weeks; it is scheduled to open on Broadway on Aug. 15.

All five original cast members are returning to "Ain't Misbehavin'," but Miss Carter will be the sole performer with billing above the title.

Miss Carter's star has not always shined so brightly; the decade since the debut of "Ain't Misbehavin'" has been a turbulent one for the 39-year-old actress.

In 1978 she won a Tony Award for her role in "Ain't Misbehavin'," but she soon gained a reputation for being difficult to work with. For six seasons she starred in her own NBC-TV series, "Gimme a Break." At the same time, she was struggling with diabetes and an addiction to cocaine, both of which she now has learned to control.

But 10 years after she first stuck a flower in her hair and won the hearts of theatergoers with her rendition of "Honeysuckle Rose," the Nell Carter who is returning to "Ain't Misbehavin'" seems happy, adjusted and self-assured; in short, she has grown up.

"I'm going into 'Ain't Misbehavin'" older, wiser, sober and alert," she insists. "I had a pretty rough life. I got caught up in the star syndrome. It's not something I'm proud of, but it's something that I'm glad is over."

Her weight — which fluctuated from 129 pounds in the days of "Ain't Misbehavin'" to 185 during "Gimme a Break" — is now somewhere in between; the 4-foot-11-inch actress is comfortable with her size.

"Proportionally I have a great body, and I know what to do with it," she says. "I have lost weight, but I'm not trying. I stopped trying about three years ago. It's not worth it to me. I like myself."

Miss Carter has not always liked herself, however. In 1978 she was the only cast member of "Ain't Misbehavin'" to win a Tony Award. In retrospect, she does not think she handled the rivalry well. "On Broadway, for people who say that I was difficult, I will not fight that. I possibly was awful because I was in my little drug bit," she admits. "A lot of (the tension within the cast) was my fault, my inability to accept the good things without feeling guilty."

Miss Carter left the Broadway company after six months. The immediate reason was to have her tonsils removed, but she never returned to Broadway, choosing instead to join up with the production for extended runs in Los Angeles and San Francisco. In 1982 the original cast was briefly reunited to televise the show for NBC. By then Miss Carter had her own series.

Rumors of her difficult reputation carried over to her series, but, she says, "I was not a problem on 'Gimme a Break.' By that time I was in a daze." The network enrolled her in a drug-treatment program.

Since then Miss Carter has voluntarily sought treatment — when "I needed to have it drilled in my head" — and she continues to consult a psychiatrist. She says she talks openly about her addiction in hopes that her example will help young people.

Mickey Gilley Breaks His Ties To 'Urban Cowboy' Music Fad

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Singer Mickey Gilley, whose earthy Texas nightclub was the focus of the movie "Urban Cowboy," hasn't set foot in the honky-tonk for two years.

And he hasn't regularly worn a cowboy hat for three years. Eight years after John Travolta and co-star Debra Winger launched a fad known as "cowboy chic," Gilley has broken the ties that symbolized him as the country music singer most associated with the craze.

The 52-year-old performer is in litigation over the nightclub in Pasadena, Texas, where most of the 1980 movie was filmed. He claims an associate has let the cavernous club get run down.

"I drive by the club all the time, but I've not been in it for two years," Gilley said in a telephone interview. "The business has practically died. The parking lot used to be full; now you can count the cars. I think it's just a matter of time until it goes under."

And his cowboy hat, part of the Western attire that became fashionable because of the popularity of the movie, has seen its last roundup.

RAMBO AND REFUGEE — Actor Sylvester Stallone and 22-year-old East Berlin nurse Liane Suendermann look over the Berlin wall at Checkpoint Charlie during a promotion for Stallone's "Rambo III" movie. Miss Suendermann escaped into the West in May by hiding in a compacted car to leave East Berlin. (AP Laserphoto)

"I've got hair; there's nothing to cover up," Gilley said. "I don't feel like a cowboy hat is something that's going to make or break my career. People had fun with that era and I did too. People wonder where's my hat, but I haven't worn one now for three years. People just haven't seen me as much."

As one of the country music stars who sang in the movie, Gilley shot to the top in show business on the tails of "cowboy chic."

He appeared in "The Dukes of Hazzard," "The Fall Guy," "Hollywood Squares" and "Fantasy Island."

His concert fee rose from $5,000 to $25,000. One night he was paid $50,000 for 90 minutes to perform at Billy Bob's nightclub in Fort Worth, Texas, a club that has since closed as the fad tailed off.

Gilley had six straight No. 1 country hits in the early 1980s when the movement peaked. His hits included "Stand by Me," "True Love Ways" and "Don't the Girls All Get Prettier at Closing Time."

Now, the era is a memory just like the mechanical bulls featured in the movie.

"Everything has its day," he said,

'Hooperman' Officer Makes TV Career Out Of Handcuffs

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For Felton Perry of ABC's "Hooperman," being an actor has meant putting a lot of handcuffs on people — when he wasn't wearing them himself.

Perry plays gruff Inspector Clarence McNeil in the ABC comedy starring John Ritter as Harry Hooperman, a plainclothes San Francisco police officer.

Perry was also a police lieutenant in a recurring role on NBC's "L.A. Law." He was Dirty Harry's partner in the movie "Magnum Force." In "Walking Tall," he was a deputy sheriff. He was a prison warden in "Weeds" and a policeman in several TV pilots.

Perry also spent considerable time playing men on the other side of the law. He was the terrorist who kidnaped Patty Hearst in "Get Patty Hearst." He was a villain in "Stingray," a vicious drug dealer on "Hill Street Blues" and a criminal on "Cagney & Lacey."

"People see me either as a cop or a crook," said Perry. "I spend a lot of time putting on handcuffs or wearing them. Or saying 'Freeze!' or throwing my hands up."

On "Hooperman," Perry said, "I'm like Hooperman's best friend on the show. He's a guy he can level with. A guy who looks to him and says, 'What's next?' They go out on cases together, but Harry goes out with everyone."

Barbara Bosson plays Capt. C.Z. Stern, who runs the department, and the name describes her authoritarian approach.

"She sees through all of us," Perry said. "We've all been on the carpet for the chances we took. Under Harry's guidance, of course."

Last season, Perry had a recurring role as police Lt. Lester Tuttle in "L.A. Law" in the episodes in which Alfre Woodard, who won an Emmy for her performance, played a leukemia victim who was raped and made to seem the aggressor at the trial.

His only other series was ABC's "Matt Lincoln," a short-lived 1970 show about a hotline for troubled teen-agers. It starred Vince Edwards.

In recent years, Perry has devoted most of his time to television and theatrical motion pictures and occasional guest roles on TV.

"In 'Robocop' I got to play a character I've never played before," he said. "I didn't play a cop. Fortunately, the director was Dutch and didn't have a strong Hollywood connection and I'd known the producer for years. I played a member of the management team that controls 'Robocop.'"

"I'm this wimp, a yes-man who agrees with everyone. As it turns out, I'm one of the few people to survive and I become the No. 2 man in the management team. That role helped people see me differently."

He just completed a role as a psychiatric therapist in the movie comedy "Checking Out." He counsels Jeff Daniels about dying, then promptly dies himself. That's not the end of his role in the film, however.

Perry also recently closed an eight-week run of the play "An American Tract," which he produced. He's also the author of a play called "Or," about wounded Vietnam veterans in a special rehabilitation ward of a Veterans hospital, plus two other plays, "By the bi and bye" and "Sleep No More."

Perry grew up in Chicago and quit school to join the Marine Corps when he was 17. His fluency in Spanish landed him a job as an interpreter while stationed in Spain. He also spent time in Japan, the Philippines and Lebanon.

He obtained his high school diploma while in the Marines, and afterward got his degree at Roosevelt University. While in college he was on the judo team and qualified for the 1964 Olympics tryouts.

"I really started performing when I was 2," he said. "My great aunt took me around to churches where I performed for pennies and peppermint sticks."

"When I was 10 or 11 I really liked this girl and we'd read fairy tales together. She'd be the damsel in distress and I'd be Prince Charming. The kids would gather around and watch and say, 'Go on, kiss her!'"

After college, he worked in the post office and acted in community theater productions. A television commercial got him into the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists. He was in a production of "MacBird," which got him into Actors Equity, and his first movie, "Medium Cool," got him into the Screen Actors Guild.
