Dukakis' Plans Don't Include Woman On Ticket

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Michael Dukakis begins the process of selecting a Democratic vice presidential nominee, the surest bet in politics is that his choice will be a man.

Not even the women who worked so hard four years ago to get Geraldine Ferraro on the Democratic ticket expect Dukakis to follow Walter F. Mondale's history-making example.

"It certainly isn't the top-of-line discussion it was in 1984," said Joanne Howes, a political consultant and director of the non-partisan Women's Vote Project.

"Is that a priority in his campaign this year, or in the party?" said Irene Natividad, director of the National Women's Political Caucus. "It doesn't seem like it."

So when Paul Brontas, the Boston lawyer who is heading the Dukakis search for a running mate came to Washington to talk vice presidential politics, the big names on his calling list were all male, names like John Glenn, Sam Nunn, and Bill Bradley.

He did pay a call on Sen. Barbara Mikulski of Maryland. But now in her second year as a senator, she is on no one's list of vice presidential prospects.

Missing from Brontas' list was Rep. Pat Schroeder of Colorado, who came close to running for president and is the most credible vice presidential prospect among Democratic women.

Three women often are mentioned as potential running mates for Republican George Bush — former Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole, Sen. Nancy Kassebaum of Kansas and former U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick. This is the party that turned its back on the Equal Rights Amendment and demands that its national candidates take strong stands against abortion.

Analysts talk of a "gender gap" that favors Democrats, the fact that a far higher percentage of women than men support Democratic candidates.

Yet, this election year, the likely women vice presidential candidates are Republicans, not Democrats.

"I think the major reason is obvious," said Celinda Lake, a senior associated with The Analysis Group,

Fountain Of Life Faces Suit Over $700,000 Gift

A lawsuit filed on behalf of a 71-year-old Lakeland, Fla., woman charges that a former housekeeper and aide used "undue influence" to persuade her to give her home and nearly $700,000 to the Fountain of Life ministry in Greenville.

The suit filed on behalf of Valeria Lust, a stroke victim now in a nursing home in Auburndale, Fla., names the Fountain of Life Inc. and Barbara June Stevens of Lakeland as defendants and, in part, asks that the ministry be enjoined from disposing of the Lust home until the case is settled.

According to the suit Ms. Stevens answered Ms. Lust's newspaper ad in December 1986 for a live-in aide and that she "exercised undue influence" over Ms. Lust.

After receiving power of attorney over Ms. Lust's financial affairs, the suit contends Ms. Stevens persuaded Ms. Lust to give up her house and cash in her investments, with the assets being transferred to the Rev. Jim Whittington's Fountain of Life ministry.

Ms. Stevens, who denies that she had any part in efforts to give Ms. Lust's money to the Fountain of Life, told a Lakeland newspaper that Ms. Lust is "vindictive, hateful and unpredictable," but said, "I still have Christian love for her."

Whittington also denies any wrong-doing in connection with the case.

In an interview this morning, Whittington said, "the only thing I know is the lady (Ms. Lust) did make a contribution to the Fountain of Life." But he said, "She was not in a rest home at the time ... She gave of her own free will. We're talking about

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A minister became so frustrated at drivers not using turn signals that he resigned his post to launch a campaign to have Kansas City declared the nation's courtesy capital.

As Fields Wither, Iowa Farmers Send Cows To Slaughter

By TOM SEERY

Associated Press Writer

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Cattle farmers are sending cows to slaughter and mowing roadside ditches to feed remaining animals trying to survive one of the region's worst droughts since the Dust Bowl. Crop farmers, meanwhile, can only wait.

"Everybody is culling every cow that they don't need. You're seeing a lot of older cows going to market," said Malcolm McGregor, a Nashua farmer and regional vice president of the National Cattlemen's Association.

In northeast Iowa on Wednesday, Vernon Kuhn worked in his withering fields, which yielded 50 bushels of soybeans per acre last year.

"If we get 35 an acre, we'll be tickled to death," he said. "We need a week of rain."

Elsewhere in the nation's midsection and Southeast, farmers turned to sometimes desperate measures to help relieve the drought that's prompted widespread water conservation and threatened farm yields, sending prices zooming on commodity exchanges.

"We get a daily report (on the drought) each day and I must say most days since early May anyway those reports have not been good," Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng said today on CBS-TV's "This Morning."

Asked if the situation was developing into a potential disaster, Lyng replied: "Emphasizing the word potential, yes, that's correct. The major corn belt area, this is the most reliable farming area in the world ... is threatened. It's a serious matter."

Speaking on the same program, the American Farm Bureau's Terry Franel said: "We are reaching a critical phase over the next week. If we do not have rain, that means there'll be substantial reductions in yields."

But weather forecasters continued to bear bleak news after a dry winter followed by a parched spring.

"It's going to be dry across the Plains and the upper Midwest at least the

Motorcyclist Killed

A motorcyclist speeding from a pursuing Greenville police car died Wednesday when he lost control of the motorcycle on N.C. 43, a Highway Patrol trooper said.

Trooper K.B. Ward said the motorcycle operated by Alan Eugene Jones, 20, of G-2 Oakmont Square Apartments, Greenville, went out of control while traveling south on N.C. 43 at an estimated 100 miles an hour. The cycle slid for 337 feet before turning over.

Jones was thrown from the motorcycle, struck a mailbox post and was hurled 70 feet into a ditch, Ward said.

Jones was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Eugene Jones of Rutherfordton and was a junior at East Carolina University, according to Bill Shires of the ECU News Bureau. He was named one of the first ECU Scholars in 1985 because of outstanding leadership. The scholarships are presented by the ECU Alumni Association.

New Bern Man Dies In Local Shooting

By STUART SAVAGE

Reflector Staff Writer

A shooting in the 1500 block of Fleming Street Wednesday afternoon took the life of one man and injured another, according to Greenville police.

Capt. R.M. Nichols said Steve Craig of New Bern died at 5:32 p.m. in Pitt County Memorial Hospital from head and chest wounds he received in the 3 p.m. shooting. Leroy Chapman, also of New Bern, received minor wounds to his left ear and his neck, Nichols said.

According to Nichols, Craig, who was in his 40s, and Chapman were standing in a yard on Fleming Street when another man grabbed some money from Craig's hand and ran.

While being chased by Craig and Chapman, Nichols said, the man "approached some bushes ... picked up a sawed-off shotgun and fired it," wounding both Craig and Chapman.

Detective C.E. Weatherington, who said this morning that the shooting apparently resulted from "a dispute over money," said a murder warrant has been issued for Curtis Earl Fields, 32, of Colonial Avenue in connection with the incident.

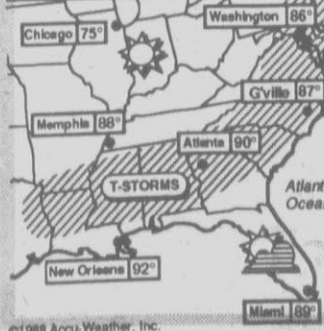

Other sources close to the investigation suggested the shooting may have been drug-related. What appeared to be drugs were found at

X-Ray Film Taken From Pitt Memorial

Investigators said 10 thefts, including $700 worth of X-ray film from Pitt County Memorial Hospital, were reported to Greenville police Wednesday.

Officer S.A. Person said seven boxes of the X-ray film were taken from a film processing darkroom near the hospital's emergency department in an incident reported at 1:45 p.m.

Officer R.L. Vandiford said three juveniles took $20 from a purse at Hooker & Buchanan at 509 S. Evans St. in an incident reported at 9:40 a.m., while a bicycle was taken from Carolina East Center on South Memorial Drive in an incident reported at 12:54 p.m.

Hospital Buses

Pitt County Memorial Hospital now has two buses to transport employees, physicians and visitors from hospital parking lots and the Pitt County Office Building to locations throughout the medical complex.

According to Charles Mayo, hospital transportation department manager, the buses run from 6 a.m. until 8 p.m. each weekday.

Route 1 runs between the front of the hospital and the employee parking lot beside Greenville Villa Nursing Home. The bus leaves the hospital every 10 minutes and circles through the parking area. The bus also transports passengers to and from the county office building every 15 minutes and 45 minutes on the hour from 8:15 a.m. until 5:45 p.m.

Route 2 operates between the back areas of the hospital and the overflow parking lot next to the emergency road. The bus leaves the emergency department outpatient entrance every 15 minutes and proceeds to the overflow parking lot, the Gaskins-Leslie Building, the Rehabilitation Center rear entrance, the facilities management rear entrance and the physician entrance.

Mayo said the routes were developed to accommodate hospital staff who now park far away from the medical complex as parking spaces near the hospital have been lost to new construction.

Monroe Presented ECU Faculty Award

Dr. Edwin W. Monroe, a principal figure in the development of health sciences programs and the school of medicine at East Carolina University, was honored during a recent scientific forum at the school.

DR. EDWIN W. MONROE

Monroe received the Outstanding Faculty Award presented by the medical school's department of medicine during its annual research day activities.

Monroe was presented a plaque and a stylized pen and ink drawing of himself making the case for the medical school before the General Assembly.

A Greenville resident since 1956, Monroe was an internist in private practice until he was recruited in 1968 by then ECU Chancellor Leo Jenkins to lead the university efforts to establish the medical school and to plan and initiate new allied health programs.

He was the first dean of the ECU School of Allied Health and Social Professions and later, as vice chancellor for health affairs from 1971 to 1979, oversaw the early development of the medical school while increasing the scope of the nursing and allied health programs to include graduate studies.

Monroe serves as executive dean of the medical school and executive director of the Eastern Area Health Education Center. He also holds a professorship in the department of medicine.

next couple of days," Hugh Crowther, of the National Weather Service in Kansas City, Mo., said today.

In Clyde, Ohio, florist Cliff Doebel spurned traditional forecasting science and invited Leonard Crow Dog, a Sioux medicine man from South Dakota, to perform an Indian rain ritual.

"Crow Dog will use prayers and offerings to appeal to the four winds of the Earth to bring the rain to Sandusky County," Doebel said.

Water levels on the Mississippi reached record lows, meanwhile, stranding at least 750 barges. Twice that many could become mired by the weekend, equaling "a traffic jam of semi-trucks bumper to bumper from New Orleans to Philadelphia (Pa.)," said Michael Logue, spokesman for the Vicksburg District of the Army Corps of Engineers.

Despite predictions of scattered showers and thunderstorms today, forecasters see no significant relief for Iowa and the rest of the Corn Belt.

The area from Missouri to Ohio should get below-normal rain in the next month, while dry conditions should ease with above-normal rains in the South and southern Plains states, according to a forecast by the weather service and U.S. Department of Agriculture.

On Wednesday, prices for future delivery of soybeans, corn and oats rocketed to their daily trading limits within seconds of the opening bell at the Chicago Board of Trade, a reflection of Lyng's gloomy assessment the day before.

Women Lose Out

a Democratic polling organization. "There are lots of ways in which the Democrats are turning away from the '84 experience.

"And one of the ways, which I think is incorrect, is they think they would not benefit from nominating a woman as the vice president."

The "'84 experience," of course, was the fact the Mondale-Ferraro ticket was beaten in 49 of 50 states as President Reagan received an estimated 55 percent of the women's vote.

"I also think," said Lake "there is somewhat of a shortage of women who are both ready and willing. ... Because the Democrats have been out of office for eight years, we don't have the women in the administrative pipeline."

That view was echoed by others, including Joanne Symons, a political consultant who worked on Rep. Richard Gephardt's presidential campaign.

"There are not enough (Democratic) women in the pool," she said, because a Republican president has been filling Cabinet positions the past seven and a half years.

Lake also cited an ambition factor.

She listed Gov. Madeleine Kunin of Vermont, along with Schroeder and Mikulski as Democratic women who have the stature to be vice presidential candidates and said, "I don't think they want it. They want to be No. 1, not No. 2."

Howes said, "The real goal is to be prepared in the 1990s for a woman to be ready to be president of the United States and to run for president of the United States and to win."

the scene, the sources said.

Rufus Huggins, a member of the Greenville City Council, expressed concern today over the shooting.

"I understand that children quite often play in the area and the shotgun fire could have very easily hit a child," Huggins said.

Huggins said residents of the area have voiced the belief that people from outside the neighborhood and from other communities are contributing to many of the problems associated with crimes like Wednesday's shooting.

taxpayers through a checkoff on their state income tax returns, to match on a dollar-for-dollar basis money raised by candidates who accept prescribed spending ceilings. No candidate would be required to participate in the program.

If the bill is approved, the program it would create would not begin operating until the 1992 election. In the meantime, taxpayers could begin contributing some or all of their state income tax refund to the campaign fund.

Under an amendment adopted by the committee, the Legislature in 1991 would decide whether the campaign fund had raised enough money to begin matching the sums raised by participating candidates.

If so, the program would take effect the next year; if not, the plan would be scrapped and the money raised through the checkoffs would revert to the state budget.

"Truth In Preference To Fiction"

Tension Up

Politics Again Threaten Games

As South Korea builds toward hosting the Olympic games officials are assuring the world that order will be maintained in Seoul while they are going on.

The radicals, however, are bent upon showing the world that civil strife will be a part of staging the games.

Last week radical students with clubs, rocks and firebombs were in the streets apparently intent on a unification march to North Korea. Riot police, using tear gas, attempted to put down the demonstrations, along with others in South Korean cities.

The spectacle did nothing to assure tranquility for the Olympics.

Korea has been left divided since the cessation of hostilities in 1953. North Korea is a communist regime, while South Korea has prospered as a private enterprise nation. It has deficiencies as a democracy, but prides itself on its alliance with the democracies.

The Olympics were invited to showcase the great economic progress which South Korea has made, rising as it did from the ashes of a civil war. Unfortunately what visitors and participants may see when they go for the Olympics is a heavily armed nation with riot troops steadily putting down disorderly mobs.

That, of course, is the intent of those who organize such things. The demonstrators and rioters hope to make the point that force is needed to maintain control.

Unfortunately for the Olympics, which are supposed to be non-political, the games once again will serve a political purpose as they are staged in Seoul.

Under Control

Strong Monitoring Program Needed

While consumer groups are questioning the effectiveness of a state law governing the disposal of potential infectious waste, Pitt County Memorial Hospital officials say the situation is under control there.

PCMH spokesmen say their waste are incinerated and a new incinerator has been installed to take care of the waste. The incinerator was inspected by the North Carolina Department of Human and Natural Resources.

PCMH has its own infection control committee which determines what will be incinerated and what can go to the landfill.

We can accept that PCMH has its infectious wastes materials incineration under control. Nevertheless it is an area which calls for statewide study. Syringes, blood, products of surgery — all types of such wastes can be produced at hospitals and medical clinics.

If the wastes make their way to landfills the effects on groundwater are unknown.

These medical wastes may for the most part be properly disposed of, but a sound monitoring program is needed to determine that the public safety is being properly protected.

Prison Full, Jails Jammed

RALEIGH — The threat of a federal takeover of the state's prison system and the periodic releases of prisoners that are ordered to prevent such a takeover, have focused the state's attention on its crowded prisons.

A reading of the Legislative Study Commission of Prison's most recent report, however, indicates a much broader problem for state officials. The entire criminal justice system, not just the prisons, is overloaded.

The commission, in its report to the Joint Appropriations Committee last week, recommended increased funding for nearly every element in the criminal justice system. Jails, alternative sentencing programs, parole and probation offices and prisons all need more resources, the commission said. The report didn't help, however. Legislative leaders, after they released their 1989 supplemental spending plan, said that a tight revenue picture means that nothing more than the most urgent new spending can be okayed.

North Carolina is one of only seven states that house convicted misdemeanants in the state prison system. Almost all other states incarcerate misdemeanants in local jails. As the commission has looked to reduce the state's crowded prisons, the natural starting point has been with the approximately 2,500 misdemeanants. But moving them to jails won't work, the state's sheriffs have testified, because jails are generally full.

The commission is therefore recommending that a satellite jail fund be created to construct new facilities, or renovate existing ones, for the housing of specific classes of misdemeanants. Total price tag would be in the $20 million range, if it was ever fully funded.

The state's prisons currently house about 17,400 inmates, just 60 or so short of the legislatively mandated maximum. Total system capacity is about 700 less, if you use state calculations. Using federal calculations, the state's prison capacity is far less.

The mandated cap forces the Department of Correction to parole inmates, and that is putting a tremendous new burden on the state's system of parole and probation. The commission recommended creation of 201 new positions in the parole system to help handle these new cases. The state had 58,000 parole and probation cases at the end of 1985. Today the number has grown to 66,475. That means that each officer has an average of 122 parolees or probationers to watch, and some have as many as 200. The commission wants to reduce that average caseload to 95 at an annual cost of $3.4 million.

For the past several years, intensive parole and probation programs have been operating on a limited basis. The idea is to keep some people out of prison but to keep an extra close eye on them anyhow. The programs have become so popular with judges that as soon as new two-man teams are authorized by the assembly, they quickly are assigned a full caseload of about 25 defendants. So, the commission wanted an additional 10 teams created, at an annual cost of $650,000.

Parnell, and Rep. Anne Barnes, D-Orange, the other commission co-chairman, said the criminal justice system overloading is a result, primarily, of the state's increasing population. Other reasons are more sophisticated police work — which catches more criminals — and the increase in drug-related crime, they said.

The legislature didn't fund these requests this year. But with the caseload crush that the entire system faces, legislators know they can't put off this funding for long.

To the editor:

While many of us here in eastern North Carolina enjoyed what may have been one of the best weekends of the summer thus far, many people around the world used this weekend for purposes quite unrelated to relaxation. Many people on this date in history protested for the plight of this earth and the people who inhabit it.

In Wembley, England, nearly 70,000 folks packed the Wembley Arena for the FreedomFest concert protesting the South African policy of Apartheid and demanding the release of political prisoner and black leader Nelson Mandela.

Simultaneously, 30,000 citizens in the Netherlands marched and protested South African apartheid, while 60,000 protesters marched in New York City calling for an end to the nuclear arms race.

While I would doubt that any one of us would argue as to the severity of these problems, many of us may find them hard to consider in our day-to-day lives. Recently though, a good number of us here in eastern North Carolina found the strength to stand up for what we believed in, and by virtue of this courage there will be no toxic waste site in Edgecombe County.

For those of us who were at the public hearing and heard the announcement that there would be no waste site, there was a feeling of satisfaction and hope. This was a job well done! For now this process needs to continue on. Whether the problem is in our own county, country, continent, or planet it is our problem and the future of the human race is dependent on people such as those who protested Edgecombe, those who protested in New York, and those who protested in England.

The time has come to fight for the earth, fight for the people and fight for the future so that we may all enjoy many more beautiful weekends such as the one that has just passed.

Washington, N.C.

To the editor:

Toxic wastes, what a terrible plague mankind has brought against itself. I am very relieved the toxic waste dump will not be placed in Conetoe, though it must still be placed in North Carolina. How was this decision made, since it is not just North Carolina wastes to be handled at the facility? What was promised our state to host this dump?

Congratulations to all those who spoke out against the deadly materials being dumped in our area. I hope that all those people will now speak up and insist that Pitt County (and indeed North Carolina) establish as well as other materials can be recycled so as to greatly reduce the burden to our costly landfills and, therefore, to our environment as well as the natural resources used to make these materials. Our natural resources are not infinite and our environment can only be cleaned up if we the people decided to do it.

One material which is everywhere in large quantities, contributes to the production of toxic wastes and is not recyclable nor biodegradable at the present time, is plastics. If we could somehow find a way to recycle or cut down on our use of plastics, we could help both situations. Though, it seems at this time the use of plastics is increasing.

Let's get involved and decide to clean up our world now for ourselves, our children and generations. Each one of us can make a vital difference.

Black Running Mate Unlikely

Vice President George Bush, the all-but-certain Republican presidential nominee, is trying hard to distance himself from the Reagan administration's dismal record on civil rights. But many blacks still think he isn't trying hard enough.

In recent weeks, Bush has scheduled more appearances before black audiences. He has met with black leaders, expressed support for stronger minority business development efforts by the federal government and pledged to bring more blacks into a Bush administration. And he has promised a "positive civil rights agenda" — presumably he would move away from the inflammatory rhetoric and tactics of the Justice Department's Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights William Bradford Reynolds.

Obviously those moves are meant to reach out to blacks in order to heal the longstanding rift between them and the GOP, which has widened considerably during Ronald Reagan's tenure. But Bush nevertheless will be hard put to defend his loyalty to a president whom many blacks regard as the most hostile chief executive to civil rights since Woodrow Wilson.

On the other hand, the vice president generally comes across well in front of black audiences. When he spoke at the NAACP's national convention in Baltimore two years ago, there was genuine enthusiasm in the audience's response.

Blacks remember Bush's past support of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and Voting Rights Extension Act of 1980. When the issue is put to them straight on, a sizable number are willing to distinguish between Bush and President Reagan in assessing the administration's poor civil rights record. Surprisingly, even some of Jesse Jackson's supporters say they don't dismiss Bush out of hand.

These are all pluses for Bush if he seriously wishes to court black voters in the fall. Indeed, some observers suggest Bush may even be in a position to win a significant share of black voters if Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, the presumptive Democratic standard bearer, mishandles Jackson and his supporters during his party's nominating convention next month.

Were that to happen, Republicans might hope to break the Democratic Party's generation-long lock on black voters. That would represent a historic reversal.

Bush's biggest problem is widely perceived as the so-called "gender gap" — Bush polls well ahead of Dukakis among white men, but he does much less well among women. Conventional wisdom says Bush should choose a well-respected woman — say, Sen. Nancy Kassebaum of Kansas, or former Secretary of Transportation Elizabeth Dole — to shore up his image among this group.

But what if Bush were to choose a black running mate instead? One obvious choice would be Housing and Urban Development Secretary Samuel Pierce, who has been a loyal — some say too loyal — team player in the Reagan administration and the only member of the president's original Cabinet still in office.

By nominating Pierce as vice president, Bush would send a powerful signal to blacks that he is prepared to back up his words with deeds. As the first black ever to be nominated on a major party ticket, Pierce might attract millions of black voters, regardless of his past support for administration budget cuts which cut more deeply into housing than any other government agency, and despite the inevitable charges of "sell-out" and "Uncle Tom" raised by party militants. Most blacks would find it hard to vote against one of their own for vice president, even if he were a conservative Republican; after all, so was Abraham Lincoln.

Is this scenario likely? Not really. For one, Bush would probably view it as too risky. He wants to avoid the impression of "caving in to special interest" as much as Dukakis does. Which is why Dukakis will turn heaven and earth to find a vice president who is 1) a national hero, 2) a former astronaut with 3) foreign policy experience and 4) a deep Southern tan — and why Bush may very well end up choosing a woman as his running mate.

Strength For Today

One of the most profound paradoxes of the spiritual life is that in order to gain a measure of control over our life we have to give up control. To be in charge of one's life — to be in control — is valued highly in our society. Yet, as we mature we find such control to be illusory. The blunt fact is that unexpected events too often control us. The spiritual alternative to this frustration is to "let go and let in God." In the life of the spirit, as we give up control we gain it. We make the All Powerful One the source of our strength. We put him in charge, becoming weak ourselves. Through the process of giving up what we never really had, we are given what only he has to give: an unlimited source of strength available whenever we call upon it.

IRA Car Bomb Kills Six British Soldiers

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A bomb planted in a British army van while six soldiers ran a half-marathon killed them and injured 10 civilians in the worst Irish Republican Army attack in Northern Ireland in seven months.

The bombing Wednesday night in Lisburn, seven miles southwest of Belfast, brought this year's death toll from sectarian violence to 38 — eight this week alone.

Police said the soldiers drove into predominantly Protestant Lisburn's market square in an unmarked military van to run in the longest of three races and "fun runs" that attracted 4,250 competitors.

While they were away, guerrillas wired explosives to the van's chassis. The bomb exploded when the soldiers, returning from the race around 9 p.m., had driven off just a few yards, police said.

The IRA claimed responsibility. The outlawed guerrilla group is fighting to end British rule in Northern Ireland and unite the Protestant-dominated province with the Roman Catholic Irish Republic.

None of the civilians, including an 80-year-old man and a 2-year-old boy, suffered serious injuries, police said.

The death toll was the highest since an IRA bombing at a war memorial ceremony in Enniskillen last Nov. 8. The IRA said that bomb was meant to kill soldiers but accidentally massacred 11 Protestant civilians.

Wednesday's blast struck the worst blow against the army since a 1982 bombing in the Droppin' Well pub in Ballykelly, near Londonderry, killed 11 soldiers and six civilians. An IRA offshoot, the Irish National Liberation Army, claimed responsibility for that attack.

Lisburn is the main base of the British army in Northern Ireland. The soldiers were driving back to the town's Thieval army barracks, police said.

The British and Irish governments both deplored the killings, which sharpened fears that Northern Ireland is sliding into a new cycle of violence after several years of relative calm.

"So dastardly was the plan that the numbers killed could have been many times greater," said Tom King, the top British official in Northern Ireland.

Irish Prime Minister Charles Haughey said he condemned the killings "in the strongest terms."

Two dozen people have been killed since British commandos gunned down three unarmed IRA guerrillas on an alleged car-bombing mission in Gibraltar on March 6. That incident touched off two weeks of mayhem in Belfast in which nine people were killed.

South African Blacks Mark Anniversary Of Soweto Riots

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of blacks stayed away from work today to commemorate the bloody 1976 Soweto riots. An explosion near Cape Town killed one man and three blacks were wounded by firebombs.

Police reported about a dozen incidents of unrest on this frequently violent anniversary of the police shooting 12 years ago of Soweto schoolchildren marching against the use of the Afrikaans language in their instruction. Hundreds of blacks were killed in ensuing months in rioting.

Church services were scheduled throughout the country.

Gasoline bombs were thrown today at three buses and two delivery vans, causing serious injuries to three blacks, in separate incidents in Cape Town, Port Elizabeth and Durban townships.

The main power line between the black township of KwaMashu to Durban was sabotaged during the night, stopping rail traffic for several hours. Later, a train on the route was derailed and commuters had to be transferred to buses.

The nation's largest ports were operating normally, but in the eastern Cape province, half the workers were absent at East London and there was a total boycott at Port Elizabeth docks. Mining company officials said only 24,500 of 540,000 black employees at major mines were absent.

It is illegal under national emergency regulations to call for or participate in boycotts or illegal strikes, but many blacks have become accustomed to observing June 16 as a holiday.

In white-ruled South Africa, there are no public holidays commemorating events of specific significance to the 26 million black majority.

Many stores and shops in downtown Johannesburg were closed and only a handful of buses and taxis were operating in the city. Trains arriving from Soweto and other nearby black townships were nearly empty.

The streets of Soweto were almost deserted. About 100 people were scattered along the main road trying to hitch rides. A few police patrols were out and some people walked toward town.

Pitt Schools Graduate More Than 1,000

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

More than 1,000 Pitt County seniors crossed a milestone in their lives as they turned their tassels and became high school graduates in ceremonies conducted across the county Wednesday evening.

North Pitt

"Tomorrow will be the first day of our lives as high school graduates," Angie Bell of North Pitt High School told her peers during their graduation ceremony. "What can we hope that this new day will bring to us? Certainly, we don't wish for anything that will make the world or our lives less valuable and meaningful. Instead, let us wish for just a few rare things which each of us as individuals can accomplish."

"After tonight and over the next few years, we need to be able to say, 'somewhere out there' is my opportunity, the thing that will make my goal a reality, my dreams come true," said Laura Tripp, who also addressed the graduates at North Pitt.

"And it's out there graduates. In spite of the despair, hardship and pain we all must suffer, your opportunity lies waiting — find it and make it work for you," she said. "That is your duty and your privilege."

Ayden-Grifton

According to historians, the best way to chart a future course is to scrutinize similar past situations. Bob Rodebaugh told graduates at Ayden-Grifton High School in his address.

"In our effort to become gimpers (a person who strives to excel, to be different), let's study how a few overachievers attained success," he said. "Abraham Lincoln can certainly be classified as a gimper. Although he lacked the formal education that many people consider necessary to guide a nation, Lincoln set goals which enabled him to help keep our nation together even when civil strife threatened to divide it."

The Apostle Paul dared to be different when he spread the gospel throughout the Roman Empire, while Brian Piccoli, a running back for the Chicago Bears, showed "gimper courage" as he exhibited fortitude and character in the face of a shortened career due to lung cancer, Rodebaugh said.

"Like these famous gimpers, we should set high goals for ourselves. In aspiring to excel and be different, we should remain committed to the core," he said. "Our roots of dedication will result in the rich fruit of determination, excellence and achievement."

In recent years the world has become more and more complex, said Leigh Ann Teal, who also addressed graduates at Ayden-Grifton. "Because of this complexity, education has become an essential aid to success. We have shown our desires to succeed by completing our secondary education and many of us will continue our formal education by attending various colleges."

"Our desires of hard work will determine how our horizons will expand to make our own world. Now, we are ready to face our political and social responsibilities: to vote, to be leaders, to serve our community, and to use our acquired knowledge," she said.

Farmville Central

Reflection was a major theme of the two presentations made to graduates at Farmville Central High School.

Amy Mewborn led classmates through several images of the years past, including the first day at Farmville Central, the "cool, crisp nights at football games," music of the plays and concerts, "Celebration," the school's show choir, and getting through driver's education.

Also, "working together as a class has been very rewarding and brings to mind several distinct memories," including the senior prom, the yearbook and homecoming activities, she said.

"As we depart tonight, it will be up to each of us to continue to create positive memories in our years ahead by striving to be our best, and to do our best, whether we are in college, the military or in the work force," Ms. Mewborn said.

"If each of us were to stand before a mirror would we see only physical traits that have no importance or would we look deep into our inner being and see what makes us a true picture of success," said Kathryn Gay as she addressed the Farmville Central graduates.

"In a mirror I can see the shadows of the past and the enchantment of tomorrow. Many times I gaze into the mirror and see myself a few years ago just starting high school looking forward so much to this day. I was aware that life was good and secure," she said.

"Once again, I find myself gazing into the mirror, but now I see a tomorrow — a tomorrow that is ours and a tomorrow that is filled with wonders that is impossible to vision. Let us step into tomorrow with confidence — confidence that the youth of today will grow into responsible leaders that can handle whatever the future brings."

J.H. Rose

Carlton Phillips of J.H. Rose High School presented classmates a poem he created as part of his address to encourage them to strive for a higher level of success and to continue to seek knowledge. "Education is the knowledge you acquire; education is success when you try. Education, you can take it, or leave it, but don't let education pass you by," he said.

Even though graduation marks the end of high school experiences, "as we set out on our separate ways, we can still continue to share a common bond," said Mohammad Dar in his presentation. "We can still remain united. This unity can be achieved if we all set goals in our lives and then wholeheartedly pursue them with vigor and vitality."

Dar also encouraged his peers to keep an open mind and heed T.S. Elliott's warning not to become a generation of straw men, "a generation of hollow men whose desire to change has been paralyzed. But even a hollow man has potential for growth as long as he keeps his eyes and mind open."

Wesley Jackson also challenged graduates at Rose to set and meet goals. "Let this occasion be not only a graduation of the past, but also a graduation into the present and the future. After all, our destiny lies in the future, and that is where our thoughts should also be," he said.

D.H. Conley

Lives of graduates at D.H. Conley High School were described by Melanie Hardee as a tiny acorn that eventually become an oak tree when she presented her address to the graduates. Ms. Hardee carried her peers from the seeds parents provided years ago to the developing "trunks of our trees" in high school.

"Trees are different from most other living things — they never stop growing as long as they live," she said. "I challenge each of us to allow our trees of life to grow and bare fruit as long as we live."

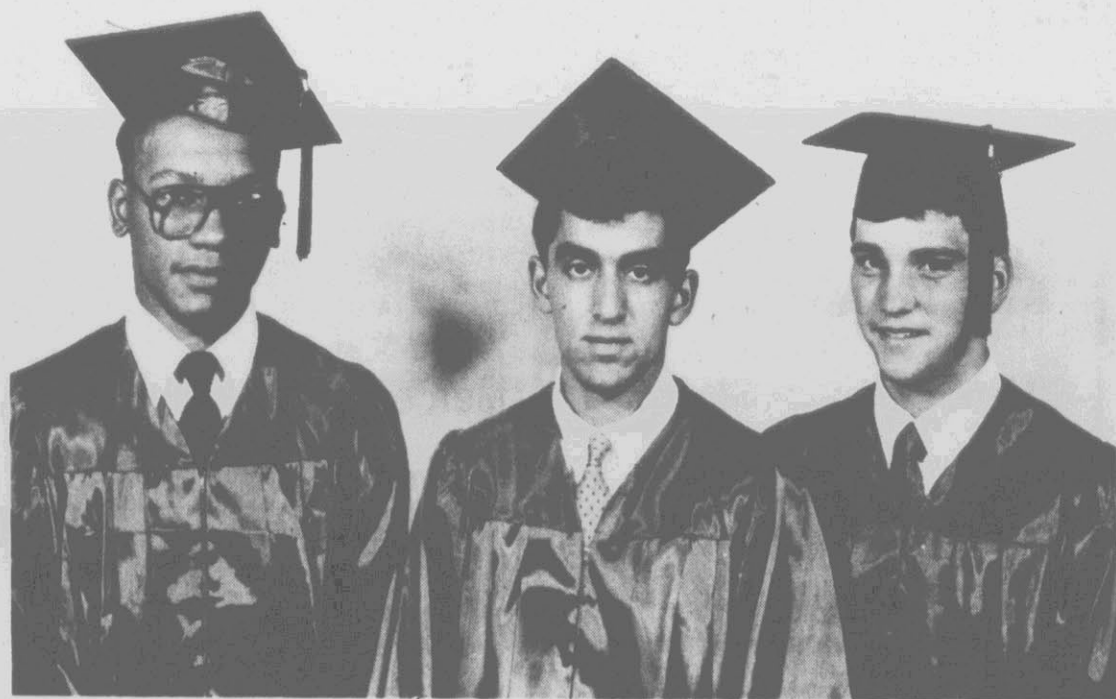

Education the graduates gained while at Conley have provided more than knowledge, Sarah Yarbrough said to her peers. "First, we should have acquired the ability to think independently and to make our own decisions ... second, our education should have exposed us to basic principles of justice and fairness ... third, our education should have instilled in us a commitment to defend such principles, even when they conflict with prevailing popular attitudes ... finally, our education has acquainted us with role models whose lives have reflected a commitment to principle with such leaders as Dr. Martin Luther King, Mahatma Gandhi, Susan B. Anthony and Franklin Delano Roosevelt," she said.

Miriam Fulford warned her classmates that life will include disappointments, but "it is through failures that we can learn to appreciate our successes," she said. Babe Ruth, John Milton and Mary Decker are all examples of people who faced major disappointments but overcame them.

"The individuals of the graduating class of 1988 have definitely undergone our share of accomplishments and disappointments," Ms. Fulford said. "My hope for tonight, at this turning point in our lives, is that we understand the value of overcoming disappointments. That we realize it takes persistence when faced with setbacks in order to succeed," she said.

Sonya Lee also guided her classmates to look ahead. "Our opportunities in the future are endless. Soon some will be attending graduate school, some will be competing in the job market, and some will possibly be getting married or even winning a Nobel Prize."

"Looking forward — wishing and wanting is easy, but to get where we want to be will require drive and stamina. Fortunately, we all possess these qualities."

Pitt's After-School Tutorial Program Proves Valuable

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Partnership for Progress After School Tutorial Program is valuable to parents, teachers and students participating in the program even though formal measures for evaluating the program have not been completed, evaluators say.

Dr. Dorothy H. Muller of the East Carolina University School of Education, who conducted the evaluation of the program after its first year of implementation, said not all data for the study were readily available for the evaluation, but "the feelings about the program and its success as addressed by students, parents-guardians, site teachers and classroom teachers would indicate that the program is a resounding success."

The formal data collected during the first evaluation will help make future analysis easier, she said.

The program began in October and tutorial sites were established in five housing projects within the county to aid students in the county schools who had been identified by the California Achievement Test as reading one year or more below grade level.

With a budget of $31,500 provided by the United Way, certified North Carolina teachers were hired to conduct the program at the sites for two hours, three days a week. Teachers also had assistants, who were often ECU education students. About 109 students were enrolled in the program.

Of 84 students evaluated by Dr. Muller and her team, 90 percent said they liked the program; 98 percent thought the program helped with school work; 94 percent thought they had become better readers; 82 percent said they liked reading more than they did last year, and 80 percent said they would return to the program next year.

Most of the 76 parents interviewed said the program has been a success in helping students in school work and self-concept. Some thought the program should be expanded to include more days.

Classroom teachers' responses varied from site to site, Dr. Muller said. Overall, 67 percent said they had noticed improvements in the students' self-concept, while 23 percent said they had not. Ten percent did not respond.

Seventy-three percent of the teachers said the program had been helpful, while 20 percent said it had not, and 6 percent said the question was not applicable.

All site teachers agreed the program had improved students' reading skills, self-concepts and attitudes about school. The teachers also felt the discipline among students in the program had improved.

On the formal measures of the evaluation, Dr. Muller said there was no significant improvement in the reading achievement of the students as measured by standardized tests, but "study of the test scores for individual students over a three-year period shows an extremely large fluctuation in test scores making use of this data extremely unreliable for this population. As students participate in the program and become aware of the importance of effort on such tests and more aware of the appropriate strategies to use in taking tests, standardized achievement test data should become more reliable."

Analysis of reading progress reports during the first four marking periods of 1987-88 also indicates no significant improvement in reading achievement for students in the program, she said. "Achievement remained fairly consistent with some decline in the fourth marking period. Mean achievement at one site, for example, was 2.14, 2.13, 2.75 and 1.75 during the first four weeks."

The team was unable to compare achievement of students in the program to those not participating in the program because of incomplete test data, and previous year grade reports were unavailable, making comparison of reading achievement between the two years impossible, Dr. Muller said.

Dr. Muller suggested the program could be strengthened by collecting and keeping data concerning students current for assisting in evaluation and program review; extending the program to four or five days and increase communication with parents and teachers to enhance success and acceptance.

Other suggestions were to allow the first portion of the first hour for homework, particularly homework related to language arts, and to avoid using "more of the same skill and drill. Students should be reading, building personal word banks and using those words for various types of classification and writing activities. Students should not spend two more hours doing seatwork in workbooks. If skill-drill is done, it should relate to the classroom instruction, Dr. Muller said.

School Activities

Stokes Elementary School recently held a field day where students began with the Pledge of Allegiance before participating in various activities. All students received ribbons for their participation.

Cathy Rigsby's fourth-graders visited Raleigh, culminating a study of North Carolina. The class toured the Capitol, the History Museum and the Museum of Natural Science. The students visited the legislative building and witnessed a session in progress, in addition to meeting with Rep. Ed Warren of Pitt County. They also toured the Governor's mansion.

Farm Payments

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's wheat, feed grain and cotton farmers will receive $130 million from the federal government for idling almost half their cropland this year, according to the N.C. Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

By comparison, the state's farmers who planted wheat, feed grain and cotton crops in 1987 received about $182 million on the open market.

Cropland on 49,071 North Carolina farms will be idled this year by farmers who are opting for a government check rather than taking their chances and planting. Farmers are idling about 44 percent of the 1.9 million acres normally used to grow grains and cotton, up 47 percent from 1987.

The government has encouraged idling land because of market gluts that have depressed wheat and feed grain prices for years.

Legislature OKs Martin Pay Raise But Strips His Spending Requests

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin's annual salary will increase to $109,725 under a $274.2 million spending bill set to become law today, but most of his election-year spending requests were left out of the 1988-89 budget supplement.

With the Democratic leadership pushing for adjournment of the legislative session next week, the omnibus bill was rushed to approval by the Joint Appropriations Committee and the full House and Senate Wednesday.

"This is the most garbled version of a budget I've ever seen," complained Senate Minority Leader Larry Cobb, who led futile Republican efforts to delay action and add funding for programs Martin requested.

Cobb, R-Mecklenburg, protested the leadership's apparently unprecedented decision to seek a vote on the spending bill before a package of implementing provisions are ready for consideration. Usually, such "special provisions" are included in budget bills.

"I'm just sorry that we're putting on this sort of exhibition for the people of North Carolina under the guise of acting expeditiously and fairly," he said.

Majority Leader Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, acknowledged the process had some new twists this year. But Rand blamed Martin, saying he had complicated matters by submitting a $558.7 million spending plan that was about $130 million out of balance.

"We will have to muddle along and do the best we can," Rand said. In an apparent reference to Jim Gardner, his Republican opponent in the race for lieutenant governor, Rand said the Legislature had drawn criticism for "being down here and not working, not spending any time in the chamber."

"People who don't really understand the process perhaps would like for us to lollygag around ... and not take care of the people's business in an expeditious manner," he said.

The House approved the spending bill 87-18 after rejecting, mostly along party lines, a series of Republican amendments to add money for programs championed by Martin and to reduce the fund for poor women's abortions.

Moments later, the Senate approved the measure 42-2 after rejecting Cobb's motion to delay the vote.

The package was to become law today when signed by Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan and House Speaker Liston Ramsey. It will comprise the bulk of a $447.5 million supplement to the $9.9 billion 1988-89 state budget, legislative leaders say.

The other major portion of the supplement — a bill to appropriate about $173 million to spend on one-time capital projects such as construction and maintenance of state facilities — will be unveiled by legislative leaders later this week or early next week. Another $6 million to $7 million will be spent on lawmakers' pet local projects.

During the Appropriations Committee meeting, Republicans unsuccessfully offered several amendments to add funds for industrial development and economic growth programs, staff to expand the intensive probation program, state parks, services for the elderly and rape crisis centers — all of which Martin included in his budget plan.

Some of those efforts were repeated on the House floor, where GOP lawmakers also requested money for anti-pollution programs and a reduction in the state abortion fund from $924,500 to $200,000.

The Democratic majorities in the committee and the House voted down the amendments at the urging of House Appropriations Committee Chairman Billy Watkins, who crafted the spending plan with Senate Appropriations Chairman Aaron Plyler.

"Everybody knows there are a lot of good programs that we wish we could fund and many services that we wish we could give money to," said Watkins, D-Granville. He said he knew of "heart-rending" needs "that would almost make you cry."

But he reminded lawmakers that the General Assembly cut state taxes by about $200 million per year in 1985 at Martin's behest and that Republicans had criticized the Democratic leadership for rejecting further cuts.

"There is no way under the living sun you can cut taxes and keep spending and follow the Constitution of the State of North Carolina for a balanced budget," Watkins said.

Plyler criticized the Republicans for proposing to take the money for Martin's programs from the Department of Community Colleges budget, which has about $11 million that has not been specifically earmarked.

"It seems that some people want to destroy the community college system," Plyler said. The implementing provisions will direct how the money will be used, he said.

Republicans contended that the department could do without the money because of an enrollment decline. But Sen. Marvin Ward, D-Forsyth, said loss of the funds would force individual community colleges to eliminate jobs.

The package Watkins and Plyler crafted actually totaled $284.2 million, but about $10 million for one-time spending was removed from the bill approved Wednesday. It will be included in the capital bill.

House Tentatively Backs Tax Changes

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill that changes the way North Carolina calculates business income taxes faces no open dissent in the House or Senate, but it could become embroiled in a battle over another proposed business tax break.

With almost no debate, the state House voted unanimously Wednesday to tentatively approve the bill, which could reduce state revenues $250 million by the turn of the century.

The measure, approved 105-0, will face a final House vote Thursday. If approved, it goes to the Senate, where Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan said it enjoyed broad support.

"I know of no opposition," Jordan said.

The income tax measure would alter the formula used to calculate liability in a manner that would give a financial boost to multistate companies based in North Carolina.

Currently, three factors determine how much income tax a multi-state business must pay in North Carolina: the proportion of its nationwide payroll, property and sales in the state.

The bill would amend the formula by giving double weight to the sales factor, meaning it would count twice as much as property and payroll. The change would help home-grown companies that have large property holdings and provide lots of jobs in North Carolina.

Bill Leaves Panel 'Spinning' Its Wheels

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Hazardous Waste Treatment Commission would be stopped "in its tracks" if the General Assembly passes a bill approved by a House committee, a commission spokesperson says.

"I think it's unfortunate for the General Assembly to cause any delay in siting a facility the state of North Carolina needs and the General Assembly believes it needs," said

Kathy Neal, spokesperson for the commission. But she emphasized that the Legislature created the commission, which must follow its mandates.

The Legislature created the commission four years ago, but on Wednesday, the House Finance Committee approved a measure that would limit its work to seeking a county to volunteer to host a treatment facility. When the commission narrowed potential sites to two — one in Rowan and one in Davidson County — "from then on the siting process was basically doomed to failure," said Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, who sponsored the 1984 bill that set up the commission. "It would be hard to go anywhere against their will."

"I don't know what to do now. I don't think anyone does. We know what not to do. We're just spinning our wheels right now."

The bill, which was scheduled to go before the House today, said the preferred solution to solving the need to treat hazardous waste is a volunteer county. If that fails, the governor should seek an agreement to treat North Carolina hazardous waste out of state.

If no agreement is reached, then the governor reports back to the treatment commission.

IN THE STATE

Open Meetings

RALEIGH (AP) — Republican Jim Gardner says his Democratic opponent for lieutenant governor "backed off" his support for the open meetings law, but Senate Majority Leader Tony Rand says the issue never got to the Senate.

House Democrats on Tuesday defeated a Republican-sponsored resolution 79-34 that would have allowed the Legislature to consider a bill to tighten the open meetings law in the General Assembly. One Democrat voted for the bill and no Republican opposed it. It did not go before the Senate.

"The bill didn't come before the Senate and I haven't voted on anything," Rand said Wednesday. "Either (Gardner) doesn't understand the legislative process, or he's trying to fool the public. I would appreciate him not trying to distort what's going on."

Gardner Wednesday promised to make the open meetings law a campaign issue and questioned Rand's sincerity in March announcement that he would make all legislative budget committee meetings and documents open to the public and the news media.

UNC Provost

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — John Dennis O'Connor, vice chancellor for research and dean of the graduate school, will become acting provost of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, officials announced Wednesday.

The appointment, made by UNC Chancellor Christopher Fordham becomes effective July 1.

O'Connor will fill in for the spot left vacant by Samuel Williamson, who will become president of the University of the South in Sewanee, Tenn. Williamson had been provost since 1984.

Hurricane Drill

RALEIGH (AP) — State officials monitored a fictitious hurricane Wednesday to test North Carolina's readiness when residents and emergency personnel face the real thing.

It was billed as the state's largest hurricane drill, involving dozens of state agencies and 31 coastal-area counties. The exercise went off with few hitches.

RDU Radar

WASHINGTON (AP) — A key House panel has called for spending $10.4 million to install and make permanent an experimental radar system at Raleigh-Durham International Airport.

The radar guidance system is needed to allow airplanes to land and take off simultaneously on RDU's parallel runways when visibility is poor. The runways are too close to allow such landings under current federal regulations.

The transportation subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee included the radar funding in its catch-all spending proposal for fiscal 1987 and beyond.

The bill calls for spending $5.4 million to complete the experimental radar system at RDU for scheduled testing this year. It calls for another $5 million to retain and upgrade the equipment on a permanent basis if the experiments are successful.

Home Moved

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — The one-time home of the founders of Appalachian State University has been moved to a vacant lot for storage.

The Dougherty House, stripped of its roof, will remain on land owned by the university until a buyer is found. The house was built in 1902.

Controversy over the fate of the two-story house faded after a June 1 deadline passed to find another suitable site for the home.

ASU plans to build a temporary parking lot at the site and later a $17 million math and science building.

Cruelty

GREENSBORO (AP) — A Greensboro woman was charged with more than 20 counts of cruelty to animals after authorities removed one dead dog and 13 live ones from a two-story structure they condemned as unfit for human habitation.

One live cocker spaniel was found entangled in the spokes of a bicycle wheel, its leg broken, said Louise Puckett, abuse investigator for the Humane Society of Guilford County.

Carol Bryant was released on $500 bond after being arrested Tuesday. She said the official action stemmed from "the city's ever-popular grudge against me."

"I love my animals," she said. "I don't party, I don't club. I just spend time with my dogs and I still get harassed."

City Manager

REIDSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — D. Kelly Almond, the city manager of Newton, has been named city manager for Reidsville, ending a search that included 162 applicants for the job, officials said Wednesday.

Almond, 37, is scheduled to begin July 11, replacing William Gentner, who resigned under pressure in late February.

Rose Says Tobacco Plan Aids Foreigners

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal program designed to boost foreign sales of U.S. tobacco and other agriculture products is so poorly administered that some foreign-grown leaf is benefiting from it, Rep. Charlie Rose says.

"To me, this is a major scandal," Rose said Wednesday during a meeting of the House agriculture subcommittee on tobacco, which Rose chairs.

He pressed Thomas Kay, administrator of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's foreign agricultural service, about a Commodity Credit Corp. program in which the federal government guarantees payment to dealers who have contracts to sell U.S.-grown products overseas.

Rose said he thought some cigarettes had been exported under the program even though they included foreign-grown tobacco.

Rose said he could not prove the allegation. But he cited a General Accounting Office report that said the Commodity Credit Corp. does not require enough documentation from commodity dealers to make sure that the products in the program are 100 percent American-made. The GAO report said Iraq had complained that some tobacco products purchased through the Commodity Credit Corp. program may have contained Brazilian tobacco.

"I would take issue with GAO on some of its findings," Kay told Rose. If dealers indeed mixed foreign-grown leaf in the products sold through the program, Kay said, "then they were guilty of fraud."

Rose asked the USDA to require documentation that all products exported under the Commodity Credit Corp. program are 100 percent domestically grown.

"We will give serious consideration" to the request, Kay said.

REUNION COMING — Michael Shea Santos will be reunited with his father, Ronald Armand Santos, in Boone on Father's Day. They were separated nearly 18 years ago, when Michael was 2, after the elder Santos and his wife broke up their marriage. (AP Laserphoto)

After 18 Years, Son To See Dad

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — Michael Shea Santos plans to spend a little time with his father on Father's Day — the first time he has met him in about 18 years.

Less than a week ago, a reunion with his father was only a dream for Santos. Santos, 19, has no memory of his father. Only an old rosary, a slightly tattered photograph showing Santos as a baby in his father's arms, and a birth certificate which says the younger Santos was born in Sacred Heart Hospital in Allentown, Pa., the son of Ronald Armand Santos and his mother Thresa Ann Cornett Santos.

From the time his parents' divorce separated Santos from his father, when the boy was 2 years old, the rosary, photograph, birth certificate and an occasional indirect contact through relatives was the only link to a memory which never had time to develop.

Santos ran away from his mother approximately two months before his 18th birthday. He spent that two-month period in a mountain hideaway, with little more than the clothes he wore, able only to develop a vague dream of some future reunion with his father.

Now, Santos' dream of meeting his father has become a plan.

When Santos came to the Watauga Democrat in Boone last week, he told the newspaper he would like to get word to his dad before Father's Day.

The problem was, Santos had no money and did not know exactly where or how to look for his dad. The Democrat ran the story last Friday and Santos' aunt, Becky Cornett, with whom he has resided for about a year in Boone, mailed the article to the Allentown Morning Call, from where a reporter began making calls.

Before the day had passed, Lowery had located relatives who gave him Ronald Santos' address and phone number in Manchester, N.H. After the initial contact, the senior Santos, who works only part-time in a grocery store, vowed to beg pennies if he had to to buy a bus ticket to Boone.

He promised to arrive on Saturday.

Meanwhile, the younger Santos imagines what his father will be like.

"I don't know. I have no idea of what he might be like. I would like to think he'd be kind and a gentleman, but I don't know."

"I guess I'm looking for someone who feels the same way I do. I guess I want to find myself in him."

Physician Gave Aid To Afghans

By MICHAEL HOBBS
Associated Press Writer

For most people, news of the Soviet pullout from Afghanistan is just another story from the other side of the globe. But for one Kinston orthopedic surgeon, events in that corner of the world have taken on new meaning.

Dr. Charles Classen Jr. recently returned from a three-week volunteer mission to Pakistan. He was there to treat Afghan rebels and their families for wounds they received in the war with Soviet troops and the Soviet-backed Afghan government.

"It was the trip of 10,000 lifetimes," Classen said. "I've never learned so much in such a short period of time."

Classen, 48, has practiced medicine in Kinston for 12 years. He worked in Pakistan as a volunteer with the Seattle-based International Medical Corps, a group that receives U.S. government funds to treat war-wounded Afghan rebels and train Afghan medics.

He lived and worked in an IMC-rented compound in the Afghan refugee camps between Peshawar, Pakistan, and the Khyber Pass on the border with Afghanistan.

"Peshawar is a crowded, dusty, bustling city," Classen said. "If you took every kind of land vehicle from the beginning of time, put them on a road going in different directions at different speeds, with dirt, and dust billowing everywhere, that's what the main road in Peshawar looks like."

The compound where the IMC staff lives and works is surrounded by a double set of walls and is guarded by Pakistani soldiers, Classen said.

"We were out in a minor war zone," Classen said.

Classen, an Army veteran who is married with three children, has traveled to Europe, Morocco and Central America, but said he had never been on a trip like this one.

His work was divided into treating patients and training Afghan medics who return to Afghanistan to run clinics that treat rebels.

"I saw cases there I've never seen in my life," Classen said. "The working conditions are horrible. They don't have one-fifth of the equipment we have."

Classen said he learned of IMC from a friend who had traveled to Pakistan with the organization.

Amy Talbot, assistant to the executive director of IMC, said the organization receives funds from the U.S. Agency for International Development and private contributions.

The program was started four years ago, she said. Since then, more than 100 doctors have been sent there from the United States, along with nurses and physician assistants. One orthopedic surgeon is sent each month and only stays three weeks, while other medical doctors stay three to six months.

The IMC has established 42 clinics inside war-torn Afghanistan that are staffed by Afghan medics that have been trained at the facility near Peshawar. Ten of the clinics are capable of performing some surgery, Ms. Talbot said.

SEEKING CONTROL — Evangelist Jim Bakker poses in front of a sign welcoming him and his wife Tammy back to the Fort Mill, S.C., area. Bakker has set up an office close to PTL's Heritage USA complex and is attempting to regain control of the ministry he founded. (AP Laserphoto)

PTL Founder Says He Plans To Regain Helm Of Ministry

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — PTL founder Jim Bakker says he intends to regain control of the ministry and believes the last year he has spent as a religious outcast will help.

"I think we can help people because of what we've been through," Bakker said Wednesday as he sat in his tiny store-front office near the sprawling grounds of Heritage USA. "They want to know, 'Does the Bible really work?' We've been through one of the most devastating times of just about any public figures in history."

Bakker said he believes he will be accepted back by PTL's followers, despite the sex and money scandal that forced him out of the ministry in March 1987.

"If they look into our eyes I think they'll know we spent more than a year in repentance and prayer," he said. "We've repented so much that it's like the voice of God saying, 'You've repented enough. You keep reminding me but you are forgiven.'"

"There's been no other time to move," Bakker said. "Now is the time to return to the ministry."

Even the ever-optimistic Bakker admitted it will be an uphill climb for him and his wife, Tammy, to get back PTL. But he says he believes he will prevail.

"God doesn't take you halfway and dump you," said Bakker. "I've been building this place for 15 years. I'm staying until I get it back."

Bakker plans to present a reorganization plan for the Christian retreat in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Columbia, S.C., before June 29.

"We are also placing an advertisement in a local newspaper asking all former employees who are interested in being a part of the Jim and Tammy ministry to come to the office on an fill out a form," he said Wednesday. "These are not job applications, it's just a survey to see how many are interested."

Bankruptcy Judge Rufus Reynolds has already told PTL officials to sell land, buildings and other assets to raise enough money to settle claims against the ministry that could reach as high as $130 million.

Last month, PTL officials worked out a deal with Charlotte businessman George Shinn calling for Shinn to buy all or most of PTL's property at Heritage USA and lease parts of the ministry to a new church.

Shinn, who owns Charlotte's new National Basketball Association franchise and a minor league baseball team, has declined to say how much he will offer for the complex. Reported estimates have ranged from $75 million to $100 million.

M.C. "Red" Benton, the court-appointed trustee at PTL, has said there are several other offers in the works, including Bakker's. Benton vowed to treat any offer from Bakker fairly.

"We aren't going to discriminate against him and we aren't going to give him any special privileges either," Benton said.

For his part, Bakker said he has the "financial and spiritual" support to buy back the ministry.

"I'm more convinced at this moment that we will be back at Heritage USA than at any time in nearly a year and a half," he said, adding that he hopes to buy some television time to air his proposal.

Bakker returned to South Carolina in early June and immediately opened an office in a V-shaped retail mall

Kirk Says Task Force Will Keep Up Robeson Study

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A state task force taking information on alleged corruption in Robeson County has not turned up any specific evidence, but it is not ready to disband, the group's chairman says.

"We are not closing our doors in that if people do decide to come forth we are ready to listen, but all we have the authority to do is to listen and turn the information over to the U.S. Attorney," Phil Kirk, Gov. Jim Martin's chief of staff, told The Fayetteville Times Wednesday. "We have not closed our doors."

The task force, comprised of Kirk, the governor's general counsel Jim Trotter and secretary of Crime Control and Public Safety Joe Dean, was formed as part of the conditional release of hostages taken Feb. 1 at The Robesonian newspaper office in Lumberton.

Eddie Hatcher, 30, and Timothy Jacobs, 19, allegedly took as many as 20 hostages and demanded the state-level investigation as well as the investigation of the January death of a Robeson County Jail inmate who the men did not know.

Kirk told Martin in an interim report this week that "we have been disappointed at the lack of specific information which has been brought to our attention."

Kirk said Wednesday he is not blaming people for not coming forward with specific information.

"I believe there is substantial drug dealing in Robeson County and that people are afraid to come forward with information," Kirk said. "I do not have an opinion on public officials' alleged wrongdoing."

"I do believe there is information that people are afraid to come forward with, and that's just a gut feeling," he said.

Kirk said the task force received "a little bit of specific information" from one man and from "some telephone calls." The information was turned over to the U.S. Attorney's office.

Southern Baptists Reaffirm Belief In 'Literal Hell' For Non-Believers

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — People lacking commitment to Jesus will be consigned to hell, Southern Baptists declared, while moderates marched to the Alamo and tore up a resolution they said meant a denominational dictatorship.

"Some believe that hell is not a reality, and its corollary, that all people will eventually be saved," said a resolution approved Wednesday by the nation's largest Protestant denomination at its annual convention.

"We affirm our belief in the biblical truth that those without a personal commitment to Jesus Christ will be consigned to a literal hell, the place of everlasting separation from God."

Being saved from it "comes only by repentance, regeneration through faith in Jesus Christ," the resolution said. "No one is saved apart from that transforming experience."

The resolution, approved overwhelmingly, represents no change in doctrine by the 14.7 million-member denomination. But it was unusual since the subject of hell is rarely discussed in most mainstream pulpits or by church conventions because so little is concluded about it.

It also seemed to reflect the fundamentalist position that non-Christians must be brought to Christ or be condemned to hell, a thesis that has not been advanced by mainline churches in modern times.

A regional interfaith director for the Southern Baptist missions board in New Jersey was ousted earlier this year by fundamentalist pressure because he held that God's covenant with Jews remains permanent and valid.

Fundamentalists have held the presidency of the Southern Baptist Convention for nine years. They maintained their grip with the election Tuesday of another fundamentalist, the Rev. Jerry Vines of Jacksonville, Fla., who narrowly defeated the moderate candidate, the Rev. Richard Jackson of Phoenix, Ariz., for the one-year term.

Through presidential appointive powers, fundamentalists have brought the vast network of denominational operations under their control.

The resolution was one of several approved at the annual meeting of 32,600 "messengers," as the delegates are known, neared its close today.

With the fundamentalist wing predominating, the convention also limited the historic Protestant concept of the equality of laity and clergy.

That view, expressed in the phrase "priesthood of the believer," was a key concept of the 16th century Reformation, which rejected the clerical domination in the Roman Catholic Church.

The convention said the concept "in no way contradicts" the "authority of the pastor which is seen in the command to the local church in Hebrews 13:17, 'Obey your leaders, and submit to them.'"

After the resolution was approved by a two-thirds vote sharply divided between moderates and fundamentalists, about 200 moderates staged a protest march to the Alamo, the cradle of Texas liberty.

There they ripped up copies of the resolution and denounced it as heresy and a betrayal of Protestant heritage.

"This cuts at the soul of what Baptist congregations are all about," said the Rev. Randall Lolley, driven from the presidency of Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary by fundamentalist-imposed controls on choosing faculty.

The resolution states that "misunderstanding and abuse" of the egalitarian doctrine has led to a mistaken attitude that a "Christian may believe what he so chooses and still be considered a loyal Southern Baptist."

It also has been used in "undermining of pastoral authority," but does not contravene the "responsibility and authority of the pastor," the resolution said.

Moderates shouted from the floor during the tumultuous debate that the resolution was akin to a "papal system" of clerical control and violated Jesus' teaching that ministers were to be servants, not masters.

"What it's talking about is denominational dictatorship," said the Rev. Buckner Fanning of San Antonio. "It says the only way to lead is by blind obedience."

No Pilgrimage

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran said it will not send Moslem pilgrims next month to the holy city of Mecca, Saudi Arabia, where 275 Iranians were killed in a riot last July.

"Moslems will be upset by the absence of Iranian pilgrims from this year's hajj," or pilgrimage, Mehdi Karrubi, supervisor of Iranian pilgrims, said in an radio announcement monitored in Nicosia on Wednesday.

Karrubi said the Saudis had "created obstacles ... and prevented the arrival of Iranian pilgrims."

Iran wanted to send 150,000 pilgrims to the holy city as it usually does. But the Saudi government limited the number to 45,000 after an Iranian rally in Mecca on July 31 resulted in a riot in which 402 pilgrims were killed, including 275 Iranians.

Saudi Arabia said the pilgrims died in a stampede, but Iran claims the Saudis shot them.

Presbyterians OK Budget With $5.1 Million Deficit

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Despite declining membership and financial shortfalls, the nation's largest Presbyterian denomination is healthy and ready to become a major force, says the man in charge of the church's $98 million mission budget.

S. David Stoner, executive director of the General Assembly Council of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), said finances have been worrisome for some time in the 3-million-member church.

The denomination Wednesday concluded its nine-day annual meeting after approving a $108.7 million budget that includes a $5.1 million deficit. Stoner said the church's 11,600 congregations would be challenged to make up the shortfall.

Budget concerns surfaced frequently during the 200th annual meeting. Stoner said much of the problem stems from continuing efforts to merge two Presbyterian groups.

The United Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) joined with the smaller, mainly Southern, Presbyterian Church (U.S.) five years ago, ending a 121-year-old split stemming from the Civil War.

"This was the first real assembly of the new denomination," he said, and decisions in St. Louis provide "a stage for true vigor. We are going to be able to build together."

Stoner said the assembly's actions would help set priorities for the General Assembly Council as it goes about allocating the money among competing interests.

The revisions and final adoption Tuesday of "Christian Obedience in a Nuclear Age," a major policy statement that has been blamed for some divisiveness in the church, will help heal those splits, Stoner and others said.

The Rev. Harry Hassell, an associate pastor at the denomination's largest church, Highland Park in Dallas, and an original opponent of the Christian Obedience paper, said he was elated by the final product, which was reworded to make it clear civil disobedience or tax resistance by those opposed to government policies were unusual courses for Christians.

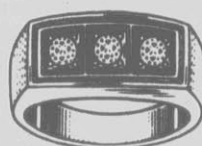

"For the first time in a long while, we have a perspective in the broad middle," Hassell said.

The paper says nuclear war is immoral and the theory of nuclear deterrence "as an adequate, permanent means to national security ... is not morally defensible."

Drought Brings Traffic To Crawl On Mississippi

By RON HARRIST
Associated Press Writer
GREENVILLE, Miss. (AP) — Time runs slow on Ole Man River these days but the money's running out fast, as the 50 towboats in position to nudge 750 barges up the Mississippi sit stranded in record-low water levels caused by drought.

Officials fear that up to 1,500 barges could become stranded by the weekend, equaling "a traffic jam of semi-trucks bumper to bumper from New Orleans to Philadelphia (Pa.)." Michael Logue, spokesman for the Vicksburg District of the Army Corps of Engineers.

"Nobody knows for a fact how long we will be here," said James Burkett, a pilot with the towboat Charles F. Detmar, Jr., stuck near this Mississippi Delta town. "Some of the boats have been here for three days — at least three days."

While tugboat owners are losing an estimated $10,000 a day in expenses, their crews are spending the time painting, performing light maintenance and even fishing.

"There's plenty of work, there's always something to do," said Steve Southern, a first mate on the John M. Donnelly, a northbound towboat pushing 30 barges north.

The continuing drought throughout the Midwest and Southeast has brought the Mississippi to its lowest levels for this time of year since Mark Twain chronicled life on the Big Muddy and officials began chronicling river levels in 1872.

The low water has forced barges to operate only during daylight and to lighten their loads, said Jeffrey Smith, vice president of the American Waterways Operators in Arlington, Va.

"Low water — since the days of Mark Twain — has been an occupational hazard, and they know how to deal with it. Things are somewhat restricted, but cargo is still moving," Smith said Wednesday.

Mississippi River barges carry such cargo as grain, petroleum, chemicals, iron and steel, he said.

Barges with light loads wait here to be escorted one by one by a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers channel patrol boat. In all, about 50 towboats were stranded Wednesday along with their charges, approximately 750 barges, officials said.

The towboats, which displace more than 9 feet of water, were stranded in about 9 feet or less as they waited for the corps dredge Jadwin to arrive to-day to widen the channel.

The Jadwin will take at least a day, and possibly two, to dredge the channel to a depth of 16-20 feet and allow the barges through, officials said.

The drought has been good news for some, however.

Waterways Marine, which takes orders by radio and delivers supplies to towboats passing by, has been doing a brisk business since the boats became stranded, said the company's general manager, James Ashmore.

Left For Dead, Woman Survives, Nabs Assailant

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — A woman who was raped, stabbed 15 times, choked and left for dead struggled through desolate countryside nearly 24 hours before she was rescued, and then helped catch the suspect, authorities said.

"She is one tremendous lady," Lewis and Clark County Sheriff Chuck O'Reilly said Wednesday after the suspect appeared in court. "This gal has ... courage."

The 29-year-old Helena woman disappeared from her home about 1:30 a.m. Saturday. She had been talking on the telephone with a friend, who heard the woman cry "Oh no! Oh no!", authorities said.

The friend reported hearing sounds of a scuffle, and when police arrived at the home, she was missing.

She turned up a day later on a country road northeast of Helena, where a motorist picked her up and took her to a hospital, authorities said.

Despite her condition, she insisted on giving officers a detailed description of her assailant, O'Reilly said.

"Her description was remarkable," he said. "She was trying so hard to help us in the midst of all that pain, sedation and terror."

The description played a key role in the arrest. Authorities said they were able to identify the suspect with help from a fellow employee who heard the description on the radio.

Shawn D. Clawson, 24, of Helena, was arrested Tuesday night on a rural road 10 miles east of Helena, authorities said. He was charged Wednesday with attempted murder, aggravated kidnapping, rape and aggravated assault, and was being held in lieu of $250,000 bail.

Clawson was paroled in March from the Montana State Prison, where he served part of a 10-year sentence for burglary, sexual assault and intimidation charges filed in Anaconda, O'Reilly said.

On Saturday, authorities said, Clawson broke into the woman's home through a bedroom window. He held her for several hours in an abandoned bus three blocks away, then took her to a remote area northeast of Helena, where he raped her, stabbed her 15 times, beat her about the head with a rock and left her for dead in the hilly, rugged area, police said.

She made her way through the arid countryside dotted with trees and sagebrush for about 24 hours before she reached the road where she was found, authorities said. O'Reilly said he did not know how far she traveled.

The woman underwent surgery at a Helena hospital Sunday and was in stable condition Wednesday, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Greg Painter, who hired Clawson to work at a Helena auto-parts store in April, said Clawson seemed calm Saturday morning at work, but that he suddenly left Tuesday.

An employee who heard a description of the assailant on the radio told Painter about the resemblance to Clawson, and Painter said he called the sheriff's office.

Clawson was arrested minutes later as he was driving to Canyon Ferry Lake with his 17-year-old girlfriend, authorities said.

"You'd never expect it," Painter said of Clawson's arrest. "It really bothers me. I don't know what made him tick upstairs."

Authorities said that an hour before the abduction, the woman had telephoned her husband, who was away in Moscow, Idaho, and told him of several troubling phone calls she had just received.

They also said the suspect had stopped at the woman's home last week to inquire about a "For Sale" sign. The woman referred him to a real estate company, authorities said.

Gay Wins CIA Firing Hearing

L.A. Times-Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court, dealing the CIA a sharp setback, ruled Wednesday that a homosexual employee is entitled to a court hearing to fight his dismissal from the intelligence agency.

The court has never ruled on whether gays have employment rights under the Constitution that may not be abridged, and it pointedly avoided answering that question Wednesday.

But on a 6-2 vote, the justices refused to allow the CIA to dismiss an admitted homosexual without explaining why. Instead, in an opinion by Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist, the court said that the gay employee had presented a reasonable claim that his constitutional rights were violated by his firing and that the CIA must defend itself against the claim in federal court.

The decision was hailed as a potentially important one by gay rights groups, which have been trying to win a court ruling that the 14th Amendment to the Constitution bars government agencies from firing a worker because he is gay.

Elderly Woman Gets License

By LAURA HESTER
The (Greenwood) Index-Journal
MOUNT CARMEL, S.C. (AP) — Remember when you were a teen-ager going to take your first driving test? Your knees were knocking, your palms were sweaty and your heart was pounding.
That's pretty much how Juanita Curtis of Mount Carmel felt when she got her first driver's license recently. Only she's 78.
Ms. Curtis hadn't driven a car since she was a teen-ager "back in A-Model times."
Back then licenses weren't required.
"When they were required I didn't get one, so I didn't drive," Ms. Curtis said.
She lived with her sister, Sarah Klingsmith, who did drive.
After her sister's death, Ms. Curtis made up her mind that she wanted to be independent and didn't want friends to have to take her everywhere.

The urge to be independent is what gave her the resolve to learn the rules, regulations and basics of driving. Ms. Curtis said she studied her driving manual day and night until it was practically in shreds.
All that studying paid off when she answered every question on the written test correctly.
"When the examiner checked my test, he said 'You answered every one correctly, congratulations. Now in 15 days you come back for your driver's test,'" she said.
Ms. Curtis' former supervisor at Milliken, Rob Cox, drove her to Abbeville to take the driving test.
"Going back for my driving test, it was like going to the electric chair," she said. "I was so nervous, I was shaking."
She said that once she got behind the wheel, she calmed down.
"The man giving me my test (Henry Smith) was so soft-spoken and kind that it put me at ease. He couldn't have been nicer," Ms. Curtis said.

"When he told me that I had passed, I said out loud, 'Thank you, Lord.' I was so happy that I jumped up and down and those girls in the office just laughed at me. I just couldn't stop smiling."
Next, Ms. Curtis had the treat of having her first driver's license picture made.
"Those pictures are awful. It looks terrible but I'm still proud of it."
Ms. Curtis' pride was evident in a letter she wrote to her nieces after she passed her test.
In the letter, she describes going through the eye test, written test and driving test. She ended the letter by telling how it felt to have a brand-new license: "I stepped out into the glorious sunshine and my friend and I got into my Bonneville and drove away. I plan to put my little dogs into a kennel and head for Florida."
"It's a great feeling to go any place

I want to go," Ms. Curtis said.
She hasn't driven to Florida yet. Most of her trips have been to Calhoun Falls, Abbeville and McCormick to go shopping or to church. She took her first long-distance trip recently to Tignall, Ga., to visit relatives, and hopes to do some volunteer work.
"I stay active. I think that's the thing to do," said Ms. Curtis, who has been retired for 10 years.
"I don't feel like I'm 78. I'm real active. I cut all my grass yesterday with a push mower," she said motioning to the large yard.
Ms. Curtis said she is thankful that she can get around by herself and she takes her driving seriously.
"One thing I can't do is talk while I'm driving," she said. "I have to pay attention to the road."
"And I always say a prayer every time I leave the house, I don't care if it's just to the post office down the road."

Removing Mail Is Federal Offense

DEAR ABBY: A neighbor in our subdivision has been doing me the "favor" of retrieving my mail from my mailbox and bringing it to my door! I would accept it as a kindly gesture if it didn't always occur when there is an obvious change in our home routine — such as when we have company, or she is curious about our family activities. I understand she has done this to other neighbors, too.
There is nothing in my mail that would embarrass me, but I feel that my privacy is being invaded. This neighbor's children have also brought our mail to us on occasion, and I fear that an important letter or bill could be lost in the process.
I do not wish to confront this neighbor personally, as she has contact with many neighbors and I would hate to get on her blacklist.
Please comment on what she is doing. A mention in your column would

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren
be great. — LEAVE MY MAIL ALONE
DEAR LEAVE: It is a federal offense to remove mail from a mailbox other than your own. Leave a note to that effect in your mailbox where she will be sure to see it.
DEAR ABBY: The phenomenal rise of sexually transmitted diseases over the last two decades, and the advent of AIDS, can largely be attributed to the decline of the family and the sexual liberation movement's abandonment of traditional values.
The observation of historians Will and Ariel Durant in their book "The Lessons of History" (1968) is prophetic:

"No one man, however brilliant or well-informed, can come in one lifetime to such fullness of understanding as to safely judge and dismiss customs or institutions of his society, for these are the wisdom of the generations after centuries of experiment in the laboratory of history. A youth boiling with hormones will wonder why he should not give full freedom to his sexual desires; and if he's unchecked by custom, morals or laws, he may ruin his life before he matures sufficiently to understand that sex is a river of fire that must be banked and cooled by a hundred restraints if it is not to consume in chaos both the individual and the group."
Please comment. — CONTEMPORARY SCHOLAR
DEAR SCHOLAR: The above mentioned "youth," boiling with hormones, can be a male or female. And in the absence of restraints, let us pray that where self-control is lacking, there will be birth control.

I am reminded of the statement made by the late Lord Brain, the British obstetrician and gynecologist who headed the birth control movement in Great Britain: "When, wherever you live in the world, you can have children only when you wish, that will be a revolution with more far-reaching effects on the pattern of human culture than the discovery of atomic energy."
DEAR ABBY: Part of my job is to take telephone messages for my boss. There is nothing more frustrating than having someone call and ask me to please have my boss call him back, and when I say, "May I please have your number?" the caller says, "He has it."
Abby, nine times out of 10, my boss does not have it, and I end up having to look it up, which can be a hassle. It would be so much easier if the caller would just give me his (or her) number. Please print this. Maybe the guilty ones will be a little more considerate. — OLIVIA
DEAR OLIVIA: As one of the "guilty ones," I thank you.
Don't put off writing thank-you notes, letters of sympathy, etc. because you don't know what to say. Get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send a check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054 (postage and handling are included).

'Book Offers Practical Information On Life'

By MELISSA D. OLSON
The Scottsdale Progress
SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — The office rented by the author of "Little House on the Freeway" has been condemned by the Arizona Department of Transportation — to make way for a freeway.

Tim Kimmel moved Generation Ministries' office into the building soon after completing his book last year.

"Little House on the Freeway: Help for the Hurried Home" is in its fourth printing. The book focuses on the effects of today's hurried, distracted lifestyle on families and offers practical information for repairing the damage inflicted by modern life.

"The freeway is kind of the symbol of the speed at which we live life today. No matter what your belief system, theologically there are some principles that we all need for comfort," Kimmel said. "I wrote this so that anybody could pick this up and find something practical in it, but there's no doubt that there is a Christian message in the book because I do believe the ultimate solution to rest and calm in our life is to have a relationship with God that is intimate. That is what the book is about — how to bring calm and rest into your hurried lifestyle."

"I know frustration because I have three children. You ask for patience, God gives you children. You ask for strength, God gives you weaknesses that you must work through," he said.

His attitude makes one realize why the director of Generation Ministries is sought after nationally as a conference speaker. His specialty is addressing dilemmas facing American Christian families with comments and anecdotes reminiscent of stand-up comedians, but with serious connotations.

"I feel it is a sin to bore people with information about the truth," he said.

In his ministry to families, Kimmel leads conferences, retreats and summer camps for teen-agers throughout the United States and Canada. Also, he conducts parenting conferences.

"One of the reasons why I like working with teen-agers is because it's a lot easier to build a kid than to fix an adult. They're still wet cement, kids are. You get to set the mold before it sets up. Whereas parents, you have to take dynamite and jackhammers to try to change their value system or at least get them to reconsider it," he said.

Kimmel has been working with teens for about 18 years. Parents often seek his advice about dealing with their teen-agers.

"I think that just about every family problem is solvable, but only if people are willing to recognize how they've contributed to the problem and how they've got to contribute to the solution. Everyone spends a lot of time pointing their fingers at the other person instead of getting after (themselves)," he said.

"A lot of teen-agers have lacked a foundation in their life. The first 10 years of a person's life is where they're developing their identity. That's their foundation."

"The next 10 years is their individuality. That's the formation on the foundation, and when you see major structural problems in its formation"

Kimmel, 37, received his bachelor's degree in psychology and Greek from Bryan College, Dayton, Tenn., and his master of theology degree from Dallas Theological Seminary in 1976.

He is a member of Scottsdale Bible Church where he served as youth pastor from 1976 to 1980. Kimmel and his wife, Darcy, have three children: Karis, 7, Cody, 3, and Shiloh, 16 months.

Between speaking engagements, Kimmel is working on his next book, "10 Building Blocks for a Legacy," which also concentrates on parenting and families.

you've got to ask yourself, 'Is this thing sitting on solid ground?'"

Kimmel looks to what he has labeled as children's three inner needs — love, purpose and hope — for the answer.

"Love is their security system that runs through them," he said.

"Purpose is their significance system. They need to know that they're not just marking time on earth — that they are here with a significant contribution to make."

"Hope is that strength that they need. It isn't of any value to have a purpose if you can't bet on tomorrow."

The majority of Kimmel's work involves speaking before groups in workshops and conferences, but he also conducts individual counseling sessions for parents and teen-agers who are in crisis situations.

"I find that counseling really puts teeth into the speaking because many speakers, I feel, are theoreticians. Even pastors are sometimes guilty of being theoreticians. You've got to be a practitioner today if you want to know where the family is," he said.

Kimmel established Generation Ministries in 1982 as a "voice of truth to the next generation." His work is overseen by a board of eight people.

The Wet Head Lives On

It's been 10 years since I've seen any of my kids with anything but wet hair. No matter what time of the day or night, regardless of hot summers or blizzard conditions, whether it be casual visits or meetings across the aisles at formal weddings, they have just washed their hair.

I have never seen them when they aren't shaking it, fluffing it up like a pillow, running their fingers through it, stretching each strand and jerking it from side to side. It's like living with dogs with fleas.

I have to ask the question, "Why clean hair?" It doesn't begin to fit their profiles. They live in rooms that make your eyes water, drive cars that are portable dumpsters and wear clothes that were taken out of the dryer too soon.

They were not raised this way. My mother always said you could die from clean hair — especially if you washed it just before you went to bed, went outside, came to the table or sat around in it. This limited you to the hours between 3 and 4 in the afternoon when there was no strain on the hot water tank and you could devote your time to drying it properly.

By contrast, a son visiting from Los Angeles was reminded his plane left in 35 minutes and we are 20 minutes away from the airport. He dropped the paper he was reading and said, "Put my luggage in the car. I'll only be a minute," and hit the showers to wash his hair.

At Wits End

Erma Bombeck

He led me to believe that if he didn't board the plane with clean hair, people would turn on their air vents, refuse to sit next to him and whisper, "Get a load of 15-C. I'll bet he hasn't washed his hair in an hour."

A lot of people don't talk about it, but I see today's young people suffering from "tress stress." They're just plain burned out from trying to maintain their hair day in and day out. I've had a kid planning to spend the night, only to ask, "What kind of shampoo do you have?" After examining five bottles, he shakes his head sadly and says, "Sorry. None of them is my brand. Besides, you're out of conditioner and mousse for dry hair and split ends. Maybe I'll go home."

The other night one of them dropped by, and as I hugged her, her hair dripped on my blouse.

"Why don't you get a hair dryer?" I asked.

She gave me the same look when I suggested she bleach her kitchen towels.

"Get real. When my hair dries ... it's time to wash it again."

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market fell sharply today, erasing much of the gains posted in the previous two, record-setting sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial, which struggled to reach its second consecutive post-crash high Wednesday, was off 24.36 points at 2,107.40 in the first half hour of trading.

Market watchers attributed the decline to softness in the bond market.

Foley Says Reagan, GOP Lining Up Against Wright

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Majority Leader Tom Foley said today that President Reagan's call for an independent counsel to investigate House Speaker Jim Wright was "confused" and aligned the White House with "politically motivated" Republicans.

Foley said that continued Republican pressure against Wright is "a politically motivated attack on the speaker, designed to ... theoretically balance the problems the administration has had with ethics, and even criminal problems."

Foley, speaking on CBS-TV's "This Morning," said the criticism of Wright is "linked to such things as sort of crass fundraising efforts for the Republican Party."

Reagan, becoming the latest GOP officeholder to join the verbal fray over allegations Wright has violated House ethics rules, said Wednesday that "everyone would feel that it was more proper" if an investigation were done by someone outside Congress.

The bipartisan House ethics committee voted last week to investigate allegations the speaker misused his office for personal gain.

Reagan, speaking to reporters, said, "I have to wonder if it should not be an independent counsel from the standpoint of the relationship of the speaker to the majority of the committee. And I think everyone would feel that it was more proper if it was done by an investigator outside — an appointed investigator."

Said Foley, "there's a confusion over the president's terminology and his comments about the committee."

In December, Davis quit as minister of Westside Baptist Church in Harrisonville, 20 miles south of Kansas City, and set out to fight uncourteous behavior full time.

William Quitmeier, an attorney who donated office space for Courtesy International, said that at first he thought the idea was corny. Now he's the corporation's vice president.

"I think Kansas City needs something to hang its hat on," he said. "We don't have mountains, we don't have lakes."

The company is privately funded, but the City Council will nominate people to fill eight positions still open on Courtesy International's 12-member executive committee. City Councilman Chuck Weber said the council might pass a resolution calling for a "courtesy day."

In September, etiquette expert Marjabelle Young Stewart ranked Kansas City ninth in her annual list of the nation's 10 best-mannered cities. Davis is shooting for No. 1.

two years ago that she gave this money.

"Ironically," Whittington said, "before these papers were signed ... after she was placed in a rest home, we had already been talking with attorneys down there to put the property ... in escrow for her keeping and care. We had no intention of ... doing away with it."

"Somebody just decided we weren't moving fast enough. Be we have been working on it. It just takes time for the process," Whittington said.

"I don't know how much it (the house) is worth. We haven't had it appraised. But I'd say between $30,000 and $40,000 ... something like that."

Whittington said, "basically, they've tried to blow this thing out of proportion, cast shadows of doubt against the Fountain of Life."

"Nothing on our part has been improper," Whittington said. "We have not been trying to sell the property. We've had a year and a half to do that if we'd wanted to. I just wouldn't do that."

"They are not forcing us to do something under duress that we wouldn't have done any way. We were in the process of doing that before this came down," Whittington said.

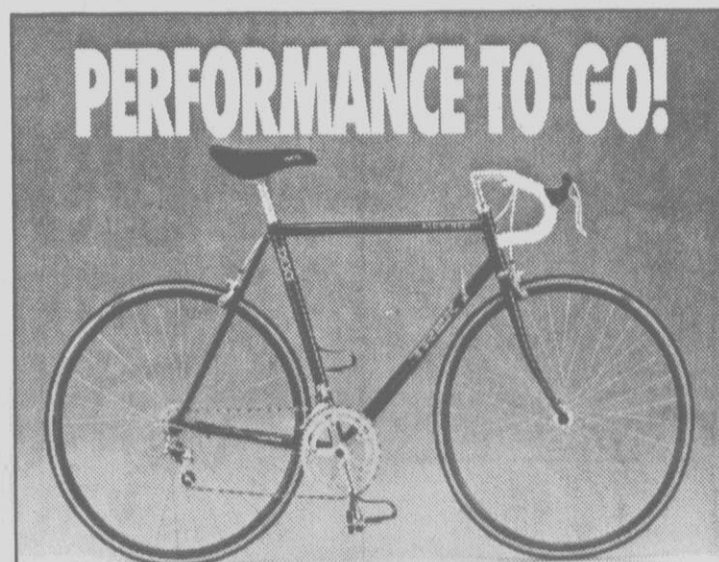

"We knew this lady was not as young as she once was and we were probably going to help her some. We've told the court down there we have no objections to turning the property over. We've already offered to do this."

"Several people through the years have given large sums of money. The Fountain of Life has always come to their rescue," if they needed help, Whittington said. "We help them."

Whittington said Ms. Lust "is not penniless. Even if she didn't have money of her own, as long as there is Fountain of Life, she would not be penniless."

"We're not trying to dodge our responsibility. We've dedicated our lives to helping people, not hurting them," Whittington said.

Whittington said "several thousand dollars of that money went to pay television bills at Channel 12 (WCTI-TV in New Bern). The money was used to pay TV bills."

Vander Meer Memories Still Sweet

CINCINNATI (AP) — Johnny Vander Meer laughed when someone suggested he must be tired of talking about his place in baseball history.

"No. It keeps you alive," he said.

He's been busy reliving the past these past few weeks as baseball celebrates the 50th anniversary of one of its most amazing pitching feats — Vander Meer's consecutive no-hitters in 1938.

Vander Meer, 73, threw out the ceremonial first pitch Wednesday night before the Cincinnati Reds' 5-3 victory over Houston. The former Reds' left-hander was honored in pregame ceremonies that included showing highlights of his no-hitters on the scoreboard.

There have been so many telephone calls to Vander Meer's Tampa, Fla., home that he went fishing last week to get some peace.

"There have been 19 million stories, from all over the country," he said Wednesday.

There's been only one story quite like his.

Vander Meer was 23 years old with a hard fastball when he didn't allow a hit in a 3-0 victory over Boston at Crosley Field on June 11, 1938. Four days later, the left-hander threw another no-hitter in a 6-0 victory over Brooklyn in the first night game at Ebbets Field.

Fifty years have intervened, but no pitcher has matched the double no-hitters. Some who have toyed with just one no-hitter think the record may not be matched.

Reds left-hander Tom Browning lost a no-hitter when Tony Gwynn singled with one out in the ninth in San Diego on June 6. The idea of two no-hitters is remarkable to him.

"A once-in-a-lifetime thing," Browning called Vander Meer's accomplishment. "I don't think we'll ever see that."

Cincinnati right-hander Ron Robinson came within one out of a perfect game May 2 against Montreal at Riverfront Stadium.

"That (two no-hitters) is something you've got to be proud of. That's tough," Robinson said.

Houston's Nolan Ryan has five no-hitters, and can appreciate the difficulty of throwing two in a row.

"That's a real big accomplishment," Ryan said Wednesday. "The chance of somebody ever doing that again is pretty slim."

Six major leaguers have taken a no-hitter into the ninth inning this season, only to give up at least one hit. Vander Meer has empathy when he hears of such oh-so-close brushes with fame.

"I sure know what they went through," Vander Meer said. "You get there (and give up a hit) and you wish somebody might have been playing in a different spot, or you wish you would have thrown a curve ball."

Vander Meer took the mound again Wednesday at Riverfront Stadium for the ceremonial first pitch. He stood a couple of feet in front of the rubber and threw a hard, high fastball to catcher Terry McGuff. The crowd, which gave him a standing ovation when he came on the field, roared in approval.

"The fans (in Cincinnati) were always great to me," Vander Meer said over the public address system. "I had a lot of bad days, but they were still great to me."

Vander Meer said he isn't nostalgic about the double no-hitters.

"It's never on my mind unless somebody's talking to me about it," he said. "You can't live in the past, you know."

Royals Are Closing In On A's As Dive Continues

By The Associated Press

The Oakland Athletics are discovering that the limb is mightier than the bat.

The A's, who led the AL West by 1 1/2 games on June 4, have dropped eight of their last 10 games. Five of those losses have been against the Kansas City Royals, three of them shutouts.

"Our pitching staff has caught fire and the team is playing awfully well right now," said Kansas City's Charlie Leibrandt, who stopped the A's on two hits as the Royals won 2-0 Wednesday night.

Kansas City has won 12 of its last 13 games and pulled within 5 1/2 games of Oakland. The team earned run average over that stretch is 1.32.

"We have five good starters and good relievers," said George Brett, who drove in his 52nd run of the season with a double in the fifth inning. "If we can score some runs we have a good chance to win. If we don't score many runs we still have a good chance to win."

Elsewhere, it was Toronto 15,

Cleveland 3; Milwaukee 5, Seattle 1; Boston 8, New York 3; Detroit 1, Baltimore 0; Minnesota 5, Chicago 1, and Texas 6, California 3 in 10 innings.

Leibrandt, 3-9, snapped a three-game losing streak in pitching his second career two-hitter. The left-hander walked one and struck out four.

"Under the circumstances, this was my best game. We were playing Oakland and we've got to catch up," Leibrandt said.

Bob Welch, 8-4, lost his third straight decision after winning seven in a row.

"Oakland is a good ballclub. We still have the utmost respect for them," Royals manager John Wathan said. "Anything could happen tomorrow. They could come out smoking. But it's a nice feeling to know we'll win at least two out of three here."

"It wasn't a very exciting race when Oakland was 11 games ahead," Brett said, but Oakland manager Tony La Russa was looking forward to a nice, dull summer.

"I'm sure the American League is happy we're losing, so they'll have a good race," he said.

Blue Jays 15, Indians 3
Fred McGriff and Cecil Fielder hit two home runs each and Dave Stieb won his eighth straight game to lead Toronto.

Tony Fernandez drove in four runs with three hits for the Blue Jays, who had 17 hits against three Cleveland pitchers.

Stieb, 9-3, has not lost in 10 starts since April 26. He allowed three hits in seven innings and struck out five. Mark Eichhorn allowed three hits in the final two innings.

Greg Swindell, 10-4, lost his third straight decision and was knocked out after 2 1-3 innings, his shortest outing this year. He allowed six hits and five runs.

Brewers 5, Mariners 1
Teddy Higuera held Seattle hitless for seven innings before Steve Balboni homered for the Mariners' only hit as Milwaukee won.

Higuera, 6-4, went eight innings and joined the many pitchers who have flirted with no-hitters this season. He walked one and struck out three.

The Brewers used three relievers in the ninth, with Dan Plesac getting two outs for his 15th save. He struck out Balboni with the bases loaded to end the game.

Balboni led off with his third home run on a 1-0 pitch. He had been Seattle's only previous baserunner, walking to open the fifth.

The Brewers went ahead 1-0 in the first against Mark Langston, 5-7, as Paul Molitor singled, stole his 15th straight base for a team record and scored on Robin Yount's single.

Red Sox 8, Yankees 3

Ellis Burks had four hits, including his third career grand slam, and Spike Owen added a solo shot as Boston defeated New York.

After a 45-minute pregame power outage caused by an underground fire outside Fenway Park, the Red Sox jumped on rookie Al Leiter, 4-3, for five runs in the second inning.

With one out, Jim Rice walked and scored on singles by Rick Cerone and Kevin Romine. A single by Owen loaded the bases. Burks, who had two bases-loaded shots among his 20 homers as a rookie last season, hit a 2-2 pitch over the wall in left center for his fifth homer.

Tigers 1, Orioles 0

Jeff Robinson pitched a five-hitter to win his seventh consecutive game and Dave Bergman hit a sacrifice fly to lead Detroit.

Robinson, 8-2, struck out four, walked one and allowed no runner to reach third in pitching his second shutout and third complete game. Mike Boddicker, 3-9, allowed only two hits in seven innings, walked five and struck out three as his winning streak was snapped at three.

It marked the sixth time Baltimore has won the first game of a three-game series and then lost the next two. The Orioles' road record dropped to 6-28.

Twins 5, White Sox 1

Allan Anderson allowed only an unearned run in 6 2-3 innings and Greg Gagne had three hits, including his seventh homer, as Minnesota defeated Chicago.

Anderson, 4-3, scattered nine hits, walked one and struck out four for his third straight victory. Keith Atherton retired the last seven batters to earn his second save. Jack McDowell, 2-6, lost his fourth straight decision and is winless since May 4.

The Twins opened the game with four straight singles off McDowell, but scored just one run. Kirby Puckett, the third batter in the inning, drove in Dan Gladden with a single to left for his 50th RBI of the season.

Rangers 6, Angels 3
Jeff Russell scattered eight hits to win his sixth straight decision and Larry Parrish's RBI single snapped a 10th-inning tie as Texas won at California.

Parrish's single came after DeWayne Buice, 2-4, walked Scott Fletcher and Ruben Sierra. Pete O'Brien followed with an RBI single. Cecil Espy capped the rally with a run-scoring single.

Darryl's Homers Pace Mets

By BEN WALKER

AP Baseball Writer

Darryl Strawberry gave his biggest fan two birthday presents, and then again made his presence felt against the St. Louis Cardinals.

Strawberry continued his assault versus the Cardinals with two home runs Wednesday night as the New York Mets won 6-4 and sent St. Louis to its sixth straight loss.

Among the 42,068 at Shea Stadium was Darryl Strawberry Jr., celebrating his third birthday.

"All we ever talk about is home runs," Strawberry said. "It was special with him here to be able to do something to help the club."

Strawberry is 13-for-38 with four homers and nine RBI against St. Louis this season. New York is 9-3 versus the Cardinals, including 6-0 at home.

The National League East-leading Mets, who had a five-game losing streak when St. Louis came to town, completed a three-game sweep. They held the Cardinals to just five runs and knocked them back to fourth place, 9 1/2 games behind.

Elsewhere, Chicago beat Pittsburgh 7-4, Los Angeles defeated Atlanta 7-4, San Francisco downed San Diego 4-2, Cincinnati topped Houston 5-3 and Philadelphia stopped Montreal 6-2.

Strawberry hit a two-run homer in the first inning and a solo drive in the fourth for his 15th home run. Both came off left-hander Cris Carpenter, 2-2.

Cardinals manager Whitey Herzog likes to pitch left-handers against the Mets, although Strawberry has spoiled the strategy. Strawberry, a left-handed hitter, leads the league with 10 home runs off lefties.

"I don't count Strawberry. He's Superman," Herzog said.

Said Strawberry: "No, I'm not Superman. I just try to make things happen."

So does Lenny Dykstra, who got three hits and is 16-for-31 against the Cardinals.

Dykstra, whose bat was confiscated by Herzog on Tuesday night, led off the first inning with a single and Wally Backman hit a ground-rule double.

Lee Mazzilli had an RBI grounder and Strawberry followed with a line-drive home run to right. Dykstra had a run-scoring single in the fifth.

"I've never seen him hit better," Mets manager Davey Johnson said of Dykstra.

Ron Darling, 7-4, gave up four runs on nine hits in seven-plus innings. Randy Myers finished for his 10th save on the humid night.

"They singled me to death, but the heat didn't bother me. I like it hot," Darling said.

Dodgers 7, Braves 5

Orel Hershiser pitched four-hit ball for seven innings and helped himself with a two-run single as Los Angeles sent Atlanta to its fifth straight loss.

Kirk Gibson hit his 12th homer and started a tiebreaking, two-run sixth with a single.

Hershiser, 9-3, retired the first 11 batters before Gerald Perry singled and Dale Murphy followed with his ninth home run. Alejandro Pena went two innings for his fourth save.

Tom Glavine, 3-7, took the loss for the host Braves.

Giants 4, Padres 2

Rick Reuschel became the NL's second 10-game winner as San Francisco ended San Diego's six-game winning streak.

Reuschel, 10-3, won his fifth consecutive decision and ended the Giants' four-game losing streak. He gave up two runs on seven hits in 6 1-3 innings and Don Robinson got his fifth save.

Brett Butler hit his second homer of the season and started a three-run fourth with a single against Andy Hawkins, 5-6.

Phillies 6, Expos 2

David Palmer held Montreal to three hits over eight innings and Philadelphia took advantage of three errors in the first inning.

Palmer, 2-6, left the game after his first walk to lead off the ninth. He has not pitched a complete game since June 29, 1986, with Atlanta.

Greg Harris and Steve Bedrosian finished with hitless relief. Bedrosian got the last out for his ninth save.

Floyd Youmans, 2-6, allowed four hits in seven innings. But errors by first baseman Graig Nettles, shortstop Luis Rivera and right fielder Hubie Brooks led to two runs in the first inning.

Tim Lincecum homered for the visiting Expos.

Reds 5, Astros 3

Eric Davis hit a two-run homer and Cincinnati beat Houston for its season-high fourth straight victory.

Tom Browning, 5-3, outpitched Jim Deshaies, 4-4, in a matchup of college teammates. They played together for three years at LeMoine College in Syracuse, N.Y. John Franco got his seventh save.

Davis' ninth home run put the host Reds ahead 4-3 in the fifth. Bill Doran and Jim Pankovits had homered for the visiting Astros.

Cubs 7, Pirates 4

Both Shawn Dunston, who drove in five runs, and Vance Law hit two-run singles in the eighth inning that rallied Chicago over Pittsburgh.

Dunston hit his sixth homer in the third, an RBI single in the fifth and a sacrifice fly in the seventh.

Pat Perry, 3-2, got his first victory since being traded from Cincinnati to the Cubs. Jim Gott, 3-2, was the loser.

Cubs manager Don Zimmer was ejected in the fourth for protesting balls and strikes. Pirates manager Jim Leyland also argued in the seventh after a ball got lost in the ivy on the outfield wall at Wrigley Field, and umpire Bob Engel finally plucked the ball from the vines.

Rough Play May Set The Tone

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Game 5 could become Wrestlemania 5. Elbows and forearms flew in the fourth game of the NBA Championship Series when Detroit lived up to its bad boy image. Angry words flew Wednesday when the Los Angeles Lakers vowed to retaliate for the Pistons' rough play.

To The Sports Editor:
I, along with numerous people in our community, was greatly disturbed with the picture of Brian Wille, a senior of J.H. Rose High School, that you chose to publish in the (June 12) edition.
When Brian dropped the ball, he was embarrassed. But your picture of the same served as a two-fold degradation.
The team played well despite several injuries and a questionable umpire. I am confident that this choice was not an intentional defamer but at the same time it was truly a misrepresentation of Brian's hard work and character.
Next time, please strive for optimism rather than negative journalism.

To The Sports Editor:
I could hardly believe my eyes Sunday morning when I looked at the photo in the Sports section of the Reflector showing a Rose High School baseball player fielding a pop fly in Saturday's 4-A championship game. I, and I feel sure many other subscribers to your paper, would like to know who authorized the use of this photo. I have not witnessed such insensitivity in a long time.
Didn't your photographer capture other action of the game? What about many of the good defensive plays or some of the other hits that were made during the course of the game? Surely he or she had film for more than this one picture. Why not a picture of the entire team indicating their won-loss record for the year.
Why is it necessary to accentuate the negative side of Rose High's recent loss, to say nothing about the possible and probable embarrassment caused the individual player. Was this the only error of the game and was it the sole contributing factor to the loss. The answer to both questions is no.
We try very hard to teach our children that winning is not the only thing they get out of athletic contests — that sportsmanship, leadership and working as a team are very worthwhile experiences to be gained also.
What did you hope to accomplish by selecting this particular picture? I feel it was in very poor taste and really shows no class at all.

To The Sports Editor:
Horray for the Rose Hi School Baseball team! Boo on your picture selection for the headline story Sunday morning.
Ron Vincent's Rampants had a great season and came within a game of winning the whole shooting match, only to have it spoiled by your poor selection of pictures for the lead story. Surely you had a picture of Axel Smith crossing home plate after hitting a grand slam, or Dallas McPherson pitching for the second time in two days.
We're proud of the Rampants!
Clean up your act, Reflector.

Legal Eagles..... 9

Buddy Foley and Russell Oats each picked up three hits in helping Garris-Evans to a 14-9 victory over the Legal Eagles in the Greenville Prep League Wednesday night.

The Legal Eagles took the lead in the first inning, scoring a run. But Garris-Evans rallied for five in its half of the inning.

Garris-Evans then put the game out of reach in the second, scoring six more times for an 11-1 edge. Foley led off with a single and Brian Fields walked. Pedro Tuirnage singled to load the bases. Oats singled in Foley and Alex Darden walked to bring in Fields. John Dawkins also walked, scoring Turnage. A walk to David Cheishan brought Oats across and Darden scored when Mike Morris was hit by a pitch. Fields then walked to force Dawkins over with the sixth run of the inning.

Garris-Evans added one each in the third, fifth and sixth innings. The Legal Eagles rallied for two in the third and six in the fourth, including homers by Adam Charlton and Richie Grimsley, but fell short.

Darden added two hits for Garris-Evans, while Grimsley led the Legal Eagles with two.

Pepsi-Cola..... 14
Moose..... 3

Jon Gavigan collected three hits, one of them a home run, to help Pepsi-Cola to a 14-3 victory over the Moose Thursday in Tar Heel Little League action.

The Moose struck for all three of their runs in the top of the first.

Pepsi, however, came back to score six times in the bottom of the inning to put the game away. Todd MacKenzie reached on a fielder's choice and moved up on a wild pitch. Gavigan reached on an error and both scored on Jason Howard's triple. Damian Phillips hit another triple, scoring Howard. Boyd Brittle

"I can take a beating, but I'll also give one out from now on," Lakers guard Magic Johnson said. "They've got their hit men, as they call it. We've got our hit men ... I can be one of them."

"It will be war and hand-to-hand combat," Los Angeles guard Byron Scott said of tonight's fifth game in the Silverdome.

Mychal Thompson, a backup forward and center for Los Angeles and a professional wrestling fan, saw an analogy between what goes on between the ropes and on the basketball court.

"These two teams resemble Hulk Hogan versus Andre The Giant," he said. "I'd say we're Hulk Hogan because we're sleeker. We're the good guys, have better builds, and they're Andre The Giant because they're bigger."

Andre plays the villain's role and the Pistons stepped back into it in Tuesday night's 111-86 victory after three incident-free games. The style worked as Detroit evened the best-of-seven series at two victories each.

The Lakers, whose regular-season mood is more peaceful than Detroit's, were particularly upset with Pistons forward Ricky Mahorn.

Los Angeles coach Pat Riley said Mahorn delivered a forearm smash to the back of Lakers forward A.C. Green's head in the opening three minutes of the game.
Johnson said Mahorn "deliberately just smacked me in the face."

Mahorn didn't think the game was particularly physical.

"A physical game for the Pistons is when everyone's bleeding from the mouth," he said.

The Lakers handed out their own punishment as Johnson fouled Detroit guard Isiah Thomas hard and Thomas arose with an angry stare.

"We knew coming in what was on the table," Riley said. "But we waited to see what was going to happen and by then it was too late."

The loser of tonight's battle will have a tough time winning the war, particularly if it's the Pistons. They'll be playing their last game in the Silverdome — their new home in nearby Auburn Hills is nearly complete — and will have to play the sixth game Sunday, and possibly a seventh next Tuesday night, in Inglewood, Calif.

The Lakers were 36-5 there during the regular season and are 10-2 at home during the playoffs despite losing the series opener.

"We're the underdogs. They have the advantage because they're going home," Detroit coach Chuck Daly said. "If we don't win (tonight), we're going to be looking at an early vacation."

"Game 5 is the series," Lakers guard Michael Cooper said. "We can't go to L.A. having to win two games."

The upper hand has shifted from game to game. Detroit, wanting to prove it belonged in the series, won the opener. Los Angeles, trying to catch up, won Game 2 and, trying to regain the homecourt advantage, took Game 3.

Facing the possibility of losing in five games, the Pistons played aggressively in Game 4, took the ball hard to the basket and handed the Lakers the biggest defeat in finals history since Los Angeles beat Boston 136-111 in 1985.

The Lakers had just eight field goals and 35 points in the second half. The Pistons' repeated drives to the basket helped them draw fouls and outscore Los Angeles 36-28 from the foul line. The Pistons took 46 free throws compared to 12 in Game 3.

Detroit forward John Salley thinks the Lakers' poor performance will fire up the defending NBA champions just as it would the Pistons.

"We play mad when we're embarrassed," he said. "When you lose, you always play mad."

Thomas, who suffered a bruised back in the third game, missed his third straight practice Wednesday. He did play a team-high 36 minutes Tuesday night, scored 10 points and led the Pistons with 12 assists and nine rebounds.

"Isiah's our leader," Detroit center Bill Laimbeer said. "We have a tradition where people play even if they're hurt ... We pride ourselves on that."

The Lakers were the aggressors in the third game when they unleashed a devastating fast break that knocked the Pistons out in the third quarter. The Lakers say they must regain that role tonight.

"It's getting more intense," Los Angeles center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar said of the series. "You're not going to win it being meek."

Johnson Says He's Ready

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — There was a time when a mere slap across the face with a white glove was enough to send two men to the dueling grounds.

In 1988, a similar challenge has been issued to the Lakers' Magic Johnson, and he says he's more than ready for a fight to the finish with the Detroit Pistons.

"(Pistons coach) Chuck Daly said that they were being too nice to me, so they tried to come after me," Johnson said Wednesday. "That's fine with me. Let them come. I'm ready for them now."

Because he handles the ball for the Lakers most of the time, Johnson understands that he'll get his share of bumps and bruises.

"Since I go to the hoop more, I'll be more of a target," Johnson said. "But the Pistons went after everybody, not just me."

Johnson may have been the only member of the Lakers who responded to Detroit's physical play Tuesday night when the Pistons manhandled Los Angeles 111-86 to even the best-of-seven NBA Championship Series at 2-2.

Late in the game, with the outcome already decided, Johnson fouled his close friend, Isiah Thomas, hard during a drive. Thomas took a step toward Johnson but was restrained by teammate Dennis Rodman.

"He responded the same way I would have and I responded the way he would have," said Johnson, who added that he and Thomas agreed before the series that they would not talk between games.

Johnson said the Lakers generally behaved like wimps in Tuesday's game.

"The war came to us and we retreated," he said. "We were soft. We're not mad at Detroit. They did what they had to do."

"If they think they have to be ferocious, then we have to be ferocious as well."

Johnson said the Lakers can't afford to take the attitude that they can lose tonight's fifth game at the Silverdome and still win the series with victories at home on Sunday and Tuesday.

Because the Pistons will play at home only one more time in the last three scheduled games of the series, Johnson says the Pistons will play as if their backs are against the wall.

"But we have to take the same posture and start slamming some people," Johnson said. "If we play like we have a cushion, we'll play like the we did last (Tuesday) night."

Johnson said the Lakers "need some hit men and I can be one of them. We're ready if that's the way they want to play."

Johnson, who leads the Lakers with averages of 23 points and 10.3 assists during the series, has impressed the Pistons with his ability.

"He can shoot, shoot off the dribble, pass, pass under pressure, pass on the run and rebound," Daly said. "When you see him play only twice a year, it's hard to realize how good he is. Now we've seen it."

"He kind of lulls you to sleep with that big smile of his and the way he goes about his business," Pistons center Bill Laimbeer said. "Meanwhile, he kills you with 25 points and a bunch of assists. All the Lakers like to go about their business. You have to bump them a little to get them to think about you."

If Johnson has his way, the Lakers will be bumping back tonight.

Shinn Talks With Falcons' Chief About Possible Move

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The majority owner of the NBA Charlotte Hornets has talked with Atlanta Falcons' owner Rankin Smith about offering his city as a possible relocation site, according to a Charlotte newspaper.

The Charlotte Observer said in today's editions that Shinn traveled to Atlanta Wednesday to visit with Falcons' owner Rankin Smith, who has said publicly that the team will not play at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium after its lease expires in 1990.

And, if a suitable stadium is not built, he would consider moving the Falcons from Atlanta. A $160 million domed stadium has been proposed to house the Falcons in downtown Atlanta. Smith would prefer that option, which is being considered by city officials.

"We are in the process of building a facility in Atlanta that would accommodate us," said Smith, who has owned the Falcons since their inception in 1965. "Right now, that is in a very critical stage."

"If it works, my first preference is to stay in Atlanta. I brought professional football to Atlanta. I don't necessarily want to be part of taking it out."

Shinn's Atlanta trip came after learning of the Falcons' stadium woes. He contacted Smith about 10 days ago to make his pitch for Charlotte.

"I made it clear before I came that my primary objective was to say that Charlotte is a good alternative and to consider us," Shinn said. "If things didn't work out (in Atlanta), this would be an excellent place."

Smith said he is planning to visit Charlotte within the next month.

"Charlotte is a hot article right now," Smith told the newspaper.

However, Smith is not without other alternatives for the Falcons. One is Jacksonville, Fla., which has the 82,000-seat Gator Bowl to offer.

Jacksonville has courted the Falcons, among others — the Colts when they were in Baltimore, the Cardinals when St. Louis was their home, the New Orleans Saints and the Houston Oilers.

"We're not blind to Jacksonville," Smith said. "They've got a place to play."

And, Smith said, he has been looking into a stadium project in Atlanta that would be paid for without public money.

"Locally, we've been very successful on selling the concept of private financing," he said. "If you take the lid off of this ... it would be a good possibility."

Shinn's architects have a working plan on the board for a stadium that would first house baseball but would be expanded to accommodate a pro football team as the primary tenant.

"If we could be assured a team is coming, I think that with private and public money, a facility could be built," Shinn said. "Clearly, I think the whole plan is workable."

Shinn knows Smith would rather keep his team in Atlanta, but that's not preventing him from selling

Charlotte, much in the same way he did to get an NBA expansion franchise.

"I've been told he loves the other girl more than me," Shinn said. "If he decides not to marry her, I'm waiting in line."

Despite the factors working against him, Shinn says pitching the NFL is a no-lose situation.

"I knew the odds definitely favor Atlanta. But I've got to take a chance to accomplish my goal. If the worst happens, I would have made a friend who has been in the league 23 years."

And that might open the door for us to get an expansion franchise. He is a respected owner and a senior member of the league.

Aurora Ends Uphill Climb To State Title

RALEIGH (AP) — When the season began, the Aurora High School women's softball team knew it would be an uphill climb to the 1-A state title, but they never dreamed of traveling through more than 20 counties and over North Carolina's mountains to get there.

The site of this year's 1-A softball and baseball championships were in the western part of the state last week, meaning Aurora in coastal Beaufort County had to travel 12 hours and 490 miles one-way to Cherokee County — the westernmost county in North Carolina — to play Murphy.

In 1-A baseball, Hallsboro in the southeastern county of Columbus, hiked to western Clay County — a one-way trip of 380 miles.

"This is first year we've been involved in the state playoffs, so unless you've been involved you just don't know what other teams have to go through," said Ted Overton, athletic director at Aurora.

"I hope the (North Carolina High School Athletic) Association realizes what we had to do in terms of mileage, travel and lodging," Overton said. "But since we went up there and won, maybe they didn't kill us too bad. We did have to go above and beyond (to win the championship)."

Despite winning two straight over Murphy, Overton said his school lost the travel battle. Overton said if the games were played at a neutral site somewhere in the middle of the state, he could have saved the school about $1,000 — a large sum for a small school with 157 students.

The Aurora team left Tuesday morning in two rented vans. After four stops for gas and to eat, the team arrived in Murphy.

Overton said the team felt good because "they originally thought they were going to have to drive all day Wednesday and then play. At least we got a night's rest."

After winning the state championship and missing four days of school, Overton said the club left Murphy at 6 a.m. Friday in order to arrive back in Aurora in time for the school's 8 p.m. graduation ceremony.

"At the time we were so happy to be in the state playoffs we were willing to do whatever it took to be in it," he said. "I think the only distance farther would have been Manteo (on the Outer Banks)."

NCHSAA Executive Director Charlie Adams called the 1-A playoffs "disasterville" financially. The association will have to pay Aurora 35 cents a mile for its 980-mile roundtrip, $120 for breakfast meals, $240 for lunches, $300 for dinners and $420 for lodging.

"Next year we are going to flip a coin and tell Aurora that they won," Adams said in an interview from his Chapel Hill office this week.

In the early 1960s, Adams said the state did away with its state baseball playoffs because of classtime conflicts, among other things.

"We went a year or two (without the playoffs) and we said that wasn't good," Adams said.

Adams said the outlandish travel by 1-A schools has always been a problem in state playoffs because the Smoky Mountain Conference in the far west and the Albemarle Conference along the coast are the two strongest 1-A leagues. He said the other three classifications don't suffer the imbalance.

Would a neutral site for all 1-A championship playoff games solve some of the problems? Adams says not necessarily.

"The problem with a neutral site is that you put two teams on the road," Adams said. "Baseball and softball people just don't follow those sports like they do in football and basketball. Then you have two teams traveling, two sets of motels and meals ... If you play at one site you at least have the home crowd to draw on."

Adams denied that money was the main force keeping the neutral baseball and softball sites from becoming a reality. He said both ways break about even.

"I think our school people have made it (the long trips) an educational thing," he said. "There are probably kids in Aurora that have never been to the mountains."

Adams said he may ask the 1-A schools at the association's next regional meeting how they feel about the neutral sites for baseball and softball.

"We may run it by the 1-A schools," he said. "They don't have that kind of money (to be traveling distances)."

Or time, according to Overton. "Still tired," he said. "Where are the players? "Still sleeping if they're smart."

Uribe Returns To Team With Sadness Still Inside

SAN DIEGO (AP) — There were handshakes, hugs, quiet words and a smile or two for his closest friends, but Jose Uribe still carried his sadness inside.

"As a human being, he's suffering. You have to do a lot of thinking when something like that happens," Candy Maldonado said of his friend and teammate, whose 27-year-old wife, Sara, died in childbirth two weeks ago.

"It just takes a very strong man, after a devastating loss in his life, to come back and want to be part of this team again, get things going again," said Chris Speier, Uribe's backup at shortstop for the San Francisco Giants. "It probably will be the best thing in the world for him and I know it's going to be the best thing for us."

Uribe, 28, on bereavement leave since his wife's death June 1, returned to the team Wednesday in San Diego, but remains on the disabled list. San Francisco manager Roger Craig said Uribe probably would play four or five innings in an exhibition game today in Phoenix, Ariz., and likely would be activated sometime during this weekend's series in Cincinnati.

"I think if I keep playing baseball, it's your way of life, that it will help me out," Uribe said. "If I don't think I could give my ballclub 100 percent, I don't think I would go out there."

Uribe took ground balls and batting practice during Wednesday's pregame drills, and his teammates came up to pat him on the shoulder, offering him their sympathy, their help.

"I'm happy that he's back, and I have seen him smile," said Maldonado, who welcomed Uribe with a hug during batting practice.

Maldonado said Uribe's loss affected the entire team, and his wife's death was a tragic lesson about the fragile state of life as well as its need to endure.

"We've been thinking, 'How is he doing?' and we've been concerned," Maldonado said. "But you know, life continues and you have to keep doing the same things."

"You've got to realize one thing: There's always a big Lord who wants things to be his way. Unfortunately, it happened to somebody that I consider a brother, and to his family, and it's tough. But we all have to know that in life, we are here for a little while, and there's people who stay longer than others and it's sad."

Uribe was on a road trip with the team when he was called to his wife's side after she went into labor on May 31, three weeks early, with the couple's third child.

He left Montreal immediately and learned the baby, a boy named Rique Jose, had been delivered by Cesarean section and was healthy despite being premature.

But his wife developed complications. She died of a heart attack 38 hours after the birth while undergoing emergency surgery at Sequoia Hospital, in Redwood City, about 20 miles south of San Francisco.

According to hospital officials, Sara had a fatal condition called pulmonary hypertension, which resulted in heart failure. The condition affects young women and has no cure. She had experienced minor heart problems during the birth of the couple's other children, Luzadriana, 2, and Jacqueline, 1, but the extent of the problem wasn't known.

"It was a big shock to everybody," Craig said. "It's a real tragedy. It just changes your whole perspective. The most important thing in your life is your family, your wife and kids. Everything else is secondary."

Giants executives realized that, and put Uribe on the disabled list. He has spent most of the past two weeks in his native Dominican Republic, where much of his family resides and where the funeral for his wife was held. He also arranged for the care of his children, who will be looked after by his sister-in-law and a nurse.

"I'm feeling really proud of this team, the Giants," Uribe said. "Not too many ballclubs, I think, would have done this for me."

Kelly Joins State Swimming Team

RALEIGH — Paul Mark Kelly, a native of Greenville, has signed to attend N.C. State University, and participate on the swimming team. Kelly will be joining State by transferring from Brevard (Fla.) Junior College, where he was a Junior College national finalist in the breaststroke.

Fayetteville Coaching Vet Retiring

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Doris Howard, whose coaching career in Cumberland County covered 41 years, is retiring from her coaching and teaching positions at Cape Fear High School.

Cape Fear Athletic Director Grady Adams announced Howard's decision Wednesday morning.

"I'd been kind of thinking about it for a year or so," Howard said. "I've been going on year-by-year and I guess it's about time. In a way I feel good about it, but I still feel a little shaky. I enjoyed a lot of it and it makes you wonder — I'm sure I'm going to miss it."

One of the most successful high school coaches in North Carolina, Howard's softball teams made numerous playoff appearances and won the state title in 1978.

Howard also enjoyed success in basketball, coaching several conference champions, including last year's Mid-South 4-A Conference title-winning team that compiled a 23-5 record and advanced to the third round of the state playoffs. Howard's career record of 533 wins and 231 losses in basketball ranks her as the state's second-winningest coach, according to the North Carolina High School Athletic Association.

"I call her Mom," said Richard Byrd, who served as Howard's assistant basketball coach last season. "That's what she's like to me. They don't make too many Doris Howards any more. She taught me more about basketball in one season than I ever knew."

Howard's coaching career began at Hope Mills High, where she spent seven years. She then coached at Central High in Eastover for 15 years before it was consolidated to form Cape Fear in 1969.

Wilkins Back Among Elite

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Discus thrower Mac Wilkins probably has announced his retirement more often than itinerant basketball coach Larry Brown has changed jobs.

And like Brown, the outspoken Wilkins continues to perform well.

Wilkins, 37, who had not competed much since 1984, when he finished second in the Olympics — he also was the Games' gold medalist in 1976 — is back among the world's discus elite.

He has the second-best throw by an American this year, 222 feet, 11 inches — behind only Mike Buncic's 226-1 — and appears on target to make his fourth consecutive Olympic team.

"It's surprised me that I have gotten back at such a high level," said Wilkins, who will be seeking his seventh national title — his first since 1980 — in the Mobil Outdoor Track and Field Championships that began in earnest today at Pepin-Rind Field.

Wilkins also has throws of 219-9 and 218-6 this season.

"The three long throws have surprised me because I haven't eased off in my training," he said. "Usually, I don't throw far when I'm training hard."

"I guess it indicates I have the potential to throw as far as in the past."

Wilkins' career best is 232-10 in 1980. It was not a world or American record, but he did break the world mark four times in 1976, the last time at 232-6, before winning the Olympic gold medal at Montreal with a toss of 221-5.

En route to capturing the gold and during the medal ceremonies, the free-spirited Wilkins incurred the wrath of the U.S. Olympic Committee.

During the competition, when East German Wolfgang Schmidt unleashed a toss that beat Wilkins' teammate, John Powell, for the silver medal, Wilkins gave a bear hug to the German and lifted him high into the air. It appeared to be a slap at Powell, with whom Wilkins had had a long feud.

On the victory stand, Wilkins broke into a wide smile during the playing of "The Star Spangled Banner."

At the post-competition press conference, Wilkins was asked why he had smiled. He gave a profane explanation, then attacked the USOC, saying he was "embarrassed to be associated" with the organization, and had won the gold medal for himself, not his country.

"The United States can share in it if they wish, but they had no part in winning it," he said.

That comment riled USOC president Philip Krumm.

"Wilkins is the No. 1 grandstander," Krumm said. "He is a publicity hound of the first order ... Without Olympic funds and help, he wouldn't be here and have that medal."

Before the Games, Wilkins also had expressed his anger, calling the USOC a "joke" and the entire American sports system archaic and too attuned to professional spectator sports.

Twelve years later, Wilkins has hardly mellowed.

"We have a very poor discus program in the U.S.," he said. "Everything that is wrong with Olympic sports in this country is exemplified by the young throwers moving up in the national and international programs. We're not equipped to do this."

"The colleges can't fund it. Track and field, being a non-revenue sport, is being cut out of school programs. TAC (The Athletics Congress, the national governing body) and the USOC have no programs to develop track and field."

"There's just been a drop in the bucket to what could be accomplished. But it's a matter of priorities."

Does our country want to put money into developing top U.S. athletes for the Olympics only once every four years?

"Track and field is at the bottom of the barrel. And throwers are at the bottom of track and field."

Wilkins, who began throwing the discus at a competitive level in 1968 as a high school junior in Beaverton, Ore., first announced his retirement in 1981. It didn't last long.

By 1982, he was back and earned the No. 1 ranking in the U.S.

Then, "after the 1984 season, I said I was never coming back, and I meant it," Wilkins said.

"The reason I'm throwing again is because I thought it would go well with my business — I would be able to build off of it," said Wilkins, who is producing videotapes on throwing events with former hammer thrower Ed Burke.

He also is throwing again in hopes of making another Olympic team.

"That would be extremely satisfying," he said.

"This will probably be my last year. I can't make a living out of this sport. Surviving financially has been difficult this year."

Probably is a very indefinite word, especially in Wilkins' case.

Top Of '86 Field Returns For Tourney

GREENSBORO (AP) — Eight of the top 10 finishers in the 1987 N.C. Amateur golf tournament will highlight the field for this year's event, to be held on two Greensboro golf courses starting Thursday.

The tournament will be played at Forest Oaks and Sedgefield Country Clubs. The field of 288 players will be split between the two courses for the 36 holes, playing one round at each. The field will then be cut to the low 60s and ties at the conclusion of Friday's play. The final two rounds will be played at Forest Oaks.

Greensboro's John Hughes took a one-shot victory over Raleigh insurance executive Paul Simson in last year's tournament. Hughes is currently competing on the ProGolf Tour, but Simson heads an impressive list of returning players.

Three shots off the pace last year was Uly Griset, who won the 1985 N.C. Amateur and is expected to be among the contenders again. Griset, who just completed his collegiate eligibility at North Carolina State, won the North & South this spring.

Also returning are Greensboro's Larry Boswell and Walter Hall of Clemmons, two of the talented mid-amateurs in the field who tied for fourth last year. Mocksville's Steve Harwell, Bubba Judy of Greensboro, Pinehurst's Bob Klug and Mike Claybrook of Stoneville complete the list of top 10 finishers back for this year's tourney.

Organizers Of State Games Optimistic

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. (AP) — Organizers of the second States Games of North Carolina say they would not be surprised if up to 6,000 people sign up for the Olympic-style games open to any state resident.

"We haven't gotten all the individual names in the computer. We're having on-site registration in some sports," executive director Winkie LaForce said in a telephone interview Wednesday evening. "I wouldn't be surprised if the number is 6,000, but we won't know until Monday or Tuesday."

The State Games, which began today and run through Sunday, are open to anyone who is lived in North Carolina for at least 30 days. The competition is open to all ages and skill levels.

Ms. LaForce said the level of competition stems more from the momentum established by last year's U.S. Olympic Festival in North Carolina and not necessarily because this is an Olympic year.

"I just think it's another multi-sport event. People had so much fun last year that they wanted to get involved," she said.

So that North Carolina would receive national sanction in the State Games movement, it was necessary for North Carolina to recognize one group as the official host for the games. That distinction was awarded to North Carolina Amateur Sports by Gov. Jim Martin and his Council on Physical Fitness and Health.

NCAS also will host the State Games in 1989 and 1990.

Ceremonies held in conjunction with the games include the torch run, which began Wednesday in Greensboro, and opening ceremonies scheduled for Meredith College Friday night.

Finals competitions will be held at sites in Burlington, Cary, Chapel Hill, Durham and Raleigh.

Dye Given A Lucrative Retirement Annuity

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Auburn Coach Pat Dye, who has guided the Tiger football team to two Southeastern Conference championships in five years, has been rewarded with an annuity that could be worth $1 million at retirement age.

The Birmingham Post-Herald reported in today's editions that the Auburn Alumni Association established the annuity, which consists of a principal of $200,000 that, compounded with interest, could reach $1 million by the time Dye reaches age 65.

The newspaper also said Dye confirmed that he recently signed a new four-year revolving contract. The paper said it pays him a base salary of $100,000 a year and that he will receive two free cars upon retirement.

Dye, 48, declined to comment about the specifics of the agreement, but he confirmed that an annuity was established and thanked Auburn University officials. "This means a lot to me," he said.

After winning the 1987 SEC crown, Dye said late last year that he was discussing with university officials the possibility of being given a form of tenure, providing him with more security.

TV Industry Says Pirates Thriving On Decoder Sales

By DEBORAH MESCE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A pirate underworld that holds seminars in the Bahamas and advertises openly in publications is thriving on sales of illegal decoders to backyard satellite dish owners, according to industry officials.

Pirates are using modern business techniques, including the distribution of "how to" video tapes, to establish a sales network for the illegal electronics, J. Lawrence Dunham, a General Instrument Corp. executive, said in testimony submitted Wednesday to the House telecommunications subcommittee.

General Instrument makes the VideoCipher II decoder, whose electronics have become the de facto industry standard. Each of the three dozen or so cable programming services that have scrambled their signals can be decoded by the VideoCipher.

Industry leaders estimate that as many as half of the nearly 1 million decoders on the market have been illegally modified. With the illegal decoders, backyard dish owners can avoid subscribing to scrambled programming services like HBO, Showtime and other popular cable channels. Instead, they can pick up virtually all channels free.

Dunham said General Instrument has responded to the piracy with changes in the circuitry of the decoder, a public relations campaign to let dish owners know the penalties for dealing with the illegal electronics and an amnesty program that allowed dish owners to trade in modified units at no cost or legal risk.

"In spite of these efforts, piracy has continued," Dunham said.

Dunham said decoder pirates have held seminars in the Bahamas to exchange information, run technology centers to develop new ways to break the system and have tried to buy General Instrument's proprietary chips from suppliers.

Bob Phillips, chief executive officer of the National Rural Telecommunications Cooperative, said pirates are offering full services to the dealers and telling them the risk of getting caught is low.

And pirates are even making house calls, going "door to door where they see the satellite dishes and offer their services. They will sell entire modified descramblers or modify your own unit at home," he said.

"Pirates are so competitive, they have even developed programs and systems to prevent other pirates from pirating from them," he said.

Sid Swartz, president of West Inc., a satellite TV retailer based in Mount Vernon, Wash., said illegal decoders are costing him business. Dealers can make a $1,000 profit on the sale of an illegal decoder, and buyers get a sky full of permanent free programming.

Legal decoders retail for $395, and users then must buy a program package, which for a variety of cable channels and a couple of premium channels costs about $250, he said.

"The consumer perceives no real value in complying with the law when all of his neighbors are apparently violating it with impunity," he said in testimony to the the House Energy and Commerce Committee panel.

Witnesses called for swift prosecution and punishment of pirates and tougher penalties. Currently, a first offense nets up to one year in prison and a fine of up to $25,000.

Charles C. Hewitt, president of the Satellite Broadcasting and Communications Association, said that should be increased to two years and $50,000 and five years and $100,000 for a second offense, he said.

Fire Interrupts Chevy Chase Film

DARROW, La. (AP) — Comedian Chevy Chase and the production crew for his new movie "Fletch Saved" were evacuated from a home where they were filming when a nearby hazardous waste dump caught fire.

It took more than 100,000 cubic feet of foam to snuff out the fire, which enveloped nearby Darrow and the community of Modeste, across the Mississippi River, in clouds of thick, oily smoke early Wednesday, authorities said.

No injuries were reported. The comedian, other actors and production crew of the movie were allowed to return to the antebellum home once the fire was out, said Sheriff's Lt. Mike Scott.

The site contains about 1.9 million gallons of heavily contaminated liquids and 51,000 cubic yards of waste oil, sludges and contaminated soil, according to the Environmental Protection Agency. The cause of the fire was being investigated, authorities said.

NBC Miniseries Mirrors Politics

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — When Steve Sohmer began writing his novel "Favorite Son," Gary Hart was a promising presidential aspirant and the Iran-Contra scandal was still a dark secret.

When Sohmer finished his tale of a leading presidential candidate who's wounded on the Capitol steps in the assassination of a top Contra leader and who is eventually undone by his deep involvement with a woman, he had a political thriller combining elements of Washington's hottest headlines.

NBC's miniseries based on the novel will be televised before the November presidential election.

"It began as an idea for a feature motion picture when I was president of Columbia Pictures," said Sohmer, also a former executive at NBC and CBS. "I suggested it to a producer — who shall be nameless — and he said, 'Steve, that's a terrible idea.' I got huffy and said I'd write it myself."

Sohmer completed the book in November 1986, before either big news story broke. He showed the manuscript to his old boss, Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment, who bought it as a miniseries.

Although the senator appears to be the leading character, Sohmer said it's really his staff assistant, Sally Crain, played by Linda Kozlowski of the "Crocodile Dundee" movies.

"She's smart as hell, highly motivated, a role model," he said. "But she has a pretty disorganized love life. After the first draft I knew I had Sally right artistically. But I didn't understand her. I took the book to Toni Grant, who counsels career women. She told me that many have to be like men in their professional lives. And they end up being victimized by the men they associate with."

Crain becomes involved with a young FBI agent, played by Lance Guest, who is assigned to investigate the assassination.

The six-hour miniseries also stars Harry Hamlin as the senator, Robert Loggia as a tough old FBI agent, James Whitmore as the president, Ken McMillan as head of the FBI, Ronnie Cox as head of the CIA, and Stephanie Kramer as Sally's assistant.

The show is also serving as a "back door pilot" for a possible series starring Loggia as Nick Mancuso, the cynical FBI investigator.

"I give NBC a lot of credit for doing this show in an election year," said Sohmer, who is also serving as executive producer. "It takes a tough look at the role of television in an election. It addresses the question of a candidate's image on television as contrasted with reality. Gary Hart gave us a big lesson in that."

Sohmer is familiar with television images. At CBS and NBC he was in charge of promotion. His promotional campaigns at CBS helped return the network to first place in the ratings in the 1979-80 season.

Asked about his familiarity with Washington, he said, "I used to do marketing research for The Washington Post. I spent a lot of time in Washington. ... I spent a lot of time staying up late at night, drinking beer and eating pizza and listening to war stories from the Washington correspondents. You get a sense of the manipulation that goes on on both sides."

Sohmer describes himself as a "writer in waiting" during his years as a television and movie executive. He was born in Savannah, Ga., and studied at Yale and Columbia. He was a Doubleday Fellow in creative

New Role

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Phyllis Frelich, the deaf actress who won a Tony Award for her performance in the Broadway production of "Children of a Lesser God," will play Sister Sarah on the NBC soap opera "Santa Barbara." The Broadway role was written for her, and the screen version of "Lesser God" later won an Oscar for Marlee Matlin.

writing at Columbia and at the age of 25 had a collection of short stories published with the title of "The Way It Was."

He's making up for lost time. He has two more books in the works. One is a complex thriller about the strategic arms limitations talks and the other is a murder mystery. Both involve women. "Women lead more interesting lives," said Sohmer, and "it's tension that drives a thriller. I'm also doing this because there aren't enough good parts in movies for women."

He's also writing a romantic comedy-adventure for Linda Evans for CBS and another miniseries.

"I'm 46," said Sohmer. "At NBC I looked around one day and at 43 I was the oldest guy there. I said I had to have a career where no one could discriminate against me because of my age. I was briefly at Columbia Pictures. That persuaded me I didn't want to work in the movies. That's when I became a writer."

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY June 17

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Carry through with a project you have started. Later entertain one whose approval you wish to gain. This person will help you in the future.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Stop procrastinating and handle your domestic affairs. Show more devotion to your romantic tie instead of trying to change things.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Others are waiting for you to finish your end of the bargain, so get moving. A touch of humor at the office could yield good results.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): It's not a good time for investing in anything unsteady. Avoid any delays in your stride. See your friends, but watch your tongue.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): If you see any friends, don't confide in them at this time. Wait a few weeks until the Planets line up in your favor. It's worth it.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Ambitious plans for the days ahead will work out, but make them yourself. Show devotion to your mate, even though you don't want to.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): It's not a good time to ask good friends for help unless you're very tactful. Do nothing that could cause a tense situation at a social affair.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Get to your duties and be most precise and conscientious in handling them. Seek advice from important people with experience.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): It's a good day to take some time figuring out how to make a fresh start. Don't be a pushover when it comes to investments.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Let this last day of the work week be good for making lasting arrangements. Be sure to keep any promises you have made.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Situations arise to remind you of neglected duties; get at them quickly. Show more concern about a partner and improve the mood there.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Study your environment and see how best to improve it. Don't disturb a co-worker in any way, or resentment could build up.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East

Opening lead: Jack of ♦

We came across this rather amusing hand while indulging in our favorite pastime—a game of rubber bridge at the club. It provides no major lesson except that, when you know where you want to play the hand, get there as expeditiously as possible.

North-South were using weak two-bids. North was full value for his jump to game. An eight-card fit is the required minimum for play at a suit contract, and North knew that one existed. At this vulnerability, South had to have a reasonable six-card suit for his weak two-bid, so a low doubleton was adequate support. And North certainly had the high-card values on the side to compensate for any trump sparsity.

West's opening diamond lead was won in dummy, and a club was led to the queen, king and ace. West shifted to the jack of spades, taken by the ace. Declarer discarded a spade on the ace of diamonds, ruffed a spade, felling the king in the process, and then ruffed a club on the table.

The queen of spades was ruffed by East and overruffed by declarer, and another club was ruffed. East overruffed with the jack and shifted back to a diamond, ruffed by declarer with the ten. Now declarer cashed the ace of hearts and exited with the queen. East won the king, but he was down to only two diamonds. His forced diamond return gave declarer access to the board's high diamonds which he could not achieve on his own, and which provided a parking spot for South's last club. In all, declarer scored five trump tricks in hand and a club ruff in dummy, three diamonds and the ace of spades.

Denture Implants Used More Often

By PAUL RECER
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dental science has developed new techniques and new materials for the surgical implantation of false teeth, but there still is no definitive study on the effectiveness of the procedure, a panel of experts says.

A panel of dental experts, meeting at the National Institutes of Health, released a statement Wednesday in which they said more than 300,000 Americans annually will be receiving surgically implanted false teeth by 1992 and that the number of dentists performing such procedures has increased by 10 times since 1983.

But the panel said scientific and statistically precise studies are needed to define the effectiveness of permanently implanted false teeth.

The panel said the cost for surgically-installed false teeth is about $300 to $1,000 per implant and that patients can receive from one to eight implants.

D. Walter Cohen, president of the Medical College of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia and chairman of the NIH conference on dental implants, said the surgical installation of teeth can no longer be considered experimental.

Cohen said the development of new materials and new techniques have led to wider acceptance of implantation by dentists and that the demand for permanent false teeth is increasing among Americans.

He said as people tend to live longer, more and more patients are finding that they cannot use removable false teeth and are choosing to have permanently implanted artificial teeth.

There are several systems for implanting false teeth in living tissue, but they all basically involve surgically cutting into the bone that normally supports teeth and installing a manmade peg or post to support the false teeth, or to anchor a bridge of false teeth.

The NIH panel said that because scientific studies have not been made on methods of implanting false teeth, "it is not possible to make judgments on the comparative merits of different implant systems."

Researcher Uses Self As Guinea Pig

By ROBERT STEINBROOK
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — A French scientist who has injected himself with a test AIDS vaccine said Wednesday that he hoped to launch a large-scale clinical trial of a similar vaccine in Africa and Europe "by the end of the year."

In a presentation at the fourth international conference on AIDS, Dr. Daniel Zagury of Pierre and Marie Curie University in Paris provided no details of his plans. He also acknowledged that he had not yet developed a test vaccine suitable for administration to perhaps hundreds of individuals.

The French immunologist has emerged as a maverick figure in AIDS research because of his self-experimentation and what colleagues describe as a passionate commitment to speed up the pace of vaccine development.

Large trials that would involve individuals at high risk for exposure to the human immunodeficiency virus are "not tomorrow" but "I hope it would be by the end of the year," Zagury told reporters. "Such an operation requires many constraints that we must overcome."

By comparison, most other vaccine researchers have emphasized a more deliberative approach, which restricts initial human trials to individuals at low risk of actually being exposed to the virus.

At the meeting, Zagury described his widely publicized self-experimentation.

The experiments show that he has boosted his immunity against the AIDS virus to a series of self-injections of a test vaccine.

There is no way of knowing whether Zagury is actually protected against infection with the virus because he has never been exposed to it. In addition, the exact approach he tested on himself has apparently not been tested in others. Nor has it been shown to protect chimpanzees against exposure to the virus.

Early Mental Problems Tied To AIDS

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — People infected with the AIDS virus show no sign of mental problems until they develop physical symptoms associated with the deadly disease, a U.S. government study shows.

"We're not seeing any difference whatsoever in terms of a number of psychological measures known to be sensitive to virtually any form of brain damage," said one of the study's authors, Dr. Ola Selnes, a psychologist at the Johns Hopkins

Medical Institutions in Baltimore. He presented the findings Wednesday at the Fourth International Conference on AIDS.

The AIDS virus attacks the body's immune system, leaving victims susceptible to a wide variety of infections and cancers.

AIDS is most often transmitted through sexual contact. Other means of transmission include transfusions of tainted blood or blood products, and the sharing of contaminated hypodermic needles or syringes by drug abusers. AIDS can also be passed from mother to child at or before birth.

The study by Selnes and Dr. Justin McArthur, also of Hopkins, was intended to resolve questions raised by earlier studies that had found distinct mental problems, such as loss of memory and mental slowness, in people infected with the AIDS virus. Those changes sometimes seemed to appear before any other signs of AIDS infection.

As a result, concern was expressed that people in sensitive jobs, such as airline pilots, nuclear reactor operators or operators of heavy industrial equipment, should be removed from their positions if they become infected with the AIDS virus, even if they are not outwardly sick.

"Based on our results, we do not feel there is any cause for alarm or concern," Selnes said. The study was sponsored by the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases.

BECOME A POSTAL OR GOVERNMENT CIVIL SERVICE WORKER. TRAIN NOW FOR EXAMS TO OPEN IN EASTERN NORTH CAROLINA IN JULY. WANT TO RELOCATE? WE CAN SHOW YOU THE SECRET OF GETTING ON THE HIRING LISTS OF MAJOR POST OFFICES NATIONWIDE IMMEDIATELY.

The Postal Service hires over 5,000 people a month with the average salary plus benefits being $27,500. There are no lay-offs, no strikes, and no shut-downs. Men and women, regardless of age or experience are eligible to apply. These exams do no test general knowledge. Proper preparation is the key to getting hired, because people are hired for these positions based on their exam scores. The way to learn techniques taught in this course were designed by Bill Harold. He is a former Postal employee—the author of three postal exam guides, and has repeatedly scored 100% on Postal tests.

3 HOUR WORKSHOP: SCORE 95-100%
A survey in January for Boston's new hiring list indicated that 40 of the first 41 hired had taken a workshop course. Of the 287 people who took the course last year in Northwest Indiana, 282 indicated they were offered positions with the Postal Service.

GUARANTEE: The time saving and accuracy-increasing methods taught in this course are so powerful that we will enter into a written agreement.
