Knowles Beefs Up City Budget, Tax To Rise

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville City Manager Greg Knowles on Thursday revised the 1988-89 city budget proposal allocating tax money to include the addition of an assistant city manager position and a pay hike for several department heads.

Those revisions, along with other revisions to the proposal as directed by the City Council during several budget sessions held during the past two months, create an increase in the proposed 1988-89 city budget of 13.57 percent over the amount budgeted for the current year.

Thursday's release of the revised budget proposal comes four days before members of the City Council decide whether to approve the record city budget of $22,323,021. The council will consider adoption of the proposal Monday at 6 p.m. in the third floor conference room of City Hall.

This year's city budget was $19,656,163.

Knowles said the addition of an assistant manager is one of several proposals before the council which were recently recommended by the Arthur Young consultant organization.

Knowles said other recommendations by the consultant implemented in the budget proposal call for the reshuffling of various job titles.

For example the position of director of planning and development and the director of engineering and inspection, both at grade 20, will be merged into one position called director of development at a pay grade of 21.

"Overall the Arthur Young implementation will cost the city less than $7,000," Knowles said. "I did not recommend all the things that were in the Arthur Young study and the council modified a number of things so the overall costs are not quite $7,000."

In order to raise revenues for city expenditures as proposed, Knowles said the city would have to levy a tax rate of 55.36 cents per $100 valuation of taxable property, as listed for taxes as of Jan. 1, 1988.

He said with the recent tax revaluation taken into consideration, a rate of 53.16 cents would have created no tax increase. As the budget is currently proposed, residents of Greenville can expect to pay a 2.2 cents per $100 tax increase for the fiscal year 1988-89.

According to Knowles part of the 2.2 cent tax increase will be used for major capital improvements such as the Evans Street widening project, and renovations to the roof and physical improvements to the Eppes Center and the South Greenville Recreation Center.

The Evans Street Project alone will cost the city $700,000, Knowles said. "That's a big chunk of that 2.2 cents," he added.

The addition an assistant city manager to the budget proposal comes 10 days after the official public hearing on the budget.

According to the revised budget proposal, the position of assistant city manager would be added to the city's staff at a pay grade of 22. According to the current city pay plan, such a grade would accommodate a yearly salary in the range from $39,915.20 to $59,883.20. Currently that grade is held by the director of public works and the chief of police.

Meanwhile, the budget proposal also calls for the director of personnel to raise from a grade of 16 ($28,516 to $42,764) to a grade 17 ($30,243 to $45,364.80). The proposal also accommodates a raise for the city attorney and the director of parks and recreation from grade 20 ($35,859 to $53,809) to grade 21 ($37,856 to $56,784).

Salaries Would Double

Mayor, Council Raise The Ante

By GREG LAUDICK
Reflector Staff Writer

When members of the Greenville City Council sit down Monday to consider a 2.2 cent per $100 tax increase for the people of Greenville, at the same time they will also be considering nearly doubling their own salary and travel and transportation allowances.

According to the 1988-89 city budget proposal, salaries for the mayor and the City Council will increase in the upcoming year to $14,908, nearly double the $7,600 budgeted this year.

In addition, the proposal calls for a budgeted amount of $14,516 to be set aside in the upcoming fiscal year for travel and transportation, compared with $7,450 budgeted this year. Of those budgeted dollars, $3,185 are proposed for a Chamber of Commerce Planning Conference retreat to Williamsburg, Va.

Overall the mayor and the council's budget as proposed will increase from $54,405 this year to $66,809 in 1988-89.

That increase is just part of a $2,666,858 proposed jump in the entire city budget over this year's amount of $19,656,163.

To pay for those increased expenses, the budget proposal calls for the residents of Greenville to afford a 2.2 cent per $100 tax increase in fiscal year 1988-89.

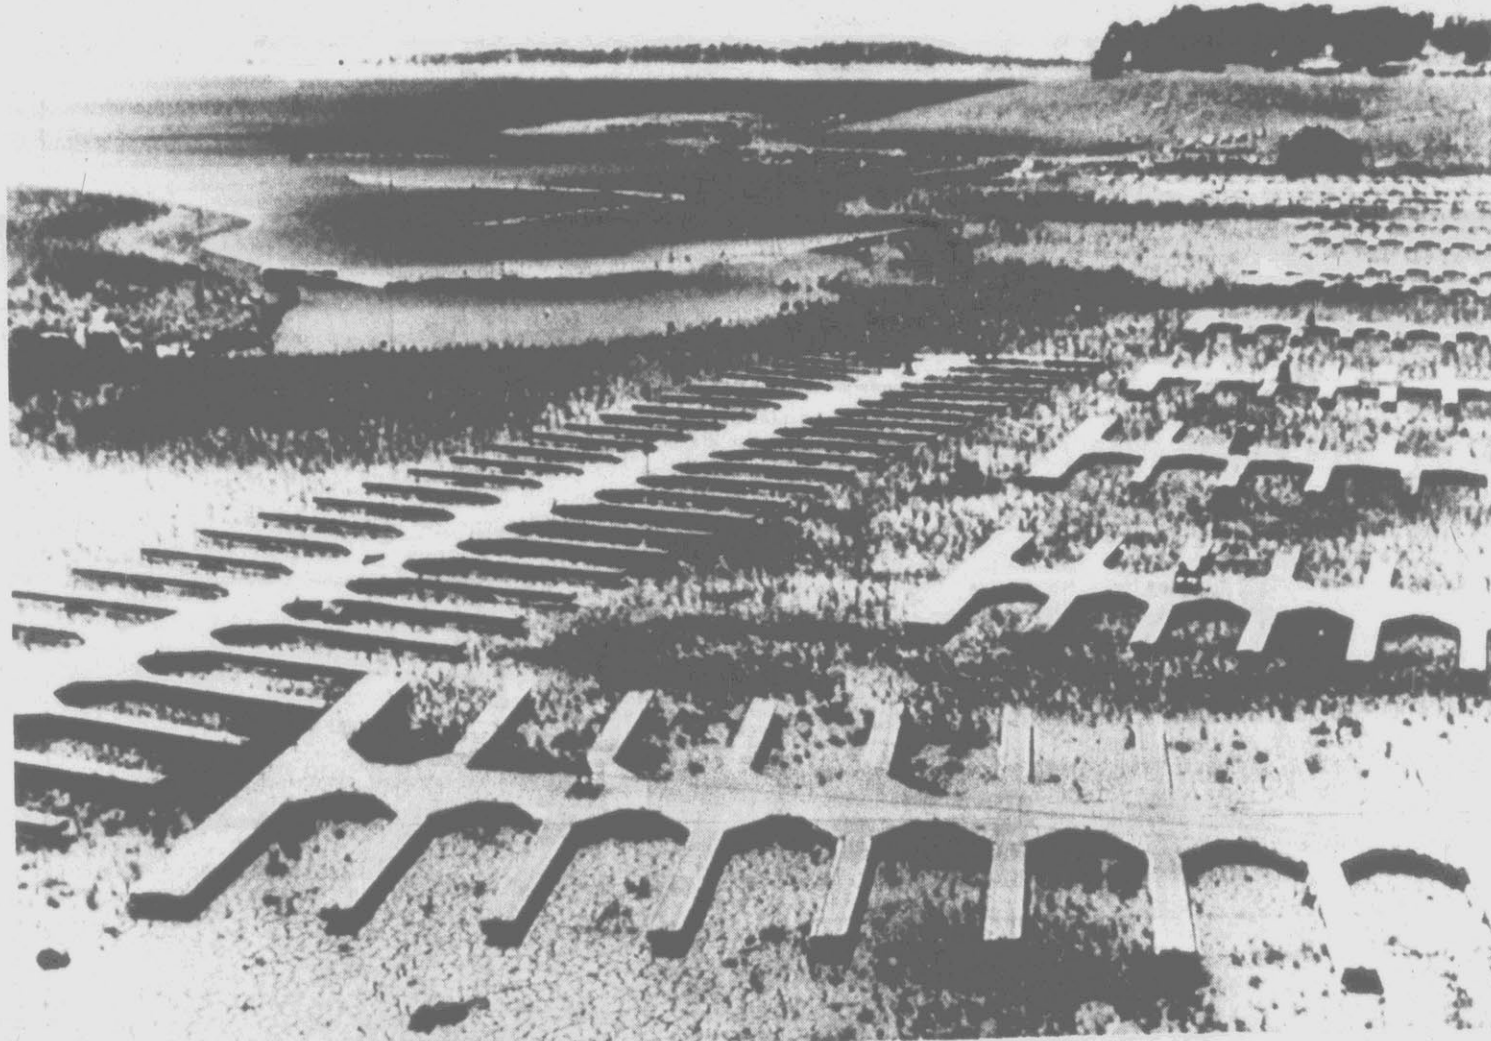

Other increases in the mayor and the City Council's budget that the council will consider to adopt Monday include an increase in dues from $230 budgeted this year to $2,695. Included in that amount are $1,390 for a trip to the U.S. Conference of Mayors and $900 for a trip to the National Conference of Black Mayors.

The council will also consider a line item in the mayor and the council's budget which for this year no money was appropriated. The council will consider an appropriation of $2,000 for miscellaneous travel, and council-directed travel.

Such travel is defined by Finance Director Ron Kimble as sending a council or staff member, or a member from one of the various boards and commissions, to gather information for study and review on the council's behalf.

Also included in the 1988-89 budget proposal for the mayor and the council's budget is an automobile allowance.

Rain Comes, But Not Enough

By JONATHAN W. OATIS
Associated Press Writer

Rain fell in drought-stricken sections of the nation but provided little relief today from the dry spell parching crops, stranding hundreds of river barges and threatening to ruin cattle farmers, including owners of a 106-year-old Texas ranch.

"If we get rain, there'll be no problem. If we don't get rain, we're going to have to cut short on groceries," cattle farmer Tim Meister of Reedsburg, Wis., said Thursday at the Milwaukee Stockyards as livestock went on the block amid the worst drought in America's midsection since the Dust Bowl.

U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Richard E. Lyng allowed hay-cutting on land in nearly 300 counties in 13 states set aside under a massive federal conservation program so farmers can harvest hay in areas where the weather has shriveled livestock feed. President Reagan appointed an interagency committee to deal with the crisis.

Showers and thunderstorms moved through the Midwest and from Ohio to Kentucky and the southern Appalachians on Thursday, but rainfall was spotty, the National Weather Service said.

Rain continued early today in southern Sout Dakota and northern Nebraska. Showers and thunderstorms were expected from eastern Texas and eastern Oklahoma to North Carolina up to Maine, and from eastern Kansas to Minnesota, but the storms will be "pretty widely scattered," meteorologist Hugh Crowther of the weather service's National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., said today.

The five-day outlook is "pretty dry," Crowther said.

The dry weather has shriveled or threatened to damage corn and other crops in many states in the Midwest and the Southeast.

"There ain't gonna be no crops. It's the worst I've seen since '36," said Firmin Rettinghauf, 72, whose three sons farm his land near Gilbertville in northeast Iowa.

"There is no more hopeless or helpless feeling than seeing your crops dry up, because there is no alleviating that disaster," said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, who grew up on a farm, and spoke at Lyng's news conference.

Mississippi Commissioner of Agriculture Jim Buck Ross said he was organizing a day of prayer for Sunday.

Dropping water levels in the Mississippi and Ohio rivers have made the waterways unnavigable, hurting the inland shipping industry.

The Army Corps of Engineers began dredging the Mississippi near Greenville, Miss., to clear the channel to the 9-foot minimum depth needed for river traffic and to allow about 750 backed-up barges to move, Army Corps of Engineers spokesman Michael Logue said in Vicksburg.

A seven-mile stretch of the Ohio

River near Mound City, Ill., remained closed to all traffic Thursday while a dredge deepened a shallow channel. Dozens of towboats and barges were stranded.

State officials offered some relief to struggling farmers. In Indiana, $10 million in emergency low-interest loans was made available, and as many as 45,000 farmers could benefit, said Lt. Gov. John M. Mutz. In Madison, Wis., the Legislature's Joint Finance Committee approved $5 million expected to provide 385 loans to drought-stricken growers.

Cattle farmers were among the hardest hit. The dry, hot weather has turned pastures brown, burning up feed for livestock.

Airport Planning Meeting Slated

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt-Greenville Airport Director Jim Turcotte will meet with officials from the state Department of Transportation and the Federal Aviation Administration next week to discuss plans for an airport terminal expansion project.

The FAA has tentatively allocated $588,000 for the project, which will add 8,000 square feet to the airport, and Turcotte will meet with transportation officials Wednesday for a predesign conference. Officials from the LPA Group Inc. — a South Carolina-based architectural firm with an office in Raleigh — will also attend the meeting.

Architects from the LPA Group have drawn up three sets of plans for the expansion project, which will add space for an indoor baggage claim area, airline offices and rental car companies. No final plans have been drawn because the federal funding was not finalized until this month.

Turcotte received the tentative allocation from the FAA June 8, and he expects to receive about $120,000 from both the Greenville City Council and the Pitt County Board of Commissioners in their fiscal 1989 budgets.

Support Growing For Jobs Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House hinted today that President Reagan might still veto a bill designed to turn the nation's Depression-era welfare system into a jobs program but backers said support for the measure is so strong that a veto threat does not worry them.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said an amendment added by the Senate mandating a work requirement for a small percentage of welfare recipients was "very progressive and helpful."

But he said the administration "still has some problems with the bill," which now goes to a congressional conference committee to iron out differences with the version passed by the House.

"We ... would like to go further even in some of these areas" than the Senate did, the spokesman said. He said the workfare amendment was "very important" and the White House would be studying other amendments added by the Senate.

The House version, without the work requirement, is more objectionable to the administration.

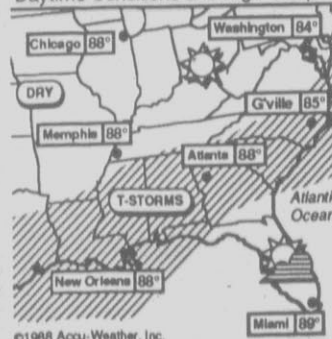

"We'll try to get changes in conference, but it's going to be very tough to reconcile with the House bill that is so far out of line with our judgment," Fitzwater said.

When asked whether the president would sign the bill, the spokesman said, "There is no decision at this WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The parliament today unanimously adopted a new Polish military oath that removes a reference to serving in an alliance with the Soviet Union.

The new oath was recommended by the government and Poland's national defense ministry. The government has said the change would not affect relations with the Soviets.

An outlawed opposition peace group, Freedom and Peace, had long criticized the previous oath, charging it represented an affront to Polish sovereignty.

The government has said the change was merely a matter of updating antiquated language. A brief statement by the state-run news agency PAP said the new oath was adopted unanimously.

Until now, military inductees promised to guard peace in "brotherly alliance with the Soviet army and other allied armies." The new oath contains no reference to the Soviet Union, and the inductee promises only to "guard peace in the brotherhood of arms with the allied armies."

The new oath as presented by the government drops a reference to defending Poland against "the threats of imperialism."

Government spokesman Jerzy Urban has stressed the new wording does not reflect any lessening of Poland's alliance with the Soviet Union.

LWV Convention

Mary Alsentzer, president of the League of Women Voters of Greenville-Pitt County, represented the local league this week at the 38th national convention of the League of Women Voters in Denver.

Ms. Alsentzer said the more than 1,500 delegates voted to set several national priorities for the next two years, including: campaign for a safer world, child care and housing, meeting basic human needs and tackling toxics.

The Campaign for a Safer World expresses the league's concerns about arms control, the federal deficit and defense spending. Increasing the supply of affordable quality child care and housing and preventing the contamination of ground and surface water and air by toxic, hazardous and radioactive pollutants are the goals of the other campaigns.

The next LWV convention will be held in June 1990 in Washington, D.C.

Tax Rate Holds

WINTERVILLE — The Winterville Board of Aldermen approved a budget of more than $2.6 million Thursday night that reflects no increases in the tax rate or in service fees, according to Town Clerk Elwood Nobles.

Nobles said the total for fiscal year 1988-89 represents an increase of $184,529 from fiscal year 1987-88.

"The tax rate will remain the same at 40 cents per $100," Nobles said, due to the uncertainty of the inventory tax.

Nobles said that while there will be no increase in service fees, electrical fee increases are subject to increases from the supplier.

Budget sections include: administration $138,000; police department, $114,000; rescue $28,000; fire department, $28,400; recreation department, $19,000; street department, 154,000; Powell Bill, $55,000; sanitation, $43,000, and non-departmentals, $145,000. He said non-departmentals include FICA taxes, group insurance, retirement expense and general insurance for the town.

Parolee Charged In Conn. Murder

By JOHN BARE
Reflector Staff Writer

A former Greenville resident, paroled from a North Carolina prison in January, has been charged with killing a woman in Stamford, Conn.

Bernard Williams, 29, was charged Wednesday with killing Marian Boucher Javery, 61, who was found dead outside a parking garage of Bloomingdale's department store June 6. Ms. Javery lived in New Canaan, Conn.

Stamford police Detective Joseph Falzetti said in a telephone interview that Williams had been arrested in Stamford prior to the murder on shoplifting charges, but Williams was released because prosecutors did not know of his criminal record in Pitt County — which dates back to 1985.

Williams was later arrested in nearby Port Chester, N.Y., on an unrelated burglary charge, Falzetti said, and he is being held at the Westchester County Correctional Center.

Stamford authorities served a felony murder warrant on Williams Thursday, but Williams plans to fight extradition to Connecticut, Falzetti said.

The case has generated a lot of interest in Stamford, a city less than 25 miles from the New York City metropolitan area, Falzetti said.

"The interest generated is because of Bloomingdale's, and because the victim is from New Canaan, which is a very astute community of wealth," Falzetti said.

In December of 1985, Williams was convicted in Pitt County Superior Court of felonious possession of a firearm and possession of heroin, marijuana and Darvocet. At the time, he listed his address as 404-B Darden Dr. in Greenville.

Sentenced by Judge Herbert O. Phillips III to five years in prison, Williams was released Jan. 21 of this year after the state Parole Commission found that he had made a "satisfactory adjustment."

Williams was then arrested March 8 on charges of assaulting a female and released on a $200 unsecured bond by Magistrate William Whitehurst.

Williams, this time listing his place of residence as 7 Ford St. in Greenville, failed to appear in court April 28. An order for his arrest was issued, along with an order to place him under a $500 secured bond, but Williams left Pitt County before being arrested.

Court records show Williams was also convicted in Pitt County of felonious possession of a firearm in May of 1985, and has been arrested on more than five drug violations.

Pitt County District Attorney Thomas Haigwood said no one from Stamford tried to contact him to inquire about Williams' criminal record, but there are several other sources available.

Greenville Man Charged In Death

Clarence Earl Fields, 31, of 802-A Colonial Ave. in Greenville has been charged with first-degree murder and is being held without bond in the Pitt County Jail in connection with the Wednesday shooting death of a New Bern man.

Greenville police arrested Fields at Bland's Trailer Park Thursday about 12:45 p.m. after a tip from Crimestoppers, according to Detective Cliff Weatherington.

Appearing before District Court Judge J.W.H. Roberts Thursday afternoon, Fields said he could not afford a lawyer. Roberts appointed the Pitt County public defender to handle the case, set Fields' probable cause hearing for July 1 and denied any bond.

Fields is accused of killing Steve Craig and wounding Leroy Chapman of New Bern about 3 p.m. Wednesday after a dispute over money in the 1500 block of Fleming Street.

According to Capt. R.M. Nichols, Craig and Chapman were standing in a yard on Fleming Street when a man grabbed some money from Craig's hand and ran. During the chase, the man grabbed a sawed-off shotgun and turned and fired.

Craig, who was shot in the head and chest, died in Pitt County Memorial Hospital about 5:30 p.m. Wednesday. Chapman received minor wounds to the ear and neck.

The investigation is continuing, said Weatherington. He said drugs may have been a factor in the killing as a small amount of cocaine was found at the crime scene.

N. Ireland Police Get New Powers

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The British government is giving Northern Ireland police the power to use a revolutionary crime-detecting technique known as genetic fingerprinting after an IRA bombing killed six British soldiers.

But Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher ruled out a reintroduction of detention without trial to deal without an upsurge of violence by the outlawed Irish Republican Army in the British province.

British and Irish government officials, meanwhile, met in Belfast today to discuss security in the aftermath of the IRA bombing Wednesday that killed six off-duty soldiers in Lisburn, seven miles southwest of Belfast.

Mrs. Thatcher's top official in the province, Tom King, acknowledged that a security lapse allowed IRA guerrillas to plant a bomb on the soldiers' van while they were running in a 13-mile charity half-marathon.

King said the soldiers failed to check the unmarked van for explosives and should not have left it unattended in a parking lot while taking part in the footrace. The bomb exploded in the market town as the soldiers were returning to their barracks.

The seven pounds of plastic explosives used in the bomb were thought to have been smuggled into the province from Libya, King said.

Ten civilians, including a 2-year-old boy and an 80-year-old man, were injured, none seriously, authorities said. The bombing brought this year's death toll from sectarian violence to 38, eight this week alone.

Claiming responsibility for the bombing, the IRA vowed to wage "unceasing war" against the British security forces. The guerrilla group is fighting to oust Britain from Northern Ireland and unite the Protestant-dominated province with the mainly Roman Catholic Irish Republic.

In Parliament Thursday night, King's deputy, Northern Ireland Minister John Stanley, said the government was giving the Royal Ulster Constabulary, the province's mainly Protestant police force, new power to use genetic fingerprinting to fight terrorism.

Police forces in England and Wales already use the sophisticated technique, which matches DNA extracts found in a suspect's blood, semen, hair or saliva with evidence found at a crime scene.

In England and Wales, police cannot use genetic fingerprinting without a suspect's consent, but police in Northern Ireland will be allowed to require suspects to provide saliva samples without consent, Stanley said. Police would take the samples with mouth swabs.

"In the particular circumstances of Northern Ireland, highlighted once again by the horrific murder of the six soldiers yesterday, it seems to us entirely reasonable and necessary ... to give the police the power to take a mouth swab, if necessary, without a suspect's consent," Stanley said.

Earlier Thursday, Mrs. Thatcher called the attack a "terrible atrocity."

But she rejected a lawmaker's proposal to reintroduce the policy of internment without trial used in the 1970s to round up terrorist suspects. Britain abandoned the policy in the face of widespread criticism of it as a violation of civil liberties.

Thai, Cambodian Talks Scheduled

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach of Vietnam said today he would meet with representatives from Cambodian rebel groups in talks aimed at ending the 10-year-old civil war in Cambodia.

Vietnam has said before it would send a representative to the informal talks beginning July 25 in Jakarta, Indonesia, but this was the first announcement that Thach himself would be going.

"There is no doubt that I will be there," Thach told a news conference.

Thach and his Thai counterpart, Siddhi Savetsila, also said the United States and the Soviet Union should act as guarantors of any agreement to end the conflict.

Thach and Savetsila held separate news conferences after a 45-minute meeting today. On Thursday, they held their first talks since July 1986.

They reportedly discussed Vietnam's plans to withdraw 50,000 Vietnamese troops from Cambodia, the problem of Vietnamese refugees and the danger that the Khmer Rouge may return to power if Vietnam pulls all its troops out of Cambodia.

Thailand, along with the United States and China, backs a three-party guerrilla coalition fighting the Vietnamese in Cambodia. The three are the ultra-radical Khmer Rouge, the Western-leaning Khmer People's National Liberation Front and followers of Prince Norodom Sihanouk.

Vietnam, backed by the Soviet Union, invaded Cambodia in late 1978, driving the pro-Chinese Khmer Rouge from power. The Khmer Rouge killed millions of people during its attempt to impose radical agrarian communism on Cambodia after it took over in 1975.

Hanoi has promised to pull out all its forces, currently estimated at 120,000, by 1990. The partial withdrawal of 50,000 troops is scheduled to begin June 30 and continue through the rest of the year.

Thach said representation at the Jakarta talks would include the pro-Hanoi government in Cambodia under President Heng Samrin.

He said Sihanouk, Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan and liberation front head Son Sann would attend.

Although the format has yet to be clearly spelled out, the four Cambodian factions are to meet first. Other parties, such as Vietnam, Laos and Southeast Asian countries opposed to Vietnam's occupation of Cambodia, will join at later stages of the discussions.

Siddhi said Thailand would not send a representative to the meeting and would instead wait until "the initial meeting has firmed up to some kind of political settlement."

Thach praised the informal structure of the upcoming meeting and compared it to a cocktail party.

"In a cocktail party there is no fixed chair for anyone so we can move freely. I hope for the best," Thach said when asked whether he would prefer to meet any particular member of the anti-Vietnamese coalition.

He urged full support for the talks. "If others are not in a hurry they'll miss the train. And missing the train is not a happy thing," he said.

point. We'll just have to wait and see."

The measure passed by the Senate by a vote of 93-3, far more than the two-thirds majority needed to override a veto. Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan and Rep. Thomas Downey, both New York Democrats, said House and Senate negotiators are expected to work out their differences on the bill and have it on Reagan's desk by Labor Day.

The Reagan administration had voiced concerns about the measure, but Senate Republicans said that if conferees agreed on a bill that looked like the Senate version, President Reagan might sign it.

The two bill sponsors, interviewed on NBC-TV's "Today" show, termed the differences in the House and Senate bills primarily "technical." Moynihan noted that the Senate's 93-3 vote indicated strong support in the event of a veto.

Downey said the negotiators "have to be concerned about" a veto, but added: "I'm not sure that that is the end of the world if the president vetoes it."

"It's possible to override the president's veto. It's possible to attach it to something he wants. It's also possible to introduce a bill possibly with a democratic president in the next Congress that does all that we want it to do," he said.

The Senate voted 93-3 Thursday to pass the $2.8 billion Family Security Act after bowing to nearly all of President Reagan's requests, including adoption of a mandatory workfare provision for a small percentage of welfare recipients.

Moynihan, author of the bill, on Thursday called it "the first legislation of its kind since the welfare system was established in the 1930s."

The House last December passed a

$7 billion welfare overhaul bill. Moynihan and Downey, sponsor of the House bill, refused to speculate on whether negotiations to reconcile the two bills would produce a plan acceptable to the White House.

Poles Ax Oath

"The alliance with the Soviet Union provides the foundation for the Polish armed forces," Urban said in March. "No matter how this truth is expressed in words, the essence of the matter will not change."

The reason for the change is that the oath "came into existence some time ago, so it requires some adjustments," he said. "All periods in time have their specific styles."

Freedom and Peace leader Jacek Czaputowicz said his group deserves credit for the proposed change.

"These changes are because of the activity of Freedom and Peace. There are a lot of people in prison just for opposing the military oath," he said.

Freedom and Peace says 16 of its supporters are in prison, either for refusing to take the oath or to comply with Poland's mandatory two-year military draft.

Five supporters of the group from Gdansk were detained outside Parliament on Thursday 15 minutes after they sat down on the pavement in protest, Czaputowicz said.

In addition to the new oath, the protesters also called for release of Freedom and Peace member Slawomir Dutkiewicz, 24, of Szczecin, who was imprisoned for resisting the draft.

Dutkiewicz has been force-fed since he began a hunger strike in November. He has lost 44 pounds, and his health has deteriorated significantly, according to Dr. Zofia Kuratowska, a physician who examined him in prison earlier in the week.

The group also demands the right to alternative national service for conscientious objectors to the draft. The government has announced it is considering some form of such service, but said inductees would have to serve up to four years.

The government has denied that Freedom and Peace affected the decision to change the oath.

In addition, the old oath contained the promise to "guard unyieldingly the rights of the working people guaranteed in the constitution, unyieldingly stand guard of the people's rule and remain faithful to the government of the Polish People's Republic."

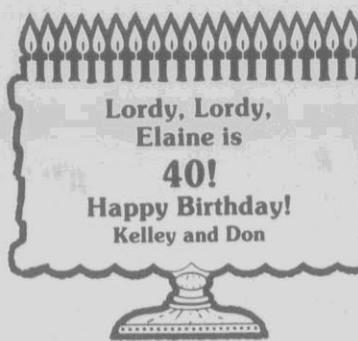

The new oath says simply: "I swear to serve the homeland and the nation," with no specific reference to the government or working people.

The Peace and Freedom leader said it was significant that the references to socialism and the government were dropped.

"Some people from Freedom and Peace who refused to take the oath said they cannot swear to the government because this government is not our government," he said. "It is not the government of the whole nation."

The government said earlier this year that it intended to change the oath.

Under Polish law, males must serve in the military for up to two years unless exempted.

Drought

buy hay from farmers in other parts of the state or neighboring states because the drought was isolated. But this year, everybody's got the same problem," Michigan agriculture department Director Paul Kindinger said during a tour of drought-hit farms.

In the lower Rio Grande Valley in Texas, ranchers short on feed had been using propane torches to remove thorns from prickly pear cactus so cattle could graze on them. But some had to stop because even the cactus is shriveling up.

Near Lubbock, George McNeil said the dry spell could doom the ranch his family has owned for 106 years, which has been plagued by early frosts and other problems for several years. McNeill said that if it doesn't rain soon, he'll start selling off his 500 head of cattle in 100-head increments.

"We just hope that we can salvage enough cattle to have a basis to start over again when this thing (drought) does break," he said. "But it looks like this is the one that's going to take us out."

Lyng on Thursday opened up for hay-cutting land set aside under the Conservation Reserve Program in all 53 North Dakota counties, and more than 240 counties in a dozen other states. The program, launched in 1985, was supposed to have kept highly erodible land out of production for 10 years.

Other states given permission to cut hay were Alabama, California, Georgia, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, Ohio, South Dakota and Wisconsin.

Such an allowance will provide $200 per month in fiscal year 1988-89 for the mayor and $100 per month for the various council members.

In addition, appropriated for the mayor and the council's budget is $500 to be used towards industry day, which according to Kimble, is a day set aside for celebration in an attempt to thank local industry and an attempt to draw new industry to the area.

Monday's budget adoption session is scheduled at 6 p.m. in the third floor conference room of City Hall.

Meeting Planned

The expansion project is expected to cost between $900,000 and $1 million, and Turcotte said the state will provide at least $100,000 to $120,000.

The state had initially set aside about $250,000 for Pitt-Greenville Airport, so Turcotte said more money is available if it is needed.

At the meeting Wednesday, officials will decide on a tentative time schedule for the final architectural plans and for the bidding process on the construction.

"After the meeting on the twenty-ninth, we just really come up with a time schedule — when the plans and specs will be done ... when we plan to go out to bid," Turcotte said.

The LPA Group will prepare all of the plans and specifications, and after they are approved, the airport will solicit bids. "We will have at least four prime contractors when we do this," Turcotte said. "It's going to be a pretty elaborate and involved process."

At the Airport Authority's monthly meeting Thursday, Turcotte also told the board he supports a request Ernest and Lester Branch have made to the city to change the zoning on their land.

The Branches own land north of the airport, some of which the authority has purchased in the past, and Turcotte said the land is zoned RA 20, which will allow it to be used for single-family dwellings or agriculture.

The Branches want to change the zoning in order to make the land eligible to be zoned for unoffensive industry — the same category in which other Airport Authority land is zoned. The authority is negotiating with the Branches about purchasing more land, Turcotte said.

Kinston Sets Pace

Helping Hand For Elderly

Our neighboring city of Kinston deserves congratulations for becoming an All American City in this year's competition.

Kinston is one of 10 United States cities to receive the designation in 1988. It won for its humanitarian effort to make life easier for the community's elderly. The programs include housing for the elderly, "meals on wheels" which serve meals each day for whatever the elderly can afford to pay, a church outreach program and other initiatives.

There could be no finer project than that which has been undertaken by Kinston. This is a time when the numbers of elderly are growing. Some have little income, no decent place to live and perhaps they do not receive nutritious meals. It is a sad plight for old people who have spent their lives in productive work only to wind up with small incomes and little personal support.

Kinston saw that need and set about to do something about it. That the community was successful is attested to by this All America Cities award.

Community projects run the gamut from attracting industry to providing more jobs, cleaning and painting up, fighting illegal drugs and more. Most cities have something of which to be justifiably proud and their citizens are eager to point out what the communities have done.

Kinston chose something which could not have seemed glamorous at the beginning. The city concentrated its efforts to a segment of society which is often forgotten in an out of sight, out of mind scenario. Through this All America Award the nation will know what this eastern North Carolina community has done for its old people. That is a source of pride for eastern North Carolina.

Kinston has also set a standard for other eastern North Carolina cities, including Greenville. New Bern, a Kinston neighbor, did well in the All-American cities competition and received an honorable mention. Greenville entered and, by so doing, we took a close look at ourselves.

Communities of the east, whether or not they want to enter competition, should study their needs and do their best to improve themselves. A good way to do it is to determine the community's worst problem and then marshal the public support to do something about it. If every eastern North Carolina city can improve in some way in the next year we will all be winners.

Trade Summit Will Be Reagan's Finale

TORONTO (AP) — Even if the United States were not the most powerful of the West's "Big 7" nations, Ronald Reagan's easy master-of-ceremonies manner would make him the natural center of attraction at the economic summit that opens Sunday.

That's the way it has been since Reagan's first session with the leaders of Canada, Britain, France, Italy, Japan and West Germany in Montebello back in 1981.

The new president fought hard at his first summit for "Reaganomics" although his tough monetary policy was a bitter pill for some of his partners. Reagan prevailed.

In 1983, on his home turf at Williamsburg, Va., Reagan ran into a momentary challenge from Canada's Pierre Trudeau, who grumbled about the muscular U.S. foreign policy and said the participants should be working as hard as they can for peace.

But the summiteers wound up endorsing Reagan's plan to deploy new nuclear missiles in Europe. Trudeau backed off, and he won't be at the table to needle the president this time.

In 1985, in Tokyo, Reagan steered the Big 7 into a strong statement against terrorism. Two years later, it is no longer a controversial issue.

One of the few hard decisions expected here is a declaration that governments should not allow airplane hijackers to refuel. The idea is to carry the U.S. no-place-to-hide policy a step further.

The allies, with the exception of Britain's Margaret Thatcher, usually are not that eager to take a militant stand against terrorism. Reagan's biggest accomplishment in his seven economic summits may be lining them up in Tokyo.

But this time it may be a little different. It is Reagan's last round with Mrs. Thatcher and the other summiteers and he is beginning to take on the mantle of an amiable lame duck.

He will not try to rally his democratic partners to an economic or foreign policy crusade. The agenda is carefully scripted to avoid controversy. And while it cannot be guaranteed to come out that way, the 14th summit of the industrialized democracies will be strong on conviviality and short on decisions.

In a sense, this is a tribute to Reagan's ability to promote his free-enterprise views as well as to America's strength.

Japan and West Germany, bowing to U.S. pressure, are now buying more American goods, and help to Third World debtor nations may take the form of grants or debt forgiving, and not government-subsidized interest rate reductions that the Reagan administration opposes.

For next week's summit, there is an implicit agreement to push the host, Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, to center stage. Mulroney, facing federal elections in less than 15 months, hopes to profit politically from the summit, and discord would not be the way to demonstrate his skills as a Western leader.

He has pushed divisive foreign policy issues into the background, and will try to lead the summit into a quiet discussion of technical economic problems.

At least one could be explosive. The United States would like to bring down agricultural subsidies, and there could be a wrangle with France and West Germany, which are determined to protect their farmers.

But this issue might be sidestepped as requiring further study, and the three-day meeting is apt to be a pleasant closing act on the world stage for Reagan. The biggest concern as the seven leaders head here has nothing to do with economics or foreign policy. It is the plague of our age: terrorism.

The Canadian hosts are taking security precautions. Without the proper credentials, it will be impossible to get within three city blocks of the downtown convention center where the leaders will meet.

And they will hold their discussions in a windowless underground room, presumably out of harm's way.

Barry Schweid, head of the AP's State Department staff, is covering his fourth economic summit meeting.

Politics Can Be A Bit Hypocritical

Craven told the conference that Sen. Richard Conder, D-Rockingham, was planning to introduce legislation creating preschool pilots, and he said defeat of the Conder bill would be essential.

The Republican legislator did not mention, however, that his very own political ally, Gov. Jim Martin, also a Republican, is one of the leading advocates of state-sponsored preschool and that he had included pilot preschool programs in his proposed budget. (Martin and Conder differ on their approaches to such a system.)

Before he gave the speech, Craven was asked why he did not plan to mention Martin also. Was he afraid to give the governor a bit of bad publicity in an election year?

Craven said he wasn't and that he would add criticism of the Martin plan when he delivered the speech. But after the speech, when he was asked if he'd included mention of Martin, he said he hadn't. He was asked to keep his remarks to three minutes, he said, and that barely gave him time to make his points on preschool — and to mention the name of Conder, the Democrat.

Later that afternoon, Martin said the family conference warmly accepted his remarks in favor of

A troubling feature in the teaching of many television preachers and healers is the belief that God wants us all to be healthy and prosperous.

At first glance, it seems reasonable that a loving God would, above all things, want his children to be healthy, free of pain, prosperous and happy. However, if you think about it, to remain healthy, prosperous and productive throughout our life is unattainable.

We are destined to grow old and to die. Usually death comes from some disease process. It is unlikely, preschool. He also said that he didn't know Craven opposed his plan.

It's unbelievable what you can learn just by hanging around the Legislative Building. Consider these remarks, made by Rep. Vernon Abernethy, R-Gaston, on the floor of the House.

He distributed 12-ounce bottles of honey to the other members and then praised the honey industry. He closed with this remarkable sentence:

"So please accept this 12 ounces of honey, manufactured and purified in stomachs of insects that have collectively flown 60,000 to 90,000 miles per therefore, that the God who established this order wills us never to be sick. Fortunately, God has more vision than we do. Health and wealth don't rank all that high on his agenda. Scripture says that God's ultimate plan is to reconcile all creation in Christ.

God's most supreme purpose in your life, therefore, is not to make things easy, not to make your life pain-free, not to make you wealthy, not even to make you happy. His plan, simply put, is to draw you towards him and to make you like himself.

container through field, forest and family garden, to produce this pure honey for you."

The first name of Rep. Edd Nye, D-Bladen, is often misspelled in news accounts, the second "d" often being misplaced.

So this reporter asked Nye the origin of the odd spelling. "Is it a family name, short for something else?"

No, Nye reported. The second "d" was his own idea. "My name is Ed. Just plain Ed, not Edward or Edmond. The physician (at birth) just put Ed down on my birth certificate E-D."

THE UNRELENTING & CEASELESS DIPLOMATIC PRESSURE ON NORIEGA TO RESIGN CONTINUES...

— Rowland Evans and Robert Novak —

U.S. May Use Direct Action On Noriega

WASHINGTON — Cuban infiltration of money and arms for Panama strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega may force the Reagan administration to try getting rid of him with direct action, an approach radically different from the failed inducements that have proven so costly to U.S. prestige and credibility.

The White House has not held a single top-level meeting since May 22 on how to break Noriega's stranglehold over his country. Thus, officials say privately, the Reagan administration has ended face-saving efforts to remove him via negotiations.

That suggests President Reagan may be considering less public means to stop the indicted drug-dealer's nose-thumbing at Uncle Sam. High officials are silent about what those means might be. But they confide that time is running out on the U.S. recovery of credibility as a great power. National prestige and U.S. influence in Latin America demand getting Noriega and Cuban dirty tricks out of Panama.

Cuban fingerprints are multiplying. Using highly sensitive intelligence only recently received here, administration officials have been able to reconstruct events on the night of April 12 at the Marine perimeter protecting the U.S. tank farm at Howard Air Force Base. The midnight firing, only about five kilometers from the Panama Canal, was briefly reported at the time by the Pentagon as a sporadic "firefight" of unknown origin or intensity.

In fact, that engagement pitted the small Marine detachment against an estimated "special force" of about 50 Cubans, known by their Soviet designation as "speznets."

Defensive flares were inadvertently tripped by the Cubans, giving the Marines fairly accurate lines of fire. Eight Cubans were wounded, one of whom later died. The wounded were taken by their officers under extraordinary secrecy to the Panama City military hospital of the Panama Defense Forces (PDF). The PDF, embodying the nation's entire military and political strength, is commanded by and constitutes the power source of Gen. Noriega.

Under cover of darkness the following night, all eight Cubans (including the one who died) were spirited out of the hospital under direct supervision of the first secretary of the Cuban Embassy. U.S. officials told us they were placed aboard a Cuban vessel at the Pacific end of the Canal and shipped immediately back to Cuba.

That incident points up dangerous possibilities of Cuban intervention if the U.S. struggle to oust Noriega ever turns into full-scale military combat. It has been completely hushed up, both here and in Panama. Officials in position to know the facts refuse to speculate on whether it was an isolated event or perhaps one of several efforts by Cuban "speznets" to penetrate or at least test U.S. defenses in the Canal Zone. That would provide vital information for any assault trying to overrun the Marines.

Also hushed up is a report that Noriega has approved stationing a secret Cuban transmitting station in the Panama jungles manned by the DGI, the Cuban intelligence service. U.S. officials also say it is incontrovertible that Cuban and Panamanian aircraft, mostly the U.S.-made Boeing 727, make frequent runs between Cuba and Panama; they often carry Soviet or Eastern bloc weapons such as the AK-47 automatic rifle to Noriega's PDF or for pre-positioning against the possibility of future conflict.

The current theory that the Reagan administration is unconcerned about these events stems from the absence of public posturing against Noriega since failure of "plea-bargaining" to get him out of Panama in return for cancellation of his drug indictment.

The last meeting of the National Security Planning Group (NSPG) on the Panama crisis was chaired by the president in the West Parlor of the White House on Sunday, May 22, before the Moscow summit. No new meeting has been scheduled.

That implies policymaking has gone underground, as Reagan himself obliquely suggested it might as that Sunday session in the White House living quarters ended. Once again Secretary of State George Shultz had been unable to persuade Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci that force was essential to exorcise the Noriega devil. The president's two top advisers had been able to agree only on the passive route of negotiations.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Reagan himself raised this question: What do we do if Noriega won't deal? What if he decides to sit there?

Referring to Shultz's long-standing plea for using force against Noriega, one of Reagan's advisers replied: Well, Mr. President, George Shultz had some ideas about what we could do. Yes, said Shultz with heavy sarcasm, but "I thought those were hare-brained schemes."

One month later, policy may now finally be moving the way Shultz always wanted, away from negotiations and toward some form of direct action. Nobody is yet spelling it out, but Cuban meddling is pushing a reluctant Washington that way.

Strength For Today

Martin Says He'll Keep Pushing For Requests Cut Out Of Budget

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin says about half of the spending programs he sought have been included in the 1988-89 state budget, but he plans to continue pushing for the other half despite claims by legislators they would unbalance the budget.

"I am very hopeful that we will be able to get some of these items in the budget," Martin said Thursday. "We've not given up."

The Legislature has already approved a $274.2 million budget for continuing programs, but Martin he said he hoped money for his other projects could be inserted in a one-year spending bill for building and maintenance programs. Although that move would assure them only one year of funding, they could be considered for permanent funding next year, he said.

But Democratic legislative leaders said Martin was too late.

"Basically, they're dead," Senate Majority Leader Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, said of Martin's proposed appropriations.

Proposals left out of the budget range from hiring additional intensive probation officers to improving state services for the elderly.

"We'll continue to try to raise some of these issues, maybe a declining number of them each day, to see if there's some way we can get them funded," Martin said at a news conference.

He said he was optimistic about chances for slipping money into the budget for the probation and parole officers, industrial development and tourist recruiting programs in the Department of Commerce and services for elderly citizens.

The omnibus bill, signed into law Thursday by Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan and House Speaker Liston Ramsey, adds money to the operating budget — the portion of the state budget that pays for continuing fixtures such as employee salaries.

The Legislature is expected to approve two other spending measures — one that will allocate roughly $173 million for one-year items and another for lawmakers' pet local projects.

There also will be a package of instructions to state agencies and departments on how to spend the money in the budget bills.

Those measures will be unveiled by the legislative leadership next week, according to Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Aaron Plyler, D-Union.

Rand and Plyler, who accused Martin of submitting a budget plan last month that would put the state budget in the red, said his proposal to use one-time money for ongoing programs would have the same effect.

"What they're saying is we'll unbalance the budget, put non-recurring money in recurring items," Rand said. "It's the most dangerous thing you can do in this sort of budgetary process. You set up programs and the economy flattens out and you have a little downturn, and you're put in the position of firing people."

Plyler said, "We can't get into deficit spending. It seems some people just don't understand that you can't spend every bit of your money on recurring items. I know he's searching hard for money, but it's not our fault that he came out and made the predictions he did to start with."

Meanwhile, Martin said he would accept the pay increase he'll receive as part of the overall 4.5 percent raise given state employees and teachers under the budget bill.

The increase will make his annual salary $109,725, making him one of the two highest-paid governors in the nation. The other, New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, has returned some of the money to his state. Martin said he would not do that.

"I've not done that," he said. "I've had people raise with me some political reasons for doing it. I've never felt the job should be demeaned in that way, whatever job I had. ... I'll do my best to earn whatever pay there is."

Legislative Report '88

Tank Bill Approved

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill that supporters say would regulate leaky underground storage tanks but opponents say would take some of the burden for their clean-up off the petroleum industry has been approved by a Senate committee.

"I think it will address a problem that is really teetering on disaster," Rep. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, one of the sponsors, told the Senate Finance Committee Thursday. "Time is not on our side."

The bill, which now must go to the Joint Appropriations Committee, would create a $4.5 million fund to clean up leaking underground commercial tanks. That fund would come from annual fees paid by owners or operators of those tanks.

It also would provide $4 million from the state's General Fund to clean up leaking residential underground tanks and other such non-regulated tanks.

Sen. Richard Conder, D-Richmond, told the committee when it considered the bill Wednesday that the measure called for oil companies to assume liability for the first $100,000 of cleanup costs of leaks from commercial storage tanks. Proceeds from the fund would be used for cleanup costs between $100,000 and $900,000.

Bill Holman, lobbyist for the Conservation Council of North Carolina and the state chapter of the Sierra Club, had said he would like to see tougher standards applied to the tanks in exchange for the bill. He said the bill limited the responsibility of the industry to clean up the leaky tanks.

House Committee OKs Sales Tax On Out-Of-State Orders

By MARTHA WAGGONER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — A bill to force out-of-state retailers to collect sales taxes on mail-order items also could force North Carolinians to pay up to $58 million more in sales taxes in 1989, but supporters said the measure was not a tax increase.

Instead, the bill — which passed the House Finance Committee Thursday — would allow the state to collect taxes already due from consumers, supporters said. It would shift the responsibility for paying those taxes from the consumer to the retailer.

"Clearly taxes are not being collected that are due to be collected," from the consumer, Myron Banks of the state Department of Revenue said at a subcommittee meeting of the Finance Committee. " ... Those taxes are in fact due. They are just literally uncollectable. ... We do have to recognize that a large amount of money is being lost in the area of use taxes because they cannot presently be collected under the law."

Meanwhile, the Senate Finance Committee approved a bill that would change the formula for reimbursing cities and counties for money lost when the Legislature removed the property tax on business inventories.

Currently, out-of-state retailers such as L.L. Bean and Land's End do not pay sales taxes in North Carolina unless they have a "presence" — such as a store or registered agent — in the state.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, would require any retailer who "purposely exploits" the North Carolina market by actions such as advertising in the state or sending mail-order catalogs to pay the state 3 percent sales tax and the local 2 percent sales tax. It would affect items ordered by "mail, telephone, computer link or other similar method."

CAPTURED — Fayetteville police escort Gregory Maurice Lee from an apartment on Murchison Road early today after his capture as an escapee from the county jail. Three other prisoners who fled with Lee and two other men remain at large. (AP Laserphoto)

Fayetteville Police Capture Escapee; Three Still Sought

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Authorities today captured the third of six men who broke out of the Cumberland County jail this week, but the search went on for escapees including a former soldier convicted in two ninja-style slayings.

Gregory Maurice Lee, 30, of Fayetteville, offered no resistance when he was arrested this morning at a Fayetteville apartment, said Lt. William Barefoot, watch commander with the Fayetteville Police Department. Lee, who was serving time for first-degree burglary, larceny and assault on a female, was located with the help of a telephone tip. Barefoot said.

Cumberland County Sheriff Morris Bedsole said Thursday lawmen believe the remaining escapees are still in Cumberland County.

"We're getting all kinds of sightings from different parts of the county," Bedsole said.

As lawmen continued their search, county officials said security measures are being tightened to prevent future escapes.

Bedsole said a hand-held metal detector is now being used in the jail, and other metal detecting devices are being considered for installation. Officials are also adding more television monitors and steel bars to the jail, and the chief jailer's office is being moved inside the lockup.

The new measures resulted from an investigation ordered by Bedsole that found two 12-inch-long metal hacksaws were smuggled into the jail inside of a jigsaw puzzle sent through the mail. A deputy jailer failed to unwrap and examine the puzzle as guidelines require, Bedsole said.

"The deputy is a good, reliable person who made a mistake," said Bedsole, who did not identify the officer.

Deputies, assisted by Fayetteville police and state and federal agents, are hunting for 21-year-old Jeffrey Karl Meyer of Wake County, one of two soldiers accused in the ninja-style murders of a Cumberland County couple in December 1976. Meyer has been convicted of first-degree murder in the slayings, but escaped before a jury could decide whether he receive a life sentence or the death penalty.

Also being hunted are Ricky Allen Wilson, 30, of Hope Mills, who was being held on charges of breaking, entering and larceny and possession of stolen goods and Jerry Ronald Pond Jr., 21, of Fayetteville, accused of murdering a pawn shop employee in January.

The men escaped from their cell block on the fourth floor of the Law Enforcement Center on Sunday night after they used hacksaw blades to cut through a floor-level piece of steel and kick out a portion of a bar, authorities said. They fashioned a rope out of knotted bedsheets to crawl down the building's side.

One of the escapees, 20-year-old Frederick Glenn Evans of Fayetteville, fell during the escape and was seriously hurt. He was left behind by his companions, who fled from the area, and is in a hospital ward at Central Prison with severe leg and back injuries.

Another escapee, Jeffrey Minnick, 22, a West Virginia native, was captured early Wednesday morning by deputies on a stakeout near a mobile home park where he had lived with a relative for a short period of time before his arrest last year.

Minnick is charged with a first-degree sex offense, second-degree rape and common law robbery. He has been held in isolation at the jail since his capture and is charged with escape, Bedsole said.

Dog Killer Will Work In Kennel

BURGAU, N.C. (AP) — A Pender County man who pleaded guilty to killing 15 hunting dogs owned by his neighbor has been sentenced to work in a kennel until he pays $5,200 in restitution, a sentence that could take up to nine years.

"He needs to do some sort of work with a kennel until he gets his restitution paid so he can think about it," District Court Judge Charles Rice said Thursday during a sentencing hearing for John Wesley Hunt, 43.

James W. Lea III, Hunt's lawyer, suggested the kennel work as a community service project. He came up with the idea after Rice had told him to come up with a sentence he felt would satisfy the community and J.T. Carter Jr., the neighbor who owned the dogs.

"He made it real clear I had to make it unusual," Lea told the Wilmington Morning Star after the hearing.

Rice did not specify if Hunt would have to work on a volunteer or paid basis, which kennel he would work at or how many hours a week he had to serve. He did, however, say that Hunt would have to work there until he paid the restitution.

In addition, Rice gave Hunt a six-month suspended sentence and five years of unsupervised probation and ordered Hunt to make monthly payments of at least $50 to the court, which will in turn pass the money on to Carter.

Figuring the value of the dogs at $250 each, Carter said it would take Hunt about five months to pay for each of the dogs.

Hearing Ends

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Utilities Commission has concluded the longest hearing in its history and should decide by Aug. 5 whether Carolina Power & Light Co. prudently built the Shearon Harris Nuclear Power Plant in Wake County.

Consumer advocates and officials of CP&L have spent the last two months reviewing the 16 years of planning and construction of the $3.9 billion power plant in a debate over allegations that mismanagement in design of the plant and unreasonable delays in construction inflated the plant's price.

Now it is up to the seven-member Utilities Commission to decide if CP&L should recover its full investment in the 900-megawatt nuclear plant or if critics win their case to cut up to $880 million of CP&L's investment from the rate hike claim.

Democrat Objects To Martin's Use Of Plane, Trips

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin has used state aircraft for personal trips to his Lake Norman home and "Capital for a Day" programs that are nothing more than political junkets, a state Democratic official says.

But Martin denied misusing the aircraft, saying an auditor's report has shown that "the use of state aircraft by this governor and this administration is the cleanest that it's ever been."

"He (Martin) has used the office of governor and the taxpayers' money to fuel his political machine," Ken Eudy, the state Democratic executive director, said Thursday. "He has promised he would stop. But he hasn't."

Martin said it was Eudy who was playing politics.

The "Capital for a Day" program, under which the governor and other top state officials spend a day in a town outside Raleigh, has succeeded in giving people across the state better access to their leaders, he said.

Eudy said at a news conference the issues he was raising were the latest evidence that Martin "flip-flops" — regularly changing his positions.

In 1985, the newly inaugurated governor issued a memorandum on avoiding the appearance of impropriety. It required that all flights on state aircraft be for state business.

But in published reports, Martin acknowledged that state aircraft had flown him to his family home at Lake Norman on several occasions.

"The governor should assure the people that he will follow his own rules and keep his promises," Eudy said.

Eudy acknowledged that Martin had not been accused of using state aircraft for political trips as did his Democratic predecessor, Jim Hunt.

Hunt repaid the state $185,000 during his 1984 campaign for U.S. senator when a report stated his previous reimbursements were insufficient.

Martin said his was a 24-hour-a-day job and that he sometimes needed to make quick trips to Lake Norman. He said he had used state airplanes no more than five or six times a year for that purpose.

"It's a very modest place — probably a lot more modest than the home of any of those who offered that criticism today," Martin said. "Nevertheless, the grass needs to be cut, the fish need to be caught, the children need to be visited with, the water pump needs to be repaired and we do go there from time to time."

Eudy said Martin's political aide, Alan Pugh, had acknowledged in a news report that the "Capital for a Day" programs were designed largely for political gain. Pugh said the "junkets" would be stopped during the campaign but they have continued, Eudy said.

Wilmington Wet

WILMINGTON (AP) — All of North Carolina's primary weather stations have had below-normal rainfall, with one exception — Wilmington.

"Just been lucky" is the reason the area has escaped the drought, said Al Hinn, the meteorologist in charge of the National Weather Service office in Wilmington.

According to statewide figures compiled as of June 5, Wilmington was 3.9 inches above normal. Since then, another 1.2 inches has fallen.

Elsewhere in the state, dryness is recorded in rainfall figures ranging from 3.6 inches below normal in Raleigh to 8.9 inches below normal in Asheville.

From Jan. 1 to June 5, Asheville has had 10.4 inches of rain; Charlotte, 12.3; Greenboro, 12.4; Raleigh, 14.2; Wilmington, 23.

Ruling May Affect Superintendents' Contracts

WILMINGTON (AP) — Lawyers for the Pender County school board say a Superior Court judge's ruling could affect the contracts for more than a fourth of North Carolina's 140 school superintendents.

Judge David E. Reid Jr. Thursday invalidated the Pender board's 3-2 vote to renew superintendent Haywood Davis' contract because the action violated a state law prohibiting school boards from appointing superintendents in an election year.

"I think the effect of your ruling is to void the contracts of superintendents throughout the state," R.V. Biberstein Jr., Pender County school board attorney, told the judge following the ruling.

Biberstein said that at least 25 percent of the state's superintendents have contracts that expire during an election year and that Reid's ruling may invalidate those contracts. He told The Wilmington Morning Star the school board would appeal the ruling.

The decision came in response to a lawsuit by former board member Brenda D. Rivenbark challenging the board's vote. Mrs. Rivenbark was ousted from office April 8 following an investigation into allegations that she used undue influence to have her daughter's grades changed and that she wasn't discharging her duties because she works in Carrboro.

Two of the members who voted to renew Davis' contract in February — Charles Sidbury and board chairman Billy O. Rivenbark, who is not related to Brenda Rivenbark — will lose their seats this year. Sidbury did not seek re-election, and Rivenbark was defeated in the non-partisan election in May.

Reid said the statute plainly states that school boards can't appoint a superintendent during an election year, "and that's exactly what they did." He said he would let the General Assembly, "in its infinite wisdom," grapple with any confusion surrounding his interpretation.

The law, G.S. 115C-271, says that school boards may, with the written consent of the superintendent, extend or renew the contract at any time during the superintendent's last year, "provided, however, in any year when new members are to be elected or appointed, the board may not act until after the new members have been sworn in."

"It's really not up to the lame-duck members of the board to decide who the superintendent will be," said Mrs. Rivenbark's attorney, Terry B. Richardson. "It's clearly an illegal contract."

The law "is not the most artfully drafted statute," argued Richard Schwartz, a Raleigh lawyer representing the board in its actions against Mrs. Rivenbark. "The Legislature does not intend absurd results from its own statutes."

Store Closed

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The owner of a Winston-Salem adult bookstore has closed the business and pleaded guilty in Forsyth District Court to two misdemeanor charges after prosecutors agreed to drop felony obscenity counts against him.

District Attorney Warren Sparrow said that the deal accomplished the closing of one of the three adult bookstores in Winston-Salem. He said he believes that the store will stay closed and not reopen under new management as other adult bookstores in town have done.

Raymond Mitchell Floyd, 49, of Charlotte agreed not to own, operate or work for an adult establishment for five years as one of the conditions of his sentence. Fred J. McGuinness, 54, of Winston-Salem and a clerk at the book store, made a similar agreement with prosecutors and also pleaded guilty to misdemeanor charges Wednesday.

Both received suspended sentences and fines totaling $1,000 each.

VA Suit

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Negligence on the part of Asheville VA Medical Center in Oteen allowed a World War I veteran from Andrews to "wander away" to his death in 1984, according to a suit filed in U.S. District Court in Asheville.

The estate of Frank H. Mehaffey seeks more than $100,000 damages.

The former Andrews police chief walked out of a 30-bed psychiatric ward July 10, 1984. His skeleton was found May 12, 1986, in a wooded area of the Blue Ridge Parkway near the hospital.

Peach Crop

WHITEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Although a cool spring damaged the peach crop in portions of southeastern North Carolina, some growers expect the fruit to be plentiful.

Billy Batton, who grows peaches on about eight acres off U.S. 74-76 east of Whiteville, said the early clingstone variety may be in short supply. But he said the later free-stone peaches should be plentiful.

Batton began harvesting his crop about two weeks ago. The fruit should be more plentiful by late June when the freestones begin ripening, he said.

Retrial

ASHEVILLE (AP) — The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals has affirmed former U.S. District Judge David Sentelle's order that Isaac Welch Jr. be retried on kidnapping and attempted rape charges.

The court agreed with Sentelle that a "tainted juror" sat on the seven-woman, five-man jury that convicted Welch April 1983 in Madison County Superior Court of second-degree kidnapping and assault on a female with intent to commit rape.

The charges were filed in connection with an attack Sept. 2, 1981, on a Mars Hill coed. Then-Superior Court Judge John R. Friday of Lincolnton sentenced Welch to 12 years in prison.

Awards

WAKE FOREST, N.C. (AP) — The Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary chapter of the American Association of University Professors and the former president of the Wake Forest seminary will receive awards Saturday for their defense of academic freedom.

The seminary's chapter of the association will receive the Beatrice Konheim Award for its work over the past year in defending the principles of academic freedom during the 1988 annual meeting of the national group.

Dr. W. Randall Lolley, who was president of the seminary from 1974 until this past March, will receive the Alexander Meiklejohn Award for his "staunch defense of academic freedom in the face of attacks by the right wing Baptist fundamentalists who have gained control of the seminary's board of trustees," the association said.

Lolley announced his resignation in the wake of the dispute.

Poisoning

LILLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — An Angier man has been charged in connection with the weekend death of 16-year-old Jeffrey T. Williford, also of Angier, according to Harnett County Sheriff Lewis Rosser.

Harold Gray Partin, 20, was arrested at 5:10 p.m. Wednesday by Lt. John Atkins and Det. Frankie Beasley and charged with one count of voluntary manslaughter. He was detained at the Harnett County jail in lieu of $20,000 secured bond and was scheduled for first court appearance Thursday.

Williford died early Saturday or late Friday of alcohol poisoning, Rosser said. An autopsy by the state medical examiner's office revealed that the youth's blood alcohol content was 0.43.

Baptists Decry Abortion, Gays, 'New Age' Trend

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Eyeing the modern landscape, Southern Baptists see a host of evils: abortion, drug abuse, homosexuality, materialism, secular humanism, sexual promiscuity, rebellion against authority and the "New Age" movement.

These and other present-day manifestations were declared blights on human life as 32,727 "messengers" from the nation's largest Protestant denomination concluded their annual convention Thursday.

The New Age movement, a relatively recent arrival among the church's list of repudiated trends, was likened to an underlying disorder behind them all.

"The philosophy ... is as old as the Garden of Eden, where Satan perpetrated three of the false beliefs of the New Age movement, promising you will be wise, you will be as gods and you will not die," a convention resolution said.

It said the movement "has become a powerful political, philosophical and economic force in our contemporary culture and is exerting its influence into every facet of American life."

While its aim is to "become a one-world religion," it is "diametrically contrary to both New Testament Christianity and our American heritage," the resolution said.

It said the movement "gives people false hope by its beliefs in reincarnation, (and) in endeavoring to reveal a person's future through astrology, fortune telling and palm reading."

Other purported beliefs of the New Age movement listed by the resolution are that there are "many ways to eternal life, and that all will be saved by secular humanism, which testifies by its own manifesto (that) no deity will save us, we must save ourselves."

The media and entertainment industry "gives the New Age movement widespread acceptance and credibility, helping it find its way into every facet of American life," the resolution said.

It was among a score of resolutions deploring an "erosion of moral sanity" adopted by the annual convention of the 14.7-million-member denomination.

The five-day meeting, including two preliminary days of virtually non-stop preaching and auxiliary conferences, featured a running conflict between fundamentalist and moderate factions of the divided denomination.

It was the 10th year in which fundamentalists predominated in the convention's presidential election, which was won by the Rev. Jerry Vines of Jacksonville, Fla., and in approving measures pushed by their camp.

A resolution that was exceptionally disturbing to moderates puts limitations on a classic Protestant concept, the "priesthood of the believer," which asserts equal rights and authority of laity and clergy.

The convention declared that "misunderstanding and abuse" of the doctrine had undermined the authority of pastors over their congregations.

This prompted sharp protests from moderates, who charged it betrayed a principle of the 16th century Protestant reformation.

Report Says U.S. Hired, Protected Nazis To Monitor Soviets' Activity

By DAVID BRISCOE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Army hired high-ranking Nazi secret police officers, stormtroopers, propagandists and collaborators after World War II and protected them behind an official cloak of secrecy, according to a harshly critical Justice Department report.

The report says U.S. military intelligence employed the Nazis to provide information and monitor Soviet activity in occupied nations after the war, protecting them from prosecution for war crimes including torturing and murdering civilians.

The report focuses at length on the U.S. Army's Counter-Intelligence Corps' hiring of convicted Nazi war criminal Robert Jan Verbelen, and its continued employment of him even after he admitted having been a member of a Nazi security unit that was declared a criminal organization.

The Justice Department listed 13 individuals, in addition to Verbelen, but did not identify any of the others by name. The information was based on official documents and interviews with former CIC agents, but the department said the information remains classified under U.S. policies to protect the identity of intelligence operatives.

Prepared by the Criminal Division's Office of Special Investigations, the 92-page report said Verbelen was paid by CIC for 10 years, from 1946 to 1957, for intelligence work in Austria even though he was convicted in absentia and sentenced to death for the murders of 101 people in his native Belgium.

The report said Verbelen, now 77 and living in Austria, "manipulated the CIC into protecting him from being brought to justice for his crimes."

"He was able to accomplish this ... as a direct result of the CIC's reliance upon former Nazi and Nazi collaborators in its immediate postwar European operations," the report said.

It said the CIC initially relied on the information Verbelen gave about himself, including the name he gave, Peter Mayer. But in 1950, he informed the agency his name was really Herbert Schwab, describing himself as a devoted Nazi Party member since the mid-1930s and a member of a Nazi security unit that had been declared a criminal organization, the report said.

"Despite this change in identity and life history, the (CIC) made no attempt to verify the information Verbelen supplied about himself, and it continued to employ him," the report said.

Neal Sher, special investigations director who conducted the study at the request of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, said the report already has been given to the Belgian and Austrian governments.

The report said the Army intelligence group discovered Verbelen's true identity or to give any other information about CIA involvement with Verbelen.

Sher, at a news conference, declined to say how long the CIA had known Verbelen's true identity or to give any other information about CIA involvement with Verbelen.

Sher said Justice Department investigators interviewed Verbelen himself in the summer of 1965 and found him unrepentant. "He thinks he has nothing to be ashamed of," Sher said.

He said the investigation was not related to any modern intelligence-gathering efforts and was not meant to be judgmental. But he said some conclusions "cry out."

The report said the CIC followed a policy that "the end justifies the means."

"It is difficult to understand why the CIC did not make a greater effort to check those persons' backgrounds, particularly as it had ready access to Nazi Party, SS, and German military files," the report said.

"The CIC's logic must also be questioned in its apparent assumption that a fascist would be more loyal to a democratic government than to a communist one," the report said.

It said in Verbelen's case, it would have been impossible for the agency to determine his value as an informant since it made no effort to find out who he really was.

Among the agents and informants hired by CIC in Austria, according to the report, were:

—A former Gestapo official sentenced to two years in prison for high treason.

—A pre-war fascist leader whom CIC protected from arrest even though he had been accused of being deputy commander of a unit that burned villages and murdered civilians.

—The chief of security of an unidentified Nazi puppet state who headed an arms plant that used slave labor.

—A man accused of torturing several people, including two priests.

—Two former SS officers who are now believed to have manufactured information so they could work as informants.

—An Austrian police official who used his job to protect Nazis from arrest.

—A former SS and Gestapo officer who it was later found was selling the same information to the British and French while all the time being primarily loyal to the Soviets.

Edward Dennis, head of the department's Criminal Division, said the investigation was done as thoroughly as possible, "regardless of who that will embarrass or make uncomfortable."

CLEARED — Former Arizona Gov. Evan Mecham waves to a crowd gathered in the Maricopa County Superior Courtroom after he and his brother were acquitted of charges involving concealment of a $350,000 campaign loan. Mecham says the verdict convinces him there is "justice in Arizona." (AP Laserphoto)

Mecham, Brother Win Acquittal

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Former Gov. Evan Mecham says his acquittal on charges of concealing a $350,000 campaign loan shows "justice can occur in Arizona" when the politicians who removed him from office are not involved.

A state jury on Thursday cleared Mecham and his brother, Willard, on all counts.

The first-term Republican became the first U.S. governor to be impeached and removed from office in 59 years on April 4 when the Arizona Senate convicted him on two unrelated impeachment counts.

The House impeached him in connection with the $350,000 loan to his 1986 campaign, but the Senate decided not to hear that charge for fear of prejudicing his criminal trial.

"Justice can occur in Arizona when you get to the people and outside the politicians," Mecham, 64, told reporters outside the Maricopa County courthouse Thursday. "We're happy, we're happy. You're always apprehensive but not really surprised."

Assistant Attorney General Barnett Lotstein, one of two prosecutors in the case, said he had "no quarrel with the decision."

"We believe we presented a responsible case that had to be presented. We obviously felt we had a good case. A lot of the people in this community feel that he has suffered enough, and perhaps that was a factor," Lotstein said outside the courtroom.

As the verdict was read, Mecham smiled broadly and embraced his attorney, Michael Scott, hugged his wife, Florence, then walked over to the jurors and shook their hands.

As Superior Court Judge Michael Ryan declared the trial over, Mecham's supporters cheered. Scott asked Ryan whether Mecham could make a statement, but the judge refused, saying, "This is a court of law, Mr. Scott."

Mecham acknowledged he did not itemize the loan from developer and lawyer Barry Wolfson on personal or campaign financial statements required by the state.

U.S. Plan To Drop Subsidies Opposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top administration official acknowledged today that the United States is facing intense opposition in its efforts to eliminate farm subsidies worldwide but he said the fact the matter was even being discussed was encouraging.

At the seven-nation economic summit, which begins Sunday in Toronto, President Reagan will again propose an elimination of what he calls the farms race, the $150 billion industrial countries are spending every year to subsidize agricultural products.

Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III said today in a broadcast interview with foreign journalists that the farm subsidy issue would receive a "full-fledged" discussion at the three-day summit.

Baker said the United States hoped to receive a commitment from the other countries to move forward with negotiations begun two years ago as part of worldwide trade liberalization talks. He said this would be similar to a pledge made last month by 24 industrial countries at a Paris meeting.

Judge Ready For Iran-Contra Trials To Begin

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Stressing the prosecution's "good faith" in safeguarding the rights of Oliver L. North and three co-defendants, a federal judge says it's time for the Iran-Contra cases to go to trial.

U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell on Thursday cleared the way for the four separate trials he has ordered by rejecting defendants' claims that prosecutors violated their constitutional rights.

Gesell still must rule on defense motions that unprecedented volumes of classified material will make trials impossible. But his ruling left virtually no doubt that he plans to proceed.

Independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh has chosen North, the fired National Security Council staffer who directed the Iran-Contra affair, to be tried first. Gesell is expected to set a trial date in the next few weeks. "We are, of course, pleased with Judge Gesell's ruling," Walsh said. "We are prepared to go forward as directed by the court."

Thursday's ruling centered on defense contentions that Walsh built his case on testimony given to Congress by three of the defendants under grants of limited immunity from prosecution.

Congress grants the immunity in order to compel testimony of reluctant witnesses — in this case, North, former National Security Adviser John M. Poindexter and arms dealer Albert Hakim. The fourth defendant, businessman Richard V. Secord, testified without immunity.

As a tradeoff for the immunity, the prosecution in a criminal case is barred from using the compelled testimony, except to show perjury. The defense claimed that Walsh violated the immunity law by building his case from the immunized testimony.

Gesell rejected the claim, and praised Walsh for taking extraordinary measures to make sure the prosecution staff, grand jury witnesses, and grand jurors were not exposed to the immunized testimony.

"Nothing has developed in the court's preliminary inquiry ... which suggests the defendants who received use immunity have had their Fifth Amendment rights impaired in a manner that significantly affects their right to a fair trial," Gesell ruled.

"The good faith of independent counsel cannot be questioned on this record," Gesell said, adding, he was left with "no doubt" that Walsh followed "a vigorous program aimed at minimizing the exposure of himself and his prosecutorial staffs to immunized testimony."

"Given these factual circumstances, it is not difficult to reach a preliminary decision that the case should proceed to trial."

The defendants sought to have the case dismissed, or, alternatively, a full-blown pre-trial hearing on the issue. Gesell said the tainted testimony question could be pursued after the Iran-Contra trials are over.

Gesell had ordered separate trials for the four defendants several weeks ago, to preserve a defendant's usual trial privilege of cross-examining other defendants. This would allow the defendants to use each other's immunized testimony.

The defendants are charged with a broad conspiracy to carry out a secret operation of aiding the Nicaraguan Contra rebels when such assistance was banned by law. To do so, the grand jury charged, they illegally used profits from arms sales to Iran authorized by President Reagan. Some of those profits also went for personal gain, the indictment said.

According to Gesell, there was "ample probable cause" for each count of the indictment.

He said "the great bulk of the evidence was clearly known" to Walsh before any defendant received immunity. Ironically, he said, much of Walsh's independent evidence came from Secord, who "went into extraordinarily comprehensive detail" about the case, and provided prosecutors "with valuable leads and other background information for its case."

Gesell said the grand jurors were so keenly aware of the tainted evidence problem that the foreman had told prosecutors jurors would walk out of the room if immunized testimony were presented.

Walsh has admitted in pre-trial hearings that at times he and his staff became inadvertently exposed to media coverage of the testimony. All such incidents were reported to one of his staffers, whose only role was to keep a log of the 75 incidents. Only two or three had "any semblance of meaningful significance," the judge found.

Gesell said defendants, "in their zeal," believed "even the tiniest exposure to a witness or grand juror constituted exposure to an incurable disease. Such is clearly not the case. Exposure to a fleeting snippet means nothing."

Hacker Sets Off Alarm

L.A. Times-Washington Post

LOS ANGELES — A "hacker" prowling through a network that connects thousands of computers at American military installations, defense contractors, think tanks and universities broke into the Jet Propulsion Laboratory computer system last month, provoking a scramble for safeguards that a laboratory executive said may eventually cost millions of dollars.

Investigators know the intruder violated at least three computer systems, including one belonging to the U.S. Navy, in a single foray, but they have not determined if even more systems were involved, a JPL spokesman said Thursday.

"It could be a series of penetrations," said JPL Deputy Director Peter Lyman.

A spokeswoman for the Department of Defense said the Pentagon is investigating the break-in because it "regards any attempt to gain unauthorized access to computer systems as serious."

JPL officials first blamed the intrusion on the Chaos Computer Club, based in Hamburg, West Germany. The club of "hackers" — who use personal computers and telephone links to gain unauthorized access to other peoples' computers — has admitted breaking into NASA computer systems last year.

A JPL spokesman later backed away from the allegation, saying the break-in bore similarities to Chaos techniques, but also differences.

Meese Says Indictments Expected By Fall In Pentagon Bribery Case

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese III anticipates indictments within 90 days in the massive Pentagon bribery probe that a senator today called the "most serious case in the history of the Department of Defense."

Sen. John Warner, a former Navy secretary and the ranking Republican on the Senate Armed Services Committee, said he was briefed Thursday by federal law enforcement officials about the case, which is focusing on the alleged sale of secret information to defense contractors through their paid consultants.

Warner, R-Va., said on CBS-TV's "This Morning," that it was "the most widespread case I or anyone else has ever seen because you've got literally dozens upon dozens of contractors ... and literally hundreds and hundreds of people are now being subpoenaed."

"It is the most serious case in the history of the Department of Defense ... it is widespread and it is deep," Warner said.

An unusually detailed search warrant, made public Thursday, says much of the confidential information was improperly funneled to McDonnell Douglas Corp. The warrant was one of 38 served this week on 15 defense contractors, half a dozen Pentagon personnel and consultants.

According to the warrant, information was passed along by former Pentagon official Melvyn Paisley, assistant secretary of the Navy for research, engineering and systems from 1981 to April 1987. Paisley is now a Washington consultant to numerous defense contractors.

McDonnell Douglas did $7.7 billion worth of Pentagon business in fiscal 1987, making it the nation's largest defense contractor. The warrant says McDonnell Douglas received confidential information on several Pentagon programs including the $35 billion Advanced Tactical Aircraft manufacturing competition won by the St. Louis company.

Escapees Plotted Plan Over Months

EDDYVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Four convicted killers and four other inmates who fled Kentucky's maximum-security prison may have spent months plotting their elaborate escape plan from the 105-year-old fortress, officials say.

"They had no hope of leaving legally anytime soon. They had nothing else to do but spend their time thinking of a way to get out," Jack Wood, a spokesman for the Kentucky State Penitentiary, said after Thursday's escape.

Prison officials are usually able to prevent escape attempts because they "hear the rumblings that something's going on" and then conduct searches that turn up contraband or homemade equipment that could be used in an escape, said Kentucky State Penitentiary Warden William Seabold.

"But the number (of escapees) and the avenue they took would indicate it was well-planned and not a spur-of-the-moment escape attempt," Seabold said.

The eight are believed to have split up after what authorities say was the largest prison escape in state history. The search for the inmates was focused within two miles of the prison, and there were no confirmed sightings of the escapees as of early today, said Bobby Waller, another prison spokesman.

At least nine other inmates also attempted to flee the prison, authorities said.

The penitentiary, about 200 miles southwest of Louisville on Lake Barkley, was built in 1883 and has undergone several additions and renovations over the years. It is surrounded on three sides by water and on the fourth by woods, but no wall or fence enclosed the cellblock from which the eight fled.

Women Priests Increase

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Three decades after breaking the all-male tradition in the Church of Sweden, more and more women are becoming priests, and some think the clergy could become a female profession.

The Lutheran state church was one of the last bastions of conservatism to yield to feminism in this open-minded country, where sexual equality has long been a watchword.

Krister Stendahl, the bishop of Stockholm and former dean of the Harvard Divinity School, calls it a blessing that a growing number of women are wearing the white collar.

"One of the exciting things in our times and in theology is that women are beginning to think not just equal to men, but are trying to find whether they have insights" which men do not have, the bishop told Swedish radio.

Annicka Kronberg, a former actress ordained in January, said she found "most men in my group (at divinity school) understood the value of having more women and how we can enrich the language, the forms and behavior" in church.

Ms. Kronberg's decision to leave a successful stage career for the pulpit has drawn attention to the dramatic change since 1960 when the first woman was ordained.

In the Stockholm Diocese, which sponsors special "feminist services," nearly half of the 481 priests are women. Women comprise about 20 percent of the 4,913 priests throughout the country.

Last year, 43 women were among the 96 graduates of the Theological Institute of Uppsala University. The female enrollment was 53 percent, up from 38 percent 10 years ago, and the school has introduced a course on "feminine theology."

"The question is now whether women priests are not actually becoming the majority," said Eva Brunne, 34, a church official whose work includes promoting feminist views in the church service.

A predominance of women has pitfalls, said Ms. Brunne. "It would mean that the priesthood would become more and more of a nursing profession," and the authoritative "father" image of the priest might be lost, she said.

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the Book of Esther, intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times.

EVIL HAMAN

WHEN THE JEWS IN THE PERSIAN KINGDOM HEAR THE DECREE CONDEMNING THEM TO DEATH, THEY PUT ON SACKCLOTH AND ASHES TO MOURN....

THE NEWS OF THIS DECREE TRAVELS FAST THROUGHOUT THE CITY

WE MUST TELL THIS TO THE QUEEN!

YES! IT IS SOMETHING NEW TO TALK ABOUT—THERE'S BEEN NO FRESH GOSSIP FOR WEEKS!

SO THE NEWS REACHES ESTHER, THE BEAUTIFUL QUEEN—THE FAVORITE OF KING AHASUERUS—AND ALSO THE NIECE OF MORDECAI, THE JEW! FOR IT WAS MORDECAI WHO RAISED ESTHER FROM A LITTLE CHILD TO THE BEAUTIFUL WOMAN WHOM AHASUERUS PICKED TO BE HIS QUEEN! AND, TO THIS DAY, NO ONE IN THE CITY OF SHUSHAN OR EVEN THE PALACE, ITSELF, HAS KNOWN THAT MORDECAI IS THE QUEEN'S UNCLE!

...INCLUDING MORDECAI, WHO HAS SERVED THE KING FAITHFULLY AS AN OFFICIAL IN THE PALACE GATE...

...AND NOW THE QUEEN'S HANDMAIDS HEAR OF IT....

Budget Proposal

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Members of the N.C. Conference of the United Methodist Church have received a $7.2 million budget proposal on the opening day of its annual session at Methodist College.

The conference is meeting a week later than normal this year in an effort to improve youth and lay participation. More than 1,800 United Methodists from 56 counties in eastern North Carolina are expected for the four-day session.

The voting members are equally divided between clergy and lay people.

As proposed by the Council on Finance and Administration, the conference budget is 6 percent larger than the amount being raised this year. The budget will be raised in 1989 and spent in 1990.

Bishop Roy C. Clark, resident bishop of the Columbia, S.C. area, preached at a worship service Thursday evening. He will also preach Saturday evening and during the ordination service Sunday morning.

Bishop C.P. Minnick, Jr., resident bishop of the Raleigh Area is presiding over the annual meeting, the theme of which is "Celebrating Vital Congregations — Faithful Disciples."

3:00 p.m. — Rev. Thomas Dixon, Bells Chapel, Holy Church, Greenville, N.C. will deliver the evening message. The Winterville Male Chorus will render the music. Holy Communion will be immediately following the evening service

Stricken Artist's Work Accepted For Display

By BINKY STRICKLAND
The Union-Recorder
MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga. (AP) — Barbara Batchelor rocks back and forth at a frantic pace. Her hands grip the arms of the chair; her bare toes stab at the floor, keeping the momentum going. Here on the front porch of her grandmother's house in Milledgeville, Batchelor cannot imagine what things are like at the Statue of Liberty in New York City. She cannot picture millions of people looking at her painting, "Bicentennial Fourth of July," which recently was accepted into the Statue of Liberty museum.

"I don't know what to say about it," she said. "I really can't relate to what has happened."

Batchelor's painting, which depicts the statue rising behind a throng of people from all ethnic and religious backgrounds, was accepted into the museum in March.

Steven Czarniecki, curator of collections, said works by artists such as Batchelor are accepted because of the quality of the work and because of its "associative" value, or the story connected with the painting.

The story behind Batchelor's painting is one of courage and persistence.

The 37-year-old woman was stricken as an adult with a rare genetic muscle disorder that makes even simple tasks, like picking up a pencil, difficult. At times, her muscles are so rigid, her feet are drawn into a bow and her hands are in a viselike grip. After an acute spasm, Batchelor is left weak and sore as though she has been through hard physical exercise.

A Milledgeville physician, Dr. Jose Delgado, diagnosed the illness several years ago, and since then Batchelor has been seeing specialists in Augusta.

It was Delgado who also discovered Batchelor's artistic talent and encouraged her to pursue painting, hoping it would be good therapy. He bought several of her paintings, including "Bicentennial Fourth of July." He encouraged her to enter the work last year in the Oconee Artists Exhibition. She did, winning a certificate of merit.

Delgado then decided to donate the painting to the Statue of Liberty museum. He sent the painting with a letter of explanation. Kevin C. Buckley, superintendent of the Statue of Liberty National Monument, replied with a deed of gift and a request for more information on the painting and the artist. Delgado sent Buckley a story about Batchelor which appeared in The Union-

Recorder in August 1986. Czarniecki said hundreds of donations are sent to the museum each week, but not all are accepted.

"We don't take everything that's offered," he said. "We have an arts committee which evaluates the work in terms of the artistic merit and associative merits. It is an honor to have a work accepted into the museum. It's an honor for us to have it."

Meanwhile, Batchelor, who has not talked to museum representatives, said she feels removed from it all and is not quite sure how she feels.

"I am surprised and flattered," she said. "Who wouldn't be, right?"

Her condition has not worsened nor improved in the last two years. She said doctors in Augusta have introduced drug therapy and she hopes it will help.

Batchelor has taken a break from painting, although she still does pen-and-ink sketches. She said she spends her time doing "pretty much what everybody else does," including cooking and cleaning, despite her handicap.

"I hold on to furniture," she explained. "I sit down in a chair to cook. There are ways of doing anything. It just takes a little effort and a lot of time. It's really not that hard."

Radio Station Is Devoted To Health

By SANDY SHORE
Associated Press Writer
DENVER (AP) — After 20 years as a specialist in cosmetic surgery, Dr. Donald Huttner has opened a new practice — offering health advice via the airwaves.

"I thought there was a need for a health radio station," said Huttner, owner of KMDK, Denver's newest daytime radio station, which went on the air at the beginning of this year.

"Obviously, the main thought and concern of the American public today is health; it's grown to that extent."

The 5,000-watt station, billed as "your second opinion radio station," offers a mix of local and national programming, from an early morning show featuring a divorce attorney to experts on nutrition, dentistry and gynecology.

"Being a physician," said Huttner, "I believe everyone should have a second opinion ... before they have a gall bladder out or have a coronary bypass."

Believed to be the first radio station in the United States devoted strictly to health issues, KMDK is built around quality-of-life issues, said Peter Jones, program director.

"If your physical health is failing, your economic and mental health will suffer as well," he said. "We're offering information that relates directly to the quality of one's life, programming that can help you."

Local physicians contract for air time, paying roughly $250 an hour for a 10-week period, he said.

Each specialist has exclusive rights until he gives up the time slot, Huttner said.

National programming comes via Sun Radio Network, a Tampa, Fla.-based program supplier, Jones said.

Among the personalities featured on Sun Radio are Chuck Harder, host of a consumer advice talk show, television talk show host Phil Donahue, and Dr. Dean Edell, who appears on national television segments.

Jones and Huttner believe Denver is a good place to test the market because the city is "a very health-conscious community and because of that, many of the experts in the fields are living here," Jones said. "If it works in Denver, it will work in L.A. Programs along these lines have been enormously successful."

A 20-year specialist in cosmetic surgery, Huttner said he purchased the station, formerly known as KPPL, because he believed there was an untapped market of consumers hungry for health news.

And, he added, radio is something he's wanted to try all his life.

The trend toward specialized programming, such as KMDK's health format, has grown recently as AM radio stations have begun to abandon contemporary music in an attempt to retain listeners.

There are formats offering all sports, all news and information, and business and financial news, to name a few.

Some stations are investigating syndication as a way of expanding their markets, a concept that also interests Huttner.

AM stations are "getting narrower in their syndications," he says. "Networking, syndication are the hallmarks of the future industry. I hope to eventually network this," he said, by sending KMDK's signal via satellite to other stations.

Initially, Huttner said, he would like to offer the programming to Rocky Mountain area stations, but he eventually envisions a national health-oriented programming network dubbed PEM, for physical, economic and mental health.

Call-Waiting Service Causes Friendly Static

DEAR ABBY: This is not a terribly serious problem, but I would like an opinion from you, and maybe some of your readers would like to comment.

Several of my friends have the "call waiting" service on their telephones. (I have not.)

Recently, my friend "Joyce" (not her real name) called me. All she said was, "Hello. How are you?" then, before I could even answer her, I heard her "call waiting" signal beep. She immediately said, "Oh, somebody is trying to get me — I'll call you right back." Then she hung up on me.

About 15 minutes later when Joyce called back, I told her I thought she was extremely rude to have cut me off and taken the call from the other party. I said, "Since you called me, you could have put me on 'hold' for two seconds while you told the other party you were talking to someone and would get back to him." I also told her she made me feel like I was second choice — that she was hoping someone more interesting was on the other line.

To my surprise, Joyce wasn't angry with me for telling her off. She agreed with me and apologized.

What are your thoughts on this, Abby? — SECOND CHOICE

DEAR SECOND CHOICE: Congratulations for having the courage to tell Joyce how you felt about her rudeness. And good for Joyce for acknowledging it and having the humility to apologize.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for asking advertisers (and comedians) not to ridicule the hard of hearing.

Last Easter, I received a beautiful basket of fruit from my granddaughter. It was delivered by a local florist. I was so pleased — until I saw the card that came with it. On the outside of the envelope containing the card was written: "She is deaf, so please wait for her to answer the door."

Abby, dear, it spoiled my day. — HURT IN PATERSON, N.J.

DEAR HURT: To have written those instructions on the envelope for the recipient to see was insensitive. I hope you are not blaming your granddaughter for the thoughtlessness of the person who filled the order.

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I have a brother who lives in Connecticut. For the last several years (I've lost count), this brother has called me up to remind me (as if I needed to be reminded) to send flowers to our mother for Mother's Day and put his name on the card. He always says he'll send a check — but he never does.

This year, he called again to remind me to put his name on the card. I did as he asked, and so far, no check.

This tightwad has more money than I have. Any suggestions? — SOFT TOUCH IN ARIZONA

DEAR SOFT TOUCH: Drop your brother a line and tell him that you put his name on the card, and now you'd like to see it on a check. (P.S. And make it retroactive.)

Some hands look so deceptively simple that many players don't even give the hand a second thought. That could be a costly habit, as this hand from a team tournament in Sweden highlights.

The auction proved to be simple and direct—three no trump was the popular contract everywhere. No North bothered to show his six-card minor suit over his partner's no trump opening.

The opening lead, too, did not vary. At every table West led a low spade. At most tables, too, the play went the same way. Declarer won the first trick in hand and led a diamond to the king and ace. East forced out the last spade stopper, and those declarers found out they could come to no more than seven tricks.

Here and there a declarer found the winning line. They won the first trick in dummy and immediately played three rounds of clubs. When that suit divided evenly—as it should a substantial 36 percent of the time—the hand presented no problem. The declarers simply continued with ace of hearts and another, and they had nine tricks by way of two spades, three hearts and four clubs.

What if clubs had not broken evenly? The successful declarers would have been no worse off than those who tried diamonds first. They would have given up on hearts and clubs and continued with a diamond to the king. And like those declarers who led a diamond at trick two, they would have landed the contract had West held a doubleton ace of diamonds. It cost nothing to try clubs first.

Dukakis, Bush Press Ahead With Push On Crime, Drugs

By ROBERT GREENE
Associated Press Writer

Democratic presidential contender Michael Dukakis pressed ahead today with the anti-crime, anti-drug campaign he and Republican George Bush have been waging in the South. He promised support for police training and accepted endorsement from law enforcement officials.

Bush, who has been hitting hard on the same crime-and-drugs themes, was back in Washington after a Friday trip to Richmond, Va. He scheduled weekend campaigning in the Midwest.

Jesse Jackson, after wrapping up two days of seeking "super delegate" support in Washington, headed for Texas to address that state's Democratic convention.

Bush, meanwhile, continued to struggle with the "gender gap" as an NBC News-Wall Street Journal poll gave the Massachusetts governor a 15-point lead nationwide over the vice president. Dukakis had a 52-28 lead among women voters.

Dukakis, whose only Southern primary victories were in Florida and Texas, found less than smooth sailing Thursday on the first day of his Southern tour. In Tennessee to pick up the endorsement of former rival Al Gore Jr., he was put on the spot about allegations that Democratic House Speaker Jim Wright committed ethics violations.

The Massachusetts governor talked today with police recruits in Miami and received the backing of a group of law enforcement officials that included the Democratic attorneys general of Florida, California, Louisiana and Michigan. The group also included police chiefs, sheriffs, district attorneys and members of private anti-crime organizations.

Dukakis began his day at a flag-raising ceremony at the Southeast Florida Institute of Criminal Justice, providing a symbolic response to criticism from the Bush campaign of his veto, a decade ago, of legislation that would have required the recitation of the Pledge of Allegiance in Massachusetts schools.

He vetoed the bill after the state supreme court advised him it was unconstitutional. Bush has begun raising the veto and saying he favors recitation of the pledge "anywhere and everywhere."

Dukakis told the police trainees they would be leading the fight to "provide all Americans with the kind of safety and security they're entitled to have in their homes and in their communities and in their neighborhoods." He added, "I'm going to do everything I can to provide you with the kind of leadership you must have from the top ... to provide you with the support and the resources and the training you need."

Jackson, concluding a visit to the capital on Thursday, continued to try to call in support in return of his years of work mobilizing black voters for Democratic candidates.

The C.M. Eppes High School class of 1968 will have a reunion meeting Sunday at 5 p.m. at Sycamore Hill Baptist Church.

REAL ESTATE FACTS

WHY YOU CAN'T CALL ME!

Pretend for a moment that you are selling your home "by owner." You have advertised your home and put a sign in the yard. Let's also say for a moment that I am a potential buyer. I come to your "Open House" and begin asking you questions about your home. To you, I seem interested in buying your home, but end my conversation with "I'll give you a call soon."

Three days, four days, five days pass and I haven't called you. So, you call me.

Before we discuss your call to me, let's make some assumptions. First, if I was not really interested in your home - your call would have no effect on me. But, secondly, if I were interested, your call to me would indicate that you were an anxious seller. Just what I had hoped for. Being interested in your home, I would have taken several days to decide on what price and terms to offer you. Realizing that you were not represented by a real estate company, I would have started by deducting the real estate fee from your asking price. Then I would have waited for

Masters Champion Lyle Hopeful Of 2nd Major

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Sandy Lyle pursues the impossible dream this week at the U.S. Open, where par is becoming a fond but distant memory.

"I don't fancy the odds," the scrambling Scotsman said. "But the Grand Slam is possible."

Lyle, who won the Masters at Augusta, Ga., last April, birdied the 16th and 18th holes Thursday to forge a three-way tie for the lead at 3-under-par 68 after the first round of the Open.

He was tied with Bob Gilder, winless since 1983, and Mike Nicolette, a winner just once in 10 years on the PGA Tour. They were one shot ahead of defending champion Scott Simpson, Seve Ballesteros of Spain, Paul Azinger, Larry Mize and Dick Mast.

Just 11 golfers were under par over the 7,010-yard, par-71 course at The Country Club, which yielded only seven subpar scores during four rounds of play in the 1963 Open. That tournament was won in a playoff by Julius Boros, who shot 9-over 293, including a 1-under 70 on the final day.

"The first day of an Open, you almost always see somebody come out and shoot a good score," Lyle said. "But I'm very surprised to see three fellows at 68."

Most of the low scores came from the golfers who teed off in the morning on this hot, muggy day. In the afternoon, the wind began to blow as the National Weather Service issued a severe thunderstorm warning. Shots were blown into the trees, and greens became too firm and dry to hold approach shots.

Of the 68s and 69s, only Lyle, Mize and Azinger teed off in the afternoon.

"The conditions were pretty easy when I first started out (at 10:49 a.m. EDT)," Nicolette said. "The wind wasn't blowing too tough, but as the day went on, the wind was really swirling ... The guys that are still out there, I wish them luck."

Lyle said he had some trouble with the wind, but his was not a regulation round. He missed the fairway at least 10 times and also missed quite a few greens. The 11th hole — a 453-yard par 4 — was probably typical of his day.

He was at even par coming into the 11th. His tee shot, a 1-iron, went into the right rough and under a huge oak tree. Overhanging branches made a direct shot at the green impossible. He selected a 5-iron, aimed toward the left side of the green and tried to slice the ball home. Instead, it stayed left and went over the green, finding more rough.

From about 25-30 yards, he chipped up. The ball rolled down the sloping green and into the hole for a birdie, and he was one under.

The gallery cheered, and Lyle responded: "You don't get too many of those."

On 16, a 185-yard par-3, he hit a 7-iron inside 20 feet and putted for birdie to go two under. On 18, a 438-yard par-4, he hit a 1-iron 270 yards, hit an 8-iron within 15 feet and sank the birdie putt.

If he should win here, he would need victories in the British Open at Royal Lytham St. Ann's and the PGA National at Edmond, Okla., to complete the unprecedented Grand Slam.

"I squeezed about as much out of everything I could today," Lyle said. "I missed a lot of greens. I couldn't expect a much better score than 68 today with the way I played."

There were three golfers at 70: Curtis Strange, who had an eagle-3 on the par-5 14th hole; Lanny Wadkins and Craig Stadler.

Nine more golfers were at 71, including U.S. amateur champion Bill Mayfair of Scottsdale, Ariz.

Gilder made the turn at 1-under 34, then birdied the 450-yard, par-4 12th hole and the 527-yard, par-5 14th to go three under. He lost a stroke with a bogey on the par-3 16th, but got it back with a birdie at the 381-yard No. 17 by sinking a 12-foot putt.

Although he has six victories in his 13 years on the tour, Gilder has only one top 10 finish this season, a fifth in the Kemper Open. His last victory was in the 1983 Phoenix Open. Since, he has suffered from golf burnout, he said.

Pistons Send Message To Lakers: Win Two In Row To Win Two In Row

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers know that in the fight for the NBA championship there are no guarantees, even if their coach says there are.

"I'm going to guarantee everyone we're going to repeat," Coach Pat Riley had said a year ago, soon after his Lakers had beaten Boston for the title.

The Detroit Pistons delivered their own sobering message to the Lakers Thursday night: win two straight games or you won't win two straight championships.

The Pistons overcame a 12-0 deficit, got 25 points from Adrian Dantley and key contributions from their bench, capitalized on Laker foul trouble and enjoyed a huge rebounding advantage.

The result was a 104-94 victory that gave them a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven series, their first final since they moved from Fort Wayne, Ind., in 1957.

The Lakers, in their sixth final in seven years, are going back home. But if they lose either Sunday's sixth game or a possible seventh game Tuesday night at the Forum, they won't fulfill Riley's guarantee or become the first team to win consecutive championships since the 1969 Celtics.

"We're glad to be going home," Los Angeles forward James Worthy said, "but that doesn't guarantee anything."

The Lakers' 36-5 home record was tied with Boston for the league's best, but they lost the first game of the series there 105-93.

"We've got a chance," Detroit Coach Chuck Daly said. "We're up 3-2. We've got to go back to their building. We know what's ahead. They are great in their own building."

The Pistons gave their last Silverdome crowd — the biggest ever to see an NBA playoff game — plenty to cheer. The 41,732 fans exceeded the previous record of 40,172 at the Seattle Kingdome on April 15, 1980 for the fifth game of the Western Conference finals between Milwaukee and Seattle. Detroit will move next season to a new arena in nearby Auburn Hills.

"I have to credit our crowd," Daly said, "not only the size of it, but the noise and they were together and it's no question they helped us."

"I'm beyond disappointed. I'm beyond irritated. I'm beyond disgusted," Riley said after watching his team blow a 2-1 series lead by losing Game 4 111-86 and Game 5 by 10 points.

But his optimism, first expressed a year ago, remains. "I like our chances," he said. "I still believe that this team is going to win the championship this year."

They started out like a championship team Thursday night, hitting their first five shots and bolting to leads of 12-0 and 15-2. On the Pistons' nine possessions in that stretch, they committed six turnovers and made one of four shots.

"It looked like we weren't ready," Dantley said. "We were driving and dishing off to the big men and they weren't reacting to the basketball."

Early Lead Didn't Hold Up

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers, who promised a war in Game 5 of the NBA Championship Series, were conquered in the first half.

Physical play by the Detroit Pistons while they won Game 4 by 25 points had the Lakers in a feisty mood at the beginning of Thursday night's game.

Los Angeles grabbed a 15-2 lead less than five minutes after tipoff, and the Pistons were totally disorganized, failing to get a shot in six of their first eight possessions.

But less than 17 minutes later, the Pistons had turned that 13-point deficit into a 54-41 lead, and the Lakers never caught up as Detroit won 104-94 for a 3-2 edge in the best-of-seven series.

"They just came out and jumped on us," said Adrian Dantley, who scored 18 of his 25 points during Detroit's 52-26 spurt. "It looked like they were going to bury us. They had fire in their eyes, but we got back into it and did what we had to do. At the end, they looked a little tired."

Despite the early cushion, Lakers coach Pat Riley said he never felt comfortable with the lead because Los Angeles quickly got in foul trouble. James Worthy played only eight minutes in the first half after being whistled for three fouls in the first 4:51 of the game.

"Having three players (Worthy, A.C. Green and Michael Cooper) on the bench with three fouls in the first half plays havoc with your continuity, and I think that hurt us in the first half," Riley said. "You don't lose anything in the first four or five minutes. We were ahead 15-2, and from that point on we just sort of went into quicksand."

"Sometimes when a team gets a run on you like that, you feel down," said Pistons guard Joe Dumars, who scored 19 points. "We really didn't

"We kept our courage, took it two (points) by two and kept playing defense," Detroit center Bill Laimbeer said.

Meanwhile, the Lakers were getting into foul trouble, even though the game wasn't as rough as they had expected. Worthy picked up his third foul with 7:09 left in the first quarter, went to the bench and didn't get back into the game until 4:53 remained in the second.

Michael Cooper sat out the final 10:54 of the second quarter and teammate A.C. Green missed the last 7:18 of the period, both with three fouls.

When Worthy left, Los Angeles led 15-4. When he came back, Detroit was on top 48-39 and never trailed again. The Pistons rallied from the 15-2 start to outscore Los Angeles 52-26 and take a 54-41 lead 3:03 before intermission. Behind Dantley's 19 points, Detroit led 59-50 at halftime.

"I've played in a lot more physical ballgames where calls weren't called," said Worthy, who added, "We weren't getting any calls on our end of the floor."

"When you start losing players and have to go deep, deep into your bench, I think it kind of hurt," Lakers guard Magic Johnson said.

While Los Angeles backup center Mychal Thompson had his first good game of the series with 14 points, the Pistons' substitutes outscored the Lakers' 37-19. The Pistons' bench was led by Vinnie Johnson with 16 points, James Edwards with 10 points and John Salley with 10 rebounds.

Joe Dumars had 19 points and Isiah Thomas 15 for Detroit. The Lakers were led by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, with a playoff high of 26 points, Magic Johnson with 15 points and 17 assists and Byron Scott with 15 points.

The Pistons held a 60-38 advantage off the boards. The Lakers had just 16 defensive rebounds, breaking the previous low of 20 for a game in the NBA final.

"You're not going to beat anybody with that," Riley said.

In the third quarter, the Lakers cut their deficit to two points at 69-67 and 73-71 and in the fourth quarter they trailed just 90-84 with 6:53 remaining.

But aside from the first 4½ minutes of the game, the Pistons never had an extended lead. A six-point surge in which Thomas had two baskets and Dumars one gave the Pistons a 96-84 lead with 4:22 to go. They stayed ahead by at least seven points the rest of the way.

"This puts a lot of pressure on the Lakers," Thomas said.

If it wins the title, Los Angeles will become the first team to do it while playing three seven-game series in one season. It also will become the first team since Washington in 1978 to become champion after trailing 3-2.

"We've still got a lot of work to do. We can't think past Sunday or they will blow right past us," Thompson said. Laimbeer isn't thinking past Sunday, either. "If we win," he said, "it will be awesome."

Powell Wins A Silver

DURHAM — Bert Powell of Greenville captured a silver medal in swimming at the State Games Thursday at N.C. Central University.

Powell, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Powell of Greenville, competed in the boys' 15-18 year olds in the 200-meter freestyle, finishing in 3 minutes, 16.19 seconds, good enough for second place.

Powell is a member of the Greenville Swim Club. He is the first area resident to win a medal in this year's games, which continue through Sunday.

Jordan, Gorilla Lead Golf Field

Michael Jordan and the Golfing Gorilla may not be a great combination on the basketball court, but when it comes to raising money for the Ronald McDonald House of Greenville, they both score handily.

The two are among the celebrities who will lead the field for the annual Eastern Carolina Celebrity Golf Tournament, which will be played Sunday at the Greenville Country Club. The tournament annually raises funds to help support the Ronald McDonald House, located adjacent to Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

The first foursomes will be teeing off at 8 a.m. Sunday with the final group scheduled to begin at 12:30 p.m.

At 11 a.m., a clinic will be held by Thad Daber, the One-Club World Champion, while at 4:30 p.m., the exhibition by the Golfing Gorilla will be held.

Jordan, the multi-honored member of the Chicago Bulls of the National Basketball Association, is serving as the honorary chairman of the tournament, and is considered a top golfer himself. Jordan has expressed the desire to play on the pro tour once he retires from the professional basketball ranks.

Other celebrities who will participate in the tournament include Bob DeBardelaben, WRAL-TV weatherman; Bert Remsen, who plays Dandy Dandridge on "Dallas;" Mike Steele, East Carolina basketball coach; Gary Overton, ECU baseball coach; Kim Zimmer, who plays Reva on "The Guiding Light;" A.C. Weary, actor and director of "Another World;" Charlie "Choo-choo" Justice, North Carolina football great; Harry Leslie, past chairman of the tournament; Dudley Bradley of the New York Nets; Mike Caldwell, formerly of the Milwaukee Brewers; Ron Wooten, offensive guard with the New England Patriots; Diana Goodman, former Hee-Haw actress; Tim Culbertson, owner of Cinema Sports, Hill Street Blues; John Voldstad, Darryl on "Newhart;" Reynolds May, past chairman of the tournament; Chris Schenkel, ABC sportscaster; Dr. Richard Eakin, ECU chancellor; Buddy Curry, linebacker with the Atlanta Falcons; Tom Hodges, Rich on "Valerie's Family;" Steve Whitting, Burt on "Valerie's Family;" Vince Gill, country music star; Tony Nathan, running back with the Miami Dolphins; Terry Long, offensive guard with the Pittsburgh Steelers; and Al Wood, formerly with the Dallas Mavericks.

Region I Baseball Team Takes Win

CHAPEL HILL — Region One, which represents the Northeastern part of the state, got off to a good start in the State Games' Baseball championships, defeating Region Two Thursday, 10-3.

The Region One team features several Pitt and Martin County players, while Region II includes several Greene County players.

Both teams scored twice in the first inning and it remained 2-2 until the third when Region One pushed over four runs to put the game away.

Erie Downing led off the third with a single but was forced at second on Guy Spruill's grounder. Axel Smith singled and David Daniels walked to load the bases. After a second out, Franz Holscher singled in both Spruill and Smith. Ty Little followed with a double, driving in Daniels and Holscher. That gave Region One a 6-2 lead that Region Two was unable to overcome.

Both teams scored once in the seventh to make it 7-2. Region One added three more in the ninth, two of them scoring on a home run by Daniels.

Region One was led at the plate by Smith, who had three hits in five appearances. Downing went 2-5 while Scotty Barnhill was 2-4.

Today, Region One will face Region Three at 4 p.m. at the Durham Athletic Park. Region Two was to play Region Four at 10 a.m. at Bosheimer Stadium in Chapel Hill.

Greenville Rec Sponsoring Tennis Clinics

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will sponsor two sessions of the Dennis Van der Meer Match Play Drill Clinics on July 7 at the River Birch Tennis Center.

The clinic is to be taught by Dr. Louie Cap. Cap began his tennis career as a member of the Czech Davis Cup team and later joined the Van der Meer Tennis University of Hilton Head, S.C. He has traveled world wide with Van der Meer on teaching tours including visits to Japan, South America, the Middle East, Canada and Europe.

The morning session will be from 9 a.m. until noon for adults. The afternoon session will be from 1 to 4 p.m. for juniors. There is a $10 registration fee and only a limited number of spaces are available.

For further information, or to register, contact the River Birch Tennis Center, 830-4559.

Goodes Uses Putting Tip To Gain Lead

GREENSBORO (AP) — Mike Goodes used a putting tip from a friend to shoot a 4-under-par 67 at Sedgefield Country Club and take the opening-round lead in the North Carolina Amateur golf tournament.

Goodes took some advice from fellow amateur Patrick Brady to take a one-shot lead over seven golfers.

"We play together all the time," Goodes said. "You hate to say something (critical) to your friend, but lately, Patrick's been making a few comments. And then Wednesday afternoon on the putting green, I finally asked him what he thought was wrong."

Brady's advice was for Goodes to shorten his stroke and accelerate more through the ball.

Goodes started on the 10th hole and rolled in a 15-foot birdie putt. Then he chipped in from 10 yards off the green for another birdie on No. 13.

"That was a nice thing to have happen," Goodes admitted. "It didn't hurt my confidence at all."

A two-putt birdie from 50 feet on the par-five 15th hole moved Goodes to 3-under-par for the day. He then made a bogey on No. 17 when his second shot jumped off the green. But Goodes recouped with an up and down birdie on the par-5, 18th hole after his second shot went over the green.

Goodes got up and down for another birdie on the par-5 fifth hole. He followed that with a bogey on No. 6 when his eight-iron approach flew over the green, but a 10-foot birdie putt on the eighth hole put him back into the lead for good.

Lee Porter, a rising senior at Guilford College, and Tripp Gentry head the list of players at 68. Also in that group are High Point's Jay McGhee, Tom Funderburk of Matthews, Fayetteville's Gary Robinson, John Crooks of Buies Creek and Lester Kimber of Winston-Salem.

Another shot back at 2-under-par are Greensboro's Brooks Barwick, Larry Boswell and Vance Whicker. Also tied at 69 are Terry Mills of Mayodan, Gastonia's Jimmy England and Ron Morgan and Walter Hall, both of Clemmons.

Paul Simson, who finished second last year, and Tony Shepherd of Greensboro lead a group of 10 players tied at 70. Goodes' friend Brady is among five players who shot even par at Sedgefield.

The field of 288 golfers was divided between Sedgefield and Forest Oaks Country Club, with the lower handicap portion of the field playing at the Sedgefield. The golfers switch courses for today's play after which the field will be cut to the low 70s and ties. The final two rounds will be played at Forest Oaks.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The National Football League Players Association is resuming its bid for unrestricted free agency before a federal judge.

The NFLPA contends that an impasse has been reached in contract negotiations between the union and management, Carol T. Rieger, a Minneapolis lawyer representing the union, said Thursday.

If U.S. District Judge David Doty, who was to hear arguments today, rules that an impasse exists, it's possible he could grant the union a preliminary injunction that would allow unrestricted free agency for about 350 players.

"We're hopeful he will rule in our favor and we think he will," Rieger said.

A clerk in Doty's office said Thursday that the judge probably would rule on the impasse question today, but he said if Doty rules there is an impasse, the judge probably wouldn't rule on the free agency question until later.

Rieger said the players need a decision on the free agency question before training camps open in July.

Rieger works for Lindquist & Vennum, the law firm that represented the NFLPA in 1975 and 1976 in the John Mackey case — an antitrust challenge of the free-agent system in use at that time.

NFL owners have said they are confident that Doty will approve the current system, which requires a team signing a free agent to compensate his old team with a first-round draft choice.

Under current rules, NFL teams have the right of first refusal and are compensated if a free agent is signed by another club. Only two players have changed teams in 12 years of the plan.

The union filed the antitrust lawsuit against management Oct. 15, when players returned to work without a new contract after a 24-day strike in which free agency was a major issue. There have been no formal negotiations since.

Doty ruled in January that NFL owners can continue to impose free agency restrictions on players until a collective bargaining impasse is reached. He also urged the two sides to settle the issue at the bargaining table.

In April, the National Labor Relations Board's general counsel ruled that the NFLPA and management reached an impasse during labor negotiations in 1987.

The owners' bargaining unit, the NFL Management Council, alleged that the union was bargaining in bad faith and had refused to bargain before the sides broke off negotiations. But the NLRB threw out those complaints.

NFLPA officials say the decision enables Doty to rule that an impasse has been reached and to eventually give the union the preliminary injunction that would allow unrestricted free agency.

If Doty rules there is an impasse, the owners probably would appeal to the 8th Circuit Court of Appeals.

There's a "reasonable chance" Doty will declare an impasse in negotiations, Gary Roberts, a law professor at Tulane University who once represented the NFL in antitrust cases, told the Star Tribune.

"But they (the NFLPA) would only have cleared the first hurdle."

Roberts said he believes Doty will deny the injunction and tell the NFLPA he will give it damages if it wins its case.

"Most judges' inclinations will be to say, 'Let's keep status quo and if anybody gets hurt, let's give them damages,'" he told the newspaper. "This preliminary injunction is where it's all at. Legally, I don't think there's any way the judge should give it to them. There's the irreparable injury point."

He said it would be difficult for the union to win the preliminary injunction because it would have to prove irreparable injury.

President Franklin Roosevelt signed into law the National Labor Relations Act in 1935.

Reuss' New Pitch Keys 3-1 Win

By HILLEL ITALIE
Associated Press Writer

They say you can't teach an old dog new tricks. But how about teaching a veteran left-hander a new pitch?

Chicago's Jerry Reuss, who will turn 39 next week, pitched seven innings Thursday night, allowing one run and six hits as the White Sox defeated the Milwaukee Brewers 3-1.

"I've got a fourth pitch, a changeup and I'm working that in," said Reuss, 6-2, who walked one and struck out three. "I'm learning how to use it, when to use it."

Reuss has won four straight decisions and now has 204 lifetime victories. He went to the White Sox spring training camp as a free agent.

"I went through a lot last year, getting released by three clubs, then waiting until February to see where I'd be this year," Reuss said. "I'm just glad to be here."

Bobby Thigpen replaced Reuss to start the eighth and earned his 13th save.

"He (Reuss) has pitched well all year. He kept us in the ballgame. I had to take him out after seven because he was starting to throw too hard. He was up to 87 miles per hour," White Sox manager Jim Fregosis said.

Reuss was helped by four Milwaukee errors, three by second baseman Juan Castillo, whose misplay of Ivan Calderon's double play grounder sparked a two-run Chicago rally in the sixth. Castillo was removed after the inning at his own request.

"It happens to everybody," Milwaukee manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "People are booing when you don't make plays you know you are capable of making. It's human nature to feel upset. He was shook up. Who wouldn't be?"

Elsewhere in the American League, it was Kansas City 9, Oakland 5; California 3, Texas 0; Baltimore 8, Boston 4; and Toronto 13, Detroit 5.

Harold Baines led off the Chicago sixth with a single and moved to second when Castillo bobbled Calderon's hard bouncer. Greg Walker then doubled past first to score Baines. Calderon scored on Dan Pasqua's groundout to first.

The White Sox added an insurance run in the ninth when Ozzie Guillen singled, stole second and scored on Fred Manrique's single.

Chris Bosio, 6-7, lost his fourth straight decision and failed for the sixth time to win his seventh game.

Royals 9, Athletics 5

Mark Gubicza allowed six hits in eight innings for his fourth consecutive victory and Pat Tabler drove in four runs as Kansas City won for the 13th time in its last 14 games and pulled to within 4½ games of first-place Oakland in the AL West.

The Royals, 13 games behind Oakland on June 1, have won six consecutive games and all six meetings with the Athletics, the AL West leaders, who have lost four straight and nine of their last 11 games. The victory moved Kansas City past Minnesota into second place.

Kansas City finished with 17 hits, the most this season off Oakland, to support Gubicza. Reserve infielder Brad Wellman had the first four-hit game of his career and Tabler had three singles.

Gubicza, 9-5, struck out five, walked three and allowed only one earned run. Dan Quisenberry pitched the ninth, allowing a run on a single, a walk and Luis Polonia's fielder's choice grounder.

Angels 3, Rangers 0

Kirk McCaskill pitched a three-hitter for his first victory since May 8 and first shutout since April 15, 1987, as California blanked Texas.

McCaskill, 3-5, walked three and struck out 10. The Rangers' only hits were singles by Ruben Sierra in the first inning, Steve Buechele in the fifth and Pete Incaviglia in the ninth.

The victory was only the Angels' seventh in 18 games since May 28. Five of the wins have been shutouts.

The Angels gave McCaskill a quick

1-0 lead when Brian Downing started the bottom of the first by drawing a walk off left-hander Paul Kilgus, 6-5.

Fourth Straight Win

Kansas City Royal pitcher Mark Gubicza pitches against an Oakland A's batter during Thursday afternoon's game. Gubicza allowed six hits in eight innings for his fourth consecutive win. The streaking Royals pulled within four games of first place Oakland with a 9-5 win. (AP Laserphoto)

Alabama Loses 3 Grid Players

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Alabama Coach Bill Curry said he wasn't surprised that three Crimson Tide football players, including two potential starters, decided to leave the team.

The three dropping off the squad were defensive end Anthony Smith, offensive lineman Andy Anderson and reserve center-guard Greg Kiker.

"I do know you're going to have some casualties every year if you have a demanding off-season program, and we have a very demanding off-season program," Curry said. "So I'm not surprised when players leave."

Curry announced the departures during a team meeting Tuesday afternoon and confirmed them in a Birmingham News report Thursday.

"In things of this nature, I have a policy that I do not comment on the specifics of why someone leaves," Curry said. "All I'll say is that the three players in question have told me they no longer want to be part of our team."

Smith, a 6-foot-5, 255-pound senior from Elizabeth City, N.C., started five games last season and gave signs of possible stardom. But he did not participate in spring drills and his departure was not a surprise to Crimson Tide coaches.

"I've tried to understand Anthony and work with him closely," Curry said. "From what he's told me he plans to transfer to another school and I have no idea where that might be."

The newspaper quoted an unnamed athletic official as saying Anderson and Kiker just decided they didn't want to play football anymore.

Anderson, a 6-foot-5, 265-pound redshirt junior from Lithia Springs, Ga., came out of spring practice as one of the team's top offensive linemen and had been mentioned as a possible starter. Kiker is from Phenix City.

The News also said there is a possibility that several more scholarship players could be leaving the team in the next few weeks, but they were described as players who have seen little or no action.

Curry declined to comment on the possibility of other players quitting the team.

Downing stole second and scored on Wally Joyner's one-out single.

California made it 2-0 in the fourth when Devon White reached on a fielder's choice, stole second and scored on Bob Boone's single.

Walks to White, Boone and Downing by reliever Jose Cecena loaded the bases in the eighth before Dale Mohoric hit Dick Schofield with a pitch to force home the final run.

Orioles 8, Red Sox 4

Cal Ripken's two-run double and Jim Traber's run-scoring hit highlighted a three-run fifth inning as Baltimore defeated Boston.

Traber had three hits and three RBI. The Red Sox walked 10 batters, a season high.

Joe Orsulak led off the fifth with a single against reliever John Trautwein, 0-1. Billy Ripken was hit by a pitch and Cal Ripken hit a 3-2 pitch for a double to left. One out later, Traber singled to right to give the Orioles a 5-2 lead.

Jeff Ballard, 3-3, allowed seven hits in seven innings. Mark Williamson relieved after Spike Owen's leadoff double in the eighth and earned his first save.

Marty Barrett stole home in the fourth inning to give Boston a 1-0 lead. It was the first time a Red Sox player had stolen home since Gary Allenson did it in 1980 as part of a double steal, and the first straight steal of home since Tommy Harper on May 28, 1973.

Blue Jays 13, Tigers 5

Mike Flanagan allowed five hits in eight innings and Ernie Whitt went 4-for-5 with four RBI to lead a 15-hit attack as Toronto won at Detroit.

Flanagan, 6-4, walked six and struck out a season-high seven, but was relieved by Mark Ross after walking the first two batters in the ninth. Ross gave up Ray Knight's two-run double and Mike Heath's run-scoring double. Luis Salazar drove in a run with a bases-loaded forceout and pinch-hitter Dave Bergman hit a sacrifice fly.

Whitt had a two-run triple in the third and hit his third homer, a two-run shot, in the ninth. Tony Fernandez had three hits. Toronto has scored 28 runs in the past two games.

Jack Morris, 6-8, allowed six hits, six earned runs and three walks before leaving with two outs in the third, his earliest exit of the season. He threw 72 pitches to 16 batters.

To The Sports Editor:

We are writing in reference to the comments about the photograph printed in the June 12 issue of the Rose High baseball player, Brian Wille. It was noted that this was the only photo made available to the Daily Reflector by the Associated Press. It was not printed in an effort to discredit the accomplishments of Rose's fine team.

In every aspect of Greenville's local sports, the Daily Reflector has given better than adequate coverage, even more so in the case of Rose High. But errors and losses are a part of the game and are subject to being reported. The Daily Reflector is not a public relations firm for the gratification of Rose High athletics. Their job is to give the truthful and unbiased account of the events as they happen, regardless of whether or not the readers feel it is negative journalism.

No doubt countless Boston Red Sox fans were equally disappointed when Bill Buckner's critical error helped the New York Mets win the 1986 World Series, but as true sports fans know, that is the way the ball bounces.

Testimony Underway In Buoniconti Case

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Former All-Pro linebacker Dick Butkus says the tackle that left former Citadel football player Marc Buoniconti a quadriplegic was not illegal.

"No, I don't believe he violated any rules," Butkus testified Thursday. "He did the best job he could to make the play."

Buoniconti is suing The Citadel and the school's football team doctor and trainer. The lawsuit alleges the defendants were negligent in treating his neck injuries and failed to tell him a congenital narrowness of the spine made it dangerous for him to play football.

Defense attorneys contend Buoniconti speared an opposing running back on the play in violation of football rules. Spearing is hitting a player head first.

Buoniconti, the son of former Notre Dame and Miami Dolphins linebacker Nick Buoniconti, suffered a crushed spinal cord while making a tackle on Oct. 26, 1985, in a game against East Tennessee State.

Watching a slow-motion videotape of the ill-fated play, Butkus said he believes Buoniconti was about to overrun the play and crossed his feet in an attempt to change direction. Buoniconti appeared to be trying to get in front of the runner instead of trying to deliver a blow, Butkus told the Charleston County Court of Common Pleas jury.

The official closest to the play testified Thursday that "there is no doubt in my mind. It was not an illegal hit."

Ronald Leatherwood, an official in the Southern Conference since 1979, said he watched the play as head linesman from a few yards away. "I had a clear shot all the way, and the tackle was not illegal," he said.

Defense lawyers told the judge they will call witnesses — including another official at the game and a doctor who helped write the rules — who will say the tackle was illegal.

Buoniconti testified Thursday that his dreams of a career in business and of a family with children ended when he was paralyzed making the tackle.

"I dreamed of having a normal life," Buoniconti said. "After my injury, all those dreams were shattered. I had to change everything in my life."

"My number one priority right now is just to stay alive, to keep living the best I can," he added.

"As far as I know, I'm disabled for life," he told the jury.

He said there is no surgery that can correct his disability, although he said he prays for such a cure every day.

Currently attending the University of Miami, Buoniconti said he would like to complete his degree in psychology and perhaps get a job as a psychologist one day.

The 21-year-old Buoniconti said that, not only has his personal life changed with constant medical attention, but many of his friends are different since the accident.

"A lot of (former) friends of mine either couldn't handle it or they weren't friends," he said.

But he added, "I have a great group of friends who stick by me. That's not easy for a bunch of 21-year-old boys or men to hang out with someone in a wheelchair."

Robinson Excited About Brown Taking Over San Antonio Post

KOTKA, Finland (AP) — Even though David Robinson won't play for Larry Brown until after next season, the future center of the San Antonio Spurs is excited about the team's new coach.

"I've heard things about him as a person and I've only heard good things, so I'm excited about that," the 1987 college player of the year and current ensign in the U.S. Navy said of Brown on Thursday as he prepared to play for a U.S. Select Team.

Brown, who led Kansas to the NCAA championship in April, left the Jayhawks on Monday for a reported five-year, $3.5-million contract with the struggling Spurs of the NBA.

"He (Brown) has been a winning coach," Robinson said. "That's got to make me feel good. But as far as me playing for him, I'll have to wait and see. I don't know. I'll have to get a feel on how he coaches the team first."

Robinson became the world's highest-paid athlete when he signed an eight-year, $26-million contract with the Spurs following his graduation from the Naval Academy and selection as the No. 1 choice in the NBA draft.

The heavily favored American team was to play the Netherlands tonight in this Finnish city close to the Soviet border, opening the four-nation Pohjola Cup. Britain and Finland are the other teams in the round-robin tournament that ends Sunday.

After a long layoff while serving his military obligation, Robinson is getting closer to the dominant inside player he was in college. He played well during the recent U.S. Olympic Trials at Colorado Springs, Colo., and was among the 16 finalists for the team that will defend the gold medal in Seoul.

A likely starter on the Olympic team, Robinson was placed on the Select Team with 11 other players to get the game competition he needs.

The Spurs, like the Select Team, are young, and Robinson said the potential is really good.

"So he (Brown) is going to be excited as I'm sure the rest of San Antonio is," Robinson said. "I just want to come in there and fulfill my part."

"That's really my main concern. I want to go in there and play and be real good. I have confidence in myself that I'll be able to do that. I can't be concerned how good a coaching job he's going to do. I have to go in there and do my job. If I do that and everybody takes care of their own jobs, I think everything will fall into place."

The 22-year-old Robinson feels his overall game needs to be improved and he's been working hard on that.

"I need to improve on everything, really, rebounding real well, offensively and defensively, working on my low-post moves," he said. "Especially since I'll be playing a lot of guys who are more of my size and quickness in the NBA."

"Offensively, I'll have to be a lot more versatile, especially in the low-post area. I also need to improve my free throw shooting percentage."

The U.S. Select Team will play six games in nine days on its European tour, three in Finland and one each in France, Austria and Spain next week. And that's exactly what Robinson needs.

"Yes, definitely," Robinson said. "It will do us all a lot of good to get out and play."

In the Seoul Olympics next September, Robinson could face 7-foot-3 Soviet center Arvidas Sabonis, whom he outscored 20-16 and outplayed down the stretch two years ago as the U.S. won the World Championship.

U.S. Olympic basketball coach John Thompson, who is not with the team for the European tour, has criticized the NBA's Portland Trail Blazers for extending medical assistance to the injured Sabonis, whom they drafted in the first round in 1986.

"To be perfectly honest, I don't really care," Robinson said. "As a team, I feel like if we play our own game we'll be very tough to beat no matter what. But it does seem like it's kind of trying to defeat your own purpose. But that's how it is in the States. Everybody is looking for their different interests, so you can't really blame them for that."

Sabonis arrived in Portland at the Blazers' invitation on April 28 to rehabilitate his injured Achilles tendon. He is expected to return home early next month.

Robinson, who has faced Sabonis just that once, said he has tremendous talent.

"He has great ability," Robinson said. "He's a very good passer, a very good shooter. He's big, strong and athletic. He's pretty tough. You don't really want to see an opponent with a big guy who's got that much ability. He's definitely got a lot of potential."

Battle Of The Davises Ends With Astros Win

CINCINNATI (AP) — Timing rather than muscle decided a home run battle of the Davises.

Cincinnati's Eric Davis got the better distance with his two homers, but Houston's Glenn Davis came out ahead because of the timing of his homers Thursday night as he led the Astros to a 7-4 victory over the Reds.

Glenn Davis struck first, snapping an 0-for-7 slump with a pair of two-run homers in his first two at-bats to give Mike Scott a lead that let him pitch relaxed. The hole was too deep for the Reds to climb out.

Eric Davis hit a two-run homer for the only runs off Scott, 8-2, then added an impressive solo homer to center field to open the ninth off Juan Agosto after Scott left the game with a pulled hamstring.

It wasn't enough. Dave Smith gave up a two-out single to Jeff Treadway and a walk to Terry McGriff to load the bases with two out, but got Barry Larkin to hit into a force out to get his 12th save.

"When you get ahead like that, you can pretty much challenge guys and a home run won't hurt you," said Scott, who allowed five hits before pulling a hamstring while throwing a pitch in the eighth.

In the only other National League game, it was Atlanta 9, Los Angeles 2.

The early homers continued an unusual streak for Glenn Davis, who has just four hits in his last 34 at-bats — all homers.

"I can't explain it," he said. "It's just one of the things you go through during the course of the year. It probably won't be the last time I go through it."

"There have been some good things in it. If you want to look at the bad things, you can dwell on that. But there are some good things in it — I've still been able to drive in some runs and contribute."

He now has 52 RBI, matching Pittsburgh's Bobby Bonilla for the league lead. His 15 homers leave him one shy of league-leaders Jack Clark of San Francisco and Andres Galaraga of Montreal.

Although Glenn Davis' homers set the tone early, Eric Davis' homers were more amazing.

His two-run homer in the sixth was a high, arching drive to left field. His solo homer leading off the ninth, his 11th of the season and his third in two games, easily cleared the wall in center.

"He's sure swinging good," Astros manager Hal Lanier said. "He's starting to hit. When he hits them, they're usually not cheap."

Eric Davis, who declined comment after the game, is hitting .356 in his last 11 games with five homers and 11 RBI.

"I'm just glad we're getting ready to get out of here because Eric is starting to get hot," Houston's Billy Hatcher said.

Scott wasn't sure what happened when he pulled the hamstring. He said he felt the muscle stretch while he delivered a pitch.

He was scheduled for a medical examination today to determine the extent of the injury.

"I don't know what happened. It just gave," he said.

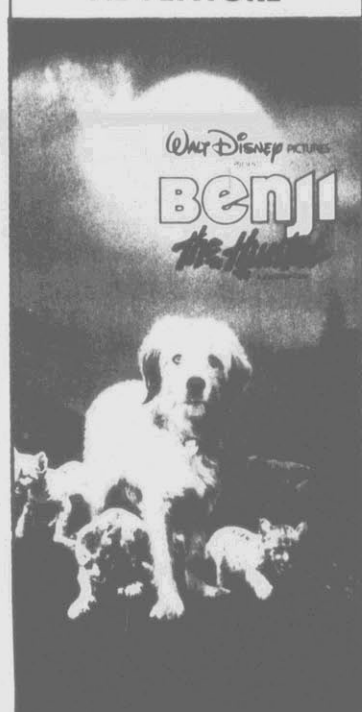

Both of the homers by Glenn Davis were off right-hander Mario Soto, 3-7, who has lost his last five starts. He said Davis hit a poor fastball and a hanging slider for the homers.

Braves 9, Dodgers 2

Ken Oberkfell went 4-for-5 and drove in three runs to lead an 18-hit attack as Atlanta snapped a five-game losing streak.

The Atlanta offense helped Zane Smith, 3-3, gain his first victory since May 2 and end his string of five consecutive no-decision outings. He missed three starts with arm ailments.

Jane Fonda Uses '20/20' To Issue Apology To Vietnam Vets, Families

By JAY SHARBUTT
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

NEW YORK — Jane Fonda, sharply criticized for going to Hanoi during the Vietnam War to oppose U.S. involvement in the conflict, apologizes to Vietnam veterans and their families on an ABC News program to be broadcast tonight.

But she says she does not think she was duped by the North Vietnamese in 1972 when she donned a helmet and was photographed sitting in the gunner's seat of a North Vietnamese anti-aircraft gun.

Ms. Fonda, in an interview with Barbara Walters to air on ABC's "20/20," said that sitting on the gun was "a thoughtless and careless thing to have done."

"I know the power of images," she added. "To have put myself in the situation like that was a thoughtless and cruel thing to have done."

She takes full responsibility for it, she said, but doesn't feel the North Vietnamese duped her into doing it as part of their propaganda efforts.

"No, I don't," she said. "I really don't. I mean, I don't remember being led to this gun. ... I'm naive and I make mistakes, but it was my fault that I sat there, you know. I mean, you know, I was a big girl. I could have said, 'No, I can't do this.' It was ... my fault."

Controversy over her trip to Hanoi in July 1972 during which she also made broadcasts urging American soldiers to disobey their orders, was revived recently by Vietnam veterans in several New England towns who opposed her plans to come to the area next month to film a movie, "Union Street" (The film is not about Vietnam).

Her "20-20" interview — watch Ms.

Walters said the actress initiated — was taped May 31 at Ms. Fonda's home in Santa Monica, Calif. A transcript of it was made available by ABC News prior to tonight's broadcast.

The "20-20" segment will include a portion of Ms. Fonda's broadcasts from Hanoi. In it, the Oscar-winning actress says she is speaking particularly to servicemen on Navy aircraft carriers in the Gulf of Tonkin.

Apparently addressing enlisted men who loaded bombs on attack bombers, she says she does not know what their officers are telling them, but that they should know "that these weapons are illegal. ... And the use of these bombs or the condoning of the use of these bombs makes one a war criminal."

In her ABC interview nearly 16 years later, Ms. Fonda said that "I don't remember calling soldiers 'war criminals,' but I do definitely recall saying that the weapons that were being used" had been "outlawed by the rules of warfare."

"I wanted to say to them, 'Let's think about what we're doing — all of us — because it's as much an American tragedy as it is a Vietnamese tragedy.'"

At the end of the interview, Ms. Fonda said she feels she owes "an apology" to Vietnam veterans everywhere "who I hurt or whose pain I caused to deepen because of things that I said or did. ..."

"My intentions were never to hurt them or make their situation worse. It was (to) the contrary. I was trying to help end the killing and the war, but there were times when I was thoughtless and careless about it."

"And I am very sorry I hurt them. And I want to apologize to them and to their families."

Vet Claims 'Apology' Insufficient

WATERBURY, Conn. (AP) — The head of a veterans coalition protesting actress Jane Fonda's plans to film a movie here says he's not satisfied by her apology to veterans and their families for her visit to Hanoi during the Vietnam War.

Gaetano Russo said Thursday that Ms. Fonda must "do a series of positive acts" beyond the television interview in which she apologized for her 1972 visit.

A North Carolina veteran said in a telephone interview Thursday night that he hoped Ms. Fonda's gesture was sincere.

"I was trying to help end the killing," Ms. Fonda said in the interview with Barbara Walters scheduled to be broadcast tonight on ABC's "20-20" news program. "But there were times I was thoughtless and careless about it and I'm ... very sorry that I hurt them."

The 15-minute interview was taped May 31 at Ms. Fonda's home in Santa Monica, Calif., Ms. Fonda's spokesman, Stephen Rivers, said Thursday.

Some veterans here and in Holyoke, Mass., referring to the actress as "Hanoi Jane," have vocally opposed her planned appearances in those cities in August for the filming of the movie "Union Street."

The veterans staged large protests in Waterbury, while the boards of aldermen in Holyoke and nearby Chicopee, Mass., passed resolutions in recent months declaring Ms. Fonda unwelcome in the area.

The Rev. Edmund Nadolny, pastor of St. Vincent Ferrer Church in nearby Naugatuck, predicted Ms. Fonda's apology will satisfy all but those who have gained personal publicity from the anti-Ms. Fonda protests.

"Most of the people I talked with wanted an apology," said Nadolny, who joined several other area clergymen last month in calling for an end to the protests. "They didn't want vengeance as much as an apology."

But Russo called the interview "typical Ms. Fonda hogwash."

The retired Connecticut Army National Guard major general said the actress was "worried about her image."

Ms. Fonda must back up her words with action to win his forgiveness, Russo said. He suggested she return to Vietnam to help in the return of prisoners of war still unaccounted for.

"She's got to do a series of positive acts to make me believe she is sincere in the apology," he said.

Broadcasters Balk At TV Marti Plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — A broadcasters trade group says a Senate proposal to beam American television programs to Cuba has become a "political deal" that is ignoring the concerns of American radio and TV stations.

The National Association of Broadcasters charges that TV Marti advocates are trying to squelch their concerns that the proposed government TV version of Radio Marti could interfere with U.S. broadcasts.

NAB officials said they were denied copies of engineering studies on the proposed TV Marti before the Senate Appropriations Committee voted Thursday on a spending bill that earmarks $7.5 million for the service in the 1989-90 budget of the U.S. Information Agency.

"It's a political deal," NAB lobbyist James May said of the committee's action on the proposal to transmit American news and entertainment programs to Cuba from a blimp over the Florida Keys.

The budget bill goes next to the full Senate.

May said the NAB was rebuffed by the staff of the Senate Appropriations subcommittee that approved the TV Marti appropriation last week and by Stewart Sweet, who is lobbying on behalf of TV Marti advocates.

Sweet's Washington firm of Black, Manafort, Stone & Kelly has links to the Republican presidential campaign of Vice President George Bush. Charles Black, a principal of the firm, is an adviser to the campaign.

Bush has been a vocal supporter of TV Marti and has backed the proposal in speeches aimed at gaining votes from the Cuban-American community of southern Florida.

But TV Marti is also being pushed by Democratic Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina, the Appropriations subcommittee chairman.

May said Sweet refused to give copies of the feasibility studies to NAB officials because of "national security concerns."

House Panel Wants Rules On 'Colorizing' Old Films

By GUY DARST

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Appropriations Committee is trying to ride to the rescue of movie directors and others who resent what Ted Turner has done to their black-and-white masterpieces by "colorizing" them.

The committee's cavalry may be headed off at the pass, though, by the powerful Rules Committee.

The movie provision is contained in the $9.7 billion appropriations bill for the Interior Department and related agencies passed by the committee on Thursday. The committee on a 25-20 show of hands rejected an amendment that would have deleted it.

The bill would create a nine-member commission to decide what movies are artistically significant.

A black-and-white movie so chosen could not be shown or distributed under its original title if it had been colored like "The Maltese Falcon" and others recently on television from Turner's vast film library.

In a provision that could affect the television practice of chopping movies to fit arbitrary time intervals with breaks for commercials, the bill would require that any chosen movie, black-and-white or color, would have to carry notice if it had been significantly changed over the objections of the director or principal writer. If those figures were dead, the commission could require a notice that it had been changed if it believed the director or writer would object if alive.

The Rules Committee can deflect the action by denying a waiver of the House rule that bills appropriating money should not contain substantive legislation. If the waiver is denied, any member on the floor can raise a point of order to delete the offending section.

The Rules chairman, Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., wrote the Appropriations Committee to object to its consideration of the issue instead of the Judiciary Committee, where a similar bill has been languishing.

Great art is being desecrated, argued the principal backer of the provision, Rep. Robert L. Mrazek, D-N.Y. Referring to the 1946 classic about returning war veterans, "The Best Years of Our Lives," Mrazek said, "I would rather watch the scene where Frederic March returns to his family than a roomful of Renoirs."

He read a telegram from director Frank Capra that complained the current owners of his 1940s film starring Jimmy Stewart, "It's a Wonderful Life," had "splashed it all over with Easter egg colors and ruined it."

"Obviously this is not going to survive the Rules Committee," said Mrazek. "But if it survives this Appropriations Committee, it will send a signal."

Stewart was present for the debate, and Rep. Mickey Edwards, R-Okla., used Stewart's noted performances as a reforming senator in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" to argue against considering the measure: "Mr. Smith would have stood up in this committee against the bypassing of committee procedures."

The leader of the opponents in the appropriations committee, Rep. Vic Fazio, D-Calif., argued, "This is a serious intrusion on copyright law we ought to leave to Mr. (Robert) Kastenmeier and his subcommittee." Kastenmeier, D-Wis., is chairman of Judiciary's copyrights subcommittee, and plans hearings soon, Fazio said.

Even so, he continued, the provision is deeply flawed since "performers, photographers, studio owners are all left out," and the issue belongs in labor-management negotiations between directors and producers.

"I find it offensive for a government body to designate what is art," Fazio said.

Stewart said the conversion of black-and-white movies to color "is really a terrible practice and something that should be outlawed."

Congress, he said "by legislation and so on, is going to recognize the motion picture as an art form more than it has done before. ... This is the thing that we won in this first tryout, which I think is very important."

PBS Begins TV Series Tonight On Plight Of The Handicapped

By KATHRYN BAKER

AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The little girl is so delighted, she cries out periodically to nobody in particular, "I'm walkin' with a cane!"

In Frederick Wiseman's documentary, "Deaf and Blind," viewers go right along with the girl on her first lesson with the cane as her teacher helps her negotiate stairways, identify corridors and search out the cause of a mysterious noise — a water fountain.

The four-part series begins tonight on PBS with the first two-hour installment, "Blind."

Wiseman is probably best-known for his 1967 documentary on the State Prison for the Criminally Insane in Bridgewater, Mass. Unlike that ground-breaking film, "Deaf and Blind" is no expose. It is set at the Alabama Institute for the Deaf and Blind in Talladega, a leading educator of the handicapped.

Wiseman's cinema-verite style provides an up-close look at what life is like for students and teachers at the institute. It would be difficult for anyone who sees the film to look at a deaf, blind or multi-handicapped person the same way again.

"Deaf and Blind" airs in four parts, each about two hours long: "Blind" tonight, "Deaf" on Saturday, "Multi-Handicapped" on June 24, and "Adjustment and Work" June 25.

Wiseman has made 20 films about American institutions, including the Army, a police department, Belmont racetrack and the Neiman-Marcus department store. He is fascinated by the intricacies of institutions, and he turns the camera — operated by John Davey — on classrooms, field trips, counseling sessions and staff meetings at the Alabama school.

There is no narration and little editing, and the subjects of the filming seem unaffected by the camera's presence. With little interruption and no outside explanation, the films can get tedious. But, as Wiseman says in his production notes, "by placing an audience in the midst of the enormous complexities of this other world of the disabled, (the films) attempt to convey some of the feeling, experiences and attitudes of blind and deaf people toward their lives."

In the opening of "Blind," Wiseman's camera follows the school's blind band to an appearance at a local stock-car race. This segment of the documentary is a profound little film in itself. Wiseman captures the sights and sounds of the racetrack and intersperses them with highly detailed images of the young people in their band uniforms gingerly feeling their way out of the schoolbus, gathering in a little group in the infield while high-performance race cars whiz by on the track.

At the institute, Wiseman starts with the youngest children first. On the playground, an elementary school girl goes down a slide. Without comment, Wiseman captures her courage, feet dangling for a beat before she lets go, confidently sliding off into the unknown.

In another segment, concerned teachers confer about a difficult student. Here, as often in the films, Wiseman conveys a sense of community and caring among the teachers and administrators of the school.

The films also reveal that many of the problems handicapped youngsters have are no different from anyone else's. In "Deaf," for instance, a student's mother has made the long drive to Talladega from Mobile to meet with a counselor concerned about her son's displays of anger. After a long discussion, the son finally reveals he is frustrated at not seeing his estranged father.

"He does not love you," his mother tells him with the help of rudimentary sign language. The boy looks at the floor. She tries to reassure him that his stepfather does love him, and he eventually hugs her and promises to try to behave better.

Greer Garson Given Award

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Academy Award-winning actress Greer Garson was presented Hebrew University of Jerusalem's Golda Meir Award for her work to provide educational opportunities to young people.

"This award is an undreamed-of honor and will be an inspiration and cherished treasure," Miss Garson, 79, told an audience that included Jihan Sadat, widow of slain Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

The actress' contributions include endowment funds to Southern Methodist University and the New University of Ulster at the Dallas Theater Center. She also launched a scholarship program for high school girls.

Miss Garson won the best-actress Oscar in 1942 for her starring role in "Mrs. Miniver" and academy nominations for her roles in "Good-bye Mr. Chips," "Mrs. Parkington" and "Sunrise at Campobello," among others.

Symphony Files For Bankruptcy

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Nashville Symphony Association has filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy after almost five months of struggling with its musicians to solve money problems.

The Music City's 85-member orchestra shut down Feb. 3 because of financial trouble, and since then a task force of board members and musicians have wrangled over cost-cutting plans to keep the symphony alive.

Attorney C. Kinian Cosner Jr., who filed the petition Thursday, said it will be followed within 15 days by a more detailed accounting of the orchestra's finances.

The filing of a bankruptcy petition protects the symphony from its creditors until a reorganization plan can be devised. The symphony has no plans for future performances, Cosner said.
