Arms Control, Foreign Policy New Summit Focus

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

TORONTO (AP) — Leaders of the world's seven richest nations, having resolved or at least papered over disagreements on Third World debt and farm subsidies, turned their attention today to a discussion of President Reagan's arms control initiatives and other foreign policy concerns.

The officials began their second day of talks aimed at drafting a final political communique. The United States was pushing for inclusion of a proposal to prohibit airplane hijackers from refueling.

Senior officials from the seven summit nations had worked into the early morning hours today on the wording of proposals endorsing the U.S. arms control negotiations with the Soviet Union and a call for further negotiations to reduce non-nuclear forces in Europe.

Reagan, arriving for the talks, held in a windowless basement room of the Metropolitan Toronto Convention Center, was asked about a coup in Haiti which overthrew civilian president Leslie Manigat.

"We are assessing that right now," said Reagan. The president did not respond at all when asked for his opinion of a breakthrough agreement announced today with Japan which resolved a lengthy dispute over U.S. access to the beef and citrus market.

The landmark agreement calls for Japan to lower tariffs on beef and oranges over the next six years with U.S. officials predicting it could double the value of U.S. beef exports to the country, pushing them to more than $1 billion annually.

The 14th annual economic summit meeting between leaders of the United States, Japan, West Germany, Britain, France, Italy and Canada began on Sunday and is scheduled to conclude with a final economic communique on Tuesday.

At the opening session, the Western leaders quickly decided to play down a contentious dispute involving farm subsidies and approved in principle a debt-relief package for the poorest countries of the world.

The leaders pledged in a statement after their first session Sunday afternoon to continue their close economic cooperation, which they credited for keeping the world economy out of a recession following the October stock market collapse.

"We all feel we have made real progress in recent years. Our message is and should be one of confidence and optimism in dealing with the challenges confronting us," the leaders said.

In an effort to moderate their generally optimistic tone, the leaders interjected a note of caution in their joint statement, which was issued by Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney.

"There is no room for complacency. Difficult challenges remain," the statement said. "Our countries must develop further our economic coordination efforts. Sound policies must be continued."

U.S. Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III echoed the positive statement today, saying, "I think there is to some extent an air of satisfaction, but I must say I don't believe it's an air of complacency."

Baker, interviewed by CBS-TV, said finance ministers had engaged in an extensive discussion on inflation and that "the general consensus (is) that while we must remain vigilant, we think it is pretty well under control."

The U.S. official described the ministers as "pleased with the degree of ex-

Court Rules NYC Club Law Is Constitutional

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today let New York City bar discrimination against women and minorities by private clubs with more than 400 members, giving cities and states new ammunition in a growing legal assault on such practices.

By a unanimous vote, the justices ruled that the New York City law is constitutional, at least as it is written.

The law banning discrimination by public accommodations exempts "distinctly private organizations." But it deprives non-religious groups of that exempt designation if they have more than 400 members, provide regular meal service and regularly get their members' dues paid by non-members such as the members' employers.

At least six other major cities — Buffalo, Chicago, Detroit, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Washington — have enacted similar ordinances recently.

The New York State Clubs Association, comprised of 125 private clubs and associations, challenged the New York City law soon after it was enacted in 1984.

The city had initiated proceedings against four men-only clubs — the 10,003-member New York Athletic Club, the 4,329-member University Club, the 1,900-member Century Association and the 1,600-member Union League Club.

Lawyers for the clubs association argued that the law wrongly creates an irrebuttable presumption that such organizations are not truly private if they have more than 400 members and meet the other criteria.

The law's attackers said it does not give individual clubs an opportunity to prove they should not be treated as a public accommodation.

Writing for the court today, Justice Byron R. White noted that any individual club wanting to challenge the New York City law as applied to it is free to do so.

But White said the law can be applied in a way that does not violate the constitutionally protected freedom of association.

In previous decisions, the Supreme Court has ruled that states may force the U.S. Jaycees and Rotary International to admit women as members.

In ruling unanimously in the Rotary case two years ago, the justices suggested that numerous other male-only or female-only private organizations may have to comply with state laws requiring equal access to public accommodations.

The challenge of New York City's law was supported in a "friend-of-the-court" brief submitted in behalf of, among others, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, the Loyal Order of Moose, the Improved Order of Red Men and Kiwanis International.

Kiwanis International last July voted to end its men-only tradition

Coup Ousts President Manigat

Namphy Seizes Control Of Haiti

By ED McCULLOUGH
Associated Press Writer

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Lt. Gen. Henry Namphy today declared himself president of Haiti after troops stormed the national palace and deposed civilian President Leslie Manigat.

"The future of democracy and liberty was at stake. The army must protect the superior interests of the country and must head the country," Namphy said in a speech broadcast late this morning on national television from the presidential palace.

"To this end, a military government has been formed with, as president, Gen. Henri Namphy," he said.

The coup ended four months of civilian government and put Namphy back in command of the nation he led for two years as head of a three-man junta. It came less than a week after a Manigat fired Namphy and tried to reorganize the military.

An armored personnel carrier sat on the lawn outside the national palace today. There were more troops than normal on patrol inside the high, wrought iron gates, but otherwise things appeared normal from the outside. Pedestrians and motorists were kept back from the palace.

A helmeted and fatigue-clad Namphy appeared on state-run television at about 1:30 a.m. in a broadcast from the palace.

"The army will lead the country this way," he declared, waving an Uzi submachine gun and flanked by helmeted soldiers.

The fate of Manigat, who was seized at his residence five miles north, and of his chief military ally, Lt. Col. Jean-Claude Paul, was not known. There was no official word on casualties.

Haitian journalists close to the military said troops loyal to Manigat were killed when soldiers backed by three tanks freed Namphy from house arrest and then stormed the palace. Namphy had been held at his residence in Bon Repos, 15 miles north of the capital.

The front of the palace did not appear damaged and showed no sign of the battle that began Sunday night and raged into the early morning hours.

At 6:30 a.m., the number of soldiers patrolling streets was not unusually high. There were fewer cars and people than normal. Gas stations and some small service operations were open. Most stores were closed, as is normal at that hour.

Radio stations were not broadcasting news, only music, and international operators refused to accept calls.

One operator said Namphy ordered operators not to place calls, but it was possible to dial directly.

People on the streets were aware of what had happened, despite the lack of radio reports.

"It's not good for democracy, what happened, but it may be good for Haiti," said one 22-year-old unemployed laborer. "Maybe we cannot talk, but maybe we can work."

Lobbyist For Super Collider Well Paid

GREENSBORO (AP) — A task force of the U.S. Energy Department is scheduled to visit North Carolina next week to inspect a site proposed to host the superconducting super collider, but some state officials have questioned the wisdom of spending $1.6 billion to lure the huge science project.

When the Council of State agreed this month to spend an additional $90,000 on promoting the site in Durham, Granville and Person counties, Attorney General Lacy Thornburg likened the expenditure to "pouring money down a rat hole."

A Washington lobbyist is being paid $20,000 a month to help North Carolina land the super collider. But a congressional aide said other states have been more aggressive in bidding for the project.

Lawyer Edward Forgotson, who served as deputy campaign finance chairman for President Reagan's 1984 re-election campaign, is the highest-paid among the states' hired collider lobbyists, the Greensboro News & Record reported Sunday.

Yet an aide to Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., chairman of the energy appropriations subcommittee that will decide collider funding for 1989, said no one from North Carolina's collider office in Washington has contacted him.

"I have not seen any efforts on the part of North Carolina," said Proctor Jones. "I don't even know who represents them."

But Forgotson said he had met with the senator.

"(Jones) knows I'm representing North Carolina — we've talked about it 18 times," Forgotson said. "He knows it. I've brought people in to meet with him."

Seven states are now vying to host

Women Admitted

By TOM SEPPY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four women stand ready to break the sex barrier at the exclusive Cosmos Club in the nation's capital, which has scrapped its 110-year-old male-only policy.

The membership voted overwhelmingly over the weekend to begin allowing women to join the club, which was founded by geologist John Wesley Powell in 1878 and has boasted Supreme Court justices, Nobel and Pulitzer prize-winners and other notables as members.

Tedson J. Meyers, the club's president, told a news conference Saturday that the vote was almost unanimous — "about 98 percent, as best as the eye can tell" — to begin accepting women for nomination to membership.

He said that shortly after the vote, the names of four women were submitted — a microbiologist, a public servant, a consumer advocate and a journalist. Meyers declined to identify any of the nominees.

There will be the club's regular

Arlington Rezoning Request For School On P&Z Agenda

The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission will consider a request by the Pitt County Board of Education to rezone 52 acres along Arlington Boulevard when it meets for its monthly meeting Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the council chambers of City Hall.

The 52-acre site is requested by the board to be rezoned from RA-20 (residential/agricultural) to O&I (office and institutional). The rezoning request would allow the proposed Rose High School facility to be located along Arlington Boulevard, east of Hooker Road.

In other matters Tuesday, the commission will consider a request by Lester and Bernice Branch to rezone a 20-acre tract located north of S.R. 1421, south of the Belvoir Highway and northwest of the Pitt-Greenville Airport from RA-20 to IU (unoffensive industry).

Other rezoning requests to be considered include a request by J. Bryant Kittrell to rezone two tracts of land in the Medical District located north of Stantonsburg Road, south of SR 1202 and east of Medical Oaks Apartments and the Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church.

Tract 1, 4.53 acres, is requested to be rezoned from MD-3 (medical district/office and institutional) to MD-5 (medical district/residential), while tract 2, .44 acres, is requested to be rezoned from MD-5 to MD-3.

Morco Realty is requesting an 11-acre tract located north of Mumford Road, and west of Parkers Creek be rezoned from RA-20 to IU, while Joseph D. Speight is requesting a .95-acre tract south of Peed Drive and being a portion of Summerfield Gardens Apartments be rezoned from RA-20 to CH (highway commercial).

The C.J.L. Company is requesting a 1.29-acre tract located east of Charles Boulevard and east of the Thackery Road intersection be rezoned from R-9S (single-family residential) to O&I (office and institutional), while the Department of Planning and Development is requesting to rezone 1.18 acres located north of Edwards Street between Monroe Street and Williams Avenue from CS (shopping center to R9 (medium-density residential)).

In other matters Tuesday, commission members will consider a request by the Greenville Housing Authority for voluntary annexation of a 9.5-acre tract located off SR 1204 and east of Rountree and Westhills Townhomes, and also consider an amendment to the City Ordinance which would create a separate Historic Properties/District Commission.

Meanwhile, the commission will consider several preliminary plats including the plat of Sandi Villas Apartments, located on Haven Drive, west of Landmark Street. The plat involves 50 apartment units on a 3.07-acre tract.

Other preliminary plats to be considered include that of the Greenville Housing Authority, Phase I, located on SR 1204, east of Rountree and Westhills Townhomes and involving 32 apartment units on a 4.52 acres; a preliminary plat of Paramore Farms, located on the 14th Street Extension, north of Windy Ridge Townhomes and also involving the redesign of the street pattern to allow a street connection to Woodwind Drive, and a preliminary plat of Tucker Estates, Section IV, located southwest of the Paramore Farms Subdivision on Woodwind Drive, and also allowing a street connection to Surrey Lane.

A number of different types of flies cause problems to cattle during the summer. Flies which bite, suck blood, and/or cause annoyance to cattle include horse flies, deer flies, face flies, stable flies, and mosquitoes. However, the horn fly is probably one of the most serious pests of cattle.

Horn flies pierce the skin of cattle to suck blood and they are persistent biters. During the summertime, high populations of horn flies cause cattle to lose weight and lower milk production. Horn fly numbers of 50 or more per animal are considered to be of economic importance, although 10,000 to 20,000 per animal have been reported.

Methods of fly control on cattle include rubbing devices (backrubbers, dustbags, etc.), sprays, dusts, insecticides as feed additives, dips, pour-ons, and ear tags. Rubbing devices such as dustbags are a proven effective method of horn fly control when hung when cattle are forced to use them. The use of sprays, dusts, pour-ons, and dips are effective but multiple applications may be necessary during fly season. For many cattle producers, insecticidal ear tags have proven to be effective for the entire season. Regardless of which method used, cattle producers who have not already done it, should begin to use some type of fly control. Cattle infested with heavy numbers of horn flies or other flies certainly cannot grow or produce up to their potential.

Contact the Agricultural Extension Office at 830-6373 for more information regarding fly control on cattle.

Budget Story Clarified

An article in The Daily Reflector Friday on the salaries of the mayor and the City Council should have said that the proposed salary line item in the mayor and the council's budget for 1988-89 is $14,908, compared with $7,600 budgeted this year.

According to Ron Kimble, finance director, the difference in amounts is a result of the proposed upgrading of a secretarial position from part-time to full-time status. The 1988-89 fiscal year salaries of the mayor and the council are proposed to remain the same as this budget year — $6,000 for the mayor, $3,900 for the mayor pro-tem, and $3,600 for council members. An auto allowance of $200 per month for the mayor and $100 per month for

NOISY JAW JOINTS

If you have noisy jaw joints that sometimes click when you open and close your mouth or have been experiencing occasional facial pain or a dull earache, you may have a dental problem. These are symptoms of myofascial pain dysfunction syndrome. This problem is associated with the muscles that control the lower jaw or temporomandibular joint.

Aside from chewing food, consider how often you use your jaw muscles in everyday life. They are always involved when you experience deep emotion or stress, such as grimacing in pain or clenching your teeth. Sometimes this can lead to spasms of the jaw muscles. Another contributing factor is malocclusion or improper meeting of the teeth when your jaws are closed.

Missing teeth, fillings that are too high, and teeth that are not properly aligned are some of the dental problems that should be corrected to prevent myofascial pain dysfunction and other symptoms associated with your temporomandibular joint.

If you are having noisy jaw joints, call our office and schedule an appointment today. Let's evaluate and recommend the best treatment for you.

We welcome new patients, both children and adults.

Underwater Cave Mapped

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A four-man diving team swam through an 8,440-foot underwater cave system, setting records and mapping 40 million-year-old tunnels in an effort that claimed a companion's life last month.

"Here's to ... Bill McFaden, who I'm sure would love to be here today," diver Parker Turner, 36, of Destin said after he and the others emerged Sunday afternoon from their journey. McFaden, 32, ran out of air and drowned in a nearby cave May 15, as his companions tried to pull him to safety.

The divers swam through 1.6 miles of craggy limestone caverns from Sullivan Sink about 12 miles south of Tallahassee to Cheryl Sink.

They spent just over an hour breathing specially blended gases to decompress from the dive at depths up to 240 feet.

By STUART SAVAGE Reflector Staff Writer

A Superior Court Judge has sanctioned a Pitt County physician and ordered him to pay $13,450 to Roy H. Park Broadcasting, owners of WNCT-TV, saying a civil suit brought by Dr. Joe Ward against the television station was "a sham on the court and was not filed in good faith."

But court officials said Ward has appealed the action to the Court of Appeals and posted a bond rather than pay the money.

"The order ... is absurd. I'm not kidding you," Ward said in an interview this morning.

Ward filed a $30 million suit against the television station and WNCT-TV's news director in December 1986, charging that on several instances — beginning in December 1985 — the television station aired news reports about malpractice action brought against Ward and others and stories concerning a former University Nursing Home resident, which were "false and/or distorted and/or misleading and which also defamed University Nursing Center and/or the plaintiff (Ward)."

But Judge James Lewellyn dismissed Ward's complaint in February 1988, saying that some of the broadcasts, including those of December 1985, were "absolutely privileged," in that they were reporting on duly constituted judicial proceedings, and that the other broadcasts, including those of February 1986, were "qualified privileged," in that they were reporting on matters of public concern.

The ruling sanctioning Ward was signed by Judge Lewellyn on June 10 in connection with a motion for sanctions filed by the broadcasting company in February 1988.

Saying, "That since February 22, 1987, the defendants (the television station) have incurred legal expenses in the amount of $13,450," and "That the evidence in this case points to the fact that ... this matter was under the law spurious and without foundation," and "That the complaint was in fact a sham on the court and was not filed in good faith," Judge Lewellyn ordered "the plaintiff be sanctioned by this court and he is hereby ordered to pay ... $13,450," to the broadcasting company.

Ward, who has also appealed the ruling dismissing his suit against the television station, said today, "He (Judge Lewellyn) did not go by the book," in dismissing the action against the television station, or in the order invoking the sanction.

Ward, suggesting that several other aspects of the way the case has been handled are unusual, said "It's very unusual for this (sanctions) to happen."

"There's no way that's going to stand up (on appeal) either," Ward said of Lewellyn's June 10 order.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Foreshadowing

Smoking Case Has Implications

A cigarette smoking suit brought by the widower of a woman who died of lung cancer brought the first jury award of all the such cases. The jury in Newark, N.J. awarded $400,000. The jury, however, ruled the tobacco firms did not conspire to mislead the public concerning smoking danger.

Lawyers from both sides saw it as a victory and financial analysts didn't see the verdict as affecting the outlook for the cigarette manufacturing companies.

The ruling should have no effect on the tobacco farmers. Now cigarette warnings are required on packs and advertising, which provides a legal defense in cases involving those who began smoking or continue to smoke after the warnings were instituted.

The negative side is the concern that any financial award at all could bring an increase in suits involving cigarette smoking. That is a cause for concern for the tobacco industry.

There is a far greater implication in the award in the New Jersey case. That is its possible effects on all product liability cases. If tobacco companies can be assessed damages, can any other industry whose product is adjudged to affect health in any way?

What are the legal ramifications for all industries, from the meat industry to vegetables... or from bicycles to shoes?

What is happening to the cigarette industry could foreshadow legal problems for a wide range of producers, depending on where this and other cases lead.

That is of concern to the consumer because eventually it is the consumer who is going to pay all the cost of a given product, including product liability. The long range implications of that can only be higher prices for a great variety of goods.

Decision Time

Tough Job, Tough Circumstances

No one can envy the Pitt County Board of Elections and its employees the job it has to do Tuesday night.

The board will be holding a hearing after which it will make a determination concerning the Pitt County Commissioners District A primary held May 31.

D.D. Garrett had called for a runoff after James H. Dupree failed to gain a majority in the May 3 primary. After the votes were tallied in the runoff, however, Garrett was ahead by only two votes. Dupree was entitled to call for a recount and did so. Again, however there was a two-vote lead for Garrett.

In the meantime it was learned that two voters in Greenville 7 did not receive proper voting instructions and thus did not vote in the county commissioners primary.

All of these things will have to be considered by the board of elections after Tuesday's public hearing.

One of the board's options is to set another primary election which would mean another trip to the polling places in Consolidated District A by registered Democrats.

It is all a difficult situation for the Board of Elections, the candidates and the voters.

Nevertheless the matter must be settled and somehow a Democratic candidate for Consolidated District A will be chosen. It tells us again the value of even one vote in the Democratic election processes. Elections can be determined by that one person who decides at the last moment to go to the polls.

Public Forum

To the editor:

With all due respect to your personal opinions, I resent your editorial of June 15 entitled "Line Up, Oddballs: Why Not Replace The President Too?" This editorial was truly an insult to President Reagan and a clear example of the media trying to manipulate public opinion. President Reagan — like everyone else — has both good and bad points. Your mockery of his alleged interest in astrology is fascinating, but you fail to mention that many average American people read their horoscopes every day — whether for pleasure or for application. Why do we expect our leaders to be God when they are really like the rest of us? Your statement "The remaining shreds of sensibility and believability have fled the Reagan Administration" remind me of the upcoming election. The Democratic contenders for President are doing what they do best — promising the world for a vote. If we really listen and examine Dukakis' proposals, I think it is both "sensible and believable" to see our country return to a pessimism state experienced in the Carter years. If President Reagan were replaced, the Carter destruction would have continued. President Reagan has given young people a sense of hope and patriotism not experienced in many years. We can actually see a future ahead for both ourselves and future generations. High interest rates, double-digit inflation, high unemployment and an obsolete military were the only accomplishments of the Carter Administration. Those days left within two years after Reagan took office. Your mockery of Reagan seems funny now, but I hope to be the one laughing in November as Vice President Bush continues the Reagan legacy. Editorials should be a means of constructive criticism, not insulting remarks about our fellow man.

To the editor:

Your editorial of June 15 on President Reagan was in very poor taste. It's not clever nor even good political satire to degrade the President of the United States, particularly one of the greatest Presidents we have ever had!

I rarely read your inane editorials and will certainly try to never do so again.

Treat Causes, Not Symptoms

WASHINGTON — A Pulitzer prize-winning journalist friend called in desperation last week for advice on how he should handle his daughter's graduation party from high school. My friend said his daughter wanted to serve champagne to her 60 graduating classmates but he and the wife were "freaking out" that "the kids might drink too much."

In order to prevent the celebration from getting out of hand, my liberal sixties friend said he intended to ask each of the visiting students to identify who in the group would be driving an automobile home that night so he could withhold liquor from them. I thought to myself, "Good try, folks, but you're wasting your time."

Surprise, surprise. On party day, in spite of my friend's best laid plans, none of the students identified themselves as drivers. By the middle of the party, all of the champagne was gone and most of the upper-middle income white students were either drinking beer, chugging bourbon or snorting coke in their cars. And according to my horrified colleague, "there was no way to stop them."

On one level I can sympathize with my friend's dilemma. His objectives were well-intentioned. From a legal, as well as a moral position, he didn't want any of his daughter's classmates to get killed on the way home from his house. But as much as any parent would like to harp on the dangers of drinking and driving and drug consumption, there are times when such messages aren't heard. And graduation time is one of those.

Students want to get ripped and they're going to do it. All parents can do, at times like these, is to urge their offspring to be careful and if they're going to get high, to do it on their own premises.

The business of getting young people to act "straight" or responsibly with drugs/alcohol is hardly a simple matter. But of late, out of frustration, I suspect, there has been a change of heart among policymakers in this country to get as tough with drug users in this country as with drug pushers. In California, for example, the State Senate recently passed legislation that would require every high school student applying for a driver's license to prove that he or she was passing all of their courses for graduation and staying out of trouble. If a student flunked a course, was truant or involved with drugs they would be denied a license.

The Republicans on Capitol Hill have recently introduced legislation that would mandate capital punishment for drug kingpins, involve the armed forces along the borders to stop drug traffickers and harsher user penalties, including driver's license suspensions and ineligibility for student aid and other federal programs.

And the word from the White House is that the president's National Drug Policy Board intends to suggest that all federal aid be denied to students convicted of using illegal drugs while in college. In short, if a student gets caught smoking one reefer, he would be in serious financial trouble.

"I certainly have come across a lot of places where the prevailing attitude is that what a college student does in his room is his business," says Gary L. Bauer, the president's chief domestic policy adviser.

"That attitude is out of step with where the country is."

I suggest Mr. Bauer is out of step with most college students and the rest of the country. And yet Mr. Bauer is not the most authoritarian of the Reagan White House crowd. Attorney General Edwin Meese has been pushing a proposal that would withhold federal aid from any student convicted of using drugs several years before he entered college.

Surely, few people in this country think it's a great idea to be stoned or drunk all the time. But the business of denying a driver's license or federal student aid only closes escape hatches for students who may want to get out of trouble.

Granted, the law and order crowd may be well-intentioned with some of their ideas on how to solve the drug problem. But throwing young people in jail who've grown up in a drug culture and are experimenting with drugs is crazy. That's no way to help them. It doesn't make a lot of sense to burden these youngsters with the albatross of a criminal conviction to wear for the rest of their lives.

The answer to our drug problem, as Jesse Jackson has so wisely pointed out in his presidential campaign, lies in curtailing the demand at home. The problem, in part, lies with the pathetic drug education programs that are offered in our schools. Simple lectures on the dangers of drugs are a waste of time. Slide shows and movies and scary posters don't begin to change a kid's mind. Being talked down to or threatened by a teacher is also no way to reach anyone.

Rather, drug education should be integrated into the regular school curricula. The lessons needed are lessons in decision-making, in judgment, in thinking things through — lessons which apply across the board. And to the extent that drugs are taught or discussed separately, we must recognize that kids often know more about the subject than teachers do.

It's time for some straight talk about drugs and alcohol and a public examination of why young people seek these outlets. In part, young people turn to drugs and the fantasy they bring, because they are dissatisfied with their lives and the hypocrisy they see in the real world around them. All they see or hear about are government officials on the take and they say, "Hey, man, I can only make it if I cut corners and sell a little coke like everyone else."

The truth is that short-run kicks are increasingly attractive when the long picture is bleak. And for millions of young people in this country, particularly minority kids, there is little hope in their future vision of America. We must change that.

Wright Troubling Democrats

WASHINGTON — Speaker Jim Wright's weekend television blitz, aimed at building public support, triggered instead the first talk among Democratic House members that his days of power may be limited.

"I can't tell you how much everything changed between Friday and Monday," one senior, well-respected Democratic congressman told us. While still not prepared to speak out publicly for fear of being labeled disloyal, he and Democratic colleagues now privately question whether Wright may have trouble retaining the speakership.

Rank-and-file House Democrats do not relish a future floor vote on Wright should the bipartisan House Ethics Committee split six to six along strict party lines in its findings on Wright. The result is Democratic cloakroom talk supporting President Reagan's call for an independent counsel to investigate the speaker.

Shultz's Terrorist

Secretary of State George Shultz, usually a tough anti-terrorist, opened the doors of the State Department last week to a Mideast terrorist, forcing Iraq's Deputy Prime Minister Tarik Aziz to cancel an appointment here with the secretary of state.

Galal Talabani is the Iran-backed Kurdish leader accused of major terrorist acts in Iraq's Kurdish provinces. That includes taking West German, Japanese and Italian hostages.

Shultz yielded to supporters of Israel and foes of Iraq by ordering an aide to receive Talabani on "humanitarian" grounds. That brought angry cancellation of Tarik Aziz's visit at Shultz's invitation to discuss ways to end the Iran-Iraq war.

Bush's Angry Huckster
An angry Roger Ailes, George

Bush's media whiz, was cooled off and promised greater access when he threatened to quit about being called in too late to prevent the vice president's disastrous interview with Ted Koppel.

Manhattan advertising executive Ailes grumbled that the decision to go on ABC's "Nightline" had been made without consulting him by Bush pollster-strategist Robert Teeter. By the time he was called in, Ailes said, it was too late to prepare Bush for the onslaught that awaited him.

With No World Crisis, Summiteers Have To Talk Economics

TORONTO (AP) — When leaders of the industrialized democracies hold summits, foreign policy issues have a way of pushing exchange-rate levels, interest-rate worries and other dry but vital financial concerns off to the side.

But for President Reagan's "last hurrah" — this is his final summit — the focus finally is on what these annual economic meetings were designed to be about: economics.

In fact, the joint statement of the leaders' views on world affairs was being released later today, leaving the rest of the summit clear for concentration on economic matters.

For the first time, a session on economic issues launched the summit Sunday after glittering arrival ceremonies. At the outset, Reagan made an appeal for eliminating agricultural subsidies — the hottest economic issue here — and will return to the topic before Tuesday's adjournment.

"Believe me, it's going to be discussed," the president told a reporter as he posed for pictures with the other leaders before dinner. He is determined to end the subsidies by the year 2000, and faces stiff European resistance.

At the opening session, British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher supervised a review of economic trends since the first summit was held in 1975.

And while global politics, including a report by Reagan on his talks in Moscow with Soviet General Secretary Mikhail S. Gorbachev, were the theme at the leaders' dinner Sunday night, no tough international issue loomed for the three-day meeting.

Analysis

In fact, in another agenda change, the talks today were beginning with a roundtable on the global outlook — without the distraction of non-economic issues.

"We wanted to put the focus back on economics," said Derek Burney, chief of staff for the summit host, Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney.

That is not the way it has been in the past.

Last year, for instance, the Iran-Contra scandal shadowed Reagan's talks with the other leaders in Venice, Italy, and only at the last minute was a denunciation of South Africa's racial policy excluded from the windup communique. The war in the Persian Gulf between Iran and Iraq attracted far more attention than interest rates and growth projections.

In 1986, in Tokyo, terrorism took precedence over economics as Reagan and Mrs. Thatcher persuaded their partners to issue a forceful anti-terrorism statement.

In 1985, French President Francois Mitterrand kept the summiteers from endorsing Reagan's controversial program for a space-based missile defense, while in 1984 outgoing Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau sought futilely to persuade the leaders to support disarmament.

And in 1983, despite Trudeau's drive for nuclear arms reductions, Reagan won endorsement of the U.S. installation of new missiles in Western Europe.

World leaders can get worked up over economic issues as much as they do over terrorism and disarmament. At this summit, there could be a row over agricultural subsidies, with Reagan and Mulroney lined up against Mitterrand and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl in trying to phase them out.

But the issue may be bucked to the General Agreement on Trade and Tariff talks in Montreal in December.

There will be some serious debate about how to ease the debt burden on Third World countries.

Mitterrand is pushing a plan to cancel one-third of the official debt of the poorer countries in the context of a 10-year rescheduling agreement. Nigel Lawson, the British chancellor of the exchequer, is urging a different approach: converting some loans to grants and rescheduling and reducing interest rates.

But even in the economic sphere, the theme of Reagan's finale is: Don't rock the boat. The world outlook seems rosier than it has been in years, and with elections looming in the United States and in Canada, the host country, dry statistics and quiet discussion will be just fine with everyone.

Barry Schweid, head of the AP's State Department staff, is covering his fourth economic summit meeting.

Court Says New York City Private Club Law Is Constitutional

and allow its 8,200 clubs worldwide to admit women.

The law was defended by, among others, the U.S. Conference of Mayors, the Council of State Governments, the National Association of Counties, the National League of Cities, the American Civil Liberties Union and the American Bar Association.

In today's decision, White acknowledged that "a considerable amount of private or intimate association" might occur in New York City's private clubs.

However, he said the same is true "in many restaurants and other places of public accommodation, but that fact alone does not afford the en-ity as a whole any constitutional immunity to practice discrimination when the government has barred it from doing so."

White said some clubs may be able to prove they were organized for "specific expressive purposes" they will not be able to pursue "if they cannot confine membership to those who share the same sex, for example, or the same religion."

But he added, "It seems sensible enough to believe that many of the large clubs covered by the (New York City) law are not of this kind."

Two justices who joined in the opinion, Anthony M. Kennedy and Harry A. Blackmun, once belonged to male-only clubs.

Kennedy, the court's newest justice, was criticized during his Senate confirmation hearings last year for his past membership in exclusive private clubs.

Kennedy quit San Francisco's men-only, all-white Olympic Club after he was mentioned as a possible Supreme Court nominee. He had been a member since 1962. He quite the men-only Sutter Club in his hometown of Sacramento, Calif., eight years ago.

Blackmun recently quit the Cosmos Club in Washington, D.C., where he had held a longtime membership. The club for 110 years has barred women from becoming members, a policy it voted Saturday to abandon.

In other action, the court:

— Overturned, at least for now, a contempt citation that could have subjected the Roman Catholic Church to $100,000 a day in fines for withholding documents in a lawsuit.

But the 8-1 ruling left unanswered key questions in an eight-year-old suit by a "pro-choice" coalition that says the church's tax-exempt status gives it an unfair advantage in the political battle over abortion rights.

— Agreed to study a dispute over a Birmingham, Ala., plan for promoting more black firefighters.

The justices said they will study efforts by city officials and others to kill a challenge by white firefighters who say the plan makes them victims of reverse discrimination.

— Agreed to decide whether Indian tribes may control, through tribal zoning laws, the use of land owned by non-Indians within a reservation's boundaries.

The justices, in a case of significance to any state in which a reservation is located, said they will resolve a dispute involving the Yakima Indian Reservation in Washington state.

— Ruled unanimously that prison inmates may sue in federal courts the doctors who treated them behind bars.

The court, reinstating a North Carolina inmate's lawsuit, said prison doctors — both government employees and providers of medical services under contract — may be sued under a much-used civil rights law.

— Placed new limits on the power of states to impose residency requirements that restrict the number of lawyers licensed to practice within their borders.

The justices, voting 7-2, barred Virginia officials from reinstating a residency requirement successfully challenged by a lawyer living in neighboring Maryland.

— Refused to order Tennessee to help pay for continuing efforts to racially desegregate Nashville area public schools.

The court, without comment, let stand a ruling that shielded the state from making such expenditures.

Activists Claim AIDS Education Funds Blocked

By ERICA JOHNSTON
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — AIDS activists say state officials are holding up federal grants for AIDS education for political reasons, but officials say they are making sure that the education does not offend community standards.

"What it amounts to is, North Carolina at this point has a window of opportunity to do some very dramatic things to stem the tide of AIDS, and they're not doing anything about it," said Leo Teachout, director of the GROW AIDS Resource Project in Wilmington.

But David Flaherty, secretary of the state Department of Human Resources, said the money, which now amounts to $350,000, "spent the wrong way, ... could do more harm than good for what we've been trying to achieve in North Carolina." Flaherty oversees the the Division of Health Services, which includes the AIDS Control Program.

The controversy centers around grants made to the state by the U.S. Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta. The federal agency announced grants to the state AIDS-control office of $80,000 and $90,000 in the spring and summer of 1987 to educate gay men and intravenous drug users and minorities about the deadly disease. In March, the federal agency renewed the grants.

"The CDC assumed the state had spent the first grants, so they renewed them. So now they have $350,000," said David Jones, lobbyist for the N.C. Coalition of AIDS Service Organizations, which represents seven groups from Wilmington to Asheville.

The money is to be used for community-based education efforts. It is the first federal or state money to be allocated in North Carolina expressly for that purpose, authorities said.

But none of the money has been given yet to local agencies — health departments or private organizations — to begin the AIDS education.

The problem, Flaherty says, is that county health departments were not sufficiently involved the first time the state sought local applicants for the money.

The AIDS-control office notified all local health departments, drug-treatment programs and AIDS service organizations in North Carolina of the money, said David Jolly, who heads the office.

The notification "very clearly said that we encouraged agencies to collaborate with health departments," Jolly said. "It's also true that a number of AIDS service organizations applied without extensive collaboration with local health departments, but others did consult with the local departments."

The state received at least 11 applications by the Nov. 30, 1987, deadline, but Flaherty was dissatisfied with the selection process. So department officials revised the criteria for the grants, and sent the new applications out last month.

Now, the department hopes to get the money flowing by October, said Jesse Goodman, the human resources department's director of governmental liaison services.

"We never got a real reason" why the first applications were scrapped, Teachout said.

Flaherty emphasizes not the speed with which the AIDS education can begin, but the way in which the grant money is spent.

"The applications came in, a multitude of them, and the first thing I asked was, 'What do the health departments think about this?' We didn't ask that," he said.

"... So I said, 'Let's take them and throw out these and go back,'" Flaherty said. "... I think our first priority is not to waste money just to get it spent."

The updated grant applications specify that each proposal has to be approved by the local health department, as well as a state review panel. And then the proposed education materials must be submitted to a local citizens' review panel. The idea is that the extra steps will insure that the approved programs do not offend most of each community's residents.

IN THE STATE

Highway Fatalities

RALEIGH (AP) — Seven people, including a Florida woman who was a passenger in a car that was struck by another vehicle, died in weekend traffic accidents on North Carolina roads, the state Highway Patrol said today.

Linda Dianne Sanders, 24, of Tampa, Fla., was killed at 4:20 p.m. Sunday, troopers said. She was a passenger in a car that was struck by a vehicle that crossed the median of Interstate 95 one mile south of Selma in Johnston County, hitting the first vehicle head-on.

Antonio Rosario Jr., 28, of Hubert, was struck by a car and killed about 12:30 a.m. Saturday while riding a bicycle on N.C. 24 east of Jacksonville, troopers said. One person was injured in the accident, which involved alcohol, they said.

On Friday night, Jake Rowe Redmond, 27, of Etowah, was killed when his motorcycle ran off a rural road in Henderson County and hit a tree, the patrol said.

Shortly before midnight Friday, Gregory Spivey, 21, of Tabor City, died when he lost control of his car on N.C. 1304, ran off the road, hit several trees and overturned.

Christopher Aaron Wright, 18, of Madison, was thrown from his vehicle and killed at 12:10 a.m. Saturday when his car ran off a road a mile north of Mayodan in Rockingham County and overturned, troopers said.

Just before 4 p.m. Saturday, James North, 16, of East Bend, died when he drove off N.C. 1525 west of Winston-Salem in Forsyth County. Troopers said alcohol was involved.

At 11 p.m. Saturday, James Lowder, 16, of Albemarle, died when he drove his car off a curve on N.C. 1134 in Stanly County south of Richfield, the patrol said.

Michael's Brother

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Larry Jordan gets a lot of attention as a player in the new World Basketball League, but not for his magic touch with a basketball.

"From city to city, I'm getting a lot of media attention. I guess mostly because of my name," Larry Jordan said. "Mostly they ask me a lot of questions about Michael."

Larry, 25, Michael Jordan's older brother, is only 5-foot-8. But he plays for the Chicago Express of the WBL, wearing the same No. 23 as his brother, who was named the most valuable player in the NBA.

The WBL is the new six-team league for shorties — in basketball measurements, anyone under 6-foot-5.

Last week, a National Public Radio story focused on his sudden emergence in professional basketball. He was profiled at halftime during a recent National Basketball Association game on CBS.

Larry said he doesn't mind the attention, and was assured that he wasn't chosen for the team just because of his brother.

Battery Acid

ULAH, N.C. (AP) — State officials say money from a fund set up to pay for cleaning up toxic waste dumps will be spent for the first time to clean up parts of a site in Randolph County where car batteries were cracked for the lead inside.

Officials said they would file suit against the landowner after the site was cleaned up in an attempt to recoup the money.

The 30-foot-high hill of cracked car batteries behind Glenn Hoskins' house represents one of the state's worst toxic-waste problems. For 10 to 20 years, Hoskins and some neighbors bought used batteries, cracked them open and sold the scrap lead. It was hard work, Hoskins said, but he made a good living at it.

The workers wore rubber gloves and rubber boots to guard against the battery acid, but the ground had no such protection. As a result, bits of lead built up in the ground, contaminating the topsoil and threatening to poison the children of the southern Randolph County neighborhood.

In the worst spots, state officials say, up to 14 percent of the soil is lead, the Winston-Salem Journal reported Sunday.

Furniture Buyers

THOMASVILLE (AP) — Some North Carolina furniture retailers say they will face tough times in selling to out-of-state customers if manufacturers continue to discourage that trade.

Furniture buyers have been flocking to North Carolina because retailers' markup is usually half or less than that of other states. But some retailers are objecting to the marketing practices of some manufacturers.

This month, the retailers filed a complaint in federal court in Wilmington accusing Thomasville Furniture Industries Inc. of illegally restricting their business in a way that pushes up retail prices.

Currently, as many as 60 North Carolina retailers sell up to $300 million of furniture to out-of-state customers annually, J. Phil Kennett, president of the N.C. Furniture Retailers Association, told The News and Observer of Raleigh in its Sunday editions.

Five Of Six Escapees Recaptured

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Only one of six inmates who escaped from the Cumberland County jail about a week ago remains at large, following the capture of a "Ninja-style" double-murderer and a murder suspect when they allegedly broke into a school to get something to eat.

"Our task force is still out" searching for Ricky Allen Wilson, said Sheriff's Department spokesman Hershell Barbour. "There will be no let-up. A sigh of relief. But no let-up."

"We think he's still in his own backyard," Barbour said of Wilson, 30, who was charged in March with breaking, entering and larceny and possession of stolen goods. "We think he's still in Cumberland County."

Four of the five escapees apprehended were found not far from their homes. Early Sunday, confessed double murderer Jeffrey Karl Meyer and murder suspect Jerry Ronald Pond Jr., were captured when they allegedly broke into an elementary school, authorities said.

Meyer, 21, and Pond, 24, were among six inmates who fled the jail June 12. Three of the escapees, Frederick Glenn Evans, Jeffrey Charles Minnick and Gregory Maurice Lee, were captured last week.

Meyer, dressed in oversized gray pants and an oversized blue-plaid shirt, and Pond, wearing only a pair of blue boxer shorts, were barefoot, covered with scratches and bug bites allegedly from hiding out in the woods, and hungry, officials said.

"I would say they were exhausted," Barbour said. Cumberland County Sheriff's Deputy David Thompson discovered the fugitives about 11:30 a.m. when he responded to a silent alarm that signaled a break-in at Cliffdale Road Elementary School, Barbour said. Thompson and sheriff's Sgt. G.L. Mobley, who was called in to back up Thompson, made the arrests.

Meyer and Pond offered no resistance whatsoever. "When they were told to get down and spread-eagle they got down and spread-eagle," Barbour said, adding that they probably were weak from hunger.

"They hadn't had anything to eat in six days," he said. "I think the first meal they had was" what they got from the school Sunday.

Barbour said authorities don't know where Meyer got the clothes he was wearing.

Meyer was taken to Highsmith-Rainey Memorial Hospital for a foot injury shortly after his arrest, authorities said. "The foot was visibly swollen," apparently injured when Meyer tried to kick out the window of the jail during the escape, Barbour said. The foot was not broken, he said.

Pond and Meyer were being held in isolation at the Cumberland County jail Sunday night, according to a jail spokesman.

Three people have been arrested for allegedly helping the escapees. On Wednesday, sheriff's detectives charged Tonya Sherele Harris, 20, and Barbara Ann Murrah, both of Fayetteville, with providing a weapon to an inmate.

Ms. Harris, a friend of Evans, allegedly smuggled in two 12-inch hacksaw blades inside a jigsaw puzzle that she mailed to Meyer under Evans' direction. Ms. Murrah allegedly took part in the smuggling effort.

Barbour said changes are being made in jail security as a result of the escape, and an internal investigation has been ordered by Sheriff Morris Bedsole.

"You can bet it is an intensive internal investigation — not trying to blame anybody ... but to try to make the system better. ... We're all looking at it as a learning experience," he said.

Bakker Says Funds No Worry

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — Former PTL leader Jim Bakker still isn't giving specifics, but he insists he has enough supporters and enough money to regain control of the ailing television ministry.

He said he expects to get the money "from many sources," but declined to elaborate.

"Money is not the real problem here," he said during a news conference at Heritage USA. "This is a spiritual problem. Once the spiritual problem is solved, the money will be here."

He said a consultant told him he has a million supporters, but he declined to name the consultant.

Bakker was at Heritage USA on Saturday to tour the grounds with his attorneys and talk with financiers and with contractors, including Roe Messner, who built much of the Christian retreat.

Bakker said he wanted to see what needed to be done to bring Heritage USA back to full operation so he could work out details of his plan to regain control.

A federal bankruptcy judge has ordered PTL to sell off land, buildings and other assets in an effort to repay as much as $130 million in debts.

Piedmont Could Be Next In Line For Drought

By The Associated Press
The drought in North Carolina, which has been most severe in the mountains, has been creeping eastward, and lake levels are slowly dropping, experts say.
"At this time, as far as flows are concerned, the drought is more severe than 1986," Max Grimes of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers told the Winston-Salem Journal.
Grimes said current water levels on the W. Kerr Scott Reservoir and the Yadkin River — Winston-Salem's primary water source — are below those marked during the record-setting, bone-dry drought of 1986.
The weekend thunderstorms over much of the state did not significantly alleviate the drought, a National Weather Service forecaster said Sunday.
"There's no way you can say the rain that fell with the thunderstorms over the weekend wasn't beneficial, but it hasn't broken the drought by any means," said James Brackett, a weather service meteorologist in Raleigh.

The mountains are suffering through a dry spell that began 3½ years ago, according to the Coweeta Hydrologic Laboratory in Macon County. Since 1985, rainfall for the North Carolina mountains has come up five feet less than normal accumulation.
The low rainfall has prompted Duke Power Co. to conserve use of its two dozen hydroelectric plants, said Joseph Maher, a company spokesman. Duke Power relies on the plants as a secondary power source during peak demands.
"We've been running our hydro-stations at the absolute minimum — only enough to conserve water flow downstream," he said. "We're trying to conserve as much water as we can till we hit our peak period of mid-July to August."

Cooler weather has kept the mountains deceptively green this spring, said Greg Johnson, a meteorologist with the N.C. Agricultural Extension Service. But that could change in the heat of summer.
"There are some areas that have received barely an inch of rain in the last six weeks," Johnson said. "We're looking at a very serious situation."
Drought conditions exist from Ashe County to Cherokee County, Johnson said. The most affected area is south of Asheville.
Dedrick Cody, the assistant manager of the Western N.C. Farmers Market in Asheville, said the drought will cause losses in the Haywood County tomato crop and Henderson County apple belt — the state's largest growers of those products.

Tobacco farmers in the central mountains — including Madison County, the state's largest producer of burley tobacco — have been forced to reset plants this spring, Cody said.
Christmas trees, big business in Ashe County, have also suffered.
Not only are seedlings dying, said one grower, but trees scheduled to be harvested this fall are losing color.
Problems with the water supplies in Charlotte and Asheville have prompted officials to impose restrictions on water usage.
Charlotte residents were asked to voluntarily cut back water use after demand jumped to an all-time high of 87 million gallons June 7.
Harder-hit has been Asheville, which imposed mandatory restrictions the same day, when demand nearly pushed the city's 60-year-old water system to its 30-million gallon limit.

"We've had a lot of neighbors rattling on each other," said Water Department spokeswoman Robin Westbrook, adding that one night the city received 20 complaints. "People call up and say, 'My neighbor's watering!' They just want to make sure everything is equal. It's their sense of fair play at work."
Between January and May, downtown Asheville received 7.72 inches of rain — just a few tenths of an inch above levels recorded in 1986 and more than 6.5 inches below normal.
Tom Zembruski of the geological survey has watched Piedmont rivers suffer similar problems this spring. Measurements taken Friday of the flow on the South Yadkin River near Cooleemee were low; 58 million gallons passed Friday — well below the normal of 204 million gallons for a day in June.

The Kerr Scott reservoir, on the river in Wilkes County, is dropping about 1.2 inches a day, said Kenneth Austin, the reservoir's assistant resource manager.
Monitoring a river's level and flow is important, Zembruski said.
"Low stream flows can effect hydroelectric power, irrigation systems, waste discharges, water supply and wildlife," he said.
Grimes said the days of bottled water and rationing are not on the horizon, but farmers and others should be concerned about drought in the Piedmont.
"The way the readings are, up in that area," he said, "it seems to be creeping eastward."

Black Candidates Figure Prominently In Va. Races

By JOE TAYLOR
Associated Press Writer

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A black Democrat is frequently mentioned as the leading candidate for governor next year. Now Republicans have tried to steal some of the opposition's thunder by nominating a black as their candidate for the Senate.

Lt. Gov. L. Douglas Wilder is a moderate Democrat favored despite his unannounced status to win the party's nomination for governor next year. If elected, he would become America's first black governor since Reconstruction.

Maurice A. Dawkins, the Republicans' U.S. Senate nominee, is a conservative supporter of Pat Robertson, a former Kennedy-Johnson Democrat who left the party during the liberal McGovern period.

Their fortunes are partly a product of circumstance, said Larry Sabato, a University of Virginia political scientist.

The state's voting age population is 16 percent black, large enough to be courted but not large enough for there to be racial polarization, Sabato said.

The GOP decided to try to woo blacks away from Democrats by nominating Dawkins, the first black to run for Congress in Virginia since Reconstruction. Dawkins is best known for his unsuccessful bid for the party's lieutenant gubernatorial nomination in 1985, in an election eventually won by Wilder.

"It's a natural reaction to get to the massive black vote for Democrats," Sabato said of Dawkins' Senate nomination. "It makes it very difficult for the Republicans to win when they have to get an overwhelming white vote. They need to break down this barrier."

Dawkins, a 67-year-old retired minister who works as a lobbyist in Washington, was nominated June 11 in a three-way contest.

His rousing nomination speech, which mixed praise for God with criticism of Democratic flag-bearer Charles S. Robb, won the support of a large bloc of uncommitted delegates.

Wilder, a lawyer and former state senator from Richmond, said the nomination seemed to be "orchestrated to arrive at a point and that point is other than winning."

Wilder said the Senate race probably will result in an "exceedingly convincing victory" for Robb, a former governor who was unopposed for the Democratic nomination and is heavily favored to win in November.

Political observers expect Sen. Paul Trible, a Republican who is retiring from the Senate, will run for governor, although he has not declared his candidacy. Marshall Coleman, a former attorney general has said he will run, although he has not formally declared.

Sabato agreed with Wilder that the Dawkins campaign is unlikely to prevail or to pull any significant black support from Robb. He said the Dawkins nomination's chief effect was to steal some of the thunder from the expected nomination of Wilder for governor.

"Blacks are not simply black," he said. "They're also Democrats. They have the strongest party identification of any group in the electorate."

However, at least one prominent black Democrat says she will vote for Dawkins instead of Robb.

Mary B. Cox of Richmond, coordinator of Jesse Jackson's Virginia campaign, led a revolt against Robb by about 60 Jackson dissidents at the state Democratic convention two weeks ago.

Robb refused to endorse Jackson after Jackson won the state's Super Tuesday primary, and suggested Jackson should play an "inspirational role" rather than make policy in a Democratic administration.

Kemp Seen As VP Long Shot

By KIMI MILLS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Everyone's long list of possible Republican vice presidential nominees seems to include New York Rep. Jack Kemp, even though some political odds-makers put his chances at slim to none.

Kemp himself says he doesn't believe George Bush will give him a crack at the job, although he also says he believes he'd be a good vice president.

And if he were offered the slot, the timing would be perfect since Kemp isn't running for the Buffalo, N.Y.-area seat he has held for nine terms.

"There's no way you can campaign for it, there's no way you can expect something like that," said Kemp in an interview about the vice presidency.

But, if it were offered, he said, "I would be flattered."

An early entrant into the 1988 GOP presidential contest, Kemp dropped out in March after failing to win better than 13 percent in any of the initial GOP primaries. Despite his perceived role as a leader of the New

Right and his claim to be heir to the Reagan revolution, Kemp never moved out of the single digits in presidential polls.

Within weeks of quitting the race, he endorsed Bush as "a rising star in the Republican Party" and promised to campaign vigorously for him.

Asked why he seems so convinced Bush has ruled him out as a running mate, Kemp said, "I'm not the governor of the state. I like to think I'm a pretty good campaigner but I cannot command any vast constituency."

He also said he may be perceived as having his own political agenda.

"I think I've proven I could be a good team player but it may be that some think that I am too much of an activist," he said.

Kemp, 52, a former pro football quarterback, made his first mark in national politics when he sold President Reagan on the idea of supply-side economics. His belief that government should tax its citizens less, spurring them to work, save and invest more, has been credited both with the economic recovery of 1982-87 and the country's huge federal deficit. His call for cutting taxes 10 percent a year for three years was adopted in modified form by Congress in 1981, and he was one of the politicians who introduced the Tax Reform Act of 1986.

Asked what assets Kemp could bring to the Bush ticket, several veteran political observers mentioned youth, energy and the conservative vote. At the same time, however, they spoke of Kemp's failure to ignite his own presidential campaign, and the probability that the New York congressman would not be able to deliver the vote in his adopted home state, where the native Californian has traditionally been viewed as something of a carpetbagger.

"I've got to believe Jack Kemp will be on any reasonably short list George Bush puts together," said GOP consultant Eddie Mahe.

"The only thing clearly missing with Jack Kemp — that keeps him in my opinion from being almost the automatic choice — is you cannot make the assumption that he would bring New York state," Mahe said. "If you could make that assumption then I don't think there'd be any doubt."

Senator Says Pentagon Fraud Reports Ignored

By TIMAHERN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A Republican senator is releasing evidence to back up his contention that the Reagan Justice Department stifled allegations three years ago that defense contractors and private consultants were illegally obtaining Pentagon weapons secrets.

Sen. Charles Grassley says the massive Pentagon bribery investigation now under way could have started much earlier during the Reagan administration.

The Iowa Republican said he planned today to read into the Congressional Record testimony that was blocked by the Justice Department in 1985 from being delivered to a subcommittee he chaired.

The October 1985 testimony alleged that private consultants were regularly receiving classified details about U.S. weapons systems, Grassley said in an interview Sunday with The Associated Press.

"The Justice Department could have pursued this aggressively more than three years ago but they didn't," he said.

The 2-year-old probe has focused chiefly on Navy weapons-buying. It became public last week when FBI and Naval Investigative Service agents conducted coast-to-coast raids on the offices of past and present Pentagon officials, private consultants and contractors.

U.S. Attorney Henry Hudson has said privately that perhaps as many as 200 indictments could be expected out of the investigation, a government source said Sunday.

In October 1985 Grassley was chairman of the Senate Judiciary administrative practices subcommittee, a panel which he used to examine defense procurement practices. Grassley is a frequent critic of what he calls widespread waste and abuse in Pentagon spending.

Grassley said Justice Department officials blocked the testimony of Robert Segal, a Defense Department investigator who was the Pentagon's liaison with the Justice Department's Defense Procurement Fraud Unit. The DPFU was a special Justice Department office set up to investigate waste in the military budget.

It was well known in the Justice Department that some elements of the Pentagon and the Justice Department held DPFU in low esteem and there is speculation that when the current allegations first came to light the matter was steered away from the agency and into Hudson's office.

Segal, who worked for the Pentagon's Defense Criminal Investigative Service, was prepared to testify that private consultants regularly received classified Pentagon documents that should not have been available outside the government, Grassley said.

Segal also reported at the time that "many of these (defense) companies appear to have espionage units whose main function is to obtain copies of highly classified documents in order to give their companies a competitive edge," Grassley said.

Grassley said the allegations predated the current investigation. "This goes back much before what we're seeing now," he said.

Segal's testimony, which he never got to deliver but which was released publicly at the time, said that a defense procurement criminal case against GTE Corp. "is but the tip of the proverbial iceberg. ... The investigation involves at least 25 companies. ... Many of those companies are household words. ... The primary focus of the case is ... the indiscriminate distribution of both proprietary and highly classified government documents by individuals within and without the government."

Justice Department official Victoria Toensing interrupted the key part of Segal's testimony before he could give it and demanded that it be halted, saying that he was touching on areas that concerned criminal matters pending against GTE.

After the contents of Segal's testimony came out in the news media, the Justice Department issued a statement saying that "The release by Sen. Grassley's staff of erroneous, misleading and inflammatory information about a criminal case that is currently pending trial is most unfortunate and regrettable. ... Justice must not be allowed to become a political football."

Justice Department spokesman John Russell declined to comment Sunday on the senator's complaints.

President Reagan, attending a summit meeting of the leaders of western democracies in Toronto, refused to comment Sunday on reports that former Navy Secretary John Lehman Jr. may have warned his longtime ally, military consultant Melvyn Paisley, that Paisley was under investigation.

"I am not going to comment until we have all the information," Reagan said.

Chlorine Plant Fumes Keep Residents At Bay

By CAROLYN LUMSDEN
Associated Press Writer
SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — A chlorine plant that burned for three days emitted more deadly fumes today as firefighters pumped water on its smoldering shell, keeping 4,600 people out of their homes, officials said.

Swimming pool chloride tablets burst in small explosions and gave off yellow-green chlorine gas, "but it is definitely better than it was before," Fire Department spokesman Giorgio Placanco said today.

The gas was more restricted to the area of the four-story Advanced Laboratories plant, Placanco said.

Authorities said they planned to pour a 52-ton mixture of sodium sulfate and boric acid on the plant today in hopes of turning the remaining tablets into harmless salt.

At its peak, the blaze caused a gas cloud two miles long and four city blocks wide, sending 275 people, including 22 firefighters, to hospitals with complaints of skin burns and respiratory problems. Only two people were hospitalized, and they were in stable condition today.

The last of three fires was brought under control Sunday morning, allowing more than 20,000 people to return to homes near the pre-Civil War factory. But the threat from fumes kept away 4,600 people living closest to the plant.

"They are resigned to the fact that they will be here through Monday," said Therese Theroux, administrator at Springfield Municipal Hospital, where 170 people, including 120 nursing-home residents, slept on cots. "It's obvious they are very distraught and anxious over this entire thing."

An elementary school, a high school, two housing projects for the elderly and the nursing home remained off limits, and anyone entering the neighborhood was subject to arrest, authorities said.

"All I can think about when I close my eyes is my bed sitting at home waiting for me," Priscilla Rodriguez, 40, said Sunday at the hospital, where she had been evacuated since early Saturday with her mother, three daughters, granddaughter, niece and nephew.

The fires in this city of 170,000 began Friday morning when rain blew in a factory window and ignited chlorine tablets in a hopper, authorities said. Chlorine is used in diluted form for bleaching clothes and cleaning swimming pools, but in its pure form is a flammable, deadly gas when mixed with water.

Firefighters put out the blaze after 1,800 residents were evacuated, only to have a second fire start that burned through the night, ousting 6,000 more residents.

Residents began returning Saturday, but water-soaked barrels of chlorine exploded in midafternoon, throwing two firefighters against a wall and triggering the evacuation of an estimated 20,000 to 25,000 people within a mile of the plant and several thousand in Chicopee to the north.

At one point, flames soared 100 feet in the air, barrels of pellets exploded at a rate of six a minute and toxic gas drifted down city streets. Fumes could be smelled as far as Palmer, 15 miles away.

The core of the fire was a room containing 600 to 800 barrels, each filled with 300 pounds of pellets.

Firefighters, risking re-igniting the pellets, pumped 14,000 pounds of water per minute on the plant in an attempt to turn it "into a big swimming pool," Placanco said.

"If allowed to go on, the cloud would have stayed for weeks," said Fire Chief Raymond Sullivan.

Sullivan called the blaze is the largest in memory. Kevin Kennedy, an aide to Springfield Mayor Richard Neal, said the disaster would cost Springfield millions of dollars for personnel, equipment and the neutralizing chemicals.

"This is the worst public health and environmental disaster in the 20 years I've been here," said John J. Higgins, regional director of the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering.

Murder Victim Found

CORRY, Pa. (AP) — A woman was found shot to death in a forest clearing after her banker husband received a vaguely worded ransom note that didn't specify a money demand, authorities said.

A farmer Sunday found the body of Sally Weiner, wife of Pennbank branch manager Harry Weiner of Corry, in a wooded clearing five miles northwest of here, said State Police Capt. Douglas Greenville.

Dozens of police officers and FBI agents had been combing Erie County in northwestern Pennsylvania for Mrs. Weiner since Friday afternoon, when she told her husband in a phone call she would be killed if he didn't meet a ransom demand, said Pennbank President Thomas Doolin.

Mrs. Weiner, 37, died of a single gunshot wound to the head, said Erie County Coroner Merle Wood. "I would say she died instantly," Wood said.

He said it wasn't known when Mrs. Weiner died or what type of gun killed her.

When Mrs. Weiner talked to her husband, she seemed to be reading from a statement, Doolin said.

Officials Weigh Drought Damage; Stranded River Barges Move Out

By BART ZIEGLER
Associated Press Writer

Hundreds of barges resumed travel along the drought-shrunken Mississippi and Ohio rivers, congressmen and senators examined stunted crops in the Plains and a Sioux medicine man sought heaven's help to end the long dry spell.

"Gentlemen, start your engines; the rat race is on," a river boat pilot said over the radio after authorities reopened the Ohio and Mississippi rivers.

Showers and thunderstorms Sunday dampened many parts of America's parched midsection, including Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, Kansas and Nebraska, but provided little relief, the National Weather Service said.

Hot weather aggravated the drought, with temperatures of 100 degrees and up recorded as far north as Minnesota. Today's forecast was no better: continued hot, dry weather over the Midwest and Plains.

Sections of the Mississippi and Ohio had been closed for days so dredges could deepen channels made shallow by the drought, backing up an estimated 1,800 barges on the Mississippi and nearly 700 on the Ohio.

River traffic flowed most of Sunday, but was shut down for the night at one dangerous point on the Mississippi nine miles north of Memphis, Tenn., said Bill Schult, an Army Corps of Engineers spokesman.

The last of the barges stranded on the Mississippi should make its way through a newly cleared channel near Greenville, Miss., by tonight, said Petty Officer Dean Jones, a Coast Guard spokesman in Memphis, Tenn.

At noon Sunday, 47 to 52 tows were waiting to go north or south through the channel, Jones said.

On the Ohio, 24 tows were able to pass downstream after the channel at Mound City, Ill., reopened Sunday afternoon, said Coast Guard Ensign Rick Johnson.

By sundown, 70 tows were waiting to head upstream or downstream, Johnson said.

Sunday's rainfall amounted to two-thirds of an inch or less, the weather service said.

"We got a half-inch," Doris Freund said Sunday from the farm she and her husband, Lester, operate east of Merrill, Wis. "Well, the corn, it still curled — but it kept it alive."

Even had hard rain fallen, much of it would have rolled off because the ground is too dry, said weather service meteorologist Rainer Dombrowsky. Farmers need 24 to 36 hours of light rain, he said.

Six U.S. senators and two congressmen toured acre after acre of bone-dry farms during the weekend. In Menoken, N.D., Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., told farmers he would work on legislation to guarantee crop deficiency payments to drought-stricken farmers.

"When I walk out in a field and the greatest source of protein is grasshoppers, we've got a problem," Leahy, chairman of the Senate's Agriculture Committee, said Saturday.

North Dakota is suffering the most, and is expected to lose 40 percent of its farm income, according to the U.S. Agriculture Department.

Federal officials warned that the drought poses another danger: increased pollution in the nation's rivers, lakes and wells.

The millions of streams and rivers that carry off sewage, industrial wastes, agricultural chemicals and other toxins will have higher concentrations of the pollutants due to low water levels, said Ben Jones, assistant regional hydrologist for the U.S. Geological Survey in Menlo Park, Calif.

In Clyde, Ohio, Sioux Indian Chief Leonard Crow Dog pointed a peace pipe and blew an eagle-bone whistle toward the four compass points in a ceremony he says has never failed to produce rain.

"Four days from now, there's going to be thundering, lightning, rain," Crow Dog promised after Sunday's 30-minute ritual that attracted 4,000 spectators in the parched northwestern Ohio town.

In Chillicothe, Mo., people danced and children called for clouds to appear from the skies at the First Great Chillicothe Rain Dance and Fest. In Jackson, Miss., State Agriculture Commissioner Jim Buck led a prayer ceremony for rain.

HIGH AND DRY — Lack of rainfall has this boat dock on the Yazoo Diversion Canal at the Port of Vicksburg, Miss., partially out of water. Tows have been forced by the low water level of the Mississippi River to leave many of their barges parked along the canal until the water level rises. (AP Laserphoto)

Surfer Remembered

REDONDO BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The ashes of surfing pioneer Lewis Earl "Hoppy" Swarts were carried to sea on a surfboard and scattered in the Pacific Ocean after a service on the beach he roamed for 50 years.

About 15 surfers joined the crowd of 100 after dawn Sunday to hear eulogies to Swarts, who died June 9 of a stroke while on his way to a surfing contest in Northern California. He was 71.

Among those remembering Swarts, the father of organized surfing who developed the judging system used on the pro circuit, were Surfer magazine publisher Steve Pezman, ex-surfing champion Donald Takayama and lifelong friend Leroy Granis.

Don Anderson, a pilot and longtime Swarts friend, dropped a bouquet of flowers from an airplane during the service at water's edge.

Boat-Towing Policy Changes Don't Satisfy Vessel Owners

By CHRISTOPHER CALLAHAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Boat owners and coastal lawmakers are not satisfied with the Coast Guard's latest attempt to draft a policy on towing disabled vessels, despite recent concessions by the agency.

Under intense pressure from Congress and boat owners, the Coast Guard recently modified the non-emergency towing policy that had left recreational boaters with little choice but to use costly commercial towers when their vessels broke down.

But critics say the new policy still unduly favors commercial towers and can subject owners whose boats break down to needless expense and delay.

"It's very disappointing," said Michael Sciuilla, vice president of Boat Owners Association of the United States, a group representing 250,000 recreational boat owners. "They've chosen to ignore the pleas of thousands of recreational boaters."

The towing policy was created in 1982 as a way to boost the fledgling commercial towing industry. Under that policy, Coast Guard officials would call a commercial operator by telephone to tow a disabled boat back to harbor.

Boat owners complained that the policy eliminated the chance for good Samaritans, friends and the Coast Guard Auxiliary to tow them back for free. And owners charged that they were sometimes forced to wait hours for busy towers.

The policy also sunk morale at the auxiliary, as volunteers who were anxious to help fellow boaters were forced to sit at the dock while commercial towers handled the non-emergency situations. "How would you like it if you were a volunteer fireman and you couldn't go out and put out a fire?" Sciuilla asked.

The Coast Guard held a series of public hearings to modify the policy and earlier this month issued the long-awaited guidelines.

Under the new policy, Coast Guard officials will send a marine radio broadcast about a disabled boat, giving good Samaritans the chance to respond as well as commercial operators. And if no one responds to the call within 10 minutes, or if the tow operator cannot be at the scene within one hour, then the Coast Guard Auxiliary would be dispatched, according to Coast Guard Capt. Ken Hollemon.

The changes, however, are not enough for boating enthusiasts.

"It keeps these volunteers chained to the dock for a minimum of an hour before they can respond," Sciuilla said. "At the same time, it requires a boat owner, who can be out there with a kid who's screaming and a wife who's getting seasick, to be out there longer."

Cub Scouts Drown

NEW YORK (AP) — A 9-year-old Cub Scout who drowned in a Scout camp lake had been upset by the sight of a friend's unconscious body being pulled from the water, another camper said. The friend later died.

"He was saying 'I was supposed to go down to the bottom with him,'" Boy Scout Raymond Goffin said of Joel Nieves. "He was hyperventilating. He was really nervous."

Police could not say how Joel ended up in the water. He had been reported missing after friend Luis Ruiz' accident Saturday in the borough of Staten Island and was the subject of a search by more than 100 police officers and 50 volunteers.

Police divers recovered Joel's body from Ohrbach Lake on Sunday morning, said police Sgt. Diane Kubler.

Luis died Sunday night in the pediatric intensive care unit of Staten Island Hospital, said Allan Weidenbaum, assistant director of nursing.

Both boys lived in the borough of Brooklyn, where they belonged to Cub Scout Pack 74.

A scout leader said he had forbidden the 18 Scouts on the outing from swimming or fishing in the lake at Camp Pouch.

"It was their first trip, so I didn't know who swims and who can't," said Assistant Scoutmaster Felix Gomez.

Gomez said another assistant scoutmaster allowed Luis and at least one other boy to go into the water while some of the other boys were hiking.

He said that after Luis went underwater, six other Scouts formed a human chain and rescued him after he had been submerged for 10 to 15 minutes.

Joel was seen on shore after the rescue, but Scout leaders realized he was missing three hours later. Police speculated at the time that the boy may have been frightened by Luis's accident, and that he ran off. He was not found in an initial search of the lake.

Joel's father, Saul Nieves, said his son, a fourth-grade student, had been scheduled to receive a school trophy today.

New Wrinkle In Skin Care Or Slick Strategy?

By S.J. DIAMOND
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Help is here. Estee Lauder's Night Repair Cellular Recovery Complex can help restore skin damaged by fluorescent office lights, says a saleswoman in Los Angeles. In a "race against time," say accompanying brochures, it enhances "the natural rate of repair of cells damaged during the day" — at a cost of $35 for 0.87 ounce, or $60 for 1.75 ounces.

Revlon's Ultima II "Supportive ProCollagen anti-aging complex helps firm slackening skin." And the "skincare technology" in Elizabeth Arden's Millenium line accelerates "cell renewal" until the skin "is renewing itself at the rate of younger skin."

Those who don't quite understand the words get the idea: The stuff will keep their skin from aging. Those who do understand the words find no idea at all: "These kinds of claims don't add up," says Ronald M. Reiser, chief of dermatology of the medical school at University of California, Los Angeles. "It's all generalities like 'cell renewal' and 'cell repair' — meaningless terms without more specific definition."

Injecting a bit of science into cosmetics campaigns is old hat, but the notion that cosmetics might not only clean and clear skin but rejuvenate it is very contemporary hubris. Industry observers believe the kickoff was a few years ago when heart surgeon Christiaan Barnard lent (or rented) his name to the promotion of a skin-care line called Glycel, one of whose ingredients, glycosphingolipid, supposedly rejuvenated skin cells and thus removed wrinkles. After that, "everyone jumped in," says Allan Mottus, whose newsletter "The Informationist" serves the health and beauty industry.

"Anti-aging goop, cellular reconstruction cream and eye-of-newt products for the Beverly Hills set" now account for $250 million in sales, Jack Salzman, a Goldman Sachs senior analyst, said. Mostly upscale lines sold in department stores, they're a small part of the $2.5 billion skin-care market, but very visible, particularly since the Food and Drug Administration ordered them last year to temper or prove their claims.

The promotions at least touch on reality with little, tangential references to scientific fact. They show slides, diagrams, before-and-after magnifications of the skin's layers: epidermis, dermis, the basement membrane between. They print primitive "graphs" proving efficacy. They discuss rehydrating the skin's surface, restoring the basement membrane and the skin's "support" layers.

But magic lotions "have no greater use than any other stuff that will hold water in," says Reiser. Treatments advertised as penetrating, repairing and renewing the deepest, "support" layers of the skin probably are not because "the ingredients usually identified on labels as doing the job are such large molecules," says H.J. Eiermann, director of the FDA's division of colors and cosmetics,

"that they can't get to the dermis."

No matter if they could, because "the dermis does not renew itself," says Eiermann, "and that's where wrinkling occurs." And if the focus is on epidermal cell renewal, "the fact that I shave," says Eiermann, "also speeds up cell renewal, and that effect doesn't mean wrinkles disappear."

With most such claims, there's "no convincing evidence," says Reiser. "I don't think they've published in reputable scientific journals. There are no double-blind studies, nothing defining the exact nature of the substance, no hard information to examine, to read, study, evaluate and repeat."

As the claims became more and bold, they did raise questions, but nothing to cause promoters concern until the FDA's challenge last year. "A certain embellishment, or puffery, is necessary and fun," says Eiermann, "but there's a limit to how far misrepresentation can go. I call them hard-core and soft-core claims. When it gets hard core, the agency has to step in."

The FDA's challenge focused on the type, not the substance, of the claims. These are drug claims, not cosmetic ones, explains Eiermann. "If they talked about making you look beautiful, no problem. But if they say you look more beautiful because they rejuvenated the underlying layers of the skin or sped up cell renewal, they're talking about a physiological process, one that affects the structure and functions of the body, and then it's a drug. And since the intended effect isn't documented in the scientific literature, it's a new drug and the manufacturer has to demonstrate it safe and effective."

A year ago April, the FDA sent regulatory letters to 23 companies — including Estee Lauder, Elizabeth Arden, several Revlon lines (not including Ultima II), Avon, Shiseido, Clarins, Chanel and Coty. Quoting specific statements, the letters said such claims were more appropriate to drugs than cosmetics and should be changed, or, as with all new drugs, proved — a policy the agency says applies to the entire industry, not just the cited companies.

For a year, with few exceptions, the companies protested that their claims were strictly cosmetic, that the FDA should be more flexible and that they were working on the problem. Finally in April, the FDA said the companies had 30 days to start changing the claims or proving them or be subject to further action. Not surprisingly, none has announced that proof is coming.

That does not mean that the claims will immediately disappear. The FDA will "visit the cosmetics firms to get visible, tangible assurance that this is in the works," says FDA spokesman Emil Corwin in Washington, but because safety isn't at issue, the agency will not be removing products from store shelves.

Fortunately, for all the suggestion of increased cellular activity, the anti-aging products are "on the whole probably harmless if you're not allergic to them," says Reiser.

"The large cosmetic houses are probably very responsible," at least in terms of safety.

Moreover, anyone irritated that cosmetic companies are getting rich on such foolishness might remember who's being foolish: Most of these wet-look, skin-growth jellies exist for the relatively few who can shell out $20, $40, even $60 an ounce. Even if the efficacy is uncertain, such consumers can afford what one New York woman calls "the Pascalian Wager of cosmetics."

"I'm sure my friends who have money use the stuff," she says, "because what have they got to lose but the money?" Distributed by the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

New Luggage Has Variety

DENVER (AP) — No matter what the destination for a vacation or business trip, one thing the traveler needs to take along is luggage — and current lines offer an unprecedented number of features specifically designed to make packing and transporting clothes easier.

To help in the selection of the right piece for personal use or for a one-size-fits-all gift, Samsonite, a major manufacturer of luggage with headquarters in Denver, offers these tips:

— Carry-on bags are often preferred by travelers in a hurry. For those who hate waiting in line to check in and claim luggage, consider a carry-on that doesn't have to be carried around. Look for a bag that has wheels and a pull strap, one that can be wheeled directly to your seat.

To comply with the airline carry-on regulations, be sure the bag is sized to fit under most airline seats or in overhead compartments.

— Garment bags, the fastest-growing luggage category, make an excellent choice for both women and men. Once simple bags with zippers, garment bags now offer a number of convenient packing features.

Look for such extras as mesh pockets that allow you to see what you've packed, "extender" straps to help keep longer clothes such as dresses and raincoats neat, and large shoulder pockets for holding bulky items such as shoes and hairdryers.

For easy packing and unpacking, choose a bag with deep pockets that are accessible from both inside and out.

— Bags that take any kind of hanger let you pack directly from your closet, instead of having to switch clothes to special suitcase hangers — a real saving in time and effort.

In some garment bags, a telescoping hanger rod pulls out so you can easily reach clothing packed in back. In the latest garment bag style, there is a "reverse-fold" design that folds clothes backward instead of forward, so that lapels, sleeves and cuffs won't wrinkle.

In addition, the bag hangs open like a book in a hotel closet or on a door, so that it can be easily packed and unpacked.

— A water-resistant Wepak is an excellent way to separate soiled or wet clothes from other garments. It is a particular boon to those who like to work out while on the road.

— With new airline regulations restricting the amount of luggage that can be carried on board, checking bags is sometimes the only alternative. Because of their durability and ability to protect contents, hard-side suitcases are the best bet for larger bags, as soft-side can be punctured and cause damage to your valuables.

Look for cases that include a packing bar, designed to keep suits neat without the need for a garment bag.

— For those who like the durability of hard-side but not its traditional look, choose one of the new suitcases that cover a hard shell with a "soft-side" fabric. The result: the durability of hard-side with the fashionable look of soft-side.

COMFORTABLY COOL — Fuller shorts, cut two to three inches above the knee, are this summer's important casual look. They're pleated for an easy, yet tailored, shape. Soft knit tops — a long-sleeved cardigan and mock turtle-neck — add to their appeal. To complete the ensemble, add accessories such as wood bracelets, a patterned challis scarf and a leather belt.

Blood Donors Set Pace For Nation

By DONALD W. SWINTON
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI (AP) — The American Red Cross has lifted its age limit for blood donors following a South Florida study that indicated people over age 65 can safely help fill the shortfall.

The national organization last month stopped asking local chapters to require physicians' approval of donors over 65. It now recommends no upper age limit for donors and depends on local chapters to set their own age parameters.

The South Florida chapter has set age 85 as its limit for those without a physician's written approval.

Screening of all donors is based on medical histories, said Red Cross spokeswoman Terry Gautier.

"South Florida is a laboratory for what is going to happen in many other parts of the country," said Tom Donia, spokesman for the South Florida chapter.

"We have already experienced an aging of our population, because we have an influx of older people. But in other parts of the country like Phoenix, Houston, Atlanta, wherever, as the population ages they will require more medical care and it is a fact that older people will need more blood as part of their medical care," he said.

The policy change comes at a time when donations have dropped because of disease and an aging and changing population, Ms. Gautier said.

"We have introduced a lot of tests and that eliminate a lot of blood," she said.

Of the 6.4 million pints donated last year, an average of 5.4 percent were rejected after being tested for three variations of hepatitis, syphilis, or HIV, the virus linked to acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Since AIDS became topical, people are afraid to donate blood, falsely believing they can contract the often-fatal disease through the process, said Donia.

South Florida, which has to import from other states 25 percent of the blood used in its hospitals, is particularly desperate for blood because of its aging, transient and the increasingly Latin population, Donia said.

Vacationers don't think about giving blood and many retirees who gave faithfully for years now believe they cannot because of the traditional age 65 cutoff.

Furthermore, the South Americans and Central Americans emigrating to South Florida come from cultures where donating blood is seldom done unless one knows the patient in need, Donia said.

"When people retire in Ohio they leave the blood center, they say 'Thanks a lot,' and don't expect to see a donation center again. But when they arrive here in South Florida, we say, 'Glad to see you, time to donate.' ... 'The rules are different here,'" Donia said, quoting a recent Florida tourism slogan.

South Florida residents over age 65 have increased their numbers more than 70 percent in the past 10 years. One in five South Floridians is now over 65 and one of every three hospital patients is over 65.

"These older patients are three times more likely to require blood," Donia said.

The South Florida Red Cross began accepting donations from people over 65 after a 1979 study by the University of South Florida in Tampa.

The study showed older experienced donors had fewer adverse reactions to giving blood than college students, Donia said.

An Italian study in 1982 further proved that donations from older people are feasible. It showed that blood donors tend to live longer than non-donors, Donia said.

"The theory is, and of course it's unproven, is that when you're older you retain iron and when you give blood you give up excess stores of iron," Donia said. "Excess iron can cause (health problems) ranging from fatigue to brain damage."

In addition to the South Florida study, statistics from other geographic regions around the country were considered before the policy change was made final, Ms. Gautier said.

Gift Of Paintings Not Appreciated

DEAR ABBY: A reader recently wrote to you about a painting she and her husband had received as a wedding gift from "Andy," a co-worker who was an artist. She said the painting was not to their taste, and asked whether she should return it to Andy or hide it in a closet.

I can relate to that because in 1956 I gave a job to an unemployed, needy artist. To show his appreciation, he delivered to my New York apartment some boxes of his artwork as a gift. Unfortunately, they were not to my taste, so rather than hide them away, I returned them, explaining that although they were not for me, I was sure that other people would appreciate them.

The artist understood and thanked me sincerely for not hiding his work in some dark closet.

And so today, the walls of my Encino home are NOT covered with the works of this artist, whose real name happened to be Andy — Andy Warhol! — MEL FERBER, ENCINO, CALIF.

DEAR MEL: I'm sure there is

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

nothing I could say that you haven't already said to yourself.

DEAR ABBY: The letter written by "Perplexed," who received an oil painting as a wedding gift from a co-worker, could have been written by me some 20 years ago.

When I moved into a new home, a friend presented me with a painting as a housewarming gift and said he hoped I would enjoy it. Like "Perplexed," I did not know what to do with it as it was "not to my liking." It sat on the floor, leaning against the wall in my living room for weeks. I would look at it daily and ponder its fate.

Then I remembered what my parents (rest their souls) said to me as I was growing up: "Accept with graciousness that which is presented to you, be it a reward or a gift, being mindful of the feelings of the giver." Today that painting hangs with pride in my living room, surrounded by some other paintings purchased over the years that have less meaning to me than the gift which was given.

The "artist"? You should see the grin on his face when he comes to visit! There is no price on that painting, but I treasure it more than the others. Tell "Perplexed" that there are many things in life that are "not to our liking," but we can make a difference in someone else's life by showing a bit of compassion. If they don't know what to do with their painting, send it to me and I'll find a place for it. Thank you, dear lady, and God bless. — GRANT MASTERS, CLEARWATER, FLA.

DEAR MR. MASTERS: What a delightful letter — with the Masters' touch!

DEAR ABBY: "Perplexed" wanted to know what to do with the painting she received from a co-worker for a wedding gift. "This painting is not 'our taste,'" is the way "Perplexed" put it.

She should give the painting back to the artist, who obviously values it more than she does.

I am a commercial artist, and in World War II I did a number of watercolors in England, Belgium, France and Germany. I gave one to my sister and one to my sister-in-law. For a while, the paintings were displayed, then eventually they were taken down and I never saw them again.

Then a niece who lives in another city requested one, so I sent her one. When I visited her, my painting was not on display anywhere.

Abby, those paintings are priceless mementos of my four years in the Army. The day I give another one of my paintings to anyone (especially a relative), pigs will fly! — JACK IN CINCINNATI

Summit Spouses Treated To Glittering Fashion Show

By RUTH SINAI
Associated Press Writer
TORONTO (AP) — While their husbands charted the course of world events, five first ladies were treated to a dazzling display of fashion — from supreme funk to queenly elegance.

Off-the-shoulder and on, above the knee and below, models paraded 13 collections by Canadian designers before the summit spouses and some 300 business magnates and community leaders.

From silk to brocade, from voile to burlap, the models sashayed down the runway at the Royal Ontario Museum to rhythmic music and pealing bells.

Nancy Reagan, flanked by Hannelore Kohl of West Germany and Mila Mulrone of Canada, drew almost as much applause as the models when she got up, leaned across the runway and retrieved a glittering earring. She then handed it to the model who had dropped the jewel.

Naoko Takeshita of Japan and Anna Maria De Mita of Italy exuded smiles only when two children's wear collections were shyly displayed by little girls as young as 5.

Mrs. Reagan raised her eyebrows at some of the more outrageous costumes, like a jacket with protruding cloth flowers and vegetables, or a gold lame outfit with snake-like strips slithering to the ankles.

Canadian cover girl Monika Schnaar displayed a magnificent ankle-length black-and-red satin creation by Alfred Sung, one of the country's best-known designers. Another model strolled down the runway in a full-length white Canadian mink coat.

Men's fashions were also on display. One collection of 10 tuxedos drew giggles from Mrs. Reagan and Mrs. Kohl, who huddled, their heads close, appearing to discuss the models.

At the show's finale, five little girls handed each of the first ladies a bouquet of flowers and were rewarded by kisses and hugs.

Absent from the gathering, which began with a dinner hosted by Mrs. Mulrone, were three spouses who stayed home: the wife of European Community President Jacques Delors, the wife of French President Francois Mitterrand and Margaret Thatcher's husband, Denis.

As at all events of the three-day economic summit, security for the spouses was extremely tight. Reporters were kept in a roped-off area, prevented from mingling with the guests or getting near the wives.

"They're just as vulnerable as their husbands," said one security officer who asked not to be named.

Arms On Agenda

change rate stability" that exists and have found "the world economy is in pretty good shape."

On the agenda today were two formal sessions and a dinner designed as a brainstorming session on long-range problems. Closing ceremonies are scheduled for Tuesday.

A 3,000-member security force has turned Canada's largest city into something of an armed camp. Guards were stationed on rooftops, patrolled Lake Ontario in speedboats and hovered overhead in helicopters.

Some 1,500 demonstrators, protesting a variety of causes, defied a police ban and attempted to march to the summit site on Sunday. More than 130 protesters were arrested when they hurled themselves over police barricades into the arms of riot control officers.

Reagan pronounced himself happy thus far with his eighth and final economic summit, a gathering the administration is hoping will spotlight Reagan's free-market economic policies.

"We are on the right track and we have to stay on it," Reagan was quoted by an aide as telling the government leaders during their first meeting.

Asked later why the initial session lasted 45 minutes longer than had been planned, Reagan told reporters, "We had a lot to talk about."

Previous summits have featured at times pointed criticism about America's huge budget deficits and failures of such countries as Japan and West Germany with huge trade surpluses to do enough to promote domestic demand.

But such talk has been banished from this gathering, in part because the world economy is doing well this year, with economic growth accelerating in most major countries and unemployment levels falling to the lowest levels of the decade.

The world leaders were also mindful that signs of disharmony between them has been blamed as a contributing factor in the collapse of stock markets last October. The Reagan administration in particular wanted to avoid any whiff of dispute lest another financial market tremor jeopardize Vice President George Bush's election chances.

At their first dinner Sunday night, the world leaders gathered at an exclusive country club on the shores of Lake Ontario to hear Reagan provide a briefing on his recently completed trip to Moscow.

A British government source said the dinner turned into a farewell party for Reagan.

"From us all, there were expressions of very warm thanks and praise for President Reagan's leadership and his achievements," said the official, who spoke on condition he not be identified. "There was a sense of occasion."

Club Admits Women

60-day posting period and nomination review process, he said, adding: "On that basis, we look forward with pleasure to having women members in the Cosmos Club this fall."

The vote came two days before the Supreme Court, broadening the power of cities and states to ban discrimination against women and minorities, said today that New York City could bar such discrimination in clubs with more than 400 members.

Myers said there were only 14 votes against changing the bylaws to admit women among the nearly 800 members attending the meeting at the club's ornate mansion on Washington's Embassy Row.

"We stopped counting (yes votes) when we got to 700," he said. A two-thirds majority of members present at the meeting was required.

"We the officers, are amazed, surprised and delighted by the outcome," said Myers, a lawyer and former member of the City Council of Washington. "We knew there was a changing mood among the membership, but did not know it would be so overwhelming."

In fact, the Cosmos Club broke two traditions on Saturday. In addition to voting to accept women as members, it was also the first time the club had held a news conference or issued a public statement.

Proposals to admit women to the club twice were voted down, in 1973 and 1975. Those defeated proposals had been presented in petitions by club members, while the one that was approved Saturday came from the club's leadership.

Last fall, the Washington Human Rights Office ruled that "there is probable cause to believe" that the club's men-only policy violated the city's anti-discrimination law. The office was ready to order public hearings on the case, which could have resulted in the loss of all city licenses and permits if the all-male policy had continued. Myers said although the legal issues confronting the club "may have been a catalyst, the great majority of members do not believe that the membership policy of this club is a legal issue. Rather the issues are ethical and moral. They related to social changes members individually could accept or ignore as they prefer."

The club has about 350 membership vacancies in its limits of 2,500 resident and non-resident categories. The club has between 3,000 and 3,100 members, including those with senior and emeritus status.

Myers said the club has set no goal for the number of female members the club will admit. "We look forward anxiously to having many women," he said.

Until 1973, women guests were required to enter the club through a side door and remained in the "ladies lounge" until escorted into a first-floor dining room. But for more than a decade, nearly all club facilities have been open to wives and widows of members, as well as unescorted female guests. Women were not allowed in the second-floor members dining room, however, except on Thursday and Friday evenings and weekends.

The club, which was started principally by white Protestants, has included Catholics and Jews for many years. It first admitted blacks in 1962, and now has about three to four dozen black members, according to The Washington Post, although no count by race is maintained.

The fighting began after a 10-minute blackout at about 7:30 p.m. Sunday. The streets of this Caribbean capital became deserted. Automatic and heavy caliber gunfire broke out around the national palace.

Heard from a hotel two blocks away, it died down, then surged for 1 1/2 hours again just after midnight, when explosions also were heard.

Government sources said Manigat, 57, was taken by ambulance from his home to a military hospital. A Haitian journalist close to the military said Manigat would be expelled from the country.

An Agence France-Press reporter spoke by telephone with Manigat early today and reported that the president said he was uninjured.

Paul, who leads the 700-man Dessalines Battalion, holed up with his troops inside his barracks adjacent to the presidential palace and refused to surrender, Haitian journalists said.

They said Namphy's forces tried to negotiate Paul's surrender, but he refused and there was more fighting.

Namphy, 55, refused in his his seven-minute speech to discuss the fighting, and he did not mention Manigat.

"We will not speak of what happened. We are looking ahead. We love the army, the regular army, the army loves the people and the country," he said in Creole.

He looked tired and said he was ailing. When he finished, an army band played the national anthem.

Earlier Sunday, Manigat retired the Port-au-Prince police chief and transferred about two dozen officers, including the head of the presidential guard.

"The presidential guard went to get Namphy and brought him to the palace," said the Western diplomat, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The army has controlled this impoverished nation during most of its 184-year history.

Manigat retired Namphy as commander in chief of Haiti's 7,000-man army on Friday, charging him with insubordination in ordering the transfer of Paul — to an administrative post — and other high-ranking officers three days earlier.

Namphy was president of the three-man junta that ruled Haiti for two years after dictator Jean-Claude Duvalier fled to exile in France in February 1986. The junta was disbanded after Manigat's government was installed.

the $5.3 billion project, which officials have said could bring thousands of jobs and pump millions of dollars into the economy of its host state.

The final site is scheduled to be chosen in November. Four of the states are using paid lobbyists, while the rest rely on congressmen and their Washington staff.

Jones said staff members and lobbyists from the other states have contacted him at least once a week since last year.

"Clearly, Illinois has been the most aggressive," Jones said. "I would also mention Texas and Arizona — they've been pretty much out front compared to some place like North Carolina."

Twenty-five states originally bid for the project. Of those, the seven selected as finalists — Arizona, Colorado, Illinois, Michigan, North Carolina, Tennessee and Texas — have mounted high-stakes campaigns to win the project.

In a telephone interview with the News & Record, Forgotson declined to speak in detail about his lobbying methods, saying he feared he would reveal tactical secrets to other states.

Long Hours Put In At Tourney

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

It's 6 a.m. Sunday morning when the wake-up call comes for Joe Clark, general chairman of the 1988 Eastern Carolina Celebrity Golf Classic.

It's also 6 a.m. when my alarm clock goes off and both of us head to Greenville Country Club for the start of the day's festivities.

Clark arrives at 6:15, and I'm not far behind that.

"I'm trying to make sure that everything goes right," Clark says. "We've had some last minute switches that I've got to take care of."

One of the first groups that must be changed is the first off the first tee, headed by John Voldstad, the "other brother Darryl" from the "Newhart" television show. He's got to catch an early plane out of Greenville to make an appearance on the west coast on Monday.

Joe Clark

7:14 a.m.: The first golfers begin to arrive and are quickly shuttled to the practice tees by volunteers.

"It's a challenge to get everything borrowed that we had to have, get signs painted and equipment set up," Clark says. "Then, when it's over, we've got to get it all back to where it belongs. It's easy to say, I'm through, and let it go, but even when it's over tonight, we'll have a lot to do."

"For the first time (in the four-year history of the tournament) we'll have a sales tent, with souvenirs from the tournament, hats, visors, T-shirts, golf shirts and the like."

7:44 a.m.: Clark sends someone to get some tables for the souvenir tent and shortly thereafter supervises the unloading of the sales items.

By then, doughnuts, pastries, coffee and juice have arrived for the players and the tournament officials and Clark grabs a hasty breakfast.

Now it's 8:02 and time for the first golfers to begin play, but Voldstad has no clubs — a set must be rounded up for him. Then, an extension cord must be found to power the P.A. system on the first tee.

8:13 a.m.: Voldstad and his group are the first to tee off. Voldstad shanks his first shot off to the right.

But — thankfully — the tournament has begun. "Now, hopefully things will settle down for a bit," Clark says.

9:40 a.m.: The first hitch of the day comes up. The ice for the concession stand and the beer and sodas for the golfers has not yet arrived.

Although Michael Jordan doesn't tee off until after 11 a.m., Clark gathers marshals to discuss plans for the tournament's honorary chairman, the NBA's Most Valuable Player — sure to draw the biggest gallery of the day.

"We've got to keep people away from him so that he can play his game," Clark says. "But at the same time, we've got to be courteous and polite."

Clark then talks about Friday when Jordan was given a tour of the Ronald McDonald House.

"He wanted to know if any of the rooms still had not been pledged," Clark says. "Bill Freelove (of McDonald's) told him that the living room was one of the rooms still available — at $20,000."

"It's Michael's room now," Jordan told us, committing himself to a $20,000 gift to the house. It was just unbelievable."

When Jordan's gift was announced at a party for the celebrities and players Saturday night, Tim Culbertson, formerly of Hill Street Blues, put on an impromptu auction, Clark related.

"He said that he had an original copy of the final script for Hill Street Blues, and that he would autograph it and sell it to the highest bidder," Clark said.

To that was added three cases of Darryl's Beer (from Darryl's of Greenville) autographed by Voldstad for sale. Finally, Jordan sent out to his car for a miniature pair of Nike shoes hanging from his rearview mirror. He autographed those and auctioned them off, too.

"By the time it was over, we'd raised over $2,000 more for the Ronald McDonald House," Clark says.

10:03 a.m.: Voldstad and his group have reached the ninth green, and, to the shock of everybody, "Darryl" rolls in a 20-foot putt for their birdie.

10:07 a.m.: Another hitch. Someone has moved parking cones sectioning off a part of the club's lot that was reserved for people coming for a Sunday Brunch, separate from the tournament. By now, the golf tournament people have taken the extra spaces. Clark can only apologize.

10:14 a.m.: Autograph seekers are causing a bottleneck at the ninth green. Clark tells marshals to guide them to the 10th tee where it will be easier to get with the celebrities.

10:15 a.m.: The ice man finally arrives.

10:45 a.m.: Clark goes to pick up balls for the exhibition to be put on that Thad Daber, the World One-Club Champion and seeks volunteers to round up the balls after the exhibition.

10:54 a.m.: Jordan, having arrived, is secluded in the bar at the club house. Clark talks with him about how he wants to handle autograph seekers.

Finding celebrities, like Jordan, is the toughest job for the tournament, Clark says, but it gets easier from each passing year. "Our committee has put in a lot of extra long days, but

Faldo, Strange End Up In A Tie

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Nick Faldo bogeyed the 16th hole to give Curtis Strange a one-stroke lead with two holes to play in the fourth round of the U.S. Open.

On the 17th green, Strange stood over an 8-foot birdie putt, and Faldo sat on his golf bag, reading his card and averting his eyes from what he thought would be the end of a long week that suddenly turned ugly.

Nearly trampled by the huge, untameable gallery on the 17th fairway, Faldo already had putted out from 25-30 feet for par on the hole when Strange eased his putt down the hill. The ball started slowly and seemed to gather speed immediately, slipping by the left side of the hole as it rolled another five feet.

Strange missed the putt coming back for par, and a pair of pars on No. 18 set up today's 18-hole playoff with both golfers tied at 6-under-par 278 after 72 holes. The playoff was scheduled to start at 2 p.m. EDT under the threat of severe thunderstorms.

"I thought Curtis was going to make it," Faldo said about the putt at No. 17. "Those last few holes, I had to really grind them out. That 18 was crazy with the crowd, and 17 was real bad. That hole scared me because I could hear the stampede behind me, and the marshals put the rope up in front of me."

Officials were allowing the crowd to come onto the fairways to follow the twosome since they were the last on the course.

Strange already had a crowd problem of his own when a man who has a history of bothering the golfers, was arrested and taken from the 12th fairway. Strange had complained that the man, who identified himself as Charles Abdenour, had confronted him.

None of the top 10 players from Saturday's third round was able to break par on Sunday as the pack fell behind the two leaders.

Strange started the day one shot ahead of Faldo, Bob Gilder and defending champion Scott Simpson. Strange shot 72 with three bogeys and two birdies. Faldo had the low round among the leaders, even-par 71 with one birdie and one bogey.

Gilder shot 75 to finish at 2-under 282 along with Fuzzy Zoeller, who shot 66 in the fourth round. After shooting 72, Simpson was at 281 along with Paul Azinger, who shot 66.

Lakers Top Detroit To Force 7th Game

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers, one victory from repeating as NBA champions, must gear up for still another fight to the finish.

The Detroit Pistons, who were a minute from winning their first title, must cheer up after a heartbreaking loss.

The Lakers' thrilling 103-102 victory Sunday forced a seventh game of the NBA finals Tuesday night. The winner will win the title, a feat not to be taken lightly.

The Lakers overcame a 102-99 deficit in the final minute with a field goal by Byron Scott and two free throws by 41-year-old center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar with 14 seconds to go to tie the series at 3-3.

Not even a career playoff-high 43 points by a hobbling Isiah Thomas, who set a single-quarter finals record with 25 in the third period, could bring the Pistons an historic triumph.

"This loss ... proves that it is very difficult to win a championship," said Thomas, who played despite spraining his right ankle in the third quarter. "No one said it would be easy."

Not even 28 points by James Worthy, 22 points and 19 assists by Magic Johnson or a supportive home crowd could bring the Lakers a relaxing victory.

"Any time you're in a championship series, it's not going to be easy," Johnson said.

The Lakers have been stretched to a seventh game for the third time this year, the first time any NBA team has played three such series in the same season. The last team to overcome a 3-2 deficit in the finals was Washington, which beat Seattle in 1978.

"Coming into the playoffs, I knew that this would be the toughest one and it has," Worthy said, referring to the Lakers' four titles in the 1980s.

Sunday's loss was a tough one for the Pistons to swallow. They had battled back from deficits of 53-46 at halftime and 97-91 with less than four minutes left. Seven consecutive points put them ahead 98-97 with less than two minutes remaining.

Then, with the championship so close, came the shattering conclusion, in which Detroit's Joe Dumars, who had 16 points, missed a 10-foot, off-balance shot in the lane with eight seconds to go and his team trailing by a point.

"We pick ourselves up and come back" for Game 7, Detroit center Bill Laimbeer said.

"We want the championship bad and, in order to get it, you've got to overcome things like this," Detroit forward John Salley said.

Tuesday night's game will be the first NBA playoff game to take place in the summer. It also will break a streak of three six-game finals. In 1984, Boston beat Los Angeles in seven games to capture the title.

"The pressure is on both teams now," Abdul-Jabbar said, "but I give us the advantage. We're home."

The Lakers' hopes of becoming the first NBA team to win back-to-back championships since the 1969 Celtics were dwindling until they came through in the final, dramatic minute.

Allison Still Critical

LONG POND, Pa. (AP) — Veteran driver Bobby Allison remained hospitalized today after being knocked unconscious and suffering with multiple injuries from a first-lap accident in the NASCAR Miller 500.

Allison, 50, of Hueytown, Ala., was taken to the Lehigh Valley Hospital Center Sunday suffering from a concussion, fractured left leg, "blunt abdominal trauma" and possibly internal bleeding, track officials said. He had to be pried out of his car.

Six hours after the accident, Allison remained unconscious in critical but stable condition, hospital spokesman Rob Stevens said.

Stevens said the family had requested all other information withheld, including whether Allison had undergone surgery, as a member of his son's crew reported.

Allison's son, Davey, continued the Father's Day race but kept in touch with his pit crew by radio in an effort to learn more about his father's condition.

The accident happened on the second turn of the first lap on the 2½-mile oval at Pocono International Raceway.

Cone Barely Misses No-Hit Bid

By The Associated Press
 There was no joy in Metville for David Cone after losing his no-hitter in the eighth inning.
 Cone allowed no hits for 7 2-3 innings and finished with a two-hitter as the New York Mets beat the Philadelphia Phillies 6-0 at Shea Stadium on Sunday.
 With one out in the eighth, Cone hit Phil Bradley with a pitch. One out later, light-hitting Steve Jeltz hit a soft line drive into shallow center field to end the no-hit bid. The only other hit off Cone was Milt Thompson's single in the ninth.
 Pitching a no-hitter is something Tom Seaver, Jerry Koosman, and Nolan Ryan couldn't do with the Mets, and something wight Gooden has been unable to do so far, too. In fact, no Met in the team's 27-year history has ever pitched one.
 On April 20 at Shea, Gooden pitched 5 1-3 perfect innings against the Phillies until Jeltz singled.

 Cone, 8-1, struck out seven and walked two en route to his second shutout of the season.
 The Mets got home runs from Kevin McReynolds and Darryl Strawberry to back Cone's pitching.
 Pirates 3, Cardinals 2
 Andy Van Slyke snapped a 1-1 tie with a two-run triple in the eighth inning as Pittsburgh beat St. Louis at Three Rivers Stadium.
 Bob Walk, 8-4, allowed four hits in 8 2-3 innings to win for the fourth time in his last five decisions. Jim Gott relieved and earned his seventh save.
 Astros 6, Braves 4
 Craig Reynolds hit a two-run homer in the first inning and a run-scoring single in the top of the eighth when Houston rallied for three runs to beat Atlanta.
 Bruce Sutter, 1-2, was trying for his 11th save and seventh in seven consecutive save opportunities, but allowed five straight singles and left with none out.

 Giants 5, Reds 3
 Mike Aldrete hit a three-run double in the third inning and Mike Krukow allowed eight hits in eight-plus innings as visiting San Francisco beat Cincinnati to take sole possession of third place in the NL West.
 Cubs 9, Expos 3
 Andre Dawson had three hits and drove in three runs and Ryne Sandberg hit his 100th career homer as Chicago beat Montreal to sweep the three-game series at Wrigley Field.
 Dodgers 12, Padres 2
 Dodgers 5, Padres 4 (11)
 Kirk Gibson's run-scoring single with two outs in the 11th inning lifted Los Angeles over San Diego for a doubleheader sweep at Dodger Stadium. Orel Hershiser pitched a seven-hitter and four Dodgers hit home runs for in the first game.

 The Padres swept a doubleheader from the Dodgers Friday night but Los Angeles came back to take the next next three games to improve to 5-7 against San Diego this season.
American League
 Twins 3, Mariners 1
 The Minnesota Twins are finally playing like the team that won the World Series last year — and one that can win it again.
 Gaetti drove in three runs with a solo home run and a bases-loaded single Sunday and Bert Blyleven won his third straight start as Minnesota continued its torrid turnaround with a 3-1 victory over the Seattle Mariners.
 Angels 5, Royals 0
 Mike Witt allowed eight hits in 8 2-3 innings to stretch his scoreless streak to 21 2-3 innings as California completed a weekend sweep.

 Wally Joyner and Johnny Ray drove in two runs each as the Angels won their fourth straight and swept their first three-game series in Royals Stadium since 1979.
 Witt, 5-7, struck out five and walked two. Bryan Harvey relieved for the final out. Bret Saberhagen, 9-6, allowed 10 hits in eight innings.
 Red Sox 15, Orioles 7
 Marty Barrett had four of Boston's 23 hits, the most in the major leagues this season, and Mike Greenwell drove in five runs.

it's been an outstanding committee to work with," Clark says.

And while getting the celebrities gets easier, there are no certainties. "The reason we moved the tournament from September to June was because there is a bigger pool available then," Clark says. "Television shows are not filming then, and except for the baseball players, most of the other professional athletes are more available. But that may change. Time after time during the day, celebrities will come to Clark and thank him for the hospitality they've been shown. "Call us next year," they say, "we want to come back."

"And most of them give us contacts to get other people," Clark says. "The word spreads."

The celebrities all volunteer their time. They get nothing but their transportation, housing and food while they are here. "So we have to understand that if they get a paying job, they may have to back out," Clark says.

"But every year, it gets easier. You build up your list," the tournament director says. "Then, the toughest thing is arranging all of the travel arrangements for these people, to get them here and back to where they're going."

11:34 a.m.: Daber starts his exhibition, showing how he won the World One-Club championship with just a six-iron.

It's 11:56 a.m. and the exhibition is over and Jordan makes his appearance on the course. The gallery has swelled to its peak, and it troops off with Jordan as he walks down the first fairway. Clark sends more marshals with him, giving him almost secret service-like protection.

12:07 p.m.: Kim Zimmer, who plays Reva on "The Guiding Light," comes to the tee with her group.

Patti, Clark's wife relates a story to me. When Zimmer was here in September, 1986, for the last Classic, she met wheelchair-bound Steve Manning of Greenville, and became a friend of his. "My daughter fell in love with him," Zimmer tells me later. She and her family got to know Steve quite well and talked with him over the phone of a number of occasions since then.

"As soon as she's through with her round, she's going to the hospital," Patti says. "Steve is going to be having surgery this week and she's going to visit him."

12:13 a.m.: A golfer approaches Clark with a question about potential ties in the tournament, then adds, "This is the best tournament I've ever played in."

"You try to learn something every

Bodine Takes NASCAR Win

LONG POND, Pa. (AP) — Tires took center stage in the NASCAR Miller 500 victory of Geoff Bodine and the serious crash of Bobby Allison.

Bodine changed from the established Goodyear tires to the upstart Hoosiers after just one lap and credited them with helping him to victory Sunday at Pocono International Raceway, his first NASCAR win in two years.

"We wanted to get the Hoosier tires on our car," said Bodine, who had used Goodyears in qualifying, when only one lap was timed. "We knew they were a lot better in the long run."

Bodine, 39, of Chemung, N.Y., had battled for the lead much of the day.

Clark Turns In A Long Day

year and make the next year's tournament better for it," Clark says as the golfer walks away.

12:16 a.m.: With all of the field off, Clark finally takes a break and grabs a hamburger for lunch. Voldstad comes up as Clark is eating to say his good-bys. "Call me next year," he says. "I want to come back. This has just been great."

He hugs Clark in farewell, and Clark — as I will see many times during the day when good-bys are said — gets misty-eyed. Solid friendships have been made.

1:40 p.m.: Jordan's group approaches the ninth hole, and a large crowd follows. Clark and others shout to the crowd to back off the green because of the possibility of an errant shot.

Sure enough, Jordan's shot slices into the crowd, setting everyone running.

Clark and the mob follow Jordan's group to the 10th tee. While they're teeing off the Golfing Gorilla, golf's answer to The Chicken, comes up and joins their tee shots, hitting his ball out of the container. His shot is the best of the group. "I hit it with a 7-iron with a little right to left card-board," he tells the crowd.

2:42 p.m.: Clark begins planning for the awards ceremonies and wonders if he has enough prizes for the top three teams. He consults with Greenville pro Gordon Fulp and they add several more prizes to the list.

It's 3:34 p.m. and we're walking toward the club house. "Are you getting tired, Joe?" a passer-by asks. "I sure am," Clark says. He goes on to a meeting with Milton Jahnes on the final arrangements for the dinner party for the players and celebrities.

3:44 p.m.: Clark heads back for the course. "You know, I was up late last night for me, but I was ready to go this morning at 6 o'clock. I was so full of pep. But I can tell now how it's going to be tomorrow," Clark says.

5:21 p.m.: Clark begins directing people to the club house for the cocktail party and dinner.

"We took in $30,000 last year in net proceeds for the Ronald McDonald House," he says. "We don't know what the final total is going to be this year, but we think it's going to be a good deal more."

6:27 p.m.: Zimmer has returned from her hospital visit, cheered by the courage shown by her young fan. "He's so strong," she tells me and her emotion shows through.

6:48 p.m.: The service line is empty now and Clark picks up a plate and starts through. Before he can get to his table and set down, however, 12 minutes will pass with people coming up to speak with him, offer congratulations for a great event, or to say good-bye.

It's 7:22. "The biggest fascination is how smoothly everything has gone," he says, "with what I had thought was inadequate planning. But it went super, so smooth, so efficient and I think people enjoyed themselves and that's what it's all about. It couldn't be done without the people. Hundreds, and I'm not exaggerating, have put nearly two years into making this the most successful Classic we've had."

It's 7:40 p.m. and Clark walks with friends to his car, talking once more over the day.

7:46 p.m.: Clark finally starts his car and I follow him out of the lot. We head our separate ways. Thirteen hours and 46 minutes after our day began, the tournament — for 1988 — is over.

Students Tangle With Riot Police In Confrontation Over Ex-Chief

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer
SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Radical students demanding the execution of former President Chun Doo-hwan battled riot police with firebombs and rocks Sunday after they were blocked from marching to Chun's house.

Police with shields hurled tear gas grenades when about 100 students tried to force their way through police lines after a rally at Yonsei University in Seoul. Hundreds of other students cheered the marchers. "Execute Chun Doo-hwan!" the students yelled as they attacked riot police with firebombs, rocks and iron and wooden clubs.

Hundreds of people out for Sunday walks ran from the flying rocks and firebombs or cried and choked because of tear gas.

"They should beat them. This is outrageous," complained a middle-aged man in a suit as he ran for cover.

Police outnumbered the radicals and had few problems containing them. The protest was smaller than most recent clashes have been.

Student leaders demanded that Chun and his successor, Roh Tae-woo, be punished for the bloody suppression of a 1980 anti-government uprising in the southern city of Kwangju in which nearly 200 people died, according to government figures. Chun and Roh were top generals at the time.

The unpopular former president stepped down in February after heading an authoritarian government that suppressed opposition and imposed rigid controls for seven years.

Hundreds of police guarded Chun's house and roads leading to it in a residential area about one mile from Yonsei.

Two police vans, supported by scores of charging troopers, drove protesters back with clouds of white tear gas pumped out by machines.

Several police officers and protesters were injured by rocks and other missiles. Police did not report any arrests.

Police seized several boxes of firebombs from marchers that officers said were to be used in an attack on Chun's residence. Six students were arrested June 16 when about 20 radicals with firebombs tried to attack the former president's home.

Radical student leaders denounced Chun and Roh at a rally at Yonsei before Sunday's march and demanded Chun's execution for murder and corruption.

Roh took power Feb. 25 after presidential elections. He has pledged to punish corruption and any other misdeeds under the past administration.

They have demanded a probe into alleged corruption under the Chun regime. The former president's younger brother, Chun Kyung-Hwan, has been charged with embezzling millions of dollars in government funds in a massive extortion and influence peddling scheme.

"Down with the military dictatorship!" about 300 students chanted Sunday. They carried a banner that read, "Execute the Chun-Roh clique."

Hundreds of riot police in combat fatigues and visored helmets charged the radicals several times to force them back. Police armored vans fired barrages of tear gas into the ranks of the students as rifle squads fired tear gas canisters.

Waves of students pelted police with firebombs that exploded in orange showers of blazing gasoline. Several troopers were covered in flames that were quickly extinguished by other officers.

The National Assembly is expected to consider opposition calls this week to establish committees to investigate the Kwangju revolt, corruption and other matters. The governing Democratic Justice Party lost its majority in the assembly in April 26 elections.

Sikh Separatists Attack New Delhi Market; 4 Killed

By RAJU GOPALAKRISHNAN
Associated Press Writer
NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Suspected militant Sikh separatists hurled a homemade grenade into a crowded vegetable market in a New Delhi suburb this morning, killing four people and injuring about 40, police said.

The attackers struck as about 2,000 shoppers and vendors were gathered in the open-air market in the mixed Hindu and Sikh suburb of Tilak Nagar. Pieces of flesh and blood-covered vegetables lay in the mud left by overnight rains.

It was the second day in a row that Sikh extremists had mounted bombing attacks outside Punjab state, the main killing ground in their 6-year-old guerrilla and terror war for a separate homeland.

On Sunday, a bomb killed 15 people who were watching television at a market in Kurukshetra in Haryana state, about 90 miles north of New Delhi.

Police said the bomb was planted by Sikh extremists and apparently detonated by remote control. Afterward, police were placed on alert in six states and New Delhi.

Three of those killed in today's bombing of the Chowk Chandi market were Hindu men. The identity of the fourth could not immediately be determined.

Assistant police commissioner Ajay Aggarwal quoted witnesses as saying the grenade was thrown into the crowd from a cream-colored van containing four Sikhs, who are recognizable by their distinctive turbans and untrimmed beards.

Shoppers panicked, fleeing through the mud and the blood.

Aggarwal said there were no reports of religious tension in the Hindu-Sikh neighborhood immediately after the attack. Sikh assaults on Hindus in New Delhi and elsewhere in India sometimes trigger violent backlashes.

"People are aggravated, but we are taking steps to control the situation," Aggarwal said.

He said police had banned the assembly of more than four people in the neighborhood immediately after the attack.

Tilak Nagar was predominantly Hindu until 1984, when Sikhs started moving in after their homes were destroyed in anti-Sikh riots touched off when Prime Minister Indira Gandhi was assassinated by her Sikh bodyguards.

Over the years, more Sikhs have arrived from Punjab, the predominantly Sikh northern state where the militants have killed at least 1,333 people so far this year. Although the militants initially targeted Hindus, they have increasingly turned their guns on fellow Sikhs they consider informers or too moderate.

Sikh attacks outside Punjab state have claimed at least 46 lives since the first of the year. Most of the victims died in bombings.

About half those deaths occurred during or after the government's siege last month of Sikh militants holed up in the Golden Temple in the Punjab city of Amritsar. The siege ended after more than 40 Sikhs were killed and hundreds of others surrendered.

The Golden Temple, Sikhism's holiest shrine, had contained headquarters and arms caches of several Sikh separatist groups.

Although the government succeeded in clearing the temple of armed militants, the siege prompted fears the radicals would escalate attacks outside Punjab, where killings continued.

Sikh gunmen killed five people there in four attacks Sunday night, according to the United News of India and Press Trust of India. UNI also said security forces shot to death a Sikh extremist.

Although Sikhs are a majority in Punjab, they form just 2 percent of India's predominantly Hindu 800 million people. Their agitation for greater autonomy in Punjab began in 1982 and grew into demands by several militant groups for an independent nation.

The Sikh faith was founded about 500 years ago as an alternative to Hinduism and Islam.

Palestinian Sought In Farmer's Death

By ALLYN FISHER
Associated Press Writer
JERUSALEM (AP) — A 33-year-old Israeli farmer was bludgeoned to death at a collective farm near the occupied West Bank and authorities launched a search for a Palestinian suspect, a police spokesman said today.

Dozens of officers who rushed to the scene after the body was found today sealed off entrances to several neighboring Arab villages in the West Bank, Etti Elinsky, a farm spokeswoman, said in a telephone interview.

Also today, the Israeli army closed three elementary and junior high schools in the occupied Gaza Strip, bringing to eight the number of schools closed since the weekend, Arab reports said.

The closures aim to end participation by Palestinian youths in the 6½-month uprising in the territories Israel seized in the 1967 Middle East war.

In violence Sunday, Israeli troops shot and wounded a 20-year-old Palestinian during a clash in the West Bank village of Salim. The incident followed a weekend of sporadic clashes in which two Palestinians were killed and 20 wounded.

The farmer's slaying would be the fourth death of an Israeli since the uprising began Dec. 8. At least 210 Palestinians have died in the rebellion, most by Israeli gunfire, according to U.N. figures.

Mrs. Elinsky said the victim, Eli Cohen, was found at the collective farm lying near his grape vines with a hole in the head apparently caused by a beating with a heavy steel object.

The farm is about 25 miles south of Jerusalem and borders three Arab villages near the West Bank city of Hebron.

Police spokesman Rafi Levy said police were searching for an Arab suspect in the killing but declined to comment further.

Interstate 25 Is America's Nuclear Highway

By TAD BARTIMUS, SCOTT McCARTNEY

Associated Press Writers
CHALLENGER POINT, Colo. (AP) — This snow-capped peak, named to honor seven astronauts who perished exploring the last frontier, fittingly lies halfway along a 1,000-mile superhighway built atop conquistador tracks, Indian war paths and the wagon ruts of pioneers.

The land has captivated dreamers and held the milestones of mankind's past. Today, the strategic corridor where the Great Plains erupt into the Rocky Mountains is again the route of trailblazers.

Along Interstate 25, scientists, entrepreneurs and generals by the dozen have gathered to probe and create the particles of life — and death. Here beats the heart of work that could save the world — or destroy it.

I-25 is America's Nuclear Highway.

The four-lane concrete ribbon that begins at Las Cruces, N.M., and ends at Buffalo, Wyo., is a lifeline for high-tech companies, military installations and research looking toward the 21st century.

The southern terminus is anchored by White Sands Missile Range, where technology for "Star Wars," officially named the Strategic Defense Initiative, is tested in the desert known as Jornada del Muerto, the Journey of Death.

This is the place where J. Robert

Oppenheimer, father of the nuclear era, watched the world's first atomic bomb explode and, in the shadow of the mushroom cloud, quoted from the Bhagavad-Gita, part of an ancient Sanskrit epic, "I am become Death, the destroyer of Worlds."

Near the highway's northern end, poised under vast cattle ranches, 200 of the deadliest weapons on Earth are aimed at the Soviet Union. By year's end, 50 of them will be MX missiles, called Peacekeepers by President Reagan. Each carries 10 nuclear warheads and a payload more than 200 times as destructive as the bomb dropped on Hiroshima.

In between are dozens of experimental and research labs, some owned by the government, others parts of universities or private businesses. In them, men and women are inventing Star Wars wizardry — already staffing the center that will be the system's control point, already firing lasers with the potential to blast missiles from space, already talking of hitting a piece of paper 50 miles away.

Workers are building a laboratory that simulates landings on Mars, a machine capable of small nuclear explosions, a gossamer spacecraft destined to map Venus, pieces of the long-awaited space station, the next generation of supercomputers and a thousand more wonders to change our lives forever.

The I-25 corridor has been the crucible for every nuclear warhead

EDITOR'S NOTE — Many of America's most secret laboratories, experiments and military projects have found a home amid the mountains, farmland and desert linked by a single road — Interstate 25, which runs through New Mexico, Colorado and Wyoming. After years of military spending and billions of dollars worth of "Star Wars" research, towns along the highway are prosperous and entrepreneurs talk about its being the next "Silicon Valley." The first story in a four-part series paints a portrait of "America's Nuclear Highway."

of the '80s. Instruments to verify the pacts that will eliminate atomic weapons are born here. Old weapons are brought here for modification. Now that the intermediate range missile treaty has been ratified, Pershing missiles in Europe will likely be sent here for destruction.

"Bring me men to match my mountains,

"Bring me men to match my plains,"

"Men with empires in their purpose

"And new eras in their brains."

The poem, "The Coming American" by Sam Walter Foss, is emblazoned on a wall at the U.S. Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs. Throughout this century, such men — and women — have been coming, creating links in what is today a strong chain of military and technological might.

Some of the links were forged at the birth of the Atomic Age, when the reclusive Oppenheimer brought his scientists for the solitude and secrecy. Others are the offspring of upstart entrepreneurs fleeing the congestion of the East and West coasts.

Civic, military and political leaders see the I-25 corridor as the future capital of Space Age America.

"The vision for the future of this country is exemplified by what is happening here," said Richard MacLeod, executive of the non-profit U.S. Space Foundation in Colorado Springs. "The 'can-do' attitude is about the best I've ever found anywhere."

Here is a quick tour of the highway:

— The North American Aerospace Defense Command, the U.S. Space Command, a National Aeronautics and Space Administration installation, four Air Force bases, two Air Force stations (which have no landing fields) and an Army base are scattered beside I-25 from Cheyenne, Wyo., to Albuquerque.

— Other long-established installations include the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant outside Denver, which assembles bomb triggers, and the Sandia National Laboratories in Albuquerque where scientists, among other projects, test atomic waste containers and blast weapon parts with X-rays and gamma-rays to see how they'll withstand nuclear warfare.

— Aerospace and computer giants such as Boeing, Texas Instruments, TRW, Ball Aerospace, Rockwell and Lockheed have, or plan to open, major plants along I-25 in Colorado and New Mexico.

— The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, the Solar Energy Research Institute and the National Center for Atmospheric Research are all headquartered in Colorado. NCAR, run by a consortium of 57 universities under auspices of the National Science Foundation, investigates the dangers of a "nuclear winter" and probes the Earth's depleted ozone layer for clues about the "greenhouse effect."

— In the mountains above the New Mexico Institute of Mining and Technology, explosives experts study ways to penetrate new tank armor as well as create new super-hard materials by welding with explosions.

— In Pueblo, the nation's largest defense contractor, McDonnell Douglas, completes assembly of its Delta series rockets.

— Just 100 miles north on I-25, Martin Marietta builds Titan rockets for both military and commercial satellite payloads at its Denver factory.

— At Colorado Springs, a $100 million center under construction will link SDI research projects around the country. Martin Marietta, armed with the center's initial $508 million contract, will test computer software for SDI and prepare officers to fight a space war by simulating combat conditions thousands of miles up.

Such projects are bolstering local economies hit hard by oil and agricultural slumps.

"We have in (Colorado) over 1,000 high-tech companies that together gross more than $10 billion a year and employ tens of thousands of people," said Rep. David Skaggs, D-Colo.

A new plant in Colorado Springs will build the next generation of super computers, Cray Research Inc. announced recently. Production of the Cray-3, which could become the brain of Star Wars, will employ up to 1,000 people in the 1990s.

The Air Force Space Technology Center's Weapons Laboratory in Albuquerque currently lays claim to the world's fastest computer, Cray-2 No. 11, which is used to simulate the effects of nuclear explosions as well as solve SDI problems.

New Mexico has more Crays than the rest of the country combined, scattered among Los Alamos, Sandia, the Weapons Lab and "underground places nobody knows," according to one Air Force computer expert.

The enthusiastic science jocks flocking to Oppenheimer's Los Alamos National Laboratory consider Star Wars their generation's version of the Manhattan Project.

Stan Schriber works on a project its creators hope will produce a space-based machine capable not only of destroying enemy missiles, but also of detecting decoys.

He points to the snow-covered Sangre de Cristo range on the horizon and says his task is to create a beam capable of picking a lift ticket off a skier 50 miles away. He also enthuses about new frontiers in physics that promise to yield medical wonders.

"Star Wars, all this work, is going to impact a lot of other things," Schriber said. "This is a lot like the space program was in the '60s. Technology is really advancing."

The I-25 corridor has evolved through quirks of fate, a little elaborate planning and the capricious genius of a few men.

The town of Cheyenne and the cavalry outpost that would become F.E. Warren AFB, headquarters for the nation's MX force, sprang from the meeting on July 4, 1867, of a Union Pacific Railroad official, a representative of President Andrew Johnson and an Army general beside Crow Creek in Wyoming Territory.

Colorado Springs was founded in 1871 by Gen. William Jackson Palmer, the first of a long line of real estate speculators who built their fortunes off the town's newcomers.

Always, the land has drawn the people. Fanning out from Challenger Point are reminders of civilization's march through the ages, as well as harbingers of things yet to come.

East of I-25, buried under empty grasslands, are a few precious flint tools left behind by Folsom man in the last ice age.

In the West, the abandoned ruins of vanished Anasazi people erode with the seasons. Deep inside Cheyenne Mountain, to the northeast, hundreds of disciplined warriors scan TV screens for hints of impending annihilation.

To the southwest, alone in the silent desert, enormous antennas listen for alien voices from space.

Since migrating man discovered the easiest path alongside the mountains, the I-25 corridor has attracted adventurers searching for wealth, power, security and a better life.

"Most of this technology has come to New Mexico because of those wide open spots along the road," said Jim Mitchell of Sandia Labs. "It's not bunched up like Boston. It's the same reason Goddard came to Roswell to start rocket tests. It's the same reason Oppenheimer came — there are not a lot of people around."

But like small voices in a wilderness, some residents wonder if the buildup will be long-term economic panacea or fleeting bonanza. Some people who live beside I-25, especially near any military installation euphemistically described as a "Class A Resource," meaning an enemy's nuclear target, adamantly oppose the military might around them.

"I think the military buildup people and the pacifists share one same view — that the world is becoming a very dangerous place," said Sydney Spiegel, a Cheyenne, Wyo., high school teacher and MX opponent. "Where we part company is on how we're going to make it safer. They say more, we say less."

These voices, however, are few compared to the thousands who work at plants and offices along I-25 in three states. Some are transplanted Californians from an overcrowded Silicon Valley and a polluted, gridlocked Los Angeles. Others are bailing out of the high-priced, overbuilt New England-to-Virginia chute.

"I was tired of terminal sophistication," said H. Pike Oliver, executive vice president of Aries Properties, who moved to Colorado Springs from southern California two years ago.

CORN-ROWING...?

No, you didn't lose your place and inadvertently skip to the column on gardening tips! We're still talking carpet maintenance.

that these hard-packed rows of tufts experience greatly accelerated wear, which translates into carpet replacement much sooner than you'd anticipated.

This time I want to mention a problem associated exclusively with shags (there are still some left), plushes or Saxony-pile designs. It's called "corn-rowing," and it has nothing to do with farming. Corn-rowing in carpet is seen in entry and high-traffic areas of carpet with longer pile designs. It shows up as hard, entangled and matted rows of tufts extending across the traffic lane—hence the name "corn-rowing". Gummy soil, which causes the tufts to be bound together, contributes greatly to the problem.

So what do we do to prevent this unsightly and ultimately, destructive situation? First, your home maintenance procedures should include weekly raking or combing of carpet with these longer pile designs. Rakes are available from carpet retailers or janitorial supply houses. Second, a routine cleaning must be accomplished yearly to remove gummy binders which hold the tufts together and aggravate the problem.

"Corn-rowing"—one of the fastest ways to shorten the life of your carpet investment!

Not the worst of it!
But that's not all the bad news! The rest of the story is

Doctor Is Chief Of Magic

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dexterity in the operating room translates into sleight of hand on stage for an orthopedic surgeon who spends some of his nights performing at a Hollywood magic club.

Dr. Jeff Berman, chief of orthopedics and director of sports medicine at Century City Hospital, has appeared occasionally at the Magic Castle for the past five years.

Berman, 36, makes coins disappear, reassembles a rope cut into pieces and does seemingly impossible things with playing cards.

"I think being an orthopedic surgeon has made it easier for me to learn magic," said Berman, 36. "I'm used to performing intricate operations with my hands."

He began taking magic lessons from a professional magician friend after completing his medical education and residency.

"Both activities require exquisite attention to detail," Berman said in a recent interview.

He practices his tricks at home, first by himself, then with his wife, Nancy, and baby daughter, Samantha, as the audience.

Berman appears at least once a month at the club as an unpaid performer, but his hospital job doesn't allow him to keep a regular schedule.

"It's not the kind of thing I could do carrying a beeper," he said.

BANKRUPTCY — A Ten Year Mistake

Bankruptcy does NOT wipe your Credit Slate clean and give you a "Fresh Start".

Bankruptcy stays on your credit report for 10 Years.

You'll have trouble getting credit. Creditors seldom grant credit to someone who has filed a Wage Earner Plan Chapter 13 or Chapter 7.

You'll have problems getting ANY type of consumer loan — car, home, credit cards, education, personal needs, etc. If you doubt this — contact a creditor.

Ten years of bad news, if you don't think so, ask those who have filed bankruptcy. Don't rely only on the advice of those who will make money off your bankruptcy and encourage you to go bankrupt.

There are options to bankruptcy: If you are having financial problems, contact your creditors first — remember, they want to see you solve your financial problems just as much as you do.

So before you make a Bankruptcy decision, THINK, consider the options and don't lock yourself into BANKRUPTCY — A Ten Year Mistake.

Memorial Dedicated To Civilians Seized On Wake Island In 1941

By CHRISTINE DONNELLY
Associated Press Writer
WAKE ISLAND (AP) — The heroic, 16-day defense of this coral atoll in December 1941 by a small force of soldiers and civilians inspired a United States suddenly plunged into war.
"Remember Wake Island" became a rallying cry for a nation wounded by Pearl Harbor.
After nearly four years in Japanese prison camps, the military survivors came home to ticker-tape parades. Almost as soon as the war ended, a memorial to the 449 Marine defenders was erected on Wake.
But it took 47 years for the government to memorialize the civilians who fought and died with the military and desperately staved off a Japanese invasion that began hours after the attack on Pearl Harbor, 2,200 miles to the east.
On Thursday, 42 civilian and 14 military defenders and more than 100 others gathered here for the dedication of a monument to the civilians.

The rectangular monument of dark marble consists of engravings of heavy equipment and a plaque that tells the story of the civilians.
U.S. Rep. Ron Packard, R-Calif., whose father was among the captured and imprisoned civilian workers, read congratulatory letters from President Reagan and Vice President George Bush.
Packard, who for the last three years helped the survivors wage their struggle for recognition, said, "What they wanted seemed pretty simple, but I must say the government threw up roadblock after roadblock."
Seventy civilians died during the siege, more than 30 perished in prison camps and 98 civilians kept on the island as slave laborers were machine-gunned to death in retaliation for an American air strike.

The onslaught began Dec. 8, 1941. The attack on Pearl Harbor occurred only hours before the assault on Wake, but Wake is west of the International Dateline and it was a day later here.
The siege ended 16 days later with the surrender of 523 military personnel — 449 Marines, 68 sailors and six Army Air Corps members — and 1,150 civilian workers on the three small islets known as Wake Island.
More than 1,000 Japanese died during the battle and 2,000 more later perished of starvation or sickness. In 1957, Japan Air Lines helped pay for a simple monument, a few hundred feet away from the Marine memorial, asking that "peace prevail on the waters of the Pacific forever."
Throughout the years, the civilians were ignored.
"When we started asking for veterans' benefits, the government wanted to know exactly what we did," said Walt Moser, 71, who lives in Fremont, Calif. "Sure the military guys did the main fighting, but we passed the ammunition and patrolled the beaches and moved the anti-aircraft guns at night."
"We sandbagged and dug revetments and buried the dead. We really did help. We weren't all just hiding out there under the brush."

In 1981, 40 years after the siege, the civilians were deemed eligible for veterans' benefits.
For years, the sole memorial to the civilians on the island was one they created themselves: a large coral boulder, painstakingly hand-carved in May 1943 with the initials of the 98 men left as slave labor on Wake after their comrades became POWs in Japan and Shanghai. Five months later, the 98 were massacred.
In 1985, a group of civilian survivors returned to the island to confront their memories, compare experiences and renew old friendships. They were joined by about 40 soldiers who had also surrendered here.
"We had 98 men out here who were butchered, and nobody cared," said Bill Taylor, a 71-year-old retired contractor from Provo, Utah. "There was nothing out here, nothing at all. It was really an injustice."
The civilians asked for help from the Air Force, which maintains the island mainly as a refueling stop. The Air Force gave them some concrete, and the men poured a one-foot-square slab, stuck on a few pieces of coral and inscribed "Civilian Workers of Wake, 12-23-41." They left before the makeshift memorial was dry.
"It just really bothered me, and it kept bothering me," Taylor said. "I wanted to do something. But I knew we were just a bunch of old guys with no clout, not that much money and not a whole lot of organization."
Taylor then found Packard, whose father was a civilian helping to build air strips and military facilities on Wake when he was captured.
"I remember what it was like not knowing if our father was alive or dead," said Packard, 57. "Wake Island was a significant part of our own family history, and I wanted to help these survivors if I could."
Packard helped get the memorial approved and persuaded the Air Force to help install and maintain it. The survivors paid the $4,700 cost with help from Idaho-based Morrison Knudson Construction Co., one of the main companies in the consortium of firms that contracted for the construction work.

A PLACE IN HISTORY — Bill Taylor, a 71-year-old retired contractor from Provo, Utah, stands before a memorial last week on Wake Island, dedicated to the civilians who fought, died and endured along with soldiers defending Wake Island during the Japanese onslaught in 1941. The civilian survivors of the Japanese invasion say they are finally getting their place in history, 47 years after they became nearly-forgotten casualties of World War II. (AP Laserphoto)

Vietnam Communists Expel Leaders In 'Purification' Move

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam's ruling Communist Party, in one of its biggest reported purges in 1 1/2 years of reform, has expelled more than 500 members in one province alone for embezzlement and other violations.
The official party newspaper Nhan Dan, or The People, said they were purged in Cao Bang, a strategic northern province on the tense border with Vietnam's arch-enemy, China.
Action was taken after people wrote letters complaining that the officials had violated party discipline and state law, the paper said in a June 9 article, a text of which was obtained today from a Western embassy in Bangkok.
The paper said that as of late May, 506 party members were expelled in Cao Bang and disciplinary action was taken against 391 others. It didn't say when the purges began.

The party has mounted a "purification" campaign since a pragmatic leadership was chosen in December 1986.
The report said some of those expelled were directors or members of district standing committees and party committees who stole large amounts of state property.
One of those named was senior Capt. Tran Duc Tuy, deputy head of the Cao Bang City public security post, who "provided hideouts for criminals and illegally arrested people."
Some diplomats say the party will choose Do Muoi, 71, as the country's new prime minister because he is known as a party disciplinarian who can halt the slide in morale and organization.

Do Muoi is the third-ranking member of the Politburo, the party's main policy-making body.
His apparent rise as the leading candidate has surprised foreign analysts who said the party favored Vo Van Kiet, 66, because of his reputation as a leading advocate of economic reform. Kiet, the fourth-ranking Politburo member, has been acting premier since Pham Hung died in March.
A new premier is to be named during a regular National Assembly session that opens Wednesday in Hanoi.

Economic Pact Signed

TOKYO (AP) — A landmark economic agreement reached today calls for Japan to increase imports and lower some of its tariffs on U.S. beef and oranges over the next six years, U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter said.
Under the pact, Japan would nearly double its imports of beef by 1991 and phase out its Livestock Industry Promotion Corporation, which currently controls most beef imports.
To allow Japanese farmers time to adjust, Japan would be allowed to set tariffs of 70 percent in 1991, 60 percent in 1992 and 50 percent in 1993.
Yeutter said he expects the value of U.S. beef exports to Japan to double, at the least, to more than $1 billion a year as a result of the pact.

On oranges, Japan agreed to expand market access for fresh oranges by 22,000 tons annually, to 192,000 tons in 1990.
After that, fresh oranges from the United States would be permitted in unlimited quantities, at current tariff rates of 40 percent in season and 20 percent off season. Quotas on orange juice will also be phased out.
The United States also demanded and got compensation on tariffs for other farm products in return for concessions on allowing Japan to slowly phase out its tariffs.

Cable Comedy Shows Feature Garr, Morita

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Cable TV has laudably provided a much-needed outlet for talented comedy writers who would otherwise have to wait for a rare network television job or big movie deal to get their work before much of the public.

But in doing so, cable has also created a new genre — comedy you wouldn't actually pay money for but don't mind watching when there's absolutely nothing else on.

Two samples of the mediocre are available this month on Cinemax and Showtime.

On Tuesday night, Cinemax has "Cinemax Comedy Experiment: Teri Garr in Flapjack Floozie." It also airs Thursday, Sunday and June 29.

On Wednesday, three up-and-coming comedians do their standup routines on Showtime's "Funnymen: Triple Clowns of Comedy" with Pat Morita as host. It can also be seen Sunday, on June 28 and July 1 and July 7.

The three work an easy room, a good-natured suburban crowd in the Civic Theatre in Hermosa Beach, Calif. At one point they are so moved by the material, they give a standing ovation to the closing act, Mark McCollum.

McCollum, who bounds onstage with his guitar, is a facile musician and impressionist who almost achieves a Robin Williams level of insanity, but ends up playing it safe with tired material, doing Pee Wee Herman and Elmer Fudd impressions and setting amusing lyrics to well-known tunes — "Fever" becomes an ode to "Leave It to Beaver." His one-man impersonation of The Who in concert is rather impressive, though.

Andy Bumatai, a Hawaiian, also relies on tried-and-true material — ethnic jokes. He says he is enjoying California. "It's fun being Mexican. ... I can't wait to get to the East Coast. I understand there I'll be Puerto Rican."

Larry Miller, a Robert Klein-like comic who has appeared on "The Tonight Show," suffers from slow timing, but his epic joke about the "five levels of drinking — six if you live in a trailer park" is worth the wait. For instance, by level four, he says, you're saying to yourself, "As long as I'm only going to get a few hours of sleep — I might as well stay up all night! It's good for me. I don't mind going to that board meeting looking like Keith Richards."

Between acts, Morita offers ex-cruciatingly long, lame jokes that show why he is a successful actor, not a comedian.

"Flapjack Floozie" on Cinemax is a confusing hodge-podge of takeoffs, spoofing the obscure musical melodrama genre as well as the more contemporary spate of celebrity addiction confessions. It was co-written and directed by former "Saturday Night Live" contributor Tom Schiller, who once wrote a short for SNL called "Java Junkie."

The Cinemax film is an "SNL" sketch stretched beyond its limits. To be fair, these "comedy experiments" are very low-budget, and you apparently get what you pay for.

Garr, one of the best comedic actresses around, is no match for the silly material. She plays Helen Eagles, a singer who grew up in vaudeville and somehow got hooked on pancakes as a result.

A few months ago, Garr was saying that she and Schiller were working up a comedy short about a woman addicted to sugar. Apparently they decided pancakes were funnier. They were wrong.

Flapjacks take over Helen's life after she falls for a gangster (played by Peter Aykroyd, brother of Dan), who opens the club Copacapancake as a showcase for Helen.

After he is gunned down by a rival mobster, Helen buries herself in shortstacks, until she is committed to the IHOP — International House of Psychiatry — where a sympathetic doctor (John Standing) attempts to cure her.

Eventually she's released into the custody of her childhood nanny (Margie Evans), who has become Aunt Jemima. But on the plane on the way to her comeback in Hollywood, Helen succumbs to her lingering addiction and suffers disfigurement in a bizarre pancake accident.

'FRIDAY' STAR — Robey, a former singer and model who uses only her last name professionally, beat out 300 other women for a starring role in the television version of "Friday the 13th." She is shown during a recent interview in Los Angeles. (AP Laserphoto)

Robey Has Lead In 'Friday The 13th,' Television Style

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If you fancy antiques, stay away from the shop two young cousins inherited from a mysterious uncle. If you're into horror, come in and browse.

"Friday the 13th," a series of slice 'n' dice movies, has been turned into a syndicated television show that offers its own little shop of horrors.

"My cousin and I inherited the store from our Uncle Louis, who had made a pact with the devil for immortality," said the actress Robey, who stars as Micki Foster. "What he didn't realize was that the devil cursed every object in the store. The show deals with greed, good and evil."

"When Uncle Louis tried to back out of his deal, he fell to hell. He left us the store, and every week we have to find those objects that are cursed. It's the age-old problem of temptation. I think we were put on Earth to resist temptation. You have to love God. Those objects are the antithesis of that."

Robey — she goes professionally by her last name — also stars with John D. LeMay, who plays her cousin Ryan, and Christopher Wiggins, who plays an eccentric dealer in antiques named Jack Marshak.

Each episode they must fight to recover an object that has taken possession of its owner. The owners want the objects because of the power they give them. A television newsman, for instance, uses an antique camera to create a duplicate of himself. The duplicate commits a series of murders, and the newsman's ratings soar because he's always one step ahead of everyone else.

"Micki is a classic overachiever," said Robey. "She's completely controlled by the system. She's been sheltered her whole life. Now she gets thrown into these situations. Like anything, through struggle comes grace. She's learning to be her own person and learning what she likes, or more important, what she doesn't like."

Robey had virtually no experience in film or television when she won the role in "Friday the 13th: The Series" by beating out 300 other women who auditioned.

"We have wonderful guest actors that I get to meet and work with," she said. "These are people who have been acting for 30, 40 years, and it's a great opportunity for me to learn, as a person and as an actress. I get to know other people's life experiences."

She was born Louise Robey in Canada; her father was a pilot in the Royal Canadian Air Force, her mother had been a London stage actress. She grew up in Canada, West of that."

Appalachian Award

MOREHEAD, Ky. (AP) — Writer James Still, a chronicler of life in Appalachia, was honored by Morehead State University with its first Appalachian Treasure Award.

"I was astonished," Still, 82, said in a telephone interview. "It was a great honor."

The award, dedicated to promoting and preserving Appalachian culture, was presented Sunday at the 12th annual Appalachian Celebration, a summer festival featuring traditional music, dance, storytelling, poetry and arts and crafts.

Germany, Italy, England, Scotland and France. She was educated at a boarding school in Scotland that has academic connections with Oxford University.

"They bring you up to believe you'll go to university or go into business," she said. "It's not conducive to the arts. But traveling around makes you a citizen of the world."

"I moved around so much when I was growing up that it's in my blood," she said. "I enjoy moving around. I don't like to be in one place too long. A fantasy of mine is that I have gobs of old friends I grew up with and that I can call up. But I do have many new friends."

Robey started out with a dual career as a singer and a model.

"I've sung for the last 10 years," she said. "I cut my first record at 17 in Europe. I had a rock band called Robey, and later I had a new wave band called Louise and the Creeps. I modeled at the same time. I had this great desire to do comedy. I believe in the power of the mind. If you project something strongly enough and work hard enough, you'll get it."

Memorabilia Sold

NEW YORK (AP) — Elvis Presley's maroon nylon underpants, Michael Jackson's fedora and Bob Dylan's handwritten lyrics were among the mound of rock 'n' roll memorabilia that fetched more than $500,000 on the auction block.

The parcel of Presley's personal items, including the underpants, an electric razor, hairbrush and black socks, went for $605, said Laura Stewart, a spokeswoman for Sotheby's auction house.

A Gibson model J-200 guitar Presley used in the late 1950s and early 1960s sold for $27,500, the top price paid at Saturday's auction, Ms. Stewart said.

Jackson's autographed fedora sold for $4,125. Dylan's handwritten lyrics for "I Want You" went for $8,800, a John Lennon gray wool suit fetched $3,300 and one of Lennon's guitar straps sold for $8,250, she said.

About 30 bidders and more than 300 spectators gathered to see 226 lots of memorabilia that sold for $533,477, Ms. Stewart said. The T.J. Martell Foundation for Leukemia, Cancer and AIDS Research received $127,600 of the proceeds, she said.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Forget daydreaming, work on practical duties. Listen carefully to a helpful co-worker. Drive with utmost care.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Keep the faith in someone who has done you wrong. Start planning for a brief but important trip. Exercise independence.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Follow up on neglected family ties; they might be helpful in an emergency. Keep close control of stress. Get lots of sleep.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Stay the course, stick to your plans, don't go off on any tangents today. A stranger could cause you grief. Heed those closest to you.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Look at the example of others in order to better handle your own money affairs. Your mate may not be thinking clearly lately.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Emphasis on values; don't let your attitude be completely materialistic. Seek new and different ideas.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Increase your productivity by getting rid of inner ambiguity. Seek cheerful companions in the evening.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Avoid one who might waste your time and seek those who appreciate your talents. Potential for greater prosperity exists. Pace yourself.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Take a critical look at the way you are handling your daily activities. Avoid arguments at home. Have a confidential talk with a friend.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): You may need stronger financial backing. Work on personal relations with regular contacts. New outlets may be of great interest.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Put more love and energy into your home life. Challenge limitations. There's a potential to transcend old problems if you are sensible.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠A108752 ♥93 ♦A106 ♣A7
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♣ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
 3 ♣ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—You need do no more, for the moment, than bid three spades. While partner's jump to three clubs was invitational, not forcing, your suit rebid is a one-round force. To jump would both crowd the auction and bypass three no trump, which could be your best game.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠A108752 ♥93 ♦A106 ♣A7
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♣ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
 3 ♣ Pass 3 ♣ Pass
 4 ♣ Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—You almost surely have a slam

if partner has a heart control; indeed, you might even have a grand slam. To launch your investigation, make a cue-bid of five clubs. Note that, with spades as the agreed trump suit, you are not looking for a club contract but are probing for slam.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AQ92 ♥KJ6 ♦K92 ♣QJ8
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 NT Pass 2 ♣ Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—Your opening no trump promised a balanced hand of 16-18 points. You are minimum for such action, despite the fact that you have excellent support for partner's suit. He might have a complete bust. Trust him and pass.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠AQ92 ♥KQ6 ♦K108 ♣K109
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 NT Pass 2 ♣ Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—Even though the same limits apply to your opening bid, this time you have a near maximum no trump opening with excellent support. You can show that by raising to three spades.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠AQ92 ♥KJ6 ♦K92 ♣QJ8
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 NT Pass 3 ♣ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Despite your superb trump support, you have a minimum no trump opening bid. You can get this message across to partner by simply raising to four spades.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠AQ2 ♥KJ6 ♦K92 ♣AJ103
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 NT Pass 3 ♣ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—This time you want to tell partner that you have good trump support and a maximum no trump opening bid. You do that by making the cheapest available cue-bid; in this case, four clubs.
