House Panel OKs Robeson Judgeship Measure

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill approved by a House committee would force Gov. Jim Martin to appoint the senior resident Superior Court Judge in Robeson County, but the bill has the support of only one of the four members in the county delegation.

The other three members of the delegation support a Senate bill which would name Robeson County District Attorney Joe Freeman Britt as the senior judge. Britt is unopposed in the November elections and is virtually guaranteed to win the judgeship.

The senior resident judge sets trial dates, appoints public defenders and magistrates and sets bail policy. Critics say Britt has fought creation of a public defender system in Robeson and should not be allowed to make the appointment.

Rep. Sidney Locks, D-Robeson, a black, told reporters a tri-racial coalition in his county had endorsed the House bill at a weekend meeting.

"The longer we let (the situation) fester, the worse it is back home," Locks said, adding that the bill faced uncertain prospects in the House. "We've been praying; now it's time to start counting."

He said he would continue negotiating with other members of his legislative district in a search for a mutually acceptable arrangement.

Reps. Dan DeVane, D-Hoke, and Pete Hasty, D-Robeson, support the Senate bill, sponsored by Sen. David Parnell, D-Robeson.

DeVane said Britt was first in line for the senior resident judgeship and had a right to the job.

"It's a matter of fairness," DeVane said. "I feel that Mr. Britt went through the process and acted properly."

The bill approved by the House Judiciary II Committee Tuesday would require Martin to choose between Britt and another judge whom Martin would appoint before Oct. 16. The governor has said he will appoint a black or Indian to the second judgeship, which the bill would create.

The measure also would establish a public defender's office in racially troubled Robeson County and require that the current senior resident judge, Craig Ellis, appoint the official.

In March, Indian leader Julian Pierce was slain in what authorities called a domestic dispute. Pierce was running against Britt for the Democratic nomination for a Superior Court judgeship the Legislature created last year — one of nine established in predominantly black or Indian areas in an effort to increase the number of minority judges in North Carolina.

Because Pierce was killed after the election filing period ended, Britt is unopposed for the judgeship created last year.

Legislative leaders agreed to create another judgeship this year to ward off demands for a special legislative session to reopen the filing period and let another minority run against Britt.

The House bill was referred to the Appropriations Committee.

In other legislative action:

The Senate tentatively approved 48-0 a bill to create a corporation to loan money to new and expanding businesses in rural counties.

A final vote on the measure is scheduled for Wednesday — the deadline for approval of one portion that would enable local governments to refinance federal loans and reap windfalls that will total $70 million in North Carolina.

Under the bill, which already has been approved by the House, state government would invest up to $20 million in the North Carolina Enterprise Corp., while banks and other investors are expected to help the corporation raise another $80 million.

Retail Sales Posted Tiny May Gain

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail sales, held back by lagging car buying, rose a scant 0.1 percent in May, after a relatively rare decline in April, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said that sales increased $119 million last month to a seasonally adjusted $131.9 billion.

It was the sixth increase in seven months, but it was the second consecutive weak report. The figures are not adjusted to take inflation into account.

Most economists had been expecting a slightly stronger 0.4 percent gain. Initial sales statistics are revised heavily in subsequent months, however, and the May increase could prove to be stronger.

Analysts said the preliminary May report, evidence of weak consumer demand, could somewhat ease the fears of those who believe inflationary pressures are building in the economy.

The May increase followed a 0.4 percent decline in April, revised up-

Nation Suffers Earnings Deficit

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The deficit in the broadest measure of U.S. foreign trade widened in the first three months of the year to $39.8 billion as the country suffered its first deficit in investment earnings in 30 years.

The deficit in the current account, which had narrowed to $33.5 billion in the fourth quarter of 1987, jumped a sharp 18.6 percent from January through March in something of a surprise to analysts, who had been expecting further improvement in this trade measurement.

The current account is the most important of all the trade statistics released by the government because it covers not only trade in merchandise but also trade in the so-called services category, which reflects primarily the flow of investment earnings between countries.

For 16 of the last 17 years, the country has run deficits in the merchandise trade category. But the current account registered a surplus as recently as 1981 because Americans' earnings on overseas investments were enough to offset the merchandise deficits.

In this decade, however, Americans have handed over billions of dollars to foreigners in exchange for imported goods, transforming the country from the world's largest creditor, a distinction it held in 1982, to the world's largest debtor nation.

That means that foreigners now own more in U.S. investments than Americans hold in foreign investments. While America became a net

GUC OKs $92 Million Budget

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Utilities Commission gave final approval Wednesday to a $92.01 million budget for the fiscal year 1988-1989 which begins July 1.

The budget includes $73.68 million for the electric fund, $7.25 for water, $3.51 for sewer, and $7.55 million for gas.

Purchasing electrical power for the year is expected to cost $58.28 million, up from $48 million this fiscal year. The electric fund budget includes some $1.8 million for turnover to the city of Greenville, up about $100,000 from last year.

Commission Chairman James Ebron Jr. said that this budget was presented to the Greenville City Council on June 2 and a public hearing was held June 6. The board recommended inclusion of the budget into the city budget.

The board was told that the utilities building being renovated for office space has been certified free of asbestos. "We're where we thought we were two years ago," Malcolm Green, general manager, said.

The renovations contractor has an agreement to have the first floor finished by Nov. 28, but expects now to be through by Nov. 1.

It was reported that a peak load time occurred May 31 between 5 and 6 p.m. and GUC's load management system went into full operation. During that time, using water heater demand reduction, voltage adjustment, water plant load reduction, generators at the Procter and Gamble Company, and air conditioning demand reduction, an estimated $149,647 was saved for customers.

Other load management operations for the month included 2 hours 18 minutes on May 16 and three hours 12 minutes on May 23. Some 15 additional load management switches were installed during the month.

Approval was given to accept the Fred Webb Elevator Company's plan to install generators which can be used to reduce power demand during peak load times. The Webb Company is footing the $150,000 bill for its own generator for this purpose.

Rental Towel and Uniform Service was awarded a contract for uniforms, based on its low bid of $39,868.80.

Asplundh Tree Expert Company was awarded a $45,702.80 contract by tree trimming for 26 weeks, based on its being the lower bidder.

J.H. Hudson Company of Greenville was the low bidder for removal of foundations from several unused substations. Its bid was $11,000.

A bid of $6,129.99 was accepted from Twin Lakes Campground for a 1965 25-ton crane.

It was reported that a public auction was held May 14 to dispose of surplus equipment. Some $8,880 was raised.

Contracts for transformers approved included $55,600 to Eastern Electric Supply Inc., $12,760 to Mill-Power Supply Company; $13,862 to Hesco Inc., and $9,710 to Hesco. A $105,720 contract for cable was approved for Eastern Electric Supply.

Speakers Call For Increased School Funds

By STUART SAVAGE

More money for public schools was the theme of a public hearing on the proposed 1988-1989 Pitt County budget Tuesday. Of the 47 speakers, only three voiced support for other budget items.

The 44 school supporters urged county commissioners to fund such expansion budget items as: increased supplements for teachers and principals, money for extra pay for teachers such as coaches, who perform extra duty; intramural athletics, start-up money for a soccer program; staff development; a drug and alcohol education program; a teacher recruiter, additional instruc-

Driver Killed

LIZZIE — A Greene County woman was killed and her husband seriously injured when their car pulled into the path of a tractor-trailer at the Lizzie intersection of N.C. 258-13 and N.C. 123 Tuesday, according to police.

Ruth Jones Vandiford, 87, of Route 1, Snow Hill, driver of the car, was reported killed in the 10 a.m. accident. Her passenger, J. Roy Vandiford, 85, was taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital, where he was listed today in serious condition.

After hitting the car, the truck, driven by Herman William Heath of Route 4, Kinston, apparently careened onto the grounds of Murphrey's Mini-Mart and struck gasoline pumps in front of the store. Witnesses, including Virginia Johnson, a clerk in the store, said Heath "did a terrific job to keep his truck from demolishing the store building."

Heath was not injured in the accident. The Vandiford automobile was reportedly knocked approximately 110 feet from the intersection and the truck traveled another 160 feet before jackknifing into gas pumps.

Rescue units from Maury and Snow Hill and fire equipment from Maury and Castoria responded to the accident call. Firemen washed down the area where gasoline was spilled. It took about one hour for rescuers to free Mrs. Vandiford's body from the car.

An estimated $10,000 damage was done to the Vandiford car and the truck, owned by Standard Trucking Company, sustained approximately $15,000 damage.

FATALITY — A man was killed in a motorcycle accident this morning on N.C. 43 south, about one mile north of Bells Fork, after he attempted to outrun a Greenville police officer in a patrol car, police said. The victim had not been identified this morning. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis)

School Teachers To Help At Development School

ECU News Bureau
When the third annual Legislators' School for Youth Development opens next week on the campus of East Carolina University, 150 school children from rural districts will begin three weeks of encountering new daily experiences and having fun.

So will many of the faculty and school leaders.

For the first time since the summer program was launched in 1986, a number of teachers selected from school districts across eastern North Carolina will participate as leaders of various phases of the curriculum.

"I'm looking forward to having fun and learning from all of the students," says Freda M. Lee, a teacher from North Lenoir High School in LaGrange, N.C., who will lead community service seminars.

"The school will provide students with an opportunity to broaden their horizons, and gain a better perspective as to their roles as leaders in today's society," Mrs. Lee said. "I am hoping to grow as a leader and teacher professionally."

A teacher for nine years, Mrs. Lee is one of 16 teachers who were nominated for the Legislators' School by superintendents and principals. They will serve during both of the three-week sessions beginning June 19 and July 10.

John T. Spagnolo, a teacher for three years in the Hyde and Beaufort County schools, says he figures "to have fun" and "gain fond memories and renewed faith in our future leaders" by participating.

Spagnolo will be involved in environmental awareness programs and extended day trips for the 300 youngsters who will attend the two sessions. He said the purpose of the Legislators' School for children from rural, often isolated areas of the state is "to create awareness and acceptance of social differences."

Billie R. Lennon of Greenville, a history teacher at J.H. Rose High School, said she enjoys working with young people.

"It is essential to build a core leadership group in our communities," Mrs. Lennon said. She will be involved in leadership programs.

"I believe that students must recognize the characteristics that are involved in leadership," she said. "Through this recognition they can appreciate themselves much more and perhaps see that they can contribute in a positive manner in their communities."

She said, "I hope to help young people develop their own sense of worth and value and help them see their place in contributing to society."

Gazelia Payne Carter of Hope Mills, N.C., a teacher at Westover Junior High in Cumberland County, sees 'leadership skills being crucial to society.'

"These skills are not innate, but they should be taught," she said. "In taking on the task of presenting activities and information to introduce and strengthen leadership skills, those involved have an opportunity to give communities a positive start on the future."

Mrs. Carter will work with basic communications seminar programs for the two sessions.

"I enjoy widening my horizons through interactions with others," she said. She said the Legislators'

School program would enable students to develop "strong decision-making skills and confidence and determination to succeed." The activities will be "challenging and interesting," she said.

A teacher of language arts and social studies for 22 years, Elizabeth Roberson of Williamston Junior High School said "this school will reach those students who did not have the advantage of some of the special programs in their schools. Many of these students have good leadership potential which we hope to develop."

A similar Legislators' School for 300 students in western North Carolina is conducted simultaneously at Western Carolina University in Cullowhee, N.C.

Vietnam Says It Will Pull Troops

By PETER ENG
Associated Press Writer
BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam announced today it will withdraw its military command from Cambodia on June 30 as part of a planned pullout of about 50,000 troops by the end of the year.

A statement from the Ministry of National Defense said the command and supporting units were returning home this month under an agreement with the pro-Vietnamese Cambodian government.

"The command itself, (along) with the commanding body, shall leave Kampuchea (Cambodia) on June 30, 1988," the statement said.

It said the remaining Vietnamese forces then would be placed under Cambodian government command in its battles against guerrilla groups.

The brief statement was carried by the official Radio Hanoi, monitored in Bangkok.

A similar announcement from the Cambodian Ministry of National Defense said a farewell ceremony for the Vietnamese would be held June 30 in Cambodia's capital of Phnom Penh.

The Cambodian communique was carried by the official SPK news agency.

Vietnam announced May 26 that it will withdraw 50,000 troops by year's end as part of its plan for a complete pullout by 1990. Sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, say some troops already have left.

The United States estimates that there are 120,000 Vietnamese troops in Cambodia fighting 50,000 or more guerrillas backed by China, Thailand and other Asian and Western countries.

Vietnam also said the Cambodian government it installed a 1978 invasion could take over the war against the guerrillas, although Western diplomats doubt it.

The United States says that 15,000 to 20,000 Vietnamese troops returned home last November and calls it the only genuine withdrawal of the six annual pullouts Vietnam claims to have made since 1982.

A senior Western diplomat based in Hanoi, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Vietnam was seeking to ensure the Khmer Rouge do not return to power in Cambodia.

The Khmer Rouge communists massacred hundreds of thousands of Cambodians during their 1975-78 rule, which ended when Vietnam invaded. The Khmer Rouge is now the largest of the three guerrilla groups.

The diplomat said he expected Vietnam to raise the issue at informal peace talks planned for Jakarta, Indonesia, in July. The talks will be the first to bring together the Cambodian government and the three guerrilla groups, and at a second stage of discussions, Vietnam and other concerned countries.

"They will want (at the talks) an absolute guarantee of a cessation of support for Khmer Rouge military activity," the diplomat said.

Spanish Treasures Sold

By RONALD POWERS
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — A treasure trove of Spanish gold, silver and emeralds that had lain unnoticed for centuries in the waters off Florida attracted the rich, the famous and the curious at an auction that brought $2.5 million.

Before Tuesday's sale, treasure hunter Mei Fisher stood on the sidewalk outside Christie's auction house greeting passers-by, posing for photographs and wearing around his neck pounds of gold chain he took from the ocean floor.

"I want to show how safe it is in New York," the former Indiana chicken farmer and California dive shop operator said before running upstairs for the auction.

The auction was the first of a two-day sale of booty recovered from a pair of Spanish treasure galleons that went down in a hurricane off the Florida Keys in 1622.

Most of the treasure — which included gold and silver bars, jewelry and artifacts as well as coins, emeralds and 17th-century navigation instruments — came from the galleons of the Nuestra Senora de Atocha and her sister ship, the Santa Margarita.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Line Up, Oddballs

Why Not Replace The President Too?

Soothsayers, wizards, sorcerers, magicians, conjurers and astrologers, line up. President Reagan needs a new chief of staff.

Howard Baker resigned, perhaps either to write a book or run for vice president, and someone with the correct qualifications must be found to replace him.

Reading between the lines, that means someone whose horoscope jibes with both Nancy and Ron's star patterns is likely to get the job.

An ad for a new chief of staff might read like this:

Wanted: experienced advisor. Must be knowledgeable in planetary affairs and proficient at celestial predictions. Background in cosmic and nebular issues a must. Strong faith in the zodiac required. Applicants must be able to combine stargazing and public relations skills for scheduling purposes. Person with no writing ambition encouraged to apply. Libra preferred. Contact Nancy Reagan.

Now that the remaining shreds of sensibility and believability have fled the Reagan administration, it would in fact be a good time to make a pitch for a new president. The hook might go like this:

Wanted: President of the United States. Must possess a secure grip on reality. Vision must extend toward stars, but feet should be firmly planted on earth. Individual needs keen insight into issues based on facts, as well as sharp budgeting skills. Compassion for the less fortunate a must. Concern for the environment required. No plastic hair, please.

How about it, voters? Is it in the stars?

Waste Not

Recycling Best Refuse Alternative

It has now become a question not of whether Pitt County should recycle its solid waste, but rather what is the best way to proceed.

To find answers to that question the county commissioners last week agreed to appoint a task force which will develop a comprehensive county recycling program.

The task force will have its work cut out. Pitt County is rapidly running out of space at its landfill off Allen Road. The county is also losing the luxury of dumping all wastes into a common landfill.

The next solid waste disposal will be considerably more expensive to develop and operate. Like most counties, Pitt will have to find ways of reclaiming glass, metal and other usable products from the waste for resale and recycling.

Pitt County expects to run out of space in the present landfill in five years. In addition new state regulations will make future landfill projects impractical. Solid waste has doubled in Pitt County in the past nine years — and the future increases can be imagined at the present rate of population growth.

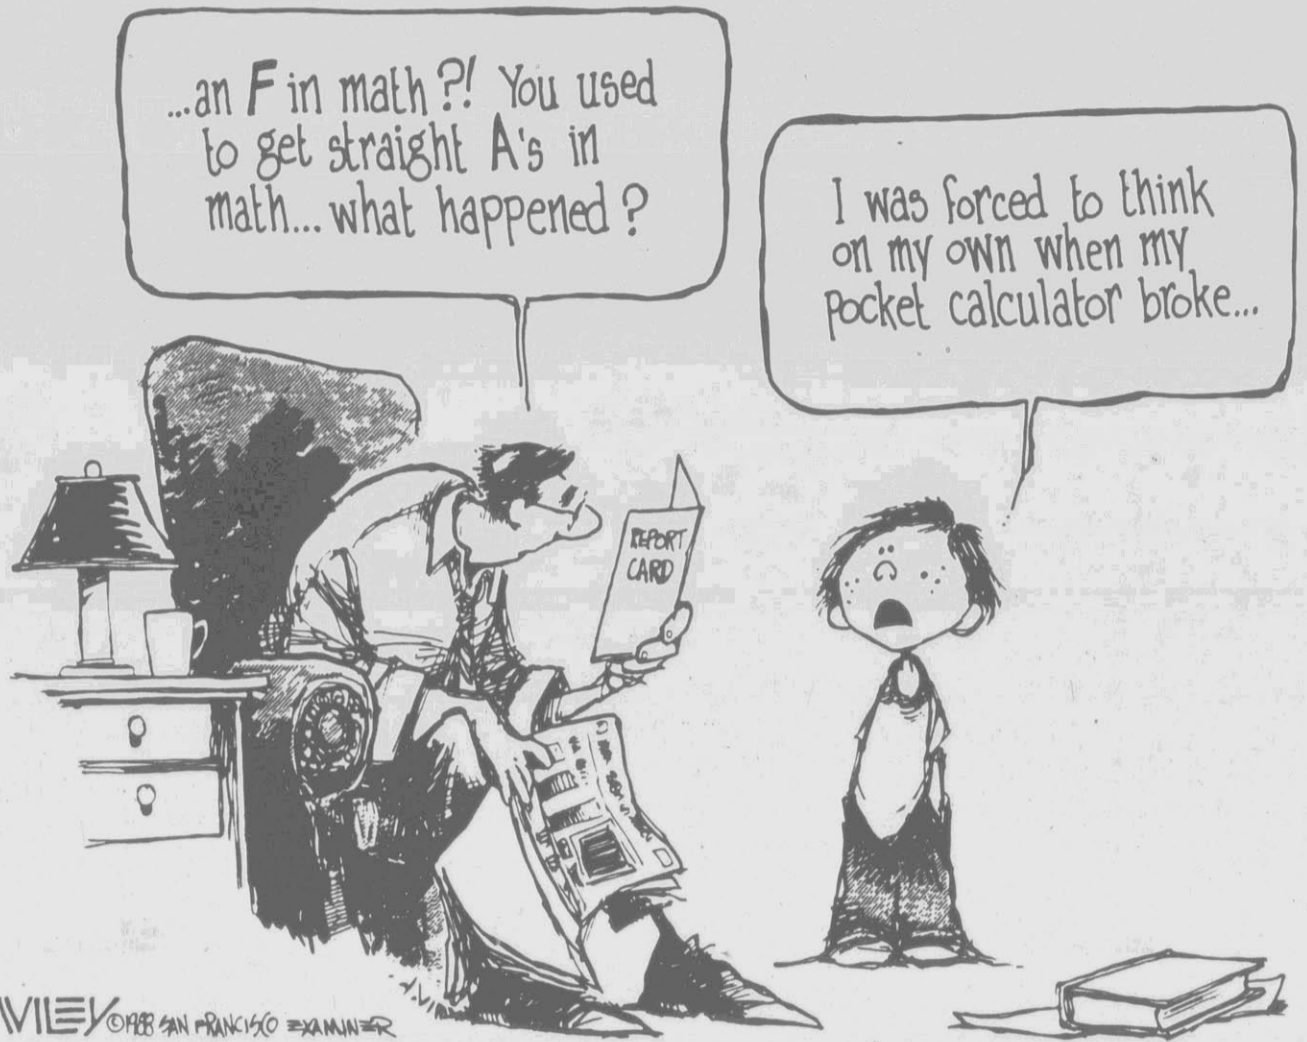

Education of the public is an obvious mission of the task force, because the community won't be able to simply dump garbage in a can as it can do now. Likely, glass and metal and other objects will have to be separated at the household in order to make a recycling system operate profitably.

All citizens have a huge stake in this because recycling will hold down the cost of solid waste disposal. Without the revenue it can bring, the cost will have to be borne fully by the county — and that means the taxpayer.

Thus it is obvious that recycling has to be considered. The county commissioners are acting properly to authorize a task force to develop such a program. The task force should include citizens from a broad area and persons dedicated to developing the best system of solid waste handling that present technology allows.

To the editor:

I do applaud the courageous decision the Edgecombe County Commissioners, my good friends, made June 6 relative to scrapping the proposal for sponsorship of a waste management park in our county. The reason(s) they arrived at that conclusion is not of any major significance. The mere fact that they acted in the best interest of all concerned is both plausible and honorable. I feel certain that their decision was by no means an easy one and that numerous extenuating circumstances and underlying factors contributed to the outcome. They can kindly accept the fact that they belatedly presented their program and it was not acceptable to the citizens at large. I suggest that any consideration they may have to sponsor a solid waste incineration facility should also be scrapped.

Edgecombe County Commissioners, my good friends, may want to order the master salesmen to immediately pack their bags and take their "goose" on up to Wake County and areas beyond. Those designated points produce most of the waste in this state and should assume responsibility for cleaning up their own houses, so to speak. The three sites should never even be considered for any one area to start with. The terrain in the mountainous regions of our state will be more suitable and conducive for the establishment of waste site facilities. They may want to pass that on to the honorable representative, the site selection committee and the governor.

To the editor:

In 1962, at a Florida meeting, I met the Rev. Harry Copley from Virginia. He was telling me about a Flynn home for alcoholics. Being interested in having a home in Greenville for alcoholics, I had Rev. Copley to visit me for two days and we had a meeting in the Episcopal Church with about 40 people I had called. We began working on this in March, 1963. Dr. John Wooten came by my house on the way to the hospital and encouraged me to do this. He let us have, rent-free, a house of his which we used for about three years. By this time, I heard of the house across the street, 408 Pitt St., being sold at auction at the Courthouse. I borrowed money, went to the courthouse, bid and got the house where we are now, since early February, 1963.

Without the support of citizens and businesses who were giving and doing on a three-month trial basis, we couldn't have made it.

I want to thank and acknowledge your continuing interest in the Flynn Christian Fellowship Home to my friends of Greenville. I deeply appreciate all you have done to support this home, for it could not have been without you.

House Prices Shoot Through The Roof

Many stories have been appearing lately about a new explosion in housing costs, suggesting that we may be well into a new round of housing inflation similar to that experienced in the 1970s. If that is accurate, it is ominous news indeed, because this time, we will be starting out from a much higher inflationary plateau than was the case 15 years ago.

It is no accident that the durable American institution, the 30-year mortgage, roughly coincides with a generation. As it happens, I took my first home mortgage almost exactly a generation ago, so the history of that mortgage thus offers a pretty good study in microcosm of the profound changes in the housing picture in America during those 30 years.

I had been working for about 10 years, and the arrival of a second child seemed the right time to make the plunge into the American dream of home ownership. We settled on a house that was close to work, close to good schools. The cost was $17,000, and the down payment was only a few hundred dollars, which was no great sweat even to a one-worker household making just a little more than the median family income. I qualified for an FHA mortgage at just over 5 percent, and the monthly payment of principal and interest came to a little less than $100 a month. The most important consideration, however, was that this payment, representing about 13 percent of my gross income, was affordable.

After reading the recent stories about the new housing inflation, I undertook a little inquiry into the status of that house today. I learned that the house would now sell for around $68,000 - or four times its original cost.

With that information in hand, I called the person up who currently holds the same job that I held then. The parallels were striking: He is about the same age as I was, with about the same experience, and his salary is still slightly above the median family income. I asked him to assume that he was in the market for a house for his family of four, including a wife who chose to stay home with the kids, aged 1 and 3. I described my house, and he said yes, that was about what he would like to buy. The cost, I said, was $68,000, and he could get it for $7,000 down. No deal, he said promptly, he just couldn't raise that much cash.

But let's suppose that he borrowed the down payment from a rich uncle. He would finance the remaining $61,000 at monthly payments of about $550. Could he handle that much on his salary? No, he said, that would be close to a quarter of his income. Obviously, the commitment of such an inordinate portion of income to housing would mean curtailment of the other amenities almost to the point of hardship.

So it comes down to this: The person who holds the same job I held 27 years ago today simply cannot afford to live in the same house I lived in at the time. In fact, he could do so only if his wife had a well-paying job. In short, the two-worker family is no longer a choice; it has become a virtual necessity.

Or put another way, if the wife chose not to work, this family would have to live in a house that costs about $32,000, which is today's going rate for a mobile home.

Thus, an ordinary house which could be comfortably afforded a generation ago and which can be afforded by the current generation with sacrifice and hardship cannot be afforded at all by the next generation. And remember, we are talking about a family that makes above the median family income, not the poor.

The social, political and economic implications of this change are truly frightful to ponder.

'Grow Your Own' An Economic Motto

RALEIGH — It is unlikely that North Carolina cities will ever look like Detroit, Newark or any other old industrial city of the northeast. That is not to say, however, that if current trends continue that the state won't end up suffering a worse calamity. It could end up looking like Los Angeles.

That's the conclusion of Johnathon Sher of the Small Business and Technology Development Center in Chapel Hill. Sher says that if the state does not better manage its environment and economic development, then "Californication" is a likely result for the Tarheel State.

North Carolina cities are not developing in the way that Detroit and Newark developed. That is, they are not seeing huge factories built in center city. Instead, they are developing as Los Angeles did. They are spreading out, spawning suburbs and requiring mass road construction programs.

The state's three major metropolitan areas are also rapidly drawing new residents. That means more spread, more jobs and a lure for yet more people to come to the metros.

In a report prepared for N.C. Association of Educators, and in other work he has done previously, Sher argues that the state must do a better job of spreading its development. If all growth goes to the metro areas, and none goes to smaller rural cities, then "our state's broad distribution of human scale communities nicely balanced between urban and rural... will be gone."

The rural areas are threatened now with brain drain. Many of the most promising young people move to the cities to find good jobs. "What we will have is a state in which the rural areas... serve primarily as playgrounds where both tourists and city dwellers can relax, unwind and enjoy various packaged re-creations of North Carolina's natural and cultural heritage." He worries that the next generation will learn of traditional North Carolina only through "Tarheel Land" theme parks.

Sher also worries that the disparities between rural and urban, and between the economic classes, will continue to harden and alienate the disadvantaged. One ramification of that development could be an accelerating crime rate.

Sher has a plan for fighting all of this, he calls it the North Carolina Covenant. Most of the suggestions turn on decisions we must all make in our personal lives. For example, we must strengthen family ties, work to build our communities not only our personal fortunes, show tolerance toward other racial and ethnic groups, and work to preserve the state's traditions.

Some of his suggestions also challenge the state, however. First, he says, the state must protect what it already has, a beautiful natural environment. North Carolinians must now consider themselves the inheritors of a land passed to them by their predecessors. Instead, we must see it as a place lent to us for safekeeping and passage to our grandchildren.

Secondly, the state must grow its own economy, not just rely on imported investment. The economy must also grow more evenly across the state's three regions. The state's cities will lose their appeal if they become overcrowded, if they become like Los Angeles. By bringing growth to the rural areas, the state will reduce the growth pressure on the state's cities.

Finally, the state must continue to diversify itself economically. In the past, North Carolina has been overly dependent on too narrow a range of economic activity. A diversified economy is much stronger in the long run.

Economic Summit Lacks Scope

Analysis

The leaders of the seven world economic powers will meet in Toronto next week to discuss cooperative efforts to rekindle global economic growth. As before, the focus will be on short-term measures aimed at adjusting the latest blip in the economic indicators. Yet there is a deeper, long-term agenda that needs to be addressed if restimulating economic growth is truly desired.

A combination of technological shifts, depressed buying power and an implacable debt crisis is conspiring to depress demand globally, mirroring the world economy in a glut of goods and services for which there are too few buyers. Only concerted action, both among the leading seven nations and between them and the nations of the impoverished Third World, can begin to make a difference.

First, the problems. Obscured in the monthly listings of trade and economic indicators that will set the context in Toronto are sweeping technological changes that eliminate jobs and change the role that nations play in the world economy.

Chemical, food and biotechnology corporations have pioneered a vast array of synthetic substitutes for many of the raw materials that form the backbone of Third World economies. Consider, for example, the decision earlier this decade by Coca-Cola and other soft-drink makers to use new biotech formulas and corn-based sweeteners instead of sugar. As a consequence, from the Philippines to the Caribbean, millions of sugar workers have lost their jobs and, hence, their purchasing power.

So, too, plastics and synthetic fibers are replacing minerals and natural fibers. And, in their laboratories, flavor chemists are synthesizing products that smell and taste like coffee and cocoa.

The implication of it all is staggering: The basis on which the three-quarters of humanity that reside in the Third World have been integrated into the world economy over centuries is being transformed within just a single generation.

Labor-saving technologies are also sweeping the industrialized countries. Earlier technological revolutions in electricity and automobiles stimulated decades of growth through job creation in related industries. Automobiles, for example, required rubber, steel and glass.

But the current microprocessor revolution is a different sort of industrial revolution: It eliminates jobs across industries and services. Laid-off bank tellers, supermarket checkout clerks and textile-loom operators have all discovered that more work can be done with fewer workers. Again, this means fewer consumers.

The same corporations that pioneered the technology have orchestrated a division of production assembly lines to different parts of the world, seeking the cheapest labor for the most labor-intensive processes. Workers in Kentucky are played off against workers in Mexico and the Philippines as corporations demand concessions and ever cheaper wages.

A final blow to world economic growth has been delivered by dismal mismanagement of the Third World debt crisis since 1982. Commercial banks and the International Monetary Fund have conditioned new lending on suppressing wages instead of enhancing buying power. And these institutions have encouraged increased exports of the very raw material for which markets are shrinking. The result: World trade growth has shrunk from average annual rates of 8 percent in the 1950s and 1960s to less than 3 percent in the 1980s.

Discussions among Third World nations need to address strategies to strengthen the buying power of their citizens through programs that restimulate agriculture, redistribute wealth downward and recognize worker rights. Regional dialogues that invigorate trade and financial flows within Latin America, Africa and Asia need to be encouraged.

At a global level a high priority for the next U.S. administration should be to help initiate truly multilateral talks to coordinate a level of debt relief that can offer the breathing space in which Third World development initiatives have a chance to flourish.

It would be unrealistic to expect that those discussions could be launched at President Reagan's final economic summit. This administration has too much invested in giving lip service to coordination while letting market forces (banks and corporations) mediate global problems. But Reagan's successor is well warned: Today's economic problems are desperate for multilateral solutions. A global economic dialogue involving all nations is urgently in order.

Democrats Reject Open Meetings Law Resolution

By MARTHA WAGGONER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — A Republican effort to tighten the open meetings law in the General Assembly has failed, and the sponsor of the measure says Democrats' votes would be used against them in the fall campaign.

"I've got their voting record," Rep. Bill Boyd, R-Randolph, said after the vote. "We'll talk about it as the year goes on."
The bill cannot be brought up again this session, and Boyd — who unsuccessfully sought the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor and did not run for re-election — will not be back in the General Assembly next year.

But he said Tuesday's defeat is not the end of the effort to change the law.

"We weren't trying to make a political issue of this," Boyd said. "But they've made a political issue of this."

Boyd's resolution, if passed, would have allowed lawmakers to consider a bill to tighten the open meetings law for the General Assembly. It would have changed the definition of a public body to include any three members of the 170-member General Assembly when they gather to discuss business.

But Boyd said there were 20 exemptions to that, and he believed caucus meetings and meetings of the ethics committee to discuss another legislator would be included in those exemptions.

It also would have deleted a section that says "a committee or subcommittee of the General Assembly has the inherent right to hold an executive session when it determines that it is absolutely necessary to have such a session in order to prevent personal embarrassment or when it is in the best interest of the state."

The measure failed 79-34. One Democrat — Rep. Bill Alexander, D-Cabarrus — voted for the bill, and no Republicans voted against it.

The vote on the open meetings law was just like the General Assembly's refusal to consider veto power for the governor, Boye said. The Legislature "is not willing to give up any power," he said.

Earlier, Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, had urged legislators to defeat the resolution.

"We have been backed around and pushed around and backed around and pushed around as a body when, to my knowledge, we have never broken the open meetings law," he said. "Rhetoric is one thing; but when you get to the point of passing a law and identifying a body as any three of us, we're getting ready to jump off the end."

The resolution, which required a two-thirds vote for the bill to be considered, passed the House Rules Committee last week. But Democrats quickly went on the offensive Tuesday, questioning Boyd and challenging the proposed bill.

"You can pass this or not," said Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange. "It doesn't make any difference to me. The people of North Carolina deserve to know that the open meetings law (a) applies to the General Assembly and (b), is complied with by the General Assembly."

He also challenged Boyd "or anybody else to say that there's been any violation of the open meetings law here or in executive sessions." Boyd did not respond.

Rewritten Home Teacher Bill Is Passed By Senate

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Students in home schools would be required to undergo annual testing and their teachers would have to have a high school diploma or its equivalent under a bill passed the Senate.

The bill will be returned to the House, which passed a significantly different version in 1987.
Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gaston, who sponsored the amendment setting the minimum education requirement for home teachers, said she had not sounded out the House on prospects for acceptance of the rewritten bill. Although a number of home-school educators told her they preferred the bill without the amendment, they voiced no strong objections, Ms. Marvin said.

"I'll just have to go over and talk with people," she said. "I really don't see how anyone can object to just a minimal standard to ensure that functional illiterates are not running these home schools."

After a lengthy debate in which no one attacked the concept of home education, the Senate voted 29-18 Tuesday to attach the high-school graduation requirement to a bill that would mandate annual testing of children taught at home.

The bill then passed 43-5.
Ms. Marvin, who withdrew her amendment Monday night before the bill won tentative approval, offered a slightly revised version Tuesday.

She said it would ensure that "grandmother or auntie or somebody else in the household who wanted to read to the children or do something like that to enhance their education could do so."

"I firmly support the idea, concept, the right of parents or guardians to teach their children at home," Ms. Marvin said, adding that she had numerous home schools in her district and most were "doing an excellent job."

Sen. Richard Conder, D-Richmond, opposed the amendment as an infringement on individual rights.

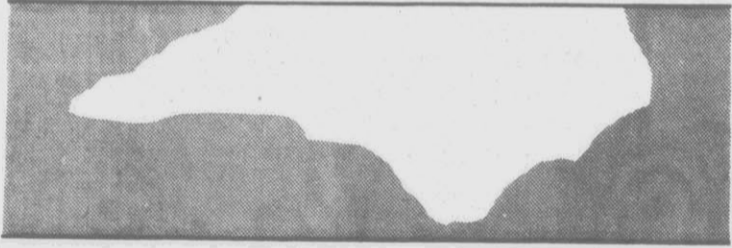

A major cause of illiteracy and other social problems is lack of parental guidance and nurturing, Conder said.

"Parental involvement by these people in the home school program has probably been one of the most outstanding successes I've ever seen," he said. "These individuals have sacrificed their lives and their time ... to stay in their homes and teach their children."

Sen. Franklin Block, D-New Hanover, argued that the annual tests required by the bill would be a sufficient measure of the quality of parental instruction.

Having high-school diploma does not necessarily qualify a person to teach, nor does having failed to graduate prove that someone is incapable, Block said.

Skyline Addition

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Architect Cesar Pelli says he tried to design a long-distance landmark for Charlotte in his plans for a new 805-foot-tall office tower for CNB Corp.

Pelli said Tuesday the granite tower's silhouette "will reorganize and refocus the city, giving the whole city a more memorable skyline."

The $150 million tower is expected to be the tallest skyscraper between New York and Dallas when it is completed in 1992.

The CNB Corporate Center will be the center piece of a $300 million development that will eventually encompass an entire city block. The project also will include a performing arts center, a hotel, retail space and a large covered space to be called Founders Hall.

Robeson Corruption

RALEIGH (AP) — A state task force says it has uncovered little evidence of alleged widespread corruption in Robeson County, but attorneys for two American Indians charged with hostage-taking say they will present their evidence at the trial.

An 18-page report for Gov. Jim Martin, written by Phil Kirk, Martin's chief of staff, said there was little to back up allegations by Eddie Hatcher and Timothy Jacobs that local law officers were involved in drug trafficking.

"We expected to receive considerable information from various people on this subject," Kirk wrote. "However, we have been disappointed at the lack of specific information which has been brought to our attention."

Soldier Suing

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A Fort Bragg soldier claims in a federal lawsuit that he was unfairly ordered discharged from the Army without a hearing after taking a random test for marijuana use.

DOE Claims No Collider List Exists

MURFREESBORO, Tenn. (AP) — The Department of Energy has emphatically denied reports that it has reduced its list of finalists for the $4.4 billion superconducting super collider to three states, including North Carolina.

"To set the record straight, there is no such list," said Wilmot Hess, head of the DOE's site selection task force, which is in Tennessee inspecting the state's proposal.

"We're working with a list of the best qualified sites. There are seven of them, and that's the list we're using and will continue to use," Hess said Tuesday. "There is no such thing as a short-short list."

Hess was responding to a report published Tuesday in a Nashville newspaper that said the DOE had narrowed its list to three states.

The Tennessean, citing unidentified sources whom it did not characterize, said the states on the department's short list were Tennessee, North Carolina and Illinois. The other four sites on DOE's list are in Arizona, Michigan, Colorado and Texas.

Rep. Bart Gordon, D-Tenn., told the Tennessean on Monday, "I have heard that there is a shorter short list, and that Tennessee is on it."

Energy Department spokesman Jeff Sherwood said the department had no shorter list of sites.

"The intent is not to go to any kind of a short short list," Sherwood said. "The intent is to go from the seven best qualified sites ... right down to one site in late November."

An official coordinating Tennessee's bid for the project, state planning director Jim Hall, said he was unaware of any list beyond that officially released by the Energy Department.

The super collider project, centered on a 53-mile-round particle accelerator, is expected to create 4,000 permanent jobs and have an annual budget of $280 million.

Last year 25 states submitted proposals for super collider sites. The Energy Department in January announced a "short list" of eight sites.

Surprise Baby

WAYNESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Waynesville woman says she was as surprised as the hospital staff when her trip to the emergency room for constipation turned into a quick delivery of a 5-pound baby boy.

"They were just casually taking me through," Suzanne Jones said Tuesday, "until they yelled 'Stat!' They realized what it was real quick. He would have probably been born in the floor."

That's no exaggeration, said Dr. Michael Rey, director of the emergency room at Haywood County Hospital. He examined Mrs. Jones early Sunday morning, and quickly ruled out constipation or a kidney stone.

"I realized nearly immediately — within three seconds of my examination," Rey told The Asheville Citizen. "The baby's head was crowning."

"Her initial reaction was total disbelief. And she was worried, of course, about the baby," he said. "As soon as she heard, she was both worried and pleased."

About 30 minutes after Mrs. Jones entered the emergency room, she gave birth to Kevin Aaron, who was 20 inches long and weighed 5 pounds, 15 ounces.

Mrs. Jones, 38, calls the birth a miracle. For 21 years, she and her husband Jack had hoped for children, but doctors four years ago told them it was doubtful they would ever have any.

Authorities Nab Escapee; Women Charged With Aiding Jail Break

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — One of five men missing after they cut their way out of the county jail was recaptured today, while two women were charged with concealing hacksaw blades in a jigsaw-puzzle box to aid the escape, officials said.

Jeffrey Charles Minnick, 22, surrendered peacefully about 6:30 a.m. in his home town of Hope Mills, said Harold Little, a sheriff's department spokesman.

"He's been brought to the law enforcement center and he's behind closed doors with our detectives as we talk," Little said. "Maybe possibly Jeffrey can help us find the others."

Minnick was serving time for first-degree sexual offense and first-degree burglary prior to his escape.

Meanwhile, Tonya Harris, 20, and Barbara Ann Murrah, 19, both of Fayetteville, were charged this morning with providing weapons to an inmate, said Little. He said Ms. Harris told authorities in a sworn statement she sent the blades in the puzzle box to Jeffrey Meyer at the request of Meyer and Frederick Glenn Evans.

Meyer, 21, who remained at large, pleaded guilty recently in the "ninja murders" of an elderly Cumberland County couple in December 1986. Meyer, a Wake County resident, and a co-defendant, Mark Edward Thompson, 19, were wearing black clothing and carrying a blowgun and other weapons used by ninja assassins.

Evans, 20, of Fayetteville, apparently slipped as he joined the other escapees Sunday night and fell to the ground while trying to descend a rope from the fourth floor. He was reported in critical condition at Highsmith-Rainey Memorial Hospital, officials said.

Today's arrests came after authorities expanded their search for the five fugitives to neighboring counties following two days of fruitless searching and dead-end leads.

Sheriff Morris Bedsole said about 45 to 50 officers were involved in the hunt for the prisoners Tuesday, two of whom face murder charges.

Bedsole said almost all the tips and reported sightings of the prisoners proved to be wrong, "but we're still encouraging anyone who thinks they have seen any of the men to call us."

The men escaped from their fourth-floor cell block at about 11 p.m. Sunday after sawing through horizontal floor plates to which bars are welded and then apparently cut into one of the steel bars enough to break it.

They used the broken bar to smash a window and then knotted sheets together to reach the ground, authorities said.

Bedsole said he would meet with architects form the 13-year-old Law Enforcement Center to see if a subcontractor met specifications in installing jail bars.

"For years we've heard that the bars were escape-proof" Bedsole said, "that they were actually hollow, case-hardened steel shells with an inner bar mounted on ball bearings that would prevent anyone from being able to get leverage in an attempt to saw through them."

"I intend to find out what the specifications were at the time of building and what actually was installed," he said.

Architect Dan MacMillan said the bars were supposed to be impervious to normal hacksaw blades, but said the story of a "bar within a bar" was a myth that had circulated in prisons for years. He said no such cell bars exist.

The other escapees were:

— Jerry Ronald Pond Jr., 24, of Fayetteville, who was charged in January with first-degree murder in the slaying of 23-year-old Michael Velazquez, a neighbor whose body was found in a shallow grave behind a Yadkin Road pawnshop.

— Ricky Allen Wilson, 30, of Hope Mills, who was awaiting trial on charges of breaking, entering and larceny and possession of stolen goods.

— Gregory Maurice Lee, 30, of Fayetteville, who was being held on charges of first-degree burglary, assault on a female and larceny.

Liggett Employees Feel No Guilt About Jobs; Some Resent Award

DURHAM (AP) — Workers at the Liggett & Myers No. 42 plant say they have clear consciences despite a federal jury's decision to give a smoker's widower $400,000 for illness caused by cigarettes manufactured by the Durham-based tobacco company.

"If I give you these, can I make you smoke them?" elevator operator Thomas Wells asked Tuesday as he pulled a green package of L&M generic cigarettes from his shirt pocket. "I don't feel bad — anyone who's making cigarettes is not making anyone smoke them."

The air downtown was filled with the familiar sweet smell of tobacco as workers filed out of the red brick plant built around the turn of the century. But many of the workers were bitter that a jury Monday had found Liggett Group Inc. liable in the lung cancer death of a New Jersey woman.

"I haven't seen cigarettes break up any homes or kill anyone on the highways," said machinist Bryant Ray, referring to problems blamed on alcohol consumption.

Liggett said Tuesday that it would appeal the damage award, the first such judgment rendered in more than 300 similar lawsuits.

But Ray, while expressing confidence that Liggett would fight the suit, said many workers were concerned the award would open the door to more lawsuits, eventually bringing the company down.

There are a lot of people worried because this is a good company to work for," he told the News and Observer of Raleigh.

Sherry Williams agreed. A five-year employee, she makes $11.71 an hour. Nevertheless, Ms. Williams, a born-again Christian, has distributed leaflets on her on time that say "Christians don't smoke."

"Christians don't smoke if they believe that their body is the holy temple of God," Ms. Williams said. "His commandments tell us to take care of ourselves."

But that doesn't stop Ms. Williams from working at Liggett, oiling machines that assemble cigarettes.

"The Bible also says that I am to obey the laws of the land," she said. "He says I'm to work if I'm to eat. I do work here, but I live my life unto God."

Factory 42, which bears a plaque that says "Dedicated to the millions who smoke the cigarette that satisfies: Chesterfield 1948," is workplace of many of the 1,000 Liggett employees. The company is one of the largest employers in Durham, but it's apparent that tobacco is losing its hold.

Across the street from the sprawling Liggett plant stands Brightleaf Square, a former Liggett warehouse that's been converted into upscale shops and office space.

There, however, many agreed with Liggett workers that smoking was a matter of free choice and that tobacco companies shouldn't be held liable.

"I really enjoy smoking, though I'm sorry I do — but it's my responsibility," said Sally Lontz, a former aerobics teacher who owns a flower store.

"The very nerve of her," Ms. Lontz said of Rose Cipollone, in whose name the suit was filed. "If I get lung cancer, there's no way I can blame anybody but myself."

But another shop owner, John Browner, said Liggett should be held responsible because their former slogans, such as "Just what the doc-

Rainbow Testimony

TYLER, Texas (AP) — A 1960s-style gathering in East Texas could prompt an outbreak of disease if it follows proceedings of a similar gathering last year in North Carolina, a health official testified in federal court Tuesday.

Dr. Ronald H. Levine, director of the North Carolina State Department of Health Services, was the first witness called by federal officials in a hearing before U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice.

U.S. Justice Department and Forest Service attorneys are seeking to have Justice issue a permanent injunction that would bar the Rainbow Family from meeting for their planned July 1-7 meeting in the woods of East Texas.

Justice did not make a ruling Tuesday and testimony is expected to resume Wednesday.

Election-Year Strategy In Place As House Trims Raise From Bill

By STEVEN KOMAROW
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The House took a look toward the fall election and decided now is not the time to give itself a pay raise, but it left intact plans to boost salaries for federal civilian employees.

By a vote of 230-170, the lawmakers on Tuesday stripped from a government spending bill a proposed 4 percent hike in pay for themselves and other top government officials. They left in place the boost in salaries for other federal workers.

The House then voted 301-96 for the overall bill, a $16.1 billion spending package for the Treasury, Postal Service, the Executive Office of the President and other federal agencies. The measure now goes to the Senate.

Members of Congress now make $89,500 and the bill would have let that automatically increase by 4 percent next January along with the rest of the federal work force.

Rep. Phil Crane, R-Ill., offered the amendment to block the raises for lawmakers, Supreme Court justices, Cabinet officers and other federal officials at the top of the pay scale.

Crane said Congress didn't deserve more pay, especially given its dismal record in reducing federal deficits.

"I think ... based upon performance we should not be contemplating such pay raises" just a little over a year since Congress' last boost, he said. He suggested that lawmakers consider putting themselves on a "commission basis" as an incentive to reduce federal red ink, although that was not part of his legislative proposal.

Several members defended the increases as needed to attract top people to government.

Rep. Steny Hoyer, D-Md., said he'd want the voters to throw him out of office if they didn't think he deserved the same pay increase as other federal employees.

"It's image. It's political posturing," Hoyer said of the amendment.

The pay raise issue dominated Tuesday's debate, but the president's Office of Management and Budget said other problems with the bill were the ones likely to provoke a veto.

OMB said the House was failing to provide money to cover the pay boosts, twice what the president recommended, for the bulk of the federal work force. The agency said Congress should have cut spending to offset the increases, instead of waiting for additional federal spending later.

The bill also contains $417 million in postal subsidies opposed by the White House, and some federal construction projects for which OMB said Congress had not properly accounted for the cost.

Across the Capitol, the Senate voted 78-18 to approve a $1.8 billion bill covering congressional operations in the coming fiscal year.

The measure, a $22 million increase over this year's spending, covers the current salaries and expenses of lawmakers and congressional employees, and the costs of upkeep and protection for the buildings where they work.

The Senate did not address the issue of pay raises for members of Congress and other top government officials in this measure.

The House passed a similar version of that bill last month. A few minor differences will have to be worked out by negotiators from the two chambers before the bill can be sent to the president.

No Real Love For Electric Servers

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Tennis ball machines would be relegated to the status of lawn mowers and bulldozers under a noise ordinance tentatively approved in this posh community that once tried to ban men from running topless.

The ordinance approved Tuesday by the Town Council would limit use of the electric servers to the same weekday hours set aside for heavy construction — 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. between Dec. 1 and April 3 and 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. the remainder of the year. Unlike heavy machinery, however, the council would allow tennis ball machines to be used on weekends.

The ball machines were lumped into a category of equipment "that may be obnoxious during certain hours," said town attorney John Randolph.

Town officials had considered banning new ball machines from the island, where the ordinance prohibiting men from topless jogging was struck down in March by an appeals court. The community also was lampooned by Garry Trudeau in his "Doonesbury" comic strip for a law requiring workers to carry identification cards. That law was declared unconstitutional, so the council in March made it voluntary for employers to require workers to have the cards.

Some proponents of the tennis ball machine ordinance also wanted to prohibit their use on weekends.

Southern Baptists Keep Fundamentalist At Helm

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Fundamentalists tightened their grip on the Southern Baptist Convention by electing another conservative president, who said he hopes to mend the division in the nation's largest Protestant denomination.

The Rev. Jerry Vines, who narrowly defeated a moderate Tuesday, said the denomination has turned rightward because of "strong grass-roots feelings on the part of our people."

Vines also told a news conference he hoped "we can move in the direction of healing" the bitter conflict between conservative and moderate Southern Baptists.

Meanwhile, a moderate group, the Southern Baptist Alliance, said Vines' election left them "disenfranchised."

"Diversity is rejected and dishonored," said a statement from the group, headed by the Rev. John Thompson of Jackson, Miss. "Fundamentalist, authoritarian, hierarchical and right-wing political ideology" now prevailed, it said.

Vines defeated the Rev. Richard Jackson by 15,804 to 15,112. But similarly close votes in the past have not deterred extension of the fundamentalist platform.

Vines, 50, is co-pastor of the First Baptist Church of Jacksonville, Fla., while Jackson, 49, is pastor of the North Phoenix Baptist Church in Phoenix, Ariz. Each church has about 18,000 members.

Vines' victory represents the 10th straight year fundamentalists have gained the powerful presidency, completing a timetable set by their strategist in 1979 for solidifying their control over the denomination. The president serves a one-year term, but it is traditionally renewed a second year.

The outcome also signaled indefinite continuation of a right-wing theological and political agenda that has accompanied the fundamentalist dominance.

Because of the size and nationwide influence of the 14.7-million-member denomination, the direction set here was seen as having an impact in broader evangelical circles.

Asked why Southern Baptist positions on social and political issues have come to match those of the religious right, Vines cited "grass-roots feelings" and said members "reflect the general mood, the conservative directions of this time."

Jackson wryly discounted that explanation, saying the "grass roots are often quoted, but you don't hear them talking much."

"I feel there is manipulation," he said. "It would have been unthinkable 20 years ago that a small group could get together and work out plans" for taking control of the denomination.

The key architects of that plan, Judge Paul Pressler of Houston and the Rev. Paige Patterson of Dallas, determined that by successively winning the presidency, conservatives could gradually pack ruling boards of denominational agencies and seminaries through the appointive power of the office.

The fundamentalist victories have been achieved under the banner of biblical "inerrancy" — that the Bible is without error, scientifically, historically and religiously.

But they have been accompanied by conservative positions on political and social issues, such as unsuccessfully supporting Judge Robert Bork for the U.S. Supreme Court, and favoring capital punishment, prayer in public schools and aid to private schools.

Vines said he hoped the denomination would not lose members over the conflict. "I want to include, not exclude," he said.

Asked if he would seek only like-minded people as trustees of church institutions and agencies, he said they must be within approved "parameters," that is, biblical "inerrantists."

Several seminary and other church staff members have been pressured from their jobs by new screening processes instituted by the fundamentalists. Among the questions asked church employees is whether they believe Adam and Eve were real people and that biblical miracles actually occurred.

Vines said the political ramifications of the fundamentalist upsurge were "spinoffs" from the theological concerns.

Jackson said the split "obviously isn't over theology," but over different styles of leadership, since he accepts the Bible's infallibility, but he respects those holding other views.

"I believe we'll stay together, may God deliver us," he said. "I don't want anybody to panic."

Church To Restudy Abortion Stance

By JOHN A. BOLT
Associated Press Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Presbyterians paused to clap and pray after adopting a statement on "Christian Obedience in a Nuclear Age," then called early today to restudy the church's pro-choice abortion stance before ending a marathon meeting.

Tuesday's session at the 200th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) began with the election of a top church officer and ended shortly before 2 a.m. after the assembly voted 250-244 to initiate a new study on abortion.

Anti-abortion groups in the 3-million-member church have sought a new study since 1985, when the denomination adopted a statement condemning abortion as a method of birth control but concluding that the decision remains a private one between a woman, her physician and her conscience.

The assembly was to adjourn today after discussing denominational finances and the location of the headquarters of the denomination's pension board.

The commissioners overwhelmingly accepted the Christian Obedience report, prompting spontaneous applause in the Cervantes Convention Center, where the delegates, called commissioners, have been meeting since June 7.

The report was the result of a process begun in 1983 when congregations asked how to respond to those who refuse to pay taxes over disagreement with government action.

The paper responded that their decision should be recognized as proper "under certain circumstances," and they they should be given emotional support by the church.

Committee revisions of the paper changed language to make it clear "it is normally the case" that Christians obey civil authority.

A request was left in, however, that church agencies set up a Fund for Obedience to Higher Authority "for the assistance of those who suffer financial loss or difficulty as result of acts of conscience."

The paper says nuclear war is immoral, and that nuclear deterrence "as an adequate, permanent means to national security ... is not morally defensible."

Language added by a committee at the assembly states that military service is "a legitimate function of civil government (and) many Presbyterians have decided that obedience to God leads them to participate in the military."

Remaining on today's agenda was a recommendation to consolidate the denomination's pension fund in Philadelphia, headquarters of the pension board in the United Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) the larger of two denominations that merged in 1983 to end a 121-year division.

Commissioners will consider a minority report that recommends the pension board move to Atlanta, site of the headquarters of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.), the smaller, Southern church in the union.

Earlier Tuesday, the Rev. James E. Andrews was re-elected to a second four-year term as stated clerk, or the denomination's chief constitutional officer. By a 323-298 vote he defeated Harriet Nelson, 54, a lay leader from Napa, Calif.

Andrews, 59, had to be nominated from the floor after a nominating committee rejected his nomination to the $62,000-a-year post.

Andrews told commissioners he had been "sent a message" by the narrow margin to heal the divisions in the denomination stemming from the merger.

Conservatives within the denomination have blamed declining membership on what they perceive to be increasingly liberal stances by the church under Andrews.

In nominating Mrs. Nelson, the Rev. J. Randolph Taylor called Andrews "a reminder of our divided past" and said the "church needs a sense of newness."

Andrews, who was stated clerk of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.) from 1973 to 1983, promised to be "very active in ... bringing in various viewpoints, various factions together in a denomination that's growing up."

The stated clerk represents the church in ecumenical bodies, oversees the annual assembly and heads a staff of 65 with a budget of about $7 million.

In other action, the assembly recommended a higher federal minimum wage and called for a national dialogue on the status of Americans Indians. It also considered suggested actions on health costs and religious freedom.

The assembly adopted a lengthy paper on pornography that concludes its fundamental cause is sexism. The recommendations reiterate the church's call for the enactment of the Equal Rights Amendment and direct church officials to develop a public policy statement on pornography.

Lottery Gets Thumbs Down In South Dakota

By MIKE SILVERMAN
Associated Press Writer

North Dakota voters again refused to jump on the lottery bandwagon, Maine Republicans rejected a $500,000 bid by an L.L. Bean heir for a congressional nomination, and Virginians sent a Democrat to Washington in a special election.

With 94 percent of the North Dakota vote counted from Tuesday's election, the lottery proposal lost by 58,417 votes, or 58 percent, to 41,799 votes, or 42 percent.

That was an even wider margin than the 55-45 percent it lost by in November 1986, when North Dakotans became the first voters to reject a state-run lottery. Twenty-six states and the District of Columbia have lotteries.

"It would seem to me a decisive expression of the will of the people, and I would hope that the proponents would accept the decision," said former Gov. Arthur Link, who opposed the measure as a regressive tax on the poor.

Link found allies in some of North Dakota's charitable gaming operators, who feared a lottery would cut into their business.

Gorman King Sr., a businessman who backed a lottery, said the initiative might be resubmitted in November with revenues dedicated to a specific program, such as education or aid to the elderly. King and other supporters said a lottery would raise $7 million a year for the economically depressed state.

North Dakotans also had a meaningless, last-in-the-nation presidential primary. No Democrats entered the race, and on the GOP side, Vice President George Bush racked up 94 percent of the vote against retired teacher Mary Jane Rachner.

In Maine's southern 1st Congressional District, Linda Bean-Jones, the granddaughter of outdoors outfitter L.L. Bean, was edged by Edward S. O'Meara, an aide to Sen. William Cohen, for the GOP nomination. O'Meara will face popular Democratic Rep. Joseph E. Brennan, a former two-term governor.

With 96 percent of the vote counted, O'Meara had 15,313 votes or 52 percent and Bean-Jones had 14,102 votes or 48 percent.

"Recounts don't seem to pay off," Bean-Jones said. "I'm still going to be around. We're not going to disappear. I feel I have a role to play in politics."

Bean-Jones, founder of a defunct conservative publication known as The Maine Paper, spent about $550,000 on her first political race, $455,000 out of her own pocket. O'Meara spent between $60,000 and $65,000.

In southside Virginia's 5th Congressional District, Democrat L.F. Payne Jr., developer of a ski and golf resort, defeated former White House aide Linda Arey in a special election. The incumbent, conservative Democrat W.C. "Dan" Daniel, died of a heart attack in January while serving his 10th term.

The final count showed Payne with 55,406 votes or 59 percent to Ms. Arey's 38,086 votes or 41 percent.

Payne and Ms. Arey are slated to run against each other again in November, but Ms. Arey could withdraw and ask the GOP to choose another nominee.

South Carolina also had a primary Tuesday, but only one incumbent congressman faced opposition. In the 6th District, three-term Democratic Rep. Robin Tallon won 89 percent of the vote against retired postal worker Luther Lighty, who had also challenged him in 1984 and 1986.

West Germany's lower house of parliament, the Bundestag, voted in 1979 to abolish the statute of limitations for murder to continue prosecuting Nazi war criminals.

RESULTS WATCHED — U.S. Rep. Robin Tallon, D-S.C., and his son, Thomas, watch election returns Tuesday from their Florence, S.C., home. Tallon, seeking a fourth term in Congress, defeated his opponent, retired postal worker Luther Lighty, by a landslide with 89 percent of the vote. (AP Laserphoto)

Lawyers Trade Barbs In Mecham Trial

By LAURIE ASSEO
Associated Press Writer
PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A prosecutor who was likened to an Auschwitz guard by Evan Mecham's attorney blasted the comparison as a vicious tactic to conceal a poor defense of the ex-governor's failure to report a $350,000 campaign loan.

The criminal trial was expected to be sent to the jury today after prosecutor Barnett Lotstein completes his rebuttal statement and jurors are given instructions.

Lotstein told the jurors Tuesday that Mecham's attorney gave a "laundry list of excuses" but no valid explanation why the former governor and his brother, Willard, failed to report the loan on financial reports required by the state.

Lotstein also bitterly criticized Mecham's defense lawyer, Michael Scott, for comparing him and co-prosecutor Michael Cudahy, both assistant attorneys general, to the guards at Auschwitz, the Nazi death camp.

Earlier Tuesday, Scott contended that Attorney General Bob Corbin sought charges against the Mechams to boost his own political ambitions.

"Perhaps I shouldn't be so hard on my colleagues (Lotstein and Cudahy) because, like the guards at Auschwitz, they're just doing their job," Scott told the court.

Lotstein termed the statement a "vicious personal attack" and added, "It's not a new tactic. It's used when you don't have anything else to say."

Willard Mecham's lawyer, Joe Keilp, contended the prosecution had sought to prove its case "by innuendo, not evidence."
"How dare they try to sell you this shoddy merchandise and tell you it's the truth," Keilp said. "The only scheme to defraud in this case ... has been perpetrated by the prosecution in trying to get you to convict these men."

Cudahy told the Maricopa County Superior Court jury that Mecham desperately needed the loan from developer Barry Wolfson to keep his 1986 gubernatorial campaign afloat. However, he said Mecham felt he could not make the loan public because it would destroy his campaign theme of being " beholden to no one."

"Evan Mecham never had any intention of disclosing the Wolfson loan," said Cudahy, who claimed the loan was hidden in a campaign financial report as part of a "fabricated" $465,000 lump sum listed as a contribution from Mecham. Further, the prosecutor pointed to a letter in which Mecham promised Wolfson the loan would "remain confidential," as well as a receipt that was written a month later and listed a $350,000 personal contribution from Evan Mecham.

Scott contended that the charges were based on the "slimmest of all evidence." He insisted there was no motive to conceal Wolfson as the source of the loan because the financial report on which the loan would have appeared was filed after the election.

Scott noted that Mecham could have been charged under another state law that makes false campaign finance reporting a misdemeanor, "but a misdemeanor is not good enough for Bob Corbin and his henchmen."

Keilp said Willard Mecham "is not the most sophisticated bookkeeper in the world" and filled out the financial statements the best he knew how.

But Lotstein contended that Willard Mecham lied when he told the state grand jury he had never seen the letter in which Mecham promised Wolfson the loan would remain confidential.

Mecham was charged with six felony counts of perjury, willful concealment and filing false documents and faced from almost nine to 22 years in prison if convicted of all charges.

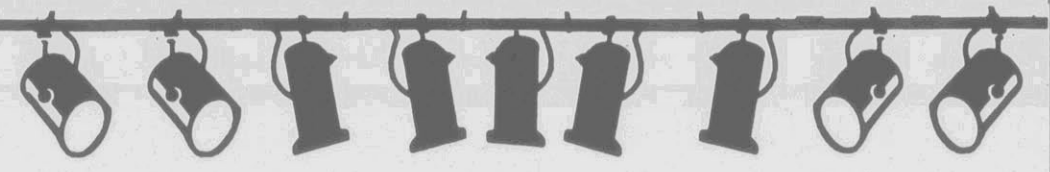

Willard Mecham, who was his brother's campaign treasurer, faced three similar counts and up to 9½ years in prison if convicted of all charges.

Mecham, a Republican, took office in January 1987 and was removed April 4 when the state Senate convicted him of two unrelated charges. He also was impeached in connection with the loan, but the Senate decided not to hear that charge for fear of prejudicing his criminal trial.

3 Killed As Raft Flips

WOODBIDGE, Conn. (AP) — A makeshift raft overturned in a muddy pond, killing three occupants trapped underwater 30 minutes, authorities said.

A fourth person aboard the raft Tuesday was able to free himself but could not lift the raft off his companions because the pond's bottom was too muddy, police said.

Two of the victims, both males, were brought to the Hospital of St. Raphael in New Haven unconscious and suffering from cardiac arrest, said Ken Warren, a hospital spokesman. He said men were pronounced dead shortly before 3 p.m. after doctors tried for a half hour to resuscitate them.

Their identities were withheld pending notification of relatives.

Ruby Roberts, 32, of New Haven, died shortly after 11 p.m. at Yale-New Haven Hospital, hospital spokesman Thomas Urtz said.

The small wood raft had railings around all four sides and vertical bars, and was kept afloat by metal drums. Police said it sank in 4 feet of water about 50 feet from the shore of Konolds Pond, where the four people had gone fishing.

The fourth person on the raft, Joel Williams of New Haven, tried unsuccessfully to move the raft, and left to call for help, police said. When rescuers arrived, they summoned a tow truck to pull the raft off the three victims.

Police estimated the victims had been under water 30 to 35 minutes.

Police said they did not know who owned the raft.

Art Garden Created For Public Enjoyment

By JANET McCONAUGHEY
Associated Press Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A metal and stone oasis, a place for passing wanderers to rest their eyes and feet, stands in the shadow of New Orleans' busy Mississippi River Bridge.

Its formal name is K&B Plaza. Critics call it part of Louisiana's best collection of modern art, in or out of a museum. The man who put it together — Sydney J. Besthoff III, president of Katz & Besthoff Drugs Inc. — calls it an art garden for the public.

The plaza is about six feet above the sidewalk and inside a forbiddingly heavy railing of concrete aggregate.

Within, shiny needles and rectangles sway and spin in the breeze, sunlight glinting on their curves and corners. An obelisk like a small steel version of the Washington Monument is slammed point-down into a shattered and crumbling bronze shape. Water pours from a vast fountain.

In one corner is a huge square piece of steel, cut and bent so that it suggests wings and a beak. A little plate on the railing nearby confirms that suggestion with the title "The Bird (For Charlie Parker)."

The 50 or so pieces on the plaza and in the lobby include many by artists recognized as among the world's best: Henry Moore, Alexander Calder, Jacques Lipchitz, Leonard Baskin, Umberto Boccioni, Pierre Auguste Renoir.

Even the lectern on which the building's guest-register sits and the streetcar stops in the nearby St. Charles Avenue median are part of the collection.

Frank McGuire's two angular constructions of pipes, bars and steel plate include railings for people to lean against while they wait for their ride, trash containers, and the only seats found at any streetcar stops in the city.

"Those were commissioned by us," said Patricia Chandler, arts coordinator for the building. "If any car bangs into them, we repaint and repair and so forth."

The collection sometimes needs other sorts of work. The sculptures are covered during Carnival and Mardi Gras. A corner of the plaza was chopped off to make way for a twin of the existing Mississippi River Bridge; once the new bridge is finished statues will be moved around to best fit the available space.

"We intend a full reworking of the space," Chandler said. "Including, on either side of plaza closest to the bridge, maybe a waterwall. That will wash the sound of the cars with the sound of water and also hide it visually."

The cost of it all is irrelevant, says Besthoff. He won't talk about it. "That's what you might call the commercialization of art routine. I've never sold anything, so it doesn't mean anything," he said. "I don't look on art as an investment. It's something I like and appreciate."

Art isn't a matter of whether the people looking at it could afford to buy it, but whether they like it, he said.

It's serious art, but never stuffy. "Of course, the whole theory of contemporary art is not to be stuffy and stodgy," said Besthoff. "If it is slightly wry or humorous ... that's strictly a byproduct. The humorous bit really is just to get you to look at it beyond the first glance. Nobody wants their sculpture to be cutesy."

"Three Hand and Three Foot Bench" is one of two benches designed by Pedro Freiderberg, a Mexican artist who had never before worked in bronze, and cast by Bill Ludwig of New Orleans.

On each, great big bronze feet support huge hands curved into cups, the fingers raised as back supports. At each end, a giant thumb serves as arm rest.

The plaza has lots of other seats. Dotted among standard black park benches are shiny square seats of granite and a set of bronze park benches, painted black, from which three bronze people — painted white to look like plaster — survey the passing scene.

Human posteriors are welcome to join those of the bench people, to nestle into the big bronze hands or to slide onto polished granite while looking at other sculptures.

It was one big, lonely fountain which inspired Besthoff, the third of his name in New Orleans' retail drug business, to fill the building and plaza with modern art.

"The Mississippi" by Isamu Noguchi — a crescent-shaped wedge of rough granite from which water slides down huge fluted column of the same stone — was commissioned by the building's original owners.

When K&B bought what was then the John Hancock Building in 1973, Besthoff felt the plaza was too bare. So he began buying sculpture.

Now, the K&B building and plaza house two collections. The Virlane Foundation one — named after Besthoff's daughters, Virginia, Valerie and Jane — decorates the plaza and lobby and is open to the public. Upstairs is the K&B Corporate Collection, open by appointment to artists, educators and other visitors.

Virlane, a non-profit foundation, is dedicated to cultivating public interest in the arts.

The outdoor pieces, of course, must all stand up to the weather. The lobby holds dozens of more fragile pieces, including a small Calder mobile, a bronze bust of a cigar-chomping guy who might have stepped out of a bar somewhere, and a moving assemblage of shiny chrome bars and disks called "Chronos 8."

A fat, bored woman waits forever outside the elevators, fooling even people who have been told about her into trying to chat with her. The piece is titled "Bus Stop Lady," but guards will tell you the woman's name is Bertha.

Remodeling Can Be Expensive

Homemaker's Haven
Evelyn Spangler

This may sound callous, but fixing an old house that's been in the family for generations may not be worth the money.

Remodeling is expensive. So you'll do well to take a critical look at the homestead — before you commit a lot of money to its renovation. Evaluate remodeling costs against the home's potential. After remodeling you'll want a house that's energy-efficient, attractive, durable and saleable. If you can't meet these expectations, fixing the house may not be practical.

For starters, figure out how you might make the house more energy-efficient. For example, adding windows to the south side of the house might make a big difference in heating bills.

Then, take a careful look at the structure of the house. A house that's in bad shape structurally isn't a good candidate for remodeling.

Be careful not to "over-improve" a house. You may not be able to recoup the costs of elaborate improvements — especially if they make your house a lot more valuable than other homes in the neighborhood.

Tinted or reflective films can shade windows and reduce summer heat buildup inside your home. There are two major types: sun control and combination.

Sun control films are designed for use during the summer. Known as reflective films, they reduce glare and keep out the sun's rays. If you have a large window area that gets too much sun in the summer, a sun control film can reduce heat buildup, and still admit some light. Sun control films also protect carpets and furnishings from sunlight. They seem to be most effective on east and west windows.

In addition to controlling the sun, combination films reflect heat. There's a heat reflective coating that helps keep heated air from escaping to the outside in winter. And the sun-control feature blocks out unwanted heat in the summer.

If you're in the market for a window film, look at three specifications: the R-value or insulating value of the film, the shading coefficient or percentage of solar gain that it admits, and the percentage of visible light that it lets through.

If you want to reduce glare, look for a film that has a low rating when it comes to visible light transmittance. If you want to control both shading and glare, look for a film that has the lowest combination of these two ratings.

Here's a caution: never use combination films on sealed or insulated or double-paned windows. Heat buildup may cause the insulating seal, or even the glass, to break.

Regardless of type, most films are fairly inexpensive and guaranteed from three to five years.

Call the Agricultural Extension Service at 830-6370 for a copy of the brochure "North Carolina Windows."

Twins Graduate From Rival Military Academies

By JULIA RUBIN
Associated Press Writer
Kim and Greg Williams, in the way of twins, grew up doing almost everything together. For the past four years, however, they endured life apart, cadets in different uniforms at rival military academies.
On Wednesday, Kim becomes an Air Force second lieutenant, and her brother, commissioned a second lieutenant in the Navy last week, will administer her oath.
"There's no one I'd rather have do it," said Kim.
At 12:01 a.m. Wednesday, about 12 hours before the Air Force Academy graduation at Colorado Springs, Colo., Greg will swap his Naval commission to be an Air Force officer, following his life-long desire to fly and a hope to be stationed eventually with his twin.

The twins, 21, from Fort Walton Beach, Fla., are the children of a career officer, retired Air Force Lt. Col. James R. Williams. He performed swearing-in honors for Greg at the Naval Academy ceremony in Annapolis, Md.
The twins says a healthy rivalry got them into and through the military academies.
Greg, the one who wanted to fly all his life but whose eyesight wasn't good enough for him to be a pilot, says he's happy Kim was the one accepted by the Air Force Academy. He plans to be a navigator.

"She'll probably be a colonel before I'm a colonel," he said. "She's a hard worker — she deserves it."
Said Kim, the older of the two by 10 minutes: "I felt kind of bad, because Greg wanted to be a pilot so bad. If I could give him my eyes, I would."
The twins say their separate strengths have made it easier for them to share each other's successes.
Greg graduated in the top 5 percent of his class at the Naval Academy and says studying comes easier to him. He plays a lot of sports but concedes that Kim, who played softball for the Air Force Academy and managed the women's basketball team for three years, is the family athlete.

Their three older siblings are Tony, 31, who works for CARE in New York City; Kaye Miller, 28, married to an Air Force officer in Florida, and Janet, 26, who enlisted in the Air Force and serves in Wiesbaden, West Germany.
Greg still remembers when the two played Little League baseball.
"She was playing first base and I was in the outfield. People used to kid me and I said, 'Can you beat her out of first base?' And no one could," he said.
When Kim made the Little League all-stars, Greg went and cheered her on.
He kept up the cheering, she said, when she was ready to drop out of the Air Force Academy during a difficult first year.

"He's probably the biggest influence on what I do," said Kim. "I thought about quitting ... and I guess the biggest thing was, my Mom said, 'What will Greg think?' ... He always says, do what you want to do, but keep the long-term goals in mind."
Kim said having a twin brother also helped her cope better than some other female cadets with lingering discrimination at the academy.

Pullover Is Simple To Knit

Simplicity is the name of the game with this cool, crisp cotton top, consisting of only two pieces — front and back — with a bare minimum of shaping. A delicate diamond lace pattern highlights this feminine pullover with a boat neck and graceful sleeves that are knitted in as you go, eliminating that sometimes bothersome chore of setting in sleeves.
Double strands of a sport-weight cotton yarn and large needles give you a quick-knit gauge of four stitches to the inch. Easy-to-follow directions are given for petite, small, medium and large sizes with finished bust measurements of 32, 36, 40 and 44 inches respectively.
To obtain directions for making the Diamond Lace pullover, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-061288 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.
Or you may order Kit No. K-621288 by sending a check or money order for $19.95 for petite and small or $25.95 for medium and large to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, instruction leaflet and cotton in your choice of Ming blue, peach or off-white.

Pat's Pointers
Pat Trexler

Dear Pat: Help! You once — perhaps three or more years ago — had a column on knit trims, which I loved and used several times. Now, just when I want to use a trim again, I can't find the old clipping. The one I really want is the same that was created as you bound off stitches. Could you repeat that column? — Eleanor K., Indianapolis

Dear Eleanor: I believe you are looking for the picot trim — it's the only one I remember that is worked on the binding off row. Here's how:

Step 1: Bind off 1 stitch. Step 2: Slip the last stitch from the right-hand needle back onto the left needle. Step 4: Bind off 4 stitches. Repeat Steps 2 through 4 to the end of the row.

Among other good knit trims are the single or double bias trims. For a single bias piece, cast on any number of stitches — the number is determined by the desired width. To practice, cast on about 10 stitches.
Purl the first row. Knit the second row, increasing one in the first stitch and decreasing one at the end of the row by knitting two stitches together. Repeat these two rows for the desired length. Although called a single bias, it is doubled over and stitched in place over any knit edge. It's particularly good for jacket fronts, collars and cuffs.

While the double bias is not quite so simple, some knitters may prefer it. The following trim, by the way, is different from any double bias I have ever seen and is, in my opinion, an improvement over others I have used. As so often happens, I discovered this by accident, while experimenting with double decreases.
To make the double decrease used in this trim, you slip two stitches from the left needle to the right needle in this way: Insert right needle into the first two stitches on the left needle as if you were going to knit two together; but instead of knitting them together, simply pass them from left to right needle. Next, knit one stitch as usual and then pass the slipped stitches over the stitch you have just knitted.
To practice the double bias trim, cast on 11 stitches and purl all stitches on the first row. On the second row, increase one in the first stitch, and knit the next three stitches. Then on the next three stitches, make the double decrease described above.
After the slipped stitches are passed over the knit stitch, knit the next three stitches and increase one in the last stitch. Repeat these two rows until the piece is the desired length.
You will see that there is a well-defined fold at the center of the strip and that the two ends can be easily mitered for a neat joining.

Graham Draws Throngs

MOSCOW (AP) — U.S. evangelist Billy Graham preached to his largest audience in the Soviet Union as at least 10,000 people jammed into an Orthodox church in Kiev or listened outside over loudspeakers, Graham's spokesman said today.

Graham, a Southern Baptist minister, is taking part in government-sanctioned celebrations marking the 1,000th anniversary of Christianity in what is now the Soviet Union.

His spokesman, Edward E. Plowman, said Graham delivered a 15-minute sermon Tuesday night in St. Vladimir's cathedral in Kiev.

"The crowd was absolutely jammed in there, with a lot of people up front holding tape recorders to catch what was said," Plowman said in a telephone interview from Kiev.

Church officials also put up large loudspeakers outside for the overflow crowd.

In the sermon, which was translated into Russian by an Orthodox priest, Graham preached that God and human nature never change despite changes in the world, Plowman said.

Plowman said 10,000 people listened to Graham during the two-hour service, but officials at St. Vladimir's said the crowd numbered between 10,000 and 15,000. Plowman called it the largest group to hear Graham during his three trips to the Soviet Union.

Graham also visited the Soviet Union in 1982 and 1984.

During his 1982 visit, he aroused controversy by saying he thought the church in the Soviet Union was free. This time, he has said only that "the people seem to be warmer, that makes me glad," according to Plowman.

Plowman said Graham will preach tonight at a Kiev Baptist church, and that several thousand Soviet Baptists and Pentecostals had gathered in the Ukrainian capital, some traveling hundreds of miles for the service.

Graham is scheduled to leave the Soviet Union Friday night.

General Will Retire

QUANTICO, Va. (AP) — The military is far ahead of society when it comes to race relations, says the Marine Corp's only active duty black general.

Lt. Gen. Frank E. Peterson, commander of the Quantico Marine Base since 1986 who is retiring in August, told a news conference Tuesday he looks forward to the day when his unique status is irrelevant.

"When you have the first black this and the first black that, you have two messages," said Peterson, the senior aviator in the military. "America will be a whole lot better off when there's no longer a first and only black anywhere."

Peterson once worked as special assistant to the commandant of the Marines for race relations.

ward from the previously reported 0.6 percent drop, and strong gains of 1.6 percent in March and 1.1 percent in February.

Lackluster sales in April had been attributed to the fact that Easter fell early in the month than usual, pushing holiday buying back into March.

Sales in May were held back by a 1.2 percent fall in automotive sales to $29.3 billion. That followed a 0.8 percent drop in April.

Excluding autos, sales rose 0.5 percent in May following a 0.3 percent decline.

Sales of durable goods, "big ticket" items expected to last three or more years, were down 0.6 percent while non-durable goods were up 0.5 percent.

Judgeship Bill OK'd

The money would be earmarked for small businesses in the state' 90 rural counties, according to Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, although there was confusion over whether businesses in the 10 counties classified as urban could apply for the loans as well.

The State Board of Education will delay implementation of a controversial requirement that new school public schools include office space for teachers, officials told the Joint Appropriations Committee.

Board chairman Howard Haworth said the plan would be submitted to the powerful Joint Legislative Commission on Governmental Operations. Legislative leaders had accused the board of violating the law by approving the plan without consulting the commission.

"Those teacher support areas need to be reviewed by the Joint Appropriations Committee and governmental operations of the Legislature before they are made official," Haworth said in a telephone interview. "That piece of circuity was not completed, and we are planning to do that before making standards effective as they apply to teacher support areas."

All other standards will go into effect July 1, he said. The teacher offices standards will go into effect after the governmental operations committee meets in July, he said, provided the committee approves the measure. "We are still 100 percent in favor of the teacher support area standards," Haworth said.

DWI Laws
Sen. Dan Simpson, R-Burke, filed two bills to crack down on drunken driving, both requested by Gov. Jim Martin. One would increase to 30 days from 10 days the period for which a driver's license is suspended after arrest. The second would create the new offense of impaired driving in commercial motor vehicles, for which the threshold would be a blood alcohol content of 0.04 instead of the current 0.10. And it would assess a fee for license revocation.

Parking Garage
Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, filed a bill Tuesday that would authorize the state to issue $12 million in bonds for the construction of a parking garage in downtown Raleigh. The garage would be used by state employees and visitors and would be located on property known as Seaboard property, which is near the Albemarle Building.

Public School Funds

tional supplies, and programs for high risk and exceptional children.

Practically the only item in the schools' expansion budget that was not touched on individually at the hearing was across-the-board pay increases for school employees.

Commissioners, since a workshop meeting Monday, have been considering a budget totaling some $34.62 million in continuation items and $6.89 million in expansion requests, which would require a 62 cents per $100 tax rate to fund.

Under the proposal, the public schools would receive $3 million in capital outlay money and about $184,643 in new operating funds.

In all, the board of education has requested more than $2.66 million in expansion items, including $130,000 for the extra pay for extra duty item, $430,000 for an increase in teachers' supplements, $10,000 for principal's supplements, and money for across-the-board pay hikes.

Two of the speakers at the hearing voiced support for a victims advocate program in the sheriff's department, which the board proposed for inclusion in the budget at Monday's workshop.

Deficit Suffered

debtor in 1985, it had still managed over the last two years to have a surplus in the investment category of the current account because many of the U.S. investments had a higher rate of return than newer foreign investments in this country.

However, today's report showed that the country suffered a $655 million deficit in the investment category in the first quarter, the first time this has occurred since 1958.

While the deficit in investment earnings is small, analysts said it was an ominous, although not unexpected, development. It means that American wealth must now be transferred overseas to service its debt and the only way the total debt will be reduced is for the country to start running surpluses in the merchandise account, which experts do not expect to occur anytime soon.

Many economists have warned that the debt service burden will eventually lower Americans' standard of living and is the price the United States will have to pay for living beyond its means in the 1980s.

But the Reagan administration has sought to play down the shift to a net debtor, saying the costs of servicing the debt are still a small percentage of the country's overall economic activity.

In the first quarter, the merchandise trade deficit shrank by 12.7 percent to $35.95 billion, the biggest improvement in five years.

However, the change in the investment category from a surplus to a deficit added $655 million to the country's overall trade imbalance. Also adding to the trade imbalance were payments of $3.15 billion in the category of U.S. foreign aid and pensions for Americans living overseas. These added up to the total deficit of $39.75 billion for the first quarter. For all of 1987, the current account deficit totaled a record $153.96 billion. Even with the deterioration in investment income, analysts expect that deficit will show improvement this year because of the turnaround that is occurring in the merchandise trade deficit.

The optimism on merchandise trade was fueled Tuesday by a report showing that the merchandise trade deficit for April shrank to $9.89 billion, the lowest monthly deficit in more than three years.

The Reagan administration immediately hailed the report as proof that its policy begun in September 1985 of lowering the exchange value of the dollar was finally bearing fruit.

A weaker dollar, by making U.S. goods more competitive on overseas markets, boosts export sales. Export sales have been hitting a string of record highs, gains which have provided much of the strength for the overall economy this year.

However, the weaker dollar was also supposed to curb Americans' appetite for foreign goods, and that has not happened so far. While imports did drop by 6.5 percent in April, analysts said the overall trend is still for rising import sales, in part because foreigners have been slashing profit margins rather than lose their share of the lucrative American market.

Even Series With 111-86 Rout

Aggressive Pistons Pop Lakers

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The Detroit Pistons' drive toward the NBA title stalled until they started driving to the basket. Now it's in high gear.

The championship series became more aggressive and physical Tuesday night when the Pistons evened it at two games each with a 111-86 rout of the Los Angeles Lakers.

In the first quarter, the Pistons charged down the lane and got seven of their first eight baskets on layups. In the fourth quarter, Detroit's Isiah Thomas, playing despite a back injury, charged down the lane and got hammered by his longtime friend, Magic Johnson.

"We're playing for the world championship," Johnson said. "Both of us understand what it's all about. If I go in for a layup, I know he's coming after me. If he goes in for a layup, he knows I'm coming after him."

The Pistons went right into the teeth of the Los Angeles defense, a tactic that often resulted in easy baskets or foul shots. They had 46 free throws Tuesday night compared to only 12 in a 99-86 third game loss Sunday.

They outscored the Lakers 36-28 from the free throw line. The disparity was 28-13 through three quarters.

Detroit's Adrian Dantley, who led all scorers with 27 points, made 13 of 15 free throws. On Sunday, he had only 14 points and only two foul shots.

The intensity the teams displayed Tuesday night, when Silverdome temperatures exceeded 90 degrees, is expected to continue in the fifth game there Thursday night.

"Nobody wants to be playing Game 6 being down 3-2," Los Angeles forward Kurt Rambis said. "So it's going to be the toughest and the roughest and the most physical game of the series."

"It's important for us to win our next home game," Detroit center Bill Laimbeer said. "We don't want to have to go to L.A. having to win two games."

At least they'll be going to L.A. Had the Pistons lost, the defending champion Lakers could have won the title Thursday night. Now, there will be a sixth game Sunday and, possibly, a seventh Tuesday night, both in Inglewood, Calif.

Detroit's decision to return to an inside offensive game caused foul problems for the Lakers.

"We were penetrating, Adrian was going in there and we were dishing the ball off for easy baskets and we got easy fouls," Laimbeer said.

Johnson, who led Los Angeles with 23 points, picked up his fourth foul with Detroit ahead 68-61 with 7:03 left in the third quarter. He didn't return until the start of the fourth quarter and by that time Detroit had an 83-65 advantage.

Leaving Johnson in "wasn't going to make any difference in the game," Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley said. "He had four (fouls) and to put him back in in a situation where we have to play pressure defense and give him his fifth" wouldn't have been wise.

"When he's out of the game they're obviously not as dangerous because he may be the greatest player in the world," Detroit Coach Chuck Daly said.

Johnson got his fifth foul with 7:03 left in the fourth period. Thomas was his victim. Pistons' forward Dennis Rodman grabbed Thomas in case Thomas wanted to go after Johnson and Laimbeer advanced toward the Laker guard.

Johnson said he didn't commit the foul out of frustration because of Detroit's 89-72 lead at the time.

"My elbow's supposed to be there and he ran into it," Johnson said. "This is business. This isn't anything personal," Thomas said. "He made the statement before it (the series) started if I were coming through the lane he'd slam me and I came through the lane and he slammed me."

By that time, however, the outcome was clear. The Lakers' last lead was 24-23 with 2:14 left in the first quarter. They trailed 58-51 at halftime and Detroit closed the third quarter with a 17-5 run to take an 18-point lead into the final period.

The Lakers had just 14 points in the third quarter and 35 in the second half, their low for this year's playoffs. After making 21 of 40 shots in the first half, they hit only eight of 32 in the second half and sank only five in the final 22:40.

"Their defense was a lot more rugged and aggressive," Riley said.

"Everybody was bumping them," Detroit center James Edwards said. "They don't like that and it kind of threw them off their game."

Detroit's offensive aggressiveness, missing in the last two games after an opening victory, had paid off. The 25-point victory margin was the largest in a championship series game since 1985 when the Lakers beat Boston 136-111 in the third game.

Charger Says Strikers Paid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some striking San Diego players were paid for their services last Oct. 18 even though they missed the NFL deadline for reporting that week, former Chargers wide receiver Wes Chandler says.

Chandler, testifying Tuesday before an administrative law judge of the National Labor Relations Board, said that kicker Vince Abbott and defensive linemen Mike Charles and Terry Unrein practiced with striking players on the morning of Oct. 14, then walked the picket line well after the reporting deadline for that week had expired.

Yet, evidence presented in court showed that Unrein was on the active roster for the Chargers' game that Sunday against the Los Angeles Raiders, and Abbott and Charles were on the "exempt list." Players on that list had to be approved by Commissioner Pete Rozelle and, in most cases, received payment for that week.

Judge Benjamin Schlesinger must decide if the league owes players $20 million in back pay for the games of Oct. 18-19. The NFL Players Association alleges that the league discriminated against the players for union activity by refusing to reinstate them upon the conclusion of the strike on Oct. 15.

The NFL refused to pay or use players who returned following the Oct. 14, 1 p.m. EDT deadline. The league contends that the players were not physically ready to play in games the weekend following the 24-day walkout.

But Chandler said the Chargers worked out five days a week and were in much better shape than they were five years earlier following a 57-day walkout.

Pitt Defense Tops Snow Hill

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

With the outcome in doubt, Pitt County used defense as a catalyst for a 9-4 win over Snow Hill in American Legion baseball action Tuesday night.

"We were a little flat tonight," said Pitt County coach Toby Holliday. "But we played good defense which kept us within reach."

"We had three key double plays where they could have broken it open."

Pitt County turned double plays in the sixth, seventh and eighth innings to choke off any hopes Post 13 had of a rally.

In the sixth, Snow Hill loaded the bases against David Leisten as Walt McKeel, and Cedrick Collins hit consecutive singles followed by a walk to Mike Vandiford.

That brought up leadoff hitter George Burnette, who hit the ball sharply in the gap to second baseman Heath Clark, who quickly tagged out Vandiford and then threw to first to put out Burnette.

In the seventh, Tommy Eason had reached on a single with one away, but Shay Beaman hit to shortstop Chris Christopher, who tossed it to Clark to put out Eason at second before throwing to first to get Beaman and end the inning.

Post 13 had a near rally in the eighth when Chris Wess opened with a single and went to second on an error that allowed Cornelius Hill to reach.

But Christopher and Clark came up with another double play to give Post 13 two outs.

But Pitt County was still in trouble. Tom Moye had the final out in his glove in leftfield, but dropped it, allowing Collins to reach and Wess to score. Following a walk to Todd Mewborn, Holliday pulled Leisten in favor of Dallas McPherson, who struck out Burnette for the final out of the inning to end the rally.

With the defense in good shape, Pitt County finally got its offense going in the fifth and seventh innings.

Snow Hill led 3-1 following a two-run homer by Walt McKeel, that keyed a three-run fourth inning for Snow Hill.

Pitt tied the game in the fifth when Franz Holscher singled with one out before coming home on homer by Dave Daniels that made it 3-3.

In the seventh, Leisten opened the inning for Post 39 by getting hit by a pitch and went to second on a sacrifice by Holscher.

Post 13 coach Jim Fulghum then elected to intentionally walk Daniels to face Moye, who was hitless up to that point.

Todd Mewborn replaced Vandiford, who had given up six hits. Moye promptly hit a two-run triple to put Post 39 ahead for good.

"You have to take those chances and find out what you can do," Fulghum said. "I thought that a new face out there would help but it didn't."

Pitt went on to score three more runs that inning to make it 8-3.

Jay Surles singled in Moye and later scored on a single by Clark. Following consecutive walks to Christopher and Tim Moore, Clark scored on Leisten's fielder's choice.

"That was the key hit," Holliday said of Moye's two-run triple. "We were in a situation where the score was tied. We got a guy on and moved him over. Our running helped us tonight."

Post 13 got one run back in the eighth when Wess scored off an error, but Pitt County equaled that in the bottom of the inning when Moye hit a solo home run to make it 9-4.

"We had our chances," Fulghum said. "We had them on there. (But) we struggled tonight. Consistency is what gets you in the upper division."

Pitt County moves to 2-1 on the year and returns to action Friday against Wilson at Harrington Field.

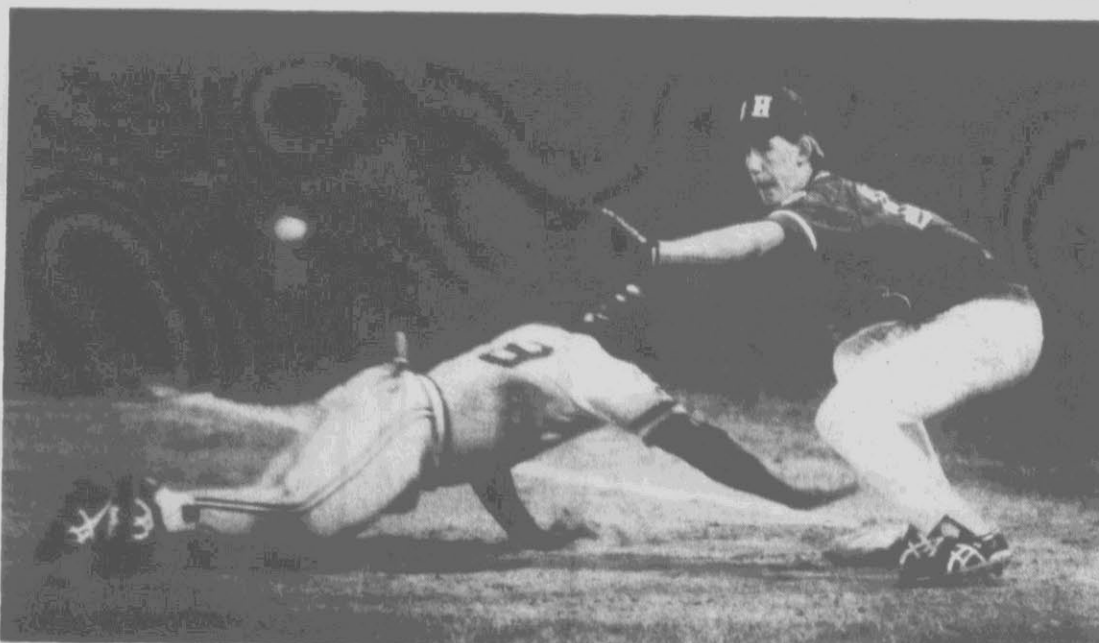

Post 13 falls to 2-2 and returns to action Friday at home against Rocky Mount.

Notes

Pitt County, which has been together as a team only since Sunday, must patch together a lineup for three games this weekend due to the State Games.

Pitchers Moye and Gary Hodges along with infielders Little, Daniels and Holscher will all play for the Region One team.

Clark set a record in the game with nine assists, which broke the previous record of six for a regulation nine-inning game.

Back In Time

Pitt County's Tim Moore (18) gets back to first ahead of the throw to Snow Hill first baseman Chris Wess during third-inning action from their American Legion baseball action. Moore ended up stealing second and third before scoring off an error as Pitt County rolled to a 9-4 win. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis)

Charlotte Called A Promising Baseball Site

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Charlotte is a promising site for a major league baseball expansion, but it will take pressure on the current team owners to make it happen, an official of the Major League Baseball Players' Association says.

"Major league baseball has to be forced into expansion every time," Donald Fehr, executive director of the association, said Tuesday. "It operates as a cartel — it deliberately leaves some markets vacant. That way, you can threaten to move, and the leverage of the owners goes through the ceiling."

"There are no new teams unless somebody stirs up the pot a little bit, creates some pressure," Fehr said. "That's been proven in the past."

Fehr said Charlotte is one of the eight or 10 most promising sites for possible expansion, according to a survey of 23 market areas sponsored by the MLBPA.

Charlotte Knights owner George Shinn, who has made no secret of his goal of eventually bringing major league baseball to Charlotte, also attended the news conference.

"To be realistic, we're talking about 10 years if we take the necessary steps," Shinn said.

Fehr said the study opened his eyes to Charlotte.

"Six months ago, I wouldn't have thought of Charlotte in that sense," he said. "When I was told they have 5.6 million people living within a two-hour drive of them, my reaction was 'They do?' Nobody knows it."

Hornets Name Badger To Management Post

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Boston Celtics chief scout Ed Badger has joined the Charlotte Hornets as coach-director of basketball administration, vice president and general manager Carl Scheer announced Tuesday.

Badger's appointment is the first to the coaching staff since Dick Harter was named head coach June 3. He will join the Hornets on July 1.

"It had to be just the right opportunity to lure me away from Boston. This is that opportunity," Badger said in a statement issued from the Hornets' offices. "I look forward to the challenge of building an expansion team from the very beginning."

Badger, 55, entered coaching on the junior college level, where in 16 seasons he guided Wilbur Wright Junior College in Chicago to a record of 353-110. That mark earned Badger a spot in the NJCAA Basketball Coaches Hall of Fame.

He joined the Chicago Bulls in 1974 as the team's head scout and assistant coach under Dick Motta. As head coach of the Bulls, he had a two-year record of 84-80, finishing as runner-up in NBA coach of the year balloting for his 44-38 mark in the 1976-77 season, an improvement over the previous season's mark of 24-58.

Badger spent five years at the University of Cincinnati, where he compiled a 68-71 mark. He joined the Cleveland Cavaliers as an assistant coach in the 1983-84 season before going to the Celtics.

Andujar Fined $500 By Giamatti

NEW YORK (AP) — National League president Bart Giamatti fined Houston Astros pitcher Joaquin Andujar $500 for throwing at batters and "walking menacingly toward home plate," Andujar's agent said Tuesday.

Giamatti, in a letter to Andujar, warned that if the league felt that Andujar was throwing at batters again, he would be given "a significant fine and suspension," Randy Hendricks said.

Andujar was fined $200 for coming close to hitting Tony Pena of the St. Louis Cardinals on May 21. Andujar was fined an additional $100 for "walking menacingly towards home plate," Hendricks said. Andujar was fined $200 more for hitting Andre Dawson of the Chicago Cubs on May 28.

The Major League Baseball Players Association filed an appeal of the fines on Tuesday. Giamatti will hear the appeal on June 30 or July 1 when the Astros are in New York.

Thomas Rises To Occasion

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The little man came up the court dribbling as if by memory, never bothering to look down. Isiah Thomas does not have to look. He knows the feel of the basketball and the geography of the court by heart.

His eyes darted left and then right, like a cat trapped in an alley, looking for a way out. Positioned in front of him was Magic Johnson of the Los Angeles Lakers, perhaps the best basketball player in the western world.

Thomas looked at Johnson for a split second, his brain racing. Then he did a stutter step right out of the Chicago playgrounds where he learned this game and went right around Mr. Magic. Johnson responded with a double take that would have made Jack Benny proud.

The little man was supposed to have a bad back. He had missed Detroit's afternoon shoot-around before Tuesday's fourth game of the NBA playoffs. And the pre-game reports made it sound like he'd be in a wheelchair. But here he was, dashing down the court like a thoroughbred.

What was going on here? Just a bit of Piston magic by the man with the Biblical name. A sign in the steamy Superdome proclaimed: "Isiah is God." Maybe not, but he'll do for Detroit.

With Johnson out of the way, Thomas closed in on the foul circle. This was serious time. Would the ball go left to Adrian Dantley or right to James Edwards, both driving to the basket? Only Isiah knew for sure and he wasn't telling until the last second.

Finally, the little man chose Dantley and fed him the pass, producing two points for the Pistons. It was one of a dozen assists Thomas accumulated in Detroit's series-tying 111-86 romp.

Bad back, huh? Yeah, bad for the Lakers.

Thomas played 36 minutes, contributing 10 points and nine rebounds. One more board and he would have had a triple double, the NBA's ultimate measurement of a player's contributions.

Now before you begin thinking this guy is some kind of Superman, take Thomas' word that he is merely mortal. His back was sore. He was hurting, even if it didn't look that way. "I couldn't jump and shoot," he said. "All I could do was shoot set shots."

So the Pistons had to settle for his 16-footer to start the third quarter and his 3-pointer to end it. The two baskets punctuated the period in which Detroit sealed this victory.

By the time the fourth quarter rolled around, Johnson, a mild-mannered man, was perturbed enough to take an uncharacteristic shot at Thomas, who is an old friend.

Didn't Johnson have any compassion for the little man with the bad back? No more than Thomas did when he danced past the magic man.

"No matter if it's Isiah or the 12th man on the team, I'm going to check him," Johnson said. "My elbow's supposed to be there and he ran into it."

Isiah was not disturbed by this bit of nastiness. He figured Johnson was just doing his job. "He made the statement that if I came through the lane, he'd slam me," Thomas said. "I came through the lane and he slammed me."

The Pistons were not amused, though. This team that often plays with a chip on its shoulder exchanged some ugly-looking glares with the Lakers. They protect the little man as well they should.

Isiah, however, was in a forgiving mood. "It was just business," he said. "He's a Laker. I'm a Piston. We're both playing for the world championship."

That may explain why his back didn't hurt during the game. "I knew I wouldn't be 100 percent," he said. "But I wanted to get out there. My presence was all we needed. It gave us a threat. It made them conscious of me and left others open because they were trapping."

Thomas' dramatic performance was reminiscent of the 1970 NBA final, when New York's Willis Reed, hampered by a sore hip, limped out to hit his first two shots in the seventh game. It was a cameo appearance, but it provided an emotional lift that carried the Knicks to the title.

Their victims that night? Why it was the trusty Lakers, who seem to have a knack for inspiring that storied Hollywood stuff in their opponents.

I think the picture you ran on Sunday of Brian Wille missing a catch during the baseball series against Harding was in very poor taste. Rose had an excellent season and Brian is a fine athlete and you did them both a disservice by printing it.

Please give this team another photo and a better write-up!

Patricia Norris

To The Sports Editor:

This past weekend, we journeyed to Charlotte to witness the 4-A baseball championship between two outstanding teams. We were very much impressed with this fine group of young men who represented Rose High and Greenville with class and distinction. They were well behaved, courteous, and proud to represent their school and their city. Words can never replace the hurt they feel for not winning the state championship, but they are certainly champions in the hearts of everyone who was in attendance, and the many fans back home.

Returning home Saturday night with compassion for these young men who had given it their best all year, we knew the people of Greenville would in some way let them know that they were appreciated. Then we pick up the Sunday Daily Reflector in anticipation of some tribute of their accomplishments and what do we see — an absolute embarrassment. Of the pictures that could have been on the front page of the sports section from the games that were played, we see an error being made by a young man who like many others on this baseball team epitomizes the finest in student athletes. To say we reacted with anger is a gross understatement. At a time when your newspaper could have had a very positive influence when these young men needed it, you let them down. To whomever selected that picture, shame on you!

To this outstanding group of young men, congratulations not only for the fantastic season you have, but especially for the one ingredient that makes you very special—character—which you clearly demonstrated all season and at the state championship.

Future Pros Will Wait

MILLINGTON, Tenn. (AP) — Outfielder Ted Wood, a top choice in this year's baseball draft, says the decision to delay his pro career to try out for the U.S. Olympic team was an easy one.

"Playing for your country in the Olympics is a once-in-a-lifetime shot," he said at the USA team's training camp.

Wood, who has signed with the San Francisco Giants, is one of 10 Olympic tryouts selected in the first round of the drafts this year.

He also is one of 11 Olympic hopefuls who played last year on the USA Pan American team.

That squad won a silver medal, and Wood said the experience of being on the team was unforgettable.

"I remember coming out on the field for the first time at Cuba and standing there while our national anthem played," he said. "Your chest sort of goes out, and you get a tingling sensation."

Wood is among 41 players trying out for the Olympic team. Workouts began Monday and the squad will have 20 members when it goes to the Olympics in Seoul, South Korea, next September.

Pitcher Gregg Olson, a first-round pick by the San Diego Padres and the fourth player selected overall in the draft, also is trying out for the Olympic team.

"I have my chance to do something," said Olson, who was on the Pan American team. "To go pro right now wouldn't be right. So I'm here."

He has signed a professional contract, but such players are eligible for the Olympics until they actually start drawing salaries. Professional teams have given the young signees time off for the Olympics.

Infielder Dave Silvestri, a second-round pick by the Houston Astros, also was on the Pan American team.

"It's amazing that we have 10 guys on this team drafted in the first round," he said. "Hopefully, if everyone plays to potential, we'll be better than last year."

"Having so many guys with international experience should help," he said. "And we've got a coaching staff that knows how to win."

Head Coach Mark Marquess of Stanford said he'll make his first cuts by the end of the week and the team will be down to 25 players by June 22 when the squad leaves for a five-game series in Japan.

The squad will travel around the United States in July and August playing Taiwan, South Korea, Cuba and several American amateur teams.

In late August, the team travels to Italy for the amateur baseball world championships and then returns to Japan on Sept. 9.

Conley Thinking Of Gold

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — On the mantle in Mike Conley's house, west of Fayetteville, Ark., is a pair of silver shoes.

They symbolize Conley's second-place finish in the triple jump at the 1984 Olympic Games.

Conley, who had the shoes custom made, wore them for about two years, only during triple jump competition.

"I just look at them now," he said. "They're history... a memory."

"Now, I want to put two pairs of gold next to them."

The two golds Conley is thinking about would be for winning the triple jump and the long jump during the Seoul Games this summer.

It is an extremely difficult double — one that has been accomplished only once in the Olympic Games, in 1904, when Myer Prinstein of the United States won both horizontal jumps.

In fact, after Prinstein's victory in the triple jump, the United States did not win another gold in the event until 1984, when Al Joyner beat Conley for the gold.

The U.S. has been much more successful in the Olympic long jump, winning 17 of the 20 golds since the Games began in 1896, and has the defending champion in Carl Lewis.

Lewis, the most consistent long jumper in history, figures to be Conley's major rival in the Olympics, while fellow American Larry Myricks and the Soviet Union's Robert Emmiyan, the only active jumper to surpass 29 feet, also should be in the medal hunt.

In the triple jump, Conley's top opposition should come from Soviets Oleg Protzenko and Alexander Kovalenko, and Bulgaria's Khristo Markov, the 1987 world champion.

Conley was in both events in the World Championships at Rome, finishing second in the triple jump and eighth in the long jump.

He again will be in both events this week in the Mobil Outdoor Track and Field Championships at Pepin-Rood Stadium. The meet began today with the first four events of the heptathlon, and continues through Saturday.

"I need to compete somewhere," Conley said about attempting his double in a meet which many of the top Americans are skipping to continue preparations for next month's Olympic Trials at Indianapolis. "What better place than the national championships?"

Conley is the defending champion in the triple jump and will be trying to regain the long jump title he won in 1985.

He has competed only twice since last September's World Championships, winning the triple jump at Portland, Ore., in February during the indoor season and winning the same event last month in an outdoor meet at San Jose, Calif.

This will be his first long jump competition in nine months. He has suffered from tendinitis in his right leg for about three months, an injury which has hindered his long jumping because it is on his takeoff foot, but did not affect his triple jumping.

Despite the lack of competition, Conley is not worried.

"The injury is not serious," he said. "It still bothers me a little in practice. When I'm going to long jump, I have to wrap the leg and warm up longer."

"But I've been doing well in practice. I've been jumping in the high 26-foot or low 27-foot range."

"After this meet, if I do well, I may hold off competing again until the Trials. If not, maybe I'll jump in another one or two meets."

"After the Trials, I will train for about a month, then go to Europe for three or four meets in August."

Meanwhile, Conley will keep space reserved on his mantle for two pair of gold shoes.

"I stopped wearing the other ones (the silvers) because I wanted to stop thinking about them," he said. "I wanted to think about gold instead of silver."

"I want to forget about coming in second and start winning. Winning both events (in the Olympics) is realistic, barring the tendinitis."

If he accomplishes the rare double, Conley would get the recognition he is seeking.

"I want to be known as the greatest jumper who ever lived — a combination long jumper and triple jumper, along with dunking a basketball," said Conley, who won the $50,000 top prize in the Foot Locker Slam Slam dunk competition at Bluffton, S.C., in February.

"Some people can long jump and triple jump, but they can't dunk a basketball. Some people can dunk a basketball, but they can't long jump or triple jump."

Conley can do them all and do them all well. Now he wants to be the best at all three.

Brown Apologizes For His Remarks

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — After apologizing for his previous complimentary remarks about the city, new San Antonio Spurs coach Larry Brown told fans the team's success would depend on their energy.

More than 500 fans turned out at a mall on Tuesday for Brown's first public appearance, an autograph session.

Brown, 47, who left Kansas for the $3.5-million, five-year contract with the Spurs, had coached teams that played against the Spurs in the American Basketball Association in the mid-1970s.

He told the fans they would need to get fired up as they were then.

"I can't promise you how well we'll do, but I can promise you we will be a team that will try hard every night and give you the kind of effort that you deserve," Brown said. "Our success is going to be directly related to your enthusiasm and the way you get behind us. I've seen you do it before and I know you can do it again."

Brown replaces Bob Weiss, who was fired after two seasons during which he compiled a 59-105 record.

Brown, who coached the ABA team in Carolina and Denver, had angered Spurs fans then by saying the only thing good in San Antonio was the guacamole, but he made amends Tuesday.

"I apologize about the things I said about San Antonio a long time ago. I really didn't mean it," Brown said. "I will eat the guacamole salad. To be honest I really kind of like it. I like to eat it more than I like to wear it on my shirt."

Brown, who led Kansas to the NCAA championship in April, got resounding applause after being introduced by Mayor Henry Cisneros.

The mayor warmed up the crowd, saying San Antonio would benefit from the acquisition of 7-foot-1 center David Robinson, who has signed a $26-million, eight-year contract to play with the Spurs after finishing his two-year commitment with the Navy.

Cisneros also said that the Spurs' and the city would prosper by B.J. "Red" McCombs' $47-million purchase of the team last month.

The mayor told the crowd it would have to pack the rafters to give Brown the support he wants.

"I think we got a very rare human being who has been a winner everywhere he has gone," Cisneros said. "You combine a winning coach with a winner like Red McCombs and the winning potential that is the San Antonio Spurs, the players, and the winner that is San Antonio and we just can't be whipped."

McCombs, a longtime San Antonio businessman and former sole owner of the Denver Nuggets, said he never thought Brown would agree to come to San Antonio.

"I knew he was the best coach in the United States and I knew we were going to make every shot at it, but I never really dreamed that he would be here," McCombs said. "I can't tell you how much this means for this program and this city."

Spurs forward Walter Berry greeted Brown and said he looked forward to learning from him.

"It's going to mean a whole lot to me," he said. "I'm pretty sure we're going to get the job done and I think Larry Brown is going to do a great job."

Brown, who also coached at UCLA and the New Jersey Nets before going to Kansas five years ago, will bring along assistants Ed Manning, Alvin Gentry and R.C. Buford.

Thomas was a big reason for the Pistons' dominance with assists on five of their first six baskets. He decided Tuesday afternoon he'd be able to play despite an injury sustained late in Sunday's game when he fell on his back.

"My presence on the court was all we needed," Thomas said. The Lakers "had to be conscious of me."

He said his injury prevented him from taking jump shots, but Riley said, "he became more of a ball mover than I've ever seen him."

Thomas had a game high 12 assists, led the Pistons with nine rebounds and had 10 points.

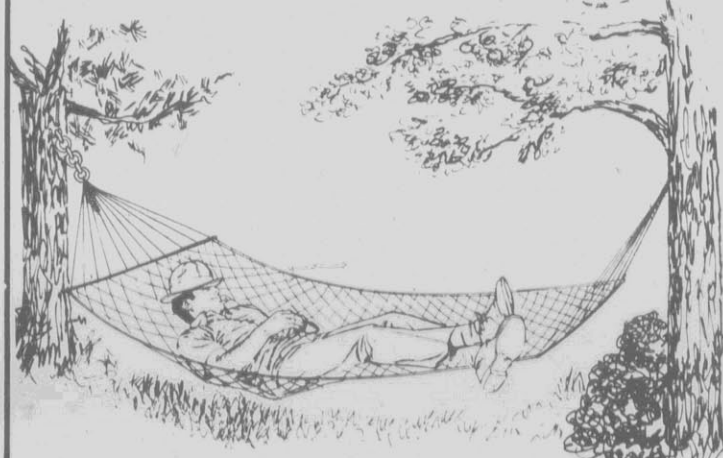

Substitutes Vinnie Johnson had 16 points and Edwards 14. Lambeer added 13. Byron Scott and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar 13 each for the Lakers.

"We didn't get a chance to run our offense and we didn't run the ball," Abdul-Jabbar said. "So nothing really worked for us."

It seemed as if nearly everything worked for the Pistons.

"I don't know if it's a momentum builder," Dantley said. "But it definitely helped us."

Rijo Uses Family Ties To Tune His Game

By HILLEL ITALIE
Associated Press Writer
 Having a Hall of Famer in the family has made the road for Jose Rijo a lot smoother.

On Tuesday night, Rijo allowed two hits in eight innings as the Reds defeated the Houston Astros 7-1 to snap a three-game losing streak.

"I owe that to a lot of people, especially Juan Marichal," said Rijo, moved into the starting rotation last week when Dennis Rasmussen was traded to San Diego. "He told me about concentration, that's about the only thing I needed."

Elsewhere, it was Pittsburgh 6, Chicago 3; Montreal 9, Philadelphia

0, in the first game of a doubleheader and Philadelphia 4, Montreal 2 in the second game; New York 5, St. Louis 0; Los Angeles 5, Atlanta 4, and San Diego 8, San Francisco 5.

Rijo, 8-1, has won eight straight decisions, six as a reliever.

"He's not the same pitcher that Oakland traded to us. Something happened to him over the winter," Cincinnati manager Pete Rose said. "The difference in Jose is what happened to him at winter ball."

"His whole mental approach to the game is different. He's very positive."

Rijo allowed just a walk to Rafael Ramirez and Alex Trevino's clean single to right in the third inning and Kevin Bass' single in the seventh off Nick Esasky's glove at first.

The right-hander is 4-1 against the Astros this season.

"When a pitcher like that has command of all his pitches, it's going to be a rough night," Houston manager Hal Lanier said.

But Rijo confesses he'd be even more positive if he could go back to relief pitching.

"It feels good to start, but I really miss the bullpen," Rijo said. "Things were going really well for me. It's more fun (relieving), more exciting. You get to play every day."

Rob Murphy pitched a perfect ninth.

Esasky led the Cincinnati offense with his fifth homer and fifth career grand slam, which capped a five-run fifth against Danny Darwin, 3-5.

Pirates 6, Cubs 3

Darnell Coles hit two solo home runs and Randy Milligan hit a two-run homer to lead Pittsburgh over Chicago.

Bobby Bonilla also homered for the Pirates, his 15th of the year, matching his career high. Pittsburgh has won nine of 11 from Chicago this season.

John Smiley, 6-4, allowed seven hits and struck out five in five innings. Jeff Robinson pitched two innings of one-hit relief for his seventh save.

Coles' first homer was off Jamie Moyer, 3-7, in the top of the second inning. Bonilla homered with two outs in the fourth, Coles walked and Milligan followed with his third home run of the year to make it 4-0.

Coles also homered to lead off the ninth against Pat Perry.

Expos 9, Phillies 0
 Phillies 4, Expos 2

Dennis Martinez pitched a three-hitter and singled in two runs and Tim Wallach hit a two-run homer to lead a 16-hit attack as Montreal took the first game of a two-night doubleheader.

In the nightcap, Juan Samuel homered and tripled and Don Carman scattered five hits in seven innings to lead Philadelphia.

Martinez allowed only a first-inning walk to Lance Parrish until Steve Jeltz singled to lead off the sixth. Martinez also allowed singles to Chris James in the seventh and Jeltz in the eighth in winning his third straight start.

Martinez, 7-6, struck out 10, five in the last two innings, and walked two in pitching his second complete game and first shutout of the season.

Hubie Brooks doubled and singled twice as every Montreal starter had at least one hit.

The Expos scored three times in the first against Bruce Ruffin, 4-5.

Carman, 4-3, walked two and struck out five in the second game. Steve Bedrosian pitched two innings and earned his eighth save despite allowing Tim Raines' RBI triple in the ninth.

Samuel gave the Phillies a 1-0 lead in the first when he tripled and scored on a wild pitch by John Dopper, 1-4, and led off with the fifth his sixth home run.

Mets 5, Cardinals 0

Bob Ojeda scattered nine hits and had his first major-league RBI and Len Dykstra went 3-for-5 as New York sent St. Louis to its fifth straight loss.

Ojeda, 5-5, walked one and struck out three in his second shutout this season. It was his second complete game in 13 starts. He singled home Howard Johnson in the eighth for his first major-league RBI in 110 at-bats.

Jose DeLeon, 4-5, fell to 1-8 lifetime against New York.

Dykstra hit a triple, double and single as the Mets beat St. Louis for the eighth time in 11 games. He also was at the center of controversy in the seventh inning when his ground-ball triple down the right-field line prompted St. Louis manager Whitey Herzog to check Dykstra's bat.

The Cardinals stranded 11 runners, seven of them in scoring position.

Dodgers 5, Braves 4

Fernando Valenzuela won his 14th game in 17 decisions against Atlanta and John Shelby hit a two-run homer as Los Angeles snapped a three-game losing streak.

Valenzuela, 5-5, allowed four hits in seven innings, striking out one and walking three. He also singled, doubled and walked. Jay Howell, who replaced Alejandro Pena with none out and runners on first and second in the eighth, allowed a run-scoring groundout to Gerald Perry and Dale Murphy's RBI double. Howell also worked the ninth to earn his seventh save.

Pete Smith, 1-7, has lost six straight decisions and is winless since April 24.

The Dodgers took a 1-0 lead in the first and added another run in the second. After Mike Marshall led off the third with a single, Shelby hit his third home run to make it 4-0.

Padres 8, Giants 5

Marvell Wynne's three-run homer capped a seven-run sixth inning as San Diego won its sixth straight game.

The Giants, who lost their fourth consecutive game, held a 5-0 lead before the Padres took advantage of two errors to score six unearned runs in their biggest inning of the year.

Greg Booker, 1-2, the second of four San Diego pitchers, worked one scoreless inning. Lance McCullers pitched two innings to earn his fifth save.

San Francisco starter Mike LaCoss had blanked the Padres on four hits through five innings. Wynne's eighth homer, his career high, came off reliever Craig Lefferts, 1-5.

A wild pitch by Scott Garrelts scored Tony Gwynn in the bottom of the seventh.

Health Causes
 Kensil Move

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP) — Steve Gutman admits he and Leon Hess are not professional football men. They are, however, at the top of the ladder of an NFL team, the New York Jets.

Gutman, who joined the Jets in 1977 and has served as administrative manager, was named president on Tuesday when Jim Kensil resigned for health reasons.

Hess, who made his fortune in the oil business, became the Jets' chairman of the board in 1977 and hired Kensil, the league's executive director and right-hand man to Commissioner Pete Rozelle, and Gutman to put together a front office to run the team.

Since then, the Jets have been in the playoffs four times but have not made it to the Super Bowl. They won the NFL championship in 1969 and have been one of the league's biggest financial winners despite a hefty payroll.

"Since Leon, the nominal head of the organization, and myself are not traditional football people," Gutman, 52, said, "we have to examine bringing in another football man to handle the aspects that Jim did."

For now, a five-man committee headed by Hess, Gutman and Coach Joe Walton, and including pro personnel director Jim Royer and player personnel director Mike Hickey, who does the drafting, will make the major decisions.

Hess, who has been reluctant to take much involvement in the operation of the team, promised he would be available with Kensil retired.

"I don't attend many meetings," Hess said. "I have a great deal of things to do. I have other duties. But I will take more of a part and attend more meetings."

Hess said no steps have been taken to search for a general manager.

Seve Hoping To Rebound From A Tough Past Year

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Seve Ballesteros describes 1987 as "the year nothing went right for me." He may yet be able to call 1988 the year he went right back to the top.

The winner of last week's Westchester Classic in a four-way playoff, Ballesteros is one of the favorites in the U.S. Open beginning Thursday.

"This puts my confidence at a high point, and confidence is very important to me," Ballesteros said after a birdie on the first playoff hole beat Greg Norman, David Frost and Ken Green at Westchester. "When I came here (to Westchester) my confidence was not very good. I had not been playing very good. Nothing was going right for me."

Ballesteros will head a strong contingent of foreign players who may well dominate the Open on this tight, tree-lined course with small greens. Besides the Spaniard Ballesteros, the foreign favorites include Norman, of Australia, Sandy Lyle of Scotland, Nick Faldo of Britain, Bernhard Langer of West Germany and South African David Frost.

Lyle, the Masters champion, leads the PGA Tour in money winnings with $608,479 and is this season's only three-time winner.

"It just all came together this year," Lyle said, adding that he can't consider himself the favorite.

"In the end, it all comes down to putting and the breaks, doesn't it?" Lyle asked. "There are so many players who hit the ball so well, certainly well enough to win. It all comes down to what happens from 100 yards in."

Norman came from six strokes back with a final-round 64, the best of the tournament, to make the Westchester playoff. In the Open, he probably is best remembered for his 18-hole playoff loss to Fuzzy Zoeller in 1984.

"I've been close," he said. "The closer you get, the more you want to go out and win as many as you can. That all happened in the past. I can't think about that now. It's gone. There's nothing I can do about it."

Perhaps the top threat among the Americans is Curtis Strange, who set money-winning records two of the past three seasons and has won twice in 1988. His peers call him perhaps the best player in golf today.

"He's certainly among the top three, up there with Norman and Lyle," former Open champion Ray Floyd said of Strange.

And Jack Nicklaus, a four-time Open winner, thinks Strange could be one of the greats, if he fulfills a certain prerequisite.

"Curtis' recent record is very, very good," Nicklaus said. "But he hasn't yet won a major. He needs to do that to confirm his record. And I think he will. I think he'll win a major. I think he'll win more than one major."

"He's just coming into his prime years now. And his game is suited very well to the U.S. Open," Nicklaus said.

"It's the most pressure I've ever had," Strange said. "I hope I can handle it. I've always felt pressure should get you more prepared, make you play better. You want to use it positively. Sometimes it goes the other way, but you want to try to make the pressure work for you."

Nicklaus said after practice Tuesday that one of the keys to the tournament "will be to not get discouraged when you see your score three or four shots over par in the third round."

On this old, traditional-style course, the greens are small and fast, the fairways narrow and lined with trees. And the rough is high and thick. There are three par-4s on the front side that are over 400 yards and six on the back side, including the 453-yard No. 11. The course plays to 7,010 yards and par 71.

"The course really isn't that long," Norman said. "There are some 450-yard par-4s, but they're mostly downhill."

With his penchant for making pars from awkward positions and his recently reformed putting touch, Ballesteros could be the one to beat. He sure would like to live down the 1987 Masters defeat when he three-putted the first playoff hole in a tournament eventually won by Larry Mize.

"Ever since the Masters playoff, I have no confidence in my putting," Ballesteros said.

Brookens' Big Day Keys Detroit

By The Associated Press
Cherish was the word Tom Brookens used to describe his performance against the Baltimore Orioles. Brookens went 4-for-4 and drove in six runs with a grand slam and a two-run single to lead the Detroit Tigers past the Orioles 9-3 Tuesday night.

"I had four hits earlier this year, but I didn't have six RBI or anything like that," Brookens said. "Days like this come along every once in a while and you just have to cherish them."

Brookens gave the Tigers 5-0 lead in the second inning when he hit his second career grand slam on a pitch from starter Dickie Noles, 0-1. Brookens hit his only other major-league grand slam on May 29, 1987 against Minnesota's Joe Klink.

"Nothing can pump you up more than a grand slam, that's for sure," Brookens said. "I was in no way thinking grand slam. Maybe a power hitter would be, but I wasn't. I was just trying to drive the ball into the outfield and get the run in," Brookens said.

"We have to have someone like Brookens pick up the slack for us," Tigers manager Sparky Anderson said. "Tommy really hit the ball well tonight. He's a tough kid."

The victory moved the Tigers within two games of first-place New York in the American League East.

Doyle Alexander, 6-4, pitched eight innings allowing six hits and Guillermo Hernandez pitched the ninth for the Tigers.

The Tigers took a 1-0 lead in the second when Matt Nokes' bases-loaded single scored Alan Trammell from third. One out later, Brookens made it 5-0 with his third home run.

Baltimore manager Frank Robinson was ejected in the bottom of the fifth by third base umpire Al Clark.

"He threw me out for putting my hands on my hips, that's what he said," Robinson said. "He was looking for trouble tonight. That carried over from last (Monday) night, when he told me in the eighth inning that I was gone if I said one more word."

Red Sox 7, Yankees 3
Ellis Burks broke a sixth-inning tie an RBI double and Wade Boggs drove in two runs as Boston beat New York at Fenway Park.

Mike Smithson, signed as a free agent last winter, scattered nine hits in seven innings for the victory and Lee Smith finished. Smith earned his ninth save of the season and No. 189 of his career, moving ahead of Mike Marshall for ninth place on the all-time list.

With the score tied 3-3, Pat Dodson started the Boston sixth with an opposite-field double to left. Dodson took third on Spike Owen's sacrifice and scored on Burks' one-hop shot into the bleachers, 420 feet away.

Blue Jays 3, Indians 2
George Bell tied the score 2-2 in the eighth inning with a blood double and scored the go-ahead run on Ernie Whitt's sacrifice fly as Toronto beat visiting Cleveland.

Tom Candiotti, 6-6, pitched into the seventh inning with a four-hit shutout and a 2-0 lead when Whitt hit his second homer.

In the eighth, Moseby singled, advanced to second on a balk, and scored on Bell's double down the right-field line. Candiotti, who has lost five straight, then walked two batters to load the bases and Whitt hit a line drive deep to right to score Bell.

Twins 3, White Sox 1
Dan Gladden hit his fourth leadoff homer of the season as Minnesota beat Chicago at the Metrodome for the Twins' 17th victory in their last 23 games.

Bert Blyleven, 5-6, allowed seven hits in 6 1/3 innings before giving way to Juan Berenguer. Berenguer pitched 1 2-3 innings and Jeff Rardon got the last three outs for his 17th save.

The Twins made it 3-0 in the fifth of Greg Gagne's two-run triple.

Brewers 5, Mariners 1
Tom Filer won his 12th straight game since 1982 and Rob Deer hit a three-run homer as Milwaukee beat Seattle at County Stadium.

Filer, 4-0 this season and 11-0 in his AL career, has not lost since June 1982 when he was with the Chicago Cubs in the National League.

Deer hit a three-homer in the third off starter Mike Moore, 5-7, to give Milwaukee a 5-0 lead. Deer, who also singled, is now 9-for-18 with three homers and seven RBI in his career against Moore.

Royals 2, Athletics 1
Bret Saberhagen allowed five hits in eight-plus innings and Kansas City held on to beat Oakland at the Coliseum for its 11th victory in 12 games.

The Royals improved their record 4-0 over the Athletics and pulled within 6 1/2 games of the AL West leaders.

With the score 1-1 in the eighth, Willie Wilson singled and went to second on a balk. George Brett put the Royals ahead with a double that left fielder Dave Parker misjudged.

The Royals used three relievers in the ninth and Gene Garber got the last out with the bases loaded for his sixth save.

Angels 3, Rangers 0
Mike Witt pitched a four-hitter for only his fifth victory in his last 23 starts as California beat visiting Texas.

Witt, 4-7, walked four and struck out six in en route to his second shutout of the season. It was Witt's second victory over the Rangers in a week and his first back-to-back victories since last Aug. 13 and 17.

Ray Hayward, 4-4, was matching Witt's pitching when Tony Armas hit his third home run with one out in the fifth to give the Angels a 1-0 lead. One out later, Jack Howell walked and scored on Chico Walker's double.

Graf Focusing On Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Steffi Graf got flowers, gold earrings and a birthday cake with candles forming the number 1. But there's one thing she wants most — a Wimbledon championship.

No one, least of all eight-time champion Martina Navratilova, is going to give Graf that. She knows she'll have to earn it.

"This is the most famous tournament in the world," said the top-seeded West German, who lost to Navratilova in last year's final. "This is the one everyone wants to win."

Graf, who is skipping this week's warm-up grass tournament in Eastbourne to practice privately in London, turned 19 on Tuesday. But she didn't spend the day celebrating.

"I practiced this morning and I'm going to practice again this afternoon," she said. "Then I'm going home for the night. I will have my party after Wimbledon."

Graf will play American Hu Na in the opening round, while second-seeded Navratilova will meet Sabrina Goleis of Yugoslavia.

Navratilova, seeking her seventh straight singles title, seemed pleased with her first-round pairing.

"I guess I'd rather play her than (John) McEnroe," Navratilova said of Goleis.

McEnroe, who is returning to Wimbledon for the first time in three years, fared very well in Tuesday's draw.

The three-time champion and No. 8 seed opens against 19-year-old Horst Skoff of Austria and is not seeded to face a true grass-court player until the fourth round when his opponent would be hard-serving Kevin Curren, who beat McEnroe in the 1985 quarterfinals.

British bookies were so impressed by McEnroe's draw that they shortened his odds from 7-1 to 5-1, making him the third choice behind co-favorites Ivan Lendl and Boris Becker.

Lendl, the top seed and No. 1 player in the world, meets Britain's David Felgate in the opening round. Becker, the sixth seed and two-time champion, faces John Frawley of Australia.

Felgate, ranked 360th in the world, said he won't be intimidated by Lendl, who has lost the last two Wimbledon finals.

"I am best man at a friend's wedding on Saturday and have to make a speech," he said. "The prospect of having to do that frightens me more at the moment than playing the world's number one player."

Booster Test Successful

By PEG McENTEE
Associated Press Writer
BRIGHAM CITY, Utah (AP) — The apparently successful test-firing of a version of Morton Thiokol's redesigned solid fuel booster leaves only one final test before space shuttle flights can resume, officials say.

The 122-second test Tuesday at the rocket manufacturer's remote plant west of here was the fourth of five required to qualify the redesigned booster before the shuttle program, halted after the 1986 Challenger disaster, can resume.

Brilliant yellow flame erupted from the 126-foot-long rocket, the ground trembled and grayish-brown smoke billowed thousands of feet into the air amid a roar that could be heard for miles.

"It's an extremely good test," said Royce Mitchell, solid rocket program manager for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. "It's a good feeling to have everything looking so well at this time."

J.R. Thompson, director of the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., said the apparent success of the test bodes well for an August launch of the shuttle Discovery.

The motor was virtually identical to those that will help power the Discovery and other shuttles, Thiokol spokesman Rocky Raab said. Unlike the three previous test-firings, the rocket did not contain any intentional flaws designed to determine whether its joints can withstand the intense heat and pressures of launch even in the event of some failures.

The Challenger explosion on Jan. 28, 1986, was blamed on a booster joint that allowed a plume of superhot gas to burn through an O-ring, triggering the blast that killed the three crew members.

Thiokol plans to conduct the final full-scale test in late July, with severe flaws introduced in the joints to test the system to its limits.

"We'd rather take the risks in the hills of Utah rather than on the launch pad," Thompson said.

Tuesday's test was the first conducted on a new $22 million test stand, which uses hydraulic struts to duplicate steering, flight turbulence and other stresses the motor will endure during launch, Raab said.

Allen McDonald, Thiokol's vice president of engineering, said preliminary data indicated that the motor successfully withstood the simulated liftoff and flight stresses, which were "worst-case sideloads" similar to those experienced in past shuttle flights.

He said engineers will spend two days studying computer readouts of the test and disassembling the motor, and officials expect to have a complete analysis within two weeks.

The new test stand also can heat an entire motor to 110 degrees Fahrenheit or cool it to 20 degrees. The rocket's 1.1 million pounds of propellant were heated to a uniform 90 degrees, or about 20 degrees warmer than the usual launch temperature, to allow engineers to test its performance at the upper limit for an actual launch, Raab said.

In late December, a rocket motor and its propellant will be cooled to about 40 degrees for another test to analyze its performance at the other end of the spectrum, he said.

ROCKET TEST SUCCESSFUL — Morton Thiokol and NASA officials conducted the fourth of five test firings of a version of Thiokol's redesigned solid fuel booster Tuesday at their site west of Brigham City, Utah. Officials say preliminary data show the test was successful, although final results won't be available for up to two weeks. (AP Laserphoto)

Machine Would Extend Donor Organ Preservation

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Scientists built a machine that could make transplants more available by allowing donor organs to be shipped worldwide, but it also may intensify debate over surgery costs and the fairness of organ distribution.
The machine has preserved sheep and pig hearts up to 24 hours, and should be ready in three years to preserve human hearts, livers, kidneys and other tissues, including limbs, for 72 hours or more, said co-inventor Ralph Purdy, a University of California, Irvine, pharmacologist.
Technology now in routine use by transplant centers preserves hearts for only four to five hours, livers for 12 hours and kidneys for 48 hours, limiting how far organs can be transported, he said Tuesday.

If the device works on human organs, "it would be a revolution in transplantation ... because there now are a significant proportion of donor hearts that are lost because they cannot be transported to recipients in time," said Arthur Caplan, director of the University of Minnesota Center for Biomedical Ethics.
However, the machine could make it more difficult to allocate organs fairly "because more people will be eligible here and overseas to get these organs," he said from Minneapolis.
Caplan said that while about $3 billion is spent annually on U.S. organ transplants, the machine developed in Irvine will "force us to address a question we haven't addressed head-on, which is how much do we want to spend on transplants."

"We've been able to escape having to think how much to spend because there's (now) a limit on the number of organs available," he added.
"With a machine like this, you could easily conceive of increasing the number of available organs by 50 percent or more because you can procure donors anywhere in the world."
The possibility of a global donor pool means ethical rules must be developed to prevent officials or residents of developing nations from exporting organs that were obtained unscrupulously, said Jim Martin-dale, co-inventor of the machine.

"The nightmare is that someone sells their brother, sister or child" to killers who commit murder to harvest the organs, he added.
Caplan predicted the machine will be used on human organs within three years because the U.S. Food and Drug Administration will be pressured to approve it because of its great lifesaving potential.
The University of California has applied for a patent on the device, so the prototype machine, which can fit on a hospital cart, wasn't displayed during a news conference.
However, the key portion is a clear, plastic cylinder in which a donor organ is placed. It is attached to a pump to push oxygen-rich artificial blood through an organ or limb, and to other devices that automatically maintain proper temperature, pressure, oxygen and nutrient levels and also carry off wastes.

Purdy displayed a videotape showing a sheep's heart pumping in the cylinder at a rate of 10 times per minute, partly by its own action but also aided by a separate pump. Existing preservation methods bathe the heart in near-freezing solutions to halt pumping.
Even though donor organs are removed from brain-dead accident victims, many people may feel repulsed at the idea of shipping beating hearts because it may seem "disrespectful to the body," Caplan said.
Purdy said the ability to maintain organs for longer periods will allow medical research on organs that are unfit for transplant but suitable for testing new drugs or medical procedures.

Caplan said that will raise ethical problems for doctors who will have to ask relatives of a dead person to donate their loved ones' organs for use in research rather than for transplantation.
In February 1987, researchers from Gulf South Research Institute in Louisiana said they had developed the Total Organ Perfusion System, which also uses a pump and special fluid to preserve organs. They said they had preserved pigs' hearts for 24 hours, but didn't think the degree of preservation was adequate.
Last September, surgeons at the University of Wisconsin announced they were using a new mix of chemicals to preserve donor livers more than 24 hours.

Treatment Step Made With Gene

NEW YORK (AP) — Scientists have corrected malfunctioning liver cells from a rabbit by implanting a human gene, a first step toward possible cure of a disease that can give children heart attacks.

The gene made the cells manufacture more protein structures called receptors that absorb cholesterol from the bloodstream.

In humans, a deficiency in the receptor supply leads to familial hypercholesterolemia, an inherited disease that causes heart attacks by leaving too much cholesterol in the bloodstream.

The milder form of the disease affects about one in 500 people, and can be treated with diet and medication.

But one in a million people are born without the ability to make any receptors, and they often suffer heart attacks in early childhood. Some have been treated successfully with transplants of the liver, which contains most of the body's receptors.

The new test-tube work is reported in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences by James Wilson and Richard Mulligan of the Whitehead Institute for Biomedical Research and the biology department at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and David Johnston and Douglas Jefferson of the Tufts-New England Medical Center in Boston.

They worked with liver cells from rabbits that showed a deficiency in receptors for low-density cholesterol, called LDL. A virus was used to carry the human gene that oversees production of LDL receptors into the rabbit cells.

One group of cells that took up the gene later showed four to five times the normal number of receptors. That overabundance may help reduce the number of liver cells that would have to be transplanted back into a human patient after treatment in the laboratory, researchers said.

The next research step will be to make the altered cells work stably when placed in rabbits, researchers said.

But before such an approach could provide long-term cure in humans for this or other inherited liver diseases, scientists must find better ways to transplant liver cells, they said. In the long run, finding ways to plant the receptor gene directly into the liver of a patient may work better, they said.

'We Have A Fairly Good Life Now'

From White House To Deep Woods, Jimmy Carter Is Finding New Life

By PAUL HENDRICKSON
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

ELLIJAY, Ga. — He used to go up to the roof of the White House late at night to watch the Canada geese on their flights southward. If you stood perfectly quiet, you could just make out the faint honking above all the city's night sounds. Where were they headed, those birds — to the Argentine? Sometimes he and his son Jeffrey, an amateur astronomer, would take a telescope with them to the roof. The geese's bellies, stretched taut under their wide wings, shone like silver in the vapored glow of the street lamps of Pennsylvania Avenue.

"There was something ghostly about it," he says softly, seeming almost to be talking to himself. And then: "Actually we did lots of things like that that the American people never knew about."

The 39th president of the United States is sitting on the pineboard porch of his one-bedroom log cabin deep in the mountains of North Georgia. These are the tag-end of the Appalachians, which stretch all the way to Maine. Atlanta is two hours to the south, down the Zell Miller Mountain Parkway; Washington is somewhere far up north, and the road doesn't run straight from here. Thirty feet away, pure cold water is

"What so many people don't know is how distressed financially we were. We didn't know what we'd do. First, we'd lost the election, and that was a shock. Then the trustee of our estate came and told us he had some more bad news for us. He said our farm was greatly in debt. It was an altogether new, unwanted, and potentially empty life we faced."

crashing and boiling against huge boulders, sluicing down ledges of outcropping granite. Jimmy Carter has his own half-mile stretch of private stream on Walnut Mountain, and he can cast to it off his front porch. The stream's name is Turniptown Creek, and it is alive with fat, pulpy rainbows, some native, some planted by the Secret Service.

This morning, at 6:15, on his second cast, the passionate fly fisherman, who owns 100 books on the subject and has devoured them all, caught a 10-incher on a black gnat pattern that he tied himself with deer hair. He looped his peach line out into his favorite pool, which actually was a little milky because of the rains last night. A 10-inch rainbow might not sound like much of a fish, but on a rod that weighs two ounces and quivers like a wand to your heartbeat, it can seem as great as Moby Dick.

"Not a bad way to spend a retirement," he says, flashing that same, toothy, almost painfully disconcerting smile. The voice still has that thin, high-timbered quality, almost Elizabethan in its inflections, that curious rise on the penultimate syllables.

"I'd say we have a fairly all around 'good life now,'" says the man who seemed to do everything right in winning the presidency and everything wrong in holding it. "You need some things in your life that don't change. This is a physical change in our lives that ties us both, Rosalynn and me, to the same experiences, the same sensations, that I knew when I was 5 years old and going into the woods with my father. In some cases, when I'm in the woods down at our home in South Georgia, it's the same tree I'm suddenly rediscovering, re-experiencing. I think I wrote in my new book that when my son Chip got his first quail not so many years ago, it turned out to be under the very same tree where I had gotten my first quail with my father."

If there is something wistful in the words, there seems something found in them, too.

Much later in the conversation he says this:

"What so many people don't know is how distressed financially we were. We didn't know what we'd do. First, we'd lost the election, and that was a shock. Then the trustee of our estate came and told us he had some more bad news for us. He said our farm was greatly in debt. It was an altogether new, unwanted, and potentially empty life we faced. We didn't know how we were going to pay our creditors. That's partly the reason why I sat down and wrote my memoirs so quickly. 'Keeping Faith' was written to redeem our family finances. Then the book Rosalynn and I did together, 'Everything to Gain.' We just decided to let our hair down. And not conceal things about ourselves, the pains and disillusionments and the doubts about our future that we faced. Even such potentially unpleasant experiences as living with each other all day. You know, I think I had never spent an entire day in the house. For 15 years I

Dropout Specialists Give Haircuts Along With Pat On The Back

By BOB BAKER

L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

LOS ANGELES — On 105th Street in Watts, two young men stood at a big ramshackle house and yelled the name of the father again and again, insisting that he come out. They weren't looking for trouble. They wanted him to send his three boys to school.

Fred Williams and Jim Goins had found this house on a tip from a neighbor, who noticed that the children had been out of school for months. Williams and Goins had made so many visits here that the father had begun locking the gate that leads to the side door. Yet this day, having entered through adjoining property, the men were knocking on the door again.

On past occasions, the father had cited his work schedule and a desire to educate his children independently as reasons for not enrolling them. Williams and Goins had concluded that it was more a matter of laziness or flakiness. Their outrage was building. Excuses no longer mattered.

"We're not leaving today without those kids," Williams vowed, and once again he loudly called the father's name.

After 20 minutes, the father gave up. Appearing groggy, he opened the door and presented two of his sons, one of them wearing tennis shoes with the toes cut off because they no longer fit. Enroll them, he said.

For victories like this, Williams, a former street gang member, and Goins, a master's degree student, are paid $8 an hour. They are teacher's aides who, through accident and instinct, have become the Los Angeles Unified School District's most aggressive dropout counselors, working in a part of town where school is regarded cynically by many parents.

Williams, a husky man with the demeanor of a street-wise Bill Cosby, and Goins, who is smoother, low-key and bearded, signed on at 102nd Street School two years ago primarily to pay their bills. Coincidentally, the school was becoming part of a new program to statistically track potential dropouts at 24 schools. The teacher's aides were asked to help push paper.

They wound up pushing parents, walking each day into Jordan Downs, the housing project that feeds the elementary school, to visit homes of chronically absent and unenrolled students.

They have prodded and cajoled families, given free haircuts and clothing to children, translated the bureaucrat's of public education into street English and organized field trips for youngsters whose lives are so isolated that on one visit to Hollywood, some asked if they were out of California.

Williams' and Goins' reputation was solidified last fall after their school found itself with a surprisingly low enrollment. "We asked them to go back into the hedges and the highways, and they found enough children who hadn't been enrolled to allow us to keep several teachers we might have lost," Principal Melba Coleman said.

The men's willingness to proclaim themselves ambassadors of the school system has gradually made them celebrities in a sullen, poverty-infested neighborhood that is highly suspicious of outsiders. Mothers and children greet them enthusiastically, and "Mister Fred and Mister Jim," as everyone calls them, respond in kind. There are pats and hugs for every toddler and warm entreaties to every child who ought to be in school, all of whom swear they'll be there tomorrow.

The men and their supporters say their door-knocking has persuaded hundreds of parents — many of them young welfare mothers or drug dealers — to make sure that their child is awakened in time for school, dressed and sent on his or her way.

In Jordan Downs, where 2,700 people live, and where nearly 30 percent of the area's high school students dropped out last year, such parental obligations are often obliterated by the weight of drugs, alcohol and the fatalistic prophecy that the same school system that failed many of the parents and older brothers and sisters will fail this generation.

Fred Williams, 29, thought he understood this. "A lot of people have their priorities screwed up," he said philosophically. He had been a gun-carrying member of a gang called the Harlem 30s. He grew out of that by the end of his teens and eventually set up his own youth organization.

The violence he saw in Jordan Downs did not surprise him. The pervasiveness of cocaine traffic and its effect on children did.

"All day long people are being affect by the violence of drug deals or the fact that somebody is using it, the police are always on the scene because of the end result of someone using the drugs or selling, somebody is always getting their house broken into, someone is always being robbed," he said.

"The children, they understand the condition they're living in. Children are moved by what other kids say, things they hear. Everything is so negative and down. Children whose parents are either using drugs or alcohol, when that parent is loaded that kid is not getting the kind of attention it needs. When we saw that the majority of children wanted to come to school we were encouraged. But when we saw some of them struggling in the morning to put on whatever piece of rag that's not clean, or clean, when mama is still asleep — or not home — we knew we had to do some outreach."

Some of what Williams and Goins reach out to is correctable by the pressure of simple face-to-face reminders to parents. Some is rooted in problems beyond simple solutions.

There is the fifth-grader with an old, tired face who says he has to go home because his clothes are dirty, then admits that he needs to stay with his mother because her boyfriend just beat her up.

There is another, often violent child whose mother — bitter and angry — stops sending him to school after administrators deem him to be a "special education" candidate and transfer him to another elementary school.

There is the child who is frequently missing because his mother is a drug user who steals from her parents and periodically disappears with her son.

There is the child caught at school with $100 worth of cocaine rocks in his shoe. He has been recruited by a dope dealer who offered him a piece of the action.

The delicate part of the job is letting some repulsive parental conduct pass without comment. In a place where laws are routinely flouted and public authority is distrusted, Williams and Goins believe that their credibility rests on their ability to be seen as sympathetic figures.

"We've taken kids back in the house when brothers and sisters got

COUNSELOR'S JOB — Dropout counselor Fred Williams gets Rashee Atkins, 9, ready for a return to school with a free haircut. Prize Goes To Erick Hawkins DURHAM — Dancer-choreographer Erick Hawkins will receive the annual $25,000 Samuel H. Scripps-American Dance Festival Award in a ceremony in Page Auditorium, Duke University, at 8 p.m. tonight. This is the biggest prize given in America in the performing arts.

In the summer of 1938, Hawkins, a member of George Balanchine's company, Ballet Caravan, went to the Bennington School in Vermont to study with Martha Graham. He became the first male dancer in her company, and in 1951 formed his own company and school.

Following the award ceremony, the Erick Hawkins Dance Company will perform an excerpt from "Heyoka," derived from the folklore of the Sioux Indians. After the dance program, guests will assemble on the lawn for a party.

For more details and ticket reservations if any remain available, call 684-6402, Durham.

Each tour group must consist of 15 or more persons who will provide their own transportation. Reservations are to be made at least one week in advance. An earlier reservation is recommended when possible, as only three groups can be accommodated in any one day.

Cost of the tour package is $18 per person. For more information and to book a tour, write to: The Liberty Cart, P.O. Box 470, Kenansville, N.C., 28349 or call 296-0721.

For Father's Day Have A TV Film On Cannibalism

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Television adds to Dad's haul of loud neckties and other useless gifts with a couple of programs packaged just for Father's Day on Sunday — a sappy TV movie on NBC and a National Geographic special, "My Father the Cannibal," on SuperStation TBS.

Michael McKean (Lenny on "Laverne and Shirley") stars in "A Father's Homecoming" on NBC, a schmaltzy tale of parental wisdom that is, in fact, an above-average offering for this time of year. It was written by Gloria Katz and Willard Huyck, who co-wrote "American Graffiti" with George Lucas.

McKean plays a refugee from the '60s who returns to his alma mater, Oakmont Prep School, as the new headmaster — much to the consternation of his party animal son, played by Jonathan Ward, a student at the newly co-educational school, and bookish daughter, played by Marcianne Warman, who has been forced to relocate from her all-girls school in New York. In one of the movie's forced cute music-video sequences, she discovers the opposite sex to the strains of "Bad Boys."

Once ensconced, the new headmaster takes up with a girlfriend from his prep-school days (Nana Visitor), now a widowed mother and town leader.

A jealous rival for the headmaster's job (Peter Michael Goetz) and an overzealous editor of the school paper provide typical situation comedy. But clashes between the overprivileged preppies and the locals and a violent labor-management dispute at the town's only factory add some sophistication to the plot.

This is television, though, and it is Father's Day, and by the end of the movie everybody rushes to understand each other's point of view, fathers and sons and daughters are reunited, and everybody's happy.

Also Sunday is "My Father the Cannibal," named for the book that Swedish anthropologist Sten Bergman wrote about his travels with his wife to New Guinea where the couple was "adopted" by a headhunter and his wife in the 1950s.

This fact isn't revealed until well into the special and doesn't have much to do with the central theme of the Swedish-produced film, a combination of archival footage of the tribes and interviews from a more recent visit.

The filmmakers suggest that the tribesmen have lacked fulfillment since the Christian missionaries arrived and ended their practices of equating women with pigs as property and devouring each other after fierce warfare.

In an interview, one of the missionaries describes the difficulty of converting to Christianity a people who have no words in their language for "thank you," "help," "work," or "sympathy."

"Nostalgia is a sorry substitute for victory," says the narration as the men squat and swap tales in a sacred hut that, we are told, used to be littered with human skulls.

But the filmmakers do interview the wife of the headhunter who adopted the Swedish explorers. She says she is happier now. Her children are going to school, and she no longer has to be afraid when she goes into the jungle.

Another aging headhunter fondly recalls hewing off the head of a hapless enemy warrior back in the good old days. Says he, through translation, "We used to play with the head in the men's house, rolling it to and fro — then we'd eat up the brain."

Happy Father's Day, Dad.

Author Ernest Hemingway shot himself to death in 1961 at his home in Ketchum, Idaho.

Rock Guitarist Brian Setzer Wants Fans To Come Back

By HILLEL ITALIE
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Brian Setzer is sure people will like his new record. But he's not sure how many will hear it.

Setzer was the guitarist for the Stray Cats, a rockabilly trio that had a number of hits in the early part of the decade. But his first solo album, "This Knife Feels Like Justice," released in 1986, sold poorly despite good reviews.

"It would have been a platinum album for someone else," Setzer said. "I was really trying to get away from being a Stray Cat. I don't think I left enough of me in there."

With the release of "Live Nude Guitars," Setzer is hoping to win back some old fans and make some new ones.

"I don't think I've found my own audience yet," he said. "I think I've got to play on the road a lot and develop. I'm going to get some cross-over people who are just fans of the Stray Cats and kids who are curious."

"I think this new record is really focusing in on who I am. If I just get out there and play and show them a great show, I'll get a following."

Chris Thomas, known for his work with the Pretenders and the Sex Pistols, and Dave Stewart of Eurhythmics each produced songs on the album. Fans of such Pretenders songs as "Brass in Pocket" and "Talk of the Town" will recognize the guitar sound on "Every Tear That Falls."

"It is very 'Pretendersy,'" said Setzer. "He (Thomas) layers on guitars after guitars and gets a big sound out of it."

"Every Tear That Falls" was written with the Everly Brothers in mind but Setzer decided to record it himself.

"I kind of had this riff and I thought, 'Oh boy, wouldn't it be great to write this song for the Everly Brothers, that kind of harmony thing,'" Setzer said. "I know (Paul) McCartney wrote one (Wings of a Nightingale) for them. So I came up with this but I liked it so much I kept it."

Stewart produced "Rockability," Setzer's favorite song on the album.

"It's sort of a year-2000 rockabilly song," Setzer said. "I want to make a 'psycho-billy' album with lots of echo and distortion."

Setzer was happy with both Thomas and Stewart, although he found their styles very different.

"Working with Dave Stewart is instant," Setzer said. "He hears something he likes, knows it's good and just cuts it and it's done. Working with Chris Thomas takes a long time but the end result is equally as pleasing.

"I like working with both of them but I'm doing the next record with Dave Stewart."

Stewart also produced "The Rain Washed Everything Away," a big ballad in the tradition of Gene Pitney or the Righteous Brothers. The song was co-written by Stewart and Setzer at Stewart's house.

"Dave says, 'Let's write one of those ballads. Let's go out on the porch, that will give us a title,'" Setzer said. "We get out on the porch and he says, 'Oh, it's a beautiful night,' and I say, 'Yeah, the rain washed everything away,' and he says, 'There's the title.'"

"The Righteous Brothers would clean this up."

Although the 28-year-old Setzer was born after the first wave of rock 'n' roll hit in the 1950s, he has always preferred the music of that period.

"When I was going to high school, even though it was the '70s, it was still the leftover of the '60s. It was hippie; the flower thing," Setzer recalled. "I never connected with it. I had long hair but when I was about 15, I just cut it all off."

"I wanted to look like Eddie Cochran rather than Jim Morrison."

Setzer still idolizes Cochran, who was killed in a car crash in 1960. "Everything about Eddie spoke rock 'n' roll to me."

He covers a Cochran hit, "Nervous Breakdown," on the new album and portrayed him last year in the hit movie, "La Bamba," the story of Ritchie Valens, another early rock star who died in a plane crash in 1959 with Buddy Holly and J.P. "Big Bopper" Richardson.

"I got a good feeling like I was the only one who could do it," Setzer said. "I was just me in the role."

But Setzer has no intentions of pursuing a film career.

"I don't enjoy acting. People strive their whole lives to be actors. I don't think someone should fall into it," Setzer said. "I liked playing my hero, but I just don't feel I deserve to be an actor."

Setzer wants to introduce a new generation to Cochran and other rockers from the '50s.

"Most kids just turn on MTV (Music Television) and they see what they like," he said. "Gene Vincent, Eddie Cochran, Buddy Holly, they're not around any more. That's why I'm here. Those people can't speak to those kids. I have to."

Movie On Apartheid Struggle Is Winner At Cannes

By MATT WOLF
Associated Press Writer
CANNES, France (AP) — One family's struggle against apartheid 25 years ago has come to the screen in "A World Apart," a winner at the Cannes Film Festival starring Barbara Hershey. It provides a low-key but compelling alternative to last year's acclaimed "Cry Freedom."

Where Richard Attenborough's "Cry Freedom" told its tragic story on an epic, $16 million scale, "A World Apart," with its $6 million budget, tells how a daughter learns to cope with her mother's battle against apartheid.

"What's important is that in America, in Britain, everywhere, people have an inkling of what racism is," said Chris Menges, the British director of the movie, which opens June 17 in New York and July 1 in Los Angeles.

Set in South Africa in 1963 but shot in Bulawayo, Zimbabwe, last summer, the film is a semi-fictional version of the real-life relationship that existed between South African journalist Ruth First and her daughter, Shawn Slovo.

Slovo, now 38, wrote the screenplay, recreating her youth through the character of 13-year-old Molly Roth, played by Jodhi May, a young British newcomer.

Barbara Hershey plays Molly's mother, Diana, who is jailed for her activities on behalf of the African National Congress (ANC), the black guerrilla movement fighting to overthrow white rule in South Africa.

In reality, First was one of a few white founding members of the ANC, which was outlawed in 1963.

The movie covers several months in the shared politicalization of mother and daughter, as Molly learns to accept and understand a kind of commitment that puts social responsibilities before domestic concerns.

"A World Apart" does not touch on later events in the family's lives: In 1982, First was killed by a letter bomb in Mozambique. Her husband, Joe Slovo, lives in exile today in Zambia, where he is the general secretary of the South African Communist Party and the only white member of the ANC executive committee.

The film was twice honored at the 41st Cannes Film Festival, which ended May 23. In an unusual three-way vote, Hershey and May shared the best actress prize along with Linda Mvusi, who plays the Roth's housekeeper, Elsie.

The film also won the Special Jury Grand Prize — the runner-up, in effect, to the festival's most prestigious award, the Golden Palm.

It's the first feature film directed by Menges, 48, a documentary filmmaker and cinematographer who won two Academy Awards for his camerawork on "The Killing Fields" and "The Mission."

Menges said he had been looking for a film to direct and was drawn to Slovo's script by its mixture of the personal and the political.

"It's about a child coming to terms with the political choices her parents have made; it's Shawn's coming to terms with her mom and dad," said soft-spoken Menges, a father of five.

"It's a story about someone trying to work out the trauma of childhood, which many of us have to work out."

The film exemplifies its director's devotion to material chosen out of personal belief rather than expediency.

"I've always tried to work on projects I can learn from and I think are of value," said Menges, who first went to South Africa in 1963 to film a British TV documentary.

"I was asked to do this story, and I think it has something to say."

Slovo said thoughts of her mother prompted her to write the script, which she described in an interview as "a mix of autobiography, memoir, and fiction."

"If my mother were still alive, I don't think I would have done this particular story," said Slovo, who began writing the script in 1983 after a stint in New York working as actor Robert DeNiro's secretary.

"(But) in the aftermath of her assassination and trying to come to terms with the violent manner of her actual death, this is the story that evolved."

PHOTOGRAPHY SHOW — An exhibition of photographs by five eastern North Carolina photographers will open Sunday at the Beaufort County Arts Council galleries at 108 Gladden St., Washington, N.C., (the renovated downtown train station). Photographers to be exhibiting their work are Bob Coates of Belhaven, Jerry

Raynor and Tony Rumble, both of Greenville, and Rhea Davis and Paul Nurnberg, both of Washington. A public reception will be held at the Arts Council from 5 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. Sunday. The photo shown above is by Tony Rumble and is titled "Driftwood and Rocks — Belhaven."

Park Service Rejects Offer Of More Cemetery Land

By LEANNE WAXMAN
Associated Press Writer
GREENEVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Andrew Johnson National Cemetery is running out of room, so 50 area veterans thought they would try to help.

The key word here is "try" since the U.S. Interior Department isn't interested in the assistance.

S.E. Jordan, commander of a Marine Corps League detachment in Greenville, said the department is rebuffing the group's offer to donate land adjacent to the cemetery for additional grave sites.

The department's National Park Service opposes expansion of any national cemetery that is part of a national historic site because it wants to fill up the cemeteries and focus on preserving history, said Paul Swartz, the service's planning chief in Atlanta.

"Once they're filled up, a historic cemetery is closed. The park service isn't in the business of cemeteries."

We're in the business of history," he said.

That doesn't make much sense to Jordan, who said the Albert Kinser Detachment spent $11,000 to buy 1.5 acres on Aug. 22, 1986. The group is willing to turn the land over to the federal government for free so more veterans can be buried as soldiers in their hometown.

"We thought that the government, which takes with great aplomb our money, would have no trouble taking a gift that we want to give. We feel like a cow that's full of milk and nobody will milk us," Jordan said.

Congress, which designates national historic sites, would have to vote to enlarge the 15-acre cemetery, but a measure to do just that has been bottled up in House and Senate subcommittees since May 1987, said Paul Mays, press secretary for U.S. Rep. James Quillen, R-Tenn.

Quillen and U.S. Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., are sponsors of the resolution, which the Interior Department is fighting. "The Interior Department has a policy against expansions. They're just hanging tough. The congressman has been trying to get them off dead center," Mays said.

The Andrew Johnson National Historic Site sits on land donated by relatives of the nation's 17th president. The cemetery, established June 12, 1906, has about 200 grave sites left and about 800 filled, said Grady Webb, superintendent of the site that also includes Johnson's tailor shop and home.

"We oppose it," Webb said of the proposed donation. "The park was not established for the cemetery. It would put us in the cemetery business longer than we anticipated."

The cemetery is surrounded by a wall, and the wooded land offered by the veterans' group is outside the wall, Webb said.

Officer-Cartoonist Chronicles His Colleagues Miscues

By SHEILA CARNETT
Anderson Independent-Mail
ANDERSON, S.C. (AP) — If police officer Terry Mitchell were a cartoon character, he would have plump, ruddy cheeks, stubby legs and hairier-than-normal arms — sort of a muscular version of Oliver Hardy in a police uniform.

Mitchell never has appeared in any cartoons, but many of his fellow police officers have. He uses his artistic talent to chronicle the misadventures of his colleagues at the Anderson Police Department.

"It's my way of relieving the stress," he said. "On this job, everything you can laugh at is helpful."

It also provides ample opportunity to poke a little good-natured fun at his friends.

Take the case of the domestic dispute settled by Officer Tom Miles when he stepped out of his car and into a ditch. It was dark when Miles arrived at the house. A couple were arguing in the front yard.

Miles got one foot on the ground, but the second step landed him at the bottom of a deep ditch. It was so unexpected, the fighting couple burst out laughing. By the time Miles crawled out of the ditch, they were hugging each other and walking arm in arm into their home.

Much to Miles' chagrin, a cartoon drawing of the infamous event appeared the next day on a bulletin board at the police department for all to see.

A sheepish grin crossed Mitchell's face as he leaned against his car one recent afternoon, painting a mind's eye picture of Miles dropping into the ditch, his hat hovering and spinning in the air overhead.

"If you do something silly and get caught, I'm going to get you," Mitchell warned.

Mitchell said most of the officers enjoy being the subject of his cartoons. "It puts them in the spotlight for a little while," he said. "It's a big joke."

Mitchell, 33, said he began drawing cartoons while in grade school. Back then, his drawings consisted of superheroes like the Green Lantern and Superman.

"I really like cartoons the best," he said as he rifled through a stack of his drawings. "It's always easy to me."

When he joined the department seven years ago, Mitchell found a veritable smorgasbord of police escapades to fuel his sense of humor.

At first, Mitchell drew his cartoons anonymously, signing them "The Phantom." He maintained his secret identity for about a month, but eventually was turned in by his partner.

"We had good fun for a while," he said. "Everybody was paranoid. My shift lieutenant thought someone was following him around."

Most of Mitchell's cartoons play on actual events, and the stories that inspired some of his drawings would make good material for a new version of "Police Academy."

Take the case of the pall bearers in hot pursuit, for instance.

An officer was sent to McDougald Funeral Home one afternoon to escort a funeral procession on its winding route to the cemetery.

As the officer waited in front of the building for the long line of dim headlights to assemble behind his patrol car, he got a radio call dispatching him to a traffic accident.

He flipped on his patrol car's blue lights and sped away. Little did he know that the pall bearers were hot on his trail — following him, through red lights and all, to the wreck.

These are true stories, slightly exaggerated for their humor, perhaps, but true stories all the same.

Other cartoons, however, portray what Mitchell calls the public's perception of police officers. Mitchell said he draws these cartoons because "it's better to laugh with people than be laughed at."

For instance, one cartoon shows a SWAT member with binoculars gazing in windows from rooftops and a crook's remorse at having tried to rob a doughnut shop when he should have known it would be swamped with police officers on coffee break.

"People on the street don't understand the mentality of police officers," Mitchell said. "Everybody thinks officers just sit around in doughnut shops. They need to know we're human."

Mitchell's comic view of police work may even have rubbed off on his family.

When asked to tell a visitor what her father does for a living, 2-year-old Holly Mitchell dutifully answered, "Works at the PD."

the stuff (cocaine) on the table," Goins said.

"We don't pay any attention to that," Williams said. "We are so happy that we have those same brothers who are dealing dope who are sending their children back to school."

"They want their children to learn," Goins said.

"They just don't know how to do it," he added.

Williams, jocular and charismatic, and Goins, 24, raised in the suburbs and working on a master's degree in theatrical directing at the University of Southern California, are an odd couple who play well off each other. Williams, more comfortable in this milieu, usually takes the lead. Goins said it took him several months to adjust to the contrast between the intense poverty around him and the advantages he enjoyed as the son of parents who pushed him academically.

"I see no reason why children should have to live like this," he said. "Something's wrong."

So wrong that Williams and Goins found it necessary to buy hair clippers and give haircuts to more than a hundred of the schoolchildren.

"Haircuts!" Williams said, still amazed. To him it illustrates the depth of poverty and parental disregard. "We have come across kids who haven't had a haircut since the hell they were born! Talking about 7, 8-year-old kids."

"We'd never cut hair before. We just saw the nappy heads, man. The kids were not feeling good about coming to school. We'd go into the house and it'd be all smelly and dirty and we'd ask the kid what was wrong with him and he'd say, 'Nuttin...'" and we'd say to ourselves: self-esteem. We'd say, 'Boy, we're gonna give you a haircut.'"

Today many children sport the same Kojak-style trim that Williams has. Among parents, the gesture was an ice-breaker.

"Mister Fred and Mister Jim talk to the children when they're in trouble; they're really a lot of help," said one parent, Jeanette Stickland. "They talk to them about gangs. The things the kids won't talk to their teachers about, they'll talk to Mister Fred and Mister Jim about."

 Opening lead: King of ♦
 We have often remarked on how well pessimists fare at the bridge table. Here is another hand to prove our point.

South's opening bid of two hearts showed a hand of 11-16 points with specifically four spades and five hearts. North decided that his key cards in partner's suits made his hand worth a jump to game.
 When this hand was dealt in a pair tournament, most declarers at four hearts ruffed the opening diamond lead and drew two rounds of trumps with the king-queen. When the 4-1 trump break was revealed, it was too late to recover. They tried to counter by playing off ace, king and another club, but when they were forced again with a diamond they had lost control of the hand and could not come to more than nine tricks.
 The only declarer to make his contract was M.F. Tai, of Taiwan. He ruffed the opening lead, cashed the ace-king of clubs and, when both went through, 10 tricks were virtually assured. After cashing the ace and king of hearts, he ruffed another diamond. Next came the king-ace of spades, followed by another diamond ruff. In all, declarer scored two tricks in each black suit, three ruffs and three hearts.

 This technique is known as a dummy reversal. Usually, dummy's trumps are used to extract all of the opponents' fangs. However, as this hand illustrates, it can succeed even when a defender has longer trumps than dummy. Dummy reversals crop up fairly often, and is a technique worth mastering.

Hidden

By Clint Parker

I looked into a magazine and saw a preacher's face, Involved in sinful scandal and utterly disgraced.

I wonder when they tell me, "Forgive me, I have sinned." I wonder if repentance is in their heart deep down within. I wonder very deeply when they're on TV once again.

I wonder and I question their motives and their means, Some say they're building theme parks, Some say that they have dreams.

They challenge me to give to them with teardrops in their eyes, But are they not forgetting why my Savior Jesus died.

He didn't die for theme parks or multiministries.

He died so those trapped deep in sin can be completely free.

Why use His name in begging? Why mock what He has done? He died upon a wooden cross, Our sins to save us from.

Don't cheapen that great sacrifice by playing silly games. Jesus wants your heart and life, not your power and your fame.

Some say, "But we love and care for Him, His Words are what has freed us!" To those I quietly ask them this--- "Well then, where is Jesus?"

Clint Parker, 17, a student at Greenville Christian Academy wins this week's writing contest.

Starting Over

By Paige Brannon

I can't believe it's over, All my high school's through. Now we're in the real world, We've got to start out new. My friends are going everywhere, We'll no longer be together. I've never really thought about it, Some I won't see ever. Home won't be the same, I'll have no where to go. I'll only be here holidays, And then you never know. This is what I've dreamed of, Why's it so scary now? I've always thought, a senior's great, And now I don't know how.

Sometimes I wish I could start over, Maybe last a little longer Then I'd be more ready, Maybe even stronger. It doesn't matter, there's no chance, Rose High is all through. I don't know where I'm going, I don't know what I'll do. Decision time's arrived, There's no where to turn now. Please make me understand, Please show me just exactly how!

One night my pet goblin went into the living room. He turned the volume of the TV up so high my mom thought there was a fire at someone's house. So we went into the liv-

Pam And The Deer

By Danielle Johnson

One night it was very, very dark. A little girl named Pam told her mom she was going in the woods. She said she would be right back. She did not come back until the next day because she saw a deer.

She and the deer became great friends. Pam's mom was worried about her. She started to cry. Pam never came back. She lived with the deer.

Tar Heel Trivia

Andrew Jackson

Both North Carolina and South Carolina claim to be the native land of the seventh president of the United States. Actually, Andrew Jackson was born on the border of the two states, but spent most of his adult life in Tennessee.

After training to be a lawyer in Salisbury, a town in North Carolina's western Piedmont, Jackson moved to Tennessee where he was elected to be the state's first Congressman. He later served in the Senate.

Andrew Jackson became famous for campaigns against the American Indians and the British in the War of 1812 and later for fighting in the territory of Florida.

During Jackson's administration, conflict arose over rights of states versus rights of the federal government, and the "spoils system," in which friends who are owed favors are given jobs, was greatly used.

President Jackson was nicknamed "Old Hickory," because of his reported toughness during military battles. He is also well-known for his famous home "The Hermitage" located in Nashville, Tenn.

The poem, "The Fairies," printed on the Expressions page June 8, is a previously published work by William Allingham.

Carter Finds Comfort In North Georgia Retirement Lodge

(Continued from C-1) had led such a hectic political life." He will be 64 on October 1. Retirement came early, much earlier than expected. He runs between 12 and 15 miles a week (down from 40 at his White House peak). Doctors and computer printouts tell him his "health risk age" is only 56. Later this year he and Rosalynn may go to Mount Kilimanjaro, the highest mountain in Africa, and try to climb it. Actually they'd like to take the entire family on that trip, but there are 15 Carters in all now, counting the grandchildren, and that's too many airline tickets.

He gives speeches, not so many. He picks wild plums from along the road of his home in Plains. He plays tennis and goes bicycling with his wife. He helps build houses for the poor with an agency called Habitat for Humanity. He writes his books. In fact, he's just finished his seventh, entitled "An Outdoor Journal." It presents a much more relaxed and likable self than some politicians in Washington might recall. It relates fishing and hunting stories of his childhood and adulthood. Its prose is stiff and a little slow-going — at times a preachy note creeps through — but the stories are engaging all the same.

He's also just finished his sixth year of part-time teaching at Emory University in Atlanta, where the Carter Center and the Carter Presidential Library are located.

Soon he and Rosalynn will go up to their friend Wayne Harpster's place in central Pennsylvania to fish the Green Drake hatch on Spruce Creek. That swarm of evening mayflies that put trout into a feeding frenzy is a thrilling sight for a fisherman. The trek to Wayne Harpster's dairy farm has become something of a pilgrimage for the Carters. There's a chapter about it in "An Outdoor Journal." Jimmy is on the cover of the new book in his high-tech neoprene waders, casting upstream. The old boot-foot rubber waders that served generations of flyfishers before him wouldn't do, not for this scientific man.

Even now, even here, amid all this God-gorgeous scenery, the tensions between the micro-manager and the man of feeling seem just aching to get out. It's as if the technocrat in him was still trying to rebuke the humanist in him. Or maybe it's the other way around.

There are four identical rocking chairs on this porch, perfectly aligned, perfectly spaced, each from the other. The seat cushions have identical stitching. In front of the four identical rockers are three small identical tables, their smooth tops sliced from old tree trunks, maybe the same tree trunk. Someone has arranged them so that three tables perfectly serve the four chairs, assuming, that is, that the occupant of the middle rocker might be willing to use portions of the tree top to both his left and right.

This theme of excruciating neatness and exactness can be seen everywhere on the inside of the cabin, too: six identical chairs around a wooden table in the dining room, six identical placemats in front of each seat, the edges of the mats carefully aligned along the lip of the table.

A paperback copy of Graham Greene's "The Honorary Consul" sits face down on one of the porch chair cushions. Carter had gotten to about Page 30 of the novel today when he had to interrupt. Early this morning, the "Today" show people were here, clunking up the forest solitude with their cameras and boom mikes, trying to record his adroit casting with the black gnat pattern.

He has allowed you exactly one hour, 12:40 to 1:40. The time has been set days ago, and why deviate from the schedule just because you've arrived at his doorstep at 12:30? "Well, maybe we can get it started now," the appointments person had said, not much hope in her voice. "I'll go up and tell Jimmy you're here." Jimmy was about 100 yards away, contemplating his stream. She had come back to the guard station, shaking her head. "Nope, he wants his 10 minutes."

He'll travel to six or seven cities to promote the new book. "I don't really mind going," he says. "This is a fun book. I think most of the questions ... will be about the outdoors ... not about politics." Again, only the slightest pauses.

It isn't true that Jimmy Carter learned to fly fish during his presidency. He learned it as the governor of Georgia. Neither is it true that Secret Servicemen in galoshes used to throw live trout from trucks 50 yards upstream from where he was fishing at Camp David, though fly fishermen tell that story still.

Squint and suddenly all the memories are rolling back, of that "failed" Washington outsider of whom the pundits could only write their condescending assessments in the end. This, for example: "But he got into a fight with a rabbit and jogged himself into an exhausted heap and otherwise came across in the end as a wimp when he was unable to deal with the Iranian hostage crisis or halt the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan."

Jimmy Carter is the "failed" man who first forced us to respond to the energy crisis; who spoke out powerfully for human rights before human rights became a catch phrase; who arranged the Panama Canal Treaty; who kept riding his bicycle back and forth between the compounds of Menachem Begin and Anwar Sadat at Camp David until a peace agreement was won; who exhibited from the start a moral base and an ethical sensibility that his vanquisher seems to know little or nothing of.

It all may play better in history than anyone thinks.

"When it came to understanding the issues of the day, Jimmy Carter was the smartest public official I've ever known," Tip O'Neill wrote in his mega-selling book, "Man of the House." "But when it came to the politics of Washington, D.C., he never really understood how the system worked. And although that was out of character for Jimmy Carter, he didn't want to learn about it, either."

On the Atlanta radio stations today, driving here, the visitor had heard reports that Chip Carter, the second son, who's now 38, is positioning himself for a run at state political office. "Chip was always a much better politician than I was," the radio report had quoted the deep-in-the-woods father as saying.

"I painted this picture," Jimmy says, now taking you on a tour through the cabin. "I set up the easel over here, in the living room, and started painting what I saw. I paint very rapidly. I started doing it when I was in the Navy. As I say, I do them very quickly. This one has sort of a Grandma Moses feeling, doesn't it?"

"Quickly all right," says Rosalynn, starting to laugh. "I think I went out that afternoon for about two hours and when I got back Jimmy had it all done."

The cottage is quite small — three downstairs rooms and a loft. Jimmy doesn't even have an office. Everything about the cabin smells woody and good. A man could forget things here. The bedroom, which is really the only formal sleeping room, has a double bed with a quilt on it. Jimmy built the bed. "I made all the beds here," he says. "I made this piece, too," he says, opening the pine doors of a high narrow bureau. "Some people call them chiffoniers. I think in France they call them armoires."

In his woodworking shop are a bench saw, a band saw, a radial saw, a joiner. He ticks these off, knitting his brow to see if he's forgotten anything.

He shows off another furniture piece. It has an unusual design, opening from the top. "This is a piece I made this past year. It's a white oak piece. I designed it to put big clothes in." He draws the palm of his left hand across the smooth unvarnished top. There is a kind of poetry to the gesture. "Would you like to feel it? Go ahead. This pine comes out of the house where Rosalynn grew up. Eighteen-thirty-three, that house."

"I made this chair," he says.

"I made this porch swing," he says. "In fact, it was written up in Fine Woodworking magazine."

"I made this," he says, pointing to a rake-like tool hung on the wall. "I like to work with green wood."

"I made this, too." It's a wood clamp, the initials "J.C. '84" burned into it.

On it goes: Why this apparent need to point out all he's made, and made so beautifully? Is it pride, insecurity? Something less easy to define.

"I've got a great bottle collection," he says, standing on a chair and pulling several down from a high shelf. "I used to go digging for them when I was governor."

On a wall upstairs is a black-framed poster of a youthful and Cheshire-grinning "Jimmy Carter for State Senator." He surveys it. "That was 1962. I guess I've aged a bit."

At the end, when you wish him good luck with the book, when you tell him that you hope it's a best seller, he turns halfway around, as if he doesn't wish to hear. "Maybe so. Maybe so."

Fix Big Chicken Dinners In Tiny Vacation Galleys

America is on the go again and the cook of the family is often faced with the challenge of preparing meals in cramped and scantily-equipped kitchens.

Whether vacation meals are cooked in a camper, the galley of a boat or the kitchenette of a motel room or lakeside cabin, chicken is a good choice for satisfying big appetites in small spaces. It's readily available wherever you go and easily seasoned with almost any ingredients you brought along.

Because even the most dedicated overseer of the family's nutritional welfare doesn't want to waste valuable fun-time, vacations are a good time to take advantage of the many convenient, ready-to-use ways contemporary chicken is packaged. Buy it already boned, cut into strips or nuggets or in packages of the family's favorite parts. Any of these timesavers cuts preparation time to a minimum.

The National Broiler Council developed two recipes which can easily and quickly be prepared in tiny kitchens without sacrificing the good nutrition or flavor of a hearty back-home meal.

Camp Fried Chicken and Rice requires only about 30 minutes from start to finish. The recipe uses tasty thighs, already boned. Serve it with a fresh vegetable or salad and a wholesome meal is ready to enjoy.

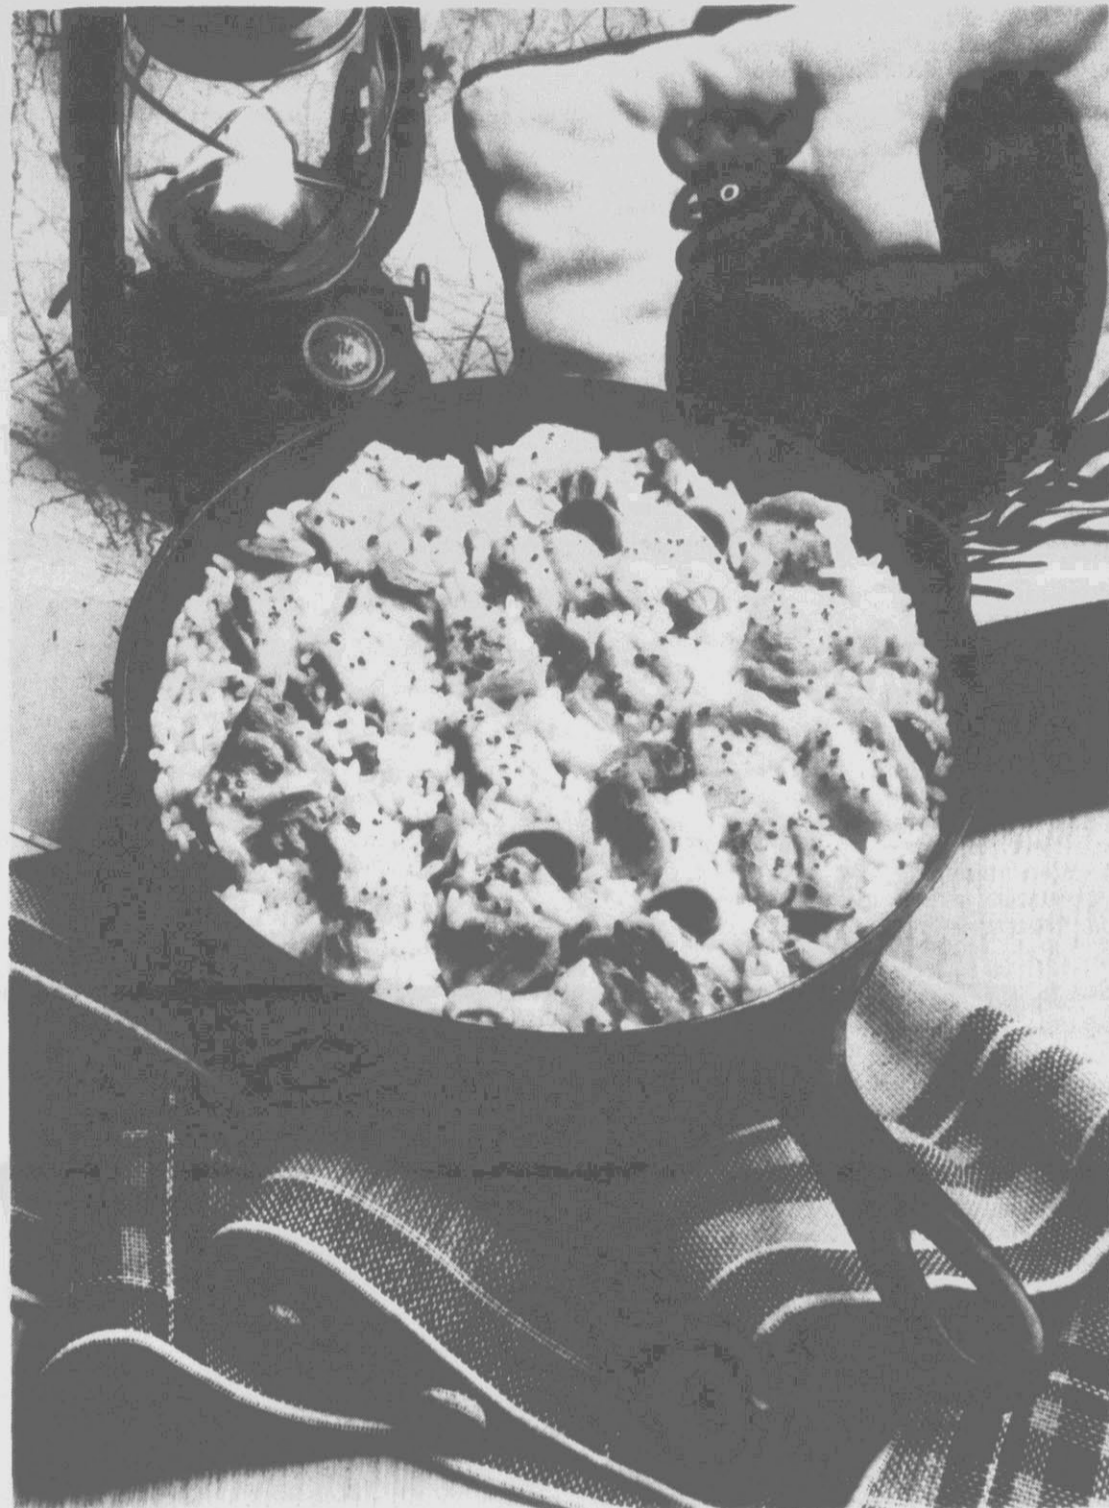

Easy Chicken Skillet is a quick, meal-in-one dish. All of the ingredients except chicken are staples which can be kept on the shelf. And if the family isn't quite ready to eat when it's ready, it will wait without losing any of its appeal. Complete a satisfying menu with nothing more than French bread and fresh fruit.

CAMP FRIED CHICKEN AND RICE

1 1/2 pounds boneless chicken thighs, cut in chunks
2 1/4 cups water
3 bouillon cubes
1 teaspoon salt, divided
1 cup long grain rice
1 can (4 ounces) mushroom stems and pieces
1/2 cup flour
1/2 teaspoon pepper
2/3 cup vegetable oil

In medium saucepan, place water, bouillon cubes and 1/4 teaspoon of the salt. Place on high temperature and heat to boiling, stirring to dissolve cubes. Add rice, cover, reduce heat to low and cook until rice is done and liquid is absorbed, about 20 minutes. Stir in mushrooms and cover again for about 3 minutes. While rice is cooking, mix together flour, remaining 3/4 teaspoon of the salt and pepper; add chicken and turn, coating on all sides. In frypan, place oil and heat over medium high temperature. Add chicken and cook, turning, about 10 minutes or until brown on all sides and fork can be inserted in chicken

QUICK AND TASTY — Camp Fried Chicken and Rice has big appeal but requires a minimum of space, time and ingredients to prepare. Serve with a fresh vegetable or salad for a wholesome meal.

Turkey Salads Are Summer Timesavers

"If you can't stand the heat, get out of the kitchen." A clever phrase, which can be almost a reality when savvy cooks rely on fully-cooked turkey products and other convenience foods to make meal preparation a snap. Just because hot weather is here, we needn't stop cooking. The idea is to plan menus around little or no-cooking-required recipes.

For instance, make summer cooking cooler and easier by occasionally serving salads as the main dish.

Use fully-cooked turkey in salad recipes to reduce time spent in the kitchen significantly, yet still enjoy delicious, satisfying meals. There are many varieties of ready-to-serve turkey breast products found in the deli department or where luncheon meats are sold. For instance, it's available oven roasted, barbecued or hickory-smoked to name a few. Also look for no-salt-added varieties of fully cooked turkey meat for added health benefits.

Fully-cooked turkey breast products are convenient to have on hand year-round, but in the summer, its convenience and variety has special meaning. And, turkey's naturally mild flavor blends with other ingredients easily.

Today's recipes. Colorful Turkey Pasta Salad, Smoked Turkey Potato Salad and Turkey and Cornbread Salad rely on oven-roasted turkey breast, smoked turkey breast and no-salt-added turkey breast, respectively. For a change of pace, make the salads another time using other types of already cooked turkey. Whichever way you make them, these dishes are perfect to serve at home, at a cookout or take on a picnic.

Several people have asked what type of diets overweight children should follow. Jo Bartlett again helped gather some of the tips for this column. We agree that there are few easy answers to questions about weight control and children. While we are concerned about the growing number of overweight children in our area, we also don't want parents, grandparents, and friends to overreact. We can give you some general advice, but if you think a child you love is overweight, talk to your family doctor about that child's problem. Children have different growth and development rates.

It is true, however, that childhood obesity is on the rise everywhere in the United States. Some experts even think it has reached "epidemic" proportions. There has been a 54 percent increase in obesity in children 6-11 years of age in the United States from 1963 to 1980. And, there has been a 39 percent increase in obese 12-17-year-olds. Children who are overweight are at greater risk of hypertension, respiratory disease, diabetes, and abnormal bone conditions. Being overweight also causes emotional, social, and academic problems for many children. And, it's no surprise that children who are overweight are most likely to be overweight adults.

There are many myths and theories as to why children become overweight, but study after study show that eating in excess, lack of activity, and improper food choices are the true culprits of overweight. The best advice is to eat smaller portions of wholesome, nutritious foods; cut down on TV time (linked directly to obesity in several nationwide studies), and increase activities. These suggestions are, of course, good for the entire family!

The studies on TV time and childhood obesity are interesting. It's not really clear if the children become overweight because they are less active than children who watch less TV. Some people suggest those children eat more snack foods suggested by commercials. Either way, it seems clear that the more TV a child watches, the more likely he or she is to get overfat.

It's not easy for an overweight child to lose weight without getting good information and getting good support. No matter how well-intentioned parents are, they are not always the right folks to help. I am pleased to learn that Nancy Gray, East Carolina University Department of Pediatrics, is beginning a new weight reduction program for adolescents. The program includes assessment, classes on nutrition, and fitness and individualized follow-up. If you feel you or your teen is in need of a supportive, sound weight reduction program, please call Nancy Gray, R.D., at 551-2513 for further information.

Remember:
• "Looking good" is not the way to decide the best weight for a child. Even weighing your child cannot tell fatness. Hopefully, you or the child's doctor has been charting his or her weight and height over time. That growth pattern can tell lots about a child's tendency to be overweight. Your child's doctor can decide if weight loss is wise and should supervise any diet program. A registered dietitian can help.

• Cut fats from the menu. Emphasize fish, skinless poultry, lean meats, low fat dairy products, whole-grain breads and cereals, legumes, fruits, and vegetables.

• For treats, offer a single serving — a small bag of chips, for example — or a section of a candy bar (even better: plain popcorn of fresh fruit).

• Don't push food; resign from the "clean-your-plate" club.

• Promote physical exercise by joining your child in activities like bicycling, swimming, playing ball.

• Control the TV time. Kids who spend hours watching aren't exercising.

• Choose your own foods wisely, whether dining at home or in a restaurant; your children will follow your lead.

• Don't nag. Offer love and support, no matter what your child's shape.

• Talk with your doctor. If emotional or behavioral issues are contributing to your child's obesity.

• Be active with your school organization to promote good foods in the cafeteria and good nutrition education in the classroom.

Some People Prefer It Warm

By Peggy Katalinich
L.A. Times-Washington Post

Some foods must be served hot: ribs, hamburgers, fettuccine Alfredo. Others, of course, need be well chilled: ice cream, Jell-O, Champagne.

It's the in-between types that are particularly appealing for a summertime party, those foods that actually taste better at room temperature, when neither extreme masks the flavors. Italian cuisine contributes quite a few — sauteed veal or chicken cutlets with a sweet and sour marmalade on top; fried sole topped with an onion relish; grilled vegetables with a toss of balsamic vinegar; rice or pasta salads (as long as they are oil-based, not mayonnaise-based).

These two recipes are perfect for a lazy summer dinner when you do all the work in advance, then sit back and enjoy. If you make them in the morning, bring them out of the refrigerator an hour or two before serving. The sausage was inspired by a luncheon at a recent conference on gastronomy, the tortellini by a dish at The Cafe at Between the Bread in Manhattan.

GRILLED SAUSAGE WITH SWEET AND SOUR ONIONS

1 1/2 pounds small white onions (the smaller the better)
2 tablespoons butter
1/2 cup vinegar
Cup sugar
2/3 cup water
2 tablespoons raisins

Fresh lemon juice to taste

1 1/2 pounds sweet Italian sausage
Soak onions in cold water for 20 minutes to make it easier to remove the skins. Cut off ends and slip off skins. Set aside.

In a saucepan, melt butter, add vinegar, sugar and water. Bring to a boil, then reduce to a simmer and add onions. Stir to coat with liquid. Cook over low heat, with cover ajar, for 1 hour, stirring occasionally. Add more water if it looks as if it might burn (be sure heat is low). Twenty minutes before onions are done, add raisins. Remove from heat, let cool, then add lemon juice to taste. Can be made a few days in advance.

Cook sausages in boiling water about 10 minutes. Then finish on a hot grill to get crispy exteriors. Set aside. Can be cooked an hour in advance. Serve onions with sausages at room temperature. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

TORTELLINI WITH SAFFRON RATTATOUILLE

1 small eggplant (about 1 to 1 1/2 pounds)
3/4 teaspoon saffron
1/2 cup dry vermouth
5 to 6 shallots, diced
7 tablespoons fruity olive oil
1 large green, red or yellow pepper, cut in 1/4-inch dice
2 (6-inch) zucchini, cut in 1/4-inch dice
3 medium-size fresh tomatoes, peeled, seeded and diced
1 teaspoon thyme

Try Light, Cool Soups For Spring

By Peggy Katalinich
L.A. Times-Washington Post

Even when there is a slightly cool breeze, it is rarely enough to coax one back inside after a season of indoor dining. It is spring, it is the time for alfresco dinners — light meals, mind you, in keeping with the mood.

Either of these soups would make a delightful starter or the centerpiece of a meal that might include a substantial salad made from seafood or poultry, for example. Both can be served hot, at room temperature or cold.

THREE ONION SOUP

1 large Spanish or Bermuda onion (about 2 pounds)
1 medium-size red onion
4 shallots
4 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon olive oil
3 tablespoons Madeira wine
1/2 teaspoon ground cumin

1 teaspoon oregano
1/2 teaspoon thyme
2 cups each chicken and beef broths

1 cup plain yogurt
Chives for garnish
Chop the onions and shallots coarsely. Place in large soup pot with butter and oil, cumin, oregano and thyme. Cook over a low heat for about 20 minutes or until very tender. Add the Madeira and cook over very high heat for a minute or two. Reduce heat, add broths and cook over a low simmer for another 20 minutes.

Puree in blender or food processor. If serving hot, reheat soup (if necessary), then let cool slightly. Stir in yogurt. If serving cold, stir in yogurt as soon as soup cools. Serve with chives as garnish. Makes 6 servings.

One-Crust Pie Trims Calories

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Magazine Food Editor

Here's fresh peach flavor in a pie that's light in texture and light in calories — it has about half the calories of a two-crust peach pie.

The red blush on peaches is not an indication of ripeness because it differs with the variety. Look instead for firm to slightly soft peaches with a creamy yellow skin color. Pass up very hard fruits because they will not ripen fully.

PEACH CHIFFON PIE

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1/3 cup cold water
Two 8-ounce cartons low-fat peach yogurt
2 egg whites
fresh peach slices, if desired. Makes 8 servings.

1/3rd cup sugar
1 1/2 cups chopped fresh peaches
One 9-inch graham cracker pie shell

Peach slices (optional)

In a small saucepan soften gelatin in cold water. Cook and stir until gelatin dissolves. Remove from heat. Stir in yogurt. Chill until partially set (the consistency of unbeaten egg whites).

In a large mixer bowl beat the egg whites until soft peaks form (tips curl). Add sugar, 1 tablespoon at a time, beating until stiff peaks form (tips stand straight).

Fold yogurt mixture into beaten egg white mixture. Turn into graham cracker pie shell. Chill 3 to 4 hours or until firm. Garnish with additional

Salads Save Time

For recipes with uniquely different taste, giving new meaning to the word "salad," try one of the recipes offered today. Use a variety of ingredients such as assorted pasta shapes, herbs, spices and fresh vegetables to vary recipes and create your own signature turkey salads. Colorful Turkey Pasta Salad is an example of how the use of a package of the tri-colored pasta turns this eye-appealing salad into a centerpiece.

Smoked Turkey Potato Salad introduces a short-cut method to prepare potatoes for this recipe or other favorite potato salad recipes. Start with a package of frozen cubed potatoes. Ninety percent of the work and cooking is done for you. The pre-peeled, cubed, frozen potatoes are a speedy way to get in and out of the kitchen.

Using a package of cornbread dressing is a slick and tasty way to create a very different salad mixture. Again, the cornbread is already cooked and for Turkey and Cornbread Salad there will be little need for extra seasonings. Died-in-the-wool southern cooks are bound to swell with pride when diners request their recipe for this concoction.

Give yourself a break this summer. Make easy to prepare, nutritious salads a part of your menu repertoire. You'll be able to enjoy good taste, nutrition and low calorie dinners without spending a lot of time in the kitchen.

5 minutes. Add another 2 tablespoons oil and zucchini and cook 5 minutes, stirring often. Make sure tomatoes are squeezed dry, then add to skillet. Add saffron-vermouth and bring to a boil, then reduce heat to low. Add thyme, salt and pepper to taste and cook over medium heat another 10 minutes.

Light, Cool Soups

- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 2 cloves garlic
- 1 teaspoon basil
- 1 teaspoon thyme

bag; seal and let stand about 10 minutes. Remove and peel off skins. Set peppers aside.

Cut eggplant in chunks, drain off juices. In a pot, briefly heat oil and saute garlic, basil, thyme and bay leaf briefly. Add eggplant and cook another minute or two. Add broth and simmer over medium heat for about 20 minutes. Remove bay leaf and puree until very smooth. Season with salt and pepper and stir in cream.

Roasted Root Vegetables Make Flavorful Dishes

By PAT JOHNSON

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — It's safe to say that you won't often find turnips, parsnips or rutabagas used as a centerpiece for the dinner table. But roasted or even baked, these root vegetables can make a delicious focal point for the dinner itself.

Roasted with the skins on, root vegetables are at their best and most nutritious — more moist and flavorful than when prepared by other methods. And roasting foods is the easiest way of cooking meat, according to "The Fanny Farmer Cookbook."

The low-temperature method requires little or no attention. Throwing a mess of well-scrubbed vegetables into the roasting pan enhances the flavor of both the meat and the vegetables, and it cuts down on last-minute preparations.

When the meat's done, the meal's done and you're ready to eat.

Roasting — also called baking — is the best method of dry heat cooking. One tip when roasting is to not crowd the oven. Circulation of the air is needed for even cooking. In pot-roasting, liquids are added to help soften the fibers of less-tender cuts of meat.

You can't be in a hurry to roast your vegetables, however. The low temperatures are combined with a long cooking time to tenderize your meal and bake in the flavors.

Root vegetables that respond well to this type of cooking include yams, sweet potatoes, turnips, onions, leeks, rutabagas, radishes and, of course, carrots and potatoes. Even beets, washed and trimmed, and placed tightly side by side in an oiled roasting pan, are sweeter than when boiled in a saucepan.

All it takes is a little imagination to turn what could be another dreary meat and vegetable meal into something spectacular. For example, the addition of another root vegetable, horseradish, transforms an ordinary pot roast into New England pot roast.

The method is simple, only the ingredients change. Scrub and quarter, halve or slice your selected root veggies and lay them into the pan drippings of an almost finished roasting meat. Here, too, the possibilities are only limited by what you like or what you have in your freezer — leg of lamb, beef, ham, pork, even chicken. At 375 degrees F, the vegetables will be tender in about 45 minutes, so they need to be added near the end of the cooking time of the meat.

You can turn the vegetables several times during the roasting — or forget it if you are too busy. It really doesn't matter if all sides are evenly browned. They'll taste good anyway.

Vegetables can be seasoned with salt and pepper or dried herbs such as thyme, marjoram or whatever. Remember, you're designing this recipe.

One thing, though: write down what you've added. If you've created a masterpiece, you'll want to serve it again.

Don't get hung up on the idea that the vegetables must be roasted with meat. On their own, combined with other vegetables, and with the addition of various seasonings, root vegetables can work as a side dish to any meal.

Potatoes are the most familiar and — in many homes — standard mealtime accompaniment. Considered by some to be the perfect gourmet food, potatoes, with the simple addition of butter, salt and pepper, or maybe a cheese and broccoli sauce, constitutes a meal in itself.

Roasted sweet potatoes — white or yellow, not the orange ones — are just as good with a pat of butter and a dash of salt and lots of freshly ground black pepper.

To get you started on your own one-pan roasted meals, here are a few ideas, the first from "Betty Crocker's Cookbook."

NEW ENGLAND POT ROAST

- 4 pounds beef arm, blade or cross-rib pot roast (see note)
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 1 teaspoon pepper
- 1 jar (5 ounces) prepared horseradish
- 1 cup water
- 8 small potatoes, cut into halves
- 8 medium carrots, quartered
- 8 small onions
- Kettle Gravy recipe below

Cook beef in Dutch oven over medium heat until brown; reduce heat. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Spread horseradish over both sides of beef. Add water. Heat to boiling; reduce heat. Cover; simmer on top of range or cook in 325 degree F oven 2½ hours. Add vegetables. Cover; cook until tender, about 1 hour. Remove to warm platter. Prepare Kettle Gravy; serve with beef. Makes 8 servings.

NOTE: Three-pound beef bottom round, rolled rump, tip or chuck eye roast can be substituted, but when using any of these substitutes, use 2 teaspoons salt.

Kettle Gravy
Skim excess fat from broth. Add enough water to broth to measure 2 cups. Shake 1/2 cup cold water and 1/4 cup all-purpose flour in tightly covered container; stir gradually into broth. Heat to boiling, stirring constantly. Boil and stir 1 minute.

OLD-FASHIONED POT ROAST WITH VEGETABLES

- 2 medium onions, peeled
- 2 medium carrots, peeled
- 2 medium parsnips, peeled
- 1 large russet potato, scrubbed
- 1 medium white turnip, peeled

- 2 ribs celery
- Two 3/4-ounce envelopes brown gravy mix
- 1 cup water
- 1/4 cup red wine vinegar
- One 4-pound lean boneless beef chuck cross-rib pot roast, tied
- Heat oven to 325 degrees F. Cut each onion into 8 wedges and put them in a large bowl. Cut the rest of the vegetables into 1-inch chunks. Add to bowl and toss to mix. Stir gravy mix, water and vinegar in a 4-quart Dutch oven until smooth. Stir over medium heat until boiling. Sauce will be very thick. Remove from heat; add roast to pot, then pile vegetables around meat.

Cover and bake 3-3 1/2 hours until meat and vegetables are fork-tender. Remove pot from oven; uncover and let stand 15 minutes.

Lift roast to cutting board; remove strings. Cut meat across the grain in 1/2-inch-thick slices. Place in center of serving platter. Remove vegetables with slotted spoon and place around meat. Pour gravy into a sauceboat to spoon onto each serving. Makes 6 servings with leftover meat.

ROASTED CARROTS AND PARSNIPS

- 1 1/4 pounds medium carrots (8-10), pared and trimmed
- 1 pound parsnips, pared and trimmed
- 1 teaspoon unsalted butter

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Lightly butter large shallow baking dish. Place vegetables in dish and dot with butter. Cover with foil. Bake (with pot roast) one hour. Arrange all carrots on center platter. Makes 6 servings.

YAM RIBS
4 sweet potatoes, peeled and sliced into 1/2-inch-thick slices. Place in a 4-quart Dutch oven. Add 2 cups drained pineapple juice. Cover and cook for 1 hour. Pared and sliced carrots, parsnips, and turnips, cut into 1/2-inch-thick slices. Place in a 4-quart Dutch oven. Add 2 cups drained pineapple juice. Cover and cook for 1 hour. Place yam ribs on a platter. Place carrots, parsnips, and turnips on a platter. Drizzle with pineapple juice. Makes 6 servings.

Cool Off With A Light, Healthful Beverage

By Toni Tipton
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Afternoon snackers looking for something rich and satisfying like a milkshake but without all the fat and calories might enjoy the following pre-summer coolers. Perfect for sipping or spooning, they are chock full of good-for-you ingredients like carrot juice, which packs a whopping supply of beta carotene, and bananas, which provide a hefty dose of the day's potassium.

These non-alcoholic beverages are perfect for sipping by the pool. They also serve well as an after-school treat for thirsty kids.

Carrot juice in the can is suggested in the recipes below. But the fresh-squeezed taste is good too, whether you pulverize your own in one of the new juice extractors on the market or purchase fresh-squeezed in the produce section of the supermarket.

In addition to these ideas, especially for those who have not yet acquired the taste for carrot juice, try adding a small amount of celery or apple juice to chilled carrot juice for flavor.

In Early Bird Breakfast Smoothie, one egg white stands in for the traditional whole egg often added to breakfast drinks.

FROZEN CARROT-LEMON COOLER

2 (8-ounce) containers lemon yogurt

1 (12-ounce) can carrot juice, chilled
Place yogurt in medium bowl. Gradually stir in juice, mixing with wire whisk or fork until smooth. Pour into shallow 1-quart baking pan. Freeze until partially frozen. (Or, freeze until firm and let stand at room temperature until partially thawed.)

Just before serving break mixture in 1 1/2-inch pieces with back of spoon. Place half of mixture into blender container. Blend until smooth, stopping blender and scraping down sides of container as needed. Spoon into serving glasses. Repeat. Serve immediately with straws. Makes 4 servings.

CARROT MARY

1 (12-ounce) can carrot juice, chilled

1 (18-ounce) can tomato juice, chilled
1/2 teaspoon celery seeds
1/8 teaspoon hot pepper sauce
Carrot sticks
Parsley sprigs
Combine juices in pitcher. Add celery seeds and hot pepper sauce.

Serve in tall glasses over ice cubes garnished with carrot sticks and parsley sprigs. Makes 4 servings.

BUNNY ALE

1 (12-ounce) can carrot juice, chilled

1 (12-ounce) can ginger ale, chilled
1/3 cup lime juice
1 lime, sliced
Combine carrot juice, ginger ale and lime juice in pitcher. Add lime slices and ice cubes. Makes 4 servings.

CARROTADE

1 (12-ounce) can carrot juice, chilled

1 (6-ounce) can frozen lemonade, thawed
1 cup cold water
Combine carrot juice, lemonade and water in pitcher. Add ice cubes. Makes 4 servings.

ISLAND COCKTAIL

1 (12-ounce) can carrot juice, chilled

1 1/2 cups unsweetened pineapple juice, chilled

1 1/2 cups sliced bananas
4 carrot sticks
Place half of carrot juice, pineapple juice and bananas in blender container. Cover and blend until smooth. Pour into serving glasses. Repeat with remaining juices and bananas and serve at once garnished with carrot stick. Makes 4 servings.

BANANA DATE MILKSHAKE

1 peeled ripe banana, frozen
1/2 cup milk
1/2 cup vanilla ice cream
1/4 cup chopped dates
Slice banana into blender. Add milk, ice cream and dates and blend until smooth. Makes 1 to 2 servings.

BANANA LEMONADE COOLER

1/4 cup lemon juice
2 tablespoons water
4 teaspoons honey
6 ice cubes

2 small mint leaves
Lemon slice

Combine banana, juice, water, honey, ice and mint in blender and blend until smooth. Pour over ice cubes in tall glass. Garnish with lemon slice. Makes 1 (12-ounce) drink.

CRANAPPLE BANANA FROST

1 large banana
3 tablespoons frozen cranapple concentrate 1 tablespoon frozen orange juice concentrate
6 ice cubes
Fresh orange segments

TROPICAL COOLER

1 large banana
1/2 cup chopped crushed pineapple
1 tablespoon lemon juice

1 tablespoon coconut snow

4 ice cubes
Pineapple spear
Orange or lemon slice
Chilled soda water, optional
Combine banana, pineapple, lemon juice, coconut snow and ice cubes in blender. Blend until smooth. Serve in tall glass garnished with pineapple and orange slice. Add splash of soda water. Makes 1 (14-ounce) drink.

EARLY BIRD BREAKFAST SMOOTHIE

1 cup pineapple juice
1 cup seedless grapes
1/2 cup cantaloupe chunks
1 egg white
Combine juice, grapes, cantaloupe and egg white in blender. Blend until smooth, then serve immediately. Makes 2 servings.

Cheese Can Be Part Of A Sensible Diet

Health and nutrition research has time and again shown the significant health hazard of high levels of fat in the typical American diet. High fat diets have been linked to not only increased amounts of heart disease, but also higher rates of breast cancer, colorectal cancer and prostate cancer.

Cheese is often targeted as a food to eliminate as food to eliminate as one way of lowering fat. However, that isn't really necessary. Cheese is an excellent source of protein, calcium and other nutrients. By choosing lower-fat cheeses, limiting portions and using moderation as a guideline, cheese can still be enjoyed as part of a sensible nutritional plan.

When shopping for cheese, look for cheese made with skim milk, for these have the butterfat removed. Skim-milk Mozzarella, Cheddar, Swiss and other varieties are now available.

-Cottage, Pot, Farmer and Ricotta cheeses are all lowfat cheeses.

-Cheeses made with goats' milk tend to have a lower fat content.

-Pasteurized processed cheese "food" has higher water content and lower fat content than natural or pasteurized process cheese.

There are also many imitation cheese products now available which may be "cheese-like" in flavor and have lower fat content. Keep in mind, however, that these do not offer the same nutritional values as real cheese.

When cooking it is often possible to use a very small amount of highly flavored cheese, such as Parmesan, and still get a good cheese flavor.

EGGPLANT RICOTTA

3 tbsp. bran
1/2 tsp. oregano
1/2 tsp. basil
2 tsp. margarine
3/4 cup onion, finely chopped
1/2 to 1 tsp. garlic, minced

1 15-ounce container part-skim Mozzarella cheese, grated
2 large tomatoes

Slice the eggplants crosswise into circles. Salt lightly to draw out excess moisture if desired. Arrange the slices on oiled cookie sheets and bake at 375 degrees for about 15 minutes or until tender. Meanwhile, combine the bran with the oregano and basil. When the eggplant is done, remove it from the oven and sprinkle it with the bran mixture.

Saute the onions and garlic in margarine until soft, stirring to prevent sticking and burning. When done, combine in a bowl with the cheeses.

Arrange half the eggplant slices in a lightly greased casserole or oblong pan. Top with cheese-onion mixture, and spread half the tomato slices on top of this. Repeat the layers. Bake, covered, at 350 degrees for about 35 minutes. Uncover and bake for 5 more minutes.

This recipe yields four 2-cup servings, with 296 calories and 13 grams of fat in each.
